Iraq Raids Iran, Then Vows To End Invasion

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said it captured thousands of enemy troops in a series of sudden raids into Iran and promised today to end its invasion just as the two sides were preparing for peace talks.

Iraq's announcement, carried on government-run Baghdad radio, came after Iran claimed it attacked Iraqi forces in southern Iran early today, forced them to retreat 25 miles and killed or wounded 1,500 Iraqis. The Iranian account could not be independently confirmed.

Iraq said it would withdraw from all Iranian territory within a day. On Sunday, Iraq reported its troops already had left Iran.

The new reports came as the warring nations' foreign ministers prepared to meet this week with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar for talks on a cease-fire.

Exactly one week ago and after a string of battlefield defeats, Iran abruptly changed its hardline stance and accepted a year-old U.N. resolution for ending the 8-year-old war between the Persian Gulf neighbors.

Leader Extends Hope For Hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The spiritual leader of pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists believed to be holding foreigners hostage in Lebanon has called for a new approach to the crisis that would bring a "happy ending."

Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, the spiritual leader of Hezbollah, or Party of God, made the comments in a sermon Sunday as Iran prepared to enter U.N.-sponsored talks to end its 8-year-old war with Iraq.

Fadlallah accused the United States and Europe of using the hostage crisis for political purposes. But he also called for a swift resolution to the problem.

"We call for a just and practical solution to this problem to achieve a happy ending," he said.

"We are aware that the (hostages) problem has reached such a degree of complexity that its political aspect has become mixed up with its humanitarian aspect."

Hezbollah is believed to be an umbrella for Shiite factions holding most of the 18 foreigners missing in Lebanon. Nine Americans are among the captives.

Fadlallah's comments came during a one-hour sermon to Shiites marking the major Moslem feast of al-Adha in south Beirut's Bir el-Abed mosque.

The hostages are widely believed to be held in Hezbollah's Hay Madi barracks building about 10 blocks from the mosque in Beirut's southern suburbs.

Syria has had some 5,000 troops patrolling most of the southern suburbs since May 27, but they have

Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran, who was flying to New York today, said Iraq's wide-ranging attacks along the war front threatened a prospective cease-fire.

On Sunday, a four-member U.N.

team arrived in Iran to begin discussing a key technical elements of a truce: the trade of prisoners of war. A second U.N. team was scheduled to arrive soon in the Persian Gulf to work out other details of a cease-fire.

Interviewed today on ABC's "Good Morning America," Iranian and Iraqi diplomats charged each other's countries with violating the spirit of the prospective truce.

"At the last minute they want to capture some of our land when we have already removed the excuse for the Iraqis," said Mohammed Ja'afar Mahallati, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations. "Unfortunately it has been Iraq that has always sabotaged efforts of the secretary-general to implement (U.N. Resolution 596)."

Abdul Amir al-Anbari, Iraq's ambassador to the United States, criticized Iran for waiting a year to accept the U.N. resolution "and coupled with that, of course, all threats and call for mobilization and asking the Iranian people to go to the front to continue the war against what they call the enemy."

"We are interested in lasting, comprehensive peace, not just a cease-fire to enable the Iraqis to mobilize and ... wage another human offensive whenever they would like," he said.

Supreme Court Chief Justice Musavi Ardebili of Iran said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini had "doubled his popularity" by accepting the cease-fire, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported today.

Tehran radio said Khomeini met with a group of visitors who chanted "Please God Keep Khomeini Alive" and "We Are All Your Soldiers, We Will Obey Your Orders."

The radio said Khomeini responded by waving his hand. He apparently did not speak.

Ardebili urged a huge turnout at rallies planned for Aug. 2 to demonstrate allegiance to Khomeini, the patriarch of Iran's 9-year-old Islamic revolution.

Iraq already has accepted the U.N. cease-fire resolution, which calls for return to previous borders and a prisoner exchange.

According to International Red Cross figures, Iran has about 50,000 Iraqi POWs and Iraq held 13,000 Iranian soldiers before the latest raid.

Iraq said Sunday that it had boosted its bargaining position by seizing 8,636 additional enemy fighters during its push into Iran that began Friday.

Vietnamese Begin Peace Talks Today

BOGOR, Indonesia (AP) — Vietnam, which once called the situation in Cambodia "irreversible," held its first peace talks today with leaders of three guerrilla groups fighting its decade-old occupation of that country.

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach of Vietnam searched for compromise in an opulent reception room at the late President Sukarno's summer palace with the guerrilla leaders and foreign ministers of non-communist nations that back them.

The informal "cocktail party" talks weren't confirmed until the last minute, but they have raised hopes for ending a monotonous cycle of dashed diplomatic moves followed by bloody fighting in Cambodia's malarial jungles.

Vietnam maintains more than 100,000 troops in Cambodia to support a government it installed after invading the country on Christmas Day, 1978.

sat Thach; Hun Sen, prime minister of the Vietnamese-installed government; a representative of Vietnam's communist ally, Laos; and the guerrilla leaders: Khieu Samphan of the communist Khmer Rouge, Son Sann of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, and Prince Norodom Ranariddh, who is representing his father, prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The guerrillas are grouped in a resistance coalition that the United Nations recognizes as Cambodia's legitimate government.

Foreign Minister Ali Alatas of host Indonesia moderated the talks, also attended by senior foreign ministry officials of the other members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations: Thailand, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Brunei.

The association has called Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia the Deep South Leaf Sales Set To Open

ATLANTA (AP) — Sales begin Tuesday on the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco market, and observers say the outlook is good despite the summer's prolonged drought.

Last year, tobacco growers sold 82.9 million pounds on the 13 Georgia markets at an average price of $162.63 per hundredweight.

On the combined Georgia-Florida belt, which includes four market areas in Florida, sales totaled 99.4 million pounds and averaged $163.02 per hundredweight.

Doug Hendrix, a reporter for the state-federal Tobacco Market News Service, said preliminary reports indicate this year's crop is "good, considering the drought we've had. It just depends on who (among the growers) had rain."

Georgia- and Florida-grown tobacco is used almost exclusively in cigarette manufacturing.

First-of-season sales typically involve primings, the bottom leaves on the stalk; lugs, the next set of leaves, and cutters, usually from mid-stalk. Leaf and smoking leaf, from the top portion of the plant, are marketed later in the season.

Michael Stephenson, an agronomist at the Coastal Plains Experiment Station in Tifton, agreed that "it will be a pretty decent crop" but said it may also be a late one.

"It looks like a late crop because of the drought and because we had a cool spring," he commented. "It's been one of those years where it's too wet, too dry, too cold, too hot, too everything."

Some growers also experienced problem with curing in the early stages because of humidity, he said.

He offered no prediction for this year's sales figures, but said he expected them to surpass last year's.

Migrant Workers Return To Fields This Year

Farmers Find Plenty Of Harvest Help

RALEIGH (AP) — Although a federal immigration law kept some migrant workers away last summer, North Carolina farmers say they are having little trouble finding workers this year to help pick tobacco at the beginning of the state's harvest.

"We really seem to be in good shape," said Manfred Emmrich, of the state Employment Security Commission. "Apparently, we have a good number of agricultural workers, including migrant workers."

And in Pitt County, the story is similar. As tobacco harvesting gets underway, the farm labor supply in Pitt County seems abundant, according to Jim Hannan, manager of the local North Carolina Employment Security office, and Mitch Smith, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office director.

Hannan estimated the number of migrant laborers in the county now at 3,500. These workers, combined with local farmworkers, are providing adequate labor, he said.

Smith echoed Hannan's optimism, saying that he believes the use of migrant labor has tripled since last year.

Hannan said immigration papers are being vigorously checked, that each worker must show an I-9 form verifying legal immigration before he or she is recommended for work.

The commission estimates about 21,000 migrant workers had a part in getting the state's tobacco, apples, vegetables and other crops to market in each of the past two years. Most are Hispanic and come to the state from earlier harvests in states farther south, such as Florida and Texas.

Stephen Sutter, an extension economist at N.C. State University, told The News and Observer of Raleigh he expected no major shortages of farm workers this harvest season, though there could be problems next summer.

"For the foreseeable future, the labor supply looks good," he said. "1989 will be a question mark, when the full impact of enforcement of immigration requirements takes place."

The law, which carries stiff penalties for employing illegal immigrants, takes effect for producers of perishable crops next year.

Because of fears about the new law and other factors, Duplin County farmers were pinched for help in harvesting their spring vegetables last summer. This year, workers already have harvested most of the cucumbers, squash, beans, cabbage and other vegetables in the county's spring crop with no major problems.

"I have not found any worker shortage this season," said Philip Denlinger, a Duplin County agricultural extension agent. "Not like last year. Last year, our vegetables suffered a little bit at the beginning of the season because there was a labor problem."

In Rockingham County, tobacco farmers could use more help picking their crops, but there is no severe shortage, said E. Scott Shoulers, an agricultural extension agent.

"Overall, we could use a few more," he said. "We do have people who are still looking for labor. They're absolutely essential to harvesting our tobacco crop."

In the western part of the state, dry weather has slowed maturation of squash, beans and tomatoes, leaving some workers temporarily idle.

"For the past few days, we have had more people than we have had jobs," said John Murdock, manager of the state Employment Security Commission office in Hendersonville.

"Now that we've had some rain the last couple of days, that might change," Murdock said. "We're just hoping it doesn't change too much."

The main crop relying on migrants for harvesting in Henderson County is apples, Murdock said.

Emergency Rooms On 'Front Line'

By Claire Spiegel
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — Doctors around the United States are describing emergency rooms as explosive pressure cookers faced where human suffering collides with harsh new economic realities confronting hospital officials.

More and more people are arriving sicker and poorer at busy inner-city emergency rooms. Hospitals, however, are increasingly unwilling to absorb the cost of caring for them, due to tight budgets caused by stringent government cost controls, low occupancy rates, and, in some cases, debts from overexpansion.

Looking to cut their losses, hospitals have closed their trauma centers or curtailed basic emergency service. In many instances, the pressure behind the move is coming from doctors who are refusing to treat the patients.

A looming breakdown of hospital emergency services in Los Angeles, for example, is simply the most acute symptom of a fast-spreading disease afflicting emergency health care systems nationwide, health officials say. Four private hospitals in downtown Los Angeles plan to close their emergency rooms next month to public ambulances that transport victims of 911 distress calls; five other hospitals have threatened to follow suit.

Los Angeles is "probably at the epicenter of this critical problem," said Dr. Stephen Groth, president of the California chapter of the American College of Emergency Physicians. But all over the country, he said, hospital emergency rooms "are on the front line" of conflict in the health care industry.

Dr. Howard Champion, chief of trauma at Washington Hospital Center in Washington, D.C., said that hospitals, especially in poor urban areas, are considering curtailment of emergency services.

In Houston, the president of the 900-bed Herman Hospital, Jephtha Dalston, said, "I think we'll soon be where you (in Los Angeles) are at right now."

South Florida has already been dealt a devastating blow. Seven of the eight trauma centers in Miami have closed. And the Florida Hospital Association has reported that 35 percent of the state's 220 emergency departments have reduced service for lack of physicians.

In New York city, the problem is one of serious overcrowding. Hospitals are so full of critically ill patients that they back up into the emergency room, creating "medical gridlock," according to Dr. Lewis Goldfrank at the city-operated Bellevue Hospital Center.

Pressure on emergency rooms throughout the city, he said, is so great that he has publicly advocated calling in the National Guard to help with the caseload.

Tickets are $6 for adults and $3 for children 12 and under. For more information and ticket reservations, call 296-0721.

10 Weekend Thefts Reported To Police

Investigators said 10 thefts, among them a grandfather clock and car, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer M.J. Nobles said the grandfather clock valued at $300, a $160 television set and a speaker valued at $600 were taken from 123 Oakdale Rd. in a break-in reported at 12:50 p.m. Saturday. Officer A.L. Jones said a deacons bench was taken from 1922P Quail Ridge in an incident reported at 12:54 p.m. and several items were taken from Belk's at Carolina East Mall in a shoplifting incident reported at 3:40 p.m.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said an air conditioner was taken from 1508B Mills St. in an incident reported at 3:20 p.m. Saturday, while Officer R.G. Mendenhall said a video cassette recorder and television set were taken from 119 Holiday Court in a break-in reported at 12:16 a.m. Sunday.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said five keys were taken from a purse in the office at Smithfield Chicken and Barbecue on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 12:19 a.m. Sunday, while Officer M.J. Nobles said two radar detectors, one valued at $400 and the other at $200, were taken from a vehicle parked at 302 Crestline Blvd. in an incident reported at 10:27 a.m. and a 1982 Ford Escort, which was later recovered, was taken from Atlantic Avenue in an incident reported at 10:27 a.m.

Officer M.A. Jordan said a radio valued at $185 was taken from a bicycle parked at Earl's Store on Fleming Street in an incident reported at 5:17 p.m., while Officer J.W. Isenhour said a video cassette recorder valued at $600 was taken from a car parked at Meadowbrook Park in an incident reported at 7:29 p.m.

Hospital Director Wins Compensatory Damages

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal jury has awarded former Broughton Hospital Director Harold Coston $60,000 in compensatory damages after determining that two top state administrators violated his constitutional rights.

The seven-woman, five-man jury reached its decision Thursday in U.S. District Court in Raleigh after five hours of deliberations in a lawsuit filed by Coston. The 13-day trial took close to 80 hours in court time.

The jury found that Coston's constitutional rights were violated by defendants Ruby Hooper of Morganton, deputy secretary for the state Department of Human Resources; and Don Cummings, director of personnel of the Department of Human Resources.

But the jury said all three defendants named in the case, including Bobbie Ragan, Broughton Hospital assistant director of administrative services, did not conspire to violate Coston's constitutional rights.

The state will pay the compensatory damages since the defendants were acting in their official capacities when the violations occurred, according to defense attorney Jim Smith, a special deputy attorney general.

The defendants have 30 days to file an appeal with the federal clerk of courts office.

Coston filed the suit in October 1986 claiming he was forced to resign after serving more than a year as director because he refused to dismiss, demote or transfer a "hit list" of 18 employees with Democratic affiliations at the state psychiatric hospital in Morganton.

The defendants said Coston was fired for making illegal phone calls on state telephone lines, misusing compensatory time and not being an aggressive enough director.

After the trial, Ms. Hooper's only comment was, "I'm not guilty."

Officials Say Training May Not Have Stopped Shooting

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Witnesses to a shooting rampage say sheriff's deputies didn't seem to know what to do when a gunman apparently went berserk and killed four people. But those in charge of training the officers say they were well trained despite the July 17 incident.

"They get good basic training," Guilford County Sheriff Walter Burch said of deputies in neighboring Forsyth County, where the shootings occurred.

"I don't know that you ever completely train anyone in the fast-changing world of law enforcement, but we try to keep up-to-date," he said.

Michael Hayes is accused of killing four people and wounding five others in a 12-minute span as they drove past his family's moped shop that Sunday night in the southern part of the county. Family members say he needed psychiatric help.

Witnesses said sheriff's deputies failed to block off roads leading past the shop, allowing motorists to drive unawares into the gunman's sights, where they were shot at point-blank range.

They also said officers who responded to the incident initially crouched behind their cruisers and failed to fire at Hayes, who continued to shoot wildly and may have killed at least three people after the officers arrived.

Other witnesses listening to police radio reports said the deputies asked for and were denied permission to fire at the gunman.

The Forsyth County Sheriff's Department has declined to discuss deputies' handling of the event until an investigation is complete.

But Bill Lanning, assistant director of the law-enforcement training school at Guilford Technical Community College, denied that the shootings indicated any lapse in the training of local law enforcement officers.

He described the deputies' training program and exams as "very tough."

In fact, most area police forces and sheriff's departments demand a level of training that goes beyond state standards, officials say.

The Criminal Justice Standards Commission and the North Carolina Sheriff's Commission require 369 course hours of instruction before officers in training may take certification exams. They take classes in 30 areas ranging from driving to due process, officials said.

The Forsyth County Sheriff's Department, through Forsyth County Tech, requires about 600 hours of training from its recruits, officials said. The Guilford County Sheriff's Department, which sends its trainees to Guilford Tech, required 665 hours training from its latest class of recruits.

"I don't know that you ever completely train anyone in the fast-changing world of law enforcement, but we try to keep up to date," Burch said.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending July 15.

HOUSE
MILITARY BASE CLOSINGS — The House voted 223 for and 186 against to toughen pending legislation (HR 4481) to expedite the closing of obsolete military bases.

The vote adopted an amendment that minimizes congressional and bureaucratic obstacles to Pentagon plans to shut down surplus bases. It eliminated the possibility of closures being blocked by lengthy environmental and economic studies, and it enabled the Pentagon to begin shutdowns without having to wait for Congress to vote advance approval.

The overall bill was sent to conference with the Senate on a non-record vote. It empowers a Pentagon commission to come up with a list of proposed closings by the end of the year. The defense secretary would order elimination of all or none of the targeted bases. Congress could block closures only if both houses pass a resolution of disapproval and, if the resolution is vetoed, by mustering two-thirds majorities in each chamber to override the veto.

