N.C. Records Fall As State Sizzles In Withering Heat

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer

It's been hot enough to make hogs faint and air conditioners die from exhaustion, and forecasters say today's respite from the heat probably won't last much beyond Saturday.

Temperatures Thursday hit 101 degrees at Fort Bragg and the community of Hoffman in Richmond County, while Raleigh, Charlotte, Fayetteville and Greensboro hit 98.

Asheville and Greensboro both set records Thursday, as the heat forced human beings to hunt for air conditioning and animals to seek a little cooling water.

In Durham County, hospitals treated two people for heat-related illnesses. And in Wake County, residents managed to use about 10 million more gallons of water than they normally would.

The temperature at the Asheville Airport reached 93, breaking the previous record high for the same date of 90, which was set in 1986.

In Greensboro, the temperature at Piedmont Triad International Airport climbed to 97 degrees, breaking the previous high of 96, also set in 1986, the weather service said.

At the Charlotte Motor Speedway, the pavement temperature on the track's fourth turn reached 158 degrees at 3 p.m., speedway officials said in a release. The bowl shape of the speedway's high-banked fourth turn forms a southern-exposure "solar collector," officials said.

Linda Flowers, a spokesman for Durham County General Hospital, said a 35-year-old man was treated and released after suffering from heat exhaustion. At Duke University Medical Center, a 29-year-old woman was treated for a heat-related illness, a spokesman said.

Agriculture officials and hospitals issued alerts for animals and humans alike.

Carl Hodges, director of the Durham County Agricultural Extension Service, said the heat affects hogs, which can't gain weight when it's so hot.

"They just can't take this type of heat. If they move around too much, they might pass out," he said. Hodges said hogs can temper the heat's effects if water or a mudhole is around.

"This is probably the severest (alert) level of the season," said agriculture meteorologist Katie B. Perry of the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service. The agency advised livestock farmers to provide shade and plenty of water for outdoor animals.

At Wake Medical Center in Raleigh, officials urged anyone experiencing nausea, high fever, heavy sweating, dizziness or other symptoms of heat exhaustion to visit a doctor or emergency room immediately. Elderly people

Boy's Quick Action Credited In Rescue

Gene Tripp of the Belvoir community and Shirley Harris of the King's Crossroad community near Falkland have been recognized by the Falkland Rescue Squad for their assistance in the rescue of a 10-year-old boy from the Tar River Monday afternoon.

Charles Harris, captain of the Falkland Rescue Squad, said Mrs. Harris saw a boy flagging her down as she crossed the Tar River bridge between Falkland and Belvoir. She stopped and learned from him that his friend Euteubius Bynum of Falkland, a non-swimmer, was in trouble in the river. She stopped Tripp, another passerby, and then went to call the rescue squad.

Harris said that when the squad arrived, Tripp, who could not swim, had somehow made his way to the boy on the far side of the river, pulled him from a hole in which he was stranded, and had taken him to a shallower part. Tripp stood there with young Bynum on his back, as there was deeper water between the two of them and the bank, until rescuers arrived.

The rescue squad captain praised Ms. Harris's quick response to the emergency and Tripp's bravery at rescuing the boy even though he was a non-swimmer.

Platform Proposed

DENVER (AP) — Democrats today released a preliminary draft of a platform that promises to restore "competence and hope" to the presidency, while avoiding any mention of higher taxes, a freeze on Pentagon spending or a Palestinian homeland.

The 3,500-word draft was being debated, revised and voted on later today by a 16-member platform drafting committee meeting on the eve of the first gathering of the full 186-member platform committee.

The draft incorporates language on a dozen issues that representatives of likely nominee Michael Dukakis and his only remaining challenger, Jesse Jackson, agreed to two weeks ago in drafting sessions on Mackinac Island, Mich.

But in every significant area of dispute, it is Dukakis' preferences and not Jackson's, that are embodied in the preliminary draft. Jackson has said he may fight to the convention floor in Atlanta next month for planks endorsing higher taxes on the rich and a freeze on the Pentagon budget.

The Drought of 1988: Status and Outlook

It's To Be More Of Same For June

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new National Weather Service forecast for the Colorado Rockies eastward through the Central Plains, the lower Midwest and the Middle Atlantic states is for more of the same hot, dry weather for the rest of June.

In its first "drought advisory" of the year, the service on Thursday forecast below-normal rainfall from the Central Plains to Illinois and Indiana, although surrounding areas may have closer to normal precipitation.

The Climate Analysis Center issues drought advisories when lack of rain has continued over a large area for several weeks and the forecast fails to indicate any upcoming rain.

Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, meanwhile, told President Reagan on Thursday that it is too early for emergency relief measures to deal with effects of the drought.

"Despite the serious potential effects of the drought, the secretary said rainfall in the next two weeks would alleviate much of the potential damage," Deputy White House Press Secretary B. Jay Cooper said.

Vice President George Bush, however, said in a separate statement, "If conditions continue to deteriorate, money that has been saved in this year's farm programs will be redirected to farm families as disaster relief for the rural economy."

The weather service noted in its advisory that the period from April 1 to June 1 was among the driest since 1920 in the North Central states, although not yet as dry as in 1934.

The center also expressed concern about conditions in the Southeast, where a dry spell has prevailed for nearly four years, and in the Mississippi-Missouri watershed.

Since April 1, less than 50 percent of normal precipitation has occurred in an area stretching from the states on the Gulf of Mexico to the northern border.

Drought conditions have been gradually worsening over the northern Great Plains and Rockies, the Tennessee and Ohio valleys, the southern Appalachians, California, the interior Pacific Northwest and northern Maine, the statement noted.

The Climate Analysis Center regularly issues 30- and 90-day national forecasts but rarely issues special statements such as the drought advisory.

Farmers' Fear

'Now God's Against Us'

By BART ZIEGLER
Associated Press Writer

Mental health workers and congressmen say they've been besieged by calls from farm families anguished because "now God's against us," as 10 governors prepared recommendations for federal action to save drought-stricken farms.

A persistent heat wave, meanwhile, continued to exacerbate the worst drought since the 1930s, though parts of the Northeast and Midwest enjoyed cooler weather on Thursday than the record-high temperatures of recent days. Temperatures hit record lows overnight in the Northeast and Northwest, including 40 at Burlington, Vt., and 39 at Olympia, Wash.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across much of the Southeast, the Gulf Coast and central Texas. The storms brought brief relief to some parched areas, including a half-inch of rain in sections of Missouri and a quarter-inch at Mobile, Ala. Parts of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa also got rain, with 1.8 inches at Waterloo, Iowa.

In St. Louis, the medical examiner's office said a 99-year-old woman whose body was found in a sweltering bedroom Wednesday died from heat. In Georgia, Thomas County Coroner Sam Brown said a woman died of a heart attack brought on by heat stroke while working in a tobacco field.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were predicted today in parts of the Midwest, the Southeast and elsewhere. But the National Weather Service said the Plains and Midwest should have continued hot and dry weather for the rest of June.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad today again pushed the Reagan administration for more aid to drought-stricken farmers, arguing "the situation is getting more critical day by day."

"It's not fair for the farmer who has a crop disaster to bear the financial burden of this," Branstad said on NBC's "Today" show. "We can't afford to see more family farmers be pushed off the land."

Local 6-Year-old Shows World How To Holler

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

It's hard to imagine a boy of that size producing such an uproarious yell.

Like most boys his age, Waller Austin of Elmhurst Elementary School enjoys swimming, riding bicycles, and skating. He appears to be just another typical, energetic 6-year-old. But there's something unique about Waller. That boy has one outrageous holler.

"MOMMAAAAAA!" That particular scream by Waller was loud and boisterous enough to earn a junior division second place finish in this year's National Hollerin' Contest held Saturday at Spivey's Corner.

Held for the past 20 years, the contest gives hollers, whistlers and even conkshell blowers from across the nation an opportunity to prove they're No. 1.

Waller competed against 15 others in his particular division. Of those 15, he was the youngest. Still, Waller accepted the challenge, concentrated, took a deep breath and screamed at the top of his lungs.

"MOMMAAAAAA!" "I can holler out real loud because sometimes I holler at my mom," Waller explained. "Every time my brothers are mean to me I have to holler for Momma so that's why I hollered 'MOMMAAAAA' at Spivey's Corner."

Waller is the son of Greenville residents Erle and Scott Austin.

Mrs. Austin said Waller first became interested in competitive hollering following a school project. One of Waller's teachers sponsored a class hollerin' contest with the official "Hollerin' Queen" Iris Turner paying a special visit to the school to officiate. Waller won his school contest.

"She told Waller he hollered so well that he ought to go to Spivey's Corner to the National Hollerin' contest," said Mrs. Austin.

"That's all he talked about from April on, that he was going to go to the National Hollerin' Contest. There was no getting around the fact that we were going to go to Spivey's Corner," she said. "We had a good time, it was a nice family event and there was a lot of people there."

"He probably learned his hollering from me because I've got four little boys and I holler a lot," she added with a laugh.

So does Waller believe he might be able to put his screaming skills to use later in life?

Court Says School Bus Fees Legal

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a case of particular importance to rural areas, the Supreme Court ruled today that states are not required to provide free bus transportation for poor school children.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices said North Dakota officials did not violate the rights of families that have trouble affording the busing charges.

"A state's decision to allow local school boards the option of charging patrons a user fee for bus service is constitutionally permissible," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor said for the court. "The Constitution does not require that such service be provided at all and it is difficult to imagine why choosing to offer the service should entail a constitutional obligation to offer it for free."

The ruling is in line with earlier court decisions upholding laws that treat the wealthy and poor differently. The court has said such laws are permissible if they serve a rational purpose.

North Dakota law provides free bus transportation to those living in districts that have reorganized to broaden their tax base and improve education. Only those districts that have not reorganized are allowed to charge parents for busing costs.

The law was intended to spur reorganization while assuring people in those districts they would not have to pay for transportation.

The court said the law is a rational approach to encouraging local school officials to reorganize.

The law was challenged by Paula Kadmas from rural Dickinson, N.D. She said the statute denied equal rights to her daughter, Sarita, because the family could not afford a $97 annual bus fee.

Ms. Kadmas has driven Sarita the 16 miles to school rather than pay the fee.

Bus service in Dickinson is offered for a fee to elementary school students who live more than three miles from school and to high school students who live more than four miles away.

The North Dakota Supreme Court had upheld the law.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, in a dissenting opinion, said, "Today, the court continues the retreat from the promise of equal educational opportunity by holding that a school district's refusal to allow an indigent child who lives 16 miles from the nearest school to use a schoolbus service without paying fees does not violate the Constitution."

He was joined by Justice William J. Brennan. Justices John Paul Stevens and Harry A. Blackmun dissented in a separate opinion.

In other action, the court: — Limited severely states' authority to lower the electric rates public utilities charge as a result of agreements with federal regulators.

The court, by a 6-3 vote, said Mississippi authorities are required to pass through to retail electricity customers a utility's federally determined share of the costs of constructing the Grand Gulf 1 nuclear plant.

— Limited the government's broad immunity from lawsuits, reinstating a suit by a couple fired on by a drunk, off-duty Navy medic in Maryland.

Cash Is Stolen

Investigators said six thefts, including $700 taken in a strong arm robbery incident, were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer R.L. Smith said Rayvone Hardee of Route 2, Ayden, told police $700 in cash was snatched from his hand at Fifth and Ford streets in an incident reported at 8:54 p.m., while Officer S.D. Hilliard said 10 cassette tapes were taken from a car parked at 2622 Mulberry Lane in an incident reported at 9:58 a.m.

Officer W.E. Davis said a bicycle was taken from Fairlane Farms off Hooker Road in an incident reported at 2:17 p.m., while Officer P.W. Worthington said a $225 gold chain and $7 in cash were taken from a vehicle parked on Dickinson Avenue near the Ninth Street intersection in an incident reported at 2:20 p.m.

Officer A.E. Batts said various items were taken from Aramani Shoes at Greenville Square Shopping Center in an incident reported at 10:02 p.m., while Officer W.S. Heath said a purse containing $9 in cash was taken from a car parked at Evans Park off Arlington Boulevard in an incident reported at 10:46 p.m.

Larceny Arrests

Three people were arrested by Greenville police Thursday on larceny charges in connection with three separate incidents reported to the department.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said Roy Clifton Jones III, 17, of 605 Eleanor St. was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of a pack of cigarettes from Kroger Sav-On on Greenville Boulevard about 12:27 p.m.

Officer C.M. Credle said Sherrie Lynn McGowan, 18, of Route 1, Grimsland, was charged in connection with the theft of a pair of shorts from the K mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center that was reported about 1:28 p.m.

According to Officer J.G. Bridges, Floyd Lee Daniels, 31, of 112 Greenville Blvd. was charged with the larceny of items from the Food Lion store at University Square off East 10th Street about 9:08 p.m.

Breaking-Entering

Three Beaufort County men were arrested by Greenville police before dawn Thursday on breaking, entering and larceny from auto charges in connection with the theft of items from three cars on Mulberry Lane.

Officer L.C. Overby said a life jacket, speaker and ski rope were taken from a boat at 33C Arlington Square Apartments on Mulberry Lane in an incident reported at 2:55 a.m.

Officer R.L. Vandiford said Dalmer Ray Dixon Jr., 18, and James Elmer Waters, 18, both of Washington N.C., and Floyd Ray Lilley Jr., 20, of Route 3, Washington, were charged with larceny in connection with the incident about 3 a.m.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said the men were each charged with three counts of breaking, entering and larceny from a vehicle in connection with other incidents that were reported about 3:34 a.m.

Sawyer said the incidents included: the theft of a stereo from a car parked at 1149 Mulberry Lane; the theft of a stereo, 50 cassette tapes and a gym bag containing racquetball rackets from a vehicle parked at 2711 Mulberry Lane, and the theft of a stereo from a vehicle parked in a lot off Mulberry Lane.

ECU Program Tries To Tie Students With Local Jobs

East Carolina University is trying to help meet growing financial needs of students by matching the university's manpower resources to community service.

The project, set up through ECU's Office of Cooperative Education, is designed to allow students to earn money while helping agencies deal with such problems as homelessness, illiteracy, child abuse, care of the elderly, dropouts, domestic violence and rural health care.

Both governmental and non-governmental agencies could utilize the 'tremendous manpower' available at a university such as ECU which has nearly 15,000 students, according to project officials.

ECU's Cooperative Education program has received two consecutive, one-year grants of $50,000 and $56,617 from the Department of Education's Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education. The funds are being used to implement the project, Compensated Community Services Opportunities.

"Although these funds may not be used as student wages, they provide university personnel to identify qualified students and to assist agencies in identifying alternative sources of funds for student compensation," said Caroline Smith, project administrator.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation has awarded another $10,000 to help underwrite student compensation matching college work-study money for those non-profit organizations and agencies previously unable to compensate.

"This support from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation will allow for the development of additional off-campus agency relationships, thereby providing a greater diversity of worthwhile employment opportunities for our college work-study students," said Ray Edwards, ECU student financial aid director.

In addition, civic organizations, clubs and associations are being contacted for assistance in job development and student compensation, Smith said. More and more agencies are becoming involved, she said.

"The CCSO program will not only give students a chance to earn money and pick up a most valuable kind of knowledge but will also give community service agencies a chance to select the most valuable kind of future employee," Dr. Betsy Harper, director of the Office of Cooperative Education, said.

Kenneth Dews, a Pitt County commissioner and member of the project's board of advisors, said CCSO is "a unique approach" to address student debt burden.

Officials said that nationwide, college student indebtedness is increasing and college students are being forced to put higher earnings or earnings in general ahead of their interest in service-oriented careers and in public service.

will have a "car-wash-a-thon" Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Teams of students will wash cars at Bethel Elementary, Pactolus Elementary and Stokes Elementary schools and at Staton House Fire Departments, Belvoir Fire Department and at The Fuel Doc at Greenville Boulevard and 10th Street.

The students have secured sponsors to pledge per car to earn money for band equipment. The car wash is free.

Committee To Meet

The executive committee of the Pitt County Council on Aging will hold its regular monthly meeting at noon Monday at the council's office in the Senior Center, 1717 W. 5th St.

Greenville Fliers Get Surprise Landing

ECU News Bureau

Paul Varlashkin, an ECU physics professor, was 9,000 feet up and eight miles out of Norfolk, Va., Tuesday, when the engine of the Piper Cherokee Arrow that he was flying did something an engine of a high performance airplane is not supposed to do.

It smoked, then sputtered and shook before the propeller came to a grinding halt. The engine had blown up and Varlashkin and his companion, Lawrence Taylor, a Greenville flight instructor, were going down long before they intended.

The two men were on a flight to Maine. Varlashkin, a pilot for two years, had never flown a plane like the Cherokee that can cruise at 165 mph. It was a learning flight for him and a business trip for Taylor.

When the engine stopped Varlashkin turned the controls over to the instructor and then got on the radio and called "May Day" to the airport at Norfolk. The airport was cleared and rescue crews and fire trucks were standing by.

"The haze was so thick we couldn't see where we were going," Valashkin said. "The airport had us on radar and they told which way to fly."

"We were six miles out, then five miles and four miles. The plane was falling about 800 feet a minute. We still couldn't see the runway. We couldn't see anything. Three miles and then two miles and we finally saw it," he said.

The pilot did a pinwheel dive and sat the plane gently on the runway and coasted over to the waiting fire trucks. A tow truck pulled them to a hangar.

In a couple of hours Valashkin was back on the controls of another airplane and he and Taylor were headed back to Greenville.

Officials Explain Reporting Rules

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act (SARA) should result in a "better informed, better prepared, safer community for everyone," Bobby Joyner, Pitt County's emergency services coordinator told newsmen at a media briefing Thursday.

The meeting, sponsored by the county's Local Emergency Planning Committee, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the Chemical Industry Council of North Carolina, was held in an effort to "make the news media aware of what SARA is ... how it works," and the need for the media to help educate the public on the law's "extensive reporting requirements," Joyner said.

Jon Holtzman, vice president of communications for the Washington-based Chemical Manufacturers Association, said SARA "covers any business or facility that handles hazardous material ... any one of more than 400 chemicals covered by the N.C. Hazardous Chemicals Right to Know Act.

So far, he said, there is only about

"20 percent compliance across the country" because "people are ignorant" of the law. "They need to be aware the law does cover them."

According to Holtzman, the law, known as the Emergency Planning and Community Right to Know Act of 1986, established new authorities for emergency planning and preparedness, community right to know reporting and chemical release reporting.

And the most immediate impact of Title III of SARA on the business community is the need for many companies — large and small — to interact with the local emergency planning committee to meet stringent new reporting laws.

The law calls for the local emergency planning committee to complete an emergency plan by October of this year.

It also requires facilities having hazardous substances regulated under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 to report the location and amounts of the chemicals to the LEPC by way of materials safety data sheets and other reports.

In all, Holtzman said, some 1.4 million facilities across the nation are covered by the law.

Vance Keith, assistant director of the state's Division of Emergency Management, said the big problem is "how do we get the word out and tell these people they have to report? There is no data base" so the state doesn't know the number that should report. Even so, he said, North Carolina is "light years ahead of a lot of other states," as far as SARA compliance is concerned.

But he suggested that businesses who have questions about their compliance with the SARA law can call 1-800-451-1403 for information.

What happens if businesses don't report? "They can be fined up to $25,000 a day," Keith said.

Dean's List Honor

Debra A. Joyner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.J. Joyner of Fountain, has been named to the North Carolina Wesleyan College's academic Dean's List for the spring semester.

To be eligible for inclusion on the Dean's List, a student must carry a minimum of 12 semester hours and must maintain a 3.25 grade point average with no grade lower than a C.

Program Participants

Renee Lao of Greenville and Leticia McCotter of Grifton will participate in the fourth annual Carolina Summer: Arts and Sciences for Academically Able High School Students program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill July 3-23.

The three-week academic and cultural enrichment program, sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences at UNC, is designed for hard-working, academically-motivated students. The 52 participants from 12 states will live in a residence hall, take two courses, explore the campus and participate in special daily prospective sessions.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

WORLDS APART!

When home buyers buy and home sellers sell, would you say they share the same needs? Even if they are friends or relatives, sellers and buyers live in two completely different worlds, at least during the short period in which they are participants in a real estate transaction.

