'It Still Hurts To Think Of The Damage I've Done,' Ex-User Says

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Eddie Davenport says he sold illegal drugs in Pitt County for 15 years — from 1971 to 1986.

The Winterville area native is now an inmate of the North Carolina Department of Corrections. He's been a principal witness in a recent cocaine trafficking trial and, because of his substantial assistance, was given a greatly reduced sentence — four years in prison when it would have been 56 mandatory, had he not assisted. Since he's already served 15 months, he has hopes of being paroled soon.

"I'm happy for the lenience I've been shown," he said. "I've really been serious about wanting to do all I can do to protect others from the drug addiction I had for so long. But it still hurts to think of the damage I've done. I can't even begin to know the number of people I hurt. All I knew at the time was that drugs were expensive and I had to have them."

Davenport, 39, was a graduate of Winterville High School, married with two children when he started taking drugs socially. For a long time, he said, he was only a social drug user, partaking mostly on weekends. He continued to work — he's been in either construction work or sales most of his life — but he started selling almost immediately because drugs, even in relatively small amounts, were expensive and he didn't want his habit to affect his family's lifestyle. "We had a nice home on an acre of land out in the country," he said. "I didn't want to lose all that for my wife and children."

But in the end, he lost his wife and children. He and his wife were divorced early in 1988 during a few minutes before a judge while he was in Pitt County, having been brought here from prison to testify in a drug trial. They'd been separated a long while before that. He said he seldom sees his children and doesn't know what his chances are of re-establishing a relationship with either of them.

"I lost everything because I was so addicted to drugs," he said. "My using got greater and greater. They tell me you get to the place that the drugs you're taking shut down your brain's natural ability to make the endorphins that normally give a person a sense of well-being and you feel so awful you feel compelled to have the drugs. You're under the illusion that they make you feel good, even though they don't really."

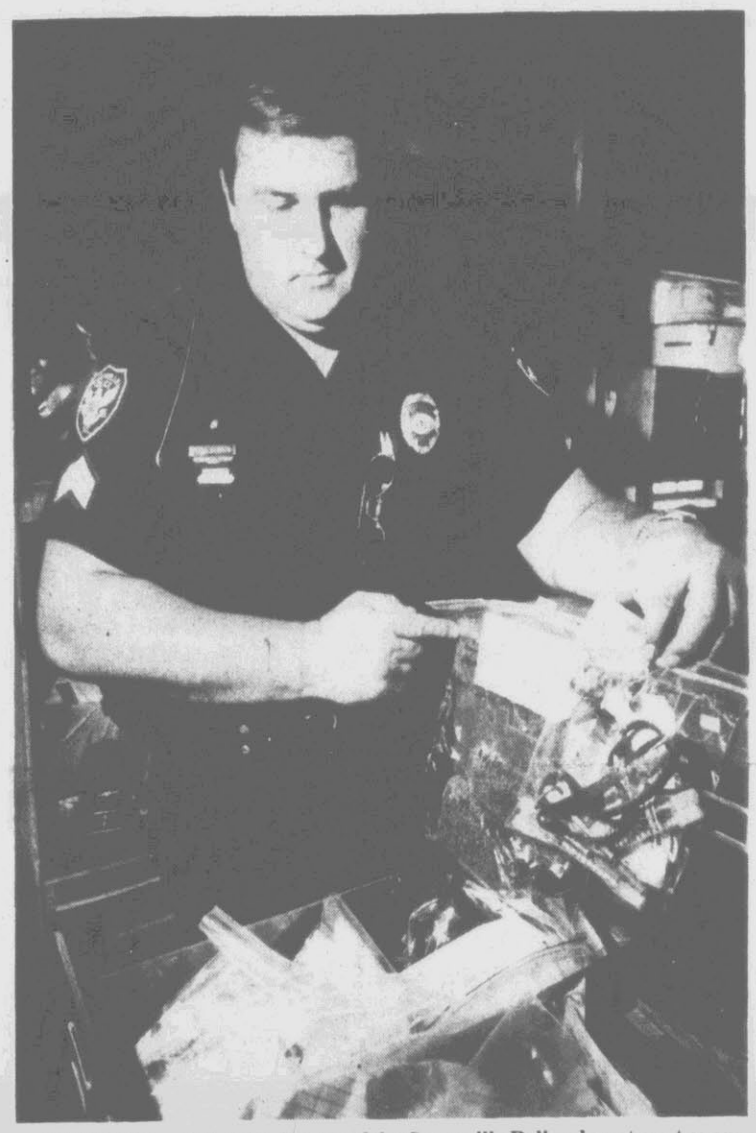

He said he sold for a number of drug trafficking organizations over the years, including the one operated by Jamie Taylor and Robert Kite, the two Greenville businessmen he testified against and who were convicted May 6 on eight counts of cocaine trafficking.

It was a sale for Kite and Taylor in May 1986 that brought Davenport to the place he is today. He unwittingly made a cocaine pickup from the two in one Greenville parking lot and took it to an SBI undercover agent in another.

It was some time, though, before he knew he'd sold to the undercover agent. And in the meantime he said his life got worse. "Not too long after that," he said, "I hit my own personal bottom. I knew I had to get off drugs or I was going to die."

He called Wayne Little, a friend in Grafton, Va., one night and cried on the phone, admitting to him how hopeless his life had become. Little invited him to live with him and work with him in a cable television wiring business. He Fotios Kamtsiklis and Petros Tholiotis bought a kilogram of cocaine in Miami in the spring of 1987 for $40,000 and purchased a car from Wilmington for William Anderson Noble to bring the drugs into North Carolina.

Kamtsiklis and Tholiotis could have sold the cocaine for up to $250,000 on the street, but they lost everything when they sold a pound to undercover State Bureau of Investigation Agent Cory Duber.

Kamtsiklis was sentenced in March to 80 years in prison and fined more than $400,000. Tholiotis was sentenced two weeks ago to 25 years in prison and fined $200,000 and Noble received five years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

Those are the high stakes involved with drug trafficking — big bucks and stiff sentences — yet drug trafficking is an ever-increasing business in Pitt County, as users continue to create the demand for more drugs and traffickers keep importing cocaine and filling their pockets with profits.

"We're not exempt," said Sgt. John Teel of the Greenville Police Department's narcotics squad. "Drug use in our town is growing. The demand is growing and drug dealers will take care of the supply end."

Cocaine — especially its rock-like derivative crack — is the most abundant because it is cheap, Teel said.

"Crack is the biggest thing right now on both sides of town, east and west," Teel said. "Crack comes in small enough quantities that it's affordable to everyone. It's not a white man's drug. It's affordable to everyone in all communities.

"What you're looking at in the majority of your white neighborhoods, (is that) cocaine doesn't usually come in quantities less than a gram. A gram sells for about $100, versus black communities where you can get cocaine as small as $25 packets," he said.

Heroin, which is taken intravenously, is available on the street in bags containing 50 to 100 milligrams and sells for $25 to $50, said Malcolm McLeod, assistant supervisor of the SBI's drug investigations for the 23-county northeast region of the state.

"We've probably got one of the worst heroin problems in North Carolina. And I can't explain it," McLeod said. "I can't tell you why, but Greenville and Washington have always had a heroin problem."

Most of the heroin brought into Pitt County comes from New York or Connecticut, McLeod said, while cocaine comes in from the Northeast and from Florida.

Marijuana differs greatly in price depending on the variety, said Teel. Users can buy marijuana that was grown in Pitt County — or as far away as Hawaii.

"I think marijuana abuse is about the same as it has been in the past," Teel said. "Home-grown marijuana is one price. There is Hawaiian for

Candidates Debate

Governor Bristles, Jordan Apologizes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

Martin, battling charges that he has been a "sitting governor" with no original ideas and a sparse program, unveiled a wide-ranging agenda for his second term including raising teacher salaries to the national average by 1992 and establishing up to 20 "career education" magnet high schools.

Jordan, meanwhile, said he had been referring to runoff primaries when he told black newspaper executives in March there were issues on which he agreed with them that he wouldn't discuss publicly for fear of alienating "rednecks in eastern North Carolina.

Jordan apologized for using the term "redneck" but said Martin also had made ill-advised statements such as a contention that supporters of stronger warnings about dangerous workplace chemicals were afflicted with "chemophobia."

"There are things that are said in campaigns by public servants that sometimes are better off not said," Jordan said. "If I have offended someone with a remark that I made then I have apologized and I apologize again. Too often these things happen."

Jordan then mentioned what he called a couple of Martin's gaffes. Turning to Martin, Jordan said, "Governor, I know exactly how you feel."

Martin told the state GOP convention this month the statement indicated Jordan had a "hidden agenda," which he called on Jordan to reveal during the debate.

Jordan said he had no hidden agenda. He said his Greensboro remark had been a reference to his support of making it easier for candidates to avoid runoffs by lowering the threshold for first-primary victory to 40 percent of the vote. Black leaders want to abolish runoffs. to Martin, he said, "Governor, I know exactly how you feel."

Dukakis Gives In On Rules

Michael Dukakis gave in to Jesse Jackson Saturday on changing Democratic rules for 1992, but the Massachusetts governor stood firm on keeping the party's platform short and non-specific.

Jackson, campaigning in Puerto Rico on Saturday, hailed the proposed rules changes as "a victory for the people ... a victory for democracy."

If the rules changes, approved Saturday in Washington by the party's Rules Committee, are adopted by the national convention next month, the number of "super delegates" to the 1992 convention would be cut nearly in half. In addition, all states would be compelled to award delegates to presidential candidates in proportion to their support in the primaries and caucuses.

Jackson had complained that current provisions for super delegates and the rules in a few state primaries and caucuses unfairly kept him from getting as many delegates as he should have.

The rules being changed were the very ones that Dukakis had used to his advantage in clinching the Democratic presidential nomination. But Tad Devine, the campaign's director

Spectators Pelt Klansmen With Rocks In Wilson Rally

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Four people were arrested and 13 cars were damaged Saturday after spectators pelted Ku Klux Klan marchers with rocks during a rally, authorities said.

"I think it was just a spontaneous thing," said Wilson Police Lt. David Speight. "There were a lot of teen-agers in the crowd. One person just decided to throw a rock and it just ballooned.

"It was a lot of young people just venting their frustration at the march," he said.

A newspaper reporter was struck by a rock in the left shoulder but he was not seriously hurt, Speight said.

Charles Weldon Vaughn, 30, of Henderson and Glen L. Woodlief, 25, of Kittrell, both marchers, were charged with carrying a concealed weapon, Speight said. Vaughn had a shotgun and Woodlief had a pistol, he said.

Spectators Samuel Lee Holden and Samuel Thomas Saunders, both of Wilson, were charged with disorderly conduct, Speight said.

"We will use videoptapes to see if we can identify some of the other people and there may be some other arrests forthcoming," Speight said.

About 25 to 30 Klan marchers walked down six city blocks starting at 4:30 p.m., Speight said. "There was a whole lot of heckling and that sort of thing" by some of the 800 to 1,000 spectators, he said.

The group that sponsored the march was identified as the Christian Knights of Ku Klux Klux, Speight said.

The rock throwing lasted about 15 minutes. "It was a sporadic type thing," he said. "It wasn't everybody throwing rocks. It was an isolated few that were throwing rocks."

Jaycees Say Fireworks Show Will Be Expanded

By GREG LAUDICK

The sky above the Tar River will once again be filled with flaming rockets, balls of fire and thundering explosions this coming holiday weekend during the 16th annual Jaycees' Fourth of July Festival on the Town Commons.

According to festival co-chairman Ricky Langley, this year's show will start at 9 p.m.

"This fireworks display will be significantly longer than displays in the past and more intense," Langley said.

Co-chairman Fred Keith said their "goal is not to see how long we can stretch it out. It's going to be how fast we can light them and keep the sky lit up."

In addition, he said this year's Jaycees fireworks presentation will be choreographed to music broadcast simultaneously on local radio station WDLX.

"We're trying to get the word out that everone needs to bring a radio," Keith said. "Bring a radio, bring a blanket and bring a trashbag."

According to Jaycees President Michie Faulconer, a wide variety of events, displays and competitions have been added to the festival this year.

"We want the fireworks to still be the main attraction but this year we

Schools Expand Summer Program

The summer program in the Pitt County schools has expanded to include grades nine through 12 this year, according to the system's coordinator of pupil services.

The program, created within the state's Basic Education Plan, offers free, required courses to students in grades nine through 11 "who do not meet local promotion standards," Arleen Ferren said. Twelfth grade students of the same qualifications also will be provided the courses at the expense of the school system.

Summer school had been offered in the Pitt County schools before the system began implementing the BEP summer progam, Ms. Ferren said, but the students were required to pay tuition for taking a class.

While students who were not promoted and those needing remediation will be offered classes at no cost, students taking a new course in summer school will have to pay tuition, she said.

"We were looking at a student who could graduate this summer" or who could graduate with the class of 1989 after taking one course needed to meet the number of units required for graduation, she said.

Students enrolled in a summer school course that provides new units of credit may not be served with funds provided by the BEP summer school allotment, Ms. Ferren said.

This is the third summer the BEP summer school program has been implemented in the school system. Classes will begin Monday and will continue through Aug. 2. Students will observe the Fourth of July as a holiday.

The program was approved by the State Board of Education in October 1984 and was scheduled for funding by the General Assembly on a phase-in basis beginning in July 1985. The state funds provide for the teachers, assistants, site principals and bus transportation for students.

Initially, the BEP summer school program was provided for students in grades three, six and eight who had not mastered state standards designed specifically for students at those grade levels. The standards are of delegate selection who led the Dukakis negotiating team, said the Massachusetts governor would have won the nomination even if the rules had been changed.

The Democrats' Platform Committee, meeting in Denver, was winding up work on a statement of party principles that Michigan Gov. James Blanchard, the committee chairman, said would be short enough to print on a poster and mailed out. A 4,000-word draft of the document is one-tenth the size of the 1984 platform.

But unlike the Rules Committee, which convened to rubber-stamp the deals worked out in private negotiations between the Jackson and Dukakis campaigns, proposals from the Jackson camp on taxes, defense, the Middle East and other issues were roundly rejected by the Platform Committee.

The first Jackson amendment, calling for higher taxes and a freeze on Pentagon spending, was defeated 108-44.

Later, on voice votes, the Democrats rejected Jackson campaign proposals opposing first use of nuclear weapons by the United States, calling for "self-determination for Israelis and Palestinians," and urging a doubling of the federal education budget.

Eleanor Holmes Norton, who heads Jackson's platform effort, said he told her by telephone that she should press the issues on which they were unable to agree "in a spirit of collegiality and respect for his opponent, Gov. Dukakis."

Jackson spent Saturday in Puerto Rico, where he tried to pry loose some Dukakis delegates that he said should be his. Jackson won the state's non-binding primary, but Dukakis came away with almost all the delegates, who were picked separately.

Although there was no clear winner, Martin was somewhat more aggressive. In an opening salvo, he dubbed the challenger "Not-Now Bob" because of Jordan's refusal to support some of Martin's election-year initiatives.

"So when he says 'let's abolish the number-one-ranked Department of Commerce,' I'll say 'not now, Bob,'" Martin said. "And as for his plan to become governor of North Carolina — not now, Bob."

Martin also wasted no time bringing up the "redneck" comment, telling the onlookers he wanted their votes "regardless of your race, creed or the color of your neck."

Jordan, meanwhile, refrained from labeling Martin "the sitting governor" as he did during their first debate before the North Carolina Press Association last February. However, he reiterated that Martin had tried to steal credit for Democrats' accomplishments and said the major legislative initiatives during his term had been enacted "in spite of the present governor, not because of him."

Jordan spoke more sharply in a post-debate interview, saying Martin had been "ineffective" and "irresponsible" in shaping this year's state budget proposal, which Jordan says was $137 million out of balance.

Jordan accused Martin of becoming increasingly personal in his attacks, saying the "Not-Now Bob" tag demonstrated that "they're trying to get some catch words to use in the campaign. ... He has to run on gimmicks. He doesn't have the issues."

Martin denied making personal attacks. "I was just having fun with him," he said in an interview. "This is a political campaign and that's fair game."

Martin's presentation of his second-term agenda came in his closing remarks, after he proclaimed North Carolina "on a roll" and recited a litany of favorable statistics about the state's economy.

The list was short on details. For example, it called for cutting drunken driving accidents in half by 1992 and bringing unemployment below 10 percent in all 100 counties by next year without saying how either would be done.

Martin said in the interview his magnet high school plan would seek establishment of 16 to 20 high schools across the state, using local funds and state incentive grants. Working with community colleges, they would give vocationally-inclined students an alternative to conventional high schools and deter dropouts, he said.

He denied unveiling his agenda during the debate to counter the opposition's charge that he's a do-nothing governor, saying he simply had wanted to finish on a positive note.

Festival Planned

want the day to be a big attraction also," Faulconer said. "We wanted to have a day filled with activities. In my opinion, that's what a festival is."

Faulconer said approximately 25 Jaycees have been directly involved in the project and have been planning and organizing since the latter part of January for the mid-year holiday festival.

Faulconer said two stages will be constructed on the Town Commons and entertainment will be provided throughout the day. Concessions with food and beverages will also be available.

"If the sun shines, it will be a very good day," Faulconer said.

He said among the scheduled entertainment is a "Miss Hawaiian Tropic Contest" scheduled at 4:45 p.m. Faulconer said the woman with the best suntan will receive $100 in cash and certificate to have a modeling portfolio made from a local agency.

n addition, he said the winner will also have an opportunity to compete regionally for a chance to go to Daytona Beach, Fla., for the 1989 Spring Break Finals competition.

Other entertainment on stage include the bands "Take Five" starting at noon; "Boogie Monsters" at 2:15 p.m.; "Take Five" scheduled again at 3:30 p.m., and "Nantucket" performing at 6:45 p.m.

Also slated for the festival are a five-kilometer run and a one-mile "fun run" starting at 8 a.m., and a raft race along the Tar River beginning at 10 a.m.

An arts and crafts show will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., while various fun-type competitions between area fire departments will begin at 9:30 a.m.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary is scheduled to conduct free boat inspections from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

On display from 10 a.m to 8 p.m. will be a Pro-Stock Thunderbird drag racing car; a drag racing motorcycle; an AIDS information booth, and an anti-drug, "Just Say No" display.

Other planned events and attractions at the festival include: from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., the Pitt Memorial Hospital East Care Helecopter will be on display; noon to 5 p.m., an assortment of circus clowns will entertain; at 10 a.m. a raft race will be held along the Tar River; 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. a vollyball tournament; 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., a horseshoe tournament; 11 a.m., a children's bicycle, tricycle and wagon parade; 10 a.m., a bicycle and skateboard show; 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., a dunking booth; 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., games for all ages; 1 p.m., a rubber-duck race sponsored by United Cerebal Palsy, and 1 p.m. and 5 p.m., Parachute team performance.

Also during the day there will be a hot air balloon launch; a weight-lifting competition; bingo contests; karate demonstrations; a soccer clinic, and a dog obedience training seminar.

For more information about any of the planned festival events, contact Ricky Langley at 752-6004 or Fred Keith at 752-6761.

Sara Lee Plans Tarboro Bakery

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sara Lee Corp. is planning to open a bakery facility near Tarboro by early 1989.

According to Sara Lee Bakery Co. spokeswoman Peg Ransom, company officials never actively considered moving operations from Tarboro during the time Edgecombe County commissioners favored a waste manage ment park for the county, a proposal which has been dropped.

"The issue that concerned us was the perception of safety, how our consumers would perceive the proximity of our bakery to a low-level radioactive waste facility," she explained.

Summer School Opens Monday implemented in three phases.

In the first phase, students in grades three, six and eight that score at or above the 25th percentile on the California Achievement Test meet the state standard and must then meet local requirements — those of the Pitt County school system. But, those who score at the 24th percentile or below enter the second phase.

In the second phase, students in grades three, six and eight must have a passing score of 70 percent in 1987 and 75 percent in subsequent years on the state Minimum Skills Dognostic Test. Those not making the passing marks will be retained unless they succesfully attend a summer program where they develop the needed skills. Those who do make the passing marks meet the state standards and may be promoted if they also have met the local requirements.

Phase three involves attending the BEP summer school program where the teacher and principal will decide at the end of the program if the students in grades three, six and eight have mastered needed skills.

The state board has developed a test to be given at the end of summer school to evaluate the effectiveness of the program. It also may be used to assist principals and teachers in deciding if students have mastered necessary skills.

While students in grades three, six and eight and the state promotion standards are first priority, the BEP summer program was extended to grades one through 11 as a second priority, Ms. Ferren said. First through 11th grade students who do not meet the local standards or who need remedial instruction may be offered the BEP summer school courses. But, they do not participate in the state standard of testing except at grades three, six and eight.

Each student participating in the summer school program must have a personal education plan, she said. The CAT and state diagnostic tests, work samples and teacher evaluations are all used in developing the plan.

"In the summer school, the teacher will develop a plan for that student," and the plans will be reviewed by the school staff of the following year, Ms. Ferren said.

Parents will be provided a report on the students' progress each week in addition to the mid and final reports, she said. "We feel the parents need that information."

"We do a lot of work in the summer on building self-esteem in students," Ms. Ferren said. Characteristics of the summer school population include low self-esteem, short attention span, alienated, low achievement, disruptive and/or agressive and irregular attendance.

"We say stick with us. We're here to to assist and help you," she said.

The summer school staff, which goes through an application and screening process for being hired for summer school instruction, participate in developmental activities for building students' self-esteem, Ms. Ferren said.

First through third graders will be taught at Eastern Elementary; fourth through eighth at Wahl-Coates, and ninth through 12th at J.H. Rose. Site principals for the summer classes are Page Adkins, Nell Williams and Harold Williams, respectively.

Buses will run on dual routes, Ms. Ferren said. One route will pick up first through eighth graders while high school students will be picked up on the second route.

First through eighth graders will be in class from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. High school students repeating a course will be in class from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., while high school students taking new courses will be in class from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Lunch is not provided within the BEP summer school program, but the students may buy soft drinks at school and may bring snacks from home, Ms. Ferren said.

Phone Threats

Michele Figuerod, 23, of 421 Kings Arms was arrested by Officer C.S. Candler at 1:40 a.m. Saturday on charges of communicating threats stemming from an incident reported at 12:38 a.m. involving a man claiming a woman made phone calls indicating she intended to kill him with a gun.

In other incidents reported Saturday, Officer J.K. McCarthy said David Lee Hudrell, 18, of lot 72 in the Edgewood Trailer Park was arrested on charges of assault stemming from an incident at 2:20 a.m. at Fourth and Cotanche streets.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said a cassette car stereo valued at $299 was taken from a car parked along Reade Street in an incident reported at 1:11 p.m., while Officer W.T. McCarter said a car stereo valued at $125 was taken from an automobile at Pugh's Tire Service in an incident reported at 9:45 a.m.

Officer C.G. Alphin said a tire and a rim were taken from a car parked on Beasley Drive in an incident reported at 6:53 a.m., while Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said six pairs of men's shorts were taken from Tom Togs in an incident reported at 3:13 p.m.

TEAMWORK — Jason Fornes, a student from Greenville, and his teammates complete an exercise during the East Carolina University High Grounds New Adventures Program. The program is a part of the Legislators' School for Development being held through July at ECU. The school also features workshops, seminars, field trips and lectures. Nearly 300 middle and secondary students from eastern North Carolina will attend the sessions. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Tony Rumple).

Revival

The Rev. Jimmy Swinsor of Mill Chapel will conduct a revival nightly starting Monday at the St. Luke True Born Faith of Christ Church in Hilldale.

Screening Clinic

The Wellness Committee of Cornerstone Baptist Church will have a free cholesterol screening clinic Monday from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Local nurses and physicians will be available for consultations.

Menus

Menus for the summer food service program provided by the Pitt County school system, as announced, for the coming week are:

Thursday: Corn dog with mustard, french fries with catsup, fruit cup, cookie and milk.

Groundbreaking

A groundbreaking ceremony was held last week for the new Lenoir Community College Center for Aviation Education at the Kinston airport.. Construction is expected to be completed by January 1989.

The one-story center will comprise 5,500 square feet and will house a classroom, a laboratory, study area, two offices and a lounge. It will be used soley for the Aviation Management and Career Pilot Technology program at LCC.

Meeting Canceled

A meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission scheduled Tuesday at 7 p.m. at City Hall to discuss the proposed Zoning Ordinance update has been canceled and rescheduled for July 12 at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the Municipal Building located on the corner of 5th and Washington streets.

Enrichment Courses

Pitt County schools will offer two weeks of enrichment courses in mathematics this summer for students enrolled in grades eight through 12.

The courses will review basic concepts of algebra and will prepare students for the next level of instruction. The courses will not be counted as a high school credit and no fees will be charged. Students will be responsible for their own transportation.

The levels of instruction are Level 1 — preparation for algebra I for those planning to take the course; Level 2 — preparation for geometry for those who have completed algebra I, and Level III — preparation for algebra II for those who have completed algebra I and geometry.

Classes begin July 5 and end July 15 and will meet each day from 9 a.m. to noon.

Licenses

North Carolina Revenue Officer Jim Cashion advices taxpayers who are liable for state privilege licenses to apply before July 1. Cashion says that the 1980 census is to be used where the applicable rate of tax is based upon population.

Applications for licenses, together with the correct remittance, should be mailed to the North Carolina Department of Revenue, P.O. Box 25000, Raleigh, N.C. 27640, or submitted to the local North Carolina Department of Revenue office.

Cashion also advises that the penalty for failure to comply will be 5% for each delinquent month, or fraction threreof, after July 1.

Honor Lists

Several local students were named to the Martin Community College academic lists for the spring quarter.

Amy Hardy of Greenville was among 45 students named to the Dean's List for students who made a 4.0 grade point average.

Delma Gray Beach and Jacqueline Holliday Arnold, both of Greenville, and Jamie Elaine Hardy and Viola Morning Highsmith, both of Bethel, were placed on the Honors List which is reserved for students who earn a grade point average of 3.5 or better.

Anniversary

The first anniversary of the Fantastic Mighty Hi Gospel Singers of Ayden will be held Sunday at 3 p.m. at the St. Matthews Free Will Baptist Church.

Also participating will be the Gospel Travels, Edwards' Singers, Gospel Consolation, Spiritualairs, Faithfulets, Gospel Tone II, Golden Jubilee and the Southern Spiritulors.

ECU New Adventures Program Stresses Personal Achievement

By TONY M. RUMPLE
ECU News Bureau

Perched on a small platform 35 feet up a tree, the student holds onto a pulley device attached to a cable, takes a deep breath, shouts and hurls himself out across open space, riding the cable to another tree 40 feet distant.

Called the "Indiana Jones" part of the East Carolina University High Grounds New Adventures Program, it is one of many challenges nearly 300 middle and secondary students will face while participating in the Legislators' School for Development being held at ECU through July.

In addition to the adventures program, the students are participating in workshops, lectures, field trips, seminars, viewing films and musical programs.

Emphasis during the residential sessions is placed on developing leadership, enhancing communications skills and introducing the young people to new experiences.

"This (the High Grounds Adventure Program) experience is the pivotal experience for the whole leadership school," says Dr. Robert Wendling, director of the course. "This is an outdoor adventure program and having fun in a safe manner is the first objective."

"The second objective," says Wendling, a member of the ECU Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety (HPERS) faculty, "is to get people to stretch themselves to go a little bit farther than they have ever gone before, to find what resources they have but haven't been using, thereby building self-confidence."

A group of about 18 students huddled in the cool shade of the deep woods, away from the summer sun, to talk out a possible resolution of a problem presented by their instructors, that of getting the entire group from one side of a rope tied five feet high between two trees, without touching the rope or entering the plane of the rope. Their first and second attempts were unsuccessful. But after another brainstorming session, they reached a solution.

That solution met the third criterion of the program — teamwork. 'It focuses on promoting or building teamwork, improving communications skills, promoting trust among people and group problem solving skills,' Wendling said.

Each student spends one seminar day on the adventure course which Wendling says could be called a "Challenge Course, Initiative Course or Confidence Course."

Successful completion of the program is not measured on a report card. "If the highest they have ever gone was two feet, we get them to go two and one-half feet. That then is their personal measure of success. That is how we measure success here," Wendling said.

Drug Trafficking Is A Growing Problem

another ... Depending on what marijuana you buy depends on the price you pay for it."

Home-grown marijuana sells for about $400 a pound, Teel said, and imported marijuana can sell for as much as $1,300 a pound.

Law enforcement officers say there is no single reason why drugs are so prevalent in Pitt County. "The drug problem is not a new thing," said Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond. "We're no worse off than anybody else. But the majority of the people we deal with represent the tip of the iceberg."

District Attorney Thomas Haigwood said Greenville's location is a factor in the amount of drug business done in the area.

"As far as eastern North Carolina is concerned, this is a station point for the distribution of controlled substances," Haigwood said.

East Carolina University ensures that Greenville will always have a large population of young people, but there is more to the problem than students.

"Certainly there are people that live in this community that pose a ready market for some controlled substances," he said. "But I'm not sure that's why it's so pervasive here. It's an area, that's by it's geography, and by being one of the largest communities in eastern North Carolina ... there are a lot of ways you can bring controlled subtances in. We've had them all.

"We've had large quantities of marijuana that have been brought in from offshore and brought in here in trucks," he said. "We've had aircraft land here surreptitously at our airport and at private airstrips ... for the purpose of bringing in controlled substances."

Haigwood said a cocaine trafficker who had flown on a commercial flight from Miami to Charlotte to Greenville was arrested at the Greenville airport last year by SBI agents, and McLeod said Kinston Regional Airport has also been used to bring drugs into the area.

Jim Turcotte, director of Pitt-Greenville Airport, said airport employees or airline employees remain at the airport around the clock, and they know to contact the police immediately if they suspect any drug activity overnight.

In one instance, a suspicious aircraft from Miami landed at the airport and Turcotte said he called the authorites.

The airport was stolen, Haigwood said, and maps and plans for drug activity were found inside. The thieves were arrested and the plane was returned.

Traditionally, drug dealers used large, older aircraft such as a DC-3 or four-engine turbo propellor planes to transport bales of marijuana, said Turcotte, but the dealers are more difficult to recognize now because they are usually fly small, corporate jets. And instead of stealing aircraft, drug dealers often have enough money to buy their own.

Jamie Taylor and Robert Lee Kite, former Greenville businessmen convicted of cocaine trafficking in May, owned an airplane and airstrip near Grimesland, McLeod said, but there is no evidence the airstrip was used in drug trafficking.

The motivation for drug involvement can be addiction. Such was the case with Noble, who stored cocaine at his house and his girlfriend's house in return for permission to use enough cocaine to satisfy his habit.

There is also the prospect of big profits in a very short time, Haigwood said, and some people who do not even use drugs help finance deals in order to receive some of the profits when the drugs are sold on the street.

Tholiotis first brought kilograms of cocaine into North Carolina as a delivery man for a high-volume drug dealer in Wilmington, according to Duber's testimony in Pitt County Superior Court, and he later began transporting cocaine into Pitt County to sell himself.

Tholiotis and Kamtsiklis brought three kilograms into Pitt County, said Duber, selling one to a man in Washington, N.C., one to his contact in Wilmington and the third kilogram was confiscated when a portion was sold to SBI agents.

Large quantities of cocaine are divided into kilograms when they are brought into the U.S., Haigwood said. The kilos are in rock form and wrapped in newspaper, plaster-of-paris and tape so they are about the size of a shoe box.

Dealers add milk sugar, lactose or another white powder to the cocaine when it is cut for sale, and it is possible for drug dealers to double or triple their original investment.

"It's a very quick return," Haigwood said. "You can double your money in a very short period of time. There's no way you're going to get that kind of return that quickly in any legitimate form of investment."

"Most kilogram dealers ... have regular customers that buy maybe a half-pound a week," McLeod said, and the dealers go to Florida every two weeks or so to buy enough cocaine to supply their regular customer.

Once traffickers are caught, sentences are tough. The General Assembly has passed minimum sentences for convicted drug traffickers, which increase in serverity with the according to the amount of drugs involved.

"With the profit margin in cocaine or heroin, people are willing to take that risk," McLeod said.

Staff writers Stuart Savage, Greg Laudick and Cherie Evans contributed to this story.

Cocaine Seized

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — U.S. drug agents and Paraguayan police captured three alleged drug smugglers and seized 590 pounds of cocaine shortly before the drugs were supposed to go to Europe, a newspaper reported.

In an attempt to break what U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents called the "Asuncion Connection," police arrested a Bolivian and two Colombians last Saturday. The trio allegedly were couriers for the notorious Medellin drug cartel of Colombia, the daily independent Hoy reported Friday.

Hoy said 222 packages of 97 percent pure cocaine, worth about $100 million, were found jammed in nine suitcases at Asuncion's airport hours before a regularly scheduled commercial flight to Madrid, Spain.

It was the largest drug bust in Paraguay since 1982, when 92 pounds of cocaine were found at a ranch, 217 miles northeast of Asuncion.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents have been working with Paraguayan police since December when they re-opened an office in the capital to counter the growing drug trade in this landlocked South American nation

Investigators say private aircraft registered in bordering Bolivia were used to drop the cocaine at a ranch in the remote Chaco region of western Paraguay. From there, the cocaine was flown to Asuncion in other small planes, the newspaper said.

U.S. officials say the Medillin cartel sends to the United States about 80 percent of the cocaine consumed in America.

Testing May Help

did. And with the help of his friend and the fellowship of Alcoholics Anonymous, being away from his drug-using peers in Greenville, he was able to kick the habit.

In January of 1987, cable work was slack because of cold weather, so he decided to see if he could trust himself back in Greenville. He'd only been at work on a new job at the Joe Cullipher automobile dealership for nine days when he was arrested. The SBI had put its investigation of him on hold after he had left the state.

He agreed immediately after his arrest to turn state's evidence, to assist in any way he could to help law enforcement in the Greenville-area drug trafficking he knew so well.

For the past 15 months he's been incarcerated, some of the time in McCain Corrections Center, some in the Beaufort County Jail, and some in the Hyde County Jail. He's been able to attend Alcoholics Anonymous meetings about once a week, he says, and feels he has helped some other addicts as he's maintained his own abstinence from drugs.

In his June 17 sentence, Judge David E. Reid Jr. ordered him to repay the state the $9,900 paid him by agents in undercover transactions with him. According to the laws he violated, he could have been fined up to $400,000.

Once he's released from prison, he's ordered to submit at random times to drug testing and to pay for this testing himself. If it were to be shown that he has any illegal drugs in his system, he's to go immediately back to prison.

"The testing's all right with me," he said. "It will actually be an additional incentive to stay away from drugs.

"Not that I ought to need any. Drugs ruined my life. I have nothing. I'm absolutely starting over at 39. I don't have a job. I don't own anything. I don't have any money."

He was also ordered by Judge Reid not to associate with any known drug user nor to frequent any place where there are controlled substances. "When I get out, I'm going to associate with people who've kicked the habit like I have and who are working on themselves spiritually day-by-day to keep free of it," he said. "I'm going to attend both Narcotics Anonymous and Alcoholics Anonymous meetings. I'm going to work hard. And I'm going to make it this time."

Reagan Calls For Unified Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan urged Democratic congressional leaders Saturday to appoint representatives to work with the administration on the drug problem, saying it is "too important for us to permit partisan bickering."

Delivering his weekly radio talk from the Oval Office, the president said his own National Drug Policy Board will recommend specific proposals during the coming week "that would be important to any new drug legislation."

In his radio talk, the president said, "My goal is to combine the expertise of the executive and legislative branches to identify the next steps we should take to stop the illegal use, distribution and production of drugs and to begin taking these steps on a bipartisan basis."

Applications

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — The Edgecombe County Development Corp. is accepting applications from contractors who could study the practicality of locating an agribusiness complex in the county.

The Northeastern Agribusiness Complex would harbor crop processing, manufacturing, marketing, administration and research, officials said.

According to EDCO Executive Vice President Robin Spinks, the chosen contractor would analyze tobacco, among other sectors of the food business, to determine its long-term growth potential.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Burroughs Wellcome Co. officially dedicated and opened Friday a 120,000-square-foot addition to its headquarters.

The new building houses office space for medical, finance and organizational development personnel and a new employee cafeteria.

Survey Shows Public Is Willing To Get Tough On Drug Trafficking

By RICHARD MORIN and JODIE ALLEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

A News Analysis

American may be about to go nuclear in its war on drugs even as the tide of battle has turned in our favor. Just as objective measures show the drug problem may be easing, a new Washington Post survey shows extraordinary public willingness to take harsh new measures to combat drug trafficking and use.

While drug use is still at alarming levels, surveys of high school seniors and the general population show significant drops in use of illegal drugs over the last few years, the result of an even greater shift in public attitudes toward the acceptablity of drug use.

Public awareness of the drug threat continues to rise both as a result of direct experience of the drug threat — about half of all Americans report having known someone with a drug problem — and a succession of highly publicized drug-related deaths of athletes and other celebrities.

The public, moreover, is ready for surprisingly harsh measures, including mandatory drug testing in their own places of work and random searches of cars and luggage.

As a result, the danger exists that public demands for fast results will translate into government responses that are both ineffective and needlessly intrusive into individual liberties, potentially undermining support for the long-term education, control and prevention efforts that promise real improvement.

"There are no brakes to this right now," said David F. Musto, a Yale psychiatrist and drug historian. "As people increasingly decide that there is no safe use for drugs, any opposition is seen as being in favor of drugs. I think this is the time to look at the potential negative consequences of this attitude, such as acceptance of drug testing without limitation, writing off the inner-city, reduction in research on drugs and scapegoating."

In short, America may be about to shoot itself in the foot in the war on drugs.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., whose select committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control has been in the forefront of congressional efforts to limit drug trafficking and use, discounts the possibility of congressional over-reaction to public urgency. "Congress can't possibly think about going as far as a frightened public would allow it to go," he says, noting that public support for stern measures to interdict drugs would evaporate the moment the first American-owned plane was shot down.

Still, the House voted only last month to instruct the administration to "substantially halt" drug smuggling by sea and air in just 45 days. And the administration's recently inaugurated "zero tolerance" program for cracking down on drug users has done little more than infuriate the boating public.

Polls show that illegal drugs are now the single biggest problem facing the country today. About half of all Americans say they have a relative or close friend who has had a problem with illegal drugs. And one out of every three say that illicit drugs can be purchased within a mile of their homes.

Contrary to public perceptions, however, drug use appears to be slowly declining. Marijuana and PCP use among high school seniors is at a 10-year low. LSD and other chemical artifacts of the late 60s drug culture also have peaked and plummeted. Even cocaine, the hot drug of the 80s, showed a significant drop in overall use last year. Crack cocaine, a relatively recent addition to the black market pharmacopoeia, remains a virulent problem, devastating families and neighborhoods in this and other cities. Researchers believe, however, that even crack is losing favor and will fade significantly in the next few years.

A fundamental shift in public opinion against drugs, particularly among younger people, is the engine driving the apparent decline in drug use. Social scientists have noted a surge in sentiments that all illicit drugs are bad and even occasional or experimental drug use is dangerous. This change is probably due less to Nancy Reagan than to Len Bias and Don Rogers, two young and gifted college athletes whose highly publicized crack-related deaths appeared to have turned off a large segment of an entire generation to cocaine, virtually overnight.

Attempts to legalize drugs will likely die quick, though not necessarily quiet, deaths. Nine out of 10 persons questioned in the Post survey opposed legalizing cocaine, and other polls show slight and dwindling support for broad legalization or even for decriminalization of marijuana.

The drug issue, however, remains ripe for exploitation.

For example, half of those surveyed in a new Washington Post national poll of 1,012 adults conducted earlier this month, said they favored allowing police to stop cars at random to search for drugs, and a third would permit police to search their homes without a court order "even if the houses of people like you are sometimes searched by mistake." Nearly two-thirds would cut off all aid to Panama and Columbia "even if poor people suffer in those countries." And half said they favored mandatory one-year jail sentences for cocaine users, even first-time offenders.

Nearly six out of 10 supported drug testing for everyone at the place where they or their spouses worked — even though only 5 percent said drug use at their jobs was a big problem.

An inflamed public can be a critical ingredient in beating back drug use. And whatever the trend, drug use and trafficking are perceived to be at crisis levels in this country: Drug use is now the single most frequently mentioned national problem in public opinion polls, and eight out of 10 Americans in the latest Post poll say the problem has gotten worse in recent years.

But a revved up public may not be willing to wait for results and all indications are that curbing drug abuse will be a slow process. While all the various approaches to cutting drug abuse — treatment of addicts, eradication of production, interdiction of smugglers, arrest and prosecution of users and dealers — have roles to play, the surest method is prevention and public education.

During the early 1980s, so-called Cocaine Cowboys, most in the employ of Columbia-based cocaine rings, terrorized Miami and South Florida. Now, within sight of the Capitol Dome, the Jamaican drug gangs known as "posses" duplicate in Washington some of the worst of Miami's deadly vices. In New York, papers chronicled in recent days the deadly street war along "Restaurant Row" that pits the Guardian Angels against a small army of crack dealers.

Also adding to the appearance of a growing drug problem is the increasingly public nature of the drug trade in many areas of the country. More than 60 open-air drug markets — a kind of stop-and-shop for drug abusers — are said to operate in the greater Washington area. And as crack cocaine use spreads, the incidence rates of admissions for crack-related medical emergencies increases.

Set against the violence, crack-related emergency room crises, and the public spectacle of wide-open drug dealing is growing evidence that suggests the worst of the drug crisis may be over.

So despite crack, Cocaine Cowboys, and a ruthlessly efficient Colombian drug cartel, America seems poised to win the war on drugs even as increasing numbers of Americans incorrectly see the problem as greater than it actually is.

You may think all banks are pretty much alike. At Wachovia, we don't believe that for a minute. We have a way of doing things that's different. It's based on a philosophy we've lived by for over a hundred years.
Our way means we look at banking as building relationships, not just taking deposits and making loans. It means hiring and training people who won't settle for less than excellence. And having technology with those practical differences that make all the difference in your banking. It's a commitment from every person in our bank to respond to your request or problem before the sun goes down.
It means sometimes being first, but always being best. It's a big order. But that's The Wachovia Way. It's more than what we do. It's how we do it.[SM]

Athletes Week

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter has proclaimed June 27 through July 1 as "World Home and Hall of Fame for Black Athletes Week" in the city.

"For more than a century, black athletes of this country, as well as black athletes from all over the world, have been involved historically in sports on all levels and the accomplishments and achievements of these individuals are largely responsible for the role models that many youths emulate," Carter said.

"The World Home and Hall of Fame for Black Athletes has continuously strived to facilitate good physical fitness, honesty, and integrity into the lives of the youths, and the citizens of Greenville have indicated a desire to join with the World Home and Hall of Fame to develop and promote programs to foster good sportsmanship and good moral character," he said.

Nightly Services

The New Deliverance Church of Christ will hold services nightly beginning Monday and going through July 1 to help raise money for its quarterly meeting and homecoming, which will be held July 10.

Breathers Club

The Better Breathers Club will meet at the Beaufort County Hospital July 5 from 3 p.m.-4 p.m. in the education building.

Buddy Caddell of the American Lung Association will speak on Travel Tips. For more information call Dell Hagwood at 975-4381.

Boat Race

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will hold its annual Fourth of July Canoe Race next week.

All entrants must provide their own canoe and have Coast Guard approved lifejackets. Canoes must be manned by two people. No sails or motors, or kayaks will be allowed.

The race will begin at the Falkland Wildlife Boat Landing at 10:30 a.m. and continue to the Town Common. All interested persons should call the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department to register by July 1.

Six gift certificates will be awarded; two for first, two for second and two for third.

The Rev. Ed Thomas Edwards will lead the service Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Salvation and Praise Church in Farmville.

The church will hold a Joy Night service on Sunday at 6 p.m. The service is sponsored by the church's usher board.

Police Say Trio Posed As Officers

Three people were arrested by Greenville Police Friday on charges of impersonating law enforcement officers.

Officer N.B. Rice said Charles Wallace O'Rear, 18, of Route 3 in Greenville; Randolph Lawerence Whitlow, 16, and Michael Craig Harrell, both of 1303 S. Wright Road, were arrested at the magistrates offices in an incident at 2:15 a.m.

Meanwhile, Officer W.A. Reid said Hubert Earl Best, 26, of 411 Venters St. in Ayden was arrested on charges of forgery in an incident reported at 8 p.m.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said Dennis White, 33, of 704 W. 4th St. was arrested on a charge of assault on a female in an incident reported at 2:55 p.m., while Officer W.S. Heath said Jesse Lee Moore, Jr., 36, of 417 Hudson St. was arrested on charges accusing him of making harassing phone calls in an incident reported at 7:10 p.m.

Officer E.M. Haddock said Edward William Turcotte III, 17, of 202 Birdsong Road in Grimesland was arrested on a charge of hit and run stemming from an incident at 11:12 p.m. at Quail Ridge Condominiums.

Meanwhile, Officer R.L. Vandiford said a wallet was stolen at 606-C Hooker Road in an incident reported at 11:31 p.m., while Officer R.C. Stroud said $200 in damage occurred after someone threw eggs at a vehicle parked on Courtland Road in an incident reported at 8:06 a.m.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said $250 damage occurred after someone scratched the right side and trunk of a vehicle parked at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 7:57 a.m.

Leaf Conspiracy Charges Filed In Wilson

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Fourteen people have been charged in alleged conspiracies that reportedly defrauded James I. Miller Tobacco Co. of more than $500,000 during the 1986 tobacco season, authorities say.

Wilson County Sheriff Wayne Gay said the conspiracies involve the taking of tobacco bought by Miller at three Wilson warehouses. He said warehouse owners and employees as well as employees and a former employees of Miller Tobacco were involved.

Warrants charge that the conspiracy stole 303 piles of tobacco worth $123,516 from Wainwright's Warehouse, 709 piles worth $270,675 from Big Star Warehouse and 289 piles worth $111,895 from Hi-Dollar Warehouse.

Gay said that "all farmers were paid what they were supposed to be paid" and that only Miller Tobacco Company lost money in the matter. "We have no indication of any other conspiracies," he said, adding that he saw no reason why the 1988 tobacco market opening should be affected.

"This is so complicated ... it has taken us quite a while to get it together," Gay said. "We pushed to get through before the market opens."

Warehouse operators or employees would conspire with Miller truck drivers to punch tobacco tickets indicating Miller employees had received purchased tobacco from the warehouses when, in fact, the tobacco was being held at the warehouse to be sold again later, Gay said.

The warehouses would get around federal tobacco marketing regulations by buying damaged leaf on the warehouse floor and then substituting the top-quality leaf that was supposed to go to Miller for the legally purchased damaged leaf at a subsequent auction. The conspirators allegedly took the profits from the second sale of the tobacco, Gay said.

There was no conspiracy among the warehouses themselves, Gay said, but only separate conspiracies at the individual warehouses.

State's Building Activity Declines

Building activity in North Carolina's 45 largest cities and towns for April 1988 fell 16.4 percent from the activity recorded for April 1987, according to State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks.

Permits for 3,562 units were recorded in April 1988 compared to 4,259 units in April 1987. The April 1988 figure was 21.9 percent below the 4,562 units recorded in March 1988.

Estimated value of the April activity was $196,192,498. The April 1988 figure was 29.3 percent below the $277,645,140 recorded in April 1987, and 14.1 percent below the $228,313,448 recorded in March 1988.

Locally, Greenville recorded in April a total authorized amount of 89 units at a value of $4,666,642, while Pitt County authorized a total of 156 units at a value of $11,137,393.

Of Greenville's 89 units, 24 were non-residential units valued at $2,204,375 and 65 were residential units valued at $2,462,267.

Pitt County's total 156 units accounted for an authorization of 50 non-residential units valued at $5,667,277 and 106 residential units valued at $5,470,116.

Statewide, total residential units in April, 2,352, dipped 19.1 percent from April 1987, 2,907. That number fell 26.4 percent from March's 3,195. Value, $94,340,123, decreased 18 percent from $115,019,526 in April 1987, and 19.1 percent from $116,587,317 last March.

Total non-residential construction in the state, including additions and alterations, 1,210 units, fell 10.5 percent from April 1987's 1,352 units, and 11.5 percent from March 1988's 1,367 units. Value, at $101,852,375, was down 37.4 percent from April 1987's $162,625,614 and 8.8 percent from March 1988's $111,726,131.

The average construction cost of a single-family home in April 1988 — $74,006 — rose 17.4 percent from $63,042 in April 1987, and 6.1 percent from $69,769 in March 1988.

Raleigh led all cities in value of construction authorized in April with $28,975,261; followed by Greensboro, $28,177,268; Charlotte, $22,991,710; Durham, $19,463,677; Cary, $10,474,620; Winston-Salem, $9,187,503; Wilmington, $8,878,052; High Point, $7,690,706; and Asheville, $5,963,889.

Waste Site Panel Will Seek Volunteers

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission has stopped its plans for a facility in Lee County, and will ask every county in the state if it is willing to volunteer as a treatment site.

The action Friday came after the state Senate voted to strip the commission of its authority to chose a site for a treatment planting. That leaves the panel only three duties: evaluate the need for a state hazardous waste treatment facility, help the governor find out-of-state alternatives if desired and continue seeking a volunteer county for an in-state treatment facility.

"All other actions appear to be halted by this legislation," executive director Darrell Hinnant told the commission, which unanimously voted to suspend all actions on the proposed Lee County site.

After some discussion, the commission agreed to send each county manager a letter saying, "... we would like to know if you are willing to meet with the commission staff to learn more about how hazardous waste can be managed safely and effectively."

The letter goes on to ask those not interested to complete an enclosed form. But that part drew debate from commission members.

"I think it's going to be difficult for people even with a modicum of interest not to sign this letter and send it in," said Bruce Waller, noting how controversial the process will be in an election year. Besides, he added, "Everybody knows nobody is beating down our doors to volunteer."

But member Al Turner replied, "I think it's time we got it on record." And Lloyd Hise Jr. agreed, saying, "I think if there's 100 counties out there that don't want it, we need to know about it. Then we can bury the issue of a volunteer county once and for all."

The timing of the letter, to be sent early next month, also stirred controversy as commission members pointed out a legislative study committee is scheduled to be appointed to consider the hazardous waste issue this fall.

"If they're creating their own monster, let them take the flak like we have," said commission member Dorothy Kilpatrick, who suggested holding the letter until the new panel could review it.

Turner, however, pointed out the Legislature had instructed the commission to continue seeking a volunteer county and let the new committee review the progress.

"There won't be any progress if we don't make any," he said.

The panel voted 5-2 to send the letter on schedule.

Inmate Suits Spur Broader Study Of Prisons

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State lawmakers, hemmed in by federally mandated spending for North Carolina's prisons, hope gradually to win enough freedom to make long-range plans for the criminal justice system.

Not counting capital spending, the General Assembly was forced this month to put up more than $13 million for improvements designed to prevent a federal takeover of the prison system, said Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, co-chairman of the Special Committee on Prisons.

Meanwhile, in response to lawsuits over crowded prison conditions, the attorney general's office is recommending the state aim at an average of 50 square feet of space for every inmate, a standard that would require another 1,600 beds, said David Guth, a spokesman for the state Department of Correction. He said the litigation also may have stimulated much-needed thought about the state's prison policies.

"I'd say the lawsuits kind of serve like the two-by-four that sometimes you need to catch someone's attention," he said. "I don't think it has been anything malicious and I don't blame just the Legislature because the Legislature reflects the public in general. But the approach to correction in North Carolina for a long time has been, 'Out of sight, out of mind.'"

Stephanie Bass of the North Carolina Center on Crime and Punishment agreed, saying, "The whole process of being sued ... has made a lot of policymakers more pragmatic."

Outside the courtrooms, officials say the state needs to decide, once and for all, what it wants from the criminal justice system. Several officials believe the answer will go beyond expanding jails.

"Just judging newspaper editorials across the state ... there seems to be a growing recognition out there that building prisons alone is not going to be the answer," said Guth in an interview last week.

"Our research shows that when the public has it explained, when they get the facts, they support alternatives to prison," said Ms. Bass. "Provided there's no danger and the punishment is significantly cheaper, an informed public will strongly support the use of community alternatives."

In the end, North Carolina may rely more and more on alternatives to prison — such things as extended probation and parole, electronic house arrest, work release and community service. And even that may not be enough.

"We may need to begin looking at sentencing laws, at our ideas about appropriate punishment," said Steve Clark, professor of public law and government at the North Carolina Institute of Government in Chapel Hill.

"It seems to me that what we tend to do is to concentrate on the problem, which is the number of prisoners, and try to cope with that," he said. "But shouldn't we also be considering our basic values on whether it is appropriate to put all or some of the people we now put in prison behind bars?"

Ms. Barnes' committee is trying to help North Carolina develop a unified policy on handling lawbreakers that incorporates all of those ideas. She said a law capping the prison population and the growing use of prison alternatives may leave "a window of opportunity at this point to step back and look at the entire system. We need an incarceration policy. We don't have one."