Members voting yes favored the tougher of two pending procedures for closing obsolete military bases.

North Carolina Voting yes: David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.
Voting no: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valetine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8.
Not voting: None.

PLANT CLOSING BILL — By a vote of 286 for and 136 against, the House passed and sent to the White House a bill (S 2527) requiring employers of 100 or more workers to give 60 days' notice of plans to lay off at least 50 workers or close plants and places of business.

President Reagan has threatened to veto this legislative priority of organized labor.

Members voting yes favored the plant-closing bill.

North Carolina Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valetine, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.
Voting no: Lancaster, Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.
Not voting: None.

ETHANOL IMPORTS — By a vote of 183 for and 237 against, the House rejected an attempt to restrict imports of ethanol fuel from Caribbean nations.

Supporters of the GOP-drafted motion argued that European producers plan to ship ethanol through the Caribbean, thus avoiding U.S. consumption and that ethanol is scarce in many parts of the nation.

The vote occurred as the House approved the conference report on sweeping legislation (HR 4848) to toughen America's world trading stance while extending protection and benefits to workers and industries hurt by certain foreign competition. The massive trade bill was headed for likely approval in the Senate and President Reagan's expected signature.

Members voting yes wanted to limit duty free ethanol imports from the Caribbean.

NORTH CAROLINA — Voting yes: Walter Jones, Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.
Voting no: Valetine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.
Not voting: None.

SENATE
GAY RIGHTS ISSUE — The Senate voted, 58 for and 33 against, to undercut a District of Columbia law recognizing gay rights at religious schools in the federal city.

The amendment was attached to a bill (HR 4776) appropriating $3.7 billion toward the 1989 D.C. budget. It calls for halting the federal aid if D.C. by the end of the year has not repealed an ordinance under which Georgetown University must treat gay organizations the same as it does other student groups.

The U.S. Court of Appeals last year used the local law to order Georgetown, a Catholic school, to provide gay groups full access to its facilities.

Amendment sponsor William Armstrong, R-Colo., called the D.C. ordinance an assault on academic freedom and religious liberty.

Opponent Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., termed the amendment "plain, old-fashioned, straightforward bigotry and discrimination."

Members voting yes wanted to undercut the D.C. ordinance on behalf of gays.

NC Terry Sanford, D, voted no. Jesse Helms, R, did not vote.

CABINET DEPT. FOR VETERANS — By a vote of 84 for and 11 against, the Senate approved and sent to conference with the House a bill (S 533) upgrading the Veterans Administration to the cabinet-level Department of Veterans' Affairs.

Supporters argued veterans deserve the highest possible representation in government councils, while foes said the bill would establish a costly new layer of special-interest bureaucracy.

Senators voting yes wanted to establish a cabinet department for veterans.

NC Sanford voted yes. Helms did not vote.

JUDICIAL REVIEW — By a vote of 86 for and 11 against, the Senate passed a bill enabling veterans to seek U.S. Court of Appeals review of certain claims rulings by the Veterans Administration's Board of Veterans' Appeals (BVA). The bill (S 11) was sent to the House.

Under a post-Civil War law designed in part to protect veterans and widows from unscrupulous lawyers, veterans lack court standing to appeal administrative rulings on requests for benefits. Vietnam veterans say court review is necessary because the BVA has failed to award compensation for exposure to the toxic defoliant Agent Orange.

Sponsor Alan Cranston, D-Calif.,

said the bill "would raise veterans to full first-class citizenship..."

Opponents noted that the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars object to the bill.

Senators voting yes favored judicial review of administrative rulings on veterans' benefits.

NC Sanford voted yes. Helms did not vote.

REPLACING BABY TEETH

Prematurely missing baby teeth are usually replaced with devices known as space maintainers or stay plates. Since the jaws, teeth, and other mouth tissues in the child are growing and expanding, these devices are of temporary construction. They are easy to make and relatively inexpensive. In some instances the dentist may suggest a temporary bridge or simple design as a space maintainer.

The purpose of these temporary appliances is to maintain the spaces resulting from premature loss of baby teeth. If the gaps are not kept open, the adjoining teeth will spread and drift, narrowing or closing the spaces. Where spreading and drifting are allowed, the space remaining will not be wide enough to accommodate the permanent tooth that is destined to replace the lost baby tooth. The permanent tooth will then erupt in an abnormal position. At that point, the problem is more difficult to deal with and usually requires more extensive treatment.

Owensby Studio Prepares For Underwater Film

CHEROKEE, S.C. (AP) — The bookcase in Leslie Dilley's office is full of volumes by French oceanographer Jacques Cousteau.

Since February, the ocean has been much on Dilley's mind.

That is when he was hired as production designer and art director for the underwater movie "The Abyss," in preparation at Earl Owensby's Cherokee studio.

Owensby's original studios are in Shelby, N.C.

Dilley is responsible for every visual aspect of the film, most of which will be shot in five man-made pools. His art department will create a large underwater set depicting an offshore oil rig along with submarine and other sets and props.

Some of his ideas have come from Cousteau's books and from actual visits to offshore rigs in such places as Mobile, Ala.

"This underwater set is pretty large by anyone's standards. It's an underwater oil rig," Dilley said.

"Everything is big on this picture. Everything's large."

Dilley is accustomed to large-scale film projects. He is a two-time Academy Award winner, holding Oscars for his art direction on George Lucas's "Star Wars" and Steven Spielberg's "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

Dilley was also nominated for Oscars on the movies "Alien" and "The Empire Strikes Back," a "Star Wars" sequel.

On "The Abyss," he is working for director James Cameron who did "The Terminator" and "Aliens."

A native of Wales, Dilley, 47, grew up in London where he studied architecture and building construction at a technical college.

He entered the film business 32 years ago as an apprentice who built sets. Gradually, he moved into the art department and became an assistant.

His first movie as art director was "The Three Musketeers" in 1974. The first movie he designed on his own was "American Werewolf in London."

Dilley, his wife, and their 6-week-old daughter, are living in Gaffney during "The Abyss" shoot. (James Cameron and other key movie personnel have either bought or are renting homes in the Gaffney area. Others are staying at a Gaffney motel.)

"I'm liking it here," Dilley says. "I live in California, and the two things I miss are the countryside and architecture, and here at least I've got the countryside, which is very pleasant."

"The Abyss" is a contemporary action-adventure story about a disabled submarine aided by people from an oil rig.

Dilley is designing an oil rig set that will be placed in a pool with 7 million gallons of water. The unit will contain three airtight compartments where filming will take place.

"This really is a large-scale movie," he says. "The majority of the shooting will be underwater, so the set-building has a whole new complexity because of the stress and strain."

Dilley has a staff of about 12 artists. Between 500 and 800 detailed blueprint drawings have been done for the film.

"I work in close conjunction with directors, especially Cameron, who is very artistic in his own right," Dilley says. "I'm primarily responsible for interpreting the director's wishes from the visual standpoint and putting one's own ideas forward."

"The Abyss" will have a very industrial look," Dilley says. He has been through numerous reference books in addition to studying drilling rigs first hand.

"Everything in this business is a continual educational trip," he says. "I didn't know anything about offshore drilling rigs when I started."

Dilley's set decorator is Anne Kuljan, with whom he has worked before. A fellow Englishman, Ken Pattenden, is construction coordinator. Dilley and Pattenden created the forest set in the fantasy movie, "Legend," starring Tom Cruise.

Principal photography is scheduled to begin early next month.

"One is always up against the clock," says Dilley. "You try to get the most you can into the sets and always work up to the wire. In this case, we're building the set and also making the facility to put the set in."

Owensby is converting what would have been a nuclear reactor containment building at Duke Power had completed its Cherokee Nuclear Station into the largest pool.

"There are problems," says Dilley, "but we're getting there. The biggest drawback has been the local labor available to film companies. We've been doing all this with local labor whenever possible, and there are a lot of willing people, but they have no background in this industry. We've had to bring in certain trades from Wilmington — plasterers, especially."

As for the complex taking shape at Cherokee, Dilley says, "This could be the top underwater and surface tank facility in the world by the time we're finished. Filmmakers are always looking for economical ways of doing things. So, if you've got a good facility and back it up with a local labor force, it would be tremendous."

Dilley and his art department are working long hours to create the right look for "The Abyss." For underwater rocks, they are making plaster impressions of large stones already on the Cherokee property.

Dilley has been in the film business 32 years; but each project, large or small, is still exciting.

"I've never been bored," he says. "Ever."

Area Families Will Get Indoor Plumbing With Federal Funding

BLOUNTS CREEK (AP) — Although privies are out of sight and out of mind for most North Carolinians, at least 50,000 — and as many as 100,000 — houses in the state still rely on outhouses for waste disposal, officials say.

"A large part of the problem is that many people can't afford a sanitary system," said Steven Berkowitz, an environmental engineer with the sanitation branch of the state Division of Health Services.

When Beaufort County inspectors surveyed Lucinda Moore's home in Beaufort County last year, she didn't complain about the uneven floors, the draft in the kitchen, or even the leak in the hall ceiling when a blowing rain came.

But there was one thing, the soft-spoken 83-year-old told inspectors: "I'd like to live long enough to have my bathroom put inside."

Sometime this year, Mrs. Moore could get her wish.

Using $600,000 in federal community development block grant funds, the county will refurbish about 60 homes in the Blounts Creek area of the county. One requirement, said Milton Barnette Jr., whose Farmville engineering firm is overseeing the work, is to bring the plumbing inside.

"This is a major housing rehabilitation project," Barnette said. "Waste disposal is part of rehabilitation — bringing the houses up to federal standards. Outhouses do not fit federal standards."

As a rule, the outhouses — located in rural areas where public sewers are not available — are not inspected unless someone complains to the county health department, Berkowitz said.

Privies popped into the news earlier this month when officials in Davidson County were asked to check several outhouses in Walltown, just south of Lexington, and declared 14 of them unsanitary. Owners of the homes, most of which are rented, have been ordered to bring the privies into compliance with state codes, said David McBrayer of the county health department.

A state law established in 1919 describes a "sanitary" privy as one that contains "a vault, pail, or tank ... surrounded and protected by fly-tight walls. In addition, due regard must be paid to the protection of drinking water supplies from contamination."

In introducing the law, A.J. Warren, then assistant secretary of the State Board of Health, cited unsanitary privies as the primary source of 2,000 deaths and 34,000 illnesses each year from fecal-borne diseases, including the two worst, typhoid and dysentery.

Warren called the matter of waste disposal "the largest single factor that is impeding the progress of health work in North Carolina."

Regulations outlined in that law are essentially the same ones followed today, said Berkowitz of the Division of Health Services.

Privies in violation of the law, generally, are dug too close to the water table, placed too close to a drinking well, or lack seats that are sufficiently tight to keep insects from entering and leaving the pit, carrying diseases with them.

If the state had its druthers, there probably would be no privies, Berkowitz said. But a properly maintained outhouse is not a health hazard, he said, and in some cases, it may be the only suitable means of waste disposal.

Money isn't the only problem preventing people from having indoor toilets, Berkowitz said.

Some houses are constructed such that there is no place to put a sanitary sewage system; either the lot is too small, or the soil is unsuitable for a septic tank or the house is nowhere near any public system they could connect to.

"And I've met a few who did not want a bathroom in the house," he said.

While working on a housing rehabilitation program in the North Carolina mountains several years ago, Berkowitz said, he encountered a couple in their 80s who had been using an outhouse all their lives.

"The man had never lived in a house with a bathroom," he said. "He told us he didn't want one. He wouldn't use it if he had it."

But Connie Price, planning director for the Mideast Commission, a regional planning agency based in Washington, N.C., which administers federal housing improvement projects in Pitt, Beaufort, Martin, Bertie and Beaufort counties, has never met a homeowner who wouldn't rather have an inside bathroom than an outdoor toilet.

"I guess it varies from family to family," Ms. Price said. "But most would rather have the bathroom inside, if only for convenience sake, to keep from having to go outside in the cold. Especially elderly people."

Weekend Traffic Accidents Responsible For Eight Deaths

By The Associated Press
Weekend traffic accidents killed eight people on North Carolina roads, including three who died in a single car accident in Polkton, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Grace Rorie Rogers, 63, of Monroe, Walter Burgas Jowers, 65, of Monroe, and Mildred Louise Griffin, 63, of Wingate, were killed about 4:30 p.m. Saturday when the car, driven by Ms. Rogers, struck a tree off a rural paved road about a mile from Polkton, troopers said.

Ondus Clifford Albright, 69, of Bennett, died about 12:30 p.m. Saturday when the car he was driving ran off N.C. 22 and struck a traffic island. Troopers said Albright lost control of the car, and it overturned. The accident occurred about 16 miles south of Siler City.

Wade Lewis Moore, 33, of Angier, was killed when the car he was driving collided with another vehicle on a rural road about four miles east of Fuquay about 4:30 p.m. Saturday, troopers said.

Sylvester Lee Gainey, 21, of Morgan was struck and killed on U.S. 52 near his home town about 2:30 a.m. Saturday by a motorist who did not see him lying in the road, troopers said.

The driver continued on and was stopped by law officers in Wadesboro, where he told authorities he didn't realize he had run over Gainey.

Carolyn Randolph, 37, of Carthage was killed when the car she was driving ran off U.S. 15 in Moore County near her home town and struck a parked vehicle, Saturday, the patrol said.

About 12:45 a.m. Saturday, Demetrius Harvell, 26, of Mount Olive drove his car into the rear of a vehicle ahead of him and was killed, troopers said. The accident happened on a rural road near Mount Olive in Wayne County.

The accidents bring to 788 the number of people killed on North Carolina roads so far this year, compared with 831 a year ago, the highway patrol said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Going Up

PCMH Price Rise Follows Trend

From the standpoint of economic growth, Pitt County Memorial Hospital's budget for 1988-89 is tantalizing.

The board of trustees has submitted a $180 million budget to the Pitt County Commissioners. It represents a 10.7 percent increase over the present year's budget.

Since the hospital is a labor intensive facility, it becomes obvious that much of the increased spending, if the budget is approved, will go directly into the county economy. New employees, and old employees who receive raises, will spend the money on goods and services. Additional supplies and equipment and local services will be purchased by the hospital which will mean money in the local economy to generate still further employment.

That's the positive side. The negative is that at least some of the added income will be generated by increased room and ancillary services charges which are recommended in the budget. The revenues are based on a projected 9 percent average increase in bed rates. The increase ranges from $10 for 428 beds to $100 for four beds. Additional funds will come from an increase in volume and intensity of services, $8.3 million; new services, $3.4 million and rate increases, $16.3 million.

The bed rate increases are not out of line with projected increases nationwide for daily hospital rates. And because PCMH is a regional referral facility some of the increase will be paid by patients who come here from out of the county, or by their insurers or from other sources.

The cost increases raise questions. Couldn't stronger, more efficient management have absorbed some of the increase? Couldn't sharp pencils and a hold-the-line attitude have kept the price down, or at least softened the impact on consumers? Are priorities in hospital budgeting correct? Those who will pay the price can't help but wonder. PCMH is not the only facility in question; these doubts apply to medical centers across the nation.

One fact is clear. Pitt County citizens, who provided the initial funds for construction of PCMH through a bond issue, will find themselves paying ever higher charges for hospital stays. And if the cost is paid by insurance it will eventually be reflected in higher premium rates.

The problem is not the county's alone. The nation still has not devised a way to curb ever-growing costs of hospital stays. Medical science has made important advances in the past decade. Much new technology has the ability to impact sharply on quality of life. Ironically, the cost puts it out of reach for many who need it most. Somehow, the nation must reconcile this disparity.

But it is a fact of life for Pitt County residents who make use of the hospital next year. Cost will be higher than this year. It eases the discomfort to know that the hospital's overall budget will contribute to the local economy, but that doesn't relax the squeeze on any individual's budget.

Sometimes The Wounded Run Swift

ATLANTA — If politics makes strange bedfellows than nothing has been stranger this year than the candidates' bedding. It has been tragedy, personal setbacks and rebuffs.

Richard Gephardt's child had cancer. Bob Dole carries the wounds of a distant war. George Bush lost a child to leukemia and Mike Dukakis, once a proud but arrogant man, was humiliated by the voters of Massachusetts when he first tried for a second term as governor. He attended Swarthmore and Harvard, but the education that counted the most at the Democratic National Convention was the one he got in the school of hard knocks. He learned how to get up off the canvas.

All week, the news media had said that he would deliver his usual speech — an uninspirational affair, a menu of his usual clichés and phrases. He would be overshadowed by that great orator of our times, Jesse Jackson. The Dukakis campaign had contributed to the conventional wisdom. There would be nothing new in the speech, they confided. The same old themes, they said. Insomniacs of America, tune in. Mike Dukakis would speak.

'Where did he come from — this emotional, moving Dukakis? Where did he come from — this accomplished speaker? Where earlier was this man who awed both the convention and television audiences — who made women cry (and men, too) ...'

