Debate Covers Three Planks

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Jesse Jackson's campaign said today common ground had been reached with Michael Dukakis' forces on most of Jackson's minority platform planks but the Jackson camp will press floor debate on three issues. Today's Democratic Convention session was moved up to allow more time for debate.

Jackson officials, in a written notice, said today there would be debate on three planks for which he had filed minority versions — higher taxes on the wealthy, no first use of nuclear weapons and Palestinian self-determination in the Middle East.

However, they said they would not press the Middle East issue to a vote.

The Dukakis delegates were expected to easily defeat Jackson on the higher-taxes and nuclear-weapons issues, but today's convention starting time was moved up from 4:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. EDT to allow time to air the issues.

Eleanor Holmes Norton, Jackson's chief platform negotiator, said of the Palestinian homeland issue on CBS-TV today, "Our supporters were anxious to have the issue debated, not necessarily voted. ... What was sought was an agreement that would keep our party together and avoid the dissonance."

But she said in regard to the Jackson plank that would pledge no first use of nuclear weapons, "We are (See PLATFORM, A-3)

Iraqi Planes Attack Iran Industry Sites

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Iran-Iraq war could be halted within a week, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar predicted after Iran accepted a U.N. cease-fire plan.

But the belligerents were fighting again today.

Iraqi warplanes attacked a nuclear plant and other Iranian industrial targets today, Iran said a day after reversing itself in announcing it would accept a year-old U.N. resolution calling for a truce in the 8-year-old war.

The conflict has claimed an estimated 1 million lives.

Iran said it shot down three Iraqi jet fighters today and Iraq said it downed two Iranian warplanes. But both sides claimed their planes all returned safely to base.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency also said Iraqi air raids near the city of Ahvaz in Khuzestan province killed and injured an unspecified number of people and inflicted some damage.

Iraq, which already has accepted terms of the resolution, on Monday expressed skepticism about its rival's abrupt about-face.

Baghdad said the reversal may have been prompted by "tactical reasons" — Iran's recent battlefield defeats — rather than by a desire for peace. Iran's economy has also suffered deeply.

World leaders generally praised Iran's announcement and expressed hope it would lead to an end to the conflict that has endangered commercial shipping in the gulf's busy waters and heightened the U.S. military presence in the region.

Perez de Cuellar said he would assemble a 10-member team and another force of at least 250 U.N. military observers to monitor a prospective truce.

"If I'm lucky, I may have a cease-fire in a week to 10 days," he said.

The Peruvian said he also would dispatch U.N. teams to both countries at the end of the week to work on an early prisoner exchange.

Perez de Cuellar, whose peace mission to both countries in September ended in failure, said acceptance of the resolution by both combatants is a breakthrough.

"The resolution is a peace plan," he said, "and it covers all aspects. If it is fully implemented, I think it means an end of the conflict."

The Tehran government, battered by a string of recent military defeats and seeking a Security Council call for the withdrawal of the U.S. Navy from the gulf, said Monday it would accept the truce resolution without condition.

The Security Council was to reconvene today to discuss a U.S. warship's downing July 3 of an Iranian airliner, which killed 290 people.

Iran contends the U.S. Navy's presence in the gulf made the disaster inevitable, but has been unable to collect enough votes to condemn Washington.

U.S. officials say the plane was shot down in self-defense because the crew of the USS Vincennes thought

Kimble Is First Aide To Manager

Ronald R. Kimble, the city's director of finance for the last four years, has been promoted to the recently created position of assistant city manager, according to City Manager Greg Knowles.

Knowles said as assistant city manager Kimble will direct the city's central administrative arm including finance, planning, community development, engineering, inspections, personnel and data processing.

Knowles said in the upcoming year Kimble will concentrate on long-term financial planning and the city's capital improvement program.

Kimble came to Greenville from Galesburg, Ill., where he served as assistant finance director for over eight years. An Illinois native, he holds a degree in accounting and business administration from the University of Kansas at Lawrence and is a graduate of the local Chamber of Commerce Leadership Institute.

Kimble is active in both professional and community organizations. Currently he serves as secretary-treasurer for the N.C. Public Finance Officers Association; advisory board member on the N.C. Cash Management Trust; president of the Eastern

Knowles Shifts Staff Members As City Agencies Reorganize

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
Greenville City Manager Greg Knowles announced Monday details of a restructuring of the administrative departments of city government which he says is part of an effort to increase management effectiveness.

Included in the restructuring, which became effective July 1, is the addition of an assistant city manager, and the consolidation of the departments of Planning and Development and Engineering into one central department.

Named to the position of assistant city manager was former Finance Director Ronald R. Kimble. In this position, Kimble will oversee the city's central administrative departments including Finance, Personnel, Development and Engineering, and a newly formed department, Data Processing.

Knowles said "creation of this position will substantially reduce the number of direct reports to the city manager. This position will allow for a stronger coordination of the day-to-day administrative functions of the city."

He also said the assistant will be the designated second in command if the city manager is absent.

Replacing Kimble as finance director was Bernita W. Demery. Formerly the city's chief accountant, Ms. Demery in her new position will direct purchasing, revenue and tax collection, and accounting.

Also announced by Knowles was the consolidation of Planning and Development and Engineering into the Department of Development.

Knowles said the merger will "better concentrate all phases of zoning, code enforcement and day-to-day planning activities in one unit."

He also said the consolidation is expected to streamline internal coordination of the city's comprehensive plan and to more efficiently and effectively respond to public needs.

Knowles said consolidation of the departments has produced changes in titles and responsibilities for several positions.

Named as director of the Department of Development was Bobby E. Roberson, who since 1978 has been the city's planning director.

The post of city planner, previously titled assistant director of planning and development, will be held by Andrew J. Harris.

Knowles said Harris will continue his supervision of the planning and community development activities as he has for the past six years and add the inspections office to his duties.

The engineering staff will continue under the supervision of Glendon E. Whisler as city engineer. Reporting to the director of development, the city engineer handles traffic engineering, drafting and subdivision-construction management.

Knowles said the position of director of engineering and inspections has been deleted.

In an additional restructuring move, Knowles said the city's data processing office, headed by Stanley R. (Rex) Wilder, moves from a divisional office in the Finance Department to a departmental level function under the assistant city manager. Knowles said Wilder has assumed the new title of director of data processing and will continue to direct the department.

Meanwhile, Knowles said the focus of the city's Personnel Department has expanded to take on additional responsibilities.

He said in addition to recruitment and selection, payroll, benefits administration and safety, the personnel office will now oversee employee career development and training, human relations and affirmative action, and building services. Gerry C. Dail is continuing as director of personnel.

Knowles said the four operating departments and the city clerk's office are unaffected by the organizational changes. They include Public Works, Fire-Rescue, Police and Recreation and Parks.

"We hope to see improvements in long-range planning, environmental planning, drug enforcement, affirmative action, as well as improved coordination with other public and private agencies," Knowles said.

"These improvements will not happen overnight, but should be perceptible over time," Knowles said. "I feel Greenville has a good basic staff structure, and with this modification, Greenville should have an even better staff structure."

Pitt Schools Draw 'Warm' Poll

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
Warm may describe the climate around the Pitt County school system, according to a recent survey conducted to detect current perceptions and attitudes about the schools.

Using grades of A, B, C, D and F in the way students are often graded to describe the quality of their work, 15.9 percent of Pitt County residents gave the school system an A, while 48.48 percent gave it a B for its quality.

About 28 percent gave it a grade of C, while 2.52 percent said it warranted a D. Less than 1 percent said it deserved an F.

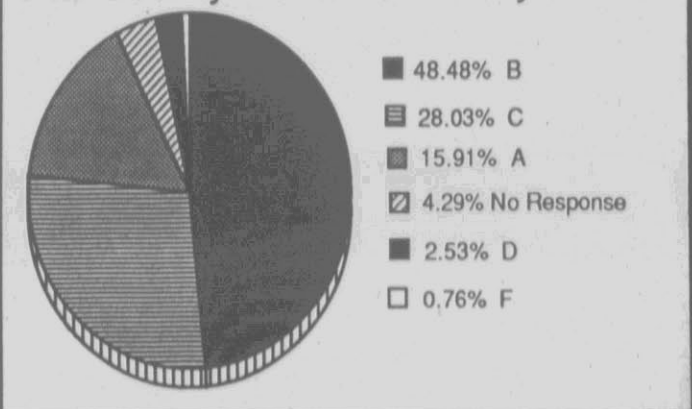

The Pitt County Schools' Climate Survey prefaces the school system's Summer Management Conference

Aug. 2-4 and will be used in workshop sessions to analyze the current public relations status with citizens of Pitt County and to determine needed areas for improvement.

"I was very pleased with the results," Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of the school system, said this morning in a telephone interview. "When you can get 65 percent of the sample to rate the system with a B or better and 66 percent plus willing to support a tax increase, it says to me there is a strong support for the school system among the citizens of Pitt County. At the same time, we have to work even harder to make that 65 percent even better."

County Board Awards Contracts For Weyerhaeuser Water, Sewer

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners Monday awarded contracts totaling $431,832 for construction of water and sewer lines to serve the new Weyerhaeuser plant between Ayden and Grifton and approved a $15,668 bid for the purchase of office supplies for the coming year.

Low bidder for the water line was Herring-Rivenbark Inc. at $323,607, while the low sewer line bidder was So-Par Utilities with a price of $108,225.

Bids for the water line ranged to a high of $546,745, while the high bid for the sewer amounted to $224,975.

County Engineer Phil Dickerson said the low bid for the water line was $75,000 less than the estimated cost, while the low sewer line bid was about $30,000 below the estimated cost.

The board also approved a construction management contract with the Wooten Co., not to exceed $12,880, to oversee the installation of the sewer line.

The office supply contract for the coming year went to Taff Office Equipment Co. The only other bidder, Carolina Office Equipment Co., submitted a price of $17,681.

Commissioners honored the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad with a resolution citing the squad's efforts in providing full paramedic service — beginning July 1 — to the citizens of the county.

Eastern Pines Rescue Squad, the first rescue unit in Pitt County to provide paramedic level service, was organized in 1982. The full paramedic service program was implemented after 11 squad members completed a 292-hour training program earlier this year.

Commissioner Eugene James, who presented the resolution to squad Capt. Ervin Hardee and 1st Lt. Stuart Elks, said Eastern Pines' fire department and rescue squad "are the model in Pitt County as far as rescue work and fire protection is concerned. We are very proud of your squad and the work you are doing," James said.

Hardee told the board, "It takes teamwork. We couldn't do it without everybody's help. We've come a long way in six years," he said, pointing out that the squad has "half a million dollars in assets" and owes "less than $50,000."

Saying 15 of the rescue squad's 44 members are also members of the Eastern Pines fire Department, Hardee said the fire department "has always helped us. We're a spin-off of the fire department."

The board took no action on a request by Pitt County Memorial Hospital to have county property tax data for those with delinquent hospital accounts furnished on computer tape.

Kathy Barger, the chief financial officer at PCMH, said having the tax data furnished on computer tape would aid the hospital in its collection efforts.

"We will not go out and put a lien on all the residences," she said. "But we hope we can use (the information) as leverage and get the patients to pay their bills."

Ms. Barger said the hospital would have some $15 million in bad debts this year with 40 percent of it owed by Pitt County residents. Of the $6 million in bad debts attributed to Pitt County residents this year, Ms. Barger said, "half ... is related to those not willing to pay ... those able but unwilling to pay," while the other half is owed by the truly indigent who don't have any ability to pay.

"We write off 2,000 accounts a month ... $1.2 million," Ms. Barger said. "By improving access" to property tax records, she suggested that those figures could be reduced.

Commissioners met with representatives of Rivers and Associates to negotiate a price for a county-wide water and sewer study, but delayed action until additional details of the proposed study are submitted.

The board also agreed to meet with representatives of the Greenville Utilities Commission and the Eastern Pines Water Corp. in an effort to work out a service area agreement for an area south of Greenville between N.C. 43 and the Tar Road. Such an agreement would lead to a planning and service area agreement between Greenville and Winterville that has been endorsed by both municipalities and the county planning board.

Fellowship

Pitt County native Cynthia E. Johnson, an associate professor and human development specialist with the Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State University in Raleigh, is one of 43 Americans selected by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation for its national fellowship program.

The fellowship carries a three-year grant of $35,000 to fund the individual's self-designed plan of study.

Dr. Johnson, 39, joined NCSU in 1986. Prior to that she was an assistant professor of human development at North Carolina Central University at Durham, a graduate teaching associate at Ohio State University in Columbus, and human development specialist for the Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina A&T University in Greensboro.

She received her bachelor's degree in home economics and early childhood education from North Carolina Central University, her master's degree in child development from East Carolina University, and doctorate in human development and family relation from Ohio State University.

Taft Considered For Senate Post

By JOHN BARE

Service Award

State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks presented state service awards to 25 N.C. Department of Labor staff at the agency's annual all-employee meeting held in Raleigh recently.

Recipients, who reside in 14 North Carolina communities, have worked for the state from five to 30 years. S.B. White of Winterville, a safety officer in the Occupational Safety and Health Division, received a 10-year award.

(See IN, A-3)

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, who is running for the state's No. 2 post, has said he is considering Taft to chair either the Base Budget Committee or the Expansion Budget Committee. The lieutenant governor serves as president of the Senate and makes committee appointments.

"I knew that he has been considering me for one of the top appropriations positions," said Taft, who declined to comment on his discussions with Rand.

"It's the most exciting thing to happen since I've been in the Legislature because it means I would have a remarkable opportunity to help my district and the state.

"I'm honored to even be considered and pleased for my district. I don't think there has ever been a top appropriations committee chairman from Pitt County in modern times."

Taft represents the 9th Senatorial District, which includes Pitt, Beaufort and Martin counties. Rand has also mentioned Sens. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, and Russell Walker, D-Randolph, for the positions. Whoever is not appointed to one of the top committee posts would likely be appointed to chair a powerful subcommittee.

Taft, who announced support for Rand's bid for lieutenant governor early in the primary season, said Rand has not commented publicly on which of the two committees Taft may chair, but either would be a powerful spot.

"The two positions are clearly the most important positions of power and influence in the Senate, more important than the president pro tem or the chairman of Finance," Taft said. The Senate membership elects the president pro tem.

"(The committee chairmen) set the tone for the state budget," he said. "You can't really say they write the budget, but they have a tremendous amount of control over its shape.

"It's important to our district for two reasons. One, it means that our district would have a tremendous amount of influence over the direction the budget would take over that two-year term," Taft said.

"And it's important locally also, because it gives you the opportunity to do a tremendous amount for your district through statewide projects as well as local projects. East Carolina and the community colleges ... would be the real beneficiaries of having a senator from this district in this position."

Taft, 42, is running against Republican Bill Dansey of Greenville in his bid for re-election. Never has anyone chaired either of the top committees earlier in their Senate career.

Rand's comments about Taft appeared in a Raleigh newspaper over the weekend, and Taft said supporters called throughout the day Saturday, and the publicity has boosted his campaign.

But for Taft to land the committee chairmanship, not only must he retain his senate seat, but Rand must also defeat Republican Jim Gardner of Rocky Mount in the race for lieutenant governor, or Gardner will have the power to make appointments.

The prospects of having a senator from eastern North Carolina chair a top appropriations committee should also encourage area voters to support Rand, Taft said.

Pitt County tobacco warehouses will again be the sites of a leaf sampling program used for the detection of illegal pesticides. The chemicals checked for are 16 in number with the addition of an insecticide called Cymbush. The warehouse sampling program began last year and will be administered by the state ASCS office.

The illegal use of pesticides on U.S. leaf has become a major theme in the production and sale of flue-cured tobacco. In 1987, samples taken across North Carolina revealed positive results as growers responded favorably to the pesticide issue. A number of samples taken this year will be analyzed for MH residues present in the leaf. MH (maleic Hydrazide) is a labeled sucker control chemical whose residues have become an area of concern for West German markets.

Last year many tobacco fields across the southeastern United States received repeated applications of this product due to dry conditions. Since our local ecosystem has been more favorable than other areas, growers are encouraged to use only the recommended amount of this chemical in order to further enhance the buying potential of Pitt County tobacco.

On the eve of the 1988 tobacco marketing season, many positive factors have occurred which have affected the present outlook. An increase in quota, skyrocketing exports, and seasonal rains have been responsible for this existing mood. One factor which will further enhance the quality of leaf to be sold locally will be the harvest of ripe tobacco. While issues like pesticide residues and smoking bans continue to be items of mention, tobacco which needs to be harvested ripe is a primary factor influencing company demand. The challenge for Pitt County tobacco producers is to respond to that demand with such a product.

