'A National Priority'

Public Ranks Education Top Issue In Elections

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The public ranks the quality of education as the No. 1 issue in this year's presidential campaign, according to a Gallup Poll being released today.

Asked to rate 13 foreign and domestic policy issues on a scale of 1-5, with 5 representing a "most important issue," 77 percent rated public education at least a 4.

Sixty-six percent of the 2,113 Americans surveyed by telephone between March 31 and April 20 said they would be more likely to support a candidate who favored increased federal aid to public schools.

Those were among the findings of an annual survey of public attitudes about school issues commissioned by the National Education Association, the 1.9 million-member teacher union holding its annual convention here this week.

"The American people understand the need for change. And they clearly indicate, in this poll, that they want to make education a national priority," said NEA executive director Don Cameron, who was to discuss the poll at a news conference today.

In San Francisco on Monday, delegates to the American Federation of Teachers' annual convention re-elected Albert Shanker unopposed to his eighth two-year term as president of the 677,000-member union.

The 3,000 delegates were to end their four-day meeting today after listening to a talk via satellite from Boston by Michael Dukakis, the certain Democratic presidential nominee.

In the poll, drugs ranked second in importance behind education, with 75 percent rating drugs 4 or 5. Sixty-nine percent rated U.S. ability to compete economically and technologically as a critical issue.

The federal deficit and homelessness each were cited as most important by 67 percent, and AIDS by 66 percent.

Twenty-nine percent said "politicians and public officials not doing enough to provide necessary funding" is the chief obstacle to school reform. School administrators who "can't decide on the right way to achieve the goals of reform" were blamed by 25 percent. Only 16 percent blamed teachers or teacher unions.

Seventy-one percent felt schools are having trouble attracting new teachers. But 68 percent opposed lowering standards by allowing college graduates with no formal teacher training to work in public schools.

The poll had a sampling margin of error of plus or minus 2 percentage points.

It was released a day after 8,227 NEA delegates overwhelmingly endorsed NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell's pet proposal that urged the naming of at least one school district per state as "learning laboratories" where teachers or anyone else with good ideas could freely experiment and take the lead in creating better schools.

AFT delegates ratified a similar program of school experimentation, calling for establishment of thousands of "schools within schools" where groups of six or more teachers could try innovative ideas free of bureaucratic meddling.

Both proposals drew immediate criticism from Assistant U.S. Secretary of Education Chester Finn.

"That they are willing to admit that things aren't hunky-dory in schools, that much is good," he said in a telephone interview. "But the bad part is that they seem to suggest that we need to have a vast experiment, as if we didn't know or have the faintest idea of what works in schools."

Fireworks Attract 10,000

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

A clear summer-night sky and comfortable temperatures provided a perfect backdrop Monday as over 10,000 people gathered along the banks of the Tar River to be a part of the Jaycees 16th annual Fourth of July fireworks celebration.

As the skies darkened, people from across Pitt County converged on the downtown Greenville area in cars, pickup trucks and even bicycles to watch the half-hour fireworks program.

"If you weren't there, you really missed something," Jaycees President Michie Faulconer said today. "The fireworks went off just beautiful. It was picture perfect."

Faulconer said a string of 100,000 firecrackers was lit to signal the start of the show and was soon followed by an array of flaming rockets, thundering explosions and, at the show's conclusion, a grand finale which illuminated nearly the entire eastern sky.

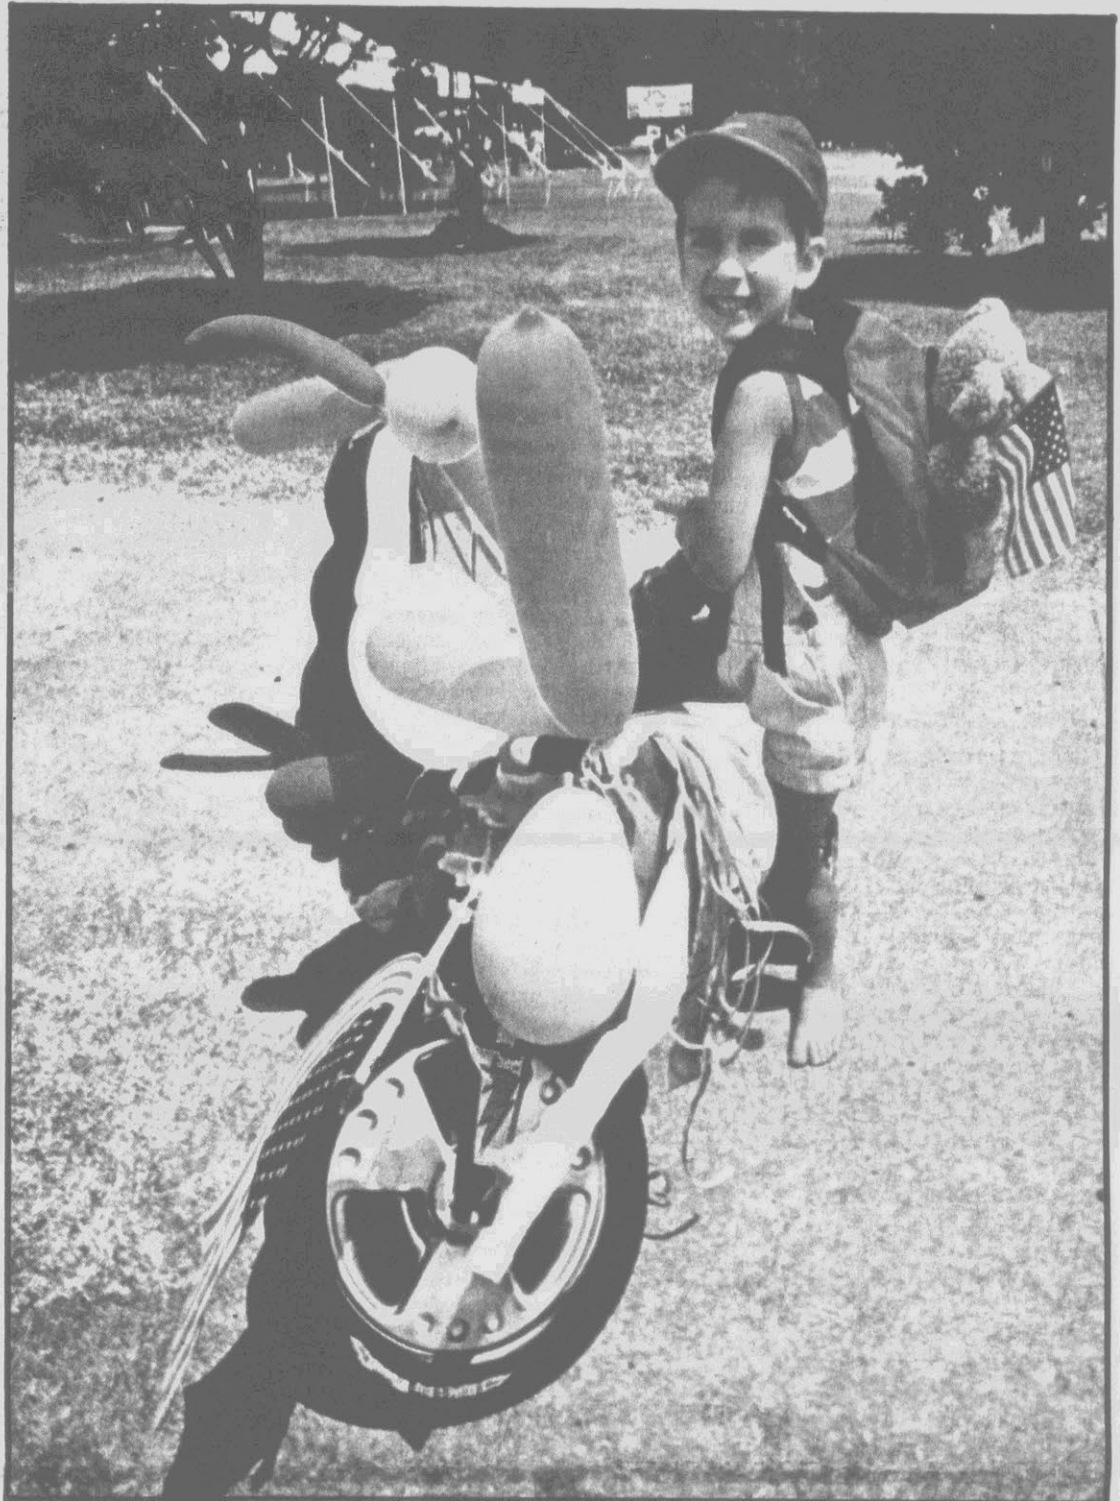

To help accentuate the fireworks display, local FM-radio station WDLX broadcast simultaneously a collection of songs to go along with the simulcast, along with blankets to sit on, and coolers filled with food and beverages.

"It really went off well. I think the crowd really liked it," Faulconer commented.

According to a member of the Greenville Police Department, Monday night's show went without any criminal incidents.

"There were no serious problems other than the traffic problem, and that's normal when you have thousands of cars all trying to get out at the same time," Sergeant K.R. Evans said.

Wright Says U.S. Should Pay To Avoid Retaliation

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright today urged the Reagan administration to apologize directly to Iran and pay reparations for shooting down a passenger jet carrying 290 people as an Iranian official said world condemnation of the United States might ease talk of military retaliation.

Wright, speaking less than 24 hours after President Reagan vowed to keep U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf despite Iran's threats of reprisals, predicted that Capitol Hill would authorize money for reparations.

"... If that would assuage the grief of the other aggrieved party, surely we could do that," he said in London. "Congress would support that if it were requested."

The senior Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, John Warner of Virginia, also said the United States should pay reparations.

In Geneva, meanwhile, Sirous Nasser, the Iranian ambassador to the U.N. mission there, said, "So far as the avenge is concerned, at this stage we really hope there will be public opinion, we will let the public opinion and the political activities to run its course."

"And we hope that the matter can ease itself down through a proper approach to the matter, that is, the condemnation of the act by the United States," Nasser said in an interview on the NBC-TV "Today" show.

Hostages' Fate In Doubt

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The spiritual guide for Iranian-backed guerrillas holding foreign captives in Lebanon was quoted as saying today that the hostages should not suffer because the U.S. Navy shot down an Iranian jetliner.

But an anonymous caller purporting to speak for Islamic Jihad, which holds Americans Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, threatened to kill one of them in revenge for Sunday's attack.

The caller did not elaborate and it was not possible to authenticate the call. Islamic Jihad has said it would authenticate its written statements with photographs of hostages.

"I find no justification for making the hostages account for a matter with which they have no link," Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah said in an interview with the Sohofiya News Agency, a Lebanese newsletter based in Moslem west Beirut.

"There's no link between this subject (the hostages) and the shooting down of the plane."

Fadlallah is spiritual leader of Hezbollah, or Party of God, which is believed to be the umbrella for pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem factions holding most of the 18 foreigners, including nine Americans, missing in Lebanon.

The United States said the USS Vincennes shot down the Iran Air jetliner on Sunday after mistaking it for a jet fighter. Iran said all 290 people aboard were killed.

Iranian leaders called for war with the United States and vowed to seek revenge.

"Islamic Jihad threatens to execute one of the two American hostages it holds by 8 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT)," the Voice of the Nation radio quoted the anonymous caller as saying today. He spoke Arabic.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, is believed made up of Shiites loyal to Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The Sunni Moslem radio, based in west Beirut, quoted the caller as say-

Contra Attack Leaves 12 Dead

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Defense Ministry said today Nicaraguan rebels ambushed a military jeep and a truck carrying civilians, killing 12 people. It was the deadliest attack since a cease-fire pact was signed in March.

Seven civilians and five military men were killed in the raid Monday in Buenas Aires, a village about 100 miles east of Managua, said a military spokeswoman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The spokeswoman said 10 other people — two civilians and eight soldiers — were injured when the U.S.-backed rebels known as Contras attacked the vehicles with an anti-tank mine, rifle fire and rocket-propelled grenades.

Contra spokesman Jorge Rosales said he did not have any information on the attack but added: "Our units have instructions not to attack but to defend themselves. I am seriously concerned about this campaign to create incidents to justify whatever action against our units."

