Ineligible Votes Cast In Garrett-Dupree Race

Irregularity Found In Pitt Commissioner Voting

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Records from the Pitt County Board of Elections show 22 Republican and unaffiliated voters were allowed to vote in the May 31 Democratic primary runoff for a seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners from Consolidated District A.

After a June 21 county board hearing to hear complaints of election irregularities, the elections board checked the race, sex and party of the voters in the primary runoff and found that 18 Republicans and four unaffiliated voters voted in the Garrett-Dupree race.

Only registered Democrats were eligible to vote. D.D. Garrett of Greenville defeated James H. Dupree of Bethel by two votes — 1,171 to 1,169 — but after a recount and a hearing by the county election board neither candidate has been certified as the winner.

The county board ruled that election irregularities cited by Dupree were significant enough to affect the outcome of the election, and it sent the findings to the state board for action. Garrett appealed the decision, and the state board is scheduled to hear the case Friday at a meeting in Raleigh.

The county board's information check does not indicate whether people voted for Garrett or Dupree, but an attorney involved says the irregularity is probably glaring enough for the state board to order a new election. Neither candidate has filed a formal complaint regarding the error, but the state board may address the issue Friday.

Garrett's attorney, David F. Kirby of Raleigh, said he did not think the previous complaints filed by Dupree were significant enough to affect the outcome of the race, but the new finding that ineligible voters participated is significant.

"Having a number of people vote who were ineligible to vote is a problem," he said.

The state board has already ordered new elections this year in Hyde County and Surry County in close races where Republicans and unaffiliated voters participated in the Democratic primaries, said Johnnie McLean, administrative secretary for the state board.

She said news of ineligible voters "probably is a good sign" there will be a new election in Pitt County.

About 18 percent of the blacks eligible to vote in the primary runoff participated, while about 42 percent of the eligible white voters turned out. Kirby predicted black turnout would increase dramatically if there is a new election and that Garrett would win easily.

Economy Expanded, But Inflation Jumped

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy expanded at a healthy 3.1 percent annual rate from April through June, but inflation shot up at the fastest pace in almost six years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said growth in the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, was down only slightly from a 3.4 percent increase in the first three months of the year.

Inflation, however, picked up substantially during the spring, with a price index tied to the GNP climbing at an annual rate of 4.7 percent, the biggest advance since a 5.5 percent rise in the third quarter of 1982.

This inflation index, which measures a fixed selection of goods, had risen 3.5 percent in the first quarter.

Today's report blamed the pickup in inflation on higher costs for a wide range of consumer goods.

While the U.S. economy is performing substantially better than had been expected at the start of the year, the more robust growth has triggered inflation fears.

Recently, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan warned that if economic activity did not slow in coming months, the central bank was prepared to dampen demand by pushing interest rates up further. Economists worry, however, that if credit is tightened too severely it could trigger a recession next year.

Today's GNP report was accompanied by benchmark revisions in GNP data over the last three years, part of an annual review to update the data to reflect new information.

The revisions substantially boosted growth last year to an annual rate of 3.4 percent, largely because of higher consumer spending. The earlier estimate had put GNP growth last year at 2.9 percent.

The Reagan administration recently revised its estimate of growth for all of 1988 to 3 percent, when measured from the fourth quarter of

Burns Tells Senate Committee Friend 'Hornswaggled' Meese

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Deputy Attorney General Arnold I. Burns said today that he believes Attorney General Edwin Meese III has a "blind spot" on ethical issues and allowed himself to be "hornswaggled" by a friend trying to benefit from Meese's influence.

Burns also described Vice President George Bush as showing deep concern in a meeting to discuss the resignation of Burns and former criminal division chief William E. Weld last March.

Burns told the Senate Judiciary Committee on Tuesday that Meese created an "Alice in Wonderland world where right was wrong and wrong became right."

"I am clinging to the notion that Ed Meese had a blind spot where these ethical issues were concerned and that he was taken advantage of, that he was abused, that he was hornswaggled by one E. Bob Wallach," Burns said today on "CBS This Morning."

Weld told the committee that if Meese were an ordinary citizen, he probably would have been prosecuted for taking gratuities from Wallach, a longtime friend of the attorney general.

Meese has announced he will resign at the end of the month now that an independent counsel has decided not to bring charges against him following a lengthy investigation. Meese has criticized the special counsel, James McKay, for saying in his report that the attorney general "probably committed" three felonies and a misdemeanor.

Burns, in the CBS interview, described a meeting in which he and Weld explained to President Reagan and Bush why they were resigning.

"The vice president was distressed. I've described him as being floundering," Burns said. "He asked questions, and there was no doubt when I left the meeting I felt that in time the problem would be solved, as it has been by Mr. Meese's resignation."

Dukakis To Visit

RALEIGH (AP) — With North Carolina shaping up as a major battleground in the fall presidential contest, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis is expected to make a campaign foray into the Triangle Saturday.

Dukakis' state campaign officials told The News and Observer of Raleigh that they received word Tuesday that the Democratic presidential nominee would visit the Triangle to discuss education. A Dukakis advance team was in Raleigh working out details of the visit, including time and location.

Dukakis' campaign headquarters in Boston would not confirm the North Carolina visit. But former Gov. Jim Hunt said he was told the visit was set and he had been asked to suggest places Dukakis could visit in the Triangle.

The expected trip underscores the importance the Dukakis campaign attaches to North Carolina, which is viewed as one of several Southern states where they feel Dukakis can defeat Vice President George Bush. Other states with potential for Dukakis include Texas, Kentucky, Louisiana and Tennessee.

The national Dukakis campaign views North Carolina as a fast-growing, New South state that will be receptive to his emphasis on education, jobs, the environment and industry-government cooperation.

White House Rejected Official's Hostages-For-Assets Proposal

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's powerful Parliament speaker offered to try to have American hostages held in Lebanon freed in exchange for Iranian assets frozen in the United States, but the White House said, "No deals."

"If (President) Reagan were sincere he ... would release the Iranian assets," Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency today quoted speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani as saying.

"I have said that once he does so then we will use our leverage in Lebanon and help solve the issue of hostages," he was quoted as saying.

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, said Rafsanjani, who also is commander-in-chief of Iran's armed forces, spoke in a battlefield interview Tuesday. Nine Americans are believed held in Beirut by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists.

"So long as America keeps its hostile attitude toward Iran, there will be no sign of any changes and there will be no negotiations," Rafsanjani said Tuesday in a television interview monitored in Nicosia.

He said that one indication of good will would be releasing Iranian assets in the United States.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters: "No deals. The clearest signal they could send is to release the hostages."

"We have heard this kind of thing before, but as far as we are concerned you just can't link the two," Fitzwater said.

Rafsanjani, considered the second most powerful figure in the Iranian government after the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, did not refer to any specific Iranian assets in the United States.

But he said the Iranian government paid the United States for goods not delivered before the Islamic revolution toppled the government of the late Shah Reza Pahlavi in 1979.

State Department officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Rafsanjani probably was referring to military equipment, but they had no dollar figure.

The United States broke relations with Tehran and put a hold on its U.S. assets after Iranians stormed the U.S. Embassy and took 52 Americans hostage. They were released in January 1981 after 444 days in captivity.

As part of the release agreement, the U.S.-Iran Claims Tribunal was set up in the Hague, Netherlands, and charged with arbitrating billions of dollars of U.S. and Iranian financial claims arising from the Iranian revolution.

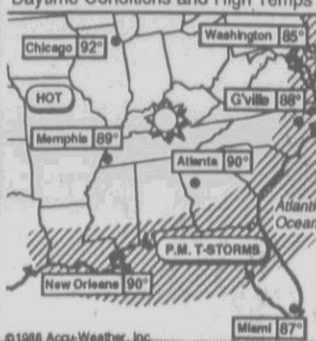

By 1987, the tribunal had awarded about $1 billion to American claimants and about $60 million to Iranians, plus an undetermined amount of interest to claimants on both sides.

In May, three French hostages held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems were released after the French government reportedly agreed to repay a $1 billion loan to Iran.

Nine Americans are among the 18 foreigners missing and believed held hostage in Lebanon by Shiite Moslem extremists.

MOPPING UP — Greenville firefighters conduct mop-up operations at the scene of a fire which caused extensive damage to a house at 1106 Cotanche St. Tuesday. Fire department Battalion Chief Don Mills, who said the blaze was reported at 12:51 p.m., said the fire apparently started in the kitchen. Mills said a resident, who had been cooking, placed a pan of hot grease on a counter, then went next door. He returned in about five minutes to find the kitchen ablaze. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

Ineligible Votes Cast

Still, Kirby said he felt most of the ineligible voters were Dupree supporters, and he will ask the state board to certify Garrett the winner.

Records show nine Republicans and one unaffiliated voter were allowed to vote in the Carolina precinct, four Republicans and one unaffiliated voter were allowed to vote in Bethel, one Republican and two unaffiliated voters were allowed to vote in Greenville No. 1, two Republicans were allowed to vote in Greenville No. 3 and one Republican voted in Belvoir and in Greenville No. 5.

Of the Republicans who voted, 16 are white, one is black and one's race is listed as "other." Of the four unaffiliated voters that voted, one is white and three are black.

Dupree carried Carolina, Bethel and Belvoir by large margins, and Garrett handily carried Greenville precincts No. 1, 3 and 5.

"Hopefully, we'll address it Friday. What effect this is going to have on the outcome? This I don't know," Garrett said. "We'll point out the election did go down racial lines. It stands to reason those folks did vote for Mr. Dupree; proving it is the big job. If the Republicans did (vote for Dupree), that would just increase our margin."

Dupree's attorney, James A. Nelson Jr. of Greenville, has asked for a new election since the recount, and he said the state board may order a new election because of the ineligible voters.

"The state board could always skip all the hoopla in this race and say, 'We're not going to give Mr. Dupree a new election based on his complaints, but we're going to give him a new election based on Republicans voting in the primary,'" Nelson said.

"I'm sure it has happened before, but it has not been a number to this extent that I know of," said elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee of Greenville.

"If one or two (Republicans or unaffiliated voters) voted and the vote difference was bigger, it wouldn't matter," Mrs. Hardee said. "It would not have been a sufficient number to cast doubt, and the board would have made a judicial notice of it, but no action would have been needed — unless there was more involved than carelessness."

Garrett has complained that the county commissioner race has been "highly racial," but Mrs. Hardee said the error that allowed people other than registered Democrats to vote was probably an inadvertent mistake caused by carelessness by precinct workers.

Voters are supposed to state their name, address and party when they enter the polling site, she said, but when voters know precinct workers personally, they sometimes do not follow procedure.

"Somebody didn't do their work at the polls; it's as simple as that," Kirby said. "It's very clear Republicans were not eligible to vote."

Sally Glisson of Stokes, registrar for the Carolina precinct, said as far as she knew no one other than registered Democrats voted in her precinct in the May 31 primary runoff.

The error also occurred in another race. A statewide Democratic primary runoff for a seat on the N.C. Court of Appeals was also on the ballot May 31, and 11 Republicans outside of Consolidated District A were allowed to vote in the race, but the margin was too great to affect the election.

Treatment Center On Board Agenda

A decision on whether to allow a substance abuse treatment center along Chestnut Street is one of several items to be considered by the Greenville Board of Adjustment at its monthly meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

The board is also scheduled to consider a request by Derek P. Dunn and J. Auburn Hall Jr., to obtain a special use permit to construct 176 multifamily units within an eight-lot subdivision totaling 9.8 acres and using land-use-intensity development standards. The property is located on the north side of SW Greenville Boulevard, approximately 150 feet west of Laughinghouse Drive, and is zoned R-6 (high-density residential).

Other items to be considered Thursday include:

Drugs Allowed

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The U.S. Air Force said today its pilots are allowed to take a stimulant to combat fatigue on long flights and sedatives to help them sleep later.

Responding to a report on West German television, the Air Force said use of the drugs is barred for "normal, day-to-day training flights."

The statement comes amid growing concern among West Germans about the safety of low-level training runs following a series of accidents here.

On June 29, three Air Force F-16s crashed in two accidents in West Germany. One pilot was killed when two of the jets collided in the air. The accidents brought to five the number of F-16 fighter jets that have crashed in West Germany within three months.

A March 31 crash in the town of Forst killed the pilot and a person on the ground. It came one day after a French Mirage jet fighter crashed in southern Bavaria near a nuclear power plant.

Meese

Burns said Bush participated actively in the meeting. "He was both vocal and there was a lot of body language," he said.

Meanwhile, Meese's supporters were trying to undercut congressional testimony by the former top aides.

Complimentary letters about the attorney general from 10 current and former Justice Department officials were released at the same time Tuesday that the Senate committee was hearing testimony highly critical of Meese.

Burns told the committee the attorney general was responsible for a "deep malaise" in the Justice Department.

Meese responded by citing the favorable letters, saying "it appears that the rest of the leaders of the department don't agree with Mr. Burns and they're the ones that are much closer to the career employees."

Weld testified to the committee that he resigned in protest last March 29, along with Burns, after telling Meese that the attorney general had probably broken the law.

Replacements for Weld and Burns face confirmation hearings this week before the judiciary committee. Weld's successor, acting Assistant Attorney General Edward Dennis, undergoes hearings today along with acting Associate Attorney General Frank Keating.

Good Leaf News

RALEIGH (AP) — If opening-day figures on Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco belts are any indication for North Carolina brightleaf, sales will be strong this year and prices will be higher than in 1987, officials say.

"This is good news for our tobacco farmers," state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said Tuesday. "The improved prices, plus the strong demand, indicate that the markets will be as good as we expected."

The Federal-State Market News Service said Georgia sales Tuesday totaled 2.16 million pounds at an average of $136.87 per hundred pounds. In Live Oak, Fla., 391,581 pounds were sold at an average of $135.07 per hundred.

Last year on opening day, 2.2 million pounds sold in the two states at an average of $127.89 per hundred, with no tobacco placed under loan.

"Generally these trends hold up and continue from one belt to another," said Reggie Lester of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee. "Sometimes the prices are not the same due to variances in weather and quality, but the trends seem to hold."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Progress

Why Aren't All The Trailers Gone?

For a school system, a trailer is neither a good investment nor a good learning environment.

Mobile units are expensive to maintain, costly to move and suffer more deterioration from normal use than permanent facilities. They are often substandard and because of design, don't make good classrooms. They are, at best, short-term solutions to a school system's instruction space crunch.

So why does Pitt County still use 90 trailers to house students and programs? Why hasn't the $3 million budgeted annually for school construction by the county commissioners since 1985 eradicated the trailers at the county's schools?

When Greenville and Pitt County's schools merged two years ago, one of the goals of the consolidated system was to eliminate mobile units through a five-year $3 million per year allotment. The money came from a 10-cent per $100 in value tax increase. In short, the public is paying to replace these trailers with permanent, satisfactory school facilities.

But in 1986, when the schools merged, the system inherited 90 mobile units that were utilized as classrooms. Now, two years and $6 million later, all 90 units are being readied for the 1988-1989 school year. These temporary facilities have taken up permanent residence at Pitt's schools.

Why? The money hasn't been spent capriciously by the school system. A new desperately-needed elementary school has been built. Major classroom additions are complete at D.H. Conley and North Pitt. Long-overdue renovations to inadequate lunchrooms and substandard sewer systems were undertaken. And still building needs are overwhelming.

The answer is two-fold.

First, the school system played catch-up with the special funding. Construction needs in the system are urgent and large. As the system has addressed the most pressing deficiencies, growth has negated progress. Two steps up, one step back. Funds have fallen short.

Second, politics played a role in the expenditures, both with the county commission and the board of education. Pitt County has not been totally faithful to its special construction funding promise. Granted, the commissioners have provided at least $3 million annually, but in the 1988-89 budget, that allotment included all capital needs — not just those projects earmarked for merger-related construction. Consequently, the building power of the school system has declined.

In addition, funding allocations by the board of education have been highly political. The board, when doling out funds, sought to pacify constituents, to make sure every attendance area got attention, rather than putting the money where needs are most glaring.

Hence the 90 trailers that will be filled in September with kids trying to learn and teachers trying to teach in an inadequate learning environment.

The mobile units ought to go. They are costly and unsatisfactory. The school system has eliminated none of them since merger. It should be truer to its goals and its charge of quality education for the county's youngsters.

Smiling Farmers

Good Weather, Enough Strong Backs

For eastern North Carolina farmers everything seems to be coming up roses.

Not only has the region had far better rainfall than most of the nation, but prices area farmers will receive for their crops will likely be helped by the drought of the Midwest.

And with a good tobacco crop and lower crop assessments, growers can expect a profitable year.

The last good news for farmers is that there is an abundance of workers to get in the bumper crops they are growing. In Pitt County it is estimated there are now 3,500 migrant laborers. There is also a good supply of local labor and that means there are enough farm hands to get the job done.

There was a fear that more stringent enforcement of immigration laws might reduce migrant labor but that doesn't seem to be the case in Pitt County or eastern North Carolina. Enough strong backs and willing hands are available.

It hasn't always been that way. As the rural population decreased farmers in past years found it difficult to obtain help, particularly for labor intensive tobacco harvesting. That often meant unexpected increases in production costs which made showing a farm profit difficult.

In 1988 there is a good labor supply and prices for farm products are projected to be good. It is a year when farmers can sport smiles.

Public Forum

To the Editor:

Is it just a coincidence that Carlton Smith (ex-Pitt County GOP Chairman) made Under the Dome (N&O) and the front page of the Greenville Daily Reflector the day after the Democratic Convention ended? I think not. It does seem odd to me, however, that Mr. Smith resigned and switched his registration in the first part of June and the papers did not carry an account of it until the latter part of July. Another coincidence I suppose.

Being one of the Martinoids that Smith referred to, I do feel the need to respond. He took over leadership of the Pitt County GOP in March of '87. Having no political experience or agenda, the Robertson supporters found it easy to wrest control from Smith in March of '88. Mr. Smith had not been effective in his role as chairman and was unable to unite the party factions. Last year Smith held a press conference about Jack Hawke and the Board of Elections. He only repeated himself in his latest conference — old news I believe. I resent the inference that the problems Mr. D.D. Garrett is having with his political race are being caused by Martinoids. Shake the bushes and some good ole boys will fall out.

I would caution my fellow Eastern North Carolinians to beware of the following: Greeks bearing gifts — Those seeking the RED NECK vote — Changeling Republicans.

To the editor:

When will those of us who hold onto moral values stand for what's right? I'm not just talking about the Christian community, but anyone who wants to hold onto some moral values to help us have a better society and environment to raise and pass on to our children.

We have been very passive and have allowed just about any and everything degrading to creep into our lives. We've kept quiet and turned the other cheek, so to speak; refused to get involved — while our laws and Constitution have been twisted around.

AFA Journal informs us of the movie, "The Last Temptation of Christ" being released in October by Universal Studios. It portrays Jesus as a common man. Excerpts from the script are as follows:

*Jesus tells a group of poor and sick who ask Him for healing: "Get away. You sicken me. You're selfish and full of hate. God won't help you."

*"The story has Jesus marrying Mary Magdalene. His guardian angel wants to watch while Jesus and Mary engage in sex. The guardian angel says to Jesus: "It's me. I wondered if I could watch (the couple engage in sex). I'm lonely, too."

*After Mary Magdalene is killed, Jesus moves in with Mary and Martha, the sisters of Lazarus, and has children with both of them.

An introduction page of the script quotes Kazantzakis, the author, saying: "It is not God who will save us. It is we who will save God, by battling, by creating and transmuting matter into spirit."

Folks, it's never wrong to stand for what's right! We need to contact our local theaters and urge them not to show this trash, as well as encourage them to cut down on the trash they sometimes show already! Remember, it is our kids who end up being influenced and hurt most by allowing such trash to be seen by them.

The Elephants Need A Woman

WASHINGTON — It was the most satisfactory convention for the Democrats since 1976. They left Atlanta superficially united, with a strong ticket and a feeling of exuberance. The Republicans have a tough row to hoe from now to November.

This is not to say that Michael Dukakis can begin choosing the portraits to hang in his Oval Office. Democrats face a few hurdles of their own. It is to suggest that George Bush and the Republicans must stir some excitement, get the country's attention, and present a new and contrasting image of widespread appeal.

Toward that end, Bush should do two things: He should withhold the name of his vice presidential choice until the last possible minute at the New Orleans convention. If the convention is not to expire of terminal boredom before it begins, the GOP needs all the suspense it can get. Then he should surprise the country with an unexpected nominee: Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas.

The conventional wisdom, which is as often right as wrong, says that Bush should choose a Midwesterner. The conventional wisdom, therefore, puts forth the name of Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas. On paper it makes sense.

Dole is known nationally; he has fine credentials in the Senate; he has a quick wit and a sharp tongue.

But there are problems with Dole. Politically speaking, he is not exactly damaged goods, but he is last season's model. He is an old warhorse suffering from a touch of the spavins and heaves. He was little help to Gerald Ford in the losing campaign of 1976; his bid for this year's presidential nomination collapsed in the primaries; his barbed wire wit, which delights the press, has a way of snagging others. Lots of people actively dislike Dole, and foremost among them, sad to say, is a gentleman named George Bush.

Nobody — well, almost nobody — is mad at Nancy Kassebaum. She is a class act in every way, a lady of impeccable taste, feminine charm, absolute integrity and spirited independence. As the daughter of Alf Landon, the Republican presidential nominee of 1936, she holds solid party credentials. She is certainly the most loved and probably the most respected member of the Senate. She has the steel spine of a Margaret Thatcher and the warm smile of a Helen Hayes. She has served in the Senate since 1978 as a member of the Budget Committee and the Committee on Foreign Relations. A successful businesswoman, she is the mother of four. She turns 56 this week.