Just take a look. Buyers want to pay the lowest price - sellers want the highest. Buyers want seller financing with a low down-payment - sellers want cash for their home. The buyers don't want to pay any closing costs - neither do the sellers. The buyers want the swing set in the yard and the gas barbecue grill on the patio - the sellers are adamantly opposed. But, why is there so much conflict in their positions?

Being the largest, single purchase normally made in a lifetime, it is common for buyers to feel a high sense of anxiety. "What if we're making a mistake?" they say to each other. The sellers have high stakes too. Every concession made represents dollars lost.

To calm frayed nerves, place your favorite real estate agent in the middle. Used to working with the active emotions of both buyers and sellers, your agent, while representing the sellers, can help make the purchasers' homebuying decision a pleasant and rewarding experience. Whether selling or buying a home, take advantage of the unique talents of a real estate professional.

Striking the best bargain for both buyer and seller is very rewarding. Please call me for smooth transactions.

The Hillsdale Community Club will meet at the home of Rex Fleming, Route 4, Greenville, on the old River Road, at 4 p.m. Saturday.

Society Recognized

A business club at East Carolina University that used T-shirts and tours to recruit new members has received a national award for its membership drive.

The ECU student chapter of the Society for Advancement of Management won the society's 1988 membership contest by increasing its membership from about 25 to more than 75 members. A check for $250 was awarded to the ECU chapter for its membership efforts.

Dr. John D. Longhill, an ECU business professor and chapter adviser, said the students promoted the chapter by giving away T-shirts to members. He said monthly meetings that included tours of local industries also helped increase membership.

The society is an international organization for business managers headquartered in Cincinnati. The student chapter at ECU is comprised of business students who concentrate in management in their business studies.

Carla Whitfield of Elm City is the student president.

Conference Winner

Donald M. King of La Grange won first place for impromptu speaking in the Phi Beta Lambda state leadership conference and will compete at the national conference in Cincinnati Tuesday through July 2.

Phi Beta Lambda is the college branch of the high school educational organization, Future Business Leaders of America.

King, a junior at East Carolina University, is majoring in business with a concentration in marketing. He transferred to ECU from Wayne Community College where he received the associate of arts degree.

He won first place out of a field of 18 contestants at the state conference and will compete with 40 other contestants for the national award.

King served as parliamentarian during the 1987-88 school year for the ECU chapter of Phi Beta Lambda. The honor fraternity is open to all majors and performs service projects as well as stressing business education.

Fish Deaths Linked To Disease

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Thousands of fish have died in the Pamlico River over the last four weeks from disease, a biologist with the Division of Marine Fisheries said this morning.

Jess Hawley, who termed the kill "very large," said most of the fish involved were menhaden. He said the deaths were due "primarily ... to disease, ulcerated mycosis."

The kills, Hawley said, are occurring in the Blounts Bay-South Creek area. But he said, "We're also seeing fish dieing in the Pungo River."

Hawley, a member of a special team assembled to study fish kills and other problems along the Pamlico, said "for the last two to three weeks, we've been involved with intensive fish disease studies." He said the veterinary medical school at N.C. State University has assigned three people to work on it full time for at least the next month.

As part of the studies, Hawley said, the team has been "placing tanks along areas of the river (bank) ... putting fish in the tanks to see if they develop disease (as well as) placing pens in the river water," to see if the fish in the pens develop disease.

He said the team is also "doing net surveys to determine what areas have the highest prevalence of disease."

Water quality tests conducted on the river Tuesday and again Thursday "found low, low oxygen content in the water in an area from Durham Creek to Bath Creek," Hawley said. But "the fish we saw dying were upstream of that yesterday and the oxygen level (in those areas) was fine. The primary cause for the kills is disease," Hawley said. "Low oxygen might be stressing the fish more, but it's primarily disease."

According to Hawley, "We know the disease primarily is the result of fungal infection. We don't know if the fungi initiate the disease, but it's the main organism contributing to the advancement of the lesion."

Robeson Judgeship Settled

RALEIGH (AP) — State legislators representing Robeson County said today they had reached a compromise that likely will make Joe Freeman Britt the county's next senior resident Superior Court judge.

Under the agreement, however, Britt — unlike other senior resident judges — would not be permitted to appoint the staff of the soon-to-be-created public defender's office in the racially divided county.

Instead, the appointment would be made by a second judge whom Gov. Jim Martin would designate later this year. Martin has agreed to appoint a Lumbee Indian to the judgeship.

The debate over who would be the senior resident judge has posed a major obstacle to the Legislature's attempts to satisfy Robeson County's white, black and Indian populations in the wake of the death of Indian activist Julian Pierce, killed last spring in what authorities called a domestic quarrel.

Pierce had sought the Democratic nomination for one of nine Superior Court judgeships created last year in areas with high concentrations of minorities as the Legislature sought to increase the number of blacks and Indians on the bench.

Pierce's death left Britt, a white who is unpopular with Robeson County minorities, the only candidate for the judgeship.

Legislative leaders agreed to seek creation of a second judgeship whose first occupant Martin would appoint. Under the compromise reached by the Robeson legislative delegation, Martin's appointee would serve two years and then stand for election.

The agreement calls for the senior resident judge to perform all the duties the state Constitution prescribes for the office — appointing magistrates, setting bail policy and handling the civil court docket.

The task of appointing public defenders was assigned to the senior resident judge by statute, not the Constitution. Thus, the Legislature can allow the second judge to choose the public defender by passing a law to that effect.

The compromise was worked out Wednesday by the four lawmakers whose districts include Robeson County: Sen. David Parnell and Reps. Pete Hasty, Dan DeVane and Sidney Locks, all Democrats.

Locks, a black, opposed allowing Britt to be the senior resident judge while Parnell, Hasty and DeVane argued that he should get the designation. Their argument had stalled proposed legislation to create the public defender's office and the second judgeship.

Locks said he was not completely satisfied with the agreement, "but we've got to go on. We can't hold the General Assembly hostage while we get everything we want. We just have to take some losses and proceed."

Reaction to the compromise in Robeson probably will be "mixed," he said.

Parnell said he was satisfied and that he had notified Britt, who "did not raise any objection to it. ... I think he is willing to accept it and he will be, in my opinion, the senior judge down there."

Pitt Industry Hunter Cites Gains In Health Care Field

One of this nation's most rapidly changing industries in the latter part of this decade has been in the field of health-care, and Pitt County's industry hunters are tapping the area's medical progress as a means to attract newcomers.

John D. Chaffee, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission, set the trend for that approach in presenting facts and forecasts about the health-care industry in general and in Pitt County-Greenville in particular during a speech to the Boston Rotary Club this week.

Chaffee noted that advances in health-care have been an important factor in changing the face of Greenville during the past several years. Statistics indicate one of every seven workers in Pitt County currently is employed in the health-care industry or an affiliated business.

"Health-care is now a major issue not only here, but all over, and it promises to be one of the hottest subjects in November's Presidential election, Chaffee told approximately 100 people at the Massachusetts meeting.

He told the group the dominant health-care category in terms of costs is hospital care, which he said will soon reach $200 billion nationally.

"In only the past few years, we've witnessed competition in health-care that's causing the industry to adopt new strategies," he said.

"Think about it — 10 years ago, advertising and marketing campaigns by physicians, chiropractors and hospitals were unheard of, even considered unprofessional; today they are commonplace."

"Watch for preventive medicine to make greater inroads as a cost-effective approach to health-related services," he added.

Chaffee also illustrated Pitt County's growth in health-care fields by focusing on the strides being made by Pitt County Memorial Hospital, which he noted "will soon be expanded to 700 beds," the East Carolina University School of Medicine, the East Carolina Medical Park and the new biotechnology center, as well as local companies such as Burroughs-Wellcome and Carolina Medical Products.

"It was definitely a worthwhile event," Chaffee said following his speech. "This is a good way of meeting business decision-makers in a lucrative Northeast market and letting them know that Pitt County is a progressive, economically diverse and growing area."

Yard-Sale Jackpot

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Charles and Sandy Goldthrite hit the yard-sale jackpot this week, raking in $7,500 for a glass paperweight that cost them only $4.

"I was so nervous ...," Sandy Goldthrite said Thursday. "I don't have any fingernails left."

She got the news Wednesday from Sotheby's auction house in New York. Her 4-inch-long, cornucopia-styled item sold for $8,250 at an auction featuring only paperweights.

"It was a nervous and exciting day," said Mrs. Goldthrite, 40. "I'd been marking off my calendar ..."

The Goldthrites, who operate a booth at the Shelby Antiques Mall, bought the paperweight about 2½ years ago at a Shelby yard sale.

"We'd been reading up on French paperweights," Mrs. Goldthrite said. "We thought it might have been one of those."

It wasn't. But it was made in New England about 1860. The Goldthrites found out in November when Sotheby's appraised nearly 1,000 items at a Shelby fundraiser for the Cleveland County Historical Museum.

The money from the auction — minus Sotheby's $750 fee — will arrive in about a month. Mrs. Goldthrite said she and her husband probably will invest the profit in more antiques.

And they'll keep following a strategy that pays — Saturday yard sales.

Karate School Gets Special Use Permit

Members of the Greenville Board of Adjustment voted Thursday to issue a special use permit allowing a karate school to exist on Evans Street.

The board voted to grant the permit to Mary Ann Rose and Walter J. Pories to operate a karate school on the west side of the 1100 block of Evans Street, adjoining the Anderson Barber and Beauty Lounge. The property is zoned CDF (downtown commercial fringe).

The board also granted a special use permit to Cynthia D. Best to place a mobile home on Lot 77 of Hillsdale subdivision located behind the Pitt-Greenville Airport, approximately 160 feet south of SR 1420.

The board, however, denied Ms. Best's request for a variance from a 30-foot front yard setback requirement and a 20-foot rear yard setback requirement in order to place a 70-foot mobile home on a 105-foot lot. The property is zoned RA-20 (residential-agricultural).

Meanwhile, the board granted a special use permit to Melvin Lynch to allow the placement of a mobile home on the north side of SR 1708, approximately .1 mile east of the intersection of SR 1709 and SR 1708. The property is zoned RA-20.

The board agreed to amend a special use permit issued in February to Linwood Stroud and Greenville Eastgate Inc. to allow additional service bays for an automobile operation on Mosely Drive; granted a special use permit to William Spital and Bennett La Prade to allow a game room to be used in conjunction with a restaurant at 118 E. Fifth St.; denied an appeal by Southern States Cooperative Inc. regarding a decision by the building inspector to classify recent improvements made to the Southern States lot at Line Avenue and Chestnut Street as a structure and not a fence, and denied a subsequent request by Southern States for a variance from the 50-foot front yard setback requirement.

Microwave Zap Kills Yeast Fungus

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Zapping freshly laundered underpants in the microwave may prevent the recurring yeast infections that plague millions of women, researchers say.

A five-minute microwave treatment at high power kills the fungus that causes vaginal infections in 20 million women yearly, said Byron J. Masterson, chairman of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Florida.

The underwear must be cotton and still damp, he warned. "Not your Frederick's of Hollywood — no-no," Masterson said. "The bunny suits would probably go ka-boom in your microwave."

Yeast infections can cause irritation and discharge.

The study was published recently in the Journal of Reproductive Medicine.

Previous studies have found that yeast, or candida albicans, survives laundering in detergent, even in hot water. That's because candida is killed at 154 to 163 degrees, while household water heaters are set at about 120 degrees.

Other studies have shown that boiling underpants kills the yeast. "But how many women do you know are going to boil their underwear?" Masterson asked.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

An Overrun

Solid Waste Serious State Dilemma

North Carolina is still grappling with the problem of where to locate a low-level radioactive waste and toxic waste disposal facility.

Obviously no county is enthusiastic about hosting such a facility even though the state is set to offer financial incentives to do so.

But where to put toxic and radioactive waste is not the only disposal problem North Carolina has, however. The regular garbage that we produce everyday is about to overrun us, and nobody knows who is going to pay the cost of more expensive disposal methods which will be required in the future. Sen. Wanda Hunt, D-Moore is calling for a state revolving fund to help counties which must provide for new disposal methods.

There will be a lot of help needed. The North Carolina League of Municipalities reports that out of 119 landfills, 63 will last less than five years. Twelve of those have only two years of use left. North Carolina, which is still a state of diffused population, produces 25 million pounds of solid waste each day — nearly four pounds per person.

Government is looking at every possibility to make solid waste disposal more efficient and reduce the cost. What is encouraged most is recycling. Landfills, after all, which once cost $10,000 per acre now cost up to $125,000 per acre.

Bills in the Legislature would establish a $10 million loan fund to provide emergency assistance to counties which must quickly meet environmental regulations.

For North Carolina the problem of solid waste disposal is interlocked. What an upstream community does, or does not do, affects its neighbors. Thus the landfill efforts are going to have to be coordinated. Here in eastern North Carolina the problem is particularly of concern due to the sandy soil and the high water table which can be affected by improper landfills.

The problems of solid waste disposal are now of major concern to North Carolina. The bill to create a revolving loan fund on the state level can provide some relief for hard pressed counties. If North Carolina doesn't want to find itself in the same predicament as Long Island, N.Y. — putting its garbage on a barge and shipping it around the world in search of a home — some immediate direction is necessary.

In the long range, however, innovative approaches will have to be found to disposing of a mountain of waste and at the same time avoiding harm to our groundwater resources.

Removing Barriers

Summit Yields Important Agreement

President Reagan has concluded the final economic summit in which he will participate with the end of a meeting in Toronto.

The president left the Toronto summit with words of praise from his fellow heads of states.

Particularly cordial was the relationship with Canadian Prime Minister Britain Mulroney. A major event was the negotiation of a Canadian-United States free trade agreement which is seen as removing most trade barriers between the two North American neighbors who have virtually unguarded borders.

The agreement is not universally hailed in Canada, where some feel it will Americanize Canada. But the agreement should mean a free flow of goods between the two nations that will strengthen them both in the global markets. That is good economic policy for two neighboring world powers.

The president addressed the fears of Americanization by saying that Canada itself has distinct cultures which have traded while still respecting cultural differences. That is accurate, but some changes are inevitable.

The agreement, and European Community plans to lower internal trade barriers, concerned Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita of Japan who saw the possibility of its excluding Japan from markets in North America.

Nevertheless, Prime Minister Takeshita had reason to be pleased with the summit. He got most of what he wanted from the negotiations.

The agreement, which must be approved by the Canadian Parliament and the U.S. Congress, is significant. It would remove tariffs between the U.S. and Canada over the next 10 years. Someday it may be viewed as the most important and far-reaching development of President Reagan's final economic summit.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Some time ago one letter writer complained that Greenville was developing a reputation as a "speed trap." Well, I have conducted an (unscientific) poll of persons in near and far away cities. Most of them know nothing of our "reputation."

A close look at the District Court "write-up" doesn't seem to be statistically useful. Of course all "stoppers" by police and charges filed may not be published.

In your editorial column a while back you spoke of some of the symptoms that Greenville exhibits which herald our graduation from a town to a city. One, I might add to it, is a responsibility to its citizenry to keep taxes (and fines) as low as possible by governing a majority of the city's operating revenue from "them" not from "us."

While in Greensboro last week I caught a local news flash which gave me an idea on how "we" can collect dollars from "them." Here's Greensboro's plan: Designate approximately five areas in which "speed traps" may be set up. Rotate only among these sites. Announce daily on TV/radio the speed trap's location. If someone misses the broadcast they may call the police department for the location.

This was a real broadcast and the best I could figure, was in response to people complaining of the various speed traps as "unfair" (unbelievable isn't it?). By the way, the radar units will be concealed (still) under this plan.

Perhaps Greenville is ready for such a cosmopolitan approach to revenue generation. Personally, I'm not a "leadfoot," but a lot of my friends could use a break like this.

On the negative side, Greenville might develop a reputation (like Greensboro) as a real speed trap. Who cares? Greensboro seems to be doing all right.

To the editor:

Can misinformation and promulgation of hysteria be anything but waste and any less hazardous to our well-being than Edgecombe County's hazardous waste proposal? I am more concerned by the way our county leadership and newspaper responded to the waste proposal than anything that was (probably) in the proposal itself. "Probably" because, unfortunately, I never actually got to read the proposal nor to be informed about such waste dump policies from the best communication vehicle in the community, The Daily Reflector. I was only audience to Pitt commissioner's and Reflector editorial's outcries of "betrayal of trust" on the part of Edgecombe's commissioners. This was a promulgation of their own brand of hysteria and misleading in a self-serving way. In actuality, the citizens effectively exercised the right of comment in the ensuing public outcry and always reserved the right to a formal referendum, if necessary.

While everyone is still breathing a sign of relief that the dump may not be in their backyards, should we consider this a real victory? It wasn't won with accurate information or thoughtful, rational dialogue; it was won with generation of fear. Fear does not breed judicious decision-making. The scare tactics employed were calculated more to herd the public into panic rather than lead them to calm deliberation and responsible choice. For the future well-being of our community, shouldn't we be as concerned about the process of decisions as we are about the outcome of decisions?

It would be a sad irony if the dump is ultimately dumped on us. Then tell me how you (who were so self-righteously indignant and used such manipulative tactics) are going to nurture an environment of rational thinking and thoughtful discussion essential to sound policy making? We know where your passions lay but where were your heads?

More Cheating Means No Agreements

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has privately warned Mikhail Gorbachev that he will agree to no new treaty reducing long-range strategic missiles so long as the Soviet Union keeps cheating on the 1972 ABM (anti-ballistic missile) agreement, a decision dooming a START treaty in the administration's fading days and probably for long afterwards.

The president's message to the Soviet ruler came during one of their summit sessions in Moscow. As described by a secret State Department summary early this month, Reagan said the U.S. "could sign no new treaty in the strategic area while their violations continue."

But a senior official told us that language was "mild" compared to the words actually used in talking to Gorbachev and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze by both Reagan and George Shultz. Not only was the secretary of state present but he gave Reagan his full backing.

The president's message to Gorbachev signals the revival of a powerful Reagan thesis abandoned when it came to the just-ratified INF pact eliminating intermediate range missiles: New nuclear treaties are bad business until the Soviets show a willingness to abide by existing treaties. The objection is to Soviet violations of the ABM treaty, mainly the giant Krasnoyarsk radar station in south-central Siberia.

Krasnoyarsk violations are nothing new, but Reagan publicly calling attention to them is. With the INF treaty now law, the long period of procrastination within the administration on treaty-cheating may be ending. Indecision and bureaucratic in-fighting, aided by the president's zeal to get his INF agreement, have delayed for almost a year the third five-year review of the ABM pact since it was ratified in 1972.

Reagan knew that if he protested too loudly about Soviet violations, he would be strengthening the anti-INF senators in the ratification process. Now he acts not just willing but eager to press the cheating charges.

Under a mandatory U.S.-Soviet review of both nations' adherence to the ABM pact that, because of the delays, is now due just before the November election, Reagan may be getting ready to charge Moscow with a "material breach" of the treaty unless the giant radar is dismantled. That could be the precursor of outright U.S. abrogation of the treaty, long demanded by arms control hard-liners but, until now, not seriously considered by the administration.

As part of the belated toughness, the White House has decided tentatively to establish a new and unprecedented high-level commission to handle the ABM treaty review. In contrast, both previous five-year reviews were performed by the comparatively low-level, Geneva-based Standing Consultative Commission (SCC), composed of U.S. and Soviet nuclear specialists.

Because the Soviets have failed to make any visible efforts to clear up Krasnoyarsk or any other U.S. cheating allegations, despite pressure from Americans on the SCC, the president is expected to base the new high-level review team here in Washington. The aim would be to give it more political clout and greater prestige, signaling a more serious American approach to ABM treaty violations.

In making such moves, the president is armed with massive votes in Congress a year ago that condemned Soviet refusal to dismantle the Krasnoyarsk radar. The House voted to declare the radar a clear ABM violation by 418 to 0, the Senate by 92 to 3.

With backing like that, Reagan's new determination to make Krasnoyarsk a symbol of how hard it is to do business with the Soviets could put Gorbachev back on the defensive and terminate the long Ron-and-Mikhail arms control dance. But the story could take another 11th-hour twist if the unpredictable Soviet leader stuns the world by tearing down Krasnoyarsk.

