Serviceman Slain While Jogging Near Air Base

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

ANGELES, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen in a speeding car shot and killed a U.S. Air Force sergeant while he was jogging with his dogs in a neighborhood near Clark Air Base, police said today.

In a separate incident, U.S. Navy authorities said the Filipino wife of an American serviceman was robbed and slain Sunday night near the base, located 50 miles north of the capital Manila.

Police said both incidents appeared to be criminal and not related to the 19-year communist insurgency. Communist rebels operate in the Angeles area and have threatened to attack American military personnel.

Police said Tech. Sgt. Richard Blackmer, 31, of the Cleveland suburb of Brook Park, was jogging near his home in the Mountain View subdivision about 9:30 p.m. Monday when gunmen opened fire with M-16 rifles. His home is about one mile from the base's main gate.

The assailants also killed his two German shepherd dogs, police added. Police officers who spoke on condition of anonymity said a preliminary investigation indicated the killing may have been the result of a marital dispute. They said Blackmer was estranged from his Filipino wife and was living with another woman. Police were looking for the wife, whom they refused to name.

Blackmer was the first American service member slain in the Philippines since October, when communist rebels killed two Air Force enlisted men, a retired Air Force sergeant and a Filipino civilian of U.S. ancestry.

But a Filipino investigator, who also requested anonymity, said the style of the killing and weapons used did not fit the pattern of guerrilla attacks. Rebel assassination teams normally use .45-caliber pistols and fire at close range, he said.

In the other incident, U.S. officials said Esther Billa Heacox, 41, wife of Navy Petty Officer James A. Heacox, was found fatally stabbed late Sunday about three miles north of Clark Air Base.

Master Sgt. James Katzman of the Clark Public Affairs Office said Mrs. Heacox's body was found in the car after witnesses saw the vehicle run off the road and two Filipino males flee.

Her husband, assigned to a Navy communications station in nearby Arlac province, said the victim left their home to drive Clark and was carrying about $150, which was missing.

A base spokeswoman, Air Force Capt. Maryellen Jadick, said U.S. authorities had not imposed any new restrictions on the nearly 26,000 American troops, Defense Department civilians and dependents living in this city of some 200,000.

Nearly 40 people have been killed in Angeles and other communities around Clark Air Base this year. Police say many of the slayings are politically motivated.

New Party Chief Named In Burma

By SEIN WIN
Associated Press Writer

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Burma's ruling party today chose its No. 4 ranked leader — Sein Lwin — as party chairman to replace Ne Win, who wielded authoritarian power over this Southeast Asian nation for a quarter century.

A brief news release said the Central Committee of the Burma Socialist Program Party elected the 64-year-old retired army general during a special session.

Sein Lwin had served as the party's joint general secretary since 1985. He also holds the government post of Council of State secretary.

Ne Win asked to step down Saturday after 26 years in power. On Monday, a special party congress accepted his resignation and that of the second most powerful figure in the country — party Vice Chairman San Yu, also the country's president.

The 77-year-old Ne Win, who came to power in a 1962 military coup, cited violent anti-government rioting in March and June, for which he acknowledged some responsibility, and his age as reasons for stepping down.

Cambodia Peace Plan Is Snubbed

By PETER ENG
Associated Press Writer

BOGOR, Indonesia (AP) — Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk today rejected the Vietnamese-installed government's latest peace plan, but said he was willing to meet with Prime Minister Hun Sen.

The warring Cambodian factions today met for a second day of informal talks at the Dutch colonial summer palace of Indonesia's late President Sukarno at Bogor, about 35 miles outside Jakarta.

Sihanouk resigned July 10 as president of the guerrilla coalition fighting the government and Vietnamese troops in Cambodia. He is widely considered central to any settlement in the 9½ year civil war, but vowed he would not attend the peace talks that began Monday.

The talks bring together Prime Minister Hun Sen of Cambodia and the leaders of the three resistance groups — Khieu Samphan of the Communist Khmer Rouge, Son Sann of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, and Prince Norodom Ranariddh, who represents his father, Sihanouk.

In a meeting today with Japan's ambassador in Jakarta, Sihanouk rejected a seven-point plan proposed by Hun Sen as an old proposal aimed at preserving the current Phnom Penh government, Japanese reporters said.

U.S. Leaf Sales Dip

WILMINGTON (AP) — A tobacco market in Durham will be silent this year, and markets in Carthage and Aberdeen will be consolidated, reflecting the reduced amount of tobacco being grown, state officials say.

In 1975, U.S. producers sold about 1.5 billion pounds. "This year, we'll be lucky to sell 800 million," said Carlton Blalock, executive secretary of Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina.

"We are no longer the dominant tobacco producer in the world," he told The Wilmington Morning Star on Monday.

The United States currently has about 10 percent to 12 percent of the worldwide export market, compared with more than 35 percent years ago.

As U.S. prices have escalated, other countries increased the quality of their flue-cured leaf to become major competitors.

But although the United States continues to produce the highest quality of flue-cured tobacco, other countries are closing the gap on quality, Blalock said.

Even if American growers increase production in the future, Blalock said, he does not foresee markets reopening.

Fewer markets, however, could mean better opportunities for some growers. Buyers from foreign markets, for example, may not send buyers to markets where there are only one or two sales a week. Competition at larger markets that have sales every day should draw more buyers.

Panel Will Study Medical Zoning

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

After a presentation outlining a planning commission recommendation on land-use zoning in the Medical District, Mayor Ed Carter on Monday appointed a council subcommittee to study the proposal further.

The four-person subcommittee — consisting of Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn, Council member Nancy Jenkins, Planning and Zoning member Wes Hankins and chairman Dr. Wallace Woolees — was directed by the mayor to study the commission recommendations and alternatives and to prepare a subsequent report to the council within 30 days.

During a council workshop session at City Hall, Woolees presented details and reasoning behind a recommendation that almost all non-medically related special uses be deleted from the MD-2 zoning district.

The recommendation came from a Planning and Zoning Commission subcommittee study on Medical District zoning requested by the mayor and city council. The request followed a 4-3 council decision on March 7 which designated floral shops as permitted uses in the restrictive MD-2 zoning district.

The planning subcommittee's proposal suggests the council delete all non-medical related special uses from the MD-2 zoning district with the exception of "office building, professional and business."

The panel recommends maintaining the "professional office" special use in the MD-2 district with the recommendation that at least 50 percent of the gross floor area per building be occupied by uses permitted in the MD-2 zoning district. Now, the requirement states that 50 percent of the operations within a building or project be occupied by those uses.

Woolees also presented two alternatives to the council. Some members of the planning commission wanted them considered by the council, too.

Those alternatives included maintaining the current zoning designations and rezoning a large section of MD-2 land across from Pitt Memorial Hospital south of Stantonburg Road to the less restrictive MD-3 (Medical District office and institutional).

The MD-2 zoning district is designated for medical-related uses and to create areas where hospitals, rehabilitation centers, medical offices and clinics can be compatibly mixed.

In his presentation, Woolees said the hospital and the medical represent

Court Sends PCMH Suit To Trial

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The N.C. Court of Appeals has tossed out a 1987 decision handed down in Pitt County Civil Superior Court in a lawsuit involving Pitt County Memorial Hospital, Capitol

American Life Insurance Co. and a Wayne County man.

The court sent the case back to Pitt County for trial, and an attorney involved said the case could affect the way insurance companies and health care providers do business.

PCMH officials filed a complaint against Capitol American Life and William Boyd Smith of Pikeville in November of 1986 asking for $49,900.22 in unpaid medical bills. Smith was treated at PCMH for two-and-a-half months in the fall of 1985 for head injuries from an automobile accident.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville granted a summary judgment against Smith in January of 1987 ordering him to pay PCMH all of the unpaid medical bills, plus interest from Jan. 1, 1986.

Shinn Questions Budget Omission

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Why a major anticipated expenditure for the city during fiscal year 1988-89 was not reflected in the budget concerned Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn at Monday's Greenville City Council workshop session. The expenditure in question is $178,000, the projected cost of the city's annexation of Colonial Mobile Home Park and vicinity.

The annexation area includes the mobile home park, two family-care homes, a private livestock yard and Greenfield Terrace Park. The area is north of the city, west of N.C. 11 and U.S. 13 and south of Wellcome Middle School.

At last night's meeting, Director of Development Bobby Roberson gave the council details surrounding the annexation, which will bring a projected 1,017 new residents into the city.

Included in those details were estimated expenditures during the first year of $178,268. Projections show that the annexation will bring the city $141,568 in revenues during the first year.

Those expenditures include monies for six additional police officers along with uniforms and training, another police car, a garbage truck, and salary, uniforms and supplies for three more fire/rescue trainees.

City Manager Greg Knowles said the money for the annexation was not included in the 1988-89 budget because it would have in effect, been pre-voting the issue.

"We said we as a staff could not put it into the budget because you haven't voted on it yet," he said. "If you voted on this in the budget, you would have already pre-voted on the issue before it came before a public hearing, before it went through the normal process."

"You would have pre-judged the issue before you had a chance for public input."

But Mrs. Shinn argued that funds could have been assigned and earmarked so the general public would have had an actual idea of what the city's total operating budget will be for 1988-89.

"We didn't necessarily have to vote for (the funds) but we could have put them aside other than pulling them out and making a budget amendment," she said.

"I think when we know we're going to have to spend it, why do we make budget amendments for an amount of money this large," she asked, "because it makes the budget look smaller when we're having the public hearing?"

Knowles said the council received a memorandum telling them how much the annexation might cost and how the city was going to handle it.

But Mrs. Shinn said she was unaware of the information and upon polling other council members, discovered Council Member Mildred Council was also unaware a budget amendment would have to be made regarding the matter.

"When you present a budget to the general public and you know you're going to have this type of expenditure in the upcoming fiscal year, some kind of projection or allocation should be made for it," Mrs. Shinn said.

The council adopted the annexation report; a public hearing is set for Aug. 29.

In other matters Monday, the budget of the Pitt/Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority for fiscal year 1988-89 could not draw the

Everything's Peachy

By JERRY RAYNOR

The 18 known acres of commercially grown peaches in Pitt County, Pitt County Agriculture Extension Agent Sam Uzzell says, "are in good shape, with a fine harvest mostly because there were no late killing frosts when the trees were in flower."

"There is a bounty of peaches on sale at the Farmers Market, some locally grown, all top quality fruit," he said. "In fact, the flavor is especially good this year because they matured and ripened a little more slowly than in some recent years due to an ideal growing season."

Although Pitt County growers have a small acreage, Uzzell pointed out that they choose both early and late ripening varieties. Some peaches come in as early as late May, others as late as August.

"By growing peaches with these variable maturity dates," he said, "growers guard against possible excessive loss from late frosts and also ensure a market all along, instead of it being a just all-at-once harvest and market situation."

Uzzell said most Pitt County growers market their peaches at orchard sites.

"As a rule, they do not sell in large quantities," he said.

A large variety of peaches are raised on the limited Pitt acreage, he added, mostly freestone varieties.

Among varieties grown in Pitt orchards are Loring, Red Haven, Alberta, Belle of Georgia, Red Skin, Troy and Norman.

"Also being planted," Uzzell said, "are several popular varieties developed in the Sandhills peach-growing

Fountain Man State 4-H Alumni Winner

Floyd Davis Turnage of Fountain has been named a state 4-H alumni winner.

Turnage is one of two winners chosen for 1988. The other is G. Douglas Carroll of Kernersville in Forsyth County.

The announcement was made July 20 during State 4-H Congress in Raleigh by Dr. Chester Black, associate dean and director of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

Black said the alumni awards program is designed to recognize former 4-H members for success in their personal and/or professional lives.

Winners receive plaques from the North Carolina State University Collegiate 4-H Club.

Turnage joined a Boy's Corn Club, a forerunner to 4-H clubs, in Edgecombe County in 1911 at the age of 16. He was declared the county corn club production winner with a yield of 115 bushels per acre. The state average at that time was only about 15 bushels per acre.

"I couldn't spend but $10 on commercial fertilizer so I used chicken manure, wood ashes and wood mold to build up my soil," he said.

Turnage began college at N.C. State but returned to the farm after one semester when his father died. He served in World War I in 1918-19 in France and returned to the farm again after the war.

He married and moved to Fountain in 1922 and became a rural mail carrier. He moved to Chapel Hill in 1932 and continued to deliver the mail.

While in Chapel Hill, he organized a Grange Chapter and served as commander of the American Legion Post, as a deacon in his church, and as a bank director. He retired and moved back to Fountain in 1953 and was active in the Ruritan Club and as a town commissioner.

"I've been retired more years than I worked," he says.

Turnage has always been interested in civic matters.

"You can't do it all alone," he says, "you've got to work with others."

Turnage is a widower (his wife died in 1985), and he has three children, five grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren.

Wage Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major collective bargaining settlements in private industry during the first six months of this year provided for wage increases averaging 2.2 percent a year, the government said today.

The Labor Department said that the last time these settlements were negotiated, generally in 1985 or 1986, the wage increases over the life of the contract averaged 2.9 percent.

The report said that the average pay increase for the first year of the contracts was 2.6 percent, compared to a first-year wage boost of 2.3 percent the last time labor and management in these industries negotiated.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Pitt Extension Agent

Every summer in late July and early August, motorists encounter heavy flights of moths along the highway at night. These moths are the adults of the corn earworm and are leaving the dry corn fields to find suitable host crops on which they lay eggs. Once these eggs have hatched, then the corn earworm goes to work on soybeans, peanuts, grain sorghum, cotton and many other green and growing crops. These moths will be apparent at night now.

The corn earworm has been called our most expensive insect. It has the capability to destroy yield potential of certain crops like few other insects can.

It pays to know certain things about the corn earworm. I can feed and survive successfully on many different crops. It can lay literally hundreds of eggs, and it is a strong flier that can cover considerable distances. Hot weather enables the insect to develop from egg to moth in about a week on soybeans. All these factors and more mean that it is essential for farmers to actively monitor populations of the corn earworm on soybeans, peanuts and grain sorghum (milo), during August in Eastern North Carolina.

