Budget Deficit Expected To Exceed Projections

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says the federal deficit will be $5.6 billion higher than it predicted back in February, with the government's red ink now estimated to total $152.3 billion this fiscal year.

While the new administration estimate announced Thursday is higher, it is still below the more gloomy projections earlier this year by many private economists, who were forecasting a deficit of $160 billion or worse.

Those economists have been busy revising their own figures, and some now say the administration's new deficit forecast for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 may actually be too pessimistic.

As the year began, the administration predicted the overall economy as measured by the gross national product would expand at a sluggish 2.4 percent rate. The new budget has boosted that GNP estimate to 3 percent.

The higher growth this year has helped push the unemployment rate down to a 14-year-low of 5.3 percent. More people working means more tax revenues for Uncle Sam.

Tax revenues are expected to be $4.2 billion higher than the administration's February projection, according to the new report.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said he is now predicting the 1988 deficit will total $145 billion based on the gains in tax revenues which have already occurred.

David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., said he is forecasting a deficit this year of $151 billion, slightly lower than the administration's estimate.

The administration is calling for the deficit in the next fiscal year to decline to $140.1 billion, an estimate that private economists say is generally in line with their own forecasts.

That deficit estimate is $5.9 billion below the $146 billion level which would trigger automatic spending cuts as required by the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law.

Lawmakers To Polish Drought Bill

MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers are promising to iron out House and Senate differences over a $6 billion drought-relief package in a quick flurry of action next week and speed the measure on to President Reagan's desk.

"My opinion is that the president would accept this bill as it is passed today, although there have been some things he objects to," Sen.

Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., said Thursday after 94-0 Senate passage of the bill.

The House had approved its version 368-29 a few hours earlier after scaling back a plan to increase milk price supports, a proposal widely criticized as excessively favoring the dairy industry.

The revised version would impose a temporary increase for three months next year. Milk price supports previously had been scheduled to decrease on Jan. 1.

Senators tightened up a similarly controversial benefit in their bill that would allow companies that make ethanol for fuel to buy corn from government surplus bins at what could shape up as a substantial discount.

However, there were still warnings that Congress was flirting with budget trouble by inserting special benefits for constituents back home into the measure.

The House, urged by Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, acted to cap the price tag of its bill at $5.8 billion.

The Senate had no comparably firm figure. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said latest estimates put the cost of the Senate measure at between $5.85 billion and $6.55 billion.

Gramm warned that running over a $5.8 billion ceiling calculated under the Gramm-Rudman budget law would set off nasty fiscal and political repercussions.

At the heart of the bill are provisions that would provide disaster payments to farmers equal to 65 percent of losses beyond 35 percent of expected harvest. Many dairy and livestock producers would become eligible for benefits under an expanded government feed aid program.

Farmers especially hard hit by the drought would get supplemental payments under both House and Senate bills.

A number of other points remain to be resolved when lawmakers meet in a House-Senate conference committee next week. The House version requires farmers to buy federal crop insurance for each of the next two years if they are to be eligible for disaster payments this year.

The Senate version does not contain such a provision, which is opposed by both the Reagan administration and a wide array of major crop producer groups.

Both bills would cancel a 50-cent cent in the milk price-support level scheduled for Jan. 1 but the House version would go beyond that. The House provision would raise the price-support level from April through June 1989 by 50 cents, to $11.10 cents for each 100 pounds of milk.

Dairy-state lawmakers wanted even more, pushing for a permanent increase.

"This is a most dangerous and wrongheaded precedent," Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., said in opposing the measure. He said it was unfair to provide such aid to dairymen and not also to cattle, sheep and poultry producers, who must pay the same increased feed costs.

The House, however, voted 217-181 for the temporary increase, a compromise sponsored by Reps. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., and Tim Penny, D-Minn.

House conferees are going to be looking hard at a Senate provision that would allow the nation's ethanol makers to purchase surplus grain from government bins at 110 percent of the Agriculture Department's acquisition cost. Much of the govern-

Jones New UNC Board Chairman

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Robert L. "Roddy" Jones, a graduate of East Carolina University, today was unanimously elected chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina.

Jones, who turned 52 today, graduated from ECU in 1958 and later served as chairman of that school's board of trustees. He had been a member of the UNC Board of Governors since 1979. He is currently chairman of the board's governance committee.

A Raleigh native and local developer, Jones succeeds Philip Carson of Asheville, whose four-year term ends in 1989. Jones' term will expire in 1991, and he is not eligible for re-election.

In brief remarks to the 31-member board today at the UNC General Administration building in Chapel Hill, Jones said he has not set an agenda for his term because it has already been established.

"I think our agendas are somewhat set for us by the institutions we represent and the people we represent," he said.

Saying he was not happy with North Carolina's standing in academic statistics, Jones said he would hope to work with other colleges and

Hallock Is Named Dean Of ECU Medical School

Dr. James A. Hallock, a pediatrician and academic administrator at the University of South Florida College of Medicine, was confirmed today by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors as the new dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

He will assume his duties as dean in early September.

"This is an exciting opportunity for me and I am delighted about coming to live and work in Greenville," Hallock said.

"This is a chance for me to take my philosophy of medical education and employ it in carrying out the three-fold mission of the ECU School of Medicine — providing health care to the region, education to primary care physicians and increasing minority access to medical education."

Hallock said his chief goal will be "maintaining ECU as a first-class medical school and moving it ahead."

Hallock, 45, will succeed Dr. William E. Laupus, who has been dean of the medical school since it was founded as a four-year institution in 1975. Laupus, who holds a dual post as medical school dean and vice chancellor for health sciences at

DR. JAMES A. HALLOCK

ECU, will continue to serve as vice chancellor.

A native of Patterson, N.J., Hallock has spent most of his professional career at the USF campus in Tampa. His rise through faculty and administrative ranks has coincided with the development of the USF College of Medicine, which admitted its first class of students in 1971, the year before he arrived.

Hallock has had direct experience in a variety of administrative areas, including hospital affiliations; undergraduate, graduate and continuing medical education; physical plant and capital fund development; fiscal affairs; research and graduate studies; accreditation; and student affairs.

As professor of pediatrics and associate dean, he has, for the last three years, been responsible for developing and supervising medical college clinical programs at affiliated hospitals in St. Petersburg.

Elections Issue Back With Pitt Board

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — The Pitt County Board of Elections will have to conduct further investigations into election irregularities in the D.D. Garrett-James H. Dupree county commissioner race before the state board will deliver a ruling.

At a meeting in Raleigh today, the state Board of Elections unanimously approved a motion to remand the issue back to the county board for investigation into new findings that 22 Republicans and unaffiliated voters participated in the May 31 Democratic primary runoff between Garrett and Dupree.

"I regret we were not able to address the issue today," said state board Chairman Robert Hunter of Greensboro. "Hopefully, the Pitt County board will be able to finish the findings of fact (by the state board's next meeting Aug. 26 in Greensboro).

"I think our discussion may have given the people involved some indication of how the wind blows," he said.

Only registered Democrats were qualified to participate in the primary runoff for a county commissioner seat from Consolidated District A. Garrett won the election by two votes, but has not been certified as the winner.

Hunter at first made a motion to order a new election, but such a motion requires support from four of the five board members to pass, and there was opposition.

Hunter's motion for a new election was based only on election irregularities previously cited by Dupree, and not on ineligible voters. The county board did not find out ineligible voters participated until after its June 21 hearing to consider Dupree's complaints.

"I think there's enough evidence in this case to call for a new election," Hunter said.

Board member William A. Marsh Jr. of Durham said he was not willing to support a motion for a new election, because the county board has not investigated the issue of ineligible voters.

With the two-vote margin, the previous complaints filed by Dupree might be sufficient to call for a new election. But Garrett's attorney, David F. Kirby of Raleigh, claimed that most of the ineligible voters were Dupree supporters, and if that proves true, Marsh said Garrett's margin of victory may be much more than two votes.

County election records show 18 Republicans and four unaffiliated voters voted in the race. Sixteen of the votes came in the Carolina, Bethel and Belvoir precincts, which Dupree won handily.

Marsh said he does not expect the county board to ask the voters how they cast their ballots, which would

In The Area

Chapter Formed

The Eastern Carolina chapter of the Air Force Association has been formed and is seeking contact with all former members of the U.S. Air Force living in Pitt, Martin, Beaufort and Pamlico counties.

Charter Night for the group is set for Aug. 17 at a site to be announced.

At a recent organizational meeting, officers were elected. They are Dennis M. Biggs, president; R.F. Qualliotine, vice president; Robert A. Chin, secretary, and Graydon W. Tripp, treasurer. A board of directors is yet to be elected and will represent all areas of the chapter jurisdiction.

Biggs said there are more than 300 former Air Force members in eastern North Carolina eligible for membership in the AFA chapter. Individuals still on active duty, Civil Service personnel, members of reserve forces, cadets and others may also be eligible, he said. The Air Force Association, an independent, civilian non-profit organization, was established in 1946. Six Men Arrested

Six men were arrested by Greenville police Thursday in connection with four break-ins reported to the department since early in June.

Detective S.B. Pass said Raymond Jerry Payeska, 21, of Route 1, Bethel, was charged with two counts of breaking, entering and larceny in connection with a June 8 break-in at Athletic World at Carolina East Mall and with a June 11 break-in at Charles Shop at Carolina East.

Detective D.R. Best said Stacy Lee Davis, 18, of 1921 Norcott Circle, Charles Avery Joyner, 16, of 1903 Norcott Cir., and Carlton David Harris, 17, of 1925B Norcott Cir., were arrested on breaking, entering and larceny charges in connection with a break-in at Riverside Oyster Bar on N. Greene Street on July 11.

Best also said two men were arrested on multiple charges in connection with a July 11 break-in at Bill Askew Motors on Memorial Drive, where three cars were reported taken.

According to Best, Bobby Warren Joyner, 22, of 1903 Norcott Circle was arrested on two counts of breaking, entering and larceny and two counts of felonious larceny in connection with the case, while James Earl Davis, 19, of 1921A Norcott Circle, was charged with breaking, entering and larceny and with auto larceny in connection with the incident.

Detour Just Today

Morning drivers who usually turn onto 5th Street from Reade Circle were forced to take a slightly different route to work today.

Employees of the city's Public Works department placed barricades at the intersection and redirected traffic to allow workers to remove a dead tree along the side of 5th Street opposite the East Carolina University campus.

Public Works Director Mayo Allen said crews were removing the tree before branches began falling and becoming a danger to drivers.

Allen said the procedure should be completed by the end of today.

Board To Meet

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 9 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Sing Out Planned

Greenville Peace will sponsor a sing-out-for-peace at 6 a.m. Sunday at the Peace Tree, in the Town Commons near Green Street.

Benson Appointed

Dr. Nicholas H. Benson, assistant professor of emergency medicine, East Carolina University School of Medicine, has been appointed medical director of the North Carolina Office of Emergency Medical Services in Raleigh.

Benson, medical director and program director of the EastCare emergency helicopter transport system at ECU and Pitt County Memorial Hospital, will work with state EMS officials as an advisor about one day a week.

The state EMS office oversees the delivery of emergency medical care in both the prehospital phase and in the hospital through regulating regional trauma centers and poison control centers. It also maintains

Thefts Reported

Greenville police said six thefts, including a car and two bicycles, were reported to the department Thursday.

Officer B.W. Lewis said a 1985 Chevrolet was taken from Cox Armature on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 7:48 a.m., while other officers said a bicycle was taken from B13 Langston Park Apartments in an incident reported at 10:15 a.m.

Officer W.S. Heath said a love seat valued at $650 was taken from the First Christian Church on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 10:20 a.m., while Officer T.L. Forrest said a wallet containing $7 in cash was taken from a vehicle parked at 103B S. Meade St. in an incident reported at 3:16 p.m.

Officer C.G. Alphin said a bicycle was taken from an apartment at 1600 Willow St. in an incident reported at 3:51 p.m., while Officer C.S. Candler said several compact disks were taken from E8 Oakmont Square Apartments in an incident reported at 5:18 p.m.

Four Arrested

Police arrested four people in connection with thefts from three stores in Greenville on Thursday.

Officer B.W. Lewis said Charles Ray Dixon, 33, of 203B Roundtree Dr., Steven Ray Barrett, 31, of Route 8, Greenville, and Maureen Barrett, 29, of Route 1, Greenville, were arrested on larceny charges in connection with the theft of eight cartons of cigarettes from the Rose's store at Stanton Square Shopping Center about 1:51 p.m.

Officer R.J. Brewington said Terry Earl Phillips, 37, of Bridgeton, was charged about 9 p.m. with shoplifting in connection with the theft of $23.49 worth of meat from the Food Lion grocery on Red Banks Road and the theft of $40.95 worth of meat from the Food Lion at University Square shopping center on E. 10th Street.

Members Recognized

Two members of the Greenville Board of Adjustment whose terms have expired were recognized for their efforts at Thursday's monthly Board of Adjustment meeting.

Dr. David A. Stevens and Melvin C. McLawhorn received plaques of appreciation on behalf of the Greenville City Council for dedication and devotion to the board and to the citizens of the Greenville area.

Stevens has served on the board since December 1982, serving as chairman from January 1986 until July 1987 and as vice-chairman from May 1985 until January 1986.

McLawhorn has served on the board since September 1981.

City To Be Host

Greenville will host next year's annual conference of the North Carolina Chiefs of Police Association, Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond said.

The conference is scheduled for Feb. 5-7.

Tesmond said details of the conference are undetermined; preparations are under way.

Board Gives Permit For Treatment Unit

A substance-abuse treatment center will be allowed to locate along Chestnut Street following action Thursday by the Greenville Board of Adjustment.

The board agreed at its regular monthly meeting at City Hall to issue a special-use permit to the Pitt County Mental Health Center and Charles Elks to operate an Adolescent Substance Abuse Treatment Program at 1328 Chestnut St.

The property involved is zoned CDF (commercial downtown fringe).

The board also granted, with conditions, a special-use permit to Derek P. Dunn and J. Auburn Hall Jr. to build 176 multi-family units within an eight-lot subdivision of 9.8 acres, using land-use-intensity development standards. The units are projected to be built in 16 separate buildings.

The property is on the north side of SW Greenville Boulevard, approximately 150 feet west of Laughinghouse Drive, and is zoned R-6 (high-density residential).

The board granted the permit under the conditions the petitioners agree to place a fence along the east and west property lines adjacent to single-family residential property; to adopt various stairway modifications to enhance appearance, to build a recreation area before a building permit is issued for the project's fifth building, and to make the recreation area available to all of the complex's residents.

In other action Thursday, the board granted a special-use permit to James Arthur Brown to maintain the operation of a nightclub at 814 W. Fifth St. and allowed the owner to expand the nightclub's activity area; granted a special use permit to RCNC Inc. and Phillip K. Flowers to operate an unoffensive manufacturing business (assembly of plastic products) at 101 W. 14th St.; granted a special use permit to Greenville Professional Development Service Corporation and James M. Williamson to operate a real-estate school for prelicensing instruction in the Wilcar Building, 223 W. 10th St., and granted a special use permit to Morco Realty and Archie L. Edwards to construct a National Guard MASH Unit on the north side of Mumford Road, approximately .51 miles west of the Pactolus Highway and across the street from Venters Grill and the Quail Hollow Mobile Home Park.

Dukakis Makes Push For Blue-Collar Support

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Michael Dukakis courted blue-collar voters and Jesse Jackson supporters today in Michigan, a state that Jackson won during the primary season, as Vice President George Bush made another push for his child-care plan and continued his search for a running mate.

Dukakis' running mate Lloyd Bentsen was on a solo voyage for the Democratic ticket, wooing independent-minded Westerners whose suspicion of big government previously drew them to President Reagan.

In Washington, Reagan approved a 30-day extension of Secret Service protection for Jackson, at a cost that Reagan's spokesman estimated at $600,000. He said the protection would end Aug. 22.

Marlin Fitzwater said Jackson's request was "based on his assessments of threats against his life and his plan to be an active participant" in the campaign.

Dukakis toured a General Motors plant in Flint, driving a Chevy Blazer off the assembly line, and then spoke to several hundred United Auto Workers, many of them laid off from other plants, outside their union hall.