A truism bears repeating. The first thing a presidential nominee may ask of his running mate is simply this: Don't hurt me. Except in one area, which I will get to in a minute, Kassebaum could not possibly hurt the ticket. In one essential respect, she might greatly help it. Half a dozen polls have turned up an alarming "gender gap" of 14 points between Dukakis and Bush. Women tend to favor the Democratic ticket by roughly 57 to 43 percent. Kassebaum is 5 feet, 2 inches of very womanly woman.

Yes, there are negatives. The far right fringe of the Republican Party would quiver and howl at her selection. These elephants have long memories, and they will remember that Kassebaum voted against the confirmation of Judge Daniel Manion two years ago. She cast what turned out to be a decisive vote against a constitutional amendment to mandate a federally balanced budget. Her congressional scorecards lie squarely in the moderate middle: She rates 45 percent with Americans for Democratic Action, 21 with the AFL-CIO, 58 with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, 41 with the American Conservative Union. Last September she voted against $310 million in military aid to the Nicaraguan contras. There is not much here to gladden the hearts of Jesse Helms and Human Events.

On the other hand, Kassebaum qualifies as a strong fiscal conservative; last year she fought to freeze 1988 appropriations, with certain exceptions, at 1987 levels. She is an unremitting critic of the United Nations. She opposes the whole idea of independent counsels. On agricultural issues, which count so heavily in the Midwest, her voting record closely parallels Bob Dole's.

To return to the political point: The Democrats have a new image — a very self-assured one — in Michael Dukakis. They have a star of sorts in Jesse Jackson. The Republicans have no one to turn out a curious crowd or to inspire a sense of warmth and affection. Think it over, George. Alf Landon's daughter Nancy looks better all the time.

Safer For Urban Areas

RALEIGH — North Carolina taxpayers will spend an extra $18 million to hire an all-adult corps of bus drivers to transport their children to and from school next year. Will the extra money make the ride any safer?

In urban areas, yes, says the state's transportation director. In rural areas, the addition of adult drivers probably won't make much difference.

Norfleet Gardner, head of transportation services for the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, says the state's system of mostly teen-aged student bus drivers worked well over the years, especially in rural areas.

"When you were in rural environment where there was very little traffic and the students had had experience driving tractors and combines" the system was very safe, he said. "When this talk of going to all adult drivers started up, we had some people call from rural areas asking why we were doing it because they hadn't had an accident in five or six years. How do you improve on that?"

"But we do hope to have a safer system," overall, he said, because a system of student bus drivers just did not work well in the cities.

"In the urban areas, you had a completely different environment. It was very unsafe to take inexperienced drivers and put them on the road," he said. "Of the 13,000 school bus routes, 10 percent are in the six largest urban areas but 45 percent of the accidents occurred in those areas."

The legislature voted to spend $18 million extra next year to provide school bus drivers an average pay hike of $1.19 an hour. The hike will raise the average hourly wage from $4.91 and hour to $6.10. Last year, as the state scrambled to increase the number of adult drivers to avoid having the system shut down by the U.S. Department of Labor, the percentage of adult drivers rose to 58 percent. Next year, that rate will increase to 90 percent. Only about 10 percent of the drivers will be students, and they will all be aged 18 or older.

Local governments should benefit from the state's increased bus driver funding. Many had begun supplementing driver salaries with local money as they attempted to reduce the number of student drivers.

Now that the schools offer $6.10 and hour and state benefits to bus drivers, Gardner hopes that a sizable permanent bus driver corps will develop. "We're hoping to get more bus drivers who will stick with us," he said. But driving a bus only takes about half of a workday. So some schools are looking for other jobs for adult bus drivers to fill out their schedules thus making the service full time. "We're looking at spots as custodians, lunch room helpers and even teaching assistants," he said.

"We have people applying for jobs and we don't have really good background records on them, if they have an arrest record or one for substance abuse. So we've had to develop a whole new system of screening applicants," Gardner said.

U.S. Power Brought Iran To Negotiating Table

Analysis

The Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's capitulation to his more pragmatic advisers and the "beginning of the end" of his eight-year theocratic crusade to turn back the clock throughout the world of Islam are events of profound importance to other states in the region, to industrialized democracies and to all others with a stake in global stability.

What was seen, as recently as five years ago, as one of the most dangerous and intractable threats facing the Western world in the late 20th century has been checked.

It is important that we understand what has happened and how we contributed to producing this rather promising turn of events if we are to be able to advance from checking it to consolidating a more stable modus vivendi with Iran. But before getting to that, it is worthwhile to recall just how historic a change in circumstances this has been and how close we came to possible catastrophe.

First, try to recall another example in which a first-generation revolutionary has broken faith with the revolution that he has inspired — not Lenin, Mao, Ho, Castro, Nasser or Gadhafi. First-generation revolutionaries cannot afford to change course; the revolutionary goals that they use to justify enormous sacrifice, death and suffering are their raison d'être. To break faith with the original goals after so much death and agony — to say to the faithful that you were wrong, misguided or inept — is out of the question for most revolutionary leaders. But this is essentially what Khomeini has done.

Consider also what might have been. Khomeini's original goals included the gradual subversion of the existing order and the installation of fundamentalist extremists through the sponsorship of radical Shia movements throughout the Moslem world, from Morocco to Indonesia. Concurrently, he hoped to expel the Western presence from this same area, creating paradoxically a power vacuum in the most resource-rich, geopolitically dominant terrain in the world.

Setting aside the strategic importance of such waterways as the straits of Gibraltar, Suez, Malacca and Lombok, traffic through which might ultimately have been affected by Khomeini's fundamentalist crusade, we get a sense of the risk that we have averted by considering the importance of the Persian Gulf itself. Like Imperial Russia before it, the Soviet Union long has coveted Persia as an avenue for projecting power, for commercial benefit and, more recently, for the strategic leverage to be gained in controlling two-thirds of the world's crude-oil reserves. To dominate the Persian Gulf in the late 20th century is to be able to bring the international economy to its knees. In short, had Khomeini succeeded in achieving his goal — or if a like-minded successor decides to try again after 5 or 10 years — the global equilibrium would be fundamentally tilted against Western interests.

Why hasn't this scenario developed, what did we contribute to preventing it, and how can we avoid it in the future?

The central reason for Khomeini's failure was the effect within Iran of the prolonged, unwinnable war with Iraq. None of the advantages that Iran originally enjoyed — superior numbers (by 3-1), better original equipment or the inspirational value of defending the revolution against aggression — could compensate for the ineptitude of its own military leaders or, ultimately, Iraq's gradual development of its decisive advantages in air power. As this air power was applied to the interdiction of oil production, refining and shipping — Iran's source of hard currency — Iran lost the ability to import weapons for the war and food for its population. And in that population every family has lost a son or more. Even as powerful a concept as religious martyrdom will lose ultimately to grief.

For the Iranian masses and the more street-smart faction among their leaders, an apparently unwinnable war accompanied by worsening poverty were unsustainable conditions. For Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani it was a matter of personal political expediency — change the policy or be swept away.

For Khomeini it became a matter of salvaging the idea of the revolution and enough of the faithful to fight another day. The second factor was the failure of the hoped-for revolution outside Iran. After eight years of investment, Iran could count only Lebanon as a state in which Shia partisans were sufficiently organized and powerful to exercise a measure of influence on events. And even there it was at the sufferance of Iran's uncertain ally, Syria. Nowhere else had Shia minorities rallied to the cause in significant numbers. Far from serving as a platform for pan-Islamic leadership, Khomeini's incitement to violence led to his isolation within the Islamic community that he sought to lead.

But neither of these conditions — Iran's inability to win the war or the rallying of Arab opposition — would have developed without the intervention of the United States and other allies. The purpose of that intervention — too often clouded by extraneous declarations of principle — was to prevent either side from winning and, by succeeding in that strategy, to bring them both to a negotiated settlement in which we could re-establish over time a stable relationship with Iran — the strategic prize of the area. It had little to do with defending "freedom of the seas" or neutrality.

When in early 1987 Iran made a strategic gain on the Faw Peninsula, we tilted blatantly in favor of Iraq as we had at similar moments before. Presumably, if Iraq had ever shown a real prospect of winning, we would have sought to cut off its supply of arms and oppose the Baghdad regime in other ways as well.

Whether or not the Iranian leaders actually believed that the United States would enter the war against them — I can imagine Rafsanjani making that case to Khomeini for self-serving reasons — is moot. What is important is that they could see enough bipartisan support in our Congress to sustain our naval presence, which, at the end of the day, would ensure that Iraq received the supplies it needed to dominate the war and to squeeze the Iranian economy dry.

We ought to remember how we did it, for we may have to do it again. We adopted a sound political strategy, backed it up with power and the will to use it.

Robert C. McFarlane, former national-security adviser to President Reagan, is a counselor at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

House Panel Votes To Impeach U.S. Judge

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee on Tuesday recommended 32-1 that U.S. District Judge Alcee L. Hastings of Miami be impeached on 17 counts of misconduct despite his previous acquittal at a bribery trial.

Hastings is the first federal judge to face impeachment after being cleared in a criminal court on the same charges. He also is the first black to be charged in impeachment proceedings, and several committee members wondered aloud if he weren't a victim of racism.

In Miami, Hastings said that those who voted against him "acted in blind ignorance." He added that "I'm in a fighting mood. There's no way to remove a real warrior."

House approval of the impeachment articles — akin to an indictment — would send the case to the Senate for a trial on whether he should be removed from his lifetime judgeship. The House acts by a simple majority, but a conviction must be carried by a two-thirds majority of senators present and voting.

Eleven cases have reached an impeachment trial in the Senate, and five officials have been removed — all federal judges. The last case was that of Harry E. Claiborne, a Nevada federal judge ousted in October 1986.

The 51-year-old Hastings is accused by the committee of conspiring to solicit a bribe from two defendants who appeared before him — the charges that led to his acquittal in a 1983 trial — and of lying about the scheme to the jurors. The latter allegation was brought by judges from the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which covers Florida, and supported by the Judicial Conference, the policy-making body of the federal judiciary.

In Tuesday's committee votes, Rep. George W. Crockett Jr., D-Mich., opposed all but one of the impeachment articles, while Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla., opposed one of the articles. Three separate votes of 32-1 sent the 17 impeachment articles to the House floor.

Smith, who is white, and Crockett, black, were among those who expressed the most anguish about the case. It was a wrenching experience, too, for Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., a black who is chairman of the subcommittee that investigated Hastings.

Smith, who has known the outspoken Hastings for years, said he "cannot shake the feeling" that "there was a bit of racism involved."

But, as he appeared near tears, Smith said racism could not be the "sole motivation" for the allegations, because there were "too many unique circumstances that can't be explained away by coincidence." Crockett, a former city judge in Detroit, said anyone denying that racism was involved in the case "closes his eyes to conditions that still exist."

But the lawmaker said the issue is "whether he's competent to sit in judgment of his fellow man and brings credit to the judiciary." He said any judge who allowed himself to become involved in such a case "is too dumb to sit in judgment of anyone."

Hastings said he feared that members of the House who are not Judiciary Committee members "will vote in even blinder ignorance."

The judge's lawyer, Terence Anderson, added in Washington, "Judge Hastings hasn't fought for five years to hold on to a $90,000 job. We're fighting on principle."

In addition to the bribery and false statements articles, Hastings was accused of leaking federal wiretap information to the mayor of Dade County, Fla., Steve Clark.

William Borders, a Washington attorney, was convicted of participating with Hastings in the bribery scheme, but the judge was acquitted in a separate trial — a verdict that committee members said was inconsistent.

Hastings said he supported a proposal by Smith to have the full Senate hear the evidence. In the last impeachment trial, U.S. District Judge

Harry E. Claiborne was removed from office by the Senate in October 1986 after evidence was heard by a special impeachment committee.

Conyers, who gave an extensive account of the evidence against

Hastings, said he was initially "skeptical" of the allegations and wondered whether "racism could be the source" of the charges.

But Conyers, who said he joined the Judiciary Committee to remedy racism in the judiciary, said he looked "for a scintilla of evidence of racism" and "couldn't find any." "Black public officials must be held to the same standard as all other public officials," he said.

A Whopper

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Doctors had told Amalia Lara to expect a big baby, but their 10-pound estimate wasn't even close. Her newborn son, Isaac, tipped the scales at 13 pounds, 6 ounces.

Isaac, born Sunday, is off the chart at the state Bureau of Vital Statistics, which only goes up to 11 pounds, 1 ounce.

He's already wearing medium-size diapers and scrunching to fit into a cradle.

"We were pretty surprised," Mrs. Lara said Tuesday. "The nurses were saying to my husband 'Did you do this?'"

Mrs. Lara said she feels fine and is looking forward to taking her son home today. The newborn, 24 1/4 inches long and about the size of a 3-month-old, was a star attraction at the hospital.

"We had quite a few extra visitors wanting to see the baby," said Carol Harwell, a nurse on duty the night Isaac was born. "Other nurses on break, other moms who had just had babies ... everyone wanted to see him."

The boy is the fifth child for Apolonio Lara, 30, and his wife, 27, of Altamonte Springs. The baby was four days overdue and delivered naturally, unusual for a baby his size.

"He has to be pretty close to the world record for a vaginal delivery," said Dr. Jeffrey Koren, who delivered Isaac.

The 1988 Guinness Book of World Records has no such category. It says the two heaviest viable babies weighed 22 1/2 pounds at birth.

Mrs. Lara and her husband, a construction worker, have two other sons and two daughters, ages 3 to 11. Their 3-year-old son was nearly 11 pounds at birth.

The doctor noted that Isaac drank 8 ounces of formula within a few hours of birth.

"I'm glad she's not nursing or she'd be up all night," Mrs. Lara's husband said.

Super Collider Could Be A Cancer Clinic, Too

DURHAM (AP) — In addition to providing information about the origin of the earth, the proposed super-conducting super collider also could be used for a specialized cancer treatment clinic, cancer specialists say.

The proposed site in Durham, Granville and Person counties — which is competing with sites in six other states — would be beneficial because of the medical resources in the Triangle, said the scientists, who came from Duke, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and N.C. State University.

"We have the medical people capable of using this important tool for cancer research," Dr. Edward Halperin said Tuesday. "We have here an organized patient-referral network for proper clinical trials."

"The average citizen is probably not very persuaded by the physics of particle research," Halperin, a Duke University associate professor in the Division of Radiation Oncology, said at a news conference at Duke Medical Center.

"But the average citizen doesn't have to think too hard to think that, maybe their niece, or their daughter, or their grandchild may have a cancer which can't be treated here or in Atlanta or in the whole southeast part of the United States."

The scientists proposed establishing a medical clinic for pro-ton and neutron cancer treatment on the grounds of the collider. Patients would receive much of their treatment in area hospitals, but would go to the collider site to receive the proton or neutron treatment, which researchers believe could be more effective than traditional radiation therapy.

The super collider would solve two great problems with the usual X-rays treatment, Halperin said.

First, X-rays cannot be focused to hit only the tumor.

An individual beam hits skin before it hits the tumor, and then the beam continues on through the tumor and through whatever part of the body is behind it. Thus healthy tissue as well as the tumor suffers.

A beam of protons, however, gives off most of its energy in one small burst, Halperin said. The proton beam can be aimed so that the burst takes place mainly right over the tumor, exposing healthy skin to practically no harmful radiation.

"This is not Buck Rogers," Halperin said. "We don't want to make a ray gun. We just want to hit the tumor and then stop."

The second problem with the usual treatment is that X-rays are not powerful enough to affect some tumors which are strong enough to resist radiation.

A beam of neutrons gives off its energy in much more concentrated intervals, which even most radiation-resistant tumors can't survive.

The super collider, according to the scientists, would produce much higher proton and neutron beam energy levels than is now possible.

Merger Faces AME Zion Delegates

By The Associated Press
Delegates to the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church conference, which opens in Charlotte today, will discuss a proposed merger with a smaller black denomination, the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

The conference, which draws from the 1.5 million members worldwide, will include discussions of funding for Livingstone College and Hood Theological Seminary in Salisbury and presentation of bishops' statements on social issues including the role of the black family. The 10-day conference is held every four years.

Expected to draw more than 7,000 persons, the conference will feature speeches by the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Gov. Jim Martin.

Bishop John H. Miller of Raleigh, president of the board of bishops, expects many church members to attend from the Triangle and eastern North Carolina, although they are not voting delegates.

"We're a hotbed of Zion Methodists," Miller said. Church membership includes 34,000 in the Charlotte area and Western North Carolina and 41,000 in the Triangle and eastward.

In his keynote address, Miller will open the conference with a call to look beyond the troubles of church, such as financial woes. "We who are the children of God have the power to see beyond the physical," he said.

"Our church needs that vision," Miller said.

The merger of the AME Zion and CME churches will be a major topic for the conference, Miller said. While a union of the two churches has been discussed for almost 100 years, the current proposal has been in the works for about 10 years.

"It would help us in economic terms, also educational, evangelical and missionary," Miller said.

The AME Zion Church has 1.5 million members, including about 75,000 in North Carolina. The CME Church has about 780,000 members.

Federal Money For AIDS Drug May Run Out Soon

WILMINGTON (AP) — Federal money that buys a life-prolonging drug for people with AIDS may be running out, state officials say.

AZT, which boosts the immune system, can reduce fatigue, infections and other symptoms of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. The drug, which is manufactured by Burroughs Wellcome of Research Triangle Park and is marketed under the brand name Retrovir, costs almost $700 a month. That is a heavy burden for AIDS victims who, in many cases, are unable to work.

For the past year, $176,000 in federal funds has paid for AZT for about 50 people in North Carolina. The funding year ends in September, and no plans exist to fund an AZT-buying program for next year, officials said.

"It means they may have to go off the drug," said Richard Moore, of the state Division of Health Services. "And the drug is what's keeping them alive. You can draw your own conclusions from that."

Leo Teachout, a Wilmington gay rights activist and founder of an AIDS resource and support project, said his group helps 39 people in this area get AZT either from the federal funds or through other sources, such as Medicaid.

"There's been no effort to get continued funding for it when it runs out, and there's no indication from the federal level that they're going to renew it," Teachout said. "That's like taking dialysis away from a kidney patient."

Medicaid, in some cases, will pay for AZT. But Medicaid eligibility is based on income and can leave people without AZT for months at a time.

Although the money for AZT is scheduled to run out in September, people receiving it now probably will continue to get it until December, said Rebecca Meriwether, head of the state's Communicable Disease Control Branch.

Poisoning Reported

ROCKY MOUNT (AP) — A 3-year-old Rocky Mount child is in the hospital and his father and pregnant mother are living in a hotel following a rare case of mercury poisoning in the family's home, officials said.

Workers from the North Carolina Health Department's Division of Health Services said they detected liquid mercury in the carpet of Larry Williams' house July 15.

Peter Morris, a medical physician epidemiologist, said no determination has been made on how the mercury was spilled in the house, but that it occurred within the last few months.

The child is under observation at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, officials said.

Doctors do not believe the mercury will affect the mother's fetus.

After the carpet is removed, Morris said the family may be able to move back into the house by the end of the week.

Although there have been cases of occupational exposure to mercury in the U.S., domestic poisonings are very rare, Morris said.

The metallic, liquid form of mercury is found primarily in thermometers, electrical equipment, blood pressure reading equipment, watch batteries and dental equipment.

Teens Are Arrested

ROCKY MOUNT (AP) — Two Rocky Mount teen-agers have been arrested for allegedly setting the fire that caused extensive damage to a Rocky Mount church, authorities said.

Michael Latham Ramsey, 16, was charged Monday with unlawful burning of the Englewood United Methodist Church and felonious breaking and entering, said Maj. W.R. Williams of the Rocky Mount Police Department.

The second youth, 15, has been interviewed and has been petitioned to appear in juvenile court, Williams said.

Damage to the church is estimated at $750,000, authorities said.

Policeman Sues City

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro police officer is suing the city three years after a fire destroyed his garage and an unmarked police car at his house as firefighters tried to use hydrants that had no water or very little pressure.

The lawsuit was filed last week in Guilford County Superior Court by William David Comer, a sergeant with the Greensboro Police Department, and his wife, Jennie.

The Comers claim the city was negligent by not maintaining adequate water pressure in three nearby hydrants to extinguish the 1985 blaze before it engulfed the garage. The Comers are asking for more than $10,000 in damages from the city.

State Sets Cleanup

ASHEBORO (AP) — State officials said that they will remove 100 truckloads of contaminated dirt from a neighborhood where a battery recycler spilled lead in the 1960s and 1970s.

The soil in the neighborhood, which is just north of Ulah in rural Randolph County, is up to 14 percent lead — or 300 times the safe level — near some homes, officials said Monday.

The cleanup is scheduled to begin in mid-September and will cost the state $350,000.

Leaf To Be Certified

RALEIGH (AP) — When North Carolina tobacco markets open next week, growers again will have to certify that they have not used illegal pesticides on their crop.

This is the second year for the pesticide precautions, which began after samples from the 1986 export tobacco crop showed traces of illegal pesticides. Of 147 samples taken that year from the five flue-cured growing states, seven tested positively for the chemicals. Those chemicals include Dicamba, a pesticide that causes yellowing of tobacco leaves. One of the seven samples was found in North Carolina, officials said.

While the pesticides do not pose a health threat in processed tobacco, they can inflate the price of the leaf by giving it a golden color, which generally is a sign to buyers that the tobacco is ripe and full-bodied.

Campaign Begins

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — Starting today, a series of television commercials are scheduled to begin on five area stations, featuring local people telling about the attractions of the community and telling the world: "We're proud of Jacksonville-Onslow."

The commercials, along with other promotions being planned, are part of an effort by the Greater Jacksonville-Onslow Chamber of Commerce to counter images of the community as a cultural combat zone next to Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base, officials said.

"We have an image problem," said Mayor George Jones, who is co-chairman of the image-building campaign. The goal, he said, is to offset images of a crime-ridden community of "bad news."

Waterspout Spotted

WILMINGTON (AP) — A waterspout was seen Tuesday morning about 20 miles offshore of Wrightsville Beach, causing the National Weather Service to issue a marine warning.

