Jobless Rate Hits 14-Year Low

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Youths flooding the job market and finding a wealth of summertime opportunity dropped the nation's June civilian unemployment rate to 5.3 percent, its lowest since 1974, the government said today.

Seasonally adjusted employment in June jumped by 820,000 — 75 percent of it among youths 16-24 years old — to more than offset May's decline of 536,000.

The 0.3 percentage point improvement in the unemployment rate marked the first time the rate has dipped so strongly since 1986 and sent it to its lowest since joblessness stood at 5.1 percent in May 1974.

Unemployment among teenagers fell 2.0 percentage points to 13.6 percent, its lowest since 1970.

Among black teens, the rate fell a whopping 6.0 percent to 28.4 percent, the lowest recorded since that statistic was first tracked in 1972. Black teenage employment, however, was still more than double the 12.0 percent rate for white teens.

Analysts had anticipated a surge in youth employment in the tourism industry as unprecedented numbers of foreigners, buoyed by the devalued dollar, are vacationing in the United States this summer.

The Labor Department said the June job growth was affected in part by the fact that its monthly household survey was conducted late in June, "allowing extra time for students, graduates and seasonal workers to find jobs."

The hiring boom meant that 62.3 percent of working-age Americans had jobs, a percentage achieved only in April.

Unemployment dropped by 328,000 to 6.5 million last month, with teenagers and adult men accounting for all of the decline.

A separate survey of business payrolls showed that 345,000 jobs were created in June, compared with an average of 250,000 a month from February through May. The largest increases were in services and retail trade, 160,000 and 75,000 respectively.

The Labor Department said there were also "noteworthy" gains of 25,000 jobs each in transportation and wholesale trade, reflecting increased factory output.

After slowing in May, employment

Rescuers Find Woman, Children Trapped In Collapsed Store Roof

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Rescuers picking through tons of concrete and twisted steel for the victims of a department store collapse today rescued a woman trapped for 15 hours and worked to free at least five more people. At least 11 people were killed and 43 injured.

Workers reached a woman and two children in the debris, then found two more children alive in separate air pockets.

It could take several hours to free the trapped woman and two youngsters, said Sgt. Dean Poos, a police spokesman.

"The little boy kept crying that he wanted to come out. He was scared and he wanted a little ball and he wanted some refreshments," said fireman William Briggs. "He was also a little scared which is natural and he's also afraid of dying."

The three-story La Tienda Amigo, known as Amigo Store, collapsed Thursday afternoon during a storm that dumped more than 2 inches of rain in less than 30 minutes. Some witnesses said as many as 125 people sought shelter inside the downtown building before it crumbled, but Poos said only about 50 had been inside. Authorities gave no figure this morning on how many people were missing.

To reach the trapped woman and two children, rescuers dug a makeshift, 17-foot tunnel, and doctors were able to check their vital signs, said Johnny Economedes, head of one rescue team.

"It's very hard for them. They are in terrible pain, both emotional and physical," he said.

As the second woman was carried to safety and taken to a first aid station across the street, 300 onlookers cheered. Authorities identified her as Maria Lire, 37, of Yucatan, Mexico, but were unable to give her condition.

Brownsville Mayor Ygnacio Garza said: "I think they (the people who are still trapped) have been panicked; they have been afraid. We have had some priests in there talking to them."

"Now that we're to them, we're able to get them through it. I think we have an IV in one or two of them. So I think they're being calming down now but obviously they want to get

Iran Says It Will Not Seek Revenge

Related Story On A-11

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's acting commander in chief, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said today his nation will not seek revenge against the United States for shooting down an Iranian jetliner and killing all 290 people aboard.

Iran's air force chief said U.S. systems must have been able to monitor 21 minutes of conversation in English between the Iran Air jetliner and the airport control tower. Brig. Gen. Mansour Sattari said the missile attack showed that the U.S. military was "unable ... to control its sophisticated systems."

The cruiser USS Vincennes shot down the jetliner on Sunday. American officials said the European-built Airbus was mistaken for an attacking Iranian F-14 fighter.

Sattari told foreign reporters Thursday that the destruction of the plane was an "intentional and unprovoked attack."

But he later qualified this by saying the U.S. military "accepted on purpose" the risk of shooting down civilian planes because they were unable to control their sophisticated systems.

Sattari said Iran had "all the tapes needed" to prove that normal conversation was going on from the time the engines were started up on the ground until the plane was shot down.

He also said the plane was traveling in "the center of the international air corridor" between Bandar Abbas and Dubai and could have deviated 10 miles either side and still have been within the corridor.

In a prayer congregation, Rafsanjani said "the United States is trying to push us to commit the same crime ... but if we did that, the world would turn against us."

"That is why we do not push to take revenge. Wise people understand why we do not take revenge."

He spoke after the newly formed General Command issued a statement calling on "all persons who can carry a gun" to report for duty on the war front.

The remarks by Rafsanjani, who is also Parliament speaker, signaled that Tehran may have decided on restraint in the wake of the incident, Western diplomatic sources said. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

The crowd chanted "Death to America!" and "War, War Until Victory!" The audience included young "basiji" or volunteers in red headbands, and a few wounded war veterans.

In the United Arab Emirates, a newspaper reported today that Iran Air will take a circuitous route from the southern Iran city of Bandar Abbas to Dubai until the direct one becomes safe for civilian air traffic.

The new route is aimed at avoiding the corridor used by the Airbus on Sunday, said the report published in the Dubai-based English-language newspaper Khaleej Times.

Tobacco Markets To Open Aug. 3

By The Associated Press

Flue-cured tobacco markets will open Aug. 2 on the South Carolina-North Carolina border belt, and on the next day in eastern North Carolina — including Greenville and Farmville — and in the Sandhills.

The Old and Middle belts in central and western sections of the state are scheduled to open Aug. 9.

Opening dates for flue-cured markets in five southeastern states were set in Raleigh Thursday by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Advisory Committee.

The 39-member committee, which is composed of tobacco growers, auction warehouse operators and representatives of tobacco purchasing companies, recommends the opening dates and other marketing procedures to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

Flue-cured belts will open in Georgia and Florida on July 26, and in the Old Belt in Virginia on Aug. 9, the committee said in a release.

"The crop in North Carolina this year is pretty good," said Weldon Denny, assistant commissioner for the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

"In 70 percent of the state, it is real good," Denny said. "I think it's better than last year at this stage."

Denny said the only areas reporting problems with the dry weather are counties along the border of North Carolina and Virginia. "And it's not critical yet, but it certainly could use some rain," he said.

Buyers from tobacco companies should pay prices at least equal to last year when the crop reaches the warehouse floor, Denny said. He added that he expects buying to be "relatively strong" because of increased exports of U.S. leaf.

Postal Window Service Returning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Window service at the nation's post offices, reduced earlier this year to save money, will return to normal in September, the Postal Service announced today.

Postmaster General Anthony Frank, who made the announcement, said the agency has found sufficient savings in other areas to allow it to restore full window hours.

The announcement came at a meeting of the postal Board of Governors at which Frank disclosed that the controversial consulting contract with Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot may have to be renegotiated.

The Postal Service announced the 10 percent reduction in window hours in January as one step to save $160 million from its expenditures this year and bring it into compliance with spending reductions ordered by Congress. It was left to local postmasters to decide when to close the windows.

Frank said that normal window service will be restored effective on Sept. 10.

But the service restoration will not

Indian Train Crash Sends Cars Into Lake

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A train derailed today in southern India, sending nine passenger cars plummeting into a lake. More than 100 people were feared dead, the United News of India said.

About 500 people injured in the crash were taken to local hospitals, UNI quoted police sources as saying. Sixty-five bodies were recovered, UNI said.

The accident occurred as the train was crossing a bridge near the town of Quilon in the southern state of Kerala, the news agency said.

Quilon is about 30 miles north of the state capital at Trivandrum.

Seven of the passenger cars were totally submerged.

Divers from a nearby naval base were flown in by helicopter to assist in rescue operations. Firefighters from several towns were sent to help cut through the carriages.

The cause of the accident was not immediately known. The Press Trust of India earlier reported incorrectly that the train had plunged into a river.

The train was en route from Bangalore, the capital of neighboring Karnataka state, to Trivandrum when the crash occurred, UNI said.

It said villagers, some in small boats, rescued about 100 people from the water. They were taken to local hospitals for treatment, the agency said.

Two Men Arrested

Greenville police have arrested two men in connection with robberies at two Fresh Way Food Stores — one at 1401 Dickinson Ave. reported at 10:20 p.m. Thursday and the second at 2731 Memorial Drive reported about 1:01 a.m. today.

Officer R.G. Mendenhall said Lee Valious Ward, 31, of Ayden was arrested on an armed robbery charge about 2:55 a.m. today in connection with the Thursday night robbery.

Officer H.D. Hines said Ward was arrested on a common law robbery charge about 2:45 a.m. today in connection with the incident at the Memorial Drive store.

Hines said Charles Ray Grice, 28, of 200 Independence Ave. in Colonial Trailer Park was charged with aiding and abetting common law robbery in connection with the Memorial Drive Fresh Way incident.

The investigators said Pitt County deputy sheriff stopped Ward and Grice and talked with them about a half hour before the robbery at the Fresh Way on Memorial Drive was reported. After it was reported, police and deputies began looking for Grice and Ward because they matched the description of the robbers.

Ward was taken into custody about 2:45 a.m. on Roosevelt Avenue, while Grice was arrested near Fifth and Vance streets about 2:35 a.m. officers said.

Cable TV Panel Seeks Consultant

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Citizens Advisory Committee on Cable TV unanimously approved on Thursday an interim report on the committee's activities which recommends the city should hire a consultant to assist in the process of cable TV franchising.

According to the report, the franchising process will require significant technical expertise which a consultant will be able to provide. Such needed information includes an engineering analysis of the current system.

The approved report states, "The members of the committee and the city staff lack the highly specific technical expertise to assess the technical capabilities and problems with the current system, make recommendations concerning improvements, prepare proposals which would address channel capacity, technical standards, facilities and equipment, service to subscribers, local programming, future services and correction of past problems."

The purpose of the committee is to monitor the performance of the current cable television franchise and to make recommendations to the City Council regarding conditions for franchise renewal consistent with the best available technology and the public interest of Greenville citizens.

The current cable TV franchise was awarded to Greenville Cable TV Inc. on Aug. 5, 1976, for a period of 15 years, expiring in August 1991.

The committee was established in 1986 by the City Council with members appointed by that governing body.

Committee Chairman Andy Chused said the interim report and its recommendations approved last night will be presented to the council at its next monthly action meeting on Thursday.

Chused said in addition to recommendations, the report is a comprehensive outline of previous committee accomplishments over the course of 10 meetings conducted since its inception.

"This report represents a summary of what we've done based on the charges the city council has given us, what we've done so far, what we've talked to, what we've seen and what we've learned," he said.

Other recommendations of the report include, "The city should proceed with a franchising process with the intent to award a non-exclusive franchise to the present franchisee under improved franchise requirements," and "the City Council should authorize the Citizens Advisory Committee to continue its work on cable-related needs of the community and to propose franchising terms to the City Council."

According to the report, other municipalities have found consultants to be "an indispensable element" in the franchising process. The price for the recommended consulting services is estimated to be in the range of $20,000 to $40,000, depending on the scope of services requested.

The report states the practice in the industry appears to have the present franchisee pay the cost of the franchising process, including the cost of a consultant to assist the municipality.

Issues which might be addressed with a consultant's assistance include future cable needs of the community; service to ECU dormitories and facilities; interactive cable services; improved response to consumer complaints by Greenville Cable TV; whether to add a community access studio or portable equipment, and predictions of future improvements in technology.

"At this point in time, I don't see taking before the council ideas of what we would like to see when we really haven't fully investigated (the possibilities)," Chused said. "We know the direction that we want to go but the details of what we want in it I think is still yet to be determined."

According to City Attorney Mac McCarley, the Federal Cable Communications Policy act of 1984 provides that either the city or the cable franchisee may request a renewal or new franchise proposal 36 months prior to the ending date of the franchise agreement. That period begins on August 5.

"For six months that starts that date, the public policy act authorizes you to seek public input concerning the performance of the franchisee, and any possible changes you want in the future franchise, then at the end of that six months, there is a four month period where either we can put out a request for proposal or the present franchisee can put in their proposal for franchise. So we are starting that six month period for looking for public comment on adequacy of present service, future cable-related needs, those kinds of things," McCarley said.

The next meeting of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Cable TV is scheduled for Aug. 2.

Carolina Leaf Buys Plant

An official of a local tobacco processing and storage firm today confirmed the company's purchase of a 131,000-square-foot tobacco processing plant and two other buildings in Wake County.

Guy O. Hawkins, president of Carolina Leaf Tobacco Company Inc., said the company has purchased the processing plant and two other buildings in Fuquay-Varina owned by Tobacco Growers Services, Inc.

Hawkins said Carolina Leaf currently plans to dismantle the facility, take out whatever equipment the company can utilize to help improve its processing situation and then to sell the remainder of the acquisition.

"The reason for our purchasing the facility is to increase our volume of processing in the Greenville facility," Hawkins said.

Carolina Leaf buys tobacco at auction, removes the stems, re-drys the tobacco to a controlled degree of moisture according to customer's specifications, stores the product and subsequently ships the material.

As a result of the purchase, Hawkins said Carolina Leaf will receive the processing work formerly done by Tobacco Growers Services through the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp.

Hawkins said the additional volume of work created through the acquisition is still unknown, but indicated it would likely create demand for additional seasonal employment.

Currently, Carolina Leaf employs 86 year-round employees and 346 seasonal employees.

Hawkins would not disclose the purchase agreement amount but did say the buyer and seller both indicate the amount was considerably higher than the $866,000 for which revenue stamps indicate the buildings and land were sold.

Math, Science Institutes Held

ECU News Bureau

Fifty-nine middle school mathematics and science teachers from public schools in eastern North Carolina have been at East Carolina University this summer as participants in three summer institutes.

The teachers have been enrolled in a field geology summer institute focusing on the plains and Piedmont regions of North Carolina, a program on the use of LOGO computer language to instruct math classes, and a session on "FAST I" (Foundational Approaches to Science Teaching), an environmental science curriculum.

Area participants included: Washington — Audrey Williams, Small Elementary School; Sally Hillberg, Beaufort County schools, and Elizabeth Eastman, Bath High School; Snow Hill — Gina Brann, Greene Central High School; Hamilton — Franklin Mobley, Edna Andrews School; Williamston — Sandra Taylor, Jamesville School; Greenville — Nancy J. Community Planners To Meet

ECU News Bureau

More than 100 professional and citizen planners from across eastern North Carolina are scheduled to attend a daylong Eastern North Carolina Planners Conference in Greenville Thursday.

Sponsored by the Regional Development Institute of East Carolina University and the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, the conference is designed to improve the effectiveness of planning efforts.

It is "to provide insight into more successful planning techniques, to show how these techniques can be applied and to inform planners of ways to make these techniques work in their communities," S. Richard Brockett of the RDI professional staff said.

Featured speaker will be Jerome L. Kaufman, professor of planning in the urban and regional planning department, University of Wisconsin-Madison. Kaufman will address the approaches and strategies of planning for non-metropolitan areas, and the prospects of planning in areas of high or no-growth.

Afternoon sessions will include a study of aspects of the responsibilities of planning board members and Dr. Richard Ducker of the Institute of Government, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will discuss applied techniques to assist both the professional and citizen planner.

A combined session featuring a panel discussion of eastern North Carolina's existing planning mandates, moderated by RDI director Janice Faulkner, will conclude the program.

Co-sponsoring the conference are the Region L, Neuse River, Albemarle, Cape Fear and Mid-East Councils of Government.

For further information, contact S. Richard Brockett, Planning Conference, RDI, Willis Building, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27858. Telephone (919) 757-6650.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

DON'T TAKE THIS PERSONALLY!

Do you know the difference between real estate and personal property? Real estate is defined as "the land, including the buildings or improvements on it." Personal property is defined as "any property that is not real property, and that is movable or not attached to the land."

Sounds simple enough, doesn't it? But wait! Did you know that personal property can be turned into real estate? For example, if you go to the lumber yard and purchase two-by-fours, siding and shingles, they are personal property-not attached to anything. But when you take them home and assemble them into an addition to your home, they become real estate.

Here's a test for you. Your Aunt Sally gave you her expensive antique crystal chandelier as a housewarming present when you purchased your present home. You had it wired into your formal dining room ceiling, where it has witnessed many an entertaining evening as you dined.

Now you plan to sell your home. Is the chandelier personal property or real estate? The answer is real estate. By permanently affixing it to your home, it has become an "improvement". If a purchase offer is accepted from a buyer while the chandelier is in place, it is considered to be part of the property and must be left in place. If you plan to take the chandelier with you, have it removed and replace it with one of comparable value before you offer your home for sale.

A competent REALTOR forsees and clarifies situations that may become problems later. I'm here to help you. Let me be your personal REALTOR.

'Summer Ventures'

A five-week "Summer Ventures in Science and Mathematics" program has drawn 119 academically talented high school students to the East Carolina University campus.

"Summer Ventures," the nation's largest cost-free summer enrichment program for able high school students, is offered on six campuses of the University of North Carolina system. The program is administered by the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics.

Each year approximately 720 students are invited to participate after selection by a committee of professionals in education, science and mathematics. Finalists are assigned to specific campuses, according to the students' particular scientific and mathematical interests. Each student is enrolled in three two-hour classes daily. Weekend field trips are planned.

In addition to the daily courses, some students will work with medical research teams led by a School of Medicine faculty member.

The "Summer Ventures" program began June 26 and will run through July.

Summer Art Classes

Wedgewood Weaving of Ayden is offering summer art classes for children ages 6-14.

Classes include oil painting, arts and crafts and mixed media.

The oil painting class is offered for 9-14-year olds. It has a two-week session, beginning Monday and continuing through July 21. Classes meet from 9:30 a.m. until noon.

The arts and crafts class is for 6-8-year olds and runs from July 25 through Aug. 5. Classes last from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m.

The mixed media class is for 9-14-year olds and runs from Aug. 8 through Aug. 14 with classes meeting from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m.

College Money

RALEIGH (AP) — Community college officials Thursday hailed as a "major victory" a decision by state lawmakers to let them keep almost $12 million in state money that otherwise would have reverted to the General Fund because of declining enrollments.

The money, which community college officials had lobbied hard to keep during the current short legislative session, will be used primarily to hire additional instructors to reduce class sizes.

Funding for the state's 58 community colleges is largely based on the number of students they enroll. Because 1987-88 enrollment had fallen about 6,000 students short of the previous year's projection, school officials came up with an excess of $11.99 million.

Seminar On Gifted Scheduled

ECU News Bureau

"Meeting the Social and Emotional Needs of the Gifted" is the topic of a seminar to be led by author Judith Galbraith at the Wahl-Coates Elementary School auditorium Monday from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Ms. Galbraith is author of "The Gifted Kid's Survival Guides" and "Managing the Social and Emotional Needs of the Gifted." Her seminar is the opening session of the second summer institute for teachers of the gifted sponsored by the East Carolina University Department of Special Education.

JUDITH GALBRAITH

Seminar topics include the "great gripes of gifted kids" and ways educators, counselors and parents can help gifted children manage stress, cope with pressure, resolve conflict and accept themselves and others.

A special night session, "Feeling Good About Being Gifted," will be held at Wahl-Coates from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. The session is specifically designed for parents and students.

The program runs through July 21 and consists of sessions on curricula, effective teaching methods for the gifted, the use of competitions and independent study, appropriate learning environments and meeting the needs of the learning disabled, minorities and other "special populations" among the gifted.

There is a registration fee for the all-day seminar Monday, and the night session charges admission.

Further information about the seminar, the night session or the institute is available from the ECU Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27858; telephone 757-6109.

Employers Expecting Job Growth

Employers in the Greenville area anticipate a continued robust hiring pace for the coming months, according to results of the latest employment outlook survey released this week by Manpower Inc., a temporary help service.

Kay Warren Gay, Manpower's Greenville office manager, said that "of the area employers polled about third quarter 1988 hiring plans, 53 percent see more jobs on the horizon for the July-August-September period" while 3 percent expect a decline in employment and 44 percent plan to remain at current levels.

Last summer, 43 percent of the employers surveyed forecast more jobs and none anticipated a hiring slowdown, while three months ago 57 percent expressed plans to add workers.

Nationwide, according to the Manpower survey, 31 percent expect to boost staff size and 6 percent plan cutbacks.

In Greenville, according to the data, job opportunities are predicted by the construction industry, both durable and non-durable goods manufacturers, transportation and public utility firms, wholesalers and retailers, and the education and services sector. A few staff reductions are foreseen in the public administration sector.

