Court Upholds Use Of Special Prosecutors

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a setback to the Reagan administration and some of its key former officials, today upheld a law that allows independent prosecutors to investigate alleged crimes by high-ranking government officials.

The 7-1 decision dispels crucial doubts about the convictions of former Reagan aides Michael K. Deaver and Lyn C. Nofziger and clears away a possible stumbling block in the prosecution of ex-White House aides Oliver North, John M. Poindexter and two others indicted in the Iran-Contra affair.

The decision also allows an investigation to continue into the activities of Attorney General Edwin Meese III, accused of financial improprieties and conflicts of interest.

The court, in a momentous constitutional decision, said the special prosecutor law does not violate the separation of powers between the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government guaranteed by the Constitution.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, in his opinion for the court, said, "We observe first that this case does not involve an attempt by Congress to increase its own powers at the expense of the executive branch."

"Similarly, we do not think that the act works any judicial usurpation of properly executive functions."

Rehnquist continued, "Finally, we do not think that the act impermissibly undermines the powers of the executive branch or disrupts the proper balance between the coordinate branches."

Lawrence E. Walsh, the independent counsel investigating the Iran-Contra affair, said in a statement moments after the decision was announced:

Mall Plans $35 Million Expansion

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

One of Greenville's largest shopping centers is getting a facelift. Representatives of a Raleigh real estate company today announced The Plaza, an enclosed mall located on Greenville Boulevard, is undergoing a $35 million expansion and renovation project.

John M. Kane, president of J.M. Kane & Co., unveiled plans for the project this morning at the shopping center to approximately 50 people, including members of city government and the local business community.

Kane said expansion plans include the addition of a 45,000-square-foot Belk's store, a new 54,000-square-foot Rose's, a new and enlarged 60,000-square-foot Brody's Fashion Department Store, a completely remodeled J.C. Penney, and approximately 180,000 square feet of additional shop space.

Plans also include the addition of a food court, numerous skylights and various architectural amenities such as a new mall entrance and a new exterior facade for the entire structure.

"We're excited about making The Plaza an absolute first-class facility not only for Greenville, but for all of eastern North Carolina," he said.

Kane said the expansion will make The Plaza one of the largest shopping

Agency Shop Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a high-stakes defeat for organized labor, made it easier today for millions of non-union workers to withhold financial support from the unions that represent them in collective bargaining.

The court, by a 5-3 vote, ruled that non-union employees of private employers may not be forced to pay the equivalent of union dues if some of that money is used for activities not directly related to collective bargaining.

Using compulsory fees paid by non-union employees under so-called "agency shop" contracts to pursue a union's political goals violates federal labor law, the court said.

Thousands of labor contracts require workers who choose not to join the unions representing them to pay the same amount in fees as members pay in dues.

Although federal labor law allows states to pass "right to work" laws barring such agency-fee requirements, 29 states representing two-thirds of the nation's population have chosen not to pass such laws.

In those states, over 90 percent of the collective bargaining agreements to which a key federal labor law applies carry agency-fee requirements.

On The Job Bias

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today made it easier for workers to prove their bosses are guilty of illegal discrimination.

In their most important civil rights decision of the year, the justices expanded the way employees can use statistical evidence to prove bias.

The court, by a 8-0 vote, ruled that Clara Watson, a former bank employee in Fort Worth, Texas, improperly was barred from using statistics in trying to prove she was discriminated against because she is black.

Today's decision, although involving a complicated aspect of federal anti-bias law, carries a significant, direct impact on numerous lawsuits filed by women and members of racial minority members who say they have been treated unfairly.

Pitt Republicans Name Chairman

The Pitt County Republican Party has elected Gordon Walker of Greenville as chairman and, at 23, he is the youngest GOP county chief in the state.

A 1986 graduate of East Carolina University, Walker will complete the remaining nine months of Carlton Smith's two-year term. Smith resigned June 7, citing personal reasons.

Walker said he was surprised that his candidacy received such strong support at the county GOP meeting last week, and he hopes to use the office to unify the party. The party will hold a convention in March of 1989 and elect new officers to two-year terms.

Walker first became active in the Republican Party in 1978 when, in the eighth grade, he worked on Jesse Helms' U.S. Senate campaign. He is a member of the Pitt County GOP Executive Committee.

Smith and Mike Karachan have also resigned their candidacies for seats in the N.C. House of Representatives in the 9th District. Walker said he does not plan to run for office, but will work with the party to find new candidates by the July 15 deadline.

Soviet Police Break Up Protests

MOSCOW (AP) — Hours after Mikhail S. Gorbachev said citizens should be able to freely express their opinions, police broke up two demonstrations in Moscow in a scene reminiscent of traditional Soviet intolerance.

"Homeland" was what protesters shouted Tuesday as 200 Crimean Tatars gathered to demand they be allowed to return to their homeland.

Police moved in twice to drag off members of the disgruntled ethnic group, carting them away in buses.

On Pushkin Square, police arrested seven members of a group called the Democratic Union, witnesses said. The group advocates a multiparty system and an end to the Soviet military presence in Eastern Europe.

Today, participants in the demonstrations said the seven had either been fined, jailed or summoned to court. The fate of the arrested Tatars was unknown.

In the Kremlin on Tuesday, Gorbachev told the first nationwide Communist Party conference in 47 years that the civil rights of Soviet citizens need to be better respected.

"I would like to dwell particularly on the political freedoms that enable a person to express his opinion on any matter," he said in his keynote address. "The implementation of these freedoms is a real guarantee that any problem of public interest will be discussed from every angle."

But the Soviet leader warned that activities such as redrawing borders and establishing political parties to challenge the Communists' political monopoly would not be tolerated.

He also said the Soviet legal system should "guarantee strict observance of the citizens' rights to the inviolability of private life and the home, privacy of correspondence, postal and telegraph messages."

The system must also ensure, he said, that a person is innocent until proven guilty and that all people get equal treatment before the law.

Those rights and the right to speak out on the issues before Soviet society have been violated since the time of dictator Josef Stalin and must be restored, he said.

Reagan Labels Dukakis 'A True Liberal'

MIAMI (AP) — President Reagan today branded likely Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis a "true liberal" who would raise taxes and "restore the heavy hand of government" in American lives.

In his most direct attack yet on the Massachusetts governor who is virtually assured of opposing Vice President George Bush in the fall election, Reagan told a Republican Party fund-raising event "the sad truth is that whenever liberals talk about 'reducing the deficit,' it's just a code word for boosting taxes."

"The $64 billion question is this: Should we expect that if the Democrats' all-but-certain presidential candidate is elected that he would raise taxes?" the president asked. "In fact, he just did."

Reagan, making an appearance on behalf of Rep. Connie Mack III, who is seeking the Republican nomination for the Senate seat being vacated by Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said that in the last five years, Dukakis "has increased Massachusetts' state spending at double the rate of federal spending."

Although the growth in federal spending has been slowed during the Reagan years and the deficit has been cut, largely through the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing act and a deal Reagan struck with congressional leaders last fall, the president has presided over the largest federal budget deficits in history. Reagan has blamed Congress for that, even though he has never submitted a balanced budget to Capitol Hill.

In making the trip to Miami today, Reagan inadvertently put himself in the middle of a Republican primary fight in Florida.

The president, who follows a policy of not interfering in primary contests, accepted the speaking date weeks ago on the assumption that Mack, grandson of the legendary baseball manager, would be unopposed in the Sept. 6 Florida primary.

On Monday, however, U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle, the prosecutor who obtained a drug indictment against Panamanian Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, resigned his federal post and jumped into the race.

Property Stolen

Investigators said five thefts were reported to Greenville police Tuesday.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said a bicycle was taken from Hardee's restaurant on Cotanche Street in an incident reported at 9:53 a.m., while Officer M.T. Scheid said a sofa and bed sheet were taken from 700 E. First St. in a break-in reported at 11:03 a.m.

Officer M.E. Hayes said a wallet containing $15 in cash was taken from a vehicle parked at 110 Arlington Blvd. in an incident reported at 2:19 p.m., while Officer R.S. Sawyer said an air conditioner was taken from 1303 Powell St. in an incident reported at 8:05 p.m.

According to Officer R.L. Vandiford, $6 worth of hamburger was taken from the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 10:29 p.m.

Signs Vandalized

Bill Dansey, Republican candidate for the 9th District Senate seat, said today that several of his campaign signs have been vandalized since mid-May and he offered a $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible.

Dansey, who said "there has been a continuing effort to deface, pull down and tear apart" a number of his signs, said state law makes such vandalism a misdemeanor "punishable by upwards to a $500 fine, imprisonment for not more than six months, or both."

This type of vandalism, Dansey said, "interferes with the freedom of expression we expect in political campaigns."

"Activities of this sort reflect badly on the political process and need to be stopped," he said. "I hope it does not become a demolition derby campaign."

Greenville police said Dansey campaign workers have reported seven signs vandalized in the city limits. A Dansey spokesman said two other signs have been torn down in Pitt County and one in Washington, N.C.

Police Seek Same Man In 3 Robberies

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — The same man may have been responsible for three Kinston convenience store armed robberies in the early morning hours today, authorities said.

The first robbery occurred at 12:50 a.m., police said. According to Sheriff's Department reports, a man entered the store and told the clerk to, "Give me all your money or I'll kill you."

The robber reportedly had his hand inside his shirt and the clerk told officers he saw a gun barrel.

Another robbery was reported to Kinston police at 4:31 a.m. when a man entered a store and demanded money.

Just more than an hour later at 5:42 a.m., a third robbery was reported, authorities said.

No one was injured in any of the robberies.

Davidson Issues Hepatitis Warning

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-three cases of hepatitis have been confirmed in Davidson County, prompting an alert from county health officials worried the disease could spread further at an upcoming festival.

"If we don't get public involvement to improve sanitary habits, it's going to be an epidemic," said county health director Richard T. Baxley. "It (washing hands) seems too simple (a preventive) for people to believe."

The outbreak apparently began Jan. 18, when health officials diagnosed hepatitis A in a woman, Baxley said.

By March, the same strain of the disease had afflicted 13 more people, including nine children at an elementary school, health officials said. The children, mostly 8-year-olds and 9-year-olds, ate lunch together, while many attended an after-school day care center together as well, officials said.

Since then, nine more adults have become ill with the disease, which is characterized by weakness, nausea, body aches and jaundice, Baxley said. Those stricken can be ill for as long as a month, officials said.

Baxley warned that cooks and cafeteria workers — particularly volunteers serving up corn bread and fried chicken at this weekend's Southeast Old Threshers Reunion in Denton — could spread the disease unless they wash their hands before handling food.

"It's a prime opportunity for people to get together and spread the disease," said health department staff member Stephanie Kearns of the annual festival of old machinery and country music this weekend, which draws more than 10,000 people.

The virus that causes the disease is carried in feces and is spread when food becomes contaminated — usually when a carrier forgets to wash his hands after using the toilet, officials said.

Cause Of Dysentery In Wilson Sought

By The Associated Press

The origin of an outbreak of shigellosis, a form of dysentery that has afflicted three dozen children in Wilson County, still eludes health officials.

None of the food or water samples tested by the Wilson County Health Department showed signs of the bacteria responsible for the illness, Thurston R. Perry, county health director, said Tuesday.

"We still have not pinpointed a specific source, and frankly, I don't think we ever will," Perry said. "We feel, in this stage of the game, what we're dealing with is person-to-person transmission."

The health department confirmed the 41st case of shigellosis Tuesday, Perry said, an increase of a dozen since last week.

Last year in North Carolina, there were 12 confirmed cases of the disease, according to state records. Before the outbreak in Wilson County that began in May, the state recorded 37 cases this year.

The organism is thought to be spread through direct or indirect contact with feces. Of the confirmed cases, four are adults, one is a teenager and the remainder are children between the ages of 5 and 9, Perry said.

The illness usually strikes between one and three days after exposure, although it can appear up to seven days later, Perry said. Diarrhea, fever, nausea, vomiting and cramps are the main symptoms, lasting three to four days. The disease can be fatal but usually subsides when treated with antibiotics.

Sentenced

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A 20-year-old Marine was sentenced to 10 years confinement Tuesday after he pleaded guilty to stealing military explosives earlier this year.

A military investigator said Cpl. Douglas L. Wilcox was "basically the ringleader" in thefts from the Yorktown Naval Weapons Station. Six others have been charged in connection with the thefts.

In return for the guilty pleas, the government dismissed four charges of disposing of government property and the military judge, Lt. Col. Hurman R. Sims, dismissed one count of conspiracy. Wilcox also was sentenced to a dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and reduction to the rank of private.

Court Limits Protection For Sex Abuse Victims

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, refusing to give new protection to crime victims, today severely limited state efforts to shield young sex abuse victims when they testify at criminal trials.

The justices, voting 6-2, overturned the conviction of an Iowa man sentenced to 10 years in prison for sexually molesting two 13-year-old girls.

The court said the defendant's rights to a fair trial and to confront his accusers appear to have been violated by the use of a one-way screen that was placed in front of him at trial to prevent the children from seeing him.

The decision could jeopardize other efforts to protect witnesses, such as videotaped testimony.

Justice Antonin Scalia, writing for the court, said such one-way screens violate a defendant's right to confront his accusers.

"It is difficult to imagine a more obvious or damaging violation of the defendant's right to a face-to-face encounter," he said.

Scalia said the defendant's rights were not outweighed "by the necessity of protecting victims of sexual abuse."

Most states have approved the use of some form of protective device in child abuse cases when young witnesses testify.

Today's case stems from the conviction of John Avery Coy on sex molesting charges.

A screen was placed in front of Coy in court to shield the girls from seeing him when they testified. Prosecutors said the device, which allowed Coy to see the girls, was intended to safeguard the children from possible emotional trauma.

A state law presumed children under 14 would be traumatized in such situations.

But Coy's lawyers said the screen made a guilty verdict practically inevitable by creating a presumption he was guilty. They also said the screen deprived Coy of confronting the girls face to face, violating a constitutional right intended to yield honest testimony.

The lawyers said the screen was particularly prejudicial because in order for it to function properly the courtroom was darkened and a panel of bright lights was directed at the device.

Coy's lawyers said there was no evidence the girls were in danger of being traumatized.

They also argued that the judge in the case mistakenly may have believed the state law compelled him either to order the one-way screen or to have the girls testify outside the courtroom on closed-circuit television.

Prosecutors initially asked the judge to permit the girls to testify via closed circuit TV. Coy's lawyers objected to the request. The judge overruled the objection but then ordered the screen used.

The screen resembled an oversize school blackboard.

The Iowa Supreme Court, in upholding Coy's conviction, said the judge was not obligated to determine that the screen was necessary or that it served a compelling state interest.

The children were attacked while they were in a makeshift tent in their backyard, adjacent to Coy's home. They were unable to identify their assailant, who was masked and shined a flashlight at them.

There was circumstantial evidence that led police to charge Coy with the attack, including testimony by the girls that their attacker wore his watch midway up his arm with the face turned inward. Coy was under arrest on an unrelated charge when police came to suspect him of the attack on the girls.

The Supreme Court has ruled previously that stigmatizing defendants in certain ways may violate their rights. For example, the court has struck down such practices as requiring defendants to wear shackles, leg irons or prison uniforms while appearing in court.

But the justices have held even inherently prejudicial courtroom procedures may be allowed when they promote an essential state policy.

The court sent today's case back to the Iowa courts for further hearings.

The justices said the conviction against Coy could be reinstated only if the lower courts determine that the use of the one-way screen was a "harmless error" and there is proof beyond a reasonable doubt Coy would have been convicted even if the screen had not been used.

Dissenting were Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Harry A. Blackmun. Justice Anthony M. Kennedy did not take part in the case.

The case is Coy vs. Iowa, 86-6757.

Justices Skirt Death Penalty For Youngsters

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today struck down an Oklahoma man's death sentence but stopped short of ruling whether capital punishment may be used for convicted killers who committed their crimes before reaching age 16.

In what had been expected to be its most important capital punishment decision of the year, the justices could not muster a majority of votes to resolve a key question: Does execution of teen-age killers violate the Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment."

Four justices said the Constitution bans the execution of killers who committed their crimes before reaching 16.

Three justices voted to allow such executions.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, while voting to overturn Oklahoma death row inmate's William Wayne Thompson's death sentence, had no definitive opinion on the law's constitutionality.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, who joined the court after the case had been argued, did not participate.

The case, had the constitutional issue been decided definitively, would have affected only about 30 of the some 2,100 death row inmates nationwide.

But it nevertheless had captured worldwide attention.

Justices John Paul Stevens, William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun said states are constitutionally barred from executing those who committed their crimes before 16.

Brennan and Marshall oppose capital punishment under all circumstances.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Byron R. White said the Constitution requires no such limitation on capital punishment.

Of the 100 men and women executed in U.S. prisons since the Supreme Court in 1976 allowed states to resume capital punishment, three died for murders committed when they were 17.

Charles Rumbaugh was executed in Texas in 1985; James Terry Roach in South Carolina in 1986; and Jay Pinkerton in Texas in 1986.

Since 1948, no one has been executed in this country for a crime committed when he or she was younger than 17.

The American Bar Association told the justices that of the 37 states with death penalty laws, 11 do not allow capital punishment for those who committed their crimes when younger than 18.

The ABA said those states are California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Maryland, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Oregon and Tennessee.

Two states — Georgia and New Hampshire — bar imposition of the death penalty for those who committed their crimes when younger than 17.

An unusual coalition of groups had urged the high court to ban capital punishment for juvenile killers.

Among those groups were the ABA, Amnesty International, the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, the National Association of Social Workers, the Child Welfare League of America and the American Society for Adolescent Psychiatry.

According to Amnesty International, more than 11,000 court-sanctioned executions have been carried out worldwide since 1979 — and among them only eight people who committed their crimes when they were under 18.

The group said that in addition to the three American executions, two youthful offenders were executed in Pakistan and one each in Bangladesh, Rwanda and Barbados.

Those states are Kentucky, Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah, Virginia and Wyoming.

In writing today for himself and three other justices, Stevens said, "We are not persuaded that the imposition of the death penalty for offenses committed by persons under 16 years of age has made, or can be expected to make, any measurable contribution to the goals that capital punishment is intended to achieve."

In an opinion that Rehnquist and White joined, Scalia said there is no reason why some minors cannot be tried and sentenced as adults.

Thompson, now 20, was one of four people convicted in the Jan. 29, 1983, death in Grady County, Okla., of Charles Keene, his former brother-in-law.

Economic Index Declines In May

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported today that its chief economic forecasting gauge edged down 0.1 percent in May, but analysts said the slight dip did not signal economic troubles ahead.

The Commerce Department said the decline in its Index of Leading Economic Indicators was the first setback since a 0.2 percent drop in January.

While reporting the decline for May, however, the government revised its estimate of April economic activity upward to show an increase of 0.5 percent in the leading index, instead of the 0.2 percent gain originally reported.

Analysts said even with the slight setback in May, which had been expected, the forecasting gauge is still flashing signals that the economy is on an upward trend.

The economists said there was ample, widespread evidence that the economy is maintaining its forward momentum.

The Reagan administration last week boosted its economic forecast to predict growth, as measured by the gross national product, of 3 percent this year, a significant revision from a February forecast that put growth at a 2.4 percent rate.

In May, the biggest single factor holding the leading index back was a decline in stock prices. Without a 2.5 percent decline in the value of the Standard & Poor 500-stock compilation, the leading index would have registered a 0.1 percent increase for the month.

Four other business barometers also showed weakness during the month. Following stock prices, the biggest negative factors were a drop in plant and equipment orders, a rise in weekly unemployment claims, a drop in the length of the average workweek and a fall in building permits.

Four of the available nine indicators made positive contributions to the index. The biggest positive force was a slowdown in business deliveries from suppliers. This is seen as a sign of rising demand and is thus viewed as a good sign for future economic activity.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Tax Hike

Hold The Line On City Spending

Please, City Council members, no tax hike.

Do your duty as elected officials and don't saddle Greenville with an unnecessary and inflated city budget. Instead, insist on a hold-the-line fiscal approach for 1988 at tonight's meeting.

There is no justification for raising taxes 2.2 cents in 1988. City Manager Greg Knowles wants an assistant, and wants department heads to get a salary increase, but he has failed to prove evidence of need — at least not substantial enough need to warrant arbitrarily raising taxes.

The proposed budget the council will consider tonight is administratively top heavy. A more-than-fair portion of the increase is for top-end salaries — and support for the city manager's office. Taxes shouldn't be raised for amenities, especially when no effort has been made to remove fat from the budget.

This approach simply isn't correct when the city has pressing personnel needs in law enforcement, fire-rescue, public works and planning. Large residential areas annexed in 1987 broadened the city's tax base but also placed additional burdens on services. Greenville's long-range plans indicate an aggressive annexation policy. How can the city hope to keep up with services if it disproportionately spends the taxpayer's money at the top?

Knowles promised frugality when he came to Greenville last September, but his first budget doesn't even resemble thrift. In his first year as the city's top executive, he proposes hiring himself a high-paid assistant, as well as inflating department heads' salaries — and he proposes to pay for these luxuries by hiking taxes 2.2 cents.

The proposed budget's priorities are improper, and council members should assume the responsibility for turning the focus to efficiency. It is their duty to be penurious, even miserly, when it comes to spending tax dollars.

So pinch pennies, city officials. Roll up your sleeves at tonight's meeting, sharpen your pencils and do your job.

Jim And Bob

Folk Heroes Or Cartoon Characters?

The Sitting Governor. Not-Now-Bob. Rednecks.

No, these are not folk heroes from North Carolina's past. Neither are they cartoon characters. They are the primary topics that emerged from the second campaign debate between Governor Jim Martin and Democratic challenger Bob Jordan.

Accusations and name-calling, even though good-natured, are not exactly what the state was hoping to hear from the two contenders for the governorship. While voters were waiting for issues and answers, Martin and Jordan were busy playing cat and mouse with the governorship as cheese.

It wasn't becoming to either one of them. North Carolina needs knowledgeable leaders who can think and act with force on important issues, not simply tweak noses. It needs energy and vision applied to problem-solving, not political fistfighting.

So what do voters know after Saturday's great debate?

They know Bob Jordan was afraid he'd alienate rednecks over his support for lowering the threshold victory in first-primary to 40 percent to make it easier for minorities to be elected to office. Big surprise.

