Day Care Centers Serve Migrant Families' Needs

By CHERIE EVANS

Already blessed with two children, a family faced the possibility of having to place its newborn male twins in foster care. The boys' delivery had been difficult, and the mother needed time to recover before she began caring for the family that had increased by two.

The St. James day care facility for migrant children was there. The 8-day-old twins entered the day-care program and now are bustling at the ripe old age of 22 months.

Watching the children in the program grow from infancy to 5 years old is a gem of the program, said Yvonne Barnes, the project coordinator of the center. She and her husband the Rev. Charles Barnes, executive director of the center and pastor of St. James Christian Church in Fountain, organized the center 10 years ago.

Affiliated with the East Coast

Migrant Headstart Project, the St. James center and another one in Nash County are funded by a $192,000 federal grant, Mrs. Barnes said.

The two centers operate from June through August or September — the harvesting season — and are equipped to serve 135 migrant children from Pitt, Greene, Wilson and Nash counties. Between 80 and 100 children are served in the pro-

Cambodia Peace Talks Finish On A Sour Note

By PETER ENG
Associated Press Writer

BOGOR, Indonesia (AP) — Cambodia's Vietnam-installed government and delegates of the Khmer Rouge guerrillas clashed at peace talks that ended today, and a settlement of the 9-year-old civil war remained elusive, participants said.

One participant, Foreign Minister Suphiah Dhanabalan of Singapore, said the four Cambodian factions remained "quite far apart" after four days of informal talks.

The talks brought together Vietnam, the nominal coalition of three guerrilla groups opposing its occupation of Cambodia, the Phnom Penh government, and Vietnam's close ally, Laos.

Also attending were representatives of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, which backs the guerrillas: Thailand, Singapore, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines and Brunei.

Working groups of senior officials of all the parties are to be set up to discuss specific issues. By year's end, the groups are to make recommendations on holding another round of talks.

The guerrilla leaders were Khieu Samphan of the communist Khmer Rouge; Son Sann of the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front; and Prince Norodom Ranariddh, representing his father, former Cambodian monarch Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Vietnam maintains more than 100,000 troops in Cambodia to fight the guerrillas, but has pledged a total pullout by early 1990. That led to the Bogor talks and an anxious search for a political solution to prevent a bloodier civil war.

Vietnam's delegate, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, said he was "half happy" with the talks. "We are determined to have a political solution before the end of 1990," he said.

Supreme Court Orders New Trial In Rape Case

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The N.C. Supreme Court has ordered a new trial for a Greenville man convicted of raping his stepdaughter over a three-year period.

The court ordered the trial for Charlie James Jones, 39, who was convicted in Pitt County Superior Court in 1986 for first-degree rape charges in connection with incidents between 1982 and 1985.

In an eight-page opinion delivered July 5, the high court said the Pitt county should not have allowed testimony from a woman who claimed

Jones also raped her between 1970 and 1975.

The court ruled that prior acts of sexual misconduct are relevant if they show the defendant's state of mind, but the time lapse between the alleged incidents "erodes the commonality between them" and the admission of the testimony "was prejudicial to the defendant's fundamental right to a fair trial."

"...The prior acts were so remote in time that their probative effect was outweighed by the prejudice visited upon him," Justice Henry E. Frye wrote for the court.

"The probability of an ongoing plan or scheme becomes tenuous," Frye said in the opinion. "Admission of other crimes at that point allows the jury to convict defendant because of the kind of person he is, rather than because the evidence discloses, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he committed the offense charged."

At a July 13 bond hearing in Greenville, Superior Court Judge Paul M. Wright of Goldsboro granted Jones a $20,000 secured bond and ordered Jones not to molest, threaten or con-

Koop Cites Poor Diet Habits

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of Americans are waddling their way to early graves by consuming too much fat, too much salt and washing it all down with too much booze, the U.S. surgeon general reported on Wednesday.

"Diseases of dietary excess and imbalance" are among the leading causes of death in the United States, said the report issued by C. Everett Koop. "Over-consumption ... is now a major concern for Americans."

The study said that of 2.1 million Americans who died last year, nearly 1.5 million succumbed to diseases associated with diet.

"What we eat may affect our risk for several of the leading causes of death for Americans, notably coronary heart disease, stroke, atherosclerosis, diabetes, and some types of cancer," the report said. "These disorders together now account for more than two-thirds of all deaths in the United States."

The study said that many Americans are too fat, while others fail to get required nutrients such as calcium and iron. And the report repeatedly emphasized the need to cut down on consumption of animal products and replace them with a greater variety of foods, particularly fruits, vegetables and whole grains.

Nutrition experts praised the report, predicting that may have an important impact on how Americans regard their diet and on products sold by the food industry.

"This is really the first report by the Surgeon General relating nutrition to health. With his prestige, it could have an influence," said Paul Lachance, a professor of food science at Rutgers University.

"It's a very good report," said Dr. (See KOOP, A-14)

Texasgulf Fine May Be Cut

RALEIGH (AP) — A state environmental official says an administrative law judge's opinion on the reduction of a fine against Texasgulf Chemicals Co., would "tear the guts out" of the state's enforcement program.

Judge Robert Melott, the state's chief administrative law judge, issued a nonbinding opinion Wednesday saying that the N.C. Division of Environmental Management misinterpreted a state law when it assessed a $5.7 million fine against the phosphate plant for air pollution violations.

If other state officials agree, the fine could be reduced to $20,000.

Melott said the division erred when it fined Texasgulf up to $5,000 a day for violations that began more than three years before the state cited the company in December 1986.

"Under law, they cannot assess day-to-day violations until after they have given notice," Melott told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "The way this penalty got so high is they applied it on a day-to-day basis for the entire period the plant was in violation."

"If they had gone down there the first day and told them to clean it up, then clearly they could have imposed this much," he said.

"The Environmental Management Commission can reject that opinion out of hand, and I'm sure the staff will recommend that they do so," said Don Follmer, spokesman for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

"If in fact he has recommended that much of a drastic reduction, and it is upheld at a hearing, that would have the effect of tearing the guts out of our enforcement program," Follmer said.

"It seems to me that Mr. Melott's decision is like saying that murder is legal until you're notified that it's illegal," said Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the Conservatin Council.

Mandela Home Burns

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — The home of Winnie Mandela, wife of jailed black guerrilla leader Nelson Mandela, was gutted in a fire today that police said was set by a group of black schoolchildren.

No one was home when the blaze broke out at 12:30 p.m., and there were no injuries, police and witnesses said.

Mrs. Mandela arrived by car about an hour later but remained in her vehicle and drove to her nearby office without making any statements.

The four-room home in the black township of Soweto outside Johannesburg was charred, and all the contents were destroyed in the fire, officials said. Mrs. Mandela, a social worker and anti-apartheid activist, shared the modest home with her daughter Zindzi, 27, and two grandchildren.

Assigned Reading

By CHERIE EVANS

Like teachers, the Pitt County Board of Education gave Pitt County Commissioners some assigned reading, and instructed them to list questions they have about their reading.

In a joint meeting of the boards Wednesday, county commissioners were presented a copy of the Pitt County school system's long-range plan, which focuses on projected facility needs of the school system through the early 1990s.

Deputy Superintendent John McKnight outlined the plan for Commissioners, discussing its origin, procedures and cost.

He told Commissioners the long-range plan was created in response to the General Assembly establishing the School Facilities Finance Act in 1987. The legislation, through two

Pitt Roads Getting Names

Pitt County Commissioners adopted an ordinance giving official names to all secondary roads in the county Wednesday and moved a step closer to giving final approval to the creation of a planning boundary between Greenville and Winterville.

The road naming is part of a project to install road-name signs at the intersection of all secondary roads throughout Pitt.

County Planner Jeff Ulma said the signs would be ordered within a week and, when delivered, installed with the help of volunteer fire departments and rescue squads throughout the county.

The signs for the more than 450 secondary roads will be paid for with a $67,000 state grant.

Ulma said the post, bracket and two blades (containing the names) for each intersection cost about $67 each and "we estimated there are about 1,000 intersections," in the county that will receive a sign.

While the state is paying for the first signs, the installation, maintenance and replacement of the signs is the county's responsibility.

Also on Wednesday, commissioners asked board chairman Charles Gaskins and County Manager Kramer Jackson to meet with representatives of the Greenville Utilities Commission and the Eastern Pines Water Corporation to work out final details of an agreement to create a planning-zone boundary between Greenville and Winterville.

Commissioners in March gave approval to the planning-boundary concept, but said any final proposal should include a service-area boundary agreement between the GUC and Eastern Pines as well.

Under the concept, White Road (Secondary Road 1708), would serve as the planning boundary from N.C. 11 to the Tar Road (SR 1700), with Greenville serving the area to the north and Winterville serving the area to the south.

The boundary would then follow (See ROADS, A-2)

In The Area

Thefts Reported

Police said eight thefts, including a $2,500 cement mixer, were reported to the Greenville department Wednesday.

Officer Alexander Batts said the trailer-mounted cement mixer was taken from Edwards Tile Co. at 1115 S. Pitt St. in an incident reported at 8:40 a.m. and $100 in cash and $50 worth of cigarettes were taken from Collins Grocery on Ninth Street in a break-in reported at 9:24 a.m., while Officer W.T. McCarter said two hubcaps were taken from a car parked on Church Street in an incident reported at 12:15 a.m.

Officer P.W. Worthington said a checkbook and identification cards were taken from a car parked at 51 Barnes St. in an incident reported at 6:34 a.m., while Officer S.A. Bass said a wallet containing $500 in cash, a tennis racket and a pair of sunglasses were taken from a car parked at 1692 Cumberland Dr. in an incident reported at 8:35 a.m.

Officer M.R. Benton said carpet was taken from two rooms of a vacant apartment at 211 N. Oak St. in an incident reported at 4:29 p.m., while Officer L.C. Overby said a video cassette recorder was taken from 306B Church St. in a break-in reported at 4:33 p.m.

According to Officer M.A. Jordan a chain saw was taken from a garage at 104 Kilby Dr. in an incident reported at 6:14 p.m.

Woman Charged

Jocelyn Koonce, 32, of Kinston, was arrested on shoplifting charges by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer M.R. Benton said Ms.

Koonce was charged in connection with a 6:46 p.m. incident at Rose's at The Plaza mall.

Two Men Arrested

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported that two Pitt County men were arrested and charged with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with an 7 a.m. Tuesday incident at the country store at Helen's Cross Roads.

The two charged are Robert Allen Pollard and Reggie Page, both of Route 2, Box 210, Ayden. They are being held on a $5,000 bond each.

The record states that entry was gained by the removal of an air conditioning unit from a window in the store. Items reportedly taken included $250 in cash, a quantity of beer, cigarettes and other merchandise with a total value estimated at $737. Also reportedly taken were a number of food stamps.

Damage to the property was set at approximately $200.

Tyson said that everything except the cash has been recovered.

Interviews Planned

Five interview periods have been scheduled in Pitt County during August for recruiting youths, 16-21, for job training at local Job Corps centers. Counselor Cheryl Tripp will conduct the interviews.

The interviews begin at 9:30 a.m. Monday and Aug. 8, 15 and 29 at Department of Social Services, Greenville, telephone 758-2167; and Aug. 22, 9:30 a.m., Telamon Corporation, Bethel, 825-0095.

Jones Gives Seminar

State Rep. Walter Jones Jr. (D-Pitt & Greene) has been invited to participate in the North Carolina Society of Anesthesiologists' 1988 Legislative Seminar.

He will join two other state senators to conduct seminar to help anesthesiologists understand North Carolina government and the importance of their political participation.

U.S. Rep. Martin Lancaster (D-N.C.), who represents the third district, is keynote speaker.

The society is sponsoring the Legislative Seminar at Bernard's Landing, Smith Mountain Lake, Va. this weekend.

Attends Conference

Emmy Whitehead, Pitt County Schools' arts education coordinator joined about 75 other arts administrators from across North Carolina at the Arts Education Administrator's Conference, July 13-14, at the N.C. School of the Arts.

The Department of Public Instruction's Division of Arts Education sponsored the conference, where administrators learned ways to use an interdisciplinary approach to arts education.

Suzanne Cohan, coordinator of the masters program in interdisciplinary arts education at Columbia College in Chicago, helped the group develop lesson plans using the approach. She is a sculptor, designer and art educator.

Conference participants also got a behind-the-scenes look at the N.C. School of Arts and learned of changes and trends in arts education.

The Basic Education Program, approved by the 1985 General Assembly, places a greater emphasis on arts education.

Benefits Increase

RALEIGH — Eligible jobless workers in North Carolina will be paid a weekly maximum of $228 in unemployment insurance, instead of $204, beginning Monday.

This payment is established for those receiving benefits on or after Monday.

Chairman Betsy Y. Justus of the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina said today that the change is required by the Employment Security Law.

"Each Aug. 1," she said, "the maximum weekly benefit amount is recalculated at 66 2/3 percent of the average North Carolina wage for the previous year."

The average wage for 1986 was $324.10 and for 1987, $342.03.

Justus said jobless workers receive these payments to help with expenses while they look for work.

"The benefit formula is designed to replace about 50 percent of the average weekly wage loss, with the maximum being $228," she said. "About 18 percent of the claimants qualify for the maximum."

North Carolina pays the highest weekly maximum benefits of any of the eight states in the Southeast, and ranks 13th nationally.

Children's Day

The Brotherhood Club of Greenville will sponsor its eighth annual children's day Saturday beginning at noon at the Brotherhood Club, 202 Pennsylvania Ave.

Hot dogs, drinks and games are all part of the free event.

The raindate is Sunday. For more information, call the club at 757-3226.

Alumni To Gather

The Pitt County North Carolina Central University Alumni chapter will hold its monthly meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the third-floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building (the old Pitt Memorial Hospital).

The agenda includes reports on the National Convention, budget, annual fish fry, Ernest Brown Banquet and the activity calendar. Those attending should remember to wear their colors.

For more information call Wade Johnson Jr. at 355-7188.

Choir Celebrates

The Pitt-Greene Interdenominational Choir celebrates its anniversary at Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church at 5 p.m. Sunday. The Rev. Willie H. Joyner is guest speaker.

The Pitt County Union meeting is also at Selvia Chapel Church, Friday-Sunday.

Roads In Pitt Getting Names

south along Tar Road (with Winterville having all rights for planning and providing utility service to areas west of the boundary) to a creek flowing into Fork Swamp, then east along the creek to Fork Swamp, then south along Fork Swamp to a point about 1,000 feet south of the Worthington Road (SR 1711).

Greenville's southern planning boundary would then continue east, paralleling Worthington Road, to a point east of the County Home Road (SR 1725). The boundary would then turn north, paralleling County Home Road up to 2,000 feet east, to N.C. 43.

The proposed extraterritorial jurisdiction limit for Greenville represents the maximum reach of GUC sewer service in the area.

But since Eastern Pines has a six-inch water line along County Home Road, commissioners — concerned about protecting private water corporations serving customers in unincorporated areas — suggested the service-area boundary agreement between the two utilities.

Green told the board Wednesday that he and Glenn Hardee, president and manager of Eastern Pines' water corporation, had reached a tentative agreement. But Green said Eastern Pines' board had not given its approval.

But Hardee said his board had met again and agreed to sell the County Home Road water line to the Greenville Utilities Commission for $135,000.

"I think Greenville should have it (the line)," Hardee told commissioners. "The board thinks so."

But, Hardee said, "I would like to have an agreement ... to protect us," along Secondary Road 1726, after Brook Valley is annexed by the City of Greenville on Jan. 1.

Gaskins said this morning that "everything was worked out" for the Greenville-Winterville planning boundary at a Wednesday afternoon meeting with Green and Hardee.

Green, this morning, said the GUC will purchase the Eastern Pines line on the County Home Road and provide service to the 42 customers. He also said the two utilities would work together in an effort to protect the water corporation's investment in the area along SR 1726.

Two Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees — David Speir and Catherine Lewis — asked commissioners "for your support for the concept of a medical center name."

Speir said the hospital was still named Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and the East Carolina University School of Medicine would maintain its own name. But Speir suggested that a name encompassing all the medical facilities, which would reflect their regional nature, would be proper.

"It's a regional fact, whether it's a concept or not," Ms. Lewis said.

CT&T Gives Funds

A $25,000 donation to the Pitt County Basic Building Construction fund was announced this morning by Wayne Peterson, president of Tarboro-based Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Peterson, at a meeting sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said, "this area has momentum," and suggested the donation was an effort to "keep the momentum going." Peterson described Greenville as "the engine," and said "it's up to us to provide the fuel."

The basic building fund — to build shell buildings in an effort to attract new industry, was established by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, which has agreed to match up to $500,000 in private contributions to the program.

Phil Dixon, chairman of the chamber board, told the gathering that 85 percent of the industrial prospects are looking for existing buildings. The basic building fund, he said, is a "joint effort" to provide buildings to attract new industry.

Bill Clark, a member of the Pitt County Development Commission and chairman of the chamber's efforts to raise private donations for the shell-building project, said "more than $300,000 has been pledged" for the project in the past two months.

The basic building fund will be used to build one or more shell buildings. When a building is sold, the money will be returned to the fund so other buildings can be financed.

Charles Gaskins, chairman of the board of commissioners, said the building fund "is a move in the right direction (which) will pay dividends to the county in the form of new jobs and an increased tax base."

Peterson told the gathering that CT&T has some $56 million invested in buildings and equipment in Greenville. He also said the company plans to invest about $3 million a year for the next three years in equipment and other facilities in Pitt County.

BASIC BUILDING DONATION — Bill Clark, left, Wayne Peterson, center, and Phil Dixon talk after a meeting this morning at the Hilton Inn where Peterson, president of Tarboro-based Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced the company would donate $25,000 to the county's program to build basic buildings in an effort to attract new industry. Clark is chairman of a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce committee raising private contributions for the fund. Dixon is chairman of the chamber board. (Reflector Staff Photo)

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Voters Lose

Election Errors Improper, Intolerable

The hand that guards the ballot box should be precise, not careless.

