Iran Accepts U.N. Cease-Fire Proposal

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said today that it will accept a U.N. resolution calling for an immediate cease-fire in its nearly 8-year-old war with Iraq, which has claimed an estimated 1 million lives.

However, Iran also said it will not withdraw its troops from its borders and called on Iraqis to prepare to thwart further Iraqi attacks.

The announcement came one day after President Saddam Hussein of Iraq cited his country's recent string of battlefield victories and urged Iran to accept an "honorable" peace. Iraq has already accepted the U.N. resolution, which passed on July 20, 1987.

In a message to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Iran said it accepts cease-fire Resolution 598 in the "interests of security on the basis of justice," the official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

In New York, Perez de Cuellar said Iran's acceptance of the cease-fire resolution was unconditional.

"They say that they have decided to officially declare that the republic of Iran accepts Security Council Resolution 598," Perez de Cuellar said. "It is very clear that it is an acceptance which doesn't refer to any conditions." He showed reporters at the United Nations the letter of acceptance signed by President Ali Khamenei of Iran.

There was no immediate response from the Iraqi government. An Iraqi diplomat at the United Nations, Mudhafar A. Amin, said his government would have to study Iran's letter before reacting to it.

In a report monitored in Nicosia, the Iranian news agency said the General Command of the Iranian Armed Forces announced in Tehran that the government was accepting the cease-fire resolution.

"Today new conditions have been created which call for adoption of new stances in order to continue the sacred defense and protect Islam," IRNA said.

"We once again urge the Iranian people to man the war fronts to confront the enemies' aggressive nature and foil their criminal acts," the General Command of the Armed Forces said. "All Muslim combatants deployed on the war fronts are prepared to respond to any aggression and movement of the enemy."

Iran did not say when the cease-fire would go into effect.

The Iranian announcement was not attributed to any specific leader, but the last paragraph said Iran was still being led by the Ayatollah Ruhollah

Khomeini. His leadership "is still the most reliable shelter for the freedom-loving people of Iran," the statement said.

The United States maintains a fleet of 27 ships in and around the Persian Gulf to protect neutral shipping from war-related attacks. In Washington, the State Department said it would have no immediate comment on Iran's statement.

Democratic Foes Hold Unity Talks Dukakis Says He Wants 'Major Role' For Jackson

By TERENCE HUNT
 Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson today held unity talks just hours before the opening gavel of the Democratic National Convention, and the nominee-to-be declared, "I want Jesse Jackson to play a major role in this campaign."

Jackson, who had been pressuring Dukakis for what he called shared responsibility in Democratic affairs, provided little detail about the morning-long discussions, but said, "We're on a track that would lead to expanded involvement," he said.

The joint appearance — with both candidates smiling and bantering, and with top aides clumped nearby — was designed to defuse tensions that had been building since Dukakis passed over Jackson and picked Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen last Tuesday as his running mate.

"We have no plans to submit my name in nomination" against Bentsen, Jackson said.

After meeting in a hotel room, Dukakis, Jackson and Bentsen talked with reporters at a standing-room only news conference.

"There's no deal; there's no fine print," said Dukakis. "That's not the way you win elections."

Jackson reiterated that his name will be placed in nomination against Dukakis for the presidential nomination roll call on Wednesday night, and he said there will be debate on platform issues.

Platform negotiations, which had been suspended by Jackson, were back on track, Jackson said.

He said after the Wednesday night nomination vote, which Dukakis has more than enough delegates to win, the campaign moves in a fundamental new direction and the roles will change.

"We intend to win" in November, Jackson said. He did not offer an outright pledge of support for Dukakis. "I'm still looking for a Chicago miracle" on Wednesday night, Jackson said. "If the miracle does not come to pass, then we'll have passover to the next phase of our campaign."

Dukakis opened by paying tribute to Jackson, saying he wanted his longtime rival "to be deeply involved. I want his supporters ... to be deeply involved. They are going to be an essential part of the coalition we build."

"He is going to be involved, actively and fully in a way that will bring us together and will build the strongest grass roots organization we hope that has ever been organized in a presidential campaign," Dukakis said.

Sources said the two candidates were expected to negotiate several issues, including Jackson's insistence on playing a significant role in the transition to a Democratic administration if Dukakis wins in November. Dukakis aides said it would be better to deal with that idea after the election.

"There is no rift," Dukakis said in a pre-meeting interview.

While it was clear that not all differences had been resolved, Dukakis said, "We'll be campaigning together. We'll be campaigning separately but he'll be a very, very important part of this team."

Dukakis said they would make an effort to "bring into our campaign" key people from Jackson's camp.

Bob Jordan Welcomes High-Profile Role

By JOHN FLESHER
 Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says he knows a divisive Democratic National Convention could damage his prospects for unseating Republican Gov. Jim Martin. But he has no regrets about taking on the high-profile task of leading the North Carolina delegation.

"I could not be comfortable doing anything else," Jordan said Sunday. "This is my party. I've won with them in the past and I'll win with them again."

Martin, whose state party was plagued by feuding between mainstream supporters of George Bush and arch-conservative Pat Robertson loyalists, is planning a low profile at next month's Republican National Convention. He is not a delegate and plans to attend for only three of the five days.

Jordan, in contrast, requested and was granted the title of chairman of the North Carolina delegation to the Democratic convention — a post that will put him squarely in the middle of any feuding that breaks out.

"There were some folks who argued with him not to come and certainly not to be chairman," said Jim Van Hecke, chairman of the state party. "Leadership is fraught with risk."

But Jordan said he would not run away from the national Democratic ticket regardless of how the convention unfolds.

"I have an obligation to be here," he said. "It gives me an opportunity to act as a unifying force within our party. These are the people who are going to help elect me. The more active I am here, the more contacts I make, the more effective I can be."

He said he took another risky step

South Africa Bans Celebrations As Mandela Feted Worldwide

LONDON (AP) — Words of support and shouts of outrage rippled around the world today as thousands of people marked the birthday of Nelson Mandela, the South African anti-apartheid leader who turned 70 in a South African jail.

In South Africa, the government banned concerts and birthday-related events for Mandela, who has been in a prison for nearly 26 years of a life sentence for sabotage and conspiracy to topple white rule.

Dozens of nations have in recent days repeated their demand for the release of the black leader.

Mandela's supporters marked his birthday in at least 30 countries — including the United States, Japan, India, Cuba, West Germany, Nigeria and Venezuela — with celebrations ranging from rock concerts to church services.

In London, Anglican Bishop Trevor Huddleston, president of Britain's Anti-Apartheid Movement, led Christians, Buddhist monks, a rabbi and a Moslem scholar in prayers for Mandela at St. James's Church.

A sign calling for Mandela's release covered the altar, and a cake with 70 candles was on display. The 400 worshippers were asked to sign a six-foot-high birthday card.

Also present were 25 activists who had marched 590 miles from Glasgow, Scotland. They will help deliver to the South African Embassy more than 30,000 cards signed by Britons calling for Mandela's unconditional release.

On Sunday, tens of thousands of demonstrators thronged London's Hyde Park for a pro-Mandela rally addressed by South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu. Similar gatherings were held in Amsterdam and Rome.

"Any sensible government would realize that Nelson Mandela is absolutely essential for peace and stability in southern Africa," Tutu said.

The mostly young, white crowd roared with approval as the face of

Hot Days Run Up The Cost

BLUEFIELD, W.Va. (AP) — Giving away lemonade is cheaper than giving away hotel rooms when it's hot. If you have to give away something, that is.

The chamber of commerce here feels the obligation whenever the temperature tops 90 degrees, which is not supposed to happen often in "Nature's Air-Conditioned City."

"Lemonade Lassies" in shorts were set for another giveaway today after a weekend on which the town sweltered through its hottest day ever — 96 degrees — on Saturday.

Even at $100 a day during this record-setting heat wave, the giveaway is proving much cheaper than the first "stunt" the chamber tried.

"When we first started, we went to the hotel and they reluctantly agreed not to charge for rooms whenever the temperature went above 90 degrees," said chamber member Eddie Steele.

"By golly, it was within two weeks that the hotel was jammed to the rafters with a convention of Moose" when the next heat wave hit. The angry hotel paid off, but "we only gave away the hotel rooms once," Steele said.

That was 50 years ago, and the switch to lemonade was on.

In the past, whole summers have passed without Bluefield giving away one drop, partly because the temperature of record is at the airport, which generally has lower readings than downtown.

When the mark reaches 90, a lemonade giveaway is set for the next day, except when it reaches 90 on a weekend, when the giveaway is set for the next workday. After Saturday's 96, the high was "only" 89 on Sunday.

Sniper Kills 4 People In Forsyth

By PAUL NOWELL
 Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A man went on a shooting spree with a high-powered rifle and a .38-caliber pistol in a residential neighborhood near Winston-Salem, killing four people and wounding six, authorities said.

The gunman later was shot and wounded by police and was in custody, authorities said.

"We're still trying to figure it out," said Capt. Bill McGuirt of the Forsyth County Sheriff's Department. "All of our people are down there now."

The shooting apparently occurred late Sunday night, officials said.

Several people at the scene said a gunman shot at passing motorists, but authorities declined to confirm the information, saying that they were still investigating.

Resident O.J. Watkins, who lives across the street from a moped shop, said he heard shots fired, looked out a window of his house and saw the moped shop's operator carrying a rifle. Watkins said he saw a gunman run in and out of the shop several times.

"The guy was shooting at cars that went by," Watkins said.

Jason Poore, who lives nearby, said the shooting started near the moped shop and lasted 15 to 20 minutes.

"I was coming around the corner and I saw the lights on (at the moped shop), which is unusual for a weekend," Poore said.

"I went home and didn't think nothing of it. I sat in the front room and heard something popping that sounded like firecrackers," McGuirt said the suspect later was wounded by police and was taken to North Carolina Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem. He was in surgery and has not been charged, he said.

"We need a chance to talk with him (to see what happened)," McGuirt said.

The shootings occurred on the same street in southern Forsyth County, McGuirt said. Forsyth County encompasses Winston-Salem.

Michael Charles Hayes, 24, the moped shop operator, was listed in critical condition at Baptist Hospital, according to public relations director Roger Rollman. He said Hayes had multiple gunshot wounds to the back, groin and right leg.

In addition to Hayes, Jeffery Alan Parks, 28, of Winston-Salem, was listed in critical condition with a gunshot wound to the neck; and Darlene Welborn Hull, 29, of Winston-Salem was listed in satisfactory condition with gunshot wounds to the left arm and chest at Baptist Hospital, Rollman said.

The rest of the wounded were taken to Forsyth Memorial Hospital, authorities said. No names or conditions have been released.

None of the dead has been identified, McGuirt said.

Police early today were keeping reporters and bystanders 200 yards

Attended Conference

Debbly H. Gray, home economics teacher at D.H. Conley High School and region I adviser for Future Homemakers of America-Home Economics Related Occupations, was one of 2,800 student members and advisers attending the Future Homemakers of America's National Leadership Meeting this month in Cincinnati.

The theme of the meeting was "Mission IS Possible," describing a commitment to the three aspects of FHA's goal — public awareness, increased membership and a strong, positive image. The theme also congratulated adult advisers who guide the chapters and offer support and time to the members.

In the competitive events, North Carolina's Region I took eight gold medals and two silver medals.

Kidnapping

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating the kidnapping of a Stokes woman Sunday evening in Greenville.

A man hiding in a van in the shopping center parking lot at the corner of Greenville Boulevard and 10th Street threatened a woman with a knife and ordered her to drive across the Tar River on the eastern bypass, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Tyson said the woman drove the van across the bridge and pulled off onto a dirt road about 7:30 p.m.

As she approached a hole in the road she hit the brakes, opened the van door and jumped out and ran, Tyson said. Unharmed, she stopped another motorist and asked for help.

No one has been arrested and the investigation was continuing.

Teams Will Assist Special Care Cases

ECU News Bureau
Three East Carolina University faculty members have formed an organization that they hope will improve the quality of life for people with special needs.

Dr. Edward R. Levine, dean of the ECU School of Art, along with Dr. Charles R. Coble, dean of the school of education, and Judy McCall, Caswell Center-ECU coordinator, say the Design Group for Populations With Special Needs will utilize teams of experts from the university and community in solving specific problems for the elderly, incarcerated, developmentally and physically impaired, head injured, and hearing and visually impaired.

Three projects have already been undertaken by the group. Bill Dansey of Greenville, president of WEDCO Enterprises and a member of the ECU board of trustees, has donated an apartment unit at a recently constructed complex that is being designed for use by the handicapped by professors and students in ECU's environmental design program.

Although such features as ramps in the doorways and lowered sinks and cabinets in the kitchen will be required, special effort will be made to disguise these necessities so that the apartment does not appear to be a handicapped unit. "We want to make the apartment as aesthetically pleasing as possible," Levine said.

This fall students will design furniture for the apartment as a class project, and if money is available will actually construct the pieces.

Other projects include the redesigning of the REAP playground to accommodate handicapped children, and the study of a living room area at Caswell Center in Kinston to determine how design affects behavior.

"I've always seen the need for us in the school of art and the university at large to make a larger commitment to the community," Levine said. "I'm excited about working with the community and participating in bring aesthetic consideration into the lives of these people."

A 10-member board of directors has established operating procedures and policies for the organization, and a committee composed of representatives from ECU and Caswell will determine which projects to undertake.

"Some proposals will need monetary assistance, so we'll help them write grants to accomplish that," said McCall.

Once the program is established, Levine hopes to get a full-time director's position funded. "If this thing develops the way we'd like to have it develop, we'll have a lot of projects and will need a full-time director," he said.

For more information about the group or to apply for assistance, contact Levine at the ECU School of Art, Greenville, N.C., 27858, (919) 757-6140.

Zoning Board Will Study Housing Plat

A public housing plat proposed for the Medical District is one of the items to be considered by the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Council Chambers of City Hall.

Members of the commission will consider a preliminary plat of Phase I of the Greenville Housing Authority, to be located on SR 1204, east of Rountree and Westhills Townhomes.

The plat involves 32 apartment units situated on a 4.52-acre tract.

Also to be considered are several rezoning requests including a request by Bernice C. Branch to rezone a 8.1-acre tract located east of Memorial Drive, west of Legion Street, and being the Four Square Christian Church property from O&I (office and institutional) to CH (highway commercial).

Also to be considered is a request by Nancy Brown Harris to rezone a .48-acre tract located at the northwest corner of 10th and 14th Streets from IU (unoffensive industry) to CDF (downtown commercial fringe), and a request by James D. Mellon, Jr. to rezone a 3.26-acre tract located at the southwest corner of SR 1725 and SR 1708 from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to CH.

Meanwhile, the board will consider a request by the East Group Inc. to amend Section 32-47 of the Zoning Ordinance in order to increase the maximum height limit from 35 to 80 feet in the MD-6 zoning district.

In other action, the board will consider several properties for Historic Properties Designation.

Included are the Hassell-James (Owens) Building and Grounds, 105 and 107 W. Third Street; the York Memorial Church and Grounds, 600 Albermarle Ave.; the Third Street School and grounds, 600-700 W. Third St.; the Patrick-Arthur House, southwest corner of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard; the Jones-Lee House and Grounds, 805 Evans St., and the E.B. Ficklen House and grounds, 508 W. Fifth St.