There are usually four generations of the corn earworm each year. Some survive the winter as a pupa (a resting stage between the worm and the moth). These first generation worms attack corn shortly after it emerges and feed in the whorl of the corn. The ragged leaves unfold, and the worm is called the "shatterworm" at this time because of the feeding damage.

The second generation of the year is found in the tips of field corn and sweet corn ears primarily, hence the common name of "corn earworm."

Usually there is only one worm found per ear — the worms are cannibalistic and only the strongest worm survives. Corn provides an excellent breeding site, and with some two million acres of corn in North Carolina, obviously many corn earworms are produced. In late July, the second generation of the corn earworm is through feeding in corn, and the moths (adult stage) leave the corn fields to seek new egg laying areas.

The third generation of corn earworm is the damaging one, and the one that requires close attention. The moths that lay eggs on soybean and peanut foliage can develop rapidly and heavy infestations can trip these crops of leaves and pods.

The fourth generation of corn earworm is not a factor because of heavy losses of eggs and larvae due to poor egg-laying sites and adverse weather in late September and early October.

The time has arrived for eastern North Carolina soybean and peanut growers to be aware of the corn earworm. It is the most damaging insect to these crops, but can be readily controlled with appropriately timed insecticidal sprays. Careful scouting of these crops will make money, not cost money.

For further information on scouting for corn earworm, contact your local Agricultural Extension office, at 830-6361. Growers will have the opportunity to attend a soybean pest management workshop on August 4. There will be weed identification, insect scouting and management of general soybean pests. Two hours of pesticide recertification will be offered for commercial applicators in the categories of dealer, agricultural pest-plant, and demonstration and research.

Tot's Leg Severed

HENDERSON (AP) — A 2-year-old Vance County boy is in stable condition after his leg was severed when his father accidentally backed over him with a riding lawn mower, authorities say.

Deputies said Jonathan Oakley apparently ran behind the lawn mower as his father was backing it up. The mower severed the child's leg two inches below the right knee.

Steel Triangle Planned

DURHAM (AP) — A structural engineering firm is conducting a feasibility study of a proposal to erect a 700-foot-high stainless steel triangle in Research Triangle Park.

"It's a gamble," said Willy Stewart, an engineer with E.H. Gardner & Associates. "We're excited about it enough to do it for free. If it is funded, we hope our services will be needed. We think as a project it will go."

Graphic designer David Friebe earlier this month suggested constructed the triangle as a visual identity for the park. He estimated the project, with a 10-acre park and 46,200-square-foot building, would cost about $35 million.

"I get anywhere from 10 to 15 calls a day," said Friebe. "They just wanted to voice their opinion that it is needed and want to donate money or services."

"In order to pull this off, there has to be community involvement from the corporations in Research Triangle Park," said Stewart. "Plus, we need funding from the federal and state governments and private enterprise."

Judge Holds Youth

DURHAM (AP) — For the second time in two years, a District Court judge has found that a youthful sex offender from Durham has not received proper treatment while in jail and should not be released.

The state Division of Youth Services, in response, is complaining that its juvenile detention facilities are overcrowded and that the General Assembly has not provided money to establish a therapy program for young sex offenders.

The latest case arose last week in a closed session of Juvenile Court. Judge Kenneth Titus found that the boy in question had been a repeat sex offender and is a likely candidate to commit further crimes.

Titus rejected a petition by the Division of Youth Services seeking the boy's release, even though one condition of the release would have been that the boy attend outpatient therapy in Durham. Titus said if the boy refused to attend therapy, he could not be returned to detention without a court hearing that could take up to 60 days to complete.

In 1986, District Court Judge Orlando Hudson refused to release another young Durham sex offender and ruled that the Division of Youth Services was violating state law by not offering a treatment program.

Duke Given Deadline

DURHAM (AP) — Supporters of Duke University's black employees say the school has two more weeks to respond to complaints of racist practices at the school.

"We are giving Duke until Aug. 9 to get back with us," Willie Lovett, chairman of the Durham Committee on the Affairs of Black People said at Sunday's meeting of about 45 people. Lovett and several other black leaders met with university officials June 9 to present a list of 20 complaints.

"The only way we can achieve our goals is for you — the employees of Duke, the residents of Durham — to keep the heat on Duke," Lovett said.

John Edwards, executive director of the North Carolina Civic Education Project, said the coalition does not intend to struggle with the racism issue forever.

"We expect a response and if we don't get one, then we will get back together and take further actions. These further actions depend on what type of response we get from Duke."

Anxiety Test Created

DURHAM (AP) — People who become afraid for no reason at all, or who suddenly feel their heart beating fast or arms and legs trembling may suffer unknowingly from anxiety, says a Duke University psychiatrist.

William K. Zung has created a self-rating scale for anxiety that he says may disclose information patients can use when seeking medical help.

Patients are the best source of information about themselves, Zung said.

"In many medical illnesses, the patient doesn't have to tell the physician anything," he said. "The doctor can base his diagnosis on a physical exam and lab tests. But with psychiatric illnesses, you have to ask the patient questions."

The exam consists of a series of 20 statements about emotional or physical symptoms. The respondent is asked to indicate the degree to which each symptom is present.

"Self-rating scales are not meant to take the place of a doctor's diagnosis," Zung said. "They are merely tools to aid in diagnosis."

Sponge Invented

DURHAM (AP) — A husband and wife research team at Duke University have invented a cleaning sponge that can clean "everything from engine blocks to babies' bottoms."

Joseph Bonaventura, director of the Marine Biomedical Center at Beaufort, and his wife, Celia, said The Simple Green Sponge was developed under contract with Sunshine Makers Inc. of California.

Bonaventura said the synthetic sponge incorporates a cleanser called Simple Green.

"The Simple Green Sponge is more effective than most sponges because the cleaning substance is actually part of the make-up of the plastic in the sponge," he said. "It isn't just a sponge that has been dipped in a cleaning agent."

Relief May Be Stalled

MONROE (AP) — Scattered rainfall during the past month in drought-stricken parts of North Carolina may have jeopardized federal disaster aid relief for some farmers — at least for now, officials say.

"You can't determine the loss as of now," said Tom Morgan, who heads the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service office in Union County. "The only thing we can do is wait and appraise the situation at a later date... wait until at least nearer to harvest date."

"If I had to make an appraisal today, I don't think we would qualify for disaster aid," he said.

Rainstorms that battered parts of the state for three days last week dropped between 1.5 and 1.75 inches on the southern and central Piedmont, weather officials said — barely putting a dent in the severe drought afflicting the area. The Piedmont is lagging about 8 inches behind in rainfall this year, they said.

But the water helped some recently planted crops — with the result that counties hoping to be declared national disaster areas may have to wait to apply for funds, officials said.

The delay until harvest-time may hurt some farmers more than others.

"The rain is so spotted — Some areas have had a good amount of rain, some areas haven't," said farmer Junior Cauthen of Monroe.

"I think we should try (for aid now). I don't know how lucky we'd be."

Martin To Hit Rails

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin, recreating a successful 1984 campaign trip, will travel across the state by train in the waning days of his re-election campaign, officials said.

Paul Shumaker, political director for the Martin campaign, told The News and Observer of Raleigh that the campaign had tentatively scheduled the three-day run from Asheville to Morehead City for Oct. 24-26. That's two weeks before voters choose between Martin and his opponent, Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

Jordan apparently is planning to use a different mode of transportation for a segment of his campaign — He'll drive a truck from his Mount Gilead lumber company.

"We might use a truck from Jordan Lumber in as many places as possible," said Phil Wells, Jordan's campaign press secretary. "We think that would be a great way to send him across the state in the fall."

Jordan, hoping to stress his business background, drove a Jordan Lumber truck to the Capitol in January for a campaign rally.

State Ranks First In Incidents Of Racial Bias, Survey Shows

WILMINGTON (AP) — North Carolina led all states with 33 incidents involving ethnic and racial bias in 1987, according to a Klanwatch Project survey out of Montgomery, Ala.

Klanwatch listed a Nov. 29 march in Wilmington by about 85 members of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan as one of the incidents. Five spectators were arrested at the march.

The survey lists violent crimes, arson and demonstrations that are believed to be racially motivated.

The Klanwatch Intelligence Report newsletter printed the data with the disclaimer that, because law enforcement agencies do not have a formal system to report bias crimes, the statistics are inherently incomplete. The data was gathered from newspapers, police reports and confidential sources and does not include private meetings and rallies of organized groups.

Klanwatch director Pat Clark said Monday that North Carolina is usually among the leading states in the survey.

"There's definitely more going on in North Carolina than most states," she said. "North Carolina, Georgia and Florida are the big states now, and out of those three, North Carolina has the most sophisticated organization."

Georgia was second in the survey with 27 incidents and Florida was fourth with 14. The group reported that no racial incidents occurred in 15 states.

Ms. Clark said her organization is still investigating Kenny Marlowe's claim that he was beaten by a group of whites on Oct. 31. Marlowe, a black Brunswick County man, was injured in an apparent truck accident in Brunswick County. Marlowe claimed the white men pulled out his teeth.

The State Bureau of Investigation looked into the incident and reported no evidence to support Marlowe's claim.

Klanwatch, an arm of the Southern Poverty Law Center, also cited the slayings of three white men who were believed to be homosexual. Ms. Clark said the triple-murder, which took place Jan. 17, 1987 in Shelby, was included in the survey because it is believed to be the act of a white supremacist group.

"Gays are also targets of this group, as well as Jews," Clark said.

Ms. Clark said North Carolina has an unusually high number of supremacist organizations, most of them in the western and middle part of the state.

She said Glenn Miller's emergence in North Carolina as leader of the White Patriot Party was a major reason the state is high in racial incidents. Although Miller was sentenced to jail in January, Ms. Clark said members of his party have resurfaced in other organizations.

The survey showed the states with no racial or ethnic incidents in 1987 were Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Iowa, Wyoming, South Dakota, Minnesota, North Dakota, Oregon, Nevada, New Mexico, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Delaware.

Ms. Clark said the amount of violent supremacist activity nationwide has increased since 1981, although the organized groups have been losing members.

She estimates 20,000 Americans are hard-core supremacists, with about 10 sympathizers for every member.

PTL Treasures To Be Valued

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — An appraiser will begin today setting prices on valuables ranging from dollar bills to fur coats that were stashed in a vault at Heritage USA.

PTL bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton said the items, which were donated by supporters over a 10-year period, will be auctioned in early August to raise money for the ailing television ministry.

"I don't know of a more critical time to use these gifts than right now as we try to undergo the reorganization," Benton told a reporter Monday, as he examined a bag of coins taken from a 15-by-16-foot vault at the World Outreach Center.

The vault, at first glance, looked like any other storage closet. Old black-and-green file cabinets lined the walls, a white plastic bag was tossed in a corner, cartons and wood boxes almost touched the ceiling.

A closer look showed valuable coins and dollars in some file cabinets. A complete set of flatware filled one wooden box. And furs were strewn across some cartons.

INSPECTING THE WRECKAGE — Transportation department safety board members examine the wreckage of a single-engine Piper Cherokee which crashed at 9:30 p.m. Friday in Winston-Salem. Employees at the Jepsen Burns Corp. plant, where the plane crashed, have returned to work after patching the roof. The plant manufactures airplane seat covers. Two Winston-Salem couples died in the crash, which occurred shortly after they took off for a weekend trip to the beach. (AP Laserphoto)

Questions Are Raised About State Office

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Office of Administrative Hearings is an unusual piece of the state bureaucracy, operating free of direct control from the legislative, executive or judicial branches of government.

"There's nobody watching the store," Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, said.

But state Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, who sponsored 1985 legislation calling for a quasi-judicial staff to hear appeals from people unhappy with the decisions made by other state agencies, said some state senators were jealous of the success of the office.

"I don't think the Senate can get over something that's been as popular and successful as the Office of Administrative Hearings," he said. "They didn't have a heck of a lot to do with it."

When Bob Melott, the director of the office, wanted to help some top employees learn how to dress for work, he paid a clothing consultant $350 to teach them.

For IBM computer training for two staffers, he sent them to a seminar in San Juan, P.R., costing the state more than $1,000 in airfare alone.

And in the past 2½ years, he's promoted one staff member three times, increasing her salary from $19,800 in 1986 to $33,900.

Melott categorically defended those and other expenditures made since his office opened in 1986.

"Anyone who draws the conclusion there's anything improper or questionable about anything that's been done in the Office of Administrative Hearings, they are either misinformed or they do not know all the facts," Melott said.

Fine Tuning

Small Details Have Big Impact

Sometimes small but significant details get drowned out by the hum of politics.

One of these seemingly minute items was a bill approved by the 1988 N.C. General Assembly that transferred the office of the controller of the state Board of Education to the Department of Public Instruction, effective February 1989. That legislation, engineered by Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, will ease a longstanding turf war between the state superintendent and controller that stifled progress.

Now lawmakers need to go one step further. They should make the state superintendent of public instruction an appointed, not an elected, official. That position should be filled by a professional educator selected in a non-political manner by a balanced non-partisan authority.

But moving the controller to the department of public instruction can make at least one aspect of the state bureaucracy more efficient and more responsive to the state's education needs. That adjustment will mean better housekeeping for the department of public instruction.

Currently, the controller and the superintendent report separately to the state Board of Education. Picture it: two individuals, both powerful, both responsible for financial planning. One holds the purse strings. The other holds policy-setting reins.

This setup is a ready-made stage for conflict, and that stage often has erupted into fighting. And although political egos have been frequently wounded in the battle, the real victim has been the state's education system. Consider the inefficient effects of this conflict:

- Fiscal procedures were developed in isolation from program goals and objectives.
- Local education agencies often received conflicting answers from superintendent and controller's offices. Interpretations of policies varied.
- The controller's office and superintendent's office attributed errors to each other to avoid accepting responsibility for mistakes. The separate system fosters this approach.
- The structure has set a precedent for separation of fiscal and program responsibility at the local level, which has encouraged similar disruption there.

Under the reorganization, the state superintendent will be responsible for both monetary and program functions. This new setup provides the state board, a policy-making governing body, with a strong executive officer empowered to carry out policies.

