Wedtech Jury Convicts Biaggi

By JOHN M. DOYLE

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal jury today convicted Rep. Mario Biaggi and his eldest son of racketeering in the Wedtech corruption scandal.

In its fifth day of deliberations, the jury also convicted former Bronx Borough President Stanley Simon, Wedtech Corp. founder John Mariotta, former Small Business Administration official Peter Neglia and Biaggi's former law partner, Bernard Ehrlich, all on racketeering charges.

Acquitted of racketeering was Ronald Betso, a former city policeman and friend of Neglia's.

The jury forewoman was working her way through the more than 20-page verdict sheet and the verdict on other charges was not immediately known.

The defendants were accused of turning Wedtech into a racketeering enterprise that dispensed millions of dollars in bribes to win no-bid government contracts set aside for minority-owned businesses.

The trial, which began March 11, generated nearly 20,000 pages of transcript over four months of testimony and a week of closing arguments.

More than 130 witnesses were called, including four former Wedtech executives who testified for the government in exchange for leniency. The four admitted bribing public officials, defrauding the government and stealing from the company — in concert with Mariotta.

At the heart of the Wedtech case was how Welbilt Electronic Die Corp., a tiny Bronx machine shop started by Mariotta, grew into Wedtech Corp., a multimillion-dollar defense contractor with friends in high places.

Mariotta, a semi-literate tool and die maker of Hispanic descent, was once hailed as a "hero for the '80s" by President Reagan for hiring ex-convicts and former drug addicts in one of America's most depressed areas.

Prosecutors charged that Mariotta and other Wedtech officials paid bribes in cash, political contributions, stock or stock options to Biaggi, Simon and Neglia for their assistance with city and federal agencies.

Ehrlich, the younger Biaggi and Betso were accused of helping the others either receive or cover up the payoffs.

The defense argued that the corrupt Wedtech executives had pull with White House insiders like Attorney General Edwin Meese III and thus did not need to bribe Biaggi.

However, U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley denied a defense request to call Meese as a witness.

Prosecutors claimed the "Meese defense" was a smokescreen to divert attention from the defendants.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Edward J. Little stunned the courtroom during closing arguments when he called Meese "a sleaze" but insisted that any wrongdoing by the attorney general — Little's boss — had nothing to do with the Biaggi case.

A special prosecutor in Washington has determined there was insufficient evidence to charge Meese with any wrongdoing, but he questioned the attorney general's ethics on several issues.

Greenville Tobacco Sales Top 1987 Prices But Fall Below Belt Average

First-day tobacco sales on the Greenville market averaged $139.52 per hundred pounds, up from $138.59 on opening day last year, market officials said today.

Sales Supervisor Kenneth Allen said the average Wednesday was slightly below expectations, but most growers seemed pleased with the way the Eastern Belt auctions began.

The Greenville market, in its 99th season, sold 728,642 pounds of leaf on Wednesday.

Greenville's figure was slightly below the average posted throughout the Eastern Belt, which finished the day's sales with a preliminary average of $142 a pound — up four cents from last year.

Sales Table On A-2

Markets also opened Wednesday on the Old and Middle belts, where prices averaged $1.43 a pound, up 2 cents from last year's opening day.

Meanwhile, sales continued for the second day on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt. Opening-day prices Tuesday averaged $142.49 per hundred, up $3.88 from a year ago. Only three-tenths of 1 percent went under loan compared with four-tenths of 1 percent on opening day 1987.

As is customary on opening day, a flock of current and would-be officeholders shopped for votes at the warehouses, promising if elected to work to expand overseas markets for North Carolina leaf.

"Where the future lies for tobacco is exporting it," said Jim Gardner, Republican nominee for lieutenant governor. "I see my role with the government as selling North Carolina products all around the world."

Gardner's opponent, state Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, also worked the crowds at Growers Warehouse in Goldsboro. Gardner visited in Greenville, also.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who visited sales in Greenville and several other markets, jabbed at C. Everett Koop, the U.S. surgeon general spearheading the government's anti-smoking campaign, saying his name ought to be changed to "kook."

"He doesn't understand how important tobacco is to North Carolina," said Jordan, the Democratic nominee for governor.

Social Security Estimates Ready

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration today unveiled an easy-to-read form that will give workers of any age individual financial notices of how much they can expect to receive when they retire.

The new "Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statements," promised by President Reagan in his last State of the Union address, also disclose how much a worker and family would get each month in disability or survivors' benefits.

The new financial statements will be available free on written request to anyone who has paid Social Security taxes, is under 65 years old and is not yet drawing Social Security benefits.

Social Security Commissioner Dorcas R. Hardy, who made the revamped benefit estimates statement a top priority, displayed the first copies of the new form at a news conference.

In a statement, she said, "I believe it is absolutely essential that the Social Security Administration provide American workers with the Social Security information they need to help them plan for their own, as well as their family's, future financial security."

Some private companies charge people for making the kind of estimates that Social Security now will be doing for free.

Hardy said it "will serve as a viable financial planning tool and I urge everyone to take advantage of this new, improved service."

The public can call a toll-free number — 1-800-937-2000 — to request copies of the disclosure form, SSA-7004.

Frat Fire

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Fire today destroyed what was to be the first black fraternity house at the University of Mississippi.

The 20-member Phi Beta Sigma fraternity had planned to move in to the two-story vacant house later this month after winning approval to become the first black tenants among the approximately 16 antebellum-style houses on Fraternity Row.