Like Caesar's Wife, Beyond Reproach

Roy Dyson ate breakfast one morning, compliments of a truck manufacturer, then gave a 10-minute chit-chat on defense policy. Two thousand greenbacks crossed Dyson's palm.

That afternoon, the representative voted in the House Armed Services Committee to tell the Army that the truck company's trucks were what the Army needed regardless of what the Army wanted. But, of course, the 2,000 bucks were not bribe money, only an honorarium for the "speech" on defense policy. After all, Dyson had supported that company before, and the two grand did not make him change his vote.

That may be the case, but I can tell you now that if I, or any of the government contractors I have worked for, did that for an official of any government agency — except Congress — a lot of us could go to jail!

Let me give you an example of what the law requires a government contractor to do. I am a training specialist. Some years ago I worked for a company that provided training for a government agency in the Baltimore area. We worked on site at the agency's office. My company provided free coffee and tea for the agency's employees at their Washington area main office, and did the same for us in Baltimore. However, we charged the government people we worked closely with day in and day out for any coffee they drank.

It wasn't that we were penny-pinching; we just wanted to obey the law and avoid any appearance of impropriety. It may seem ridiculous to suspect that someone would sell out for a cup of coffee, but the law is clear.

A private corporation may take clients out to lavish dinners, on all-expenses-paid trips, and provide all sorts of freebies and perks. This kind of "schmoozing" may lead to bribery and fraud, but mostly it simply creates good will and greases the tracks for the future. However, by law, I cannot even pick up the lunch tab of a government employee I have worked next to for a year, unless the government employee is from Congress. There is no room for "honorariums" in my line of work.

People from government agencies and government contractors who work together get to be friendly, like any group of people who work together for months, even years. Still, there is always a dividing line that must not be crossed. One small infraction can lead to canceled contracts, blacklisting for future contracts, fines and even jail. Unless the government person is from Congress.

Congress has exempted itself from a raft of major laws and regulations that we common citizens must obey. They range from regulations concerning safe workplaces for employees to equal employment opportunities regardless of race or sex.

Congressmen also exempted themselves from many provisions of the federal acquisition regulations regarding what Webster's defines as "a reward, usually for services on which custom or propriety forbids a price to be set."

Perhaps Dyson, and other elected officials, should re-evaluate honorariums, especially during a legislative session, or when the payoff comes from those who might directly benefit from legislative action. Elected officials should share at least one attribute with Caesar's wife, that of being beyond reproach.

Woman Held In Kidnap Claimed Baby Was Hers

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — An hour after Jason McClure was taken from his mother at High Point Regional Hospital, Brenda Joyce Nobles showed a neighbor a baby she said she had delivered that morning. "She said the doctor had let her come straight home after having the baby," neighbor Linda Drake said in an interview Thursday. "I knew she couldn't have kids, 'cause she told me she had herself fixed." Mrs. Nobles, 37, had had a hysterectomy, according to Annie Jackson, her great aunt. Ms. Drake, the mother of two girls, notified police about the mysterious baby Tuesday night because "I would want somebody to do the same thing if that was my baby," she said. Acting on Ms. Drake's tip, police traced Mrs. Nobles to the home of her boyfriend, where they found four-day-old Jason unharmed in a closet Wednesday. Mrs. Nobles was charged Wednesday night with first-degree kidnapping and her 19-year-old daughter, Sharon Slaydon, was charged with aiding and abetting the kidnapping. Both faced first court appearances today. Mrs. Nobles' stepson, 17-year-old Jamie Wishon, said he unwittingly babysat Jason Monday night while he and his sister watched a television newscast about the abduction. "I probably would have turned them in if I had known," Wishon told the Greensboro newspaper Thursday. "Kidnapping is a serious crime. I wouldn't want anybody to do that to me."

Wishon said his stepmother told him Monday she was babysitting the child. He said the baby slept on the couch beside him while he and his sister, Leigh Anne Wishon, 16, watched a newscast about the abduction. "I'd been kidding my sister that they kidnapped it," Wishon said. "I had no idea it was him." Wishon said he never believed his stepmother was pregnant, as she had told others, because he had been told about her hysterectomy. "She's been telling people a bunch of bull," he said. "I haven't been keeping up with it."

Mrs. Nobles' boyfriend, Zeke Owens, 69, said Thursday that Mrs. Nobles had showed him a newborn boy Tuesday afternoon. "She said, 'How do you like your new son,'" Owens said. "I was shocked." "Two months ago when she went to the doctor, she came back and she said, 'I'm pregnant,'" Owens said. "She looks pregnant. She's gained about 65 pounds in the last three months. She told everybody she was pregnant."

The Greensboro newspaper said an unnamed law enforcement source said the kidnapper had picked out Jason during visiting hours the night before she spirited him away in a brown paper bag.

"She went over Sunday during visitation hours, looked at babies, excluded blacks, females, and picked a white male," the newspaper quoted the source as saying.

The source said the kidnapper returned the next morning, changed into a nurse's uniform carried in a brown paper bag and then went to Renee McClure's room. She told Mrs. McClure Jason needed to be weighed, then put him in the bag and carried him from the hospital.

Authorities Thursday said that Mrs. Nobles was "almost a textbook case" of the emotionally troubled baby-snatcher.

"Our theory is ... what the FBI psychologists told us from the beginning (before the baby was found) — she had deep-seated emotional problems, a terribly deep desire that she needed to fulfill by having a baby," police Capt. Ronald McGuire said in a telephone interview Thursday.

FBI Agent Supervisor Daniel Wozniak said: "It was almost a textbook case of what has happened in the past, as far as the motivation for doing it."

"It's my belief she took that baby for herself to raise and nurture for her own baby," he said.

Hospital spokeswoman Marilyn McClellan said Thursday that Mrs. McClure and Jason would not leave for home until today.

Hospital doctors "wanted (them) to have an extra day to get over all of the excitement — it was not a medical reason," she said. She said mother and baby were "doing fine. The baby slept through the night, and the mother's doing well," she said.

Martin Seeks Federal OK For Beans To Be Produced In 'Fallow' Fields

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — In the face of severe drought, Gov. Jim Martin says he has asked federal officials to allow soybean farmers to cultivate land previously designated as fallow. Martin said Thursday he had spoken with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng and "he's not sure that he would be able to do that." Lyng planned to discuss Martin's request with his aides, the governor said.

The move, proposed by the Governor's Task Force on the Rural Economy, would help farmers avoid feed shortages for livestock and poultry and cushion what may be an increase in the retail price of agricultural products, Martin said.

Planting more acreage would allow farmers to benefit from the inflated futures market and maintain export markets.

During the 1986 drought, farmers in Midwestern states shipped hay to North Carolina to feed starving livestock. Those states are bearing the brunt of this year's rainfall shortage and are in no position to help again, Martin said.

"You don't have that kind of reserve of national goodwill and sharing of resources that we had then," he said. "We will be looking to see what resources within our state, say in the eastern part of the state, might be available to the west, as well as to states like Ohio and Kentucky that helped us in 1986."

Martin Thursday also asked the Legislature to more than double the state emergency fund.

"We can expect severe hardships on North Carolina communities unless the weather conditions improve substantially," Martin said in a memorandum to legislative leaders.

At a news conference, the governor said he has asked lawmakers to increase the emergency and contingency fund from $1.25 million to $3 million for fiscal 1988-89, which begins July 1, with a stipulation that at least $2.5 million would be used for emergencies such as the drought.

The fund is controlled by the Council of State, which consists of Martin and nine other elected state officials.

Martin also recommended that $5 million appropriated to promote industrial development in 1987 be made available to cities and counties to help save jobs imperiled by natural disasters such as the drought.

The money, which is in the Department of Commerce budget, was intended to be doled out for water and sewer projects in counties where new jobs are created. The Martin plan would provide credits for counties that avoid drought-related job losses.

Martin also proposed that a loan program started last year to help local governments expand their water and sewer systems be amended to make it easier for communities with emergency needs to get grants and loans.

Martin said he had not spoken personally with legislative leaders about his funding proposals and realized that much of the work on next year's budget had been finished, "but I know they won't want to ignore this."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who presides over the Senate, said he had referred Martin's memo to the Senate Appropriations Committee for consideration.

"Certainly we want to do all we can to help those people having problems with the drought," Jordan said. But increasing the emergency fund would require cutting the funding of another project or program, he said.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Base Budget Commission, said he had not received Martin's memo but that the requests might have come too late.

"We've been here three weeks now," Rand said. "This drought did not suddenly come upon us. We keep trying to get the budget done ... so we can get out of here and he keeps adding things."

Other measures may be decided upon at a June 30 meeting of state and local officials, water system operators and other experts, Martin said. Participants will be able to make suggestions for the contingency plan being drafted by the state in case the drought reaches emergency proportions.

"We don't pretend that we've thought of everything that might work right now," he said. "We know some things we can do and we want to be in a position to do those if it turns out those are the only good ideas."

Although eastern North Carolina has largely been spared the ravages of the drought that has plagued Midwestern states, western North Carolina has been hit hard, Martin said.

"We see it already as a serious matter but growing to very serious proportions," he said.

Martin, Jordan Set For Second Debate

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan say they're ready for the second debate of their gubernatorial campaign but that it may deal largely with issues raised before.

"There have been so many things that have been stressed before that I expect will be stressed again," Martin said Thursday, adding that he might use the occasion to propose new initiatives. "I have one or two matters in mind that I've been working on that I could just as well unveil on that occasion as some other time."

Jordan later told reporters he hoped the debate would "show the differences between Bob Jordan and Jim Martin. ... That's what I hope to get out of it. I hope we get a clear identification as to the differences between the two of us. I'm looking forward to it."

At his weekly news conference, Martin declined to discuss in detail his strategy for Saturday's clash with Jordan during the annual convention of the North Carolina Bar Association at Myrtle Beach, S.C.

On another subject, Martin said he had lobbied nine senators by telephone this week in support of Sen. Jesse Helms' filibuster of Sen. Terry Sanford's bill that would set aside additional wilderness acreage in western North Carolina.

Martin has sharpened the tone of his stump rhetoric in recent weeks. In a speech to the state GOP convention, he resurrected Jordan's reference to "rednecks" and his statement that he wouldn't discuss publicly some issues on which he agreed with blacks, accusing Jordan of having a "hidden agenda."

Martin said he hadn't decided whether to ask Jordan about the "hidden agenda" on Saturday and would not speculate about the tone of the encounter, but said sharp exchanges between the two were nothing new.

"The truth is there have been some strong comments on both sides throughout the last couple of years," Martin said.

"It's been interesting that usually whenever my opponent has a political speech in which he blasts me, that's just covered as news. And then after about three of those I fire back just to let him know I'm paying attention and that gets editorial comment that I'm getting too hard on the lieutenant governor," Martin said.

The Republican governor said he would not return to Raleigh in time to attend Saturday night's fund-raiser featuring retired Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, who is appearing on behalf of GOP attorney general candidate Sam Wilson and lieutenant gubernatorial candidate Jim Gardner.

On the wilderness issue, Martin said he had telephoned nine senators at Helms' request as the Senate debated the Sanford bill on permanently insulating from development a portion of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park.

Helms and Sanford are pushing rival programs for protecting the land in question. The Sanford version would set aside a bigger area as wilderness and would not allow construction of a road around Fontana Lake in Swain County.

Federal officials promised the road 45 years ago when the lake was built, so local residents could have access to their ancestors' gravesites.

Helms' bill would construct the road; Sanford's would give Swain County $11 million as compensation for the land taken in the 1940s.

Tax Break Gains Senate's Approval

RALEIGH (AP) — An income tax break for RJR-Nabisco and other multistate businesses with a major presence in North Carolina awaited its final hurdle today as lawmakers embraced the plan as a boon to economic growth.

The bill, which the House approved easily, gained 44-0 Senate approval Thursday. A final vote was scheduled for today. If approved the measure would become law.

Several senators asked questions about the bill, but no one spoke against the election-year tax reduction. "We feel it is tremendously advantageous to the state of North Carolina," said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Currently, North Carolina bases corporate income tax on the portion of a company's sales, payroll and property holdings in North Carolina, with all three factors given equal weight.

Under the bill, sales would be given twice as much weight in the formula as the other two factors — reducing taxes for many multi-state corporations with a major presence in North Carolina.

"In effect, what it says is if you will bring your plants into North Carolina you will end up paying a lower income tax to the state ...," Rauch said.

"We believe that this could make North Carolina even more attractive to corporations than it is now, and hopefully they will bring their plants and their payroll here," he said.

Eleven other states have adjusted their tax codes to give greater weight to sales, Rauch said.

He conceded the bill would result in a revenue loss for the state for about three years but said a provision requiring businesses to increase the amount of estimated taxes they pay quarterly will provide a temporary windfall to cushion the blow.

By the fifth year the plan is in effect, he said, it is believed the change will have attracted enough new industry to broaden the tax base and more than offset the losses, which he said never would exceed $24 million in any year.

Sexual Assault

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An Army sergeant remained jailed without bond Thursday after being accused of raping a female Marine recruit at a processing center in Charlotte.

Sgt. Rickie Eugene Maddox, 30, of Hickory was arrested early Thursday on a sexual assault charge after a 22-year-old recruit told authorities a soldier at the processing center pressed her against a wall in an isolated hallway Wednesday and raped her.

The processing center occupies the lower level of the federal courthouse in Charlotte.

According to an affidavit filed in U.S. District Court, female recruits have made other complaints of sexual harassment against Maddox. He was disciplined by the military in February for "having touched a female recruit in a sexual and harassing manner," according to the affidavit.

Contaminated

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The water supply of a number of families in a Burlington community contain extremely high levels of benzene and dichloroethane, potentially cancer-causing compounds, according to officials in the state epidemiology lab and other experts.

The presence of the chemicals has been determined through repeated tests taken by the Alamance County Health Department and tested in the state epidemiology lab.

Despite high levels of dichloroethane, and in particular, benzene — which has been demonstrated as a cancer-causing compound — neither state nor local agencies have told affected residents in the Hopedale community that the water should not be used, residents say.

Black Dance

DURHAM (AP) — Dances by four black choreographers, including some dances which have not been seen for decades, are being performed at the American Dance Festival, culminating the first year of a three-year project on the black tradition in American modern dance.

Choreographers Pearl Primus, Talley Beatty, Donald McKayle and Eleo Pomare were invited to set dances on the companies of their choice.

The dances will be performed through Saturday. In addition to the performances, ADF has scheduled a two-week series of seminars, panel discussions and dance demonstrations, free to the public, at historically black colleges and universities in the Piedmont region.

Pianist Dies

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Pianist Gary Towlen, who was praised by the New York Times as "a major talent" and a "powerhouse," died of AIDS Wednesday at the age of 45.

Towlen, who made his Carnegie Hall debut at age 12 and was touring Europe by the time he was 15, came to Charlotte in 1974 as artist-in-residence at Central Piedmont Community College.

Towlen, who died at Presbyterian Hospital, was diagnosed as having AIDS in February 1987.

Agreement

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina A&T University and the Farmers Home Administration have joined in a cooperative agreement designed to assist minority and other limited resources farmers.

Officials hope the venture will improve the farm income of FmHA borrowers through better management and financial analysis.

The university's staff will work with 15 to 20 farmers in each of four counties — Bertie, Caswell, Person and Robeson — in improving their business management, marketing and record keeping skills.

Penalties

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — The State Department of Natural Resources and Community Development is seeking $21,186 in penalties from Central Carolina Properties, alleging that the Lee County company violated sedimentation and erosion control regulations in the construction of a mobile home park.

The NRCD filed a complaint June 14 against Central Carolina Properties and its owners, Vernon S. Porter and Richard B. Porter, both of Lee County, and Margaret A. Baggarley of Moore County.

According to the complaint, from Feb. 23, 1987 through the time of the filing, inspections from NRCD personnel found Central Carolina Properties in violation of sedimentation and erosion control regulations by not installing adequate sedimentation and erosion control devices at Carolina Pines Mobile Home Park.

Senators Try To Change State's Role In Regional Waste Storage

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The effects of a bill on the North Carolina Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission were ignored in the Senate, where legislators put forth amendment after amendment to try to change the state's role in the Southeast Compact for low-level radioactive waste.

The compact is made up of eight states which have agreed to treat each other's low-level radioactive waste for 20 years each. South Carolina took the first duty, and its term ends in 1992. North Carolina was chosen to accept the waste for the next 20 years.

"Whoever did the trading for us got their britches took off," Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas said. "For that reason I come to you for a better trade."

Thomas' amendment would have changed the storage period for the host state from 20 years to five years and limit the amount of waste to 8 million pounds.

The main bill would limit the duties of the hazardous waste treatment commission in its search for a location for a treatment facility to searching for a volunteer county. It also gives the governor the authority to search for another state to accept North Carolina's hazardous waste before a county is forced to accept the treatment plant.

Thomas said he supported the bill originally because he was told there was new technology that could change the state's hazardous waste treatment needs.

"The new technology is on the way," he said. "That's the reason for slowing down that hazardous waste treatment commission and ... there's going to be some technology arrive to manage this low-level waste," Thomas said.

But Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, who sponsored the bill, reminded the Senate that legislators had voted on whether to stay in the compact last year. Approving Thomas' amendment, he said, would have the effect of removing North Carolina from the compact.

"It, in effect, withdraws us from the compact," Johnson said. "And I would suggest to you that that issue was debated by this General Assembly last year. ... That legislation set us on a policy, on a course. By cutting it to five years, it makes it economically unfeasible to have a dump site for five years. You can't open and close it and make it economically feasible if you do it for five years."

But Thomas' amendment failed, as had an earlier amendment by Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, to send the bill to the Senate Environment Committee, of which he is the chairman. "If that is done, I will not tamper with anything to do with Lee County," Winner told the Senate before the vote.

The hazardous waste commission had named Lee County as a possible site for the facility before the Legislature began its movement toward limiting the commission's duties.

Winner, who said he voted for the state to enter the compact several years ago, called it "the worst vote I've made since I've been here." But he said legislators were adamant in staying in the compact despite his reservations. "We decided to get in this, and we're obviously not getting out."

He said none of his amendments "were intended to get us out or make it unworkable."

Two other amendments by Winner — one to make the compact name the third state to accept the region's waste before North Carolina opens its facility and one to require the compact commission to hold a certain number of its meetings in North Carolina — also failed or were tabled.

"Nobody in North Carolina wants this in their backyard," Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, said after one vote. "But I can tell you this. If Cleveland County's the safest place in North Carolina to put this, I'll vote for it. If the folks in Cleveland County want to run me out of town, I know other places I can go."

The bill was tentatively approved by a 46-0 vote and will be up for final approval today.

Executives May Buy Out Braniff

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Piedmont Airlines chairman William McGee and three other top airline executives are expected to resign and join former Piedmont chairman William Howard in a buyout of Braniff Inc., a Charlotte newspaper reported today.

The Charlotte Observer, quoting unnamed airline industry sources, said that McGee, Howard McKinnon, senior vice president-finance and treasurer; Dick James, vice president of planning; and Don McGuire, vice president of public affairs, would join Braniff if the Texas airline's board of directors approved the move at a meeting today. Approval was expected, sources told the newspaper.

Airline sources in Charlotte said Thursday night that Piedmont employees were told that McGee, also president and chief executive officer, was resigning, the newspaper said. Other knowledgeable sources said McKinnon, McGuire and James also would leave.

None of the four could be reached for comment Thursday night. Piedmont spokesman William Kress in Winston-Salem said McGee "has not resigned. He has not announced any resignation today." He would not elaborate.

According to reports last week, several Piedmont officials would join Howard to lead a Braniff buyout. Howard left Piedmont last August to lead an effort by pilots at United Airlines Inc. to buy their airline from its parent company, then known as Allegis Corp. Howard was replaced by McGee.

Howard's resignation came after USAir Group Inc. bought Winston-Salem-based Piedmont last year for $1.6 billion.

Under Howard's leadership, Piedmont grew into the ninth-largest U.S. airline and was consistently among the most profitable carriers. Howard has declined to discuss the possible buyout of Dallas-based Braniff, or which Piedmont officials would be involved.

The reports last week said Piedmont executives expect to raise $59 million to $90 million to acquire Braniff. Braniff parent Dalfort Corp. owns 64 percent of the airline's common stock.