He said full employment would be his No. 1 priority as president, and he told the autoworkers that something must be done about the hard times that have lingered in parts of the nation as the economy has recovered on both coasts.

"If there's one thing I want to do as president of the United States, it's to bring those kind of jobs and that kind of future to every community in the United States," he said. "You need a president who will work with you, a president who won't settle for second-best or second-rate."

Bush told reporters today that he expects to select a running mate before the Republican National Convention next month in New Orleans but "I will keep my own counsel" on the selection.

While saying that his choice for the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket was important, Bush said, "I really believe the election will be decided at the presidential level."

Asked whether there were any prospective running mates left to be contacted by him, Bush said, "Maybe."

The vice president spoke with reporters as he toured a company-sponsored child care center in Tysons Corner, Va., near Washington.

Bush, who has proposed a $1,000-per-child tax credit primarily aimed at low-income working mothers, voiced opposition to a $2.5 billion Democratic child care plan that gives the federal government a more direct role.

"I am absolutely convinced the problem is so big and so diverse that the federal government alone cannot have a bricks-and-mortar child care program that's going to be effective. You have to have choice, parental choice, family choice, and you have to have diversity," Bush said.

Dukakis, who lost Michigan to Jackson but went on to secure the nomination with a string of primary victories, said to a crowd of about 500 people when he arrived in Flint Thursday night, "I don't care who you were with in the primary, you're all Democrats."

Also in Michigan today, John Jacob, president of the National Urban League, said in Detroit that Bush had declined an invitation to address next week's league conference. Dukakis will appear before the group

Monday night and Jesse Jackson will speak Wednesday.

As for Bush's running mate, the vice president says he hopes to have a tentative list completed by week's end, but plans to delay his final selection until the Republican National Convention on Aug. 15-18. "The process is going along in an orderly fashion," he said Thursday.

Those reached include former rivals Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, Dole's wife, former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, and several whose names did not figure in earlier speculation. Among those are Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind.

Campaign sources said Bush's list to date also includes Sens. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., William L. Armstrong, R-Colo.; John Danforth, R-Mo. and Nancy L. Kassebaum, R-Kan.; Govs. Thomas H. Kean of New Jersey, John Sununu of New Hampshire, Carroll A. Campbell of South Carolina and George Deukmejian of California; and former Govs. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee and Richard Thornburg of Pennsylvania, who recently was nominated by President Reagan to be attorney general.

Bentsen, in a speech Thursday in Reno, Nev., told the National Conference of State Legislators, "If there is one lesson we have learned in recent years, it is that the federal government can't solve all of the (nation's) problems."

Mindful of Dukakis' promise of an activist government, he added, "But Washington can lead."

Jackson, no longer a presidential candidate, returned to his brand of diplomacy, saying he has asked the United Nations secretary-general to ask Iranian officials for assistance in freeing U.S. hostages held by Iranian sympathizers in Lebanon.

Dukakis said he was unfamiliar with the facts about Jackson's effort, "but as a general matter private citizens should not try to conduct foreign policy."

Dukakis' post-convention high in the polls continued Thursday, as a Harris poll gave him an 18-point lead over Bush. But pollster Louis Harris said such a wide margin was likely to be temporary.

Harris' survey of 1,268 likely voters found 57 percent support for Dukakis to 39 percent for Bush. It was the fourth national poll since the Democratic convention last week to find a Dukakis lead of that magnitude.

The new Harris poll was done July 22-25 and had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

AT&T Courts Local Business Customers

Representatives of AT&T, the nation's largest long-distance telephone company, met Thursday with about 150 Greenville area business people at the Hilton Inn in hopes of keeping them as customers when equal access becomes a reality here Oct. 29.

"We hope you will continue to use AT&T," Larry Webber of Atlanta, AT&T's southern region vice president told the gathering. "But the most important thing is to make an affirmative choice."

"Don't let somebody else make the decision for you."

Webber said AT&T has been providing long-distance service to Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co. customers in the Greenville area for more than 70 years.

But this month, telephone customers in the Greenville area will receive a ballot from Carolina Telephone allowing them to choose which of several long-distance companies they want.

Among the companies on the ballot are AT&T, MCI, Sprint and Carolina Telephone Long Distance (a relatively new, long-distance arm of CT&T which also provides local telephone service in eastern North Carolina).

But Webber said AT&T would "like to continue to be a partner with you."

"We have a significant commitment in North Carolina," he added, pointing out that the company has over 11,000 employees in the state.

"Why do we think AT&T is the right choice for you?" Webber asked. "We've been your long-distance company for years."

"AT&T is backed by the finest technology in the world," he added. "We are the only (long distance) company in the world that has a full range of products."

"Look at our technology. Look at our prices. We are competitive and in some cases lower. All companies are within 3 percent to five percent of each other."

"Compare. Where do you call? When do you call. Ask the carriers and compare service," Webber suggested. "We'll be lower in some cases. In some, others will be lower."

"Certainly the process is confusing," Webber said.

"Make your choice. Be sure to fill out and return the official ballot. Don't let somebody else choose for you."

Any telephone customer who does not choose a long-distance company will be randomly assigned to one of the companies on the official ballot.

Some 75 million telephone customers nationwide have had to choose a company for long-distance service since 1984, when equal access first began.

Webber, responding to questions after the meeting, pointed out that there are over 500 long-distance companies nationwide. He said 60 percent of the nation's telephone customers have chosen AT&T for long distance service.

MCI ranks as the second-largest long-distance company, while Sprint is third largest.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Just Wishing

ECU Project List Long, Expensive

East Carolina's "wish list" of capital improvements projects to be requested for the 1989-91 biennium certainly won't come true. Nevertheless some high priority projects from the $157.9 million requests are likely to be realized.

There is $66.68 million in requests for the School of Medicine including: $11 million for land acquisition; $6.63 million for a vivarium addition; $6.83 million for an additional biotechnology building; $3.15 million for a technical services facility; $2.59 million to expand the regional rehabilitation center and $1.82 for an expansion of the health sciences library.

Also $11.38 million (self-liquidating) for an outpatient center; $8.32 million in non-state funds for a medical communications center; $7.81 million in non-state money to expand the radiation oncology center; $5.71 million to complete the biotechnology laboratory building, and $88,500 for a wellness-health center.

ECU's main east campus lists totals over $71 million and includes: $24.41 million for Joyner Library addition; $1.32 million for campus grounds lighting, elevators in five buildings, renovation to two classroom buildings and new air conditioning chillers for three classroom facilities; $5.39 million for a new administration building; $4.17 million for Memorial Gymnasium renovation, and $2.81 million addition to the home economics-nursing building.

Also: $1.21 million for steam plant improvements; $1.57 million to renovate the Graham Building; $1.48 million for renovations of the biology building; $1.15 million for a warehouse; $3.25 million for an automated energy management system, and $796,000 for Messick Theatre renovation.

There are also requests for $11 million for land acquisition, $3.88 million in self liquidating funds for the student health center and $15.06 million for a student recreation-physical education center.

It's an impressive list and if it were all to be granted it would yield an unprecedented building boom for the campus.

However, the requests will have to be weighed against capital improvement requests from the other university campuses and the University of North Carolina Board of Governors will make recommendations based on that. Then capital improvements for the university system will be balanced against funds available for all state capital improvements projects before final appropriations are made by the state legislature which will consider a budget recommended by the governor.

Obviously there will be much paring of ECU's requests before that final budget is approved. Yet we can see from the list that much in the way of capital improvements is needed by the School of Medicine. There are also pressing needs on the main campus and even one project such as the library addition can call for large state expenditures. Property purchases for the growing university and the medical school are going to be essential.

While East Carolina won't get all it is requesting, many of its pressing capital improvements needs must be met if the University and the medical school are to meet their obligations to the public.

A Tasty And Bountiful Crop For Pitt

Of course peaches have pits, but did you know Pitt has peaches?

Farm agents say there are only 18 acres of the fruit known to be in commercial production in Pitt County, but the crop will be a fine one.

As with the rest of the state, the peach crop here escaped a killing frost this year during the critical flowering time. That means there is a tasty and bountiful local crop on sale at the Farmers Market.

Because the crop matured and ripened at an ideal rate this year the crop is seen as particularly flavorful. There are early and late varieties which come in between May and August. And, although there is limited acreage grown, there are a number of peach varieties cultivated in the county.

Peaches in a prime tobacco growing county? The crop is small but there is a future for this and many other crops to be grown on the farm lands available in Pitt County. As tobacco production shifts the innovative farm land owner will be looking for other crops which will produce some revenue. Many will look to other crops even as they continue to grow tobacco.

No matter where tobacco or any other basic crops go, the farm land will still be there. It can't all be developed as subdivisions or shopping centers and farmers will be looking for profitable enterprises. Peaches is not the answer for everyone, but it certainly is one of the many crops available for consideration.

Keepers Of The Trust

WASHINGTON — Grizzly bears now present no insurmountable problem. Turtles will be studied. Wolves will be protected for at least a few more years. The word on Capitol Hill is that Congress may yet agree on a bill to reauthorize the Endangered Species Act before the session ends in October. Let us pray the word is correct.

Congress is at its best when it takes a long view, but Congress is not at its best very often. In some areas, yes, our lawmakers look to the future. They will look ahead 10 years for a weapons system, 15 years for alternative sources of energy, 20 years for Social Security. That is about the outer limit of congressional vision.

'As best we can, we must put a stop to the reckless destruction of whole species of native fish and wildlife.'

In the original Endangered Species Act of 1966, Congress outdid itself. It boldly looked ahead for hundreds of years and said to the country, stop. As best we can, we must put a stop to the reckless destruction of whole species of native fish and wildlife. We of this generation hold the environment as trustees for the next generation, and we must honor that trust.

That farsighted policy continued in 1969, when Congress strengthened the act. Definitions were broadened to encompass "any wild mammal, fish, wild bird, amphibian, reptile, mollusk, or crustacean." Again in 1973, wisdom prevailed. Amendments extended coverage not only to "any member of the animal kingdom" but also to plants. Yet again in 1982, when the act was last reauthorized, a bipartisan coalition maintained the trust. Congress amended the act to prohibit consideration of economic impact in decisions to list a species as threatened or endangered. Listings or delistings would have to be based solely upon biological data.

It is hard to say what happened after 1982. The act technically expired in 1985. Since then, like a threatened species itself, the law has been living on borrowed time. Three extensions have been granted, but levels of funding have kept the program barely alive. The act now is destined to expire on Sept. 30.

This past December the House of Representatives fought off a series of weakening amendments and voted 399-16 for reauthorization. It was a great moment for the House. Conservationists hoped the Senate would quickly seize the torch. The Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works favorably reported a companion bill, S. 675, with only a single dissenting vote.

That was eight months ago. Wyoming's Sen. Alan Simpson, who had dissented in committee, objected to a program intended to reintroduce wolves into Yellowstone National Park. Senators whose states benefit from the shrimp catch opposed a plan to protect a vanishing species of sea turtle. Simpson also questioned efforts to preserve the grizzly bear in Montana.

After months of negotiations, it now appears that these major objections are close to resolution. The Senate this week approved a compromise in the matter of TEDs (Turtle Excluder Devices) that will relieve the shrimp fleet until May of 1989. This will do no significant harm, and it will permit further experimentation with alternative means for conserving the turtles. Simpson has accepted assurances of common sense in controlling the destruction of livestock by predator wolves and grizzlies.

It remains only to settle differences between the House and Senate on the revived issue of "economic impact."

Here conservationists must stand firm. No one questions that a listing of a particular species may carry a substantial price. We learned that lesson in the great snail darter case, when construction was halted on a major dam in order to protect a 2-inch fish. One can understand the exasperation and frustration felt in Washington state when preservation of a threatened species of owl prevented the harvest of valuable timber. On the face of it, doubtless it seems ridiculous to put a butterfly, a bird or a flower ahead of a suburban housing development.

These are costs our nation can absorb — and in truth, they are consequences more often resolved than imposed. The administering federal agencies have proved themselves receptive to accommodation. Humankind is a valuable species also. Rep. Ron Packard of California made the point in an impassioned argument to the House last December. Better to build a needed highway, he urged, than to preserve a few endangered birds. The House voted his amendment down. If that spirit can be maintained in House and Senate conference, the trust will be honored for at least another four years.

Smile When You Say Sleazeball

I want it known that from the very beginning I have always believed Ed Meese was innocent of high crimes and misdemeanors. Why was I so sure? You only have to look at the man's face to know that he is incapable of committing any wrongdoing.

It's hard to convince my friends on the beach that Meese would never do anything to tarnish the office of Attorney General. Therefore, when people complain about his behavior in that post, I kick sand in their faces.

"Where is it written that you have to be squeaky clean to be Attorney General of the United States?" I yell.

"Where is it written," the reply comes back, "that you have to be a sleazeball to be Attorney General?"

'But these are all cheap shots aimed at a man who has brought new respect to the highest legal position in this land. I slept better on many nights just knowing that Ed Meese was my Attorney General.'

I get mad when someone calls Meese a sleazeball. "You better smile when you say that. After all, you're messing with a man's good name."

Then they bring up all the old stuff again, like the fact that Meese made big mistakes on his income-tax returns.

"That was not a crime. It was an honest error. He failed to subtract column A from column B and then add that to column C. Attorney generals do it all the time."

My beach companions also love to raise the issue of Meese's role in Wedtech, and how he was helpful in steering his best friend, E. Robert Wallach, through the right channels to get a defense contract.

I always get on my high horse about that because Meese was cleared of the charge. The special prosecutor said Ed didn't commit a crime by helping his buddy, at least not one that would start the wheels of justice turning.

My friends, who have no sense of humor about Wedtech, maintain that the one thing an Attorney General should know is when to stay away from his friends who are trying to make a buck out of the government.

That's too much even for me, and I point out that while the Reagan Administration is full of people who have been convicted of a variety of crimes, Meese can proudly say that while he was Attorney General, he was never indicted for anything.

"What about the Iraqi pipeline when Wallach asked Ed to act as a liaison between Israel and Iraq and the U.S. in exchange for a bribe to the Israeli Labor Party?" these same people on the beach shout in unison.

My retort is, "Any Attorney General would have done the same thing for his college buddy. What you have to understand is that the AG has a lot of power, and one of the perks of the job is to do favors for his friends. I have always wished that I was Ed Meese's friend while he was in charge of law enforcement in this country. I know he would have taken good care of me."

I never know whether or not I am getting through to my friends. Most of them are prejudiced against Meese because they think he has a caveman mentality, which, incidentally, has never bothered me.

But these are all cheap shots aimed at a man who has brought new respect to the highest legal position in this land. I slept better on many nights just knowing that Ed Meese was my Attorney General.

Congress Gets Credit For Upholding Special Prosecutor Law

Many have praised the U.S. Supreme Court's decision last month upholding the special prosecutor law, but the real credit belongs more to Congress than to the court itself.

The law was upheld because Congress did something that legislatures often fail to do. Rather than pass the buck to the courts, Congress carefully considered possible constitutional objections at the time it adopted the legislation. It wrote a balanced statute that took account of reasonable constitutional concerns and tried to minimize them.

In the end, the Supreme Court deferred to that effort. Its action illustrates the role legislatures can play in constitutional decision-making.

Congress' overriding concern, of course, was to address a sharply felt practical need — to create an independent prosecutorial office that avoided the conflict of interest of having executive-branch prosecutors investigate crimes possibly committed by top executive-branch officials.

But from the beginning, Congress heard arguments that principles of the separation of powers would be offended by having prosecutors appointed by the courts or by Congress, and then not removable by the president or attorney general. Such an approach, it was argued, would undermine legitimate executive-branch prerogatives and give inappropriate powers to other branches of government.

Aware of these issues, Congress held hearings that assessed the views of a broad range of constitutional law experts. The drafters of the legislation sought to address many of the constitutional concerns raised — when the law was passed and through subsequent refinements.

The statute does not create special prosecutors who are altogether independent. It preserves a role for the president and attorney general in both the appointment and possible removal of special prosecutors. In addition, it avoids an excessive role for the other branches of government.