What North Carolina does have is a prison system that in 1974 housed more inmates per capita than any other in the nation, said Clark.

He said the surge in population came at a time when prisons were swelling throughout the nation — particularly in the South. He blamed North Carolina's increase mainly on a disproportionate improvement in law enforcement that resulted in more arrests.

"The South, in a sense, came from behind the rest of the country," Clark said, although he said there was no evidence the South or North Carolina had an unusual tendency to incarcerate people.

Since 1980, however, North Carolina's prison population has been the second or third slowest-growing in the country. That likely stems from shorter felony sentences awarded after the 1981 Fair Sentencing Act took effect, Clark said.

Now that effect is wearing off and each successful lawsuit challenging crowded conditions chips away at the available beds in the prison system, he said.

"It is as if some of our space were taken away," Clark said. "All the states have the problem and I'm not aware than any one of them has solved it yet."

One difficulty facing policymakers is the lack of information about how successful prison alternatives have been, Clark said.

Guth said such information is beginning to trickle in. For example, an electronic house arrest program being tried in Forsyth County has been highly successful.

"The success rate on that program was 88 percent in the first year," he said. "And we figure we saved the taxpayers something like $128,000."

Instead of $33.85 a day for keeping someone in prison, the state spends $3.85 a day to monitor a convict's movements at home or at work, Guth said.

Sometimes overlooked is the fact that the most common form of alternatives to incarceration is probation and parole, he said, noting that 71,000 people are under that type of supervision. Another program being considered would put committed youthful offenders age 18-24 into a 90-day program similar to military boot camp.

As such programs expand, they gain support from lawmakers who see the results first-hand in their districts, Ms. Bass said.

"Last year, (prison) admissions declined slightly for the first time in my recollection," she said. "I think that was in great part due to the more aggressive expansion of alternatives that took place in '86 and '87.

"I think we need to go much further in that direction. I think that is the most cost-effective way to deal with this court suit."

Legislature Enacts Tax-Break Proposal

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Senate has unanimously enacted a tax break for multi-state companies that Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says was critical in attracting a $600 million RJR-Nabisco plant to Wake County.

"The reason R.J. Reynolds-Nabisco is going to be in Garner is because ... some of the North Carolina leadership agreed to ask for this legislation," Jordan said Friday. "They were not going to come here, according to what we heard.

"So the investment itself of this plant will go a long ways toward paying for the cost of this bill," he said. "The other industries that it might entice to come will continue to help pay for it."

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, voted for the bill, but warned that the state's tax base is continuing to shrink.

"It's sort of supply-side economics on the state level, so to speak, and I hope it works," Hipps said.

The measure, which revises the formula through which the state determines a business' corporate tax liability, sailed through the House and Senate with virtually no opposition.

It was supported by Gov. Jim Martin and Jordan, his re-election opponent. "It was a joint, bipartisan effort," Jordan said.

The legislative staff has estimated that the change could deplete state coffers by more than $100 million over five years.

Hay For Drought Areas May Be Scarce

GREENSBORO (AP) — State Agricultural Commissioner Jim Graham has a task force surveying the state for surplus hay available for drought-plagued farmers in the West and Midwest, but it may turn out there's little to give.

"The problem is we are basically a hay and feed deficit state," said Tom Slade, a program administrator for the state Department of Agriculture. "We actually import hay and feed even in a normal year."

Even if extra hay is found, it may have to go to farmers in western North Carolina who also are suffering the effects of a drought, the Greensboro News & Record reported Saturday.

A report from Graham's task force is expected Monday.

This week, Oak Ridge farmer Glenn Crutchfield received a call for help that sounded familiar.

"Our farmers desperately need hay," a member of the Indiana Commissioner of Agriculture's staff told Crutchfield Thursday.

Two years ago, Crutchfield was making long-distance calls like that from his then dried-up Guilford County farm.

Hay to feed livestock eventually poured into Guilford County and other parts of the parched South in donated rail cars and trucks.

Indiana sent a train load of hay worth $145,000. Dairy farmers in upstate New York trucked in 1,200 bales for counterparts in Guilford, Alamance and Rockingham counties. It meant the difference between solvency and possible financial ruin for some farmers.

Now the situation is reversed.

The current issue of Time magazine shows a farmer standing in a dusty field in Fresno, Calif. Two years ago, Fresno farmers sent 17 boxcar loads of hay to Guilford area farmers.

"We are going to have to start thinking what we can do," said Crutchfield, who organized a trip in September 1986 to thank New York farmers who sent hay. "We are going to have to call some farmers and form a little committee."

Dave Todd, a spokesman for the city of Fresno, said it would be a nice gesture if Guilford County farmers provided assistance, "but at this point I don't know what is needed."

Todd said surface water supplies are 43 percent below normal, but this year's crop will be saved by irrigation water and ground water. Next year could be a different story if conditions stay dry, he said.

"They helped us, and we would like to help them in any way we can," said Weldon Denny, state assistant commissioner of agriculture.

"We are going to do something, but to what extent we don't know yet."

Bear Finds Honey Tasty

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Wildlife officials are warning residents not to bother or approach a wild black bear that has wandered into North Carolina's most urban county, spending at least three days this week robbing beehives.

The bear was first seen more than a week ago crossing U.S. 24-27 east of Albemarle. Then it was spotted crossing U.S. 601 in Cabarrus County.

C.D. Rodgers's hive, about a mile south of N.C. 49 in Mecklenburg County , was first overturned Tuesday morning.

Rodgers, 76, watched from his porch Thursday night as the bear again left an overturned hive and ambled into some woods. About 9:10 p.m. Friday, a woman living on Timber Ridge Road in Mecklenburg County, near where the beehives were stolen, spotted the bear in her backyard/

North Carolina's estimated 3,000 black bears are thought to live in the mountains or along the coast.

Migrant Standards Will Remain Same

RALEIGH (AP) — Field sanitation standards for migrant workers will remain the same in North Carolina for the time being, but legislators warned that a bill loosening the regulations would resurface.

"Wwhatever the rules will allow, that will be considered," as a way to get the bill back on the floor," said Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, who handled the bill to repeal the restrictions.

The bill, which would have prevented the state labor commissioner from setting up migrant sanitation rules any stricter than those of the federal government, died in the Senate Friday.

North Carolina now has several regulations that are stricter than those of the federal government, including mandatory drinking water and handwashing facilities at all migrant farms where the farmer houses the laborers. State regulations also require that migrants be told when they're handling hazardous materials.

"There's more than one way to skin a cat," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, who had supported the Senate bill.

"No question about it," said Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, when asked if the bill would resurface. Johnson, along with Sen. Charlie Hipps, D-Haywood, led the floor battle against the bill.

A compromise restored the drinking water provisions to the bill in the Senate on Thursday. A later compromise also restored handwashing facilities while eliminating $30,000 to pay counties for inspecting migrant housing.

But Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan ruled Friday that since the bill no longer contained funding, it could not be considered in this short session. The only bills eligible for consideration this year are those dealing with the state budget or taxes, or those that passed one House last year.

Barker said he felt betrayed by Johnson's action alerting Jordan of the problem.

"It is ironic that after being here two years the day after the love feast I was stabbed in the back," Barker said, referring to an annual gathering of legislators at a restaurant.

Barker said he couldn't "tell how many hands were on the knife," but said Johnson's was among them. He said he was under the impression Thursday that Johnson was in on the negotiations that led to the compromise.

Johnson denied he had agreed to the compromise and said Hipps did not know about his plan to thwart the bill.

IN THE STATE

Stolen Weapons

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Charges have been filed against two more Camp Lejeune Marines in connection with military explosives allegedly stolen from the Naval Weapons Station in Yorktown, Va., according to a Lejeune spokesman.

Lance Cpl. Gary A. Zilafro, 20, and Lance Cpl. Michael R. McCullough, 20, were charged last week, according to Sgt. Bob Beyer of the Lejeune Joint Public Affairs Office, with being accessories after the fact to theft of Marine Corps field equipment. Zilafro is also charged with attempted larceny of 9mm ammunition and theft of field equipment.

No trial dates have been set for Zilafro or McCullough.

Five other Marines also have been charged with various offenses in connection with the cache of explosives found May 19 in a Jacksonville apartment.

Weapons seized at the apartment included 1,000 feet of highly explosive detonating cord; 50 blasting caps; four parachute star-cluster illumination flares; one smoke grenade; and two incendiary grenades capable of burning a hole in the armor of a military tank, according to Jacksonville police.

Military Thefts

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Naval Investigative Service at Camp Lejeune has recovered allegedly stolen government property worth more than $60,000 and is investigating additional thefts at the local office of the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office, according to a spokesman for the base.

The investigation, which began in August 1987, has identified several Department of Defense civilian employees at Camp Lejeune as suspects in the theft and subsequent resale of stolen U.S. Government property, a spokesman said.

"The investigation to date has recovered more than $60,000 in government property and has identified several leads that could possibly result in the additional recovery of stolen property or identification of more suspects," Wagner said.

Site Visit

RALEIGH (AP) — Hydrologists, geologists, physicists and dozens of other technical specialists will converge on North Carolina next week to visit the proposed site for a superconducting super collider.

The representatives of the U.S. Department of Energy will check such things as geology, support facilities, airports and roads, said Earl Mac Cormac, Gov. Jim Martin's science adviser.

"Basically, it's a verification of the (North Carolina) proposal and an exploration," he said.

This is the second time government representatives have visited North Carolina, Texas, Illinois, Michigan, Colorado, Arizona and Tennessee gathering data. Mac Cormac said the first visit to North Carolina early this year "was a horrendous experience for us" because of short notice and limited state staff.

Scott Seeks More Unity Among Community College Campuses

By FLOYD ROGERS
Winston-Salem Journal

RALEIGH (AP) — After five years of putting the state's community college system on a businesslike base and insisting the schools account for their spending, President Bob Scott says he still has some unfinished work.

"But knowing when to quit is important," the former governor said. "If I get to the point where I sense that I've done about all I can do, I've contributed about all I can contribute, it's time for me to move on."

Scott's goals include achieving increased coordination with the state universities to give students more flexibility when transferring credits, continuing the system's leadership in the fight against illiteracy and planning for the system's second 25 years.

Scott, 59, who was hired to run the system in March 1983, said he had to overcome a good deal of resentment because he came in without an academic background.

"And so the presidents of these schools and a lot of others said, 'What does he know about education?' Scott said.

"Secondly, there was the natural suspicion that I was just a politician that landed the job and that in two or three years I would be gone, or that I would use the system for a political base. And I knew that only time would overcome that.

"A lot of them still have the feeling that I have the ultimate goal of restructuring the community college system like we did the university system, with all power being here in this office. Well, I'm not so naive as to think it could be done, even if I wanted to do it, and ... I don't want to do it."

"A lot of them still have the feeling that I have the ultimate goal of restructuring the community college system like we did the university system, with all power being here in this office. Well, I'm not so naive as to think it could be done, even if I wanted to do it, and ... I don't want to do it." — Bob Scott

Their suspicion might be increased by the knowledge that Scott was governor when the state university system was reorganized and that he led the fight in the Legislature to get it done.

The institutional one-upmanship that Scott decried among the community colleges three years ago is the same kind of thing that made it necessary to reorganize the state university system.

Individual schools were squabbling among themselves and stepping outside the system to go directly to the General Assembly with their requests for programs.

Scott said University of North Carolina President William Friday and Cameron West, head of the N.C. Board of Higher Education, were saying that there's got to be a better way.

"I said we've got the two top men in North Carolina education talking along the same lines, and, if I can bring them together, maybe we can bring some order out of this chaos," Scott said.

What finally emerged from the Legislature was a bundle of compromises, containing things that neither Friday, West nor Scott wanted.

"But anyway we got something that is far better than what it used to be," Scott said.

Friday, the man who took the legislation and molded the 16 UNC campuses into a unified system, said Scott is doing a splendid job of unifying the community colleges.

Scott agreed with Friday and others who said the reorganization of UNC was one of his major accomplishments during his tenure as governor from 1969 to 1973.

"But I'll tell you what I'm more proud of: We got the public kindergarten program started in this state."

That was a bittersweet thing for Scott. He got the money to start kindergartens by pushing taxes on cigarettes and soft drinks through the Legislature, and it cost him some friends in those industries.

Scott said the tobacco industry felt betrayed because of his background in farming, though the farm never grew tobacco, and that the people in the soft drink business felt betrayed because of his connection with James Johnson, his campaign manager and president of Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Consolidated.

"That's one of the real negatives about that whole period of time — I lost a few friends, and Jimmy was one of them," Scott said.

Johnson has since come around, Scott said. "But for a long time there was just no communication at all. He was very bitter about that ... and I might have been, too."

This was before a North Carolina governor could succeed himself, so Scott was not risking a second term by pushing unpopular taxes. Still, it took some grit — a fact that Scott acknowledged with a grin and attributed to his youth. He had just turned 40 when the taxes were enacted.

"A fellow is sort of brash then," he said. "You can't tell him much about what he can't do. And if I had known what I couldn't do, I probably wouldn't have tried it."

That knowledge is at once an asset and a liability of growing older, the only question being one of where it balances.

"I realize now," Scott said, "that the world's not going to come to an end if certain things don't happen. I can honestly say that in my opinion I would be much better as a governor now than I was then. And I should be, being older and more mature. I would have a sense of perspective much clearer than I had then."

Former governors go to the U.S. Senate, the president's office at some prestigious university or into a lucrative and politically influential law practice. They generally don't take a job as head of a department of state government.

And Scott says he realizes some might consider his job a step down.

"But I never felt that way. First of all, I never had any desire to go to the Congress ... I don't really care for the Washington scene that much," he said.

Scott spent a little time in Washington as co-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission during the Carter administration, but said "North Carolina is my home. My roots are here ... and this is where I would like to make my contribution."

House Speaker Liston Ramsey says North Carolina is fortunate Scott feels that way.

He said the Legislature has appropriated more money for community college buildings in Scott's tenure than it had in all the years before.

"He's the best thing that ever happened to the Department of Community Colleges," Ramsey said.

Scott ran for governor in 1980, in the Democratic primary against Gov. Jim Hunt, and lost. But there is no law that says he couldn't run again.

"No," he said, "but there's an unwritten law that prevents me, and that's my wife saying that she'll surely divorce me if I ever do it again."

And there is one other thing that prevents him, Scott said.

"I don't have the fire in the gut to do it. You've got to have it. Man, you've got to want it the worst in the world, so you go that extra mile. I've reached the point now where I realize the world's going to go on if I don't get elected. But if you're going to be a candidate, you've got to believe it ain't going to go on if you don't get elected."

Democrats Open Budget Session But Keep Papers For Themselves

RALEIGH (AP) — For the first time, proposed "special provisions" instructing the bureacracy how to implement the state's $10 billion budget were handed out to Democratic budget subcommittee chairman in an open meeting.

But Rep. Billy Watkins, the House Appropriations Committee chairman who in past years refused to open such meetings to the public, at first told Republican lawmakers, reporters and other observers he had only enough copies of his proposals for the budget leaders.

Without copies, it was difficult for observers to follow the discussions. Some read over the subcommittee chairmen's shoulders as they sat around a table in the Legislative Office Building.

Watkins told reporters they could have copies after the proposals had been approved by the Legislature. When told they would be old news by then, Watkins replied, "Well, as you know, our purpose here is not to make news but to serve the people."

After the meeting, observers obtained copies from the legislative staff and some of the subcommittee chairmen. Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, criticized Watkins' handling of the matter.

"That's the way those guys will continue running things as long as they're alive and are confirmed as the leadership of this body," Sizemore said.

Among the provisions is a requirement to withhold the salaries of school superintendents whose districts fail to meet the state's class-size guidelines. Other provisions would fund projects in the districts represented by high-ranking Democratic leaders.

Watkins told the subcommittee chairmen that the provision on class sizes was a revised version of a 1987 plan that some officials had claimed not to understand.

The rewritten provision requires that students be assigned to classes in such a manner that no teacher would have more than 150 in the course of a day.

Man Dies In Ceiling Collapse

GREENSBORO (AP) — A two-ton slab of concrete, weakened by seeping roof water, dropped from the ceiling of a New York City hotel room and crushed a sleeping Greensboro businessman, authorities say.

New York police said advertising executive Carmelo Liuzzo, 35, was given the ill-fated suite after a cheaper room he had reserved was given to someone else.

Inspectors with the New York City Department of Buildings said they found evidence after the collapse Friday that the 60-year-old Helmsley Windsor Hotel in mid-Manhattan, where Liuzzo stayed, had cut corners rather than fix a dangerous roof problem.

"There is clear evidence of neglect," Charles M. Smith Jr., the city buildings commissioner, told the Greensboro News & Record. He said the badly deteriorated slab had been hidden by a cosmetic false ceiling of wallboard.

Defense Contractors Pay Millions To Congressmen, Their Campaigns

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defense contractors under investigation in the Pentagon procurement case have poured millions of dollars into the pockets and campaign treasuries of members of Congress, legally doing on Capitol Hill what would be crimes elsewhere in official Washington.

The principal beneficiaries are the lawmakers who make crucial decisions about Pentagon spending and procurement priorities through their memberships on the House and Senate armed services committees and defense appropriations subcommittees.

Last year, 37 of the 101 members who serve on the four military committees reported receiving about $137,100 in speaking fees from defense contractors publicly linked to the Pentagon probe.

All but $10,000 went to the House side of the Capitol, with 33 members — Democrats and Republicans alike — averaging $3,852 each in so-called honoraria.

The Associated Press surveyed the 1987 financial disclosure statements of committee members and campaign contribution reports filed with the Federal Election Commission for the 1988, 1986 and 1984 elections.

The reports were filed by political action committees maintained by six of the defense contractors who have been searched under warrant issued in the massive probe of alleged Pentagon procurement fraud and bribery.

They are McDonnell Douglas, the nation's No. 1 defense contractor; Litton Industries; United Technologies-Pratt & Whitney; Northrop; Cubic Corp. and Hazeltine Corp.

The survey hit only the tip of the iceberg. The companies tied so far to the probe are part of a huge defense industry, with dozens of other firms routinely making campaign contributions and paying honoraria to members of Congress.

Congressional leaders said last week that they had been told by the chief prosecutor, Henry Hudson, that no lawmakers were targets of the 2-year-old investigation or had had their records seized by the FBI.

Speaking fees are legal on Capitol Hill, but they are forbidden by law among executive branch officials. Senators can pocket up to $35,800 a year in such outside income, House members up to $26,850.

The destination of the speaking fees — often accompanied by free trips for lawmakers and their spouses to defense plants and resorts — tells a lot about where the real power of the Pentagon purse lies on Capitol Hill.

Twenty-two of the 52 members of House Armed Services Committee reported getting speaking fees from the surveyed defense contractors. This panel sets broad policy and authorizes items like weapons systems.

But a new tank is worthless unless there is money to build it, and that money on the House side of the Capitol comes from the smallest military panel in Congress, the 11-member House defense appropriations subcommittee headed by Rep. William Chappell, D-Fla.

Last year, Chappell and eight colleagues on the subcommittee reported getting $46,250 — an average of $5,138 apiece — from contractors tied to the investigation.

Chappell may head the committee, but he wasn't the favorite speaker among the contractors with subpoenaed records. That was Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., who said he collected $8,000 for four appearances. Chappell reported $4,000.

Others on the subcommittee getting money from the surveyed contractors included Reps. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, $7,000; Les AuCoin, D-Ore., $6,250; Bob Livingston, D-La., $6,000; and Bill Young, R-Fla., $6,000.

Young's disclosure statement illustrated a practice among defense contractors, who may fight each other for Pentagon jobs but can cooperate when it comes to taking a lawmaker on a grand tour.

Between Jan. 12 and Jan. 16, 1987, nine ontractors — seven of them not named in the probe — shared the costs of flying, housing and feeding Young for a trip that included visits to facilities in California and Texas.

For nine speeches in the five-day stretch, Young picked up $13,000 in honoraria, according to his disclosure statement.

Speaking fees are small change for defense contractors compared to what they pour into campaign treasuries.

In the last three election cycles, nearly $3 million was spent on all candidates by political action committees representing six of the companies linked to the Pentagon investigation, according to FEC reports.

Nearly half of this money — 47 percent — was channeled to members of the four military committees. Members of these panels received average contributions of $1,293, compared to an average of $961 for lawmakers not on the military committees.

The biggest spread was in 1983-4 by Northrop's PAC: an average of $2,014 for members of military committees, $876 for non-members.

Again, the defense appropriations subcommittees were favored PAC targets. The average contribution to a lawmaker on these panels was $1,866.

House defense appropriations was all-but blanketed with PAC money, with funds usually going to eight or more of the 11 members. For the 18-member Senate counterpart, no PAC gave to more than eight members in the same election cycle.

A PAC can give a candidate up to $10,000 in each two-year election cycle. The survey found three instances: Northrop's PAC to Sen. John Warner, R-Va., in 1984 and United Technologies-Pratt & Whitney's PAC to Warner and Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the same year.

Two lawmakers on Armed Services committees — Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif. — took neither honoraria nor PAC money from the defense contractors identified with the investigation, the records showed.

Government Taped Bribery Of Workers In Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators in the Pentagon bribery probe videotaped meetings in which Defense Department officials allegedly took payoffs from consultants, sources close to the two-year investigation said Saturday.

The sources said that two key figures in the investigation, Victor Cohen, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force for tactical systems, and James Gaines, a deputy assistant secretary of the Navy, appear on some of the videotapes. However, the sources declined to say whether alleged bribes turned up on the recordings of those two Pentagon officials.

The consultants shown on the videotapes also include Melvyn Paisley, the former procurement chief for the Navy whose office was searched on June 7 by federal authorities in the investigation, the sources said.

NBC News reported Friday night that Cohen would leave the Pentagon whenever a defense consultant would call, that his meetings with consultants were recorded and videotaped and that money changed hands.

The sources, meanwhile, said that Gaines also was videotaped at meetings with consultants in which highly confidential documents relating to Pentagon contracts allegedly changed hands.

The Washington Post reported that Cohen, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force for tactical systems, is among those cooperating in the investigation.

Sources close to the case said this past week that Gaines is cooperating in the investigation. Those sources continued to make that assertion Saturday, while other sources and the Post said that while Gaines gave a statement to investigators earlier, he is not cooperating with prosecutors at this point.

Meanwhile, Defense News reported in its June 27 editions that Paisley, when he was the Navy's procurement chief under Navy Secretary John Lehman, initiated a change that effectively eliminated all but one company from a key procurement program in 1986.

The change was to drop plans for separate competitions on all six components of the Aegis weapon system and instead go with a winner-take-all schemé. The system protects ships from airborne, surface and underwater missiles.

The result of the change, Defense News quoted several unidentified industry officials as saying, was that hundreds of millions of dollars in Navy contracts for the Aegis system went to Sperry Corp., now Unisys Corp., one of the firms involved in the Pentagon bribery investigation.

Defense News quoted sources as attributing the shift that favored Unisys to Paisley's close association with William Galvin, a consultant to the company. The publication quoted several sources as saying that Galvin had boasted about having "wired" the Aegis competition in Sperry's favor.

In related news, Rep. Barbara Boxer said Saturday that the Pentagon, defense contractors and the Reagan administration "howled" about congressional attempts to reform the procurement process.

FARMER'S APPEAL — The words "Pray For Rain" cut into a field just west of Sidney, Ohio, tell the story of farmers' reaction to a drought that threatens crops in much of the United States. Farmer Leonard Bensman Jr. cut the words into his field of yellow clover. In Alabama Gov. Guy Hunt, a lay Primitive Baptist minister, used a radio broadcast to issue a prayer for rain. More Records Fall As Heat Wave, Drought Form Searing Combination

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

Alabama's governor asked people Saturday to pray for rain to end the drought, Milwaukee officials considered whether to forgo Fourth of July fireworks because of fire danger and barges moved again on the Mississippi.

Temperatures hissed to record highs, but not in the same places as over the past week. Thanks to a cold front, temperatures across the northern Plains were 15 to 25 degrees cooler than Friday, and most of the records were in the Ohio Valley, with relief there expected Sunday.

The depleted lower Mississippi River was blocked to shipping again Saturday by barges running aground.

Showers and thunderstorms were widespread Friday night and early Saturday across eastern Texas and southern Arkansas into the central Gulf coast.

"I ask that God-fearing people across our state put aside time next Wednesday to pray that God will send life-giving rain to our state and our nation," Alabama Gov. Guy Hunt, a Primitive Baptist lay preacher, said Saturday in his weekly radio address.

A few locations in the middle Mississippi Valley never left the 80s overnight, including Ottumwa, Iowa, at 80 and St. Louis, Mo., at 82.

High temperature records started falling early. It wasn't even noon when the temperature at Milwaukee passed the previous record of 95 and kept on rising to a high of 100. Flint, Mich., tied its record of 94 at 10:45 a.m. and continued on to 100 by 2 p.m. The mercury hit 100 by noon at Chicago, and reached a record 102, making this June the first there with three 100-plus days since records began in 1873.

The heat wave has been blamed for five deaths.

Chicago public health officials said people could use air-conditioned public libraries and centers for the aging as cooling shelters Saturday. "We are monitoring the situation and will open more shelters if needed," said Dr. David Marder, a health department official.

Several Wisconsin communities already have decided to do without fireworks this year because of the fire threat, and Milwaukee County officials planned to decide by Monday whether to cancel the aerial displays, said parks director M. Brigid Sullivan. One show will go on because the rockets will be shot over Lake Michigan.

"This is the first time they have been canceled," James Myers, city clerk in Monroe, Wis., said of the fireworks. "It's sad. But it would be kind of sad to see your house burn up too."

A forest fire exacerbated by the heat and lack of rain was 65 percent contained Saturday by more than 650 firefighters after burning 27,000 acres of grass and forest in southeastern Montana and a small area of western South Dakota. At one point the flames overran 18 firefighters, but only one was hospitalized.

A grass and forest fire in northeastern Wyoming was contained Saturday after burning more than 6,000 acres. Shoshone National Forest officials in northwest Wyoming said a fire in prime timberland had burned about 550 acres.

At Memphis, Tenn., a 30-mile-long towboat and barge traffic jam on the dwindling Mississippi River was clearing up Saturday. The river was closed there from Tuesday until a dredge finished clearing a channel on Friday. Southbound barges were cleared during the night before northbound traffic was allowed to start through.

However, the increasingly shallow lower Mississippi was blocked again when barges ran aground near Greenville, Miss., and Helena, Ark., and about 20 miles north of Osceola, Ark., Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Dean Jones said Saturday.

Some shippers are switching to the relatively new Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway that runs from Mobile, Ala., to the Tennessee River which connects to the Ohio River. Barge traffic on the waterway has increased by 50 percent during the past few days because of low water on the Mississippi, the Army Corps of Engineers said.

Poor County Is Finding Itself Even Poorer

TUNICA, Miss. (AP) — A restaurant owner whose business is off 30 percent quit making doughnuts because nobody buys them. The same news about dried up business is repeated at the liquor store, tire shop, grocery and appliance store.

The worst drought in 50 years is a double whammy for Tunica County, one of the poorest counties in the nation. Farmers who grow cotton, soybeans and wheat in the upper Mississippi Delta are afraid their crops will burn up, and a lake that used to lure tourist dollars is so low that few fishermen and boaters bother to go out.

"Boy, it hurts. There's not a business in town that's not affected," said Jim Fowler, sitting behind the counter of the customerless Brown Bag Liquors. "It's a real bad situation all the way around."

Tunica County is 64 percent farmland. It ranks 78th among Mississippi's 82 counties in per capita income, with a yearly average of $6,800, according to the state economist's office. Other than the recreation business from the lake, it has no industry. The population is 9,652, down from 16,826 in 1960.

Cotton is still king here, accounting for 40 percent of the crop value. But there also are long, straight rows of soybeans, wheat, rice and other crops in flat fields of sandy loam and buckshot black clay.

They're all struggling to grow. There hasn't been a decent rain since April.

'It hasn't got to the point where we're going to abandon the crop and throw the towel in. But we're hurting," said county agriculture agent Dwayne Wheeler.

"The drought affects everybody. When the farmer's not spending money, there's not a whole lot of money being spent," Wheeler said.

"It's killing my business," said Wiley Chambers, owner of the Blue and White Restaurant, where the glazed cake doughnuts are a thing of the past. "These farmers won't spend any money when it looks bad, and it looks bad."

Jim Sturgill, owner of Delta Tire and Alignment, had nary a car or tractor in his garage.

"Look in the shop, there's nothing. We haven't done any business," Sturgill said.

On a 100-plus degree day, the pavement seems to melt in the distance under a blistering sun, and dogs nap in what shade they can find. Tractors pulling discs kick up clouds of dust that hang in the air and assault the throat.

Owen Bibb, 55, has 4,000 acres of land, some of which hasn't been planted while he waits for rain. On Friday, he laid off 15 farmhands.

"We're scared of what may be facing us," Bibb said. "We're in no position to stand a sorry crop. We can't survive a complete bust. All we can do is put our faith in the good Lord. Worrying don't help."

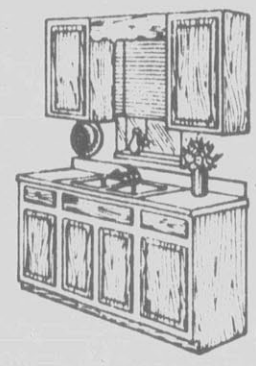

If it's too dry to plow, the fish surely aren't biting at the Tunica Cut-off. The 20-mile-long lake was once part of the Mississippi River, which made a meandering loop.

In 1942, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers eliminated the loop by plowing a new channel, leaving a lake fed by the river. With the river at its lowest level since records were first kept in 1872, the lake is emptying.

Selden and his associates want the government to build a dam to keep the lake at an acceptable level.

Seven Marines Die As Helicopter Slams Into Japanese Hillside In Fog

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. Marine Corps helicopter slammed into a hillside and burned Saturday while flying in fog near a nuclear power plant, and all seven Marines on board were killed, officials said.

The Sikorsky CH-53D Sea Stallion crashed about 30 minutes after leaving the U.S. Marine Corps Air Station at Iwakuni, in southwestern Japan, said Sgt. Nolan Wells of the station's public affairs office.

Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of their families.

Cloudy skies and dense fog were reported in the area at the time of the crash on the southwest tip of Shikoko island, but it wasn't immediately known if the weather contributed to the accident.

Since 1980, at least 88 people have died in accidents involving the Sea Stallion, or the later-model Super Stallion, the largest and most expensive helicopter used by the U.S. military.

Television footage showed Japanese and American rescue workers carrying bodies in sacks over terraced rice paddies less than two miles from a nuclear power station.

Fog swirled around the hill where the aircraft crashed and burned, and it appeared to be raining lightly. The wreckage was scattered over a wide area, according to a local police official who identified himself only as Sakamoto.

Japanese aviation law prohibits aircraft from flying over nuclear power stations and other nuclear-related facilities. There are about 30 such facilities in Japan.

The law also says that aircraft which must fly over such facilities due to bad weather or to avoid a collision, must take the least hazardous course or altitude.

A Japanese Defense Agency official said in a telephone interview that he saw "little problem" with the helicopter's flight path.

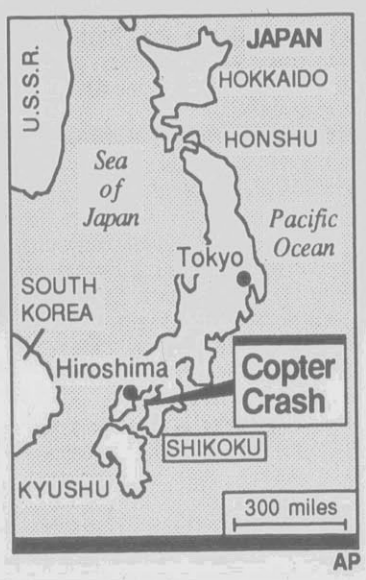

"We noticed the copter took a course several kilometers away from the plant," despite the poor visibility in the area at the time of the accident, said the official, who refused to be named.

The Marines were flying to their base at Camp Futenma in Okinawa, 580 miles away, where they were assigned to Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 402 of the 1st Marine Air Wing, Wells said. The United States has about 20,000 Marines stationed in Okinawa.

The Sea Stallion left Iwakuni, about 700 miles southwest of Tokyo, at 9:50 a.m. and crashed at about 10:20 a.m., Wells said.

The CH-53D is capable of carrying up to 55 troops or a cargo of 32,000 pounds. The single-rotor, twin-engine aircraft is made by the Stratford, Conn.-based Sikorsky Aircraft division of the United Technologies Corp.

The helicopter has had a series of operational problems and fatal crashes.

AP

In November 1985, the military grounded the helicopters after mechanics in a routine inspection discovered a defect in the locknut that helps hold the rotor blade assembly to the aircraft.

Sikorsky's former chief safety engineer alleged in a March 1987 court affidavit that metal mounts on the tail rotor gearbox of the helicopter have failed or been suspected of failing an estimated 60 times since 1968. Sikorsky attorneys said the man was a disgruntled former employee who was using internal company documents in violation of his contract.

Three Marines died in a Feb. 13, 1987 accident involving a Sea Stallion helicopter in the Trabuco Canyon area near El Toro, Calif.

In July 1985, a CH-53D crashed off Japan, killing four Marines. In May 1985, 17 Marines were presumed killed when their Sea Stallion crashed into the ocean off Japan's southern coast. And in March 1984, a Sea Stallion slammed into a mountainside in Seoul, and all 18 Americans and 11 South Koreans were killed. In 1983, seven people died in two accidents.

In addition, five were killed in 1982 in one crash, nine in 1981 in four accidents, and seven in 1980 in four accidents.

Guard Fires On Co-Workers, Kills Two, Wounds Four

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — A security guard accused of shooting up the warehouse where he worked mumbled complaints about his job as he fired on co-workers, killing two and wounding four, police and witnesses said.

Sebron Flenaugh Jr., 45, was arrested without incident at his home by Oakland police Friday night about three hours after the rampage at the Micropure Inc. warehouse. The company distributes household water purifying kits.

Witnesses told police that a man dressed in a guard's uniform and brandishing a handgun had followed an employee through a door and into the warehouse, where he started shooting on the shipping dock. There were 21 telemarketing people working in the building at the time.

The gunman used .357-caliber revolver carrying six rounds, Concord police said.

"I was sitting at the break table," said Lisa Patton, 19, "and he just walked in and started shooting my friends. I ran and called police."

'Everybody was screaming and running," said 17-year-old Germaine Reyes, who was in the shipping room when the shooting started. "I hit the ground and went under the table."

Throughout the shootings, workers said the gunman uttered barely audible curses, several times complaining of either a "lousy job" or a "crummy job."

After the shootings the guard went out the back door, got into his car and drove away, witnesses told police.

Seventeen-year-old Jennifer Hollis of Martinez, who was hit in the chest and abdomen, died Friday night on the operating table at John Muir Medical Center in Walnut Creek, hospital spokeswoman Sandra Ryan said. Jim Disney, 19, of Concord died about five hours later at the hospital after surgery on stomach wounds.

Flenaugh, who was not authorized to carry a weapon on the job, was an employee of Wells Security Systems in Danville, which had assigned him to the Micropure warehouse, said Concord Police Lt. Jim Jennings.

Micropure employees said Flenaugh had worked at the company about 18 months and was a loner.

Police Lt. Jim Webster on Saturday said Flenaugh had a "casual but congenial" relationship with the victims.

Flenaugh hadn't provided police with any motive, Jennings said. "Possibly he was depressed, but we're not sure what set him off," he said.

He said Flenaugh would be booked for investigation of murder and five counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

Micropure workers described Flenaugh as "friendly" in the past, and said they liked him enough to ask him to join them for beer and pizza. He always declined, however, they said.

Texas Treasurer May Keynote Convention

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Treasurer Ann Richards, said to be the Democratic Party's choice as keynote speaker for next month's convention, confirmed Saturday she had talked with the party's chairman about the job.

Ms. Richards said in an interview with The Associated Press she understood after talking Friday with Democratic Party Chairman Paul Kirk that she was on a short list for consideration as keynote speaker.

"I think that the purpose of Paul's call was to get a biography and to make sure I would be available," Ms. Richards said, adding that she told him she would be.

Ms. Richards, 54, is known as a fiery populist with a quick wit. She said she does not know why she would be considered for keynote speaker, although she added, "I'm sure the fact that I have been a Democrat all my life and active in the party, and the fact that I am the first female in Texas to hold public office statewide in 50 years" played a part.

Official announcement of the keynote speaker is expected to be made early next week.

The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution, in their combined Saturday editions, reported that two sources — both requesting anonymity — said the party and likely nominee Michael Dukakis have agreed on Ms. Richards. The New York Times reported in Saturday's editions that Ms. Richards was the leading candidate for the job.

Kirk on Friday refused to confirm Ms. Richards' selection. But Michael McCurry, the Democratic National Committee's press secretary, said Kirk would not deny that Ms. Richards is on a short list that he will discuss with party leaders this weekend.

Ms. Richards' selection is designed to solidify the party's support among women and to send political signals to the South and to Texas, a critical state in the November presidential election, the Atlanta newspaper said.

It is a "very positive thing" for women to be allowed "roles of prominence and responsibility" within a national party, Ms. Richards said.

"Women are playing an increasingly important role in politics in this country. They are, most of them, Democrats," she said.

Ms. Richards said she could not speculate how being the convention's keynote speaker would affect her decision to run for governor in 1990.

"I'm always pleased to be recognized and to have an opportunity for some visibility," she said.

Other politicians who had been mentioned as potential keynote speakers, such as Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas and Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, also have been considered leading choices for Dukakis' running mate.

The keynote speech is to be the main event of the convention's first night in Atlanta, July 18.

Ms. Richards was elected to the first of two terms in 1982, becoming the first woman to win statewide office in Texas in 50 years. As treasurer, she is the state's banker, responsible for handling more than $150 billion in transactions each year.

She served last year on Kirk's Democratic Policy Commission, which conducted a lengthy study of major issues, and she seconded Walter Mondale's presidential nomination at the 1984 convention in San Francisco.

A Waco native and former county commissioner, Ms. Richards holds a bachelor's degree from Baylor University and attended graduate school at the University of Texas at Austin.

GOP Spokesman Says Party Gains Make It Nearly Equal To Democrats

CINCINNATI (AP) — For the first time in 50 years, the Republican Party is close to matching the Democrats in numbers, a party adviser said Saturday, as former GOP presidential contenders gathered to rally behind George Bush.

Bush, meanwhile, urged Iowa Republicans by telephone from Washington to help him and underscore the "enormous differences" he had with Democrat Michael Dukakis.

"The point is, I believe, if we can do that and do it with integrity, the American people are going to see the clearest-cut choice in an election since the McGovern-Nixon race in 1972," Bush said. "I think we need this fall to spell it out without tearing him down personally."

Bush spoke to the Iowa Republican State Convention in Des Moines through a telephone hookup from the nation's capital.

He dismissed recent polls showing him trailing Dukakis, blaming his poor showing on getting an early hold on the GOP nomination. Since then "the Republican message disappeared from the political radar screen," Bush said.

"It just makes me realize just how ridiculous polls are in early June," Bush said. "The message is, don't worry about polls in early June."

Robert Teeter, a Detroit-based pollster for the Bush campaign, spoke to a Republican "Unity" planning session in Cincinnati, which attracted Republican delegates from 24 states.

He said that while polls still indicate the GOP is running slightly behind the Democratic Party in popularity, "the fact is, we are doing a better job attracting the younger people."

Former GOP presidential hopefuls Pat Robertson, Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole and Alexander M. Haig Jr., also addressed the session, saying they would be surrogate speakers for Bush, the certain Republican nominee.

Teeter credited the baby boom — people born during the post-World War II expansion period — for the increased party membership. Since the 1984 election, 52 to 54 percent of the Republican party members have been under age 40, Teeter said.

"For the first time in 50 years, we are going to compare really close with the Democrats, going into this election," Teeter said.

To win, however, Republicans must attract independents and some Democrats as President Ronald Reagan did in the past two elections, he said.

The former candidates all pledged to work for Bush.

Soviets Chase Canadian Attache, Bar 7 Diplomats

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union on Saturday ordered Canada's military attache to leave and barred seven former Canadian diplomats from returning to the country in retaliation for Canada's expulsion of Soviet diplomats.

The Soviets also pulled 25 Soviet workers from Canada's Moscow embassy.

The official Tass news agency accused the Canadian military attache, Larry Bowen, of "engaging in activity that does not correspond to his official status," diplomatic jargon for spying.

Tass said a Soviet deputy foreign minister, Alexander Bessmertynkh, told Canadian Ambassador Vernon Turner that the Ottawa government had "resorted to a new hostile action" by expelling the senior Soviet military attache and barring other Soviet diplomats from returning.

"Unfortunately, they didn't heed ... our warning that if the Canadian side moved on to further aggravate the situation, it could expect immediate further retaliatory measures," Tass said.

In Ottawa, Canada, a spokesman for Foreign Minister Joe Clark called the latest Soviet move "totally unwarranted."

"This is viewed as a serious escalation in the matter and we can't ignore it," said the spokesman, Paul Frazer.

Clark announced Wednesday that eight Soviets had been expelled and nine others previously assigned to Canada were barred from returning. Canadian intelligence sources said the expulsions of Soviets came after the Canadians discovered a Soviet spy ring.

The Soviets retaliated the next day, expelling two Canadian diplomats and barring three others from returning.

Clark then kicked out the senior military attache at the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa and barred a former second secretary from returning.

Afghan Agents Blamed For Blast In Pakistan

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — A bomb destroyed a hotel in the center of this northwestern frontier city Saturday and killed 13 people, police said. Officials blamed government agents from neighboring Afghanistan.

Devout Moslems had just finished morning prayers shortly after sunrise when the bomb exploded, tearing through the three-story hotel and tearoom in the old section of the city, said Abdul Ahmed Khan, assistant inspector of crimes.

"It collapsed just like a sandwich," said khan.

Rescuers pulled out the bodies from the ruins of the hotel. Two people survived nine hours under the rubble but died on the way to the hospital, police said.

Those killed included an Afghan woman and her 3-year-old child, said Omar Amer, a Pakistani journalist who visited the scene. The woman had come to Peshawar for medical treatment, he said.

The blast injured four people. Three were treated and released from the hospital. There was no word on the condition of the fourth.

The seven-party Afghan guerrilla alliance, which is fighting to overthrow the Afghan government, has its headquarters in Peshawar, 30 miles from the Afghan border.

The deputy inspector general of police, Kamal Shah, said officers in the city regularly search of people, parcels and vehicles and that terrorists target places such as hotels, where baggage is seldom checked.

Police said they suspected that agents of Afghanistan's Communist government were responsible for the blast.

"Previously they have committed all these things," Khan said, referring to dozens of terrorist bombings over the past two years in Pakistan. Hundreds of Pakistanis and Afghan refugees have died in the blasts.

The chief minister of Peshawar province, Fazle Haq, told a press conference that Pakistan's support for more than 3 million Afghan refugees and Afghan guerrillas has made the area a target for terrorists.

But he promised Pakistan won't end its support for the guerrillas, who also have received support from China and the United States.

On Friday, small explosive devices went off outside the headquarters of two Afghan resistance parties but there were no serious injuries, said Khan.

Until Friday, Khan said Peshawar had been enjoying a respite from terrorist bombings, which had become almost a weekly occurance prior to the signing of the April 14 Geneva accord on the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

The Soviets intervened in Afghanistan in December 1979.

Under the Geneva accord, the Soviet Union agreed to withdraw its troops over a nine-month period, beginning May 15 and ending Feb. 15, 1989. The withdrawal began on schedule.

The Soviet-backed Kabul government said only Soviet troops, not Soviet military advisers, will leave.

Toll In Tank Farm Blast Climbs To 7

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Three more workers died Saturday from burns suffered in a fiery explosion at a gasoline supply depot, bringing to seven the number of confirmed dead in the fire, hospital officials said.

Neighborhoods surrounding the San Rafel sales agency in Guadalupe filled up once again as thousands of twice-evacuated residents returned home.

Firefighters thought they put out the blazes early Friday and most residents went home, only to flee again in panic a short time later when a tank reignited.

The Constructora Quiroga y Villarreal company was doing maintenance work on a fire prevention system Thursday when a 2.2 million-gallon gasoline tank exploded and ignited two other tanks.

The government petroleum monopoly Pemex, which owns the tank farm, said four men had died by Friday. It was the second major fire at a Pemex gasoline-storage depot in a month.

Two men died Saturday of burns at the Hospital 21 in Monterrey, said Sergio Cardenas, a shift assistant.

A third man died Saturday at the city's Uiversity Hospital, said Jose Angel Medellin, an official at the hospital's morgue.

Company clerk Pedro Salas said 13 workers were accounted for after having been reported missing after the blast.

A Pemex news release Saturday said the fire was extinguished at 3 a.m. and "the security of the area has been totally re-established."

The company did not update the death toll in the statement. A secretary at Pemex said no one was available for comment on the three additional deaths reported.

Across from the explosion site, life began returning to normal. Young boys rode bicycles outside the depot's cement walls. Others peeked through gaps in the wall to see the charred remains of the tanks.

"It's good to be home," said 28-year-old Angel Reymundo Delgado. He said he spent two nights at one of the emergency shelters set up after the disaster.

"The first night I stayed in a cattle stall so I didn't get much sleep. But last night was better," he said.

One shelter was at the Guadalupe Exposition Ground, which houses an annual cattle show and fair.

Korea Marks War Anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea observed the 38th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War on Saturday with nationwide rallies denouncing Communist North Korea.

Officials said hundreds of thousands of people, led by veterans and anti-communist organizations, attended rallies and memorial services across the country. No overall tally was available.

Korea was divided in 1945, when U.S. and Soviet troops came to facilitate the surrender of Japan, which had colonized the peninsula for 36 years.

The Korean War began June 25, 1950, when North Korean troops poured across the dividing line. Three days later, they occupied the capital of Seoul.

U.N. forces, led by U.S. troops, supported South Korea, while Chinese troops later sided with North Korea.

Fighting raged until an armistice was signed on July 27, 1953. At least 2 million military personnel and civilians were killed or wounded.

Bitter disputes have continued between the North and South since then, with no peace accord and massive military forces in position on both sides of a truce line that has been broken by sporadic clashes.

South Korean radical students, a small but vocal political force, have pressed to reunify the two Koreas and demand the removal of 42,000 U.S. troops stationed in South Korea under a mutual defense pact.

On Friday, Culture-Information Minister Chung Han-mo said the government "will deal harshly with ideological radicals sympathetic with the principles and cause of the North Korean Communists."

CASH BACK

How Did Over 100 of Your Friends and Neighbors Receive Cash for Saying "Good-bye" to High Heating and Cooling Bills?

They did it by replacing that old inefficient heating/cooling equipment with high-efficient equipment that qualified for Greenville Utilities CASH BACK rebates.

Whether you are remodeling or building a new home, you can get a CASH BACK Rebate ranging from $75.00 to $400.00 per piece of equipment. The amount depends on the type and efficiency of the equipment you select.

All GUC residential customers are eligible to apply.

If you'd like a free information packet on a CASH BACK Rebate, call Greenville Utilities Energy Services Office at 752-7166.

This program is funded by the North Carolina Department of Commerce, Energy Division, from money made available through Exxon oil overcharges.

Medical Zoning Being Eroded?

Is Greenville's medical district in critical condition?

The Planning and Zoning Commission ignored the advice of city planners when it recommended softening zoning in an area along Stantonsburg Road, just outside the heart of the district. That move is the first step toward diluting the zoning restrictions protecting this regional resource from inappropriate development. If a precedent is set, it will be difficult to deny the flood of requests to rezone property in the district.

Support for the kind of quality medical district envisioned in the Medical District Study Plan is eroding. If that deterioration continues unchecked, that disintegration could push the project's condition toward "critical."

The City Council should sharply question the rezoning request when it comes before the board. It should not hesitate to deny it on the basis the request abrades the integrity of the district and sets a lead for further dissolution of soundly devised and duly-discussed restrictions.

Granting request would allow residential development too close to the crucial area around Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine. The Medical District Plan purposely restricted residential areas near these key resources to eliminate traffic congestion. Now, allowing residential development at a prominent intersection negates the effect of these restraints. It ignores the intent of creating medical district zoning.

Why is it so difficult for property owners, developers and city officials to see the potential of a well-organized, well-protected medical district? If it is allowed to grow uncorrupted, consistent with the guidelines set by the Medical District Plan, the Eastern Carolina Medical Park will attract profitable, medical-related offices, industries and services.

Landowners don't seem to grasp the significance of this fact, however, nor do they appear capable of a perspective encompassing the future. This "bird-in-the-hand" mentality won't produce the type of medical district the city needs to prosper.

Neither will it produce the type of regional medical resource northeastern North Carolina desperately needs to address its health problems. This section of the state lacks good, accessible medical resources found in the Piedmont. The Eastern Carolina Medical Park is an opportunity to overcome this handicap.

But the project is in trouble if those charged with protecting it don't do their job.

Dramatic Success

25 Years Of Talent & Art

It was 25 years ago when "West Side Story" became the first musical to be presented by the East Carolina Summer Theater.

The theater has since grown into a community asset that entertains and delights. It has become an event that brings talent and art to Greenville.

The Summer Theater was founded by Edgar Loessin, chairman of the ECU Drama Department with East Carolina, then under the leadership of President Leo W. Jenkins.

Since, there were some years when the Summer Theater was not in production while McGinnis auditorium was under construction. Jenkins has been retired a number of years but Edgar Loessin is still at work directing the resumed series of summer productions.

The format is changed somewhat. Drama, as well as musicals, are presented. An important change is the reconstructed McGinnis Theater which provides one of the outstanding facilities of the nation.

In addition to overseeing the Summer Theater, Loessin also started the ECU Drama Department which has developed into an outstanding one. It provides support for the Summer Theater including auditions for the Summer Theater.

With costs of staging productions in New York soaring, regional theaters now seem to be coming into their own as important centers for stage productions.

The ECU Summer Theater in its 25th year enjoys continued enthusiastic public support. It required considerable confidence and exuberance on the part of Edgar Loessin and the Jenkins administration to begin the project 25 years ago. Hard work and continued public and administrative support have been necessary since, but the ECU Summer Theater shows signs of being around many more years.

Just A Small Price To Pay

Sunday Morning Notes

There are inconveniences we face sometimes that are quite irritating. On reflection, however, we might fight that the inconvenience is worth it.

Among them:

•Being stopped for law enforcement officers for a driver's license check. It happened to me on East Fifth Street recently. I was in a hurry and there were several cars ahead. Finally, I pulled my car up to the officer who checked my license and wished me a good day. The delay was not convenient, but on second thought it occurred to me that there are people out there driving without proper licenses. They lost their license for a reason and usually that reason is they are a danger to other motorists who do drive with proper license — and that includes most of us. The license check delay is a small price to pay to get those who abuse the driving privilege off the road.

•Mirrors and surveilance cameras in retail stores. I wonder why are they watching me. I'm honest. Unforunately, everybody is not and shoplifting is a major expense to retail stores. Those who steal increase the cost of goods sold. There is nowhere to put that cost except on other merchandise sold. Hence the honest customer pays for the dishonest customer. The mirrors and cameras are a small price to pay to reduce the ultimate cost of goods.

•The extensive checking of credit cards and checks offered for goods. The same applies here. Bouncing checks and stolen credit cards are major problems to the business world. They cost money which goes to the cheaters. Again, honest people pay for the dishonest.

•The flag man who stops us when road construction is under way ahead. Sometimes we sit in long lines of traffic waiting in the hot sun. At times it appears for no reason. As we finally move, however, we see a huge dump truck blocking the road as it places its load of fill dirt. Without some traffic control there could be an awesome accident.

•Slowing to 25 mph in a school zone. The answer to that is obvious. As you approach the school and see small children skipping across the street, it is clear that nothing is more important than their safety.

•Having to have the auto inspected once a year. Again the answer is logical. There are those who would drive their cars in unsafe mechanical condition. They not only endanger their own lives but everyone else's. Getting one's car inspected is, indeed, a small price to pay.

Out-Of-State Tax Losses

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — If you've purchased something out of state — or through a mail order house — and you are now using it in North Carolina, you should have paid North Carolina use tax on the item.

The fact that you probably did not pay use tax on it puts you in good company. Hardly anyone does, and the state doesn't agressively collect it.

The state use tax landed in the news last week when Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, began pushing his mail-order sales tax bill. He claimed that he wasn't trying to impose a new tax when he suggested that companies mailing orders to North Carolina be required to collect the sales tax. He said that his bill would simply alter the method of collecting the use tax.

While use taxes are regularly collected from businesses, they are not generally collected from consumers. To see if the Department of Revenue would know what to do with a consumer willing to pay his use tax, this reporter stopped by the Revenue Building last week.

