Navy Lives Under 'Incredible' Threat Of Disaster

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Long before their forces shot down an Iranian civilian jet over the Persian Gulf, U.S. Navy officers said their constant fear was making a mistake in a war zone bustling with civilian activity.
Iran said all 290 people aboard the Iran Air jet were killed Sunday when the U.S. guided missile cruiser Vincennes fired at it during a routine flight from Iran to Dubai in the United Arab Emirates.

While not officially at war, U.S. sailors are in a combat environment where ships remain at a high state of alert for weeks on end and weapons are tested every few days.
"There are many threats out here, and maybe the worst one is the possibility of somebody making a mistake," one ship's commander said. "In a confined area like the gulf, and with the weapons on hand, the potential for disaster is incredible."
Navy personnel reacted with disbelief after servicemen aboard the Vincennes, one of their most sophisticated warships, mistook an Iranian civilian jet for a warplane and shot it down.

"Basically, they're beating their heads against the walls trying to figure this out," said a source who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Some people are even wondering the worst — could they (the Iranians) have done this on purpose?"
The source said that in the high-tech command information center of the Vincennes all indicators showed that the plane was an F-14 jet fighter that was descending on the ship from six to eight miles out.

The decision by the Vincennes' skipper, Capt. Will C. Rogers III, to fire his SM-2 Standard anti-aircraft missiles was ultimately based on one indicator, the IFF, or "Identify Friend or Foe," which tells radar operators what kind of aircraft is approaching and what it appears to be doing.
"That plane did not answer calls on the radio and it was flying an attack profile toward the Vincennes. The captain did what he should have done under the circumstances," said the source.

Rear Admiral R.G. Zeller, who returned to the United States on Sunday from six months in the Persian Gulf, said U.S. sailors constantly had to be on the lookout for civilian shipping and aircraft.
During a battle between U.S. and Iranian forces on April 18, "commercial airliners continued to fly as though they were oblivious to what was going on around them, and I think they were," he said in an interview in San Diego. "I don't think they got the word. You have to be very, very careful."

"It's not a war, in the sense that we think of wars where the land and sky is filled with combatants," he said. "It's a Third World kind of thing where you have innocents and combatants and you have to stay extremely careful."
The Vincennes is the first of the billion-dollar, state-of-the-art "Aegis" cruisers assigned to duty in the gulf.

Reagan Backs U.S. Ship

Iran Pledges Retaliation For U.S. Attack On Jet

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the Navy was justified in destroying an Iranian jetliner with 290 people aboard because U.S. officers thought it was an attacking warplane, but Iran today called the action an "act of terrorism" and promised retaliation.
Mohammad Ja-Afar Mahallati, Iranian ambassador to the United Nations, said on the CBS "This Morning" program that the downing of the jet was premeditated and he called it "cold-blooded murder."
"By definition, it was an act of terrorism that ... should be severely punished," he said.

He added: "We will not put any limit on our act of self-defense. We will retaliate very strongly wherever we find American interests."
Reagan promised a "full investigation" into still-unanswered questions about the Persian Gulf tragedy.
Reagan, who was scheduled to return to the White House today to wrap up his July 4th holiday, issued a statement Sunday afternoon saying "our sympathy and condolences go out to the passengers, crew and their families."
But he strongly defended the missile attack early Sunday morning by the cruiser USS Vincennes, saying the approaching jetliner ignored warnings and the American ship

"followed standing orders and widely publicized procedures, firing to protect itself against possible attack."
The incident immediately provoked comparisons to the Soviet destruction of a Korean Air Lines jetliner in 1983, an attack which killed 269 people and led Reagan at the time to denounce "the barbarity of the Soviet government in shooting down an unarmed plane" after it veered into Soviet airspace.
Adm. William Crowe, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, rejected such comparisons, saying the Iranian airliner was flying in a

Soviets, China Say U.S. Should Get Out Of Gulf

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
The Soviet Union and China today urged the U.S. Navy to get out of the Persian Gulf after an American warship shot down an Iranian jetliner with 290 people aboard. Governments around the world said the attack underscores the need to end the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war.
Britain backed the United States' assertion that the Navy was exercising its right to defend itself and that the U.S. warship that fired on the Iran Air Airbus on Sunday had warned the airliner to keep its distance.
The United States said its forces mistook the jetliner for an Iranian warplane during a confrontation with Iranian gunboats and shot it down as it flew from Iran to Dubai in the United Arab Emirates.
Iran said everyone aboard was killed and vowed revenge.

Gennady K. Zhuravlev, the Soviet ambassador to Egypt, said in Cairo that the presence of U.S. and other Western military "increases tension in the area and leads to incidents that are hard to predict, such as the Iranian airliner incident."
Ever since U.S. warships were sent to the gulf last year to protect Kuwaiti oil tankers from Iranian attack, the Soviet Union has criticized the move as an effort to expand U.S. influence and has said that it could further destabilize the area.
It has called for an international force in the region to protect shipping.
Britain, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and the Soviet Union itself have warships and mine clearance units in and near the gulf. The United States has deployed more than two dozen units in the region, the largest single national contingent.

The Chinese Foreign Ministry said the involvement of the superpowers in the Persian Gulf "is not conducive to peace and stability in the region."
"We condemn this action and express our condolences for the victims," it said. "It is our hope that there will be a peaceful settlement of the ... Iran-Iraq war at the earliest possible date."
China is officially neutral in the Iran-Iraq war. The United States says China has sold Iran millions of dollars worth of arms, including land-based Silkworm missiles, but China denies it.

'The Dream Is Still Alive' ...

Italians Say Jet In Wrong Corridor

ROME (AP) — Officers aboard an Italian frigate in the Persian Gulf say the Iranian jetliner shot down by an American warship was flying outside the commercial air corridor, an Italian Navy spokesman said today.
The route of the Iranian Airbus was detected by officers aboard the Espero, said the spokesman, speaking under the usual groundrules of anonymity. Iran has claimed the plane was inside a commercial corridor.
The Italian military spokesman said the Italian officers heard the commander of the Vincennes send four radio warnings to the pilot of the Iranian plane, but there was no response. The Italians later heard the Americans announce they had downed an Iranian F-14, he spokesman said.

America began celebrating the Fourth of July with a flag-waving ceremony for the rollout of space shuttle Discovery and the approach of the nation's return to space, in a mostly sunny holiday shadowed by distant tragedy.
"America, the dream is still alive," astronaut Dave Hilmers told a crowd of several hundred engineers, technicians and others at Kennedy Space Center.
But around the country, drought left many Americans facing a fair-weather Fourth without fireworks as the nation marked its 212th birthday with parades, food fests and other fun.

Independence Day was also haunted by the accidental downing of an Iranian jetliner on Sunday by an American warship, claiming 290 lives. President Reagan called the missile attack "a terrible human tragedy."
In Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776, festivities were to kick off today with the Freedom Festival Parade, featuring high school bands from across America. A ceremony was scheduled later on the steps of Independence Hall, scene of the historic signing.

City officials on Sunday announced the creation of the Philadelphia Liberty Medal, an annual $100,000 prize to be given each July Fourth to someone in the world who has promoted freedom.
Tens of thousands of people were expected tonight for an annual fireworks display at the Empire State Plaza in Albany, N.Y., while even more were expected to watch a fireworks extravaganza over New York City's East River.
In Chicago, fireworks scheduled for tonight along the downtown lakefront mesh with the annual Taste of Chicago food festival, which on Sunday drew thousands of people.

In St. Louis, Vice President George Bush was to make two appearances today at the giant VP Fair. Fair organizers were expecting up to 1 million people to visit the Gateway Arch grounds on the fair's third day.
"It's the biggest party I've ever seen," said former Olympic gold medal gymnast Kurt Thomas, who gave a demonstration Sunday.

Shuttle Discovery Moves To Pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery made its long-delayed trip to the launch pad today, cheered on by flag-waving workers who have waited 2½ years for a rebirth of the American space program.
"America, the dream is still alive," astronaut Dave Hilmers told a Fourth of July crowd of several hundred engineers, technicians and others who watched as the 85-ton spaceship edged out of an assembly building into the glare of floodlights at 12:50 a.m.
"What more fitting present can we make to our country than this on the day of its birthday," said Hilmers, one of five crew members scheduled to fly Discovery on the first post-Challenger mission, set for early September.

Discovery, attached to its external fuel tank and two solid-fuel booster rockets, was perched on the broad back of a giant tracked transporter that lumbered along at less than 1 mph in covering the 4.2-mile route to the pad in 6½ hours.
The shuttle arrived at Pad 39B at 7:30 a.m., and technicians began connecting its various systems to the launch tower, including air-conditioning and electricity, and extending platforms from the pad so workers can have access to the shuttle.

NASA scheduled the move in the early morning to avoid thunderstorms and lightning that are common during the daytime in the summer.
For three hours, starting at 8 a.m., space center workers and their families were permitted to drive personal cars past the launch pad for a good look at Discovery before a service structure enclosed it.
A recording of "The Star Spangled Banner" was played as the shuttle began the move to Launch Pad 39B, the same pad from which Challenger was launched on the flight that killed seven astronauts on Jan. 28, 1986.

"It's been a long 2½ years since Challenger, and I'm very pleased with the progress we've made during that time," Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, said at the rollout ceremony. "It's been a team effort. ... This is a proud day."
McCartney presented Hilmers with a book containing the names of more than 15,000 Kennedy Space Center workers who have labored to return the shuttle fleet to space.

Pitt High School Students Spending Summer Helping Scientists At ECU

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

When they return to school this fall, 16 rising Pitt County high school sophomores will have some unusual experiences to relate if an English teacher asks them for essays on "How I Spent My Summer Vacation."

Keisha Cratch has learned to tie surgical sutures and practiced stitching by sewing up tomatoes and grapefruits. Leonard Davis observed a pancreas transplant and a heart by-pass operation. Candace Garrett has been studying X-rays of cancerous tumors and consulting with a surgeon who performs mastectomies. Stephanie Winder has done word processing on a microcomputer in the Health Sciences Library at East Carolina University.

Others have assisted in research laboratories at ECU's main and medical campuses and performed clerical duties for ECU scientists.

The students were participants in ECU's annual summer Science Track Enhancement Program, an arrangement developed by two ECU faculty members to encourage talented students to pursue careers in the fields of math and science. Emphasis of the two-week program is on two groups who generally don't aspire to these fields — racial minorities and females.

"Experiencing 'science in action' and having a close mentor-relationship with a professional scientist should make these students more comfortable with choosing further science studies, pursuing college and working toward a science career," says STEP program director Christine Fitch.

"It is one thing to enjoy reading about science or conducting experiments in the school laboratory," she said. "It is quite another thing to experience the real world of science with its exactness, excitement and intellectual discovery."

STEP offers a wide range of experiences to the participating students, as they compile research data, assist with cost estimates for medical and scientific procedures, collect water and soil samples, and assist with experiments.

It's a realistic, up-close view of science and medicine. Students see that the daily routine of the clinic or laboratory offers its own particular rewards, seldom resembling the sensationalized world populated by lab-coated actors in films and on TV.

"They quickly learn that it's not all drama," Dr. Fitch said.

STEP was the brainchild of Dr. Fitch, a member of the ECU School of Education faculty, and Dr. Mary Ann Rose, a nursing professor who has been working as assistant to the ECU chancellor for special assignments.

Students live on campus during the two-week program. Each day they observe scientific activities or perform simple chores with a STEP mentor — usually an ECU faculty or staff scientist or a professional with one of the county health agencies who has volunteered for STEP mentoring responsibilities. Students are paid a stipend for their on-the-job hours and take their meals in ECU dining facilities.

During the evenings they attend lectures and seminars on a variety of topics, such as leadership, career development, money management or workplace behavior. Speakers at these evening programs are also volunteers — from the campus and local communities.

"The program is supported by the various campus departments and by contributions from local industries," Dr. Rose explained. "It's really a co-operative effort between the campus and the community."

STEP students have access to ECU's recreational facilities and go on special outings arranged for them by local churches and the minority fraternities and sororities at ECU. Some of the strictly-for-fun activities they've enjoyed have been horseback riding, swimming, karate demonstrations and attending Greenville's outdoor Sunday-in-the-Park concerts.

The mentor relationship is particularly important to the youngsters who work in the program, according to Dr. Rose. This close personal contact can motivate students to work hard and develop an understanding of science, she believes.

"A caring and inspiring individual can often make the difference between pursuing and abandoning a career choice. When mentors 'adopt' students, we believe that there is greater likelihood of their pursuing science and mathematics careers," she explained.

The 1988 STEP mentors were from the biology, chemistry, geography and sociology departments in the ECU College of Arts and Sciences, the ECU Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources, the ECU Health Sciences Library, the Pitt County Mental Health Center, the Regional Rehabilitation Center, the ECU Animal Resources and Shared Research Resources laboratories, the ECU School of Social Work, and the surgery and radiation oncology departments in the ECU medical school.

Students are selected for the program from among nominees recommended by school science teachers who work with RECAST (Regional Eastern Carolina Alternative Student Training) clubs in the local schools. Like STEP, the community-based RECAST organization has as its chief purpose to increase numbers of minorities and females in engineering and scientific fields.

The student nominees are not necessarily identified as gifted, and socioeconomic background is not a factor in their selection, Dr. Rose said. The only criteria for the program are that students must demonstrate potential ability to attend college and possess the interpersonal and social skills needed to interact in a work setting.

Now in its third year, the STEP program is still too new to determine whether or not it's achieving its goal of encouraging minority and female students to aspire to jobs in science, Dr. Fitch noted. However, she and Dr. Rose have received "positive results" from the 1986 and 1987 STEP students. "Some of our students have gone on to participate in the Science Summer Ventures session offered by the ECU Math-Science Education Center," said Dr. Fitch. "Others have wanted to come back and enroll in the program a second time."

"Unfortunately we don't have enough mentors to provide continuing STEP placements," Dr. Rose said, "so our focus is on reaching new students each summer."

Dr. Fitch is collecting follow-up data to assess the long-range impact of the program. STEP "graduates" are monitored with regard to how many math and science courses they select in high school, whether or not they prepare for and enroll in college, what college majors they choose and finally, whether they obtain jobs in science and/or math fields.

Originally STEP was designed for high school juniors, but Drs. Fitch and Rose then determined that this was too late in a student's school career to have the maximum impact.

Now geared toward students who have just completed the ninth grade, the program attempts to reach the youngsters at the beginning of high school, a phase of youth in which personal goals are set and a low self image can be improved.

"The basic problems of being a teen-ager, compounded with issues like teenage pregnancy, discrimination, and lack of parental support and encouragement may lead minority students in particular to feel that they cannot aspire to college or difficult subjects like math or science," Dr. Rose explained.

