King Hussein Severs Jordan's West Bank Ties

By JAMAL HALABY
Associated Press Writer
AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — In relinquishing any claim to the West Bank, King Hussein has also decided to abandon responsibility for all government services in the Israeli-occupied territory, a senior government official said today.
"It is a complete divorce of this kingdom from the West Bank," the official said, commenting on Hussein's address Sunday.
In a televised speech also seen in Israel and the occupied lands, the king challenged the PLO to try to make a Palestinian state of the territory his family ruled until it was seized by Israel 21 years ago.

It was the latest in a flurry of moves by Hussein that appeared to rule out the possibility of Jordan representing Palestinians in any peace talks.
The move also acknowledged that the 8-month-old uprising in Israel's occupied lands has largely looked for leadership to the PLO, reducing Jor-danian influence in the West Bank.

Hussein said that since there "is a general conviction that the struggle to liberate the occupied Palestinian land could be enhanced by dismantling the legal and administrative links between the two banks, we have to fulfill our duty and do what is required of us."
The government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said, "That means we will not be responsible for any services in the West Bank

... That land is Palestine and this is a separate country."
He explained that Jordan "is no longer responsible for municipalities, health, social, educational, religious or cultural sectors in the West Bank."
But he told The Associated Press "we will continue to pay pensions to civil servants and teachers who have been appointed by the Jordanian government and served our kingdom during the past 35 years."
The late King Abdullah, Hussein's grandfather, united both sides of the River Jordan and merged all institutions and services with the West Bank when he annexed the area after the 1948 Arab-Israel war.

Jordan administered the West Bank until Israel seized it in the 1967 Middle East War and set up a military government that shared services with local authorities.
Jordan has since been paying teachers, lawyers and other employees who work in Arab institutions in the territory.

On Saturday, Hussein dissolved the lower house of Parliament, half of whose members represented the West Bank. On Thursday, he canceled a $1.3 billion development project for Israel's occupied lands.
"Jordan is not Palestine," the king said Sunday in his 17-minute address. "The independent Palestinian state will be established on occupied Palestinian land after its liberation, God willing."

Ferry Stampede Buckles Malaysian Pier; 31 Dead

By HARRY S. MANIAM
Associated Press Writer
KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Thousands of holiday travelers rushing to board a ferry caused a pier to collapse, leaving at least 31 people dead and injuring nearly 1,000, officials and news reports said today.
Survivors said the upper level of a two-tiered pier in Butterworth, 180 miles northwest of Kuala Lumpur, fell without warning Sunday afternoon.

The upper section full of waiting passengers crashed onto people in cars and motorcycles on the lower level waiting to board the ferry.
Victims were pinned beneath steel and timber while firefighters and port workers tried to free them and search for others.

Emergency officials said all of those killed were believed to be Malaysian.
About 300 people were on the pier and 3,000 were lined up behind them when the rush to the ferry began, port commission Chairman Syed Mohamad Aidid told the national news agency Bernama.
He said the 40-foot section that collapsed normally held about 200 people.

Practice Countdown Done Despite Leak

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle launch team completed a practice countdown today despite a fuel leak that raised the possibility of another postponement of a critical test firing of Discovery's engines.
The leak halted fueling of the shut-tle's hydrogen tank after it had been loaded with 254,000 gallons, 67 percent of capacity.

After assessing the situation, launch director Bob Sieck ordered the countdown to proceed to obtain data on other aspects of the count. The liquid oxygen tank received a

The travelers were waiting to make the three-mile trip to Penang island for the Kwan Yin (Goddess of Mercy) Chinese religious celebration, held once every 60 years.
"Everything happened so fast, I could only scream for help," Gee Swee Cain, 41, a supervisor of the passenger ferry at the pier, told Bernama.
As soon as the crowd rushed forward, the pier's wooden upper level gave way, sending hundreds of people plummeting to the lower level, said Mrs. Gee, who suffered chest

Strong Market Opening Projected

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer
With one of the best growing seasons in years, Pitt County farmers are expecting strong prices when the Eastern Belt tobacco market opens Wednesday, according to the acting director of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.
"From all indications, market demand on opening day is going to be very strong," said Mitch Smith.
Smith said the hot weather and the rain this summer have created a very positive situation for Pitt County tobacco growers, who have concentrated in recent years on improving the quality of the leaf.
"We've had one of the better growing seasons, and therefore I think we can look forward to a good year.

"We've recognized quality is our comparative advantage, versus other countries," Smith said, "and a Premium Ripe Committee works with growers throughout the Southeast to improve the leaf quality."
"I think that our growers have responded well over the last several years."
The managing director of the Tobacco Growers' Information Committee, Reggie Lester, also said the tobacco market is promising.
"I think so," he said. "I think people are much more optimistic this year they have been in a couple of years."
Lester said flue-cured tobacco quotas were increased this year for the first time in 13 years and early signs show prices are also up.

"That means more pounds being sold at higher prices, which means more income" Lester said. "There should be very strong demand, and it should continue for a while."
Opening prices on the Georgia-Florida markets were about $1.38 per pound, which is a little higher than opening prices last year.
"We anticipate that trend will continue in North Carolina," said T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina.
"We're very optimistic about this year's market."
"I think we've got, at this point, one of the finest crops of tobacco we've had in many many years."

Along with the increase in quotas, nearly 98 percent of the tobacco is going into the market, therefore large amounts are not being stored in warehouses as was the practice in past years.
"Inventory and stabilization is down," Blalock said. "Our total supply of tobacco is down to a reasonable and manageable level. All the signs are optimistic right now."
Domestic consumption will probably continue to drop about 1 or 2 percent a year, said Lester, but as more markets open overseas leaf exports should rise.
Cigarette exports are already booming. U.S. manufacturers exported 100 billion cigarettes in 1987, a 56 percent increase from 1986.

Festival Attracts Thousands

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
WASHINGTON, N.C. — The hot weather did not dampen the ardor of thousands attending festival attractions at Washington's annual Summer Festival last week, a combination of outdoor affairs and the big yearly art show.
Outdoor festival events were held Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Stewart Parkway, the park-like area behind stores on Main Street fronting the Pamlico River. The Arts Council schedule ran from July 23 through Sunday at Washington's Civic Center downtown on Gladden Street.
"We had really large crowds, especially in the cooler evening hours for the two big street dances," said Mike Rouse, one of the festival's co-chairmen, along with Marvin Daugherty and Judy Meier.
"Street dances were held two nights, Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs performed on Friday night, with the O'Kaysions playing Saturday night," Rouse said. "I'd say that of all activities, the street dances drew larger audiences than any other event, except for the display of fireworks on Friday night."
The annual display of fireworks took place over the Pamlico River near the parkway.
"We had musical programs, jazz and gospel all three days during the festival," Rouse said. "These were well attended even during the hot daytime hours."

"The big crowd drawer on Sunday afternoon was the ski show. We had about 7,000 at Sunday afternoon's events. Most came for the ski show."
Rouse said that "all the outdoor events, the amusement rides, the stiltwalker and clowns, programmed for children, were very popular, as was the powerboat demonstration."
Attendance figures given by Rouse were approximately 24,000 on Friday, 28,000 on Saturday, and 7,000 for the Sunday afternoon events.
"These are perhaps record attendance figures for our annual festival," he said, "especially impressive when you consider the hot weather."
Judy Meier, festival co-chairman, was enthusiastic about the week-long events the Beaufort County Arts Council held in conjunction with the summer festival.
"From the standpoint of attendance and participation, it was the best show we've ever had," she said.
"One especially encouraging factor is that this year most of the art was from area and regional artists, including a big group from Pitt County," she said. "In past years, artists from Virginia and South Carolina took many of the prizes out of North Carolina, but not this year."

A total of 145 artists, not including student artists, had 550 pieces of art displayed.
"Sales were very impressive," Ms. Meier said. "Altogether, including about $3,000 awarded in show prizes, sales amount to $13,500. We had the largest ever preview showing of art, with over 300 attending."
Previews are held each year to give potential buyers an opportunity to make decisions on purchases.

"All week, attendance at the show and other events was really great," she said, "amounting to about 5,000 people."
"What really received lots of good comment was the Bayou Bash on the 23rd. Many people have said they wanted the group of Cajun musicians to return, and we hope that can be arranged."

MIA Accounting Eyed

By PAUL PAGE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Joint U.S.-Vietnam efforts to account for 1,761 Americans still listed as missing from the Vietnam War could begin soon, a State Department official said today.
David Lambertson, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, made that assessment following four days of meetings in Hanoi last week between Vietnamese officials and technical experts from the United States.
"While there are certain arrangements that will need to be worked out, we anticipate that joint activities, surveys, investigations and excavations could begin quite soon," Lambertson said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program.

"We anticipate a substantially higher level of activity over the next three months," said Lambertson, who termed the talks "quite productive."
He said the sites that will be examined remain to be determined.
In the talks last week, the United States agreed to consider Vietnam's humanitarian problems in exchange

ABRASION AND EROSION

Abrasion and erosion are not forms of dental decay, yet they are the same in the sense that they are also conditions in which substance is lost from the teeth. Abrasion is a mechanical wearing away of the teeth from such causes as nervous grinding (bruxism), excessively vigorous horizontal brushing, and gripping pipe stems between the teeth.

Erosion, on the other hand, is loss of tooth substance by a chemical process that does not involve known bacterial action. It usually appears as a smooth, highly polished, scooped-out area on the enamel surface at the junction close to the gum line. Although it might be mistaken for an area abraded by excessive brushing, the condition usually occurs in people who do not brush their teeth.

In many cases of abrasion and erosion, the dentist may be able to restore the damage portions of the teeth, depending on the extent and/or the location of the defect.

We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Construction Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending edged up 0.1 percent in June as continued strength in non-residential building offset declines in housing and government projects, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said building activity rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $402.8 billion in June, following a 0.8 percent increase in May. In April, construction plunged 1.1 percent after soaring 2.8 percent in March. The June level was 2.6 percent higher than a year ago.

The strength came from a 2.5 percent increase in spending on non-residential construction, which climbed to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $99.2 billion, led by big jumps in both factory and hotel-motel construction. It was the fourth consecutive monthly increase.

Factory construction rose 5.7 percent and now stands 21 percent higher than it was a year ago. U.S. manufacturers have boosted investment on new factories because of a surge in export sales caused by the weaker dollar.

Hotel and motel construction increased 19.4 percent after falling for two months.

Construction of office buildings in June was off by 0.4 percent from the May level. However, the small decline followed increases in May, April and March, and the June rate was still 12 percent higher than a year ago, something of a puzzle to analysts because of lingering high vacancy rates in that sector caused by widespread overbuilding in previous years.

Farm Scene

Hay producers in Pitt County often aim for high yields of hay when that should not be the primary goal. Hay growers should attempt to produce optimum quality rather than top yield. Most often, if high yields are obtained from a hay field, low quality hay results. Lower quality hay means less profit whether you are feeding hay to your own livestock or selling it.

Horse and dairy markets demand high quality hay for top performance. Low quality hay fed to your own livestock will cause poor animal performance, also.

Stage of maturity when harvested is the most important factor that affects hay quality. All forages will produce a more nutrition hay when cut at early maturity rather than waiting until the head or seed stage. As legumes and grasses grow from the vegetative to the reproductive (seed) stage, they become higher in fiber and high in content, lower in protein content, digestibility, and acceptability to livestock.

For top quality, fescue should be cut at the boot to early head stage for the first cutting with aftermath cuts at four to six week intervals. For bermudagrasses, the first cutting should be at a 15- to 18-inch height and later cuttings should be made every four to five weeks for best quality. Allowing bermuda to get long and stemmy may produce high yields, but quality will be poor.

Hay producers should regularly have their hay tested to determine the quality of their product. The NCD A Forage and Feed Testing Lab can test forages for moisture, protein, and many other nutrients for only a five dollar fee. Knowing the quality of hay produced can be a large selling incentive and can help in balancing nutritional needs for cattle and horses.

Jobless Rate Rises

RALEIGH (AP) — The unemployment rate rose in 55 of North Carolina's 100 counties in June, largely because of an influx of students in the workforce, the state Employment Security Commission reported.