Specifically:

- The independent counsel is appointed by a court, but only if the attorney general first determines that there are "reasonable grounds to believe that further investigation is warranted."

Analysis

- A special panel of judges appoints the independent counsel, but the prosecutor's jurisdiction is based on the attorney general's initial investigation. The appointing judges are disqualified from sitting in any of the cases that the independent counsel actually brings — thereby protecting the integrity of the judicial branch.

- The independent counsel retains a great measure of independence, but the executive branch retains some counter-check by having the power to fire the counsel for "good cause." A further counterbalancing check is built in, however, by providing for judicial review of any decision to fire.

- Congress strictly limited its own role in appointing or removing independent counsels.

Taken together, these provisions give the special prosecutor the independence necessary to be a check on executive-branch lawlessness. But they also establish a broader interactive structure of checks and balances that promotes a measure of accountability and respects the prerogatives of each branch.

Critics of the law invoke "separation of powers." But our system of separation of powers was designed to preserve checks and balances in the political system. The structure of intersecting roles provided in the independent counsel legislation suggests that Congress was seeking to foster a system of checks and balances rather than subvert it.

That, at least, was what the Supreme Court concluded. Its opinion makes clear that the legislation was upheld precisely because it provided for interactive relationships among the branches and showed no sign of being a congressional power grab.

Had Congress not been so careful and balanced in attempting to avoid constitutional difficulties, the legislation might well have been struck down.

The complex role that legislatures play in evaluating constitutional questions is often overlooked. Like every government entity, Congress has the duty to assess the constitutionality of its actions, and to try to act consistently with constitutional requirements. It should not pass the buck to the courts, though it sometimes does. By facing constitutional issues itself, Congress can avoid problems and help shape the courts' analysis.

On the other hand, the courts cannot automatically defer to the judgment of Congress solely because it has considered carefully the constitutionality of its actions.

Sometimes Congress is wrong. Sometimes Congress' assessment of constitutional issues may be distorted because its own interests are at stake, or because it slights the rights of politically weak individuals or minorities. The courts have their own expertise — and unique detachment.

But where Congress considers a constitutional question seriously, and where Congress is not acting to aggrandize its own power or in disregard of minority interests, the courts will give substantial weight to its attempt to navigate the constitutional waters.

This is especially so in the separation of powers area, where the Constitution's language is vague and general. Here, the constitutionality of government action often turns on whether it addresses a strong practical need, if only because the Constitution is a charter of practical government.

Where the legislature is moved by those felt necessities and at the same time attempts to respond in a balanced manner to the underlying constitutional values at stake, the courts are not likely to stand in the way.

A Proletarian Presidency Isn't

Eleven and a half years ago Jimmy Carter departed his inaugural limousine and walked from Capitol Hill to the White House, and everybody said how wonderful he was: a man of the people, disdaining the excesses of Ruritanian pomp to which the presidency had become accustomed. Then, four years later, Ronald known to purchase his clothing at Filene's Basement, that he regularly rides the subway from his home town of Brookline to his gubernatorial office in Boston, and that he has even been seen mowing his lawn — with a hand mower, yet. To these disclosures the cognoscenti have responded with a collective gasp: How of toadies, sycophants and clothes designers.

If Michael Dukakis shops at Filene's out of habit rather than political convenience, there is at least some reason to hope that he may have managed, through all his years in politics, to maintain a connection of sorts with life as it is actually lived by most Americans. If, as Napoleon claimed, England is a nation of shopkeepers, then the United States most certainly is a nation of shoppers, and the person who occupies the White House could do far worse than have a working knowledge of survival strategies in Filene's Basement.

Well, maybe it's true that in a world bounded by the Cosmos Club and Camp David and the Gridiron Club and the Monocle, there's neither time nor space for K mart and Circuit City and Giant Food and Jiffy Lube. But that is scarcely the world in which the rest of us live: not merely the so-called "Joe Six-Packs" of blue-collar America, but also those of us who inhabit the great middle class that is said to provide the battleground over which the 1988 election will be fought. This is what used to be called Middle America, but apart from what the pollsters report about its folkways, the politico-journalistic establishment seems to know it not at all.

It's a delusion that would quickly have been cured by a visit to Filene's or a few turns around the yard with the old Briggs & Stratton. Call it a reality fix: a quick connection with what life is like for the voters and taxpayers, an antidote to the fancies and fantasies about America that flourish inside this city's ghastly Beltway. If Dukakis is elected and manages to cling to a few of his modest habits — mowing the lawn might be a bit too much to ask, but he could buy his suits off the rack at Hecht's or Woodies — more power to him; a regular reality fix could be a powerful deterrent to yet another imperial presidency.

But history suggests that the odds are against him. A century and a half ago Andy Jackson, presented by an admirer with an elephantine wheel of cheese, threw open the doors of the White House and invited the public in for a snack. Those days are long since gone. Jimmy Carter may have begun his presidency walking down Pennsylvania Avenue; but the only time I caught a glimpse of him, during his final year in office, he was speeding up Connecticut Avenue in his limousine, police on all sides, alone in the back seat, as remote from the lunch-time pedestrians as if he were in another universe. Truth to tell, he was.

(c) 1988 The Washington Post

'Jimmy Carter may have begun his presidency walking down Pennsylvania Avenue; but the only time I caught a glimpse of him, during his final year in office, he was speeding up Connecticut Avenue in his limousine, police on all sides ...'

Reagan staged an inaugural gala the likes of which hadn't been seen since the robber barons gave a banquet for their dogs, and everybody said how wonderful he was: a restoration of presidential splendor to the White House after four years of miserly malaise.

So now comes Michael Dukakis, at whom the fickle finger of fate in its mysterious workings has chosen to point, and though the first general-election ballot has yet to be cast, questions of his putative presidential style already are being raised. Word is creeping through Washington that the enigmatic Dukakis fancies himself another man of the people, and hostesses and journalists are shaking in their boots; the pervasive fear is that in a Dukakis presidency there will be no lavish parties or public amusements, which is to say there will be no stages upon which the capital's social butterflies can preen and no buffets across which freeloading denizens of the Fourth Estate can graze.

This dire speculation has been stirred by reports that Dukakis has been dare he? This, dear fellow, quite simply is not how it is done. Prospective presidents are supposed to buy their clothes from vendors of custom-tailored sharkskin, to ride about in cross-country buses masquerading as limousines, and to leave the manicuring of lawns and shrubbery to invisible proletarians hired for that purpose. The presidency, sir, is not for the do-it-yourself trade.

To ease their troubled minds, some in the press and elsewhere have raised the possibility that Dukakis' man-of-the-people pose is nothing but that: a pose. This, in a city that values artifice above all else, seems a quite reasonable explanation for what is, on the face of it, aberrant behavior. Michael Dukakis, this line of reasoning goes, is so consumed by ambition that he will do anything — even mow his own lawn! — that will help him win votes; but as soon as he's safely enconced in the White House, he'll abandon this aw-shucks charade and be reassuringly presidential, replete with his own plumed militia and his wife's retinue

Martin Asks Church To Battle Illiteracy

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Churches, such as the AME Zion Church, which has 75,000 members in North Carolina, are a powerful force in fighting illiteracy, Gov. Jim Martin told people gathered at a meeting of the denomination.

"As one of the largest and most potent forces of our state, I call upon the AME Zion churches of our state to join us in ensuring a better life for all our citizens," Martin said Thursday.

Martin said the success of North Carolina's economy could be undermined by the state's continuing problems of adult illiteracy and high school dropouts.

"In practical terms, North Carolinians, if they are going to be part of the industrial development of our state, must have at least 13 years of schooling," Martin told the General Conference of the AME Zion Church at the Charlotte Convention Center.

"It's been estimated that we will have at least 500,000 new jobs by the year 2000," he said. "Will we have a citizenry ready to take advantage of expanding opportunities?"

"It's clear we must take decisive, forceful action if we are to continue our economic growth," he said.

In his address, Martin said the problem of illiteracy is directly related to economic development and he listed some of the actions taken by his administration to combat it.

One of these, he said, was last week's report of the Governor's Commission on Literacy, which was chaired by William Friday, the former president of the University of North Carolina system.

"The report contained 40 specific excellent recommendations, which, if carried out, should go a long way toward upgrading literacy in our state," Martin said.

Martin also lauded other state programs, including one in which illiterate mothers go to school to learn with their children, and another that was featured on CBS-TV called "Motherhead" that teaches women prisoners to read to their children.

Martin said he hopes to announce in a few days a proposal to develop daycare programs to serve 4-year-old children "who are most at risk to drop out of school later and become illiterate."

In an interview after his address, Martin said, "I wanted to talk about building jobs and building people up to those jobs. They need the math and literacy skills to be able to handle those jobs."

The 10-day conference is expected to attract between 7,000 and 10,000 people to Charlotte, which is the headquarters for the state church. It is the first time in 76 years that the meeting has been held in Charlotte.

About 550 delegates — half clergy and half laymen — representing 7,000

ASKING FOR HELP — N.C. Gov. Jim Martin addressed the 43rd Quadrennial Session of the General Conference of the A.M.E. Zion Church in Charlotte on Thursday, asking church leaders to take part in the battle against illiteracy in the state. He told them that churches were in a strong position to influence the future of the state's citizens. (AP Laserphoto)

AME Zion congregations in the United States, South America, Africa, India, the Caribbean and Britain, will elect at least two new bishops, 11 administrative officers, and approve budgets.

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church was formed in 1796 when black members of the predominantly white John Street Methodist Church in New York pulled out to form their own congregation.

The first North Carolina church opened in New Bern in 1863 and Clinton Chapel AME Zion black congregation one year later.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson is scheduled to address the conference early next week.

State Aging Program To Become A Division

RALEIGH (AP) — The state office that administers programs for the elderly will be elevated to division status to give the agency more visibility, officials say.

"As a division, it will be more visible," State Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty said.

"They get lost in the secretary's office. What we're trying to do is make sure there is coordination (of aging programs)."

The change comes as Republican Gov. Jim Martin and the Democrat-controlled General Assembly are paying more attention to issues affecting the elderly.

Both Martin and Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who are facing each other in the gubernatorial election, are expected to focus on the needs of the elderly as a campaign issue this fall.

Flaherty said he hoped to make his changes Monday. The moves will result in a lot of personnel shuffling.

"I think the idea of elevating it to division status is great," said Gary R. Bowers, executive director of the N.C. Association for Home Care.

"Both the governor and the Legislature have been putting more and more emphasis on providing services for our elderly population," Bowers said.

"This is reflective of the increased attention in that area."

Flaherty said that as programs for the elderly continue to expand, the office can be expected to grow. The office's budget has grown from $20.9 million in 1982 to $33.7 million this year.

The Division of Aging would be one of 10 divisions within the Department of Human Resources. Divisions generally are the second-highest agency classifications in state government, just below departments.

"I felt that we had a significant challenge ahead of us," Flaherty said. "I felt that it was time they should be a division."

Pope Says Legislature Sabotaged Economy

RALEIGH (AP) — The Martin administration continued its assault on the General Assembly's spending priorities Thursday, contending that Democratic leaders had sacrificed worthwhile programs while fattening their "pet programs" in a $463 million budget supplement.

"Nothing short of appalling," said Commerce Secretary Claude Pope, whose request for a $2.9 million increase was sliced to $82,000 — 3 percent of what he sought.

Pope charged at a news conference that the legislative leadership wanted to sabotage what he called the department's success in building the North Carolina economy.

He noted that Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan — the Democratic nominee for governor — has called for overhauling the department.

"Our legislative leaders either didn't know what they were doing, or they deliberately set out to cut off the momentum our economic development program has achieved," Pope said.

Jordan's spokeswoman, Brenda Summers, said it was because of the lieutenant governor's lobbying that the Commerce Department received the money it did.

Republican Gov. Jim Martin and Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety Joe Dean attacked the Legislature's budget at separate news conferences after the summer session adjourned this month.

Tommy Rhodes, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, summoned reporters Thursday afternoon and was expected to air his complaints.

Democrats contend that the series of news conferences is part of an orchestrated effort to paint the Legislature as fiscally irresponsible. They say Martin's $558.7 million spending plan submitted May 5 was more than $100 million out of balance, forcing lawmakers to reduce or eliminate many proposed budget increases.

"The Legislature had to look at what it considered the most pressing needs at this time and fund them," said Ms. Summers. Jordan was on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

Among the Commerce Department's spending requests that were denied were $968,000 for expansion of industrial recruiting; $502,774 for such industrial development projects as establishment of an office to attract major sporting events to North Carolina; $106,736 to help North Carolina businesses arrange exports; and $498,014 for the Division of Travel and Tourism.

The $82,000 lawmakers appropriated included $60,000 to lease space for the North Carolina office in Japan and $22,000 for data processing equipment for the office in West Germany.

But Pope said the $60,000 was far short of the $650,000 requested for the Japan office.

"There's a serious question as to whether North Carolina can now maintain any presence in Japan, a country whose businesses have invested close to $1 billion in our state since 1980, a country where 37 other states already have full-time offices," Pope said.

Ms. Summers said one reason for lawmakers' reluctance to spend more for the Japan office was that the Commerce Department had moved it to a more expensive location, seemingly for no good reason. Pope said the move was necessary.

The $463 million budget supplement actually includes $4.85 million for economic development programs, but $4.7 million of that was for projects the Commerce Department did not request.

Among them: $1.5 million for minority credit unions and community development corporations; $250,000 for the N.C. Institute of Minority Economic Development; $2 million for the Center for Community Self-Help to boost development in minority communities and depressed rural and urban areas; and $100,000 for a Triangle World Trade Center, which will boost exports of products made in the Triangle area.

Pope said the money not sought by Commerce went to "free-lance economic development agencies whose special interests are outside the accountability of government."

"The people of North Carolina deserve a better use of their tax dollars than the Legislature has mandated to their pet programs," he said.

The money included in the budget for economic development was for one-time expenditures in 1988-89, while all but $150,000 of the funds Pope sought would have been "recurring," or permanent.

Money for recurring expenditures was especially tight, legislative leaders said. They set aside $274 million for recurring expenditures but most of it went for a 4.5 percent pay raise for state employees and to hire adult school bus drivers and expand the prison system.

Rate Increase Eyed

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Utilities Commission has made the major decisions on a request by Carolina Power & Light Co. for a 13.9 percent rate increase, but it's not talking publicly about them.

In an order issued Friday, the commission asked CP&L and the Public Staff, which represents consumers on utility matters, to make some of the final calculations needed to determine the new rates.

The commission concealed its decisions by asking for data on different scenarios involving CP&L's request for a $203 million rate increase to recover the final costs of the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant.

Particles Found

ROCKY MOUNT (AP) — Particles of radium and gross alpha were found in the water at a mobile home park in Edgecombe County and residents are fearful of the effects the water.

Michael Leonard, chief of Enforcement and Compliance with the Drinking Water Section of the Environmental Protection Agency's offices in Atlanta, and two associates, Carla Pierce and David Hutchins, spoke to the residents Wednesday evening.

Some residents were not satisfied with the explanation about the particles of radium 226, radium 228 and gross alpha.

Winton Fountain, owner of the Holiday Country Estates mobile home park, is under an EPA mandate to correct the problem. He was notified by the EPA in May 1987 that the water exceeded the guidelines for radium.

He has supplied bottled water to the residents for drinking, Pierce said, adding that Fountain had applied for a $50,000 grant to provide a new source of water.

Baby Born At Wake

RALEIGH (AP) — A "test-tube" baby was born July 22 at Wake Medical Center, the first infant to be conceived in vitro fertilization at the hospital, officials said.

The 4-pound, 14½-ounce girl was delivered without complications, according to hospital spokesman Elizabeth H. McRoberts. The parents asked that their identity not be revealed, Ms. McRoberts said.

Wake Medical Center is a satellite of the University of North Carolina in vitro program. The Wake Medical Center baby was the 61st to be born through the program in North Carolina.

Marines Sequestered

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — At least 70 Marines at Camp Lejeune have been sequestered after officials discovered that a 9mm pistol was missing, a base spokesman said Thursday.