ECU's STEP program attempts to "raise aspiration levels," she said. "We want our STEP students to say, 'I can go to college. I can reach my career goals.'"

ECU Plans New Bern Conference

ECU News Bureau
NEW BERN — "Implementing Interdisciplinary Team Organization" is the topic of the East Carolina University School of Education's Middle School Summer Conference scheduled for the New Bern Sheraton July 6-8.

The residential workshop is designed for school-based or school system-based leadership teams who are interested in knowing more about the middle school program in general and interdisciplinary team organization in particular.

Workshop leader is Elliott Merenbloom, principal of Pikesville Middle School in Baltimore, Md., and recipient of the 1985 National Middle School Association President's Award. He is also the author of several NMSA publications and 10 journal articles.

Further information about the ECU Middle School Conference is available from Dr. Donald Spence, School of Education, ECU, Greenville 27858.

"SMOKELESS" TOBACCO PROBLEM

If you've given up smoking cigarettes but are now chewing tobacco, you can still have dental problems that have been found to be tobacco related. According to researchers, prolonged or excessive use of smokeless tobacco can produce irritants that have an unhealthy effect on gum and bone tissue. If damaged tissue isn't treated in time this can lead to permanent damage, loosening of the teeth, and eventually loss of teeth.

Another condition that users of smokeless tobacco should be aware of is hyperkeratosis. This is the formation of a whitish callous-like thickening in the mouth. It usually occurs in the area where the tobacco is placed for chewing, sometimes called the "snuff pouch."

Whether you smoke or chew tobacco, and even if you do neither, regular dental checkups are the only way you can protect the health of your teeth and mouth. If there is the beginning of any kind of dental-related problem, the earlier the treatment the better chance you have of keeping your teeth and mouth healthy.

RULES FOR RAISING DELINQUENT CHILDREN

1. Sometimes you run across something that's so relevant, so important, that you want to share it with your closest associates—both personal and business. So it is with this list, which came to me by way of the Houston Police Department. Read it carefully and, who knows, it might just help you or someone you know avoid one of life's most tragic "disasters"!
2. Begin in infancy to give the child everything he wants. In this way, he'll grow up believing that the world owes him a living.
3. When he uses bad words, laugh at him. This will make him think he's cute, and it will encourage him to pick up more "cute" phrases.
4. Never give him any spiritual training. When he's twenty-one, he can decide for himself—cults, atheism, anything...
5. Avoid the use of the word "wrong". You wouldn't want him to develop a guilt complex, would you?
6. Pick up all his strewn-about items—books, shoes, clothes. Do everything for him so he'll be experienced in throwing all his responsibilities on others.
7. Let him read any printed matter he can get his hands on. Be careful that the tableware and drinking glasses are sterilized, but let his mind feed on garbage!
8. Quarrel frequently with your spouse in the presence of your child. Then he won't be too shocked when the home is broken up later.
9. Give the child all the spending money he wants. Never let him earn his own. After all, why should he have things as tough as you did?
10. Satisfy his every craving for food, drink and comfort. See that his sensual desires are gratified. Denial may cause him to suffer harmful frustration.
11. Take his side against neighbors, teachers and policemen. Everyone knows they're just prejudiced against your child.
12. When he gets into real trouble, apologize for yourself by saying, "I never could do anything with him".
13. Prepare for a little grief. You're likely to have some!

Shootings

Greenville police said nine incidents, including three shootings involving BBs and pellets, were reported during the weekend.

The first of the three shootings was reported at 11:53 Sunday, according to Officer J.T. McCarter. McCarter said two men reportedly shot at the front of the Fast Fare store at 425 Hooker Road with a pellet gun, damaging three glass panes.

Then, at 12:53 a.m. Sunday, police received a report that someone shot the windshield of a car at 300 Higgs St. with a BB gun, doing $100 damage to the window and $30 damage to the car's antenna, according to F.G. Pruitt.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said the third incident, the shooting of a window worth $150 at the Rack Room in the Buyer's Market, was reported at 12:01 p.m. Sunday.

In other incidents reported Sunday, Officer J.G. Bridges said Kenneth Allen, 24, checked into Pitt County Memorial Hospital at 8:06 a.m. after receiving a gunshot wound to the shoulder. The shooting was under investigation, Bridges said.

Officer R.L. Smith said the theft of a camera worth $30 from Cricket Inn on South Memorial Boulevard was reported at 11 a.m. Smith said the thief broke in the front window of the inn to get to the camera.

Officer W.S. Heath said a car parked at the Hard Times Nightclub was scratched in an incident reported at 11:28 a.m.

Officer S.A. Bass said the theft of two park benches worth $100 from the side of Adam's Car Wash was reported at 12:51.

Officer W.S. Heath said the front passenger side window of a car parked at the West End Laundry was broken out by a rock, causing $75 damage, in an incident reported at 1:47 p.m.

Officer J.G. Jenkins said the theft of a check for $32 made out to Gardner Wholesale Co. from 1808 Conley St. was reported at 5:43 p.m.

And Officer D.C. Johnson said a larceny by trick was reported taking place at Reade and Cotanche streets at 7:31 p.m. According to Johnson, Alton Langley was approached by a man offering to sell him a VCR for $45. When Langley gave the man the money, he ran off down Cotanche Street.

Arrests

Greenville police arrested Charles Ray Dixon, 33, of 110 Bubba Blvd. Sunday at 6:17 p.m. on charges of attempted shoplifting at a local grocery store and assaulting an employee of the store who tried to detain him.

Officer E.M. Haddock said Dixon would be charged with assault with a deadly weapon and shoplifting. Haddock said Dixon arrested at Harris Supermarket on South Memorial Drive after Milton Earl Hagens tried to detain him for the police. Dixon fought with Hagens and pulled a box cutter on him, Haddock said.

Also on Sunday, Officer R.L. Smith said Delton Lorenzo Howard, 32, of Route 6 Box 89, Greenville, was arrested on charges of assault on a female and misdemeanor breaking and entering in connection with an incident reported earlier in the day at 2101 Monclair St., Apartment 5.

Officer B.W. Lewis said Mitchell Wayne Chapman, 26, of the Shelter on Watauga Avenue, was arrested at 12:56 p.m. on charges of shoplifting at the Piggly Wiggly grocery store.

Assault Charge

Greenville Police Officer T.E. Nevelle said Pearlie Brenda Kennedy, 22, of 1106B N. Washington St. was arrested Saturday at 10 p.m. for simple assault.

Teacher Union Proposes 'Learning' Labs

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The head of America's largest teacher union is proposing that each state make at least one school district a "learning laboratory" where educators and others could freely experiment with school reform.

Such districts would have broad freedom to "redefine not only what we teach, but how we teach America's children," National Education Association President Mary Hatwood Futrell said in a speech scheduled for delivery at today's opening of the 1.9 million-member group's annual convention.

More than 8,000 NEA delegates meeting at the Superdome were to vote later today on the proposal, which Futrell called "our most ambitious reform effort to date."

Reforms in laboratory districts could include more flexible school scheduling, partnerships with colleges, financing through means other than property taxes, and curricula managed by classroom teachers, according to a paper being distributed to delegates.

However, Futrell stressed that reforms could take many shapes.

She also said change should not be dictated from outside the laboratory district, but should be determined by local teachers, school administrators, parents, businesses and others.

Delegates of the rival, 677,000-member American Federation of Teachers, holding its annual meeting in San Francisco, endorsed another reform experimentation proposal Sunday.

The AFT version would pave the way for experiments in 1,000 or more districts, where groups of six or more teachers would be free to operate schools within schools.

The 3,000 AFT delegates also approved a resolution calling for curbs on standardized testing of kindergarten children, an idea that has caught on in Minneapolis and Georgia in recent years.

Both unions seemed to agree that school reform dictated by state governments had either failed outright or had gone as far as it could. Both argued that reform could only move forward if schools themselves, and teachers in particular, were free to initiate improvements.

Despite the NEA leadership's oft-stated political open-mindedness, Futrell's keynote address was sharply partisan. She repeatedly blasted the Reagan administration's education and civil rights policies and praised Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis.

The nation needs "a president who will give us a fair deal instead of an arms deal, a drug deal, or an insider deal, a president who will invest more to make every American child a star than he will to fill God's heaven with star wars," Futrell said.

At Futrell's urging, the NEA board of directors last week endorsed Dukakis for the democratic nomination, making it the first large union to do so this election year.

Theoretically, Bush is still in the running for the union's backing for the November election after both parties meet this summer. But the odds are minimal considering that fewer than 30 percent of NEA members consider themselves Republican.

"The son of a teacher, a teacher himself, Governor Dukakis understands and embodies the link between education and the American dream," Futrell said.

The AFT has said it will not endorse any candidates until after the party conventions.

Inspections

By The Associated Press

Teams of Soviet experts traveled to five missile sites in four Western states to begin inspections mandated by the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty.

The 70 Soviets, who arrived Friday night at Travis Air Force Base in northern California, departed in small groups Sunday for two sites in Arizona, and one each in Utah, Colorado and Southern California, said Travis spokesman Capt. Tom Dolney.

A group of U.S. inspectors traveled to the Soviet Union at the same time to begin their work under the treaty signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev last December.

Under the complex procedures outlined in the treaty, the Soviets had the right to conduct spot checks at the five sites this weekend.

New Prisons Cost Less Than Release

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says it is ultimately cheaper to relieve overcrowding in penal facilities by building new prisons and jails than by releasing repeat offenders.

A report released Sunday by the department's National Institute of Justice concluded that new crimes committed by released prisoners cost society about $430,000 a year through such things as police and court work, losses to victims and private security expenses.

But it costs about $25,000 for each prisoner each year to build a new cell and maintain the inmate, the study said.

"Confinement is not too expensive when weighed against the price of crimes that would otherwise be prevented by incapacitation," said James K. Stewart, the institute's director.

The report was based on a study of 2,190 inmates from California, Texas and Michigan who were repeat offenders and given early release. The study found those inmates committed an average of 187 crimes a year.

"Public debate has mistakenly focused on the cost of imprisonment compared with the cost of probation," said Stewart.

The institute said sentencing 1,000 additional offenders to prison annually would have required about $25 million a year but would have averted 187,000 felonies that cost society a total of $430 million.

Computer Intruder Destroys Records

NEW YORK (AP) — A computer "virus" destroyed information stored in personal computers at NASA and other government agencies, The New York Times reported today.

The rogue computer program, designed to sabotage a private company in Dallas, destroyed computer files over a five-month period beginning in January, the newspaper said.

Damage to government data was limited, but files were destroyed, projects were delayed and hundreds of hours were spent tracking the electronic culprit, the Times said.

It was not known whether the program was deliberately introduced or brought in accidentally, but National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials have asked the FBI to investigate, the paper said.

Also affected were the Environmental Protection Agency, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Sentencing Commission, the Times said.

The program "infected" close to 100 computers at NASA facilities in Washington, Maryland and Florida, NASA officials said.

Viruses are computer programs that can lie dormant until they are set off, wiping out files or having other effects. Some viruses are not activated until a particular time or until another program is run.

The loss of information was isolated and limited to personal computers, rather than larger mainframes, according to David Lavery, a senior computer systems scientist with NASA.

The virus was designed to sabotage computer programs at Electronic Data Systems in Dallas, said company spokesman Bill Wright. The program did little damage, he said.

Gettysburg Peace Light Rekindled

GETTYSBURG, PA. (AP) — The cheers of thousands echoed on a hillside here as a tongue of flame atop the Eternal Light Peace Memorial burst skyward for the first time in 15 years.

More than 20,000 people witnessed the relighting Sunday of the memorial that was first ignited 50 years ago in memory of those who fought and died in the Civil War Battle of Gettysburg.

"It's time for us to learn from the sacrifice of those who fell here. And it is time to act," astronomer Carl Sagan said in his dedication address.

"The real triumph of Gettysburg was not, I think, in 1863. It was 50 years later, when the veterans, the remnants of the adversary forces, the Blue and the Gray, met in celebration and in solemn memorial,"

Sagan said. "It is time to emulate them."

The flame will be kept burning continuously atop the limestone and granite monument, which was dedicated 50 years ago by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in a ceremony that drew more than 450,000 people.

The light burned unceasingly for 35 years except for a two-year break during World War II. In 1973, it was extinguished by a congressional order banning all ornamental uses of energy during the height of the oil crisis except for the flame on President John F. Kennedy's grave in Arlington National Cemetery.

The monument remained dark for three years. The natural gas light then was converted to an electric light that has burned for the past 12 years.

The relighting of the gas-fueled flame is "a dream come true" for state Rep. Ken Cole of Adams. His uncle Paul Roy, who was then editor of the Gettysburg Times, conceived the idea for the original flame and monument, and mounted a nationwide fund-raising effort to build it.

"When they put the light bulb up there and extinguished the flame, it kind of took the heart out of the monument," Cole said.

The relighting was not lost on Arthur Rice, who witnessed the original lighting in 1938 and whose relatives helped plan that ceremony.

"I think the idea of rededicating it for peace, for a world united, is something they would be happy with," he said.

Three central Pennsylvania companies have offered to pay for the first year's fuel bill.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Real Reason

In 1988, Revolution Is Still Relevant

"By referring the matter from argument to arms, a new era for politics is struck; a new method of thinking hath arisen."

Thomas Paine, Common Sense, 1776

After the fireworks fade, after the hot dogs are roasted and the ice cream eaten, the reason for the hoopla of today will still stand strong.

The reason for celebration is liberty, freedom and independence — and the courage and vision to pursue these states.

The rabble-rousers of 1776 had their hey day today, July 4. A radical resolution was passed by the Continental Congress, and that piece of bold writing was called the Declaration of Independence.

That document formalized the struggle of an oppressed fledgling nation to be free. It documented the yearning for liberty by a people who had been denied civil rights, voice in government and kept under military rule. But this formal declaration did not end these injustices.

It merely cleared the way for tackling the problems of founding a new nation and maintaining it in defiance of Great Britain. Lacking both tradition and authority based in law, the Congress had to create political institutions and a new national spirit — all in the midst of war.

It is this ad lib approach which is most relevant to the United States of today, as the nation celebrates the 212th anniversary of its inception. The Declaration of Independence was the formula for a great experiment. The leaders of 1776 weren't afraid to take chances. They weren't shy about being bold. They had no guarantees, and knew the future rested in their hands and on their words. Revolution today is a strong word, but that concept is the spirit which drove these leaders.

