Tobacco Sales Brisk

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

FAIRMONT, N.C. (AP) — Flue-cured tobacco sales began today on North Carolina markets amid optimistic projections based on favorable weather and cigarette company promises to make liberal purchases.

Sales on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt opened shortly before 8:30 a.m. today. Initial prices were favorable and sales were brisk with virtually no tobacco failing to bring a price sufficient to avoid being purchased by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

"The key thing is I haven't seen one pile go under loan," state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said at the Fairmont Tobacco Warehouse. "At this point in time it looks encouraging in every respect."

Graham, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and U.S. Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., were on hand for the traditional opening ceremony. They joined government graders and cigarette company buyers who filed down long rows of tobacco stacks as auctioneers barked out prices.

Farmers stood nearby, hoping their product would turn a profit.

"It looks good so far, if it'll hold up," said Roscoe Seagraves, 68, a Chatham County grower who chose to market his crop in Fairmont.

The quality of this year's crop is better than in recent years, Seagraves said. But he said rainfall had been spotty in his area, and the remainder of his crop could suffer unless the weather improves.

"We can't make it unless the Lord puts it (rain) down here for us," he said.

Rose, chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Tobacco and Peanuts, said sales prospects were promising because company tobacco stocks were running low.

"They bought the tobacco in Flue-Cured Stabilization and the burley crop is short this year because of the drought," Rose said. "The companies have let their stocks dwindle and they've got to have tobacco, and they've made a commitment to me and other congressmen to buy U.S. tobacco."

School Board Agrees To Consider Bond Plan

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The deputy superintendent of Pitt County's school system showed the county Board of Education how quickly it could spend $3.7 million on renovating and building schools, and the board agreed Monday to consider a $25 million bond referendum to help pay construction bills.

John McKnight said the school system has the $3.7 million to allocate toward capital needs in the 1988-89 school year.

Two million dollars are available through the local capital outlay allocation from the county, while $1.7 million are available through the Capital Improvement Fund provided through the state, he said.

But a series of reductions — such as the cost to move and set up mobile units for the 1988-89 year at $42,500; asbestos inspections, $80,000; purchasing land for the sewer system at

G.R. Whitfield, $7,500; paying for acquired properties including the Sycamore Hill Baptist Church property, $250,000, the Boys Club, $200,000 and Agnes Fullilove, $80,000, and other costs — diminishes the available money to $1,588,400.

McKnight said the sewer systems at Ayden-Gritton, Chicod, G.R. Whitfield, D.H. Conley, Falkland, Stokes and Pactolus need to be upgraded.

Was Newton's Apple Wrong?

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — An experiment beneath the Greenland ice sheet has fueled the debate over the existence of a "fifth force" in nature, and whether gravity might be more complex than Sir Isaac Newton thought. Researchers last year lowered a gravity meter down a 1¼-mile hole and found that gravity diminished faster than expected, indicating a second pull at work and was being reduced as the meter descended, geophysicist Mark Ander reported Monday at a meeting at the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

The strength of the second pull is about one-fiftieth that conventionally assigned to gravity, said Ander. The force has been measured over distances ranging from 1,600 to 5,500 feet, enhancing gravity by up to 3.9 percent.

Schools' Focus On AIDS Debated

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Most members of the Pitt County Board of Education agreed that AIDS education should be taught in public schools, but how the communicable disease should be taught was a debated issue during the board's monthly meeting Monday.

The board approved a comprehensive health curriculum for grades kindergarten through 12 for the 1988-89 school year, but not before parents and health professionals had their say-so about AIDS instruction presented in the curriculum.

"I am asking that we make some amendments to the curriculum," Tracy Lupton said during the meeting's public expression session, which was conducted before the curriculum was approved.

Mrs. Lupton said she was concerned that David Jolly, who currently serves on the AIDS Control Program with the state Department of Human Resources and who previously was a member of the steering committee for the N.C. Lesbian & Gay Health Project, helped the state Department of Instruction develop the AIDS curriculum.

"David Jolly pushed to have sodomy legitimized," Mrs. Lupton said, referring to a September 1984 article published in The News and

Sentence Hearing Ordered For Rapist

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Greenville man convicted of second degree rape in 1987 and sentenced to 35 years in prison is set to receive a new sentencing hearing next week in Pitt County Superior Court.

The N.C. Court of Appeals did not overturn the guilty verdict or cite any error in the trial of Clifton Earl Worsley, 20, of 1105 N. Vandyke St., who was convicted of raping a partially blind Greenville woman in January of 1986, but the court sent the case back to Pitt County for resentencing.

In a six-page decision handed down two weeks ago, the court said Judge Paul M. Wright of Goldsboro should not have considered the woman's handicap in imposing the 35-year sentence.

"There was no evidence that she was rendered more vulnerable to rape because of her eyesight," Judge Hugh A. Wells wrote in the opinion.

The new sentencing hearing is set for 11 a.m. Monday before Judge Charles B. Winberry of Rocky Mount. Worsley is currently being held at Polk Youth Center in Raleigh.

Worsley is accused of attacking the woman as she was walking toward

Racing Pigs Reaching Big Time

By SUE ANNE PRESSLEY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

GERMANTOWN, Md. — The racing pigs have gone big time. Maybe it had to happen. Just four years ago they made their debut at the Montgomery County (Md.) Fair as a possible flop.

Now they travel up and down the East Coast in a 42-foot motor home.

We caught up with the pigs at their practice track in Germantown, in the field behind trainer Merle Mills's brick house.

They were getting ready for an engagement at the North Carolina State Fairgrounds in Raleigh.

As Mills sounded the bell, five pinkish-white pigs charged out of the starting gates, their little hooves working fast, their snouts held high. They thundered halfway around the oval track, pulled up short before a photographer, appeared to pose for several photographs, then resumed the race. Without interruptions, he said, they cover 150 feet in 6 seconds.

As an act, the pigs have progressed from a ragtag group formed to highlight the "Year of the Pig" at the 1984 Montgomery County (Md.) Fair to a slick comic unit appearing at 20 state and county fairs from Florida to New York.

Mills, 55, a plumber who had always considered himself shy, has suddenly become known as "The Pig Man." His is the only act of its kind on the East Coast, he said, although the Midwest has long incorporated racing pigs in certain advertising campaigns.

While Mills is quick to stress that "nothing's ever going to take the place of the pig in the public eye," he has worked up two small, additional acts.

Last year, in honor of the Montgomery fair's duck theme, he trained five racing ducks. And this year, to promote the "Year of the Dairy Goat," he plans to introduce a set of pygmy goats at the fair, which runs Aug. 19 through 27.

His animals are natural comedians. The ducks move around the track like a group of plump, dignified matrons out for a stroll. Sometimes they seem so caught up in their conversations that they stop dead in a huddle, their bills flapping and their heads bobbing up and down, until Mills shoos them on.

The goats, on the other hand, are lively and cute; they fairly bound around the ring and come skidding to a halt.

"The little black one's my favorite," said Mills, indicating the smallest of the five goats. "He's the crybaby. He likes to run around dead last, crying, 'Baaaa, baaa, baaa,' because they leave him."

How Mills got involved with racing animals is one of those stories of how a dubious undertaking can sometimes end up changing a person's life.

Hazel Staley, the secretary of the Montgomery County Fair, a privately owned venture, had run across the idea of racing pigs at an international fair convention in Las Vegas.

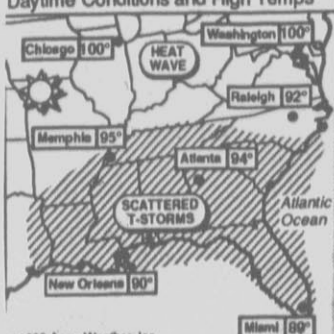

When she returned home, she contacted Mills, a longtime fair volunteer, and asked, "Merle, can you teach pigs how to race?"

"I thought about it for a while," Mills said, "and I couldn't really see it."

Mathews Firm Selected For GHA Housing Project

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

A construction company based in a suburb of Charlotte has been tentatively selected to perform a modernization construction effort at various units operated by the Greenville Housing Authority.

Members of the GHA voted approval Monday to execute a contract with the apparent low-bidder Superior Construction Co. of Mathews for the planned modernization of the Moyewood I and Moyewood II complexes.

The construction firm placed an apparent low bid for the project at $1,168,000.

"This should be about $125,000 under budget," Kenneth Noland, authority executive director told commissioners.

Noland said the contract still must meet approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development before it becomes official.

He said he expects to receive notice from HUD within a week to 10 days and construction on the projects should begin 30 to 40 days following HUD's approval.

Noland said planned modernization efforts include the placement of a new gas distribution system, the installation of 30 furnaces in Moyewood II, the renovation of interiors of 40 units in Moyewood II, and the installation of new doors in Moyewood I.

He said three bids were received on the project, the high bid being $1,308,000.

In other action Monday, Noland reported to commissioners that plans and specifications for a proposed public housing plat along SR 1204 have been sent to HUD offices for approval.

The proposed plat involves 32 apartment units situated on a 4.52-acre tract on SR 1204, east of Roundtree and Westhills Townhomes.

Noland said HUD should respond within a week to 10 days and the project will subsequently be put up for bids pending HUD's approval.

Commissioners also considered several names for the plat and the street on which the units will be located. Consideration will continue at the authority's next monthly meeting.

Meanwhile Sallye Streeter, director of resident affairs, reported the average rent at authority developments in July totaled $134.43. Ms. Streeter said that was the same average rent reported by the authority for the previous month.

Rent at Meadowbrook was $113.02; Kearney Park, $144.29; Moyewood I, $137.71; Moyewood II, $141.45; Hopkins Park, $132.62; Newtown, $133.06, and West Meadowbrook, $114.64.

New Director

Dr. Philip T. Rosen, director of continuing education at the University of Alaska, has been selected in a national search to become director of the Division of Continuing Education at East Carolina University.

Rosen's appointment, effective Nov. 1, has been confirmed by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Rosen will succeed Herman D. Phelps, who has been director of continuing education for the past six years and associated with ECU's continuing education programs for 26 years. Phelps is retiring this year.

Rosen, 42, will also assume duties as director of summer school at ECU.

He has held the directorship at the University of Alaska in Anchorage since 1984. His previous experience includes a deanship at Erie Metropolitan College, Erie, Pa., from 1980 until 1984, and dean of continuing education at Marygrove College in Detroit from 1978-1980.

Rosen has a doctorate from Wayne State University in Detroit, bachelor's degree from Sterling College, Sterling, Kan., and master's degree from Emporia State University, Emporia, Kan.

Ayden Town Board

The Ayden Board of Commissioners will conduct its regular monthly meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the town hall.

Agenda items include a request by AT&T to install fiber optic cable in a 500 foot stretch of land at the town dump, a motion to allow Paul White to continue to serve as attorney for the town, a discussion of ways to ensure that homes display street numbers visible to motorists, and presentation of a plaque to Henry Meeks for 30 years of service with the town.

Pitt Employment

The employment rate in Pitt County for June was 97.2, the highest rate on record, according to figures just released by the Greenville office of

Directors Approved

Tommy Edwards and Larry Seigler were approved as members of the board of directors of the Pitt County Educational Foundation by the Pitt County Board of Education Monday.

Edwards is president of Carolina Dairies Corp., while Seigler is general manager of Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville.

In other matters the board approved the third part of the annual application for vocational education state and federal funding. The application, which states how vocational positions are to be used and support services provided, will be submitted to the state Department of Public Instruction by Aug. 15.

The first two parts of the application were approved March 7 and were submitted to the department prior to the March 15 due date.

School treasurers and depositaries were approved for each school for the 1988-89 fiscal year, and a budget amendment covering April 1 through June 30 was approved.

The budget amendment shows an increase in four of the five school funds during the three-month period. The State Public School Fund increased by $49,994, the Local Current Expense Fund by $222,601.14, and the Federal Grants Fund by $244. Each net increase comes as a result in the difference in initial and adjusted allotments.

The Capital Outlay Fund increased by $5,522.95 as a result of appropriating excess interest, two pork barrel allotments which had carry-over from the previous year, and boiler repair and underground storage tanks associated with the H.B. Sugg School project. No amendment was required for the Child Nutrition Fund.

The board approved lunch prices for next year at $1 for kindergarten through 12th grades, in addition to personnel recommendations.

County Board OKs Planning Boundary

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County commissioners Monday gave approval to a concept that would define a planning zone boundary between the city of Greenville and the town of Winterville and also gave approval to Pitt County Memorial Hospital's proposed $180 million budget for 1988-1989.

Although formal documents establishing the boundary have yet to be signed, the board agreed on a line that would give Winterville jurisdiction over an area south of White Road (Secondary Road 1708) from N.C. 11 to Tar Road, then west of a line running south along Tar Road to a creek flowing into Fork Swamp and along Fork Swamp to a point about 1,000 feet south of Worthington Road (SR 1711).

The agreement would give Greenville planning jurisdiction north and east of that line, including the area north of a line running 1,000 feet south of the Worthington Road to the County Home Road and west of a line running about 2,000 feet east of the County Home Road to Bells Fork.

The hospital's $180 million budget was approved after Kathy Barger, PCMH's chief financial officer, told commissioners the budget was based on an average 10.7 percent rate hike.

Ms. Barger, who said the rate hike is designed to raise an additional $16.3 million in the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1, said $9.7 million of the increase is designed to cover inflation in operating expenses — estimated at 6.5 percent — for the coming year. The rest of the increased revenue from the rate hike will be used for such things as additional utility and overhead costs resulting from opening additional space at the medical facility, for reserves for malpractice insurance costs and for additional operating margin.

Some $41 million of the $180 million budget includes write-offs for such things as bad debts and indigent care, while $67.6 million will go for salaries and $10.2 million for employee benefits.

Commissioners also agreed to negotiate the price of a proposed countywide water and sewer study with Rivers and Associates. The engineering firm submitted a proposed fee for the study of $22,000.

The board Monday also named Beverly Howard to the board of the Greenville-Pitt County Convention and Visitors Authority and appointed Hyman J. Brody to the Sheppard Memorial Library Board.

Larceny Charges Filed

Greenville police said several people were arrested Monday on larceny charges in connection with various thefts reported to the department.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said Kenneth Earl Johnson, 28, of 903 Cherry St. was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of a wallet Saturday at Anthony's Food Mart.

Officer R.L. Vandiford said Lula Mae Mitchell, 36, and Alice Lee Mitchell, 41, both of 509 E. Blount St. in Kinston, were arrested at 2:31 p.m. and charged with shoplifting in connection with an incident reported at 1:47 p.m. at Sears, Carolina East Mall.

Officer J.E. Williams said Horace Worsley, 17, of 1105-A Vandyke St. was arrested at 10 a.m. and charged in connection with a misdemeanor larceny that occurred at 1916 Norcott Circle.

Two people were arrested Monday in connection with an incident reported at 5:29 p.m. at The Plaza mall. Officer R.J. Brewington said James Loftin, 32, of 603 Griffin St. was charged in connection with the theft of $276 worth of clothes at Rose's, while Officer C.G. Alphin said Gale Kornegay, 29, of 618 Adkin St. in Kinston was charged with assaulting the Rose's store manager.

Officer R.C. Ailsbrook said Arlene Molton, 34, of 313 Clay St., Kinston, was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of $229 worth of clothes from the Casual Corner at The Plaza in an incident that occurred at 8:40 p.m.

AIDS Debated

Observer of Raleigh which quoted Jolly as saying, "At present for gay people, it means admitting we are committing a crime each time we make love."

Mrs. Lupton said the "curriculum fails to mention the legal status of homosexual behavior ... Let these children know that homosexuality is illegal."

Also, the curriculum regularly recommends a lifelong monogamous relationship as an AIDS preventive, Mrs. Lupton said. But, the relationship is not specified as marriage.

"To combat AIDS will take more than science," she said. "We've got to teach them right from wrong."

T.R. Jones said the AIDS curriculum, which is taught from seventh through 12th grades, should focus on abstinence from sex and drugs, and it should speak to the institution of the family, of a faithful marriage between male and female and resisting social pressures.

"It should tell of the unreliability of preventing pregnancy and of spreading AIDS" when engaged in premarital sex, he said. "Promoting condoms suggests adults expect them to engage in premarital sex. This curriculum that has come out of DPI is not quality education."

Dr. Tim Monroe, the Pitt County health director, said AIDS is difficult and perplexing to physicians because "we have only one weapon to fight it and that's education. Those of us in the health profession look to the schools" to educate students about the risks.

The message must be direct, factual and nonjudgmental, Monroe said. "Adolescence means becoming an adult. Adolescents make decisions on their own."

"I would like to stress that the immorality of certain sexual acts is irrelevant to controlling this disease. It would give a false sense of security to stress homosexuality" because it is rapidly becoming a heterosexual disease.

"We believe in teaching abstinence," Monroe said. "But, we face the reality that many of our young people do not practice abstinence. We have to have information for young people on how to reduce their risks, regardless of the morality of what they're doing. To remove this information (about how to prevent AIDS in homosexual acts) from curriculum would certainly be immoral."

As the board discussed the curriculum before approving it, Leonard Lilley said, "I appreciate the comments that were made earlier and I am in agreement with a lot of the comments made."