Even though few people ever pay the use tax on consumer items, there is a procedure for collecting the tax if you volunteer to pay it. You fill out a one-page "special collections form" and pay five percent on the sales price of the item purchased out of state.

Tim Holmes of the Sales and Use Tax Division said that he could recall only one time when a consumer came in to pay the use tax voluntarily. It involved a major purchase of furniture. He said he'd never heard of anyone offering to pay 55 cents on an $11 book club book, as was this reporter.

Holmes said that the state really doesn't have the manpower to enforce the use tax for consumer purchases. But that doesn't relieve a taxpayer of the responsibility to pay it, he said.

For the record, be warned that anytime you purchase something by mail from an out-of-state company, you owe the state five percent tax. You also owe if you purchase a product out of state and have it shipped home.

From the "They make you do it" department: Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, speaking at a press conference, "Not only is it mandated, it is required."

During debate on Sen. Jim McDuffie's bill to eliminate the requirement that sailboard users wear life preservers in Mecklenburg County, Sen. Bo Thomas, D-Henderson, said something that brought a huge laugh from surrounding senators. Sen. Charlie Hipps, D-Haywood, later quoted Thomas as saying, "That;s one way to get rid of those Republicans, drown them."

From '72 to '88: Deja Vu

Scott Duncan

Last week, I went back to my high school graduation. The Iowa City West High School class of '88 invited me to its commencement exercises.

As I sat up on stage with the soon-to-be graduates, I realized it was the first commencement I had been involved with since I breezed through the doors of high school to the outside world in 1972.

When it came time to graduate from college, my wedding coincided with commencement. One can only tolerate so much pomp and circumstance at a time, I thought, so I passed on commencement.

Now, I seemed caught up in deja vu. A mass of green-gowned graduates, balancing mortar boards on their heads, were receiving their diplomas. Just like I did, 16 Junes ago.

Some things remain universal. Inside the handsome covers of their diplomas, the new graduates read the same inscription: "This is a facsimile. Your actual diploma will be mailed to you after you return your cap and gown."

But earlier, I took a tour of my alma mater, a sprawling, '60s-style modern structure in which I hadn't set foot since graduation night. Built in 1968 on the edge of Iowa City, Iowa (Population: 52,000), they cut the ribbon the fall that followed the Summer of Love, which kind of sums up my graduating class.

The class of '72. We were caught on the cusp between the Flower Children and the Me Generation. So we went out to Find Ourselves, and wandered around for a while not realizing we were there the whole time. It took me nine years and three separate majors to finish college.

But as I roamed the familiar halls of West High, I felt a little like Kathleen Turner in "Peggy Sue Got Married," except I didn't have to wear the dress. There was the theater where I portrayed the H.L. Mencken character in "Inherit the Wind." There were the classrooms, each with a specific memory of a teacher. There was the wrestling room where I sweated away the pounds. And there was music wing, where I spent 95 percent of my free time.

I used to say I peaked in high school, but I wondered if that would comfort this new crop of graduates. As they walked on stage last week to the strains of Elgar's popular march, each of the graduates wore a facial expression that brought back memories: It was a "this-is-my-life" look, a mixture of excitement, a sense of occasion and a shadow of fear at what might lie ahead.

I remember being not a little concerned at the prospect of becoming an adult. "I'll see you in 10 years," I remember telling a friend in the commons area, "when I'm fat, bald and have 2.3 children."

On the downward side of two decades later, none of the three has come to pass. And, truthfully, the first reaction on being invited to share a few remarks with the class of '88 was: "My God, I must finally be an official adult."

The high school seniors of today seem more relaxed than my class; they seem to feel part of an establishment rather than at odds with it. As a musical interlude in last week's commencement, the Class of '88 selected "Teach Your Children," the song made famous by Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. The cut was off one of my favorite high school albums. It was titled "Deja Vu."

The new graduates also seemed unafraid to celebrate their youth. As the speeches progressed, a beach ball floated among the degree candidates, as well as a few balloons and some substance that looked like psychedelic shaving cream.

And when their class president talked, he spoke of jobs and oncoming responsibility. Perhaps this is why they feel they can flirt with frivolity. They are considering careers. The Class of '72 was solemnly preparing to change the world.

That is, as soon as the graduation parties were over.

We didn't change the world, of course. The world changed for us, because of us. A small distinction, perhaps, but one that I feebly tried to convey to the new graduates.

I wished them the best of luck and left them with Bob Dylan's words: "May you build a ladder to the stars, and climb on every rung. And may you stay forever young."

I hope they disregard all advice and strike out on their own.

Should Street Drugs Be On America's Supermarket Shelves?

Jerome Skolnick

As numbers of thoughtful people despair of controlling drugs through criminal-law enforcement, decriminalization is increasingly proposed as an alternative. Would it be a good idea? It might, but we need to think through how decriminalization would play out if implemented; what the benefits and costs would be and to whom, and whether decriminalization can be reconciled with a positive moral message.

Let's consider two possibilities of how decriminalization would work. Under the least restrictive, the free-market, model, psychoactive drugs would be freely available. Such substances would be treated as we now treat aspirin and over-the-counter drugs. Supermarkets could sell, and anyone could purchase, unlimited supplies. Considerable benefits would flow: Since all drugs would be legal, we could reasonably speculate that nobody would be interested in buying street-corner drugs. With one stroke we could eradicate smuggling, organized drug gangs, street sales, street violence and, since drug prices presumably would be reduced, most crime undertaken to purchase drugs.

An alternative legalization example implies much more formal control. Drugs would be regulated as we currently supervise the content and sale of alcoholic beverages. Administrators might try to monitor purity, potency of product and age of buyers. The more controls, however, the more incentives for illegal markets. If we prohibited cocaine or crack sales to minors but made the drugs freely available to adults at low prices, we would stimulate an illegal cocaine-crack market for minors. Thus, regulation would predictably reduce some of the benefits of decriminalization.

Decriminalization advocates assume that benefits would outweigh costs. But how to measure costs and to whom? To be persuasive, decriminalization advocates will have to persuade skeptics that easier availability of drugs would neither trigger significantly more use nor stimulate more intensive use by current users.

We can only speculate about what would really happen. One theory holds that drugs are already so easily available that anyone who wants to use them does and would not be interested in using significantly larger amounts. That speculation probably holds best for the 1960s generation of affluent and educated drug users. There are of course plenty of them — but their drugs of choice are alcohol, cigarettes, marijuana and nasal cocaine. Crack, heroin and PCP are ghetto and barrio favorites.

More important, affluent users rarely commit crimes to buy drugs, don't sell drugs on street corners and don't fire off Uzis in housing projects. On the whole, decriminalization would benefit affluent, recreational drug users.

The crime-violence-drug link is a problem of the inner city, the jobless, the poor. Those who speak on behalf of this constituency are concerned that decriminalization would generate a sharp rise in drug use among the truly disadvantaged, especially teen-agers who have tough lives and bleak futures. Since they are not saying "no" to expensive illegal drugs, why should they say "no" to less expensive legal ones?

So decriminalization may entail two heavy costs: an explosion of drug use, especially in the inner cities, and a long-run symbolic defeat, with decriminalization signaling a surrender to drugs.

To prevail, decriminalization advocates will have to address these serious concerns. Some responses are possible. Those who fear a surge of inner-city drug use might be moved by a promise of a sharp reduction in crime and violence. Thus, decriminalization would heighten the safety of inner-city streets and involve fewer inner-city youngsters in crime and in the criminal-justice system as felons.

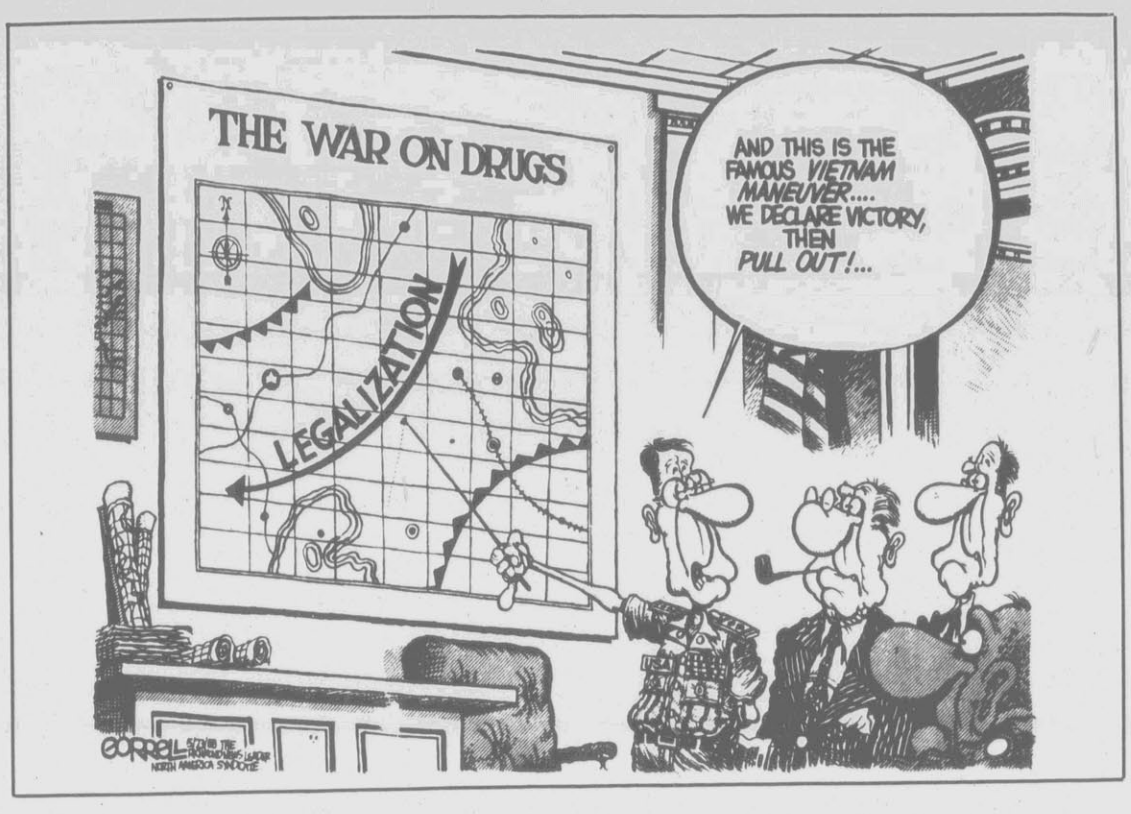

What about the symbolic meaning of decriminalization? Legalization of "vice" is often equated with a third model — approval, even promotion, of the formerly forbidden activity. When governments have legalized gambling — lotteries, casinos and off-track betting — they have also condoned and shamelessly promoted it.

But decriminalization need not imply approval. When the British legalized casinos in 1968, their purpose was to control organized crime. They didn't permit casinos to advertise at all — not even with matchbooks or ads in the telephone book.

Similarly, if drugs are to be legalized, advocates must ensure that the purpose will not be to pump money into state treasuries, but rather to control a major social and public-health problem.

To be acceptable, decriminalization would need to be grounded in a larger moral purpose — to reduce crime, to enhance public health and safety, to invigorate a sense of community.

He's A Centrist

Don Oberdorfer

WASHINGTON — Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, in a foreign-policy speech here Tuesday, put forth the outlines of a centrist campaign position apparently designed to reassure his establishment audience while leaving room for partisan debate on such issues as strategic weaponry, southern Africa and Central America.

According to his aides, Dukakis' main aim was to persuade the audience of foreign- and defense-policy experts and U.S. allies that he is "not another George McGovern" promising drastic changes in U.S. foreign policy as did the 1972 Democratic nominee.

Speaking to the annual conference of The Atlantic Council, Dukakis emphasized his strong endorsement of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and approval of President Reagan's current policies toward the Soviet Union.

In doing so, Dukakis gave the administration a green light to try to wrap up a strategic-arms treaty and move ahead to begin East-West negotiations on conventional-arms reductions in Europe. Dukakis said his advice to Reagan on a strategic-arms treaty is "to go for it."

In three areas, however, the views Dukakis expressed here Tuesday differed sharply from Reagan administration policy and the basic stance that Vice President George Bush, the likely Republican candidate, seems to be ready to run on:

•Strategic-arms programs. Dukakis repeated his previously stated opposition to placing MX missiles on railroad cars to make them less vulnerable, to the proposed Midgetman mobile missile and the Strategic Defense Initiative, although he cast his opposition this week as a question of budget priorities for the next administration rather than fundamental policy choices.

Dukakis, who is said by those familiar with his views to have an aversion to nuclear weapons similar to that of the two most recent presidents, Carter and Reagan, advocated more emphasis on building up conventional military forces.

This sounded as if Dukakis would make a major shift in defense policy from new U.S. strategic nuclear programs. However, Joseph Nye of Harvard University, an adviser to Dukakis who contributed to the Atlantic Council speech, said Dukakis did not mention several strategic programs he favors, among them the highly accurate Trident D-5 submarine-launched missile, the Stealth bomber and new cruise missiles, as well as eventual modernization of land-based intercontinental missiles, especially of the single-warhead variety.

As two of his questioners pointed out Tuesday, Dukakis' opposition to the land-mobile MX and Midgetman could have major impact on the strategic-arms negotiations. The formal position of the Reagan administration is to ban land-mobile missiles but in fact it is negotiating with the Soviets toward limitations on such weapons that permit substantial numbers on both sides.

•South Africa. Dukakis took a strong pro-sanctions position that is in tune with Democrats on Capitol Hill and especially with the Jesse L. Jackson campaign but which is at odds with administration policy. Saying that South Africa is engaged in "blatant racism toward its own people ... in terrorist acts ... (and) naked military aggression against its neighbors," Dukakis called for a "very tough" policy and declared that the administration policy of "constructive engagement" with South Africa on regional issues has failed.

This stand on the part of the potential Democratic nominee may provide some added impetus to the current drive for new South Africa sanctions on Capitol Hill.

•On Central America and Latin issues generally, Dukakis blasted the administration for "going it alone" with little regard for other nations of the hemisphere.

"Nicaragua's a mess ... we've fallen on our face again in Panama," charged Dukakis, partly because of a failure to understand the importance of "close collaboration with our democratic neighbors and allies in Central and Latin America."

This sharp criticism was in tune with Democratic Party positions on Central America, which emerged as the most highly partisan foreign-policy issue of the Reagan years.

Dukakis' stand made it clear, if there was any doubt, that such a request would touch off a renewal of a politically charged legislative battle that would bring the Contra issue to national prominence once more in a manner that is not likely to be helpful to the candidacy of Bush.

When He Gets Around To It

W. Dale Nelson

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan put in a plug for Vice President George Bush during this week's economic summit, but getting Bush elected as his successor apparently isn't the president's top priority.

In fact, it was 15th on a list of items on Reagan's agenda that was put together by a Reagan aide.

Reagan obviously hopes to witness the inauguration of the Republican vice president as his successor next Jan. 20. But just how much he will do in the Bush campaign remains a question mark.

Reagan went out of his way during the Toronto summit to bring Bush into the picture, lauding the vice president's role in the fight against drugs during his concluding speech to members of the Empire and Canadian clubs.

"Drugs have only once before been on our agenda" at an economic summit, he said. "A North American dialogue between Prime Minister (Brian) Mulroney and Vice President Bush put them there this time."

"Over breakfast in Washington in April, the prime minister and the vice president exchanged thoughts on how our countries could work together to fight the drug kingpins," Reagan said. "One area they discussed was appropriate for the talks at this summit — how to prevent the laundering of money across international borders."

"Canada's strong support for the Bush initiative is reflected in the historic commitment endorsed by the summit leaders in the Toronto communique," he said. Canada agreed to stepped-up cooperative efforts to stop drug money laundering.

Later, as the president flew back to Washington on Air Force One, reporters sent a note forward asking to speak with Kenneth Duberstein, the deputy chief of staff who is taking over from retiring chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. They said they wanted to talk about the president's post-summit agenda.

What they got in return was a note from White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater listing, in this order:

•Peace in Nicaragua.

•Efforts to get a trade bill acceptable to the administration.

•Welfare reform.

•Signing of a bill providing catastrophic illness insurance.

•Peace in the Middle East.

•The budget and appropriations bills.

•The Republican convention.

Finally, in 15th place, came support for the Bush campaign. It was followed on the list by official visits by leaders of Turkey and Australia, a forthcoming trip to Miami and several other items.

The impression was that the president would campaign for Bush when he got the time, but that he's still president and has other things to do.

Behind the scenes, negotiations continue over what role the president will play. An administration official familiar with the discussions said decisions are expected to be made before the GOP convention opens in New Orleans in mid-August.

The Oliver North Reform Act: Badly Needed Legislation

Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — A bill that would impose criminal penalties on U.S. government officials and persons receiving any compensation from Uncle Sam who "order or engage in the planning or preparation for, initiation or conduct of any intelligence activity which violates any statute or Executive Order or international agreements to which the U.S. is a party" was considered last week by the House Judiciary Committee's Criminal Justice subcommittee.

This legislation, which has been nicknamed the Oliver North Reform Act by some, has the official title of the Official Accountability Act (H.R. 3665) and is the brainchild of Rep. John Conyers (D-Mich.) It is the first major legislative by-product of the Iran-Contra scandal. More importantly it is an expression of congressional frustration with the scandal and contains a provision denying those charged by federal officials the defense that they were merely following orders unless they "did not know and could not reasonably have been expected to know that the act ordered was unlawful."

Despite the obvious political overtones to the bill, it received widespread support before the subcommittee last week. The American Civil Liberties Union testified that the criminal penalties mandated would "reenforce the rule of law as the guiding principle of our democratic government and embolden the precept that no person is above the law."

Dr. Loch Johnson, a political science professor from the University of Georgia, concluded that "democracy and secret intelligence organizations can exist safely and effectively within the same society" and that H.R. 3665 was a positive move in support of that balance. "Penalties for those who insist on the adoption of their will over the public's will could play an important role in bringing foreign operations within a democratic framework," he said.

Harold Hongju Koh, an international law and Constitution expert from Yale University, was supportive of the legislative effort, but troubled by the scope of the provision criminalizing intelligence activites which violate "international agreements to which the United States is a party."

At this stage it's doubtful that the Justice or State Department will support the Conyer's bill as written. Nevertheless, the subcommittee is planning more hearings with the intention of sharpening the bill's language and focus. The obvious need for legislation to establish some type of control over intelligence operations should be a self-evident mandate for the 100th Congress.

For the first time in U.S. history, more than half of all mothers are returning to the work force within a year after the birth of a child, according to the Census Bureau. The latest survey on fertility patterns of American women showed that in June of 1987, 50.8 percent of women returned to the labor force within 12 months of having a child. This figure represented about 1.9 million women. In 1976, only 31.0 percent of women returned to the labor force within a year of having a child.

In spite of its current legal problems, the Defense Department will soon propose a regulation that will require defense contractors to maintain drug-free workplaces by establishing programs for counseling, referral, voluntary drug testing and — in certain cases — mandatory testing of employees. The drug-free workplace requirement could affect some 3.2 million employees under prime defense contracts.

Soviet Communists Face Rare Power Struggle

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Forty-seven years after Josef Stalin dominated the last Communist Party Conference, Mikhail Gorbachev is reviving the forum in an attempt to break the party's chokehold on society and wrest control from entrenched bureaucrats.

The conference will provide a political arena for Gorbachev's battle to modernize the Soviet Union, come to grips with the Stalinist legacy and improve the living standards of the country's 284 million people.

Selection of the 5,000 conference delegates shows how Gorbachev has changed the political atmosphere and opened up new areas for discussion. A stormy debate over alleged ballot-rigging sent hundreds of demonstrators into the streets of Moscow and Leningrad to protest the delegate-selection process.

"For the first time since before the First World War, and the early 1920s, some of these things are being debated openly," one veteran Western Kremlin watcher observed. "That's really very extraordinary."

Among the delegates to the 19th All-Union Conference of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union will be a substantial number Gorbachev counts as opponents. And there are indications the 57-year-old party chief has scaled back some of the original goals of the conference.

Both Soviet and Western analysts have suggested that the delegate-selection procedures, which by Soviet standards were surprisingly open, enabled Gorbachev's conservative opponents to gain enough seats to prevent implementation of radical measures.

Gorbachev nonetheless is expected to open the proceedings Tuesday in the Kremlin's glass and marble Palace of Congresses with a call to limit the tenure of party officials and their authority over the conduct of government and the economy.

But as the first party conference since 1941 drew near, Communist officials sought to dampen expectations that the delegates representing the country's 20 million Communist Party members would do more than debate a list of recommendations or consider the personnel issues that could decide the fate of Gorbachev's reform program.

Some observers said Gorbachev may have decided, after watching the delegate-selection fight, not to risk secret ballots on his key projects.

Thirty pages of theses put forward by the party's policy-making Central Committee as a platform for discussion at the conference bear the imprint of Gorbachev's own ideas.

One theme that clearly emerges is the effort to come to terms with and overcome the Stalinist past. The theses blame the late dictator for stifling debate in the party, a "vicious practice" that continued through the rule of Leonid I. Brezhnev.

In calling for a limit of two five-year terms for elected party positions, the proposals strike at the foundation of a system of personal power and privilege built for decades by party officials.

"Some executives started thinking that they had been appointed to their posts for life," the theses said. "They considered themselves infallible, abused power and neglected the interests of rank-and-file party members and working people."

In its new role envisaged by Gorbachev, the Communist Party would retain its dominant role in Soviet society but exercise its power less directly.

"The Communist Party shall steer its political course via communists working in bodies of state authority in all spheres of society's life," the program said.

Vladimir Kluyev, party leader of the Lenin district of Moscow and a conference delegate, said the plan would leave day-to-day management to government officials and economic administrators.

But proposals to diminish the party's control over the government and economy raise the question whether the party can control strategic decisions if it gives up its authority to decide everyday matters.

Kluyev told reporters it is clear that "no organizational questions will be considered at the conference," indicating Gorbachev will not attempt to cement his leadership position by making major personnel changes, as Stalin did 47 years ago.

Other party sources, however, speaking privately, said there may be some new appointments to the 300-plus-member Central Committee to replace officials who have died or retired since their election at the last party congress in February 1986.

But rules governing the rarely used party conferences are vague and apparently give the leaders latitude to discuss what they want at the conference.

The way the conference is conducted will be one indication of how open the Gorbachev leadership is prepared to be. Will freewheeling debate be allowed and how much of the debates and speeches be made public?

Although Gorbachev will make a report to the conference, little is known about who else will speak or how the meeting will be structured. Soviet press reports indicate the opening and closing sessions will be televised, and some official press reports of the speeches and actions of the conference are expected to be published after the fact.

But most of the proceedings probably will take place in secret.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire."

It is a totally new major scientifc breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patents pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Pills Go To Work"

The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. Evert, Adams To Meet At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert, who has won championships here, and Katrina Adams, who has dreamed of just playing here, set up a fourth-round meeting of U.S. tennis players of different generations at Wimbledon today.

And Martina Navratilova and Mats Wilander moved further ahead in their individual quests to make tennis history.

But Lori McNeil, the No. 10 women's seed, was upset 7-6, 6-4 by Ros Fairbank of South Africa.

Evert, a two-time Wimbledon titlist and at 33 the oldest woman remaining in the field, defeated Akiko Kijimuta of Japan 6-4, 6-0 on a packed show court at the All England Club.

Across the grounds, on an outside court, Adams, a 19-year-old from Chicago playing beyond the first round of a big tournament for the first time, upset 15th-seeded Sylvia Hanika of West Germany 6-3, 6-3.

Navratilova, bidding for a record ninth women's singles title at Wimbledon, ousted Karen Schimper of South Africa, 6-0, 6-4. The 31-year-old American, the defending champion and No. 2 seed, has now dropped just 10 games in three matches here.

Wilander, on the third leg of his bid to win the Grand Slam of tennis, also won in straight sets. The Swede, winner of the Australian and French championships, beat Menno Oosting of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

Wilander said his next opponent, big-serving Yugoslav, Slobodan Zivojinovic, would be "a big risk" to his Grand Slam hopes. Zivojinovic downed West Germany's Eric Jelen 3-6, 6-3, 7-6, 6-3.

"I'll just have to hope he doesn't serve 100 percent," Wilander said. "I think his serve is the best in the world on grass, even better than (Boris) Becker's."

The Swede, who never has advanced past the quarterfinals here, said his chances of winning the tournament increased when John McEnroe was eliminated in the second round. Both players were in the same half of the draw.

"I was scared about playing him," Wilander said. "It's sad to see him go but for my chances to win, it's made it easier."

Pam Shriver, the No. 3 women's seed, had another tough match to reach the last 16.

Shriver, who was diagnosed earlier this week to be suffering from mononucleosis, needed two tiebreakers to edge fellow American Stephanie Rehe 7-6, 7-6.

"Every match I play is a drama. If you're not playing particularly well, you get nervous," Shriver, almost eliminated in the first round, said. "Considering everything, I'm happy to be in the second week."

Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union, runner-up at the French Open earlier this month, also came through. The 17-year-old beat Elna Reinach of South Africa, 6-2, 7-6

Adams, an aggressive serve-and-volley player who became a professional less than six months ago, could not believe she was playing at the world's oldest Grand Slam tennis event.

"I always dreamed of turning pro and playing at Wimbledon," she said.

Her match against Evert Monday undoubtedly will be played on one of the showcourts, either No. 1 or the hallowed turf of Centre Court. It will be a moment to remember, Adams said.

"I've played on big courts before, but it's totally different at Wimbledon," she said.

As the Grand Slam tournament wrapped up its first week, men's ninth-seeded Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia advanced to the fourth round with a 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 victory over Ricardo Acuna of Chile.

Fifth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina also advanced to the last 16 by beating Catherine Tanvier of France 6-2, 6-3.

The women's 14th seed, Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria, recorded a shutout. She beat Belinda Cordwell of New Zealand 6-0, 6-0, for the second double-love victory of the tournament. Top-seeded Steffi Graf shut out Hu Na 6-0, 6-0 in the first round.

The 13th seed, Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union, also advanced with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Julie Salmon of Britain.

As the sixth day of the Grand Slam tournament opened, one hurdle remained for Pat Cash and Boris Becker before a showdown that many fans are treating as the true men's final.

But neither player dares look that far — yet.

Becker and Cash, who have dominated the men's event here for the past three years, need one more victory apiece to advance to a quarterfinal meeting worthy of a championship match.

Because of the draw, the big-serving West German, champion in 1985-86, and the brash defending titlist from Australia are on course instead to meet in the last eight.

The defeat of John McEnroe by Wally Masur on Thursday split the bottom half of the men's draw wide open.

McEnroe's demise put Mats Wilander, by no means a grass-court specialist, in the position of favorite to reach the final.

By doing so, it also considerably eased the path of Becker and Cash toward extending their domination to a fourth year.

The two players cruised through third-round matches Friday, Becker 7-6, 6-4, 6-4 against Sammy Giammalva of the United States, Cash 6-1, 6-2, 6-4 against fellow Australian John Fitzgerald.

Now, the two grass-court kings have one more hurdle to negotiate before settling which one falls from grace.

Pitt County Drops Pair Of Legion Games Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For Pitt County's American Legion baseball team, Saturday turned out to be one of those days when it might have been better had it rained from dawn to midnight.

Saturday afternoon, Wilson beat Post 39 in 11 innings, outlasting Pitt, 15-12, and then Rocky Mount finished off the job in a nightcap, 16-4.

The first game was somewhat of a clinic on how not to play baseball. After 11 innings, seven errors, 17 stolen bases, six sacrifice bunts, a sacrifice fly, five hit batsmen, six wild pitches and two passed balls, Wilson's Post 13 finally claimed a 15-12 win in a game that lasted well over four hours.

Then, after tying Rocky Mount, 4-4 after three innings, Post 39 watched as Post 58 scored twice in the fourth then exploded for nine in the sixth to roll away for the victory.

Pitt took an early lead in the opening game, scoring four times in the first two innings. An unearned run scored in the first on a base hit by David Daniels. Then, in the second, Chris Christopher doubled and scored off a triple by Heath Clark. Timmy Moore finished off the frame with a home run over the fence in right for a 4-0 lead.

Wilson, taking advantage of an infield hit and two walks, loaded the bases for a run-scoring single by Greg Griffin and a two-run hit by Todd Bradley, closing it to 5-3.

But Pitt pushed over five in the bottom of the inning to take a 9-3 advantage. A hit batter, a double by Ty Little, a walk and then back-to-back errors on balls hit by Jay Surles and Clark brought in three runs and two wild pitches accounted for the next two.

But Wilson rallied for five in the fifth on a walk, an error, a hit and run scoring singles by Bradley and Lamb. A sacrifice fly by Randy Young brought in a third and Kevin Satterfield was safe on an error that allowed another run to score.

That closed it to 9-8.

Wilson pushed over two more in the seventh on a hit batter, a walk, a double steal and an error, taking a 10-9 lead. Pitt tied it back up with one in the bottom of the inning on a check-swing hit by Tom Moye that scored Moore.

Both teams scored twice in the eighth to up the score to 12-12. Satterfield brought in both runs for Wilson with a check-swing single to right. A passed ball and a base hit by Jay Surles brought in the two for Pitt.

Pitt then had a golden opportunity in the ninth and took itself out of it with terrible baserunning. Moye led off with a base hit but Daniels' sacrifice attempt was bunted right back at the mound and Moye was thrown out. Daniels then stole second, but was thrown out going to third on Franz Holscher's grounder to short. Holscher was then picked off first base to end the inning.

After dodging a bullet in the 10th when Wilson loaded the bases on a hit and two walks, Pitt saw its hopes vanish in the 11th.

Bradley led off with a bunt single and scored on a triple by Lamb. Satterfield then singled in Lamb and came all the way from first when Sullivan's blooper into right somehow stayed fair for a single.

Satterfield, Sullivan, Bradley and Lamb all had three hits for Wilson, while Moore, Moye and Little each picked up two for Pitt County.

Rocky Mount took the lead in the second game on a first inning home run by Joseph Hill, who was a perfect five for five on the night, driving in five runs and scored four times himself.

Pitt then tied it up with one in the bottom of the inning. Moore reached on an error and moved up on a single by David Leisten. He scored on a wild pitch.

Rocky Mount pushed back into the lead in the second, scoring three times for a 4-1 advantage. Dan Wood singled and moved to third on two wild pitches. After Clint Rouse walked, Dean English's hit scored Wood and both Ernie Jones and Hill followed with run scoring hits.

Pitt scored once in the bottom of the inning on a run-scoring double by Robbie McDonald, then added two more in the third on a comedy of errors to tie it at 4-4. Franz Holscher reached on an error and Dave Daniels walked. With two away, Chris Christopher beat out an infield hit but the ball was overthrown at

Elliott Breaks Track Record In Winning Pole Position

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Bill Elliott broke the track record and won the pole position Saturday for the Miller High Life 400 NASCAR stock car race at Michigan International Speedway.

Elliott was the fastest of three drivers who surpassed the previous record on the two-mile, high-banked oval. The other two were Geoff Bodine, who won last Sunday's race at Long Pond, Pa., and Davey Allison, who is racing here while his father, Bobby, recovers slowly from serious injuries sustained in the Pocono race.

Allison, 27, was the first driver to complete a qualifying attempt Saturday, breaking Tim Richmond's 1986 record of 172.031 mph with a lap averaging 172.146.

Bodine, who went out shortly after Allison, improved the mark to 172.480.

Elliott then knocked Bodine off the top spot for Sunday's 400-mile race with a fast lap of 172.687.

"You don't know what you can do until you actually get on the racetrack," said Elliott, who went out much later in the session, after the track had heated up considerably in bright sunshine.

Elliott, who now has two poles this year — the first last March at Rockingham, N.C. — picked up the 31st pole of his career.

The tire war between Goodyear and newcomer Hoosier continued to heat up in the 90-degree temperatures Saturday.

Each driver has to start the race on the tires he qualified with, but Goodyear has generally been the faster tire in qualifying and Hoosier the most consistent and longest lasting in the races this season.

Goodyear has won 13 of 14 poles and seven races, while Hoosier has six race victories.

Elliott and Allison were on Goodyears Saturday, while Bodine was on Hoosiers.

"It's all a guess. You don't know until you start the race. At Dover, I'd run 40 or 50 laps and everything that passed me had Hoosiers on," Elliott said of his race in Delaware three weeks ago. "You don't have to be too smart to figure it out at that point."

"It's kind of like a crap game," Bodine said. "This season has been tough. We have a choice now and you go with the odds. That's how you win when you gamble."

Twenty-eight of the 41 starters will be on Goodyears Sunday

The race, which is scheduled to start at 12:15 p.m. EDT, will be televised live by CBS Sports.

Darrell Waltrip took the fourth position with a fast lap of 171.768, followed by Winston Cup point leader Rusty Wallace at 171.621.

Tyson Still Striving To Be Best In World

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — For several years the core of Mike Tyson's world was 20-foot square.

Tyson, who will be 22 Thursday, came off the streets of Brooklyn and out of a reform school into the sphere of boxing guru Cus D'Amato, who told him he could be the best fighter in the world.

He listened to D'Amato and he learned and as he ran the lonely roads around Catskill, N.Y., his mind's eye could see him winning the title.

On Nov. 22, 1986, Tyson knocked out Trevor Berbick and became the youngest man to win the heavyweight championship.

Suddenly, the boundaries of Tyson's universe have expanded and he is faced with being a man of the world as well as a champion of the world.

He is newly married and there have been reports that his marriage is already on the rocks. His wife, actress Robin Givens, had a miscarriage and Tyson blames it on the turmoil going on around him and media coverage of it.

He also has become a fighter with an awareness, if not a complete understanding, of his financial worth and prospects.

Speculation has arisen over whether the problems of Tyson the man will effect the performance of Tyson the fighter.

"I'm a professional. I'm the best heavyweight in the world and nobody can beat me," said Tyson, who has a 34-0 record, with 30 knockouts, and became the first undisputed champion since Leon Spinks upset Muhammad Ali in 1978.

D'Amato, who had become Tyson's legal guardian died Nov. 4, 1985. Then Jim Jacobs, a D'Amato disciple who was Tyson's co-manager and confidant, died last March 23.

Spinks Fights With Fear Of The Unseen

It's fear of the unseen opponent — the risk which accompanies any fighter into the ring — and Spinks willingly talks about it.

"He's just honest, that's all," says his trainer, Eddie Futch. "Other fighters have it. They just don't talk about it."

Listen:

"If I could do something else as well, I would do it . . . I can get hurt," Spinks said several years ago before even he could envision the success he has achieved the ring.

Listen:

"It's what I do for a living."

Listen:

"I've never run from anybody. I've never been afraid of anybody to the point of not trying to win.

"I got my courage from boxing with Leon," said the 31-year-old, recalling gym sessions as an amateur with brother Leon, who won and lost the heavyweight title in fights with Muhammad Ali in 1978.

"Leon was awesome."

Monday night at the Atlantic City Convention Center Spinks will fight heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, a 21-year-old whose fists and demeanor in the ring have given him an aura of a fighter who will not be denied.

"He's totally awesome," Spinks said. "I can't blame anybody for really not wanting to be in there."

"I could use a tag team if I get tired," said Spinks, who also approaches his hard trade with the kind of dry humor born of hard times.

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice broke a tie with a two-run single during a seven-run eighth inning Saturday as the Boston Red Sox scored a 10-3 victory over Baltimore, spoiling Cal Ripken's 1,000th consecutive start for the Orioles.

Mark Williamson, 1-5, replaced Baltimore starter Mike Boddicker in the eighth and was greeted by Dwight Evans' single. Then, Mike Greenwell extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a single and Ellis Burks walked, filling the bases.

The Red Sox scored five more runs on an RBI single by Rich Gedman and two-run singles by Wade Boggs and Greenwell. The seven runs were the most Boston had scored in one inning since Aug. 21, 1986.

Bob Stanley, who relieved starter Bruce Hurst in the seventh, earned his third victory without a loss.

Ripken, who began his streak May 30, 1982, became only the sixth player in major league history to play in 1,000 consecutive games.

The record is held by Lou Gehrig, who played 2,130 games in a row for the New York Yankees. Everett Scott played in 1,307, Steve Garvey 1,207, Billy Williams 1,117 and Joe Sewell 1,103.

Ripken celebrated quickly by giving Baltimore a 2-0 lead with a homer over the left-field screen, his 12th, in the first inning. The drive scored Pete Stanicek, who had opened the game with a single.

The Red Sox went ahead 3-2 in the third. With one out, Boggs and Marty Barrett singled.

Eddie Murray led off the fourth with a drive into the Boston bullpen in right-center for his 10th homer, pulling Baltimore into a 3-3 tie.

Hurst allowed nine hits and walked three, but was helped by three double plays, before giving way to Stanley with two out in the seventh. Stanley got out of a jam by retiring Ripken on a grounder to short.

TORONTO (AP) — Gary Pettis hit a three-run homer, and Darrell Evans added a solo shot as the Detroit Tigers ended Dave Stieb's streak of nine straight victories, beating the Toronto Blue Jays 7-2 Saturday.

Doyle Alexander, 7-4, scattered eight hits, struck out six and walked one in eight innings, and Guillermo Hernandez pitched the ninth.

Evans, hitting .192 coming in, led off the second with his eighth homer.

Stieb, 10-4, left the game in the fourth when Pettis drew a leadoff walk, stole second and scored as Dave Bergman's bad-hop single bounced off second baseman Manny Lee's glove for the fifth run.

Stieb, who got five of the first six outs on strikeouts, had won nine of his last 11 starts with two no-decisions, last losing on April 26.

In the Toronto second, Kelly Gruber hit a solo homer, his 10th of the season.

In Detroit's sixth, Lou Whitaker reached on a fielder's choice, went to third on Alan Trammell's double and scored on a balk by Jose Nunez. Trammell walked with the bases loaded in the seventh.

The Blue Jays made it 7-2 with a run in the eighth when Rance Mulliniks tripled and scored on a grounder by George Bell.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Jose Canseco hit his major league-leading 19th homer, a three-run shot in the third inning, and his four RBI gave right-hander Bob Welch and the Oakland Athletics a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins on Saturday.

The A's, who lead the second-place Twins by six games, trailed 2-1 in the third before Canseco's two-out blast off Allan Anderson, 3-4.

Welch, 9-4, yielded seven hits and three runs, while striking out five, in 7 1-3 innings before Dennis Eckersley came on to earn his American League-leading 23rd save.

The Twins scored their third run and chased Welch in the eighth. Kirby Puckett singled with one out and went to second on Canseco's fielding error. After Randy Bush walked, Eckersley relieved and, one out later, yielded a run-scoring double by Gene Larkin.

Canseco's RBI single in the first scored Dave Henderson, who doubled with one out, to give the A's a 1-0 lead.

The Twins rallied for a 2-1 lead in the third. Steve Lombardozzi led off with a single, went to third on John Moses' one-out single and scored on Puckett's RBI single. Bush's sacrifice fly scored Moses.

In the A's third, Mike Gallego reached first safely on third baseman Gaetti's throwing error to lead off. On out later, Carney Lansford beat out an infield hit, and Gallego advanced to third when shortstop Greg Gagne's throw skipped off first baseman Gene Larkin's glove for an error.

Henderson flied to shallow left field, but Canseco made the Twins pay with his homer. Of Canseco's 19 homers, 13 have either tied the game or put the A's ahead.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Clark hit a tie-breaking, two-run homer in the third inning and helped Tommy John to his 282nd career victory as the New York Yankees defeated the Cleveland Indians 4-1 Saturday night and handed Greg Swindell his fifth consecutive setback.

Swindell, 10-6, the first major league pitcher to win 10 games this season but winless since May 30, had lasted a total of five innings in his two previous outings, yielding 10 runs and 15 hits.

This time, he went six innings, yielding three runs and eight hits. He came away a loser when Don Mattingly singled with two out in the third, extending his hitting streak to 17 games, and Clark followed with his 14th home run for a 3-1 lead.

It was the sixth home run off Swindell in 12 1-3 innings after he gave up four in his first 101 innings.

The 45-year-old John, 5-2, gave up one run on eight hits in 7 1-3 innings. He walked none, struck out five and recorded 14 of 22 outs on grounders. John left with two runners on base and one out in the eighth, and Cecilio Guante retired Joe Carter and Ron Kittle and finished for his ninth save.

Cleveland scored in the second when Cory Snyder and Brook Jacoby singled and, after Carmen Castillo grounded into a double play, Ron Washington doubled Snyder home.

The Yankees tied it in the bottom of the second. Clark led off with a single, Dave Winfield doubled and Clark scored on Don Slaught's groundout.

Winfield doubled for his third hit in the eighth and scored on Rafael Santana's single against Jon Perlman.

The Indians failed to hit a home run for the first time in 14 games. Cleveland, losing for the 11th time in the last 16 games, dropped two games behind the second-place Yankees in the American League East. New York, winning for just the third time in 11 games, trails Detroit by two games.

Pitt County Loses Two Contests

first and that allowed Holscher to score. The throw to try and get Christopher moving on to second was also overthrown, allowing Daniels to score and another error on the relay back let Christopher go to third, but he died there.

Pitt had a number of chances after that, but never got another run on the board.

Rocky Mount broke the tie with two in the fourth. With two away, Ernie Jones got an infield hit and Hill singled. Lee Boone singled in Jones and Gary Miller singled to score Hill to make it 6-4.

In the sixth, the bottom fell out for Pitt as Rocky Mount scored nine times. After a walk and a double by Hill, Boone doubled in both runners. A walk and two fielder's choices brought Boone over. Rouse then helped himself with a two-run homer to left. Three straight walks loaded the bases and Hill followed with a double, driving in all three runners. Hill later scored on a wild pitch.

Rocky Mount added one more in the seventh as Mark Worsley singled, moved up on a wild pitch and a passed ball and scored on another wild pitch.

Hill led the Rocky Mount attack with five hits while Boone had four and Jones and Rouse picked up two apiece.

Pitt was led by Daniels and Chris Christopher, each with two.

Pitt's record drops to 6-5 with the two losses. Wilson improves to 10-3 while Rocky Mount is now 11-4.

Burlington And Bluefield Go 27 Innings To Decide A Winner

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Burlington and Bluefield would have gladly ended their Appalachian League game, but there was nothing to stop them — nothing at all for more than eight hours.

At 3:27 a.m. Saturday, the Bluefield Orioles scored on Jeff Champ's RBI-single in the top of the 27th inning and held on for a 3-2 victory over the Burlington Indians. The game lasted 8 hours and 16 minutes, just nine minutes short of the record for the longest professional baseball game.

"At one point, I asked if there were any curfews," Burlington manager Mike Bucci said. "The umpires said they wanted to see how long it could go. They said there were no city, county or league curfews."

The longest game ever played was the International League marathon between Pawtucket and Rochester in 1981 that went 33 innings. On April 18, the two teams played 32 innings and were tied 2-2. When the game was resumed on June 23, Pawtucket won in the bottom of the 33rd inning. Bob Ojeda, currently with the New York Mets, was the winning pitcher.

Burlington general manager Marty Nash arrived at the ballpark at 8:30 Friday morning and stayed until the game's conclusion. He was back at the park Saturday afternoon, getting ready for a night game against Bristol. He said he tried to reach league president Bill Halstead in his office in Bristol, Va., seeking advice on whether to play or stop. No one answered the phone, and there was nothing to do but go on.

"Seemed like when we got to the 20th inning, it was kind of a blank," Nash said in a telephone interview. "It was something I wouldn't want to go through again."

Champ's single, a bloop over the second baseman's head, broke a tie that had existed since the bottom of the eighth, when the Indians tied the rookie-league game. Luis Mercedes scored the game-winning run.

The losing pitcher, Don Williams, is usually a catcher. Bucci said he used Williams, "because I had used every pitcher I had available for at least five innings. With 18-and 19-year-old kids, you have to be careful. We won't sacrifice a kid's arm for one game."

Williams was the fifth Burlington pitcher. The winner, Arthur Rhodes, was the sixth pitcher used by Bluefield, which won for the first time in six games this season. The loss was the first in six games for Burlington. The Appalachian League season began last Sunday.

About 2,200 people were in the stands for the first pitch. There were only about 50 when the game ended.

"It was amazing to me to see anyone in the stands at that hour. They were quiet. I think they were in disbelief in what they were seeing," Nash said.

If fans were in disbelief, Burlington play-by-play announcer Richard Musterer was experiencing deja-vu. He was in the press box when the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves in a 19-inning Fourth of July 1985 classic, 16-13.

Two years ago, Musterer called a first-round NCAA regional game between Georgia Tech and Navy that went five hours and 14 innings.

"I said, 'I probably won't do one of those again," Musterer recalled.

He determined that his stint on the air surpassed the eight-hour, seven-minute broadcast of the first 32 innings of the Pawtucket-Rochester game.

"The one thing you've got is plenty of at-bats to go over. You can kill 30 seconds right there," Musterer said. "I have a feeling if I had to listen to it, there were a few silly things that might have been said.

The West Virginia-based Orioles checked out of their motel prior to the game and were forced to take a four-hour bus ride home. That was just before their Saturday game with the Elizabethton Twins.

Sandberg's Three Hits Pace Chicago

Cubs 5
Mets 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg's third hit of the game, a tie-breaking single in Chicago three-run eighth inning, carried the Chicago Cubs to a 5-2 victory over the New York Mets Saturday in a game played in 103-degree heat.

Shawon Dunston opened the eighth with a single off reliever and loser Rick Aguilera, 0-3. One out later, Dunston stole second, and Andre Dawson was walked intentionally before Sandberg singled sharply to center, scoring Dunston.

Both benches emptied, but order was restored immediately as plate umpire Harry Wendlestedt issued warnings to both teams.

The Mets scored in the first inning on singles by Mookie Wilson and Tim Teufel and a sacrifice fly by Dave Magadan.

Chicago tied it in the second. Sandberg singled, stole second and scored on Damon Berryhill's two-out single.

The Mets regained the lead in the sixth. Darryl Strawberry singled, stole second, continued to third on Berryhill's throwing error and scored on a single by Carter.

Moyer left for a pinch batter in the seventh after allowing nine hits and striking out six. He gave up three walks, but they were all intentional.

Ojeda gave up the two runs on five hits, while striking out eight and not walking a batter.

Dodgers 6
Reds 4

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mike Marshall's two-run single highlighted a five-run second inning Saturday night and the Los Angeles Dodgers overcome three first-inning homers off Fernando Valenzuela and beat the Cincinnati Reds 6-4.

The Dodgers won for the seventh time in eight games and solidified their hold on first place in the National League West. The fourth-place Reds have lost five of six and fell 8½ games back, their biggest deficit of the season.

The Reds started with a flourish, knocking Valenzuela out of the game in the first inning for the first time in his eight-year career. Barry Larkin led off with his seventh homer, Eric Davis hit a two-run homer, and Paul O'Neill followed with a solo homer for a 4-0 lead with two out. Brian Holton, 3-1, retired pitcher Jose Rijo to end the inning.

Rijo, 8-3, couldn't hold the lead as Los Angeles sent 10 batters to the plate for six hits in the second.

Dave Anderson and pinch-hitter Danny Heep hit RBI singles and Marshall singled up the middle with the bases loaded and two out to tie the game. John Shelby then singled on the first pitch from reliever Tim Birtsas to score Kirk Gibson with the go-ahead run.

Mickey Hatcher drove in the Dodgers' final run with an RBI forceout in the sixth inning.

Tim Crews shut the Reds out on two hits through four innings, Alejandro Pena allowed two hits and struck out five in 3 2-3 innings and Jesse Orosco got one out for his fifth save. Los Angeles made four double plays.

The Reds' three-homer inning off Valenzuela was their first since May 3 last year, when they hit three in one inning in Philadelphia.

Although Valenzuela has struggled to a 5-5 record and 3.96 earned run average in 15 starts this season, he hadn't been hurt much by the homer. Valenzuela had allowed just four homers in 97 innings before Saturday's game.

He has had problems against the Reds this season. The left-hander lasted just 2 1-3 innings in his previous start against Cincinnati on June 3. Valenzuela has a 6-10 lifetime record against Cincinnati, including a 1-5 record in eight starts in the last three years.

Pirates 5
Expos 1

MONTREAL (AP) — John Smiley pitched a five-hitter and Barry Bonds doubled to spark a four-run third inning as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Montreal Expos 5-0 Saturday night.

The Pirates rallied against Brian Holman, making his major-league pitching debut. Holman, a 23-year old right-hander, was recalled form the Expos' Triple-A affiliate in Indianapolis to start in place of Floyd Youmans, suspended indefinetely by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth earlier in the day for failing to comply with his drug testing program.

Smiley, 8-4, struck out six and walked none in pitching his third complete game. He had tossed a one-hiiter against Montreal earlier in the season.

Bonds led off the third with a double and was caught between second and third base when Jose Lind followed with a bouncer to the mound. Holman made a wide throw to shortstop Luis Rivera, who in turn fired the ball past third baseman Tim Wallach for an error, allowing Bonds to score and Lind to take third.

Bonds walked with the bases-loaded in the eighth against Tim Burke.

The Expos spoiled Smiley's bid for his first major-league shutout when Otis Nixon and Mitch Webster singled in the ninth and Lind made a throwing error on a grounder by Hubie Brooks.

The Pirates have won three straight.

Texas Incident Numbered Martin's Days

By The Associated Press

Billy Martin's days as manager of the New York Yankees were numbered after his brawl in a Texas bar in early May.

According to a source close to the club, Martin and Yankees owner George Steinbrenner made several personal commitments to each other when Billy was named manager of New York for the fifth time last October.

One of Martin's commitments to Steinbrenner was to clean up his act and stay out of trouble in bars.

Although Steinbrenner backed Martin's version of the Texas incident to the hilt, he privately felt betrayed and only stayed with Billy because the team was in first place.

The injuries, the pitching problems and the intense media coverage of Martin all contributed to Steinbrenner's decision. But three straight losses in Detroit that dropped the Yankees out of first place in the AL East gave Steinbrenner the opening he was waiting for. ...

If Lou Piniella does not win a pennant history shows he will probably be "reassigned" too. So who will be next? Steinbrenner still likes Dick Williams who was recently fired by Seattle. When Steinbrenner took control of the Yankees in 1973 his first choice to replace Ralph Houk was Williams, but Williams was still under contract to Oakland. Williams says he's tired and doesn't want to manage anymore. But Earl Weaver said the same thing when he left Baltimore for the first time. ...

Cleveland is worried about Greg Swindell's ailing shoulder. On May 30, Swindell became the major's first 10-game winner. Swindell entered the weekend with a four-game losing streak and has a 7.71 ERA in the four defeats. Last Monday against Boston, Swindell allowed five runs and nine hits in 2 2-3 innings. ... Indians' reliever Doug Jones has proven that persistence pays off. Jones started his pro career in 1978 with Newark of the N.Y.-Penn League and six minor league teams later made it to Milwaukee in 1982 for four games. In 1984, Jones signed as a free agent with the Indians but did not make it with the Tribe until mid 1987. This week, Jones tied Steve Bedrosian's major league record with 13 saves in 13 appearances. ...

Toronto reliever Tom Henke has gone 112 outings without a victory but has 50 saves in that span. ... The Blue Jays' Dave Stieb, who thought he might need arm surgery last season, has won nine straight. ...

On July 19, 1985 Texas traded All-Star third baseman Buddy Bell to Cincinnati for infielder Duane Walker and right-hander Jeff Russell. Russell has gotten off to a 7-0 start to match the club record. Jim Kern was 7-0 in 1979. ...

Rick Reuschel reached the 10-victory mark on June 15, the earliest date by a San Francisco right-hander since 1968 when Juan Marichal got his 10th victory on June 6 en route to a 26-9 record. Reuschel's only 20-win season came in 1977 with Chicago. ... Yankees' left-hander John Candelaria also won 20 in 1977 with Pittsburgh. ...

Oakland first baseman Mark McGwire has homered in every American League park except Minnesota's Metrodome, otherwise known as the "Homerdome." ...

Numbers Game

Milwaukee's Robin Yount is 13-for-26 against the Chicago White Sox this season. ... Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets has eight two-run homers and two three-run homers this season. He has 17 overall. ... Detroit is 24-7 when Jim Walewander has scored in a game. ...

Down on the Farm

Luis Aquino pitched the first no-hitter in the American Association since 1985 as Omaha (Royals) defeated Columbus (Yankees) 2-0 Monday. Aquino had a perfect game until he walked Casey Close on a 3-2 pitch with two outs in the eighth. The last no-hitter pitched in the American Association was by Nashville's Brian Kelly on July 17, 1985 against Oklahoma City.

To replace Herr, the club purchased the contract of first baseman Kelvin Torve from Portland. Torve batted .305 with six homers and 35 runs batted in, and appeared in all 73 of his team's games.

Right-hander Jim Winn was called up from Portland and will replace Best on the Twins' roster. Winn was 2-3 with a 3.99 earned-run average and seven saves in 22 appearances with the PCL club.

Best appeared in 11 games for the Twins, allowing eight earned runs in 12 innings for a 6.00 earned-run average with no decisions.