"There is no reason to expect any foul play at all. People are going to make that assumption, but it's simply an old house and we don't know what happened," said university spokesman Ed Meek.

Boyles Says Port Bonds Are Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — A revenue bond package for North Carolina's ports developed in the early 1980s but never implemented should be reconsidered in light of the system's net loss last year, State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said today.

Boyles said at a meeting of the Council of State that the port system needed upgrading to become more competitive at a time when shipping companies are cutting back on ports of call.

At least two shipping lines dropped Wilmington within the past year. "If we sit idly by, we're going to deteriorate further," Boyles said. "We need to be more aggressive ... make a major investment."

The Wilmington port lost $515,739 in fiscal 1987-88, which ended June 30. The Morehead City port earned a $365,704 profit and the Southport boat harbor turned a $33,985 profit, giving the system a net loss of $116,083.

The North Carolina Ports Authority has requested $70 million worth of improvements in a five-year "master plan."

NASA Scrubs Discovery Test

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA computers aborted the test-firing of space shuttle Discovery's engines a fraction of a second before ignition today after reporting a valve problem, marking another disappointment for the space program.

Engineers hoped to ready the shuttle for another attempt on Sunday, officials said.

It was the fifth such postponement in two weeks. The test is considered crucial for qualifying Discovery for the first shuttle flight since the Challenger explosion 2½ years ago.

"That's why we have flight readiness firings, to work the bugs out of equipment before we launch," said NASA administrator James Fletcher.

Discovery's three main engines, generating total thrust of 1.1 million pounds, were to fire for 20 seconds in a test of the entire shuttle system. Steel bolts were to hold the spaceship firmly on the pad during the firing.

The engines were to have begun firing six seconds before the zero mark. The shutdown came just after the "go" for starting the engines was issued but before ignition actually began, launch control center commentator Hugh Harris said.

Harris said the shuttle's master computer "did not see that the engine bleed valve had fully closed" and automatically sent a shutdown signal.

Engineers were trying to determine if there was a faulty valve or if the sensor had given an incorrect reading, he said. The bleed valve vents excess gases.

If the problem is with the valve, the test would be delayed more than two days, said Boyce Mix, manager of shuttle main engine systems. If it is with a faulty sensor, he said, the turnaround could be 48 hours.

Immediately after the shutdown, the launch team remotely began to make the vehicle safe as it sat on the pad, its 154-foot-tall tank loaded with 385,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and 143,000 gallons of liquid oxygen, Harris said.

He said the propellants would be drained from the tank, and the igniters in each engine would have to be replaced before another attempt.

Engine No. 2, where the problem occurred, is one of two brand new engines on Discovery. Engine No. 1 has been flown on three shuttle missions.

Program managers have been grooming Discovery for the first shuttle flight since the loss of Challenger and its crew of seven in an explosion 73 seconds after liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986.

The mission is scheduled for late September, but even before today many officials believed the launch would slip into October because of earlier delays in the test and an unresolved gas leak in a steering engine system that is separate from the main engines.

Launch director Bob Sieck said Wednesday that a one-day delay in the firing test would move back the launch one day.

Among the disappointed observers today were two of the five astronauts slated to fly Discovery on the first post-Challenger mission, Navy Capt. Rick Hauck and Marine Lt. Col. Dave Hilmers.

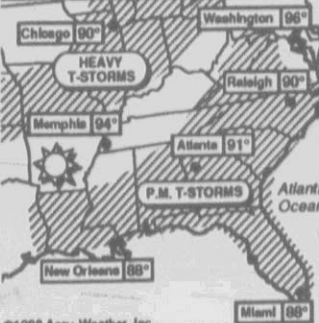

Soon after the test firing, shuttle managers expect to give the go-ahead to a plan for engineers to cut a hole through the rear wall of Discovery's cargo bay in an effort to reach and repair a nitrogen tetroxide leak.

ECU Enrollment To Top 15,000

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University expects fall enrollment to exceed 15,000 students for the first time when classes begin on Aug. 22.

Estimates based on advance indications are that the fall semester enrollment will be several hundred above that of fall 1987, when 14,878 students were on campus. It would be the first time in ECU history that enrollment for a semester has exceeded 15,000 and would continue a trend of steady, measured growth in enrollment over the past 12 years.

Residence halls will be opened Aug. 17 for an influx of approximately 5,600 students who will live on campus.

The traditional fall faculty convocation is scheduled at 9 a.m. Aug. 18 in the Mendenhall Student Center with a convocation address by Dr. Richard R. Eakin, the university chancellor, and presentation of the annual alumni teaching excellence awards.

Faculty meetings and organizational sessions are scheduled during the remainder of the week prior to start of classes.

ECU closed applications for freshmen and transfer students last spring after receiving 8,100 freshman and 1,650 transfer applications.

The admissions office also closed applications from out-of-state students several months ago. Officials said a freshman class of about 3,000 students is expected and that about 700 transfers were accepted. Last year's freshman class numbered 2,756.

In-state tuition is unchanged for the 1988-89 academic year but out-of-state tuition has been increased 8.6 percent, according to the university's business office.

A new $10.6 million general classroom building which was opened for the first time last spring is expected to provide some relief for classroom space. A number of classes in the ECU College of Arts and Sciences and some professional schools will have a larger than usual number of students but will not be overcrowded, academic officials said.

Graduate Students' Research Recognized

ECU News Bureau

Research findings on key mechanisms in the gastrointestinal system by two doctoral students at the East Carolina University School of Medicine were cited among outstanding graduate student projects at two national scientific forums.