Waterspouts are tornadoes occurring over water, and appearing as a rotating column of air full of spray.

The swirling spout was spotted about 8 a.m., according to reports at the National Weather Service in Wilmington. No problems were reported.

After the sighting, the weather service issued a special marine warning until 9 a.m.

S. Dakota Residents Flee Wildfire

By JONATHAN OATIS
Associated Press Writer
Hundreds of firefighters battled a fast-moving wildfire today that forced 500 South Dakotans from their homes, while smokestackers at Yellowstone National Park fought the worst forest fire outbreak there since the late 1800s.

"As the fire passes one area, the engines are moving ahead and trying to get ahead," fire spokesman Corbin Newman said of the blaze that destroyed four homes and damaged a fourth in rural subdivisions west of Rapid City, S.D.

The fires, fueled by drought, were among blazes burning in eight Western and Midwestern states, where tens of thousands of acres of forest, brush and meadow have gone up in smoke. The other states with major fires are Alaska, Arizona, Idaho, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel planned a helicopter tour of Yellowstone for this afternoon to survey the devastation in America's oldest national park.

Hodel was to visit Yellowstone's Grant Village section, scene of some of this week's heaviest firefighting.

Firefighters also kept watch on a 6,000-acre blaze burning six to 10 miles west of Old Faithful. The blaze posed no immediate threat to the famed geyser, but officials planned to use helicopters today to start backfires with a napalm-like substance to slow its advance.

The fire in Rapid City was reported Tuesday afternoon, and rapidly consumed 1,800 acres of forest and meadow in the southwestern South Dakota area that's home to 90,000 people.

"There were areas where you might have a hundred acres go up at once," said Rich Homann, another fire spokesman.

A firefighter and a resident suffered smoke inhalation, and another resident was hurt in a smoke-caused traffic accident, but none of the injuries was serious, Newman said. The fire also burned four vehicles and destroyed a bridge.

More than 250 firefighters fought the blaze through the night, and 140 others were expected to join the battle this morning, said Homann.

Four helicopters and an airplane dropped water and fire retardant to protect homes.

By late Tuesday, the fire was 30 percent contained despite light winds, Newman said.

"The problem with a fire this size and this severe is that it creates its own weather to some degree. It creates its own wind by sucking in oxygen," he said.

To make matters worse, winds were expected to pick up today, temperatures were expected to reach almost 90 degrees and no rain was forecast.

ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
SIERRA VISTA, Ariz. (AP) — An Army lover of a soldier infected with the AIDS virus testified they continued to have sex after she learned of his fatal disease, and two superiors said they urged but didn't order him to abstain.

The soldiers were among 10 prosecution witnesses to testify Tuesday at the court-martial of Pvt. Adrian G. Morris Jr., who in March 1987 became the first member of the military to be charged with AIDS-related offenses.

Morris, 28, of Caseyville, Ill., is accused of threatening the health of one male and two female soldiers by failing to use condoms during sex and by failing to warn them he had tested positive for exposure to the AIDS virus.

His trial opened Tuesday after more than a year's delay. Morris has pleaded innocent to three counts of aggravated assault, three counts of conduct bringing discredit upon the Army and one count of sodomy. He faces a 17-year sentence, dishonorable discharge and loss of all pay and benefits if convicted.

Col. Raymond D. Cole, the military judge in Morris' trial, awaited word today from United States marshals in Pittsburgh on whether they had located the male soldier whose health Morris allegedly threatened.

Six-Pack Rings Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration and the plastics industry are opposing attempts to outlaw plastic six-pack holders in favor of yokes made of biodegradable materials, a change that environmentalists say would protect wildlife.

Administration and industry officials told a House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee Tuesday that more research is necessary to determine what impact the by-products of a degradable holder would have on marine life. But the environmentalists say legislation is needed quickly to save seabirds and marine mammals that are killed by the discarded plastic rings.

Bodies Found On Raised Boat Pushes Sea Collision Toll To 29

By DAVID THURBER
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — A salvage team today raised the wreckage of the fishing boat that collided with a navy submarine and found the bodies of all but one of the missing passengers and crew, coast guard officials said.

Discovery of the 20 bodies in the ship's lounge and cabins raised to 29 the confirmed death toll from Saturday's collision, the officials said. Forty-eight people, most members of a company fishing club, had been on the chartered boat.

Workers used a 230-foot crane to raise the hull to the surface in pre-dawn darkness today near the mouth of Tokyo Bay. A hole was visible in its bow just below the waterline.

Coast guard ships brought victims' relatives to within a few yards of where the boat, the No. 1 Fujimaru, was raised from a depth of about 160 feet.

Survivors, relatives of victims and newspapers charged that crew members aboard the submarine stood by watching on the submarine's deck while victims drowned. The submarine sustained little damage and no injuries were reported among the 75 men on board.

One survivor from the fishing boat told reporters the sub's crewmen stared back as she waved and yelled, "Why won't you help?"

Of the 19 people rescued from the 154-ton fishing boat, which sank in less than two minutes, 16 were picked up by other passing vessels and only three by the submarine. One man died later in a hospital.

News reports said Defense Agency chief Tsutomu Kawara offered his resignation over the accident but will stay on until an investigation is complete. Defense officials said they could not comment on the reports.

The status of Japan's military, officially called the Self-Defense

Forces, is still a sensitive issue after the military excesses of World War II.

The nation's constitution officially bars the maintenance of all "war potential," and sharp public criticism usually follows any accident for which the Self-Defense Forces is responsible.

News reports suggested the captain of the submarine, the 2,200-ton Nadashio, may have erred just before the collision.

The accident occurred as the submarine, traveling on the surface, was cutting across a busy shipping lane to enter Yokosuka naval base, shared by the Japanese and U.S. navies.

Japanese maritime rules say the vessel approaching from the left must take evasive action when on a collision course with another ship, while the second ship must maintain its direction. But Kyodo News Service and NHK television reports quoted the fishing boat's surviving crew as saying the Nadashio, on the left, honked at the fishing boat to warn it out of its path.

Just before the crash, both ships turned in the same direction, and collided almost head-on.

"As captain of the ship, I did my best until the last minute to avoid a collision according to maritime collision prevention laws," Manji Kondo, the 30-year-old captain of the fishing boat, told a televised news conference late Tuesday.

Admiral Shuichiro Higashiyama, navy chief of staff, told reporters today he believes the submarine's crew took proper measures to avoid the accident.

But he said "appropriate actions would be taken" against any officials found responsible for the accident in the final judgment by the Marine Accidents Inquiry Agency.

It was the worst collision between Japanese navy and civilian vessels since World War II, defense officials said.

Marcos And Wife Take Cover After Reported Death Threat

By CHRISTINE DONNELLY
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife, Imelda, spent the night in hiding after their security guards reported armed men cruised past the Marcos estate, a spokesman said.

Three cars drove slowly past the house at about 5:30 a.m. Tuesday, and security guards stationed at the gate of the sprawling hillside home said they saw guns sticking out the car windows, said Marcos' spokesman Gemmo Trinidad.

The unarmed guards, who were on foot, chased the cars but could not get a good description because it was still dark, he said. No shots were fired and no one was injured.

The Marcoses were awakened shortly after the incident and driven to a site on Oahu, said Trinidad.

"They went to a friend's house," he said. "They're still on Oahu and they'll come back as soon as it's safe."

A Honolulu police dispatcher said the incident was not reported, but top Marcos aide Arturo Aruiza said police were asked Tuesday to patrol the Marcos address regularly.

Trinidad said Marcos' entourage had received a threatening call and letter last month "warning us that something untoward will happen to us."

Aruiza said the Marcos household had been warned Tuesday of a plot to kill Marcos.

Security around the house was increased and the Marcoses were expected to return home today, Aruiza said.

The couple have lived in exile in Honolulu since 1986, when Marcos was ousted as president of the Philippines by Corazon Aquino.

Marcos has been negotiating his return to his homeland, but in a statement released through a spokesman Tuesday he denied a published report that he had offered to pay the Philippine government $5 billion to ensure his return free from criminal prosecution on fraud allegations.

Reforms Costly

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's drive to modernize industry and trim fat from management forced nearly 1 million Soviet factory workers out of work in the first half of the year, Radio Moscow reported.

But those laid off are sure to get other jobs "since the government has undertaken to redistribute the labor force in a planned manner," the state-run radio said Tuesday.

Gorbachev, named Communist Party chief in March 1985, has waged a campaign to reform the country's economy, increase productivity and prune the size of the state bureaucracy.

In January, the Communist Party daily Pravda estimated that 16 million Soviets would be laid off in the next 12 years as efficiency increases.

Radio Moscow said: "The number of workers in Soviet industries has gone down by almost 1 million in the first half of the year, compared with the same period last year."

"The national statistical service attributes the fact to the current economic reform, which is introducing more automatic systems and streamlining management," the radio said.

Radio Moscow did not provide the size of the labor force in the country's factories last year or today.

In 1986, 82.1 million of the Soviet Union's 276 million citizens were officially classified as "workers," as distinguished from white-collar service or management personnel and collective farmers.

Ultralight Pilot Killed

EGGENFELDEN, West Germany (AP) — The pilot of an ultralight airplane was killed after his craft apparently struck a West German Tornado jet fighter in flight and crashed, police said.

Police said a preliminary investigation indicated the light plane nicked the fighter before Tuesday's crash. But officials did not rule out the possibility that turbulence from the jet's engine sent the ultralight down.

The dead pilot was not identified. The crash occurred near Eggenfelden, about 60 miles east of Munich.

The jet was not damaged and returned to its base near Munich, officials said.

Police did not say whether the Tornado was on a low-level training flight.

A series of NATO warplane crashes in West Germany in recent weeks has resulted in a growing demand that low-level military training flights be banned or sharply reduced.

Students Detained

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Riot police today arrested about 30 students yelling "Yankee go home" and demonstrating in front of U.S. Army headquarters to demand expulsion of U.S. forces.

Hundreds of riot police in green fatigues and black visored helmets swiftly detained the students as they marched toward the U.S. 8th Army headquarters in southern Seoul. The students, who tried to stage a peaceful sit-down protest, were forced into police buses.

Conservation Is Comic Strip Theme

By WILLIAM E. SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Mark Trail and his alter ego travel from their north Georgia home to Washington this week to be honored by President Reagan for their efforts to develop more pride in America.

A comic strip outdoorsman who has been 32 for 42 years, Trail has lost his creator, his pipe and his mustache, but he still champions the cause of conservation from sea to shining sea.

"Mark's message is that people should preserve natural resources, the woods, water and wildlife, for future generations," said Jack Elrod, who took over the strip when creator Ed Dodd retired in 1979.

"The conservation theme is getting stronger and stronger every day as people are recognizing the necessity of it."

Dodd himself, now 84, lives in Gainesville.

"We try to educate children that natural resources belong to the people. We are trying to reach them when they are young," said Elrod, 63, who joined Dodd in 1950, right out of art school, when "Ed needed an assistant."

Reagan is to present awards to 94 winners at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday on the south lawn of the White House, said Peggy Venable of the Take Pride in America Committee. The 94 were picked from 540 entries nominated by the states. Dodd and Trail represented Georgia in the media category.

"The campaign was to encourage the use and protection of public lands and to honor those who are doing a good job motivating others to protect those lands," she said.

Elrod was honored for his work which included a Sunday comic strip in which Trail urges everyone to "reduce carelessness and abusive activity such as littering, vandalism and theft and wildlife poaching."

In addition, Elrod produced a variety of materials for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, including Mark Trail coloring books to help teach children respect for the country's natural resources.

Trail's home base is Lost Forest, which once was Dodd's retreat north of Atlanta. The city has overrun the area, which now is known as Dunwoody, although Elrod still lives and works there. His studio is in the basement of his two-story home.

While over the years Trail has campaigned against pollution, poaching and destruction of wilderness, "we try to keep Mark away from anything too controversial," Elrod said in an interview.

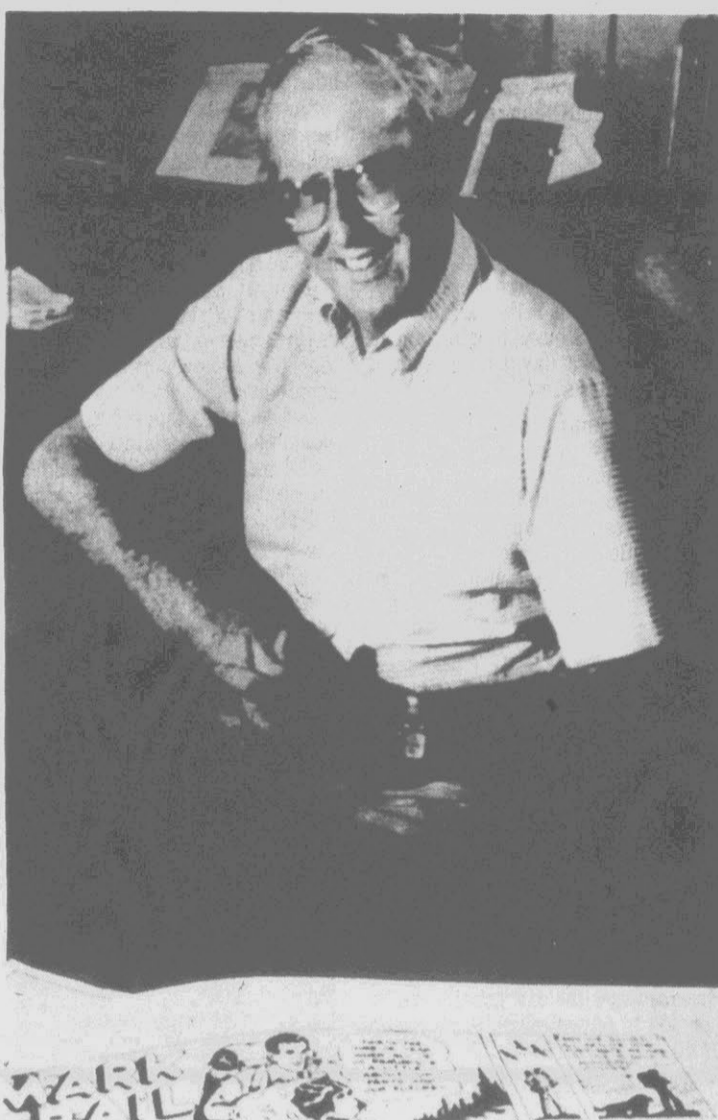

"Mark is on the verge of being an activist, but we never let him go over the edge," he said.

The strip, which is now done entirely by Elrod although it is signed Dodd and Elrod, is done in two parts.

There is the daily black-and-white strip which tells of Trail's outdoor adventures with his faithful St. Bernard dog, Andy, and the color Sunday strip which usually is a profile of an animal, revealing little-known secrets of its life cycle and habitat needs.

"He does it all by himself, doing his own research in that basement studio," said Don Pfitzer of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Atlanta,

"and he almost never makes a mistake, and if he does it's so small only a professional biologist would notice it."

'One Step At A Time' Is Very Successful

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter in your column from "J.M.B.," I couldn't believe my eyes. Let me explain: "J.M.B." said his family was always putting him down and degrading him because he ate only one thing at a time. They thought he was "abnormal."

Thanks for telling him he was not weird or abnormal.

Here's my story: When I was 10 years old, a man for whom I had a

Double-Ring Vows Spoken

DURHAM — Nancy Ruth Gaskins of Ayden and Bruce Morgan Davis of Chapel Hill were united in marriage July 9 at 4 p.m. in the Calvary Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Raymond A. Gaskins of Ayden conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are the Rev. and Mrs. Gaskins of Ayden, and Mr. and Mrs. Claiborne Davis of Chapel Hill.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is a county planner for Hyde County. The bridegroom is a graduate of Chapel Hill High School and is a paramedic supervisor of Emergency Medical Services for Orange County.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

great deal of respect and admiration noticed that when I ate, I would eat only one thing at a time, finish it, then move on to the next item on my plate. He looked at me and said, "Dave, you are going to be very successful in life. Do you know how I can tell? You finish what you start — you don't jump around to whatever looks good to you at the time."

I'm 26 years old now, happily married and the father of a 2-year-old son. I'm enclosing a small clipping to prove that I have achieved some measure of success. If you ever get to Asheville, look me up. — DAVE KNAPP, ASHEVILLE, N.C.

DEAR DAVE: Thanks for the "small clipping." Any man your age who owns and operates 20 Domino's Pizza outlets in North Carolina, Tennessee and the United Kingdom and was a self-made millionaire at 25 is a whopping success in my book. I doubt if eating just one thing at a time automatically ensures your kind of success, but congratulations and continued success.

DEAR ABBY: You once had an excellent reply to a letter from a mother who couldn't understand why her son's grandparents did not send her son a birthday gift this year.

It seems the grandparents were angry because their grandson had failed to send thank-you notes for previous birthday gifts.

Your answer was wonderful. I cut it out, but misplaced it. Please run it again. I want to have copies made to send to two of my grandchildren. For obvious reasons, I must sign this ... NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Here it is: DEAR ABBY: On my son's 16th birthday, he received a birthday card from his grandparents on his father's side. (His father and I are divorced.) "Grandma Jones" added the following handwritten message on the card: "Sorry, Billy, no money this time because we received no thank-you for the money we sent with our card last year. Lots of love, Grandma and Grandpa Jones."

Abby, although these grandparents are retired and living on a fixed income, they are far from poor, and it wouldn't have hurt them to have enclosed a $10 bill. It would have made the difference between my son feeling good or bad on his birthday.

I wrote to my ex-mother-in-law and told her what I thought about her birthday message to Billy. I haven't heard from her since, and I don't expect to.

What do you (and your readers) think about the message a grandmother sent to her grandson on his

16th birthday? — BURNED UP IN BUTTE

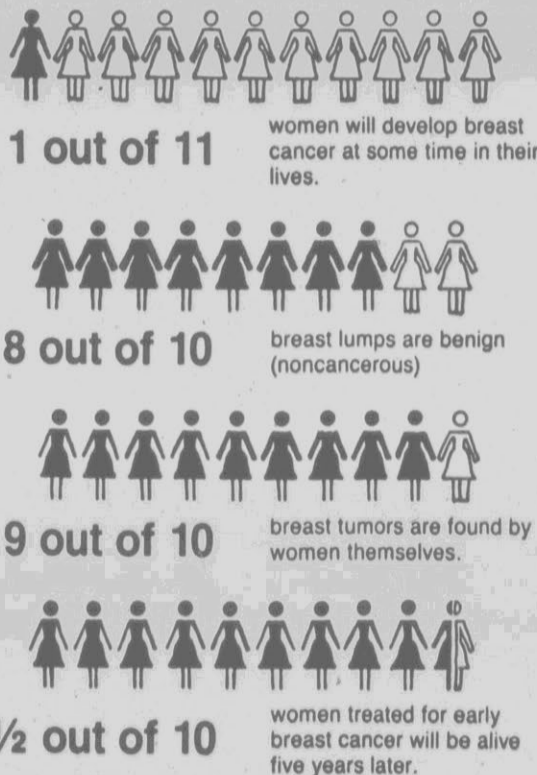

DEAR BURNED: I think Grandma may have given Billy a birthday gift that was far more valuable than a $10 bill.

Start Planning For Holiday Gifts

Now's the time to begin working on the handmade gifts you'd like to have ready for charity bazaars and for the Christmas season. Everyone can use a set of lovely, yet practical, place mats. Either way you make them — knit or crochet — these unusual hexagon-shaped mats are a knockout.

The knit set features an easily mastered ladder stitch, while the crochet set is a combination of common crochet stitches forming a stylized floral center on a lacy background. Each design is attractive enough to be used as a wall hanging or pillow cover, too — just use your imagination to display them. For easy care, an acrylic yarn with the look and feel of silky cotton is used.

To obtain directions for making both sets of Hexagon Place Mats, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-072488 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or your may order Kit No. N-072488

by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and sufficient acrylic yarn to make either a knit or crochet set of four mats in your choice of peach, silver, violet, jade, natural or white.

Dear Pat: I like it when you put instructions for small items to knit or crochet in your column. Why not give us directions for making pin cushions, which are nice to give friends or shut-ins? — Viola Y., Pageland, S.C.

Dear Viola: This sounded like a good idea to me, but when I looked through my collection of patterns, I couldn't find a single pin cushion among them. But, since you only need to make a couple of matching pieces — squares, rectangles or circles — from odd bits of leftover yarns, you could use this as an ideal way to try new pattern stitches in a creative way.

Just to show you how simple an interesting knit pattern stitch can be, try the "surprise" rib stitch. Cast on any number of stitches evenly divisible by 6. Row 1: (knit 3, purl 3). Row 2: (knit 1, purl 1). On each row, repeat the steps in parentheses all across the row. Rows 1 and 2 are repeated for the desired length of the pattern. The surprise is that the two sides are identical with seed stitch appearing between the knit ribs.

Or try the two-color waffle stitch, casting on any odd number of stitches with Color A. Knit all stitches for Rows 1 and 2, using Color A. Knit all stitches for Rows 1 and 2, using Color A. Row 3: With Color B, (knit 1 stitch, slip 1 stitch keeping yarn in back of work) repeating the steps in parentheses across row; end with knit 1. Row 4: With Color B, work same as for Row 3 except bring yarn forward to slip stitches, taking it back before each knit stitch.

A very simple crochet stitch starts with any odd number of chain stitches. Work it in one color or in stripes created by changing colors on every other row. Work a chain to any desired width for the pin cushion, then work pattern stitch as follows: Foundation row, single crochet in the second chain from the hook and double crochet in the next chain. Continue alternating single and double crochets across row, ending with a double crochet. Chain 1 and turn. For Row 1, single crochet in each double crochet of row below and double crochet in each single crochet of row below to end of row. Chain 1 and turn. Repeat Row 1 for desired length.

Use leftover yarn and hook or needles of your choice for any of these. You can use a piece of felt for the bottom or make two identical knit or crochet pieces. Either way, sew the top and bottom pieces together, inserting a stuffing when about three-fourths of the way around the pieces.