Braniff primarily serves markets in the Southwest, but has been looking for other markets in which they would not compete head-to-head against Dallas-based American Airlines and Atlanta-based Delta Airlines, which has a hub airport at Dallas-Fort Worth International.

House Debates Formula For School Building Funds

RALEIGH (AP) — An attempt to help counties that got no money under a 1987 school construction financing program stalled after the sponsor said both the program and his bill needed more study.

"I thought perhaps that this would be best ... to give some additional thought rather than to summarily increase the fund at this time," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

Miller, chairman of the House Finance Committee, persuaded the House Thursday to remove provisions dealing with school facilities from a bill he is sponsoring that is designed to close a loophole in the state income tax code.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, supported the move, saying that because of the manner in which the school funds are distributed, there was no guarantee the $16 million sought in the bill would go to the counties that most need it.

The Legislature approved an $830 million, 10-year program to raise money to build and renovate school buildings across North Carolina. A total of $120 million was appropriated for fiscal 1987-88.

Fifty-nine counties were eligible for the funds and 29 received money. Legislators have complained that some of the counties in the direst need got none because of the distribution formula set by the Commission on School Facility Needs.

Miller's plan was to create a one-time windfall of $16 million by requiring people who pay quarterly income taxes to pay 90 percent of their tax liability for the year instead of the current 80 percent.

Rep. David Redwine, D-

Brunswick, protested the deletion of the provision from Miller's bill.

"To have a mechanism with which to raise an additional $16 million and to take it away at the last minute seems to me to send the wrong signal," said Redwine, who complained that none of the three counties in his district received money from the school fund.

After Mavretic's speech, however, Redwine changed his mind: "Sometimes things get explained to you."

The House voted 82-8 to remove from the bill the income tax section that raised the $16 million and the section that earmarked the money for schools.

The House will decide today whether to give tentative approval to the rest of the bill, which erases a tax loophole intended for low- and moderate-income people but that wealthier people were using to their advantage.

Under the tax credit, people who earned up to $5,000 received a $25 tax credit; $5,001 to $10,000, a $20 credit; and $10,001 to $15,000, a $15 credit.

But North Carolina does not have a joint filing option for married couples. Couples may file on a combined return, but the tax is calculated separately. So some couples received the tax credit if only one of them fell into the earnings categories, even if the other was well over the limit.

Also, a person who has a gross income of more than $15,000 but has many deductions and exemptions could receive the credit.

Miller's bill would require married couples who want to claim the credit to file on a combined return and would apply the income limits to the couple considered together.

Couple Investigated In Sears Bomb Hoax

WILMINGTON (AP) — Two Onslow County residents charged with kidnapping a New Hanover County woman are being investigated in connection with an extortion plot involving Sears stores in North Carolina, authorities said.

Allison Pack Kalkbrenner, 34, and Robert Lee Kalkbrenner, 56, of Jacksonville, who are husband and wife, were charged with first-degree kidnapping and conspiracy on Tuesday. They were being held Thursday night at the New Hanover County Jail.

Agnes Bachman of Wilmington was kidnapped Monday and held hostage for 15 hours. She was released after a $60,000 ransom was paid.

The State Bureau of Investigation in Jacksonville confirmed that the Kalkbrenners are suspects in the 2-month-old extortion case, Delma Collins, deputy chief of the Jacksonville Police Department, said Thursday.

Collins said an attempt was made to extort $192,000 from five Sears stores in North Carolina. Extortionists told store employees that if money was not delivered, bombs planted in the stores would be detonated, Collins said.

The FBI placed agents at the Sears in Jacksonville, which was believed to be the drop point where the money would be collected, Collins said. The extortionists, who had been communicating with Sears for three days, apparently grew suspicious of being tailed and backed off, Collins said.

"It was all an elaborate hoax, but we had to play it like it was real," he said. No money was extorted.

SELF-CONTROL

Are you in control of your life or is the world controlling you? Many times life's circumstances and situations seem to steamroll over your own individual needs and desires. You try to meet the demands placed upon you by your family, your career, and yourself. No matter how hard you try, you never seem to accomplish all you set out to do. You are left gasping for air as the world crashes on with its crazy inconsistencies and paradoxes. You are pulled in so many directions you are robbed of the deep sense of satisfaction that comes from the manifestation of your own desires and talents. If you're not doing what you truly want to do, you're not in control of your life.

At Trinity Free Will Baptist Church we are interested in self-control and learning to channel our energies into satisfying the special needs each of us has within. We do this by learning more about God. With God's guidance, life is balanced and manageable. We gain an appreciation of what's really important in life. We prioritize.

If you're interested in gaining some perspective and control over your life we invite you to join us this Sunday to learn more about the Ultimate Priority. It'll be the first step in truly gaining control over your life.

DENIED ENTRANCE — Bicycle messenger Christopher Stalvey, wearing a T-shirt proclaiming "Experts Agree! Meese is a pig" poses in Washington this week. Justice Switches, T-Shirts Are OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a sudden reversal of policy, the Justice Department says people who wear T-shirts proclaiming "Meese is a Pig" will now be allowed into the building.

A bicycle messenger wearing one of the shirts was not permitted to make a delivery on the premises earlier this month because he was "inappropriately attired," department spokesman Patrick S. Kortzen said. As of the start of business Thursday, that policy stood.

But Kortzen said later in the day that the policy had been reversed. "The matter was raised with the attorney general this morning. And he said from here on out our policy will be that if they want to enter the building wearing that sort of T-shirt, they may," Kortzen told The Washington Post.

Christopher Stalvey, who said he was turned away from department offices June 10, visited the American Civil Liberties Union this week to tell legal director Arthur B. Spitzer about the encounter.

Spitzer said the ACLU was prepared to bring suit if the policy remained in effect. "It seems like a perfectly clear case of discrimination based on the content of the T-shirt," Spitzer told The Associated Press.

The Justice Department "obviously doesn't understand what the First Amendment is all about," Spitzer said before the policy change. "If they had a rule that said no T-shirts, that might be an acceptable rule. But apparently they have a rule that says no T-shirts that insult Ed Meese. Presumably, this guy would have been allowed in if he was wearing a T-shirt that said 'Reagan-Bush '84.'"

Told later about the change of policy, Spitzer said, "That's great."

VA Reviewing Rejected Disability Claims With Help Of Duplicate Medical Records

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration is launching a massive review of rejected disability claims following the discovery of 10 million military medical records that duplicate some lost in a 1973 fire.

Veterans groups say thousands of veterans from World War II and the Korean War could be affected by the discovery. They say the newfound records would provide verification for claims denied because there were no records to substantiate them.

Thomas K. Turnage, the VA administrator, announced the discovery on Thursday and called it a "very important" development.

"It opens up new vistas for us. It means that these people who before had difficulty establishing a basis for their disability compensation, or the degree of it ... it means we can have another chance to look at it and, in effect, may come up with a different result," Turnage said.

The VA said that it would immediately begin going through the new data and reviewing claims rejected because of lost records. The agency urged veterans seeking information about their claims to contact their VA regional offices.

Turnage said the VA had become aware of the information last week, and it was too early to say how many people would be affected. He also did not have figures on how many claims were denied because of lost records.

Officials cautioned against overestimating the impact of the discovery. R.J. Vogel, the VA's benefits director, said that most veterans who made disability claims did so during their initial years after service and would likely have filed claims before 1973.

But John Sommer, director of the American Legion Veterans Affairs and Rehabilitation Commission, whose office helps veterans with their disability claims, said there was no doubt the development could affect thousands.

"You'd be amazed at the number of people, World War II veterans in particular, who waited until they retired to file a claim with the VA, and then found the records had been destroyed," he said. "Many of them felt they just didn't want to take anything from the government. ... Then, as they aged, they decided to file a claim and discovered their records had been burned."

Others likely to be affected include people with an injury or disease suffered during active duty that became more pronounced over the years, such as a back or heart ailment, officials said.

Eighteen million military personnel records were destroyed or seriously damaged in the July 12, 1973, fire at the National Personnel Record Center in St. Louis. The lost records were from the years 1912 through 1959 for Army personnel, and 1947 through 1963 for Air Force personnel with the surnames of Hubbard and through the letter Z.

The duplicate records cover the years 1942 to 1945 and 1950 to 1954, and so will primarily affect veterans of World War II and the Korean War.

The records were collected by the National Research Council, a private research organization, during the 1950s as part of its analysis of Army hospital records. A researcher at the council came across the records and notified the National Archives, said Jill Brett, an archives spokeswoman.

Ms. Brett said that the records are on computer magnetic tapes created by the council from hospital admissions punch cards prepared by the office of the surgeon general. She said the archives paid the council $8,662 for the tapes and will reformat them for cross-referencing against other files.

She said they were not listed by the military officer's name, but included the officer's serial number, grade and rank, age, date and place of admission as well as disease and diagnosis.

Of the 10 million files, there were 3.5 million files for the year 1944 alone, Turnage said, covering about 2.4 million people. For 1945, more than 2 million files were discovered, covering about 1.4 million people. He said the agency still was trying to compile the breakdown for the other years.

Dukakis Says Choice Of Prison Site Was Proper; FBI Confirms Probe

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael Dukakis says any suggestion that his administration acted improperly in selecting a prison site in a small Massachusetts town is "unfortunate and regrettable."

And Dukakis administration officials are questioning whether political motivations lay behind the revelation that the FBI is looking into the selection process. In publicly acknowledging the probe, the FBI broke its usual policy of neither confirming nor denying the existence of investigations.

A bureau spokesman in Washington, Bill Carter, said Thursday the reason for the exception was that this case could appear to implicate a presidential candidate. Dukakis is all but assured the Democratic presidential nomination.

The bureau released a statement saying Dukakis was not the subject of the probe. But spokeswoman Sue Schmitzer added that the inquiry has yet to reach the stage where any individual would be identified as a subject of investigation.

Bureau spokesmen declined to say whether any information implicating Dukakis had been discovered. Dukakis said no administration of-cial has been contacted or subpoenaed by the FBI.

Some residents of the town of New Braintree have accused Dukakis of cronyism in his support for purchasing land there for the prison. The governor told reporters Thursday that his administration had been "as open as it could possibly be" about the prison controversy.

"Any suggestions that the secretary of human services and his staff proceeded other than in accordance with the law and strict standards of integrity are unfortunate and regrettable," Dukakis told reporters.

Dukakis administration officials on Thursday questioned whether the Reagan administration might have engineered publicity over the probe, the first report of which appeared Thursday in The Washington Times.

"I think it's very curious," said John DeVillars, a top Dukakis aide, adding: "I would certainly be interested in what U.S. Attorney (Frank) McNamara has to say."

McNamara, a former Republican candidate for Congress, is a Reagan appointee. He declined comment on the probe on Thursday.

Those who accuse the Dukakis administration of tailoring a deal on the prison site point to the fact that the co-owners of the 782-acre property are longtime acquaintances of the governor and one co-owner has contributed to Dukakis' presidential campaign.

A Norwood, Mass., development firm owned by Daniel Striar and Gary Jacobson purchased the land from the Seventh-day Adventist Church in December 1985 for $3 million. Jacobson was a boyhood neighbor of Dukakis.

Dukakis said he was unaware who owned the land at the time he approved it as a prison site.

But The Boston Globe reported in today's editions that Selectwoman Dorothea Thomas-Vitrac, a member of the governing board of New Braintree, said Dukakis was told the names of the people who owned the land at a meeting with town residents in the governor's office May 6, 1986.

Jacobson and Striar purchased the land a month after the state listed the land as a possible prison site. A later state-funded appraisal of the property in 1986 valued the land at $8.7 million.

That appraisal led critics of the plan to complain that the site owners were going to make millions. Dukakis said Thursday that the state would release its final appraisal of the land in the next 10 days, and hinted it would be considerably less than $8.7 million.

In February 1987, Jacobson and Striar offered to sell the land to the state for $9.5 million, more than three times the purchase price.

Jacobson has been a contributor to Dukakis' political campaigns. He and his wife each contributed $1,000 to Dukakis' presidential campaign this year, the maximum allowed by law.

A secretary said Jacobson, a physician, was seeing patients and was unable to return a reporter's phone call. Striar is on vacation and could not be reached.

PUBLIC NOTICE TO GREENVILLE UTILITIES' WATER SYSTEM CUSTOMERS

The United States Congress amended the Safe Drinking Water Act in 1986. One requirement of this Act is that all people using public water systems should be notified of the potential for exposure to lead through the water distribution system and the plumbing in individual homes. All public water systems are required to make this notification even if there is no evidence of lead contamination and the drinking water complies with the standards established by the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Water supplied by Greenville Utilities has no detectable levels of lead, and no lead materials are currently being used in the Greenville Utilities Commission (GUC) owned and maintained water distribution system.

GUC maintains a continuous corrosion control program, which includes pH adjustment and the addition of a corrosion inhibitor to minimize corrosion of plumbing materials (including lead) which may be present in customer-owned plumbing.

Where Does Lead Come From?

Lead accumulates in the body from three potential sources. The major source is food, followed by air and drinking water.

Lead has been a common component of the materials used in the construction of water distribution systems and household plumbing throughout the centuries. While water supply systems do not currently use lead joints and services, some older parts of existing systems, including ours, may contain lead.

Lead is commonly found in the soldered joints and the plumbing fixtures of older as well as modern homes and buildings. All water, even that which has been treated to reduce corrosiveness, can have traces of lead caused by the gradual breakdown of lead materials used in plumbing systems.

What Are the Health Effects of Lead?

EPA sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a maximum permissible concentration of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). 0.050 ppm is a little less than 1/100 of an ounce per 1,000 gallons. Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this allowable concentration significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- if your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and
- if the home is less than five years old, or
- if you have soft or acidic water, or
- if water sits in the pipes for several hours.

What Can You do About Lead?

The American Water Works Association recommends that the cold water tap run for a sufficient amount of time to clear standing water from the line prior to using it for consumption (approximately two to three minutes). This should be done in the morning or after the system has not been in use for several hours.

Since hot water dissolves lead more quickly than cold water, use water from the cold water tap for drinking and cooking purposes, and especially for making baby formula.

When making any repairs or additions to the drinking water lines always insist that "lead-free" solder be used.

What is GUC Doing About Lead?

All public water supplies in the United States are monitored for lead and other potential contaminants to insure that Maximum Contaminant Levels established by the EPA are not exceeded. These required laboratory analyses have consistently shown no detectable lead contamination in GUC water. In addition, most water suppliers, including GUC, treat the water prior to distribution to reduce corrosiveness which might cause lead to dissolve. The North Carolina building code also now requires that "lead-free" solder be used in drinking water plumbing.

For further information on your water supply, please contact Greenville Utilities' Customer Services Department, 752-7166, ext. 219, at 200 W. 5th St., Greenville, NC 27835 or the U.S.E.P.A. at 1-800-426-4791. You may also order "Lead and Your Drinking Water" from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C. 20460.

Navy Rules Out Trial In Death

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The Navy will drop manslaughter charges against at least two of the six sailors charged in a recruit's death, and has offered non-judicial punishment rather than a court martial to three of them, defense attorneys say.

Attorneys for Petty Officers 1st Class Richard E. Blevins and David J. Smith, instructors at the Naval Rescue Swimmer School, said they were informed Thursday of the decision by Rear Adm. David R. Morris, chief of naval air training, in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Blevins, Smith and three other instructors were charged with involuntary manslaughter and conspiracy to commit battery in the March 2 death of Airman Recruit Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis.

Mirecki was literally scared to death when he was forced into a swimming pool after trying to quit a rescue course at the Pensacola Naval Air Station, according to testimony at an investigative hearing two weeks ago.

Train May Have Been Too Fast

CROFTON, Ky. (AP) — Heat-sensitive phosphorus inside a derailed CSX tanker reignited as workers righted it, spewing more toxic smoke a day after 15,000 people were evacuated from eight western Kentucky counties, authorities said.

Thursday night's cloud, however, was not as severe as the one the previous night, which forced one of the largest evacuations in the state's history, officials said. There were no reported injuries from the second fire.

Only about 60 families living within three miles of the derailment were evacuated after the chemical reignited, said Don Armstrong, a spokesman for the state Division of Disaster and Emergency Services.

"By midnight it was determined that the problem was getting less and not greater," said Armstrong. "They're letting it burn out this morning."

"There's just a small fire this morning and very little of the chemical left in the tank," said Shirley Arnold, a state police dispatcher. Police units remained at the scene throughout the night to keep sightseers away.

The tanker was part of a CSX Transportation Corp. train that officials say was going too fast through rural Christian County when 34 of its cars derailed in a ravine.

The new cloud, 100 yards wide and 400 feet high, was moving southeast, Armstrong said.

Greg Powell, of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Atlanta office, said the danger appeared minimal. Nobody was hurt when the train caught fire again, Armstrong said.

Officials said they believe that once the second fire is out all of the phosphorus will have been consumed.

Earlier Thursday, officials said the crew of the freight train that derailed Wednesday might have avoided the accident had it seen a 10 mph speed limit sign.

The speed limit was posted because of a problem with the track at the point where the train derailed. The train was traveling 35 mph, said Tim Hensley, a spokesman for CSX Transportation Corp.

"This probably is a factor, but we are not saying that this is a cause," Hensley said. "And it has not been developed whether it was human error on the part of the crew, or whether they were not provided with the information with regards to that slow order."

Hensley said the track was found to be in good condition when it was inspected last month. He said the safety order was issued because of a one-block-long stretch of rough track, possibly caused by heat extension of the rails.

"Where there's a curve it will cause them to move to the outside and form a kink," he said.

U.S. Pushes Moscow to Spell Out Mideast Policy

By NORMAN KEMPSTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, breaking sharply with a long-standing U.S. policy of trying to minimize Soviet influence in the Middle East, is urging Moscow to help mediate the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Such a step could require the Soviets to make the same sort of controversial choices that the United States frequently has had to make in recent years.

Frustrated administration officials maintain that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has been able to pose as a potential peacemaker without having to advance specific proposals that might alienate pro-Soviet regimes in the Arab world.

These officials contrast the Soviet performance, which they say consists largely of slogans and generalities, with Secretary of State George P. Shultz's Middle East peace plan, which was designed to set out specific compromises that Israel and its Arab adversaries could accept. The plan turned out to be so evenly balanced that both sides objected to it on grounds that it was too favorable to the other.

"We should get the Soviets to be more specific about what kind of peace process they want," one official said. "If they refuse to give answers, the people in the region should know that."

The new emphasis on bringing Moscow into the process is part of the administration's fallback position following Shultz's failure to bring Israel, Jordan, Syria and the Palestinians into a new round of peace talks. In four high-profile trips to the region this year, Shultz has not been able to persuade any of the key leaders to compromise. Although Shultz has said that he might schedule a fifth trip later this year, administration officials say that this now seems unlikely.

"Secretaries shouldn't shuttle to the region without concrete results," one official said. "Frequency without results devalues visits. We may be at that point."

Nevertheless, Shultz is determined to keep the process alive, if only just barely. Despite their mutual animosity on most substantive issues, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel, President Hafez Assad of Syria, King Hussein of Jordan and all other leaders in the region have urged Shultz to continue his efforts, despite their steadfast refusal to agree to the sort of concessions that would make progress possible.

"Better the process than the lack of a process," one

U.S. official said. "As contemptuous as people are of a process without concrete results, the alternative is far worse."

To keep the pot boiling, the official said, the administration intends to send the State Department's top Middle East expert, Assistant Secretary Richard W. Murphy, to the region as a substitute for additional Shultz trips. But the official said that it would be a mistake for Washington to advance any major new initiatives with only six months to go in President Reagan's term.

The new overture to the Soviets is also designed to keep up the appearance of movement. For most of the last 15 years, U.S. policy has been designed to exclude Moscow from Middle East diplomacy. But under Gorbachev, the Soviet Union has sought to repair its relations with moderate pro-West Arab states and has softened its hostility toward Israel.

As a result, Jordan's Hussein and Syria's Assad want the Soviets to join the Americans as mediators. Hussein has said that he would engage in face-to-face negotiations with Israel — something Israel has long demanded — but only in conjunction with a regional peace conference. The conference would be attended by the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China, and the parties to the conflict.

Israel's Shamir is adamantly opposed to any sort of international conference, but Shamir's political rival, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, supports a conference provided that it would have no power to impose a settlement or to veto an agreement reached by the parties.

