Economic Growth Stepping Up

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today predicted that the economy will grow at a larger-than-expected 3.5 percent rate in 1988 and that inflation will hold steady at 4.3 percent, with the odds overwhelming against a recession.

A slight increase in interest rates, about a half percent, was forecast for the year.

In revising earlier estimates, Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said, "Our rosy forecast wasn't rosy enough."

"The economy is doing better than even we expected."

The administration originally had predicted the economy would grow by 2.9 percent this year.

Sprinkel said the drought could have "a significant effect on food prices" unless there is rain soon. However, he said the farm community generates only about two percent of the Gross National Product, the broadest gauge of economic health.

Asked about the administration's new projections, private economist Michael K. Evans agreed with the upward revision in the economic growth prediction but disagreed with the inflation estimate.

"He's certainly right about better growth, ... but the rest is just pie in the sky stuff," said Evans, a private economic consultant in Washington.

"We're not going to have double-digit inflation, but a reasonable private sector forecast of consumer inflation would be 5 to 5.5 percent," he said. "Nobody can be faulted for not forecasting the drought ahead of time, but now that it has occurred you have to make some upward revisions because of it."

Sprinkel released his new estimates at a White House briefing. Asked if the figures mean there is no chance of a recession, Sprinkel said, "I wouldn't say it's zero danger. Anything can happen."

"But it's our view the overwhelming odds suggest that the economy will continue to expand on average this year even though at a more moderate pace than was evident in the first quarter," Sprinkel said.

He said that, contrary to some fears, the economy is not overheating. Moreover, he said,

Old Fire Station's Fate Stirs Debate

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
Approximately 30 residents of a local neighborhood association gathered together in the sweltering 90 degree heat Wednesday to confront members of the Greenville City Council about the future prospects of a fire station abandoned by the city over a year ago.

Members of The Elmhurst Neighborhood Association came to the Gardner Fire Station, located near the intersection of Brownlea Drive and 14th Street, to request that the council form an ad hoc committee to establish recommendations regarding the long-term status of the now vacant structure.

Officials of TENA say since the station was abandoned by the fire department 13 months ago, the vacant facility has been both an eyesore and a source of danger. Children of the residential area play in an adjacent park, and some parents are concerned the vacant building is an accident waiting to happen.

Baby Found In High Point Home

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A High Point woman and her daughter have been charged in the kidnapping of a 2-day-old boy who was found unharmed in a closet at their home with a haircut apparently intended to disguise him.

Brenda Joyce Nobles, 37, of High Point was charged Wednesday with first-degree kidnapping, said Capt. Earl Whitaker of the High Point Police Department. Her bond was set at $500,000, and she was being held Wednesday night at the Greensboro jail.

Jason Ray McClure, who was taken from his mother's arms at High Point Regional Hospital Monday by a woman disguised as a nurse, was found in the house that Mrs. Nobles listed as her home.

Sharon Slayden, 19, also of High Point, who was identified as Mrs. Nobles' daughter, was charged with aiding and abetting first-degree kidnapping, Whitaker said. Her bond was set at $100,000.

Before entering the magistrate's office at about 9 p.m. Wednesday, Mrs. Nobles was asked if she had anything to say.

"Ask Renee (the child's mother) how come I had the child," she told the Greensboro News & Record.

When asked what she meant, she replied, "Because I bought it." She made no other comments.

Hours earlier, Renee McClure said at the news conference that she had mixed feelings about Jason's kidnapper.

"I'd like to ask her why," Mrs. McClure said.

"I really feel sorry for her that she felt she had to go in a hospital and take a baby that was not her own," she said.

Mrs. McClure said her biggest fear after the child was kidnapped was that he would be harmed by his kidnapper. "We live in a rather cruel world. I was just afraid she would hurt him."

Asked by photographers to hug the infant for a picture, Mrs. McClure said, "I sure don't mind that!"

Mrs. McClure said her older son, 3-year-old Kevin, had demanded to see his baby brother just minutes before Jason was returned to her Wednesday afternoon. Kevin had not been told of the kidnapping.

"I was sitting on the edge of the bed — I had my (older) son on my lap," she said. "He said, 'Mommy, I want to see my baby brother.'"

Her voice then cracked into sobs.

"It wasn't five minutes (after) they were coming around with my baby. We're just so glad and so thankful."

Mrs. McClure said a police officer entered the room carrying her baby. "I'm hollerin'," she said. "I said, 'that's my baby!' and was trying to grab him out of his arms."

Jason, wrapped in a blanket, wore a blue and white striped wool hat, which his mother removed to show where the child's hair had been cut during the abduction.

Acting on a tip from Crimestoppers of High Point, police went to Mrs. Noble's house about 12:50 p.m.

Mrs. Nobles met them at the door, then showed officers a 6-week-old child, apparently her granddaughter, police said.

Acne Drug Prevents Skin Cancer, But At High Risk

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A study published today shows that the acne medicine Accutane is the first treatment known to prevent skin cancer in humans, but scientists caution the drug is too toxic for routine use.

Accutane, a vitamin A derivative that can cause birth defects in pregnant women, sharply reduced skin cancer in a small group of people who were at extremely high risk because of an inherited genetic disorder, the study shows.

While Accutane cannot be taken for long periods by most people, other synthetic forms of vitamin A may someday be routinely used to prevent skin cancer in people whose skin has been damaged by years of exposure to the sun, the researchers said.

In addition, vitamin A drugs may someday be used to treat other tumors of epithelial tissue, such as cancers of the lung, stomach, colon, bladder, cervix and breast, said Dr. Harley Haynes of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

"The odds are that within the lifetime of many people, we may well be able to develop treatments that reduce the risk of cancer in high-risk people," he said.

The treatment is an example of the young field of chemoprevention. Until now, medicines have been given almost exclusively to attack cancers once they occur rather than to prevent them from forming.

"This is the first study that has scientifically proven in humans that skin cancer can be prevented by any means," said Dr. Howard Koh of the Boston University School of Medicine. "We use sun screens because they should work, but we still have not rigorously proven in a scientific way that skin cancer can be prevented with that method."

However, he cautioned that the study, conducted on just five people, is very small, and it is unclear whether the findings will apply to those at lower risk of skin cancer.

The study was directed by Dr. Kenneth H. Kraemer at the National Cancer Institute and published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

About 500,000 Americans are treated each year for basal cell and squamous cell skin cancer, the most common forms of cancer. These tumors, which are usually curable, occur most frequently in light-skinned people exposed to too much sun.

"You are better off preventing it by avoiding the sun at the beginning," said Kraemer. "But if that isn't the case, this is an indication that drugs may be developed to prevent the progression of the damage to cancer."

Accutane, known generically as isotretinoin, is widely used to clear up severe acne. Because of its possible danger for pregnant women, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration last month ordered its maker, Hoffmann-La Roche, to warn customers by printing a picture of a deformed baby on the drug's packaging.

In the cancer study, high doses were taken by five people with

Toxic Cloud Chases Thousands

CROFTON, Ky. (AP) — Burning phosphorus from a derailed tanker spread a toxic cloud across five Kentucky counties, driving thousands of residents from their homes before it began dissipating today.

The phosphorus burst into flames in 99-degree heat late Wednesday when 34 cars of a CSX Transportation Corp. train derailed and the chemical leaked from one car. The fire burned itself out shortly after dawn today.

"It's very, very much dissipating," state police Trooper Bryan Pitney said today. "It's not as dense as it was. It's not as irritable."

The Federal Aviation Administration this morning lifted a restriction imposed overnight on all air travel at or below 2,000 feet in the area. State officials temporarily closed some roads.

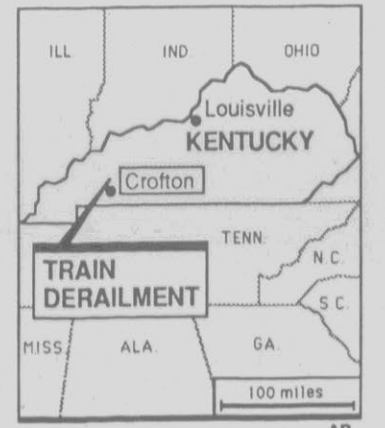

The only remaining fire this morning was a minor brush fire nearby, officials said.

Phosphorus fires cannot be extinguished with water and must burn themselves out, said Don Armstrong, spokesman for the state Disaster and Emergency Services in Frankfort.

Bob L. Cart, CSX superintendent of operations for the Chicago division, said the railroad had been given permission to begin clearing cars on the south end of the derailment. He said the derailment's cause was not known.

Senate Balks At Spending Limits

RALEIGH (AP) — A program designed to hold down campaign costs and give a financial boost to politicians who cooperate is in trouble after the Senate returned it to a committee for further work.

The measure, under attack by critics who called it a nice idea that wouldn't work, was sent from the Senate floor to the Election Laws

Committee on a 31-16 vote Wednesday.

The committee chairman, Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, said the panel might not meet again until next Wednesday — when some lawmakers hope the Legislature will be getting ready to adjourn.

"We'll take it back up ... but time is short," Kaplan said. "It would be dif-icult" to put together an acceptable bill by then, he said, "but I've seen people pull that kind of thing off."

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, unsuccessfully urged his colleagues to approve the bill, saying the Legislature would have plenty of time to fix its shortcomings before the plan would take effect in 1992.

"This legislation is wanted by the people of North Carolina. Every one of you wants this legislation," Rauch said. "It is not going to be any easier six months from now than it is now."

The bill, which the House approved in 1987, would establish a fund with money donated by taxpayers through a checkoff on their income tax

Police Say Stolen Car Wrecks In Chase

Greenville police are still looking for the driver of a car that was involved in a chase from Greenville to Oak City in Martin County Tuesday night.

Police said Wednesday the vehicle had been stolen from Joe Pecheles Volkswagen on Greenville Boulevard sometime before the chase began.

Officer W.T. McCarter said a Pecheles employee reported the vehicle — a 1988 model red Buick — stolen about 12:26 p.m. Wednesday.

Lt. D.R. Bullock said the vehicle had been stopped for a traffic check near Fleming Street and Vanderbuilt Avenue about 11:15 p.m. Tuesday. When an officer asked the driver to pull to the side of the street so he could check the driver's license, the car sped away, Bullock said.

Greenville police chased the speeding car to Bethel, according to Bullock, who said Bethel police then pursued the car to a point south of Oak City. There the vehicle ran into the rear of a car driven by Oak City policeman Kevin Byars, who was attempting to set up a running roadblock.

The car then ran off the road, hit a ditch, became airborne and came to a stop in a soybean field. The driver — who has yet to be identified — jumped from the car and fled into a wooded area, where he eluded searching officers, Byars said Wednesday.

Caswell Reports TB Outbreak

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Exposure to a nurse carrying active tuberculosis has resulted in a serious outbreak of positive tuberculin skin tests at a Lenoir County hospital, officials said.

Only two people at Caswell Center tested have the active TB disease, while the rest carry the germ in its dormant state, officials said.

So far, 37 staff members have converted from negative to positive TB skin tests. Staff and residents are still being tested, but an outbreak of the disease is not expected, according to Jim Woodall, Caswell Center director.

"We've been assured by authorities and the local health department staff that it is extremely unlikely anyone will develop active tuberculosis," Woodall said.

The nurse was hired for a temporary position in September 1987 to work until May 31, Woodall said. When hired, the nurse brought records showing a positive TB skin test, but had a doctor's notice of two recent negative chest X-rays and no sign of active TB. She fulfilled all the expected requirements of state policy, Woodall said.

The nurse was diagnosed as having active TB by a chest X-ray taken at Caswell on May 27. She was referred to the health department in her home county — not Lenoir — on the same day.

Apart from the infected nurse, who is no longer working at Caswell, one person — a resident — was diagnosed

Foreclosure Order Signed For Center

A foreclosure order has been signed calling for the sale of the Carolina East Convenience Center property on South Memorial Drive on July 13 to satisfy a $3.02 million debt to a California savings and loan.

Foreclosure proceedings were started against Carolina East Realty Co., owners of the convenience center, when papers were filed earlier this month. But the papers instituting the foreclosure said the action could be stopped if the owners pay the May 9 "balance of $3,023,093.02," owed to American Savings and Loan.

In order for the foreclosure sale to be held as called for in the action, court officials at Tuesday's hearing had to find that: a valid debt exists; that the party seeking to foreclose is the holder of the debt; that there is default; that there is a right to foreclose under the instrument.

A spokesman for the clerk's office said testimony at the hearing showed the convenience center's owners had not made a payment on the loan from American since April 1987.

Papers on file with the clerk's office list Harry Schreiber of West Palm Beach, Fla., as the general partner of Carolina East Realty Co.

Carolina East Convenience Center, across Mall Drive from Carolina East Mall, was built in 1980. Pitt County tax records list the tax value of the property at $3.08 million in 1980 and $3.42 million as of Jan. 1 of this year.

Helms Contends South African Sanctions Are Hurting Blacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms has urged Congress to end economic sanctions against South Africa during a sometimes testy Senate hearing.

Helms said Wednesday sanctions hurt the blacks they were intended to help, but some Democratic senators called for even tougher measures, including an economic embargo of the white-ruled nation. They said the United States was morally obligated to act against the South African system of apartheid.

"It is absurd to reward Pretoria's policy of increased repression in 1987 and 1988 by lifting the sanctions we imposed in 1986," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. He has introduced a bill calling for a trade embargo and the withdrawal of all U.S. businesses from South Africa. The Reagan administration and many Republican senators oppose the measure.

Helms has introduced a bill calling for the repeal of the partial sanctions that Congress imposed in 1986, when it overrode President Reagan's veto, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported. Helms and Kennedy testified Wednesday before the Foreign Relations Committee, which is conducting three days of hearings on South Africa.

In a particularly acid exchange, Helms — the committee's ranking Republican member — accused Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., of being insufficiently concerned about communist forces battling the South African government.

"You say sanctions against South Africa are no good, but I believe you support the sanctions against the Sandinistas in Nicaragua and sanctions against the Jaruzelski regime in Poland, is that not the case?" Cranston asked Helms.

"Well one is a communist country, senator, if you don't know that, and the other is not," Helms replied, prompting gasps and some laughter from the overflow audience. "I suggest you go over to South Africa as I have ... and you go talk to the miners and farmers and leaders, you go talk to the mayor of Soweto. You haven't done that. You sit over here on a pedestal and dictate to them."

Helms visited South Africa last August as a guest of an organization tied to the Pretoria government. Among those he met was the mayor of the black township of Soweto, who has said U.S. economic sanctions have hurt black workers in South Africa.

Helms told Cranston he thought blacks eventually would rule South Africa.

But, he said, "It's not going to be done by passing pious legislation in the United States Congress. It's got to be done on an economic basis. Perhaps it would help a little bit if you would be concerned about the communist government of Ethiopia and some of those. But you never say a mumbling word about that. But let's get the communists out of Angola and the rest of Africa, because that's where the battleground is."

Cranston, who supports Kennedy's bill, said: "I think the White House has been wimpy on the moral issue of apartheid."

Early Humans Ate Soft Fruits, Leaves

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of ancient teeth suggests ancestors of humans ate soft fruits and leaves but their evolutionary cousins ate nuts and bark, scientists reported today.

The study compared microscopic wear patterns of teeth from human ancestors called Australopithecus and their "cousins," called Paranthropus, with those of modern animals with known diets.

The work is reported in today's issue of the British journal Nature by Frederick Grine, associate professor of anthropology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, and Richard Kay, professor of anatomy at Duke University in Durham, N.C.

They studied detailed replicas of molars that Australopithecus left some 2.5 million to 2.8 million years ago in South Africa, and that Paranthropus left there some 1.5 million to 1.8 million years ago.

The two kinds of animals are also known as gracile and robust australopithecines, respectively.

Both walked upright, but after their lineages split some 2.5 million years ago, the Australopithecus group evolved toward modern humans while the Paranthropus branch eventually died out.

In the study, Paranthropus teeth showed more pits, and wider pits and scratches, suggesting a diet of tougher foods than Australopithecus ate, researchers said. The difference probably led to the bigger teeth and larger jaws of Paranthropus, they said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Remove The Fat

Thrift, Not Inflation, For Greenville

A 13.57 percent budget increase isn't frugal. Raising the tax rate by 2.2 cents isn't frugal. Substantially increasing the salaries of department heads isn't frugal. And neither is adding a high-paid assistant for a city manager who requested such an expenditure after less than a year on the job.

So why should Greenville's City Council accept a 1988-89 budget that includes these items when what they were promised from the city manager was an economical approach to managing public money?

It shouldn't. The city's elected officials have an obligation to be penny pinchers. After all, they're dealing with taxpayers' money. That board should be appalled at City Manager Greg Knowles' proposed budget that discards thrift for inflationary tactics.

Council members correctly assessed the proposed budget as "administratively top heavy," recognizing that a more-than-fair portion of the increase is for top-end salaries — and support for the city manager's office.

How can Knowles, who has been on the job less than a year, accurately assess whether he needs an assistant, must less satisfactorily justify the expenditure? The city manager's timing for raising this issue and for making costly budget requests is questionable.

Raising taxes for pay for luxuries is not justifiable. Greenville's personnel and service needs are pressing. More manpower is needed in law enforcement, fire-rescue, public works and planning. Remember, the city annexed large residential areas in the past year. These moves not only broadened its tax base but also placed an additional burden on services.

If a tax increase were warranted in 1988, which it is not, it should address this growth, not accouterments for the top dogs. The priorities in the proposed budget are incorrect; the taxpayers' pockets shouldn't be picked for less-than-urgent circumstances.

Greenville's leaders have kept the tax rate down in the past, and should perpetuate this efficiency. They should direct the city manager to apply a sharp pencil to the proposed budget and remove the fat — along with the unnecessary tax hike.

Defense Scramble

Hard Look At Allegations Mandatory

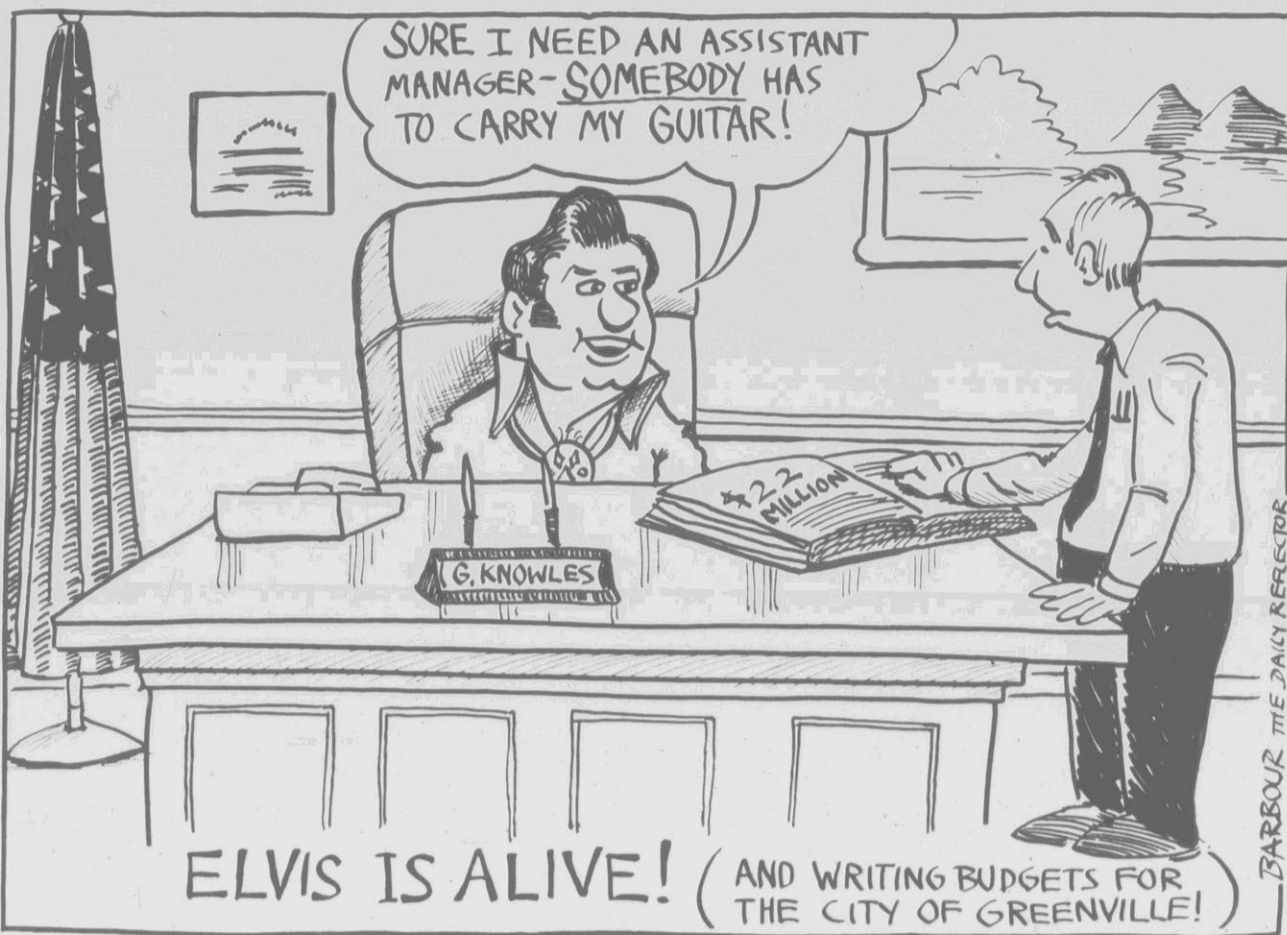

Investigations of corruption and bribery in the Department of Defense's purchasing has the potential to become the major scandal of the 1980s.