Steel wool pads used as the stuffing keep needles and pins sharp and rust-free. Another choice is cotton batting, but consider cutting old stockings into small pieces for stuffings. Or, if you are a needlepointer, keep a little plastic baggie handy to collect those small ends of wool yarn you are constantly snipping away and you will soon have enough to stuff a pin cushion.

Economy

last year to the fourth quarter of this.

Because the economy grew at a 3.25 percent annual rate in the first half of this year, growth could dip as low as 2.7 percent in the second half of the year and still meet the administration's target, which is in line with the expectations of many private analysts.

Many economists are expecting growth to slow in the second half of the year, in part because of the adverse effects of the severe drought in the farm belt.

The drought's impact was already being felt in the spring quarter, reducing total GNP growth by $5.5 billion, today's report said.

Overall, GNP grew at an annual rate of $30.2 billion in the spring quarter, pushing total inflation-adjusted GNP to $3.986 trillion in the second quarter.

Much of the strength came from a $18.9 billion improvement in the country's trade deficit, the biggest narrowing of the deficit since a $24.8 billion shrinkage in the first quarter of 1980.

Also contributing to growth in the April-June quarter was a $14.4 billion rise in consumer spending, which climbed at an annual rate of 2.3 percent.

Farms Celebrated

North Carolina A&T University's Agricultural Extension Program is coordinating a statewide celebration of small family farms next week.

The weeklong celebration includes a meeting Thursday at which farmers and agricultural specialists will discuss alternative agricultural enterprises.

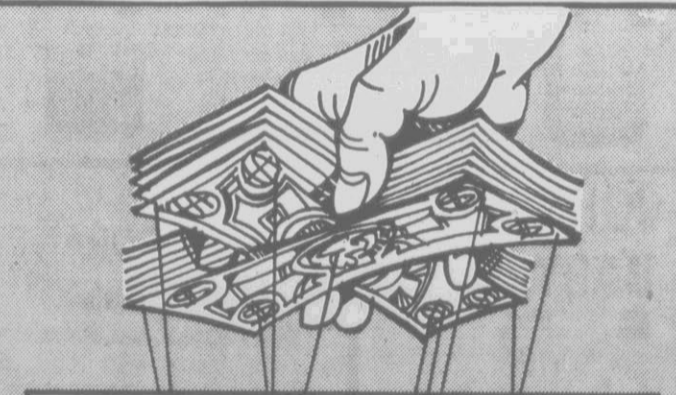

A luncheon will follow, and retired Tuskegee Institute instructor Booker T. Whately will deliver the keynote address. Whately is a well-known author and an internationally recognized authority on the economics of small farms.

Gilmer L. Dudley will also receive the award for the Small Family Farmer of the Year. The award recognizes the North Carolina farmer who best exemplifies the traditional family farm and the progressive attitudes farmers need to survive.

First Loss For New Manager

Rangers Halt Bosox Streak

By KEN RAPOPOORT
AP Sports Writer

For the first time in 13 games, the Boston Red Sox failed to win for Joe Morgan. But the rookie manager can't say his team failed to give him a good show.

"It was a hell of a game," Morgan said Tuesday night after watching his Red Sox drop a 9-8 decision to the Texas Rangers to end a 12-game winning streak. "It was bad it (the streak) ended, with us battling back like that. We were golden for a while."

The Red Sox trailed for most of the game but rallied with a pair of three-run innings. The second rally, capped by Jim Rice's two-run homer, came in the seventh inning and gave Boston an 8-7 lead.

But a two-run homer by Ruben Sierra in the bottom of the inning put the Rangers back on top for good.

In other AL games, it was New York 3, Milwaukee 2; Cleveland 7, Baltimore 3; Detroit 2, Kansas City 1 in 10 innings; Minnesota 6, Toronto 3; Chicago 1, Seattle 0 in 11 innings and Oakland 6, California 2.

The loss ended the longest Red Sox winning streak — which began after Morgan replaced the fired John McNamara on July 14 — in 40 years, and the second-longest streak in the majors this season. The Oakland A's had earlier won 14 in a row.

The American League record for consecutive wins is 19, shared by the 1906 Chicago White Sox and the 1947 New York Yankees. The New York Giants hold the major league record with 26 during the 1916 season.

The Red Sox had run their streak to 12 the night before with a 2-0 victory over Texas behind the fine pitching of Roger Clemens.

"Last night, it was great pitching. Tonight, it was great hitting," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "It was like two rattlesnakes out there. Chop off their heads and they're still going at it."

Texas had 11 hits, including three homers, and Boston had 13 hits, also with three homers.

Pete O'Brien's 11th homer started a four-run rally in the fourth inning that gave Texas a 6-2 lead.

Boston scored three runs in the fifth on Mike Greenwell's two-run homer and Todd Benzinger's solo shot, but still trailed, 7-5, going into the seventh. Then Wade Boggs and Benzinger doubled for one run and Rice followed with a homer that gave Boston its first lead of the game.

But Scott Fletcher singled in the bottom of the seventh, and Sierra gave Texas the victory with his 14th homer.

Yankees 3, Brewers 2

Rickey Henderson continued his first-inning success and Dave Righetti provided effective relief as the Yankees beat Milwaukee for the Brewers' fourth straight loss.

Henderson opened with a walk, the eight straight game he has led off the first inning by reaching base. He stole second and third and came home on Ken Phelps' sacrifice fly, the sixth consecutive game Henderson has scored in the opening inning. Jack Clark followed with an RBI double for a 2-0 lead.

The Yankees chased rookie Don August, 5-4, in the fifth on an RBI single by Don Mattingly.

Rick Rhoden, 6-6, took a five-hitter and 3-0 lead into the eighth, but the Brewers scored on an RBI double by Jim Gantner and RBI single by Robin Yount.

Righetti, who has blown six save chances this season, took over and shut out the Brewers the rest of the way for his 14th save.

Indians 7, Orioles 3

Doug Jones set a Cleveland record with his 24th save of the season and Julio Franco matched his own AL season-high hitting streak at 21 games as the Indians defeated Baltimore.

Jones, converting his 20th straight save opportunity and the 24th in 26 opportunities, pitched the final 1 1-3 innings in relief of John Farrell, 11-6, to break Ernie Camacho's club record of 23 saves in 1984.

Chris Bando sparked a four-run fourth inning with a two-run single as the Indians defeated the Orioles for the eighth time in eight meetings this season.

Farrell gave up eight hits in 7 2-3 innings. Jay Tibbs, 4-8, lost for the eighth time in his last 10 decisions.

Franco's first-inning double enabled him to tie the 21-game streak he had on May 11-June 3. The Major League high this season is 24 by John Shelby of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Franco went 1-for-3, and has 35 hits in 88 at-bats for a .398 average during his current streak.

Tigers 2, Royals 1

Lou Whitaker's one-out double in the 10th drove in the winning run as Detroit beat Kansas City. The win kept the Tigers a half-game behind the front-running Yankees in the AL East.

Pat Sheridan led off the inning with a walk off Kansas City reliever Jeff Montgomery, 3-2, who took over from starter Charlie Leibrandt. Mike Heath sacrificed Sheridan to second and pinch-hitter Dave Bergman was intentionally walked, setting the stage for Whitaker.

Mike Henneman, 5-2, worked the 10th inning in relief of starter Jack Morris, to pick up the win which snapped a three-game losing streak for the Tigers.

Leibrandt had a 1-0 lead going into the ninth inning before giving up a one-out homer to Chet Lemon. The Royals had taken a 1-0 lead in the first on a run-scoring groundout by Kurt Stillwell.

Blount Hopes For 'Small' Impact

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

GREENSBORO — While Eric Blount admits football is a big man's game, he hopes to show that smaller players can also have a large impact.

Blount, a former prep standout at Ayden-Grifton, will start at tailback for the East squad in Thursday's East-West All-Star football game and he hopes to get his hands on the ball quite often.

"Football is a game of big, fast and strong people, but I think a little person can make an impact in the game because people are not expecting a little person to shine above the bigger players," Blount said.

Don't get the idea that Blount is a small, frail type, though. He packs a tightly-muscled 170 pounds on his 5-9 frame.

It's just that when he stands next to some of his teammates, such as 6-6, 270-pound defensive tackle Rickie Shaw, or 6-5, 265-pound defensive end Chester McGlockton, the differences are obvious.

Still, East coach Bobby Poss of Fayetteville 71st has liked what he's seen of Blount.

"Eric is an exceptional running back with great speed and a good feel for the seams," he said. "He's got excellent hands to return kicks also."

Lack of size didn't slow Blount down in high school. He was a two-year starter for the Chargers.

He ran for 1,400 yards during the regular season and playoffs of his senior year. For the season, Blount totaled 2,011 multi-purpose yards (rushing, receiving and returns).

Blount was a dangerous return man on kickoffs and punts, bringing four back for scores. He also found time to intercept eight passes on defense, returning one for a score.

While Blount has made his fame as a running back, Thursday's game could be his last at that position.

"It might be, I'm not sure," he said. "I'm going up to (North) Carolina to play wide receiver. It might be my last chance (to play tailback)."

Blount helped lead the Chargers to the 2-A Eastern Finals in 1987 where they fell to Whiteville (28-0). Two of the big reasons the season ended there were McGlockton and Shaw, who are now his teammates. The two of them anchored the offensive and defensive lines for the state 2-A champions.

Blount said he's glad they will all be wearing the same colors this time around.

"I sure am, those guys stuck me hard," he said. "I'm glad to be playing with them."

"When I first saw Whiteville, I said this isn't any high school team because their line averaged about 250

GREENSBORO — With the game on the line, the East went to its established stars when it needed results and a trio of future Atlantic Coast Conference players answered the call.

North Duplin's Anthony Oliver, who is headed for Virginia, and Hobpton's Chris King, a Wake Forest signee, had 25 and 21 points, respectively, while another Deacon recruit, D.H. Conley's Phil Medlin, added 12 points and 11 rebounds to lead the East to a 97-90 win in the East-West All-Star basketball game Tuesday.

"It was the fellas that won it," said East coach Darwin Harper of Bertie. "Chris King, Phil Medlin and surprisingly Mark Mocnik (10 points) all played well. And you can't overlook Anthony Oliver. It was a solid effort on his part."

The West led early on, going up by as many as seven points at 19-12 on a pair of free throws by Benny Moss with 2:32 left in the opening quarter.

But from there, the East surged back. Northern Nash's Tony Smith completed a three-point play to make it 19-15 with just under two minutes to go in the opening period. The teams then traded a free throw for a 20-16 score to end the quarter.

Medlin opened the second quarter with two free throws to make it 20-18 and Oliver tied the game with a layup following a steal by Bernard Terrell with 9:30 left in the first half.

King gave the East its first lead when he scored off a rebound dunk with 9:11 left to make it 22-20.

From there, the East slowly built up an eight-point advantage by halftime at 50-42.

"I really didn't expect it," Harper said of the East's lead. "At halftime (though), it was easy to see that if we played good solid defense, we would have had more than an eight-point lead."

The West was plagued by cold shooting in the opening half, connecting on only 36 percent of its shots. While that improved to 49 percent in the second half, the damage was still done. The West's top three guards shot a combined 5-30.

"Coming into the game, I thought our strength would be in perimeter shooting, but unfortunately it didn't show tonight," said West coach Ron King of North Surry.

"We shot well all week in practice, particularly from 3-point range, but those long shots did not fall tonight. They were stronger inside than we were."

Medlin Did Not Disappoint Self

GREENSBORO — Coming into Thursday's East-West All-Star basketball contest, D.H. Conley's Phil Medlin was looking to make an impact on the game.

It looked to be a good base upon which to begin building his collegiate career. A Wake Forest signee, Medlin would be teaming up with fellow Deacon recruit Chris King in the frontcourt and their appearance together would be on a court, the Greensboro Coliseum, that they'll both see more than a few times during their playing days since Wake Forest plays some of its home games there.

And Medlin didn't disappoint. He scored 12 points and pulled down 11 rebounds, including seven on the defensive end. In addition, he had a number of baskets during key spurts at the end of each half which helped the East stay in control en route to a 97-90 win.

"Everybody was going to play so I figured Chris and I, being the bigger players, would have to make an impact," Medlin said.

And play hard they did. King had 21 points and a game-high 13 rebounds as he and Medlin controlled the glass.

"Phil Medlin is a good solid player," said East coach Darwin Harper. "You can see why Phil Medlin and Chris King are going to be ACC players. They have good fundamentals."

For the game, the East held a 50-52 edge on the boards, thanks primarily to the play of the future Demon Deacons.

"When I went in in the first half and the other times in the second half, I just went in and played hard," Medlin said. "I've put on a little weight, 15 pounds since the end of the season, and I've gotten stronger (too)."

"At the end of the first half and a spurt at the end of the fourth quarter, we had to come on or they might have come back. We went into the locker room (at halftime) and coach said we had to play better defense and hit the boards and give them just one shot. He got us fired up and we just played."

Medlin's success in the game shouldn't surprise though. He helped lead Conley to the state 3-A title as a junior and to the Eastern Finals as a senior. In addition, he also got a lot of valuable experience playing for the North Carolina AAU team last summer.

While Medlin and King went away winners from the game, another Wake Forest recruit, Darryl Cheely, wasn't as fortunate. He went 0-9 from the field and scored only a point for the game.

"I enjoy playing with Chris and against Darryl," Medlin said. "I'm 3-0 against Darryl now (Conley twice beat Cheely's Burlington Williams team in the playoffs). It was a great experience."

"It's been kind of tiring because we practiced twice a day, but it's been a great week. I'm looking forward to next year."

The East came out and limited the West to 11-third quarter points while totaling 28 itself to move out to a big lead. Oliver had 10 of his points during the third period, including two straight steals followed by layups with just over three minutes to go in the quarter that put the East up, 72-57.

"The defense worked," Harper said. "Anthony Oliver (four steals) and Bernard Terrell (two steals) made some key steals that gave us easy baskets."

As the second half wore on, the West slowly crept back, taking advantage of the shortage of available East guards following Derrick Hyman's fifth foul midway through the second half.

"Losing Hyman late hurt us," Harper said. "Mark ended up playing point guard and it was a new experience for him, but I thought he handled it real well."

Medlin hit a jumper with 3:12 to go that put the East ahead, 93-82, but the West continued to battle back.

James Doggett hit a shot with 38 seconds remaining to make it 95-90, but Terrell added two free throws with 25 seconds remaining and the West was out of chances and out of time.

"We cut it from about 17 to five or so and I thought we could cut it down more, but we missed some opportunities to score late in the game," said King.

Robert Watson scored 20 points to lead the West, while Doggett added 16. Dana Elliott, Marcus Allen and Pat Colson had 12 points apiece.

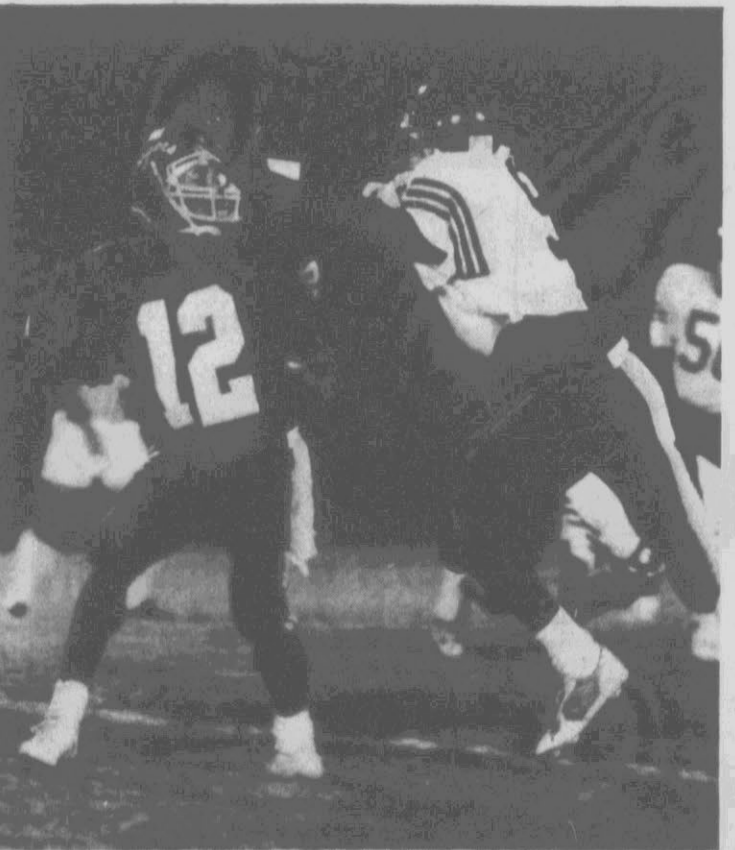

In the girls' game, Ann Hancock scored 24 points to lead the East to a 71-67 win over the West.

Connie Small broke a 65-65 tie with a basket with 28 seconds to go and Hancock hit four free throws over the remaining seconds to ensure the win for the East.

Tracie Young added 11 points for the East while Natalie Nester, with 12 points, led the West. Kim Stephens had 11 points and Mitzi Yount chipped in 10 for the West, which led 38-27 at the half.

Meetings Begin To Change Regatta Date

SAN DIEGO (AP) — America's Cup defenders and their New Zealand challenger traded legal briefs for face-to-face negotiations as they began trying to reschedule a September regatta to avoid conflict with the Summer Olympics.

Cup defenders and the network with broadcast rights say pitting the prestigious yachting race against the brawn of the Summer Olympics would be bad for the regatta's spectators, competitors — and TV ratings.

Malin Burnham, president of Sail America, defense manager for San Diego Yacht Club, discussed the issue on the telephone Tuesday with Michael Fay, chairman of the New Zealand syndicate. The negotiations were to begin today.

"We can work this out," Burnham said. "We need to get on with it and make the match the best possible event for the sake of the America's Cup. I don't think there is any disagreement about this."

The Cup defenders hope the negotiations are completed by Friday so they can begin final planning of the staging and telecasting of the event.

The planning scramble was sparked by Monday's ruling by New York state Supreme Court Justice Carmen Ciparick that San Diego could use a catamaran in the regatta against New Zealand's massive sloop with a 150-foot mast.

But Sail America's eagerness to reschedule the race may not be matched by New Zealand, which used a court challenge to upset San Diego's plan for a multinational competition in 1991 and force an earlier race.

"It's one of the issues that goes on the table," New Zealand spokesman Graeme Colman said. "That's the official date, unless there is mutual consent on moving it."

"We're assessing our position. We've got to assess more than just the Olympics. The timing of the race is critical to every component of the campaign," Colman said.

Sail America would like to start the first race on Sept. 3 instead of Sept. 19, which would conflict with the Sept. 17-Oct. 3 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

They also would like to run a best-of-seven series with shorter courses instead of the best-of-three format featuring up to 20-mile races called for in the 101-year-old Cup's Deed of Gift, a document outlining basic race guidelines.

The longer series and shorter legs also would benefit television coverage of the event.

ESPN, which paid Sail America for exclusive U.S. broadcast rights, is facing a schedule already booked solid on some Saturdays with college football.

"I think it would be in everybody's best interest to have the event staged at a time when there isn't such a grand spectacle like the Olympics going on," Chris LaPlaca, a spokesman for the ESPN network in Connecticut, said Tuesday.

"We have to decide how it impacts our schedule" and the amount of time that could be allocated to the Cup race, he added.

And the network would expect higher ratings if the race doesn't conflict with the Olympics.

"Not that we should dictate when the event is held, but if they did want to move it and take TV's concerns under their wing, we'd be happy to speak to it."

He said, however, the event shouldn't be perceived as "ESPN-driven," adding "whenever they decide to race, we'll be there."

LaPlaca said the amount the network paid for broadcast rights has not been publicized. He said he was unsure if the fee is tied to TV ratings and said the information wasn't immediately available.

Tom Ehman, executive vice president of Sail America, characterized the 137-year-old America's Cup race as one of the "big three" international events, along with World Cup soccer and the Olympics.

"It's unfair to the general public to see two of the three major sporting events go head to head," Ehman said. "And the sailors, too, deserve their day in the sun."

Snow Hill Wins Game One, 5-4

HAMLET — Snow Hill used a wild pitch to push over the winning run and took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series for the American Legion baseball eastern championship Tuesday night, 5-4.

Snow Hill grabbed the initial lead in the game, only to see Hamlet come back and move ahead, 2-1. But the Greene County team rallied for three in the fourth inning and never trailed again.

Snow Hill scored first in the top of the third inning. George Greene singled and moved up on a balk. He scored on Tommy Eason's single.

Hamlet rallied for two in the bottom of the inning, taking a 2-1 edge. Heath Alton reached on an error and Jimmy Poplin singled him in. Eric Tillman walked and Tom Duten singled to score Poplin.

But Snow Hill came right back to add three in the fourth. Anthony Jones singled and Cedric Collins doubled to drive Jones over and tie it up. Greene reached on a fielder's choice that caught Collins going to third. George Burnette then singled and Johnson got a hit to load the bases. Eason followed with a single, driving in both Greene and Burnette.

That put Snow Hill ahead for good, 4-2.

Snow Hill then got what was to be the winning run in the fifth. Chris West doubled, moved up on an out and scored on a wild pitch for a 5-2 lead.

Hamlet rallied for one in the bottom of the fifth and another in the seventh but fell short.

Jones and Johnson led Snow Hill's 14-hit attack with three each, while West and Eason each collected a pair. Duten and Matt Dagenhart each collected a pair for Hamlet.

The series continues tonight with game two, to be played at Hamlet at 8 p.m. The series then moves to Snow Hill for the next three, if all three are needed, starting Thursday.

Clemson Is ACC Choice

GREENSBORO (AP) — For the second straight season, members of the media have installed Clemson as the prohibitive favorite in the 1988 Atlantic Coast Conference football race.