That can mean no more duplication or overlap in services, more accountability and no more bickering over power — the division of responsibility is clear. Consequently, improvements in education not possible under the current structure are attainable.

This fine-tuning of a seemingly picky point is important in a state where education exerts a significant influence in progress. North Carolina has played catch-up with its public school system too long; to foster an excellent education system requires good planning and flexibility.

A more clearly-defined structure at the state public instruction level moves the state toward that goal. And in 1989, legislators should press closer by backing appointment, not election of the state superintendent.

Child Care Issue Grows Up

WASHINGTON — Politicians are not the only people in this election year with a growing interest in child care as a hot new item in employee benefits.

A new survey by the American Society for Personnel Administration shows that nearly half of the nation's employers are now actively exploring some form of child-care help for their workers. Like the politicians, however, there is no real consensus on the best way to provide it.

The abundance of study committees is somewhat misleading. According to ASPA, only 10 percent of companies actually provide employees with any assistance in caring for their children. And somewhat predictably, given the current debate in Congress, there was overwhelming opposition to the idea of legislation requiring such assistance. On the question of parental leave, for example, the survey showed that 83 percent of those surveyed said their employers opposed any attempt by the government to mandate paid parental leave; 69 percent said their companies would oppose mandated unpaid leave.

The child-care survey comes at a time when Democrats and Republicans are competing for the "family issue." Congressional Democrats have proposed legislation designed to provide lower-income workers with government-created or government-subsidized child-care centers. Republicans are looking at ways to provide tax incentives to employers to provide child-care facilities.

The Reagan administration has not taken a stand on the issue, although Labor Secretary Ann D. McLaughlin has been prodding a somewhat reluctant White House to consider some form of tax credit for employees as well as other employer-targeted tax incentives. Neither George Bush nor Michael Dukakis has spelled out a child-care proposal, but Bush is known to lean toward employer tax incentives and Dukakis has been a supporter of the Democratic approach on Capitol Hill.

The ASPA survey, which is one of the first major gauges of employer interest to emerge during the current debate, shows that only 19 percent of the personnel administrators surveyed believed their company was doing an adequate job in meeting the child-care needs of their employees. A majority of those surveyed — 57 percent — said they thought their companies were doing a "less than adequate" job.

The biggest single obstacle to providing child-care help to workers, according to the survey, was the cost. Perhaps more surprising is that there is an almost equal concern with the problem of employer liability should any accident or abuse occur to children attending a company-operated or company-subsidized day-care program. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the chief sponsor of the business-backed child-care legislation now before Congress, has insisted he will oppose any child-care bill that does not deal with the liability issue.

But the biggest obstacle to employer-provided child care still appears to be the employer, according to the survey.

ASPA said 49 percent of the human-resources executives cited "lack of commitment from top management," and 40 percent say there is a "lack of evidence about the long-term company benefits that child-care services can provide."

Just A DC 10 & A Snow Blower

The story of how Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson made up last week has now leaked out. This is what happened according to sources who were close to the scene.

Members of the Dukakis staff sat down with Jackson at a round table not because Dukakis put any significance in this shape, but he found that one was cheaper.

The Dukakis man spoke first, "Jesse, we're ready to deal and to make up for any embarrassment we have caused you. What do you want?"

"Nothing. I'm just happy to serve my party as a simple worker in the fields."

"You're a good man, Jesse Jackson."

"On the other hand," Jesse said, "if you expect me to campaign for you I would like a DC 10 for myself and my staff."

"Jesse, no one deserves his own plane any more. If we give you a DC 10, will you bury the hatchet?"

"No, there is more," Jesse said. "I want my own TV show on prime time, and if Dukakis is elected I get to give the State of the Union speech to Congress."

"No problem with that." "I would also like to use the White House tennis court tomorrow."

"Jesse, we can't ask President Reagan to let you use the White House courts."

Jesse said, "I knew you people weren't serious about wanting to make up with me. OK, I have another demand. When Dukakis meets with Gorbachev I get in the picture."

"Sure, Jesse. It will just be the three of you."

"But I don't want Bentsen in the picture. He took my job. I could have been a contender if it hadn't been for him."

"That's why we're trying to make it up to you. But this pact not only requires you to be nice to Dukakis but also to Bentsen."

"If that's the case, I'm going to up my demands. I'm not making an agreement unless I get a stretch limousine to take me to the Atlanta airport."

"We can't agree to that. Mike Dukakis goes to and from the airport on a city bus, and he would have a fit if he knew he was paying for your limo."

"You owe me a lot for not telling me when Dukakis chose his VP."

"Jesse, we have a proposal to make it up to you. Suppose we offered you second spot on the ticket?"

"You just selected Bentsen. How are you going to put me on the ticket?"

"We're not talking about our ticket. We're talking about George Bush's ticket. He's still looking for a running mate, and you would make a fine candidate."

"Why would George want me on his ticket?"

"Because you've proven yourself a vote getter and an electrifying speaker. You could tear down the house in New Orleans if George announced you as his running mate. Don't forget — it's either Dole or Jack Kemp or you. You're by far the best man."

"I don't want to be Bush's running mate."

"Then what do you want?" Jackson said, "I'll shut up if you give me Dukakis' snow blower."

Gifted Teachers & Restructuring: Education's Answers?

WASHINGTON — The president of the American Federation of Teachers, reacting to criticism that America's public schools are turning out graduates who lack even the entry-level skills required by modern industry, has called for "a complete restructuring" of the schools.

The problem with American schools, he told a government-sponsored conference on "Building a Quality Workforce," is not that they are less competent than they used to be but that they are charged with educating children who at earlier times would have been expected to quit school and go to work.

If we are to equip virtually all our children with the skills business will increasingly require, we need more than mere "school reform," Shanker told a roundtable at Washington's Hyatt-Regency hotel.

Does he have specifics in mind as to what a restructured school might look like?

Shanker isn't committed to any particular model, he says, but a West German school recently visited by a delegation of AFT vice presidents, illustrates one possibility.

The Koln-Holweide school in Cologne serves the sort of population so many American schools have found it difficult to educate. Its enrollment comprises children from a wide range of social classes and ability groups and also has a significant minority component (a third of its students are Turkish).

'The Koln-Holweide school in Cologne serves the sort of population so many American schools have found it difficult to educate. Its enrollment comprises children from a wide range of social classes and ability groups ...'

"Yet," says a report in the spring issue of American Educator, the journal of the AFT, "only 1 percent of the school's students drop out, compared to a national West German average of 14 percent; and 60 percent of its students score sufficiently well on high-school exit exams to be admitted to a four-year college, compared to a national average of only 27 percent. Moreover, the school suffers practically no truancy, hardly any teacher absenteeism and only minor discipline problems."

The fount of this miracle: "Restructuring."

Some aspects of the restructured school will be familiar to American educators: peer tutoring, small study groups, cooperative learning. But some of the changes are profound.

The single teacher of a self-contained classroom doesn't exist at Koln-Holweide. Instead, teachers work as six-member teams and jointly assume responsibility for the education of a class of 27 to 30 students.

"Our teachers are responsible not merely for teaching their subjects but for the total education of their students, for making sure that their students succeed personally and academically," the school's principal, Anne Ratzki, told Shanker and members of the AFT staff.

"This requires us to cast our net broadly and involve ourselves in many things. We eat with the students, counsel them on personal and academic issues, determine their class schedules, tailor their curricula, help to broaden their interests by offering special lunchtime activities, talk with their parents."

The team also makes all the instructional decisions, including curriculum and pedagogy, whether a particular class can be handled in a single period or requires a longer session, when to call in social workers — everything.

And perhaps as important as anything, the team stays with a single class for six years — from the time the students enter Koln-Holweide in fifth grade until they graduate at the end of 10th grade.

New teachers — new to teaching or merely new to the special arrangements at Koln-Holweide — get a one-day briefing on the school's structure and procedures and then the team takes over.

"For the first two weeks, the new teachers simply observe their teammates and the working of the (small cooperative study) groups," Ratzki explained. "When they begin teaching, their education and training will continue as they interact with the six or eight people of varied experience, with different certifications, and with very different ideas about teaching. They're regularly discussing their teaching, their students, their successes and failures...and here is this new teacher. It's a tremendous learning experience."

Koln-Holweide is one of a handful of special comprehensive schools that sprang up (sound familiar?) after the 1963 publication of "German Educational Disaster," a best-selling critique of a national education system that served the middle-class students reasonably well but left the rest unequipped for the modern German work force.

That is no longer the case at Koln-Holweide.

There are, of course, outstanding schools in America, many of them succeeding in unlikely circumstances. But here, the success is usually attributable to a particularly gifted principal or teacher.

Koln-Holweide represents a system that can produce success with ordinary teachers.

As Shanker notes, it may not be the only possible "restructuring." But it most assuredly is an experiment worth the serious attention of America's troubled educators and a business community that complains of graduates unfit for an increasingly complex work place.

Babies Still Booming In Third World Nations

Analysis

During a recent radio interview, the host introduced the subject of world population by saying: "Well, it looks like that population thing is back with us again. Hey, tell me, Mr. Haub — what happened?"

The answer, unfortunately, is: Nothing — except that the subject disappeared from public consciousness. Back in the 1970s, the "crisis" of rapid world-population growth was a generally accepted fact. Mention it and listeners would gravely nod their heads and agree that "we" had a problem. Today, any such affirmation will only draw quizzical looks. "I thought that was under control!" is a typical response.

Far from it:
• Last year about 90 million people were added to the world population — more than in any previous year.

• The Third World is not experiencing the declines in fertility that demographers had projected. In some major developing countries birth rates are no longer declining and family-planning programs have lost momentum.

• As a result, most demographers now feel that future growth will be closer to the "high path" described in U.N. projections — approximately 1 billion people every 10 years.

Moreover, the most rapid growth is taking place in areas that can afford it least. About half a billion people are seriously undernourished worldwide and two dozen countries actually saw their per-capita daily calorie supply decrease from 1965 to 1985. While many countries of Asia and Latin America have been able to improve their food prospects — although still meager by developed-nation standards — Africa's has fallen behind its population growth.

The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) has projected that between 36 and 64 countries will experience critical food problems by the year 2000. Even India, whose efforts to increase production have been justifiably hailed as heroic, has a lower food-grain output per capita now than it did in 1900.

A landmark FAO study in 1981 estimated that Third World countries have the potential to feed medium-scenario projections, but the "ifs" are daunting. Virtually all potentially usable land would have to come under the plow — a process that would take 800 years at the present rate and require an agricultural revolution entailing massive and expensive inputs of equipment, fertilizers and water.

Some local problems are especially grave. Haiti must cope with virtually complete deforestation; Egypt with encroaching desert, burgeoning cities and sporadic bread riots; Bangladesh with the need for additional land for its swelling rural population — without any more land available.

Thanks to growing global interdependence, even the richest nations are not immune. Air pollution, for example, is now much worse in Third World countries than in the industrialized nations. The addition of another billion people can only aggravate that problem — which ignores national boundaries.

Despite all this, most Americans seem unaware of the demographic situation. Each year, my colleague Mary Kent and I gather statistics for our organization's annual World Population Data Sheet. We are often not prepared for the reaction the numbers receive. Almost without exception, reporters and talk-show hosts express surprise, even suspicious incredulity, that world population is "still" growing rapidly, that the population "bomb" has not been defused.

Human numbers first reached the 1-billion mark around 1800, after a journey of hundreds of thousands of years that was often, quite literally, a struggle for the survival of the species. Even then, mortality was very high. By 1900, gains in life expectancy helped fuel faster growth; the second billion was reached by 1930.

Following World War II, improved health measures spread rapidly to Third World countries. Their death rates began to decline with little or no accompanying decline in the birth rate, and population growth really took off. The 3-billion population of 1960 became 5 billion in 1987 and may be 6 billion by 1997. Hence the term "explosion."

That is not, however, a fit metaphor for reality. A bomb image suggests that on one day the world is not overpopulated and on the next it is. Population growth, however, moves more in the fashion of a glacier, with a ponderous momentum of its own. Every now and then an iceberg breaks off with a splash loud enough to make headlines.

The warnings sounded by such books as Paul Ehrlich's "Population Bomb" in 1968 were coincidental with the peak rate of world-population growth, about 2 percent annually. That rate may seem paltry; but if continued, it will double a population every 35 years. Prospects seemed sufficiently grim to Ehrlich that he introduced his book with the sentence, "The battle to feed all of humanity is over." Was this a premature pronouncement? Today, most observers would think so.

Still the prospects are unsettling. With its 1978 assessment of world-population trends, the United Nations published an illustrative projection showing that, if birth rates at that time remained constant, world population would reach 80 billion by 2100 and 150 billion by 2125 — and still be growing rapidly. Clearly, such a huge expansion of human numbers would greatly overburden the world's capacities even in the eyes of the most ardent optimist. Moreover — and this is the key point — huge additions to the world's population are still possible even when birth rates subside somewhat.

Today, 1.2 billion people live in the industrialized countries where birth rates are quite low. Population growth is virtually over in Europe and will likely slow to a halt in the other countries, although immigration will continue to play a role in a few. A possible exception is the Soviet Union, which has been encouraging births, apparently with some success.

For the developing countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America, however, the picture is very different. These countries now contain 3.9 billion people, and fertility levels of five, six, seven or more children per woman are common. When will their population-growth rates approach the low rates of their wealthier neighbors?

So world population continues to grow as expected, or a little faster, whether it is acceptable as a topic of conversation or not. One thing is certain: The next one or two decades will tell the tale. Meanwhile, those of us in the wealthy minority of world society can afford to debate whether the situation is or is not of crisis proportions — and then go home to a nice dinner. The less fortunate cannot.

Carl Haub is director of demographic analysis and public information for the Population Reference Bureau Inc.

What Is Meese's Problem?