Manpower Inc. conducts the employment outlook survey — telephone interviews — on a quarterly basis as a measurement of employer intentions to increase or decrease the permanent work force.

The latest survey was conducted during the last two weeks of May.

Correction

The owner of a truck which burned on N.C. 33 north of Greenville Tuesday night was incorrectly identified as a passenger pulled to safety by a passerby. A passenger not named in the article was Edward Coleman Stox Jr., 28, of Route 6, Greenville.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Urban Diversity

Keeping The 'Green' In Greenville

A funny thing happens to towns when they become cities.

They lose a lot of their trees. Vacant lots with grass and birds and squirrels become parking lots or stores or fast food places. Streets with houses and condos take the place of quiet lanes lined with trees. The areas near creeks and streams become prime property for building.

Suddenly, the green spaces that make a community appealing and make it habitable disappear. Concrete paves the way for urbanization, and although metropolitan growth and its prosperity are welcome, appeal is lost.

Development often brings homogenization. An environment containing only man made structures is visual tedium, and monotony does the community no good.

Greenville faces this situation. As the city expands, the corridors of green that keep it diverse are shrinking. These areas, usually found along flood prone waterways, provide a small respite from the city landscape. Often environmentally unsuitable for development, they frequently serve as buffers between conflicting land uses.

These areas, known as greenways, are useful and attractive when preserved in their natural state and utilized for community recreation. Trails can be established, providing opportunities for walking, jogging and bicycling. A system of linear parks of this type can add immeasurable value to a community.

Greenville's City Council was correct to endorse a greenway system for the city — one which would preserve wetlands and floodplains and provide uses and access for the public. That board should proceed with the project, garnering the support of landowners and devising uses for the property.

Establishing environmental corridors within the city would protect areas of recreational and aesthetic benefit from runaway land development. A large city needs corridors for wildlife and nature. Raleigh, the center of urban sprawl in 1988, has 800 acres of greenway space providing 27 miles of trails.

Greenville can offer a comparable package quite feasibly. The city should incorporate this goal in all long-range and short-term planning. Doing so will preserve an aspect of appeal the city is rapidly losing — it will keep the green in Greenville.

Urbanization doesn't have to mean blight. Growth doesn't have to mandate sameness and monotony. Greenways can provide diversity in the metropolitan landscape.

About Time

Meese's Departure Long Overdue

The long anticipated exit of Edwin Meese has taken place — but not necessarily with the vindication he claims.

Better late than never, the saying goes, and that certainly applies to Meese. He should have resigned months ago when allegations of his improprieties began damaging the operation and integrity of the U.S. Department of Justice.

The embattled attorney general will leave in late July or early August, he says. Independent counsel James McKay filed an 830-page report which was not made public and it is believed it seeks no indictments against Meese but may be critical of his relationship with Wedtech Corp. The report is expected to be made public in late July.

The argument over Ed Meese's ethical conduct will continue even after he leaves office. One thing is certain, however. His departure is overdue. There have been several high level resignations in the Department of Justice which have impaired the department's ability to function. Morale is reported to be low and it would be most surprising if it were not.

There will be no jubilation shown in the camp of Vice President George Bush, the assured presidential candidate of the Republican party. Nevertheless the sighs of relief can be heard all over Washington. Meese and the Justice Department difficulties are a liability to the Bush presidential campaign and nothing could be better news than what has just occurred. Meese will be gone by the time the campaign moves into full swing. While he may be a campaign issue, Meese will no longer be in the attorney general's office to serve as a constant reminder of ethical questions.

Edwin Meese has long been a political associate of President Reagan. The president was determined not to force his old friend out. Finally Meese resigned, declared himself vindicated and thus expects the entire mess to go away. It won't, of course, and it's too bad that the president wasn't forceful enough to act much sooner to bring new and effective leadership to the Department of Justice. The nation suffered from that time of inaction, which is a high price to pay for presidential friendship.

A Lottery Of Miscalculation

'All that is certain is that 290 innocent civilians are dead and that with them have almost certainly died all hopes of an early lessening of the tensions between Iran and the United States.'

on which the Americans were trying to warn him.

Among the questions for the U.S. naval investigators are as follows: why did the USS Vincennes radar operators assume from the airliner's profile — its heading, its 450 knot speed and its rate of climb — that this was an F-14 and not Iran Air's morning flight to Dubai? Did they electronically "interrogate" the airliner's radar echo, and if so, did the Airbus give an automatic response indicating that it was a civilian, not a military plane? How was the decision to launch an anti-aircraft missile taken? Did the cruiser's captain have time to stop and think, or did the disaster result from his misjudgment of the rules of action?

What is clear is that the new hostilities between the U.S. and Iran could not have come at a worse time for the Iranian leadership. They pose a particular dilemma for the Speaker of Parliament, Hojatoleslam Hashemi Rafsanjani, who, next to Ayatollah Khomeini, has emerged as the new Iranian strongman.

Reaction to the Airbus disaster could shift the balance between relative moderates and extremists in the Iranian regime and endanger the lives of all Western, but particularly American, hostages in Beirut.

The series of defeats Iran has suffered in the ground war with Iraq in recent weeks, coupled with the fact that it lost almost half of its naval strength in a single battle with the U.S. last April, convinced the Ayatollah to appoint Rafsanjani as acting commander-in-chief with the task of revitalizing Iran's flagging war effort.

Yet, Rafsanjani's task won't be easy in light of the Airbus tragedy which is precisely the kind of calamity the hardliners will be tempted to exploit at a time when their position is under challenge. Rafsanjani has been pushing for a more moderate and realistic foreign policy, coupled with an attempt to dissolve the Revolutionary Guards, the natural stronghold of the hardliners.

But now the world awaits the inevitable exemplary reply, triggered by Iran's hardliners. But where — without incurring an ever more devastating counterattack from the Reagan administration? In an inflamed situation like this, there should be great concern in Washington that one of the most advanced naval vessels in the world failed to identify a civilian Airbus. If such technology can't work on the high seas, how in the world is a similarly technologically dependent Star Wars system supposed to protect the United States? Could a malfunctioning Star Wars system mistake the sun for a Russian attack?

War, like uneasy peace, is a lottery of miscalculation. That is the bleak fact in the Gulf, an array of potential disasters waiting to happen. And if the Gulf is complicated, one should contemplate the unrestrained horror of any nuclear exchange. After all, the Gulf War is supposed to be crisply extrapolated from the drawing board to be made to seem clinically efficient. But in this latest technological fiasco, all that is certain is that 290 innocent civilians are dead and that with them have almost certainly died all hopes of an early lessening of the tensions between Iran and the United States.

Something Worse Than War

I heard of the latest Persian Gulf incident from National Public Radio while driving home from Nashville, Tenn. The collective deaths of even 290 terrorists would give most of us cause for momentary grief at the wastage of human life. The extinction of a similar number of civilian lives, many of them children's lives, is a horror differing from the Holocaust in scale but not in substance. And we all ask ourselves in that moment when our eyes close and breath goes out in a sigh, "What went wrong?"

What went wrong is simply that there is a war under way in and around the Persian Gulf. The world has evolved rules for the conduct of war, and though it may seem that the very concept of rules for the dreadful thing that we call war is lunacy, we have here an example of why they did in fact come about — there are worse things than war.

The U.S. Navy is in the gulf for a reason so simple as to be irrelevant in these modern, sophisticated times. It is called freedom of the seas. That was the first mission of the U.S. Navy after independence. A flag officer named Preble led a small fleet of warships to the Mediterranean to restrain the Barbary pirates from attacking American shipping. Later the U.S. Navy and the Royal Navy exterminated piracy in U.S. waters and ruthlessly enforced a ban on the slave trade. This was done because the collective will of mankind wishes the sea to be free for the passage of all and the pursuit of peaceful trade.

In time of war things are more complicated. It is customary for belligerent nations to deny maritime trade to one another, extending even to ships of non-belligerent nations. In 1914 it came about that merchant ships were subjected to submarine attack without warning, ending the longstanding "Rules of Prize Warfare" that had made the interdiction of trade a fairly civilized process. Western nations were horrified by this development, but soon realized that technology made it inevitable.

In the Iran-Iraq War something new has been added. Iraq has attacked Iranian and otherwise-flagged tankers taking oil out. Both sides, of course, are selling oil, and are using the proceeds to buy weapons used in a war that may have ended a million lives for a few square miles of marshland on their mutual border. As terrible as that is, it isn't new. Neither is the extensive use of chemical weapons, a special horror largely ignored in the rest of the world. What is new are Iranian attacks against tankers of non-belligerent nations trading with other gulf states, and occasionally against those states as well. This is done in the belief that those other states are providing financial support to Iraq as a foil against the Islamic revolution in Iran, which may well be true. While Iran is unwilling to declare war against its neighbors, it seems to want to share with them the misery and costs of that war.

And that is why the U.S. Navy is in the Persian Gulf. The duty of sustaining the principle of freedom of the seas historically falls on the nation with the most powerful navy, and that's us. Unfortunately, we have handled the matter poorly.

We extended our protection only to American-flagged Kuwaiti tankers as if freedom of the seas were a superpower prerogative, even though we have entered wars to prove that it was not. Historians tell us that departure from principle in the name of expediency is always a mistake. For those who don't believe, here is renewed proof. The principle was not observed in full, and the Iranians gave it commensurate respect. Move and countermove have ensued. American sailors have died because we have ordered them to be a "presence" in a war zone. Our ships must live in a war zone, must defend themselves but may not take any decisive action to end the threats. When attacked, they take enough action to punish the attackers, but not those who gave the orders. This is a part of the world where human life is rather a cheaper currency than it is here. And so it goes on.

And so while the Vincennes was fighting yet another small engagement against Iranian gunboats, a new blip appeared on its radar screens. The aircraft was reportedly not in a designated airliner corridor.

Put yourself in the captain's place. U.S. ships have been attacked by aircraft in the gulf, at the cost of American lives. You have one battle under way, and now there is a new potential threat. It is heading toward you at 450 knots. Not so long ago, another U.S. Navy cruiser shot it out with air and surface units at the same time. You try to warn the aircraft off. Your radar doesn't tell you what kind of aircraft it is because radar sets don't do that. If it's an airliner, you think, it ought to have its transponder on — but military aircraft can and have used airliner codes on their transponder boxes. Maybe the transponder was broken. Maybe it was switched off. A fighter-bomber can go faster than 450 knots, but that's about the right speed for a bomb or missile attack. You call him on a different frequency to warn him off. He is heading right toward you, and 450 knots means that he's closing the range on your ship at a rate of almost 9 miles per minute. Your lookouts are searching for him with their "big eye" spotting glasses, but they can't see him in the clouds and haze. Who is it? You're still calling him on the radio when it occurs to you that he's closer to you than the plane that put two Exocet missiles into the Stark.

What would you do now? You'd probably remember that the prime duty of a ship's captain is the safety of his ship. The captain of the Vincennes waited long enough that he fired two missiles at a range of 9 miles, when those missiles can reach at least five times that distance. Probably you're still hoping to raise him. If you do, you can shut off the guidance radar and the missiles will self-destruct. But he doesn't answer, and the SM2MR missiles performed as designed. Then you find out that it is an airliner. You did everything right, and killed 290 civilians.

It is an overly respected Western tradition that when politicians can't decide what to do, people in uniform are sent to the troublesome spots to do the dying, and the killing. People in uniform don't ask very much of us, despite the fact that we ask a lot of them. What they deserve are clear orders and clear missions, but that doesn't happen very much. Because it didn't happen here, something worse than war did happen.

I wonder if Capt. Will C. Rogers III will have a decent night's sleep anytime soon. You see, he is a victim, too.

Generosity Could Turn Iran Tragedy Into Opportunity

The tragic shooting down of the Iranian Airbus, like death in a family, provides a much-needed opportunity for improving relations among the survivors. The United States now has a chance to move toward a better relationship with the government and people of Iran.

Many will ask, "Do we want good relations with Iran?" After all, Shia extremists, with the tolerance if not the active support of the government of Iran, have seized innocent Westerners and still hold them hostage. Iran still rejects a U.N.-proposed cease-fire in the bloody war with Iraq, now in its eighth year. Iran lays mines in the Persian Gulf. The list of our grievances goes on and on.

If "good relations" required approval of each other's conduct, then Iran and the United States would not want good relations. We each disapprove of much of what the other does. But between governments, as between business organizations and individuals, what is needed is not mutual approval but the ability to deal sensibly with matters of joint concern. What we want is a working relationship — an ability to work together. The more serious our differences, the more important it is that we are able to deal with them.

More than two years ago President Reagan recognized the goal of a better working relationship with Iranian moderates, and sent arms to Iran in exchange for hostages. Improving the relationship was a worthy goal, and doing business of some kind might have been a fair approach but rewarding kidnapers with secret ransom was a disaster. If Ronald Reagan would pay blackmail, it became impossible to persuade kidnapers that others would not also give in.

This week's tragedy gives us a chance to overcome the terrible setback of the Iran-Contra scandal. If we understand the goal of a working relationship and the strategy of pursuing it, Reagan may be able to change history's course as Anwar Sadat of Egypt did in flying to Jerusalem. Good joint problem-solving requires reason, understanding, communication, reliability, being open to persuasion and an acceptance of each other as someone who has legitimate interests and a point of view that deserves a hearing.

Such a relationship cannot be bought for arms or dollars. It cannot be bought by giving in to extortion — by appeasement. A working relationship has to be built by actions that deal with the human dimension.

In shipping arms, Reagan wanted to do something for Iran. Now we can do it, not as a reward for criminal conduct but as a consequence of a tragic accident. We can demonstrate our concern for innocent human life not because an ayatollah demands it but because 290 people were killed as a consequence of our tragic mistake. We can show a contrast between the United States and U.S. behavior and that of the Soviet Union not by arguing that our mistake in shooting down the Iranian airliner was somewhat more reasonable than the Soviet mistake in shooting down the Korean airliner but by our being more understanding, more responsive, more decent and more true to the values that we profess.

How might this be done? First, we should be seen as responding to the tragedy — not to any Iranian threat. This means that the sooner generous actions are taken, the better. We might, for example, do the following:

Flags on all U.S. naval ships in the gulf might be flown at half-mast for 30 days (or, better, for an appropriate period under Islamic custom).

Capt. Will C. Rogers III of the Vincennes might ask Iran if he could go to Iran and personally convey his sympathy and condolences to bereaved families of those lost in the crash. (When a Japan Air Lines plane crashed, the company chairman, before resigning, personally called on the family of each victim and conveyed his sympathy.)

The U.S. government could ask the advice of the government of Iran about appropriate ways to provide compensation for the plane, crew and passengers. We could do this not because we admit a legal obligation but because we think that it's the right thing to do. (The United States paid compensation to Japanese fishermen injured by radiation from our nuclear testing in the Pacific without admitting any liability.) Consulting Iran before we decide on what compensation we think appropriate would do more to build a relationship than could any particular formula or dollar amount on which we might decide.

There is no guarantee that doing such things would move Iran to take steps toward ending the war or releasing Western hostages, but it would be more likely to do so than would our further arguments to justify the quick decision that Capt. Rogers was forced to make.

Peace is not an end to differences but a way of dealing with them. As our two countries face this tragedy side by side, we have a chance to move toward peace.

The Question From Moscow

Mikhail S. Gorbachev's party conference will not be soon forgotten. Whatever its concrete effect, there is no doubt that it was a radical departure from past procedures.

Gorbachev managed to open up the political process in an unprecedented way, and he undoubtedly hoped that there would be a parallel reaction in the economy. But with delegates unleashing pent-up complaints about food shortages, pollution, corruption, incompetence and political skulduggery, there must have been times when Gorbachev found himself asking just what he had set in motion. That would explain his desperate plea last Thursday to curb the complaining and political name-calling and to focus instead on plans for reform.

But when his message went unheeded and former Moscow party chief Boris Yeltsin and Politburo member Yegor Ligachev openly sought to destroy each other, Gorbachev evidently concluded that too much of a good thing would do nothing for his economic reforms. That may explain why Gorbachev seemed to end the conference so abruptly.

But if one of Gorbachev's goals was to provoke economic change, it is hard to see where he succeeded. He called for an increase in operating autonomy for Soviet peasants, even a form of private farming as well as for more private and cooperative business and manufacturing activity. All this in turn would mean curbing the role of ministries and Gosplan (the state planning commission), as well as a more meaningful price and market system.

But Gorbachev has been calling for such changes for several months. Nothing that happened at the conference would seem to have accelerated the process. Instead, caught up in the dynamic negativism, numerous delegates vented their anger and frustration over the economic inadequacies of the system. As a worker from the Ural Mountains put it at the conference, "The workers ask directly, where is 'perestroika?'" Nothing has changed in the food shops except for the addition of sugar rationing. Meat is still unavailable, as it has been for a long time, and now non-food consumer goods also disappear periodically.

Such protests certainly did not come as news to the average Soviet citizen who knows firsthand that Gorbachev has been unable to generate economic change. But to hear such shortcomings proclaimed repeatedly by conference delegates seemed to provide confirmation of the overall dimensions of the problem.

Even Gorbachev's economic advisers found themselves swept up in the process. Leonid Abalkin, the director of the Institute of Economics of the Academy of Sciences, complained that the rate of growth of the Soviet national income for the last two years was below what it was during the Brezhnev period.

Gorbachev was clearly hoping that the party conference would stimulate the process of economic transformation. But while he commanded Prime Minister Nikolai I. Ryzhkov to increase food supplies and Politburo member Nikolai P. Slyunkov to do the same for other consumer goods, Gorbachev did not accompany these words with deeds; there was no decree abolishing the collective farm or Gosplan. Instead, there is general acknowledgment that the enterprise law passed by the Soviet government in 1987 that was supposed to free the factories from ministerial control has been sabotaged by the bureaucrats. The Soviet cooperative law that was to encourage non-state production appears to have suffered the same fate.

It may be that because "glasnost" has made it possible for people to complain publicly about the country's economic shortcomings, their sense of frustration is made deeper than it might otherwise be. Yet for the recent visitor to Moscow the extent of the disappointment and the cynicism about the economic reforms are unmatched by anything since the mid-1960s. Gorbachev has bought about vast change in political discourse during his more than three years in power, but he has nothing to show for his efforts in terms of economic improvements. If the situation is anything like Abalkin and the delegates from the Urals suggest, the economic situation may have deteriorated.

A Soviet worker was asked on Soviet television what perestroika meant to him. "It means I work harder for less," he said. If Gorbachev is to succeed, he will have to reverse that equation. Unfortunately, nothing happened at the party conference to indicate that such changes will take place soon.

IN THE STATE

Bridge Blast

MARION (AP) — A contingent of Fort Bragg soldiers accidentally damaged 20 to 40 homes in McDowell County during a training exercise in which they used explosives to destroy a wooden railroad trestle, state officials said.

"We had reports of houses as far as a mile away in which bathroom ceilings caved in and pictures fell off the wall," Thad Bryson, the state's emergency management coordinator for western North Carolina, said. "It shook the world."

Bryson said the only injury that had been reported Thursday was by a woman who said a picture frame had hit her head. He said the injury was not serious.

The soldiers were paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division, an elite Army team, Bryson said.

The railroad trestle about 10 miles north of Marion carried a spur line across a creek and a dirt road to American Thread, a local factory, he said. The factory was still operating, but had stopped using the spur and wanted to get rid of the trestle, he said.

Bryson said the blast threw debris about 200 to 300 yards and collapsed the bridge in two sections. A concrete piling that had held the center of the bridge remained standing.

Rape Sentence

WILMINGTON (AP) — Thurman Dee Anderson Jr. was sentenced Thursday to life in prison plus 10 years for kidnapping, raping and assaulting four women last year at Wrightsville Beach and Carolina Beach.

Anderson pleaded guilty to three counts of first-degree kidnapping, three counts of first-degree sex offense, first-degree rape and attempted first-degree rape. He also pleaded guilty to common-law robbery, which was reduced from armed robbery, and assault with a deadly weapon, which was reduced from a felony to a misdemeanor assault charge.

He received four life sentences, but they are to be served concurrently. The 10-year term will begin at the expiration of the life sentence. A person sentenced to life in North Carolina is eligible for parole in 20 years.

Anderson, 23, entered the pleas after Judge Howard Manning rejected a defense motion to suppress the testimony of women who identified him as their attacker.

Tar Heel Democrats Hope National Session Will Avoid Major Fireworks

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Democrats have their fingers crossed in hopes that next week's national party convention in Atlanta will go smoothly, state Chairman Jim Van Hecke says.

National politics has figured prominently in the outcome of recent state elections in North Carolina, Van Hecke said Thursday.

"The two times we have lost the governorship have been in years where there's been a huge national movement toward the Republican Party," he said. "If the convention blows up on us, we could have some problems here."

