

Storms Hit Western N.C. With Rainfall, Lightning

By The Associated Press
A blanket of stagnant air scattered thunderstorms and lightning across many portions of drought-stricken North Carolina, but the heavy rains may have done more bad than good, officials said.

A 20-year-old Transylvania County woman was injured Sunday afternoon when lightning apparently struck her house and power surged through a curling iron she was using, officials said.

The woman, who was not identified by the Transylvania County Hospital personnel, was in fair condition after she was shocked by the power surge, officials said.

The injury occurred when the thunderstorm swept through Transylvania and Henderson counties, with high winds that caused trees to fall across power lines, knocking out power to about 2,500 customers in Transylvania County, officials said.

In Alexander County, a two-hour storm knocked down trees and utility poles and temporarily flooded a bridge over the Middle Little River on N.C. 127.

The Piedmont also was hit hard Sunday afternoon as winds picked up to 70 mph with dime-size hail, the National Weather Service said.

Meanwhile, a thunderstorm accompanied by high winds and large hail reportedly caused the collapse of a store roof in High Point and cut electrical power in southwest Greensboro as the storm moved through the Piedmont.

High Point police reported that a roof had collapsed on a K mart store in High Point, damaging some cars in the parking lot. Police reported no injuries and said the store had been closed for renovations.

High winds uprooted a 40-foot oak tree that slammed into a house in southwest Greensboro.

Hail and high winds were reported in western Guilford County and eastern Forsyth County. Rick Neal, a spokesman for the weather service office at Piedmont Triad International Airport, said a Guilford County sheriff's deputy reported hail stones the size of golf balls north of High Point.

Duke Power Co. reported that 750 customers in southwest Greensboro lost electrical power Sunday evening when lightning struck a substation. Power was restored to most of those customers within an hour, said Ernest Bowie, supervisor of customer engineering for Duke Power.

In Yadkin County authorities reported numerous woods fires started by lightning in the southwest part of the county, and Wilkes County authorities reported that high winds overturned a mobile home and downed several trees in the southeast part of that county, about 70 miles west of Greensboro.

Wind gusts estimated at 70 mph were reported late Sunday afternoon at Southern Pines Airport, where some planes were torn from their tie-downs by wind carrying mothball-size hail, according to the weather service.

In Durham, Bob Dollar, a Duke Power duty supervisor, said the storm knocked out four major electrical circuits, serving almost 6,000 customers. Two of the circuits were knocked out by lightning and two were knocked out when trees fell on power lines.

Lightning struck the roof of a Durham church, interrupting Sunday night services. The lightning damaged the church roof, but did not cause a fire, authorities said.

Shaking Kills Small Boy

DURHAM (AP) — A 23-year-old Durham man has been charged with murder in the death of a 21-month-old boy who suffered fatal injuries apparently caused by violent shaking, officials said.

Antwyn Wesley died Sunday afternoon at Duke Hospital. He was brought to the hospital emergency room Friday afternoon in a state of cardiac arrest. Doctors were able to revive the child, but he was declared clinically brain-dead Saturday afternoon.

Michael DeAngelo Weaver, the boyfriend of the child's mother, was placed in Durham County Jail without bond.

Naylon said Weaver told police that he was angry at the child's mother, Michelle Wesley, because she wanted him to do some chores while she left the apartment. Naylon said Weaver also was angry because the child was crying. Naylon said the child was picked up by the arm pits and shaken.

Higher Pay May Lure Bus Drivers

By The Associated Press
Higher salaries will increase the number of people who might be interested in driving school buses, and could lure more qualified people to the job teen-agers once dominated in North Carolina, officials say.

"The type of people the schools are looking for are in demand in other businesses," said Darrell Johnson, manager of the Employment Security Commission's Wilmington office. "Most people can't accommodate a driver's schedule so you've got to use something as incentive, in this case it's money."

The federal government has ordered the state to stop using drivers younger than 18. At the end of the last school year, the state's corps of drivers included about 2,000 17-year-olds.

In a bid to recruit more adult drivers, the General Assembly last month agreed to spend $18.8 million for higher pay for drivers.

The increase will be an average of $1.20 per hour, and full benefits for drivers who do part-time jobs at school to complete a 40-hour work week also has been approved.

Last year, the state reimbursed school systems an average of $4.91 an hour per driver. Under the plan approved by the General Assembly, the state will pay local systems an average of $6.10 an hour.

Each school system develops its own salary range based on the average state reimbursement.

To help make the job more attractive to adults, many school systems help drivers fill out their day with part-time work as substitute teachers or with work in the cafeteria or library.

Next year, for the first time, full-time hours for school bus drivers will mean full-time benefits. That was not the case in the past, officials said, because of the prevalence of student drivers.

Drivers usually work about four hours a day, two hours in the morning and two in the afternoon.

Diet Food For Thought...

Dieting has become big business in our society. It is also very serious business. While it is important to lose weight, it is also important to go about it in a sensible manner...both in terms of health and economics.

HOW DOES YOUR DIET COMPARE?

Can you average a weight loss of 3½ to 5 pounds each week?
Does it cost more than $35 per week...total cost...no hidden fees?
Are the counselors educationally trained to help you?

OR

Are you required to buy products on a regular basis? How much will this cost?

At DIET CENTER we do not feel that injections or special products are necessary. We feel it is more important to learn to control your weight with regular foods that you will continue to eat for the rest of your life.

We offer our exclusive DIET SUPPLEMENT. This supplement is GIVEN to you at NO additional charge.

If the diet is guaranteed, what does the guarantee say? How much money will you get back if you are not satisfied? At DIET CENTER we feel it is impossible to guarantee weight loss, but should you decide to pay in advance for our program we will refund any unused portion of your money if for any reason you decide not to continue our program.

Are you discouraged from exercising? If so, take another look at the program, common sense tells us a safe diet and exercise program is the only sensible approach to good health and weight loss.

Gimmicks don't work. If they did, we'd all be thin and stay thin. Weed out the gimmicks. Call DIET CENTER today. We will explain our program, answer your questions, but we will apply no pressure. The decision is yours. Our consultations are FREE.

Greenville Woman, Daughter Killed

VANCEBORO — A Greenville woman and her daughter were killed in a two-car collision three miles south of Vanceboro on State Road 1440 Sunday afternoon.

Three women — two from Pitt County — were injured in the same 4:29 p.m. accident.

Trooper J.W. Brown identified the deceased as April Wilson Walston, 38, and Meredith Walston, 8, both of 217 Crestline Blvd., Greenville.

The Highway Patrol said Mrs. Walston was the driver of a car traveling south and carrying herself, her daughter and two other passengers that skidded out of control and into the path of a northbound car driven by Glenda Bland Hardee, 42, of 3 Baywood Drive, Winterville. The Walston car was struck in the right side.

Virginia K. Price, 56, of New Bern and Patty W. Michael, 27, of 102 Kathryn Lane, Greenville, passengers in the Walston car, were taken to Craven Regional Medical Center in New Bern, as was Mrs. Hardee.

It appears unlikely that charges will be filed in connection with the accident, a Highway Patrol spokesman said.

The accident was one of several across North Carolina that caused 11 deaths during the weekend, the Associated Press reported.

Laverne Gulverth, 32, of Maxton, was killed about 12:30 a.m. Sunday when a car struck him as he was lying on a rural road south of Maxton.

Mary Pierce Helphrin, 57, of Mill Valley, Calif., died when the car she was driving collided head-on with another vehicle on U.S. 158 Sunday morning about 10 miles north of Kitty Hawk.

Kenneth Worth Culler, 24, of Climax was killed Saturday night when his car ran off a rural road 4.5 miles east of Asheboro and struck a utility pole. The patrol said Culler, who was not wearing a seat belt, was thrown from the car.

Rolon Keith Cook, 25, of Huntersville died about 1:50 a.m. Saturday on a Charlotte city street when the car he was driving struck a tree, troopers said.

A pedestrian, Bernard Moonblatt, 75, of Miami was killed when a car attempted to pass another vehicle on Interstate 95 about four miles north of Lumberton. The first car struck the passing vehicle in the right rear, and the driver lost control, striking Moonblatt, troopers said.

Moonblatt had been involved in an accident only 25 minutes before he was killed. Trooper T.L. Williams said Moonblatt apparently fell asleep while driving and his car ran into some woods off I-95. Another man, James E. McCloskey, 27, of Buffalo, N.Y., had stopped to help him. McCloskey was seriously injured when he and Moonblatt were struck by the passing car.

Clinton Lee Jones, 36, of Route 1, Bayboro, was killed when he was struck by a car shortly before 5 a.m. Saturday on N.C. 304 just northeast of Mescic, the patrol said. Troopers said Jones was struck while he was crawling along the roadway.

Nattie Lynn Britt, 20, of Micro and Tammie Lynn Edwards, 21, of Selma were killed around 10 p.m. Friday when the car in which they were riding ran off a rural road 6 miles north of Selma, overturned, went airborne and struck a tree, the patrol said. A third person in the car was injured. Troopers said the victims were not wearing seat belts.

In another Friday night accident, Raymond Todd Newton, 28, of Route 11, Hickory, was killed and a passenger in his pickup truck was injured. The patrol said the truck ran off a rural road 10 miles south of Taylorsville in Alexander County, struck an embankment and overturned. The driver, who was not wearing a seat belt, was thrown from the truck, the patrol said.

The deaths pushed the North Carolina highway death toll for the year to 721, down from 752 deaths during the comparable period last year.

Teacher Seminar

Mattie H. Link of Greenville, a teacher at Farmville Central High School, participated in a seminar, "India: Contemporary Conflict in an Ancient Setting," June 20-25 at the North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching in Cullowhee. The North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching conducts a year-round program of seminars in the arts, humanities and sciences for the state's outstanding public school teachers.

P&Z Meets

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission will conduct a special call meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall to further discuss details of the proposed Zoning Ordinance update. Among the items to be addressed by the commission are site plan review standards and design review standards as suggested by Robinson and Cole, a consultant contracted to assist in the update process.

MS Meetings

Meetings to provide information on multiple sclerosis are being held each Tuesday through Aug. 2. The meetings are being held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Gaskins-Leslie Building at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, conference room A, beginning Tuesday. Kathy Garren, a nurse at the PCMH Regional Rehabilitation Center will facilitate the group. The topic for Tuesday is "The Immune System: How It Works, Its Connection with MS, and Experimental Tests and Medications Being Tried in Relation to MS." For information, call Kathy Garren, 551-4313 or Kaye Gooch, 872-1706.

Road Closed

Beginning July 18, Hooker Road between Ridge Place and Millbrook Street will be closed for replacement of the bridge over Green Mill Run with a concrete box culvert. The road will remain closed until work is complete in October. Traffic will be detoured along Greenville Boulevard, Memorial Drive, and Arlington Drive.

For more information, contact the Engineering and Inspections Department at 830-4466.

Larceny Charges

Debora Allen Dunn, 31, of Ayden was arrested on larceny charges by Greenville police Sunday.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said Ms. Dunn was charged in connection with an incident at the Fresh Way Food Store on East 10th Street that was reported about 7:44 p.m.

Fatal Beating

Greenville police said late this morning that the body of 73-year-old Thomas Lee McGowan was found on the third floor of the Greenville Storage Warehouse on Atlantic Avenue.

Sgt. D.A. Jackson, who said McGowan lived in the warehouse, said employees of a company working on the sprinkler system in the building found McGowan's body about 10:43 a.m. and called police.

"The cause of death has not been determined at this time," Jackson said, but other officers said it appeared McGowan had been beaten.

Jackson said Greenville detectives and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation were cooperating in the investigation.

Cyclist Struck

John Earl Barnes Jr., 22, of 701 W. Fourth St. was still in critical condition this morning in Pitt County Memorial Hospital from injuries he received when the bicycle he was riding was struck by a Greenville police car on North Greene Street early Sunday.

North Carolina Highway Patrol Trooper A.G. Wright, who investigated the 3:14 a.m. collision just north of the Greene Street bridge, said Barnes was charged with driving under the influence in connection with the incident.

Wright reported that a police car driven by Officer Thomas L. Forrest was headed north of Greene Street, responding to a reported break-in in progress with his blue lights and siren operating, when Barnes, riding on a grassy area next to the street, pulled onto the roadway in front of the car.

Barnes was taken to the hospital by the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department rescue unit and hospital officials said this morning that his condition is still listed as critical.

Southern Democratic Chiefs Want Moderate For Veep

Most Southern Democratic Party state chairmen agree that it's more important for Michael Dukakis to pick a centrist as his running mate than a Southerner recruited to assuage regional pride.

"Dukakis doesn't need a Southerner to win nationally or in the South, although ... from regional pride, you'd like to see it," John Anderson of Georgia said.

Anderson said he would just look for a vice presidential nominee without any negative aspects "because no one's going to vote for him except his mother."

The Greenville, S.C., News last week interviewed 11 of the 13 Southern and border state chairmen. Virginia's Lawrence Framme and Florida's Charles Whitehead couldn't be reached for comment.

"Dukakis has an unusual opportunity to make a political statement with his vice presidential choice, and I think he ought to make a statement back toward moderation," said Robert Slagle, an attorney from Texas now in his fifth term as Texas Democratic chairman.

But just who the chairmen want beside Dukakis ranges across the political spectrum.

One chairman picked Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who once was in the presidential race himself against Dukakis. Two chairmen each opted for Sens. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, John Glenn of Ohio, Sam Nunn of Georgia and Bob Graham of Florida.

One chairman, Richard Lodge of Tennessee, who backed Gore's presidential bid, said he was uncommitted and just wanted "one that won't hurt the ticket."

Anderson said that from a Southern standpoint, Gore would be the logical choice. But if Dukakis is looking for someone with a more nationwide appeal, Glenn could be the pick.

"For a VP, I don't look for the strongest, but for one who can do the job and has a favorable rating with the people ... because as long as it's favorable you won't hear one way or the other. If it's unfavorable, that's all they'll hound us on."

Alabama state party chairman John Baker said he felt Dukakis had to carry some Southern states to win the election, but he said that doesn't mean the candidate has to pick a Southerner for vice president.

James Van Hecke of North Carolina said he was "probably" for Glenn, but he isn't entirely sure.

"I guess he would offer more than anybody else," he said.

South Carolina's Frank Holleman said he would prefer Glenn, since Nunn has taken himself out of contention. Holleman, a Greenville attorney, said Dukakis doesn't need a Southerner, although it would probably provide a boost in the region during the immediate post-convention days.

Louisiana's James Brady said he preferred Bentsen over Gore. And he said Glenn "is a neutral in Louisiana. He doesn't hurt you, but he certainly doesn't bring you anything, either."

Liburn Carlisle of Arkansas said Bentsen would boost the ticket in his state as well as Louisiana and Oklahoma, while Ed Cole of Mississippi said he was wary of Dukakis picking someone "offensive to this part of the country." He said Glenn, Gore and Graham would be fine, but that Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana and the Rev. Jesse Jackson would not.

Jerry Lundergan of Kentucky said he prefers Gore, while Karen Schafer of Missouri said she liked Gephardt.