Today, the world's largest democracy, born of that turmoil two centuries ago, is still a huge experiment. And to succeed, it still needs that same willingness to take chances in the name of liberty.

To remain strong and free, the United States needs to examine Thomas Jefferson's statement of rights — among these the right to revolution — and act on it when the need arises.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or abolish it and to institute new Government."

Plane Incident May Derail Overtures

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Navy's downing of an Iran Air passenger plane Sunday seems certain to halt indefinitely a series of signals exchanged by Iran and the Reagan administration during the last several months as each sought improved relations.

Administration spokesmen repeated last month that the United States was ready to engage in "an authoritative dialogue" with Iran while denying vehemently Arab and European press reports that several top U.S. officials had met secretly with Iranian representatives in New York, Geneva, Tunis and Algiers.

At least two Iranians recently sought out U.S. officials here, alleging that they were emissaries from various Iranian leaders interested in improving relations.

The administration has dismissed these overtures and insisted that any private Iranian intermediary must have "a diplomatic note from the government of Iran that the person represents the government. It has got to be an authoritative person," a U.S. official said.

U.S. officials have said they are anxious to avoid a repeat of the Iran-contra scandal in which the administration, dealing with various private Iranian intermediaries, became involved in secret arms sales to Iran in a bid to gain release of the nine American hostages from Beirut.

Nonetheless, recent U.S. intelligence reports that Iran's religious leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, is dying of liver cancer have heightened administration interest in political developments in Iran. Some U.S. officials are arguing that the United States should position itself now for improved relations with Khomeini's successors.

Some officials in Tehran's faction-ridden government also were reported to be interested in improving relations — at least before Sunday's incident.

Two weeks ago, a high-ranking Iranian official told Robin Wright, a visiting research fellow from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, that the two governments recently exchanged "a series of messages" that raised his hopes for the start of a dialogue.

After interviewing Deputy Foreign Minister

Mohammed Javad Larijani in Tehran, Wright said, "Larijani made it clear there had been a series of messages between the United States and Iran in the last couple of months that had a hopeful sign to them on a variety of issues." Larijani is in charge of U.S. relations.

Wright said Larijani told her that there had been "direct and indirect traffic" of messages between the two governments and that "the issues" raised included the Persian Gulf situation, bilateral issues and the fate of U.S. hostages.

Wright said Iran had decided to seek better relations with the West "after a very rough year and a half" in its almost eight-year war with Iraq, which has had Iran several military defeats in recent months.

Tehran planned to start overtures with France and Britain, then turn to Canada before concentrating on improving ties with the United States, according to Wright, who spent two weeks interviewing Iranian officials.

"They were clearly headed in that direction despite the awfully angry rhetoric" against the United States, she said.

France recently re-established diplomatic relations with Iran, and the last French hostages held in Beirut were released after Iranian intervention with Shiite Moslem radicals holding them. In mid-June, four British parliamentarians visited Tehran to discuss improving relations.

Wright said the downing of the Iranian plane was "a diplomatic tragedy" for U.S.-Iranian relations. "Every time there have been signals sent, events have overtaken diplomacy," she said.

Another such example occurred last September when State Department officials hoped to take advantage of a U.N. visit by Iranian President Ali Khamenei to meet with him.

Those efforts were scuttled when, a day before Khamenei's U.N. address, U.S. Navy forces attacked and captured an Iranian mine-laying vessel in the gulf, killing three Iranian sailors.

Similarly, overtures by Iranian and U.S. officials were undermined in mid-April when the Iranians laid new mines in the gulf, leading to the explosion that blew a hole in the frigate USS Samuel B. Roberts. The United States retaliated by demolishing two Iranian oil rigs and sinking or damaging six Iranian vessels.

Precisely how serious the latest Iranian signals to Washington have been is disputed in the administration.

Some U.S. officials have said they suspect that Iran is seeking to manipulate Arab and western media to give the impression that contacts are being made, in the hope of shaking the confidence of Iraq and its Arab gulf allies in the U.S. commitment to them.

These officials said they believe that Iran is the main source of many recent reports in the Arab and western press about secret U.S.-Iran contacts.

The Wall Street Journal reported June 10 that Robert B. Oakley, the National Security Council's Middle East expert, had written an internal staff memo warning that Iran might seek to take advantage of the U.S. presidential election campaign.

Oakley was concerned that Iran might try to entice the presumed Republican nominee, Vice President Bush, into a deal involving release of the nine U.S. hostages in return for a less hostile U.S. stance toward Iran, the newspaper said.

Arab press reports have alleged that U.N. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters recently met secretly with Iranian envoys in New York and Tunis and that Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead had done the same during a mid-May visit to Algiers.

The State Department has vehemently denied these reported meetings and insisted that there have been "no contacts with Iranians over the hostages."

State Department spokeswoman Phyllis E. Oakley said June 8 that the United States was "willing and ready to talk with any group or organization or country about the safety and release of the hostages. But ... there have been no contacts with Iranians over the hostages."

Asked whether the contacts might have been about other issues, she replied: "We have clearly stated ... that we would be willing to engage in an authoritative dialogue with responsible representatives of the Iranian government."

"So far, this willingness on our part has not borne fruit."

The 'Golden Words' Of Speaker Jim Wright

WASHINGTON — It is rare to find a political leader who is also a first-rate writer. Now the speaker of the House, Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, joins the august ranks of Winston Churchill, Benjamin Disraeli and only a handful of others who've managed to be equally adept at politics and literature.

Unfortunately, Wright's "Reflections of a Public Man" has been at the center of an ethical storm, including charges that lobbyists and the Teamsters Union bought the book in bulk as a way to sidestep legal limits on campaign donations.

There are some Philistines in the press who even question whether the 117-page, $5.95 paperback, first published in 1984 and unjustly ignored by the supposedly sophisticated literary journals of the day, can even be considered much of a book at all.

It was compiled from speeches, articles and notes from Wright's journal by a devoted staffer, and Wright has been criticized because he received unusually high royalty payments from a Fort Worth associate who published the book.

According to publisher William Carlos Moore, the book was "a vehicle to show the world this man, and for him to make a buck and me to make a buck."

Moore is far too modest. The book reveals Wright to be one of our most astute pioneers of the literary avant-garde, drawing on everything from the short fictions of the Argentinian master Jorge Luis Borges to the "cut-up" collage techniques of William Burroughs.

He uses a deceptively simple framework, arranging short prose pieces under such straightforward headings as "This I Believe," "Some Thoughts on Posterity" and "Summer Days."

But the discerning reader will also note that the author has managed to create a special persona for the book, a narrator with the same name and identity as the affable speaker — that is, "Jim Wright" — but who is actually a figure of Dostoevskian complexity, prone to dark broodings about law and morality that he barely masks with strained attempts at homespun humor.

It is this tension over the underlying guilt and anguish of the narrator with his Babbitt-like public facade that gives the book its remarkable power. Wright is the first author since Ring Lardner to truly capture the pathos underlying the comic monologue of an American original, and his main character, "Jim Wright," is surely that.

The opening section of the book sets the stage with short reminiscences grouped under the heading "Boyhood Reflections." Only a page or two in length, they appear, at first glance, to be unconnected, pointless musings.

But a closer look reveals that in almost each case, the young Jim Wright learns a moral lesson, or like Marcel Proust and his beloved madeleine cake, savors the sensory delights of childhood. And like Proust, the speaker of the House conjures up this world through vivid images.

Here is his description of a game he played when the iceman came to town: "Once we invented a contest, the object of which was to see who among us could sit longest on a big block of ice before jumping off with freezing butt." This sentence captures much of Wright's technique: the earthy humor reminiscent of Mark Twain, spiced with the disjointed wordplay associated with Alain Robbe-Grillet and the French nouveau roman movement.

In other sections of the book, Wright creates a new literary form, a sort of political haiku, as in the full page devoted to this graceful prose poem, titled "The System":

"What people really mean when they say 'the system isn't working' is simply that they are not getting their way."

"The system assures that each of us may have his say. It does not guarantee that any of us will get his way."

But Wright is not just a dazzling wordsmith. In the first part of the book, he begins laying the groundwork for the ethical dilemmas that become the book's leitmotif — an ironic foreshadowing, perhaps, of the House Ethics Committee's investigation of the book's author.

In a short tale about a watch his father gave him, he describes how the words inscribed on the back haunted him throughout his life: "Lead us not into temptation, But deliver us from evil."

He admits, "Always — on a street or at a desk or in the Halls of Congress — there are vicissitudes in which those words need to be remembered. Sometimes, to my regret, they haven't." A subtle but ominous note of impending tragedy is struck here.

As the book proceeds, through reflections on religion, leadership, history, and graduation days, Wright returns, almost obsessively, to moral concerns. In doing so, he offers us a Sophoclean portrait of a man struggling with his own weakness, resentful of efforts to "legislate morality," yet filled with an exalted idealism.

In the sensitive essay, "To Be a Politician," he notes: Politics "doesn't have to be filthy and corrupted ..." But while drawing an idealized portrait of the politician who gathers up "gleams of enlightenment from a multitude of human sources," — as opposed to, say, campaign contributions from the Teamsters — he concedes, "... we are imperfect creatures."

At the same time, Wright chafes at moralistic restrictions on behavior. Just as he has condemned the current charges against him as "politically motivated," in this book he argues, "Let no man arrogate to himself the almighty presumption of judging another's integrity — but let none shrink from the unforgiving mirror of his own." These days, Wright apparently believes, he should be judged by a somewhat milder standard: He has told reporters he has "done nothing illegal."

IN THE STATE

Robinson Dies

CULLOWHEE — Harold F. "Cotton" Robinson, a former chancellor at Western Carolina University, died Sunday while vacationing at Ocean Isle Beach. He was recognized internationally as a leader in educational development.

Robinson, 69, became ill Saturday night and was taken to Brunswick County Hospital, where he was admitted to the intensive care unit. He died Sunday morning.

A native of Bandana in Mitchell County, Robinson was a leader in education, science and civic affairs for 40 years. After he retired as chancellor in 1984, he directed the office of university studies.

Robinson is survived by his wife, Katherine Palmer Robinson, and two daughters. Funeral arrangements are not complete.

Hunting Laws

RALEIGH (AP) — Severe drought conditions in prime duck nesting areas of the United States and Canada may force tighter restrictions on North Carolina's waterfowl hunting this fall.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has notified the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission that the federal guidelines on migratory bird hunting regulations for 1988-89 may include changes in season lengths and bag limits.

Waterfowl experts with the commission's Division of Wildlife Management expect to have preliminary guidelines on these restrictions when they hold public waterfowl meetings in August in each of the state's nine wildlife districts.

Plant Fire

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The cause of an early morning fire that destroyed part of an abandoned Gastonia textile mill remains under investigation, authorities say.

The 12:50 a.m. fire Saturday began in a storage area of the Dunn Mill, part of the former Clara-Dunn-Armstrong textile operation that began in Gastonia in the 1920s.

It was the second recent fire to hit a trio of mills Kimbrell and Parkdale purchased in April 1985 from Gurney Industries Inc., the company that operated the plants until they shut down in 1981.

The Armstrong Mill, which was demolished, was partially burned when a construction worker's blowtorch accidentally ignited a pile of combustible materials in April. A Gastonia Fire Department spokesman said the Dunn fire apparently wasn't related to that blaze.

Grocer Killed

FRANKLINTON, N.C. (AP) — A Franklinton grocer who was found in his burning store over the weekend was beaten and shot before he was set on fire, officials said Sunday.

The body of R. Leo Moore was found in the stock room by officials who were called after his daughter, Lisa Moore, arrived at the store about 4:45 p.m. Saturday and found it locked.

Dr. John Butts, chief state medical examiner, said an autopsy conducted Sunday indicated that Moore was probably dead when he was set on fire.

Moore operated the grocery for about 25 years, and his father operated it before him since the early 1940s.

Fire Death

GREENSBORO (AP) — A retired Burlington house painter was killed and his mother was seriously injured when an early morning fire swept through their house Sunday, officials say.

Clarence Lee Scott, 63, died in the 1:30 a.m. blaze. His mother, Maggie Dorsett Scott, 85, who lived with him, was injured and taken to North Carolina Memorial Hospital's burn center. She was listed in serious condition Sunday night.

Mrs. Scott's great-grandson, whom authorities did not identify but said is between 3 and 4 years old, escaped injury.

Diving Death

WILMINGTON (AP) — A man was killed in a scuba diving accident Sunday afternoon off Wrightsville Beach, but officials said they are not sure how the accident happened.

The man, whose name had not been released at the request of his family, was scuba diving with friends at a shipwreck site near Wrightsville Beach around 12:30 p.m., said New Hanover County Sheriff's Deputy Ben Smith. The man's friends had no indication that something was wrong until he surfaced and was not moving, Smith said.

"The only thing we know for sure is he surfaced and they checked on him and performed CPR," Smith said.

Forest Fire

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Fire officials said a 100-acre fire in Alamance County that had been burning for two days was nearly under control Sunday.

Alamance County Fire Marshal Drew Sharpe said the fire was surrounded by firebreaks except for one quarter-mile stretch. A firebreak is an area scraped bare of anything that can burn.

Earlier Sunday, the fire had threatened towers on Cane Mountain that support transmitters for the Alamance County Sheriff's Department, county fire communications, cellular mobile telephones and WRDG-TV.

Two Rescued

WEAVERVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Rescue workers scoured the woodlands of north Weaverville with search dogs early Sunday for a missing man and a boy before finding them unharmed shortly after daybreak.

Elmer Raines, 55, and Shawn Gibbs, 15, both of Wooten Cove, were reported missing at 1 a.m. Sunday, according to Doug Sims of the Weaverville Volunteer Fire Department.

The two had entered the woods behind their homes about 8 p.m. in search of five cows that had disappeared, Sims said.

"When they got to the top of the mountain and it became dark, they got disoriented," Sims said. "They just sat down when they realized it was dark to wait for daylight."

Construction

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Good weather has put construction ahead of schedule on Interstate 40 between Chapel Hill and I-85, officials say.

A 7.5-mile stretch of the final 11.9-mile Chapel Hill-to-Hillsborough segment will open early, probably by Sept. 1, said Leonard Sanderson, construction engineer with the state Department of Transportation.

Sanderson said the 7.5 miles would complete the interstate from Chapel Hill-Durham Boulevard to New Hope Church Road.

The completion deadline for the remaining 4.4 miles to Hillsborough is Nov. 15, but that segment could be done early, too.

Legislators Seeking More Donations From Lobbyists

RALEIGH (AP) — Although many state lawmakers say they don't like to ask lobbyists for contributions because of a possible appearance of impropriety, they are increasingly doing so because of spiralling campaign costs, officials say.