Gasoline Spill Enters Drains

At noon today workers were still trying to clean up storm sewers in the vicinity of the intersection of 10th Street and Greenville Boulevard that received the brunt of a 75-gallon gasoline spill about 7 a.m.

Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen said a Daughtridge Oil Co. delivery truck, filling an underground tank at the Fuel Doc at the 10th-Greenville Boulevard intersection, spilled about 75 gallons of gasoline when the underground tank overflowed.

The gas entered the storm drain system, Allen said, and workers were trying to isolate the drains and remove the gasoline late this morning.

Allen said a plug put in a 30-inch pipe leading to a ditch draining into the Tar River failed, so he said plans were to dam the ditch with sand, flush the drain system with water, then pump the water and gasoline from the pipes.

"There's not a whole lot of danger to it," Allen said. "We're just trying to get it up."

Fire-Rescue Department employees, Greenville Utilities Commission workers and Daughtridge Oil Co. employees were cooperating in the cleanup efforts.

City Reorganization Will Cost About $3,000

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

A reorganization of the administrative arm of city government, intended to increase management effectiveness, will cost the city approximately $3,000 annually, according to City Manager Greg Knowles.

Knowles announced on Monday details of the restructuring, which includes the addition of an assistant city manager position, the consolidation of various departments and the change in titles and responsibilities of various staff positions.

"The net difference in salaries, comparing the positions before and after restructuring, is only about $3,000," Knowles said Monday.

Knowles said some previously budgeted positions were eliminated, and some promotions were made to positions with lowered pay grades adjusted due to shifts in responsibilities and duties.

"The net effect on some of these changes, with the elimination of this job and the starting of another job and the new person coming in at a little lower salary on some of them, there was some money for promotions on others," Knowles said.

"When we put all that together, that's how we could afford to make only a $3,000 difference for this whole thing."

Knowles said for example, the position of finance director was formerly a grade 20 ($35,850-$53,809 per year). Now he said the position has been reclassified as grade 18 ($32,073-$48,110) because certain duties and responsibilities have been taken away from the finance director and distributed to others.

The reorganization was the outgrowth of a four-month study by the consulting firm of Arthur Young regarding the office of city manager.

The major findings and conclusions identified by Arthur Young were summarized in a report to the City Council on April 5.

The report stated "the city manager currently has 11 direct reports and a dotted line or advise-consult relationship with one other individual. This span of control is too broad for the effective management of those activities, resources and the manager's time and efforts. A consolidation and centralization of those reporting relationships is needed to allow the city manager to focus his attention on the priorities to set for him and the city by the City Council."

At its June 29 budget session, the council adopted the study's recommendations, implementing them into the 1988-89 city budget.

Redesignated salary grades agreed upon by the council at that session, some of which involve the current city government restructuring, include the data processing manager designated from grade 14 ($25,126-$37,689) to grade 15 ($26,769-$40,164); director of personnel from grade 16 ($28,516-$42,764) to grade 17 ($30,243-$45,364), and the director of parks and recreation and the city attorney both were redesignated from grade 20 ($35,859-$53,809) to grade 21 ($37,856-$56,784).

The following positions were added to the city payroll: assistant city manager at grade 22 ($39,915-$59,883); director of development at grade 21 ($37,856-$56,784), and a city planner and city engineer, both at grade 16 ($28,516-$42,764).

The following positions were deleted: administrative assistant to the city manager, grade 11 ($20,654-$30,992); assistant director of planning and development, grade 15; assistant city engineer, grade 16, and director of engineering and inspections and director of planning and development, both at grade 20.

Survey Gives Schools Favorable Reading

laurels. We've got to go forward. Our goal for next year is improving the climate for teaching and learning," he said.

Another survey will be conducted at the end of the 1988-89 school year and should show an improved image after plans are developed and implemented during the upcoming year, West said.

For the survey, conducted this month and in June, 1,000 registered voters of the county were randomly selected from voter lists and were telephoned by trained interviewers of the Pitt County Community Schools Advisory Council and the school system's Office of Public Information. While about 380 fully completed responses were needed for a valid sample, 392 usable responses were collected. A sample table, produced by the National School Public Relations Association in Arlington, Va., was used to authenticate the size of the county sample.

Eleven questions were asked of each person, who answered by saying yes, no or no opinion. Response time was limited to five minutes.

The school system ranked lowest on the statement "Most classrooms are well disciplined," with 52.02 percent of the respondents answering yes, 28.03 percent answering no and 19.19 percent without an opinion. "Teachers give about the right amount of homework," was a statement agreed to by 53.78 percent of the respondents, while 21.46 percent disagreed, and 24.24 percent were indifferent.

If more money is needed to build and maintain schools, 66.41 percent said they would support a tax increase to provide the additional money. About 25.5 percent said they would not; 7.32 percent said they were indifferent.

More than 70 percent of the respondents said most students like attending schools; the schools are safe and pleasant places to learn; students with learning problems can get help in school, and academically gifted students are given opportunities to reach their potential.

But, the school system rated highest on personnel expectations of students and the courtesy of school employees.

Teachers expect students to do well, agreed 91.91 percent of the respondents. Those disagreeing made up 3.53 percent, while 4.04 percent had no opinion.

Also, school principals expect the best of their teachers and students, 86.86 percent said. About 6 percent disagreed, and about 7 percent had no opinion.

There were 84.59 percent of the respondents who said school employees have been courteous and helpful when contacted; 3.53 percent disagreed, and 11.11 percent had no opinion.

Platform Debate Set Tonight

going to the floor on that. The Soviet Union has said it. It's much more in the American tradition to say that."

Current U.S. and NATO policy would allow first use in the event of a Soviet invasion of Europe.

The Jackson campaign, in its written update, said, "We have reached common ground on nine of the minority planks advocated by our campaign," including acceptance of Jackson's minority plank on the budget.

That plank says, "Investing in America and reducing the deficit requires that the wealthy and corporations pay their fair share and that we restrain Pentagon spending."

Other Jackson proposals will be included in the platform compromise language, including expanded support for prenatal care, Head Start and education.

The platform negotiators resumed their talks Monday after a six-day hiatus caused by tension between Jackson and Dukakis.

The Jackson campaign said that "our major impact on the platform has been in the document itself (which) already reflects the guiding principles of our campaign: declaring South Africa a terrorist state, our five-point program to fight drugs, political empowerment and many more."

Frosty Facts

NEW YORK (AP) — Although Americans spent more than $10 billion for chocolate and chocolate related items last year, vanilla is the leading flavor in ice cream, comprising more than 32 percent of all ice cream sales, according to a study by the American Dairy Board.

However, Chocolatier magazine says the same study shows that the runners-up in ice cream sales all contained chocolate in some form; chocolate itself (9 percent); vanilla fudge (4.1 percent), and cookies 'n cream (3.8 percent).

Campaign lieutenants negotiated late into the night over the details of resolving the minority positions Jackson wanted in the streamlined, 4,500-word platform.

"I expect we won't have a marathon session," Michigan Gov. James J. Blanchard, chairman of the platform committee, said Monday.

Blanchard says the platform, shorn of the usual special-interest rhetoric, is compact enough to fit on a poster.

The agreement not to wage a drawn-out platform fight followed a Monday morning meeting in which Jackson pledged party unity and Michael Dukakis promised to increase Jackson's role in the party.

The platform talks had been suspended last Tuesday when Dukakis failed to give Jackson early notice of his selection of Lloyd Bentsen as a running mate.

Both Dukakis and Jackson said they anticipated some issues would be left to the 4,162 delegates to decide.

Jackson said Monday night on the Cable News Network: "There will be key planks to be debated tomorrow night. ... We are committed to having new budget priorities."

Rep. Bill Richardson of New Mexico, a co-chair of the Platform Committee, said early today he thought there would be just "a slight floor fight."

Richardson said defense was where the Jackson forces had "the chance to make the most inroads" on Dukakis' majority.

In a Platform Committee session in Denver June 25, the Dukakis forces rejected several cornerstone Jackson campaign positions, including his call for higher taxes on the wealthy, a Pentagon budget freeze, Palestinian self-determination and a U.S. policy of no first use of nuclear weapons.

Actor Ed Begley of television's "St. Elsewhere," a Dukakis delegate from California, was among many delegates sporting "No First Use" stickers at Monday night's opening session.

'Far-Away Land'

NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — This island in the Atlantic, called by the Indians "Far-away Land," became part of the Plymouth Colony in 1621.

It was first settled in 1659 by Thomas Macy and a group of Quakers and was part of New York province until being transferred to Massachusetts in 1692.

From about 1690 to 1840, Nantucket was a bustling whaling port. The island has many cobblestone streets and quaint old buildings. These include the Jethro Coffin house (1686), the old mill (1746), the Friends Meeting House (1838) and several historic lighthouses.

Borrowing a phrase from Republican nominee-to-be George Bush, it promises to reverse the "voodoo economics" of the Reagan administration, bolster programs for the needy and maintain "more stable defense budgets." Tailored largely to Dukakis' specifications, it includes many of Jackson's positions as well, including a condemnation of South Africa as "a terrorist state."

The platform is the main order of convention business today before a prime-time speech by Jackson.

Princess Anne Calls For Clean Water Supplies

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Princess Anne blames the "disposable mentality" of modern society for water pollution and is calling for stronger controls to ensure clean water supplies.

"With water resources, it cannot be worth waiting to see if the worst does happen," the princess told delegates to an international conference on water pollution Monday in this southern England city.

"I sometimes wonder if it is only a disaster or major failure that really gets things moving," she said.

Anne, the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, recalled that one of her ancestors, Queen Victoria, ordered an investigation into river pollution in the 19th century.

"I suspect she might be appalled by the lack of progress in many areas, largely due to the disposable mentality and short-term outlook of modern man," the princess said.

First Woman

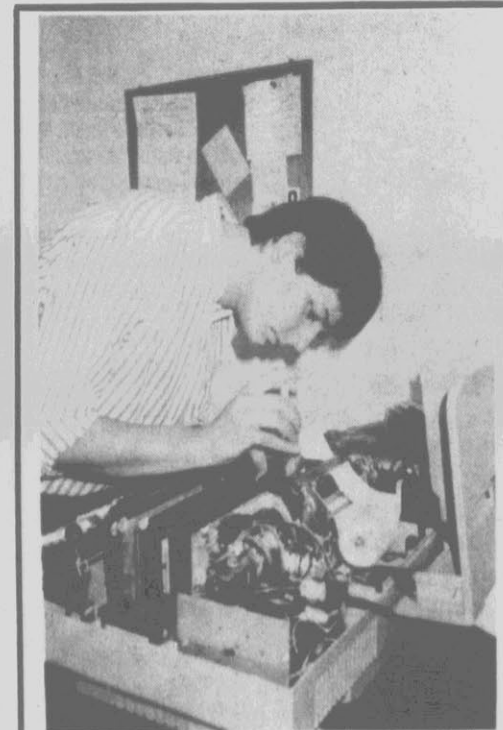

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Blackwell was the first woman physician in the United States. Born in 1821 in Bristol, England, she came to this country at the age of 10.

In 1849, she graduated from the Geneva, N.Y., College of Medicine. Eight years later, Blackwell and her sister, Emily, founded the Woman's Medical College of the New York Infirmary.

Continue Support Of Med District

A 3-3 deadlock isn't exactly a resounding defeat for a rezoning issue in the medical district but it is good enough to stop the request. And that position is one that has merit.

But the Greenville City Council should be even more firm if the issue of rezoning land along Stantonsburg Road from MD-2 to MD-3 comes before it. With last week's tie vote, the board has demonstrated support of zoning along the fringe of the medical district. Now, it should tenaciously back the integrity of the heart of the district — the property in the area surrounding Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

This area, now zoned medical-related office and professional, is crucial to the growth of a successful Eastern Carolina Medical Park. This location must be kept free of congestion and inappropriate development if it is to grow in the manner directed by the Medical District Study Plan.

There are, however, threats to its future.

The City Council voted in March to allow flower shops as a permitted use in MD-2 zoning — zoning which is earmarked for medical-related uses. Flower shops are commercial endeavors. Commercial development draws high volume traffic and increases congestion — both of which conflict with the decorum and quiet desirable in the area.

In addition, Mayor Ed Carter has asked the Planning & Zoning Commission to rezone a large segment of MD-2 land along Stantonsburg Road to MD-3 to allow more rapid development of the area. MD-3 is, of course, less restrictive than MD-2. It allows commercial development. Rezoning MD-2 to MD-3 across from the hospital would increase the problems of the area and damage the potential of the district.

Instead of suggesting changes detrimental to the district, elected city officials should be in the business of playing watchdog for its future. But rather than taking steps to alleviate traffic on already car-choked Stantonsburg Road, the city's mayor wants to make adjustments that will aggravate the predicament.

It doesn't make sense. The City Council should be prepared to call the bluff of such an issue, just as it put a quick stop last week to diluting zoning in the medical district's perimeter.

Good job, council members, for standing by the medical district. Now, strengthen your stance when faced with other medical zoning decisions. It is your job to battle menaces to progress and prosperity in this, the most promising resource the community and region possess.

A Fine Line

Peace In Atlanta For Democrats

Can there be peace in the Democratic Party's convention time?

The assured presidential nominee Michael Dukakis seems to be making progress in winning over the support of Jesse Jackson as the 40th Democratic National Convention moves along.

Monday Jackson pledged his cooperation, even if without total endorsement to the Dukakis-Lloyd Bentsen ticket. Considering that an endorsement by Jackson would have effectively put an end to his own efforts to have influence on the party platform and possible future developments, a pledge of cooperation was a giant step indeed.

Jackson, of course, had made a strong showing in the primaries only to lose to Dukakis. Then he was surprised by the choice of Bentsen for vice presidential nominee. Dukakis said he was unable to reach Jackson by phone before the announcement was made. The reverberations of that are still rumbling among Jackson supporters.

Regardless, it is generally accepted that the presidential nominee should be able to choose his running mate. The presidential candidate, after all, must be the one who carries the party to victory in November.

Dukakis has to walk a fine line. He must, and should, recognize Jesse Jackson's strength by including him and his followers in the plans for the campaign and possible presidency. Jackson has earned respect and recognition by bringing large numbers of new voters into the Democratic party. He should be given credit for this leadership. But Dukakis must be in charge. He cannot appear to be giving his own policy making powers to Jackson or anyone else.

Dukakis seems to have a handle on bringing unity to the Democratic National Convention. There is plenty of time for fireworks, but if Dukakis can indeed bring all the party factions together he should be able to wage a surprisingly strong campaign.

A Decent Man, But He Can't Dance

ATLANTA — It's midnight at the Fox theater, an emporium built in the old Moorish style. The vaulted ceiling is dotted with twinkling stars. The walls of a mythical Moorish city loom from the balcony and 1,000, maybe 1,500 people, most of them black, are singing, clapping, standing, dancing, hollering to heart-stopping Gospel music.

Right under the stage, two Secret Service men impassively scan the audience and down in the first row, center, is Jesse Jackson — the man, the candidate, the star, the demigod who, a preacher says from the stage, is the Moses of his people. The Holy Land is just across town at the Democratic convention center but there are years of desert still to go.

Jackson has just finished speaking. He has yelled his message: He will not give up. He will press on. He is right. He has a cause. And then he launches into his "I am somebody" routine. This is a middle-class black audience, some of the men are in tuxedos, the women in evening gowns. But they respond. "I am, Jackson yells "somebody." And the audience, by now on its feet, yells along with him: "I am somebody."

Across town and earlier, the Cable News Network had its own affair, Michael Dukakis and his running mate, Lloyd Bentsen, were there. A band played sweet dance music — "Tara's Theme" from "Gone With The Wind" to a fox-trot beat. Two kinds of pastas were served and lots of finger food. The ticket spoke, first Dukakis and then Bentsen. They moved no one — finger-food rhetoric for a finger-food crowd.

The Democratic Party has always been a collection of cultural clashes: The segregationist South and the liberal North, limousine liberals and blue-collar ethnics, hawks and doves, the followers of George Wallace and those of George McGovern. But it's been a long time since the cultural clash was so pronounced, when a candidate like Jackson represented not just an interest group, but a people with its own distinct American culture. To many whites, Jackson may seem a pushy sore loser. To blacks, though, he is the personification of dreams and aspirations — no mere politician but, like their music, an extension of themselves.