It may be a long while before grand jury investigation of the situation leads to indictments. Nevertheless the great concern felt in the U.S. Congress and elsewhere in the government is apparent.

Questions are being raised about leaks in the Department of Defense which might have placed classified information about purchasing proposals in the wrong hands. If that occurred, some companies could have been unfairly eliminated from the competition for Pentagon business. Every taxpayer knows what that might mean. Without full competition, the cost of Department of Defense purchases would balloon. Ultimately holding the bag for such increased cost, of course, is the American taxpayer.

It is too soon to be accusatory and the full impact of the looming potential scandal won't be known until and unless there are grand jury indictments.

There is clear concern in Washington, however, that loose controls on Pentagon purchasing may have led to illegal and costly situations. That the full investigation should continue is indisputable. It is public money that is being spent by the Department of Defense and the taxpayers should know these funds are spent in the most efficient way possible. And if there is the possibility that laws were violated then those responsible should be called to account.

To the editor:

Refer to the article on your editorial page, A-4, Wednesday, June 15, 1988, by Ray Jenkins, "House Prices Shoot Through the Roof," from the L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service.

The conclusions drawn by Mr. Jenkins at the end of his article are unfortunately all too true. Anyone in the economic situation pointed out in his article are also painfully aware of the situation described by Mr. Jenkins. I only wish Mr. Jenkins had gone further to point out the root cause of this sad dilemma. The root cause is that we have dishonest money. The Federal Reserve has been for many years printing vast amounts of paper currency with nothing of intrinsic value to act as a guardian of trust. This encourages both the Federal Reserve and the politicians to permit this proliferation of paper to continue. Even the coinage has been debased. Remember the 1964 and previous coins from the dime on up contained a considerable amount of silver. Doesn't anyone think it is odd that a junk bag of $1,000 face value of 1964 and previous coins now takes $4,500 worth of paper currency to purchase?

If we don't elect a Congress and a President who will restore honest money all too many will continue to be the victim's described in Mr. Jenkins article.

The single most important issue this country faces in the November 1988 election is the restoration of honest money and economic sanity. What candidates have you heard speaking on this issue?

To the editor:

I was appalled but not surprised at the sophomoric attitude displayed in your editorial, "Line Up, Oddballs," which weakly attempted to parody President Reagan's belief in astrology by listing requirements for replacements for Chief-of-Staff Howard Baker and the President himself.

Your claim that "the remaining shreds of sensibility and believability have fled the Reagan administration" is absurd and is unsupported by the nation's current economic and political climate.

America's strong economy bolstered by all-time low inflation and unemployment, the INF nuclear arms ban treaty, the recent Moscow summit and the public resurgence in national pride are not the accomplishments of an incompetent boob. Setting aside any political bias, the facts show Reagan's strong leadership, not astrology, is responsible for our nation's good fortune.

Whatever the cause, I'll take a "plastic-haired" Reagan or Bush over an inexperienced Dukakis or Jackson any day. And as a subscriber and advertiser, I think it's about time the Daily Reflector's editorial policies reflect the opinions of the people of Pitt County, rather than the ultra-liberal views of your staff. Consider that when, as you inevitably will, you endorse Dukakis in the months ahead.

The Psychic Cost Of Underdevelopment

'The recent wave of democratization that has washed over much of Latin America has been a painful reminder to Mexicans that they are frozen in a 19th century-style political system while the rest of the world increasingly reaches out for liberal democracy.'

Supreme Court has never overturned any key government decision ... the PRI's huge majority guarantees the obedience of Congress (which) to suit the whims of a succession of Presidents (has) amended the constitution on 369 occasions."

There has never been a non-PRI member of the Mexican senate, nor has an opposition candidate been permitted to win a state governorship. Some observers estimated that the opposition National Action Party (PAN) might have won the Chihuahua governorship by as much as 3 to 1 in the 1986 state elections had they been honest. The PRI candidate was declared the winner.

The psychic cost of Mexico's political underdevelopment has also been high. The success of what was once considered a motley bunch of English colonies to the north and, particularly, the loss of half the national territory — what is today Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California — to the United States in the Mexican-American War have left Mexicans with acute inferiority feelings that are a major obstacle to healthy relations between our two countries.

The recent wave of democratization that has washed over much of Latin America has been a painful reminder to Mexicans that they are frozen in a 19th century-style political system while the rest of the world increasingly reaches out for liberal democracy. A year ago, I attended a two-day conference in Mexico, sponsored by the Mexican government, the prestigious Colegio de Mexico and Harvard's Center for International Affairs, that brought Mexican politicians and intellectuals together with American intellectuals. One purpose was to inform the Americans of economic and political progress made by the De la Madrid government. The economic presentation was impressive. The political presentation was embarrassing, even to some of the Mexican participants, one of whom said to me, "We really look bad, don't we?"

In fact, President Miguel de la Madrid's economic glasnost may have paved the way for fellow Har-vardian Salinas' political initiatives. De la Madrid has liberalized the Mexican economy beyond what most observers believed possible three years ago and has unleashed the forces of economic pluralism in the process.

If Salinas really opens up the system, an achievement that could be within his reach once elected, he will establish himself as a great leader. Mexico will forever be indebted to him, much as Venezuela will always be indebted to Romulo Betancourt. An open political system is likely, in the long run, to accelerate economic growth through increased entrepreneurial activity and investment. It is also likely to improve Mexico's highly inequitable income distribution (1977 figures, the latest available to the World Bank, show the top 10 percent of the population accounting for 40 percent of total income, compared with 23 percent for the United States).

Above all, an open political system will permit Mexicans to stand tall in their dealings with one another and the rest of the world, particularly the United States. As our relationships with Costa Rica and Venezuela, not to mention Canada, demonstrate, democracy breeds mutual respect, candor and shared concerns.

'Good Time' Vs. All The Time

RALEIGH — When someone commits an especially heinous crime, the natural reaction many of us have is to lock the guy up and throw away the key.

In a political atmosphere suddenly charged with concern about this state's illegal drug trade, just such a proposal has surfaced in the General Assembly. It isn't likely to become law this year, but it is certain to be on the agenda when the 1989 session opens.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, has filed a bill that would deny to convicted drug traffickers the right to earn early prison release for good behavior.

A bit of background may be needed here. Prison inmates can often win early release after serving only one-fourth or one-third of their sentences if they behave in prison and work to improve themselves. They do this by accumulating "good time" and "gain time."

"People are concerned that drug traffickers are being released in some cases in one-eighth of their term," Rand said in what might have been a bit of an exaggeration. "The penalty should be more substantial."

Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, a member of the Governor's Crime Commission, said, "one of the biggest problems we've found (in trying to fight drug trafficking) is that the average guy in the prisons serves only 37 percent of his sentence." Cobb is backing a proposal from Gov. Jim Martin that is nearly identical to Rand's.

Rand would allow one escape hatch for convicted drug traffickers. If the defendants helped investigators convict others involved in the crime, then a judge could reinstate his right to time off for good behavior. Rand says that provision should help investigators considerably.

"It will help investigators in the sense that it will certainly loosen one's tongue when he sees the load looming," Rand said. "When you're looking at serving 35 years, the chances of one's coming to grips with one's conscience are greater."

Rand's idea is not a new one. At other times, reducing the availability of parole has been debated, most notably in the debate over life imprisonment and the death penalty. Corrections officials usually argue that they do not want to try to manage inmates who have no hope of parole. That hope, they say, is their best tool for keeping that inmate in line.

As Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, said, "There is good logic (to good time.) It gives them some incentive to behave in prison. Even if it is a drug trafficker, there ought to be some incentive to abide by the rules and improve themselves."

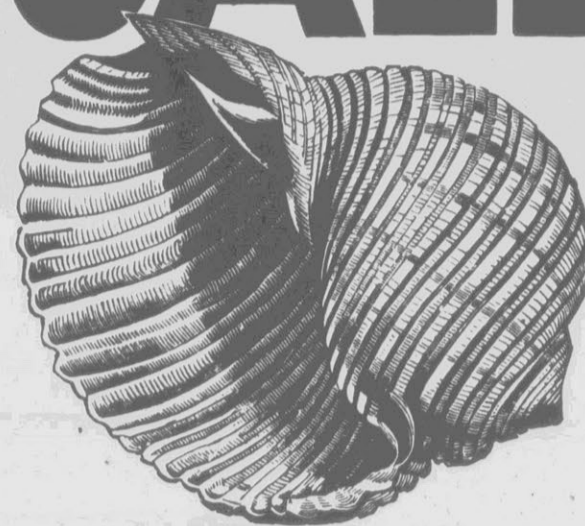

While Soles did not say he would oppose Rand's bill, he added, "I'm a little bit concerned about putting any prisoner in prison and not giving him any hope (of winning) release at all." That sentiment was echoed by another lawyer, Sen. Sandy Sands, D-Rockingham. "The Department of Correction needs some mechanism to differentiate between prisoners who behave and those who do not," he said. Sands said that there may be a better way to accomplish Rand's goal. He suggested that drug traffickers be required to serve a higher percentage of their sentence before they were eligible for parole.

Rand said that corrections has other ways of enticing inmates to behave. There are other privileges which can be taken away or granted, like work release, recreation time and assignment to less restrictive custody.

Cobb said DOC is not concerned about managing the drug traffickers because they make up only a small percentage of the prison population.

Income Tax Break For Big Businesses Moving Through Legislature With Ease

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — No visible opposition has surfaced to a plan to give multistate businesses with a major presence in North Carolina a state income tax break as the Senate prepares to vote.

"I don't believe there's going to be any opposition," said Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth. "It's a great proposal."

The bill, which already has gained overwhelming House approval, was scheduled for the first of two Senate votes today. It was endorsed unanimously by the Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday with no debate.

Currently, the state levies corporate income tax based on the percentage of a company's sales, payroll and property holdings in North Carolina.

The bill would change the formula to put more emphasis on sales in North Carolina and less on payroll and property — favoring companies with large portions of their payroll and property in the state.

One company that would benefit is RJR-Nabisco Inc., which requested the change in talks with legislators and Martin administration officials before announcing its decision to build a $600 million bakery in Wake County. It will create about 650 jobs.

"I think this plant by itself will offset the revenue loss we'd get in this bill when it's fully on line," Kaplan said in an interview.

Supporters acknowledged the change would cost the state $10 million this year and $20 million annually thereafter. But they say the new formula would stimulate enough economic growth to broaden the tax base and turn the bill into a money maker by the mid-1990s.

In the meantime, they say, a provision in the bill calling for corporations to speed up their estimated quarterly tax payments will create a one-time windfall that partially will compensate for the loss.

When Gov. Jim Martin proposed eliminating the inventory and intangibles taxes in 1985, his contention that growth would offset the raid on state coffers was scorned by some of the same Democrats now pushing the "double-weighted" income tax plan.

But Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, the bill's sponsor, said the two positions were consistent.

Inventory and intangibles tax relief helps only certain taxpayers, he said, while all businesses will be eligible to take advantage of the income tax break.

He cited results of a study done by DRI of Lexington, Mass., a private consulting firm. Using data from the study, a North Carolina State University economist projected that the bill would lead to the creation of 5,000 jobs by 1996.

But a DRI official told The Charlotte Observer the company's research focused on how one client would be affected by the tax change and was not designed to measure how it would affect the entire state.

Even so, Miller said, "We're using the best information available to us."

Kaplan said other states were adopting the "double-weighted sales" provision in their tax codes and that North Carolina had to act or miss out on its benefits.

"We've got to keep up with the Joneses," he said.

Legislator Hobbles To Session

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Alexander P. "Sandy" Sands, D-Rockingham, considered missing the rest of the legislative session after he had to undergo arthroscopic surgery on his left knee.

But he said he knew he had to return because of important business — making sure the town of King in Stokes County was able to spend $500,000 in water and sewer bonds it had received earlier but hadn't spent and now needed legislative approval to use.

"It would have been easy to stay home," as many people advised him to do, Sands said. "But I've always worked hard."

So Sands, a first-term legislator who's an attorney from Reidsville, spent the past few days hobbling on crutches, in obvious pain from the swollen knee. He has borrowed the offices of legislators in the main building so he wouldn't have to walk from the legislative building to his office in the Legislative Office Building.

He made that walk Tuesday for a caucus meeting. "It just about killed me," he said.

Sands has depended upon the kindness of his secretary and other legislators to help him through the day. His secretary, Peggy Anne Hogan, came to the Senate Insurance Committee, which approved the King measure, to deliver his messages and take dictation before the meeting started Wednesday.

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, sent someone to get Sands' keys, which were left with the security guard who moved his car, so he wouldn't have to walk from one building to another and back to his car.

And Sen. Frank Block, D-New Hanover, carried his luggage from his car to his apartment, which fortunately is on the first floor, when he returned to the session Tuesday.

But Block refused to unpack the suitcases, Sands said.

Sands has even had to take some good-natured kidding from other legislators. Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, welcomed Sands' return Tuesday by saying he understood Sands had had a "knee-jerk reaction."

Sands said his knee began hurting about six weeks ago after he played tennis with his children. The doctor said that Sands apparently had chipped some cartilage years ago without realizing it.

He had planned to try to get through the session before undergoing surgery. "But it hurt so bad I just went ahead and set it (the operation) up," Sands said.

He underwent surgery Friday, missed Monday's session and returned to the Legislature Tuesday.

He "took the liberty" of not coming in Wednesday until 10:30 a.m. so he could keep his knee elevated and on ice. He missed out on a free meal for legislators sponsored by Glaxo Tuesday for the same reason. Instead, he ate at a fried chicken fast-food restaurant.

His doctor said that walking on the Legislature's hard floors wouldn't cause any damage, although he advised against it, Sands said.

"He said, 'If it were my knee, I wouldn't go,'" Sands said. "But it's not his knee."

Legislative Leaders Challenge Standards For School Buildings

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative leaders appear ready to step in and force a re-examination of controversial new building standards for North Carolina's public schools that require offices for teachers, among other items.

Both Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said Wednesday the standards set by the state Board of Education in June needed to be re-examined.

"I think what we need to do is rescind those standards and appoint a study committee made up of sensible people and let them decide what the standards should be," Ramsey said. "We ought not to have to do that. It is not our job. But we can't turn our back on the county commissioners who foot the bill."

Jordan, a member of the board, said that he expected the Legislature to make a statement on the issue before it adjourned, but that he preferred that it only require the school board to re-examine it.

"I would expect the Legislature to make a statement," Jordan said. "That is not a charge that I have been leading. But there have been a lot of people concerned about the increased costs. ... All those standards that have been adopted since last October should be revisited. I prefer that you allow the state board of education to revisit the standards."

Both county commissioners and school board members are heavily lobbying the legislature to get involved, contending that the standards are excessive and will drive up the costs of new schools.

Under a study being distributed to state lawmakers, the standards would add $253 million to the state's $2 billion in school construction needs, causing the deferral or abandonment of as many as 75 new elementary schools or 32 high school building projects. The study was conducted jointly by the N.C. School Boards Association and the N.C. Association of County Commissioners.

Lobbyists for county commissioners and local school boards spent Wednesday traveling the halls of the legislature distributing their studies, including talks with Ramsey and other top legislative leaders.

"We want it reopened and some documentation as to why those standards, how much they are going to cost, and some justification for this," said Gene Causby, executive director for the association representing the state's 142 school boards. "We asked them (the school board) to do it and they refused to. Therefore the only place left for us is here."

One of the groups' studies shows the impact the standards would have on two school buildings, the James W. Smith Elementary School in Craven County, which is under construction, and the Jonathan Valley Elementary School in Haywood County, which was completed in August 1986.

It contends that the costs of the $3.7 million Craven County school would be increased $611,000, or 16 percent, while those of the $3.5 million Haywood County school would have been driven up $301,000, or 8.6 percent.

"Our bottom line is to get the standards revised," Causby said. "Whether it is the state board that does it or the Legislature we don't have a preference. ... The schools that we have needed for 20 years will be delayed another five years, and I don't think that that will serve anybody's interest."

IN THE STATE

Banking Law

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite arguments that North Carolina banks showed bad faith by planning to shift credit card operations out of state, the House has enacted legislation to let the banks expand into the depressed Texas market.

The House agreed to enact the Senate-passed bill on a 90-19 vote.

Supporters have argued that adding Texas to the list of 12 Southeastern states and the District of Columbia in which North Carolina banks can operate would be good for both states.

Texas banks lost a record $1.9 billion, mostly from loans made in the depressed oil and real estate industries, and supporters said that made the state ripe for acquisitions that could enhance bank profits in North Carolina.

Veto Power

RALEIGH (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand says he would co-sponsor a resolution sought by Republicans to resurrect the issue of veto power for the governor, but doubts there is enough time left for the parliamentary maneuvering involved.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat who is running against Republican Gov. Jim Martin, Wednesday refused to allow a vote on a motion by Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, that the veto issue be revived, saying it was out of order. He later said Republicans were playing election-year politics.

"This politics, plain and simple," Jordan told reporters. "It's a shame the public can't be here to get a true sense of the games they're playing."

FBI Leak?

RALEIGH (AP) — A Carrboro lawyer says someone in the FBI may be leaking information about a Robeson County drug investigation, but a federal prosecutor says that charge is "unwarranted and defamatory."

Bob Warren, an attorney representing accused Indian hostage-taker Timothy Jacobs, also says in a letter to Assistant U.S. Attorney William Webb that bodies may be buried under a Robeson County man's swimming pool.

Warren's allegations and Webb's response were contained in letters placed in the court file of Jacobs, one of two Indians charged with taking hostages Feb. 1 at the Robesonian newspaper.

Webb wrote that he found Warren's "vague allegations about a hole in the local FBI" to be "unwarranted and defamatory," adding, "This conclusion is bolstered by your apparent decision not to bring your concerns to the attention of officials of the FBI."

Alligator Killed

LAKE WACCAMAW, N.C. (AP) — State game officials killed a 12-foot-one-inch alligator early today after reports that the alligator had killed a German shepherd and threatened a child, authorities said.

"The alligator had demonstrated some aggressive and dangerous behavior," said Hal Atkinson, chief of the Wildlife Game Management Division. "The decision was made in the interest of public safety."

The alligator was killed with a 12-gauge shotgun by two game commission employees.

Storm Damage

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 30 mobile homes were damaged and at least three were destroyed when high winds ripped through two Scotland County mobile home sales lots and a nearby trailer park.