Maryland's Rosalie Riley said she preferred Nunn, but she suggested that former Transportation Secretary Brock Adams of Washington might provide a fresh face and attract some Western votes long denied the party's ticket.

Parked Vehicles Hit In Wave Of Thefts

Investigators said 12 thefts, seven of them involving items taken from parked vehicles, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer C.M. Credle said a radar detector was taken from a car parked in the Hardee's restaurant parking lot at the intersection of Ninth and Cotanche streets in an incident reported at 10:47 p.m. Saturday, while Officer S.A. Bass said a purse was taken from a vehicle parked in a lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche streets in an incident reported at 1:21 a.m. Sunday.

Officer T.L. Forrest said a purse was taken from a car parked at the intersection of Sixth and Hudson streets in an incident reported at 2:16 a.m. Sunday, while Officer S.D. Hilliard said two juveniles, who were later taken into custody and then turned over to their parents, took a wallet from a man at the intersection of Fifth and Reade streets in an incident reported at 2:37 a.m.

Officer L.C. Overby said a purse was taken from a car parked at 1108 E. 10th St. in an incident reported at 9:47 a.m. and a plant taken from a porch at 401 S. Meade St. in an incident reported at 4:37 p.m.

Overby also said a radar detector was taken from a car parked at 402 Rotary Ave. in an incident reported at 3:33 p.m., while Officer S.A. Perri said a television set, a hair edge trimmer, a crinkle iron and four bottles of nail polish were taken from Cosmo Hair Styling at 720 Atlantic Ave. in a break-in reported at 10:01 a.m.

Officer R.L. Vandiford said a two-way radio valued at $800 was taken from one vehicle parked at 800 Daventry Drive and a car telephone valued at $2,500 was taken from a second vehicle parked at the same location in an incident reported at 2:29 p.m., while Officer F.G. Pruitt said a purse containing $2,000 in cash was taken from the Western Sizzlin Steak House on East 10th Street in an incident reported at 6:03 p.m.

Officer P.W. Worthington said an 8-month-old Rottweiler puppy valued at $1,200 was taken from a porch at 510B E. First St. in an incident reported at 7:44 p.m., while Officer R.C. Stroud said a radar detector was taken from a car parked in the Buccaneer Theater parking lot on Arlington Boulevard in an incident reported at 10:51 p.m.

The increase in corn and soybean meal prices have caused a dramatic increase in feed costs for swine producers. Some producers might consider the use of small grains and/or synthetic amino acids to lower the price of swine feeds if these ingredients can be purchased at a competitive price.

Barley, for example, would be an attractive alternative to corn if a source is located. The feeding value of barley is only 85 percent of corn on a weight-for-weight basis. Barley based diets should be formulated on a lysine basis rather than a protein basis to assure maximum performance.

Barley can completely replace corn in a swine ration for some classes, however, less efficient and slower gains will normally result. The best performance is obtained if barley is limited to less than 70 percent of the complete ration for finishing swine. Because of the low energy content, it is not recommended to use barley in baby pig rations. Since barley is susceptible to fungus (scab) contamination which causes reproductive problem, it is recommended to not use barley in breeding herd rations.

With the rising cost of soybean meal, feed grade synthetic lysine may be a good purchase for some swine producers. Producers that are adding soybean meal to their swine diets can replace 100 pounds of 44 percent soybean meal with 97 pounds of corn and 3 pounds of L-lysine or 100 pounds of 48 percent soybean meal with 96.7 pounds of corn and 3.3 pounds of L-lysine per ton of feed. Feed grade synthetic lysine is sold in the form L-lysine monohydrochloride.

BITE COLLAPSE

If any of your back teeth are missing, resulting in "bite collapse," your dentist may recommend use of a bite plate until the missing teeth have been replaced. A thin plate of acrylic resin, the bite plate covers part of the hard palate. Placed behind the upper front teeth, the bite plate is thickened and flattened in order to make contact with the lower front teeth. This tends to keep the back teeth slightly apart when your mouth is closed.

The bite plate is sometimes combined with other devices such as clasps around the back teeth for added retention. It can also be used with an arch wire to help stabilize loose teeth or in combination with acrylic blocks to prevent teeth from drifting.

These are temporary measures to protect your permanent teeth and keep them in proper alignment until a permanent bridge has been prepared to replace the missing teeth. Often a bite plate is also useful in treating other problems such as tooth grinding or jaw clenching which cause teeth to move out of alignment.

Note: We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Snow Hill, Wayne County Earn Split

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill pushed across six runs in the first two innings and went on to take a 11-1 win over Wayne County as Cornelius Hill pitched a four-hitter Sunday to tie their best of five American Legion baseball playoff series at one game apiece.

Wayne County took a win in the opening game Saturday night, 5-4, but Snow Hill took control of Sunday's game early and never trailed.

In the first, T.J. Johnson reached off an error. Tommy Eason doubled before both came home on a single by Shay Beaman. An error allowed Beaman to score.

Snow Hill added three more runs in the second as Hill walked and stole second. With two outs, Johnson doubled in Hill. Eason singled in Johnson. Beaman singled and Chris West followed with a single to score Eason.

Beaman went 3-5 and George Burnette went 3-6 to lead Snow Hill. Johnson, Eason, West and Anthony Jones added two hits apiece.

Snow Hill, 13-11, on the year, returns to action tonight at Wayne County. In Saturday's game, Goldsboro pushed across three runs in the sixth to take the lead and then held off a late charge by Snow Hill to take a 5-4 win.

Snow Hill led early by pushing across three runs in the third as George Greene walked and scored on T.J. Johnson's single. Tommy Eason was intentionally walked. Shay Beaman doubled in Johnson and Chris West singled in Eason for a 3-0 lead.

After Wayne County took the lead in the sixth, Snow Hill narrowed the gap by pushing across one run in the seventh as Johnson walked and scored on Burnette's single that was errored.

Wayne County's Bob Grant had a deep fly to center that was errored allowing two runs to score in the three-run sixth.

Chris West went 3-4 to lead Snow Hill while Beaman added two hits.

California Tops Cleveland, 7-5

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The hottest team in the American League at the All-Star break is the California Angels.

The Angels are going so well these days — five straight victories and 17 of 23 — that they hit into six double plays Sunday but still beat the Cleveland Indians 7-5.

California's Devon White and Brian Downing hit solo home runs in the first inning and Tony Armas hit a two-run shot in the fifth, all off Cleveland's Scott Bailes.

Winning pitcher Willie Fraser gave up two runs in six innings and Greg Minton pitched the final 2 1-3 innings after Cleveland scored three times in the seventh off Sherman Corbett.

Athletics 8, Tigers 2

Rookie Walt Weiss hit his first grand slam to lead Oakland to a split of the four-game series between the division leaders. Weiss' third home run of the season keyed a seven-run third inning.

Luis Polonia started the Oakland third with a single, went to third on Carney Lansford's single and scored on a one-out single by Mark McGwire for a 2-0 lead.

Brewers 3, Twins 2

Jim Gantner hit a tie-breaking two-run double with two out in the top of the ninth, giving Milwaukee a sweep of the three-game series. Darryl Hamilton singled with one out off Minnesota reliever Keith Atherton and took second on Charlie O'Brien's single. After O'Brien was forced at second, Gantner doubled both runners home.

Royals 5, Yankees 3

Frank White snapped a seventh-inning tie with a sacrifice fly and doubled home an insurance run in the ninth while reliever Rick Anderson pitched 3 1-3 scoreless innings for his first victory.

Danny Tartabull opened the Royals' seventh with a double off Tim Stoddard, the fourth Yankee pitcher. He went to third on Kevin Seitzer's fly ball and scored on White's long fly. Kansas City added a run off Dave Righetti in the ninth on a hit batsman and White's double.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 1

Dave LaPoint allowed three hits in seven shutout innings and Greg Walker doubled home two runs in the bottom of the first. Steve Curry, making his major-league debut, was the loser, yielding three runs on four hits and seven walks in 4 1-3 innings.

Two of the walks came in the first inning to Gary Redus, the leadoff batter, and Dan Pasqua with two out. Walker drove them both home with his double. Steve Lyons' sacrifice fly in the fourth made it 3-0 and Harold Baines hit an RBI double off Mike Smithson in the sixth.

Blue Jays 5, Mariners 0

Jimmy Key pitched a five-hitter over eight innings for his third consecutive victory since returning from elbow surgery and Rance Mulliniks' two-run homer keyed a five-run first.

Tony Fernandez opened the Toronto first with an infield hit and Mulliniks followed with his eighth home run. With two out, Ernie Whitt singled, Fred McGriff walked and both scored on a double by Rick Leach. Sil Campusano's RBI single completed the scoring.

Orioles 2, Rangers 1

Rookie right-hander Jose Bautista overcame record heat and combined with two relievers on a seven-hitter. Temperatures on the field at Memorial Stadium approached 120 degrees while the official airport temperature reached a record 100.

Baltimore took a 1-0 lead in the fifth inning. Jim Traber led off with a single, took second on an infield out, went to third on Witt's wild pitch and scored on Ken Gerhart's single. The Orioles made it 2-0 in the seventh on Larry Sheets' two-out triple and Mickey Tettleton's single.

J.R. Stocks won the boys trick event, while Marc Shaw was the runnerup.

Elizabeth Lambert took the girls' trick event, while April Coble was second.

In the women's I, Adams was first followed by Jackie Rollins.

In the men's IV, Ken Meade took first, while Gary Coble was second. Stan Switzer was tops in the men's III. Steve Lohr was the runnerup.

In the men's II, Mike Ferraro was first, while Lee Gotschalk took second. In the men's I, Keith Dishman was first, while Tommy Lewis took second.

away from the pressure of winning or losing," Herzog said.

The pressures of losing was something Kelly had to deal with over the weekend as Milwaukee swept the Twins in a three-game series at the Metrodome. The sweep dropped the Twins 5 1/2 games behind Oakland in the AL West.

"We played some sloppy ball and lost the lead a couple of times but there's plenty of time," Kelly said.

Other All-Stars arrived in Cincinnati today on a down note.

New York's Darryl Strawberry,

the starting right fielder for the NL, went 0-for-12 as the Mets were swept by the Astros. He was 0-for-4 Sunday and struck out each time as the Mets saw their once imposing lead cut to 3 1/2 games by Pittsburgh.

"It's not the way you want to enter the All-Star break," Strawberry said. "Not for myself and not for the team. I'm grateful for the fans' support and I want to give them a good show."

The Pirates beat All-Star Orel Hershiser Sunday to complete a three-game sweep of Los Angeles.

"It was a tough series to lose," said Hershiser, 13-4. "But every team hits some bad spots."

Kiwanis 3
Planter's Bank 1

Mike Cox hurled a three-hitter, picked up a pair of RBI and scored a run to help lead Kiwanis to a 3-1 victory over Planter's Bank in the Senior Babe Ruth League Tournament Championship.

The game proved to be a defensive struggle as Maurice Hines of Planter's Bank allowed only four hits in taking the loss.

Planter's Bank scored first in the game when Craig Willoughby tripled to lead off the bottom of the second. Willoughby later scored on a passed ball.

Kiwanis knotted the score at 1-1 in the fourth inning when Cox hit a run-scoring single to score Pat Joyner.

Kiwanis added the final runs of the contest in the fifth inning when Cox and Darrell Moore scored a pair of unearned runs to make the score 3-1.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Send Rain, Too

Gesture Of Goodwill Has Limits

There is not a farmer anywhere who does not know the sickening feeling of seeing crops dry up in a drought stricken field.

It is the recipe for financial disaster. Without a harvest there will be no money to pay bills and repay loans. Worse, many farmers are faced with livestock to feed and nothing coming from the fields. Often the result is early sale of cattle and other herds, even the slaughtering of dairy cattle, rather than allowing them to go without food.

North Carolina farmers faced it two years ago and farmers from Ohio sent feed to tide them over. Now the Tar Heel farmers have returned the favor. Last week they sent over 1,000 bales of hay to Ohio where drought is taking its toll.

In Pitt County, dry conditions haven't worried farmers. Although the Piedmont and mountains face a drought, the Coastal Plain has received enough moisture to keep growers breathing easy. Instead of withered corn and dwarfed tobacco, local farmers are expecting a good year — healthy harvests and substantial profits. Here, in 1988, we can afford to be generous.

The North Carolina gesture of good will should help. The drought in Ohio and other midwestern states is said to be the worst in 70 years. Even though parts of North Carolina are feeling pinched, there was enough hay to help out in Ohio. That assistance will buy time for the beleaguered growers there. It may not, however, buy enough time.

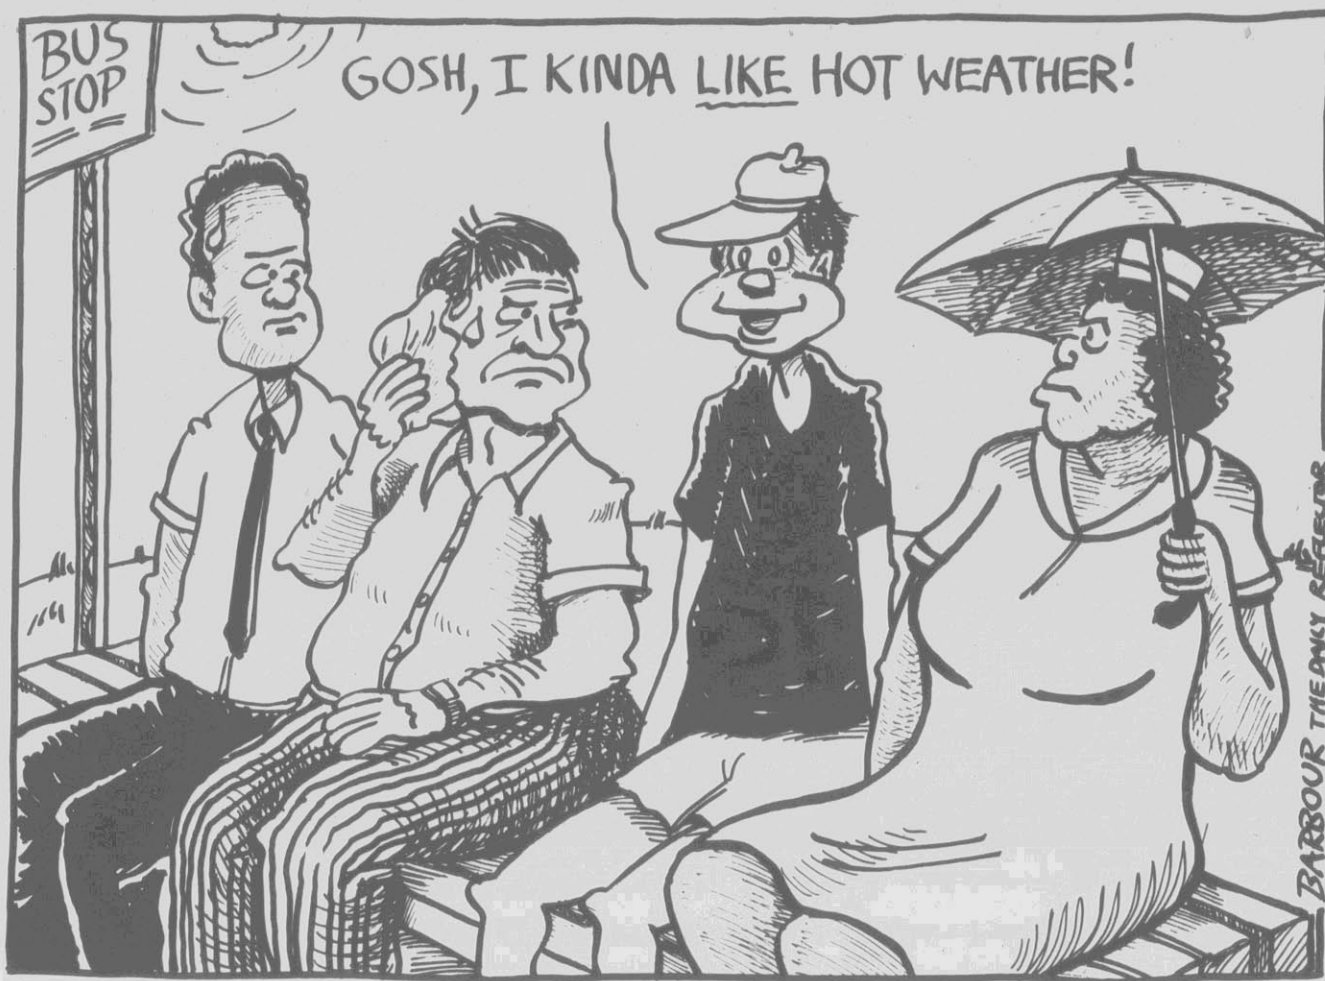

So while eastern North Carolina is keeping its fingers crossed for a year of prosperity, the future for farmers in the Midwest looks as bleak as the parched corn struggling to grow in cracked earth. The drought shows no signs of loosening its grip on the midwest and farmers there face growing concern that rains won't come in time to salvage any of the crop.