And that doesn't leave the lobbyists happy, either.

"I've never seen anything like it. It's getting worse and worse," said V.B. "Hawk" Johnson, a lobbyist for Phillip Morris. "You talk to any lobbyist. ... They're absolutely beleaguered."

"I'm convinced (I've had) $50,000 to $60,000 in requests (to contribute) this one year," Johnson said.

Some lawmakers say they could appear beholden to special interests if they accept contributions from lobbyists.

"(I) definitely believe that when somebody gives a candidate a substantial amount of money, the recipient is indebted," said state Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, an 11-term senator who traditionally raises and spends nothing for his political campaigns.

While outright contributions are shunned to avoid the appearance of influence-buying, more and more lobbyists say they're working off their obligations by selling tickets to lawmakers' fund-raisers, and sometimes buying them.

"Every time I turn around, somebody's got me selling tickets to a fund-raiser," said Zeb Alley, whose task it was last week to hawk 20 tickets — at $100 apiece — to a fund-raiser for Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

The siege may reflect the increasing cost of political campaigns in North Carolina. In 1986, state legislators raised $2.4 million in campaign funds — 58 percent more than in 1984.

Likewise, competing interests are drawing more and more registered lobbyists to legislative sessions. This year, there are 826, or more than twice the number counted 10 years ago.

The sheer number may make funds ripe for the picking from the lobbyists' corporate political action committees.

"It isn't direct, overt pressure," said Roger Bone, a former lawmaker who lobbies for the Tobacco Institute and other groups. "But there are certain things you know you need to do, (tickets) that you need to buy and others you don't have to worry about."

Among candidates who have held fund-raisers in Raleigh this summer are Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan; Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood; Sen. Franklin Block, D-New Hanover; and Jim Long, the state Insurance Commissioner.

The N.C. Legislative Forum, a group that raises money for Republican lawmakers, also held a fund-raiser.

Traffic Accidents Kill 14

By The Associated Press
Fourteen people have died so far this July 4th holiday weekend, including four passengers in a car that hit a tractor-trailer in Buncombe County, the State Highway Patrol said today.

Grady James Sharpe, 64, of Leicester, his son, Larry Joe Sharpe, 37, of Asheville, and Paul Gance Lusk, 76, and his wife, Luia Bell Gill Lusk, 49, both of Leicester, were passengers in a car that turned into the path of a tractor-trailer on a rural road just outside Weaverville at 11:25 a.m. Saturday.

In Iredell County, Joe Jack Barkley Jr., 15, and 9-year-old David Scott Barkley, both of Harmony, were killed at 8:45 p.m. Saturday when a motorcycle that Joe Barkley was driving crossed the center line and hit a vehicle head-on in his hometown.

Robert Dwayne Pervine, 17, of Bessemer City, died at 12:40 a.m. Sunday when his car ran off N.C. 279 in Gaston County just south of Cramerton, hit a tree and caught fire, pinning him in the vehicle, the patrol said.

Also Sunday morning, Terry Allen Harrington, 35, of Littleton, was killed when he drove his car at high speed off a rural Halifax County road and hit a tree about 4 miles east of his hometown.

George Wayne Holbrook, 24, of Oxford was killed last Saturday night when the car he was driving struck a tree off a Granville County rural road and overturned, throwing him from the vehicle. The accident occurred about 4 1/2 miles southwest of Oxford, troopers said.

Carolyn M. Ragland, 32, of the Wake County community of Newhill, was walking nude along a Sanford street Friday night when she was hit by a truck and killed, Trooper W.M. Myers said. No charges were filed.

In Greensboro, a 63-year-old man died after he was run over by a train about 8 p.m. Friday. Police had not released the name of the man, who apparently fell into the path of the train near Greensboro Coliseum.

Frankie Lynn Saunders, 19, of Troy, died at about 5 a.m. Saturday when the car he was driving in Mon-gomery County ran off a rural road and hit a tree about 3 miles south of Troy, troopers said.

Jeffrey Lynn White, 25, of Statesville, died at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. He was passing several vehicles on his motorcycle, and struck a pickup truck that was turning into a driveway on U.S. 70 about 4 miles west of Salisbury.

Robbie W. Truesdale, 48, of Gastonia, was killed at about 4:30 p.m. Saturday when her car ran off a state road 5 miles north of Henderson in Vance County, hit a ditch, went airborne and struck several trees.

Since Jan. 1, 685 people have died on North Carolina roads, compared to 724 at the same time last year, the highway patrol said.

Israel To Close Arab Schools

JERUSALEM (AP) — Hundreds of Arab students threw rocks at soldiers and blocked a main road in the occupied West Bank town of Bethlehem today. The army responded with tear gas and rubber bullets.

The army said it will close all Palestinian schools in the West Bank for three days starting Tuesday in an effort to limit student participation in the nearly seven-month Arab uprising.

In Jerusalem, police strengthened their forces after a riot in the walled Old City on Sunday in which 15 Palestinians and several Israeli police officers were injured. The protest began over an Israeli archaeological dig near a site holy to Moslems and Jews.

The disturbances were among the most violent since Dec. 8, when Palestinians began their uprising against Israel's 21-year occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. At least 215 Palestinians and four Israelis have died in the violence.

Israeli officials view Arab schools as major centers of the uprising. So in February, the army closed about 1,200 schools in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in a move affecting about 475,000 students.

Schools in Gaza have been operating on and off since, but 800 West Bank schools with 120,000 students stayed closed until the army reopened them in a three-stage operation ending June 6.

Brig. Gen. Shaikha Erez, head of Israel's military administration in the West Bank, said reopening the schools had not quieted the students.

"Instead of studies, there are disturbances," he said, adding that he hoped the army decision would "bring home to students and parents that the current level of disturbances is unacceptable."

Erez said the closing was timed to coincide with a Palestine Liberation Organization call to rename all Arab schools on Tuesday, giving them more Palestinian, nationalistic names.

In Bethlehem, five miles south of Jerusalem, hundreds of students demonstrated on the main road today, hurling stones at troops who responded with tear gas and rubber bullets.

Officials at Beit Jalla Hospital said they treated dozens of students for tear gas inhalation. The army said it was checking the reports.

Arafat's Loyalists Hold Off Dissidents

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Yasser Arafat's guerrillas today held off Syrian-backed PLO dissidents seeking to storm the Arafat loyalists' last Beirut stronghold behind a fierce barrage of rocket and mortar fire.

Police said at least eight people were killed and 26 wounded in six hours of fierce fighting for the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp that erupted at dawn.

That raised to at least 135 killed and 553 wounded the known casualty toll since fighting broke out May 1 between Col. Saeed Mousa's dissident Fatah-Uprising faction and Arafat's Fatah group.

Today's fighting ended a week-long lull in the battle between the rival factions for control of Beirut's two remaining Palestinian refugee camps.

Mousa's men overran the nearby Chatilla camp June 27 and had been expected to move on Bourj el-Barajneh.

Police said 20 rounds a minute were exploding today in the sprawling shantytown on Beirut's southern outskirts and that the fighting forced the closing of the airport highway that runs parallel to the camp's western edge.

Airport officials said flight schedules were not affected. Travelers reached the airport by sidestreets.

Black smoke billowed from Bourj el-Barajneh as Mousa's gunners, deployed in Syrian-controlled hills overlooking Beirut, pounded the camp with 120mm and 160mm mortars, rockets, and 106mm recoilless guns, police reported.

They said Arafat's loyalists responded with 62mm mortars.

Soviets Forgiving Afghan Deserters

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced today it would grant an amnesty to any of its troops who deserted their units in Afghanistan during the nation's eight-year involvement in the war there.

Prosecutor General A.Y. Sukharev told a news conference in Moscow the amnesty was being offered to about 200 Soviet soldiers who either deserted or became separated from their units during the war.

The Soviet Union began pulling its forces out of Afghanistan on May 15 under accords signed in Geneva, and units still in Afghanistan awaiting withdrawal are not taking part in offensive operations.

Sukharev said any soldier who returns to the Soviet Union "will enjoy all political, social and all other rights guaranteed by Soviet law."

Asked specifically if the amnesty applied to deserters, he said it would apply to all servicemen who became victims of "extreme conditions" in Afghanistan and that "from the standpoint of humanism, an amnesty will be applied to them."

The Soviet Union has listed 312 soldiers missing in action in Afghanistan.

Sukharev said authorities have determined that about one third of that number died and that perhaps 200 remain on the territory of neighboring Pakistan. Many of those may be prisoners of rebel units that have operated with Pakistani aid.

Sukharev said some soldiers are believed to be in the United States, Canada or Western Europe. He gave no indication how many.

The Soviet Union intervened in Afghanistan in 1979.

Explosion On Chinese Train Kills 5

BEIJING (AP) — An explosion and fire on a passenger train in central China killed five people and injured 20, an official report said today.

The cause of last Friday's blast was not yet known, the English-language China Daily said. Eleven of the injured were reported in serious condition.

The explosion occurred in a hard-seat carriage — the kind in which most Chinese travel because it is cheaper — about eight minutes after the train left Anyang.

At-Home Graduates May Need A Push Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — After graduation from college, many young people find themselves back at home with their parents. But if grown children stay too long without goals parents may have to send them packing, suggests a psychology professor at The Catholic University of America here.

Despite stresses accompanying a move home, most graduates adjust to the real world and leave the family fold before conflict becomes too great, says James E. Youniss, a specialist in changing family relationships.

But, he adds, even the pressures of living with parents and desire for independence aren't enough to push some young adults out of the nest. Parents may have to give their children the push they need.

"I've known graduates who stayed home for months. They became dependent on their parents. They were afraid to get into the game," Youniss said. "The longer this situation lasts, the lower the graduates' self-esteem becomes. They are caught in a downward spiral of depression that makes it difficult to act."

Life after college represents the great unknown to most graduates, he points out. It's the first time in their lives when they don't know what to expect and can't follow a simple path.

"It's not that they don't want to work," he said. "Most get jobs, but find them boring or beneath their abilities. At college these young people had ample opportunities to socialize. In a work environment, they may find themselves with older people and also learn they are competing for raises and promotions and practicing 'office politics' with employees their own age."

Today's economy makes it difficult for new grads to set up housekeeping, Youniss notes. While entry-level jobs in engineering and computer science pay well, jobs in many fields do not. Fledgling social workers may find their financial straits more difficult if they compare themselves with well-paid classmates.

And many students go through college without a clear idea of what they want to do after graduation. These people have particular difficulty finding a satisfactory first job, he explains.

While the process of decision and action is trying for graduates, it is trying for parents as well, Youniss says.

"Most parents want to help their children get a start," he said. "Parents may have a positive attitude when the graduate moves home. But after four years of having a child at home only during school vacations or not at all, the parents' lifestyle has changed."

Many times little things such as eating habits and late hours a graduate has developed during college cause conflicts, Youniss said. A child's lack of concrete goals may be confusing for parents whose lives followed a simple progression of college, job, marriage and family.

Teachers Learn A Lesson

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a parent who had attended an open house at her daughter's school where an English teacher had posted all the students' names and their grades for public viewing.

You were correct to say that it was improper as well as cruel, but did you know that it also violates federal law?

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, commonly known as the Buckley Amendment (giving credit to its author), forbids educational institutions at any level from releasing any information about any student without written permission. (The exception is for the release of certain "directory" information. Most states have similar laws in addition.)

I find that most teachers and many administrators are not aware of the provisions of this important statute, and do not realize that they should not discuss students with anyone who does not have a right to information according to the law, or without written permission of the parent (or the student if he or she is old enough). — NANCY HABLUTZEL, Ph.D., J.D., CHICAGO

DEAR DR. HABLUTZEL: Add my name to the list of those who were not aware of the abovementioned statute. Thank you for educating me and countless others. Teachers, take a lesson.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter about original works of art given by the artist to friends who stick them away in a closet never to be seen again?

Dear Abby

I happen to be an artist, and a fairly good one. I've given some of my paintings as gifts, and if I go to the home of someone to whom I've given a painting and I don't see it displayed anywhere, here's how I handle it: I ask if I may "borrow" my painting for an "art show." (I even offer to pick it up.)

Then I keep it "indefinitely." Of course, should I be asked to return it, I would, but so far, nobody has asked.

— PRIDEFUL ARTIST IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR ARTIST: My mail has been running 2-to-1 in favor of artists saying they would not be offended if the recipient asked if the painting could be exchanged for one that would be more appropriate for their decor.

Almost all artists said that rather than have their work hidden in a closet, they would prefer to have it returned.

Few people realize that an original painting — valuable or not — is part of the artist's divine inspiration and represents time and talent (be it ever so modest), and should be respected as such.

Miss Wilson, Mr. Morgan Marry

ANDERSON, S.C. — Amanda Fairall Wilson and Daniel George Morgan were united in marriage Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Grace Episcopal Church. The Rev. Robert E. BURGREN performed the double-ring ceremony.

Douglas Stow, organist, presented a program of wedding music.

Parents of the bridal couple are Nancy Edelen Wilson of Greenville, N.C., George Warren Wilson of Anderson, S.C., and Mr. and Mrs. George Allen Morgan of Sandy Springs, S.C.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of dupioni silk, designed with portrait neckline, trimmed with alencon lace embroidered in seed pearls, basque bodice and bouffant skirt ending in a court train. Her veil of French silk illusion was attached to a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white tea roses and Queen Anne's lace entwined with ivy.

Nancy Harrison Wilson of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Thomas Ayto of Sandy Springs, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Darren Whitfield, and Mrs. Randall Mann, both of Anderson. The attendants wore formal-length gowns of jewel green moire taffeta styled with basque bodice with off-shoulder ruffled sleeves. They carried garden bouquets of lilies, sweetpeas and ivy.

The flower girls were Victoria Harrison Moody of Charleston, S.C., and Lisa Richey of Anderson, S.C., cousins of the bride and bridegroom. They wore dresses of off-white moire taffeta and carried baskets of rose petals.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. The ushers were Thomas Ayto of Sandy Springs, Benjamin Norwood, and Joseph Wheeler, both of Anderson.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlor.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

After a wedding trip the couple will reside in Anderson.

Monument

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham man says the Triangle needs its own identity, and he has suggested building a $35 million, 700-foot-high stainless steel monument that would be a "Gateway to the South."

A. David Friebel, a freelance graphic designer, wants to build a triangle in the Research Triangle Park.

Friebel, 39, who moved to Durham from Philadelphia three years ago, said the 19,159-ton triangular monument would give the area an identity similar to the St. Louis Gateway Arch, San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge and New York's Twin Towers.