Al Green has come home. He is a gospel singer once again, abandoning mainstream rhythm and blues for the music where he first won fame. He tells the audience at the Fox that he's flown in from London to be with Jackson this night. His voice is a bit weak, he says, but then he lifts the ceiling with "Amazing Grace." One by one, people in the audience stand

The orderly mind of Michael Dukakis values process. His explanation of why he failed to reach Jackson to tell him that Bentsen had been chosen as vice-presidential candidate is a recitation of all the steps he went through. He called this person and then that person. He made the calls himself. He went through the process and therefore he cannot be held accountable. The audience at the Fox, though, does not value process. It is results that it seeks. The process can be a sham, a constitutional right written on solemn parchment but in disappearing ink. Somehow, the promise is never fulfilled. Footnotes riddle the offer — an historic sham of a real-estate deal. The patron patronizes but the house, in the end, goes to someone white. Sorry, that's the process.

In the heat of Atlanta, the cool pragmatism of politics prevailed and Jackson and Dukakis struck their deal. But the gulf between the Jackson and Dukakis camps is not just about a spot on the ticket, seats on the Democratic National Committee or the Manifest Destiny of Jesse Jackson's ambition. A culture, a history, an experience separates the two: hand-clapping, exuberant gospel vs. the sedate fox trot. As far as this audience was concerned, Mike Dukakis is a decent man. But he can't dance.

(c) 1988, Washington Post Writers Group

'But the gulf between the Jackson and Dukakis camps is not just about a spot on the ticket ... A culture, a history, an experience separates the two: hand-clapping, exuberant gospel vs. the sedate fox trot.'

What Will The Next Banner Say?

The car, shaped like a giant Oscar Meyer wiener, began to shadow us on the interstate between Louisville and Nashville. It was an odd enough sight in itself, but the reason the car never passed the motorcade became clear after a few miles, when the driver flashed a hand-lettered sign that said: "Go Jesse!"

It was a rare moment of spontaneity in the rolling Jesse Jackson media circus that brought the candidate to Atlanta this weekend. Jackson attempted to invoke memories of freedom rides and civil-rights marches along the route that mimicked in part the path Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman took in his destructive march through Georgia. But the trip had more the feel of a loosely organized bright idea.

Seven buses — six of them reserved for reporters, some from as far away as Japan and Australia — made up the bulk of the caravan, originally designed as a pied piper's dream in which the campaign would pick up delegates and supporters along the 700-plus miles from Chicago to the Democratic Party's convention site in Atlanta.

But the goal of picking up people along the way was tossed aside after the first stop. Jackson, it seemed, was having entirely too much fun entertaining the press.

Everywhere on the route, local news helicopters appeared to document the journey. Satellite news trucks popped up here and there, parked by the side of the road to record the action. The major networks planned to have choppers in the sky beaming the progress of the motorcade motorcade as it neared Atlanta.

During its closing weeks, the Jackson campaign's unofficial theme song was a gospel number popularized by James Cleveland several years back.

"I don't feel no ways tired" the lyrics say. "I've come too far from where I started from Nobody told me the road would be easy I don't believe He brought me this far to leave me."

The campaigner, basking in all the attention, may not have been tired, but it would have been difficult to find any member of Jackson's entourage who could make the same boast.

Jackson was a walking media event last week, occupying more limelight than even the party's prospective nominee, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis. Because of the fight that kept brewing between the two campaigns, Jackson's every statement seemed to warrant front-page attention and nightly television coverage. It was a publicity boon for Jackson — as, of course, it was designed to be.

As has frequently been the case on Jackson's way along the campaign trail this year, images were everything. When the caravan left Chicago, for instance, dozens of cameras captured Jackson and his wife, Jacqueline, waving goodbye from the steps of his luxury motorcoach, which one reporter tartly described as being furnished like a basement rec room.

What the cameras did not capture was that immediately afterward, she got off the bus and left her five children and a handful of aides to accompany the candidate to Atlanta.

Another image, captured in a front-page headline and photograph in Saturday's Nashville Tennessean, came courtesy of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., no stranger to presidential campaign posturing.

As an unwieldy overflow crowd spilled into the street in front of Jefferson Street Missionary Baptist Church, Gore ignored the scattered boos that greeted him and called Jackson's campaign a "stepping stone toward hope." That, coupled with an initially awkward attempt at the classic raised-armed victory pose, proved to work for Gore, who is not fondly regarded among Jackson supporters because of his primary-campaign alliance with hypercritical New York Mayor Edward I. Koch. "Jackson, Gore Stand United," the headline blared the next morning.

But Jackson knows no peers in his ability to snare a headline. "There are two things I want," he told one cheering crowd: "I want to win and I want you in."

As the bus trip unfolded, it was clear that at least some of Jackson's objectives had been achieved. A new button that appeared on lapels at stops along the way read "I'm a Jesseocrat," as good an indication as any of Jackson's visions for the Democratic Party.

Yet there has been an unmistakable air of finality during the campaign's final week, even as the news media breathlessly recorded each Jackson movement. In Chicago, Jackson posed with the reporters who regularly cover him for a series of farewell snapshots.

On Friday in Nashville, a sign taped neatly to the wall of the steamy, overheated Baptist church said: Jesse Jackson for Vice President. But a larger banner strung behind the pulpit where Jackson spoke — "Jesse You're a Winner" — began to sag and peel from the wall.

Local organizers attempted to reattach it twice before realizing that perhaps 20 TV cameras were recording their futile effort. In the end, they just took the sign down, in the process ripping another banner almost in half. That one said: "Where Do We Go From Here?"

The Graffiti's Gone, But Where's The Mural?

Analysis

ATLANTA — In years gone by Democrats came to their national conventions burning to fight for the soul of their party. But after enduring eight years of Republican rule, many members of the 1988 breed of Democrats are ready to trade their political souls for a better chance at the White House.

Witness the Dukakis-Jackson accord that was concluded Monday, last week's choice by liberal-backed Michael S. Dukakis of conservative Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as his running mate, and the skimpy party platform that was painstakingly drafted to avoid both specifics and controversy.

Under that patina of pragmatism and harmony, however, strongly held and significant differences between the ideological goals of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's black adherents and liberal supporters and the strategic aims of the Dukakis campaign can still be discerned.

And until those divisions are replaced by a clear picture of new Democratic goals, some Democrats worry, the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket could have a hard time defeating Republican George Bush in the fall.

More Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Escalating strife in Nicaragua is sending familiar ripples through Washington, where Congress appears headed for yet another fractious confrontation over U.S. policy in the region.

Riding a crest of anti-Sandinista sentiment in Congress, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., introduced legislation last week to provide a new $47 million in aid — $20 million of it in weapons — to the Contra rebels fighting the leftist regime in Managua.

The rebels have been without new U.S. military aid since February, and have been making do with the $17 million for food and clothing that Congress provided in earlier legislation. The humanitarian aid was designed to enhance peace talks which collapsed June 9. The talks have not gotten back on track.

The Reagan administration's strategy appears to be to get some version of the Dole aid bill passed in the more favorable climate of the Senate, as an amendment to a Pentagon money bill. That could happen soon after Congress returns July 26 from its break for the Democratic National Convention.

The measure then would go to a House-Senate negotiating committee, where the Contra aid amendment would be among the items subject to bargaining. Members of the House negotiating team, such as Reps. Bill Chappell, D-Fla., and John Murtha, D-Pa., look more favorably on Contra aid than the full House, and are seen as likely to accept the Senate provision.

That would mean House members, who have narrowly rejected Contra military aid in the last several showdowns, would be faced with a vote on an entire Pentagon spending package that includes aid to the rebels as a small section of the bill.

Democratic strategists concede the aid is far more likely to pass in that form, since it would be easier to get a yes vote from the three dozen or so "swing" members — most of them Democrats — who traditionally hold the balance of power on the issue.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, the leading congressional critic of the administration's Contra policy, was seeking to arrange a resumption of the peace talks. He said while he would not oppose an extension of humanitarian aid to the rebels, "I don't think there exists in Congress a desire to resume the war."

But chances for the new military aid could be enhanced even further if conditions inside Nicaragua continue to deteriorate. Last week's moves by the Sandinista government to suppress opposition demonstrations and close independent media outlets brought virtually unanimous condemnation from Congress, in the form of harshly worded resolutions.

Since the resolutions were passed, the government has sentenced opposition leaders arrested at a rally to six months in jail, and has confiscated a sugar plantation that was the country's largest private business.

Nicaragua also expelled U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton and seven colleagues last week.

The outcome of the newest Contra aid push will depend largely on what the Sandinistas do in the weeks ahead, said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the party's chief House vote counter.

If Managua begins to restore democratic freedoms, "the shrillness, the sharpness of the bitterness will have calmed down," Coelho said recently.

The Sandinista crackdowns have demonstrated a lack of concern about the peace process in the region, Coelho said. "If it looks like they're thumbing their noses at the process, you're going to have people supporting some alternative."

not to mention remaining unified enough to govern the country should weariness with the GOP give them the White House.

"Dukakis is trying to define the party by saying what we are not," said Ed Reilly, who polled for Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt's presidential campaign. "We need to say what we are."

Critical Democrats and independent analysts say that party leaders are still in flight from the New Dealish dogma they blame for their overwhelming defeats in 1980 and 1984 and have not yet begun to formulate a new credo that will replace traditional federal government activism as the ideological engine that drives the Democratic bandwagon.

"We've scratched the graffiti off the wall," says Al From, executive director of the Democratic Leadership Council, a group of moderate to conservative elected officials who have been trying to move the party toward the center. "But we have still got to draw a mural."

From and other centrists blame what they call "interest-group liberalism" for the Democratic decline. That ideological approach grew from the Depression-born commitment of the New Deal to use federal power to meet the needs of Americans suffering from economic and social disadvantages.

But over the decades, critics say, that outlook came to stand for nothing more than the collective appetites of the interest groups who supported it. Feeling neglected by this now-dominant Democratic ethos, urban ethnic voters in the North and middle-class whites in the South who had been the backbone of the party deserted in droves to support Republican Ronald Reagan.

Those are the swing voters Dukakis and the Democrats must win back to recapture the White House. To accomplish that, strategists concerned with long-term party building think Dukakis must offer a replacement for the interest-group-oriented credo — what From calls "a larger vision" that would both stir the consciences of middle-class Americans and satisfy their economic concerns.

No one expects Dukakis to formulate such a concept overnight. But the Dukakis campaign's insistence on avoiding specifics during the platform debate has raised questions over whether the candidate will attempt in the fall to spell out more explicitly than he has so far what a Dukakis presidency would mean to the lives of Americans.

The chief domestic policy disagreement between the Dukakis and Jackson forces over the platform draft — a 3,800-word document only about one-tenth the size of the 1984 platform — is over economic policy, specifically reducing the federal deficit.

The Jackson people want to raise taxes on a small percentage of wealthy Americans and freeze the defense budget in order to help pay for an expanded federal role in meeting social needs, particularly for education, where they want to double federal spending and child care.

Throughout the platform-drafting debate the Dukakis forces made it plain that they would not accept any proposal for a tax hike, or any specific commitment to increase federal spending.

Dukakis strategists think it would be politically harmful for the prospective nominee to offer more details about his fiscal policy, particularly an explanation of how he could cut the deficit without raising taxes. "Voters aren't stupid," said former Maryland Rep. Michael Barnes, Dukakis' point man on the platform drafting committee. "They know that the things candidates say about what they are going to do, if they get too specific, they often are not able to implement."

"I would like to see him (Dukakis) win this election," Barnes said. "I think we can help him do that with a platform that retains the flexibility we have in this draft."

After Dukakis wins the election, Barnes said, "he'll sit down with the congressional leadership and work out a strategy for the kind of specificity that they'll have to have for this first budget."

Even though a Los Angeles Times poll of convention delegates showed considerable support for Jackson's positions on economic policy, many of them seem willing to go along with the Dukakis position in the interest of unity and victory.

"I know what it'll take to get the party elected," said Missouri delegate Deleta Williams, originally a Gephardt supporter, now backing

Dukakis. "I'm willing to do it that way — that's the party goal, and what I feel personally I'll just set aside. I think most Democrats are willing to. We haven't in the past, but we're willing to now."

Given his current lead in the polls over his expected Republican adversary George Bush, few expect Dukakis to be more explicit in the near future. But some analysts think this is a strategic mistake. "They (the Dukakis campaign) are counting on Bush's negatives to hold him down," and allow Dukakis to avoid specifics, said Kathleen Jamieson, a political communications specialist at the University of Texas. But Jamieson cautioned: "The negative feelings about Bush aren't that deeply held."

Moreover she added, the same polls that give confidence to the Dukakis campaign offer Bush a potential benefit. "The polls make Bush an underdog," she said, which means that he would be freer to campaign negatively against Dukakis without being damaged by a voter's backlash. "As an underdog Bush can attack Dukakis and attack him successfully," she said.

Sniper Laughed During His Spree

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A 24-year-old North Carolina man, charged with killing four people after opening fire at random on passing cars in a residential area, was heard laughing between shots, several witnesses said.

"Every time you'd hear a shot go off, he'd laugh," said witness R. Timothy Beck.

Four people were killed and five others wounded late Sunday night when Michael Charles Hayes of Clemmons, armed with a rifle, opened fire in a two-block area in southern Forsyth County, authorities said.

The 12-minute rampage ended when sheriff's deputies shot and critically wounded the gunman after he opened fire on the officers. Authorities said the shooting suspect was the operator of a moped shop.

Authorities also said his family apparently had tried to have him committed for psychiatric treatment.

Hayes had begun firing into the air in the small field behind the shop about dusk Sunday, neighborhood residents said.

Stanley Parks, who lives just across the road from the shop, said Hayes had run up his driveway and banged on the door, shouting "Come on out, I'm going to get you."

Hayes then fired the gun into the house, shattering the glass of an entry window, Parks said. Another bullet went through the entryway wall.

Parks said he had sent his wife and 15-month-old son into a back room while he called police. "He was firing at everything that moved," Parks said.

"He was laughing real strange," Forsyth County Sheriff Preston Oldham said there appeared to be no connection between any of the victims, and investigators thought the gunman did not know any of them. Most were near their homes when they were shot.

Hayes was shot six times by deputies and was listed in critical condition, but a hospital spokesman said the chances for his recovery was good. He was shot in the back, groin and leg.

Dead at the scene were Thomas Walter Nicholson, 24, of Winston-Salem; Crystal Susan Cantrell, 16, of Winston-Salem; and Melinda Yvonne Hayes, 21, of Lexington. Oldham said Miss Hayes was not a relative of Hayes.

Ronald Lee Hull, 32, of Winston-Salem, was dead on arrival at Forsyth Memorial Hospital, Oldham said. Hull's wife, Darlene Welborn

SHERIFF PRESTON OLDHAM

Hull, 29, also was shot and was listed in satisfactory condition at N.C. Baptist Hospital, said Tyler Cox, a spokesman for the hospital.

Also hospitalized at Baptist was Jeffrey Alan Parks, 28, of Winston-Salem, whose condition had been upgraded from critical to serious but stable.

Three other victims were taken to Forsyth Memorial Hospital. James Gray Boyd, 45, of Clemmons, was treated and released. Gregory R. Terrell, 18, of Winston-Salem, was listed in satisfactory condition; and Claude D. Eagle Jr., of Winston-Salem, was listed in satisfactory condition, said Cheryl Schwabb, clinical supervisor.

Some UNC Officials Seeking Faculty Raises

GREENSBORO (AP) — Although University of North Carolina System officials are adamant in their opposition to a tuition increase, some chancellors, trustees and faculty members say a small increase might be necessary to help the state keep pace in faculty pay.

"Tuition is very, very low in comparison with other schools," said Paul Hardin, the new chancellor at UNC-Chapel Hill. "It could be higher than it is, and the state of North Carolina (could) still realize its dream of very, very moderately priced higher education."

The average college professor in North Carolina earned about $30,000 last year — $7,170 below the national average — and forecasts call for the gap to widen in the UNC system.

Last week, the General Assembly approved a budget that includes a smaller-than-hoped-for 4.5 percent pay raise for state employees, including faculty members in the UNC and community college systems.

"On my own campus, everyone is a little bit disappointed," Fred Hinson, an associate professor of biology at Western Carolina University, said. "Everybody was expecting at least 5 percent."

North Carolina's percentage increase is the fourth lowest among the 10 Southern states that have approved budgets this year. And it's more than a percentage point below the regional average, which is about 5.7 percent.

"That's more bad news," said Hinson, the new chairman of the UNC Faculty Assembly, which represents faculty throughout the university system. Hinson said he was speaking for himself and not the faculty group.