Figures from the commission Friday showed that one county experienced a rate over 10 percent. Graham had 12.3 percent, down from 13.4 percent in May.

One year ago this month, the unemployment rate fell in 98 of the state's 100 counties and in all nine of the state's metropolitan statistical areas. Six counties saw jobless rates of over 10 percent. Graham's rate was highest at 17.1 percent.

This June, the jobless rates in the metropolitan statistical areas were: Asheville, 2.9 percent, down from 3.2 percent in May; Burlington, 2.9 percent, unchanged; Charlotte-Gastonia-Rock Hill, S.C., 3.2 percent, up from 2.9 percent; Fayetteville, 4.2 percent, down from 4.1 percent; Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point, 3 percent, from 2.8 percent; Hickory, 2.9 percent, from 2.7 percent; Jacksonville, 2.8 percent, from 2.7 percent; Raleigh-Durham 2.6 percent, from 2.5 percent, and Wilmington, 4.4 percent, from 4.2 percent.

Proposal OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal to keep artifacts from the Civil War ironclad Monitor in North Carolina was approved last week by the U.S. House of Representatives.

The proposal, authored by Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., directs the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to provide appropriate artifacts from the Monitor for display in North Carolina. NOAA is required to develop, in consultation with the state of North Carolina, a plan for the permanent display of artifacts within six months after enactment. This plan is to include possible display sites and suitable artifacts, as well as suggest an interpretive plan for display.

The wreck of the Monitor lies 16 miles off North Carolina's Outer Banks in the area known as 'The Graveyard of the Atlantic.' The ship is an important part of the history of coastal North Carolina and to run the risk of losing our ability to play a role in interpreting the history of this famous ship would be intolerable," Jones said.

Wetlands Opened

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission will open the Roanoke River Wetlands in northeastern North Carolina to special permit hunting this fall.

The commission's Division of Wildlife Management will issue permits through a computer selection process for hunting white-tailed deer, waterfowl, wild turkey, racoon and small game. The schedule will offer two bow and arrow deer hunts from Sept. 30 to Oct. 1, and Oct. 7-8. A two-day muzzleloader hunt on Oct. 14-15 is scheduled, along with gun hunting dates for deer of Oct. 28-29, Nov. 25-26, Dec. 9-10 and Dec. 30-31.

A limited number of trapping permits will be issued for the period Jan. 21-31, 1989.

The Wildlife Commission has acquired five tracts of land totaling 9,108 acres that make up the Roanoke River Wetlands. They include the Conine Island, Company Swamp, Speller-Outlaw, Broadneck and Urquhart tracts. Hunting for deer, wild turkey and small game will be allowed on all five tracts of land, but waterfowl hunting will be allowed only on Conine Island.

Cobb Closes Clinics

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro chiropractor Dr. Russell A. Cobb, under indictment for making false statements to banks to obtain loans, has closed most of his clinics and has begun to sell off real estate in an effort to repay millions of dollars to creditors, officials say.

Ten of the 11 Cobb Chiropractic Clinics has been closed, leaving the main Greensboro clinic in business, Cobb's attorney, Douglas Harris of Greensboro, said Friday.

The 10 clinics in North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Oklahoma and Virginia were closed as part of an effort to reorganize Cobb's business and pay off creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, Harris said.

A plan for Cobb to repay his creditors will be filed with the bankruptcy court in September, Harris said. The plan will call for Cobb to retain his Greensboro clinic and his Greensboro home.

Cobb is expected to be discharged this week from the federal psychiatric facility at Butner, where a U.S. magistrate sent him last month to determine whether he is legally sane and competent to stand trial.

Grants Awarded

RALEIGH (AP) — Some health departments and North Carolina community groups have been awarded nearly $350,000 in federal funds to conduct AIDS education and prevent programs, a state health official says.

"We only wish we had more money available so that more of the applicants could have received support," Dr. Ronald H. Levine, state health director, said last week.

The money was given to North Carolina by the federal Centers for Disease Control for distribution to community groups. Part of the grant money was awarded a year ago, but it went unspent while state officials studied the most suitable way to select the community groups.

The $350,000 was awarded to groups in two categories most vulnerable to AIDS: minorities, and gay men and intravenous drug abusers.

Workers Sought

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Would you like to meet neighbors and feel like a patriot, while also pocketing some cash? Have you ever considered being an enumerator?

The U.S. Census Bureau is looking for a few good enumerators — or census workers, for short. In a couple of weeks, 1,000 are scheduled to fan out over nonurban areas of Piedmont North Carolina, knocking on doors and compiling address lists for the 1990 census. More workers will begin canvassing east of Mecklenburg County to the Coastal Plains next month.

Census Bureau officials say their ideal job candidates are retirees, school teachers on summer break, college students and homemakers. But the healthy economic climate and the growth of two-worker families is making their search for census workers tougher than usual.

Enumerators, who earn $5.50 an hour, are paid during a three-day training session and usually earn about $1,000 for their four to six weeks.

The bureau is trying some new wrinkles to attract them. Patriotism, for example.

Luken Seeks Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tobacco industry already is fighting a call by U.S. Rep. Tom Luken, D-Ohio, for banning cigarette ads and imposing sharp restrictions on cigarette manufacturers.

"The economic power and arrogance of the tobacco companies require a comprehensive legislative approach towards achieving a smoke-free society," Luken said.

The bill Luken introduced last week would end all advertising and promotion of tobacco products and bar their sale from vending machines. It would also require warning labels on all cigarette packages saying cigarettes are addictive.

Officials cautioned that Congress failed to adopt any of the 160 anti-tobacco bills proposed in 1985-86 and only one of more than 100 proposed in the current session.

Texas Bank Reopened Today Under Guiding Hand Of NCNB

DALLAS (AP) — When the 171 branches of the insolvent First Republic Bank Corp. reopened today as branches of NCNB Texas National Bank, NCNB Corp. of Charlotte became the new boss of 15,000 employees.

"We are excited that we can build unencumbered by the burdens of the past," said Francis "Buddy" Kemp, president of Charlotte, N.C.-based NCNB and new chairman of NCNB Texas National Bank.

First Republic Bank, Texas' largest bank holding company, was declared insolvent Friday by the U.S. comptroller of the currency, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which loaned First Republic $1 billion in March, called its note.

When the flagship bank could not repay the obligation, authorities took over the bank and its subsidiaries across the state and the FDIC, contributing up to $4 billion, awarded them to NCNB.

As a condition of the sale, NCNB agreed to use its corporate name as part of its new identity, company officials said.

The North Carolina company, with $28.6 billion in assets, will contribute $210 million to $240 million in new capital, which it said it expects to raise in a private placement.

Dallas billionaire Ross Perot guaranteed NCNB's contribution, although he said Saturday he doesn't believe he will be called upon to invest.

NCNB officials said Saturday they plan to rebuild the company by serving small- and middle-sized businesses, using an Internal Revenue Service provision for tax loss write-offs and Perot's backing. "The Texas marketplace holds good long-term potential," said Hugh McColl, NCNB chairman. "With the exception of real estate, corporate and middle markets are alive and well in Texas."

On Sunday, NCNB began rebuilding public confidence in the Texas bank, taking out full-page newspaper ads proclaiming: "The newest bank in Texas is one of the oldest banks in Texas."

"The biggest change is there's going to be money available at NCNB Texas National Bank," McColl said. "The first thing (Texans) are going to notice is we're back on offense. People who are quite capable bankers are going to be out there lending money again and not collecting bad loans."

McColl said he first began considering a bid for First Republic Bank during the first week of April. "Our bid is essentially the bid we made early in the process," he said.

The North Carolina company, with assets of $28.6 billion, will pay $210 million to $240 million in new capital, which it expects to raise in a private placement.

Under terms of the transaction, the FDIC will initially hold a 20 percent stake in NCNB Texas National. Over the next five years, NCNB firm will have the option to buy 100 percent interest.

As it gradually increases its position in NCNB Texas National, the corporation plans to sell public stock, said Timothy P. Hartman, NCNB chief financial officer.

"Success doesn't depend on quick recovery in Texas," Hartman said.

But he said it was unlikely NCNB would walk away from the deal after five years, as is possible under the contract.

In a presentation for stock analysts scheduled for today, NCNB officials envision former First Republic Bank could contribute 38.5 percent of corporate earnings in 1994 — the first year of 100 percent NCNB ownership. That compares with 2.9 percent earnings expected in 1989.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Let It Stand

State Needs Vigorous Enforcement

If an act is illegal, it's illegal.

And if a law is broken, the punishment should reflect the scope and extent of the infraction. Any other course of action is unfair.

That's why a recommendation by an administrative law judge to reduce a $5.7 million fine against Texasgulf Chemicals to a mere $20,000 is folly. The air pollution violations the company committed were serious occurrences. They placed unacceptable levels of noxious substances in the air — more than legal limits allow.

And there is sound logic behind these limits. The substances emitted were noxious enough to cause eye and skin irritations in nearby communities — noxious and continuous enough to affect vegetation.

Pollution discharge limits protect public health and safeguard the environment. They are established for good reasons — much industrial waste and many by-products of manufacturing are hazardous. They are harmful to people and spoil natural resources.

The only way to make sure these harmful substances don't find their way into rivers, streams and the atmosphere is by setting standards and making the punishment stiff enough to ensure compliance. Strict monitoring, backed up with substantial penalties for violators, puts the teeth in pollutions standards.

There is no question about Texasgulf's transgressions. The state clearly documented the violations, which occurred for more than three years. It has an obligation to assess a fine reflective of the infraction.

Suggesting a multi-million dollar fine be reduced to a paltry $20,000 ignores the impact of the violations and the enforcement responsibility of state regulatory agencies. It leaves these agencies, charged with forcing polluters to comply with soundly-drawn guidelines, relatively powerless to impose effective penalties. An Environmental Management Commission official said the reduction would "tear the guts out" of the state's enforcement program. That is a correct assessment.

The fine should stand as charged. This position should imply no vendetta against Texasgulf; it is simply the right course of action against a company that broke North Carolina's pollutions laws.

If the state is to let polluters know it means business, vigorous enforcement power is essential. Besides, if an act violates established standards, it violates standards. Let the fine stand.

Spleen & Blood For Profit

BOSTON — John Moore never planned to make his fortune out of his spleen. The 43-year-old Seattle sales manager had already hit one jackpot. In 1976, he'd been treated for leukemia and recovered. Nevertheless, Moore may go into the annals of medical history as the Three Billion Dollar Man.

As part of the treatment to cure his cancer, doctors at UCLA in Los Angeles removed his spleen. He probably gave it no more thought than you might give a tonsil or an appendix left on the cutting-room floor. But it turns out that John Moore's spleen wasn't like yours and mine. It was unique.

Two researchers, Drs. David Golde and Shirley Quan, took his tissue and, using genetic-engineering techniques, split it, recombined it and developed a cell-line that could be enormously helpful to cancer victims. And enormously profitable as well.

The doctors neglected to tell Moore what they were doing with his tissue. For seven years, he came from Seattle for checkups. Each time they took a bit more blood, blood serum or skin. They never asked him for permission to use any of this for commercial purposes.

Once it has left the body, a person's spleen or blood or even urine is the trash that you don't want washing up on the beach. But these researchers took out a patent on Moore's trash. They entered into contracts with a bioengineering firm and a pharmaceutical company that were worth close to $500 million dollars. These companies figure that the products made from Moore could be parlayed into that $3 billion by 1990.

Now Mr. Moore wants a piece of the action that comes from the pieces of his body. And last week, a California court ruled for the first time that he or anyone else has the right to his bodily parts, even when they're outside his body. Blood and bodily substances, those waste products, are his "tangible personal property." So Moore has the right to sue for some of the money.

Admittedly, John Moore's spleen wouldn't have been worth a chicken's liver without the doctors' brains. The researchers maintain that they were actually paid for their hi-biotech services, not for his very raw material. But it was his unique material.

In the bio-tech revolution, it is the human body, not iron or steel or plastic, that's at the source. Are the bio-capitalists going to be allowed to dig without consent into our genetic codes, they market them?

Arthur Caplan, a bioethicist from the University of Minnesota, thinks of John Moore like a farmer with oil on his land. "He can't do anything with it. He doesn't have a drill or a pump. Only the oil company knows how to turn his resource into something valuable. Nevertheless, like the farmer, he says, 'It doesn't matter if fate put this on my land. If you want it you have to pay for it.'"