The Soviet Union has said that it is prepared to attend a conference if it would be effective. That formulation seems to rule out the sort of conference Israel might accept, but U.S. officials say that the Soviet position is not clear. If Moscow really wants to participate in peace talks, it will have to adopt specific positions that could appeal to Israel as well as the Arabs. U.S. officials believe that if the Soviets adopt a conciliatory stance, Shamir will be under heavy pressure to go along.

The way the Administration sees it, the Soviets will either have to take specific action that would help to bring the parties together or tacitly admit that their Middle East policy is a hollow one.

"I'm skeptical that talks with the Soviets will get anywhere, but the attempt is worthwhile," an administration official said. "It is a ticket that has to be punched to keep the king (Hussein) engaged."

Arab Stabs U.S.-Born Settler

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Palestinian stabbed an American-born Jewish settler in the West Bank city of Hebron today, then the bleeding Israeli chased the Arab and shot him in the elbow, Israel army radio said.

Both the Israeli and the Palestinian were hospitalized. The army clamped a curfew on the area where the attack occurred, near Hebron's central marketplace.

Also today, the army began freeing 89 Palestinians jailed for taking part in anti-Israel disturbances. Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said the move was part of a new policy to reward Arabs for good behavior.

The settler, Yonah Chaiken, was the second Israeli victim of an apparent nationalistic attack this week. On Sunday, an Israeli farmer was bludgeoned and stabbed to death while spraying insecticide on his vineyard south of Jerusalem.

That death was the fourth Israeli fatality since an uprising began Dec. 8 against the occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. In all, 211 Arabs have been killed.

Chaiken, originally of Boston, was shopping when an attacker stabbed him in the shoulder and lower back, the radio and a Jerusalem hospital spokeswoman said.

Chaiken pulled a gun, chased the Palestinian about 50 yards and shot him, and then ran another 300 yards to a building housing Jewish families, where he collapsed and received first aid, said the radio and Zev

Hever, a leader of the 200-member Jewish community in Hebron.

"We went back to the scene of the attack and followed the blood stains to the home of the assailant," Hever told The Associated Press. "But he was already in the hospital."

Gas Tank Blast Kills Two, Hurts 20

GUADALUPE, Mexico (AP) — A raging fire with temperatures up to 5,400 degrees burned out of control today after three gas tanks exploded, killing two people in this northeastern industrial city, officials said.

Officials said the heat of the blaze melted several cars and the fire's glow could be seen up to 10 miles away.

The blasts and the fire also injured 20 people. Authorities said six of them were in very serious condition early today.

The blaze started after three tanks exploded one after another at the San Rafael tank farm belonging to Pemex, the state petroleum monopoly.

The flames, shooting more than 100 feet in the air, forced the evacuation of more than 10,000 people from nearby homes.

Nuevo Leon state judiciary police director Hernan Guajardo Garza, who visited the site, said at times the fire reached 5,400 degrees Fahrenheit, or 3,000 degrees Celsius, and turned several nearby vehicles into molten metal.

Firemen, rushed in from all around the area, were finally able to douse the flames in two tanks late Thursday using special equipment with 50-foot pipes that can shoot chemical foam at a great distance. A third tank continued to burn.

The equipment was flown in from Ciudad Madero, 280 miles away on the Gulf of Mexico coast, Pemex spokesman Guillermo Guevara said. He said firemen expected to control the flames in the third tank early today.

Guevara and Nuevo Leon state press secretary Raul de la Garza, who spoke at a joint news conference Thursday night in Monterrey, said there were no immediate clues as to what started the fire on the 23-tank farm but that an investigation was under way.

The private television network Televisa quoted Pemex officials as saying the explosions and fire were caused by stray sparks from welding equipment being used nearby.

An explosion and fire May 24 at Pemex's gas and kerosene supply depot in the northern city of Chihuahua was blamed on a spark set off during the installation of firefighting equipment. No one was hurt then, but more than 100,000 people were forced to evacuate their homes for a day.

Guevara said the 23 tanks were loaded with a total of 2.26 million gallons of gasoline and diesel oil when Thursday's disaster occurred.

The tank-farm, employing 250 workers, is used as a retail distribution center for Monterrey and the northeastern region. Monterrey is the country's third largest city with a metropolitan population of 2.8 million people and one of its main industrial centers.

The explosion and fire set off panic among residents of Guadalupe, a small city on Monterrey's outskirts about 440 miles north of Mexico City.

People fled their homes even before the state government ordered the area evacuated at mid-afternoon Thursday. About 10 government and private shelters were packed with an estimated 8,000 people who spent the night there, some looking for lost relatives.

New Slides Block Rescue Efforts In Turkey

CATAK, Turkey (AP) — A rash of new mudslides sent boulders hurtling down a mountainside today, disrupting efforts by rescue workers to reach 100 people believed buried under tons of mud and rocks that smothered this village.

Radio reports said 31 people were injured in the mudslides Thursday in Catak village. One body was recovered Thursday before torrential rains triggered more slides that halted rescue efforts for the night.

Radio reports also said villagers heard people crying for help from beneath the debris.

Catak is in Trabzon province near the Black Sea, about 500 miles east of Ankara.

Turkish civil defense workers, helped by a 32-member West German rescue team with search dogs, shoveled through the mud and stones that roared down on the mountain village Thursday morning.

"The dogs found three separate areas where there may be people buried, but we don't yet know if they're dead or alive," said Klaus Kolter, of the Mannheim-based West German Rescue Dog Association.

Soon after the rescuers started work this morning, however, rocks began tumbling down the mountainside, hitting a truck and slightly injuring the driver, the Anatolia news agency said.

"The rescue operation is difficult because landslides keep coming down," Gov. Enver Hizlan of Trabzon province said. "They stop work and raise thick clouds of dust everywhere."

Turkish newspapers today reported death tolls ranging between 50 and 200. They said five buses and two trucks were buried beneath tons of mud.

Officials denied an announcement Thursday by the Turkish Red Crescent, a relief organization, that up to 300 people had been killed.

Televized reports said the landslides had caused a river to flood the village. Footage showed some houses under water and others buried beneath the mud, their roofs barely protruding.

John Paul Backs Homeland For Arabs

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II today told Austria's Jewish leaders that Palestinians have a right to a homeland, and recalled the "incomprehensible pain, suffering and tears" of the Nazi Holocaust.

Meeting with the Jewish leaders on the second day of his Austrian trip, the pontiff did not respond to their call for the Vatican to give full diplomatic recognition to the state of Israel.

John Paul then flew by helicopter to the town of Trausdorf near the border with Hungary, where he celebrated an outdoor Mass for an estimated 80,000 Roman Catholics, most of them from Hungary and Yugoslavia.

In Trausdorf, the gold-robed pontiff issued special greetings to Roman Catholics in Eastern Europe. During his homily, the pontiff also recalled the "mechanized death of two world wars" and the "persecution and annihilation of whole groups of people because of their ethnic and religious background."

Late in the afternoon, the 68-year-old pontiff was heading to Mauthausen, the notorious Nazi death camp where 110,000 inmates died or were murdered.

The pontiff started his day by meeting with Austrian Jewish community President Paul Grosz and five of the country's other leading Jews at the office of the papal ambassador, called the nuncio, to Austria.

"The Jewish people has the right to a homeland, as any other nation has according to international law," the pontiff said. "The same goes for the Palestinian people, many of whom have become homeless and refugees."

John Paul reminded his audience he had made a similar call last September in Miami during his tour of the United States.

"By means of a common readiness for understanding and compromise, solutions should finally be found which lead to a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in this area," the pope said, delivering his remarks in German.

Speaking of the Nazi murder of an estimated six million Jews, the pope said: "The incomprehensible pain, suffering and tears still are before my eyes and etched deep in my soul."

But he added: "It would be clearly unjust and untrue to charge Christianity with these unspeakable crimes."

The Roman Catholic leader said that instead the Holocaust arose from a world "without and even aimed against God" and called for an end to anti-Semitism.

Some Jewish leaders have accused Christians, and the Vatican in particular, of failing to do enough to prevent the Holocaust.

Grosz, in his remarks, said the pontiff's decision to receive controversial President Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican last year shows that "many Austrians still have not come to terms with their past."

Waldheim has faced allegations of complicity in Nazi war crimes during his service in the German army, while some Jewish leaders have accused the church of failing to try to prevent the Holocaust.

Waldheim has strongly denied any wrongdoing during his World War II military service.

The Jewish community leader added: "We sincerely regret that full diplomatic relations between Israel and the Holy See have not yet been established." The pontiff did not respond to that point.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

Copyright © John A. Lehti, Distributor Liturgic Plus, Middletown, N.Y. NATIONAL SALES REPRESENTATIVE: Dal Advertising Service, 2702 E. Ash St., Goldboro, N.C. 27530

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Esther, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

EVIL HAMAN

QUEEN ESTHER HAS LEARNED OF THE DECREE, INSTIGATED BY HAMAN, CONDEMNING ALL THE JEWS IN PERSIA TO DEATH! NO ONE KNOWS THAT ESTHER, HERSELF, IS A NIECE OF MORDECAI, THE JEW, AND NOW...

GO, HATACH! LEARN ALL ABOUT THIS TRAGIC THING FROM MORDECAI—SO WE CAN PLAN TO STOP IT!

...HAVING GOTTEN ALL THE DETAILS FROM MORDECAI, ESTHER BEGINS A COUNTERPLOT

GO! TELL MORDECAI TO GATHER ALL THE JEWS IN PRAYER AND FASTING—FOR I GO TO THE KING, UNBIDDEN, AT THE RISK OF DEATH!

IT IS THE LAW THAT A PERSON MAY ONLY GO BEFORE THE KING IF THE KING SENDS FOR HIM—TO PRESENT ONESELF TO THE KING, UNBIDDEN, IS PUNISHABLE BY DEATH AND CAN ONLY BE AVERTED IF THE KING POINTS HIS GOLDEN SCEPTRE AT THE PERSON, THUS ACCEPTING HIS PRESENCE—SO EVEN ESTHER, QUEEN THOUGH SHE BE, IS RISKING HER LIFE BY THIS LAWBREAKING ACT!

Support For Religious Liberty

Church Leaders To Sign New Williamsburg Pact

By PHYLLIS MESSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A diverse group of business, political and religious leaders will gather in Williamsburg, Va., this weekend to celebrate freedom of religion — a right guaranteed by the Constitution that they feel has come on rough times.

The leaders, representing Catholics, Jews, Buddhists, Mormons, Christian Scientists as well as secular institutions, will meet in the Colonial Capitol at Williamsburg. That is where Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and others first agreed in 1776 that all citizens should have the right to freely exercise their religious beliefs.

Then, in ceremonies on Saturday morning, the leaders will sign a charter that reasserts religious freedom and offers some guidelines for what the leaders hope will be more constructive debate on religious issues. Organizers from the Williamsburg Charter Foundation are expecting about 100 people to put their names on the charter.

The Rev. Billy Graham will deliver the main address following the charter signing. Others scheduled to make remarks over the weekend are Camelia Sadat, daughter of the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat; Makaziew Mandela, daughter of South African black leader Nelson Mandela; Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; and George Gallup Jr. of the polling firm.

"There is no pretense that these people believe the same thing, whether in politics or religion," said Robert Kramer, a spokesman for the foundation. "They are coming together merely to say that we all should take a moment to step back from our antagonisms."

"We're not saying that we have to find some common religion, that we have to paper over our differences," Kramer continued. "We are saying that there has to be some common notion of responsibility and respect for others. You may think the other person's beliefs are foolish, but you still have to respect that person's right to hold them."

That, in essence, is the message of the charter, which has been undergoing repeated changes in the past two years.

The version of the charter that will be signed this weekend acknowledges "continuing differences" but warns that "religious liberty can never be taken for granted." It also says, "If religious liberty is neglected, all civil liberties will suffer."

"We're not so much looking for a middle ground as for some basis for co-existence, so that one group does not fear that the expansion of rights to others means fewer rights for themselves," Kramer said.

Os Guinness, executive director of the foundation, said it has taken two years to overcome the suspicions of many of the religious and other leaders who will sign the charter. They either feared the foundation was promoting some religion or working against religion, Guinness said.

The foundation, which goes out of business at the end of the year, is doing neither, he said.

"This charter is clear from the beginning that it's an agreement on how to disagree. We are not offering specifics," Guinness said. "We are trying to offer a way of answering the question: How do we live with each other's differences?"

During the weekend, Colonial Williamsburg will offer its usual tours of historic buildings, but the guides will focus their discussions on religious liberty. Folk singers Peter, Paul and Mary will perform on Saturday and a top U.S. Postal official is expected to present the first issue of a commemorative stamp honoring the bicentennial of Virginia's ratification of the Constitution.

Diving Accidents Alter Lives Of Wayne, Don

By PAT WILLIAMSON
N.C. Dept. of Human Resources
Wayne Dawson and Don Griffin have much in common. Both grew up in rural areas of North Carolina. In their youth, both enjoyed playing musical instruments and outdoor activities. When each was 17 years old, his life was irreversibly altered by severe injuries suffered in diving accident.

"I was water skiing with some friends in the Sound near Emerald Isle," Dawson said. "I threw my skis off the dock and dove in to put them on. Even though I had been diving off that dock many times, the tide was low that day and I dove deep and hit my head on the bottom."

Griffin said, "I was swinging out over the river from a Tarzan rope. When I let go of the rope, I dove into an area where I hadn't landed before and hit my head on a rock on the bottom."

Both men were fortunate that they were with friends who quickly pulled them from the water or their accidents probably would have been fatal.

Dawson and Griffin both were taken to local hospitals and then transferred to major medical centers that were better equipped to handle their injuries. Each suffered severe high (cervical vertebra) spinal cord bruises which left him paralyzed from the neck down.

"I was reared on a farm near Deep Run and had planned on a career in farming just like my father and grandfather," Dawson said. "The accident ended those dreams."

"I tried to figure out how to continue doing those things, but then reality set in. I went through all the phases that you go through after an loss like that — denial, anger, grief, and finally acceptance."

Griffin's accident in some ways added purpose to his life. "I dropped out of school and left home at age 15. I had no goals at that time, took odd jobs to survive, and in general, was rebellious," he said. "After the accident I was angry for a long time."

After initial hospital stays, both men were transferred to rehabilitation centers for therapy: Dawson to the Regional Rehabilitation Center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Greenville, Griffin to John C. Whitaker Regional Rehabilitation Center in Winston-Salem and later to Thoms Rehabilitation Center in Asheville. Both received extensive physical, occupational and recreational therapy to help them move back into their communities, social life and education.

"My anger continued throughout much of my therapy, but finally I realized I wasn't going anywhere with my injury," Griffin said. "My choices were to remain dependent on my family for my personal care, go into a rest home or start over with my life. I decided to start over."

Dawson finished high school and Griffin earned his high school equivalency. Both went to college and majored in psychology. Each is now an independent living counselor with the Independent Living Rehabilitation Program, a component of the North Carolina Department of Human Resources Division of Vocational Rehabilitation. Dawson works in the Greenville office; Griffin, in the Asheville office.

Both men have use of their shoulders, arms and hands. Both live independently.

According to Ronald Gilbert, chairman of the Aquatic Injury Safety Group in Detroit, Mich., and a member of the board of directors for the National Spinal Cord Injury Association, diving accidents cause about 10-11 percent of all spinal cord injuries in the United States. He noted that automobiles are responsible for approximately 42 percent of all spinal cord injuries; falls, 17-18 percent, and gunshot wounds, 12 percent.

Gilbert also said that about half of all diving accidents occur in swimming pools, particularly backyard pools, and the remaining half occur in open bodies of water such as lakes, ponds, rivers and oceans. The vast majority of these accidents occur during the warmer months of the year.

"Estimates on the total number of spinal cord injuries nationwide each year vary considerably depending on the source," Gilbert said. "The estimates range anywhere from 10,000 to 20,000."

He pointed out that there is no national registry in which spinal cord injuries in the United States are recorded. However, the National Spinal Cord Injury Association and the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta are working closely together to establish such a registry.

In North Carolina, there is no central source where accidents of varying kinds and their resulting injuries are reported.

Claude Myer, director of the state Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, said that more people are surviving spinal cord injuries than ever before.

"Just after World War II, a paraplegic or quadriplegic only lived an average of two years following an accident, primarily due to the complications of the disability," he said. "However, improved emergency response time and advances in medical technology have now made it possible for these people to live long, active and functional lives."

He noted that there are nine rehabilitation centers or rehabilitation units within major acute care hospitals across the state which offer a wide range of services to help people in all phases of disability achieve their highest capabilities. These facilities serve people on both an inpatient and outpatient basis.

These are located in Greenville, Fayetteville, Durham, Chapel Hill, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Hickory, Charlotte and Asheville. Another is in the process of opening in Raleigh.

Myer also said independent living rehabilitation is becoming more available for those who could manage on their own within their families and communities. Vocational training, as well as adaptive equipment and assistance in making work and living areas functional, is also available to those who qualify through the state Division of Vocational Rehabilitation.

While most people survive diving accidents and those who are permanently injured learn to live active, functional lives, some victims do not.

According to data from medical examiner records compiled by the State Center for Health Statistics, 25 people died as a result of diving accidents from 1977 to 19896. All were male and 13 were between 15 and 24 years old. Twenty-two of these deaths resulted from classic diving accidents and three from high-low pressure changes. Thirteen of the accidents occurred in rivers, lakes or ponds; five in the ocean, three in public swimming pools, and four were "other or unknown." Only two of the 17 tested for alcohol were legally intoxicated.

Shirley Beetham, aquatic director of the Garner Road YMCA in Raleigh and chairperson of the Water Safety Board for the Triangle Red Cross chapter, said, "We're a nation of people attracted to water," she said. "In 1945, the National Spa and Pool Institute estimated that there were 10,000 pools in the United States. Now there are an estimated six million and about 5.5 million of these are private residential pools. There are simply more places for potential accidents to occur."

She said the Red Cross recommends that diving not be permitted in water less than five feet deep. Yet young inexperienced divers and competitive swimmers are often taught to dive into shallow water where an accident or miscalculation could cause injury. Even during competitive swimming events, diving blocks are often placed at the shallow end of the pool, rather than a deeper area where diving would be safer."

Ms. Beetham suggested the following for safer diving:

- Never dive or swim alone.
- Never dive into unknown waters. Always check the depth of the water to be sure it is sufficient for diving and that the diving area is free from rocks, stumps, logs and other potential hazards.
- Be sure that depth markers are clearly painted on both the decks and walls of pools.
- Always use a ladder to mount a diving board.
- Dive only from the end of a board.
- Dive straight forward off a board, never to the side.
- Wait until the preceding diver swims clear before diving.

He is manager of the therapeutic recreation department, Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He is pictured with Wayne Dawson and Phyllis Bloyd, manager of Doctor's Park Apartments. (Photo by Sallie Whelan)

- Do not hang on a diving board.
- Do not swim in the area under a diving board.
- Allow only one diver on the stand at a time.
- Swim immediately to the side after diving.
- Replace the diving board or stand, if defective.
- Post appropriate instruction signs for swimming and diving.
- Replace any broken or loose tile, edging, etc. around the edges of pools.
- Post emergency phone numbers around swimming and diving areas.
- Insure proper lighting of a pool area for night swimming and diving.
- Close a pool if its water becomes cloudy and the bottom is not clearly visible.
- Do not run or roughhouse in a swimming or diving area.

State Health Director Dr. Ronald H. Levine said that, while there are recommended regulations for the design, construction, operation and maintenance of public swimming pools from several national associations and organizations, including the National Spa and Pool Institute, there are no federal or state laws that regulate pools. The regulation of public swimming pools is the responsibility of local government in this state, he said.

'Feet First First Time'

Group To Launch Special Program

Warm summer days are attracting more and more people to water activities. By the end of this summer — if annual nationwide statistics hold true — most of the estimated 1,000 diving accidents will have occurred, leaving victims with some type of paralysis.

A local group is planning to change those statistics by launching a spinal cord injury prevention program called "Feet First First Time." The program has been successful in other areas of the country in reducing spinal cord injuries which result from diving into shallow unknown waters, according to Jim Barrett, who heads the therapeutic recreation department of the Regional Rehabilitation Center of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Sponsors of the Feet First First

Time campaign include representatives from the Regional Rehabilitation Center, Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Independent Living Rehabilitation Program and the North Carolina Spinal Cord Injury Association.