The storm damaged 11 mobile homes and destroyed two others at one lot. Across the street, the storm destroyed one trailer and tore the roofs off of 12 more. A quarter-mile away, at least six mobile homes at the El Moro Mobile Home Park were damaged, mainly by falling trees. No injuries were reported.

The Scotland County storm was the only one reported in the state Wednesday as temperatures pushed into the upper 90s.

The high temperatures strained demand for electricity as North Carolina residents turned up air conditioners to beat the heat. Duke Power Co. set a record between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. Wednesday when usage hit 12,732 megawatts. The former record, set Jan. 27 when the temperature fell to 15 degrees, was 12,728 megawatts.

Acquitted

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Jurors in Forsyth County Superior Court have acquitted a Kernersville man on charges that he raped and molested a 5-year-old girl in 1983.

Ronald Dale Mills had been charged with first-degree rape and two counts of taking indecent liberties. Mills, 40, would have faced a mandatory life sentence on the rape charge.

Prison Crowding Nearing Limits

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina prison officials are preparing emergency measures for the third time in 15 months as the prison system moved toward exceeding a state-mandated limit on the number of inmates.

Early Wednesday, 17,685 inmates were incarcerated in North Carolina prisons. It was the 14th consecutive day in which the system's population was above the legislatively mandated cap of 17,460 prisoners.

If the prison population stayed above 17,460 today, as expected, the correction department would notify Gov. Jim Martin and put into effect the special provisions for early releases.

"We have a prison system that is becoming more and more strained," David Guth, spokesman for the state Department of Correction, said Wednesday.

"This is the third time that this has happened (since state lawmakers imposed the inmate limit in March 1987), and it's going to become more and more difficult to manage the population and to reduce the population each time this happens," Guth said.

In order to reduce the number of prisoners, the department will take several measures.

State prisons "will stop accepting short-term misdemeanor offenders," including people convicted of bouncing checks and of driving-while-impaired, Guth said.

The state parole commission also will consider paroling inmates who were scheduled to be released within nine months, Guth said.

In addition, all prisoners serving time for misdemeanor charges, except for assault charges, will be considered for release.

"There will be no opening of the doors, as such," Guth said. "We'll start whittling (the prison population) down."

"We're not going to let just anybody out," he said. "We're going to look at each case on a case-by-case basis. It's not our intention to let anybody out who shouldn't be out."

Guth said the overcrowding problem actually is getting worse because some prisons, such as those in the South Piedmont judicial region, Craggy Prison in Buncombe County and the Caledonia prison complex in Halifax County, have limits on the number of inmates they can take in. So when the system is overloaded, the "extra" inmates can only go to certain prisons, worsening the problem at those facilities.

"Last year, we reached a high of 18,100 inmates" in March, Guth said. "People say that we only have 17,600 now, so we must be doing better. But that's not true. We have limits for specific prisons... so actually, our management flexibility is reduced."

"Our situation today is far more difficult," he said.

Central Prison in Raleigh, where capacity is said to be 932 inmates, currently is housing 1,086 inmates, Guth said. The women's prison in Raleigh, which is supposed to house a maximum of 544 prisoners, had 627, he said.

Under the terms of the special provisions, the state will have 60 days to reduce the number of inmates to 17,460, Guth said. No one will be penalized if that goal is not met, but he said officials expect to meet that goal.

Black History Center Set Up In Durham

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A new black history center in Durham will include the arrest records and court documents from the civil rights movement, but it will also try to document the contributions of blacks to American society, its founders say.

The primary purpose of the North Carolina Center for the Study of Black History will be to "collect, preserve and herald many little-known truths that are of historical, social and cultural significance to black people in North Carolina, and indeed in this country," said Doris Williams, who will be director of the center.

"So much of our history has not been researched or has been lost," said Floyd McKissick, a civil rights attorney who founded Soul City, a now-defunct predominantly black town in Warren County.

"Some young people today think the first time a black ran for Congress was not until their generation..." McKissick, 66, said at a news conference held Wednesday to announce the center's founding. "There are some facts that have not been publicized that are relevant to the way black people look at themselves."

The center's founding collection will consist of court records, letters and personal accounts of civil rights leaders collected by McKissick since the 1950s, he said. They fill 38 four-drawer file cabinets and have been stored in his garage in Oxford, N.C., until now, he said.

Other material for the center includes information on Soul City, the predominantly-black city founded by McKissick in Warren County, and on black education since 1950.

McKissick received offers from several institutes to house the center, but wanted a black institution to have it. The center will be housed at 521 Nelson St., along with the Institute on Desegregation, which is on the North Carolina Central University campus in Durham.

The sole source of financing right now is the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation in Winston-Salem, which donated $30,000.

Other members of the board of directors are: Dan Pollitt, an attorney and a professor at the University of North Carolina School of Law; Malcolm Corrin, president of the Interracial Council for Business Opportunities in New York City; L.B. Frasier, a retired administrator at N.C. Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Lisbon Berry, from Wilmington; Dr. Grady Davis, a professor at Shaw University and a minister in Durham; Hortense McClinton, a retired educator with the UNC School of Social Work; Ben Ruffin, with RJR Nabisco in Winston-Salem; Benjamin Speller, dean of the School of Library and Information Sciences at NCCU; Jake Phelps, director of the Bryan University Center and the office of the University Union at Duke University; and Ben Chavis, with the United Church of America.

Rain Sprinkle Frustrates Drought-Stricken Farmers

By MIKE HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

Crews dredged the drought-stricken Mississippi River around the clock today to free hundreds of backed-up barges, while triple-digit temperatures prompted autoworkers to walk off the job after a co-worker collapsed and died.

Sprinklings of rain Wednesday succeeded only in frustrating farm-belt growers, many of whom urged federal action and said two more weeks without a drenching could plunge them into disaster.

"With the searing heat we've had the situation has become very, very serious as our crops begin to deteriorate," said Iowa's secretary of agriculture, Dale Cochran. "In the next 10 days, if we don't get rain we could lose 50 percent of our corn crop."

In Fenton, Mo., a Chrysler Corp. autoworker died after collapsing Wednesday night in what co-workers said was unbearable heat in a paint shop, as temperatures in the St. Louis area topped 100 degrees.

"It's so hot, you can hardly breathe in there. It's like you're smothering — like you're inside an oven," said one worker, Bertha Saxton. "Your skin is like someone poured baby oil on you."

An autopsy on Willie Benton, 54, was to be performed today, said Suzanne Campbell, spokeswoman for St. Joseph Hospital, where Benton died.

Shortly after he collapsed, hundreds of paint-shop workers at Chrysler's No. 1 and 2 plants walked off their jobs because of the heat. The walkout, the second in two days, forced the assembly lines at both plants to shut down.

Doug Nicoll, a Chrysler spokesman, said the buildings have no air conditioning but are ventilated and workers are given ice.

Also Wednesday, the Coast Guard for the first time limited the number of barges towboats can push in a major portion of the Mississippi. The limits were sought by barge companies that want to prevent towboat operators from running their loads aground in record-low water.

"There's got to be a doomsday point out there somewhere. Right now, I don't know anybody that I've talked to who can give me any idea where that is," said Brig. Gen.

Thomas Sands, president of the Mississippi River Commission. "Right now, we are not on the brink of disaster."

Under the limits, southbound towboats must have no more than 20 barges while northbound boats will be limited to 25, only 16 of which can be loaded, said Cmdr. Michael Donohoe.

Authorities said the 24-hour dredging of the river near Memphis, Tenn., would take until Friday afternoon, and more than 1,200 barges, many recently freed from other backlogs, were expected to stack up. Crews on the Ohio River also worked to break bottlenecks.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng planned to meet in Chicago today with representatives of drought-stricken states to advise a committee of the National Governors' Association on the crisis and the outlook for the nation. The governors were expected to prepare recommendations.

The day before, Lyng met in Washington with a congressional drought task force, which urged him to take all steps in his power to provide relief.

Rep. David Nagle, D-Iowa, said the focus of immediate efforts is on assuring feed for livestock and that legislative action to deal with crop losses would be delayed until officials determine the extent of the damage.

The record-setting heat wave continued to quicken the evaporation of moisture from the soil, but temperatures began to drop and the National Weather Service predicted some temporary relief today.

A cold front moved through the Great Lakes region and the upper Mississippi Valley early today and should southward and toward the Northeast, dropping temperatures into the 80s and 70s.

The front was expected to bring scattered showers, but "it doesn't look like too much change in the situation or perhaps none at all," said Hugh Crowther of the weather service in Kansas City, Mo.

By midafternoon Wednesday, two dozen cities had set high-temperature records. In Philadelphia, the temperature reached 100 degrees for the first time in more than 10 years.

Boston officials declared a heat emergency, opening up air conditioned buildings to the elderly. Officials in some Illinois towns said they might cancel July 4 fireworks because of tinder-dry vegetation.

In Arizona, the Tucson Electric Power Co. reported record usage Wednesday as an all-time high of 114 degrees was recorded.

In Charles City, Iowa, radio station KCHA awarded a water hose and sprinkler to Vicky Vorpanil for providing the best answer to a contest that asked listeners to complete the sentence, "It's so dry that..."

Her response: "It's so dry that cows are giving powdered milk."

Trio Convicted In Arms Case

NEW YORK (AP) — Three arms dealers were convicted of plotting to illegally ship military equipment to Argentina, Iraq, Poland and the Soviet Union in what authorities said was the first racketeering prosecution of an arms export case.

The U.S. District Court jury returned the verdict Wednesday and was to meet today to decide on forfeiture of the $1 million in illegal profits from the deals, which included the shipment of 1,300 night-vision goggles to Argentina during the Falkland Islands war with Great Britain.

The three main defendants — Solomon Schwartz, 54, of Monsey, owner of Texas Armament Advisors Inc.; Leonard Berg, 52, of New York, owner of HLB Security Electronics Ltd.; and Leon Lisbona, 63, of New York, an HLB employee — were found guilty of all charges.

They were convicted of 13 counts, including racketeering, wire fraud, violations of federal export law, conspiracy and making false statements to a governmental agency. Schwartz and Berg also were convicted of obstruction of justice.

The most serious charge, racketeering, carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison.

A fourth defendant, Grim DePancicis, 44, of Mount Dora, Fla., an associate of HLB, was convicted of aiding an illegal export and conspiracy in connection with the Soviet deal but was acquitted of a charge alleging his involvement in the Argentine shipment.

In that deal, the military equipment was smuggled out of the country without a required export license by couriers who hid the goggles in luggage, prosecutors said.

Another deal involved a shipment of 110 boxes of handguns, shotguns and ammunition that the government contends was destined for Iraq but was seized by authorities in Belgium.

A third illegal export was a "sting" by the U.S. Customs Service to ship 400 night-vision devices to the Soviet Union. One sample was smuggled out of the United States without an export license to a post office box in West Germany.

Fall Trial Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the Iran-Contra conspiracy case is setting up procedures for dealing with classified documents in an apparent effort to bring fired White House aide Oliver L. North to trial by fall.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ordered North to identify by July 11 which secret government documents the retired Marine lieutenant colonel wants to disclose in court to rebut charges that he illegally diverted Iranian arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

In a ruling on Wednesday, Gesell said that both the public and prosecutors would be barred from a July 14 hearing to determine if any of the documents are relevant to the case against North.

The judge also rejected a defense motion to declare the Classified Information Procedures Act unconstitutional as it applied to the case of North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealers Albert Hakim and Richard V. Secord.

The four defendants, whom Gesell has said must be tried separately, contended that the law unfairly required them to tell the prosecution what documents they intended to make public before the trials.

Such disclosures would give independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh an unfair tactical advantage, the defense said.

Car-Train Wreck Kills 8

IOLA, Kan. (AP) — High school cheerleaders hung black banners in the town square in memory of two sisters and five of their children killed when a train struck their car at a rural crossing that lacked warning signals.

"It's a major catastrophe for Iola," said Bob Johnson, city editor of the Iola Register, the newspaper in the town of 7,000 people. "There's shock. A lot of people were calling me at home last night in disbelief and shock."

Kathleen Hastings, 31, was a basketball star and cheerleader when she graduated from Iola High School in 1975. Her sister, Lisa Maxwell, 26, was a homecoming queen and graduated in 1980. Both were honor students.

The collision occurred Tuesday near Cherokee, about 100 miles southeast of Iola. A paramedic collapsed and died trying to save one of the children. "It just stunned us," Pat Friskel, the mother and grandmother of the victims, said Wednesday. "You just can't expect it. To have it happen to so many of our children and their children. And all at once. You never think it's going to happen."

Mrs. Friskel and her husband, Paul, are co-owners of Iola's funeral home and will handle the services.

All seven people in the station wagon were killed, including Mrs. Hastings' children, Cara, 8, Eric, 5, and Reuben, 3, and Mrs. Maxwell's children, Joel, 5, and Avery, 2.

Civic Club Buys Police Insurance

LOCKPORT, Ill. (AP) — A civic group has taken a novel approach to supporting its local police by taking out a $1 million insurance policy to cover the township's eight officers if they are killed in the line of duty.

The insurance idea came up after the deaths of two Will County auxiliary deputies during a 1983 crime spree in Homer Township, said James Clarage, president of the Homer Men for Responsible Government.

"We really felt bad about what happened with that incident," Clarage said. "There's nothing you can really do to offset something like that. This was just something we felt obligated to do to show that we were concerned."

In any future tragedy, he said, "We wanted to make sure that it wouldn't cause hardship ... to the families of officers."

The coverage, presented Wednesday to Will County Sheriff John Johnsen, would provide up to $200,000 for families of each officer killed and up to $1 million total. The policy took effect March 1.

Dues from the 100-member social and civic organization are paying the $3,000 annual premiums. The insurance applies to the sheriff and the seven full-time deputies who patrol Homer Township, a small unincorporated community of 20,000 residents located 30 miles southwest of Chicago. After a two-year search, the club got Lloyds of London to provide the policy, State's Attorney Ed Masters said.

Clarage said he contacted about a dozen insurance agents, while local agent Samuel Maranto talked to more than 20 companies

Candidates Pick Up Pace In Hunt For Running Mate

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

Michael Dukakis made peace with Joseph Biden, a one-time opponent who might have had grounds for a grudge, and struggled anew to come to terms with rival Jesse Jackson. Republican George Bush, meanwhile, expressed confidence that the "gender gap" will vanish once his views on the issues are known.

Bush was meeting at breakfast today with Jeane Kirkpatrick, the former United Nations ambassador who is often mentioned as a potential running mate. The vice president has said he isn't yet considering specific candidates to fill his own job.

However, some observers believe a woman on the ticket might boost Bush's support among female voters. A number of polls have suggested that women are far more likely to back Dukakis, the all-but-certain Democratic nominee, than Bush, his likely opponent. But the vice president dismissed such surveys.

"What you do is spell out your positions on the issues and the gender gap goes away and you win the election," Bush told local reporters Wednesday on a trip to Louisville, Ky.

Bush, who has had to curtail his campaign travel to stay within federal spending limits, was spending today in Washington, with no campaign appearances planned.

Jackson, continuing to plot his convention strategy, had a morning meeting set in Washington with his campaign chairmen from 34 states. Then he was heading off on a three-day trip to what he called "the deep, deep South" — Puerto Rico, where he won a non-binding "beauty contest" primary earlier this year.

Despite that victory, Dukakis wound up with all 57 of the island's convention delegates. Jackson is likely to use the trip to point up what he considers to be inequities in the delegate-selection process, although his campaign has been quietly working with the Dukakis camp to resolve such disputes.

Dukakis was spending most of today tending to gubernatorial business in Massachusetts, but was traveling to Washington tonight for a reception.

On Wednesday, he told reporters in Boston that the process of picking a running mate had "just begun."

However, campaign sources indicated the pace was picking up, as several vice presidential prospects — including Florida Sen. Bob Graham, Ohio Sen. John Glenn and Georgia

Sen. Sam Nunn — were invited to submit background and financial information to the Dukakis campaign for scrutiny.

One lawmaker, however, said he wants to be crossed off the list of contenders. New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley said through a spokesman that he had told the Dukakis campaign he wasn't interested.

"He's absolutely unambiguous about this," said Bradley spokesman Nick Donatiello.

Pressed about Jackson, Dukakis replied that the second-place finisher in the primary races was under "very serious consideration."

However, Dukakis said "it helps" for a vice presidential contender to have held public office. Jackson never has.

The two met Tuesday in California, after weeks of signals from Jackson that he should be offered a spot on the ticket. Jackson said the two talked about the selection of a running mate, but refused to elaborate.

Ron Brown, the head of Jackson's convention team, said Jackson did not directly ask for a place on the ticket.

Government Dropping Written Exam For Civil Service Hiring

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is abandoning use of a general written examination for Civil Service hiring, and plans to use college grades and job-related skills tests instead, according to a published report today.

Constance Horner, director of the Office of Personnel Management, told The Washington Post the old system has been "intellectually confusing, procedurally nightmarish, inaccessible to students and very difficult to explain."

The Post said OPM would announce today it will drop the written examination requirement and allow college graduates with grades between 3.0 and 3.25 on a 4.0 scale to be hired on the spot by government agency recruiters.

Others could be hired after passing an Individual Achievement Record skills test which OPM said measures "the full range of relevant personal qualities required for successful job performance."

"We want the strongest possible civil service and we're going to get it under this plan," Horner said.

She said current testing procedures are "so slow and cumbersome" that many of the best candidates for jobs go elsewhere.

Horner said she hoped the details of the plan could be worked out so the government could begin using the new hiring system by next April.

But Robert M. Tobias, president of the National Treasury Employees Union, told the Post he had "a lot of concern about Horner's proposal."

"Hiring on the basis of GPAs is contrary to congressional intent that hiring be done through a competitive exam that is nationwide in scope," he said.

Hello, I'm Diana Dansey. My Husband, Bill, is running for the State Senate and I'd like to share his background with you.

A well-known, self-made businessman, Bill Dansey, moved to North Carolina after completing military service as a Sergeant in the U.S. Army in 1958. Working his way through college, entering in 1959 and finishing college in 3½ years, he graduated from East Carolina University School of Business with a degree in Accounting.

During the years of high school and college, he worked in a variety of jobs, from running a beater in a paper mill, working in a sheetmetal shop as a night watchman, a carpenter's helper, a service station manager, a grocery store bag boy and a checkout clerk, as well as measuring crop allotments for the ASCS.

While he was a senior in college, he built his first construction project, a duplex in Greenville, which he still owns. Several years after finishing college, he started his own construction company, which evolved into the highly successful, present day WEDCO ENTERPRISES, INC. WEDCO has been involved in the development and management of multi-family housing in Greenville, Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Kinston and Wilson. Bill also owned a fully working farm with a 60 acre tobacco allotment.

Although busy developing his business, Bill Dansey also found time to involve himself in community affairs. Through this involvement for the past 30 years he has developed a keen understanding of the problems we face in eastern North Carolina. He is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

GOVERNMENT: Bill Dansey has served as a member of the Greenville City Council and knows the problems faced by city governments. While on the council, he was instrumental in obtaining a federal grant to clean up the Meadowbrook area in Greenville and establish it as a public housing area. He also was instrumental in getting Greenville's West End Recreational Facility leased and funded.

Bill has served on the White House staff as a political consultant and advance staffer for three different presidents.

CIVIC ACTIVITIES: Active in community affairs, Bill has served as President of the Tarheel Little League and President and Chairman of the Pitt County United Way. Interested in helping disadvantaged youth, he helped found the Gladiator Boxing Club in Greenville a number of years ago while he was a member of the Greenville Recreation Commission. He was the recipient of the 1972 Distinguished Service Award from the Greenville Jaycees for outstanding civic contributions. He also has been a recipient of the North Carolina Jaycees Freedom Guard Award for outstanding achievements in the area of community, religious and governmental activities.

EDUCATION: Shortly after graduating from college, Bill taught accounting courses at Pitt Community College. He is also a member of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees. As a former teacher, university trustee and the father of a teenage son and daughter, Bill understands, more than many, the problems we are experiencing in our educational system.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT: Bill did not inherit his business, but developed it from the ground up through his own efforts. He knows the importance of getting a dollar's value with the use of sound business practices when spending our tax dollars.