But until now, few people thought their bodily waste products — most of which will not be named in this family newspaper — still belonged to them. "With gene-splicing techniques, the sudden question," says Caplan, "is what right do I have to control what happens to my spleen or uterus or even urine? If someone draws my blood to test it, is it still mine?"

The court's answer? "A patient must have the ultimate power to control what becomes of his or her tissues. To hold otherwise would open the door to a massive invasion of human privacy and dignity in the name of medical progress." If anything is truly personal, uniquely ours, it's our genetic code.

This case has riveted the attention of the exploding biotechnology industry. The bio-capitalists don't want to bargain for every cell with its owner. The researchers don't want to share the rewards from their labor. And every hospital worker can envision a new avalanche of paperwork — consent forms — to be filled out before anyone allows the use of their "waste" products for research.

None of this paints a very attractive picture. There may be people who market their tissue as if it were pork bellies or wheat futures. If we discover the cure for AIDS in one person's blood, he or she can offer blood up for auction. The whole thing lacks something called altruism. But when scientists go into big business, why should the patient be the only altruist?

John Moore has every reason to try and reclaim some of the take on his tissue. He is unlikely to set off a rush of people who go digging in their biological backyards. Three Billion Dollar Men are even rarer than dirt farmers who strike oil.

Protecting A Baby In Jail

WASHINGTON — Brenda A. Vaughan is pregnant, due Sept. 15 to give birth to her first child. The venue for what is often called a happy event will be the D.C. Jail. Vaughan has been officially convicted of passing bad checks (for which the sentence is usually probation) and unofficially of taking drugs. The sentence for that is jail until the baby is delivered.

"I'm going to keep her locked up until the baby is born because she tested positive for cocaine when she came before me," Superior Court Judge Peter H. Wolf said when sentencing Vaughan. "She's apparently an addictive personality and I'll be darned if I'll have the baby born that way."

Some facts. Vaughan is 30 and unmarried. She was convicted of passing $721.98 in checks against the account of an employment agency where she had worked. The agency had put Vaughan through a private drug-rehabilitation program — with no apparent success. Vaughan tested positive to cocaine, but admits only to using marijuana on the day of her sentencing — not what's known as a smart career move.

Wolf's decision was hailed by some as "Solomonic" — and just to show how Solomonic he is, the judge went on vacation and refuses to talk to reporters. Others, though, denounced the decision. "He was wrong to sentence her to jail to protect her fetus," said the legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union. "That's her business, not his."

And Dorothy Jones, president of the D.C. chapter of the National Organization for Women, said: "It's just part of a terrible trend of putting fetal rights over women's rights. They're treated as vessels for the fetus, not individuals. If it were a man in this case, he would have received a lesser sentence."

This is one of those dilemmas where everyone has a point. But Judge Wolf has embarked down a road that ought to give anyone pause. At what point should the state step in to play parent? After all, not much is known about infants born addicted to cocaine except that they are far better off than those addicted to heroin. One expert, Dr. Stephen Kandell of New York's Beth Israel Hospital, says cocaine addiction can result in an underweight newborn with detectably different brain-wave patterns. But the symptoms, he said, are "transient" — meaning they soon disappear and in no way can be compared to those caused by heroin addiction.

Contrast those findings with what we know about alcoholism. Not only is "fetal alcohol syndrome" life-threatening, but a pregnant woman who abuses alcohol may fall or neglect her diet. Deprived of alcohol, she may suffer seizures which could affect the blood supply of the fetus. Would the judge hold such a woman in jail? Should a judge hold such a woman in jail?

On the other hand, is the protection of Vaughan's fetus only "her business," as the ACLU says? Hardly. And does it matter that a man would be treated differently, as NOW says? That's silly. Men don't get pregnant. Vaughan has, and she's chosen to have her baby. She has her rights, but also her obligations. The foremost of them at the moment is to deliver a healthy baby.

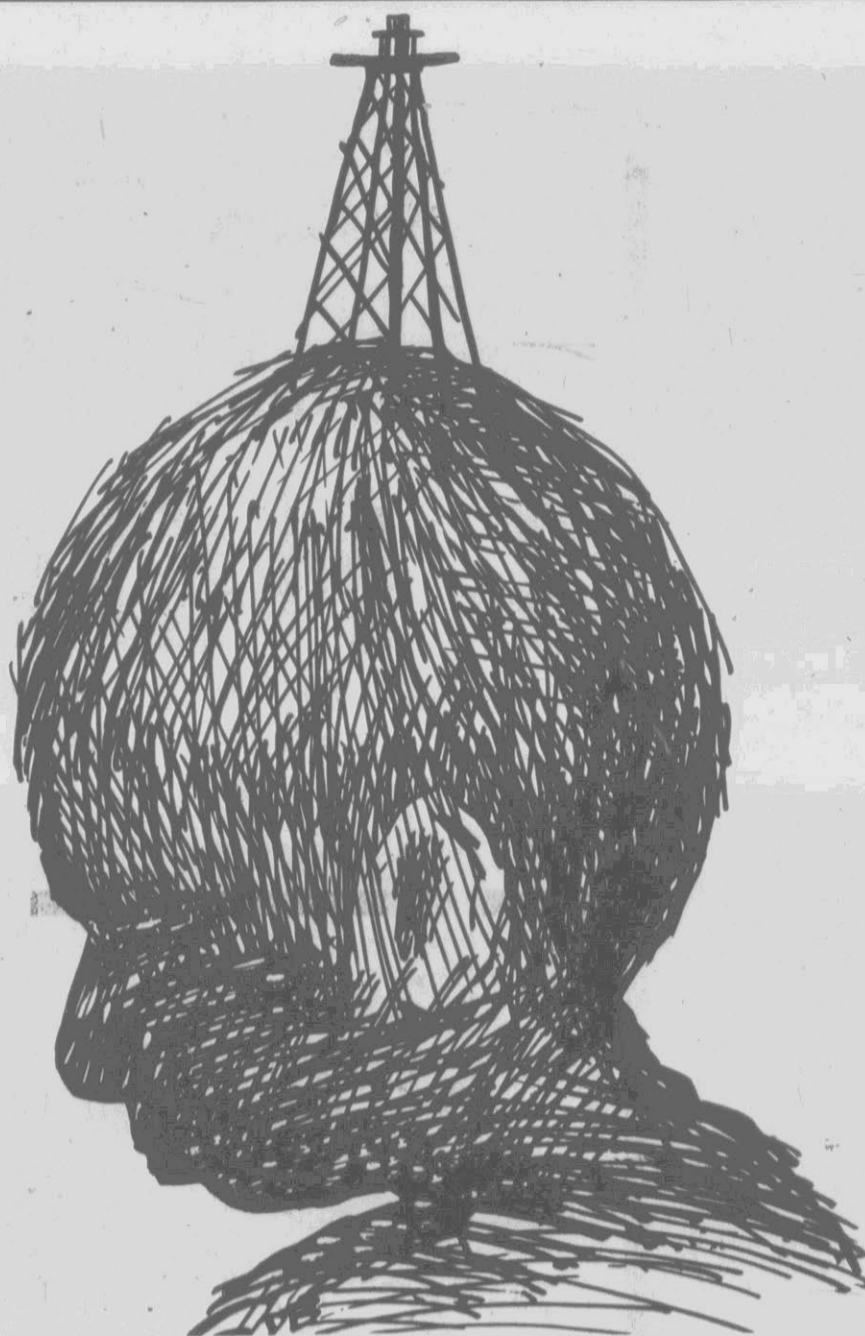

Vaughan's case is symptomatic of so much that is ugly and sad in our society. Here is a judge who feels he must keep a woman imprisoned because, really, there is no other way to ensure she remains drug-free — there are not enough social workers, clinics, drug-prevention programs to do the job. Here is a judge who also knows his control substantially ends the moment a child is born. Jail turns out to be the one environment we can control — and even then not entirely. Drugs are not unknown there.

But Wolf's good intentions are not the issue. He has reacted much as I do when I see a pregnant woman smoking — with fury, with indignation, with an almost consuming urge to berate her right on the spot. But more than cowardice keeps me mum. I am not the parent. That's not my child. A danger is present, but it is neither really clear nor present: Lots of healthy kids are born to smokers and, from the evidence, new-borns addicted to cocaine are in no real peril.

The judge has overstepped himself. He seems to be reacting to the anti-drug hysteria of the moment, subscribing in his own way to the ethic that nothing — not civil liberties as in testing, not proportion as in the Coast Guard's Zero Tolerance boat-seizure program and not common sense as when occasional marijuana use is equated to heroin addiction — should impede the war on drugs. "Just say no" may be a harmless enough slogan — but not when it's the response to a justifiable request for freedom.

Maybe not for the protection of her child, but certainly for the protection of us all, Vaughan ought to be let go.

Shuttle Launch Team Completes A Practice Countdown Today

full load of 143,000 gallons and other procedures were rehearsed.
The countdown was stopped as planned at 11 seconds before a mock liftoff by a simulated problem, and the launch team began practicing steps it would take to recover from a postponement — making the shuttle safe, draining the propellants and turning the vehicle around for another countdown and launch attempt.

A second countdown is to end with the test firing of Discovery's three main engines, with the shuttle bolted to the pad. The firing had been scheduled for Thursday, but NASA officials said it might have to be delayed another day or so because of the leak.

A decision on when to schedule the firing probably would not be made before Tuesday, Sieck said.
He said the launch team had done "an excellent job" in completing the countdown despite the difficulty. "We must now evaluate the results and schedule the work that needs to be done before the firing," he added.

The firing already had been postponed four times in 10 days.
A three-day delay was announced Friday because of a hydrogen leak and a balky oxygen pump.

The newest leak was in the same launch pad service mast as the earlier one, but officials would not know if it was in the same line until technicians traced it. They will not have access to the pad until after the launch team completes draining the hydrogen and oxygen Tuesday.

NASA said that despite Sunday's leak, it was satisfied that most requirements of the first part of the countdown had been met. Objectives missed were to be picked up during a second fueling and countdown for the test firing.

Officials believe the practice countdown delays, combined with an unresolved leak in Discovery's steering engine system, will slip Discovery's launch date from mid-September into October.

The purpose of the dual countdown test is to check modifications made to the engines and launch pad and to provide countdown practice for the launch team.

The 20-second engine ignition is considered critical to certifying Discovery for the first shuttle flight since Challenger exploded shortly after liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the crew of seven.

When the test is completed, officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration still must cope with the small gas leak in a steering engine system that is separate from Discovery's main engines.

Engineers have come up with a plan to reach and repair the leak by entering the shuttle's cargo bay and cutting a hole through the rear bulkhead into the steering engine compartment.

Another option, with a decision to be made after the test-firing, is to take Discovery off the pad and back to a hangar for repair, a move that could postpone the launch until November.

MIA

for Vietnamese cooperation on the MIA matter.

A leader of the effort to resolve the cases of those still listed as missing in action said on the same program that her group views last week's meeting as a sign the Vietnamese hope to put the issue to rest.

"We hope the Vietnamese are serious," said Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Prisoners of War Missing in Southeast Asia.

"I believe this time they are (serious) and I think they've recognized it's in their own national interest to cooperate in resolving this," she said.

Despite the increased cooperation, Lambertson said Vietnam's continued occupation of Cambodia remains as a barrier to normalization of relations between the two countries.

"I believe the Vietnamese understand quite clearly that normalization is something the United States would be prepared to enter into in the context of a Cambodian settlement that involves the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from that country," Lambertson said.

"We also want one which contains very effective guarantees against a return to power of the Khmer Rouge," he said.

Representatives from Vietnam, Laos, the Cambodian resistance and other southeast Asian nations met in Indonesia last week to discuss an end to the nine-year-old conflict. Vietnam has pledged to withdraw its 120,000 troops by 1990.

The Vietnamese withdrawal plan is "a hopeful sign, but we also look at it with due skepticism," said Lambertson.

Mrs. Griffiths said talks are quickening with other southeast Asian nations over MIAs.