While the curriculum is OK, "we need to pay careful attention at how it is being taught. It would be helpful to us to have a parent or some parents involved" during the instruction process, he said.

Mrs. Lupton suggested that parents periodically monitor the teaching of AIDS in the classroom and volunteered to help do that.

MASONIC NOTICE

There will be a stated communication of Grimesland Lodge No. 475 AF&AM today at 7:30 p.m.

Racing Pigs Finding Fame On Fair Circuit

But before he knew it, he was out in his backyard training a set of 6-week-old Yorkshire pigs to run around a track made of plumbing parts. He would ring a bell, make them run a little distance, reward them with a snack of mash, then make them run a little farther.

After three weeks they could navigate the entire track for the mash reward at the end of the race.

"That first bunch of pigs taught me a lot about pigs," Mills said. "I was trying too hard to make them do everything my way. Finally, I said, 'To hell with it, do it your way.'"

Mills said he had some sinking moments when he deposited his first piglets (they weigh about 60 pounds each) at the Gaithersburg fairgrounds a week ahead of time and they refused to race. It took him three days to persuade them to run again.

But the pigs' sponsor, Southern States, a feed co-operative, stuck with them. And the pigs proved to be an overwhelming hit. Invitations to appear at other fairs began to pour in, businesses clamored to become sponsors and Mills found himself with an unexpected second career.

He declined to say how much he and the pigs make on their outings but described it as "pretty nice pay." Photographs of Mills and the pigs have appeared in everything from the children's Weekly Reader to the National Enquirer to the front page of the International Herald Tribune.

This year their standing has been honored by the construction of a new 300-seat "Racing Park" at the Mon-gomery County fairgrounds.

Mills said he is also occasionally picketed by animal-rights groups, even though he makes sure to stress that everything he does has been approved by veterinarians.

A balding man in khaki work clothes, Mills finds all the attention funny. He grew up as one of 12 children on a farm in the nearby community of Quince Orchard. As a boy, he liked to work with small animals, he said, and the pig was always his favorite.

But he doesn't give his performers cute names, and the 42-foot motor home he bought to haul them in three years ago is unmarked.

These days they travel together from late June until November, from the Erie County Fair outside Buffalo to the Broward County Fair in southern Florida. The animals occupy pens in the back of the trailer, and Mills has a small sleeping compartment with a shower.

When the pigs get too old to be cute, Mills swings back to Germantown, where his wife, Frances, and son, Mark, 18, a college student, are constantly training fresh troupes.

A pig's performing life lasts only about a month, then he's retired to a feedlot, where he becomes an ordinary hog fattened for market. Mills uses about 125 pigs per season.

"They'll get a bunch ready, and I'll stop by and switch pigs," he said.

"It's a good thing I like animals," said Frances Mills, a secretary at Ridgeview Junior High School in Gaithersburg.

Occasionally, Mills is reminded of the hazards of traveling and performing with such a group — such as that embarrassment last year at the Maryland Pork Festival in Salisbury. "I was standing around, shooting the breeze with one of the pork producers and somebody said, 'There goes one of your pigs,' " Mills said. "We almost never caught him."

"The EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) has changed the level of acceptable kinds of runoff, and they exceed those."

"Ayden-Grifton is probably the most easily resolved by tapping into a local sewer system," he said. At Stokes, "there's raw sewage on the ground there from time to time — it smells."

Recognizing that the Stokes School will eventually be replaced by a new school under a long-range plan, McKnight said the new sewage system installed there could be moved to another site.

"Conley could wait. It's one of the most difficult and most expensive," McKnight said. Pactolus would be the next choice. "After that, they're all bad."

The cost of renovating each sewage system at those schools is $490,000 collectively. Another $40,000 will build dance floors at Ayden-Grifton, Conley, Farmville Central and North Pitt as required by the Basic Education Plan. J.H. Rose is not included in the figure, because "they haven't been able to find a location to dance period," McKnight said.

Rose has been using the Agnes Fullilove, Wahl-Coates and Wright Auditorium at East Carolina University for dance and theater practice and productions until it is moved into a new school.

Adding additional classrooms at Greenville Middle for housing the second half of the sixth grade will cost $528,400.

Those deductions from the $3.7 million leaves the school system with about $530,000, McKnight said. Sadie Saulter was recommended as the next construction priority.

Superintendent Eddie West reviewed the benefits and disadvantages of the "pay-as-you go" and the bond referendum plans for paying for construction needs.

With pay-as-you-go, "as you try to catch up on an annual basis, due to growth of the school system, the facility deficit grows," he said. Also, the construction costs rise each year thus reducing the money readily available, and additional mobile units would have to be purchased each year to meet the growth of the BEP and growth requirements.

A bond referendum would allow "for expedited facility equity through the immediate implementation of construction delineated in the long-range plan," West said.

"The need for mobile units is reduced, and construction cost is contained. It provides for future growth needs and assures that existing facilities would be kept up to desired standards."

"As I look at the pros and cons of both of these, I recommend that you consider a $25 million bond referendum," West said. The board approved the recommendation to consider it.

Training Session

Lydia E. Hayes of the Greenville Junior Woman's Club participated in a training conference recently at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

Ms. Hayes was the only North Carolinian attending the conference, which initiates implementation of a two-year national project, the General Federation of Women's Clubs/FBI new sexual assault awareness/victim assistance program.

During the two-day session, GFWC's state crime prevention division chairmen received training which allows them to become "facilitators" in assisting local clubs in implementing the programs.

The conference was funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Justice.

GFWC has 400,000 members in 10,000 clubs in the United States.

Ostomy Awareness

Mayor Ed Carter has proclaimed August as "Ostomy Awareness Month" in Greenville.

"In the United States and Canada there are estimated to be one and one-half million people with ostomies and approximately 100,000 new ostomy surgeries are performed annually. Ostomy surgery can result in a cure for cancer of the colon and rectum and some types of inflammatory bowel diseases, in addition to enabling children with birth defects and trauma victims to live near normal lives," Carter said.

"The Greenville Chapter of the United Ostomy Association provides a volunteer visitation program and assistance to our ostomate citizens and strives for public and medical understanding," he said.

Force Is Studied

The four known forces are gravity; electromagnetism, which holds atoms together; the strong nuclear force that holds atomic nuclei together; and the weak nuclear force, which causes radioactive decay. Other experiments have raised the possibility of a fifth or even a sixth that either attract or repel objects in contradiction to Newton's theories.

Los Alamos scientists said their discovery may be the theoretical fifth force or a component of gravity.

"Either way, we're saying something pretty big, something you don't say every day in physics," Anderson said. "We're saying we appear to have the cleanest evidence to date of something that cannot be explained by Newtonian gravity."

A change in the understanding of gravity may help physicists formulate a long-sought "unified field theory" to explain all the forces of the universe in a single equation. It also might lead to recalculation of the masses of the stars and planets, and new estimates of the universe's age.

Newton suggested in 1687 that gravity causes all bodies to attract each other and that the attraction increases as the weight of the objects increase and the distance between them decreases. He suggested that gravitational fields should decline slightly as a body moves down a shaft, but concluded that gravitational acceleration is always the same.

Who Will Decide Election Issue?

This is the case of the election that wouldn't go away.

The wayward Democratic primary for a seat on the county commission has boomeranged back in town, in search of an elections authority willing to make a decision.

First, the Pitt Board of Elections remanded the issue of the disputed May 31 runoff to the state, without making a recommendation on what action should be taken. Then, it was booted back home by the state Board of Elections, who refused to order a new election even in the face of serious irregularities at the polls.

Just why is it so difficult to make a ruling on this election? The county board could have, and should have, sent the facts along to Raleigh with a suggestion that a new election be ordered or a winner declared.

The state board, after evidence that 22 ineligible voters cast ballots surfaced, should have ordered a new election promptly. After all, it's August, and the election is Nov. 8. The candidates and citizens in Consolidated District A need to know who's running.

Instead, that board kicked the matter back to the county board for more investigation. While that action is undoubtedly an effort to ensure all facts are found, it does not serve the voters of Pitt County particularly well. The board has only delayed the inevitable — ordering a new election, one that is conducted in a manner prompting confidence in the voting process.

The flaws in the disputed May 31 runoff are serious occurrences. Ineligible voters — registered Republicans and unaffiliated voters — were allowed to cast ballots unchallenged in a Democratic primary. Poll workers didn't check their credentials. How can the public have faith in the results of an election where unmindful administration was so prominent? How could either candidate be comfortable with victory?

It is equally disturbing that no elections authority either can or will address the issue firmly. The state board's reluctance to call for a new election keeps Pitt County in limbo. It would have been preferable for the county board to make a recommendation of action to the state board. Local issues are best handled by local interests, and stating the county's position would have guaranteed that input.

In the absence of such recommendations, strong state action should have settled the matter.

But two months after the runoff Pitt voters are still waiting for a decision and wondering what their choices will be in November. Meanwhile, the uncertainties over the May voting process continue. That's unfair. Another election should be conducted as quickly and in the most conscientious manner possible.

Just Race, Not Racism

'Color all the participants white or black or whatever, and it comes out the same. There's just nothing to leave you wondering.'

WASHINGTON — That 32-to-1 vote by which the House Judiciary Committee recommended the impeachment of U.S. District Judge Alcee L. Hastings was deceiving: It wasn't as close as the numbers suggest.

In fact, it was a shut-out. Every one of the 33 members of the committee voted in support of at least one article of the 17 counts of misconduct against the Miami judge.

Hastings, who may be the first black official ever to face impeachment proceedings, says he is a victim of double jeopardy, of "blind ignorance" and, of course, racism. But he failed to convince a committee that included two black congressmen.

This is perhaps more significant than it should be. One should expect members of this elite committee — lawyers all — to reach a dispassionate decision based on the facts. But it is also true that special pressures were operating on the two black members, who cannot be immune to the widespread suspicion that the white establishment is moving to discredit black officials across the land.

One of them, Rep. George Crockett (D-Mich.), a former city judge in Detroit, said anyone who doubts that racism was involved in the case "closes his eyes to conditions that still exist." The other, Rep. John Conyers, another Detroit Democrat and a lawyer and administrative law judge before his election to Congress, said he, too, was "skeptical" of the allegations and frankly wondered whether "racism could be the source" of the charges against the flamboyant Hastings.

"I came into this thing on the belief that I was defending a progressive civil-rights attorney who had been made the object of a racially or politically motivated harassment," Conyers said. "I complained to Chairman (Peter) Rodino about it. So did Judge Crockett, and so did some other members of the committee. I insisted on having a role in it."

But despite his alertness for "the slightest scintilla of evidence of racism," Conyers said, "I couldn't find any."

Hastings had been acquitted, in 1983, of charges that he conspired to solicit a bribe from two defendants who appeared before him. His friend, Washington lawyer William Borders, who was tried in a separate trial, was convicted of conspiracy. Neither Hastings nor Borders would appear before the Judiciary Committee looking into charges of judicial unfitness stemming from essentially the same allegations.

Their refusal to testify, said Conyers, was one of many things that led him to vote to recommend impeachment.

Among the others: "The judge is in Borders' office at the time Borders receives a phone call to come and get the $125,000 payoff. At another time when (an undercover FBI agent) says he doesn't believe Borders could control a federal judge, Borders agrees to have Hastings show up in a restaurant at the Fountainbleau Hotel in Miami; he shows up. Then there is the time when Hastings — in Washington at the time — learns that Borders has been arrested and that the FBI is looking for him. Instead of taking a 10-minute ride from his Washington hotel to National Airport to go home, he grabs his clothes, refuses a ride to the airport and takes a cab to Baltimore-Washington International. Then he flies to Fort Lauderdale, although he has left his car at the Miami airport.

"Then there were the (wiretapped) phone calls, using code language, that always came hot and heavy when there was a new development in the case (that Hastings was trying); the judge leaving his chambers to use a pay phone to call the court building in Washington; the evidence, developed after the conspiracy trial, that he had lied in court about some of the calls. He was just too intimately connected at all the wrong times."

None of that proves conspiracy (though Conyers believes that some of the information gathered since his trial might have convicted Hastings), but it does, in Conyers' view, raise serious questions about Hastings' fitness.

"As Crockett put it, 'He needs his fitness questioned for being dumb enough to get involved in something like this,'" Conyers said.

At the end, the only votes not to recommend impeachment on any of the allegations came from Rep. Lawrence Smith (D-Fla.), a friend of Hastings and Crockett, who nevertheless voted for the conspiracy-for-bribery count. The impeachment recommendation will be taken up by the full House on Wednesday and, if it is adopted, Hastings will face trial before the Senate.

"Whatever misgivings I had were wiped out by what I heard," Conyers said. "I've had some people praising me for rising above race, but the facts speak for themselves. Color all the participants white or black or whatever, and it comes out the same. There's just nothing to leave you wondering."

"I joined the Judiciary Committee to remedy racism in the judiciary. In this case, I just couldn't find any."

Breaking The Code Of Misconduct

WASHINGTON — On the day Vice President George Bush was promising to impose an "exacting code of conduct" on government employees if elected president, two former Justice Department officials were giving damning testimony about the anything-goes (just don't get caught) ethical climate that has pervaded the Reagan administration.

By their words, the officials negated Bush's message, which was not the first time that bad timing has plagued him this year. More important, they demonstrated that the answer to ethical problems in government does not lie in creating a new White House ethics office headed by an ethics czar enforcing new guidelines, as Bush suggested. The solution lies in acting immediately, at the top, when lapses are uncovered.

That's why the testimony of former deputy attorney general Arnold I. Burns and former Criminal Division head William F. Weld before the Senate Judiciary Committee was so revealing and damning. The two described how they told the president and the vice president about what were, in their professional judgment, serious problems and potentially indictable offenses involving Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

As in the Iran-contra scandal, President Reagan was incurious and unresponsive when told about the problems that reflected adversely on the nation's chief law enforcement officer, the ethical standards of his senior officials and the administration of justice. He asked no questions, sought no further information, expressed no indignation or concern. Aside from looking troubled, once again his reaction to bad news was familiar: He had no response.

The following exchange between the witnesses and Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was illuminating.

Metzenbaum: "Did the president ask you any questions?"

Weld: "He did not, senator."

Metzenbaum: "Did anyone else present ask any questions?"

Weld: "The vice president asked Mr. Burns is there malaise in the department, how is the morale, and the other question, are other resignations in prospect?"

Burns, interjecting: "I just want to say that, No. 1, that the meeting with the president and vice president was at their request. They initiated that meeting. They were both extremely attentive. The meeting, the things that they were said were very frank and very candid in the extreme. When I left, I commented that the president wanted to hear the facts and that we had shared them with him. Without pulling any punches. The president seemed to my eye and to my mind distressed by what he heard."

What was the worst thing Burns told them, Lehrer wondered.

"Well," Burns said, "I think that we were talking about a mosaic, and you had as part of the mosaic, a deterioration of morale, an erosion of public confidence in the Department of Justice. We had graffiti in the halls of the Department of Justice probably for the first time since President Washington named Edmund Randolph attorney general."

"We had very serious charges of impropriety and ... we saw that Mr. Weld had reached the conclusion that there were indictable offenses. So when you put this whole package together, we had a serious problem. We were talking about very serious business."

So serious that no action was taken. Subsequently, of course, the president has praised Meese.

However unfortunate the timing of his ethics proposal, Bush deserves credit for addressing the question and indicating how he would deal with it if he becomes president. I have no doubt, based on his long, unblemished public service record, that a Bush administration would set a far higher tone than the one he has been serving.

But as this latest Meese episode shows, no new layers of bureaucracy are needed. For its next chief executive, the nation needs a president who will not deny that problems exist. The nation needs a president who will correct them.

Selling Time

Market Opening Still Has Impact

It won't be with all the flourish that we once saw, but Greenville, Farmville and other tobacco markets will open sales this week.

The excitement is still there for those who grow tobacco and help market it, even if it doesn't permeate the community as it once did. Tobacco warehouses are more scattered than they once were and there are only two processing plants remaining in the county — one each in Greenville and Farmville.

Given that, it is easy to see tobacco sales are still important to Pitt County's economy. Merchants know it when the crop sales begin, and in fact, have already felt its economic effect from wages paid to farm workers. A poor tobacco crop will still negatively impact Pitt County's economy.

Fortunately this year's crop is one of the best in years. Observers are hoping for opening day averages of $1.40 per pound or more — and that average should climb as better grade tobacco reaches the market later in the selling season.

Growers are facing a rosier picture with assessments reduced and the Stabilization holdings of stored tobacco down.

Pitt County was particularly blessed with adequate rainfall this year, an outstanding advantage in a nation where many farm areas were suffering through the worst drought in years.

With adequate precipitation and ideal temperatures for growing tobacco, good quality should be coming to market.

Opening day won't be as festive as it once was, but it is still important to the growers who will now realize cash payments for their crops.

It is also important to the agricultural sector of the local economy for 1988 to be a profitable leaf year.

Day Care Issue Not Child's Play For Politicians

There's a war on for the family vote, and no day-care center in America is safe.

Last Friday, the front moved to a model facility run by the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA). The day after Democratic presidential nominee Michael S. Dukakis visited a day-care center in Secaucus, N.J., and the same day prospective Republican nominee George Bush stopped in at one in Tysons Corner, Va., the campaign of Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen invaded the UCLA center.