Diana, Bill and Zack and Courtney and Trey

Having worked in a variety of positions, such as a carpenter's helper and service station manager, he knows and understands the problems of the average worker. Having worked with the ASCS and managing a tobacco farm, he also knows and understands the problems of our farmers.

Bill Dansey knows the importance of developing more business and employment opportunities in eastern North Carolina. From his own experience, he knows the value of education and the need to find solutions to our social and economic problems, which will bring more job opportunities to eastern North Carolina.

FLAGS OF WELCOME — School children wave Japanese and American flags as they greet Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and his wife Naoko as they arrived in Chicago Wednesday. Takeshita visited the United States after leaving the economic summit held earlier this week in Canada. (AP Laserphoto)

Minister Says Japan Will Take Active Global Role

CHICAGO (AP) — Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita says his country is determined to play a more active global leadership role equal with its economic superpower status.

In his first visit to America's industrial heartland Wednesday, Takeshita also defended his country's burgeoning investments in the United States, saying they have created jobs.

Acknowledging that some Americans view Japan's investments in the United States as a threat, Takeshita said they have created more than 200,000 jobs and would help improve the U.S. trade balance.

Takeshita visited Chicago one day after the close of the economic summit of the leaders of seven major industrialized countries in Toronto, Canada.

The prime minister said he hoped his visit to "the hub of America's heartland" would contribute "to broader and deeper Japan-U.S. relations."

Speaking at a dinner hosted by the Japan-America Society of Chicago, Takeshita quipped that he hoped a fireworks display scheduled afterward over Lake Michigan would "shake the sky above and help bring ... some rain" to the drought-stricken region.

Takeshita echoed the same themes he sounded at the summit, at which Japan offered a plan for Third World debt relief and signaled its willingness to accept the international leadership role that goes with its economic power.

Takeshita, who became prime minister in November, said, "Playing an active role commensurate with our national strength responds both to Japan's interests and to the expectations of the peoples of the world."

"I have therefore set, as the highest goal of my administration, the building of a Japan contributing more to the world," he told about 1,000 dinner guests at the Fairmont Hotel, including Gov. James R. Thompson, Chicago Mayor Eugene Sawyer and Cardinal Joseph Bernardin.

Takeshita outlined what he called Japan's "International Cooperation Initiative," under which Japan would increase cultural exchanges, take part in peace-keeping actions and offer debt-relief to developing countries.

Takeshita said Japan's official development assistance, announced at the Toronto summit, would total $50 billion for fiscal years 1988-92, more than double the sum for the previous five years.

By next year, he predicted that Japan would surpass the United States as the world's largest development assistance donor.

The Japanese government has recently drawn up a new five-year economic plan that "is in harmony with the world economy" by boosting domestic demand and opening up the Japanese market to imports, Takeshita said.

He said the agreement announced this week to liberalize Japanese imports of beef and citrus fruit should lead to a further expansion of agricultural trade between the United States and Japan, the world's biggest purchaser of U.S. farm products.

Takeshita also said Americans had no reason to be pessimistic about their country's future.

"No country can replace the United States in its central role as the leader of the West," said Takeshita, whose speech in Japanese was simultaneously translated into English through headphones.

"A strong America is essential for Japan's future."

Five Fishermen Spend 144 Days Adrift On Open Sea

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The song of the sea is still music to the ears of five fishermen now home to family and friends after 144 days adrift in the Pacific Ocean on a disabled boat.

"We're sea dogs. The sea calls to us," said one, 27-year-old Joel Omar Gonzalez. "The sea is the source of life for us and our families."

The five, headed by skipper Gerardo Obregon, 33, received a hero's welcome Wednesday from dozens of people including first lady Margarita de Arias when they flew in from Honolulu by way of Los Angeles.

Relatives, friends, neighbors and fellow "pescadores" flocked in from Puntarenas, their home port 95 miles away, to welcome them at San Jose's Santamaria Airport.

The engine of their 33-foot fishing vessel, the Cairo III, was knocked out beyond repair during a storm Jan. 24, five days after they sailed out of Puntarenas, leaving them adrift in the Pacific.

What was to have been an eight-day fishing trip turned into a nearly five-month quest for survival. Gonzalez, his eyes moist as he hugged his wife, Edith, told reporters ships passed them twice but did not see them.

A Japanese tuna boat finally ran into them about 700 miles southeast of Hawaii on June 15 and took them to Honolulu, where doctors found them all in good health.

All in all, it was a 3,600-mile journey.

The five said they survived by catching turtles and sharks, collecting rainwater and cooking them on wood fires they made by tearing pieces of wood from the boat. They said the pain was in the loneliness and not knowing when help would come.

"We spent months and months without seeing anyone, but we never lost our faith in God. We knew he was with us and he finally sent us this Japanese vessel," said crewman Jorge Hernandez Castillo, 22.

Obregon, Gonzalez, Hernandez and their two mates — Juan Cernas Bolivar, 47, and Pastor Lopez Rojas, 30 — attended Mass at a Roman Catholic church and gave thanks for their deliverance.

"Imagine! Our little boat in the middle of the ocean, directionless. The hot sun of the daytime, the darkness of the night, the stars and the cold. They were truly terrible days," Obregon said.

Once they had to go without water for four days because it didn't rain and, Gonzalez said, "There was a moment when we were drinking the blood of a turtle and I looked at Pastor and he was foaming at the mouth."

Electrical Blackout Darkens Israel, Occupied Territories

JERUSALEM (AP) — Fires that appeared set by Arab arsonists lit up the night in rural areas and a widespread power outage darkened Israeli cities and the occupied territories this morning, officials said.

The blackout left major Israeli cities and the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank without power for three hours. Authorities were investigating the outage but had ruled out sabotage.

In mostly Arab east Jerusalem, Palestinian high school students today stoned two Israeli buses, slightly injuring several passengers and smashing one front windshield, Israel radio reported. The radio said Arab schoolgirls also stoned Israeli vehicles on the area's main shopping thoroughfare.

The radio did not specify how many bus passengers were hurt and the police spokesman was not in his office.

Also today, the army said Israeli troops arrested a knife-wielding Palestinian shepherd who allegedly tried to stab an Israeli in the same West Bank area where an Israeli was bludgeoned to death Monday.

An army helicopter chased the shepherd Wednesday after he tried to stab an Israeli official who told him to leave a restricted military zone near the communal farming settlement of Shekef, the army said.

On Wednesday, a Palestinian was killed and two wounded in violence, bringing to 211 the number of Arab fatalities in the 6½-month uprising against Israel's occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Four Israelis also have died.

Leaders of the uprising issued one of their most militant directives Wednesday, urging Arabs to form paramilitary "strike forces," to destroy Israeli property and attack Palestinians who collaborate with the Israelis.

The authors of leaflet No. 20 called for two general strikes, including one on Tuesday, the 21st anniversary of the annexation of Arab east Jerusalem after its capture by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war.

At about 11:15 a.m. (4:15 a.m. EDT) power suddenly went out in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, the West Bank cities of Nablus and Bethlehem, and the Gaza Strip.

"We don't know what happened, but we're checking it," police spokesman Rafi Levi told The Associated Press on an emergency telephone line during the outage.

A spokesman for the Israel Electrical Corp., Avri Ravid, told Israel radio that sabotage was ruled out. Ravid said officials were still investigating the cause.

Palestinian leaders had designated Wednesday "Arson Day," directing Arabs to set fire to Israeli farmland, forests and factories to protest the 21-year-old Israeli occupation.

Israeli officials, who mobilized thousands of firefighters and volunteers to meet the threat, said about 15 blazes were reported Wednesday but the figures were still being compiled.

At least 10 were blamed on arson. Overnight fires broke out in Tel Aviv and nearby Petah Tikva.

In Tel Aviv, a blaze gutted a knitwear factory on the top floor of a three-story building, said fire department spokesman Eitan Cohen.

He said the blaze was under investigation but the daily Haaretz quoted police as saying it was arson.

Israel army radio said another fire broke out at a factory that produces cooking oil in Petah Tikva. It said police were investigating the cause.

So far this year, about 35,000 acres of forests and fields have been wiped out by fire, about 10 times last year's total.

Airlift Anniversary Ceremonies Planned

BERLIN (AP) — Today marks the 40th anniversary of the Berlin Airlift, a massive Anglo-American mission to feed and clothe millions of Berliners sealed off from the rest of the world by Russian troops.

To commemorate the project, a vintage U.S. transport plane is taking to the skies to re-enact the airlift, flying from Frankfurt to Berlin.

It's a short flight between the two cities but for the 2 million Berliners blockaded by the Soviets at the end of World War II, the 250-mile jaunt meant the difference between life and death.

During the airlift's year and three months, U.S. and British cargo planes ferried more than 1.8 million tons of food, coal and other vital supplies to the western sectors of Berlin.

High-level U.S., British, French and West German officials are participating in festivities marking the anniversary.

This morning, ambassadors from Britain, France and the United States were slated to officially open an airlift exhibit in Bonn. They were then to fly to and give speeches at the U.S. Rhine Main Air Base near Frankfurt.

The ambassadors were then to board an original C-47 airplane to re-enact an airlift flight to West Berlin's Tempelhof airport. Most of the Berlin Airlift flights originated at Rhine Main.

The Berlin Airlift began June 26, 1948 and ended Sept. 30, 1949. It was masterminded by U.S. Army Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the military governor of the American zone of conquered Germany following World War II.

Bitter disputes between the Kremlin and the three other victorious World War II Allies led to the Soviets move to cut Berlin off from the West.

Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin was staunchly against creation of a unified German state in the three Western occupation zones, and when the Western allies backed a currency reform to speed up economic recovery of war-torn Germany, Moscow imposed the blockade.

Just four days after the money reform on June 20, the Soviets blocked all roads, waterways and railway lines leading to West Berlin — 110 miles deep in Soviet-occupied territory.

In response, Clay ordered all cargo planes available to deliver provisions to keep the hope for democracy in West Berlin alive.

More than 277,000 flights were conducted during the airlift, costing $200 million.

Viets May End Cambodian Seige

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Newly elected Prime Minister Do Muoi said today that Hanoi is trying to end its international isolation by seeking to end its 9-year-old military occupation of Cambodia.

The official Voice of Vietnam radio quoted Do Muoi as saying Vietnam may withdraw all of its troops from Cambodia before 1990.

According to the broadcast, Do Muoi said that "to widen cooperation, first of all, it is necessary to maintain peace and security. Vietnam is striving to solve the Cambodian issue."

Do Muoi, 71, was elected on Wednesday.

Many non-communist Western and Asian countries have denied economic aid to Vietnam and otherwise isolated the communist nation to protest its late 1978 invasion and continuing occupation of Cambodia.

Vietnam has said it will remove all its estimated 120,000 troops by 1990, and plans a pullout of about 50,000 troops this year. Today's announcement was the first time a Vietnamese leader said the withdrawal could be completed before that date.

Economy Growing

 "there is no sign of an upsurge in inflation."
 Sprinkel said the economic growth rate would slow somewhat over the last nine months of the year from its first-quarter pace.
 He said growth projections for 1989 and beyond were being revised downward slightly to offset the upward revision for 1988 and the stronger-than-expected growth experienced during 1987.
 For 1989, the administration expects the economy to grow 3.1 percent.
 Economic growth is measured two ways, on an annual basis and on a fourth quarter to fourth quarter basis.
 The 3.5 percent 1988 growth forecast is for year-to-year change.
 Using the fourth quarter-to-fourth quarter comparison, the administration predicted the economy will grow at a 3 percent rate, compared with the earlier estimate of 2.4 percent.

 In revising the figures, Sprinkel noted that the economy had expanded faster than expected in the first three months of the year, 3.6 percent.
 "We do expect slower growth over the remainder of the year," he said.
 The inflation estimate, as measured by the consumer price index, is still 4.3 percent, the same as originally predicted on a fourth quarter-to-fourth quarter basis, Sprinkel said.
 The estimate for interest rates was revised upward about a half percent.
 As measured by rates for 91-day Treasury bills, inflation was estimated at 6 percent, compared with a 5.3 percent rate forecast earlier. Measured on the basis of rates for 10-year Treasury securities, the rate was forecast at 8.5 percent, compared with 8 percent predicted earlier.
 "For those of you who are always trying to figure out what we are thinking, it means we envision some decline in interest rates later this year, as the economy's growth rate slows from the rapid first quarter rate and inflation continues to abate," Sprinkel said.
 The forecast unemployment rate was slightly lower than originally estimated, 5.5 percent for the year now as compared with an earlier projection of 5.8 percent.

Resignation

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Harold Nixon, vice chancellor for student development at Fayetteville State University, has resigned to take a similar position at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, a school official said Wednesday.
 Nixon has been with FSU since 1969 when he joined the university as director of financial aid.

Senate Rejects Bill

 returns. The checkoff would let people donate some or all of their refunds if they wished.
 The fund would match dollar-for-dollar the amount raised by candidates who limit their spending to amounts set by a formula in the bill.
 No candidate would be required to limit his spending, but only those who keep under the ceilings would be eligible for matching funds.
 Sen. Austin Allran, R-Catawba, who charged Tuesday that the bill actually would enable some legislative candidates to increase their spending, offered an amendment that would have reduced the spending limit for a General Assembly candidate.
 Under the bill, participating state House and Senate candidates could raise $1 for every vote received by the highest vote-getter in his district in the previous election. Allran's amendment would have allowed spending $1 per vote for the first 10,000 votes; 50 cents per vote for the next 10,000; and 25 cents per vote for all additional votes.
 Allran acknowledged that while his amendment would reduce spending in legislative races, it would enable some candidates to spend more money than others, depending on the population of their districts.

 Bill supporters say campaigning in some districts — primarily urban ones — is more difficult than in others. But Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said that was no reason to shortchange anyone.
 "Why should we pay one man $28,000 for his campaign ... and he may not have any substantial opposition, while another man who may have an absolute dogfight on his hands gets $11,000," Rand said.
 Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said it probably would take $5 million to $10 million to provide all the matching grants needed in a given year. Based on the amounts taxpayers currently donate to charitable causes through the checkoff, he said, the fund probably won't produce more than $300,000 per year.
 "I don't think we ought to fool the public by passing a bill that is unworkable," he said. "I don't think this funding source will possibly come up with the money."
 Rauch said the bill included a recommendation that the 1991 Legislature abolish the program before it takes effect if the checkoff has failed to generate enough money.

Old Fire Station's Fate Debated

 Recently the city has hinted at the possibility of leasing the Gardner Fire Station to a local organization to have it renovated and used as a community center. The local chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America, for example, has expressed interest in taking over the upkeep and responsibility for the building.
 But members of TENA say a community center would disrupt the peaceful environment of the neighborhood, an environment guaranteed they say, by the R-9 (residential) zoning of the area.
 "We are both trying to maintain the integrity of Peppermint Park and also retain the basic intent of R-9 zoning which is for single and family dwellings in a quiet, residential neighborhood," said TENA President Renee Willis.
 She said should community groups be allowed to gather there, the diminutive size of the building and the limited availability of on-site parking would likely disturb the tranquility of the Elmhurst neighborhood.

Displayed at the meeting for members of the council to witness were photographs taken Wednesday morning of the dilapidated structure — photos taken before firefighters were instructed to clean up the station Wednesday afternoon.
 "Someone came over and took the pictures this morning when they came over and started cleaning up," said Jenna Grubbs, a neighborhood resident. "They saw everybody out here real busy and they said 'Oh, they're cleaning this up, and nobody is going to see what it really looks like' so they came over and took pictures real quick," she said.
 Pictures taken and displayed as the council members arrived revealed broken windows, unkempt shrubbery and landscape, and trash scattered in and outside the facility.
 On Monday, TENA officials sent a letter to the mayor recommending an ad hoc committee be formed to formulate answers to various questions such as what options are available for the building, what the cost might be to remove the firehouse, what the city's current liability is, and what the city currently spends on the building's maintenance.

 Ms. Willis suggested such a committee should include representatives from TENA, the city's planning and zoning department, engineering, building inspections, and the city attorney.
 Following a tour of the structure and a reiteration of concerns from representatives of TENA, the council agreed to discuss the formation of an ad hoc committee regarding the matter at its next City Council workshop session.
 "I think what they're asking is not that unreasonable," commented Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn. "We've known they've had concerns for quite awhile and we haven't really responded here today. An ad hoc committee is not that unreasonable to go ahead and give a commitment to establish one."

Cancer

 xeroderma pigmentosum, a rare disorder in which the body is unable to repair genetic damage caused by sunlight.
 In the two years before taking Accutane, the patients studied had a total of 121 cancerous tumors. While on the drug, they had 25. When the drug was stopped, they had nearly a nine-fold increase in the frequency of tumors.
 However, two people had to drop out of the study because of side effects. One had high levels of blood fats, while the other showed signs of liver abnormalities.
 Kraemer said that high doses of Accutane may be warranted for some people who have frequent skin cancers because of their lifelong exposure to the sun, "but for the general population, it's much too toxic."
 More than 2,000 similar vitamin A compounds already exist, and some of them may be safe and effective enough to protect ordinary people from skin cancers, scientists say.

100 Feared Buried By Landslides

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Huge landslides struck stores, a school, a crowded coffee shop and a highway jammed with cars in eastern Turkey today, possibly burying 100 people, the semi-official Anatolia News agency reported.
 Two deaths were confirmed. The agency said at least 18 people were injured in the disaster in a mountainous area of Macka township, about 350 miles northeast of Ankara and not far from the Black Sea.
 "I saw the mountain coming over me and started running away," the news agency quoted a witness, Zeki Ilhan, as saying.

 Landslides struck three houses, four stores, a restaurant and a high school, according to news agency reports. The school was in recess but at least 30 bus passengers packed the coffee house, the reports added.
 Deputy Gov. Haydar Ozgun of Trabzon province told The Associated Press by telephone that rescue teams had recovered two bodies under the wreckage but they feared the death toll would climb since so many people were missing.

The state radio reported that rescue teams reached the site about four hours after the incident and were moving slowly to search for victims because of threats of more landslides.
 The dispatch said 40 trucks and 20 bulldozers were trying to drive away the mud and stone which covered the site.
 Anatolia said the landslides struck along a stretch of road where several cars were waiting in line since just after midnight, when an earlier landslide blocked the highway.

The bus passengers had been waiting in the coffee house after the highway was closed, the reports added. Schools were in recess.
 Provincial Gov. Enver Hizlan was quoted as saying the army would be called in to help. The ministers of transportation, interior, public works and energy ministers, flew to Trabzon from Ankara.
 Some landslides that have occurred in the area have been blamed on extensive deforestation.

Soviets Tried To Infiltrate Contractor

OTTAWA (AP) — A Soviet spy ring exposed by Canadian authorities tried to infiltrate a U.S.-owned military contractor that has access to highly classified American naval technology, news reports said.
 The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. reported late Wednesday that the ring was after sophisticated warship electronics slated for a new generation of Canadian naval frigates. It said the sonar, radar and communications equipment is made by Paramax Electronics of Montreal, a subsidiary of Unisys Corp. of Detroit.
 The New York Times today quoted unidentified Canadian officials as saying Paramax had access to classified technology including equipment that controls weapons systems aboard U.S. Navy ships.
 The Canadian Security Intelligence Service, which monitored the activities of the eight Soviet diplomats and officials expelled last week and nine others barred from re-entering Canada, would not confirm the link with Paramax.
 But spokesman Jerry Cummings told The Associated Press today: "It wasn't one single operation — some of these operations have been over four or five years."
 At Paramax offices in Montreal, the company said no one was available to comment on the incident.
 Foreign Minister Joe Clark told Parliament Wednesday that Canadian authorities had prevented any severe security breach.
 The Soviet government expelled two Canadian diplomats in retaliation Wednesday and said three others currently out of the country would not be allowed back.
 Spokesman Viatcheslav Bogdanov of the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa termed the expulsions from Canada "a provocation."
 "These people were not doing anything wrong," he said.