First Lt. Cathy Engels said the pistol belonging to "R" Battery, 5th Battalion, 10th Marines, was discovered missing July 22 during an inspection after a weapons cleaning session. The unit has been sequestered since that time.

The number of Marines sequestered is between 70 and 90, said First Lt. Frank Shaw.

Engels said the Marines eat at the mess hall as a unit, work during the day and are confined to the barracks area after working hours. They are allowed short visits with their families at the barracks but are not allowed to go home. She said the unit will remain sequestered until the investigation is complete.

Martin A Grandpa

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and his wife, Dottie, became grandparents on Thursday.

Daughter-in-law Pat Martin, coached by husband Jim Martin Jr., gave birth to a 7-pound-15-ounce girl at 11:34 a.m. at Charlotte's Presbyterian Hospital.

The child's name is Kathren Downing McAulay Martin.

Army Plans Housing

FORT BRAGG (AP) — The Army says it plans to build, for the first time, an off-post housing development at Fort Bragg.

Fort Bragg will begin advertising Saturday for land for the 800-unit development, said Capt. Donald Sensing of the Fort Bragg public affairs office. That land must be within 60 minutes of rush-hour commuting time, or 30 miles, from the post headquarters, Sensing said.

"We don't have our eyes on a set parcel of land," Sensing said.

Fort Bragg, one of the world's largest military installations, is spread over 148,618 acres in Cumberland, Hoke, Moore and Harnett counties.

A&T Center Set

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A University of North Carolina Board of Governors committee approved a plan Thursday night to establish a center for composite materials research at N.C. A&T State University.

University officials said the center will enhance A&T's existing composite materials research program.

"It consolidates the efforts and composites research that are already going on," said William J. Craft, associate dean of A&T's School of Engineering.

Composites are hybrid materials of light weight, high strength and the ability to withstand the rigors of unusual environments, Craft said.

Scientists at A&T are already at work to develop composites that might be used in a spacecraft that would travel to Mars. Earlier this year, NASA approved a proposal for A&T and N.C. State University for a Mars Mission Research Center.

"This fits with the Mars mission hand in glove," Craft said of the composites center.

The plan for the center is expected to get final approval of the full board in September.

State Still Leader

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia became the nation's No. 2 textile employment state, but North Carolina was the unquestioned leader, the U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported.

North Carolina reported an average of 219,400 jobs in textile plants last year, up 8,000 from 1986, the bureau said Thursday. Georgia averaged 107,200 textile jobs, up 4,300 from 1986, and South Carolina averaged 107,100, up 3,000 from the year before.

The Southeast as a whole employed an average of 511,900 workers in textile jobs last year, an increase of 18,200 from 1986. The increase continues an expansion that began in 1986 after a nine-year decline, the bureau said.

Each of the eight Southeastern states posted gains in the number of textile jobs last year. The figures for other states were: Alabama 38,700 jobs, up 1,300; Tennessee 23,800, up 700; Mississippi 6,600, up 300; Kentucky 6,300, up 400; and Florida 2,800, up 200.

Gross average hourly earnings for Southeastern textile workers went up as well, the bureau said. In 1987 they were $7.13, an increase of 32 cents from 1986 levels. The national average was $7.17, up 24 cents.

Gross average weekly earnings for textile workers in the region were $301.60, up $19.67 from the 1986 average. Southeastern textile employees worked an average of 42.3 hours per week in 1987, compared with the national average of 41.8 hours.

Center Gets OK

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A center for the study and evaluation of educational reforms proposed by philosopher Mortimer Adler will open its doors at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Sept. 1, officials say.

A UNC Board of Governors' committee gave the National Center for the Paideia Program a unanimous vote of approval Thursday.

The center — the only one of its kind in the country — will evaluate the Paideia method of teaching, offer technical assistance to schools and educators interested in the approach, and teach educators to train others in the Paideia method of teaching.

Adler, along with 20 other educators, outlined the series of reforms in 1981 in the educational manifesto "The Paideia Proposal." The term "paideia" comes from the Greek "pais" or "paidos," referring to the upbringing of a child.

"Locating at the university is appropriate because of our long-standing commitment to improving the public schools and the efforts that already have been made on this campus to promote the ideas of Paideia reform," UNC Chancellor Paul Hardin said in a written statement.

NCNB May Win Right To Rescue Texas Bank

CHARLOTTE (AP) — While federal regulators say a decision has not been made, analysts say NCNB — an underdog among larger banks — may soon win the right to rescue Texas' largest banking company.

"I hear NCNB's the winner," Frank Anderson, banking analyst with D. Latin & Co. in Dallas, said. "They (NCNB) are more innovative than most banks and I get the feeling they really want the institution."

NCNB Corp., which is based in Charlotte, reportedly submitted the proposal least costly to federal regulators to participate in the rescue of First Republic Bank Corp. of Dallas, the newspaper said.

NCNB, the 18th-largest U.S. bank with $28.6 billion in assets, is vying with No. 1 Citicorp of New York, No. 11 Wells Fargo & Co. of San Francisco and a First Republic bid that includes Drexel Burnham Inc. and Sears' financial subsidiaries for the right to rescue First Republic.

If NCNB acquires First Republic, it would nearly double NCNB's size, catapulting it to the nation's 10th-largest banking firm. The North Carolina bank was considered a long-shot by analysts three weeks ago in the competition.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. is expected to decide within a few days among the competing bids, said Joe Bowles, spokesman for the Texas bank.

"We're still working on it. We've made no decision," said FDIC Director C.C. Hope Jr.

NCNB has submitted the lowest bid, or the one least costly to the FDIC, among the bids for First Republic, the Wall Street Journal said Thursday, quoting a banking executive anonymously. The newspaper quoted a banker as saying Wells Fargo was trying to modify its bid at the last minute.

"It's NCNB and Wells Fargo (in competition) with Citicorp wanting far too much aid. It looks like Citicorp is out of it," said Peter Tuz of Howard, Weil Financial Corp. in New Orleans.

The apparent long odds of NCNB's bid to rescue the Texas bank may have prompted NCNB's managers, led by Chairman Hugh McColl Jr., to compete harder for the bank, Anderson said. "They are the type management that says, 'Where there's a will, there's a way,'" he said.

NCNB also dispatched a team of eight bankers to review operations of the insolvent banking firm last week, according to Bowles. Teams from Citicorp and Wells Fargo have made similar visits.

First Republic, created by a merger of two troubled banking firms last year, was the nation's 13th-largest banking company as of Dec. 31.

Irish Stowaway Goes Home, Placed In Government Care

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — An Irish teen-ager who was a stowaway on a U.S. Navy destroyer returned home today and was immediately placed under the care of government health officials.

Hours before 16-year-old Suzanne Twomey arrived at Shannon Airport in western Ireland, a district court in Cork ordered her placed under the care of the Southern Health Board, officials said.

A spokesman for the health board, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the board made an application for custody "in the interests of the girl herself and after consultation with her parents and the police."

He did not elaborate on the reason for the decision or give any indication how long Miss Twomey would be under government care.

Miss Twomey has run away from her home in Cork, southern Ireland, several times and was once brought home from Spain after disappearing for six months.

"I just want to go home," she told Judge Fred Morelock of North Carolina's Wake County District Court on Thursday.

When Miss Twomey landed after an overnight flight from New York, she was taken through a rear airport exit away from reporters and placed in a waiting police car. Two agents of the U.S. Naval Investigative Service escorted her.

An Irish police spokesman, who refused to be named, said her parents, John and Christine Twomey, and her three siblings would see her later.

Miss Twomey apparently slipped aboard the USS Conyngham when it paid a courtesy call in Cork Harbor. She was discovered aboard the guided missile destroyer Saturday when it returned to its base in Norfolk, Va., after a 10-day trip across the Atlantic Ocean.

Coastal Bulkhead Debate Continues

BEAUFORT (AP) — While James and Ruth Logan spend the winters in their permanent home in Asheville, the ocean eats away the sand and dunes in front of their 25-year-old summer house in Long Beach.

The Logans' problem is like that of many oceanfront property owners in Long Beach, where severe winter storms two years ago blasted the shoreline, eating away much of the natural dunes. But the Logans think their problems are being worsened because both of their neighbors' houses sit behind bulkheads.

The N.C. Coastal Resources Commission banned construction of new oceanfront bulkheads, seawalls or other shoreline-hardening devices in 1985 to protect the coast from unnatural erosion caused by the force of the ocean against the walls. The walls are blamed for speeding the erosion of nearby, unprotected beachfront.

The Logans used the CRC's own reasoning in a petition that sought special permission to build a bulkhead in front of their beachfront home. But the commission unanimously rejected their argument Thursday, the first day of its two-day meeting here.

The commission followed the recommendation of Preston Pate, assistant director of the Division of Coast-

Management. Pate inspected the Logans' property in June and said he found no proof that it was threatened by oceanfront erosion.

That is because the Logans hired someone in the spring to bulldoze sand into a man-made dune; said C.W. Calary, a real estate agent who looks after the house when the Logans are away.

Neither Calary nor the Logans attended Thursday's CRC meeting.

By winter's end, Calary said, the Logans' wooden walkway to the beach had collapsed and "the ocean came in there and just ate ... right up to the house."

"If the house was just standing there all by itself and we applied to build a bulkhead, I could see them denying it," Calary said of the Logans' petition. But he said he did not see how building a bulkhead between two others could affect more than the Logans' own property.

Witness Says North Wanted Drug Money Diverted

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. drug enforcement official says former White House staffer Oliver L. North suggested in 1984 that $1.5 million designated for a drug sting operation be diverted to the Nicaraguan Contras instead.

Ron Caffrey, now in charge of the Atlanta office of the Drug Enforcement Administration, told a House panel Thursday the DEA rejected the idea. Caffrey said he told North the suggestion would have compromised the chief operative in one of the agency's most significant undercover operations.

As it turned out, according to Caf-frey and other DEA witnesses, the investigation was compromised anyway — and closed prematurely — several weeks later when details were leaked to the Washington Times.

The hearing was the first in a series by the Judiciary subcommittee on crime, which is trying to learn whether Reagan administration officials condoned drug smuggling and other criminal activities to further its Central American policy — especially winning aid for the Contra rebels.

Chairman William J. Hughes, D-N.J., said the panel has "discovered many, many instances of persons in or associated with ... elements of our government attempting to convert, to divert, and to subvert the criminal justice process."

North, who has been indicted in the separate diversion of millions of dollars from the administration's Iran arms sales to the Contras, figured prominently in Thursday's testimony.

The testimony focused on a 1984 sting operation, in which DEA used convicted drug pilot Barry Seal to make contact with the Colombian cocaine cartel — then operating in Nicaragua — and a purported Nicaraguan government official, Federico Vaughn.

Hughes later said the committee has doubts about whether Vaughn was in fact part of the government.

Nonetheless, four DEA witnesses said North was interested in exposing an alleged involvement of the marxist Nicaraguan government in drug smuggling, so the Reagan administration could win an upcoming congressional vote on Contra aid.

Caffrey, who was in charge of the DEA cocaine desk in 1984, said he briefed North on the undercover operation in late June or early July 1984, after Barry Seal had brought cocaine back from Nicaragua to the United States.

Seal at the time was functioning as a DEA operative, hoping his cooperation would bring him a lenient sentence.

Caffrey said he told North that the DEA planned to send Seal back to Nicaragua to make a $1.5 million payment for the drugs he brought back, with the money to be split between the Colombia drug kingpins in Nicaragua and Nicaraguan officials.

"Col. North asked why we couldn't land the plane outside Managua and turn the money over to the Contras," Caffrey said.

The DEA official said he responded that such a plan would jeopardize Seal, who had won the trust of the Colombian drug cartel and of Vaughn, identified by the DEA witnesses as an official of the Nicaraguan interior ministry.

Most of the hearing centered on the news leak to the Washington Times, which published its story on the Seal operation July 17, 1984. Seal then became a government witness rather than an operative, but was machine-gunned to death in early 1986 after declining federal protection.

Caffrey said when he briefed North on the operation before the story was leaked, the then-National Security Council staffer "asked when the operation could go public."

He added that North "did indicate to me there was a vote coming up on an appropriation bill to aid the Contras. I told him public disclosure would come from the U.S. attorney or the attorney general ... but we had a lot of goals left in the investigation" and did not want to compromise it.

Memorial Will Mark Civil Rights Struggle

By JAY REEVES
Associated Press Writer
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The designer of the Vietnam War Memorial said Thursday she hopes her latest work, a somber monument to the civil rights movement, will make people remember the bloody struggle for racial equality.

"The Vietnam Memorial has an impact on the immediate family. This is about the importance of not forgetting the civil rights movement," said Maya Lin, whose black wall in Washington bearing the names of dead American soldiers has prompted emotional outpourings.

Ms. Lin said the planned civil rights monument will bear the names of about 30 people killed during the civil rights era of the 1950s and '60s.

"The name is one of the most magical ways to bring back a person," she said. "It's more real than any one image can be."

The $350,000 memorial will be located on a slope in front of the Southern Poverty Law Center, a Montgomery-based, public-interest law firm specializing in civil rights issues.

The memorial will be a short walk from the church where a young Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. gained prominence by leading the Montgomery bus boycott, often cited as the start of the contemporary American civil rights movement.

Ms. Lin's design calls for an upper plaza with a quiet pool and water that cascades down the face of a curved, black wall 40 feet long. Inscribed in gold leaf on the wall will be a section of King's "I Have a Dream Speech," saying: "We will not be satisfied until justice rolls down like water and righteousness like a mighty stream."

In the lower plaza, a circular stone table 12 feet in diameter will be inscribed with time lines and the names of people killed during the civil rights movement from 1955 to 1968. Water emerging from the center of the table will flow evenly across its surface.

The time lines will begin with the Aug. 28, 1955, murder of Emmett Till in Money, Miss. Till, a black man, was lynched after saying "Bye, baby," to a white woman. The historical review will end April 4, 1968: the day King was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn.

In addition to Till and King, among those listed will be Medgar Evers, a Mississippi NAACP official gunned down in front of his home in 1963; four children killed in 1963 when a bomb exploded at the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham; and three men shot to death in Philadelphia, Miss., during the "Freedom Summer" of 1964.

Hostages' Talks Said Progressing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The weekly magazine Ash-Shiraa reported today that negotiations are under way for the release of the nine American and nine other foreigners held hostage by Iranian-backed factions in Lebanon.

"The issue of the foreign hostages held in Lebanon will find its way to a happy ending soon," the magazine quoted an unidentified informed security source as saying.

"High-level contacts are under way between officials of the hostages' nations, especially the United States, and a state that has direct influence on the hostages," it said.

It quoted the source as saying that no intermediaries were involved. "A settlement to the hostages' issue will coincide with the U.S. presidential elections" Nov. 8, the report said. It did not elaborate.

The magazine gained international fame when it broke the story of secret U.S. arms sales to Iran in return for the release of hostages in 1986. But most of its recent reports on the hostages have not proved accurate.

Iran's Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said Wednesday his country would be prepared to help get the hostages released if President Reagan released frozen Iranian assets.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater responded to Rafsanjani's offer by saying: "No deals. The clearest signal they could send is to release the hostages."

The longest held hostage is Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was seized in west Beirut on March 16, 1985.

Greenhouse Plans

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators are using the closing weeks of the 100th Congress to put the issue of global warming from the "greenhouse effect" at the top of their environmental agenda for next year.

They got the ball rolling this week with the introduction of legislation prompted by a series of hearings over the last two years at which scientists warned that the greenhouse effect threatens the planet with higher temperatures, climate changes and rising oceans in the next century.

Sixteen senators, including Energy Committee Chairman Bennett Johnston, D-La., unveiled a comprehensive plan on Thursday that calls for a variety of steps, from developing safer nuclear power to slowing the destruction of forests in the Third World.

A day earlier, a group headed by Robert Stafford, R-Vt., submitted a package to end U.S. use of chlorofluorocarbons, the chemicals that contribute to global warming and destroy the Earth's vital ozone layer.

Johnston, who has been identified more with energy development and production than environmental protection, said he would hold a series of hearings in coming weeks to set the stage for 1989.