Heat Causing Problems In Pitt But Most Taking It In Stride

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Jack Allison, chairman of the department of emergency medicine of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, says he's been amazed that so far no one having experienced heat stroke has come to Pitt County Memorial Hospital's emergency room.

He said the emergency department has treated about a half dozen cases of heat distress so far, but that none has been severe enough to be called heat stroke.

He said he believes people are becoming more aware of how to avoid heat distress. One of the quickest ways to cool off without too much shock to the system, he says, is to wet oneself with room temperature water and then let it evaporate, possibly in front of a fan. He said the emergency department keeps plant spritzers for this purpose. Whenever one has to be out in heat for long, he urges that the person sip water or other liquid often.

Charles Vincent, superintendent of recreation of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, said people leading recreation department programs that must be carried on outdoors are following the advice mentioned by Dr. Allison. They're calling for water breaks every 15 to 20 minutes for baseball players and others involved in the supervised outdoor activity. Some summer activity that can be moved indoors has been, he said.

Nevertheless, Vincent said, use of some of the programs like day camps have dropped as the temperatures have risen. Apparently children and their parents are opting to stay home and keep cool.

The big drawing card in the recreation program has been the indoor swimming pool at the Aquatics and Fitness Center. There has been no decline at all in its use this summer, even though there are many outdoor pools available. And during this period of high heat, its use has been especially high, Bill Twine, coordinator of the Aquatics and Fitness Center, said.

Twine said use of the unairconditioned gymnasium has been off some during the high heat. Use of the air conditioned weight room is about the same, he said.

Local veterinarian Dr. Michael House said he has seen some cases of heat distress in dogs. Cats usually do fine in the heat, he said, because they just cut down on their activity and manage to find water — unless they're confined in an impossibly hot place like a car or a house trailer.

He said the time of days that dogs seem most likely to get into distress is between 4:30 and 8 p.m. He said if a dog appears to be experiencing heat distress, his keeper should cool him off quickly by some means like plunging him into a tub of cool water or hosing him down and placing him in front of a fan. He said usually the pets that get into trouble in the heat are those left confined and unattended for long times. Plenty of water is a must, he said, and care should be taken that the container is of adequate size and that it cannot be turned over.

Livestock throughout the county is being affected by the heat, Phillip Rowan, livestock agent with the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, said. He said there have been some deaths among poultry. Hot chickens often produce smaller eggs, he said, and all animals tend to cut back on their food consumption when it's hot and thus not add weight as fast as their growers might like. The heat and drought in the Midwest have greatly cut into local livestock profits, he said, because the cost of feed is up so much.

Corn is the field crop most adversely affected by the combination of high heat and low moisture. Mitch Smith, agricultural extension director, said. He said corn is tasseling right now and needs a quarter of an inch of moisture a day to do well. A good general rain over the county within the next couple of days would do wonders for the corn crop, he said. Other crops, including tobacco, soybeans and peanuts are not too seriously affected so far. The critical time for soybeans will be around the first of August.

Counsel Says Meese Broke Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent counsel James McKay concluded in a report released today that Attorney General Edwin Meese III probably willfully filed a false income tax return, failed to pay taxes on time and broke a criminal conflict-of-interest law.

But McKay said he had decided not to seek criminal charges against the attorney general because "there is no evidence that Mr. Meese acted from motivation for personal gain. ... There is no evidence that he acted out of self-interest."

In an 814-page report, McKay said Meese's 1985 tax return did not declare some capital gains from the sale of securities and that Meese did not pay income tax on his capital gains from those sales when he filed the return.

"A trier of fact would probably conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. Meese violated" a section of the Internal Revenue Code by filing "a materially false tax return," said McKay, who added that Meese probably also violated a section of the Internal Revenue Code for "willfully failing to pay tax at the time required by law."

Meese also probably violated a criminal conflict-of-interest law in connection with his holdings of $14,000 in regional Bell telephone stock, but the independent counsel who investigated Meese for 14 months disclosed today that he had decided not to prosecute the case.

McKay said Meese owned the stock in the regional Bell companies in 1985 and 1986, when he set in motion a review process that led to a reversal of Justice Department policy. McKay also found that Meese participated in discussions of proposed legislation to shift regulatory responsibility for the breakup of AT&T from a federal court and the Justice Department to the Federal Communications Commission.

Propane Leak

CLYDE, N.C. (AP) — About 135 Clyde residents — including some from a nursing home — were asked to evacuate late Sunday after propane leaked from a delivery truck at Petrolane Gas Service during efforts to dissipate a vapor cloud, authorities said.

Rescue workers feared an explosion and went door-to-door to all homes within one-quarter mile of Petrolane, informing the residents of the dangers and suggesting that they evacuate, officials said.

Firefighters, wearing airpicks, kept a steady stream of water on the disabled truck in an effort to keep it cool, officials said.

A volunteer firefighter with Lake Junaluska was taken to Haywood County Hospital after suffering from heat exhaustion. He was listed in good condition, hospital officials said.

By midnight, the evacuation had been called off, the leaking truck had been drained and residents were returning home, authorities said.

Unity Talks Held

The meeting was the first face-to-face discussion between Dukakis and Jackson since a July 4 dinner at the Massachusetts' governor's home in Brookline. Though they have talked by telephone, they had not met since Dukakis picked Bentsen as his running mate.

"We made the judgment not to let our ships pass in the night, not let our ships crash," Dukakis said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen set out to win over those Democrats who would have preferred Jackson for the No. 2 spot on the ticket. Bentsen is making the rounds among state delegations to press his case.

He made a point of including the New Jersey delegation, where there are mixed feelings about the choice of the Texas senator.

"We're not happy with Bentsen," said Assemblyman Alan Karcher of Middlesex, N.J. "We want to know about his positions."

But Topic A in this sweltering convention city remained the Dukakis-Jackson rift.

Sources said Jackson wanted an agreement outlining an official role in the fall campaign, including financial support from Dukakis. It was not clear whether Jackson had explicitly asked Dukakis to provide him with a charter jet to travel in.

Dukakis aides said they would welcome campaign efforts by Jackson, but that any funds would have to come from the Democratic Party.

Dukakis also was said to be insistent that party chairman Paul Kirk remain in his post as long as he wants, despite any demands to the contrary.

Sweet &amp; Ripe

This Heat Is Good For Something?

Ideal growing conditions and a profitable crop.

Those words calm the nerves and sooth the fears of Pitt tobacco farmers, and that's what they're hearing from agriculturalists in 1988. Because Mother Nature has kindly turned on the heat and humidity machine this summer, making conditions picture perfect for leaf production, local growers are anticipating two prosperous years in a row.

What's hard on humans is good for tobacco. The same hot weather and sticky stuff that makes people huff and puff and turn red makes tobacco mellow, sweet and ripe. Then when it's cured and smoked, it produces a valuable aroma.

This time of year in a hot Pitt County tobacco field, that smells like money. And to farmers whose pockets aren't jingling right now and whose wallets have slim profiles, that prospect is inviting.

At this point in the growing season only two things could mar the forecast for good leaf and vigorous prices — impatience and weather.

For the crop to become quality tobacco, it must stay in the heat and humidity until it is ripe. That means the longer it remains in the field, the better it will be. Sounds simple, but with tobacco markets opening in two weeks and those farmers pockets getting quieter and quieter, the temptation is strong to cheat and offer some leaf any kind of leaf — for sale on opening day.

And another thing troubles farmers. While the tobacco sits in the fields maturing, it is at its largest and most vulnerable. The hot and sticky conditions that make it valuable also produce whopping thunderstorms that can drop hail and rip a field of tobacco to shreds. A profitable crop turns into debris faster than you can flick your Bic.

Despite the dangers, local agriculturalists took an opportunity last Friday to say the wait is worth the risk. With a crop as good as the 1988 one in Pitt County, patience will be a virtue. The county should be in an ideal position to experience high market demand and high prices.

Even good prices, however, can't erase the permanent threats to tobacco. Growers cannot overlook the burgeoning anti-smoking movement, with its growing political and judicial clout. The health issues involved in tobacco production will escalate in their influence on demand and profitably.

But having two profitable leaf crops in a row would be a blessing for this agricultural county. It could help ease the financial memory of 1983 and 1984, when drought baked plants in the field and shriveled dollar signs into debits. Tobacco contributes an average of $40 million to Pitt County's economy, and that could be increased by a prosperous crop in 1988.

So keep your fingers crossed, farmers, and don't let those light pocket blues persuade you to pull your leaf before its ready. The paycheck could be a fat wallet and pockets that sing sweet music of profit.

A Party Determined To Heal

'Though Dukakis has the votes to win here, there is a debt of politics and of conscience he must pay, sooner or later, to the voters Jackson represents.'

ATLANTA — Chastened but confident, the Democratic Party has come here for its quadrennial convention this week determined to show the nation it has healed the crippling internal quarrels of the Reagan era and come to terms with its future.

As the Democrats prepare to send Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis on the quest for the White House they have won only once in the last five elections, party leaders of almost all descriptions — with the notable exception of Jesse L. Jackson — say they have put aside their factionalism, acknowledged the need for fiscal discipline and redefined their approach to defense and domestic needs, all in hopes of improving their chances for victory on Election Day, Nov. 8.

"I'm not sure I can explain it," Dukakis said in an interview with The Washington Post last week. "but it's there. I sense it everywhere I go. There's a growing consensus... You see it in Congress. There are very few divisions there. And you see it among the Democratic governor."

Dukakis signaled his desire for unity when he reached out to select Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas as his running mate, reviving the precise alliance of Boston and Austin that was successful for the Democrats in 1960. But the foundation for such a consensus campaign has been building since 1984.

Party unity has increased markedly among congressional Democrats since the first year of the Reagan administration, when the president could regularly count on enough defecting Democrats to enact his conservative programs. This year, "conservative" Democrats voted to require business to give workers 60 days' notice of mass layoffs and "liberal" Democrats agreed that Medicare recipients should finance most of the cost of their own catastrophic health insurance.

As Dukakis says, Democratic governors from Mississippi to Minnesota and from New York to Washington state have found their way to a common agenda emphasizing education and economic development. Many of the programs they have started rely on close cooperation with business and a sharing of costs among government, the private sector and the recipients of benefits.

Still, even with all this progress, there is a widespread recognition that the deepest division — over the shape and the costs of the next stage of the welfare state — could flare into open warfare if Dukakis is elected. The risks have increased, many say, because Jackson has become the de facto leader of the party's left, adding the historically explosive question of race to the issues of budget priorities that split the party in the Jimmy Carter — Ted Kennedy battle of 1980 and contributed to Ronald Reagan's victory that year.

It is not just partisan Democrats who share Dukakis' belief that their party is in substantially better shape coming into Atlanta than it was when it met in San Francisco four years ago or in Madison Square Garden in 1980. Richard Wirthlin, President Reagan's pollster, said, "I think you'll see the most united Democratic convention in some time."

Part of the reason is the efficient, almost bloodless, way in which Dukakis dispatched his rivals for the nomination. And part of it is the fact that Dukakis, as campaign manager Susan Estrich puts it, "bridges many of the differences" that divided Democrats earlier in this decade.

Walter Mondale's devastating defeat forced Democrats of all stripes to admit that their party was in serious trouble. The 1984 loss led to a declaration of war by some of the moderate-conservative elected officials on the interest groups prominent in the Mondale campaign. The Democratic Leadership Council (DLC) was formed by men like Nunn, Robb and Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri to pull the party back to what they called "the mainstream."

They tried to change the dynamics of the presidential nominating process by creating "Super Tuesday," a single-day southern primary big enough to launch a moderate contender into nomination orbit. That scheme misfired when Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, who on March 8 split the Super Tuesday national convention delegates with Dukakis and Jackson, proved unable to win outside the South.

Nonetheless, many agree with Robb's claim that the DLC and its allies "have moved the party in a more centrist direction" — with a lot of help from Kirk and Dukakis, two men they opposed. Early in his tenure, Kirk erased the official status of the Democratic National Committee's gay, women's, black and Hispanic caucuses. Then he urged organized labor not to repeat the early pre-primary endorsement that helped stamp the special-interest label on Mondale.

The greatest threat to the Democrats' fragile unity as the convention opens is the sense, voiced by many of the Jackson delegates here, that the charismatic minister has been exploited by whites and treated with less respect than he is due. Jackson's candidacy has become a national symbol of racial pride and the sensitivities to his treatment are close to the surface. Democrats realize that, as pollster Peter D. Hart said, "Out of this convention you're either going to get the word unity, or you're not. And Jesse Jackson is the person who will decide that."

Though Dukakis has the votes to win here, there is a debt of politics and of conscience he must pay, sooner or later, to the voters Jackson represents. In the last several campaigns, blacks have voted 80 percent or more for the Democratic nominees and contributed about one-fifth of the votes those candidates received. They also happen to be the constituency most directly affected by the cutbacks in domestic spending of the Reagan years.

"There is a huge pent-up demand for services," said former Carter aide Eisenstat, that a President Dukakis would be hard-pressed to meet, given his determination to cut deficits without raising taxes. "Expectations always run ahead of realization," said retiring Senate Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles of Florida.

Tough as it may be, that is a challenge the Democrats here would not mind facing.

The Economy &amp; Democrats: Mainstream Vs. Idealogues

'Like the Detroit Republicans, the Atlanta Democrats are preparing to nominate a presidential candidate firmly committed to straddling the two camps ...'

"What we've got is a recession and recovery that has left the average family and average worker really doing worse," said Faux, president of the Economic Policy Institute, a labor-backed think tank. Democrats should combat Republican boasts about low unemployment by disparaging the quality of the jobs that have been created in the 1980s, Faux asserted.

But Robert D. Reischauer, a mainstream economist at the Brookings Institution who has been advising Dukakis, observed that the figures indicating a decline in Americans' living standards and the quality of U.S. jobs have been challenged by many analysts. And in any case, given the low levels of inflation and unemployment and nearly six years of economic growth, "Democrats aren't going to be able to go out and say things are terrible," Reischauer said. "That might ring true in a few areas, in most parts of the country, it won't resonate."

"But a growing fraction of the American population realizes that this prosperity rests on a house of cards, that we've borrowed from the future, we've borrowed from foreigners," Reischauer continued. The theme that the budget and trade deficits have put America dangerously in hock, he said, must be the focus of the Democrats' attack.

Both economists are, of course, united in their opposition to Reaganomics, but their proposed campaign themes lead in substantially different directions. Implicit in Reischauer's rhetoric is the mainstream economists' admonition that the nation is living beyond its means, consuming and importing too much while producing and exporting too little. Thus the best remedy — painful as it may be — is to cut the budget deficit that is putting too much money in consumers' pockets and contributing to America's import-buying binge.

Faux, chiming in from the left, rejects the notion that pain is necessary. He wants to see the Democrats steer away from what he calls "the austerity trap" by emphasizing that Americans have already suffered. Instead of inflicting austerity, he contends, a Democratic administration should promote the idea of "industrial strategies" that would entail pacts between business, government and labor aimed at keeping high-paying jobs in key industries from succumbing to foreign competition.