But allowing 18 registered Republicans and four unaffiliated voters to cast ballots in a Democratic primary is not precision. Those errors, committed by poll workers in five precincts in Pitt County's May 31 county commission runoff, represent disregard. That is improper and intolerable in an election process.

County commission candidates D.D. Garrett and James Dupree and the citizens they seek to serve as public officials deserve a correctly run election. The state Board of Elections should mandate one promptly.

Citizens can't see what happens to their votes once cast; the only assurance of accountability is their faith in the soundness of the election system. And in Pitt County, sadly, that confidence has decayed as irregularity after irregularity emerged in the May 31 election proceedings. Duly-certified voters were denied the right to vote; ballots indistinctly marked were seemingly arbitrarily credited to one candidate.

Now investigation reveals clearly ineligible voters - voters registered in the wrong party - were allowed to cast ballots unchallenged. The number voting was significant; not one or two, but 22. And the mistakes were widespread; they occurred in five precincts.

While there is no evidence anything but carelessness caused these incidents, heedless administration is not acceptable in an election. Human error, while not excusable, is understandable. But sloppiness in handling elections procedures is neither intelligible nor tolerable.

Pitt County - a community accustomed to sound, unquestionable elections - now needs a thoughtful look at the system that tallies its political process. The scope of the latest voting irregularities can and should shake the confidence of a constituency expecting fastidious, meticulous elections.

To have ineligible voters cast ballots in an election - apparently unchallenged by poll workers - is unthinkable. The sanctity of the individual vote and the integrity of the ballot box is crucial to the framework of a democracy. Carelessness and impropriety crumbles the mortar of this all-important foundation.

Another election should be conducted as quickly as feasible and in the most conscientious manner possible. The voters were the losers in the May 31 election; they should not be failed again by unmindful operations in the system which gives them the power to govern themselves.

Build It Right

Pitt Has Stake In Beltline Issue

If the controversy over the safety features of a reconstructed Raleigh beltline seem remote down east, consider for a moment that this road is a traditional route for motorists traveling west from U.S. 64 and U.S. 264.

Thus residents of Rocky Mount, Tarboro, Williamston, Washington, Greenville, Farmville and Wilson, along with many others, have a major stake in the Raleigh beltline's safety features.

Present Department of Transportation proposals call for widening the beltline to six lanes but the inside lane would be only four feet from a concrete barrier. That would mean no breakdown lane would exist on the inside lane. Raleigh officials want the highway widened on the outside with a breakdown lane maintained on the interior. While all agree the highway would be safer with the safety lane, higher costs seems to be the controlling factor.

But it is not solely Raleigh's battle. Motorists down this way will be frequently making use of the beltline as they travel west from U.S. 64 and U.S. 264 and on past Raleigh.

Besides, if this stretch of road is built inadequately, that sets a precedent for future construction of other crucial roadways in the state.

The extension should be constructed properly, with a breakdown lane in the center. And by no means should the cost of that safety factor detract from any funding in other parts of the state - especially Pitt County's U.S. 264 project.

We have argued for many years for the construction of a freeway design highway from Pitt County to Raleigh. With construction now underway such a highway is within sight. With adequate interchanges U.S. 264 can be a safe and convenient highway to the west. But with an unsafe beltline, as now proposed in Raleigh, the benefits of getting to Raleigh safely will be diminished.

Cost is certainly a consideration. It is anticipated, however, that the Legislature will do something in 1989 about improved funding for highway construction. That improvement should be substantial enough to allow heavily-used roadways to be built safely.

D.C. May Be What Jesse Wants

WASHINGTON - "What does Jesse want?" the pundits' staple question until his spectacular speech at the Democratic National Convention laid it to rest, has been replaced by another: What does Jesse do?

The presidential electioneering, in which the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson is expected to play a major role, will be over in less than four months. What does he do then? Serve in a Michael Dukakis Cabinet (assuming a Democratic victory)? Go back to run Operation PUSH (in the event George Bush wins)? Take over the NAACP or the Urban League? Turn his "Rainbow Coalition" into a full-time political organization? Become chairman of the Democratic National Committee?

What does Jesse do? The answer is so obvious, it's amazing there's not already an organization or two working to bring it about. Jackson should become mayor of the Nation's Capital.

The "what does Jesse want" question presumed that the charismatic Jackson coveted a place in a Dukakis administration. He let it be known in Atlanta that he didn't. And he shouldn't.

What administration job could he hold (or more aptly, what job could hold him)? The Departments of Housing and Health and Human Services, both of which have had black secretaries, are such obvious choices as to be dismissed out of hand by a man who is into breaking new ground.

Ditto for ambassador to the United Nations, a job that could make better use of Jackson's talents, were it not for the fact that it has already been held by Andy Young, who found himself in more or less constant trouble because he couldn't bear simply to announce policies of someone else's devising. Neither could Jackson. Furthermore, Jackson would be reluctant merely to follow in the footsteps of a man who was never fully aboard for his presidentialvice presidential bids.

'He would have no trouble qualifying for the post. Nor would he have any difficulty being elected.'

He lacks the background for Treasury, Defense, Justice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor, Transportation or Energy. Education would be a possibility, but not a particularly attractive one. The only Cabinet post that would remotely interest him (in my view) is one Dukakis wouldn't dare offer: State.

An administration job is out. So, given the political realities, is a Senate seat or a governor's post.

But even his supporters acknowledge that Jackson's two big weaknesses in his pursuit of the presidency (a job for which he can still be presumed to "keep hope alive") are the fact that he has never held a major government post and the fact that he has never been elected to public office.

Becoming mayor of the District of Columbia would take care of both problems - and one other:

Jackson's own need to keep in the public spotlight.

He would have no trouble qualifying for the post. He bought a house near Howard University here in 1985, and could easily establish residency. Nor would he have any difficulty being elected. Washingtonians - certainly black Washingtonians, who constitute an overwhelming majority here - love him.

Furthermore, the job has enough visibility, enough variety and enough opportunity for leadership and innovation to keep him interested and engaged. It would give him a chance to learn the vagaries of budgeting, of devising and implementing policy, of dealing with Congress and the White House and of delegating authority, while providing him time to hone his administrative skills.

It is, in short, the perfect spot for him while he waits for another run at the presidency. Mayor Marion Barry's term expires in January, 1991, two years before the end of the next presidential term. Thus Jackson would have at least two years - six if Dukakis should win and be re-elected - to prove his political and administrative mettle.

Barry, of course, is also eligible for re-election. But he is already serving his third four-year term, and even his most ardent supporters aren't interested in having him as mayor-for-life. My guess is that they would leap at the chance to replace him with Jackson.

Indeed, as far as I can see, the only question the Mayor Jackson scenario leaves unanswered is this one: What does Barry do?

The Rite Stuff: Politics As Symbolism

Last week saw the transformation of the man recently dismissed as one of the "Seven Dwarfs" into a figure larger than life, a hero of mythic proportions. Michael Dukakis the pedestrian candidate was transmuted into Duke the powerful leader through the flawless performance of a series of rites that enfolded him with the holy stuff of which our rulers are made.

Though the party convention seems a quintessentially American product, it is simply a variation on an age-old theme. The Democratic conclave enacted rituals familiar to Egyptians of pharaonic times, to Mau Mau rebels of East Africa and to totem-worshipping Australian aborigines. (In fact, the Atlanta events were strikingly similar to the coronation of Louis the Stammerer as king of West Francia over a millennium ago.) Thus having Garrison Keillor lead a multi-ethnic gaggle of tots in the Pledge of Allegiance did more for the Democrats than all their proclamations of patriotic values. Swaying arm in arm and singing "That's What Friends Are For" with Dionne Warwick did more to unite the warring factions than did all the statements of common interest.

And yet, observers ask, shouldn't the American people be more sophisticated? Is this how the fate of nations should be decided? Hence the quadrennial wringing of the hands about the triumph of hoopla over substance, about the concentration on public opinion rather than public interest, about kissing babies rather than educating their parents.

'The struggle for the presidency is in no small measure waged through ritual, through identifying with the sacred symbols and holy myths of American life.'

Indeed, until late in the 19th century, there was a rigid taboo that prevented presidential candidates from speaking out on the issues of the day (perhaps lest they be sullied with mere partisan particulars). Lincoln's famous debates with Douglas on slavery came not during the presidential campaign - when the candidates were silent on the issues - but in their earlier senatorial battle in Illinois. Until FDR's time, in fact, it was considered unseemly for the party's candidate to appear at the nominating convention: He typically announced his acceptance of the nomination only weeks later from his home.

If presidential campaigns fail to resemble the rational forum beloved of civics lessons, it is because it is only through symbolism, myth and ritual that people can grasp the larger, unseen world and relate it to themselves. Moreover, the presidency has unusual symbolic weight in our society: It is a sacred as well as a secular office.

In anthropologist Clifford Geertz's words, a symbol is "any object, act, event, quality or relation which serves as a vehicle for a conception." We cannot apprehend reality except through the symbolism built into language and, in fact, built into the very way in which we discriminate among the infinite stimuli that confront us, allowing us to paint a simplified picture of the world with which we can cope. Because of the diversity of meanings they embody, symbols are essentially ambiguous. This is one of their strengths: They allow different people to interpret them in their own way, and thus serve to unite people who, in fact, have little in common.

The seeming mania of political candidates for pressing the flesh has a long history. The king's touch was thought to cure a variety of disfiguring and painful illnesses in England and France: Charles II of England alone laid his hand on 100,000 sick subjects in the 17th century. Similarly, in modern White House ceremonies, the president uses a dozen pens to sign his name and afterward gives each lucky witness a plastic icon that he has touched.

Ritual is a term used by anthropologists to refer to socially standardized and recurring forms of symbolic action. Failure to execute them properly can spell disaster - as Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton discovered to his embarrassment last week when he mistook a ritual form for a debating forum.

According to one of the most powerful rituals, on the evening of a defeat the losing candidate must come on stage before a large group of enthusiastic supporters, surrounded by his family and a few key notables, and express congratulations to his victorious foe. Dole botched this rite following his defeat in New Hampshire this year by snarling at George Bush on national television. It clearly undermined his campaign. Ronald Reagan's tepid endorsement of Bush's candidacy - just a couple of unenthusiastic lines at the end of a speech on another topic - similarly demonstrates the perils of not living up to expectations.

Ritual also provides an unsurpassed means for a candidate to acquire legitimacy. The easiest method is to borrow it from a previous mythologized incumbent.

A modern analog can be found in the official opening of Jimmy Carter's 1976 general-election campaign. The carefully chosen setting was the Warm Springs, Ga., summer home of FDR. Roosevelt's two sons were present, as was a black accordionist who had become famous from a nationally transmitted photo of his anguished face at the time of FDR's death; he played Roosevelt's favorite rendition of "Happy Days Are Here Again." In this ceremony, Carter transformed himself into the heir of FDR while maintaining his image as the son of the South, identified himself with the struggle for black equality, stressed his rural roots, and separated himself from the evils of Washington.

As they plan for the fall campaign, Dukakis and Bush must bear these lessons carefully in mind. The line between projecting an emotionally potent image and simply looking ridiculous can be perilously thin. Bush driving a fork-lift in New Hampshire did not give the desired image of the man of the people, but of the preppy playing at being proletarian. Similarly, when candidate Jimmy Carter donned a yarmulke at a Jewish center school in Miami in 1976, he looked more like the head of the Mouseketeers rather than a convincing guest member of the congregation. As Martin Schram wrote, Carter came off "like grits at a seder."

The struggle for the presidency is in no small measure waged through ritual, through identifying with the sacred symbols and holy myths of American life. The popular impact of the Democrats' recent rites is already apparent in the polls. The Republicans must now look to New Orleans for a chance to strike a ritual blow of their own.

Changing Iran's Mind

Analysis

WASHINGTON — For years it seemed that Ayatollah Khomeini's Iran was immune to the laws of political gravity — that there was something special in its culture and its revolutionary rage that enabled it to cheat the pressures weighing on normal states and to surge ahead on a secret inner engine of its own.

In much the same way, we long tended to see the Soviet Union as also guided by an ideology that not only alienated it from the rest of the world but left its leadership relatively free to disregard the pragmatic and humane considerations that restrict policy choices in more conventional and more democratic states.

Yet now we see in these places and elsewhere refreshing evidence that the universal laws do apply and that special circumstances of national experience and belief, while they are not irrelevant, are not entirely controlling either.

Half a million Iranian lives later, the ayatollah who had pledged to fight "until the last drop of blood" now solicits a cease-fire. Evidently he concluded that continuance of the war, rather than advancing the revolution, might destroy it, so burdensome, unpopular and unburdening had the war become. The man who had been thought to be the single figure blocking a policy review turns out to be the single figure able to carry one off.

American officials are pleased at the contribution made by American policy to Tehran's new turn to conventional thinking. They should be. Crazy enough, the Iran-Contra affair created a new and happier bureaucratic equation in Washington in which the errant political was discredited and the pros got a hearing. The United States could then begin playing its hand with intelligence and restraint. It introduced the U.S. Navy to add to the military pressure on Iran, made sure a diplomatic escape hatch was opened to the Iranians at the United Nations and, not least, held firm through the inevitable military shocks, diplomatic frustrations and political jitters back home.

We needn't be too prissy about identifying what finally brought Iran around, however. It wasn't just the international maneuvering, deft, lucky and helpful though it may have been. The Iraqis fought a very cruel war. They had the soldiers, the supplies, the leadership and the discipline, and they used them well.

As the war went on and the Soviets backed away from imposing an arms embargo against Iran for its long defiance of a U.N. cease-fire, Iraq took matters into its own hands. It pressed the land war in which Iran was supposed to have an advantage, putting more men into the front line even though Iran's population is three times as large. It stepped up the tanker war, which brought in the American and European navies on its side. It used the terror tactics of chemical weapons and missile attacks on cities. Iran's effort to muster Western outrage against these tactics stumbled on the moral obloquy that Iran had already brought on itself by driving its children into mine fields, among other brutalities.

Iran and Iraq are both emerging with territory and regime intact: this is the basic parity making a cease-fire feasible. Iraq, with its swollen army and its leader Saddam Hussein's matching ego, threatens to be especially difficult. It is trying to use its momentum to go beyond halting the war into humiliating Iran and into revising the borders that Iran gained while the shah was, with American help, riding high.

No one in the Persian Gulf will forget that it was precisely Iraq's effort to exploit a moment of Iran's perceived weakness eight years ago that produced the war that may be ending now. Fortunately, the current dimensions of Iraq's power rest on immense subsidies, which gives those who supply them leverage. They are Iraq's Arab neighbors and they know Saddam Hussein well.

Politically and culturally, Iran had its reasons-unwelcome as they were to Americans-for the way it felt about the real and imagined offenses committed against it by the United States. Strategically, however, it never made sense for Iran to indulge its rage. Regardless of changes of climate in Moscow, Iran needs the distant superpower to balance off the close one. This is the basis on which the United States should be exploring whether Iran, with or without Khomeini, is interested not just in regrouping for a next round of battle and general confrontation but in preparing for an accommodation all around.

U.S. On A Roll

The prime-time rhetoric from the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta may be obscuring the facts about a series of recent U.S. foreign policy successes. A remarkable thing is happening. Seeds sown by President Reagan eight years ago, nurtured by toughness, firmness and a clear vision of American principles, are now bearing fruit. Between political conventions I thought it useful to remind the American people that important advances in America's interests are taking place around the globe. All result from American commitment and American action.

Success No. 1: Our relations with the Soviets are good and continue to improve. We have made progress across the whole range of our agenda-human rights, regional issues, bilateral relations and arms control. We've made a dramatic breakthrough on arms control. With the INF Treaty we have agreed to eliminate an entire category of nuclear weapons — not just another ceiling, but a complete elimination. We have also made substantial progress toward agreement on strategic arms reduction. The human rights picture is also brighter. The number of people allowed to leave the Soviet Union is increasing. Patience and clear thinking have produced a realistic, solid and far-reaching political dialogue with Moscow.

Success No. 2: The Soviets are getting out of Afghanistan. They have committed themselves to getting all of their troops out of that country by February of next year, and 50 percent of their troops must be out by Aug. 15 of this year. After eight long years of war, the courage and determination of the Afghan freedom fighters — and our steadfast support for their efforts — have paid off. Our military assistance to the Afghan resistance will continue as long as the Soviets provide military assistance to the puppet regime in Kabul. The Afghan people are winning their freedom. We are proud to help.

Success No. 3: The Vietnamese are starting to take their troops out of Cambodia. We welcome this development. Our policy of isolating Vietnam diplomatically and economically is getting results. We want a free and independent Cambodia as much as we have wanted a free and independent Afghanistan.

Success No. 4: There is a plan to get Cuban troops out of Angola. Under U.S. leadership, the governments of Angola, Cuba and South Africa have made remarkable progress in recent months on an accord that will bring about our longstanding goals of independence for Namibia by implementing United Nations Security Council Resolution 435, and a complete withdrawal of all foreign troops — primarily Cuban — from Angola. Years of patient diplomacy and clear commitment to U.S. interests are beginning to prove effective in southern Africa.

Success No. 5: We are moving closer to an end of the Iran-Iraq war. In the last few days there has been a major breakthrough toward resolving this 8-year-old war in the Persian Gulf. Iran has finally accepted United Nations Security Council Resolution 598, which calls for a cease-fire between Iran and Iraq. We have worked long and hard in the Security Council and elsewhere for this commitment. It is an important first step. The next step is for both nations to cooperate with the secretary general and the Security Council in implementing 598. We urge them to do so promptly.

Success No. 6: Freedom and democracy are on the move all over the world. Freedom is the key to economic prosperity, to social justice and to liberation from tyranny, poverty and intolerance. In Latin America 26 of 33 countries are now democratic or in transition toward democracy, and the percentage of the population living under freely elected governments has grown from 30 percent in 1976 to 90 percent today. Democratic systems have also taken root in the Philippines and in South Korea. In Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia and Nicaragua, oppression has given rise to popular resistance movements. Even in South Africa, the system of apartheid is under increasing pressure to change.