All the standard props were in place as a crowd of increasingly impatient preschoolers waited for the Texas senator's motorcade to arrive: Leggos, rubber dinosaurs, kids in Sesame Street T-shirts.

But the UCLA facility compares to your garden-variety church basement kiddie center the same way Rodeo Drive compares to J.C. Penney.

For starters, it's on Sunset Boulevard, a stone's throw from the stucco gates guarding the entrance to exclusive Belair. It receives about $350,000 in subsidies from the state and university, which helps low-income students attend a school where the per-pupil cost is about $8,500 a year and the student-teacher ratio is 3 to 1. Teachers make $20,000 a year and have medical benefits. About 700 families are on the waiting list, and many of them sign up "as soon as they get pregnant," administrator David Menninger said.

But working mothers are working mothers, and the problems faced by the faculty, staff and students at UCLA in finding and paying for good day care aren't that much different than anywhere else.

That is one reason day care has become such a hot button issue this campaign year, with even President Reagan switching philosophical course to endorse a $2.2 billion tax-credit plan proposed by Vice President Bush.

So Bentsen flew from Reno to Los Angeles to make what is becoming an obligatory appearance plugging a greater federal role in day care while holding squirming youngsters on his lap.

It must be said that if Dukakis thought the key to victory in November was the ability of his running mate to kiss babies with panache, he would have chosen Jesse L. Jackson rather than Bentsen.

A courtly and controlled man of distinguished bearing who wears finely tailored suits and monogrammed shirts, Bentsen walked into the UCLA day-care center with his hands cupped behind his back. He looked a bit like Prince Charles visiting the aborigines.

By the time he got there, some of the more rambunctious boys were already using the rubber dinosaurs as billy clubs on their classmates and one reporter was gleefully predicting an "approaching meltdown."

Bentsen sat down on a plastic stool, plopped a girl on his lap and began making the kind of grandfatherly chitchat he no doubt makes with his own five grandchildren. She grimaced and headed for a neutral corner.

Next came a boy in a Big Bird and Snuffleupagus T-shirt. It was time for the compulsories: he got the knee-bounce routine. He looked like he'd rather be eating Brussels sprouts.

On his third try, Bentsen finally got a girl who not only stayed put but seemed to enjoy it. Looking relieved, Bentsen gave her a kiss on the cheek and launched into some serious day-care talk with the parents and teachers.

A single mother explained that the subsidized center had allowed her to get a teaching degree at UCLA, but she could not afford to take a job after graduating because she could not pay market-rate day-care fees for her two children. "My education is more or less totally down the drain until my children are in school," she told Bentsen.

Afterwards, Bentsen and his wife, B.A., walked outside with two children in tow. "That's the future we're talking about," Bentsen told his traveling press entourage. "That's quite a lift, isn't it?"

Democrats Hope 'Where Was George?' Spells Curtains for Bush

WASHINGTON — To the delight of Democrats, Vice President George Bush has heard it from hecklers on the stump. It has blossomed on T-shirts hawked along Pennsylvania Avenue. One entrepreneur has ordered it printed on 5,000 blue-and-white buttons. And a Texas education testing specialist says she can't wait for the bumper sticker.

The campaign hucksters are gambling and Democratic partisans are hoping that "Where was George," the taunting question that emerged from the Democratic convention, will take on a life of its own and play a decisive role in the race for the presidency.

Four times Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., asked the question as he cited items from the Reagan administration's record — from selling arms to Iran to attempts at cutting Social Security to weakening civil rights laws. And as the convention took up the taunt in roaring unison, Kennedy told them: "George Bush is the man who is never there."

Bush dismissed the "name calling," especially, he said, because it had come from such a liberal as Kennedy. But as reporters asked variations of the Kennedy question, Bush promised that President Reagan would supply some answers during the campaign.

Democratic political consultant Ann Lewis thinks "Where was George?" could have as much impact as the question Walter Mondale asked in 1984 — "Where's the beef?" — to turn back the primary challenge of Gary Hart.

Personalities are revealed and elections often turn on a slogan. Kennedy's ridicule played on the malady that Bush and other vice presidents have suffered: They are condemned to be seen and not heard, except as the president shall decide.

Thus, said Lewis, the taunt is "very useful as a battle cry, and a cheerful one at that, because it delights and energizes partisans. And it reinforces some of the biggest doubts about George Bush despite his impressive resume and his seven years as vice president. Just what is it that George Bush has done and where does he intend to take the country?"

Jim Lake, a senior consultant for the Bush campaign, said Democrats were "trying to make it take on a life. They're trying to make this a campaign of personality by belittling Bush and avoiding the issues. That's because (Democratic presidential nominee Michael S.) Dukakis is afraid of the issues, because he's wrong on the issues. We are going to question whether he's going to raise taxes, his inexperience in foreign policy and his weakness on law and order and defense."

According to Lake, Bush plans to take the offensive against Dukakis on the issues. And Lake said Reagan "will be talking about where George Bush was."

Reagan's help, however, might inadvertently underscore the problem. Despite his years of public service, Bush is still struggling to emerge from the shadows of others and make clear who he really is and what he really stands for.

Richard Moe, a consultant for Dukakis, noted that in Bush's 18 years of service under three presidents, as an envoy to China, United Nations ambassador, Republican national chairman, CIA director and vice president, "he has served a constituency of one — the president who appointed him. Bush has held so many different jobs and served so many different masters, what he believes and what he has accomplished have become blurred."

Polls show Bush has yet to establish his political or intellectual identity. That was the soft spot Democrats found. As the convention neared, Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk, a former Kennedy aide who had become increasingly critical of Bush in speeches, commissioned political consultant Peter Hart to translate the poll numbers into a point of attack.

As Hart searched the record on Reagan's tax cuts and tax increases, the efforts to slash, then revamp Social Security, the budget cuts affecting domestic programs, and the administration's foreign policy problems as well as accomplishments, he said, "I found very little from Bush."

In his memo to Kirk, Hart wrote, "Throughout this convention, Democrats have a chance to make the case against silent George." Hart's partner, Jeff Garin, took their analysis to Kennedy's office, where his speechwriters, Robert Shrum and Carey Parker, turned "silent George" into "Where was George?"

The phrase, or at least the idea, did not originate with Hart or Kennedy; it came from Republicans. Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr., running against Bush in the primaries, drew blood in a debate in December when he recalled that Bush had headed a task force against terrorism while the administration was selling arms to terrorist Iran. Haig asked: "Where were you when the administration made a decision to do... that?"

In March, as Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole campaigned in the South, Dole said to Bush: "It's not the jobs you've held, it's what you've done with the jobs you've had. And have you left any footprints anywhere?" Dole added, "He can't cite one thing in the last seven years that he's done."

As Bush seeks to move away from Reagan in the campaign, he has run into questions. In New Jersey, as he spoke for legislation to keep the beaches clean, environmentalists recalled administration efforts to weaken the Environmental Protection Agency and chanted: "Where was George?" In New Mexico, when Bush proposed tax credits for child care, women in his audience asked, "Where was Bush all these years?" And as Bush proposed a new code of ethics, reporters pressed for his views on the conduct of Attorney General Edwin Meese III and got characteristically cautious criticism.

While Democrats celebrate their jibes at Bush, Walter DeVries, director of the North Carolina Institute of Politics, warned that such attacks might backfire "if they are seen as personal and if they continue to come from Kennedy."

DeVries, suggesting that Kennedy "may have pushed it too far," noted that Bush's disapproval, or negative, ratings in several polls increased only marginally after the convention.

Robeson Tuscaroras Want Own Heritage Recognized

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — A third of Robeson County's population is American Indian, but there are few outward signs of the stereotyped Indian here.

Most Indians dress in business suits or blue jeans — not buckskins, beaded moccasins or turquoise jewelry. They work in factories, offices and fields alongside whites and blacks. And their churches are Baptist, Methodist and Holiness, part of national denominations.

There is no Indian reservation, no separate government structure outside the county, state and federal governments.

But Brawleigh Graham hopes at least some of that will change.

"Native Americans have suffered great hardships," said Graham, who is also known as Chief Young Bear of the Tuscarora Tribe of North Carolina. "Our forefathers were forced to give up their heritage to save their lives. We want to revive it."

The vast majority of Indians in Robeson County call themselves

Lumbees, but the Tuscaroras claim a separate heritage and separate interests.

"We're not saying that the Lumbee cause is not legitimate," Graham said. "They, I think, tie their Indian background to the Cheraws, while we believe our true ancestry is linked with the Tuscaroras."

"The major issue with us is Indian sovereignty," said Graham, who once worked for the Lumbee Regional Development Association — a Lumbee group — and the state Department of Labor. "The Lumbees had no interest in sovereignty."

"Today, there is an effort going on under the name of the Lumbee organization to group all the people of Indian origin in and around Robeson County under an umbrella-type organization," the Tuscaroras say in an application for a federal grant to pursue federal recognition. "If this is what these people called Lumbee want, then that is fine if they can live with an artificial Indian name. The Tuscarora asks to be able to be called by the only name that their ancestors hid in their hearts."

The grant application says Tuscaroras were native to North Carolina, but a segment of the tribe migrated to New York in the 1700s and continue to live there. Others, however, were moved to a state reservation in Bertie County in 1748, and migrated to Robeson County in the early 1800s.

The Tuscaroras, Graham said, trace their ancestry from those migrating families.

He says as many as 5,000 Robeson County Indians could be connected to the Tuscaroras, a number disputed by the Lumbees, who say Indians already spoke English when the first settlers arrived in the county in the 1700s.

Some believe the Lumbees who met the original white settlers were the descendants of Sir Walter Raleigh's Lost Colony of the 1500s.

The walls of the Tuscarora office in Pembroke are covered with posters in English and the Tuscarora language, as well as Indian drawings, paintings and poetry.

The tribe has formed a drum society and a dance society — all part of reviving a lost heritage, Graham says.

And he says the Tuscaroras want more — their own system of government that can restore broken treaties with the federal government and return to an Indian sense of law.

"You can't expect a system to work without respect," said Graham. "Any law that is not in parallel with the Constitution in actuality is not law."

Graham said federal reserve notes not backed by gold or silver, deeds of trust for land and mandatory income taxes are examples of what he called "inaccurate laws not backed by the Constitution."

"The only taxes that are required to be paid are taxes on interest that you make," Graham said. "Income taxes actually are supposed to be voluntary, but people have been confused by an erroneous lie."

"We have taxation without representation and I think we're going into the same perils as other nations, headed for a revolution," he said.

Government violations of the law include not giving bond to Eddie Hatcher — formerly the editor of the tribal newspaper, Tuscarora Lightbearers of North Carolina — and Timothy Jacobs, who contributed poetry to the newspaper and has been involved in the movement, Graham claimed.

Hatcher and Jacobs are facing federal hostage-taking and firearms charges stemming from the Feb. 1 takeover of a Lumberton newspaper. Up to 20 people were held hostage for 10 hours until Gov. Jim Martin agreed to form a state task force to investigate the gunmen's charges of corruption in local government.

Hatcher and Jacobs were denied bond in two appearances before a federal magistrate and one appearance before a federal judge. They were given bond after a federal appeals court ruled too much time had elapsed between their arrest and their first bond hearing.

"If they had been interested in justice instead of public opinion, they would have granted Eddie and Timmy bond," Graham said. "But they went through judges that violated their rights."

"Those judges should have been removed from office, but the law just turns its head and doesn't see," Graham said.

Water Loss

DURHAM (AP) — Most of the city of Durham was without water for several hours Monday night after a major water line break reduced faucet flows to a trickle, city officials said.

While most residents lost water pressure, several larger consumers such as Duke Medical Center, Durham County General Hospital, Burroughs Wellcome Co. and IBM lost water entirely.

A 24-inch water line broke at about 5:30 p.m. Monday, said Leon Roberts, public works supervisor for water and sewer maintenance, told The News & Observer of Raleigh.

By the time city officials isolated the leak, Roberts said "millions and millions" of gallons of water had been lost. He did not know exactly how much water had been lost, but he said the line that broke affects the entire city.

Indictment

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Charges against the High Point woman who was arrested for taking a newborn baby from his mother's hospital room were reduced Monday from first-degree kidnapping to child abduction.

A Guilford County grand jury indicted Brenda Joyce Nobles, 37, on the lesser charge in the abduction of Jason Ray McClure June 20. The jury also returned an indictment against Ms. Nobles' daughter, Sharon S. Slaydon, 19, charging her with being an accessory after the fact to child abduction.

Howard "Buzz" Cole, one of the assistant district attorneys handling the case, said the prosecution asked for a reduction in the charge against Ms. Nobles because there was no evidence that the baby was harmed, terrorized or held for ransom.

The maximum sentence for a conviction on a charge of first-degree kidnapping is 40 years, compared to 15 years for child abduction, he said.

Marine Killed

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. — A 21-year-old Camp Lejeune Marine was killed in a fiery crash Monday morning when he drove his Honda Accord under the back of a parked bus and the vehicles burst into flames.

The victim's name was not immediately released, pending notification of relatives.

"We don't know if the gas tank on the bus or the car caught fire," said Delma Collins, Jacksonville deputy chief of detectives.

Fatal Jump

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh woman died after she apparently jumped off the roof of D.H. Hill Library on the North Carolina State University campus, police said.

Laura Ann Kauski, 21, died early Sunday morning and a suicide note was found, said Sgt. W.H. Payne.

Friends of Ms. Kauski said she had been having trouble finding steady work, Payne said. He also said a former boyfriend of Ms. Kauski had committed suicide about a year ago and the woman apparently was despondent about his death.

Panel Backed

GREENSBORO (AP) — Calling for radically improving the quality of teaching, former Gov. Jim Hunt said Monday a national teaching standards panel will help put the most competent people in front of the classroom.

"We're not getting our fair share of the best and brightest students," Hunt said at an educational conference sponsored by the Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro.

He said a new National Board for Professional Teaching Standards, of which he is chairman, will create a pool of top-notch public school teachers who will force schools to compete with money and good working conditions for their services. He said the board will begin certifying teachers who volunteer for the board's review in about four years.

Man, Two Children Die In Hyde Fire

SWAN QUARTER, N.C. (AP) — Two children and a man were killed and three other people jumped from a second-floor window to escape as fire swept through an apartment in a housing project early Monday.

Investigators identified the dead as Jamar Clayton, 2, James Rickey Murray, 10, and Stafford Green, 53.

Jamar Clayton and James Murray were identified as grandchildren of Minnie Murray, 53, who rented the apartment in the Bay Court housing project. Green was identified as a family friend visiting from New York.

Investigators said Ms. Murray and two other grandchildren, Kenisha Clayton, 7, and P.J. Murray, 16, jumped from the second floor of the apartment.

Ms. Murray was in stable but guarded condition Monday at Pungo District Hospital. A hospital spokeswoman said she had possible broken ribs and cuts and bruises. Kenisha Clayton was treated at the hospital and released, and P.J. Murray was unharmed, investigators said.

Witnesses said the two children who died were seen standing at an upstairs window in the apartment, apparently afraid to jump.

Roger Paxton, chief of the Swan Quarter volunteer fire department, said the fire apparently started on the first floor of the two-story apartment. He said all six people were upstairs.

Paxton said the fire may have started from a smoldering cigarette downstairs.

Firefighters from the Swan Quarter, Fairfield and Scranton departments arrived about 3:30 a.m. Paxton said between 40 and 50 firefighters battled the blaze, which they contained in about 15 minutes and extinguished in about two hours.

Jury Finds Texasgulf Negligent

RALEIGH (AP) — A Craven County jury has awarded a construction worker $800,000 after finding Texasgulf Inc. negligent in a 1983 accident that left the man unable to work.

The verdict in favor of James Anderson of New Bern ended the four-year legal fight between Anderson and Texasgulf over the company's responsibility in the accident that Anderson said cost him his livelihood.

Anderson, 57, was a construction employee for the now-defunct East Coast Machine and Ironworks Inc. of Bridgeton. East Coast was under contract to Texasgulf to take apart an acid plant in Aurora.

"I was walking along some pipe about five feet off the ground and fell," Anderson said.

Market Favorable To NCNB Takeover

The Associated Press Banking analysts and the stock market are reacting favorably to NCNB Corp.'s takeover of a problem-plagued Texas bank.

The Charlotte-based bank's stock closed at $25 Monday, up $1.625 over Friday, with 820,000 shares being exchanged in unusually heavy trading. Normally less than 100,000 shares trade daily.

Also Monday, 41 of the 171 branches of First Republic Bank reopened as branches of NCNB Texas National Bank.

The stock surge was a signal that NCNB officials answered satisfactorily many of the concerns raised last week when rumors spread that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. would accept NCNB's bid for the troubled Texas bank, said Tony Davis, a banking analyst with Wheat, First Securities in Richmond, Va.

The FDIC confirmed late Friday that it had chosen NCNB to run Texas' biggest bank, battered in recent years by billions of dollars in bad real estate and energy loans.

NCNB Chairman Hugh McColl met with banking analysts and institutional investors Monday in New York to provide details of his bank's deal with the FDIC.