Next year, he said at a news conference, "we'll have to begin the serious process of legislating. We'll act as fast as the public's willing to support us."

Johnston is a cosponsor of most elements in a package developed by Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., that represents the broadest Capitol Hill response yet to the greenhouse warnings.

"The greenhouse effect is the most significant economic, political, environmental and human problem facing the 21st Century," Wirth said.

Johnston, who recently held a hearing on the greenhouse effect, said: "The evidence of global warming is virtually undeniable. It is so much more comprehensive, dangerous and life-changing than anything we've ever seen."

Aides said Johnston has become convinced that global action is necessary to combat the production of carbon and other gases that scientists say trap heat in the atmosphere.

Jailed Women Supported By Palestinians' Strike

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians in the occupied territories blocked streets and stayed away from work today to show support for women jailed for their roles in the Palestinian uprising.

Also, state-run radio said a Palestinian who died in Gaza City Thursday was killed by Israeli troops as he prepared to throw a firebomb. The death touched off demonstrations in which two Palestinians were wounded by gunfire and two Israeli riot police were injured by stones.

Palestinians throughout the occupied lands went on strike today. Outlawed Palestinian flags waved on utility poles from Bethlehem to Nablus in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Graffiti appeared on walls overnight reading "Death to the Zionists" and "Yes for a Palestinian state."

Before dawn, Palestinian protesters blocked some streets with rocks, barrels and burning tires, an apparent effort to prevent Palestinians from breaking the strike organized by the underground leadership of the uprising that began Dec. 8.

The strike, called to protest the jailing of Palestinian women, halted transportation and shut down shops.

The Palestinian-run Jerusalem Media and Communication Center said 30 Palestinian women are being held in Israeli jails, most on suspicion of inciting violence against Israel.

An Israeli army spokesman said the army was checking the report on Israel's state-run radio that troops fatally shot 37-year-old Hadel Hafez el Toruk in Gaza City.

He died in Ahali Hospital of wounds sustained on July 22, hospital officials said. The army confirmed the death and said it was investigating the circumstances.

Toruk's family told the army he was shot at the same time soldiers opened fire at Palestinians who threw a Molotov cocktail at them. Toruk said before he died that he did not see his assailants, a hospital official said.

"He said he was walking in the street, and then he fell down, and he didn't know what happened," said the hospital official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The fatality brought to 235 the number of Palestinians killed in the anti-Israeli revolt. Four Israelis also have died.

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said he reacted positively to reports that U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy planned to meet with Palestinian representatives.

Peres said he was against meetings with members of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which is banned in Israel, but did not necessarily oppose meetings with PLO supporters.

"We make a distinction between people who are members of the PLO, which is an organization that deals in terrorism and has a charter that calls for the destruction of Israel," Peres said on Israeli television.

Murphy is to leave next week for a peace mission that will take him to Israel, Jordan, Syria, and Egypt.

Iran, Iraq Trade Claims On Rebel Troops' Pullout

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi-backed Iranian rebels said they pulled out of two towns in western Iran today after killing or wounding 40,000 Iranian Revolutionary Guards during three days of fighting.

But Iran said its forces drove the rebels out of the Iranian towns of Eslamabad and Karand, killing or wounding at least 1,000 enemy troops in a battle with the "forces of the Baghdad regime and their hypocritical mercenaries."

At the United Nations on Thursday, representatives for both gul war foes accused each other of blocking U.N. efforts to end the nearly 8-year-old war.

Tehran radio interrupted its normal programs to play martial music and announce victory over the rebels, members of the National Liberation Army of Iran.

In a later announcement, the radio said Iranian forces were advancing in a bid to liberate the Iraqi-occupied Iranian towns of Sar-e Pol-e Zahab and Gilan-e Gharb.

The National Liberation Army rebels operate a series of bases or camps along the border, usually just on the Iraqi side of the frontier.

The rebel group said in a communique released in Baghdad that its guerrillas penetrated 95 miles into Iran and controlled Karand and Eslamabad near the central border for 72 hours.

It said that during the fighting, two Iranian F-4 jet fighters and two Cobra helicopter gunships were shot down, and hundreds of tanks and armored personnel carriers were destroyed.

The claims by the rebel group could not be independently confirmed. Reporters are allowed into battle areas only during rare guided tours.

Earlier, Iran said its forces broke through the defenses of the Iraqis and the National Liberation Army at Eslamabad.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said Thursday that Iranian forces killed at least 4,000 Iraqis and "mercenaries" in the battle.

A communique issued Thursday by Iraq's military said its warplanes were bombing Iranian military airfields around Eslamabad.

Police Arrest Marcos Cronies, Grab Weapons

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police raided an apartment before dawn today and arrested eight people, including renegade soldiers, believed linked to ousted President Ferdinand Marcos, officials said.

Col. Manuel Oxales, deputy commander of the National Capital Regional Defense Command, said police seized one claymore mine, plastic explosives and improvised bombs that may have been intended for terror attacks in the capital.

Oxales said the raid at about 4:30 a.m. was in a crowded neighborhood of suburban Caloocan City. He said the eight included two women and at least two army enlisted men.

Two or three others escaped, and "some tried to escape by climbing the walls and climbing to the rooftop," he said.

Oxales said the eight were being interrogated and could face charges of illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Marcos, who ruled the Philippines for 20 years, was deposed in February 1986 in a civilian-military uprising that swept President Corozon Aquino to power.

Oxales said one of those arrested was linked to an abortive April 1987 raid on Fort Bonifacio, which the military said was an attempt to free rebel troops jailed in a coup attempt three months before.

The government said the January 1987 coup attempt was aimed at restoring Marcos to power. The attempt included attacks on media and military facilities in the Manila area.

Oxales said some of those arrested were also suspected of involvement in a similar raid last June on Camp Crame, where mutineers failed to free jailed coup plotters but made off with two dozen rifles.

He said raiders also found street maps and other diagrams that they suspected may have been used in planning bombings within the capital.

On Thursday, Mrs. Aquino's chief aide accused Marcos of trying to evade U.S. prosecution by offering $5 billion to come home.

Whichard To Preach

The Rev. Sam Whichard of Pentecostal Holiness Church will preach at the Greenville Church of God, 3105 S. Memorial Dr., Sunday during the 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. services.

Church Meeting Set

Holy Trinity United Methodist Church is having a meeting for fellowship and bond sales at 6 p.m. Sunday in the church at 1400 Red Banks Rd.

The bond sales will finance renovations to the church building already under way. Refreshments will be served.

The pastor, the Rev. Ralph A. Brown, says the church has become known as "The Little Pizza Hut Church" because its design is similar to that used by the restaurant chain. But, he said, the central tower on the church is being altered and the similarity will no longer be as striking. A building addition is also under way. The work is expected to be completed within the next three months.

Regular Services

The Progressive Free Will Baptist Church will hold regular worship services Sunday at 11 a.m. Bishop T.L. Davis, the mass choir, and usher board number one will lead the service.

Gospel Program

A gospel program will be held Sunday at 7 p.m. at Higher Ground Free

Will Baptist Church. Guests include Leo Williams and the Faithfuls of La Grange, the Barfield Sisters, the Gospel Consolators and the Fantastic Spirituals, all of Greenville, and the Rev. Willie Joyner and the Gospel Creation of Farmville.

No Sunday School

Sunday School will not be held at St. Mary Missionary Baptist Church this week due to the Young Adult Choir's trip to Baltimore for services at Fairview AME Church. For more details call Rosa Ward at 355-6270 or Larry Chance at 752-2653.

Reagan Reiterates His Opposition To Abortion Before Evangelicals

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan praised a child care proposal by Vice President George Bush, calling it a means of allowing women to choose to stay home with their children if they want.

Reagan told a group of evangelical young people Thursday the plan would "strengthen the family" because "the basic idea here is that the government would simply let families keep up to $1,000 more of their own money."

"That's the money the family itself can decide how to spend," Reagan said. "Working mothers could put the money toward child care. But by giving each family this tax credit the vice president's plan would also permit thousands of mothers to choose to stay home with their children."

It was Reagan's first comment on the proposal, which Bush is making part of his own presidential campaign.

In the speech to the Student Congress on Evangelism at the Washington Convention Center, Reagan also reiterated his opposition to abortion, saying, "We cannot proclaim the noble ideal that human life is sacred, then turn our backs on the taking of some 4,000 unborn children's lives every day."

"This must stop," the president said. "An abortion is the taking of a human life."

"Many who seek abortions do so in harrowing circumstances," he added. "And just as tolerance means accepting that many in good faith hold views different from our own, it also means that no man or woman should sit in judgment on another."

"I believe - and Vice President Bush believes with me - that we must rise above bitterness and reproach to find positive answers to the tragedy of abortion."

Reagan said his administration has sought to reflect a "return to basic values" through such steps as the enactment by Congress of the Equal Access Act of 1984, giving voluntary religious groups the right to meet after school on the same basis as other groups. He also cited longstanding administration positions in support of returning prayer to the classroom and reversing the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortions.

He said legislation his administration has submitted to deal with child pornography is being held up in Congress, and asked, "If the House and Senate leadership really care about family values, isn't it time they brought this anti-pornography legislation to a vote?"

He also talked to the young men and women about the pressures teen-agers feel to have sex out of wedlock.

"I'm sure that each of you believes that someday you'll find someone to fall in love with - and you will," he said. "You know that when you meet that person, and meet in a marriage, that you will be true to each other. Well, did you ever stop to think you can start being true to that one special person beginning now?"

The 8,000 young people cheered wildly, applauded, stamped their feet and jumped up and down as the president made his appearance in the cavernous hall.

He opened by leading the group in the pledge of allegiance to the American flag, and ended by joining others in the crowd in waving a small flashlight in an effort to keep time to the music as the group sang a song proclaiming, "We will carry the torch of the Lord."

'Humanae Vitae'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A papal edict that caused an upheaval in Roman Catholicism was commemorated this week. American bishops saluted it for "prophetic wisdom," but recognized obstacles to it.

The occasion was the 20th anniversary of the late Pope Paul VI's 1968 encyclical "Humanae Vitae," "Of Human Life," which reaffirmed the church's ban on contraception, and set off a church storm.

Repercussions still linger in the widespread Catholic rejection of the particular prohibition and, as seen by some scholars, in the spread of dissent to other areas of church teaching.

In this country and elsewhere, the event catalyzed a searching examination of Catholic rights of conscience, and debate over it still goes on.

The encyclical, asserting an inseparable link between the unifying and reproductive dimensions of sexual intercourse, said it always "must remain open to the transmission of life."

Despite continuing resistance to the rule, bishops and some Catholic groups paid tribute to it. Also, a new study gave a positive assessment of the church's only approved way of limiting pregnancies — natural family planning.

This involves charting the wife's period of fertility and avoiding intercourse during it. In responses from 3,763 couples using the method, 70 percent found it satisfactory.

"The results verify that couples who are properly instructed and well-disposed find natural methods satisfactory and effective," said Chicago's Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, head of the bishops' pro-life committee.

It was the first such nationwide study of its kind, with answers to questionnaires gathered from couples instructed in the use of natural methods in 24 diocesan programs across the country.

The study, funded by the Knights of Columbus, a national Catholic fraternal organization, found that two-thirds of the husbands and wives consider it important to be "in conformity with church teaching" in their sex lives.

"Our church offers something special for the entire family. We want you to join us this Sunday!"

New Bridal Line Offers Gowns With Versatility

By MARK MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Brides-to-be can build a wedding dress piece by piece and walk out of the store with a finished gown for less than $800 in a new line being introduced by an Iowa company.

Ellie Beman, president of Wedding Works Inc., developed the "modular" wedding dress concept after seeing customers in a Philadelphia bridal registry wait months for made-to-order gowns which might not fit when delivered, sometimes close to the day of the ceremony.

"I saw these gals come into the store and they were going crazy worrying about whether their dress was going to come in, hoping that they hadn't gained or lost too much weight," she said. Women busy with careers are taking less time planning weddings and occasionally don't want to wait four months for an ordered gown to arrive, she added.

"I figured there had to be an easier way."

She started with a basic silhouette or gown, to which is added an overbodice and possibly a train. The overbodice and train are attached to the silhouette by an invisible hooking system she patented.

With the bodices and trains removed, she said, the dresses can be worn on other special occasions such as formal balls or debutante parties.

The line was introduced during a bridal show in Chicago this spring and drew favorable reviews.

"I think it's a great idea," said Susan Glick, fashion director for the Chicago Apparel Center. "I thought it was an exciting concept from the standpoint that wedding gowns do not have to be extravagant any longer, that this kind of simplicity was very reflective of what was happening in ready-to-wear."

Working with New York City designer Karin Beatty, Ms. Beman created six silhouette styles in Missy sizes 4-20 and a dozen overbodices.

The styles range from simple to ornate with hand-beaded Alençon lace. They can be interchanged to suit the bride, she said. Most gowns are white satin.

The total package costs under $800. Wedding Works' move into the $774 million a year domestic bridal gown industry has not been all blissful.

"A wedding dress is still the most important garment a woman is ever going to wear in her life," said Marty Boikess, president of the National Bridal Market in Chicago and a representative for Bridal Originals, a large moderately priced line of wedding gowns. "To make it any less than it is, i.e. modular dresses or off-the-rack ready-to-wear things, is just such a small percentage of what we do in our industry that it's almost insignificant. As a matter of fact, it is insignificant."

Cele Lalli, editor in chief of Modern Bride magazine, was even more blunt: "I think that there's something very elegant and personal and special about the time when you're selecting your wedding dress and this seems so terribly commercial."

African Wedding Ceremony Held

Delois Lindsay Newton and Donald Maxwell were united in marriage in an African ceremony performed at the National Guard Armory July 2.

The African ceremony is based on the union of the bride and bridegroom and their families. Dr. James Turner of Ithaca, N.Y. conducted the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents, William and Catherine Taylor of Fountain and the bridegroom by his sister, Jeanette Frazier, and his brother, Jackie Maxwell, both of Savannah, Ga.

Members of the wedding party wore traditional African dress.

The couple will live in Baltimore and plan a trip to Africa later this year.

Engagements Announced

DONNA KIM VAUGHAN — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil G. Vaughan of Route 3, Hillsborough, who announce her engagement to Rusty Davenport, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ed Davenport of Greenville. The wedding will take place Aug. 20.

Retired Design Engineer Finds Politics Absorbing

By TIMOTHY J. MAHER
The Bucks County Courier Times
LEVITTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Some people might think it unusual that a 75-year-old man would take a congressional internship simply to learn more about the government.

But Jerzy Patejak, of Wampum, who is serving an internship this summer with Rep. Joe Kolter, D-Pa., thinks the unusual people are those of any age who do not take an active interest in politics.

"How could you not be involved in politics?" asked Patejak, a retired design engineer. "How could you be unaware of what is going on? After all, every day somebody makes a decision which affects you. Our freedom, our very existence depends on the government."

Patejak's interest in politics dates back to his youth in Poland. He studied engineering at Warsaw Technical Institute and law at Warsaw University, and fought against an invading Germany in 1939.

Patejak spent the next six years in German prisoner-of-war and labor camps. He was liberated by Allied armies in 1945, but instead of returning to Poland, which had been liberated by Russia, he traveled to England to continue his engineering studies.

In 1951, he moved to the United States.

He has written more than a dozen "Sound-Off" columns for The Bucks County Courier Times on topics ranging from the steel industry to education to the Iran-Contra scandal.

The internship with Kolter is an opportunity for Patejak to actively pursue his interest in politics and see the government from a fresh perspective at the same time, he said.

"All of the information I've ever received about the government has been from the press or from the politicians themselves," he said. "This is my chance to see how it works from the inside."

The idea of taking on the internship first came to Patejak a year ago while having a discussion with an assistant of Kolter. When the assistant saw that Patejak was genuinely interested in the workings of the government, he suggested a congressional internship.

"I didn't know and probably a lot of people don't know that such things exist, but I thought I would give it a try," he said.