WASHINGTON — Having once again dodged the bullet of criminal prosecution, Attorney General Edwin Meese gives new breadth to the term "chutzpah" with his indignant cries of foul over the conclusion of the McKay report. Not content that his protective amulet — the lack of significant personal profit from the schemes of his longtime cronies (most notably E. Bob Wallach) — has worked again, or with the deft spin control of his well-timed and long-overdue resignation, Meese now rails at the fact that independent counsel James McKay exercised his prosecutorial discretion, giving Meese the benefit of the doubt on four technical violations of law. In short, Meese complains that McKay was out of bounds for having the temerity to explain why he opted not to prosecute.

The exercise of appropriate discretion in determining whether to file criminal charges is an essential aspect of prosecutorial craft. Every day, for a host of practical and humane reasons, competent prosecutors exercise their discretion against prosecuting individuals caught up in the criminal law process. Clearly, not everyone who runs afoul of a federal statute should be prosecuted. Had Meese spent more time acquainting himself with the workings of the Justice Department, he would know this. The only difference in Meese's case is that the reasons for the exercise of prosecutorial discretion are made public.

McKay's decision to explain the reasons for his exercise of discretion against prosecuting Meese on four largely technical potential violations — involving income tax and conflict of interest — is justified by the statute that created the office of independent counsel, and it was sanctioned by the three-judge panel that reviewed the report. Moreover, it provides an appropriate measure of accountability for the office of independent counsel. The public deserves a formal statement explaining why prosecution was not initiated even though federal laws may have been violated. Public confidence in the workings of a special prosecutor's office and clarity of the historical record require no less.

This is not to say that McKay has earned immunity from criticism of the workings of his office. In the view of many, he took too long carrying out his tasks, spent too much and relied too little on the advice of lawyers with more extensive criminal-law experience. A case in point is the fiasco when McKay went to the White House claiming the sky was about to fall over the Iraqi pipeline matter — and his subsequent failure to obtain the testimony of Bruce Rappaport, a key player in the pipeline episode.

In the end, a just decision not to prosecute an unpopular target in a notorious case required courage and self-confidence. The distinction between criminal conduct deserving of prosecution, on the one hand, and inept, unethical and insensitive behavior, on the other, is well demonstrated here. One cannot find fault with McKay's decision based on the facts he was able to develop. Meese has no valid complaint.

A Sigh Of Relief

BAGHDAD, Iraq — After Iran announced last week that it had accepted a cease-fire in its nearly eight-year-old war with Iraq, an official in Kuwait said that the news had been received there with "an immense collective sigh of relief."

The official's remark reflected opinion not only in that tiny sheikdom but throughout the Arab states, militarily weak but wealthy in oil, that line the western shore of the Persian Gulf.

Western analysts are expecting the incipient truce to have repercussions far beyond the two warring nations — if the overtures lead to real and lasting peace. One of the most impor-

Dukakis Hears Veto Critics; Bush Talks Ethics

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Michael Dukakis was taking some heat at home over veto decisions as running mate Lloyd Bentsen tended to tax-writing chores and Vice President George Bush tried to distance himself from the ethics problems of the Reagan administration.

Key political deliberations were also going on at the White House as President Reagan consults with Republican congressional leaders on his threat to veto legislation requiring companies to give workers 60 days' notice of plant closings and layoffs. The Democrats have made the plant-closing measure a campaign issue.

Dukakis, carrying out his duties as Massachusetts governor while campaigning as the Democratic nominee for president, was spending most of today at his Statehouse office.

He faces legislative unrest over some of the $138 million in spending he vetoed from the state's fiscal 1989 budget. But he was upbeat Monday afternoon after a meeting with the administration's top budget officer and House Speaker George Keeverian, declaring "all is well."

Dukakis planned to break for a law-and-order appearance in Boston, visiting a new police post at a downtown subway stop to swear in six new members of the state transit police.

He met for an hour Monday with Hungarian Prime Minister Karoly Grosz before the communist leader headed to Washington to meet President Reagan.

Bentsen returns to his duties as chairman of the Finance Committee today when the panel begins writing a bill to correct errors and make changes in the 1986 tax overhaul.

Bush said in advance of a speech today to congressional interns that he would propose a new ethics code containing "high standards" to prevent conflicts of interest for all federal officials, including members of Congress.

He said he also would strengthen the Office of Government Ethics by putting it in the White House.

The speech comes less than a week after Democrats used their convention to bash the Reagan administration on the ethics issue. More than 100 administration officials have faced allegations of impropriety since Reagan and Bush took office in 1981.

Sheila Tate, Bush's press secretary, said he was proposing stronger ethics rules because "he's concerned that young people not be turned off by the idea of government service."

Discussing today's White House meeting on plant closings, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan probably would veto the bill but no final decision had been made.

The administration's stand on the issue has been repeatedly assailed by Democrats, who say employers owe it to workers to tell them when they are about to lose their jobs. Reagan says business should have the "flexibility" to close plants and lay off workers without the 60 days' notice.

Bush, certain to win his party's nomination at the Republican Convention next month, has stated sentiments similar to Reagan's on the issue. There have been reports, however, that the Bush campaign would prefer to see the president let the bill become law to ease the political heat on Bush.

Bentsen's dual campaigns for vice president and the Senate have caused a temporary setback for the Dukakis campaign. Some $46 million in public money for the campaign is being held up because of a complaint from the National Republican Senatorial Committee. The Federal Election Commission planned to begin reviewing the issue today.

The Republican complaint says any money Bentsen spends on his Senate re-election bid in Texas will directly benefit the Democrats' presidential ticket and give it an unfair advantage. An unusual Texas law permits Bentsen to seek both offices simultaneously.

Bentsen's Double Campaigns Snag Dukakis Financing

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some $46 million in public money to finance Michael Dukakis' Democratic presidential campaign is being held up temporarily by a tangle over running mate Lloyd Bentsen's dual campaigns for vice president and the Senate.

The National Republican Senatorial Committee filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission alleging that any money Bentsen spends on his Senate re-election bid in Texas will directly benefit the party's presidential ticket and give it an unfair advantage over the Republicans.

The FEC was considering the matter today. Commission spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said the commission has 10 days to decide how to handle the unprecedented issue.

The Dukakis campaign filed its request for the money late Friday, and the existence of the GOP complaint will add to the time it takes to release the federal campaign funds, she said.

Jann Olsten, executive director of the GOP Senate committee, said at a news conference Monday that Bentsen is poised to spend more than $4 million on his Senate re-election campaign at the same time he is running for vice president. An unusual Texas law permits Bentsen to seek both offices simultaneously.

"There is no denying that one (race) is going to impact the other," Olsten said. "A dollar spent by Senator Bentsen in Texas, whether for the Senate or the vice presidential campaign, is going to directly and immediately benefit both... It just isn't fair."

The 1976 law that created public financing for presidential campaigns stipulates that candidates who receive the federal money cannot accept private funds for their campaigns. The $46 million each for the Democratic and Republican tickets comes from a $1 check-off on individual income tax returns.

The NRSC, in a complaint filed Friday with the FEC, asked that the government withhold the federal campaign funds until it either bars the spending of Bentsen's Senate campaign chest or determines to count any Senate campaign spending against the $46 million limit.

Bentsen's Senate opponent, Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Texas, said at a Houston news conference that Bentsen intends to circumvent the law and should either bow out of the Senate race or not spend money raised for the Senate race.

"Nobody expects him to do either," Boulter said. "He wants it both ways."

Former Officials To Discuss Role In Meese Probe

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two former Justice Department officials whose resignations began an exodus from the agency say they look forward to telling Congress their role in triggering a 14-month criminal investigation of Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

During their appearance today before the Senate Judiciary Committee, former Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns and ex-criminal division chief William Weld also planned to discuss the reasons for their abrupt resignations on March 29.

Meese on Monday attacked Burns and Weld, saying they failed to conduct a "competent and thorough" departmental inquiry of Meese in the spring of 1987, resulting in the criminal probe by independent counsel James McKay.

Burns and Weld refused to comment, saying they looked forward to laying out the circumstances of the reviews which led to McKay's probe. McKay recently concluded that Meese "probably" broke criminal laws on four occasions, but the independent counsel did not seek an indictment.

Meese has announced he will resign, probably by mid-August, claiming he is "completely vindicated."

Burns and Weld have declined to say why they resigned, but department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, have said they felt Meese's continuing tenure in the face of McKay's investigation was hurting Justice Department operations and morale. Burns told President Reagan in a meeting after he resigned that a "malaise" had set in at the Justice Department, according to the sources.

In addition, Weld reportedly told Meese that if the decision were up to him, he would have sought an indictment of the attorney general. A wave of departures followed the Burns and Weld resignations, virtually emptying the offices of deputy attorney general and criminal division chief.

In a speech at the National Press Club, Meese declared that "the evidence now shows that if a competent and thorough preliminary investigation had been directed by the then-deputy attorney general and the former head of the criminal division, there would likely have been no cause for referral to an independent counsel." The attorney general did not refer to Burns and Weld by name.

Meese said the decision to launch a criminal investigation of him was based on "hearsay" from executives of the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. who had pleaded guilty to felony charges.

He said that neither he nor his longtime friend, E. Robert Wallach, who is under indictment for alleged racketeering in the Wedtech scandal, was interviewed during the inquiries overseen by Burns and Weld. However, both Meese and Wallach had been questioned earlier as part of U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani's probe of Wedtech.

In the spring of 1987, Burns and Weld oversaw initial inquiries by the Justice Department's public integrity section into Meese's involvement with Wedtech.

Federal law enforcement sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, say the integrity section found sufficient evidence to warrant further investigation of Meese for possible violations of a law barring acceptance of gratuities.

Drought Helps Swamp Survive

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

FOLKSTON, Ga. (AP) — The drought that has forced Okefenokee Swamp's wildlife to gather near deeper pools and its alligators to engage in cannibalism, is necessary for the survival of the swamp, a parks official says.

"The swamp has tolerated drought for thousands of years. Drought is a part of the biological process that creates open water areas and marsh areas," said John Schroer, manager of the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge.

Swamp vegetation dries out during a drought, increasing the chance of wildfire ignited by lightning. But, Schroer said, wildfires are necessary because they burn off floating islands of peat, which eventually can turn into dry land. Indians dubbed the swamp "the land of the trembling earth" because of the undulating peat.

In 1954 and 1955, fires raged for 12 months, burning 80 percent of the swamp, and fires in the 1840s created some of the Okefenokee's lakes by burning large holes in the peat.

"If it weren't for the natural wildfires that have occurred throughout history, the swamp would not be a swamp," said Schroer. "It would be a forest."

The peat floats to the surface of the swamp's reflective tea-colored water, forming islands that support vegetation. Eventually trees begin growing in the peat, sinking their roots into the swamp's sandy bottom. The islands get larger and larger, and without fires, they could be transformed into forests.

The 700-square-mile swamp in southeastern Georgia and northeastern Florida is home to many types of animals, including rare birds, fish, poisonous snakes and alligators. Many exotic plants also thrive, including orchids, lilies, cypress trees and carnivorous pitcher plants. President Franklin D. Roosevelt designated most of the swamp a national wildlife refuge in 1937.

The drought has caused wildlife to congregate near water holes, Schroer said.

Drug Ring Leader Arrested

MIAMI (AP) — A Briton dubbed the "Marco Polo of drug trafficking" was arrested on a federal indictment charging 22 people with running a worldwide hashish and marijuana smuggling ring based in Asia, authorities said.

The indictment accuses all 22 defendants of racketeering, including ringleader Dennis Howard Marks, interim U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen told a news conference Monday.

Marks, 42, was arrested Monday in Madrid, Spain, with his wife, Judith, and fellow Briton Geoffrey Kenion.

Marks was previously acquitted of drug charges in England after falsely claiming he worked for MI5, the British counterintelligence agency, Lehtinen said.

Marks, an Oxford University graduate and a London resident, operated all over the world, authorities said.

"He was the Marco Polo of drug trafficking," said Thomas Cash, head of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's Miami office.

The ring led by Marks for 17 years shipped marijuana from Thailand and hashish from Pakistan, authorities said. It operated in England, West Germany, the Netherlands, Spain, Portugal, Australia, Singapore, Hong Kong, the United States and other countries.

"They shipped in ton quantities, thousands of tons," said Lehtinen. The ring had its own ship and amassed $30 million in property that the U.S. government now wants confiscated, he said.

The traffickers laundered money through banks and corporations around the world, officials said.

Lehtinen said he expected Spain to quickly extradite the Markses, Kenion and William Roger Reaves, who was arrested several weeks ago in that country.

More arrests were expected, including some in the United States, Lehtinen said.

Several of the people indicted were Marks' relatives.

Mindy Duncan New Miss Teen USA; Calif. Entry Disqualified

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — The Miss Teen USA pageant crowned a petite redhead who wants to help child victims of drug or alcohol abuse, but disqualified a contestant and declined to say why. The winner of Monday night's nationally televised pageant was 16-year-old Mindy Duncan of Hillsboro, Ore.

"It's wonderful," said the Newberg High School student. "It's a feeling you can't explain."

Miss Duncan, a 5-foot, 3-inch enthusiast of dancing, running and water skiing, said it is her ambition to work with children who suffer drug or alcohol problems. She has done some of this work as a volunteer.

Midway through Monday night's proceedings, officials began referring to 50 contestants instead of the 51 initially entered.

No formal announcement of the disqualification of Miss Teen California, 16-year-old Alison Moreno of El Toro, was made until reporters questioned the change in the number of contestants.

Roger Neal, a pageant spokesman, said in a brief statement that Miss Moreno broke a pageant rule. She was allowed to participate in the CBS-TV broadcast but was dropped from eligibility.

Later, a newspaper reporter who persisted in attempting to determine why Miss Moreno was declared ineligible was escorted from the pageant site by security guards and told not to return.

Pageant officials said the matter of eligibility rested between the pageant and Miss Moreno, and declined to elaborate, citing her age.

TV personality Dick Clark and actress Tracy Scoggins were hosts of the pageant, whose contestants ranged from ages 15-18.

Miss Duncan succeeds Kristi Addis of Holcolm, Miss., and wins $150,000 in cash and prizes, including a Jeep, jewelry, a mink coat and mink jacket, exercise equipment and an electronic keyboard.