They know Martin wants to raise teachers salaries to the national average by 1992, cut drunk driving in half by the same year and bring unemployment in all 100 counties to below 10 percent by 1989. But they don't have an inkling how he plans to accomplish these goals. That prompts a question of whether Martin does either.

They know Jordan knows how to use words like "ineffective" and "irresponsible" when referring to the competition's budget. But voters don't have any idea whether Jordan knows what "effective" and "responsible" mean when it comes to budgeting, and he offered no proof.

They know Martin has politically keen timing. He waited until the closing minutes of the debate to unveil his second-term agenda. But maybe it's the prerogative of an incumbent governor to disclose plans for the future of North Carolina as an afterthought to a discussion staged in neighboring South Carolina.

What voters don't know — for starters — is how either candidate proposes to keep North Carolina's education system well-funded, how the two contenders plan to protect the state's environment and natural resources, or how they intend to ensure both poor and wealthy counties get fair treatment when it comes to roads, schools and industry.

How about it, Sitting Governor and Not-Now-Bob? Any clues?

There's one more thing voters didn't learn from this debate. Who to vote for if they want progressive, efficient, visionary leadership. Only four months remain.

Public Forum

To the editor:

My May 15th letter consisted of quotes from every major Soviet leader since Lenin. These quotes were frank admissions that the Soviet Communists cannot be trusted, that they consider lying to be "good diplomacy," that those of us in the West who trust them are "useful idiots," and that their goal is world domination. I closed with a challenge to the "peace"-niks and liberals to locally explain why THEY trust the Soviets.

Their reaction (Mr. Watkins: May 24th; Ms. Parsons: June 3rd) wasn't surprising. They completely ignored the quotes that prove their position is absurd, and instead claimed that I don't "understand" the Soviet government. Baloney! I understand only too well the government and the goals of the Soviets. "Peace"-niks who refuse to learn from history and who ignore any truth that contradicts their idealistic visions of one-world brotherhood, even when the Soviets themselves openly admit we cannot trust them, are the ones who TRULY don't understand the Soviet government.

No, we're NOT "just like the Communists in regard to honoring treaties." We adhere to treaties until we discover the Soviets have violated them or until they're obsolete. But the Soviets, as they've boasted, cheat before the ink is dry. Example: We've adhered to the 1972 ABM Treaty for 16 years, while the Soviets had already been violating it for three years when they signed it!

The U.S. isn't blemish-free, but trying to equate our great country with a country that has murdered 70 million of its own citizens is insane.

Gorbachev: "We're moving toward a new world, the world of Communism. We'll never turn off that road." "Peace"-niks ignore his words: hope springs internal in the breast of the duped!

There are two concerns I have since the summer months are upon us.

— Nick Kotz —

Reducing The Defense Dependency

'The public revulsion that surely will be triggered by the current Pentagon scandal creates a unique opportunity for the next president and his secretary of defense to implement more effective defense programs.'

defense base or weapons contract important to their local economy. When one community's desire for a base or plant is multiplied too many times across the country, however, we end up with too many unneeded bases and weapons. And when the Air Force, Navy, Army and Marine Corps trade bases and weapons contracts for civilian support for their prized military programs, we get even more bases and weapons. And no one wants any bases or programs to shut down.

Executives of the large weapons manufacturers properly seek profits for their shareholders. But in a one-customer market characterized by feast or famine, winning or losing a single contract may determine the fate of huge companies as well as communities. Who gets the profits and who gets the dislocated economy often depends on who has the most clout rather than on which company has the best product and the lowest price — or even on whether the weapon is needed at all.

Members of Congress must continually balance national defense needs against the interests of their constituents in sharing the pork barrel of job-producing defense bases and plants. And members are bound to be influenced by the campaign funds and lucrative speaking fees that are lavished on them by defense contractors. As in the case of the B-1 bomber, these contractors also have been known to spread parts of their projects around congressional districts, whether or not this division of spoils led to the most efficient weapons production.

American military officers are dedicated to defending their country, but the four armed services fiercely pursue their own priorities to the detriment of a coherent, effective national defense plan. When a succession of presidents has turned down a service's requests — as Eisenhower did with a bomber program — has not been uncommon for uniformed military officers to exert raw political pressure to undermine the decision of the commander in chief.

What will it take to untie this knot?

There obviously is no substitute for high standards of ethical conduct, in which all the many participants in the military-industrial community show at least as much concern for the nation's common good as for their own personal gain.

A committed president and secretary of defense must enforce defense reform laws that now are ignored or undermined almost as soon as they are enacted. Several statutes are designed to limit conflicts of interest of federal employees who go through the revolving door to private industry. One law aims to protect whistle blowers who try to point out problems. Congress established an independent testing service to find out whether weapons actually perform to their specifications. The 1986 Goldwater-Nichols defense reorganization act represented a thoughtful effort to limit service parochialism and to encourage a coherent national defense plan. It ordered that defense procurement programs be centralized in the office of a new undersecretary of defense. The first holder of that job resigned in frustration because the various armed service barons were permitted to ignore his authority.

Congress needs to focus its attention on overall defense needs, rather than trying to micromanage hundreds of programs in an effort to exert influence and serve the special needs of constituents. A bill approved by the Senate but stalled in the House seeks to insulate legislators from constituent pressures by creating a bipartisan commission to recommend a list of unneeded bases that should be closed. The secretary of defense would be required to close all the bases or none. A $2 billion annual savings could be realized.

It is unlikely that the country will really be able to rid itself of many wasteful and unneeded defense programs unless the government actively promotes development of meaningful economic alternatives to defense jobs. The entire nation would benefit by redirecting its high-tech capabilities — now unduly concentrated in the defense industry — to compete in more peaceful and rewarding pursuits.

The public revulsion that surely will be triggered by the current Pentagon scandal creates a unique opportunity for the next president and his secretary of defense to implement more effective defense programs. The 1988 presidential campaign is a good place to start. The candidates have yet to offer meaningful defense ideas, and they are unlikely to do so unless a better informed electorate demands change.

Reacting With Caution To A Cautious Speaker

MOSCOW — Fresh in from the provinces to hear Mikhail Gorbachev out and judge his reform campaign, the crowd of cautious communists, ominously silent during the first 60 minutes of the Kremlin leader's speech, finally broke into scattered clapping when he sounded a conservative note.

Gorbachev delivered a delicately balanced 3½-hour brief for his reforms that seemed tailored to overcome skepticism about them in the audience. He dropped the more radical proposals made publicly here in recent weeks and took up some of the conservatives' stances instead.

If tactics and body language are any measure, the opening day of the 19th Soviet Communist Party conference was an exercise in groping for middle ground for the urbane, progressive Kremlin leader and his audience of nearly 5,000, largely composed of doctrinaire, provincial party delegates.

For both, it established a mood of ambiguous compromise, a cautious beginning for a week in which Gorbachev's whole reform program will come up for praise or criticism in dozens of speeches and finally face a vote.

With the policy of reconstruction, or perestroika, certain to gain general approval, the moderate stance Gorbachev took may not influence the outcome of the four-day party conference. But if it turns out to have been convincing, it could determine whether some of the Soviet leader's more controversial proposals — such as an apparent attempt to take over the presidency from old-guard Politburo member Andrei Gromyko — will gain final backing from the party and the public.

And it also could help win over some of the conservatives among the delegates. Asked in a news conference Tuesday whether the Soviet leader had crafted his speech with the conservative audience in mind, Politburo member and Gorbachev ally Alexander Yakovlev smiled and said: "You'll have to ask the man himself about that. I don't know."

If the proposals made this week gain approval by the conference, they will have to go for a vote before the Supreme Soviet, the 28th party congress (expected to be held early in 1991) or other official bodies.

By reputation a political wizard who worked his way up from provincial party leader to general secretary faster than any other person in Soviet history, 57-year-old Gorbachev balanced every new reform proposal with a conservative stance Tuesday.

On the one hand, he criticized Soviet activists seeking to start a new political party, indirectly rebuked Armenian demonstrators by opposing border changes as a solution for ethnic problems, and dropped an earlier proposal for mandatory retirement for aging party officials. Each such statement seemed to appeal to the audience.

On the other hand, Gorbachev made some sweeping new proposals, including one plan to have the Soviet president elected by a new parliamentary body and given new powers. Western diplomats and some Soviets said that Gorbachev's outline seemed to position him to replace Gromyko, now 79 and likely to retire soon.

One of Gorbachev's most important new plans was originally designed to shift more power to local nonparty governing bodies known as soviets and to establish a stricter separation of powers between the party and state. But in an apparent last-minute compromise, a provision was added to make local party first secretaries heads of the newly strengthened soviets, a move that western analysts here said would weaken the original concept.

Like Gorbachev, his audience seemed also to take a compromising position. If applause is any measure, the delegates' first reaction to Gorbachev's speech was polite, at best. Sitting on its hands for the whole first hour, the crowd stared out blankly when the party leader raised progressive new proposals.

Applause only came after Gorbachev made either formalistic or conservative statements. The ice between speaker and audience first broke when Gorbachev praised the service of Soviet troops in the Afghan war, for instance. When he suggested that elected officials should be proponents of perestroika, some delegates clapped and others didn't. The loudest applause seemed to come when Gorbachev promised not to make any massive purge of party officials.

While members of the ruling Politburo surrounding Gorbachev sat silently, listening attentively to the Kremlin leader's every word, Yegor Ligachev, the second-ranking leader who favors a more cautious path to reform, seemed to use his own body language while Gorbachev was at the podium.

Alternately reading from a sheaf of papers or scribbling notes, Ligachev seemed restless throughout Gorbachev's speech, and at one point he got up and walked across the room, came back and started fiddling with his papers again.

Occurring during the most important speech in Gorbachev's 3½-year tenure as Kremlin leader, Ligachev's fidgety behavior was interpreted by western analysts here as a sign of disquietude between the two men, who are reputed to be political rivals.

Besides providing a forum for debate, the party conference should also bring fresh insights into Soviet politics. With Gorbachev's speech nationally televised and other speeches to be published in the official media, the public will have a chance to see policy in the making.

How long Tuesday's declared truce between Gorbachev and the audience will last is unclear.

Departing at one point from the carefully crafted speech that was approved last week by the ruling Politburo, Gorbachev may have let his strongest feelings show. Looking out over the audience, he complained of laziness among provincial officials. Some of the officials had objected to proposals to increase the power of the local soviets, he said, because "it makes more work for them."

Bakery Verdict

WILMINGTON (AP) — A U.S. District Court jury in Wilmington deliberated for three days before finding American Bakeries Co. guilty Tuesday of rigging bids to provide sandwich bread, buns and rolls to public school lunch programs in eastern North Carolina.

Sentencing is scheduled for Sept. 6. The company faces up to a $1 million fine.

American was charged with conspiring with two other baking companies to submit rigged, non-competitive bids between 1983 and 1985.

The other two bakeries, Fox's Holsum Bakery Inc. of Wilmington and Franklin Baking Co. of Goldsboro, have pleaded guilty to bid-rigging charges and have paid more than $500,000 in fines and civil settlements.

American, which operates bakeries through its Merita division, denied participating in any scheme to fix prices or submit rigged contract bids.

Deputy Wounded

PEACHTREE, N.C. (AP) — A Cherokee County deputy sheriff was wounded by a shotgun blast Tuesday morning after he took part in an all-night search for a gunman who allegedly created a disturbance in the Peachtree community, authorities say.

Deputy Clay Edward Hardin, 38, was struck in the side by a buckshot pellet. He was treated at Murphy Medical Center and released late Tuesday morning.

Cherokee Sheriff Jack Thompson said Kenny Rene Matheson, 23, of Murphy surrendered about 7 a.m. following the all-night search by 48 officers from surrounding counties and towns, the Highway Patrol and the State Bureau of Investigation.

Matheson was charged with firing a weapon from a place of concealment, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill or inflict serious injury, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon on a law enforcement officer and one count of assault with a deadly weapon. He was being held in the Cherokee County Jail late Tuesday afternoon in lieu of $100,000 cash bond.

Honored

RALEIGH (AP) — Three of North Carolina's most acclaimed traditional musicians were honored at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., in conjunction with the 22nd annual Festival of American Folklife.

Officials last week accepted the donation of musical instruments of Elizabeth Cotten, a guitarist from Carrboro; Tommy Jarrell, a Mount Airy fiddler, and Fred Cockerham of Low Gap, a banjo player. The instruments were donated by the three deceased musicians' families.

Turkey Harvest

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's wild turkey harvest jumped to a 40-year record this spring, showing N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission biologists their efforts to restore the state's population is paying off.

Reports from hunters from across the state showed 1,027 wild turkeys were taken during the April 9 through May 7 season. All three of the state's geographical regions showed dramatic increases in harvest reports. Harvests were up 99 percent in the mountains, while the Piedmont was up 31 percent and the coastal plain improved 26 percent.

In 1987, 680 birds were taken statewide, while 351 were taken in 1983.

DOE Task Force Tours N.C. Site

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
MORRISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal officials inspecting North Carolina's proposed site for the superconducting super collider say they don't want to talk about the comparisons they are making with other states competing for the project.

Wilmot Hess, chairman of the task force said Tuesday he was impressed by the rural setting of the site on the borders of Durham, Granville and Person counties.

"I was impressed with the fact that a large fraction of the ring is in forest and I think the state has done a good job trying to site the ring so that they minimize the amount of interaction with developed communities," Hess said.

Hess made his comments as the team paused between helicopter inspections and a bus tour of the area.

"We had a very good look at the whole thing," Hess said, as members trooped from two helicopters at Raleigh-Durham International Airport following an aerial tour of the potential location for the 53-mile oval tunnel.

Hess was quick to point out the rural setting did not particularly distinguish North Carolina from the other six states vying for the multi-billion scientific project.

"It's maybe a little more rural than one or two," he said. "Most of the states have tried to get locations which are pretty rural, fairly close to fairly good-sized cities but far enough out so they're not disrupting people."

Hess mentioned that he had seen some of the signs residents had posted in protest over the proposal to place the super collider in their neighborhood.

On Wednesday and Thursday, groups of specialists will meet to discuss particular components of North Carolina's proposal, Hess said. Hess said reporters would not be welcome to join a bus tour of the area.

"We're not at liberty to say anything about the process while it's under way," Hess said. "If we have press with us ... we won't get as free a dialogue as we want. ... What we're trying to do is to be absolutely equal to everyone involved."

If built, the super collider would be used to hurl atomic particles into each other allowing scientists to study the resulting release of energy to learn more about the properties of matter.

The proposed project carries a promise of up to $270 million a year for the local economy, 3,000 new jobs and national and international scientific prestige.

After making its inspection tours the group will develop an environmental impact assessment of the sites in North Carolina, Arizona, Texas, Michigan, Illinois, Tennessee and Colorado.

The task force will recommend a preferred site in August, and Energy Secretary John Herrington is expected to select a final site in November.

Post Confines 1,350 Over Missing Pistol

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — About 700 more Fort Bragg soldiers in two 82nd Airborne Division units have been confined to their unit areas after a 9mm pistol was discovered to be missing, a division spokesman says.

Another 650 soldiers have been confined to their unit area since June 15 when two anti-tank rockets disappeared.

"The two (incidents) are unrelated but the procedure is the same," Maj. Mike Nason, a division spokesman, told The Fayetteville Times Tuesday.

The soldiers are isolated, kept on duty and not given an opportunity to hand off the weapons, Nason said.

Division officials have not determined whether the pistol was lost or stolen, but officials "have reason to believe" the two M-72 Light Anti-Tank Weapons were taken intentionally, he said.

"We consider both (incidents) to be serious," Nason said. "Certainly the two lost LAWs represent a higher danger to the public safety. The loss of a 9mm pistol is a serious matter nonetheless. We're not accustomed to losing weapons at all. We're not about to dismiss either lightly."

Criminal Investigation Command officials are investigating both incidents, Nason said.

Nason described the occurrence of the two incidents at the same time as "coincidence."

"We don't lose weapons routinely," Nason said. "This is an aberration."

The LAW is a self-contained, one-shot unit consisting of a 66mm high explosive rocket packed in a disposable launch tube, officials said.

Utilities Bill Faces Senate Roadblock

BUBBLEGUM TIME — State Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Manteo, put his bubble gum to use while sorting through papers at his desk in the Statehouse in Raleigh Tuesday. The General Assembly is drawing to a close its short summer session and may adjourn this weekend. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would change when counties must make adjustments in the assessed value of property owned by utilities could be killed if the Senate Finance Committee decides to call a public hearing on the measure.

The bill hit a possible roadblock when Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, committee chairman, announced Tuesday that two senators on the committee — whom he did not identify — had requested a public hearing on the bill. Senate rules require five working days to pass before a public hearing can be held, meaning the earliest it could be held would be Tuesday, Rauch said.

"The effect of putting this off for five days is obvious," he said. Such a move could kill the bill as the General Assembly hopes to adjourn by the end of this week, Rauch said.

Rauch has the power to call for a public hearing but said that because of the consequences of that action, he would ask the committee to vote on the proposal. Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, moved that a public hearing be held, but the committee delayed voting on his motion until today.

The bill also ran into some politics when its sponsor, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, complained about having to wait while other bills were discussed.

"I've been sitting here a damn hour" while the House Appropriations Committee was meeting, said Watkins, who is chairman of that committee. Watkins made his comment to Goldston, who was filling in for a few minutes while Rauch was out of the room.

"When you get to be king, everybody's supposed to rise when you come in," Goldston told reporters as he returned to his seat after Rauch took over the meeting again.

After the meeting, when told of Watkins' comments, Rauch said: "I run the Senate Finance Committee, and I run it fairly, and I run it by a posted agenda. ... Whether he's chairman of Appropriations or a freshman Republican, that's the way Senate Finance is run. ..."

Rauch had sent the sergeant-at-arms to bring Watkins to the meeting. Then Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, described his mail-order sales tax bill. It was when Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake, was called on to discuss a local bill that Watkins made his comments to Goldston and walked out.

Miller then discussed another bill before Watkins was called back to the meeting to discuss his bill.

"I do take full responsibility for telling Sen. Goldston the rotation of the bills," Rauch said of Goldston's calling of bills while he was away from the meeting.

Watkins said he was told to be at the meeting at 11 a.m. and was then kept waiting while he should have been presiding over the House Appropriations Committee meeting.

Bill Underhill of the state Department of Revenue said Watkins' bill would solve some problems for counties such as Person and Wake.

School Chief's Control Strengthened

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly has given the state school superintendent more control over the State Department of Public Instruction by putting the controller's office under the superintendent's control.

The governance of public schools in North Carolina has been called a "three-headed monster," Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, said Tuesday, referring to the controller, the state superintendent and the chairman of the State Board of Education.

"This cuts it down to a two-headed monster, maybe," he said.

The bill passed 44-1 in the Senate with little debate. It takes effect Feb. 1, 1989.

Warren, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said legislators had hoped to make more changes in the Department of Public Instruction but were able to agree only on this one provision.

Warren said he hoped the action "would not be considered a solution to this problem," but rather a step in the right direction.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, said the bill made it clear "who sets policy and who carries it out."

In the past, the state board has set policy and the superintendent, who is elected, has followed it or not, depending on his opinion of it, Hipps said.

Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, said the education board is not in town except when they have their meetings in Raleigh, while the Department of Public Instruction is always there.

The bill, he said, "gives the controller someone he has to answer to," Nye said. "It does put the controller with his employees under somebody who is responsible to us."

Houses Differ On New Spending Proposal

RALEIGH (AP) — Politically touchy issues such as spending for local projects and whether legislators should get a bigger expense allowance are dividing the state House and Senate as work continues on next year's budget.

Behind-the-scenes negotiations to fashion a joint spending plan — which has been the practice since 1975 — broke down last week. Instead, Democratic leaders of the two chambers fashioned rival blueprints for adding the final $163 million to the nearly $10 billion budget, most of which was enacted last year.

The Senate Appropriations Committee planned to take up its leadership's version this morning and a floor vote was likely later today. The House approved a widely differing bill Tuesday.

If the Senate passes a different package and the House rejects it — a likely scenario — a joint conference committee will be appointed to hammer out a compromise. With legislative leaders hoping to adjourn the summer session this week, the talks could take on the air of a high-stakes, down-to-the-wire drama.

The House tentatively approved its bill 93-10 and gave it final passage on a voice vote. The Senate leadership unveiled its plan in a meeting of budget subcommittee chairmen.

Earlier this month, the Legislature approved a $274.2 million operating budget, leaving an estimated $163 million available for capital projects.

Operating expenses continue from year to year, while capital expenditures are for one-time projects such as new buildings and maintenance.

The Senate and House capital plans differ in numerous respects, including the total amount: $156 million in the House bill and $163 million in the Senate's. The reason for the discrepancy: House leaders set aside $7 million for local appropriations while the Senate side didn't.

Senate Democrats, aware that Republicans have made local spending a political issue, want to forgo the practice this year with Jordan running for governor and Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand seeking election as lieutenant governor.

Storms Provide Some Relief To Dry Midwest

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

Storms cheered by thousands at a major-league baseball game in Kansas City brought desperately needed rain to the drought-battered Midwest today, but forecasters said much more was needed.

"You talk about a $1 million rain — this is a $100 million rain," extension agent Vance Haugen in northeast Wisconsin's Shawano County said as the storms began Tuesday. "We're very happy. We're out dancing in it."

Tuesday's rainfall was the first significant precipitation for the Chicago area since May 23, the National Weather Service said.

The worst drought to hit America's midsection since the Dust Bowl has withered crops, dried up water supplies, halted barge traffic on shrunk rivers and sparked forest fires.

A record 1.67 inches of rain fell Tuesday in Madison, Wis., where the old mark of 1.62 inches was set in 1928. In six hours overnight, more than 3 inches fell in Oklahoma City, where streets were up to 3 feet deep in water. More than an inch fell in Laramie, Wyo., and nearly half an inch in Chicago and Omaha, Neb.

"It definitely helps, but probably a lot more will be needed to really change the situation," the weather service's Hugh Crowther said from Kansas City, Mo.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms extended today from the High Plains to the mid-Mississippi Valley.