Herr's placement on the DL is retroactive to June 21.

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin, fired for a fifth time as manager of the New York Yankees, says he will not come back for a sixth term.

"I will never manage the Yankees again," Martin was quoted as saying in today's New York Post.

"I want to be part of the Yankees and I want them to be successful," Martin said from near Binghamton, N.Y., where he spent Friday fishing. "But I don't ever want to manage them again.

"I don't want to be in a position between George (owner George Steinbrenner) and the Yankees' team. It just doesn't work."

Martin will meet with Steinbrenner next week to discuss a new assignment in the Yankees' organization.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — New Philadelphia Phillies vice president Lee Thomas is leaning strongly toward extending Manager Lee Elia's contract through next season, and could make his final decision by the end of next week, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Elia has had meetings with Thomas in recent days, The Philadelphia Inquirer reported, although the manager's future apparently was not discussed. Sources close to Thomas, however, told the paper that Thomas thinks Elia should stay as manager.

A factor in Thomas' decision is his belief that he will get a better idea of the Phillies' talent if Elia is not managing as a lame duck, the newspaper said. Players will play harder, the thinking goes, knowing Elia will be involved in personnel decisions.

Thomas was in St. Louis, where the Phillies are playing the Cardinals in a four-game series, to help ease the transition of Jim Riggleman, his successor as Cardinals director of player development. Thomas would neither confirm nor deny speculation regarding Elia.

"No matter what you have heard, nothing is definite yet," he said.

Elia replaced John Felske as manager June 18, 1987, and the Phillies were 51-50 under him, finishing in fifth place. This year, the Phillies are in last place in the National League East after many predicted in preseason that they would be challenging for the pennant.

Near the end of May, Phillies president Bill Giles gave strong indications he was prepared to extend Elia's contract, which expires at the end of this season.

Then, however, Giles fired vice president and director of player personnel Woody Woodward and Elia's status was left in limbo. At the press conference Tuesday when Giles announced Thomas' hiring to replace Woodward, Thomas would not say what his intentions were for Elia.

Meanwhile, Thomas disclosed he hopes to hire a new player development director by next week to replace Jim Baumer, who was demoted to scout when Woodward was fired.

"That's what I'm shooting for," Thomas said, "and I think we have a pretty good chance of having someone on board by the end of next week."

Youmans Suspended After Failing Drug Test

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd Youmans, the troubled Montreal Expos pitcher who underwent alcohol rehabilitation last fall, was suspended indefinitely by the commissioner's office Saturday "for failing to comply with his drug testing program."

Although Commissioner Peter Ueberroth confirmed that Youmans had been undergoing "periodic drug testing," his office would not say how Youmans had violated the program.

Youmans had been scheduled to pitch Saturday night against Pittsburgh.

In a brief statement, Ueberroth said the suspension "is indefinite pending further evaluation."

On March 30, Ueberroth suspended Eddie Milner of the Cincinnati Reds after he admitted using cocaine. Milner, who had undergone rehabilitation last season, returned to action on June 19.

The Expos revealed on Thursday that Ueberroth's office had been investigating Youmans for several days, but club President Claude Brochu refused to say whether the investigation had anything to do with drug testing.

On Saturday, club spokesman Rich Griffin said Expos officials met with Youmans after the suspension was announced and "it hasn't been decided yet what the next step for Floyd is."

Griffin said the Expos would help Youmans with "anything that might come up in terms of medical assistance."

Youmans will remain in Montreal but will not be with the team, Griffin said.

Ueberroth's statement said Youmans had been undergoing testing "as part of the aftercare process" of his rehabilitation program. Although Youmans' reasons for entering rehabilitation last October were never specified, the pitcher has talked about an alcohol problem.

Floyd Youmans

Last season, two female friends accused the pitcher of using drugs, but he denied the charges. In February, Youmans said in an interview that his drinking problem was diagnosed as hereditary and that it began when he was in high school in Tampa, Fla., where he was a schoolboy chum of New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden. Gooden underwent cocaine rehabilitation in the spring of 1987.

He said that during rehabilitation, he learned he would have to change his lifestyle.

"That's why things have to be dull for me, so I won't drink," Youmans said. "I have to stay away from the things and places that will give me the temptations."

Youmans, 24, a right-hander, was 3-6 with a 3.21 ERA at the time of the suspension. In 14 appearances, Youmans pitched 84 innings and allowed 30 earned runs on 64 hits.

Youmans was 0-3 in his first six starts this year with an ERA of 5.24, averaging just six innings per start. Manager Buck Rodgers indicated then that Youmans might be running out of chances with the club.

"It's a situation where a young man has to assume responsibilities for his actions," Rodgers said.

Youmans gave up four runs in the sixth inning of his sixth start against the Houston Astros on May 8 and probably would have been relieved, but he got ejected from the game and stormed off the field.

Afterward, Rodgers said he was "too mad" to talk about the performance and added: "He figures he's had enough and he can't wait to get out."

Youmans' problems began last season after a 13-12 campaign in 1986 during which he struck out 202 batters and posted an ERA of 3.53.

He came to spring training in 1987 about 15 pounds over his 200-pound playing weight. He was twice disabled with back problems and once with a tender elbow, winding up 9-8 with a 4.64 ERA.

He had a 4-1 record and was named pitcher of the month for July, but he lost five of his last seven decisions and did not pitch in September after reinjuring his elbow.

After the elbow problem recurred, Youmans wrecked a car belonging to teammate Tim Raines, sustaining minor facial injuries.

That hurdle won't come until Monday when Becker meets Paul Annacone of the United States and Cash faces Andrei Okhovsky of the Soviet Union.

Becker increased his ace total to 50 with 11 against Giammalva and became the only male player to reach the fourth round without dropping a set.

Giammalva kept him out in the sun for 2½ hours but the big points always went against the American.

Becker said he couldn't be happier with his form but looked ahead only to Annacone.

"He's a dangerous opponent and he's beaten good players before," Becker said.

After being taken to five sets by Javier Frana in the second round, Cash pledged he would wrap up his next match in three straight.

Cash, like Becker, refused to look ahead as far as the quarterfinals.

"My next opponent is Russian," Cash said when asked to comment on a probable meeting with Becker one round later. "That's about all I know about him."

While Cash and Becker justified their position as the world's most feared grass-court players, Ivan Lendl had to call on all his stamina and big-point experience to survive in a tournament he has yet to win.

Lendl, the world's top-ranked player and No. 1 seed, needed almost four hours to oust 6-feet-5 Michiel Schapers of the Netherlands.

The match was out on Court No. 2, commonly known as the "graveyard" because of all the champions and seeds who have lost there.

Lendl, runner-up for the past two years, almost added to that reputation before going through 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-7, 6-1, breaking his Dutch opponent twice in the final set.

"The best thing I have on grass is to play percentage tennis," Lendl said. "I don't like beating myself."

Graf, the top-seeded woman on the third leg of a Grand Slam bid at age 19, beat Terry Phelps 6-3, 6-1. Graf lost just six games in her first three matches.

Sixth-seeded Helena Sukova marched on with Graf, as did No. 12 Zina Garrison and No. 16 Mary Joe Fernandez.

Two more seeds went out on the fifth day. Sweden's Jonas Svensson became the sixth men's seed to go down, beaten 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 by Annacone. And Hana Mandlikova, who has won four Grand Slam tournament titles but is now in a slump, joined Manuela Maleeva on the sidelines in the women's event.

Lendl Gets Mad At Ump

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl become "Ivan the Terrible" in the Houses of Parliament Saturday, with members calling for tennis' top player to be disciplined for remarks made during an argument with an umpire at Wimbledon.

One Conservative MP even called for Lendl to be disqualified from the Grand Slam tournament because of "appalling behavior."

"Money seems to talk even louder than foul language when it comes to disciplining bad bahavior," MP Peter Rost said.

Another Conservative MP, Irvine Patnick, said Lendl's outburst during a five-set victory over Michiel Schapers on Friday set a bad example for fans, particularly children.

"This sort of indiscipline among sports stars ... has got to be stamped out," Patnick said.

Lendl was criticized for shouting at British umpire Gerry Armstrong after a call that went against the top seed.

"What more bad news have you got for me? Are you going to tell me that my house burned down? I hate your guts," Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, quoted Lendl as saying.

At his news conference after the match, Lendl said had described the scene on Court No. 2 as "very peaceful and comfortable."

Piniella Intends On Extended Stay

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Piniella, who often said he would never again manage the New York Yankees, indicated Saturday that he has a contract to do just that through 1991.

Piniella also said that when owner George Steinbrenner replaced him as manager with Billy Martin last October it was by mutual consent.

Speaking before Saturday night's game with Cleveland, his third since he in turn replaced the fired Martin last Thursday, Piniella said Steinbrenner had someone else lined up to manage the Yankees if he hadn't accepted.

"I know who, but I can't say," Piniella said. He conceded it was someone from outside the organization.

"If I hadn't taken this job, somebody else would have," said Piniella, who became general manager after last season but resigned that post on May 29 because he didn't like administrative work. He has spent the last few weeks evaluating the Yankees' minor-league players.

"I was very content doing what I was doing," he said. "I was on my own schedule.

"But I felt I wanted to manage again (Piniella said he probably would have been a major-league manager somewhere else next year if he hadn't accepted Steinbrenner's offer). Last year, when I got 'relieved' here as manager, it was mutual; it was not a one-sided situation, although I'm not saying that if I wanted to stay I would have stayed.

"Why should I manage any place else? The Yankees have been the biggest part of my adult life, outside of my marriage. I live here (New Jersey) and my kid's in college down the road (Villanova)."

Piniella managed the Yankees in 1986 and 1987 and had a contract for this year when he was made general manager. He first said his contract "got extended for ... a good period of time."

Finally, he conceded it was for more than the reported two years "but not a lot longer than two years. How about three years?"

He also said he expected to manage through the duration of the contract despite Steinbrenner's reputation for hiring and firing at the drop of a hat — or a ballgame.

"If this wasn't a longer term commitment on his part, I don't think my contract would have been extended for as long as it was and for the dollars involved," he said.

Piniella said he thinks he and the impatient owner know each other better after working together in the front office.

"I think we have a greater understanding of each other," he said. "Also, we made certain commitments to each other.

"I think he's enhanced his image of me as a total baseball man. And I understand the man a lot better just from the day-to-day contact with him during the winter and spring.

"I understand what he wants and how he thinks much more. I didn't have any problems up there at all with George as the general manager.

Jarmans 20
Moose 1

Adam Vincent went 3-4 and scored four runs to help pace Jarman's to a 20-1 rout over Moose in Tar Heel League baseball action.

Russell Williamson picked up the win on the mound for Jarman's as he hurled a one-hitter.

Jarman's broke out to a 7-0 lead in the opening inning to put the game out of reach.

Brandon Pierce also picked up a trio of hits for Jarman's, while Abdul Jordan and Williamson added two each.

Pepsi 11
Wellcome 4

Geoff Stalings, David Wilborne, C.J. Wilder and Todd MacKenzie each picked up three hits to help Pepsi take an 11-4 win over Wellcome in a Tar Heel League baseball game Saturday.

Jason Howard, Damian Phillips and Jon Gavigan each added two hits each.

Gavigan got things going early for Pepsi with a two-run homer in the opening inning.

Pepsi then added a six-run barrage in the sixth inning to break open a tight game.

Sportsworld 9
Kiwanis 3

Dante Daniels went 3-3 with a pair of doubles to pace Sportsworld to a 9-3 victory over Kiwanis in North State League action.

Matt Davis also added a pair of hits for Sportsworld.

After battling to a 2-2 tie after the first frame, Sportsworld added a run in the second and a trio of runs in the third to gain control of the game.

Optimist 13
Eveready 1

Optimist scored nine runs in the first two innings to set the pace for a 13-1 victory over Eveready in a North State League game Saturday.

Sean Gordan pitched the win for Optimist, going the distance giving up only six hits.

Nelson Holds Four- Shot Lead In Atlanta

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Larry Nelson had one of those days when he thought he could birdie every hole. He was almost right.

Nelson missed a PGA Tour record and left the door slightly ajar for others when he bogeyed the final hole Saturday, but he still carries a four-shot lead into the final round of the $700,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

"I felt I would birdie every hole on the back side," Nelson said after shooting a 6-under-par 66 that gave him a 54-hole total of 195, 21 shots under par on the Atlanta Country Club course.

"I got into a rhythm," he said. "I thought I had a chance to get 30 (under for four rounds) when I stepped up to the 18th tee."

Instead, Nelson hit his worse shot of the day, pulling his tee shot into a ditch on the left side of the fairway and ultimately taking his only bogey of the day and his second of the first three rounds.

Nelson was in position to break the PGA Tour record for most shots under par for 54 holes before taking the bogey 6 on the 18th hole, one he had birdied in each of the first two rounds.

It left him with a 21-under-par 195 total, one shy of the PGA Tour under par mark of 22 set by Gay Brewer on a par 71 course at the Pensacola Open in 1967.

"I really felt like it was possible when I stepped to the 18th tee," Nelson said of reaching 30-under for the tournament. "Now I have to shoot 63 tomorrow. No problem."

"We need to tie Larry Nelson to his bed and not let him come out to the golf course," Bobby Wadkins said.

"I played a solid round and got caught up watching Larry make birdie," added Wadkins, who had a 68-201 that left him in third place.

"I don't think we're playing for second place yet, but if I was betting money, I'd bet on Larry Nelson."

Nelson, the reigning PGA champion who has led from the start in quest of his 10th career victory, held the lead over Paul Azinger, who shot 66-199.

"I hope to have a good frame of mind and put pressure on Larry," Azinger said.

The soft-spoken Nelson, who has a home adjacent to the 18th fairway on the Atlanta Country Club course, was never in danger of losing his lead on the rolling hills of the 7,008-yard layout in the hot, 90-degree weather.

He birdied the fourth, fifth and eighth holes on the front side, scored from 15 feet for another birdie on the 11th and put together three birdies in a row beginning at No. 13 with putts of 10, 4 and 9 feet.

Then, with a record in his grasp, Nelson let his tee shot get away from him on the final hole, landing in a muddy ditch on the left side of the fairway.

He hit it out into the fairway, with mud splattering his face, then laid up and put his approach about eight feet from the pin, but couldn't make the putt.

It opened the way for Azinger, winner at Bay Hill earlier this season, who capped his round with a birdie on the final hole. He also birdied his first two holes of the day and added others on the 12th, 14th and 15th holes.

Wadkins, a 14-year Tour veteran still seeking his first U.S. victory, rolled in a 25-foot putt for an eagle 3 on the final hole for his 68.

Larry Rinker was alone in fourth place with a 67-202.

Three others were eighth shots off the pace at 203 — Dave Rummells 67, Scott Hoch 68 and Chip Beck 70. Hoch, playing despite an ailing shoulder, also eagled the final hole.

It was another two shots back to the trio of Clarence Rose, Mark Calcavecchia and Wayne Levi. Rose shot 66, Calcavecchia 67 and Levi 68

Defending champion Dave Barr had a 70 and was in a group at 205 that also included Hubert Green, who posted the low round of the day, a 65.

Patty Sheehan's 69 Earns Two-Stroke Lead

Dancing In The Lead

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Patty Sheehan is leading the LPGA $500,000 McDonald's Championship by two strokes after three rounds, but she's worried about her stamina.

Sheehan shot a 2-under-par 69 Saturday and has a 10-under-par 203 over the 6,366-yard, par 71 DuPont Country Club.

"For some reason I'm losing stamina on the back nine," said Sheehan, the tour's eighth leading money winner this year with $124,956.

In second place was rookie Dottie Mochrie, fresh out of Furman University, who carded a 70 for a 54-hole total of 205.

Another stroke back in the struggle for a $75,000 first prize was Kathy Postlewait, a 14-year veteran who shot 69 in the third round for a 206. She ranks 17th on the money list at $77,605.

Also at 209 are Jan Stephenson, with a 68 Saturday, and Debbie Massey, with a 69.

Sheehan, the tour's eighth leading money winner this year with $124,956, led by as much as five strokes after four holes of the third round.

But a pair of bogeys on 13 and 14, and tenacious play by Mochrie reduced it to two through 13. Mochrie had a chance to slice it to one at 13, but missed a birdie putt.

"I have to figure why I'm losing stamina," she said. "I seem to lose momentum. And I feel a little tired on the backside.

"It's not the side. I played the back nine first in the first round and did well," she explained. "But I'll have a good dinner tonight, get a lot of sleep, have a good breakfast."

Sheehan, 31, has had an up and down season. She has won once and had seven top 10 finishes. But she missed three cuts and finished 31st and 63rd.

Saturday, she birdied the 15th to boost her lead to three.

Mochrie, once voted Athlete of the Year at Furman and the 18th best money winner as a rookie, birdied 16 to get it back to two.

"I expect to win. I feel like I have the golf shots to do it. It may not be tomorrow, but it's just a matter of time," Mochrie said.

Mochrie felt unsettled after the second round and called her sports psychologist, Ken Ravizza of Cal-State Fullerton, Saturday morning.

"I've been calling him since I was a sophomore in college," she explained. "I used to be a wreck, couldn't handle a bad shot or a round."

Mochrie said Ravizza told her, "play the course. You've paid your dues. Be proud and go out and play there."

Sheehan started the round three strokes ahead of Mocrie, Postlewait and Lopez. She birdied three of the first four holes for a three under front nine, and led by four over Mochrie and six in front of Postlewait at the turn.

She maintained that lead to 12 where Mochrie rolled in a birdie putt to come within three. Postlewait birdied 10 and 12 and was three back.

"It was an adventure with every swing," said Postlewait, who hadn't played in five weeks because of a sore back. "Once I got past 11 I played pretty good. My first 10 holes were erractic to say the least."

Playing in the same threesome, Sheehan, Mochrie and Postlewait each matched par on the last three holes.

"I still felt in control of myself. There is still a lot of golf left. It's Saturday and you don't win tournaments on Saturday," Sheehan said.

Sheehan is seeking her seventh consecutive $200,000 plus season and her 19th tour victory. Mochrie's best this year has been a tie for second, but the 22-year-old has been in the top 10 four times and missed only one cut.

Henning Moves Into Lead In Seniors' Golf Tourney

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Harold Henning, the third-leading money winner on the Senior PGA Tour, shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the $250,000 Southwestern Bell Senior Pages Classic.

Henning, a one-time winner this season, had eight birdies — including four in a row — and two bogeys as he finished with a two-round total of 9-under 133.

"All I know is I'm going away with a big check tomorrow," said Henning, a native of South Africa. "It may not be the winner's, but it'll be a big one. I fancy my chances."

Alone in second place was Gary Player, who had a 4-under 68 to finish at 131. Bruce Crampton shot a 68 to move into a third-place tie with two of the first round co-leaders, Bobby Nichols and Gene Littler, at 6-under-par.

A large group of players was four shots back, led by leading money winner Orville Moody and Roberto DeVicenzo. DeVicenzo's 3-under 69 gave him a 139 total and the Super Seniors championship, which is open to players 60 and older.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, another of the first round co-leaders, played the first three holes in 3-over par to drop to 1-under. He regrouped after that, however, and will begin Sunday's final round at 5-under.

Henning started the day with a birdie on the first hole, but gave the stroke back with a bogey on No. 3. Then he rattled off birdies on Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10 to move 4-under for his round and 7-under for the tourament.

Henning said a key hole was the par-5 eighth, where he drove into the trees, hit a 9-iron out and chipped to four feet for his birdie.

"It might easily have been a six," Henning said. "That was a turning point for me."

After bogeying the par-3 12th hole to drop to 6-under, Henning ran off three straight birdies beginning on 14.

"I don't feel safe at all," He said. "I have to play real well tomorrow ... I need to shoot 67 or 68, because somebody's going to shoot 65."

Player had five birdies and a single bogey as he moved within range of winning his third Senior event of the year.

Nichols picked up two strokes to par on the front side and move to 6-under for the tournament, then had to settle for an even-par 36 coming in. Crampton was 2-under on both sides.

Butch Baird had a 5-under 31 on the front side before blowing up to a 3-over 39 coming in. He did the same thing Friday, playing the first nine holes in 4-under and the back nine in 3-over.

"Yesterday and today I didn't hit the ball quite as well on the back as I did on the front, but it wasn't a big enough difference for a 15-shot swing," said Baird. "There's no way to hit the ball so much different.

"But you don't do anything with it, you just go out and play again. It's going to happen to me again some other time, I'm sure."

Hall of Fame slugger Willie McCovey received 20 or more intentional walks in a season five times, setting a major-league record.

Greenville Aces Seeking Money For Trip

The Greenville Aces tennis team, winners of the Volvo Men's 5.0 state championship, is in need of funds to help finance it in participating in the Southern Sectionals, to be held at Little Rock, Ark.

The team captured the state title last weekend. Winners from the Little Rock tournament will advance to the national finals, to be held at Flushing Meadows, N.Y., during the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

The Little Rock tournament will be held on July 24-27.

Members of the team include Will Jones, the team captain; Randy Bridgeman, Doug Getsinger, Norman Bryant, Alan Hines, Woody Dixon, Paul Tardif, Rick Stang and Mike Bryant.

Anyone wishing to donate to the team may send it to the Greenville Aces, care of Will Jones, Rt. 1, Box 92-I, Grimesland, N.C. 27837.

Rec Team Tennis Opens Up Play

Joe Pecheles Volkswagen, East Carolina Lincoln Mercury and Aldridge and Southerland took wins in opening round play of the Greenville Recreationa and Parks Department Summer novice League Friday.

Pecheles defeated Clark Branch Realtors as Paul Bloodworth and Boo Pleasants won four matches each.

Three Local Youths Place In Tourney

Gentry Pinner, Brooks Hunnicutt and Will MacKenzie were all trophy winners at the North State Junior Invitational held at Wake Forest earlier this week.

Pinner was second in the 14-15 year-old age group with three-day total of 216, including a low-round of 70.

Hunnicutt totaled a 219 with three straight rounds of 73 in the 14-15 year-old age group to place third.

MacKenzie was third in the 12-13 year-old age group.

Wayne County Slips Past Snow Hill, 2-1

SNOW HILL — Rodney Colvin scattered six hits over nine innings to help Wayne County slip past Snow Hill, 2-1, in an American Legion baseball game Friday.

Snow Hill rallied within one run in the seventh when Anthony Jones reached off an error and moved up on a sacrifice before scoring on a single by George Burnette.

Todd Mewborn took the loss for Snow Hill but gave up only four hits while striking out 13 and walking four.

Haas, Sigel Elected Golf Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Jay Haas, winner of more than $2 million during his professional career, and Jay Sigel, two-time U.A. Amateur champion, have been elected to the All-American Collegiate Golf Hall of Fame, it was announced Saturday night.

They will be formally inducted into the Hall of Fame July 19 during the Foundation's dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Haas, 34, was a first-team All-American in 1975 and 1976 while at Wake Forest. Among the highlights of his 12-year pro career have been seven tournament victories, including this season's Bob Hope Chyrsler Classic.

Sigel, 44, who also attended Wake Forest, is the first amateur player inducted into the Collegiate Golf Hall of Fame. A freak accident in 1963, when he put his left hand through a pane of glass, has left Sigel with only 60 percent feeling in his hand.

His U.S. Amateur victories came in 1982-83, making him the first player in 27 years to win consecutive titles.

Select Team Closes Out With Win

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — The U.S. Select basketball team, led by former Navy All-American David Robinson's 18 points, finished a six-game European tour unbeaten by defeating Spain 109-87 Saturday night.

The team returns home on Monday with coach George Raveling intending to recommend additional players to the final tryout camp to U.S. Olympic coach John Thompson.

"I feel all the questions we had before the tour have been answered," Raveling said. "We will go back and have a meeting as a coaching staff to decide the players who we want back."

In the tour's final game, Robinson and guards Rex Chapman, Charles Smith and Steve Kerr provided the spark.

Chapman had 14 points with 5-for-6 from the field, including four 3-pointers as he have clinched his chances for the final tryout camp after a mediocre showing at the first-round trials. Chapman, from Kentucky, decided not to return for his junior year and is eligible for the NBA draft on Tuesday.

Georgetown's Smith continued his solid play with 13 points but he is already among the chosen 16 players to return.

Kerr didn't hurt his chances to advance as the Arizona guard had 12 points and three steals with a pair of 3-point shots.

Robinson, looking more and more like the college player of the year he was in 1986-1987, ended with his highest scoring total in the six games.

"David came to me this afternoon and told me that this was the game he was waiting for," Raveling said. "I thought that he was tremendous on the offensive boards."

Robinson had nine rebounds, six offensive, and ended with 43 rebounds for the trip.

The first five games were easy victories for the Americans and Spain was considered to be the toughest test.

After the teams were tied 37-37, the Americans ran off 10 straight points in two minutes to go up 47-37 on the way to a 56-43 halftime lead.

Kerr started the run with a pair of free throws then was credited with a basket that Spain's Jose Montero accidentally tipped in.

The United States was never challenged in the second half.

Majerle was ejected in the with 15:39 left in the game. He and Montero got in to a shoving match and both benches emptied briefly.

The U.S. steadily moved away in the last 20 minutes as the brief scuffle sparked the Americans. Three consecutive dunks by Robinson, Tennessee's Dyron Nix and Eldon Campbell increased the score to 72-54 with 13 minutes left.

Gant Is Set For Return To Racing

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Harry Gant, who is recuperating from a broken left leg, will return to the driver's seat of his Chevrolet race car for the July 24 AC Spark Plug 500 at Pocono International Raceway, his team announced Saturday.

Gant, 48, from Taylorsville, N.C., broke his leg in two places in a crash during the May 29 Coca-Cola 500 at Charlotte, N.C., Motor Speedway.

Morgan Shepherd has substituted for Gant as the driver for the Skoal Bandit since the accident.

"I'm really looking forward to getting back to racing," Gant said in a prepared statement. "By the time the Pocono race comes up, it'll be eight weeks since I got hurt, so I should be set to go.

"I go back to the doctor Thursday and expect to get a smaller cast. As long as I can get in and out of the car by myself, there should be no problem racing."

Thompson, Williams Place High In Meet

RALEIGH — Sabrina Thompson won her age group in the 100 and the 200 meters while Tiffany Williams placed third in two other events at the Junior Olympic Track and Field Meet Saturday.

Thompson, in the 9-10 year-old division, ran 100 meters in 14.28 to place first in the 100. She also won the 200 meters with a time of 29.8.

Williams, in the 15-18 division, was third in the triple jump (9-6), third in the the 100 hurdles (17.86) and also was on a 400 meter relay team that took third with a time of 50.66.

The two both qualified for the Eastern Regionals to be held in Athens, Ga. July 8-9.

Draft Day Nears For NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA college draft, reduced to three rounds and increased to 25 teams, will be held Tuesday with a long list of question marks following Danny Manning.

Manning's selection by the Los Angeles Clippers was clinched on May 21 at the NBA lottery.

"He will definitely make us a better team," Clippers general manager Elgin Baylor said of Manning, the college player of the year who led underdog Kansas to the NCAA title. "He's a terrific player and a fine young man. He's definitely going to have an impact."

Joining the draft this year are two expansion teams, the Charlotte Hornets and the Miami Heat, who will pick eighth and ninth, after the seven spots determined in the lottery.

The draft will be reduced from seven rounds to three this year and two in 1989, a concession made by the league in the April 25 collective bargaining agreement with the players.

The Clippers, who also have the No. 6 pick in the first round, will look to improve on this season's 17-65 record. But the Indiana Pacers, who won the second choice, will be building upon a 38-victory season that just missed being good enough to make the playoffs.

General Manager Donnie Walsh said the Pacers' high draft position, coupled with their close proximity to playoff status, could lead them to select 7-foot-4 Rik Smits of Marist.

"We're considering him heavily," Walsh said. "We haven't made up our minds, but you don't get a chance to get a center often, especially in the team position we're in. We missed the playoffs in a tiebreaker.

"We might not, in fact we hope we won't, have the chance again to draft a big center."

Smits, from the Netherlands, is considered a raw talent who flourished in a second-echelon college program.

"He definitely would change the look of our team," Walsh said. "He weighs 250 pounds, but on his frame he could go up to 300 without hurting him."

Smits averaged 24.7 points, 8.7 rebounds and 3.9 blocked shots and shot 62.3 percent from the field as a senior. He had similar statistics as a junior.

"He's raw and he's going to need work, but Patrick Ewing didn't really come into his ow until his third year," Walsh said. "Why should we judge Rik Smits any harsher than Patrick Ewing?"

NBA scouting chief Marty Blake believes that Smits has outstanding potential and deserves to be one of the top five players selected.

"He is a big-time first rounder who I think will be a real force in the NBA in three or four years," Blake said.

"I know the competition will be much tougher than anything I've faced in college," Smits said. "Much of the time I was playing against people 6-8."

After the Clippers and Indiana, the first-round draft order, barring trades, will be Philadelphia, New Jersey, Golden State, the Clippers, Phoenix, Charlotte, Miami, San Antonio, New York, Washington, Milwaukee, Phoenix, Seattle, Houston, Utah, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, Portland, Cleveland, Denver, Boston and the Los Angeles Lakers.

The 76ers have a pressing need for a shooting guard and have narrowed their choices to Hersey Hawkins of Bradley, Rex Chapman of Kentucky and Mitch Richmond of Kansas State.

"Both Hawkins and Chapman are considered excellent players and each has his plusses and minuses," owner Harold Katz said.

Katz called Chapman a Jerry West-type guard, while Hawkins is a better inside threat.

The 6-3 Hawkins averaged 36.3 points as a senior, the highest NCAA average in 11 years, leading the nation by nearly eight points per game.

"He's an exceptional perimeter shooter, but beyond that he's got enormous physical talent," 76ers general manager John Nash said. "He can pull up and take the shot, but he can also dunk on the fastbreak."

But NBA insiders say Chapman and Hawkins are unprepared for the defensive demands that will be placed on them in the NBA.

New Jersey general manager Harry Weltman has a list of potential choices that includes Chapman, Hawkins, Smits, Richmond, 6-8 forward Chris Morris of Auburn and 6-10 forward Charles Smith of Pittsburgh.

Weltman said the 1988 draft is difficult to assess because it has depth but few potential star players besides Manning.

"This is like preparing a fighter," Weltman said. "You don't want to peak until you step into the ring. This is maybe the toughest draft, at least the most difficult in terms of pegging players to certain teams. It also is open to more trade possibilities that any other."

Weltman said the Nets probably won't trade to get a higher pick.

"Surrendering something just to move up two spots doesn't make sense," Weltman said. "No player excites us to the degree that we must have him."

Trump Rubbing Elbows In Boxing World

NEW YORK (AP) — Politics, they say, makes strange bedfellows. So, Donald Trump might add, does boxing.

After years of rubbing elbows with New York's upper crust, Trump is now in the bizarre world of boxing — a land where the millionaire developer is instead shaking hands with hair-raising Don King and bare-chested Butch Lewis.

"I enjoy it — I've always enjoyed boxing," said Trump, whose Trump Plaza casino in Atlantic City, N.J., will host Monday's Michael Spinks-Mike Tyson heavyweight title fight. "Of course, my interest is also financial, but I just enjoy boxing."

Until last June, however, the closest Trump came to the fight game was his ongoing verbal brawl with long-time nemesis Mayor Edward I. Koch. Trump kept busy running his two casinos, New York's Trump Tower, and an assortment of other holdings; in his spare time, he wrote the best-selling "Trump: The Art of the Deal."

His deals soon included matching heavyweight boxers — an idea which was not new to Atlantic City, but one which Trump moved to a much larger scale after getting involved last year.

While no-name boxers with little marquee value once fought before crowds of 2,500 people, Trump brought in the big names and began drawing more than 20,000 fans to fights like Gerry Cooney-Spinks and Tyson against Tyrell Biggs and ex-champion Larry Holmes.

The bouts brought Trump tremendous publicity and threatened Las Vegas' reign as home to the big fights. The Tyson-Holmes brawl attracted celebrities such as Muhammad Ali, Don Johnson, Barbara Streisand, Jack Nicholson, Cheryl Tiegs and Kirk Douglas to Trump's casino.

More importantly, each fight attracted the high-rollers who pack the casino gaming tables. For Cooney-Spinks, the amount of money spent at the casino on fight night hit $7.2 million; an average Monday in June would see about $1.2 million spent, casino officials said.

Figuring the casino to make about 15 percent of the total wagered, the fight mean an extra $900,000 for the Trump Plaza that night. Tacking on the two nights before and the night after the fight, the casino made an extra $1.5 million off the bout.

Monday's fight is anticipated to do at least as well for the casino, Trump said: "I got a little lucky with this one. It's turned out much, much bigger than we anticipated."

Heavy pre-fight publicity centering on Tyson's reported marital, management and mother-in-law woes haven't hurt either, although Trump discounts the rumors.

In addition to the money, Trump appears to be enjoying the notoriety of big-time boxing promotion. Prior to the Tyson-Holmes fight, Trump was introduced at ringside. And a commercial promoting the Tyson-Spinks fight shows the boxers nose-to-nose, eye-to-eye, ready to explode. Instead the two boxers stare each other down and say ...

"Thank you, Mr. Trump," offers Spinks.

"Yeah, thank you, Mr. Trump," agrees Tyson, expressing his gratitude as much for Trump's financial outlay as his role in setting up the fight.

Tyson, 21, will pull down $20 million minimum, while Spinks will receive $13.5 million guaranteed. Trump paid $11 million to host the fight and another $2 million in expenses.

Trump, in a telephone interview from his plane this week, proudly boasted the fight will produce the largest live gate in boxing history at an estimated $13 million; ringside seats are priced at $1500.

As far as handling fight negotiations, a lifetime of cutting deals in conference rooms is scant preparation for handling the bombastic King or the bow-tied Lewis. In trying to arrange this fight, Tyson's trainers and Lewis — who represents Spinks — engaged in shouting, exchanging threats and storming out on one another.

Yet Trump has nothing but kind words for everyone who set up this fight, although he did admit to some apprehension about getting involved initially.

"They're very good businessmen," Trump said of arch-rival Lewis and King. "I've found them both to be very honorable."

Trump said his interest in boxing began in 1971 after the first Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier fight in Madison Square Garden, when Smokin' Joe outpointed Ali in one of the greatest fights of all time.

"I believe Ali-Frazier I remains unequaled," said Trump, predicting the Tyson-Spinks fight could rival it while refusing to predict a winner. He does foresee a continuing battle with Las Vegas for future bouts.

"I think they'll get some and we'll get some. They're just a little upset now that I've been getting all the good fights — or most of the big fights," said Trump. "I see them getting more agressive, and maybe I'll be getting a little less agressive."

Donald Trump? A little less agressive?

"We'll see," said Trump. "I don't believe in overpaying for anything."

Foreman Wants A Shot At Tyson

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Time will beat Mike Tyson, says George Foreman, who also would like a shot at it.

Since coming out of retirement March 9, 1987, which was eight days short of 10 years since his previous fight — a decision loss to Jimmy Young — he has knocked out all nine opponents.

His 10th opponent for a scheduled 10-round fight at the Tropicana Hotel and Casino will be Carlos Hernandez, who pulled out of the bout for a while Friday. But on Saturday, promoter Dennis Rappaport said "contractual problems had been ironed out."

Foreman said he took the bout because "I realized it was part of a big scene and I like being part of it."

Once a principal actor in big-fight scenes, Foreman hopes to be again, although it has 14 years and four months since he lost the heavyweight title to Muhammad Ali at Kinshasa, Zaire.

Tyson was 8 at the time.

"The little kid really believes in himself right now," Foreman said of Tyson. "But time will turn on him just like it does on everybody."

However Foreman believes time has favored him.

"I didn't get used up," said the ex-champion, who had 45-2 record, with 42 knockouts when he retired, "and I stayed out of boxing 10 years.

"All I did was eat, I didn't disipate my body."

Foreman, who wants to fight at about 240 pounds, got up to 312. While attending a basketball game about six years ago, some people hollered at him.

"I thought they knew me," Foreman said. "They thought I was Refrigerator Perry."

Foreman, an evangelist, returned to boxing to get money for his ministry and for a youth center he has in Houston.

He has had one $100,000 payday but, he said, "You think title because that's where the money is."

Foreman thinks he deserves a title shot, but he has not fought any ranked contenders and now is drawing criticism for the lack of quality in his opponents.

Hernandez had a 18-4-1 record, with 13 knockouts, but has lost three of his last four fights, being topped in two of them.

"I'm looking for justice now," Foreman aid. "I've been active and I'm a former champion — the only champion not to get a rematch.

"A promoter interested in signing you up for a top contender also wants to sign you up for four more fights," he said.

"I don't need a lot of money invested in me to make me a household word, so why should they tie me up. If they offer me a title shot, the can tie me up."

Foreman also knows he can risk a loss if he is to be one more time a center piece in a big-fight scene.

Tyson ...

"Jim would have said, 'What do you want to do, what's the problem,'" Tyson said of the recent confusion, sounding like a man left in the dark by his advisers.

"People I'm associated with should treat me special," Tyson said. "Don't treat me like a commodity."

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, who was Jacobs' business partner, has accused promoter Don King of trying to steal Tyson from him. Meanwhile, Tyson's wife and her mother, Ruth Roper, have questioned Cayton's handling of Tyson.

Cayton said he has a boxer-manager contract with Tyson which has 3½ years remaining and a personal services contract with three years left. He said those contracts will be enforced and, he b lieves, with Tyson's approval.

"I'm not committed to anything I don't want to be," Tyson said, adding that he might split with Cayton but that it was possible "the relations can be saved. We will talk about it later."

Tyson has been especially stung by stories about his family.

"I've been reading a lot of negative press," he said at a recent news conference. "Whatever good relatons I've had with writers, throw it away because you've been writing bull... My wife and my mohter-in-law — they're being cut to pieces. It's new to them. It hits a nerve."

Givens is here with Tyson. "I love her to death," he said.

Despite the turmoil, Tyson did appear trim and relaxed at an interview this week.

"The closer it gets to the fight, the happier I am," he said. "I'm a professional. Whatever happens — your mother dies, someone you loves dies — the show must go on."

However, a lesson on human nature seems to have been driven home to him.

"I should have known from my background," he said of the turmoil around him.

Tyson, who never knew his father, was born in Brooklyn's tough Bedford-Stuyvesant section. He was 10 when his mother, Lorna, moved the family to the just-as-tough Brownsville section.

Before knocking out Tony Tubbs in the second round March 21 at Tokyo in his first fight abroad, Tyson said, "Even though I'm married, I'm a fighter and I don't have a life. I like it. It's exciting. Ketchel (Stanley Ketchel, a roustabout who became the middleweight champion in the early part of the century) and those guys ran away from home and become famous.

Tyson was taken away from home and became famous.

In 1979, the 13-year-old Tyson was sent to the Tryon School for Boys, a juvenile delinquent center in upstate New York. There he was introduced to boxing by Bob Stewart, who also introduced him to D'Amato, who had guided heavyweight Floyd Patterson and light heavyweight Jose Torres to world titles.

D'Amato took Tyson in his home at Catskill, N.Y., and in 1981 became his legal guardian.

Tyson became a good enough amateur to be invited to the 1984 Olympic Trials, but he was beaten out for a berth on the team by Henry Tillman, who went on to win a gold medal.

Turning pro in in 1985, Tyson, who sees himself as a throwback to rougher, tougher eras in boxing, fought on a throwback scheduled. He fought 14 times that first year and 13 times in 1986, in which he won the WBC title by beating Berbick in his final match.

After beating James "Bonecrusher" Smith and adding the WBA title, he beat Pinklon Thomas and then outpointed Tony Tucker Aug. 1987, for the undisputed championship, which he has defended three times.

As success has piled up, so has the money. Tyson has made more than $25 million from his seven title fights and Monday night his total could reach the neighborhood of $50 million. That's a neighborhood light years away from Brownsville.

Yes, Mike Tyson's horizons are expanding, with their accompanying problems, but Monday night he will find himself in a 20-square-foot area where's he always been able to solve problems, most of the time quickly.

"I can beat any man on this planet," he said.

Spinks ...

of a St. Louis ghetto to win gold medals at the 1976 Olympics at Montreal and become the only brothers to win the heavyweight title. Leon was undisputed champion, while Michael held the International Boxing Federation version.

The brothers' careers have passed, going in opposite directions. Leon now fights for minor purses years after the promise of boxing riches, which never materialized for him.

"Leon gets very emotional when I fight," Michael said.

— March 18, 1983: Michael is fighting Dwight Muhammad Qawi for the undisputed light heavyweight championship at the Convention Center and Leon is prowling the working press section in a black cowboy hat shouting encouragement to his brother.Between the sixth and seventh rounds, Leon, his hat askew, rushes to Michael's corner to offer advice. Michael looks down and says, "Straighten your hat, Lee." Leon does.

"Leon cares a lot for me," Michael said.

— June 12, 1981, Leon is challenging for the World Boxing Council title and is being pounded into submission by Larry Holmes in the third round. Out of the audience and on to the ring apron bounds Michael.

"I wanted to stop the fight," Michael said. "My brother was hurt."

Michael's feelings of real hurt for his brother stem from the problems success brought to Leon.

"The only problem Leon had was being too nice," Michael said. "You shouldn't hang out and let the public get into your life."

Leon's out of-the-ring problems have been publicized. Michael has had some minor problems, but has been pretty successful in maintaining his privacy and that of Jennifer, his 5-year-old daughter. Jennifer's mother, Sandy Massie, was killed in January when her car was hit by an auto operated by a drunk driver.

Spinks was able to keep his career on track, something he couldn't do when Leon upset Ali for the title Feb. 15, 1978.

After having six fights in 1977, Spinks fought only twice in 1977.

". . . with Leon's quick success, I was staying in the background," Spinks said. "People would say, 'Mike get out of the way; I got to get to Leon.' It didn't bother me because I was concerned for Leon, too."

Spinks fought only once in 1979, but that was due to a knee injury.

Finally, in 1980, after having split with promoter Bob Arum and joining Butch Lewis, who once worked for Arum, Spinks started down the path that would lead to his making boxing history.

On Sept. 22, 1985, Spinks, a 6-1 underdog, won the IBF heavyweight title on a 15-round unanimous decision over Larry Holmes at Las Vegas, Nev.

He beat Holmes in the rematch on a split decision, knocked out Steffan Tangstad and appeared headed for a showdown with Tyson in the final of the HBO television heavyweight unification series.

Spinks and Lewis opted, however, to leave the series to fight Gerry Cooney, a move that led to Spinks being stripped of the IBF title. For knocking out Cooney in the fifth round June 15, 1987, at Atlantic City, Spinks got $4 million, which is about what he would have made for fighting Tyson on HBO.

Monday night, Spinks is guaranteed $13.5 million.

"It's what I do for a living."

Free Agency Coming

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Envision Randall Cunningham joining Bo Jackson and Tim Brown to give the Los Angeles Raiders one of the most explosive offenses in the NFL;

Envision Bill Maas joining old buddy Dan Marino to plug the defensive hole that's kept Miami out of the playoffs and Carl Banks providing the physical defense to put San Francisco back in the Super Bowl.

If those exact scenarios may never happen, last week's court decision in the NFL's ongoing labor dispute has the NFL Players Association and legions of player agents beginning to view as a reality imminent free agency that could lead to public auctions for dozens of players.

"The lawyers and the judge have told the union to play it low key," says agent Leigh Steinberg.

"But I don't have to. I think we're at the stage for the most profound change in football structure that we've ever seen. What the union has been unable to gain on the picket line, it could very well win in the courts."

Steinberg's optimism stems from the decision June 17 by Judge David Doty of U.S. District Court in Minneapolis that "impasse" exists between the NFL Players Association and the owners. Doty also said he will rule by July 10 on whether to issue an injunction making free agents of some 300 or more NFL players without contracts, including Maas, Cunningham and Banks.

NFL officials don't expect him to grant immediate free agency.

But even if he did, most football people believe that the principal fallout will be more holdouts than usual not a lot of team-hopping. That's because the union and agents are advising players to wait for Doty's decision before signing and the decision is due the day three teams — Cincinnati, Tampa Bay and Dallas — open camp.

"Things aren't going to change dramatically whatever happens," says general manager Jim Finks of the New Orleans Saints, whose unsigned veterans include seven starters from last year's 12-3 squad, the first winner in the team's 20-year history.

"Even if he does decide to grant free agency — and I don't think he will — you're not going to see a lot of people jumping teams. This is a game of role players. You can count the impact players on about three hands and the teams that have them will pay whatever they need to pay to keep them."

In fact, nobody but Doty knows what he will do.

The judge, however, made a point after last week's decision favoring the union that neither side should feel it won or lost. As a result, union spokesmen have been uncharacteristically reserved and league officials are hopeful that Doty will send the antitrust suit to trial and deny the injunction or send it to a higher court to expedite a decision.

But what would happen in the most extreme case — free agency as of July 10?

The last time there was a similar window, in 1977, the only major move was John Riggins from the Jets to the Redskins and Riggins had already sat out one season.

Moreover, there seem to be only a few teams willing to chase free agents.

They include the Raiders, 49ers, perhaps the Denver Broncos, Minnesota Vikings and Indianapolis Colts, plus the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins, who have already signed linebacker Wilber Marshall for $6 million over 5 years under the old rules, which required them to relinquish two No. 1 draft picks to Chicago.

Moreover, while there are a lot of good players — like Finks' seven starters — only a handful are young enough and good enough to be worth the salaries they will demand. For as Denver Coach Dan Reeves said when he declined to go after Banks following the Marshall signing, a multi-million dollar contract to one player can distrupt a team's entire salary scale.

"If you pay $1 million for a free agent, how much will you have left to give the guy who returns kicks," says one owner.

Two of the key free agents are Giants — Banks and tight end Mark Bavaro — and both have expressed a desire to remain in New York, assuming the price is right.

It probably will be. Since George Young took over as general manager in 1979, the Giants have never failed to sign a player they want.

There should also be a market for Cunningham, the Eagles' fourth-year quarterback, who began to emerge as a star last season.

But some general managers think he has priced himself out of the marketplace because he is reportedly seeking $1.5 million, more than such Super Bowl-winning quarterbacks as Joe Montana and Phil Simms. "I think he's a good player but there's no indication that he can do it year after year," says Young.

Maas also fits, but probably not with Miami, whose owner, Joe Robbie is one of the hard-liners on the NFL Management Council's executive committee.

Other attractive free agents include wide receivers Mark Duper of Miami and Willie Gault of Chicago and perhaps Phillip Epps and Walter Stanley of Green Bay; defensive linemen Lee Williams of San Diego and Jeff Bryant of Seattle; offensive linemen Jay Hilgenberg of the Bears, Ron Solt of Indianapolis and Gary Zimmerman of Minnesota, linebackers Rickey Hunley of Denver and Mike Wilcher of the Los Angeles Rams, cornerbacks Barry Wilburn of Washington and Ronnie Lippett of New England and perhaps punter Sean Landeta of the Giants and placekicker Dean Biasucci of Indianapolis

But other big names would probably go without a bid because of age, injury, or personal problems.

They include defensive backs Ronnie Lott of San Francisco and Dennis Smith of Denver; linebackers Clay Matthews of Cleveland and Chip Banks of San Diego, nose tackle Fred Smerlas of Buffalo and offensive linemen Keith Van Horne of Chicago; R.C. Thielmann and Russ Grimm of Washington and Dean Steinkuhler of Houston. Plus Irving Fryar, the New England wide receiver whose troubles off the field have obscured his talent on it.

Some believe that there will be situational moves — that a team seeking, say, a cornerback, might go after a Patrick Allen or Steve Brown of Houston or a Scott Case of Atlanta for less than might be demanded by Wilburn, who led the league in interceptions last year.

Then there are players behind stars on good teams, like Andy Headen of the Giants who backs up Lawrence Taylor and Banks and plays primarily in third-down situations. He's a classic player of whom it's said: "He could start for most other teams."

But the question teams must face is: can he, or is he overrated simply because he's behind two All-Pros?

Finks isn't sure. But he believes there will be little movement.

"A guy isn't going to leave a team, particularly a good team, just for the chance for a little more money," he says. "He's comfortable there, he knows the coaches, he may have a home there. Why make a big move when you don't have to?"

Journeyman Jones Is Earning A Name

Great relievers with great pitches.

Now make room in the record book for a journeyman named Jones who challenges batters with a changeup.

"All I do is make them hit the ball and hope they catch it. And I throw strikes," Cleveland's Doug Jones said. "It's nothing spectacular."

It's been enough, however, to accomplish what no other pitcher has ever done. Jones set a record with his 14th save in 14 tries Friday night as the Indians held off the New York Yankees 7-5.

Jones, pitching on his 31st birthday, broke the mark of 13 established by Philadelphia's Steve Bedrosian last year. He retired all seven batters he faced.

"I wasn't worried about the record. I tried to shut it out," he said. "But I think I can relax a little now."

That might make the first time Jones has taken it easy.

Jones, who spent part of 10 years in the minors, was one of 46 pitchers the Indians brought to spring training. He had a 3.15 ERA in 49 games as a rookie for Cleveland last season and figured he had a certain job.

"I was coasting with the wrong attitude," he recalled. "I thought I had a spot made. I should've known better."

The Indians had reshuffled their front office during the winter and the new bosses weren't familiar with Jones.

"I knew what he could do," Cleveland manager Doc Edwards said. "But the new eyes hadn't seen anything to impress them."

Two days before spring training ended, Edwards called Jones aside.

"I said, 'Son, you've got one more chance.' He went out and threw 25 minutes of batting practice the next day and two shutout innings the next day," Edwards said. "He made the team."

Jones, drafted by Milwaukee in 1978, made his major league debut with the Brewers in 1982. He did not make it back to the majors until 1986, the year after Cleveland signed him as a free agent.

"It just goes to show you there's some pretty good pitchers bouncing around for a long time in the minors," said Mike Pagliarulo of the Yankees.

With Jones, the Indians are good. He has been their savior, part of the reason they are playing their best ball since 1966.

Threat Of Bears Is Always There

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont. (AP) — You can spot them right away here in the park.

They're the ones who glance nervously over their shoulder as they head for the campground restroom at night by flashlight.

They're the ones who hem and haw and shuffle from foot to foot when someone suggests wandering up a mountain trail.

They're the ones who tie their kids to the picnic table with a leash, for fear a toddler will wander into waiting jaws; who fish for trout fearing they'll catch one and have to carry it and its smell down a tree-lined path.

They're the ones who sidle up to rangers, lodge workers, sometimes anyone with Montana plates on the car and furitively inquire: "Well, what about the, uh, you know, the, uh, the bears?"

The last word is usually said urgently, earnestly — but softly, as if some bruin in the brush will overhear and take offense.

They're the ones that are scared, sometimes terrified, of being killed. Horribly. By a grizzly.

It's been 15 years since my first hiking and camping trip to Glacier, and I remember the fear. But the years have tempered it.

Over those 15 years, I've only seen two bears in all of Montana, both smaller, less aggressive black bears. I saw more bears than that in a single week of backpacking in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in North Carolina.

I've never seen a grizzly, despite hundreds of trail miles on foot in Glacier and other Montana wilderness areas, and cumulative months sleeping in thin nylon tents. I've never had a food sack stolen, a fish stringer stripped, an ice chest ravaged — or even disturbed.

But fear of grizzlies is not a matter of rational consideration.

It was mid-May this year when a friend and I headed for a long weekend of camping at Kintla Lake, 40 miles by bad road northwest of West Glacier, in the park's extreme northwest corner.

Kintla always has been one of my favorites for car camping. It is perched on the edge of a magnificent, transparent mountain lake, with snow-capped peaks towering above and deer regularly wandering through the tree-shaded campsites.

It takes determination to get there — the road is so bad in some sections that 20 mph can shake a car apart — so people who take the effort tend to be the mellow sort who don't care that the nearest restaurant is two hours away.

I came for a long weekend of laying in the warm early summer sun; lazily paddling a canoe over the lake's depths; relaxing reading; and intense sleeping. My companion came for the same — or so we both thought, until the first night approached.

As darkness fell, she edged closer to the campfire, peered anxiously into the deepening shadows and looked longingly at the far end of the campground, where the only other campers at the lake were preparing to crawl inside their truck to sleep. And she looked doubtfully at the suddenly fragile nylon canopy under which she was about to sleep.

She added many logs to the fire that night. Finally, reluctantly, she crawled into the tent and into her sleeping bag. And lay there.

About midnight, I awoke and looked at her. In the moonlight, I could see her open eyes, staring at the tent wall.

"Joyce?" I asked.

She jerked upright. "What is it? What is it?" she asked frantically.

"Why aren't you asleep?" I asked.

She looked me straight in the eye and said cooly: "I am terrified." She paused, then added, firmly: "I want to sleep in the car."

I sighed. I thought of the hundreds of nights I'd camped without trouble. I thought of my warm sleeping bag. I thought of the chill outside. I snuggled a bit deeper in my sleeping bag. And then I thought of my first camping trip to Glacier 15 years ago. I remembered my fear. And with another sigh, I got up and went outside.