Rosales noted that Defense Minister Humberto Ortega threatened the Contra leaders if they failed to sign a treaty during the last round of talks in June and said the latest report "reflects those threats."

It was the deadliest attack since the leftist Sandinistas and the rebels agreed March 23 to seek a negotiated settlement to the war. More than 26,000 people have died since the insurgency began in 1981.

The government and the rebels have reported sporadic violations of the truce, and a series of talks failed to advance the agreement. No new talks were scheduled.

The Sandinistas came to power in 1979 after a war that deposed President Anastasio Somoza.

Singers Harmonize After Half Century

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The year was 1929, and Cleveland Young was not yet in his teens when he and three young friends first heard the gospel harmonies of the black cappella group, the Golden Gate Quartet.

"We wanted to be like them so we started getting together to sing," said Young, now 72. "We kept on and kept on until we got pretty good."

Calling themselves the Gospel Christian Singers, the four youngsters — Young, Dave Lyles, Albert Digsby and Will Dunn — began entering talent contests sponsored by area churches.

"We'd win four black ties or four pocket hankies," Young recalled. "That was first prize. There wasn't no money around those days."

The quartet continued singing into the 1940s, until World War II sent them off in different directions. Young, who was the group's leader, moved to Philadelphia when the war was over.

The others remained in North Carolina, where they continued to work on family farms. For nearly 40 years, they never sang together. But when Young retired from a chemical firm in 1979, he returned to Charlotte.

"I was in bed one night when I began thinking about the old group," he said. "I called around and found all the old boys had retired too."

Young asked each of his boyhood pals if they wanted to reunite.

"We started right off where we left off 40 years ago," he said in an interview during a short rehearsal break at his Charlotte home. "The only thing that was different was our voices were a little weaker. But they came back."

"We all sang with different groups over the years, but there's nothing like singing with your friends," he said.

Lyles, who traded off on lead and alto with Young, recently died. His place has been taken by another boyhood pal, Bud Daniel McMillan. Digsby sings baritone and Dunn bass.

The group sings in tight four-part harmonies, in the cappella gospel style of the 1920s and 1930s, when Charlotte was a center for recording black gospel quartets.

"It was music that had roots deep in traditional hymns, the call-and-response work songs of the cotton fields, and the four-part harmony that travelling 'shape note' singing teachers brought to country church choirs," said Tom Hanchett, who produced the album. "During the 1920s and 1930s, in a handful of centers scattered across the South, these influences came together with jazz to form a swinging new style of unaccompanied four-man singing."

The Gospel Christian Singers now perform as often as five times a week in both Carolinas, Virginia and Georgia. They recently cut an album for Global Village Music of New York City.

Much to the Gospel Christian Singers' delight, modern audiences have been warmly receptive to the group's unique, upbeat sound. They were a big hit at last fall's Jazz-Charlotte festival.

Bakker Supporters Jam Two Receptions

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL founders Jim and Tammy Bakker say about 2,400 followers turned out over the Fourth of July weekend at Kevin's House to support the couple trying to win back the crumbling ministry.

The receptions on Sunday and Monday afternoons marked the second anniversary of the house that was originally planned as a home for handicapped children.

The Bakkers, who left the ministry amid a sex-and-money scandal last year, used the occasions to thank supporters and to say they're on their way back to the ministry.

Johnny Owens, of Orangeburg, snapped pictures of the Bakkers Monday, then asked them to autograph his book about the Heritage USA ministry. His wife, Ann, sported a "Welcome Back Jim and Tammy to PTL" button.

"I'd like to see them come back," said the 40-year-old Owens. He said he started watching the Bakkers on television while recovering from a 1985 heart attack.

"They deserve to give it a go," he said.

During a prayer service, a tearful Tammy Bakker suggested that the Bakkers and many PTL followers would benefit from lessons learned during the sex and money scandal that hurled the couple into the limelight and out of PTL in March 1987.

"I think we'll all be better because of this," she said.

Jim Bakker has said he has a $100 million line of credit to buy the Fort Mill-based ministry out of bankruptcy. He has yet to release details of that buyout plan.

The bankruptcy trustee has said he is not interested in having the Bakkers take over the ministry and Heritage USA theme park.

Bakker estimated that on Monday the couple had greeted 2,400 people over the two afternoons. He called the turnout "one of the greatest miracles I've ever seen.... I've never seen a support such as we had today."

S.C. Town Recalls The Night A B-25 Dropped Its Bombs

By WILL MOREDOCK
The (Columbia) State

SALUDA, S.C. (AP) — It was an October night in 1944 when Florence and J.D. Oxner said good night to their teen-age sons and the family went to bed.

"We went to bed with the chickens back then," Mrs. Oxner said. The war was on and people conserved electricity by turning out the lights early and getting a good night's sleep.

Other than that, World War II seemed far away to the Oxners and their neighbors on the Saluda Traffic Circle. Sure, the B-25 bombers flew from West Columbia Army Air Base, passing over the traffic circle in the rural eastern portion of Saluda County, on their training flights to drop test bombs on the islands of Lake Murray.

That was how Col. Jimmy Doolittle and his squadron trained for their historic mission to bomb Tokyo in 1942.

The war was in the newspapers and on the radio every day. And everybody knew at least one young man in uniform. But Saluda County seemed quiet and safe and far from the front.

At about 11 p.m. on that memorable night, Mrs. Oxner was awakened by a strange whistling noise, then an explosion in her back yard. She heard gravel rolling off the tin roof. Other shrill, whistling sounds were coming from the sky.

"Get up and get dressed," she said, jumping out of bed and running to her sons' room.

"What for?" 19-year-old Bruce asked.

"Enemy planes are bombing the house," she shouted.

The war, it seemed, had come to Saluda County.

The family dressed and ran from their house, where they heard other explosions in the neighborhood. Across S.C. 391, two more bombs fell in the yard of the Oxners' neighbor, Magistrate Callie Bedenbaugh.

Another neighbor, W.P. Lindler, rushed up to the Oxners and, pointing to the amber street lamps illuminating the traffic circle, shouted, "Turn out those lights or I'll shoot them out!"

Oxner, a former Highway Department section foreman, had a key to the switch box and quickly turned them out. In the meantime, other neighbors had sought refuge in a large concrete culvert.

The bombing lasted only a few minutes and when it was over, the people of the traffic circle climbed out of their hiding places and dusted themselves off. Seventeen bombs were counted around the neighborhood.

It didn't take long to figure out what had happened. It wasn't Japanese or German bombs that had fallen that night, but dummy bombs from a lone B-25 that had passed on its way to the bombing sites on Lake Murray.

Apparently, the pilot mistook the lights of the traffic circle for the lighting that marked the bombing range.

The traffic circle residents were lucky that night. The bombs that fell around them were loaded with only a small explosive and white powder. On impact, the charge would spread the powder, marking the hit for the crew overhead to observe how well it did. If the bombs that fell on the traffic circle had been live, the mishap might have been a tragedy.

Thousands of live bombs were dropped on Lake Murray islands: Bombing Range Island is still cratered from the blasts, and scuba divers collect shrapnel from those explosions of nearly half a century ago.

After the bombing of the Saluda Traffic Circle, an officer from Fort Jackson went to the area to observe the damage and conduct an official investigation. But he never made a report.

A few weeks after the first bombing, another B-25 strayed off course and dropped its bombs on the traffic circle community.

Hearing

NEW BERN (AP) — A hearing for two Robeson County Indians held without bond since their arrest Feb. 1 on hostage-taking charges will be held today in New Bern and both are expected to be released following the outcome, a defense attorney says.

A ruling last week by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., found that the government had violated the Bail Reform Act of 1984. The law allows certain defendants to be held without bond, but a detention hearing must be held within five days. A detention hearing for the Indians was held 16 days after their arrest, attorney William Kunstler said in a telephone interview from New York.

"We tried to get them out today (Monday)," Kunstler said. "We thought Independence Day would be a great day for them to come out."

But the hearing could not be scheduled until 2 p.m. today at the federal courthouse in New Bern because of the holiday, Kunstler said.

Eddie Hatcher, 30, and Timothy Jacobs, 19, are set to go to trial July 11 on federal charges of hostage-taking and manufacturing illegal firearms. The two are charged with holding up to 20 people hostage at The Robesonian newspaper office in Lumberton in Robeson County, near the South Carolina border.

Surrender

DURHAM (AP) — A 29-year-old Durham man, armed with several weapons, surrendered peacefully to police early today after barricading himself and his girlfriend in a house for nearly eight hours, authorities said.

"It started out as a boyfriend and girlfriend fight," said Detective John Dermott of the Durham Police Department. "He had been drinking and they got into some words."

More than a dozen police officers waited into the night for Richard Lee Hunt, armed with two 9mm pistols and one .22-caliber rifle, to surrender at about 1 a.m. today, authorities said.

Dermott said Hunt was charged with first-degree kidnapping and discharging a firearm in the city. He and was being held in the Durham County Jail under $500,000 bond.

Arrested

RALEIGH (AP) — A 20-year-old Raleigh man wanted in connection with the rape of a Raleigh woman last week has been taken into custody in Baltimore, Md., officials say.

Raleigh Police say a man had broken into the woman's home Wednesday. He surprised her when she returned home about 10 p.m., struck her and tied her up with a belt and pantyhose before raping her, police said.

The man took some jewelry before fleeing in the woman's 1988 Chrysler LeBaron convertible shortly before 10:50 p.m. He also took the woman's bank card and withdrew money from an automatic teller machine.

Warrants were drawn for Joe Henry Bryant in connection with the rape, Harrison said. Police determined that Bryant escaped from the Triangle Correction Center in Raleigh June 25.

Canoe Races

WESSER, N.C. (AP) — The Nantahala Outdoor Center will host the 1988 Whitewater Open Canoe National Championships on the Nantahala River Tuesday through Friday, officials said.

Races begin at 8:30 a.m. each day, lasting until early afternoon Thursday and Friday.

The site of dozens of whitewater races, the Nantahala has been the venue for the Open Canoe Nationals in 1979, 1981 and 1984. The river's excellent whitewater and national-class slalom course at Nantahala Falls makes the "Nanty" a whitewater racing natural.

Competition in the nationals is divided into two main categories: downriver and slalom. Within each event are several classes, such as men, women, masters and mixed. Downriver events are scheduled Tuesday and Friday; slalom competition will be held Wednesday and Thursday.

Legislators Hope Adjournment Near

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State lawmakers had hoped to conclude this year's summer session of the General Assembly before Independence Day, but it will be back to work today with several major issues still unresolved.

When it became clear that the House and Senate were far apart on how to spend the remaining $163 million budget installment, they decided to take a long weekend.

"I'm not interested in breakneck speed any more," Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said last Friday.

The committee is scheduled to meet today and could start the process of breaking the logjam by recommending rejection a Senate plan to spend $163 million on capital projects and one-time grants. The bill differs in numerous respects with a House version approved earlier.

When the House votes down the Senate bill, as it's virtually certain to do, House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan can appoint a joint conference committee to search for a compromise.

All this could have happened last week. But Watkins delayed action on the Senate bill. Jordan, apparently convinced the House was stalling, complained that the Senate was "at their mercy."

Watkins also dropped hints that the House might adjourn without spending the $163 million. That would kill, among other things, $4.2 million sought by Jordan for grants to local governments to establish day care programs for "latchkey" children.

Also at stake is funding for community colleges, the University of North Carolina system, several environmental programs and dozens of local projects and organizations ranging from libraries to volunteer fire departments.

Jordan, the Senate's presiding officer, clearly wants a bill to pass but said "the world wouldn't end" if one didn't.

The main points of contention are that the Senate wants to spend $24 million on grants and loans to local governments for water and sewer projects and landfills, while the House prefers a smaller amount. The Senate bill also includes money for drought assistance and economic development that the House left out.

The House, meanwhile, allocated $11 million for community colleges and earmarked much of it for specific campuses. The Senate wants to spend less and to spend it according to the priority list drawn up by the community college board. Also, the House wants to spend $7 million to add a seventh floor to a planned Department of Public Education building and $3 million for local "pork barrel" projects.