A 95-member delegation will represent North Carolina at the July 18-21 convention, Van Hecke told reporters at state party headquarters. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, the party's nominee for governor, was elected delegation chairman at last month's state convention.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis apparently has sewed up the presidential nomination and his choice of a running mate may be known before the convention starts.

But fireworks could erupt over the party platform. Jesse Jackson vowed to push for approval of several planks rejected by the platform committee. If he is passed over for the vice presidential nomination, his supporters may be especially inclined to wage a floor battle.

Van Hecke said a vigorous debate of the issues would not hurt the party as long as the winners and losers reacted with grace and mutual respect, as North Carolina's Democrats did in apportioning delegates to the convention.

"We've tried to keep the big picture of things and tried to not let the petty issues... be blown up into something large and out of hand," he said.

Jordan's request to be chosen North Carolina delegation chairman demonstrates his intention to embrace Dukakis and his running mate, Van Hecke said. He noted that Republican Gov. Jim Martin, whom Jordan is challenging, has declined to be a delegate to his party's national convention in August.

"We've got a candidate running for governor that wants to lead the party, and they've got a split party and nobody knows who's leading, I guess," Van Hecke said.

Some Democrats have speculated Martin wanted to distance himself from Bush, whom polls have shown trailing Dukakis.

Security Expert Says Hospitals Are Risky

GREENSBORO (AP) — Last month's kidnapping of a newborn child at a High Point hospital could not have been prevented, and almost every obstetrics ward risks a similar incident as hospitals offer a "touchy-feeling" environment for delivering babies, an expert on hospital security says.

John Rabun, deputy director for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington, was in North Carolina on Thursday to see how High Point Regional and Moses Cone hospitals maintain security.

Two weeks ago, Rabun provided an accurate profile of the type of woman who stole 2-day-old Jayson Ray McClure from his mother's arms. In the case, a woman dressed in nurse's clothes took the baby, saying she was going to weigh the infant.

Rabun said he will return to North Carolina next month to prepare a training film for hospital security staffs across the country.

Since Jan. 1, 1984, at least 30 infants, three in the past 30 days, have been kidnapped from hospitals by emotionally disturbed women who lost a child or could not have one. In most cases, the kidnapper was familiar with the hospital, had carefully planned the kidnapping, and usually passed herself off as a nurse or doctor, Rabun said.

"You probably can do too much," he said. "Armed guards are not the answer. These ladies are so compulsive, they're going to do it somewhere."

Hospitals are struggling with conflicting issues — security concerns vs. social concerns — as family members are encouraged to bond with the newborn child, he said.

To do that, hospitals are increasingly promoting a homey, open environment, much to the chagrin of security directors, who have warned about future trouble, Rabun said. As hospitals relax visitation policies to encourage family bonding with the infants, more people are wandering hospital corridors.

"It strikes me that we may have gone willy-nilly into that. Clearly, in some hospitals, it's damn near unbridled," he said.

But doubling security staff is equally problematic, he said, because it can backfire and "send a double message to mom: This hospital ain't safe."

Rabun said hospitals can take basic steps to discourage kidnappings:

— In addition to a photograph identification badge, hospital staff should have a second ID to present to mothers before they hand over their child.

— Hospitals must be creative with those badges. Nurses who cuddle and rock a baby are quick to lay aside sharp, hard, breast-pocket name tags. "Why? Practical answer. You're going to rip the kid's face off."

One creative hospital has adopted a safe, campaign button ID with "bunny rabbits, Donald Duck, nice touchy-feely kind of stuff, and they put 'Nursery Staff' on there and in strict mothers 'Never give up your child to anyone who doesn't have this button on,'" Rabun said.

— Reconsider the number of visitors a patient can have and make those visitors register.

— Bring back "footprinting" infants. If done properly, the corny souvenir is both savvy marketing and an invaluable tool for police who investigate child kidnappings, Rabun said.

State Can Expect Dryness To Stay

By The Associated Press

Scattered rains this week did little to ease the drought in North Carolina's mountains, but they did give farmers some hope, officials said.

However, hot, dry weather has been forecast for central North Carolina for the entire summer, threatening the region's agricultural economy, says a National Weather Service 90-day forecast.

"Unless we get a hurricane or a tropical storm, it looks like we're in for dry conditions right on through September," Larry Gabrick, a National Weather Service meteorologist at Raleigh-Durham Airport, said Thursday.

Grover Moreland, director of Henderson County Agriculture Extension Office, said even showers on the Fourth of July left farmers celebrating.

"If they minded, there was something wrong with them," he said. "Three weeks ago, the pastures were brown. Today they're green."

Henderson County, where about 70 percent of the state's apples are grown, has received about four inches of rain during the past two weeks, Moreland said.

"The prognosis is good to excellent for the crops, if the weather cooperates," he said.

But forecasters say cooperation is not in the immediate future. "In the short-term outlook, there's not much relief in areas that need rain," said Ben Woods, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Raleigh.

Streams are down to a trickle in some parts of the state, and several have reached record lows for June.

Robert Mason, a hydrologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Raleigh, said the French Broad River in Asheville was flowing at an average of 566 cubic feet per second last month.

"That's the lowest for June in about a century," he told the Greensboro News & Record.

Asheville's rainfall deficit for 1988, as of Wednesday, was 13.7 inches below normal.

"Things are really critical," said Kenneth Reeves, Buncombe County's agricultural extension director. "The water supply is falling. Springs are drying up. People are hard hit. Ask any farmer in the area."

Reeves said this year's dry spell may be worse than the 1986 drought. "The water is just not there," he said. "This is the worst any of us know about."

Bass Hyatt, Cherokee County agricultural extension agent, said his county is as dry as any in the state.

"Streams are at the lowest I've seen in my lifetime," he said. "I walked across Brasstown Creek with my shoes on for the first time in my life. People have drowned in that creek."

In Woodfin and Biltmore Forest, both in Buncombe County, citizens are required to conserve water. In Columbus, Tryon, Weaverville, Bryson City, Robbinsville, Spruce Pine, Hendersonville and Lansing, residents are being asked to conserve water voluntarily. But in the Piedmont, rain has not been as scarce. The 1988 rainfall total for Greensboro is 6.94 inches below normal.

"I don't think we're in the drought yet, but if this continues, we probably could be," Alamance livestock agent Paul Walker said.

In the western part of the state, farmers are taking their livestock to market because they have neither the grain nor the water to give them, Reeves said.

And the farmers aren't coming away with a profit, said Leigh Whisenhunt, bookkeeper for the Western Carolina Livestock Market.

Whisenhunt said steers weighing 400-500 pounds were marketed at 84 cents to 87 cents per pound this week. At the same time last year, they were priced at 86 cents to 90 cents per pound.

"A couple of weeks ago it was the lowest it's been," Whisenhunt said. The price dropped to 75 cents per pound one week last month.

Although the cool, drizzling rain last week changed a lot of people's attitudes, Hyatt said, "One day of hot sunshine can take up a quarter of an inch of rainfall."

In Watauga County, agricultural extension director Gene Brewer said he can't remember the last time it rained. The county's major crops — Christmas trees and ornamental plants — are showing signs of drought, he said.

"A lot died that were set out in late spring. The bigger trees are showing less growth than normal. They don't have moisture, and the tops of the trees don't straighten. We need rain and we need it soon."

Moreland said the next month will be crucial in determining crop damage. "We've got our fingers crossed," he said. "You can never guess what's going to happen next week. But we wouldn't be in the farming business if we didn't have the faith."

Local Appropriations Preserved In Budget Bill

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Senate leaders dropped their opposition to funding legislators' pet local projects, breaking a logjam that had threatened to scuttle a $177 million capital projects budget bill.

The House and Senate were expected to vote today on the compromise bill, which won speedy approval of a joint conference committee Thursday. It took the 14-member panel about 13 minutes to endorse the blueprint hammered out by legislative heavyweights Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, and Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham.

"Nobody won in my opinion," Royall told reporters. "We accepted things that we didn't want and they accepted things they didn't want."

But Senate GOP leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, charged that the package represented "a complete capitulation" by the Senate's Democratic leadership.

"They made up and made all these great speeches about openness," Cobb said, and vowed "that we were not going to have pork barrel this year. And we end up with $7 million worth of pork and we end up with all the final decisions being made behind closed doors by two people."

The House prevailed on 51 of 87 points of contention between House and Senate versions of the capital projects bill. The Senate prevailed on 36 points, but some were big-ticket items such as $10 million for grants and loans to local governments for improvement of their water and sewer systems.

The Senate had wanted to spend $15 million for the purpose and the House only $3 million.

Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, acknowledged the Senate had retreated from its stand against "pork barrel" spending.

"Many of the senators had informed their constituents that they were going to get some local money, and it was hard to deny them that privilege after they had made the commitment," Plyler said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said he had accepted the Senate's decision to back off on the issue. "We ought to continue to try to stop" pork-barrel spending in future sessions, he said.

The Senate approved a $3.6 million package of local appropriations Thursday on a 41-3 vote and sent it to the House, which last week passed a bill for its members' districts. The Senate approved the House bill 42-2 Thursday.

The capital projects bill will be the last major installment of a nearly $500 million supplement to the $9.9 billion 1988-89 budget.

Before Watkins and Royall reached their compromise, leaders of both chambers had said the Legislature might adjourn without passing the bill.

Despite Royall's contention that neither side was a clear winner, the logjam was broken only after the Senate leadership backed off its opposition to "pork barrel" spending and to earmarking money for specific community colleges and campuses in the University of North Carolina system.

The Senate preferred to appropriate lump sums that would be doled out by the UNC Board of Governors and the State Board of Community Colleges.

Another key decision of Watkins and Royall was that the chambers would agree to disagree over the final $5 million, with both deciding how to appropriate half the money.

The House pumped much of the $2.5 million under its control to community colleges and to projects in western North Carolina. Senators had complained that the House bill was tilted in favor of western counties, which House Speaker Liston Ramsey champions.

The compromise bill includes $19.7 million for UNC and $4 million for community colleges. Among the UNC allocations are $5.9 million for the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem; $1.5 million for a new sports arena at N.C. State University, which will be held in reserve until the university matches it; and $5 million for repairs and renovations.

Critics say the Legislature should not circumvent the university and community college boards by making direct appropriations to individual campuses.

Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, chairman of a House budget subcommittee and a member of the conference panel, defended the expenditures.

"I don't know that putting up $1.5 million in the university budget ... in matching money is causing the university budgeting methods to collapse," Nye said.

Other highlights of the compromise spending plan:

— $3.5 million for the North Carolina Zoological Park. The Senate had called for $6 million and the House $2 million.

— $7 million to add a seventh floor to the planned Department of Public Education Building in Raleigh. The House originally favored the expenditure while the Senate opposed it.

— $3.8 million to construct an office and conference center at the Tidewater Research Center in Plymouth. The Senate had recommended $3 million and the House $4 million.

— $340,000 to continue North Carolina's pursuit of the superconducting super collider project. The Senate favored the appropriation and the House opposed it.

— $500,000 to fund the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority's search for a facility site, the amount the House recommended. The Senate wanted $700,000.

— $250,000 for AIDS education grants to county and district health departments. The Senate had sought $1 million and the House none.

— $1 million for drought assistance. The Senate wanted $1.8 million and the House none.

— $582,000 for the Department of Commerce, including funds for the Rural Economic Development Center's Microenterprise Fund and the department's Japan and European offices. The Senate requested this money.

Dead Hogs Found In Columbus Field

CHERRY GROVE, N.C. (AP) — Authorities are investigating reports that people have been dumping dead hogs in Columbus County, where the pigs are bloating in the heat and exploding.

Bill Horne, an environmental health coordinator for the Columbus County Health Department, and Detective Roy Norris of the Columbus County Sheriff's Department said they found four hogs Thursday in various states of decomposition off a dirt road on land leased to Federal Paper Board Co. in the southern part of the county. Norris said it appeared that a couple hogs had bloated in the heat until they exploded.

Gasses building up inside decomposing animals, particularly in warm weather, can cause the skin to burst.

Four or five miles away, a bloated, 500-pound hog was found deep in other woodland leased to Federal. Norris advised against standing too close because it appeared that the hog might explode. Norris and Horne said they couldn't figure out why someone had gone to the trouble to haul hogs deep into the woods instead of burying them.

"For all the time and labor it took to get it out here, they could have hired someone to bury it," Norris said.

Whoever dumped the hogs broke a state law. An owner is required to bury a dead animal at least 3 feet underground within 24 hours after learning of the death, or get rid of the animal in a manner approved by the state veterinarian.

Norris said the Sheriff's Department will pursue the cases. The maximum charge for the misdemeanor is a $500 fine and six-month prison sentence.

Norris found few clues Thursday. He said he did not think the same person dumped all five hogs.

"I don't think these two sites are connected," he said. "But it could be that the same people didn't want to go back to the first site because they knew the hogs would be smelling."

Norris said he wasn't going back to look for more evidence.

"I've seen enough for one day," he said. "As far as smell goes, that was a tremendously bad odor."

Horne said the hogs raised health concerns. The top priority for the Health Department, he said, was to get the animals buried as soon as possible.

"The good thing around here ... is that no one lives in the area," he said. "We're not confronted with small children or people milling around and coming into contact with the animals."

Horne said insects devouring the carcasses could carry disease. He said it was not possible to tell how the hogs had died, nor was it practical to investigate a cause of death.

The County Commissioners may eventually have to take care of the problem. State law says counties must designate someone to remove dead domesticated animals found in unincorporated areas if the owner cannot be determined.

Mark Lynch, a spokesman for Federal, said in a telephone interview with the Morning Star of Wilmington that the company was not aware of the problem. Noting that Federal manages vast amounts of woodland, Lynch said dumping of various materials is a reoccurring problem.

Proposal Detailing Migrant Labor Standards Advances

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A bid to bring migrant labor standards under closer legislative scrutiny advanced after the House narrowly defeated an attempt to make sure North Carolina's sanitation standards for migrants remained in effect.

The Senate-passed bill calls for the Labor Department to re-adopt rules governing migrant laborers by next March, when those regulations would be subjected to Administrative Rules Review Commission approval for the first time.

The House Finance Committee amended the bill Thursday to keep in effect rules on drinking water, toilets, hand-washing facilities and the right of workers to know when they are working with hazardous chemicals. But the House reversed that action on a 54-51 vote. If the House Appropriations Committee approves the bill and the full House agrees, it will become law.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, who offered the amendment, told the House federal rules would soon take the place of any state regulations repealed.

"I don't think it's fair to give our farmers the sense of security that they don't need to do this (maintain sanitation standards)."

The issue has stirred controversy among farmers because the state Labor Department has sometimes gone beyond the federal government in providing sanitation for migrants.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, argued in favor of letting the state rules expire next March, when the Administrative Rules Review Committee could use powers granted in the bill to scrutinize the regulations as they are re-adopted.

He criticized current rules, saying they would prohibit migrant laborers from being housed even in rooms the size of dormitories at East Carolina University.

" Oftentimes the housing of them (migrants) is better than the housing the farmers are living in," he said. "If you want to put some sense in the rules you want to vote against it (Wright's amendment)."

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said without the Wright amendment all the rules would dissolve in March, because the Labor Department wouldn't have time to recover seven years of work in 10 months.

Watkins countered that the department needed only to submit the rules to the review commission — something that could be done quickly.

The amendment failed 54-51.

During the Finance Committee meeting, Labor Commissioner John Brooks said the bill could jeopardize North Carolina's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which is sanctioned by the federal government. He said the new process of administrative rules review would be more expensive to follow and might be unconstitutional.

Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, sponsor of the bill, said the state rules had been adopted without proper oversight.

"Right now, there are those that say the rules are wrong ... and were not adopted by due process," he said.

Brooks said there was little point in repealing rules that would likely be reinstated at the federal level.

"It's just a matter of months before the courts order the U.S. Department of Labor to extend the scope of the field sanitation standards," he said.

Barker, however, said the rules need renewed scrutiny, particularly when it comes to a worker's right to know about pesticides in the fields.

"Some of these rules are not as simple as you perhaps have been led to believe," he said. "These rules lead to lawsuits. It doesn't cost farmers much to comply with the rules. ... But the lawsuits that come because the depth of a chemical is not 12 inches but 11 inches, the legal fees run into thousands of dollars."

After the committee adopted Wright's amendment, the panel rejected a proposed amendment by Rep. John Kerr, D-Wayne, to eliminate migrant housing inspections by local public health officials.

Kerr argued the officials were not qualified to do inspections beyond sewer and water concerns. But Don Saunders, director of the Statewide Legal Services Program said that would leave a huge vacuum in an area where 60 percent of housing is "seriously or critically in defect."

Rand Says Railroad Canceled Law Deal

RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Tony Rand says he's shocked that a Florida-based railroad company has quit doing business with his law firm because of stands he has taken in the General Assembly.

Rand, a Fayetteville Democrat who is the Senate majority leader and his party's nominee for lieutenant governor, said Thursday he had been notified by CSX Transportation that the company was severing ties with his law firm.

He distributed copies of a letter from CSX which said Rand had taken positions on proposed legislation "which were antagonistic to the railroad's interest."

"It's amazing that they would think that my services in the General Assembly would have anything to do with what their interests may or may not be," Rand said. "I don't believe that's what they're paying our firm for, since we've represented them for probably the last 50 years."

The Legislature last month debated a resolution urging Amtrak, the federal passenger train agency, to continue its present route through eastern North Carolina on its rail runs between Florida and Washington, D.C.

CSX, which owns the right-of-way to the tracks, has called on Amtrak to discontinue the route, which includes stops in Hamlet, Southern Pines, Raleigh, Rocky Mount and Richmond, Va.

Instead, CSX wants the train to make stops in Charlottesville, Va., and then swing through the North Carolina Piedmont with stops in Greensboro, High Point and Charlotte.

The proposed resolution prompted fiery debate in the Legislature, pitting representatives of Piedmont counties against lawmakers from eastern counties.

But the issue became moot when House Speaker Liston Ramsey ruled that the Legislature could not consider the resolution. Ramsey said it didn't meet the legal criteria for matters that can be brought up during the summer session.

Even if it had been enacted, the resolution would have had no force of law. It simply would have urged Amtrak not to alter the present route.

Rand co-sponsored the resolution, saying it urged Amtrak to live up to a contract that calls for the eastern route to continue through 1996. He said he did not handle CSX's legal affairs personally and saw no reason to refrain from voting on issues affecting the company.

"I have no conflict of interest," he said. "I vote like I want to."

The two-page letter to Rand was written by T.L. Samuel. It does not say what Samuel's position is with CSX, but the stationery letterhead reads "CSX Rail Transport Law Department."

In the letter, Samuel writes that Rand had "actively opposed the interests of CSX Transportation in your sponsorship of legislation ... in opposition to the rerouting of certain Amtrak trains."

S.C. Officers Nab N.C. Prison Escapee

LANCASTER, S.C. (AP) — One of two North Carolina prison escapees wanted in a Florida murder spree has been captured in South Carolina after eluding more than 50 searchers through woods, car lots and a lake bank for two hours, authorities said.

Thomas Anthony Wyatt, 24, of North Wilkesboro was picked up late Thursday evening at a car lot on S.C. 200, the same road on which he was pulled over in a traffic stop two hours earlier. He escaped May 13 in his green prison work garb from the Wilkes County Prison Unit and is wanted for questioning in connection with the killing of three Domino's Pizza workers and a Tampa woman May 17.

Wyatt's partner in the escape, Michael Gene Lovette, 29, of Statesville may still be at large, The Charlotte Observer reported.

An unidentified man, tall and heavy-set, was captured earlier in the car and also was being held, with Wyatt, in the Lancaster County Jail.

However, Lancaster County Sheriff Willford Faile said early today that authorities are "pretty sure" that the second man captured is not Lovette.

Faile said FBI agents and sheriff's deputies were questioning Wyatt early today.

South Carolina Highway Patrol Trooper E.S. Robinson captured the unidentified man after stopping the two in a stolen pickup truck on S.C. 200 about 8 p.m.

While checking the tag number, a dispatcher quickly remembered it was stolen from Andrews, S.C.

"I tried to figure out a way to call the trooper and not alarm him," said dispatcher Violet Thomas, still shaken by her part in the search. "That was enough to make him know something."

The unidentified man gave a false name, but Robinson became suspicious and captured him, while Wyatt took off for the woods near an elementary school, police said.

Soon after, more than 50 Lancaster sheriff's officers, FBI and state agents and their bloodhounds traced Wyatt's steps through woods, around homes and a series of car lots.

When officers captured Wyatt, he was wearing gray jogging pants, a white painter's cap, sunglasses and no shirt.