When light rain began falling Tuesday in the bottom of the ninth of the White Sox-Royals game in Kansas City, the 27,000 spectators broke into sustained applause. But the rain lasted only a few minutes, and the Royals lost 4-3.

Despite the rain, temperatures in the 100s seared sections of the Midwest. It was 101 degrees in Kansas City, where the old record of 94 was set in 1978. Temperatures hit 105 in Sioux Falls, S.D., 1 degree higher than the 1931 record.

Triple-digit temperatures caused part of Interstate 20 in central Mississippi to buckle more than 4 feet, triggering a collision between two cars and a tractor-trailer rig, officials said. No serious injuries were reported.

Last week's heat severely stressed crops and blotted up soil moisture in most of the nation's eastern half, the government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility reported Tuesday.

"Corn, cotton, soybeans, sorghum and spring wheat conditions continued declining" the week of June 20-26, the unit said. "The lack of moisture may prevent some recently planted soybeans and sorghum from emerging."

Pastures were rated poor to very poor, and farmers culled herds as pasture and hay supplies dropped, the report said.

Vice President George Bush, the Republican party's apparent presidential nominee, was to attend a livestock auction in Marion, Wis., today, to call attention to the farmers' plight.

In Washington, Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, meeting with Ohio's congressional delegation, resisted a request from Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum the department expedite disaster assessments. Such assessments would be a step toward making farmers eligible for low-interest loans.

"Most farmers you would ask say they don't know what kind of crop they're going to have, on the 28th of June," Lyng said. "And I think it would be very dangerous for us to start making these loans ... for just political reasons," he said.

In other developments: —The Coast Guard tightened restrictions on barge traffic on the Lower Mississippi. Northbound towboats will be limited to 20 barges, only 12 of which can be loaded, said Cmdr. Michael Donohoe of the Memphis district. Last week, the Guard imposed a limit of 25 barges per tow, of which 16 could be loaded.

Limits for southbound towboats remained unchanged at 20 barges, all of which can be loaded.

Others fought the drought in less conventional ways. In Audobon, Iowa, farmer Elmer G. Carlson was paying the way for 16 Hopi Indians to fly from Arizona to the Midwest so they could dance for rain starting Sunday.

In Louisville, Ky., Billy Bird — mascot for the Louisville Redbirds minor-league baseball game — pitched a tent in the stadium stands and vowed to remain there until there is a "good five-minute downpour."

"The AstroTurf is turning brown," the mascot said.

RESERVATION WOES — Indian rancher Jim Danks kneels in front of a dried-up pond on the Fort Berthold Indian Reservation where cattle usually drink. This summer's heat and lack of rain has caused major problems for the almost 4,000 Indians who live on the reservation. (AP Laserphoto)

River Shrinks

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Residents are flocking to the levee these days to watch as the mighty Mississippi River slowly dries up.

"I've lived here all my life and I've never seen anything like this," J.C. Bailey, a 66-year-old carpenter said Tuesday evening as he gazed at the shrinking river.

According to the U.S. Corps of Engineers, the Mississippi is at a record low. The water level at Memphis is 9.8 feet below sea level, more than 20 feet lower than it was at this time a year ago.

"People are starting to find artifacts and other things that have been under water for years," said Dorothy Gross, a camera-toting Memphis bookkeeper. "A woman recently found a fossil on the riverbank that turned out to be a mastodon bone."

Summer Heat, Lack Of Rain Has Special Meaning For Indian Tribes

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

FORT BERTHOLD INDIAN RESERVATION, N.D. (AP) — The white men who took the West's land and water from the Indians promised their treaties would last "as long as the grass grows and the water flows."

This year, no grass grows and no water flows on the Fort Berthold Indian Reservation.

But the summer's devastating heat and lack of rain has special bitterness for the almost 4,000 members of the Three Affiliated Tribes who live on the reservation. They feel long-broken promises by the government helped destroy a way of life that might have allowed them to weather the drought.

The elders who are enduring 106-degree days and cloudless skies atop sunbaked Missouri River bluffs remember the 1930s drought, before the big dams came. Then, Mandan, Hidatsa and Arikara Indians lived in the river bottoms and were nearly self-sufficient through the Great Depression.

"We were well-off by the standards of people trying to survive off agriculture," recalled Jim Danks, an Indian rancher. "We had irrigated community gardens, meadowlands planted in hay and clover and flooded by spring runoff which we used to feed our cattle, and we mined coal and harvested timber off the riverbanks to stay warm in the winter.

"We sold vegetables and our homemade jellies and wild fruit to white settlers who came down to the river from the upper lands, so the only things we bought were flour, sugar and baking powder.

"Unemployment was less than 3 percent, nearly everybody lived on the reservation, and the word 'welfare' was unknown to us," said Danks.

"Those were just dry years for the tribes, not devastation, because of the resources we had from the river. Now, living without its blessings, we are facing devastation if it doesn't rain pretty quick."

Today Danks, like all tribal members still on the million-acre reservation, must live high above Lake Sakakawea on the treeless, flat prairie. He has no irrigated hay meadows or clover, no naturally watered gardens, no coal, no timber. In a year of scant but normal rainfall, his 300 cows and their new calves barely prosper on 6,000 acres of owned and rented land.

Danks' five sons, like half the tribe's members, have had to find jobs elsewhere. Each tried ranching. Past droughts and unrelenting debt doomed them. They are now scattered from North Dakota to Arizona, collecting paychecks on construction sites.

"Most of the ranchers my age ... we've barely managed to hold things together," said Danks, 61. "I never thought this kind of drought would happen again in my lifetime. This one could take the final equity we've managed to hold onto and flush it down the drain. I wonder if I can salvage anything."

Danks is descended from generations of farmers. Hidatsas, Arikaras and Mandans were riverbottom agrarians when explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, the first of many white men who wanted something, showed up seeking food in 1804.

Nearly 150 years later, Washington ordered the tribes to move to high ground and abandon their traditional life. Congress forced them out to create Lake Sakakawea behind the giant Garrison Dam, one of five built in Montana and the Dakotas after World War II to tame the Missouri. The government said it needed to drown the Indians' bottomlands to halt spring floods downstream, create a navigable channel through Middle America and generate power.

As the dam's gates closed and the waters rose, the Indians reluctantly accepted $24 an acre and moved to the bluffs in exchange for promises of a vast irrigation system.

Groundbreaking Held For Fountain

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The drought may have shrunk the Ohio River, but it hasn't dried up plans for construction of the Louisville Falls Fountain, billed as the world's tallest.

The first of four concrete caissons being implanted in the river bed was built Tuesday in preparation for the fountain's arrival.

The structure is being built in Tennessee, and is scheduled to be floated up the Tennessee and Ohio rivers later this month.

The fountain, financed by a $2.6 million gift from the Mary and Barry

Bingham Sr. Fund, is intended as a national landmark and a new symbol for Louisville, reflecting its river heritage.

It was described as the largest floating fountain in the world by Louisville Central Area, the downtown planning agency.

At peak performance, water will jet 375 feet into the air as the fountain pumps 15,800 gallons of river water a minute.

Four smaller jets will spray water 75 feet high, and 24 others will spray 10 feet high, creating a fleur-de-lis, the symbol of Louisville.

On Thursday, June 23rd, the employees of Grady-White Boats enjoyed a lunch buffet served by Management in honor of Employee Appreciation Day. Grady-White sets a special day aside each year to honor employees with a special lunch and gift.

Purchasing Agent Sought More Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department's chief purchasing official sought last month to give top Pentagon political appointees the power to veto searches of the private contractors who supply military equipment.

Robert Costello, the undersecretary of defense for acquisition, proposed the search warrant review in a May 5 memo, written before the public ever learned of a two-year nationwide investigation into allegedly corrupt Pentagon contracting. The Associated Press obtained the memo Tuesday.

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci rejected the proposal, perceiving it as "interference in the conduct of criminal investigations," Air Force Col. David J. Shea, a Pentagon spokesman, said Tuesday.

The plan could have curtailed a crucial tool for investigators seeking evidence that top-secret Pentagon information was sold to private consultants, who then sold it to contractors. About three dozen searches have been conducted so far.

The Costello-to-Carlucci memo complained that Defense Department investigators had executed a search last February in a "sensational" manner by using some two dozen law enforcement officers and failing to give the company prior notice. That particular search was part of a fraud investigation, but was apparently unrelated to the nationwide probe.

Initially, Carlucci sent Costello a note saying, "This is a good idea," Shea said.

But Shea insisted Tuesday the note referred only to Costello's suggestion that Pentagon investigators be trained to obtain evidence "in the least forceful and sensational manner."

Shea said Carlucci "doesn't want to be associated with" Costello's proposal that a "review and approval" system be established for search warrants.

"The appropriate level of review and/or approval should at least be (Deputy Secretary of Defense) Will Taft or myself, and quite possibly yourself," Costello wrote.

Costello was testifying today before the House Armed Services Committee, in the first congressional hearing into contracting practices since the investigation became public.

On Tuesday, a Justice Department official confirmed that Attorney General Edwin Meese III has removed himself from the investigation, because his own lawyers represent figures in the Pentagon case.

Earlier in the day, Meese had spoken about the case at length during a news conference, but never mentioned that he had withdrawn from it.

Meese spokesman Patrick Korten later confirmed that the attorney general had recused himself. Korten said Meese didn't mention it because "there wasn't any particular reason to mention it."

At the news conference, Meese said he thinks Congress is to blame for creating an atmosphere conducive to scandal at the Pentagon. He said Congress puts "layers of requirements" on Pentagon officials and ignores budget planning cycles, leading contractors to say, "We've got to get ours now."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said he agrees there are too many regulations, but many came from within the Pentagon rather than from Congress. In any event, he said, that is no excuse for "pure old fraud, waste and greed."

In other developments:

—Former Navy Secretary James H. Webb said investigators told him last fall that Navy official-turned-consultant Melvyn Paisley and an unidentified member of Webb's headquarters staff were under investigation.

—The Washington Post reported today that the Defense Department is reviewing six previously closed fraud investigations, to see if they should be re-opened in light of the new allegations. Pentagon Inspector General June Gibbs Brown said her office is reviewing any past cases involving individuals or companies whose names have come up in the current investigation.

—The New York Times reported today that FBI agents searched the home of Richard Seelmeyer, who was an aide to the late Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y. Seelmeyer is now publisher of Capitol Hill Defense Digest, a newsletter about military matters; Addabbo, who died in April 1986, was chairman of the House subcommittee on Defense Department appropriations.

Costello's suggestion for the search warrant review was rejected not only by Carlucci but by Brown, the Pentagon inspector general, according to a Pentagon source, speaking only on condition he not be named.

The source said Ms. Brown "indicated to Mr. Carlucci the Department of Justice will not accept a procedure whereby use of search warrants by defense criminal investigative organizations would require concurrence of any official outside the office of inspector general."

Costello's anger was triggered by a Feb. 25 search at the Electronic & Space Division of Emerson Electric Co. near St. Louis.

Meese Frequent Flyer With FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators have learned that Attorney General Edwin Meese III is a frequent flier on FBI executive aircraft, but the bureau won't say where he goes or what he does.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., who is directing an inquiry into Meese's use of FBI aircraft, says the secrecy raises concern that the administration may be trying "to keep embarrassing information from public view."

English also says that from what he's learned so far, it appears at least some of Meese's travel may have violated President Reagan's mandate to fly on commercial airlines when it is cheaper for taxpayers.

At English's request, the General Accounting Office, the investigative wing of Congress, asked the FBI to supply flight logs showing where its aircraft had flown and who had been aboard.

The request was part of a larger review by the English-chaired Government Operations subcommittee on government information, justice and agriculture to determine whether the VIP aircraft owned by various federal agencies could be put to better use in the war on drugs.

Instead of the FBI aircraft logs, GAO was given a summary that provided details about aircraft use by FBI and other Justice Department officials but only dates and the notation "USAG" for Meese.

The entire document was stamped "classified," keeping it from public view.

The report showed that between June 3, 1986, and May 11, 1987, Meese used an FBI aircraft 40 times, compared to 37 trips for all other FBI and Justice officials, according to a committee staffer who spoke on condition of anonymity.

During this same period, FBI Director William Webster used the aircraft only six times, one of them a joint trip with Meese, according to the staffer.

Patrick Korten, Meese's spokesman, said there were no improprieties in the attorney general's travels but he would not comment on why details of the trips are being withheld from Congress and the public. FBI spokeswoman Sue Schmitzer said the bureau had no comment.

English, who has asked the GAO to make another attempt to get details of Meese's travels, said he has "serious doubts" that classifying all information about the aircraft's use meets the test of protecting U.S. national defense or foreign policy interests.

Showdown Delayed On Layoff Notices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans are frustrating Democratic efforts to force a showdown with the Reagan administration before the Democratic National Convention over giving workers advance layoff notices.

GOP opponents concede that Congress will pass the legislation, which once was part of massive overhauling of the nation's trade laws that President Reagan vetoed last month.

But they are trying to deny Democrats a possible victory on a congressional override of an expected veto from Reagan before the Democratic convention opens July 18 in Atlanta.

The bill would require employers of 150 people or more to give 60 days advance notice to both workers and local community officials before closing a plant or laying off 50 people or more.

Senate Minority Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Tuesday he could not explain all the myriad amendments Republicans have offered to the bill in six days of debate on the Senate floor.

"I don't know precisely what's happening myself; it's not a requirement around here," he said. "But I know what the game plan is on the other side and it's to get a bill passed before the Democratic National Convention."

Democratic leaders, meanwhile, scheduled their first attempt today to bring the Republican delays to an end and force a vote on final passage in the Senate.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., admitted he lacked the 60 votes necessary to do that on the first attempt. But Byrd vowed to interrupt a planned recess that would enable lawmakers to spend 11 straight days, beginning Thursday, in their home states campaigning for re-election if the bill isn't passed today.

Byrd had planned to adjourn the Senate today, giving the House an opportunity to act on it Thursday before it recesses. That would give Reagan just 10 working days to veto the bill, enabling an override attempt the week before the Democratic convention.

Earthquake Warning Issued

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A slightly increased risk of a severe earthquake exists in an area south of San Francisco that was jolted by a moderate tremor this week, say state officials who also caution against public alarm.

California's Office of Emergency Services issued an advisory Tuesday saying that for the next five days, the slightly increased likelihood for continued seismic activity was possible for the region rocked by Monday's earthquake, which scientists estimated at between 5.0 and 5.7 on the Richter scale.

Scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey, University of California, Berkeley, and the state Division of Mines and Geology "say that this activity could involve an earthquake as large as 6.5 Richter magnitude, although it's not probable that a quake of this size will occur," the advisory said.

It was issued to alert officials of Santa Cruz, San Benito, Monterey and Santa Clara counties "to maintain preparedness and awareness measures."

The chance of a magnitude-6.5 quake on the San Andreas Fault within five days "is a very slight possibility, but we do feel it is our responsibility to make this information public," Office of Emergency Services spokesman Tom Mullins said from Sacramento.

FBI Told Mob Chief Of Hit Men

By DANIEL J. WAKIN
Associated Press Writer
WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — The FBI warned John Gotti, reputedly the nation's most powerful mobster, he was being hunted by Mafia hit men, officials said in announcing the indictments of 22 people in the restaurant rubout of a businessman.

Federal indictments unsealed Tuesday offer a glimpse into feuding between the Genovese and Gambino crime families. Authorities say the indictments could cripple the New Jersey faction of the Genovese group.

The indictments name 22 people, including reputed Genovese figures, construction company executives and union officials.

Authorities had no specific information about a link between the plot to kill Gotti, reputed boss of the Gambino family, and the slaying of New York businessman Irwin Schiff, said Newark FBI chief John C. McGinley.

After Schiff was gunned down Aug. 8 over dessert at a New York City restaurant, law enforcement officials said they believed he had ties to the Gambino family and was killed in a dispute over money.

Federal authorities said Schiff was involved in up to $40 million in fraudulent loans and was the target of a criminal investigation. Seven people have been arrested in connection with his financial dealings.

At a news conference to announce the indictments, state police Superintendent Col. Clinton L. Pagano said the New Jersey Genovese faction was fighting efforts by Gambino operatives to move into northern New Jersey and therefore allegedly plotted to "eliminate" John Gotti and his brother, Gene, a reputed high-ranking member of the Gambino family.

In bugged conversations last year at a Hoboken restaurant, Louis A. "Bobby" Manna, 59, of Jersey City, alleged head of the New Jersey Genovese faction, and his lieutenants discussed killing the Gottis, McGinley said.

Also at the restaurant were Genovese associates Richard "Bocci" DeSciscio, 42, of Bayonne and restaurant-owner Martin "Motts" Casella, 71, of Secaucus, the indictment said.

The FBI warned the Gottis of the plot last fall, and they decided "to use their own devices to protect themselves," McGinley said.

The larger indictment contained the Gotti and Schiff charges, a labor payoff scheme, loan-sharking and a "large-scale horse and sports-betting operation," said U.S. Attorney Samuel A. Alito Jr.

A second indictment alleged that seven defendants carried out another illegal gambling business.

Authorities refused to discuss the details of the Gotti and Schiff allegations.

In raids early Tuesday, 130 state and federal law officers searched homes and businesses in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and arrested 21 of the suspects, McGinley said.

On defendant was hospitalized with an undisclosed illness and was not immediately arrested, McGinley said.

An attorney for Manna, Joseph Castiglia, said his client "categorically denies the allegations." But Castiglia said he would not comment further until he could read the indictment more closely.

BACK TOGETHER — Micaela Aguilera de Garcia hugs her partially deaf son, Jose de Jesus Garcia Aguilera, after the two were reunited Tuesday in Ciudad Juarez. Mexico's 'Lost' Child Is Reunited With Mom After 8-Month Absence

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer
CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A mysterious hearing-impaired boy found walking the streets of this border city nearly eight months ago is finally going home after a tearful reunion with his mother.

He's very excited, and he has already packed his things and is ready to go," Olivia Espinosa Bermudez, director of a child welfare agency here, said following Tuesday night's reunion between the boy, known to the world as Sabath, and his mother. Authorities said it would take three days to officially confirm through medical records that the little boy is 9-year-old Jose de Jesus Garcia Aguilera, but said he and Micaela Aguilera de Garcia appeared to be mother and son.

Ms. Aguilera said she plans to take the boy back to his Gulf Coast hometown of Tampico, Mexico, where his grandmother and four siblings live.

However, she said she might later send Jose back to the child welfare agency, where he has been staying the past seven months, so he can learn to speak and use sign language.

"I work, and if I take him, he'll run away again," Ms. Aguilera, 32, told reporters as she hugged the teary-eyed boy nicknamed Chuy. "I know that (here) my boy is safe because he's been here all this time."

She said she might allow a Juarez couple to adopt her boy, "but just if they give me permission to see him."

Ms. Aguilera has described Jose as a chronic runaway, and said he last ran away while visiting his father in October in Monterrey, 750 miles southeast of Juarez.

He was found Nov. 7 roaming the streets of Juarez, across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas.

Workers at the welfare agency, the center for the Development of the Integrated Family, were stumped as to the boy's origins because he can only speak a few words and communicates mostly through gestures and drawings. They named him Sabath because he was found on a Saturday — sabado in Spanish.

The search for the boy's origins extended into the United States and even France after child welfare agency workers noticed the boy preferred U.S. food and cartoon characters. They notified their Tex-

Workers Died In Rescue Try

AUBURN, Ind. (AP) — A cleaning accident at a metal platings plant unleashed deadly cyanide fumes that killed four men, including three who collapsed trying to save co-workers, and injured 20 others.

The Bastian Plating Co. plant remained closed today after air samples showed 5 parts per million of cyanide fumes near the tank where the workers died Tuesday.

Ten parts per million can affect the central nervous system, causing breathing difficulties, nausea and confusion, said Trooper Robert Corkwell, a hazardous materials officer for the state police. A concentration of 300 parts per million is fatal, he said.

Company officials believe a worker used muriatic acid, a commercial term for hydrochloric acid, and zinc oxide to clean a 5-foot-tall tank when the lethal hydrocyanic acid formed, Corkwell said. An independent lab later determined sulfides also were present, he said.

Investigators have not determined whether the worker used a standard procedure that went awry, or whether the wrong chemicals were mixed, Corkwell said.

Craig Fogel, 19, was critically injured. Fifteen of the injured were rescuers wearing self-contained breathing units who were affected by the gas because it can be absorbed through the skin, Corkwell said.

The first worker collapsed inside the vat and three others in succession apparently tried to pull their co-workers to safety, police say.

Investigators don't know who mixed the chemicals or the order in which the victims died, Auburn police Detective David Bundy said.

"He might be able to tell us when he comes around," Bundy said, referring Fogel, who was in critical condition at Parkview Memorial Hospital in Fort Wayne after undergoing hyperbaric oxygen treatment.

Bastian Vice President Dennis Fry said he was unsure how many workers were in the plant when the accident happened. The plant employs about 30 people to make dyes and chromate dip used to give electroplated products a decorative color.

DeKalb County coroner Dr. William Hathaway identified the victims as Baron W. Sweet, 21, of Garrett; Larry D. Hensinger, 29, of Waterloo; William M. Freeze, 29, of Garrett; and Jeffery Link of Auburn. Link's age was not available.

Runaway Commuter Train Lost Brakes A Mile Before Crash

PARIS (AP) — Investigators tried today to reconstruct the 40 minutes between the discovery of brake problems on a Paris-bound commuter train and its collision with a crowded train, which killed 59 people.

The state-run rail company, SNCF, said the engineer realized his brakes weren't working when he was more than a mile away from the busy Gare de Lyon station and warned passengers to get to the back of the train.

The brake trouble on the eight-car train began five miles outside the station after a passenger pulled the emergency cord at Vert de Maisons, an unscheduled stop, at about 6:30 p.m. Monday, the company said. It wasn't known why the passenger pulled the cord.

After a 26-minute delay there, the train continued on toward Paris. But the brake problems continued, and a mile from the station engineer Daniel Saulin appeared unable to stop the train.

Saulin, 42, alerted the station controller and then his passengers as the train rushed at 40-50 mph through a stop signal 600 yards from impact.

Rail officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the station controller did not have time to reroute the train and it slammed into the stationary four-car train at 7:10 p.m.

Normal procedure would have been for the arriving train to stop at the 600-yard signal and get directions to the appropriate track.