Other issues that could be dealt with in the final days of the session — which lawmakers hope will end this week — include:

— The gubernatorial veto. A Senate committee last week approved a resolution that would permit the Legislature to consider whether to approve a constitutional amendment giving the governor veto authority.

— Migrant farmworkers. The Senate last week approved a compromise bill that would revise state regulations on treatment of migrants.

Also Sunday morning, Terry Allen Harrington, 35, of Littleton, was killed when he drove his car at high speed off a rural Halifax County road and hit a tree about 4 miles east of his hometown.

Four people were killed Sunday at 4:50 p.m. when two cars hit head-on on a rural road in Chatham County, troopers said. Killed in the accident about 7 1/2 miles north of Siler City were James Gregory Oldham, 21, of Staley; Wallace Wade Bare, 19, of Liberty; Doris Wright Lineberry, 58, and her husband, Acie Odell Lineberry, 62, both of Climax.

Also killed Sunday afternoon was Todd Wilson, 17, of Statesville. Wilson's car ran off the road on Interstate 40 about 6 1/2 miles west of Statesville after he fell asleep, troopers said.

George Wayne Holbrook, 24, of Oxford was killed last Saturday night when the car he was driving struck a tree off a Granville County rural road and overturned, throwing him from the vehicle. The accident occurred about 4 1/2 miles southwest of Oxford, troopers said.

Carolyn M. Ragland, 32, of the Wake County community of Newhill, was walking nude along a Sanford street Friday night when she was hit by a truck and killed, Trooper W.M. Myers said. No charges were filed.

In Greensboro, a 63-year-old man died after he was run over by a train about 8 p.m. Friday. Police had not released the name of the man, who apparently fell into the path of the train near Greensboro Coliseum.

Frankie Lynn Saunders, 19, of Troy, died at about 5 a.m. Saturday when the car he was driving in Montgomery County ran off a rural road and hit a tree about 3 miles south of Troy, troopers said.

Jeffrey Lynn White, 25, of Statesville, died at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. He was passing several vehicles on his motorcycle, and struck a pickup truck that was turning into a driveway on U.S. 70 about 4 miles west of Salisbury.

Robbie W. Truesdale, 48, of Gastonia, was killed at about 4:30 p.m. Saturday when her car ran off a state road 5 miles north of Henderson in Vance County, hit a ditch, went airborne and struck several trees.

Since Jan. 1, 691 people have died on North Carolina roads, compared to 729 at the same time last year, the highway patrol said.

Greensboro Tops In Costs

GREENSBORO (AP) — The cost of living in Greensboro is higher than its neighbors in Raleigh and Charlotte because homes cost more and necessities such as food, clothing and health care are more expensive, a recent report says.

Runzheimer International of Rochester, Wis., calculated how far a dollar will go based on expenses for an average family of four making $50,000 a year, driving two cars and living in a new home. That family's expenses include housing, taxes, transportation, food, clothing and entertainment.

As a standard for comparison, Runzheimer's family in the average U.S. city would get no change back for every $1 spent on those items.

In Greensboro, for instance, 98 cents would buy a dollar's worth of goods in the average city. For every dollar spent in Raleigh, expect to get back between 2 and 3 cents. In Charlotte, change on a dollar will come to 6 cents.

"Greensboro is usually very, very competitive," said Marc Bush, senior economic developer for the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce. "Our cost of living is lower than the national average."

The analysis shows mortgage payments and upkeep on a 2,400-square-foot home in Greensboro cost $19,983 a year. It costs slightly more in Raleigh at $20,163, but significantly less in Charlotte at $17,264.

"What tends to skew Greensboro up is the higher cost of real estate," Bush said. "That's a function of tradition. Land in Greensboro has been controlled by a relatively few hands."

Buying clothes, food, health care, furniture and entertainment for Runzheimer's family of four takes $15,725 in Greensboro. It's $134 less in Raleigh, and $350 cheaper in Charlotte.

Greensboro's taxes — at the time — were estimated at $9,372 a year, a full $525 lower than Charlotte's and $24 higher than Raleigh's.

Living in any of North Carolina's three largest cities, though, is cheaper than in most metro areas in the North and on the West Coast.

In New York, for instance, a dollar's worth of goods costs $1.41, and $1.17 in Los Angeles.

The Southeast traditionally has been less expensive, said Peter Packer, Runzheimer's vice president for communications.

"The most significant thing from this is the great variance in housing costs," Packer said. "If you move to the coast — Boston, Philadelphia, Washington — you'd see housing costs double or triple."

Runzheimer has been estimating cost-of-living expenses since 1963, Packer said. The studies are used by companies considering relocating, plus businesses and organizations trying to lure those companies.

Branding Law Delayed Until 1989

RALEIGH — A consumer protection law passed by the legislature last year, and praised nationwide as a first of its kind, came under fire during the short legislative session by an industry that claims the law is putting it out of business.

The N.C. Automobile Rebuilders Association says the that the 1987 law, which went into effect on January 1, has virtually made it impossible to rebuild and resell damaged automobiles in North Carolina. They say that the law has meant the loss of almost all of North Carolina's auto salvage to neighboring states.

The 1987 law grew out of legitimate consumer protection concerns raised by an auto theft ring in Greensboro, said Don Mason of Kannapolis, president of the rebuilders association. But the legislation, which Mason claims was written with little input from rebuilders, went far beyond what was necessary, Mason said.

The law, as interpreted by the attorney general's office, makes it virtually impossible for rebuilders to gain a clear title on their cars. Without a clear title, Mason said, banks will not lend consumers the money to buy cars.

"The banks can't determine the true value of a car that carries a branded title" he said.

Wade Isaacs, lobbyist for the N.C. Automobile Dealers Association, says the law "is excellent because the public should know what it is buying." If a car gets smashed up and then is put back together, the consumer ought to be told that. The only way to assure that, Isaacs said, is with a brand on the title.

But Mason disagrees. He said that the cars which are rebuilt usually suffer only minimal to moderate damage. They are easily rebuilt and, if the work is performed properly, the cars are as good as new. "Cars are machines, put together from different parts. They can be fixed," he said. It isn't fair to brand a car, and raise consumer concerns about it, when there is nothing wrong with the car, he said.

Isaacs said that the work is often done poorly. "We've had some instances where clipped cars — cars that are clipped together from the front end of one car and the rear end of another — just come apart." Isaacs also said that car dealers are the consumers often stuck with such rebuilt cars because they take them in trade or buy them wholesale for sale as used cars. They have the right to know what they are buying, he said.

Mason said he can understand the right-to-know argument. He can't understand, however, why it is not applied uniformly. Duplicate cars, involved in exactly the same wrecks, can be treated in exactly opposite manners, he said. One car, if kept by the owner and rebuilt by an auto shop, will hold a clear title. The other, sold by the insurance company and rebuilt by Mason, would have its title branded.

So Mason claims that auto dealers are really only trying to eliminate competition with the 1987 law. "It's hard cold economics. It's competition," Mason said. And Isaacs agreed, to a point. "Certainly, if they have to put on the title that it has been rebuilt, then it is going to adversely affect the price," Isaacs said.

Even with their disagreements, the two groups worked together during the closing days of the 1988 session to have enforcement of the 1987 law suspended for one year so that a compromise bill can be written and presented to the 1989 assembly. That bill is likely to spark a major consumer debate next year.

Touring The Evil Empire

LENINGRAD — These are more notes of a man who only spent a week in Russia because he would rather trust than verify what the Soviets are doing.

Traveling first class in the Soviet Union is like traveling fourth class in the Soviet Union.

My tourist bus drew up alongside a jammed city bus in Leningrad, and I saw a man with his nose pressed against the window talking to himself. I asked my guide what the man was saying. The guide shrugged his shoulders and said, "He is probably saying that he hopes his wife stood in line and got some sugar today so he could make vodka in the bathtub when he got home. That way he could forget that he didn't have a bathtub. But knowing his wife, she'll probably buy cucumbers instead, and if you had to eat cucumbers for 345 nights in a row, you would be talking to yourself on a bus, too."

There are certain scenes that stick in your mind when you are traveling. The one that remains most vivid to me took place at Peter the Great's Summer Palace outside of Leningrad, which had been almost completely destroyed during World War II and then rebuilt by the Russians. I was walking through one of the great halls talking to Jim Berry, the cartoonist, and Jim Boren, the professional bureaucrat, and his wife Alice, when a group of tourists angrily went, "Shshshshh." It turned out that they were German and became furious about the noise we were making because it prevented them from hearing their guide relate how the German army had destroyed Peter's palace.

Food still presents a problem for tourists as well as residents in the Soviet Union. There is a suspicion that all menus are decided by a Food Czar in the Kremlin, and that the exact same meal is served to everyone, four hours after the waiter takes the order. There are no chefs left in Russia. There are just dissidents cooking bad meals while waiting to get their exit visas for Brooklyn.

The only tourists I observed who were able to handle the bad food, the heat, the long waits and abuse from hotel employees were little old American ladies in Nike tennis shoes. No matter how many times they were knocked down, they came up off the mat for another round, thus convincing Gorbachev once and for all that America was not a paper tiger.

Why are such large numbers of tourists fighting to get into the Soviet Union? It's part of glasnost. The Evil Empire has opened its doors and all nationalities are dying to see what they have been missing. It turns out it is everything they thought it would be — and less. Because automobile production is down, the Soviet Union now has more alternate parking places than any country in the non-Free World. And the good news is that if you are a tourist, you don't have to worry about spending any money in Russia because there is nothing to buy.

But there are some disappointments. In the old days, the KGB followed all foreign visitors. If you were important enough, they would compromise you with a Russian bimbo, and then take pictures of the two of you with a hidden camera which were later shown in the first-run movie houses in Samarkand.

Now, however, because there are so many tourists in the country, the KGB has thrown in the towel, and the bimbo who picks you up in a bar is just that, and not a sexy agent provocateur of the second greatest secret service in the world.

Each person in our group was allowed to make one request of Soviet officials. "Please," I begged, "don't send America any more Russian taxi drivers — at least not until the ones you sent us already learn how to get from Kennedy Airport to Manhattan."

It was a short visit, but very pleasant. The one question we were constantly asked was, why did Americans like Gorbachev? Our answer was simple: "Because he doesn't look like a Communist."

My last act before leaving Mother Russia was to present a carton of cigarettes to one of my Soviet hosts.

"Thank you," he said. "Don't mention it," I replied. "My government has ordered me to bump off one Russian on every trip."

Be Prepared

Safe Boating Requires Sobriety

If you're planning on drinking while boating, be aware that there are penalties just as there are for operating a vehicle while under the influence.

The North Carolina Wildlife Commission patrols the waters throughout North Carolina and its officers are looking for drinking on board, careless operation of boats and improper registration.

If that sounds like what state troopers do on the highways, that's because it is. The wildlife commission has 215 officers in North Carolina and a part of their jobs is to make the waterways as safe as possible.

Like auto drivers, most boat operators take their responsibilities seriously. It is only the minority who endanger themselves and others.

The need for boating safety is obvious. There are over 240,000 boats registered in the state and another 100,000 out-of-state boats come through state waters annually.

The wildlife officers use sobriety test just as the state troopers do and they can bring charges for operating boats while impaired.

The wildlife officers can also charge boaters with other specific offenses such as careless and reckless operation of a boat.

The bottom line is that boating on such waterways as the Tar and Pamlico can be done safely and with pleasure. It only requires consideration for others and common sense.

North Carolina is blessed with large amounts of coastal waters which are ideal for boating. It should be enjoyed, but with a strong sense of safety. For those who don't abide by the rules there is the possibility of arrest.

Democracy?

Cat Looking After The Canary

The prospect for the wretchedly poor nation of Haiti is only more military rule.

Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy took power in a military coup. Now he says that the army will provide the conditions needed for democracy in Haiti.

That is akin to saying the cat will look after the interest of the canary.

Namphy says it would be impossible to have democratic elections in the present situation. That certainly is true. Namphy took over the civilian administration of President Leslie Manigat and claimed the presidency for himself. That came after Namphy headed a three-man junta for two years. In February power went to Manigat who had been chosen in an election which was rife with violence, boycotted by top candidates and ignored by most of the people.