Second Black Man Beaten In Attacks By White Gangs

NEW YORK (AP) — A black man riding his bicycle was assaulted early today by four white men who screamed racial slurs as they beat him with sticks and fists in the second such racial incident in two days.
 On Wednesday, a black man was chased by six white men shouting racial slurs and beaten with a baseball bat in Staten Island.
 The bicyclist, Gregory Frederique, 25, was treated for cuts and bruises at a hospital. One of his alleged assailants was later arrested.
 Frederique was riding his bike at 2:30 a.m. in Queens when he saw a white woman arguing with a white man, said police spokesman Detective Joseph McConville.
 The white man left, and Frederique approached the woman to offer his assistance, when four white men began shouting racial slurs at him and threw a bottle at him from across the street, the detective said.
 The gang chased him and began beating him with sticks and their fists. Frederique sought refuge at a gas station where the attendant called police.
 The victim in Wednesday's incident said the attack reminded him of the Howard Beach racial assault that left a black dead.
 "It's the same incident, racial," Raymond Buckner said. "I was min-ding my own business. I just get jumped for no reason."

 After the attack, Buckner found refuge in a pizzeria owned by two white men who came to his defense and were themselves harassed and assaulted by the gang.
 "I feel weird about that," said Buckner, adding that the attack had left him bitter toward whites. "I get jumped by six white guys, then helped by two white guys."
 Three of the whites were arrested shortly after the attack and three others surrendered Wednesday night.
 Buckner, 24, was treated at a hospital for cuts and bruises to his right arm and released.
 "Howard Beach was the first thing I thought of," said Jeff LaMartina, one of the pizzeria owners. "It wasn't right. This guy was doing nothing wrong."
 In that highly publicized case, a dozen white youths attacked a group of three blacks outside a pizzeria in the Howard Beach section of Queens in December 1986. One of the black men died when he was hit by a car while trying to escape. Three white teen-agers were convicted of manslaughter last December.
 Buckner was walking home from his job as a cook at a Burger King restaurant in the mostly white Staten Island neighborhood at 12:20 a.m.

when he noticed a car carrying white men.
 The car slowed, and the whites began harassing him. "They were calling me racial names — nigger, blackie," Buckner said.
 The men left their car and began beating Buckner on the right arm with sticks and a baseball bat and chasing him, he said.
 Buckner ran into the Cafe DiSicilia.
 "He was nervous, his arm was messed up, he said he just got jumped by a carload of white guys," LaMartina said.

Color Highlights Men's Fall Fashions

By SUJATA BANERJEE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

RYE, N.Y. — This is the fall to be an English gentleman or a new wave Lothario — or both, if you want. Tradition met minimalism, and color flirted on neutral territory here last week as menswear designers presented their fall collections. What the press saw were plenty of options with an overwhelming elegant feeling and a sensitivity to men's desires.

For instance, business suits and sport coats are on the surface traditional — in tans, grays and navys, with the addition of vicuna, a rich, toffee-colored brown. Trousers are cut slightly fuller from the thigh down, sometimes tapering in at the ankle. Vests, both knitted and in woven checked patterns, peek out from opened jackets. White shirts are glaringly proper.

But the whole caboodle gets a new-old feeling with a return to three-button jackets, creating a fitted, more stylish look reminiscent of 1930s gentlemen. Cecilia Metheny takes the look to its extreme, with elasticized backs on her herringbone sport coats. Ronaldus Shamask goes romantic with shawl-collared jackets. George Machado for Zylus is inspired by the film adaption of E.M. Forster's "Maurice," naming double-breasted blazers after the lovelorn Maurice and Clive.

"History is important because menswear by its nature is tradition driven," says Leon Max, who shows four-button suits that give him the feeling of coming out of an impressionist painting, and collarless black velvet evening jackets worn with contrasting black faille pants and "baroque" white embroidered shirts and "poetic" floppy bow ties.

While young designers are dipping into history, traditional menswear lines are updating to match their pace. Dave Bisset, designer for Pendleton, says his fall menswear has followed European guidelines of stronger shoulders and more nipped-in waists, and is using wool patterned in herringbones and tweeds for the first time. Jefferson Reeves, president of Ruff Hewn, says that while the updated traditional line only shows two-button jackets, pants are getting wider legged and turning up for the weekend in pre-washed twill.

The new wave influence in fashion, born in music videos and night clubs, is drumming its presence into the mainstream. Henry Gretiel designs jackets with ventless backs and low-falling front closures. Machado for Zylus crafts cotton cardigans in properly night-clubbish dark hues, highlighted with white piping on the front pockets and cuffs. Ford Beckman whimsically tops a purple

T-shirt with a maroon paisley ascot, worn with yellow argyle socks and brown loafers. Ford's "rep" ties have three giant, fluorescent bands of color, worn against a thick-striped burgundy and navy striped shirt with black bird's-eye wool pants and white footwear. While Ford's wild tie is an exaggeration, ties in general are widening and moving beyond foulards and small paisleys to blown-up Jacquard designs.

As ties move from burgundy, blue and pale yellow to teal, pink and hot reds, the issue of color comes up, as divisive in men's fashion as it is in women's. While hues for suits and separates are overwhelmingly dark, splashes of teal, red and purple are present in plaids and checks on suits, stripes in shirts, and in sweater designs. One of color's most audacious devotees is Kermit Smith for Krunch, who likes pairing gera-num-colored wool blazers with burgundy pants.

"Men are getting more daring with color," says Smith, who adds that change takes time. His bold colors didn't sell well during the holiday season, which he attributes to a tough economic climate.

"How many people will spend $600 on a geranium cashmere sweater?" Smith asks rhetorically, who counts on retailers to buy his tamer colorations.

Beckman, who likes strong shades of berry, plum and green, says adjusting to color is an educational process men have already gone through, thanks in part to the bold use of color by designers before him such as Ralph Lauren.

"I grew up with Weejuns and white button-down shirts, and now there's a whole more sophisticated feel...traditional clothing is dying," says Beckman.

Other designers stand by the neutrals, among them Jeff Sayre, an American who designs in Ireland; Leon Max, who finds a darker palette more sophisticated; and Tony Lambert, who does infinite variations on black, gray and brown.

Lambert says that color never has, and probably won't take off with men. Colorful clothing displays in menswear departments, he says, are designed to lure women customers into buying the clothes for men. Lambert says that because more women work today and don't have time to shop for men, colorful clothes just sit on the racks.

"The most exciting thing is the beginning of men going out to shop for themselves," says Lambert. "Men are finally wearing things that are their taste. We've found white, tans and grays have sold phenomenally."

Ronaldus Shamask injects colors — such as a red, mustard or wine jacket or vest — into the scheme.

"You work in contrast, such as putting a black with khaki. A Harris tweed is classical, then you mix it with khaki pants," says Shamask. "The reaction to color has been fantastic."

The idea of mixing goes even further, with designers such as Metheny and Lowell Barry for Pianta matching glen plaid jackets with houndstooth pants, striped shirts and patterned ties. Is this a look for every man?

Max doesn't think so. "If someone is going to use sartorial trends to express individuality, he better know what he is doing. If he doesn't, he'd be better off retreating into the safe uniform accepted by society," the designer says.

And Max unabashedly revels in most men's disinterest in fashion.

"I like the idea of people dressed poorly en masse," says Max. "It sets the well-dressed people apart." Distributed by the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Outdoor Wedding Performed In June

BATH — Marcia Dale Edwards and Shawn Hilary Vadnais, both of Greenville, were united in marriage in an outdoor ceremony June 11 at 5 p.m. held at the home of the mother of the bride.

James R. Edwards of Washington, N.C., and Judith H. Edwards of Bath are parents of the bride. Edmond C. Vadnais of West Warwick, R.I., and Frances E. Vadnais of Plainfield, Conn., are parents of the bridegroom.

Dr. Ray Silverthorne conducted the ceremony. Lois Tetterton was pianist and a poem was read by Vicki Vadnais, sister of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of unbleached muslin and alpine lace. It was styled with a bustle, melon sleeves, basque silhouette, off-shoulder neckline and sweep train. She wore a straw picture hat with netting and carried a colonial bouquet of dried flowers tied with streamers.

Attendants were DeAnne Dotson of Garner, Pat Britton and Lisa Gustincic, both of Raleigh.

Alexander Vadnais of Plainfield, Conn., was best man for his brother. Ushers were James Edwards of Bath, brother of the bride, and Joseph Armstrong of Raleigh.

Darlene Woolard was mistress of ceremony and Judy Edwards directed the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of The North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics and is in nursing school at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Plainfield High School and is serving in the U.S. Marine Corps stationed at Cherry Point.

The couple is living in Greenville after a wedding trip to St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands.

A reception was held after the ceremony. Mary Anne Edwards was in charge of the reception. Wendy Chaney and Jennifer Roy, cousins of the bride, served cake. Beverly Cratch, cousin of the bride, and Vicki Vadnais, sister of the bridegroom, poured punch.

An after-rehearsal luncheon was held in the fellowship hall of the Bath Christian Church by friends of the bride's mother.

Several showers were given for the bridal couple prior to the wedding.

Mom Runs Hot, Cold On Son's Perfect Partner

Our child returned home last week with good news. He had finally found the perfect partner with whom he wants to spend the rest of his life.

We were startled at first. It seemed so sudden.

"Not really," he said. "I've been looking for a long time."

"Where is she?" we asked.

"In the driveway."

We rushed out to see the future mother of our grandchildren. The object of his passion was a 1984 two-seater sports car, with a sticker still in the window that read $16,000.

"She's too good for you," I said flatly.

"I got it all figured out," he smiled. "I'll work two jobs and have two paychecks coming in. She's expensive, Mom, but she's worth it."

I pulled him aside out of earshot of the car, and out of my lips came the four words that mothers have been uttering for centuries: "But are you sure?"

"I've never been more sure of anything in my entire life. You get sick of one-nighters that break down and repair bills that leave you empty in the morning. You get to a point in your life where you want permanence. You want someone to be there for you when you turn the key in the morning. You know what I mean? You and Dad have had that for a long time," he said, gesturing to our pair of cars parked in the garage.

"But what do you know about her?"

"She's only lived with two other guys, and they traded up."

"I was always hoping you'd find someone..."

"New?" he interrupted. "I knew you'd say that. I look at it this way: We have no great expectations about one another. I've owned other cars too. We're both going in with our eyes open. There are no illusions. We've both had time to get the bugs worked out."

At Wits End Erma Bombeck

"I suppose there is nothing we can say to change your mind. It's not that we don't want you to settle down with this car; we're just asking you to wait a while."

"I won't feel any different in a year than I feel now," he said.

As our son got into the car and sped away, my husband put his arm around my shoulder. "I know you're disappointed, but it's his life. He has to find his own way and make his own mistakes. That's what we taught him to do. Frankly, I think the payments will outlast her, but that's his problem. If I were younger, I'd probably do the same thing."

It won't work. She's too short for him, but who listens to a mother!

Remodel To Give Fur New Life

DALLAS (AP) — Don't discard that favorite fur simply because its styling is dated. Instead, give it a facelift by restyling it into a fashionable silhouette, advises a fur expert.

"With proper care, a good fur can be enjoyed for 25 to 30 years," says Sam Szor, owner of Dallas-based furrier Szor-Diener. "Restyling allows a woman to get the most from her fur investment by providing a fresh, contemporary look."

Mink, the king of furs for durability, is the most suitable for restyling, he says. Other furs that work well are muskrat, nutria, beaver, sable and broadtail (lamb).

"Restyling can turn Grandma's mink stole or cape into a chevron-patterned jacket, a reversible jacket with mink on one side and Ultrasuede on the other, or a versatile, contemporary vest with detachable knit, Ultrasuede or leather sleeves," Szor says.

A classic mink stroller with stove-pipe sleeves or a narrow, fitted-bodice princess coat can become an ample-sleeved, full-bodied fluid garment perfect for today's fashions, he points out.

And a dowdy, 40-inch-long mink coat can be restyled into a modern hip-length jacket detailed with mink or fox collar.

"Not only can coats be made shorter, they can also be lengthened without adding a hemline border by blending matching pelts throughout the garment," he says.

In addition to styling changes, furs may be dyed to darker shades for a fresh look, he adds. This technique is especially good for lighter furs such as azure and white, which tend to yellow with age.

The first step in the restyling process is analyzing the condition of the fur, Szor explains. Signs such as shedding, regular open seams and leather that tears as easily as tissue point to a dry fur that cannot be restyled.

Next, the new style is determined. The only limits here are imagination and the designer's ability.

The restyling process begins by cleaning and disassembling the garment. Worn areas are cleaned and, if the color will change, each skin is individually dyed.

Next, the fur is meticulously recut and resealed, adding pelts if needed. For best results, comparably aged skins are used.

If the new garment will have knit sleeves, hood or collar, yarn and a pattern are selected specifically for the garment. In fact, the artisans can hand-knit these pieces in custom-designed patterns so no two garments are alike.

Askew-Spain Vows Exchanged

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The First Baptist Church of Washington was the setting for the wedding of Glenda Dale Spain and Michael Keith Askew Saturday at 2 p.m. The Rev. Keith Tucker officiated at the double-ring ceremony. A program of music was presented by organist Mrs. Blake Lewis and vocalist Mrs. Gray Deans.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Spain of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lonnie Lee Askew of Gatesville, and the late Mr. Askew.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore an ivory formal-length gown of crystal organza, schiffli lace, sequins and seed pearls. The neckline was sweetheart design and the sleeves were layers of organza ruffles forming a melon shape. The bodice was encrusted with pearls and sequins forming floral effects with a scalloped lace waistline and the sheath skirt was enhanced by a wrap around train with layers of organza ruffles and a satin bow. She wore a headband with entwining pearls and floral silk flowers with pearl sprays. The back pouf was sprinkled with pearls. Her two-tiered fingertip veil was accented on each side by appliques beaded by pearls. The bride carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis, ivy, orchids, baby's breath and pearls accented with a candlelight bow and streamers.

Mrs. Allen Weller was honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Meg Stover and Mrs. Charles Grady Spain, sister-in-law of the bride. Each wore an azalea tea-length gown of taffeta. The neckline was scooped and the sleeves were a three-quarter length pouf. A bow accented the back and the basque flowed into an A-line skirt. Each carried a bouquet of pink miniature carnations, white sweetheart roses, white pom poms and baby's breath.

The bridegroom's brother, Paul C. Askew of Greenville, was best man. Ushers were Lonnie Lee Askew Jr. and John K. Askew of Gatesville, brothers of the bridegroom, and Charles G. Spain of Washington, brother of the bride.

The wedding was directed by Barbara S. Hardee and Mrs. William Wiley.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length gown of mint green polished satin with a lace bodice. The mother of the bridegroom selected a tea-length dress of pink Irish linen.

MRS. ASKEW

Both wore wrist corsages of white roses.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Idaho and is a teacher in Washington. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed by Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Thoughtlessness Isn't Sinful, Just Painful

DEAR ABBY: How does a mother handle hurt feelings when a 41-year-old son doesn't remember Mother's Day or her last birthday?

There have been no misunderstandings or hard feelings, as we both live in different states and have for the past several years. I visit the grown children once a year, and he and his family seem happy to see me, but there's very little correspondence during the year except an occasional note, and that is always from his wife.

Maybe I failed him as a mother somewhere along the line? — FEELING HURT

DEAR HURT: You haven't failed him as a mother; he failed you as a son. While thoughtlessness is not a cardinal sin, it can be painful. Perhaps you can nudge him without needing him by sending him this letter.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column about the cremated remains showing up in a regular box reminded me of this story. Nobody (outside our family) will believe this, but it's true: Our father requested cremation, so we followed his wishes. The urn we ordered did not arrive in time for the funeral service, so we brought a lovely container from home. Actually, it was a Chinese rice bowl. (We had service for 12.) We had Father's remains placed in that bowl temporarily until the urn arrived.

After the service, we brought the bowl home and placed it in the cupboard. That very day, we had a new cleaning lady who spoke very little English.

You guessed it: When we went to get the bowl, she had already cleaned the kitchen and thrown the contents in the garbage can! My brother and I ran out to the alley behind our house, but it was too late. The garbage man had already collected our garbage, and hauled "Dad" away. — ASHES TO ASHES IN ATLANTA

DEAR ABBY: I am writing after reading the letter in your column about the woman's aunt's remains arriving by regular mail. It wasn't funny at the time, but I had to chuckle when I recalled the memories of my father's cremation a few years ago.

After his death, my two sisters and I decided to have Dad cremated and bury his remains in the Veterans Cemetery. The funeral director asked if we would like to carry the remains or have them transported (for an additional fee) to the cemetery. We immediately said, "Have them transported!"

We then proceeded to make arrangements for the time and date of the funeral service, which was to take place the following week.

Imagine our surprise when we arrived the day of the service only to discover that the mail was running late, and our "father" had not arrived in that day's mail — and would probably arrive on the following day. We had no choice but to proceed with the funeral service anyway — without the cremains. (Small detail.)

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

My sisters and I just looked at each other and cracked up when one said, "Isn't this just like Dad? He was always late for everything!" — THREE SISTERS IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the cremated remains brought back a funny memory. I had only one sister, whom I loved very much. We shared a lot of laughs.

She was living in Ohio when she died. I was in Missouri. She was to be buried in the family plot in Arkansas after cremation.

The remains were sent to my house by mistake. I was canning tomatoes when the mailman arrived. My 5-year-old granddaughter ran out to the mailbox. She came in and said, "All there is is a box. Can I open it?"

She took it out on the back porch and in a minute she had it opened. She made a face and said, "Grandma, why would anybody send you a whole box of gray sand?"

I grabbed the box and said, "My God, that's Aunt Grace!" I dropped the box and most of the "sand" on the ground! We gathered up as much of the "ashes" as we could and put them in a more sturdy box and sent it to Arkansas. I am sure my sister would have had a good laugh had she witnessed that hilarious scene.

I went out and bought a rose bush and planted it on the spot where the ashes had spilled. It really grew, and to this day, it is known as the Aunt Grace rose. Why must most people take life so seriously?

I am 72 years old. Print this letter if you wish, but, please, omit my name. — GRACE'S SISTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mixed this morning after a strong runup the previous session that pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to its highest level since the October crash.

The widely watched index of 30 industrials was off 0.71 to 2,151.49 by 10 a.m. EDT.

Among broader market indicators, the New York Stock Exchange composite index of all listed issues rose 0.01 to 155.36. The American Stock Exchange market-value index fell 0.05 to 308.54.

Losing issues narrowly outnumbered declines on the NYSE, with 460 down, 417 up and 547 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board totaled 24.07 million shares after the first 30 minutes.

Brokers differed on their short-term outlook for stocks. Some expected prices to weaken from investors selling stocks to capture profits from the market's Wednesday surge. Others said the dollar's strength and eased pressure on interest rates would lure more people into the market and boost prices.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 43.03 points to 2,152.20, its highest level since the crash eight months ago.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about an 11-to-4 ratio in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 1,144 up, 413 down and 420 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 217.51 million shares, up from 155.06 million previously.

Tenor-Actor Dennis Day Dies At 71

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis Day, a golden-voiced Irish balladeer whose career as a foil for comedian Jack Benny spanned decades of radio, television and film, has died after a long battle with Lou Gehrig's disease. He was 71.

Day died at his Bel Air home late Wednesday, surrounded by his 10 children and 13 grandchildren, said his publicist, Kitty Davis.

"Everyone is taking it very hard," she said.

His wife, Peggy Margaret McNulty was admitted to St. John's Hospital and Health Center earlier in the day for cardiac tests and was in stable condition, said nursing supervisor Nancy Gauthier. Doctors have not confirmed whether she suffered a heart attack, Ms. Gauthier said.

The cause of death was not determined, but Day was diagnosed last year as suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a progressive muscular ailment that killed Lou Gehrig.

He had undergone brain surgery in March after suffering a fall, and was readmitted to St. John's on June 5. He was released from the hospital Monday.

"I'm very, very saddened by Dennis' death," said comedian Jerry

DENNIS DAY

Lewis, national chairman of the Muscular Dystrophy Association, which Day supported.

"Dennis Day was a brave, kind, talented man who showed his love by giving. All you had to do was ask."