It took about 10 minutes to make space enough among the camping gear for a sleeping bag — not a particularly comfortable bed, but one surrounded by steel walls. Joyce quickly settled in, and gave me a grateful smile as the door closed. I wearily returned to the tent and quickly fell asleep.

By daylight the next day, she was a little apologetic; she said she hadn't anticipated the depth of her fear.

And, in fact, it has little grounds in logic.

Since Glacier was established in 1910, there have been eight deaths by bears, according to park spokeswoman Michelle Rotter. Most of those have been in recent years; there were two people killed by grizzlies in 1987.

But one of those was a photographer who was trying to approach what the park service euphemistically calls "a family group of grizzly bears" — a sow with cubs, perhaps the most dangerous combination imaginable.

The other fatality was a resort summer employee, wandering by himself, off-trail, deep in the back country. His body was not found for five weeks.

And the two deaths came during the period that 1,660,737 people visited Glacier. That means the odds of dying of a bear attack in Glacier last year were 1 in 830,368.

But, as Joyce said, "this has nothing to do with logic."

As our second day lazed along in Kintla, other campers arrived. Several, in fact. Tents sprang up. Dogs barked. Children played. And Joyce, mellowing, allowed as how she could sleep in the tent that night.

She gazed fondly at the campsite across the road. There were three children there. Small children. Small, plump children. She turned back to me and smiled.

"Better odds," she said.

National Parks Having Problems All Around

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

From sea to shining sea, many of the national parks are in trouble. The most threatened range from isolated wilderness of Montana's Glacier National Park in Montana to the suburban sprawl outside Washington, D.C.

The threats vary widely, from development around and on the historic Civil War battlefield at Manassas, Va., just outside Washington, to disruption of the Everglades' water supply to destruction of forests which surround Glacier, Great Smokey, Yosemite, Rocky Mountain and Yellowstone national parks, according to a new report by the Wilderness Society.

The 10 most threatened parks are Everglades, Glacier, Grand Canyon, Great Smokey, Manassas Battlefield, Olympic, Rocky Mountain, Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area, Yellowstone and Yosemite, the society said.

Although the society listed no particular order, the most fundamentally threatened park is the Everglades, said the society's Steve Whitney.

"The lifeblood of Everglades National Park is water," he said. "It's 100 percent dependent on high quality water and as close as we can get it to the historic rate and timing of waterflow from the north into the park.

"The park is just one piece of a much larger ecosystem."

The problem is similar in many other parks. They are the central cores of much larger ecosystems and cannot exist as founders want them preserved unless the whole ecosystem receives at least some protection.

In the Everglades, wading birds require lots of water part of the year and an annual dry spell during the times when they raise their young. The low water concentrates fish, making it possible for the birds to gather enough food for themselves and their ravenous offspring.

Because the natural cycle has been destroyed, numbers of wood storks, for example, have dropped 90 percent in the park, Whitney said in an interview.

"Yellowstone is perhaps the most talked about in terms of ecosystem protection," he said. It is about 2.3 million acres sitting in the middle of a 10 million acre ecosystem.

Around it are seven national forests, three national wildlife refuges, two national parks and a lot of private land in three states.

"If ever there were an administrative nightmare, this is it," Whitney said.

"The approach to managing those areas has not been coordinated well. The result has been an incremental whittling away of the integrity of the natural system and the loser has been the land itself," he said.

Glacier represents a major problem wildlife face in parks.

Animals such as mountain sheep, elk and moose "range into the high country in the summer and visitors to the park expect to see them," Whitney said. But in the winter, they range widely out onto adjacent, lower national forests, private land and the Blackfeet Indian reservation.

Plans to build roads and drill for oil and gas in the adjacent Lewis and Clark National Forest, for example, would disturb animals and open roads for poachers to get to them, Whitney said.

Being self-confident and positive and making the most of life through various opportunities will all be a part of a basketball clinic in Greenville for children ages eight to 17 this week.

The World Home and Hall of Fame for Professional Black Athletes is sponsoring the clinic Monday through Friday at the South Greenville Recreation Center, said Caroll Midgette, the organization's national director. Michael J. Bernard, the head basketball coach at North Carolina Central University, and his staff will conduct the activities, he said.

In addition, to basketball techniques, some discussion of "drug abuse, mental attitudes, prerequisites for success and self confidence are all part of the clinic," Midgette said.

The annual clinic is a fundraising project for the organization, he said. Local businesses and public agencies sponsor children to participate in the event, which also provides lunch and a T-shirt to them. The clinic will be conducted from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day, and Midgette said he expects about 700 Pitt County children will participate during the week.

Currently based in Goldsboro, the organization was established to recognize black athletes and their contributions, Midgette said.

"There's no where in the country where you can honor the black athlete," he said. "We thought it was time for them to be recognized."

The organization is gathering information about the athletes from years past to the present and ultimately intends to build a facility on two acres of land on Creech Road in Raleigh, Bridgette said. It would feature exhibitions, films, statistics, equipment and other memorabalia of black athletes, he said.

To get the facility financially off the ground, the center is seeking "pioneers" in North Carolina and other states to make donations. Also, fundraising drives such as the basketball camp, a national drawing contest and basketball games featuring semi-professionals are geared toward increasing the budget.

Information may be obtained about the organization and its activities by writing, World Home and Hall of Fame for Black Athletes, 678 Spence Ave., Goldsboro, N.C. 27530.

Southern Life Is Now Liberty Life.
All of your friends at Southern Life are pleased to announce that we are changing the name of our company to that of our parent organization — Liberty Life — the #1 insurance company in the Carolinas.

Soon you will be seeing changes in the signs that identify our offices. It's a brand new design for Liberty, and our offices will be the first to display it. Over the next few months, the new Liberty design will be appearing at every Liberty Life location.

While we are in the process of changing our name to Liberty, we are going to continue to provide outstanding service to our customers. That is the only way we know how to conduct business. Quite fortunately, service comes first at Liberty Life, too.

This is just one of the many benefits you will enjoy when your family's protection and security are underwritten by Liberty Life.
Liberty Life — #1 In The Carolinas.

Summit Pinpoints Change In Reagan's Tactics

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan hailed his final economic summit as a triumph for his long-held, free-market philosophy, but in one key respect his current policy is radically different from the early days of his administration.

The president who once was content to sit idly by while the dollar soared in value has become an active meddler in currency markets — anathema in the early days of Reagonomics. Then the cry was: "Let the markets decide" the fair exchange value of the dollar, left untouched by government.

But the final economic communique issued after the Toronto summit by the leaders of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britian, France, Italy and Canada brags that their policy of joint intervention has been a success and should be continued.

Intervention is the process by which countries buy and sell currencies on the open market in an effort to influence their price.

Reagan and his first Treasury secretary, Donald T. Regan, disdained such actions during the president's first term, contending that the dollar's surge in value during those years was a sign of economic strength.

The administration turned a deaf ear to pleas from American manufacturers and farmers who contended that they were being battered by an overvalued dollar which had made their goods uncompetitive on world markets.

At the dollar's highest point in February 1985, Reagan replied that the greenback's strength "wasn't a problem. It was a blessing," demonstrating how attractive the United States was to foreign investors.

Critics contended that this hands-off policy was eroding America's industrial base and bringing on record trade deficits as American manufacturers and farmers were priced out of more and more foreign markets.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who replaced Regan in early 1985, decided that with protectionist forces gaining the upper hand in Congress, it was time for a new approach.

The change turned out to be a surprise announcement by the United States and its major allies in September 1985 at the Plaza Hotel in New York that they would jointly intervene in currency markets to drive the dollar lower in an effort to make American products competitive once again.

"The administration changed views quite radically because of the near-recession in certain sectors of the economy in late 1984 and 1985," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "They went to work to fix the problems in trade, manufacturing and farming."

Since that time, the dollar has fallen by 50 percent against the Japanese yen and German mark and by somewhat smaller margins against other currencies.

The effort began to pay off in the middle of 1986 as U.S. exports in volume terms started improving even though the trade deficit in dollar terms continued to worsen because the weaker dollar made imports more expensive.

But after posting a record deficit of $170.3 billion in 1987, the deficit for the first four months of this year has declined sharply to an annual rate of $141.8 billion.

With that improvement has come a surge in the U.S. growth rate, as manufacturing companies have been busy hiring to meet the increased export demands.

In February 1987, the summit nations switched from a policy of trying to drive the dollar lower to one of stabilizing the dollar for fear that any further decline would threaten a resurgence of inflation in the United States and frighten away the foreign investors the country has come to depend on.

For most of last year that effort was a failure as market forces continued to push the dollar lower. The dollar's continued decline forced the Federal Reserve to step in and tighten interest rates to prevent a surge in inflation. This combination of a weak currency and rising interest rates has been blamed in a part for the October stock market collapse.

The market crash, raising fears of a global recession, convinced the summit countries of the critical need for stronger efforts at stabilizing the dollar's value. They issued a Dec. 22 communique pledging closer cooperation and that, so far, has done the trick.

In the Toronto economic communique, the countries repeated their pledge for close economic coordination, building on commitments made at the Tokyo summit in 1986 and the Venice summit last year.

Baker said he believed the coordination process has proved so successful that it would last long after Reagan was out of office.

But some critics are not so sure, contending that policy squabbles are inevitable when dealing with sovereign nations.

"The notion of coordination is something we keep talking about, but it doesn't really exist. No country is willing to be lectured to by the other side," said George Perry, an economist at the Brookings Institution, a Washington think tank.

"What we really have is a heavy open-mouth policy (on the part of government officials) providing guidance to the markets and that has been backed up by intervention."

Perry said that this fragile arrangement can come apart at any time with the resultant discord jolting markets as it did last October.

But President Reagan and the other world leaders concluded their gathering on a more upbeat note, praising the "strengthened ties of solidarity, both political and economic," between them.

Top Piedmont Executives Resign

By MICHAEL HOBBS
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Edwin Colodny, chairman of USAir Group, has been named to the same post at Piedmont Aviation after chairman William McGee and three other top Piedmont executives resigned.

The four executives reportedly are set to join former Piedmont chairman William Howard in a buyout of Braniff Inc., but stockholders of Braniff adjourned a meeting Friday without taking action because of a delay in the sale.

"The transaction supposed to take place in New York today wasn't completed," Braniff vice chairman and chief executive officer Pat Foley said after the second adjournment. He would not elaborate or answer questions.

Resigning Friday were McGee; Howard McKinnon, senior vice president-finance and treasurer; Dick James, vice president of planning, and Don McGuire, vice president of public affairs.

Thomas E. Schick was elected president and chief operating officer of the company by the board of directors of Piedmont Aviation, which is a subsidiary of USAir. Shick, 46, joined Piedmont in August 1986 as a vice president.

THOMAS E. SCHICK

The board also promoted Jack G. Walker to chief financial officer.

Piedmont officials said customers would see no difference in Piedmont's operation.

"This has been a smooth transition," Schick said. "Customers should not see any difference at all in the operation."

"The people who are handling the main parts of the operation are still here," Schick said. "Piedmont is a success because of the people at Piedmont."

Shick said the formal merger of Piedmont into USAir is expected to take place sometime in early 1989.

"We have said from the very beginning that USAir and Piedmont will become one airline. We're going about it in a very precise and professional manner to insure we don't have the problems that other airlines have had."

Schick, 46, said hurdles include combining computer operations and successfully solving "people problems."

He said the key to any successful merger is getting the information to the employees.

"We will be meeting with our employees to explain to them just what has happened," he said.

He said merger plans continue unchanged.

"I don't expect that we'll miss a beat," he said.

The Winston-Salem-based Piedmont was bought by USAir Group Inc. for $1.59 billion in a deal announced in March 1987 and approved in late December.

Howard left Piedmont last August to lead an effort by pilots at United Airlines Inc. to buy their airline from its parent company, then known as Allegis Corp. Howard was replaced by McGee.

Under Howard's leadership, Piedmont grew into the ninth-largest U.S. airline and was consistently among the most profitable carriers. Howard has declined to discuss the possible buyout of Dallas-based Braniff, or which Piedmont officials would be involved.

Wall Street Questionable For Summer

By MARIANN CAPRINO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Has Wall Street's so-called "summer rally" lost its sizzle, or are stock prices merely simmering before the heat gets turned up?

The Dow Jones industrial average has climbed some 200 points since May 31, and this week alone the key index set two, consecutive post-crash highs before tumbling on fears of higher interest rates.

But before assessing just what impact these events may have on what has been dubbed a summer rally, astute market watchers note that the sultry season hasn't even begun.

"It's not summer yet," said Ronald Daino, a technical analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., noting the season officially gets under way on Tuesday.

Depending on how things go, Daino said these recent events "could be looked back upon as part of an initial summer rally."

But he's not entirely convinced that is inevitable.

"We still feel it requires some confirmation on whether the market will move higher," Daino said.

"The potential is there, but I'd just like some additional confirmation before putting both feet in the water," he said, pointing to the drought's effect on commodity prices and the credit markets as areas of concern.

Plunging bond prices obliterated the 32-point gain the Dow posted in back-to-back sessions this week that pushed the key average to two post-crash highs.

Those who expected the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials to remain solidly above 2,100 and use that mark as a springboard for a further advance saw those plans evaporate in one brief session.

Rumors out of Europe that West Germany and even possibly Japan are considering hiking interest rates ignited fears that the Federal Reserve might be forced to follow suit to support the dollar.

The news deflated the bond market, and ripple effects spread to equities.

But analysts shrugged it off, saying the stock market was overdue for a selloff, that it needed a breather and that the overall trend is "constructive."

Over the week, the Dow rose 2.31 points to 2,104.02. Friday's volume of 343.92 million shares on the New York Stock Exchange, attributed to moves to capture dividends and the quarterly "triple-witching hour," was the busiest session this year and the fifth heaviest ever. Volume averaged 201.64 million shares a day.

The NYSE composite index was off 0.05 at 152.84; the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 0.67 to 386.92; and the American Stock Exchange market value index fell 3.63 to 305.70.

Alfred Goldman, director of technical market analysis at A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis, cautioned that he is both "amazed and chagrined at how quickly pessimism has turned to optimism about everything."

A better-than-expected trade deficit report, which heartened investors because both imports and exports had declined in April, should have been tempered with caution over factory utilization, which edged up beyond expectations in May, Goldman said.

The implication is that booming business could result in shortages of some goods and price increases to compensate.

Still, investors hot to perpetuate the "summer" rally are tossing off concerns about an overheated economy.

Grain Rally Stalls As Skittish Market Takes Breather

By DAVID DISHNEAU
Associated Press Writer

The drought-driven rally in most grain and soybean futures markets stalled Friday as scattered showers forced skittish traders to pause for a look at reality, analysts said.

Prices yoyoed on the Chicago Board of Trade but finished mixed with only oat futures continuing the sharply higher trend established earlier in the week.

On other exchanges, precious metals futures fell sharply; livestock and meat futures were mixed; energy futures slipped; and stock-index futures retreated.

"This thing has more lives than a cat. It kept coming back and coming back," Victor Lespinasse, a trader with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said of the grain market's erratic performance.

Reports of scattered showers in the Farm Belt and expectations for more rain dampened the buying enthusiam that has driven grain and soybean futures prices up sharply this month. But the market's resilience suggested prices could skyrocket again next week if the weekend is dry and meteorologists continue to foresee drought conditions, analysts said.

Soybeans opened lower, climbed higher, fell sharply, then came back to settle mixed for the session but substantially below the 15-year high of $10.99½ a bushel reached Thursday. Corn futures followed a similar path.

"It's a particularly sensitive time right now as far as the market is concerned," said Ted Mao, grain specialist with Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. in Chicago.

"The crop is still under stress but traders are trying to answer the question, 'Has this recent runup in price discounted a lot of the potential damage or is there a lot more discounting that has to take place?' And that will be answered early next week."

Wheat finished slightly higher and 1988 oat futures, which reached record highs earlier this week, soared their daily limit for the fifth consecutive session on reports of severe, irreversible crop damage.

Wheat settled 2¾ cents lower to 6 cents higher with the contract for delivery in July at $3.80½ a bushel; corn was 5½ cents lower to 2½ cents higher with July at $3.42½ a bushel; oats were 6 cents lower to 15 cents higher with July at $3.63 a bushel; soybeans were 10 cents lower to 10 cents higher with July at $10.29½ a bushel.

Precious metals futures fell sharply on New York's Commodity Exchange in response to the dollar's strong gains against other currencies.

A stronger dollar is perceived as reducing the potential for inflation, analysts said. A variety of government reports issued this week indicating only modest growth in the economy also helped cool inflation fears.

Precious metals, which are perceived as an investment hedge against inflation, tend to rise and fall with inflationary expectations.

"The markets are feeling that maybe the economy is not overheating and that's helped to reduce concerns about inflation," said Craig Sloane, a metals analyst with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. in New York.

Gold settled $4.70 to $6.60 lower with August at $446 a troy ounce; silver was 17.5 cents to 18.1 cents lower with July at $6.81 a troy ounce.

Copper was 1.55 cents to 4.60 cents lower with July at $1.045 a pound.

The steadying grain futures boosted cattle futures on ideas that feed prices may not rise high enough to force as much herd-thinning as had been feared, said Thomas Morgan, president of Sterling Research Corp. in Arlington Heights, Ill.

TWO OF 6,000 — Falkland resident Tommy Peaden displays two of the many sharks' teeth he has been collecting since he was a teenager. These teeth are from the ancestor of a great white shark, ECU paleontologist Dr. Scott Snyder says. (Photos By Lewis Lawrence)

Marine Fossils Locally Gathered

Falkland Man Has Quality Collection

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FALKLAND — Tommy Peaden has been collecting sharks' teeth and other prehistoric marine animal fossils since he was a young teenager. And East Carolina University paleontologist Dr. Scott Snyder said the Falkland resident has assembled one of the highest quality individual collections he has ever seen.

DADDY'S HELPER — T.J. Peaden finds fascinating anything his father does, including digging for fossils and examining them in the collection room of their house in Falkland.

"What Peaden has is comparable to collections I've seen come out of the Texasgulf Quarry at Aurora," Snyder said. "And when you contrast his unassuming little collection locality with that giant hole and the equipment used there, what he has done becomes even more impressive. It shows what a person with avid interest and a keen eye can accomplish."

Peaden has about 6,000 sharks' teeth of many ages and varieties and a selection of whale teeth and bone including vertebrae, skull fragments, and elements of the inner ear, Snyder said.

"What he has looks like it came from the bottom of the geologic unit known as the Yorktown Formation. What's now been named the Yorktown Sea covered the Coastal Plain four and a half to five million years ago," Snyder said. "At Aurora, it's possible to dig down to the level that Peaden's collection comes from. His major collection site is 60-70 miles to the west of Aurora and much of the sediment that's remained at Aurora isn't present at his site.

Snyder further explained, though, that Peaden has many teeth and bones from vastly different periods of time because these eroded out of other sediments. "What he's found naturally exposed," he said, "is a lag deposit. For some reason, material from a fairly large section of the sea, by wave or current action, was congregated in that area over millions of years.

One reason Snyder is able to determine that Peaden's collection is from the bottom of the Yorktown Formation is that he has some extremely large teeth from an ancestor of today's great white shark, believed to have lived nearly five million years ago.

Both Peaden and Snyder declined to disclose the exact location of the site where Peaden has found most of the items in his collection. While this is an extremely abundant one, Snyder said that other collection sites are available in the Coastal Plain, many along streambeds. He said interesting finds have been made in Green Mill Run, which flows through Greenville.

The 34-year-old Peaden has been a collector for as long as he can remember. He likes nothing better than to take a bucket and a shovel and go exploring. His mother, Joyce Peaden of Falkland, says he's been known to spend 10-12 hours at his favorite collection site. Now he often takes his son, T.J., almost three, along. "T.J. seems like he's going to love exploring and collecting as much as I do," he said. "That sure makes me happy."

In addition to his prehistoric marine items, Peaden has a large collection of Tuscarora Indian arrowheads and other artifacts, found mostly in newly plowed fields in Pitt and nearby counties. In a room of his house devoted entirely to his collections, he also displays old soft drink bottles, old soft drink advertisement calendars and thermometers, old automobile license plates, old books, and many others of his treasures.

While he was attending East Carolina University several years ago, he shared with local geologists and archaeologistsinformation about his sharks' teeth and arrowheads. He continues to learn about items in his collections and what they represent through self-initiated study.

From Snyder, he's learned that the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., will later this year publish the third in a series on fossils collected from the Texasgulf Quarry locality. The first two, already published, deal mostly with invertebrates — and sediments. But Peaden expects to find the third volume exciting because it focuses on vertebrates and is expected to have many color plates of prehistoric sharks, whales, seals, birds and other animal life. Anyone wishing to learn how to obtain a copy once it's published may write Department of Paleobiology, National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. 20560.

Another book that Snyder recommends is "Fossil Sharks: A Pictorial Review" by Gerard Case. He said he bought his copy at the Hampton Mariner's Museum in Beaufort.

Erie Mills Was A Sure Shot For The Met

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Opera was so certain about soprano Erie Mills that it offered the lyric-coloratura a contract for its performances in Japan before she made her actual Met debut last Thanksgiving as Blondchen in Mozart's "The Abduction From the Seraglio."

In Japan, where ticket prices run as high as $265 for an opera performance, she sang Olympia, the wind-up doll, in "The Tales of Hoffmann," during the Met's May 25-June 10 tour. She also was standby for Susanna in "The Marriage of Figaro." She'll sing both roles at the Met in the 1989-90 season.

Miss Mills stands 5 feet 2, and her voice is light, perfect for such parts as Blondchen and Adele in "Die Fledermaus," which she will also sing at the Met next season.

"It helps that my voice goes with my small size," she says. "Tenors always love me because I'm short. They can usually tower over me."

Her prediction is that her voice won't get a lot heavier as she gets older and her repertoire will stay about the same.

"I have decided there should be four, five or six roles that i do as well or better than anybody else," she says. "I want to become known in the international scene for them."

She made that decision at her first big job at the Chicago Lyric Opera in 1979.

"Alfredo Kraus was singing 'Faust,' opening the season," she recalled. "I thought, 'This guy is incredible.' I think he was in his 50s.

"Every time the Chicago Lyric did 'Rigoletto' they wanted him for the Duke. If they couldn't get him, they'd take Pavarotti. They called him first for 'Werther' and 'Faust.' I thought, 'That's how I want to be, knowing what I do well and doing it very well.'

"When they cast Zerbinetta (in 'Ariadne auf Naxos'), Sophie (in 'Der Rosenkavalier'), 'The Daughter of the Regiment' or Susanna, I want them to think of me. It has taken a while to find out what those roles are." She made her Vienna State Opera debut last September as Zerbinetta.

Miss Mills, a native of Granite City, Ill., sang art songs at the College of Wooster and thought she wanted to be another Elly Ameling, the Dutch lieder singer. "Then my practical self took over," she said. "I realized you don't make a living in this country singing recitals. You have to make it in opera."

The summer of 1977, after she received a master's degree from the University of Illinois, she was an apprentice at the Lake George, N.Y., Opera Festival. Later, she went to the Houston Grand Opera's studio, and in 1979 she sang "The Daughter of the Regiment" in the Kennedy Center Summer Opera.

Until her Met debut last November, her biggest break was joining the New York City Opera in 1982 and triumphing in Bernstein's "Candide." She's often asked to sing the coloratura "Glitter and Be Gay" from "Candide" at benefits.

Many opera stars have "crossed over" by performing popular music; Miss Mills did it the other way. She paid for college by singing in musical comedies at the outdoor St. Louis Municipal Opera for six summers, performed in the 1985 "Follies" concert and record and did "Naughty Baby" on the 1987 TV George Gershwin tribute. Now, she seldom sings popular music but includes Gershwin, Irving Berlin and Cole Porter songs as recital encores.

The soprano and physicist Thomas Rescigno will mark their second wedding anniversary June 24 with her in Japan and him in Pleasanton, Calif.

When he wondered how he could send a gift, she says, "I told him he was going to get hit with my pearl bill."

Rescigno is from a family long connected with music. His brother, Joseph, heads the Florentine Opera in Milwaukee, where Miss Mills sang "The Ballad of Baby Doe" this season, and his uncle, Nicola, heads the Dallas Opera, where she'll debut in the 1990-91 season.

Her first name comes from her great-grandmother whose name, it was discovered when Miss Mills was an infant, was Arie, not Erie. Her name was left Erie but her mother pronounces it Arie.

Many Mills and Rescigno family members attended her Met debut on Thanksgiving night.

"Normally I claim I don't sing as well on opening night as I do at dress rehearsal," the artist said. "That night I sang better on opening than I had at dress rehearsal. It thrilled me no end.

"I must be becoming an artist because lately dress rehearsals haven't been as good as opening performances."

After the Met tour in Japan and a week's vacation in Hong Kong with her husband, Miss Mills will sing this summer with the New York City Opera in a new production of "The Barber of Seville" and in "Lucia di Lammermoor" for the first time in New York.

Her goal these days is to spend more time at home.

"I'm married and have a home life," she said. "I enjoy that. I don't know how some singers go 53 weeks a year. I think even if I didn't have a husband I wouldn't do that. But living alone does make it less neat to stay at home. I'd say, 'I might as well be working.' I did that 10 years before I got married."

THE ARTIST — Soprano opera singer Erie Mills was offered a contract for performances in Japan before she made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera in New York. She predicts that her voice will not get a lot heavier as she gets older and her repertoire will stay about the same. (AP Laserphoto)

Couple Marries In Cove City Church

MRS. PESZKO

COVE CITY — Lisa Arleen Heath of Cove City and James Matthew Peszko of Greensboro were united in marriage Saturday in a 1 p.m. ceremony at the Cove Creek Original Free Will Baptist Church, Cove City. The Rev. Calvin A. Heath conducted the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh O. Heath Jr. of Cove City. Parents of the bridegroom are Mrs. and Mrs. Henry T. Peszko of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral-length train of bridal satin with schliffli embroidery and sposabella lace. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline, juliet sleeves and a basque waist apliqued with sposabella lace motifs encrusted with pearls and sequins. Schliffli-embroidered motifs appliqued the front of the skirt and sposabella lace motifs cascaded from the waist to the hemline. Garlands of scalloped schiffli embroidery bordered the hemline of the gown. The bride chose a waltz-length veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge flowing from a bandeau of rosettes and pearls.

Rhonda Weldin of Cove City attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Esther Davis of New Bern, aunt of the bride; Lorrie Hickok of New Bern, Sherry Riggs of Cove City, Aggie Burgess of Stone Mountain, Ga., cousin of the bride, andKathy Haislip and Debra McCoy, both of Cove City. The attendants each wore a romantic, tea-lengh lace dress with a handkerchief hemline falling from the close-fitted bodice. The dress featured a sweetheart neckline, a basque waistline and taffeta bows accented the elasticized shoulders of the handkerchief sleeves.

Mr. Peszko attended his son as best man. Ushers were Raymond Peszko of Portsmouth, Va., Steven Peszko of Alpharetta, Ga., and Joseph Peszko of Greenville, all brothers of the bridegroom.

Music for the ceremony was provided by organist Julia Bircher and soloists Rebecca Hill and Esther Davis.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. A rehearsal dinner, given by the bridegroom's parents, family and friends of the bride and bridegroom, was held at the Cove City Masonic Lodge, Cove City. Prior to the wedding several parties were given by family and friends.

The bridegroom graduated from Pitt Community College and the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and is employed with Quality Electronic Services, Inc., Greensboro. The bride attended Mount Olive College and East Carolina University. She is employed with the West Craven Middle School, New Bern.

Engagement Announced

Emma and Raymond Bell of Goldsboro announce the engagement of their daughter, Bonita, to Donald White, son of Mr. and Mrs. William White of Greenville. A July 2 wedding is planned.

Miss Watson, Mr. Richards Speak Vows

Eleanor Gail Watson of Kinston and John Thomas Richards Jr. of Goldsboro were united in marriage Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in St. Therese Catholic Church in Wrightsville Beach. The Revs. Kenneth Parker and Jerry Sherba conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brockett Watson of Wilmington. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John Thomas Richards Sr. of Greenville.

The bridegroom's father attended as best man. Ushers were Chip Green of Florida; Joe Murtagh of New York; Kevin Richards of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom; Mike Triau of Virginia; Bill Watson of Wilmington, brother of the bride; Jack Watson Jr. of Wilmington, brother of the bride, and Doug McMillan of Raleigh.

The bride is employed by the Kinston City Schools while the bridegroom is employed as the aquatics supervisor at the Family "Y" in Goldsboro.

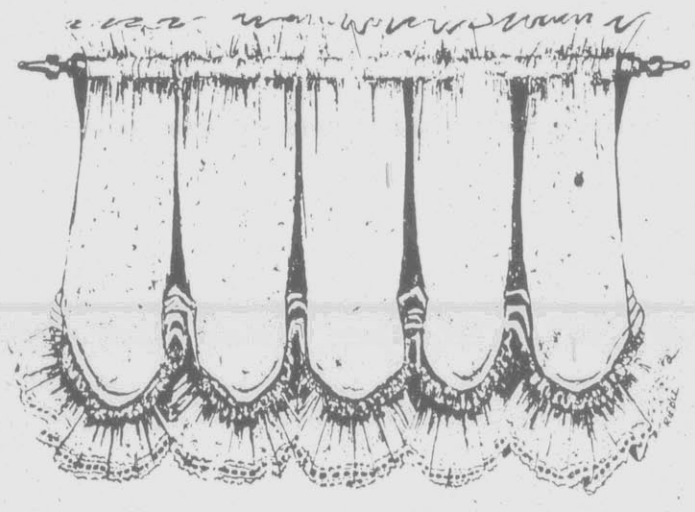

After a wedding trip to Emerald Isle, the couple will reside in Kinston.

Clock Fights Calendar

More people will get married this month than any other month during the year.

Many of these ceremonies will be performed to silence the ticking of what has become known as the bride's biological clock. This new timepiece of the '80s supposedly features an alarm that one day goes off unexpectedly like the buzzer on "Jeopardy," signifying that a woman's child-bearing years are over.

As Yogi Berra said, "It isn't over till it's over." Josimar Carnauba of Brazil had 38 children, the last one when she was 54 years old. An American, Ruth Kistler, gave birth to a daughter in 1946, when she was 57 years and 129 days old. If you're really concerned with having a big family in a limited amount of time, you can fast-forward like Mrs. Ormsby of Chicago, who gave birth to 14 children in seven years, including a set of quadruplets born in 1901.

I was in a supermarket recently when a woman with two children was patiently explaining to her toddler in the cart why he must stop teething on a package of raw hamburger. As she was doing this, an older child wrapped her body around a bubble gum machine and screamed, "Gimmee, gimmee." When the mother took the hamburger out of the hands of the child in the cart, he angrily kicked his feet, making connection with a pyramid of oranges and scattering them all over the floor. She looked at me and said, "I'm glad I had them when I was older. I couldn't have handled this in my 20s."

There is no doubt in my mind she believed this. She figures she has triumphed over the biological clock and is home free. She doesn't know yet about the biological calendar.

At Wits End

Let us suppose a woman has her first child at the age of 45. When her son outgrows naps, she will start taking hers. When the kid is cast as a bad tooth in a dental hygiene musical at school, she will be sitting in the audience fighting hot flashes. When he is ready for his temporary driving permit at age 15, she will be a 60-year-old woman popping estrogen and trying to figure out if her deafness is caused by the car radio or just natural evolution. When she should tell him about sex, she will have to speak from notes. When she goes to bed, he will be going out, and when she is getting up, he will be coming in. His acceptance to college and her Social Security check will arrive on the same day.

If he marries at the same age she did, she'll be 88 and probably won't be able to stay up for the reception. And baby-sitting at 92? Think about it.

As one of my friends said, "I loved everything about motherhood -- the exhilaration, the warmth, the wondrous miracle that grew inside me -- but I'm glad I did it early and got it over with."

Couple Marries Saturday

MRS. SNEED

The First Presbyterian Church was the setting of the wedding of Lori Renee Little and David Archibald Sneed. The double-ring candlelight ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Daniel Wilkers at 7 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Leon Little and Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson Sneed, all of Greenville, are parents of the couple.

The bride was escorted by her father. She wore a white formal-length gown of taffeta, alencon lace, seed pearls and sequins. The bateau neckline was scalloped in lace and the bodice was covered in seed pearls and alencon lace extending into a basque waist with an A-line skirt edged in lace. Covered buttons accented the V back and the train was enhanced by taffeta bows with pearls. Her iridescent headband was fashioned with a floral spray and pearls at the side while the back featured a fan extending into a cathedral-length veil with pearl sprinkles. She carried a cascade bouquet of white calla lilies, freesia, roses and gerbera daisies on a Bible, a gift from her great aunt.

The maid of honor was Marsha Leigh Tart of Raleigh. Bridesmaids were LuAnne O'Bannon of Alexandria, Va., Rebecca Hayes Warren of Chapel Hill, Deonna Britt Asher and Mary Katherine Barnes, both of Raleigh, Tracy Scott Garris, Jennifer J. Little, sister-in-law of the bride, and Nancy Kennon Sneed, sister of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

The attendants wore black matte taffeta floor-length gowns. The princess bodices had sweetheart necklines with black and white shoulders and basque waistlines. Each carried a cascade bouquet of white calla lilies and gerbera daisies accented with pink nerine.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were John G. Thomas of High Point, E. Spencer Mayo of Newport News, Va., C. Scott Wilson of Charlotte, Tommie Little Jr. of Greenville, brother of the bride, Steven M. Holloman, G. Bailey Anderson, James C. Whitehurst Jr., William S. Bost III, E. Graham Johnson III and William T. Sneed Jr., brother of the bridegroom, all of Raleigh.

Wedding music was presented by Dr. E. Robert Irwin, organist, Mrs. Robert Thurber, pianist, and Mrs. William Sneed Jr., sister-in-law of the bridegroom, vocalist.

A reception was held at the Sheraton after the ceremony. Music was provided by the Unicorns.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom Friday night at the Sheraton. A dance followed given by friends of the bridal couple. Prior to the wedding several parties were given for the bridal couple.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College and the University of North Carolina. The bridegroom graduated from N.C. State University and is vice president of Anne's Temporaries.

After a wedding trip to Antigua, the couple will live in Greenville.

Angela Harris Is Saturday Bride

Angela Jean Harris and Michael Allen Gardner were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Maranatha Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Alvis Harris, father of the bride, conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are the Rev. and Mrs. Alvis Harris. The bridegroom is the son of Minnie Gardner.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Tim Harris, chose a floor-length gown of chantilly-type lace, schliffli embroidery and satin bows. The beaded embroidered yoke front was accented with baby ruffles. The bishop sleeves were of chantilly-type lace. A natural waistline flowed to a skirt trimmed with ruffles scalloping up into bow pickups. The skirt had a cathedral-length train also with chantilly type lace. Her headpiece was a wreath of silk flowers with seed pearls dispersed around the wreath extending into a two-tier illusion veil. She carried a mixed bouquet of bridal pink and white roses, white daisies, baby's breath and greenery tied with pink and white satin streamers.

Janet Dilda of Winterville, sister of the bride, attended as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Alicia Harris, sister-in-law of the bride, Kathy Harris and Joanna Majette, all of Greenville. They wore long dresses made of pink taffeta. Each featured a scooped neckline trimmed with lace and taffeta bows at the neckline and puffed sleeves. The dresses were designed with fitted bodices and gathered skirts. Each carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations, fugi mums, larksburgh, daisies, and baby's breath tied with satin ribbons and streamers.

The flower girl, Marcie Dilda of Winterville, niece of the bride, wore a dress identical to those of the bridesmaids and carried a basket of mixed flowers tied with ribbons and streamers.

S.C. Griffin of Williamston assisted the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Milton Dilda of Winterville, brother-in-law of the bride, Kenneth Mills of Winterville, and Scott Pollard of Greenville.

The ring bearer of Greenville, cousin of the bride.

The music program was provided by organist Carolyn Garris and soloists Johnny Jones and Russell Jones. Music selections included "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Wedding Song."

A reception, given by the bride's family, was held in the church fellowship hall. An after-rehearsal party was given by Mr. and Mrs. S.C. Griffin in the church fellowship hall.

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and Pitt Community College and is employed at Overton's Sporting Goods. The bridegroom graduated from J.H. Rose High School and is employed by Joe Pecheles Volkswagon.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

The wedding ceremony of Lisa Carol Barnes and Edward Greyton Flanagan took place Saturday at 7 p.m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greenville.

Parents of the couple are Margaret Barnes Coston of Lake Gaston and the late James Herbert Barnes and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Graham Flanagan of Greenville.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Lawrence P. Houston Jr.

Linda Barnes Hall of Powder Springs, Ga., was honor attendant for her sister. Nancy Lucas of Greensboro, Sandra Davis of Raleigh, and Muriel Flanagan of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

Brian Kilcoyne of Milwaukee, Wisc. was best man. Ushers were Alan Jones, Joseph Goodson and Fred Matney, all of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Hal Barnes. She wore a floor-length gown with a chapel train of traditional bridal satin with beaded Venise lace. The fitted bodice featured a yoke neckline, Juliet pouf sleeves and drop basque waistline. Garlands of seed pearls outlined the yoke neck and trimmed the sleeves. Silk Venise lace motifs etched with pearls appliqued the bouffant skirt. She wore a tiered veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge attached to a pearl wreath accented with silk flowers and petals at the crown. She carried a cascade bouquet of white tulips, freesia, lilac and foliage.

The attendants wore berries fille taffeta tea-length dresses styled with fitted bodices, V necklines, gathered skirts and petal sleeves accented with a fabric rosette on the shoulder and elongated waist. They carried bouquets of tulips, gerberas and freesia accented with greenery and ribbons.

A reception was held in the church parlor after the ceremony. Angel Melvin of Greenville served cake and Shirley Pierce of Rocky Mount poured punch.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of N.C. Wesleyan College and received a M.B.A. from East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of St. Andrews College and Pitt Community College. Both are employed by North American Fiberglass Corp.

The parents of the bridegroom gave a rehearsal dinner at the Greenville Country Club. An after-rehearsal party was given by Mr., and Mrs. Hal Waddell and Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor. A wedding brunch and a cocktail party were also given for the bridal couple.

Double-Ring Vows Said

MRS. HENSON

King's Cross Roads Free Will Baptist Church near Fountain was the setting for the wedding of Lisa Corbett Allen of Beaufort and Eric Mark Henson of Raleigh. The double-ring ceremony was conducted Saturday at 2 p.m. by the Rev. Bruce Jones.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Allen Sr. of Greenville. Parents of bridegroom are Joanne Henson of Naperville, Ill, and the late William Henson.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride chose a formal gown of white crystal organza. The princess bodice featured a sweetheart neckline adorned with seed pearls and sequins. The dropped waistline was outlined by embroidered schliffli lace and the shortened pouffed sleeves were enhanced with floral embroidery and sproys of pearls. The flowing organza skirt and cathedral train featured hand cut-outs of lace with a cloud of ruffles outlining the train. Her headpiece was a band of silk flowers interspersed with sprays of pearls. Her fingertip veil was accented by a small pipe-edged pouf. She carried a bouquet of pink bridal roses and pink sweetheart roses interspersed with baby's breath, featuring white lace ribbons and showers of picot ribbon.

Linda Sawyer of Ayden, sister of the bride, attended as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Becky Godley of Winterville, sister of the bride, Susan Stephenson of Suffolk, Va., niece of the bride; Tammy Lineberry of Winston-Salem, Loretta Grantham of West Palm Beach, Fla.. Kathy Allen of Winterville, niece of the bride, and Melinda Sawyer of Ayden, niece of the bride, were junior bridesmaids.

The matron of honor wore a daphne rose tea-length dress of satin with a lace overlay. The sweetheart neckline and basque waist with satin bow in the back accented the bodice. The shortened sleeves were gathered along the sides. The attendants wore pink satin dresses styled identical to that of the matron of honor. Each carried long-stemmed white carnations with pink baby's breath and ribbons.

The ring bearers were David Vrbenec of Aurora, Ill., nephew of the bridegroom, and Kenneth Allen III of Winterville, nephew of the bride.

Pianist Judy Jones and soloists Emerson Hobgood and Judy Jones provided a music program. Selections included "The Wedding Song," "The Wedding Prayer" and "Let It Be Me."

A reception given by the bride's parents was held immediately following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. An after-rehearsal dinner, hosted by the bridegroom's mother, was held at the Sheraton.

The bridegroom graduated from Waubonsie Valley High School, Aurora, Ill, and served eight years in the United States Marine Corps. He is employed by Millidyne of Raleigh. The bride graduated from D.H. Conley High School in Greenville and Campbell University. She is employed by Atlantic Elementary School in Atlantic.

After a cruise to the Bahamas, the couple will reside in Raleigh.

Couple Marries On Saturday

MRS. PRICE

LuAnne Dixon of Greenville and David James Price of Robersonville were united in marriage Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in the Rainbow United Methodist Church in Snow Hill. The Rev. Ray Broadwell conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Dixon of Snow Hill. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M.B. Price of Robersonville and the late Christine James Price.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a white satin floor-length gown with a high transparent neckline and long fitted sleeves. The bodice and sleeves were adorned with pearls and sequins. The gown featured a basque waist with a full skirt flowing to a cathedral-length train trimmed in scalloped schliffle lace. Her veil was a scalloped pearl and crystal crown attached to a rolled-edge fingertip veil of silk illusion. A Dior bow accented the back.

Donna Mackie Blackmon of Fayetteville attended the bride as maid of honor. Kathy Blackmon Cobb of Angier was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Stacey Hudson of Greenville, Phyllis Joyner of Rocky Mount, and Patsy Lee of Charlotte. The attendants wore tea-length gowns of hot pink taffeta with close-fitting dropped-waist bodices and flared skirts and puffed sleeves. Their bouquets were of mixed spring flowers tied with ribbons.

The bridegroom's father assisted as best man. Ushers were William Dixon of Raleigh, brother of the bride; Edward Price of Williamston, brother of the bridegroom; Jerry Price of Tarboro, brother of the bridegroom; Randy C. Baker of Greenville, and J. Daniel Bullock of Gold Point.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, was held at the church fellowship hall. Several miscellaneous showers and luncheons were held in honor of the couple.

The bride attended East Caroling University and is employed by Ellen's Hallmark Shop in Greenville. The bridegroom attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is employed by John C. Proctor and Co. CPA's in Greenville.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple will make their home in Greenville.

Birth

Rockel

Born to Vincent Fred Rockel III and Lysa Ann Hieber, 210 S. Pitt St., a son, Ian Kenneth, on June 14, 1988, in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Conley

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Howard Conley, 46 University Condo, a daughter, Chelsey Renee, on June 14, 1988, in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Police Officer Gives Program

"Lady Protect Yourself" was the topic of a talk given by James Tripp at the meeting of the Pirate Charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association. He is a member of the Greenville Police Department.

"All too often women fall victims to crimes that they could easily have prevented by taking simple precautions," he said.

Maxine Anderson, chairman of the education committee, introduced Tammy Lynn Beachman, recipient of the chapter's 1988 scholarship award.

Through the years a total of $2,150 has been awarded in local scholarships at East Carolina University and Pitt Community College by the chapter. The money was raised by members through fund raising efforts to help other women wishing to further their education.

ABWA has the Stephen Bufton Memorial Educational Fund Scholarship on the national level. The local chapter has sponsored three recipients of this scholarship from this area.

Wedding Vows Performed Saturday

WHITAKERS — Angela M. Evans of Greenville and Willie D. Everett of Winston-Salem were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Red Hill Baptist Church. The Revs. William Davis and Gene Murphy presided over the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Evans of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Everett of Roper.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She chose a formal white crystal organza gown featuring a sabrina neckline and Elizabethan sleeves enhanced by beaded floral schliffli embroidery. The basque waist was accented by floral schliffli embroidered lace and featured a V-back. The full skirt was decorated by schliffli embroidered motifs studded with sequins and pearls and the cathedral-length train fell from a bustle bow and cascaded into a waterfall of baby ruffles. The bride wore a fingertip-length veil of illusion fell from a V-wreath of silk flowers and pearl peps.

Monica Dalton of Southern Pines attended the bride as maid of honor while Beverly Horry of Huber Heights, Ohio. Bridesmaids were Jacqueline Williams of Whitakers, sister of the bride; Barbara Hines of Greenville, sister of the bride; Sharon Evans of Raleigh, sister-in-law of the bride; Toni Spruill of Durham, cousin of the bride; Debbie Taylor of Durham, and Sandra Everett of Roper, sister of the bridegroom. The maid and matron of honor wore pink tea-length satin gowns featuring fitted bodices and V necklines. The back of the dress was accented with a bow across the shoulders. They carried pink stemmed roses accented with greenery and satin ribbons. The attendants wore similar gowns in orchid and carried pink stemmed roses with greenery and ribbons.

Joseph Everett of Roper, brother of the bridegroom, attended as best man. Ushers were Milas Kelly of Goldsboro, Nokomis Evans of Raleigh, brother of the bride; Kirby Evans and Donald Evans of Whitakers, brothers of the bride; Randy Dulin of Winston-Salem, Dwayne Hayes of Greensboro, and Carl Purcell of Springfield, Va. Quinton Arnold of Roper, nephew of the bridegroom, was honorary usher.

MRS. EVERETT

Vows Exchanged Saturday

St. James United Methodist Church provided the setting for the double-ring ceremony of Jacqueline Rahe Jensen and Gregory Wayne Sullivan, both of Greenville. The Rev. Caswell Shaw officiated the 2 p.m. ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Jack Eugene Jensen and Dorothy Ann Jensen, and Mr. and Mrs. James Graham Sullivan, all of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of heavy white satin over peau de soie designed with a semi-sweetheart neckline outlined in re-embroidered Alencon lace beaded with pearls and sequins. The bodice featured beaded Alencon lace and hand-stitched motifs fitting gracefully to the waistline tapering to a basque waistline fashion. Leg-O-Mutton sleeves of satin and imported netting embellished with pearls, sequins, and Alencon lace were featured on the gown. The softly flared satin skirt and attached semi-cathedral length train were bordered in beaded Alencon lace. Appliques of Alencon lace beaded with pearls, and sequins were scattered throughout the train. She carried a bouquet of tulips, lillies, irises and miniature pink carnations.

Christina L. Jensen attended her sister as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Becky Sullivan, sister of the bridegroom; Lynn Sullivan, cousin of the bridegroom; Tracye O'Bannon, Laura Cox, and Nancy Battle VanNortwick, all of Greenville. The attendants wore teal-green floor length gowns and carried flowers similar to those of the bride.

Cerissa Nicole Masotti of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. She wore a long pale pink dress and carried a basket of flowers.

The bridegroom's father attended as best man. Ushers were Kevin O'Neal of Athens, Ga., cousin of the bridegroom; Don Sullivan, brother of the bridegroom, Neil Thompson, Britt Watson and Lester Sullivan, cousin of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

The music program was provided by Frances Cain and Jane Vaughn with special music selections such as "The Lord's Prayer," "The Wedding Song," and "Household of Faith."

A reception was held at the Greenville Country Club. A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the bridegroom's parents, was held at the King and Queen Restaurant. Prior to the wedding, several parties were given in honor of the couple.

Both the bride and bridegroom graduated from J.H. Rose High School and are now attending East Carolina University. The bridegroom is employed with John C. Proctor and Co. The bride is employed by Drs. Donald R. Patrick and Donald L. Hardee.

MRS. SULLIVAN

After a wedding trip to Hawaii and California, the couple will reside in Greenville.

All Aren't Really Nurses

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Regarding unprofessional remarks made to patients, and violations of privacy by so-called "office nurses," please keep in mind, Abby, that many of these workers are not registered nurses — they are just called so by either themselves or the physicians for whom they work.

An education in nursing does not automatically guarantee tact, but we nurses do learn subtle ways of posing embarrassing questions to patients.

A former nursing instructor of mine resented the free use of the title "nurse" for anyone wearing white in a doctor's office, so she got her point across by merely asking, "And from what school of nursing did you graduate?" — M.V., R.N., B.S.N., ALBERTSON, N.Y.

DEAR M.V.: Thanks for the important reminder: All that glitters is not gold, and all who say, "Yes, Doctor," are not nurses.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I am writing to ask you a question that most people would perceive as stupid, but here goes: Should I offer to show a man who is in his late 20s the correct way to hold his knife and fork while cutting meat?

He is married, and a fairly successful salesman with good manners, but when he cuts meat, he makes a "fist" of his left hand and holds the fork straight up — like a 4-year-old child.

Others have noticed it, and I'm amazed that no one has called this to his attention. Should I? — TEMPTED

DEAR TEMPTED: How well do you know him? Is he a close friend? A casual acquaintance? A relative? Or perhaps a co-worker? Unless you are absolutely certain that he would welcome your instructions, back off.

This advice holds true for those who are tempted to offer unsolicited but well-intended advice, such as: "You should do something about that wart (or mole) on your face" or, "Replace that missing tooth in front" or, "Get a nose job" or, "Lose some weight."

However, it would be an act of kindness quietly to let a person know there's a piece of broccoli on his tooth, or a piece of toilet tissue clinging to his left shoe or his zipper is open.

NAACP Group Wants Statue Of General Forrest Removed

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Frozen in gleaming bronze, the larger-than-life figure of Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest sits on horseback above his grave and frowns across downtown traffic with the same unyielding stare that sent his Confederate calvary thundering into battle.

But the general's metal gaze is matched by the hard looks of detractors who want his statue, and his bones, moved somewhere else.

"This statue is odious to at least half of this community," said Maxine Smith, executive secretary of the Memphis branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

For more than 80 years, the 9,500-pound monument bought by private donations has stood in Forrest Park, a block-square patch of trees and shrubs near downtown Memphis. The general's remains were moved to the park from his original grave in historic Elmwood Cemetery, and his wife is buried beside him.

A soldier of uncommon ability, Forrest was also probably a founder of the Klu Klux Klan, and his statue has attracted minor protests over the years.

Now, it's been drawn into a squabble over black enrollment at the University of Tennessee, Memphis, a state school for doctors, nurses and other health professionals.

Forrest Park belongs to the city but was recently "adopted" by the university which borders it on three sides.

"We certainly don't feel this statue is appropriate for a state university, particularly when we have a very strenuous effort to remove UT from the bottom ranks of similar universities in accepting, graduating and educating blacks," Mrs. Smith said.

The university recently graduated 459 students from its seven schools, and of the 159 medical school graduates, four were black.

Chancellor James Hunt said the university has been trying for several years to recruit more minorities.

Blacks represented 3.2 percent of the university's student body in 1983, but that will reach 7.5 percent if all accepted students enroll next year, Hunt said.

A program recently scheduled at Forrest Park to honor the university's outgoing president was canceled because of complaints over the general's statue, but Hunt said the Forrest matter will have to be settled by the city.

"This is not a university issue," he said.

The university took over the park so it could be better maintained and could be patrolled by campus police, he said.

Mrs. Smith said the NAACP has written to the Memphis mayor and the city council asking for the statue to be moved. Political pressure will be applied if the request is denied, she said, declining to go into detail.

"We'll have to decide what we'll do next," she said.

Since the general's remains were moved to the park from his original grave, moving them again would not be a serious problem, Mrs. Smith said.

"Anybody who wants the general can have him," she said.

Memphis' population is just under 50 percent black, but Bob Brame, the city's park director, said he doesn't expect an outpouring of support for moving the statue.

"The public sentiment is let's move on to a bigger issue," he said.

Among their complaints, critics accuse Forrest of allowing a massacre at Fort Pillow, Tenn., in which Union soldiers, many of them black, were slain while trying to surrender.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

HOW MUCH DOES FURNITURE COST?

One way to figure out how much various pieces of furniture really cost is to use the following formula:

Take the particular piece of furniture you're thinking about, then estimate how many years it will reasonably last and how many years you expect to use it--and divide the number of years into the price.

That will give you a cost-per-year--and the result will probably surprise you.

A piece of furniture that you may pay, say, $500 for, and expect to use for 15 years, thus has a cost-per-year of only about $33, and makes quality furniture one of the real bargains around today.

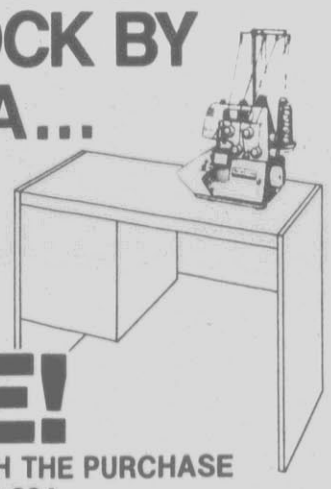

My point in bringing this formula to you is to indicate an often overlooked point about furniture. Quality furniture is one of those things that lasts and gives you repeated value--yet while that is an advantage, it also makes it very important that you buy the right furniture in the first place.

We're here to give you selection, quality and value, and help you buy furniture that you will be happy with for a long time.