Success No. 7: Free economic systems are prospering. The world now sees that command economies don't work and that free markets do. Japan, Korea and Taiwan lead a Pacific Basin brimming with energy and success. They are opening their markets to our exports to promote even more prosperity. We have concluded a historic free trade agreement with Canada. Former command economies in China and in Eastern Europe are adopting free markets. Even the Soviet Union is experimenting with free-market concepts.

Seven important gains for America. Of course much remains to be done. We face many challenges. American power and American diplomacy must continue to be linked together in a coherent strategy consistently applied. A resurgent, self-confident America, a resolution of regional conflicts and a turn to democracy and free markets throughout the world are making the world more peaceful, prosperous and hopeful. These are the successes on which future administrations can build.

John Whitehead is deputy secretary of state.

Study Shows 'Two North Carolinas'

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — North Carolina's ranking this week as the No. 1 state in the country for racial violence and bias reflects major problems in the state, experts say.

"We really have two North Carolinas — one the Chamber of Commerce advertises and talks about glowingly, and the other, much darker side it doesn't brag about," said Mab Segrest, director of North Carolinians Against Racial and Religious Violence, a Durham group that monitors the state's racial problems.

A report issued Monday by Klanwatch Project, an organization of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., said North Carolina had 33 recorded incidents of racial and ethnic bias in 1987, six more incidents than Georgia, which was rated second.

It is the fourth year in a row that North Carolina has topped the list. Klanwatch officials say their list is inherently incomplete because only recorded incidents are used in the survey, but those familiar with racial encounters in North Carolina say the problems are as bad as any in the nation.

Ms. Segrest said her group recorded 47 racial incidents in the state last year, but she added that the actual number probably was higher. North Carolina's racial violence is not confined to poor or rural areas, she said.

"I think it's pretty bad. It's kind of a domestic terrorism," she said. "Every area is affected. ... These incidents keep occurring. I don't think it's just bad press. I think it's a wretched situation."

A task force set up in 1986 by Gov. Jim Martin is expected to present its findings to the governor within two months, a member of the task force said Wednesday.

Chrystal Stowe, the task force member, said the No. 1 ranking does not surprise her.

"Before I was on the task force, I would have been surprised by it," she said. "But after listening to people at public hearings and talking to victims of these crimes and to law-enforcement officers around the state, I'm not surprised by the number-one ranking at all."

"I'm concerned. ... Rural, urban, predominantly white areas, predominantly black areas — there's really no part of the state that hasn't been touched," she said. "And there may be many, many more incidents we don't know about because we have unreliable sources to gather information from." Mrs. Stowe said one of the task force's primary proposals will be to establish a uniform reporting system for incidents of racial violence and bias. She said law-enforcement agencies need a central office to which they can report such incidents so better figures can be maintained.

Max Williams, a professor of history at Western Carolina University and an expert in North Carolina history, said North Carolina has a history of violent racial problems that goes back to the Reconstruction period after the Civil War, when blacks were made U.S. citizens and the Ku Klux Klan became powerful.

"We in North Carolina like to regard ourselves as more progressive in racial matters than our sister states to the South," Williams said. "That is why this report seems so shocking."

Williams added, "Actually, racism has persisted in the state and has continued to appeal to some of our state leaders' worst instincts."

Mrs. Stowe said law-enforcement agencies in local communities need more direction in heading off racial incidents. She said help from the State Bureau of Investigation is also needed.

AME Zion Delegates Told To Transcend Differences

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Delegates to the General Conference of the AME Zion Church were urged to transcend petty differences as they began 10 days of policymaking for the 1.5 million-member denomination.

"We need the kind of vision that is going to lift us above trivia," Bishop John Henry Miller of Raleigh, president of the church's board of bishops, said Wednesday.

"We are fussing and fighting over things that don't have anything to do with saving souls. What we need is an inward conversion," Miller said, The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

Seven thousand to 10,000 people are expected at the 43rd quadrennial conference, which runs through Aug. 5 at the Charlotte Convention Center.

About 550 voting delegates from AME Zion churches worldwide will elect administrative officers, choose at least two new bishops, approve budgets and discuss education, evangelism and missions.

Bishop Miller preached to a standing-room-only crowd of about 1,000 at the opening worship service at Little Rock AME Zion Church, the conference's host church. Several hundred others gathered around closed-circuit TV monitors in the vestibule and the fellowship hall.

"You're looking at a great church," said Bishop William Milton Smith of Mobile, Ala., gesturing around the handsome white brick sanctuary. "This is not a church they bought from white folks. This is a church they built from the ground up."

In the opening worship service, Miller told members of the church to act selflessly to help their fellow man.

"It's popular to say we've got to get rid of apartheid," he said. "But no one's doing anything about it. You want to know what the church can do about AIDS? When you've got it, there's nothing the church can do about it."

Stowaway Released From Raleigh Hospital

NORFOLK (AP) — An Irish teenager who stowed away on a U.S. Navy guided missile destroyer has been discharged from the hospital where she was treated for an illness that delayed attempts to return her to Ireland.

Police in Ireland identified the 16-year-old girl as Suzanne Twomey of Cork. Miss Twomey was released Wednesday night from Rex Hospital in Raleigh, N.C., hospital officials said.

Five sailors on the USS Conyngham accused of helping the girl during 10 days at sea have been arrested and were being held at the Norfolk Naval base, authorities said. If charged and convicted, the sailors face a maximum five years in prison and a fine of $2,000 for aiding an illegal entry into the United States, authorities said.

Navy and Irish officials said they were trying to get Miss Twomey back to Ireland as quickly as possible.

"There are no options but for her to return to Ireland," Irish Embassy spokesman Daire O'Criodain told The Washington Post. O'Criodain said Miss Twomey is a minor and has no passport. "She is in legal limbo. . . ."

Our course is to get her out of this limbo as quickly as possible and get her home."

The girl's parents, John and Christine Twomey, reported her missing, according to a Dublin police spokesman, who would not give his name. Miss Twomey, who originally told Navy officials she was orphaned, was the eldest of four children and had run away from home several times — once having to be returned home from Spain, the spokesman said.

Mrs. Twomey told the Cork Examiner it was "a pure disgrace that her daughter was able to slip through the security net and stay on board ship." The American sailors who kept the girl hidden "should not be allowed to get away with this," Mrs. Twomey told a reporter.

The teen-ager was discovered aboard the destroyer Saturday when it returned from its visit to Ireland. She was being taken to Atlanta for a return flight when she became ill and the plane made an emergency landing in Raleigh.

Charles Coble Jr., an agent with the Naval Investigative Service, said travel arrangements were being made for the girl. He would not elaborate and neither he nor hospital officials knew where she was spending Wednesday night.

Irish sources said Miss Twomey previously had tried to escape a traumatic home life. "She's sort of a waif, if you like. She would have been living rough," a Dublin police officer said in a telephone interview.

The Navy, which has been embarrassed by the incident, is investigating how Miss Twomey was able to slip aboard the destroyer and how she remained undetected for so long, the newspaper reported in today's editions.

"That's what the investigation is going to determine," said Lt. Cmdr. John Lloyd, spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Surface Force. The girl did not get into any secure areas, Lloyd said.

"A kid has brought the U.S. government to a standstill?" said William Bitner, officer in charge of the Norfolk INS office. "We are cooperating with the Navy to keep this as small a black eye as we can."

The Naval Investigative Service said an NIS agent was escorting Miss Twomey on a flight Tuesday from Norfolk to Washington, D.C., where the girl and her escort boarded a flight to Atlanta. In Atlanta, the girl was to catch a connecting flight to Ireland.

"I understand she became ill on the flight to Atlanta, that she complained to her escort of nausea and then went into convulsions," Coble said.

Dukakis Visit Sends Democrats Scrambling

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Democratic leaders are scrambling to prepare for a visit Saturday from Michael Dukakis, but officials say his itinerary might not be completed until a day before he comes to the Triangle.

"It's a matter of scheduling, but it's a tough chore," said Nick Galifianakis, a Durham lawyer and honorary chairman of the state Dukakis campaign. "It's a matter of hours and it's a matter of minutes."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan will break off his vacation to greet Dukakis, the Democratic presidential nominee, an aide said Wednesday.

Jordan, the Democratic nominee for governor, "will be coming off his vacation to attend this thing," said his campaign spokesman, Phil Wells. "Whereas Jim Martin is running from his candidate, we're planning to embrace ours and join the national ticket."

The exact location and time of Dukakis' appearances Saturday were not disclosed. The Durham Sun, quoting an unidentified campaign official, said he would arrive at 2 p.m.

The visit would be Dukakis' first in North Carolina since he accepted the nomination at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta last week. He is expected to campaign in Charlotte on Aug. 18.

State party leaders and candidates have displayed enthusiasm about Dukakis, in contrast to 1984, when they avoided associating themselves with standard-bearer Walter Mondale.

Martin, the Republican governor, was not on hand last week for Vice President George Bush's campaign stopover in Charlotte. Martin's campaign spokesman, Tim Pittman, said Martin was absent because of a "staff glitch" that created a scheduling conflict.

"The governor wants to be with the vice president and has made clear he wants to be in the future," Pittman said. "Schedules are tough change and this one had been set."

Supporters of Martin and Jordan agreed that the Dukakis and Bush visits demonstrated North Carolina's importance in the national picture.

"No one denies that this will be one of the battlegrounds of the first order for both," Pittman said.

State Republican Chairman Jack Hawke said frequent Dukakis visits to North Carolina would only help the GOP because they would call attention to what Hawke called Dukakis' liberalism.

"I hope they spend a lot of time and effort on North Carolina," Hawke said. "I don't think Michael Dukakis is going to carry North Carolina no matter what they do."

Well countered, "Mike Dukakis is the kind of person North Carolinians would like to have as president. His record speaks for itself."

Dukakis might end up simply making a speech at Raleigh-Durham Airport as he did shortly before the March 8 primary, according to Durham Mayor Wib Gulley, a state Dukakis co-chairman.

"I'm hopeful that we'll have a chance to get him to Raleigh or to Durham so that we can show him some of the things which we're proud of," Gulley said.

Pair Shot To Death

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Two men, shot to death at the Alamo Plaza motel in Charlotte, were found about 12:53 a.m. Tuesday in a parking lot at the rear of the motel.

An unidentified hotel resident said one of the victims tried to stop a man from assaulting a woman in the parking lot less than an hour before the shooting.

About 12:40 a.m., the witness heard eight quick gunshots. There was a pause, then four more.

Police have yet to determine a motive for the slayings. No arrests have been made and the victims have not been positively identified. Neither were registered at the motel, police said.

Warrants Issued

KINSTON (AP) — Warrants were issued Wednesday for 19 people charged with 129 offenses ranging from illegal sale of liquor to drug charges after a six-month undercover operation in Kinston.

Kinston police officers, Lenoir County deputies and State Bureau of Investigation agents took part in the operation.

The charges resulted from the work of a special undercover officer that has been buying lottery tickets, drugs and liquor, said Kinston Police Chief Ross Hagler.

According to Kinston Narcotics Sgt. Tommy Lewis, approximately $10,000 was spent during this campaign for the purchase of liquor, drugs and lottery tickets.

Farmers Getting Hay

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Department of Agriculture says drought-stricken farmers in Buncombe, Cherokee, Clay and Madison counties will be receiving shipments of hay.

The hay is expected to arrive from the Charlotte Motor Speedway at various western North Carolina locations Thursday afternoon.

One hundred bales, weighing at least 600 pounds, will be shipped to the counties on Duke Power Company trucks and vehicles supplied by independent truckers.

"Our livestock farmers in the mountains are having it tough," said state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, "and their counterparts in the central Piedmont want to do something for them by donating this hay."

Benefits Run Out

BURLINGTON (AP) — A federal program for workers who lost their jobs to foreign trade ran out of money this month, halting unemployment benefits for 63 North Carolinians, officials said.

The Trade Re-adjustment Allowance program provides weekly unemployment benefits to workers whose jobs were eliminated because of foreign competition. The program is supposed to kick in once a worker's state unemployment benefits have been exhausted.

"But an unexpected rise in unemployed automotive workers in Michigan caused the $141 million program to run out of money earlier than usual," said Ronald Wilus, a budget officer for the U.S. Employment Training Administration in Washington.

"There just wasn't enough money," Wilus said.

The last benefit checks were mailed to North Carolina recipients last week, officials said. The funds were supposed to last until Sept. 30, the end of the federal fiscal year.

Among those receiving benefits through the program were 25 former workers of NCA Inc., a Burlington automotive parts manufacturer that shut its doors last July and moved to Mexico. The other 200 employees who worked at the plant have found new jobs or have not sought benefits, officials said.

Beer Sales Legal

LEXINGTON (AP) — The Davidson County Board of Commissioners

has been told that beer sales at a women's professional golf tournament are legal and the dry county probably could not charge a substantial fee on the sales.

The commissioners had opposed a one-time permit for the High Point Junior League to sell beer at the Planters Pat Bradley International Golf Tournament at Willow Creek Golf Club next week.

But the state Alcoholic Beverages Commission granted the permit despite the commissioners' opposition under a 1987 statute that allows a non-profit or political organization to sell beer, wine and liquor at a fund-raising event, even in a dry county.

The board then asked the county attorney to determine whether the county could charge future permit holders a substantial fee.

"The report will be short, but probably not sweet," county attorney Garry Frank said Tuesday night. "I think it would be really tough to construct one (a fee) that would stick in the long run."

"I'm disappointed, but I'm not surprised," commissioner Kenny Moore said.

Documents Available

DURHAM (AP) — Documents submitted by the state to the U.S. Department of Energy in its bid for the superconducting super collider will be brought to three public libraries for the public to review, officials said.

The documents, consisting of 19 three-ring binders, maps and other supplemental materials, will be at the Durham County Library through Aug. 7, said a reference librarian.

The same information will be moved to the Richard H. Thornton Library in Oxford from Aug. 8 to Aug. 19, and to the Roxboro Library from Aug. 22 through Sept. 2, officials said.

After that, the documents will be available for public inspection at the North Carolina Board of Science and Technology, located in the state Administration Building in Raleigh.

Amendment OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a measure to bar stations from airing sexually explicit material between midnight and 6 a.m., with sponsoring Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., declaring "garbage is garbage" regardless of the time of day.

By voice vote Tuesday, the Senate approved a Helms amendment to a pending appropriations bill directing the Federal Communications Commission to end its "safe harbor" and giving it until Jan. 31, 1989, to draft new regulations.

The overall legislation, appropriating $15 billion for the State, Justice and Commerce departments for the 1989 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, will be sent to a conference with the House, which already has passed a version of the bill.

Helms, who said he acted in the interests of "defending decent moral values," asserted the FCC decision to permit adult broadcasting after midnight violated the 1934 laws regulating the airwaves.

Signals Crossed

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Davidson County deputy thought he was responding to a property-damage case when he handled a call from a man who was fired upon during a shooting spree that left four people dead, Sheriff Paul McCrary says.

At 11:30 p.m. on July 17, Gene Petty called the Davidson County Sheriff's Department, saying his truck had been fired on in southern Forsyth County.

A Davidson County deputy, Fred Godfrey, met Petty at the Texaco gas station near N.C. 150 after a report that a vehicle being damaged.

The dispatcher told Godfrey to proceed as if it were not an emergency.

Godfrey remained at the gas station until Adrian L. Hodges, the owner of the station, asked Godfrey to escort him to Lexington State Bank so he could make a deposit.

Firefighters Steer Blaze Away From Old Faithful

By MIKE HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

Crews using flame throwers fought fire with fire as a blaze burned within six miles of Old Faithful, and authorities said arson caused a South Dakota wildfire that destroyed 22 buildings and forced 2,000 people to flee.

Wildfires also chased hundreds of people from their homes in Idaho, while in Alaska 1,200 firefighters battled wind-fanned blazes that consumed 1.3 million acres, an area larger than Delaware.

Large fires, many of them kindled in drought conditions aggravated during a hot, dry summer, also blackened regions in Arizona, Oregon, Utah, Washington state and Montana.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel took a helicopter tour Wednesday through thick smoke to view 10,000 charred acres in the southern areas of Yellowstone National Park, which is suffering its worst forest fire of the century. The blaze has scorched 109,000 of the park's 2.2 million acres.

Firefighters with flame throwers and some in helicopters lit backfires in about 1,000 acres of meadow to burn fuel ahead of the fire and direct it away from Old Faithful, the park's most famous attraction, and nearby structures.

Even so, the usual hundreds of summer visitors gathered every 75 minutes or so Wednesday to watch the famous geyser erupt into the smoky sky.

"Fantastic," said Alain Dukan of France. "We're not afraid of the fires and we're not worried about it. They say fire is part of the forest."

In South Dakota, firefighters worked all day digging a fire line around a 2,000-acre blaze that burned out of control as it drew within two miles of Rapid City. The fire has destroyed 22 buildings, including seven houses, and forced the evacuation of 2,000 people.

Don Kopp, a fire commander, said Wednesday the blaze was the work of an arsonist.

"Whoever's doing it, they could burn down half of the Black Hills if they want," said Kopp, adding that authorities have been investigating a string of about 50 fires dating to May which they suspect were set by the same person.

He said a cigarette with a match inside was used to start the fire that was spotted Tuesday. Such a device would smolder for a time before bursting into flame.

"I'm not sure what we need to do to catch them, but we need to catch them," Kopp said. The suspected arsonist has set as many as to eight fires in one day, he said.

In Idaho, a temperature inversion kept winds mercifully light as crews worked to keep a 1,700-acre fire away from about 50 homes in the Boise National Forest, 35 miles north of Boise.

"The fire is pretty active and moving to the southeast," said Karen Palmer, Forest Service fire information officer. "We don't have a big handle on how much it's burned because there's so much smoke."