David Osborne and David Ginty, both graduate students in the department of physiology studying under the direction of Dr. Edward Seidel, assistant professor, received top prizes for research that focuses on understanding mechanisms that regulate the growth of tissue in the gastrointestinal tract.

"The consecutive awards received by the two students illustrates the quality of research created through their complementary research projects," Seidel said.

"Most diseases related to the gastrointestinal system are diseases of tissue growth and the students' research represents a clearer understanding of the mechanisms regulating the growth of gastrointestinal tract tissues," he said.

Osborne, a fourth-year student formerly of Burlington, was one of eight recipients of the Procter and Gamble Professional Opportunity Award for his extensive research on a chemical known as putrescine. The award was given at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology in Las Vegas.

The abstract presented by Ginty, a Fairfield, Conn., native and also a fourth-year graduate student, at the national meeting of the American Gastroenterological Association involved the study of the enzyme which makes humanly-produced putrescine.

Ginty's research merited the association's single award for graduate student research given at the annual gathering held in New Orleans. Both students' awards included expense-paid trips to the meetings.

Doctor Discounts Rumors Dukakis Had Counseling

BOSTON (AP) — Michael Dukakis' longtime physician today said rumors that the Democratic presidential nominee had received psychiatric counseling "have no basis in fact" and were politically motivated.

Dr. Gerald R. Plotkin was marched out late Wednesday and appeared on two television networks this morning to discount rumors about Dukakis' medical past that were brought into full focus with a gaffe by President Reagan earlier Wednesday.

"He has never had any psychological symptoms or problems and he has never had any treatment for such," Plotkin said on CBS-TV's "This Morning."

Plotkin said on NBC-TV's "Today" show that Dukakis "is usually feeling well, upbeat and very vigorous."

"I would have to assume that the rumors are political," he said. "I don't know whether the term is dirty tricks, but I think certainly the allegations ... have no basis in fact."

On Wednesday, Plotkin said

Dukakis showed no signs of clinical depression after two incidents that supposedly caused him to stumble psychologically: his loss in the 1978 gubernatorial primary, and the 1973 death of his brother Stelian in a hit-and-run accident. Stelian had undergone psychiatric treatment for years after a suicide attempt.

"There is a normal grieving after any loss, from minor to major, and the response usually is in relation to the gravity of the loss," Plotkin said. "I was struck at the time of both losses at his strength rather than his depression."

"I'm a very healthy guy," Dukakis told reporters earlier. "I think it was the Greeks who said a sound body and a sound mind is what one needs, especially if one is running for president."

Dukakis was heading to Mississippi today to begin a campaign trip that also included stops in California, Washington and Colorado.

Dukakis and Plotkin were responding to rumors that had been spread during the Democratic National Convention by supporters of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche and reported in a few newspapers in recent days.

The questions intensified after Reagan referred to Dukakis as an "invalid" when asked Wednesday morning whether he thought Dukakis should release his medical records. The question was posed by a reporter for the Executive Intelligence Review, a LaRouche publication.

The president apologized a few minutes later and said he was attempting a joke.

Dukakis was graceful when asked about Reagan's remarks.

"No apology was really needed," Dukakis said. "We all occasionally misspeak and I don't think the president needed to apologize."

His wife, Kitty, was less kind.

Mrs. Dukakis, campaigning in New Jersey, said such remarks come when "people are desperate and afraid of dealing with the real issues."

Airline Layoffs Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eastern Airlines executives say they may appeal a federal judge's order temporarily blocking the carrier from slashing its operations and laying off 4,000 workers.

In a ruling that put into disarray the company's plans to prune its operations Aug. 31, U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker agreed Wednesday to a request by Eastern's unions to block the cutbacks temporarily.

He tentatively scheduled a hearing for today at which the duration of the court's red light will be discussed. On Wednesday, he issued a temporary restraining order, which usually lasts no more than 10 days.

On July 22, the financially reeling airline announced plans to lay off 12 percent of its 32,200 workers and eliminate 140 of its 1,225 daily flights.

Eastern would end almost all operations at Kansas City, Mo., its main hub in the western United States, dramatically reduce service at its eastern hub of Philadelphia and eliminate flights to 14 cities. The airline would focus its service on the East Coast and Latin America.

David Boies, an attorney for Eastern, said it would be "a prescription for disaster" for the airline to consider continuing its operations in Kansas City.

Another Eastern lawyer, Michael Madigan, said Eastern lost $68 million in Kansas City last year and $33 million in the first three months of 1988. In all, he said, the airline has lost more than $1 billion since 1980, including $194 million in 1987 and $31 million in the first quarter of this year.

"We are continuing to suffer heavy financial losses and therefore we will give an appeal immediate and serious consideration," Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said when the session ended.

Lawyers for the three unions representing Eastern employees, however, insisted that the cutbacks were just the latest in a series of efforts by the company to weaken labor by shrinking the airline.

"They're engaged in a plan designed, if they don't get from labor what they want, the ultimate demise of Eastern," said Robert A. Burka, lawyer for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, representing baggage handlers and other ground workers.

The airline is engaged in contract talks with the machinists and with the Air Line Pilots Association and has made it clear that it is seeking reductions in wages.

Management has proposed a series of sales of Eastern assets in recent months to other subsidiaries of Texas Air Corp., which is also Eastern's parent company. Unions have claimed that management's goal is to strip Eastern and shift business to Continental Airlines, a Texas Air subsidiary that is non-union.

Labor already has blocked one such proposal in court — a plan to sell the airline's profitable shuttle serving the Northeast. Eastern executives have argued that the deal would have produced cash for the carrier.