We invite you to come in and view our lineup of quality brands including Century, Statton, Council, White and Sherrill.

Pests Don't Have to Drive Homeowners Buggy

By IRENE KRAFT
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Walt Disney and Saturday morning cartoons have done wonders for the image of house mice. Facing almost insurmountable odds in their battle against wicked cats, these irresistible creatures win the sentiments of viewers who can't help but hope the little darlings are not driven from their happy homes.

The truth of the matter is that off the cartoon set, mice are not so adorable, particularly when their happy homes happen to be in our homes.

And, although it's estimated that there is one rat for each person in the United States, most of us would not care to live with our allotment.

One mouse or rat alone can do a great deal of damage to a home, chewing wiring and clothing, getting into insulation, making nests in furniture and destroying valuable paintings, books and leather. In fact, up to 20 percent of fires of unknown origin may be the result of rodents gnawing through electrical wires. Their razor-sharp teeth can chew through not only food containers but even glass, cinder block, aluminum, lead and other metals.

The presence of a mouse in the house is nothing to be taken lightly. Two mice can produce 2,500 offspring within a year. Their helpless little babies are not helpless for long. Within three weeks, an offspring is capable of doing as much damage as its parents.

Even more prolific than the mouse is the cockroach, the nation's number one household pest. Under ideal food and moisture conditions, a female cockroach can produce 2 million offspring in a year.

And even more destructive than either of these are termites, which infest nearly 2 million homes, causing more than $1 billion annually in property damage.

"That's more than fires, storms and earthquakes combined," said Joel Paul, director of communications for the National Pest Control Association.

It's little wonder the sight of these household pests drives home owners and apartment dwellers buggy.

Unwillingness to cohabitate with these not-so-little nuisances is the basis of a $4 billion dollar industry — pest control. Each year Americans spend about $400 million for do-it-yourself household products, $59 million for electronic bug killers, $520 million to keep pets pest-free and nearly $3 billion for professional pest control services.

Pest control operators service 10 million (or approximately 20 to 22 percent of) American households, according to Dr. George Rambo, director of research, education and technical resources for the National Pest Control Association.

Unsanitary conditions may encourage some pests to take up residence in a home, but it's not the only criterion. "Cockroaches, rats and mice are found in some of the finest and cleanest of homes," said Rambo.

Sometimes it's out of the homeowner's control, said Paul. Household pests can be brought in with deliveries or in grocery bags, or gain entry through small, unsealed crevices in the structure, holes in screens or frequently opened doors during warm months.

Warm weather seems to literally bring household pests out of the woodwork. They attack food and other stored products, destroy homes and buildings and transmit a variety of diseases, such as salmonella, dysentery, bubonic plague, malaria and Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

"Except for those who suffer allergic reactions to insect bites, most people tend to ignore the health aspects of household pests," said Rambo.

One health problem that does concern consumers, however, is the safety of chemicals used by pest control operators, particularly in the kitchen and in areas where pets and children play.

All products used have been tested by the Environmental Protection Agency and many are the same as those sold to consumers at hardware and grocery stores, said Paul.

"By law, the professional is restricted to the directions on the label, but there is no requirement or law that says the homeowner must do this."

Most reported cases of problems with pesticides are linked to misuse by consumers, Paul added. "There's more to pest control than just indiscriminately spraying. The concern is that they (consumers) don't have the knowledge or training to know what they are doing and that they don't follow label instructions. They have a tendency to overapply, thinking if the recommended amount is good, more is better."

But more can lead to disastrous results. Paul said a Florida man, trying to rid his three-room apartment of roaches, set off nine insecticidal bombs before leaving for vacation. Unfortunately he forgot to turn off the pilot light in his stove. It ignited the concentrated fumes and blew down the walls of the apartment. One bomb would have been more than adequate to resolve the pest problem.

Rambo also has received a report of a woman who set off five insecticidal bombs in her mobile home and blew off the roof.

"We urge do-it-yourselfers to learn as much as possible about the pest, read labels carefully and call product manufacturers or county extension services with any questions they might have," said Rambo.

Some household pest problems are easily resolved with do-it-yourself treatments, but others may require the service of a professional pest control operator who's trained to identify pests, know their living habits and safely handle chemicals necessary to keep pests under control.

"The best way to control a problem is to have a knowledge of the insects or pests and use their habits against them with a minimum of chemicals," said Modrick.

"I would be leery of anyone who says a chemical treatment is absolutely safe. You really have to make sure all precautions are taken," he added.

Some chemicals may be inappropriate to use in a house with pets and toddlers, he explained. "The best attack to take is to use the least toxic material that will do the job properly and use it only where necessary."

Even if you choose to hire a professional, it doesn't mean the task is totally out of your hands. Most pest control companies believe in integrated pest management — a collaborative effort between the customer and the pest control operator in dealing with the problem.

The best efforts of a professional will do little good unless homeowners take preventive measures. The National Pest Control Association recommends that homeowners monitor moisture content of wood; check gutters for blockage; inspect screens, soffit vents, chimney seals and weep holes; try to eliminate trash piles and poor sanitation practices; examine door checks, weather seals and blocked dryer vents, and survey outside vegetation.

The area around pipes under cabinets and the cracks and crevices around baseboards can be, if not properly sealed, entry points for pests. Roaches can squeeze through a crack only 1-64 of an inch thick and mice can go through a ¼-inch opening.

Cockroaches thrive on small morsels of food and moisture. Amazingly resilient creatures, they can survive nearly a month without food, but less than two weeks without water. If you keep your home free of their food and moisture sources, they'll be discouraged from returning.

Some pests, like termites and carpenter ants, are difficult for the novice to detect. Often, by the time the homeowner suspects a problem, a great deal of damage already is done. Don't expect a problem to be resolved forever with only one treatment by a professional. Household pests will be around forever. Cockroaches are so resilient that they have survived floods, fire and famine, outer space and nuclear tests.

"Exterminating means 100 percent eradication which is, in our opinion, almost impossible," said Paul. "The more realistic approach is positive control."

On The House

By ANDY LANG

While newer faucets have cartridges and other gadgets that eliminate the need for washers, many houses still utilize faucets with washers.

These washers inevitably become worn or get chewed up one way or another, resulting in dripping that wastes water, stains sinks and tubs and is just plain annoying. To halt the drip, the washer must be replaced. It is a task which requires knowledge more than skill, which means that almost anyone can do it if he or she can follow instructions. Plumbing chores sometimes intimidate do-it-yourselfers, but this is one that can be handled without much trouble. The big warning is not to attempt this or any similar repair without first turning off the water. Once that has been done, you can take your time in acquiring the knack of changing a washer. The water usually can be shut off underneath the sink, but must be shut off at some other valve in the house if there is no shutoff at the fixture or in the case of a tub. In turning off the valve, always turn the handle clockwise.

The handle usually is held in place with a screw under the cap, which in turn is screwed on or snapped on. You can figure out quickly how to remove it. Under the handle is a packing nut, which must be unloosened, turning the nut counterclockwise. That's a good thing to remember in all do-it-yourself projects. With rare exceptions, things are tightened or turned off clockwise, unloosened and or opened counterclockwise.

The faucet stem will come out by lifting it or unscrewing it. In some cases, you may have to put back the handle to accomplish this. When the stem is out, you will see a washer at the bottom end of it. The washer is held in place with a screw. Usually, the washer will be in bad shape, worn or tattered. Replace it with a new washer. It's a good idea to keep some washers at home at all times, since you may want to do the repair job when the local hardware store is closed. If you buy a box of washers, screws will be included. If you purchase a single washer, be sure you get the right size screw, which is easy if you bring the old one to the store.

Here is an important precaution. If you have no washers on hand and you go to the store to buy one after the faucet has been disassembled, make sure no one turns on the water to the sink while you are gone. If that happens, you will have a very wet kitchen or bathroom when you return.

Replacing the washer is simple. Be sure to reassemble everything in the opposite order to which the faucet stem was removed. Then, and only then, turn on the water.

Replacement of the washer is not necessary if the original leak was coming from under the packing nut rather than the spout of the faucet. In that event, the large washer or the packing material under the nut must be replaced. Packing material is a cordlike product that looks like thin cord. The water must also be shut off before you work on the packing nut.

In nearly all cases, the replacement of a faucet washer stops a leak coming from the spout. Once in a very great while, it won't. That means water is getting past the valve seat on which the washer rests. The valve seat then must be refaced or replaced. You can purchase a refacing tool to smooth the valve seat. It will come with instructions most of the time. If it doesn't, have the dealer show you how to use it. When a valve seat is too worn to yield to refacing, it must be taken out and replaced. Although there are valve removing tools, it sometimes is difficult to get out the valve. You'll have to decide, on the basis of your do-it-yourself track record, whether to attempt it or have it done by a plumber.

(Faucet leaks, toilet tank troubles, drainage problems and many other subjects are discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a stamped, long, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Q. — I had hoped to handle the wallpapering in an old house we bought recently but I cannot spare the time. I intend to hire a professional. Is there some way I can be sure of getting a good one?

A. — Use the standards you would apply to the hiring of a contractor for any job. The first thing you should do is to try for a recommendation from a friend or relative who has had similar work done. That's usually the best way to hire a contractor for anything. A local wallpaper dealer also may be able to help you. In any case, get two or three estimates. And remember the cost of the installation will depend on the kind of wallpaper you select. The U.S. School of Professional Paperhanging, 16 Chaplin Ave., Rutland, VT 05701, will provide you with a free copy of "A Guide to Professional Wallcovering Installation" if you send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope.)

Q. — Can wood trim be painted with regular paint, the same kind as used for the adjacent walls?

A. — Yes, Don't forget, though, a gloss paint usually can be wiped off and cleaned more easily than flat paint.

Danish Group Plans Louis Armstrong Park In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — City officials hope to transform a deteriorating urban park near the French Quarter into a lush, green oasis of gardens, fountains, restaurants and outdoor stages — all dedicated to the memory of musician Louis Armstrong.

Louis Armstrong Park opened in 1980 but never quite became what city officials hoped it would be. A few years later Louisiana's oil-based economy hit the skids and New Orleans' city budget started shrinking, contributing to the park's decline.

Under proposals unveiled earlier this month, the rebirth of the park would be brought about by architects and developers from Denmark's Tivoli Gardens cultural park. The Tivoli managment would operate the new Armstrong Park.

But there are several obstacles to the plan becoming reality.

Finding the money for development is one problem. Overcoming the 8-year-old park's reputation as a haven for crime is another. That reputation grew in 1986 when an Ohio tourist, 42-year-old Patricia Lobaugh, strolled into the park one sunny morning to take pictures and was shot to death by an armed robber.

With its flower gardens, lagoons and greenery, Armstrong Park isn't unattractive now. But the city is financially strapped at a time when the Louisiana economy continues to suffer from the decline of the oil industry. Signs of deterioration of grounds and buildings are becoming evident.

Redevelopment along the lines envisioned by the Tivoli architects will take millions of dollars. Private investors are the answer, according to Mayor Sidney Barthelemy.

Although he refused to name potential private investors, Barthelemy said several groups have shown some interest in the project. The project might also be financed with a city bond issue paid off through park income, the mayor added.

"It's exciting to me because I can see Armstrong Park alive. It's a beautiful park and very, very under-utilized," Barthelemy said after meeting earlier this month with Tivoli architects Bo Christoffersen and Finn Larsen. "I can see people coming to New Orleans simply to visit Armstrong Tivoli Park."

Councilman Mike Early, who represents the area, also was enthusiastic. "The overall design, scheme, the combination of land uses, I find it very acceptable," he said.

Plans call for creation of a Louis Armstrong museum and sweeping change in the design of for the park's lagoon. There will be more trees and less concrete. Barthelemy said the plan might change after architects hear from community leaders, but he expressed no reservations about its the specifics.

Some residents of the nearby Treme community have expressed reservations about the park. Some fear low-income residents will lose access to the park if prices for attractions are too high.

ADF Concert Wednesday

DURHAM — Nine musicians in residence at the American Dance Festival this summer as accompanists in the ADF School will have a concert of their own on Wednesday. The performance will be at 8 p.m. in Reynolds Industries Theatre on Duke University's West Campus.

Admission is free for ADF season ticket holders and $6 for all others.

Musicians on the program also compose and many are on the faculties of schools and universities.

ADF faculty member Natalie Gilbert, a pianist, is coordinator for the concert. Other musicians to perform in the concert are Sarah Noll, piano, accordion and vocalist; Jefferson Dalby, piano and synthesizer; Ken Wileman, percussionist; Toby Twining, vocalist and composer, and Christian Cherry, dance collaborator and electronic performer.

Two musicians with the Chuck Davis African/Amerian Dance Ensemble will be in the group of musicians. The two are Khalid Saleem and Beverly Botsford.

25th Anniversary For The East Carolina Summer Theater

AN AUSPICIOUS BEGINNING — The poster listing six great American musicals presented in the first East Carolina Summer Theater season in 1964 indicates the extent of richness that has characterized the annual summer slate of entertainments available to eastern North Carolina audiences.

FOUNDER AND HELPMATE — East Carolina Summer Theater founder Edgar Loessin and his actress wife, Amanda Meiggs, pose in front of the entry to ECU's McGinnis Theater. Loessin attributes to his wife the significant role of being a constant source of inspiration, assistance and understanding in the demanding world of theater.

Text By Jerry Raynor, Photos By Cliff Hollis

When the curtain goes up for the musical "Jerry's Girls" in McGinnis Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. on July 4th, it will mark the beginning of the 25th anniversary season of the East Carolina Summer Theater.

It was on July 6, 1964, that "West Side Story" inaugurated the first summer of musicals for the summer program of entertainment founded by Edgar Loessin, chairman of the ECU Drama Department. It was a splendid first summer with five other musicals, "The Boy Friend," "My Fair Lady," "Anything Goes," "The Merry Widow" and "Li'l Abner" providing an exhilirating round of musical fare.

Local and regional theater patrons found it good to have the best in live entertainment available at their doorsteps at easily affordable prices without having to travel long distances.

Except for a four-year absence due to the deteriorating condition of McGinnis Theater and the period of renovating and expanding the theater facility, the East Carolina Summer Theater has been a drawing card for thousands of faithful patrons who look upon the theater as a beloved summer institution.

"I'm glad we're still here, still going strong," Loessin commented on the staying power of the summer theater. "We've been grateful that people have stayed with us through the years. It's been rewarding, and our audience continues to grow." Loessin feels it is particularly noteworthy that the ECU Summer Theater remains strong when so many theatrical ventures have fallen by the wayside for one reason or another.

Changes Necessitated

As the years have gone by, circumstances have dictated changes in summer theater presentations.

"Changes have been dictated to a great extent by economics," Loessin said. "As an example, all six musicals we presented in 1964 cost $65,000, and we took in $72,000. This summer our four productions will run something like $200,000. Salaries have not gone up substantially, but other costs have. A typical indication can be had by considering that a costume that rented for $12.50 in 1964, now rents for $75. Other costs have esalated as dramatically.

"Today, it's impossible to stage and cast big shows and still present them at affordable prices."

A major consequence of today's inflationary costs has been to choose a combinatioin of musicals and dramas. "Fortunately, our patrons seem to be happy with this mixture."

Loessin's actress wife, Amanda Meiggs, noted that on several occasions the ECU Summer Theater "has been blessed by the fact that Greenville is off the main route of traveling companies. This was the reason we were able to get 'Steel Magnolias' for this summer's production. It's still playing in New York and a road company is taking it on tour. We're excited they are allowing us to do it."

One contemporary problem has arisen from the extended strike by writers. "Because of the strike, we had trouble in securing actors and actresses for star roles in our productions this summer," Loessin said. "Many of the people contacted stipulated they could accept roles only with the understanding that if their TV or other shows went back into production, they would have to have an immedate release from us. That, of course we could not accept.

"We are lucky, however, to have been able to line up performers like Kim Zimmer and Grant Goodeve among several other outstanding people."

Southern Backgrounds

Both the Loessins have roots in the South. Loessin, a native of Houston, received his training at Yale University and at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "I was at Yale with Romulus Linney, the playwright who has North Carolina connections." Linney is the author of "Sorrows of Frederick" and other plays.

"I've never been involved in acting," Loessin said. "I majored in directing and stage management. I worked in New York for a couple of years with Carol Channing and others before coming to East Carolina University in 1962."

He describes the productions he's been involved in at ECU as "ranging from A to Z, from absurdist to Shakespeare to Racine, from musicals to comedies to dramas. Ours has been a long roll call of fine productions."

Saying he has enjoyed all the plays, he named "Marat/Sadat" and "my first production of 'My Fair Lady'" as highspots in the list. "Also the '1940 Radio Hour,' that's one I enjoyed doing very much."

After starting the ECU Drama Department in 1963, Loessin was given the go-ahead on establishing the summer theater the next year.

Aside from his work at ECU, both in summer theater and in other productions each year, Loessin has found time for a few out-of-area experiences.

"I was guest director in an off-Broadway production of 'Holy Ghosts,' which premiered here," he said. "I've also work with outdoor drama, and with the summer theater on the Outer Banks and in theater at Chapel Hill." Other work has involved the National Opera Company based in Raleigh.

A commemorative-type play, "The Flight Brothers," which premiered at ECU, was later directed by Loessin for a Public Broadcasting System production which received extensive air play.

It was in 1966 that Loessin hired Amanda Meiggs to teach and appear as guest artist to perform in "Phaedra." It was not long, 1967, before Ms. Meiggs became Mrs. Loessin.

"Amanda has been a constant source of inspiration, a real help to me these 20 years," Loessin said. "We both love theater, so we work together very well as a team."

A native of Portsmouth, Va., Mrs. Loessin said "my father is from Currituck County, near Moyock. As a child, I often visited my grandmother in the town of Coinjock."

After receiving bachelor's and master's degrees at Chapel Hill, Mrs. Loessin studied with Lee Strasburg in the Actor's Studio in New York.

Mrs. Loessin has to her credit a long list of roles. Personal favorites she mentioned are "Gigi," "A Streetcar Named Desire," "Lady MacBeth" and "The Importance of Being Earnest."

"There are so many wonderful roles for actresses," she said, "and the real beauty of acting is that with each performance one takes on different ways of expressing the characters. I love the early Sondheim shows and was able to do them, but now he's gone so close to opera that I'd not be able to handle that easily."

The Cycle Grows

As time passes, a number of students who have trained for the stage in the ECU Drama Department and who have acted in various productions have become well established in theater.

"We've had no big name stars yet," Loessin said, "but what is important is that any number have gone on to achieve solid success in the theater world, not an easy thing to do. It's all very competitive.

"This year, for example, we have two of our graduates returning to direct shows. Both are North Carolina natives. Steve Williford will direct Williams' 'Cat On A Hot Tin Roof,' and Robert Caprio will direct 'Steel Magnolias.'"

Theater Today

In addition to talking about ECU and the East Carolina Summer Theater, the Loessins talked about the status of American theater in general.

"Today, mounting musicals or plays with large casts has become economically impossible for many theaters," Loessin said. "Recently, there seems to be a refreshing trend toward the writing of a number of smaller musicals, good things like 'Nun-Sense' and 'Romance, Romance.' This is very hopeful."

Mrs. Loessin noted that "one problem of recent years is that playwrighting as such went out of favor in the 1960s. The focus, the cry was for happenings, for plays without substantial scripts.

"Universities such as Chapel Hill, which long had a reputation for fostering playwrights, suffered. Yet I can see indications that interest in playwrighting as a solid basis for theater is perking up. Young people are becoming more interested in traditional theater and forms of playwrighting. So I feel the pendulum is swinging back."

Loessin pointed to "regional theater as a growing force in sustaining theater in America. Nearly every city of any size now has its own theater group, and they are doing fine things. New York will always remain the center of American theater, but costs there are making it more difficult all the time."

Rewards Realized

The years of dedication and hard work by Edgar Loessin has earned him twofold rewards. One is the love and appreciation of a wide audience in Greenville and throughout eastern North Carolina.

The other is official recognition. In 1986 Loessin was awarded the prestigious O. Max Garnder Award and he is also the recipient of the Morrison Award, given by the producers of "The Lost Colonly" to the North Carolinian who has contributed most to the cultural scene in the state.

The Loessins agree their years at ECU have been exciting, rewarding and that they are both looking forward to this season and those in the future with high hopes for good things to come in the years ahead.

Mississippi Cactus Plantation Is Popular With Visitors

By ED TISDALE
The Vicksburg Sunday Post

EDWARDS, Miss. (AP) — The Cactus Plantation near Edwards is the absolute source to find everything you ever wanted that was thorny, bristly, spiny, thistly, barbed, burry, sticky, pointed and sharp — just watch where you sit when you get there.

The Cactus Plantation is situated in rural Hinds County in the midst of lush green fields and pastureland, but its prickly pear heart beats West, deep in the deserts of Texas and Arizona.

The plantation boasts national fame and international uniqueness and its prominent yellow billboards touting the plantation can draw travelers off Interstate 20 like the Venus flytraps sold at the plantation can lure flies.

The plantation is owned by John and Gwen Thomas and Luther and Earlene Tidwell. They bought the 12-year-old enterprise about a year ago.

John Thomas said the risk of an occasional prick from a cactus has not deterred him.

"That's all part of it," he said.

Thomas said he doesn't know of any other cactus plantation.

"That's the only reason we call it the world's only is because none of us has ever heard of another one," he said.

And when visitors arrive — after following those yellow signs down a gravel road through two miles of hill and dale — few are disappointed.

"Because when they arrive, they can see upwards of 15,000 cactuses and other plants," said Don Ford, plant specialist at the plantation. Ford said the plantation features over 1,500 kinds of cactus not to mention the other types of plants and animals.

Ford said he got into the cactus as a living through his love of the plants.

"I just always had a real interest in them," he said. "I came out here one day and was looking around. They asked me if I wanted a job and I said 'yeah' so here I am."

The plantation also has peacocks, Guinea hens, chickens and Shetland ponies. It used to have a resident buffalo, but it died, Ford said. The buffalo's skull has been nailed to the side of the barn, contributing to the desert flavor of the place.

Driving up to the barn a visitor can see cactuses planted in rows at the side of the road. A cactus farm is not the place to run around barefoot.

Thomas is a specialist in the bromeliads the plantation sells. Bromeliads are plants like the Mississippi native Spanish moss and the pineapple.

"That's why I'm here," Thomas said. "I've been selling bromeliads for 20 years."

Thomas said he is trying to make the Cactus Plantation an interesting place that the whole family can visit and have fun. In addition to selling the cactuses, the plantation features a gift shop and snack bar.

"We get all types of people out here," he said. "People from different countries, school groups, tourists, everybody ... Some people just came in here the other day from Sweden or Finland."

Ford said that with a few exceptions, cactuses are found only in the Western hemisphere under the most extreme conditions.

"You can find cactuses from the equator to the Arctic circle," he said. "But mostly they are found in arid regions, deserts."

Ford said one type of cactus is native to Mississippi — the common prickly pear and noted that the the Cactus Plantation has one prickly pear that measures about 5-feet by 5-feet.

"Most everything is going to start blooming in about a week or so," he said. "Some have red blooms, some have yellow. Cactuses have the most beautiful flowers."

Summer Activities At Cape Hatteras Park

MANTEO — Park Superintendent Thomas L. Hartman of Cape Hatteras National Seashore Group announces the beginning of the 1988 summer season of ranger conducted activities at the National Parks on the Outer Banks.

Activities include "Fish With A Ranger," "Soundside Snorkel" and "Bodie Island Beasties" at Cape Hatteras; "First Flight Tours" at Wright Brothers Memorial, at at Chicamacomico, and other locations. Activities will continue through Labor Day.

For details of program times and locations, pick up a copy of the free National Park Service newspaper called "In The Park" at any visitor center or campground throughout the park.

Ask any ranger how children 13 and under may earn an official "Seashore Ranger," "Flight Ranger," or "Roanoke Ranger Patch."

Some seashore programs require pre-registration one day in advance. Pre-registration takes place at seashore visitor centers for Hatteras and Ocracoke Island activities, and at the Whalebone Information Center for those at Bodie Island.

The visitor centers and Whalebone are open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily during the summer. Wright Brothers Visitor Center is open daily from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Fort Raleigh Visitor Center is open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., except on Sunday when closing time is at 6 p.m.

All ranger conducted activities are designed to acquaint visitors with the national treasures and recreational opportunities offered within the National Parks on the Outer Banks. Additional information may be obtained at any Park Service visitor center, or by calling 473-2111.

A Review

Some Fine Short Stories

THE BLACK HOUSE. By Patricia Highsmith. Penzler Books. 258 Pages. $15.95.

Novelist Patricia Highsmith, best known for "Strangers on a Train," turns to the short story this time out, and the 11 tales included in "The Black House" are very good indeed.

Even the titles are well made. Consider such offerings as "Something the Cat Dragged In" and "The Terrors of Basket-Weaving." Who could resist?

The plot of the first, by the way, does revolve around something the cat drags in — a human hand, or part of one. Proud of its find and wanting to show it off, as cats will, this cat carries the grisly remnant into its master's house and drops it on the floor for all to see. They, and two guests as well, are horrified and then intrigued by the cat's find.

Rather than calling the police promptly, the four people determine to find who the hand belonged to and what happened to the rest of the body. All comes clear by the end of the story, but Highsmith provides some fine entertainment before she gets there.

The second story begins with the intriguing sentence: "Diane's terror began in an innocent and fortuitous way." Walking along the beach, Diane finds an oddly shaped but damaged wicker basket. She takes the basket home and repairs it expertly, which is quite odd since she knows nothing about such things. Her terror begins as Highsmith speculates on the genetic inheritance of talents long buried, and supposedly forgotten.

"When in Rome" is a nice redoing of an old plot. It's the one about the person who is kidnapped and can't, to the kidnapper's dismay, be ransomed. Highsmith's version contains two kidnappings — a wife arranges her husband's kidnap and then she herself is abducted. It's a beautifully ironic story.

Concert Set For The KOL Band

JACKSONVILLE — The Onslow County Council for the Arts will present The KOL Band at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The rhythm and blues performance will be in the Fine Arts Building at Coastal Carolina Community College.

The performance is free and open to the public.

Greenville is home of the four-member The KOL Band. Landy Spain play lead rhythm guitar; Merle Dennis is bass player; Laura Davis sings lead vocals, and a performer named Butch plays the drums.

The program of music will include cover tunes made famous by B.B. King, Johnny Winters, Janice Joplin and Booker T. & MG's.

The program is funded by the Grassroots Arts Program of the N.C. Arts Council and is presented by the Council for the Arts.

Arts Awards To Wilson

WILSON — The North Carolina Association of Arts Councils, at its annual convention held in Winston-Salem, presented awards to member arts organizations for exemplary performance in 15 categories. There are approximately 100 organizations belonging to this statewide association.

The Arts Council of Wilson was the recipient of three awards at the ceremony.

The Audience Development Award is presented each year for achievements in increasing arts audiences in the community. The Arts Council cited Wilson's presentations of the North Carolina Black Folk Heritage Tour in November; the Joe Williams Concert in March, and participation in Delta Sigma Theta's bringing the Shaw University production of "Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope" to Wilson.

Two awards were presented to Wilson for public sector funding and private sector funding for the BB&T Community Building Project. The first winning narrative chronicled the events leading to the $450,000 public funding by the City of Wilson and Wilson County. The nomination for the private sector funding award shared the story of the five month Capital Campaign that raised $275,000 for the Arts Council of Wilson's new home — a campaign whose theme was "Let's Make It Happen!"

Battleship Fireworks Display

WILMINGTON — A display of fireworks will be launched from the grounds of the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial July 4. The show, sponsored by Wilmington Parks and Recreation, will begin at 9 p.m.

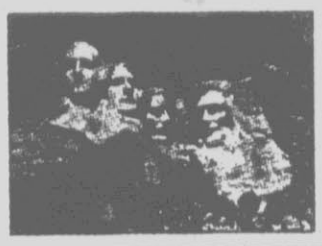

The fireworks will be visible over the Cape Fear River between Wilmington's Riverfront Park and the Battleship Memorial, but patrons of the Independence Day presentation of the battleship's Sound and Light Spectacular, "The Immortal Showboat," will have grandstand seats. Ticket holders for the outdoor drama will be able to enjoy the fireworks display seated in the same stands built to accomodate Sound and Light Show audiences.

"The Immortal Showboat" event will begin about 20 minutes after the fireworks display.

Admission fees to the Sound and Light Spectacular are $3 for ages 12 and over, $1.50 for children 6-11 and free for those five and under. A 10 percent discount will be given to groups of 20 or more persons when admission fees are paid by a single source.

Drawings By Farmhand Billy Traylor On View At NCMA

PATCH-UP JOB — Workmen laid masonry support recently below the ailing right shoulder of the Sphinx as an Egyptian Antiquities Organization committee met and decided to wait a month before replacing a stone that fell from the shoulder last February. A study has determined that the main cause of the 4,500-year-old monument's decay is sewage flowing under and around it. (AP Laserphoto by Mimi Mann)

N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — "Bill Traylor Drawings," an exhibition of 43 works by a retired farmhand who taught himself to draw, is now on view at the North Carolina Museum of Art through August 28.

Bill Traylor was an imaginative, if untrained, artist who lived and worked in Alabama. Born a slave on the George Traylor plantation in 1854, he remained on the farm until it was sold in 1938. Then in his 80s, he moved to Montgomery and tried working in a shoe factory, but age and rheumatism disabled him and he was forced to accept welfare.

Fending for himself on the streets, Traylor sold pencils and found sleeping quarters in a black funeral parlor. In the summer of 1939, he occupied a spot on the street in front of a pool hall where he remained for the next three years and produced 1,000 drawings and paintings.

For subject matter, Traylor relied on his past and on the people and events he saw around him on the street. Animals he knew on the farm fill his drawings, and memories of farm life often inspired a painting. In his "Blue Man and Black Mule," a top-hatted man follows a plow and stiff-legged mule across the page. Purely abstact designs are not often found in his work, but there are occasional configurations of humans in the process of transformation into plant forms.

Traylor's simple, unself-conscious style has been compared to children's art and prehistoric cave painting. The people and animals in his drawings are often flat, isolated figures in silhouette against a bare background. These images almost suggest cutouts.

This simplicity, however, is only superficial and masks underlying complex emotions, according to Huston Paschal, assistant curator at the museum. "Traylor devised a style that enabled him to intuitively express the conflicts he observed in the world and to comically expose the shenanigans humans resort to," she explains.

Traylor's work was exhibited twice during his lifetime, in Montgomery, Alabama, in 1940 and in New York City in 1941. With the United States' entry into World War II, he went north in 1942 to live with some of his children. There are no drawings known from the war years. When he returned to Montgomery in 1946, he was unable to return to his studio in the street. He died a year later at age 93 in a nursing home.

During his year at his street studio, Traylor was befriended by Montomery artist Charles Shannon, who bought most of his work. Shannon was instrumental in introducing Traylor's drawings to art circles in recent years, and a 1979 exhibition renewed interest in his work. Since then Traylor's drawings have been included in several exhibitions of folk art that have circulated. The exhibitions have drawn large audiences.

"Bill Traylor Drawings" is the most thorough presentation of the artist's work to date. The exhibition is made up largely of drawings from the collection of Joseph H. Wilkinson of Chicago and was seen at the Reynolda House and the Delta Arts Center in Winston-Salem before coming to the North Carolina Museum of Art.

Organized by the Chicago Office of Fine Arts, Department of Cultural Affairs, and curated by Kenneth C. Burkhart and Gregory G. Knight, "Bill Traylor Drawings" was co-sponsored by the Chicago Public Library and supported by grants from the Illinois Arts Council, the National Endowment for the Arts and AT&T. Its showing at the North Carolina Museum of Art is made possible by funding from the North Carolina Museum of Art Foundation.

A 32-page illustrated catalogue about the exhibition is available in the museum shop.

Peter Morrin, director of the J.B. Speed Art Museum in Louisville, Ky., will present a free lecture on Traylor entitled "The Timeless Vision of Bill Traylor" at 3 p.m. on July 10 at the museum.

For further information and to arrange tours of the exhibition, call 833-1935.

Arts Funds Awarded

RALEIGH — The N.C. Arts Council has awarded $2,323,430 in arts program development grants to cultural organizations across the state.

Arts projects funded by these grants must be executed before June 30, 1989 and will be paid from 1988-89 state and federal appropriations.

The grants were presented in the areas of community development, dance, folklife, inter-disciplinary programs, literature, music, theater, touring/presenting programs, and the visual arts.

Performances, seminars and competitions, management assistance, artists' new works, exhibits, workshops, book and review publishing, and other projects that help develop and encourage the arts in North Carolina will be supported by this funding.

Most of the grant funds, $2,288,325, will be used by arts groups based in North Carolina. Award recipients must match grant monies dollar-for dollar.

Grants to Pitt and adjacent counties are:

• Pitt, $54,070: $6,320 to East Carolina University for presentation of folk artists in the area; $1,000 to East Carolina University School of Art for a lecture series; $3,000 to East Carolina University Gray Gallery for the exhibition of video tapes by video artists; $6,000 to East Carolina University Gray Gallery for a touring exhibition of Tibetan art from the Rose Art Museum at Brandeis University; $20,000 to East Carolina Summer Theare for its 25th anniversary season; $1,500 to the Farmville Community Arts Council for an exhibition; $750 to the Farmville Community Arts Council for a summer drama program; $3,500 to the Pitt County Schools for a one-semester theatre residency for fifth and sixth grade students; $1,500 to the Pitt County Schools for the development of an elementary school theatre program; $10,500 to the Playwrights' fund of North Carolina.

• Beaufort: $1,000 for the Beaufort County Arts Council.

• Craven, $5,865: $2,000 to the Atlantic Dance Theatre for the commissioning of three dance works; $865 to the Craven Arts Council, and $3,000 to the New Bern-Craven County Schools for a nine-month dance residency.

• Edgecombe, $2,000: $1,000 to Edgecombe County for art classes for children and $1,000 to Tarboro for Edgecombe County Cultural Arts Council.

• Lenoir, $3,000: $2,100 to the Community Council for the Arts and $1,000 to Marilyn Thompson for the development of promotional materials for touring.

• Wilson, $15,438: $12,438 to the Arts Council of Wilson and $3,000 to the Wilson County Schools for three one-week performing arts residencies.

Sculpture Competition

LENOIR — The city of Lenoir is sponsoring the 3rd Annual Indoor/Outdoor Sculpture Competition August 12 and 13, open to sculptors in North Carolina and four other states. The competition-exhibition will be held at the J. E. Broyhill Park in Lenoir.

Some $3,500 will be awarded in seven merit awards of $500 each, and $5,000 will be spent for the purchase of one or more pieces of sculpture by The Broyhill Family Foundation for the City of Lenoir. Judge is Verne Stanford, director of The Penland School of Crafts in Penland.

A $15 entry fee entitles each sculptor to two entries for the competition, a barbecue supper in the Broyhill Park on August 12 and primitive camping facilities if such is desired.

Indoor and outdoor sculpture is acceptable, both freestanding and pedestal pieces. Sculptors must bring their own pedestals.

Sculptors are invited to arrive on the afternoon of August 12 after 3 p.m. to choose a site within the park for installation of their sculpture. Installation may be done August 12 or on August 13 prior to 10 a.m.

The exhibition will be on display August 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Merit and purchase awards will be announced by 4 p.m. "Group Sax" from Raleigh will be in concert from noon till 3 p.m.

Every effort will be made to attract both corporate and individual buyers to the August 13 exhibition, located on Highway 321 at the foot of the Boone/Blowing Rock resort area.

Deadline for receipt of applications is August 10. For more information and/or a copy of the prospectus write: The Caldwell Arts Council, 601 College Avenue, SW, Lenoir, N.C., 28645 or call 704-754-2486.

Writers Club Members To Meet Tuesday Night

Members of the Greenville Writers Club will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Rumple, Apartment 1-D, Stratford Arms Apartments, Charles Street. This is the second meeting for the month of July.

Those planning to attend and who wish to share rides or get specific instructions are to meet at the Krispy Kreme Doughnut Shop, East Tenth Street, at 7:30 p.m.

Harriet Beecher Stowe, the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was born in Litchfield, Conn., in 1811. Her story of a black slave's escape from the American South was first published as a serial in 1851.

Writer Reynolds Price Believes In Human Commitments

By GENEVA COLLINS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Reynolds Price is a great believer in the power of the unconscious, so when two characters he introduced to readers a quarter-century ago rooted themselves in his imagination he put away his novel-in-progress and let them take over.

The result is "Good Hearts" (Atheneum, $18.95), in which we catch up on the story of Rosa and Wesley Beavers, the central characters of Price's first novel, "A Long and Happy Life."

In the 1962 work, Rosacoke Mustian and Wesley Beavers crossed the line from innocence to adulthood in an isolated patch of rural North Carolina. In the newest work they are married, middle-aged and entrenched in Raleigh, she working as a college secretary and he as an auto mechanic.

Price, probably best known for "Kate Vaiden," his 1986 novel that won the National Book Critics' Circle award for best work of fiction, was asked in a recent interview why he resurrected these characters after so long an absence.

"I tried to start a novel about someone else, and this idea kept coming forward to my mind as I was making notes for another subject, and it seemed to be wise to go ahead and obey the impulse," he said.

It wasn't as if the characters had been living in his head growing old with him, he explained: "Normally when I finish any given book I really sort of erase them in the computer, let that file go. But who knows what the unconscious mind is doing all that time.

"I think an enormous amount of my work is done by that part of my mind, and I would think that most of the creative writers that I know — as well as a great deal of the scientific community — find that a lot of their work is done by a part of their brain over which they have very little control."

Price, 55, is the author of seven novels and 10 other books, including an impressive collection of essays, "A Common Room," published last year. Except for a few years as a Rhodes Scholar in Oxford, England, he has lived all of his life in North Carolina.

Like Eudora Welty and Flannery O'Connor, two writers he greatly admires, Price has enjoyed staying put, teaching at Duke University in Durham and writing about the kind of people he knows intimately.

"Good Hearts" opens with Wesley fleeing his marriage in what amounts to a midlife crisis — if the term can be used without derision — and a tragic event that befalls Rosa as a consequence. The story is told from many characters' points of view, although Rosa's presence dominates due to her tough-mindedness and a kind of radiance that Price bestows upon her.

The idea of marriage as a sacred bond resounds throughout the novel, a belief Price says he shares with his characters.

"As a basically religious person, I myself feel certain kinds of human commitments — matrimonial commitments, parental commitments — do indeed have a kind of sacred force to them and are broken or maligned at a very serious risk to the person who does it."

Despite some dark moments, "Good Hearts" ends with a sense of optimism and promise, a trait common to many of Price's works. The author was asked if that is a conscious goal on his part.

"I think it's probably emotionally characteristic of the kind of person I am," he said. "I'm someone who — with a normal number of exceptions — who's had a very lucky and a very happy life till now. So I don't tend to assume the worst about things.

"I'm also someone who feels that it's one of the goals of a work of art to assist people onward in the world. If what you've got to say really is that we should all get on the window ledge, slit our wrists and fall eight floors, I don't see much point in saying that. That's not an errand worth doing, in my opinion."

Price's "normal number of exceptions" to his happy life includes being stricken by astrocytoma, a cancerous nerve tumor in his spinal cord that has left him a paraplegic since 1984. He said that being confined to a wheelchair has at least had the advantage of allowing him more time to write.

"One of the major things it's taught me to be is very, very patient. When your legs are paralyzed you've either got to get very able to sit still and do things slowly and gradually and accept an awful lot of tiny frustrations, or else you're going to go crazy fast."

He joked that cocktail parties are difficult because "you're sitting there like a potted plant and the most boring person in the world corners you and you can't excuse yourself to go get an hors d'oeuvre."

Hypnosis lessons he began taking for pain control led him to explore memory regression with his therapist, which in turn led to his latest project — a book of memoirs "looking at the major emotional figures in my childhood and early youth."

Eventually he hopes to get back to that novel that Rosa and Wesley chased away. But he'll let his unconscious dictate when.

Viewpoints Of Duke Authors

By DEBBIE SELINSKY
Duke University News Service

DURHAM — The illustrious career of writer and Duke University English professor Reynolds Price began with the plays, short stories and poems he penned as a child.

Not until he was 25 did he write his first novel, but since then he has produced several best-sellers as well as numerous scholarly works, poems, and plays, including a new one to be staged this fall by Duke's drama department.

Price has achieved the greatest commercial success with his novels — his critically acclaimed "Kate Vaiden" is expected to be made into a movie — but he believes that's simply because fiction is most popular with Americans.

Despite that success, Price calls himself a writer, rather than a novelist.

"I have always worked in different forms without thinking of having to make adjustments. My mind just works that way. I suppose each form requires certain different skills and draws on different mental muscles, but I've always found it all exhilarating . . . There have been a number of writers in British and American letters who worked in different forms. I seem to be that kind of writer," he said.

Price is one of a number of Duke faculty members working successfully in a variety of writing forms. Others are:

• David Ball, director of Duke drama, believes his strength as a writer lies in writing plays. Since he wrote his first as a Peace Corps volunteer in Afghanistan in 1968, he has had more than 75 plays produced by various theater groups across the country. His "Ladies at Play" is to be produced off Broadway this fall.

But that belief hasn't kept him from writing nine screenplays — two became movies and he's hoping his latest, "Stage Blood," will go into production later this year as the independent Duke Street Films' first project. Additional achievements by BAll are a widely-used theater textbook called "Backwards and Forwards: How to Read Plays;" a 10-year-old "artistic" novel he's still hoping to publish, and even a country music tune he'd like to see recorded.

Ball, who recalls "liking the idea of being a writer" long before he actually got around to becoming one, also liked all kinds of writing from his youth.

"As a little kid, I would copy stories from magazines and rewrite them in different ways, using the same characters and basic plot that Mickey Spillane or somebody else did. I didn't know what I was doing then was plagiarism, and my father thought he was going to retire early on the fortune to be made by this 11-year-old prodigy until he and my mother found out my way of working and explained to me that what I was doing was immoral, illegal and not the height of creativity," Ball said.

Since his youth, Ball said he has felt perfectly free to move back and forth between different forms a long as he remembered that something that works to an advantage in one type of writing doesn't necessarily translate that way in another form.

As far as his career as a songwriter goes, Ball doesn't recommend watching the Billboard charts for his latest effort. After working with country music's Waylon Jennings and his wife, Jessi Colter, last fall at Duke on "An Evening with Waylon Jennings," Ball began to work with his new guitar and his admittedly raspy singing voice on a song that he says he would "give his right arm" if Colter would agree to sing.

"When it comes to songs, I'm just playing. I don't really know exactly what I'm doing. But I feel really free and I enjoy music a great deal, so I try it now and then," Ball said.

• Another Duke faculty member, Julie A. Tetel, a linguist and an adjunct assistant professor in the English department, regularly entertains curious questions about the diversity of her work,as Julie Tetel, historical romance novelist, and Julie Andresen, scholarly writer.

"It's not difficult to go back and forth because I think of both these types of writing as similar. It all boils down to the fact that all the writing I do is directed toward the idea of convincing my readers that what I say is true. Both forms are persuasive," said Tetel, who has a new novel, "Tangled Dreams," due out from Popular Library/Warner Books in January 1989.

"I convince my scholarly readers through a more formal means while I convince romance readers through having my characters behave in ways that are consistant with what I've written about them . . . since I'm a linguist, I'm very well versed in the idea of using language in very specific ways, and I knew from the beginning that I could pick up the language of the romance novel."

Details Announced For The Beaufort County Arts Council Show

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The 24th Annual Beaufort County Arts Council's fine arts show, featuring arts and crafts in a variety of media, will be held July 23-31 in the Washington Civic Center (the old train station building) on Gladden Street, downtown Washington.

The show is sponsored by the Beaufort County Arts Council and will coincide with the annual Washington Summer Festival which will run July 29-31.

Asheville artist Sallie Middleton will be the judge for the art show. She will exhibit some of her works in the Art Council's Lane Gallery next to the Civic Center.

The Fine Arts Show will open to the public on July 23 accompanied by a Bayou Bash event. Admission on that date will be free. Beginning July 25, the show will be open through July 28 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with hours of 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on July 29 and 30, and from 1 to 4 p.m. on July 31. A 50 cents donation from viewers ages 12 and older will be requested on all days except the July 23 opening date.

Abbreviated details for entering the show are:

• Entries for the show will be accepted from 9 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. on July 18 and 19, with work to be judged on July 21.

• Fee for entries is $10 for amateur artists; $15 for professionals. Fee for entry of textural art or photography, amateur or professional, is $15.

• Each artist will be limited to four pieces, with only original work (no kit or mold work) accepted. Work must be clearly marked if for sale and priced to include a 25 percent commission for the council.

• Awards will be based on the sole decision of the judge, who reserves the right not to make an award in any particular category or division of category.

Awards scheduled for the show are:

• Art — Professional: Award amounts are $100 for first place and $50 for second place in the categories of — oils and acrylics; watercolor, and graphics/open mixed.

• Art — Amateur: One award of $25 in the categories of oils and acrylics; watercolor and graphics/open mixed.

• Textural Art-Crafts — First place award of $100 and second place of $50 in each of the following categories — Soft: fiber, stitchery, string textiles, paper; Hard: metal, glass, wood, and pottery.

• Photography — Awards of $100 for first place, $50 for second.

A best in show award of $400 will be given for the work judged to be best in show. Ribbons will be given for all awrds, including third place and honorable mentions.

The show also encompasses a guaranteed sales program, in which area individuals and businesses guarantee, prior to the show, designated sums toward the purchase of art. Last year, these sales along generated over $10,000. The guaranteed sales event will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. on July 22, prior to the opening of the show to the public on July 23..

A number of special awards will also be made, including two $100 awards, two $50 awards and one $25 award. These are in addition to awards made by the show's judge.

Other events in conjunction with the show are:

• Critique sessions: From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on July 23, Ms. Middleton will conduct four free one-hour critique sessions for all participating artists who wish this service.

• The Bayou Bash — On opening day, July 23, the Bayou Bash, and open to the public, will take place from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Beginning at 5 p.m., Louisiana's Zydeco Band, Terrence Simien and the Mallet Playboys will perform in the Civic Center's Park. Local civic groups will have for sale authentic Cajun food, and Lux Farms of Hyde County will be on hand serving samplings of crawdads.

Artists and craftsmen interested in full details for entering the Arts Show are to write for a prospectus and entry forms to: Beaufort County Arts Council, P.O. Box 634, Washington, N.C., 27889 or call the office at 946-2504.

'Hexa' To Be Performed At AFD This Week

DURHAM — Anita Feldman's "Hexa," commissioned by the American Dance Festival with funds from The AT&T Foundation will have its world premiere in Reynolds Industries Auditorium, on Duke University's West Campus, at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

For this dance Feldman, in collaboration with Daniel Schmidt, has created a new instrument, with funds from the National Endowment for the Arts. The Tap Dance instrument is a series of six hexagons constructed of various woods and metals to produce different timbres when struck by a tap shoe. One of these hexagons is a tunable marimba; instead of fingering the keys, the dancers will step on them.

The dancers — Feldman, David Parker, and Rhonda Price, will be accompanied on stage by Gary Schall, who will play a variety of percussion instruments. The composer, Lois V. Vierk, will process the sounds that Schall and the dancers make using a sophisticated digital delay system.

Feldman danced at ADF in 1987 as a participant in the "Young Choreographer and Composers" project, in which choreographers and composers are brought to ADF for a few weeks to make dances, which are premiered on a joint program.

Feldman's dance, "Shimmer," which she created in collaboration with the composer Jalalu-Kalvert Nelson, is on her program this season. In this dance Feldman, Price, and Russell Halley are joined on stage by Nelson, playing trumpet, and by five other musicians, who are seen silhouetted behind a scrim.

Feldman has been choreographing dances for herself and her company, now called Anita Feldman Tap, since 1982. She is intensely interested in tap dancing as music. "Tapping Music" (1984), which is also on this year's ADF program,is an adaption of the composer Steve Reich's "Clapping Music." As Feldman taps out the music with her feet, Schall, holding wooden boards on which taps have been mounted, taps it out with his hands. Feldman has also worked with such avant-garde composers a Larry Polansky and James Tenney. "The Next Step," a 1987 piece on Feldman's program this season, is a duet for her and Gary Schall. He dances as he drums, she drums as she dances.

For tickets call 684-6402.

Original Nantucket Together Again

ATLANTIC BEACH — The original six Nantucket members will play together on the stage for the first time since 1980 at Bikini's in Atlantic Beach on July 3. The original six are Larry Uzzell, Mike Uzzell, Tommy Redd, Eddie Blair, Mark Downing and Kenny Soule. The band is best known for its first album, "Nantucket." They have also recorded a second album, "Your Place or Mine," as well as a couple of other cuts.

Tickets for the July 3 Atlantic Beach performance are $10 each. For reservations and additional details, call 247-3774 or 872-6140.

$25,000 Reynolds Grant To Dance Theater

WINSTON-SALEM — The North Carolina Dance Theater has received a $25,000 contribution from R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. This grant will help the company qualify for challenge grant funding offered by the City of Winston-Salem and other organizations.

The contribution was presented by Dolph W. von Arx, president and chief executive officer of Reynolds Tobacco USA, to Salvatore Aiello, artistic director of the Dance Theater.

New Era For The Cradle Of Forestry

BREVARD — A new era for the Cradle of Forestry in American began Saturday with the dedication and opening of a new Visitor Orientation Center at the site of the original center, destroyed by fire in 1985.

The Cradle of Forestry, a national historic site and living museum, is significant to North Carolina and the nation as the site of the first school of scientific forestry in the U.S.

The new 7,775 square foot center houses displays, exhibit and an auditorium. When completed, it will contain a Forest History Center, a resources and conference center, and a resources management and interpretation and demonstration area.

Christmas In July Festival Set

WEST JEFFERSON — The second annual Christmas in July Festival will be held Friday, Saturday and July 3 in Ashe County. On display will be fraser firs and white pines. Fraser fir grows naturally only in the southern Appalachians. Christmas sights and sounds will be part of the festival. Other attractions during the festival will be explorations of the area, including canoeing along New River, hiking the Rhodendendron Trail in Mount Jefferson State Park, seeing the frescoes by artist Ben Long in a chapel, and viewing cheese making in North Carolina. The streets of West Jefferson will be decked with Christmas elements and contain displays of mountain crafts, exhibits, live music and street dances.

Annual Kernersville Road Run

KERNERSVILLE — The Kernersville Family YMCA and Wachovia Bank of Kernersivlle will co-sponsor the fifth annual Fabulous Four Road Run on July 4. A one mile fun-run and a one mile walk will start at 8 a.m., with the four mile run to start at 8:45 a.m. There will be six age categories in both the men and womens divisions, with plaques and awards to top finishers in all age categories.

For additiional information and registration, call Rhonda Collis, 996-2231.

Today's Sunday In The Park Concert

The Sunday in the Park concert today will feature a well-known instrumental and vocal trio, the Big Zucchini Washboard Bandits. The concert, the fourth in the weekly late afternoon Sunday in the Parks concert, will begin at 7 p.m. on the Town Common at the S. Eugene West Amphitheater.

The concert is free. Those attending are encouraged to bring items such as folding chairs and blankets to add to listening comfort while seated on the grass.

Paul Taylor Company Performance Slated

DURHAM — When the Paul Taylor Dance Company takes the stage at the American Dance Festival on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, their performances will have been made possible by one of the festival's corporate neighbors: Glaxo, Inc.

This marks the first such sponsorship by a corporation in the Research Triangle area since ADF came to Durham, eleven years ago.

"Glaxo has given us $25,000 to bring Paul Taylor to Durham this season," Charles Reinhart, the director of ADF, announced. "With this grant Glaxo is making a twofold contribution," he said. "It is making a gift to audiences, who will have a chance to see the work of one of the geniuses of American modern dance, and it is making a gift to the dance world, because public performances are what keep dance alive and give it meaning."

"Glaxco, Inc. is pleased to sponor the Paul Taylor Dance Company's residnece this summer as part of our ongoing support of the American Dance Festival," said Jennifer McMillan, director of the firm's public affairs.

For more than three decades, Paul Taylor's choreography has had a defining influenc on modern dance.

In 1983 the American Dance Festival named Taylor the winner of its Samuel H. Scripps Award for his lifetime contributions to the art. The annual award, for $25,000, is the largest single arts award given in the U.S.

Tour Canceled

NEW YORK (AP) — Ballet superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov has canceled a nationwide tour to undergo surgery for an aggravated knee condition, his spokesınan said.

Baryshnikov, artistic director of the American Ballet Theater, had scheduled 28 dance performances of his own, from Arlington, Texas, on July 1 to Columbus, Ohio, on Aug. 7, said spokesman Bernie Lawrence on Wednesday.

The surgery, to correct an aggravated condition of his knee, will be performed in New York City, possibly Tuesday, said Lawrence, who would not give identify the hospital.