Through the night and into Tuesday morning, 250 rescue workers struggled to free the injured. The number of bodies grew steadily and the crash became Paris' worst train disaster.

SNCF reported 59 dead. Paris emergency services said 38 were injured.

SNCF, the Transport Ministry and judicial authorities are each conducting their own investigation into the crash, said Philippe Rouvillois, director general of the rail company.

"There is a tie, the nature of which we do not yet know, between the use of the alarm signal (emergency stop), which had immobilized the train a short time before ... and the catastrophe," SNCF official Roger Gerin told a news conference. "The origin of the accident was difficulties with the braking system but we do not know the exact cause."

SNCF officials said Saulin, realizing about a mile from the Gare de Lyon that he could not stop, was able to slow down slightly by using an emergency brake.

Gerin said Saulin's train had made 15 stops along its route and that the brakes worked normally at each.

After the passenger pulled the emergency stop, "the engineer exper-rienced difficulty in trying to re-arm the brake system, but he resumed his trip," Gerin said. He gave no details about the brake problem.

A passenger on the train, Laure Cocu, told the French daily Liberation that while the train was stopped at the unscheduled station she heard a noise like the release of air from the train's pneumatic brakes.

"We heard a rush of air, a little like the noise in a factory," she told the newspaper. "Some passengers in my car got off. My colleague saw the conductor and the engineer by the side of the train looking under the car."

"My colleague heard the engineer say, 'The brakes are blocked at the back.'"

The engineer on the train in the station, Andre Tanguy, was killed in the crash. Francis Boulanger, SNCF spokesman, said earlier reports that he escaped might have resulted from confusion with other railroad employees who jumped from the train. Boulanger said Tanguy was one of seven employees who died.

Asked whether the age of the train might have been a factor, Gerin said trains undergo maintenance four times a year in addition to routine checks and this particular train had been checked just days before the crash.

Capt. WILLIAM NORDEEN

Terrorists Take Credit In Bombing

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A Greek terrorist organization blamed for previous assassinations of American diplomats claimed responsibility today for a car-bomb blast that killed the U.S. military attaché as he drove to work.

In a five page statement published in the left wing Athens afternoon daily Ethnos, November 17 said it would attack more Americans "until the last Turkish soldier leaves Cyprus and the last American soldier leaves our country."

U.S. Navy Capt. William Nordeen, 51, was killed Tuesday when a booby-trapped car blew up next to his armor-plated automobile just 100 yards from his suburban Athens home.

Aran Pillows Show Skill

The Irish — especially those from the Aran Isles, which lie just off the coast of Galway — have a special flair with knitting needles, and not one, but four, fabulous Aran-patterned pillows in assorted shapes, sizes and patterns can be yours with this week's project. Fascinating and challenging, this foursome is a delight for those knitters who love the Aran look.

The unusual bolster pillow, a rectangle, and small and large squares create a showcase for the beautiful variety of Aran stitches. It's the perfect opportunity to learn new patterns on small pieces with no shaping involved. All are worked in a worsted-weight, machine-washable acrylic yarn.

To obtain directions for making the Aran Pillows, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-062688 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-062688 by sending a check or money order for $15.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and sufficient acrylic yarn to complete four pillows in off-white.

Dear Pat: Can you tell me how to "knit 2 together through the back loops of both stitches"? Recently, this phrase was a part of the instructions you gave for a pattern stitch, but I don't know how to do this. -- Mrs. R., Orchard Park, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. R.: This is one of those knitting maneuvers that is much easier to demonstrate than to explain in

Pat's Pointers

To knit through the back loop, position the right needle in back of the left needle and insert the right needle tip into the portion of the loop behind the left needle, entering it from right to left. Try it first on a single stitch and then I think you will find it a simple matter to go through the back loop of the first and second stitches at the same time, thus "knitting 2 together through the back loops." Hope this solves your problem.

Dear Pat: This is my second letter to you regarding a pattern stitch I think is in error. In mid-April you answered another lady who thought you were wrong, but your explanation to her did not make sense to me either.

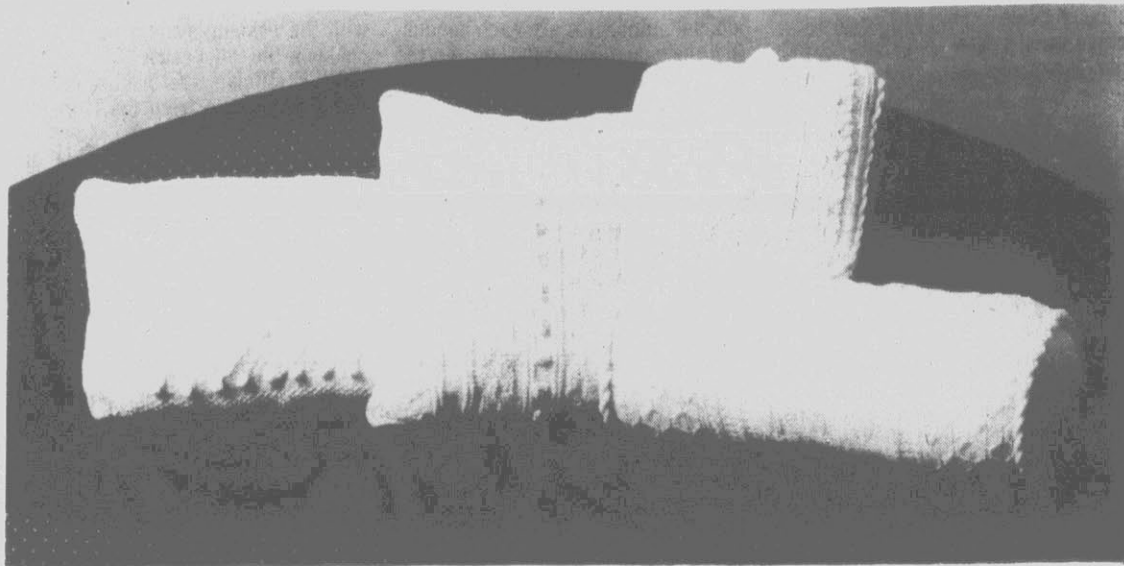

You say to "purl 1, purl 2 together, yarnover, knit 1." How can this work when the yarn is already over when you are purling? I believe the instructions should read, "purl 1, knit 2 together, yarnover, knit 1." I tried my version and it works. -- Katherine P., Pittsburgh

Dear Katherine: Sometimes, I do have to say, "I goofed, there was an error in my instructions." But in this case, the instructions were correct, although apparently not understood by everyone. I congratulate you on discovering a different version of a pattern stitch that works easily for you. The effect is slightly different, but there is no reason not to use it if you prefer. However, I will explain how to yarnover after purl stitches.

You are correct in stating that the yarn is already "over" (in front of the needles) at that point. You create the yarnover by leaving the yarn in that position when you knit the next stitch. This forms the yarnover automatically. In other words, any time you knit a stitch with the yarn in front, you have a yarnover.

For any who missed the earlier columns and would like to try this one-row lace pattern stitch, here it is again: Cast on any number of stitches evenly divisible by 4 and then add 2 more, giving you a multiple of 4 plus 2. Row 1: Step 1: Knit the first 2 stitches. Step 2: purl 1, purl 2 together, yarnover, knit 1. Repeat Step 2 on all stitches to end of the row. Repeat this single row for the desired length.

Couple Marries In Saturday Ceremony

WILSON — Amy Elizabeth Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius David Adams, and Thomas Joseph Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robert Ellis, all of Wilson, were married in the First Christian Church Saturday at 3 p.m.

The Rev. George W. Johnson conducted the ceremony. Organist Laura Davenport of Wilson and vocalist Lauren Nuckolls of Raleigh presented wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her family and escorted by her father, Julie Davita Adams of Wilson was honor attendant for her sister. The best man was the bridegroom's father.

Bridesmaids included Margaret Catherine Andrews of Wilmington, Monica Lee Foote of Raleigh, Donna Carol Massengill of Four Oaks, and Gina Marie Pappas of Ocean City, Md., cousin of the bridegroom. Bridget Leigh Barnes of Wilson was honorary bridesmaid.

Charlotte Fleming Powell of Raleigh was flower girl and the ring bearer was Michael Walldrop of Panama City, Fla., nephew of the bridegroom.

Ushers included Robert Joseph Ellis of Panama City, Fla., and Steven Joseph Ellis of Wilson, both brothers of the bridegroom, Brian Keith Harris of Wilson, Claude Felton Harris Jr. of Raleigh, cousin of the bridegroom, and Truman Topping Teal of Raleigh.

The bride and bridegroom are recent graduates of N.C. State University in Raleigh. He will be entering East Carolina University Medical School in the fall.

The bride wore a formal gown of white taffeta and beaded silk Venice lace. The fitted, hand-beaded silk Venice lace bodice featured a high neckline, sheer dropped shoulder yoke, long tapered sheer sleeves with lace accents, shirred taffeta puffs and basque waist. The gathered taffeta skirt extended into a cathedral train adorned with rows of chantilly lace and a taffeta ruffle with pick-up fashioned of silk roses. She wore a fluted-length veil of illusion with a fluted edge and fluted pouf flowing from a bandeau of silk flowers and pearl sprays. The headpiece was accented with cascading pearls and lily of the valley. She carried her mother's Bible overlaid with cascading white roses and baby's breath.

styled with a fitted bodice, sabrina neckline, V-back, pouf shoulder Juliet sleeves and basque waist. A bustle accented the back of the waist. Each carried a nosegay of rubrum lilies, daisies and pink bouvardia with lace ribbon. The flower girl wore a tea-length dress of white batiste overlaid with white eyelet and a white satin ribbon sash. The bodice featured pouf sleeves accented with satin bows and chantilly lace.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Hilton Head, S.C.

A rehearsal party and dance was held in the Forest Hills Family Room given by the parents of the bridegroom.

High Hemlines, Prices Trip Up Apparel Industry

By MARTHA GROVES
L.A. Times-Washington Post
New Service

LOS ANGELES — Turned off by seasaw hemlines, high prices and a lack of captivating fashions, women have put the brakes on clothes buying and put a big dent in the nation's apparel industry.

Consider Christine McCarthy, who gave up on the big department and specialty stores when they started showing a lot of above-the-knee styles. "A guy's not going to wear shorts to work, and I'm not going to wear a miniskirt," fumed the First Interstate Bank senior vice president.

Now, she buys many outfits directly through designers catering to executive women.

Or attorney Andrea Y. Slade, who wears conservative but updated fashions for judge and jury and was feeling "desperate" about her summer wardrobe. "Nothing they're selling is appropriate for what I do, especially the short skirts and bright colors."

Both are typical of the women who should be the bread and butter of U.S. retailing — the baby boomers in the workplace, the 30-something crowd seen by retailers as having money to burn and a burning need to frequently replenish wardrobes with image clothing. They make up a big portion of the women 18 to 65, 70 percent of whom are now working.

But for nearly a year, those women have made themselves scarce in the nation's clothing shops, with the result that many merchants have reported a string of lackluster sales gains or, in some cases, steep declines from the year before.

For February through May, Carter Hawley Hale Stores, owner of the Broadway, reported that sales were down 2 percent from the year before at comparable stores. The Limited, a leading specialty retailer, showed a decline of 5 percent. And Dayton Hudson, parent of Target and Mervyn's, cited weak women's clothing sales in reporting a small 1.5 percent gain.

"Apparel retailing is experiencing a period of slow growth that's really unprecedented for the 1980s," said Carl Steidtmann, vice president and chief economist of Management Horizons, a consulting firm in Columbus, Ohio. "You really have to go back to the 1974-75 recession to find a period when apparel sales actually contracted."

By year-end, Steidtmann noted, leading specialty apparel retailers will have had their second year of essentially no real growth in sales volume.

And even where dollar gains have been reported, they have been largely wiped out by the clothing industry's recent rampant price inflation — a sharp 6.2 percent run-up in the last year for women's apparel — which resulted from the plummeting value of the dollar and quota restrictions that raised the cost of imports. The price increases seem to have eased lately. The Consumer Price Index for May, issued last week, showed no increase in apparel prices from the month April.

Through their reticence to spend, women have expressed frustration with retailers and apparel manufacturers for trying to swing fashion to the short and clingy as millions of women approach middle age and increasingly need garments that wear well in the workplace. And they have thrown retailers into their own recession, even as much of the rest of the economy continues to show strength.

The slump "was precipitated by the fashion industry's death wish and the whole need to hype short skirts and to attempt to manipulate the fashion-buying public in a way that is so anachronistic," said Carol Farmer, a New York retail consultant. "Women didn't like the fashions, which were unflattering, and they rejected them."

Even once high-flying specialty merchants such as the Limited, which for years had the fashion world by the tail, have been saddled with oversupplies of merchandise that simply did not appeal to the public.

Department stores have fared somewhat better because stagnant sales of women's apparel were tempered by healthy sales of home furnishings and other items. But at those stores, too, the watchword is caution, retail consultants and analysts say.

"Everybody is in trouble," said Al D. McCready, national director of retail and wholesale trade at Deloitte Haskins & Sells, a big New York accounting firm. "You have a heck of a time finding anybody who will say anything positive."

Retailers and clothing designers have only themselves to blame for the slump, industry watchers say.

The apparel business "had so many years of mindless expansion in the casual looks, especially the sweats and active sportswear, that it didn't have to come up with anything new," said Joseph Scheines, with Kurt Salmon Associates, a New York-based consulting firm.

Vacationer Needs Plan 'Esquire' Is A Rank In England, Of Law In U.S.

MEMPHIS (AP) — There are insurance plans, income tax plans, architectural plans and even game plans, but what the vacationer needs is a trip plan, says an expert on vacation travel.

"Without a solid plan of action, you could be cutting your long-awaited getaway short or, worse, you could end up with no vacation at all," says Steve Pike, Director of Leisure Marketing for Holiday Inns Inc., based in Memphis.

Pike offers these tips for people gearing up to wind down:

— Pick up small, easy-to-pack bottles of your favorite toiletries to take along. If you're flying, carry medications, toiletries and cosmetics in a carry-on bag. If your luggage is lost, you'll have the necessities on hand.

— When booking hotel reservations, either directly or through a travel agent, be sure to ask about special rates and amenities available to guests, such as recreational and fitness centers.

— If you have an answering machine, do not leave an announcement that you are going to be out of town. Rather, let callers know that you will be checking your messages and will return calls as quickly as possible.

— If you have a sophisticated fire or burglar alarm, take the time to show a friend or neighbor how to disengage the system.

— When packing for a car trip, don't forget an emergency kit for a possible breakdown on the road. Such kits should include jumper cables, flares, fresh water, a bright handkerchief and first aid equipment.

— Even if your car is apparently in perfect condition, have the battery, tires, oil, radiator and thermostat checked.

According to the American Automobile Association, in 1987, 19.5 million emergency road service calls came in from members complaining of battery and electrical problems, 40 percent; mechanical failures serious enough for towing, 38 percent; and flat tires, 10 percent.

Of the calls, 6 percent came from members who had either lost their car keys, locked themselves out or run out of gas. The remaining 6 percent involved a variety of problems, including overheating, transmission trouble and accidents.

— On travel days, remember to dress in loose and comfortable clothing. A journey in confining outerwear can turn a pleasant adventure into an irritating experience.

— If you have a citizens band radio, it can literally be a lifesaver, whether you are lost, experiencing car trouble or spot someone else in trouble.

— Before leaving for vacation get in touch with the Department of Tourism in each state you plan to visit and request brochures and information on points of interest. These can provide on-the-road reading and can also suggest stops along the way.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I feel sure that you often run letters containing information you know to be incorrect just to stimulate mail. After all, responses to such items do serve to demonstrate that your column has a large readership.

For example, in today's column, some guy by the name of Dale Evan Rogers said that no female could sign her name "Esq." Perhaps neither you nor Mr. Rogers ever employed an attorney. Surely you are aware that all the attorneys in the United States, male and female, are addressed in writing as "Esq." I cannot imagine that you did not know that. — CHARLES IRVIN ODELL, WESTMONT, ILL.

DEAR MR. ODELL: (Any relation to "Digger"? You're pretty adept with "digs.")

I make enough "legitimate" mistakes without knowingly publishing incorrect statements in order to stimulate mail.

Mr. Rogers is an Englishman. In his country, "Esq." signifies rank. In the United States, it means attorney-at-law and applies to either gender.

I was not aware that "Esq." applied to women as well as men. I was wrong. So sue me.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but I read you faithfully and have never seen a problem like mine printed.

I am a 19-year-old female who, like many other women, is suspected to be gay because I don't wear makeup, worry about a hairdo or fashion like most women do. I like myself the way I am.

Most people think I'm a lesbian because I am not feminine. Some ask, "Do you like men?" Or, "How come you never wear makeup?"

Abby, what am I supposed to say to these people? I am not a lesbian; I am just a woman who prefers to be natural and comfortable, and I am not particularly style-conscious. — BUGGED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR BUGGED: You answered that question very well: "I like myself the way I am." You do not have to disclose your sexual orientation.

because Greg, my youngest grandson, is getting married to a local girl from a very nice family and I thought maybe there would be some good information for both sides of the family. I was right. This will answer a lot of questions about wedding etiquette. I promise you it will be read by all concerned and I'm sure they will be just as pleased with it as I. I recommend it for all future brides, grooms and their families.

If you want to publish this, you have my permission, and you may use my name. I've been a Dear Abby reader most of my adult life. — MRS. LORENA M. BLACKWELL, HANFORD, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. BLACKWELL: Thanks for the kind words about my wedding booklet. I am presently in the process of updating and expanding it. With so many more blended families, times (and some of the rules) have changed.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

DEAR ABBY: I sent away for your booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," and it arrived today. I started to read it and didn't put it down until I finished the last word, believe me.

I am being very honest when I say I learned a lot from it and I'll soon be 65 years old. I've been married twice. Both my husbands are deceased and I'm still looking!

I sent for your booklet on weddings

Houston-Ferris Vows Spoken

The wedding ceremony of Sarah Michele Ferris and William Joseph Houston took place Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in St. Mark's Episcopal Church. The ceremony was conducted by the Revs. Fred I.E. Ferris, father of the bride, and Ernest R.M. Parker.

Parents of the couple are the Rev. and Mrs. Ferris of Roxboro, and Mr. and Mrs. George Dustin Houston of Chesapeake, Ohio.

Elizabeth Anne Ferris of Route 2, Timberlake, was honor attendant for her sister and the matron of honor was Amanda Clayton Headley of Roxboro. Bridesmaids included Barbara Allen of Raleigh, Kimberly McRoy and Sharon Richardson, both of Greenville, and Kathryn Moore of Atlanta, Ga.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included William Cates of Apex, cousin of the bride, Harold Finley, John Henson and David Pike, all of Chesapeake, and Mark Lawson of Middleton, Ohio.

Organist Frances Wright and vocalist Douglas Newell presented wedding music.

The bride is a graduate of Pitt Community School of Nursing in Greenville and is employed by Wilson Memorial Hospital in Wilson. The bridegroom attended Marshall University in Huntington, W. Va., and is employed by Davidson and Jones Corp Hotel Division in Raleigh.

The bride wore a wedding gown of satin, seed pearls and embroidered trim with a basque waistline, fitted bodice with a V-neckline front and back. The long tapered sleeves ended in points at the wrist. The full skirt fell into a full court train with a hemline of silk embroidered trim. Her fingertip veil of pearl studded silk illusion was attached to a tiara of silk flowers and seed pearls. The bride carried a cascade of calla lilies, baby's breath and stephanotis with ivy and fern.

All the attendants wore floor-length gowns of apricot silk taffeta styled with V-necklines and a full skirt with a flounce in the back with self-fabric roses. The honor attendants carried cascade bouquets and the bridesmaids carried nosegays of summer flowers.

A reception was held at the home of the bride.

The couple will live in Wilson after a wedding trip to Key West, Fla.

MRS. SCOTT

Marriage Announced

Nancy Sue Schell, daughter of Thelma June Schell of Jacksonville, Ill., and Ralph Scott, both of Greenville, were married in The Memorial Baptist Church June 21 by the Rev. E.T. Vinson.

A reception was held at the home of Mary Boccaccio. Dinner after the reception was held at Sweet Carolines.

The couple will live in Greenville where he is a member of the East Carolina University faculty. She is employed by the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 5.87 to 2,136.74 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 557 up, 331 down and 505 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 21.88 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 7/8 at 127 1/8; DuPont, up 1/2 at 91 1/8; American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/8 at 26 7/8, and General Electric, up 1/8 at 43 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 33 to 154.10. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .09 at 308.51.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 22.41 to 2,130.87.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 5 on the NYSE, with 966 up, 515 down and 482 unchanged. Big Board volume came to 152.37 million shares, against 264.41 million Monday, when the total was inflated by dividend-related activity in several high-yielding issues.

FACELIFT — The Plaza expansion and renovation project will also include a new exterior façade for the entire facility and the addition of a new mall entrance. Construction is expected to be completed in the fall of 1989.

Plaza Expanding

centers in eastern North Carolina, encompassing over 500,000 square feet of space. The entire project will cover approximately 45 acres.

In addition, he said the expansion should more than double the number of stores, from the current 50 to approximately 110.

"We are excited about re-establishing The Plaza as the dominant shopping mall in eastern North Carolina," Kane said. "The four strong major department stores and an impressive merchandise mix of shops will provide a unique shopping experience for this area."

Kane said the local economic impact of The Plaza expansion will include an increase in sales volume from approximately $35 million in 1987 to an estimated $70 million in 1990. He also said approximately 500 jobs will be provided by the expanded retail facilities, while the actual construction process of the project will also bring new jobs.

Kane said the construction, which has already begun, is expected to be completed by the fall of 1989. He also said the mall will remain open throughout the expansion.

"We hope the customers will bear with us through this period. We'll do our best to make it as convenient to shop during the construction and as safe as possible," he said.

Hakan-Corley & Associates Inc. of Chapel Hill is the architectural firm handling the expansion-renovation project. Other Hakan-Corley projects include the Crabtree Valley Mall in Raleigh, the Dean Smith Center in Chapel Hill, and the Sports Medicine Complex at East Carolina University.

Project financing is through Northwestern Mutual Life and NCNB National Bank.