Faux speaks for what the National Journal calls "the Democratic supply-siders," those liberals who, in their heart of hearts, believe that federal budget deficits don't really matter. They charge that there is a conspiracy of silence during the campaign about plans by the establishment wings of both parties to impose drastic deficit-reduction measures that would severely depress the living standards of average Americans. They worry that a Democratic president would be especially tempted to prove his fiscal toughness.

"Austerity means fewer resources to meet social needs and presents the threat of recession," said Nancy Barrett, who chairs the economics department at American University. "The national obsession with deficit reduction could block willingness to embark on needed (government) programs," she added.

The leftists say it might be a good idea to raise taxes on the rich, but they vigorously oppose broader-based tax increases and cuts in middle-class programs, arguing that consumers need more money in their pockets rather than less. The way to get business to make needed investments in plants and equipment, they say, is to persuade corporate executives that a booming market exists for their products.

Using rhetoric that could have been penned by any supply-sider, the leftists contend that the economy's potential for higher productivity and faster growth is considerably greater than most mainstream economists believe, and therefore painful choices aren't required about whether to consume less today to save for tomorrow.

Where they disagree with their Republican counterparts, however, is over the methods for enhancing productivity. They believe that more intervention by Washington in the decisions of corporations could reduce "capital wastage," as Faux calls it.

"We need national strategies for developing strategic sectors like telecommunications and semiconductors," Faux said, because such industries provide benefits for the whole economy in the form of technological spillover. The solution, he said, is to strike "deals between government and industry and labor," using protection from imports as an incentive for industries to modernize.

As the Democratic Party gathers for its quadrennial national convention, a debate rages quietly in the backrooms and policy shops over the issue that will probably determine the election — the economy.

On the one side are the mainstream economists from academia and Wall Street who insist all will be well if only the federal budget deficit is brought under control.

And on the other are the upstarts, ideologues firm in their conviction that the party will never recapture the White House by offering a prescription of economic pain and austerity. With the right blend of policies to promote investment and job creation, they argue, the country can literally grow its way out of any economic problems.

This description of the Democratic Party as it gathers this week in Atlanta is strikingly — almost eerily — reminiscent of the fight that pitted orthodox conservatives against supply-siders when the Republicans gathered in Detroit eight years ago. And like the Detroit Republicans, the Atlanta Democrats are preparing to nominate a presidential candidate firmly committed to straddling the two camps, determined to campaign on both economic platforms and leave unresolved the fundamental debate within his party.

A political urgency attaches to the Democrats' efforts to recapture the "economic issue" in 1988. Ever since the New Deal — through most of the recession-prone '50s, the go-go '60s, and the inflation-torn '70s — voters surveyed by the Gallup organization said that the Democrats were more likely than Republicans to keep the economy prosperous.

But by 1984, that advantage had been lost as the Reagan recovery gained strength. For the first time since Gallup had started asking the question 33 years earlier, the Republican party was entering a presidential election year seen by the voters as the better manager of the economy.

This year, the Gallup poll shows the Democrats pulling nearly even, but the party may have to do better. Since 1960, the party that held a significant lead as the "party of prosperity" in Gallup's pre-convention surveys won the White House in November. In years when the two parties were perceived as roughly equal in their ability to generate prosperity — in 1968, 1972 and 1980 — the Republicans won.

So how can the Democrats regain the edge?

Jeff Faux, a leader of the liberal faction, says Democrats should focus on statistics showing that median family income has been roughly stagnant since 1980 while wages have fallen behind inflation.

— George C. Wilson —

Gulf Escorts: An Open-Ended Commitment Amid Deficiencies

WASHINGTON — One year after it began escorting Kuwaiti tankers through the Persian Gulf, the United States seems stuck with an open-ended commitment to protect the waterway without the kind of ships and aircraft the U.S. commander says he needs most to curb the tanker war.

Since November 1985, Marine Gen. George B. Crist, as head of the U.S. Central Command, has had the mission of asserting the right of navigation in the Persian Gulf and, more recently, protecting tankers flying a U.S. or friendly flag. The U.S. Navy began escorting reflagged Kuwaiti tankers last July 22 — a year ago this week.

During Crist's tour, the United States has increased its presence in the region from 2,000 to 15,000 military personnel and from six Navy ships to 27, including aircraft carriers and high-technology Aegis cruisers such as the USS Vincennes, which mistakenly shot down an Iran Air A-300 Airbus carrying 290 people July 3.

This greatly increased military presence has not resulted in less violence at sea — attacks on merchant shipping continue to increase — but has demonstrated a U.S. commitment to keep the strategic waterway open with little help from the Soviet Union, according to statistics and military leaders.

However, military leaders who a few months ago were drafting plans to reduce the number of ships in the gulf said they have been ordered to shelve those proposals. This confronts the next president with an open-ended commitment to a big military presence in the gulf unless the Iran-Iraq war ends, allied nations take over more of the policing role or the United States accepts the Soviet idea of relying on a U.N. naval force to protect shipping.

Crist told the House Appropriations defense subcommittee in February in secret testimony just released that "we are the big winners now in the gulf," but his view is not universal within the military, far less Congress. One of the next president's early decisions will involve which military advice to heed.

"I think when the (frigate USS) Stark was hit," Crist told the subcommittee, "they expected us to leave the gulf. When (the reflagged Kuwaiti supertanker) Bridgeton got hit (by a mine on July 24, 1987), it was not really a big thing, but it became a big thing to the United States. I don't think anyone in the Arab world thought we would stay the course. I think they wanted us to, but I don't think they were completely convinced we would do so. As a result, we are the big winners now in the gulf."

"I'm getting tired of wearing out our Navy to protect other nations' oil," said another military leader who declined to be quoted by name. "We're already hurting. We've had to put off ship overhauls; taken a carrier out of the Med (Mediterranean) when we're supposed to have two there under our NATO commitments. We've already reduced our commitments elsewhere to do the gulf mission. How come we have to keep 30 ships in the gulf when the Russians do their escorting with a couple of mine sweepers?"

Then-Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger justified the nation's gulf-policeman role in Cold War terms, telling the House Foreign Affairs Committee on June 10, 1987: "We simply cannot allow the Kremlin to have its will over this region."

Political views aside, experience in the gulf over the past year has demonstrated that U.S. forces have gaps in fighting little, or "low intensity," conflicts as distinguished from big, "high intensity" wars. Crist found that the Navy had high-tech Aegis cruisers such as the Vincennes to keep track of high-intensity threats like Iran's anti-ship missiles and F-4 and F-14 fighter planes, but not the high-speed patrol boats needed to combat hit-and-run attacks on tankers by gunboats operated by Iran's Revolutionary Guards.

In comments bound to fuel arguments over whether the Pentagon is buying the right kinds of weapons, Crist told the subcommittee: "What we are faced with in the northern part of the gulf is low-intensity conflict at sea. We did not build our boats or ships to fight that kind of war. Even the boats that we built for Vietnam are riverboats, designed for duty in rivers, not open seas."

The four-star commander lamented that the Navy does not have the high-speed patrol boats it needs, declaring that the closest things are the 110-foot vessels Britain built for the U.S. Coast Guard. "They are sturdier, heavier, self-contained and have a capability to handle seas for two and three weeks at a time," Crist said of the Coast Guard cutters. Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci earlier this year rejected the cutters for gulf duty, partly because Congress complained that such a deployment would weaken the campaign against drug smuggling.

Crist also told the subcommittee that when he took over command of U.S. forces in the gulf, "I found to my surprise that we were deficient" in planes and helicopters that could find small boats in the dark and swoop down and sink them.

"We needed small helicopters, attack helicopters, made to kill tanks" to combat the small craft zipping around the gulf, he said. The Navy tried to base them on Navy frigates, but "we hadn't designed the ships for that," he said. The main alternative, which was not described in the declassified version of Crist's secret testimony in February, consists of big floating platforms in the gulf that Army OH-6 helicopters armed with machine guns and 2.75-inch rockets use as airfields.

He conceded the military was caught flat-footed when it came to mine sweepers to clear the channels Iran had mined. But the old wooden-hulled sweepers that were deployed to the region after mines blew up several ships "are performing beautifully," Crist testified. "They are finding the mines and their effort can be sustained," he said, adding that more must be done to upgrade mine-warfare capabilities.

"A lot of these lessons are hitting home," Crist said of U.S. military operations in the gulf. "People are beginning to realize that we need to look more closely at this lower end of the conflict spectrum, that low-intensity conflict is not necessarily just in Latin America."

Statistics compiled by the privately funded Center for Defense Information from government and maritime sources show that attacks on gulf shipping have been steadily increasing despite the rising number of warships sent there by the United States and several NATO nations. The statistics do not indicate, however, whether this escalation stems from changes in the nature of the eight-year Iran-Iraq war or whether it has been provoked in part by U.S. military actions in the gulf.

In the period from July 22, 1986, through July 14, 1987, before the Navy started escorting 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers, Iran attacked 54 commercial ships in the gulf and Iraq 63 for a total of 117 attacks, according to the center. In the nearly one year of escorting Kuwaiti tankers — July 22, 1987, through last Thursday — Iran replaced Iraq as the big attacker, shooting up 105 ships in the gulf compared to 82 for Iraq. The center's assessed total of 187 attacks since the escorts began represents a 60 percent increase over the previous year.

Republican Sens. Ted Stevens, Alaska, Alfonso M. D'Amato, N.Y., and Warren B. Rudman, N.H., after a trip to the Persian Gulf last January, issued a report that said: "U.S. presence in the gulf has far less to do with oil than it does with the politics of the region," declaring that the 11 Kuwaiti tankers the United States is escorting "carry approximately 5 percent of total Kuwaiti export volume."

Last Time

WASHINGTON — When was the last time you saw a national party convention that was full of suspense, drama, personal confrontations and surprises? Maybe in Moscow a couple of weeks ago.

In this country, where everyone has long been free to engage in politics, very few people want to watch the conventions on television.

That's understandable, for the politicians are doing their best to squeeze every last bit of suspense, drama, personal confrontation and surprise out of the Democratic and Republican conventions this year. The Dukakis campaign and, it appears, the Bush campaign are determined that their credentials, rules, platforms and vice-presidential candidates all be determined before anyone gets to Atlanta or New Orleans.

The good news is that they're not likely to succeed completely. Something always happens at the conventions to challenge voters' preconceptions or to confound the planners who have scheduled spontaneous cries of "Four more years!" at precisely 8:43.

Still, the conventions are nowhere near as suspenseful as they were in the days when H. L. Mencken got off his train and searched out the good saloons. In those days, 40 or 50 years ago, politicians commonly did not do business over long-distance telephone calls; they spent most of their days on their correspondence, reading letters and dictating and signing replies. They had no chance to talk face to face and negotiate with each other until they got to the convention city. Not until 1968, when CBS News did the first one, was there anything like a reliable delegate count. The function of determining how many votes candidates had was served in the old days by the first few ballots.

Nowadays politicians have been negotiating with each other for months, at late-night meetings at the Savery Hotel bar and all-day sessions of party-reform commissions. Political information is processed and communicated over telephone wires, fax machines, in the press, through commercial and cable-television broadcasts and in the Presidential Campaign Hotline. Everyone knows how many votes each candidate will have at the convention, so the deals can be, and usually are, negotiated weeks and months in advance.

Yet, the shows are still worth watching. First for what they tell about the views and vision and management skills of the nominee and, incidentally, of other politicians who play a role. And second as a form of ritual. As organized religions and the classic dramatists know, ritual and drama can inspire people even though their course and outcome are known. National conventions may be an antique art form, but they're not extinct.

State Democrats Seeking 'Party Of The People'

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Retired school teacher Elizabeth Jolliff, 74, of Asheville and high school senior Gerald Meek of Fayetteville typify the diversity of North Carolina's delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

The delegation, which party leaders say is a cross-section of the state's majority party, also includes retired Elizabeth City bank executive and former state Sen. Melvin R. Daniels Jr. and Lewis Woods, a coil winder from Catawba County.

"Our delegates come from many walks of life," said Margaret Lawton, party spokeswoman. "They represent many different viewpoints. It reflects what the party is — the party of the people."

Ninety-five voting delegates and 27 alternates from North Carolina were authorized to attend the convention, which gets under way today and concludes Thursday evening. Party officials, delegates' family members, and other observers also made the trip.

Delegates and alternates were selected in a complicated, two-tiered process. Fifty-three delegates were elected at congressional district conventions and another 29 at the state party convention in June.

Of the remaining 13, seven — including Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, the delegation chairman, and state party chairman Jim Van Hecke — are unpledged "super delegates," members of the Democratic National Committee. The other six are members of Congress.

There are 34 delegates pledged to Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., who probably will vote for all-but-certain nominee Michael Dukakis. Another 31 delegates are pledged to Jesse Jackson, while Dukakis won 17 delegates in his own right in the March 8 primary.

One North Carolina delegate who will be in the spotlight Monday is George M. El-Khoury, son of a Lebanese immigrant. A training specialist with the State Bureau of Investigation, El-Khoury is among six delegates from across the nation who will be profiled in a video to be shown at the convention today.

Gladys Graves, past president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, attended her first convention in 1984 in San Francisco. "It's a political growth opportunity," she said.

"After working on the precinct and state level, it's a good experience to see how it all pulls together," she said.

"It's an opportunity to be a part of a historic occasion," said Buck Latimore, a Charlotte businessman. "Politics has been in my blood for years."

Among the delegates are 13 attorneys, nine teachers, six homemakers, three ministers, four realtors, two nurses, two textile workers, two college professors, three small business owners and two town mayors.

There's also a sheriff — Paul R. "Jaybird" McCrary of Davidson County — and there's Clint Newton, a textile worker from Shelby who has attended four previous conventions. Willie Mae Carney, an employee of Burroughs Wellcome Co. from Bethel, said she had received a gubernatorial citation for registering 3,000 Pitt County voters in one year.

"I have continued to register new voters in the afternoons when I get off work, on weekends, holidays," Mrs. Carney said in a biographical statement submitted to the party. "Used vacation days from my job to go to food stamps lines and free food lines to register new voters."

Most delegates have extensive political resumes.

Graham's First

ATLANTA (AP) — Democratic warhorse Jim Graham has seen a lot of politics in his time, but the state agriculture commissioner has never attended a national party convention — until now.

"I've always been so caught up in state races, you know, I felt it was better to let people who didn't get a chance to serve (in office) a chance to go to the convention," Graham said. "But this time, I figured it would balance things to have another statewide officeholder down here."

Graham, who checked into the Lanier Plaza on Sunday wearing his trademark cowboy hat and a belt buckle with a N.C. Cattleman's Association insignia, said he had no fear of getting caught up in convention acrimony.

"I think it'll be like 'Onward Christian Soldiers, marching as to war, one body we,'" Graham said. "We'll all get together."

Hunt: Jobs And Schools Key Issues

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Gov. Jim Hunt, who isn't on the ballot this year, has some advice for old friend Michael Dukakis: Talk schools and jobs if you want to carry the South.

"The issue that has put ... Dukakis ahead in the rest of the country — good jobs at good wages — is the very one that can bring victory in a majority of Southern states," Hunt wrote in an article published Sunday by The Atlanta Journal and Constitution.