Joseph Guerrieri Jr., another attorney for the machinists, told Parker that union lawyers had uncovered a "smoking gun" Eastern memo laying out the company's plans to sell assets and containing estimates of how damaging each deal would be to labor.

The plan to sell the shuttle, for example, was described as having "maximum shock value" on the unions. The document was submitted to Parker under seal.

Boies conceded that the memo had come from management, but he told the judge that "most of what's talked about there was never done."

Touch Of Pride

ECU Graduate Chairs Governors

There has to be a touch of pride for every East Carolina University supporter that one of its graduates, Robert L. "Roddy" Jones has been elected chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Jones, a 1958 graduate of ECU, is the first non-University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill alumnus to serve as chairman of the board.

The 52-year-old Jones has the awesome job of presiding over policy development for the 16-campus university system. He will have plenty of assistance from a capable board and an able administrative staff headed by President C.D. Spangler.

It is important to remember that although East Carolina supporters take pride in one of their graduates presiding over the prestigious board of governors, Jones must adopt a perspective that encompasses the entire UNC system. It is the board's responsibility to develop the system so that it best serves North Carolina's higher educational needs,

Jones, in accepting the position, noted he is not a lawyer (all previous chairmen have been attorneys). As for being the first non UNC-Chapel Hill graduate to head the board, he said he is a graduate of the university system "and that's where my concerns are and my interest lies."

That is as it should be. No one could fail to recognize the great prestige UNC-CH and N.C. State have brought to North Carolina. Our university system would only harm itself if it failed to pledge full resources to continued support of those institutions. We would be equally remiss if we failed to recognize the needs of the system's other universities. Each fulfills a unique mission.

Sharp challenges face Jones as the new chairman. He must address the financial issues of improving faculty pay and balancing capital needs in the system, while keeping tuition as low as possible. He must ensure each university in the system is utilized to its fullest and that is given the support and resources necessary to meet its potential.

Jones is a successful Raleigh developer, is engaged in other business activities and has served on a number of boards related to education. His experience leaves him well qualified to meet the challenges waiting as chairman of the board of governors.

Changing Habits

Committee Has Large Assignment

If Pitt County is not to be buried under a mountain of refuse and bear exorbitant cost of disposing of it, the county must find ways to recycle the waste it creates.

The cost of disposing of the trash homes and businesses generate is threatening to be astronomical. Presently the refuse collected in Greenville and elsewhere in Pitt County is deposited at the county landfill on Allen Road. The life of this landfill is limited and the county is already looking at alternate ways of refuse disposal. Anything in the future will be more expensive than the present landfill.

Since Greenville produces 60 percent of the material which goes into the landfill the city government obviously has a stake in more effective refuse handling.

And the City Council took a positive step recently when it created a recycling committee, which will consider local recycling efforts and work with the county.

Council member Inez Fridley, author of the motion creating the committee, said its efforts would be aimed at educating citizens on recycling, including preparation of publicity materials, organizing recycling campaigns with the Pitt County Solid Waste Task Force and offering advice to the mayor and council on the matter.

Wasteful habits won't be changed in a day. People have come to consider it a right to throw everything away. It all is picked up by sanitation workers during the day and soon forgotten.

That way of thinking can't go on forever. Disposition is becoming too expensive and many materials being buried can be reused. If people learn to separate glass, plastic and paper from table scraps the county can have an efficient system of recycling.

It is not a question of will it be done, but rather how soon will it be done?

That question is what the committee will have to educate the city's citizens to consider. There may be no more important assignment given to a local committee for the rest of this century.

Even Playboys Get The Blues

'It's no surprise what happened to the Playboy Clubs. They were done in by the three Rs of the '80s: raunchiness, righteousness and raised consciousness. The upscale crowd didn't do bunnies except on Saturday Night Live.'

The sexual revolution bloomed. Centerfolds came and went, bunnies hopped in and out. There was an endless procession of nymphets-next-door. Baby-boom Bambis in the buff.

But in the midst of this, the real centerpiece, was always Hefner himself: "What does it feel like being a living legend? Well, it feels great!" He added, "One of the curious things about the phenomenon of my life is that so very much of it has been lived out in a public way that it is related to people's views of sexuality and social conscience."

Hefner described himself as a "Rorschach test." Some people saw the play in the boy, a life in mansions full of toys, animate and inanimate. Barbi, Sondra, Shannon, Carrie — surely there was a Dawn in there somewhere — and now Kimberley.

Others saw the boy in the play. An eternal romantic who ate Wonderbread, fell in love like a teen-ager, and never had to get out of his pajamas or get tied down. "Variety, vitality and adventure of experience are more meaningful to me than the security of marriage."

But either way, Hef and his hutch took us from the era when Nice Girls Didn't to the era when Everybody Had To and on to the era when Everybody's Scared To. From secrecy to swinging to safe sex. Somewhere along the way, his idea of liberation became the women's movement's idea of exploitation. Somewhere along the way, his daughter took over the company and a bunny at the Lansing club had a second job as a security guard. Somewhere along the way what was titillating became tacky.

It's no surprise what happened to the Playboy Clubs. They were done in by the three Rs of the '80s: raunchiness, righteousness and raised consciousness. The upscale crowd didn't do bunnies except on Saturday Night Live.

As for Hef, it wasn't the times but time that changed things. For years the one constant in life was the age of the woman on his arm. Roughly 25. The other constant was his marital status: single. And the third was his philosophy: marriage kills romance. But after a stroke, a $35 million palimony suit and a 62nd birthday, even playboys get the blues.