Winds helped Alaska's largest fire grow to 409,000 acres, said Sue Mitchell, a Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman. Most Alaska fires were in remote areas and were let alone because they don't threaten people or property.

In Washington, more than 350 firefighters battled a fire fanned by 20 mph winds and temperatures near 90, which raced across the ridge of the Cascade Mountains on Wednesday, tripling its size to 3,600 acres within a few hours. Firefighters in northeastern Utah, meanwhile, used a rainstorm to contain a 5-day-old, fireworks-caused blaze that charred 1,955 acres in the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area.

Firefighters also contained a lightning-sparked wildfire that burned an estimated 3,400 acres of remote terrain in northwestern Arizona. About 50 people evacuated because of a 650-acre blaze in Montana expected to go home today.

In Yellowstone, Hodel voiced confidence in the National Park Service's controversial "let it burn" philosophy for wilderness areas in which people, buildings or roads are not endangered. But he said the excessively dry conditions might make a difference.

"The problem is to decide when you have a prescribed burn or when you have a fire you want to fight," Hodel said. "In the dry conditions, they're taking the view that any fire that begins they will try to fight it."

Ben Clary, Yellowstone assistant superintendent, said park officials largely will follow the existing policy on natural fires.

Range Of Benefits In Drought-Relief Finance Package

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers are stuffing their $6.9 billion drought-relief bill full of election-year goodies for the folks back home, and some of the handouts don't even have anything to do with the drought.

One provision would provide $24 million to cotton growers in the district of Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, whose crops were damaged by hail in 1987.

Now, Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., is saying it would be wrong to confine 1987 hail payments to Texas cotton.

"In my district it would be very unfair to the dry edible bean people, to the sugar beet people, to the potato people," she said Wednesday. She wants to expand the benefits to $40 million.

Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, says the same kind of scramble would have occurred even if there were no elections coming up in November.

"Every year is basically an election year in this place," he said. "It happens all the time. Every time you have a bill like this every member becomes provincial and protective of his interests."

Lawmakers say fiscal watchdogs have nothing to complain about as long as the aid does not exceed the $7.5 billion in farm program savings that economists believe will be generated by the drought.

The bill's major provision would furnish farmers with payments equal to 65 percent of earnings lost because of damage to crops in excess of 35 percent of expected yield. It also would provide expanded government feed benefits to dairy and livestock producers.

But that only scratches the surface.

Under heavy debate is a provision to increase the dairy price support level by 50 cents for each hundred pounds of milk. This boon for milk producers and dairy cooperatives is the brainchild of Rep. Jim Jeffords, R-Vt., who is running for the Senate from a state that is a major source of the East Coast's milk supply.

Jeffords says the action, which would raise consumer prices by a few cents a gallon, is needed for avert milk shortages.

Critics scoff at that claim, citing government forecasts of ample milk. But Jeffords stands his ground.

"It is our duty to assure an adequate supply of milk," he declares.

If his plan falters, an alternative that would make the increase temporary is being sponsored by Reps. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., and Tim Penny, D-Minn.

The Senate, pushing its own version, has incorporated a provision that would aid manufacturers of ethanol, the alcohol fuel made in part from corn.

It would allow ethanol makers to buy government surplus corn at 110 percent of the price the Agriculture Department paid. Much of the surplus was acquired long before drought sent prices zooming.

The provision could mean a government subsidy of as much as $2 million a month for domestic ethanol manufacturers, including the Archer Daniels Midland Co. of Decatur, Ill., which makes the lion's share of domestic ethanol.

But Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., the sponsor, says the idea is to provide corn to a variety of small ethanol companies in danger of going broke.

"ADM doesn't even want this amendment," Daschle said. He said a $2 million benefit would represent "a small fraction of what their capacity is to produce."

He said junking the plan could actually help ADM, which is a hefty contributor to campaigns of Agriculture Committee members — Daschle included.

"You know what they'd get if they don't get this?" said Daschle. "As I understand it, if all these small plants closed, they'd (ADM) get all the business."

When the House was first drafting its bill a few weeks ago, Rep. Harley O. Staggers Jr., D-W.Va., tacked on a provision to allow the secretary of agriculture, on a discretionary basis, to pay half of seeding costs for drought-burned pastures.

But as the Agriculture Committee was putting finishing touches on the bill, Rep. Claude Harris, D-Ala., won approval of a change that would flatly require the government to pay half of the bills.

Shuttle Delay

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A faulty valve and other technical problems have forced another 24-hour delay, until Monday, of the critical launch pad test-firing of space shuttle Discovery's three main engines.

"We got behind in the schedule and never made up the time," Lisa Malone, a spokeswoman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Wednesday. "We wanted to be sure we were clean when we went into the tanking."

The tanking refers to the loading of half a million gallons of propellant into Discovery's external tank during the first of a two-part countdown leading to the test-firing.

The fueling was rescheduled for tonight, with the countdown then set to move down to 10 seconds before a mock liftoff on Friday morning. At that point, a simulated problem is to force a "launch" postponement, and the launch team is to empty the fuel tank, start a new countdown, refill the tank and aim for the engine firing at 7:30 a.m. Monday.

The 20-second ignition will test modifications made to the engines since the explosion of shuttle Challenger on Jan. 28, 1986, and is considered essential to certifying Discovery for the first post-Challenger shuttle flight.

'Love Is Blind'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A newlywed says she and her husband were "blinded by love" 3½ months ago when they disappeared from Chicago, sparking a manhunt after their deserted car was found ransacked with its engine running.

Scott Swanson, 23, and his wife, Carolyn, 22, said they dashed off to San Diego shortly after they eloped because some relatives apparently disapproved of their skipping a traditional marriage ceremony. They also said they just wanted to spend time together.

"Call it shortsighted or call it what you want to, but love is blind and I know that sounds trite," Ms. Swanson said at a news conference after being reunited with her parents, Jim and Kathy MacLean of Haddonfield, N.J.

"So much has come out of it that has been great, but then to see the look on my mother's face ... and my dad's face. ... I mean, I can't stand the hurt that I've caused," she said tearfully.

The newlyweds vanished April 2 without telling relatives or classmates at a suburban Evangelical college.

During a resulting three-state police investigation, friends at Wheaton College held prayer vigils, put up posters and questioned people at roadside restaurants and gas stations.

"We are tremendously sorry for the hurt and the pain we've caused to our families, to our friends and loved ones and relatives," Swanson said. "We never realized that the story would have the ramifications it has."

he couple left their car near a police station with the keys under the mat and their identification cards, Swanson said. "We didn't want to be traced."

Americans Do Poorly On Geography Tests

By CRISPIN Y. CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The majority of Americans can't find Great Britain, France, Japan or the Persian Gulf on the map and have no idea of what the U.S. population is, according to surveys conducted by the Gallup Organization and the National Geographic Society.

Moreover, Americans in the 18-24 age group ranked last when their survey results were compared to similar tests conducted in eight other nations, said the society, which sponsored the international testing. Americans of all age groups scored sixth.

"I have a terrible feeling that the American public is not taking education as seriously as they have in the past — and it's not just geography. You are seeing this across the board," said society President Gilbert M. Grosvenor at a news conference Wednesday.

The survey results indicated that three out of four Americans couldn't locate the Persian Gulf, most couldn't come close to guessing their own nation's population and the majority were lost when it came to finding Britain, France or Japan.

"What was most alarming was not only that young Americans did worse than all other 18- to 24-year-olds, but that they were the only ones in that age group, among nine countries, who did worse than the oldest group tested," Grosvenor said.

"We're not motivating our kids to take education seriously," he said noting recent National Science Foundation studies ranking U.S. students well below their foreign counterparts in scientific fields.

To combat this, the society has launched a multimillion-dollar public awareness campaign on the problem, he said.

The campaign includes the initiation of a National Geography Bee for secondary students, a training program for the nation's 15,000 geography and social studies teachers, and the free distribution of an atlas of U.S. history in 35,000 public, private and parochial schools.

Another component involves the development of computer software learning tools and a laser disc version of the atlas. The laser disc, scheduled for release in late 1989, is a joint project with Apple Computer and Lucas Films, producers of "Star Wars."

The international survey tested 10,820 adults in Canada, France, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Sweden, the United Kingdom, the United States and West Germany. Those surveyed were asked to locate 13 selected countries, Central America, the Pacific Ocean and the Persian Gulf on an unmarked world map.

Out of a possible score of 16, the Americans ranked sixth with an average of 8.6, on par with the British (8.5) but significantly better than only the Italians (7.6) and Mexicans (7.4). Top honors went to the Swedes (11.6) and West Germans (11.2), followed by the Japanese (9.7), French (9.3) and Canadians (9.2).

American youth received a score of 6.9, the lowest mark of all youth tested and all other U.S. age groups. Overall, 75 percent of Americans placed the Persian Gulf in the Red Sea, the Mediterranean, the Black Sea or the Indian Ocean.

Forty-five percent did not know where Central America is located. One-third identified Vietnam and less than half the Americans were able to identify the United Kingdom, France, South Africa and Japan.

In a multiple-choice question, 57 percent of Americans tested did not have a remote idea about the current U.S. population. Most participants in Sweden, Japan and Canada chose the correct range from a field of four: 150 to 300 million.

In addition to the international quiz, a more comprehensive battery of 81 questions, including a world map test, was administered to 1,611 Americans by Gallup.

The results, which Gallup senior study director Jeffrey S. Friedman says can be projected to the U.S. population at large, include:

—Not more than half of adult Americans know that the Sandinistas and Contras are fighting in Nicaragua and not in Iran, Lebanon or Afghanistan.

—About one-third could name four of the 16 NATO member countries, another third failed to name any and 16 percent of those questioned conferred membership on the Soviet Union.

—Fifty percent failed to name any members of the Warsaw Pact, 20 percent could name four and more than one in 10 erroneously made the U.S. a member.

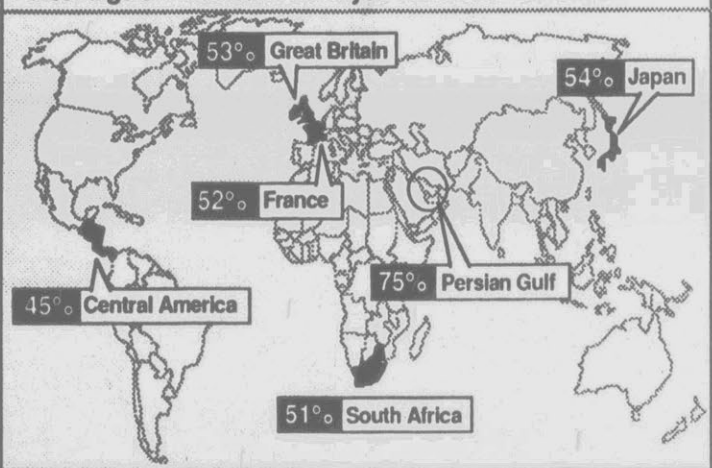

—Only 55 percent identified South Africa as the nation where apartheid is an official policy.

Americans generally did better on environmental questions, with nearly 95 percent knowing that damage to the ozone layer would have worldwide effect; 73 percent knowing wind patterns were responsible for spreading the nuclear fallout from Chernobyl; and 68 percent identifying acid rain as a particular problem in North America.

While nearly 70 percent of Americans tested agreed that the ability to read a map was a necessity in today's world, more than one third could not pick out the westernmost city on a simple map, the survey indicated.

Safety Report Shows High Head Injury Risks

By TIM BOVEE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half the 37 cars, vans and light trucks that have been crash tested by the government this year would likely cause severe head injuries or death to their drivers in a 35 mph collision.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration on Wednesday released its final report on 1988 crash tests with results showing drivers of vans and light trucks were at high risk of severe head injuries in a crash.

Drivers of compact cars were least likely to have severe head injuries, the agency's figures showed.

NHTSA reported the likelihood of injury as an index called the head-injury criterion. The agency derived the index from monitoring dummies strapped into vehicles that were crashed into a fixed barrier at 35 mph.

Seventeen of the 1988 vehicles tested produced a head-injury criterion above 1,000, levels that show a high chance of severe head injury or death.

NHTSA cautioned it tested only one vehicle of each model, and additional tests could produce varying results "due to slight differences in the way vehicles are manufactured and equipped, or due to slight variations in test conditions."

Small differences in the test results should not be considered significant, NHTSA said.

The Chevrolet G-20 van showed the greatest likelihood of head injury to the driver, with an index of 3,665. The Mazda 929 4-door car, a large and mid-size model, showed the least likelihood, with an index of 273.

Tests of nine subcompact cars found five with an index of more than 1,000. The average for the nine vehicles was 966.

Subcompact cars showing the greatest chance of head injury and the criteria reported by NHTSA were the Dodge Colt 4-door station wagon, 1,354; Nissan Pulsar NX 2-door hatchback, 1,134; Volkswagen Fox 2-door, 1,114; Ford Festiva 2-door, 1,014; and the Toyota Tercel 2-door hatchback, 1,005.

Two of the nine compact cars tested produced head-injury criteria exceeding 1,000. The average head-injury criterion for that class of car was 887.

Computer Chess Victim Looking For A Rematch

By EARL BOHN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The first international chess master to be beaten by a computer says he wants a rematch before the machines become invincible against humans.

"I'd like to try for revenge while I can. The way they're improving ... one has the feeling that in a few years they will be much better," Penn State University math professor Edward Formanek said Wednesday.

The No. 1 seed in the tournament was defeated here Sunday for the Pennsylvania State Chess Association championship by Hitech, a Carnegie Mellon University creation that played its first game in May 1985.

Hitech was the first machine to become a senior master, the top national title before international ranking, according to the tournament director.

"It played some flashy moves in the end game. That's where it played like a human," said Formanek, who has played chess 28 years.

The computer appeared to daily for 10 or 15 moves then committed itself to a tactic that seemed questionable but proved to be a winner, he said.

"I can see why it waited," Formanek said.

Carnegie Mellon computer researcher Hans Berliner, faculty adviser to Hitech's team of student handlers, said the machine "played beautifully" against Formanek.

"I wasn't real impressed with its play. I thought it could have played a little more interesting types of games. It grinds them out," said tournament director Thomas Magar, a chess master.

"There are times when it makes moves that I have to shake my head at," Magar said. "Sometimes they're just dull moves. Other times it plays some positions that human players would say 'That's too risky.'"

Hitech's new rating of 2,405 points makes it a senior master. It is the first computer to earn the title and the first to defeat an international master in tournament play, Magar said.

The computer, which finished in a tie for first place in the 1987 state championship, is unlikely to gain international status, because the World

Chess Federation "isn't real happy about computers playing chess," Magar said.

The U.S. Chess Federation, which sanctioned the state tournament, recognizes the machines in its standings but also accommodates tournaments whose organizers ban the electronic players, he said.

Berliner claims Hitech is superior to other chess computers because it can recognize patterns among various clusters of pieces on the board.

"Together with its blinding speed, that accounts for its success," he said.

Hitech reviews the possibilities for moving its pieces each turn. The computer can consider about 160,000 possibilities every second and may consider 20 million different moves before dictating on a printer the next move, said Berliner, who moved the pieces in the state tournament.

The machine is a university project in artificial intelligence, but Hitech is far from being able to reason and to learn.

"That's too hard," Berliner said. "To be able to learn you have to be able to conceptualize and all that."

Chinese Farmer Prays For Rain To Save Crops

By JOHN POMFRET
Associated Press Writer

LAOHEKOU, China (AP) — Chen Wenbao doesn't consider himself religious, but each night he puts a stick of incense outside the door of his house and prays for rain.

"There's no other way. I have to rely on heaven," Chen said this week in this village in northern Hubei province.

Chen, his wife, three children and mother live in the heart of China's drought country, stricken this year with its worst blight in 50 years.

Beginning as early as February in some parts of central and eastern China, the drought has hit eight out of China's 30 provinces.

Officials in Hubei say about half of the province's rice crop and 70 percent of its peanut and sesame crops will be affected. In addition, they worry about starvation in some areas like Laohekou.

The Chinese news media have cited similar figures for grain and vegetable production in other provinces. Officials said other provinces also faced the possibility of starvation.

Laohekou has been hit particularly hard by the drought. The village's reservoir is bone dry for the first time since it opened in 1958. Wells for drinking water contain only mud. Trucks carrying potable water from the nearest town, Xiangfan, are few.

Draft animals have been dying, some because of the heat, which has hovered around 104 degrees for weeks, others because of thirst.

Chen, 33, said he's concerned for his family. This spring he planted about 2½ acres of land. In a good year, with the rich Hubei soil, Chen said he could clear $540 profit from his fields, well above the average farmer's annual income of $125.

U.S. Peace Convoy Arrives In Nicaragua With Supplies

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — U.S. war veterans driving 20 vehicles loaded with food, clothing and medical supplies have arrived in Nicaragua on the final leg of a journey their government resisted.

The Veterans' Peace Convoy, comprised of 44 people, crossed the border from Honduras late Wednesday, Don Reasoner, a leading member of the Committee of U.S. Citizens Living In Nicaragua, said in a telephone interview.

The Committee opposes President Reagan's policies in Central America.

The U.S. government blocked the convoy from leaving the United States at least three times, saying plans to leave the trucks in Nicaragua violated a 3-year-old trade embargo against the leftist Sandinista government.

Washington has backed the Contra rebels, who have been fighting the Sandinistas.

Eight of the veterans group's members were arrested July 9 when they refused to leave the road leading to a toll booth at a Rio Grande bridge crossing in Laredo, Texas.

The group finally crossed the Mexican border at Nuevo Laredo on July 14.

The presentation of the food and medical supplies carried by the veterans is to take place Friday in the capital.

The U.S. Treasury Department accepted that the food and medical supplies carried by the group qualified as humanitarian aid, exempt from the 1985 embargo. But it said the vehicles were barred from remaining in Nicaragua.

The U.S. Customs Service said the trucks must return to the United States within 30 days or convoy members will face fines of up to $50,000 and 10 years in prison. Convoy members refused to sign forms promising they would return the trucks.