The Triangle National Memorial Park and Tower would commemorate the South's role in air flight at Kitty Hawk, the NASA space launches in Florida, and advances in communication, Friebel said.

Joining Others Helps Singles Enjoy Travel

By MITCH WEISS
Associated Press Writer

CLYDE, Ohio (AP) — After more than 40 years of teaching, Shirley Skokane looked forward to hitting the open road in her recreation vehicle, but had reservations about traveling alone.

Miss Skokane wanted to travel America's highways and byways, looking for adventure; meeting new people and enjoying her autumn years.

But being single and traveling alone held her back from starting her dream.

A few months ago Miss Skokane learned about Loners of America, a club that offers friendship as well as fun for the single traveler.

Now, Miss Skokane, 62, is a road warrior, crisscrossing Ohio and the nation in search of sun and excitement. And if a little romance comes into the picture, so be it.

"We have a lot of fun," she said. "If there's anybody who likes to camp and is single, but they don't like to go to a campground by themselves, this is the way to go."

Phyllis Sleasman, president of the Fallen Timbers chapter of LOA, which covers northwest Ohio, said there were several recreation vehicle clubs for couples and families, but none for singles.

"Most of the people are over 50 and they enjoy camping and they camp with everything from a tent to a 30-foot Class A vehicle," she said.

"I guess we could have picked a better name, but you don't want to say singles or losers of America. It's just singles who like to camp and enjoy being together."

Loners of America, headquartered in Ellsinore, Mo., is less than a year old. Total membership in the United States and Canada is 900. Ohio has four LOA chapters and Fallen Timbers has about 30 members.

The LOA organizes local and national campouts and rallies, which include games, cookouts, tours and talk — lots of talk, Ms. Sleasman said.

In some cases, caravans are formed by members to travel through an area, state or cross-country. "Some of these people are full-time campers. They've sold their homes and camp in the South in the winter and head North in the summer."

"It's not a dating-type club," she said. But she quickly added that some people have grown close and think of each other as family.

Ms. Sleasman, also a retired teacher, said she has traveled to Arizona and all over Ohio. She said LOA has added spice to her life and that she looks forward to the weekends when she can take off on the road — again.

"It's a great feeling to get on the road and know you have a place to go, a place where you can meet your friends. I think it's terrific," she said.

Miss Skokane echoed Ms. Sleasman, saying the "lonesome highway" is a thing of the past now that she has companions where she goes.

"At least one of the Ohio chapters has an outing each week. There are always things to do.

"We have a nice mix of people, retired doctors, lawyers and factory workers. When you go camping, you're with a group of other single people who all have the same interest. You sit around and do a lot of talking. You can do your own thing too. After a while you get to know everyone and you're a family," she said.

She admits that while romance is not the main reason people join, some members get involved in relationships.

"I haven't met anybody who is looking for a wife. But, I guess, occasionally somebody who wants to get married, does," she said.

Couple Marries In Farmville

FARMVILLE — Betsy Vandiford Letchworth and Linwood Thomas Holloman were united in marriage at 4 p.m. Saturday in the Farmville Presbyterian Church. The Rev. William N. Gordon officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Vandiford of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Thomas Holloman of Farmville.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal-length satin ivory gown featuring a scoop neckline enhanced with re-embroidered alencon lace which flowed down the front bodice and was adorned with pearls and sequins. The sleeves were of bishop style and made of satin with appliques of matching lace, pearls, and sequins. The fitted bodice extended to a full skirt edged in alencon lace flowing to a chapel-length train.

Her bridal bouquet was of ivory and pink roses, mums, ivy and baby's breath.

Mrs. Johnnie Rouse Jr., sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Mike Wainwright of Walstonburg, Rhonda Ring and Michelle Vandiford, nieces of the bride. The attendants wore teal-length gowns of pink satin overlaid with alencon lace. The gowns featured square collars at the bateau neckline and long lace sleeves.

Heather Gayle Gordon of Farmville was flower girl.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Linwood Bruce Holloman, uncle of the bridegroom; Moses Moye Jr. of Raleigh; and Gregory Vandiford, son of the bride. Spencer Letchworth, son of the bride, was ring bearer.

Wedding music was provided by Lynn Chappellear, organist, and Patsy Cannon and Mike Midyette were vocalists.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception, given by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Vandiford, was held in the church fellowship hall. A rehearsal dinner, given by the bridegroom's parents, was held at Riverside Steak Bar.

After a cruise to the Bahamas the couple will reside in Farmville.

The bride is employed at R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and the bridegroom is employed at Burroughs Wellcome.

Couple Celebrates 50th Anniversary

The Rev. and Mrs. Roy O. Williams were honored June 19 at a 50th wedding anniversary reception held in the Gethsemane Pentecostal Holiness Church fellowship hall.

Hosts and hostesses were their sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ormond Williams of Greenville, the Rev. and Mrs. Lindsay Williams of Raleigh, Mr. and Mrs. Terry Williams of Chocowinity, the Rev. and Mrs. Bobby Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. James Williams, all of Grimesland.

Guests were registered by Joy Williams of Raleigh. Gifts were received and displayed by Lynn Williams and Tyanne Williams of Chocowinity and Grimesland. All are granddaughters of the honorees.

Cake was served by Carolyn Moore and Judy Harris of Greenville and Ayden, nieces of the couple. Punch was poured by Sharon Craft and Kathi Vaughan of Greenville and Fayetteville, granddaughters. Mary Louise Jones, Pansy Hardee and Delores Mayo assisted in serving.

The couple was married June 18 in Greenville by the Rev. B.F. Bell.

Mrs. Williams was presented a corsage of yellow roses.

The reception area was decorated with yellow and green.

Reagan Promises Full U.S. Investigation

"combat zone" where Iran itself wages war.

But numerous questions remain about how the mistake occurred, including why the Navy's most sophisticated naval defense system did not distinguish the large Airbus jetliner from Iran's much smaller, U.S.-made F-14 attack fighters.

Crowe said the Aegis defense system "cannot defy the laws of physics" and that "one of the most difficult problems is from a radar blip, particularly from a head-on target, to identify the type of aircraft." He also said the Vincennes' crew had only about four minutes to make a decision after picking up the approaching aircraft.

Members of Congress are scheduled to end their July 4th holiday on Wednesday, with the incident certain to renew debate over the Reagan administration's policy of military deployment in the gulf.

A White House official, asked whether the incident will force a reassessment, responded, "There is no change in policy." He refused to be identified by name.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he would "reserve judgment until receiving further information."

Another member of the committee, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said his initial impression was that U.S. forces acted appropriately, but he added, "I, too, have many unanswered questions."

Democratic presidential nominee-to-be Michael Dukakis, home in Brookline, Mass., said, "Plainly our armed forces have a right to defend themselves when attacked."

He said, however, the downing of the plane is further evidence that "the war between Iran and Iraq must end. We and the international community have a responsibility to stop it."

Dukakis' Republican counterpart, Vice President George Bush, declined to comment Sunday while vacationing at his summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

The Islamic Republic News Agency said the plane was on a routine 150-mile flight between Iran's coastal city of Bandar Abbas and Dubai, located across the Strait of Hormuz in the United Arab Emirates. It said the airliner was hit by two U.S. missiles and that all aboard were presumed dead.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Cyprus, denounced the action as

"new evidence of American crimes and mischiefs."

Crowe acknowledged the incident at a midday Pentagon briefing on Sunday, hours after an erroneous initial Pentagon report that the Vincennes had shot down an Iranian F-14 while skirmishing with Iranian gunboats.

Iran Air flight 655 was destroyed on the second of two days of fighting between Iran and the United States on oil lanes through the Strait of Hormuz, at the mouth of the Persian Gulf. No American casualties were reported in the exchanges.

Reagan, who was informed of the developments while vacationing at his Camp David, Md., retreat, said, "The Defense Department will conduct a full investigation."

While he defended the decision to fire on the airliner, he called the outcome a "terrible human tragedy."

At his briefing, Crowe said the two Standard surface-to-air missiles were fired before the airliner was sighted, but that eyewitnesses did see the craft "disintegrate" in mid-air about six miles from the Vincennes.

Crowe defended the Vincennes' commander, Capt. Will C. Rogers III. He said Rogers believed his ship was in jeopardy and thought the incoming aircraft was an F-14,

Response Mixed

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain said her government deeply regretted the loss of life.

But she added: "We understand that in the course of an engagement following an Iranian attack on the U.S. force, warnings were given to an unidentified aircraft apparently closing with a U.S. warship. We fully accept the right of forces engaged in such hostilities to defend themselves."

She said the incident "underlines the urgent need for an early end to the Iran-Iraq conflict, including an end to all attacks on shipping."

France said nations should work together "to avoid a recurrence of such events and to assure a settlement that could bring peace and stability to this region of the world."

Prime Minister Bob Hawke of Australia today called the disaster a case of mistaken identity and expressed sympathy for the victims and their families.

Japan's Foreign Ministry said, "Japan hopes the incident will not lead to the widening of tensions in the Persian Gulf and appeals again for the necessity of an early peaceful solution to the Iran-Iraq conflict."

Peter van Vliet, spokesman for the Dutch Foreign Ministry, said the shooting was "a very regrettable incident in a complicated situation."

The Libyan official news agency JANA called the downing a "disgraceful terrorist act."

JANA, in a broadcast monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., also called for the withdrawal of all U.S. fleets and military bases outside U.S. territory and territorial waters.

Several British newspapers criticized the U.S. action.

London's Independent said in an editorial that President Reagan "appeared to deny the possibility that the attack had been foolish, overly aggressive, an act of retaliation stemming from recently changed rules of engagement or the result of panic and inexperience."

Threat Always There

The 9,600-ton, San Diego-based warship arrived in the gulf May 27 and has been assigned since then to anti-aircraft surveillance patrol in the southern gulf, at the edge of the Strait of Hormuz.

The ship's Aegis system is a computer-run "phased array" radar system linked to the missile batteries. The ship, designed for fleet air defense, can see vast distances with its radar and conduct dozens of surveillance and firing missions simultaneously.

U.S. officials have said the Vincennes' multiple task capability could ease the burden on other ships serving in the gulf and give the Navy a far more potent weapon that it has had in the waterway.

From the American standpoint, concern about mistakes stems mainly from the experience of the U.S. missile frigate Stark, which lost 37 crew members and nearly sank after it was mistakenly attacked by an Iraqi F-1 Mirage on May 17, 1987.

U.S. officers and sailors say that while they don't dwell on the Stark incident, it is never far from their minds and has led to major changes in shipboard fire and damage control procedures that are practiced on a regular basis.

The U.S. force in the gulf region, known as the Joint Task Force Middle East, is about 29 ships overall, including the carrier Forrestal and its battle group in the Arabian Sea, and some 16 ships usually in the gulf.

The gulf-based Middle East Force, part of the joint task force, has been escorting 11 U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers since July last year. It includes missile cruisers, missile frigates, destroyers, an amphibious landing ship with 400 Marines on board, and six minesweepers.

Commander of both forces, aboard the flagship Coronado based at Bahrain, is Rear Adm. Anthony A. Less.

Author James A. Michener and his wife, Mari, were to be grand marshals in the annual Sitka, Alaska, Fourth of July parade. Michener was greeted Sunday by a brass band as he returned to the southeast Alaskan city, where he wrote much of his latest novel, "Alaska."

More than 2,500 members of the Rainbow Family back-to-nature group gathered in Zavalla, Texas, for the group's 17th annual July Fourth celebration, where they pray for peace, love and harmony.

On Cape Canaveral, Fla., Discovery moved into the glare of spotlights early today on its long-awaited trip to the launch pad, where it is scheduled to begin the first shuttle mission since the Challenger disaster of Jan. 28, 1986.

"What more fitting present can we make to our country than this on the day of its birthday," said astronaut Hilmers, one of the five crew members who will fly Discovery in a launch scheduled for early September.

Independence Day revelers in parts of drought-stricken Tennessee may find their fireworks in the courtroom if they insist on violating local bans, officials said.

In Greater Nashville's Davidson County, "anyone who starts a fire because they were lighting off fireworks will be held responsible and prosecuted," said Paul Usselton, the city's deputy police chief.

Drought-triggered bans on fireworks were also in effect in Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, North Dakota, Kentucky, California and elsewhere.

California fire officials said there was evidence an 870-acre brushfire burning early today near Yosemite National Park may have been caused by illegal fireworks.

Independence, Mo., devised a novel way of celebrating during the drought, replacing fireworks with a laser light show.

In Chickamauga Park near Chattanooga, Tenn., history buffs presented a holiday weekend Civil War encampment. Memories of the Civil War also were rekindled Sunday at Gettysburg, Pa., where a flame atop the Eternal Light Peace Memorial burst skyward for the first time in 15 years.

More than 20,000 people witnessed the relighting of the granite and limestone memorial first ignited 50 years ago in memory of those who fought and died in the Battle of Gettysburg. It was extinguished during the energy crisis.

In Hamburg, N.Y., a race between a buffalo named Harvey Wallbanger and three harness racing horses entertained about 8,000 people at Buffalo Raceway. Harvey notched his 14th win in 17 races against horses, covering the 80-yard course in 8 3/5 seconds.

BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake

Bankruptcy does NOT wipe your Credit Slate clean and give you a "Fresh Start".

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have trouble getting credit. Creditors seldom grant credit to someone who has filed a Wage Earner Plan Chapter 13 or Chapter 7.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy: If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

So before you make a Bankruptcy decision, THINK, consider the options and don't lock yourself into BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake.

Last minute plans aren't always more difficult. Sometimes, they're impossible.

Isn't it odd that most people never make prearrangement plans? After all most people wouldn't think of waiting until the worst possible time to make plans for anything else. But with funeral and burial prearrangement, all too often, people shirk their responsibility and force their family to make arrangements under great stress. When you think about it, you realize that can be quite unfair.

But there is a simple answer. In the time it takes to go to lunch, you can take care of all your prearrangement needs in a private consultation with us at S.G. Wilkerson and Sons. As funeral directors and cemetarians with over 50 years of experience, we can help you make things easier. Call us to arrange a consultation.

Braves Avoid Shutout Record

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

Montreal's John Dopson came up one out short of his first major league shutout — and a place in the record books.

The Montreal right-hander lost what would have been a history-making 14-hit shutout Sunday on Dion James' two-out, two-run single in the top of the ninth. Andy McGaffigan relieved and struck out Dale Murphy to end the game as the Expos won 9-2.

"It's a shame that I couldn't finish the game but I just ran out of gas," Dopson said. "I started feeling tired in the seventh, but I thought I had enough to get myself through."