Hunt, who was governor from 1977 to 1985, struck up a friendship with Dukakis in the 1970s but sided with Sen. Albert Gore Jr. this year, saying the Tennessee senator was better positioned to boost the Democratic ticket in Southern states.

Defeated in his bid to unseat Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in 1984, Hunt passed up another Senate bid in 1986 but is widely expected to seek a rematch with Helms in 1990.

Observers say his active support of Gore was an effort to ease back into the spotlight, and that he's likely to have a role in Dukakis' campaign despite having opposed the prospective nominee.

"I know he's been consulting with the Dukakis people regularly about issues, about people," said an insider who insisted on anonymity. "I know they're still close, though there may be some Dukakis folks who got their feathers ruffled."

In his newspaper column, Hunt argued that despite rapid growth in the urban South, the region retains large areas of poverty.

"Dukakis can appeal to those hard-pressed Southerners, just as John F. Kennedy did in 1960, with a theme that 'we can do better,'" Hunt wrote. The likely Democratic nominee's record of lowering the jobless rate in Massachusetts and spreading growth to depressed areas "can be a powerful message in this region."

With polls showing Southerners highly concerned about education, Dukakis should follow the strategy used by many Southern governors: linking economic growth and jobs to the quality of schools and colleges, Hunt wrote.

IN THE STATE

Graham Resting

MONTREAT, N.C. (AP) — Billy Graham says he lost 15 pounds after journeys to China and the Soviet Union, but the 69-year-old evangelist will be hitting the road again next month.

Graham will hold crusades in Buffalo, N.Y., in August; Rochester, N.Y., in September; and Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, in October.

Graham's three-week visit to China in April was his first to that country where his wife, Ruth, was born and lived the first 17 years of her life. In June, he visited the Soviet Union for the fourth time, helping to celebrate the 1,000th anniversary of Christianity in that land.

Department of Corrections was elected SCAA vice president during the Charleston meeting.

Relics Found

RALEIGH (AP) — Buttons and bullets left behind by Confederate and Union soldiers in April 1865 were plucked from the soil by treasure hunters determined to salvage some history from the path of progress.

The Civil War relics were found during a weekend dig at the site of the new state Farmers Market site on Lake Wheeler Road, just off Interstate 40 near Dorothea Dix Hospital.

The site, once an encampment for 17,000 troops, looked like any other four-acre field of dirt until the amateur archaeologists began their work after winning state permission to do so.

State officials limited the dig to this weekend after Treasure Quest worked for weeks to gain access to the construction site. State regulations generally restrict private citizens from hunting for artifacts on government lands.

Bush Visit

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Vice President George Bush will visit Charlotte and Greenville, S.C., Thursday in an attempt to draw attention to his Republican candidacy during the middle of the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

"We don't intend to allow the Democrats to have an entire week of news without some activity," said Lanny Griffith, Bush's Southern political director.

Democrats portrayed Bush's campaigning as a sign he is weak in the region, and particularly vulnerable now that Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis has picked a Southerner, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, to be his running mate.

Exam Ordered

DURHAM (AP) — A psychiatric evaluation has been ordered for a Durham man charged in the death of a 21-month-old boy.

The order, signed by Durham County District Court Judge Orlando F. Hudson at the request of defense lawyer James Williams, said Michael DeAngelo Weaver will be committed to Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh for an evaluation lasting up to 60 days.

Weaver, 23, is charged with murder by allegedly grabbing his girlfriend's child and violently shaking him on July 8.

Durham police detectives said the child, Antwyn Wesley, was declared clinically brain-dead July 9 at Duke Hospital and that he subsequently died. The child was taken to the hospital after he collapsed in cardiac arrest.

Johnson Elected

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson was elected president of the Southern Correctional Administrators Association during the organization's meeting Wednesday in Charleston, W.Va.

Johnson, who was elected SCAA vice president during the association's meeting in Raleigh last October, has been serving as acting president since the resignation of President C. Paul Phelps, the secretary of the Louisiana Department of Public Safety and Corrections, earlier this year. Commissioner Packer Evatt of the South Carolina

Escape

DURHAM (AP) — An injured Durham County jail inmate who was taken to a hospital escaped through the bathroom ceiling Saturday after he was asked to produce a urine sample.

Michael L. Lowe, 25, had been arrested on larceny and assault charges. He was taken to Duke Medical Center about noon for treatment of stab wounds he had received earlier in the week, police said.

Lowe was charged with breaking and entering and larceny at a residence June 7, and assault on a female June 18.

Benefit Stroll

RALEIGH (AP) — A small caravan of motorcycles and more than 150 kazoo-playing Triangle residents rolled and strolled their way through downtown Cary on Saturday in a benefit for the Leukemia Society.

The parade was known as a Louie Louie parade. The only song to be played, sung or hummed during the parade was "Louie Louie," a song made popular in 1963 by the Kingsmen.

Li. Gov. Bob Jordan, the "Grand Louie," sat atop a convertible and waved, while residents played their kazoos, clapped and danced to the music during the 1-mile parade.

Those participating gave $10 to the Leukemia Society of North Carolina in exchange for a kazoo and a T-shirt.

National Award

DURHAM (AP) — Officers of the Eno River Association have been invited to the White House to receive a national award for the association's efforts to preserve the river and natural settings along it.

Awards will be presented July 26 on the south lawn of the White House to the association and other national winners of Take Pride in America, a national beautification program. It will be the second annual award presentation by the program.

Four GIs Injured In Bomb Attack

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Four U.S. soldiers were recovering today from wounds sustained when a carload of men hurled bombs and fired guns at a group of off-duty American servicemen in a discotheque parking lot, officials said.

Authorities had no suspects and were "intensively investigating" the attack early Sunday outside the Confetti disco in San Pedro Sula, said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Charles Barclay said no group had claimed responsibility for the attack, which occurred at about 1 a.m. in Honduras' second-largest city.

Barclay, in a telephone interview, said the four soldiers wounded in the attack were hospitalized in satisfactory condition. Embassy officials refused to identify them until their families were notified.

A U.S. official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the wounded men "were out of danger." He did not elaborate.

The soldiers were on leave from Palmerola Air Force Base, 41 miles northeast of the capital of Tegucigalpa, and were in civilian clothes and carrying no weapons at the time of the attack, Barclay said.

"The American soldiers were on a one-day recreation trip to San Pedro Sula," he said.

They were leaving the nightspot's parking lot in a civilian vehicle rented from a Honduran company when the attackers threw small bombs and opened fire from inside another car in the parking lot, U.S. officials said.

The vehicle with the soldiers immediately sped away.

"The attackers threw explosive bombs and shot at them with small-caliber weapons," Barclay said.

In Washington, Pentagon spokeswoman Maj. Kathy Wood said nine soldiers were attacked as they drove out of the discotheque's parking lot. She said there were 10 or 12 attackers.

"I guess if there's a hero in this, it's the driver," Wood said. "He took evasive action. He drove away fast. He did things right." The driver's name was not available.

The Confetti disco is frequented by U.S. military personnel. San Pedro Sula, is 125 miles north of the capital. The injured were taken to a hospital in San Pedro Sula and later flown to Palmerola.

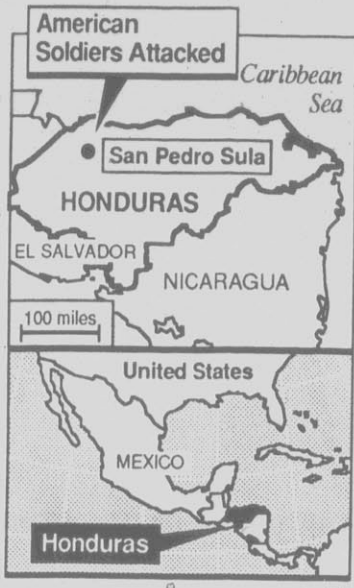

Maj. Wood said about 150 soldiers were on the one-day leave and that all returned to Palmerola as a precautionary measure.

The United States has maintained a varying numbers of American troops in Honduras since the leftist Sandinistas seized power in neighboring Nicaragua in 1979.

At least 30 American troops in Honduras have been killed or wounded in accidents or incidents of violence since the United States began joint military maneuvers with the Honduran military in 1982.

Ten soldiers were injured in a helicopter crash during the deployment of about 1,500 American troops to Honduras in March following a reported incursion by Nicaraguan troops into Honduras.

In August 1987, a pipe bomb exploded at a restaurant in Comayagua, 12 miles north of Palmerola, seriously injuring five U.S. soldiers and six civilians, including one American.

The Honduran military said four suspects picked up in connection with that bombing told them the attack was part of a campaign directed by a "foreign leftist organization."

A wave of anti-American protests broke out in April following the deportation to the United States of a reputed international drug baron.

Juan Ramon Matta, 43, was taken to the United States to face drug trafficking charges and questioning for the 1986 slaying in Mexico of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena.

The Honduran constitution forbids the deportation of Honduran nationals.

Demonstrators burned the U.S. Consulate and U.S. Information Service office in the capital to protest Matta's deportation and the U.S. military presence in Honduras. The violence prompted the government to temporarily impose a state of emergency restricting civil liberties.

U.S. May Be Losing Effort To Reduce Energy Wastes

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen years after the first oil embargo, the U.S. economy has stopped making gains in energy efficiency, according to experts who say the country may be losing ground.

Low prices account for the change, along with the fact the United States uses much more energy in comparison with other countries, analysts say.

The Energy Information Administration has revised 1987 figures to show efficiency unchanged from 1986, Jerry Lagace, an EIA economist, said in an interview Friday.

It's the first time since 1976 that efficiency failed to improve.

Lagace noted that energy efficiency in the economy may have increased for the first quarter of the year over the 1987 quarter, but the 3.5 percent increase "is so large that I don't believe it. This will probably be revised downward."

Gains have been running at about 2.5 percent per year since the mid-1970s; EIA had expected future gains of about 1 percent per year. Preliminary 1987 statistics had indicated a 0.5 percent gain over 1986.

Lagace said further study is needed to pin down reasons. Growing exports of goods that take a lot of energy to produce, such as farm machinery, could be one reason. More driving is another possibility.

Efficiency has been improving throughout the industrial market economies since the 1960s, though the 1973 oil embargo greatly accelerated it. U.S. performance has been strong; some major U.S. competitors have done better.

"Energy is very cheap here," said Art Rosenfeld, director of the Center for Building Science at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory at Berkeley, Calif.

"When you and I were growing up, they flared natural gas, and we built a lot of uninsulated houses because it was cheaper to burn more gas than to add insulation," Rosenfeld said in an interview.

Attitudes change slowly, so "we haven't paid attention to investments that take five, six or seven years to pay back, like the Germans and the Japanese do," Rosenfeld said.

Europe and Japan use high gasoline taxes to raise revenue and hold down consumption, while the United States throughout the 1970s kept gasoline under price controls and required minimum mileage standards for automobiles. Gasoline in Italy last year was quadruple the U.S. price; in Japan triple and in Germany more than double.

Today, the average new U.S. car must get 26 miles per gallon and all cars average 18.9 mpg, 42 percent better than in 1973. The average Italian car gets 30 mpg and in Japan the average is 31 mpg.

If U.S. cars — nevermind trucks and buses — did as well as Italy's, U.S. gasoline consumption in 1986 would have been about 28 billion gallons or 25 percent less.

"Triple the price of gasoline and usage would be cut in half over time," said Mark Ross, a professor of physics at the University of Michigan who is working on energy studies.

Last year's 94.8 cent average price for a gallon of unleaded regular was the lowest ever, after factoring out inflation.

Fuel Leak Slowing Tests Of Discovery's Engines

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's tiny fuel leak has been stopped but not fixed, and officials have decided to test-fire the ship's three main engines before deciding whether to remove the space shuttle from the launch pad for repairs.

While preparing for that crucial July 28 test, engineers will decide if there is a way to fix the difficult-to-reach leak on the pad, whether the leak can be isolated from the fuel system or if it is so insignificant that it does not pose a flight hazard if left as is.

"By draining and purging the line, engineers have stabilized the leak and feel it is safe to proceed with the flight readiness firing," Chuck Hollinshead, director of public affairs at the Kennedy Space Center, said Sunday.

If Discovery has to be rolled back to a hangar, its planned launch as the first post-Challenger shuttle flight would be delayed up to two months. The flight readiness firing of the three engines already has been delayed two days, so even if the shuttle stays on the pad, there likely will be a delay of at least a few days of the Sept. 6 launch target date.

The decision Sunday by shuttle managers came after engineers traced the source of the gas leak to a fitting on a line leading to an oxidizer tank that serves a steering engine system.

The steering engines maneuver the shuttle in orbit and are separate from the main propulsion engines that are to be test fired.

The oxidizer tank is deep within an engine compartment and engineers said the leak probably could not be reached without removing the 22-foot-high compartment, a very complex operation never before done on the launch pad.

By going ahead with the test firing, shuttle managers hope to minimize lost time if Discovery has to be taken off the pad. Engineers have completed two weeks of preparation for the test, operations they would have to repeat if the firing were conducted after the shuttle was taken back to the hangar and then returned to the pad.

The flight readiness firing will check engine modifications made since the Challenger explosion and provide the launch team with valuable launch countdown practice.

Discovery is being prepared for the first shuttle mission since Challenger exploded 73 seconds after liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986, killing its crew of seven.

The flight originally was scheduled for February but has been postponed five times because of various technical problems.

Five veteran shuttle crew members are to ride Discovery on a four-day mission during which they are to deploy a communications satellite, conduct experiments and check out more than 200 modifications made since the Challenger accident.

Bus Lines Showing Signs Of Recovery

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Despite foreboding, bus czar Fred G. Currey and his investor groups sank millions last year into rebuilding the declining bus industry over the long haul.

They bought Greyhound Lines in March 1987 and few months later acquired Trailways Inc., forming the largest inter-city bus company in the nation.

Now, the merger has received the blessing of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the bus lines boast increased ridership after five years of decline.

"We know there are some things wrong with the system but ... we're dedicated to bringing the system back," said Currey, a former Trailways director.

But Currey's venture to make the bus a formidable transportation force hasn't been a smooth ride so far. He relates it as a good news, bad news story.

After slashing fares as much as 50 percent and unleashing the biggest advertising blitz in years by either bus line, Greyhound's ridership surged.

The bad news is the bus company wasn't prepared, Currey said.

Terminals were packed, ticket lines were long, luggage and packages were lost and buses were delayed.

"We had a lot of service deficiencies and we had (them) because we were putting together the two largest bus companies in the nation," he said.

Although he is optimistic the company can overcome its problems, Currey acknowledges the only way the bus can make a comeback is by improving long-deteriorating quality.

His plans to refuel the bus lines include faster ticketing, refurbished and secure terminals, computerized routing, airline-competitive prices and all-around upgraded service.

"We have a fundamental belief in the viability of the business and that really is in sharp contrast with the attitude that the previous owners had about the industry and the business," Currey said.

GLI Holding Co. Inc., an investor group led by Currey, acquired Greyhound Lines for $350 million.

The acquisition occurred amid declining ridership and labor disputes between union members and Phoenix-based Greyhound Corp.

Trailways Inc. was on the brink of collapse when another Currey group, GLI Acquisition Inc., spent $80 million to buy some of its fleet, garages and terminals in July 1987.