"We have ongoing efforts with the Laos government. There are encouraging signs there as well, that the pace and level of cooperation is improving," she said. "I think we'll shortly see consultations again between Laos and U.S. officials."

Vietnam has denied allegations by some American private citizens that it is holding Americans captured in the war as prisoners.

Missiles Destroyed

MOSCOW (AP) — Four Soviet missiles were blown apart today at a test range on the steppes of Central Asia as the Soviet Union began destroying more than 1,700 missiles banned by a superpower treaty, Tass said.

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, who today arrived for a four-day visit to the Soviet Union, hailed the destruction of the missiles as a "great event."

Tass said that at noon Moscow time, four Soviet short-range missiles known in the West as SS-12s were destroyed in the presence of U.S. inspectors at the Saryozek test range in Soviet Kazakhstan, about 1,800 miles southeast of Moscow.

Western reporters watched from a distance of about two miles as a single explosion tore apart the four missiles.

London Barracks Blast Kills 1

By MAGGIE JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — An explosion and fire ripped through a two-story army barracks in north London early today, killing a soldier and seriously injuring two people, authorities said. The IRA claimed responsibility.

In a message to the Northern Ireland bureau of the British news agency, Press Association, the outlawed Irish Republican Army said its guerrillas laid the bomb in the Inglis barracks in the wooded Mill Hill neighborhood.

Police had said there was no immediate indication the 7 a.m. explosion was caused by a bomb.

Ten people, including soldiers and civilians, were hospitalized with injuries and the dead man was a soldier, said London Ambulance spokesman Chris Webb.

One soldier was rescued alive after being trapped for more than 30 minutes in the rubble, saved by a radiator thrown across him in the blast. It acted as a shield from the falling bricks and debris, said Col. William Butt, commander of the postal section of the barracks.

Butt said most of the injured had burns or neck and back injuries.

The blaze was under control two hours after the explosion, although pockets of flames remained at late morning, said London Fire Brigade spokesman Michael Whitty.

The Ministry of Defense said the barracks housed members of the Women's Royal Army Corps and also was used by the Postal and Courier Depot which is run by 250 staff from the corps, the Royal Engineers and the Royal Navy.

All mail for British servicemen and women using the British Forces Post Office system passes through the depot.

Scotland Yard Superintendent Anthony Robertson said the barracks' occupants were single men. He said 15 people were housed in the barracks where the explosion occurred. "There was an explosion at Inglis barracks in or near to the living quarters of army personnel," he said in a statement at the scene. "There is one fatality, two seriously injured and several other injuries."

"It has been shattered," Robertson said of the building.

The barracks border the Finchley parliamentary constituency of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, a prime IRA target.

The predominantly Roman Catholic guerrilla group, fighting to end British rule in mainly Protestant Northern Ireland, frequently attacks British military personnel.

Mrs. Thatcher was "deeply distressed to hear of the explosion" when she arrived in Perth, Australia, on an official visit, her London office said. "She is anxiously waiting for news of the people concerned and she sends deep sympathy for all the relatives concerned."

A Scotland Yard spokeswoman at the London police headquarters said an army disposal unit inspected a "suspect device" found in a car in a parking lot next to the barracks, but found it to be harmless.

Doctor Says Jordan Improving

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan was listed in serious condition this morning, recovering from a near drowning in her backyard pool, and a doctor says she could be out of the hospital within a week.

"Right now, I think things look very good that she'll get totally back to normal," said Dr. James Little, a neurologist. "She's very close to normal right now. I think she will continue to improve. As best as I can tell right now, she probably will regain full mental functions."

Ms. Jordan's condition was upgraded Sunday afternoon from critical to serious but stable, and she continued to improve Sunday night.

"She started her liquid diet tonight. She is breathing on her own. She is receiving supplemental oxygen, though," hospital spokeswoman Kari Larsen said.

Ms. Jordan, 52, gave the thumbs-up sign Sunday to her intensive care unit nurse and able to talk.

"She's in good spirits now because she knows she's going to get well," said Dr. William J. Deaton, a pulmonary specialist.

"She's emotional about that and a little bit teary-eyed some of the time, knowing what she's been through and how close she came to a real catastrophic event. But she still also has her jovial personality. She was joking a little bit this morning," Deaton said Sunday. "She is vastly improved."

Ms. Jordan, who gained national attention during the 1974 Watergate impeachment hearings, was flown by emergency helicopter to Brackenridge Hospital on Saturday after being found floating face-down in her pool.

Ms. Jordan's live-in companion, Nancy Earl, called paramedics, who restored her pulse and breathing.

Deaton said she came "within four to five minutes, 10 minutes at most" of suffering severe brain damage and possibly death.

"She does not know what happened and was clearly concerned about it and had indicated that she didn't think she would go swimming alone again," Deaton said.

Ms. Jordan was breathing Saturday night only with the help of a ventilator, but Sunday the device was gone and she was responding to questions and talking, doctors said.

Doctors said it isn't known what caused Ms. Jordan to lose consciousness in the pool, but the lack of oxygen caused cardiac arrest.

Deaton said he expected Ms. Jordan to remain in intensive care for 48 hours and to be hospitalized for about a week.

Monsanto Has Chemical Leak

SAUGET, Ill. (AP) — The second leak of a noxious chemical in 3½ months from a Monsanto Chemical Co. plant sent more than 120 people to hospitals, and at least nine were admitted though none had serious injuries, officials said.

Less than three gallons of phosphorous trichloride, a component of the herbicide Lasso, escaped into the air when a "rupture disk," designed to break when pressure built up in the tank, gave way Sunday morning, said Diane Bartolozzo, a Monsanto spokeswoman.

The leak was plugged within five minutes, and no evacuation was ordered, she said.

On April 17, 22 square blocks of neighboring East St. Louis were evacuated when about 250 gallons of the substance spilled during loading onto a railroad tank car, officials have said.

"It's just a normal thing," Willa Dean Toombs, 40, who lives about four blocks from the plant, said after Sunday's leak. "We're always getting fumes."

Remark Irks Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush says Michael Dukakis' use of an old Greek saying about rotten fish to condemn the Reagan administration's record on ethics was "very tasteless and offensive."

"I'll tell you, what bothered me a little bit about what he said yesterday was that very offensive and very tasteless attack on the president where he made a comparison to a dead fish," Bush said. "And I think the American people will reject that kind of campaign tactic."

"You don't make tasteless, offensive analogies to the president of the United States, that's what I think," Bush told Cable News Network on Sunday.

Dukakis, appearing in Louisville, Ky., on Saturday, used the saying when asked whether President Reagan or the vice president should be blamed personally for the alleged misdeeds of Pentagon contractors, consultants and administrators.

"There's an old Greek saying, and I suspect the Italians have the same one: 'You know, the fish rots from the head first.' It starts from the top," said Dukakis.

Certified Carpet Inspector

WHAT DOES "CLEAN" MEAN?...

Ever heard the saying, "When pricing goods or services, be sure you're comparing apples to apples?" So it is when selecting a carpet cleaner. Frequently, you see ads for cleaning specials, most of which seem too good to be true... Usually, they're just that! Therefore, your decision's made easier if you know the five basic steps involved in quality cleaning.

First—prevacuuming with a heavy-duty unit. "Why can't I vacuum my own carpet and skip this step?" you say. First, the cleaner's vacuum should be more powerful than yours, and second, he should know where the most destructive soils reside. Obviously, he should also know the best techniques for removing these soils. Since the average carpet contains 55% abrasive soil, if it's not removed during cleaning, carpet fibers become dingy and ultimately may be destroyed due to abrasive wear.

Second—preconditioning chemical application. Usually, soil accumulates in carpet over several years. To suggest that it's possible to spray on a cleaning solution and vacuum out instantly suspended soil is sheer oversimplification.

CareMaster
Cleaning Systems, Inc.
Since 1968

Often, homeowners complain about the "faded" or dingy traffic area from the den to the kitchen, even after cleaning is completed. Usually, that's not fading; it's remaining soil which never was properly suspended during the pre-conditioning phase.

Third—rinsing (extraction) of soil. Just as your hair or clothing require rinsing of suds and excess detergent, so also carpet fibers must be thoroughly rinsed. Of course, this is why "steam" (extraction) cleaning has become so popular.

Fourth—finishing. This involves using a specialized brush, comb or rake to set the carpet's pile for best appearance and minimum distortion while drying. It's also essential for uniform distribution of after treatments, such as deodorants or carpet protectors.

Fifth—drying. A conscientious cleaner is extremely concerned about speeding up drying. Not only does damp carpet provide a perfect environment for mildew growth, but it's also a major source of inconvenience for you and your family.

Well, there you have it. That's what "clean" means! If you don't get all five, you don't get the quality we think you deserve.

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy: If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

Professional Magician Performs At Age 12

By CHRIS DAHL
Associated Press Writer
VERNON, Conn. (AP) — Rodger L. Phillips worked the toy-cluttered room at Yellow Brick Road Child Care Center like the professional magician he is, sensing the right amount of prompting needed by his audience of 3- to 7-year-olds and mixing in just a bit of kiddy shtick.

The Little Wizard, as he is known, pulled Tofu the Ferret out of his magical box and, about five minutes into the show, the audience was his.

Each of the children was allowed to pet the ferret as he carried it around the room. A few minutes later, he had each of the children wiggle their fingers at another little box. Out popped a white dove named Merlin.

The magician instinctively knew that the little kids would go for the animal tricks.

After all, Phillips was only about six years older than most of his audience members. At age 12, the skinny, bespectacled sixth-grader from King Philip Elementary in West Hartford is among the nation's youngest professional magicians. He's a visiting member of the Society of American Magicians. He would be a full member if he met the age requirement of 14.

"I think if you give kids or young children a completely serious show, they would be bored to death," Phillips said matter-of-factly in an interview after the recent matinee.

Phillips has been performing illusions for about five years now, ever since his father gave him a beginner's magic set. He spends endless hours practicing his craft and attends a magicians' camp on Long Island during the summer.

"It took me a few years to get comfortable with the magic, then I went pro," he said.

He's been wowing audiences with his fast-paced show for about a year and a half now. His following is growing steadily and he commands anywhere from $80 to $150 a performance. It beats mowing lawns and shoveling snow, but his savings are small because of high overhead, he said.

"It all goes back into the hat between buying equipment and buying candy to pass out to the kids," he said. "The equipment is pricey."

Not only does he perform at daycare centers, but he does birthday parties, convalescent homes and town fairs. Recently he brought his act to the Old State House as part of the annual Taste of Hartford celebration.

Phillips' mother, Karen, an employee of the state Department of Human Resources, doubles as her son's driver, manager and public relations agent. She also helps him move equipment. But she draws the line when it comes to taking part in the show.

Karen Phillips doesn't get a percentage of Rodger's earnings, either, but her son pays for meals when they're on the road and "he does pay me back for some gasoline," she said.

An avid collector of Wizard of Oz memorabilia, Phillips enjoyed the irony of performing at Yellow Brick Road. In fact, the children welcomed him by rolling out a paper version of the famed path followed by Dorothy in L. Frank Baum's classic.

Midway through the show, little Cara Wachsam thought she'd figured out one of Phillips' tricks.

She heard his little wooden "Man in the Moon" head slide from one slot to the opposite slot when it was supposed to disappear. "I know how you did that. Open them both," she demanded, stirring the rest of the toddlers. "Yeah, open them both," they chimed in.

But a little stalling, some quick hand work and a lot of fast-talking helped Phillips recover. He simultaneously revealed two empty slots to the wide-eyed children.

It was the show's only shaky moment.

Anne Gould, another student, was delighted to help turn blue and green pieces of silk into fruit. The 25 or so children cheered in unison when wooden Freddy got his head back. They giggled when a red-faced Tommy Pace fell for the old snake-in-the-peanut-brittle-can trick.

For the finale, Phillips handed out candy as his mother played a scratchy old Glenn Miller rendition of "Over the Rainbow." The candy, like the animal tricks, is another can't-miss.

As the children's parents arrived to pick up their kids, Phillips and his mother packed two trunks of magic tricks and a couple of small animals into their red four-wheel-drive vehicle for the late afternoon ride back to West Hartford.

"This is the real yellow brick," the Little Wizard said, all smiles as he showed his mother his big, yellow paycheck.