This year's four runners-up were: Jessica Collins of Amsterdam, N.Y.; Amy Pietsch of Ringgold, La.; Kathleen McClellan of Bloomington, Ill.; and Anna Mingus of Enterprise, Ala.

Mayor Impeachment

ANDALUSIA, Ala. (AP) — A judge has scheduled an impeachment trial for an 85-year-old mayor who last week donned a turban and rubber snakes while declaring "National Voodoo Week."

But an attorney for Florala Mayor H.T. Mathis said the trial is moot because the mayor's four-year term ends Oct. 3.

Covington County Circuit Judge William Baldwin on Monday refused to dismiss charges of neglect of duty, corruption and incompetency, and set an Aug. 29 trial date.

CHOLERA OUTBREAK - A child stricken with cholera rests at the Teg Bahadur Hospital in the eastern district of New Delhi, India. At least 140 people have died of the disease since it broke out in early July. Doctors said Monday that the disease is spreading to new areas. (AP Laserphoto)

Many Children Among India Cholera Victims

By DILIP GANGULY
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The children lay in the makeshift hospital ward with bloodstains on their little hands caused by needles from intravenous injections.

Some were moaning. Others just watched fearfully as nurses adjusted hand straps, checked sodium chloride drips, consoled anxious mothers.

The 23 children at Teg Bahadur Hospital are the latest stricken by an epidemic of gastro-enteritis and cholera that officials say is spreading to new areas of the Indian capital.

The city administration reported 13 more deaths from the diseases Monday, bringing the death toll to 143 since the epidemic broke out in early July. At least 78 others have died in nearby Punjab and Uttar Pradesh states.

The Delhi administration ordered an emergency inoculation program to halt the diseases, which spread as contaminated floodwater from monsoon rains seeps into pipes and wells.

A total of 1,211 new cases were reported from nine areas in New Delhi on Monday. Most of the cases earlier were reported from only two neighborhoods. Half a million people live in the nine affected areas.

More than 3,200 people, mostly children, already are hospitalized with gastro-enteritis and cholera in New Delhi, city health figures show.

Dr. T.S. Rana, a private physician with a clinic in the impoverished Nand Nagri section, said the number of cases may be greater than reported.

"At least four to five people are dying of cholera from this area daily who are not reported," he said.

"People here do not have money to take patients to hospitals," he said. "They try the local doctors and then just pray, and cholera is a disease which does not respond to prayer."

Nand Nagri, east of the Yamuna River, was the first area hit by the epidemic and is worst-affected. It has 50,000 residents.

Pyare Lal, whose two-room house in Nand Nagri is serving as a make-do inoculation center, blamed the crisis on fate and on uncaring officials.

"It may be a curse for our sins and apathy on the part of municipal staff that we have this disease," he said.

Lal said garbage was not collected for the past four or five months after a dispute between the Delhi Development Authority and the Municipal Corp. over which agency was responsible for the slum areas.

The two government bodies blamed each other for the epidemic. Health officials say rain water flowing through garbage and sewage into shallow wells is spreading the diseases in the congested slums.

Health officials ordered city wells shut off and water tanked in. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi toured the area last week and ordered emergency garbage-clearance efforts.

Still, on Monday heaps of garbage stood in front of the Nand Nagri inoculation camp as women drew water from a well 30 feet away.

"Frankly speaking, the situation is out of our hands. The damage has been done, we are just trying to check it," said Dr. Raj Saxena, a physician at the adjoining Sunder Nagri inoculation camp.

"We are inoculating 30 people an hour. ... But it seems it's not working," he said.

Health officials say more than 200,000 people have been inoculated in the city.

The areas hit by the epidemic are all slums built after 1975, when Gandhi's late brother Sanjay ordered demolition of slums within the city and offered residents 25-square-yard plots in outlying areas to the east.

Of New Delhi's 8 million people, 2.4 million people live in slums. A recent report said 25 percent of the destitute areas have no power supply, 49 percent no tap water, 32 percent no toilet facilities.

In Teg Bahadur Hospital, Dr. Sanjeev Singhal said in the special diarrhea ward Monday: "We are getting more and more cases, we are all working extra time."

In the temporary ward in the hospital canteen, mothers tried to brush flies from their children's faces. Rohtash Kumar, 18 months old, moaned in pain as nurses worked over him.

"He is so thin we could not find veins in his hands so we are trying his leg," said a nurse.

After several attempts, blood oozed out as the needle found a vein.

Troop Moves Debated As Truce Team Arrives

JOHN RICE

Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iran claimed Iraqi troops pushed further into Iranian territory today as a United Nations team arrived in Tehran to discuss a truce between the Persian Gulf enemies.

Iraq, after a series of sweeping attacks during the weekend, denied the claim and said it was moving its forces out of Iran and would take its dispute to the bargaining table.

Meanwhile, the National Liberation Army of Iran, an Iraqi-backed force opposed to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, claimed its forces had taken two Iranian towns and had marched 95 miles into Iran.

In New York, diplomats for both countries were preparing to meet Wednesday with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to discuss an end to the 8-year-old Gulf war.

A separate team of U.N. advisers arrived in Tehran today to begin working on the technical aspects of a truce. Lt. Gen. Martin Vadsset, the team leader, said he will explore ways to implement and maintain a cease-fire, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The agency, monitored in Cyprus, said the seven officials would remain in Tehran for three days, then fly to Baghdad.

Another team of U.N. experts is already in Tehran to determine the status of prisoners of war.

The peace moves were made possible after Iran announced July 18 that it accepted a U.N. resolution calling for a cease-fire. Iraq accepted the resolution shortly after it was adopted in July 1987.

But since then, Iraq has sought to take as many Iranian prisoners as possible, saying it captured more than 8,000 in three days in attacks that began Friday, apparently as a bargaining chip during peace talks.

A communique carried by the official Iraqi News Agency said Iraqi troops would "be withdrawn in line with our declared policy that we have no territorial ambitions in Iran."

Announcers on state-run Iraqi television said troops would pull back today from Qasr-e Shirin, Sumar and Sar-e Pol-e Zahab, all on the central war front.

A military spokesman said on Baghdad radio today that Iraqi forces had pulled out of Gilan-e Gharb in the morning and would soon withdraw from the other towns.

But the Iranian news agency said Iraqi troops thrust further into Iran early today and tried to take the town of Karand, 35 miles from the border, and the nearby town of Eslamabad.

It said Iranian fighters launched a counter-offensive and pushed the Iraqis out of Karand, killing or wounding hundreds, with the help of residents.

It said the Iraqis still held Eslamabad but Iranian forces were battling to free the town in "heavy fighting."

The deputy speaker of the Iranian Parliament, Mehdi Karrubi, announced the legislature was to be "temporarily closed so that the deputies may go to the war fronts," the Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

Paper Says Marcos Working On A Pay-To-Return Package

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ferdinand Marcos offered to give $5 billion to the Philippines and back President Corazon Aquino if he is allowed to return without being prosecuted, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

A Marcos spokesman in Hawaii called the $5 billion offer absurd.

The newspaper reported that the offer is part of a negotiations package being pursued by Marcos' aides that includes an offer to U.S. officials that he will promote national reconciliation in the Philippines if he isn't charged with wrongdoing in the United States.

"If there is no indictment, he will support the government of the Philippines," said Col. Arturo Aruiza at Marcos' Honolulu home in exile. "There will be a national reconciliation."

Representatives of Marcos are talking with Philippine officials, including Mrs. Aquino's brother Jose Cojuangco and Philippine Ambassador to the United States Emmanuel Peleaz, trying to work out the $5 billion deal, according to A. James Gregor, a University of California, Berkeley, political science professor.

Gregor, who has been in direct contact with the Marcos camp in Hawaii, and with U.S. officials in Washington, D.C., said Marcos has agreed to stay out of Filipino politics, stay out of the capital Manila and support Mrs. Aquino if he is allowed to return.

But the ousted ruler, accused of syphoning billions of dollars from the national treasury during his tenure as president, has asked that his son Ferdinand Marcos Jr. be allowed to run for political office, perhaps for governor of the family's home province of Ilocos Norte, Gregor said.

Asked about the $5 billion offer,

Pelaez said, "You have long ears. ... I'm not sure whether I can talk about it or not. I'd rather you didn't ask me."

Marcos' spokesman in Honolulu, Gemmo Trinidad, however, quoted Marcos as saying the report about a $5 billion offer "is totally absurd."

"The president (Marcos) told me negotiations are going on, but they do not involve any money," Trinidad told The Associated Press. He said he was not privy to information on who was participating in the negotiations.

Estimates of the amount of money allegedly diverted from the Philippine treasury by Marcos and his associates range from $1 billion to $10 billion.

The $5 billion offer was so high it reportedly caught Philippine officials by surprise and raised suspicions as to how much money he may have put away.

Base Talks Hit Snag

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippines broke off talks today with the United States on U.S. military bases and Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus said differences over compensation were so wide he doubted the talks could be revived.

Manglapus made the remark to reporters after a meeting with President Corazon Aquino during which he informed her the nearly 4-month-old talks were suspended indefinitely.

"I don't know whether the talks can resume ... but right now, our positions are so far apart that I don't think we can resume," he said.

Manglapus, head of the Philippine panel in the negotiations, said Mrs. Aquino "realizes that our position is a reasonable one and that we should stick to it." He declined to elaborate, saying revealing more details could create more difficulties.

PCMH Lawsuit Sent Back For New Trial

 Judge Herbert O. Phillips III of Morehead City then granted a summary judgment against Capital American Life in July of 1987 ordering it to pay the hospital $12,600 plus the cost of the court action.
 The insurance company had paid $12,600 directly to Smith.
 American Capitol Life appealed the decision, and the N.C. Court of Appeals announced three weeks ago it had vacated the lower court's decision and remanded the case to Civil Superior Court for another trial.
 If PCMH decides to pursue the matter, hospital attorney James T. Cheatham of Greenville said the case would likely be set for Pitt County court in the fall or winter.

Greenville attorney J. David Duffus Jr., counsel for Capital American Life, said he expected the appellate court to send the case back to civil court for a jury trial.

"Obviously, there were disputed issues of fact that a judge can't rule on," Duffus said. "The case can have some impact on the way insurance companies and health care providers do business in North Carolina."

There is currently no law in North Carolina that specifies what responsibilities insurance companies have when they receive an assignment of benefits from a policy holder. An assignment of benefits states whether the insurance company is to pay benefits directly to the policy holder or the health-care provider.

 The insurance company paid $12,600 to Smith, who kept the money. Duffus said the insurance company has met its entire obligation and it is up to Smith to pay the hospital.

Cheatham said the insurance company received the assignment of benefits directing payment to PCMH and should have paid the $12,600 to the hospital, not Smith.

According to an affidavit filed by Capital American Life Assistant Vice President Terri K. Johnson, the insurance company has a rule of paying directly to the policy holder, and while the assignment of benefits permits the insurance company to pay directly to the hospital, it does not require payment in such a manner.

 The new trial will also focus on whether Smith or his wife signed his name to forms sent to the insurance company, and, if she did, whether she had the authority to execute the assignment of benefits, Duffus said.
 Duffus filed an affidavit April 30, 1987, stating he had spoken by telephone with Smith's wife. According to the affidavit, Mrs. Smith said her husband was in intensive care Oct. 3, 1985, and unable to sign his name to the assignment of benefits, so she signed for him.
 The appellate court agreed that a summary judgment should not have been granted because there are disputed issues a jury should decide.

Medical Land-Use Zoning To Be Studied the largest employers in the city and that the average citizen is concerned about the growth of that area.

 "I think no one has looked at Greenville in the last few years and has not recognized that our future is tied to the development and delivery of medical services," he said.
 Carter expressed interest in the alternative proposal to rezone the land directly in front of the hospital to MD-3 and asked Woole whether he thought it might encourage the development of a Moye Boulevard extension.

there, who think we have sufficient land out there, to try to project 10 or 15 years in the future to what the needs are going to be for buildings and parking out there now," he said.

 "If you don't believe how badly this stuff can expand, look at the problems Chapel Hill is having. They're not much different than ours. We do have at least a unique opportunity to solve our problems."

Woole responded that MD-3 zoning there would in effect put office and institutional zoning immediately across from the hospital, forever limiting medical-use expansion in that direction.

Budget Omission Questioned

Fewer Privies

By GREG LAUDICK
 Reflector Staff Writer
 Although there are still many outhouses left in Pitt County, those numbers are slowly diminishing said one Pitt County official.
 Chief Sanitary for the Pitt County Health Department Willie Pate said although privies were once a common form of waste disposal, there numbers in the county are fading.
 "People anymore are using either septic tanks or inside plumbing for waste disposal," Pate said. "There was a big campaign in the 1950's to have them built and it would be hard to say what state most of them are in now."
 Pate's comments came on the heels of a recent study which indicate at least 50,000 to as many as 100,000 North Carolinians still rely on outhouses.
 According to Connie Price, planning director for the Mideast Commission, most substandard housing in Pitt County is north of the Tar River and that is where most outhouses in the county would likely be found.
 Price could not estimate the number of outhouses in use in Pitt County, but he did indicate that 1980 census figures showed that 11 percent of the county's occupied housing units lacked plumbing.

 He said most substandard housing is on farmland and that's where privies are most predominant.
 Price's organization administers federal housing improvement projects in Pitt Beaufort, Martin and Bertie Counties. He said although the group has been involved in rehabilitating sanitary sewage systems in Pitt County before, no such projects are underway now.
 "The more rural the county, the more likely you will find larger numbers of outhouses," he said. "In Pitt County, the farther you are from Greenville, the more likely you'll find privies."
 Greenville Chief Building Inspector Jim Kaufman said privies are virtually non-existent within the city limits.
 Kaufman said to his knowledge all waste disposal systems in the city are either connected to the city sewer system or involve approved septic tanks.

The bylaws and rules of the convention authority say the budget must be submitted to the city manager for processing and be approved through the regular budget procedures of the city.