California Earthquake Forecasts

In the next 30 years the San Francisco Bay area faces a 50-50 chance of a major quake measuring 7.0 on the richter scale.

In the next 30 years Southern California faces a 60-40 chance of a quake measuring 7.5-8 on the richter scale.

Congress Promises Stepped-Up Action To Provide Drought Aid

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prodded by farm-state governors, congressional committees are planning to start work next week on legislation to provide relief to farmers whose crops have been ravaged by drought.

"We will attempt to have legislation prepared and introduced... if not Monday then hopefully Tuesday," House Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, said Thursday.

The promise followed a closed-door meeting with six governors at which Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng concurred that the time has come to start legislation on its way through Congress.

Lyng had been saying lawmakers should monitor the drought but hold off on a relief bill until more was known about the extent of the damage. But authorities are now forecasting serious reductions in corn yields unless the Midwest gets substantial rain this week.

"There's a need to do something. It would probably take legislation to do that, and there's a need to do it with some urgency," Lyng said. He also said there is a good chance President Reagan will give his approval to such a measure.

"I'm confident that he has enough compassion that if we can get a bill that is reasonable and is compassionate and helpful to the farmers that the president will accept it," Lyng said.

North Dakota Gov. George Sinner, chairman of the meeting, said governors and lawmakers had reached tentative agreement with Lyng on some basic outlines of legislation.

Under the blueprint, he said, the legislation should be evenhanded toward farmers whose crops are covered by farm programs and growers of so-called non-program crops.

He said it also should not require farmers to refund any part of their so-called deficiency payments and should distribute among drought-stricken farmers the money that the government now expects to save because of the smaller size of the harvest.

Deficiency payments are income-support payments that represent the difference between the prices that farmers get for their crops at market and target prices that are set by Congress and adjusted annually by the secretary of agriculture.

The expected smaller harvest has driven up prices and thus narrowed the gap between the market and target-price levels. This translates into smaller deficiency payments and a resulting major savings for the government from the $17 billion it has budgeted for farm subsidies.

But the increase in market prices comes while some crops are being wiped out, leaving farmers with nothing to take to market.

To complicate matters, 40 percent of these deficiency payments have been sent to farmers in advance. Since the amount of the payment also is based on the projected size of the harvest, some farmers might have to refund a portion of what they already have received.

"I think it would be very difficult to collect advance deficiency payments from farmers who have no income," Lyng said.

Sinner urged a bipartisan effort to speed work on the legislation.

"We absolutely must avoid political bargaining over which party is going to grant the most help to farmers," he said. "We are going to try desperately to get a consensus on legislation and not have a lot of bickering within the halls of Congress. Whether we can do that is a tough question, but we are going to try."

Governors warned the drought is worsening.

"It's a critical time when the corn is tasseling and we're in the pollinating stage," said Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad. "Every day that goes by we see a substantial reduction in yields."

Gov. John Ashcroft of Missouri said farmers in his state will face "real economic disaster" unless relief is granted.

Also on hand were Govs. George Mikelson of South Dakota, Rudolph Perpich of Minnesota and James Martin of North Carolina. Officials of seven other states also attended the session.

Public Radio Reports

Meese Could Have Been Prosecuted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The independent counsel investigating Edwin Meese III concluded he could have prosecuted the attorney general on two felony charges, but decided not to, National Public Radio said today.

The network, citing unnamed sources, said the office of the independent counsel, James McKay, had informed Meese's lawyers that McKay felt he could "technically" file charges in connection with the attorney general's ownership of $14,000 in telephone company stock.

McKay is known to have investigated a possible conflict of interest in connection with Meese's ownership of the stock in regional "Baby Bell" companies at the same time he was meeting with the heads of regional telephone companies to discuss legal restrictions on the companies.

NPR said it could not learn why McKay declined to press charges. Nor, the network reported, could it be learned how McKay characterized the matter in the report he filed this week with a federal court on his 14-month investigation of Meese.

Both McKay's office and James Roca, Meese's lawyer, refused to discuss the matter, NPR said. McKay's office filed an 830-page report earlier this week on his criminal investigation of Meese. The report is under a court secrecy order, but Meese said he had been vindicated by the fact that McKay concluded his investigation without seeking indictment.

Meese, who announced Tuesday that he was resigning effective in late July or early August, says he isn't leaving the Justice Department in a state of disarray, even though top posts are filled with replacements who have only been on the job a month or two.

"We have one of the finest management teams of any department in the government," Meese said Thursday in an interview. He said the new nominees "certainly bring all kinds of experience" and that "there will be no leadership gap" with his own departure, scheduled for late July or early August.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, meanwhile, said the White House is moving "as rapidly as possible" to find a Meese successor. But "it's not the end of the world" if the search goes beyond the convention recess for Congress, he said. The Democrats meet in Atlanta July 18.

One of the new arrivals at the Justice Department is Deputy Attorney General Harold Christensen, who was a civil lawyer in Utah before arriving in Washington last month. He still faces Senate confirmation hearings late this month.

Associate Attorney General Francis Keating and criminal division head Edward Dennis also face confirmation hearings then.

Dennis, who took his new post in June, is a former U.S. attorney, while Keating, who came aboard in May, has been an assistant Treasury Department secretary.

Christensen and Dennis are replacing former Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns and Assistant Attorney General William Weld, who resigned in protest March 29 over Meese's continued tenure at the Justice Department. Keating is replacing Stephen Trott, who is now a federal appeals court judge.

"We have people in all the positions, we have an ongoing program, we have success," said Meese. "There's no disarray and there will be no leadership gap."

A going-away party was held Thursday for another key department official, Assistant Attorney General Charles Cooper, head of the Office of Legal Counsel.

Meese has recommended that President Reagan nominate Douglas Kmiec, a deputy in OLC, to replace Cooper.

In the interview, Meese also said that:

—He intends to seek payment of his legal fees from the public for the just-completed 14-month criminal investigation by McKay. On his 1987 financial disclosure form issued this week, Meese estimated those fees for the first 7½ months of the investigation at $100,000 to $250,000.

Risk Of Great Quake Broader Than Expected In California

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — The odds of a catastrophic earthquake that could kill thousands of people in Southern California are higher than once believed, and the San Francisco Bay area faces a similar threat, a federal report says.

Recent concern about the so-called "big one" on the San Andreas Fault has centered on the greater Los Angeles-San Bernardino area because so much strain on the fault's north end was released by San Francisco's great quake of 1906, which measured an estimated 8.3 on the Richter scale.

But a report issued Thursday by the U.S. Geological Survey and a working group of its National Earthquake Prediction Evaluation Council said the San Francisco Bay area is nearly as likely to suffer a great quake.

"Unless we aggressively pursue earthquake reduction measures, there is the potential for many people to die, perhaps more people than ever died in a single day from any (natural) disaster in the United States," said Richard Andrews, deputy director of California's Office of Emergency Services.

A 1983 state emergency plan said a great quake near metropolitan Los Angeles would be America's worst disaster since the Civil War.

Two separate studies, one being published today in the journal Science, say that quakes along the San Andreas in the Mojave region near Los Angeles tend historically to occur in bursts of two or three within a relatively short time, followed by 200- to 300-year periods without large temblors.

By demonstrating such clustering, both studies suggest the Mojave segment may be in a quiet period, with another major quake unlikely for 70 years or more.

The new Geological Survey report, however, said there is a 50 percent chance in 30 years and a 20 percent chance within the next decade that a major quake measuring 7.0 on the Richter scale will rupture the northern San Andreas or Hayward faults, which border the west and east sides of San Francisco Bay.

In Southern California, the report said, there is a 60 percent probability within 30 years and a 20 percent chance within 10 years that a great quake measuring 8.0 or a major quake registering 7.5 will rupture two or three segments of the San Andreas Fault.

Many scientists said previously that Southern California faces a 50 percent chance of a great quake in 30 to 50 years.

The odds of a 7.5-magnitude quake in Southern California rise to 70 percent within 30 years if only one of the three segments breaks, but scientists don't expect that kind of fault behavior, the federal report said.

Chances are less than 10 percent in 30 years for an exact repeat of San Francisco's 8.3-magnitude 1906 disaster, which recent studies show killed at least 3,000 people.

A 1980 Federal Emergency Management Agency report said a repeat of the 1906 quake could kill 3,000 to 11,000 people, hospitalize 12,000 to 44,000, and cause $38 billion in damage. It said a 7.4 jolt on the Hayward fault could kill 3,000 to 7,000 people, hospitalize 13,000 to 27,000, and cause $44 billion in damage.

The disaster agency also said an 8.3-magnitude quake in Southern California could kill 3,000 to 14,000 people, hospitalize 12,000 to 55,000, and cause $17 billion in damage.

The Geological Survey report also listed chances of 50 percent in 30 years for quakes measuring 6.5 on the Imperial Fault and 6.5 to 7.0 on the San Jacinto Fault, which runs near the burgeoning San Bernardino-Riverside area.

The Richter scale is a gauge of energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one number, say from 5.5 to 6.5 magnitude, means that the ground motion is 10 times greater.

A magnitude of 8 is considered a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

Corporate Raider Hails SEC Ruling On Voting

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new regulation limiting U.S. companies' ability to weaken the voting power of stockholders as a hostile takeover defense is being hailed by a prominent raider as a victory for corporate democracy.

After nearly two years of periodic hearings and debate, the Securities and Exchange Commission voted 4-1 on Thursday to approve a one-share, one-vote rule. Under it, actions that dilute the power of existing shareholders are generally barred.

"The SEC's action helps to restore democracy to corporate America," said Texas oilman and takeover specialist T. Boone Pickens Jr., chairman of the United Shareholders Association.

"The rule is not perfect and there are loopholes, but all things considered shareholders won a great victory," Pickens said.

In unrelated action, the commission backed off from recommending legislation that would guarantee investors the right to sue their stockbroker in court.

The commission had been considering asking Congress to outlaw clauses in brokerage account agreements that require customers to settle disputes through industry-sponsored arbitration panels, rather than through the courts.

But, by a 5-0 vote, the commission decided instead to ask stock exchanges and other organizations that run arbitration systems to study the matter and report back by Oct. 15.

The one-share, one-vote rule takes effect immediately and companies will have to comply if they want their stock traded on an exchange or through the National Association of Securities Dealers' automated quotation system. The 359 U.S. companies that already have unequal voting rights will be exempted.

One popular takeover defense, in which companies entice stockholders into giving up their voting rights by offering a special one-time dividend, would be prohibited.

Also barred would be rules that require a stock purchaser to wait, sometimes for several years, before newly acquired shares accrue full voting rights.

However, in another voting rights area, the SEC decided to defer to the states. If state law permits, companies will be allowed to deny voting power to takeover raiders unless the other shareholders approve. About a dozen states have adopted such laws.

Richard G. Ketchum, director of the SEC's division of market regulation, said he doubted the new rule would have a dramatic effect on takeovers. But he conceded that in a few cases takeovers would be easier because the rule eliminates some "extremely effective" defenses.

Commissioner Charles C. Cox, the only member to vote against the rule, said he believed the SEC was intruding into an area that has traditionally been left to states: chartering and governance of corporations.

"I believe this is an improper use of the listing standards to tamper with corporate governance," he said.

However, Commission Chairman David S. Ruder said the rule is structured to be as least intrusive as possible.

Companies will still be permitted to issue new shares with diluted voting power. Diluted-power shares can also be issued to accomplish a merger. And private companies going public will be able to issue both strong-voting and weak-voting shares.

Stocks of foreign companies traded in the United States will be exempted from the regulations, as will the stocks of small companies listed in the NASD's so-called "pink sheets" and traded by brokers over the telephone.

On the arbitration issue, Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House subcommittee with jurisdiction over the securities markets, sharply criticized the SEC for giving in to industry lobbying and said he would press forward with legislation.

"I think the industry stared into the SEC's eyes on this issue and the SEC blinked," he said.

When the commission discussed arbitration clauses last month, the legislative recommendation looked headed for approval. It was supported by Ruder and SEC member Aulana L. Peters. Cox said he was inclined to favor it but wanted to hear from securities firms, which strongly opposed banning the clauses.

Search Scaled Down At Oil Rig; 149 Missing

By MAGGIE JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Rescue workers today scaled down a search for 149 workers missing after an explosion blew apart an oil rig, and officials held out little hope of finding anyone alive.

Seventeen bodies and 64 survivors were pulled out of the North Sea after the world's worst oil rig disaster. Police today said at least two Americans had been on the rig when it exploded. Their fate was unknown.

The owner, U.S.-based Occidental Petroleum, said a gas leak apparently caused the blast Wednesday night on the Piper Alpha oil rig 120 miles off Scotland, but it did not know what caused the gas to ignite.

The disaster is expected to cost insurers more than $1 billion in claims, which would be a record, the Lloyd's of London insurance market said today. Lloyd's spokesman David Lerner said Occidental insured the rig, plus the costs of any loss of life claims, salvaging the rig, redrilling and pollution.

The rig was still burning today, and Occidental said Paul "Red" Adair of Houston, Texas, an expert in capping out-of-control oil wells, would try to stop it. Adair was brought in to cap the first blowout on a North Sea rig in April 1977.

Armand Hammer, 90-year-old chairman of Occidental Petroleum, flew in from Los Angeles and landed at Aberdeen's airport, where flags were at half-staff. He conferred with company heads in Aberdeen before going to visit injured survivors at Aberdeen Royal Infirmary. Prince Charles, Princess Diana and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher planned to go to Aberdeen, capital of the Scottish oil industry, later in the day to console the bereaved and visit the injured.

The Coast Guard said six oil industry ships, the semi-submersible rig Tharos and one Coast Guard helicopter resumed searching today at dawn.

On Thursday, about 30 ships, 15 helicopters and a Royal Air Force reconnaissance plane were involved in the search.

Asked whether rescuers had given up hope of finding more survivors, British Energy Department minister Peter Morrison said: "To be honest, yes. At this stage there is very little hope indeed."

A death toll of 166 would make this the world's worst oil rig disaster, surpassing the 123 deaths when the Alexander L. Kielland platform capsized in Norwegian North Sea waters in March 1980.

Aberdeen police spokesman Donald Halkerson said those aboard the rig when it blew up included two Americans, two Canadians, a South African, a Frenchman, a West German, a Portuguese and a Spaniard. He said the rest were believed to be British.

Authorities have refused to issue any names, and Halkerson refused to say if the non-British were among survivors, the confirmed dead or those still missing.

Survivors said that when the platform blew up, at least half of those on the rig were in its accommodation block. The blast demolished the block and turned the rig into a tower of flame.

Eoin Kerr, communications officer at British Telecom's maritime radio station at Wick on the Scottish coast, told reporters he was in contact with the rig when the blast occurred.

Kerr said the last message he heard was: "We're abandoning the rig. Jesus Christ, we've got to get out of here. There's no more time. We've got to get out." Then the line went dead.

Occidental said 75 percent of the 649-foot-high rig was destroyed.

Some survivors told of having to choose between braving the flames in hope help would come, or plunging 150 feet into an ocean blanketed with burning oil but cold enough to kill.

"It was a case of fry and die or jump and try," said Roy Carey, 45, who jumped. Rescue pilots said flames were up to 400 feet high.

John Maxwell, 50, who was aboard the semi-submersible rig Tharos alongside the doomed platform, said: "I saw a group of about six or seven men in survival suits on the rig's helicopter pad with flames all round them. They were screaming, shouting and waving for help ... Then the whole of the rig was rocked by another huge explosion and a kind of fireball shot across the helipad and all the men on it disappeared."

Others said the rig became so hot that water jetted onto it from fire-fighting ships simply turned to steam.

Mrs. Thatcher's government promised what it called a deep and far-reaching inquiry into the disaster. But questions arose over safety standards in the North Sea, which oilmen regard as one of the most hazardous production areas in the world.

Opposition politicians said safety was neglected. Ron Todd, general secretary of the 1.3-million member Transport and General Workers Union, some of whose members work on North Sea rigs, said: "The tragedy will clearly raise questions regarding safety in the North Sea oil industry."

IRA Guerrillas Shell Two Police Stations, Hit School

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Guerrillas today shelled two police stations and mistakenly hit a schoolhouse. A British soldier was killed by a bomb blast near a swimming pool, where two people were slain the day before, police said.

Police also said the body of an unidentified man was found lying near a tractor-trailer used to fire mortars at one police station in Pomeroy in County Tyrone.

Six people suffered minor injuries when a mortar raid on a second police station in Stewartson, about 10 miles from Pomeroy, went astray and damaged a primary school and several houses, police said. They said 80 families were evacuated.

The mortar attacks in the two towns today and a bomb blast that killed two people on Thursday were blamed on guerrillas from the outlawed Irish Republican Army. No group claimed responsibility.

The mainly Catholic IRA targets security forces in its guerrilla war to end British rule in predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland and unite it with the overwhelmingly Catholic Republic of Ireland under socialist rule.

On Thursday, police said a bomb was planted against the inside wall of a building housing a swimming pool in the predominately Roman Catholic Falls Road area of West Belfast.

The blast killed two people and injured four others.

The bomb exploded after armed and masked men ordered staff and members of the public out of the swimming pool.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary said the bomb apparently was meant to bring the walls of the building down on a security patrol passing by outside. But the blast missed the patrol and hit civilians instead.

Local residents identified the two dead people as Elizabeth Hamill, 60, and Eamonn Gilroy, 24, both Catholics from west Belfast. Among those hurt was a 4-year-old girl.

Only a few yards from the swimming pool, a British soldier involved in clean-up operations today died in another bomb blast. Some reports said he stood on a pressure plate that triggered a bomb.

U.S. Studies Reparations For Jet

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is moving closer to a decision on offering reparations for the destruction of Iran Air flight 655, saying the United States will not shirk its "moral responsibility" in the wake of the Persian Gulf tragedy.

"I suspect that doing what we think is right will be the deciding factor," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater's comments Thursday marked a significant change in the tone of administration pronouncements after several days of non-committal responses on the issue of reparations for families of the 290 victims.

"One of the driving forces behind our consideration is simply the moral responsibility of America and the fact that we've always been a humane nation that takes these kinds of problems very seriously and assumes personal responsibilities," he said.

The Defense Department acknowledged Thursday that the Iranian A300 Airbus shot down by the U.S. warship was within a commercial airline corridor, but said that alone did not guarantee its safety.

"An airway is not a safety zone," said Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard. "All this means is that within that zone, within that area, the air traffic control authorities have agreed to track aircraft."

Meanwhile Iran's Deputy Foreign Minister Hussein Sheikholeslam demanded that the United States pay compensation for shooting down the civilian airliner.

Sheikholeslam also called for revenge Thursday in a speech on Tehran radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in a report made available today.

Fitzwater stressed that no decision on reparations has been made either by senior staff or President Reagan. But in contrast to his suggestion earlier this week that the decision will await the outcome of the Navy's investigation of the incident, Fitzwater said he wanted to emphasize that "we're moving along through the consideration process."

"We don't have final decisions yet, but it clearly is an issue that is under active discussion," Fitzwater said.

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Congress would likely support a request for compensation if it came from the president.

"Our church offers something special for the entire family. We want you to join us this Sunday!"

The eight-member vocal ensemble is currently on an 11-state, eight-week, summer tour, before returning to Nashville in mid August.

The service will include arrangements of favorite hymns, southern gospel songs, and others. Members of the group will give personal testimonies and a challenge from the Bible. A multi-media presentation will feature the college's current $3-million "Pass The Torch" campaign.

Free Will Baptist Bible College is a coeducational Christian college owned and supported by the 2,500 churches of the National Association of Free Will Baptists. It specializes in the training of church workers, including preachers, missionaries, church musicians and day-school teachers.

This service is open to the public.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Esther, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

EVIL HAMAN

HAMAN'S DELIGHT KNOWS NO BOUNDS WHEN HE IS INVITED TO A PRIVATE BANQUET, WITH THE KING, BY QUEEN ESTHER—NOW, AS HE LEAVES THE PALACE...

NOTHING IN THIS WORLD CAN NOW SPOIL MY UTTER HAPPINESS!

BUT, IN HIS GREAT JOY, HAMAN SPEAKS TOO SOON, FOR...

...ONCE AGAIN, SITTING IN HIS OFFICIAL PLACE AT THE KING'S GATE, MORDECAI REFUSES TO BOW DOWN—ENRAGED AT THIS INSULT, HAMAN RUSHES HOME...

NOW HAMAN TELLS THEM OF ALL THE GLORY AND THE RICHES BESTOWED ON HIM BY THE KING—HOW QUEEN ESTHER HAS INVITED ONLY HAMAN AND THE KING TO A BANQUET—BUT HIS GREAT JOY IS DIMMED WHENEVER HE SEES MORDECAI, THE JEW, REFUSE TO BOW DOWN AND DO REVERENCE TO HIM, WHICH IS CERTAINLY DUE A MAN OF HIS GREAT POSITION!