The implications of that tragedy are alarming, and the impact far-reaching. The most noticeable effect will be higher prices to consumers, and higher feed costs for livestock producers. The more subtle result will be the financial toll exacted from an already hard-pressed segment of the nation's economy — agriculture. That sector needs no more blemishes; it needs no more impediments to profits.

In Pitt County, farmers know the pain of failed crops. The 1980s have not been kind weather-wise. Several times this decade local growers have found themselves in the same shoes the Midwest farmers wear in 1988.

North Carolina farmers have helped as best they can. There is not enough hay in this state to save all the livestock of the Midwest, however, and the only solution is for the skies to open up and provide the needed moisture.

If only North Carolina could send the Midwest some rain along with that hay ...

Probe Will Ignore Policy Questions

'Fogarty will not examine the policies that placed the Vincennes in what one Navy officer called "the armpit" of the Strait of Hormuz on a hot, hazy morning July 3.'

WASHINGTON — When Rear Adm. William Fogarty was piped aboard the Navy cruiser Vincennes in Bahrain last week, it marked the beginning of a full-dress Pentagon investigation of yet another American tragedy in the Middle East.

"Everything that happened aboard that vessel was recorded," a senior Department of Defense official said of the electronic and written log of the Vincennes. "It should provide a pretty complete picture."

But Fogarty, a career officer with an impeccable reputation, will provide only part of the picture. His "billet," according to Navy officials, restricts the inquiry to flaws and failures of the captain and crew July 3 that led to the Vincennes shooting down an Iran Air jetliner, killing all 290 aboard. Officials say the ship mistook the airliner for an attacking F-14 warplane.

Throughout Ronald Reagan's presidency, such official inquiries have been restricted to the mistakes made by men in uniform. When 37 American sailors were killed aboard the Stark last year in the Persian Gulf and when 247 marines died in a suicide terrorist bombing in Beirut in 1983, Pentagon investigators considered the blame and punishment only for commanders at the front.

Off-limits for investigators then were decisions and orders from the White House, and the departments of Defense and State. Similarly, Fogarty will not examine the policies that placed the Vincennes in what one Navy officer called "the armpit" of the Strait of Hormuz on a hot, hazy morning July 3.

The commander of the Stark, Capt. Glenn Brindel, hinted that responsibility for the Stark disaster was not his alone when he was forced to retire after a full-dress Pentagon investigation last year.

"It didn't go high enough," Brindel said when hostile intent was manifested.

According to the Pentagon, Crowe was referring to a clarification of the Singling out the military's role in the incidents angers Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

"It's the policy" that's at fault, he said. Byrd described the Vincennes disaster as the outgrowth of convoluted American decisions that have lurched from aiding Iran in its war with Iraq to becoming an active ally in Iraq's efforts to cripple the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The scope of the commitment and the resulting strain on U.S. Navy forces in crowded, shallow and unpredictable waters has resulted in White House loosening of limitations on the use of weapons in the gulf.

Interwoven with Rogers' order to fire two surface-to-air missiles at Iran Air's Flight 655, which was making a 125-mile hop from Bandar Abbas to Dubai, are a series of U.S. disasters in the region that created a climate for miscalculation in the combat information center of the Vincennes.

Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, ticked them off last week, including the Stark tragedy, where Brindel hesitated in the face of a "friendly" Iraqi warplane that fired two Exocet missiles into the ship's crew quarters.

"They do not have to be shot at before responding," Crowe said. "A decision was made ... to give our commanders sufficient latitude to protect their people and equipment rules of engagement based on orders Reagan issued last year after the Stark incident. Rogers was following those rules, the Pentagon said.

Crucial facts in the American version of events have changed dramatically since the initial account, which was based on preliminary information assembled hours after the incident, was made public July 3 by Crowe.

Initially, Crowe portrayed Rogers as being confronted with a "target" that took off from an Iranian naval base used by civilian planes as well as F-4 Phantoms and F-14 Tomcat warplanes bought by the Shah of Iran from the United States. The Vincennes and an accompanying frigate, the Montgomery, warned to expect Fourth of July attacks by Iran, were using gunfire to destroy two Iranian gunboats when Crowe said the "new threat" appeared on the Vincennes' radar.

"The suspect aircraft was outside the prescribed commercial air corridor," said Crowe. "More importantly, the aircraft headed directly for Vincennes on a constant bearing at high speed — approximately 450 knots (500 mph) and descending from 9,000 feet." The plane did not identify itself as a commercial flight, Crowe said.

Two days later, the story changed. The plane was within the 20-mile-wide commercial corridor. More important, the Pentagon disclosed that the Iranian Airbus A300 had identified itself by emitting an electronic signal read by the Vincennes radar on a frequency routinely used by commercial planes in the Gulf. But defense officials said then that they did not know how the transponder signal was coded.

Defense officials said the Aegis system aboard the Vincennes had the capability to read the signals, which give U.S. air traffic controllers an airliner's flight number, altitude, speed and direction.

Despite the conflicts and speculation, a central fact presented by Crowe remains unchanged: "The people in the command center and the people operating the radar had about four minutes from the time they picked up this target until it was declared hostile," Crowe said. "That alone is a severe constraint."

Rogers' battle station for those minutes was not on the bridge but below decks where the Aegis system displayed on blue-tinted screens what appeared to be a target with two identities — civilian and military. He declared the target "hostile" at 10:51 a.m. and the two missiles were "away" at 10:54 a.m. When one of the missiles struck, crew members on the deck of the Vincennes could see the airliner disintegrate about six miles away.

"This is a burden I will carry for the rest of my life," Rogers said in a message to his superiors. "But under the circumstances and considering all the information available to me at the moment, I took this action to defend my ship and my crew."

Crowe and other defense officials stressed that Rogers' decision to fire was an outgrowth of indecision that marked the Stark tragedy on May 17, 1987.

"(Stark Capt.) Brindel was concerned about the diplomatic ramifications of shooting down an Iraqi plane," said a senior Pentagon official. "That's when Reagan clarified the rules of engagement." When in doubt, Rogers and other commanders were ordered to, first and foremost, protect their ships.

Crowe has already proclaimed that Rogers' decisions were based on "circumspection and good judgment," a verdict echoed at the White House and in Congress by supporters of Reagan's policy.

"Certainly it was a mistake," said one Pentagon veteran, "but it looks like Rogers was justified. I think that is the way it will come out."

Jackson Calls His Strategy Flexible And Creative

LOS ANGELES — It started on Thursday night in Memphis, when Jesse L. Jackson stood at the pulpit of Monumental Baptist Church and delivered a sermon on the vice presidency that would have been appropriately entitled: "There Is No Good Reason Not to Give It to Me." He had made some of the points before but never quite so emotionally, and this came when the rest of the political world thought he would be toning down.

"They say they want balance," Jackson told a gathering of his mid-South delegates. "Gov. Dukakis' father was a doctor, his mother a teacher. My mother was a maid, my father a janitor. That's balance."

When the sermon was over, Jackson was asked whether his stirring rhetoric was an effort to intensify the pressure on Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who is trying to settle on a running mate, with Jackson considered among the least likely of his choices.

"Pressure?" Jackson asked, his face taking on a demeanor of innocence. "Me? Pressure?"

The next morning, on a campaign flight from Memphis to Dallas, Jackson assumed a tone of earnestness as he disparaged his titular campaign manager, Gerald Austin, for saying that Jackson delegates would revolt if Dukakis selected Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. "It would be unethical," Jackson said, for him or anyone in his campaign to pass judgment on other candidates.

The signals from the two events were not necessarily contradictory, but they certainly were ambiguous, and revealed the conflicted nature of the Jackson campaign these days. At a time when many political experts expected him to withdraw from the vice-presidential running, Jackson has been talking more and more about how important the job is and why he deserves it.

"I am still in the process," Jackson said in Dallas Friday when asked whether he would take the job if it were offered.

Would he allow his name to be placed into nomination for the vice presidency if he were unhappy with Dukakis' choice? That, said Jackson, is not in his plans. Would he discourage a draft? He called that a premature question. In neither case, however, did Jackson say flatly that no, such acts would be out of the question.

For Jackson, who takes pride in his abilities as a negotiator, few periods in his career have more tested his skills, or more strained the patience of those outside his camp who have tried to deal with him and understand him.

The most difficult part about it has been that not much has been going on externally. The primary season is long gone, the Democratic convention is in the near future, the vice-presidential selection process has been more passive than active. And Jackson's national roadshow, while as frenetic as usual since resuming after the July 4th break, has lacked much sense of purpose or immediacy. So Jackson has basically been alone with his own creative thoughts and impulses. It is with himself that he has had to do the tough negotiating.

His delegates will come to Atlanta with such high expectations.

Should he keep them fired up — or try to defuse a potentially disillusioning situation? Should he satisfy short-term needs or stick to his long-term goals? Can he do both? Is there any way he could take himself out of the vice-presidential sweepstakes or back away from a platform debate without angering and disappointing his followers? Is there any way he could stay in and go forward with the debate without appearing stubborn to other segments of the party? Is it fair for the conventional political world to expect him to act in conventional fashion, by losing quietly, when he considers his campaign more than a one-time quest for the presidency and something that can never be lost?

Those are the questions revolving around Jackson these days; they form the parameters of his negotiations with himself.

Dukakis aides have expressed increasing frustration this week as Jackson has stepped up his campaign just when they had hoped he would wind it down. They squirmed a little when Jackson announced the publicity-grabbing method by which he would travel to the convention — a two-day "Rainbow Express" caravan from Chicago down through the middle of America to Atlanta. Then came word that as many as 10,000 Jackson supporters might converge outside the convention hall in Atlanta all of that week, and that Jackson, if he is not given the time he wants to debate the platform and deliver his speech July 19, is willing to take his speech outside.

Was Jackson trying to steal Dukakis' thunder?

At one point late in the week, Jackson thought that a report chronicling his actions left the implication that he was taking the bus trip to Atlanta because he was psychologically imbalanced. The report was "crazy," he said, and then he tried to explain his motivations.

He talked about the difference between creative minds and intelligent minds. Some people, intelligent people, read something in a book, and the book in a sense represents the establishment way of doing things, he said. It is all written out.

"The creative person doesn't have the book, so he creates something out of nothing. We're always creating things, thinking things up," Jackson said, referring not only to himself but to the black political and civil rights movement at large.

This attitude applies to his thinking on the vice presidency. If Jackson were to accept his not getting the second spot as a fait accompli and remove himself from the running before he needed to, it would confine him to a more static, less creative, role, and take away some negotiating room in his effort not to alienate either his followers or the party leadership.

So some days he says things that ease the fears of party leaders; more often he seems to be speaking only to his ardent followers.

Federal Drive On Marijuana Won't Affect N.C. Campaign

By The Associated Press
 As the federal government prepares to unveil a campaign to mobilize law enforcement officers across the country to destroy the summer marijuana crop, North Carolina authorities say their eradication program will be business as usual.
 "Every day we try to eradicate marijuana," said Charles Overton, assistant director of the State Bureau of Investigation. "It's no different from any other day for us."
 The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration started its domestic marijuana eradication program about eight years ago, giving states $3.8 million this year to help with their destruction efforts. North Carolina has participated in the program since 1982.
 Last year in North Carolina, which one national group ranks fourth among the states in marijuana production, law officers pulled up 89,273 plants and made 204 arrests.
 But faced with estimates that domestic marijuana production has reached record levels, federal officials have come up with "Operation Stop Crop," to be announced this week by Attorney General Edwin Meese III. In some states, it will feature stepped-up National Guard patrols, a toll-free number to encourage citizen informers and expanded undercover surveillance.

 North Carolina plans none of the above, state authorities said. National Guard helicopters will continue to fly 15-20 searches per summer as in the past, assisting two SBI planes that already search for the crop each summer weekday, Overton said.

 The SBI will get $115,000 from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration to help finance this year's program, the same amount it received last year.
 The National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, or NORML, estimates $1.4 billion in marijuana reached the market in North Carolina in 1987, ranking the state behind Oregon, California and Kentucky in production.

 Most marijuana comes from the state's western and northwestern sections, although some eastern counties have become high producers in recent years, Overton said.
 County agents hope to get a little help from this year's drought, which will make irrigated marijuana fields easier to spot. So far this year, state and local authorities have pulled up 42,556 plants and made 79 arrests. Three indoor greenhouses discovered last weekend in Cherokee County netted more than 300 plants.

 Marijuana, an illegal drug, sells for $100 to $210 per ounce, officials said.
 U.S. marijuana production is believed to have almost tripled since 1981 — from 2.6 million pounds to as much as 7.7 million pounds last year, according to official estimates. U.S. growers are supplying about 25 percent of all marijuana smoked in the country.

 Last year, authorities nationwide destroyed almost 7.5 million cultivated marijuana plants, plus another 105 million wild marijuana plants, officials said.