Davis, who listened to that report via telephone hookup, said McColl appeared to answer positively most of the "issues and concerns" that had been raised, The Greensboro News & Record reported.

The major concerns, he said, were whether the NCNB acquisition would dilute the value of its present stock and whether the North Carolina-based bank would be taking on a dangerously high amount of the old First Republic's credit risks.

NCNB will pay about $210 million for 20 percent equity — and 100 percent of the voting stock — in a newly reconstituted NCNB Texas National Bank unburdened by the bad loans. FDIC will be responsible for most of those.

It will finance its investment in the Texas bank by issuing $180 million in convertible preferred stock and selling $30 million in other assets.

Davis said he agrees that the financing plan will not be dilutive. As for concerns about the quality of assets NCNB will take on, the agreement with FDIC "pretty well insulates them from that problem as well," he said.

In Atlanta, Lisa Rogers of Robinson Humphrey said that brokerage house also was optimistic.

"We think they have a good chance of hitting a home run," she said.

While investors last week may have been jittery, Monday's upward surge amounted to "a big sigh of relief," she said.

Meanwhile, one of NCNB's major North Carolina competitors saw the FDIC's choice of NCNB over such other national banking giants as Citicorp and Wells Fargo as "a tribute to North Carolina banking."

First Wachovia Chairman John Medlin called it a compliment "that one of our own could take over a bank and a task this large."

Medlin said he didn't know enough about the agreement to comment on what risks might be involved, but he said, NCNB's decision to go after First Republic "is a bold move. I certainly congratulate Hugh McColl on being able to pull this off."

Medlin said that although NCNB now will be two-and-a-half-times as large as First Wachovia in terms of assets, it will not put any pressure on First Wachovia to keep pace with a spectacular deal of its own.

First Wachovia will continue to follow its own timetable in acquisitions and choice of markets it enters, he said.

McColl told the analysts in New York that NCNB expects its Texas investment to be profitable immediately. Overall earnings for the parent company are expected to rise slightly in 1988, to $2.83 a share, compared with a forecast of $2.80 a share made by a group of Wall Street analysts before the FDIC deal.

Jackson Says Convention Loss Was Just 'One Round In Fight'

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Rev. Jese Jackson says that although he did not gain a spot on the Democratic presidential ticket, he and his supporters did not come out of the Democratic National Convention as losers because it was only "one round in the fight."

"There are no more impossible dreams. I'm taking the ceiling off dreams every day," he told a receptive audience at the AME Zion Church Conference Monday night. "I may or may not make it to the White House, but our children will. And they must."

"The struggle to make America stronger, to make America better continues," he said. "We're so close to where we're going and so far from where we started."

"The question is asked 'What did you win?'" he said. "What is victory? Victory is inclusion in every level of the campaign — state and national."

Jackson said he would continue to press for the changes in society that caused him to enter the 1988 presidential race.

"Atlanta was not Armageddon. It was one round in the fight," Jackson told almost 6,000 people who jammed into Charlotte Convention Center to hear him speak. Several hundred others were turned away at the doors by fire marshals.

Jackson noted in his 40-minute speech that much progress had been made in political conventions since 1932, when no black delegates attended the Democratic convention that nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt. In 1988, Jackson said, about 1,000 minority delegates attended the Democratic convention.

In his talk, Jackson said his campaign had "raised the reasonable expectations of our leaders." Recent proposals by probable Republican nominee George Bush in such areas as child care, ethics in government, and the war against drugs were a response to his own proposals, Jackson said.

Jackson did not mention Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis by name, but he made several references to the recently concluded campaign.

"Politics is not a one-round fight," he said. "It's not an even fight. But you can't have a glass jaw."

Jackson pointed proudly to the so-called Jackson planks, on issues from education to slowing corporate mergers, that made it into his party's platform.

He said his success had raised expectations of black candidates around the country and set an example for black children.

"I've tried to move back mountains every day," Jackson said. "I've tried to move the ceilings and say to our children, 'There's no impossible dream.'"

Street Preacher Leaves Church

MARION, N.C. (AP) — Street preacher David Strode says he has parted ways with his church, threatening to preach outside that church and others that he says are "hypocritical and worldly" for shunning him and his family.

The Rev. Danny Castle, pastor of New Manna Baptist Church in Marion, said Monday he made a "Christian gentleman's" agreement with Strode about two weeks ago for the family to stop attending the church because he said their celebrity status was hurting the children's ministry.

"We have had continual problems with the Strodes since the spring,"

Castle said. "We have bent over backwards to accommodate them and to be nice and promote fellowship with the church. There were things said that should not have been said."

Castle said Strode accepted the agreement and said nothing more about it.

"I suggested for the bus ministry's sake that he step aside so I could be helping 100 others," Castle said. "I did not tell him to go elsewhere. I did not run him off."

"I agreed to leave if Danny Castle would see me later about it," Strode said. "The only reason he gave me was so that the unsaved people would come in, but the church is not for the unsaved people."

Both men said they have not spoken with each other since they made the agreement.

"I agreed to walk away and say nothing because the truth would hurt," Strode said. "The truth is that the church is filled with lazy and cowardly Christians that refused to go into the world and preach the Gospels."

The Strode family gained national attention last spring after the three Strode children were suspended from their elementary school repeatedly for disruptive preaching on school grounds.

Firefighters Win $76,000 In Wages

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Labor Department has ordered Waynesville to pay its firefighters $76,000 in back wages, but town officials say they will appeal the ruling.

Town attorney Frank Queen said Waynesville will likely make its informal appeal late this month in Charlotte, arguing before labor officials that the town hasn't violated the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Waynesville continues to pay firefighters under a system ruled inadequate by a Labor Department investigator from the Wage and Hour Division office in Asheville. Tom Conley informed town officials of his ruling last week at the end of a three-month investigation.

The "whole situation," Queen said, concerns pay to six city firefighters for the eight hours they sleep on a 24-hour shift. Conley says firefighters are not paid for those hours, while the town maintains that they are, Queen said.

The $76,000 was ordered to cover back wages dating to April 1986, when the Fair Labor Standards Act was applied to local governments, Queen said. The act, prompted by a 1985 Supreme Court ruling, mandates overtime pay and sets standards on such things as minimum wage and child labor laws.

But because Waynesville firefighters and police are paid on a different system, Queen said the Labor Department misinterpreted the town's pay schedule.

Town officials will review their procedures with the Labor Department in Charlotte, probably late this month, Queen said. If the ruling is not rescinded then, Waynesville will likely make a formal appeal through the federal department.

Weakened Peace Plan Is Signed

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — George P. Shultz and four Central American foreign ministers called for peace and democracy in the region in a watered-down declaration lacking the denunciation of Nicaragua the U.S. envoy had sought.

In fact, the document they issued Monday during the secretary of state's eight-hour stop did not even mention Nicaragua by name.

Only at a later news conference was the country named when Shultz expressed continued U.S. support for the Contra rebels, who after nearly 7 years of war reached a preliminary cease-fire accord in March with Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Shultz flew today to Buenos Aires, Argentina, the second stop of a nine-country tour of Latin America.

The final version of the declaration — signed by Shultz and the foreign ministers of El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and Costa Rica after a three-hour meeting — called for "peace, democracy, security, social justice and economic development" in the region.

In the statement, the parties "reaffirmed that authentic democracy require, among other requisites, political pluralism, freedom of association, freedom of the press, an impartial justice system that guarantees due process, an apolitical armed forces, an honest and open electoral system and respect for human and individual rights."

The Sandinistas have been criticized for maintaining a political monopoly and suppressing dissent and talks with the Contras on forging a lasting peace have stalled.

Senate Republican leaders are working on legislation in Congress which would provide the Contras with $27 million in humanitarian aid and include an additional $20 million that would be set aside for possible new military assistance. President Reagan has indicated he supports such a bill.

The last congressional appropriation for military aid ran out in February. It has not been renewed, largely pending the outcome of a year-old regional peace plan that has so far proved ineffective.

Shultz said the Contras "are an important element, expressing a strong desire for freedom and democracy in Nicaragua and we continue to support them."

"I didn't come here basically to discuss that subject, and we didn't have very much discussion of it, although I certainly hope that we will extend funding for the Contras."

Robertson Returns As Host Of TV '700 Club' On CBN

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Pat Robertson has completed his journey from religious broadcaster to presidential candidate and back, returning to the Christian Broadcasting Network as co-host of "The 700 Club."

"For better or worse, the health of this ministry depends on this program. It is our bread and butter," Robertson said Monday after the first broadcast of the revamped program, which included the introduction of a new co-host, Sheila Walsh, a gospel singer and songwriter from Scotland.

Robertson, who founded CBN, left the network in 1986 to pursue his political goals. In 1987, when the Southern Baptist minister formally announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination, he installed his son, Tim Robertson, as president of CBN and one of three hosts of the program.

During that period, donations dwindled. CBN officials blamed the decline on scandals in other television ministries, changes in "The 700 Club" format and a poor economy in oil states where many CBN donors live.

Robertson later said his absence was the reason for the drop.

During that time, CBN laid off more than 1,000 employees — about half its workforce — and cut its operating budget by more than 40 percent.

Ratings for "The 700 Club" also dropped, giving rise to the format unveiled Monday.

Gone were the dramatic recreations of religious conversions and the public prayers for healing that marked the old program.

Robertson said the new formula for the 90-minute program will be one-third news, one-third ministry and teaching and one-third lifestyle features.

Robertson still plans to campaign for Vice President George Bush during the presidential election.

"When I leave that desk," he said, pointing to the studio desk from which he delivers the news and commentary segment of the program, "I am no longer a newsmen. When I'm there, I will try to report the news fairly."

Carlucci Gets Close Look At Soviets' New Bomber

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet military unveiled its new top-secret Blackjack bomber to U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci today and staged thundering aerial and artillery displays at two bases normally off-limits to foreigners.

Carlucci spent about 10 minutes in the cockpit of the strategic bomber while foreign reporters were allowed within about 50 yards of the sleek white jet. Soviet military brass were clearly uncomfortable with the access accorded the visitors and refused to tell reporters anything about the plane.

"Why do you want to know about the bomber? Why frighten people?" asked Col. Gen. Boris F. Korolkov.

He refused to identify the aircraft, whose only markings were a red star and a No. 12 on the tail.

The Pentagon's reference book Soviet Military Power says the plane is the world's heaviest and largest bomber, but does not give exact dimensions.

Jane's All The World's Aircraft, a respected British reference book, says the plane, codenamed Blackjack by NATO, is known in the Soviet Union as the Tupolev strategic bomber. It says the jet is 177 feet long, has a wingspan of 182 feet and weighs 550,000 pounds.

The aircraft has been under development for 10 years, can travel twice the speed of sound, has a flying range of 4,500 miles and can be armed with bombs and cruise missiles, according to Jane's.

No Western official had been shown the plane before Carlucci's visit to the Kubinka airfield 30 miles west of Moscow.

Jane's and the U.S. Defense Department predicted the Blackjacks would be deployed this year. Korolkov said they became operational "recently."

Carlucci first inspected a MiG-29 Fulcrum fighter jet before turning to the nearby Blackjack. As he did, two Blackjack bombers flew overhead in formation in the partly cloudy blue sky, and the roar of their engines broke the silence of the largely deserted airfield.

Carlucci inspected the underbelly of the four-engine Blackjack and then climbed orange stairs into the open bomb bay doors and entered the cockpit. He told reporters later he could not give technical details of the plane but compared it to the B-1 bomber of the United States in that it can fly at low altitudes and carry heavy payloads.

"I'm not a qualified intelligence officer," said Carlucci, a former senior official with the CIA. "I'm not a qualified observer. They let me sit in the cockpit but I couldn't tell one instrument from another."

The American defense chief, who arrived in the Soviet Union on Monday for a four-day visit, said the tour was largely symbolic.

"It's a way of continuing the dialogue between our two military establishments," Carlucci said.

The Soviet military chief of staff, Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev, climbed aboard a B-1 bomber at Ellsworth Air Force Base in South Dakota last month.

At Kubinka, Carlucci also inspected an Ilyushin-78 tanker plane and an Mi-26 helicopter, and was treated to an acrobatic flying display by four MiG-29s.

Next it was the army's turn to put on a show for Carlucci. He drove to the Taman Motorized Division Headquarters 12 miles to the southwest to watch noisy and dusty war games.

Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov, the host of Carlucci's visit, stood next to his American counterpart on a two-story building overlooking a vast field. Soviet Mi-24 helicopter gunships shot out from behind the buildings, guns firing, and artillery shells bombarded targets in the field, spewing gray-black smoke and dirt.

"It's not very comfortable to drive," quipped Yazov as infantry fighting vehicles bumped along the dirt.

After the display, Carlucci asked Yazov's 10-year-old grandson if he wanted to shoot like the soldiers. The grandson, Oleg Losik, appeared to be too shy to answer.

Later, Oleg, wearing a military officer's jacket to keep warm, told a reporter the war games were "very interesting" and that they were only the second he'd seen.

On Wednesday, Carlucci heads to the Soviet Crimean Peninsula, where he will visit the headquarters of the Black Sea fleet.

Among those traveling with Carlucci are Ron Lehman, assistant secretary of defense, and representatives of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and State Department.

U.N. Chief To Announce Truce Date

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. secretary-general says he will alone set a deadline for halting the bloodshed in the Persian Gulf, pressuring Iraq to return to the bargaining table and end its raids on Iran.

Javier Perez de Cuellar said late Monday that he expects to set a cease-fire date once his fact-finding team returns from the warring countries this week and he has consulted with the Security Council.

Iran said it would honor an immediate cease-fire in the 8-year-old war. Iraq had no immediate comment on Perez de Cuellar's statement.

Iran's announcement on July 18 that it was finally accepting a year-old U.N. cease-fire resolution came after it suffered a string of battlefield defeats, and was followed by a series of Iraqi raids into Iran.

Iraq accepted the cease-fire resolution last year, but has now been demanding face-to-face talks with Iran before a truce takes effect.

The announcement of a cease-fire date would put pressure on Iraq to compromise and drop its insistence on direct talks, which have hampered a week of U.N.-mediated negotiations between the belligerents.

City Defies Desegregation Order

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — City Council members forced a showdown with a federal judge by ignoring his threat to bankrupt the city and send them to jail if they failed to approve a housing desegregation plan.

At a raucous hearing, the council voted 4-3 Monday night to defy U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand's order.

Sand was scheduled to hold a contempt-of-court hearing today.

"I hope the judge sees some good faith," said Mayor Nicholas Wasiscko after he voted in favor of the plan. He said he hoped Sand would delay action until the mayor could call another council meeting later this week.

"The rule of law has got to be respected," said the mayor, whose city has been struggling back from near-bankruptcy in 1984.

Sand has indicated that if he finds the city in contempt he will fine it $100 for the first day, with the fine doubling each day thereafter. By day 23, the fines would surpass the city's current $337 million operating budget.

Sand also said he would fine defiant councilmembers $500 per day and impose prison terms if the defiance continued until Aug. 10.

The hour-long council meeting was punctuated by shouts and jeers from the 150 people inside the chambers and about 300 outside.

One person was arrested for disorderly conduct and one was ejected.

At issue are 800 units of affordable housing to be built by private developers.

In 1980, the U.S. Justice Department charged that Yonkers, a city of 195,000 residents, had intentionally segregated its housing and schools for 40 years.

The east side of the state's fourth largest city is predominately white, middle to upper class. It borders the wealthy towns of Scarsdale and Bronxville. The west side is older, more industrial, and mostly black and Hispanic. It adjoins New York City's poorest borough, the Bronx.

In 1985, Sand found Yonkers liable. It was the first time school and housing segregation were linked.

The city's Board of Education began an integration plan in 1986. That year, Sand ordered the city to build 200 units of low-income housing on the east side and 800 others throughout the city — 160 low-income homes, the rest for moderate incomes.

Sand ordered the council to pass a resolution by Monday supporting the plan. It could not pass the actual plan because it must first hold a state-mandated public hearing before voting on a zoning matter.

The council has wavered in the face of public opinion.

Vice Mayor Henry Spallone, the judge's most vociferous critic, demanded an investigation into the city's low-income housing and into Sand's law practice.

Spallone charged that Sand was violating state law by forcing the vote before the public hearing.

"The judge feels above the law," he told a cheering crowd. "This judge can no longer address this case."

Councilmember Peter Chema said it was not "solely a black and white issue, but a green issue" that involves real estate development.

Chema said Sand, who lives in the exclusive Westchester enclave of Pound Ridge, was being "autocratic not democratic."

Councilmember Nicholas Longo called Sand's actions "a typical case of the hypocrisy of the rich and elitist looking down upon those who must work for everything they have."

While six of the seven councilmembers, including Wasiscko, campaigned last November on opposing Sand, the council agreed to a consent decree in January after Sand threatened to fine the city into bankruptcy.

But residents vehemently against the decree began showing up in force at council meetings, sent bullets in the mail to the councilmembers and picketed Sand's Manhattan and Pound Ridge homes, causing some of the councilmembers to backtrack.