Namphy ousted Manigat after the new president attempted to remove several army officers by retirement or transfer. Manigat then fired Namphy and put him under house arrest. Following the military coup Namphy was back in power.

Establishing democratic rule in a nation so poor as Haiti is difficult. Given the oppression of poverty some say it is impossible. Even an imperfect democracy is preferable to military dictatorship, however, and someday the people of Haiti may indeed have the opportunity to decide their own destinies.

Open Or Not? It Depends On Party Perspective

RALEIGH (AP) — Several reporters stumbled upon Sens. Kenneth Royall and Aaron Plyler putting together the Senate version of a $163 million budget bill last week.

A couple of years ago, the reporters would have been chased from the room. This time they were invited to sit down. Royall, the often-crusty legislative veteran who once championed secrecy, even shared copies of his working papers with them and deciphered notes he had scrawled in the margins.

The next day, the package Royall and Plyler assembled went before the Senate. Such omnibus budget bills traditionally win approval with no trouble; the only complaints and substantive amendments come from out-numbered Republicans and are brushed aside.

Not this time. Two dozen amendments were tacked on by a Senate that at times resembled an out-of-control truck careening down a hill.

Some of the amendments requested funds for local pet projects, such as $500,000 for a senior center in the district of R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, and $366,000 for a community college championed by R.L. Martin, D-Pitt. Never mind that Senate Democrats had voted in a private caucus to forgo "pork barrel" appropriations in this crucial election year.

Plyler, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, finally managed to shut off debate and bring the bill to a vote. "I almost saw anarchy in there," said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood.

Call it the North Carolina General Assembly's version of glasnost — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's program of opening his society and government.

In fits and starts, the process through which the Legislature enacts the state budget is shedding its veil of secrecy, some observers say. But skeptics question whether there has been genuine reform or only cosmetic change designed to quiet critical reporters and Republicans.

GOP Gov. Jim Martin, one of the sharpest critics of the Democratic leadership's handling of the budget, doesn't think much has changed. "There's so much room for improvement," he said last week.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan insists there is significantly more openness. The proof, he said, is that the process is more unwieldy — at times downright chaotic. That, he said, is the price of what Hipps called "letting the sunshine in."

The focus of criticism about secrecy in past years was the "supersub," the elite, eight-member group of leaders who assembled the budget behind closed doors and rammed it through the Joint Appropriations Committee and the full House and Senate.

This year, the supersub appears to have been put out of business. Its members insist they haven't met.

Instead, Plyler and House Appropriations Committee Chairman Billy Watkins have met separately — and publicly — with co-chairmen of the five joint subcommittees.

But the subcommittee co-chairmen apparently had little involvement in deciding the contents. Plyler and Watkins distributed copies of their proposals and the co-chairmen rubber-stamped them.

Where did the packages come from? Well, Plyler drafted the Senate versions with lots of help from Royall. Watkins put together the House bills.

Watkins and Plyler said they consulted with colleagues as they went along. But in essence, as Watkins bluntly admitted, the supersub has been reduced from eight members to two.

The full supersub may be revived this week. Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey are expected to appoint a joint conference committee to reconcile the widely differing House and Senate plans for spending $163 million on capital projects.

The panel probably will include many of the legislative titans who used to meet privately to craft budget bills. This time, however, they're supposed to meet in public.

To the extent that there are fewer secret meetings, then, the process is more open. But Hipps says true "glasnost" will come only when rank-and-file lawmakers have a greater role in developing the budget.

One might think such involvement already has come in light of last week's amendment spree on the Senate floor, he said. Actually, senators who proposed the amendments did so largely for symbolic reasons.

"We knew that it didn't make any difference" because the package's contents ultimately will be decided by the conference committee, Hipps said. "Everybody was trying to load it up with their pet projects, hoping against all hope that somehow they might survive the next cut."

Watkins and Jordan say it's impractical to expect all 170 legislators to have an equal role in putting together the budget — especially when sensitive House-Senate negotiations are required.

"There's no organization in the world where the final budget isn't put together by a small group of people, from churches on," Watkins said.

Said Jordan: "The question isn't whether a few people have to kind of put it together. The question is whether it's been done in such a way that it's open."

S.C. Farmer Opens Fire On Law Enforcement Unit

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP) — An elderly farmer wearing a helmet and a bulletproof vest opened fire on police and set fire to their headquarters, wounding two and forcing authorities to transfer 140 inmates to state lockups.

"It put us out of business," Orangeburg County Sheriff C.R. Smith said of Monday morning's attack.

Clyde B. Myers of Branchville, shot six times by police, was in fair condition today at Orangeburg-Calhoun Regional Hospital, said a spokeswoman who refused to give her name. Two officers suffered minor gunshot wounds in the fray.

Warrants will be issued charging Myers, 67, with arson and assault and battery with intent to kill, Smith said, adding that the motive for the attack was unknown.

The law enforcement complex, which houses a jail, the sheriff's department and the city police department in this community of 15,000 people 40 miles south of Columbia, suffered serious damage.

Myers, wearing the vest and steel helmet, crashed his old farm truck through gates at the center, entered through the back door and fired a shotgun, Smith said.

"Our officers returned fire," he said.

Myers returned to his truck and got some gasoline. The truck had two 500-gallon tanks, but the sheriff was unsure how much gas they held.

Myers poured gasoline around the gates and set it on fire, barricading himself between the truck and a wall, Smith said.

A 20-minute gunbattle ensued, with three state Highway Patrol troopers helping an unspecified number of officers.

The tanks on the truck ignited, and the building eventually caught fire, Smith said.

"After it burned a few minutes, it got too hot for him," Smith said. "He attempted to come out. ... When he did, he stumbled. That's when our officers rushed him and were able to subdue him."

Myers suffered gunshot wounds to the right hand, right foot, right shoulder, right hand, right groin and left elbow. He also suffered burns to his left hand and back.

Deputy Sheriff Allen Bright, shot in the forearm, and sheriff's Detective Everette LaFrance, shot in a finger on his right hand, were treated at a hospital and released.

After Myers was subdued, firefighters were able to get to the blaze, but not before it destroyed the front office, jail offices and communications room, Smith said. The rest of the building suffered serious smoke damage.

The 140 prisoners in the jail were unharmed, but had to be moved to state Department of Corrections facilities. Law enforcement officers were working out of an office in the county courthouse.

Myers had been involved in property and right-of-way disputes with county officials, Smith said. In December 1985, he refused to leave a county council meeting, chaining himself to a chair with two locks, an ankle brace and a chain.

Fireworks Go Flying 'Any Which Way'

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Faulty wiring triggered an explosion that consumed 20 minutes worth of fireworks in two minutes, forcing the evacuation of tens of thousands of people from a downtown park on Lake Superior, officials said.

"Everything went flying any which way," police officer Kevin McKenna said following the Fourth of July accident Monday night.

The blast sparked several small fires at Bayfront Park. A spectator and two members of the fireworks crew were slightly burned, police said.

The area was barricaded, and police planned to stay through the night as a precaution against any undetonated charges, said Assistant Fire Chief Lou Gerard.

"There were about ten minutes worth of (normal) fireworks, then all of a sudden it seemed like it exploded on the ground," said Chris Maddy of Duluth radio station KDAL.

"Within seconds you could see a fireball that shot 50 feet into the air. It looked like the fireworks in the sky, but they were on the ground.

"There was no panic or anything," he said. "In fact, the Police Department had to urge people to leave. They all stood there saying, 'I can't believe what I just saw.'"

A charge failed to lift one of the fireworks out of its canister, setting off a chain reaction that blew up 20 minutes worth in two minutes, said Guy Gustafson of Arrowhead Inc. of Duluth, which put on the show at Bayfront Park. Gustafson blamed faulty wiring.

Dairies May Face Huge Profit Cut

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If drought keeps driving feed costs up and cow prices down, dairy farmers may see earnings reduced by as much as 70 percent by 1989, according to a study by the National Milk Producers Federation.

Jim Barr, chief executive officer of the federation, said the rising costs of grain — concentrates — are at the heart of the grim outlook.

"At current milk and feed prices, a 15 percent increase in feed costs equates to an effective reduction to the farmer of 50 cents for each 100 pounds of milk marketed," he said in a report sent to members this week.

Spokeswoman Doni Dondero said the federation's analysts computed that there is a potential for a drop in the net cash income of dairy producers of between 50 percent and 70 percent.

For example, she said in a telephone interview, if prices of dairy concentrates rise 30 percent, forage costs go up 10 percent and the market prices of culled cows sent to slaughter decline by 15 percent, net cash income could be around $1.33 per each 100 pounds of milk sold.

Dondero said the figures were projected for a 12-month period, July through June 1989. Income includes proceeds from the sale of animals culled from dairy herds, in addition to milk marketed.

Before the drought send feed costs higher — the Agriculture Department reported its price index for feed grains and hay rose 20 percent last month — the federation had expected dairy net cash income to average $2.51 per hundredweight of milk sold this year.

Still another factor will be government actions to reduce milk price supports again next year, Dondero said.

If feed costs keep rising, market prices of culled cows keep dropping, and the current support of $10.60 per hundredweight is reduced further on Jan. 1, 1989, by 50 cents, net cash income of producers could fall to as low as 99 cents per hundredweight, Dondero said.

Under 1985 farm law, the USDA is required to reduce milk price supports when government purchases are expected to rise above 5 billion pounds of milk equivalent during the year.

Child Care Bill Advances Slowly

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $2.5 billion-a-year child care expansion bill is finally beginning to inch its way through the congressional maze, seven months after it was introduced as the answer to working families' day-care woes.

But the chances of a child care solution emerging from the 100th Congress are dimming, as the end of the session nears with no sign that lawmakers have mustered the political resolve to work out a bipartisan approach.

"I'm not certain there's as much interest in passing a bill as in creating a political issue," said Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, head of a GOP task force on child care.

Some of the dozens of interest groups backing the $2.5 billion Act for Better Child Care, or ABC, are anxious to transform election-year interest and rhetoric into a veto-proof child care bill before Congress adjourns this fall. But others are urging lawmakers to resist election-year compromises.

Given the upcoming election, Tauke said, "the easiest course right now for many members is to coast along, respond favorably to the groups, not offend anyone."

More than 100 child care bills are pending in Congress, reflecting a high level of public concern over day-care availability, quality and cost.

Proposed federal policies range from tax credits for every family with young children, pushed primarily by conservatives, to the ABC bill championed by Democrats and over 100 groups representing children, women, labor, medical personnel and others.

The ABC bill would make money available only to providers that meet minimum national standards on health, safety, staff size and training. Three-quarters of the money would help pay day care expenses for families making under 115 percent of a state's median income. The rest would go for capital improvements, staff training and salaries.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the leading conservative proponent of new federal action, has introduced a bill giving states $250 million to improve or expand child care; $100 million for liability pools; and $25 million for capital improvements. States would have to develop and adopt their own standards.

Democratic sponsors of the ABC bill, backing the American Civil Liberties Union, are rewriting the bill to make sure day-care programs run by religious groups will be eligible for the new federal money. The changes were sought by conservatives and church groups.

But on other points of conflict — mandatory national day-care standards, the relatively high-income families eligible for federal assistance, the wide age range of the children states are permitted to serve (well into the teens) — key Democrats have indicated they are inclined to stand firm.

"I'm not going to compromise the basic principles of the ABC bill," Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., Senate sponsor of the measure, told a group of magazine writers last week.

Republicans maintain any child care bill will need bipartisan backing, whether this year or next, and a consensus is within reach if only the Democrats will deal.

Abortion Debated

DETROIT (AP) — Episcopal delegates to the church's 69th General Convention urged in hearings that abortions be discouraged but that women should retain the right to have them.

Witnesses at a hearing Monday of the Committee on Social and Urban Affairs debated two resolutions that would discourage abortion but keep it legal. They said laws outlawing abortion would only force women to seek out unsafe, unsanitary means of ending pregnancies.

"Many people have forgotten what it was like before legal abortions," said Diane Pollard, a church deputy from New York.

One resolution discourages abortion except in "extreme cases," such as problem pregnancies or in cases of rape. The other would discourage any legislative or other governmental effort to remove women's right to consider abortion.