Court Says One Good Turn Legally Deserves Another

DEAR ABBY: Grandma created quite a stir among your readers concerning her usual $50 birthday gift to her selfish descendants who, after a while, thought they had it coming.

Did you know that it is a legally established fact that the practice of voluntarily giving gifts over a period of time implies an obligation to continue that practice?

Several years ago, when the mills of the American Rolling Mill Co. in Middletown, Ohio, were really rolling, the company, out of the goodness of its corporate heart, began giving free turkeys to its employees at Thanksgiving.

Then the company fell on hard times, and in the early 1980s it decided to discontinue the distribution of some 15,000 turkeys as an economy measure.

The Steelworkers Union set up a howl and took the company to court. Believe it or not, the court took the position that through the company's generous practice over a period of years, it did indeed owe the employees their Thanksgiving turkeys! Small wonder they call them "gobblers"? — JIM GRIF-FITH, PORT RICHEY, FLA.

DEAR JIM: Thanks for an interesting story. It serves to reinforce the fact that that which is legal is not necessarily moral or even fair.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I are both 32. We've been living together for 11 years (unmarried). We have two children, ages 10 and 3, and are expecting again in September. We are planning to marry in December and we'd like a church wedding with gown and veil, tuxedos and bridesmaids, etc. Family members have expressed disapproval, stating that after 11 years and three children, this would not be appropriate.

Dear Abby

My question: What, in your opinion, would be an appropriate ceremony for two people in our situation? We would be handling the entire expense ourselves. Your immediate reply would be greatly appreciated. Thank you. — MAKING IT LEGAL

DEAR MAKING: I agree with your family. A quiet, less formal wedding with close friends and family members, followed by a luncheon or dinner for those who attended, would be my recommendation. Congratulations.

DEAR READERS: With summer here, and a record-breaking heat wave across the nation, this bulletin published by the Animal Protection Institute in Sacramento, Calif., is well worth space in my column:

On a hot summer day, the inside of a car heats very quickly. For example: On an 85-degree day, the temperature inside your car — with the windows slightly opened — will reach 120 degrees. On warmer days it will go even higher.

A dog's normal body temperature is 101.5 to 102.2 degrees Fahrenheit. A dog can withstand a body temperature of 107-108 degrees Fahrenheit for only a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage — or even death. The closed car interferes with the dog's normal cooling process; that is, evaporation through panting.

Should your dog be overcome by heat exhaustion, immediate first aid can be given by immersing him or her in cold water until the body temperature is lowered.

Private Ceremony Conducted

MRS. CRELLIN

Janet Blair Davenport and Paul Iain Crellin, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at 11 a.m. at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Dan Earnhardt conducted the private double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edward Davenport Jr. of Farmville. Dr. and Mrs. John Keith Crellin of Chapel Hill are parents of the bridegroom.

Violin and piano selections were rendered by Dee Braxton and Elizabeth Sellers.

The bride wore a tea-length gown of white chantilly lace over taffeta designed with a lace capelet over a fitted sweetheart bodice. A silk Venise lace cameo etched with pearls accented the front bodice and the cape was edged with silk Venise lace. Tiers of lace bordered with satin formed the skirt which extended from a satin-sashed waistline. She carried a lace fan adorned with purple-throated orchids and stephanotis.

A brunch followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

After a wedding trip to New England, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is a research specialist with the Medical Foundation of ECU.

Adoption Announced

Joel R. Walker of Greenville announces the adoption of his stepchildren, Jeff and Sherri Whittington, on July 26, 1988. Their mother is Susan P. Walker.

Group Seeks Community Support

The local chapter of the Daughters of Isis, Rofelt Pasha Court No. 108, is appealing to the community to assist the Isisettes, the young women's organization it sponsors, to compete in Las Vegas Aug. 13-19.

There are 56 Daughters of Isis in the Rofelt Pasha Court No. 108 which serves eastern North Carolina. Some 17 of these live in Greenville. There are similar chapters throughout the nation.

Martha Mudd is local directress of the youth group called Isisettes developed to help the 20 young participants learn self-discipline and the need to continue their educations.

Isisettes members range in age from 7 to 12. They are now being judged on their participation in an essay contest on the topic, "The Importance of School." They have had programs from the community on the arts, education, etiquette and other topics their leaders consider constructive.

A drill team has been developed out of the Isisettes. Wearing white body suits, gold skirts and white tennis shoes and socks, the girls have participated in such events as the Greenville Christmas Parade, the East Carolina University Homecoming Parade, and a Shriners Parade held in New Bern.

This past May 26-29, the group took part in Region II Gala Day held in Greensboro and came home with a third place prize in the East Coast Divisional Championship which makes them eligible to compete in a national competition in Las Vegas. Most of the other contestants were in the 16-19 year age range, so their sponsors are particularly proud that the younger girls did so well, Ms. Mudd said.

Daughters of Isis members have set up an Isisettes Competition Fund. They are requesting full or partial sponsorships for each of the participants. The cost of travel and lodging for each will be $250.

Contributions may be sent to Isisettes, P.O. Box 1056, Greenville. Checks may be made payable to the Isisettes Competition Fund. For information, contact Martha Rudd or Linda Reid at 756-1673.

Hussein Cuts Ties

 It was the first time Hussein, who has previously backed the idea of an independent Palestinian state, told Palestinians in the West Bank to take affairs into their own hands.
 The move could make the PLO Israel's only potential negotiating partner in talks to resolve the issue, dashing hopes for Secretary of State George P. Shultz's peace initiative.
 Under the Shultz plan, Jordan would have been partially responsible for representing the Palestinians in proposed Middle East peace talks. Israel refuses to talk to the PLO, calling it a terrorist organization.
 Shultz, speaking Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," denied Hussein's moves would pressure the United States and Israel to find a way to talk to the PLO.
 "We will stay right where we are. We're ready to talk to them (PLO) when they take certain steps, which are very clear, and as far as I can see, not too onerous," he said.

Hussein said Sunday that Jordan's links to the West Bank "hamper the Palestinian struggle to gain international support for the Palestinian cause, as the national cause of a people struggling against foreign occupation."
 The uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which has claimed the lives of 235 Arabs and four Israelis, has given greater international prominence to the Palestinian cause and increased calls for an independent state.
 Hussein said Sunday that his moves were "in response to the wish of the Palestine Liberation Organization ... and the prevailing Arab conviction that such measures would contribute to the struggle of the Palestinian people."
 Today, the senior Jordanian official said it is "up to the new Jordanian government to decide on measures to handle the break of administrative and legal ties with the West Bank and Gaza Strip."

 "I screamed for help and heard someone from above telling me to be patient because at that time nothing could be done to help me," Mrs. Gee told Bernama.

Cheong Ah Chey, 21, who saw the pier collapse, was quoted by the news agency as saying, "The crowd at the waiting area was moving toward the gate to get into the ferry, which had just berthed, when suddenly the platform below them gave way."
 Three cars entering the ferry were crushed and a port commission office was destroyed, officials said.

 ranged. The festival food sale that day, a non-profit affair, was a complete sell-out.
 "All in all, it was a very successful week," Ms. Meier said, "one we all feel good about."

The death toll from the collapse was considered likely to rise, as many of the injured were hospitalized in critical condition, Bernama quoted police and other officials as saying.
 Hospitals and clinics in the area initially reported 969 people injured, with 502 admitted and 467 treated and released, Bernama said. Officials today said 417 people remained hospitalized.

Cooldown At Talladega

Schrader Wins Dash To Finish; Gets Lost Looking For His First Victory Lane

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Ken Schrader knew how to get to the finish line. It was the route to Victory Circle that proved elusive.

Following his victory Sunday in the Talladega 500 at Alabama International Motor Speedway, his first Winston Cup stock car triumph in 108 starts, the 33-year-old native of Fenton, Mo., was wandering around looking for the official place of celebration.

"I turned in where I normally do before I realized it wasn't the right place to be," Schrader said with a laugh.

"Hell, I did the first part. I figured they (track officials) would get me where I needed to be."

The first part wasn't all that easy with Schrader coming out on top in a typical Talladega cavalry-charge finish. He drove from fourth place to first on the last lap to become the eighth driver to win his first Winston Cup race on the superfast 2.66-mile, high-banked oval.

"Man, with 20 laps to go we were running 13th," Schrader said. "Harry (Hyde, his crew chief) was yelling at me to get up there so we could at least get a shot at it. We were scratching pretty good."

Schrader, whose best previous finish was second a week earlier at Pocono, sliced through the pack and got to fourth with three laps remaining.

"With two laps to go, I figured we had a pretty good chance at it. Then, when everybody started scrambling around, I figured we were either going to get a pretty good finish or get in a real big crash."

The crowd of about 80,000 was standing and its roar almost drowned out the sound of the powerful cars as Dale Earnhardt, the two-time defending Winston Cup champion, led going into the last of the 188 laps in the 500-mile race.

Geoff Bodine, who earlier had made up a lost lap caused by a flat tire, was second, with Sterling Marlin third and Schrader fourth, as they headed into the first turn.

Marlin moved to the outside, got past Bodine and pulled alongside Earnhardt. The cars of Earnhardt and Marlin bumped and both bobbed momentarily. Schrader's Chevrolet Monte Carlo then found an open lane and zoomed by on the high side of the banked track.

Bodine stayed in the middle of the track and held on to take second place, finishing one car-length behind Schrader.

Schrader is in his first season with the elite Hendricks Motorsports team, which also fields cars for Bodine and Darrell Waltrip. The winner said being with a top team made a difference in the way he drove at the finish.

"In the past, I've had to take extra good care of the car," he said. "It was usually the only one we had."

"This year, if it's lose the car or win the race, we're going to roll the dice. We've got seven more back at the shop. I just had to learn to drive like that."

Earnhardt, who stayed third in the season points behind leader Rusty Wallace and second-place Bill Elliott, said, "I was in the wrong place at the wrong time, I reckon."

"You can't do much with one car if the others are running in a bunch. I don't know what Sterling was doing. He hit me four or five times. I thought he was going to spin me out."

"Geoff was trying to keep the 44 car (Marlin) behind, then the 44 got rough with me. They all got to racing each other and forgot about winning the race."

Bodine had a slightly different opinion, saying, "That sure was fun. That's what NASCAR Winston Cup racing is all about. I believe it was a race driver's race."

Waltrip, who started from the pole after outqualifying everybody by nearly 2 mph, dominated much of the race before a broken camshaft stopped him on lap 162. He led 11 times for 123 laps.

"It really is frustrating," Waltrip said. "I've never had a car like that before. It was the fastest car I ever drove."

Asked if he could have beaten Waltrip, Schrader said, "Darrell was awful fast. When he dropped out, it opened the race up for everybody. I'm not saying he'd have won it, but he'd have been right there."

Schrader, who won $67,920, averaged 154.491 mph in a race slowed by eight caution flags for 32 laps.

The winner said neither team owner Rick Hendricks nor the 64-year-old Hyde had pressured him to get that first victory.

"Harry told me if we'd win a race in the first half (of the season), we'd be damn lucky and if we didn't win a race in the second half, we'd be damn unlucky," Schrader said. "We're looking at years together."

"But I know from other forms of racing I've been in that the first one is hard to get."

There were 30 lead changes among 14 drivers, and a NASCAR-record 19 cars finished on the lead lap. The previous record of 17 was set in the Daytona 500 in February.

There were no serious accidents in the race and no injuries reported.

Stargell Becomes 200th Inductee For Baseball

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Willie Stargell made it to the Hall of Fame by doing everything in a big way.

He hit huge home runs to win big games. He had a big smile for his teammates and the fans. And, he always has a big heart for those in need.

Now, to some, he's also bigger than life.

Stargell on Sunday became the 200th member inducted into the Hall of Fame as his golden plaque was unveiled on the steps of the National Baseball Library.

Many of Stargell's immortal brethren, including Ted Williams, Stan Musial and Ernie Banks, were on hand to see the newest member of their famous family.

"Coming out of Oakland, California, little did I know that once given the opportunity to do something that I dreamed of for many years — putting on a uniform — something unique would happen after spending four years in the minor leagues honing my skills so that I could get to the big leagues and perform such as so many of the great players (sitting) behind me," Stargell said.