Tourist Carelessness Is Pickpocket's Best Friend

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With the advent of the tourist season, police have issued their perennial warning against pickpockets — especially to naive, preoccupied tourists.
But beware of the warning.
"If you're at an airport and you see a sign that says 'Beware of Pickpockets,' the first thing John Q. Public will do is pat his pocket," says Detective James McHugh of the New York Transit Authority Police Department.

"So the pickpocket who is watching from a telephone booth or pretending to read a newspaper knows exactly where the wallet is."

Pickpockets still count on carelessness, on women who swing their purses over their shoulders and men who keep their wallets in the "sucker pocket," as the rear pants pocket is called.

Sometimes they work alone, relying on stealth, and sometimes in teams, one to distract, the other to lift the goods.

Virtually the same techniques have been used since Roman times when pickpockets were called cutpurses. As togas did not have pockets, coins were kept in pouches hung from the waist. Skilled thieves were able to cut the purses without detection.

Evading notice continues to be the aim of all pickpockets and the extent to which they are successful is difficult to determine, police say.

Victims who don't "wake up" at the moment they are being "stung" may not realize for hours that their wallet is missing.

"A lot of times, the crime will go down as 'lost property,'" said Sgt. Chris Moran of the Police Department's Special Frauds Squad.

Even if an officer foils a pickpocket, the intended victim can disappear during the commotion of arrest, unaware of what happened.

And on the relatively rare occasion when an officer catches someone, gets the wallet, and the victim remains on the scene, often the victim just wants his property back. But the officer has to hold it as evidence.

Pickpockets are not generally considered dangerous criminals because few carry weapons, but they have a lot of nerve.

"That's what it takes," said Detective Frank Cayea, a TA cop and recognized expert on pickpockets. "They make a living at it and they are good."

Practitioners are no longer the street urchins portrayed in "Oliver Twist." Modern pickpockets are practiced, patient professionals, usually well-dressed men, although some women also ply the trade.

To police, pickpockets appear preoccupied, which they are.

"He senses what he wants; picks out something. He may wait by a banking window to see who makes a withdrawal. He knows exactly where you place the money. He watches where you go."

"At first when you get the money you are cautious and look around. But then as you walk away, you may go a block or two, you relax. He has patience. He is so psyched up that he feels that the money that you are carrying is his, and you are just holding it for him," Detective Cayea says.

The elite among pickpockets is the "cannon," who actually goes into men's pants or jacket pockets. The most common is the bag opener, who reaches into women's handbags. The most vulgar are the "lushworkers," who prey, without finesse, on drunks.

Although men are the victims almost half the time, females are easier "marks."

"It's very simple with a woman. Usually the shoulder bag is behind her and she's got a child on one hand and a shopping bag in the other," Cayea says.

To lift a man's wallet a pickpocket doesn't even have to make body contact. Instead they use newspapers, briefcases and shopping bags as "stiffs" to feel where the wallet is and then to push it up. Some cut out the pockets of their coats so it looks like their hand is buried in their pocket, when the coat actually shields their agile hands.

Some use disguises.

Cayea cited an example of a 70-year-old man who poses as a minister complete with a clerical collar. He carries a raincoat over his left arm. The coat is slipped over the woman's bag to obscure the work of his right hand buried in her purse.

"He's able to remove the contents, smile and walk away. And who would think that a minister would be working a handbag?" Cayea says.

Cannons prefer men wearing suits because the pockets are baggy. They'll never attempt tight jeans.

But a thief doesn't have to sink his hand in a pocket if its lining is loose. He can pull the lining out of the pocket, a technique called "riffing."

Pickpockets lurk wherever there is movement of both people and money. Airports, bus terminals and train stations are favorites because once a victim is on a plane, bus or train, he can't report it. And the thief has two to three hours to run up a bill on a credit card or get a cash advance or two.

Up escalators are popular because they put the pickpocket at eye level with his objective. And public phones also attract pickpockets who will pretend to be making a call and wait for someone to approach.

With 4.5 million riders a day, the New York City transit system also is a haven for pickpockets, especially during rush hour when buses and subways are jammed with standees. TA police report 984 pickpocketing complaints last year and 148 arrests. They won't speculate about how many similar crimes went unreported.

Teach 'Em Very Young

We've known for some time that alcohol, drugs and cigarettes affect a fetus.

But the Los Angeles Times recently ran a story on a woman whose child became hooked on "Ryan's Hope" while in the womb. Every morning she sat in front of the set, and after the baby was born and she was too busy to watch, her husband recorded the show so she could watch the tapes. They're not sure when they discovered the addiction, but when the baby was fussy, they noted the theme from "Ryan's Hope" seemed to calm her down and she watched silently with her mother as if she understood what was being said.

The phenomenon is not new to researchers. A British medical journal did a study with the babies of women who regularly watched a British soap and identified the same problem. They called it "fetal soap addiction," but pointed out that it had implications beyond soaps. They contend that children can be influenced and learn to recognize sounds before they are born.

No wonder we have children who want their ears pierced at age 2, date at 9 and get their own apartments at 13. They've experienced more life by the age of 6 months in utero than Shirley MacLaine.

At Wits End

I wish I had known this when I was carrying my children. I'd have glued myself in front of "The Waltons" and palmed them off as reality. As it turned out, my kids' first word wasn't Mama or Daddy; it was Jor-dache.

I've tried to think back on some of the sounds that may have affected my unborn children in some way after they were born. The sound that quickly comes to mind is the turning over of a motor in a car. In their life as a fetus, they must have been stimulated by the sound because after they were born, every time a car started they scurried around to find their shoes. I tried from time to time to slip out of the house, to no avail. I even tried rolling the car out of the driveway before I started the motor, but they always heard and ran to the window screaming, "Take me! Take me!" Once they were in the car and sitting by a window, their screaming stopped.

I probably watched too many game shows. The kids are always teasing, "Are my clean clothes hidden behind door No. 1, door No. 2 or door No. 3? Choose carefully or you will lose the sight of a good eye from the stench." The other day one said, "The greatest single disaster recorded in the 20th century."

"Your bedroom!" I said.
"Sorry, Mom, you didn't answer in Jeopardese. 'What is your bedroom?' That means I get the car for the weekend and a chance to try for the big money next week."

Come to think of it, I have to admit the whole theory sounds a little farfetched. Call me when a newborn focuses on the TV set and says, "So, you're Erica. Somehow, I thought you'd be taller."

Margin For Error Is Too Wide

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from the postal employee who thinks that a 2 percent error rate is not a bad record. That kind of attitude is ruining America. A 2 percent error rate is completely unacceptable!

How safe would you feel if 2 percent of the aluminum used to make our airplanes was flawed, or if one car in 50 was a lemon, or 2 percent of the answers in your column were wrong? No errors are acceptable!

I attended a conference recently at Stanford University titled "Manufacturing in the '90s." George Fisher, president and CEO of Motorola, stated in his keynote address that his company now counts defects a few per MILLION, and by 1992 hopes to be counting defects per BILLION. The goal is 99.997 percent defect-free product.

If America's manufacturing industry condoned even a fraction of a 2 percent error rate, it would have even more problems than it has today, and would soon cease to exist. I submit that the U.S. Postal Service should rethink its quality program or its future may be very tenuous.

Abby, this is what we can expect if 99 percent is "good enough":

- At least 200,000 wrong drug prescriptions each year.
- More than 30,000 newborn babies accidentally dropped by doctors/nurses each year.
- Unsafe drinking water almost four days each year.
- No electricity, water, heat for about 15 minutes each day.
- No telephone service or television transmission for nearly 15 minutes each day.

— Newspapers not delivered four times each year. — DON McNEILL, SEPULVEDA, CALIF.

DEAR DON McNEILL: What happened to your Breakfast Club? Thanks for some startling statistics. "Tis said, "Figures don't lie, and liars don't figure." I say, always strive for perfection, but allow for human error.

DEAR ABBY: You have had several letters concerning the quality of mail service. Can you stand one more?

For 11 years, we lived in the small city of Palacios, Texas. About a year ago, I obtained the name and address of the postal department that Palacios station reported to. I wrote a letter commending them on their exceptionally good service, as well as the courtesy of their employees. Later on I asked one of the employees if she had ever heard of my commendation. She said she had not.

What a shame the employees have to answer to the criticism they receive, but rarely do they hear the compliments.

Thanks for letting me have my say. — BETTY FITCH, MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR BETTY: Orchids to you for wanting to compliment the employees of the Palacios, Texas, Postal Service. Although your message did not reach them through the route you intended, will this do?

DEAR ABBY: Re the U.S. Postal Service: Two weeks ago, I sent a birthday card from Oakland to San Francisco — first class mail. It arrived eight days later.

Abby, eight days to travel a distance that I can drive in 20 minutes! A 2 percent error rate out of 100 billion means every year 2 billion pieces of mail go astray. That's intolerable! — L.P. STEARNS, OAKLAND her house the night of Jan. 10, 1986. He allegedly forced her to go with him behind a neighborhood church where he raped her and then told her he could have killed her.

Hearing

The trial court found two aggravating factors, which allow the judge to impose a stiffer sentence: Worsley had prior criminal convictions and the woman was blind in one eye and had poor eyesight in the other eye.

North Carolina law states that if a victim is mentally or physically disadvantaged, the court may find an aggravating factor. But Wells wrote that the state's appellate courts have made it clear that the factor should not be found unless the defendant took advantage of the victim's helplessness in order to commit the crime.

Without any aggravating factors or mitigating factors — which allow the judge to order a lesser sentence — a judge could impose the presumptive sentence for second degree rape, which is 12 years in prison.

With aggravating factors, the maximum penalty for second degree rape is 40 years in prison, a fine, or both.

Worsley's attorney, DeLyle M. Evans of Ayden, argued that the trial court erred in considering the woman's blindness an aggravating factor, and the appellate court agreed.

"There was no evidence that she was ever targeted as a victim because of her eyesight or that her assailant even knew of her poor eyesight when he selected her as a victim," Wells wrote.

"Nor does the record contain any showing that the harm done ... was rendered more severe by virtue of her infirmity. ... Therefore the case must be remanded for a new sentencing hearing."

Evans also claimed the trial court should not have admitted evidence that the woman identified Worsley in a photographic lineup because Worsley's head was positioned lower in the photograph, thus suggesting a shorter person. The most distinguishing thing the woman remembered about the attacker was he was short and had short hair, Wells wrote.

But the appeals court upheld the trial court's decision to admit the identification, saying the N.C. Supreme Court does not require all photographs in a lineup to be identical; only that the lineup be fair and the officer conducting the investigation not prompt the witness to select one person over another.

In addressing Evans' claim that the state's evidence was not sufficient to convict Worsley, Wells wrote: "After the rape she described her assailant to the police with considerable detail. She picked the defendant out of a photographic lineup, and she identified the defendant in a showup in District Court. This was evidence of guilt substantial enough to present a jury question."

Economic Indicators Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity shot up 1.4 percent in June, the biggest increase in 18 months.

The big advance in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators provided fresh evidence that the current recovery, which has already lasted a peacetime record of 69 months, is in no danger of collapsing.

Economists said they were not concerned that the huge jump in June's figure was a signal that the economy was in danger of overheating.

They said the increase was in large part a rebound from May, when the index had dropped by a sharp 0.8 percent.

The June advance was the biggest one-month gain since the index rose by 2.2 percent in December 1986. It was the latest in a string of reports reflecting better-than-expected economic growth this year.

The government said last week that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, expanded at a 3.1 percent annual rate from April through June. This robust growth helped to push the unemployment rate down to a 14-year low of 5.3 percent in June.

Tigers Have Question Marks Too

Cavs Picked High

Reflector Sports Writer
FOXFIRE VILLAGE — While Clemson was the overwhelming pre-season pick to win the Atlantic Coast Conference Football Championship in 1988, Tiger coach Danny Ford feels his team has question marks just like every other team in the league.

"They (this year's Clemson team) could be better than our '87 team, but our '87 team wasn't the best one I've had," Ford said at the ACC's Annual Summer Football Kickoff.

"We have a lot of people back. We might be better but we might not win as many games."

Clemson was picked by the ACC sportswriters to finish first this year, followed by Virginia, N.C. State, North Carolina, Wake Forest, Maryland and Duke.

Clemson returns 18 starters on both sides of the ball, including the entire offensive backfield as well as all the receivers. However, Ford said the Tigers have some holes to fill.

"When you talk about our football team you look at our kicking game, we've got to completely overhaul that," he said.

Placekicker David Treadwell is gone, as are top defensive lineman Michael Dean Perry and top offensive lineman John Phillips.

"We've got a freshman coming in who is supposed to be a good kicker," Ford said. "If he can't compete, all our kicking game will go to (punter) Rusty Seyle. We have a lot of defensive linemen back but not our best ones."

Ford also said the Tigers must develop depth at linebacker and in the secondary before they can think about repeating as the champions of the ACC, which he felt was as competitive as it has been in a number of years.

"I think the conference is going to be tougher than it has been in a while," he said. "Dooley has things turned around at Wake. Virginia has come a long way ... They might win the conference."

Virginia is picked second, but faces a big challenge early in a non-conference game against Penn State Sept. 10. It's a game that Cavalier coach George Welsh said his team has to approach correctly.

"You have to know that if you don't win a big game early in the year, it's not the end of the season," he said. "And if you do win a big one early, it doesn't make your season."

Virginia's most pressing need is replacing quarterback Scott Secules. Shawn Moore appears the heir apparent.

"You can't expect the performance out of Moore that we had from Secules last year," Welsh said. "We'll have to get our yardage some other way."

At N.C. State, third-year coach Dick Sheridan has a lot of talent returning on offense, but must find a quarterback from the pool of Shane Montgomery, Preston Poag and Charles Davenport. Whoever gets the job will have the luxury of receivers like Nasrallah Worthen, back after a one-year suspension, and Danny Peebles.

"The half-year experience that Preston and Shane acquired last year should make us stronger at that position," Sheridan said.

Thompson Having Lodging Problems

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. men's basketball coach John Thompson has already had some Olympic logistics problems and it is his own government that has him upset.

Thompson told a telephone news conference on Monday that he has had problems with American military officials concerning use of a gymnasium at an Army base in Korea as a backup facility.

"It appears to me that I have to get an act from the president in order to use a United States facility and I kind of resent that," Thompson said from Washington. "I always get a kick out of people telling me this is our team, America's team."

"It is, until you're ready to use some facilities. We've had more problems with the U.S. Army and that facility than anything I've made a trip over to Korea for."

Thompson has expressed concern over the starting times of the games in the Olympics because they will be played in a time zone 13 hours from television prime time on the East Coast of the United States. That means for the game to start at 9 p.m. in the eastern United States, it would have to start at 9 a.m. in Seoul.

He has made trips to Seoul to make sure everything would go smoothly and securing practice facilities was a big part of those trips.

"The gym was a backup; it was not the primary place we would practice," Thompson said, his voice starting to rise. "What we wanted to do was know what we could do if the main practice facility that had been assigned to us had fallen apart. At least we would have had somewhere to go — and it was a U.S. military base for 45 minutes a day — without an act of Congress."

Thompson gave no further details of which military base was involved or how the situation was being resolved.

Thompson on Monday also confirmed published reports that Florida center Dwayne Schintzius was interviewed by agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration on the day he was released from the Olympic team.

Thompson emphasized the meeting came after he had decided to release the 7-foot sophomore and had nothing to do with his being sent home from the camp being conducted at Georgetown.

"What happened is that those gentlemen did come to Georgetown University and requested to see Dwayne," Thompson said. "They were able to see Dwayne and talk to Dwayne after we did practice. It was not during practice."

"They were informed just as Dwayne was informed after practice that we had made some decisions to release some people."

University of Florida president Marshall M. Criser announced last week an investigation of possible illegal drug use on campus that may involve current and former Gator athletes.

Criser said the probe was sparked by a criminal investigation in Gainesville, Fla., of drug sales and use in the area. He did name the law enforcement agency conducting the probe.

Schintzius, along with Randolph Keys of Southern Mississippi and Dyron Nix of Tennessee, was released after being among the final 20 players in quest of the 12 berths on the team, which will defend the gold medal in Seoul in September.

A spokesman for the University of Florida said Monday that the school would have no comment. Coach Norm Sloan was out of the office Monday and could not be reached by telephone.

Dooley Hoping For Good Health

FOXFIRE VILLAGE — Wake Forest head football coach Bill Dooley hopes the Red Cross is on his side during the 1988 football season.

Dooley, like most coaches before him at Wake — the smallest school competing on the NCAA Division I level in football — has to overcome a problem with team depth.

"We probably can compete with any of the teams in the league with our first team," Dooley said. "But if we have injuries, we're going to have a lot of problems at a lot of positions."

"I think we have very good players," Dooley continued. "The question is do we have enough."

One area which backs up Dooley's claim is the quarterback position. The Deacons will be led by 6-3 senior Mike Elkins.

Elkins is, no doubt, the premier quarterback in the Atlantic Coast Conference entering the 1988 campaign. Currently, Elkins ranks seventh on the league's all-time passing list with 5,099 career yards. He has completed 444 passes (sixth in ACC history) and thrown for 29 touchdowns (11th).

Elkins, the brother of former North Carolina quarterback Rod Elkins, led the ACC in total offense in 1986, averaging 244.3 yards per outing, the sixth best mark in conference history.