But when he did, he banished sleep. You could not tell that all day the netwre momentators had been saying that this would be his do-or-die moment. This would be the moment to tell the huge television audience who he was, what kind of man he was, what his vision was, his plan, his program — his everything. He would have to do it all where he usually performed worse — the speechmaker's podium. Here, there is no out-basket. Here there is no speakerphone, no buzzer — not the loving files and exciting reports of the clichéd technocrat. He would have to move the audience and, it was universally agreed, Mike Dukakis could not do that.

But he did. He came up on the podium from the floor of the convention — symbolically from the people. He reached out and touched their hands, and the feel of flesh, the dope of politics, seemed to give him a high. And then he started to speak about his family, the immigrant theme so overused at this convention. His father had come from Greece, arriving at Ellis Island with only $25. "He'd be very proud of his son," Dukakis said and his voice cracked. Michael Dukakis turns out to be like all men: still striving to please dad.

Where did he come from — this emotional, moving Dukakis? Where did he come from — this accomplished speaker? Where earlier was this man who awed both the convention and television audiences — who made women cry (and men, too), who spoke to blacks about Jesse Jackson, and to Hispanics in Spanish? Where, all this time, was the man who, when he finished, elicited a confession from Walter Cronkite. He has been wrong, he said. Mike Dukakis can deliver a speech.

The tendency at the moment is to light a candle for George Bush. He is already behind in the polls, blessed with a whiny voice and body movements that experts tell us send all the wrong signals. But he, too, is the child of misfortune — the death of his own child, for instance. Remember New Hampshire? That primary would be the end of his campaign, we were told. He had lost to Bob Dole in Iowa and the Bush obituaries were being written. A thousand commentators said a thousand times that Bush was finished. He won New Hampshire and, except for the formalities next month in New Orleans, the nomination. Like Dukakis, he, too, had a father and there are those close to Bush who think his ultimate aim is to bring a proud smile to the imagined face of a dead man.

Theodore Roosevelt, a sickly child, lost his wife and his mother in the span of a single day. Franklin Roosevelt lost the use of his legs and had to walk on ebullience and grit. Harry Truman failed in business. Richard Nixon counts six crisis, but since totaling them there have been even more. Winston Churchill botched Gallipoli and was considered a blowhard in the political wilderness until Britain called him back. Ronald Reagan, that most fortunate of men, had an alcoholic for a father and was a has-been actor before he turned to politics and ultimate success.

Michael Dukakis' favorite metaphor is the marathon. It is a grueling race of Greek origin and he referred to it to end his speech. It's an apt metaphor for Dukakis, not just because marathoners must have determination and pacing if they are to go the distance — but also because every race is a lonely one. Gone, in political terms, are all the experts — the consultants, the pollsters, the fund-raisers — and the runner is alone with himself, running through exhaustion and past pain, running best if he has known pain and exhaustion before.

The race is not always to the fleet. As Mike Dukakis proved here, sometimes it's to the wounded.

To the editor:

You are the answer! I'm not sure how many people ever stop to read any of the literature that is posted inside the Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter, but the articles I read proclaimed that the power of words is mightier than the sword, especially those in the poem titled "You Are the Answer". The basics of what I read stated that people in general, take for granted the privilege of animal ownership. The come in and "dump" litters of puppies and kittens in hopes (how sincere, I'm not sure) that someone will adopt, love and care for their mistakes. It's the owner of those animals who is responsible for all the potential pets who have to suffer an untimely death; not the "dog catcher." It has to be unbearable to put animals "to sleep," "to play God" day after day in an attempt to control the pet population. When one solution to the problem is the people who own these animals. And all it would cost them is several dollars and a little bit of time to have the cat or dog spayed or neutered. The majority of people reply that they don't have the time or money to have this done, yet they take the time to bring in litters resultant of their irresponsible attitudes to be destroyed. Prior to that, they took the time to come to the animal shelter and adopt some cut, cuddly, irresistible animal that they don't have the time or money for anyway. There must be a lot of immaturity in Pitt County. Check with the local animal shelter to get an idea how many "mistakes" they destroy on a weekly basis.

To the editor:

Recently at a gathering of folks from around the state, concern was voiced about the recent 15 percent cut in federal funds for the Senior Citizens Nutrition Program, specifically the noon meal which is so well provided at the site centers. It was asked how the site manager would reduce the food for the same number of people and stay within the monies which it was estimated are about $26,000 less in Pitt County.

What if more seniors show up than regularly because of the present success of the meal served here at the center? Do they get turned away, or is the plan to slice the meat smaller, serve thinner slices of bread, water the milk down or add filler to the entree?

My compassion goes out to the good people who work at the Senior Center who must be saddened by the prospect of facing these older and needy citizens with smaller meals. I realize the managers do not prepare the meals day by day, but being there and seeing the pleasure that these older folks get from their noon sustenance makes the worker very aware of its importance. In some cases that meal is the highlight of each day.

One wonders at the mindset of the man in Washington who can inaugurate such a cut and then vote for millions for Star Wars.

I noted in your paper that our legislature had voted $750 to the Greenville Soup Kitchen. I am aware of at least one restaurant which furnishes an evening meal to a local shelter and I know of many Greenville churches and individuals who give generously and regularly to the less fortunate in this county.

Would that the makers of policy in our capitol get the right perspective!

There are rampant abuses by mobile home park management that require action to remove inequities such as excessive rent increases, reduced services, problem sewer systems, road maintenance, slow response to health and safety complaints, imposing punitive restrictions on park rules and arbitrary evictions.

The North Carolina Association of Mobile Home Park Residents is a statewide organization that is strong and has unified support to resolve the problems that confront us. There are some parks that have good management and respond to tenant needs, but they are in the minority.

The Association is in the process of seeking legislation in North Carolina to improve landlord-tenant relations. There are some laws that protect tenants, but they need to be strengthened and amended. The legislation effort is supported by the American Association of Retired Persons, veterans organizations and the Manufactured Home Institute of North Carolina.

Edith Webber proclaims "perestroika and glasnost are changing the Soviet people's understanding of Communism," and that a Communist world would be a democratic one.

Reality: under Gorbachev: emigration activist Vasili Barats has been kicked out of Moscow and shipped to the Western Ukraine; the KGB recently closed Glasnost Magazine, arrested its editor, confiscated his printing equipment and destroyed his files; the Polish regime crushed the latest labor unrest with Gorbachev's blessing; Boris Yeltsin, former Moscow party boss, was removed because he wanted to see real reforms under "glasnost," not just phony cosmetics; the Soviet press promoted the lie that AIDS was invented at Fort Detrick, Md., as a biological warfare weapon; Western broadcasts are still jammed, etc.

"Peace"niksm: Gorbachev is a man of peace. Realism: Gorby has deployed an additional 15,000 Spetsnaz commandos in Afghanistan since the Soviet "pullout"; Soviet military shipments to Nicaragua have totaled over $200 million since the Guatemala City Accord was signed last August; Soviet officers commanded the Marxist Angolan regime's 1987 fall offensive against Savimbi's pro-Western forces, etc.

Gorby's economy is a sick joke. His government is confronted by an American administration moderately committed to halting Marxist expansion and intent on developing SDI, a system that would thwart the Soviet goal of world domination. So he calls detente "glasnost" and "perestroika," and disarms the West psychologically. Perestroika is an effort to reform the collapsing Marxist economic system in order to preserve and strengthen the Leninist quest for world domination. Glasnost is yet another change of Communist face, masquerading as a change of heart. Together, they're maskirovka, a strategic deception to dupe the West into, once again, dropping its guard.

"Peace"niks continually demonstrate that hope spring eternal in the breast of the duped.

Cease Fire Doesn't Portend End Of Violence

Analysis

By quaffing this "drink worse than poison" in accepting the principle of a cease fire, the Ayatollah Khomeini seems at long last willing to shelve the military phase of Iran's struggle against Iraq. This is good news. But Iran is far from abandoning its Islamic vision of the region and its quest for hegemony in the Persian Gulf — a reality that the United States, for its own strategic interests, must somehow learn to live with.

The disarray that has characterized Iranian foreign policy — especially over the past 18 months — reflects deep leadership disagreement over the manner in which the Iranian revolution should advance its vision of a grand design for the region. But the sheer force of reality has thrust itself upon the leadership in ways that can no longer be ignored — even by the ayatollah himself, as he now admits.

There is hardly a Western analyst alive who has successfully gauged the point at which Iran would "face reality," because the power of will can greatly affect success against heavy odds. And the power of Iran's will has been striking. Tehran's conduct of the war so long and so creatively in the face of national shortcomings has been remarkable. The will and drive that went into war may now be turned into foreign policy by other means.

Iran's crisis does not stem merely from a flagging of its military and revolutionary zeal. For some time now, Iran has been pursuing contradictory goals. The ayatollah's grand strategy has implicitly accepted the same strategic goal as his predecessor, the wicked shah: the establishment of Iranian hegemony over the Gulf region. But in so doing he has adopted style, tactics and sub-goals formed in the crucible of Islamic revolution. At a minimum Iran's goals have been to: isolate Iraq politically and defeat it militarily; intimidate the smaller Gulf sheikdoms; eliminate any superpower presence in the Gulf that might dilute Iranian hegemony; weaken if not eliminate U.S. influence in the region as a whole; and establish "Islamic government" as widely as possible throughout the Middle East.

For nearly a year now, however, the war has not been going well and Iran's contradictory goals have brought it to ever greater grief. Iraq is not isolated and is not losing the war any more. The small sheikdoms are no longer fearful of Iran's ability to visit damage upon them. The American superpower — far from being eliminated in the region — has now entered it with an armada unprecedented in the Gulf's history. And Iran has not enjoyed much success at establishing Islamic governments after its own image anywhere else in the area.

Ideally, Iran's repulse of Iraq's invasion might actually have led to the ultimate defeat and collapse of Iraqi Baath Party rule. Although Iraq probably came very close to defeat in a series of significant losses several years ago, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was able to shore up his defenses sufficiently and turn the tide through the use of punishing air power and more flexible ground tactics.

Iran's biggest blunder was the attack on Saudi forces during the annual pilgrimage to Mecca last summer. Although Iran probably never calculated that those demonstrations would reach the scale of bloodshed of several hundred dead, the result was to drive Saudi Arabia — normally content to seek accommodation with all powers — into outspoken anti-Iranian commitment.

But Iran's blunders did not stop there. Iran managed to cause a fundamental turn-around in the basic position of most of the Gulf states:

that small nations are safer non-aligned and that the superpowers generally should stay out of the region. Most of the smaller Gulf sheikdoms have had enough memories of Iraqi bullying and subversive tactics in the '60s and '70s to stifle any desire for an Iraqi victory. But the level of Iran's vituperation against the Gulf states, especially Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, pushed them into U.S. arms in all senses of the word. It was Iran's actions that sparked the U.S. reflagging exercise. And the Gulf rulers are now more committed to foreign military support in the Gulf conflict than at any time since gaining independence. In short, Iran has thrown its weight around in crude ways counterproductive to its long-range goals.

Lastly, Iran had hardly left a major Western power unoffended. Policies of kidnapping, local terrorism and other gratuitous actions alienated virtually all external support that Tehran might have enjoyed. Iran's policies even alienated a Soviet Union that in recent years has looked interested in a normalization of relations and a more balanced position between Iran and Iraq.

Iran may now recognize that the moment has come for focusing on essentials. If Iran is intent on establishing its dominance in the Gulf, its number one priority should be to get the U.S. military out of the Gulf conflict. And such a goal can best be accomplished by downplaying its threat to the Gulf states who felt compelled to call in the United States in the first place.

We are not talking here about why Iran should now become a moderate status quo state. We are discussing how Iran might most effectively accomplish its long-term goal of consolidating Iranian power and influence in the Gulf.

Good For The U.S

For the first time in eight years, Iran and Iraq may soon stop fighting and start making peace, thus ending one of the most horrific conflicts of modern times. This event will also have a major impact on the U.S. strategic perspective toward the Middle East. Most developments, though not all, will be positive. The balance of advantage mandates vigorous, flexible and committed American efforts to press for the cease-fire and make it effective.

Of most obvious benefit, a cease-fire will stop the threat of Iranian attacks against U.S. ships in response to Iraqi provocation. The flow of oil, never much at risk, will be even more secure. And, as the Pentagon has already hinted, if the war winds down, the 27-ship U.S. fleet can be thinned out and reflagging of Kuwaiti tankers can be halted. That does not mean our sailing away, however. As it has done for four decades, the United States will have a continuing interest in maintaining some naval presence in the gulf.

Ending the U.S.-Iranian confrontation will also have an impact on Iran's succession struggle in a way favorable to the West. Rapid U.S.-Iranian rapprochement is unlikely, but that is not critical to the United States. What is critical is that those Iranian leaders who lean toward the Soviet Union will be less able to play an anti-American card. The Soviets will have less chance to gain influence in Iran — the country that, in recent months, has been the most intense point of East-West competition.

With a halt to conflict, it will also be less likely that Iran will be dominated by the moudjahedeen, an Iraqi-based and -financed group of exiles who solicit support on street corners in major U.S. cities but are no friends of the United States. Even more important, if the danger of U.S.-Iranian clashes ends and the U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf can be reduced, the Islamic fundamentalists will be deprived of a potent psychological weapon that they have used throughout the Moslem world. And it will become less likely that Iran will either disintegrate or become another Lebanon, with untold consequences throughout the region and for the West's position there.

Beyond these direct benefits, winding down the Iran-Iraq conflict will permit the United States and other outside powers to begin concentrating on a newer threat to long-range regional stability that has been both spurred on and partially obscured by the war. This is the influx of high-performance weaponry, especially ballistic missiles — a development made more ominous by Iraq's massive use of chemical weapons, which, regrettably, the West tolerated.

China has shipped missiles to both Iran and Saudi Arabia. Iran and Iraq have fired Soviet-made missiles at one another's cities. Syria has acquired accurate Soviet rockets, and Israel has developed its own Jericho medium-range missile. These weapons threaten to revolutionize the problem of maintaining stability and preventing war in the Middle East. Because of their accuracy, speed and potential for destruction, they risk overwhelming the region's geography and politics and its capacity to prevent conflict through accident or miscalculation.

Once the Iran-Iraq war stops, the United States can try getting the world's sellers and the region's buyers to limit the excesses of this arms supply. The United States will also find at least a partial answer to one dilemma posed by its having interests at both ends of the region. Because of the war, the Arab states of the gulf pressed the United States to sell them arms for defense against Iran. If Washington accedes to these demands, it risks increasing the threat to Israel, which must then be provided with more weapons. This dilemma has been underscored by Kuwait's recent bidding for major arms purchases and by Saudi Arabia's $18 billion to $30 billion weapons contract with Britain.

Ending the war does not mean an end to U.S. strategic concerns in the region, however. It will continue to be volatile, and East-West competition for influence will proceed. A heavily armed Iraq will again become a major contestant for power within the Persian Gulf. Along with the gulf Arab states, it will begin turning its attention back to the Arab-Israeli conflict. The Arabs' perception of an Iranian threat will provide less of a distraction, and the next U.S. administration will be under increased pressure to be actively engaged in Arab-Israeli peacemaking.

Oil prices, meanwhile, are likely to become far less stable than they have been in recent months. In the short term, the Saudis and other gulf Arab producers will have less interest in increased production in order to lower the price and deprive Iran of revenues. In the medium term, both Iran and Iraq will flood the oil market in order to earn money to repair their devastated economies, thus driving the price down. And in the long term, if hostility ebbs between Iran and Iraq, they will see their mutual interest in working with other OPEC countries to try returning to the days when they set the world price, and it is likely to increase. Such gyrations are a cost of peace.

Yet there can be no doubt that the human, political and strategic benefits of a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war are strongly in the U.S. interest. Right now, nothing else in U.S. foreign policy rivals the need to pursue, relentlessly, last week's opening toward a truce and its promise of peace.

Court Appearance Set

KINSTON (AP) — John Edwards Wingate, 31, of Kinston is scheduled for a first court appearance today after being arrested on a murder charge, Lenoir County authorities said.

Wingate is charged in the death of Paul Patterson of Rt. 2, Grifton, whose body was found July 14 in a van parked in Greene County, authorities said.

Wingate is being held without bond in the Lenoir County Jail.

Postmaster Guilty

WILMINGTON (AP) — The embezzlement trial of former Kure Beach postmaster Faye Teague was resolved with a guilty verdict, but still unresolved is how she will pay the $30,000 fine and repay the $12,000 she was convicted of taking from the post office.

Her supporters are trying to help by starting a trust fund and having fund-raising events.

"We still stand behind Faye and support her," said Kure Beach resident Linda Nelson. "Not only will she need help paying back the money, but the attorney's fees are probably astronomical, too."

Sentenced in June, Mrs. Teague was ordered to pay the $30,000 within six months and to pay restitution to the Postal Service within 30 days.

In March, a jury found Mrs. Teague guilty of embezzlement and two counts of falsifying government documents. She worked in the Carolina Beach post office for 11 years before she took over the Kure Beach post office in 1981.