Hugh Hefner discovered mortality and Kimberley Conrad at about the same time. Mortality was a somewhat older concept. Kim is 25, about 10 years younger than daughter Christie Hefner and 37 years younger than Hugh. Does Kim notice the age gap? "I don't even think about it."

As for Hef, "I'm at the point in my life where I've sown my wild oats....I always had the feeling before that there was something else, some further personal adventure waiting over the hill." Or in the next edition. Now he's 62, notably the worse for wear and finally ready for a commitment. Some things take longer than others. At least he's giving Kimberley a stepdaughter she can look up to.

If the bride-to-be is indeed a "homebody," the groom can spend his waning years teaching her about the old days. The days when the living legend taught his generation that marriage was a trap. The days when every fantasy female had a fluffy white tail. The days when he hung a Latin saying over his threshold: "If you don't swing, don't ring."

Today, the only swinging at the Playboy Mansion West is a door quietly closing on the past.

Hunger A Long-Term Problem

The huge plane sat on the runway as about 20 men hurriedly scurried about, loading it with food destined for distribution in northern Ethiopia.

As the continuing drought in Africa has increased the demand for outside food supplies, the civil war within has interfered with relief efforts by blocking roads and hindering the distribution of food to the people. Only four planes are available to transport food, instead of the 250 trucks (donated by Band Aid, the British rock groups' relief efforts) usually used. But use of the trucks has been limited because roads often are not passable due to land mines and military road blocks. As a result, each plane flies five shuttles a day. Still, they can carry only 18 tons of food per trip, compared to the 20 tons carried on a truck.

One coordinator of relief efforts said this spring that at least 10,000 people come for food in her area each day.

'Effective food aid programs must consider long-term as well as short-term outcomes when dealing with hunger and malnutrition.'

Emergency relief efforts, like those in Ethiopia, provide food for the hungry in areas where food shortages are so severe that the health and well-being of people are immediately threatened. However, it is just one type of program supported by the U.N. World Food Program to address the food shortage problem in Africa.

A primary goal of the U.N. programs is to provide food supplies without discouraging efforts to attain agricultural and economic self-sufficiency. And in all countries, a major concern has been to first help those people who are least capable of helping themselves.

In Botswana, supplementary feeding programs have been established to ensure the availability of food for the ill and destitute, pregnant and lactating women, children up to the age of 10 who are not enrolled in school and for people who live in remote rural areas, which together covers 60 percent of the population. Donated food is distributed through health clinics for people to take home. The clinics, run by nurses, were picked by the Botswanian government as food distribution sites to ensure surveillance, care and treatment of the malnourished and ill.

A direct feeding program exists for severely malnourished children who are under 80 percent of their expected body weight. The mothers of those children are required to bring them into a clinic daily to be fed. Nurses monitor these children's nutritional status and condition each day, and also educate the mothers about how to best meet their children's nutritional needs.

In areas of Botswana and Ethiopia where the drought has had its greatest impact, special drought relief or work relief programs also have been implemented. Unemployment is a less-talked-about but very real outcome of the drought. In Botswana, the unemployed are paid by the government to work on projects intended to help improve the quality of life, such as building roads, bridges, houses and food storage warehouses.

The Ethiopian government has integrated development projects with relief efforts by paying people for work done with food provided by donor organizations such as the World Food Program. The government, which is concerned that long-term distribution of free food to able-bodied people might reduce their motivation to work, believes that all adults capable of working should work for their food rations.

Ethiopia's "food-for-work" program focuses on projects that facilitate the production of food, soil conservation and reforestation. For example, dams with a catchment area for rain water have been built to provide water for irrigation and for livestock. Several dams already are supporting crops of maize, potatoes, cabbage and other vegetables as well as fruit trees. Wells also are being drilled and forests being planted.

Providing food aid to drought-stricken areas of Africa is not without its problems, of course. First, costs are high, especially to transport the food. The World Food Program must pay all costs to get the food to the country's port and 50 percent of the cost for transporting it to distribution centers. Then there are high costs for food storage and for needed non-food items such as trucks, drills, tools and machinery for work projects, as well. Financial donations to the World Food Program are used to purchase such non-food items.

Correctly timing assistance is also a concern. If help is given too early, it interferes with the country's normal marketing system, but if food aid comes too late, people could starve.

Food products are donated to the U.N. World Food Program by countries around the world who have agricultural surpluses, which raises another concern: that these foods could change local food preferences, endangering locally produced foods.

No doubt, food aid improves the nutritional status and quality of life of people fortunate enough to receive it. However, effective food aid programs must consider long-term as well as short-term outcomes when dealing with hunger and malnutrition.

And those programs that combine food distribution with health care, nutritional education, general education or work at the same site will have the greatest chance of success.

Ora Strickland, a professor at the School of Nursing at the University of Maryland at Baltimore, spent several weeks this spring studying hunger and malnutrition in Botswana, Ethiopia and Kenya with officials from the U.N. World Food Program.

In Trouble Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — There you go again, Mr. President. Ronald Reagan, the great communicator, the man who is seldom at a loss for words, has gotten himself into trouble once more with his glib tongue. Once, he spoke into a live microphone and jested about bombing the Soviet Union. Another time, he joked that he sometimes withheld information from Congress. Now he's called Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis an invalid, and then said he was only kidding and shouldn't have said it. Actually, what he said was, "I think I was kidding."