With 68 sportswriters and sportscasters participating in the 13th annual ACC Summer Football Poll, the defending conference champion Tigers were picked first on all but two ballots, and on those two they were the No. 2 choice.

Virginia and Georgia Tech each got one first-place vote.

The Tigers received 542 points, while Virginia came in second with 387.

North Carolina State is a solid choice to finish third with 352 points, while North Carolina, under new coach Mack Brown, received 318 points for fourth place.

Dodgers Take Two From Giants

By The Associated Press
The Los Angeles Dodgers are double trouble on the road.
The Dodgers upped their National League West lead to seven games over Houston and eight over San Francisco on Tuesday night by sweeping a doubleheader from the Giants, 7-3 and 6-5 in 11 innings. It was the fourth straight double victory for the Dodgers and their third doubleheader sweep on their current road trip, on which they are 11-4.
Overall, the Dodgers are 34-17 away from Los Angeles, a better record than any major league team has at home this season. They are 25-23 at home.
"We lost the first doubleheader we played this year," Mike Scioscia recalled. "But we have a good ballclub, and we've showed our depth and versatility."
"The doubleheaders have been to our advantage, because we can put men out there who are well-rested."

In the first game, Rick Dempsey sent Los Angeles ahead with a two-run homer in the seventh inning and Orel Hershiser got his 14th victory. Jeff Hamilton had a solo homer to spark a four-run ninth inning.
In the nightcap, Franklin Stubbs led off the 11th inning with a double and scored on a balk by reliever Scott Garrelts, his second run-scoring balk of the night. Giants manager Roger Craig was ejected from the game for disputing the call.
Elsewhere, it was New York 7, Philadelphia 5 in a game delayed three hours, 25 minutes by rain delays; Montreal 8, Chicago 4 in 11 innings; Pittsburgh 2, St. Louis 1; and San Diego 5, Houston 1. Cincinnati split a pair with Atlanta, winning 3-2, then losing 2-1 in 10 innings.
The Dodgers blew a 4-1 lead in the wild second game, with Bob Melvin's two-run triple in the eighth tying it 4-4. Los Angeles got an unearned run in the top of the ninth, only to see the Giants do the same in the bottom of the inning.
"That second game was tremendous, a tremendous win," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "We just kept battling and everyone participated. Talk about a team win!"

4-0 lead after a 77-minute delay before the game started. They blew that edge but won it as Kevin McReynolds singled in Len Dykstra, who had doubled in the seventh. Darryl Strawberry drove in Dykstra with a ninth-inning single. It was McReynolds' 10th game-winning hit this year.
"It was a gutty ball game, and I'm amazed that we got it in," said Mets manager Dave Johnson. "It was a big win for us, but it was well worth the wait."
Mike Schmidt played in his 2,155th game at third base, breaking the NL record previously held by Eddie Mathews.
Expos 8, Cubs 4
Mike Fitzgerald got the first grand slam for the Expos this year to win it. Montreal had blown a 3-0 lead, then tied it 4-4 in the bottom of the ninth. Fitzgerald hitting for Neal Heaton, 3-6, sent a 0-1 pitch from Jeff Pico, 3-6, over the left-field fence. Montreal loaded the bases on singles by Nelson Santovenia and Otis Nixon and a walk to Dave Martinez.
The Expos tied it in the ninth off Rich Gossage, who was trying for his 300th career save. Pinch hitter Wallace Johnson tripled and Martinez hit a sacrifice fly.
"I think I was the last guy available on the bench and I was really nervous when I went up there," said Fitzgerald, who released part of his tension by running with his arms held high as he circled the bases. "I was really just thinking single, but when I hit it, I knew it was out."

Pirates 2, Cardinals 1
At St. Louis, Doug Drabek pitched a three-hitter for 8 2-3 innings for his fourth straight victory, getting relief from Jim Gott after Willie McGee homered. Drabek, 9-5, struck out seven and walked two. Gott got his 16th save.
Jose Lind extended his hitting streak to eight games for Pittsburgh, scoring the first of two runs in the fourth inning. Lind singled and went to third when Andy Van Slyke singled just out of the reach of Tim Jones, playing his first game at second base for St. Louis. Lind scored on a wild pitch by Danny Cox, and Sid Bream's single scored Van Slyke.
Padres 5, Astros 1
Houston was, as usual, powerless in San Diego, where its team record streak of 12 straight games with a home run ended. Dennis Rasmussen pitched a six-hitter for eight innings and Lance McCullers pitched the ninth.
The Astros, who have scored only one run in their four games at San Diego this year and have been shut out in their last three games there, have dropped 11 straight at San Diego.
Carmelo Martinez' two-run homer sparked a five-run fourth for the Padres.
Reds 3, Braves 2
Braves 2, Reds 1
At Atlanta, Dale Murphy hit his fifth homer since the All-Star break and 19th of the year in the second game, which the Braves won on pinch hitter Jim Morrison's bases-loaded single.
Ozzie Virgil led off the 10th with a single. Pinch runner Tom Glavine went to second on a sacrifice by Ken Oberkfell and, following a walk to Albert Hall, went to third on a grounder by pinch hitter Ted Simmons.
After Ron Gant was walked intentionally, Morrison connected against Rob Murphy, 0-5, with a hard grounder down the left-field line.
In the first game, Tom Browning won for the seventh time in his last eight decisions as Nick Esasky and Kal Daniels hit home runs.
John Franco got his 19th save, although he allowed Murphy's RBI single in the eighth inning. Gant had homered in the fifth for Atlanta.

pounds a man. I said, 'This is going to be a tough game.'
"Rickie and Chester keep bugging me, saying that when they first saw me and tried to tackle me (that) I ran through them so fast they were just grabbing air."
The All-Star game and the practices that go along with it are a good preparation for the college football practices that begin in two weeks, according to Blount.
"I'm playing with the best players in North Carolina," he said. "It's a great opportunity to play with these guys. These players will help me get ready for college."
"(College) coaches look for you to rise up, to shine above everybody else. They are looking for you to do things."
Thursday's game will close out not only Blount's high school career, but also one of the more successful years in high school football for Pitt County.
"I can't remember a year like this," Blount said. "This past year was special because we had (all) five Pitt County teams in the playoffs. We should have a lot of representatives from the Pitt County area up here."

Tom Morris

GREENSBORO — Northern Nash's Tim Marshmon, who has signed to play football for ECU, likes the luxury of having to only play on one side of the line of scrimmage during his preparations for Thursday's East-West All-Star football game.
Marshmon, a defensive back, intercepted 13 passes during his junior year, but that total fell off to four his senior year as he found himself with the responsibilities of playing offense too.
Now, Marshmon is happy to be back to playing just defense.
"If you are just on defense, you have that extra edge, your mind and your body are a little fresher," he said. "When you play both ways, when you are on offense you tend to think about defense and when you are on defense you tend to think about offense."
Marshmon, who chose ECU over Furman, Western Carolina, UNC and N.C. State, said the Pirates showed interest in him because of his speed (4.4 in the 40).
"They consider me one of the better man to man cover men," he said.
They may be right. During Tuesday morning practice drills, Marshmon made a tough leaping, one-handed interception of a Stacy Betts pass.
Even East tailback Eric Blount, a product of Ayden-Grifton, finds it a bit baffling that he wasn't chosen to play in the Shrine Bowl in December.
"I thought I should have been there, but I'm not going to worry about it because it's (over)," he said.
West running back Ricky Turner and East defensive linemen Jon Moody both will not be able to play in Thursday's game because of knee injuries. Turner's has been diagnosed as a serious twist, while Moody's was a knee sprain.
While Chris King and Anthony Oliver both honed their skills while playing high school basketball in the 1A division, it sure doesn't seem to have stunted their abilities at all.
The two combined for 46 points Tuesday to help the East take a 97-90 win over the West in the East-West All-Star basketball game.
King, bound for Wake Forest, scored 21 points, while Oliver, a Virginia signee, had a game-high 25.
"Talent comes where you find it," said East coach Darwin Harper. "In the case of Chris King and Anthony Oliver, they both came from 1A schools and were the key to this team."

Twins 6, Blue Jays 3
Kent Hrbek's sacrifice fly snapped a seventh-inning tie as Minnesota overcame a three-run deficit.
Randy Bush led off the seventh with a walk off Duane Ward, 6-1, and took third on a double by Kirby Puckett, his seventh hit in his last eight at-bats. Hrbek drove the ball deep to center field to score Bush with his sixth game-winning RBI.
Mark Portugal, 1-1, came in to start the seventh inning and got the victory. Jeff Reardon pitched the final two innings for his 26th save.
White Sox 1, Mariners 0
Reliever Mike Jackson walked Ozzie Guillen with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning.
Steve Lyons had opened the inning with a walk off reliever Mike Schooler, 2-4, and advanced to second on Harold Baines' single.
Greg Walker, getting only the second sacrifice of his career in 2,385 at-bats, advanced Lyons to third and Baines to second with a bunt off reliever Rod Scurry. Scurry then intentionally walked Dan Pasqua to load the bases and Jackson came in to retire Kenny Williams on a pop up to third base.
But Guillen walked on five pitches to force in Lyons with the winning run.
Athletics 6, Angels 2
Dave Henderson, Stan Javier and Tony Phillips had consecutive run-scoring hits in the fourth inning and Storm Davis pitched his fourth straight victory as Oakland beat error-prone California.
Davis, 9-4, scattered five hits over 6 1-3 innings before being relieved by Rick Honeycutt with one on and one out. Davis struck out six and walked three in winning for the third time since the All-Star break.
Loser Mike Witt, 7-10, allowed six hits in seven innings while striking out six and walking two. But he was betrayed by his defense, which made four errors. Only two of the six runs he allowed were earned.

Temple Forfeits Game To East Carolina

PHILADELPHIA — Temple University has forfeited its 1986 football victory over East Carolina back to the Pirates, the school announced Monday afternoon.

The Owls forfeited the game, along with five other victories, in the wake of Paul Palmer's admission that he had received $5,000 and other benefits from signing with an agent prior to the start of his senior season.

In the game with the Pirates, Palmer rushed for 349 yards on 43 carries, just eight yards shy of the NCAA single game rushing record. He scored three touchdowns in leading the Owls to a 45-28 victory.

The forfeit will boost the Pirate record to 3-8 for the season.

Cape Fear Claims Pro/Junior Tournament

Cape Fear Country Club's team came out on top of the standings in the Pro/Junior Tournament held Tuesday at the Greenville Country Club by five strokes.

Matt Peebles, the assistant pro at Cape Fear Country Club, along with Pete Eppers, Dean Smith and Danny Brawley took top honors with a 16-under par round of 55.

Second place went to Brook Valley Country Club's team headed by club pro John Lamonica. Lamonica's team consisting of Jason Wing, Derrick Daniel and Brad Carter fired an 11-under round of 60.

Carolina Pines Country Club took the third position with a 61, while North Green Country Club of Rocky Mount and Kinston Country Club tied for fourth with 9-under marks of 62. North Green was awarded the fourth-place position by virtue of winning a playoff.

Jordan, Thomas Head Olympic Testing

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Chicago's Michael Jordan and Detroit's Isiah Thomas head a group of NBA players who will face the U.S. Olympic men's basketball team in two exhibition games in Charlotte next month, officials say.

"This is absolutely a dream lineup," Steve Luquire, head of the company managing the Carolinas Invitational, said Tuesday. "I can't think of a better way for Charlotte to open its new coliseum."

The Olympic team is currently training at Georgetown under coach John Thompson, and will make its first appearance in Charlotte as part of the Carolinas Invitational on Friday, Aug. 12. The three-day competition also will feature the U.S. Olympic women's basketball team in two games against Cuba in Charlotte's new 23,500-seat arena.

Both basketball teams will play again on Aug. 14. Jordan and Thomas say they will play only in the Sunday game. Also playing on the NBA all-star team will be Thurl Bailey and Karl Malone of Utah, and Sam Perkins and Rolando Blackman of Dallas.

The rest of the team consists of Charles Barkley of Philadelphia, Alex English of Denver, Chris Mullin of Golden State, Tom Chambers of Phoenix, former Milwaukee guard John Lucas, San Antonio's Alvin Robertson and Benoit Benjamin of the Los Angeles Clippers.

Charlotte Hornets' coach Dick Harter will lead the NBA team in the Friday night game, and two of his players, Tyrone Bogues and Kelly Tripucka, also are members of the all-star team. Coaching the game Sunday will be former Philadelphia head coach Billy Cunningham and North Carolina-Charlotte coach Jeff Mullins.

The U.S. baseball team will play Cuba on Aug. 13. Also scheduled that day will be gymnastics exhibition.

On Aug. 14, in addition to the basketball doubleheader, the U.S. and Cuban baseball teams will meet again, and the Olympic men's and women's cycling teams will hold a criterium race through downtown Charlotte.

Carolinas Seeking NFL Franchise

RALEIGH (AP) — Authorities say the governors of North Carolina and South Carolina are expected to announce plans next week to form a committee that would lobby to bring an NFL franchise to the area.

Gov. Carroll Campbell of South Carolina and Gov. Jim Martin of North Carolina will hold a news conference Tuesday at the Carowinds amusement park, which is on the border of the two states, the sources said.

"Both Gov. Campbell and Gov. Martin have been working behind the scenes for quite a period of time," said Bob McAlister, director of communications and deputy chief of staff in the Campbell administration. "This news conference is to say where things are at this time."

McAlister declined to go into detail regarding the news conference. Asked if the news conference was an indication of whether the National Football League was close to awarding a franchise, he replied, "It's just to say where things are now."

A source in Martin's office who asked to remain anonymous said the news conference would announce the formation of a Carolinas NFL expansion committee.

The source said the first process would be to gain selection from the league and then to determine who would actually lead the franchise.

Jerry Richardson, a Spartanburg, S.C., businessman, and George Shinn, the owner of the expansion Charlotte Hornets of the NBA, have expressed interest in bringing professional football to Charlotte.

An unidentified spokesman in Campbell's office said the committee would be comprised of "prominent" citizens from both states in an effort to bring an NFL team to the Carolinas.

"This is an effort in unison to go after an NFL franchise," the source said. "Both Gov. Campbell and Gov. Martin have been talking about this for a long time. They think they stand a better chance of doing it in unison. It'll be a major effort."

He said the impact of an NFL franchise would be tremendous.

"It's a major, major deal in terms of economic development," he said.

Harry Gant Has New Ride For '89

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Veteran stock car racing driver Harry Gant will change NASCAR Winston Cup Series teams next year — but he'll remain in the family, so to speak.

Gant, 48, will leave a team owned by movie director Hal Needham to join the Jackson Brothers operation, The Charlotte Observer reported Tuesday. In doing so, he will become a teammate of Phil Parsons — with whom he has shared a common sponsor for the past several seasons, U.S. Tobacco Co.

Leo Jackson will field Oldsmobiles for Gant out of the brothers' Performance Products shops at Arden, south of Asheville. Richard Jackson will engineer the Parsons-driven Olds machines from their present garage near Denver, N.C.

Gant is leaving the Needham team because Needham has decided to sell it, most likely to a group led by Travis Carter, his crew chief. Gant and Carter have agreed to end their association, which began in 1981 and produced nine victories and 28 runner-up showings.

The Gant-Carter duo was hounded in the past two seasons by bad luck ranging from a rash of mechanical failures and wrecks.

Allison Hopes To Repeat At Talladega This Year

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Davey Allison is hoping history repeats itself.

Allison, the youngest member of the "Alabama Gang," joined 55 other stock car drivers starting their practice runs today at Alabama International Motor Speedway for Sunday's Talladega 500.

He averaged 198.969 as the fastest qualifier at AIMS for the Winston 500 in May. Eleven times the same driver has been the fastest qualifier in both races.

"It's not easy to get the pole here, or anywhere, for that matter, and it's twice as hard now that NASCAR has gone to the single-lap qualifying," the Hueytown native said.

"It used to be, when we got two laps, you could make a mistake in one lap and still have another shot. That's not true any more. You have to run a perfect lap the first time. You don't get a second chance."

Allison was expected to get strong competition for the inside starting position from Bill Elliott, defending champion of the Talladega 500 and holder of AIMS qualifying records.

Elliott will looking for his third straight victory. He won last Sunday's Summer 500 at Pocono International Raceway in Pennsylvania and the July 2 Firecracker 400 at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Elliott is only three points behind Rusty Wallace in the Winston Cup points race. Defending national champion Dale Earnhardt is 48 points off the pace.

"The race is so big in the points chase because it is always so competitive," Wallace said. "If you happen to fall out before the race is over, it's devastating. With all the cars still in the lead lap when Talladega races are finished, you could be only a lap down and still finish 20th or worse.

"You've just got to stay in the lead lap the whole race. You've just got to."

Another batch of drivers were to practice today for Saturday's running of the ARCA Permatex 500K on the 2.66-mile super speedway.

Qualifying for both races will be held Thursday and Friday, with Elliott seeking his fourth pole position in the Talladega 500.

Director Puts Final Touches On Local Career

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

New Bern native Robert Caprio, in his last year as a faculty member in the East Carolina University Department of Drama, is the director of this week's East Carolina Summer Theatre production, "Steel Magnolias."

"This is a fine play, one that I think Greenville audiences will love," Caprio said. "There's a great deal of humor as well as a lot of humanity in the play. It has an all female cast, with the only male presence being an off-stage voice."

"One of the nicest things about this production is that I'm directing six great ladies, six truly fine actresses," he said. "Contrary to what anyone might think, these ladies are easy going. They get along very well with each other and have been most considerate and cooperative in working with me."

"I couldn't have asked for a better group to work with."

(As things turned out, one of the actresses was called away for an emergency at the end of rehearsals, making it necessary to carry out intensive rehearsals of a replacement in a very brief period of time).

Edgar Loessin, chairman of the drama department and producer of the East Carolina Summer Theatre, got permission to stage "Steel Magnolias" because Greenville is some distance off the circuit of major cities — an important consideration since the play will soon be on tour.

"Steel Magnolias" deals with six women who care for each other, despite their penchant for complaining, their love of gossip," Caprio said. "There's considerable farce in the play, yet its very much a strong reflection of women living in today's South."

"Steel Magnolias" is the third play Caprio has directed for the summer theater.

"Three years ago, Edgar asked me to come to Greenville to direct 'Baby' for the summer theater," Caprio said. "While I was here for that purpose, by good fortune a teaching opening came up, one that I was qualified to fill. So I accepted."

"That was my first time teaching," he said. "My area in teaching has been in communications and speech. And I have loved it."

"There's a lot of hard work involved, but also many rewards in working with talented students. ECU has a really strong acting program."

Last year, Caprio had his second chance to direct a play, "Bus Stop."

After graduating from New Bern High School, Caprio did what many young eastern North Carolina drama hopefuls do.

"I wanted to be in theater, and decided from the reputation the ECU drama department had, that it was the logical place for me to go to."

Prepared with his undergraduate drama degree, Caprio headed for New York.

"Once there and settled down, I started a new theater, Studio 56 Acting Company. The theater was based in a loft in New York's SoHo district, in a building that no longer exists."

"I named the theater for its location, on 56th Street off Seventh Avenue," he said. "Our group staged productions of revivals of classics as well as some contemporary plays. We were the first in many years to give a revival production of 'Front Page.'"

"One of our more successful contemporary plays was 'The Wager.'" Studio 56 lasted from 1976 to 1980.

"Then I went to work for Craig Andersen, producer and director of such original Broadway hits as 'Golden Pond' and 'Da.'"

"I worked as associate producer. In effect that position covered many things. I read and analyzed plays, screened works, both for stage and screen, since Craig had a contract with Columbia pictures."

Caprio was in charge of script readings of new plays, recalling it as a fascinating assignment.

Theatre, "Steel Magnolias." He has previously directed two summer productions and now will be leaving the ECU faculty to attend a graduate school. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

"It was never any problem to get people to come for the readings," he said. "Reading sessions were always friendly occasions, something that was fun without competition at that stage. Of course readers were always hopeful that if the play was accepted, they might get a role."

"Those coming to read did so without pay," he said. "And we tried to get a number of famous or well-known actors and actresses to take part in the readings, with a surprisingly large number of acceptances."

"For one thing, it was an exciting venture for everybody involved."

There was the possibility that a script might be really good, so that those reading had a first-look at plays.

"Another thing," Caprio added, "when word got out that name people were reading at such and such a time, backers were more likely to come and listen in — especially since Craig had a good reputation for picking and producing good material."

The assignment with Andersen lasted until Caprio accepted the 1985 invitation to come to Greenville to direct "Baby."

Caprio said theater at East Carolina University has a special attraction to out-of-town actors and actresses.

"It's a new world for them," he said. "They love the homespun, genuine hospitality that Greenville extends, things like being invited to attend outdoor barbecue cookouts. And they are surprised when they first see the facility at McGinnis with its ample space, good dressing rooms, top scenery."

"I personally think it's the best theater facility in the state, possibly one of the best on the east coast."

"But what really delights visiting theater people is the beautiful audiences," he added. "They open up their hearts to actors, and that's something actors respond to."

Now, with experience in New York and Greenville to his credit, Caprio has decided it's time to move.

"I'll be leaving Greenville soon to go to graduate school at New York's Syracuse University," he said. "I plan to major in directing."

But Caprio plans to return to the theater, "to direct some of my favorite plays, classics like the plays of Chekhov, Ibsen and Shakespeare, especially his comedies, which I'd love to direct."

"I also love stage romances and certain musicals," he said, "and hope to eventually direct some older musicals, maybe some operettas."

Laughs, Tears Bloom In Play

If you're the fastidious kind who feels it's vulgar to indulge in uncontrollable belly laughs, or who consider being moved to public tears is unduly melodramatic, then you'd better stay away from going to see "Steel Magnolias," this week's East Carolina Summer Theater offering.

On the other hand, if you want to be reassured that contemporary American drama of the Southern tenor is still alive and indeed healthy after the demise of Tennessee Williams, you'll find Robert Harling's drama set in a Louisiana beauty parlor just what you've been waiting for.