Despite ICC misgivings that merging the two companies could violate antitrust laws, the buyouts were given temporary approval and on May 17 the merger was endorsed.

"A company like Greyhound faces significant competition," said Michael Redisch, chief of research and analysis in the ICC's office of Transportation Analysis.

"Buses are the people's last choice. If the airline won't go there and it's too far to drive, the bus is the last choice. The bus is also hurt by driving and the growth of the automobile," Redisch said.

"It's a hard way to make a living."

Go Casual To Concert

By J.D. CONSIDINE
L.A. News-Washington
News Service

For those who don't follow the music so closely, though, figuring out what to wear to a particular concert can be a real puzzler. So put down that copy of "Dress for Success," and get ready to dress for INXS.

Unless, that is, you're planning on restricting yourself to the biggest of the big, those rock acts whose popularity is so vast it acts as a sort of great equalizer. For the most part, concerts by mainstream rockers — we're talking the likes of Heart, John Cougar Mellencamp, Tina Turner or Billy Joel here — are come-as-you-are affairs, with most of the fans relying on the same sort of casual clothes they'd wear to the mall.

And why not? Some stars, like Ms. Turner or Elton John, may sport elaborate costumes onstage, but it's a self-consciously showy look, obviously nothing the performers would wear anyplace else; as for such singers as Mellencamp or Joel, they're usually dressed with the same lack of care as their fans.

Sometimes, that lack of style is part of a star's allure — surely that's the case with Tiffany, a pop idol who looks so much like a typical mall rat that her jeans-sneakers-sweat shirt look has almost completely won over the ranks of former Madonna wanna-be's.

Still, there's no elan to being a mainstream rock fan, none of the special sense of belonging that goes with styles like punk, rap, heavy metal or glam-rock.

Punk is perhaps the most famous of these looks, in part because its vocabulary of spikes and studs, rips and tears was absorbed by such fashion designers as Vivienne Westwood, but mostly because punk was so eye-catchingly radical.

That was almost a dozen years ago, though, and what shocked then seems dated, almost quaint now. Although there are those who continue to dress in vintage punk style, they're anachronisms, throwbacks like the duck-tailed greasers who occasionally crop up at oldies shows.

Real punk rockers have long since moved on. "Clothes, to me, are a joke, a fabulous farce," said one-time Sex Pistol Johnny Rotten recently. Most observers, he said, misunderstood the intent of the punk look. "In particular, I think the British press misunderstood. They'd give you a cliché 'What a Punk Looks Like' article. 'What Every Punk Should Wear.' It's not about that at all." What it's about, he says, is expressing yourself as an individual.

Rotten's comments to the contrary, there are still some basic dress codes for punks and punkettes. Naturally, it helps if you know whether the punk you prefer is regular or hard-core. Hard-core, which is harder, faster and performed by bands with names like Dag Nasty, Suicidal Tendencies and Corrosion of Conformity, goes for a brutally simple look, with short hair, T-shirts, jeans and heavy work boots, and sometimes a plaid lumberjack shirt tied by the sleeves around the waist.

Regular punk, by contrast, insists on a more elaborate look. Pallor, for instance, remains very big for both sexes, with that cadaverous look emphasized by heavy black eye-liner and white, grey or black lipstick. Hair no longer comes in day-glo shades, sticking instead with either basic black or blond bleached almost to platinum, and usually cut in a variety of spiky shag.

Forget safety pins and shredded clothes — that went out with Sid Vicious. Instead, the look owes more to punk diva Siouxsie Sioux, with layers of oversized, second-hand clothes accented by buttons, badges and the odd piece of jewelry. Black — of course — is the preferred color, but a good, drab grey or dingy white will do in a pinch. And boots remain the punk's best all-purpose footwear.

And, lest we forget, there's still the semi-punk look that Billy Idol popularized, which blends equal parts Johnny Rotten menace and "Road Warrior" swagger into a colorful, leather-accented look that makes better use of crucifixes than anything since middle-period Madonna.

Heavy metalers, by and large, are pretty much the kind of rock 'n' roll fans your mom wouldn't want you to hang around with — with their long hair, loud music and fondness for grim, stylized images of violence, they seem to most outsiders to be locked into a perpetual cycle of adolescent rebellion.

A typical heavy metal band, like the Scorpions, Judas Priest or Iron Maiden, usually hits the stage all decked out in Spandex and black leather, with enough shiny chrome studs to seem like some sort of mythical warrior cult. Indeed, many heavy metal outfits would have looked very much at home on the set of "Conan the Barbarian."

Even so, not all heavy metalists are partial to that look.

Couple Marries Sunday Afternoon

Mary Lou Diener and Terry Michael Dawes, both of Asheboro, were united in marriage Sunday at 4 p.m. in Hollywood Presbyterian Church near Greenville. Dr. Matthew McGowan, uncle of the bride, conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Joseph Diener of Greenville are parents of the bride. Parents of the bridegroom are Amarylis Goff Dawes of Rocky Mount and the late Alfred Ray Dawes.

Organist Carey Carlin and soloist Susie Pair presented music for the ceremony. Selections included "The Song of Ruth," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The matron of honor was Vickie Diener Riddle, sister of the bride, of Grimesland. Bridesmaids were Karen Dawes, sister of the bridegroom, of Raleigh, Catherine Brothers of La Grange, Vicky Raymond of Pittsboro, Lisa Spruill of Greenville, and Abbie Young of Raleigh.

Alfred Dawes, brother of the bridegroom, of Raleigh was the best man. Ushers were Robert Barbour of Greenville, David Diener, brother of the bride, of Chapel Hill, Terry Downing of Jacksonville, and Hugh Owens of Fayetteville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of rustle taffeta and re-embroidered Alencon lace. It featured a modified sweetheart neckline, double puff sleeves, and a basque waistline and extended into a chapel-length train. She wore a Juliet cap of matching Alencon lace, seed pearls, and illusion.

The matron of honor and bridesmaids wore dresses of a pastel floral print taffeta. The dresses were styled with puff sleeves and the waistlines were accented by matching cummerbands. Each carried a basket of mixed spring flowers.

Following the wedding ceremony, a reception was held in the American Legion Hall. Jan Calloway presided at the register. Estelle Sutton and Mrs. M.L. Hardee poured punch. Mable Evans, Dora Craft, Sally Schurrur, and Elsie Evans assisted in serving cake. Greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rouse and Mr. and Mrs. Elsie Evans. Rachel Riddle, niece of the bride, of Grimesland, distributed rice bags.

Following a wedding trip to London, England, and Edinburgh, Scotland, the couple will reside in Asheboro.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University and received her master's degree from Campbell University. The bridegroom graduated from Lenoir Community College.

The bride is employed as a counselor of elementary school-aged children in the Asheboro City Schools. The bridegroom is employed by Automatic Vending Service of Asheboro.

Father Doesn't Communicate

DEAR ABBY: I know this will be too late for Father's Day, but I had to write. You advised us to write a letter to our fathers telling them how much we appreciate them, and why. Well, what do you do when your father does not speak to you or acknowledge your letters?

Ever since I made the choice to move in with my boyfriend, my father has not spoken to me. I have written to him, but my letters have not been answered. I (and my boyfriend) have tried to talk to him. He refuses to speak to either of us.

We intend to get married next year. If our financial situation is such that we can afford a small wedding, we will have one. If not, we will drive to some small chapel and get married.

It hurts me to know that my father cannot even give me his best wishes. I know he thinks my move was a stupid one, but I have never been happier. — FEELING FATHERLESS

DEAR FEELING: How old are you? Are you self-supporting? How old is your boyfriend? Is he self-supporting? If you are both of legal age and are self-supporting, I would say that a pair of adults are responsible only to themselves for their actions.

Collection Highlights All Classes

By ALEX DOMINGUEZ
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Researchers at the University of Mississippi are hoping a collection of as many as 30,000 photographs dating back a century will highlight a lesser-known side of black life in the Deep South.

"We're not talking about simply showing poor blacks and working blacks in the Delta," said Elizabeth Boyd, one of the project coordinators. "We want to also show middle-class black life in the '20s and '30s. It did exist, even in Mississippi, although most people don't know it."

The three-year project is a collaboration of the University of Mississippi's Center for the Study of Southern Culture, the Center for Documentary Photography at Duke University, and the Department of Mass Communications at Jackson State University.

Duke University is providing funding for collecting work this summer being performed by photographer Robert T. Jones, a native Mississippian and staff photographer for the Center for Southern Folklore in Memphis, Tenn. Jones began research about three weeks ago in Holly Springs and plans visits to Jackson and the Mississippi Delta later this summer.

"We will examine each picture as historical evidence," said William Ferris, director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture. "They will be intimate and candid, and will provide important new information about daily life for blacks — family events, social customs, landscape, leisure activities, religious beliefs and work."

"Things blacks themselves might have taken for granted or simply not emphasized in other historical sources."

Jones, who began collecting over a month ago, said he is not looking for strictly professional photographs. In fact, he is hoping to uncover quite a few photos by amateurs showing how blacks actually lived.

"We're looking to get the whole strata," Jones said. "Working around your house, getting married, going to dinner."

Jones and Boyd are contacting colleges, churches and institutions in towns where Jones will visit to uncover what the project hopes will items I can't eat — raw carrots and nuts.

I'm a lousy cook and a worse housekeeper, but Abe never complains. He takes me out for dinner every night and says he doesn't care how I look, as long as I feel good. — TILLIE SCHIFF, DELRAY BEACH, FLA.

DEAR TILLIE: Count your blessings, by gum!

CONFIDENTIAL TO GETTING INVOLVED IN GLOUCESTER, MASS.: Nobody said it better than Cheryl Lavin and Laura Kavesh, co-authors of a wonderful little book, "Tales From the Front": "Don't be the first one in a divorced man's post-divorce life. They cry on your shoulder, you provide hours of free therapy, you patch them up, and when they're all better, they say thanks and off they go to someone not associated with all the pain."

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling included).

total 30,000 photos. Boyd said all photographs will be copied on site by the visiting field workers and contributors will not be asked to give up their originals.

"Beauty parlors have turned out to be one of the best places," Jones said. "In most families women keep the photo albums, so I usually put up a flyer in a beauty parlor."

Duke has provided funding for Jones to work through this summer and part time this fall. The project's coordinator's hope to attract enough funding to hire two more field workers to work full time collecting photographs.

Mississippi is the ideal state for a project of this nature for several reasons, organizers said. Mississippi has the highest per capita population of blacks nationwide at 38 percent with blacks in the majority in 22 of the state's 82 counties according to the 1980 census.

"We feel once we have this summer's collection people will realize how important this is to the state," Boyd said.

A DIRTY MIND?...

When does it pay to be dirt-minded?... When you're a professional cleaner, of course! That's because if you don't know how dirt (let's call it "soil") gets into carpet, you're hardly in position to know how to get it out!

Proctor and Gamble Labs did the carpet cleaning industry a great service a few years ago when they analyzed soiled carpet samples from throughout the U.S. The average sample consisted of 55% particle soil (sand, quartz, clay, carbon, gypsum, limestone), which has an abrasive effect on delicate carpet fibers. This tracked soil collects in entry areas and must—repeat, must!—receive special attention during cleaning; otherwise, your carpet investment's life is cut in half...literally! Next, 12% of the carpet soil sample consisted of animal fiber. An interesting fact gleaned from dermatologists suggests that the average person sheds about 300 hairs per day. If not removed frequently, this soil can produce a "harried" situation (I couldn't resist!) for the homeowner. Another 12% of the sample consisted of cellulose matter, not only in the form of tracked-in grass and leaf fragments from outside, but also cellulose fiber shed from clothing, fabric furnishings, newspapers, magazines, etc.

"Well," you say, "I'll just buy a good vacuum and eliminate the need for cleaning!" Hang on a minute; we're not quite through...

Six percent of the sample consisted of gummy soils (sugars, starches, salts), which bind themselves and some of the particle soil to fiber surfaces. Ten percent consists of oils and tar-like substances, which also bind themselves and particle soils to fibers. If not routinely removed, these soils create a yellowed, dingy appearance in traffic areas, and, due to the abrasive particle soil they hold to the fiber, carpet life is halved.

The more the professional cleaner knows about dirt, the better a job he can do for his customers. In so doing, he adds years of life and increased beauty to their carpet investment.

Allen
 Mr. Edwin Gage Allen, 88, died Sunday in Greenville Villa.

A memorial service will be conducted Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Caswell Shaw.

A native of New York, Mr. Allen moved to Greenville from Lakeland, Fla., in May. While living in Lakeland, he served on the Young Men's Christian Association Board of Directors and was instrumental in raising funds for a new facility. He was a member of St. James United Methodist Church and was a mason.

Surviving are his wife, Martha Shepler Allen; three stepdaughters, Kay Clemens of Greenville, Eileen Pomer of Logan, Ohio, and Helen Moon of Chardon, Ohio, 11 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to St. James United Methodist Church, 2000 E. Sixth St., Greenville.

The family will receive friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Clemons, 1701 Sulgrave Road, Greenville, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Artis
 FARMVILLE — Mrs. Mildred Fox Artis died Sunday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Arrangements will be announced by Joyner's Mortuary of Farmville.

Congleton
 A funeral service for Mrs. Nina Short Congleton, of 1301 W. Third Street, will be conducted Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the St. John Baptist Church in Stokes by the Rev. M.A. Reddick. Burial will follow in the Home-stead Memorial Gardens.

Surviving are five daughters, Maggie Killebrew of Brooklyn, N.Y., Margaret Adams of Landover, Md., and Nina Congleton, Elaine Congleton, and Ethel Tyson, all of Newark, N.J.; one son, Willie Congleton of Robersonville; three brothers; Willie Short and Jasper Short, both of Portsmouth, Va., and Ernest Short of Salisbury, N.C., 24 grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today at the St. John Baptist Church. Arrangements are being handled by Congleton Funeral Home in Robersonville.

Kittrell
 Mrs. Ruth Sermons Kittrell, 89, died Saturday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Her funeral will be conducted Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by Elder Joe Sawyer. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mrs. Kittrell, a native of Pitt County, lived all her life on Old Home County Road. She was a member of the Red Banks Primitive Baptist Church.

Surviving are a son, Linwood Kittrell of Greenville, five grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today and at other times will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Kittrell, Route 13, Box 677, Greenville.

An intersection near the shop was littered with glass shards that an officer, who would not give his name, said was connected with the shootings. The officer said the gunman apparently took "pot luck," shooting at whatever cars came by him.

Mandela Turns 70

 Mandela's wife, Winnie, flashed on a giant video screen. In a taped message, she expressed thanks "to the entire international community" for seeking her husband's release.

Among dozens of government leaders who sent birthday messages to Mandela was Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"It distresses one to realize that you mark the birthday in a prison dungeon into which you were thrown by the racists more than a quarter of a century ago," Gorbachev said in a telegram Sunday.

In Toronto, thousands rallied on the grounds of the Ontario legislature to mark occasion and in Montreal, about 600 people gathered in Nelson Mandela Park to dance and listen to music and speeches.

In France, campaigners planned to blow out 70 candles outside Notre Dame Cathedral in central Paris, and President Francois Mitterrand said he was appealing again for Mandela's release.