Dukakis said no apology was needed. His running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, called the president's remark "outrageous and laughable." Vice President George Bush declined to comment. Reagan is no stranger to this kind of problem. The most recent time he said something that he immediately had to regret was on March 16 when he was meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in the Oval Office.

A reporter asked him to comment on his former national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, pleading guilty to misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress. "He just pleaded guilty to not telling Congress everything it wanted to know," said Reagan. "I've done that myself."

As reporters left the room, he told Shamir, "Oh, boy, just for that careless remark they'll go wild about 'Reagan wants to lie to Congress' or something." Then there was the time, on Aug. 11, 1984, that the president was doing a voice test for his weekly radio broadcast. Although his words weren't going out onto the air, they were fed into the White House press room where reporters were preparing to cover his remarks.

"All right, my fellow Americans, I am pleased to tell you today that I have signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

The president hasn't heard the last of that one yet. It wasn't the only time he used his sound tests for some humor that didn't get on the air, but did get reported.

Once, he opened up with "Welcome to Death Valley Days" — the television program he used to host.

On another occasion, while warming up by reading his prepared text for a speech about the economy, he added, "And I am prepared to tell you, it's a hell of a mess."

Another time, he cracked, "Call the city desk. I've got a story that will crack this city wide open."

Still another time, in a prebroadcast warmup at his California ranch in 1982, he referred to the leaders of Poland as "a bunch of no-good, lousy bums."

Wednesday's fracas arose when a reporter asked the president, as he prepared to leave the White House briefing room after a question-and-answer session, whether he didn't think Dukakis should release his medical records. Grinning, the president replied, "I'm not going to pick on an invalid."

A few minutes later, meeting with news executives for a briefing on Central America, he opened his remarks by saying, "A short time ago, I was down in the press room and I attempted a joke in response to a question, and — I think I was kidding — but I don't think I should have said what I said."

As Dukakis said, "We all occasionally mispeak."

Some of us just do so more often than others.

Small Gains

This does not promise to be a spectacular year for women candidates — though Vice President George Bush could change all that if he chooses Elizabeth Dole as his running mate. In a USA Today poll of Republican delegates she runs third, after her husband, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, and New York Rep. Jack Kemp.

But insiders scoff at the possibility of Bush putting a woman on the ticket — despite polls showing a GOP gender gap of as much as 30 points in some states. It is simply too risky a move for the cautious Bush, the pundits say. Some wags suggest that the presence of a strong woman on the ticket would serve only to emphasize Bush's supposedly wimpy image.

Women candidates will certainly not be at least as visible this year as they were in 1986, when there were 15 women-vs-women contests in the country for either congressional or statewide offices.

Nationally, there are fewer women candidates running this year than two years ago. By one count the number has dropped from 123 to 110, with some of the latter already out after losing primary contests.

Irene Natividad, head of the National Women's Political Caucus, considers this a normal pattern. More women run in mid-term elections than in presidential years, she explained, because there tend to be more open seats in those years. It also may be that some potential women get "siphoned off" from the pool of potential candidates in presidential years because they end up working instead for their party's White House hopefuls.

With the widening gender gap, one might think Democratic women would fare better than their GOP counterparts in congressional races. But that is not the case. Among senators there is an even split, with Sen. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland on the Democratic side and Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas on the Republican.

Of the 23 women members of the House, 12 are Democrats. But the trend since 1973 — through all the years of the women's movement — should give Republican women reason to cheer. The number of GOP congresswomen has risen from two to 11 during that period, while Democratic women in the House dropped from 14 to 12.

This trend has caused Emily's List, the donor network for Democratic women candidates (the name stands for "Early Money Is Like Yeast"), to swing their support to promising House candidates. Two years ago, for instance, the organization split their bundle between just two Senate hopefuls, Mikulski in Maryland and Harriet Woods in Missouri. This year, they picked eight House candidates around the country. (One lost in the New Mexico primary, but seven are still running.)

Since all the House incumbents are seeking re-election this year, there is an excellent chance that Democratic women will gain several seats in November. But since the races are widely scattered, their national visibility is low.

In Washington state, where two incumbent Democratic representatives, Don Bonker and Mike Lowry, are fighting to win the Senate nomination, two women are vying for their open seats. Jolene Unsoeld, 56, a state legislator from Olympia, should replace Bonker in the 3rd District that covers the southwestern part of the state; Ruthe Ridder, 58, stands ready to move in the 7th District seat, representing Seattle, that was held by Lowry.

Overall, the prospect is for some small, but significant, gains for women. Nothing overwhelming, perhaps, but still worth watching.

WHALE SKELETON — Steve Hollady, manager of the N.C. State anatomy laboratory, helps install a 900-pound whale skeleton in its final resting place at the NCSU College of Veterinary Medicine. The skeleton was reassembled after two years of work. (AP Laserphoto)

Veterinary School Hangs Skeleton Of Sperm Whale

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Two years ago, a 25,000-pound sperm whale beached on an uninhabited island on the Outer Banks. For the whale, it's been all downhill from there.

After hearing of the whale, a 24-member team from the North Carolina State University veterinary school and the National Guard headed for the island, where they spent two days cutting away 10 tons of whale flesh from the animal's skeleton.

They then tagged and numbered the skeleton's 120 bones and brought them back to dry on a remote field of one of the school's research farms. Over the next year, tiny beetles ate away the remaining bits of whale flesh, after which the clean bones were brought inside and reassembled with steel bars and silicone caulking.

On Wednesday, scientists assembled the 900-pound skeleton to hang in the lobby of the NCSU veterinary school.