The Plaza was originally an open-air shopping center developed in the mid-'60s called Pitt Plaza. The center was converted to an enclosed mall by J.M. Kane & Co. in 1984.

Kane said market growth and the center's success has shown the need to expand in order to serve the needs of The Plaza's regional customer base.

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter said he is extremely excited about the project.

"For the entrepreneurs to have the faith to make these investments, I think it says much for us all," he said.

Phil Dixon of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce said The Plaza expansion is another example of the metamorphosis of Greenville and Pitt County, and a further indication of the community becoming what many people would describe as the "capital city" of eastern North Carolina.

"I was expecting to be impressed, but I was really wowed this morning to see what an incredible complex this is," Dixon said.

Prosecutors Upheld

"The independent counsel statute provides a workable solution to a difficult problem. We are gratified that the Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of that statute."

The chief justice acknowledged that the law limits presidential power to investigate and prosecute some alleged crimes.

But he said there are adequate safeguards to protect against abuses.

For example, Rehnquist said, the law permits the attorney general to decide when a special prosecutor is warranted and allows the attorney general to fire a special prosecutor for "good cause."

"Notwithstanding the fact that the counsel is to some degree 'independent' and free from executive supervision to a greater extent than other federal prosecutors, in our view ... the act gives the executive branch sufficient control over the independent counsel to ensure that the president is able to perform his constitutionally assigned duties," Rehnquist said.

The chief justice read parts of his 38-page opinion from the bench, speaking for five minutes.

Underscoring the importance of the case, Justice Antonin Scalia read a portion of his lone dissent for nine minutes.

Scalia said the balance of powers and the separation of powers are what make the U.S. Constitution a unique and enduring document.

"In dictatorships of the modern world, bills of rights are a dime a dozen," he said.

The decision was the last to be handed down by the high court on its last day of the 1987-88 term.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, the newest member of the court and one of three justices appointed by President Reagan, did not take part in the independent prosecutor decision. Kennedy disqualified himself without giving an explanation.

The court overturned a 2-1 federal appeals court ruling last Jan. 22 that declared the Watergate-era special prosecutor law unconstitutional.

Congress passed the law after the scandal that led to President Nixon's resignation to provide an independent mechanism for investigating alleged high-level government wrongdoing.

Opponents and supporters of the law, a key portion of the Ethics in Government Act, cited the Watergate case to buttress their position.

The law's advocates said it was essential to assure the nation that crimes in high places would not be covered up.

But opponents pointed out that Nixon was forced out of office because of public opinion and the threat of impeachment, without any need for an independent investigation.

The law empowers a special federal court to appoint independent counsels, or special prosecutors, at the request of the attorney general. The attorney general first conducts a preliminary probe, generally lasting up to 90 days, to determine whether charges against a government official warrant appointment of the outside counsel.

Obituaries

Abernathy

A funeral for Mr. Charles C. Abernathy, 86, 1719 Beaumont Drive, will be conducted Thursday at 11 a.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Home Chapel by the Rev. L.P. Houston Jr. Entombment will be in the Pinewood Mausoleum.

Up-Front Talk About Above-Ground Entombment.

Although it is a common practice in many areas of the country, above-ground entombment is new to this area. We want you to learn about our mausoleum services so that we may better serve you when the time comes.

Cost Crypt entombment in a mausoleum has often been thought of as only for the rich; not so. In fact, it is comparable to ground burial.

Facility Pinewood Mausoleum is constructed of solid granite and Italian marble and was built by one of the most respected mausoleum builders in America.

Permanence and Upkeep has been our primary consideration from the beginning—and it's part of the reason we spent three years planning this building. The building is built to last through the ages and the staff is dedicated to the excellent upkeep that has been our hallmark throughout Pinewood Memorial Park.

Connors Falls At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The fight finally went out of the toughest fighter of them all. Jimmy Connors, the street-wise veteran of Wimbledon, ran out of comebacks Tuesday against a blonde-haired West German with a rocket serve and nerves of steel.

He wasn't named Boris Becker. Patrick Kuhnen, unseeded and unsuccessful at any previous major tournament, upset the 35-year-old American on Court No. 2 in a match that lasted 4½ hours but spanned almost a day.

"He's the biggest fighter of them all, he never gives up," Kuhnen said after his 5-7, 7-6, 6-7, 6-3 fourth-round victory that was interrupted by rain on Monday. It finished Tuesday evening in gloom and, for the fifth-seeded Connors, despair.

"When I had him there, I had to finish it," the West German, who won 14 of the last 15 points, said. "I played perfect tennis for the last three games." Connors, a two-time Wimbledon titlist whose comebacks have become a part of the tournament's lore, for once didn't make it. He said he didn't know if he'd be back to try again.

"I don't know. If I'm here, I'm here," Connors said. "I'm not making any decisions."

Kuhnen, a 22-year-old right-hander from the same part of West Germany as Becker but so far without a single Grand Prix tournament title to his name, had little time to take in his greatest victory to date.

He was in action again today in the quarterfinals against Stefan Edberg, the No. 3 seed from Sweden. They opened the program on Court No. 1, followed by Ivan Lendl's meeting with Tim Mayotte, the last American left in the men's event.

The Centre Court schedule began with Mats Wilander pursuing his bid for the third leg of the Grand Slam against Miloslav Mecir. Then came the eagerly awaited showdown between the men who have dominated Wimbledon for the past three years, Becker and defending champion Pat Cash.

Martina Navratilova, one match behind in the women's program because of rain delays, faced unseeded Roz Fairbank in the quarterfinals.

The winner meets Chris Evert on Thursday, the day of the women's semifinals when Steffi Graf, also on the third leg of a Grand Slam bid after winning the Australian and French titles, takes on Pam Shriver.

Navratilova, the defending champion bidding for a record ninth women's singles crown at Wimbledon, quickly got out of trouble Tuesday when her match against Larissa Savchenko resumed.

The 31-year-old American, who trailed 4-2 in the first set when play was halted Monday because of rain and poor light, lost only two more games as she triumphed 6-4, 6-2.

"I'm on a mission against all Russians," said Navratilova, a Czechoslovak defector who was beaten at the French Open by another Soviet player, Natalia Zvereva.

Evert, playing in her 17th Wimbledon, had to negotiate a couple of tough three-sets on the way to the last eight. But once she got there, her big-match expertise pulled her through against Helena Sukova 6-3, 7-6.

Evert said her old rivalry with Navratilova — they've played 77 matches — still fired her up.

"It will come down to a few basic things," said Evert, who won the last of her three Wimbledon titles in 1981.

Graf, who has dropped just 14 games in five matches, was on and off court in less than an hour as she demolished France's Pascale Paradis 6-3, 6-1.

The West German, whose weakest surface was thought to be grass, has been almost as dominant through five matches here as she was in the French Open on clay.

Shriver, who has gotten stronger with every match since hanging on by a thread in her opener, said she could not play percentage tennis against a player like Graf.

After beating Zina Garrison 6-4, 6-4, Shriver, who has battled against illness, injury and poor form to reach the semifinals, said: "I feel good that I've just persevered. Now I've got to go for my shots ... to gamble a lot more."

Connors, who rallied to beat Derrick Rostagno in a five-setter in the third round, lost the third set against Kuhnen when the match resumed at 6-6 after the players had split the first two.

Connors saved a match point in the fourth set, squared the match and looked to be on his way to another come-from-behind victory.

But this time, he failed to capitalize on his chances, blowing two break points in the second gam of the final set.

It was on the same court and in the same round that Kevin Curren blasted Connors with 33 aces in 1983 and sent him tumbling out of the tournament.

Then Connors was defending champion and complained bitterly about the court. That hadn't changed.

"I don't mind going out there if I have a chance to hit the ball," he said. "One hit me in the face, one bounced over my head and one rolled along the court. All you want is a little consistency. If I knew they were all going to roll, it would be OK."

Becker, who won the men's title in 1985 and 1986, had no trouble getting past Paul Annacone 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 in a delayed fourth-round match.

Mayotte, a perennial loser here but never a finalist, finished off Henri Leconte of France 6-4, 7-6, 4-6, 6-2 after the match with the American leading by two sets.

ECU Officials Say No Drug Problem

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer
(This is the second of a two-part series examining drugs and athletes)

East Carolina University athletic officials show an air of confidence when the subject of drugs and athletes is brought up in conversation about the school.

"We don't have a problem here," ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart said. "On this campus we are very lucky."

Hart went on to say that if indeed there was drug use among the athletes at the university it was only in isolated incidents.

"I can guarantee you that there is no widespread (drug) use here," the athletic director said. "I'm not saying there is not any use here but if it is, it is isolated."

One of the reasons for confidence among the officials at East Carolina is the apparent effectiveness of a drug program instituted nearly two years ago at the university.

The testing under the program is done through urinalysis tests, which are under the supervision of Sports Medicine Director Dr. Jim McCallum.

According to Rod Compton, trainer, the tests are administered to athletes in each sport at the university approximately four times per year.

Under the test, a positive result is not reported back to officials until it has been rechecked as many as four times.

"We think it is an excellent program," Hart said. "Rod and the people with the sports medicine staff have done a great job."

Another part implemented into the program includes an orientation for each athlete upon entering athletic programs at the university.

"The first thing we do is discuss the entire drug program with them (athletes)," Compton said. "We let them know what the coach expects out of them and what the university expects."

The program also consists of a poster program intended to educate athletes on the dangers of drug use, according to Compton.

Clippers Come Out Draft Winners

NEW YORK (AP) — The Los Angeles Clippers, who went from 12 to 17 victories with three first-round draft picks last season, are hoping for a much bigger improvement with three more first-rounders in 1988-89.

"Christmas is definitely here," Coach Gene Shue said after the Clippers picked up Danny Manning of Kansas, Pittsburgh's Charles Smith and Gary Grant of Michigan on Tuesday. "This was a fantastic day." "We feel with Danny Manning that we got the best player in college basketball," Clippers general manager Elgin Baylor said. "We're going to have an exciting and good year, but it's difficult to predict when we will have a winning season. But we're on our way there."

To get three first-rounders again, the Clippers had to give up NBA rebounding champion Michael Cage, who was traded to Seattle as part of a three-team deal.

The SuperSonics gave one of their three first-round picks in 1989 to Philadelphia and the rights to Tuesday's 15th pick, Grant, to the Clippers. In addition to the 1989 first-rounder, the 76ers got the draft rights to Bradley's Jerry Hawkins and gave up the draft rights to Smith.

The Clippers are the only franchise not to make the playoffs for the past 12 seasons. In the first round of the 1987 draft, they took Reggie Williams, Joe Wolf and Ken Norman, but those players had little impact.

Baylor believes the result could be different with this year's trio.

"I can't think of any team in the history of basketball that had a better draft than we had today," he said.

"I'm going to play as hard as I can and do the best I can," Manning said. "I think our future is bright."

Manning and Smith could start at forward alongside center Benoit Benjamin, who has shown flashes of talent but lacks intensity and consistency.

"If we can motivate Benoit and get him going ..." Smith said, not finishing the thought. "Danny and Gary are good players. It will be a tough adjustment because there will be three rookies instead of two. The whole scenario looks pretty good. There won't be so much pressure because we're so young."

"I was shocked," Grant said of the trade. "I'm glad it happened as soon as I got picked so when I leave here I know where I'm going."

It was the second straight year on draft day. Last season, the Sonics swapped the rights to Scottie Pippen for Olden Polynice.

Other first-round picks besides Manning, Smith, Hawkins and Grant were 7-4 center Rik Smits of Marist,

Hornets Defend Their Picks

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The experts said they needed a big man, but the Charlotte Hornets drafted mid-sized and player personnel director Gene Littles was ready to stand by the decision.

Instead of taking 6-foot-11 Rony Seikaly of Syracuse, the Hornets focused on their backcourt and chose 20-year-old Rex Chapman of Kentucky, who gave up his final two years of eligibility with the Wildcats to enter the draft.

"Going into the course of the draft, we wanted a quality kid that we felt the fans would be excited about," Littles told reporters after the Hornets completed their first draft prior to their inaugural season. "Chapman was our guy going into the draft. It had nothing to do with big or little. Our needs and what we thought was good for this franchise is why we took Rex Chapman."

Last week's expansion draft netted the Hornets two guards in Dell Curry of the Cleveland Cavaliers and Kelly Tripucka of the Utah Jazz, the latter acquired in a trade for one of the Charlotte picks.

Those selections, along with Tyrone Bogues of the Washington Bullets, were expected to solve the immediate woes in the backcourt. The college draft was expected to emphasize the big man, although the Hornets did get 6-11 Dave Hoppen from Golden State.

Littles had an explanation for that, too, based on previous experience.

"We weren't at all for taking a guy because he was big and then the fans would be disappointed and boo the kid," Littles said. "That happened to Dave Corzine in Chicago, happened to Danny Schayes in Salt Lake City."

Schayes drew the wrath of the fans in Utah because they felt he hadn't lived up to expectations.

"You've got to be careful taking a kid because he's big," Littles said. "You destroy his confidence, the fans hate him and the fans hate us."

Wayne County Hands Pitt County 8-5 Loss

GOLDSBORO — Dexter Evans went 4-4 and drove in three runs to lead Wayne County to a 8-5 win over Pitt County in American Legion baseball action Tuesday.

Evans drove in two runs during a three-run seventh that helped Wayne County holed off a Pitt County rally.

Pitt County had scored three runs in the sixth, courtesy of a three-run homer by Tim Moore, to come within 5-4, but Wayne County countered with three runs in the seventh.

Moore's shot scored Franz Holscher, who had walked, and Ty Little, who had singled.

Evans drove in Howard Whitfield and Michael Odom. Wayne County's other run of the inning scored off an error.

Pitt County's only lead came in the second when Little singled, went to second on a wild pitch and scored off a single by Jay Surlles.

Wayne County came back with four runs in the bottom of the third for a 4-1 lead.

Little, Surlles and Moore had two hits each to lead Pitt County, which falls to 7-7. Pitt County returns to action at home against Kinston.

McKeel, Jones Pace Snow Hill To Win

SNOW HILL — Walt McKeel and Anthony Jones had three hits and one home run apiece to lead Snow Hill past Wilson County, 15-5, in an American Legion baseball game Tuesday.

Snow Hill scored five runs in the first to take the early lead. T.J. Johnson opened with a single, followed by base hits by George Burnette and Tommy Eason to load the bases. Two outs later, McKeel singled in two runs and Jones followed with his homer to score the other three runs to make it 5-1.

Wilson narrowed the gap to 5-3 with a two-run third but Snow Hill scored two runs in the fourth and two more in the fifth to break the game open.

In the fourth, Mike Vandiford singled and went to second on a sacrifice by Johnson. Burnette singled in Vandiford and went to second on the throw. Eason then reached off an error that allowed Burnette to score.

McKeel added a solo-home run in the seventh. Snow Hill, which moves to 7-8, also got two hits from Vandiford, Burnette, Eason and Shay Beaman. Snow Hill plays Edenton tonight.

Charges Dropped Against USC's Bethea

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Solicitor James Anders dismissed drug charges against South Carolina wide receiver Ryan Bethea on Tuesday after an informant denied making the telephone tip that police said led to the athlete's arrest.

Anders also said the arresting officer failed "pertinent" parts of a lie detector test and has been suspended without pay pending an investigation by the State Law Enforcement Division.

Bethea, who claimed from the start he was set up, said he was relieved by Anders' surprising decision, which came more than five months after Bethea was charged.

South Carolina coach Joe Morrison, who suspended Bethea after his arrest, said in a statement released by the school that he was pleased with the decision but did not comment on Bethea's playing status.

Anders told Circuit Judge Ralph King Anderson he was dropping the charges because of questions about the informant, whom police said provided the tip that led them to a search Bethea's car after he left the Roost, the athletic dormitory.

Bethea, 21, of Columbia, was charged Feb. 4 with possession with intent to distribute cocaine and possession of marijuana. Bethea was indicted on April 15.

Bethea could have been sentenced to 15 years in prison on the cocaine charge and 30 days on the marijuana charge, for which he also could have been fined $200.

Flanked by his attorneys, Edward "Punky" Holler and I.S. Leevy Johnson, outside the courthouse, Bethea reiterated that he was set up.

"Like I've said from the beginning, I was set up," he said outside the Richland County Judicial Center. "I had no idea where the drugs came from."

Anders said there was "no evidence the drugs were planted," but he said given the tainted nature of the case he decided to dismiss the charges.

Cayton Angry Over Lawsuit

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cayton, who helped Mike Tyson get to the top of the boxing world, said he was appalled at a lawsuit filed against him by the unbeaten world heavyweight champion.

"I am disappointed and outraged," Cayton said during a news conference Tuesday. "I never thought Mike would file a lawsuit against me."

The suit was filed in New York State Supreme Court on Monday, a few hours before Tyson knocked out Michael Spinks in the first round of a scheduled 12-round title defense at Atlantic City, N.J.

In the suit, Tyson said he never would have signed a contract allowing Cayton to take over his affairs had he known his late manager, Jimmy Jacobs, was dying.

Cayton, who now manages Tyson, said that he was served with the lawsuit just minutes before the champion's bout against Spinks.

The suit seeks to dissolve Tyson's contract with Cayton, who currently gets one-third of all of Tyson's boxing earnings.

In the suit, Tyson contends that Cayton knew Jacobs was dying before the contracts were signed on Feb. 12. Tyson said he was never told of Jacobs' illness or that Cayton would take over in the event of Jacobs' death.

Tyson contends that if he had known all this, he "would not have signed the document."

"Mike Tyson knew all along that Jim Jacobs and I were his co-managers," Cayton said.

The suit says that Tyson and Jacobs entered into a personal services contract, but the contract didn't cover a specific term. It did provide that Tyson would receive two-thirds and Jacobs one-third of all money earned by Tyson "in direct relation to boxing."

On the same date, the suit said, Tyson signed another document, with no term provided, binding the champion and Cayton from the date Jacobs died to the expiration of the contract between Tyson and Jacobs.

Hornets

Vice president and general manager Carl Scheer said the move to select Chapman was based on the need to establish a foundation for the new team.

"We felt we put the first stone in building this franchise with a player that will be with us a long time," Scheer said. "That's the first piece of a quality player, and we didn't compromise that."

So the search will now focus on a big man, but not just any big man, Littles said.

"If there's a free agent that we think we have a chance to get that can give us something, not just because he's 6-11, (they will choose him)," Littles said. "We're going to be looking at all avenues. We hope to get a quality big guy. It could be two years down the road in the draft ... when we get a shot at one of the best big guys in college basketball."

In the second round, Charlotte chose Tom Tolbert of Arizona, a 6-8, 242-pounder who helped lead the Wildcats to the NCAA Final Four this past season. Charlotte's third selection was Jeff Moore of Auburn, a 6-9, 230-pound player who was injured for part of last season and who Hornets' officials say will have to work his way back into shape in the fall camp.

Chapman's stock was considered questionable after his lackluster showing at the U.S. Olympic men's basketball tryouts. Yet, Scheer said the past three weeks are no gauge of the contribution he thinks Chapman can make to the Hornets.

Scheer also said while there was one big man available when his pick arrived, Chapman was an opportunity they couldn't pass up.

Drugs

"We put up different posters each month (at the various athletic facilities on campus)," Compton said. "The posters cover different issues of drug problems ranging from alcohol abuse to the use of steroids."

In athletic programs at other universities across the nation, drug use seems to be becoming slightly more of a problem than it was just last year, according to test results released in May by the NCAA.

Fall results of drug testing administered by the NCAA indicated that 1.3 percent (20 out of 1,589) of the athletes tested lost their eligibility because of testing positive for drug use.

That mark was slightly higher than total figures from the 1986-87 academic year when only one percent (34 of 3,360) of the student-athletes tested nationally were declared ineligible because of drug use.

Of the 20 athletes who lost their eligibility in the fall, seven of those tested positive for anabolic steroids, two for diuretics and 11 for street drugs such as marijuana and cocaine.

During the 1986-87 testing period, 26 of the 34 declared ineligible were found to have tested positive for anabolic steroids, six for cocaine use and the other two for various psychomotor stimulants.

Positive tests, if indeed there have been any, at East Carolina were not made available by either Compton or Hart.

"I wouldn't be able to release any of our results," Compton said. "Something like that is confidential and is discussed only with the athlete and the coaches of the sport involved."

"It (test results) is of a confidential nature," Hart said. "It certainly is not that we're trying to keep anything secret."

"Our program is doing exactly what it was intended to do and it is working very, very well," Hart said. "It was intended to be an education and deterrent program. It's very structured and we up to now — knock on wood — we haven't had a problem."

Gardner Paces Red Sox

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

In his first start of the year and second of his major-league career, Boston's Wes Gardner decided to think like a reliever.

Gardner, pressed into the rotation when Jeff Sellers suffered a broken hand, allowed just three hits in seven innings Tuesday night as the Red Sox defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-1.

"I wanted to go as hard as I could for as long as I could," said Gardner, 2-1. "I developed a little knot in my back about the fifth inning, but I feel really good."

The Indians helped Gardner relax early, committing two errors in the second inning that led to five unearned runs.

Gardner struck out four and walked two. Lee Smith pitched the last innings as the Red Sox won their fourth straight and eighth in 10 games.

Tigers 6, Yankees 1
Frank Tanana allowed five hits in 8 1-3 innings and Pat Sheridan drove in four runs as Detroit extended its winning streak over New York to five games.

Tanana, 10-4, allowed only three hits after the second inning. He struck out six and walked two before being relieved with one out and runners on first and second in the ninth. Mike Henneman closed.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 0
Jay Tibbs and Mark Thurmond combined on a seven-hitter and Fred Lynn and Eddie Murray drove in three runs each as Baltimore defeated Toronto in a game marked by several disputes.

White Sox 4, Royals 3
Dan Pasqua homered twice and Greg Walker hit a towering solo shot with two outs in the eighth inning to back the four-hit pitching of Bill Long and Bobby Thigpen.

Walker's fourth home run carried deep into the right-field water display and came off reliever Gene Garber, 0-4. Pasqua hit solo homers in the fourth and sixth innings for Chicago, his second two-homer game of the year and the fourth of his career.

Rangers 6, Mariners 0
Jose Guzman pitched a four-hitter for his first major-league shutout and Larry Parrish and Steve Buechele hit solo home runs as Texas snapped a three-game losing streak.