Patejak called Kolter's office and asked for an interview to discuss the possibility of an internship. He didn't think that his age should be a factor. Kolter agreed. Patejak sees his purpose as being an independent observer of Kolter, who serves on the aviation subcommittee of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

Kolter is seeking a fourth term in the House and will oppose Beaver Area School Board member Gordon Johnston in the November election. Patejak said the oncoming election will in no way influence his actions during the internship. He does, however, stress the importance of voting.

"Each vote is a valuable privilege which shouldn't be thrown away," he said. "Unless you vote, you have no right to complain — you refuse to participate in the process."

The greatest drawback of our political process, Patejak said, is that our politicians have a tendency to concentrate on their own constituents at the expense of the country as a whole.

"Whether you like it or not, our system has a weakness," he said. "It is parochial. Each congressman first thinks about his own constituents. The day when a senator or congressman will look at the country as a whole, I will say we have reached a true democracy, because that means we care about each other, not just ourselves."

Bogus Food Stamps
Bogus food stamps are showing up in Goldsboro grocery stores after thieves stole about $40,000 in invalidated stamps from a defunct distribution company two weeks ago, altered them to appear legitimate and sold them, authorities said.

The stolen stamps, with the words "specimen" and "void" printed on them in red ink, had been used to set the company's mail processing machinery, Goldsboro Police Sgt. J.L. Sullivan said Tuesday.

Sullivan said those trading in the stolen stamps have chemically lightened the red ink to pale yellow.

ROSE HIGH CLASS OF '58 HOLDS 30TH REUNION

The first graduating class of J.H. Rose High School, the Class of '58, held its 30th Class Reunion Saturday night at the American Legion Building. The group was entertained by "Pulse", a Goldsboro band playing beach music and the top 40. The decorations depicted the 50's theme, and memorabilia from the Class of '58 and Rose High was displayed.

Deceased classmates, Rebecca Highsmith Fussell, Albert Crawford, and Marietta Northrop Morgan, were remembered.

The following teachers attended as guests of the Class of '58: Kemp Baldwin, Bo Farley, James Rodgers, Frances Smith, Christine Tripp, and Odell Welborn.

Seventy-one people attended the Reunion, including 36 classmates, their spouses and dates.

Local classmates attending were:

Walker L. Allen, R. Kelly Barnhill, Darlene Phillips Briley, Patsy Corey, Richard H. Evans, Jr., James N. Galloway, Bennie G. Harrell, Johnny G. Harrison, Camilla Henderson Tait, Stanley Hathaway, Jr., Ann Moore Johnson, Hubert Leggett, Hazel Corey Lovett, Yvonne Russell McLawhorn, Anne Parkinson, Lawrence Perkins, Judy Jolly Whitford, and Donald M. Wilkerson.

Out-of-town classmates attending were:

Ebern E. Allen - Bethel, Betty Lane Evans Bissett - Spring Hope, Barbara Davis Carson - Bethel, Bobby Edwards - Winston-Salem, Billy G. Fields - Clemmons, Sandra Mayo Gilbert - Winterville, Cynthia Cranford Haar - Raleigh, Richard V. Haar - Raleigh, Mildred Bowden Nelligar - Fayetteville, Ruth Young Rhodes - Raleigh, Martha Corbett West - Ayden, and Janice Fordham Williams - Washington.

Those attending from Out-of-State included:

Lillian Mays Bolen - Virginia Beach, VA, Ed Buchanan - Rockville, MD, Elizabeth White Clayton - Atlanta, GA, Robert E. Howell - Gaffney, SC, Jerry McDaniel Jordan - Silver Springs, MD, and Denise Harris Smoker - Newport News, VA.

This Reunion was organized by Rusty Corey, with the assistance of Kelly Barnhill, Class Treasurer, and Lawrence Perkins. Decorations were coordinated by Darlene Phillips Briley, Barbara Davis Carson, Sandra Mayo Gilbert, Bennie E. Kelly, Russell, and Hazel Corey Lovett, with the assistance of guests Charles Stryan and Frank Smith.

Taxpayer Resents Funds For A Higher Education

DEAR ABBY: The feature story of today's newspaper was the coverage of a college graduation ceremony.

All of the graduates were incarcerated at one of our state's prisons. We helped them obtain full college degrees. Abby, I take as many college courses as my available time allows, and it costs me a bundle to pay all my regular living and eating expenses.

I've looked for help. You have to be poverty-stricken before you can qualify for government help. It hurts me more to strive for my education than if I was in prison. Doesn't it seem that something is turned around? — DARRELL BROWN, ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.

DEAR DARRELL: I applaud a system that enables prison inmates to become college graduates at the government's expense. Too bad every law-abiding person in the USA who wants a college education isn't given the same break.

DEAR ABBY: For five years I was with a wonderful man I'll call "G." We got along very well and, despite several setbacks, we seemed perfect for each other. We even talked of marriage and spending the rest of our lives together.

During the last three years of our relationship, G. lived in a distant state, and we saw each other only twice in all that time. Each visit was wonderful. We kept in touch, though it was very hard to be so far apart.

Over Christmas this past year, G. came to visit me. It was great seeing him again, but we had grown apart, and the whole visit was rather strained. To save myself the pain of having him break it off, I did it first.

Since then, I've tried to forget him and see other people, but it hasn't worked. I miss him terribly. So, I called him last week and we talked for a long time. I told him I wanted to come to see him, but he said he'd been living the bachelor's life for the last couple of months and that several people wouldn't like me to be there! He meant "women," and I could die from jealousy. I wrote to him, just to keep in touch. He didn't answer my letter. What do I do now?

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

I just don't think I can live without him, but I don't know how to get him back. Help! — LOST IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR LOST: Face it. He likes his life the way it is. He could even be otherwise involved and probably is. A good artist knows when a painting is finished. Save yourself further humiliation and back off.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I've never seen in your column. At the dinner table, my husband gobbles down his food, then starts eating off my plate!

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

I am a slow eater, preferring to take my time and enjoy my meal. Am I wrong to say that he is rude? Or should I put up with it and get used to the idea of eating half a meal? — SPEEDY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Your husband is rude, and you may say it. But what makes you think you have to put up with it? Simply tell "Speedy" to slow up, and if he's still hungry after eating his meal, suggest that he take a second helping and kindly keep his marauding fork off your plate.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Olympic Fashions Developed

By The Associated Press
Sports-minded Americans who can't make it to Seoul for the Olympic Games this summer but want to get into the fashion spirit of things might try donning a replica of the warmup suit American athletes will wear at the stadium.

Adidas has designed a nylon suit featuring "USA" embroidered across the front of a full-zip jacket against a background of white or royal with red.

The collection of Olympic-themed apparel includes pullover sweat-shirts and T-shirts with the same graphics as the warmup.

Motifs of past Olympic Games — including Moscow, Rome, Amsterdam, Montreal and Melbourne — are depicted on theme shirts made of polyester-cotton combinations. Colors include olive, oatmeal, twilight and brick.

Fleece separates in the collection include a jacket, two long-sleeve pullovers, pants, shorts and T-shirts featuring the USA and Olympic five rings logo.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market $1.25 to $1.50 lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 43.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 43.00; Wilson 43.00. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 29.00; Wallace 30.00; Spivey's Corner 29.00; Rowland 29.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 59.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 47 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 60.23 cents. The market is firm and the live supply is adequate for a mostly good demand. Average weights light to mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,083,000, compared to 1,942,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market higher. Supply very short for a very good demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 22 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 13, mostly 15 cents lower at mostly 2.66-2.75 in East and mostly 2.80-2.90 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 6 to 8 cents lower at mostly 7.38-7.52 in East and mostly 7.00-7.03 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.07-3.17; new crop corn 2.50-2.95; new crop soybeans 6.87-7.48. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1 percent higher and ranged from 97 to 101 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced today as enthusiasm over a late rally in the previous session buoyed investors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 8.71 to 2,091.04 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 598 issues up, 277 down and 457 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 25.78 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Traders said a firm dollar and a stronger bond market helped support the market. In addition, the market welcomed comments Thursday by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan that indicated the Fed hasn't changed monetary policy recently.

Among actively traded issues IBM was up 3/4 at 124 1/2; Union Carbide was up 1/8 at 23 3/4; PepsiCo was up 1/4 at 34 1/4, and McDonald's was up 1/4 at 44 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 0.60 to 151.00. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index stood at 303.97, up 0.34.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 28.63 to 2,082.33.

violate laws applying to secret ballots, but some voters may voluntarily sign affidavits as to the candidate for which they voted.

"Sometimes people make confessions good to the soul," Marsh said.

With board members Marsh and Ruth Turner of Morehead City in vocal opposition to ordering a new election based on Dupree's previous complaints, Hunter said he would be willing to send the case back to the Pitt board.

"I don't mind remanding it, but I don't know if the voters of Pitt County are particularly served by us not taking action."

Board member M.H. Hood Ellis of Elizabeth City agreed, saying that the board may only be delaying the 'misery' of ordering a new election.

The state board has already ordered new elections in Hyde County and Surry County this year when Republicans and unaffiliated candidates participated in Democratic primaries.

But without the four votes necessary, the board opted to remand the case.

universities in the state to improve its standing.

"We offer so much in this state," he said. "We want our standing to improve."

Jones told the Greensboro News & Record this week that SAT scores and teachers' salaries are low, while the dropout and illiteracy rates are high.

Jones serves on the board of directors of NCNB National Bank of North Carolina, is president of the Carolinas Branch of the Associated General Contractors of America and is a former chairman of the Greater Raleigh Chamber of Commerce.

He also is a trustee of Peace College and serves on the Board of Visitors of Wake Forest University's Babcock School. He also has served on the Shaw University Board of Trustees and the State Advisory Council on Vocational Education.

Also elected today were Raleigh attorney Samuel Poole, vice chairman, and Durham businessman Asa Spaulding Jr., secretary.

Hallock Confirmed As New Medical School Dean

Dr. H. Thomas Norris, head of the search committee which recommended Hallock, said the committee was impressed by Hallock's ability to find a consensus among a diversity of views and get things done.

Norris, chairman of the ECU Department of Clinical Pathology and Diagnostic Medicine, described Hallock as level-headed, open to innovation and "an energetic person who knows how to use his time."

He said it was also significant that Hallock comes from a medical school of the same vintage as the ECU School of Medicine, which has "moved from infancy to adolescence."

Hallock will be joined in Greenville by his wife, Jeanne, and their 16-year-old daughter, Julie. Two sons, James Jr., 21, and Jeffrey, 19, are in college at the University of the South in Seawee, Tenn., and Wake Forest University respectively.

A graduate of Seton Hall University and Georgetown University School of Medicine, Hallock completed a residency in pediatrics at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, serving as chief resident at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania in his final year.

After two years in the Air Force stationed at Biloxi, Miss., he joined the University of South Florida and its one-year-old College of Medicine as an assistant professor of pediatrics in 1972.

USF, which serves almost 30,000 students on five campuses, is the second largest of nine state-supported universities in Florida. Its College of Medicine graduates 90 physicians each year.

Colleagues of Hallock's at USF also cited his capacity for fairness in describing him.

"He is a calm, collected, quiet person who can be counted on to hear out positions and not let extraneous factors influence him in making a decision," said Dr. Alan Leibowitz, associate professor of medicine and associate dean of student affairs at USF.

"We're losing somebody very important for our school," added Leibowitz. "He knows what a medical school is and should be."

The ECU search committee, which began its work in late 1987, received 114 nominations for the position; 67 of the nominees accepted candidacy, said Norris. The committee included seven voting members from the School of Medicine faculty and three non-voting ex-officio members.

Laupus said Hallock's ability to manage change will serve him well in a period of profound transition in medicine and medical education.

"The times require a dean who is flexible, entrepreneurial and quality-oriented," Laupus said. "Dr. Hallock has experience and other intangible characteristics that set him apart."

Laupus, also a pediatrician, called his tenure as dean "an extraordinary and gratifying experience."

"Whatever success we've had has been brought about by the esprit de corps of our people and the teamwork that has always been the hallmark of the ECU School of Medicine," he said.

Deficit To Be Higher

However, White House budget director James Miller warned that the $5.9 billion cushion did not leave much room for error, especially given a lengthy list of spending measures Congress is considering in an election year.

The measure with the highest price tag is a drought-relief package for farmers, which Miller estimated would cost the government between $4.3 billion and $6.6 billion.

Miller said President Reagan supports drought relief but is opposed to using "the plight of the farmers as an opportunity to make a Christmas tree out of that bill" by loading it up with other farm assistance that has little to do with drought relief.

Miller also listed as potential budget-busters measures to step up the battle against illegal drugs and provide more aid to the hungry and homeless.

He said if all the proposals were enacted by Congress, it would increase spending between $6.4 billion and $8.7 billion, enough even at the low end of the estimate to trigger the automatic spending cuts.

"We can't do all the things that Congress has on its list right now," Miller told reporters at a White House briefing.

Four To Be Inducted Into Football Hall On Saturday

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Four players who grew up within a few hundred miles of each other will be coming home Saturday for induction in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Jack Ham of Johnstown, Pa., Alan Page of Canton, Mike Ditka of Carnegie, Pa., and Fred Biletnikoff of Erie, Pa., will join an exclusive club of 144 when they are inducted. Following the induction ceremonies, the Cincinnati Bengals meet the Los Angeles Rams in the annual AFC-NFC Hall of Fame game. The game will open the 1988 NFL exhibition season, with the San Francisco 49ers playing the Miami Dolphins Sunday in London. "Ditka wasn't from too far down the road," said Ham, a former Pittsburgh Steelers linebacker. "All four of us are from the same locale in general. "Western Pennsylvania and Ohio have always been known for great football players. This will be a nice coincidence that we all go in together." Ham, who was a part of three Super Bowl championship teams, played 12 seasons with the Steelers. He had 25½ career sacks, 21 fumble recoveries and 32 interceptions during his career. Page, a defensive tackle, played 238 games for the Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears in 15 seasons, and was the NFC defensive player of the year four times. In 1971, he was the first defensive player to be named Most Valuable Player. Biletnikoff caught 589 passes and scored 76 touchdowns with the Oakland Raiders from 1965 through 1978. He ranks seventh in career receptions and was the MVP of the 1977 Super Bowl with four receptions for 79 yards.

Ditka, the first pure tight end to be named to the Hall, had 427 receptions and scored 43 touchdowns for the Chicago Bears, Philadelphia Eagles and Dallas Cowboys from 1961 through 1972. Ditka also coached the Bears to a Super Bowl championship in 1986. Ham likens the induction to a reunion of sorts. "All my family from Johnstown will be there. I'm told that guys I played sandlot baseball and football with will be coming in, plus a lot of other old friends and teammates." Ditka is the 21st long-time Bear to be elected, while Biletnikoff is the fifth Raider honored. Page joins quarterback Fran Tarkenton as the only Viking in the Hall. Ham is the second player, joining Joe Greene, from the Steelers' Super Bowl years.

Thomas, Jacobs Selected To Valley League All-Stars

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer
East Carolina baseball players John Thomas and Jake Jacobs are about to reap the rewards of a summer spent working and playing baseball. Thomas and Jacobs, both players in the Shenandoah Valley League in northern Virginia, have been selected to be a part of the 20-man roster to represent the league on an all-star team. The Shenandoah League is one of only four of its kind in the country. It is an invitational league especially for college baseball players who are in their freshmen through junior years. The other leagues in the country are the Alaskan, the Cape Cod and the Jayhawk. Teams in the different leagues arrange housing and jobs for their players in exchange for six nights of baseball each week for a total of 42 games. "We play every night except Monday," Jacobs said. "The games start each night at 7:30 (p.m.)." "I usually work from about 9 (a.m.) till 2 (p.m.)," Thomas said. "I have to mow grass and use the weed eater and different odd jobs for a company called Cambridge. When I get off I usually come home and rest a little, but I have to be at the field by 5:30. It's around 11:30 (p.m.) when we get back from the game so there's not much time for nothing else but going to bed to get ready for the next day." Each season, the leagues select 20 players to represent them in a double-elimination tournament. This year's tournament will be played at the Boardwalk and Baseball in Orlando, Fla. Thomas earned the nod as the starting centerfielder on the all-star team this season by putting up good numbers for the second straight year. Through 26 games, Thomas was guiding his league-leading Waynesboro Generals team with a .359 batting average. To go along with that, Thomas had seven homers, seven doubles and a trio of triples. Twenty-two RBI and 23 runs scored also went along with Thomas' 42 total hits. "I think it (being named to the all-star team) is a great honor," Thomas said. "Last year I had a good year (with the Madison Blue Jays) and didn't get selected, so I felt like I deserved it this year."