The message of Feet First First Time is simple — Do not dive into a swimming pool, pond, lake or other body of water the first time you enter those waters. Instead, walk in feet first to test the depth of the water the first time.

Barrett says the group is posting signs bearing the Feet First First Time logo and message at area swimming areas, including pools and beaches. Local radio stations will help spread the safety message by giving away bright yellow T-shirts bearing the campaign logo.

'Grim Outlook' Was Wrong Last Year

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Christopher Ray McLawhorn, a child appealed for in the Reflector Hotline column late last summer, is celebrating his fourth birthday today.

At the time the appeal was made for donations to enable his family to accompany him to Baltimore for a possible bone marrow transplant at Johns Hopkins Hospital, his health situation looked grim. The doctors at Johns Hopkins confirmed medical appraisals made at both Pitt County Memorial Hospital and North Carolina Memorial Hospital that he was suffering from a degenerative condition that would shortly cause his death. The Pitt Memorial physicians had not recommended the transplant, but the Memorial Hospital ones had and Donnie and Janie McLawhorn, his parents, were willing to do anything to help their son.

They were, therefore, devastated when the Johns Hopkins physicians said Chris was too weak for a transplant and they were told to bring him home and make him comfortable. It was implied that the death of the three-year-old who then weighed only 14 pounds was probably not far off.

He had been diagnosed in December 1986 with metachromatic leukodystrophy and his decline in energy, alertness and mobility had been steady. He was in pain and slept for only fitful short periods. His weight had decreased from 38 to 14 pounds. His joints were stiffened. He had lost his ability to walk or talk and generally seemed to understand little of what was going on around him. He demanded his parents' and older sister's constant attention.

Once home from Baltimore, Janie McLawhorn and her friends, many made through the Hotline appeal, continued praying for Chris and she and Donnie never accepted the medical predictions, even though the evidence of his emaciated body appeared to defy their hopes. The family continued the constant loving care.

Worried about his lack of appetite, Mrs. McLawhorn put Chris on a strenuous program of natural foods and food supplementation. She pureed all his food in a blender and fed to him painstakingly spoonful by spoonful. She blended the supplements with juices and other liquids and force fed them to Chris until he began to show an interest in food. Within about a month, it became apparent that something was working. He was gaining weight, becoming more alert, and his stiffness was decreasing.

Today Chris weighs 37 pounds. He can raise his head. He is much more alert and oriented than he was. He sleeps all night when he used to never sleep more than two hours at a time.

He eats eagerly and has been on no medication since about a month after he got back from Baltimore.

The McLawhorns will give him a birthday party today, with family and friends present. A Pound Puppy motif will be used. Yesterday he took his first trip to Whichard's Beach. He's been hearing other children talk about the beach and he wanted to go himself. His mother is, of course, overjoyed that he's making such requests, and enthusiastically honors them.

Mrs. McLawhorn expressed appreciation for the Hotline readers' donations, cards and prayers. The family has sold their house in Ayden and moved to Route 4, Box 291-K, Greenville.

IT'S MY TURN — Summertime and a boy and his dog find time to swing through the warm days on an old tire suspended from a tree. Dusty looks as though he wants his turn at the swing with Daniel Holder, age 9, the son of David and Mary Holder of Alexandria, Va. (AP Laserphoto)

Readers Urged To Talk Correctly

DEAR ABBY: In response to the party who wrote about the expression "I could care less," which I agree should be, "I couldn't care less," I want to add that there are many words used in today's conversation that are grossly misused. To mention a few:

People say, "We kept going back and forth." It should be "forth and back." (We don't say, "fro and to" — we say, "to and fro.") When we back a car out of the garage, we go "back, then forth," but ordinarily, we go "forth and back," right?

Another common error is calling a water heater a "hot water heater." There is no such thing as a hot water heater — no one can heat hot water; hot water is already hot and cannot be heated.

Also, most people use the word "indefinitely" incorrectly. They say, "This item will last indefinitely," meaning that it will last forever. Actually "indefinitely" means "unsure, uncertain an indefinite amount of time," but it is used incorrectly to mean "forever." — DICK ZONNEFELD, ARTESIA, CALIF.

DEAR DICK: Interesting? Definitely!

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked if secondhand tobacco smoke can affect pets. Here's my personal experience: Michael Francis, one of my Abyssinian cats, itched and scratched himself raw. His fur came out in great patches and his stomach was bald. My other cat, Alexandra Sugarhouse, sneezed and coughed all her short life. My veterinarian didn't know what was wrong, and he didn't try very hard to find out.

Then I found another veterinarian. Vet No. 2 asked if I smoked. (I did.) She then asked me to scrub my walls, shampoo my draperies, carpets, upholstery, etc. to get rid of the smoke deposits. And to quit smoking! I quit smoking and followed her instructions. Michael Francis was miraculously cured, but my little Sugarhouse died before she was 2 years old.

When people ask why I quit smoking, I tell them. Some laugh. Others say they'd have gotten rid of the cat instead. Most make it clear that they don't think a cat is worth "all that trouble." But I see it differently. I had a choice. My cats didn't.

Vet No. 2 said she has other clients whose cats are allergic to tobacco smoke, but I'm the only one who stopped smoking.

This tends to support your statement that if smokers don't consider their children, they are not likely to be concerned about a pet. — ELIZABETH THOMPSON, BATON ROUGE

DEAR ELIZABETH: Hooray for you. Lest my readers assume that I am implying that all cats are allergic to tobacco smoke, let me make it perfectly clear — I am not. (P.S. Sorry about Sugarhouse.)

DEAR ABBY: Would anyone be interested in my old Girl Scout uniform? I also have the hat and belt that go with it. I am now 72 years old, which makes my uniform 50 years old. (I guess you could call it an antique.)

I thought maybe some Scout organization might want it. I'd gladly send it to anyone who would give it a good home! — MILLIE FROM MELROSE, MASS.

DEAR MILLIE: I called the national headquarters of the Girl Scouts and spoke with Bonnie McEwan, the director of media information. When

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

I told her about your uniform, she said, "What timing! We would love to have Millie's uniform! We've just established a Preservation Center for just such historic items. Perhaps if you mention it in your column, others will contribute other archival items for the Girl Scout museum."

So, Millie, dear, please send your uniform, belt and hat to: Girl Scouts of the USA, National Historic Preservation Center, 830 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 11002.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I hope you can help me with. I am a female college student and share a two-bedroom apartment near the college with another girl.

When I moved in (September '87), "Nina" asked if I minded if her boyfriend, "Greg," spent the night here. I said it would be OK — not realizing that Greg would keep bringing more and more of his clothes over, until everything he owns is in this apartment! He's supposed to be living with an "uncle," but that is just a cover-up for Nina's parents. If they knew Greg was living with Nina, they would cut off her money supply. (They pay her rent and all bills.) Greg's parents know about his living arrangement, but they don't care.

I feel that living together before you are married is wrong, and I am very uncomfortable with this situation.

Also, I feel that I am being taken advantage of because Greg has never paid a dime for rent, gas, electricity, telephone — nothing. Those bills are higher because Greg takes showers, uses electricity, etc.

Nina and I want to lease this apartment next year because it's cheap and near school, but I don't want Greg living here. I like Nina. How can I tell her without losing her as a friend? — THREE'S A CROWD

DEAR THREE: Tell Nina exactly what you have told me, and if you lose her as a friend, what have you lost? A "friend" who has taken advantage of you and is deceiving her parents. Also, since you feel that living together without marriage is wrong, tell Nina that if she wants to live with Greg, she should include you out.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market 25 cents to $1.00 lower at North Carolina buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville 44.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 44.75; Wilson 44.75. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville — closed; Wallace 29.00; Spivey's Corner 29.00; Rowland — no quote.

N.C. BROILER-FRYERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 59.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to mostly good demand. Average weights light to desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina on Friday was 2,144,000, compared to 2,065,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply very heavy for a moderate demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 3 1/2 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 3-4 cents higher at mostly 3.43-3.58 in the East and mostly 3.68-3.86 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 18-19 cents lower at mostly 9.62-9.82 in the East and mostly 9.82-10.05 in the Piedmont; wheat (June-July) 3.35-3.45; new crop corn 3.25-3.46; new crop soybeans 9.22-9.76. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 96 to 99 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was slightly higher today in subdued trading.

The widely watched index of 30 industrials was up 6.76 at 2,155.05 by 10 a.m. EDT. Among broader market indicators, the New York Stock Exchange composite index of all listed issues rose 0.04 to 155.07. The American Stock Exchange market-value index fell 0.57 to 308.25.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE, with 501 up, 397 down and 489 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board totaled 30.83 million shares after the first 30 minutes.

Analysts said they did not expect trading to be very aggressive on the heels of the market's recent advance and ahead of the weekend.

Among actively traded issues, IBM was up 1/2 at 126 1/4, Texaco was up 1/4 at 49, UAL was up 1/8 at 96, and National Semiconductor was off 1/8 at 14 1/2.

On Thursday, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 3.91 to 2,148.29.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about an 8-to-7 ratio in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 803 issues down, 708 up and 473 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 185.77 million shares, down from 217.51 million previously.

and those taking medications should drink plenty of water, said spokeswoman Elizabeth McRoberts.

Electricity usage across the Piedmont regions of North Carolina and South Carolina reached record usage for a one-hour period Thursday, Duke Power Co. said.

Duke customers used 12.8 million kilowatts between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m., the company said in a release. The previous record was 12.7 million kilowatts.

Customers were lining up to buy air conditioners and have broken ones repaired at the Appliance Sales and Service Co. on Pamlico Sound in eastern North Carolina, said employee Sherman Alphin. Many customers appeared desperate to get their coolers fixed soon, he said.

"They're wanting them last winter," Alphin said. At the Cameron Village Regional Library in Raleigh, where the mercury hit 95 degrees at 2 p.m., readers were lingering longer in the air-conditioned facility before returning to the sweltering outdoors, said library clerk Felicia Rogers.

"They're coming in and saying, 'Oh God, it feels good in here!'" Ms. Rogers said. The same was true for Press Box East, a restaurant in Charlotte, according to general manager Bobbie Barley.

"People are staying longer," she said. "Instead of having just a cold beer, they're staying for dinner." In Asheville, meanwhile, business was booming at the Nantahala Outdoor Center as people sought relief in whitewater rafts on the French Broad River, said manager John Worstell.

But some rivers weren't faring so well. The French Broad River was moving at only 500 cubic feet per second at a location in Asheville Thursday, a new record-low for for June. The previous low was in 1925, when a flow of 536 cubic feet per second was measured, said Robert Mason, a hydrologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Raleigh.

Meanwhile, Dr. Ben Harrington, a veterinarian with the N.C. School of Veterinary Medicine, said the school's livestock caretakers had rigged up sprinklers in the ceiling of the school's swine and dairy cow shelters to cool the sweating animals.

The school also had stretched brown nylon shadecloth over outdoor animal pens to protect them from the blazing sun, he said.

At least two state-owned dairy farms, the Caswell Dairy in Kinston and the Cherry Dairy in Goldsboro, were using the sprinkler systems as well, Harrington said.

"Heat stress interferes with milk production — heat takes up a lot of energy from the animal," he said.

Governors Will Seek More Federal Aid

On Thursday, Branstad and fellow governors from North Dakota, South Dakota, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Ohio and Wisconsin warned that the drought is seriously affecting food production.

The situation is "much more critical than we even realized," said Gov. George Sinner of North Dakota, chairman of the National Governors' Association's agriculture committee.

"I'm afraid we're going to lose some farmers, and we've lost enough already in my state," Sinner said after a Chicago meeting of 10 governors. U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, farm representatives and agricultural experts.

The governors agreed to 36 recommendations aimed at protecting farm income, encouraging conservation and efficient use of water supplies, and preventing early sales of livestock due to feed shortages.

Gov. George Mickelson of South Dakota said the meeting would only be successful "if we go to Washington and see that these things are actually implemented."

Lyng promised that the federal government "will do what is necessary to minimize the severity of the damage." He noted that 1,200 counties in 30 states have been granted permission to cut hay or graze cattle on government-rented land set aside for conservation or crop reduction.

But, he said, the extent of the damage is undetermined.

Sinner said Lyng's speech "confused us a bit" since experts already predict a 25 percent to 30 percent drop in wheat yields this year. He said livestock feed also has been harmed.

The worsening outlook has set loose an "alarming" number of calls from families troubled by the drought, say mental health officials.

Many of the calls are from "adolescents with families who are feeling tremendous pressure ... because the parents are under such great stress," said Myrt Armstrong, a spokeswoman for the North Dakota Mental Health Association hotline.

Many farm families already suffered from a tough agricultural economy, said Milan Christianson, a family therapist at North Dakota State University.

"And now some of them are even saying, and they're shaking their fist and saying it, 'Nature. Now God's against us,'" Christianson said.

U.S. Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., said he's received many calls from desperate farmers. Dorgan said one woman even blamed him for the drought.

"During the course of the conversation she was saying, 'You know, you guys gotta do something. You can't let this happen,'" Dorgan said. "I said, 'Well, listen, unfortunately we don't control the drought.'"

A Mississippi River traffic jam grew to 1,000 barges Thursday near Memphis, Tenn., as the Coast Guard imposed new limits on the size of towboat loads.

The lack of rain has dropped the Mississippi to 20 feet lower at Memphis than it was last June. Dredging of low areas of the river continued Thursday.

The river's reduced flow has allowed dense saltwater to begin moving upstream in the Delta, threatening wildlife habitat and New Orleans' drinking water. The Army Corps of Engineers says it will build a dike 45 feet beneath the surface across the bottom of the river to block the sea water, which is heavier than fresh water. On Thursday, the leading edge of the saltwater was slightly more than halfway to New Orleans, officials said.

Dust-dry timber has been blamed for forest fires in several states. In Montana, 18 firefighters were injured when a blaze that consumed at least 11,000 acres flared up again Thursday night.

In Kentucky, the heat was blamed for exacerbating a train derailment that drove about 15,000 residents from their homes when white phosphorus that burns in high temperatures spewed from a derailed tank car and ignited.

Platform

Ted Sorensen, the onetime John F. Kennedy speechwriter who penned an earlier platform "discussion paper" for Democratic Party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr., said in an interview today, "It's fairly clear now this will be the shortest platform in over a hundred years."

"It will be a thematic, readable platform. It will not have the traditional, negative cast. Reagan, Republican, Bush — those words aren't even mentioned," said Sorensen, who also helped write this draft.

The draft is headed "The Restoration of Competence and Hope." It pledges party leaders and elected officials "to restore competence, caring and incorruptibility to the federal executive branch and get it working again fairly for all Americans."

It calls for "more stable defense budgets," appointment of a drug czar and "maintaining the special relationship with Israel" while pursuing peace in the Middle East along the lines laid out in the Camp David Accords.

Dukakis, who has ruled out any talk in the platform of raising taxes, gave a terse reply Thursday in Fall River, Mass., when asked if he supported Jackson's call for a Palestinian homeland.

"No, of course not," said the Massachusetts governor and certain nominee.

Several state Democratic parties have called for self-determination for Palestinians, saying the issue should be part of the platform.

The 16-member platform drafting committee headed by Rep. William H. Gray of Philadelphia was planning to vote late today on a preliminary draft culled from position papers agreed to in the first round of drafting sessions two weeks ago on Mackinac Island, Mich.

Clarification

Carolina East Realty Co., owners of Carolina East Convenience Center on South Memorial Drive, is not the same firm as Carolina East Realty Inc. at 2192 S Evans St.

Arlene Barnes, owner of Carolina East Realty Inc., said today her firm, which deals primarily in residential property, is not connected with the firm which owns the convenience center.

The Daily Reflector, in Thursday's edition, published a story saying a foreclosure order has been signed calling for the sale of the convenience center to satisfy a $3.02 million debt to a California savings and loan.

Papers on file with the Clerk of Superior Court's office list Harry Schreiber of West Palm Beach, Fla., as the general partner of Carolina East Realty Co.

Speculation Over: Billy Didn't Make It To All-Star Break As Piniella Named

NEW YORK (AP) — The speculation that started the day Billy Martin was hired to manage the New York Yankees for the fifth time is over.

No, he didn't make it to the All-Star break. Owner George Steinbrenner fired Martin on Thursday, ending a short but stormy term punctuated by another bar fight, a feud with umpires, a suspension, rumors about his health, a recent disagreement with the front office and odd handling of his pitching staff.

Just another day at Yankee Stadium, where the traditions include dismissing managers.

Lou Piniella, who had been kicked upstairs to general manager last October to make room for Martin, returned to take Martin's place. Piniella had resigned as GM earlier this month and now joins Gene Michael and Bob Lemon as two-time managers for the Yankees.

In all, Steinbrenner has made 15 managerial moves since buying the team in 1973.

Also, coaches Art Fowler, Cleve Boyer and George Mitterwald were reassigned and Michael and Stan Williams were hired as coaches. Williams marks the 22nd pitching coach shift under Steinbrenner.

"Things change quickly around here," Piniella said in a major understatement. "Here I am, back in the frying pan."

When he left last time as manager, Piniella said he would not return to the Yankees' dugout. But, Piniella said, he intends to stay this time.

"I'm not an interim manager. I can tell you that," he said. "I expect to be here a good while."

"I did a lot of soul-searching. I gave it a lot of thought," Piniella said.

Piniella said Steinbrenner gave him a contract extension, but did not reveal the terms.

The Yankees got off to a good start under Piniella, ending a four-game losing streak Thursday night by beating Cleveland 4-3.

Under Martin this year, the Yankees also started well. They led the American League East for most of the season until going 2-7 on a recent road trip. They fell out of first place by losing the last three games to Detroit in the Tigers' final at-bat — making it five times New York has lost when it was one out from victory — and that was the final straw.

"I feel terrible for Billy, but what could I do?" Piniella said. "In fairness to him, there were a lot of injuries."

Martin, an excellent offensive manager, was able to work around injuries to stars Don Mattingly and Rickey Henderson, along with Willie Randolph, Don Slaught and others.

But Martin, who has always been criticized for his handling of pitchers, raised more questions this year. He stopped using reliever Dave Righetti, overused Cecilio Guante in the stopper role and erratically employed Tommy John.

Martin wound up with a seven-man rotation at times. He once used Rick Rhoden as a designated hitter, the only pitcher ever used that way, and that move worked.

Still, Steinbrenner's hope for a quick-fix instead quickly backfired. Martin had trouble controlling the team and could not control himself.

Martin's plaque in monument park at Yankee Stadium proclaims him "A Yankee Forever."

Forever, however, may have come too soon and he may have finally worn out his welcome at the ballpark where his inspired play spurred the Yankees in the 1950s.

When he was hired last October, Martin predicted, "I'll have the last laugh." That's not how it ended.

"I'm still the best manager in baseball," Martin told the New York Daily News from the Manhattan hotel where he lived during the season.

"I'm a proud Yankee. I'm a Yankee and I'll leave like a Yankee," he said. "I'll try to handle it as best I can, but how many times can a man have his heart broken? I'm not a good loser. I never have been."

Martin also said the Yankees' injury problems contributed to his departure.

"We had a lot of injuries. If we win those three games in Detroit — and we could have won all three — we'd be in front by seven games."

The Yankees entered the series a half-game ahead of the Tigers.

Martin, who reportedly has a contract as manager through next year and as a consultant through 1991, was offered reassignment to another job, but neither that job nor Martin's inclination to take it were immediately known. The paper said he will meet with Steinbrenner next week.

First-base coach Mike Ferraro, bullpen coach Jeff Torborg and batting coach Chris Chambliss will remain with the club in their current capacities.

"I'll have full control of the team," Piniella said. "I'll make out the lineup card."

But Piniella should know by now: Steinbrenner is the boss. At least Piniella will not have to worry, for now, about Martin peering over his shoulder.

Piniella said he was in Albany, N.Y., this week with the Yankees' Class AA club. He said he spoke to Steinbrenner on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"I haven't been really attuned to what's been going on here," Piniella said.

McEnroe Faces Uncertain Future After Being Dumped From Wimbledon By Masur

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — With his latest comeback shattered at the spot where he yearned to succeed, John McEnroe faces an uncertain future.