"The subsequent recovery period will be determined by the findings at surgery," said a statement by Baryshnikov's publicist, Edgar Vincent.

Video Featuring Singer Marty Robbins Released

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — More than five years after his death, country music star Marty Robbins is on home video as a singing cowboy roaming the West, armed with a guitar rather than a pistol.

"The Drifter" is rare footage shot in 1965 and 1966 that Robbins hoped to use in a television show. Since it was done in black and white, the program was never sold because color had just revolutionized the industry.

"The show has previously been aired in only a couple of test markets," said Robbins' son, Ronny, who is overseeing the mail-order marketing of the video for Marty Robbins Enterprises. "The fact that they were shot in black and white only adds to their uniqueness."

Robbins laced much of his music with a macho western feel before he died of cardiac arrest on Dec. 8, 1982, at age 57.

His best known song was "El Paso," a gunfighter ballad in 1959 that earned him a Grammy Award. It is one of several tunes he sings in the video.

During his 30-year career, he wrote some 500 songs and had 18 No. 1 hits. Among them were "My Woman, My Woman, My Wife," "Devil Woman," "A White Sport Coat (and a Pink Carnation)," "El Paso City," "The Hanging Tree," "Some Memories Just Won't Die," "Among My Souvenirs" and "Singing the Blues."

Some 30 of Robbins' 101 albums are still available.

"There wasn't any kind of country song he couldn't sing and didn't have a hit with," said Ronnie Pugh, a researcher at the Country Music Foundation.

"He did cowboy songs, Hawaiian songs, calypso songs. He did love ballads, he did rockabilly in the '50s and then did the Nashville Sound, the smoother style in the late '60s and early '70s."

"I think his versatility was responsible for the longevity of his career," Pugh said. "He very successfully went with trends and set trends."

Robbins performed on the Grand Ole Opry from 1953 until his death almost 30 years later. A friendly, gregarious entertainer, he bantered with the audience and often stayed at the Grand Ole Opry House after the show ended to sign autographs for as long as an hour.

"He was a fan's favorite," Pugh recalled about Robbins' appearances on the Opry. "He always got encores right up to the end. The fans loved him."

Robbins sang the title song to the Clint Eastwood movie, "Honky Tonk Man," which was released two weeks after Robbins died. He also appeared in 18 low-budget movies and sang the theme for others, such as "The Alamo" and "The Hanging Tree."

The sandy-haired, mustachioed performer was chosen for induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame two months before his death. Two other members, Tex Ritter and Grandpa Jones, appear with him on "The Drifter."

Among the songs performed on the video are "El Paso," "Cool Water," "Tumblin' Tumbleweed," "Streets of Laredo" and "Red River Valley."

Ronny Robbins found the video material in a Nashville bank vault after the bank kept sending bills for the storage.

"They were in three big vaudeville-looking chests," he said. "There was not even any dust on them. The seal was totally intact. It was like I opened a time capsule; it looked like they had just been put in there yesterday.

"Daddy used to talk about the video market and how big it would be. I didn't have the foresight to believe what he was talking about. He was right; everyone has a VCR now. I think that's why he stored them."

The younger Robbins recalled that his father, who grew up in the Phoenix area, was always captivated by the old West.

"I think he was a link with the past he wanted to be a part of. He was such a big fan of Gene Autry's. This was part of his life and this was his way to preserve part of it.

"His grandfather was a quote-unquote Texas Ranger, a poet, a medicine man. He looks like Buffalo Bill, a caricature of the West. It ingrained the early West in him. And being from the Phoenix area in the 1930s, it was like the West.

"We'd drive home for Christmas and we'd get in Texas and he'd start singing songs. You could see him lighting up and looking around. He loved the mountains and the desert."

Pugh says there's no country singer today as versatile as Robbins was.

Guitarist Joe Satriani Has Instrumental Hit

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The word is that a record has to have a singer in order to sell. But guitarist Joe Satriani's "Surfing With the Alien," an instrumental, was No. 29 on the best-selling album chart on May 28.

Satriani auditioned for and played Mick Jagger's first solo tour in Japan in March. That made some people notice him for the first time. But his album was selling well before that.

People are calling the 31-year-old Satriani a "guitar hero."

Satriani says none of the tunes on the album are vehicles for guitar solos.

"They're real songs," he says. "I never thought I would be successful putting together songs just so I could solo over them. Ultimately that's pretty boring."

He explains, "When you're doing instrumental music, you've got to be good with your sounds. You haven't got lyrics to describe the meaning of the song." Satriani will be on tour with bassist Stuart Hamm and drummer Jonathan Mover through September and will tour with Jagger in October to Australia and South America.

He says the title for the album, "Surfing With the Alien," just popped into his head.

"I was looking for a title that would put me in the right frame of mind to write the most fun-sounding guitar song," he explains. "I wanted something that when I played over the chords I could have this reckless, abandoned, guitar with 'no sense of shame' ending."

Satriani says he wanted the album to have some humor in it. "A title helps me create a little movie in my head. Then I write the sound track."

The silver surfer on the album cover was mentioned as a joke because production manager Jim Kozlowski's nickname once was Silver Surfer. Satriani says, "We realized we may have come up with a good concept — bold and dynamic. I told Relativity Records I wouldn't stand for any violence or dark images on any album cover.

"The thought and look of a good guy on a surfboard conquering evil and defending right throughout the world is great. We've got T-shirts on it. We went to Marvel Comics and got the rights for the original artwork."

The title tune and "Satch Boogie," which uses Satriani's high school nickname, Satch, are being played on radio.

"I never thought the record would be commercial," Satriani says. "I thought I'd get a certain amount of guitar fans. Top 30 on the charts — I never imagined that."

Satriani was confident when he auditioned for Jagger in January. He says, "I knew Mick and I could get together and feel natural with each other and play. I did Jimi Hendrix's 'Red House' at the audition."

Satriani was born in Carle Place, Long Island, listened to Jimi Hendrix and a lot of other guitarists, started playing in bands at 14 and going on the road at 17. He took lessons for two months from jazz pianist Lennie Tristano.

"All the teachers I'd had proposed rules which I saw as stylistic cliches. His lessons were heavy and he gave a lot of work. He wanted you to make healthy decisions about yourself and your musicianship and how hard you were willing to try," Satriani says.

"I went out on the road with a band. By the time I came back I decided I had learned what I wanted from him — self-discipline. He had sort of a mystic quality about him that gave me the impression that I would always be in touch with him."

Satriani moved to Berkeley, Calif., and practiced 13 hours a day for several months. "I promised myself that if I didn't make a big improvement in three or four months I'd give it up."

After a bout with mononucleosis, Satriani says he entered a new phase in his playing. "It made me feel comfortable enough to go travel and not try to make records. I wanted to put more life experience into the music." He moved to Japan.

"I had met some Japanese people in Berkeley. That's how I ended up in Kyoto in 1976. When I got to Japan I had $200. You had to take your shoes off and cross a stream to get to this old house where I lived. There was cold running water from a mountain, no cooking facilities, a dirt floor and no locking doors. You looked down into a beautiful valley.

"I wanted to get someplace really different and see the world. Musically, I was trying to do what I'm doing now. Record companies didn't see it as viable. Instrumental music wasn't around unless it was disco."

When he returned from Japan, Satriani moved back to Berkeley. He founded the Squares, a power pop band. He made an EP, "Joe Satriani," and an LP, "Not of This Earth," which Relativity Records released.

Playing instrumentals with an audience hanging on every note is a thrill, he says. "But I don't think I'll be doing this for ever and ever. I like new experiences, just like anybody else."

New Movie Talent Highly Praised For 'A Handful Of Dust'

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A new film talent has emerged from the satirical movie "A Handful of Dust." Her name is Kristin Scott Thomas.

The movie features Alec Guinness and Anjelica Huston in small but telling cameos, but it is dominated by Scott Thomas as the elegant English rose, Lady Brenda Last, who drifts into a destructive affair with the young roue John Beaver (Rupert Graves).

Based on Evelyn Waugh's savage 1934 novel, the $6 million film co-stars James Wilby (Graves' co-star last year in "Maurice") as Lady Brenda's hapless husband, Tony. It opened in New York on June 24.

"I'm very pleased, I'm afraid, about the reaction that I'm getting. It's so nice to have one's work appreciated," Scott Thomas said in an interview about her repeated raves from the British press.

While reviews were mixed for the movie as a whole, critics hailed its female lead with the kind of accolades that banish anonymity forever.

Alexander Walker in The Standard called the actress "the film's great find," adding, "It will be criminal if British cinema doesn't ... make a great star of her."

Hugh Montgomery-Massingberd in The Daily Telegraph and Derek Malcolm in The Guardian both called her "a revelation." Iain Johnstone in The Sunday Times found the Paris-based actress "a singular sensation" in a movie that has returned her in triumph to the country she left eight years ago.

"I never really thought I'd be able to work in England, so 'A Handful of Dust' was an enormous pleasure and a great privilege," said the 28-year-old actress, who dropped out of London's Central School of Speech and Drama after a year to move to Paris.

"I was doing a teacher training course and hated it, wanted to change and couldn't," said Scott Thomas, occasionally interrupting the interview to tend to the cries of her month-old daughter, Hannah.

"I was told I'd never be an actress anyway, and would never be able to play for real," she said. "I thought it would be better to be totally miserable somewhere else and learn French at the same time."

In Paris, her life took a happier turn, beginning with her marriage to a French obstetrician. After drama training in French, she began getting parts in theater and in movies, and landed a role opposite the rock superstar Prince in his second movie, a bomb called "Under the Cherry Moon."

The film was not a financial success and was lampooned by critics. However, it enjoyed an international release. Charles Sturridge, the director of "Handful of Dust" and of the hit Waugh TV adaptation, "Brideshead Revisited," saw it and cast Scott Thomas as Lady Brenda.

She had studied the book at school and said she seized the chance to become part of the film.

"I was sure it was going to be great," she recalled, before going back to the novel to immerse herself in Lady Brenda's emotionally fatal attraction to the callow and cunning Beaver.

"She likes taking someone who is absolutely dreadful and turning him into this fascinating young man whom no one can understand what she sees in him," Scott Thomas said, explaining the fascination on which the film's denouement depends: "It makes her different, too."

"In the end, Beaver is much worse than Lady Brenda ever thought he was, really; by then she's in too deep," she said.

The daughter of an affluent naval officer who died when she was five, Scott Thomas said she was bemused by the critique of the English class system that pervades the book and the film.

"It's quite sort of endearing, really, but it is ridiculous," said Scott Thomas, a graduate of the posh Cheltenham Ladies' College. "It's like some dear old piece of furniture that you like but you think is quite the most hideous thing in the world."

She hopes not to be typecast as aristocratic English swells, and would like to do a French film next.

"I live there and I want to work there. You have to work hard, and I really mean to work hard," she said. "I've got to make sure that the revelation doesn't turn out to be a disaster."

Parkway Playhouse To Open On July 6

BURNSVILLE — Parkway Playhouse will open its 42nd season of summer shows on July 6, with the musical, "The Fantasticks."

Parkway's season, which runs through August 6, also will feature the drama, "The Miracle Worker"; Neil Simon's comedy, "The 'New' Odd Couple"; and the musical, "Quilters."

The box office at Parkway Playhouse opens Monday. Information is available by calling 704-682-6151. Evening performances will be at 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays, with additional 2 p.m. matinees on Saturdays for the first three productions.

From 1980 to 1985, the volume of Latin American exports grew by 4.1 percent, a rate greater than the 2.3 percent growth in worldwide exports, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. However, the difference was almost totally offset by the steep fall in Latin America's export prices.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: L equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY June 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Enjoy public events that appeal to you, and help your community. Counteract a busy and generous day with a quiet and studious evening. .

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Plan your career strategy for the week early, and then focus on the feelings of others. Devote the day to friends and your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Your logical and visionary thinking affords you better ways to gain your wishes. Home life proves most fulfilling. Keep a promise in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Today could be personally demanding. Try to ameliorate friction with your mate and your boss with lots of quiet talk. Keep your control.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Show off your ambitions today. Make sure that your presentation is as fine as your ideas. Listen to an outside partner who has fine, modern ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Help your family by taking on more duties at home. Set aside some time for your creative work also. A despondent friend could use a call.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Be generous at home and try to make your home more charming. An inspired idea could benefit both the self and others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): This morning work to strengthen the family bond. Keep your mind focused on what you really want. Retire early tonight for good health.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You may find it necessary to take an outsider's advice, but make sure it is expert. Work to make a cherished and distant cause more feasible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): This morning plan your week ambitiously. Think about alternative avenues toward success. Relax with kin in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Handle an important practical matter now, but plan recreation for the near future. Try to economize although recent demands are great.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Make your plans privately for the least obstruction. Plan your week carefully to avoid waste during this crucial period. Don't overspend.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, June 27

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Streamline your operating methods where business is concerned. Don't permit a private matter to disturb your work.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Focus on business instead of pleasure. Don't allow a pal in distress to drain you too much. Work on your personal security.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Try to avoid an irate higher-up. Work with an associate with a great idea. Be gracious to those who proffer help.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Work on urgent matters; don't digress on tangents. Listen to old hands instead of the new ones. Do something special with friends in the evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Material interests may frustrate you at this time. Take a well-deserved rest and indulge yourself. Avoid manipulative persons, and demonstrate will-power.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Forget the advice of a new contact, and listen to the suggestions of your family. Be loving and generous with friends in the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Handle only those duties that are urgent. Get out to new places. Indulge in hobbies with friends in the evening, and express new ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Forget pleasure for now and study financial problems. Cut down on expenses by reading periodicals. Focus on your family's needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Give careful thought to your own needs and comforts and put aside mundane tasks. Do something different with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): Plan carefully so that you don't run around aimlessly. Try to overcome resrtrictions. Contacts prove unhelpful today, but don't get discouraged.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Today is a good day to be tight-fisted with your money. Avoid those who are too indulgent. Spend time with a close friend.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Keep a disappointment to yourself, and you can work on it better later. Try to remain active and optimistic. Focus on playing fairly.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	5 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

If a play you would dearly like to make rates to fail because of the bidding or lead, see if there are any options available. South made good use of that principle to land a difficult game.

With the vulnerability in his favor, East wasted no time in making it as difficult as possible for his opponents to enter the auction by boosting his partner's weak two-bid to game. However, South was just too strong to be kept out of the auction. North realized that his partner was bidding under pressure, so he wisely stayed out of the auction.

West led the ten of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his prospects. In the light of the opening lead, it was probable that the club finesse would fail, but the bidding suggested that the diamond finesse would succeed. Another implication of the opening lead was that West held the ace of spades, so declarer found a way to ensure his contract even if the diamond finesse were doomed to failure.

The opening lead was ducked all around, and the club continuation was won in dummy. After ruffing a spade, declarer led a trump to the queen, collecting both outstanding trumps, and ruffed another spade. He completed his groundwork by cashing the ace of clubs, then crossed to the table with a trump to lead the king of spades. When East played low, declarer did not ruff, but discarded a diamond instead!

That simple maneuver left West on lead with a choice of losing options. Any black card would allow declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding the queen of diamonds from hand; and a diamond would be into declarer's major tenace, assuring no loser in that suit.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

Pitt County, North Carolina

Sealed proposals will be received by the Pitt County Engineering Department in the Commissioners' Board Room on the First Floor of the Pitt County Office Building at 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834 on July 7, 1988 until 2:00 p.m. local time.

Bids for furnishing all materials, equipment, and labor for the Construction of a Water Line to the Weyerhaeuser Greenville Lumber Facility will be opened and read immediately after the time specified above.

Complete plans, specifications, and Contact Documents are available during normal working hours at the office of the County Engineer at 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina.

The WORK will consist of the following items of construction:

Approximately 20,000 linear feet of 12" C 900 PVC or Ductile Iron Water Main and Appurtenances Thereto

All items shall be bid on a unit price basis and all prices shall include all materials, labor, and equipment whatsoever required to construct that item.

All CONTRACTORS are hereby notified that they must have all licenses required under state law for performing the WORK on this project.

General CONTRACTORS are notified that "An act to regulate the practice of General Contracting" enacted by the General Assembly of North Carolina on March 1,1925, and as subsequently amended will be observed in receiving bids and awarding Contracts.

Each proposal shall be accompanied by a five percent bid security. This security may be in cash, certified check or bid bond issued by Surety licensed to conduct business in North Carolina and named in the current list of "Surety Companies Acceptable on Federal Bonds" as published by the Audit Staff Bureau of Accountants, U.S. Treasury Department. The deposit may be retained by the OWNER as liquidated damages if the successful bidder fails to execute the Contract within ten (10) days after notice of award.

The road to excellence begins at Joe Pecheles Volkswagen. I believe it now. A frie nd of mine, we'll call him Sam, was there recently, and found every facet of the operation to be top-notch. One thing that struck Sam about buying a new car these days is the huge amount of information needed to make an appropriate choice among the many offerings in the automotive field. Joe Pecheles Volkswagens' personnel provide the information necessary to make the right choic e. The choice was made easier, it seems, because Sam bought his car with AB SOLUTELY NO CASH DOWN! The affordable German engineering of the Volkswagen line, is known throughout the world. In Eastern Carolina the

Joe Pecheles name goes hand-in-hand with the nameplate as the leader in sales and service. Sam's reaction was predictable. "Those guys really know how to treat a customer!", he said. "Not only that, but I got an amazing CASH REBATE!" Now, I'm not one to say "I told you so", but Sam's reaction was so typical that I had to smile. He said, "I know what you're thinking, and I know they have a great reputation, but they even surprised me! They answered all my questions about the cars and more, and best of all, they've got some SPECTACULAR SAVINGS." I told Sam I believed him, and was only smiling because I know so many other people who've been to Pecheles lately. The hardest part about buying there is making a choice among their GREAT SELECTION. You have to choose between the in-stock JETTAS, QUANTUMS and SCIROCCOS with REBATES FROM $2000 to $3000. I mean to tell you, they don't make the decision easy either, when they offer $500 REBATES on economical FOX and GOLF. The amount of savings depends on how your car is equipped, of course, so the nicer you get the more you save! The best part is, USE YOUR REBATE AS YOUR DOWN PAYMENT for ABSOLUTELY NO CASH DOWN! I had to admit, those are some excellent numbers, and I also had to admit that my car is a little past its' prime. Sam was so enthusiastic that we hopped into his new car and drove straight to Joe Pecheles Volkswagen, because I know a good deal when I see one, and they don't come along every day. Rebates quoted are combined manufacturer rebates and dealer discounts applied to dealer retail price. Rebates must be assigned to dealer for no cash down 100% financing with approved credit on in-stock models.

$500 Cash Rebates on VW Fox & Golf

Q Is it true that Chevy Chase, the comedian, had to pay the late Cary Grant $10 million for having slandered him over the air as "a queer"? —H.Y., Houston, Tex.

A Not exactly. Chevy Chase was interviewed by Tom Snyder, a host on the Tomorrow program, which NBC telecast from October 1973 to January 1982. In the course of the show on Sept. 25, 1980, Snyder asked Chase some questions about Grant, and Chase said, "I understand he's a homo." Grant, a notoriously litigious man who was extremely sensitive about his sex life, thereupon sued Chase for $10 million. After three years of negotiations, Grant reportedly settled for about $1 million.

"A new woman": Victoria Principal with husband, Harry

Q I've heard that Victoria Principal, who starred in the "Dallas" TV series, will do anything to further her career, and woe to anyone standing in her way. Is she a heartless, grasping opportunist? Or is it all just gossip?—B.P., Chicago, Ill.

A Victoria Principal was long regarded as a determined, hardworking, aggressive and ambitious actress. A few years ago, however, she married Dr. Harry Glassman, a Beverly Hills physician who specializes in plastic surgery. Since her marriage, Principal has acquired a serenity, graciousness and peace of mind which were lacking during her survival period in the Hollywood jungle. Much of what has been written about her can charitably be classified as gossip.

Q I'm interested in the whereabouts of Barbara Jordan, the former Congresswoman whose magnificent voice during the Watergate years kept all of us listeners spellbound. What's she up to?—Katey Barnes, Fayetteville, N.C.

AP/Wide World

Jordan: "Sharp as ever"

A Barbara Jordan, 52, is a professor at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin. According to a colleague, "Her legs don't work, and she alternates between using a walker and a wheelchair, but her brain is as sharp as ever." Jordan resides in Austin.

Q Henry Ford, founder of Ford Motors, was said to have fathered a son by one of his employees, Evangeline Côté. Is the story true, or is it one of those unfounded rumors that has grown old with the auto industry?—M. Moore, Pontiac, Mich.

A It is more than an unfounded rumor. Apparently Henry Ford (1863-1947) was involved in a lengthy illicit affair with Evangeline "Billy" Côté. In 1917, when he was 53 and Côté 23, Ford had his chauffeur, Ray Dahlinger, marry her. Billy gave birth to a son, John, in 1923 and later was given extensive property by Ford, who regarded her as his mistress and the boy as his illegitimate son. For details, you may care to read "The Fords: An American Epic," by Peter Collier and David Horowitz.

Q Does Caspar Weinberger really receive $35,000 a lecture? Is there any member of the Reagan Cabinet, past or present, who receives more? How much do you imagine Ronald Reagan will be able to ask for and get on the lecture circuit after he leaves the government on Jan. 20, 1989?—Mike Barron, West Palm Beach, Fla.

A "Business Tokyo," a Japanese magazine, paid Caspar Weinberger $35,000 for a lecture, but his regular fee is about half that amount. Don Regan, former Treasury Secretary, is probably good for $20,000 a lecture. Once he retires, Ronald Reagan will be able to ask for and get $25,000 a lecture.

Jillie Mack and Tom Selleck: From Magnum to Maine

Q Now that his "Magnum, P.I." TV series is finished and he's such a big hit in "Three Men and a Baby," does Tom Selleck, the multimillionaire, plan to retire?—Liz Schaefer, St. Paul, Minn.

A Selleck and his wife, Jillie Mack, have bought property in Maine, where they undoubtedly will spend some time; but Selleck, despite his success and wealth, is not bidding farewell to show business. At 43, he's in his occupational prime.

Q Before he wed Nancy, was Ronald Reagan ever married for less than a week to a woman named Sarah Jane Fuchs?—B. Ginn, Atlanta, Ga.

A Reagan was married from 1940 to 1948 to actress Jane Wyman, born Sarah Jane Fulks in St. Joseph, Mo. Before Reagan, Wyman was married to Myron Futterman, a dress manufacturer. Prior to Futterman, she reportedly was wed to a gentleman whose name she has never revealed publicly.

When Older Men Marry Younger Women

BY BARBARA GORDON

EACH YEAR THERE are more and more of us—women of 35 to 40 who find ourselves oppressively close to middle age or, at 45 to 55, shocked by the realization that we aren't just nudging our middle years, we're right smack in the middle of them.

Many of us live alone—some by choice, others because, after becoming widowed or divorced, we find it difficult to meet a suitable man. This condition, which I call "midlife mandrought," exists to a great extent because many men, as they become oppressively close to their own middle years, opt for a time-honored solution to assuage the terrors of midlife. These men prefer to take the tarnish off their golden years by adding a glittery accoutrement to their lives. Not a silver race car, not a sleek new sailboat. No, they are in search of another kind of trophy. They wish to add to their lives what I call a "Jennifer."

A Jennifer is a woman distinguished primarily by her youth. Since 1970, when Erich Segal's heroine in Love Story, Jennifer Cavilleri, broke our hearts, millions of Americans have been having their own love story with the name Jennifer. For years, Jennifer has been one of the most popular names for girl babies in the U.S.

But Jennifers have always been with us. Ever since King David succumbed to the youthful charms of Bathsheba, generations of middle-aged men have been stricken with "Jennifer Fever."

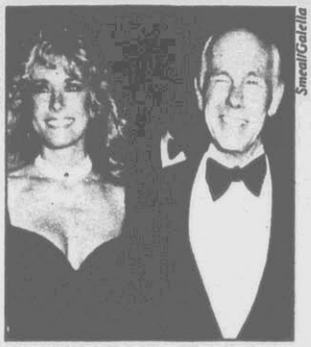

In order for the virus to incubate, it requires—in addition to a Jennifer—the special needs, wishes, dreams, fantasies and terrors of an aging man. This is not man-bashing; this is reality. Many of us remember that Charlie Chaplin, Pablo Picasso, Fred Astaire, William Douglas and Cary Grant (you no doubt can think of others) all married Jennifers, sometimes a series of Jennifers.

Many women also remember their own Jennifer days. I do. I was 26. He was 42. I remember I loved him blindly, worshipfully and uncritically. He was my lover, mentor and best friend. He was the oxygen I breathed, my life-support system. He was also married.

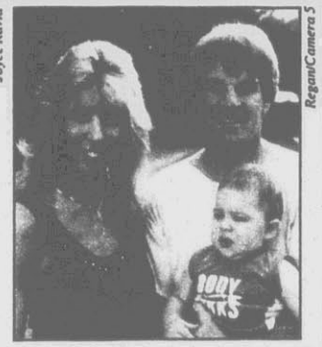

For years he was the standard by which I judged younger men who entered my life, daring them to match his wit, worldliness and savoir faire.

Like many Jennifers, although I had to share him, I was convinced, in the blithe arrogance of youth, that I had the best part of him: I had the wit without the laundry, the savoir faire without the stomach flu, the worldliness without the worries about paying the mortgage.

There was only one problem. Maybe I wouldn't have loved it, but in my Jennifer daze I think I would have done the laundry, would eagerly have nursed him through his stomach flu and gladly shared my paycheck to pay the mortgage.

But it never happened.

In the lonely periods that followed the end of our affair, sometimes I wondered, as other former Jennifers may wonder, about the road not taken—about the party or lecture, walk or trip I did not take during my Jennifer daze because I was with my older lover. Even if I wasn't with him, just knowing that I existed somewhere in the margins of his life was enough to sustain me.

In later years, I experienced nagging questions: Who might I have missed? What young man might have been at the party or lecture, concert or art gallery, who might have been more appropriate, more lasting? But those nagging questions rarely persisted for long. The answer I gave myself was that, even if a more suitable Mr. Right had been at one of those events, I doubt I would have traded in my love affair—however furtive, however stolen—for appropriateness. At 26, some of us opt for stardust in our eyes, not appropriateness.

And what about his wife? Although my Jennifer incarnation lasted six years, I never met her. I understand he is still living with her, the wife I didn't want to think about, a wife who couldn't offer the main Jennifer attributes of youthful zest and blind adoration, as I did. A wife who was the same age as I am today. But I didn't think of her then. Not as I would now.

Did I or other former Jennifers ever believe a time would come when there would be younger women who could outclass us in blind adoration? That the years would strip us of our major Jennifer assets?

With the advances in economic opportunity and the gains of the women's movement, many of today's younger women may not be as totally adoring as the Jennifers of years past. Today, a Jennifer is just as likely to be treating a cardiac condition as merely arousing murmurs of the heart in a middle-aged man. She may be an investment banker or a lawyer, a CEO or a VIP, have an M.D. or L.L.B. degree tacked to her office wall. But she also may be clever enough or innocent enough to smile and flutter her eyelashes worshipfully at an older man who desires—no, requires—such blind adoration as an antidote to his midlife anxieties. But even if she doesn't, she offers other, 1980s-style Jennifer attributes that make midlife men flock to her door.

Being a former Jennifer, I think I understand them. I also understand the women of my own generation, whom I call "Janets," a name common among women who married in the 1950s. Today I look at Jennifers as if I'm looking in a mirror at my self of 20 years ago. I didn't know it then, but now I realize I was living out part of a myth.

> As men age—so the myth goes—they grow more desirable; as women age, they lose their sex appeal.

Today I see how all of us—women and men—were taught that we had to accept the male prerogative assumed by a double standard of aging. It was part of the air we breathed, part of the fears we feared, yet we were expected to accept it as a catechism: As men age, so the myth goes, they grow sexier and more desirable. But as women age and lose their ability to bear a child, the myth holds, they lose everything—especially their sex appeal.

It was a painful notion. So wasn't it better to keep it stashed away in a closet?

Are men and women willing to look at the reality behind the myth? Recently, at a party, I was chatting with a well-known woman writer about my book, Jennifer Fever. "I don't want to know about it," she snapped. "I know all I want to know, thank you." (Later, the hostess, who had overheard our encounter, explained that the writer's husband had left her a year ago for a woman the same age as their daughter.)

For some, maybe it is too threatening. Our culture's myth-making machines—movies, magazines and television—perpetuate the illusion of the double standard. Remember when a 40-ish Woody Allen romanced a teenage Mariel Hemingway in the film Manhattan? Nobody blinked.

Of course, if the media refuse to examine the realities behind the myth, there is a reason. There is the assumption that women are fearful of examining an issue that most pertains to their lives. And the willingness to cling to that assumption is fueled by economics. Or—less kindly put—greed.

How can magazines that earn millions from advertisements promising hope in a jar—creams that purport to ward off wrinkles and cellulite—suggest that a woman may spend thousands of dollars on face creams and exercise tapes, and her husband still might leave her? Even if she looks great—for 40. How could they suggest that even women who slavishly follow fashion trends, who optimistically invest in each miracle pouring out of the youth-making laboratories, could still be left for a younger woman?

From my meetings with women around the country, I know that there are many who aren't sitting home hiding from reality, munching chocolates, idly turning the pages of one gloppy romance after another. They are eager to grow, to take responsibility for their own lives.

And taking responsibility means facing the fact of Jennifer Fever: that some men are compelled to find younger women.

If you ask men why, often they tell you it has nothing to do with their wives' appearance. Nothing to do with cellulite or wrinkles. It's something else: Their wives have begun to remind them of their mothers. A colleague died. They are afraid.

"It's not only that her body turns me on," explained Bill Epstein, a Los Angeles dentist who recently married a Jennifer. "It's an attitude of youth. Her spontaneity, her spirit. But, most of all, she adores me without judgment. Who wants to be with someone judging them all the time?"

Other men I interviewed agreed. It wasn't just the look of youth they were after but the attitude of youth—openness, innocence, unscarred emotions. As 48-year-old Alex Walters, who married 23-year-old Beth, put it: "Life hasn't had time to injure her, so she's up about everything. I'm not a projection screen for all her past hurts with men. And, most important, it's love without judgment. Call it adolescent, but what I want at this time in my life is uncritical love."

Middle-aged men want uncritical love. That particular truth doesn't come in a jar.

How can a midlife woman cope? As I traveled the country interviewing men and women, I became aware that the midlife woman who has been left for a younger woman fares best when she defies the stale perceptions of the double standard. A woman like my friend Lisa. At 53, this tall, willowy redhead exudes an ageless, cool, serene beauty. And, she admits, she works at it. "At 53, I'm the best I've ever been," she told me. "I know more about men, what they like and what they need, than I ever did. And, most important, I know more about me. There is simply more about me for a man to love and appreciate than there was in my Jennifer days. No, I'm not threatened by Jennifers."

I saw it all clearly. To the extent that a woman buys the myth, accepts the doomy forecasts of the double standard of aging and believes that it is too threatening to know about Jennifer Fever—even if it might help her cope or even prevent it—the more likely it is that she will become a victim herself, a side-effect of Jennifer Fever. To the extent that she thinks it's inevitable that she loses her sex appeal and joie de vivre as she ages, she will help the man in her life incubate the virus. She will make a self-fulfilling prophecy, and, inevitably, she will be left.

The truth need not be a threat. As with most things, the biggest threat to us all, men and women—worse than the chilling realities of aging—is denial.

Melancholy as some of these truths are, there's good news too. Even after being left for younger women, after all the pain and rage, many Janets make creative use of the experience and, like Lisa, grow and discover who they are. And knowing who they are, they know what to look for in a man. And many are seeking and finding men—marvelous, available, Jennifer-proof men.

Jennifer-proof men? They do exist. They are men like Will Albertson, who told me recently, "I'm 43, married, and I love my wife. I'm not interested in a Jennifer. But if I were single and 43, and I met some adoring young thing, I'd tell her to call me in 15 years—after she gets more lines, some more life."

Or Elliott Cooper. After 49 years of bachelorhood, he has met a woman with whom he is seriously involved. He told me, "I've reassessed what I want in a woman. I want companionship, not a trophy. I want to be with a woman who has a world of her own—friends, a job, a life—a woman who doesn't want me to be her whole world."

"But what about adoration?" I asked, remembering all the men who had made adoration sound like the emotional life raft through the troubled waters of their middle years.

"Being adored is a full-time job," Elliott replied firmly. With a small smile, he added, "Being adored is too much of a burden."

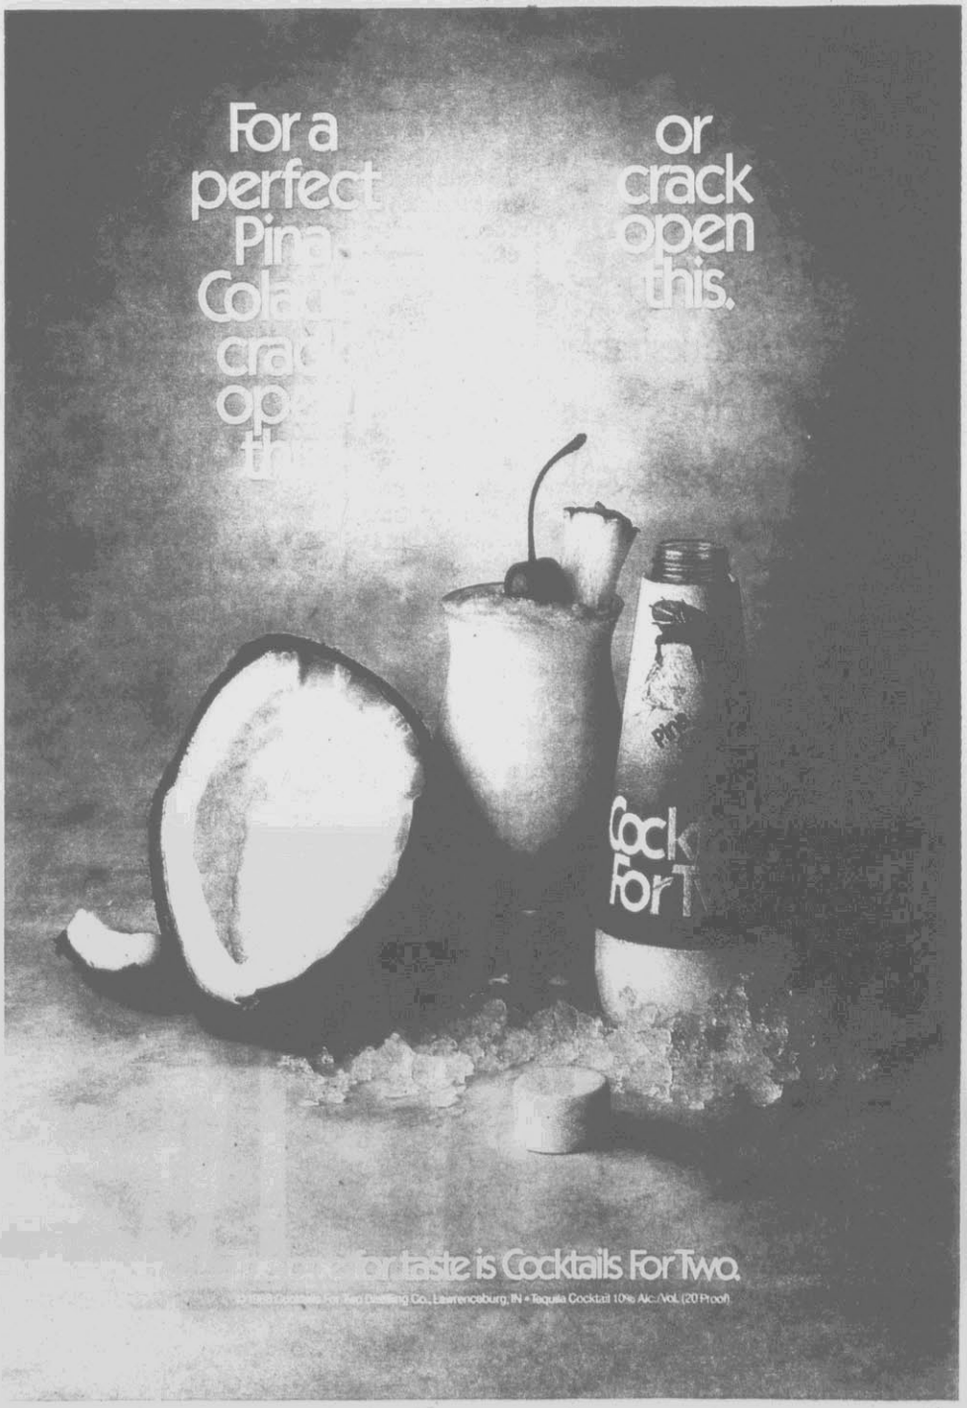

What can I tell the man who seeks a Jennifer? I can tell him that many of us midlife women are the best we can be—the most secure, the least needful, the freest we have ever been. For those men who don't know this, it may be a bit like listening to a foreign language. For others who do know it, this picture of independent, secure women is less than a blessing. It is a threat.

And the Jennifers? The Jennifer who meets a middle-aged man who wants to give up his whole life—his world and his Janet—to marry her might well consider this: The man who reaches for a Jennifer often discovers that The Fever returns. As surely as spring follows winter, day follows night, time will change Jennifer into a Janet. The man who once disrupted his life for a Jennifer in time may need another injection of youth. And the former Jennifer who finds she has become a Janet may be shaken by the sudden realization that she did not provide lifetime immunity.

Time changes many things—buds sprout, green leaves turn crimson and fall to earth. But a man with The Fever, it is fair to say—except for the graying of his hair, some creases on his brow and a new Jennifer in his life—will not change but will periodically and chronically seek out new ways to escape the reality of his own aging. Unless...

If he makes an inward journey toward self-understanding and growth, he may, in time, learn to delight in the pleasures and richness of midlife and abandon the feverish pursuit of eternal youth. As for the Janet, who is often forced to start over in the middle of her life—when she takes that same journey, she can discover resources, strength, confidence and a sense of self-esteem she never dreamed of. And, sometimes, a Jennifer-proof man.

Is your town angry about toxic waste, bad schools, unfair laws?

How To Stand Up— And Win

BY COLIN GREER

IF YOUR COMMUNITY FACES PROBLEMS LIKE asbestos in the schools, neighborhood crime or toxic waste in the water, it helps to know that you are not alone. Millions of ordinary Americans have confronted and prevailed over similar problems. Here are some lessons you can learn from their work:

Trust your perception. If something seems wrong to you, it probably is. Don't assume that if there were a problem, somebody else would be taking care of it. Frequently even life-threatening problems go undiscovered because everyone thinks it's someone else's responsibility.

A few years ago, Martha Bailey, a New Hampshire homemaker, smelled unpleasant odors in her backyard. Although authorities said there was nothing to worry about, she did worry. Soon others in the community admitted that they had similar fears. Together, they formed WASTE—We Agree Save The Environment—to confront toxic hazards in their area. They got the state's department of environmental services to prove that toxic chemicals from a closed industrial plant were running off into their backyards in gross violation of their safety. And they won. Cleanup should begin soon; in addition, WASTE won federal Superfund legislation, which puts more dollars into toxic-waste cleanup. It also requires companies and state and local governments to fully disclose the toxic levels of their production and waste-disposal procedures.

Get help when you need it. You especially need help in the early stages of working on a problem; it's so easy to feel alone and up against impossible odds. You'll be surprised at how much help you can get from community organizations, schools and colleges—as well as from groups that have organized around single issues, churches, labor unions and business associations, and regional and national centers that encourage and train people to fight for their rights.

In a St. Louis neighborhood, one bank repeatedly denied residents the loans that they needed to maintain and renovate their homes. Neighbors tried but failed to arrange meetings with the bank officials—until they discovered the Center for Community Change, a network of regional resource centers based in Washington, D.C., that provides training for community organizations. The St. Louis group soon learned that there was federal legislation that protected them: the Community Reinvestment Act, which requires banks to invest in all areas of their immediate communities. Faced with informed citizens, bank officials negotiated an agreement to set aside $50 million for loans to the area's residents.

Experts should be your advisers—not your bosses. Experts are often crucial to finding solutions to your problems. But be sure they work for you. That way, you learn a great deal—and, as a result, you become an expert too.

In Arkansas, farmers were outraged by the power and light company's plan to build a coal-fired power plant in the middle of their fields. Fearing for the health of their land, the farmers organized letter-writing campaigns, petitions and demonstrations to stop the plant. But they made little headway in the face of the company experts' assurances that the land would not be damaged. So the farmers hired their own emissions experts, who confirmed that similar power plants had done severe damage to farmland in other parts of the country. The experts trained the farmers to understand the technical problems involved, so they would be effective in future public meetings. It was not long before politicians, company employees and the media began to take the farmers seriously, and the debate about the power plant took a new turn. The plant was not stopped, but it was half the size of what originally had been planned—and it included state-of-the-art pollution controls.

Lose the battle, win the war. Winning doesn't necessarily mean getting exactly what you expected. Be flexible and keep your goals—not only your plans—in mind. Don't just dig in your heels; see if you can "win" another way.

When The Broadway Garden, a group that had built a beloved community garden on an abandoned New York City lot, faced a plan for a high-rise condominium on the site, its members soon recognized that the developer was too powerful to be stopped. Rather than give up, they decided to rethink the situation. With help from a land-preservation lawyer, a unique solution emerged: The developer agreed to build a public garden on the new building's roof!

"...Of the people, by the people, for the people." Because a government hasn't done its job doesn't mean it can't. It may just need a better person to do the job—you, for example!

In Marrero, La., tenants got tired of deteriorating public housing. But even after they had formed a tenants' organization and learned about their rights, the bureaucracy still failed to address their grievances. So they ran for office themselves. With training from The Gulf Coast Tenants Project, a regional housing advocacy group, the Jefferson Parish Housing Authority became the only low-rent public-housing authority in the U.S. headed by the tenants. One member, Rose Mary Smith, soon was appointed to the area's board of commissioners and is now a candidate for the office of state director of Housing and Urban Development. Meanwhile, a $2.5 million award was won from HUD for the renovation of 200 apartments, and the tenants report much-improved services.

Distinguish symptom from cause. It is important to understand the level of the problem you are dealing with. The underlying cause of crime in your building may be unemployment in the neighborhood, but that shouldn't stop you from setting up a Crime Watch project. On the other hand, if the real cause of pollution in a river is a factory upstream, it doesn't make much sense to ignore what happens at the factory. Be practical: Start where you see a real chance for success.

In the Midwest, foreclosure on mortgages has become a massive threat to family farms. Some farm groups have tried to work on symptoms, while others focus on causes. In central Minnesota, farmers felt that officers of the area banks and the Farmers' Home Administration should aid rather than demean them, as was often the case when they had trouble meeting payments. Local groups formed and pressured banks and FHA officers to act more responsibly. Farmers formed peer-counseling and case-advocacy groups, as well as "rescue teams," so that farmers had support at meetings with loan officers. Gradually, bank officials began treating farmers with more respect and offered more real help.

But the deeper problems remained. Recognizing that foreclosures are symptoms of the much larger issues of national credit and subsidy policies, the National Save the Family Farm Coalition was formed. It developed the Family Farm Act, which is currently before Congress. The goal is to make farms viable enterprises, capable of paying their way and feeding the nation.

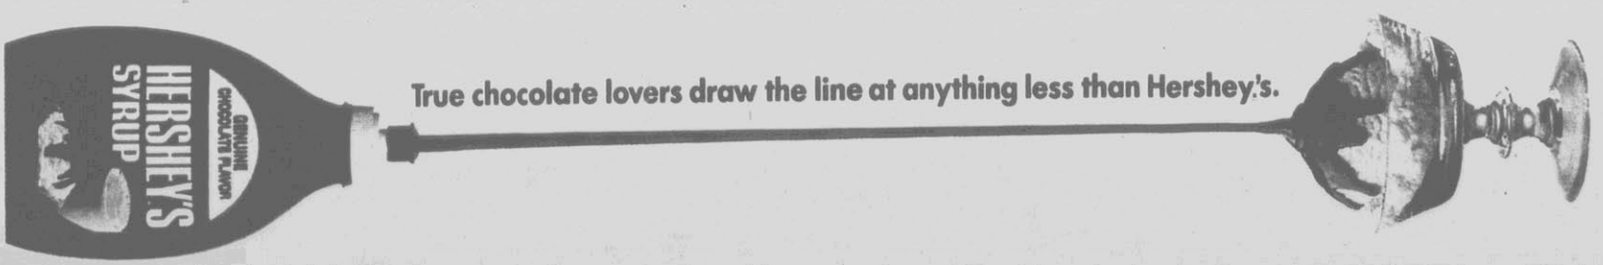

The media and the message. The communications networks play a big role in forming public opinion. Successful community-action groups have been very inventive in finding ways to influence the media—submitting editorials on key issues for local and state papers, for example—in addition to picking up public-relations know-how.

The Citizens Clearinghouse for Hazardous Wastes (CCHW) began a "McToxics" campaign to take on image-sensitive opponents. Concerned about health risks in the manufacture and disposal of Styrofoam, CCHW coordinated citizen efforts nationwide into a campaign to pressure McDonald's to cancel orders for 70 million pounds of the material for its food packaging. In October 1987, more than 100 "McActions" were staged at McDonald's restaurants in 25 states—drawing reporters with leaflets, "talking garbage cans" that provided information about Styrofoam and costumed McDonald's characters. The campaign's results to date: McDonald's has told its suppliers to stop using Styrofoam made with fluorocarbons; the material has been banned outright in Maine and Vermont; and a national ban is being considered by the U.S. Senate.

Recognize and celebrate success. It is rare that a community group finally completes its work. There always seems to be another problem, a new angle. So it is very important to keep people's spirits and hopes high by recognizing neighborhood heroes.

The "Giraffe Award," for example, honors community leaders each year for "sticking their necks out." The Midwest Academy, a training center in Chicago for activists and organizers, gives annual awards to individuals who have significantly contributed to social change. And the Charles Bannerman Memorial Fellowship Fund—administered in Washington, D.C., by The Youth Project, a national community-advocacy center—gives outstanding minority community leaders a sabbatical to reflect, study and rest from the fray. Some of these prizes carry small financial awards, others relatively large ones. In each case, however, the prize makes the recipient's voice louder and clearer when raised on behalf of community progress.

'MY DAUGHTER REFUSES TO EAT!'

When to help a diet-conscious teen

Being thin is chic. It is synonymous with sex appeal, popularity and status. While all age groups wrestle with diet, teenage girls have the greatest problems associated with overdieting. Left unattended, it can become a health problem.

During the teenage years, eating habits become more personal, less of a family affair. This development occurs at a time when a teenager is feeling many complex emotions, and eating is often the one area she feels she can control. Parents may not know, for instance, what foods their teens eat through much of the day, or how much.

When should you worry about your daughter's eating habits? When does a change simply mean a normal shift in appetite? At what point does a wish to be slender cross the line into a serious eating disorder?

To find out, we consulted with psychotherapists, adolescent psychiatrists and nutritionists to learn the early clues to a potential eating disorder. Often, with the awareness of parents and friends, a potential problem can be detected and dealt with.

Early Clues

The following can be indicative of a potential eating disorder:

1. CHANGES IN EATING BEHAVIOR: Alternating between feasting and fasting, loss of appetite, rapid eating, obsession with dieting or with one particular food.
2. CHANGES IN GENERAL BEHAVIOR: Obsessive weighing, changes in bathroom habits, menstrual irregularity, complaints of constipation, overexercising, impulsive behavior that might indicate drug or alcohol abuse, complaints of chills, use of laxatives or diuretics.
3. PHYSICAL CHANGES: Gradual but constant weight loss, skin rash, loss of hair, chronic swelling of cheeks.
4. PSYCHOLOGICAL CHANGES: Depression, sudden withdrawing or antisocial behavior, extreme concern with achievement or perfectionist goals.

Aim For Healthy Eating Habits

Some experts feel that, by following the suggestions listed below, parents can help teenagers to develop healthy eating habits and a positive attitude about food.

- Eat one family meal together daily.
- Encourage pleasant social interaction during mealtimes and immediately afterward. Try to avoid stressful subjects.
- Serve food that looks and is lean. Serve it attractively.
- Control the size of portions. Serve smaller portions. (Done regularly, this can help a teen develop her own sense of control.)
- Have available snacks that are light and nutritious. Buy prepacked smaller or single portions.
- Don't nag about eating.
- Teach basic nutrition and exercise early at home. Be an example.
- Monitor weight and height regularly.
- Be very careful when encouraging a young person to lose weight. Make sure a professional supervises any diet.

Foods that are extraordinary in taste, visually appealing, and light and lean looking are most likely to encourage good eating habits. To accomplish this in the recipes that follow, we've combined a variety of fresh ingredients high in nutritious complex carbohydrates. They are delicious, but remember in your enthusiasm not to overload the plates!

Angel Hair Pasta & Quick Tomato Sauce

One of the sweetest and freshest-tasting tomato sauces we've ever created. Served with just one ounce of pasta per person, it is delicious, satisfying and light. This couldn't be easier—and it's on the table in less than 20 minutes.

1/2 cup olive oil
2 cloves of garlic, finely slivered
2 cups diced fresh plum tomatoes
2 cups diced canned plum tomatoes
Pinch of nutmeg
Salt to taste
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
4 tablespoons coarsely chopped parsley
3 cups peeled, sliced and slivered yellow onions
1/4 pound angel hair pasta

1. Over low flame, heat 1/4 cup olive oil in a saucepan. Add garlic and cook until it just softens. Do not brown.
2. Add tomatoes, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Stir and cook, uncovered, over medium heat for 10 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons parsley and remove from heat. Reserve, keeping warm.
3. While sauce is cooking, line a cookie sheet with aluminum foil. Spread onions on sheet, toss with remaining 1/4 cup olive oil and sprinkle with black pepper. Place under preheated broiler, 3 to 4 inches from flame, and cook until onions are wilted and slightly brown—5 to 6 minutes. Carefully stir onions around a bit while they are broiling.
4. Cook pasta in a medium-sized pot of boiling water until it is just tender. Drain and rinse.
5. To serve, divide tomato sauce among 4 bowls or plates. Place equal portions of pasta on each plate, in center of tomato sauce. Top with broiled onions and sprinkle with remaining 2 tablespoons chopped parsley.
Serves 4

Minted Tabouleh With Fresh Vegetables

The lightest grain of all—mixed with fresh tomatoes, cucumbers, lemon juice and mint—creates a refreshing and nutritious side dish or luncheon entree. If there's any left over, it makes a delicious addition to a green salad.

1 heaping cup fine bulgur wheat
1 cup cold water
1/2 cup fresh lemon juice
2/3 cup olive oil
1 cup coarsely chopped fresh mint leaves
1/2 cup coarsely chopped parsley
1/2 cup finely diced purple onion
2 teaspoons finely minced garlic
1 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 ripe plum tomatoes, seeded and cut into 1/2-inch dice
2 large cucumbers (1 peeled, seeded and cut into 1/2-inch dice; 1 sliced)
Whole fresh mint leaves (for garnish)

1. Place bulgur wheat in large bowl. Mix with cold water, lemon juice and 1/3 cup olive oil. Let stand for 30 minutes, then fluff with a fork.
2. Add the remaining 1/3 cup olive oil, mint, parsley, onion, garlic, pepper and salt. Toss the mixture well with a fork.
3. Add tomatoes and diced cucumber and toss all ingredients together. Adjust seasonings to taste. Let stand for at least 1/2 hour before serving, to bring out flavors. Arrange tabouleh with slices of cucumber on a plate and garnish with fresh mint leaves.

Why contact lenses can make your eyes look older.

And what to do about it.

Contact lenses do wonders for your vision, but they can also make you squint more. And handle the delicate eye area more. Are you aware that all that extra squinting and stretching can push and pull you into earlier wrinkling?

That's why you need to use a moisturizing eye cream faithfully every day. But there's a catch. Because your eyes are more sensitive to irritation, you can't take chances with anything that might cause redness, puffiness, bumps or tears.

Neutrogena® Eye Cream gives you everything ophthalmologists and dermatologists insist upon for safety. It's balanced to the pH of tears, fragrance-free, and non-comedogenic (won't clog pores). It's even formulated with the same safe moisturizing and cushioning ingredient used in delicate eye surgery.

The results are something to see. You can actually feel your skin become softer and smoother as the hydrophilic (water-loving) formula attracts and holds all the moisture the eye area needs so desperately.

Now you don't have to trade safety for results. Every day—under make-up and at night—Neutrogena Eye Cream lets you hold the line against time. And irritation.

Corsica. Number 1 in a number of family circles.

People ask a lot of their family sedan. One minute it's a school bus, the next, it's hauling a load of groceries home. Sometimes it commutes to work, and other times it takes you out on the town.

That's why everyone on Team Corsica, from the head designer to the project secretary, worked so hard to make Chevrolet Corsica a complete family sedan.