She was fired in the fall after a Postal Service audit showed a discrepancy of more than $12,000 between the post office's earnings and stamp inventory records.

Fire Was Accident

GREENSBORO (AP) — The fire that heavily damaged part of the federal courthouse here Thursday was probably an accident, fire officials said Friday.

"I think the arson part is less a possibility than the accidental," said Chief Tom C. Lemonds, supervisor of the Greensboro Fire Department's fire prevention unit.

Investigators earlier believed the fire may have been set, and some debris from the fire was sent to the FBI laboratory in Washington, D.C.

The fire erupted about 1:10 p.m. in the office of U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon.

Ex-Teacher Sentenced

GREENSBORO (AP) — A former Greensboro middle school teacher received a six-month sentence Friday after admitting he had sexual encounters with a 13-year-old student.

Donald Watson Maness, 41, formerly a physical education teacher at Kiser Middle School, pleaded guilty in Guilford Superior Court to six felony counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor.

Assistant District Attorney Gwenda Priest said she agreed to a plea bargain in the case because the victim's family agreed with the prearranged sentence and was eager to settle the case to spare their daughter further emotional trauma.

Youth Dies In Wreck

ROBBINSVILLE (AP) — A Graham County youth was killed Friday night in a motorcycle accident in the Wolf Creek community, authorities said Saturday.

Donald C. Stephen, 16, died in a Swain County hospital after suffering severe head trauma, said Edward Cable of the Graham County Emergency Medical Services.

The accident occurred near Fontana Lake about 15 miles northwest of Robbinsville, Cable said.

Man Drowns In Pond

CANDLER (AP) — A Candler man pulled from a private pond after spending 30 minutes underwater died Saturday afternoon.

Monty LaFain Davis, 18, was trying to swim across a pond, but only made it about halfway across, said Capt. Lee Warren of the Buncombe County Sheriff's Department.

"He came back up and called for help then disappeared," Warren said.

He was pulled from the icy, murky water about 30 minutes later, but efforts to revive the victim were unsuccessful.

Roads Fund Suggested

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina should make a separate budget for funding schools, just as it does for funding highways, three top educators said Saturday.

"We have in this state a general fund and a highway fund, or money for transportation dedicated to highways. You don't touch it," said former Gov. Bob Scott, president of the state community college system.

"I think the time has come in North Carolina where we ought to have a general fund, a transportation fund and an education fund," Scott told participants at a Summer Leadership Conference.

Jay Robinson, vice president of the University of North Carolina system and Craig Phillips, superintendent of the state Department of Public Instruction, agreed with Scott's remarks.

Phillips said such a feat could be accomplished if public schools, community colleges and universities could unite and set goals.

"Maybe a broader, more global Basic Education Program for the people of North Carolina could be spelled out," Phillips said, referring to the state's massive school reform plan that spells out standards and requirements.

Rex Tops Cocaine List

RALEIGH (AP) — Rex Hospital was buying more pharmaceutical cocaine than all the other hospitals in North Carolina combined in 1986 when federal drug agents began investigating the hospital's pharmacy, a federal agent said Friday.

"We saw tremendous purchases of cocaine at Rex," said Fred H. Gregory, resident agent in charge of the Greensboro office of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. "There's only one or two other hospitals in the country that use this much cocaine."

The hospital agreed last week to pay a $225,000 fine for faulty record keeping and for failing to tell federal drug investigators promptly that they knew cocaine was being stolen from the hospital pharmacy safe. It was the largest such fine in DEA history, said Gregory.

A hospital technician was later fired and eventually convicted on two counts of simple cocaine possession.

The drug enforcement agency began its probe of Rex's cocaine use after a routine review showed that the hospital ranked sixth among the nation's 600,000 authorized users in legal cocaine purchases.

At the time of the federal drug investigation, Rex was buying between four and six 1-ounce bottles monthly of pure cocaine powder, Gregory said. Most other hospitals buy between one and three bottles a year.

Marines Return

MOREHEAD CITY (AP) — About 400 Marines and sailors aboard the USS Trenton returned home Friday after duty in the Persian Gulf.

Col. W.M. Rakow, commanding officer of Marine Contingency Air-Ground Task Force 2-88, said his Marines performed "as expected" in combat against Iranian forces.

The Iranian Sassan oil platform was attacked by Marines after an exchange of warning shots.

"It was neutralized so it could no longer be used for military purposes or industrial production. It went exactly as expected," Rakow said.

The action against followed Iran's mine attack on the USS Samuel Roberts. The U.S. Navy is in the gulf to protect U.S.-flagged and neutral shipping from attacks by Iranian boats and aircraft.

The Trenton was on the way back to the United States when an Iranian airbus was shot down by the USS Vincennes, Rakow said.

"We were concerned. But everybody in the world knows the U.S. doesn't do things like that on purpose," Rakow said.

Scheme Is Popular

BOONE (AP) — Nearly a tenth of Watauga County's 35,000 residents may be participating in a money-making pyramid scheme, said District Attorney James Rusher.

"I wish it would go away, but people tell me they're having a good time," Rusher said. "It's a deceitful and illegal activity."

Rusher said his office began receiving inquiries about the pyramid scheme at the beginning of last week.

By week's end, Rusher said some of the calls to his office had become requests not to stop the pyramid activity until 13 days had passed — long enough for participants to get their money.

Rusher said the scheme, called the "Lucky 13" and "24-Hour Madness Dash" has been circulated extensively among state, municipal, county and school employees.

Rusher said he has no immediate plans to prosecute anyone for the misdemeanor because no one has formally complained.

TROOPER'S FUNERAL — A Highway Patrolman stands at attention as widow LaDonna Martin is escorted by patrolman Mike Lee from Tyndall Funeral Home in Mount Olive after services were held for her fallen husband, patrolman Michael Martin. Martin was killed in a chase near Reidsville on Friday. The motorcyclist who was being chased when Martin's car skidded into a truck is still at large. (AP Laserphoto).

State Joins The Battle To Save 'Lemon Law'

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina and 40 other states are fighting what they say are efforts by the auto industry to weaken state "lemon laws" that protect car buyers.

In 1987, North Carolina was one of many states to toughen its lemon law. A total of 46 states now have them, all enacted despite objections by the auto industry.

This year, auto makers are fighting back, taking their case to the federal government in order to get around the state laws, The Greensboro News & Record reported. State officials worry that if the auto industry succeeds, the states will begin to lose their ability to protect consumers.

"We object very vigorously to the federal government pre-empting the field in this area," state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said last week. "The federal government may or may not be active in that field."

Trade associations for the auto industry are targeting states that require arbitration, a program that allows consumers to settle differences with manufacturers outside the court system. The industry wants the Federal Trade Commission to impose a single set of rules on all such programs.

Consumer protectionists fear these rules will tilt the arbitration process in auto makers' favor. Many states already consider federal guidelines for arbitration too weak.

Consumer advocates have long been unhappy with the federal lemon law, the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act of 1975. It was passed at the peak of the consumer movement, led by activist Ralph Nader, but some officials say the act has proved to be vague and ineffective. In 1982, states began to enact their own lemon laws.

North Carolina's version protects owners of any new vehicle that weighs less than 10,000 pounds, except house trailers. To qualify as a lemon, a vehicle must undergo four repairs for the same serious defect or spend 20 days in the shop during a 12-month period. The protection lasts up to two years or 24,000 miles, depending on the warranty.

North Carolina legislators in 1987 clarified the definition of a lemon so consumers could turn their cars in as one without a lawyer's help.

Thornburg said he believes auto makers are simply looking for "a more friendly forum for their disputes."

Last month, 41 states, including North Carolina, asked the FTC to turn down the auto industry's petition. The FTC has not decided whether to consider the petition, a process that could drag on for years.

Ed Nolde, an assistant attorney general for Virginia, suggests the request may work against the auto industry.

State Ranks 48th As Recipient Of Federal Government Spending

GREENSBORO (AP) — Even with its military payroll, North Carolina ranks 48th among the states in the amount of money it receives from the federal government, according to a new study.

"The federal buck does not stop here," said John Rees, a Greensboro professor who is researching federal spending patterns for a coalition of Southern congressmen.

Despite military installations including Fort Bragg, Camp Lejeune and Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, North Carolina — and the South as a whole — is not getting its fair share of the "federal pie," Rees told The Greensboro News and Record.

Rees' study, to be released in September, examines the implications of federal procurement on the Southern economy and will suggest congressional initiatives to increase federal spending in the South.

The reason, according to Rees: Military salaries make a far smaller impact on a state's economy than military spending.

Rees, head of the geography department at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, spent three months researching federal spending patterns for the Sunbelt Institute, the research arm of a coalition of Southern congressmen called the Congressional Sunbelt Council.

The group's executive council includes Democratic Sens. Terry Sanford of North Carolina; Sam Nunn of Georgia; and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the party's vice presidential candidate.

Some congressmen might argue the South receives its share of military expenditures through military bases and payrolls, Rees said.

"But military bases don't promote economic growth anywhere like procurement does," he said.

The South receives $54 million in military payroll, as much as the MidwestNortheastWest region Rees looked at in his study, but the South received $45 million less in procurement. And while every payroll dollar generates $2 in the economy, every procurement dollar generates about $7, Rees said.

Investigators Believe Stall Could Have Caused Crash

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The pilot of a single-engine plane that crashed into a manufacturing plant, killing the two Winston-Salem couples aboard, was a meticulous man and an extremely particular pilot, friends say.

"He was never afraid to fly. He loved to fly," said Buddy Bobender, a close friend of pilot Roger Franklin Nance, 39 and his wife, Eobbi Jean Templeton Nance, 37.

Also killed were Lynn Powell, 40, and his wife, Sandra Powell, 38. They had been flying to Myrtle Beach, S.C., for a weekend trip.

Meanwhile, witnesses said a stalled engine may have caused the aircraft to nose-dive into a manufacturing plant, though federal investigators said it may be a week before the cause of the accident is determined.

"Right now, there are no hints, no clues," said Phillip Powell, an air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board. "We still have to perform a detailed engine inspection. We hope there will be enough information to tell us something."

On takeoff, the plane had just cleared the runway when it plunged through the roof of Jepson Burns Corp. about 9:30 p.m. and burst into flames.

Ivy League Suspect Dubbed 'Gentleman Bandit'

BLUFFTON, S.C. (AP) — The accused bank robber who has been dubbed the "gentleman bandit" by authorities was regarded by friends as intelligent and mannerly, and far from the criminal type.

At 6-foot-2, Drew Dobson had Ivy League looks and a knack for real estate.

Dobson and his wife, Marguerite, owned thoroughbred horses and a Mercedes-Benz, signs of prosperity that fit easily into this Lowcountry resort area.

But by June 17, as Dobson pulled away from his rented cedar-sided house, 15 FBI agents crouching behind the Rose Hill Plantation security gate had a different view. They converged on the Mercedes-Benz and, rifles pointed at Dobson's head.

Dobson, 36, later confessed to robbing banks in Charlotte, N.C., York County and three other cities since August, according to court records. Police estimate he got nearly $500,000.

Dobson is being held at a maximum-security unit in the Richland County Detention Center in Columbia. Bond has been denied.

Dobson has pleaded innocent to the three South Carolina bank robberies he has been charged with. His court-appointed attorney, Parks Small of Columbia, said in court papers seeking a psychiatric exam that Dobson had confessed to five armed bank robberies.

Indictments describing the holdups allege that Dobson robbed a Charlotte bank on March 2 and a Jacksonville, Fla., bank June 14 — three days before he was arrested.

Dobson had no prior criminal record, authorities said.

Friends told The Charlotte Observer that his marriage to Marguerite, his second wife, looked ideal. With an 11-year-old daughter and 3-year-old son, they appeared to be an affectionate family. The family expected to move into a 7,000-square-foot house they were buying on an Aiken horse farm, friends said.

In the November-December issue of Island Events, a Hilton Head magazine where Marguerite briefly was editor, she wrote about "my special family," starting with her children.

"And, last ... but never least, is my husband Drew," she wrote. "He fills in with the children and lightens the load for this working mom."

The Mercedes was his Christmas present to her, friends said.

But in the wake of the charges against Dobson, his friends on Hilton Head Island and in Bluffton are wondering what happened.

"We all said this couldn't be the same of Drew, not our Drew," said Martha Crapse, a Bluffton real estate agent who says she's known Dobson for 10 years. "He was just as nice as he could be, always greeting you with a smile and a 'hey, how ya doin'?"

Dobson told his lawyer "something snapped in his head" about 1½ years ago, court documents show. Small said Dobson told him his family has a history of mental problems, including an only sibling who committed suicide.

Dobson's father, John "Jack" Dobson, is a retired Army brigadier general and West Point offensive end, graduating in 1939. He and his wife, Eloise, live in the exclusive Spanish Wells development on Hilton Head Island, where houses range from $200,000 to more than $1 million.

After their son's arrest, the parents sequestered themselves. They declined an interview with The Charlotte Observer. All his mother would say was, "That boy has never taken a wrong step in his life."

Marguerite Dobson also declined to be interviewed, the newspaper said.

Dobson was born in 1952 in Munich when his father was stationed in Austria. Jack Dobson retired from the Army in 1967 and became superintendent of Culver Military Academy in Culver, Ind. Records indicate Drew Dobson was at the school for three years, graduating in 1970.

Former classmates said he was a commander of the Black Horse cavalry. His senior year he ran varsity cross country and got a gold A, given generally for exceptional grades.

"He was real smart, a good boy, a good athlete," classmate Mike Rosel of Frisco, N.C., said. "He was part of the cream of the crop."

Dobson enrolled at the University of South Carolina in the fall of 1970. By then, his parents had moved to Hilton Head. USC records show he stayed only a semester.

Friends say he sold insurance in Michigan, moving back to South Carolina about 12 years ago. He sold real estate in Beaufort and then Hilton Head. He gave friends contradicting stories about his work after he left his last real estate job in September.

To some, he said he bought motels, hotels or condominiums to fix up and sell. To others, he was in the import-export business. Business, he'd say, took him to New York or overseas, sometimes to the Orient.

At least part of the time, authorities believe, Dobson's business on the road was staking out banks.

"The robber did an exceptional job of casing a bank," said Ronald Dick, FBI supervisory special agent in Columbia. "He knew names, who arrived first in the morning and what vehicles they drove."

Five days before his arrest, Dobson brought 10 friends to dinner at The Crazy Crab restaurant on Hilton Head Island.

"He was smiling and cutting up," said David Reilley, the owner. "He was having a real good time."

The tab, hostess Kay Ware said, came to about $500. Dobson paid cash.

Three nights later, Dobson returned with his family. He gave Ms. Ware a $100 tip, saying she had always been so nice to him and his family.

Two days later, the FBI arrested him.

"I couldn't believe it when I saw his picture in the paper," Reilley said. "He was a really normal, nice guy. But the way he was throwing around money, if he did what they say he did, it was almost like he wanted to get caught."

Strategy Set For The Trial Of 2 Indians

RALEIGH (AP) — Two American Indians accused of taking up to 20 hostages at a newspaper office will argue at their upcoming trial that their actions were necessary to save their lives, a defense attorney says.

Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs face federal charges of taking hostages and manufacturing weapons in the 10-hour siege Feb. 1 at The Robesonian Lumberton. The ordeal ended peacefully after Gov. Jim Martin agreed to form a task force to investigate their charges of corruption and drug trafficking involving Robeson County officials.

"Both Timothy and Eddie did this for the people," attorney Robert Warren told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

"... It was a real courageous thing that they tried to do, and they tried to plan it in such a way that people's lives would be minimally endangered," Warren said.

The two defendants were freed on bail earlier this month after spending about five months in custody. The trial is scheduled to begin Aug. 1 in U.S. District Court in Fayetteville.

Dukakis Returns Home, Bush Woos Vote Of Women

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer
Michael Dukakis, back in Boston for the first time since winning the Democratic nomination last week, goes to work today in the Statehouse. Republican George Bush, meanwhile, got mixed reviews when he sought to shore up support among women.

The Massachusetts governor, returning Sunday night from a three-day campaign trip, was greeted warmly by about 150 people in soggy weather at Boston's Logan International Airport.

Dukakis and his running mate, Lloyd Bentsen, traveled to five states, including the key battlegrounds of California and Texas. They set off on their inaugural campaign trip last week, just after accepting their respective nominations at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

The Republicans, meanwhile, were looking ahead to their own convention, which opens three weeks from today in New Orleans.

Bush, the certain GOP nominee, was back in Washington today after spending five days on the road. His campaigning between now and the opening of the GOP gathering will be curtailed because he has spent nearly the legal limit for pre-convention campaigning.

But the White House said Sunday that President Reagan probably will campaign in the Midwest on Bush's behalf between now and the convention. That word came from White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater as Reagan was flying back from California on Air Force One.

Also aboard was Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who had been in California for a weekend fund-raiser, and his presence fueled new speculation about an imminent departure from the administration to run Bush's campaign.