Dansey Backed

Former Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger endorsed the candidacy of Bill Dansey for the State Senate at a news conference this morning and said one of his reasons for supporting Dansey was the fact that Tom Taft's law firm filed a lawsuit against the Town of Ayden on behalf of the estate of an automobile accident victim.
 Dansey, a Republican, is trying to unseat Taft, a Democrat, from the 9th Senate District seat Taft has held for the past 3 1/2 years.
 This is the second time in two years that Persinger, a registered Democrat, has endorsed Taft's Republican opposition.

New Recycling Panel Formed

By GREG LAUDICK
 Reflector Staff Writer
 Members of the Greenville City Council agreed Monday night on the details of establishing a recycling committee for the city and unanimously approved its formation.
 The five-member council agreed at a City Hall to form a standing committee which will oversee recycling efforts in the community and work with similar county efforts.
 Council member Inez Fridley, who introduced the suggestion at the council's July 12 meeting, said the committee would be charged with the following responsibilities:
 •To educate citizens concerning the need for recycling.
 •To prepare publicity materials to educate the public about recycling.
 •To organize citizen and neighborhood recycling campaigns.
 •To work cooperatively with the County Solid Waste Task Force on future waste management plans.
 •To advise the Mayor and the Council on issues relative to recycling and future directions.

posals presented before the council members in a memorandum last night, each member agreed the ad hoc designation was unnecessary.
 "My concern at that point in time was establishing something that I did not understand the parameters of and making a permanent committee and not knowing how it was going to interact with county efforts," Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn said of the July 11 meeting.
 "I wasn't against a recycling committee as such, I just did not want us to get involved in something which would usurp the county's role," she added.
 Mrs. Fridley pointed out that the city currently generates 60 percent of the material that goes into the county landfill.
 "Every time we recycle now increases the length of time we can use the current landfill and postpone the expenditure of millions of taxpayer dollars to establish a new landfill or alternate waste management system," she said.

Mrs. Fridley said she envisioned a committee comprised of those people now serving on the volunteer committee along with nine to 13 appointees representing each of the five city voting districts.
 "The city has benefited for several years from a volunteer committee that has managed on sheer energy and enthusiasm to recycle approximately 12 percent of the city's waste," Mrs. Fridley said.
 "In part because of this volunteer effort, the county has recently budgeted $194,000 to increase the number of separation and recycling sites in addition to Bell's Fork," she said. "However, if our recycling does not increase and municipalities county-wide do not embrace the recycling concept, these sites cannot be maintained."
 Mrs. Fridley referred to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners establishment of an 11-member Solid Waste Task Force to study and make recommendations on recycling and other waste-disposal issues throughout the county.
 The motion to form a city recycling committee was introduced by Mrs. Fridley at the council's July 11 meeting. At that session, various council members were interested in designating the group as ad hoc.

 area of the state. These include Clayton, Biscoe and Candor, all named for the area in which they are most commonly grown.
 While not having precise sales figures, Uzzell said growers are getting good prices for their crops.
 "I imagine that the growers in Pitt County are averaging the statewide average of $10 a bushel or possibly are realizing slightly higher sales prices, since many of their sales are in small quantities."
 And Uzzell was optimistic about the future of the crop in Pitt County.
 "I foresee a good, well-thought growth of this crop," he said. "So far, growers have gone slowly, sensibly, gauging the market and their ability to expand carefully, thoughtfully."
 "It's really very encouraging."

Melts Texas' Bats In 2-0 Win

Clemens Turns Up The Heat

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer
The 100-degree temperatures at Texas' Arlington Stadium were no match for the heat of Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox.
Clemens, baseball's dominant pitcher the past two seasons, overwhelmed the Rangers on Monday night, striking out 14 and allowing just three hits as Boston won 2-0 for its 12th straight victory.
"I just didn't want to be the one to kill the streak," said Clemens, 14-5, who leads the major leagues with seven shutouts and 219 strikeouts. "I like pitching in this weather. I'm exhausted. I must have lost seven or eight pounds."

Clemens has won 13 in a row on the road, but the Houston native hardly felt alone Monday night.
"I had some friends and relatives in the stands and it's good to have that kind of support," Clemens said.
Elsewhere in the American League, it was New York 3, Milwaukee 2; Minnesota 5, Toronto

4; Chicago 6, Seattle 5, and California 2, Oakland 1.
The Rangers' Charlie Nixen gave Clemens room for error. The knuckleballer didn't allow a runner past second base through the first six innings and held the Red Sox to just five hits.
"Charlie is always a great challenge. He had his knuckleball dancing," Clemens said.
Boston finally got to Hough in the seventh. Dwight Evans singled with one out, went to second on a walk to Mike Greenwell and scored one out later on Jody Reed's single.
"When we got that first run, it was like 30 runs," Clemens said.
Clemens leads the majors with 10 complete games and is 4-0 lifetime against the Rangers. The right-hander struck out 10 or more batters for the 11th time this season and 32nd of his career.
"Clemens was as good as I've seen him," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said. "He threw all his fastballs at the upper edge of the strike zone. He got enough of them called where we had to swing at them."
Boston's winning streak, which began after Joe Morgan was named to replace the fired John McNamara manager, is the club's longest since 1948. The Red Sox are in third place in the AL East, 1 1/2 games behind New York.

Yankees 3, Brewers 2
John Candelaria pitched a three-hitter and Don Mattingly had three RBI, including a two-run homer in the seventh inning, as New York took sole possession of first place in the AL East.
With the Detroit Tigers idle, the Yankees moved into first by a half-game. They last led by themselves June 19.
Candelaria, 11-6, gave up both Milwaukee runs on Joey Meyer's sixth homer, a two-run shot in the top of the second inning. The left-hander also allowed a single by Paul Molitor in the sixth and a double by Jeffrey Leonard in the ninth. Candelaria walked one and struck out six.
Mattingly's homer, his 10th, came off Teddy Higuera, 7-6, and scored Luis Aguayo, who had opened the seventh with a single.

Sheppard Says Defense Strong

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
GREENSBORO — When Ashley Sheppard looks to the left and sees teammate Chester McGlockton during practices for the East-West All-Star Football game, he gets a good feeling about the future.
Sheppard and McGlockton will both attend Clemson next year and figure to be lining up together for quite a while.
Both were chosen All-State their senior years and they were also teammates at the Shrine Bowl in December.
Thursday when the East defense takes the field, Sheppard, (6-3, 220) will start at inside linebacker and McGlockton (6-5, 260) will man the left defensive end slot.

"I think we're going to do pretty good at Clemson," said Sheppard, who was a four-year starter at North Pitt. "He's a great guy and a lot of fun. He's a big, strong, powerful guy."

And what would Sheppard do if he had to try and stop the two future Clemson Tigers.

"I'd probably get a gun and shoot us," he said. "That's about the size of it."

Sheppard and McGlockton will anchor a large defense for the east. Defensive lineman Rickie Shaw of Whiteville, Jon Moody of Wallace-Rose Hill, Know Thompson of Lumberton and Karl Joyner of Tarboro are all over 250 pounds.

"It's going to be hard to run against us. They can try to pass, but it's going to be even harder to do that," Sheppard said.

"They can try (either), but I don't think they are going to do that well because of the line we have."

While the West team may not look forward to seeing Sheppard, East head coach Bobby Poss of Fayetteville 71st is certainly glad to have him on the squad.

"Do words describe Ashley Sheppard?" Poss said. "Ashley is playing inside linebacker and he truly fits the description of an All-Star. He's big and he's fast."

Sheppard was a Daily Reflector All-Area selection three years in a row and was also chosen All-East by the Raleigh News and Observer his senior year.

While Sheppard has already signed with Clemson, he has yet to qualify for freshman eligibility under NCAA guidelines set forth in Proposition 48 (bylaw 5-1-(j)). He said he expects to be eligible soon. "I'm just waiting on test scores," he said.

The All-Star game is a good way to get ready for fall practice, according to Sheppard, because he gets to play against future college players.

"It's really helping me prepare for college and getting my mind on what I'm going to do," Sheppard said.

"It's a big change. All through my life, I have been playing with people that were smaller. Now I'm with these guys and they are a lot bigger than I am."

The teams are practicing two times a day in preparations for Thursday's game and East assistant coach Bob Hanna of Washington High School said, as expected, the defense has been ahead of the offense. Sheppard echoed those sentiments.

"The defense is certainly one of the best," he said. "It's a great bunch of guys and the offense is coming around too."

Pitt Trio Is Set To Start Thursday

GREENSBORO — Eric Blount, Dave Daniels and Ashley Sheppard have all lined up starting positions for Thursday's East-West All-Star Football Classic, according to East head Coach Bobby Poss of Fayetteville 71st.

Blount, who starred at Ayden-Grifton High School and will play next year for North Carolina, will start at tailback and will also return punts and kicks.

Daniels, a Rose High product bound for East Carolina, will start at fullback and backup one of the inside linebacker spots.

Sheppard, an ex-North Pitt star headed for Clemson, will start at inside linebacker.

A fourth area player, Franz Holscher of Washington, will backup Garner's Stacy Betts at quarterback. Holscher may also see action as a punter.

With three Pitt County players having already locked up starting positions on the East football squad, it points out what a great year it was for high school football in the area in 1987-88.

After all, each of the five schools in the county made the playoffs, three (Ayden-Grifton, North Pitt and Farmville) in the same conference (Eastern Plains 2-A).

The past year was unique. Not only were all the county's high schools in the playoffs, a large number of local players signed grants to play in college, from the Division I level all the way down to NAIA.

Not only were three players selected from Pitt County, but all three earned starting spots.

No College Ball
Holscher and Betts are the only quarterbacks on the East squad and neither one will be playing college football this fall.

Betts, who helped lead Garner to the state 4-A title this year, has signed to play baseball at N.C. State.

Holscher is going to try and walk on the baseball team at North Carolina.

These two are going through an intense couple of practice sessions in order to get ready for Thursday.

Their task could be harder than the ones facing the rest of the players on the squad.

"They've got a tremendous amount of responsibility," Poss said. "They've got a new terminology. They've got to get all the plays down and they've got a new cadence."

Medlin Set To Go
D.H. Conley's 6-8 center Phil Medlin, who is bound for Wake Forest, gets set for tonight's East-West All-Star Basketball game along with fellow Deacon signee and consensus All-State pick Chris King of Hobpton.

Tom Morris

The two head up the front court for the East team, which also includes Virginia signee Anthony Oliver, a guard out of 1-A North Duplin.

The 6-7 King ranks third in scoring in the history of North Carolina with 2,481 points. As a senior, he averaged 28.3 points per game.

Medlin and King, though, might have their hands full up front with 6-8 Fred Campbell of Salisbury and 6-5 Kenneth Wiley of North Mecklenburg. Both are headed to UNC-Charlotte next year. Wiley averaged 25 points a game his senior season.

Future Pirates

Two future ECU Pirates will suit up for the East squad in Thursday's football game.

Mike McCalop, a 6-0, 290-pounder from James Kenan, is battling for one of the offensive line spots, while

Franz Holscher

Tim Marshmon, a 5-10, 160-pound Northern Nash product, is competing for a spot in the secondary.

Tyson, Cayton Settle Their Feud

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson and manager Bill Cayton have reached an out-of-court settlement of Tyson's suit to get out of his contract with the manager.

Cayton will remain manager through the full term of his contract, his attorney, Thomas Puccio said.

"This thing is about money, and that's it," Puccio said of the settlement.

He said details would be announced at a news conference late this morning. Tyson is suing to break his contract with Cayton, and both were urged by Judge David Edwards to settle the case out of court.

Cubs Testing Lights As Era Set To Come To End

CHICAGO (AP) — The lights came on at Wrigley Field to the sound of cheering and singing — and with a few lumps in the throat — as the 74-year-old ballpark prepared to say good-bye to its daytime-only baseball tradition.

In a test run for players and fans, the Chicago Cubs held their first batting practice under the lights Monday night. The venerable ballpark began to glow at dusk as a crowd of about 3,000 — each of whom paid $100 a ticket — sang the national anthem.

"I think it's just great," said Ken Reed, a fan who has been coming to Wrigley Field since he was about 8. "You can't continue to play just day baseball year after year."

But the shadows didn't quite disappear. The players found a few adjustments were needed before the Cubs play their first night game, Aug. 8 against the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I was told by my players that there is a particular problem in the left field corner," Manager Don Zimmer said. "Apparently the lights cover the left field fence. Some of the players complained that the ball going down the lines sometimes could not be picked up right away.

"None of my players outright complained. Each one had a little different story, depending on whether it was in left field or outfield," Zimmer added. "But we all know it will take time to get used to it."

Third baseman Vance Law said he had problems seeing the ball.

"I only saw half the ball," he said. "In my opinion, they're going to have to do something."

Outfielder Andre Dawson didn't seem to have trouble seeing balls when he had a bat in his hand. He hit seven of them out of the park to win the home-run contest with partner Ernie Banks before the Cubs' workout began. Dawson and Banks beat Ryne Sandberg and Billy Williams 7-1.

"It felt a little weird at first," Dawson said. "But I got my rhythm."

Officials said his first home-run ball, which sailed into the left field bleachers, will be sent to the Hall of Fame.

Dawson makes no secret of the fact that he would rather play day games. But, he added, "I also like to be in post-season competition ... like everything else, I'll make the adjustment."

The chance to host playoff games was a big selling point for the $5-million lights, which were installed beginning in April. The 26 panels of floodlights are set in six towering banks — three on the third-base side and three on the first-base side.

"I would have feared for its future had lights not been installed," said NL President A. Bartlett Giamatti, who was among the spectators Monday night. "This park is synonymous not just with Chicago but, in so many ways, with baseball."

The Cubs are the last major-league team to switch on the lights since Cincinnati began night baseball 53 years ago. The lights controversy has raged in the halls of city and state government, and into the streets near Wrigley.

Keys Injured, Two Others Are Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Olympic basketball team is down to 17 players, following an injury to Randolph Keys and two more cuts.

Keys, a forward from the University of Southern Mississippi who is a first-round pick of the Cleveland Cavaliers, was forced Monday to withdraw from training camp at Georgetown University after suffering a groin muscle pull during a workout.