"Mike's without question one of the finest quarterbacks that I've been associated with during my coaching career," Dooley said. "Not only does he possess all the talent and ability needed to be an outstanding quarterback, but he also has the leadership quality that is so important to a player in that position. Certainly, he's an excellent professional prospect, but for the time being I'm just glad he's at Wake Forest. I haven't seen any that I'd trade him for."

But behind Elkins on the Deacon depth chart is a blank, no names, just a big blank.

"We'd probably put in Jerry McManus if Elkins got injured — he's the quarterback coach," Dooley said when asked of the situation. "Or maybe Phillip Barnhill (a sophomore who, according to Dooley has taken about two snaps in game action). I hear he's a fine young man."

The Deacons were picked by the Atlantic Coast Conference Sports Writer's Association to finish fifth in the league standings this year after posting a 7-4 mark last year. Last year's record was the best by a Deacon team in the 1980's.

"Some people pick you fifth, some sixth and some seventh. And somebody's going to be right," Dooley said, rolling his eyes and shrugging his shoulders. "I would have probably picked us around sixth or seventh based upon our depth."

Dooley, who has always been known for his running attacks offensively, joked about a new offensive scheme for the Deacons this year. While at UNC, Dooley was constantly ribbed by fans who said that the Tar Heel offense was no more than three yards and a cloud of dust.

"This year we're going to Air-Dooley it," Dooley said. "We'll Air-Dooley it, Underwater-Dooley it or anything as long as we score."

Dooley went on to create a made-for-television slogan for the Deacons.

"Come see exciting football," Dooley said. "Come see the ball in the air."

Speaking of three yards and a cloud of dust, Wake Forest assistant coach Jerry McManus said that Dooley's golf game fits that description to a tee.

Shoulder Problems KO Valenzuela

By Scott Ostler
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

It was Sunday morning, deep in the bowels of Dodger Stadium, and team doctor Frank Jobe was explaining the injury that had caused Fernando Valenzuela to be placed on the 21-day disabled list.

"It's sort of a syndrome," Jobe said, "but we're calling it a stretched anterior capsule of the right shoulder."

Whatever. Those are details best left to the medical men. What's important to the Dodgers and their fans is:

—Fernando the Unbreakable and Unshakable, the most durable baseball pitcher of our time, will be lost to the team for at least three weeks, probably more.

—The mystery has been solved.

After more than a year of the world pondering what's wrong with Fernando, the world knows.

Valenzuela doesn't need a diet. He doesn't need eyeglasses. All he needs is a new right shoulder. Left shoulder. Whatever.

Actually, all he needs is a little R & R, rest and rehab, or so the doctors believe. Still, there was a subdued air in the Dodger clubhouse when the news spread of Fernando's impending vacation. This is no ordinary pitcher going on the shelf with an ordinary injury.

This is Fernando, the bull, the rock, the rubber arm, The Iron Caballo.

He has carried the Dodgers colors into battle for 255 consecutive starts, eight seasons without missing a beat.

How subdued were the Dodgers? Well, Manager Tom Lasorda sat behind his desk and delivered what sounded suspiciously like a eulogy.

Someone mentioned the 255-game streak and Lasorda cued the organ music.

"Quite an accomplishment, quite an accomplishment," Lasorda said, solemnly. "He was quite a competitor. It's going to look funny not to see Fernando out there on that hill of thrills. His contributions to the team were tremendous."

Note the use of past tense? Had somebody misinformed Lasorda? Didn't Dr. Jobe say it was just the arm that was dead, not the whole Fernando?

Inquiring media minds wanted to know, and went searching for Valenzuela himself. We finally located him in the hallway outside the clubhouse, courageously clinging to life, relaxing on an equipment chest.

"This (being injured) is normal," Fernando said. "Everybody's human, I'm human."

That point now medically certified, what remains to be seen is whether the prescribed R & R will restore that famous arm to its former splendor. A month or so from now, will we see the old Fernando, or rather, the Fernando of old?

"I hope so, Fernando," Present said, laughing. "The way Pat (Srenar, the team physical therapist) told me, if I work hard on the weight program, it's possible it will come back strong again."

The 255-game streak was mentioned and Fernando said, "I'm very proud to pitch for all those years, go every fifth day, sometimes every four days. But this happened."

How? Was Fernando foolishly courageous, trying to pitch through the pain? Were the Dodgers at fault for not forcibly strapping Fernando to a polygraph long ago and asking him, "How's your arm, kid? Your left arm?"

Fernando insisted he didn't macho himself out of the lineup.

"If I hurt, I don't pitch anymore," he said. "At that time (before Saturday), I feel fine."

And pitch lousy.

Back to Lasorda.

"I always felt that way (that Valenzuela was hurt)," said Lasorda, "but he would never tell you, because he's such a tremendous competitor. That was one of the tough things. He kept saying there wasn't anything wrong with him."

"You can't blame a guy for that." Lasorda launched into an anecdote about when he was pitching for the Dodgers in 1955, against the St. Louis Cardinals. He threw a wild pitch, covered the plate and was spiked badly on the right knee by Wally Moon.

Lasorda was gushing from the wound like a Roman fountain, and was risking permanent injury, but doggedly refused to come out of the game.

Dodger Coach Bill Russell was listening to the story.

"There's a little difference between you and Fernando," Russell pointed out.

"If I pitched against guys like you," Lasorda sputtered, "I'd've been flying around in Lear jets."

The difference between Lasorda and Valenzuela, for the record, is 118 wins, and counting. Lasorda was 0-4 lifetime, Fernando is 118-90.

The news of Valenzuela came as something of a relief to Lasorda. Tommy was facing the prospect, very soon, of calling Fernando into his office and telling his most game ballplayer he was being removed from the rotation.

Valenzuela had pitched effectively Saturday night, until something snapped, cracked or popped, but the Dodger speed gun clocked his fastball — excuse the expression — at between 79 and 82 mph.

You can mix up your pitches with a Cuisinart, dazzle the opposition with control and variety, but if you're featuring a 79-mph slowball, be prepared to chuck 'n duck.

Now when people ask what's wrong with Fernando, the Dodgers can whip out their Gray's Anatomy and show diagrams.

Seeing Red

Hornets Looking For Diamond In Rough

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Officials with the Charlotte Hornets concede that "you never know what you'll find," but they say the chances of discovering a star at the team's summer free-agent camp are slight.

Thirty-four players arrived at the camp Saturday to compete for a slot on the NBA expansion franchise team, but the squad was expected to be cut by as much as half by tonight, team officials said.

"The odds aren't even good that they'll make it to our fall camp," said Dick Harter, the Hornets' coach. "But some will. That's why they're here."

But Gene Littles, the team's director of player personnel who invited the camp participants, was more optimistic about the free-agents' chances. He said up to 12 players could be invited to the Hornets' fall camp, and up to four could eventually make the roster.

"Depending, of course, on how many deals we make between now and then," Littles said. "There's not that much room on our roster now, but our roster now is far from finished."

Despite the team's aggressive posture in the summer trade and free-agent market, Harter acknowledged it still needed good players — particularly big men. The average height at the camp is 6-foot-7, with nine centers among the hopefuls.

The players at the free-agent camp range from Louis Orr, a fairly well known NBA veteran whose contract with the New York Knicks was not renewed, to little Ralph Miller, a point guard from South Carolina State. Miller earned a tryout with the Hornets when he mailed team officials videotapes of himself.

Practicing with the team on Sunday were center Dave Hoppen and guard Sedric Toney. Dell Curry, Ricky Green, Michael Holton and Kelly Tripucka were scheduled to arrive Tuesday, along with free-agent Earl Cureton.

Jeff Moore, a third-round draft pick, also was expected to join the workouts on Tuesday. Rex Chapman and Tom Tolbert, the team's first- and second-round picks, have not yet signed and are being held out of the camp by their agents.

Winston Cup Race Is Getting Tighter

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The NASCAR Winston Cup points battle is tighter following Ken Schrader's victory at the Talladega DieHard 500 stock car race at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Schrader of Fenton, Mo., moved into fourth place in the standings with 2,331 points by winning his first Winston Cup race of his career at Talladega on Sunday.

Rusty Wallace of St. Louis, Mo., maintains a very slender lead in the Winston Cup standings with 2,518 after the first 17 events of the 29-race season. Bill Elliott of Dawsonville, Ga., trails Wallace by 11 points and three-time Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt of Kannapolis, N.C., is 33 points behind in third with 2,485.

Terry Labonte of Corpus Christi, Texas, is fifth with 2,309. Rounding out the top 10 are: Geoff Bodine, 2,264; Sterling Marlin, 2,145; Phil Parsons, 2,137; Darrell Waltrip, 2,128; and Bobby Hillin, 2,059.

Schrader became the 11th different winner on the Winston Cup circuit this season. The record of 13 different winners was set in 1972.

He was also the 18th different winner in 20 Talladega 500 races. Earnhardt leads the tour in money-winnings with $648,740, followed by Wallace, $636,985; Labonte, $591,295; Elliott, $589,780; Davey Allison, $489,150; Waltrip, $441,465; Schrader, $412,325; Bobby Allison, $408,795; Bodine, $345,640; and Parsons, $341,025.

The NASCAR Winston Cup circuit next moves to Watkins Glen, N.Y., International for the Aug. 14 Budweiser-At-The-Glen race.

Doctors Deciding On Allison's Rehab

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Doctors at a Birmingham hospital will decide what type rehabilitation work is needed by Bobby Allison to help him overcome injuries suffered in a stock car race.

Lakeshore Hospital said in a statement Monday that the veteran race driver, injured June 19, will be evaluated by a team of specialists to establish a treatment plan.

Allison arrived at the hospital Sunday after his release from Lehigh Valley Hospital in Allentown, Pa., where his condition was listed as satisfactory.

He spent 42 days in that hospital after suffering a concussion, broken ribs and a broken leg in a crash at Pocono International Raceway.

His wife Judy said Sunday that he "will continue to undergo an extremely rigorous routine of physical therapy and will not be allowed any visitors."

Petty To Be Profiled By 60 Minutes

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Randolph County Board of Commissioners is usually a neat group in this tidy, Republican-leaning county. You don't find many scuffed shoes or wrinkled shirts around here.

On Monday, the board, and some of the spectators, outdid themselves with spit and polish. CBS' '60 Minutes' was in town to film Richard Petty in his life and times.

Petty, 51, of Level Cross, races stock cars for a living when he is not serving as a Randolph County commissioner. The Randolph board may be the only public board in North Carolina that will arrange its schedule to suit the NASCAR racing circuit.

'60 Minutes' producer Steve Sheppard said the segment was a profile of Petty. The seven-time Winston Cup champion snagged 92 races from 1967 to 1971. Twenty-one years ago, he captured 27 of 48 starts, including a stretch of 10 straight victories. But he's won only 10 times since 1980. His last victory was the Firecracker 400 four years ago.

If Petty's racing career has faltered, his fame and fan clubs have not. An open house at the Level Cross compound last month drew thousands of people from across the country who left their jobs, piled their babies into vans and suffered the heat to get a few words and a handshake from the King.

Bennett Named ACC Commentator

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Former Duke quarterback Ben Bennett will be the color commentator for the 1988 Atlantic Coast Conference regional football telecasts, officials announced Saturday.

Play-by-play announcer Kevin Slaten and Bennett will be the primary announcers for Jefferson-Pilot's 14 game ACC television schedule. The schedule features all eight member schools and will be shown on commercial stations throughout the five-state ACC region.

Slaten has worked as an announcer for NFL telecasts with NBC, and has experience working Big Eight Conference football and basketball games over the past three seasons. In 1986 he was the studio host for Turner Broadcasting's College Football Saturday.

Bennett was ACC Player of the Year in 1983. During his Duke career he set 42 school, 14 conference and seven NCAA passing records. He worked as color commentator on selected ACC TV games in 1985.

Waters Hopes TV Will Focus On Football

CULLOWHEE (AP) — Western Carolina football coach Bob Waters knows he'll get some attention when ESPN televises a Catamounts game this fall, but he hopes the media focuses on football, rather than the disease that has made him a household name.

"The main thing we are doing is presenting Western Carolina and its football program to the nation," said Waters, whose team will face East Tennessee State on Sept. 15 at Whitmire Stadium.

"That's what I would like to talk about first, the university and the football program and their exposure," said Waters, who suffers from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease.

NBA May Have Soviet Players Soon

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association said Monday it has met with the Soviet Union on the possibility of allowing Soviet players to play in the league.

"There have been discussions with the State Committee for Sport and the State Committee for Television and Radio of the USSR," Gary Bettman, NBA general counsel, said. "These discussions have covered a wide range of subjects, including ... the possibility of and circumstances under which Soviet players may play in the NBA. These discussions are ongoing on all topics, and although significant progress has been made, nothing has been finalized yet."

NBA Commissioner David Stern returns from the Soviet Union this week amid reports that the league is close to an agreement that would allow two Soviet players to play in the NBA after the Olympic Games. Stern met with Soviet sports officials last week at the same time the Atlanta Hawks were playing a three-game series with the Soviet national team.

The Atlanta Constitution reported Sunday that the NBA and Soviet sports officials are close to a deal that would allow center Arvydas Sabonis to play for the Portland Trail Blazers and guard Sharunas Marchulis to play for Atlanta.

Earlier, the Cable News Network reported that a deal had been struck to allow Marchulis to play for the Hawks. CNN is owned by Ted Turner, who also owns the Hawks.

In addition to discussions on Soviet players, Bettman said the Soviets also talked with the NBA about sponsored telecasts of NBA games, the sale of NBA licensed products and continued cooperation between the NBA and the Soviets on clinics for coaches, players and referees.

Trail Blazers owner Paul Allen was upbeat about the prospects of Sabonis playing for Portland.

"I'm waiting for Harry to come back," Allen said Sunday night. "I'll sit down and talk with him when he gets back. I remain optimistic."

Allen was asked whether the Blazers would reach a contract agreement with Sabonis or with the Soviet sports authorities, who would then pay Sabonis a stipend.

"That's really an issue for the whole league," Allen said. "That's something that David Stern has been spending a lot of time thinking about."

Sabonis left for home last week after spending three months in Portland rehabilitating a ruptured Achilles' tendon.

Another issue is whether the Soviets' pay would count on an NBA team's salary cap. The Trail Blazers, after signing center Kevin Duckworth to an eight-year, $16 million contract, don't have much room under the cap.

Jack Schalow, a Portland assistant coach who spent several weeks working with Sabonis, said he thinks the 7-foot-2 center can be a good player.

"The whole thing is how quick he can pick up the English language so the coaching staff can have confidence in playing him."

"Communication with him is as big as anything. By the end of the season, he could contribute."

Coach Mike Schuler said it would take time for Sabonis to become adjusted to the NBA.

"He will also have tremendous pressure on him," Schuler said. "People cannot expect the world out of him."

Burgin Not Happy With USTA Decision

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Elise Burgin says the United States Tennis Association double-faulted when it removed her from the Olympic team and replaced her with Chris Evert.

Burgin criticized the USTA on Monday for the way it handled the switch. Last Friday, the organization announced that Burgin had withdrawn from the team because she had not fully recovered from arthroscopic knee surgery.

"I had no knowledge of the contents of that release before it was issued," Burgin said. "As far as I'm concerned, I've fully recovered from the surgery."

USTA spokesman Ed Fabricius said the release was approved by officials at Advantage International, a Washington, D.C., firm that represents Burgin and many other tennis players.

But an Advantage official denied that the firm approved the statement.

"The USTA sent us the release on Friday and asked for our approval," said Phil de Picciotto, head of the women's division at Advantage. "But Elise was playing Team Tennis and we couldn't reach her. So the USTA went ahead and released it anyway. We didn't approve it and neither did Elise."

Burgin, 26, has played a normal tournament schedule since the French Open in May and did not miss a set in the just-completed, 14-match schedule for the Los Angeles Strings of Team Tennis.

The Baltimore native had been selected last December to represent the United States at Seoul, along with Zina Garrison and Pam Shriver.

Martina Navratilova and Evert, the two top-ranked American players, had declined invitations, but Evert changed her mind last week.

"In the past two weeks, the USTA failed to consult me or my representatives at Advantage International regarding their intentions to ask Chris Evert to reconsider her Olympic decision," Burgin said.

"As someone who has represented the United States on two Federation Cups, one Wightman Cup and five consecutive National Junior teams, I feel I deserved better than having had to discover via the media that such a move had been made."

Burgin said the USTA could have avoided the problem by naming a "provisional" team in December, and letting the players know they could be replaced at the last minute.

"I would have then planned my schedule and lived my life for the past seven months accordingly," she said.

Burgin said her decision to have knee surgery was prompted by her Olympic invitation.

"In March, I did have the option of waiting to see if the knee could heal on its own," Burgin said. "But, on the advice of my physician, I opted for the surgery so there would be no question of my complete recovery by the Olympic Games."

Although she criticized the USTA, Burgin showed no animosity toward Evert.

"Chris and I have been close friends for a long time, and everything between the two of us is fine," Burgin said.

One has to wonder if N.C. State head coach Dick Sheridan will allow any more of his freshmen recruits to participate in high school all-star games after the Wolfpack lost three newcomers for the season last week at the East-West All-Star game in Greensboro.