"For the system to keep up nationally, it is going to have to get (higher pay) than it has been or we are going to lose faculty throughout the whole system. It's not an isolated problem," he said.

The size of the raise means North Carolina will likely lose ground this year — at least in the Southeast — to states that have been pumping significant amounts of money into faculty pay.

Virginia and Tennessee are good examples.

"Virginia has been making big moves and doing it very consciously," said Joseph Marks, an associate with the Southern Regional Education Board, which tracks trends in secondary and post-secondary education in the region.

Since the 1981-82 academic year, Virginia has boosted faculty pay at all public, post-secondary institutions by 57.6 percent, while Tennessee has increased its pay by 55.4 percent.

In an overall ranking of the region's faculty salaries, Virginia moved from fifth to first and Tennessee jumped from 15th to sixth, ahead of North Carolina.

During the same period, North Carolina increased its salaries, including those for community colleges, by 40.2 percent, which is slightly more than the regional average gain of 38.4 percent.

That increase made the average faculty salary in the state's university and community college systems $32,799 and boosted the state's regional ranking from ninth to seventh.

When only UNC system schools are compared in the region, North Carolina does much better, coming in third with an average salary $37,552 for 1987-88.

That's slightly above the national average of $37,170.

The state, however, still trails Virginia, at $40,601, and Florida, at $38,713, in pay for university faculty.

Marks said Virginia had improved its salaries by raising tuition.

In 1986-87, for example, Virginia raised tuition at the University of Virginia by 9.9 percent. That made in-state tuition and fees there $2,238, compared with $820 for in-state students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

FBI Kept A Watch On Ervin

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The FBI kept an electronic surveillance log on the late U.S. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. of Morganton, a Durham attorney learned while doing research for articles about the relationship between the federal agency and the U.S. Supreme Court.

But information the FBI has released does not make it clear if the surveillance was ordered because of Ervin's role as chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities, better known as the Watergate committee, said Alexander Charns, an attorney and journalist in Durham.

Nor is Charns, 31, sure how the surveillance was carried out — whether Ervin's phone was tapped, whether he called someone the FBI was monitoring, or whether his name was mentioned while agents were taping the conversations of others.

In April, Charns filed suit against the FBI, accusing it of arbitrarily withholding data he requested through the Freedom of Information Act.

He has received some of the files, but the FBI says the rest of the information is exempt under the FOIA, he told the Asheville Citizen. The act gives the public access to previously inaccessible material kept by government agencies.

Charns said he is also probing the FBI and Ervin's relationship, which he contends soured prior to Watergate when Ervin, serving on the Senate Constitutional Rights Subcommittee, asked the FBI for information about surveillance of political dissidents.

Charns filed his first Ervin-related FOIA request in April 1985. The FBI office in Charlotte searched its material and sent it on to FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C., which released 178 of 191 pages. Two files relating to Ervin had been destroyed according to regulations, the FBI wrote him.

Charns later discovered a third file had been destroyed against regulations, he told the newspaper.

In August 1987 the FBI wrote that one electronic surveillance log on Ervin existed but that no information about it would be released, according to Charns' complaint.

Charns, whose work is supported by a 1984 grant from the Fund for Investigative Journalism in Washington, said the FBI acknowledged it has surveillance records in which the late former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart called someone it was monitoring.

The FBI said it would not release the records but did say Stewart called the person twice, Charns said. Stewart was not the target of the wiretap, the FBI said.

Stewart retired in 1981 and was replaced by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. He died in 1985, the same year Ervin died.

The names of two other Supreme Court justices have been picked up by FBI wiretaps, he said.

Scout Is Going Home

WEAVERVILLE (AP) — A Boy Scout who was struck by lightning Saturday during an electrical storm in Weaverville was scheduled to go home Monday, authorities said.

Greg King, 12, was admitted to Memorial Mission Hospital's intensive care unit in Asheville after the incident Saturday evening. On Sunday, his condition was upgraded to good, a nursing supervisor said.

Also injured were Kenny Hensley, 11; Daniel Crowder, 13, and Scoutmaster Gene Stirewalt, 41. They were treated for burns and released.

The incident occurred shortly before 6:30 p.m. Saturday on a gravel road that leads to Hamburg Mountain tower.

Three other Boy Scouts and another adult supervisor were present when the accident occurred but weren't injured.

Two of the uninjured Boy Scouts ran to a telephone 2 miles away to call for help, said Joe Glasscock, Scout Executive for the Daniel Boone Scout Council.

Glasscock said the boys had attended a first-aid training class just a couple hours before the incident "but unfortunately it did not include what to do when lightning hits."

The Boy Scouts quickly administered first aid to the injured, Glasscock said, and "did a great job. They packed the injured in ice and treated for shock and sent two for help."

Glasscock said about an hour passed before help arrived.

Farm Directory Is Set

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Agriculture and the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service have set up a statewide directory to help needy farmers get hay.

"From Wake County east the supply of hay is fairly plentiful this year," said Victor Lynn, extension director for Wake County. "But from Wake County west they're running short."

The directory will make it easier for farmers across the state to find names, addresses, phone numbers and the going prices for hay supplies, said James Green, an extension specialist on forage crops and pasture at North Carolina State University.

It also contains information on federal hay hotline programs.

Extension agents in each county can plug into the Extension Service, Electronic Mail System to help a farmer on either side of the demand for hay this year, Lynn said.

Search Is Continuing For Crew Of Helicopter

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Coast Guard cutter searched off the Golden Gate today for eight crew members of a Navy helicopter that exploded over the open sea while on a training exercise, officials said.

"There's still no sign of survivors, but we're hoping and looking," Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Jack Hardin said. The search was hampered by dense fog that reduced visibility to 150 yards.

The MH-53E Sea Dragon helicopter was 11 miles northwest of the Golden Gate and five miles off Marin County when it vanished Monday in a burst of two explosions, Navy officials said.

Search crews found scattered wreckage that included seven helmets, Coast Guard Petty Officer Thomas Cowan said, adding that no survivors were expected. The cutter Blackhaw continued the search overnight with spotlights.

Names of the missing crewmen were withheld until the Navy had notified relatives.

Crew members of the Northern Lights, a fishing boat, reported they heard two explosions about 11 a.m. "and saw the helicopter disappear from the sky," Cowan said.

"Initially we had some reports there were explosives on the helicopter. It turned out they were pyrotechnics — flares — and small arms ammunition, which poses no threat to shipping," said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Ken Freeze.

The explosions also were seen by those on board the Lovely Martha, a salmon fishing boat. Pete Giddings, a KGO-TV weatherman who was aboard the boat, said, "All of a sudden, I saw a puff of smoke. ... Eleven seconds later, we heard the first explosion. Four or five seconds later, we heard the second explosion."

The Coast Guard closed the Golden Gate to ships for about half an hour after the explosions while two Navy helicopters and two Coast Guard choppers joined the Blackhaw, two smaller Coast Guard vessels and the Northern Lights in the search.

The helicopter, which was conducting a routine mine countermeasure exercise, was attached to Mine Countermeasures Squadron 15, based at Alameda Naval Air Station on the eastern shore of San Francisco Bay, said Navy spokeswoman Virginia Felker.

The MH-53E Sea Dragon, along with its sister aircraft, the CH-53E Super Stallion, is the largest helicopter in the West, Navy officials said. The helicopter is 99 feet long with the rotors turning, weighs 73,500 pounds and can travel at 150 knots. The minesweeping version, the MH-53E, has a larger fuel capacity than the CH-53, allowing it to fly farther and faster.

The MH-53E, manufactured by the Sikorsky Aircraft Division of the United Technologies Corp., sweeps mines by pulling a "sledge" through the water, but it was not doing so at the time of the explosions, the Navy said.

Meese Lashes Out At Counsel's Report

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III says he acted "legally, ethically and properly," despite an independent counsel's conclusions that he probably broke two tax laws and twice violated a conflict-of-interest law.

Meese mounted a strong counterattack to the report by independent counsel James McKay, who said Monday that "the toughest calls we made were not to proceed" with criminal charges against the attorney general.

"It was not a close call to find that there were probable violations," McKay said on the "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour" television program.

McKay said Meese and his wife, Ursula, probably violated two sections of the Internal Revenue Code by failing to report and promptly pay tax on a net capital gain of $20,706 on the sale of $54,581 in securities in 1985.

McKay noted that Meese filed an amended return on Feb. 6 of this year, "shortly after the scheduling of the grand jury appearances for the Meeses' accountants" in connection with McKay's criminal investigation of the matter.

The Meeses paid $2,875 in overdue federal tax payments and interest with the amended return, and, according to McKay, apparently may owe an additional $600 because of an error made by his accountants in underestimated capital gains.

McKay said, "we had a situation where there's no pattern of violation of the tax laws" and that Meese "in effect, you might say, is a first offender."

Saying he was outraged and appalled by McKay's findings, Meese said that "in every matter under investigation by the independent counsel ... I have always acted legally, ethically and properly, and any implication by the independent counsel that I have in any way violated any law is absolutely false."

Meese said that if Justice Department lawyers had issued such a document "they'd be fired."

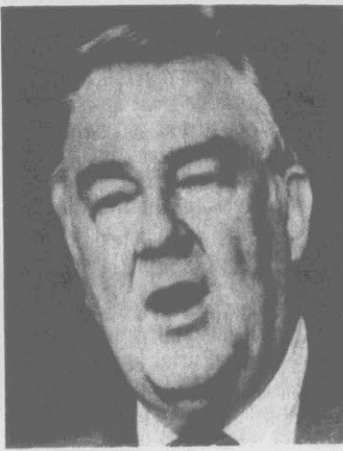

Washington tax lawyers Cono Namorato and Richard Timbie offered their opinion, at the request of Meese's lawyers, concluding that "the ... facts do not describe a violation of any criminal provision of the Internal Revenue Code."

The tax lawyers said Meese candidly disclosed the securities transactions to his accountant, John McKean, and that he followed McKean's advice on how to file a return in the absence of the necessary records needed to compute the original cost of the securities.

McKay's report found that Meese probably twice violated the conflict-of-interest law in connection with his holdings of $15,000 in regional Bell telephone stock.

McKay said Meese owned the stock in the regional Bell companies in 1985 and 1986, when he set in motion a review process that led to a reversal of Justice Department policy. McKay also found that Meese participated in discussions of proposed legislation to shift regulatory responsibility for the breakup of AT&T from a federal court and the Justice Department to the Federal Communications Commission.

EDWIN MEESE

Department to the Federal Communications Commission.

"Our conclusion was that although there was a probable violation, there was no venality involved," McKay said. "Mr. Meese was not lining his own pocket, so to speak. Had he not participated in these matters, the decisions of the Department of Justice probably would have been the same."

Meese's lawyers have characterized his meetings with executives of four regional Bell companies which were seeking a reversal in Justice Department policy in 1985 and 1986 as courtesy calls, but McKay disagreed.

"The common theme was to protest the restrictions imposed" on the companies under the consent decree "and to advocate that the Department of Justice improve the situation," said the independent counsel's report. "The meetings ... cannot be characterized as non-substantive. At the same time, according to witnesses at the Department of Justice, nothing of significance resulted from the meetings."

Documents' Release Is Ordered

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — A federal magistrate has given the government 10 days to appeal his order for the public release of three search warrants and other documents related to a massive investigation of alleged fraud in the competition for Pentagon weapons contracts.

U.S. Magistrate James Kenkel on Monday directed that both the warrants used to search three homes and the inventory of items taken by authorities be made public. The homes searched were those of a senior Air Force procurement officer and two private consultants.

Kenkel said the more sensitive affidavits used to support the request for the warrants could remain sealed another 45 days.

The government's investigation centers on allegations that defense contractors and consultants, many of them former military men, bribed Pentagon officials for contracting details that could be vital in winning bids worth billions of dollars.

"The very scope of (this) investigation ... has overriding and broad public interest," the judge said, suggesting the public would be better served if news stories on the subject were based on the legal documents instead of rumor.

Meanwhile, the government released documents in Los Angeles on Monday showing that wiretaps were used to gather information on three defense contractors. Northrop Corp., Teledyne Electronics and Litton Industries.

No details of the wiretaps, disclosed in four search warrants ordered released by U.S. District Judge David Kenyon, were given.

That release came in response to a move by The Los Angeles Times and other media organizations to unseal search warrant affidavits.

The government initially said it would also release a description of all premises searched. But three attorneys representing unidentified employees of the three defense contractors objected, saying such a disclosure might lead to identification of their clients.

Joseph J. Aronica, assistant U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia where the probe is centered, said no decision had been made on whether to appeal Kenkel's decision, which requires the unsealing of the search warrants and inventory documents within 10 days if no appeal is filed.

The request to unseal the documents was made in a petition filed by The Washington Post, which argued that a month already had passed since the documents were put under seal and there has been considerable public interest in the investigation.

Federal prosecutors argued that disclosure of information contained in the documents would hinder their continuing investigations.

The documents, including the list of items taken by police, "would give a broad outline of what the government is looking for, what the government has found and more important what the government doesn't have," Aronica said.

The documents ordered unsealed pertain to Victor Cohen, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force in charge of buying tactical command, control and communications systems; William Sanda, a defense industry consultant; and Richard Seelmeyer, the operator of an air charter service and former congressional staffer involved in defense appropriations.

Dukakis, Jackson Holding Spotlight

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Dukakis, firmly in control, yields center stage tonight to Jesse Jackson for a campaign finale certain to ignite a thunderous rally at the Democratic National Convention and likely put a stamp of unity on the party's battle for the White House.

Jackson, the runner-up reluctant to quit, was given 28 minutes — starting at 10:21 p.m. EDT — to address the 5,372 delegates and alternates, following a video tribute to his campaign and his cause.

"The tone has to do with bold leadership," Jackson said, previewing his remarks. "That's what we need: new direction, sound ideas and American must never surrender to be bigger and be better."

Both Dukakis and Jackson will have their names put in nomination for the presidency but it will be Dukakis who stands at the podium Thursday night to claim the prize.

With his rival wielding overwhelming power, Jackson struck a gentleman's agreement on platform disputes, agreeing to withdraw 10 of 13 minority planks he championed.

Party sources said Dukakis would instruct his delegates to vote down Jackson's call for higher taxes on the wealthy and no first use of nuclear weapons, and that Jackson's call for a Palestinian homeland would be debated and then withdrawn without a vote.

In a convention fine tuned for television viewers, the Democrats set aside their customary wrangling over rules and credentials — adopting reports from those committees in a blink of an eye — and brought forth humorist Garrison Keillor and a bevy of sixth graders to recite the Pledge of Allegiance and sing the National Anthem.

The convention opened — on time — with attacks on the record of the Reagan administration and the competence of George Bush, the certain presidential nominee of the Republican Party.

Texas State Treasurer Ann Richards, the keynote speaker, said Bush, in eight years as Reagan's vice

A CROWDED FLOOR — Delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta turned their attention to the podium Monday night, where Ann Richards, Texas state treasurer delivered the keynote address. Enjoying a smoothly run convention designed for the television audience, delegates dispensed with the usual wrangling over rules and adopted resolutions put onto the floor by various rules committees.

president, "hasn't displayed the slightest interest in anything we care about. And now that he's after a job he can't get appointed to, he's like Columbus discovering America. He's found child care. He's found education."

"Poor George, he can't help it. He was born with a silver foot in his mouth," she said, sending the crowd into roars of laughter and applause.

Dukakis telephoned her afterwards with congratulations. "What am I going to say on Thursday? You said it all," he told her.

No one could accuse the Democrats of conducting their business in a smoke-filled room. Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk ruled at that outset that smoking was forbidden.

Neither Dukakis nor Jackson made an appearance at the convention Monday, instead watching it on television — when they weren't on television themselves in network interviews.

"It's a madhouse, but I love it," state Sen. Paul Feleiciano of Wichita, Kan., shouted to a camera crew on the convention floor. He said the summit meeting between Dukakis and Jackson earlier in the day had put many delegates at ease.

"Sure, people are still loyal to their candidate, but we're sitting hand in hand, laughing and joking. The animosity is not there anymore," Feleiciano said.

Not everyone felt that way. William Crawford, a Jackson supporter from Indianapolis, said, "George Bush is not attractive, but I don't think we can say Dukakis at any price."

State Sen. Hank Sanders of Selma, Ala., was more emphatic. "At some particular time, dignity becomes more important than any election."

Given any excuse, Jackson's supporters waved their banners and chanted "Jesse, Jesse." They were outnumbered by Dukakis' supporters, who responded with cries of "Dukakis, Dukakis."