Thomas' coach, Elliott Avent agreed. "John's having a great year," Avent said. "The scouts like him a lot and he plays so hard, he's as good a kid as I've ever coached." Jacobs, who had hurled a 4-2 record after the first 26 games for the second-place Madison club, is also having a banner year with a 3.93 earned-run-average. In facing 222 batters, Jacobs gave up just 44 hits and 23 earned runs while ringing up 47 strikeouts. "I feel real good about the progress I've made this summer," Jacobs, who was 7-4 this past season for ECU, said. "It (playing on the all-star team) will be a good chance for me to get seen by some scouts." And, Jacobs, according to Madison coach Billy Swoope, is exactly what a scout looks for in a pitcher. "He's been one of the most consistent pitchers in the league and has been my most consistent all year long," Swoope said. "Every outing he gives you a 100 percent and always seems to keep us in every game he pitches." "It (playing on the all-star team) will help him (Jacobs) a lot," Swoope continued. "He has already developed the confidence that he can pitch with these people (in the league). This will just give his confidence even more building blocks." ECU head coach Gary Overton feels the success by both Thomas and Jacobs will not only help their future but also the future of Pirate baseball. "We (the Pirate coaches) look for their success to continue on to their senior season here next year," Overton said. "We've seen a steady improvement in Jake since his freshman year. He had a good year for us last year and should come back next year as our number one pitcher and be a better player with the experience." "Thomas had an outstanding year in the valley league last summer," Overton continued. "His experience there has helped him to improve his performance here at East Carolina." East Defense Too Strong; Daniels Scores Touchdown, Blount Leading Rusher

By TOM MORRIS

GREENSBORO — The East defense lived up to its advance billing by putting the West out of the game early en route to a 32-3 win in the East-West All-Star Football game Thursday. "We realized our defense was outstanding early on and that we could not afford to go even close to live hitting during the (practice) week because they would have destroyed us," said East coach Bobby Poss of Fayetteville 71st. The defense struck for two quick first half scores to put the East up 14-0 and it never got any closer. "Usually in a game like this, the team that gets the early momentum, it makes a big difference," said West coach Bruce Hardin of West Charlotte. "They got it on their side." On the West's very first series, it started at its own 15 and went backwards before finally having to punt from its own 10. That's when disaster struck. Punter Clint Gwaltney bobbled a low snap under pressure from defensive end Pete Smith. When the dust cleared, East defensive tackle Knox Thompson recovered the loose ball for a touchdown with the game less than three minutes old. Troy Holloway kicked the point after and the East led 7-0. At the opening of the second quarter, the West soon found itself in trouble again. Operating in the shadow of his own end zone, West quarterback Therome George faded back into the end zone on a third and three from his own nine yard line. Smith, the game's Most Valuable player, got to George and was twisting him around just as George tried to pass the ball. Because his momentum was carrying him to the ground, George's pass just kind of hung in the air. Smith reached out and pulled it in and the East defense had its second touchdown of the game. Holloway added the PAT to make it 14-0. "They gave us a great start with two touchdowns," said East running back Eric Blount of Ayden-Grifton. "It made the offense pump up and it made it easier for us." While a lot of the pre-game hype centered on Parade All-America defensive end Chester McGlockton, it was Smith, a Garner standout, who stole the show. He had three quarterback sacks and spent most of the night in the West backfield. Amazing enough, Smith's end-zone interception was a close repeat of a play he made in Garner's 4-A state championship win over Harding. "He was really aggressive," Hardin said. "We had trouble picking him up. We tried to sweep and to run straight at him. He was the one that really set the tempo for them." Rose high running back Dave Daniels finished off the East offense's first scoring drive with a one-yard burst with 2:07 left in the first half. The run capped a 31-yard drive following a fumble by West running back Darrell France of Mount Airy. "It was a dive left," Daniels said. "I just read the blocks and went in." Holloway missed the point after but added a field goal just before the end of the half to make it 23-0. "Honestly, you would not plan to have that," Poss said of the big lead at the half. "They (the defense) set the tempo and gave us the ball in good field position and offense capitalized." "It took us a while (offensively), but the defense wouldn't give us the ball. I think once we got it, we didn't do that badly." By halftime, the West had negative total yards offensively (-1 to be exact) and not surprisingly no first downs. The East wasn't exactly setting the world on fire, but had 102 yards rushing. Neither team had yet completed a pass. The East scored on its initial drive of the second half, going 50 yards in 11 plays capped off by a 32-yard field goal by Holloway. On the West's ensuing possession, it picked up its initial first down of the game on a 50-yard keeper by George. But on the next play, Smith hit George from the blind side and he fumbled. McGlockton picked it and advanced it to the West 45. The East quickly capitalized as quarterback Franz Holscher of Washington guided the team in for a score as he hit James Taborn from 17 yards out. Holloway's kick failed but the score was now 32-0. From there it was just a question of whether or not the West would score. They did, with 2:50 remaining when Gwaltney hit a 43-yard field goal. Blount led all rushers with 62 yards on 13 carries.

Expos Proving Tough To Beat In Extra Innings

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer
When the Montreal Expos get into extra innings, no one can be trusted. Not even a .148 hitter. Graig Nettles, who entered Thursday night's game against the St. Louis Cardinals with just eight hits in 54 at-bats, singled home the winning run in the 10th inning as the Expos won 4-3 and improved their record to 15-4 this season in extra-inning games. "Even when I was an everyday player, I didn't care about my average. I only cared about what I produced," the 43-year old Nettles said. "It's more important to me to have eight RBIs as a pinch-hitter than to worry about my average." Nettles' hit capped a night when the Expos played St. Louis-style baseball, stealing a season-high six bases and using speed to set up the tying and winning runs. "The idea of this game is to put pressure on the other team, and you do that by being aggressive," said

Rex Hudler, who singled to open the 10th, was sacrificed to second, and stole third before scoring on Nettles' hit. Elsewhere, it was Houston 3, San Diego 2; Cincinnati 5, Atlanta 2, and Chicago 7, Philadelphia 0. The Expos trailed 3-2 through seven innings, but tied the game in the eighth without getting the ball out of the infield. Otis Nixon singled back to the mound, stole his second and third bases of the game and scored on a wild pitch by Todd Worrell. "I guess I forced them into a mistake," Nixon said. "But that's the way they (the Cardinals) do it all the time." The loss was the Cardinals' third in a row and fifth in six games. Manager Whitey Herzog could only shake his head in disbelief at being beaten by Nettles. "The guy is 14-for-90 against the rest of the league, and now he's 10-for-26 against us," Herzog growled. "If he could hit, he'd be worth a million dollars the way he runs." Astros 3, Padres 2 Bill Doran's two-run homer sparked a three-run first inning and Bob Knepper and Larry Andersen combined on a nine-hitter to lead Houston. Billy Hatcher led off the top of the first against San Diego's Eric Show, 7-10, with a ground-rule double to left-center and Doran hit an 0-2 pitch to right for his sixth homer. Terry Puhl then singled and Kevin Bass walked. Both runners advanced on a double steal as Buddy Bell struck out and Puhl scored on a groundout by Craig Reynolds. The double steal gave Houston 154 stolen bases for the season, tops in the major leagues. Knepper, 11-3, pitched six innings, allowing seven hits, walking two and striking out three. Andersen gave up two hits and struck out three in three innings to earn his fifth save. Reds 5, Braves 2 Nick Esasky hit his second game-winning homer in the ninth inning in two days as Cincinnati defeated Atlanta. The homer, Esasky's third in the four-game series, came off rookie John Smoltz, 1-1, making his second major-league start. With one out in the ninth, Eric Davis doubled and Paul O'Neill was walked intentionally. Esasky then hit a 1-1 pitch to left for his 10th homer of the season and 14th lifetime at Atlanta. White, Downing Lead Angels By White Sox

By The Associated Press
Devon White giveth and Devon White taketh away.
White, the Angels' center fielder, and designated hitter Brian Downing gave the Angels the lead. In the bottom of the inning, White preserved the victory with a sensational leaping catch at the fence on a drive by Steve Lyons.
"I just held my breath when Lyons hit it," Downing said. "only to have Devon White jump up and catch the ball."
"White's 11th-inning catch was a hell of a play. It saved the game," Angels manager Cookie Rojas said.

"He redeemed himself on that one."
In the seventh, White's throwing error led to two runs for Chicago.
"He had no business throwing to third base on (Gary) Redus' single," Rojas said. "Ozzie Guillen would have gotten there anyway. The one run doesn't mean anything."
Guillen led off the bottom of the inning with a single and, when Redus singled to center, White's throw to third went into the dugout and Guillen scored. Redus, who had taken second on the play, was allowed to go to third. He scored the tying run when Harold Baines singled to center.
Each team scored a run in the 10th, then Downing homered off Ricky Horton for the decisive run in the 11th.
"It wasn't a picture-perfect swing.

I only got a piece of it," Downing said. "But the ball managed to make it's way into the seats. Having played at Comiskey Park before, I've seen it happen a bunch of times."
Elsewhere Thursday night, Detroit sneaked back into first place in the AL East with a 7-1 victory over Kansas City on Jeff Robinson's one-hitter, while Milwaukee was beating New York 6-1, dropping the Yankees a half-game behind the Tigers; and Baltimore beat Cleveland 5-2.
Downing's homers gave him 16 this year and marked the eighth time in his career he has hit two homers in one game.
"What I love is being in a key situation to make an impact," Downing said. "I just hope I've done that. I never care who is pitching, and I sure don't worry about the count. If I have two strikes on me, I'm going for the homer in similar situations."

Pinch-hitter George Hendrick's sacrifice fly in the top of 10th scored Dick Schofield as the Angels took a 6-5 lead. But the White Sox tied it in the bottom of the inning on a single by Fred Manrique and Guillen's triple.
White also homered earlier in the game.
Carlton Fisk returned from a broken right hand and had a double and two-run homer for the White Sox.
Tigers 7, Royals 1
Robinson, 12-4 and 9-1 at home, allowed only Frank White's single in the fourth inning. He retired the last 18 batters, struck out three and walked three for his first career one-hitter.
"Any time a pitcher throws a one-hitter he's done well," Royals manager John Wathan said. "And we've got a good offensive lineup."

Detroit swept all six games against the Royals at home. It was the first time the Royals didn't win a game at Detroit in a season.
Tom Brookens had three hits, knocking in two runs and scoring a pair.
Brewers 6, Yankees 1
Mike Birkbeck, 5-5, allowed one run and seven hits in 5.2-3 innings. He left with the bases loaded and two outs in the sixth, but Chuck Crim struck out pinch-hitter Ken Phelps. Crim/pitched 3 1-3 scoreless innings for his sixth save.
B.J. Surhoff had three hits, Paul Molitor, Robin Yount and Rob Deer contributed two each to the Brewers' 12-hit attack.
Rickey Henderson reached safely to lead off the game for the 10th straight time by singling. He was stranded, however, after having scored a run in the first inning in seven straight games.
Orioles 5, Indians 2
Rookie Oswald Peraza, 3-4, limited Cleveland to seven singles and had a shutout until the ninth. He struck out four and walked two for Baltimore's third victory in the last 12 games and its first against Cleveland after 11 consecutive losses. Baltimore last defeated the Indians on Aug. 11 last year and is 1-9 against Cleveland in 1988.

Eddie Murray and Cal Ripken Jr. homered for the Orioles.
Cleveland's Julio Franco went hitless in four plate appearances to end his career-high hitting streak at 22 games. The streak was the longest in the American League this year, surpassing Franco's own 21-game streak of earlier in this season.

Snow Hill Game Halted By Rain

HAMLET — Game Two of the Eastern Championship Series of the American Legion Baseball Tournament was again rained out Thursday night in Hamlet.
Snow Hill won the opening game between the two teams, 5-4, and holds a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.
The two teams will move to Snow Hill for the next three games, starting tonight at 8 p.m. at Greene Central High School. Saturday, two games will be played, at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.
If necessary, the series would then resume in Hamlet Sunday.
The winner of the series advances to the state tournament, meeting the winner of the Stanley-Kernersville series.

Williams At Center Of Blue Jays' Storm

TORONTO (AP) — The New York Yankees are baseball's longest-running soap opera. But when they arrive tonight at Exhibition Stadium for a weekend series, they'll have to take a back seat to the doings of the Toronto Blue Jays.
At the center of the storm is the question of whether manager Jimmy Williams will put petulant outfielder George Bell back in the lineup.
Bell and Williams got into a shouting match Tuesday in a game in Minneapolis after Bell made his 13th error of the season and sixth in seven games.

of the problems that have beset the team.
Toronto fans, upset by their team's ragged play this season, have alternated sides in the Bell-Williams battle. For a while, Bell, whose home run production has dropped from 47 last season to 13 in 102 games in 1988, was the focal point of their displeasure.
Then they began razzing Williams relentlessly as he made pitching changes.
There were rumors of a meeting planned Thursday among Bell, Williams and general manager Pat Gillick, but a club spokesman said it did not take place. Instead, a war of words broke out.

Gillick termed the Bell situation an "open wound," which Randy Hendricks, Bell's Houston-based agent, suggested could be healed with a trade.
Gillick said Bell is available for the right price, and added: "It wouldn't bother me if George went home."
Bell, who signed a two-year contract for nearly $4 million during the offseason, has been feuding with management since spring training when he learned of plans to make him a designated hitter.

"We'll see who lasts longer with the organization, him (Williams) or me," Bell said.
"I don't care about the money," Bell said. "If they want to take the money back for 1989, they can take it. I'm serious."
"They can tear up the contract," Bell said. "I know I can play."
"I prefer somewhere I can play every day and have my peace. I mean it. I know what type of player I am. I know myself. I can't take it anymore. I just can't take it. I don't want people screaming at me no more. If they want to release me, that's fine."
"No matter what I do, I'm wrong," Bell said. "They say I think I run the ballclub because I make $2 million."
Tuesday's was the latest battle in a season-long feud between them — and just part of a season that has seen little good right for the Jays.

Williams has been frustrated by Bell's lack of concentration defensively — as well as his decline at the plate. Bell, who fought the move to DH by claiming he was more than adequate in the field, already has tied a team record for errors by an outfielder.
But Williams is stuck with Bell as his left fielder. The DH platoon of right-handed-hitting Cecil Fielder and lefty-swinging Rance Mulliniks has been one of the few offensive highlights for the Blue Jays.
Veteran catcher Ernie Whitt may be the next Blue Jay to go public with his discontent.
Whitt, 36, mentioned "retirement" to announcer Jerry Howarth on Wednesday. Whitt's contract runs out this season, although the Blue Jays have an option to renew for 1989 at $800,000. He said he plans to make an announcement before tonight's game.
Few players announce their retirement in midseason, especially when they consider themselves still marketable. Whitt's arm has lost some zip, but he's a left-handed-hitting catcher — a scarce commodity — and is considered outstanding at calling a game.
More intriguing is that Whitt, one of two original Blue Jays still on the team, might be ready to pop the cork on his bottle of emotions.