Team spokesman Regiel Napier said Keys had recently pulled a muscle and following Monday's recurrence was told by trainers that only time would permit the injury to heal completely. Keys then decided to withdraw and let the injury heal prior to the opening of NBA training camp, Napier said.

Keys, after finishing a standout career at USM, was selected for the Olympic tryouts and was one of 21 finalists invited to Georgetown for the selection process. Twelve players and two alternates will be chosen by Sept. 2 for the final squad.

A release from the Amateur Basketball Association also said Dyron Nix of Tennessee and Dwayne Schintzius of Florida were trimmed from the roster Monday.

The 17 players remaining who will continue in the U.S. Olympic basketball team selection process:

Hornets Seek To Sign Rambis...

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Free agent Kurt Rambis, a seven-year veteran of the NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers, has held contract negotiations with the Charlotte Hornets for a spot as a starter, it was reported.

The Los Angeles Times said in today's editions that Rambis probably would sign with the NBA expansion team today.

Rambis, contacted at his Manhattan Beach, Calif. home Monday, said: "I went there, I had a nice talk and that's about all. As soon as I know, everyone will know."

The Times, quoting an unnamed league source, said Rambis apparently has been invited to compete for the starting power forward post with the Hornets.

The 30-year-old, a starter for 4½ seasons, was dropped from the Lakers' playing rotation after the first round of the NBA playoffs this year. He played in just five games this season averaging six minutes per game.

Last season he had 268 rebounds, 277 points and 845 minutes of playing time. Meantime, the Lakers are still holding discussions with free agent Orlando Woolridge and Detroit backup center James Edwards.

Lakers general manager Jerry West said Monday that he's hopeful of gaining a contract agreement with David Rivers, a Notre Dame guard and the Lakers' No. 1 draft pick.

...But Say No To Chuck Nevitt

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Detroit Pistons announced Monday they would not re-sign former North Carolina State player Chuck Nevitt after trying for months to trade him, but the Charlotte Hornets aren't interested in the 7-foot-5 center either, team officials said.

"Chuck Nevitt is the one guy our entire coaching staff says can't play," said Hornets vice president Carl Scheer when asked if the NBA expansion team have any interest in the center.

Nevitt played in 17 games last season in Detroit, where he has been since the 1985-86 season. He previously played a season each for the Los Angeles Lakers and Houston Rockets.

Nevitt, working out at the New York Knicks rookie camp, said earlier this summer he hoped to be taken by the Hornets in the expansion draft.

Meanwhile, the Hornets' negotiations with Kurt Rambis continued Monday with both sides working toward a self-imposed deadline of the end of the day Tuesday. Rambis and majority owner George Shinn were to speak by telephone late Monday night to try to break the impasse.

Scheer and Gene Littles, the team's director of player personnel, are also scheduled to meet Tuesday with Boston Celtics backup center Artis Gilmore, like Rambis an unrestricted free agent. The Charlotte Observer reported.

Snow Hill Postponed

HAMLET — The opening game in the American Legion Eastern Championship series between Hamlet and Snow Hill was postponed Monday night due to rain. It has been rescheduled for tonight at 8 p.m. at Hamlet Memorial Park.

Because of the rainout, the second game is now set for Wednesday at Hamlet, with the next three games set for Snow Hill starting Thursday.

The winner of the best-of-seven series will meet the winner of the Stanley-Kernersville series for the state championship in August.

Mitchell's Homer Paces Giants

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers saw Kelly Downs at his best — again. This time, however, one run wasn't enough to beat him.

Kevin Mitchell's two-run homer off Fernando Valenzuela in the seventh inning made Downs and the San Francisco Giants 3-1 winners Monday night in the opener of a four-game series against the National League West leaders.

"He pitched a masterpiece, and this was a big game for us — no ifs, ands or buts," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "We can't split this series. We've got to win four or three out of four."

Valenzuela, 5-8, pitched one of his better games since his last victory, which was six weeks ago. He issued five walks, but was not hurt by them, and gave up nine hits, eight of them singles.

"He was tough in the clutch. He only made one bad pitch, to Kevin Mitchell," Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda said. "He's had a lot of control problems."

In other games on a limited schedule, Philadelphia beat New York 3-2 and St. Louis stopped Pittsburgh 5-1.

Downs, 10-8, threw a five-hitter for a sixth victory in his last seven starts, tying his career strikeout high with eight and walking just two.

The right-hander might have pitched even better when he faced the Dodgers on the second day of the season, but Orel Hershiser topped him with a shutout. Downs had a perfect game for five innings and allowed two hits and only one run, which was unearned, in seven.

"That was a great way to start the season," Downs said of his two-hit work on April 5. "But it wasn't great, either, because we lost."

The victory Monday night was the Giants' third straight, and they go into today's doubleheader six games behind the Dodgers. At the All-Star break, the Giants were only 2½ games behind, but they fell back with a 4-7 road trip.

"Hopefully, this game can turn things around for us," Downs said.

The Giants scored in the third on singles by Brett Butler, Robby Thompson and Will Clark. Franklin Stubbs tied the game run in the sixth after getting a bloop double, going to home on a passed ball and coming home on Mike Marshall's sacrifice fly.

With one out in the seventh, Candy Maldonado singled. Mitchell hit Valenzuela's next pitch for his 13th homer, a blast which gave him 23 RBI in his last 22 games.

"He was throwing a lot of screwballs to right-handed hitters and keeping them off balance," Mitchell said. "I wasn't going to go up there and try to hit his (best) pitch. I didn't want to look for the screwball."

He saw a slider and hit the ball over the left field fence.

Mitchell had missed Sunday's game at St. Louis because of a sore knee. He even missed the fight which erupted late in the game, being in the trainers' room then.

"I came close to taking him out of the lineup again," Craig said. "But he told me, 'You're not keeping me out of this game.' I had two other players hurting a little because of that rumpus in St. Louis, but they wanted to play too."

The Giants left the bases loaded twice against Valenzuela.

"He pitched a great game. We just didn't swing the bats," Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia said. "This obviously isn't one of his better years, but nobody works harder, and I think he'll bounce back and find himself."

Phillies 3, Mets 2

Juan Samuel's RBI single broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning and Philadelphia sent visiting New York to its third straight loss.

Don Carman, 7-5, is 3-1 against the Mets this season. He gave up six hits in seven innings and Bruce Ruffin got his second save.

Ron Darling, 10-7, allowed only one hit through the first five innings. The Phillies tied it in the sixth on Mike Schmidt's run-scoring double and a sacrifice fly by Mike Young.

Kevin McReynolds led off the Mets' fourth with his 14th home run and Darryl Strawberry followed with his 26th homer. It was the fifth time the Mets have hit consecutive homers this year.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 1

John Tudor won his 100th career game with his first victory since June 23 as St. Louis gave Pittsburgh its fourth straight loss.

Tudor, 5-4, yielded eight hits in his fourth complete game. He had been 0-2 in his last five starts, allowing 22 earned runs in 29 innings.

Bob Walk, 11-5, had his six-game winning streak stopped. A pair of errors by third baseman Bobby Bonilla to start the fourth inning led to two unearned runs.

Tony Pena hit an RBI double for the host Cardinals. He is batting .371 with seven RBI this season against his former teammates.

Cadigan Inked To Contract By Jets

By The Associated Press

Now that first-round pick Dave Cadigan has signed with the New York Jets, can Eric Moore be far behind with the New York Giants?

That's the indication given by Moore's agent in the wake of Cadigan's signing by the Jets on Monday.

Cadigan, an offensive tackle from Southern Cal who was taken eighth overall in this year's NFL draft, signed a four-year deal worth more than $2 million, including a bonus of $850,000.

Moore's agents said they had been waiting to see what Cadigan received before signing. Moore, an offensive tackle from Indiana, is among the remaining seven first-rounders still unsigned.

"We have no deadline," said Mark Mottaz, the attorney who represents Moore. "He is not the kind of kid who will be in bad shape when he reports. He's a smart kid. He graduated last year and he works hard."

Mottaz would not say what Moore was seeking, but said it would be in line with what the Jets gave Cadigan. Moore was the 10th player taken overall in the draft.

Cadigan is the 20th of the NFL's 27 first-round draft choices to sign, but only the second of four offensive linemen.

The first offensive lineman taken, Paul Gruber of Tampa Bay, remains a holdout. Gruber was taken with the fourth pick in the draft.

Cadigan's agent, Leigh Steinberg, said he and the 280-pound tackle flew to New York on the "red-eye" from California, arriving in the early morning to settle with the Jets after Coach Joe Walton suggested Cadigan was jeopardizing his job by holding out.

"We took the red-eye determined to get things done to demonstrate his intense interest in becoming a starter," Steinberg said.

Veteran quarterback Mike Tomczak signed a contract Monday with the Chicago Bears.

The team would not disclose the terms of the backup player's contract. Tomczak received a base pay of about $100,000 last year.

As a backup to Jim McMahon, Tomczak started 13 regular-season games the past two seasons — one more than than the often-injured McMahon. Tomczak reportedly was seeking starting quarterback pay in his negotiations with the Bears.

Tomczak played well in the Bears' mini camp at Lake Forest, Ill., last May. But by holding out, he apparently lost his No. 2 status to Jim Harbaugh. Coach Mike Ditka said Sunday that Harbaugh had the second-string job.

Tomczak started six games last year. He opened the season in 1987 against the Super Bowl champion New York Giants in a much-heralded Monday night game, leading the Bears to a stunning 34-19 victory. He completed 20 of 34 passes in that game for 292 yards and two touchdowns.

He has an 11-2 record as a starting quarterback. In 1986, he was unbeaten in seven starts. Tomczak, from Ohio State, was signed by the Bears as a free agent in 1985.

Offensive tackle William Roberts signed a new contract and reported to the Giants' training camp.

Roberts, a first-round draft choice in 1984, started all 12 non-strike games last season at right tackle in place of Karl Nelson, who missed the season while undergoing treatment for Hodgkin's disease.

COMING IN

All-Pro linebacker Freddie Young showed up at the Seattle Seahawks' camp without a contract. Young appeared rather than facing fines.

Young is unhappy because he's getting less than second-year linebacker Brian Bosworth, who signed a 10-year, $11-million deal last year. Young is in the second year of a four-year deal calling for $350,000 a year.

Young signed the deal with Seattle after a holdout last year. Coach Chuck Knox said he did not want him out of camp again this year because he's switching Bosworth from the weak to the strong inside spot, and Young is going back to outside linebacker. That's supposed to improve the Seahawks' pass rush.

Offensive guard Crawford Ker called the Dallas Cowboys on Monday and said he was ending his holdout and will report to training camp on Wednesday.

Ker has been fined $1,000 beginning last Thursday for his holdout. If he reports on Wednesday, he will owe $6,000. His 1988 contract calls for him to make $170,000.

Ker and his agent, Howard Slusher, had asked for his contract to be renegotiated this year at $400,000 plus a car. The Cowboys have offered $200,000 and Ker's latest counterproposal was $300,000.

GOING OUT
Several players were cut as NFL teams continued to reduce their rosters.

The Phoenix Cardinals got down to 90 players by releasing 10 free agents. Among them was wide receiver Scot Maynard, son of former New York Jets receiver and NFL Hall of Famer Don Maynard.

The Cincinnati Bengals released five rookies and said linebacker Joe Kelly is down with a knee injury. Kelly, chosen as a starter at inside linebacker, hyperextended the knee in a scrimmage, and the Bengals don't know how long he'll be out.

The Tampa Bay Bucs reduced their roster to 93 when defensive back Tommy Powell retired and seven players were waived.

The Los Angeles Rams granted Nolan Cromwell his release, a day after the four-time Pro Bowl safety checked out of training camp because he was unable to adjust to his role as a non-starter.

Cromwell, 33, said he will spend the next three to four days looking for an NFL team that will let him compete for a starting job.

"I came to camp because I thought I could accept being a reserve, but I quickly found out I had no motivation competing for the fourth safety spot," he said. "I'm just going to take it one day at a time. If I can't find a team, I'll probably retire."

 In football, a "safety" costs you two points. In bridge, it can gain you hundreds. The safety play in this situation is overlooked by many players.

 Only in modern methods, where North-South are using a forcing no trump response in conjunction with five-card majors, would we give the nod to North's raise to two hearts. On any other approach there is no reason on earth why North, with a balanced hand and major tenace, should raise with three low trumps, whether his side plays four or five-card majors. However, it did propel North-South to the superior contract of four hearts.

After the lead of the king of clubs, declarer had a sure loser in each minor suit. The fate of the contract, therefore, hinged on South's ability to hold his trump losers to one. Declarer sealed his fate quickly. He won the ace of clubs and cashed the ace-king of hearts. When West showed out on defenders follow suit, the king of trumps will draw the last fang and that's that. As the cards lie, though, West shows out and East wins the jack. But now his queen can be finessed and 10 tricks are in the bag.

Sea Of Journals Produces Mountains Of Facts

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Pity the heart specialist who wants to keep up. He could read Cardiology, the American Journal of Cardiology and the American College of Cardiology Journal. The American Heart Journal and the British Heart Journal. Arteriosclerosis and Atherosclerosis. And more. Much more.

Cardiologists are not alone in this. Physicists, entomologists, anthropologists, sociologists and anyone else who makes a living in science and medicine are deluged with magazines full of information they need to know but don't have time to read.

Stosel, former editor of the Journal of Clinical Investigation.

Not everyone agrees that the huge volume of "the literature," as it's called, is necessarily a bad thing. But fretting about it is probably as old as the ritual of publishing scientific reports in periodicals.

"This complaint: 'Can't keep up. Can't keep up.' People have been saying that forever," says Dr. Henry Small, director of corporate research at the Institute for Scientific Information. "This is the normal griping of anybody who's literate. Who can read all the new novels? Who can read all the newspapers?"

It all began in 1665. In January of that year, Le Journal des Savants came out in Paris, followed in March by the Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society in London.

The goal was to give learned men a convenient way to keep up with the scholarly observations of their fellows. The idea caught on. At the start of the 18th century, there were about 100 journals. By the beginning of the 20th, there were 10,000.