Guzman, 7-6, in his 80th career start, struck out six and walked three for his fifth complete game of the season.

Twins 8, Angels 2
Bert Blyleven pitched an eight-hitter for his fourth consecutive victory and was backed by a 15-hit attack as Minnesota moved to within four games of first-place Oakland in the AL West.

Brewers 4, Athletics 1
Rob Deer broke up a scoreless tie with a two-out, two-run homer in the seventh inning and Don August pitched a four-hitter as Milwaukee defeated Oakland for the first time in five games this season.

Jeffrey Leonard singled with two outs in the seventh and Deer, breaking an 0-for-12 slump, lined a 1-1 pitch from Storm Davis well into the left-field seats for his 12th homer.

Strawberry Wins One For Family

By The Associated Press

Darryl Strawberry doesn't bother with "Family Ties." On important days for his family, he wins.

On the day that his second child was born, Strawberry hit a two-run homer to lead the New York Mets to a 5-2 victory Tuesday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Last Wednesday, Strawberry hit two homers to lead the Mets past the St. Louis Cardinals on the third birthday of his son Darryl Jr.

"It was a long day, but it was worth it," Strawberry said. "The doctor who delivered the baby said I would hit a home run, and he was right."

Strawberry flew to New York on Monday night after his wife, Lisa, went into labor. On Tuesday, she gave birth to a daughter, Diamond Nicole. He then went back to Pittsburgh.

Sid Fernandez, 4-6, beat Pittsburgh for the eighth consecutive time. Fernandez, who had lost five of his previous seven decisions, allowed three hits in eight innings, struck out four and walked five. Roger McDowell got the last three outs for his eighth save.

Brian Fisher, 4-6, lost his sixth straight decision since May 21.

Astros 4, Dodgers 3
Bob Knepper, 8-1, allowed two hits in 8 1-3 innings and equalled his 1987 victory total as Houston ended the Dodgers' four-game winning streak. He struck out four and walked five.

Giants 13, Braves 7
Candy Maldonado had four hits, scored three runs and drove in two as

San Francisco got 19 hits for the second straight night.

Will Clark had two hits, drove in three runs and scored twice. Mike Aldrete, Kevin Mitchell and Robbie Thompson drove in two runs each.

Cardinals 5, Expos 4
Tom Brunansky's ninth-inning grounder bounced through the legs of third baseman Tim Wallach and allowed the winning run to score.

With St. Louis trailing 4-3, Vince Coleman singled off Joe Hesketh, 1-1, to open the ninth, but was thrown out by right fielder Hubie Brooks as he tried for a double. Ozzie Smith and Willie McGee singled and Tim Burke relieved.

Reds 4, Padres 3
Danny Jackson, 8-4, pitched a six-hitter and Lance McCullers walked home the winning run in the ninth as Cincinnati ended its six-game losing streak.

Eric Davis singled off Mark Grant, 1-6, to open the ninth and went to third on Leon Durham's single. Dave Concepcion was intentionally walked and, out after later, Tracy Jones walked on a 3-2 pitch to force in the winning run.

Cubs 6, Phillies 4
Shawon Dunston hit a two-run, two-out single off Steve Bedrosian, 1-3, to cap a four-run eighth inning as Chicago won its fourth straight and 10th in its last 13 games.

Henderson Is Upset About Injury Talk

NEW YORK (AP) — Rickey Henderson, whose every injury seems to spur controversy, says he can't believe there are people who think he'd rather sit than play.

"I get so bored and frustrated on the bench," the New York Yankees' left fielder complained. "Sometimes, I even get angry. People have got to understand I'm only happy when I'm out there playing."

With a strained left hamstring, a sprained right ankle, and a banged-up toe on his right foot, Henderson has already missed 15 of the Yankees' first 73 games this season. Last year, with a torn right hamstring, he played in just 95, his fewest number of games since his rookie year in 1979.

Monday night, Henderson started in left and batted leadoff. In the first game of a three-game set against the first-place Detroit Tigers, his first start in five games and his first start under new-old manager Lou Pinella, who didn't always see eye-to-eye with his all-star run producer last year.

The two had a closed-door meeting in the manager's office Friday — at Pinella's request the day after he replaced Billy Martin. "A nice talk" was the way both of them described it.

"I never had anything against Lou," Henderson said. "He was just upset with me and I didn't know why. Now I think I know why and I understand. There won't be any more problems between us."

Said Pinella, "There's only one Rickey Henderson, and we really need him."

Against the Cleveland Indians on Sunday, when Pinella needed a pinch runner in the ninth inning of a tie game, he looked down his bench only once before Henderson volunteered.

"I'm ready. Skip, let's roll," Henderson told Pinella. Henderson ended up scoring the winning run in a 4-3 victory.

"It was a great time to come back," the 29-year-old, seven-time all-star said. "I was in a crucial situation quickly and I helped the team win a game."

"I won't say this team can't win without me, but I will say that I make it a lot easier for them."

NBA Draft

by Indiana; 6-8 forward Chris Morris of Auburn, by New Jersey; 6-5 guard Mitch Richmond of Kansas State, by Golden State; 6-9 forward Tim Perry of Temple, by Phoenix, and 6-5 guard Rex Chapman of Kentucky, by Charlotte.

Also, 6-11 center Rony Seikaly of Syracuse, by Miami; 6-7 guard Willie Anderson of Georgia, by San Antonio; 7-foot center Will Perdue of Vanderbilt, by Chicago; 6-9 forward Harvey Grant of Oklahoma, by Washington, and 6-5 guard Jeff Grayer of Iowa State, by Milwaukee.

Also, 6-6 forward Dan Majerle of Central Michigan, by Phoenix; 6-7 forward Derrick Chievous of Missouri, by Houston; 6-11 center Eric Leckner of Wyoming, by Utah; 6-8 guard Ricky Berry of San Jose State, by Sacramento, and 6-3 guard Rod Strickland of DePaul, by New York.

Also, 6-3 guard Kevin Edwards, by Miami; 6-9 forward Mark Bryant of Seton Hall, by Portland; 6-9 forward Randolph Keys of Southern Mississippi, by Cleveland; 6-6 forward Jerome Lane of Pittsburgh, by Denver; 6-6 guard Brian Shaw of Cal-Santa Barbara, by Boston; and 6-foot guard David Rivers of Notre Dame, by the Los Angeles Lakers.

Charlotte and Miami, expansion teams which will debut in the NBA in the fall, were making their first college draft picks. Neither went after big men in the expansion draft last week, so they were expected to go for big men on Tuesday.

But the Charlotte Hornets pulled one of the surprises of the day by taking Chapman. He will join two other shooting guards that Charlotte considers its top players, Dell Curry and Kelly Tripucka, although Tripucka played small forward for most of his career.

"I never even spoke to anyone from Charlotte," a surprised Chapman said.

Seikaly was pleased to be going to Miami.

"In order for me to reach my potential, I need a lot of playing time," he said. "With the situation in Miami, I'm going to reach my potential that much faster."

Chicago took Perdue despite acquiring another 7-foot center, Bill Cartwright, in a trade with the New York Knicks on Monday. The Knicks got Charles Oakley in exchange for Cartwright and a swap of first-round draft positions.

"The good thing about going to Chicago is that I'll have Cartwright to learn from," Perdue said.

By taking Perdue, Chicago passed up a chance to unite forward Horace Grant, expected to start in place of Oakley, with his twin brother Harvey, who was taken by the Bulls with the pick immediately after Perdue.

"When Chicago and New York made the deal, I thought Chicago would try to get me and reunite me with my brother, but it didn't work out," Harvey Grant said. "I'm happy to get drafted. It's a business and you have to treat it as a business."

Sacramento traded guard Reggie Theus to Atlanta for guard Randy Wittman on Monday. In that deal, the Kings also acquired the Hawks' 18th pick in the first round. The Kings used it to select Berry, who has forward size and guard skills.

Canadians Ban Ads On Tobacco

OTTAWA (AP) — Parliament has banned tobacco advertising and forbidden smoking in federally regulated workplaces and transportation.

The Senate on Tuesday passed two bills that the tobacco industry had fought for more than a year. The bills, approved May 30 by the House of Commons, were signed Tuesday by Governor General Jeanne Sauve.

One bill calls for smoke-free workplaces in companies regulated by the federal government. That includes banks, telecommunications firms and Crown corporations.

The measure also guarantees smoke-free traveling on planes, ships, trains and buses that offer passenger service and are federally regulated.

The second bill, bans tobacco ads on television, radio, newspapers, billboards and magazines.

The tobacco industry said the prohibition on ads amounted to an infringement on the right of freedom of speech. The ad ban takes effect next Jan. 1, but some signs will be permitted until 1993.

Imported broadcasts and publications may still carry tobacco ads. About two-thirds of the periodicals distributed in Canada come from the United States.

Another section of the bill outlaws free samples of tobacco. All tobacco products will have to carry a health warning approved by the federal government.

Companies violating the strict provisions may be fined up to $300,000.

Tobacco is a $4.8 billion industry in Canada and employs 60,000 people. One quarter of the Canadian population smokes. The habit is blamed for contributing to 35,000 deaths a year in Canada.

Towns To 'Walk The Line' To Settle Border

ASHFORD, Conn. (AP) — Instead of spending thousands of dollars for a surveyor to settle a longstanding border dispute, the towns of Ashford and Willington plan to resort to an old New England tradition: walking the line.

After local officials balked at the $40,000 cost for a survey, an arbitration panel suggested they resort to the method used for centuries by New England farmers to re-establish property lines each spring after winter weather demolished sections of the stone fences dividing their fields.

The three selectmen from each town tentatively plan to walk about 20 acres of disputed land on July 6 and decide among themselves where the border should be, Ashford First Selectwoman Paula Faulkner said Tuesday.

"What will happen when we walk the line, I'm not sure," Faulkner said.

Poet Robert Frost immortalized the annual ritual among farmers in his poem "Mending Wall." Connecticut statute once required that officials from neighboring towns also walk the line every 10 years to maintain boundaries, said Albert Fitzback, a surveyor and member of the court-appointed, three-member arbitration panel.

Ashford, which measures 40 square miles, was incorporated in 1714 and has 3,400 residents. Willington, a town of 35 square miles with 5,000 residents, was incorporated 13 years later. Dairy farming is the principal industry in the northeastern Connecticut towns.

At issue is an 8-mile-long, 1-mile-wide strip that the General Assembly took from Ashford when Willington was incorporated.

Ashford authorities contend the border originally was drawn as a straight line, but Willington officials have relied on markers placed in 1916 that create a slight jog in the line.

The crooked line was used for years in countless deeds and other documents, apparently without argument from either town.

But in 1985, Ashford ordered an aerial survey of the town as part of a property revaluation and reverted to the straight-line border, thereby claiming the 20-acre wedge as its own. The new line straddles about a dozen properties and some residents are receiving tax bills from both towns.

The towns went to court last year and a Superior Court judge appointed the arbitration panel to settle the dispute.

The panel spend months poring over land records, including a 1726 map stored in Willington's vault. The map appeared to show a straight line in the disputed area and the panel eventually concluded that "the line has always been and should remain a straight line."

The panel suggested the towns pay for a survey to set the border, but local officials didn't want to spend $40,000 for it and asked for another way, Faulkner said.

Douglas Vonasek, who is now paying taxes to both towns on his 18 acres of land, said he doesn't care which town his property ends up in, as long as it's only in one of them.

"I'd like to see this thing settled once and for all," said Vonasek, who figures the dispute is costing him about $100 a year in extra taxes.

Missouri Truly Is A Tribute To Harry Truman

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. — Almost everywhere you go in this state — be it a school, hospital or park — there are tributes to Harry S. Truman, the 33rd president of the United States.

There are two Truman hospitals here, one named after his wife, Bess, and a high school named for both of them. Not surprisingly, the main street is named Truman Road.

In the depot of the local Amtrak station — the Harry S. Truman Station — are photographs from his whistle-stop campaign in 1948 and others showing the thousands who greeted Truman on his return home.

There's even a Harry Truman Law Office Building here, though Truman wasn't a lawyer. In fact, he never went to college.

Born in Lamar, Mo., on May 8, 1884, Truman was a farmer until the age of 32. He worked the land with horse and plow for 13 years in Grandview, Mo., and later opened a haberdashery that failed, ran for public office, served as a county judge, U.S. senator and vice president before assuming the presidency.

He died in 1972 at 88. Bess Truman died 10 years later. She was 97. Both are buried in the courtyard of the Harry S. Truman Library and Museum.

The 19th-Century Victorian house at 219 N. Delaware St., bequeathed to the American people by Bess Truman, had been the Trumans' home since their marriage in 1919. During Truman's years in office, it served as the summer White House.

Daughter Margaret was born in an upstairs bedroom in 1924. In the simple kitchen, linoleum was tacked to the floor by the former president. His hat, coat and umbrella hang on a rack, just as he left them after his last early morning walk. Truman lived there 20 years after leaving the White House.

An iron fence was built around the property after a woman was spotted picking tulips that Bess Truman had planted. The woman told the former first lady she wanted the flowers as a souvenir. Still living next door is Mae Wallace, 93, Bess Truman's sister-in-law.

Guided tours of the Truman house, operated by the National Park Service, are given to groups of eight, four times an hour.

The Jackson County Courthouse in Independence, where Truman served as judge from 1926 to 1934, has been restored to re-create the period. Outside the courthouse is Gilbert Franklin's life-sized statue of Truman dedicated by President Gerald R. Ford.

The Harry S. Truman historic district in Independence also includes a neighborhood of Victorian homes where the president took his daily walks, the church where he married and other buildings associated with the Trumans' lives.

Interest in the Truman years continues to attract scholars to the Harry S. Truman Library and Museum here. Only a small fraction of the archives remains classified, according to director Benedict K. Zobrist, 62.

"The die was cast for the world in which we live today by many decisions Mr. Truman made that continue to be part of our history," he said. "You cannot deal with China, the U.S.S.R., atomic energy, inflation and civil rights without going back to Harry Truman."

Truman's birthplace, a humble frame farmhouse, is now a state park and the Grandview farmhouse is a county park. Harry S. Truman Lake is a huge reservoir in the central part of the state embraced by the 14,000-acre Harry S. Truman State Park.

The 118,000-seat Harry S. Truman Sports Complex in Kansas City is the home of the Royals baseball team and the Chiefs football team.

The new Harry S. Truman State Office Building in Jefferson City, Missouri's capital, houses more than 2,300 employees.

State Archaeologists Rescue Timbers Of Colonial-Era Sloop

By MARK PRICE
The Fayetteville Times

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — At first it seemed nothing more than a collection of rotting timbers.

Two hundred years in the murky waters of the Northeast Cape Fear River took a heavy toll on the ship, which lay split open 18 feet below.

Piece by piece, state archaeologists dragged decaying proof of a long-forgotten maritime disaster to the surface: charred timber, centuries-old ballast, an 18th century rudder and a handful of broken colonial bottles.

By May 13, the last day of the weeklong excavation project, archaeologists were sure they had found what they were looking for — a colonial-era sloop torched by British soldiers in January 1781 after the takeover of Wilmington.

Valued for both its age and association with the American Revolution, the ship is seen as a rare historical find, said Mark Wilde-Ramsing, an archaeologist with the state Underwater Archaeology Unit at Fort Fisher.

"Although the fire caused a lot of damage to the boat, what we have left is pretty well preserved. We even found one piece of planking where you can read the Roman numeral notched in it by the ship builders," Wilde-Ramsing said.

"We certainly didn't find any nameplate, naval arms or ammunition, but there's enough there for us to believe it is one of the ships burned by the British. As the story goes, they burned a sloop and a schooner, both of which had run aground. We don't have any other references to ships burned in this area, so that makes this one a good candidate for one of the two," he said.

The sloop and schooner were part of a small group of vessels being used by colonists to sneak provisions, ammunition and supplies out of the Wilmington area in advance of an expected British takeover, Wilde-Ramsing said.

Unfortunately for the colonials, the British captured both the city and the provision-laden ships, which were headed up the Northeast Cape Fear to Castle Hayne. When the two ships could not be refloated, they were burned.

A 200-year-old letter from the British commander who burned the ships was used for reference in the search.

During the weeklong excavation project, archaeologists and volunteers retrieved a varied collection of structural pieces and artifacts, including a keg lid and four iron plates jokingly referred to as pot lids.

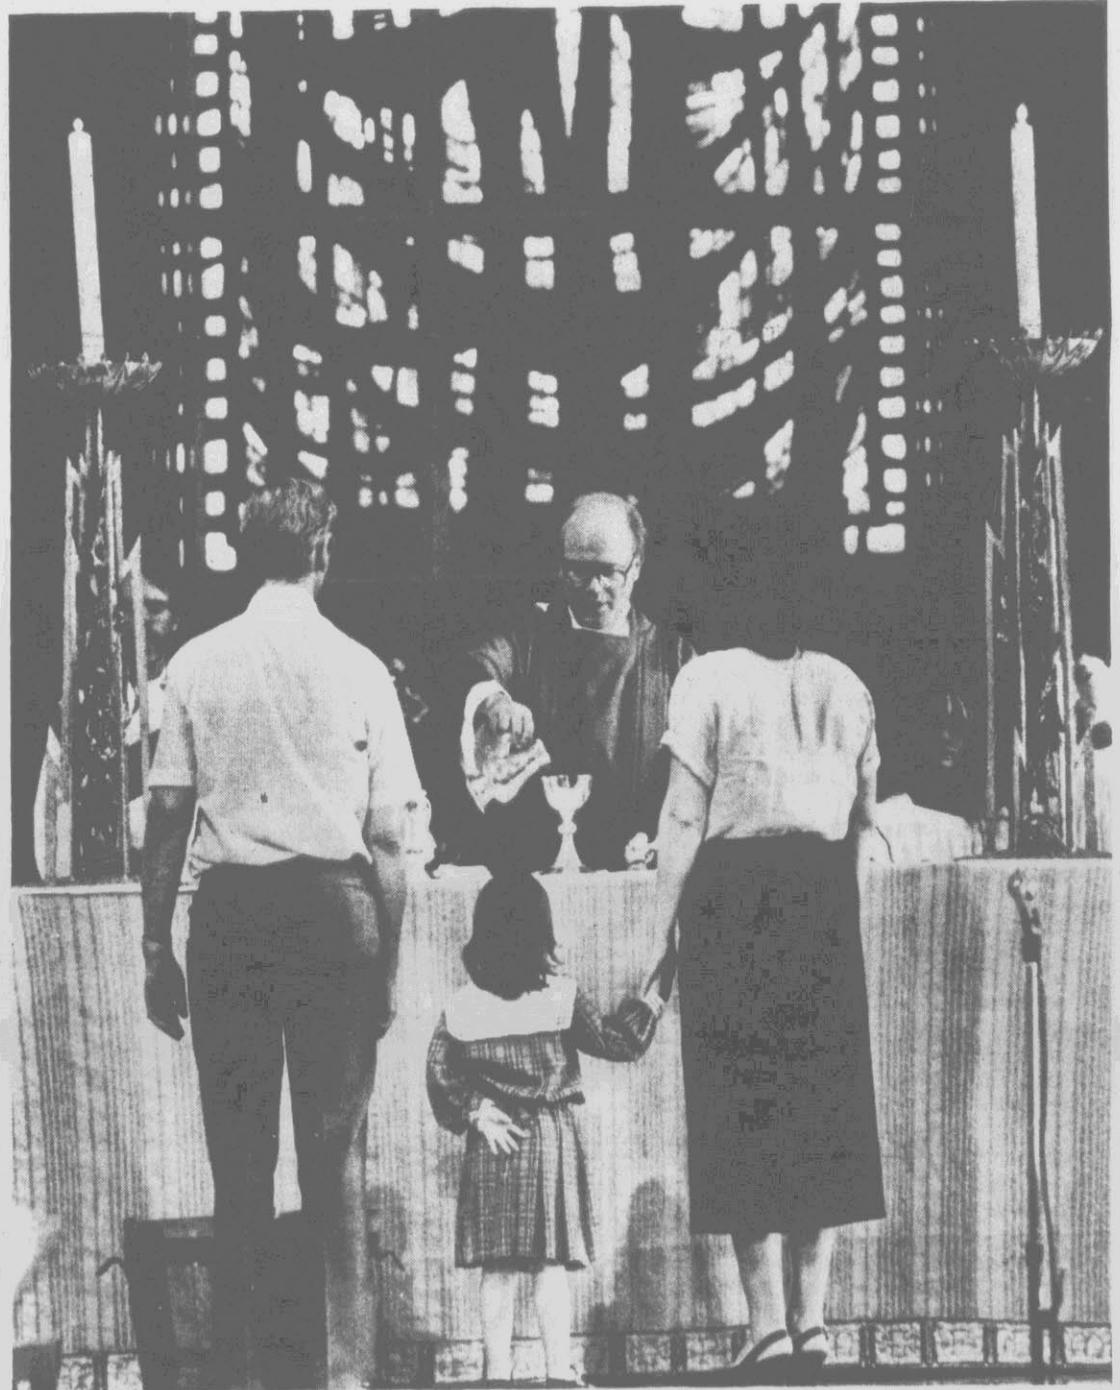

The mysterious 3- by 4-foot iron plates resemble tombstones covered with handles and latches.

"We don't know what they are," Wilde-Ramsing said. Speculation is that they might be some kind of thing to carry or contain something. It might be part of a stove, but that's not the traditional stove for a boat of this type. It would have been brick.

"We found a lot of Army Medical Department dishes. What they were doing in the middle of nowhere like this is anybody's guess," he said.

To retrieve the artifacts in the murky water, the archaeologists had

Baby Boomers Find Religious Roots

By ANN JAPENGA
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Michael Barlow awoke early one Sunday morning in the mid-'60s and decided that he had better things to do than go to church — "like sleep," he said.

From then on, his Sunday mornings were free. "It was almost a classic loss of faith due to sex and rock 'n' roll," he later observed.

But today, at 40, Barlow would sooner turn down a brunch date with his Hollywood cronies than miss Sunday morning church services. A vice president of production at Orion Pictures, Barlow said that he finds church to be "a real tonic."

He is not alone in his turnaround.