Day's career spanned decades in radio, television and movies, and he was rated as one of the shrewdest talents in the business.

Born Eugene Denis McNulty to Irish parents in New York City on May 21, 1917, he was graduated from St. Patrick's Cathedral High School and attended Manhattan College with plans to enter Fordham's law school.

His plans changed when Jack Benny was hunting for a singer to replace Kenny Baker. A recording Day had made earned him an audition, and an off-the-cuff wisecrack helped land him the job, according to a studio biography.

With all the applicants gathered in an audition room, Benny called out, "Oh Dennis!" Young McNulty replied, "Yes, please."

"That's it!" Benny whooped.

He assumed the name Dennis Day when he joined Benny's radio show as a singer in 1939, and quickly matured into a comic target for the host. One of Day's trademark lines was a sprightly, "Gee, Mr. Benny!"

With a nationwide audience on radio, Day gained popularity with his renditions of "Danny Boy," "Clancy Lowered the Boom," and other ballads. Another Day favorite, "Peg of my Heart" was a ballad he sang for his wife, said Ms. Davis.

In 1952, Day disclosed that Irish authorities had banned his RCA recording of "The St. Patrick's Day Parade."

"The Irish didn't object to the song or to my singing," Day said, but to shouted exclamations such as "How are ye, Paddy, me boy!" as if he were marching in a parade.

"They said (it) sounded like stage Irish," Day said at the time, with some bemusement.

Day moved to television with Benny's show in 1950, making irregular appearances.

In 1951, Day demonstrated his business acumen by landing a movie contract with 20th-Century Fox. At the time, he was the only Fox contract player with television rights. He also signed a contract with NBC, after allowing weeks of bidding between the network and competitor CBS.

Day became a regular on such TV variety shows as "All Star Revue," "Hour Glass," "The RCA Victor Show," "Max Liebman Presents" and his own "Dennis Day Show."

He also appeared in several films, including "Buck Benny Rides Again," "Music in Manhattan," "One Sunday Afternoon" and "The Girl Next Door."

In their later years, the Days divided their time between their Bel Air home and a second home in Hawaii. He enjoyed horseback riding and sailing.

During a vacation in Hawaii last year, Day became aware of a muscle-control problem and returned to the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, where doctors diagnosed ALS.

Day's publicist said that though he was confined to a wheelchair, he continued to make appearances at Irish fairs and medical benefits.

"Up to the end there, he was still doing benefits. After he found out that he had ALS he said that he wanted to do as much for this research group as possible," Ms. Davis said.

Funeral arrangements were not announced.

Thousands Evacuated

Most of the 2,500 people in six area communities in western Kentucky were evacuated Wednesday night, Armstrong said. Between 40 and 50 people were treated in area hospitals for respiratory and other problems, according to medical officials.

However, many residents began returning home by this morning even though the evacuation order had only been lifted in one of three counties.

White phosphorus spontaneously burns when exposed to air temperatures above 85 or 90 degrees, said Dr. George Rodgers of the Poison Control Center in Louisville. Temperatures in western Kentucky hovered in the 99-degree range on Wednesday and were forecast to reach the upper 90s today, the National Weather Service said.

The cloud, which contains an acid emitted in the phosphorus smoke, can burn human skin and, if inhaled, the nose and lungs, Rodgers said.

Baby Is Recovered

"She (Mrs. Nobles) kept saying this was the baby someone saw me with," said Dan Wozniak, head of the FBI's Greensboro office.

But officers heard another baby crying in the back of the house and found Jason in a closet.

Officers took Jason back to the hospital, where they made a print of his foot and compared it with a print at the hospital, confirming his identity, before returning him to his mother.

Hospital employees celebrated the return of the baby with cheers after an announcement was made over the public address system. The baby was returned to his mother at 1:15 p.m.

By Underdog Javier Frana

Cash Taken To Five Sets

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Javier Frana struck a blow for the underdogs of men's tennis. Sort of.

Frana, a 21-year-old Argentine playing in his first Wimbledon, took defending champion Pat Cash to five sets Wednesday and nearly eliminated the head-banded Australian on the third day of the tournament.

Cash prevailed in the sun to win 6-2, 4-6, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 but it was Frana who received a standing ovation from the Court No. 1 crowd.

"In the end, he took advantage of my lack of experience," Frana said.

Two other underdogs briefly had the thrill of an upset in their grasp.

Australia's Darren Cahill won the first set from top-ranked Ivan Lendl but couldn't handle his opponent's power and went down 5-7, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

And Michael Chang, the youngest male player in 61 years to compete on the Centre Court, had his time, too.

The American, who turned 16 four months ago, gave seventh-seeded Henri Leconte of France a big fright for two sets before losing 2-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-3. Chang missed four set points in the second set.

"I'm not disappointed. It's not hard for me to take this loss," Chang said.

"This year was just an experience year. It's been a great experience."

Cash, Lendl and Leconte all had today to draw a breath while other top contenders took over the spotlight on the show courts.

In second-round play on Centre Court was two-time titlist Jimmy Connors, up against Australia's Jay Stoltenberg. They were being followed by Gabriela Sabatini against Radka Zrubakova, with John McEnroe, safely over the first hurdle in his Wimbledon comeback, up next against Wally Masur.

On Court No. 1, Martina Navratilova continued her quest for a place in history against Japan's Elly Hakami. Navratilova, the defending women's champion, seeks a record ninth singles title at Wimbledon.

Mats Wilander, on the third leg of his bid for the Grand Slam, was due up next against Glenn Michibata of Canada.

All the stars in action today were hoping for fewer problems than other headliners faced on the third day.

Cash was pushed to the brink by Frana, ranked only sixth in his country and 80th in the world.

On the same court and in the same round in which Boris Becker was dethroned last year, the defending champion was twitchy and nervous.

His aggressive game, which reached a pitch 12 months ago, was rarely in evidence as he hit a stream of errors. But Cash would never say he almost lost his crown.

"He played fantastically well for the two middle sets but there was only one way he could go, and that's down," Cash said. "I was not unhappy with my game."

Lendl, who has never won Wimbledon, played like a grass-court novice for a set against Cahill. Then he changed his tactics, staying back and hitting service returns past the Australian.

"Everybody knows this is not my best surface and potentially, he's a very difficult and dangerous opponent," Lendl, runner-up for the last two years, said.

As twilight fell on the All England Club, few spectators left their seats at Centre Court as Chang made his mark on the tournament.

He hit Leconte with passing shots and had the unpredictable Frenchman in deep trouble. But Chang's lack of variety and weak serve were exploited in the last two sets.

"I haven't seen anyone return my serve for two sets like that," Leconte said. "All over the place, winners, backhands, forehands."

Chang was the youngest man to play on Centre Court since 15-year-old American Sidney Wood lost a first-round match to Rene Lacoste in 1927.

Only one seed fell on Wednesday, and he never completed his match. Israel's Amos Mansdorf, the 15th men's seed, was forced to retire with an abdominal strain while trailing 6-3, 3-0 against Diego Nargisico of Italy, a qualifier.

Becker, consigned to an outside court, had no problems in whipping Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-4, 6-4. The 20-year-old West German, the 1985 and 1987 champion, served 17 aces, taking his total to 37 in two matches.

On the adjacent court No. 3, Steffi Graf kept alive the possibility of West German championship double by swamping France's Karine Quentrec 6-2, 6-0.

Quentrec, a lucky loser from the qualifying round, had little good fortune before or during the match. She was late for her own match because of watching another match on a nearby court, then managed only 22 points as Graf, the top seed, blitzed her 6-2, 6-0 in 34 minutes.

"She plays better than the men — boom boom," Quentrec said.

Other seeds advancing to round three were No. 10 Tim Mayotte and No. 12 Jonas Svensson on the men's side, and No. 9 Hana Mandlikova, No. 12 Zina Garrison, No. 14 Katerina Maleeva and No. 15 Sylvia Hanika in the women's draw.

Promoters Just Talk Dollars

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mike Tyson spoke of pain and Michael Spinks of fear as the two fighters appeared together for the final time before Monday night's heavyweight title fight.

Promoters, meanwhile, talked of dollars in a fight that shapes up to be the richest ever.

"This thing is really a monster," said developer Donald Trump, who predicted a record gate of nearly $13 million for the bout.

Tyson and Spinks both appeared relaxed during a two-hour press conference on Wednesday at Trump's Plaza, where they patiently answered the same questions that had been offered hundreds of times since the fight was announced.

At one point, Tyson put his head on the table and feigned sleep as yet another question was asked about his strategy for the fight.

"My objective is to inflict as much pain as possible to get the fight over with," the undisputed heavyweight champion said.

Spinks drew the biggest laugh of the event when asked if he had a secret weapon to fight Tyson.

"Yeah, it's going to be down my trunks," quipped Spinks. "Where can you hide anything in the ring?"

Spinks grew a bit more serious when asked about his motivation for meeting Tyson, a ferocious puncher who has knocked out 30 of 34 opponents in becoming the youngest heavyweight champion ever.

"It feels good to have some terror in my life, something that frightens me," he said. "It's exciting, it's something a lot of people can't do. That motivates me."

Spinks, a 4-1 underdog, vowed not to make Tyson chase him in the scheduled 12-round fight, a tactic many figured would be his only chance against Tyson's power.

"I've never run from anybody," Spinks said. "I won't be running this time."

Tyson allowed as to how that may make the fight more interesting, at least for those watching.

"If he comes to try and win the title, it could be a good fight," said Tyson, who turns 22 a week after the bout. "If you want to win, you have to take chances like I take chances. Otherwise, you're just in there for the ride."

With wife Robin Givens looking on from a nearby booth, Tyson touched briefly on his well-publicized personal problems, including a tiff with his manager and reports he and his bride of four months were on the verge of divorce.

"The majority of what has been written in the press is hilarious, it's funny," Tyson said. "It's a joke."

Tyson said whatever personal problems he has had have evaporated as his training intensified for the fight.

"I'm not involved with what's scandalous or what's happening in my personal life," he said. "I'm just ready to fight."

Tyson, though, grew testy at some questions, including whether Spinks' awkward style would present problems.

"The majority of this is bull," Tyson said. "I just want to fight as soon as possible."

At one point during the press conference, which was beamed by satellite to several cities, Tyson chastised a questioner who wanted to know what made him think he could beat the challenger.

"You're talking like a cheerleader for Spinks," Tyson said.

"Could you elaborate on that?" the questioner asked.

"No," Tyson replied.

Spinks, meanwhile, predicted he may surprise a few people with his power. The former light heavyweight and International Boxing Federation heavyweight champion who has knocked out the last two heavyweights he faced, said his unorthodox style doesn't mean he can't hit.

"If you ask me, I think I've always packed a bit of a punch," he said. "It just doesn't look like it."

Spinks said he won't know until he fights Tyson just what kind of problems he faces.

"I can't say now because I've never stepped in the ring and fought Mike Tyson," he said. "As soon as the fight ends, I'll be ready to tell you."

While the participants discussed the fight, promoters boasted of a surge in closed-circuit and pay-per-view sales that could push the fight to a record gross of some $70 million, above the previous mark of an estimated $60 million for last year's Sugar Ray Leonard-Marvelous Marvin Hagler middleweight title fight.

"This will be the biggest-grossing and biggest-netting fight ever," Shelly Finkel, who handles the broadcast promotion, said.

No Promises From Laker Coach Riley

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Like one of their fast breaks going the length of the court, praise for the Los Angeles Lakers' second straight NBA title stretched from coast to coast.

More than 40,000 people turned out for a parade and rally Wednesday in downtown Los Angeles. Lakers coach Pat Riley praised his team for being unique, but didn't go as far as guaranteeing successive championships, like he did last year.

In Washington, D.C., Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., saluted the Lakers as "the team of the '80s."

"The Lakers had all the right stuff," Levine said in a speech on the House floor.

Levine's district includes the Forum in Inglewood, where the Lakers beat the Detroit Pistons 108-105 in Game 7 of the Finals Tuesday night to become the first team to repeat as champion since the Boston Celtics won titles in 1968 and '69. By beating the Pistons, the Lakers allowed Riley to live up to the promise he had made one year earlier. Moments after the Lakers beat the Celtics for the 1987 NBA title, Riley guaranteed that the Lakers would be the first team in 19 years to win back-to-back titles.

On Wednesday, after the Lakers' parade reached City Hall, Riley jokingly gagged himself and mumbled for a few seconds before addressing approximately 10,000 fans who crammed onto the lawn in front of the building.

"I just want to say a couple of things, and they aren't going to be very profound," Riley said. "This is the fifth parade we've been involved in, and it's far and away the best we've ever seen."

The Lakers have won five NBA titles this decade.

"Another thing, and I really mean this, without your support and your faith — and I felt this in Games 6 and 7 — I don't think we'd be here right now. You did a hell of a job for us," Riley told the crowd, which included some fans who had waited more than six hours to glimpse the team.

"Also, I'd like to say, and I'm pretty biased about it, but there's no doubt in my mind that you're never going to find, see or watch another basketball team play like the one that sits behind me. Ever."

"It hasn't been done for 19 years, and Buck (Magic Johnson) said today, 'Riles, they said it can't be done.'"

"It was done, we finished the year, we won it again."

Riley's 1987 guarantee at first startled his players. Then, after sweeping the San Antonio Spurs in the first round of the playoffs, the Lakers had to survive seven-game series with Utah, Dallas and Detroit to make their coach's prediction come true.

"What a night, what a night last night was," said Lakers forward James Worthy, the championship series Most Valuable Player.

"We set out to accomplish something last June 14 when Riles first made the statement. We thought he was crazy, but if we were going to repeat, why not do it in L.A.?"

"We've got the best team, and God knows we've got the best fans. See you next year," Worthy said.

"It's party time once again," the excited Johnson told the crowd. "How do you like us now? Let's do it again next year."

Former Lakers forward Tommy Hawkins, now vice president of communications for the Los Angeles Dodgers, joined in the celebration.

"It's great, super, especially for the guys who tried so many times in the '60s (to win a title). I played in four or five championship series during the Boston dynasty. We look at ourselves as the pioneers of this dynasty," Hawkins said.

"We celebrate with the same enthusiasm as if we'd have won. I was on the final two Laker teams that lost back-to-back to Boston in '68 and '69. To see that the Lakers 19 years later can do this is gratifying."

Many of the fans who turned out for the parade were wearing purple and gold, making downtown look as vibrant as the headline "CHAMPS!" in Lakers purple splashed across the top of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner in 2½-inch type.

'Fruitful' Meet For Ueberroth, Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth has completed a "fruitful" meeting with United States senators that updated baseball's expansion plans.

"It was a very helpful meeting," Ueberroth said following Wednesday's 1½-hour session with four U.S. senators. "We set some goals ... a timetable ... which we will work toward. The meeting was very fruitful and helpful."

Attending the meeting were Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., task force chairman, and Sens. Bob Graham, D-Fla., John McCain, R-Ariz., and Paul S. Trible Jr., R-Va., all of whom want an expansion team for their area. Trible has been pushing for a team in Washington.

Ueberroth declined to elaborate on anything about the meeting, except to say that he would meet again with the Senate Task Force on the Expansion of Major League Baseball.

"We may meet very soon, but we will meet sometime between Sept. 1 and Oct. 1 and we will talk," Ueberroth said.

Ueberroth said he and the senators discussed television and the effect on expansion of Ueberroth's plans to leave the commissioner's office in 1990.

"They know this commissioner is pro-expansion," Ueberroth said. "There will be no hangups when the new commissioner takes over. He will be pro-expansion. I told the senators that."

Graham called the meeting "very constructive. He laid out some legitimate concerns of baseball. I feel very comfortable with the commissioner."

Graham said Ueberroth concentrated on baseball's criteria for possible expansion cities, such as a stadium controlled by the franchise, local ownership with roots and local political support.

Kinston's 2nd Too Much For Pitt

KINSTON — Kinston pushed across five runs in the second inning to go ahead early and roll to a 8-4 win over Pitt County in American Legion baseball action Wednesday.

Kinston took advantage of six walks, an error and two wild pitches in the second to go ahead 5-0.

Pitt County came back with a run in the third when David Leisten walked, went to second on a passed ball and scored on a double by Dave Daniels.

But Kinston scored two more runs in the fifth as Scotty Barnhill hit a two-run homer.

Pitt County tried to rally with three runs in the top of the sixth to narrow the gap to 7-4 as Daniels singled in two runs and Ty Little drove in another, but that was as close as Pitt County would get.

Kinston pushed across an insurance run in the eighth when Ricky Killinger singled and eventually scored off an error.

Pitt left 13 men on base during the game and outhit Kinston, 9-5, but to no avail.

Tom Moye and Daniels led Pitt County with two hits apiece while Brian Lang and Scotty Barnhill led Kinston with two hits each.

Pitt County returns to action tonight at Rocky Mount.

Wayne Holds Off Snow Hill, 5-3

SNOW HILL — Wayne County held off Snow Hill, 5-3, Wednesday night in an American Legion baseball game.

Both teams scored two runs in the first inning. Snow Hill's two came when Anthony Jones singled and Shay Beaman hit a two-run homer.

Wayne then took the lead again in the third, scoring once. In the fourth, Wayne pushed over the winning run. Mike Lanier singled was sacrificed up and scored on David Whitfield's single.

Snow Hill closed it to 4-3 with a run in the sixth, but never could get a real rally going. Wayne added an insurance run in the top of the ninth.

Lanier had three hits and drove in three runs to lead Wayne while Mike Odum, Bob Grant and Whitfield each added two. Jones had two hits to pace Snow Hill.

The loss drops Snow Hill to 2-7 on the year. They play host to Wayne County again on Saturday, when will host Pitt County on Sunday in a 5 p.m. doubleheader.

Billy Ray Transferring To Duke

DURHAM (AP) — Billy Ray came to the Triangle looking for a school and Duke may have found itself a quarterback of the future.

Ray, a former high school All-America who was at Alabama for two seasons, said Wednesday that he had been admitted to Duke and would enroll in the fall. Ray can practice but not play in 1988 and will have two seasons of eligibility after that.

Ray also looked at N.C. State and North Carolina. His father went to North Carolina, and Ray's grandmother lives in Carrboro.

But Duke, with its strong academics and its pass-oriented offense, appealed to him. North Carolina recently has gone through a coaching change, something Ray went through at Alabama and said he wanted to avoid. Ray said State's coaches told him that they had depth and quality at quarterback.

"I knew what Duke offered," Ray told The News and Observer of Raleigh Wednesday. "It has a great reputation academically. Of course, everybody knows that across the country. So I felt I was making a strong decision not just on athletics but on academics. With the news today that I was admitted, it was really satisfying."

Ray's mother, in fact, had wanted him to go Duke when he was coming out of high school in Dunwoody, Ga. But Ray, one of the country's hottest prospects at the time, had eyes for the national powers.

Alabama, Miami (Fla.), Notre Dame, nearby Georgia Tech and Stanford were his final choices. He said he picked Alabama largely because of the glitter that goes with Crimson Tide football.

But his football career at Alabama was disappointing. He was a red-shirt his first year. David Smith won the starting job during Ray's second year and when Smith was hurt, fellow freshman Jeff Dunn of Greensboro emerged as the starter.

Ray left the team twice during the fall, then quit for good in the spring.

"I was good friends with the coaching staff there," said Ray, 6-foot-3 and 210 pounds. "There were no hard feelings. I enjoyed the school, I had a lot of friends. Football just wasn't clicking; it wasn't falling into place for me."

Duke coach Steve Spurrier said he was pleased to have Ray as a Blue Devil.

"Even though we've not had a winning season in the last five years, I believe these players can see how close we're coming to achieving that," Spurrier said. "Now we need to prove that we can have consistent winning seasons. Once we can get those two together, our recruiting is going to get much better in the future."

Hornets, Heat Make Picks

NEW YORK (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets and Miami Heat had several routes they could take in selecting 23 players in the NBA expansion draft.

They could go for journeyman big men such as James Bailey of Phoenix, Kent Benson of Cleveland, Paul Mokeski of Milwaukee, Jawann Oldham of Sacramento or New York's Pat Cummings.