Turtles Active
 BALD HEAD ISLAND, N.C. (AP) — The annual pilgrimage of loggerhead turtles from the sea to the dunes of the Bald Head Island is showing signs of a better-than-average year, officials said.
 The 1988 pilgrimage of the endangered species is expected to top last year's 95 nests and 9,214 hatchlings.
 "We are experiencing a good year, even though the turtles began nesting later than normally, due to a cool spring that lingered on, delaying nesting several weeks," said Bill Brooks, director of the Bald Head Island Turtle Conservancy. "The turtles really seem to be making up for lost time; on one night recently we found five new nests and right now we're ahead of the number of nests at this same time last year. They're just coming up and laying their eggs — very little seems to be bothering them."
 The Bald Island conservation program is one of several along the southeast coast, and the largest in North Carolina.

Plane Crash
 NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Five people escaped serious injury early Sunday when a small twin-engine plane crashed near the Craven County Regional Airport, authorities said.
 The plane was en route from Fairfax, Va., to Wilmington when it crashed about 2 a.m., said Rayborn Clifton Jr., airport manager.
 Clifton said the plane was trying to land at the New Bern airport after developing engine trouble but crashed about 100 yards short of the runway.
 He identified the pilot as Gilbert Jullien of Fairfax, Va. Four passengers were also aboard.
 The Federal Aviation Administration office in Raleigh will investigate the accident, Clifton said.

Symphony
 BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — The world premiere of Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Robert Ward's Sixth Symphony will be presented at Brevard Music Center on July 15.
 The symphony was commissioned by the Music Center for its 50th anniversary season in 1986. Ward's opera, "The Crucible" won a Pulitzer Prize and the Music Critics of N.Y. Citation in 1962, and he has served on the faculties of the Julliard School of Music, Columbia University, Duke University and the North Carolina School of the Arts.
 Ward's association with the Music Center began 25 years ago when he came to Brevard at the invitation of James Pfohl, his long-time friend. He returned to the Brevard Music Center in 1981 as composer-in-residence for Brevard's 45th season.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY July 12

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't permit an upsetting outside condition to ruin confidence among those at home. Home is the best place for an intimate conversation tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Carry out your plans for today and get fine results. Work with your associates who you believe to have the best character.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Forget the advice of a higher-up today in favor of that of a co-worker who is in a similar position to your own. Plan your financial future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Watch out for a careless friend who might take advantage of you by evading responsibilities. Your mate offers you the necessary support.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Try to help someone you love get through a time of confusion. Focus on your family and your most intimate friends for a great evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Don't involve yourself in others' schemes unless you are absolutely sure of their value. Go after the data you need in all sources.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Explain your actions to a family member who remains skeptical. You will get the support you have been seeking for more financial strength.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You are not certain how to answer a message early in the day, but later the right solution will become apparent. Visit new friends later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): A good chance to profit comes to you early, but wait before accepting it. Get yourself in a better bargaining position first.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): An emotional partner will be difficult to handle; it is best to get the advice of a friend. Be prepared to work to overcome many obstacles to gain a cherished goal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): If a co-worker seems overly stubborn, turn the matter over to a higher-up. Settle your credit and community affairs.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A recent acquaintance might try to undermine your talents, so go elsewhere for an opinion. Take a trip to find a new viewpoint.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K9865 ♥8 ♦96532 ♣43
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is worth exactly 4 points—if you count a singleton in partner's suit as an asset, you are going to get into a lot of trouble. If you could divine that partner has spade support, your hand might be surprisingly useful, but a misfit is looming. When you don't have enough for a response, pass.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K98742 ♥83 ♦AQ102 ♣Void
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♣ Pass
4 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
? What do you bid now?
A.—This hand could produce anywhere from 10 to 13 tricks, depending on partner's holding. Blackwood won't help; you need a cue-bidding sequence. Bid four clubs. You start by bidding your cheapest first-round control, regardless of whether it is an ace or a void.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK98742 ♥83 ♦AQ102 ♣Void
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♣ Pass
4 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—Even though partner has denied the ace of hearts, you could still make slam if he has second-round heart control. The way to show your continued interest is to cue-bid your other first-round control. Bid five diamonds.

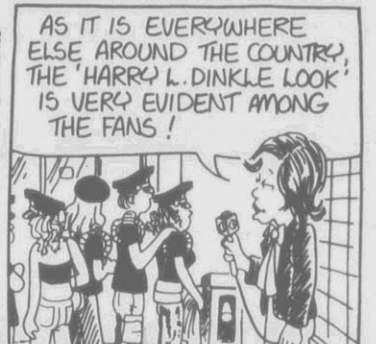

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ6 ♥AK42 ♦84 ♣AQJ6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
4 ♥ Pass 5 ♥ Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—Despite the fact that partner has no ace (he would have cue-bid five diamonds if he held that ace), he is interested in slam. He could hardly have less than the three missing kings and the queen of trumps. Bid six hearts—partner's king of diamonds is protected from the guillotine at trick one.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ6 ♥Q72 ♦QJ52 ♣A43
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—Even if you play 16-18 points and partner has an absolute maximum, giving your side a combined 33 points, it is unlikely that you can make 12 tricks. You have a flat hand with no intermediates, so take the sure profit by bidding three no trump.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable as South you hold:
♠KQ964 ♥83 ♦103 ♣QJ62
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You certainly want to be in game. It's just a question of whether you should play three no trump or four spades. With your unbalanced hand you would surely prefer a suit contract, provided North has three-card spade support. Bid three clubs in the hope of getting a spade preference from partner.

ELECTION PROTEST — Supporters of Cuauhtemoc Cardenas' National Democratic Front protest Sunday in front of the Interior Building in Mexico City to refute the government's unsupported claim of victory by the Institutional Revolutionary Party in Wednesday's election. Mexican Vote Delays Bring Road Protests

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government today said Carlos Salinas de Gortari had a wide lead over his opponents but that election results still were not final five days after voters cast ballots for a new president.

Partial results finally were released after opposition activists blocked highways and shut down international bridges to protest the delay.

Charges of election fraud and the Federal Election Commission's delay in releasing results clouded what had been expected to be an easy victory for Salinas and his party, the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party.

The election commission today said Salinas has won 52.89 percent of the ballots counted so far. It said Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the leftist National Democratic Front trailed with 29.10 percent, and National Action Party candidate Manuel Clouthier was third with 16.68 percent.

Earlier, Cardenas had claimed victory and Clouthier said he was leading.

Both men accused the governing party — which has not lost a presidential election since it was founded in 1929 — of rampant election fraud.

Mexico has 38 million registered voters. The government said it has counted about 13.24 million votes, but did not say how many ballots were cast.

The partial returns also gave 176 seats in the 500-seat Chamber of Deputies to the governing party, 13 to the right-of-center National Action Party and two to parties affiliated with the National Democratic Front.

The Chamber of Deputies is the lower house of Mexico's congress.

The election commission only released percentage results for the Mexican Senate, giving the governing party 60.95 percent of the total Senate vote. The National Action Party had 15.59 percent and Cardenas' party had 7.31 percent, the commission said.

Opposition delegates demanded the commission provide district-by-district figures for the Senate. Interior Minister Manuel Bartlett, who chairs the commission, delayed action on the request.

The partial results were released early today at the end of an election commission session in which opposition delegates repeatedly accused the government of fraud and criticized the slow pace of the vote count.

Bartlett on Sunday defended the election process, calling it "a question of patience. Politics is the science of patience."

He said the breakdown of a new computer system, then bad weather, prevented the commission from delivering on its pledge to release preliminary results on election night. It then promised it would release results on Sunday.

The Salinas camp has privately acknowledged probable losses to Cardenas in at least two states and Mexico City — first-ever defeats for the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has never lost a presidential, senate or gubernatorial race.

The surprisingly poor showing has produced a rift in the party between Salinas supporters who want to modernize the party and an old guard seeking to use the delay to embarrass the Salinas camp or ensure traditional margins of victory.

Bartlett was a top competitor to Salinas for the governing party's presidential nomination.

On at least two occasions during the weekend, Salinas aides assured reporters the electoral count was proceeding smoothly and results were imminent, only to be frustrated by commission announcements of further postponement.

Aides to Salinas argue that the delay only heightens expectations of fraud and makes it more difficult for the new team to embark on its agenda.

The opposition charges that the governing party is simply devising satisfactory electoral results before it releases them.

"The lack of information since the very day of the election has created

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has approved U.S. compensation for the families of the 290 people who died aboard the Iranian airliner shot down by a U.S. warship, the White House announced today.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan was acting to "ease the hardship of the families" and said no money would go to the Iranian government.

Fitzwater said that the amount of compensation had not yet been decided upon and that the payments could be subject to congressional approval.

Fitzwater said the payments would be made through an intermediary party, whom he did not name.

He said that Reagan, while believing that the "actions of the USS Vincennes ... were justified defensive actions," was also "saddened at the tragic deaths of the innocent victims of this accident."

The spokesman stressed that the payments would be "ex gratia," or voluntary, and would be subject "to normal U.S. legal requirements, including, if necessary, action by Congress."

Consequently, he said, "details concerning time, amount and other matters remain to be worked out."

Fitzwater also reiterated the U.S. position that Iran bears a "heavy burden" for allowing the Iran Air jetliner to fly over an area where a firefight was raging between the Vincennes and Iranian gunboats.

Ortega's Police Break Up Rally

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer

NANDAIME, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega vowed to crack down on demonstrations after an anti-government rally by about 10,000 people turned into a violent brawl between police and protesters.

Police used tear gas and beat protesters to break up Sunday's rally, one of the largest ever in Nicaragua, in this small city 40 miles south of Managua.

Ten police officers were injured and at least 38 people arrested in the confrontation, the official Voice of Nicaragua said. It did not say how many protesters were hurt.

The opposition said three of its leaders were arrested.

"This is to show the people want democracy," protester Myriam Arguello, secretary-general of the anti-government Conservative Party, said just minutes before the demonstration turned into a melee.

Ortega told reporters afterward that his leftist government would act "with total firmness" against protesters.

"We cannot continue being tolerant with those who want to take advantage of the (political) space," he said, referring to recent freedoms accorded anti-government groups in Nicaragua.

He said the demonstration was part of a U.S. plan to destabilize the government.

Ortega made the comments after visiting the family of a Sandinista Youth organization member authorities said was killed Saturday when the car he was riding in was ambushed by U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

The violence began after protesters, some carrying signs that read, "Democracy Yes, Communism No," marched several blocks along

Colleges Comb Rosters For Donors

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the University of Michigan conducted a census of its quarter-million alumni, it didn't just get their latest business and home addresses. It collected a wealth of data on loyal alumni that allowed campus fund-raisers to add nearly 25,000 names to a list of potential major donors.

The university also identified what one Michigan development officer calls "persistent non-donors" who may be dropped from future solicitations.

The Ann Arbor campus raised $62 million last year and garnered $173 million in a multiyear "Campaign for Michigan." It consulted with a sociologist and behavioral psychologist in framing its four-page questionnaire in 1986, and used complex computer techniques to separate the haves from the have-nots — and from those who aren't likely to part with it.

The Michigan census is but one example of the growing sophistication of colleges and universities in mining alumni rosters for philanthropic gold.

Sixty-five campuses are embarked on drives to raise more than $100 million apiece. Washington University in St. Louis recently wrapped up a campaign with a record $607 million in hand, and Stanford University has passed the halfway mark in a $1.1 billion drive launched last year.

The stock market collapse last October made the going tougher, but it has not derailed any of the major drives.

Stanford, which took in $198 million last year alone, is "a little bit behind in gifts this year — 14 or 15 percent — compared to last year, but so is everybody else," said David Fulton, director of communications for the university's development office.

Not all the information on wealthy prospects comes from alumni themselves.

Many campus development offices — as the fund-raising operations are called — have researchers combing Securities and Exchange Commission reports and other indices of wealth for clues on whom to approach. Some hire commercial firms to do their prospecting.

"Once confined to consulting dusty alumni files, research on donors today can include checks of land holdings, court records of estate and divorce proceedings, stock proxies, tax forms and memberships in clubs and on corporate boards," the Chronicle of Higher Education noted recently.

"In fact, college researchers who study donors are so much like detectives that they even refer to potential contributors as 'suspects,'" the Chronicle reported.

In some cases, it added, "they step on a few toes," as when one landowner was outraged to learn from a county clerk that a college researcher was probing into the size of his holdings.

'How Does It Feel To Be Gifted?'

CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Local teachers and guidance counselors glanced around the group, but uttered not a word when they were asked, "How many of you are gifted?"

As the pause after the question grew more uncomfortable, one person held up her hands in joking admittance.

"It's a mean question to ask," said the presenter of the seminar "Managing the Needs of the Social and Emotional Needs of the Gifted," being held today at Wahl-Coates School.

"If you have trouble dealing with that question, kids do, too," Judith Galbraith said.

"How does it feel to be labeled gifted?" seems like an obvious question," she said. But, often it is never asked.

Ms. Galbraith is founder and owner of Free Spirit Publishing Co., specialists in learning materials for and about gifted, talented and creative youth. The company began in 1983 as a result of Ms. Galbraith's work and interest in gifted education and her books "The Gifted Kids Survival Guides."

"Gifted education is a rapidly changing profession," she told the about 35 participants in the seminar this morning. The seminar is part of the second Summer Institute for Teachers of the Gifted sponsored by the department of special education at East Carolina University.

"I've had to come to full circle at least six times," Ms. Galbraith said, explaining how the gripes of gifted children have changed in order of intensity, but still are the same.

Gifted children are often told, "You can do anything you want," by their parents and teachers, but excerpts from letters and journals of gifted children say they know differently, she said.

Howard was a boy who tried to commit suicide after deciding "telling me I could do things without being shown how is not going to work anymore," while another middle-school boy wondered if all the troubles of being a gifted child crosses over into adulthood.

Adults are going to have to put up with children with broken backs as the load of school work and activities mount, one child said. Another wanted to know why parents want gifted children if having one just makes it tougher to be a good parent.

To prevent from sounding too negative during the seminar, Ms. Galbraith said there are a lot of gifted children who are growing up normally and healthy and are having their emotional and social needs met,

Gorbachev Mixes With Crowd As He Begins Visit To Poland

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed autographs and mingled with flag-waving Poles today as the Soviet leader began a six-day visit that is expected to focus on efforts to breathe life into both countries' economies.

Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski was at Okęcie Airport as Gorbachev's plane arrived on a mild, sunny morning after a two-hour flight from Moscow. Gorbachev was accompanied by his wife, Raisa.

After the official welcoming ceremonies, the Gorbachevs approached a crowd of several hundred flag-waving citizens on the tarmac. Gorbachev paused to sign several autographs and chat with people in the crowd.

On the drive into Warsaw, Gorbachev's motorcade made an unannounced stop at a traffic circle, where the Soviet Communist Party general secretary greeted onlookers and signed copies of his book, "Perestroika."

"I have arrived on your soil only a few minutes and all over I see smiles and happy faces," Gorbachev told a neighborhood official during the visit, which was televised nationwide. "I see your friendly relationship toward us."

"We feel the same way," said the neighborhood official.

Gorbachev, who is personally popular in Poland, will be working during the visit to overcome a traditional antipathy among Poles toward Russians that has existed for centuries.

His visit is to be capped at week's end by a summit meeting of the leaders of the Warsaw Pact allies.