Some tickets might still be available by calling 757-6390. Performances will take place tonight through Saturday at 8:15 p.m. with a Saturday matinee at 2:15 p.m.

"Steel Magnolias," billed as a new comedy, is just that. And much more.

In the brief span of two hours, the playwright, aided and abetted by six talented ladies on the stage at McGinnis Theatre achieves a number of minor and major theatrical miracles.

One is bringing to full flowering the realization of the unbounded richness and diversity of the English language, especially that brand of English we call Southern. For a little while, I resisted what I thought might be too much cleverness in the play's dialogue — but before long I relaxed, conceded that after all it was not beyond credibility that ladies cloistered in one of the few remaining bastions of the feminine world might talk that way.

Somehow, playwright Harling has managed to penetrate and decipher for the males in the audience what must surely be a giant step forward in our continuing effort to understand a little better the mysterious work-

Millionaire Giving Them A Second Shot

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Etiquette and entrepreneurship are among the topics students discuss in an eight-week summer program for teen-aged underachievers who want to earn a millionaire's respect and a shot at a college education.

All the students, ages 13 through 17, have at least two things in common. They have failed at least two grades in school and they have been challenged to do well by New Orleans oil tycoon Pat Taylor.

Last March, Taylor was invited to give a motivational speech to more than 300 underachieving students at Edward Livingston Middle School.

He decided to do more than just give a speech. He promised to pay all college expenses for any of the students who graduate from high school with a B average and stay away from drugs and crime.

Now, most of the students who passed the eighth grade in the spring are part of the Job Training Partnership Act Program conducted at the University of New Orleans and Loyola University. The program is designed to make sure the students are ready for high school in the fall, said program director Marie Carter.

Although the summer program is federally financed, Taylor is paying for field trips and other extras.

Besides the standard algebra, language arts and computer classes, the students are learning etiquette in lessons that include such weighty matters as how one should remove a fish bone from one's mouth at dinner.

The students enrolled in the program have varying views on how they will use their newfound knowledge.

Aspiring businessman Brian Arnoalie, 15, sees the program as a step toward his goal of creating his own line of athletic shoes.

Antonio Kenison, 16, plans to put the etiquette lessons to use at an end-of-summer banquet with Taylor.

Mieshon Augustine, 15, said the lessons will help her prepare for job interviews.

"If I go out to see the man that's going to give me a job and say 'Hey, man, I want a job,' he's not going to give me a job," she explains.

"I've got to go to college to be a nurse to help old people," said Ellen

Clay, who hopes to return to UNO for college. "I hate to see them picking up food out of garbage."

Participants in the program sometimes refer to themselves as "Taylor's Kids." And they agree that the program is a worthwhile summer alternative to daytime television.

As Antonio put it: "Here's a chance to be what I want to be for free."

Women Ventriloquists Work Hard For Lip Service

FORT MITCHELL, Ky. (AP) — When people see "ventriloquist" on the license plate frame of Jean Hendrickson's car, they often assume her husband is the one who makes the dummies talk.

But Mrs. Hendrickson — who has been a ventriloquist, or "vent," for 11 years — said her husband usually responds that he's just the dummy.

Mrs. Hendrickson, 57, was one of 340 ventriloquists who attended the 14th annual Ventriloquist Convention at the Drawbridge Inn here recently.

About half of the ventriloquists were women.

Church organizations and banquets make up the bulk of Mrs. Hendrickson's performances, and she also teaches ventriloquism in adult education classes and at conventions. She is known to some of her students as "Vent Momma."

Although she describes her workload as "steady by jerks," Mrs. Hendrickson said she doesn't advertise because she doesn't want to make being a ventriloquist a career.

"Now it's fun and it fulfills my needs while bringing pleasure to others. It would be too much like work if I made it a career," she said.

Another woman at the convention, Judy Buch, a Connecticut grandmother, is aggressively pursuing a show-business career in ventriloquism.

Mrs. Buch said that when she first took up ventriloquism five years ago, she was told that female vents basically perform only for church organizations and women's clubs.

"This lit a fire under me and challenged me. I won't settle for mediocrity," she said.

One couple who attended the convention, Tim and Laura Allured, have been working full time for the past year with Carnival Cruise Lines out of Miami.

"Most people assume Tim is the ventriloquist and I'm his assistant," said Mrs. Allured, 29, who has been a vent for 17 years. "Many passengers are surprised to see me using my husband as one of my dummies at the end of my act, but the wives love it."

RALEIGH — Over 400 players from 37 states will compete at the 15th Annual National Open Cribbage Tournament at the North Raleigh Hilton and Towers in Raleigh on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The event is considered the premier card tournament in the U.S. The defending champion, John Worley of Burlington, will be on hand to defend his title. For more details, call 890-6046.

ings of the feminine mind. (As an aside, three of my lady friends, over coffee after the performance, expressed amazement that a male writer could so accurately portray women. Their puzzlement led to speculations that possibly the writer had plagiarized a female's writing, or that Robert might be a pseudonym for Roberta).

To detour a moment from generalities to specifics in the play's dialogue, "Steel Magnolias" is chock full of lines you hope to remember. I.e., "I'm not crazy, I've just been in a bad mood for 40 years." "A dirty mind is a terrible thing to let go to waste" A mother commenting on her son's girl friend "the nicest thing I can say about her is that the words in her tattoos are spelled correctly." The caustic remark of the mother of the girl who is planning an all-pink wedding "I'm sure it will all look like it's been hosed down in Pep-to-Bismol." The play's older character, on being told that members of a born-again Christian group have been praying for her "I don't much like the idea of strangers praying for me." These are but a few of the examples of laugh-provoking lines.

The only fly in the ointment in the Monday night opening performance was the occasional failure of the characters to let the laughter die down before going into the next lines. One had the feeling that perhaps a few golden nuggets went unheard. Please, ladies, remember to take it easy.

Yet another theatrical miracle is that "Steel Magnolias" is that rare literary creation, a near-flawless script for ensemble acting. And the six ladies in their roles do justice to the material. No single performer steps forth to try to outshine the other. Instead, they orchestrate their roles with a wholesome consideration for the intent of the playwright and for each other.

Ruth Williamson is the proprietor of the beauty parlor in seemingly tranquil Chinquapin, Louisiana. As such, she is the pivotal figure around which all the others revolve, the lady who has a finely-honed talent of guiding the direction that the gossip of the day will take. Sometimes it's sympathetic, sometimes bitchy — whichever, always fascinating.

Annelle Dupuy-DeSoto, played by Laura Linney, is the sweet young thing new as a hairdresser in the beauty establishment. We see her metamorphosis from a girl confused by life after being abandoned by her husband, into a confident person devoted to artsy crafts and as a born-again Christian.

Ann Dearing Lincoln, in the role of Clairee Belcher, is a delight as a new widow, a lovely middle-aged woman trying to adjust to being an ordinary citizen, albeit a rich one, after being the star female attraction of the town as the wife of the late major. Her eventual redemption comes in the discovery of travel and the joys of a new toy — the purchase of the town's radio station.

To Julia Curry falls the delectable role of Ouiser (pronounced Weezer) Boudreaux, Chinquapin's brash, oddball original. She has some of the choicest lines and the gutsiest role in the play. Ms. Curry's raspy voice (imagine Tulullah Bankhead recovering from bronchitis), is surely what the playwright dreamed of when penning the role. She's the gal who's with an alligator-hide exterior and Southern sunshine interior.

Laura Linney, the girl being primed up for her wedding day to a lawyer, a rather quiet young lass whose stubbornness is manifest in her determination to have an all pink

Pick Exercise Plan To Match Personality

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine

Pick an exercise program that matches your personality and lifestyle and you increase your chances of success.

Your regimen should exercise underused muscles, burn calories and leave you feeling energized, balanced and pleased with yourself, according to an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, but beyond those basics you have many choices.

If you are a super-achiever, try focused, competitive sports such as racquetball, said Dr. George Reynolds, medical consultant at la Costa Spa in Carlsbad, Calif.

Don't worry if your busy schedule interrupts your fitness program.

"It's better to exercise piecemeal than not at all," said sports nutritionist Jamie Metcalf-Kelly, consultant for the Atlanta Hawks and Falcons. "You can use free weights in your office for 15 minutes and later do half an hour on a bike."

Placid and predictable personality types need group activities to get their energy up. Try a coed club. Check fitness centers for benefit walks. Try something you've never done before. Join a volleyball or basketball team, learn kayaking or scuba diving, take up one of the martial arts. The change will be invigorating.

Ms. Sociability will rev up her private life while streamlining her body at adult-education classes in folk, ballroom or square dancing, which offers low-impact aerobics.

The creative type, often a laid-back nonathlete who's allergic to disco music, can invest in a second-hand stationary bike or minitrampoline and exercise in private. But if you work at home, get out and visit a health club.

No matter what regime you choose, get your doctor's OK.

Don't get into an exercise rut. You might, for instance, feel you are doing well with Nautilus machines, said Susan Rossman, a New York movement analyst who designs "repatting" exercises to help eliminate unhealthy movement habits.

"But there's no spiraling or diagonal movements in a Nautilus workout," Rossman said, "so I would create new routines that balance the body and utilize every muscle. Traditional calisthenics emphasize strengthening the upper muscular fibers but ignore the lower ones. That's why women can do sit-ups every day and still find themselves developing pouchy abdomens."

There also is such a thing as too much exercise which can result in injury, pain and obsession.

"The main reason a person fails (and hurts herself) is the macho attitude," said sports medicine specialist Dr. Morris Mellion. "You mistakenly think that to be any good you have to work at full intensity."

The no pain-no gain philosophy has been replaced with train, don't strain. Be gentle with your muscles and ease into new activity, no matter how strong and fit you are. Don't let an addiction to fitness take priority over job or family.

"You can gain great benefits without getting into an addictive seven-days-a-week mode," Mellion said. "A balanced three-days-per-week program is all you need to maintain fitness and five days is plenty to increase it. Everyone needs one day per week without exercise; otherwise incidence of injuries rises."

Your exercise choices should take into account any physical problems, tension or weaknesses you are experiencing. Manhattan kinesiologist Gail Pudaloff advised avoiding bouncing "pogo-stick" activities if you have foot or back problems. Swimming and no-impact aqua-aerobics are excellent for relieving upper back pain but for chronic back pains see your doctor.

Pudaloff said climbing stairs is the simplest, least costly exercise. To make it less boring, she advised:

"Focus on your form as you climb; keep your back straight; push off with each foot in turn; breathe evenly; and take two steps at a time."

In Television, Syndication Is Sincerest Form Of Flattery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, goes the saying, and in the TV business, imitators are the best assurance your show is a success.

"Star Trek: The Next Generation" has spawned another syndicated Paramount science fiction remake series for the fall, "War of the Worlds."

"The show, the 13th," the scary syndicated series based on a long string of hit theatrical movies has prompted Lorimar to come up with the series "A Nightmare on Elm Street: Freddy's Nightmares."

Even "Double Dare," the kids' game show, has a competitor, "Fun House," though its producers insist they had sold the show before Nickelodeon's "Double Dare" became a success in syndication.

The 5-month-old Writers Guild strike has affected syndicated series just as much as the networks' shows.

Producers of hour-long shows, like "Star Trek," which is on hold until the strike ends, predicted they couldn't get on the air with new episodes until October or November.

"Nightmare" has about eight completed scripts and plans to premiere on schedule the first week of October. "War of the Worlds" will also premiere that week and has "enough scripts to fulfill our obligation if the strike goes on for a long, long time," said Stephen Nalevansky, vice president of creative affairs at Paramount Television. He said the scripts, from "various sources," would not be used once the show's striking writers returned. The show is being produced in Toronto. Nalevansky wouldn't say how many scripts the producers have in hand.

As a tribute to the success of "Star Trek: The Next Generation," which is the highest-rated weekly show in syndication, "War of the Worlds" has already been sold in 190 markets covering 97 percent of the country.

The show premieres in the 50th anniversary year of the original Orson Welles "War of the Worlds" radio show, and the 35th anniversary year of the Oscar-winning movie of the same name.

The premise is that the aliens who invaded the Earth in 1953 and were killed by a mysterious bacteria are reviving because of radiation in the environment. A band of scientists, aided by a soldier, struggles to alert a populace left with amnesia from their original encounter with the aliens.

"Freddy's Nightmares" is set in a small town where the spirit of violent Freddy terrorizes the townspeople who destroyed him.

Hollywood Takes Look At Portrayal Of Drugs, Alcohol

By JOHN HORN
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If a second sequel follows this summer's martini-soaked movie, "Arthur 2: On the Rocks," it could very well be "Arthur 3: On the Wagon."

Once a motion picture staple, the lovable screen lush may be drying up as Hollywood adapts to the changing attitudes and tastes of the "Just Say No" 1980s.

Since its premiere July 8, "Arthur 2" has been greeted by both caustic reviews and unspectacular box office results. The film's poor showing may signal a shift in audience tolerance for alcohol.

at age 34 after a life of drug abuse. Marketing the three films may prove difficult. Nevertheless, it is increasingly clear that some movies which portray substance abuse in a positive light have been left wobbling from critical backlash in these more sober times.

"I think, in general, sobriety is considered a more popular model now," said Paul Moore, development director for the Scott Newman Center, which is named for the late son of actor Paul Newman and bestows awards for realistic television portrayals of substance abuse. "How we looked at things in the '60s and '70s is very different from how we look at things in the '80s."

AMONG THE LAST — This summer's 'Arthur 2' is getting some real criticism for its glorification of the loveable alcoholic. Hollywood producers are taking another look at movies involving alcohol and drugs because of the public's response to campaigns against chemical addiction.

Even cigarette use on screen, according to the American Cancer Society, is down.

Those who don't keep current may suffer. Several reviewers have pounced on "License to Drive," a comedy that stars Corey Haim and Corey Feldman as teen-agers out to get their first driving licenses. The problem with "License to Drive," according to Bob Mondello, a film critic for National Public Radio, is that one of its longer scenes uses drunk driving for laughs.

"My first reaction was, how can these morons do this?" Mondello said in an interview. "What kind of responsible filmmaker would write a movie like this and target it to kids? We have heard about (the dangers of drunken driving) over and over, and it's impossible for us to take it lightly now."

"License to Drive" has enjoyed only tepid business in theaters since arriving July 6; even teen-agers, Mondello said, aren't laughing at the drunk driving.

Meanwhile, the summer box-office hit "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" seems to send out a mixed message on alcohol. Although the movie's private eye, Eddie Valiant (Bob Hoskins), abandons his bottle at film's end, the title character (a cartoon figure) escapes both depression and danger by gulping a glass of whiskey.

Such cavalier images of alcohol use upset George Marcelle, public information officer for the National Council on Alcoholism.

"There is a classic tradition of depicting drunks without showing the real effects," Marcelle said. "In the original 'Arthur,' he was falling-down drunk and the total negative effect we were shown were some hangovers.

"In real life, Arthur would black out, he'd probably have some serious physical problems like high blood pressure, liver disease or body shakes in the morning, and he'd be prone to throwing up and dry heaves," Marcelle said.

In "Arthur 2," the title character spends all but the final reel of the movie stumbling around in a drunken daze. Arthur says at movie's end that he has stopped drinking, but the only clear consequence of his constant intoxication is a temporary delay in his adoption of a baby.

"When I first saw the preview for 'Arthur 2,' I said, 'How can they do it?'" said Barney Rosenzweig, who as executive producer of television's "Cagney & Lacey" won wide praise for the show's frank chronicle of Detective Chris Cagney's battle with alcoholism. "I think it's in bad taste."

So consistent is the criticism of "Arthur 2" that Moore has said his character may go sober should there be an "Arthur 3."

"It just seems times and public attitude toward alcoholism have changed since we made 'Arthur' in 1981," Moore told columnist Marilyn Beck.

'Funny People' Has Roots In 'Real People'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer George Schlatter says his new NBC summer show "Funny People" may not be the son of "Real People" but is certainly its grandchild.

"I think it has its roots in 'Real People,' as does a lot of television today," said Schlatter. "We did a lot of funny stories in 'Real People,' but this is all about people who are funny. Some are funny on purpose, some who are not intentionally funny and some of the people are behind funny people.

"When we started 'Real People' in 1979, the country was at a low point in self-esteem and pride. We came on, opened the show with the flag, talked about the little guy and celebrated heroes. I think it affected the country's self-esteem. Today, we desperately need to laugh."

Schlatter's name has been associated with laughter for many years. He produced the innovative "Laugh-In" series in the 1960s. He also initiated and produces the annual "Comedy Awards."

"George Schlatter's Funny People" makes its debut Wednesday for a one-hour look at funny people, places and events. The hosts are comedians Blake Clark, Rita Rudner, Scott Blakeman and reporter Leeza Gibbons of "Entertainment Tonight." The show, like Schlatter's "Real People," which ran on NBC from 1979 to 1984, begins with the hosts on stage. They will introduce segments taped all over this country, along with special features from abroad.

"We're doing a lot of pieces on people who make us laugh," said Schlatter. "Some are comedians, filmmakers, eccentrics. We're taping a lot of them on location. We have people in Japan, England, Canada and Australia making tapes. We sent Blake Clark to interview people at the Democratic Convention in Atlanta. It was tough getting credentials, but it helps to know people in low places. We're going to have somebody at the Republican Convention.

"We also have an army of kids out there doing videos for us. We went to the schools and video departments to recruit them. We'll use the best and give each student whose tape is selected a Sony 8mm CamCorder."

All of the comedian-hosts had appeared on the syndicated show "George Schlatter's Comedy Club."

"Leeza came over to do a story on the show for 'Entertainment Tonight,'" said Schlatter. "I told her it was time for her number and we put her in the finale. She got up and did it. She wasn't a bit nervous. So when this came up I called her."

Each show will consist of eight to 10 segments. Schlatter said so many are coming in that his editing house is operating 24 hours a day. He is now installing computerized editing equipment.

"The trouble with television today is that it's getting so careful and so repetitive," he said. "... Car crashes, drugs and women in jeopardy. The sitcoms are all the same. They solve every problem in 30 minutes. I can't even understand the problem in 30 minutes. The only thing different on TV today is Tracey Ullman and Garry Shandling.

"Another thing is that everybody on TV sounds alike. Well, Blake's from Georgia. Scott's from Brooklyn, Rita's from Miami, Leeza's from South Carolina. We'll have some accents. I don't want it to be the same as everything else on TV. We're trying to have some fun with 'Funny People' and bring some joy to people. We'll also ruffle a few feathers. I want it to be an adventure."

The Absolute Best Deal In Town!

Songwriter Says It Took Half Hour To Pen Huge Hit

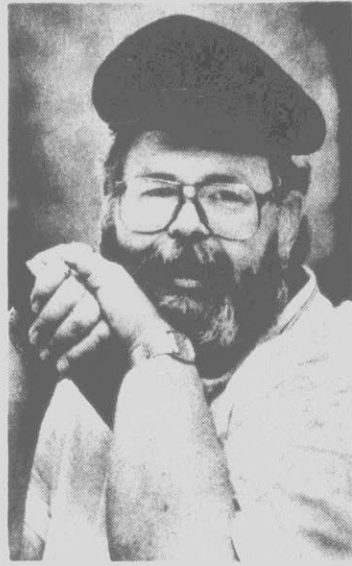

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When Johnny Russell goes to a baseball game, he's still thinking about a song he wrote in half an hour back in 1961.

"I sit in a ballpark with 40,000 other people and I think, 'Of all the people here, I'm probably the only guy who wrote a Beatles record,'" said the 48-year-old Russell.

The song? "Act Naturally," which Ringo Starr sang on a Beatles' album in 1965. It had also been recorded, two years earlier, by Buck Owens.

"That's a very special feeling to me, aside from the money," said Russell, now a singer and humorist at the Grand Ole Opry. "They were so big, and it was such a big point in Buck's career, that it has been very satisfying to have been a part of it."

The song was recently re-released as a cut on a Beatles' compact disc.

JOHNNY RUSSELL

After the Beatles' version became a hit, Russell recalled in a recent interview, he ran into a fellow songwriter whose envy got the better of him.

"He said, 'I'm thrilled for you, but that is a terrible record.' And I said, 'It's better than anything they ever recorded of yours.'"

It didn't hurt, of course, that the flip side of "Act Naturally" was one of the Beatles' classics, "Yesterday."

Russell, born in a sharecropper's shack in Sunflower County, Miss., spent two years trying to get the song recorded.

"One time I got a note back saying, 'Movie songs ain't making it,'" he said, referring to the opening line: "They're gonna put me in the movies. They're gonna make a big star out of me."

"I sang it to everybody I got around," he said. "It just was not the time nor the situation for it. God was not ready for that to be a hit."

Finally, Owens recorded it and became a top country star in the 1960s. He later was the longtime co-host of the TV show "Hee Haw."

"That song saved his career," Russell said.

Starr, the Beatles' drummer, was a fan of Owens, Russell said.

"He wanted to stop doing songs they were doing on tour. He started doing 'Act Naturally' and decided to record it."

Comparing the two versions, Russell described the difference as "10 to 12 million records."

Russell also wrote "Making Plans" on the "Trio" album by Dolly Parton, Emmylou Harris and Linda Ronstadt, and "Let's Fall to Pieces Together," a No. 1 country record by George Strait.

He says, facetiously, that he writes from the emotion of his personal life.

"I fall in love. The woman leaves. My heart is broken. I make money and she calls and wants to come back."

Adds Russell, who has two ex-wives, "I save that money for the next one."

As a singer, he was a finalist for a Grammy Award for his "Rednecks, White Socks and Blue Ribbon Beer" in 1973. He's now on his eighth record label, 16th Avenue.

He does 100 show dates a year, plus performs regularly on the Grand Ole Opry and often appears on The Nashville Network on cable TV.

His 275 pounds provide fodder for his humor during his appearances.

"Can everybody see me all right?" has been his opening remark for about five years.