Or try younger, untested inside players such as Atlanta's Chris Washburn, Dave Hoppen of Golden State or Dallas' Uwe Blab and Bill Wennington.

Today's expansion draft also offered young guards who have shown an ability to score, usually in a backup role. They included Dell Curry of Cleveland, Dwayne Washington of New Jersey, Terry Teagle of Golden State and Sacramento's Mike McGee.

They also could opt for the big names — there were seven former all-stars among the players available.

Denver's Calvin Natt, Marques Johnson and Norm Nixon of the Los Angeles Clippers, New Jersey's Otis Birdsong, Andrew Toney of Philadelphia, Walter Davis of Phoenix and Kelly Tripucka of Utah are the all-star names on the list of unprotected players.

But because of age, injuries and big contract obligations, there was no certainty that any of the seven would be among those selected.

Miami, choosing first, was to pick 12 players in the expansion draft and Charlotte 11. Each existing team lost one player.

The Hornets will choose eighth and the Heat ninth in the college draft on Tuesday.

Stu Inman, director of player personnel for the Heat, said the team might not decide on its No. 1 pick until the last minute.

"We might make some deals to fortify the future or take a player we want to keep for years," Inman said.

There was some speculation that

Washington, a seven-foot center, might be the first player picked. Another report had Atlanta's Randy Wittman pegged as the first pick.

"The big players who were not protected you have to look at hard even though most of them are of the journeyman variety," Inman said.

"The smaller players are generally the ones who best combine youth and talent."

Washington was a first-round pick of the Nets just two years ago and 5-3 Tyrone Bogues was the 1987 first-rounder of the Washington Bullets.

"We're very pleased that he wasn't among those protected," said Washington's agent, Don Cronson.

"It makes things a lot easier. It's best for all concerned that Dwayne could conceivably be somewhere else, to have a fresh start in a fresh environment."

"Maybe it's best that I went to another team because I'm not getting anything done here," said Washington, whose playing time diminished at the end of last season.

Tripucka, at 29 the youngest of the former all-stars and the most injury-free in the last two seasons, was the most attractive to the expansion teams despite a long-term contract for close to $1 million a year.

Tripucka, who averaged from 19.1 to 26.5 points in five seasons with Detroit, wasted away on the Jazz bench the last two seasons.

He declined to talk to the media before the draft, but his lawyer, Bob Woolf, said Tripucka "is excited about the opportunity to play again. That's the most important thing to him. Whether it's through a trade of the expansion draft, he just wants to play again."

Woolf said Tripucka's contract is cumbersome, but he is unwilling to scale it down to accommodate another team.

"There's no doubt he wants to leave Utah and there's no question he's the best player available in the draft," Woolf said.

'Walk-On' Jones Just Might Get All-Star Bid

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Doug Jones, who was invited to the Cleveland Indians' spring training camp as a non-roster player, may also be invited to pitch for the American League in the All-Star Game.

Jones pitched one scoreless inning Wednesday night — one hit, two strikeouts — to protect Cleveland's 3-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox and tie a major-league record with his 13th save in his last 13 opportunities. He has come through 17 times in 19 save situations.

"I guess they keep records for everything. I had no idea about it until I read it a week or two ago," said Jones, who turns 31 on Friday. "We needed to win more than I needed this record."

Jones, who has a 1.87 ERA and has yielded only 19 hits in 33 2-3 innings while striking out 37, tied the record last year by the Phillies' Steve Bedrosian. He broke the AL mark of 12 straight set in 1973 by the Yankees' Sparky Lyle.

The third-place Indians are one game behind New York, which lost to Detroit 3-2 in 10 innings and trails the first-place Tigers by 2½ games. Elsewhere, it was Oakland 6, Milwaukee 2; Minnesota 3, California 1; Chicago 5, Kansas City 4; Seattle 3, Texas 2 in 10 innings; Toronto 4, Baltimore 2.

Jones is not only a savior, he's also a prophet.

"(Pitching coach) Mark Wiley called down after the top of the eighth and said if we scored a run I was in the ballgame," Jones said. "I went in and got my glove and told (backup catcher) Chris Bando, 'Let's go,' and he said we had to score a run first. I told him we were going to get a leadoff dinger. And I have witnesses."

Julio Franco, who singled in each of his first three at-bats, promptly opened the bottom of the eighth against Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd with his sixth home run of the season. Brook Jacoby, who homered in the fourth inning, singled home an insurance run.

The Red Sox, who scored 39 runs and had 59 hits in their previous three games, were held to four hits in eight innings by John Farrell, including Rich Gedman's seventh-inning homer.

Jones, in just his second major-league season, throws only a fastball and changeup.

"I'll tell you the truth, he's got tremendous command of what he's doing," manager Doc Edwards said. "His changeup is one of the best in baseball and his fastball is better than people give him credit for. When he's rested, he throws 86-88 miles an hour, and when you're sitting on a 50-to 60-mile-an-hour changeup, the fastball looks like 90."

Tigers 3, Yankees 2
Luis Salazar's RBI single with one out in the 10th inning scored Tom Brookens from second base and gave Detroit a sweep of the three-game series. Detroit has won 12 of its last 15 games. Relief ace Mike Henneman pitched the last three innings, allowing one hit, striking out five and lowering his ERA to 1.67.

Brookens started the 10th with a single off reliever Charles Hudson and was sacrificed to second by Jim Walewander. Salazar then lined a 2-2 pitch up the gap in left-center. That sent the Yankees to their fourth consecutive setback, their longest losing streak of the season.

Starters Frank Tanana of Detroit and John Candelaria of New York each pitched seven innings, allowing two runs. New York's Rickey Henderson homered in the third inning for a 2-1 lead. The Tigers tied it in the sixth on singles by Walewander, Alan Trammell and Larry Herndon.

Athletics 6, Brewers 2
Mark McGwire hit a three-run homer and Dave Stewart continued his mastery of Milwaukee with a six-hitter as Oakland completed a three-game sweep of the Brewers.

The homer was the 13th of the season for McGwire, who was hitting .190 in June, but only his second in the last 30 games and his first ever at County Stadium. It was a 400-foot shot in the fourth inning and gave Oakland a 4-0 lead. Stewart, 10-5, ran his career record to 6-0 against the Brewers.

Twins 3, Angels 1
Frank Viola pitched a three-hitter to become the AL's first 11-game winner and John Moses had three hits as Minnesota snapped California's six-game winning streak.

Viola, 11-2 overall and 8-0 at home, has lost only once since opening day. He allowed one walk, struck out six and the only run he allowed was unearned as a result of his own throwing error.

The Twins got their first run off Willie Fraser in the second inning.

when Gary Gaetti doubled, went to third on an infield out and scored on a passed ball by Darrell Miller. Minnesota made it 3-0 in the third when Al Newman doubled, Moses tripled and Kirby Puckett hit a sacrifice fly.

White Sox 5, Royals 4
Pinch hitter Mark Salas, hitless in his previous 16 at-bats, singled home Daryl Boston with none out in the bottom of the ninth. Boston opened the ninth with a triple off Steve Farr, who intentionally walked Ozzie Guillen and Donnie Hill to load the bases. Salas hit a long fly down the left-field line that bounced off Pat Tabler's glove.

Kansas City starter Rick Anderson, making his first major-league appearance of the season, yielded three runs in the first inning, two on Dan Pasqua's double, but took a 4-3 lead into the eighth. The White Sox tied the score on Harold Baines' RBI double.

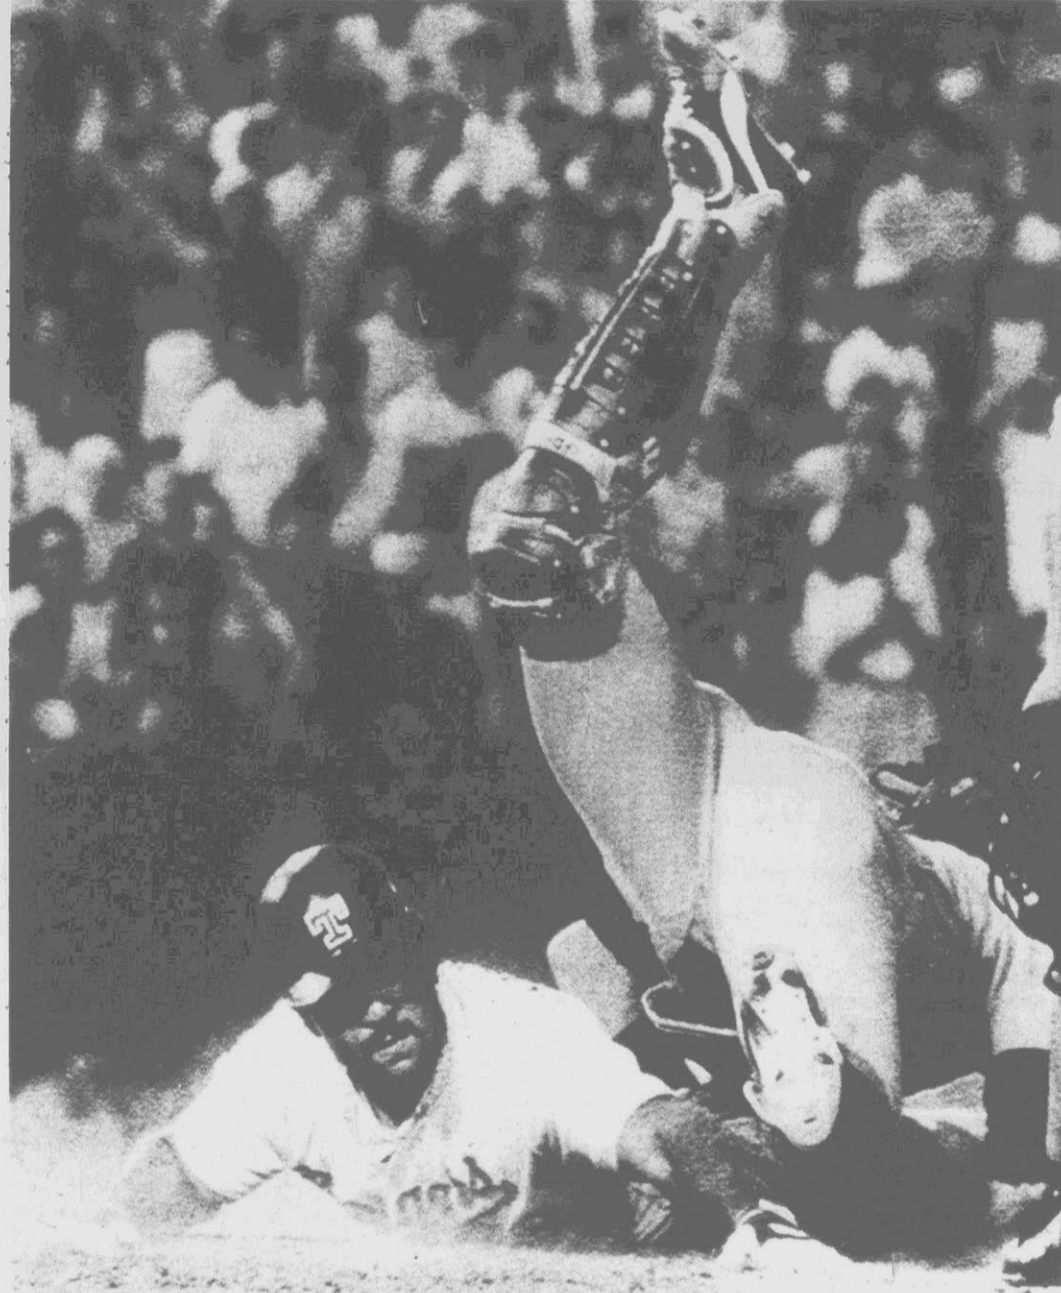

Mariners 3, Rangers 2
Mickey Brantley's 11th home run of the season leading off the 10th inning enabled Seattle to snap a nine-game losing streak during which the Mariners scored only 12 runs. Brantley's homer off starter Jose Guzman also snapped the Mariners' club-record 14-game road losing streak.

Mike Schooler pitched three innings of scoreless three-hit relief for his first major-league victory.

Brantley drove in a first-inning run with a grounder and singles by Brantley, Ken Phelps and Jim Presley in the sixth made it 2-0, Seattle's first two-run lead since June 9.

Blue Jays 4, Orioles 2
Cecil Fielder drove in the tying and lead runs with a wind-blown double in the second inning.

Winner John Cerutti, who had lasted a total of 3 1-3 innings in his previous two starts, allowed Pete Stanicek's first major-league homer on the second pitch of the game, but scattered five hits over six innings. Duane Ward earned his fifth save with three innings of scoreless one-hit relief.

Bradley Is Hopeful That Nightmare Finally Over

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — It looks like a typographical error.

Pat Bradley, who in 1986 won three of the four LPGA major tournaments?

Pat Bradley, the LPGA's leading career money winner with $2,436,132, the first LPGA player to win more than $100,000 10 straight years, with only $9,782 in 12 events this year?

Pat Bradley winced at the questions. Then she smiled. She believes the nightmare is over.

Bradley, 37, had just finished a practice round in 97-degree heat at the Du Pont Country Club on Wednesday. She starts today in the 72-hole, $500,000 LPGA McDonald's Championship.

All but one of the top 20 LPGA money winners are in the 144-golfer field, led by No. 1 Nancy Lopez with $242,522.

In addition to Lopez, the tournament over the 6,366-yard, par-71 course has drawn Sherri Turner, Amy Alcott, Colleen Walker, Ayako Okamoto, Rosie Jones, Patty Sheehan, Ok-Hee-Ku and Betsy King, all among the top 10 money winners.

Where have you been, Pat Bradley?

"I had such a great 1986, above and beyond the call of duty in performance. It took a lot out of me. It was a pressure-packed situation.

"It probably triggered 1987, when I tried to maintain the quality and level I had set for myself.

"I wanted to improve on 1986. It was extremely difficult. It meant I had to win all four majors."

Bradley said that when she won in April 1987 at Phoenix, she didn't feel very well physically.

"Three weeks later in San Diego, I had a pretty good first three days. Sunday, I was dragging. It was hard to walk. I thought I needed time off, took two weeks."

The break apparently didn't help. She continued to feel poorly and began to lose distance on her shots. Stubbornly she told herself it was just bad mechanics, nothing physical. "I got jumpy, my heart pounded so fast I thought people would see it coming through my chest. I kept hitting short. I still thought the swing was creating all these problems.

"I'm a strong person. I can handle it," she kept telling herself. "Be tough, go out there and play through. But the more I played, the deeper in a hole I got."

In March, her brother, Tom, visited her during the Dinah Shore tournament. Without a word to her, Tom called home to report that something was wrong with Pat.

"She's not the same Pat," Tom told his mother. She, in turn, called Pat, begging her to see a doctor.

"There is something wrong child," my mother said. "It made me stop and think."

The next week, Bradley had to push herself up with her hands after stooping to read a putt. That did it. She visited a doctor friend in Dallas.

An examination and tests revealed a hyperthyroid condition.

"Actually," Bradley recalled, "I was relieved. I thought I was having a nervous breakdown. I was relieved that I wasn't going crazy."

She left the tour to begin treatment with iodine radiation. She was off the tour for five weeks, and didn't even touch a club for a month.

In the three weeks since her return, Bradley has finished 32nd, 49th and 48th.

"Things are not bad. The numbers I'm shooting are coming down considerably," she said. "I had missed a lot of cuts. I made all three when I came back. It's encouraging.

"My strength still is coming back, but I'm not in top form yet. I'm very optimistic. Walking the fairways is a joy compared to the last year. "I dug a hole extremely deep. I've climbed halfway out. There is no doubt it all will come back.

"Seven weeks ago, I thought it was at an end. But now time is on my side.

"People like JoAnne Carner, Nancy Lopez and Patty Sheehan have other outlets to relieve their intensity. I don't," Bradley said. "I have to put all my energy, body and soul, into what I do. But I don't feel I have to change Pat Bradley."

Does she realistically think she can win the McDonald's $75,000 first prize, or is she just out for a workout?

"I'm not going out there just to see what I can do," Bradley said, flashing the intense look that had been her trademark. "I could win. I want to win. Every practice round I'm smiling. I'm remembering. It's there."

She's still receiving treatment and her doctor says that things could very well be the way they were. Although there is a chance of a relapse, Bradley doesn't think about that. For the first time in a long time, only birdies and pars matter.

League Owners Discussed Replacements Before Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least seven months before the 1987 strike by NFL players, league owners discussed the possibility of staging games with replacements.

The disclosure was made in testimony at a hearing Wednesday before the National Labor Relations Board by Eddie LeBaron, who was in charge of coordinating rules for the NFL replacement games last year.

"The owners just didn't want to lose the type of money we lost before (during the 57-day strike in 1982)," LeBaron told an administrative law judge.

LeBaron said the possibility of staging games with replacement players was first discussed in February 1987 at a meeting of the executive committee of the NFL Management Council in Key West, Fla.

The NFL Players Association did not go on strike until late September.

The union hopes to win $20 million in back pay for games held last Oct. 18-19, three days after the conclusion of the 24-day strike.

The NFLPA alleges that the league discriminated against players for union activity by refusing to reinstate striking players who rejoined their clubs one day after the league's reporting deadline.

LeBaron told Judge Benjamin Schlesinger that the specifics of the replacement games were first discussed at the end of August. But the league circulated a memorandum in April instructing teams to consider offering released players $1,000 to return in the event of a strike.

The general counsel for the NLRB board is expected to finish presenting its case by mid-July. After a break of a week or two, the NFL will present its side.

LeBaron, a former NFL quarterback who once served as general manager of the Atlanta Falcons, spent part of last year as a consultant to the league. As the strike grew closer, he was appointed to design rules and regulations for the replacement games.

Bell Less Friendly To Ex-Mates

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

Houston's Buddy Bell still thinks fondly of his former Cincinnati teammates, off the field. On the field, he's been less than friendly.

Bell's two-run double keyed a four-run eighth inning Wednesday night as the Astros defeated the Reds 5-1. Bell's RBI double sparked a three-run rally the night before.

"It feels good to have them leave town. I really miss a lot of those guys," said Bell, who was traded to the Astros last weekend. "You spend a lot of time with them, but I'd be lying if I said it wasn't special to beat the Reds."

It's been a difficult season for Bell, 36, a five-time All-Star and six-time Gold Glove winner at third base. He entered Wednesday night's game batting only .185 with no home runs and four RBI.

"I've played 17 years and I don't feel I have anything to prove," Bell said. "It's just nice to be able to play. I've never played in a World Series, but at least I've been given the opportunity to play."

Elsewhere, it was Philadelphia 5, Chicago 3; New York 3, Pittsburgh 0; San Francisco 8, San Diego 7; Mon-treau 6, St. Louis 2, and Atlanta 4, Los Angeles 1.

Danny Jackson, 7-4, retired the first two batters in the eighth but Glenn Davis singled, Kevin Bass walked and Bell doubled home both runners.

"I didn't do the job because after 7 2-3 innings you've got to keep the ball down and I got it up," Jackson said. "I was trying to be too careful rather than going at them."

Rafael Ramirez singled to score Bell and Alex Trevino hit an RBI double to chase Jackson.

"I'm not surprised at what Buddy's done and he's going to get sharper as he gets more at-bats," Astros manager Hal Lanier said. "He's helped us in the field, too. He makes some outstanding plays look routine."

Bob Knepper worked seven innings, allowing five hits, walking three and striking out four. Juan Agosto, 5-0, allowed one hit in two innings.

Phillies 5, Cubs 3

Mike Schmidt drove in two runs and five Philadelphia pitchers combined on an eight-hitter.

The win went to Todd Frohwirth, 1-2, who pitched 1 2-3 hitless innings after relieving starter Mike Maddux, just back from minor-league rehabilitation on an injured elbow. Maddux had to leave the game in the fourth when he was hit on the same elbow by Vance Law's line drive.

Preliminary examination showed he had suffered a contusion.

Steve Bedrosian came in the top of the ninth and allowed a run-scoring single to Law before retiring pinch-hitter Andre Dawson to earn his 11th save.