Foreign ministers of Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Norway congratulated Mandela in a joint statement, saying:

"It is a token of the brutality of the apartheid system that you have had to spend more than a third of those 70 years in prison."

King Juan Carlos of Spain cabled Mandela, expressing hope that Mandela would soon be free "to continue your public activities in democracy and freedom."

The Belgium-based International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, the world's largest non-communist trade union group, demanded Mandela's immediate and unconditional release.

North Korea and Czechoslovakia both announced they were awarding medals to the black leader, and Hungarian state television scheduled a 10-hour concert in his honor.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres cabled greetings to Mandela while a dozen Israelis demonstrated at Ben-Gurion Airport, where the new South African ambassador to Israel, Johan Viljoen, was arriving.

Jordan met separately Sunday with groups of delegates committed to Michael Dukakis, Jesse Jackson and Albert Gore Jr. He offered to do what he could to smooth relations between the camps as negotiations between the candidates continue, said state Sen. Russell Walker, a Dukakis co-chairman.

"He's working hard for unity," Walker said. "I really feel like he's one who can help mediate and avoid any blowup."

Karen Garr, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, praised Jordan's activism. "It's gutsy," she said. "He's our party leader and he's going to be our governor, so he's got to be able to unify people sometime."

U.S. Rep. Martin Lancaster said he expected Jackson and Dukakis to resolve their differences by the convention's end, thereby vindicating Jordan's strategy. With Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as his running mate, Dukakis will be far more welcome in North Carolina than was Walter Mondale in 1984, Lancaster said.

Iran Accepts Plan

tance of the cease-fire, said it had been portrayed as "war-mongering Muslims before world public opinion."

The statement said the cease-fire acceptance was part of a strategy of defending the Islamic Revolution that toppled the government of Shah Reza Pahlavi in 1979. It said the Iranian position should not be interpreted as caving in to pressure from the United States and Iraq.

In the past three months, Iraq has recaptured nearly all the territory it lost to Iran over the past six years. There has been no official casualty toll in the war, but foreign analysts put it at more than 1 million.

One of the conditions for the U.N. cease-fire was that both countries return to their borders at the time the war started in 1980. The resolution also calls for an exchange of prisoners and determination of who was responsible for starting the war.

Iran had demanded that Iraq be labeled the aggressor before it accepted the resolution, and it claimed in its announcement today that Iraq had initially violated Iran's territory.

In addition to its battlefield defeats, the Tehran government has found it increasingly difficult to recruit soldiers and keep its economy afloat.

In April, the Iraqis began recapturing territory lost to Iran and claim they have since seized about 133 strategic heights in the northern region of the 730-mile long front.

They also launched assaults in the south that recaptured the southern Faw peninsula in April and the Shalamchek and Majnoon islands in May and June.

The war has prompted a heightened U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf.

Last year, the U.S. Navy began escorting 11 Kuwaiti tankers that had been reflagged with the Stars and Stripes. The Navy later expanded its protection to neutral commercial vessels that requested help after coming under attack.

On July 3, the cruiser USS Vincennes mistook an Iranian jetliner for a warplane and shot it down, killing all 290 people aboard.

In May 1987, Iraqi aircraft fired missiles at USS Stark, killing 37 American servicemen. Iraq said the attack was a mistake and apologized.

Iran sought a Security Council emergency hearing on the airliner attack and during debate last week, but the council has so far refused to condemn the United States for the attack.

During the debate, nation after nation on the 15-member council urged Iran to accept the cease-fire resolution. Those nations included the Soviet Union, Britain, France, China, Japan and West Germany.

Price Wants Some Revenge

LYTHAM, England (AP) — Nick Faldo, Seve Ballesteros and Sandy Lyle all have won the British Open at least once.

Nick Price thought he had joined that group six years ago, but the dream vanished six holes too soon. Now, he said, that disappointment would help him in a final-round battle of champions, real and imagined.

"I've got more to prove. They've all won before," Price said Sunday after stretching his lead to two strokes at 7-under-par 206 going into the final 18 holes at Royal Lytham and St. Annes Golf Club.

Faldo, the defending champion, and Ballesteros, a two-time winner who took his first major title here in 1979, are tied for second at 208, with Lyle, the 1985 champion, another stroke back.

Those four were the last golfers scheduled to tee off in today's final round, the first time in 117 editions that the sport's oldest tournament has ended on a Monday. The schedule was pushed back one day after rain washed out Saturday's play.

American hopes of winning a first British Open since 1983 were fading rapidly. Larry Nelson, Don Pooley and Andy Bean were tied with Eduardo Romero of Argentina for fifth, but at 212 were distant challengers.

Price, a Zimbabwean who has applied for resident status in the United States and plays on the American PGA Tour, knows what it feels like to contest for the Open title late on the last day.

In 1982, at Troon, he led the field by three strokes going to the 13th tee. He wound up second, dropping four strokes including a double bogey, as Tom Watson won the fourth of his five open titles.

"Going down number 13, I was totally sure I was going to win the open," he said. "This game humbled me in 1982."

That failure as a 25-year-old has haunted Price, who hasn't won a tournament at all since 1985. He said he was ready to exorcise the ghosts of Troon.

"I can't guarantee that it won't happen again," he said. "But that experience has made me a tougher competitor and it's helped expand my game."

Faldo, Ballesteros and Lyle all are certified stars and all are having good years. Lyle won the Masters; Faldo lost the U.S. Open in a playoff; Ballesteros has won tournaments on both sides of the Atlantic.

All have played well in this tournament, braving high winds and rain off the Irish Sea. They trail Price but, as Ballesteros said, the first three rounds are different than the fourth.

"He was pressured, but the real pressure is not on the third day," the winner of four major championships said. "The pressure comes on that backside tomorrow. That's when the mistakes will come."

Lyle was more blunt. "No chance," the Scotsman said of Price's odds. "I think he is going to feel the pressure a lot. ... He has nothing to lose, but he still has to win."

Price acknowledged as much. "Tomorrow's the day," he said. "The back nine of any major championship is what counts. You have to play well the first 63 holes to get there, but that's where it counts."

Price did not back into the 54-hole lead. He earned it. After Ballesteros shot an opening-day 67 in horrendous conditions,

Fellow Racers Are Thinking Of Allison

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Interest in Bobby Allison's health has intensified in recent days as NASCAR Winston Cup teams prepare to make their second visit of the season to the track where the veteran driver almost died in a crash last month.

Several top competitors have indicated that returning to the Pocono, Pa., track will be especially hard because they'll be thinking about Allison during the running of this weekend's AC Dpark Plug 500.

"It's hard for me to put Bobby out of my mind," said three-time Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, who had sizzling runs with Allison for the title on four occasions. "I dwell on how he's doing when I'm away from the track."

"We had our troubles between us, but that was a long time ago," Richard Petty told The Charlotte Observer. "I've been missing Bobby because with him out I haven't had anybody to argue with. But I know all of us are going to be thinking of him, specifically when we run this time at Pocono."

Meanwhile, members of Allison's family said they "fully expect" the injured star to resume his stock car racing career if he wishes.

"There is no reason to expect anything else," Tom Kincaid, Allison's brother-in-law, said. "We anticipate a 100 percent recovery."

"However, we're not venturing a guess when it will be that Bobby will drive again. No one can."

Kincaid spoke after a Thursday visit with Allison, 50, at the Lehigh Valley Medical Center in Allentown, Pa., where Allison has been hospitalized since a crash June 19 at the Miller 500 at Pocono.

A spokesperson for Allison's Stavola Brothers team said the operation is "working on the assumption that Bobby probably won't be back in 1988," and is planning on Mike Alexander driving the No. 12 Buick the rest of the season "or until Allison is ready."

Alexander, the NASCAR Busch Series Grand National (sportsman) points leader, has filled in for Allison in the two races since the Pocono accident.

"Bobby started physical therapy Thursday, and he had another session Friday," said Kincaid, who is married to Allison's sister, Cindy. "We're not sure what is involved ... not even Judy (Allison's wife) or Davey (his son, who is also a Winston Cup driver) have been in to watch the procedure during the therapy."

"But I can tell everyone that has been so wonderful in caring about Bobby that his doctors are absolutely excited about his progress."

Allison was the 1983 Winston Cup champion and is third on NASCAR's all-time victory list with 84 triumphs, trailing only Petty with 200 and David Pearson with 105. He has been the circuit's most popular driver six times. He won the sport's biggest race, the Daytona 500, in February, extending his superlative as the oldest Winston Cup victor.

Allison suffered contusions of the brain, a broken shoulder, broken ribs, abdominal trauma and a broken leg in the accident, which occurred after a faulty tire blew out. He lapsed in and out of consciousness and was on the critical list for several days. He remains in guarded condition.

Americans Continue To Falter

LYTHAM, England (AP) — Hubert Green didn't get mad. He didn't get even, either.

And that's the problem with the taunted, goaded Americans in the 117th British Open Golf Championship.

They've been angered — privately, quietly, and not for publication — but they haven't been able to do much about it.

They were back among the also-rans going into today's rain-delayed final round of the oldest of all the world's golf tournaments.

"There are four great players there" in the struggle for the title, Nick Faldo said.

They are a soft-spoken man from Zimbabwe, a Scot, a Spaniard and an Englishman.

No Americans. None within six strokes.

Just as Tony Jacklin predicted. In a pre-tournament appraisal, the European Ryder Cup captain was asked if an American could win this title, something that hasn't happened since 1983.

"I can't see beyond a European victory," Jacklin replied. "We're better than they are now."

Generally, the American players declined comment.

"I'm going to let my golf clubs do the talking," U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange said the day before play started.

The voice has been pretty soft since then, however.

Strange shot a 79 in the first round, and even two consecutive 2-under-par 69s couldn't pull him into contention.

Privately, the Americans were upset by Jacklin's remarks.

"I can't believe he said that," said one American star, who asked that his name not be used.

"How long has he been talking like that?"

Well, at least since last year, when the Europeans — under Jacklin — scored their second consecutive Ryder Cup victory and the first ever on American soil.

The Europeans, for decades the have-not golfing cousins to the world-dominant Americans, saw that victory as a confirmation of the swing in fortunes.

It started with Sandy Lyle's 1985 British Open triumph. It was fed by Faldo's win in this tournament a year ago, by Ian Woosnam's domination of world golf last year, by the Ryder Cup and, a few months ago, by Lyle's victory in the Masters.

"We're better than they are," Jacklin said.

The Americans have failed to respond.

Green may have had a chance. The 41-year-old veteran, a former winner of the U.S. Open and PGA, put on a brilliant display Saturday with birdies on five of the first seven holes at the Royal Lytham and St. Annes Golf Club. That lifted him to within five strokes of the lead.

But play was halted by steady rain. Eventually, the sponsoring Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews declared the day's play abandoned. And the R and A further ruled that all partial scores were wiped out. Erased from the record books.

All scores reverted to 36-hole totals.

Green lost five birdies. From five off the lead, he went back to 10 behind.

"That's golf," Green said.

Karen Green had a stronger reaction.

"I was mad," she said of what happened to her husband. "I stamped my foot and threw a temper tantrum."

Griffith Joyner's Record Highlights Olympic Trials

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Two years ago, Florence Griffith Joyner was an overweight secretary. Now, she's the fastest woman in the world.

Griffith Joyner set a world record of 10.49 seconds, in winning a qualifying heat Saturday at the U.S. Olympic Trials, then showed it was no fluke by beating the previous record-holder, Evelyn Ashford, in the semifinals and the final on Sunday.

Carl Lewis, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Edwin Moses, Willie Banks and Mary Decker Slaney also gave fans at the Indiana University Track and Field Stadium visions of Olympic gold with weekend victories.

But it was Griffith Joyner who stole the show.

Prior to her record-setting run, she posted a wind-aided 10.60 that was below the existing world record of 10.76 set by Ashford in Switzerland shortly after winning an Olympic gold for the United States.

There was controversy over her world-record performance, because the wind gauge showed an uncharacteristic 0.00 reading. At the same time, the wind reading at the triple jump area was over the allowable 2.0 meters per second for record consideration.

But she laid to rest any doubts that she was a world-class sprinter Sunday by winning her semifinal heat in 10.70 and taking the final in 10.61, with Ashford finishing second in both races.

"I don't think Florence's performance Saturday makes things easier on the rest of us," said Gwen Torrence, who also earned a trip to Seoul by placing third in the final. "10.49 is so incredibly fast that I don't think it will be broken for decades. I think we can think about 10.76 or 10.79, but I really don't see 10.49 as being approachable."

Lewis, 27, took the first step toward duplicating his 1984 feat of winning four Olympic golds Saturday by winning the men's 100 with a wind-aided 9.78 time — the fastest time ever in that event, but not eligible for record consideration.

Jackie Joyner-Kersey, 26, raised her record in the heptathlon to 7,215 points Saturday. She won the long jump with a leap of 22 feet, 11 3/4 inches, settled for a 164-4 throw in the javelin that was third-best overall, then broke her record of 7,158 points, set in the 1986 U.S. Olympic Festival, with a 2:20.70 in the 800.

Moses, who turns 33 next month, made the Olympic team for the fourth time and showed he's ready to go for a third gold medal by defeating an all-star 400-meter hurdler field with a meet-record 47.37 — the best time in the world this year.

Banks, who set a world record of 58-11 1/2 in the triple jump here in 1985, had the longest two performances in history Saturday as he soared 59-3 on his first attempt and 59-8 1/2 on his last jump. Both marks, however, were wind-aided and will not be recognized as records.

Mary Decker Slaney, still trying to put the frustration of the 1984 Olympics behind her when she fell in the 3,000-meter finals, fought off Villanova's Vicki Huber to win in 8:42.53.

Griffith Joyner and her coach, Bob Kersey — Joyner-Kersey's husband — disagreed about how overweight she was when she began working with him in 1986. He said it was 60 pounds — but she said it was 15.

"That was a really down year for me," said Griffith Joyner, who agreed with her coach that reducing to her current weight of 130 has made her a better athlete. "I said to myself I have to run better or move on. I said I know I can run better, I just have to find a way."

The hours of work on the track and in the weight room paid off.

"In the final I was concentrating on getting out harder. I didn't get out as well in the previous race," said Griffith Joyner, who plans to go after another world record this week when she competes in the 200. "The 200 is my better race ... Right now I'm looking for a world-record pace."

Cary Takes Two Games From Snow Hill

CARY — Cary took the early lead in its best-of-seven Area I American Legion Championship baseball series with Snow Hill by sweeping a pair of games over the weekend.

Saturday, Cary topped Snow Hill, 5-1, and then came back and took a 6-4 win Sunday for a 2-0 series lead.

Ben Cox helped Cary broke a 1-1 tie with a two-run, bases-loaded single that was part of a three-run sixth inning that put Cary ahead to stay.

Cary had gone ahead 1-0 with a run in the third but Snow Hill tied the game with a run in the fifth. Cedric Collins singled and stole second before scoring on a base hit by T.J. Johnson.

Cox, Mike Gregory and Craig Moss had two hits each to lead Cary.

In Sunday's game, Snow Hill took an early 3-2 lead by scoring three runs in the third inning.