Company Helps Students Skywriting Team Has Right 'Altitude' About Marriage

By NICHOLAS G. KATSARELAS
Associated Press Writer

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Education was the last thing on Karen Hofman's mind when she trudged off to McGill University in 1984. Her first year at the Montreal college was a disaster.

"I wasn't doing my work. I wasn't interested," she said.

Instead of returning for the next semester, she spent a year studying cooking in France, learning French, working in Switzerland and traveling.

With her spirit renewed and her focus sharpened, she re-entered McGill the following fall, her grades improved and she settled on a major, anthropology.

"I was a lot more secure," said Ms. Hofman, 21, of Mendham. "I had a better idea of what I wanted."

She represents a growing number of students and others looking for a way to clarify their educational or career goals by taking a new path for a year or so — and at least a dozen organizations around the nation offer them help. Some college officials say such breaks help many students.

Ms. Hofman's year off was arranged by the Center for Interim Programs, a Princeton-based company that charges $700 to match students' interests with some 3,000 different offerings.

For those with an interest in art, the company has offered a museum internship on the island of Belau in Micronesia or a chance to study drawing, sculpture, printmaking and art history in Florence, Italy. There are programs in wildlife management in Kenya and Mayan archeology in Belize.

Those in other center programs help the handicapped, perform community services or work on archeology projects in 35 countries, including India and the Soviet Union.

They may build a home from scratch in Minnesota, write for a magazine in Washington, D.C., or work for a health care service in rural Kentucky.

One student spent his time off sailing on a research vessel in the Caribbean. Another worked as a tennis pro in San Antonio, Texas.

The company has an alumni list of about 2,500.

Cornelius H. Bull, 62, founded the Center for Interim Programs eight years ago. "I was distressed by kids marching off to school and not knowing what ... they are doing there," said Bull, a Princeton University graduate and former headmaster.

The time off, he said, gives students time to reflect on their goals to better plan their remaining years in school.

"We all need to take a few interims in our lives, to get centered, to expand our horizons, to grow and mature," he said.

Among similar programs around the country is International Christian Youth Exchange in New York, which has been in operation since 1949 and offers 35 programs in 28 countries.

"Students want something experientially to do to clarify their career direction," said Edwin Gragert, its executive director. "We've been just overwhelmed by people who want to take time off."

He added: "High school graduates are looking for things to put on a college application that sets them apart."

What do colleges think?

"There's a general feeling that it's a terrific thing to do," said Margit Dahl, director of undergraduate admissions at Yale University. "I wish more kids did it."

She said Yale offers its freshman class the option of taking time off before beginning their studies.

LaVon Gallagher of Tucson, Ariz., whose 17-year-old son, Ben, is about to embark on a pre-college break, was initially worried about his plans. But after 12 years of regimented education this will give her son a respite, she said, adding, "Travel is one of the best forms of education."

For Ben Gallagher, Bull and his daughter, company Vice President Holly Bull, arranged a nine-month, three-part program: studying French in France, living with a family in Nepal while doing social work there and learning to make guitars in Britain.

"I wanted to take a year off," said Gallagher, who expects to attend the University of Arizona in fall 1989. "This seemed like a good way to do it."

The Center for Interim Studies said tuition for Gallagher's three programs runs $6,336. Airfare from Tucson to France to Nepal to England to Tucson is more than $4,000.

Some programs offer room and board, as well as a stipend. Other programs require students to pick up the full tab, including travel costs.

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Their marriage was made in heaven, or in the heavens, that is.

When Suzanne Asbury, 29, took over the job as chief Pepsi skywriter pilot she needed a co-pilot and mechanic. Along came Steve Oliver, 42, a pilot with more than 11,000 hours flying time and considerable aircraft mechanic's experience.

Steve followed Suzanne around to various jobs for a year when they decided marriage for the two of them was meant to be. During that time Steve taught Suzanne basic aircraft mechanics and she taught him how to skywrite. Ever since fate brought them together, they have been inseparable.

Suzanne, who started flying gliders at age 14, learned the art of skywriting from John Jack Strayer, a world-renowned skywriter who skywrote for Pepsi for more than a decade.

Skywriting was once as commonplace as televisions and VCR's are nowadays. But with the arrival of the television age, skywriting almost died. Some people approach the flying duo and tell them it's been almost 30 years since they've seen a skywritten message.

The current fascination with nostalgia of decades past makes skywriting very fashionable and effective. Pepsi-Cola executives note that the skywriting campaign is one of the most cost-effective means of advertising they have.

Once when Suzanne was writing the Pepsi message on a particularly cold morning, she inadvertently wrote two letter 'P's at the beginning of the word. Since there was no way to erase the mistake she decided to finish the word and return home.

Upon arrival she was met by hecklers who questioned her spelling abilities. She explained without batting an eye that it was so cold up there it made her stutter.

For many years the trade secrets of skywriting were well-kept behind hangar doors. No one wanted to tell just what chemicals made up the smoke. Though skywriters claimed they mixed mysterious concoctions for smoke, they actually used a light mineral oil which is vaporized, not burned, in the hot exhaust from the engine. This environmentally safe method is still used today.

Health Goals Aren't Met

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The nation's infants and mothers will not have the survival rates in 1990 that health officials hoped for a decade ago, according to a new report from the Centers for Disease Control.

Of the 13 top-priority goals concerning pregnancy and infant health in the government's 1990 health objectives for the nation, only three are likely to be met, the CDC said Thursday.

"It's certainly sobering and concerning," said Dr. Ann Koontz, a specialist with the Health Resources and Services Administration in Rockville, Md. "This indicates that we have some significant problems relating to maternal and infant health."

The CDC, using National Center for Health Statistics data, projects that the nation's infant mortality rate — infants dying before age 1 — will be 9.1 per 1,000 live births.

That's a drop from the 10.6 rate in 1985, but still short of the 9.0 rate in the 1990 objectives, which were published in 1979.

Based on earlier data from 1970-81, health officials had projected a 1990 infant mortality rate of 7.8, but "the decline in the infant mortality rate has slowed," the CDC said.

The reasons, Ms. Koontz said, are not known for certain: "It's a very complex field. We'd all like to see improvements, but there's not been a simple solution."

Another objective was that no racial or ethnic group should have an infant mortality rate worse than 12 per 1,000. Among black Americans, the rate stood at 18.2 in 1985 and is projected to decline only to 15.9 by 1990, the CDC said.

The infant mortality rate among whites stood at 9.3 per 1,000 in 1985 and is projected to fall to 7.9 by 1990, the CDC said.

Economics may play a part in the discrepancy between the mortality rates for blacks and whites. "We know that poor economic circumstances are distributed disproportionately among minority populations," Ms. Koontz said.

But the complete reason is not clear, she said, noting that previous studies have shown that among college-educated mothers, black infants still have nearly twice the mortality rate of comparable white infants.

Among the other goals not likely to be met:

—No county, racial or ethnic group should have a maternal death rate above five per 100,000 live births. The 1990 national rate is projected at 7.0, with black mothers at 20.5.

—No more than 5 percent of babies should be born under 5.5 pounds. The 1990 projection: 6.7 percent.

—No more than 10 percent of pregnant women in any county, racial or ethnic group should go without prenatal care in the first three months of pregnancy. The 1990 national projection: 23.6 percent, 38.5 percent for blacks.

One of the goals that is likely to be met concerns the nation's neonatal mortality rate — babies dying in the first 28 days of life. That rate is projected to be 5.7 per 1,000 in 1990, below the target of 6.5.

Two other goals are considered likely to be met: having most babies leave the hospital in car safety seats, and putting into place programs to screen newborns for metabolic disorders.

A 1987 survey found safety-seat use at hospitals of 75 percent, and all states now have such metabolic screening programs, the CDC said.

Brands Sharpen Their Image

By JAMIE BECKETT

STAMFORD, Conn. — Store brands are the Cinderellas of the supermarket aisles. Once bearing drab, white labels and washed-out photographs, these products offered lower prices and little else.

But now grocers are dressing up those frumpy cans and boxes. Awash in bright colors, these store-brand products are competing with glitzy, better-known brands on the supermarket shelves.

"Ann Page spaghetti sauce" has been made over into "A&P Premium Italian-Style," its bland illustration of sauce replaced by mouth-watering photos of plump, red tomatoes, fresh garlic and mushrooms.

Stores that used to hide their products behind made-up brand names now prominently display — and even promote — their own names on tissues, cereal, laundry soap and thousands of other items.

A few chains are even selling imported gourmet store-brand marmalades, mustards and other products.

"Stores used to treat these products as if they were second cousins, and wanted to keep them in the back room. Now they're flaunting them," says Stuart Berni, a principal of Berni Corp., a marketing and package design firm in Greenwich, Conn.

Grocers do not hide their private-label products anymore. With pretax profit margins usually less than 2.5 percent, grocers are hungry for the higher margins private-label products offer. House labels also can increase customer loyalty by giving shoppers brands they cannot get at any other chain. Consumer studies show that private-label brands are one of the main reasons (along with convenience and quick check-out) that shoppers choose a particular store.

Supermarkets have always sold house brands as a low-cost alternative to national brands. Stores can charge less for their own brands because they don't pay to develop them or advertise on national television.

Sometimes it is hard to tell a store brand and a national brand apart. They may share the same manufacturer. In fact, they may even be identical, especially such items as flour, sugar or oil, because standards are set by the federal government, says Mina Williams, a spokeswoman for the Private Label Manufacturers Association, a New York trade group.

In other cases, the store brands could be inferior.

"Before you could take red sauce and put it in a jar and call it ketchup, but it was cheap stuff," says Edward Comeau, a supermarket industry analyst for Oppenheimer & Co. in New York. "When consumers thought of private labels, they thought of cheap, lower quality, low-grade and even unhealthy stuff."

Partly because of their low-quality image, private brands have been falling behind their national competitors since 1982. During the recession of the early '80s, both private brands and their even-cheaper generic counterparts were popular among cost-conscious consumers.

Refugee Goes From Strife To Position Achievement

By CAMMIE EAST
The Mobile Press Register
FAIRHOPE, Ala. (AP) — In late April 1975, there was heavy bombing in Saigon, so heavy that the wife of a commander in the South Vietnamese army took her seven children and boarded a ship for respite. The father remained in Saigon, seeing to his soldiers.

The family had planned to return to Saigon soon, but upon reaching an island in the Mekong Delta, they learned that the Saigon government had collapsed. Their Vietnamese naval vessel, provided by the U.S. government, headed for international waters.

Lan Nguyen, now a Houston attorney, was one of the seven siblings. When she visited Fairhope last weekend for the 10th reunion of her high school class, she recalled the events which followed.

She also looked back on the long journey from combat strife to great academic and professional achievement by her refugee siblings who now boast doctorates, master's degrees, positions in law, medicine, architecture, chemistry, jobs with IBM, Dow, Colgate-Palmolive.

Her oldest brother, Cuong, despite the fact that he had a master's in chemical engineering, had no documents to prove it when he arrived in Alabama. So he enrolled at the University of South Alabama as a freshman and was a straight 4.0 student through his master's degree.

He worked, helping support the family, until 1979, when the second-oldest brother, Dung, finished his degree in computers at Oklahoma. Then Dung insisted on going to work, and got a job with IBM, so Cuong could go back to school.

Dung's work led him to settle in Houston, and the family then relocated there. Cuong has just completed his Ph.D., and is working as an assistant director for research and development at Colgate-Palmolive. Nhung, Lan's older sister, has her doctorate in analytical chemistry, and works for Dow Chemical Corp.

Younger brother Chuong received his architecture degree in 1983 from Auburn. He is headed for Yale this fall, where he will take a master's degree.

Brother Chung is also an architect, and earned his master's degree at Columbia last year. He is practicing in New York City.

Hang, Lan's baby sister, is now in the second year of medical school at Baylor.

Lan's father, imprisoned after the fall of Vietnam, managed to make his way to a boat and out of the country in 1986, and the family was reunited in August of that year.

But in 1975, the seven children were in a sea of uncertainty as they fled their homeland by boat.

— Lan's uncle and aunt, who was pregnant, along with their four children, were there, too — passed the time by talking, talking about books they'd read, swapping stories and exercising.

"We were just in a state of numbness," Lan recalled. "Everybody was just reacting. We were so thankful that we'd had a choice."

While they were at Fort Chaffee, an older brother and older sister both received scholarships to the University of Oklahoma. "That left me the oldest — and I was only 15," Lan recalled. Her mother summoned the oldest brother, who flew in from Guam to be head of the family.

They applied for a sponsor: the one given them was in Daphne, Ala.

"All I knew about Alabama was that it was in the deep, deep South," Lan recalled. "But we didn't have any choice. You throw the dice and you see how it goes."

coming to provide supplies and food, and people coming up to the boat on anything that would float. ... I remember the helicopters being pushed off the ship to make room for the people. ... We had only the clothes on our backs," said Lan.

Soon the Pentagon gave clearance for the ship to go to Subic Bay, in the Philippines, where its passengers were lifted into a cargo liner. From there, they went to a refugee camp on Guam.

Cuong was then 20. Being semi-fluent in English, he volunteered as a translator at the processing center on Guam, hoping he'd hear something of their father. When the family went on to a refugee camp at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, he remained in Guam, still hoping for word. But there was none.

When the camp at Eglin closed for the winter, the family went to Fort Chaffee, Ark. The family members

The children were glad to get back to school, but it was a struggle. "Our English was so poor. For every lesson we had to translate into Vietnamese, then study for hours and hours. I took my younger brother and sister to the library, and we brought books and books home. We were doing 'See Jane run,' but we started there, and worked up."

Lan got a job: "I remember my first paycheck. It was from the library, for $12. I was so happy!"

The family remains close, still traveling together whenever possible. Wherever they go, though, they're grateful for the opportunities they've found in the United States.

Lan recalled visiting Paris with Cuong last summer. "After two days he missed the United States so much he was walking down the Champs Elysees, just chanting that Bruce Springsteen song, 'Born in the USA!'"

Estate Jewelry Is Gaining In Popularity, Demand

By BETTY CIACCHI
Associated Press Writer
WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — An antique, diamond-encrusted flower brooch may look out of place on the pin-striped lapel of the modern businesswoman, but she's wearing it.

A craze for estate jewelry, the common term for pieces crafted in the early 1900s, is taking the fashion industry by storm. Fans from ages 18 to 80 are being drawn to jewelry counters and specialty shops in metropolitan centers around the Northeast.

Outstanding quality at a low price are the two keys to popularity of the old pieces. Handcrafted pins, pendants, necklaces and earrings, in many cases set in valuable platinum and boasting dozens of precious stones, are priced much lower than their modern counterparts — if similar pieces can be found at all.

"The first attraction that people have to estate jewelry is the fact that it's a style which can no longer be produced," said V. Paul Michaels, director of merchandise and head of the estate jewelry department for Irving Michaels and Co. of Waterbury.

"The exceptional value and the quality of the craftsmanship of the times, the way the pieces were made — there's no way you can get someone to make those pieces today," Michaels said. "I have jewelers ... that if I said, 'Would you sit down and make me this piece? I'll pay whatever it costs,' I don't think they'd do it."

Experts say estate jewelry has been undervalued because previously there was no market for second-hand pieces. But the publicity surrounding the auction of the jewelry that belonged to the Duchess of Windsor last year was instrumental in bringing estate jewelry back into the public eye.

"In the past, there hasn't been a market for estate jewelry. Not until recently have there been thousands of people selling antique jewelry," Michaels said.

"Secondhand jewelry or estate jewelry has always been undervalued. I think what you see now is that it's coming into its own," said Gloria Lieberman, a jewelry specialist at the Robert W. Skinner Inc. auction gallery in Boston.

Lieberman said soaring gold and diamond prices in 1979 and 1980 boosted estate jewelry sales for the first time. The jewelry market is responding to the older pieces again because of a demand for unique, one-of-a-kind jewels, she said.

But as demand grows, original merchandise from the 1920s and 1930s, also known as the art-deco period, are becoming harder to find.

Most of the pieces are still being worn by their original owners, or by the first generation of children, who are keeping the pieces for sentimental reasons and as family heirlooms.

"Sentimentality is a factor," said Joan Kaner, fashion director for Macy's Inc. in New York. "Many people like the history behind the piece and like to wear jewelry that belonged to their ancestors and loved ones."

"Modern jewelry for the fashion-conscious can go out of style rather quickly. Estate jewelry has already-proven styling," Kaner said through a spokesman. "Customers won't see their jewelry coming and going on everyone."

Estate jewelry is more than just a fashion statement. In many cases, the pieces are works of art. But it's taking some time for the relatively young United States to appreciate its jewelry heritage, experts said.

"We are first realizing that this is an art form, but it's different. You can wear it, you can give it, it has other meanings. It's a form of portable art," Lieberman said.

Michaels conducts an estate jewelry show every year. About $250,000 worth of estate jewelry was sold at last year's event. Last year, about 3,000 pieces worth more than $2 million were sold in the retail stores and the 210 other jewelry houses nationwide that are supplied by Michaels.

That's a significant jump over 1985 totals of $450,000 in sales in Connecticut and $1.38 million nationwide.

Macy's would not release any sales figures, but Kaner said there was "definitely an increase" in the popularity of estate jewelry.

Experts say now is the time for would-be collectors of estate jewelry to begin. Supplies may become limited in a few years as demand increases even further and people begin to realize the true value of the workmanship.

Lieberman said she expects prices of estate jewelry to top those of similar modern pieces in about five years. Michaels agrees.

"I do see a tremendous change taking place and I think in years to come, you will not see the estate jewelry piece or the antique jewelry piece be less expensive than the modern counterpart," Michaels said.

"I think you'll see it take off in price and become more valuable, especially as this country grows older and the pieces become more scarce," he said.

SOMETHING OLD — V. Paul Michaels shows some samples of estate jewelry his firm in Waterbury, Conn., handles. The antique jewelry business has become very popular.

Letters Are Morale Boosters

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am currently in the U.S. Navy and have just returned from a six-month deployment in Keflavik, Iceland. I want to tell you that through Operation Dear Abby, I met the woman of my dreams! We corresponded for six months and I finally met her when I came home on leave, and we've been inseparable ever since.

I want to thank the thousands of Dear Abby readers who sent letters to our troops in Keflavik. What a great morale booster! It helps to know that people appreciate our efforts when we're overseas. Needless to say, it made my holiday season much happier. Now my future looks brighter because of the wonderful woman I met — through you. Thank you. — A02 BRUCE BLOUNT, KEY WEST, FLA.

P.S. Here's a letter from "her":
DEAR ABBY: I took part in your Operation Dear Abby to cheer those men in uniform who would be far from home over the holidays. I decided to write to someone in Iceland because that seemed like the most desolate place in the world to be over the holidays.
To my surprise, a Navy man named Bruce answered my letter. During the six months we exchanged letters, we discovered we had a lot in common. And when we finally met, I became a true believer in "love at first sight."

Abby, there is something very special about getting to know a person "between the lines" of letters. Our lives will never be the same. Thank you for bringing us together. — LIN CHARVAT, SCHAUMBURG, ILL.

DEAR BRUCE AND LIN: Congratulations. Although not all pen pal relationships lead to romance, many do. Schoolteachers have made class projects of America Remembers and Operation Dear Abby with fascinating results.

For those out there who would like a pen pal in the North Pole and Alaska, here's the address for troops stationed there: Operation Dear Abby, America Remembers U.S. Forces in Alaska, c/o USCG Support Center Kodiak, Attention: PAO, Kodiak, Alaska 99619-5000. Applicants Should Know Company

NEW YORK (AP) — According to the U.S. Department of Education, some 989,000 students are graduating from college with a bachelor's degree this year.

Although there are growing signs of a labor shortage for entry-level jobs, there is still fierce competition for choice positions, notes Paul R. Ray & Co., a major U.S. executive search firm, which offers recent graduates advice on achieving a competitive edge.

First, suggests Orlin Davis, vice president of the company's New York office, obtain information on the company before the interview.

"Nothing flatters a prospective employer more than when candidates show they have researched the company," he says. "It shows initiative, enthusiasm and interest."

Davis advises calling the prospective company's public relations department to obtain an annual report or company brochure. Most college libraries have access to computerized on-line data bases to research articles published about the company and its activities, he points out, adding that particular attention should be paid to trade journals.

If you're just starting out, you won't have much to put in a resume, he says, so a creative, well written cover letter is often the best way to obtain that elusive first interview.

"Remember, an interviewer's job is to 'weed out' applicants," says Ray's Davis, listing some key cover letter points to keep in mind:

— Present a clear, concise summary emphasizing career objectives and goals. — Give a brief review of your college academic credits and extracurricular activities showing you to be a team player and well-rounded individual.