Fitzwater said Baker had "a very brief chat" with Reagan and added: "He's still treasury secretary, put it that way."

When reporters sent Baker a note asking him to come back and talk to them about the matter, he sent back a dollar bill and suggested that reporters take a close look at the banknote bearing his signature.

"Please note the title under the signature," Baker wrote. That title, of course, is secretary of the treasury.

Later, asked by reporters to "share the news," he responded: "There's no news to share."

Baker's status isn't the only source of speculation surrounding the Bush campaign. The vice president traveled to Albuquerque, N.M., on Sunday with former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Hanford Dole, who has been mentioned as a potential running mate.

But campaign manager Lee Atwater said Bush won't reveal his choice of a running mate until next month in New Orleans.

"He's going to keep his own counsel on it, and he's going to let us all know at the convention," Atwater said Sunday in an interview on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation." He added that he thought an announcement then would be "very exciting and very dramatic."

On another front, Bush said in an interview published in Newsday on Sunday that he would consider the creation of an international military force that could launch air strikes against foreign drug factories.

"If you can target a factory that was putting out this poison ... a factory of death ... that's poisoning kids, where a country needed assistance to wipe it out, I'd be very open-minded about that (air strikes). We're talking about a war on drugs," he said in the interview.

"We have helicopters going in there right now, striking against crops," Bush said. "What's so different?"

Bush's former chief of staff, retired Adm. Daniel Murphy, raised the idea at a congressional hearing July 14. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., at the time called the suggestion "pap and nonsense."

Bush, in Albuquerque to speak to an organization of professional and business women, unveiled an ambitious $2.2 billion child-care plan that would be phased in over four years. The group's president, Beth Wray, welcomed the plan but tempered her praise by calling it "one of his first concrete gestures" toward women.

When Bush finished speaking, many in the audience broke into chants of "E-R-A" — a reference to the Equal Rights Amendment, which the vice president opposes. He also was presented with a red purse, which organization members said signified the gap between the earnings of women and men.

Dukakis, for his part, encountered anti-abortion protesters at a stop in St. Louis on Sunday, as he had a day earlier in Modesto, Calif. The governor supports a woman's right to an abortion.

In St. Louis, Dukakis and Bentsen were introduced by Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, a onetime rival for the Democratic nomination. Gephardt accompanied them to the church he had attended since childhood.

Later, the two made a stop in Erie, Pa., where Dukakis continued to stress the theme of economic opportunity and commitment to the family.

After the Pennsylvania stop, Bentsen returned to Washington. He was expected to campaign on his own later this week.

Questions About Baker's Resignation Face Reagan Upon White House Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan returned from a midsummer's vacation amid heightened expectations that Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III will resign soon to run George Bush's presidential campaign.

Neither Baker nor White House officials would confirm publicly that Baker will be leaving the Cabinet soon, although presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater did not flatly deny it.

Given the opportunity Sunday to say Baker would not leave the treasury post, Fitzwater said only: "He's still treasury secretary. Put it that way."

But an administration official, declining to be named publicly, said Baker's resignation likely will be submitted to Reagan in early August, possibly as soon as next Monday, with plans to hook up with Bush in mid-August.

A Baker move to the Bush campaign would not be shocking since there has been speculation for months that the longtime Bush confidant eventually would move from the Treasury Department to the campaign. Baker managed Bush's unsuccessful run for the GOP presidential nomination in 1980.

Baker accompanied Reagan and his wife, Nancy, on the flight from California to Washington on Sunday, although the treasury secretary was not observed boarding the plane with the Reagans at Point Mugu Naval Air Station.

Baker evidently had boarded before the contingent of reporters arrived to greet the Reagans, who had flown to the military base from their ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

The secretary also spurned a request by a pool of reporters on Air Force One to come chat with them. Instead, he sent back a folder that contained a dollar bill. Baker wrote, "Please note the title under the signature is secretary of the treasury."

Fitzwater said only that Reagan and Baker, who had been the president's chief of staff from 1981-85, merely had a "very brief chat."

An official who discussed the situation on grounds of anonymity said the secretary had spoken at a fund-raiser Saturday night for Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., and "essentially, he is hitting a ride."

But another official said Baker would not have needed to inform Reagan of his plans on the Air Force One trip, saying the secretary's decision to take over the vice president's campaign had been known for some time.

When Baker got off the plane at Andrews Air Force Base just outside Washington, a reporter asked the secretary, "Can you share the news with us?"

Baker replied, "There's no news to share."

Asked if he had spoken with Reagan about quitting, Baker said he had not.

Baker has been an unofficial adviser to the Bush campaign for some time, and had accompanied the vice president to Wyoming last week for a fishing trip.

If Baker were to leave, it would be the second major Cabinet change in recent weeks. Attorney General Edwin Meese III, a longtime Reagan friend, has resigned effective late this month or early next month. Reagan nominated former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh as Meese's replacement.

While Reagan vacationed last week at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., senior aides discussed the administration's agenda for the remainder of the president's term.

This week Reagan will assess the prospects for new U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan rebels — a subject that is on the agenda for a Tuesday morning meeting with Republican congressional leaders.

He also plays host Wednesday to Hungarian Premier Karoly Grosz in the first such visit by a high-ranking Hungarian official since the country came under communist rule 40 years ago.

Since becoming premier in June 1987, Grosz has sought improved economic and political ties with the

Reagans arrive at White House

West. Grosz began an 11-day U.S. tour last week.

Reagan will receive an updated report on the drought from Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, who took a 10-state tour last week. The administration's midyear budget review also is due this week.

Officials Say U.S. Should Get Credit For Iran-Iraq Cease Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration deserves much of the credit for Iran's acceptance of a cease-fire in its long war with Iraq, two administration officials say.

"This is a time, if not for bragging, at least it's been a time for all of us to be proud that our policy has been a success," John Whitehead, deputy secretary of state, said Sunday.

Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci agreed and said a cease-fire means the year-old policy of escorting reflagged Kuwaiti tankers through the Persian Gulf will end "as soon as we judge it safe (and) prudent to do so."

But Carlucci, appearing on the NBC-TV program, "Meet the Press," refused to set a date for the reduction of Navy ships in the waterway. There are 27 U.S. warships there, compared with the five or six that patrolled the gulf before the convoys began.

Carlucci also said improved U.S.-Iranian relations could lead to the release of the nine Americans held hostage in Lebanon by Iranian-backed groups.

Iran has accepted United Nations resolution 598, which calls for a cease-fire in the eight-year war while the two sides try to negotiate a lasting peace. Even as representatives of both countries prepare to meet with U.N. officials, Iraq has launched a new series of attacks against Iran.

Whitehead, appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," said, "Certainly Iran's decision is not solely attributable to U.S. policy, but our firmness of our military presence in the gulf, our indication that we planned to stay there as long as it was necessary, and at the same time our diplomatic track, principally at the United Nations, has finally achieved success."

Carlucci, asked about the impact of administration policy on Iran, said, "I think it's been quite significant. Don't forget that (Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini has consistently said that he was going to drive us from the gulf."

"The fact that we have been resolute, that we have stood by our friends, that we have stood by the principles of freedom of navigation and that he has not been able to drive us from the gulf has had a significant impact on Iranian thinking," Carlucci said.

One result of a cease-fire will be an end to the Navy's protection of tankers in the gulf, Carlucci said, although he declined to be specific about when that would occur. The Navy has run 49 convoys.

FDA Allows Import Of AIDS Drugs Not Available In U.S.

By VIVIAN VEGA
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A federal agency's decision to allow AIDS patients to import treatment drugs that have not been approved for sale in this country gives new hope to victims of the deadly disease, a homosexual rights activist said.

Dr. Frank E. Young, commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, announced the change Saturday during an address at a conference here on homosexual health issues.

Young said the government officially began allowing importation of some unapproved treatments of acquired immune deficiency syndrome Wednesday.

"(The decision) allows AIDS patients to make some choices about their own treatment," said Ellen Ratner, president of the National Lesbian and Gay Health Foundation, which sponsored the conference. "If you're dying, you don't have a lot of choices."

A Harvard School of Public Health attorney who researches worldwide AIDS policies agreed.

"From the AIDS person's point of view, they have nothing to lose and what they need is just some little optimism in their life," the attorney, Larry Gostin, said Sunday. "If there's a risk, I think that they should be able to make the decision about whether to assume that risk."

He called the program "a signal advance in recognizing the gay and IV-drug constituencies that have been calling for this." Intravenous drug users, along with homosexual males, are the primary sufferers from AIDS.

"It's almost a shock because it's so contrary to the character and the tradition of the FDA," Gostin said.

Psychologist Winfield Scott, associate dean for education at George Washington University Medical Center, said the change responds to the frustration felt by homosexuals "that (AIDS) answers aren't coming more quickly."

"I am a gay person myself. (But) I think that the frustration focuses on the bureaucracy as though the ultimate obstacles were in the bureaucracy," Scott said. "The real problem is that nature is very slow and reluctant to yield up her secrets."

Scott said he believes AIDS patients' desire for experimental drugs can be balanced with scientists' reluctance to use the drugs if the patients "give up the right to sue if things go badly."

Young and other FDA officials said that such unapproved drugs as dextran sulfate and ribavirin have been allowed into the country on an informal basis.

The new policy sets a formal procedure for those who certify that the drug is for their own use. Small amounts will be allowed, generally enough for three months of treatment, as an assurance that the drug is not intended for sale.

Ribavirin is an anti-viral drug that can be purchased in Japan and Mexico.

Husband's Most Valuable Gift Didn't Come Wrapped

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the mother whose husband neglected to give her a Mother's Day gift, stating: "You're not my mother."

I, too, went through that for many years, and felt hurt until I read a letter in your column that said: "My husband never remembers anniversaries or special days. He seldom brings home gifts, but he's a hard worker, doesn't run around, he's there when I need him, he's a good father, takes us places, spends his days off with his family, and who could ask for anything more? His giving of himself far outweighs any gift he could buy me."

I have never complained — nor have I ever forgotten that letter. — J.B., INDEPENDENCE, MO.

P.S. And an extra bonus was that eventually he chose to remember special days because he wanted to.

DEAR J.B.: If a letter in my column can change an attitude, comfort the hurting, solve a problem, open a closed mind or provide a chuckle, hallelujah — my day is made! Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: Our neighbor's child is only 14 years old. He's 5 foot 11 and weighs about 250 pounds. His mother and I were talking and feel that he needs help. I told her I would write and ask you if there is a group to help young people who are compulsive eaters. He is such a sweet and good young man, but people make fun of him and he gets very hurt.

Although his folks have tried everything, he often eats until his stomach hurts! How can we help? I used to go to AA meetings with a friend, and if there were something like that for eaters, maybe he would go. — CONCERNED NEIGHBOR IN LOS ANGELES

Dear Abby

DEAR CONCERNED NEIGHBOR: There is an organization like AA for compulsive eaters of all ages. It's Overeaters Anonymous. It is listed in the telephone directory, and there are chapters in almost every major city. I have attended some of the meetings, and a more compassionate group of people you will rarely encounter.

There is no shaming — no weighing, no embarrassment. Just a loving fellowship of people with a common problem — being overweight and wanting to do something about it. Contact them and put the boy in touch. There's no charge. Please let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from "Aching Heart," the high school girl who was in love with her teacher at school.

I'm now 29 and married to a great guy, but when I was a senior in high school, I, too, was "madly in love" with one of my teachers. I tried everything to get him to notice me, but he wouldn't have anything to do with me.

Exactly two days after graduation, he called me and asked me to go out with him. I had no interest whatsoever in seeing him. We never went out. I went on to receive a degree from the University of Minnesota and dated lots of great guys — and even a few jerks.

It's amazing how I could have been so crazy about someone when he was unattainable — but as soon as he was within my reach, I lost all interest. I think it has a lot to do with "forbidden fruit," don't you? — BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Possibly. But while forbidden fruit is said to taste sweeter, it usually spoils faster.

DEAR READERS: Talk about vision concerning television, read on: "I believe television is going to be the test of the modern world, and that in this new opportunity to see beyond the range of our vision, we shall discover either a new and unbearable disturbance of the general peace, or a saving radiance in the sky. We shall stand or fall by television — of that I am quite sure." — E.B. WHITE (Harper's magazine, October 1938)

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Italian Designers Show Ornate

By DANIELA PETROFF
AP Fashion Writer

ROME (AP) — Italian high fashion designers presented the most ornate collections in many a season for this fall and winter, perhaps in an effort to give a lift to their own sagging image.

During the five-day Roman fashion week, the couture runway brimmed with gold, silver, bronze and precious stones. Sequined embroidery, no longer flatly stitched, stood out in three-dimensional flora and fauna, while precious pelts of mink, sable and fox rimmed cuffs, collars and hemlines.

The great success achieved by French designer Christian Lacroix, coupled with a power struggle between Milan and Rome for control of the Italian fashion scene, has weakened the image of the made-in-Italy couture label, which in the 1960s presented a real threat to the supremacy of French couture.

Today, only a handful of buyers and press representatives come to Rome for the twice-a-year showings, mainly to check in at Valentino and Gianfranco Ferré, the popular Milanese ready-to-wear designer that began its high fashion collections two years ago.

Rome tries to put its best foot forward by using elegant hotels and historic outdoor settings for its shows.

They contrast sharply with Milan trade fairsgrounds, where the Italian ready-to-wear shows are held, and Parisian tents, where French collections are displayed.

Although individual houses such as Lancetti, Mila Schoen, Galitzine and Andre Laug have a long list of faithful clients, the Valentino couture label is the only one that can still give the French a run for their money.

The look for the fall-winter Italian style is vaguely Russian, with sable playing heavily for day and night on hats, coats, jackets, sweaters and evening gowns. Redingote coat styles abound, as well as wide lapels on jackets and high collars on dresses and blouses alike.

Shades tend toward fall greens, purples and browns. Flannel gray makes a big comeback, and the newest shade of the season is ruby red, championed by Gianfranco Ferré in his much applauded collection.

In a situation emblematic of their unsettled state, the designers could not agree on one hemline, with some diving way below the knee, while others still offered short skirts. However, the tiny miniskirt is out, and the preferred length is right on the knee.

Although not prominent, pants dot the collections, with Ferré offering the newest idea: gray flannel man-tailed trousers by night worn with a sumptuous sequined top.

Heels are very high, makeup is pronounced with bright red lips, and hairstyles are neat, often pinned back at the neck.

For evening wear, the designers let themselves go, often tailoring their gowns from shimmering gold, silver or bronze fabrics and decorating an otherwise simple sheath with heavy jeweled sequins or entire life-sized floral arrangements of fabric and sequins.

Hospitals To Close Their ERs

"The whole system is starting to come unglued at the seams and fall apart," said Dr. Larry Bedard, of Sausalito, former president of the California chapter of the American College of Emergency Physicians.

"It's like a big pot boiling over," said Robert Heilig, an official with the California Association of Hospitals and Health Systems. "We felt the heat first in trauma care, and now it's happening in emergency services."

Seven of the 23 trauma centers in Los Angeles have closed during the last three years. Others are threatening to drop out in San Diego and San Jose, as well as in smaller communities.

Trauma centers are, in a sense, the crown jewel of an emergency services network. Usually located within or next to a hospital emergency room, these units are specially

Autopsy Rate Down

RALEIGH (AP) — The number of autopsies being performed at North Carolina's community hospitals has dropped, reflecting a national decline that has state and national medical leaders concerned about the quality of health care.

An autopsy, in which a doctor examines and dissects a body to determine the cause of death, also may be used to correct mistaken diagnoses and reveal hereditary problems of concern to relatives, medical officials say.

"If a doctor discharges you (to a morgue), no one knows what happened except for what he says," said Dr. Frederic Dalldorf, professor of pathology and medical director of autopsy services at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"There are very few ways of checking up."

Autopsies, which once were performed on up to 50 percent of the people who died at hospitals, are done in just about 2 percent of deaths at the state's community hospitals, Dalldorf said.

The rate is higher at North Carolina's teaching hospitals, where autopsies are performed in 30 percent to 40 percent of cases, Dalldorf said. Two decades ago, the rate at North Carolina Memorial Hospital, a teaching hospital, was about 80 percent to 90 percent, he said.

staffed to treat victims of violent accidents, shootings and stabbings who typically need immediate and specialized medical care.

But the trauma patient pool makes up only a small fraction of the entire emergency patient load.

Many more people — heart attack victims, women in labor, patients in respiratory arrest or suffering from seizures, comas, overdoses and lacerations, as well as minor illnesses — typically seek treatment in hospital emergency rooms.

Generally, the medical care there has improved enormously over the last decade, due to technological advances and better training of emergency physicians.

"Fifteen years ago, emergency rooms were sleepy little places," Groth said. "The doctor on duty might just be a moonlighting dermatologist. ... They (emergency room doctors) were considered to be misfits who weren't good enough or smart enough to open up a practice. But that has changed 180 degrees."