Stargell was also joined by his family, several former teammates and one-time manager Chuck Tanner.

"There are so many people who have inspired me," Stargell said. "Baseball has afforded me the opportunity to rub shoulders with so many fine people. That has always been my bottom line. I am eternally grateful for these types of people in my life."

"I also accept this award for the people at the stadiums, the clubhouse guys, the batboys, the grounds crew, the announcers, the media."

In 21 years as an outfielder and first baseman with Pittsburgh, Stargell hit 475 home runs, drove in 1,540 runs and batted .282 in helping the Pirates win the World Series title in 1971 and 1979. In the '79 Series at the age of 38, Stargell hit .400 with three homers and was selected most valuable player.

Last January, Stargell became the 17th player to be elected in the first year of eligibility.

Stargell, who had five 100 RBI seasons and 953 extra-base hits, credits much of his success to Hall of Famer Roberto Clemente, who was a teammate for 11 years. Clemente was killed in a plane crash on Dec. 31, 1972 while on a mission of mercy to earthquake-shattered Nicaragua.

"I learned a lot from my teammates but I'd like to point out one particular teammate of mine who kind of shined a little brighter than most men," Stargell said of Clemente.

"He had the ability to play the game as if his life depended on every ball game."

"He taught me how to command respect rather than demand it. I'm talking about a gentleman who will always have a very special place in my heart — Roberto Clemente."

Through the years, Stargell also developed a special meaning to his teammates and people in need.

He was equally regarded for his qualities as a leader on the field and off, and was affectionately known as "Pops" to his younger Pirates teammates in the 1970s and early '80s.

Throughout his career, Stargell was active in many charities and helped raise hundreds of thousands of dollars to research sickle cell anemia, and he is currently honorary chairman of the Share Your Joy Campaign. The organization will be assisting parents to raise their children and reduce the incidence of child abuse.

"To the young people, I am living proof that hard work earns just rewards when you feel good about something," Stargell, a seven-time All-Star, said.

Prior to Stargell's induction, sportscaster Lindsey Nelson and sports columnist Jim Murray of the Los Angeles Times were given awards for their contributions to baseball.

"I've had a 60-year love affair with baseball and now it's requited," Murray said. "If I get to heaven and they don't have a pennant chase and magic numbers, then I know it won't be heaven."

For Stargell, Nelson and Murray on Sunday, heaven on earth was Cooperstown.

Hornets Don't Want Dawkins

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets have no interest in acquiring either Darryl Dawkins or 7-foot Utah Jazz center Melvin Turpin, said an official of the NBA team.

Jazz general manager David Checketts contacted the Hornets about a possible trade, but the expansion franchise says Turpin is not being considered for the team.

Backup Quarterbacks Shine In London Exhibition Game

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — The British billed it as "Marino-Montana II." But the Miami Dolphins-San Francisco 49ers exhibition game at Wembley Stadium turned out to be Dave Archer vs. Steve Young.

Marino and Montana, who led their teams to Super Bowl XIX in 1985, both started the game but watched the last three quarters from the bench.

Young, who relieved Montana, rallied the 49ers from a 10-0 deficit to a 20-14 lead, only to watch Archer score on a four-year rollout with 1:28 left for a 27-21 victory.

Archer faked a handoff, then sprinted into the left corner of the end zone for the game-winning score, thrilling the sellout crowd of 70,505.

"I knew it was a touchdown from the moment they called the play. It was something I have done a hundred times in practice," Archer said.

"The defense were really filling the inside lanes and I knew that just a token fake would draw them in."

Until Archer, the Dolphins' third quarterback, came on, it looked as if Young's running and passing was going to be enough to give the 49ers the victory.

"I really thought we had won the game," Young said. "But we gave away an easy touchdown and that really put us in a hole. And we couldn't stop them at the end."

The Dolphins led 10-0 after a three-yard touchdown from Lorenzo Hampton at 9:58 of the first quarter and a 45-yard field goal by Fuad Revez 10 seconds into the second period.

Young, a better scrambler than Montana, then entered the game and pumped life into the 49ers' offense.

Tom Rathman caught a two-year TD pass from Young 2:29 into the second quarter and Terrence Flagler scored from six yards out with 2:53 remaining in the half.

Revez connected on a 43-yard field goal with two seconds left in the half to cut the deficit to 14-13, and the Dolphins went ahead again when linebacker Jackie Shipp returned a fumble 11 yards for a touchdown with 5:02 left in the third period.

But after the kickoff, Young led the 49ers downfield and Doug Dubose ran seven yards for a touchdown and a 21-20 lead that looked like it might stand up.

But Archer, who entered the game in the final period of the rain-soaked game, had other ideas.

"He did an outstanding job in moving our young players down the field and keeping the pressure on," Dolphins coach Don Shula said. "We put them in a situation where they needed a touchdown to beat us."

"It was an excellent game, very physical, and it's great to start with a win even though it is just a pre-season game."

San Francisco coach Bill Walsh said he saw several positive aspects to his club's performance.

"It was very useful. We played about 70 men and learned a lot about ourselves," he said.

British football fans, whose numbers have grown since the game was given regular TV coverage over the past five years, also went home happy.

Snow Hill Wins East Crown

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill didn't get a sweep, but rolled up a 10-3 victory over Hamlet Sunday night to win the American Legion baseball eastern North Carolina championship. Hamlet denied Snow Hill its sweep by winning Saturday night, 5-4, to win its only game in the best-of-seven series that went five games.

Snow Hill will now advance to the state finals, meeting Kernersville in a best-of-seven series. That will get underway Wednesday night in Kernersville and continue there on Thursday. The series returns to Snow Hill on Friday and Saturday, with a fifth game Sunday, if needed. Play will return to Kernersville on Monday and Tuesday, if those games are needed.

The winning team will advance to regional play.

For Snow Hill, it will be its second trip to the state finals. Coach Jim Fulghum's 1981 team also made the finals, but bowed to Cherryville in four straight games.

Sunday night, Snow Hill battled the elements as well as Hamlet. The game was delayed by lightning and suffered three blackouts in the first three innings because of power failures.

Snow Hill pushed ahead in the top of the first on a solo, two-out home run by Tommy Eason. Hamlet matched that, but Snow Hill then moved ahead for good in the top of the second scoring four more times.

Anthony Jones opened the second with a single and Walt McKeel was hit by a pitch. Both were sacrificed up and scored on George Greene's double. Greene moved to third on the relay home and scored on a sacrifice by George Burnette. T.J. Johnson then singled and scored on a double by Eason.

Hamlet came back with one in the bottom of the inning, but never caught up again.

Snow Hill added two in the fifth on a homer by Shay Beaman, then picked up two more in the seventh and one in the ninth. Hamlet's other run also came in the ninth, that on a homer by Graham Sheppard.

Jones led the Snow Hill hitting with three, while Johnson, Eason, Beaman, McKeel and Greene each collected two.

Greene went the distance on the mound to collect the victory.

Saturday night, Hamlet scored in the first inning, then added three in the third to take a 4-0 lead.

Greene Central rallied in the bottom of the third to score three and get back in striking range. With two away, Burnette walked and Johnson homered. Eason and Beaman both walked and Chris West's single brought Eason over to trim it to 4-3.

Hamlet, however, added a fifth run in the fourth. Sheppard walked and Chip Hodges reached on an error. Stencil Morse walked to load the bases and a sacrifice fly by Eric Tillman brought in Sheppard.

Snow Hill rallied for one in the eighth and had the tying run on base in each of the last two frames, but failed to push it over.

Morse and Tillman each had two hits for Hamlet, while Cedric Collins had three and Burnette and Beaman each collected two.

"I've really got to give a lot of credit to Mike Vandiford," Fulghum said. He earned a save in the first game on Saturday, retiring nine straight batters with three strikeouts. Then, Saturday night, he came back in, gave up no runs, allowed just one hit and had strikeouts for six of the nine outs. He would have had the win if he had just come back. But he really made our pitching good this weekend."

Saturday's Game

Hamlet	103	100	000-3	8	1
Snow Hill	003	000	010-4	11	3

Thompson Captures National Title

A Greenville youth captured first place in the Junior Olympic National Track and Field Championships Sunday, setting a new age-group record along the way.

Sabrina Thompson, participating in the 9-10 age group, won her heat on Friday with a time of 13.10 seconds in the 100-meter dash. The old mark in her age group was 10.46 seconds.

Sunday, in the finals, she ran a 13.67 to win the championship. One other Greenville entrant failed to qualify for the finals. Tiffany Williams, a rising junior at Rose High School, participated in the 15-16 year old age group, running a leg in the 400-meter relay.

Mitchum, McNally Take Member-Member

Bill Mitchum and Danny McNally captured first place in the Greenville Country Club's Member-Member Tournament Sunday. They beat out the team of Julius Budacz and Walker Allen, winning on the fifth hole of a sudden death playoff after both teams finished the 36-hole event with 132 scores.

Third place in the championship flight went to the team of Dick Evans and Bill Lee, who carded a 133.

Skip Bright and Rhett Honeycutt won the 1st flight with a 134 total. Richard Holloman and Richard Moldin were second at 135, while Harrison Gaskins and Clifton Edwards took third, also with a 135.

In the second flight, Charles Young and Charles Ellis took first with a 134, followed in order by Connally Branch and Bill Clark at 135 and Bill Glenn and Don Patrick at 136.

Bobby Allison Returns To Alabama

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Bobby Allison's family, to avoid attention, decided to move the injured NASCAR driver from a Pennsylvania hospital to Birmingham while the attention of fans and writers was focused on the Talladega 500 race at nearby Alabama International Motor Speedway.

"We felt any media coverage or a highly visible or public return to Alabama would not aid his recovery at this time," Judy Allison said of her husband's return Sunday.

Allison spent 42 days in a Pennsylvania hospital after he was seriously injured in a crash at Pocono International Raceway.

Dale Witcher, a spokeswoman at Lakeshore Rehabilitation Complex in Birmingham, said the 50-year-old Hueytown driver arrived at the complex Sunday afternoon as the Talladega 500 was being run at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

"He's just arrived, so really at this point we have no idea what's going to be going on," she said.

Allison's son Davey, who was forced out of the Talladega 500 on lap 90 because of a dropped valve, said "We're just glad to have him home now. He's come a long way."

In a briefing Sunday following the Talladega 500, Allison's wife Judy said there was no advance notice given of her husband's return because doctors felt a crush of publicity would not help his recovery. She said doctors decided to move her husband because he was strong enough to make the trip.

"The doctors were satisfied with Bobby's recovery and felt it was time for him to return to Alabama," she said.

"Bobby will continue to undergo an extremely rigorous routine of physical therapy and will not be allowed any visitors," she said.

"The public sentiment has given us a great deal of strength, and many of our friends will want to come by to see Bobby. However, for the foreseeable future, we won't be able to accommodate any visitors."

Allison suffered a concussion, broken ribs and a broken leg when he blew a tire and was hit by another car on the first lap of the NASCAR Miller 400 race June 19 at Pocono in Long Pond, Pa.

After Allison was injured, it took 11 minutes for a helicopter at the track to airlift him to Lehigh Valley Hospital in Allentown, where he remained until Sunday morning.

"It's fortunate that the helicopter from the rescue center was at the track," said Allison's wife, Judy, at a news conference last month. "It got him there in the nick of time."

Harry Stephens, the neurosurgeon who treated Allison in Pennsylvania, said, "while I will not offer any timetable regarding Bobby's recovery, I will say the prognosis is favorable."

"It is realistic to expect a full recovery, but only time will tell if that prognosis is correct."

Stephens said that Allison has proved "that he has an incredible amount of desire and he is pushing himself." "It is obvious to me that he is working hard to fully recover and that effort gives me reason to be optimistic. He is a strong man and a real fighter."

Mike Alexander, who started the NASCAR race in Bobby Allison's Miller Racing Team car No. 12, was relieved twice by the younger Allison when Alexander's cool suit failed. Alexander returned after 36 laps to the car, which still has Bobby Allison's name on the door.

The No. 12 spot on pit row had a sign saying "Hurry Back B.A.," and Allison's sponsor passed out lapel buttons at the race which said "Hurry Back Bobby."