— Highlight some specific activities of the company that are of interest to you.

— List qualities and work principles which you can offer to an employer.

— Write your letter with personality and style so people will want to meet you.

— If you use colored paper, stick to businesslike shades such as buff, gray or off-white.

At the interview, Davis cautions, be punctual. Dress appropriately, with special attention to the fine points of grooming such as nails, shoes and hair, which shows attention to detail. While style is important, don't be overly fashionable.

Be poised and alert. Give some thought beforehand to potential "tough" questions such as "Why would you recommend you for this position?" and "What can you offer us?"

"Intelligence, sincerity and calm in the face of pressure tell the interviewer as much as the specifics of your answer," Davis explains.

Stress the skills and goals you feel would be of use.

"Remember," says Davis, "an employer wants to know what you can do for him or her, not what they can do for you."

Have some questions ready which demonstrate your interest in the company or the position available, and take notes on the answers.

Wait for the interviewer to bring up the issue of money or benefits. If you're asked to name a figure, make sure it is in line with industry standards for the position and your level of experience.

Before you leave, try to get a sense of your prospects for the position, Davis advises.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a small loss today, faced with news of unexpectedly strong employment growth.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 3.56 to 2,119.13 by noon on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 4 to 3 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 537 up, 700 down and 552 unchanged.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate fell three-tenths of a percentage point last month, to a 14-year low of 5.3 percent.

Nonfarm payroll employment, a figure watched especially closely on Wall Street, increased by 346,000. That substantially exceeded advance estimates in the financial community.

Scientists Say Martian Rock Forms Could Be Relic Of Lost Civilization

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Huge rock formations on Mars that resemble a human face, a pyramid and a fortress could be the work of a lost civilization or "just a trick of nature," say scientists urging a close-up look at the outcroppings.

Four scientists including a former astronaut said Thursday that the mysterious formations should be scrutinized further by spacecraft.

Photographs taken in 1976 by the Viking 1 spacecraft as it orbited Mars show a sphinx-like face staring outward into space. The image resembles a death mask, with a long shadow obscuring one side of the face while emphasizing a human-like brow, nose, eye socket and mouth.

Nearby is an angular mountain, suggesting the sharp lines of a pyramid, and a grouping of rocks that some view as a fortress near the center of what they suggest could have been an ancient city of a lost civilization.

Or, the scientists said at a news conference Thursday, the images captured by the Viking camera could all be "a trick of light and shadow."

"We have found something that is so interesting that it demands we go back to Mars and get more data," said Richard C. Hoagland, founder of The Mars Project, an organization that is studying the Viking photographs.

Brian T. O'Leary, a former astronaut and an expert on Mars, said there is so much uncertainty about the origin of the rock face that it should be a major target for future spacecraft sent to Mars.

"The feature is sufficiently exciting that we must go back to Mars and photograph it at a higher resolution," said O'Leary.

Gerald Soffel, the mission scientist on the Viking project and currently chief of the space and Earth sciences branch at the Goddard Space Center, said in a telephone interview that the face-like image captured by the camera has been dismissed by most scientists as an illusion caused by bright sunlight and shadow.

He said some of the world's finest geologists have examined the photos and "they said what we were seeing is light and shadow."

But Mark Carlotto, an optical engineering expert, said a new, sophisticated computer study of the photos suggests that the face and other formations are not of natural origin.

In an article published in Applied Optics, Carlotto said a computer enhancement of the Viking photographs shows the rock shapes appear to have been carved by "intelligent design" and not by the random forces of nature.

In one study, Carlotto said, the face was compared statistically with other shapes photographed on Mars, and he concluded that "the face is not natural."

"It's extremely unlikely that it's a trick of light and shadow," said Carlotto.

Soffel said he planned to study Carlotto's paper. He said its publication in Applied Optics, a learned journal supervised by scientists who evaluate each submission, gives credibility to the work.

But he said Viking scientists first spotted the face in 1976 and "never took it seriously."

"NASA has never taken a position that it is nonsense or science," he said. "But I admit that NASA has not shown much interest."

The Carlotto study was published in May, but Hoagland did not call the news conference until Thursday, the same day that the Soviet Union launched a probe toward Mars.

O'Leary said Soviet scientists showed great interest in the Mars formations when he talked with them in January, but was told their spacecraft was not technically designed for such a survey of the Cydonia region of Mars where the structures are located.

Hoagland said NASA scientists dismissed the images found in the photographs as oddities of no significance, or "a trick of nature."

Hoagland, however, said he has studied the photos for years and has discovered that in addition to the face there is "a complex of unusual objects" that he believes could have been built by "intelligent design."

The complex, which he calls a city, includes a five-sided mountain that resembles a pyramid, a grouping of rocks that he said could be a fortress and a bluff that he believes could have been part of an astronomical marker.

Hoagland said a line drawn from the center of the city, across the face to the bluff, would line up exactly with the sun at the moment of Mars' summer solstice, as it would have occurred 500,000 years ago. He said Mars has shifted on its axis since and that the solstice angle now is different.

"Geologically, the odds are one in 300,000 that this would be there by chance," said Hoagland.

NASA plans to launch an unmanned probe, called the Mars Observer, in five years, and Hoagland said it will have on board a camera that could settle the question about the origin of the stone features on the planet.

Randolfo Pozos, executive director of The Mars Project, said members of the organization are divided about the origin of the face on Mars.

"Some of our group feel this is a lost civilization," he said. "Others think it is just an interesting geologic formation."

Foreman

FARMVILLE — A funeral for Mrs. Della Maye Foreman will be conducted at 4:30 p.m. Sunday in Lewis Chapel Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. J.H. Vines and Bishop H.L. Hill. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Park near Farmville.

Mrs. Foreman, a Pitt County resident for the past 26 years. She was a member of Lewis Chapel Church, where she served as longtime chairman of the Flower Club, and as a member of its Mothers' Board, Home Mission, Pastor's Aid Club and Community Helping Hand Club.

Surviving are her husband, Lloyd Foreman Sr. of the home; three daughters, Rosa Reaves of Washington, D.C., Geraldine Law of Camp Springs, Md., and Sudie Adams of Temple Hill, Md.; five sons, Lloyd Foreman Jr. of Snow Hill, James Foreman, Clifton Foreman and Moses Foreman, all of Washington, D.C., and William Foreman of Bridgeport, Conn., and 11 grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday at Lewis Chapel Church and at other times will be at 1107 S. Main St., Farmville.

Arrangements are being handled by Flanagan Funeral Home of Greenville.

Harris

Mr. C. Henry Harris, 67, of Route 5, Greenville, died Thursday. Arrangements will be announced by the Wilkerson Funeral Home.

Teel

A funeral for Mrs. Arlene Taft Teel will be conducted at 1 p.m. Sunday in First Timothy Free Will Baptist Church by Elder Walter C. Blount. Burial will be in the Bell Arthur Cemetery.

Mrs. Teel was a member of First Timothy Church.

Surviving are two sons, Ocalos Brown and Donell Taft, both of Las Vegas, Nev.; a brother, Isaac Taft of Greenville, and three grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday in the Flanagan Funeral Home Chapel and at other times will be at the home, 1614-A Hopkins Drive, Greenville.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Mrs. Leona Tripp would like to thank the staff at Pitt County Physicians and the staff at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for all acts of kindness shown to them during the illness and loss of their loved one. We would like to thank our many friends and neighbors for the cards, food, floral arrangements, and the ministers for their services and the funeral home. May God bless each of you.

Store Roof Falls

out of there and we're making every effort to get them out of there as fast as possible." Hundreds of rescuers working through the night removed debris with tractors, a crane and finally by hand, fearful of further injuring trapped survivors. Working through the night under portable floodlights, they used dogs and sensitive microphones to hunt for victims.

The store was half a block from the international bridge across the Rio Grande River to Matamoros, Mexico. When the storm began, a large number of Mexican nationals "were running there to get out of the rain. The store was packed," sheriff's Lt. Johnny Castillo said.

A woman sitting in a car in front of the store was among those killed when the roof and walls collapsed.

Rescuers cut through a wall inside a Woolworth's store next door to reach some of those trapped. Linens and clothing blown from the store by high winds were used to wrap the wounds of the injured.

Six bodies had been removed by midnight and two other bodies had been found in the rubble, Economedes said. Authorities said early today three more bodies were discovered, but provided no details.

"They've got two steel beams across them and about 20 or 30 tons of concrete" on them, Economedes said. Authorities fear that dozens of people may still be trapped.

Dr. Jose Carrera of Matamoros identified three of those trapped alive as his wife, Leticia, 36, their son, Israel, 9, and daughter, Terese, 4.

"I feel very happy that they are alive and I hope they can get them out soon," he said.

Ambulances, firefighters and volunteers from across the Rio Grande Valley joined the rescue effort and numerous companies provided heavy machinery.

"There are so many helping hands that it's too much on you to look at it," said City Commissioner Harry McNair. "Brownsville hasn't seen a disaster of this magnitude since 1967 with Hurricane Beulah."

Many people went to blood banks to donate blood in case it was needed.

At least eight injured people were admitted to hospitals; 34 others were treated and released, Poo said.

Among those injured slightly was store owner Bernard Levin, 67, who was working at the cash register at the time.

"It was a shock. I was cashiering and all of a sudden it happened," Levin said. "It was a well-built building and we still don't know what caused it to collapse."

He escaped with three employees and three customers and said there were 10 other employees and several more customers in the store.

The 40-year-old structure housed the department store on the first floor, with the other two floors vacant but made of concrete, Economedes said.

"That's what's making us go much slower. There are tons of concrete on there and we are using cherry pickers to help us remove the debris," he said.

The National Weather Service said the collapse could have been caused by the weight of rainwater from a storm that also caused street flooding, especially in the downtown area.

Jackson Again Shackles Phillies

CINCINNATI (AP) — The third time against Danny Jackson was no charm for the Philadelphia Phillies. The fourth time wasn't much better, either.

The Phillies got a few more hits off the Cincinnati Reds' left-hander Thursday night, the fourth time they faced him this season. They even managed to knock him out of the game — something they hadn't accomplished the first three times.

But Jackson prevailed again, going 6 1-3 innings for a 5-2 victory that left him with four wins in four starts this season against Philadelphia.

The first three victories were complete games — a couple of two-hitters and a three-hitter. The Phillies got seven hits and both runs Thursday night off Jackson, but their hobbled lineup couldn't break through when they had the chances.

"He was probably more vulnerable tonight than the other three times," Phillies manager Lee Elia said. "I wish we could have gotten ahead of him."

They did, briefly. Bob Dernier led off the game with his first homer on a weak breaking pitch. But Jackson didn't sweat it.

"I didn't worry about that," said Jackson, 10-4. "I knew it was a hanging slider. The hitter he is, he should put it where it landed."

In the only other game Thursday, Pittsburgh beat San Diego 2-0.

Jackson started sweating in the Reds' third, when his hustle fueled the decisive four-run rally off Kevin Gross, 8-5.

Jeff Treadway led off with his second homer, tying the game. Jackson then hit a grounder that third baseman Luis Aguayo misplayed for his second error of the game, as Jackson hustled to beat the throw. One out later, Jackson sprinted to third on Kal Daniels' single.

Daniels stole second with Chris Sabo at bat. The rookie then worked Gross to a 3-0 count and got the go-ahead to swing.

"There was no hesitation," Manager Pete Rose said. "He's our leading hitter. He's tough with men on base."

Sabo hit the next pitch up the middle hard for a single scoring both runs. He later scored on Nick Esasky's triple to center.

"He (Gross) got behind in the count and had to come in with some pitches, and it hurt him," Elia said.

The running on a hot summer night hurt Jackson. The temperature at game time was 95 degrees, and the running around the bases in the third inning drained him.

"That's obviously going to take a little bit out of you there, for anyone, when it's as hot as it was," Jackson said.

He started struggling in the seventh, when he walked Aguayo, got Darren Daulton to hit into a force at second, and then allowed the third single by Steve Jeltz. Rob Dibble came on and got pinch-hitter Mike Schmidt to fly out on the first pitch. Following an infield single by Phil Bradley that loaded the bases, Dibble got Tommy Barrett to hit into a force at second and end the inning.

John Franco pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 12th save, sending Philadelphia to its fifth consecutive loss. Jackson became the first Cincinnati pitcher to beat the Phillies four times in one season since Joe Nuxhall did it in 1965.

Two of the Phillies' best hitters at Riverfront Stadium — Juan Samuel and Lance Parrish — sat out the game with injuries, and Dernier pulled a hamstring while chasing a fly ball in the third inning. The center fielder is expected to be out a few days. He has 15 hits in his last 30 at-bats.

"It sure as heck ain't getting any easier," Elia said. "With all the injuries we've had, and now we lose the hottest hitter we've had the last four or five days. It ain't getting any easier."

Pirates 2, Padres 0

John Smiley won his sixth consecutive game and combined with two relievers on an eight-hitter as visiting Pittsburgh beat San Diego.

Smiley, 9-4, allowed five hits in 6 1-3 innings and struck out a career-high nine. He is the first Pirate to win more than five straight decisions since John Candelaria won eight in a row in 1983.

Jeff Robinson pitched 1 2-3 innings and Jim Gott finished for his 10th save.

The Pirates scored two runs in the sixth off Andy Hawkins, 8-7, on Andy Van Slyke's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk to Mike LaValiere.

Detroit Is Putting Heat On Struggling Oakland

By The Associated Press
For the Oakland Athletics, the heat is on.

Detroit hit five home runs and Jeff Robinson and Paul Gibson combined on a four-hitter as the Tigers beat the Athletics 8-1 Thursday night in a battle of American League division leaders.

It was the Athletics' fourth straight loss, but they maintained their 3 1/2-game lead over Minnesota in the AL West as Boston beat the Twins 4-3. On June 5, the Athletics led the Twins by 10 games and now hold only a two-game edge in the loss column.

The Tigers, meanwhile, increased their lead to three games over New York in the East.

Chet Lemon, Larry Herndon and Mike Heath hit home runs in the second inning off Curt Young, 6-6, to get the Tigers going.

"It was the heat," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said of the home runs. "The balls were just flying out of here."

Luis Salazar hit a three-run homer, his 10th, in the third and Ray Knight added a two-run shot later in the inning to make it 8-0.

"I've never seen the ball jump like it did today," Salazar said. "The reason the ball was not carrying so much the first two months was because of the cold weather. The last two weeks it's been carrying more and it's going to carry the rest of the season."

Elsewhere, it was California 7, Cleveland 1; Baltimore 6, Texas 0; and Kansas City 7, Milwaukee 3.

Robinson, 10-3, allowed a leadoff single to Luis Polonia in the first inning and then retired the next 17 batters before Polonia singled to start the seventh. Polonia scored the A's only run in the seventh on Jose Canseco's RBI single.

Robinson, who allowed three hits, left the game with one on and two out in the seventh with a jammed right ankle and Gibson relieved. Robinson struck out three and walked none en route to his seventh straight victory at Tiger Stadium.

Young lasted 2 2-3 innings before giving way to Jim Corsi. Young gave up seven hits and eight earned runs.

"Sometimes you think you're throwing bad and sometimes you're throwing good even when you're not getting people out," Young said.

"It's just another four-game series in July, that's all," Tiger reliever Mike Henneman said of the matchup with the Athletics. "It's important to us as a team just because we want to be playing well at the All-Star break and have some momentum for the second half. It's not the AL East against the AL West like a lot of people are making it out to be."

Red Sox 4, Twins 3

With the score tied 2-2 in the sixth, Jim Rice scored the go-ahead run on Charlie Lea's sixth-inning wild pitch and Jody Reed followed with a suicide squeeze to drive in what proved to be the winning run as Boston beat Minnesota at the Metrodome.

Dennis Boyd won for only the second time in his last 10 starts, allowing nine hits and two earned runs in six innings. Bob Stanley pitched the last three innings for his first save since Sept. 29, 1986.

Angels 7, Indians 1

Terry Clark made his major-league debut with five strong innings and Greg Minton pitched four scoreless innings in relief as visiting California beat Cleveland.

Clark, a 27-year-old right-hander, allowed one run and five hits for the victory. Minton came on to start the sixth inning and allowed only one hit for his second save. Clark was in his 10th minor-league season before he was called up on Tuesday from the Class AAA Edmonton Trappers.

Wally Joyner drove in three runs with a two-run homer and an RBI single.

Orioles 6, Rangers 0

Oswaldo Peraza and Tom Niedenfuer combined on a seven-hitter as Baltimore beat Texas at Memorial Stadium. The Orioles backed the strong pitching with home runs by Mickey Tettleton, Ken Gerhart, and Cal Ripken.

The Orioles beat Texas left-hander Paul Kilgus, 7-8, for the second time in five days. Kilgus has a 1-5 record over his last nine starts. Baltimore, after losing 22 of its first 25 games against left-handed starters, has won four of its last five.

Royals 7, Brewers 3

Kansas City beat Milwaukee for the first time in eight games at Royals Stadium as Mike Macfarlane hit a three-run homer and George Brett drove in two runs.

Charlie Leibrandt, 5-10, shut out Milwaukee for five innings before yielding a run-scoring single to Jeffrey Leonard with two out in the sixth as the Royals ended a three-game losing streak by beating the Brewers at home for the first time since Sept. 1, 1987.

Kelly Places Five Twins On The AL Reserve Roster

NEW YORK (AP) — Even if they didn't land a starting berth in the All-Star Game, the Minnesota Twins will be well represented, thanks to Manager Tom Kelly.

Starting with ace pitcher Frank Viola, Kelly placed five players from his defending World Series champions on the American League team which faces the National League in Cincinnati on Tuesday night.

Along with Viola, who leads the AL with a 14-2 record and 2.24 earned run average, pitcher Jeff Reardon, catcher Tim Laudner, infielder Gary Gaetti and outfielder Kirby Puckett were among the pitchers and reserves selected Thursday by Kelly and AL president Bobby Brown.

"This is something you dream about. You'd be lying if you said it wasn't a dream when you were growing up to play in an All-Star Game," said Viola, who would appear to have the inside track on starting the mid-season showcase at Riverfront Stadium.

Another pitcher with a good chance to start is Boston's Roger Clemens, who at 12-3 with a 2.45 ERA is second in both categories.

Clemens, Mark Gubicza of Kansas City, Dave Stieb of Toronto and Doyle Alexander of Detroit were the other starters who made the team in addition to Viola. Gubicza is 11-5, Stieb 10-4 and Alexander 8-4.

Relievers Dennis Eckersley of Oakland (25 saves), Doug Jones of Cleveland (20 saves), Dan Plesac of Milwaukee (19 saves) and Reardon (23 saves) also were picked.

Jeff Russell of Texas, a spot starter who is 10-2, completed the 10-man staff, which has only two left-handers — Viola and Plesac.

In filling out the American League team, Kelly and Brown selected two shortstops — Cal Ripken of Baltimore and Ozzie Guillen of Chicago. One of them probably will replace starter Alan Trammell of Detroit who is on the 15-day disabled list with a broken left elbow. Ripken is batting .276 with 13 homers and 46 runs batted in after a slow start and Guillen is batting .265 with no homers and 19 RBI.

The other infield reserves picked were Carney Lansford of Oakland, Don Mattingly of New York, Johnny Ray of California, Harold Reynolds of Seattle and George Brett of Kansas City, who was named to the team for the 13th consecutive season.

Brett, a long-time third baseman, made the team after moving to first.

"There was a time where there weren't a lot of good third basemen in the league, and you took it for granted that you'd be at the All-Star Game," Brett said. "But I looked around when I moved to first, and I really didn't think I'd have as good a year as Wally Joyner or Eddie Murray or Don Mattingly or Mark McGwire or Pete O'Brien with his start. Of course, little did I realize I'd be hitting .332. After the last two years I had, and being 35, it's a great honor to be chosen again."

Lansford is fifth among AL batters at .332, Brett is sixth at .331 with 13 homers and 59 RBI and Mattingly is 10th at .317 with six homers and 41 RBI. Gaetti is batting .304 with 18 homers and 53 RBI, Ray is batting .299 with 43 RBI and Reynolds is hitting .291.

Laudner, batting .271 with nine homers and 31 RBI, is the only reserve catcher behind starter Terry Steinbach of Oakland.

Mike Greenwell of Boston and Puckett are the backup outfielders behind Jose Canseco of Oakland and New York's Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield. Puckett, who finished fourth among outfielders, 80,000 votes behind Henderson, is batting .350, the leading average of any reserve in either league. Greenwell is fourth in the AL in batting at .337.

There are 12 first-time all-stars in the AL — Alexander, Gaetti, Greenwell, Gubicza, Guillen, Jones, Lansford, Laudner, Ray, Russell, Steinbach and Viola. The team averages 28.9 years in age and includes 10 .300 hitters, four 10-game winners and three 20-save relievers.