The hit of the evening was Richards' keynote address, a homespun blend of pointed quips, easy humor and emotional descriptions of Americans in distress.

Applauded more than 50 times, she got her first ovation when she reeled off a litany of Reagan administration officials unpopular with the Democrats.

"I want to announce to this nation that in a little more than 100 days, the Reagan, Meese, Deaver, Nofziger, Poindexter, North, Weinberger, Watt, Gorsuch, Lavelle, Stockman, Haig, Bork, Noriega, George Bush-era will be over," she said to sustained applause.

In a bow to the runner-up, Ms. Richards said, "Jesse Jackson is a leader and a teacher who can open our hearts and our minds and stir our very souls."

In contrast, she said, President Reagan, for eight years, "has pretended to us that he cannot hear our questions over the helicopter noise."

"We know he doesn't want to answer," she continued. "But we have a lot of questions. And when we get our questions asked, or there's a leak or an investigation, the only answer we get is, 'I don't know,' or 'I forgot.'"

She said Dukakis is a straight shooter who "knows that this country is on the edge of a great new era ... that we're not afraid of change ... that we're looking for thoughtful, truthful, strong leadership."

Former President Jimmy Carter, his hair turned gray, exhorted the delegates to pursue "Unity, one more time, unity."

In a revised version of his 1976 campaign slogan, Carter said, "My name is Jimmy Carter and I am not running for president. Did you hear that George?" It was a pointed jab at Bush, who often holds up the Carter years to ridicule.

Dukakis and Jackson met for nearly three hours Monday morning to clear up disputes that had threatened to disrupt the convention. After their talks, Jackson said he would not challenge Dukakis' selection of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as running mate.

N.C. Delegates Face Platform Battle Tonight

ATLANTA (AP) — Heading into a potentially explosive round of platform debates, North Carolina delegates loyal to Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson sounded conciliatory notes toward each other but did not appear eager to back off their positions.

"We've got some issues to bring forward," state Rep. Dan Blue, chairman of Jackson's state campaign, said Monday as the North Carolinians swayed to patriotic tunes on the opening night of the Democratic National Convention. "I happen to believe they're important."

The 41-member Jackson team was likely to press the national campaign's case for at least some of the 13 minority planks the candidate wants to add to the party platform. The talks were scheduled for the North Carolina delegation's breakfast caucus.

Blue declined to say which issues the state's Jackson team would push. Dukakis has said four of Jackson's planks are unacceptable and non-negotiable: recognition of the Palestinians' right to an independent homeland, a no-first-use nuclear weapons policy, a five-year defense spending freeze and tax increases for the wealthy.

State Sen. Russell Walker, the Dukakis state co-chairman, said he knew of no issue on which the probable nominee might give ground. But the retired Asheboro merchant added: "Compromise is a part of putting any platform together and we will have compromise."

Blue, a state representative from Raleigh, and Walker held a joint news conference Monday after Dukakis and Jackson announced they had made progress in negotiations aimed at resolving their differences and presenting a united front.

"At least the thickness about the air seems to have been parted," Blue said after returning to the North Carolina convention headquarters from a meeting of Jackson delegates. "The important thing is that two people who have the ability to make decisions that are binding to some degree are in fact talking."

Blue declined to predict whether Jackson's North Carolina leadership explicitly would endorse the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket.

"The question ... is one that really can't be determined until the final platform is written, until ... the major players sort of feel that they are in harmony and moving forward," Blue said. "That's what the ultimate test is."

Floor fights over some platform issues are likely but would be "fruitful and healthy," Blue said.

Relations between the two camps have never faltered on the state level, Walker said.

"North Carolina Democrats have never taken the Jackson supporters lightly," said Walker, a former state party chairman who with Blue is co-chairman of a legislative budget subcommittee. "I feel like we'll be working together in the fall."

Other North Carolina delegation leaders hailed the Dukakis-Jackson developments.

"It seems that they have reached an accommodation, that they are able now to move forward," Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said. "Jackson understands the role he will play in the campaign and afterwards. Dukakis seems to be comfortable with that."

Sen. Terry Sanford, speaking to reporters after a luncheon at the delegation's hotel headquarters, said the seriousness of the Dukakis-Jackson rift had been exaggerated from the start.

"I think peace has been there all the time," Sanford said. "It's now been confirmed with the public and that's good."

Jordan said Dukakis "came out very clearly as the person in charge" at a news conference with his choice for a running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, and Jackson.

"This is Dukakis' convention," Jordan said. "There may still be some votes taken on the floor where we have differences of opinion ... but we should have smoother sailing."

Disagreements temporarily were put aside during the evening floor session, as the North Carolina delegation — seated near the front of the arena, almost directly opposite the podium — roared approval of the speeches and entertainment by such luminaries as humorist Garrison Keillor and Christian jazz trumpeter Phil Driscoll.

The Convention At A Glance

ATLANTA (AP) — Here, at a glance, are developments at the Democratic National Convention:

CONVENTION OPENS

The 40th Democratic National Convention was called to order on time by party chairman Paul Kirk. Departing from a quarter-century tradition, delegates quickly approved without debate the seating of more than 4,000 delegates and adopted major rules changes without dissent. Kirk, boasting about the unusual unity, said, "Don't tell me the Democratic Party doesn't know how to do its business."

PARTY PLATFORM

The Democratic delegates take up the party's platform today, with sources saying the Dukakis and Jackson campaigns have agreed to an abbreviated floor fight over the challenger's call for higher taxes. The sources, speaking only on condition they not be identified, said brief debate also would be held on Jesse Jackson's call for a promise that the United States will never make first use of nuclear weapons. The sources also said the two sides have agreed that Jackson's Middle East plank, which endorsed self-determination for the Palestinians, will be discussed but then withdrawn without a vote.

DUKAKIS-JACKSON

Michael Dukakis won rival Jesse Jackson's cooperation during a three-hour summit meeting. After the negotiating session in Dukakis' hotel room, Jackson pledged unity in the fall campaign and Dukakis promised an increased role for Jackson's supporters in the Democratic Party. Dukakis said he wanted Jackson and his millions of supporters to be "deeply involved" in the campaign.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

In her keynote address, Texas State Treasurer Ann Richards called for an end to eight years of Republican rule and said Dukakis would "unify this country and get on with the future." Ms. Richards praised Dukakis and Jackson and heaped scorn on President Reagan and Vice President George Bush. She said Bush had been born with a "silver foot in his mouth."

CARTER SPEECH

Former President Jimmy Carter used his few moments on the stage to appeal for harmony and take a few jabs at Republicans. "My name is Jimmy Carter, and I am not running for president. Did you hear that George?" he said in a retort to Bush, who likes to denigrate Dukakis as a Jimmy Carter Democrat.

DUKAKIS

After meeting with Jackson, the Massachusetts governor attended a luncheon in honor of Carter, joined with Democratic congressional leaders to demonstrate support for plant closing legislation and told aides he wanted to go for his customary "power walk" in the convention city streets without a trailing horde of television cameras.

JACKSON

Jackson struck a conciliatory tone toward Dukakis, declaring, "We did not come here for fireworks. We came here for noble works." Jackson said he would have his name entered into nomination for president Wednesday night, but added he had no plans to contest Dukakis' selection of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen for the vice presidential nomination.

PROTESTS

Gay rights activists staged a "die-in" memorial to AIDS victims while police thwarted a gay "kiss-in" as groups competed for attention on the convention's opening day. Veteran civil rights activist Hosea Williams led a march from the gravesite of Martin Luther King Jr. to protest what he considered to be Jackson's ill treatment in Dukakis' choice of Bentsen as his running mate.

Carine Mirakian Is Bride

WESTFIELD, N.J. — Holy Trinity Roman Catholic Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Carine Sonia Mirakian and Robert Peter Nenzo Jr., both of Greenville, N.C., Saturday at 3 p.m.

Denise Mirakian of Oldwick, N.J., and the late George Mirakian, and Dr. Robert P. Nenzo of Grimesland and the late Mary C. Nenzo are parents of the couple.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. John Capparelli. Brian Dougherty presented a program of organ music.

Veronique Mirakian of Oldwick was honor attendant for her sister. Bridesmaids were Rosette Wheeler of Norton, Mass., Mary Koepfel of Toms River, N.J., Ann Biller of Pinckney, Mich., and Elizabeth Hower-ton of Fort Bragg, N.C.

Junior flower girls were Armelle Vessier and Gaelle Vessier, both of Paris, France, and Heather Hower-ton of Fort Bragg.

The best man was Jeffrey Schneider of San Diego. Ushers were Henry Rosen of Mountainside, N.J., Tim Jones of Metuchen, N.J., Carmen Biller of Pinckney, Mich., and Gary Howerton of Fort Bragg, N.C.

The bride graduated from Seton Hall University in South Orange, N.J. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., and is associated with the King and Queen Restaurant in Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Gregory Mirakian, wore a formal-length white satin gown with a cathedral train. The neckline was adorned with lace, pearls and sequins. The sleeves were satin with lace, pearls and sequins. The bodice was fitted and flowed into a full skirt edged in lace. Her fingertip veil with blusher was accented with a pink ribbon flowing in back. She carried a bouquet of white roses, freesia, cascading ivy with a pink ribbon.

The honor attendant wore a tea-length gown of light pink satin overlaid with lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses, pink carnations and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids were dressed identically and their flowers were similar. The flower girl wore a lavender and pink dress and carried a basket of flowers. The junior flower girls wore white dress trimmed with pink ribbon and carried small flower baskets.

A reception was held at the Town and Campus in West Orange, N.J.

After a wedding trip to St. Thomas in the Caribbean, the couple will live in Greenville.

Press Release Was Dumped

During the years I've been writing this column, I have prided myself on the fact that I cannot be bought and I don't use handouts (cute releases touting products).

A few days ago, however, a box arrived with an intriguing press release for a paperback book titled "Have a Love Affair With Your Husband Before Someone Else Does."

Before I could say, "It would serve her right," I parted the tissue and there were all the ingredients to save my marriage. First, there was a box of highly scented potpourri with a note that said, "To begin the infatuation, open the flap up over the bag and pour into your favorite container."

Next were two candles that had melted, a fake rose, a scratch pad that said, "Meet me for lunch," a bottle of vanilla creme lotion for massage, a copy of the book, and a hand mirror with a note on it that read, "Look at yourself. You're more beautiful than you realize."

At my age, I can't afford the luxury of reading dedications, tables of contents, forewords or first chapters, so I got right to the last chapter of the book.

In the previous chapters it was assumed we both lost weight, had our hair styled, showered together, fantasized and had an encounter over the clothes hamper. Now we were ready to embark on a romantic vacation together.

It suggested we climb into our red sports car with the top down and speed to a boat where we would set sail, anchoring each evening in a different cove. At the end of the day we would slip into each other's arms and into a perfect sleep, exhausted from the sea and the sun.

Not since Marabel Morgan sent Saran Wrap stock soaring with "The Total Woman" have I been so titillated. Then it hit me. Something was wrong with the title of the book.

Women are romantic by nature. (Didn't the survey by Woman's Day report 87 percent took romance over hot passion?) They don't need manuals or props. They're the ones who get choked up when they get a food slicer that makes rosettes out of radishes just because "Harvey bought it himself."

It's the woman who pulls back the covers to discover her husband has outlined her body in chalk and thinks it's funny. Is that a prelude to romance or what! It's women who watch every miniseries Jaelyn Smith ever made and breathe heavily when they read Danielle Steel.

I gathered up all the stuff, put it back in the box and dumped it on my husband's nightstand. I altered the title of the book to read, "Have a Love Affair With Your WIFE Before Someone Else Does."

My husband paused to set the clock, picked up the mirror and stuck out his tongue and said, "Do your gums ever bleed when you brush your teeth?"

Engagement Announced

James and Billie Sue Norman of Greenville announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn Zimmerman, to Robert Tyrone Taylor, son of Bobby and Nancy Taylor of Ayden. The wedding will take place Aug. 26.

Body Chemistry Studied

CHICAGO (AP) — Dinosaurs and human beings share a common body material, according to a researcher who has spent more than three decades uncovering the elusive chemistry that produces bones, teeth and other hard tissue in the human body.

"Proteins that have been found in dinosaur bones are still found in human bones today," says Dr. Melvin Glimcher, a Harvard Medical School professor and director of orthopedic research at The Children's Hospital, Boston.

"One of the proteins that plays a critical role in the formation of human tooth enamel today also is found in 200-million-year-old dinosaur teeth," he adds.

His research suggests that the evolutionary mechanism that produced hard bone in dinosaurs 200 million years ago is still at work building bone in humans today.

Glimcher, who has received numerous awards and honors for his work in orthopedics, added a new prize recently: $25,000 from Bristol-Myers-Zimmer for outstanding orthopedic research. Earlier, The Children's Hospital won a $250,000 grant from the company for the orthopedic research program under Glimcher's direction. Both awards were determined by independent panels of leading orthopedic researchers.

Bone-related disorders rank second only to diseases of the circulatory system in total costs for treatment and disability — more than $65 billion annually, according to the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons.

Some 23 million Americans require medical attention or must restrict their activity because of arthritis, a crippling joint disease, notes the academy, which reports that there are more than a million hospitalizations for fractures and more than a half million for arthritis each year.

Osteoporosis, or bone softening due to the loss of calcium, occurs in nearly 90 percent of women over 75, orthopedists say. This condition is a major risk factor for bone fractures in the elderly.

Glimcher's research is aimed at using the body's own chemistry to prevent, arrest or reverse these diseases.

Readers Like Abby's 'Dressing-Down'

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This concerns "Frosted in Lake Forest" who criticized a mother for bringing her children to church in their pajamas. I want to thank "Frosted" for setting me straight.

I had always believed that God's house was open to all people — not just the well-dressed. I got this crazy idea from reading the Bible. I thought that since Jesus hung out with prostitutes, poor fishermen and lowly tax collectors, he wouldn't be uncomfortable in the company of hard-working people who couldn't afford the luxury of dressing up.

Thank you, Abby, for giving the mother credit for taking her children to church. — LOVES THE LORD IN EL PASO

DEAR ABBY: I commend you for your response to the woman who was perturbed by the pajama-clad children in church.

As state chaplain of the Kansas Campers, for three years I drove from Wichita to Topeka every Sunday to offer Mass. Why? Because the church pastor, three miles away, refused admission to anyone who came in camp garb. Many youngsters approached communion in shorts, some parents wore tank tops, others came in jeans, and a few were barefooted. I served 200 Catholics every week. I agree with you. I'm sure the Lord didn't care what they were wearing. — FATHER BOB IN WICHITA

DEAR ABBY: Come on, Abby. No kid in this nation has to come to church in pajamas. It's just a part of the ever increasing tendency toward sloppiness, plus the attitude that whatever people want to do is their business. Today we see slobs weighing 300 pounds shopping in stores — without shirts, wearing shorts. They're just plain repulsive.

You said, "The Lord doesn't care what they are wearing." That was one of your worst and silliest replies. — HAZELWOOD, MISSOURI

DEAR ABBY: I am plenty frosted over "Frosted's" objections concerning what children wear to church. Did she ever stop to think that maybe the mother was running late that morning and instead of dressing the children and walking into church late, or skipping church altogether, she chose the alternative? At least she was there!

I used to be a Presbyterian. Now I'm a Catholic. I would rather see people in blue jeans and shorts every week than those phonies who dress up to come to church only at Easter and Christmas. — MILWAUKEE CHURCHGOER

DEAR ABBY: You're nuts! I think the point "Frosted" was trying to make was simply that proper attire in church shows respect. You'd be shocked at what you see today, and I don't mean children in pajamas! The way some people appear in church is disgusting.

Weather Has Temperature And Power Usage Soaring

RALEIGH (AP) — With temperatures soaring into the mid-90s for the past week across much of North Carolina, demand for electricity has climbed to all-time highs for Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co., officials said.

To meet the demand for power, the two companies implemented conservation programs that cut off service to some industrial customers for an hour to an hour and a half on Monday, officials said.

"This miserable hot weather has got air conditioners running full blast," Joseph Maher, a Duke Power spokesman, told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "Another contributing factor is we had a very hot weekend. It has been hot from Friday on ... The peak seems to climb the longer the heat wave lasts. The buildings and ground simply absorb the heat, and if the temperature doesn't drop low enough at night you are starting off the next day with the heat already there."

Duke, a Charlotte-based utility serving 1.5 million customers in North Carolina and South Carolina, set a new record for power demand Monday for the second time this summer, while Raleigh-based CP&L, which serves 910,000 customers in both states, topped a record set last July 22.