It will be the first summit of the Soviet-led alliance since the U.S.-Soviet summit in Moscow and since Gorbachev's program of political and economic reform was soundly endorsed by an extraordinary Communist Party conference last month in Moscow.

Poland's leaders say the visit, coming so soon after the conference, will give new impetus to their "socialist renewal" of the economy and political system.

The East bloc's best organized opposition, meanwhile, is seeking assurances of less Soviet interference in Polish affairs.

On the eve of the visit, however, seven members of the outlawed Polish Socialist Party were detained when they met in an apartment in the southwestern city of Wroclaw and police searched the Warsaw home of the leader of the illegal anti-communist Confederation of Independent Poland, opposition activists said.

The banned Solidarity independent labor federation praised Gorbachev's program of reform in the Soviet Union, saying it could be significant "if it serves for changes in the system in Poland and creation of a new model of Polish-Soviet relations."

Solidarity also urged Gorbachev to renounce the "Brezhnev doctrine," named after the late Soviet leader who intervened in the affairs of other East bloc countries, ostensibly to protect their communist systems.

Brezhnev was in power when the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski quashed Solidarity with a December 1981 military crackdown, outlawing the federation a year later.

Gorbachev, in earlier visits to Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, has emphasized his view that every East bloc country should be free to choose its own political course.

Solidarity also called for "clear and unambiguous words" from Gorbachev on the World War II massacre of 4,000 Polish army officers in the Katyn forest near Smolensk, which has been blamed on Soviet soldiers.

During his visit, Gorbachev is to address the Sejm, or parliament, and hold meetings with groups of young people, workers and intellectuals and artists.

He will also travel south to the former capital of Krakow and visit a mountain village where Vladimir I. Lenin spent time in 1913-14.

He also is to travel to a shipyard in Szczecin, a northwestern port city that once belonged to Germany.

Interest in the Warsaw Pact meeting has intensified amid signs the Soviets may pull out some or all of their military forces from Hungary, where 65,000 troops have been stationed since the Soviets invaded in 1956 to end a rebellion.

A State Department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said in Washington last week that intelligence reports indicated preparations for a Soviet pullout from Hungary.

The Soviet Union has called for withdrawal of all armies from foreign territories by the year 2000.

The Warsaw Pact includes the Soviet Union, Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

Italian Court Convicts Four Terrorists In '80 Bombing

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — A court today convicted four right-wing terrorists of mass murder and sentenced them to life in prison for the 1980 bombing of the Bologna train station, which killed 85 people.

Investigators said the Aug. 2, 1980, attack on the station's waiting room was the work of neo-Fascists, possibly with the help from elements of Italy's secret services seeking to destabilize the country and establish a right-wing dictatorship.

Sentenced to life were Valerio Fioravanti, Francesca Mambro, Massimiliano Fachini and Sergio Picciafuoco.

Also today, two defendants were acquitted of mass murder charges stemming from the bombing and 11 others were acquitted of subversive association charges.

Eight of the defendants were convicted and three acquitted on charges of belonging to an armed band, a blanket charge in terrorist cases. Sentences ranged from six to 16 years.

The verdicts were read by presiding judge Mario Antonnaci.

Among those acquitted on charges of subversive association were Licio Gelli, two other reputed leading right-wing terrorists — Francesco Pazienza and Stefano delle Chiaie — and two former officials of Italy's secret service police force SISMI — Gen. Pietro Musumeci and Col. Giuseppe Belmonte.

Gelli, Pazienza and the former secret service officials were convicted on charges of aggravated slander in connection with attempts to mislead investigators in the case. Gelli was sentenced to five years on the charge, while the three others were each given three-year terms.

Gelli will not have to serve the sentence because under terms of his extradition from Switzerland last year he can only be tried in Italy in connection with the 1982 collapse of Banco Ambrosiano, the biggest banking scandal in postwar Italy.

U.S. Drought Will Reduce Food Supply

-ROME (AP) — The crippling drought hitting North America is expected to reduce world grain stocks to levels that may cause food shortages in many poor countries, the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization reported today.

The agency projects world cereal production in 1988 to total 1.785 billion tons, only two million tons more than last year's level, which was already below the expected production.

If the drought in the United States ended now, grain production would fall close to the low levels of 1983, when a drought and farmers' participation in a government crop reduction program decreased output, the agency reported.

As a result, world grain stocks are projected to fall below 310 million tons, or 17 percent of the level the agency considers necessary to safeguard world food security, the report said. If crop conditions in the United States and Canada continue to deteriorate, the ratio could drop even further.

"Such a development would have serious implications for the food security, particularly of many low-income, food-deficit countries," the report said.

The high grain prices resulting from a lower supply would hit poor, food-importing countries the hardest, the U.N. agency warned. It said the rising prices could also reduce food aid from developed countries.

Lawmakers' Styles Influence Legislative Workings

Analysis

RALEIGH (AP) — When Republican lieutenant gubernatorial nominee Jim Gardner paid a visit to the North Carolina Senate last week, he received an official greeting from an unexpected source.

Shortly after the Senate floor session opened, Majority Leader Tony Rand — the Democratic nominee for the post to which Gardner aspires — rose and announced the presence in the gallery of "the distinguished former congressman." Senators responded with mild applause.

Rand's gesture impressed Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus. "Real smooth," Johnson said later. "It was a small thing, but it demonstrated Rand's confidence in his position."

Meanwhile, at a meeting of the House Appropriations Committee last Thursday, co-chairmen Reps. Bob Etheridge and Billy Watkins brought forward for consideration several bills the panel had not seen before.

As Republican members asked one question after another, Etheridge — who was presiding — simply called for a vote, his voice rising in crescendo as Republicans shouted for recognition. The bill was approved.

To describe the episodes as embodying a fundamental difference between the House and Senate Democratic leadership would be to oversimplify. In both chambers, Democratic leaders at times have flexed their muscles in ways Republicans have viewed as heavy-handed.

But it seems plain that in the 3½ years since Republican Jim Martin was elected governor and Democrat Bob Jordan lieutenant governor, the Senate has been quicker than the House to adapt to the concepts of bipartisan government and television-age politics.

The biggest reason can be traced to the personalities and philosophies of the two chambers' presiding officers: the Senate's Jordan and Liston Ramsey, speaker of the House.

Both jobs always have been powerful. But developments over the past decade have enhanced their stature.

First, the Legislature in 1977 endorsed a constitutional amendment — later approved in a statewide referendum — allowing the governor and lieutenant governor to serve consecutive terms.

Jimmy Green became the first lieutenant governor to win re-election in 1980. His extra four years in office enabled him to solidify his already-tight grip over the Senate.

Second, Ramsey broke precedent by declining to step aside after two two-year terms as speaker. He won a third term in 1985 and a fourth last year. Some expect him to remain indefinitely.

Ramsey delights in downplaying his strength. His familiar disclaimer, "Unless there's a tie, I don't vote," was the refrain of a rap song spoofing the legislative leadership that members of the Raleigh press corps sang at a party last month.

But the plain-spoken mountain man's influence is so immense that some call him the most powerful official in North Carolina.

A Wacky Way Of Picking Veeps

WASHINGTON — Michael S. Dukakis is now in the final stage of selecting his running mate for the fall campaign; if recent history is any guide, he may already have made his decision — and he may yet change his mind. If Dukakis is lucky, four years from now another candidate will examine the process he used and try to imitate it. If he is not so lucky, the next set of candidates will vow to do it differently and point to his experience as the reason.

From George McGovern's debacle in picking Thomas Eagleton in 1972 to the frenzy over a Reagan-Ford "copresidency" at the Republican convention in 1980 to the "walks in the woods" Walter Mondale conducted four years ago during his pre-convention stay in Minnesota, the vice-presidential selection process is best remembered for the problems it has caused presidential nominees rather than the pluses it has brought to a campaign. Jimmy Carter looked at what happened to McGovern and invented the interviewing process. Mondale, the beneficiary of that process, tried to refine it but later got burned for it when controversy erupted over the finances of Geraldine Ferraro and her husband. Dukakis has vowed to avoid mistakes of the past, and history will later judge if he succeeded.

Johnson of labor's opposition and measure his commitment to the fight. Bobby was either on an authorized mission or out of touch with the final decision of his brother. Whatever the true story, by late afternoon, the deal was complete. Chaos produced a winning ticket.

In 1964, Johnson put Hubert Humphrey through the wringer before finally picking him as his vice president. With the Democratic convention already underway, Johnson called Humphrey in Atlantic City and asked him to fly to the White House. It was the signal many people had been expecting, but Johnson could not resist throwing one last false scent along the trail. He also called Sen. Thomas Dodd of Connecticut and asked him to come as well. Johnson put Humphrey through one other wringer that is now an essential, if still flawed, part of the selection process. Weeks before the convention, Johnson asked Jim Rowe to conduct a private interrogation of Humphrey that lasted much of one weekend and probed Humphrey's finances, health and personal history for scandal potential.

The Eagleton fiasco in 1972-he quit the McGovern ticket after reports surfaced that he had undergone shock therapy-persuaded Jimmy Carter to try to make his selection in a more orderly way, but the process was by then undergoing a change as prospective nominees found it a useful way to conduct other political business in advance of the convention.

Carter conducted a series of public interviews with candidates, who trooped to his home in Plains, Ga. His eventual choice of Mondale, a Washington insider who complemented Carter's lack of Washington experience, was popular within the party, but the process was designed to produce other benefits: it demonstrated the candidate's seriousness of purpose in choosing someone who might have to take over the presidency in a crisis; and because it was both public and done in advance, it allowed time for potentially damaging information about prospective candidates to surface before a final decision was made. In the end, Carter's approach was judged successful by many Democrats.

Mondale's selection process was a lesson to many of us who covered it, not so much for the criticisms that are now commonly accepted but as a reminder of the personal, and thus unpredictable, nature of the choice. As Theodore H. White wrote 20 years ago: "the decision is as intimate, and forever thereafter as private, as the decision of marriage."

Like Carter, Mondale was trying to use the process to accomplish several political goals. One now forgotten is that he wanted to put to rest the idea that Hart could still steal enough delegates to capture the nomination. That argued for public activity surrounding the vice presidential selection. More important was Mondale's desire to open the process to women and minorities. That too argued for public activity.

In truth, Mondale conducted both a public and a private search for a vice president. The public process centered around visits to his Minnesota home by such prospective candidates as Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein and Ferraro. The private process examined more traditional candidates and was conducted out of public view. In the beginning, Mondale thought hard about picking a southerner, but overtures to two of his favorites, Sens. Sam Nunn of Georgia and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, were rebuffed.

Third, Martin's inability to develop a durable, bipartisan coalition of supporters has opened an influence and leadership gap that Ramsey, Jordan and their lieutenants have filled.

Finally, Martin's election in 1984 left Jordan the state's highest-ranking Democratic officeholder.

These occurrences have made Ramsey and Jordan so powerful that, to a greater extent than is normal, the chambers over which they preside reflect their styles and values.

As statewide politicians seeking higher offices, Jordan and Rand realize the importance of a good image — especially on television. They have tried to polish the Legislature's image by weaning it away from habits that play poorly in the press.

They have pushed to abolish doing state money to legislators' pet projects back home, commonly known as "pork barrel" spending.

Also, they have worked to reform the budget writing process, involving more than the customary handful of top-ranking Democrats in making key decisions and insisting on fewer private meetings.

But Ramsey and his chief lieutenant, Watkins, who don't have to worry about getting votes outside their House districts, have resisted the changes, sparking bitter clashes.

There are other differences as well. Historically, the Senate has been more conservative and business-oriented than the House, especially during populist Ramsey's tenure.

Then there's the issue partially responsible for delaying adjournment of the current session: the power balance between the executive and legislative branches.

The House has led the charge to erode the executive's power since Martin took office. In many cases, Jordan and the Senate have resisted.

An observer might wonder why House Democrats have not lent greater support to Jordan's reforms — especially since Republicans contend the House-Senate friction proves Jordan is a weak leader. Don't the House Democrats want him to be elected governor?

For one thing, there's no love lost between Jordan and some House leaders, particularly Watkins, who even flirted last year with challenging Jordan for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. But Democrats on both sides insist their squabbles are all in the family and that they're united behind Jordan's candidacy.

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, says the House and Senate are sovereign bodies and zealously guard their independence.

"The disagreements you're seeing are normal," Wicker said. "There'll always be differences regardless of who the leaders are."

What happened in 1984 underscores how personal a vice-presidential decision can be. Four years ago this weekend, Walter Mondale decided to ask Dianne Feinstein, then mayor of San Francisco, to be his running mate. According to John Reilly, who headed up the selection process, Mondale made the decision to pick Feinstein, subject to a final background investigation, late in the first week of July, then changed his mind over the weekend and settled on Ferraro.

Dukakis has a better chance of being judged as successful in his vice-presidential selection if he defeats George Bush in November. Reagan's overtures to Ford and his hasty decision to pick Bush when the Ford negotiations bogged down seem more trivial in the wake of his landslide victory that year. But 1980 is a reminder that even when the process works politically, it is usually chaotic, especially in the final hours.

No one will ever really know what happened in Los Angeles when John F. Kennedy settled on Lyndon Johnson as his running mate. Did Kennedy offer Johnson the vice presidency believing he never would take it? Perhaps. Perhaps not. On the weekend before that convention, as he flew west to Los Angeles, Kennedy was handed a note asking him about Johnson as a possible running mate. Kennedy, who was protecting his voice, scribbled a reply: "He'll never take it." Sam Rayburn told Johnson about the same time he shouldn't take it if offered. Bobby Kennedy was dead set against it.

When Kennedy went to bed in the early morning hours after his nomination, his choice seemed to have narrowed to Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri or Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington. But when he woke a few hours later, Kennedy went to see Johnson and offered him the job. The surprise in the Kennedy and Johnson camps was nearly total; labor leaders protested mightily to Kennedy; Bobby Kennedy met with Johnson either to persuade him not to accept his brother's offer or to warn

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged upward today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.07 to 2,107.22 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 3 to 2 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 552 up, 380 down and 465 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to just 16.06 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 1/2 at 126 7/8; Philip Morris, up 1/8 at 85 1/2; and General Electric, up 1/4 at 43 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .13 to 152.94. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .19 at 308.83.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 16.54 to 2,106.15, bringing its loss for the week to 25.43 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 3 to 2 on the NYSE, with 551 up, 854 down and 530 unchanged. Big Board volume totalled 136.07 million shares, against 156.10 million in the previous session.

Rally Broken Up

Nandaime's mud-covered streets to gather in an open field for speeches.

Scores of police with gas masks and AK-47 rifles stood guard nearby. "We're here to make sure that order is kept," an officer said.

Witnesses said people began screaming and running for cover when police began lobbing tear-gas canisters into the crowd.

Groups of protesters hurled stones and sticks back at the officers, and one man yelled: "You murderous dogs!"

Police beat several people with their fists, feet and rifle butts. One man stood stunned, blood dripping down his face, his arms cut.

Witnesses said police threw one of the rally organizers, Carlos Huembes, to the ground, then punched and kicked him.

Plainclothes security agents confiscated film from several photographers, including one from The Associated Press.