"A little wider, I think ... she's got quite a mouth on her, hasn't she?"

said anatomy Professor Ed Smallwood as researchers drilled a hole and placed a pin in the white, tooth-studded bones.

And to make matters worse, the whale didn't even get to keep its 30 teeth. They were removed and replaced with plastic ones at the suggestion of scientists from the Smithsonian Institution, said Steve Hollady, manager of the school's anatomy lab.

"The real ones are made of ivory and are worth $200 to $300 apiece," he said. "We were afraid people would steal them."

Reporters and spectators wandered in and out of the animal's huge rib cage and inspected the spine and skull, which hung suspended from cables a few feet off the ground. "Whales have very unique skeletons," Smallwood said. "Hopefully, it will draw people from all over — marine scientists, sure, but also children and their science classes."

The 35-foot-long sperm whale skeleton is the first to be obtained by a U.S. veterinary school, although several are on display in museums around the nation, said NCSU spokeswoman Lucy Coulbourn.

When workers finish assembling the structure Friday, it will hang from the lobby ceiling about 20 feet above the floor — completing a project begun two years ago when the 12½-ton female cetacean beached on an uninhabited island along the Outer Banks, she said.

"It cost very little. It was mostly labor-intensive," Smallwood said.

Very little is known about the sperm whale, although scientists may learn more by examining the skeleton, said veterinary student Paul Nader.

For example, the sperm whale's satellite-dish-shaped skull, ideal for receiving sound waves, suggests it relies more on sound than sight for catching food in the dark ocean depths, Smallwood said.

Sperm whales and other large marine mammals are protected by the U.S. Endangered Species Act of 1973. They typically live 40 to 50 years and grow to a maximum length of 60 feet for males, 35 feet for females, spending much of their time deep in the ocean's depths.

Helms Says Sanford Blocking New Judge In Partisan Spat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms says Sen. Terry Sanford is blocking a judicial appointment because of Helms' stand against the Great Smoky Mountains wilderness bill, a charge that Sanford neither would confirm or deny.

"If it's held up ... it would be for partisan reasons," Sanford said Wednesday, noting that Helms has used partisan loyalty from fellow Republicans to block the wilderness bill.

Helms said Sanford had not discussed the delay with him. "He has been silent in seven languages on it," he said.

Because Republicans hold the White House, Helms controls the appointment of federal judges in the state. But Democrats control the Senate, and Sanford may be able to block Voorhees' confirmation beyond the November presidential election if he chooses, sources said.

Helms, a Republican from Raleigh, said Sanford had been blocking Senate confirmation of Gastonia lawyer Richard Voorhees as a U.S. District judge in western North Carolina. Helms has tried for almost two years to win the seat for Voorhees.

Helms said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., had told him Sanford was taking the action because of Helms' staunch opposition to the wilderness bill, which Sanford supports.

Sanford previously has said he supported Voorhees' nomination, which has cleared the Senate Judiciary Committee and awaits only a Senate floor vote.

The wilderness bill, backed mainly by Sanford and Tennessee's two Democratic senators, would designate more than 400,000 acres of Great Smoky Mountains National Park as official wilderness. Most of the park, which straddles the two states, already is managed as wilderness. That means roads, large campsites, buildings and other forms of development are banned.

Environmentalists want the official wilderness designation to prevent future administrations from allowing greater development.

In two showdown votes in June, the Senate failed to block Helms from launching filibusters that would kill the bill. Helms appealed to Republicans to back him on the issue.

Supporters of the bill said Wednesday that Sanford had sought a compromise with Helms. For example, they said, Sanford agreed to eliminate from wilderness designation the 44,000 acres along the park's southern border that some area residents think should remain eligible for park-related development.

Sanford, however, says the area should continue to be managed as wilderness, which Helms won't accept.

"It's the same thing" as official wilderness designation, Helms said.

In a last-ditch effort to shape a compromise before Congress takes its August recess, backers of the bill have tried to get Sanford, Helms, the Tennessee senators and others to meet this week, Senate sources say. But Helms said he knew of no plans to meet and called on Sanford to go to the park area and talk with residents who oppose the bill.

Meanwhile, a proposed federal payment of $9.5 million to Swain County continues to be blocked. The government said it would pay the money — most of which would go to Swain schools — to compensate the county for a proposed road through the park that was abandoned in 1961 because of soaring economic and environmental costs.

But the $9.5 million has been tied to the wilderness bill, and it is unclear how or whether it would be paid without passage of some form of the bill.

Indicted

GREENSBORO (AP) — Three employees and a former employee of the U.S. Veterans Administration office in Winston-Salem have been indicted on insurance fraud charges following a series of car accidents that befell the group in 1986 and 1987.

The staffers, three of whom once car-pooled to work together from Greensboro, allegedly persuaded a supervisor to falsify lost-wage claims on their behalf following three wrecks, according to the indictment handed down by a Guilford County grand jury.

The claims inflated the amount of work and wages the staffers missed by as much as 10 days, said Dan Stone, a special agent with the State Bureau of Investigation.

Charged were mailroom supervisor Lillie Evans Powell, 40, of Winston-Salem; realty specialist Romeo Henry Lewis II, 45; and mail clerk Laten Eugene Nickerson, 35, and Hermeta Denise Bullock, all of Greensboro.

'Shy' Student Faces Murder Charge In Death Of Father

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — A high school football player described as shy has been charged with first-degree murder in the death of his father, almost two months after the teen told friends his father had left the state, authorities said.