The legislative resolution "basically restates the position of the General Convention of 1976," said the Rev. Neil G. Lebar of Jacksonville, Fla.

The resolutions were the result of a study ordered in the 1985 general convention.

The committee adjourned for the day without acting on the resolutions. If approved in committee, the resolutions would be sent to the convention's 3,000 delegates for action. The General Convention meets every three years to set policy for the 2.6 million-member church. The convention runs through July 11.

Louisa Rucker, executive director of the National Organization of Episcopalians for Life, opposed the resolution addressing existing law on the right to abortion, saying it violated principles of separation of church and state for the church to take a stand.

But she backed the resolution supporting women who decide on abortion in some cases.

"It encourages and calls on the church to provide help and support for women caught in untimely and unwanted pregnancies," Rucker said. "We acknowledge a legal right for women to have an abortion, but we call on Christians to a higher standard."

Boat Capsizes

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — The Coast Guard searched today for a 5-year-old boy missing from an overloaded boat that capsized in New Bedford Harbor, drowning his baby sister, their mother and another woman, officials said.

Fifteen people were thrown into the water Monday night as the 22-foot boat was returning from a Fourth of July fireworks display, said Coast Guard Petty Officer David Foley.

Survivors said the boat capsized when it apparently hit another boat's wake while making its way through heavy fog, Foley said.

Eleven people were pulled safely from the water, he said.

The boat "was definitely overloaded," said Foley.

Waste Management School Set

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — With society's increased attention on the environmental threat posed by toxic compounds, Tufts University plans to begin the nation's first collegiate program in hazardous waste management.

"We've received a lot of support from industry because there's no other program like this in the country right now," Gene Blake, associate director of Tufts Center for Environmental Management, said in a prepared announcement.

"There's a real need for it," he said.

The interdisciplinary master's degree course to be announced today is designed to educate students on issues related to hazardous waste and will focus on environmental health, science, policy and technology, said school officials.

Representatives of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Audubon Society, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and several engineering consultants and Tufts faculty members will develop the curriculum before classes start next fall.

The EPA has targeted hundreds of sites across the country for cleanup of hazardous materials under its Superfund program.

"We're hearing from government and citizens groups that it's hard to find good people aware of the issues surrounding current policy, technology and research," Blake said.

Linfield C. Brown, chairman of Tufts' civil engineering department, said students will be required to have some background in calculus, chemistry and biology, but the program will focus on risk assessment, management and communication, health effects and environmental management regulations.

Blake said the new venture is designed to do more than just teach students how to clean up hazardous waste sites.

"We want to teach people how to avoid waste problems in the first place," Blake said.

For a final one semester course, all students will be placed in small teams to act as consultants and meet with federal and state officials to develop solutions for existing environmental management or policy problems.

Tufts Department of Urban and Environmental Policy is assisting in development of the new program. Students can complete the program in one year full-time, or in three years on a part-time basis.

Soviet Party Sidesteps Call For Strong President

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party conference approved Mikhail S. Gorbachev's call for an overhaul of the legislature but did not endorse his proposal for a strong presidency, according to a resolution published today.

In his speech last week opening the national conference he had called, Gorbachev said, "The president of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet should be granted sufficiently broad state authority powers."

"Specifically, the president could exercise overall guidance in the drafting of legislation and of major socio-economic programs, decide on the key issues of foreign policy, defense and national security, chair the Defense Council" and name the prime minister, he said.

That would have made the presidency, now a largely ceremonial post, the locus of Soviet power. Most authority now rests with the party general secretary — Gorbachev — and the party's ruling Politburo.

The resolutions adopted by the 5,000 delegates, as published today by Soviet newspapers, were silent on the question of presidential authority.

The resolution on political reform did propose creation of a new elective body, to be known as the Congress of People's Deputies, which would meet annually to set general policy and elect members of a smaller, full-time legislative council, the Supreme Soviet.

The Supreme Soviet now has 1,500 members who meet twice a year to give rubber-stamp approval to party policy.

The resolution also would limit officials to two five-year terms in the same party or government office, eliminating the common practice of what amounts to lifetime tenure for many officials.

The congress also would "elect by secret ballot the president of the Supreme Soviet," the document said. But it was silent on what that officer's duties would be.

Andrei A. Gromyko, the longtime Soviet foreign minister and Politburo member, was elevated to the presidency of the Supreme Soviet by Gorbachev, but he performs the largely ceremonial functions of head of state while Gorbachev wields power as head of the Politburo and the Defense Council.

It was not immediately clear whether the 13-member Politburo had moved to block Gorbachev's plan.

A senior party spokesman told reporters Friday night, just after the conference ended, that the delegates had approved Gorbachev's proposal when they adopted seven resolutions in the final hours of the four-day session.

The spokesman, Central Committee Secretary Alexander Lukyanov, said the party meeting, the first in 47 years, had agreed to the proposal to give the powers Gorbachev requested to the president.

He said the body also approved the general secretary's more controversial plan to have the party leader at every level — local, regional, republic and national — stand for election to head his or her governmental council, or soviet. That would consolidate party and government power in one person, who would have to be elected not only by the party organization but by the lawmakers as well.

Gorbachev did not specifically say the party general secretary should seek the presidency, but Lukyanov said the conference made the recommendation to apply to all levels, setting the stage for Gorbachev to seek election to the new presidency next year.

The texts of the resolutions were not made public until the day after a special meeting of the ruling Politburo, which ordered party and government bodies to act without delay in implementing the conference directives.

The Politburo also said a meeting of the policy-making Central Committee would be held later this month to discuss how to implement the proposed reforms.

Another resolution says every Soviet citizen has an "inalienable right" to any information on public affairs but state and military secrets.

The delegates also said any citizen attacked in the press should have the right to respond in the same newspaper and that the press must not publish "unobjective information injurious to a citizen's honor and dignity."

Another resolution attached "prime importance to improving drastically food supplies to the population." The shortest route to that goal, the conference said, is for bureaucrats to stop meddling in the operations of collective and state farms.

Dissident Cubans Say Thousands Remain In Jails

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — President Fidel Castro has enhanced his image on human rights by releasing hundreds of political prisoners, but dissidents say thousands more remain in jail or are ostracized for opposing the regime.

Communist authorities have nearly halved the dissident population in Cuban prisons since Cardinal John O'Connor of New York asked Castro to release 433 people charged with political crimes, said Bienvenido Avierno, a Foreign Ministry official. O'Connor visited Cuba in April.

Former political prisoners are among the 300 or so Cubans leaving Havana each month aboard charter flights that depart four times a week for Miami.

Asked if the releases benefit the government by letting it purge dissidents, Avierno said, "Sure, we are maintaining these guys."

One dissident here says the government has only become more sophisticated in curbing its domestic opposition.

"Everything is repressive here," Ricardo Bofill, president of the banned Cuban Human Rights Committee, said in a recent interview at his one-room apartment in the Havana suburb of Guanabacoa. "Their tactics have changed. Now they use mobs and press campaigns."

Bofill, a Communist Party member before Castro came to power in 1959, has been jailed several times for speaking out against the government. He has stayed at home for the past four months, saying he fears for his life.

"There are death threats. I have been identified in Cuba as the head of the counterrevolutionaries, the No. 1 enemy," Bofill said, sitting in a rocking chair in his room.

The Communist Party newspaper Granma devoted several pages in April to discrediting Bofill. "He is totally twisted and imbued with double-dealing lies, faking, deception and, especially a monstrous ego and unquenchable thirst for fame and notoriety," it said.

Bofill's group compiles and distributes reports of government abuses. He showed a reporter a handwritten prison pamphlet called "Dawn," which detailed "systematic cruelty."

He said Cuba has 10,000 political prisoners. Amnesty International, the London-based human rights group, put the number at 450 in its 1987 annual report.

The Castro government tolerates Bofill, often citing his criticisms as proof Cuba has freedom of expression.

Avierno flatly denies there are any rights abuses in Cuba: "The people, for the first time in their lives, have the arms. If they didn't like the system they could use them."

Bofill said he does not oppose the government, but rather its tactics: "This is not a fight against the system, it is against an unjust order. The basic rights, the right to life, is not guaranteed."

In Cuba, only state-run news media are allowed to operate and the government decides who can leave the country and who can return.

Bofill displayed his identification card, a booklet resembling a passport, and showed the government stamp that indicates he has applied for permission to leave the country.

He said the stamp identifies him and thousands of others as malcontents.

Roberto Bermudez, 32, a painter, said his opposition to the government has meant he can't exhibit his paintings.

Sebastian Arcos, a former professor of dentistry and ex-political prisoner, said thousands of Cubans depicted as social outcasts are unable to find work.

Cuba's socialist policies mean free and often model health care and education. The government says its provision of these social services constitutes a human right.

"This is a country where we have education, health, a country where drugs, especially hard drugs, are unheard of. No child needs to leave his studies to help his family. Violence is practically unknown. These are human rights," Jose Ramon Fernandez, vice president of the Council of State, said in an interview.

Castro this year permitted the International Red Cross to examine Cuban prisons for the first time. A confidential report is being prepared.

In addition, a United Nations human rights group is expected to inspect the prisons by September.

The United States maintains no formal diplomatic relations with Cuba. But the U.S. Interests Section in Havana receives "thousands upon thousands of letters from Cubans

Shiite Goes On Trial In Hijacking

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A Lebanese Shiite Moslem accused of murder and air piracy in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner to Beirut went on trial today under heavy security.

A clean-shaven Mohammed Ali Hamadi entered the courtroom in a Frankfurt state prison wearing a light blue shirt, no tie and dark blue trousers. He had previously worn a beard.

Almost as soon as the trial began, Chief Judge Heiner Mueckenberger called a brief recess in a dispute over Hamadi's interpreter.

The trial was later adjourned until Thursday.

Hamadi, in his only statements on the first day of the trial, gave his name and asked for a new interpreter and the replacement of one of his defense lawyers. Hamadi said the interpreter was not qualified in his Arabic dialect.

Hamadi said in broken German: "I don't say anything important until we have an interpreter."

Mueckenberger then said: "I'm not going to ask you anything important, just identification. Are you Mohammed Ali Hamadi?"

"Yes," the defendant said loudly before the court recessed to discuss Hamadi's objections to the interpreter.

Present in the courtroom were Richard and Patricia Stethem. Their son Robert, a U.S. Navy diver from Waldorf, Md., was shot and killed during the hijacking ordeal. In addition to Stethem's parents, two brothers and one sister have submitted depositions to the court.

The court also read the names of six other Americans, former hostages aboard the TWA plane who have formally intervened in prosecuting the case, but who were not present today.

The six, who have submitted depositions and have agreed to testify at the trial if called, are Tony D. Watson of Virginia Beach, Va.; Stuart Dahl, of Norfolk, Va.; Clinton Suggs of Norfolk, Va.; Kenneth M. Bowen, Norfolk, Va.; Jeffery J. Ingalls of New Hampshire; and Kurt L. Carlson, of Rockford, Ill.

The first five were Navy divers at the time of the hijacking.

The trial is being held in a specially-built courtroom at the Preungesheim prison in Frankfurt. According to court spokesman Falk Thomas, the courtroom cost $7.5 million to construct.

Seats for 100 journalists and 80 members of the public are separated from the judges, witnesses and defendant by plates of bulletproof glass. The spectators listen through a loudspeaker system.

Four armed men hijacked the TWA plane on June 14, 1985, on a flight from Athens to Rome and forced it to land in Beirut. Thirty-nine Americans were held for 17 days and Robert Stethem was shot to death.

The Frankfurt juvenile court will first look into the vital question of Hamadi's age to determine whether he should be tried as a juvenile, young adult or adult. Under West German law, a juvenile is less than age 18, an adult is age 21 and older, and a young adult is between 18 and 21.

Depending on various rulings on age and maturity questions, Hamadi could face anywhere from 15 years to life in prison if convicted.

Israel Closes West Bank Schools, Arabs Plan Strike

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian uprising leaders called for a general strike in the occupied lands today and the army, in an attempt to stem violence, ordered Arab schools in the West Bank closed for three days.

In Jerusalem on Monday, police arrested five Palestinian schoolgirls who stoned Israeli soldiers in a neighborhood near the walled old city.