In June, the original convoy of 38 vehicles was stopped by U.S. Customs officials from crossing into Mexico. About 100 participants in the convoy drove to Washington, D.C. to rally against Customs' decision, circling around the White House and in front of the State Department in three days of protest.

Staffer: Marcos Offer A Ploy

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino's executive secretary confirmed today that Ferdinand Marcos offered to pay $5 billion to return home, but said her staff recommended that the offer be rejected.

Executive Secretary Catalino Macaraig told reporters he believed the offer was a ploy by the deposed president to avoid criminal indictment in the United States.

"We saw it for what it was," Macaraig said. "It was just a ploy to get his U.S. indictment against him suspended ... I recommended the rejection of the five billion dollar offer."

Iran Says 4,000 Rebels Dead, Hurt After Clash

By JOHN RICE

Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iran said its soldiers today crushed a force of Iraqis and Iraqi-backed Iranian rebels in two days of fighting it said left 4,000 invaders dead or wounded.

"The combatants of Islam were able to inflict heavy blows on the aggressive enemy and mercenaries of world arrogance," said an Islamic Republic News Agency dispatch monitored in Cyprus.

It said the fighting around the western city of Esfahabad, 60 miles from the Iraqi border, continued against "remnants of the enemy troops" who were "surrounded by Iranian combatants."

The Iranian rebel group, the National Liberation Army, earlier said in a communique released in Baghdad that its fighters seized Esfahabad and the city of Karand, killing or wounding 30,000 Iranian troops. The claims could not be verified because foreign reporters are allowed into battle areas only on rare guided tours.

In New York, Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, met with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, and continued to insist on direct negotiations with Iran for a cease-fire in the nearly 8-year-old war.

Aziz said before the meeting with Perez de Cuellar that Iraq "shall not be stampeded into making a hasty step."

Iran agreed last week to a year-old U.N. cease-fire resolution already supported by Iraq.

IRNA said Iran's air force jet fighters and helicopters today "heavily pounded" the invaders, whom it called "Iraqi troops and the outlawed Munafiqeen Khalq members."

That was a reference to the Mujahedeen Khalq, Baghdad-based Iranian rebels opposed to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic fundamentalist government. In a play on words, the state-run Iranian media often refer to them as the "munafiqeen," the Farsi word for "hypocrite."

The agency gave the casualty figure and reported that 1,500 Iraqi troops were killed or wounded in fighting Wednesday near the southern port city of Khorramshahr.

Ali Riza Jafer Zada, spokesman for the Mujahedeen Khalq rebels based in Iraq, said Wednesday in Baghdad that its fighters shot down two Iranian warplanes and a helicopter gunship in the central sector of the war-front.

During previous actions said to involve the Mujahedeen Khalq, Iran has declared that Iraqi soldiers fought the battles and allowed the rebels to take the credit. No independent observers have seen the battles.

The rebel offensive emerged Monday from an Iraqi invasion that began on Friday, but the rebels apparently advanced while Iraqi troops were withdrawing.

Tehran radio said earlier Wednesday that "Iraqi troops" entered Esfahabad in the morning.

"The battle in the region is continuing with utmost intensity and the initiative lies with the combatants of Islam," it said.

Thai Deputy A Candidate For Minister

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A conservative former general and wealthy businessman today announced his nomination as prime minister after Prem Tinsulanonda declined to seek a return to the post he's held for eight years.

Chatichai Choonhavan, 66, the likely prime minister-to-be, told a news conference: "The five political parties that will form the coalition government have agreed to support the leader of the largest party and as that party's leader I am pleased to accept the nomination."

Students and others who for three days staged rallies opposing Prem's non-elected status welcomed Chatichai's announcement and said they will stop protesting.

Chatichai, one of five acting deputy prime ministers, said he met with army chief Gen. Chavalit Yongchaiyudh and "got military support." He would not elaborate, but the military traditionally has wielded considerable power in Thai politics.

If Chatichai succeeds Prem, he is expected to follow a conservative pro-Western policy and emphasize economic development.

Prem, 67, made no public statement today. On Wednesday, the acting prime minister was quoted as saying he was stepping down for personal reasons.

He turned down an offer from the leaders of the five key political parties, which formed a loose pro-Prem coalition after no single party could capture a majority in Sunday's parliamentary elections.

Chatichai's Chart Thai (Thai Nation) Party and the coalition partners hold 215 of the 357 seats in the lower house of Parliament. The other four parties in the coalition are the Democrat Party, the Social Action Party, the Rassadorn Party and the United Democracy Party.

Academy Announcing TV Emmy Nominations

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — "It's Garry Shandling's Show," the comedy series some critics call the best on television, is among 450 cable TV entries competing for Emmys for the first time with the broadcast networks.

Emmy nominations were being announced today.

The Television Academy of Arts & Sciences decided to allow cable programming to compete with regular broadcast television in this year's 40th annual Emmy awards because cable shows are now available to a wide national audience.

Ten cable TV networks hope to be on the list when the nominations are announced from more than 4,500 entries.

Showtime has two miniseries: "Home Fires," a four-hour examination of four days in the life of a family, and "Codename: Kyril," an espionage thriller starring Denholm Elliott. They could compete against such network miniseries as NBC's "Gore Vidal's Lincoln" and "Poor Little Rich Girl: The Barbara Hutton Story," CBS' "Echoes in the Darkness" and ABC's "Bourne Identity."

HBO entries include: "Dear America," a feature documentary on the Vietnam War; "Mandela," the story of South African rights leader Nelson Mandela, starring Alfre Woodard and Danny Glover; "Baja Oklahoma," a movie based on the book by Dan Jenkins; and the musical special "Roy Orbison and Friends: A Black and White Night."

Disney possibilities included the animated feature "The Brave Little Toaster," the movie "Save the Dog" and the special "Rick Nelson: A Brother Remembers."

Here are possible nominees from the broadcast networks:

Drama series — NBC's "L.A. Law," ABC's "China Beach" and "thirtysomething" and CBS' "Cagney & Lacey" and "Beauty and the Beast."

Comedy series — ABC's "Slap Maxwell," "Hooperman," "Growing Pains," "Who's the Boss," CBS' "Frank's Place" and "Designing Women," NBC's "Cheers" and "Golden Girls."

Movies — CBS' "Foxfire" and "April Morning," NBC's "The Ann Jilian Story," "Inherit the Wind" and "To Heal a Nation."

Miniseries — ABC's "Bourne Identity" and "Baby M," CBS' "Echoes in the Darkness," NBC's "The Murder of Mary Phagan."

The Emmy Awards telecast will be presented live on Fox Broadcasting at 8 p.m. EDT, Sunday, Aug. 28, from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium. Lorne Michaels, executive producer of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," will produce the special 40th anniversary show. Presentation of the crafts awards will be at a special banquet Aug. 27.

The Governors Award this year will go to William Hanna and Joseph Barbera, of Hanna-Barbera, for their many animated shows, including

For Better Or Worse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Playboy empire founder Hugh Hefner said he chose to give up life as a pajama-clad swinging single and marry model Kimberley Conrad because "it will make the relationship better."

Hefner proposed to Ms. Conrad Playboy magazine's Miss January 1988, on Saturday over the wishing well at the Playboy Mansion, where many other women have shared his life but never completely captured his heart.

"The Flintstones," "The Jetsons," and "The Smurfs."

"The cable industry is pleased with the number of entries this first time," said Jim Boyle, a spokesman for the National Academy of Cable Programming. "Our hopes are very high for nominations and winners. We think talent will be recognized."

Emmy entries represent shows that were on such cable and pay systems as Arts & Entertainment, CBN, Disney Channel, Home Box Office, Cinemax, MTV, Nickelodeon, Showtime, Turner Broadcasting System and USA Network.

The participation of cable was made possible when the academy approved new rules last November that recognized the potential growth of cable rather than its actual size. The cable industry will continue to hold its own ACE awards since the Emmys represent only certain prime-time programming. The ACE awards, which will be televised live on cable systems on Jan. 15, 1989, cover all aspects of cable programming.

Archivist A 'Star Trek' Trivia Fanatic's Dream

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When creator Gene Roddenberry has a question about "Star Trek" the man he turns to is Richard Arnold.

The information about "Star Trek," and the lore amassed over the past 22 years, is so vast that only the most dedicated Trekkie could possibly keep track of it.

Arnold has been the show's official archivist at Paramount Studios for the past two years, but for nearly nine years before that he was an unpaid but virtually full-time consultant.

"I might get a call from a game show asking which cast member first said, 'Beam me up, Scotty,'" said Arnold. "No one ever said that on any 'Star Trek' episode. The fans made it up, like 'Play it again, Sam.'"

"I frequently get calls from merchandising and licensing. They'll want to know what actor played such-and-such a character and how can they get hold of him to sign a waiver. Television stations call a lot asking for help in designing a promotion campaign."

Arnold emphasized, however, that he is not the final word on the show. "I'm a consultant," he said. "I'm not hanging over anyone's shoulders. They can consult me or not."

"Star Trek" made its debut on NBC in 1966 and ran for three years.

It has also been an animated series, four hit motion pictures have been made and a fifth is in the works, and the new TV series "Star Trek: The Next Generation" is an enormous hit in syndication.

"I was 12 years old when 'Star Trek' began," said Arnold. "I'd gone through 'The Hardy Boys,' even my sisters' Nancy Drew' books, and Edgar Rice Burroughs had gotten me into science fiction. I remember I spent one summer in a tent in the backyard reading. My mother thought there was something wrong with that."

"On TV I'd watched 'Lost in Space,' 'Voyage To the Bottom of the Sea,' and 'Time Tunnel.' Then 'Star Trek' came on. The first episode intrigued me. The next episode was so good, I cried at the end. After that I scheduled my life around watching 'Star Trek.' I watched the shows over and over and over again. My mother couldn't understand that. I asked her if she ever went back to the same restaurant."

His mother, incidentally, finally began watching and was soon an avid "Star Trek" fan herself.

Arnold, who was born in the same hospital in Vancouver, Canada, as Jimmy Doohan (Scotty), ran a "Star Trek" fan club in high school and college. He moved from Canada to St. Louis in 1969 and went to his first science fiction convention with a cousin in downtown St. Louis.

"It changed my whole life," he said. "I went to the first 'Star Trek' convention in New York in 1971. I met Gene Roddenberry there and he was very kind to me. But I didn't know who he was until he was introduced at the convention."

That was the first of many "Star Trek" conventions he was to attend in following years. In 1974 he moved to Los Angeles to work as a hospital orderly.

"I still kept in touch with everybody, and Susan Sackett, Gene's assistant, began calling me for information," he said. "She knew my memory of the shows. If there was a question or a problem they'd call me. Eventually, it got to the point where I had an office, a parking space and my name in the Paramount studio directory. And I wasn't even on the payroll."

"I kept getting more and more calls. From publicity, from merchandising, from everybody."

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Michael Chickillo has lost weight and developed high blood pressure as his wife's Alzheimer's disease has progressed to the point where she often forgets what she had for lunch by mid-afternoon.

"I told the doctor I'd give my right arm to make it stop," Chickillo said recently, choking back tears.

To give himself time for chores around his home in this northeastern Pennsylvania city, Chickillo has joined a growing number of Americans choosing day care for an elderly family member.

Health care officials say day care is less expensive than a nursing home and keeps the elderly at home longer. They said it also provides a respite for people like Chickillo, who must keep a constant watch on his wife, Lena, when she is home.

There are 1,700 adult day care centers nationally serving more than 50,000 people, nearly three times the number of centers open in 1980 and up from 1,200 in 1985, authorities say.

Adult day care centers now operate in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, says Dorothy Howe, program coordinator for the National Institute on Adult Daycare.

"It's across the country, but it's still quite small," Ms. Howe says.

Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro, N.C., was a pioneer in adult day care in the United States in 1969 when it recruited an English doctor to tart a gerontology program.

Dr. Lionel Z. Cosin, who taught at Oxford University's medical school, began a day care center for patients in the hospital, which is 50 miles east of Raleigh, says Lulu Jolliff, an administrator who worked with Cosin. Cosin had opened a number of the centers in England before coming to the United States.

About 2.2 million people care for a spouse or relative who has a problem with at least one activity of daily living, such as bathing, dressing or eating, says Lynn Osterkamp, editor of Parent Care, a national newsletter.

About 5.8 million of the 29.2 million Americans 65 or older are in nursing homes, she says.

Elderly care officials point to the graying of America as one reason why adult day care will continue to grow.

By 2030, 65 million Americans will be 65 or older, according to an estimate by the American Association of Retired Persons.

Three days a week, Chickillo drives his 75-year-old wife to Community Day Services in Scranton, where she joins about 30 other elderly people unable to care for themselves.

There, they watch television, sing songs, play games and get physical, speech and occupational therapy under the supervision of a staff that includes two full-time nurses.

"We try to make it as much like a senior center as possible," says Janet Ann Melnick, in charge of the four-year-old center.

On a recent afternoon, Kathy Herne, a volunteer, strummed tunes such as "Harvest Moon" and "Singing in the Rain" on a guitar while half a dozen elderly men and women sat in front of her clapping, singing along or just listening. At one point, two women danced together on the tile floor.

Helga Hartman, who suffers from diabetes and walks with difficulty, sat at a table toward the back of the room and worked on a puzzle. Others sat silently at different tables.

Ms. Howe and day care administrators said the number of centers would increase even though they have been hurt financially because adult day care is not covered by Medicare.

"There are a number that have to get out of the business simply because of funding," Ms. Howe says.

Separate bills pending before the U.S. House and Senate would provide Medicare funding for adult day care.

Financially needy people are eligible for Medicaid funding for adult day care in 25 states, but not in Pennsylvania, Howe says.

The state has budgeted $5.2 million through county agencies for financial assistance for day care costs at the state's 118 centers, says John Holloway, who is in charge of adult day care for the state Department of Aging.

Adult day care costs an average of about $28 a day, less than half the cost of a nursing home, authorities say.

"It gives people options where, before we had the centers, they didn't have those options," says Mary Ann Outwater, executive director of Windsor House Adult Day Care in Cambridge, Mass.

Corporations are beginning to pay attention to the growing need for adult day care.

Hallmark Cards Inc., based in Kansas City, Mo., in 1986 began offering employees a free referral service for day care or other health needs for their children, elderly parents or disabled family members.

Meg Townsend, a company spokesman, says two-career families will increase the need for adult day care for elderly family members.

"There's just not as much time to address family concerns, but they're as important as ever," she says.

Stride Rite Corp. of Cambridge, Mass., is considering expanding its subsidized child day centers at two Boston area plants to include the elderly.

A survey at the company showed 25 percent of employees care for an elderly relative and 13 percent more expect to in the next five years, says Amy Derbedrosian, a spokeswoman for the company.

Nursing homes have adapted by starting adult day care centers of their own.

A 1985 survey of 847 adult day care centers nationwide showed 22 percent were in nursing homes, Ms. Howe says. Churches ran 18 percent of the centers; senior centers, 12 percent; community centers, 7 percent, and hospitals, 5 percent, the survey showed.

Ms. Howe says 40 states and the District of Columbia have developed standards for funding, licensing or certification.

Elderly people suffering from Alzheimer's disease or other forms of cognitive impairment make up the majority of adult day care clients, authorities say.

A 1987 survey by the Pennsylvania Adult Day Care Association found two-thirds of the elderly attending day care centers in the state fit into this category, says Barbara K. Visconti, president of the organization.

In Pittsburgh, Council Care Adult Day Care has designed one of its three centers specifically for people with Alzheimer's, an irreversible neurological disorder that affects 2.5 million Americans.

Ruth Kaplan, executive director for the centers, says staff members at Council Care II play games with the elderly to help them remember the events of the day and talk about memories of their youths.

"They are being stimulated. If they sat at home and were not stimulated, it is our feeling they would lose their skills more rapidly," Ms. Kaplan says.

In Scranton, Chickillo washes the dishes, does the laundry and cleans the two-story, century-old house in an ethnic, working class neighborhood when his wife goes to the day care center.

Pet Store Adventure Includes Call Of Wild Cash

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I defy anyone to walk into a pet store and come out with what he went in for. Everything is calculated to attack your purchasing immune system, beginning with the little bells on the door. These little suckers don't jangle to let the storekeeper know someone is entering the store; they're a warning system to alert the animals that a credit card is approaching.

At the sound of these bells, birds come out of their hypnotic state and begin singing and speaking in entire sentences. Puppies stand on their hind legs and wag their tails. Hamsters head for the exercise wheel (which is always oiled), and kittens look like orphans that Miss Hannigan abuses in "Annie."

If I can possibly resist buying a pet, I still have to run through the obstacle course of pet products.

When my kids were small, one of my sons won a goldfish at a carnival one Saturday night by throwing a pingpong ball into a glass. The chance cost 25 cents. We brought the fish home in a Dixie cup.

The next day we went to the pet store to buy a fishbowl. The salesman said, "You're going to raise an 'only goldfish'?" He'll need playmates." He picked out three other goldfish and then said, "You can't have four goldfish stuffed into a bowl. You need an aquarium. Here's one called 'Condo-by-the-Sea.'"

Before I could say, "Where are we going to put it?" he produced a black wrought iron stand. "You'll need to aerate it with an electric pump. And if the temperature varies in your house, you must have a heater and a light — lights are wonderful!"

The counter began to fill up with snails to clean the side of the aquarium, little tablets to fight algae, colored gravel, a net, a castle and a mermaid on a rock.

We prepared to leave when he said, "Of course you have a supply of food, treats, vitamins and supplements." We shook our heads numbly. "A healthy fish is a happy fish," he smiled.

Three months later, the fish were dead and the aquarium caught fire from pollution.

At present, I am "into" birds. I cannot go into a pet store without emerging with designer treat sticks, little bells to relieve their boredom, and elaborate jungle gyms with ladders and ring swings.