Power demand peaked for Duke between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. Monday at 12,974 megawatts, 150 megawatts more than the 12,824 megawatt peak set June 23. CP&L peaked at 3 p.m. at 8,693 megawatts, 706 megawatts more than the record set July 22, 1987.

"It has been hot all over our service area and people are seeking relief from the heat and humidity," said CP&L spokesman Kyle Hampton.

Duke bought 2,400 megawatts of electricity from some neighboring utilities, cut off electricity to some of its largest industrial customers and automatically switched off water heaters for some 150,000 residential customers.

Peak demand for Duke came the same afternoon that two of its seven nuclear plants were out of service. Duke — the nation's seventh largest investor-owned electric company — generates the bulk of its power from the seven nuclear plants and six coal-fired plants.

Maher said that Unit 2 at Duke's McGuire nuclear power plant was out of service for refueling, and Unit 2 at the Catawba Nuclear Power Station was taken out of service Saturday for repairs to a pump.

Power curtailments were implemented under the utility load control program that provides discounts to customers who allow their electricity to be interrupted when supplies are short. Water heaters were cut off from 3 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. under a program that provides discounts of $2.50 a month.

Florida Steel Corp., Duke's largest customer in Mecklenburg County, was forced to shut down its steel-making operations for about an hour and a half after Duke called plant officials and told them they were implementing the conservation program. The plant, which employs about 230 employees, can produce up to 40 tons of steel an hour.

Plant manager F.C. Pilkinton said the interruption — the second in less than a month — was a frustrating one.

"... This year has been particularly frustrating because they've had some outages that we didn't count on. We don't count on days like this to take us off line," Pilkinton said.

CP&L found itself in better shape, but it also had to interrupt power to some of its largest industrial customers for about an hour Monday afternoon. Utility officials declined to say what industries were affected.

Public Participation In Waste Decisions Expanded By Panel

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina citizens will now have a "tremendous opportunity" to have input in the decision-making process of establishing a low-level radioactive waste site for eight southeastern states under a plan approved by the waste authority.

Lou Zeller, a representative of the Blue Ridge Environmental Defense League who had previously questioned the openness of the process, said he was pleased with the action.

"The addition of the public to any of its committees can only amplify and strengthen ... the work that the authority sees as its main work," Zeller said.

The Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority on Monday agreed to expand public membership on key committees involved in establishing a waste site in the state, defusing some earlier criticism.

Carolyn Allen, an authority member, said expanding the committees from five members to eight would provide "expert views that we don't have now. This is a way to gain perspective."

Under the plan, more members from environmental groups as well as from private industry would be added to the Legal and Finance Committee, the Technical Committee and the External Relations Committee.

However, authority member Kenneth Brownell said he doubted the question of public participation had been put to rest. He said the way the plan was worded, the public always could be overruled.

"There's no teeth in anything they say," he said.

Don Willhoit proposed adding four members to each committee, but the authority voted 6-3 to add only three after some members raised concerns about "diluting" their votes.

The authority also approved a plan to add three public members to a committee processing site operator proposals. But the group became bogged down over the issue of opening contract negotiations to the public.

"It's awfully hard to discuss business in a goldfish bowl," said Tenney Deane, authority chairman. "We don't want it to be so public it doesn't produce an efficient process."

North Carolina has been chosen by an eight-state Southeastern compact to operate a low-level radioactive waste facility for 20 years starting in 1993. The lengthy public participation plan adopted by the authority sets out timing for hearings and public education, noting, "Within the constraints of its budget and other responsibilities, the authority is committed to doing as much as possible regarding public involvement."

The authority is expected by Dec. 1 to identify areas that may be suitable for the disposal facility. By Aug. 1 it must select at least two sites for further study. Upon selection of those sites, local committees can receive up to $50,000 from the Governor's Waste Management Board to review site suitability, environmental impact and to participate in hearings on the siting process.

Final site characterizations are due by August 1990. Then public hearings will be conducted during preparation of environmental impact statements and the development of emergency response plans for public alert in the event of any problems.

A preferred site is due to be chosen by Nov. 15, 1990. Then county commissioners of each county "within whose jurisdiction the site is located" may appoint another local advisory committee to further study the costs and benefits, license applications and everything else involved in opening the facility.

Warplanes Attack Iran Sites

the A300 Airbus was an Iranian F-14 jet fighter.

During debate last week, the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France, China and others all told Iran that its failure to accept the cease-fire resolution caused the hostile atmosphere that led to the jetliner disaster.

Security Council Resolution 598, which was adopted July 20, 1987, demands an immediate cease-fire in the war, a troop withdrawal, a prisoner exchange and the creation of a comprehensive peace plan.

It also calls for formation of an impartial commission to determine responsibility for the conflict. Iraq invaded Iran in September 1980 after several border skirmishes.

Perez de Cuellar met separately Monday with Iranian Ambassador Mohammad Jafar Mahallati and Iraqi Ambassador Ismat T. Kiltani. There was no word on the results of the talks.

President Ali Khamenei of Iran, in his letter to Perez de Cuellar accepting the resolution, cited the airliner downing and said the gulf war is "engulfing innocent civilians."

"In this context, we have decided to officially declare that the Islamic Republic of Iran — because of the importance it attaches to saving the lives of human beings and the establishment of justice and regional and international peace and security — accepts the (U.N. resolution)," it said.

Despite accepting the resolution, Iran's military command said its troops would remain at the front.

Hashemi Rafsanjani, Iranian parliament speaker who was promoted to military commander-in-chief by Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini last month, said in an interview on Iranian television

Monday that Khomeini had decided to accept the truce.

Iran had been saying that it would not accept the resolution unless Iraq were branded the aggressor in the war. It now appears to have backed away from that stand.

Perez de Cuellar also noted that President Saddam Hussein of Iraq said last weekend that Iraq would not retain Iranian territory taken in the war.

Ballesteros Storms To Open Win

Three-Timer
Spain's Severiano Ballesteros kisses the British Open Golf Championship trophy after he won the event for the third time in his career. Ballesteros finished at 273 Monday, two strokes ahead of Nick Price. (AP Laserphoto)

Shot On The 16th Hole Helped Key The Victory

LYTHAM, England (AP) — This time, there were no fenders to dent or hubcaps to hit around.

This time, instead of a recovery from a parking lot, it was a 9-iron that hit the flagstick.

But like last time, it came on the 16th hole at Royal Lytham and St. Annes, and it meant a British Open title for Seve Ballesteros.

"I think the shot I hit at the 16th was very important," Ballesteros said after overtaking Nick Price on the final day to win his third open championship with a 6-under 65 and a 72-hole total of 273.

The Spaniard beat Price by two strokes, but the second one came as Price was desperately seeking a birdie on the final hole.

The 16th was the key.

With his tee shot smack in the middle of the fairway of the 357-yard par-4, Ballesteros lofted a 9-iron toward the flag.

"He played the wind perfectly," Price said, a touch of awe in his voice.

The ball came down and struck the flagstick. It dropped just behind the hole, and Ballesteros tapped in for a birdie-3 and a lead that finally held up in one of the great rounds in the open's 117 years.

"I don't know how it missed the hole," Price said of the iron shot. "It landed right behind the flag."

Price had a pretty decent second shot there himself, an iron to within 8 feet of the flag. A birdie to stay even was still a possibility.

But Price 2-putted and fell behind for the first time in three rounds.

"After that, on 17 and 18, I wanted to be aggressive but not foolhardy," he said. "You can get 5s at those two holes real easy."

LYTHAM, England (AP) — He is known simply as Seve, one of those first-name-only stars like Arnie or Magic or Reggie.

That type of recognition came to Seve Ballesteros as he became one of golf's dominant figures, winning four majors and taking the top spot in world rankings.

The ranking slipped a bit and some of the adulation went, too, as the Spaniard brooded over losses and feuded with officials in recent years.

But now, Seve is back, reborn on the very hole of the very course where he started to become a household word nine years ago, and in a match he called his best ever.

"I am the same person I was a week ago, but this means I will have more confidence," Ballesteros said Monday after shooting a tournament-low 65 to edge Nick Price by two strokes for his third championship in the British Open.

Ballesteros won his first major on the same Royal Lytham and St. Annes course in 1979. He won the British Open again in 1984 at St. Andrews, and two Masters titles, in 1980 and 1983.

But in more recent years, the headlines of "Seve Wins It" have been replaced by "Seve Blows It."

He let the 1985 Masters slip away, with Jack Nicklaus winning. He fell out of a playoff for the same title in 1987, before Larry Mize holed a 40-yard iron shot to win.

The whispers were getting louder that Ballesteros' best days were behind him. Ballesteros heard them.

"I never thought I wouldn't win another major," he said. "But my confidence was a little bit down."

Ballesteros showed signs of returning to form in recent months. He opened the PGA European Tour with a victory in Majorca, and took the Westchester Classic on the U.S. tour last month.

With a third British Open title tucked away, Ballesteros said he could forget those earlier failures.

"Now, I will think about this victory, not the shots in Augusta," he said.

It will be a shot by the shores of the Irish Sea that will spring to mind when Ballesteros looks for inspiration, one that will find a spot in the lore of golf's oldest tournament and golf itself.

It came late in a classic duel, the front-running Price playing well but, in the end, not well enough.

The South African-born Price, who has applied for U.S. resident status, opened the day with a two-stroke lead over Ballesteros and defending champion Nick Faldo of England.

Price, trying to erase memories of a 1982 final round in the Open, when he blew a three-shot lead with six holes to play, was solidly in front through the first six holes, although Ballesteros matched his birdie-eagle on the par-5 sixth and seventh holes.

Ballesteros kept going and birdied the eighth with an 18-foot putt to tie for first, and stayed even with birdies at 10 and 11.

Price was not backing off. There would be no repeat of 1982 for him. But there would be no replays of Augusta for Ballesteros, either. The only image he evoked was of his own past greatness.

They got to the 16th hole all even. Faldo had by now fallen away, and the remaining two members of the threesome were in virtual match play, the score now 10-under par.

Ballesteros teed off with a 1-iron to the middle of the fairway on the par-4, then lofted a 9-iron toward the hole. It hit the flagstick and dropped dead, three inches behind the pin.

"He played the winds so well," Price said.

Ballesteros tapped in for birdie-3. Price had an eight-foot putt to stay even, but two-putted.

The match was as good as over. "I think the shot I hit at the 16th was very important," said Ballesteros, who sealed the victory with a sand wedge to within four inches of the pin on the final hole.

ECU's McNeill Is On Olympic Team

INDIANAPOLIS — East Carolina University's Lee McNeill was named to the United States Olympic Track and Field team Sunday, Pirate track coach Bill Carson announced.

McNeill, a finalist in Saturday's national-televized 100-meters, will run as a contestant in the 4x100-meter relay. The St. Paul's native finished eighth in one of the fastest 100-meters in track history.

"The 100-meters on Saturday may go down as one of the best in history," Carson said. "Lee's time was the fastest ever for an eighth-place finisher."

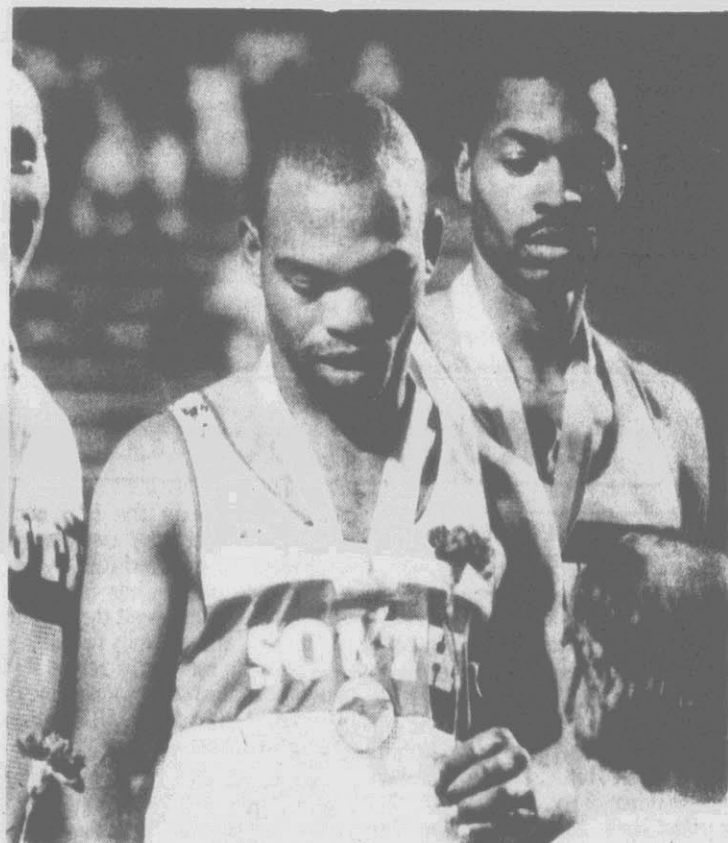

"We are very pleased to learn that Lee will be representing ECU in Seoul. It appears that who runs in the relay has not yet been determined, but it looks likely that Lee will get a chance to run in at least the early rounds in Seoul."

The top three finishers in Saturday's 100-meters — Carl Lewis, Calvin Smith and Dennis Mitchell — were automatic qualifiers for the U.S. team. McNeill, and the other finalists from Saturday were selected by U.S. sprint coach Guss Rodgers of Fairleigh-Dickinson University.

McNeill is no stranger to international competition. Last summer the ECU senior won gold medals as part of the 4x100-meter relay team at both the Pan American Games in Indianapolis and the World Championships in Rome. McNeill also won a gold medal for the South team in the United States Olympic Festival in Durham.

Two other ECU alumni will take part in the 24th Olympiad. Kay Yow, currently the women's basketball coach at N.C. State, will be the head coach of the favored women's basketball team, and Leora "Sam" Jones is a prominent member of the women's team handball squad.

Some Will Be Tested

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A urine sample from each athlete who betters a world record at the U.S. Olympic track and field Trials will be sent to Montreal for testing.

And samples from the top three finishers in each event, unless they set world records, will go to Los Angeles. Until the results are confirmed, all records and all places on the U.S. team at Seoul are considered tentative.

Mandatory, random drug testing is not done to moralize against the use of certain banned substances, an official of The Athletics Congress said Monday.

"We want fairer competition," said TAC's Berny Wagner, a member of a drug testing panel which met in conjunction with the track and field trials this week.

Also participating were Kathy Presnal of the TAC national headquarters in Indianapolis; Harmon Brown, chairman of the TAC sports medicine committee; and Bob Adams, chairman of the TAC drug testing program.

Wagner said a low number of violations resulting from the random tests doesn't necessarily indicate fewer track and field athletes are using banned substances. He said it might also mean some athletes who are using them know how to control them to avoid detection; and, for American athletes especially, legal safeguards often make it difficult to make apparent violations stick.

"We have more problems making any positive results stick in the United States than any other place in the world, that we know of," he said. "And that's because of our concern for legal rights."

Rainy Reaction

Lewis Working Way Back To 1984 Gold Medal Form

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It's two down and one to go for Carl Lewis as he works toward duplicating his 1984 feat of winning three individual Olympic gold medals.

Lewis was pressed to come up with one of his best long jumps ever to extend his streak of victories in the event to 55 Monday at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials. Larry Myricks, the last long jumper to beat Lewis, came up with a personal best of 28 feet, 8 1/4 inches on his third of six jumps.

Lewis, who had a wind-aided 9.78-second clocking Sunday in running the fastest 100 meters ever in the finals of the event, quickly met the challenge. Jumping minutes after Myricks, Lewis topped his meet record by going 28-9. It matched the fifth-best long jump ever.

"Larry jumped within two inches of my personal best and I basically had to pull out that type of a jump in order to win the competition. At that time I simply had to dig down and do what it takes to try to win," Lewis said. "Larry helped bring out the competition in me and in everybody else. We were dueling for first and second and they were staging a duel for third."

And the winning leap was accomplished on a runway wet from a heavy rain that began falling with Lewis preparing to take a 28-2 1/4 jump that gave him the lead on his previous jump. Moments after that jump, a heavy downpour halted the competition.

Myricks, who last beat Lewis in the long jump seven years ago, was unable to match the effort on his next three jumps.

"I think this was the best competition he and I had together," Myricks said after making the Olympic team for a fourth time. "My first priority was to make the team. If I had beat him, fine. But it's no big deal. I'll be jumping a couple of years from now, so I still have a lot of time."