Equipped to handle not only the sickest patients arriving by ambulance, the emergency room has been increasingly flooded by so-called "walk-in traffic" — patients with minor illnesses and injuries who regard the emergency room as their primary source of medical care. Their ranks have been swelled by record numbers of people — 20 percent of the population in California under age 65 — who lack health insurance or other means of paying private doctors.

Often for financial reasons, patients have postponed treatment, making many of them sicker than ever when they finally arrive at the emergency room.

"The emergency room has become the only guaranteed access point to the health care system in America," said Dr. Michael Krentz, a Dallas physician who is president of the American College of Emergency Physicians. Most private physicians, he pointed out, "expect payment up front," and have "the right to refuse to take somebody as a patient for whatever reason." However, in the emergency room, all patients must be treated and stabilized without regard to their financial status.

At the same time, no comprehensive system has been established in many states to help hospitals and doctors defray the expense of treating patients who cannot pay their bills.

"The result of this schizophrenic thought process is that health care providers, both hospitals and physicians, are left holding the bag," Groth said. "Society has dictated what will be provided, but is unwilling to underwrite its own wishes."

region's major security threat during the past decade.

The parties all sat quietly in the carpeted, double-chandeliered room as waves of journalists and photographers were rushed in for a glimpse. Thach appeared bemused, and the affable Alatas chatted and tried to ease some of the stiffness of the first encounter.

No definite schedule has been fixed for the duration of the talks.

For years, Thach was a tough hardliner who knew only the language of defiance. Over the past 1 1/2 years, however, he has vigorously pushed for dialogue as Vietnam's pragmatic new leadership focuses on economic development, which it admits requires an end to the international isolation Cambodia has caused Hanoi.

For years, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations has encouraged the guerrillas to force Vietnam out of Cambodia.

The association became more anxious for talks as Vietnam began withdrawing large numbers of troops.

USA Back In Hunt For Davis Cup Title

Davis Cup

Cup. Jaite defeated McEnroe, but the American team still emerged victorious. (AP Laserphoto)

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — After a year on the outside looking in, the United States is back in the hunt for the Davis Cup.

The Americans wrapped up their return to the World Group, the 16 nations that actually compete for the Cup, when the doubles team of Ken Flach and Robert Seguso won in straight sets Saturday for an insurmountable 3-0 lead over Argentina in the American Zone Group I final.

The teams split two meaningless singles matches Sunday.

"Usually there's a lot of pressure on us," said Seguso. "This time, we led all the way and we felt no pressure."

"I think tennis is looking up in America," added Flach.

Flach and Seguso defeated Christian Miniussi and Javier Frana 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 after John McEnroe and Andre Agassi won their singles matches Friday.

Agassi won his second singles match Sunday, edging Guillermo Perez Roldan 2-6, 6-2, 8-6 while Martin Jaite downed McEnroe 6-0, 6-8, 6-3.

The five-set matches were reduced to best-of-three because the outcome of the tournament already was decided.

In Sunday's first match, the 18-year-old Perez Roldan, ranked 14th in the world, came out determined to prevent a U.S. sweep. Backed by a cheering, chanting crowd of 6,000 at the Buenos Aires Lawn Tennis Club, he won 12 of the first 15 points to take a 3-0 lead.

Agassi, also 18, rallied in the second set. Trailing Perez Roldan 40-0 in the seventh game and clinging to a 4-2 lead, Agassi reeled off five straight points to close out the game.

He then won four of the next five points to close out the set.

In the third set, Agassi staved off four match points in the 10th game to tie the score at five games apiece. He lost the 11th game, but won the last three.

Few in the capacity crowd left their seats for the next match, despite a chill winter breeze and temperatures in the 40s.

McEnroe, 29, was routed in the first set, but staved off two match points in the ninth game of the second set before rallying to win.

In the deciding set, McEnroe fended off five match points before losing to the 23-year-old Jaite, the world's 22nd-ranked player.

Argentina will be joined in Group 1 by neighboring Uruguay, which beat Venezuela in the American Zone Group 2 finals.

In Montevideo, Marcelo Filippini defeated Nicolas Pereira 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 to give Uruguay an unbeatable 3-1 lead.

Meanwhile, West Germany's opponent in the 1988 final will be decided today.

France kept its title hopes alive Sunday with a come-from-behind doubles victory over Sweden, cutting the defending champion's lead in the best-of-five semifinal to 2-1.

The outcome of the rain-delayed series will be decided by two singles matches — Sweden's Mats Wilander vs. France's Henri Leconte and Stefan Edberg vs. Yannick Noah.

Sweden, playing at home in Bastad, hoped to wrap up the series Sunday. But the French team of Guy Forget and Henri Leconte rallied for a 4-6, 9-7, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Anders Jarryd and Wilander.

"We had nothing to lose," said Leconte, runner-up at the 1988 French Open. "We were really confident after winning the second set. I think we played very well."

West Germany completed a 5-0 semifinal sweep over visiting Yugoslavia with two singles victories Sunday — Boris Becker's 7-5, 6-4 win over Goran Prpic and Eric Jelen's 6-4, 6-2 win over Slobodan Zivojinovic. The West Germans clinched the series Saturday by winning the doubles.

If Sweden beats France, it will set up a rematch of the 1985 Davis Cup final in which Sweden downed West Germany 3-2 in Munich.

West Germany's coach, Nikki Pilic, said the team is much stronger than it was in 1985.

"Now we have not only Boris Becker, but three other players," Pilic said. "It's a very strong team that has a great future."

In disposing of Brazil, Denmark and Yugoslavia, the West Germans dropped only three sets, two of them in the doubles against Yugoslavia.

Last year, West Germany survived a dramatic relegation match against the United States to stay in the World Group.

"We had a lucky draw this year, but we also played well," Pilic said. "We have a good chance in the final, whether we play against Sweden or France."

If France beats Sweden, the Dec. 16-18 final will be held in West Germany. If Sweden wins, it will have the right to stage the championship series.

However, the head of the West German Tennis Federation said that if the Swedes advance to the final, he will offer them a financial incentive to play in West Germany.

Brooks Wins GHO In Sudden-Death

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — It wasn't only the first time. Mark Brooks said it was also about time he won a professional golf tournament.

"I was thinking all week long that it's my time to win," the 27-year-old Texan said Sunday after winning the $700,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff.

"It's been a long time coming," he said.

Brooks, a slightly-built blonde from Ft. Worth, had been back-and-forth between qualifying school and the PGA Tour four times since 1984.

Although a two-time all-American at the University of Texas, Brooks had never finished better than a tie for eighth in the 1986 Hardee's Golf Classic — before Sunday.

"It will probably take a few days to set in," he said. "There's a lot of quirks that go with it like knowing what you're going to do next year and the next year."

Brooks knocked a 7-iron shot within 10 feet of the flagstick on the second hole of sudden death and made the birdie to beat Dave Barr.

Joey Sindelar, who had also finished regulation at 15-under 269, was the first player eliminated when he hit into the water and double-bogeyed the first playoff hole, No. 16.

Barr, using a sand wedge upside down from a left-handed stance, made a miraculous chip from the edge of a water hazard to get close to the pin after his second shot fell short on the par-4, 399-yard 17th hole.

But the Canadian's shot went for naught when Brooks, who shot a 69 in regulation play, made his putt to earn the $126,000 winner's check.

"You hate to lose a playoff, but it was a birdie so Mark earned it," Barr said. "I was never given a chance to putt."

Brooks became the fourth straight first-time winner on the PGA Tour — following Jim Benape, Tom Sieckmann and Blaine McCallister — and sixth this year.

"There are a lot of great players in the country. There's a lot of great players who aren't on the Tour," Brooks said, trying to explain the string of first-time winners.

Barr, 36, didn't miss a green on the way to shooting a 63, the best round of the tournament and one stroke short of the course-record 62, to earn his way into the playoff.

Makes Birdie

Neumann Wins In U.S. Women's Open

BALTIMORE (AP) — Being an LPGA rookie is obviously no impediment to winning the U.S. Women's Open.

Liselotte Neumann of Sweden, a five-time winner in Europe who joined the LPGA this year, won the U.S. Women's Open championship Sunday by three shots with an Open record 72-hole total of 277.

The 22-year-old shook off a four-putt double-bogey on the seventh hole to better the Open record total of 279 set by Pat Bradley in 1981 and become the second Tour rookie in as many years to win the championship.

Neumann played the final nine holes in 4 under par and finished with a final-round 69 to win the $70,000 first prize.

"That was my best round of golf ever, especially the back nine," Neumann said.

"I had some trouble early, especially on seven, four-putting the same time Patty (Sheehan) made a birdie. Maybe that got me going."

Neumann's double bogey dropped her into a tie for the lead with Sheehan and Colleen Walker. Walker even took a brief one-shot lead before Neumann birdied three straight holes, beginning on No. 10.

Sheehan wound up second, three shots back at 280. Walker tied for third with Dottie Pepper-Mochrie at 283.

The Swedish rookie had five birdies and a par over the final nine holes to join Laura Davies of Great Britain, who won the Open last year, her first on the LPGA Tour, by capturing a three-way playoff with Ayako Okamoto of Japan and JoAnne Carner.

"When I saw Laura win, it was a great feeling," said Neumann, who played with Davies in Europe. "I was out there watching her, rooting for her. This year she was out there rooting for me."

It was Davies' Open victory that convinced Neumann to try the LPGA Tour. "I had beaten her before," Neumann said earlier in the week. "If she could win, I knew I could, too."

It didn't look like Neumann would be able to after she squandered a three-shot lead on the seventh green. While she was taking a double bogey, Sheehan made birdie to put them both at 3-under.

Hugging The Trophy

Elliott Victory Tightens Points Race

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Two straight victories by Bill Elliott have turned the Winston Cup points race into a virtual dead heat.

Elliott chopped Rusty Wallace's lead to three points Sunday by winning the $462,000 NASCAR Summer 500 at Pocono International Raceway, just five weeks after finishing 10th in the Miller 500 on June 19. Since his last visit to Pocono, Elliott had finished second in the Miller 400 at Brookly, Mich., and driven his Ford to victory July 2 in the Firecracker 400 at Daytona Beach, Fla.

"We felt we had a good car here last race but things never matured to come our way," said Elliott, who recorded his fourth victory of the season and first at Pocono since 1985. "The thing is, the car handled so well all day long. It wasn't that super great on horsepower but the engine was just there at the end."

The Dawsonville, Ga., driver averaged 122.866 mph, crossing the finish line a comfortable 8.2 seconds ahead of Ken Schrader's Chevrolet.

Elliott, who won $53,200, took the lead for good on lap 186 after leading much of the last half of the 200-lap race on Pocono's 2.5-mile tri-oval. Starting in the second position, Elliott took the lead on the third lap and set a track record for the first 10 laps at 153.061 mph, breaking his own year-old mark of 152.284. He led six times for 122 laps.

Davey Allison finished third, followed by Geoff Bodine and Darrell Waltrip.

The victory gave Elliott 185 Winston Cup points for a season total of 2,360 — just three behind Wallace, who lost 14 laps with early transmission trouble, made up three of them and finished 24th.

Wallace, who had led Earnhardt by 87 points and Elliott by 97 entering the race, moved to 2,363 Sunday through 16 of 29 races. Earnhardt's 11th-place showing was good for 130 points and 2,315, leaving him only 48 behind.

"That's getting interesting, isn't it?" Elliott said.

Elliott joked that his emerging beard — he had not shaved since getting a mild burn on his face in a non-Winston Cup event last week — may have been a good luck charm Sunday.

"I'll have to keep it," the red-haired driver joked. Schrader held the lead four times, the last on laps 179 and 180, in his best-ever Winston Cup showing. His previous best was a fifth-place in the Winston 500 May 1 at Talladega, Ala.

"We weren't quite as good as we needed to be all day," said Schrader. "We just wound up with a good finish."

Allison, of Hueytown, Ala., looked ahead to next Sunday's Talladega 500. "I'm going home to the old home track with old Battlestar (his car) and will try to win there. Elliott was just strong all day long," said Allison, whose father, Bobby, was seriously injured in an accident in the June 19 race here and is recuperating in a nearby hospital.

Pole-sitter Morgan Shepherd finished sixth, losing the lead on the third lap and taking it back for one lap on 15. Subbing for Neil Bonnett, who underwent abdominal surgery July 5, Shepherd held the lead again from 119 through 127, then never regained it.

Richard Petty, the 51-year-old veteran who has 200 Winston Cup wins, spent much of the day among the leaders, but engine trouble stopped his bid on lap 161.

"I wonder what it takes for me to win a race," said Petty, who last won in 1984. "No good luck on our side right now. All we need to do now is get a break, but we got a bad break here."

The race featured an unusual event: a red flag. Officials stopped the race for 16 minutes, 27 seconds, after a three-car accident involving Lake Speed, Derrike Cope and Earnhardt. Nobody was hurt, but a retaining wall had to be repaired and Speed and Cope were put out of the race.

It was only the third time a NASCAR race had been stopped at Pocono — the others coming in 1974 and 1986 because of rain.

Also unusual was the absence of Goodyear tires from a NASCAR race.

Spot checks of Goodyear tires by NASCAR officials Friday found some to be wider than allowed by NASCAR rules, so Goodyear packed up and went home, leaving little more than a blimp for the race while competitor Hoosier had the track to itself.

More Bad Blood As Giants Top St. Louis

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
The San Francisco Giants and St. Louis aren't fighting for the National League pennant this year. Still, that doesn't mean they can't fight each other. The Cardinals and Giants, who have a history of bad blood between them, engaged in two bench-clearing altercations in the eighth inning Sunday. Neither side held a clear advantage in the extra-curricular activity; San Francisco won the game 5-0 on Rick Reuschel's 25th career shutout.

Two pitches later, Cardinals reliever Scott Terry almost hit Mike Aldrete in the head with a pitch. Terry was tossed and players from both dugouts again spilled onto the field.

Two seasons ago, Managers Whitey Herzog of St. Louis and Roger Craig of the Giants nearly got into a fistfight during a bench-clearing brawl. Last October, the teams traded insults during a tense playoff series the Cardinals won in seven games.

This year, St. Louis is frustrated and far behind in the NL East, 15 games in back of New York. The Giants are doing better in the West, trailing Los Angeles by seven games.

Clark hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning for a 5-0 lead. In the eighth, he singled and then slid hard into Oquendo on Candy Maldonado's forceout.

Oquendo and shortstop Ozzie Smith stood over Clark after the slide. Oquendo then jabbed Clark in the helmet, and Clark jumped up and began swinging back.

Smith circled in back of Clark and kept punching from behind. Maldonado eventually delivered a flying, overhand right that knocked down Smith as the dugouts emptied.

"It was a cheap shot," Clark said of Smith's attack. "He had three good shots to hit me in the back of the head, and he missed."

Smith, who had a split lip, and Oquendo each refused to discuss the incident.

Order was restored, but only for a moment. Terry came up-and-in on Aldrete, triggering another interruption, and the umpires managed to prevent the teams from getting at each other.

The remainder of the game was uneventful, partly because of Reuschel. He scattered seven hits and improved to 13-5. It was his first shutout since Sept. 17 and his first complete game this year in 21 starts.

Clark's 22nd homer gave him 74 RBI, tied for the league lead with Houston's Glenn Davis. Maldonado added a triple and single off Jose DeLeon, 6-8.

Dodgers 2, Pirates 1
Shawn Hillegas held Pittsburgh to one run in six innings as Los Angeles won for the third straight time at Three Rivers Stadium.

Hillegas, 3-2, gave up five hits. Jay Howell got four outs for his 12th save. The NL West-leading Dodgers have a team ERA of 3.08, second-best in the majors to the Mets' 3.06.

The Pirates were 0-for-14 with runners on base and hitless in nine at-bats with men in scoring position.

Steve Sax, batting .383 with eight RBI against the Pirates this season, had three hits and drove in both runs. His run-scoring single in the seventh off Jeff Robinson broke a 1-1 tie and came after starter Brian Fisher, 6-7, issued a pair of two-out walks.

Braves 4, Mets 2
Atlanta's German Jimenez, making his final start on a 30-day trial period from the Mexican League, won his first major-league game with a victory in New York.

Jimenez, 26, had lost his first three starts. The Braves must decide today whether to return the left-hander to the Jalisco Charros, send him to the minors or keep him, and Atlanta manager Russ Nixon said Jimenez would stay in the starting rotation.

Jimenez gave up one run on four hits in five innings. Paul Assenmacher got his third save.

Sid Fernandez, 5-8, yielded three runs in eight innings and struck out 10.

Dale Murphy hit a solo homer, his 18th, and Jim Morrison hit a two-run double.

Phillies 6, Astros 4
Mike Schmidt hit his 540th career home run, a disputed three-run drive in the seventh inning, and Philadelphia stopped Houston's season-high winning streak at six.

Schmidt's 10th homer landed just inside the left-field line and put the Phillies ahead 6-0. Astros manager Hal Lanier argued that the ball was foul.

Schmidt has homered in two straight games and has four home runs since the All-Star break.

Kevin Gross, 10-6, got the victory and Steve Bedrosian earned his 19th save.