Barlow's generation rejected organized religion on such a scale it was "unprecedented in all of American history," said Benton Johnson, professor of sociology at the University of Oregon in Eugene. Now, the baby boomers, people in their late 20s to early 40s, are drifting slowly back.

A study conducted by the Center for Social and Religious Research at the Hartford Seminary in Connecticut showed that regular worship attendance increased by 10 percent in the years 1974 to 1984 among the older set of baby boomers, those born from 1945 to 1955.

While sociologists are still working to explain the trend, a major reason for the reinhabitation of the pews — in this city, at least — is that yuppies are finding that church feels like home.

Barlow's wife, Irene Webb, said: "The church gave us a family, since both of us are far away from our families."

The Rev. Linda Nepstead, associate pastor of Westwood Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles, was one of several church officials who commented on this aspect of the return to church. "We see a lot of people who are looking desperately for community in the big city," she said.

And the Rev. Fred Fenton of St. Augustine by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Santa Monica, Calif., said that people like the Barlows are attracted to his congregation because "a community where you have an opportunity to talk about things that matter is sort of hard to find in Southern California."

Phillip Hammond, a professor of religious studies and sociology at University of California, Santa Barbara, defines a yuppie as someone who is mobile, transient and essentially solo.

Said Hammond, 57: "I imagine this is the generation that is the first to face squarely up to the fact that most of us are alone."

Yet, most young adults harbor memories of a cozier time and some of those memories have to do with church. Mary Trudeau-Mottola, young adults minister at St. Martin of Tours Catholic Church in the Brentwood section of Los Angeles, recalled the "sense of belonging" in her family's parish when she was a child.

Trudeau-Mottola said that many people come to St. Martin of Tours precisely because they do not have access to a friendship circle.

"They come here because they have just moved here and know no one in town, except at their job, if they have a job. Or they have broken up with someone and are hurting."

Indeed, for those who are looking for a one-to-one connection, "a church or synagogue is still the best

ABC Summer Series Uses Mental Hospital As Setting

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In ABC's new summer series "Hothouse," set in a private mental hospital, the inmates don't take control of the asylum, or even the show. The doctors are the ones worth watching.

This is the first new series from executive producer Jay Presson Allen, a screenwriter ("Prince of the City," among many others) and novelist whose only previous network series was the critically acclaimed "Family." Hopes were high when ABC announced she would be doing another. "Hothouse" might just live up to expectations.

"Hothouse" premieres Thursday with a two-hour pilot, then will continue as an hour-long series on Thursdays.

The show is not on ABC's fall schedule, and that may frustrate viewers prone to getting hooked on well-written nighttime soaps, especially in the midst of dull summer reruns.

Don't be put off by a lackluster beginning of the two-hour movie. The writers at first seem to be asking that viewers get interested in the patients of the fictional Garrison Center, a small, private institution outside Boston. The transparent anxieties of an aging wife whose husband no longer seems to need her and a troubled youth whose worst offense is slinging a milkshake at a social worker aren't exactly riveting.

But by the end of the two hours, the doctors, nurses and administrators emerge as interesting, well-rounded characters.

The cast is exceptional and includes such notables as Josef Sommer, Alexis Smith and Michael Learned.

Sommer is Dr. Sam Garrison, the patriarch of the center and a family that includes psychiatrist daughter Issy, short for Isabel, played by Katherine Borowitz, her father's biggest supporter and perhaps closest friend; a bottom-line accountant son, Matt (Tony Soper) — "I see," he tells his father during one of their many money vs. humanity arguments, "you're St. Francis and I'm Ivan Boesky" — and another son, Steve, not seen in the pilot, who also is a psychiatrist but moved to London with his young daughter to get over the death of his wife.

Issy is married to Leonard Schrader (Bob Gunton who played Juan Peron in "Evita" on Broadway), the center's lovable medical doctor. Matt is married to beautiful, young Claudia (Susan Diol), who feels suffocated by her husband's family. In the pilot, we learn she is expecting a baby.

It turns out Sam is not the know-all, be-all of mental health that he would seem. His wife, Lily (Smith), left him after 37 years of marriage, and he is still running guilt trips on her. She returns in the pilot with her wealthy new husband. They buy a country place near the center so she can spend time with her children, especially Issy, who resents her for abandoning Dad.

Among the other doctors are suave Ved Lahari, played by Art Malik ("Jewel in the Crown"), an Indian raised in England who is having an affair with an older doctor, Marie Teller (Learned), a consummate professional and long-time associate of Garrison.

Art Makter (Michael Jeter) spends his time making jokes about his shortness and wants more than anything to write a pop psychology best-seller and "go on Oprah Winfrey." At one point the other doctors sit around the lunch room joking about his progress. "He's writing a chapter on narcissistic self-hatred called 'How Can I Miss Me If I Won't Go Away,'" says one. Adds another, "He told me he's writing one called, 'Is the Woman Sitting Next to you Your Brother? Gender Confusion and Sibling Rivalry.'"

Head nurse Lucy Cox (Maureen Moore) is the no-nonsense toughie who in the pilot runs off a struggling social worker for being a ditz.

"Hothouse" needs to develop more compelling patient stories to become a well-rounded series, the way "L.A. Law" involves viewers both with the attorneys and with their clients' cases. In at least the first two hours of "Hothouse," the doctors are the only ones who seem human enough to need a psychiatrist. Fortunately, they are enough reason to tune in again.

each night in the revival of the Marx Brothers' 1928 musical comedy "Animal Crackers" at the Boston University Theater. (AP Laserphoto)

Young Actor Uses Paint-On Mustache For Groucho Role

By STEFAN FATSI
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — When Frank Ferrante was 10, he saw his first Marx Brothers movie.

At 11, he dressed up as Groucho Marx on Halloween. As a teen-ager, Ferrante pored over old magazine profiles of Groucho and watched the movies over and over, mimicking the comic's wisecracking, nasal voice.

Now the 25-year-old Ferrante paints on a wide black mustache, thickens his already bushy eyebrows and masquerades as Groucho every night in a revival of the Marx Brothers' 1928 musical-comedy, "Animal Crackers" at Boston University Theater.

"I can't deny the fact that I'm attached to the man or the character," Ferrante said. "It's pretty overwhelming at times to think how important his life has become to me."

Ferrante was discovered in 1985 when he staged a one-man show of Groucho jokes, songs and anecdotes as his senior project at the University of Southern California. Arthur Marx, Groucho's son, who had just written a show about his father, reluctantly accepted an invitation to Ferrante's performance. So did Morrie Ryskind, who co-wrote "Animal Crackers" with George S. Kaufman.

"I was a little annoyed he would be doing a show in competition with mine," the 66-year-old Marx said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. "I saw him and he was wonderful. Morrie Ryskind thought he was great, too. So did my sisters, who never liked any imitators of my father."

A year later, Marx hired Ferrante to star in his revamped "Groucho: A Life in Revue," which depicted Groucho as a 15-year-old vaudevillian, movie star in the 1930s, TV quizmaster in the '50s and octogenarian in the '70s. Groucho Marx died at age 86 in 1977.

The show played off-Broadway in New York, where Ferrante won two awards for best debut. It went to London for six months, closing in May 1987, and Ferrante was nominated for comedy performance of the year.

"I'm thinking, there's no way I can be Groucho Marx, but I can come as close as humanly possible," Ferrante said in a dressing room interview. "My edge is that I was able to show him as a human being. No one in the audience knew what he was like so I had to create a credible personality."

Ferrante has read almost everything written about Groucho — from biographies to theater reviews in the Lincoln Center archives — and interviewed his relatives and friends. His ear pressed to the speaker of an old record player as a youngster in Sierra Madre, Calif., he studied Groucho's 1972 Carnegie Hall comeback performance.

"You're able to understand his humor by analyzing his early childhood — the insult humor, the defensive humor, his attitude toward women," he said. "As the years went by I was able to unravel this mystery known as Groucho Marx."

His most bizarre discovery was a 1967 episode of "The Dating Game" featuring Groucho setting up his daughter with one of three bachelors. In it, Ferrante saw Groucho smile.

"You never see Groucho Marx sincerely smile in any of his films or even on his TV show. It's always a kind of sneer."

"I heard him sneeze once," he added. "I practiced his sneeze."

Arthur Marx said Ferrante cares about his father's life and doesn't merely imitate the pat mannerisms — the cigar-chomping, the bow-legged walk, the shifty eyebrows, the one-liners.

"When Frank does it, it doesn't look like an impersonator," he said.

"I don't know any other who has studied my father's life like that. He has just lived it."

Arthur Marx gave Ferrante a pair of glasses worn by Groucho in the movies, hats from his private life and the only remaining snapshot of a print of Groucho in 1923 in the brothers' first musical, "I'll Say She Is."

In "Animal Crackers," Ferrante plays Capt. Jeffrey T. Spaulding, the African explorer, celebrating his triumphant return from an expedition. The setting is a Long Island mansion, where high society is a vehicle for the antics of Groucho, Harpo, Chico and Zeppo.

Like Groucho, Ferrante ad libs freely, goading the audience when a joke flops or a piece of stage business is bungled. The voice seems a little higher, but the movements appear identical.

"The character is great," he said. "One second he's playing mock coy, one second he's aggressive. He's constantly vacillating. It's not as simple as it seems."

The Huntington Theater Company production is only the second revival of "Animal Crackers"; the first was in 1982 in Washington. After closing here July 2, the show goes on to Atlanta. Ferrante hopes Broadway will follow.

Ferrante, who resembles a young Groucho, met the comedian — "my idol, my hero" — at a Los Angeles book-signing in 1976.

Stewart Says He's Retiring

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — At 80, movie great James Stewart figures his days on studio stages are over. The unique personality and acting talent that graced American films for more than half a century will be no more.

"I don't like the way I've grown old," he says with total candor. "I don't like my looks."

"I get these scripts every once in a while, but 90 percent of them are cameos, and I think I've done enough of those."

Stewart fans would argue with this. At his age, he is slow-moving and talks with hesitation. But he's always been that way. His "ah-shucks" manner disguises a perceptive mind and a memory that seems to retain everything of importance in his lifetime.

He hasn't done a major acting job since "Right of Way," an HBO movie in which he starred with Bette Davis four years ago.

However, he remains busy with works of all kinds, including protection of wild animals, a special interest of his wife Gloria. For the 39 years of their marriage they have shared a English country house in the heart of Beverly Hills. Years ago they bought the house next door and removed it for a garden.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY June 30

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't believe everything you hear today. An associate may be confused. Use your charm with others to strengthen friendships.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You may not like a work condition, and it is best to trust this instinct. Work to clarify this. Friends should prove cooperative today. Work to be happy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Turn up the charm and beauty today, dress well. Get your important duties under control and postpone plans for pleasure until your problems are solved.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A clever family tie can help you to solve a problem in an unexpected manner. Great potential exists for cooperation among co-workers today.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Don't succumb to distractions today. Concentrate on one issue; listen to an expert on the subject. Work and shop alone.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Seize the moment to work on some creative affair for which you have much talent now. Have fun with humorous friends in the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Don't make any important agreements while some confusion exists, but do try to work on home affairs. Avoid an irresponsible scheme.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Focus on what you are confident in today, and don't worry about an issue that puzzles you. Steer clear of a person who is disturbed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Remain cheerful and try to put straight a friend who may be short-sighted at present. Business interests flourish if they are well-attended.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Avoid a worldly argument in the morning, so that you do not get distracted. Do not rely on higher-ups for assistance as yet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Be polite but brief with those who would distract you in the morning. An adviser can be of help to you, but a newcomer is not. You may meet someone quite irresistible.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Put aside promises you are not sure how to handle now, and see those who can give you good advice. Focus on personal health, exercise.

 The late Sonny Moysse was an avid proponent of the power of a 4-3 major-suit fit, so much so that that trump holding has become known in the trade as a Moysian fit. This hand would have warmed the cockles of his heart.

Once North showed that his jump shift was based on heart support, South correctly judged that his excellent four-card holding was at least the equivalent of a five-card suit. He showed a better-than-minimum hand with his diamond cuebid, and North wasted no time in getting to slam.

After the lead of the queen of diamonds, declarer had 10 fast tricks. An 11th would come from a diamond ruff, and the obvious place to develop a 12th was in the spade suit. Since declarer could expect a 4-2 trump break, he could not afford to extract all the trumps before he had set up a long spade. To extricate himself from this dilemma, declarer found a most elegant solution.

The first trick was won in hand with the king of diamonds, and at trick two declarer ducked a spade! East won the trick cheaply, but declarer was in control. He won the club return with the ace, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond with the ten. After drawing trumps, he reverted to spades, and the contract was secure once both defenders followed to the second ruff.

Declarer chose an excellent line of play. He would be defeated only if diamonds broke 6-1, or if either major suit split 5-1.

Backyard Adventure

By Jody Mizell

I had always heard stories about an Indian graveyard in a field behind my house. My brother and I decided to dig in it to see if we could find some arrowheads. While we were digging, I suddenly hit something hard. It was a small box that looked very old.

We opened the box and found a very old piece of paper. You could hardly read some of the words. We tried to figure out what was written on the paper that by now we knew was a map. We found words that read, "ancient treasure here". We had to try to figure out where it was, but the map had no trees where there are trees now. We found running water signs on the map, and we knew that it must be the canal in the woods behind our house. We saw something on the map that looked like a tunnel entrance.

We decided we would go in the woods and try to find the tunnel entrance. We found the spot where the map showed that it should be. We were chopping weeds down when we found branches and weeds covering something. We started pulling them off, and sure enough, there was the tunnel entrance! We covered it back up with branches and came home. We decided that we would search for the treasure on Saturday.

We left early Saturday morning. We took flashlights because the tunnel would be dark. When we got there, we took the branches away from the opening. We went inside the tunnel and turned on the flashlights.

We saw paintings and Indian symbols all over the walls. The cave split off into two sections. We decided to stay together and try one at a time. The first one we chose led us to a swamp, so we went back where we started from to take the other path.

The second path we tried was very curvy. When we finally reached the end we saw a room filled with jewels and gold! My brother was about to jump into the middle of the treasure when I stopped him because I had spied a booby trap. We carefully stepped over it, and we began to fill a bag I had brought with me with the treasure. My brother and I were getting ready to fill our pockets with gold, but my brother hit a rock and set off another booby trap. The walls started caving in, and we got out just in time!

When we got out of the tunnel, my brother said, "All of that gold is wasted!" Then I remembered the bag which I had tied to my belt. I showed it to my brother. We raced home to show our parents the gold.

I know by brother and I will never forget that time in our lives. Even though people asked us where we got the gold, we never told them about the tunnel in the woods.

Brucie

By Meredith Owen

I go out into the woods to get away from two things, my sister and the house. It is peaceful outside in the woods. Sometimes I see animals and bears. Once I saw a little baby bird that had fallen out of a tree and broken its wing. I took it to my house, and we fixed it up and named it Brucie. Brucie was a robin. She sounded so beautiful when she sang. Finally, we let her go. She still visits me in the woods.

The Bird And The Rabbit

By Crystal Congleton

Once upon a time there was a bird who never had any friends. A rabbit hopped up to him. They shook hands. The bird said, "Do you want to be my friend?"

The rabbit said, "Yes." They went to the store. They got a carrot and some birdseed. Then they went back to play.

One of the most interesting things that we saw at the telephone company was a big computer. It was as big as my bathroom. Our guide took us down in the basement. After that, we walked up a lot of stairs. Our class got to see a

SPICY CONCOCTION — Expand your seasonal bean salad repertoire with lively, spicy Grillside Bean Salad. A colorful blend of beans — kidney, pinto or black — with crunchy celery, onion and tomato, it boasts an unexpected burst of garden-fresh flavor and jalapeno pepper "heat" from a dressing made with picante sauce, in the cook's choice of mild, medium or hot.

Spicy Bean Salad Adds Some Sizzle To Summer Meals

America's beloved bean salads appear at nearly all summer socials. In vinaigrettes or creamy dressings, made with one, two or more kinds of beans, these cool, colorful classics are always in demand.

Next time it's your turn to bring the bean salad, pass on old standbys and surprise the crowd with a spicy-fresh variation of this seasonal menu mainstay. Team a favorite bean or two with crunchy garden vegetables, savory seasonings and the lively flavor and jalapeno pepper "punch" of picante sauce, a summer salad essential. Whether shaken into a vinaigrette or stirred into mayonnaise or sour cream, it wakes up the taste of any salad with a burst of spicy, garden-fresh flavor. On its own as a zesty dressing, it weighs in at a slim 5 calories per tablespoon.

When you're all fired up for a cookout, count on Grillside Bean Salad to add pizzazz to the menu. A bright blend of kidney, pinto or black beans tossed with celery, red onion and tomato, it boasts a spicy-tangy dressing with a touch of fresh cilantro.

Prepare these lively salads up to a day in advance of serving to allow flavors to mix and mingle.

Summer Is Best Time To Entertain

NEW YORK (AP) — Summer means picnics. However, it's important to remember that there is more to picnics than the basket.

formal or informal, large or small, indoors or out. Unless it rains on your garden party or the air conditioning breaks down during a giant sit-down banquet, it can't help but be a great success," she says.

Malabar Hornblower presents 50 menus for successful entertaining in her "Do-Ahead Dining" (The Globe Pequot Press). The menus are organized by season and the recipes include the approximate preparation time — an often-crucial tidbit to know when preparing for a party.

Hornblower says the Fourth of July is one of her favorite holidays, because, to her, it heralds the start of summer. Her menu for a "Fourth of July Brunch for Twelve" includes a fruity rum punch, a cold fruit soup, baked eggs nested on sausage-vegetable mounds and light citron cheesecake for dessert.

She says summer is the best of all possible times to entertain. It's the season for picnics, outdoor luncheons, backyard buffets, sun-drenched breakfasts on a terrace or patio, late-evening meals on a screened porch, or a formal dinner indoors.

Another idea, taken from Hornblower's summer entertaining sec-

Celebrate Summer With Picnics And Some Tasty Casual Meals

NEW YORK (AP) — Summer means picnics. However, it's important to remember that there is more to picnics than the basket.

There is a selection of attractive and helpful cookbooks for summer meals and seasonal entertaining to help you get away from the standard fried chicken and potato salad lunch basket.

"Picnics" by Marilyn Myers (Running Press) is a beautiful book, with color photos and illustrations that bring Myers' preparation and serving tips, table settings, menus and recipes to life.

basics of organizing a picnic basket, and provides a "transportation tip" for each recipe, to make sure it arrives at the picnic site at its best.

The cookbook offers 65 easygoing recipes, from appetizers to desserts, and 28 complete menus for breakfasts, lunches and dinners. Included are recipes for Gravalax with Sour Cream Mustard Sauce, Spinach Puffs in Phyllo, Fruit Salad with Honey Dressing and, for dessert, Peanut Butter and Banana Cake, Chocolate Malted Cake and Toffee Bars.

Myers, who writes food articles for the "Arkansas Gazette," says that in planning a picnic menu, it's a good idea to start with foods that can be made ahead of time and served either cold or at room temperature.

— Scrub your hands before handling food and between preparation steps.

— Clean knives, cutting boards and other utensils each time they come in contact with raw meats, eggs, fish and poultry. Use clean sponges and dish cloths, or paper towels.

— Keep cold foods below 40 degrees F and chill thoroughly before packing in insulated containers to inhibit the growth of organisms.

Q. Do you have guidelines for what adult women should eat?

A. It's interesting to see how women's diets have changed in the last 10 years. We are eating more food mixtures like casseroles, sandwiches, frozen dinners, pizza and spaghetti. Upper income women are eating less beef and pork but have not changed the amount of luncheon meats, poultry or fish. Upper income women are drinking more milk and lower income women are drinking less milk but more soda. The average intake of soda has doubled to 20 ounces per day since 1978. It is no surprise to observe that women eat away from home more and snack more now.

I am pleased to share with you the Dietary Guidelines for Women (who are not pregnant) developed by the American Dietetic Association. Naturally, they're similar to guidelines for adult men. Women, however, have some special needs.

1) Eat a variety of foods daily from the four major food groups. Eat 3-4 servings of low fat, dairy foods; 2 servings of lean meat or poultry, beans or fish; 4 servings of vegetables or fruits; and 4 servings of whole grain breads and cereals.

2) Maintain a healthy body weight. To lose weight safely and effectively, eat 120 calories for each pound of your current weight. For example, if you weigh 120 pounds, eat 1,200 calories per day. Increase your physical activity and don't skip meals. Remember that weight control should be a matter of lifestyle not just going on and off diets.

3) Exercise regularly, at least 3 days per week.

4) Limit total fat intake to no more than 1/3 of your daily calories. Select from a variety of foods. You need saturated, polyunsaturated and monounsaturated fat. But most of us get too much of the saturated kind (especially grease).

5) Obtain at least half of your calories from carbohydrates, especially the complex carbohydrates known as starches.

6) Eat a variety of fiber rich foods including fresh fruits with skin, vegetables, legumes, whole grains. Increase intake of fiber gradually to avoid gas and stomach cramps.

7) Limit the intake of foods containing salt and sodium. Watch food labels for MSG, sodium citrate and other sodiums.

8) Incorporate iron rich foods into the diet like lean red meats, organ meat, poultry dark meat. Eat a vitamin C food (citrus or tomatoes) with non-meat iron sources like eggs, legumes, dark green vegetables, dried fruit and enriched breads and cereals. Cook with iron pots.

9) Include 3-4 servings of calcium rich foods such as low fat milk, low fat yogurt, cheese, broccoli, canned fish with bones.

10) Try to use foods, not vitamin supplements, for your nutrients, except if special circumstances dictate using a supplement. Ask your doctor.

11) If you drink alcohol, limit intake to 1 daily.

12) Make changes in your diet, exercise and other health habits if you have risks for diabetes, heart disease, hypertension or other diseases, or, if you are pregnant or breast feeding.

13) Ask your doctor for more information about diet or to refer you to a registered dietitian.

Fruity Desserts Beat The Heat

By Bernadette Wheeler
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Summer is here, but before it hits full force there may still be some cool evenings when chilled, or even icy, desserts may not call to you as they do when hot weather demands them. What, then, could be better than topping the meal with a sweet that combines elements of both hot and cold — or at least warm and cool?