Collins started things off with a single and an error on the play put him at third. George Burnette singled Collins home and then scored himself on a triple by Johnson. Tommy Eason brought in Johnson with an infield ground out to make it 3-2.

The teams traded runs in the fourth and fifth to make it 4-3 but Cary took the lead for good with two runs in the sixth.

Mike Brown reached off an error. Vince Mills singled and another error scored Brown and put Mills at third. Lee Weaver then hit a sacrifice fly that scored Mills to make it 5-4.

Snow Hill was led by Johnson and Collins with two hits apiece.

Warren Hall and Vince Mills had two hits each for Cary.

The two teams return to action tonight at 8 p.m. in Snow Hill.

North Pitt Physicals Scheduled

BETHEL — Physicals will be given for all North Pitt High School students interested in playing fall sports Tuesday at 4 p.m. at Bethel Family Practice, school officials announced.

A physical is required for all prospective student-athletes prior to participation in pre-season practice.

Bradley Set To Begin His Pro Career

DURHAM (AP) — Mike Bradley of Durham, a former golfer at East Carolina, will begin his professional career Aug. 1 when he tries to qualify for the Federal Express St. Jude Classic in Memphis, Tenn.

Qualifying for the Memphis tournament will be held at the Naval Air Station Golf Course in Millington, Tenn. The top four players from that 18-hole Monday qualifier — out of a field which is usually made up of about 100 players — will participate in the tournament Aug. 4-7 at Colonial Country Club in Memphis.

"This has kind of been in the works for a while," Bradley said. "It's something I've always wanted to do. It's not just because of my past record, but because I know I can do it."

Bradley, 23, has sealed his professional application and sent it the Professional Golfers Association of America. Memphis is the first tournament he is eligible to compete in as a pro.

Bradley won every local tournament from 1985-1987. This summer, Bradley made it to the second round of U.S. Open qualifying, won the N.C. Amateur by six strokes, finished sixth in the Eastern Amateur and lost on the first extra hole of Friday's first round of the Carolinas Amateur at High Point, despite shooting a 3-under-par 69 in the regulation round.

Clark To Return To Outfield For Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Clark, a designated hitter for most of the season, will return to the outfield soon on a limited basis, New York Yankees manager Lou Piniella said Sunday.

"Clark will be playing right field this week. I'd like to get him out there up to three times a week," Piniella said.

Clark has not played the outfield since Sept. 8 for St. Louis. He saw spot duty at first base this season when Don Mattingly was injured.

Piniella plans to use Clark in the outfield mostly at Yankee Stadium, where the right field distance is short.

"Not on the road. The ballparks elsewhere are more symmetrical," Piniella said.

Piniella said right fielder Dave Winfield and outfielder Rickey Henderson would take the DH slot when Clark plays the outfield.

Missing Basketball Player Resurfaces

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Buster Glover, the Kansas State basketball player who has been missing since leaving Gary Ind., on July 4 to return to Manhattan, Kan., has resurfaced, a newspaper reported.

Glover, the subject of a four-state police search since he failed to arrive in Manhattan nearly two weeks ago, called his sister and his girlfriend Sunday to tell them he was not injured, according to a report published in the Topeka Capital Journal. He would not, however, tell either where he was, the newspaper said, in a story prepared for its Monday editions.

The newspaper reported that the Gary police department, which has been coordinating the search, received information Saturday indicating Glover had been seen in Kentucky, possibly with his half-brother Jerome Harmon, a freshman on the University of Louisville basketball team.

Bryant Agrees To Terms With Blazers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — First-round draft pick Mark Bryant has agreed to contract terms with the Portland Trail Blazers, the NBA team announced Sunday.

The agreement clears the way for the 6-foot-9 power forward to participate in the Blazers' rookie camp, which begins Monday.

Banks Confident Of U.S. Chances

Wrong Reaction

Ed Hopson of St. Louis, Mo., does a flip in the ring as opponent Kelcie Banks of Chicago watches following their featherweight box-off bout at Caesars Palace Sunday. Banks won the fight by a close 3-2 decision. (AP Laserphoto)

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Kelcie Banks took a look at the U.S. Olympic boxing team he had just barely made and pronounced it ready for the Games in Seoul.

"I think we'll get 80 percent of the Olympic golds," Banks predicted Sunday after earning a spot on the team with a 3-2 victory over 17-year-old Ed Hopson at 125 pounds. "The hardest part of this is making the American team."

It couldn't have been much harder for Banks, or teammates Riddick Bowe and Andrew Maynard, who all had to win twice during the weekend box-offs to make the squad. All three rallied with decisions to move from the loser's bracket onto the team.

"This is something I've worked for for 13 years," said Banks, who won the only U.S. gold medal in the 1987 Pan Am Games. "It feels great. Going to Seoul I'll be real loose."

Banks' decision over Hopson, the Olympic trials champion, was loudly booed by the crowd of about 1,000 at Caesars Palace, as was his 4-1 decision on Saturday over Hopson, of St. Louis. Banks had to win both fights or Hopson would have been on the team.

"I think when I'm the underdog it motivates me more," said Banks, of Chicago. "I knew I had to go out in the third round and be aggressive. That's what won the fight for me."

Bowe, a super heavyweight, also won his way onto the team by a narrow margin. Bowe used a superior left jab to beat Robert Salters of the Army 3-2 for the second day in a row and earn a spot on the team.

Bowe, who lost to Salters in the U.S. Amateur and Olympic trials, actually was tied 2-2 on four scorecards, and a fifth judge had it even. The judge, forced under amateur rules to pick a winner, gave the nod to Bowe.

"I've got one more dream to accomplish," said Bowe, of New York. "I'm going to go to Seoul and do the same thing, but in better fashion."

Afterward, Bowe posed with his Olympic teammates for pictures and led a chant of "The road to Seoul is paved with gold."

Maynard, considered by many one of the favorites for the light heavyweight gold in Seoul, won his second straight 4-1 decision over Cole, who beat him in the Olympic trials in the quarterfinals.

The fight, perhaps the most action-packed of the box-offs, capped a day of four bouts in which 119-pound Kennedy McKinney was the only trials winner to make the team. On Saturday, eight trials winners won spots on the 12-member team.

McKinney beat three-time U.S. Amateur champion Michael Collins 4-1, winning the fight with a big third round in which he stunned Collins on several occasions.

"I only had three minutes to pull it out," said McKinney, of Killeen, Texas. "My corner said I needed the third round, so I concentrated on it."

Track And Field

"I won't say the time, but I look for a world record and I don't know in which race. I've got to go out there and concentrate on what I'm supposed to do, concentrate on running the hardest curve I've ever run in my life and bringing it home. I'm ready. I have four days to rest."

There was one disappointment to the weekend for Griffith Joyner. Her husband, Al, failed to qualify for a trip to Seoul as the defending Olympic gold medalist in the triple jump. His career-best 56-8 was only good enough for fifth place and only the top three finishers at the trials earn a trip to the Olympics.

"It sort of took some of the joy out of the moment," she said. "He's my mentor, he keeps me dedicated. We train together. At least he still has a chance to make the Olympics in the hurdles, but as far as I'm concerned, the world record belongs to him."

In the 400 hurdles, Moses showed his younger challengers that he still believes he's the king of his event as he recorded his 173rd victory in 181 races.

"I think this year has been my best training year in five years," said Moses, who took command by the second hurdle.

The top five finishers, including 1984 Olympic silver medalist Danny Harris who failed to make the Olympics, completed the race in under 48 seconds — the first more than three runners have broken the 48-second barrier.

Andre Phillips, the world's No. 1-ranked hurdler in 1985 and 1986, finished second in 47.58, while two-time NCAA champion Kevin Young of UCLA edged David Patrick and Harris for third and final spot on the team.

Young was timed in 47.72, his career best, with Patrick fourth in 47.75, also his personal best, and Harris fifth in 47.76.

Slaney, the 1983 world champion in the women's 1,500 and 3,000 meters, but who never has won an Olympic medal, battled side-by-side with Huber for much of the race before taking command on the final lap.

There was a tense struggle for third between PattiSue Plumer and Sabrina Dornhoefer.

The two were running together down the final straightaway until the exhausted Dornhoefer fell about 10 meters from the finish.

Plumer then staggered across the finish line and quickly collapsed. Dornhoefer got up and made it across the finish line, but then she also collapsed.

Both were treated at trackside, carried off on stretchers after being iced down and were later released from the track medical facility.

Prep League

Greenville..... 20

Greene County..... 5

Greenville's Prep League All-Stars handed Greene County a 20-5 loss in tournament action Sunday.

Matthew Cagle, Billy Gorham and Grant Harmon had three hits apiece for Greenville, while Toure Clairborne, Josh Potter and William Gibbs had two hits each.

Clairborne had a two-run homer to key a seven-run first inning. Drew Johnson, Ledowick Johnson had RBI during the first while Gorham had a two-run single.

Greenville added four more runs in the second inning, courtesy of RBI from Randy Miller, Gorham and Mitch Jones.

Greene County rallied for two runs in the third to make it 11-2 but Greenville came back with six runs in the fourth and three more in the fifth to seal the romp.

British Open Final

Price took over on Friday with a 67 of his own for a 36-hole total of 137 and a one-shot lead over the Spaniard.

After Saturday's round was rained out — a day off that Price said hurt his rhythm in the early going Sunday — he withstood a day's best 67 by Lyle, a six-birdie 68 by Faldo and a scrambling, slashing 70 by Ballesteros to double his lead.

He birdied the first hole, then lost the stroke with a two-putt bogey-5 at No. 4. That's when his putting started to catch up with his short-iron work.

He chipped to one foot to save par at No. 5, wedged out of a bunker and holed a birdie putt at No. 6, putted back from the edge of the green for par on No. 7 and birdied No. 9 to pick up two strokes on Ballesteros and Faldo, who started the day two under. Lyle, starting at even par, was just beginning to make his charge.

Price had done what he said he had to do — come through the front nine unscathed.

"Six and seven are crucial holes on this course," he said of the two par-5s. "You have to walk off there with birdies, then hold tight through the back nine."

Faldo tied for the lead briefly, getting a birdie on No. 13 with Price and Ballesteros a hole behind. But Price quickly regained sole possession of first place by making birdie at 13 as well, sinking a six-foot putt.

That was a close as Faldo got. He bogeyed the 15th, as the putter that had been sinking 25- and 30-footers suddenly turned sour and required two strokes from six feet to finish the hole.

Price got his final birdie of the round at No. 15, then held on as Faldo birdied 16 with a 20-foot putt before a bogey-5 on 17. Price bogeyed that one as well.

Ballesteros gained a stroke on the day but never got closer to Price. He drive into a bush on the sixth hole, needed two hacking strokes — one left-handed — with a sand wedge to get back on the fairway and salvaged a bogey-6 on a hole producing birdies.

"One for practice, one to come out," Ballesteros said of the woodsmanlike work.

Lyle went birdie-bogey on the third and fourth holes, then birdied the sixth, seventh, 11th and 13th holes to move into contention.

Dodgers Flying High After Sweeping Cubs

By The Associated Press
Manager Tommy Lasorda and his Los Angeles Dodgers are in seventh heaven after sweeping a five-game series from the Chicago Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Steve Sax snapped a seventh-inning tie with a two-out, run-scoring single as the Dodgers beat the Cubs 5-2 for a sweep of Sunday's doubleheader. In the first game, Franklin Stubbs hit a pinch-hit three-run homer in the seventh inning to give the Dodgers a 4-1 victory.

It all added up to a seven-game lead over second-place San Francisco in the National League West.

"Sure, I like our position," Lasorda said. "About four days ago we were only two games in front. We've made a lot of strides in the last four days."

With two outs in the seventh inning of the nightcap, Chicago center fielder Mitch Webster misplayed Jose Gonzalez's line drive into a three-base error. Sax followed with a line single to right off reliever Les Lancaster, 4-5, for a 3-2 lead.

"To win five in a row in Chicago gives us a tremendous amount of momentum going into St. Louis," catcher Rick Dempsey said. "We had to play well on this road trip. If things continue to go well we can put a lot of distance between ourselves and the second-place club."

In the first game, Chicago starter Jeff Pico walked Mike Scioscia to open the seventh, but Scioscia was caught stealing at second. Pico, 3-5, followed by walking Jeff Hamilton and Dave Anderson.

Stubbs, pinch hitting for pitcher Tim Belcher, hit the first pitch from Pico into the left-center field bleachers for his fifth homer. It was also Stubbs' second pinch homer this season.

"You leave the dugout swinging, and if you see something you like, you hack at it," Stubbs said. "A pinch hitter can't afford to take pitches. If the pitcher makes a mistake, you don't want to miss it."

Belcher, 6-4, went six innings and allowed four hits in his first start since June 18. Alejandro Pena pitched three innings for his eighth save and stretched his string of appearances without allowing an earned run to 11 games.

Pirates 5, Giants 4
Barry Bonds hit a two-run pinch homer in the eighth inning as Pittsburgh beat visiting San Francisco for its ninth straight victory and a sweep of the four-game series.

With the score tied 3-3, Junior Ortiz walked against reliever Joe Price with two outs and Bonds followed with the first pinch homer of his three-year career. It was Bonds' 17th homer of the season.

The winning streak is the Pirates' longest since they won nine in a row from June 20-27, 1983. The Pirates are 16 games over .500 for the first time since 1980.

The Giants were swept in a four-game series for the first time since April 18-21, 1985 in Cincinnati.

Mets 4, Braves 2
Darryl Strawberry, Mookie Wilson and Tim Teufel homered and Bob Ojeda allowed five hits in eight-plus innings as New York won in Atlanta.

Ojeda, 7-7, retired the first 14 batters before Gary Roenicke lined a soft single to left field just out of the reach of shortstop Kevin Elster.

Ojeda walked one and struck out seven and was relieved by Roger McDowell after Gerald Perry led off the bottom of the ninth with a single. Perry moved up on an error and groundout and scored on Dion James' sacrifice fly.

Players from both teams rushed onto the field in the seventh when starter Tom Glavine hit Wilson, who also had singled in the game. There were no punches thrown, but Glavine got a warning from plate umpire Bob Davidson.

Phillies 10, Astros 4
Mike Schmidt hit a three-run triple and his 538th home run and Ricky Jordan homered in his first official major league at-bat as Philadelphia defeated Houston at Veterans Stadium.

Jordan hit a three-run homer off Bob Knepper, 9-3, in the fourth. After Juan Samuel singled home Jordan with the go-ahead run in the sixth, the Phillies loaded the bases. Larry Andersen relieved Knepper and Schmidt hit a liner to center field that Gerald Young misjudged for a bases-clearing triple to make it 8-4. Chris James then singled in the fifth run of the inning.

Reds 3, Expos 1
Rookie Jack Armstrong allowed two hits in seven innings and Paul O'Neill hit a two-run homer as Cincinnati defeated Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

Armstrong, 2-3, the Reds' first pick in the 1987 amateur draft, struck out five and walked three. Rob Murphy pitched the eighth inning and John Franco got the last three outs for his 16th save.

Brian Holman, 1-2, retired the first 12 batters until Eric Davis led off the fifth with a single. O'Neill then hit a 1-0 pitch from Holman into the right-field seats for his 10th homer.