Mike Scott, 9-3, had his three-game winning streak ended. Bill Doran's homer gave the host Astros home runs in 12 straight games.

Padres 2, Cubs 1
John Kruk, batting in the leadoff spot for the first time since 1986, homered on the first pitch of the game and San Diego went on to win at Wrigley Field.

Kruk home run off Rick Sutcliffe was his seventh of the season and first since June 8. Roberto Alomar hit an RBI single in the second inning for a 2-1 lead.

Jimmy Jones, 7-8, gave up two hits in the first inning but only two more in pitching eight innings. Mark Davis finished with one-hit relief for his 17th save.

San Diego's Tony Gwynn went 0-for-4 and ended his 18-game hitting streak, the third-longest in the NL this season.

Expos 5, Reds 3
Hubie Brooks, Tim Wallach and Nelson Santovenia homered as Montreal rallied past host Cincinnati.

Brooks hit a two-run homer and pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson had an RBI single in the seventh inning, putting the Expos ahead 4-3.

Pascual Perez, 7-4, allowed three hits in six innings. He gave up three runs, two of them unearned. Tim Burke, the fourth Montreal pitcher, got his ninth save.

Seaver's Jersey Retired Sunday By Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver finally got his perfect ending at Shea Stadium.

The Mets retired Seaver's number 41 Sunday in pregame ceremonies filled with new memories and old friends.

"At no time in the future will any New York Met ballplayer wear number 41," New York general manager Frank Cashen said in making it official.

Seaver's 41 was then unveiled on the left-field fence, next to Gil Hodges' 14 and Casey Stengel's 37.

"This is absolutely a gorgeous day," Seaver told the crowd of 46,057. "I feel twice blessed. For a beautiful family and friends and to be able to display a talent here at Shea Stadium for 10 years."

Seaver was joined on the field by his wife, Nancy, and their two daughters. The Mets gave the Seavers a car, jewelry and a ski vacation in Europe.

Former teammates Jerry Grote, Bud Harrelson and Jerry Koosman also were part of the ceremonies and a letter of congratulations was sent by President Reagan.

After making a brief speech, Seaver said: "To those on the field and in the stands and at home watching on television, I'd like to say thank you. If you'll allow me to say it in my own special way. And if you know me, and you know how much I love pitching, this is the special way."

Seaver, dressed in a sports jacket and tie, then jogged out to the mound from the home plate area and took his final bows.

For 10 years with the Mets, the mound at Shea was his home, his kingdom. And, on one summer night in July, 1969, Seaver almost found perfection.

"If I had to pick one game where everything came together as perfectly as I could have wanted, it was the near-perfect game against the Cubs that Jimmy Qualls broke up with one out in the ninth inning," Seaver said. "I had every hitter doing what I wanted."

Seaver now has a special status in New York that only a chosen few have reached.

"This is special, coming in a town where some of the game's greats have had their numbers retired — the Mantle's, DiMaggio's, Ruth's and Gehrig's," Seaver said prior to the ceremonies.

"I don't feel like a legend, not yet anyway," he said. "That may not be my call, I think that may be a relationship that the fans and the press have."

Hodges, who died of a heart attack in April, 1972, was Seaver's manager in 1969 when the right-hander went 25-7 and the Mets won the World Series.

"If there is anything about retiring a number that strikes me, it's that it's going to go up next to number 14," Seaver said. "Gil was extremely important in my professional career."

Correction

The player making the tag in Sunday's picture of the Area I Little League Championship was identified incorrectly.

The North State player making the tag was shortstop Nickie Phillips.

Gil may not be here with us but he is certainly going to be here in spirit, in what he meant to a lot of the people who are here today."

Seaver ended his career with a record of 311-205, a 2.86 earned-run average, 3,640 strikeouts and 61 shutouts. He won three National League Cy Young Awards with the

Hornets, Rambis Talking

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Negotiations between Kurt Rambis and the Charlotte Hornets are expected to be completed in the next two days, sources have told The Charlotte Observer.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the only remaining hurdle is salary for the 30-year-old player, who has been with the Los Angeles Lakers for the past seven seasons. The two sides have agreed on a four-year deal, all of which the Hornets have offered to guarantee.

One source said the difference in dollars between the two sides is not large, but the same source said that

Mets and is the club's all-time leader in games, complete games, innings pitched and strikeouts.

After a contract dispute with then-club chairman M. Donald Grant in 1977, Seaver was traded to the Cincinnati Reds on June 15. The Reds sent Seaver back to the Mets on Dec. 16, 1982, and he went 9-14 in 1983.

wasn't a sure sign the deal could be made.

Bonocrusher Comeback Set For Saturday

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion James "Bonocrusher" Smith hasn't fought professionally in almost a year, but if he is short on recent experience, he isn't lacking in ambition.

"My mind is on Mike Tyson," said Smith, who lost a 12-round decision to the current heavyweight title-holder on March 3, 1987.

"I've been training very hard," Smith told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "I have to look very impressive and knock (his next opponent) out early. We want to send a message to Tyson. We want to make sure he understands I'm back."

Smith plans to begin his comeback next Saturday in Atlantic City. But his opponent for the bout is uncertain.

Smith, who will fight on a card that features a WBA junior middleweight title match between Julian Jackson and Buster Drayton, had announced last week at his training site in western Harnett County that he would meet Mike Cohen.

Smith knocked Cohen out in the second round of a 1982 bout.

But Al Braverman, boxing director for Don King Productions, said last week that Smith will meet unbeaten Mike "Powerhouse" Rouse of Norfolk, Va.

"We apparently had a verbal agreement with Mike Cohen, and originally they were talking about a fight with Sammy Scaff," Smith told

The News and Observer of Raleigh. "I don't even know if this fight (with Rouse) is in writing. All I can do is pass on what has been told to me."

Smith said he was advised Friday by his co manager, Alan Kornberg, that his opponent would be Rouse.

Braverman said Rouse, a 6-foot-5, 225-pounder with a 13-0 pro record, is a more credible opponent than Cohen.

Smith won the WBA title in December 1986 after similar pre-fight uncertainty. The Shaw University graduate was offered a rematch with Tim Witherspoon in Madison Square Garden on one week's notice by Don King.

Smith was training for a bout with Mitch "Blood" Green when he replaced Tony Tubbs as Witherspoon's challenger and seized the opportunity with a first-round knockout.

Smith hasn't fought since early last August, when he lost a controversial split decision in South America to Adillon Rodriguez. Smith announced his retirement from boxing during an unsuccessful bid for Harnett County commissioner.

Roller Resigns SID Post At ECU

Bob Roller, Sports Information Director at East Carolina University for the past two years, has resigned to become the director of communications for the Orange Bowl Committee, ECU Director of Athletics Dave Hart announced today.

Roller, 27, will be in charge of coordinating the local, regional and national coverage which the Orange Bowl Classic receives. He will work closely with NBC TV in the game's production and also serve as the editor of a monthly magazine entitled "Orange Bowl Today."

"I was directly involved in bringing Bob to East Carolina," Hart said. "So I am fully aware of the skills that he possesses. I think it is a credit to our program that (executive director) Steve Hatchell and the Orange Bowl Committee would make Bob their primary target for this position."

"We know that Bob will be very successful with the Orange Bowl, and we certainly wish for him and his family the best of everything."

The Orange Bowl Classic and festival is a five-month extravaganza running from November through March in the Miami Beach area. While the New Year's Day game is the centerpiece of the festival, there are more than 100 events taking place during that time.

Pitt County Falls To Person County, 6-3

HOLLYWOOD — The Person County All-Stars exploded for five runs in the fourth inning to lead the way to a 6-3 victory over the Pitt County All-Stars in the Eastern North Carolina Babe Ruth (13-15) Baseball Tournament.

Singles by Dante Winstead, Junior Crawley, Phillip Davis, Chad Harris and Creighton Blackwell in the fourth frame helped push the runs across for Person County.

Person County added another run in the fifth inning when Kyle Clayton connected for a two-out single and scored later on a Pitt County error. Clayton went the distance on the mound, giving up seven hits to pick up the win for Person County.

Gilbert To Play Match Today In Volvo Event

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. (AP) — No. 7 seed Peter Lundgren plays unseeded Gianluca Pozzi as the Volvo International Tennis Tournament starts today at Stratton Mountain Resort.

Brad Gilbert, seeded third, Amos Mansdorf, seeded fourth, No. 8 Eliot Teltscher and teen sensation Michael Chang were also scheduled to appear on center court for the first day of the $602,500 tournament.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl and No. 2 seed Andre Agassi were scheduled to play on Tuesday, as Lendl vies for his third Volvo title and the 18-year-old Agassi attempts to reach the finals at the tournament where he began his rise to prominence two years ago.

Gilbert, a quarterfinalist for the last two years, was scheduled to play Leo Lavalle of Mexico. Mansdorf faced Laurie Warder of Australia.

Teltscher, of Palos Verdes, Calif., was scheduled to meet Michael Robertson of South Africa in the day's second match, while Chang, who is only 16, was to finish the day's competition against Mark Dickson of Tampa, Fla.

Tournament organizers are looking to players like Chang to provide some of the excitement in this year's tournament. Absent from the roster are three prominent names from Volvos past, including John McEnroe, who honeymooned here with actress Tatum O'Neal two years ago and captured the singles title. McEnroe was playing the Davis Cup in Argentina and was unable to attend.

Pat Cash, who appeared last year after his Wimbledon win, pulled out last Wednesday with injuries to his knee and Achilles' tendon.

Jimmy Connors, who at 35 has scaled back his competition schedule, has decided not to return.

But organizers point to a roster that includes its share of talent, including the youngsters, Agassi and Chang.

Agassi, with his blond streaked hair and playful manner on the court, defeated Tim Mayotte and Scott Davis two years ago before losing to McEnroe in the semifinals.

Last year, his powerful forearm helped him upset Cash en route to the semifinals again. He lost to Lendl, whose championship match against McEnroe was cancelled when rain forced an end to the tournament.

Chang, from Placentia, Calif., last year became the youngest player to win a singles match in the U.S. Open. This year, he became the youngest to win a men's match at Wimbledon.

On Tuesday, Agassi will face Kenyan Paul Wekesa, who is ranked No. 159, while Lendl plays Christian Saceanu, a Romanian playing out of West Germany.

All tickets are sold for the tournament, which will award the winner a prize of $114,000.

Good Athletes Left Off Of Olympic Team

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Put aside for the moment the world records, three American records and eight 1988 world bests produced during the eight days of U.S. Olympic track and field trials.

A better indication of the strength of the U.S. team that will compete in Seoul might be the number of world-caliber athletes who failed to qualify.

Carl Lewis, as expected, earned a chance to become the first track and field athlete ever to win four gold medals in two consecutive Olympic games. Florence Griffith Joyner and her sister-in-law, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, topped world records in the 100-meter dash and heptathlon, respectively.

Mary Decker Slaney, to no one's surprise, dominated the women's distance running.

Yet despite the fierce competition at Indiana University's Track and Field Stadium, only the top three finishers in each event advanced to the Olympics — leaving a pretty good team watching at home.

Rinaldo Nehemiah, world record holder in the 110-meter hurdles, fell in the final and did not make the team. Greg Foster, the Olympic Trials winner in 1984 and a silver medalist in the 110-hurdles at Los Angeles, broke his arm three weeks ago and had to quit during Saturday's semifinals when he lost his balance.

Valerie Brisco, the 1984 Olympic champion in the women's 200, was fourth in the final and did not qualify. Jim Spivey, America's top-ranked mile runner last year, was fourth in the 1,500 on Saturday and missed an Olympic berth by .21 second.

Al Joyner — Jackie's brother and Florence's husband — was the Olympic gold medal winner in the triple jump four years ago but finished fifth in the trials in that event last week and seventh in the 110-hurdles on Saturday.

He may go to Seoul with his wife, but he won't be competing.

Nor will triple jumper Michael Conley, the Olympic silver medalist four years ago; 41-year-old John Powell, who failed to win his fifth Olympic spot in the discus; pole vaulters Joe Dial and Mike Tully; Joan Benoit Samuelson, the 1984 Olympic women's marathon champion; Benita Fitzgerald-Brown, the defending Olympic 100-meter hurdles gold medalist; Jane Frederick, five-time national champion in the heptathlon; or Judi Brown King, silver medalist in the 400 hurdles in 1984.

If those athletes weren't good enough to get on the 1988 team, how good were the ones who did?

"I feel our team has been awesome," says Stan Huntsman, coach of the U.S. men's team. "They established the atmosphere early (in the trials). This is real exciting."

"We have the momentum we need (for Seoul)," Huntsman said. "I think we've already shown we won't be a pushover."

Lewis, who won the men's 100, 200 and long jump and was a member of the winning 400-meter relay team, had a world-best 9.78 seconds in the 100, although it could not be recognized as a record because it was wind aided. He also was second in the 200 and won the long jump with a leap of 28 feet, 9 inches, matching the fifth-best performance in history and the best in the world this year.

Yankees Top Royals In Slugfest

By HILLEL ITALIE

Associated Press Writer

In four games between the New York Yankees and Kansas City Royals, there were 56 runs, 81 hits, 161,019 fans and not a moment of boredom.

The teams capped a wild series Sunday with the Yankees winning 10-8 after blowing a seven-run lead. New York, which lost the previous day despite Dave Winfield's first-inning grand slam, gained a tie for first in the American League East as Detroit lost 1-0 to Oakland.

The Royals and Yankees won two games each.

"We had a chance to win all four. But give Kansas City credit for battling hard. All four were great games for the fans to watch," Yankees manager Lou Piniella said. "I'm proud of the way our team battled back today, especially after the two devastating losses we had the past couple of nights."

Kansas City had scored a run in the second, two in the third and five more in the fourth to take an 8-7 lead. But Jack Clark hit a three-run homer in the sixth and relievers Neil Allen and Dave Righetti shut down the Royals.

"Sunday afternoons have a way of doing that," Yankees catcher Joel Skinner said. "I don't know what it is. It just goes to show that our lineup is capable of beating anybody. Jack caught hold of one just at the right time and that's what it takes."

Elsewhere, it was Boston 3, Chicago 2; Minnesota 6, Baltimore 1; Texas 6, Milwaukee 4; Cleveland 9, California 2, and Toronto 6, Seattle 0.

Blowing leads this season has become all too familiar for the Yankees, who have lost six times when they were one out away from victory and have been beaten 13 times in their opponent's final at-bat. Allen, the winner in New York's 9-7 victory Friday night, conceded that the bullpen must perform better.

"We're all in this together. We've had the hitting to win all four of these games. Now we just have to get out pitching together," Allen said.

Righetti's save was his 151st, a team record.

Kansas City's Danny Tartabull, who put the Royals ahead with a two-run triple in the fourth, paid tribute to both teams.

"Nobody laid down today. Everybody kept their spirits up and kept trying to come back."

The attendance was a record for a four-game series at Royals Stadium.

Athletics 1, Tigers 0

Detroit, which had been in sole possession of first place in the AL East since June 20, was shut out by Oakland's Bob Welch and lost for the seventh time in 10 games since the All-Star break.

Welch, 12-6, gave up six hits, struck out eight, tying his season high, and walked one for his third complete game. Walt Terrell, 4-8, gave up only five hits but allowed Walt Weiss' RBI double in the fifth.

The A's, leading the American League West by 6½ games, became only the second team to sweep a three-game series from the Tigers this year. Detroit was swept by Minnesota May 27-29.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 2

Boston pulled within 1½ games of New York and Detroit by winning its 11th straight game and 16th in a row at Fenway Park.

Mike Greenwell drove in one run with a triple and set up another with a double and Wade Boggs had three hits as Boston completed a four-game sweep of Chicago.

Bruce Hurst, 10-4, who had not pitched since July 6 because of a viral infection, allowed 10 hits but only two runs before being bailed out by Dennis Lamp with none out and runners on first and second in the sixth inning. Lamp retired the next three hitters.

Lee Smith pitched 1 2-3 innings, striking out four, to earn his 15th save.

Twins 6, Orioles 1

Eddie Murray's throwing error allowed two runs to score in the second inning and Randy Bush hit a three-run homer in the eighth as Minnesota won.

Alan Anderson, 7-7, scattered nine hits, walked two and struck out one before needing relief help from Juan Berenguer in the bottom of the seventh inning. Berenguer pitched 1 1-3 innings, Jeff Reardon closed.

The Twins scored three times in the second off Mike Boddicker, 6-12.

Minnesota made it 6-1 in the eighth when pinch-hitter Tom Herr hit a one-out double, Newman walked and Bush followed with his 11th homer.

Rangers 6, Brewers 4

Paul Kilgus allowed five hits in eight-plus innings and Pete In-cavaglia and Geno Petralli homered to lead Texas.

Kilgus, 8-9, who had lost his last four starts, struck out three and walked three but needed relief help from Mitch Williams in the bottom of the ninth after giving up a solo homer to Jeffrey Leonard and a two-run shot by Greg Brock. Williams earned his 13th save.

Texas took a 4-0 lead after three innings and snapped Bill Wegman's career high four-game winning streak.