Not only can nobody read all the journals, nobody can say with certainty how many there are.

Ulrich's International Periodicals Directory lists about 31,000 scientific, medical and technical publications but doesn't claim to know about all of them. Dr. Belver Griffith, professor of information studies at Drexel University, guesses the worldwide total is somewhere between 40,000 and 60,000 and is growing at a rate of 4 percent or 5 percent a year.

A browse through any science library shows just how diverse this enterprise is.

A few journals have broad tastes. Nature and Science, as their names suggest, will publish articles about almost anything in science. But most are satisfied with narrower horizons. There is, for instance, Experimental and Applied Acarology (about ticks and mites), the Journal of Applied Ichthyology (fish) and the Clubroot News Letter (plant disease).

Some journals get to the point quickly in their titles. Yeast, Blood, Gut, Trees and Starch leave little doubt about their specialties. The International Journal of Aerial and Space Imaging, Remote Sensing and Integrated Geographical Systems and the International Multi-disciplinary Journal Devoted to Swallowing and its Disorders are a bit less terse.

Some are downright obscure. Try to guess what K-Theory is about (mathematics). Or Stochastic Hydrology and Hydraulics (random models in water resources). Or the Journal of Paleolimnology (prehistoric waters). Or Genomics (gene mapping).

Reading these magazines is often heavy going, even for people who are conversant with, say, the nuances of applied acarology. Most sag with dry, formal write-ups of scientific experiments and observations. Even the most prestigious are booby-trapped with jargon that reduces simple ideas to properly academic tangles of verbiage.

So does anyone read this stuff? "The actual readership of fundamental scholarly journals appears to be quite low," says Griffith. "The best-read articles in a standard, disciplinary based journal will be read, at most, by 2 percent of the people who receive it. We found that there were almost no readers."

Professional journals, such as those that go to doctors and engineers, may be more widely read. But how many journals about cardiovascular diseases — Ulrich's lists about 135 of them — should a heart specialist be expected to plow through?

Dr. Arnold Reiman, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, estimates that five or six, properly chosen, is all the average specialist needs to keep up with.

However, Stosel says there are probably plenty of doctors who read nothing but the throwaways, a disparaging term for the stacks of relatively readable newspapers and magazines, filled with drug ads, that arrive free in the mail each day.

States Gambling On Research Parks

By GERRY EVERDING
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Missouri has sunk millions of dollars into a plan to bring universities and industries together in high-tech research parks — a gamble that is also being taken by other states nationwide.

"There has been a drastic change in the way states go about economic development," explained Duane Stucky, director of research parks for the University of Missouri. "States are beginning to take the lead in economic development, and university research parks are a key part of that effort."

It used to be that states would limit themselves to industrial recruitment, "to trying to get a Ford Motor Co. to relocate," Stucky said. "Now we're trying to create whole new industries, new businesses that might never have happened without a research park environment."

The Missouri Department of Economic Development gave the university about $9 million four years ago for development of research parks in Kansas City and St. Charles County, just west of St. Louis.

University officials are requesting another $40 million in state investment for research-park development in Missouri. But critics point out that neither site has yet to attract a tenant and argue that the state's money could be better spent elsewhere.

Proponents of research parks emphasize it takes a huge investment in time and money to make them successful. Missouri officials said it could be another decade before their parks are moving full speed and producing big dividends.

"Simply recruiting new companies is not going to make it a success," Stucky said. "It won't be a success until we can look back and see that we have developed whole new technologies, whole new industries."

But with Missouri's four-campus state university system in a financial bind, many politicians are calling for the state to slow down on research park development.

"Some of these (research parks) are just not going to be successful," said Ned E. Huffman, a founder of the North Carolina Research Triangle, one of the nation's oldest and most prosperous research parks.

Huffman estimates that there are more than 200 university-related research parks in the nation. He said that most of them did not exist before 1980 and that more than 100 have started development in the last two years.

"We're going to have a glut of research parks on the market," Huffman said. "There's just not that much research activity among companies."

The Research Triangle was started in the 1950s to provide an industrial boost to North Carolina's depressed agricultural economy. The 7,000-acre research park now has more than 32,000 employees.

Huffman has seen other research parks come and go. He said dozens sprang up in the late 1960s following successes at Stanford's Silicon Valley in California and at the Research Triangle in North Carolina.

"There were about 120 so-called research parks around the country in the early 1970s," Huffman said. "Of those, only six have survived and remained active in research."

But many of those involved with the resurgence of research parks say that times have changed and that most are here to stay.

"Research parks are now much more of an established economic institution," said Michael Wacholder,

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK — Researchers John Shelburne, left, and Peter Ingram are two of the 32,000 employees working at North Carolina's Research Triangle Park, which is the nation's oldest complex. Other states are trying to tap into the research park concept to lure industry and encourage growth, but they're finding that such complexes are a gamble that goes boom or bust. (AP Laserphoto) director of the Rensselaer Technology Park. "Research parks represent a whole new partnership between industry and education. It's an attempt by technology-based industries to establish closer ties with what has become their basic source of raw materials — people and ideas."

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, a private university in Troy, N.Y., decided in the early 1980s to use more than $3 million in university endowment funds to begin development of a 450-acre research park.

Rensselaer is among a growing number of new research parks across the country that appear to be headed for success.

The University of Central Florida in Orlando borrowed $5 million in 1980 to buy about 1,300 acres of land near campus and begin development of a research park. The first building was not constructed until 1983, but two years later the park gained a tenant that may ensure its success.

Naval Training Systems Center, a major procurement agency of the armed forces, moved its headquarters and 1,200 employees to the Central Florida Research Park in 1985. Dozens of large government contractors have since established facilities in the park in order to be near a federal agency that awards nearly $1 billion in contracts annually.

Research Helps Show Why Fish Oil Stems Heart Attacks

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A laboratory experiment by two Cleveland researchers may help to explain why a diet rich in cold-water fish helps to prevent heart attacks.

In a study published in the journal Science, Paul L. Fox and Paul E. DiCorleto of the Cleveland Clinic Research Institute report that in test-tube experiments they have shown that oil extracted from fish that live in cold water will depress production of a protein called the platelet-derived growth factor.

Reducing this protein, Fox said in a telephone interview, suppresses the growth of smooth muscle cells in arteries and, thus, helps stem the blood-vessel narrowing that can lead to a heart attack.

But Fox said the finding does not mean that people should start popping fish-oil pills as a heart attack preventative. More study must be done before there is proof that such dietary supplements can be effective, he said.

"I would not personally recommend that people take fish oil," Fox said. "I don't think it's bad for you. But I would recommend a more prudent diet, which would include eating fish several times a week."

Several studies, including research among Greenland Eskimos and fishermen in Japan and Holland, have shown that a diet that includes lots of fish may be responsible for the low incidence of heart disease among those groups.

Researchers previously have suggested the reason such diets are beneficial is that the flesh of cold water fish, such as cod, halibut and tuna, contains an oil rich in a particular type of fatty acid.

But Fox said researchers still aren't sure precisely how the oil works to prevent heart attack.

The oils reduce the blood levels of cholesterol and triglyceride, both of which play a role in the narrowing of arteries. Others suggest the fish oil changes the clotting rate in the blood, which helps prevent blockages. Fox said he and DiCorleto have found still another way in which fish oil may fight heart disease.

In test-tube experiments, Fox said his team has found that fish oil reduces by 50 percent to 85 percent the production of the platelet-derived growth factor protein. He said similar tests using peanut oil had no effect on the growth factor production, while safflower oil was less than 10 percent as effective.

He said the growth factor protein normally stimulates proliferation of smooth muscle cells, which line the outside of arteries. Fox said the growth of these muscle cells is thought to promote the lesions in the arteries that can lead to blockages, the basic problem in the heart disease process called atherosclerosis.

"We're not sure which of the three suggested mechanisms is responsible for the beneficial effects of fish oil," said Fox. "Two or all three may play a role. That's often the way it is in biology."

He said the theories need to be tested in humans or animals. Only then, said Fox, will it be known exactly how fish oil works to reduce heart attack, and in what form the oil should be taken into the human diet.

The oil from cold-water fish is more fluid than oil from beef or pork and is less likely to produce the solid molecules that can clog arteries, said Fox. Fish living in deep, cold water are thought to have developed this oil to help them function in the chilly depths where they live, he said.

Busy Summer At Box Office Sees 'Roger Rabbit' In Front

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Business is booming at the nation's movie theaters this summer with hits like "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" producing revenues running well ahead of last year's record $4.2 billion take.

"The business is really rolling along. It's got momentum because there's variety, a selection for every taste," John Krier of Exhibitor Relations Co. said Monday.

With the completion of eight weeks of the traditionally rich summer season, more than $934 million worth of tickets have been sold, 13 percent more than for the period last year.

The industry trade paper Daily Variety said when all the receipts are tallied the summer box office may reach $1.7 billion compared with $1.59 billion a year ago.

Analysts attributed the revenue gains to the diversity of this summer's films — ranging from mindless comedies, animated and partially-animated films and violent, action-packed fare.

"Coming to America." The second-place Eddie Murphy film earned $8.8 million, just $33,000 shy of the leader.

Bruce Willis' "Die Hard" was third, Clint Eastwood's "Dead Pool" was fourth, the Robert DeNiro-Charles Grodin comedy "Midnight Run" was fifth and the re-release of the 46-year-old Disney classic "Bambi" was sixth.

The mindless "Big Top Pee-wee" fared poorly in its debut, bringing in $4.6 million to place seventh, and "Caddyshack II" was eighth with $4.4 million.

The Tom Hanks hit "Big," placing ninth, maintained its stature after eight weeks of release by adding $3.9 million in receipts for a total gross of $75.2 million. "Bull Durham" rounded out the top 10 with $2.4 million.

Here are the top films for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross, number of weeks in release and estimated production costs when available.

- "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," Disney, $8.92 million, 1,462 screens, $6,362 per screen, $84.1 million, five weeks, $40 million.
- "Coming to America," Paramount, $8.89 million, 2,064 screens, $4,305 per screen, $81.2 million, four weeks, $20 million.
- "Die Hard," 20th Century Fox, $7.1 million, 1,276 screens, $5,569 per screen, $10.1 million, two weeks, n.a.
- "The Dead Pool," Warner Bros., $6.0 million, 1,831 screens, $3,285 per screen, $23.1 million, two weeks, $18 million.
- "Midnight Run," Universal, $5.5 million, 1,158 screens, $4,775 per screen, $7.1 million, one week, n.a.
- "Bambi," Disney, $5.3 million, 1,489 screens, $3,570 per screen, $18.3 million, two weeks, $2 million (in 1942).
- "Big Top Pee-wee," Paramount, $4.6 million, 1,256 screens, $3,682 per screen, $4.6 million, one week, n.a.
- "Caddyshack II," Warner Bros., $4.4 million, 1,556 screens, $2,851 per screen, $4.4 million, one week, n.a.
- "Big," 20th Century Fox, $3.9 million, 1,276 screens, $3,060 per screen, $75.3 million, eight weeks, $15 million.
- "Bull Durham," Orion, $2.4 million, 1,019 screens, $2,371 per screen, $36.3 million, six weeks, $12 million.

Cartoon's Sniffing Scene Cut

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — An animator has given in to a conservative media watchdog group and cut a segment from a Mighty Mouse cartoon, but maintains the scene shows the cartoon character sniffing flowers, not snorting cocaine.

"These 3 1/2 seconds of footage have been taken totally out of context by individuals who seem to be searching for sinister undertones in a cartoon," animator Ralph Bakshi said in a statement Monday.

"Some have chosen to interpret the frames as showing a character using drugs," continued Bakshi, who won an Action for Children's Television award for the Mighty Mouse series on CBS-TV. "Nothing could be further from the truth."

But the Rev. Donald Wildmon, head of the American Family Association, called Bakshi's decision a victory for his group.

"This is a de facto admission that indeed Mighty Mouse was snorting cocaine," Wildmon said from his Tupelo, Miss., office. "We have been vindicated by CBS itself."

Wildmon on Monday also demanded Bakshi's removal as producer of the Saturday morning cartoon and reiterated his call for the firing of Judy Parker, CBS-TV's vice president for children's programming. He asked for a public apology by the network because of the April 23rd episode, titled "The Littlest Tramp."

CBS said the cartoon has been rerun twice and will be shown again, but no date was given.

The 11-minute episode involves Mighty Mouse's efforts to save Polly, "a poor but industrious flower seller," from a villain who destroys her flowers.

Just before vanquishing the villain, Mighty Mouse either sniffs cocaine (according to Wildmon) or inhales the aroma of flowers "in typical cartoon fashion" (according to CBS).

"Mighty Mouse was happy after smelling the flowers because it helped him remember the little girl who sold it to him fondly," said Bakshi, creator of the X-rated "Fritz the Cat" animated movies in the 1970s.

Police Target Nelson Concert

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Police plan to demonstrate at a performance next month by Willie Nelson because the country singer participated in a fund-raiser for Leonard Peltier, an American Indian convicted of killing two FBI agents.

Charleston-area officers intend to follow the lead of Rhode Island police, who planned a demonstration this weekend at a Nelson concert to express their displeasure with Nelson's support of Peltier, who was convicted in the agents' deaths in a 1975 shootout on a South Dakota reservation.

Last October, Nelson participated in a concert in Costa Mesa, Calif., to raise money for Peltier's supporters, who are seeking a new trial.

This weekend, Nelson will play at Warwick, R.I., and on Aug. 27 he is scheduled to open the Charleston Sternwheel Regatta. Both performances are unrelated to Peltier's case.

"I'm kind of surprised an entertainer would try to raise funds for someone who's killed two policemen," said Al Leavitt of West Virginia Fraternal Order of Police. "It's just a slap in the face."

Tribute For Peck

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Actor Gregory Peck was treated to an impromptu tribute with a celebration of song and dance when he visited the colorful La Boca neighborhood.

"It was a spontaneous performance — singing, the tango — as a little homage to me," Peck said of the weekend fanfare. "It touched my heart."