GREENSBORO — Although Eric Blount played only offense for the East team in the East-West All-Star football game Thursday, he knew that his team's defense would probably be the key.
"It seemed like every time I got the ball (in practice), I saw about five or six guys around me," he said. "So I knew they were going to be ready for the game."
Blount should have warned the West offense, which was ambushed by the East defense for two early scores en route to a 32-3 blowout win by the East.
"We saw it in the first day of practice," said East coach Bobby Poss of Fayetteville 71st. "We would (have) made a big mistake if we went live. We didn't want to beat our own kids up during the week, so we held them (the defense) back. I guess they were kind of anxious to get after it and they came after it pretty hard early on."
The East recovered a fumbled punt for a score early in the first quarter and Pete Smith sacked the quarterback and picked up a loose ball/attempted pass for another touchdown early in the second quarter to build the early lead.
"We were kind of anxious," said North Pitt linebacker Ashley Sheppard. "I felt like they were kind of scared. Maybe they weren't, but the defense was ready for them so it really didn't matter."
"It was basically just aggression. It seemed like all week we were aggressive."
The West failed to gain even a yard or pick up a first down during the opening half. In fact for the game, the West had only 90 yards total offense and three first downs.
While Smith earned MVP honors with his performance, Sheppard made his mark on the game. He put West quarterback Therome George out of the game in the final quarter on a clean but punishing hit.
"Their quarterback was running on the sidelines, he ducked one guy and he tried to stay in bounds," said Blount, who has played against Sheppard enough to sympathize. "He didn't see Ashley coming behind him. Ashley blindsided him."
It was a hit that elicited more than a few painful 'oohs' from the crowd and it sent George to the bench feeling woozy.
"We wanted to win for one of our (injured just before the game) teammates (Jason Ormsby) and for coach," Sheppard said. "I know it's been a while since the East won."
And this win is one that won't soon be forgotten since it was the largest margin of victory by an East team in the history of the game.
It was also a strong showing by Pitt County area athletes in the game. Blount led all rushers with 62 yards on 13 carries.
Rose High's Dave Daniels scored the East offense's first touchdown on a one-yard plunge.
Washington quarterback Franz Holscher, who won't be playing college football, threw the game's only touchdown pass when he and James Taborn connected on a 17-yard scoring play.
For Blount and Sheppard, friendly adversaries in high school, it was a positive end to their high school careers.
In less than two weeks, the two become rivals again. Blount reports to North Carolina's fall camp with the rest of the incoming freshman, while Sheppard heads down to Clemson.
But that's two weeks away. For one week of practice and one game, the two were teammates and both, along with Daniels and Holscher, played a part in leading the East team to a victory for the first time since 1983, when the East came out on top, 8-6.

"I know I'm brutal out there," Bell admitted in an interview appearing today in the Toronto Star. "The way I've been playing is because they made me that way."
Bell criticized the manner in which Williams has handled his fielding slump.
"It's stupidity. What about me? He's the one who doesn't care for people's feelings. He's the one who runs the whole length of the dugout screaming at me. He doesn't wait until we get inside. No way I can take that."
"You're out of the ... game! Take a shower and go home," Bell quoted Williams as saying Tuesday. "The man doesn't show me no respect. Everybody writes about my attitude. What about his attitude?"
Bell was benched for Wednesday's 4-1 victory, and there was no indication Thursday from Williams that the 1987 American League Most Valuable Player would not remain there.
It's the latest chapter in a sad season for the Blue Jays. Toronto, which lost its last seven games in 1987 to hand the AL East title to Detroit, is mired in sixth place with a 50-52 record, 10 games behind the front-running Tigers and 9½ behind the second-place Yankees.
The Blue Jays' best pitcher, Jimmy Key, has missed much of the season with a sore arm. Bell, Jesse Barfield and Lloyd Moseby, a most productive outfield through the 1980s, have struggled all season — a mirror

Calvin Schiraldi pitched a three-hitter for his first major-league complete game and Manny Trillo drove in two runs with a homer and single as Chicago snapped a three-game losing streak.
Schiraldi, 6-8, struck out four, walked four and did not allow a runner past second base. He gave up a single to Juan Samuel with one out in the bottom of the sixth, a double to Mike Young in the seventh and single to Mike Schmidt in the ninth.
Schiraldi, who singled in a run in the ninth, was making his 121st major-league appearance and 26th start. Philadelphia starter Shane Rawley, 5-12, has lost six straight and is winless since June 13.

Waltrip Is Top Qualifier For Talladega 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip likes being the fastest, even if it is slower.

No, it's really not that confusing. Waltrip was easily the fastest qualifier for Sunday's Talladega 500 at Alabama International Motor Speedway, in a session conducted under NASCAR's 1988 rules mandating carburetor restrictor plates here and at Daytona International Speedway.

The plates restrict air flow to the carburetor, cutting horsepower and slowing the cars down by about 15 mph, which is exactly what NASCAR had in mind at its two fastest tracks.

The three-time Winston Cup champion turned a fast lap of 196.274 mph on Thursday at the 2.66-mile oval. Second at 194.338 was Sterling Marlin.

But Waltrip was far short of the 1987 track and NASCAR qualifying record of 212.809 and the 1986 race qualifying mark of 209.005, both set by Bill Elliott.

Waltrip also dominated the qualifying at Daytona earlier this month in the Firecracker 400, taking the pole by nearly 2.5 mph over Kyle Petty.

"I don't know whether the carburetor plate is the right way to go,"

Waltrip said. "But I do know 44.998 (seconds) and 212.809 (mph) are unheard of in a stock car. There's no way you want to do that. At least I don't."

"I'd rather be running 195 or 196. You have a lot more reaction time and the engine and car are more compatible. Before, at the speeds we were running, the engine was over-riding the car."

Waltrip was not able to retain his big edge in the race at Daytona, which was won by Elliott.

"Down at Daytona, the car got a little loose in the middle of the race and got us behind," Waltrip said.

"That's a typical Daytona and Talladega race. Even if you're faster in qualifying, you're not going to blow by people in the race. But we've found a combination that's pretty darn good for qualifying."

Waltrip said it could have been even faster under different circumstances.

"The heat slowed us down more than I thought it would," he said of the temperatures in the low 90s. "But everybody had to drive on the same hot track."

The top 20 qualifiers Thursday locked up starting spots in Sunday's 40-car lineup. The rest of the field was determined in another session today.

Davey Allison, who won the pole for the Winston 500 at the track in May, was third Thursday at 194.204, followed by Geoff Bodine at 193.995 and Morgan Shepherd at 193.940.

Shepherd has been substituting for Neil Bonnett, recovering from appendix and gall bladder surgery. Bonnett has practiced in the car, however, and is expected to start the race Sunday. Shepherd will stand in case relief is needed.

"It's Neil's ride and it's his call," Shepherd said.

Dale Earnhardt, the two-time defending Winston Cup champion, was sixth at 193.552.

Rounding out the top 10 were Daytona 500 pole winner Ken Schrader at 193.333, Elliott at 192.738, Ricky Rudd at 192.711 and Greg Sacks at 192.707.

Elliott heads into Sunday's race with two straight victories and trails series leader Rusty Wallace by just three points, 2,363-2,360. Earnhardt is in the hunt in third at 2,315.

Wallace failed to qualify among the top 20 Thursday, as did former NASCAR champions Richard Petty, Terry Labonte and Benny Parsons and veteran drivers Rick Wilson, Lake Speed, Alan Kulwicki and Dave Marcis.

Goodyear, which had to withdraw all its tires for last week's Summer 500 after they were discovered to be wider at top inflation than the rules allow, was back Thursday to challenge rival tiremaker Hoosier.

Fifteen of the top 20 qualifiers, including the top four, were on Goodyear.

The lineup for Sunday's Talladega DieHard 500 with hometown, type of car and qualifying speed in mph. (Final 40-car field will be determined following further time trials Friday):

Gartner To Lead NBC News

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Michael G. Gartner, who started Thursday as president of NBC News, says he faces no immediate pressure to raise the evening news ratings or develop new programs.

NBC President Robert C. Wright announced he had chosen the Iowa newspaper editor to succeed Lawrence K. Grossman, who is stepping down after four years.

"Different times call for different types of people," Wright said, saying that the network faced an era of "enormous change, both technologically and economically."

When Wright offered the job last week during the Democratic National Convention, Gartner said, "We didn't talk about the present, we talked about the future."

Wright, who was installed as president after General Electric bought NBC in 1986, has enforced financial discipline in all network divisions and has talked of the need for innovation as the networks' share of the viewing audience declines.

"He (Wright) wants me to lead, he wants me to manage, he wants me to use my news judgment, and he wants me to be a good businessman, but most of all he wants me to think about the future and help lead NBC into the future, safely and soundly, and with vigor," Gartner said Wednesday.

Gartner, 49, has most recently been a part-time general news executive with Gannett Co. Inc. and editor of the Ames (Iowa) Daily Tribune. He is an attorney, a former president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, and a former editor of The Courier-Journal of Louisville, Ky., and the Des Moines (Iowa) Register. From 1960 to 1974, he worked for The Wall Street Journal, the last five as editor of the front page.

NBC correspondent John Chancellor praised the appointment as "audacious and intelligent."

"We get various reactions to it around the water cooler here," Chancellor said. "One is that Bob Wright has set good journalism as his first priority — that's obviously clear. Another reaction I would have is that Gartner will be able to prove that good journalism is the heart of the enterprise."

Grossman, a former public television executive, had been criticized within NBC's news division because he had no experience in journalism. But he said he left because of friction with the executive office.

Early in Wright's tenure, Grossman had refused to go along with a cost-cutting exercise, but later fell into line.

"It's time for them to get their own guy in there," Grossman said Wednesday in Los Angeles, where he was attending an NBC meeting.

'L.A. Law,' 'Golden Girls' Top Emmy Nomination List

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — The legal power plays portrayed in the pin-striped world of "L.A. Law" and the shenanigans of "The Golden Girls" led Emmy contenders in nominations for television excellence.

Cable shows won 15 nominations in their first outing against the networks, and a surprising 22 were garnered by two new shows — the forbidden life of "Beauty and the Beast" beneath New York and "thirtysomething," which focuses on the ups and downs of the baby boomer generation.

It was the gripping courtroom and corridor intrigue of "L.A. Law" and its polished cast that earned 19 nominations for the 40th annual Emmy Awards.

"We have good stories and that great ensemble group," producer Steven Bochco said. "We draw inspiration from their ability."

Noteworthy, too, were two NBC shows overlooked by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences: Only one nomination was given TV's most-watched series "The Cosby Show" and its spin-off "A Different World" got none.

Last year's trendy "Moonlighting," a nominations leader last year, was also fading, capturing six nominations and none in major categories.

NBC led the networks with 114 nominations, followed by CBS with 87 and ABC with 75. The Fox Broadcasting Co., the so-called "fourth network," collected six Emmy nominations. Syndicated shows were nominated 13 times.

Among cable companies, Home Box Office and Showtime each claimed six nominations. The Disney Channel drew two nominations and Turner Broadcasting System had one. Shows on the Public Broadcasting Service were nominated 27 times.

Fox will broadcast the Emmy ceremony Aug. 28 from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

"L.A. Law" was selected in the categories of best drama series, best actor in a drama series for Michael Tucker and Corbin Bernsen and best actress in a drama series for Jill Eikenberry and Susan Dey.

The on-screen and real life husband-wife duo Michael Tucker and Jill Eikenberry, called the "Tucker-Berrys" by the "L.A. Law" crew, were out of town. Tucker was doing a film in Montreal and his wife was in North Carolina.

Betty White, who won three years ago for her "Golden Girls" role, said of her third nomination for best actress in a comedy series: "I don't take it lightly. It's your peer group saying they like you."

NBC's comedy "Cheers" received 11 nominations, including one for new cast member Kirstie Alley for best actress in a comedy series. The 10 for ABC's "thirtysomething" was a surprise for its producers.

"We're thrilled and surprised that a new show has generated this kind of recognition," said co-producer Marshall Herskovitz.

Actor Tim Busfield, nominated for supporting actor in "thirtysomething," was named for an episode involving marriage counseling.

"I owe this to all the women I've ever had fights with," he said.

The "L.A. Law" sweep came despite a divisive flap that began last year between series co-creators Bochco and Terry Louise Fisher. At one point, Fisher was barred from the "L.A. Law" offices. She subsequently was forced to quit the show. But Fisher received two nominations for "L.A. Law" scripts while Bochco had just one.

Joining "L.A. Law" in the best drama series competition will be "Beauty and the Beast," "St. Elsewhere" and "thirtysomething." "L.A. Law" won last year.

Nominated for best comedy program were "Cheers," "Frank's Place," NBC's "Night Court," ABC's "The Wonder Years" and last year's winner, "The Golden Girls."

"We're jumping up and down here. I was watching the 'Today Show' and during the break the local news announced the nominations. We started jumping, said producer Tony Thomas of "The Golden Girls" and "Beauty and the Beast."

Ann Jillian was overwhelmed by two nominations won by the NBC movie "The Ann Jillian Story," including leading actress in a miniseries or special and best drama-comedy special. It dealt with her battle with breast cancer.

"I'm very honored and very thrilled, but the nomination isn't for me. It goes for all those ladies who had to go through this. I tried to do this with dignity and above all hope. I'm so grateful."

Named for best miniseries were "Baby M," "Gore Vidal's Lincoln," "Billionaire Boys Club" and "The Murder of Mary Phagan."

For best variety music or comedy program, the nominees were CBS' "Irving Berlin's 100th Birthday Celebration," CBS' "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour," Fox's "The Tracey Ullman Show" and two episodes of NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY July 30

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Get in touch with close friends concerning mutual pleasures and other activities. Don't commit yourself to important practical affairs.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It's a good day to handle civic matters, but not so good for heavy business dealings. Be wise and plan for future benefits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't keep concentrating on something you can do little about. Become very active and accomplish a great deal.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Steer clear of an acquaintance who wants to spoil an idealistic concept you have. Keep busy at keeping promises.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): A fascinating individual in the world at large can show you how to gain greater prestige. The evening is fine for requesting favors.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Get better results from your daily activities by adding something special to them. Seek pleasures out on the town tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Contact pals you want to have fun with. Keep appointments which you have made. Don't overspend on recreational outings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Get the okay of family and friends to do something important. Avoid an associate who wants to pick a fight with you or anyone else.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You can write those letters that others will appreciate in the morning. Then enjoy some hobby with a good friend in the afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): If you study your monetary status early, you can get the exact picture of it and know where you stand. Try to cut down on expenses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Handle intimate activities in the morning in a positive way. Don't upset anyone at home. Take your mate out for entertainment.

Opening lead: Ace of ♥
They have a saying down on Wall Street: "Bulls make money and Bears make money, but Pigs go broke." Had South been playing duplicate bridge, there might have been some justification for his play; at rubber bidge, there was none at all.

Since South was prepared to play at the five level, he cue-bid the enemy suit. North judged that his semi-solid six-card suit merited a jump to slam, and South thought long and hard about bidding a grand slam, but let prudence carry the day.

West made his normal lead of the ace of hearts, ruffed by declarer. After drawing all the outstanding trumps, declarer took the diamond finesse. East ducked smoothly.

Impressed by the way things were going, declarer returned to his hand with a club to the king and repeated the diamond finesse. East won and exited with a heart, and in the fullness of time declarer had to concede a club trick for down one.

At duplicate, overtricks are vital, and we have sympathy for an argument that claims it is correct to repeat the diamond finesse. However, we have found that anytime you make a slam contract you rate to get a better than average score. That is especially true in this case, because collecting 12 tricks at a spade contract scores more than making 13 in a diamond small slam.

Whether at duplicate or rubber bridge, once the first diamond finesse won we would have taken the club finesse! Even if it loses, there are 12 tricks. When it wins, we would have crossed to the ace of diamonds, intending to repeat the club finesse. As it happens, that would become unnecessary, but we would have saluted East for his effort.

Bayliner Marine Corporation
Seattle, Washington

Bayliner has now completed all 1988 boat production. No further 1988 product will be produced for any US dealership. Over 40 brand new, slightly scratched or previously displayed boats remain in excess storage.

FOR THE FIRST TIME EVER, by special contracted negotiations, Bayliner Marine Corporation is proud to announce the award of the "liquidation" of these final '88 model boats, exclusively to one local dealership;

B&K Marine
1205 Dickinson Avenue
Greenville, NC 27834
919-752-2882

We emphasize, this is not a "sale". Never in history has this major boat manufacturer authorized "liquidation" of close-out inventory in Greenville. Over 40 new boats will be available at used boat prices.

FULL FACTORY WARRANTY
In fairness to all, all boats will be available for sale or reservation starting Wednesday, July 27th.

SKI, FISHING, CABIN BOATS
Limited availability on most models, all sales by first come first serve basis. This advertisement is local area only, but past experience in other states prompt us to advise earliest inspection to assure specific model availability.