I popped in last week to buy a few bags of food and came out with another pair of birds. Sometimes I wonder if they even know they sleep each night under a Laura Ashley cage cover.

Reasons For Alcoholism Differ

DURHAM — Alcoholism and substance abuse aren't limited to a single age group, race, sex or social class. And, just as there are many types of people who become addicted to drinking or drugs, there are many reasons for addiction.

"There's no such thing as a typical alcoholic or drug addict," said Bernice Ferencik, Ph.D., a therapist with the Duke Alcoholism and Addictions Program. "Each has a unique set of circumstances that led to alcohol or drug abuse."

Coming to terms with these circumstances is an important part of treatment at the Duke Alcoholism and Addictions Program. To understand better their addictions and plan for sobriety, patients complete the Inventory of Drinking Situations Questionnaire or the Inventory of Drug Taking Situations Questionnaire.

The surveys, developed by the Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto, Canada, present patients with a number of problem situations and ask them to indicate how likely they would be to spark a return to alcohol or drugs. So far, the Duke program has administered the questionnaires to approximately 60 patients.

"One of the things that we are beginning to learn is that dealing with mood changes is a real problem," Ferencik said.

Unpleasant emotions, such as depression, discouragement and anxiety were the strongest temptation for relapse in 44 percent of the women and 23 percent of the men surveyed. The moods that alcoholics and substance abusers formerly moderated with alcohol or drugs remain difficult for them to control once they are sober, Ferencik explained. Other survey findings were as follows:

— Pressure from others was the most difficult situation to resist for 21 percent of the men and 18 percent of the women. If an after-work drink with friends was part of a former alcoholic's routine, for example, abstinence means not only giving up drinking but dealing with peer pressure to drink as well. Women also indicated an increased urge to use alcohol or drugs when they are in conflict with others.

— Social situations, whether at a party or on an interpersonal level, were cited by 13 percent of the men and 6 percent of the women as being their most difficult situation. Alcoholics need to understand that their habit is an addiction, Ferencik said — there never will be a day when they can drink like everyone else.

"The questionnaires seem to be useful in helping patients understand how unique they are, what problems they can expect in maintaining their sobriety, and how they can cope with their specific needs," Ferencik said.

The information also helps the Duke staff plan the most effective treatment for their patients, he added. Findings form the basis for individual relapse prevention plans, which may include such strategies as stress management techniques, positive self-affirmation statements and support from family and friends.

Time-Worn Tale Wears Thin

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am about to burst. I have been married for almost a year now, and if I hear my husband tell one more person how "good" he was to his wife while she was dying, I will scream!

Yes, he was good to his wife. Yes, he did take her to every specialist in the country. Yes, he did spend lots of money trying to "save" her, but he talks about it endlessly to anyone who will listen.

Today he told me that no one ever had a loss like his. (Of course, I lost my husband, but that doesn't count.)

He doesn't talk about his wife — only the way he took care of her. He keeps saying that he has no regrets; he will never have to say he didn't do everything humanly possible for her. Why does he talk about it all the time?

If he meets anyone whose spouse is sick, as soon as it is mentioned, he takes over the conversation and does a monologue on what he went through with his wife and how he took care of her. I am tired of hearing about it. Some people have asked me to please tell him to lay off the subject. They know what he went through, and they are tired of hearing about it.

He's a good husband, but it's time that he put his tragedy behind him and got on with his life. He acts as if nobody ever lost a spouse but him. What should I do? Ignore it? Let him talk about it, or what? — UP TO HERE

DEAR UP: Your husband desperately needs to talk about his loss, but he should spare you and his friends the repetitious tales in which he is the "hero." (Some people talk more to convince themselves than others.)

The poor man could still be hurting. He needs to unload on a professional who will listen patiently, then guide him through the healing process and put this self-serving need to rest. Do your husband, his friends and yourself an enormous favor and get him into therapy.

DEAR ABBY: I am a female working in a family-owned business. My father and sisters are my bosses. When I was younger, I was a little on the wild side, but since then, I've settled down dramatically. The problem is that I have two tattoos. One is on my left forearm and the other is on my right upper arm.

When I first started working here, they said it was not "ladylike" and I should wear long sleeves in the summer. Abby, I cannot even wear long sleeves in the winter. It's been so hot and humid this summer I want to wear tank tops or sleeveless blouses. They say NO!

I always look clean and well-groomed, and I think it's my business if I have tattoos. I'm going to be working here all my life, so don't you think they should accept me this way?

I need your opinion. Are they discriminating against me for showing my tattoos instead of keeping them covered? I do not regret getting the tattoos. I'm a very artistic person, and to me, they are body art. — TATTOOS FOREVER

DEAR FOREVER: Obviously your family does not perceive your "body art" in the same way that you perceive it. You mentioned that in your younger years you had been "a little on the wild side," so you must also realize that your tattoos make a statement.

Your family cannot be faulted for wanting their employees to create the best possible image. And if you feel discriminated against, you are free to find another job.

Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Webb and Wesley Webb were first place winners Thursday night in the North American Open Pairs game with .64 percent. Others placing were Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister, second; Mrs. Wesley Webb and Lee Hastings, third; Frances McCarley and Mrs. M.H. Bynum, fourth; Mrs. C.D. Elks and Estelle Eastwood, fifth, and Ann Latham and Dave Proctor, sixth.

North-South winners in the Saturday afternoon game were Mrs. Mel Wright and Mrs. A.L. Roque, first, with .66 percent; Frances McCarley and Mrs. M.H. Bynum, second; tied for third were Mrs. William McConnell and Lewis Newsome with Mildred Harker and Dorothy Ritchy. East-West winners included Mrs. Harold Forbes and Emma Warren, first with .57 percent; Ida Rowe and Dot Barwick tied for second with Mr. and Mrs. Jim Frank, and Dr. Charles Duffy and Mrs. Robert Hankerson, fourth.

Singing School Held Each Summer

By STEVE BRUNSMAN
The (Biloxi-Gulfport) Sun Herald
PASS CHRISTIAN, Miss. (AP) — This quiet coast town is summertime headquarters for one of the few remaining gospel singing schools in the Deep South.

The brick buildings, dormitories and auditorium that make up the Gospel Singers of America School stand silent most of the year. But during a few weeks each summer, the oak-draped campus is filled with hymn-singing students and half note-hitting musicians.

Gospel students range from 5-year-old hopefuls to a 80-year-old retired clarinet player.

This year, the school opened its doors for a three-week session in mid-June. Earlier this month, more than 100 students and school supporters, and a half dozen family musical groups showed up for the annual gospel sing and homecoming.

Public gospel singing was a tradition for many generations in the Deep South. Many church revivals featured all-day gospel sings and picnic dinners on the grounds.

"This place means everything in the world to us," said Ruby Porter of Long Beach. "We've had people study here from all over the United States. People have made professions of faith. Others have gone on to become ministers, musicians or music ministers."

"We just can't say enough about it," she said.

The non-profit school is unique on the Coast. It has a supporting membership list of about 2,000 people from across the Southeast.

Like other school officials, Porter won't let this old-fashioned singing school go downhill. One page of school history did end this week when school founder Videt Polk retired for health reasons from the director's board.

In 1957, Polk, a Louisiana gospel promoter, and the Rev. Bobby Burnett, a Baton Rouge, La., minister, raised $10,000 and bought the Pass Christian property.

A two-story building was built, and the Gospel Singers of America school opened the next year. The late 1950s and 1960s were good years for gospel singing and the school.

The Pass Christian campus grew, enrolling as many as 200 students during six-week summer sessions. The school also once claimed title as the biggest gospel singing organization in the United States.

In recent years, school enrollment has declined to about 75 students and the number of operating weeks has shrunk. The school is unaccredited; graduate students in music have visited the musical campus to gather research and test students, however.

"Gospel isn't as popular as it once was, but the training in theory and rudiments — whole notes, half notes, sight reading — don't change wherever a student decides to go in music," said Marilyn Smith of Long Beach, a teacher and former student. "We hope to build up enrollment once again."

The walls in the school's auditorium are a tribute to both Polk the promoter and the gospel tradition in the South.

Polk attended many big gospel rallies and was photographed with former Louisiana governors John McKeithen, Jimmie Davis, and Dave Trean.

In 1967, a gospel rally at the governor's mansion in Baton Rouge drew an estimated 50,000 people from Louisiana and Mississippi. Polk shared the platform.

Polk and Burnett designed the Pass Christian school to operate on an interdenominational basis; still, most students are white and belong to Protestant denominations, such as Baptist groups.

Out-of-state students and teachers outnumber coast residents. Most students are from Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas, but budding gospel singers and musicians also arrived this year from North Carolina, Virginia and even Colorado.

Bryan Freeman, 13, who plays piano and sings with a family gospel group called Old Time Way, tried the school last summer and liked what he learned.

The Virginia teen-ager returned this year with his sister Kellie, an instructor. His goal is to play bass guitar in a professional group.

"The music program is great and the teachers are really skilled. Playing music with other people is fun. It's a neat place, too, with a beach," he said.

Gina Johnston, 29, of Mobile, joined the Goff Family Singers onstage Sunday. Johnston made her own profession of faith on the Pass Christian beach as a teen-ager.

She attended the music school for five years, beginning at 11.

"This place has meant a lot to me," said Johnston. "The union and fellowship of fellow singers was really important to me. It will be heart-breaking to leave here. This is a homecoming reunion of kindred spirits."

Principal Peter Barnes hopes to attract more students next year. School officials have printed up new brochures and plan to advertise widely.

Room and board for the three-week session cost $350 this year; day students paid $125. A staff of 10 music teachers lead beginner, primary, and advanced classes.

Students are given both group and private lessons, and perform in recital. Offerings include voice, piano, theory, directing, song writing, quartet training, guitar and organ.

Surviving are his father, Joddie Pippen of the home; four brothers, James Pippen, Thomas Pippen and Ricky Pippen, all of Bethel, and Larry Pippen of Fort Riley, Kan.; and two sisters, Yvonne Stith and Vanessa Mooring, both of Bethel.

The family will receive friends from 8-9 p.m. Friday at Bethel Temple Holiness Church and at other times at the home of his father, 302 Gray St., Bethel. Arrangements are by Flanagan Funeral Home of Greenville.

Peace Remains Elusive As Talks Conclude

 Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas, said all participants agreed on the urgent need for a political settlement leading to a 'neutral and non-aligned Cambodia.'

It said they also agreed on withdrawing Vietnamese forces, preventing "the recurrence of genocidal policies and practices" of the Khmer Rouge regime, and ending foreign arms supplies to the warring parties.

The participants also agreed on the need for definite timetables and an international presence to supervise these processes, the statement said.

On Wednesday, Thach said all parties agreed on most issues, particularly linking Vietnamese withdrawal to steps to prevent the return of the Khmer Rouge to power.
 Today, in his first public statement at Bogor, Khieu Samphan denounced Thach's assertion.

"By making such a shameless lie," the written statement said, "Thach has testified that Vietnam continues to carry out perfidious maneuvers in order to occupy Kampuchea (Cambodia) forever through its puppet regime."

The statement also demanded that Vietnam unconditionally withdraw from Cambodia. It said the Khmer Rouge had agreed no single faction should seize power in the country.

The Khmer Rouge killed at least a million people in its attempt to impose radical agrarian communism when they ruled Cambodia from 1975 until Vietnam invaded in late 1978 to end bloody Khmer Rouge attacks on its western border. The group is the strongest of the three guerrilla groups and reportedly is storing arms for an offensive in 1990.

Alatas and Dhanabalan called the talks "a very important psychological breakthrough" — the first time all the parties talked face-to-face.

Centers Offer Help

 gram each day, 40 of which are at the St. James center where there are 19 staff members.
 "It's a means of them (parents) going to work and not having to worry about a child in the field," Mrs. Barnes said, explaining how children have been accidentally killed while in the fields with their working parents.
 Parents learn about the centers in several ways, Mrs. Barnes said. Services are advertised, farmers help spread the word.
 But, "it's the trust that has been built between families and the center" that really gets the word around, she said. Families often call the church in March to say when the families are coming to the area.

 Open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., the center provides more than babysitting. It also provides a learning experience for the children, Brenda Jackson, center director said.
 An individual education plan is made for each child, developing skills in learning stations such as reading, housekeeping, science and manipulative skills. They also are provided enrichment, using storytellers, artists and other visitors.
 This week, the children are learning about creative movement from Peggy Wingate, director of the Goldsboro School of Ballet.
 "I have developed a pre-ballet and pre-tumbling program to get them interested in movement," Ms. Wingate said.
 Using ballet as a base for all of the movements, the children use their legs and backs and become aware of head and arm movements.
 The children also are introduced to basic rhythms and nursery rhymes in addition to participating in gallops, jumps and hopping. And, in trying to imitate her movements and to follow directions, the children are building listening skills, she said.
 Since 85 percent of the children speak Spanish, a bilingual teacher works with students in each age group, Mrs. Barnes said. Many of the center's migrant children have spoken Haitian.
 In working with surrounding school systems that ultimately teach the children, the Mrs. Barnes boasts "our children were very well prepared to enter the public schools. We want them to be able to compete with the non-migrant child."
 Parents are very involved in the child-care program, Mrs. Barnes said, helping center cooks prepare three ethnic meals each week, and conducting parent meetings. Two parents serve of the national council for the migrant program.
 In addition, Pitt and Nash community colleges have been helpful in making adult education classes available to the parents.
 "I really enjoy working with the children and their families," Mrs. Jackson said.

 funds, provide state school systems with money for building and facility needs.
 "Because of the funds available, the legislation required school systems to take a look at what needed to be constructed," McKnight said.
 The long-range plan addresses that need by examining the capacity of each school, projected enrollment for each school and the school system, programs acquired through the state Basic Education Plan, costs and financing options.
 It is projected that by 1997 the school system will serve about 19,500, up from the current 17,185, McKnight said.
 Meeting the needs of increased enrollment plus implementing the BEP requirements will cost the school system more than $14.7 million through 1992-93, he said.
 Auxiliary needs, such as expanding libraries, teacher offices or vocational equipment, have a five-year price tag of more than $10.1 million.
 The projected need of three new schools — an elementary, a middle and a high school — in about 10 years will cost $26 million collectively, McKnight said.
 After presenting Commissioners with a "conservative" bill of almost $51 million for enrollment increases and the BEP, auxiliary needs and three new schools, Commissioner Kenneth Dews said, "It bogles the mind to determine the revenue you have to generate" to pay for implementing the plan.
 Commissioner Tom Johnson said he wanted to see the "bottom line" costs after the sale of the J.H. Rose High School facility and the state's contribution are added to the income. "The bottom line is what's crucial."
 The boards are scheduled to meet again in August or September to discuss questions Commissioners compile after reading through the plan.

New Trial Ordered

 tact his step-daughter in any way. Officials at the Eastern Correctional Center in Snow Hill said Jones has not been released.

Pitt County District Attorney Thomas Haigwood is out of town and unavailable for comment. Haigwood is to set the new trial date.

Jones was convicted in November of 1986 of two counts of first-degree rape, and Judge John B. Lewis Jr. of Farmville sentenced Jones to two life sentences, which were to run simultaneously. Jones was also convicted of three counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor and given a 15-year sentence to run concurrently with the life sentences.

Jones was accused of sexually assaulting his step-daughter while her mother was working and the girl was left in his custody. The offenses allegedly occurred from December of 1982, when the girl was 12 years old, through October of 1985.

Jones was accused of threatening the girl with a gun to make her consent to sex. A 1986 search warrant requested by Pitt County Sheriff's Detective Larry Parker stated that the girl claimed Jones also used duct tape, rope and a butcher knife to threaten her.

During the trial, Jones' attorney, Charles M. Vincent of Greenville, objected to the testimony of Verona Ellis of Greenville, who said in-court that Jones raped her in the same manner and also threatened her with a gun.

Ms. Ellis, now in her late 20s, said she was 11 years old when the offenses began in 1970, and she testified she gave birth to Jones' child at age 14. At the time, Jones was living in a household with Ms. Ellis and her older sister.

MASONIC NOTICE
 An emergent communication for the burial ceremony of Charlie Holliday will be held by Crown Point Lodge No. 708 at 10 a.m. Friday.

The trial court admitted the testimony because it helped establish the state of mind of Jones and showed a desire on his part "for vaginal intercourse with young girls and an unnatural lust on his part," Frye wrote.

Based on the state's evidence, the trial court held that in both instances Jones was an adult male in position of authority in a home, and he had normal sexual relations with adult women while sexually assaulting the girls.

Vincent argued that the testimony should not have been allowed because the previous incidents occurred at least seven years before the alleged sexual assault of Jones' step-daughter, and the value of the evidence did not outweigh the prejudicial effect.

The high court agreed. Frye wrote that the prior incident occurred so long ago "it has become little more than character evidence illustrating the predisposition of the accused."

"We hold that the admission of the testimony relating to the alleged assaultive conduct against Verona Ellis was prejudicial to the defendant's fundamental right to a fair trial on the charges for which he was indicted because the prior acts were too remote in time," Frye said.

"Accordingly, the defendant is entitled a new trial."

After the conviction, Vincent withdrew from the case and Lawrence Dale Graham was appointed to handle the appeal. Graham has since moved his law practice to Taylorsville and another attorney will be appointed for the new trial.

Koop Reports On Nutrition

 John LaRosa, a physician at the George Washington University and chairman of the nutrition committee at the American Heart Association.

"It endorses ideas that the heart association has been pushing for some time."
 Though the report acknowledges that malnutrition remains a problem in some parts of the world and for certain Americans, it says that "for most of us the more likely problem has become one of overeating — too many calories for our activity levels and an imbalance in the nutrients consumed along with them."

 Koop said in a forward to the report that while many foods affect health, the major factor in the American diet "is the disproportionate consumption of foods high in fats, often at the expense of foods high in complex carbohydrates and fiber — such as vegetables, fruits, and whole grain products."

 Changes in the diet, he said, "can bring a substantial measure of better health to all Americans."