Schmidt drove in a run with an infield out in the first against Rick Sutcliffe, 5-5, and had an RBI double in the sixth to move into a tie with Willie Stargell for 23rd on the all-time list with 1,540.

Mets 3, Pirates 0

Dwight Gooden, Roger McDowell and Randy Myers combined for New York's major-league leading 13th shutout. It was the third shutout in four games for the Mets, who moved to 7 1/2 games in front of Pittsburgh in the NL East.

Gooden, 10-3, broke a personal two-game losing streak, going eight innings in the 94-degree heat. He scattered nine hits while striking out six and walking one.

McDowell retired the first two hitters in the top of the ninth before allowing singles to Mike Diaz and Barry Bonds and walking Jose Lind. Myers came on to get Andy Van Slyke on a grounder to second for his 11th save.

Mike Dunne, 4-6, allowed just four hits in six-plus innings.

Giants 8, Padres 7

Will Clark had a career-high seven RBI and hit a three-run double in the bottom of the ninth to lead San Francisco.

The Giants had committed two errors, allowing two unearned runs to score, and trailed 7-4 going into the bottom of the ninth.

With one out, Bob Brenly walked and Jose Uribe singled against Lance McCullers. Mark Davis, 2-5, seeking his 13th save in 13 opportunities, struck out pinch-hitter Harry Spilman but gave up an RBI single to Brett Butler and walked Chris Speier before allowing Clark's game-winning hit.

San Diego took a 5-1 lead against Atlee Hammaker after the first three innings. Clark hit a three-run homer, his 17th, in the fifth.

Craig Lefferts, 2-5, was the last of four pitchers for San Francisco.

Expos 6, Cardinals 2

Nelson Santovenia drove in three runs with a double and a single and Bryn Smith and Joe Hesketh combined on a six-hitter as Montreal swept its three-game series with St. Louis. It was the seventh straight win at home for the Expos, who moved past St. Louis into fourth place in the East. The Cardinals have lost four straight and 10 of their last 12.

Smith, 5-5, worked six innings, giving up four hits, walking none and striking out three. Hesketh allowed two hits in three innings to earn his second save.

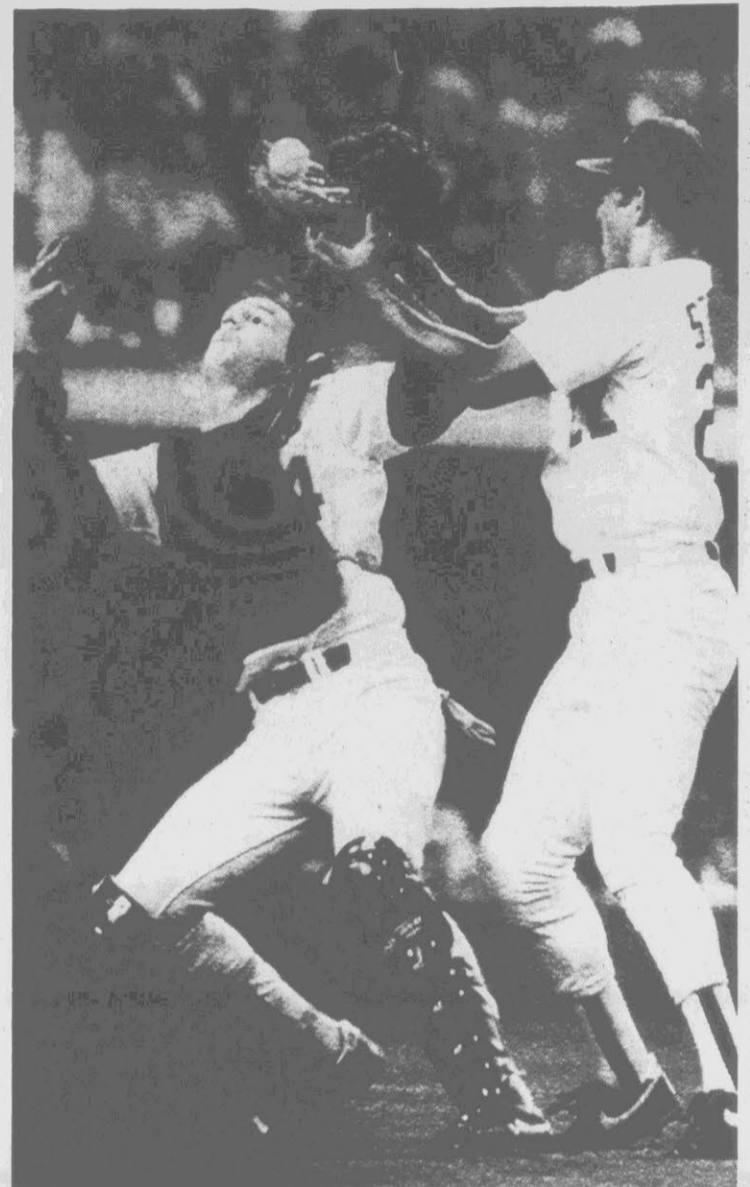

Montreal scored three times in the fourth against Joe Magrane, 1-2. Andres Galarraga singled, went to second on Hubie Brooks' walk and scored on Tim Wallach's double.

Santovenia then hit an 0-2 pitch down the right-field line for a two-run double.

Braves 4, Dodgers 1

Rick Mahler pitched a four-hitter and drove in two runs with a pair of singles and Los Angeles starter Don Sutton committed a bizarre error that keyed a three-run Atlanta third inning.

The Braves ended a four-game skid, while the Dodgers had a five-game winning streak snapped.

Mahler, 8-6, struck out six, walked two and retired the last 10 batters in order for his second complete game. Sutton, 3-5, has not won since May 14.

After singles by Ozzie Virgil and Ron Gant with none out in the third, Sutton could not handle a hard-hit comebacker by Mahler, who was credited with a hit.

Sutton chased after the ball behind the mound and apparently had no chance to get Mahler. But Sutton wheeled and threw blindly past first base, allowing both runners to score and Mahler to reach second. Mahler took third on Albert Hall's single to right and scored one out later on a groundout by Dion James.

Nelson Cannot Say He Doesn't Know The Course

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Larry Nelson knows the Atlanta Country Club course better than anyone in the 156-man field competing in the $700,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

He should. It's home for the reigning PGA champion who owns a house adjacent to the 18th fairway on the hilly, 7,008-yard, par-72 course.

"I think the course is in great shape," Nelson said. "The rough is spotty and the greens are really at a good speed."

"The scores will be low, probably the lowest cut they've ever been," Nelson said, perhaps even better than the record 23-under-par 265 total posted by Andy Bean in 1979 and tied by Dave Barr of Canada last year.

"It's good to be home," Nelson said. "I hope I'm doing much better than last week."

Nelson, who also won the 1981 PGA title and the 1983 U.S. Open, missed the cut in last week's Open.

"The course is as good as I've ever seen it," said Chip Beck, who claimed his first PGA Tour victories in 10 years by winning at Los Angeles and New Orleans earlier this year.

"It will lend itself to a lot of birdies," added Beck, who at No. 3 is the top player on the money list in the field.

Beck has won $539,219 this year, trailing only Scotland's Sandy Lyle, the Masters champion, and U.S.

Open champion Curtis Strange in 1988 earnings.

Lyle and Strange, who won an 18-hole playoff from Britain's Nick Faldo on Monday to win the Open, are bypassing the Atlanta event.

Beck said the lack of rain in Atlanta makes the ball go an extra 15-20 yards on drives, which will help the medium hitters compete with the long hitters.

"The medium hitters will be able to reach the par 5s in two," he said.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany will be looking for his first victory since 1985, when he won the Masters and the Heritage on consecutive weekends.

"I'm playing reasonably well, not brilliant yet," said Langer, who has been plagued by a back ailment. "Hopefully it will get better this week."

Langer has two top 10 finishes in nine events this year and ranks 70th on the money list with $86,134. He missed the cut in last week's Open.

Lanny Wadkins is the only other two-time 1988 winner in the field. Wadkins, fourth on the money list, won the Hawaiian Open and the Colonial National.

Jay Haas, the Bob Hope Classic winner, is the only other player among the top 10 money winners in the Atlanta event. Haas ranks 10th with $373,445.

There are five other 1988 tournament winners in the field — Gary Koch, Steve Jones, Paul Azinger, Steve Pate and Morris Hatafsky.

Portions of the final two rounds will be televised Saturday and Sunday by CBS.

Allison Is Still Listed Critical

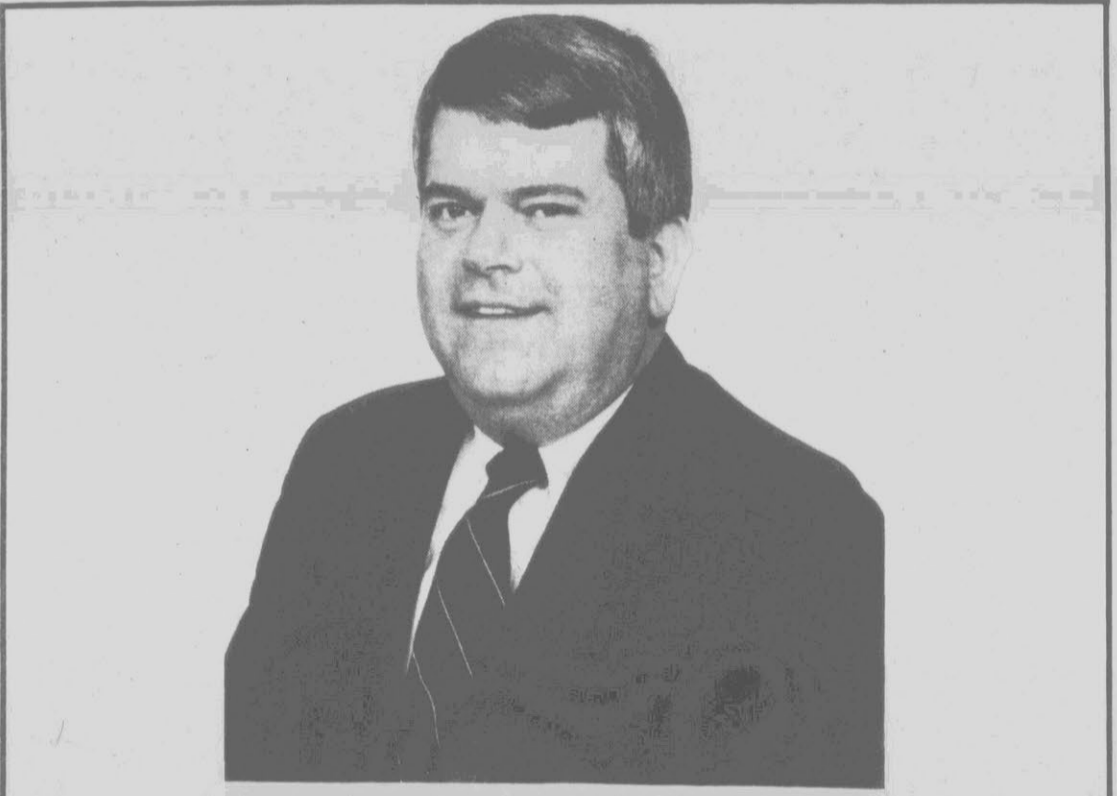

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Race car driver Bobby Allison remained in critical condition Wednesday, while his son, driver Davey Allison, kept round-the-clock vigils at the Lehigh Valley Hospital Center, a spokesman said.

Davey Allison, who is due to leave Friday to start practice for Sunday's American 400 in Brooklyn, Mich., sleeps nights in a hospital waiting room while his father recovers from injuries suffered last weekend at a race in Long Pond, according to Ed Gossage, a spokesman for Bobby Allison's sponsor, Miller Racing.

The elder Allison, who suffered a concussion in the wreck, has been in critical condition with a broken left ankle, a broken left femur and fractured left ribs, Gossage said. Doctors have been draining fluid from his swollen brain since Sunday, he said.

A pin was installed in his femur Sunday night, but doctors have postponed surgery on his ankle until he improves, Gossage said.

Spelling's First NBC Pilot To Make Debut Monday

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer Aaron Spelling said when he made his first series pilot deal with NBC, he had no idea how to get there to sign the contract.

"I didn't know how to get to Burbank and NBC," joked Spelling, who, until recently, had an exclusive contract with ABC since 1970.

Spelling, the prolific producer of such hit shows as "Dynasty," "Hotel," "The Love Boat," "Fantasy Island," "Charlie's Angels" and "Family," did find the offices of NBC, and the welcome mat was out.

"They led me to the elevator, and when it opened (NBC Entertainment President) Brandon Tartikoff was inside," he said. "They had a band playing 'Yellow Rose of Texas,' in honor of my home state, a red carpet and a banner saying, 'Welcome to NBC.'"

The deal Spelling reached with NBC was for a possible series, "Nightingales," about a group of young nurses in training. The two-hour pilot will air Monday. It stars Mimi Kuzik, Susan Walters, Britta Phillips, Chelsea Field, Kristy Swanson and Galyn Gorg.

Spelling has also produced a theatrical movie, "Satisfaction," financed by NBC.

"The idea for the series was young student nurses who come to a big city hospital for training," he said. "It's very hard to recruit nurses, so each student has a secret reason why she wants to become a nurse. Brandon even suggested one of the secrets. He suggested Chelsea Fields for a role. He participated in virtually every meeting. I was amazed at his hands-on participation.

"Once we got the go-ahead we had to work around the clock because of the impending writers' strike. The second draft was delivered on a Saturday. The writers struck on Monday."

Susan Walters was an actress he had released from "Hotel" to star as Priscilla Presley in the movie "Elvis and Me." She had an agreement to return to "Hotel," which has been canceled, or do a pilot.

Another casting suggestion came from Spelling's 15-year-old daughter, who saw Kristy Swanson in "Flowers in the Attic" and insisted he had to see her.

"This is a show that's aimed at young people," said Spelling. "It will be a serial. It would be difficult to schedule."

Although all the secrets are revealed in the movie, there are unresolved questions that would fuel a series.

The future of the series depends on the reception the show gets. A couple of cautionary signals — NBC is airing the show in the summer at a time of low ratings and, as the air date drew near, no review tapes were being made available.

Spelling currently has two series on the air, ABC's durable "Dynasty" and "HeartBeat," a midseason replacement that did well in the ratings and is on the fall schedule.

"HeartBeat" is the first time I ever did a medical show," he said. "It's a very realistic show. People sent us letters with money to help keep the show on the air. That hasn't happened since 'Family.' 'HeartBeat' deals with unique medical problems. 'Nightingales' is sheer entertainment. It deals with medicine, but there isn't a life-and-death case every few minutes."

Spelling said he has a series commitment at NBC, but he doesn't know yet whether it will turn out to be "Nightingales" or another show. He also has a deal with ABC for five more series and with CBS for one series.

Fox Broadcasting Co. plans to have "Angels '88," a new version of "Charlie's Angels," on its schedule next season, but it has to wait until the writers' strike ends.

Spelling said he has also been approached by Ted Turner, the Atlanta entertainment entrepreneur, about doing some shows for Turner Broadcasting.

And Spelling has a movie for CBS called "Day One," which tells of the Manhattan Project and the first atomic bomb dropped on Japan.

Elsewhere in television:
MORE OSCARS — ABC and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences have agreed to a five-year extension that will give ABC exclusive rights to the Oscar show through 1995. ABC has carried the Oscars since 1976. The 61st Annual Academy Awards will be in March 1989.

MAN FOR NEXT SEASON — Charlton Heston, Vanessa Redgrave and Sir John Gielgud will star in "A Man For All Seasons" for the new Turner Network Television cable channel. The 1966 version of the movie won six Oscars, including Best Picture, Best Actor for Paul Scofield and Best Screenplay for Robert Bolt.

Festival Tributes Old Jazz Favorites

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The JVC Jazz Festival arrives this year as part of the First New York International Festival of the Arts, with old favorites, tributes to departed greats and a sprinkling of jazz outside the mainstream.

Two of the tributes are to drummer Buddy Rich and arranger Gil Evans, who died earlier this year.

The festival opens on Friday, with "For the Love of Louis," a tribute to the great trumpeter Louis Armstrong. The final night, July 2, features "A Night for Lady Day," the music of Billie Holiday. On the same night is a "Latin Jazz Jam," a tribute to Machito, starring Tito Puente, Paquito d'Rivera and Mongo Santamaria.

Jazz lovers face a four-way dilemma on the second night. Ella Fitzgerald will sing at Carnegie Hall while Miles Davis gives a concert at Avery Fisher Hall. The Toshiko Akiyoshi Orchestra and the Mel Lewis Big Band carry on "An Old Fashioned Battle of the Big Bands" at Town Hall, and Gerry Mulligan plays at the 92nd Street Y.

The third night presents three choices. Duke Ellington's music at Carnegie, tap dancing at Avery Fisher and the Jim Cullum Jazz Band playing "Porgy and Bess" at the 92nd Street Y's Kaufman Concert Hall.

A Charles Mingus All-Star Big Band plays Monday at the Y. On Tuesday, Dizzy Gillespie's band and singer Carmen McRae take over Carnegie Hall while several varieties of blues — delivered by B. B. King, the Fabulous Thunderbirds, Bonnie Raitt and Dr. John — fill Avery Fisher.

"The JVC Jazz Festival Salutes Jazz in France," with performances by a number of French jazz artists, is made possible on Wednesday at Town Hall by the First New York International Festival of the Arts. Also that night is an evening at Carnegie Hall saluting vocal group traditions, starring Mel Torme, Montgomery Plant and Stritch; and Cissy Houston and the Sweet Inspirations. Lionel Hampton and Wynton Marsalis are booked for Avery Fisher, and the Gil Evans Orchestra for the 92nd Street Y.

Carlos Santana, Wayne Shorter and Lee Ritenour play at Avery Fisher on Thursday, while Sarah Vaughan sings at Carnegie and Dave Brubeck leads his quartet at the 92nd Street Y.

On the final Friday, Buddy Rich's music will be heard at Carnegie and saxophonist Kenny G and guitarist Stanley Jordan will share a bill at Avery Fisher.

Stallone Files Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone has filed a $3 million lawsuit against Colt Industries, alleging a photograph and caption in Guns Magazine falsely implied he endorsed a Colt handgun.

In the Superior Court lawsuit filed here, Stallone claims a Connecticut advertising agency hired by Colt contacted his agent asking to use his name and photograph to promote a 45-caliber, $1,500 pistol called the Heirloom gun.

The lawsuit, filed Friday, said Stallone refused, and after that, Colt requested a bogus article to be placed in the magazine with an accompanying photograph of Colt's fake Heirloom gun firearm with Stallone's name inscribed on the barrel.

The picture printed in the July 1987 issue shows the actor, the gun and a caption saying "Sylvester Stallone's personal Colt Heirloom gun."

"We have no comment on the lawsuit or firearm in question,"

Peter Williamson, spokesman for New York-based Colt Industries, said Wednesday. Guns Magazine is not a defendant.

 The trouble with knowing all those rubrics about what you should do at the bridge table is that you tend to follow them slavishly. They represent useful guidelines, but are no substitute for thought and logic. If you would like to test your defensive skill, cover the West and South hands and presume you are defending three no trump. The auction tells you little other than that the declaring side is not stretching for game. Partner leads the two of spades. If you blindly follow the dictums that you should play third hand high and return partner's suit, you would go up with the king of spades and, when that held, return the suit. Third hand high is sound advice here. But what does partner's lead of the deuce tell you? That he has only a four-card suit. Even if that suit is headed by the ace-jack, you will still need tricks elsewhere if you are to beat the game. Therefore, a spade return will not help your side. It is time to cast around for greener pastures, and diamonds presents the obvious suit to furnish additional defensive tricks. Even then, not any diamond will do. You must shift to the ten of diamonds, to cater to the possibility that declarer holds the jack and partner has a high honor. Then you will have dummy's nine surrounded, and if the layout is as above, declarer cannot get home. The best he can do is go down one by holding up the ace of diamonds twice, and conceding two spade tricks, two diamonds and a club.