He jokes about running for president "on a strong political platform ... out of necessity."

Russell's trademark is a blue, German-style sailor's cap.

"When I don't wear my hat, I have to send the bus driver back to the bus to get it. He brings it out and it gets a standing ovation."

But "Act Naturally" will probably remain his major achievement.

"People ask me when I'm going to write another 'Act Naturally.' I feel no desire to do another like that. It was a once in a lifetime thing."

Stars Travel To Tanglewood For Bernstein Birthday Bash

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Actresses Lauren Bacall, Betty Comden and Phyllis Newman are among performers in the birthday bash being thrown in August for conductor Leonard Bernstein at the music center where he got his start.

The Tanglewood Music Center also is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its Music Shed this summer with a special concert by the resident Boston Symphony Orchestra featuring the same music, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, that inaugurated the building in 1938.

The Bernstein weekend alone, with tickets as high as $5,000 each, may bring in more than $1 million for the festival's endowment fund, according to Caroline Smedvig of the symphony.

"Because Tanglewood is so special for him and, conversely, he's so special to us, the combination will produce what we hope will be a unique event," she said.

The Leonard Bernstein Gala Birthday Performance is a four-day affair beginning on the composer's 70th birthday, Aug. 25, to raise money for the music center.

Beverly Sills, who announced last month that she will step down as general director of the New York City Opera, will be the host of the event. Bacall and soprano Barbara Hendricks will perform a movement from Bernstein's Symphony No. 3, "Kaddish." Violin soloist Midori will play two movements from his "Serenade."

Dame Gwyneth Jones and Frederica von Stade will be among those performing highlights from "Fidelio" and other works to honor Bernstein's landmark opera recordings.

The concert will also celebrate Bernstein's accomplishments in popular music with excerpts from such works as "West Side Story" and "On the Town."

The orchestra opened the nine-week season with the special July 1 concert marking the first half-century of the Music Shed.

The season of classical music will be expanded with performances by such popular rock, jazz and folk artists as The Beach Boys, George Benson and Leo Kottke.

But the highlight of the new season is the celebration of Bernstein's birthday.

The BSO is even billing the birthday party as "one of the music world's great occasions" and is negotiating the television rights in the United States and Europe.

Among the conductor's friends who have been invited to the bash are pop star Michael Jackson and British Princess Diana, although Tanglewood officials say they have not yet received an answer from the celebrities.

Bernstein was a member of the original Tanglewood Music Center class of 1940, where he became a protégé of Tanglewood founder Serge Koussevitzky.

When Koussevitzky retired in 1949, he tried to have the young Bernstein named as his successor, but the BSO's trustees chose Charles Munch because they considered Bernstein too young and tainted by popular music.

He later wrote the score for the musical "West Side Story" and returned every summer to conduct and teach.

Conductors Seiji Ozawa, John Williams, John Mauceri and Michael Tilson Thomas will share the podium featuring some of his works on the night of his birth.

The following night, Ozawa and special guests will appear in a Music Shed concert for a performance intended to show Bernstein's influence on other musicians.

Aug. 27 will be given over to a performance of Bernstein's "Mass" by a 250-member troupe from the Indiana University school of music.

The four-day celebration concludes with Bernstein conducting the annual Serge and Ola Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, including a performance of Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5, on Aug. 28.

All proceeds go to the music center's endowment fund, and to a fund Bernstein established for aspiring young conductors. Ticket prices start at $20 for a space on the lawn and go up to $5,000 for front row seats for benefactors.

Other highlights of the new season include several major debuts, including that of Soviet pianist Vladimir Feltsman, who arrived in the United States last August after an eight-year battle to emigrate; a return visit by the Israel Philharmonic; and a recital by Irish flutist James Galway.

We never agreed with the rubric: "When in doubt, draw trumps!" — we feel we need a more compelling reason. But only a masochist would insist on drawing trumps when he can see that it could lead to his defeat.

The auction was not a thing of beauty. North-South, however, desperately needed a good score, so when North showed the equivalent of an opening bid by jumping to game as a passed hand, South checked for aces before committing the hand to slam. A big gain was there for the taking, but South fumbled the play.

West led the jack of diamonds, and declarer saw at once that he could not draw trumps immediately. If he tried, one of the defenders would win the ace and cash a diamond for down one. So South postponed pulling trumps until he had played three rounds of clubs, discarding a diamond from dummy on the third. He then led the king of trumps.

Almost good enough. West took his ace perforce and returned his remaining club, and East was able to overruff the table for down one.

Had declarer looked into the position a little deeper, he would have realized the danger of an opposing club overruff. There was a simple way to avert that fate. After three rounds of clubs and before touching trumps, declarer should play off the board's ace-king of spades, stuffing his last club. Now he leads a trump from dummy, and the contract cannot be defeated. If East wins the ace of trumps and leads the fourth club, declarer can afford to ruff high; and if West wins the ace of trumps, declarer can ruff the fourth club in hand and draw the last trump to bring home his slam.

Author Stuck With Dream Of Living Simpler Life

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

SUMNER, Maine (AP) — During the late 1960s and early '70s, thousands of young people fled America's cities with dreams of subsisting off the land and living simpler lives.

Many — perhaps most — became disillusioned and eventually returned to more traditional careers in an urban setting.

One who stuck with the dream and turned it into a life of contentment was Terry Silber, who gave up her high-powered job as art director for The Atlantic Monthly, left Boston and attempted to eke out a living on the abandoned western Maine farm she had purchased on a whim in 1965.

In "A Small Farm in Maine" (Houghton Mifflin $17.95), Silber tells how she and her husband, Mark, a Russian-born nature photographer, turned that rundown property from a weekend retreat to the centerpiece of a self-sustaining business, one that now embraces horticulture, crafts, teaching and writing.

Some may view the book as a nonsensical guide for anyone who nurtures similar dreams of cutting loose from urban connections and becoming self-supporting on the farm.

"It's how to get rid of the mythologies and face the realities of coming to the country," the 47-year-old Silber said in an interview.

But more than that, it's a personal memoir of an energetic, intelligent and resourceful woman whose abiding love for the land has intensified with each passing year.

"This very ordinary piece of land has become my home, my office, my laboratory, and on it I am able to work, play, study and live, all the while enjoying an environment that is so beautiful, so stimulating and so seductive that I have become unfit to live elsewhere," Silber writes.

The book was the brainchild of editor Richard Todd, her former colleague at the Atlantic and a part-time farmer himself. Todd maintained there was a story in the atypical success of an urban dropout who went back to the land and actually stayed.

Initially cool to the idea — she insists she's a visual person, not a writer — Silber finally relented once she was sure her family's agricultural future was secure.

"I came reluctantly to it," she said. "I got to the point in the development of this place where I thought, 'We're here, I know we're here, I know we're here for the duration.'"

From rank amateurs who sought out neighbors' advice on planting such commonplace crops as corn and tomatoes, the Silbers have become recognized experts whose assortments of herbs and flowers are among the most varied and unusual.

The childlike delight they once took in watching a newly-seeded row of beans push up through the soil has given way to a familiarity with hundreds upon hundreds of herbal varieties whose names border on the unpronounceable.

The Silbers have turned Hedgehog

Hill Farm into a horticultural showplace. Thousands of visitors each year buy seedlings or dried flowers and herbs, attend classes on subjects ranging from basketmaking to floral design or simply revel in the Silbers' botanical paradise.

The couple have become experts in production of everlastings, the dried flowers and herbs that account for a large share of their mail-order and retail store sales; they are collaborating on a comprehensive and lavishly illustrated guide to everlastings due for publication later this year.

Such value-added products have helped to make the farm a success, and Silber hesitates when asked if she and her husband could have survived on market gardening alone.

"I play with that question a lot," she said. "I really don't know."

Of the 160 acres that the Silbers now own, only 10 acres have been cleared and no more than three are ever under cultivation. But their farming is extremely intensive, making use of greenhouses, raised beds and black plastic sheets to spur crop growth and control weeds.

Silber's feelings for the farm, expressed eloquently in the book, are evident as she paces its walkways and strolls between rows of plants, savoring the soft spring rain that intensifies the lush green of her surroundings.

"I love working on the land," she said, explaining how she and her husband have had to scale back the business for fear it would turn them into full-time administrators with little time to work in the fields. Nine people, including the Silbers themselves, work at the farm.

She says her love of physical labor — "you work harder than you've ever worked in your life" — was one of the factors that allowed her to succeed where so many other back-to-the-landers had failed.

Perhaps the most important factor, however, was the gradual process by which the Silbers weaned themselves from their urban support systems and moved slowly and deliberately along the path toward rural self-sufficiency.

While others uprooted themselves abruptly and came to the country with little more than a romanticized vision as a guide, Silber continued initially to take on consulting work in order to supplement the income she and her husband earned from selling produce at farmers' markets after they became full-time Maine residents in 1977.

For seven years prior to their move, the couple led a double life, spending weekends on the farm before returning to their Boston jobs Tuesday morning and dashing back to their country retreat after work on Friday.

Ironically, Silber's farm odyssey has taken her almost full circle from the region in which she grew up. She was born in Lewiston, a mill city just 20 miles from here, and lived in five states, two foreign countries and more than two dozen apartments and houses before returning to Maine.

The decision to become a full-time organic farmer represented an aesthetic choice, she said, rather than a moral or an ethical one.

"You have to find out if the rewards that you want are really the rewards that a rural life offers. Luckily, for Mark and me they are; they are aesthetic, sensual and for us extremely intellectual in that we have so much to learn," she said.

Paul Green's Play 'Texas' Is Still A Hit

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press Writer

PALO DURO CANYON STATE PARK, Texas (AP) — A musical pageant of the Lone Star State's maverick early days, complete with dancing cowboys, howling coyotes and a thunderstorm that booms off the canyon walls, is still fresh after 22 years, the director says.

Neil Hess says the always-evolving outdoor drama, "Texas," still captivates him and lures audiences.

Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Paul Green's story of the region's growing pains has opened its 23rd season in the outdoor amphitheater beneath Palo Duro Canyon's towering 600-foot cliffs.

Hess, the only director the show has ever had, said input from new cast members and musicians each season gives him ideas for keeping the show fresh year after year.

"It's sort of a creative process that evolves during the current season," he said. "As the show progresses through one season, for some reason there's different ideas that help you plan for the next."

Hess said he still finds surprises in the show.

"I would think that after 22 years nothing new would present itself, but it always does," he said.

Technical improvements in the production have made the introduction of more special effects possible.

Coyotes howl in the background, a prairie fire rages and thunder during a spectacular electrical storm booms realistically off the canyon walls.

"The lighting is stronger. The lighting will cover greater expanses — on the cliffs, on the mountains," Hess said.

The show's music is a combination of traditional folk tunes and songs of the Old West.

The fast moving and colorful opening scene is the director's favorite, he said, with its emphasis on dance set against the six flags of Texas.

FESTIVE FILLETS — The catch of the ocean is combined with the pick of the garden in this meal of Festive Fish Fillets, Stir-Fried Carrots and

Potato salad, egg salad, macaroni salad, cole slaw — all fine choices for warm weather entertaining. But for nutritious and out-of-the ordinary summer eating, hold the mayo and break out the beans.

The value of beans in outdoor entertaining has already been proven with hot dogs, with pork chops and in the ever-popular three-bean salads. High-fiber, low-fat beans do make delicious summertime food, but if these are the only ways you have ever enjoyed them, you don't know what you're missing!

Beans are delicious and versatile recipe ingredients that add a unique flavor and texture to vegetable and pasta salads. And when you use pork and beans, beans couldn't be more convenient. Just stir a can into your favorite picnic salad and taste the enhanced flavor.

Outside of this country, the savory taste of beans has long been enjoyed with bulgur wheat. (Don't let the name scare you. Bulgur wheat is simply quick-cooking cracked wheat.) Bulgur is staple ingredient in Middle Eastern countries and is readily available here in America. (Boxes of bulgur can be found in most supermarkets near the whole grains and brown rice.) The taste of bulgur wheat is delicate and nutty. Its texture is tender but chewy. Bulgur also boasts an admirable nutrition record with stores of niacin, riboflavin, thiamin and vegetable protein. When the toasted whole-grain flavor of bulgur is teamed up with the savory taste of beans, each ingredient enriches the other. You won't believe how tasty this combination is until you've tried it.

Bulgur Bean Salad combines that savory blend with crunchy chopped cucumber and the refreshing taste of mint. Serve this light and flavorful salad with grilled chicken to family or friends at your next outing. You don't even have to tell them it's good for them.

BULGUR BEAN SALAD

- 3/4 cup bulgur wheat
- 3/4 cup boiling water
- 1 can (16 ounces) pork & beans in tomato sauce
- 1 cucumber, seeded and chopped
- 1/2 cup finely chopped parsley
- 1/4 cup finely chopped fresh mint leaves or 2 teaspoons dried mint leaves, crushed
- 2 green onions, thinly sliced
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1/2 teaspoon coarse ground pepper

In medium bowl, pour boiling water over bulgur. Let stand 30 minutes or until water is absorbed, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile, in large bowl, combine remaining ingredients. Add bulgur; toss to coat well. Cover; refrigerate until serving, at least 2 hours. Makes 3 1/2 cups or 7 servings.

Seafood, Garden Fare Team Up

Prepare a meal from the catch of the ocean and the pick of the garden with the accompanying recipes. They combine fish with carrots, mushrooms, potatoes and cabbage for a tasty, nutritious meal.

FESTIVE FISH FILLETS

- 2 pound fish fillets, fresh or frozen
- 1/2 cup French dressing
- 1 1/2 cups crushed cheese crackers
- 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
- Paprika

Try New Zucchini, Eggplant Ideas

As summer settles in, the novelty of the season begins to wear off — the first glance of sunshine no longer sends us dashing out the door... another meal of hot dogs on the grill isn't quite as enticing...and we run out of ideas on how to serve our abundant supply of zucchini and eggplant.

With the zucchini season lasting from May to August, and the eggplant season peaking in August and September, it's no wonder these two vegetables are as common as sun-tans by summer's end. And since eggplant supplies generous doses of potassium, phosphorus, calcium and magnesium, while zucchini provides potassium and Vitamin A, nothing on these veggies is not a bad idea.

But after several months of the same old fried eggplant or zucchini bread, even the most avid vegetable fans go searching for new ways to expand the possibilities of these two summer varieties. One tasty yet simple way is to cook them in the Italian tradition. That is, team them up with tomato sauce and cheese. Cheesy Stuffed Eggplant and Manicotti Primavera are two examples of how simple and delicious this combination can be. These two recipes are perfect for warm weather meals since they take advantage of convenient jarred tomato sauce. Zesty spaghetti sauce makes preparation even easier because all of the Italian seasonings already are cooked into the sauce. That means less of your summer day is spent in the kitchen and more is spent enjoying the weather!

But if you don't have a garden full of eggplant and zucchini (or if a neighbor hasn't already bestowed you with a generous supply), supermarkets and produce stands are chock full of them at reasonable prices right now.

When you buy zucchini, make sure they are firm and well-rounded, with glossy, unblemished rinds. Zucchini which is about three-to-six inches in length and one inch across tastes best. Serve it with the skin on, but scrub it well since some varieties are sandy.

Eggplant should also be shiny and firm, without sponginess or brown spots. If it has a green cap or stem on it, you can be sure it is fresh. Leave the skin on long, skinny or tiny eggplant, but remove it from larger ones, since it tends to be tough. Store both vegetables in the refrigerator and serve within three to four days after purchase.

So keep enjoying these All-American summer crops straight through to the Fall. All it takes is a little sauce, a touch of cheese and of course plenty of zucchini and eggplant. But that shouldn't be any problem!

MANICOTTI PRIMAVERA

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 small eggplant, peeled and chopped (about 1/2 pound)
- 1 small zucchini, chopped
- 1 1/2 cups extra chunky mushroom and tomato spaghetti sauce
- 1 container (15 ounces) ricotta cheese
- 3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: It's a little more than two miles from home to the Family Practice Center, but I almost always hit eight red lights. After daily reading the sign at a local donut shop which states, "Health Conscious! We use only 100 percent vegetable oil!", I had to comment. I smile at seeing a health sign at a donut shop. After all, one of my basic messages has been to reduce fat in your diet. Avoiding or using moderately fried items is important. So, a health conscious person probably wouldn't eat donuts daily.

A second message I have given before is to look at the type of fat in our diet. We do encourage everyone to use less saturated fat and more polyunsaturated and monounsaturated fats. But, yes you do need saturated fat too. So, on the occasions when you do enjoy donuts, you would want to select those fried in oils instead of lard. Is 100 percent vegetable oil good? It might be or might not be. Remember, I have said repeatedly, avoid coconut and palm oil and partially hydrogenated oils. By only reading the donut shop's sign I couldn't tell what type of vegetable oil was used, so I called the donut shop and asked. They told me they used partially hydrogenated soybean oil. That is more healthy than frying them in lard or shortening.

Let's take a minute to look at the fat content of baked goods. The two most people ask about are donuts and croissants. One of the desired qualities in a croissant is flakiness. Just as in a pie crust, that flakiness is from fat. A typical croissant has 12 grams of fat. That makes it a high fat food. Most danish also have 12 grams of fat.

Donuts vary in fat. For example, a chocolate éclair with custard has 15 grams of fat. A yeast raised donut has 13 grams of fat. A cake donut has 12 grams of fat. A jelly donut is a better choice with 8 grams of fat. Muffins are an even better choice. Corn, bran and blueberry muffins have about 5 grams of fat.

Serve Side Dishes That Are Big On Taste, But Short On Fat

By Toni Tipton
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

When a major part of a meal's calories will be invested in the meat or entree portion, it is important to serve side dishes that will satisfy yet be reasonably low in fat. The following side dishes are some suggestions that sport a variety of taste as well as texture combinations.

Long grain rice contributes good taste as well as helping to meet the body's carbohydrate and protein needs. The dish is naturally low in sodium, and it gets its good taste from a flavorful mixture of lime juice, cumin and cantaloupe.

Linguine Salad With Clam Sauce is another example of a successful confetti of colors, shapes and tastes. Here, brilliant red tomato contrasts with sliced black olives. Ciam liquid, mint and basil contribute flavor.

Other sides include a couple of slender varieties of coleslaw and some trimmed-down versions of potato salad. An entire menu can be had with little more than a whole grain or a crusty loaf of French bread, grilled lean meat, poultry or fish and one of the carbohydrate-rich sides here.

RICE SALAD OLE

- 2 1/2 cups water
- 1 1/2 cups long grain rice
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 egg, beaten
- 6 tablespoons lime juice
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 6 tablespoons oil
- 3 cups diced cantaloupe
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 1 cup sliced green onions
- 1 (4-ounce) can diced green chiles, drained

Bring water to boil. Stir in rice and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Reduce heat to low, cover, and cook 20 minutes or until all liquid is absorbed. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, 5 minutes. Cool. While rice is cooling, combine egg, lime juice, sugar, cumin and pepper with remaining 1 teaspoon salt.

Gradually beat in oil until smooth. Stir into cooled, cooked rice. Fold in cantaloupe, celery, green onions and chiles. Chill. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

LINGUINE SALAD WITH CLAM SAUCE

- 4 ounces linguine
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/4 cup torn basil leaves
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 (10-ounce) can clams
- 3 tablespoons torn mint leaves
- 1 1/2 cups chopped tomatoes
- 1/2 cups pitted black olives, sliced
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Prepare linguine according to package directions and drain. Meanwhile, heat oil in large skillet. Add onion and saute until tender, but not browned, about 3 minutes. Add garlic, basil and salt. Saute 2 minutes longer. Drain clams, reserving juice. Add juice and mint to skillet and cook 3 minutes. Stir in clams and tomatoes. Cook 1 minute.

Toss with hot pasta, then add olives, lemon juice and parsley and toss again to coat. Makes 4 servings.

LOW-CALORIE COLESLAW

- 8 cups finely shredded cabbage
- 1 cup finely sliced celery
- 1/2 cup shredded carrot
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon celery salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/4 cup wine vinegar, vinegar or lemon juice or combination excessively high in fat, having an oil and egg base.

"You will automatically avoid excess calories if you avoid foods high in fat," Magrann said.

Fat calories are more than double the calories of any other food category, Magrann pointed out. Fat calories are 9 calories per gram, while calories derived from fruits, vegetables and grains contain 4 calories per gram (Alcohol calories are second highest with 7 calories per gram alcohol).

Beware also of the type of salad you select when eating at the salad bar, cautions Magrann.

"Remember that many prepared salads, such as potato, macaroni, fruit and cooked-vegetable salads may contain mayonnaise or other creamy dressings, which are extremely high in fat.

"If you want to curb calories, stick to salads made exclusively with greens and raw vegetables, such as broccoli, mushrooms, cauliflower, alfalfa sprouts, cabbage, carrot, celery or cucumber, which range from 5 to 20 calories per 1/2 cup. Greens contain 10 to 14 calories per cup.

"If you add meat or seafood to the salad, choose less fatty meats, such as chicken, turkey or fish, and limit the amount to 3 to 4 ounces or less if other protein foods (cheese or eggs) are added.

"If you use cheeses, select those that are less calorie-rich, such as feta, Jack and Swiss. Natural fresh cheeses, such as cottage, farmer and pot cheeses are relatively low in calories if made with low-fat milk, but they, too, can add excess calories if you load up. Cottage cheese has 24 calories per ounce (about 2 table-

The Winning Entry

Turkey Steaks With Sausalito Salsa, winner of the $5,000 Grand Prize in the third annual Swift-Eckrich "Taste America" Deli Recipe Contest, drew rave reviews for its fresh flavors and simple preparation. Californian Priscilla Yee drew upon her experience as an after-five cook to create her winning entree.

Yee's initial idea came from a recipe for a sauce-topped ham steak. The final recipe is actually the result of her love for spicy foods and curiosity as to whether convenient Butterball Deli Turkey Breast could be cut into thick "steaks" and browned in a skillet. The snappy salsa, which pairs fresh oranges and gingerroot with the traditional tomatoes, chilies and cilantro, complements the turkey with the intense flavors and colors of the Southwest.