If Dopson had retired James, he would have tied the major-league record for the most hits allowed in a shutout. Larry Cheney in 1913 and Milt Gaston in 1928 both pitched 14-hitters.

"That's a shame, it would have been nice to get that record," said Dopson, who had a 7-0 lead after three innings. "Of course, you can try to get in the books in games when you get that many runs."

Elsewhere, it was New York 5, Houston 0; Cincinnati 3, Philadelphia 2; Chicago 2, Los Angeles 1; St. Louis 5, San Diego 4, and San Francisco 4, Pittsburgh 0.

The Expos did everything possible to help Dopson. They turned three double plays and prevented a run in the bottom of the ninth when right fielder Mitch Webster made a running over-the-shoulder catch on a drive by Ron Gant.

"The guys really did a great job trying to protect the shutout for me," Dopson said.

Dopson, 2-5, walked one and struck out three as he won for the first time since May 18.

"He had real good movement on his fastball, and his control was very sharp," said catcher Mike Fitzgerald, whose three-run double highlighted a six-run third inning. "He started getting tired around the seventh, but he looked like he had enough to finish."

Montreal manager Buck Rodgers gave Dopson every chance to get the shutout.

"If he had given a run up in the eighth, I would have had McGaffigan pitch the ninth," Rodgers said. "As long as he had the shutout, I was going to let him go back out there."

Mets 5, Astros 0
In contrast to Dopson, Sid Fernandez had little trouble with the Astros, allowing only two hits and striking out 12 to hand Nolan Ryan his fifth straight loss.

Fernandez, 5-6, did not allow a hit after the third inning and pitched his first complete game in 33 starts since May 30, 1987. His 12 strikeouts tied the NL high this season as he pitched his third career two-hitter.

The left-hander also scored the game's first run after reaching on an error in the bottom of the third and later singled twice, one of them driving in a run.

Ryan, 5-7, failed for the seventh time in a bid to record his 100th victory with Houston. Ryan, who accomplished the feat with California, was trying to become the seventh pitcher to win 100 games with two teams.

The Astros have been shut out in each of Ryan's last three starts, including back-to-back two-hitters.

Reds 3, Phillies 2
Danny Jackson pitched a three-hitter to beat Philadelphia for the third time this season and Eric Davis doubled in the go-ahead run for Cincinnati.

Jackson, 9-4, struck out seven, walked two and did not allow a hit after Phil Bradley's two-out double in the fourth. He is tied with New York's Dwight Gooden for the NL lead in complete games with seven.

Jackson also has a pair of two-hitters against the Phillies.

The Reds went ahead in the fourth against Kevin Gross, 8-4, when Paul O'Neill led off with his eighth homer. O'Neill is 3-for-8 lifetime against Gross. All three hits are homers.

Cubs 2, Dodgers 1
Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe combined with two relievers on a seven-hitter and Mark Grace drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning.

Sutcliffe, 7-5, allowed six hits, struck out nine and walked one as he won for the fourth time in five outings since returning from the disabled list June 11.

Pat Perry came in with one out and a runner on first in the eighth and retired the side. Les Lancaster retired the final batter of the game and earned his fourth save.

Giants 4, Pirates 0
Kelly Downs pitched a three-hitter for his third shutout of the season and Kevin Mitchell drove in three runs for San Francisco.

Downs, 7-7, retired the first 13 batters before giving up a one-out single to Darnell Coles in the fifth inning. Downs walked two and struck out four in pitching his fourth complete game.

The only other Pirate hits were a two-out bunt single by starter Mike

Dunne in the sixth and a leadoff single by Sid Bream in the eighth.

Brett Butler led off the first with a walk against Dunne, 5-7, and later scored on Mitchell's sacrifice fly. Mitchell added a two-run single in the top of the seventh, chasing Dunne.

Cardinals 5, Padres 4
Tom Brunansky hit a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning as St. Louis won for only the sixth time in 22 games.

Ozzie Smith singled with one in the ninth off Lance McCullers, 1-5. After Willie McGee struck out, Brunansky hit a 1-2 pitch for his 11th homer of the season and fifth in six games at San Diego.

Todd Worrell, 4-4, got the victory despite allowing a two-run homer to Garry Templeton in the bottom off the eighth.

The Cardinals led 3-2 after seven innings, but John Kruk led off the eighth against Worrell with a single and Templeton followed with his second homer of the season.

Rain Delays Start Of Men's Finale

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The men's championship match between Boris Becker and Stefan Edberg finally resumed at Wimbledon today after a mixture of heavy rain, thunder and drizzle had continued to hold up the climax of the two-week tournament.

After Sunday's virtual wash-out, when only five games were possible, the final was pushed back until 6 a.m. EDT today.

But with no change in the weather, the covers were still on the Centre Court at that time, and there was no immediate indication when the match could resume.

Two hours later, however, after an improvement in the weather, the players came out on court to warm up. A few minutes later, play got under way.

Edberg led 3-2 in the opening set after an early exchange of breaks on Sunday. It was Becker to serve.

Although all 15,500 tickets sold for the final remained valid, there were many empty seats around Centre Court. Many of the fans remained huddled under a variety of multicolored umbrellas.

Alleyways and corridors at the All England Club, normally buzzing with activity, were strangely quiet.

With the weather forecast predicting intermittent showers for the rest of the day, prospects for an uninterrupted completion of the championship match and three other unfinished finals looked bleak.

But the skies, although cloudy, were clear of the immediate threat of rain as the action got under way.

The rain, which spared the first week of the Grand Slam tournament, before turning up regularly for the next six days, hit with a vengeance Sunday and wiped out all but 22 minutes of the event's climax.

Four and a half hours after play had been scheduled to begin, Becker and Edberg pulled out their rackets as the clouds parted and, briefly, the sun shone.

They warmed up, started play, broke each other's service. Then the rain returned and drove the players off with Edberg ahead 3-2.

"This is the day we have always dreaded since we went to the Sunday final," said Chris Gorringe, chief executive of the All England Club. The tournament has ended on a Sunday since 1982.

"We have no fallback like we would have if the final were scheduled for Saturday," Gorringe said.

It was the first time in Wimbledon history that play in the men's final had been spread over two days. It happened to the women's final just once, in 1902.

It was also the first time for 16 years that a Wimbledon singles championship match had not been completed on schedule. The 1972 men's final between Stan Smith and Ilie Nastase never got started, and was put off for 24 hours.

Sunday's rain also pushed back three other finals.

The men's doubles, called off Saturday after 2½ sets, resumed just in time for Americans Ken Flach and Robert Seguso to wrap up the third set against Anders Jarryd and John Fitzgerald. The U.S. Davis Cup pair led 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 1-0.

Only two games of the women's doubles final beat the weather, while the mixed doubles never got started.

Benepe Wins His First PGA Outing

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The newest winner on the PGA Tour, Jim Benepe, is taking a week off to rearrange his life.

"There's so much to do, so many things to decide. It's just now beginning to hit me. I want to talk to my sponsors, my friends, try to plan a schedule," Benepe said Sunday after Peter Jacobsen's last-hole double bogey gifted him with the Western Open title.

"I thought I'd lost it. Then Peter gave it to me," said Benepe, who preceded Jacobsen to the 18th green at Butler National, made a bogey and dropped out of a tie for the lead.

But Jacobsen, with a stroke in hand and needing only a par to win, hit his approach over the green and into the water.

"I was stunned," Jacobsen said.

"If you're over the green on that hole, it's an automatic six," he said. And he was right.

His double bogey made Benepe a one-shot winner in his first start on the PGA Tour.

Benepe, 24, a graduate of nearby Northwestern University, failed on his first try at the Tour's Qualifying School two years ago and got into the tournament on a sponsor's exemption.

He played the Asian Tour, won rookie of the year honors and the British Columbia Open in Canada in 1987 and won the Victoria Open in Australia earlier this season.

"I'd planned to play the European tour this summer and then try the Qualifying School again," said Benepe, a native of Sheridan, Wyo., who is now based in Chicago.

But those plans went out the window with his victory, achieved on a closing round of 70 and a 278 total, 10 under par on the Butler National Golf Club course.

It was worth $162,000 from the total purse of $900,000. More importantly, though, it gave Benepe his PGA Tour playing rights, an exemption through 1990 and eliminated the need for him to go through the Qualifying School.

"I want to plan out a schedule for this country this year," Benepe said. "Right now, I'm scheduled to go to the British Open qualifying, and it's something I'd like to do. I've never played in Europe, never been to Europe. But I'm going to wait a couple of days before I make a decision on that."

"First, I just want to enjoy this a little, be with my friends, just have a good time for a while," he said.

Jacobsen has a different plan. "It's probably the biggest disappointment I've had in golf yet," said Jacobsen, who had a four-shot lead when the final round started and didn't trail until he'd played his sixth shot on the 72nd hole.

"A year ago I didn't know whether I'd be playing golf now," said Jacobsen, who is on the comeback from serious back problems.

"So I guess I shouldn't feel too bad about it. I had a chance to win. I just didn't do it."

"I've just got to gut it out and see if I can come back and win again—maybe this week," Jacobsen said before departing for Williamsburg, Va. and the Anheuser-Busch Classic.

A threat against Jacobsen's life was telephoned to the club house while he was playing the last round, officials of the Western Golf Association said.

Police security was increased and Jacobsen was not told of the threat until he had completed his final round 75 for a 279 total.

Isao Aoki of Japan and Brad Faxon shot 69s and finished two shots behind the winner at 280. Dan Forsman, with a 73, and defending champion D.A. Weibring, with a 71, were next at 281.

Snow Hill Scores Early To Claim Legion Series

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team jumped on Pitt County for seven runs in the first two innings and never trailed as it rolled to a 13-9 victory Sunday night in the rubber game of the best-of-three first round playoff series.

The win, combined with a 4-3 win on Saturday night, advanced Snow Hill to the second round of the playoffs against regular season winner Rocky Mount. For Pitt County, it meant an early end to the playoffs.

Chris West and Anthony Jones each picked up five hits for Post 94, the former driving in four runs. Tommy Eason also drove in four runs with just two hits on the night, but one of them was a three-run homer.

Altogether, Snow Hill collected 19 hits as compared to just 11 for Pitt County.

"I think getting the timely hits was a big thing," Snow Hill Coach Jim Fulghum said. "We got the good hits, especially early. But in this whole series, neither team put the other out of it in any game. Still we got hits up and down the lineup and that helps. Too, we bunched our left-handed hitters together in the lineup and they came through for us."

Fulghum said he thought that both teams were tired at this point in the season. "We just had more depth in our pitching. That was the key."

Both Fulghum and Pitt County Coach Toby Holliday agreed that Pitt's final pitcher, Gary Hodges did a good job in three-plus innings of relief. He gave up six hits, but allowed no runs.

"Snow Hill played real well," Holliday said. "We have no excuses. They hit the ball and took advantage of our mistakes (five errors). They are a fundamentally sound team. We didn't play that bad, but they just hit the ball better."

Pitt was somewhat handicapped by the loss of centerfielder Timmy Moore, who underwent arthroscopic surgery last Monday on his right knee. "It's hard to say how that hurt us," Holliday said. "He's an attribute to our team, and I would have loved to have had him healthy."

The game was over almost before it began as Snow Hill scored four times in the first and three times in the second, chasing starting pitcher Jamie Brewington.

With one out, T.J. Johnson singled to left and stole second, moving to third on a wild pitch. Eason hit a ground-ruled double to center, scoring Johnson with the first run. With two away, West doubled to almost the same spot, scoring Eason. Jones then followed with a single to left, scoring West. Walt McKeel reached on an error and Cedrick Collins walked, loading the bases, and Jones finished off the scoring by stealing home.

In the bottom of the first, Pitt got on the board with one run. Heath Clark walked, moved up on a hit by Tom Moye and scored on Franz Holscher's single.

Snow Hill added three more in the second. George Burnette singled and Johnson, attempting to sacrifice, was safe on an error. Shay Beaman walked and West singled to right, driving in both Burnette and Johnson. Beaman then scored on a hit by Jones for a 7-1 lead.

Snow Hill added one in the fourth as West's single brought in Eason, who had walked. Pitt County scored twice in its half of the inning as Sherwood Wilder singled and scored on David Leisten's double. Leisten scored on another double by Clark.

Snow Hill added three more in the fifth as Eason hit his three-run homer. But Pitt countered with four runs, helped along by a three-run home run by Ty Little, chasing starting pitcher Ritchie Britt. Wilder then singled and scored on a fielder's choice.

At that point, Snow Hill led, 11-7.

Snow Hill added two more in the sixth, while Pitt scored once. Pitt added a final run in the seventh on a homer by Leisten.

In addition to the hitting of West,

Jeers Surprised Martina

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — When Martina Navratilova was growing up in Czechoslovakia and mastering her groundstrokes against a tennis-club wall, a far-off court glowed in her dreams like an emerald.

The Centre Court at Wimbledon was where she longed to be, to display her skills on the grass so suited for her power and timing.

She grew up to dominate that jewel of her dreams, winning more consecutive singles titles than any modern player and matching one of the game's all-time greats with eight singles crowns in all.

But when Navratilova tried to reach the ultimate record, the one that would leave her forever as queen of Wimbledon, her beloved kingdom turned upside down.

Not only did Steffi Graf beat Navratilova 5-7, 6-2, 6-1 Saturday to end the 31-year-old American's remarkable streak of consecutive titles at six, but the crowd, which never embraced Navratilova as it did Chris Evert or Britain's own Virginia Wade, turned ugly, jeering the champ when she was down.

"That was bad; that was so low I couldn't believe it," said Navratilova, who was trying to stop Graf's rampage of nine straight games that turned the match around.

Fans booed and clapped their hands in slow, mocking rhythm as Navratilova stopped the match to wipe raindrops from her eyeglasses.

"I wasn't stalling, I was trying to see," she said. "If I didn't have to wear glasses, I wouldn't need to wipe them."

The crowd reaction made a difficult departure even tougher.

Every time Navratilova had played in a singles championship match at Wimbledon, she had won — 8-0, a mark that would make a baseball pitcher a Cy Young prospect, and one that put Navratilova even with Helen Wills Moody for most Wimbledon singles titles.

No. 9 was the goal that drove Navratilova — "and I want it now," she said early in the tournament. "I don't want to wait until next year."

But Graf had other plans, and, for the first time, Navratilova received the smaller silver plate from the Duchess of Kent.

Graf, now firmly established as the top player in women's tennis, held aloft the bigger, more ornate platter, the one her vanquished foe has so many copies of at home in Texas.

"I could feel what she was feeling. I could feel that joy," Navratilova said. "I was very happy for her."