Some of the obvious, all-time American favorites in this category are on the level of hot fudge sundaes or warm pie a la mode. For a loftier approach, take advantage of abundant fruits in the marketplace and combine their cool and varied textures with a rich, warm cream or sauce.

BAKED FRUIT WITH PASTRY CREAM

4 cups well-chilled fresh fruits, such as strawberries, cherries, blueberries, white and purple grapes, orange sections or melon

Superfine sugar to taste (optional)

2 tablespoons framboise, kirschwasser or other liqueur (optional)

1 cup milk

2 large egg yolks

5 tablespoons sugar

2 1/2 tablespoons flour

1 teaspoon rum, cognac, Calvados or vanilla

4 amaretto cookies, crushed (for about

4 tablespoons crumbs)

Peel and cut fruits in bite-size pieces as necessary. Stem and pit cherries, if using. Cut grapes in half or leave whole. Combine fruits in bowl, add sugar and liqueur, if desired, and mix lightly. Refrigerate.

In saucepan, bring milk just to the boil.

While milk is heating, combine the yolks and sugar in a bowl and whisk to blend. Blend in flour.

Gradually beat in hot milk. Return mixture to saucepan and cook, over low heat, whisking constantly, until it thickens and starts to bubble (Some lumps may appear at first, but they should disappear with whisking). Continue cooking and stirring for 2 to 3 minutes until mixture is thick and smooth.

Remove from heat. Add liquor or vanilla. Cover top of sauce with wax paper or plastic wrap.

When ready to serve, preheat broiler on high. Place fruits in an ovenproof dish or in four small soufflé dishes or ramekins. Spoon pastry cream on top and smooth it over. Place under broiler until the pastry cream is hot or it bubbles. Remove from heat and top with crumbs. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Fruit should not cook but should remain cool or lukewarm. If pastry cream is made in advance and refrigerated, let it come to room temperature before proceeding with dessert.

CHAMPAGNE SABAYON WITH BERRIES

2 to 3 cups strawberries or raspberries

5 egg yolks

5 teaspoons sugar

1 cup dry Champagne

Place equal amounts of fruit in individual serving dishes. Set aside.

Put egg yolks in top of double boiler over hot but not boiling water, or in saucepan, and beat yolks well over very low heat, using portable electric mixer or a whisk. Add sugar gradually and continue beating over low heat until mixture is pale yellow and ribbon forms when beater is lifted, about 10 minutes (If not using double boiler, lift the pan off heat occasionally to keep the sauce from getting too hot; do not let mixture boil or eggs will curdle).

Add Champagne and continue beating until mixture is thick and foamy. Pour over fruit. Serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Packing Pointers For Perfect Picnics

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

Pack your basket and head for the beach or your favorite park. A picnic is the perfect way to enjoy a summer meal. Here are some tips to make preparations easier and your picnic more fun.

DINNER IN A BASKET

• Choose foods that are least likely to spoil, including breads, hard cheese, chilled hard-cooked eggs in the shell, canned meats, baked beans, packaged luncheon meats, fresh fruits and fresh vegetables.

• Stir bottled mayonnaise into salads and sandwich fillings at home rather than at the picnic spot; the acid in commercial mayonnaise helps prevent spoilage.

• Chill foods well before packing.

• Pack well-chilled perishable foods in an insulated cooler with ice; use block ice or ice packs because they last longer than ice cubes. At the picnic site, place the cooler in a shady spot to help do the best cooling job.

• Pack your cooler so that food to be eaten first is on top. This way you avoid unpacking and repacking the food outdoors.

• Put tightly wrapped and well-chilled fried chicken, baked ham and raw meats for grilling in the bottom of the cooler where temperatures are coldest.

EXTRAS

• Don't forget a small lightweight first aid kit: insect repellent, sunscreen, aspirin, adhesive bandages and prescription medicines family members may require.

• If you picnic often, keep a bag of supplies and condiments packed and ready to go. Include paper or plastic plates, spoons and forks; napkins;

Summer Is Time To Entertain

tion: Red, White, and "Blue" Salad, made with red kidney beans, radishes, cherry tomatoes, rice and ham, and topped with a vinegar-mustard dressing — perfect for the Fourth of July!

Hornblower wrote a weekly column "Do-Ahead Dining" for the food section of the "Boston Globe" for over three years, and the recipes in her cookbook come from those columns. She is also the author of "The Craftsmen's Cookbook" and "Park in the Kitchen."

The following is her recipe for Red, White and "Blue" Salad. The salad and the dressing may be prepared up to 24 hours in advance.

RED, WHITE AND "BLUE" SALAD
Dressing
 1/2 cup white tarragon vinegar
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 Freshly ground black pepper
 1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
 1 teaspoon minced garlic
 1 teaspoon oregano
 1 cup salad oil

To make the dressing: In a 2- to 3-cup bottle with a tight-fitting lid, place the vinegar, salt, pepper and mustard, and stir until the salt is dissolved and the mustard well blended. Add the garlic, oregano and oil. Cover the bottle with the lid, and shake vigorously for 30 seconds. Open, taste for seasoning, and adjust if necessary. Cover and reserve in a cool spot until ready to use.

Picnics

drink cups, matches, and packets of salt, pepper, ketchup and mustard.

• For evening picnics or when bugs are pesky, take along citronella candles. They'll add atmosphere and help ward off insects.

FUN AND GAMES

• For a big group, take along equipment for an organized sport: volleyball, softball, horseshoes. Sports fans of all ages can share the fun.

• If there will be no other youngsters for your children to play with, plan some take-along activities from home.

EASY CLEANUP

• Be prepared for sticky hands. Moisten paper towels with water and place in a plastic bag. Remove one or two as needed, keeping the remaining towels moist and the rest of your picnic dry.

• Don't carry home leftovers; discard them. Any food that has been exposed to sunshine or warm temperatures for hours can be harmful, even though it still may look and smell appetizing.

• Keep an extra roll of plastic bags in your picnic gear to collect or throw away trash, or to take home wet swimsuits, muddy shoes and souvenir rocks or leaves.

SALAD

1 teaspoon salt
 2 cups rice
 1 cup thinly sliced scallions, including 2 inches green leaves.

Two 16-ounce cans red kidney beans, rinsed and drained

1 green pepper, stem and seeds discarded, finely chopped
 2 cups thinly sliced radishes
 1 unpeeled cucumber cut into 1/4-inch dice

1 cup minced fresh parsley
 One 10-ounce package frozen peas, thawed

8 ounces ham, cut into 1/4-inch dice
 Freshly ground black pepper
 8 ounces cherry tomatoes, sliced in half

To make the salad: Fill a 2- to 4-quart saucepan with water, add the salt, and bring to a boil. When it is rolling, add the rice slowly, stir to separate the grains and bring to a boil again. Lower the heat to medium-low and cook, uncovered, 20 minutes. Drain. Rinse well under cold water; then drain for 10 minutes, tossing occasionally to let rice dry out.

Transfer rice to a large salad bowl. Add the scallions, beans, pepper, radishes, cucumber, parsley, peas and ham. Toss to mix thoroughly. Refrigerate, covered with plastic

Time allowance for final preparation: 5 minutes.

Shake dressing vigorously again for a few seconds. Remove salad from refrigerator, uncover, and drizzle dressing over the rice mixture. With a salad fork and spoon, toss well. Taste for seasoning and adjust. Arrange the cherry tomatoes decoratively around the edge of the bowl.

Serves 12.

CURRIED CRAB RICE SALAD

1/2 pound cooked and chilled crab meat

1 1/4 cups cooked and chilled rice
 1/3 cup chopped celery
 2 green onions, chopped
 1/4 cup sliced water chestnuts
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 1/2 teaspoon soy sauce
 1 teaspoon curry powder
 1/2 cup mayonnaise

Salt, pepper
 4 medium tomatoes
 Lettuce

Reserve several pieces of crab meat for garnish. Mix remaining crab with rice, celery, green onions and water chestnuts, tossing lightly to mix. Combine lemon juice, soy sauce, curry powder and mayonnaise, blending well.

Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add to crab mixture, tossing lightly to coat well. Cover and chill thoroughly.

At serving time, place tomatoes stem end down and cut into wedges almost all way through. Press to open and form flower. Place tomatoes on lettuce-lined plates and fill centers with crab mixture. Garnish with reserved crab pieces. Makes 4 servings.

GRILLSIDE BEAN SALAD

2 cans (16 ounces each) kidney, pinto or black beans (or any combination of beans), rinsed and drained

1 to 1 1/2 cups sliced celery, as desired

1 medium tomato, chopped

1/2 cup diced red onion

1/2 to 2/3 cup picante sauce

1/4 cup Italian dressing

1 1/2 teaspoons Dijon style mustard

2 to 3 tablespoons chopped cilantro (optional)

Combine beans, celery, tomato and onion in medium bowl. Combine picante sauce, dressing and mustard; mix well. Pour over vegetables. Toss lightly, cover and chill. Stir in cilantro just before serving. Makes 6 to 8 servings, about 6 cups salad.

FIESTA BEAN SALAD

1 can (16 ounces) kidney beans, rinsed and drained

1 cup fresh cooked or frozen corn kernels, thawed or 1 can (about 8 ounces) canned corn, drained

1 medium red bell pepper, cut into 1 x 1/4-inch strips (1-1/2 cups)

1/2 cup sliced green onions with tops

1/2 to 2/3 cup picante sauce, as desired

1/4 cup Italian dressing

1 teaspoon salt

Combine rice, beans, corn, red pepper and green onions in medium bowl. Combine picante sauce, dressing, cumin and salt. Pour over rice mixture; toss. Cover and chill. Makes 6 to 8 servings, about 5-1/2 cups salad.

subtle says it best: "Inspired Recipes for Casual Entertaining.")

Worthington's cookbook offers recipes for such appetizing — and unusual — dishes as Minted Chinese Pea Pod Soup, Smoked Trout with Roasted Garlic Mayonnaise, Barbecued Pizza with Leeks, Mozzarella, Tomatoes and Pancetta, and Poached Peaches in White Zinfandel with Fresh Raspberry Sauce.

Advance preparation notes are included.

Wine notes are provided by Anthony Dias Blue.

Tasty Desserts

"Country Desserts" (Clarkson N. Potter) by Lee Bailey is a collection of 150 tempting recipes that range from ice cream and ices to cakes and cookies.

Included in the book, beautifully illustrated by photographer Joshua Greene, are recipes for summer pudding, blackberry cake and blueberry buckle. There is also an entire section on fresh fruits.

Bailey is the author of "Country Weekends," "City Food," "Country Flowers" and "Good Parties."

Recipes

"Nantucket Open-House Cookbook" by Sarah Leah Chase (Workman) is not designed specifically for summer meals and entertaining, but it does have an interesting selection of recipes for summer savories and grilling, as well as recipes for soups, salads, and delicious "sweet splurges" that are suitable for summer.

Chase is the chef and owner of Que Sera Sarah Shop in Nantucket, Mass. The following are some sample recipes:

RED PEPPER SALAD

4 large red bell peppers
2 tablespoons fresh basil leaves
DRESSING:
2 tablespoons balsamic or apple cider vinegar (see note)
1/4 cup good-quality olive oil
Salt
Heat oven to 500 degrees F. Put the red peppers on a baking sheet and place in the hot oven to sear for 15 minutes. When they have brown spots and the surface of the skin begins to crack and bubble, remove from the oven and place in a colander under cold, running water for a minute to stop cooking.

When the peppers have cooled enough to handle, peel off the skin and trim away any black spots on the peppers. Cut out the core, remove all the seeds and slice lengthwise into long, thin strips. Place in a mixing or serving bowl.

Stack the fresh basil leaves and cut crosswise into thin strips. Mix the basil with the red pepper.

To make the dressing: Place the vinegar in a small mixing bowl and gradually whisk in the olive oil. Season with salt and pour over the vegetables. Let the ingredients marinate in the refrigerator for several hours before serving.

Makes 6 servings.

(From "Picnics" by Marilyn Myers. Running Press. 128 Pages. $19.95)

LIGHT SUMMER PASTA SAUCE

2 pounds ripe plum (Roma) tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and coarsely chopped
1 bunch basil, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup finely chopped Italian parsley
4 medium garlic cloves, minced
1/2 pound fresh mozzarella cheese, cut into 1/4-inch dice
4 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper

PASTA

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon salt
1 pound spaghetti or linguini

GARNISH

Extra whole basil leaves
In a medium pasta serving bowl combine all the sauce ingredients except 1/4 cup of the Parmesan cheese and mix well.

Add the olive oil and salt to a large pot of boiling water. Add the pasta and cook over high heat until al dente, about 8-10 minutes. Drain well. Place the pasta over the sauce.

Toss to combine. Garnish the bowl with fresh basil leaves and pass the remaining Parmesan cheese. Serve immediately.

THUMBPRINT COOKIES

1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, softened
1/3rd cup sugar
2 large eggs, separated, at room temperature

1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 cup finely chopped walnuts or pecans

About 1 cup raspberry or blackberry jelly or jam

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F. Grease 2 cookie sheets. Set aside.

Cream the butter and sugar until fluffy, about 3 minutes. Add the egg yolks one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Stir in the vanilla and salt.

Gradually add the flour and mix well.

To assemble, lightly whip the egg whites with a fork. Place nuts in another bowl. Shape dough into 3/4- to 1-inch balls and dip each ball in egg white and then roll in nuts. Place 1 inch apart on the prepared cookie sheets. Use your thumb to make a deep depression in the middle of each. (Thumbprint cookies, get it!)

Bake for 15-17 minutes or until lightly browned and firm. Let cool on a wire rack. Fill each cookie with 1/2 teaspoon of jam. Store cookies in an airtight container.

Makes about 3 dozen.

(From "Country Desserts" by Lee Bailey. Potter. 173 Pages. $19.95.)

GRILLED SOFT-SHELL CRABS

Juice of 4 limes
2 tablespoons golden tequila
1 clove garlic, minced
1 fresh jalapeno pepper, seeded and minced

1/4 cup chopped fresh coriander
1/2 cup olive oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

8 soft-shell crabs, dressed

Three hours before you plan to grill the crabs, whisk the lime juice, tequila, garlic, jalapeno pepper and coriander together in a small bowl. Gradually whisk in the oil, then season to taste with salt and pepper. Place the crabs in a single layer in a shallow bowl. Pour the marinade over the crabs. Cover the bowl and let marinate in the refrigerator for 3 hours.

Prepare charcoal or wood chips for grilling.

When the coals are quite hot, remove the crabs from the marinade and place them 3 to 4 inches from the heat. Grill just until cooked through, 2 to 3 minutes each side. Transfer the crabs to a serving platter and drizzle with some of the marinade. Serve at once.

Makes 4 servings.

Economists Eye Poultry Price Jumps

By Carole Sugarman
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Cashiers ring up a lot of chicken this time of year, when summer cooks fire up their grills en masse. Some experts are speculating that the price for those chickens will be the first in the supermarket to rise if the drought in the Midwest continues.

Actually, it already has, but for another reason.

Granted, there are numerous factors that influence the price of poultry — increased summer demand being one of them.

Last year, for instance, wholesale prices of boneless, skinless breasts went up 9 percent from Jan. 10 to June 10. This year, however, during the same period, they went up almost 30 percent.

Economists, poultry wholesalers, restaurateurs and supermarketers are pointing a collective finger at one of the country's larger buyers of chicken — McDonald's.

With the test marketing of McChicken sandwiches late this spring, the world's largest fast-food chain put a sizable dent in the boneless-chicken-breast supply.

"When they (McDonald's) make a decision in the food market, it affects the whole industry," said Randy Morris, sales manager of Metropolitan Poultry, one of the Washington area's larger poultry distributors.

"McDonald's is a major factor in the demand (for boneless breasts)," said Bill Roenigk, director of economic research for the National Broiler Council.

The company's demand also has a domino effect on the fast-food business. "When McDonald's goes on the air and says, 'Eat chicken sandwiches,' everyone's sales go up," Roenigk said.

McDonald's, however, doesn't believe its McChicken sandwich has caused any problem. John Onoda, spokesman for the company, said that the firm gets its chickens from "outside of the market supply," and that "whatever we're doing with chicken" should have "no impact" on wholesale or retail prices.

"We just grow more chickens," Onoda said. McDonald's gets its birds through Equity Meats, a company near Philadelphia, he added.

For McDonald's "to say that they're not having an impact is underestimating" the situation, Roenigk said. Excluding the recent McChicken rollout, Roenigk estimates that McDonald's uses about 500 million pounds of chicken a year.

Since Equity is a processor and produces "zero chickens," the company must go to the open market, Roenigk added. Even if the fast-food company notified all its growers in advance that it was planning to introduce a new product, it would take about a year to produce additional chickens. More breeder hens, housing and the actual growing period must all be taken into account, he said adding, "It's not like Campbell's or Heinz telling a grower, 'We want so many tons of tomatoes.'"

Roenigk said that while there are "plenty of chickens," there is not "plenty of deboning capacity." Chicken breasts must be deboned by hand; mechanical deboners are not used because they leave too much meat on the carcass. It takes about a month to train people to become expert deboners, Roenigk explained.

Thus, McDonald's might buy and inventory a lot of whole chickens or chicken breasts before actually having them deboned.

To what extent McChicken is to blame may be debatable, but boneless breasts as well as whole chickens have clearly increased substantially in price.

According to Ann Cockrell, spokeswoman for Safeway supermarkets, prices of breasts, both bone-in and boneless, and fryers have gone up in the past two months. In April boneless breasts were selling for $3.99 a pound; currently the chain is selling them for $4.35 a pound.

Usama Jallad, owner of Bacchus restaurants in Washington, said wholesale chicken prices have never been so high. Six weeks ago he was paying his wholesaler $2.25 a pound for boneless breasts; now he's paying $3.09 a pound.

CURRIED CHICKEN AND PASTA
1 pound (2 cups) skinless cooked, cubed chicken
2 cups cooked pasta
1/4 cup diced fresh red peppers
1/4 cup chopped walnuts
1/2 cup plain lowfat or non-fat yogurt

1/4 cup sour cream
2 teaspoons curry powder
1/2 teaspoon cumin
1 clove minced garlic
1/4 teaspoon red pepper sauce
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Salt and pepper as desired

In medium bowl, combine chicken, pasta, red pepper, and walnuts. For dressing, combine yogurt, sour cream and seasonings in small bowl. Stir dressing into chicken mixture. Salt and pepper to taste. Garnish with chopped parsley.

Variation: Add 1/4 cup cooked, chilled peas or 1/4 cup raisins.

This Brew Has No Alcohol, Producers Say

By Dan Berger
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

When Brooks Firestone says "Gimme a light," he is talking light. Like no alcohol at all.

Firestone, a Santa Ynez Valley, Calif., vintner and scion of the tire fortune family, has joined forces with brewing expert Hale Fletcher to produce a non-alcoholic beer that will be released in 12 Western states within 60 days.

The name of the new product, like the name of the wine and the automobile tire, is simply Firestone, and in large letters on a red stripe in the center of the label the word "non-alcoholic" appears prominently.

Non-alcoholic what, you may ask. The top of the label tells you it is a premium malt beverage. OK, it can be called non-alcoholic beer. It is, after all, made from two-row barley malt and hops and it is brewed just like beer. So how come the word "beer" does not appear anywhere on the label?

"The BATF (Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms) told us that no terms that relate to beer can be used on the label because it doesn't have any alcohol," Fletcher said in a recent telephone interview. "We can't use words like 'lager' or 'Pilsener' or 'beer.'"

But, naive souls, Fletcher and Firestone thought that the word "brew" would do, so the original label designed for this product said "Firestone Non-Alcoholic Brew." But the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said that, too, was verboten. The word "brew" had to come off the label. That left the term "non-alcoholic" dangling in the wind, so to speak, with nothing to modify.

Unlike other non-alcoholic beers, which are fermented with alcohol and then de-alcoholized, Firestone is made without alcohol being produced during the fermentation process, Fletcher said. He said Firestone was developed using a specially designed yeast strain "that develops its alcohol very late in the fermentation process." He said he intentionally arrests the fermentation before alcohol is produced.

He said other beers use either a vacuum distillation process, in which the brewer essentially boils off the alcohol, or a reverse osmosis filtration system, in which alcohol is removed without changing the temperature of the product. (The latter process has been used to develop Ariel, the successful wine product made by J. Lohr of San Jose, Calif., that contains no alcohol).

Fletcher, who earned a degree in biochemistry at the University of Texas, developed the concept for a non-alcoholic beer in 1986. Though he had been in the banking industry for 15 years, he was a home brewer and wanted to test his theories.

He approached Dr. Michael Lewis, head of the brewing school at the University of California, Davis, and subsequently Fletcher was appointed visiting scientist at the Davis campus. After researching his ideas for seven months, he hit upon the right formula.

Firestone & Fletcher was formed in late 1986 as a joint partnership between the winery owner, Fletcher and Lewis, and a style of brew was the next project. After some months of testing various types of basic elements, Fletcher developed what he believed was the best non-alcohol beer. It was fairly heavy, rich and complex, and was well accepted within his coterie of friends.

"But I had been in an environment of home brewers, micro-brewery individuals, and this heavy, hearty, robust type of product was fine for us. When we did taste tests, people loved it. So we bottled some of it and sent it off to focus groups.

"Well, word came back that it was too heavy for a commercial premium beer. The market (for non-alcoholic beer) is rather small anyway, so to further segment that market" would have been too much of a gamble. "So we reformulated the product, to make it not as heavy as it was."

The style of the new Firestone is "very much like an English ale, not bitter, with lots of malt, and not very heavy on the hops."

He said the target market "tends to change from day to day, but our latest research tells us that it's the young adults, age 25 through 55, who are health-conscious, who realize the responsibility of their actions — and they're deciding not to drink as much alcohol for a variety of reasons."

He acknowledged that it is unusual for a winery to make non-alcoholic beer, but noted that "both are beverages of moderation."

Fletcher said the market for all non-alcoholic beer in 1987 was small, about 10 million 24-bottle cases, for a total market value of no more than $150 million.

"But the market has grown by leaps and bounds over the past three years," he said. "Total beer sales were up about a half percent in the last two years, but the market for non-alcoholic beers between 1985 and 1986 was up 35 percent, and up another 32 percent in 1987."

Production of Firestone is pegged at 300,000 cases in its first year with nationwide distribution.