Sacrifice Fly Lets Giants Salvage One Victory From Series With Los Angeles

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The San Francisco Giants wanted more than a split with Los Angeles, but wound up happy to get that much before the Dodgers split town.

Robby Thompson's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning enabled the Giants to beat Los Angeles 2-1 Wednesday night and stay within striking distance in the National League West.

The Dodgers won twice in San Francisco and finished the longest road trip in the majors this season with an 11-5 record. That put them six games ahead of Houston and seven in front of San Francisco. At the All-Star break, the Giants were within 2½ games.

"I feel good now. We had to have that game," said Giants manager Roger Craig, who was downcast after Los Angeles swept a doubleheader Tuesday at Candlestick Park.

Said Thompson: "We would have liked to win three or four of the games, but we'll take the split. From here on out, every game is a big one."

Elsewhere, Houston beat San Diego 2-1, New York routed Philadelphia 10-2, Pittsburgh downed St. Louis 3-2 in 10 innings, Montreal rallied past Chicago 5-4 and Cincinnati defeated Atlanta 3-2.

Starters Atlee Hammaker of the Giants and Tim Lary of the Dodgers were brilliant. Hammaker, who got no decision, allowed only an unearned run on four hits in eight innings.

Leary, 10-7, left the game after Jose Uribe's leadoff single in the 10th.

"He battled some good pitches and hit a fastball," Leary said. "I still felt strong and had good arm speed when they took me out."

Leary allowed just five hits, including Kevin Mitchell's home run. He tied a career-high with 10 strikeouts.

Uribe stole second and pinch-hitter Ernest Riles walked. After a passed ball by Rick Dempsey, Jesse Orosco struck out Brett Butler.

Thompson, who had been 0-for-4 with two strikeouts against Leary, lifted a fly ball to deep right field that Mike Marshall dropped for an error. Marshall was too deep, however, to have had any chance to make a play at the plate if he had made the catch.

Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds drove in five runs apiece as New York beat Philadelphia on another rainy night.

The start at Veterans Stadium was held up for 57 minutes by rain. There also was a delay of 1 hour, 22 minutes with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Rain caused 3½ hours of delays Tuesday night in the Mets' victory.

McReynolds went 4-for-4 with a three-run homer and double. Strawberry hit a three-run triple and double.

Dwight Gooden, 13-5, gave up six hits in 8 1/3 innings. He left after slipping on the mound. David Palmer, 5-8, took the loss.

Dye Hits New SEC Standard

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Coach Pat Dye of Auburn says a new Southeastern Conference regulation that eventually will end enrolling academic non-qualifiers is an unfair rule.

"It just doesn't seem right to me," Dye said Wednesday during a news conference at the SEC football pre-season kickoff event.

"I hope and pray the presidents will reconsider," he said. "It kind of makes me nauseated. I don't understand it."

The SEC presidents voted last May to phase out in stages the number of non-qualifying athletes a school could take, getting to zero by 1993.

Dye said that if the rule stands, "I think you're gonna see a lot more cheating to get 'em in school. People will figure a way to get 'em in school, even at Georgia. People will do everything to get 'em qualified."

As an aftermath of the Jan Kemp trial dealing with remedial courses for athletes and other students at Georgia, the school imposed regulations banning the acceptance of any athlete who failed to meet the entry requirements for eligibility imposed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Dye said that at Georgia, his alma mater, "they've circumvented the rule."

He said Georgia sends non-qualifiers to junior college for one year, then puts them through summer school to graduate them from junior college in one year and three months.

"And, they've done that at Tennessee, haven't they?" Dye said.

He said he didn't like what Georgia was doing in preventing non-qualifiers from entering school immediately.

"I think every kid in Georgia should be able to go to the University of Georgia," he said. "I don't think it's fair."

The NCAA allows a school to take players who fail to come within a sliding scale based on a 2.0 grade point average and a 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). Such non-qualifiers aren't allowed to participate their freshman year, but they retain three years of eligibility upon completion of academic requirements.

Dye said the current NCAA rule was "a perfect solution to our problem."

Dye said he might "be guilty of being with the little guy," but that he thought they should be given a chance.

Michael Spinks Tearfully Retires From The Ring

NEW YORK (AP) — A month to the day after Mike Tyson took 91 seconds to demonstrate for Michael Spinks the punching power of a true heavyweight, Spinks was in retirement.

Spinks, the only light heavyweight ever to dethrone a heavyweight champion, tearfully announced his retirement Wednesday, saying that he had plenty of money and still had his health and would prefer in the future to serve as an adviser to boxers rather than be one.

"I've never retired from anything except selling newspapers," the 32-year old Spinks said, breaking into sobs between words, then wiping away the tears with napkins handed him by his promoter-manager, Butch Lewis.

"It's been a tough 12 years, but I have to admit it's been fun." Spinks, whose loss to Tyson in Atlantic City, N.J., June 27 was the only one in his 32 professional fights, said he will join Lewis as an agent-adviser to young athletes.

An Olympic middleweight champion in 1976, Spinks turned pro six months later and won eight straight fights before taking time off to help his brother Leon win the world heavyweight title from Muhammad Ali.

He won his first pro title in 1981 when he defeated Eddie Mustafa Muhammad to capture the World Boxing Association light heavyweight title, then beat Dwight Muhammad Qawi on March 18, 1983 to unify the championship in the division.

Then, on Sept. 22, 1985, having beefed up from 175 pounds to more than 200, he became the first light heavyweight to take the title from a heavyweight champ when he out-pointed Larry Holmes in 15 rounds at Las Vegas, Nev., for the International Boxing Federation championship.

"Twelve years is a lot of time for getting run at and having to duck a lot of punches," said Spinks, who said Lewis had advised him to quit while he still had his health and, he said, $25 million in the bank.

"But I look at some of the older guys — Jersey Joe Walcott, Smokin' Joe Frazier, Archie Moore, Muhammad Ali. They made 12 years look like six months."

Frazier, in fact, was one of those on hand during the tribute to Spinks at the Tavern on the Green. And that former champion, who fought his last fight at 37, suggested that Spinks might be hanging it up too quickly.

"If he feels good, if he feels fine, why hang it up?" Frazier asked when given his chance to speak in the long line of tribute-payers.

"Why not go out and get some more money?"

But money — at least more of it — didn't seem to be on Spinks' mind as he posed with the various championship belts and trophies he had won while the Olympic gold medal hung around his neck. He said that after the Tyson fight, he sat down with Lewis and Lewis suggested that it might be time to quit.

"We're doing it our way," Lewis said. "He's got his money, he's got his health, I just thought it was time."

As for Spinks, he said he would be around the fight game regularly, advising fighters, working with Lewis on promotions and getting into other sports and even show business as an agent and manager.

"Don't worry, I'll be around," he said.

Did that mean he might try a comeback, as so many other "retired" boxers have?

"I wouldn't count on it," Spinks replied.

Daniels Out To Erase Memory

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

GREENSBORO — Rose High's Dave Daniels views tonight's East-West All-Star football game as both a chance to close out his high school career as a winner and erase a bitter memory at the same time.

The last time Daniels donned his shoulder pads was back in November in the second round of the State 4-A playoffs against Jacksonville.

At the time, Rose was 11-0 and thinking state championship. They had already beaten Jacksonville during the regular season, but the Cardinals killed the Rose hopes by taking a 7-6 win.

"I want to go out a winner, not a loser," Daniels said.

A two-way player in high school, Daniels will continue that process tonight. He will start at fullback and be a backup at inside linebacker.

"I'm looking forward to it," he said. "I know (at least) I'll get a chance to play, and to play two positions.

"They had me at backup fullback and linebacker (when I first got here). Then early in the week, the starting fullback, James Taborn, got injured."

And Daniels stepped right in. "Dave Daniels is a hard-nosed, quiet kid that we moved to starting fullback and backup linebacker," said East coach Bobby Poss.

"Dave is one of the few players we selected because of his ability to play both ways."

The work at fullback will be especially helpful for Daniels (5-10, 215) because that is the position he will play for East Carolina this fall.

Daniels said he welcomes the chance to play just fullback this fall.

"It should get me in good shape seeing as I'm playing running back there too," he said. "It's an adjustment, but not a tough one. I think I can adjust. It will be easier just going one way (in college) because you get more rest, you don't get tired. I hate playing tired."

"I know butterflies will be turning (when I get in there). I hope I don't fumble."

When Daniels is on offense, he will line up in front of Ayden-Grifton's Eric Blount, who is starting at tailback. When Daniels moves to defense, he will either replace North Pitt's Ashley Sheppard or he'll play right alongside him.

While the three players know each other, Daniels has never played against either one. Both Blount and Sheppard played in the 2-A Eastern Plains Conference, while Daniels played in the Big East 4-A.

So the past week of practice has given Daniels an appreciation of what type of players they are.

"You get to see how good they are," he said. "Newspapers don't lie. I think we are picking up the pace (for football in Pitt County). We're getting better teams coming through. I think we can hang (talent-wise) with anybody in the East and anybody in the state."

Top Players Are Missing

GREENSBORO — Both teams in tonight's East-West All-Star Football game will field squads with considerable size along both the offensive and defensive lines.

Many of the top specialty players in the state that were selected to both squads won't play, whether it's because of an injury or a previous commitment.

Highly-touted running backs Anthony Barbour of Garner and Randy Jordan of Warren County couldn't play for the East squad because of summer school commitments.

The West squad was already missing Gastonia's Junior Hall, but received a second blow when running back Ricky Turner of Shelby suffered a knee injury early in the week.

Still, both teams have a number of top prospects along the lines of scrimmage.

For the West, Eric Funderburk, a 289-pound tackle from Charlotte Olympic, and Antoine Rivers, a 6-3, 252-pound West Charlotte product, will join N.C. State signee Mike Gee, 6-5, 255-pounder, from Burlington Williams.

They'll need every pound they have in facing the East defense, though. Parade All-American defensive end Chester McGlockton, a 6-5, 270-pound Whiteville product, is the anchor of the East defense along with prep-teammate Rickie Shaw, a 6-6, 275-pound defensive tackle.

North Pitt linebacker Ashley Sheppard, a 6-3, 225-pounder, will line up at inside linebacker behind a line that boasts 6-4, 275-pound tackle Knox Thompson of Lumberton, 5-10, 255-pound defensive tackle Karl Joyner of Tarboro and Shaw.

The West might have an advantage at quarterback, with versatile N.C. State signee Therome George, 6-0, 182, from Shelby.

He'll look to wide receiver Willie Harris (5-9, 160) of Greensboro Grimsley a great deal. During his career at Grimsley, Harris had 113 receptions, 67 of them coming in his senior year.

The East will be quarterbacked by Stacy Betts, a 6-2, 182-pounder from Garner, spent more of his time handing off to Barbour during his senior year than he did testing defensive secondaries.

Ayden-Grifton tailback Eric Blount (5-9, 175) and Rose High fullback Dave Daniels (5-10, 215) give the East backfield a Pitt County flavor and figure to get a lot of work. Blount relies on speed and quickness. Daniels is a tough inside runner who also possesses deceptive speed.

Wide-outs Walter Jones (6-0, 170) from Roanoke Rapids and Ebbie Lesane (5-11, 184) from Lumberton give the East two weapons at the wideouts. Slot back Quinton McCracken (5-8, 160) of South Brunswick is another weapon.

Sports Notes

Taylor Named Hershey Cage Coach

FARMVILLE — Billy Taylor, an assistant coach at Farmville Central High School for the past five years, has been named head basketball coach at Hershey High School in Hershey, Pa.

A native of Greenville, Taylor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Taylor. He played basketball and baseball at Rose High School and earned bachelor's and master's degrees from East Carolina University. He has completed approximately half of his work toward a doctorate.

Taylor began his coaching career at McDonald Junior High School in New Bern and was an assistant coach at New Bern High School before serving as a graduate assistant at East Carolina in basketball. Following a one-year tenure at Columbia High School, he coached basketball and baseball at Smithfield-Selma for five years. He served one year as an assistant at UNC-Greensboro before moving on for another year at Perquimans High School.

He has been at Farmville Central for the past five years, serving as softball coach his first year, and assistant basketball coach the last four years. He also served three years as an assistant football coach.

Taylor is married to the former Michele Barnes of Pittsburgh, Pa., and they have three daughters and a son.

At Hershey, Taylor will be in charge of basketball programs ranging from kindergarten to the 12th grade, along with all youth basketball programs in the town.

Greenville Aces Finish Second In Southeast

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The Greenville Aces tennis team finished second overall in the Southern Sectional Championships held July 24-27 in Little Rock, Ark.

The Aces made the trip to the sectionals after winning the North Carolina Volvo Team Championships at the 5.0 level earlier.

Six teams competed in the round robin Southern Sectionals with Arkansas claiming the overall title. Greenville finished the event with a 3-2 record against its opponents. Other teams competing included Tennessee, South Carolina, Mississippi and Kentucky.

Key performances for the Aces were turned in by the doubles teams of Will Jones and Doug Gestinger and Norman Bryant and Alan Hinds. Jones playing with team captain Gestinger won two matches while dropping three. Bryant and Hinds paired up to compile a 3-0 mark. Bryant also played a pair of doubles matches with Woody Dixon and came away with a 1-1 record.

On the singles side, Randy Bridgman recorded four key victories against highly-ranked competitors.

Snow Hill, Hamlet Again Rained Out

HAMLET — Rains interrupted play in the American Legion baseball eastern finals tournament for the second time Wednesday night between Snow Hill and Hamlet.

Snow Hill won the first game of the best-of-seven series between the two Tuesday night, 5-4, after a rainout on Monday.

The second game is now scheduled for tonight at 8 p.m. at Hamlet, with the series moving to Snow Hill on Friday night at 8 p.m. The fourth game will also be at Snow Hill on Saturday night, with a fifth game, if needed Sunday at 8 p.m. in Snow Hill. If needed, the series would then return to Hamlet on Monday and Tuesday.

The winner will advance to meet the winner of the Stanley-Kernersville series for the state championship.

Hornets Schedule Tryout Camp

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Thirty-three players will converge on Charlotte next week for training camp for the Charlotte Hornets, and when the four-day event is over, coaches will chop the roster to 15 players.

Those players will then participate in a three-day tournament Aug. 4-6 against rookie teams from Atlanta, Milwaukee and Miami at the old Charlotte Coliseum.

The camp's invitation list includes players from several European pro leagues, rookie free agents fresh from college and even several former NBA players.

"We don't want to leave any stone unturned in our search for players," Charlotte Coach Dick Harter told the Winston-Salem Journal.

Six players were invited back from the Hornets' free-agent camp in May. Nine CBA players were invited along with a dozen players with recent college experience. In a desperate search for inside help, 17 of those players invited are 6-foot-8 or taller.

Among the big players are 7-footer Brett Vroman, formerly of UCLA; Tim Kempton, an ex-Notre Dame center; Russell Cross and Mike Gibson, veterans of European ball; and Andre Moore, a former Loyola of Chicago star who played seven games with the Denver Nuggets last season.

Although the camp is for rookies only, one of the Hornets' draft choices is expected to attend. Third-round pick Jeff Moore of Auburn. Moore hasn't signed a contract.

Charlotte's first two picks, Rex Chapman of Kentucky and Tom Tolbert of Arizona, won't be in camp unless they come to an agreement with the Hornets later this week.

Both sides in the Chapman negotiations say there is no way he will be signed by the time the camp opens.

Tolbert's agent says that his client is planning to play in the Los Angeles summer league the week of the camp. Carl Scheer, Charlotte general manager, says an agreement could be reached before camp opens.

Bahakel To Head NFL Charlotte Drive

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Cy Bahakel has accepted the role of managing partner in an effort spearheaded by George Shinn to attract to Charlotte one of several National Football League expansion franchises expected to be awarded within the next five years.

Bahakel is the owner of Charlotte television station WCCB, and one of the nation's largest privately held broadcasting groups. He also is a partner in the ownership group of the NBA's Charlotte Hornets.

"It is a privilege to step into the leadership role in our efforts to bring the NFL to Charlotte," Bahakel said. "This community has earned the designation as a major league city and our local ownership group is committed to achieving the goal of the NFL in Charlotte."

Charlotte Professional Football, Inc. is continuing to work toward a preseason game featuring the Buffalo Bills in 1989, and a plan for a game a year until a franchise is secured.

Blue Jays Snap Viola's Streak

By The Associated Press

Frank Viola is not invincible in the Metrodome. He loses once every 25 starts.

Sil Campusano, Jesse Barfield and Fred McGriff hit solo home runs Wednesday as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Minnesota Twins 4-1 and ended Viola's 19-game home winning streak. Viola, 16-3, had not lost in the Metrodome in 25 starts since May 22, 1987, when Jack Morris and the Detroit Tigers beat him 3-2.

"I made three real bad pitches today," Viola said. "All good things come to an end. Now I can think back on it, and it was a heck of a lot of fun while it lasted. I'm not perfect all the time."

In addition to the 19 victories during the streak, Viola won two World Series games in the Metrodome.

"He doesn't have an 'S' on his shirt," Minnesota manager Tom Kelly said. "A lot of people around here think he's Superman and is strong as an ox every three or four games. There's just no way."

"He's tough, and his record indicates that," Toronto manager Jimmy Williams said. "We knocked a few out when we had to."

In other games, New York beat Milwaukee 16-3, Detroit beat Kansas City 3-1, California beat Oakland 9-8 in 12 innings, Boston beat Texas 10-7, Cleveland beat Baltimore 12-2 and Chicago beat Seattle 6-1.

Toronto's John Cerutti, 5-6, allowed seven hits over eight innings in his first start since June 27. He was a late replacement for Dave Stieb, who had a blister on his pitching hand. Tom Henke got the final three outs for his 18th save.

George Bell, who argued with Williams after making an error Tuesday night — Bell's sixth in seven games — was benched in favor of Campusano.

Gary Gaetti hit his 23rd homer in the second to put the Twins ahead. Toronto scored twice in the fifth on Campusano's second homer of the season and Manny Lee's RBI double.