"This is the difficult part," McEnroe said after he was upset 7-5, 7-6, 6-3 by Wally Masur on Centre Court at Wimbledon Thursday.

"The first nine years were like, coast," he said. "One of two things are going to happen. I'll come out of it ... or, hopefully not, just continue to stay in this mold and play inferior tennis."

Masur, a strong grass-court player, said McEnroe never seemed to be in the match.

"His concentration was sporadic throughout, especially in the first set. ... He definitely wasn't vintage John McEnroe out there," Masur said.

Back at the Grand Slam tournament he won three times in the early 1980s and where he gained a reputation as a foul-mouthed tantrum thrower, McEnroe wanted badly to do well — on two fronts.

One battle he won — that of a reformed family man taking defeat on the chin.

But in bottling up his emotions, McEnroe said he may also have put the lid on the fire he had hoped to ride back to the top of tennis.

"I'm trying to fire up but it's hard. It's a situation where everything I do is so carefully looked at here that everything becomes a big deal," McEnroe said.

While the 29-year-old American reflected on his second-round defeat, he left his rivals with one less potential obstacle.

Three of those rivals — defending champion Pat Cash, 1985 and 1986 winner Boris Becker, and the world's top-ranked player, Ivan Lendl — were in action in today's third round.

Cash took on fellow Australian John Fitzgerald on Centre Court, preceded by Steffi Graf's match against Terry Phelps.

Becker was scheduled for the second match on Court No. 1 against Sammy Giammalva, while Lendl met Michiel Schapers of the Netherlands on Court 2.

But whatever happens for the rest of the tournament, the demise of McEnroe will leave its mark on Wimbledon 1988.

The American skipped the event in 1986 as part of a six-month sabbatical from tennis. Last year, illness and injury kept him away.

But ever since McEnroe announced he would return this year to the scene of some of his greatest triumphs and most controversial outbursts, the anticipation could be felt throughout the All England Club's dignified corridors.

The American, who had been seeded eighth despite being ranked No. 19 in the world, said he let everybody down.

"It was a disgusting effort," McEnroe said after his loss to Masur, ranked No. 64. "I wouldn't have won the women's tournament the way I played today."

McEnroe, who wasted set points in both of the first two sets, had little luck, either.

Student Responsible For Academics

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

When the NCAA decided to adopt tougher requirements for college athletic admissions, the effect was felt sharply throughout both the collegiate and high school systems.

But while improving the academic support system for high school athletes would aid their progress, the final responsibility lies with the individual, according to participants in a workshop on NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j), commonly known as Proposition 48. The workshop Thursday was sponsored by the Pitt County School system.

"Ultimately the responsibility comes down to the student and his or her parents," said Gene Owens, associate director of Admissions at East Carolina University. "Until the kids decide they are ready and get support from their parents, it is not going to matter."

The NCAA adopted the tougher requirements three years ago. Thursday's panel included Owens, ECU assistant football coach Chuck Driesbach, Farmville Central football coach Dixon Sauls and ECU assistant athletic director for academic counseling Pam Penland with Pitt County School Systems Athletic Director Bob Dailey as the moderator.

The forum dealt with exchanging information on the bylaw, its requirements and how it impacts both on the high schools and the colleges. 5-1-(j) requires prospective college athletes to have a 2.0 grade point average in specified core curriculum as well as a minimum score of either 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT.

The requirements of 5-1-(j) have altered the roles of just about every player in the college recruiting game, from high school guidance counselors to assistant college coaches who handle the initial recruiting process.

"I can teach you the trap block and how to complete a third-down completion," Driesbach said. "But now all of a sudden, we have to fall in this role of being interpreters. We have to go into the high schools not only looking for athletic talent, but also have to make split second decisions, often without the availability of talking to a counselor, and make a recommendation about whether to sign a prospect."

The core curriculum requirements mandate that incoming student-athletes in both Division I and Division II must have taken 11 core, or college preparatory classes, in a variety of specified subjects. Because these classes are normally spread out over a four-year high school career, both school system and university officials stressed the importance of identifying potential division I prospects early.

"It is critical that we identify these student-athletes as early in the game as possible," Owens said. "In order to meet the requirements that are now being mandated, not only from the NCAA but from the UNC general administration, it's critical that these kids are identified as early as possible."

Sauls said identifying a student-athlete early is always the objective, but it is not necessarily as easy as it sounds.

"From my standpoint ... identifying a prospect in the eighth grade might be a difficult process, but certainly by their sophomore year, if they can be helped by guidance, coaches, principals, someone should go ahead and help them," Sauls said.

The panel emphasized the importance of getting the student-athletes on track early to avoid future problems.

"I was up in the Tidewater area this spring and there are so many good football players and great athletes out there," Driesbach said. "But you look at a transcript and there is no way they can go to a (Division I) college under these rules. They've done good work their junior year and even some their sophomore but in ninth grade they weren't in any core courses and they just won't have 11 core courses and they are trying to cram them into summer school just to get the 11 and it is really a tragedy."

In dealing with the core curriculum standards, Owens said the prospective student-athlete could take more than the required 11 classes because a university would look at only the best 11. He also encouraged students to take both the SAT and the ACT, just to explore all possible options.

Since the NCAA legislation has concentrated on academic admission requirements; it has also made recruiters focus on academic more so than ever before.

Driesbach, who covers a 50-school area in North Carolina as well as parts of Virginia and Maryland, said the availability of academic information, such as transcripts and SAT scores, helps get the recruiting process started early so they'll know if the student-athlete has a chance to qualify.

And that's important because a scholarship is worth a minimum of $40,000 — a big investment. Coaches and university administrators need to identify prospects that will be eligible for admission.

"The recruiting process can't start until we can see if an athlete is going to qualify," Driesbach said.

Another complicating factor is the limited time coaches can recruit under NCAA guidelines. It can be a confusing time, both for the college coaches, the athlete and school officials since the evaluation period is so short.

"I have a very short time in which to make my evaluations," Driesbach said. "Basically we have from May 1 to 31 to visit the different schools and we're not allowed to talk to the athletes. We'll talk to the coaches and if we need to talk to a guidance counselor, we like to do that. That period is an evaluation of rising seniors.

"The second period of time to do this is from Dec. 1 to the signing date, which usually falls on the second Wednesday of February. So you can see we have our work cut out for us."

That has been one problem for recruiters as well as high school officials because a scholarship may be riding on that initial, often unscheduled visit.

"There are 99 Division I schools and if you have a Division I prospect you may have 99 coaches tromping through your doors in the month of May wanting to talk to your coach and wanting to talk to your counselor," Driesbach said. "And that's just for the Division I prospect. You may have other prospects, Division II or Division III. We understand your problem."

In the end, what the bylaw has accomplished is to make prospective athletes more like other students in terms of admissions.

"If you have a student-athlete that is looking at a university, that university's admissions office is going to make the final decision," Penland said. "That is where the buck ultimately stops."

"Athletics at the university level is very different from high school. It is year-round competition. You have to have tough kids to do it. They have to want it both on the field and in the classroom because if they don't want it in the classroom, they are not going to make it."

Pitt Holds On For 8-6 Win

ROCKY MOUNT — Pitt County's American Legion baseball team held off a Rocky Mount rally in the ninth inning to gain an 8-6 victory Thursday night.

Rocky Mount jumped into the lead in the first inning. Joseph Hill singled and came all the way around to score on a hit by Lee Boone.

Rocky Mount added a second run in the second. Dan Wood doubled and Mark Worsley reached on an error. Scott Lewis' sacrifice fly brought Wood over.

Pitt broke the ice with a run in the fourth. Robbie McDonald doubled and went to third on a wild pitch. He scored on Jay Surles' sacrifice fly.

Pitt pushed over three in the fifth to take a 4-2 lead. Tom Moye walked and David Daniels got a hit, bringing him in. Franz Holscher walked but Daniels was thrown out trying to advance on a wild pitch. Ty Little singled in Holscher and McDonald got a hit by score Little.

Pitt added a fifth run in the seventh. Gary Hodges walked and scored on a double by Surles.

Two more crossed in the eighth. Daniels doubled and took third on a wild pitch, scoring on Holscher's ground out. Little doubled and moved to third on an error. He scored on John Bolen's single.

Pitt closed out its scoring with one in the ninth. Surles walked and David Leisten reached on a two-base error. Moye then sacrificed Surles over for an 8-2 lead.

But Rocky Mount then put together a rally in the bottom of the ninth that nearly carried through. Paul Strickland singled and Hill walked. Both moved up on a wild pitch. Boone doubled both of them in and Wood got a hit. Mark Worsley then doubled to drive both in, but Pitt got the final batter out to end the game.

Daniels led Pitt with three hits while Surles, Leisten, Little, Bolen and McDonald each had two. Worsley had three hits and Boone, two, to lead Rocky Mount.

Pitt will play a home game against Wilson at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, then will face Rocky Mount at home at 7:30 p.m. that same night.

Williams Won't Attend North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina Coach Dean Smith says 6-foot-9 forward Kenny Williams will attend a junior college or possibly another four-year school this fall instead of joining the Tar Heels.

Williams, The Associated Press player of the year in North Carolina while averaging 31 points a game at Northeastern High School in Elizabeth City, failed to graduate with his class 10 days ago. Williams has said he is 2½ credits short of graduation.

"Kenny didn't provide the needed (academic) ammunition to pursue an admission," Smith told The Raleigh Times Thursday. "He just got lazy this year in school."

Earlier in the week, Williams said he would attend summer classes at the College of Albemarle in an effort to complete his high school requirements.

Williams also said he planned to attend North Carolina on a basketball scholarship in September. But Smith said Thursday that after talking with Williams, the decision was reached not to place the student's name before the UNC-Chapel Hill Board of Admissions.

Smith said Williams would make a decision later this summer on where he would attend college.

Williams could not be reached for comment.

If Williams chooses to attend junior college and apply for a transfer to North Carolina, he would have to achieve 48 transferable hours and graduate from junior college in order to become eligible for NCAA competition.

Williams would have joined 6-9 J.R. Reid and 6-11 Scott Williams on North Carolina's front line.

Kenny Williams and Scott Williams are not related.

Allison Better, But Still Critical

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Racing driver Bobby Allison was doing better but remained in critical condition Thursday with injuries suffered in the NASCAR Miller 500 at Long Pond, a spokesman said.

"He's progressing ever so slightly," said Ed Gossage, a spokesman for Allison's sponsor, Miller Racing. "It's going to be an inch-by-inch thing as they go but they're very satisfied with the progress so far."

He has been listed in critical condition at Lehigh Valley Hospital Center since the crash Sunday at Pocono International Raceway, according to hospital officials.

He suffered a concussion in the wreck, as well as a broken left ankle, a broken left femur and fractured left ribs, Gossage said. A pin was installed in his femur Sunday night, but doctors have postponed surgery on his ankle until he improves, Gossage said.

Gossage said that on Wednesday, Allison's son-in-law and chief mechanic Pat Broyles came into the room and said "Hey, Bobby," and Bobby turned his head and rolled his eyes to pick up Pat across the room and reached for him.

"He's in and out of consciousness," Gossage said. "He's a tough old man."

The injuries occurred on the first lap of Sunday's race when a blown tire sent Allison's Buick into a wall. It bounced into the path of another car that rammed Allison's vehicle on the driver's side. Allison had to be pried out of his car.

Nelson Grabs Atlanta Lead

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Larry Nelson says his lead in the $700,000 Atlanta Golf Classic has nothing to do with owning a home on the Atlanta Country Club course.

"I just live here," Nelson said Thursday after securing a one-shot lead with a 9-under-par 63 in the opening round of the $700,000 tournament.

"I never play here," he said. "I practice here quite a bit, but not play. I probably have played only three rounds here since last year's tournament."

The PGA champion, playing in the morning before sweltering 95-degree weather baked the afternoon contestants, held a one-shot lead over Bobby Wadkins, who missed a chance to share the top spot when he bogeyed the 421-yard, par-4 17th hole.

Dave Eichelberger, another veteran player high on the leader board, and Tom Brannen, pro at a local club, shot 65.

"I'm 125 yards from the practice tee," Nelson said of his home, adjacent to the 18th fairway. "It's about a 9-iron."

He said most of his time on the course is spent caddying for his two sons.

Nelson wasn't pleased with his play off the tee. He hit only three fairways, but a lack of rough because of a six-week drought kept him out of trouble.

"My iron game is probably the best it's ever been and I'm putting better than I have been since last August," said Nelson, who also won the PGA in 1981 and the U.S. Open in 1983.

Seven of his birdies came on putts of 10 feet or less. His longest of the day was a 35-footer for birdie on the 10th, and he also had a 25-footer on 14 when he completed a string of three birdies in succession.

Tudor Keeps ERA Low

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
 AP Sports Writer

Twenty years ago, Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals set the modern National League ERA record of 1.12 for pitchers with more than 200 innings.

Will history repeat? John Tudor, a current Cardinal, has pitched 83 1-3 innings this season with an ERA of 1.08.

Tudor continued his sensational pitching Thursday night with a two-hitter — no walks, four strikeouts — as St. Louis snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating the Philadelphia Phillies 2-0.

"I had good control tonight. I was able to throw strikes," Tudor said after hurling the 15th shutout of his career but his first since he blanked the Phillies on Sept. 26, 1985, one of his 10 shutouts that year.

Tudor threw 91 pitches Thursday night, 68 for strikes.

"That's what he does when he's pitching good," Manager Whitey Herzog said. "There were only two three-ball counts. He's an amazing guy."

Tudor wasn't the only NL pitcher to make headlines. Chicago's Greg Maddux fired a seven-hitter and became baseball's first 13-game winner as the Cubs cooled off the New York Mets 4-1.

In the only other game, Sid Bream led Pittsburgh to a 6-4 victory over Montreal by driving in four runs with a two-run homer in the third inning and a tie-breaking two-run double in the eighth.

Tudor has allowed only 10 earned runs and 67 hits in 83 1-3 innings but the Cardinals have given him little offensive support, the reason he's only 4-2.

Philadelphia's hits were singles by Steve Jeltz with one out in the third and pinch hitter Bob Dernier leading off the ninth. It was the second complete game in 12 starts for Tudor, who started the season on the disabled list with knee and shoulder problems.

"You've got to give Tudor credit; he's always tough," Phillies manager Lee Elia said. "It's tough to get decisions when you get only two hits."

Vince Coleman provided all the offense Tudor needed with a single, a walk and three stolen bases. He scored both runs. In the fifth, he singled, stole second and scored on Willie McGee's single. In the seventh, Coleman walked, stole second and third and scored on Ozzie Smith's suicide squeeze bunt.

Cubs 4, Mets 1

Maddux, 13-3, earned his seventh straight victory and ninth in 10 starts and lowered his ERA to 2.14. The Cubs scored all their runs off Sid Fernandez in the first two innings. Andre Dawson had a solo homer in the first and Dave Martinez added a two-run shot in the second.

"It seems like this whole year where there's a game that can turn it around for us, we've won," Manager Don Zimmer said. "Of course, when you have a guy who has won 13 games it's pretty hard to lose too many in a row."

The Mets didn't get a hit after Wally Backman singled to start the fifth. Maddux retired the next 12 batters until an error to start the ninth.

"It's nice to beat a team you haven't beaten before," said Maddux, who was 0-3 against the Mets and 6-14 overall last year as a rookie. "And it's nice to have an early four-run lead where you can make a mistake and not have it cost you the game."

It was a double loss for the Mets, who also saw first baseman Keith Hernandez pull up lame after re-injuring a pulled hamstring while out a first-inning single.

Hernandez, who came off his first-ever stint on the disabled list Wednesday, is expected to go back on the DL.

Pirates 6, Expos 4

Montreal reliever Jeff Parrett struck out Andy Van Slyke to start the eighth but Bobby Bonilla singled, Darnell Coles walked and Bream doubled them home to break a 3-3 tie. The Pirates added an unearned run in the ninth, offsetting a Montreal run in the bottom of the ninth.

Jeff Robinson pitched 2 1-3 innings in relief of starter Brian Fisher to earn the victory. Jim Gott got the last two outs for his eighth save.

Pittsburgh took a 2-0 against John Dopsin in the second inning on a walk and Bream's seventh home run. Two-out singles by Lind, Van Slyke and Bonilla made it 3-0 in the third.

Tim Wallach homered in the fourth for the Expos' first run and they tied it with two runs in the fifth on Tom Foley's triple, Luis Rivera's single, Tim Lincecum's two-out single and an error.

"This is a good park to hit in because there's a good background and you can see the ball well," said Bream, who raised his lifetime batting average in Olympic Stadium to .329. "But the most important thing is that I'm swinging well lately. When you're in a groove, you can hit anywhere."

Pepsi-Cola..... 12
 Exchange..... 11

Pepsi-Cola rallied for two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning and pulled out a 12-11 victory over the Exchange in the Tar Heel Little League Thursday.

Exchange took the lead with a run in the first, but Pepsi came back to score five times in the bottom of the frame. Exchange scored once in the second and added two more in the third before Pepsi scored two in the bottom of the third to make it 7-4. Exchange scored two in the fourth, then took the lead with two in the fifth, 8-7. Pepsi scored three times in the bottom of the fifth to regain the lead, 10-8. Exchange then pushed over three in the top of the sixth to move back ahead, 11-10.

But in the bottom of the sixth, Pepsi scored twice to win it. Todd MacKenzie reached on an error and with one out, C.J. Wilder doubled. Richard Lenzy singled in MacKenzie with the tying run and with two outs. Jason Howard got a hit to score Wilder with the game-winner.

Howard led Pepsi with three hits while Geoff Stallings and Wilder each had two. Greg Pearsall and D.J. Miles led Exchange with three hits apiece, while Neil Boardman, Ben Hahn and Chris Joyner each added two.

Coca-Cola..... 18
 Eveready..... 7

Lee Jordan collected five hits to help lead Coca-Cola to an 18-7 victory over Eveready in the North State Little League Thursday.

Coke took the lead with a run in the top of the first, but Eveready came back with four in the bottom of the frame. Coke then came back to score four in the second for a 5-4 lead.

Then, in the third, Coke put the game away, scoring three more times for an 8-4 lead. Jacob Zonn led off with a double and moved to third on a passed ball. With one out, Sam Salargo was hit by a pitch and Jordan singled to drive in Zonn. Both runners moved up on a wild pitch and Steve Salargo walked to load the bases. Joshua Boyles' grounder forced Sam Salargo at the plate and Jordan then stole home. Steve Salargo scored when Jaime Wilson and Robert Barnes both walked to force him in.

Coke added six in the fourth, three in the fifth and one in the sixth. Eveready added two in the fourth and one in the fifth.

Barnes and James Ebron each added two hits for Coke. Danny Via and Jeremy Gonzalez each had two for Eveready.

Babe Ruth League

Everette's..... 16
 Computerland..... 7

Everette's Pest Control erupted for nine runs in the eighth inning to break a 7-7 deadlock and take a 16-7 win over Computerland in Babe Ruth League action Thursday.

The two teams had been tied at 7-7 when the game was suspended on Wednesday. It was resumed at the start of the eighth on Thursday.

Chris Haddock led off with a walk and Milton Carawan was hit by a pitch. Joseph Cox was safe on a fielder's choice that got no one. Randall Miller was also hit by a pitch, scoring Haddock. Josh Potter reached on an error, scoring Carawan and Cox. Miller then scored on a passed ball. Jermain Williams singled in Potter and stole both second and third. Billy Gorham walked and stole second. Both scored on David Likosar's single. Carawan reached on an error, scoring Likosar and he stole second and took third on a passed ball, scoring on a double by Cox to close it out.

Likosar had three hits to lead Everette's. Drew Johnson had three hits for Computerland.

Senior Babe Ruth

Planters Bank..... 13
 Greene County..... 3

Planters Bank took the lead in the first inning and never let go as it rolled to a 13-3 victory over Greene County in the Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League Thursday night.

Greene County scored first, getting a run in the top of the first.

But Planters came back to score six in its half of the inning. Chris Fuqua singled and moved up on a balk. Travis Williamson also singled and stole second. Wesley Jackson was walked, loading the bases and Maurice Hines doubled them in. Walter Gatlin singled and stole second. A passed ball let Hines score and another brought in Gatlin. Jerome Vines later reached on a fielder's choice and came around to score on wild pitches.