Graf said Sunday in an interview with German reporters that Navratilova should consider retirement.

"I think the future is going to be tough for her," Graf said. "I don't think she will be able to handle being No. 2 for a long period."

Graf has been No. 1 in the world since last August, but knew as well as anyone that Navratilova was tops at Wimbledon.

"It must have been hard for her to be beaten like this on her court," she said.

Navratilova said she would be back next year, "if my body holds up," in pursuit of that ninth title.

For now, she said, it's a break from tennis and a trip to a secluded beach.

to "float in the ocean for a while."

And Navratilova said that, if things don't work out, she would be satisfied with the records she has established since leaving behind that tennis club — and that wall — back in Prague.

As Navratilova put it, "Eight ain't bad."

Memory Fails New Champion

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Somebody someday will write Steffi Graf's memoirs — if the 19-year-old tennis whiz can remember.

Graf was asked what caused the turnaround that led to her 5-7, 6-2, 6-1 victory over Martina Navratilova in the women's singles championship at Wimbledon.

"I don't remember," the blonde West German said.

What did Navratilova say to her after the match?

"I don't remember."
What did the Duchess of Kent say to her at the presentation of the championship plate?

"I don't remember."
It sounded like a Senate hearing.

Remember this — Steffi Graf is the best women's tennis player in the world and should continue to be for a long time.

"She is a special player," said Navratilova, the dominant player of the decade who had won six straight Wimbledon titles and was shooting for a ninth overall in the last great grasscourt tournament in the world.

Graf's victory — a dominating one despite losing the first set — kept her on track to become the first woman to win the Grand Slam since Margaret Court in 1970.

Her chances of completing the slam in September in the U.S. Open on a hard court are excellent. She won the Australian Open on a hard court and the French Open on clay.

She is half of the Deutschland Duo with 20-year-old Boris Becker, who was going for the men's championship today. His final against Stefan Edberg of Sweden was delayed by rain for several hours Sunday, then postponed, with Edberg leading 3-2.

Graf and Becker both play power games, but Graf is more likely to be a dominant player, at least over a longer period, because her game is more well-rounded than Becker's. Graf also benefits from the shallower talent pool in women's tennis.

Graf's brilliance at Wimbledon and the dominant play of Becker through the semifinals underscored the importance of youth in world-class competitions.

Five days before Graf beat Navratilova, 22-year-old Mike Tyson knocked out 31-year-old Michael Spinks in 91 seconds in defense of the undisputed world heavyweight championship.

Asked if she saw any comparisons between her career and that of Tyson, Graf thought for a moment, then said: "But I have no thought of retiring."

It was a reference to Tyson's announcement that he would not fight again because he doesn't want to expose his family to public criticism — although it didn't seem to bother him when he climbed into the ring to beat up Spinks.

Most boxing observers feel Tyson's announcement is connected with his desire — and those of his wife, Robin Givens, and mother-in-law, Ruth Roper — to get out of contracts with his manager, Bill Cayton.

Fighting is what Tyson does and what he loves, and he will fight at least once before Graf is 20 next June 14. By then, Graf should be the winner of the Grand Slam.
She will remember.

Arena Football Better Than None For Bennett

DURHAM (AP) — It's the stuff that dreams are made of. Imagine, passing for seven touchdowns and running for an eighth in one game.

Former Duke quarterback Ben Bennett, who had been written off by almost everyone who knew anything about football, accomplished that feat recently.

OK, so it was in Arena Football, which features 50-yard fields and eight-man offenses. It was better — much better — than nothing for Bennett, who now stars on the Chicago Bruisers.

"When (Bruisers' coach) Perry Moss drafted me, everybody told him he was nuts," Bennett told the Durham Morning Herald. "But most of the people in this league don't know me. They'd never seen me play. The only thing they had to go on was what they'd heard from other people, which was a bunch of crap."

"He told me he was going to give me the opportunity to play and that he would back me up no matter how slowly I started," Bennett said. "Luckily, it didn't take long."

For the first time since he left Duke in 1984 as the all-time NCAA passing leader, Bennett is enjoying success on the football field. Not so long ago, he seemed destined for a life in broadcasting or business. Football, which he considered his life's calling, seemed to have been taken away forever.

Then along came Arena Football. It began a few months ago with a phone call from Mouse Davis, the former head coach of the USFL's Houston Gamblers, who invited Bennett to the Arena Football League tryout camp.

After two weeks of practice, all the players in the camp were drafted by the league's six teams. Bennett was selected by the Bruisers and has been on a joyride ever since.

The team, which recently was 9-0, is assured of a first-place regular season finish with a couple of weeks remaining.

Bennett has been the catalyst. He has twice been named the league's player of the week and enters Friday's game against New England with 148 completions in 269 pass attempts for 1,928 yards and 41 touchdowns.

All of this from a quarterback who flopped with the USFL's Jacksonville Bulls and with the Atlanta Falcons, Houston Oilers, Dallas Cowboys and Cincinnati Bengals of the NFL. He wasn't even able to cut it last season as a replacement player during the NFL strike.

"I hurt my chances in Atlanta by being late for meetings and late for practice on a couple of occasions," Bennett says. "You just don't do that in the NFL. You get yourself a reputation in a hurry."

Nor do many rookies get away with the brashness Bennett has been known to display and the active social pace he keeps.

"I guess you could say I've had some personality conflicts with some coaches," Bennett said. "Everywhere I've been I know I've done well enough to be on the team. The only place I've been where I thought somebody was clearly better than me was Atlanta when Steve Bartkowski was there. When I was in Houston, I was as good as anybody there."

"I guess my lifestyle had some bearing. But, the thing is, you're only on this earth for a short time. I don't want to go to the grave saying, 'I wish I would have.'"

"When that attitude affects your play is one thing, but if it doesn't, it shouldn't matter. In my opinion, the player that kicks the most butt on the field is the player that should start. Unfortunately, not a lot of coaches share that opinion. Fortunately, Perry Moss is one."

Moss has opened a door for Bennett that could lead to another shot at the NFL. Bennett says the Chicago Bears are interested in signing him to a free agent contract despite the fact that they already have an abundance of quarterbacks.

"If that works out, it would be fine," Bennett said. "But a few things would have to happen first before I'd give it a try. You don't just go in and say, 'Look, here I am, let's play.' They would have to give me some kind of vote of confidence. Once we're done winning the (Arena) championship, I'll look into it some more."

Smith May Fight Again

LILLINGTON (AP) — Former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion James "Bonecrusher" Smith has begun training for a late-July fight to be promoted by Don King.

Smith lost his title to Mike Tyson in March 1987 and was the loser in a controversial split decision to Adilson Rodrigues in South America later last year. He turned to politics, leading first primary balloting in the county commissioners race in Harnett County before being defeated in a runoff by incumbent Bill Shaw.

"I just want to win a fight," Smith told a reporter for The News and Observer of Raleigh at his training camp in western Harnett County. "I've lost my last two fights in the ring, and I lost the campaign."

Smith was seated at ringside, courtesy of King, at Tyson's 91-second knockout of Michael Spinks last Monday in Atlantic City, N.J.

"King said if I wanted a fight, he'd get me a fight," Smith said.

Smith is managed by Alan Kornberg and Don King's son, Carl. Don King has put together cards in California and Canada, according to Smith, who expects to be notified of his opponent and fight location this week.

The Shaw University graduate is one of four fighters to go the distance with Tyson, and his objective in coming back is a return bout with the young slugger.

"My intention is to knock a few guys out and get a rematch with Tyson," he said.

Snow Hill...

Jones and Eason, Johnson picked up three hits and Burnette had two for Snow Hill.

Moye, Leisten and Wilder each had two hits for Pitt.

On Saturday night, Snow Hill rallied for 4-3 victory to even the series at one game each.

Pitt County took the lead with two runs in the third while Snow Hill got one in the bottom of the third. Each team then added another run. Pitt in the fifth and Snow Hill in the sixth, leaving Pitt with a 3-2 lead.

But in the seventh, Snow Hill rallied for two and the win. Collins singled and was sacrificed up. Then, after a second out, Johnson singled, putting runners at first and third.

Eason then hit a pop fly behind second and Clark went back, seemingly making the catch with his back to the infield. But after taking a couple of steps, he collided with the rightfielder and the ball was knocked loose. The umpire called Eason safe, and both Collins and Johnson, off on the hit, scored, giving Snow Hill a 4-3 lead which it held.

Johnson was the only player on either team with two hits.

Pitt had ample opportunity to blow the game open, but failed to capitalize on its chances, leaving 13 men stranded in the contest.

AL Relievers Fail To Hold On

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Late-inning flops are rare for Dennis Eckersley, Jeff Reardon and Lee Smith, three of baseball's top relief specialists, but they're getting to be a habit with Cecilio Guante.

On a Sunday when Oakland's Eckersley, Minnesota's Reardon and Boston's Smith all blew save opportunities, Guante served up another late-inning home run that spelled disaster for the New York Yankees.

Ex-Yankee Dan Pasqua added to Guante's gopher-ball collection when he hit a two-run homer into Comiskey Park's upper right-field stands with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning, giving the Chicago White Sox a dramatic 4-3 victory.

On May 13, Guante surrendered a game-winning two-run homer to California's Brian Downing with two out in the ninth inning. On June 20, Detroit's Tom Brookens homered with one out in the bottom of the 10th for a 2-1 win. The next night, Detroit's Alan Trammell, the only batter Guante faced, hit a grand slam with two out in the ninth to cap a six-run rally in a 7-6 victory.

Guante also yielded a two-run, game-tying eighth-inning homer to Baltimore's Eddie Murray on June 12, and was nipped for game-winning ninth-inning singles by Chicago's Gary Redus on Friday night and Texas' Scott Fletcher on May 7.

"We need another lefty in this bullpen," said Manager Lou Piniella, who had to leave the right-handed Guante in because Dave Righetti had a tender shoulder. "We can't wait any longer. They have five left-handed hitters in a row and we can't bring in a lefty. And all of them are capable of hitting the ball out of the park."

Elsewhere, Eckersley gave up the tying run in the ninth inning but Oakland, which got three homers from Jose Canseco, outlasted Toronto 9-8 on Mark McGwire's homer in the 16th. Reardon failed to protect a one-run lead in the eighth inning and walked home the winning run as Milwaukee edged Minnesota 4-3 and Smith yielded a game-tying double in the seventh inning before Kansas City nipped Boston 3-2 in the eighth.

In other American League games, it was California 10, Detroit 4; Seattle 7, Cleveland 6 and Texas 13, Baltimore 1. White Sox 4, Yankees 3.

After New York took a 3-2 lead in the top of the 10th on Dave Winfield's RBI single, Harold Baines opened the Chicago half of the inning with a walk. One out later, Pasqua hit his ninth home run — the 12th time the Yankees have lost in the opposition's final turn at bat.

"It always feels great to do something against your former team," Pasqua said. "I think everyone wants to do well in that case. I've been waiting for that one all year. It felt great."

Redus hit a two-run double and Bill Long blanked the Yankees on five hits through seven innings. Bobby Thigpen relieved to start the eighth and the Yankees tied the score on Rickey Henderson's double and singles by Don Mattingly, Jack Clark and Winfield.

Athletics 9, Blue Jays 8
Canseco, whose 23 homers lead the major, hit a two-run shot in the first inning and a solo homer in the sixth off Toronto starter Todd Stottlemyre. He gave Oakland an 8-6 with a two-run homer off Tom Henke in the 12th but Toronto tied it when Manny Lee singled and Tony Fernandez homered off Greg Cdaeret. Canseco got a sixth RBI on a groundout.

The Blue Jays tied the game 6-6 against Eckersley with two out in the ninth on a two-base throwing error by third baseman Carney Lansford and a double by Fernandez.

McGwire hit his game-winning homer with one out in the 16th off John Cerutti. Todd Burns, Oakland's sixth pitcher, allowed two hits in 4-2-3 innings for his first major-league victory.

Oakland has a 6½-game lead over Minnesota in the AL West. The A's are 8-0 against Toronto and 32-9 against the AL East.

Oakland used 21 players, including pitcher Gene Nelson as a pinch runner in the 12th. Nelson stole second, the first stolen base by an AL pitcher since the designated hitter rule came into effect in 1973.

Brewers 4, Twins 3

The Twins led 3-2 when Robin Yount singled off Keith Atherton with one out in the Milwaukee eighth and Jeffrey Leonard was hit by a pitch. Reardon, who has 21 saves, relieved and pinch-hitter Darryl Hamilton hit his first pitch for a game-tying double.

One out later, Reardon intentionally walked Billy Jo Robidoux to load the bases. Dale Sveum, another pinch hitter, walked on four pitches to force Leonard home.

Royals 3, Red Sox 2

Boston led 2-1 when a one-out double by George Brett in the seventh inning chased starter Mike Smithson. Smith got the second out, but Kevin Seitzer doubled to tie the score.

With two out in the eighth, Smith walked Jamie Quirk. Kurt Stillwell singled and Willie Wilson singled to score pinch-runner Bill Pecota.

The game was scoreless until the sixth when Bo Jackson homered to give the Royals a 1-0 lead. The Red Sox went ahead 2-1 in the seventh on Todd Benzinger's two-run homer off Mark Gubicza.

Angels 10, Tigers 4

Chili Davis drove in four runs and had one of three homers off Jack Morris in the first three innings. Winner Kirk McCaskill allowed two unearned runs and eight hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Morris was pounded for six runs and seven hits in 2 2-3 innings. The winningest pitcher in the majors in the 1980s has won just four of his last 20 starts at Tiger Stadium, where he is 1-5 with a 9.97 ERA this season.

Bob Boone's solo homer gave the Angels a 2-1 lead in the second inning and they scored four times in the third on successive homers by Davis, a three-run shot, and George Hendrick.

Mariners 7, Indians 6

Mario Diaz drove in three runs and Mike Schooler defused a rally in the eighth inning, retiring all five batters he faced for his third save. Winner Scott Bankhead yielded four runs in six innings, including Ron Kittle's 12th homer.

Jon Perlman relieved Cleveland starter Bud Black to start the sixth with the Indians leading 4-3. But Glenn Wilson and Jim Presley singled, Henry Cotto sacrificed and Wilson scored when Dave Valle grounded out. Diaz put Seattle ahead 5-4 with a single.

The Mariners made it 7-4 in the eighth on Diaz's sacrifice fly and Harold Reynolds' RBI triple.

Rangers 13, Orioles 1
Jose Guzman scattered five hits over eight innings and Bob Brower hit Texas' first grand slam in exactly a year and drove in six runs. Guzman was bidding for his second straight shutout until Joe Orsulak hit his first home run of the season in the eighth.