Lost in the game to injuries were Therome George, Ricky Turner and Mike Gee.

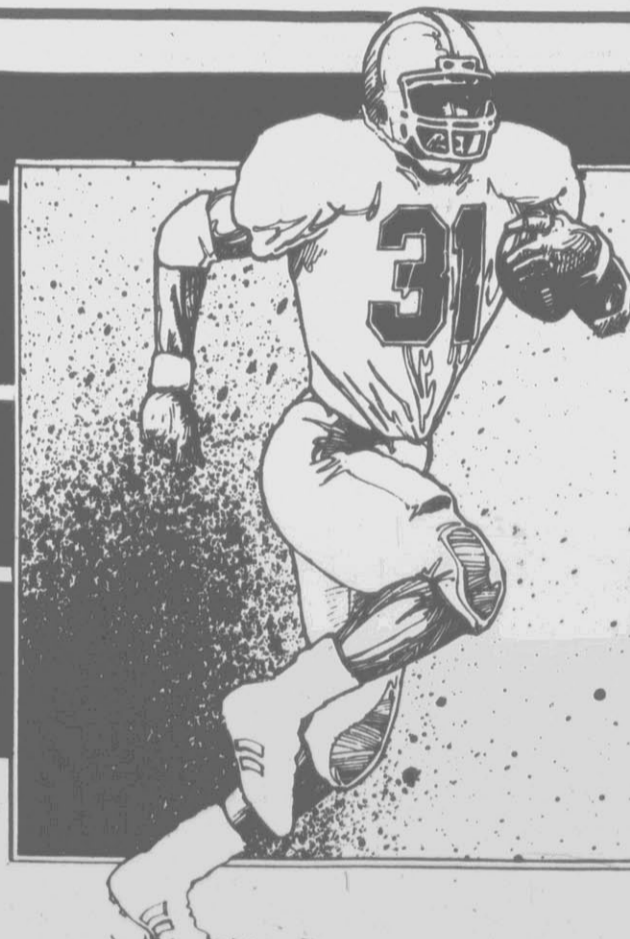

George, a 5-11, 184-pounder from Shelby, was the quarterback of the West team in the game. He suffered a broken ankle following a tackle by North Pitt's Ashley Sheppard, who is bound for Clemson this fall.

Gee, a 6-5, 260-pounder from Burlington, suffered a dislocated shoulder in the game. Gee was regarded as one of the top offensive linemen in the state last year during his senior season at Walter Williams High School.

The 6-5 180 Turner, also from Williams High in Burlington, suffered torn ligaments in his knee during the contest. Turner gained 3,869 yards during his high school career.

Sheridan said all of the players would undergo surgery within the next week.

"We have them (freshmen recruits) in all-star games every year," Sheridan said. "Maybe next year the law of averages will be on our side."

Canseco's Bat Leads A's To Win Over White Sox

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Jose Canseco hit 31 home runs for the Oakland Athletics last year, but his accomplishment was generally overshadowed by the extraordinary rookie year of teammate Mark McGwire, who had 49.

This year, Canseco is making some bigger news for himself with 31 homers so far — including five in the last four games. Homering in his fourth straight game Monday night, Canseco led the Athletics to a 10-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"Basically, you get in a groove. Instead of hitting line drives, you hit them out," Canseco said. "They come in bunches. Sometimes you go a week without hitting a home run."

Canseco's 31 homers lead the major leagues. His two-run homer in the first inning Monday night, incidentally, was the 100th of his career.

In other American League action, it was Toronto 3, Minnesota 1; Kansas City 5, Detroit 3, and California 8, Seattle 4.

Canseco's homer against the White Sox not only matched his total for all of last year, but moved him within two of his 33-homer rookie year in 1986.

Dave Henderson also had a big night for Oakland by driving in four runs with a homer and a single.

Henderson singled home two runs in a four-run second inning in which Canseco also singled in a run, giving him the major league lead with '86 RBI. Henderson hit his 16th homer in the fourth inning after Walt Weiss singled.

The victory was the third in the last four games and, coupled with Minnesota's 3-1 loss to Toronto, improved the A's lead in the AL West to 6½ games. The loss was the fifth straight for the White Sox.

Rookie Todd Burns, 4-0, left after six innings, giving up six hits, no walks and striking out three. Melido Perez, 10-6, took the loss.

"All the guys are hitting," Henderson said. "Everytime I went up, there were guys on base."

Blue Jays 3, Twins 1

George Bell hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning, leading Toronto over Minnesota and spoiling Frank Viola's bid to become the majors' first 17-game winner.

Viola, 16-4, was lifted with two outs in the eighth after giving up consecutive singles to Tony Fernandez and Manny Lee. Bell then greeted reliever Jeff Reardon with his 15th homer of the season.

The game featured a pitching duel between Viola and Toronto starter Dave Stieb, 11-7.

Viola allowed seven hits, struck out three and didn't walk a batter, while Stieb limited the Twins to three hits, struck out six and walked one in eight innings. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for Toronto to pick up his 19th save.

The Twins scored in the fifth on an RBI single by Steve Lombardozzi.

Royals 5, Tigers 3

Bo Jackson hit his third home run in three games and fueled another rally with a double, leading Kansas City over Detroit.

The loss trimmed the Tigers' lead in the AL East to one-half game over New York and one game over Boston. Both were idle.

Mark Gubicza, who lost 3-1 to the Tigers last week in Detroit, improved his record to 13-6 with relief help in the eighth inning.

Steve Farr recorded his 12th save after the Tigers scored three times in the eighth on a bases-loaded walk by Lou Whitaker and two-run single by Alan Trammell.

Doyle Alexander, 10-6, was the loser.

Jackson doubled and scored in the fifth to give Gubicza a 2-0 lead. In the seventh, he led off with his 16th home run. Jackson sat out Saturday night but homered against Baltimore on Friday and Sunday.

Angels 8, Mariners 4

Devon White, Bob Boone and Tony Armas hit home runs as California won a club-record 10th straight road game.

White's ninth home run, a two-run shot off Bill Swift, 6-9, gave the Angels a 3-1 lead in the fifth inning and they never looked back.

Boone hit his fourth home run of the season in the seventh, a two-run shot, and Armas hit a three-run shot as a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Terry Clark, 4-0, scattered 10 hits for the victory.

The victory was the sixth straight for the Angels, who have won 20 of their last 28 games. They previously established the club record for most consecutive wins on the road when they won nine straight last year.

"I'm not much for numbers or records, but this is a good accomplishment for a club that has played well on the road all year," Angels manager Cookie Rojas said.

The victory lifted the Angels' road record to 31-23 this year. They are 23-28 at home.

Hammaker Hurls Five-Hitter As Giants Top Astros, 4-1

HILLEL ITALIE

Associated Press Writer

The San Francisco Giants have lost four starters but rediscovered another.

With Dave Dravecky, Mike Krukow, Mike LaCoss and Terry Mulholland on the disabled list, the Giants turned to former All-Star Atlee Hammaker for help. Hammaker, who began the season in the bullpen, pitched a five-hitter Monday night for his first victory in six starts as the Giants defeated the Houston Astros 4-1.

The Giants have won six straight and moved past Houston into second place in the National League West, 3½ games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers, who lost 4-3 to Cincinnati.

"I feel good about going the distance. It's been a while," said Hammaker, 5-3, who pitched his first complete game since August of last season. "I was battling the whole game. I had to have good concentration."

Elsewhere, it was Pittsburgh 7, New York 2, and San Diego 6, Atlanta 3.

Will Clark led the Giants' offense with two doubles and his 23rd homer and drove in two runs to give him a league-leading 81 RBI. But the first baseman preferred to talk about Hammaker.

"Atlee pitched an excellent game. Even the mistake pitches he threw up there were outs. That's what happens when you're going well," Clark said.

The Astros, who took two out of three at Los Angeles last weekend, now trail the Dodgers by 4½ games. "It's a very important series. We're fighting for second place and the next couple of weeks we all (Dodgers, Astros, Giants) play each other, so it's a good opportunity to do something," Houston manager Hal Lanier said.

Hammaker's outing was perfectly timed. Not only has the Giants' staff been hit by injuries, the team played a doubleheader Sunday and used relief ace Scott Garrelts in both games.

"When you have only an eight-man pitching staff, you need complete games," Manager Roger Craig said.

Nolan Ryan, 8-8, had 11 strikeouts in seven innings, the 179th time in his career he's struck out 10 or more in a game, and raised his major league record career strikeout total to 4,703.

Reds 4, Dodgers 3

Chris Sabo's two-run single capped a four-run rally in the eighth inning and Danny Jackson won for the seventh time in eight starts to lead Cincinnati.

Jackson, 14-5, allowed seven hits in seven innings, struck out four and walked one in his first appearance ever against Los Angeles.

The Dodgers led 3-0 after seven innings behind the three-hit pitching of rookie Tim Lincecum, but Jeff Treadway singled with one out in the top of the eighth and pinch-hitter Dave Collins walked.

Jesse Orosco walked Kal Daniels to load the bases and was replaced by Alejandro Pena, 4-4, whose two-base throwing error on Barry Larkin's chopper allowed two runs to score.

Pirates 7, Mets 2

Doug Drabek pitched six shutout innings and Mike LaValliere hit a two-run homer as Pittsburgh availed a four-game sweep at Shea Stadium. The Pirates snapped New York's five-game winning streak and pulled to within four of the first-place Mets in the NL East. The teams play a four-game series in Pittsburgh starting Friday night.

LaValliere's homer broke a scoreless tie in the sixth. R.J. Reynolds had four hits and three stolen bases.

Drabek, 10-5, permitted six hits and won his fifth consecutive start. Dwight Gooden, 13-6, went 6 1-3 innings and gave up four runs on 11 hits, matching the most he has allowed in his career.

Padres 6, Braves 3

Pinch-hitter John Kruk's two-run double highlighted a five-run sixth inning as San Diego handed Atlanta its seventh straight loss.

Ed Whitson, 10-6, scattered seven hits in six innings and won for the seventh time in his last eight decisions. Dave Leiper allowed two hits and struck out five in three innings for his first save.

Tom Glavine, 3-12, lost his sixth straight decision and is winless since June 5 when he defeated the Padres.

The Padres trailed 2-1 through five innings but batted around in the bottom of the sixth.

Chicago's Covert Is Latest Victim Of Injury At Camps

By The Associated Press

Offensive tackle Jim Covert of the Chicago Bears may be lost to the club for at least six weeks due to back surgery as injuries began to affect NFL clubs with a month still left before the start of the season.

Covert missed part of last season with a bad shoulder and other injuries, and he aggravated an old back injury in his first workout last week, the Bears said.

The arthroscopic surgery will be performed Wednesday.

"He's probably one of the top two or three tackles in the league ... and then to come back and have a thing like that happen," Coach Mike Ditka said. "But I have no worries about Jim Covert. He'll do what he has to do. He'll be back."

HOGEBOOM HURT, TOO

"I don't foresee a problem," Coach Ron Meyer said. "But whenever it's a quarterback's throwing arm, there is concern."

Hogeboom, who missed 21 games the past two seasons because of injuries, actually might have injured the elbow in practice Saturday, the club said.

Meyer said Hogeboom still might be able to play in Saturday's preseason opener at Tampa Bay.

TURNER TRADED

The Seattle Seahawks send veteran wide receiver Darryl Turner to the Cleveland Browns for an undisclosed draft choice. Turner, 26, was a three-year starter for the Seahawks before losing his starting job to Ray Butler.

Turner finished 1987 with 14 receptions in 12 games, his lowest production since joining the Seahawks out of Michigan State in 1984.

The 6-foot-3, 194-pounder has one of the highest touchdown-per-reception averages in the NFL, with 36 touchdowns in 101 career catches.

"It appears that we have some depth at the wide receiver position," Seahawks Coach Chuck Knox said, "and that made this trade possible."

ENDING HOLDOUTS

At Fullerton, Calif., veteran nose tackle Greg Meisner ended his holdout, reporting to the Los Angeles Rams training camp after signing a multi-year contract. The contract reportedly was for three years.

"I'm happy to be back," said Meisner, a starter for the Rams a year ago. "It's behind me. It's time to play ball."

The Rams are left with four holdouts: defensive linemen Doug Reed and Shawn Miller, tight end Greg Baty and guard Tom Newberry.

Offensive tackle Eric Moore, the New York Giants' first-round draft pick out of Indiana, ended his holdout, agreeing to a contract that included an $800,000 signing bonus. The contract is for four years and is worth $1.915 million.

SIGNING CONTRACTS

At the Pittsburgh Steelers camp in Latrobe, Pa., offensive guard Dermontti Dawson signed a contract. Dawson was the Steelers' second-round pick. Also, offensive guard John Rienstra, the Steelers' first-round pick in 1986, returned to practice.

The Green Bay Packers, with their roster still at around 100 players, signed free agent wide receiver George LaFrance of the Arena Football champions from Detroit.

"I had a phone call from one of the coaches there and they said he might be worth looking at, we might want to examine him and see if he fits into our scheme," Coach Lindy Infante said.

In Fredonia, N.Y., the Buffalo Bills waived five players and signed one of quarterback Jim Kelly's receivers from his old U.S. Football League team, 5-foot-9 Vincent Courville. Courville was in camp with the Los Angeles Raiders in 1984 before joining the USFL's Houston Gamblers.

TRIMMING ROSTERS

At Oxnard, Calif., the Los Angeles Raiders cut eight players, including 11-year veteran offensive guard Mickey Marvin. Marvin, 32, was one of only seven Raiders remaining from the team which moved south from Oakland after the 1981 season. He played in 120 regular-season games and 13 postseason games, including starting in two Super Bowl games.

At Thousand Oaks, Calif., the Dallas Cowboys released 13 players, all rookie free agents, to cut their roster to 108, including 45 rookies.

At Flagstaff, Ariz., the Phoenix Cardinals lowered their roster to 81 by releasing free-agent wide receiver Alfred Dorsey. The 5-foot-7, 169-pound Dorsey played at Nicholls State.

Shula's Not Happy With Rush Defense

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins' defense against the run is in midseason form. That's bad news for Coach Don Shula.

In an otherwise-impressive 27-21 victory over the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday in London, Miami allowed 207 yards rushing. The Dolphins ranked 25th among 28 NFL teams last season in defending against the run.

San Francisco gained much of its yardage by running outside.

"Our linebackers had some problems getting up the field," Shula said Monday. "Their backs were chopping us down, and that's why we had trouble against their outside running game."

"That's something we're going to have to work really hard on, because once they get the corner turned, it's tough."

The 49ers had 14 plays that gained more than 10 yards and four that gained more than 30.

"They had some big plays against our defense, but our defense made some big plays," Shula said, including two sacks and a fumble returned for a touchdown. "Our concern is that they made some rushing yardage."

Shula gave a passing grade to all three Miami quarterbacks who saw action. Dan Marino helped the Dolphins to a fast start, and David Archer led them to the winning touchdown with 88 seconds left.

Veteran Ron Jaworski produced only three points in two quarters of action, but Shula also was happy with his performance.

"He made some good throws. He had a couple of drops that hurt him," Shula said. "And there were times when our protection broke down and they had defensive people right in his face and it was a wonder that he got the ball off at all."

Archer completed six of eight passes for 74 yards. When asked whether his stock had risen, Shula said there's more evaluating ahead.

"As we go through the preseason each week, I'll make a determination as to how to play the quarterbacks and try to give everybody an opportunity to show what they can do," Shula said.

"I would've liked to have gotten Kerwin Bell in the ballgame, but it's tough to plan on playing four quarterbacks."

Bell, a rookie from Florida, may see action in Saturday's preseason game at Chicago.

Bell, Archer and Jaworski are battling for the two backup jobs behind Marino. Don Strock, last year's No. 2 quarterback, is a contract holdout.

Some Pros Play Just For The Fun

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For these guys, it's a long, long way from here to the NFL. And it's all by bus.

Most of them work 9-to-5 jobs, then head for a junior high school practice field that has soccer goals as well as goal posts, not to mention crab grass and splintered benches.

On the weekend they take road trips to exotic places such as Gary, Ind., and Rockford, Ill. Paychecks? No way. Not for the St. Louis Gamblers, a rag-tag group of semi-pros brought together through one man's effort to fill the void created when the NFL Cardinals moved to Phoenix in January.

Granted, the level of play is below what St. Louis fans are used to — and they were used to some pretty bad stuff with the Cardinals. But at least it's football, says Ed Watkins, a St. Charles businessman who waged a one-man campaign for three years to try to persuade Cardinals owner William V. Bidwill to "Keep The Birds In Their Nest."

When the Cardinals left after 28 seasons in St. Louis, Watkins, who was a backup quarterback in high school, couldn't bear the thought of life without football — even in watered-down form.

"I got so frustrated with Bidwill I thought doggone it, why not start my own team," Watkins said. "This brings out the little kid in me."

He's able to run the team on a shoestrings-and-shoulder-pads budget, compared to the big time. The total investment for Watkins and his group of investors was less than $100,000, including cost of the National Professional Football League franchise, equipment, jerseys and travel expenses.