Police used the tear gas after protesters began hurling rocks, a state security officer told the AP.

The demonstration was organized by the Democratic Coordinate, an umbrella group for anti-government political parties and trade organizations. It was authorized by the government, which staged its own pro-Sandinista rally in the town over the weekend.

Roger Guevara, secretary of the Coordinate, said in a statement that Huembes and two other Coordinate members arrested at the rally were being detained Sunday night. The statement identified them as Agustín Jarquin Anaya and Adán Fletes of the Social Christian party.

Public discontent with the Sandinistas has increased this year as Nicaragua's economy worsens and the government's war against the Contras remains unsettled.

The government claims the Reagan administration, its last request for renewed military aid to the Contras killed by Congress in February, has been attempting to stir up discontent in Nicaragua.

The Sandinista newspaper Baricada ran a headline Sunday with a warning to the U.S. Embassy: "Don't Provoke The Ire of the People."

but "there are a number in a group who don't do so well."

Helping them would mean opening up to them, she said. Because through all the seminars, lectures and other activities on the subject, "95 percent of what I know comes from the kids themselves," she said.

Ms. Galbraith said eight gripes of gifted children include 1) no one explains what being gifted is all about — it's kept a big secret; 2) school is too easy, irrelevant and boring; 3) parents, teachers and friends expect us to be perfect all the time; 4) friends who really understand us are few and far between; 5) kids often tease us about being smart; 6) we feel overwhelmed by the number of things we can do in life; 7) we feel different, alienated, and 8) we worry about world problems and feel helpless to do anything about them.

In addition to the gripes, the group discussed whether the gifted student is at a greater risk and helping gifted children through managing stress, coping with pressure, resolving conflict and accepting themselves and others.

In addition to the seminar, Ms. Galbraith will discuss "Feeling Good About Being Gifted" in a seminar to-night at 7 p.m. at Wahl Coates School. It is designed for youth, parents and counselors, and there is an admission charge.

many doubts with respect to the correct management and the credibility of the electoral figures," Cardenas said in a letter to Bartlett released Sunday night.

National Action Party members coordinated protests on Sunday, particularly in Chihuahua state.

Hundreds of protesters who blocked bridges across the Rio Grande in Chihuahua state on Saturday went home early today after the election commission released results that showed the National Action Party won three congressional races in the Juarez area.

Protesters blocked the Cordoba bridge, the main link between Ciudad Juarez and El Paso, Texas; the smaller Zaragoza bridge about eight miles east; and a bridge at Fabens, Texas, about 20 miles east of El Paso.

The Pan American highway outside the state capital of Chihuahua, 200 miles south of the U.S. border, was blocked by party members Saturday night at the same time as the bridge takeover in Ciudad Juarez.

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have trouble getting credit. Creditors seldom grant credit to someone who has filed a Wage Earner Plan Chapter 13 or Chapter 7.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy: If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

So before you make a Bankruptcy decision, THINK, consider the options and don't lock yourself into BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake.

U.S. Ready To Announce Payment To Families

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say they expect a quick announcement of compensation for the families of those who died aboard Iran Air flight 655 and that they hope the tragedy will spur efforts to end the Iran-Iraq war.

"We want to do the right thing," Michael Armacost, the undersecretary of state, said Sunday. "I would expect a decision sometime early next week."

President Reagan expressed regret hours after the USS Vincennes shot down the Iran Air A300 Airbus with 290 people aboard last Sunday. At the time, the Vincennes had just beaten back an attack by Iranian gunboats, which Iran uses to hit tankers in the Persian Gulf.

The Pentagon says the Vincennes' sophisticated Aegis radar and tracking system picked up a radio identification from the Airbus broadcast on a frequency used only by military aircraft, leading Capt. Will C. Rogers III to conclude that his ship faced attack from an F-14 fighter.

Armacost said that as compensation for relatives of "innocent victims of an air tragedy, ... we are considering a humanitarian payment to the victims' families, and that includes a lot of third country national families."

The payments would be "ex gratia," he said, using a legal term that translates from Latin as "out of grace" and means that the party making compensation does not acknowledge culpability.

Administration officials have argued that Iran should have ensured that the airliner did not fly over a fire that they say was started by Iranian forces. They also say the airplane ignored 12 warnings from U.S. warships and did not adequately identify itself as a commercial flight.

"We would not contemplate payments to the Iranian government. ... I think one possibility would be through the Red Cross or through the Red Crescent, humanitarian organizations who would deal with the individuals," Armacost said during an appearance on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation."

The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Vernon Walters, said that when Iran takes its case before an emergency meeting of the Security Council on Tuesday, he will "defend the circumstances under which this occurred."

"And above all, I'm going to urge that the way to stop these incidents in the future is to stop the war, in accordance with the resolution of the United Nations, of which Iran is a member," Walters said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"We have always maintained that the way to stop these incidents is to stop the war," Walters said. "Nearly a year ago, the Security Council passed a mandatory, obligatory resolution, 598, calling on all belligerents to stop the hostilities, to withdraw to internationally recognized boundaries, to exchange prisoners of war, to set up an impartial group to consider the origins of the war, and the cost of reconstruction."

Armacost disputed an accusation by the Iranian ambassador to the United Nations, Mohammad Ja'afar Mahallati, that the United States is siding with Iraq in the war.

Because Iraq has accepted the resolution and Iran has not, Armacost said, "we have ... felt it was appropriate to generate pressure to encourage Iran to comply" by protecting oil tankers in the gulf from Iranian attack.

The United States has increased the number of warships it maintains in the Persian Gulf since it agreed last year to put American flags on 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers and escort them through the waterway. Last September, the administration directed U.S. commanders to assist other tankers that came under attack, even if they did not carry the Stars and Stripes.

"We remain neutral in the war," Armacost said. "Objectively, in some ways, there may be the appearance of a tilt, but it's a tilt toward peace, not toward Iraq. The fact of the matter is that there is a resolution in the U.N. that calls for a comprehensive cease-fire."

"Our view ... is that neither country can win the war. The question is whether they will muster the will to end it."

Armacost and Walters said they did not take at face value declarations by some Iranian leaders that they would not seek revenge for the deaths of the 290 passengers.

"We can't afford to let our guard down and we have 'upped' our security alert in the areas," Armacost said.

Walters said "the Iranian government is composed of extremely unpredictable people and it's very difficult to say they will or will not do anything."

Tests Show B-1 Bomber May Fall Short Of Operating Goals

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's B-1 bombers may not be able to fulfill their mission of penetrating Soviet air defenses in the 1990s, according to congressional and administration officials citing new test results.

Recent tests have shown problems with the B-1's Electronic Countermeasures, or ECM, system used to foil enemy radar, House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said in a memorandum sent to panel members and disclosed on Sunday.

Plans to build the B-1 were shelved during the Carter administration but revived under President Reagan as he persuaded Congress that a penetrating bomber was needed to bridge the gap between the aging fleet of B-52s and the B-2 or Stealth Bomber expected to become operational in the 1990s.

Reagan won approval for a version called the B-1B by pledging to keep the first 100 planes under a $2.8 billion ceiling. The planes became operational in 1986, although they are still undergoing tests and adjustments.

Aspin said in his two-page memorandum that "ECM has been the chief question mark in the B-1B's future as a penetrating bomber. It looks like we have our answer. The Air Force is now admitting that, because of a design flaw, it will never work as advertised."

The memo, excerpts of which were obtained by The Associated Press, quoted a letter from Air Force officials to the committee late last month saying that "there are limitations within the current system architecture."

Aspin said in his memo that "the Air Force acknowledged that those limitations will prevent the B-1B ECM from ever achieving full operational capability."

Despite the problems, Air Force officials said the plane should be able to penetrate Soviet air space until the introduction of the Stealth bomber, which is designed to appear as small as possible on enemy radar screens.

Air Force officials confirmed the information in Aspin's memo, but a spokesman, Capt. Jay de Frank, said "the current round of flight tests verified that the most important ECM techniques work, giving us a high degree of confidence that we can penetrate enemy defense and accomplish our mission."

The Air Force is trying to achieve what it calls Mod-1 capabilities on the bomber's ECM system, meeting specifications that were supposed to be achieved in 1986, according to Air Force and congressional officials.

The current hardware aboard the plane is not capable of meeting higher Mod-2 capabilities, those thought necessary for the plane to cope with expected improvements in Soviet air defenses by the 1990s, congressional sources said.

"The current system has a limitation which precludes achieving Mod-2 capabilities without modifying the hardware," de Frank said. "We are evaluating options to address these limitations."

The exact nature of the limitations is classified for security reasons, but one congressional source said ECM devices aboard the B-1 simply do not have the capacity to handle the job.

"It's a little like trying to pour a 12-ounce drink into a 7 ounce glass. It just can't be done," said one source, speaking on condition of anonymity. "They are a long way from being where they were supposed to be in 1986."

Damaged North Sea Rig Still Burning

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — The Piper Alpha oil and gas platform was still burning and smoking early today, five days after explosions and fire on the North Sea rig killed 166 men in the world's worst oilfield disaster.

Texas oilfield fire and blowout specialist Red Adair, 73, and his team said they planned to return to the platform today to continue clearing debris before trying to cap a blazing wellhead.

He said three or four of the platform's 36 wellheads were burning, two of them sending up flames 300 feet high. Other wells have been fractured under the sea and are blowing gas to the surface in huge bubbles.

The team boarded the dangerously tilting platform at dawn Sunday from the semi-submersible support rig, Tharos, but was forced off by high winds, heavy seas and a surge of flames from one wellhead.

The platform, stricken last Wednesday, stands on the seabed 120 miles northeast of the Scottish coast.

"The job will cost millions (of dollars) and it could be that some of the oil outlets may be closed off permanently with concrete plugs," said John Brading, chairman in Britain of the platform's operators, Los Angeles-based Occidental Petroleum Corp.

"The noise from the well blowing out is like a jet plane and water has to be continually sprayed on to try to keep the heat down," Brading said.

He said the Adair team would work as close as 10 feet to the flames, protected by shields.

"If Red gets that close and says the job cannot be done, then we will have to drill a second well and that could take three to four weeks. Red has been extremely successful in the past, but every well is different," Brading said.

Gene Grogan, Occidental's vice president of engineering, said Adair will try to pour in sea water, drilling mud or cement.

"If there are dangers in doing that, the other way is to drill a relief well by drilling down to the same bottom hole location and then pumping in fluid from there to the other well," he said.

Fourteen of the 64 survivors were still being treated in Aberdeen Royal Infirmary, three of them with extensive burns.

The London newspaper Today said 6 million gallons of oil a day were belching into the North Sea.

It said that, despite ships working on the slick with dispersal chemicals, dead seabirds smothered in oil were washing up along the coast.

The Department of Energy appointed Lord Cullen, a judge of the Court of Session in Edinburgh, to head the public inquiry into the disaster.

More than 100 churches in Scotland held memorial services Sunday for the victims.

Pesticide Study

RALEIGH (AP) — A long-awaited plan to study the state's groundwater for evidence of pesticide contamination was unanimously approved Thursday by the N.C. Pesticide Board, although there is still disagreement over the scope of the study.

The proposal approved Thursday was the sixth submitted from a committee formed from representatives of the N.C. departments of Agriculture, Natural Resources and Community Development, and Human Resources.

The plan calls for testing existing and newly drilled wells across the state to analyze water for the presence of at least 31 primary pesticides used in the state.

Student Death

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The death of a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill who fell from a high-rise dormitory in March was accidental, a state medical official ruled Thursday.

Dr. Deborah Radisch, associate chief of the state Medical Examiner's Office, made her ruling shortly after tests showed the student's body contained no traces of psilocybin, a drug commonly found in hallucinogenic mushrooms.

Public Response Was Surprising

By WINKIE LEE
The Goldsboro News-Argus
An AP Member Exchange Feature
GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Designing bows for a pair of her daughter's flip-flops led to results that Suzanne Langley of Goldsboro never expected.

Ms. Langley's product line — which includes accessories such as shoes, visors and T-shirts — is sold throughout the Southeast, with the possibility of a Western market opening up. Orders recently came from Puerto Rico and the Bahamas.

Her employers are mothers who want to stay at home with their children; grandmothers who want to supplement their income; and the handicapped, including members of a local sheltered workshop.

Ms. Langley recently rented a warehouse on U.S. 70, where she will move the business.

As she talks about Suzanne-Wear, it is obvious Ms. Langley is still surprised and excited about its success. She is quick to share the credit for the success with her husband, Joe, and her employees.

Among other things, her husband has computerized the business and helps her with packing the products. He also assists with the housework and care of their three children — Amy, 7; Joseph, 3; and Madison, 15 months.

The employees pick up ribbons and other materials from Mrs. Langley and sew the items she has designed. They then return the finished products to her. Each employee works at her own pace and is paid by the item.

In addition to those who sew, Mrs. Langley has a production manager, Donna Thompson of Saulston, and four sales representatives. Sales representative Billy Ester of Goldsboro covers the southeastern part of North Carolina as well as South Carolina. Other representatives are based in Charlotte, Florida and Kansas.

Although Ms. Langley has 35 people working with her, the orders for her products are coming in so rapidly and heavily that she finds herself working 20-hour days, though that may change once some new employees are hired and a second manager comes in.

Ms. Langley was not thinking about going into business when she designed some bows for a pair of her daughter's flip-flops. Acting on the advice of a friend, she worked on the shoes after being unable to find what she was looking for in the stores.

Her daughter's friends saw the decorated shoes and wanted some, so the Goldsboro woman began sewing them as birthday gifts. She also made accessories for shoes and visors and gave them to family members.

Making the accessories went from a hobby to being a business after a trip to Topsail Beach during Memorial Day weekend in 1985. Ms. Langley and her sister-in-law were shopping when the owner of the store approached her and asked where the two women had bought their shoes. Upon hearing that Langley had designed the accessories for them, the owner asked if she could buy a few.

Ms. Langley went home and decorated six pairs of shoes and six matching headbands, and sent them to the shop. "I felt like I had really done something," she said, laughing.

The shop owner called her and requested an additional 144 pairs of the flip-flops, as well as more headbands.

Surprised, Ms. Langley said she agreed to the order using her most calm, confident voice. Then she hung up the phone and entertained the first thought to come to mind: How am I going to do this?

In the process of ordering some ribbon, she came in contact with Alice Mercer of Artistic Ribbon in New York. Ms. Mercer helped guide Langley in wholesale purchasing by offering advice and information.

Shortly after filling the order for the beach store, Ms. Langley started selling to area stores. Friends of hers would walk into the shops wearing the products and ask if store owners were interested in buying them.

Some were, and Ms. Langley continued working on the products. Her mother, Marcy Stoffel of Goldsboro, helped her.

The number of orders grew and in the summer of 1986, she hired some employees.

The business's biggest jump occurred last October after Suzanne-Wear had a booth at a children's market show in Charlotte. Particularly popular was an elastic band with a bow designed for baby girls who had no hair to wear bows in. Thousands of orders arrived for the product.

The business has been a learning process, Ms. Langley said. She smiled as she remembered how hard she and her employees had to work to fill the orders.