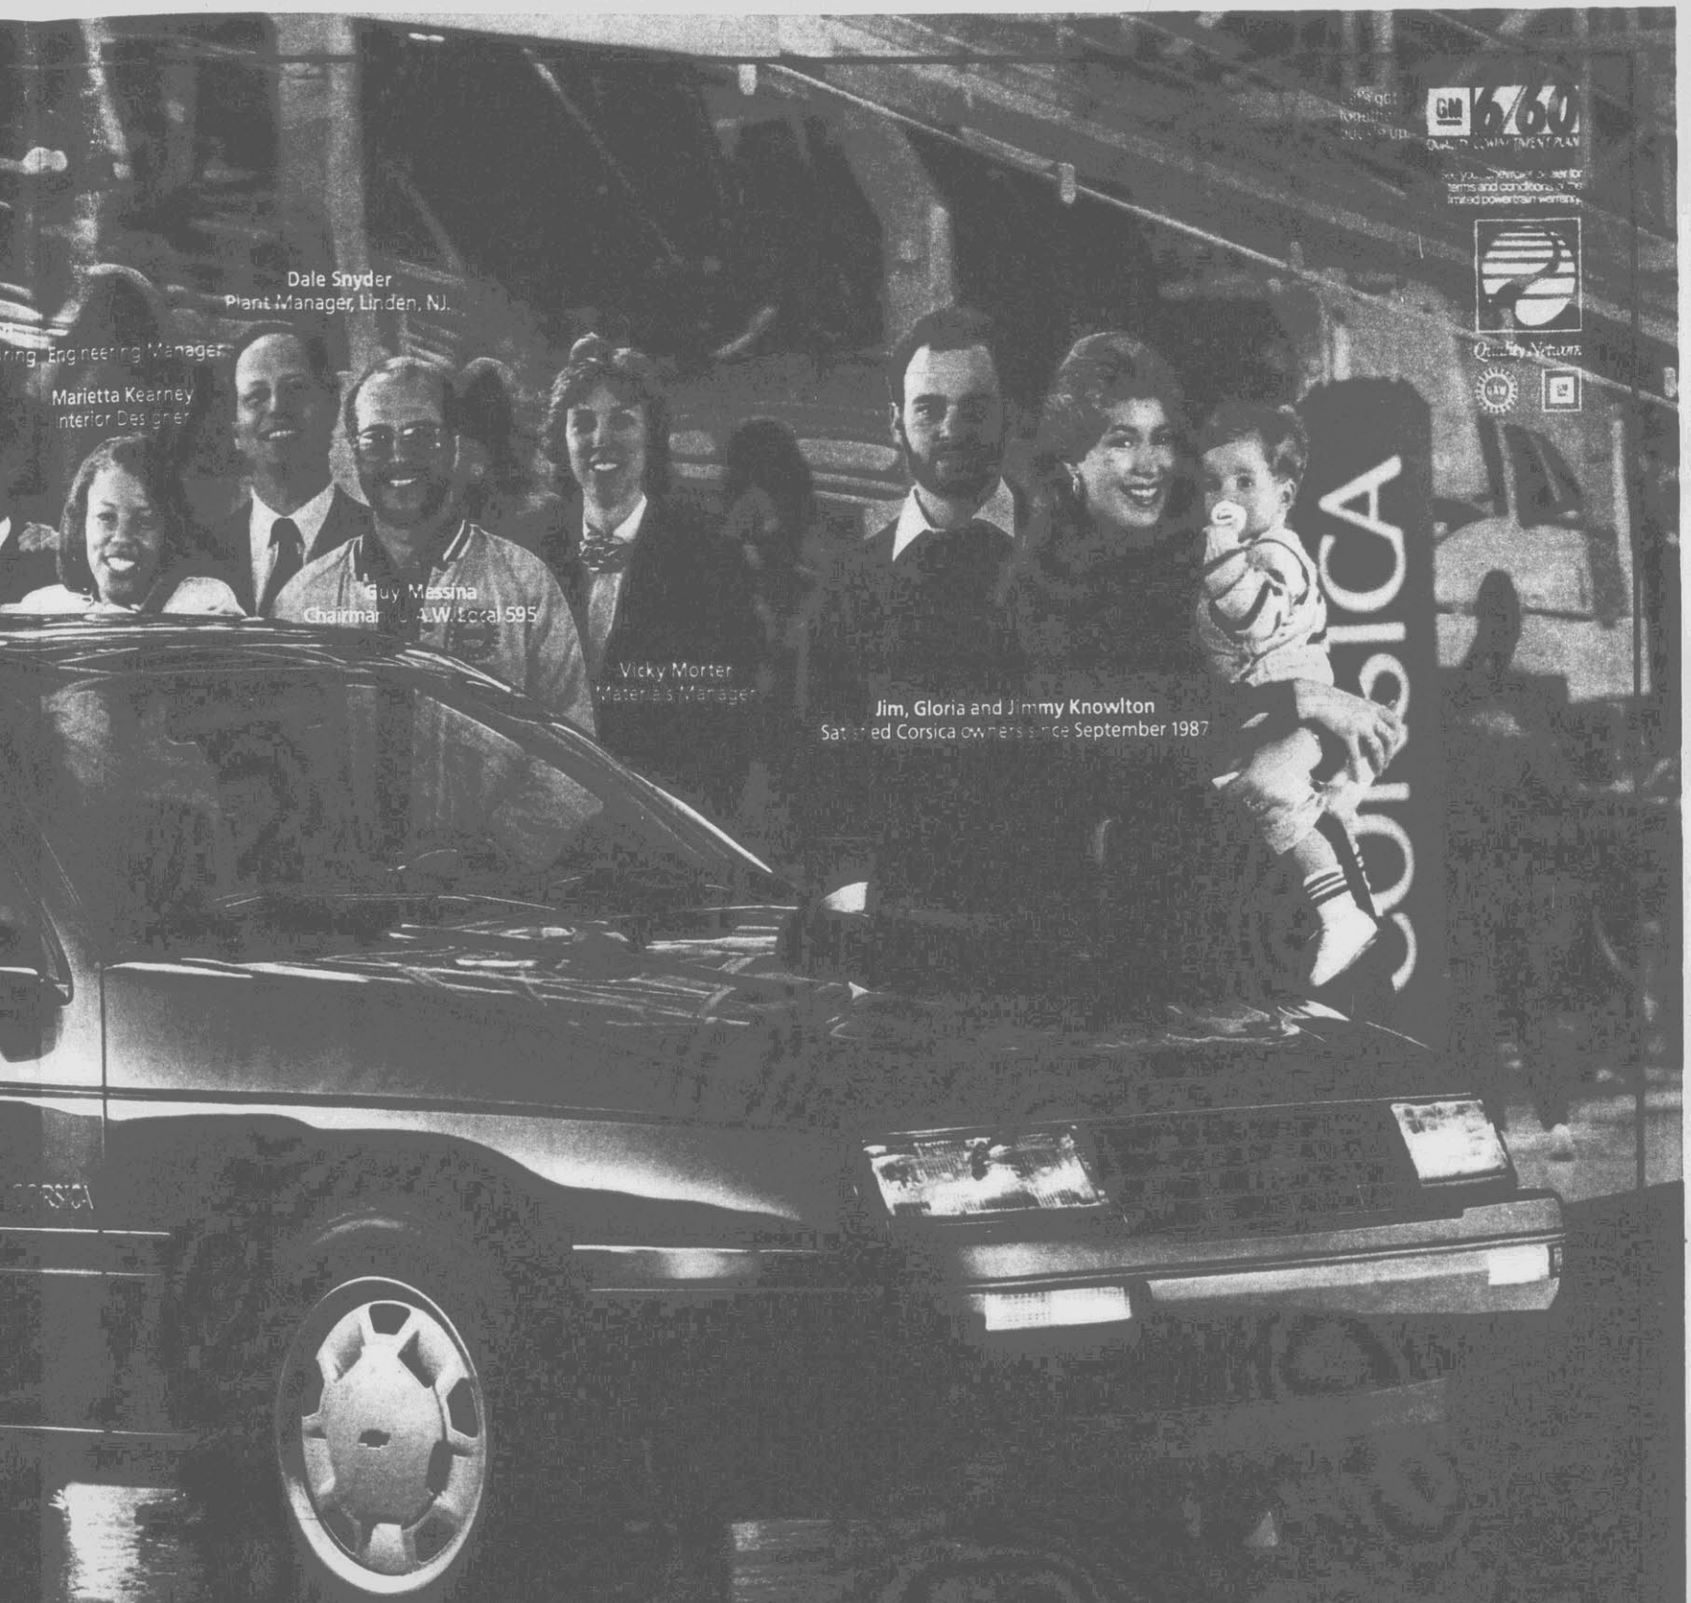

Designed to meet your needs.

More than one person usually ends up driving the "family car," so Corsica's driver's seat has an extra adjustment for height. Corsica will end up hauling a lot of precious cargo, so we made lap-shoulder safety belts standard for both outboard rear-seat passengers.

And since a car's exterior should do more than look good, we gave Corsica a shape that's more aerodynamic than a Porsche 928S. On top of all this, Corsica has the most passenger room of any compact sedan in America.

That's why it gives you so much.

From the start, Corsica was designed to meet the overwhelming demands of today's families. So you're rewarded by a car with such thoughtful touches as a slide-out glove box that's big enough to hold a major metropolitan phone book. A wet-arm wiper system that puts spritzer fluid right on the washer arm to use fluid more efficiently and lengthen the time between refills. An engine compartment that makes checking the oil almost as easy as raising the hood.

Plus a long list of standard features that includes a 5-speed manual transmission, power rack-and-pinion steering, and all-season steel-belted radials.

And for all our effort, what's our reward? The honor of being named Family Circle Family Car of the Year for Families with Young Children. An award we're especially proud of because they're exactly the people we had in mind when we designed Chevrolet Corsica.

Sunset Melons

Transparently sliced melons, fish and meats in a vibrant presentation. Served on one plate, this can be an exciting luncheon first course; served with soup and salad, a light supper.

3 tablespoons fresh orange juice
1 tablespoon raspberry vinegar
4 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
3 teaspoons chopped fresh mint
3 very thin slices cantaloupe, rind removed
3 very thin slices honeydew, rind removed
4 very thin wedges watermelon, rind and seeds removed
2 thin slices smoked salmon
3 thin slices prosciutto
2 thin slices beef carpaccio (optional)
Fresh mint sprigs (for garnish)

1. To make vinaigrette: Place orange juice in a small bowl. Whisk in vinegar. Slowly drizzle in olive oil, whisking constantly. Add salt, pepper and chopped mint. Reserve. (Makes 1/2 cup of vinaigrette, enough for 4 portions.)

2. Arrange melon slices, smoked salmon, prosciutto and beef carpaccio decoratively on a dinner-size plate. Drizzle vinaigrette lightly over all. Garnish with a fresh mint sprig.

NOTE: Thinly sliced poached or smoked chicken breast may be substituted for the meats. Thinly sliced sturgeon or other smoked white fish may be substituted for the salmon.

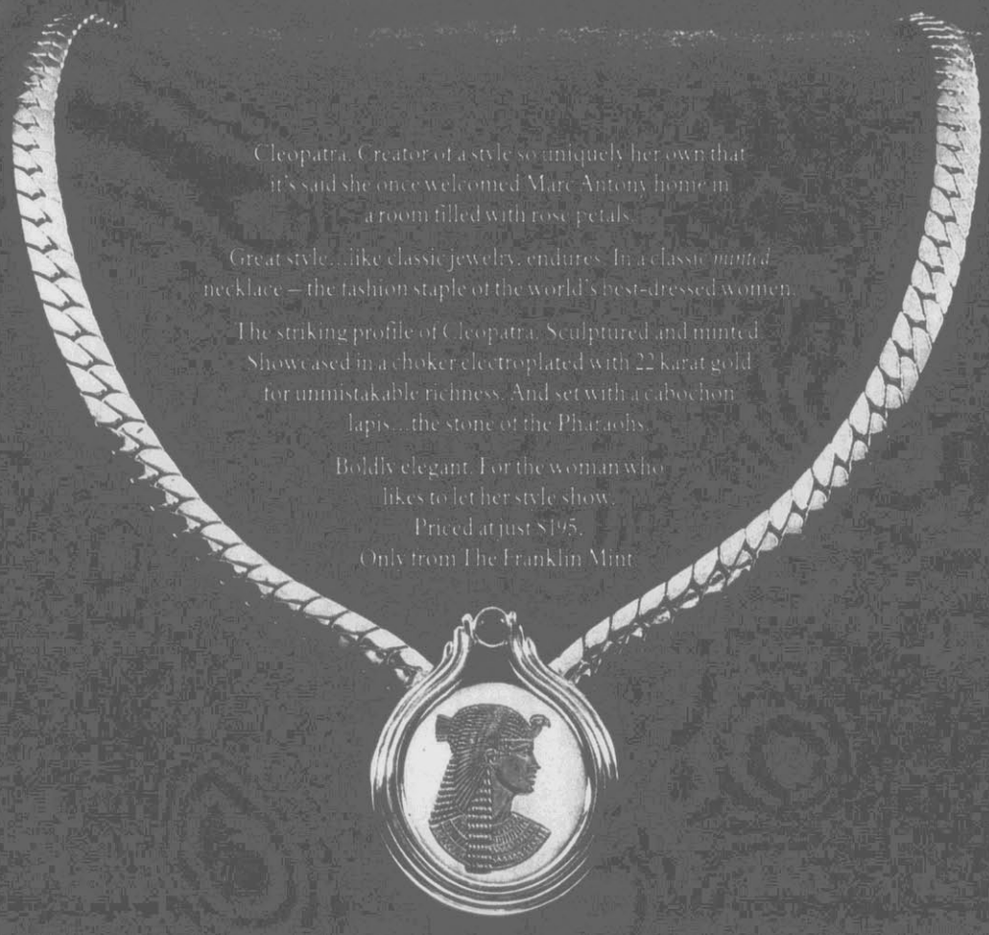

Makes 1 portion

Where To Get Help

Should a serious problem develop, seek professional help quickly. But be aware that eating disorders are complicated. Experts say that the best help may involve a team of three specialists: a nutritionist, an adolescent psychologist and an adolescent physician. Below are some organizations that can assist you:

Cleopatra. A reputation for style.

Cleopatra. Creator of a style so uniquely her own that it's said she once welcomed Marc Antony home in a room filled with rose petals.

Great style...like classic jewelry, endures. In a classic minted necklace – the fashion staple of the world's best-dressed women.

The striking profile of Cleopatra. Sculptured and minted. Showcased in a choker electroplated with 22 karat gold for unmistakable richness. And set with a cabochon lapis...the stone of the Pharaohs.

Priced at just $195.

Royal touch: Murphy (r), with Hall

A Prince on the Prowl

In Coming to America, Eddie Murphy plays a fabulously rich African prince in New York incognito to find a bride, and Arsenio Hall is his sex-hungry companion. But Murphy and Hall play a trick on us: Each appears disguised as several other characters—a preacher, a transvestite, a white man—which isn't revealed till the final credits. "Some of the guys we meet are us too," says Hall. "I pass someone at a party, and it's me, and Eddie is the barber who cuts his hair." Sneaky, guys. Paramount.

HOW ONE MAN'S LOVE FOR BBQ LED TO A MASTERPIECE.

Rich Davis grew up on barbecue. His father introduced him to the art. He gave Rich an appreciation for good barbecue and simple, honest ingredients. And after Rich grew up, he began a quest for the perfect barbecue sauce.

THE FINEST INGREDIENTS

RICH DAVIS, CREATOR OF K.C. MASTERPIECE®

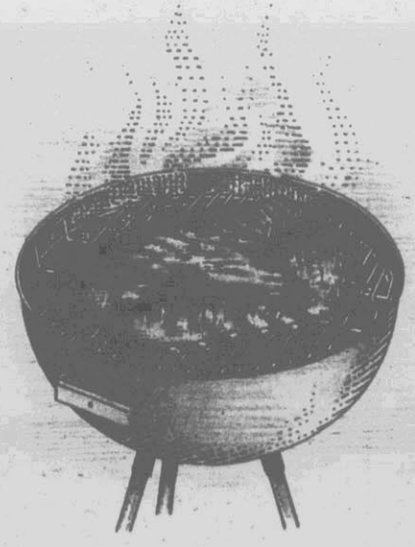

Barbecue lovers agree with him. K.C. Masterpiece® has been used in winning over 50 first place awards in barbecue competitions. And the reason is simple. Rich Davis refused to take short cuts. There's no sugar, gums or artificial thickeners in K.C. Masterpiece.® Instead, Rich uses the finest ingredients—like ripe tomatoes and dark molasses—for a taste you won't find anywhere else. K.C. Masterpiece® is truly a sauce that lives up to its name.

Perfection was a long time coming, but all the time spent puttering around in his Kansas City kitchen finally paid off. He mixed up the barbecue sauce that was to become K.C. Masterpiece.® Rich says, "I kept changing the ingredients and seasonings until it was the best stuff I'd ever tasted."

From the people who clean San Francisco homes 10,000 times a year!

Clean your home in half the time or less! GUARANTEED!

If you're still cleaning your home the old-fashioned way, you're costing yourself time. Precious time. Leisure time. Time you'd rather be spending at the movies, at the beach, at the game or with friends . . . anywhere else, in fact, but in cleaning your house or apartment.

Now, here's cleaning help for anyone who has better things to do than vacuum or dust or scrub a home for hour after hour. Here is SPEED CLEANING.

This book will give you back your weekends—No exceptions! No excuses! No kidding!

Enter the Clean Team, professionals who clean San Francisco homes 10,000 times a year. Let them show you how they can clean an average home in just 42 minutes—start to finish—and a one-bedroom apartment in about 21 minutes.

They've timed and tested every sequence, technique and product imaginable. They know what works (a step-saving apron like the pros wear, clear ammonia, not sudsy, and a feather duster—yes, a feather duster) and what doesn't ("bargain" mops and brushes that aren't, wasting time, money and effort by using too much cleanser or cleaning where it's already clean, and running back and forth to the trash). They don't work harder, just smarter and faster. And their waiting list has often been six months long.

Get through with housework—and out of the house—faster

Here are the professional trade secrets that have put their services in such great demand—at a fraction of the cost. Just follow their simple approach to streamlining housework as they take you through the whole house, step-by-step . . . room-by-room . . . from the horrors of kitchen and bathroom cleaning to pet hair and cookie crumbs on the living room couch.

The result will be a sparkling clean home in under half the time it used to take. Very clean. Very fast. Very easy. (The Clean Team works in groups of three, but you may find a "team of one" the most efficient way possible.)

Work smarter, not harder

You'll save hours every week. Hours that add up to days you'll spend not cleaning the house.

Here's just some of what this book shows you:

- ☑ Time-tested system that makes every move count
- ☑ The Speed-Clean apron that can save you endless steps
- ☑ How to clean the bathroom in 12 minutes
- ☑ Places often overlooked by distracted dusters
- ☑ The cleaning products that work best . . . the tools that save time and money
- ☑ How using less cleanser can save you time and effort
- ☑ A simple idea that may save you 20% or more vacuuming time
- ☑ Dozens of helpful diagrams
- ☑ Methods that work for a single person or a whole household

So, if you have better things to do with your weekends than housework, you owe it to yourself to look into SPEED CLEANING.

No-Risk Guarantee

Just try SPEED CLEANING for 30 days. If, after using the Clean Team's techniques, you haven't cut your cleaning time in half, return the book for a full refund. No questions asked. You risk nothing—and have your weekends to gain back. Order your copy of SPEED CLEANING today!

Shipment is guaranteed within 60 days. General Offices: 37 11th Avenue, Huntington Station, NY 11746. © 1988 National Syndications Inc.

TO ORDER. Send your name, address, zip code and check or money order for $5.95 plus $1.90 postage and handling to: Publishers Choice, Box 4171, Dept. CT51-PC, Huntington Station, NY 11746. NY, NJ, IA, IL and MI residents please add appropriate sales tax.

IN STEP WITH:®

BY JAMES BRADY

Peter Weller

Ellison/Sygma

IT WAS A MUGGY AFTERNOON on the West Side of Manhattan, and I was in the back room of a joint called Melon, drinking black coffee at one of the tables, examining the ketchup bottle and listening to some very fine horn on the jukebox when Peter Weller came in.

"It's my neighborhood place," he said. "I used to own a piece of a restaurant down the street. And you can see my apartment from here, through that window." He listened to the music for a moment. "That's Miles Davis," he said. "That's my hero."

Weller said he would be off to Rome the next day to start a film called Leviathan. He'd been studying Italian. He lived for a while in Spain and speaks Spanish and some French. He is a very good-looking man with surfer's blond hair and Paul Newman blue eyes and the trim look of the marathon-runner he is. Except for a tiny gold earring in his left lobe, he was anything but flamboyant in jeans, a plaid shirt and a very Brooks Brothers-looking blue blazer.

Most young actors can talk only about their work and themselves. With Weller, the conversation has range. Over the next hour, we talked about playing trumpet and the kind of cigars he likes to smoke, about Mike Nichols ("my mentor and the most gifted director I know") and about Nichols' new wife, Diane Sawyer of 60 Minutes, about once reading an entire book by Albert Camus aloud with a pal, about his nostalgia for the New York disco scene of the 1970s ("I still love dancing—I went dancing last night"), about Texas, his Catholic upbringing and his dad, a career Army chopper pilot who enrolled in law school at age 44.

As they say in the business, Weller is "hot." Shakedown opened in May. A Killing Affair, in which he plays a deranged psychopath, is due out this year. And The Tunnel, with Jane Seymour, has been completed. It was, of course, Robocop that made him famous; a sequel could make him rich. Will he do Robocop II? "Sure," he said, "if they get the script right."

Weller must be a glutton for punishment. Robocop required 6½ hours of makeup each day, a 40-pound costume and temperatures inside that reached 120 degrees.

But what people should realize about Peter Weller is that he was an actor for a long time before Robocop. "I worked onstage for 13 years," he said, "and I think I did a play every one of those years." It was Joe Papp, the Broadway genius, who gave the actor his first real shot, and Weller is talking now about acting in one of the Shakespeare plays Papp's company is staging in New York over the next few years. "He wanted me to play Mercutio [in Romeo and Juliet]," Weller said, though that role didn't work out.

For a while, he and Ali MacGraw were together. Now he has another girl and says, "Marriage seems to be getting near." He talked about that. And about a restaurant he and the actor Treat Williams own. And about their new chef. And about how good an actor Alan King is. And about how he loves Spain. And all this on a couple of cups of decaf coffee.

Then he left to pack and get ready for Rome and another movie.

BROADWAY: Includes Sticks and Bones, 1972 (debut); Full Circle, 1973; Summer Brave, 1975; Streamers, 1977.
FILMS: Include Butch and Sundance: The Early Days, 1979 (debut); Just Tell Me What You Want, 1980; Shoot the Moon, 1981; Of Unknown Origin, 1983; The Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai Across the 8th Dimension, 1984; Firstborn, 1984; Robocop, 1987; Shakedown, 1988.

BRADY'S BITS

A couple of nights after my interview with Weller, I ran into Alan King, having dinner with his wife at a restaurant called Le Cirque. I told him what Weller had said about him—about how good an actor King was. He nodded, pleased. It's funny about movies. Alan and Peter and Ali MacGraw made Just Tell Me What You Want, directed by the great Sidney Lumet. Some critics raved. The audience stayed home. Then came Robocop, a sleeper that turned into a money machine.

"Robocop" was a huge surprise hit. But this year could be even bigger for Peter Weller. He opened in May in "Shakedown" and will star in two more movies later this year.

Now there is a flea control product so advanced only a veterinarian can dispense it. Pro-Spot® fenthion is available in squeeze tubes containing 5.6% or 13.8% solutions. Apply directly on the skin in one spot on your dog's back according to directions. Pro-Spot sends protection everywhere—with treatment every two weeks. For best results it is recommended to use Pro-Spot in conjunction with Haver's advanced compatible flea products and a premise control.

Ask Your Veterinarian For Details.

Pro-Spot® Fenthion

HAVER

DESCRIPTION: Pro-Spot® Solution is available as 5.6% and 13.8% concentrations of fenthion in a glycol ether base.
SPECIAL NOTE: As with all the flea control products for dogs, treatment with Pro-Spot® Solution must be used with a control program aimed at reducing flea populations and flea breeding areas in the dog's environment (bedding, carpets, yard, etc.)
INDICATION: Pro-Spot® (fenthion) Solution is indicated for the control of fleas on dogs only.
CAUTION: Federal law restricts this drug to use by or on the order of a licensed veterinarian.
PRECAUTIONS: Repeated or prolonged use may cause marked cholinesterase depression. Fenthion is a cholinesterase inhibitor. Do not use this product on dogs at the same time or within 14 days before or after treatment with other cholinesterase inhibiting pesticides, drugs or chemicals. Do not use with flea or tick collars. Toxicologic interactions between cholinesterase inhibitors and various muscle relaxants and central nervous system depressants have been reported. The use of Pro-Spot® with these drugs is not recommended. The following drugs may enhance fenthion toxicity: succinylcholine, procaine, aminoglycosides, and various neuromuscular blocking agents. Do not use more often than once every 2 weeks.

Treatment with Pro-Spot® Solution at 2-week intervals should not exceed 6 months as controlled safety studies of longer duration have not been conducted.

CONTRAINDICATIONS: Do not use on puppies under 10 weeks of age. Do not use on sick, stressed or convalescing dogs.

The safe use of fenthion in breeding males has not been established.

ADVERSE REACTIONS: Adverse reactions reported from the use of fenthion in clinical field trials included occasional incidences of vomiting, loose stool, diarrhea, anorexia, and intermittent coughing.
ANIMAL TOXICOLOGY: Multiple treatments with Pro-Spot® Solution at 2 week intervals with 60 mg./kg. (7.5X) have induced toxicosis.

Anemic, parasitized, young puppies showed an increased incidence of diarrhea following multiple treatments with 10 or 50 mg./kg.

WARNING: Keep out of reach of children. This material contains a cholinesterase inhibitor. If swallowed by human, immediately call a physician, poison control center or hospital emergency room. Upon medical advice induce vomiting with ipecac syrup. If ipecac is not available, have person drink water then gently try to induce vomiting with finger. Be extremely careful not to damage throat. May be harmful if absorbed through the skin. Do not get in eyes, on skin, or on clothing. Avoid breathing vapors. Wash thoroughly with soap and warm water after handling. Wash contaminated clothing. Do not contaminate feed or food. If spilled on skin, wash immediately with soap and warm water. If in eyes, rinse immediately with large amounts of water and obtain medical aid.

Skin swab tests on dogs treated with Pro-Spot® Solution at greater than label rate revealed that the amount of active ingredient at the treatment site declined rapidly with only 51% of the dose remaining at 15 minutes, 22% at 2 hours and less than 3% at 8 hours post treatment. Avoid grooming, direct contact, or unventilated confinement with dog(s) for 8 hours after administration of Pro-Spot®.

Chris Evert (l) and Martina Navratilova in action: Their success—on the court and at the bank—no doubt has spurred many athletic girls to aim for tennis careers

Which professional sport offers its women champions the most in prize money? The amount changes from year to year, but the correct answer for now seems to be tennis.

As of this writing, Martina Navratilova has won more than $13 million and Chris Evert more than $8 million in the course of their successful careers. To such substantial sums you can add a few million paid to 33-year-old Chris and 31-year-old Martina for product endorsements—and you will quickly understand why so many ambitious and athletic young women have decided to concentrate on tennis as a career.

Eating greens—one way to healthier heart

More than 5 million people in the United States suffer from coronary artery disease, in which the blood flow to the heart muscle is slowed or blocked. Research has indicated that if you limit the amount of two substances —cholesterol and fat—in your blood, the chances are that you will live longer than if you do not.

To help you select the foods that best limit your cholesterol and fat intake, the federal government is offering you, at no cost, a most useful, informative, beneficial and—if you follow through on its tips—helpful publication titled Planning a Diet for a Healthy Heart. For a copy, send your name and address to Dept. 51, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. It might well add several years to your life.

From the Reagan Joke File

Although he listed his occupation as "rancher" when he decided to run for public office in 1965, Ronald Reagan has always been proud of his film career. Most of the anecdotes he likes to tell concern his Hollywood days and colleagues. Here are two he narrated to the Associated General Contractors of America on April 18:

"I'll never forget the reaction of my old boss at Warner Bros., Jack Warner, when he first heard I was running for governor of California. He said, 'Oh, no, no, no! Jimmy Stewart for governor, Reagan for best friend.'

"And then there was the time back in the early days of the picture business when Jack Warner's brother, Harry, was first told about the development of motion-picture sound—talking pictures. Harry's reaction was one that I was often reminded of during my early days in public life. He said simply, 'Who the heck wants to hear actors talk?'"

London Express

What's so appealing about this basic black, slinky number that it brought $36,600 last month at Christie's, the auction house in London? "It was worn by Marilyn Monroe in 1959 when she made Some Like It Hot," explains David Robinson, who purchased it for London's Museum of the Moving Image, which opens in September. The model is Kay Kent, a Monroe look-alike.

Cover Story....

"All My Children"

At this year's Daytime Emmy Awards (airing June 29 on CBS), soap queen Susan Lucci, who plays Erica Kane Montgomery on "All My Children," will try for the ninth time to win Best Actress. Lucci's seemingly eternal quest for an Emmy is an old story, but what's new is that in the past year there has been a significant change in Erica's life, one that reflects a new conservatism on soap operas. Erica, once daytime's pre-eminent vixen, finally became a mother. Her closet, bigger than your living room, is still filled to the brim with froufrous, yet the pots of lip gloss in her adjoining vanity now go largely untouched; the mirror is hardly looked in anymore. All attention in the world class model's mansion has been diverted instead to another adjoining room — the nursery, where 5-month-old Bianca Montgomery sleeps.

Erica isn't the only soap character changing with the times. A spin around the daytime dial indicates that during the past year, soap operas drifted toward the conservative and traditional. Romance — especially between adult characters — was back, and action-adventure stories began to fade as character-driven stories reasserted themselves. Some of the characters involved in these new developments may also win Emmys this year.

* On "All My Children," the mildly retarded Stuart (played by Best Actor nominee David Canary) fell in love with a new arrival in town, the ethereal Cindy Parker (played by Best Supporting Actress nominee Ellen Wheeler). To the ever-present strains of "Love Makes the World Go Round" the two fell into the year's sweetest, most precious love story. The romantic aspect far overshadows the fact that Cindy has AIDS. It's a true measure of the conservative nature of the daytime soaps that when Cindy dies, the audience won't be crying over the social implications of the decade's most threatening disease. They'll be crying, as always, over lost love.

* On "One Life to Live," strumpet Tina Lord (played by Best Ingenue nominee Andrea Evans), who for 10 years peeled off her clothes as often as she batted her eyelashes, found herself romantically — and literally — swept off her feet and up the stairs "Gone With the Wind"-style by the Rhett Butler-esque Max Holden (played by James DePaiva).

* On "As the World Turns," the most endearing romance of the year was not between two teens, but involved newly widowed Nancy Hughes (played by Helen Wagner, who has played that role since the show's 1956) and widower police detective Dan (played by Dan Frazer).

What happened? First, daytime soaps, like every other form of entertainment, reflect the social climate of the times. Just as many career women have given up the single life to get married and have children, so has Erica Kane. As the threat of AIDS has cut down on promiscuity, so has Tina, the one-time tramp, found love. Just in time for Ronald Reagan to leave the White House, soaps are finally in sync with the conservative agenda of the Reagan '80s.

Phil Donahue shares a few of his feelings

By Kirk Nicewonger

Phil Donahue

If "The 15th Annual Daytime Emmys," airing Wednesday afternoon, June 29, on CBS, get around to bestowing a lifetime achievement award, you'd have to believe that this year's host would be in the running. In 20 years of shows that have examined everything from the Ku Klux Klan to female impersonators, Phil Donahue has garnered eight Daytime Emmys.

Asked to evaluate the current state of daytime programming, Donahue is upbeat. "I think it's more varied than it used to be. When our show premiered, it was soaps and games. And then for a long time it was soaps, games and Donahue. Now it's soaps, games, Donahue and a lot of other shows, a lot of them talk shows. And I think that's good."

And yet, with Oprah and Geraldo, Sally Jessy Raphael and Merv-only-knows who else now talking up the airwaves, the ratings pressure is on, and that can mean a retreat from the substantive to the titillating. Donahue is frank about the problem. "The temptation to do tabloid television is intense, because it's rewarding. People are more likely to watch a program we do on male strippers than one we do on the Persian Gulf. It bothers me a little bit. I do wish we had a greater interest in serious news in our country."

Hey, you don't have to hit us with a brick. Right away, we wadded up all those questions about what male centerfolds were really like an.' segued right into Donahue's impressions of Russia, which his talk show was the first to visit in 1987. "I was astounded at the enormous curiosity they have about us. I asked where in the United States they'd like to visit, and one man said, 'Oxford, Miss.' I asked him why. He said, 'Because that was the home of your great author William Faulkner.' And I wondered how many Americans knew that."

Perhaps inevitably, Donahue is often asked about the changes he's seen feminism bring about. "When we started the show, most women with children were home, and now most women with children are outside the home, working. We're still dealing with the consequences of this enormous alteration."

Of the current trend of post-feminism, Donahue says, "Most women say, 'I'm not a women's libber, but ...' Yet, when they list the 'buts' – equal pay for equal work, shared parenting, equality of opportunity – they're all feminist political goals."

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

Grass Stain Removal

With warm weather here grass stains on clothing is a problem.

Fresh grass stains have a characteristic green color. However, as they age they become yellow. Grass stains usually appear as smears because of accompanying clay, mud, or dry soil. This is why the stain tends to remain on the surface of the fabric.

You'll have a better chance removing the stain if you attack it while the stain is still fresh.

To remove from washable fabrics, you could try a prewash product. Follow directions. However, as you know, grass stains are stubborn and most products won't remove them.

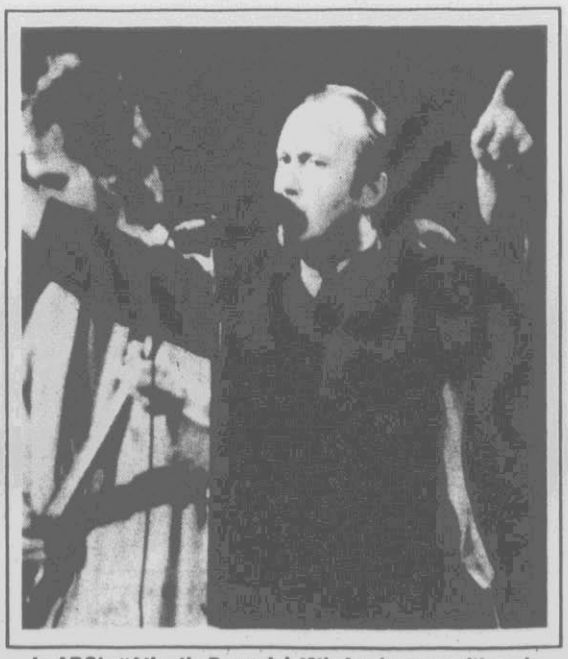

Do not use alcohol, as some people unwisely suggest. It's harmful to cloth and it's flammable.

Professional care may be your only answer. Drycleaners can usually get the stains out using several different chemicals.

TV DIALOGUE

Dolly Parton

PARTON'S AGE – How old is Dolly Parton? – M.H., Odessa, Texas

The country singer is 42 years old. Her birthday is Jan. 19, 1946. Her variety series, "Dolly," incidentally, has not been renewed for next season.

SISTERLY RELATIONS – Does Judy Landers have a twin sister? — R.R., Pt. Charlotte, Fla.

No. But Judy, 26, does have an older sister, Audrey, 28, and both are actresses. Audrey starred in "Highcliffe Manor" (1979) and "Dallas" (1981-84). Judy starred in "Vega$" (1978-79), "B.J. and the Bear" (1981) and "Madame's Place" (1982).

'SOAP' UPDATE – Whatever happened to the TV show "Soap"? It starred Katherine Helmond, and I loved it. – E.S.M., Plymouth, Conn.

The series was canceled in 1981 after five years on the air. Many of its stars got roles on other series. Robert Mandan went to "Private Benjamin." Katherine Helmond joined "Who's the Boss?" Diana Canova has done three series since "Soap," including "Throb." Robert Urich went on to "Vega$" and "Spenser: For Hire." Robert Guillaume, who portrayed Benson on "Soap," got his own series spinoff, which was named for his character.

NAME THOSE TARZANS – Could you name all the actors who have played Tarzan in the movies, starting with the first one? – W.J., Lincolnton, Ga.

It all began in 1918 with silent film star Elmo Lincoln. Since then, Edgar Rice Burroughs' ape man has been portrayed by Gene Polar, Kamuela Searle, James Pierce, Frank Merrill, Johnny Weismuller, Herman Brix, Buster Crabbe, Glenn Morris, Lex Barker, Gordon Scott, Denny Miller, Jock Mahoney, Mike Henry and, on TV, by Ron Ely. More recently, Miles O'Keeffe played Tarzan in the 1981 Bo Derek version, "Tarzan, the Ape Man," and Christopher Lambert played him in the ambitious 1984 movie "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes."

SOAP SCOOP

Our favorites for the Daytime Emmy Awards

By Connie Passalacqua

Every year, Siskel and Ebert do a pre-Oscar show, predicting not who should win, but who will win. This year, surprisingly, the fat one and the skinny one's picks represented all that is quality in movie making. What's more, they proved to be accurate. It also looks like quality will win out in the Daytime Emmys this year. "The 15th Annual Daytime Emmys" air Wednesday, June 29 on CBS. Here are our own "At the Soaps" predictions:

• Best Ingenue: Lauren Holly (Julie Chandler on "All My Children"). Holly aptly portrayed a tortured teenager with more problems in the past year than Erica Kane has handled in the past 18. Finding out that she was adopted, Julie ran away, dealt with a new natural mother, an adopted mother who married a hated natural father, and an adopted father who became a rapist. On top of that, there was a nerdy boyfriend and a sexually tempting blue-collar charmer. Who had time for Clearasil?

• Best Young Man: Scott DeFreitas (Andy Dixon on "As the World Turns"). DeFreitas did a nice job with the best written and most harrowing story of the year, that of a teen alcoholic. As intended, we learned our lesson well.

• Best Supporting Actor, Best Supporting Actress: Justin Deas and Robin Mattson (Keith and Gina Timmons on "Santa Barbara"). These two make up the best comedy team since Ricky and Lucy. But note: Ellen Wheeler, who plays AIDS victim Cindy Parker on "AMC," could give Mattson some strong competition.

• Best Actor: Robert Gentry (Ross Chandler on "AMC"). Gentry's outstanding performance as the tortured, introspective rapist has been a breakthrough in daytime acting. Bravo!

• Best Actress: Susan Lucci! Lucci's specially written Emmy showpiece, February's "Erica: The Movie," turned into an embarrassing disaster for the actress. That is exactly why, in the inexplicable world of the Daytime Emmys, Lucci, who has been nominated for the ninth time this year and has yet to win, should finally get it.

• Best Show: "All My Children." This was the year the show's creator and longtime head writer Agnes Nixon came back to tighten up what had become a carelessly meandering mess. It has developed into a well-thought-out piece of concentric drama with an ensemble acting troupe no other daytime soap can touch.

MONDAY NIGHTIN-GALES

Britta Phillips (l.) and Chelsea Field star in "Nightingales," an Aaron Spelling-produced drama about a group of student nurses. The movie, which may serve as a pilot for a future series, airs Monday, June 27 on NBC.

TUESDAY MOON-LIGHTING

THURSDAY DIFFERENT WORLD

A play sets the scene for a rivalry between Denise (Lisa Bonet, c.) and Whitley (Jasmine Guy) when both compete for the leading man (Kenny Ransom). NBC's "A Different World" airs Thursday, June 30. (Rebroadcast)

A Ball Game Isn't A Ball Game Without A Balk

By Marty Linehan

While the controversial penalties handed Pete Rose and Billy Martin by league presidents A. Bartlett Giamatti and Bobby Brown, respectively, have made the headlines this season, a decisionby the rules committee has had far greater effect on the game itself.

The rules committee decided during the off-season that the balk rule would be enforced more stringently. They want the pitcher to come to a "discernible" stop during his windup. This rule has always been in the books, but there were varying degrees of how long to stop.

One 30-year baseball veteran says he never even heard the word "discernible" spoken in the dugout over all those years. But the umpires learned the word this year, and they have been enforcingthe rule like crazy.

It took 50 days of the 1988 season before the majors got through a 24-hour period without a balk being called. That day, there was not one balk in all the 14 games played. In the first 49 days of big-league ball, 544 games were played and 416 balks were called.

Pitchers who never balked in their careers, going back to the minor leagues, had them called this year. There was even a balk called during an intentional walk.

Furthermore, close observers claim umpires are so obsessed with the "discernible" stop that they are letting other obvious balk offenses slide by unnoticed.

* A few more balks will probably be on view Saturday, July 2, when West Coast viewers see the Detroit Tigers host the California Angels on NBC's "Game of the Week." East Coast viewers will see either Billy Martin's New York Yankees visiting the Chicago White Sox or the Philadelphia Phillies hosting Pete Rose's Cincinnati Reds.

Clarkson Hosts CBC Summer Arts Series

By Bob Remington

CBC's programming this summer might easily be titled "TV That's Good for You." Two quality series are running simultaneously on the network, raising the calibre of summer programming well above the usual standard.

Already underway is "Rasky's Gallery," a weekly succession of 12 arts documentaries (airing Thursdays) from the archives of acclaimed documentary film maker Harry Rasky. Starting this week is "Adrienne Clarkson's Summer Festival" (airing Tuesday nights through Sept. 6), a collection of arts and music programming. Clarkson, president of McClelland & Stewart publishing and a respected former CBC newswoman, serves as host/interviewer for the series. Although she had little input in the development of the series, she writes her own material introducing each installment and says it was "an honor" to have been asked to host the series.

"I am passionately Canadian, and I believe in Canadian public broadcasting," Clarkson says. "If I can help improve the quality of entertainment and draw people into watching this series, I'm more than happy to do it."

The series consists of Canadian and foreign performing arts programs, ranging from a tribute to French composer Maurice Ravel by Canadian art film producers Rhombus Media to a portrait of Monty Python's John Cleese from Britain's "South Bank Show." The series opens this week with an international ballet competition taped in May at Toronto's O'Keefe Centre. Next week's show follows a magazine-style format with a feature on the newly opened national art gallery in Ottawa, followed by the TV premieres of two short films: The Oscar-winning Canadian production "The Man Who Planted Trees" and a new Rasky film on French impressionist Edgar Degas.

Clarkson, who left CBC in 1982 to become Ontario's agent-general in France, says she has no desire to return to television once the summer series is finished.

Having Homeowners without Life Insurance, is like having a rip in your umbrella . . .

When you think of your most valuable asset, you probably think of your home. But what about you? You're more valuable. Without your earning power, your family might lose their home and their style of life.

You have only partial protection.

We can help protect your home and your family's future through Ætna's Total Asset Protection Plan. Call now and ask about our full line of Ætna home owners and life products. We're ready to serve you.

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Pipe is missing. 2. Valve is smaller. 3. Skateboard is smaller. 4. Rag is missing. 5. Light is missing. 6. First aid box is missing.

• GLASS KNOTS! Arrange three glasses as in fig. 1. Challenge: Turn over any two at a time, three times, so that all three stand mouth up, as in fig. 2.

Solution: First turn a mouth up with a mouth down; repeat — then invert two mouth downs.

WORD SQUARE CHALLENGE

Five five-letter words are required to complete this word square. Definitions are provided below. How quickly can you fill blanks?

1. To become separated, as threads.
2. Ease up, as the wind.
3. TV letter turner — White (already in place).
4. Spirit-lamps.
5. Tether used to walk Fido.

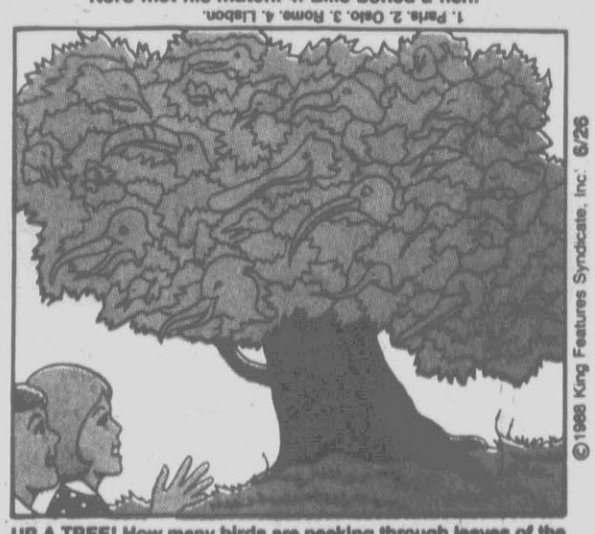

Remember, a word square consists of a group of words that read the same both across and down.

Time: Two minutes.

1. Ravel. 2. Abate. 3. Vanna. 4. Ennas. 5. Leash.

• CITY LIGHTS! Find a European capital in each sentence: 1. Gaspar is a wit. 2. Jo slowed down. 3. Nero met his match. 4. Ellis boned a fish.

1. Paris. 2. Oslo. 3. Rome. 4. Lisbon.

UP A TREE! How many birds are peeking through leaves of the tree above? See if you can discover as many as 24.

TRUNK LINE! It's picnic time...load up the car and we're under way. Add these colors neatly: 1—Red. 2—Lt. purple. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Lt. Green. 7—Dk. brown. 8—Dk. green.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

PREACHER

- - - - - - - -

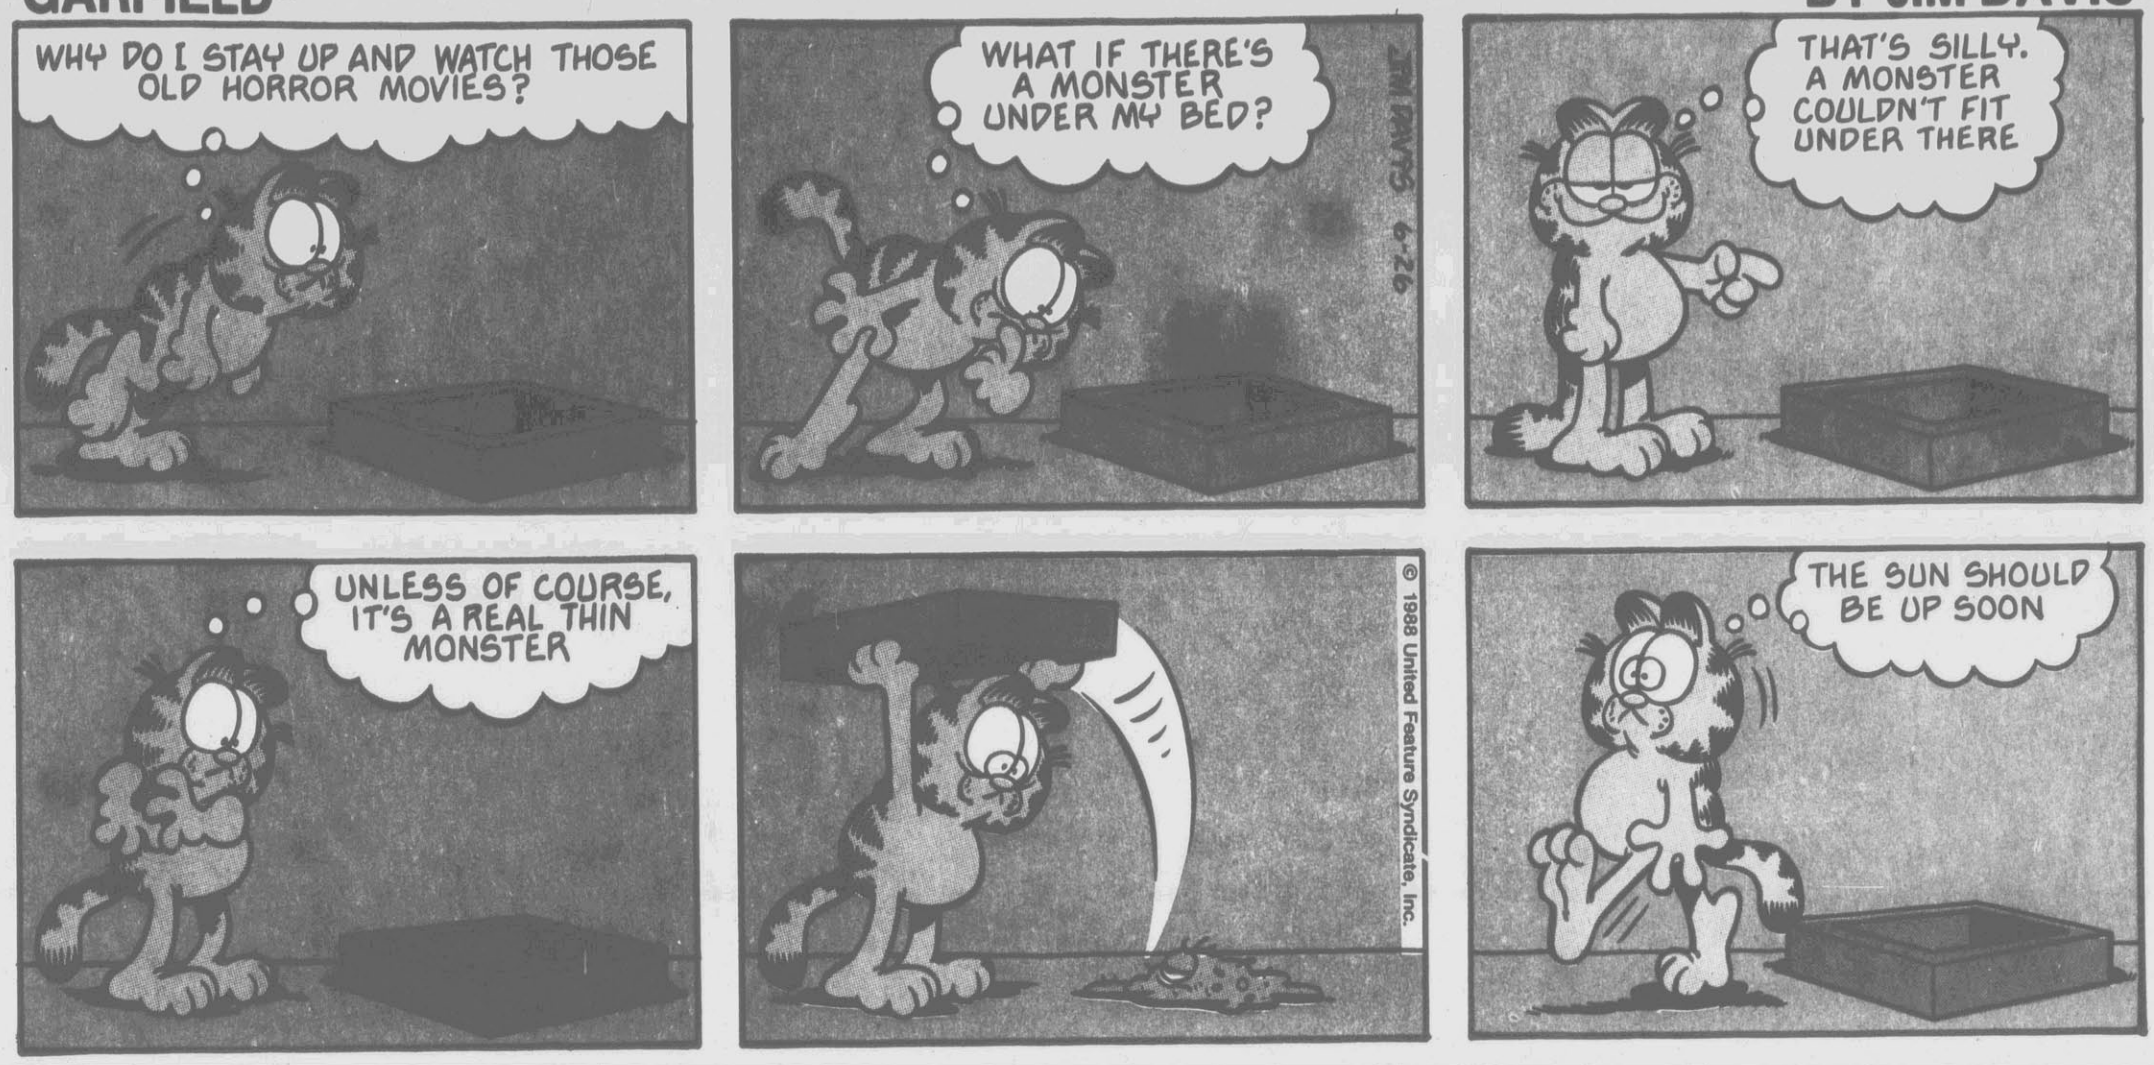

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagrams: Chaw, peer.