Watkins has attracted a small but devoted audience. The team has sold 500 season tickets at $30-50 a pop for six games, a pittance compared to the $40 per game the Cardinals will get for their cheapest single-game ticket this season at Sun Devil Stadium.

And when about 1,000 fans showed up for the home opener, Watkins was so grateful that he roamed the stands, shaking hands.

For their trouble, the players get two meals per trip — tips not included — and the chance to crash bodies with fellow enthusiasts while dreaming of the big time.

Most of the Gamblers are in their mid-20s and had better-than-average college careers. A few of them, like Bill "Peidi" Anderson, who concluded his playing career at Missouri a decade ago, are in their 30s.

"There are still a few dinosaurs out there," said Anderson, 32, who is a pipe-fitter by day and nose guard by night.

None of the names are recognizable to the casual fan. A few of them have had pro tryouts. One, defensive back Teddy Hollingsworth, a computer operator at McDonnell Douglas, even played two games with the Tampa Bay Bandits of the old United States Football League in 1984.

Hollingsworth, 28, is perhaps the team's best player, with four interceptions in the first three games. He was impressed that the team held a tryout camp, judging prospects in the 40-yard dash, agility drills and other football basics.

But he, maybe more than the others, notices the difference between the stadium game and the sandlot game.

— Competition: "I would say for me it's easy pickings."

— Organization: "Some of our players didn't have their equipment until a week before the season started."

— Frills: "You don't have the fringe benefits. If you have a boo-boo, you can't jump in the whirlpool."

And the 12-game season, which runs from July to September, isn't exactly football prime time either. "That stuff doesn't really matter," Hollingsworth said. "Everyone is out here for the love of the game."

Renell Houston, a 280-pound offensive tackle who went to Memphis State, thought he was onto something even better this spring when he made the final cut for the St. Louis Lightning of the World Indoor Football League. But the team, and the league, folded before a game could be played.

Houston would have been paid $500 a game in that league while hanging on to his goal of a tryout with an NFL team.

"When it folded it was a big drop for me," Houston said. "I knew this was 'free' ball, but I wanted to play regardless. I really want an NFL shot. That's why I'm out here now."

While he dreams, Houston will have one foot planted firmly in reality. He makes ends meet by removing asbestos from demolished buildings.

That job, believe it or not, is one of the team's perks. Several Gamblers players, including quarterback Chris Robin, formerly of Peru State, toil at this most unglamorous job, secured courtesy of one of the investors.

Others on the team are warehouse workers, gas company employees, food brokers, car salesmen. One player, next to the occupation listing on the team's player profile form, wrote "seeking."

They may be something of a motley crew, but at their level they can compete, which sets them apart from the Cardinals, who never once were able to treat their fans to a home playoff game.

The Gamblers got off to a 3-1 start in their 12-game schedule. After losing the opener 9-8, they won 6-0, 7-2 and 48-0.

"We've got a number of standouts on defense, a lot of talent," Watkins said. "Outside of the NFL, they could handle some people."

ACC Kickoff ...

"And the return of Worthen and Peebles gives us experience at the receiver positions."

For new North Carolina coach Mack Brown, one of the more pressing questions is who will line up behind the center on an offensive line that returns all its starters.

Deems May was the starter coming out of spring practice, but has yet to play a college game. Jonathan Hall, a starter two years ago, is on the mend from reconstructive surgery in his shoulder.

"Offensively, we've got concerns at quarterback," Brown said. "Jonathan Hall is a question mark with his shoulder. We will not know until he is hit or goes through two a days."

"I think Deems is a 100 percent from his (high school shoulder) injury. We hit him every day in the spring."

Wake Forest is picked next and the Deacons are looking to build a little depth in their efforts to match last season's 7-4 mark.

"Our depth is a problem," Deacon coach Bill Dooley said. "If we get an injury at just about any position, we'll have a big problem."

Wake Forest does have quarterback Mike Elkins returning, though, along with running backs like off-injured Mark Young and backup Tony Rogers.

"He (Young) is one of the top young running backs in the country if he gets some help back there," Dooley said.

Georgia Tech coach Bobby Ross would just as soon forget his first year with the Yellow Jackets, which ended up in a 2-9 disappointment.

"Last season was very frustrating," he said. "Team wise, we're bigger and stronger up front (this year). That's the key for 1988. We do not (however) have the speed I think we need."

Maryland coach Joe Krivacs is hoping that an improved rushing game would bring some consistency to the offense.

"Our running backs should be better than a year ago since everybody's back," Krivacs said. "It should make our offense a little better."

Duke coach Steve Spurrier was none too happy about his team being picked last, but he said it shows that the Blue Devils have to work hard to gain some respect.

"There are a lot of areas we could get better," Spurrier said. "We're Duke. It was a tough year last year. We lost a couple of close games. We haven't earned any respect. We were 5-6. I can understand how we're perceived around the conference."

Spurrier said his main concerns lie on the defensive side of the ball and he hoped a shift to a 4-3 alignment would solve some problems.

"We were lousy on pass defense," he said. "I don't think our scheme of defense was good. We did not defend (the pass) well. We did not rush the passer well."

Tar Heel Little League Tops Sylva

The Greenville Tar Heel Little League struck for four runs in the bottom of the first inning Monday to take a 4-0 lead they never gave up in beating Sylva 11-2 in the opening round of the North Carolina State Little League baseball tournament.

Greenville pounded out 12 hits in the victory, including a pinch-hit homerun by Nicky Phillips in the fourth inning.

Greenville opened up the first inning by getting a leadoff walk from Greg Pearsall. Following a Russell Williamson single and a Geoff Stallings walk to load the bases, J.P. Devoe singled to score Williamson and Stallings. Jon Gavigan knocked in the final two runs of the inning with a two-run single.

The Tar Heel team made no errors defensively, while Wilbur Levett pitched a five-hitter, striking out eight batters and only walking one. Levett also led the team with three hits, while Greg Pearsall, Russell Williamson and J. P. Devoe each collected two hits.

Greenville, the District IV representative, will return to action today to face District VII champion Hudson at 2 p.m.

McGill Is Hopeful Of A Roster Spot

GREENSBORO (AP) — Former Wake Forest running back Darryl McGill, trying to break into a well-stocked Washington Redskins backfield, says he thinks he'll get a good look from the team, which has a history of uncovering good players with low draft picks or as free agents.

"It's hard to explain," McGill said after a recent practice at the Redskins' training camp at Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa. "It's not a long shot — but then again it is."

"I feel confident," he said. "The threat of not making it doesn't enter my mind, at least not every day. I can't worry about every mistake I make."

And if it doesn't work out? "I'd definitely try to make it somewhere else."

Even though the Redskins released George Rogers before camp, Washington still has ample running power in Super Bowl hero Timmy Smith and Kelvin Bryant. Also on hand are two veterans, Keith Griffin and special teams standout Reggie Branch; Tim Jessie, who played in the replacement games; rookies Mike Oliphant and Jamie Morris, both drafted higher than McGill; and free agent Kelvin White.

Givins And Hill Are Untouchable

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — It wasn't enough for the Houston Oilers' wide receiver duo of Ernest Givins and Drew Hill to be virtually untouchable last season.

Givins and Hill were sinister enough, piling up more receiving yardage as a pair than any other NFL tandem over the past two seasons.

Now they plan to call themselves "The Untouchables."

"I saw the movie and Al Capone was a bad man so we feel our coach (Jerry Glanville) will be Al Capone and we'll be the bad guys," Givins said.

Actually, The Untouchables were the good guys, but the Oiler receivers maintain they have taken the name to pattern themselves after Al Capone's gang of bad guys.

"We won't have any guns. We'll do our damage on the football field."

Givins and Hill did quite well without a nickname last season when they caught passes for a combined 1,922 yards.

Givins caught 53 passes for 933 yards and narrowly missed becoming the fourth receiver in NFL history to have 1,000 yards in each of his first two years.

The idea of "The Untouchables" came from teammate wide receiver Willie Drewrey, who thought it would help the group get recognition.

"By being 'The Untouchables,' I feel like it will give us more recognition, not for a showboat type deal," Givins said. "It's just to build confidence in the receiving corps."

When the Oilers decide on the five or six receivers who make the team, the group plans to don their gangster suits and pose for a poster.

For games, they'll be recognized by "The Untouchables" printed across the backs of their shoes.

The nickname could bring more notoriety than the receivers want but Givins doesn't care.

"I don't care what kind of attitude it brings from other teams," Givins said. "Cleveland has the 'Dogs' out there, Denver has the 'Three Amigos.'"

"In Houston we have 'The Untouchables.' It's all in fun, mainly for the kids and the entertainment part of the game."

Doctors Saying Walker Had Virus

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors believe Chicago White Sox first baseman Greg Walker, who suffered two seizures over the weekend, has a viral infection in the brain.

The White Sox team placed Walker, who is undergoing tests at Christ Hospital in suburban Oak Lawn, on the 15-day disabled list retroactive to Saturday.

"Doctors attending Walker now feel his seizures likely were provoked by a virus that caused a focal infection in the brain," the White Sox said in a statement. "Walker has not suffered a seizure since his second one early Sunday morning and doctors indicate no further seizure activity can be detected."

Walker's first seizure occurred Saturday morning during batting practice at Comiskey Park. The second one occurred Sunday at the hospital.

The club said Walker remains on medication to control the seizures, but no longer is in a room with a monitor. He will remain hospitalized

The bidding:

 There are two ways to make today's contract. One is to take a lucky guess in the club suit when it comes to finessing for the jack. The other is to remove all elements of chance. In that case, you will succeed regardless of who holds the jack of clubs!

 South's opening bid of four spades is acceptable in third- or fourth-seat only. In first- or second-position, you should open with one spade—avoid making a preemptive bid on a hand that contains two aces.
 Since he did not like the idea of leading from any of his plain-suit holdings, West selected his singleton trump for the opening salvo—not that it mattered, but a poor choice in our opinion. There were three obvious losers, two hearts and a club. The road to success lay in not losing a second trick in the club suit. Declarer found a way of getting home regardless of which defender sheltered the knave.

He won the first trick with dummy's king, underplaying the queen from hand. Next came a diamond ruffed high, followed by the eight of trumps overtaken with dummy's nine and a second diamond again ruffed high. Declarer's carefully preserved two of trumps now served as an entry for another diamond ruff, and the groundwork for the upcoming strip and endplay had been accomplished.
 South simply cashed the ace of hearts and exited with a heart, and sat back to enjoy the fruits of his labor. The defenders could take a second heart trick with impunity, but that's where the free ride ended. Whichever defender was then on lead would have the choice of losing plays. A club return would obviate declarer's need to guess the location of the jack. A red-suit return would permit declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a club from the other. Either way, the ace of clubs was going to be the third and last trick for the defense.

Willie Nelson Will Do Benefit For Police

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Police from four states have canceled plans to protest at a performance by Willie Nelson after the country singer decided to give a concert that will partially benefit law enforcement officers. "If everything goes as planned, we probably won't have any demonstration," said Al Leavitt, president of the state Fraternal Order of Police, of Nelson's concert scheduled for Aug. 27.

Police nationwide criticized his appearance last October at a benefit for Leonard Peltier, an American Indian activist serving two life sentences for the 1975 slayings of two FBI agents. Peltier's supporters are raising money to pay for an appeal.

The West Virginia FOP made plans to protest at Nelson's Aug. 27 concert in Charleston after Rhode Island police said they would picket the singer's concerts last weekend in Warwick, R.I.

Hogan To Meet Stricken Youth

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — Pro wrestler Hulk Hogan will roll out the welcome mat when he plays host to a teen-ager afflicted with muscular dystrophy.

Scott Lade, 15, who weighs only 31 pounds, will be flown with his family to Baltimore on Thursday, attend the wrestling matches Friday night and then meet Hogan and other wrestlers in the locker room. "I plan to ask (Hulk) a lot of questions," Scott said.

The trip was arranged and paid for by Make a Wish, a Denver-based philanthropic organization.

The teen-ager from southwest Colorado has suffered from the disease since early childhood. His 17-year-old sister, Heather, also has the disease.

"All their lives I've tried to treat them as normal kids," said their mother, Jean. "Their bodies are shot, but their minds aren't. We think of every day as a quality day, since they won't have quantity."

About 800 officers from West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Virginia demonstrated at a Nelson concert Friday in Warwick, R.I., but canceled plans for a demonstration Saturday after Nelson agreed to the new benefit concert.

Proceeds will go to the American Indian Relief Fund and the National Police Memorial Fund.

Controversial Film To Be In Festival

ROME (AP) — Martin Scorsese's film "The Last Temptation of Christ" will appear in the Venice Film Festival, despite being branded by some church leaders as blasphemous and condemned by Italy's leading political party.

"Why not show it?" asked Genny Fiorin, head of the Cinema Office, in a telephone interview Monday from Venice.

The Christian Democrats denounced the movie in which Jesus must endure the "last temptation" — making love to Mary Magdalene.

The Italian Roman Catholic organization Reagine (React) also sent the festival's director a telegram criticizing the film as blasphemous. The festival begins Aug. 28.

Fundamentalist church groups also have protested the movie in the United States. The movie, which stars Willem Dafoe as Jesus and Barbara Hershey as Mary, is to be released next month.

Actor Offers Check

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Cleavon Little put his money where his mouth is at a star-studded benefit to support black theater.

Little, star of Mel Brook's riotous film "Blazing Saddles," and the Broadway play "I'm not Rappaport," drew the winning raffle tickets Monday night at a midtown Manhattan restaurant, then pulled out a check for $200.

"It's just something important that I think needs to be done, hopefully to encourage other people," said Little.

He added that too often people enjoy themselves at benefits without thinking about how they can help others.

"I was overwhelmed. People just don't pull out checks," said South African trumpeter Hugh Masekela, co-author of "Sarafina!," a Broadway play about children in his homeland.

"If more people did that, black theater would fly," he added.

The benefit was staged to help the Roger Furman Theater, which bills itself as the city's oldest black not-for-profit theater.

Appointed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Composer and pianist Marvin Hamlisch, a frequent performer at the White House, has been named by President Reagan to be a member of the National Council on the Arts.

Hamlisch has written numerous scores for movies and Broadway musicals, including "They're Playing our Song" and "Chorus Line," which won a Pulitzer Prize and a Tony Award. He often is host of a broadcast concert series presented at the White House and is a favorite of Nancy Reagan's.

Ad Agencies Say Strike Won't Hurt TV Ratings

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Madison Avenue's forecasters say the writers' strike is unlikely to have much effect on television network standings in the fall.

Executives of two major New York advertising agencies predict that NBC will keep a tight grip on first place in the Nielsen ratings.

Betsy Frank of Saatchi & Saatchi DFS Compton, New York's largest agency, said ABC and CBS would be neck-and-neck for second place.

"It's unlikely the standings will change from our original forecasts, even given the fact there will be cut-and-paste schedules in the fall," she said by telephone from New York. "The pattern of network viewing is pretty hard to shake."

Joel M. Segal, executive vice president and director of national broadcast for McCann-Erickson, also sees tough competition for second place. "NBC will remain the No. 1 network," he said. "If anything, ABC may have a leg up because of the promotion time available in 'War and Remembrance' to promote its new schedule. I think CBS will postpone its new shows until after 'War and Remembrance' in November."

ABC plans to telecast the first 18 hours of Herman Wouk's "War and Remembrance" miniseries in seven parts over 11 days in mid-November. It advanced the showing because of a program shortage caused by the writers strike.

Both agencies published reports on the fall season as originally planned by the networks. Although Segal was more optimistic about the end of the strike, both executives looked for a return to work that would enable the networks to get their new shows on by late November or early December.

"I can't make any predictions about individual shows until the strike's over," Segal said in a telephone interview. "All bets are off until then."

Segal had forecast in the McCann-Erickson report that despite vigorous competition from cable, videocassettes, Fox Broadcasting and Ted Turner's TNT the networks would lose only a small share of their audience. He said the audience would drop to about 71 percent this year from 72 percent in 1987.

"It's impossible to make any forecast at this time," he said, "but I would say 'War and Remembrance' and the Olympics and World Series on NBC will tend to increase viewing. But repeats of old shows and series that were never meant to be on the air, like NBC's 'The Hardy Boys,' would tend to reduce viewing."

Frank said that the clients of her agency had already made their network advertising purchases based on the original fall schedules. She said the delay in starting the fall schedule could alter the performances of individual programs forecast in her report.

The Saatchi & Saatchi DFS Compton report sees ABC's "Roseanne" and NBC's "Empty Nest" and "Dear John" as the three hottest new shows of the fall. It also forecast a "very good" chance for CBS' "Murphy Brown" and "Almost Grown" and NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" and "Tattinger's."

It offered little hope for such long shots as "ABC's 'Knight Watch' and CBS' 'Dirty Dancing' and 'Close to Home.'" McCann-Erickson predicted "smash hits" for ABC's "Roseanne" and NBC's "Empty Nest" and "Dear John." It gave "passing grades" to CBS' "Murphy Brown," and NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries," "Baby Boom" and "Tattinger's."

"Roseanne," from the same people who make "The Cosby Show," stars comedienne Roseanne Barr as a blue collar woman juggling her husband, kids, home and a job.