Walker Suffers Second Seizure Sunday

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox first baseman Greg Walker was undergoing extensive medical tests after being hospitalized following his collapse during a weekend game warm-up and later having a second seizure.

Walker collapsed Saturday at Comiskey Park before a game against the California Angels and suffered a second seizure Sunday morning at Christ Hospital in suburban Oak Lawn, said White Sox spokesman Tim Clodjeaux.

The first baseman was stable, nursing supervisor Elaine Kerner said late Sunday.

Walker was to undergo tests "which will cover every conceivable condition," said team physician Dr. James Boscardin.

"In conversations with Greg's mother, doctors found that Greg had a history of seizures up until age four," Clodjeaux said.

Doctors had not yet determined the cause of the seizures and did not know if they were epileptic, he said. The 28-year-old player was being given anticonvulsant medication.

When Walker collapsed Saturday, White Sox trainer Herm Schneider and Angels' trainers worked feverishly to keep the ballplayer from swallowing his tongue.

"It was a life-threatening situation," said Schneider. "He was struggling to stay alive. He turned blue."

Walker was fielding ground balls when he suddenly told batting practice pitcher Walt Williams, "Hold it."

Walker then sank to the ground, his legs trembling and his body shaking.

"I was really scared for a minute," said Manager Jim Fregosi, "We couldn't get him to relax."

Fregosi said the seizure "looked like" epilepsy.

On a recent road trip, Walker broke out with hives on his chest and arms.

Schneider, who accompanied Walker to both hospitals, said the first baseman had not been taking any medication for the hives.

Bonecrusher In Bizarre Technical Draw

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion James "Bonecrusher" Smith scored a bizarre third-round technical draw against Michael Rouse Saturday in a non-title bout.

Smith, a Lillington, N.C., resident who is 19-6-1 with 14 knockouts, was in control of the fight when he was cut badly over the right eye by an accidental clash of heads midway through the third round.

Chief ringside physician Dr. Frank Doggett consulted with referee Randy Neumann and stopped the scheduled 10-round bout.

Rouse, of Norfolk, Va., is 11-0-1 with five knockouts.

Boddicker Sparks Bosox

By The Associated Press
 Boston's lost summer is becoming a season to savor.

Mike Boddicker, who joined the Red Sox two days earlier, was a smashing success in his Boston debut Sunday, allowing eight hits over 7 1-3 innings in a 5-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Boston has won 17 of 18 games since Joe Morgan was named manager after the All-Star break and is 1 1/2 games behind Detroit in the American League East. The Red Sox have won their last 20 games in Fenway Park, one short of the club record set in September 1949 and two short of the AL record.

"It's great to watch Boddicker pitch," Morgan said. "I wouldn't want to be hitting against him. He has great control and can really mix them up."

Boddicker, 7-12, acquired from Baltimore for minor leaguers Brady Anderson and Curt Schilling, threw 113 pitches, struck out six and walked one before Bob Stanley retired the last five hitters.

"It was great, I'm glad to be part of this family," Boddicker said. "It really is amazing here. I just hope the fans don't expect me to strike out as many batters as Roger (Clemens)."

Boddicker was 79-73 over 6 1/2 seasons with Baltimore. The Orioles, recognizing their need to rebuild, almost traded him to the New York Yankees last winter. His division rivals seem to have a lot of respect for him even though he didn't succeed lately in Baltimore.

"Boddicker is a good pitcher," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "He's pitched on a World Series champion. He's pitched in pennant races. He's coming in here to a team that's playing very, very well before 34,000 people and he had all of New England on his side. I'd have been surprised if he hadn't pitched well."

"He had everything going for him. Plus he was going against a club, the Milwaukee Brewers, who are struggling to do anything right."

Don August, 5-5, gave up six hits and three earned runs in seven innings as Milwaukee lost for the ninth time in 10 games. The Brewers failed to advance a runner past second.

Rich Gedman drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and his third homer of the year.

Tigers 5, Rangers 1
 Jack Morris won for the first time in five starts since June 27 and Dwayne Murphy had two hits and scored the winning run on his first day with the Tigers, who won for the sixth time in seven games.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 3

Rickey Henderson led off with a single to reach base in the first inning for the 13th consecutive game and Jack Clark had two run-scoring singles as the Yankees won in Toronto.

Rick Rhoden, 7-6, beat the Blue Jays for the first time in five career starts, allowing five hits in six innings. Dave Righetti got the final five outs for his 16th save.

Athletics 6, Mariners 2

Jose Canseco homered twice, becoming the first player to hit 30 this season, and Dave Henderson also homered for Oakland at the Kingdome.

Canseco hit four home runs in the three-game series, 10 in July and is one short of his 1987 total of 31. It was his second two-homer game this season and the eighth of his career.

Twins 12, Indians 4

Tim Lardner hit a two-run homer in the fifth and drove in the first run of a nine-run sixth, the Twins' biggest inning of the year.

Royals 4, Orioles 1

Charlie Leibrandt, 6-11, pitched a four-hitter and struck out a career-high 11 and Bo Jackson hit a three-run homer as the Royals improved to 9-0 this season against the Orioles.

Cal Ripken hit his 18th home run with one out in the ninth, the fourth consecutive game in which Ripken has homered.

Angels 7, White Sox 5

Wally Joyner's two-run homer in the seventh inning snapped a 5-5 tie and the Angels won the fifth straight. Joyner's homer run, his eighth, was his first off a left-hander.

Darling Shuts Down Bucs

By HILLEL ITALIE
 Associated Press Writer

The best pitching staff in baseball was better than ever this weekend.

"There's an old adage that good pitching stops good hitting and that's the way it's gone so far," said New York's Ron Darling after his six-hitter led the Mets to a 2-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Sunday. "They're a talented bunch and they're going to score runs, but hopefully not against us."

The Mets' talent was much in evidence as they lowered their earned run average to a major league-leading 2.96. Bob Ojeda shut out the Pirates Friday night and Sid Fernandez and Randy Myers combined to blank Pittsburgh on Saturday. New York has won five straight and now leads the second-place Pirates by five games in the National League East.

"This is one of the few series I've ever seen where you have to keep as many runs off the board as possible," Darling said. New York has given its pitchers little room to breathe, scoring only six runs in three games.

After Bobby Bonilla's RBI grounder in the top of the first gave the Pirates their first run following four straight shutouts at Shea Stadium, Darryl Strawberry's 27th homer, a two-run shot in the bottom of the inning, gave the Mets the victory.

The Mets finish their series against Pittsburgh tonight and are counting on Dwight Gooden to make up for their slumping offense.

The Pirates are young and have few players with post-season experience. But Manager Jim Leyland is not ready to concede that his team needs more time to become a genuine contender.

Expos 2, Cardinals 0

Dennis Martinez pitched a three-hitter for his fifth victory without a loss in July as St. Louis was shut out for the 12th time, the most in the National League.

Montreal has won eight of 10 games against St. Louis this season.

Martinez, 12-7, struck out three, walked one and did not allow a hit after Terry Pendleton's infield single with one out in the top of the fourth. The right-hander has won eight of his last nine decisions and had an earned run average of 1.63 in July.

Phillies 6, Cubs 3

Mike Maddux won the battle with his brother, Greg, scattering six hits in seven-plus innings, and Phil Bradley had a two-run single for Philadelphia.

Mike Maddux, 3-1, struck out four and walked one, but needed relief help from Bruce Ruffin after allowing a pair of singles to start the top of the eighth. Ruffin allowed Rafael Palmeiro's RBI single before finishing up for his third save.

Dodgers 6, Astros 1

Orel Hershiser became the National League's second 15-game winner as Los Angeles snapped Houston's four-game winning streak.

Los Angeles ended a three-game losing streak and moved 4 1/2 games in front of the Astros and San Francisco Giants in the NL West.

Hershiser, 15-5, allowed five hits in beating Houston for the third time this season. He lost his bid for a shutout when Buddy Bell hit an RBI single with two outs in the ninth.

Padres 8, Reds 5

Dennis Rasmussen won for the seventh time in eight decisions for San Diego and Keith Moreland, Carmelo Martinez and Roberto Alomar each drove in two runs.

Rasmussen, 9-7, was acquired from the Reds June 8. He allowed eight hits and five runs before being relieved by Lance McCullers with two outs and the bases loaded in the seventh inning.

McCullers threw a wild pitch to score one run and forced in another by walking Paul O'Neill with the bases loaded. The right-hander settled down, however, striking out five and allowing no hits to earn his eighth save.

Giants 4, Braves 2

Giants 3, Braves 2

Kevin Mitchell's homer in the seventh inning broke a 2-2 tie in the first game and Will Clark beat out an infield hit with the bases loaded in the 10th inning of the nightcap as San Francisco swept a doubleheader and extended its winning streak to five games.

Atlanta has lost six straight.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A954 ♥763 ♦Q74 ♣KJ5
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—Playing five-card majors, you have an easy raise to two hearts—you have a maximum for that bid. If you are a four-card major addict, you have somewhat of a problem. We suggest you respond one spade, and wait to hear from partner.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A954 ♥763 ♦Q74 ♣KJ5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♥ Pass 1♠ Pass
 2♥ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—This is close. Partner has promised a six-card suit, and you have three-card support and prime values. However, you do not have a ruffing value. Still, we think your hand is just worth a raise to three hearts.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠874 ♥K8 ♦AQJ65 ♣K93
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♦ Pass 1♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Don't raise partner's response with weak three-card support unless you have no other bid available. Here, a rebid of one no trump describes your hand exactly—a minimum with stoppers in the unbid suits and little support.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠874 ♥K8 ♦AQJ65 ♣K93
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♦ Pass 1♠ Pass

1 NT Pass 2♥ Pass diamonds.
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Even though you have a known 5-3 spade fit on this auction, you still have a minimum opening bid with only one high card in partner's suits. For the moment, you can do no more than give preference to his first suit. Bid two spades.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J3 ♥Void ♦QJ109754 ♣J842
 As dealer, what action do you take?
 A.—According to the Rule of Two and Three, for a non-vulnerable preempt you should expect to take within three tricks of your bid in your own hand, with your long suit as trumps. Your diamond suit almost surely will take five tricks, and you can count your four-card side suit as an additional trick. Bid three

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K10632 ♥76 ♦KJ92 ♣62
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♦ Pass 1♠ Pass
 2♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You have a minimum response, albeit a very good one because of your fit for partner's suit. Nevertheless, partner has shown a minimum opening bid and there is no reason to suppose that your combined holding will stretch to game. Pass.

Chicken Pox, Asthma Drug Blamed In Death

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — Twelve-year-old children are not supposed to die. When they do, it's usually from an accident or a rare disease — not from chicken pox. But the rules did not apply to Christopher Aaron Chinnis of Jacksonville. On June 23, Christopher developed his first chicken pox mark. On June 30, he died.

Although his family's grief remains fresh, his mother, Rebecca "Lisa" Cole, wants to tell people about the unusual complications that surrounded her son's death.

"I don't want to alarm people and send them into a panic if their child gets the chicken pox," Mrs. Cole said. "I just want them to be aware that it's not always the mild childhood disease everyone thinks it is."

Mrs. Cole makes it clear that she does not blame her son's doctors, hospitals or God for her child's death, saying that she was dealt with "honestly and compassionately" by all parties involved.

But she does want to keep another child from dying from the same circumstances.

Christopher's doctors agree that the cause of his death, as it shows on the death certificate, clearly was the chicken pox virus, which had attacked most of his vital organs. But the reason why a healthy boy's immune system was unable to fight off the common virus is more complex.

His doctors say they feel certain his immune system was weakened by a common drug given to Christopher for an acute asthma attack just prior to the appearance of his chicken pox symptoms.

The drug, called prednisone, is widely used — under different names — to treat asthmatics.

Christopher developed asthma four years ago, but his mother said the condition was mild and he got along well with just a small inhaler of medicine kept in his pocket. When he occasionally felt winded, he sprayed a puff of the medicine into his mouth and went on with whatever he was doing.

"He had never had a bad" asthma attack until June 16, a few days after school had let out for the year. The attack was severe enough that he was admitted to Camp Lejeune's Naval Hospital, treated for four days, and released.