"We promised them delivery within three weeks," she said. "We ended up working day and night. For a while, it was a zoo."

Wedding Vows Said Sunday

NEW BERN - Beverly Marie Giddens and Larry Allen Penley were united in marriage Sunday at 2 p.m. in St. Paul's Catholic Center. The Rev. James R. Jones conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Forrest A. Giddens of New Bern. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Windom of Greenville, and the late James Oliver Penley are parents of the bridegroom.

Organist Sharon Stewart and soloist Buford Lewis, both of New Bern, presented music for the ceremony including "More," "Always," "The Lord's Prayer," and "A Blessing."

The maid of honor was Amy C. Giddens, sister of the bride, of New Bern.

Micheal D. Penley, brother of the bridegroom, of Winterville served as best man. Ushers included James Penley of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, and Richard Pinkham, nephew of the bridegroom of Route 1, Winterville. Jacob Pinkham of New Bern, nephew of the bride, served as the altar boy.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a two-piece champagne colored wedding suit accented by lace overlays with white trim around the neckline. Her shoulder length veil of illusion was attached to a Juliet cap adorned with pearls. She carried a clutch of lavender and champagne roses.

The maid of honor wore a teal-length dress of dusty rose with ivory lace overlays. She wore a floral headpiece of silk roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the atrium of the church. Assisting in serving were sisters of the bride, Marsha Pinkham of New Bern, Patricia Stanley of Wilmington, and Lisa Giddens, sister-in-law of the bride.

Following a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School and attends Pitt Community College. He is employed at Parkers Barbecue.

Family Has 'Relative Questions'

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My stepfather (I'll call him Ralph) and my mother got a divorce last year. Since then, Ralph and his new girlfriend had a baby boy. They named him Michael. My question: Is Michael related to me? If yes, what is he to me? Is Ralph still my stepfather? (I still consider him my stepfather, as he is very dear to me.)

I have a half-brother, "Tommy," from the marriage of Ralph and my mother. I believe, be Tommy's half-brother, right?

I also have a 3-year-old son named Victor. If I am related to Michael, what would the relationship between Victor and Michael be? Also, my mother just remarried again. Is her new husband also my stepfather, and my son's stepgrandpa?

We would all like to have answers to these questions. Ralph and I feel that we are still step-relations even though he and my mother are no longer married to each other.

Victor also calls Ralph "Grandpa." Is that OK? Thank you for straightening all this out. — ALL MIXED UP IN MONTGOMERY, ALA.

DEAR ALL MIXED UP: Ralph may be very dear to you, but he is no longer your stepfather — your mother's new husband is. Michael is not related to you, but you are right — Michael and Tommy are half-brothers. Michael and Victor are not related to each other. And Victor may call Ralph anything he wishes, as long as it's all right with Ralph.

DEAR ABBY: Sorry to be so late in writing, but I kept putting it off until now. In March of 1986, one of our cows gave birth to twin heifers. Naturally we were quite excited and wanted to give them special names. No matter whom we asked, "Abby and Ann" were the names everyone suggested. Our herd is 30 percent registered and we've been milking since 1957.

Well, "Abby" calved last May, and we would like you to name her heifer. We must register her name in August, so please get the name to us as soon as possible.

Thank you for your cooperation. I hope you consider this an honor. It really is. — JENNIFER JAMES, VERDON, NEB.

DEAR JENNIFER: I've had show dogs, racehorses, monkeys and babies named after me, but this is my first registered cow. I am honored. And since I am privileged to name "Abby's" heifer, my choice is "Jeanne" — after my firstborn, who has given her blessing and approval. (P.S. When "Ann" calves, if it's a heifer, let her name the udder one.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: If you've been hitching rides regularly with a co-worker, neighbor or friend, when was the last time you offered to fill up the gas tank? Or is your friendship riding on "empty" indefinitely?

Abby's favorite family recipes are included in her new cookbooklet! For your copy, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Twenty years ago, a group of youngsters from Greenville did what no other team from this city has accomplished. They won their way to the finals of their national baseball championship before falling one game short of the title.

The 1968 V.F.W. Teen-er League All-Stars got together again Saturday evening for a reunion at Bath. For many it was the first time in years they had seen each other.

The 15 won area, state and regional championships before winning a berth in the national tournament in Easton, Pa., where they finished in second place, losing in the finals to a team from Milwaukee.

The next year, the Teen-er League sponsorship was abandoned by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Greenville affiliated with the Babe Ruth League, sending a team to the nationals again in 1967, only to see it beaten in its first two games.

The 15 young men who composed that team have gone on to varied adult lives, from a national league umpire to a college professor to lawyers, and like many of us, just average joes.

But Saturday, they reunited to swap tales and reminisce about their once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

Russ Smith, who was the star pitcher on the team, like many of his teammates, went on to star for Rose High School. He also played college ball at East Carolina. He now owns an office equipment company in Athens, Ga.

Byron Dickens, a rightfielder and pitcher, played his collegiate ball at Elon, and is now the college store director for Pitt Community College.

Joe West, a catcher and outfielder, also played for Elon, but his forte was football there. He is now in his 11th season as a National League umpire.

"You know who else is a National League ump?" West questioned. "The guy who called our championship game behind the plate was Frank Pulli. I worked with him my first season in the majors."

West recalled that the team was a close-knit group. "When one guy would get down, the rest would get him back up. They realized that you can't be good every day. We had a bunch of good athletes on that team."

Derek Dunn, who played first base and the outfield, played no collegiate ball. He currently owns Eastern Construction here in Greenville.

Eric Vernon, an outfielder, was one of the few who did not play for Rose, but did play for Davidson while in college. He is now an attorney in Raleigh.

"I made the last out in the championship game," he recalled. "We had two men on base and I hit a line drive to left that the leftfielder made a shoestring catch of."

"Too, I remember Byron well. He's the first guy I ever knew who chewed tobacco in bed," Vernon added.

Jimmy Sugg, who was a catcher, also played no college ball and is now a sales representative for Glidden Paints, operating out of Elizabeth City.

"What I remember most was the support of our families. They really got behind us and encouraged us," he said.

Lewis Gidley, the leftfielder, also skipped college ball. He is now an audiologist in Wilson.

"You know, I find myself following some of the superstitions Coach (Johnny) Holt brought to us. He had a thing about never crossing bats. Even now, if I find anything that's long and thin like a bat, I uncross them if I find them crossed."

Jon Conway, a rightfielder, earned a collegiate grant but did not accept it. He is now the sales manager with Greenville Marble and Granite.

"I don't think we really grasped the importance of what we were doing," he said. "We just enjoyed the game. It wasn't until the nationals that we really realized what we were playing for. None of us ever thought we'd get as far as we did."

Bill Higgins was a relief pitcher, but saw little action with the all-stars due to an injury. He opted for a golf career both at Rose and at Davidson College and is now a corporate lawyer in Charlotte.

Larry Hatton, an outfielder and pitcher, now an electrical technician at Procter & Gamble, remembered that "The suicide squeeze put us in the finals. Byron laid down the bunt and Russ scored on the play."

Jimmy Bond, who played first base, now works with Ric Cox, a Greenville CPA.

"I take credit for making Byron what he is today," Bond said. "Russ would pitch the first game and win, and I would pitch the second and lose. Byron would then pitch the third game and win. If I had won my games, he would never have gotten to pitch."

Jimmy Paige, the shortstop, played collegiately for East Carolina. He now works with Lowe's of Greenville. He was one of three team members who did not attend.

Another was Kim Harbin, the second baseman, is an assistant vice president with A.C. Monk and Co. Harbin was in Asia on business.

The final member who did not attend was Stanley Cobb, the centerfielder, and the only 13-year-old on the team. He could not be traced down by the reunion organizers.

Perhaps the brains of the team was third baseman Tommy Durham, who later went on to graduate from East Carolina with a perfect 4.0 academic average. He is now an associate professor of psychology with ECU.

And his best memory of the team is that they came so close to not making it to the nationals at all.

"We were in the regionals and had come back to take the lead," he said. "But in the last inning, they had the winning runs on base and there were two outs. The batter hit a ground ball to Jimmy Paige (at shortstop) and he threw to Jimmy Bond, and the umpire called the batter out."

"The next day, a picture appeared in the local newspaper, showing the batter stepping on first and the umpire calling him out and the ball still several feet from Jimmy's glove."

Nevertheless, Greenville went on to the finals but lost.

John Holt, the coach, and now co-owner of Renn-Taff Stationery in Washington Square Mall, has his own memories.

"The thing that made this team different was that they were all totally dedicated to what they wanted to do and they fell only one game short," Holt said. "No one in Greenville ever thought they would go as far as they did."

"But they had just the right ingredients — baseball savvy at every position, the clowns to keep them loose, and the strong, serious ones to keep them going."

Maddux Wins 15th Game As Cubs Top San Diego

By The Associated Press

The major league's winningest pitcher at the All-Star break is ... Greg Maddux.

Yes, Greg Maddux, who was was 6-14 with a 1.0 earned-run average last season. Yes, Greg Maddux, who began the season with an 8-18 career record and a 5.59 ERA.

Sunday, Maddux won his 15th game as he threw a nine-hitter to lead the Chicago Cubs past the San Diego Padres 4-2.

Maddux, 15-3, won his ninth consecutive decision in pitching his league-leading eighth complete game, the most by a Cub since Rick Reuschel had nine in 1978. Maddux struck out four and walked two. He also drove in the go-ahead run.

Chicago took the lead with two runs in the seventh. Angel Salazar singled off Show, took second on Sundberg's groundout and scored on Maddux's single.

Dave Martinez walked and Maddux scored when shortstop Garry Templeton dropped first baseman Keith Moreland's throw on a grounder.

Dawson, celebrating his 34th birthday, hit his 15th home run in the first. San Diego tied the score 1-1 in the bottom of the inning on Tony Gwynn's RBI single.

Sundberg made it 2-1 in the third with his second home run of the season. San Diego tied in the fourth on Templeton's run-scoring double.

Astros 6, Mets 5
Bill Doran and pinch-hitter Rafael Ramirez hit run-scoring singles off Randy Myers in the ninth inning as Houston swept a sweep a three-game series.

Craig Reynolds led off the ninth with a single off Roger McDowell, 4-2. Alex Trevino sacrificed and Kevin Bass walked before Myers relieved. Doran singled in the tying run with two outs and Ramirez drove in the winning run.

Giants 2, Cardinals 1
Terry Mulholland pitched a five-hitter, Mike Aldrete homered and Jose Uribe singled in the winning run as San Francisco won its fifth straight and 10th in its last 12 games. The Giants moved within 2½ games of first-place Los Angeles in the West.

Mulholland, 2-0, struck out five and walked one. In his previous start, he pitched a six-hit shutout.

Pirates 7, Dodgers 2
R.J. Reynolds drove in three runs with a triple and a single as the Pirates won their fifth straight.

Bob Walk, 10-4, named earlier in the day to the NL All-Star team as a replacement for San Francisco's injured Robby Thompson, allowed five hits in eight innings for his fifth straight victory.

Reds 5, Phillies 4
Eric Davis drove in three runs with a home run and a single and Jack Armstrong got his first major-league victory.

Davis hit a two-run homer during a three-run fifth off Shane Rawley, 5-11, who lost his fifth consecutive decision.

Expos 4, Braves 2
Tom Foley singled in the go-ahead run with one out in the 13th inning as the Expos won their seventh straight and 10th in their last 11 games.

Pinch-hitter Graig Nettles singled off Bruce Sutter, 1-3. One out later, Mike Fitzgerald and Foley hit consecutive singles to score pinch runner Pascual Perez. Fitzgerald scored on Luis Rivera's infield groundout.

KU Hoops Is Probed

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — National basketball champion Kansas is under investigation by the NCAA for alleged recruiting violations involving the basketball program, the university said today.

Kansas Athletic Director Bob Frederick said the alleged violations occurred between June 1986 and April 1987.

The violations did not involve any member of the Kansas team which beat Oklahoma in the NCAA finals this year, Frederick said.

Frederick said Kansas was cooperating fully with the NCAA and had hoped that the allegations could be resolved without an official NCAA investigation.

"There was a long period of time during which we were working with the NCAA in which we thought this matter would not end up in an official inquiry," Frederick said.

"The allegations have no bearing on the national championship season or the eligibility of any participant," Frederick said.

Loneliness

Are you lonely? Certainly everyone is lonely at times. To be human is to occasionally experience that awful sense of separation from the warmth and love of other human beings. As social creatures we feed upon relationships with other people to satisfy the deep need within us to feel connected to the world.

True loneliness however is a result of separation from God. When a relationship is established with God we feel connected to the universe and ourselves. As a natural consequence our relationships with other people become more genuine and less selfishly motivated.

At Trinty Free Will Baptist Church we realize there is no simple cure for loneliness. As long as we are human we will sometimes feel lonely. But faith in God removes the most painful form of loneliness as we grow in His love and grace. Why not join us this Sunday to learn more.

State PBS Show Wins Top Award

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (AP) — For the third year in a row, North Carolina Public Television has won one of television's highest awards.

NCPTV staff members on Saturday accepted first place in the Corporation for Public Broadcasting local program award competition in the category for independent productions.

The winning program was "A Singing Stream," the story of the Landis family of Creedmoor, N.C., in Granville County. It was produced by Tom Davenport, an independent filmmaker from Virginia. He worked with Daniel Patterson of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill folklore faculty and UNC graduate Allen Tullos on the film.

NCPTV brought the film to public television this past February and will present it for national use on PBS later this year.

This is the first award the Corporation for Public Broadcasting has given in this category. Among NCPTV's competition were films from WGBH in Boston and WNET in New York.

NCPTV also was honored as a finalist in the instructional category for "Globe Watch," its series on international affairs.

NCPTV won first place in children's programming last year for "Underwater Kids." In 1986, the network won the cultural award for "This Time Each Year."

Soviets And British To Exchange Actors

LONDON (AP) — A group of young Soviet actors will train with the Royal Shakespeare Company and British drama students will go to Moscow in the first exchange of its kind, the International Foundation for Training in the Arts announced today.

The Moscow Art Theater School will send 18 of its drama students for three weeks' training alongside British actors at London's Barbican Center in September, the foundation said.

The visit is the first effort of the newly formed foundation, set up to encourage such exchanges. Supporters include Vanessa Redgrave and Peter Ustinov and leading Soviet actor-director, Oleg Tabakov. Dame Peggy Ashcroft is patron.

The foundation's executive director is Brian Cox, currently acting the title role in "Titus Andronicus" for the Royal Shakespeare Company.

The return British visit will be in April 1989.

"We are aiming to bring together the vast untapped pool of teaching skills of top actors and directors. We also plan to broaden our activities to include all the performing arts, such as ballet and opera, and to extend our links with East Germany, Poland and Japan," Cox said.

He said the Soviet actors will live with British families while the British actors in Moscow will live in "dormitories."

PBS TV Anthology Begins 4th Year

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Inquires cheerful host Ann Magnuson, "Are we ready for something really avant-garde?"

"Oh, is it time for 'thirtysomething?'" quips her companion, Shirley, the new-age goose.