The army said it arrested an unspecified number of Arabs in the West Bank who allegedly threw rocks and firebombs at Israeli soldiers and civilians and attacked suspected collaborators.

A military spokesman said the army destroyed the homes of two of the Arabs and sealed those of two others in the village of Sinjil near Ramallah. Early today, the army also demolished two homes of suspected firebombers in Bethlehem, Israeli army radio reported.

Leaflet No. 20, issued two weeks ago, calls on Palestinians in the occupied lands "to observe a general strike on July 5 and boycott all offices of the civil administration."

It said "all institutions and schools not bearing Palestinian names will be renamed on this day."

An Associated Press reporter saw one Bethlehem school already renamed "Intefadeh," Arabic for the uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip against 21 years of Israeli occupation.

The unrest began Dec. 8 and has claimed the lives of 215 Palestinians and four Israelis.

Brig. Gen. Shaikha Erez said the school closing was timed to coincide with the plan to rename the schools.

Diamond Giving Goes Back To Early History

By BILL STIEG
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — History doesn't tell us Mary of Burgundy's reaction when Maximilian of Austria gave her a diamond engagement ring in 1477.

But if a modern-day Max were to slip a similar ring onto the hand of an '80s Mary, the chill might go all the way to her feet.

The stones in the ring presented by Maximilian were somewhat small and dull, by current standards, but that modest ring holds a special place in jewelry history, experts say. It was probably the first diamond engagement ring.

"They don't have that fire to them," says John Loring, design director at Tiffany & Co., whose famed Tiffany setting remains universal nearly 100 years after its development.

A copy of Mary of Burgundy's ring has been on display in a special exhibit, "The Power of Love: Six Centuries of Diamond Betrothal Rings," tracing the history of a girl's best friend.

"This gives you a sense of where it all started," says Benjamin Zucker, gem dealer, author of the book "Gems and Jewels" and primary organizer and supplier of the recent exhibit at Christie's, which continues on a worldwide tour following its close here.

It also shows where it ended up: large, dazzling stones with 58 facets — the "brilliant cut" that most effectively reflects and disperses light.

"In between, the development of cutting is seen, from the dull 'hogback' cut — actually just a polished-down point of the rough stone — to the rose cuts and square cuts of the 18th century.

Settings vary from simple to elaborate, reflecting increases in jewelers' skills as well as the supply of diamonds.

Among the landmarks of love in the exhibit is the heart-shaped engagement ring given to Elizabeth Barrett by Robert Browning.

Prints of centuries-old paintings show the diamonds of old — appearing basically black.

"If Mary of Burgundy and Maximilian could have walked into any New York City jeweler's, they would have been dazzled indeed," said Zucker.

Dazzled because diamonds of their day could not be cut, and so were left in the natural octahedral form, or worn down with diamond dust into the hogback, or table-top, cut.

But they were rare, coming almost exclusively from India, and treasured for their hardness, Zucker and Loring said.

"Diamonds don't go away," Loring said. "Some of these modern diamonds are hundreds and hundreds of years old — they've been cut and recut."

Because of that durability, and "because they're white and pure," Loring said, diamonds are the natural choice as a symbol of betrothal.

By the 18th century, India's supply was running out, but in 1725, it was noticed that miners in Brazil were using diamonds as chips in card games, Loring said. Diamonds suddenly became plentiful and their use in jewelry "more and more lavish."

Discoveries in South Africa in the 1860s, then later in Botswana, Australia and the Soviet Union, have kept the supply steady, he said.

Diamond rings remain as popular as ever, according to Zucker and Loring. The Tiffany setting remains the favorite, its tiny prongs holding the stone aloft for maximum fire and brilliance, Loring said.

Double-Ring Vows Solemnized Sunday

Irma Eve McGowan of Winterville and Charles Boyd Humbles of Ayden were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Liberty Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Raymond A. Gaskins presided over the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. A.D. McGowan of Emerald Isle, and the Rev. and Mrs. Mack Humbles of Ayden.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her brother, William McGowan of Emerald Isle, the bride chose an ivory chantilly lace gown designed with a scalloped wedding band neckline and a sheer dropped shoulder yoke outlined with scalloped lace ruffles and satin ribbon. An ivory satin ribbon encircled the natural waistline. The gathered skirt was accented with lace ruffles and satin ribbons flowed into a brush train. Her circlet of ivory silk flowers was accented with ribbon streamers tied in love knots and had silk illusion veiling in the back.

Gloria Richley of San Diego, Calif., sister of the bride, attended as matron of honor and wore a yellow floor-length chiffon dress fashioned with a high neckline.

Michael Wills of Winterville served the bridegroom as best man. Mack Blake Humbles of Newport News, Va., brother of the bridegroom, was usher.

Pianist Sue Edwards and soloist Paula Mills provided the program of wedding music.

The bridegroom is the grandson of Selma A. Smith of Ayden.

A reception given by family and friend of the bridal couple was held in the church fellowship hall. Punch was poured by Linda McGowan of Emerald Isle, sister-in-law of the bride. Cake was served by Marti Tripp of Grifton. Assisting were Glenda Humbles of Nashville, Tenn.,

MRS. HUMBLER

sister of the bridegroom, Tiffany Richley and Sunny Richley, nieces of the bride, both of San Diego, Charity Humbles and Faith Humbles, both of Ayden, sisters of the bridegroom. Hope Humbles, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the register. Goodbyes were said by Patricia Humbles of Ayden, sister of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom is employed with Eastern Construction in Winterville. The couple will reside in Winterville.

Daughter Should Seize The Day

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Indiana Mother," whose beautiful, intelligent, 20-year-old daughter doesn't get asked out. She hit the nail on the head when she suggested that men are intimidated by beautiful women.

Yes, we are! Most of the beautiful women I see give the impression that your average male isn't good enough for them. Also, most guys take it for granted that beautiful women already have boyfriends.

You are right, Abby, "Indiana's" daughter should take the initiative if she's interested in a particular guy and ask HIM out. I would be tickled pink if a woman asked me out.

These are the '80s — a woman can take the initiative without being labeled a tramp. — YOUR AVERAGE GUY

DEAR AVERAGE: It's true, most men assume that a beautiful woman already has a boyfriend. But you are wrong when you say that most beautiful women give the impression that "your average male" is not good enough for them. The truth is that most men on meeting a beautiful woman feel that they aren't good enough. It's their own lack of confidence that keeps them from asking her out.

I see nothing wrong with a woman inviting a man out — and picking up the tab if she can afford it — but many readers, both male and female, still maintain that a lady never takes the initiative. I disagree. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I hope you can help me with. About two years ago, I quit work to stay at home with my children. Meanwhile, three good friends of mine asked me to baby-sit for their children, which I am doing now. I really enjoy it.

From the start, I asked them to pay me hourly ($1). All of the parents bring their children at least a half-hour to an hour early, and then pick them up a half-hour to an hour after they get off. So why do they only pay me for the eight hours, not the nine or 10 hours that their children are at my house?

I know I should have said something to them sooner, but since they were good friends I didn't. Is it too late now? — TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF

DEAR TAKEN: No, it's not too late, and if you are looking for someone to motivate you, I accept. Ask and ye shall receive! And by the way, a dollar an hour is a slave wage for baby-sitting.

DEAR ABBY: Being an animal lover, you will probably get a big kick out of this.

Question: Which four animals do many women prefer?

Answer: A Jaguar in the garage, A mink in the closet, A tiger in bed, A jackass to pay all the bills. — MILTON HOUSEMAN, BEVERLY HILLS

Traffic Pictures Will Show 'My Face'

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

You're not going to believe this. I live on this quiet little street where no more than 60,000 cars traveling bumper-to-bumper burn out their pistons trying to inch their way to the traffic light. We're talking speeds of 15 to 20 miles an hour, tops.

Every morning at 7:30, I join this gridlock caravan on my way to an aerobics class. Having just rolled out of bed, I barely know what I am doing or where I am doing it.

Now, here's the unbelievable part. The city has seen fit to install a camera radar system. The way it works is your car speeds by and a policeman in a station wagon snaps your picture. A few days later you receive a picture of yourself at the wheel of your car with a clear view of your license plate, along with a radar-calculated printout of your speed.

Is this America or what? How dare anyone take a picture of me without makeup! This is a blatant violation of my civil rights. Where is the ACLU when you need them? If they can defend the rights of Nazis to assemble, then why can't they come to the defense of morning people who do not want a portrait of themselves at that ungodly hour?

Where in the Constitution does it say, "You have a right to be photographed against your will. Crow's feet and facial chenille marks may be used against you. Retouching is denied. Proofs are non-negotiable." I ask you, is nothing sacred? Is this what my ancestors bought liberty bonds for?

All of you should be as outraged as I am. All of you women wearing nightgowns under your raincoats, taking your kids to school — rebel. All of you women who are running late and are going to put on your eyes when you get to the office, rise up. Do you think these officers are going to care one whit about your "good side"? Are they going to give you a chance to moisten your lips and mousse your hair? And what about those of you who close your eyes when your picture is taken? How do you think that's going to play with some slick prosecutor in traffic court?

There's another aspect to the torture of camera radar. A few weeks ago, I thought I saw a flash. It could have been the light glancing off the chrome on my outside mirror. Or it could have been my watch picking up a glint of sun. But was I sure? I looked in the mirror and what I saw was not a pretty sight. A pale, colorless woman with unimportant eyes, a natural lip line, a matched set of luggage under each eye, and a big piece of hair sticking up at the crown. She looked too sick to drive.

I kept vigil over my mailbox for the next two weeks, nearly making myself ill with anxiety. The streets are jungles. You never know when someone will point a loaded camera at you and shoot!

Fireworks

 "The show went off about as good as any show I've seen," he added. Greenville Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen also commented on how well Monday's show proceeded. "There were no problems whatsoever," he said. "We had 12 rescue calls during the day but they had nothing to do with the fireworks." Greenville Parks and Recreation Director Boyd Lee said city employees today would be clearing any garbage or debris left by the crowds Monday night. "From what I have been told, last night's crowd was the largest ever down at the Town Commons," Lee said.

Monday night's fireworks display capped off a day of holiday activities held along the Town Commons. Over 200 runners kicked off the Fourth of July festivities at 8 a.m. with a five-kilometer road race. Greenville's Rob Powell was the winner for the second straight year, covering the 3.1-mile course in 15 minutes and 4 seconds. Following Powell were Greenville runners Barry Scott and Charlie Justice with times of 16:16 and 16:20 respectively. Other events and activities held on the Town Commons throughout the day included an arts and crafts show, a weight-lifting competition, a bicycle and skateboard show, and a rubber-duck race sponsored by United Cerebral Palsy. Several bands entertained the crowd throughout the afternoon, as did a sunbathing contest at 4:45 p.m. in which three local women competed.

Volume on the Big Board came to 23.79 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Wright Says U.S. Should Pay Iranians

 Monday that "We must all be prepared for a real war and go to the war fronts and fight against America and its lackeys."

And today in Tehran, Iranian President Ali Khamenei said that the Islamic Republic has the "right to avenge" those who died when Iran Air Flight 655 was shot down Sunday by missiles fired from the U.S. Navy cruiser Vincennes, whose crew thought it was shooting at an F-14 fighter about to attack the ship.

Tehran, radio, monitored in Nicosia, said that Khamenei told world leaders in messages that the disaster "has roused a wave of rage" in Iran "and aversion to the U.S. government."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today he could not say whether the United States had apologized directly to Iran through private communications or other means.

Wright, interviewed by the British Broadcasting Corp., noted that Reagan had expressed regret for the loss of innocent lives but "is not given to profuse apologies in any event." Asked if he ought to be, the Texas

Democrat replied, "Yes, he should be."

"We close ranks, so please don't ask me to try to correct the language of the president," he said. "I'm just stating as a matter of fact that Mr. Reagan is not given to acknowledging error. It's a personal trait, he's gone as far as I've ever heard him go and he has expressed his deep regret as president of the United States."

Warner said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" today that "we have compassion for the families" of the victims and that he hopes "this nation acts swiftly to try and compensate the families."

But he said he feels the captain of the Vincennes "made the right decision under the circumstances."