Padres 3, Cardinals 1
Eric Show pitched a five-hitter as San Diego defeated St. Louis in 101-degree heat at Busch Memorial Stadium and sent the Cardinals to their 11th loss in 13 games played in July.

Show, 7-9, struck out six and walked one as San Diego took three of four from St. Louis.

Keith Moreland, Dickie Thon and Chris Brown drove in a run apiece off Joe Magrane, 1-4.

On a day when a heat wave wilted pitchers from coast to coast, the Texas Rangers got a complete game from an unlikely source.

Bobby Witt, a hard-throwing right-hander who made 56 major-league starts before completing his first game last year, pitched his first career shutout Sunday, beating the Milwaukee Brewers 3-0 in 100-degree heat at Arlington Stadium.

Witt, who scattered eight hits and four walks and struck out six, won his first game of the season after six consecutive losses while snapping the Rangers' five-game losing streak and the Brewers' six-game winning streak.

"This was my best outing ever," Witt said. "I've just been trying to keep it close. It seemed like a long time before I got my first win of '88."

Witt was 0-5 with a 7.68 ERA with Texas before being demoted to Oklahoma City on May 10. In his first start since being recalled, Witt pitched the second complete game of his career on July 10, but lost 2-1 to Baltimore.

Blue Jays 9, Athletics 6
Toronto cut Oakland's lead in the American League West to three games as Fred McGriff drove in four runs with a pair of homers.

The Blue Jays, who were 0-8 against the Athletics before going 3-1 in the weekend series, handed the A's their eighth loss in 11 games. Combined with Minnesota's victory, Oakland's margin is now its smallest since April 29.

After Oakland took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, McGriff capped a four-run second with a three-run homer. He wrapped up a five-run third with a solo shot, his 18th of the season, for a 9-1 lead.

Duane Ward, 6-0, who allowed two hits and one run in four innings, was the winner in relief of starter Todd Stottlenyre, who lasted only four innings in 100-plus degree temperatures.

Twins 7, Orioles 2
Minnesota won its fourth straight as Frank Viola became the first American League pitcher to win 15 games, allowing five hits and two runs in five innings in 102-degree heat at Baltimore.

Viola, 15-2, who joined the Chicago Cubs' Greg Maddux as the major leagues' biggest winners, enjoyed a 5-0 lead behind two-run homers by Greg Gagne and Kirby Puckett and a solo homer by Gene Larkin before the Orioles scored twice in the fifth inning. "That was the hottest situation I've ever pitched in," Viola said. He refused to take off his long-sleeved undershirt during the game, saying he was superstitious.

Mark Portugal pitched two-hit ball the last four innings for his second save as the Twins improved their record to 17-3 in games started by Viola this season.

Yankees 7, White Sox 3
Ron Guidry also pitched the minimum five innings for a win by a starter, allowing one hit in 95-degree heat for his first victory since Sept. 5.

Guidry, 1-1, making his Yankee Stadium debut this year after three months of rehabilitation following shoulder surgery. It was the longest of his three starts this year. Tim Stoddard pitched the last four innings for his third save.

Dave Winfield went 3-for-4, Jack Clark drove in two runs, Rickey Henderson scored twice and Don Mattingly had two hits for New York. Mattingly is hitting .563 since the All-Star game.

Guidry, 37, now 13-5 lifetime against the White Sox, allowed an unearned run in the first inning, but the Yankees tied it in the bottom of the inning against Dave LaPoint, 7-10, on an RBI grounder by Clark.

A walk to Clark and a single by Winfield in the fourth set up Gary Ward's RBI grounder and Don Slaught's sacrifice fly.

Red Sox 10, Royals 8
Boston won its fourth straight under interim manager Joe Morgan and completed its first-ever series sweep of Kansas City as Ellis Burks drove in five runs with a home run, a triple and a double.

The Royals trailed 10-3 after six innings, but rallied with three runs in the seventh and a two-run homer by Kurt Stillwell off Lee Smith in the eighth. But Smith blanked Kansas City in the ninth, preserving the victory for Wes Gardner, 3-1, who pitched 6 1-3 innings before tiring in 99-degree heat.

The Red Sox scored four runs in the first inning on Mike Greenwell's RBI grounder and Burks' 12th homer, a three-run shot off Ted Power, 4-4.

Power retired only one batter in the second as the Red Sox scored three more runs on Marty Barrett's sacrifice fly and Burks' triple.

Angels 4, Tigers 0
Terry Clark pitched a five-hitter over eight innings and California broke a scoreless tie with two outs in the bottom of the eighth on Brian Downing's two-run single.

The Angels had only two hits through seven innings off Frank Tanana, 11-5, but scored four unearned runs after second baseman Lou Whitaker booted Dick Schofield's grounder leading off the eighth inning.

Chili Davis followed Downing's hit with a two-run double for a 4-0 lead.

Clark, 2-0, walked one and struck out three before Donnie Moore pitched the ninth.

Indians 7, Mariners 4
Carmen Castillo snapped a 3-3 tie with a solo homer in the seventh inning and Cleveland took advantage of three Seattle errors at the Kingdome.

Castillo, playing his first game since rejoining the Indians after attending his father's funeral in the Dominican Republic, hit his first home run of the season with two outs off Seattle starter Bill Swift.

Swift, 6-7, allowed giving up six runs on eight hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Don Gordon, 2-0, was the winner, allowing four hits in 3 2-3 innings of relief of starter Tom Candiotti. Doug Jones got the last three outs for his 22nd save.

PBS Schedules Six-Hour Series On Highlights Of '84 Games

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — While television cameras focused on the leaders, filmmaker Bud Greenspan zeroed in on the last-place runner in the 5,000-meter final at the 1984 Summer Olympics.

Dave Moorcroft was the world record-holder at the distance, but injuries had destroyed his chances of winning in Los Angeles.

As Moorcroft fell farther and farther behind, Greenspan told his cameramen to focus on the British runner.

"They said, 'Are you sure? He's last,'" Greenspan recalled. "And I said, 'I know, just do it.' They thought I was crazy."

Like a fox, Moorcroft's battle to avoid being lapped by the winner, Said Aouita, is one of the memorable moments in "16 Days of Glory," Greenspan's six-hour documentary on the 1984 Games. It will be broadcast in one-hour segments on public television beginning Wednesday night.

The film features such well-known athletes as gymnast Mary Lou Retton, track star Carl Lewis and diver Greg Louganis. What makes it special, however, are the athletes and stories that were ignored or slighted in ABC's vast coverage of the 1984 Games.

"I'm not just interested in winners," Greenspan said. "Often, the losers make a better story."

Greenspan, 61, has chronicled both in his career. Since forming his film company in 1967, the former sportscaster has written, produced and directed documentaries and television specials on subjects ranging from the Heisman Trophy to the early days of baseball. He has also written several books and recorded 19 spoken-word albums.

But his main passion is making movies about the Olympics.

Greenspan and his late wife, Cappy, won Emmy awards for "The Olympiad" television series. "Wilma," his 1977 TV movie on the life of Olympic champion Wilma Rudolph, got rave reviews and high ratings. And he's just completed his latest Olympic project, the official film of the 1988 Winter Olympics.

Greenspan's love affair with the Olympics began with the 1948 Games in London.

One of the competitors that year was Karoly Takacs of Hungary, a former pistol shooting champion whose right hand — the one he shot with — was shattered by a grenade in 1938.

"He was so despondent he contemplated suicide," Greenspan said. "But in 1948, there he was, in London, and he won the gold medal in pistol shooting. He had learned to shoot with his left hand."

That's the kind of human-interest story that excites Greenspan and gives his Olympic shows a distinct flavor.

"16 Days of Glory" includes segments on Japanese judo champion Yasuhiro Yamashita, who overcame a painful leg injury to win a gold medal; U.S. runner Henry Marsh, who competed in the steeplechase with a serious viral infection, and American swimmer John Moffet, who hurt his leg while qualifying for the 100-meter freestyle.

"I'm interested in people, not statistics," Greenspan said. "I don't care about 10.2 dashes and .365 batting averages. I'm a storyteller. I want to make a connection between the athlete and the audience."

"16 Days of Glory" reflects Greenspan's idealistic view of the Olympics. The Soviet bloc boycott is mentioned only briefly, as is the controversial Mary Decker-Zola Budd collision. In the women's 3,000-meter race, Decker fell after tripping over Budd's trailing leg as the South African runner moved in front of the American. Greenspan prefers to shine his spotlight on Maricica Puica, the Romanian runner whose victory was overshadowed by Decker's fall.

"I'm not naive. I know about the politics and the controversy," Greenspan said. "But I would rather concentrate on the athletes and the competition. That's what I do best."

It took years of research, a first-rate crew and a million feet of film to make the 1984 Olympics film. "Logistically, it's like putting together the Normandy invasion," Greenspan said. "You do as much pre-production as possible, but a lot of it is never used. We threw out about 80 percent of the stuff we filmed before the Games."

While Greenspan awaits the TV premiere of "16 Days of Glory," he is busy working on two other Olympic programs — a docudrama on the 1936 Berlin Games and a television special that follows teen-age athletes as they trained for the 1988 Games in South Korea.

Despite tight security in Seoul, some people are afraid the Games could be marred by terrorism or student riots. Greenspan, who just returned from the South Korean capital, said the fears are unfounded.

"It's safer than Central Park," he said.

Democrats Eye Television In Designing Convention

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — National political conventions have become such made-for-TV events that the chairman of the Democratic National Committee openly refers to his party's gathering this week as a four-part mini-series.

"You never get a second chance to make a first impression," says DNC Chairman Paul Kirk.

The most imposing features of the new Omni convention hall, a sports arena reborn as the birthplace of the 1988 Democratic ticket, are its two dozen-plus TV skyboxes and an enormous tiered camera platform closer to the podium than ever before.

Television used to adore political conventions because they were full of conflict and color. But once the parties realized they were on display, they strove for tranquility above all. Spore, said the networks, and limited coverage this year to two hours nightly.

Now organizers have a new challenge: how to make a lively, lengthy and essentially harmonious gathering as compressed and compelling as "Roots" or "Taipan."

From 9 to 11 p.m., Kirk said, "we are going to have to be jam up and jelly tight to get everything we want in there."

He and other party leaders have been playing to the prime-time, living-room viewer since preparations began.

When the party selected the Omni, "we looked at this hall as a television studio," Kirk said. And that is how it has been remade — as a temporary set for a four-day pageant, less suspenseful than an afternoon quiz show but brimming with patriotism and spectacle.

To the naked eye, the wooden podium is rough-hewn and the red, white or blue slipcovers on the delegates' folding chairs are loose and shabby. But both are effective on television, as seen by five rows of cameras stationed 66 feet from the podium — the same distance as in a large TV studio.

They may have cut back their programming, but ABC, CBS and NBC still dominate the arena with their enormous glass skyboxes. Equally large is the box occupied by CNN, the Atlanta-based cable network which is providing much more extensive coverage.

Some two dozen other skyboxes for smaller stations and groups also ring the Omni, jutting out over clumps of delegate seats and a special niche cut high on the wall to hold the miles of cable that are the media's lifeline.

Underneath the podium, speakers are primed and primed by make-up experts and TelePrompTer coaches before an escort takes them up a narrow stairway to the rostrum. The objective: eliminating for the viewer the distractions an uncomfortable novice might offer. "It's a fact of life," says Mike Sheehan, the head coach. "Most people are going to be seeing this on a 19½-inch box."

Speakers emerging from the subterranean maze of holding and preparation rooms will be shifting their gazes from left to right, where their speeches will be rolling by on two TelePrompTer mirrors. For special effect, to underline their most dramatic or important lines, they'll stare straight ahead at those rows of cameras — and hope their memories don't fail them.

Lights will warn speakers that their time is almost up. "No whoopee cushions," promises Sheehan. A pneumatic lift will help minimize height differences — for instance, the gap between the 5-foot-8 Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen, his 6-foot-2 running mate.

Behind the scenes, the DNC is mounting "one of the most sophisticated and elaborate press operations ever put together for a national political gathering," according to an overview written by the DNC press office itself.

Direct services to the media range from distribution of a press survival kit complete with a free subway pass and a packet of aspirin, to a network news liaison charged with locating quotable Democrats for harried television reporters and programmers.

The DNC is also operating both audio and electronic "Party Lines" to transmit convention press releases, speeches and schedules, and a Convention Satellite News Service with hours of interviews, speeches and pre-packaged programs available to TV stations across the country as well as the hundreds actually in Atlanta.

"The modern convention is an opportunity above all else to communicate a message," says DNC spokesman Mike McCurry. That is to say, as the DNC overview put it, "a strong and positive message about our nominee and our plan for America."

Red Skelton Collapses During Birthday Tribute

HONOLULU (AP) — Red Skelton collapsed during a benefit performance, but returned to the stage as the audience sang "Happy Birthday" to the veteran comedian-clown who turns 75 today, an organizer of the event said.

Skelton, overcome by heat and humidity, collapsed into the arms of the sound crew as he left the stage 90 minutes into his two-hour outdoor performance Sunday night, said Lynn Cook, executive director of the March of Dimes Chapter of the Pacific.

"I'm really not feeling well. I'm going to have to leave you. I'm very sorry," Skelton told the audience before he collapsed, according to Mrs. Cook.

Comedian Milton Berle, who turned 80 last Tuesday, came up from the audience to take over the microphone as his wife, Ruth, and Skelton's wife, Lothian, rushed backstage, Mrs. Cook said.

Skelton revived with the aid of an ambulance crew that administered oxygen, returned to the stage and finished the show.

Doctors who examined Skelton later determined he had been overcome by heat, dehydration and exhaustion, Mrs. Cook said.

Sunday's high in Honolulu reached a record-tying 90 degrees.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ8 ♥KQJ9543 ♦A5 ♣3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 Pass 1 ♣ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Since partner is a passed hand, you should suppress any slam ambitions you might have had. As a matter of fact, the opponents could have a reasonably cheap sacrifice, and you might not even have a game. All in all, a jump to four hearts does your hand justice.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K7 ♥K1074 ♦AKJ5 ♣K63
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
 A.—It's a close decision between one no trump and double. With only one stopper in the enemy suit and the ability to play in any one of the other three suits, we prefer a takeout double.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K7 ♥K107 ♦AKJ54 ♣K63
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
 A.—This time your choice is between one no trump and two diamonds. If you do have a game, it's more likely to be in no trump, where you need only nine tricks, than in diamonds, where you have to take 11. Bid one no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQJ54 ♥AQ93 ♦A102 ♣5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner doesn't seem to be very enthusiastic about your bidding, but that doesn't mean that you should give up all hope of slam. Complete the picture of your hand by showing your diamond fragment and highlighting your club shortness. Bid three diamonds.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K1065 ♥A1054 ♦A963 ♣7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Dbl ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—There are those who believe that a redouble in this situation denies support for partner's suit. We do not agree. Our philosophy is that you show all good hands with a redouble. If your hand includes support for partner's suit, you will show it on the next round.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠J9652 ♥AKJ63 ♦5 ♣A5
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
 A.—With two five-card suits, it is correct to respond in the higher-ranking first and then bid the lower-ranking suit twice—that guarantees at least 10 cards in the two suits. So respond one spade. Don't let the difference in the quality of the suits tempt you into making an incorrect response.