Planters added three in the third, three in the fourth and one in the fifth. Greene also got two in the fifth.

Fuqua and Scott Fix each had two hits for Planters. Brad Kearney had two to lead Greene County.

Piniella Starts Out With A Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Piniella started his second stint as New York Yankees manager with a closed-door, pre-game pep talk that took no longer than a couple of minutes.

It worked.

"I just told the players, 'Look, I'm going to be here for awhile. All I ask is for you to play hard for me. You do that and you'll be in there. So relax, have fun, and play good baseball,'" said Piniella, who Thursday afternoon replaced the man who replaced him, Billy Martin.

The Yankees responded to Piniella's arrival with a quick win, breaking a season-long four-game losing streak with a 4-3 come-from-behind victory over the Cleveland Indians and moving within two games of first place in the American League East.

In the only other American League game, Toronto downed Baltimore 5-2.

Gary Ward, who entered the game hitting .194, hit a game-tying two-run homer in the seventh inning and then singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth to make a winner of reliever Dave Righetti, 2-0.

Dave Winfield set up the winning run with some alert baserunning, moving from first to second on Jack Clark's not-so-deep one-out flyout and scoring easily on Ward's one-hop line drive to right-center.

"We really hustled out there tonight," Piniella said. "But if Billy were here tonight, they would've played just as hard. All I know is, this is a good game to build with. This is a good ballclub, and I think they now know that again."

Righetti, who pitched one scoreless inning for the victory, said, "We've seen so many changes over the year, we don't too excited anymore. We just shake our heads and then go out and play. But you still wonder sometimes how the team will react. And, tonight, well, we really need a win. The players needed it for themselves. It didn't matter who was managing us. We needed one win to get us over the hump. It was great the way we came back. This game was a character builder."

Joe Carter hit a sacrifice fly and Mel Hall lined an RBI double in the first and Hall hit a solo homer — his first since last Oct. 4 — in the third, giving the Indians a 3-0 off starter Rick Rhoden. But Rhoden settled down after that, allowing only three singles over his last 5 2-3 innings and, at one point, retiring 10 in a row.

Winfield, who collected three of his team's seven hits, doubled home Don Mattingly in the fourth and Ward tied the score and chased starter Scott Bailes three innings later with his second homer of the season.

Reliever Jon Perlman, 0-1, began the ninth by retiring Mattingly on a groundout. But Winfield legged out an infield single to short and, on Clark's flyout, raced to second when left fielder Hall lobbed a throw into the cutoff man. Ward followed with his game-winning single, as Winfield scored ahead an across-the-body throw from right fielder Cory Snyder.

"Winfield manufactured a run," Perlman said. "It was heads-up baserunning. Good, hard baseball."

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 2

Baltimore left fielder Ken Gerhart, who homered to start the game, dropped a fly ball that led to the tying and lead runs in the sixth inning. Winner Jim Clancy was tagged for home runs by Gerhart and Fred Lynn, the first two Baltimore batters, but yielded only two more hits through six innings to snap a personal three-game losing streak.

Tony Fernandez opened the Toronto sixth with a fly to deep left that hit the heel of Gerhart's glove for a two-base error. Lloyd Moseby followed with a double that tied the game 2-2. Moseby took third on Rance Mulliniks' fly ball and scored on George Bell's sacrifice fly.

Ernie Whitt started the Toronto seventh with a single and Manny Lee's one-out single chased Baltimore starter Jay Tibbs, 2-4. Fernandez, who tripled home Toronto's first run in the third inning, greeted Don Aase with a double that scored Whitt. Lee scored on Moseby's sacrifice fly.

Martin Is Fired...

145 record in the 1986 and 1987 seasons, but Steinbrenner became angry with him and did not speak with him for weeks at a time.

The Yankees said in a press release that the change was mutually agreed to by Steinbrenner and Bob Quinn, who replaced Piniella as general manager.

Eddie Sapir, Martin's lawyer, said from New Orleans that he had been told by Quinn that "on authorization from Steinbrenner, all the terms and conditions in Billy's contract will be honored in their entirety."

Sapir said he and Martin would meet with Steinbrenner next week.

"I guess some things are still surprising to me," Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly said, "even though I've pretty much learned here to expect the unexpected. I feel bad for Billy."

"When I walked into the clubhouse today, everything was real quiet, and I said 'Whoops!' and then I saw our clubhouse guy emptying out lockers," third baseman Mike Pagliarulo said. "Being here, you just have to learn how to deal with changes."

On May 6, Martin threw dirt on umpire Tim Welke after being ejected for arguing a strike call in a game against the Texas Rangers. Martin was fined $300 by the American League for that incident. It was after that game that Martin was injured in a fight at a topless bar in Arlington, Texas.

On June 2, he was suspended for three games and fined for kicking and tossing dirt on umpire Dale Scott in a game on May 30 — setting off a confrontation with the umpires' union. After Commissioner Peter Ueberroth intervened, Martin apologized and the umpires withdrew their ejection threats.

Martin, who has a career record of 1,258-1,018, said earlier this week that he would never manage the Yankees again if he was replaced now.

Martin had been fired from his fourth term on Oct. 27, 1985, just before the start of Game 7 of the World Series between Kansas City and St. Louis. He had become Yankees manager again that April 28, replacing Yogi Berra 16 games into the season. He was distant from many of his players in that term and was involved in bar fights on consecutive nights in Baltimore.

On Sept. 20, 1985, he got into a fight with a bar patron at the Cross Keys Inn, where the Yankees were staying. The next night, he broke his arm as he fought Yankees pitcher Ed Whitson in a scrap that moved from the hotel lobby, into an elevator and into a parking lot.

Although the Yankees were 91-54 under Martin, Steinbrenner decided to make switch to Piniella.

In 1986 and 1987, Martin was an advisor to Steinbrenner and a television commentator on Yankees' broadcasts.

Martin's first term as Yankee manager was his most successful. He replaced Bill Virdon on Aug. 2, 1975, two weeks after being fired by the Texas Rangers.

In 1976, New York won the its first American League pennant since 1964 and in 1977, the Yankees won the pennant and took the World Series from the Los Angeles Dodgers in six games.

But the Yankees fought while they won. Martin nearly brawled with Reggie Jackson in the dugout at Fenway Park on June 18, 1977. It was a dispute with Jackson that led to Martin's first Yankee firing the next season.

On July 18, 1978, Jackson ignored Martin's instructions to bunt in a game. Jackson was suspended for five days. Martin continued to show anger at his star player and on July 23 at O'Hare Airport in Chicago, Martin said of Jackson and Steinbrenner: "One's a born liar; the other's convicted."

Martin resigned in tears the next day on a hotel balcony in Kansas City, Mo., and he was replaced by Lemon.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY June 25

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't let ambitions get the better of you this morning. Steer clear of elders with radically different ideas.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Give others the benefit of the doubt in financial matters whenever feasible, but be cautious with business. Spend time with a close friend this evening.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Steer clear of colleagues who act strangely. Contact a financial expert after lunch. Use tact with an irate associate.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Put aside routine for a while, and take care of personal affairs. Examine causes of anxiety. Surround yourself with as many friends as possible.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Cut down on time and money spent on pleasure, work to increase intimacies. Show that you appreciate your kin.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Treat those you live with kindly, and enjoy hobbies with good friends at night. Get your personal affairs nicely in order after lunch.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): In writings and trips, be tactful. Socialize in the evening. Dress nicely and work on a new friendship.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): It's not the best time to start a new project or to solve an old problem. Go shopping instead. A new contact can bring good ideas.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Prepare for a vital day in business. Finish personal duties. The evening will be delightful. Energy and health are high.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't permit a private anxiety to interfere with responsibility. Your mood will improve in afternoon, and the evening should be nice.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Time spent with friends is not the most gratifying today; it might be better to work hard and enjoy co-workers. Don't make any decisions.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Not a good day to handle business matters, so enjoy yourself. Pick activities that express your talents.

 You don't get a medal for foolishly flying in the eye of a hurricane.

If you are warned that a line is unlikely to work, look for an alternative.
 South bid his hand well to reach a contract of five clubs. Note that he did not consider his two-suiter worth an opening two-bid. Be wary of opening two-suited hands with a demand bid, especially if you are using two clubs as an artificial forcing bid; you could easily lose one of your suits if the opponents compete.
 South's four-heart cue-bid left open the possibility of slam in case North held anything extra, such as a fourth trump.
 Declarer ruffed the opening heart lead, cashed the ace-king of spades and tried to ruff a spade. East over-ruffed and returned a low trump. Declarer won and again attempted to trump a spade. Once more East over-ruffed, and eventually declarer had to concede a diamond trick for down one.
 Unlucky perhaps, but not in the light of the bidding. It was quite possible that West held four spades for his takeout double, and East surely held at least two, probably three, trumps.

 Even with a 4-2 spade break, declarer could score six clubs, three spades and the ace of diamonds. Therefore, one ruff in dummy was all he needed to make his contract. After cashing the high spades, declarer should have discarded a diamond on the third spade. He can then win the diamond return, come to hand with a trump and discard dummy's last diamond on the fourth spade. A diamond ruff would then be the fulfilling trick.

FCC Fines TV Station For Nudity But Ruling Leaves Broadcasters Guessing

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Television stations have been put on notice: Scenes of a bare-breasted woman seducing a 15-year-old boy are off limits on prime-time TV.

Beyond that, though, TV stations say they have little to guide their programming decisions and protect themselves from government sanctions for violating decency standards.

"This is a baby step of further information, but it's not enough to provide any cohesive or comprehensive guidelines for stations," said Walt Wurfel, a spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters.

The FCC issued the guidance on Thursday, when it slapped a $2,000 fine on Kansas City, Mo., station KZKC-TV for airing the movie "Private Lessons" at 8 p.m. on May 26, 1987 — a time, the agency said, when children were likely to be watching.

The movie is about a 15-year-old boy seduced by his housekeeper, who undresses while the boy watches in one scene. She appears bare-breasted in several other instances. These scenes, the FCC said, "were neither isolated nor fleeting."

The commission said nudity and sexual themes are not necessarily "indecent," but their context and treatment in "Private Lessons" were.

"The movie included nudity and scenes depicting sexual matters, which were dealt with in a pandering and titillating manner," the FCC said.

"The story line of the seduction of a 15-year-old boy by an older woman, together with the inclusion of explicit nudity, would have commanded the attention of children and the sexual references would have been readily understood by children who tuned in to the program," the commission said.

The station's owners, Media Central Inc. of Chattanooga, Tenn., said the movie had been cut by an inexperienced editor and violated the station's own standards of good taste.

But the Kansas City Times reported in today's editions that Media Central says it will not pay the $2,000 fine.

"It's a matter of principle," Morton Kent, Media Central's chairman of the board told the newspaper. "We have the money to pay the $2,000 fine, but we will not."

Kent said the FCC ignored the fact that KZKC changed its editing policy after the R-rated movie was broadcast.

The FCC's decency guidelines have been under fire since they were adopted in April 1987. Broadcasters and others say the guidelines are unconstitutionally vague. A coalition of these groups is challenging the guidelines in court.

The FCC judges material to be indecent if it "depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory organs or activities."

Obscene material — defined as appealing to prurient interest and lacking literary, artistic, political or scientific value — by law cannot be aired at any time, but the Supreme Court has said indecent material cannot be totally banned. The FCC says indecent material can be aired after midnight, when there is little risk children would be watching.

Critics have demanded that the FCC give more specific guidance about what will be considered indecent, but commission lawyers have said that providing a list of dos and don'ts would run afoul of the Constitution. Instead, the FCC has told broadcasters they should be guided by the decisions the agency makes in the cases that come before it.

Since the FCC revised its decency standards, it has acted on nine complaints against broadcasters, including the one against KZKC-TV. At the same time that the FCC revised the standards, it issued warnings to three radio stations, and later dismissed complaints against two TV and three radio stations.

The commission has said several times that context is a crucial factor in determining whether material is indecent.

In one case, the commission dismissed a complaint against a TV program on sex education that included a simulated demonstration of birth control devices. The FCC said that though the program contained references to sexual and excretory organs and activities, the references "in context, were not vulgar, lewd or shocking. Nor were they made in a pandering or titillating manner."

TV Chiefs Say Go Slowly On Changes

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Three television network chiefs warning against any broadcasting system that might make today's 140 million television sets obsolete, advised Congress Thursday to go slow with plans for big-screen, vastly sharper pictures.

"We're here to preserve free television," Laurence A. Tisch, president and chief executive of CBS Inc., told the telecommunications subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

The new technology, known as high-definition television, or HDTV, makes possible sharper images and offers the potential for a huge new consumer market in wall-sized television systems.

"Right now, Japanese and European companies are far out in front in developing advanced television systems, while our domestic consumer electronics industry is moribund," said Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., the subcommittee chairman.

Markey and many other members of Congress fear that the burgeoning industry may be captured by foreign producers, and they are searching for ways to assure that the new televisions will be made in the United States, if possible.

The television networks, on the other hand, worry that high-definition broadcasting could offer new programming that would provide additional competition for them.

"Broadcasters and the FCC have a responsibility to protect the 140 million TV sets currently in use, representing a consumer investment of approximately $70 billion," Robert E. Wright, president and chief executive of National Broadcasting Co., told the subcommittee.

Wright called for government approval of a compatible system capable of carrying both current signals and the new high-definition picture.

Without a single standard, Wright warned of "confusion, chaos and expense" if consumers were forced to have separate television sets for ordinary broadcasts and for high-definition transmissions. Congress should encourage a uniform broadcast standard for conventional and high-definition television, he said.

Similar advice came from Thomas S. Murphy, chairman and chief executive of Capital Cities-ABC Inc. "Any new system that is not compatible with existing receivers will cause 140 million existing television sets in this country to become obsolete," he warned.

However, the cable television industry, a rival of the networks for viewers, takes a different approach. More than half of households with television sets also subscribe to a cable service, and 2 million homes have satellite dishes, said Richard D. Roberts, chairman of TeleCable Corp.

"It is very likely that a single transmission standard could adversely affect both of these technologies," said Roberts, representing the National Cable Television Association. The single standard, while helpful to the networks, could freeze progress in development of better pictures for transmission by cable and satellite, the cable industry argues.

NEW YORK (AP) — Viewers who don't want to stay up half the night this fall can get a glimpse of NBC's new late-night talk show host, sports announcer Bob Costas, when he takes a turn as guest co-host on "Today," beginning Monday.

On Aug. 22, Costas' show, "Later with Bob Costas," premieres. It will follow "Late Night with David Letterman" Monday through Friday at 1:30 a.m. EDT.

Costas hopes a homey set and varied guest list will quickly disabuse viewers of the notion that Costas is a sports guy and must be doing a sports show.

Some of the guests already booked include David Eisenhower, activist Abbie Hoffman, comedians Steven Wright and Martin Mull, talk-show host Larry King, journalists Tom Shales and Linda Ellerbee, film critics Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert, sex therapist Dr. Ruth Westheimer, actor Chuck Norris, singers Meatloaf and Johnny Cash and Jerry Mathers as "the Beaver."

Sports figures won't be ignored. John Madden and Bob Uecker have been booked, and Costas hopes to get Sugar Ray Leonard and Bobby Knight on the show, too.

"If we do get sports figures, it would be because the interest in them transcends sports fans," Costas said.

BOB COSTAS

"We're going to get a really good cross-section of people that I think will appeal to viewers that have watched the Letterman show. We hope we can keep some of the people that are watching Letterman at 1:30 and pick up some strays. You know, milkmen who are getting ready to go to work, precocious paper boys."

Meanwhile, Costas is one in a series of fill-ins for "Today" co-host Bryant Gumbel, who is off getting ready for his duties as anchor of the network's coverage of the Summer Olympics. Costas will go to the Olympics, too, and appear on a wrap-up that will pre-empt the NBC late-night schedule, including his own show.

It has been widely speculated that Gumbel won't want to return to the early-morning grind after his high-profile stint in prime time. So Costas, along with other guest hosts, has been presumed under consideration to replace him.

Costas' predecessors in the recent host-of-the-week series have included Phil Donahue, Tom Snyder and Jim Lehrer. All three are consummate professionals in their element, but only Snyder seemed comfortable with the "Today" format.

Costas dismisses speculation about the "Today" slot but avoids issuing an unequivocal rejection of the idea.

"I think the thing that no reasonably intelligent person would say — 'No I'll never do that.' Stupid thing to say. But is it something I'm thinking about doing, something that concerns me, something I'm pointing toward doing? Absolutely not."

How well he does next week notwithstanding, Costas is considered to have star potential by NBC, whose talk-show king, Johnny Carson, is approaching retirement age.

And the cushy schedule of "Later" would be hard for Costas to give up. The show is taped one day a week, then he's free to continue his first love, covering baseball. And if the show is successful and is picked up beyond the current 26-show commitment, Costas will move it for the summer to St. Louis, his hometown. A "Today" job would require him to be in New York almost all the time.

"I'm well aware that some very substantial people in this business have done that ('Today') job, and even to be mentioned in connection with it is flattering and an honor, et cetera, et cetera," Costas said.

"However, I think the most important thing that someone should do is do what makes them happy, not fulfill somebody else's idea of what the next highest-ranking job is and what the next step up the ladder is and what your next ambition should be."

"My ambition is to do a good job at what I do and to be happy. And I'm very, very, very happy anytime I'm at a baseball game."

Letterman Plans To Return Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — Fans of David Letterman won't have to recycle laughs by sitting through "Late Night" reruns after next Tuesday.

NBC's "Late Night with David Letterman" is going back on the air, says head writer Steve O'Donnell, who hopes he'll be back on the job, too, if the writers of the popular late-night NBC talk show can get a waiver from the striking Writers Guild of America.

Even if they don't, Letterman will go on the air with his writers' blessing, said O'Donnell.

"We've been having meetings all week and we've decided the best thing is to get the show on the air," he said. Johnny Carson resumed his "Tonight Show" last month without writers and is writing his own monologues. O'Donnell said if the writers do not receive a waiver from the guild, Letterman, who also is a guild member, will resume the show in his capacity as performer and make "casual remarks" in lieu of a monologue, then interview guests.

An NBC spokesman said Thursday night he could not confirm that Letterman was going back on the air.

Both "The Tonight Show" and

"Late Night" went into reruns when the writers went on strike four months ago. Letterman's show had previously sought an independent contract with the guild, but that plan was scrapped because the show is a production of NBC.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS WATER LINE CONSTRUCTION TO THE WEYERHAEUSER GREENVILLE LUMBER FACILITY
Pitt County, North Carolina
Sealed proposals will be received by the Pitt County Engineering Department in the Commissioners' Board Room on the First Floor of the Pitt County Office Building at 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834 on July 7, 1988 until 2:00 p.m. local time. Bids for furnishing all materials, equipment, and labor for the construction of a Water Line to the Weyerhaeuser Greenville Lumber Facility will be opened and read immediately after the time specified above. Complete plans, specifications, and Contact Documents are available during normal working hours at the office of the County Engineer at 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina. The WORK will consist of the following items of construction:
Approximately 20,000 linear feet of 12" C 900 PVC or Ductile Iron Water Main and Appurtenances Thereof.
All items shall be bid on a unit price basis and all prices shall include all materials, labor, and equipment whatsoever required to construct that item.
All CONTRACTORS are hereby notified that they must have all licenses required under state law for performing the WORK on this project.
General CONTRACTORS are notified that "An act to regulate the practice of General Contracting" enacted by the General Assembly of North Carolina on March 1, 1925, and as subsequently amended will be observed in receiving bids and awarding Contracts.
Each proposal shall be accompanied by a five percent bid security. This security may be in cash, certified check or bid bond issued by Surety licensed to conduct business in North Carolina and named in the current list of "Surety Companies Acceptable on Federal Bonds" as published by the Audit Staff Bureau of Accounts, U.S. Treasury Department. The deposit may be retained by the OWNER as liquidated damages if the successful bidder fails to execute the Contract within ten (10) days after notice of award.
Performance and Payment Bonds will be required in an amount equal to one hundred percent (100%) of the Contract Price.
The COUNTY reserves the right to reject any and all bids and to accept any bid which appears to be in his best interest.