Barfield and McGriff hit consecutive home runs with two outs in the sixth, Barfield's eighth and McGriff's 22nd. It was Barfield's first homer in 16 games and the first back-to-back homers for the Blue Jays since June 2 against Boston.

Yankees 16, Brewers 3

Steve Winfield drove in five runs with two home runs and Tommy John pitched his 285th career victory after becoming the first pitcher to make three errors in an inning since J. Bentley Seymour of the New York Giants on May 21, 1898.

Winfield hit a three-run homer in the Yankees' four-run first and hit a two-run homer in the sixth as New York had 18 hits off three Milwaukee pitchers.

John, 8-3, allowed six hits in eight innings. Chris Bosio, 6-12, lost his ninth consecutive decision.

Tigers 3, Royals 1

Pat Sheridan singled home the go-ahead run and made a key defensive play, catching Frank White's sinking liner with runners on second and third in the sixth inning.

Doyle Alexander, 10-5, allowed nine hits and struck out three in 7 2-3 innings. Mike Henneman got the final four outs for his 15th save. Mark Gubicza, 12-6, allowed seven hits, walked four and struck out three in 7 2-3 innings.

Angels 9, Athletics 8

Brian Downing hit a game-winning triple in the 12th inning and Wally Joyner drove in six runs with two homers and a single.

Joyner hit a two-run homer in the first inning off Todd Burns and a three-run homer in the third, his seventh.

Donnie Moore, 4-2, pitched two innings for the victory. Jim Corsi, 0-1, was the loser.

Red Sox 10, Rangers 7

Kevin Romine singled in the go-ahead run during a three-run eighth inning as Boston won for the 13th time in 14 games under manager Joe Morgan.

Bob Stanley, 4-0, pitched one inning, allowing three runs. Lee Smith got the final four outs for his 16th save. Mitch Williams, 1-4, was the loser.

Ellis Burks hit a grand slam, his second this season and fourth of his career.

Indians 12, Orioles 2

Julio Franco doubled three times in the first three innings, drove in five runs and extended his hitting streak to 22 games, the longest in the AL this season.

Joe Carter hit a three-run homer for the Indians, who won their 11th consecutive game against Baltimore since last Aug. 10.

Tom Candiotti, 8-8, pitched an eight-hitter for his first victory in seven starts since June 19. Jose Bautista, 5-8, allowed six runs and six hits in 1 1-3 innings for the Orioles, who have lost nine of their last 11 games.

White Sox 6, Mariners 1

Daryl Boston's two-run single highlighted a three-run first inning as the Mariners, who replaced general manager Dick Balderson with Woody Woodward during the game, lost their fifth straight.

Melido Perez, 10-5, won his fourth straight start, becoming the first White Sox rookie to win 10 games since 1980. Bill Swift, 6-8, lost his fourth consecutive decision, giving up seven hits and walking five in 5 1-3 innings.

Babe Ruth

Kinston 6
Greenville 5

HOLLYWOOD — The Kinston/Lenoir All-Stars took an early lead Wednesday night then had to hold on late to claim a 6-5 victory over the Greenville All-Stars in the Eastern North Carolina Babe Ruth (13-15) Baseball Tournament.

Kinston built a 6-0 lead after the first three innings by scoring a single run in the second inning and five more in the third frame.

Greenville got on the scoreboard in the fourth inning with a pair of runs to close to within 6-2. Toure Claiborne and Grant Harmon each scored for Greenville in the inning. Greenville closed the margin to 6-4 in the sixth inning when Billy Shivers and Mitch Jones each scored.

Al DiBiase scored in the seventh inning for Greenville with one out and the bases loaded to close the Kinston lead to 6-5. Strikeouts, however, by Matthew Cagle and Ludwick Johnson ended the Greenville rally.

Josh Potter took the loss on the mound for Greenville as he pitched the first three innings before giving way to Grant Harmon, who pitched shutout ball from the fourth inning on.

Kinston will now advance to regional competition to be held next week in Vienna, Va.

Qualifying To Start For Talladega 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Rusty Wallace, the NASCAR points leader, would like to win his first poll position of the year. But he said it's not really important where he is when the green flag drops for Sunday's Talladega 500.

Wallace and 55 other stock car drivers were scheduled to begin qualifying today at Alabama International Motor Speedway, with Bill Elliott will be seeking his third straight NASCAR victory.

"We would like to win the poll," Wallace told The Montgomery Advertiser. "We haven't won one this season and we would really like to pick the first one up here."

But he is also realistic about his chances.

"A good spot for us to start this thing would be in the top 10," the Missouri native said. "That's a realistic goal. Besides, qualifying means very, very little at this track and at Daytona."

"Look what happened at the Firecracker 400 (at Daytona) this month. Bill (Elliott) started almost dead last and ended up winning the damn thing."

Elliott also won last Sunday's Summer 500 race at Long Pond, Penn., to narrow Wallace's lead in the Winston Cup race to three points. Defending national champion Dale Earnhardt is 48 points off the pace.

"The thing has gotten too close," Wallace said. "We had everything our way going into Daytona for the Firecracker. We had a 130-point lead that slipped back to 87. ... Then we go to Pocono and the 87-point lead is three when the race is over."

Davey Allison, whose father Bobby has been hospitalized in Pennsylvania since a serious accident in a race last month, was the fastest qualifier at AIMS for the Winston 500 in May. Eleven times the same driver has been the fastest qualifier in both races.

Elliott, however, holds the qualifying records at the 2.66-mile superspeedway. His 209.005 mph in 1986 was the fastest qualifying speed for this race, and his 212.809 effort for the 1987 Winston 500 is the track record for qualifying.

The drivers practiced Wednesday at AIMS. Darrell Waltrip turned in the fastest time, 195.429, followed by Geoff Bodine at 194.658 and Phil Parsons — who won the Winston 500 at AIMS earlier this year — at 193.885.

Neil Bonnett, who had surgery July 5 to remove his gall bladder and appendix and missed the Summer 500, turned in a speed of 193.768 mph, the fourth-fastest practice round of the day.

"I rode a couple of laps and I felt," said Bonnett, a native of New York, "that we'll just have to play it safe, because if it (driving) jars around too much, we won't do it."

Bonnett said he is almost "completely well for the first time in about a year." But as a precautionary measure, Morgan Shepherd also practiced in Bonnett's Pontiac Wednesday and could start the race or relieve him during the 500-mile event.

The Talladega 500 starts at 12:15 p.m. (CDT) Sunday. On Saturday, the ARCA Permatex 500K will be held at AIMS.

Manley Suspension To End August 26

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Washington Redskins defensive end Dexter Manley, suspended for 30 days by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for violating the league's substance abuse act, may not miss a football game this season.

"I have instructed Dexter Manley to remain out of the Redskins' training camp until Aug. 26," Rozelle said Wednesday in a statement issued through spokesman Joe Browne. That would make Manley eligible to play Sept. 5 when the Redskins open defense of their Super Bowl championship against the New York Giants.

Manley said "there's no question" he'll be ready by that time, and the Redskins' coaching staff also expressed optimism that he would be ready to go by then.

Manley, 30, missed most of training camp in 1986 as a holdout, but returned shortly before the regular season and went on to notch 18 sacks and earn a trip to the Pro Bowl for the only time in his seven-year career.

But while Redskins officials and Manley's teammates will welcome him back with open arms, they still are anxious for the troubled veteran to get his off-the-field life together.

"My personal hope and the Redskins' hope is that Dexter can get his personal problems and his life straightened out," Washington general manager Bobby Beathard said. "All we'd like to see is for things to turn out well for Dexter."

Defensive tackle Dean Hamel, who has played beside Manley, said, "You only play football for 10 years. When he's out of the public eye, then what's he going to do? He's not going to get pampered... I just hope he gets his life straightened out."

While the league did not characterize the move as a suspension, Browne said that Manley had been notified that he had involuntarily been placed on the team's non-football injury list.

In 1987, Manley underwent treatment for alcohol abuse at the Hazelden Institute in Minnesota. He met with Rozelle last Friday after it was reported that an illegal substance turned up in a drug test. Neither the league nor Manley has been willing to reveal specifics of the test.

"People are going to make rumors, and that's OK with me," Manley told a television station in a paid interview. "But I know what the situation was, and I know that everything is behind me."

Manley's attorney, Bob Woolf, said his client would not have to undergo rehabilitation as part of the condition of the suspension.

"They're not suggesting any rehabilitation," Woolf said. "But he will continue on aftercare (from his stay at Hazelden). He'll be doing that for the rest of his life."

Woolf said Manley would abide by Rozelle's decision, and he said the commissioner probably abstained from dealing with Manley in harsher terms because of the manner in which they responded to the inquiry.

"We gave the commissioner all the facts, and I think he was appreciative that Dexter was so cooperative," Woolf said. "Also, I think he respected the fact that Dexter is a hard-working person who leads a productive life."

On a day when they learned they would soon be getting one defensive end back, the Redskins lost another. Markus Koch, Washington's top draft pick in 1986, voluntarily left the team to work for his uncle as a carpenter in Canada, according to Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs.

"It's a total shock to everybody," Gibbs said. "He said he had been thinking about it for quite a while. He kind of lost his desire to play football."

Koch had been moved to linebacker during the team's minicamp in May. He played the position at training camp until Tuesday, when Gibbs decided to move him back to end pending a decision on Manley.

"He told me he had no complaints about money or the position change," Beathard said. "He just told me he had a change of heart."

Said Hamel, Koch's roommate: "He told me one time, 'Why don't we sell everything, Dean, and go down to Florida and get a charter boat and do that for the rest of our lives. Why do this?'"

"He told me before that this year was going to be his last," Hamel said. "In fact, he told me that again today, hours before I found out he left."

With Manley out and Koch gone, the Redskins have only five defensive ends in camp: Pro Bowler Charles Mann, a starter on the left side, the oft-injured Steve Hamilton, and three rookies.

"I'm not counting on bringing someone else in," Gibbs said. "We're counting on someone here getting the opportunity to play."

On Manley, Gibbs said, "Obviously, it could be better but it could be worse. He means a lot to us. I talked to him today and he said he really missed being here and we really miss him."

Manley had met with Rozelle earlier this year to discuss his off-field behavior. At that time, Manley was ordered to comply with a list of guidelines, and his meeting with Rozelle last week came as a result of violation of those rules.

Manley had been "excused" from training camp pending the results of the investigation.

"Dexter told me he brought this on himself," Gibbs said. "He said he didn't take it as seriously as he should have (because) it was the off-season."

Interestingly, Manley also missed much of last year's training camp due to a knee injury.

Asked if Manley could play in the opener against the Giants, defensive line coach Vern Torgeson said, "He could probably play part-time, maybe full-time. It shouldn't bother him that much."

King Is Happy To Just Be Playing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stacey King has not been the center of attention at the U.S. men's Olympic basketball camp and that's just fine with him.

The 6-foot-9 senior-to-be at Oklahoma has been publicly overshadowed throughout the selection process by David Robinson, the veteran who was considered a starter by almost everyone around the team, and by Alonzo Mourning, the outstanding shot-blocker who is attempting to become the first high school player on a U.S. men's Olympic basketball team.

"I basically just go out and show myself and play hard and that's what I like to do," said King, who averaged 22 points and eight rebounds last season as the Sooners advanced to the NCAA Tournament's Final Four. "Whether I guard David or Danny (Manning), I play hard all the time and if I can continue to do that with consistency I think maybe I might have a chance. If I don't, I might not make the team."

King, who said he has been working out mostly at power forward and center, hasn't minded not being in the pivot spotlight.

"I like to keep that low profile," he said with a laugh. "I'm not saying I like to shy away from the press or anything. Even though at Oklahoma I get the press, here there are the big names. I just want fit in, stay low key, get the job done and do whatever it takes to make the team. I just want to go out there and do what I can."

King's work habits are one of the things Olympic coach John Thompson mentions when asked about the Lawton, Okla. native and they are impressive.

"I came down and practiced with Select Team and those were very intense," said King, who by virtue of being selected to attend this camp wasn't required to take part in the Select Team drills. "I knew they would be more intense now with the final 20 guys. We're the last team assembled for the Games and we'll have to work extra hard."

Thompson has been putting the players through two-a-day practices in the camp that began July 17 and will break on Aug. 6.

"Sometimes I think about how hard we're working and you can't believe it, but you keep going because this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," King said. "I am giving 110 percent because I wouldn't be satisfied as a person if I didn't."

King doesn't care whether he plays facing the basket or in the post.

"I'm comfortable at either one," he said. "It doesn't matter where he wants me to play. If he wants to play on the bench and cheer, I'll do that."

Playing in the system of coach Billy Tubbs at Oklahoma was an advantage for King throughout the selection process run by Thompson.

"The two are similar in style defensively because they both like the pressure so much," King said. "They both like players who force the action and that's also the way I like to play."

King has already gained personally from his brief Olympic experience.

"On the court here, it's very competitive and that's natural because they want to prove they're better and that brings out the best in everybody," he said. "Off the court, we are the best of friends, we get along great, we hang around together and I have made some good friends."

"You see some of these guys on TV and never think you'll get a chance to meet them. You treat them as movie stars on TV but when you meet them, they're regular people. They have fun, they like to laugh. It's really neat and I'm having a really good time."

Bonds from first base in the 10th inning and Pittsburgh won at St. Louis. Bonds got a one-out walk from Ken Dayley, 2-5, and Lind followed with his second double of the game.

Jeff Robinson, 8-2, got the victory and Jim Gott earned his 17th save.

Pirates backup catcher Junior Ortiz broke his left collarbone while making a diving catch on a foul popup. He will miss six to eight weeks.

Expos 5, Cubs 4
Mike Fitzgerald, who hit a grand slam in the 11th inning to win Tuesday night's game, got a game-winning single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to again lift Montreal over Chicago.

The host Expos rallied for two runs in the ninth against three pitchers. Hubie Brooks tied the score with an RBI grounder, Tim Wallach was intentionally walked to load the bases and Fitzgerald singled off Rich Gossage.

Joe Hesketh, 2-1, got the victory and Pat Perry, 4-3, took the loss.

Reds 3, Braves 2
Nick Esasky, who lives in an Atlanta suburb during the off-season, hit a home run with two outs in the ninth inning as Cincinnati beat the host Braves.

Esasky connected on a 0-2 pitch from Jose Alvarez, 3-4, for his ninth homer of the season and second in two nights. Esasky began the night batting .383 with 12 homers in his career at Atlanta.

Danny Jackson, 13-5, won for the sixth time in seven decisions and John Franco got his 20th save.

Astros 4, Padres 1
Kevin Bass hit a pair of two-run homers as Houston stopped its 11-game losing streak at San Diego. Jack Murphy Stadium.

Bass connected both times against Ed Whitson, 9-6, whose career-high six-game winning streak was snapped. Bass started the game just 3-for-17 lifetime against Whitson.

 East followed a perfectly sound dictum in the defense of this hand, only to discover that he had handed declarer his vulnerable game. South ignored another and landed his contract.

Note that North was quite content to bid one no trump over the spade overall. Normally, this is a forward-going response, showing 8-10 points, although on this specific auction it could be somewhat lighter since North is bidding under space pressure.

West led the queen of spades, and had South blindly obeyed the tenet of covering an honor with an honor, he would probably have been defeated. East would have won the trick, and the shift to the jack of clubs would have been automatic. That would have netted the first four tricks for the defenders.

However, declarer realized that the contract was threatened only if East were to gain the lead. To prevent that, he played low from dummy. East remembered the proverb: "Waste not, want not," and signalled encouragement with the eight. Declarer ruffed the spade continuation, drew trumps and discarded two clubs on dummy's diamonds, making an overtrick.

Had East thought of "penny wise, pound foolish," he might have beaten the hand. Since West surely had a five-card suit for his overall, the defenders were never going to collect more than one trick in the suit. To defeat the game, they had to get three tricks in the minor suits, and only one was possible in diamonds. Therefore, at least two had to come from clubs. The only hope for the defenders was for East to rise with the ace of spades at trick one, even though that would set up the king for a discard. The jack of clubs through would then have forced South to bow the knee.

PUBLIC NOTICE
Bayliner Marine Corporation
 Seattle, Washington

Bayliner has now completed all 1988 boat production. No further 1988 product will be produced for any UG dealership. Over 40 brand new, slightly scratched or previously displayed boats remain in excess storage.

FOR THE FIRST TIME EVER, by special contracted negotiations, Bayliner Marine Corporation is proud to announce the award of the "liquidation" for these final '88 model boats, exclusively to one local dealership;

B&K Marine
 1205 Dickinson Avenue
 Greenville, NC 27834
 919-752-2882

We emphasize, this is not a "sale". Never in history has this major boat manufacturer authorized "liquidation" of close-out inventory in Greenville. Over 40 new boats will be available at used boat prices.

FULL FACTORY WARRANTY
 In fairness to all, all boats will be available for sale or reservation starting Wednesday, July 27th.

SKI, FISHING, CABIN BOATS
 Limited availability on most models, all sales by first come first serve basis. This advertisement is local area only, but past experience in other states prompt us to advise earliest inspection to assure specific model availability.

Cost-Effective
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Low-income rural homeowners who receive federal mortgage subsidies have excellent repayment records and benefit from a more stable family life, a private study of 894 households has found.
 The study by the non-profit Housing Assistance Council also said the Farmers Home Administration's low-income home ownership program is cost-effective and should be expanded.
 Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, said the study released Wednesday proves the program has succeeded in "the very toughest, hardscrabble places" and that the poor are neither lazy nor irresponsible and hopeless.
 Subsidies to participants in the program declined over a five-year period as their incomes increased, and the number of children living below the poverty level decreased, the study said.
 The council tracked 894 sample families nationwide who obtained subsidized mortgages in 1981 and concluded the rural homeownership program "represents a cost-effective strategy to provide decent shelter to low-income households and to assist them in overcoming the burden of poverty."