Myricks and Mike Powell, who fouled four consecutive times before going 27-5/4 on his final attempt to place third, also are heading to the Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

"Everybody wants to win, but then again it's 1-2-3 and we all go to Seoul. Then we start to do it all over again," Myricks said. "I know my best is yet to come and I feel that it's going to happen somewhere soon and I hope it's going to be in Seoul."

Lewis, meanwhile, has to look ahead to Wednesday when he runs the 200. He had the quickest time of 20.33 seconds in a first-round preliminary heat Monday and was even quicker at 20.03 in round two.

A relaxed Lewis joked with the media after the long jump, but admitted he was tired after having run four 100-meter races, two 200s and gone through the long jump competition within the past three days.

"The rain obviously did disrupt things. I'm surprised that we were able to respond so well after that first rain. The level of competition was very high today," Lewis said.

"When you come to the Olympic Trials it's like no other meet. That's your first and foremost and I think that's been proven over these first four days," he added.

The trials take a break today, and, after resuming Wednesday, will continue through Saturday.

While Lewis was outdueling Myricks, another Lewis — Steve — ran one of the greatest 400-meter races in history.

Steve Lewis, a 19-year-old freshman at UCLA, won his 400-meter semifinal heat in 44.11 — a half-second quicker than the world junior record of 44.61 he had set one day earlier.

It also was the second-fastest time run at sea level, behind only the 44.10 by Butch Reynolds of the United States last year.

Six other finals were held Monday night.

Kim Gallagher, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist who had been struggling the past three years because of physical ailments, won the women's 800 meters in 1:58.01, the fifth-fastest time ever by an American. It made her the No. 3 U.S. performer, behind only Mary Decker Slaney and 1968 Olympic champion Madeline Manning.

"I couldn't have a race strategy, because everybody was pushing and shoving throughout the race," said Gallagher, who took the lead at 600 meters.

Delisa-Walton Floyd finished second in 1:59.20, and Joetta Clark, who fell over the finish line, was third in 1:59.93, edging Debbie Marshall (1:59.97).

Oakland Is Heating Up Again

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland Athletics, who cooled off after a hot start in the American League West, could be ready to heat up again with the help of rookie pitcher Todd Burns.

Burns, 2-0, making his fourth start, allowed seven hits and two unearned runs while pitching his first career complete game Monday night as the A's defeated the Cleveland Indians 7-2.

"It's a little premature, but he hasn't had a bad outing yet," Manager Tony LaRussa said of Burns, who has a 2.11 earned run average in six appearances since being called up from the minors on May 31.

Burns' only mediocre performance was a no-decision against the Indians in his last start July 6, a game the A's lost 8-6 after Burns allowed four runs in five innings and left with a 4-3 lead.

"I felt good about coming back and showing them that wasn't totally me the last time I faced them," Burns said. "I have no excuses for that last start, but I didn't make the pitches when I had to."

Jose Canseco drove in three runs with a single and his major league-leading 25th homer and Stan Javier went 5-for-5 for the A's.

In other AL games, it was Boston 6, Minnesota 5; Milwaukee 6, Kansas City 1; Detroit 12, Seattle 3; Toronto 12, California 2; and New York 7, Texas 2.

Javier is the first Oakland player to have five hits in a game since Tony Phillips hit for the cycle at Baltimore May 16, 1986. Against Cleveland, Javier is hitting .600 (18-for-30) this season and .423 (22-for-52) lifetime.

All five hits were from the right side of the plate. The switch-hitting Javier entered the game batting only .174 right-handed (8-for-46). He ended the game batting .255 right-handed and .284 overall.

"If you ignore the stats, and see my at-bats, you'll see that I've hit the ball good right-handed, but it's always been right at somebody," Javier said.

Left-hander Scott Bailes, 7-9, gave up a first-inning solo homer to Canseco, giving the A's a 1-0 lead. Of Canseco's 25 homers, 17 have either tied the game or put Oakland ahead.

The Indians scored their two unearned runs in the second to take a 2-1 lead.

But the A's came back with a four-run rally in the third. Mark McGwire's two-out, bases-loaded walk forced in the tying run, Carney Lansford's infield single scored the go-ahead run, and Don Baylor's single scored two more for a 5-2 lead.

Tigers 12, Mariners 3
Detroit broke a 3-3 tie against Seattle with a five-run sixth inning that included Lou Whitaker's two-run single and the second of three RBI singles by Gary Pettis.

Walt Terrell, 4-7, halted a four-game losing streak with a five-hitter. He retired 19 straight batters from the second to the eighth inning.

Tom Brookens hit the Tigers' first of four RBI singles in the sixth, breaking the 3-3 tie. Mike Heath followed with another run-scoring single and Pettis singled off Seattle starter Steve Trout, 4-5, to drive home Brookens.

Gene Walter relieved Trout, and Heath and Pettis executed a double steal before scoring on Whitaker's single. Walter went on to commit four balks, tying an American League record.

Yankees 7, Rangers 2
New York took control against Texas with a five-run first inning keyed by Joel Skinner's two-run double.

Rich Dotson, 8-3, allowed six hits in 5 2-3 innings for his first win since June 13 for the Yankees. Dotson was activated from the 15-day disabled list earlier in the day and made his first start since pulling a groin muscle on June 29.

The Yankees sent nine men to the plate in the first inning, eight of them facing Paul Kilgus, 7-9, who entered the game with a 2-0 record and a 1.38 earned run average against New York this season.

Pete Incaviglia homered for Texas, his 17th.

Red Sox 6, Twins 5
Reliever Lee Smith had Boston squirming in the ninth inning before holding on for its fifth consecutive victory under interim manager Joe Morgan.

Smith allowed three hits, including an RBI double by Tim Laudner, before picking up his 13th save with the tying run on third and the go-ahead run on second.

With a 6-4 lead, Morgan called on Smith for the fourth consecutive day although Bob Stanley, Boston's third pitcher, had allowed just one infield hit in 1 2-3 innings.

"Stanley was pitching well, but I figured this was the big guy's job, and he did it," Morgan explained.

Marty Barrett hit his first homer of the season and Larry Parrish broke a 3-3 tie with a sacrifice fly in a three-run sixth inning for the Red Sox, who have won 10 straight at Fenway Park.

Mike Greenwell celebrated his 25th birthday with three hits, including a single in the first for his 75th RBI, tops in the majors.

Reliever Dennis Lamp, 4-3, got the victory although he allowed four hits, including Kent Hrbek's 18th homer, and two runs in two innings.

Hrbek had four of Minnesota's 15 hits.

Brewers 6, Royals 1
Milwaukee handed Kansas City its fifth consecutive loss as Joey Meyer and Charlie O'Brien hit two-run homers in the second inning and Mike Birkbeck pitched a seven-hitter for eight innings.

Meyer's fifth homer — his first since June 7 — and O'Brien's first in the majors came off Floyd Bannister, 8-8, who went on to retire 17 straight batters before the Brewers added two insurance runs in the eighth.

Birkbeck, 4-5, won his second straight decision since being recalled from the minors earlier this month. All of the Royals' hits were singles.

Blue Jays 12, Angels 2
Toronto had seven consecutive hits in the first inning and finished with 15 in its easy victory over California.

Kelly Gruber, who later hit one of the Blue Jays' three homers, had a two-run double in their six-run first inning against Chuck Finley, 5-9.

In addition to Gruber's double, starter Chuck Finley also surrendered RBI triples by Cecil Fielder and Sil Campusano and run-scoring singles to Manny Lee and Fred McGriff.

Left-hander Jeff Musselman, 1-0, making his first start of the season after completing rehabilitation from shoulder surgery, blanked the Angels on four hits for six innings.

McGriff hit his 19th homer, his fourth in five games, in the fifth and Toronto scored three more runs in the sixth on a two-run homer by Lloyd Moseby, his eighth, and Gruber's solo shot.

The Angels scored in the eighth on Brian Downing's two-run homer.

Leary's 5-Hitter Keys L.A.

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Tim Leary and the Los Angeles Dodgers are well on the road to the National League West title.

Leary pitched a five-hitter and Mike Marshall homered in the ninth inning Monday night as the Dodgers beat the St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 for their sixth straight victory.

Los Angeles now leads the division by eight games over San Francisco and Houston.

The Dodgers started a 16-game trip — the longest in the majors — after the All-Star break by winning five times in Chicago. The victory in St. Louis gave Los Angeles the best road record in baseball at 29-13.

"Our pitching has been sensational," Manager Tom Lasorda said after Leary's fourth shutout this season.

The Cardinals have lost 10 of their last 11 games and have not scored more than three runs in any of them. St. Louis fell into a last-place tie in the NL East with Philadelphia.

Leary, 9-6, struck out four and walked one. He won his last start 1-0 in Chicago by pitching seven innings and driving in the only run.

"Tim is been pitching well all year, we just haven't been scoring runs for him," Lasorda said.

This time, Leary allowed only one runner to reach second base. He lowered his earned run average to 2.50.

"I just tried to keep the ball down and stay ahead of the hitters," he said.

Bob Forsch and Larry McWilliams shut out the Dodgers on four hits for eight innings. Todd Worrell, 4-7, relieved to start the ninth and Marshall hit the second pitch for his 12th home run.

Reds 2, Mets 1
Nick Esasky hit a sacrifice fly and Tim Teufel's error on the relay allowed another run to score, enabling Cincinnati to edge New York.

Danny Jackson, 11-5, pitched three-hit ball for seven innings. John Franco got his 17th save, including the last seven Reds' victories.

Sid Fernandez, 5-7, held Cincinnati hitless until Kal Daniels opened the sixth inning with a single. Eric Davis drew Fernandez's sixth walk and the runners pulled a double steal.

Esasky followed with a fly that center fielder Mookie Wilson caught at the wall. Daniels scored and Davis also came around when Teufel's throw from shallow center was wild.

Cubs 8, Giants 3
Vance Law and Mitch Webster hit two-run singles during a six-run rally in the eighth inning that sent Chicago over San Francisco. The Cubs ended a five-game losing streak and the Giants lost their fifth in a row.

The Cubs had their biggest inning since June 26. Chicago had scored only seven runs in its last four games.

Pat Perry, 4-2, got the victory and Craig Lefferts, 2-6, took the loss at Wrigley Field.

Astros 6, Expos 1
Joaquin Andujar got his first victory in more than a year with home-run support from Kevin Bass and Buddy Bell as Houston won at Montreal.

Andujar, 1-4, gave up one run in six innings to win for the first time since July 2, 1987, for Oakland. Danny Darwin closed with one-hit relief in his second save.

Bass hit a three-run homer in the first inning after an RBI single by Glenn Davis. An error by second baseman Tom Foley set up the four unearned runs off Bryn Smith, 6-6.

Braves 9, Phillies 8
Phillies 4, Braves 1
Ricky Jordan, who homered in his first official major league at-bat

Sunday, hit another two-run homer in the second game that helped Philadelphia split a doubleheader with Atlanta.

David Palmer, 5-6, pitched four-hit ball for seven innings. He singled home Jordan, who had singled for the first run off German Jimenez, 0-3, to put the Phillies ahead 1-0 in the sixth.

Tar Heel.....7
Henderson-Vance.....6

HENDERSON — Jon Gavigan hit a grand slam home run in the third inning Sunday to lead the Greenville Tar Heel All-Stars to a 7-6 victory over Henderson-Vance in the Area II District IV Little League baseball tournament.

Gavigan's homer gave the Tar Heel squad a 7-2 lead. From there, Henderson-Vance rallied to within one, but failed to tie the game in the seventh inning when the two leadoff hitters in the inning reached base with no outs. Greenville pitcher Jason Tetterton, who came on in relief of Craig Brannon in the fourth inning, worked his way out of the inning with a pair of strikeouts and a throwout of a runner trying to steal second.

Greenville scored first in the game as Greg Pearsall and Cotton Williamson each tagged home for a 2-0 early lead.

The lead grew to 3-0 in the second inning as Gavigan reached base on a walk and later scored.

The Tar Heel squad returns to action today against Roanoke Rapids.

North State.....13
N.E. Halifax.....4

HENDERSON — The Greenville North State All-Stars opened up play in the Area II District IV Little League baseball tournament with a 13-4 win over Northeast Halifax Monday.

Dante Daniels led the way for Greenville, turning in a 4-4 performance at the plate along with four runs scored.

Greenville got on top early, scoring three runs in the first inning keyed by Daniels' single that opened the game.

Greenville added two runs in second as Daniels singled and Deke Herin added a double.

The North Staters expanded their lead with four more runs in the fourth and four more in the fifth while Halifax accounted two runs each in both the fourth and the fifth.

Herrin added two hits for Greenville while Daniels went the distance for the win, allowing only two hits.

Greenville returns to action Wednesday against the winner of the Greenville Tar Heel All-Stars vs. Roanoke Rapids winner.

Jones' Two-Run Single Lifts Snow Hill

SNOW HILL — Anthony Jones singled in two runs in the bottom of the 13th inning to give Snow Hill a 7-6 win over Cary in American Legion Area I Championship play Monday night.

The win trimmed Cary's series lead to 2-1 and gave Snow Hill a chance to even the best-of-seven series at two games apiece when they meet again tonight at 8 p.m. in Snow Hill.

Snow Hill took an early 2-0 lead when Chris West and Walt McKeel opened with consecutive singles. Jones singled in West for the first run and McKeel later scored when Mike Vandiford hit into a double play.

Cary rallied with four runs in the third to take over the lead. Snow Hill rallied with a run in the bottom of the third but Cary made it 5-3 with another run in the fifth.

Snow Hill tied the game at 5-5 by pushing across runs in the fourth and fifth innings but Cary scored in the top of the 13th to take a 6-5 lead.

Shay Beaman opened the 13th for Snow Hill with a single. West followed with a double to put runners at second and third. McKeel was intentionally walked to set up Jones' game-winning hit.

Jones, West and Beaman had three hits apiece for Snow Hill while Cedric Collins added two hits.

Tyler Highfill had four hits for Cary while Mike Gregory added three more.

Hornets Acquire Reid, Draft Choice

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets acquired Robert Reid and a second-round draft pick in 1990 from the Houston Rockets Monday in exchange for Bernard Thompson, whom the Hornets selected in the NBA expansion draft.

"This is an excellent deal for us," Hornets vice president and general manager Carl Scheer said in a prepared statement. "It not only provides us with a veteran player who could help us considerably in the early years, but it also assures of a future young player."

"Those future second-round draft picks are going to become even more crucial as the draft is condensed to only two rounds beginning next year," Scheer said.

Reid, 32, was drafted 40th by the Rockets out of St. Mary's-San Antonio in 1977. He helped the Rockets to eight playoff appearances in 10 seasons, scoring a career average of 11.6 points per game. Reid sat out the 1982-83 season, citing religious reasons.

"This trade, particularly with the draft pick, should be a signal to our fans that we are serious about building for the future," Scheer said. "These kinds of deals will be very valuable to us as we continue to develop this franchise."

Butkus To Replace Jimmy The Greek

NEW YORK (AP) — Hall of Fame linebacker Dick Butkus will replace Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder on CBS' "NFL Today" show, sources said Monday.

The official announcement was scheduled for Tuesday.

Three other former NFL players — Jack Youngblood, Gary Fencik and Lyle Alzado — auditioned for the job.

Butkus, 45, will fill the vacancy created in January when CBS fired Snyder for offensive remarks he made about black athletes during a television interview. But a network source said Butkus won't pick winners of NFL games as Snyder did.

"He'll be a personality the way Jimmy was, but that's where the similarity ends," the source said.

Butkus will be joined in the studio by "NFL Today" veterans Brent Musburger, Irv Cross and Will McDonough.

Snyder, who had worked on the show for 12 years, was fired after saying blacks were bred to be better athletes and that they were taking over the coaching profession. He later apologized for the remarks, which triggered a storm of protest after they aired on a Washington television station.

Butkus, who played nine seasons with the Chicago Bears, retired from football in 1973 because of a severe knee injury. He was inducted into the pro football Hall of Fame in 1979.

After leaving football, Butkus became an actor. He has appeared in many television shows, movies and commercials, including a long-running series for a beer company.

For the past four years, Butkus has been a commentator on Bears games for a Chicago radio station. Last season, he was also a guest analyst on one of ESPN's prime-time NFL telecasts.

Two More Alabama Recruits Ineligible

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Two more incoming freshman football players at the University of Alabama have failed to meet minimum NCAA academic requirements, but the players indicated they will still enroll at the school.