Indians 9, Angels 2

Greg Swindell pitched a six-hitter to snap his eight-game losing streak as Cleveland won for just the fourth time in 15 games.

Swindell, 11-9, walked none and struck out eight for his eighth complete game. The left-hander's last victory was May 30, when he became the major league's first 10-game winner.

The Indians had 15 hits, three by Willie Exshaw. Julio Franco went 1-for-4 to extend his hitting streak to 20 games.

California took a 1-0 lead in the first on Chili Davis' sacrifice fly, but the Indians came back against Willie Fraser, 6-10, with three runs in both the second and third innings.

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 0

Mike Flanagan pitched a four-hitter for his first shutout in four years, Cecil Fielder hit two homers and George Bell also homered for Toronto at the Kingdom.

Flanagan, 10-6, walked two and struck out two for his first shutout since July 7, 1984 and 18th of his career. The left-hander has two complete games, both in his last two starts.

The Blue Jays scored three runs in the top of the fourth off Mark Langston, 7-9. Bell singled, took third on a double by Fielder and scored on Manny Lee's single. One out later, Jesse Barfield doubled home both runners, his first run-scoring hit since June 19.

Rice Welcomed Back After Suspension

BOSTON (AP) — In 14 years with the Boston Red Sox, Jim Rice rarely has criticized a teammate publicly.

He didn't like it last spring when, as team captain, a couple of verbal jabs taken at Todd Benzinger in the clubhouse were reported.

Rice just felt, as did some others on the team, Benzinger should have been ignoring injuries in the fight for a job.

In a way, Benzinger took a page from Rice's book. He refused to reply to criticism, doing things his way instead.

But Benzinger is much more outspoken than the greatest right-handed slugger in Boston history.

So it was not too surprising Sunday when Benzinger, now established as a major leaguer, welcomed Rice back after a three-day suspension for an altercation with new manager Joe Morgan.

"I'm glad he's back and everything seems fine and dandy," Benzinger, said after Boston charged to its 11th consecutive victory, 3-2 over the Chicago White Sox.

"Jim has been here for who knows how many, maybe a thousand games," Benzinger said. "He's been in the clubhouse and a part of the team since 1975. He's always been a fixture, a physical presence in this clubhouse."

"If anything, it was awkward not seeing him here, not seeing him prowl around the way he does. When I saw him today, I said we're back to normal."

Repentant and ashamed, Rice rejoined the Red Sox after a three-day layoff that cost him about $30,000, a pittance for one of baseball's highest paid players.

The monetary loss was nothing compared with the embarrassment of his actions. And Rice knows he can expect to hear it from Fenway fans in the future.

"I'm sorry it happened, but it's over and done with," Rice said in the clubhouse as the Red Sox waited out rain for the game with the White Sox.

"I've served my time and paid my dues, and now I'm back, ready to go out and play hard and help the team win," he added.

"Everything's fine," Morgan said. "Jim came in here a while ago (in midmorning) and apologized. I told him fine, to get on with it."

Despite his return, Rice was on the bench as the Red Sox made it 11-0 under Morgan since John McNamara was fired two days after the All-Star Game and moved to within 1½ games of the AL East lead.

U.S. Women's Open

Walker, playing a group ahead of Neumann and Sheehan, joined them at 3-under with a birdie on No. 8 and took the lead briefly with a birdie on the 10th hole.

However, Neumann put a nine-iron three feet from the cup on 10 and moved to 4-under. On 11, she sank an eight-foot putt for birdie and, on 12, she dropped a 10-footer for a two-shot lead.

"I think the 12th hole was the key for me the whole week," Neumann said. "I made some really good saves for some pars and today I got a birdie there."

Walker stumbled with a double-bogey on 12, but hung in and made a birdie on 14 to get within one shot.

On the 15th hole, Neumann put a five-wood 10 feet from the hole. Sheehan hit a two-iron short of the green, chipped up and two-putted for bogey.

The Swede rolled in her 10-footer and the tournament was hers. "I'm looking at being two behind with two holes to play," Sheehan said. "That (Neumann's putt on 15) was really a nail in the coffin."

Neumann put the tournament away with a 30-foot birdie putt on the 17th.

"Liselotte played unbelievable golf out there," Sheehan said. "... She made miles of putts."

"She was really composed out there. Even after the four-putt, she hung in there.... She showed no signs of crumbling. She was very confident. She kept both feet on the ground and played great golf."

Sheehan, who earned $35,000 for finishing second, shot a 1-under-par 70 but lost a stroke to Neumann.

"I had to do better than that," she said of her final round. "I played extremely well. I have nothing to be ashamed of. I'm proud of the way I played. I'm proud of the way I handled myself. I got beat by a better golfer."

Walker, who missed the cut in her first two Open tries, was equally satisfied with her play Sunday. She and Pepper-Mochrie won $21,679 apiece.

"I was a little disappointed with the 6 on 12 but overall this is the best Open I've ever had," Walker said. "I hope to have a lot more like it."

Neumann came into the tournament having never finished higher than 11th in an LPGA event. She was 68th on the 1988 money list with $27,712 in earnings over her first 17 events.

But this week, she set an Open record for the lowest first-round score (67), then tied the record for lowest 36-hole total (139) and the lowest 54-hole score (208).

"I have been playing well the last two weeks," Neumann said. "But either my drive or my putting was missing. This week everything was working together."

With the victory, Neumann became the fourth consecutive Open champion to post her first U.S. professional victory at the Open. She followed Davies, Jane Geddes in 1986, and Kathy Baker-Guadagnino in 1985.

Kristi Albers, who finished tied for eighth, made the 11th hole-in-one in U.S. Women's Open history Sunday when she sank her six-iron tee shot on the 159-yard fourth hole.

British TV Producers See Writers' Strike As Boost To Their Chances In The States

LONDON (AP) — Television producers from the land of such PBS hits as "Upstairs, Downstairs" are hoping the 4½-month-old writers' strike will give them a chance to break into the lucrative commercial network market this fall.

The three major U.S. commercial networks have been forced to postpone new shows scheduled for this fall because no scripts have been written. NBC and CBS have indicated an interest in buying British programs to help fill the void.

So far, the networks are merely browsing. Difficulties in translating British shows into the style of fast-paced, star-studded American airwaves may inhibit many import deals.

"We've had a lot of increased interest," said Vivian Wallace, chief executive of Manchester-based Granada, one of the largest of the 16 independent television companies that broadcast over the country's two commercial channels. The non-commercial British Broadcasting Corp. runs two other national channels.

"I can't report any brilliant coups," she added in an interview. "Things we have sold in the past to the Public Broadcasting System market are probably too slow-paced for the networks, but obviously we are using the opportunity to pitch projects which may be possible."

"Everybody would love to sell to the networks because the money is much higher."

Peter Clark, a director of the international sales subsidiary of one of Britain's largest independent companies, Television South PLC, said U.S. networks "are starting to look, to investigate."

But "they're going to have to take creative risks if they want to use programming from other sources," said Clark, whose parent company has just purchased MTM, the U.S. production company co-founded by actress Mary Tyler Moore.

Rather than completed programs, however, scripts, co-productions and convertible formats have a better chance of traveling to U.S. television, officials said.

They point to the long-running American hit series "All in the Family," which was based on a British show called "Till Death Us Do Part," whose bigoted Londoner, Alf Garnett, became Archie Bunker.

New 'Feud' Host Has Confidence

NEW YORK (AP) — No one would accuse Ray Combs, the new host of CBS' "Family Feud," of lack of confidence.

"Family Feud," he says, is "the best vehicle to let me display what I can do most naturally. There'll be some skeptics until they see it, but they're going to have to love me. They're not going to be able not to."

"I realized, this was my vehicle," he said. "Just as Carson had 'Who Do You Trust?' Just as Merv Griffin had another show. Just as Groucho had 'You Bet Your Life.'"

Combs might be following in the footsteps of Carson and Griffin and Marx, but more immediately, the steps belong to Richard Dawson, who, incidentally, is revising "Who Do You Trust?" for NBC.

It was Dawson who turned the silly game show of "Family Feud" into a personal stage for his wry humor. The show has been off the air three years, but CBS brought it back earlier this month as part of its daytime lineup.

"I don't hesitate to follow Richard at all," Combs said. "I'm excited that I'm following him, as opposed to anyone else (following him). People say those are big shoes to fill. I don't have to wear his shoes. I've got my own."

Combs grew up in Ohio, did Mormon missionary work in Arizona, then moved to Indiana. He said he always knew he would become a successful standup comedian, a belief not shared by his wife, his childhood sweetheart.

His greatest dream was to be on the "Tonight Show" with his idol, Johnny Carson.

"That's why I went to California," Combs said, in between tweaking a French waiter at the Manhattan restaurant where he was having lunch.

"I would go to bed, and I would dream I was on Johnny Carson. My wife wanted no part of it. She thought I was crazy, just crazy."

He moved to California without his wife, though she eventually joined

NEW HOST — Ray Combs, who started out as a standup comedian, is the new host for the CBS game show, "Family Feud." Though he replaces Richard Dawson, whose wry humor propelled the show into nationwide popularity, Combs is confident that he can produce a winner of his own. (AP Laserphoto)

him. She still wasn't convinced that he could make a living as a comedian, though.

"She knew there were more astronauts than comedians," Combs said. "She tried to get me to go to Houston — 'Honey, there are 300 astronauts, if you want a stupid dream....'"

Combs gave up his job at Levitz

Furniture and started playing the clubs full time.

Then he started getting jobs warming up the studio audiences for sitcoms, such as "Golden Girls" and "Facts of Life." The experience of playing amidst TV equipment in front of an audience that doesn't expect or want to see a comedian honed his instincts.

Carson, whose company produces "Amen," came to a taping and caught Combs' act.

The dream came true, and Combs appeared on "The Tonight Show."

"It was the thousandth time I would be in front of a studio audience, where for most comedians it was their first," he said. "They get scared. I felt like Mike Tyson. I said, 'I can't wait, open those curtains! I've been waiting my whole life for this!'"

"The curtains opened, and I walked out. You couldn't see the people because the lights were so bright. I'd never had that. So I come out, the first joke kind of shocked me, but I heard them laugh and I trusted that they were there. And as I did my routine, I became relaxed, and I started to even do things, this is what made me different. I did things I had never done before. I started making things up that I had never done, my first time."

"You have six minutes. At the end of that six minutes, every comic knows the signs. If Johnny's smiling really big or talking to the guy beside him, and gives you one of these (an 'OK' sign), that means you're coming back, and everybody knows Johnny has the best feel for who the best young comics are."

Combs said his time flew and he was shocked when the stage manager made the gesture telling him to wrap it up.

"I didn't end on a joke. The only thing I could think to do was be honest. I looked at the crowd and said, 'Folks, all my life I've had a dream that I would be on this show, and tonight you've made my dream become a reality, and I thank you very much.'"

"When it was over, they started clapping, and I just saw twinkling. I didn't know what it was. It was the crowd standing up. It was a standing ovation. It was the first time in the 25-year history of the 'Tonight Show' that any comic got a standing ovation, and when I looked over at Johnny, he was going, 'Come over here.'"

Gardner Calls Bond Authorship An Honor

BLOXHAM, England (AP) — John Gardner is not just a thriller writer but a master of a very special art: the posthumous sequel.

At his home in this English village west of London, the 61-year-old author writes James Bond novels, having picked up where 007's creator, Ian Fleming, left off when he died in 1964.

While American writer Alexandra Ripley is just beginning a sequel to Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," Gardner has already turned out seven Bond novels, each a best seller in the United States. The most recent, "Scorpius," is in its sixth consecutive week on the New York Times best-seller list.

"It was a challenge, a little honor," Gardner recalled of his decision to accept a publisher's offer in 1979 to write a Bond sequel.

He had already made a name with his books about the adventurer Boysie Oakes, and with such cloak-and-dagger yarns as "The Dancing Dodo" and "The Nostradamus Traitor." He had also written two novels featuring Sherlock Holmes' nemesis, Professor Moriarty.

So when Glidrose Publications, Bond's literary copyright owners, offered him a shot at old 007 himself, he thought, "Why not? If I don't do it, somebody else will."

Gardner was then living in Ireland as a tax exile, and already one Bond sequel, "Colonel Sun," had been published in 1968 by Kingsley Amis, author of such acclaimed novels as "Lucky Jim" and "One Fat Englishman." Amis wrote it under the pseudonym Robert Markham.

Gardner first encountered Bond while in bed with the flu in the early 1960s, when his wife, Margaret, brought "Casino Royale" and "Dr. No" from the library.

"I was absolutely enchanted," he recalled.

"Fantasy, formula, fun are the three F's of Bond writing," he said in an interview.

The exploits of the suave, self-possessed hero, a man both dressed and licensed to kill, demand a lot from a writer, Gardner said.

The trick, he says, is to make the Bond novels "look as if they've been thrown off in one afternoon. ... You can't let readers see the joints anywhere."

"I sit down to do Bond and within about four days, I'm cutting lines out and making it run very fast," he said.

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY July 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A letter is delayed in coming which annoys you to no end, but later everything starts going very fast for some reason.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It's important you do not try to force practical matters to go as you planned them, but let them work out naturally.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't depend on someone in the business world to help you very much. Try not to argue over an account, but study it instead.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Maintain poise at your job, even if you wonder what will happen during the next month. Don't rely much on co-workers.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Do whatever will establish greater harmony between your friends since they are apt to quarrel. Plug away at your specialized work.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Something may come up at home, but don't let this upset you since it soon can be rectified. A family tie may be under stress.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): An unexpected message can get things moving. Don't panic and all will be advantageous to you. Keep poised and drive carefully.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You are money conscious today, and it is best you do not delay much longer in settling obligations. Get ideas from experts.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Your mood changes from one hour to the other, either acting too fast or being too deliberate. Hit on a happy medium.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Before you get rid of something you feel is no longer of value to you, make sure you do not make more expenses for yourself.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You may find that friends who are conservative and those who are progressive are quarreling, so use tact with both.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Be wise, but say very little while in public today. Take it easy tonight and rest up, for you have a hectic schedule around the corner.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AKJ4 ♥J6 ♦Q10763 ♣AQ
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 1 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—There are those who would bid only one spade, since that action would be forcing. However, we feel that our honors in partner's suits makes our hand too strong, and it could be impossible to catch up later. We vote for a jump shift to two spades.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK ♥AK983 ♦KQ4 ♣532
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Let your partner know that you have a strong, balanced hand by jumping to three no trump. Once he has been advised of your 19 or so points, he will be ideally positioned to probe for slam.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q97 ♥AKJ43 ♦93 ♣K104
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—A difficult problem. Three clubs does not come close to doing your hand justice; four clubs bypasses three no trump, which could be your only makable game; and you are a heart short for a jump to three hearts. By a process of elimination we suggest you bid two spades. With a bit of luck, partner will rebid two no trump and give you an easy raise to game.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK72 ♥95 ♦QJ83 ♣AQ10
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 1 ♥ Dbl Pass 1 NT
 Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—If you think partner is bailing out with a weak hand, you're mistaken. He's making a forward-going bid with some 8-10 points. If he has a maximum, you want to be in game, so invite by raising to two no trump.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQJ75 ♥52 ♦AKQ ♣632
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with four hearts. What action do you take?
 A.—Once in a while a preempt will accomplish its purpose, and this one has. You have a fine hand, but there's nothing you can do without risking a catastrophe. Pass, and hope that partner can take balancing action.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠863 ♥KJ9 ♦1063 ♣A872
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Your response shows 6-9 points, and partner is asking you to bid game if you are at the top of your range. Your 8 points are bolstered by good intermediate cards, and you should have no hesitation about going on to game. Bid three no trump.

INVITATION FOR BIDS GRINDLE CREEK CANAL. Sealed bids, in single copy, for work described herein and in the more detailed specifications, will be received until 11:00 o'clock A.M., E.D.T., August 8, 1988, at the law offices of Underwood & Leech, 201 Evans Street, Post Office Box 527, Greenville, North Carolina 27835; and at that time publicly opened. Prospective bidders may view the work site by obtaining directions at the store of J. P. Davenport, Sons, Pacolus, North Carolina at any time prior to the opening of bids. Representatives of the Drainage District will conduct a showing of the work to be done at the work site and be available to answer questions concerning the same on Tuesday, August 2, 1988, beginning at 1:00 o'clock P.M. at the parking lot of F & D Motor Company, Belhel, North Carolina. A brief description of the work to be done is as follows: The work to be done will consist of the removal of live and dead vegetation and travelway repairs on the Grindle Creek main canal. The area to be cleared extends from the juncture of Grindle Creek and N. C. Highway 11 upstream to the juncture of Grindle Creek and the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad tracks, a distance of approximately 3.2 miles. The work area is shown in heavy outline on a copy of the maintenance map of Grindle Creek Watershed which is attached to and made a part of the detailed specifications, copy of which can be obtained by application to the law offices of Underwood & Leech, Post Office Box 527, Greenville, North Carolina 27835, at any time.