When she prepares her winning recipe for guests, Yee stops at the supermarket service deli and produce department on the way home from the office to pick up the ingredients and has dinner on the table in 15 minutes. Warm flour tortillas or pasta tosses with butter and freshly ground pepper round out the menu.

TURKEY STEAKS WITH SAUSALITO SALSA

3 slices (1/2-inch thick) turkey breast, about 1 1/2 pounds
3/4 cup diced, seeded tomato
1/2 cup peeled, diced orange
1 can (4 ounces) diced green chilies
1/2 cup thinly sliced green onions
3 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
2 to 3 teaspoons pared, minced gingerroot
1/4 teaspoon salt, optional
1 to 2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Cut each turkey slice into 2 pieces; cover and set aside. Combine tomato, orange, chilies, onions, cilantro, gingerroot and salt in medium bowl; set aside. Melt butter in large skillet over medium-high heat. Saute turkey steaks, half at a time if necessary, until lightly browned on both sides, about 3 to 5 minutes. Transfer to serving platter; spoon salsa on top.

Wise

spoons), but one tends to eat cottage cheese by the cup, not ounce. Each cup contains 125 calories. A cup of whipped cottage cheese contains about half the calories. Most cheeses such as blue, Roquefort, brick, Swiss, Cheddar and Camembert contain from 85 to 113 calories per ounce, with Camembert the lowest and Cheddar the highest.

Some prepared salads are less caloric than others, said Magrann, who studied the menus of several salad bar restaurants.

Rice curry salad contains 64 calories per 1/2 cup, a three-bean salad 52 calories, cucumber and tomato salads have 47 calories, but carrot and chiles only 23 calories.

Other high-fat items to void in excess: guacamole, banana chips, coconut, croutons, bacon bits, cheese and olives. There are 35 calories in only five olives, Magrann said.

Cast a wary eye on the baked goods served at a salad bar if you are trying to cut calories. And watch out for the muffins, especially. A bran muffin contains 373 calories. Others, such as blueberry, oatmeal, carrot-pineapple, apple-nut, orange, banana-nut and zucchini, range from 248 to 324 calories each.

Instead of bread, choose crackers. A slice of bread contains 70 calories, while saltines or other wheat crackers tally up to 25 for two.

And you should pass up the butter too. Butter and other spreads also add high calories to a salad bar meal. Calories can add up to 67 per tablespoon for whipped butter, 52 calories per tablespoon for cream cheese. If you must have butter, go for the pre-cut or packaged pat of butter, which contains 36 calories.

Stick with fresh fruit and avoid fruit salad mixed with cream, sour cream or mayonnaise. The chances are you can save 100 or more calories by simply choosing fresh melons, oranges, pineapple, apples, kiwi and grapes, which range in calories from 35 to 70 calories per half cup, compared to 140 to 280 calories for fruit mixed with dressing. For instance, a Waldorf salad contains 280 calories, an ambrosia salad 191 per half cup.

You are relatively safe in the soup department, but calories can grow, depending on the type of soup you select. Broth-based soups are lowest in calories, while cream-based soups are double or more in calories. For instance, 10 ounces of chicken noodle soup contains 61 calories while the creamy version of noodle soup contains 195 calories per 10 ounces.

Chicken gumbo is another high-calorie soup, with 202 calories per 10 ounces; corn chowder contains 236 calories per 10 ounces and bean or chili soup contains about 195 calories per 10 ounces.

Cream of mushroom soup, however, is fairly low, with 96 calories per 10 ounces. Vegetable beef and chicken soups are also relatively low in fat, with beef slightly higher in calories than chicken. Minestrone and onion soups are other low-calorie soups, containing about 120 calories and 132 calories per 10 ounces, respectively. If you add cheese and bread, you are adding 28 calories per tablespoon for the cheese and 70 calories per slice for the bread (almost 100 more calories).

But wait, we are not through. Beverages at the salad bar also can make a caloric difference in a well-calculated meal.

Cover and shake until well blended. Pour dressing over vegetables and toss gently. Makes 8 servings.

SWEET POTATO SALAD

3 1/2 pounds sweet potatoes
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 green pepper, cut into thin strips
1 cucumber, sliced
Parmesan Dressing
Wash sweet potatoes. Heat enough water to cover potatoes to boiling. Add potatoes to water, return to boil and simmer, covered, 20 to 30 minutes or until fork tender. When cool enough to handle, peel potatoes, halve lengthwise and slice 1/4-inch thick.

Toss potatoes, onion slices, pepper strips and cucumber in large bowl. Pour on Parmesan Dressing and toss carefully to coat vegetables completely. Cover and refrigerate 6 hours or overnight. Toss before serving. Makes 8 servings.

Parmesan Dressing

1/2 cup oil
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon crushed dried basil leaves
1 clove garlic, minced

1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon black pepper
Combine vinegar, oil, cheese, sugar, basil, garlic, salt and pepper in jar with tight-fitting lid. Cover and shake well to blend.

CALIFORNIA SLIM POTATO SALAD

1 1/2 pounds potatoes
1 1/2 tablespoons white wine
Salt, pepper
3 cups shredded zucchini
3/4 cup halved cherry tomatoes
Slim Dressing
6 large green-leaf lettuce leaves
1 cup pitted black olives
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Cook potatoes in about 1-inch boiling water in heavy saucepan with tight-fitting lid, until tender, about 20 minutes. Cool slightly, then peel and cube.

Toss warm potatoes with wine, 1/2 teaspoon salt and pepper to taste. Set aside. Place zucchini in colander. Sprinkle lightly with salt. Let stand about 10 minutes, then squeeze out as much liquid as possible. Add zucchini and tomatoes to potatoes and toss with Slim Dressing. Arrange on lettuce-lined platter. Garnish with olives and parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Slim Dressing
1/2 cup plain yogurt

1/4 cup mayonnaise
1 (2-ounce) can anchovy fillets, minced
1 tablespoon half and half
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon sliced green onion
1 1/2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 1/2 teaspoons chopped chives
1 1/2 teaspoons minced tarragon leaves

Culinary SOS

Super Delectable And Delicious Peanut Butter Pie

By Rose Dosti

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Dear SOS: I would love to have the recipe for peanut butter pie served at Woody and Eddy's restaurant in Pasadena, Calif. It's like a rich cheesecake. Super delicious. — ISABEL

Dear Isabel: You can say that again. Actually you can freeze it for a frozen dessert or leave it soft in all its creamy glory.

WOODY AND EDDY'S PEANUT BUTTER PIE

- 1 cup crunchy peanut butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 (8-ounce) package cream cheese
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 teaspoons melted butter
- 1 (8-ounce) package frozen whipped topping, thawed
- Chocolate-Graham Cracker Crumb Crust

Shaved chocolate

Peanuts
Mix peanut butter, sugar, cream cheese, vanilla and butter thoroughly until creamy. Fold in whipped topping. Pour into Chocolate-Graham Cracker Crust. Refrigerate overnight.

Garnish pie with additional whipped topping, reserved chocolate-graham cracker crumbs, shaved chocolate or peanuts. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

Chocolate-Graham Cracker Crumb Crust

- 2 cups graham cracker crumbs
 - 1/4 cup melted butter
 - 2 ounces grated bar chocolate
- Combine crumbs, butter and chocolate until well mixed. Reserve 1/4 cup for garnish. Press remaining crumbs into bottom and sides of 9-inch pie plate. Chill.

Dear SOS: During the past few years you have published a recipe for red and green pepper sauce on angel hair pasta as served at Camelions in Los Angeles. I've lost the recipe and would appreciate it if you would replace it since I have a bunch of peppers prepared in the freezer, not realizing the recipe was gone. —KEN
Dear Ken: You can start thawing the peppers. It is a lovely recipe.

CAMELIONS' ANGEL HAIR PASTA WITH RED AND GREEN PEPPERS

- 1 pound angel hair pasta
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 8 sun-dried tomatoes, packed in oil, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh basil
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley, leaves only

- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 sweet red peppers, roasted, peeled and cut julienne
- 2 green peppers, roasted, peeled and cut julienne
- Salt, pepper

1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Cook pasta in boiling salted water until just tender. Drain.

Meanwhile, melt butter in saucepan. Add olive oil and heat. Add tomatoes, basil, parsley, garlic and peppers. Sauté until heated through. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Add to drained pasta and toss to mix well. Top with Parmesan cheese. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Dear SOS: Please help. I have tried all the recipes for fresh fruit pie glaze and all of them have been runny. —VERLINDA

Dear Verlinda: Why don't you try this strawberry pie glazed with the help of gelatin to keep it from running.

GLAZED STRAWBERRY GELATIN PIE

- 1 (3 1/4-ounce) package vanilla pudding and pie filling mix
- 1 baked (9- or 10-inch) pie shell
- 1 (3-ounce) package strawberry gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 3/4 cup cold water
- 2 cups sweetened sliced fresh strawberries

Prepare pie filling mix as directed on package for pie. Pour into cooled pie shell. Chill 1 hour.

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water. Chill until slightly thickened. Add strawberries and spoon carefully over pie filling. Chill until firm, at least 3 hours. Makes 1 (9- or 10-inch) pie.

Dear SOS: I had minced vegetables in lettuce cups at the Mandarin in Beverly Hills, Calif., and I can't stop thinking about these delicious appetizers. They were complex and spicy. Do you think you could get the recipe for me? — HUNGRY READER

Dear Hungry: What a perfect summer appetizer for guests to assemble themselves on a patio or at pool-side. Have the filling, lettuce and oyster sauce ingredients out and allow guests to help themselves. Keep tabs on the serving area, which can become messy in no time at all. We have the Mandarin restaurant's recipe for the "Chinese tacos" using squab, but by eliminating the squab all together from the recipe, you will have the vegetable lettuce cups.

- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 1/2 teaspoons sesame oil
- Dash sugar
- Dash white pepper
- 4 squab, boned (reserve bones and skin for soup or stock)
- 4 ounces dried black mushrooms
- 1 (3- or 4-ounce) can water chestnuts
- 3 to 4 green onions
- 1 ounce Virginia or other baked ham
- 1 tomato, cut in wedges

- 1 head iceberg lettuce
- Cilantro sprigs
- Oyster Sauce, optional

Pour oil to depth of 1-inch in wok or large skillet. Heat until hot. Add noodles and fry until puffed, but not golden, about 1 to 3 seconds. Remove at once from wok, drain on paper towels and set aside.

Combine soy sauce, Worcestershire, sesame oil, sugar and pepper in small bowl. Set aside.

Mince squab flesh. Soften mushrooms in warm water 5 minutes, then drain. Mince mushrooms, water chestnuts, green onions and ham.

Heat 1/2 cup oil in wok or skillet. Add minced squab and ham and saute 1 minute. Add half soy sauce mixture and saute until squab is done, about 1 minute. Remove from wok. Set aside.

Saute 30 seconds longer. Remove from wok and add to minced squab mixture. Next, saute green onions 30 seconds. Add to minced squab mixture.

Cut off 1/4 of lettuce head at stem end. Plunge larger portion in cold water to help leaves open. Remove individual leaves, reserving curled inner portion for other uses.

Crush fried noodles and place on serving platter. Make well in center, and spoon in squab mixture. Garnish with tomato wedges and cilantro sprigs. Arrange lettuce cups on separate platter.

To serve, spoon heaping 1 or 2 tablespoons squab mixture in center of each lettuce cup. Fold in halves like taco, using Oyster Sauce for drizzling or dipping. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

- Oyster Sauce
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons bottled oyster sauce
- Dash white pepper
- Dash sugar
- Combine soy sauce, oyster sauce, pepper and sugar.

Peasant Food Becoming Popular In An Urban World

By Patrick Ercolano
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

As the world grows more urban and industrial, the simple farm folk known as peasants become more scarce. But ironically, as the peasantry dwindles, its influence on the world's eating habits is expanding to the point where "peasant food" is being considered a prominent culinary trend.

Vegetables, grains, dairy products, some meat, whatever can be grown and raised by agrarian people on small farms, these are the elements of peasant food. They also seem linked to the current wave of nostalgia for the foods our moms used to prepare for us, the so-called "American heartland foods" that are being rediscovered as wholesome and healthful staples. "Heartland food with an international flavor" is another way of saying "peasant food."

Dishes rooted in the peasant tradition — polenta (boiled cornmeal mush) from Italy, kasha (boiled buckwheat kernels) from Russia and couscous (steamed semolina) from Northern Africa, among others — have begun to appear on restaurant menus across the United States. Last year a restaurant devoted exclusively to peasant fare opened in San Francisco.

Even the renewed interest in edible flowers can be viewed in the context of peasant cuisine. A common part of meal preparation in Europe until the 19th century, edible flowers lost popularity because of refrigeration advances that made other foods available to the public, and because of the flowers' negative association with the peasants who regularly cooked with them.

Also, Kellogg's is marketing its new cereal Mueslix as something descended from the breakfast tables of the old European peasants.

Definable as poor people who work the land more for their own sustenance than for profit, peasants make do with what is available to them.

"Peasant cookery must of its nature depend on ingredients which can be easily obtained or grown locally," writes English food author Elisabeth Luard in her recently published opus on peasant food, "The Old World Kitchen: The Rich Tradition of European Peasant Cooking" (Bantam), a combination cookbook and historical text that was 25 years in the making.

Luard adds, "The glow of embers on the hearth, a savory broth simmering in the cooking pot on its tripod, a fitch of bacon from last autumn's pig smoking in a hollow in the chimney — until very recently these were not nostalgic pleasures; for centuries they were the very stuff of life in Europe."

The peasants' poverty directly influenced the way they cooked. They could not afford sugar until the past century, so few of their dishes were sweet. Fuel was also a dear commodity, so cooking was usually done in one pot over a single heat source. Consequently, stews and soups play a large part in peasant cookery.

Here are two recipes from "The Old World Kitchen" by Elisabeth Luard.

CORNMEAL MUSH OR POLENTA
(from Italy)
3 cups water
1 1/2 cups coarsely ground yellow cornmeal

POACHED ASPARAGUS AND FRIED EGGS

1 thick slice pancetta
6 large asparagus spears
2 eggs
4 tablespoons butter
Freshly grated parmesan cheese to taste
Freshly milled black pepper to taste

Dice the pancetta and render slowly in a small, heavy skillet. When golden brown, drain on a paper towel and reserve.

Peel the asparagus stalks and tie the spears into a bundle. Trim the bottoms evenly. Cook the asparagus in salted boiling water to the desired doneness, about 4 to 5 minutes. Drain them thoroughly and untie. While the asparagus are cooking, fry the eggs in the butter.

To serve, place the asparagus spears on a heated plate and cover with the egg and butter drippings. Sprinkle with the pancetta cracklings, cheese and pepper.

—"Glorious Food," by Christopher Idone (Stewart, Tabori and Chang, 1982)

TURKEY AND CORNBREAD SALAD

1 package (6 ounces) cornbread stuffing mix
3/4 pound low-sodium turkey breast, cubed
1 can (8 ounces) whole kernel corn, drained
1/2 cup green pepper, chopped
1/2 cup onion, chopped
1 jar (2 ounces) chopped pimento, drained
1 cup reduced-calorie cucumber or buttermilk salad dressing
Reserve 1/4 cup stuffing mix for garnish. In a large bowl combine remaining cornbread mix, turkey, corn, green pepper, onion, pimento and dressing. Mix thoroughly; cover and refrigerate 4 hours or overnight. Serve topped with reserved stuffing mix.

Bring the water to a boil in a heavy saucepan. Trickle in cornmeal from your hand, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon with the other hand. Make sure the mixture is smooth. Press out any lumps with the back of the spoon, as if you're making oatmeal. Add salt.

Bring to a boil and then simmer on low heat for 30 minutes or so, stirring throughout to avoid sticking. When the mixture is well thickened and comes away from the sides of the pan, it is done.

You may find that you will need a little more or less water as you cook.

Serve with your favorite pasta sauce (one with a mushroom base is particularly suitable). Pass a bowl of grated Parmesan or Pecorino cheese separately, or serve with grilled meat or a rich game stew. Makes four servings.

CHICKEN AND VEGETABLE STEW OR JACHNIA (from Bulgaria)

1 chicken
1 pound scallions with leaves
2 fresh spring garlics with leaves or 4 dried garlic cloves
1 pound eggplant
1 pound tomatoes, skinned, or a 1-pound can of tomatoes
1/2 cup sunflower oil
Salt and pepper

1 tablespoon each savory, mint and Italian parsley

Wipe dry and then joint the chicken into 12 pieces. Top and tail the scallions, leaving the green leaves on. Do the same for the fresh garlic or peel and chop the dried garlic. Cut off the stalk, wipe and cube the eggplant. Chop the tomatoes.

Heat 2 tablespoons of the oil in a casserole or stewpan with a lid and add the chicken pieces. Fry the joints gently until they brown. Push them to one side, and add the onions and garlic. Fry them until they soften. Add the rest of the oil and lightly fry the eggplant in it. Season with salt and pepper. Add tomatoes. Cover and simmer gently for one hour.

Chop the herbs finely and add five minutes before the end of cooking time. Serve with rice or bread.

Microwaveable Popcorn Big In Snack Market

By Mary Corey
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

We have all gotten to know that sound, the stomach-stimulating rhythm that means we will soon be ripping into a bag of fluffy, steaming popcorn. No one seems to be measuring oil into a pan anymore, then carefully shaking the popping kernels. Instead, the American public has made microwave popcorn the fastest growing segment of the snack-food industry.

From the office vending machine to the kitchen cupboard, bags of microwave popcorn are being bought, popped and consumed in record numbers. Give us something we can prepare before the opening credits of "The Cosby Show" are over, consumers seem to be saying, and manufacturers are gladly, and profitably, obliging.

Microwave popcorn — whether it is Mr. Peanut's, Betty Crocker's or the Pillsbury Dough Boy's — is beating out snack pies, pretzels and corn chips for the heart and soul of junk-food junkies, according to Dennis Mitchell, managing editor of Snack Food magazine, a trade publication. More than half of the entire popcorn market is now devoted to microwave products, with microwave popcorn sales having increased 40.7 percent in 1987 to make the microwave popcorn industry a $351 million business, Mitchell adds.

"Taste doesn't seem to be the main selling point," he says. "It's convenience more than anything else."

With the dawn of the five-minute-or-less bag of popcorn, the hot-air and traditional methods are looking particularly dated. Who wants to dirty a pot and a bowl and fool with oil, when you can pop a bag in the microwave and set it for five minutes, says Ben Frustaci, venture general manager of TV Time, a subsidiary of McCormick & Co., which produces several varieties of microwave popcorn.

People are willing to pay a little more for the no-mess alternative, Frustaci adds. With many brands in the $2 price range, their cost amounts to four to five times that of unpopped or pre-popped varieties, he says.

To some people, popcorn is popcorn, says Nancy Lilleberg, associate manager of consumer service for Pillsbury, which brought the first microwave popcorn product to the market in 1977. But having surveyed other brands, she has found tremendous diversity in taste.

"Some taste like Styrofoam, some are salty, others have an oily flavor. And some have no flavor at all," she says. "It's all personal preference. It depends on what you grew up with — whether you like a lot of butter, a little salt."

Consumers may disagree about what constitutes a good bag of microwave popcorn, but many of them are drawn to the snack because of its health benefits. It is one of the few foods recommended by the American Cancer Society, American Dental Association and American Diabetes Association. It is also a good source of fiber, with many brands containing 2 to 3 grams in each serving.

But the very property that allows microwave popcorn to pop — a solid square of oil incrusting with unpopped kernels — is what gives the snack its calories. While three cups of the air-popped treat amount to 91 calories, the same serving of Pillsbury's frozen original microwave popcorn, with its artery-clogging coconut oil, has 210 calories. And when consumers graduate to more exotic flavors, the calories often escalate. For example, Orville Redenbacher's microwave caramel popcorn contains 240 calories per 2½-cup serving.

Sodium can also put a damper on the wholesome, healthy appeal of microwave popcorn. While a number of companies produce salt-free brands, other innocent-looking boxes like Planters natural-flavored microwave popcorn contain a whopping 560 milligrams of sodium, compared with 260 milligrams for many other microwave popcorn products.

Some people are fooling themselves when they believe microwave popcorn is healthy, says Esther Marsiglia, a Baltimore home economist, who has been teaching microwave-cooking classes for 20 years. "The best snack is plain popcorn or unsalted pretzels."

"The consumer who is really health-conscious will make hot-air popcorn," Frustaci says. "But it has very little flavor. It's like pasta; it needs a little tomato, alfredo or pesto sauce on it. It absorbs the taste of what you put on it. Popcorn is the same way. On its own, it doesn't have much taste."

With microwave oven sales still climbing and the status of popcorn as a favorite snack assured, industry experts are looking for more exotic flavors to hit the market in coming months. Companies like General Mills, TV Time and Orville Redenbacher have recently introduced a microwave cheese popcorn, and Mr. Popcorn himself, Orville Redenbacher, has also recently debuted sour cream and onion and caramel varieties.

Few people believe that the microwave popcorn industry will reach the faddish flavored heights that the regular popcorn market did in the late '70s.

Double Coupon Gimmick Means

FRUITS AND JUICES COST $6.81 MORE AT KROGER

Kroger has recently been advertising Double Coupons. However, the problem with Double Coupons is that they end up costing you more money for groceries. In order to give you 50¢ for a 25¢ coupon, for example, Kroger has to make up the extra 25¢ by charging you more for the other groceries you buy. For example, a recent comparison of fruit and juice prices shows Kroger charged $6.81 more for the same fruit and juice items than Food Lion. At Food Lion we don't believe in gimmicks like Double Coupons. But we do believe in Extra Low Prices on all the groceries you buy. And when you shop at Food Lion you'll discover a lower total food bill — without gimmicks like double coupons.