Alexander made the team in his 17th major league season.

"I don't go out and seek recognition. I don't beat my own drum," he said. "Making the All-Star team has never been a priority. I've been in the playoffs and the World Series. I imagine the feeling will be the same when I run out on the field and am introduced."

Oakland is the only other team with five players on the AL squad. The A's have two starters, first baseman Mark McGwire and Canseco. The other AL starters are second baseman Paul Molitor of Milwaukee and third baseman Wade Boggs of Boston.

Greg Maddux and a bunch of newcomers hope to continue one of the oldest traditions in baseball: Beating the American League in the All-Star Game.

Maddux and rookie Chris Sabo are among 18 players who made the 28-man National League All-Star roster for the first time. Pitchers and reserves were announced Thursday by NL President Bart Giamatti and St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog.

"Making the team isn't something I expected going into this season. I was 6-14 last year," said Maddux, who leads the NL with 14 victories. "I was just hoping to get back to .500."

Maddux, 22, is one of six Chicago Cubs on the team, the most All-Stars from any club in the majors. He is scheduled to pitch Sunday against San Diego, but said he might be able to work Tuesday night in the showcase event at Cincinnati.

"I've never aired it out on just two days' rest," Maddux said. "But I think I could go an inning."

Joining Maddux from the third-place Cubs are second baseman Ryne Sandberg, shortstop Shawn Dunston, third baseman Vance Law and outfielders Rafael Palmeiro and Andre Dawson. Sandberg and Dawson were voted as starters in fan balloting, which was announced Wednesday.

"We got six? That's great," Maddux said.

The NL leads the All-Star series 37-20 and has won 14 of the last 16 with 22 of 25.

"I just hope I can help the National League win it some way," said Cincinnati's Sabo, the only rookie on either All-Star team. Sabo, a third baseman, is batting .310 with 10 home runs and 26 stolen bases.

David Cone, in his first full season with the New York Mets, is 9-2 with a 2.35 earned run average. Other first-time All-Star pitchers are San Diego's Mark Davis, Philadelphia's Kevin Gross, Cincinnati's Danny Jackson, and the Cardinals' Todd Worrell.

Dwight Gooden of the Mets, making the All-Star team for the fourth time, and Houston's Bob Knepper and Los Angeles' Orel Hershiser, both selected for the second time, round out the nine-man staff. San Francisco's Rick Reuschel was named, but declined because he is getting married next week.

Worrell leads the league with 16 saves, followed by Davis with 15. Maddux is 14-3 with a 2.15 ERA. Hershiser is second to Maddux in wins with 13 and has a 2.46 ERA. Gooden is 11-4 and is tied for the league lead in complete games with Jackson and Maddux at seven. Knepper is 8-2 with a 2.47 ERA while Jackson is 9-4 and Gross 8-4.

"Ever since I was a kid, I wanted to make it to the All-Star team," Davis said. "Playing in the All-Star Game and going to the World Series. It's the dream of every player."

Other first-time All-Stars are: first basemen Andres Galarraga of Montreal, Gerald Perry of Atlanta and Will Clark of San Francisco, San Francisco second baseman Robby Thompson; shortstops Dunston of Chicago and Barry Larkin of Cincinnati; Law and Bobby Bonilla of Pittsburgh at third base, and outfielders Vince Coleman of St. Louis, Andy Van Slyke of Pittsburgh and Palmeiro.

Philadelphia catcher Lance Parrish, a six-time All-Star in the AL, is representing the NL for the first time.

Gary Carter of the Mets will start at catcher and teammate Darryl Strawberry will start in the outfield. Also starting are shortstop Ozzie Smith of St. Louis, Sandberg at second base, Clark, Coleman and Bonilla.

Galarraga is the NL's top hitter at .341 and Perry is second at .336. Larkin, Law, Palmeiro, McGee and Thompson are all batting .300 or better. Van Slyke is fourth in runs batted in with 56. Dunston is batting .290. Parrish is hitting .230 with 12 homers.

"I'm going to work my tail off to make sure this is not my last All-Star Game," Van Slyke said.

Several players selected Thursday earned bonuses for making the team — Dunston, Knepper, Larkin, Thompson and Van Slyke earned $25,000 each, while McGee earned $15,000.

As always, some players having good seasons were not selected.

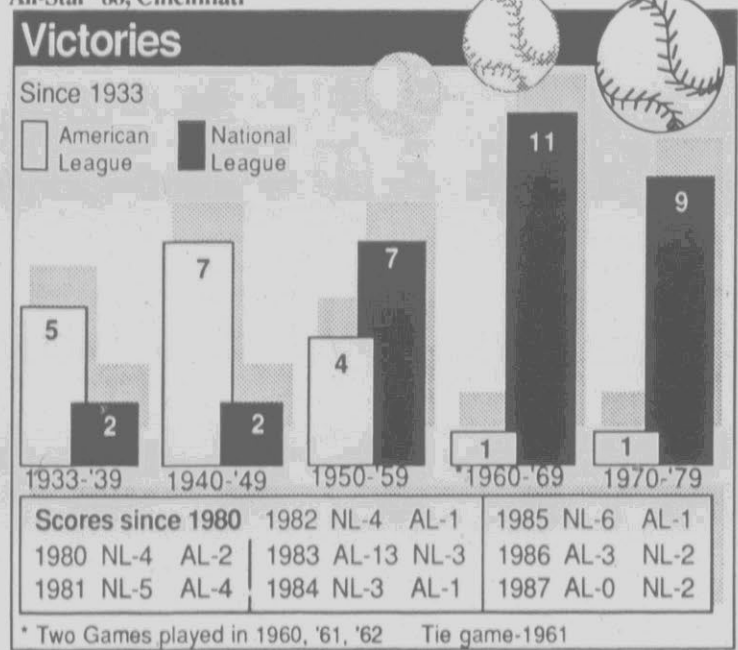

Mets reliever Randy Myers is 5-0 with 13 saves and a 1.26 ERA; the Cardinals' John Tudor leads major league starters in ERA at 1.72, and Pittsburgh's Bob Walk is 9-4 with a 2.56 ERA.

"I wasn't thinking I had a good shot at it," Walk said. "It's not that big a deal. I'm going to enjoy my days off."

Also left off were Los Angeles outfielders Kirk Gibson, batting .298 with 15 home runs, and John Shelby, hitting .301; St. Louis outfielder Tom Brunansky, a .286 hitter with 13 homers and 49 RBI; and Houston first baseman Glenn Davis, who has 18 homers.

"I feel that each player who was selected for the All-Star team more than deserved that honor," Gibson said. "Personally, I am focused on the success of our team this year. That has been and will continue to be my goal."

Manager Vows To Sleep In Press Box Until Win

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP) — Ken Shepard, general manager of the minor-league Geneva Cubs, vowed to sleep in the press box until his club ended a losing streak.

The Cubs, of the New York-Penn League, have stretched their streak to 17 losses in compiling the worst record in professional baseball, so Shepard keeps climbing a rickety ladder to his cot in the press box.

"Every day I get crankier and crankier," Shepard said. "There's no air conditioning up there. The mosquitoes are terrible. But it's a great publicity stunt."

The team, which won the league championship last season, is 1-20. The last win was June 20. Thursday night, the Cubs played the Jamestown Expos, the first-place team in their division, and lost 4-1.

Shepard, 23, said he intends to continue sleeping in the press box until the team wins. He said he is doing it to incite the players and gain publicity for a team badly in need of it.

The first-year general manager is succeeding in one regard.

Despite the losing streak, attendance is higher than it was last year when the Cubs won the title.

Shepard has been keeping this bedtime ritual for 10 nights and intends to continue every night until the Cubs win. He said the idea came from Gary Arnold, the team's director of player operations.

"I thought it would go on for one or two nights," Arnold said. "I should have suggested we all grow beards."

Shepard and the Cubs are not alone in the use of gimmicks and publicity stunts.

In Canada, the Medicine Hat Blue Jays won their first game of the season after 16 straight losses, enabling General Manager Dean Linden to abandon the tent he was sleeping in near home plate. He promised not to leave until the Blue Jays won their first game.

That Medicine Hat victory also meant that Geneva gained the distinction of being the worst team in professional baseball, according to Michael Walczak of Howe News Bureau, a minor league statistical sports service in Boston.

"You gotta be creative or you'll die in the minor leagues," Shepard said. "Promotion is the only way you can survive." Shepard had to bend the rules once so he could attend his fraternity brother's wedding over the weekend in Hastings, Neb. Shepard slept in the press box of the Class AAA Omaha Royals. When he called back home to find out the Cubs lost again, the Omaha general manager handed over the keys.

All-Star Controversy Arises With Each Game

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a controversy that is as much a part of the All-Star Game as the game itself: do the best players make the starting lineups?

Consider some of the starters selected by the fans this year. At second base for the American League is Milwaukee's Paul Molitor, a solid .300 hitter. But he has not played at second since last season.

Vince Coleman of the St. Louis Cardinals was chosen as a starting outfielder. Coleman is batting .282 with 45 stolen bases, but is he having a better season than teammate Willie McGee, a .320 hitter who finished fifth in voting?

How about the starting catchers: Gary Carter for the National League and Terry Steinbach for the American League? Carter is batting .245 and has not homered since May 16. Steinbach is hitting just .217 with four homers and has only 143 at-bats.

Are they the best each league has to offer?

Is there a better way of deciding who should start, other than by a vote of the fans?

"I think there should be a multiple way of picking the team," Chicago White Sox manager Jim Fregosi said. "It is very important to have the fans involved in picking the team, but the players should also have a voice."

Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves goes along with the idea of letting people besides the fans decide.

"I always thought it would be good if we could divide it among the fans, the writers and the players," Murphy said. "Fans always do a good job, but occasionally there are inequities."

But if the game belongs to the fans, shouldn't they get the players they want?

"It doesn't really matter to me, but it's a good idea to have the fans pick the team," said Baltimore's Cal Ripken Jr., who finished second to Alan Trammell in voting for AL shortstops. "Sometimes it's a popularity contest, but if that's what they want, that's fine."

Jim Morrison of the Braves defended the fans' selections, given the tough task of choosing the right players.

Ron Hunt Remembers The Mets Of Yesterday

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Ron Hunt remembers the moment vividly. You remember everything when you're 22 years old and wearing a major league uniform for the first time.

Hunt was a rookie with the New York Mets 25 years ago. This was a ragtag team of have-beens and never-weres that had lost a record 120 games in its first season and did not promise much improvement. But it was the major leagues and that was good enough for the feisty second baseman from Missouri.

"I was walking down the clubhouse stairs on opening day at the old Polo Grounds in 1963," Hunt said. "The fans in the bleachers could hang right over the wall there. One kid called out to me, 'Hey, 33! Yeah, you, 33!'"

"I was excited. That was my number. I pounded my glove. Here was my first autograph request."

The kid called out to Hunt again, only this time with an addendum.

"Hey, 33," he said. "Whose reject are you?"

Everybody is a critic.

The fan was right, though. Hunt was indeed a reject, purchased by the we-can-use-anybody Mets from Milwaukee after the Braves gave up on him as a non-prospect.

"They said I didn't have major league potential," Hunt said. "If I didn't have somebody look deeper than that, where would I have been for the 12 years I played?"

Hunt spent four years with the Mets and was their first starting All-Star, making the 1964 game at Shea Stadium. Then he logged productive time with Los Angeles, San Francisco, Montreal and St. Louis, finishing with a career .273 batting average. Not bad for a reject.

Now Hunt is the guy who looks deeper at other players as founder, manager, scorekeeper and traveling secretary of the St. Charles (Mo.) County Independent Baseball Association.

His team is in its third year and travels to five to seven states, playing an 80-game schedule. It will host an international tournament Saturday and Sunday with two teams from the Netherlands and one from Canada coming to Missouri.

From Aug. 4-15, Hunt and the Independents will be in Montreal for 16 games and a number of clinics. Last summer, he took the team overseas for nine games in 10 days on a tour of Holland, Belgium and Germany.

The Independents are just that — independent. They rely on sponsors and function as a showcase for young players who may have been overlooked by colleges and professional scouts, a condition Hunt knows all about.

The system works. Twenty-eight of the 30 seniors who played for the Independents the last three seasons are going to college, 22 with partial or full scholarships. He's looking for 11 players to fill vacancies for next season.

Hunt requires two things from his players — some talent for the game and a willingness to practice it.

"They must have a certain amount of ability for me to find them a college," Hunt said. "I'm not a magician, you know."

"I can't tell you I'll get every one of my kids a scholarship. What I'll get him is exposure and I can promise you he'll learn something he hasn't been taught before."

For example, Dave Ryan, a pitcher from Basking Ridge, N.J., learned about chewing gum.

"Ryan couldn't throw strikes," Hunt said. "He'd be out there walking around the mound. He just couldn't concentrate. Somebody had the idea to give him a piece of gum. He concentrated on that and it solved the problem with the strikes."

"To me, a pitcher's won-loss record is not that important. What's important is how he handles stressful situations. I'll let a 17- or 18-year-old kid walk the bases loaded. It's a chance to show whether he can handle it."

This summer, eight of Hunt's players from outside the St. Charles area will stay on his 110-acre cattle farm, turning the place into a sort of baseball ranch. Hunt says he was not as well off in a baseball sense when he was at their stage of development. That's because, as the original Met fan noted, he was a reject.

"These kids aren't rejects," Hunt said. "These are just kids who should be playing but aren't."

Make that "weren't," until he got his hands on them.

Wilander Feels Good

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Top-seeded Mats Wilander won't flat out predict his third U.S. Pro tennis championship in four years, but concedes he should be playing for the $50,575 first prize come Sunday.

The 23-year-old Swede rumbled through his first two matches in the $415,000 tournament at Longwood Cricket Club in straight sets but insisted his 6-3, 6-2, victory Thursday over Todd Witsken of Carmel, Ind., was closer than it sounded.

Wilander trailed momentarily in each set but twice ran off strings of five straight games to win handily.

"The score sounds easy, but I felt he wasn't that far away," Wilander insisted of his third-round victim. "I think I should win here. If I play my normal game, I should make it to the finals."

"I felt good and he made some errors early," Witsken said of his short-lived 2-0 lead in the first set. But, he admitted, it was a different matter later.

"He just didn't make any errors and I don't have a powerful enough game to hurt him," the 24-year-old Witsken said.

Wilander had praise for the tournament's second seed, Andre Agassi, who also won handily before a capacity crowd Thursday night.

Agassi defeated Fernando Luna, 6-2, 6-3.

The third- and fourth-seeded challengers to the Wilander-Agassi domination are out of the tournament. Third-rated Brad Gilbert was ousted by Michael Kures, 7-5, 4-6, 7-6 (7-4) in a complaint-filled afternoon match. And fourth-seeded Guillermo Perez-Roldan of Argentina joined Gilbert on the sidelines after losing, 6-1, 6-4, to Lawson Duncan, the 13th seed of Ashville, N.C.

"Agassi is going to be really good," Wilander said of his expected final-round rival. "He has a simple style and I think he's going to be very important to American tennis in the future."

Mast Presses On, Has Lead In Busch Classic

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Long after many other golfers would have abandoned professional aspirations, Dick Mast pressed on, and his diligence is starting to produce results.

Mast, a 14-year pro seeking his first PGA Tour victory, found himself leading the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic after shooting a 7-under-par 64 in Thursday's opening round.

"I definitely was pleased," said Mast, who came within one shot of the course record on the 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club layout.

Going into today's second round of the $650,000 event, Mast held a one-stroke advantage over Tom Purtzer, Tom Byrum and Bill Buttner.

Two shots behind the leader were Larry Rinker, Charles Bolling, Clark Burroughs and Jerry Pate, who is attempting a comeback from three shoulder operations that sidelined him for much of the past six years.

Mast, 37, of Orlando, Fla., spent several years in the 1970s trying to make it on the tour before losing his card for the third time after the 1979 season. At that point, he retreated to the satellite circuit to hone his game, and enjoyed success at that level for five years.

"I guess I was dubbed 'King of the Mini-Tours,'" said Mast, who got his PGA Tour card back in 1986 after winning his qualifying school session. Mast finished 109th on the winnings list in 1986 and 103rd last year. This season, he tied for seventh at the Kemper Open in early June, and tied for sixth the following week at the Westchester Classic.

"I've played well this month and would like to continue," said Mast, who made seven birdie putts of between 2 and 20 feet. "My putting has been a little inconsistent, but I putted well today."

Like Mast, Byrum played in the morning before rising temperatures and winds hardened Kingsmill's greens. Byrum was seven under before bogeying the final hole, and began his round by three-putting the first hole for a bogey.

"I was still a little sleepy. It woke me up," Byrum said. "I knew I was going to have to do a little more work."

Buttner, playing in the afternoon, went five under after eight holes. He bogeyed the ninth and added three birdies and a bogey after the turn.

"I'd like to get in that zone more often," Buttner said of his start. "I hope it's a sign of things to come."

Purtzer, who missed the cut at last week's Western Open after shooting a pair of 78s, said he should "get the most improved player award from last week. I don't know if I'm 13 shots better. I do know the course isn't 13 shots easier."

Pate, whose victories before his 1982 shoulder problems included the 1976 U.S. Open and the 1982 Tournament Players Championship, also missed the cut at the Western Open, one of the few events in which he has played this year.

"I would definitely say it's a milestone for me," Pate said of Thursday's round, his first sub-par outing in recent memory.

"I might shoot 85 tomorrow, but I'm very happy with what I've done today."

The nine golfers at 67 included 1986 Anheuser-Busch champion Fuzzy Zoeller; Bobby Clampett, the runner-up in this tournament last year, and Peter Jacobsen, who lost the Western Open when he double bogeyed the final hole.

A large group at 68 was headed by U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange, who lives on the grounds of Kingsmill; defending Anheuser-Busch winner Mark McCumber and Mark Wiebe, the 1985 champion.

Sixty-three golfers broke par Thursday, and the 146-player field was to be trimmed to the low 70s scorers plus ties after today's second round.

Inkster Survives The Heat To Grab Mayflower Lead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — On a day when the toughest opponent for many golfers was the heat, Juli Inkster scorched the course in the first round of the $400,000 Mayflower Classic.

The Rancho Murieta, Calif., golfer made four birdie putts and an eagle Thursday for a 6-under-par 65, her best round this year and the lowest at the 6,124-yard Country Club of Indianapolis since Beth Daniel's 65 in 1982.

"I hit the ball real solid," said Inkster, looking for her second victory this year and 10th since joining the tour in 1983. "I had a lot of chances at birdies and hit some good putts. Some went in and some didn't."

Seven golfers were three strokes behind Inkster, including defending champion Colleen Walker, who was 4-under until she three-putted No. 18 for a bogey five. A birdie on that same hole gave her the championship in 1987.

The 18th hole was changed to a par 4 from a par 5 for this year's tournament. That gave Walker trouble.

"I can't hit the driver off the tee," she said. "I have to hit a 3-wood because of the angle."

Also 3-under were Sally Quinlan, Tammie Green, Donna White, Cathy Johnson, Terry-Jo Myers and Betsy

King. Nine others were another stroke back at 69, and 14 players were at 70.

The 72-hole tournament was scheduled to conclude Sunday, with the winner pocketing $60,000.

Inkster started on the back nine early in the day with birdies on her first two holes.

A 3-iron on 18 put her three feet from the cup and set up her fourth birdie putt. She then went on to the par-5, 476-yard first hole, where a 4-wood approach shot put her six feet from the hole. She made the putt for eagle, then carded eight straight pars.

"On five, six, seven, eight and nine my longest putt was 12 feet," she said. "I didn't make any, but I didn't get discouraged."

The golfers had to battle temperatures that reached 97 in the late afternoon with a very light breeze. Fourteen golfers who started in the afternoon finished below par, compared with 17 who had morning tee times.

"Starting out earlier was a little bit better," King said. "There's cloud cover, but it's not really clouds. I don't know what it is."

"It was hot," Inkster said. "And it's going to be even hotter tomorrow because we play in the afternoon. I just try to keep a towel around me and eat a lot out there."

The heat, which accumulated under a gray haze, was most oppressive at the foot of the rolling hills. "When you get down into those little swales, it's tough," Walker said. "There's no air."

The 1984 champion, Ayako Okamoto, was at 70. Other former champions were Amy Alcott (1980) at 71, Alice Miller (1985) at 72, and Sandra Palmer (1986) at 73.

In a nine-way tie at 69 were Allison Finney, Nancy Taylor, Carolyn Hill, Shirley Furlong, Martha Nause, Lenore Rittenhouse and Lisa Walters along with rookies Trish Johnston of Wales and Joan Pitcock.