Running back Robert Jones of Parker High School in Birmingham, given the "Mr. Football" title by the Alabama Sports Writers Association after being voted the best prep player in the state, failed to make the minimum required score on his college entrance examination, as did Eric Curry, a linebacker from Thomasville, Ga. Both took the American College Test June 11, and the NCAA requires at least a 15.

Jones and Curry join Enterprise lineman Charley Dare, who earlier became a Proposition 48 casualty because he lacked the proper high school grade point average.

All three have indicated they will enroll at Alabama, even though they won't be eligible to play football this fall. They will be eligible to play their sophomore years.

The federal privacy act prohibits university officials from discussing players' academic credentials, but university officials said they expect no more than three signees to be ineligible.

Jones, a 6-foot, 190-pound running sensation, compiled more than 1,900 yards last season. He could not be reached for comment at his Birmingham home Monday, but his mother told The Tuscaloosa News that he failed to make a 15 when he took the ACT.

"I don't know what his scores were for sure," Altha Jones said. "But they said he did not make enough to play this year."

Curry, a 6-foot-3, 225-pound defensive player, "is very disappointed, but he is still going to come to school at Alabama this year," said his mother, Corine Curry. "He will not be able to play football this year, but the most important thing is getting his education."

Alabama also had three Proposition 48 casualties last year. Linebacker Keith McCants of Mobile, Terry Langston of Gardendale and defensive tackle George Thornton of Montgomery sat out last year. All are in summer school and are expected to be eligible for the upcoming season.

In 1986, the first year of Proposition 48 standards, Alabama had four who did not make the grade: wide receiver Pierre Goode, defensive tackle Thomas Rayam, running back William Kent and lineman Anthony Ramsay.

Goode, Rayam and Kent are still members of the Alabama team, but Ramsay quit prior to the 1987 season.

Williams At Training Camp

Sweeney Is Hoping Height Won't Affect His Chances

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The NFL strike of veteran players gave Sweeney a second shot.

He started and won two games for the "rhinestone" Cowboys, hitting 14 of 28 passes for 291 yards and four touchdowns.

Sweeney admits he isn't 6-foot. He calls himself 5-11½.

"I'm 5-11½ and that's as tall as I'm going to get so I have to make up for it in mobility, strength, and the ability to read defenses," Sweeney said. "I've always fought that 'too short' tag."

Landry was giving Sweeney no chance to be an NFL quarterback last year, saying "he has to see between the linemen which means he's not effective as a drop-back passer. This means we have to use a lot of roll-out patterns while he is in there and it's difficult to throw accurately on the run."

Now, here comes Sweeney, listed at 6-foot but appearing shorter, and with all his NCAA passing records out of Fresno State.

Although he had impressive moments in the 1987 training camp, Landry cut Sweeney because of that too-short phobia.

Lomax Ready To Play In Phoenix

By The Associated Press
Neil Lomax hasn't played before a big home crowd in a long time. He's anxious to see what a home crowd in Phoenix will be like.

The quarterback of the Cardinals is entering his eighth year in the NFL. The Cardinals will be playing their first season in Phoenix, where they moved from St. Louis. The lack of fans in Busch Stadium in St. Louis was a major factor in that move.

"Now, everybody is talking about playing in front of 73,000 fans at Arizona State University's Sun Devil Stadium. That many fans screaming FOR you is something that's never happened for us. That's exciting to think about," said Lomax, who comes off his second-best season — he went 275 for 463 for 3,387 yards and 24 touchdowns with 12 interceptions. "It's going to be neat to have people who are so gung-ho for us now. It'll make us a better football team."

"But we know what we got to do. We have to play well. When you play poorly, the fans are going to boo and I'm sure they will in Arizona, too. At least we're used to it."

The Cardinals got used to losing in 1985 and '86, going 9-22-1 in those seasons. But they were 7-8 last year and only a final-day loss to Dallas kept the Cardinals out of the playoffs.

"That's the most disappointing thing, how really bad we played against Dallas in that last game," Lomax said. "I still remember it well. I just hope it's past and we can build on what we did right."

"We were 7-8 last year after going 4-11-1 the year before that, when we played so poorly on offense. It was like night and day compared to last year. The whole mood this year is pointing to a good season. But we play in the toughest division in the NFL and we got a tough chore ahead of us."

"We just got to play consistent. That seems to be lacking in some years. We played great in 1984 (9-7 record) and then played terrible in 1985. Why? We got a little overconfident and didn't work hard."

"That's not going to happen this year. (Coach) Gene Stallings won't let it."

Another NFC East quarterback who will get a lot of attention this season is Doug Williams, who led the Washington Redskins to a Super Bowl victory last January. Williams, who underwent surgery on his left knee during the offseason, went through all of the required drills in two 90-minute training sessions Monday.

"It bothers me that everyone talks about Doug Williams' knee. This isn't the first time I've been through this," he said. "The bottom line is if I go out every day and no one hits me, sure I'll make it through the season."

Coach Joe Gibbs was pleased with Williams.

"I thought Doug looked good, just like he always does. He looked like he was moving around pretty well, almost normal," Gibbs said.

NEW TEAMS

Linebacker Milt McColl was dealt to the Raiders by the 49ers for a draft choice. McColl, a seven-year veteran, played in 12 games for the 49ers last season, starting 10. In 1986, he started all 16 regular-season games.

The Seattle Seahawks signed nose tackle Ken Clarke, who was released in March after 10 years with the Philadelphia Eagles. Running back Eric Lane, who was cut before last season but re-signed during the players' strike and retained for the rest of the season, was cut.

QUITTING

Fred Quilan, 32, a two-time Pro Bowl center who also played for both of the 49ers' Super Bowl teams, retired Monday. He was acquired by San Diego for Wes Chandler. The 49ers will give the Chargers a draft choice instead.

The Jets placed linebacker Robbie Jones on the reserve-retired list.

VETERAN SIGNINGS

Miami reached contract agreement with cornerback Paul Lankford, who signed a three-year contract. The Jets agreed to terms with offensive lineman Jim Sweeney, who is expected to start at center after playing tackle last year.

Phoenix signed running back Earl Ferrell to a two-year contract and tight end Jay Novacek, to a one-year contract.

Seattle agreed to terms with placekicker Norm Johnson and safety Paul Moyer.

Recovered Nelson Looks To Get Back Starting Position

MADISON, N.J. (AP) — Karl Nelson longs for 1986.

He longs for the time when coaches considered him the best player on the New York Giants' offensive line, when the media did not speak to him so much and before Hodgkins disease invaded his life.

Cancer was a big part of Nelson's life in 1987. It caused him to miss all of the season. But he beat it.

Nelson is looking to win another battle, this to get back his starting right tackle job. Coach Bill Parcells has already written him into the lineup, but not in ink.

"I expect to get as good as I was and hopefully even better," Nelson said Monday as he joined rookies, free agents, quarterbacks and players injured last season for the opening of training camp at Fairleigh Dickinson University. "That's the only goal I have."

Less than a year ago, Nelson was more concerned with simply surviving after doctors diagnosed cancer while looking into a shoulder problem. He spent the next four months undergoing radiation treatment that put the cancer in remission.

Since then, he has undergone shoulder surgery to repair cartilage damage and started working out four days a week at Giants Stadium. He is back to his regular playing weight of 282 pounds, his strength is 92 percent of what it once was and his speed remains the same.

Nelson will take another major step back to football today when he puts on his full uniform for the first time since Aug. 16, 1987, when the Giants played an exhibition game against New England. His illness was diagnosed five days later.

"I'll see if I can get all the pads in the right space," Nelson said. "I had a long time to prepare myself mentally for this. I think I am ready."

Nelson said he expects no favors in practice and doesn't expect Parcells and the coaching staff to go easy on him.

Parcells said Monday that Nelson would practice only once daily for the first week of training camp while others go through two-a-day workouts.

"Everything is going according to the best scenario," Parcells said.

Realism also is a part of Nelson's outlook. He knows he is not going to come in ready to play up to the level he reached two years ago when he was the main cog in a running game that carried the Giants to a Super Bowl victory over Denver.

"I have not played in a long time," Nelson said. "I have never been a fast starter in camp. It's always taken me three or four days to get going. I just can't get depressed if it doesn't come fast or I don't play as well as I am capable."

Songwriter Enjoys New Fame

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — He didn't write them, but the "The Long and Winding Road" and "We're in the Money" nicely sum up the world of Academy Award-winning songwriter Franke Previte.

Previte won this year's award for the best original song in a motion picture for writing the lyrics and co-writing the music for "I've Had the Time of My Life" in the film "Dirty Dancing."

Despite his success, Previte lives with his 13-year-old sheep dog, Sparky, in his childhood home in New Brunswick.

"I feel comfortable here," the 37-year-old Previte said. "I've written six hit records in this house. I'm not in a hurry to do anything."

Previte's musical road began unofficially at the age of 3 when his opera-singing father performed "Il Pagliacci" on stage — accompanied by his son in the crowd.

"I've written for a really wide range of people — Jeffrey Osborne, Bon Jovi," Previte said. "I like different kinds of music. I have a pretty wide gamut of tastes."

Previte dedicated himself to learning the piano in 1978. He formed Franke & the Knockouts, which had several hits before disbanding in 1984. That's when he decided to strike out on his own.

Jimmy Jenner, president of an earlier label for which Franke & The Knockouts recorded, had gone into film and, in 1986, asked Previte to write for "Dirty Dancing."

"He told me, 'I suggest you get a song because it's going to change your life,'" Previte said.

It has.

Between a nickel's cut for each record sold and additional royalties each time it is played on the radio, Previte said he will eventually realize more than $1 million from the song.

Does he think he's sacrificed anything musically for financial gain?

"I've always been the same kind of songwriter," Previte said. "If I sold out, I did it a long time ago. I don't get involved in a song unless it has commercial potential."

The creative spark for "I've Had the Time of My Life" came to Previte near Exit 140 on the Garden State Parkway and he says he couldn't scribble lyrics fast enough on a handy envelope.

"I knew I had a home run chorus," he recalled.

Now, Previte said, "The Oscar calls the shots now. I'm getting so much work now. In New Brunswick, people are coming up to me and saying, 'Hey, aren't you so and so?'"

"I've always been busy," he added. "Now I get paid for it."

'War of Worlds' Group Planning Celebration Of 50th Anniversary

By JO ASTRID GLADING
Associated Press Writer
WEST WINDSOR, N.J. (AP) — The 50th anniversary celebration of the "War of the Worlds" broadcast, Orson Welles' radio play about an alien invasion that terrified America, was launched with "Martian punch" and a song.

Welles and his Mercury Theater created a sensation the night of Oct. 30, 1938, with their broadcast based on H.G. Wells' tale of a Martian invasion of Earth. Despite disclaimers it was fictitious, the realistic-sounding broadcast on CBS created a nationwide panic.

The "invasion" began at Grovers Mill, chosen at random by scriptwriter Howard Koch, and residents of the hamlet in West Windsor Township near Princeton have been reminded annually of its dubious place in radio history.

In the coming months, the group organizing the celebration hopes to remind the world of the broadcast, heard by an estimated 6 million people, and the role it played in redefining radio's power.

The Fiftieth Anniversary Commemorative Committee for War of the Worlds Inc. began the festivities Monday with the debut of "Over The Airwaves, The Ballad of Grovers Mill."

The song, written locally, opens with a brief excerpt from the Halloween broadcast, then relates the blurring of the line between reality and fantasy that brought "panic in the streets."

"On the other side of Grovers Mill, there's a pond where the water glows. What landed on that Jersey site, I'm sure nobody knows," four women in leotards sang as reporters listened.

The song is to be released to radio stations around the country this week, and will be the subject of a music video, according to the committee.

Participants were offered "Martian punch," an eerie green concoction of vodka, fruit juices and liqueur, with melon balls bobbing on top.

Committee Chairman Douglas Forrester, who was born 15 years after the broadcast, said he used to hear only secondhand accounts of the terror the show evoked, but says people are finally "fessing up to being scared" as word of his group's work gets out.

"I think one of the acid tests of our credibility is we are finally getting first-person accounts from people who had the bejabbers scared out of them," said Forrester, director of pensions for New Jersey and a former mayor of West Windsor.

According to news accounts of the '38 panic, thousands of people headed for the hills, causing massive traffic jams, and panicked listeners jammed phone lines to police. In Grovers Mill, farmers unfamiliar with local landmarks fired buckshot into a water tower, believing it was a giant Martian war machine.

Forrester said a man who was on a hunting trip in upstate New York when "War of the Worlds" was broadcast said some members of his hunting party grabbed their guns and headed home to fight the Martians. Others, deciding it was too late to save their families, headed for the Canadian border.

By Oct. 30's closing ceremonies, the committee plans to have installed a bronze relief at the site of the Martian "landing," depicting Welles, the Martians and an American family huddled around a radio.

The sculpture is being funded with a $15,000 state grant.

The group plans to sell souvenirs, including buttons and bumper stickers warning "the Martians are coming again," Forrester said.

Also planned is a dinner to raise money for the commemorative effort, the restoration of the pond at the "landing site" and a scholarship fund named for scriptwriter Koch, who lives in Woodstock, N.Y.

Turner Receives A One-Year Jail Term For Drugs

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Ike Turner, who gained fame in the 1960s singing alongside then-wife Tina Turner, received a one-year sentence in county jail for possession and transportation of cocaine.

Turner, 56, of Cerritos was taken into custody after Monday's sentencing. He also was sentenced to three years of probation, said Al Albergate, a spokesman for the district attorney.

Turner was convicted April 15 on two drug-related felony counts of possession and transportation of cocaine stemming from an August arrest in West Hollywood.

In October 1986, Turner admitted he had used cocaine daily for at least 15 years and said he was undergoing rehabilitation to kick the habit.

Esquire Endorses Mrs. Dole As A Running Mate For Bush

NEW YORK (AP) — Esquire magazine thinks Bush and Dole would make a good Republican presidential ticket — George Bush and Elizabeth Dole, that is.

The magazine named Mrs. Dole its Woman of the Year in its August issue and endorsed her for the vice president's office.

Esquire said Mrs. Dole was selected for its annual honor because she "looks soft but plays tough... was Queen of the May at Duke (University), but also Phi Beta Kappa... is utterly open about her ambition, but tucks all the rest of herself away."

Mrs. Dole left her post as U.S. transportation secretary to help her husband, Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, in his unsuccessful bid for the Republican presidential nomination earlier this year.

"Wow! How many teams are playing, Daddy?"

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY July 20
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be certain not to do anything which could cause trouble between you and your friends. Solve problems efficiently.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You may find it hard to get along with co-workers. Keep calm and all will improve. The evening will be peaceful and satisfying.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): It may be a bit difficult to deal with usually pleasant persons during the day hours, so be tactful. Your creativity is high.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Try not to bring up any moot points during the daytime. Show that you are an excellent, host or hostess tonight.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Eradicate any mistakes you may make during the day. Be with a very good pal in the evening and be happy.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Financial affairs should be relegated to the evening when your mature judgment is working. Look for errors in bookkeeping.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You had better wait until dusk before going to some place far away. Be more careful in handling your social affairs.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Spend the daytime ridding yourself of whatever is not needed. Don't be demanding with your mate. Look for success in the near future.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Don't bother a usually kind friend with your worries. Get together in the evening with friends for mutual assistance.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Be careful yet deliberate when handling civic duties. You can have fun out on the town tonight. Avoid a bigwig on a rampage.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You need to wait until the evening before work begins on a new project. Contact a good adviser, and forget the suggestions of inexperienced friends.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You may find it difficult to improve your environment. You may get excellent ideas; put them into operation enthusiastically.

 In chess, they have a term for it—woodpusher. That's a person who simply moves the pieces around without any strategic plan in mind. In bridge, you graduate from card-pusher to bridge player when you realize that every card tells a story. The auction was simple enough. The one no trump opening described South's hand perfectly and, since North did not have enough to be interested in slam, his jump to three no trump was textbook. East put up the queen on his partner's low spade opening, and declarer allowed it to win. He held up the ace again when East continued the suit to his partner's jack. But the king of spades finally forced the ace. A club finesse lost to East's king, and he had to decide which red suit to switch to. Do you have a choice? That depends entirely on whether your partner is a player or a pusher! If the latter, you have to guess; if the former, partner's king of spades should be a suit-preference signal, asking you to return the higher of the two obvious suits—in this case hearts. (Had partner's entry been in clubs, he would have led his lowest spade to ask for the lower of the two suits.) The whole hand hinges on what East returns. If he trusts partner's instructions and returns a heart, declarer goes down two tricks. If he shoots back a diamond, declarer has nine tricks—four in each minor and the ace of spades. It's a world of difference!