Texas scored five runs in the second inning and six in the seventh when Brower's grand slam highlighted the Rangers' biggest inning of the season. Brower and Cecil Espy had a two-run double in the second, Geno Petralli homered for the Rangers and Steve Buechele drove in three runs with a single and double.

Sally Little Captures First Tournament In Six Years

COQUITLAM, British Columbia (AP) — After six years of pain and frustration, Sally Little finally has something to celebrate.

"I'd like to buy you all some champagne. This has been a long time coming," Little said after sinking a 25-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Sunday to win the $500,000 du Maurier Classic, the third of the LPGA's four major tournaments.

It was the 15th Tour victory and third major for Little, 36, but her first win in six years.

The South African native, who became an American citizen in August, 1982, underwent knee surgery and an abdominal operation in 1983. When she came back, her putting touch was almost gone and the road back was filled with frustration and setbacks.

"This feels like a new career after six years of hardship," she said. "Now I realize all the hard work was worth it, every minute."

The celebration almost didn't come about.

Little, who took the lead Friday with a second-round 65, had a two-shot lead over England's Laura Davies entering the round, but saw the 24-year-old long-hitting rookie pull even on the 16th hole when Little bunkered her approach shot and took a bogey.

With the $75,000 first prize at stake, Little regained her composure by making a six-foot par putt at 17. Davies also parred and they were tied entering the final hole.

Little hit a straight drive, a solid four-wood approach and calmly dropped a 25-foot putt on a soft green that was soggy from an overnight rain.

Davies had no chance after driving into the right rough and putting her approach in the trap. She made a marvellous save from the bunker to four feet from the pin, but Little's birdie putt ended any thought of a playoff.

"I didn't watch Laura coming down 18," Little said. "I was watching myself, trying to control myself."

"I feel the game is not won on the tee, but by hitting a lot of good shots and putts. I have to do everything well to win. What a feeling. I love majors."

Little's final-round 71 gave her a 72-hole total of 9-under-par 279 on the 6,361-yard, par-72 course. Davies finished with a 2-under 70 for a 280.

Little, who resides in Laguna Beach, Calif., and plays out of Delray Beach, Fla., entered the tournament 54th on the earnings list with $30,115.

Beverly Hills Brings Out Stars For Its 75th Birthday

By LISA WOLFSON
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Amid fanfare rivaling that of the Olympics and Super Bowl, this city gave itself a star-studded 75th birthday party capped with fireworks, music, and a diamond-encrusted cake worth $20 million.
"Happy Birthday, Beverly Hills," said singer Dinah Shore, a 20-year resident who was master of ceremonies Sunday night on a Academy Awards-like stage on the football field of Beverly Hills High School.
"We have the best of everything here, the best schools, the best police department ... the best hotels and the best restaurants," Miss Shore said. "I'm glad I raised my children here."

The 90-minute show featured skits, music and dancing commemorating the city's history. More than 1,000 singers, dancers, actors and non-celebrity residents recalled Beverly Hills' transformation from a lima bean field to 5.6 square miles of some of the world's most expensive property.
Radio personality Casey Kasem led a 75-second countdown to the show's start, which erupted in fireworks and the release of 1,000 balloons, some shaped like silver-and-white birthday candles.

Jose Feliciano sang "America the Beautiful" to the audience of 10,000, and Desi Arnaz Jr. led more than 100 dancers, mariachi musicians and horse riders in a salute to the area's Mexican past.
The city, which draws more tourists than Disneyland, is home to mansions, Rodeo Drive boutiques and more Rolls Royces per capita than London. The average income among its 33,000 residents is $125,000 and its 100 financial institutions have $8 billion in deposits.

Will Rogers Jr., son of the late humorist Will Rogers who was the city's first honorary mayor, told how the battle to incorporate Beverly Hills in 1914 was nearly lost.

He said his father went door to door promising residents an autographed photograph of himself if they voted in favor of independence versus annexation to Los Angeles. Independence won easily.

Gene Barry and Barbara Eden led a dance tribute to the Beverly Hills Hotel that featured waiters, housekeepers and bellhops from the legendary pink-and-green palace on Sunset Boulevard.

The number ended with a parade of stars, including Jimmy Stewart, Robert Stack and Dick Van Patton. Models wearing $20 million worth of jewelry portrayed affluent hotelgoers, disembarking from $5 million worth of antique cars on a 100-foot-long stage.

Motorcycle police escorted an armored truck onstage for the presentation of the official symbol of the celebration: a piece of birthday cake iced with 2,600 white diamonds valued at $20 million.

"Our birthday cake is so special you can only order it by the slice," Miss Shore said.

Earlier, local chefs sliced another 1 1/2-ton, 300-square-foot birthday cake shaped like city hall for 10,000 residents during a day-long celebration in a local park.

Local elementary and high school students, marching bands and cheerleaders performed onstage before a finale of fireworks that lit up the sky, reflecting off the skyscrapers of adjacent Century City.

The show was produced by Radio City Music Hall Productions, which in January staged the Super Bowl XXII halftime show in San Diego. Proceeds were to benefit 11 local charities.

The celebration, which continues for 14 months, will include an ABC network special in January and a grand finale on Labor Day weekend 1989 when the world's top fashion designers and 1,000 models come together in what is billed as the world's largest fashion show.

PBS Documentaries Focus On Elderly

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Two public television documentaries this week give names and faces and unique stories to a part of the population that is often faceless, especially on TV — the elderly.

One of the films is an uplifting fairytale romance, the Academy Award-winning short documentary "Young at Heart," airing Wednesday.

The other is a realistic profile of six elderly women. "Acting Our Age" is half of the two-hour premiere installment Tuesday night of "P.O.V.," standing for "point of view," a new documentary series on PBS.

The film is by Michal Aviad, an Israeli filmmaker who decided to examine the effects of aging, both physically and psychologically, on a half-dozen thoughtful and intelligent women coping with different lifestyles — married, divorced and widowed, some lonely, some not.

"There's nobody that's young that's not going to get old, unless they die," says Enola Maxwell, 66, one of the women Ms. Aviad profiles.

Ms. Aviad allows her subjects to speak for themselves; as a result they are portrayed sympathetically but realistically.

Mrs. Maxwell is surrounded by an extended family, but Irja Friend, 74, is struggling with loneliness. "The older I get, the fewer chances I have, and the ones that I had I rejected. It's painful not to be wanted, and I found that you just simply have to do without. No one wants you for a spouse or a mate or a lover."

Not the case for the adoring couple profiled in "Young at Heart," Wednesday on PBS, which won this year's Academy Award as best short-subject documentary.

It is a bald-faced love story with a happy ending. Louis Gotthelf, 85, and Reva Shwayder, 84, two artists — he paints portraits, she paints flowers she grows in her garden — found that being old doesn't mean an end to romance.

The film was made by Sue Marx, Gotthelf's daughter, and Pamela Conn.

Gotthelf and Mrs. Shwayder met when they went on a painting tour of England and were seated next to each other on the plane. They talked all the way. Once they arrived, it sounded like something of a twist on "A Room with a View."

Louis had a large room with lovely scenery out the window. Mrs. Shwayder was stuck with closet-like accommodations. She showed up at his door with her luggage, and the rest was history.

They decided to live together, because as Mrs. Shwayder says, "When you're young you should get married. But when you're old, what difference does it make?"

The film is captivating in its simplicity. Gotthelf and Mrs. Shwayder are two wise, funny people whose bodies might be old, but whose minds are young and open.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY July 5

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Get small marketing tasks out of the way in the morning so that after lunch you can take advantage of personal opportunities. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be persistent in attempting to solve a problem with a romantic tie. EMPLOY the capable hands and advice of friends. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be careful in handling an outside affair this morning. Work on soothing a nervous friend. COOPERATE with both your co-workers and the boss. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A decision that you have been avoiding finally demands attention. Keep your career in mind while addressing it. LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Get mundane matters out of the way early in order to make room for a more interesting project. Be tactful toward the advances of a new acquaintance. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Make sure that a colleague knows your intentions for a joint project. Pay close attention to public affairs. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Make sure that those who have been loyal know that you appreciate it. Finish all work that you have started. Focus on obligation today. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Make your entertainment appointments early, then follow through on regular duties. Listen carefully to the ideas of a fellow worker. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Show your devotion to kin today by working extra hard at home and taking your mate out somewhere special this evening. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Handle as many messages as possible this morning, so you can give some much needed attention to home affairs later on. Be happy. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Morning provides the best opportunity to settle business, and to collect. Visit a new acquaintance this evening, but square business first. PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Stop procrastinating on fulfillment of promises. You will need a larger income in the future. Try to look into new enterprises. (c)1988, The McNaught Syndicate Inc.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠AQ74 ♥J8 ♦A87 ♣A654 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass ? What action do you take? A.—While you do have 15 prime points, your hand contains no fillers. (As a matter of fact, it would be better for a suit contract than no trump.) Even if partner has conservatively rebid one no trump with 10 or 11 points, game would be doubtful. Pass. Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠Q92 ♥Q10873 ♦8762 ♣5 Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond? A.—In terms of point count you do not have enough to act (don't add 2 points for a singleton in partner's suit). However, it is seldom wise to pass partner's minor-suit opening when you have a fair five-card major, so we would stretch a point or two and respond one heart. Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠KQ1052 ♥AJ32 ♦95 ♣82 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♣ Dbl ? What action do you take? A.—Redouble to tell partner you have a good hand. Your best result could come from a penalty double of the opponents should they land in a major-suit contract. If they happen to alight in diamonds, a subsequent spade bid by you will give partner a fair picture of your hand. Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠93 ♥KQ87 ♦A954 ♣Q103 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♥ Dbl ?

What action do you take? A.—As before, you show a strong hand by redoubling. The fact that you have a fit for partner's suit is no deterrent—you intend jump raising hearts at your next turn. Any immediate raise of hearts would be preemptive, and could result in missing a game. Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠J93 ♥K85 ♦72 ♣A8763 The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1 ♦ Dbl ? What action do you take? A.—You have a smattering of points and a balanced hand. That is precisely the message you can transmit to partner by bidding one no trump. Note that it is the same bid you would have made had there been no interference from the enemy. Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠AKQ76 ♥KQ9 ♦K3 ♣K102 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass ? What action do you take? A.—Pass, but with a great deal of confidence. Partner's jump to game is preemptive, so he denies two aces. Therefore, there is no need to jeopardize your contract by making any sort of slam probe. How They Voted WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on a major roll call votes June 10-17.

HOUSE
PAY RAISE — The House adopted, 230 for and 170 against, an amendment preventing members of Congress and other top U.S. officials from receiving a four percent cost-of-living raise next January.

The amendment blocks the raise for officials earning at least $73,500 while permitting it for all other civilian and military workers. It was attached to a fiscal 1989 Treasury-Postal appropriations bill (HR 4775) that was later sent to the Senate.

Members voting yes wanted to deny a proposed four percent pay raise for lawmakers and other high federal officials.

Voting yes: Tim Valentine, D-2, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Walter Jones, D-1, Martin Lancaster, D-3, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8.

Not voting: none.

RANDOM DRUG TESTING — By a vote of 377 for and 27 against, the House endorsed random federal testing of airline pilots, train operators, truckers and other key transportation employees for duty and alcohol abuse.

Members voting yes endorsed random drug and alcohol testing of key transportation employees.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Voting no: none.

Not voting: none.

UNITED NATIONS FUNDING — By a vote of 180 for and 222 against, the House refused to lower the United States' contribution to the United Nations budget from about $486 million to $434.5 million.

Members voting yes favored cutting American support of the U.N.

Voting yes: Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, McMillan.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: Ballenger.

SENATE
DEATH PENALTY — By a vote of 65 for and 29 against, the Senate passed and sent to the House a bill (S 2455) permitting federal courts to order the execution of persons convicted of drug-related killings.

Senators voting yes favored the federal death penalty for drug-related killings.

N.C. Terry Sanford, D, voted no. Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH BUDGET — By a vote of 78 for and 18 against, the Senate passed and sent to conference with the House a legislative branch budget of $1.77 billion for fiscal 1989, an increase of more than one percent over the comparable 1988 appropriation.

Senators voting yes favored the legislative branch appropriations bill.

N.C. Sanford voted yes. Helms voted no.

WELFARE REFORM — By a vote of 41 for and 54 against, the Senate refused to exclude "workfare" from pending welfare reform legislation (HR 1720). This added to the bill a requirement that one parent of two-parent welfare families work at least 16 hours weekly in a government or community service job.

The Senate then sent the bill to conference with the House (on a 93-3 vote with Helms, Humphrey and Proxmire voting no, Biden, Durenberger, Hecht and McClure not voting, and all other senators voting yes).

Senators voting yes were opposed to adding limited "workfare" to the welfare reform bill.

Sanford voted yes. Helms voted no.

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending June 24.

HOUSE

TO CUT SPACE PROGRAM — By a vote of 166 for and 256 against, the House rejected an amendment to transfer $400 million from space program research and development to domestic programs including those for housing, the homeless, veterans and urban development action grants (UDAGs).

The bill was sent to the Senate.

Members voting yes wanted to shift $400 million from the NASA budget to domestic programs.

Voting yes: Martin Lancaster, D-3, Howard Coble, R-6.

Voting no: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.

Not voting: none.

FAIR HOUSING — The House rejected, 116 for and 289 against, an amendment excluding families with children under 18 as a class to be protected by the Fair Housing Act.

The bill (HR 1158) remained in debate.

Members voting yes wanted to strip pending fair housing legislation of special protection for families with children under 18.

Voting yes: Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.

Voting no: Walter Jones Valentine,

Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: none.

DEFENSE BILL — By a vote of 360 for and 53 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 4781) appropriating $282.6 billion for the Department of Defense in fiscal 1989.

Members voting yes supported the fiscal 1989 defense appropriations bill.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Voting not: none.

Not voting: none.

SENATE
GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS — The Senate failed, 54 for and 42 against, to reach the three-fifths majority it needed to end a filibuster against legislation designating parts of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park a federal wilderness area.

This shelved the bill (HR 1495) adding environmental protection to the park.

At issue was how the government should meet its 45-year-old promise to build a road in Swain County, N.C., to compensate the area for land it flooded for a hydroelectric project.

Advocates of the wilderness bill said the road, giving access to ancestral gravesites, would destroy the environment. They said the government should settle with the county in cash.

Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who mounted the filibuster, said the government must "live up to a commitment it made in writing during World War II to the people who are now being snookered by this proposed bill..."

Senators voting yes wanted the Senate to consider the Great Smoky Mountains Wilderness Act.

Terry Sanford, D, voted yes. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.