During that time, he was given "all the common drugs used to treat asthma," Mrs. Cole said, including prednisone.

After he came home, Christopher felt fine but needed to continue to take the drug for several more days.

It was on June 23 that Christopher got his first chicken pox mark. Mrs. Cole didn't worry — two of her daughters had had the virus the month before and had recovered normally.

In fact, prior to prescribing prednisone for Christopher, the pediatrician questioned Mrs. Cole about whether her son had been exposed to the chicken pox recently. After she explained that his sisters had had them a month before, it was determined that the boy would have contracted the virus by then if he was going to get it from the girls. This indicated it was safe to place

Christopher on the steroid for a short time.

Today, Christopher's mother and doctors still do not know where he contracted the virus; they only know he did not get it from his sisters.

After observing Christopher's initial break out of chicken pox over the following weekend, mothers' intuition told Mrs. Cole to take her son back to the doctor on Monday — he just didn't look or act right to her.

As Mrs. Cole was driving her son to his appointment, however,

MEMORIES — Rebecca Cole sits in her son Christopher's room looking at a drawing of her son as his picture sits on the nightstand. The Jacksonville youngster died June 30, seven days after he developed chicken pox. Doctors believe his death was caused by a combination of prednisone — prescribed for Christopher's asthma during a hospital stay — and the chicken pox virus. (AP Laserphoto)

Christopher announced that he could no longer see. Trying not to panic, Mrs. Cole asked him if he was teasing her, then looked over to watch her son begin to have what looked like a seizure.

"By the time we were in front of Tarawa Terrace, he was slumped over and turning gray," his mother said.

During the next four days, which included an emergency transfer from Naval Hospital to Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville, a rapid and horrifying decline of the young boy's condition took place.

While the virus made its way from organ to organ, doctors and nurses knew they could do little for him.

Said cardiologist Dr. Peter Harris of Pitt Memorial, "All we could do was treat some of the consequences of the disease, but not the disease itself."

After another seizure, cardiac arrests and finally, multiple organ failure, Christopher died.

Duke Begins Angioplasty, Bypass Study

DURHAM (AP) — A nationwide medical study comparing the benefits of two standard treatments for coronary artery disease could have a major impact on heart care for decades, medical experts say.

"We believe this study will be of real benefit to patients, cardiologists and surgeons in judging the potential advantages of either angioplasty or bypass surgery as the initial therapy in selected patients with multivessel coronary artery disease," said cardiologist Robert M. Califf, Duke University assistant professor of medicine.

Duke University Medical Center is one of 14 medical centers participating in a National Institutes of Health study to determine whether heart by-pass surgery or the newer, nonsurgical treatment called balloon angioplasty is more effective in treating multivessel heart disease.

The study, which is to begin in August, is called the Bypass Angioplasty Revascularization Investigation.

"This is a case in which medical technology has created something of a dilemma," Califf said.

"We achieve excellent results with both procedures, but in a particular patient one procedure may be better than the other over the long run. That's the focus of study," he said.

Califf said the goal is to enroll 2,400 patients nationwide in the study over the next two years and follow them for another five years. In those cases where either procedure would be considered appropriate, patients who volunteer will be selected randomly to receive one or the other.

In bypass surgery, diseased coronary arteries are replaced with sections of healthy artery from a patient's leg.

Negotiator Says Scriptwriters Strike Talks 'Hit A Brick Wall'

By JOHN HORN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Talks to end the 22-week scriptwriters strike have "hit a brick wall," according to the producers' top negotiator who is urging strikers to cross picket lines and end the industry's second-longest walkout.

"We will get our production on schedule any way we can," Nicholas Counter III, president of the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, said at a news conference Sunday. "What individual writers choose to do is up to them."

A union spokeswoman predicted that strikers would remain steadfast.

"To encourage writers to come back to work is an unfortunate retrenchment at a time when both sides should resume negotiation and settle this dispute," said spokeswoman Cheryl Rhoden.

The negotiations deadlocked Saturday after an 11-hour session.

"We've simply gotten to the end of the road, and we've hit a brick wall," Counter said of the 217-member alliance. "We will redouble our efforts to produce as many programs as possible."

The major unresolved issue is how much the writers should get from sale of TV shows and movies abroad and from domestic TV reruns.

The strike, which began March 7, has left the fall television season in chaos and has led to financial hardship for many of the Writers Guild of America's 9,000 members, as well as entertainment-related industries.

Counter said production companies belonging to the alliance would welcome strike-breaking union members and likely would offer financial protection against any union reprisal. Guild officials have said writers who go back to work risk fines of up to 110 percent of their compensation from the producers and expulsion from the union.

About 50 guild members, meanwhile, singled out Walt Disney Studios on Sunday by picketing movie theaters in Hollywood and Westwood showing the hit Disney film "Who Framed Roger Rabbit."

The demonstrators blamed Disney for blocking a tentative settlement with the alliance, and held signs and passed out fliers saying "Who framed the writers guild?" and "Mickey Mouse is stealing from our kids."

Rhoden called the demonstrations "public outrage pickets," and said more would be planned this week here and in other parts of the country.

She called prospects of a fall TV season "doubtful and improbable. They may put a few shows on the air, but it will not be a full schedule."

The strike is only a week short of the entertainment industry's longest — a 23-week walkout by the guild in 1960. That strike won writers payments for television reruns.

Also Sunday, Counter and Earl Bush, chairman of the basic crafts unions, issued a joint statement Sunday saying the alliance and behind-the-scenes workers agreed to extend their contracts on a day-to-day basis. Those contracts were to have expired at midnight.

"The parties will resume discussions on Wednesday ... with the expectation of negotiating to conclusion," the statement said.

WGA PICKETS MOVIE — Members of the Writers Guild of America carry picket signs outside Pacific's Cinerama Dome Sunday in Hollywood. The guild escalated its demonstrations by picketing two theaters showing the hit Walt Disney Studios film "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," claiming Disney chairman Michael Eisner and president Jeffrey Katzenberg used their studio's veto power to block a tentative settlement. Playboy Club Auction Aids CF

By KATHERINE RIZZO
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The last Playboy Club in America closed for good Saturday after an auction of the club's furnishings raised $9,500 for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

The auction was held after the club threw a final, farewell party Friday night that drew hundreds of curiosity-seekers.

'Colombo' Returning

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The rumpled raincoat is coming back — not as a fashion trend, just the one worn by that tenacious detective from the 1970s series, "Colombo."

But like most of Hollywood, actor Peter Falk is awaiting the end of the scriptwriters' strike so work can resume on six new episodes.

"I don't know why people liked (that character) so much," Falk said during a recent interview at his home.

"I like people that are abstracted, that are preoccupied with something, so they're unaware what they look like," he said, referring to the character whose exploits endeared him to millions of TV viewers. "Without affectation, he's genuinely absorbed by what it is that makes the elevator light go on when you push the button."

While awaiting the resumption of production, Falk is co-starring as an amiable con man opposite Cyndi Lauper and Jeff Goldblum in the comedy movie "Vibes," which opens Friday.

Bidding for mementos Saturday was a woman identified only as Autumn, one of the last nine women in America paid to serve cocktails while wearing spike heels, floppy ears and a tight strapless leotard with a push-up bodice.

Last week, Autumn was a part-time Playboy Bunny. This week she goes back to her full-time job as an armored car driver.

She said couldn't bear to leave without something to remember the club by, so she bid $400 for an oversized poster of the October 1985 Playboy magazine cover featuring model Jerry Hall.

"I'm going to miss it here," she said during one of her last shifts as a waitress at the last hurrah of the Playboy Clubs.

Among the things she said she'll miss is the yellow costume with the cage-like construction that discourages slouching. "It's not like my other work uniform," she said. "It makes me feel more like a lady."

Besides the money raised at the auction, attended by about 150 people, Cystic Fibrosis was also to get a share of the final week's bar receipts for a total of about $15,000, a Playboy spokeswoman said.

A poster featuring "The Girls of Sydney" from the cover of an Australian edition of Playboy magazine went for $225 to Bob Cummings of Farmington Hills.

"I'm elated. I expected to pay more," said Cummings, who said he has collected every Playboy published in the United States since 1974.

'Nick At Nite' Beefing Up Its Fall Schedule

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nickelodeon's "Nick at Nite" service knows its audience is the TV generation, so it will expand its lineup this fall to include more old comedies and a new but old-style cartoon series from animator Ralph Bakshi.

"The Patty Duke Show" comes to the cable channel's night-time lineup of nostalgia, which already includes such classics as "Mr. Ed," "My Three Sons," "The Donna Reed Show" and "Make Room for Daddy."

Nickelodeon is also adding two more contemporary comedy showcases. Beginning Sept. 12, viewers can see "The Best of Saturday Night Live" and "SCTV" back-to-back nightly, 10-11 p.m. EDT.

"Nick at Nite" is targeting the new American family. Our demographics tell us that both kids and their parents are watching. We're not sure who is dragging whom to the set — the mom who loves "Donna" and remembers it or the kid who just discovered "Mr. Ed," Nickelodeon Vice President Linda Kahn told a meeting of television critics.

"We've decided we've become a Museum of Broadcasting with a beer and a fridge thrown in for good measure," she said.

Bakshi, who also appeared at the presentation to TV critics, said his half-hour cartoon "Tattertown" would be an homage to the old-style animation of the 1920s and '30s.

The series is set in a village inhabited by cartoon characters.

"We'll have characters sitting in bars or in parks wondering why didn't they make it; they could have been as big as Mickey, but they didn't have an organization behind them," Bakshi said. The concept sounds something like the wildly successful feature-length animated film "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" which is set in Toon Town.

Bakshi said he created the concept for "Tattertown" back in high school, but added, "if it does sound like it ('Roger Rabbit'), that's fine." For "Tattertown," Bakshi said he will create new characters, where "Roger Rabbit" featured cameos by already famous cartoon characters.

Bakshi didn't escape questions about his network cartoon show, "Mighty Mouse," and the charge by conservative media critic Rev. Donald Wildmon that Mighty Mouse snorted cocaine in one episode. Bakshi said the mouse was sniffing flower petals, but later cut those seconds from the episode to quiet the controversy.

"When an adult makes a statement enough times, the kids are going to believe it, and I didn't want it to become an issues at school — did he or didn't he?" said Bakshi, adding he has a 10-year-old son. He said if it had been an adult cartoon, he would have resisted any changes, but in this case, "my first concern was with the kids."

"Nick at Nite" will also have its own satirical news show, "Global Village," which boasts a similarly satirical promo, a takeoff on the currently popular up-close, cinema verite commercials. The "Global Village" motto is, "If we don't cover it, it doesn't matter."

As far day-time Nickelodeon, which features kids' programming, the cable channel plans to add the new show "Kids Court," in which kids decide such issues as whether to turn in a friend for cheating on a test, and who should have to fix a broken portable stereo.

There's also "Eureka's Castle," a show aimed at pre-schoolers' problems, such as being afraid of the dark or having to make a telephone call. Kids will also get to vote in a Nickelodeon poll on who should be president after a series of reports on the campaign by a kid reporter. Nickelodeon announced it is developing a kids' news show, but it will probably be a few years before it gets on the air.

MTV Networks, which owns Nickelodeon, also announced some changes for its music video channel VH-1. That channel, aimed at older viewers, is going this fall to a half-hour format rather than radio-like continuous music.

Logo Gets New Look

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In an attempt to catch more viewers' eyes, CBS has put color, movement and depth in its own eye after nearly four decades.

The new eye logo, which made its debut during Sunday's "60 Minutes" broadcast, is blue and three-dimensional. Computer animation moves it's upper and lower crescents, and the logo is accompanied by a seven-note theme.

It still looks like the original, full-screen, black and white eye, which had been the network's symbol since the early 1950s.

"The eye is sacrosanct," Jerry Goldberg, West Coast vice president of advertising and promotion for the CBS Broadcast Group, said during the planning stages.

"We don't tamper with the shape of the eye. This has in its feeling and its final resolve a classic dignity. But that doesn't mean stodgy."

In the 1987-88 season ratings, CBS finished last behind NBC and ABC for the first time. The network has begun an aggressive advertising campaign in the hopes of boosting fall ratings using the theme of TV "you can feel."