The golfers also were contending with the effects of Indiana's drought, which has turned the roughs into little more than hard-packed dirt and straw. Thousands of gallons of water are keeping the fairways, tees and greens alive.

"If you catch the rough it's going to take a bigger bounce and maybe go back into the fairway, but most of the time it's going to go farther into the trees," said Green, who hooked a shot on the third hole and made a 20-foot putt to prevent a double-bogey.

She did better on the back nine, where she birdied holes 11, 13 and 16.

Inkster, Quinlan, Green, White and King were scheduled to tee off in the afternoon today. Yet Inkster was undaunted by another day of temperatures in the 90s.

Three Wrestlers Die In Accident

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — Professional wrestler Mike Kelly, who survived a highway crash that killed his twin brother and two colleagues, including Adorable Adrian Adonis, remained in stable condition Thursday in a St. John's hospital.

Kelly underwent surgery Thursday morning to repair damage to a fractured leg, "but otherwise he's doing really well," said Gladys Peachey, a director of patient services.

She said it was too soon to tell how long Kelly would remain in hospital.

Meanwhile, the bodies of Kelly's brother Pat and Dave McKigney of Aurora, Ontario, whose stage name was Wildman, were returned to Ontario. The body of Adonis, of Los Angeles, remained in Lewisporte, Newfoundland, awaiting a decision by American authorities.

The wrestlers' minivan went out of control Monday and plunged into a brook while they were heading for a bout in Lewisporte in northeastern Newfoundland.

Pat and Mike Kelly — actually Victor and William Arko — were the identical twins who appeared on the Oh Henry television commercial in which their combined weight at the end of a teeter-totter was balanced by a single candy bar.

Adonis was the working name for Keith Franke.

Hornets After Free Agent Big Men

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The NBA expansion Charlotte Hornets are considering signing four or five unrestricted free agents, including Los Angeles Laker Kurt Rambis, a source close to the team told The Charlotte Observer. The source, who would not identify any of the other players under consideration, said all of them are big men. The Hornets still have a pressing need for help at the center and power forward spots after choosing mostly perimeter players in the recent expansion and collegiate drafts. Now the Hornets must find some help for 6-foot-11 Dave Hoppen, the only true center taken by the Hornets in either draft. And the quickest route appears to be talking to about 30 unrestricted free agents.

"We've been talking to a lot of different people, and we may be able to sign someone by next week," Hornets vice president Carl Scheer told the newspaper Thursday.

Rambis became one of the first veterans to benefit from the NBA's new collective bargaining agreement. Under that agreement, unsigned veterans with seven years of NBA experience may sign with any team.

Rambis reportedly is on vacation in Hawaii, and was unavailable for comment. Rambis' agent, Peter Johnson, also could not be reached.

Scheer said his concern in playing the free agent field is that those players are demanding guaranteed contracts.

Other big men whose names appeared on the unrestricted free-agent list are: 6-10 Jeff Cook of Phoenix, 6-9 Earl Cureton of the Los Angeles Clippers, 7-0 James Edwards of Detroit, 7-2 Artis Gilmore and 6-11 Bill Walton of Boston, 6-10 Clemon Johnson of Seattle, 6-11 Caldwell Jones and 6-9 Maurice Lucas of Portland, 6-10 Kurt Nimphius of San Antonio, 7-1 Tree Rollins of Atlanta and 6-9 Orlando Woolridge of New Jersey.

Moore Places High At Horse Events

Ashley Moore won a blue ribbon in six different events at the E.H.A. Triangle Hunt Horse Show June 11 and followed that up with a second place performance at the North Carolina Hunter Jumper Association Horse Show in late June.

Moore, 12, rides for Hayfield Farm in Ayden. She won a blue ribbon in the warmup, three more in the pony hunter and two more in the pony equitation.

Moore followed that up with a strong performance at the North Carolina Hunter Jumper Association Horse Show in Raleigh June 28-July 2.

Moore was the reserve champion in the small pony hunter division, winning ribbons in five individual events of that division.

She also placed third in the 11-year old and under equitation on the flat.

9-10 All-Stars Set For Saturday Game

Greenville Little League will institute a 9-10 year-old All-Star baseball game with a one-game series set for Saturday.

9-10 year-old All-Stars from both the North State and the Tar Heel Little Leagues will take part in the game, set for 2 p.m. at Elm Street Park. The game is a one-game series that will be held annually.

Players for the Tar Heel squad are Scott Quinn (First Federal), Curtis Wilder (Pepsi), Damien Phillips (Pepsi), Chris James (Exchange), Jason Lipscomb (Exchange), Monte Roundtree (MacKenzie), Mark Moyer (MacKenzie), Scott Whitley (Jarmans), Matthew Pierce (Jarmans), Jason Adams (Jarmans) and Chris Taylor (Jarmans).

Williams Nixes Signing With ECSU

RALEIGH (AP) — Basketball standout Kenny Williams was ready to sign with Elizabeth City State University, but he decided not to after finding out that more work was required for him to earn his high school degree, authorities said.

Williams, 6-foot-9, was considered one of the top high school players in the country last season and had signed with the University of North Carolina in November. But he failed to graduate from Elizabeth City's Northeastern High School and was advised not to apply to UNC by Tar Heel coach Dean Smith.

Williams is attending the College of the Albemarle in Elizabeth City, trying to get his high school degree. He finished his senior year needing 2½ credits, including English, to earn his diploma.

After missing a chance with UNC, Williams decided to play at Elizabeth City State, a CIAA school near his home. Williams has known ECSU coach Claude Mackey since Williams was young, and he called Mackey Monday to let him know he wanted to attend ECSU. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Thursday.

A news conference was set for Wednesday at the school. The school president, athletic director, coach and the town's mayor were present.

But Williams was not there. Mackey said Williams met with his counselor at the College of the Albemarle earlier Wednesday and was told that he needed to do more work to get his diploma.

Mackey said the two agreed that Williams should complete the requirements for his high school degree and then worry about college in the fall.

Mackey said it appeared that Williams could earn his diploma and be ready for college in the fall. He also said Williams wanted to go to a four-year school and was not interested in going to a junior college.

NASCAR's Alabama Gang In Bad Shape

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Illnesses and injury have sent three members of the Alabama Gang — stock car drivers who live in the state — to hospitals in recent weeks.

"It's been rough on the Alabama Gang, and all of us appreciate the concern of the doctors," said Neil Bonnett, the latest to undergo medical treatment. Doctors removed his appendix and gall bladder Tuesday, and Bonnett is to leave the hospital this weekend.

Red Farmer underwent an emergency appendectomy three weeks ago and Bobby Allison is recovering in an Allentown, Pa., hospital from major injuries received June 19 in a race in that state.

Bonnett said his surgery was overdue.

"I was hoping to make it to the end of the season, but there was just no way," he said.

"My doctor said it needed to be done sooner, but I was hoping to reach a stretch where I had some time off. Now I've reached that point. I just need to rest now."

Bonnett has been ill since January and has lost 15 pounds. He said his condition became worse after he wrecked during a May race in Charlotte.

"The doctors didn't know if I could hold off (from surgery)," he said. "I've just made it the best I could."

Buoniconti Violated Spearing Rule

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Marc Buoniconti speared an opposing running back on the tackle which left him paralyzed on a football field almost three years ago, Tennessee football coach Johnny Majors says.

"It violated the rule against spearing," Majors told the jury hearing Buoniconti's $16.5-million negligence suit against Citadel team physician Dr. E.K. Wallace Jr.

Testifying in a videotape deposition played Thursday, Majors said the proper tackling position would have been with the face up "rather than attacking the ballplayer with the top of the helmet."

"My opinion is it was an illegal tackle because the player ... hit the ball carrier with the top of his helmet," Majors said of Buoniconti's tackle in the Nov. 26, 1985 Citadel game against East Tennessee State.

Buoniconti was the starting middle linebacker for The Citadel in the game. The son of former Miami Dolphins linebacker Nick Buoniconti, he suffered a broken neck and was left a quadriplegic by the accident.

His lawsuit against Wallace alleges that the physician was negligent in treating a neck sprain Buoniconti suffered several weeks prior to the accident.

The suit also charges Wallace failed to warn Buoniconti that an existing neck condition — including a straightening of the cervical spinal cord — made it dangerous for him to continue playing football.

The defense contends Buoniconti was to blame for the accident because he illegally speared the opposing player in violation of football rules.

The team doctor for the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Joseph Torg, agreed with that position Thursday.

He testified it was Buoniconti's tackling technique, not any prior medical condition or special equipment he was fitted with, that was responsible for the accident.

"What we are dealing with here as far as causation is concerned is not a medical problem," Torg testified. "What we are dealing with here as far as causation is a coaching technique problem."

Torg is the director of the National Football Head and Neck Registry, which tracks serious football neck injuries.

He showed the jury in Charleston County Court of Common Pleas a videotape of 16 football accidents — including Buoniconti's — which left high school and college players quadriplegics.

He testified that in each case, the injury was caused by axial loading in which the neck is compressed between the body and the player's head when a tackle was made.

Torg testified that, in each case, the accident victim made the hit with the top of his helmet.

Earlier witnesses for Buoniconti testified he was left paralyzed by a flexion injury in which his head was forced forward and down.

They said a special collar and a strap between Buoniconti's facemask and shoulder pads designed to prevent him from reinjuring a sprained neck held his head down and contributed to his injury.

Torg said Wallace provided proper care for Buoniconti, who suffered what he said was only a minor neck sprain the previous week in a game against Tennessee-Chattanooga.

While testimonies indicated Buoniconti suffered the sprain early in the previous game, he played the entire contest.

"Confronted with a patient who has an injury and that injury allows him to continue playing, in my opinion that is a mild injury," Torg said.

Torg was asked whether Wallace should have warned Buoniconti about using his head to make tackles, but replied that's a responsibility for the coaching staff, not the team physician.

Legal Eagles..... 16
First Citizens..... 10

The Legal Eagles took control in the second inning and went on to claim a 16-10 victory in the championship game of the Prep League Baseball Tournament Thursday.

Legal Eagles overcame a 3-0 First Citizens lead by scoring four runs in the bottom of the first as Jay Moyer, Richie Grimsley and Jason Krause each singled.

Legal Eagles then struck for seven runs in the second inning to take control of the game.

Adam Charlton and Krause each recorded a key hit as Legal Eagles also took advantage of two errors and two base on balls to put men in scoring position.

First Citizens came back with four runs in the top of the third to narrow the gap to 10-7, but Legal Eagles scored three runs in the third and two more in the fourth to maintain its advantage.

Krause and Albert Alston had two hits each for Legal Eagles while Sam Jennings had two hits for First Citizens.

Kentucky To Sue Emery Air Freight

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A lawyer for University of Kentucky assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey said he would file a $6.9 million lawsuit Friday against Emery Air Freight Corp., claiming Casey was harmed by the way the carrier handled a package, according to reports.

Attorney Joe Bill Campbell told The Courier-Journal and WKYT-TV he would file the suit in U.S. District Court in Lexington and planned to ask for $6,966,950 in compensatory damages and an unspecified amount of punitive damages.

The Courier-Journal examined a copy of the papers Campbell plans to file and which name Emery, five of its employees, the security firm that dealt with the package and the head of the security firm as defendants.

Four of the five Emery employees were quoted in a copyright article in the Los Angeles Daily News on April 14.

The employees said they had seen $1,000 inside a package Casey had sent to UK recruit Chris Mills' father on March 30. The package popped open in transit at Emery's Los Angeles warehouse, the employees said. Casey denied sending the money, and Mills and his father denied receiving it.

Emery employees said the money was resealed in the package and delivered to the home.

The paper employee was not quoted in the fifth, but has a brother-in-law who worked for the Daily News, Campbell said. Also named as defendants are Security Experts Inc. and its head, who also was quoted as saying he saw the money.

The suit alleges that Casey's privacy was violated, his character was defamed, information regarding the package was unlawfully disclosed, the package was handled negligently and Casey suffered "severe and grievous mental and emotional suffering."

Burl McCoy, a Lexington lawyer who represents Emery, told the newspaper Thursday night, "I suspected that he was going to file a lawsuit. If he intends to file a suit, Emery intends to defend it vigorously. We will maintain our position that we have done nothing inappropriate."

McCoy also said he would not consider settling the case. "I have received no instructions to settle and I've advised my client not to settle. I will not consider settling where I've seen no legal wrong," Casey said he felt confident in the case.

"We feel really good about it," said. "We still profess our innocence. There was no money in the package when it left the UK basketball team and this suit results from damages that have been done to the ... It really speaks for itself."

Chi Chi Is Defending

KENMORE, Wash. (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez, who has claimed 11 victories in less than three years on the PGA Seniors Tour, is defending his title in the $300,000 GTE Northwest Classic.

Bruce Crampton, winner of the inaugural GTE Northwest in 1986, also was in the 72-man field when play began today.

They will be sharing the spotlight with local favorite Don Bies on the 6,996-yard, par-72 Inglewood Country Club course.

Bies is a Senior Tour rookie who turned 50 last December and became a winner after only 12 tournaments, hitting the top three weeks ago in the Northville Invitational at Jericho, N.Y.

Bies was impatient to join the Senior Tour.

"Last year, when I was watching them, I was anxious to play again with these guys," he said. "Knowing them, it was fun to watch them."

It took Bies 15 years to become a winner on the PGA Tour, where his only regular tour victory came in the Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open in 1975.

That was a $40,000 week for Bies. At Jericho, he earned $52,500. For the year, he is 10th on the Senior Tour money list with $143,040, and 10 top 10 finishes in 13 events.

Bies needed the better part of 11 years to collect that kind of money in the old days, although he ventured out on the PGA Tour occasionally as an assistant professional from 1961-68. His first full-time season was 1969, and his biggest money year was 1976, when he won $92,450 for 28th place.

First place Sunday, after 54 holes, will be worth $45,000.

 Who knows whence tricks will come. It is a tossup who was more surprised at the 13th trick, declarer or the defenders.

The auction was straightforward. Once the heart fit was revealed, there was no reason for South to show that he had a two-suited hand. The less you tell the defenders, the more difficult the defense is likely to be.

Declarer rose with the ace of spades at trick one to cash dummy's ace-king of clubs for a spade discard. Next came the ace-king of diamonds and a diamond ruff, followed by a heart to East's king. Stripped of red cards, East had a choice of exiting with a spade, setting up dummy's jack, or the queen of clubs, setting up the table's ten. Since dummy was entryless, it seemed of no import, so East chose the queen of clubs, ruffed by declarer.

Declarer led the queen of trumps, taken by West's ace. Back came a spade, and declarer ruffed East's ten. The jack of hearts was cashed for declarer's ninth trick, reducing West to nothing but a trump and a club. Now declarer simply led a diamond, and West had no way out. He had to ruff, but then he could do no more than concede the game-going trick to the ten of clubs. Note that it would not have mattered had West exited with the king of spades rather than a club. When in with the ace of hearts, West would have to get off play with a club, and the same ending would

Rollin' S Scapegoat tour begins
 Ohio, kicked off their "Football Fields" Tour for Band Practice' Tour at the Centrum in Worcester, Massachusetts. They didn't waste any time getting down to business as they opened with their monster hit, "Harry L. Dinkle March." Dressed in a uniform that would make Michael Jackson turn green, Harry L. Dinkle lived up to his reputation as the world's greatest band director by leading a series of stirring marches through a stirring series of marches from new material interspersed with the anthemic "Just on 21)"

Say No March' and the poignant cover of 'Go Tell Aunt Rhody'.

The Scapegoatmaniacs in the crowd seemed to grow restless with the slower tunes, but the band soon had them on their feet and marching again with a rousing medley of Sousa oldies.

Although they avoided the usual pyrotechnics found at such concerts, the crowd was treated to the sight of a majorette blowing herself up as she attempted a flaming baton trick just prior to the band's (Cont. on 21)

Writers OK Limited Contract

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A leader of the Writers Guild of America predicted that stalled negotiations between producers and striking writers would resume soon following union ratification of an interim contract.

Brian Walton, executive director of the WGA West, said he hopes to meet with the chief negotiator for the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, the industry's bargaining group.

"I am hopeful that we can continue to explore ways of resolving the impasse and that we can do so quickly," Walton said Thursday. "The pressure is on both sides to get the industry working again."

Walton's optimism reflected a change in the tense environment that has surrounded the strike since it began March 7.

Union members voting in New York and Los Angeles Wednesday night approved an interim contract with independent producers by an 8-1 margin. The interim contracts are a union effort to split the industry's ranks.

Thirteen companies have already signed the new deal, including Carolco Pictures, makers of the "Rambo" movies, and actress Shelly Duvall's Platypus Productions Inc., union officials said.

Walton said that he and J. Nicholas Counter III, negotiator for the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, met through the night Tuesday with talks concluding Wednesday.

The Alliance has said it is not in negotiations with the WGA and that its last contract offer to the guild, rejected by the WGA by a 3-1 margin June 22, is final. But Walton said he believed Wednesday's vote would lead to talks that could end the 18-week strike that has idled most Hollywood production.

Referring to the interim contract, Walton said, "It is now clear that the writers' guild has a contract that can put the town back to work. It is fair, reasonable and works for both sides. The obstacle to ending the strike, therefore, is not obviously the writers' guild."

Walton predicted the new interim agreement, in conjunction with a previously approved independent contract, would mean that between 300 and 500 writers would resume work in coming weeks.

As of Thursday, 124 production companies, mostly small operations, had broken ranks.

ABC Takes New Look At Drugs

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman describes the high she gets from cocaine — "I felt like I was takin' off like a jet, like nothin' mattered."

A laboratory mouse rushes from a feeding tube to a lever and back again. We are told the mouse will keep pushing the lever for cocaine until it dies from the drug.

These are some scenes from ABC's "Drugs: Why This Plague?"; it is a natural sequel to "Drugs: A Plague Upon the Land," the network's documentary examining the frightening extent of the drug problem in America. The first program will be rebroadcast Saturday. The follow-up airs Monday.

"The essential understanding that we want to reach by the end of this broadcast is, why?" says anchor Peter Jennings at the beginning of "Drugs: Why This Plague?" "Why do we rank higher than any other industrial country in the use and abuse of drugs? Why does this demon loom so large in our neighborhoods, on our shores?"

One of the elements often missing in examinations of the drug problem is any explanation of why, if drugs are so terrible, anyone would take them in the first place. "Why This Plague" does a pretty good job of explaining, and although "entertaining" isn't exactly the kind of word to apply to such a serious subject, the program is.

Like the first broadcast, the sequel is interspersed with a unique montage of news footage from ABC affiliates around the country. It is slickly produced and edited for maximum impact without sacrificing content. Av Westin is the executive producer, Stuart Schwartz senior producer.

In one portion of the documentary, Jeff Greenfield examines the blatant cultural signals that tell us taking drugs is all right and even expected behavior, whether alcohol, marijuana or cocaine. Cheech and Chong make hit movies pushing grass. Woody Allen pokes fun at high-society coke users.

Popular actor Bruce Willis tells kids in a public service announcement to "just say no" to drugs. But his Seagram's wine cooler commercials suggested that drinking makes people cool like him.

Other messages are subliminal. What about all those aspirin commercials?

"Sometimes," says Greenfield, "it seems like you can't turn on the TV without hearing how one little pill will cure what ails you."

Festival Sets Records

MONTREAL (AP) — From sax solos to Senegalese soul, a sizzling stew of eclectic sounds is turning this French-Canadian city into the New Orleans of the north and luring thousands of fans to North America's biggest jazz bash.

A slew of streets have been shut down for the ninth Montreal International Jazz Festival, a 10-day blowout expected to attract a record 600,000 people by the time a Louisiana bayou blues band lays down the final riffs early Monday.

With a roster ranging from Miles Davis to Manhattan Transfer, the festival, which began last Friday, has transformed the town into a musical mecca.

Under the cast-iron balconies of gabled houses on Rue St-Denis, buskers, acrobats and bongo players entertain between bands and the snap of bebop trumpets emerges from crowded cafes.

A few blocks away, 60,000 listeners packed Place des Arts earlier this week to hear white South African singer Johnny Clegg and his integrated band Savuka deliver their soulful anti-apartheid message.

Organizers of the non-profit $3.5 million festival also staged a Cuban night featuring keyboard prodigy Gonzalo Rubalcaba; the Canadian debut of Mamma Tongue, a Gambian-American band mixing Africa oral tradition with jazz; and an inspired double bill of pianist Dorothy Donegan and alto sax star Phil Woods that caused a happy riot.

After many encores, an exhausted Donegan quipped: "Did I get the job?"

Guitarist Pat Metheny, a guest at eight of the nine Montreal gatherings, was dubbed the festival's patron saint and appointed judge of a Canadian jazz band contest.