But be assured the tip of the hat to that whining-yuppies show is as close as PBS' variety show of the bizarre, "Alive from Off Center," will get to network television.

The anthology-variety series, a production of KTCA in Minneapolis-St. Paul, begins its fourth madcap season tonight with two segments, a satirical look at the advertising industry by the producers of "Pee-wee's Playhouse," and director Julien Temple's bizarre and cynical visualization of Verdi's "Rigoletto" from the anthology feature film "Aria." Avant-garde enough for ya?

If not, tune in next week, July 18, for "Alter Image," a collection of performance-art video selections by new-wave British performers.

The first of these is a hilarious send-up, "Love Me, Gangster." In high-resolution black-and-white against cartoon backdrops — kind of a video comic strip — a mob war ensues in nearly indecipherable Cockney accents. Of course, the violence has been precipitated by a typical love triangle in which a buxom babe inspires a love-struck gangster to pant hysterically, then rip off his clothes — all his clothes, in one big swoosh.

Other segments include a music video, "Rory McLeod," the working-class rapper and harmonica player who sings "Farewell, Welfare" while walking through a cityscape, and a punk choreography dance-rumble with garbage cans, "Dustbin Dance."

Next week's installment is introduced by "Off Center" co-host, photographer William Wegman and his favorite subject, his Weimaraner, Fay Ray.

Tonight's premiere starts off with "Bite and Smile," a clever little film that contains a lot of in-jokes about advertising — lines like, "OK, freelancer. Draw!"

The original producers of "Pee-wee's Playhouse," who obviously have spent plenty of time in the advertising milieu, go wild with wacky characters and colorful, crazy sets that change dimensions. One character heads off in vain search of a washroom, only to find the hallway shrinking until he comes to a dead end inside a miniature set on a soundstage where a television commercial is being filmed.

"Bite and Smile" is the name of a cookies-and-crackers product, and the agency is trying to sell the uptight company president an ad campaign involving singing potatoes, a concept he doesn't immediately grasp.

"Kids love talking potatoes!" insists the producer. "Imagine potatoes begging kids to eat cookies and crackers!"

The film by Temple is from "Aria," a feature movie made up of films by 10 directors set to different opera arias. "Rigoletto" is Temple's theme, although his film has nothing to do with the plot of the opera. Buck Henry and Anita Morris play an adulterous married couple who, unbeknownst to each other, steal off to the same motel for videotaped liaisons with their respective lovers.

Newsletter

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Fans of British TV, film and rock music have a new publication just for them, "Anglofile," a bimonthly newsletter from The Goody Press of Decatur.

The first issue examines the resurgence of interest in the British TV series "The Prisoner" and includes an interview with Patrick McGouhan. Future issues will include talks with and stories about Patrick Macnee and "The Avengers," "Doctor Who," Monty Python, "Fawlty Towers," "The Saint" and Tracey Ullman.

Concert Tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Until "It's Garry Shandling's Show" on Fox and Showtime gets back into production, which it will do under an independent contract, sidestepping the writers strike, the standup comic will be appearing in his first headline concert tour, beginning July 20.

Next year, Shandling plans a feature film, "It's Garry Shandling's Movie."

Beach Boy Singer Stages Return

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Beach Boy Brian Wilson, who sang of good vibrations and endless summers before sinking into drug addiction and isolation, has returned from the deep end with a critically acclaimed solo album and an optimistic outlook.

With the help of his controversial psychologist, Eugene Landy, Wilson kicked the drug habit, dropped his weight from more than 300 pounds to a firm 190, and cut an album that critics put in a league with the Beach Boys' 1966 classic, "Pet Sounds."

"This album is better than 'Pet Sounds,'" Wilson said in a recent interview. "There's no comparison to the two, but this one has more to offer. It has more to offer the teenagers, the older folks and the in-between people."

Landy, credited as the new album's executive producer, works with the 46-year-old Wilson 24 hours a day and considers himself Wilson's friend, therapist and musical collaborator.

Landy's tactics have raised charges of ethical violations and sparked a state investigation into his license.

All-Star Managers Welcome Break

CINCINNATI (AP) — For Whitey Herzog and Tom Kelly, managing baseball's midsummer night's dream is a chance to escape some recent nightmares.

Herzog will skipper the National League in Tuesday night's 59th All-Star game at Cincinnati's steamy Riverfront Stadium and Kelly will lead the American League.

The celebrations started Sunday night with a fireworks extravaganza and continued today with a "skills" contest, a Disney production and an "All-Star" gala at the Cincinnati Zoo.

The skills competition is baseball's version of the NBA's Slam-Dunk contest, only the slamming is done over the wall.

The events will come as a welcomed break for Herzog, Kelly and several other struggling stars.

The last time they matched their managerial skills, Kelly's Minnesota Twins beat Herzog's Cardinals in Game 7 of the World Series.

Now, the Cardinals have lost six straight and nine of their last 10. In losing three straight to San Francisco, the Cardinals combined for three runs and hit .170. The Giants beat the Cards 21-2 on Saturday as 38-year-old Chris Speier hit for the cycle.

"We can't hit," Herzog moaned before leaving San Francisco for the All-Star festivities.

"It will be hectic the next couple of days and I sure could use a rest but managing the All-Star game is an honor. It also means you won the pennant the year before and I'll take that any time."

The Cardinals are fifth in the NL East and trail the slumping New York Mets by 14½ games.

Herzog said Sunday he will start Mets right-hander Dwight Gooden, 11-5. Minnesota's Frank Viola, 14-2, is expected to start for the AL.

It's Gooden's fourth All-Star game and his second start. In 1986, Herzog also started Gooden in a game won by the AL 3-2.

"It means a lot to me," Gooden said. "I really wanted to make it this year. I think, too, this time I can be more relaxed."

Two years ago, Gooden yielded a two-run homer to Detroit's Lou Whitaker and lost his matchup with Roger Clemens.

"I was nervous," Gooden said. "I didn't do well that night. I'd like to make up for it."

Herzog would also like something: an All-Star victory. He was the losing manager in the 1983 game, 13-3. Herzog is the only NL manager to lose an All-Star game in the last 16 years.

"The game is for the players and fans and it should be fun — a night

Overton Tops Skiing Winners

GRIMESLAND — Kristi Overton, Stewart Abelson and Beth Griffin were all double winners at a trick and slalom waterskiing tournament held at Lake Kristi Saturday and Sunday.

Overton, one of the top female waterskiers in the world, took first in the open trick and slalom events.

Abelson won the junior boy's trick and slalom, finishing ahead of Bennie Lohr in the trick event and ahead of Lance Giddens in the slalom.

Beth Griffin won the women's II trick and slalom events.

Marianne Barrett was tops in the junior girl's slalom, while Valerie Coble was second in the event.

In the boy's slalom, Marc Shaw was the winner, while J.R. Stocks took second. April Coble won the girl's slalom by finishing ahead of Karen Truelove.

Shirley Coble took first in the women's III slalom.

Overton took first in the women's open slalom, while Kim Laskoff of Florida took second.

In the women's I slalom, Jackie Rollins of Greenville took first, while Jeanne Adams of Fuquay-Varina took second.

In the trick competition, Abelson took first in the junior boys, while Bennie Lohr was second. Valerie Coble was tops in the junior girls' competition. Jessica Ogburn was runner-up in the event.

Sieckmann Expects New Life With Win

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Life as Tom Sieckmann knew it is over, and he can think of several people who will be pleased to hear that.

"It's going to change some things for me, certainly. I'll probably pay off my creditors," Sieckmann said with a grin Sunday after collecting the biggest paycheck of his professional golfing career, $117,000 for winning the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic on the second hole of a playoff with Mark Wiebe.

The victory was Sieckmann's first in four years on the PGA Tour and helped ease the pain of a season in which he had missed the cut in 13 of 16 events.

Sieckmann, 33, of Omaha, Neb., pushed his earnings total to $159,690 for the season and $305,734 for his career.

"It's not the money so much, even though it is in a way," said Sieckmann, who lost his card and had to return to qualifying school after the 1987 season. "I'll spend the money one day, and I've got this rest of my life. I won a tournament on the tour."

Sieckmann's final-round, 2-under-par 69 included six birdies and four bogeys on the 6,776-yard Kingsmill

Golf Club layout. He forced the playoff with a birdie on the 177-yard 17th hole that left him tied with Wiebe at 270 after 72 holes. Wiebe closed with a 68.

On the first playoff hole, No. 16, the two made par-saving putts on the 427-yard dogleg right. Sieckmann two-putted from about 55 feet and Wiebe, who missed the green on his approach and left his third shot on the fringe, sank a 12-footer.

At the par-3 17th, neither player's tee shot found the narrow green, but both golfers came close to holing their second shots. Wiebe, in the short rough about 30 feet past the hole, chipped onto the green and the ball hit the cup before coming to rest about six feet away. Sieckmann, pin-high and about 20 away in the fringe, elected to putt his ball, which rolled just wide of the cup and stopped about two feet past it.

Wiebe, playing next, missed his par putt, and Sieckmann, who won seven tournaments overseas before deciding to try the U.S. tour in 1984, rolled in the winner.

Wiebe, whose first of two victories came here in 1985, got $70,200 from the $650,000 purse.

Judge Expected To Decide NFL Fate

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge was expected to rule today in a dispute that has National Football League owners and players wondering if there will be about 280 new free agents.

"We have done our homework and have compiled a list of players who could possibly be free under some type of system, but we have no plans to go out and sign players like we did when the USFL folded," Minnesota Vikings general manager Mike Lynn said Sunday. "There's too much uncertainty."

U.S. District Judge David Doty in Minneapolis has said he would rule today on a request from the players' union to enjoin the owners from enforcing the provisions of a 1982 contract that restricts player movement.

Union lawyers have said an injunction would free eligible players to sign with any club, but a spokesman for the NFL Management Council said the league could counter an injunction by imposing the terms of a proposal made to the players on Sept. 7. The new system would liberalize the 1982 compensation system but retain restrictions on player movement, according to management council spokesman John Jones.

"Even if (Doty) acts to enjoin the 1982 contract, there might be another system out there," Jones said.

Jones said lawyers for the players have said the league will risk future damages in litigation if it implements a new system.

Lynn said the possibility of future litigation from either side will have a chilling effect on signings today if Doty grants the injunction.

"It would have a reasoned effect on us not to go out and sign players," Lynn said. "But in every sports league you have a number of mavericks who will do something rash and irresponsible."

Lynn said 13 members of the Vikings, including All-Pro offensive lineman Gary Zimmerman, could become free agents if Doty grants the injunction.

"If we lose a Gary Zimmerman and he goes to another team and we prevail in another lawsuit, how do we get him back?" Lynn asked. "It would be a quagmire that no one really has ever explained."

Cleveland general manager Ernie Accorsi told New York Newsday in a story published Sunday that, "We really don't know what we'd do if we could bid for players."

Nor do some of the players know.

"It's a coin toss for me," Pro Bowl guard Ron Solt of Indianapolis told the newspaper. "I have no problem playing here. And even if we do win the case and we're allowed to move, teams could arbitrarily put a fair market value on me, and it wouldn't be profitable for me to move."

Myers Overcomes Handicaps To Win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Terry-Jo Myers, the newest champion of the LPGA Mayflower Classic, is dyslexic and has a right eye that doesn't see straight.

She also has a $60,000 paycheck from her first tour victory.

"I don't really know how I held up," she said after Sunday's one-stroke victory at the Country Club of Indianapolis, where rain and lightning repeatedly interrupted the final round. "I was so nervous that I forced myself to eat this morning and I almost got sick."

Myers and Ayako Okamoto of Japan were tied at 8-under going into the final round. But Myers shot a par-71, while Okamoto, the 1984 champion, shot 1-over 72.

The champion finished the week at 8-under-par 276.

Myers relies on her brother-caddie Glenn to line up her putts because her right eye sees things to the right of where they are.

"Because of my eye problems, if I stare at a left-to-right break for any length of time it moves. It makes it tough for me to read a putt," she said.

Glenn Myers also constantly gives advice and counsel to his sister.

"We grew up playing golf ever since we were four or five years old," she said. "He knows me and my game better than anyone else. He's my teacher."

"Gosh, I couldn't have made it without him."

Tied with Okamoto at 277 was Amy Alcott, the 1980 champion, who missed a three-foot putt on 18 that could have tied her for the lead.

Judy Dickinson and Sherri Turner finished tied for fourth at 280. Missie McGeorge was at 281, and tied at 282 were Val Skinner, Tammie Green and Amy Benz.

Myers, Okamoto and Alcott were all 8-under when they reached the final hole.

Alcott, in the group ahead of Myers and Okamoto, sent her tee shot in the trees to the right of the fairway.

"The storm really picked up as I was hitting," Alcott said of the winds that whipped across the fairway. "Eighteen is a tough hole anyway, and 30-mile-an-hour winds from left to right makes it even tougher."

She recovered with a 3-iron shot that landed 30 feet from the cup. Her first putt went three feet past, and her putt for par lipped out.

"I just pulled that little putt a little bit," she said. "It's sad to miss one like that after four days."

Departure Leaves Heels Short

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Roy Williams' resignation as assistant men's basketball coach at North Carolina didn't exactly come at the ideal time, Tar Heel head coach Dean Smith said.

Williams, a 10-year member of Smith's staff and the Tar Heels' chief recruiter the past two seasons, was named the head coach at the University of Kansas last week.

Williams succeeds Larry Brown, who bolted for the NBA's San Antonio Spurs after leading Kansas to the 1987 national championship.

"We're all very delighted for Roy, and the University of Kansas, but the timing of the thing really hurts," Smith told The Chapel Hill News-Paper from Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta, while returning from a get-together with other coaches in Oklahoma City, Okla.

"These next three weeks are crucial. All of us are going on the road to start a heavy recruiting battle, and Roy had already planned to have a long week for us. Now we're a recruiter short."

Smith and chief assistant Bill Guthridge are also in for a busy week now, and Smith said he may ask the NCAA for permission to send remaining assistants Randy Weil or Dick Harp on the road.

The NCAA has a limit on the number of coaches allowed to go recruiting, and Weil and Harp aren't designated recruiters.

Smith said the job offer was simply too good for Williams to reject, adding that, in the long run, it may turn out that North Carolina's recruiting efforts will benefit from Williams' move.

"Now, he's at a place where we're not," Smith said, "and we can share thoughts on the people who are available to us, and who might be good for what program."

"I've done that in the past with Larry Brown, (Wichita State University's) Eddie Fogler and (Georgetown University's) John Thompson — it's kind of like a pool of potential recruits that we all contribute to. It's really helpful because we can't be everywhere at once."

Smith said he has a possible replacement for Williams in mind, "although I haven't been able to contact him yet, so I'd rather not say who it is."

Smith said that Williams faces a big challenge.

"The expectations will be high because they are the national champions," he said.

"Also, they lost (national player of the year) Danny Manning, whom they had when they finished fourth in the (Big Eight) conference last year."

"People need to remember that this is not the same team as last year. Although Larry left the program in excellent shape, Roy definitely has his work cut out for him."