Warner said that before Sunday's incident, the Vincennes had "intelligence that Khomeini said that (Iran) may take an F-14 and have a kamikaze attack and crash it into an American ship."

Reagan on Sunday sidestepped questions about compensation for the relatives of those who perished.

Fitzwater said "there's really nothing that we can do (at this time). The investigation (of the accident) is being conducted by the Navy."

Reagan also repeated that he regretted the incident, which U.S. officials said happened when the captain of the USS Vincennes mistook the Iranian A-300 civilian jet for a fighter.

But Reagan said he will not withdraw U.S. forces from the area. "We want peace in the gulf, but we also want the right of navigation of international waters," he said.

"We're talking about an incident in which a plane on radar was observed coming in the direction of a ship in combat and the plane began lowering its altitude," he said. "So I think it was an understandable accident to shoot and think that they were under attack from that plane."

Iran accused the United States of knowingly shooting down the unarmed plane and requested an investigation by the Montreal-based International Civil Aviation Organization.

Asked what he thought about that, Reagan replied, "You have to think about that, knowing who they are."

But when asked about the Iranian accusation that the Navy knew it was firing on a passenger jet, the president replied, "Well, I don't go much by what the Iranians say — ever."

There were these other related developments:

—In Beirut, the spiritual guide for Iranian-backed guerrillas holding foreign captives in Lebanon was quoted as saying today that the hostages should not suffer because the U.S. Navy shot down an Iranian jetliner.

But an anonymous caller purporting to speak for Islamic Jihad, which holds Americans Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, threatened to kill one of them in revenge. It was not possible to authenticate the call. Islamic Jihad has said it would authenticate its statements with photographs of the hostages.

A State Department official, requesting anonymity, said of the call:

"There is no confirmation...that this is a legitimate thing."

—The Washington Post today quoted Pentagon sources whom it did not identify as saying that a report filed Monday by another U.S. Navy ship, the frigate Sides, said the Iranian plane was climbing when it was shot down, as Iran has claimed.

Their Homers Bring On Victories

McGwire, Hrbek Provide Fireworks

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Lightning struck twice as Oakland's Mark McGwire and Minnesota's Kent Hrbek used their bats instead of firecrackers for holiday explosives.

McGwire hit a game-winning home run in the 16th inning for the second day in a row as the Athletics beat the Cleveland Indians 4-2. Meanwhile, Hrbek hit two home runs for the second time in three games as the Twins defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 3-1.

"Sure, I thought about doing it again," said McGwire, who snapped a 2-2 tie with a leadoff homer off Brad Havens. "I'm tired of playing extra-inning ballgames. I think there should be a limit — flip a coin or something."

"It was twilight and it was getting difficult to see. I got a good pitch and was able to extend my arms well. The same thing happened (Sunday) leading off the 16th with a left-handed pitcher (Toronto's John Cerutti) on the mound. I did think about that."

Two outs after McGwire's homer, Stan Javier also connected.

Hrbek left Milwaukee after going 9-for-16 with four homers in the four-game series. Six of his 16 home runs have come against the Brewers.

"I don't know what it is. I've just always hit pretty well against this team," Hrbek said.

In other American League games, it was Detroit 5, Seattle 3; New York 13, Texas 2; Boston 9, Kansas City 2; California 11, Toronto 6; and Chicago 5, Baltimore 1.

The Athletics, who have won five in a row and lead the AL West by six games over Minnesota, are 9-2 in extra-inning games and 7-0 in games that have lasted at least 13 innings. Greg Cadaret worked 3 1-3 hitless innings for the victory and Dennis Eckersley pitched the 16th for his major-league-leading 25th save.

The rival starters, Oakland's Bob Welch and Cleveland's Tom Candiotti, both allowed two runs in nine innings.

Twins 3, Brewers 1

Hrbek tied the score with his 15th home run with two out in the sixth inning and put the Twins ahead 2-1 with a leadoff shot in the ninth. Two outs later, Brian Harper hit his second home run. Minnesota managed only five other hits off Don August.

"We couldn't see very well the first couple of innings," Hrbek said, referring to the 6 p.m. starting time. "There were a lot of shadows out there, so you had to guess what was coming."

Winner Allan Anderson yielded four hits and an unearned run in eight innings. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 22nd save.

"I thought I had a plan," August said. "The first one Hrbek hit was a curveball, so I thought I'd try to get him with a fastball, and he hit that one out, too. Other than those three homers, everything went real good."

Tigers 5, Mariners 3

Darrell Evans and Chet Lemon homered off Mike Moore in the seventh and Matt Nokes and Pat Sheridan hit consecutive home runs off Rod Scurry in the eighth as Detroit remained 2½ games ahead of New York in the AL East.

Detroit relief ace Mike Henneman was the winner despite allowing Glenn Wilson's game-tying sacrifice fly in the eighth. Eric King relieved in the ninth with two out and the bases loaded and retired Steve Balboni on a grounder.

The Tigers trailed 2-1 when Evans started the seventh with his 10th homer, off Moore, who allowed five hits in seven innings and set a Seattle record for consecutive shutout innings with 23. He also struck out a season-high 11. Henry Cotto homered for Seattle.

Yankees 13, Rangers 2

Don Mattingly hit a three-run homer, Jack Clark hit a two-run shot and New York took advantage of 15 hits, seven walks, two wild pitches, four passed balls and a hit batter.

Charlie Hough was the loser despite striking out four batters in the first inning, the eighth time that has been accomplished in the American League. Hough yielded only three hits in 2 2-3 innings but threw 102 pitches, walking six and striking out the same number. Winner Charles Hudson allowed two runs and three hits in seven innings before giving way to Tim Lincecum.

Rickey Henderson walked to start the game and Claudell Washington struck out but reached first when the third strike escaped catcher Geno Petralli for a passed ball. Mattingly hit his sixth home run of the season before Hough struck out Clark, Dave Winfield and Mike Pagliarulo.

New York added three runs in the second inning, again on just one hit, as Hough walked two, hit a batter and Petralli committed another passed ball. Mattingly drove in a fourth run with a groundout while Clark hit an RBI single in the fifth and hit a two-run homer in the seventh, his 18th.

Red Sox 9, Royals 2

Dwight Evans had a single, triple and inside-the-park home run and Wade Boggs had two singles and two doubles in five at-bats, enabling Boston to survive a triple play.

Roger Clemens, 12-5, scattered nine hits and struck out eight in eight innings, raising his road record to 9-0. Loser Ted Power yielded five runs in two innings.

Boggs raised his major-league-leading batting average to .359. He and Evans each drove in three runs and scored three.

The triple play, the first against Boston in 23 years, came in the fourth after Evans walked and came around on singles by Mike Greenwell and Ellis Burks.

Jim Rice hit a sinking line drive to center field. With the runners moving, Willie Wilson made a shoestring catch and flipped the ball to second baseman Frank White for the second out. White's relay to first baseman George Brett compleger to .359. He and Evans each drove in three runs and scored three.

The triple play, the first against Boston in 23 years, came in the fourth after Evans walked and came around on singles by Mike Greenwell and Ellis Burks.

Edberg Captures Wimbledon Title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Eight years after Bjorn Borg won the last of his five Wimbledon titles, another blond Swede held aloft the gleaming gold trophy on Centre Court.

He had the same big serve, the same crisp volleys and the same lightning returns. More important, he had the same mental toughness.

His name is Stefan Edberg. "I watched all the Wimbledon finals he's been in. I think he's been a big influence on me ... as a person and a player," Edberg said after Monday's rain-delayed championship victory over Boris Becker.

"All of us grew up watching him in the Wimbledon finals," the 22-year-old Edberg said. "It's always going to be in my memory."

Edberg's 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-2 success brought memories of the Borg era flooding back as he took apart the man who never had lost on Centre Court.

Becker, the champion in 1985 and 1986, had dropped only one set in six matches on his way to the final.

Edberg, with a reputation for mental weakness, had dropped sets in every except match one as he reached the championship here for the first time.

But in true Borg style, the Swede peaked when it mattered most, got his opponent against the ropes and squeezed the last resistance out of him.

"It hasn't sunk into my system yet," said Edberg, a two-time Australian Open champion who had never been able to master the grass of Wimbledon despite his classic serve-and-volley game. "This is something I've worked for a long time. It could be the best match I've ever played in a Grand Slam tournament."

Edberg, accused in the past of lacking the killer instinct, buried Becker with a high quality performance of sustained volleying that had his opponent slashing at the ground in frustration.

"I never really gave him a chance," Edberg said. "I had it in my mind today that I was not going to give up until the last point."

The match, the first men's final at Wimbledon to be spread over two days, had been halted by rain Sunday with Edberg up 3-2 in the first set.

When it resumed two hours late

Monday, Edberg quickly dropped his serve before another rain delay sent the players back to the locker room.

Becker wrapped up the set when play resumed for good, but Edberg refused to be intimidated by the West German's fearsome reputation or illustrious past at the mecca of grass-court tennis.

As Becker started making unforced errors for the first time in the tournament, Edberg took his chance. He ripped through the second-set tiebreaker and stormed on to capture the third and fourth sets.

Becker, for once, was beaten at his own game.

"I just felt I could hardly miss the ball," Edberg said. "I really believed in myself today. That was very important."

Becker, who says he builds every season for Wimbledon, could not get motivated for the event he loves the most.

He said his earlier matches against 1987 champion Pat Cash and top-ranked Ivan Lendl "took a lot out of my body and my mental strength. I couldn't push myself when I needed to most. That was the bottom line. He was more psyched up."

As Edberg maintained the Swedish blitz on the year's Grand Slam tournaments — Mats Wilander won the Australian and French opens — he also had to deal with the recognition faced by all Wimbledon champions.

A private man who shuns the limelight, the London-based Swede said he hoped his lifestyle would not change.

"I think you make your own problems a bit and I'll still try to be the same person and act myself," he said. "Life may change a little bit ... but if I respect people, the people will respect me back."

In other finals decided Monday, Americans Ken Flach and Robert Seguso retained the men's doubles title with a 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 victory over Anders Jarryd and John Fitzgerald in a match spread over three days, a first in Wimbledon history.

Steffi Graf, who won her first Wimbledon women's singles title on Saturday with a three-set victory over Martina Navratilova, completed a successful tournament by winning the women's doubles as well.

Graf and Gabriela Sabatini saved two match points in beating Soviets Natalia Zvereva and Larisa Savchenko 6-3, 1-6, 12-10.

In the mixed doubles final, the United States collected its second trophy as Sherwood Stewart and Zina Garrison beat compatriots Kelly Jones and Gretchen Magers 6-1, 7-6.

Boncrusher Sets Return To The Ring

LILLINGTON (AP) — Former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion James "Boncrusher" Smith has begun training for a late-July fight to be promoted by Don King.

Smith lost his title to Mike Tyson in March 1987 and was the loser in a controversial split decision to Adilson Rodrigues in South America later last year. He turned to politics, leading first primary balloting in the county commissioners race in Harnett County before being defeated in a runoff by incumbent Bill Shaw.

"I just want to win a fight," Smith told a reporter for The News and Observer of Raleigh at his training camp in western Harnett County. "I've lost my last two fights in the ring, and I lost the campaign."

Smith was seated at ringside, courtesy of King, at Tyson's 91-second knockout of Michael Spinks last Monday in Atlantic City, N.J.

"King said if I wanted a fight, he'd get me a fight," Smith said.

Ferrante Aids Hopefuls—Psychologically

By The Associated Press

In addition to helping members of the U.S. Olympic shooting team prepare for competition, A.P. "Bud" Ferrante also assists them in accepting the outcome — which sometimes means accepting defeat.

"Some of my work has to do with helping an individual reframe what they would term their 'broken dreams' so they are able to go on and compete again without losing a sense of their ultimate athletic potential and personal self-esteem," said Ferrante, a psychologist and assistant professor for the student counseling center at East Carolina University.

Ferrante has the responsibility of seeing that the U.S. shooting team has a psychological edge on the rifle range during the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

"Working as a psychologist with shooters is extremely challenging when one considers that the difference between first place — the gold medal — and fourth place — no medal — in some events can be as little as tenths of a point," he said.

"At the Olympic level of competition, whoever comes to the venue that day with the proper frame of mind and the proper psychological approach seems to stand the greatest chance of being victors because 95 percent of their performance is mental," he said.

Ferrante's involvement with the team, which began in 1984, consists of more than appearances at team competitions. He travels to the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., periodically to conduct group training seminars on such topics as goal setting, team building and psychological skill development.

"It is also essential to come to know each person — to understand their backgrounds, what their concerns are and any problems they may be experiencing — the notion being that things that affect people affect their performance both as people and as athletes," Ferrante says. "With their personal concerns resolved, they'll be in a much better position to perform because they will have that much more energy to direct on their performance."

Some of the personal issues Ferrante has helped athletes deal with are relationship difficulties, academic and career concerns and the deaths of parents and other loved ones.

"The whole area of relationships signifies a tremendous concern and causes a great deal of anxiety for many collegiate and world-class athletes," he said. "Because these individuals have to train and travel so much, in many ways their relationships with their spouses and significant others are taxed well beyond what would seem reasonable for the rest of us."

Expos 7, Astros 6

Returning home was no help for the slumping Astros, who lost for the sixth time in seven games.

Montreal's Tim Wallach drove in three runs with a pair of doubles and red-hot Andres Galarraga had four hits. Galarraga, the NL's leading hitter with a .345 average, owns an eight-game hitting streak and has 16 hits in his last 21 at-bats.

Wallach had a two-run double in a three-run fifth-inning off Danny Darwin, 3-8.

Houston's Glenn Davis had four hits, including a two-run homer off Dennis Martinez, 8-7.

Braves 7, Phillies 0

Pete Smith pitched a three-hitter for his first career shutout and the first complete-game shutout by an Atlanta pitcher this year.

Jim Morrison, making his first start since signing with the Braves on June 10, broke a scoreless tie in the bottom of the sixth with a three-run homer off Don Carman, 4-5. Dale Murphy snapped an 0-for-17 slump in the seventh with another three-run shot, his 13th.

The visiting Phillies have scored only four runs in Carman's five losses this season.

Padres 4, Pirates 3

The Padres, who wasted a two-run lead in the ninth, won it in the bottom of the 10th on Chris Brown's RBI single.

Roberto Alomar and Tony Gwynn singled to start the 10th against Jim Gott, 4-3. After a sacrifice and an intentional walk, Brown lined a 3-2 pitch to left field for the game-winner.

The Pirates tied the game in the ninth on Jose Lind's single, Andy Van Slyke's double, Bobby Bonilla's RBI grounder and a wild pitch by Mark Davis, 3-6.

Allison In Race Win

ROUGEMONT (AP) — Davey Allison took a half a car length victory over Rusty Wallace in the Race of Champions, a 30-lap sprint at Orange County Speedway on Monday.

A field of eight NASCAR drivers took part in the event, which was run just after the 100-lap Late Model stock car race. The NASCAR drivers drove the top eight cars from the late model race.

Sterling Marlin finished third and Dale Earnhardt was fourth.

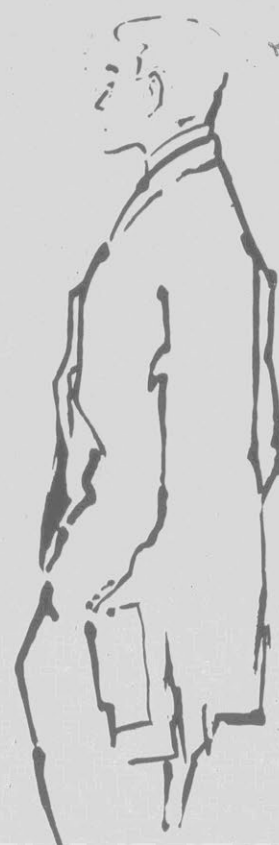

Wallace, the leader in the Winston Cup points race, and Earnhardt, who is second in the point standings, were not originally scheduled to appear. They joined the card as replacements for Bobby Allison and Tim Richmond. Allison is recovering from a June 19 wreck at Pocono, Pa., and Richmond had a scheduling conflict.

Other drivers participating in the race at the three-eighths of a mile track included Rick Wilson, Mike Waltrip, Rodney Combs and Kyle Petty.

1. No tricks or gimmicks.
2. A complete ONE TIME SUBSTANTIAL MARKDOWN that remains the same through our 12 day seasonal clearance.
3. We don't suggest unrealistic, original higher than normal prices so you think you are buying something that you're not.
4. We are not one price one day and another price five days later. Only the seller knows what his merchandise is worth and we don't subject you to a series of on-going fictitious sales events thru the year such as Anniversary Sale, Founders Day, Secret Sale, Harvest Sale, Pre-event and After-event Sale, etc. In the process of reading advertisements through the year, it appears that the customers in many instances are subjected to one continual fictitious sale rip-off.
5. We don't want to confuse you or mislead you.
6. OUR SALE MERCHANDISE ALWAYS REPRESENTS FIRST QUALITY ITEMS CHOSEN FROM OUR REGULAR INVENTORY. It does not come from manufacturer close-outs of items that they could not sell to start with, and we, and you, did not want.

 One way to neutralize a long suit is to remove the entries to it. But what if there are no entries in the outside suits? This hand is an object lesson.

 Let's suppose that North-South reach five spades on an auction such as the one shown. South should have taken a sure profit by doubling five hearts, but then there would have been no tale to tell.
 Let's see what would happen with routine defense. Suppose that West leads a low spade and West ducks. Now the contract can no longer be defeated!
 Declarer returns to hand with a club and forces out the ace of trumps. Thanks to the doubleton king of diamonds onside and the fact that West is now out of trumps, declarer has no difficulty collecting the rest of the tricks.
 When Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mexico City held the West hand, the play to the first two tricks went as above. On declarer's lead of a low spade, however, Rosenkranz flew up with the ace and shifted to a low diamond!

 Declarer had no way to counter this lethal defense. Since he did not have a second diamond, his line of communication with dummy was shattered. He finessed the ten and cashed the ace of diamonds for a club discard, felling the king in the process, but it did him no good. If he continued with a high diamond, West would ruff for the setting trick. If he did anything else, he would, in the fullness of time, have to surrender a club trick for down one.

PBS Launches 10-Week Series Featuring TV Documentaries

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The television documentary, much neglected in recent years, gets a special 10-week showcase on public television beginning tonight.

The summer series "P.O.V." — filmmaker jargon for point of view — will present a selection from among the best documentaries produced in recent years by independent filmmakers.

"Each film has a point of view," said executive producer Marc N. Weiss. "That makes them more interesting. People can look at them and agree or disagree."

The first two-hour program presents two documentaries: "American Tongues," by Louis Alvarez and Andrew Kolker, takes a humorous look at how American speech varies from region to region. The film won a Peabody Award this spring. The second film is "Acting Our Age," by Michal Aviad, a paean to the spirit of six elderly women facing life and advancing age.

The premiere also includes previews of the other documentaries.

"We're going to show 12 documentaries during the 10 weeks," said Weiss. "We looked at an extraordinary number of documentaries to make our selection. When we asked for submissions we got 500 entries."

"That's just the tip of the iceberg. There are more than 25,000 independent filmmakers in this country. They're not all turning out films all the time. It takes several years. They have difficulty raising money. The very best documentaries get made because the filmmaker got a bug. They latched onto something. They feel very passionate about the subject they're filming. It's something they want to explore."

Public television commissions only about a dozen documentaries a year outside of the venues of the National Geographic Society, Jacques Cousteau and other nature films. Documentaries once flourished on the three commercial networks but have been virtually replaced by newsmagazine shows.

The only real sanctuary for the documentary today is cable TV's Discovery Channel, which offers 18 hours a day of documentaries concerning nature, science, technology, history, human adventure and world exploration.

Documentaries are also occasionally shown in theaters. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences awards Oscars each year for best feature and short-subject documentaries.

"This whole thing had its genesis at a film festival in Utah about a year and a half ago," said Weiss. "David Fanning of 'Frontline' mentioned during a discussion that Britain's fourth channel had bought a lot of documentaries by independent American filmmakers. An executive of the British channel said they're running them as a special package."

"After the discussion, I went to Fanning with the idea that we should do something similar here. He said the only way it would work is if we had a consortium of stations behind it."

Fanning arranged a meeting of Weiss, Henry Becton, president of WGBH in Boston, and Barry Chage, vice president for public affairs of PBS. It ended up with "P.O.V." having the same board of directors and stations as "American Playhouse."

Weiss pointed out that the primary audience for most documentaries has been at schools and libraries.

"Very few filmmakers make any money," he said. "They do it because they care about a subject. Many fall by the wayside because they haven't got the money. On the other hand, that kind of tenacity is what makes these films extraordinary. All of the work has an emotional punch and plenty of intellectual meat."

"Filmmakers only get a few shots. That's why they pick their subjects so carefully. And they're independent because they don't want to conform to a format."

Weiss, who has been an independent filmmaker much of his career, said he hopes "P.O.V." will lead to a series. "People need to know when to tune in," he said. "It needs some consistency. We're issuing a viewer's guide to help people find this current series."

He said he believes "P.O.V." will attract viewers who quit regular television because they have found nothing to interest them.

"People are pretty bored with the documentaries they see on the networks," Weiss said.

Controversial Films Win Chinese Honors

BEIJING (AP) — Two controversial movies about poor peasants that won prizes abroad tied for best picture in the 1988 Golden Rooster competition, China's Academy Awards, official reports said today.

"The Old Well" and "Red Sorghum" also shared best picture honors with a third movie, "Prairie," in an annual public opinion contest called the Hundred Flowers Awards, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

The Golden Rooster prizes are awarded by a panel of experts from the movie industry.

Controversy has become a staple of the Golden Rooster Awards in the past few years as China's filmmakers become increasingly sophisticated in their styles and themes.

This year was no exception, but the debate did not delay the awards as it did in 1987 and 1986. Last year's prizes were not given until January because of behind-the-scenes wrangling.

Critics said "The Old Well" and "Red Sorghum," both made by the relatively avant-garde Xian Film Studio, focused on the backwardness and poverty of China instead of seeking to inspire. Both depict poor villagers in arid northwestern China, and both treat sexuality with relative frankness.

The Shanghai newspaper Wen Hui Bao said the Xian Film Studio received letters saying the movies were "hateful productions that sell the ugliness of Chinese in a bid to invite the appreciation of foreigners."

Delegates to the National People's Congress, China's legislature, demanded at their annual meeting in April to know what the movies were trying to accomplish, the paper said.

"The Old Well" won top prize at the Tokyo Grand Prix last year and a special prize at the Hawaii International Film Festival. "Red Sorghum" was named top film at the West Berlin Film Festival in February.

Actor Says 'Beast' Is Same As 'Hamlet'

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Actor Ron Perlman says playing the beast Vincent on television's "Beauty and the Beast" is "so romantic and heroic and poetic, it's like playing Hamlet every week."

"This may just be the greatest role of my life," Perlman, 37, said in the July 9 issue of TV Guide magazine.

Perlman said he was amazed when he learned the role has made him a sex symbol.

"More than 95 percent of the people who write to me are women," he said. "Their letters are filled with sexual fantasies."

The actor whose half-man, half-beast character's love affair with Catherine Chandler (Linda Hamilton) is unconsummated in the show has received up to nine letters from one viewer.

"Women say that Vincent is the ultimate fantasy lover, someone who asks nothing in return but gives 110 percent," Perlman said. "He evokes deep unconscious feelings of longing for a connection to someone who understands things on a very emotional level."

Perlman is married to fashion designer Opal Stone and has a 4-year-old daughter, Blake Amanda.

Actor Establishes Refugee Hospital

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Academy award-winning actor Dr. Haing S. Ngor is seeking support to establish a hospital for refugees at the Thai-Cambodian border.

Ngor, who was a physician before he fled Cambodia in 1979, said Monday that he already had the money and the medical staff for the project, and that the only thing delaying the hospital was approval from the Thai government.

He told a news conference that after his visit here he would spend two weeks in Thailand meeting officials.

Ngor is here on a week's visit at the invitation of the Institute of Strategic and International Studies Malaysia. The organization's two-day forum on Southeast Asia begins today.