Officers dug up Lanny Dan Thompson's body under the family's house after they received a tip and visited the home Monday, said Chief Roger Lawder of the Stanly County Sheriff's Department.

"We looked around under the house and found where there had been some digging ... (and) fresh dirt," Lawder said Wednesday. "We dug down about three-and-a-half feet and found the body. It was decayed, not completely decayed, but in the process."

Thompson had been shot twice with a shotgun and his throat was cut, Lawder said. A 7-inch-long butcher knife believed used in the killing was found in the home in a kitchen drawer, he said. The shotgun was found as well, although Lawder would not say where.

Michael Thompson, 16, allegedly shot his father to death in a family argument over a speeding ticket, authorities said.

The boy's mother, Peggy Sue Eudy Thompson, 40, was charged with accessory after the fact for allegedly helping her son clean up the slaying site and inventing the story about his leaving, Lawder said.

Michael Thompson and Ms. Thompson were being held Wednesday in the Stanly County Jail.

Lanny Dan Thompson, 46, disappeared June 8 from his Oakboro home after what family members described as a quarrel with his ex-wife, with whom he had been living for several years.

The news astonished football coaches and teammates of Michael's at West Stanly High.

"I was shocked," said assistant coach Greg Revis. Teammates described the 6-foot-1, 198-pound lineman as shy.

Lawder said neighbors and friends of the victim had not questioned the family's story about his disappearance. He did not know if Thompson's only living relative, a sister, was contacted.

In fact, the only person apparently troubled by the disappearance was Thompson's supervisor at F.N. Thompson Construction Co. in Charlotte, who called the victim's home repeatedly and finally mailed his paychecks to his family, Lawder said.

"He said the fellow was real reliable, a good worker — he thought it was unusual that he would just up and leave," Lawder said.

Bakker Tells Court PTL Papers Were Destroyed

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — PTL founder Jim Bakker says "hostile people" who took over the television ministry altered or destroyed documents since he resigned more than a year ago.

In a deposition last month, Bakker, whom PTL records say received nearly $8.3 million in salary, bonuses and perks from 1983 to 1987, also said he was underpaid.

In another deposition, former Bakker aide David Taggart acknowledged that he and his brother, James, were paid through six-figure contracts that were written by his personal attorney, were signed by two people who ranked below him in the PTL hierarchy and were never reviewed by Bakker.

Bakker said the destruction of documents and letters was ordered by subordinates of the Rev. Jerry Falwell, who became PTL's chairman in March 1987, after Bakker resigned in a sex and money scandal.

Falwell served until October 1987. Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss denied the Bakker allegations.

"It would not have been in our best interest to destroy any documents," DeMoss said. "We couldn't get our hands on documents fast enough, that we were trying to preserve, because so much of the documents and records there are not the kinds of things, I think, Jim Bakker would want preserved.... A lot of them were pretty incriminating."

Bakker made the comments in a sworn deposition as he prepared to defend himself against a $52 million lawsuit by PTL, which charges he grossly mismanaged the TV ministry.

"I have reason to dispute all records of PTL at this time...because of hostile people who took over Heritage USA," Bakker said in the deposition taken July 18 and July 22.

Depositions contain sworn answers to attorneys' questions.

The PTL lawsuit alleges that Bakker and David Taggart took millions of dollars from PTL for their personal use, although they knew the ministry was in financial trouble.

PTL lawyers questioned Taggart at PTL's Heritage USA headquarters July 25.

PTL attorney Brad Leggett said one purpose of taking Taggart's deposition was "we wanted to try to determine how a young piano player managed to become such a highly paid executive."

PTL records show that Taggart drew more than $620,000 from the ministry in a 15-month period that ended in March 1987, when Bakker resigned. Taggart was fired a month later by Falwell.

James Taggart, who was PTL's interior decorator, received nearly $300,000 during the same period.

Transcripts of David Taggart's deposition and of two days of Bakker's were obtained by The Charlotte, N.C., Observer. They show that:

In December 1985, Taggart's tax lawyer, Robert Gunst of Charlotte, told him he needed an employment contract from PTL to get financing for a condominium — which PTL sources have valued at $660,000 — that he and James Taggart later bought in Manhattan's Trump Tower.

Gunst wrote a contract providing Taggart with $150,000 a year in salary, an unspecified annual bonus and a guarantee that, if the IRS levied back taxes on Taggart, PTL would provide the money. The IRS had already formally notified PTL that its top officers were being paid far too much for a tax-exempt organization.

At the same time, Gunst prepared a second contract for $100,000 in professional fees to JHT Ltd., an interior design firm James Taggart owned.

The two contracts were signed by Bakker's personal secretary, Shirley Fulbright, and PTL's vice president for finance, Peter Bailey, but not by Bakker or PTL Executive Director Richard Dortch.

The ministry has been in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings since June 1987 and must sell Heritage USA and its other assets to pay debts. Bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton has said he expects to recommend a buyer this month.

The suit is scheduled for trial Sept. 12 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia.

In his deposition, Bakker stated:

— "People ... have come to my office to tell me that they have lied under oath to destroy me..."

— "Corporate records were destroyed wholesale (sic)."

— "Also, tens of thousands of letters personally addressed to me ... are buried on these grounds."

Bakker attorney Jim Toms told PTL lawyers that he will seek a court order to excavate the site where Bakker claims many documents are buried.

Bakker said former PTL employees have told him of burying thousands of documents in a large hole near the satellite antenna complex on the grounds of Heritage USA, PTL's Christian retreat and theme park in York County.

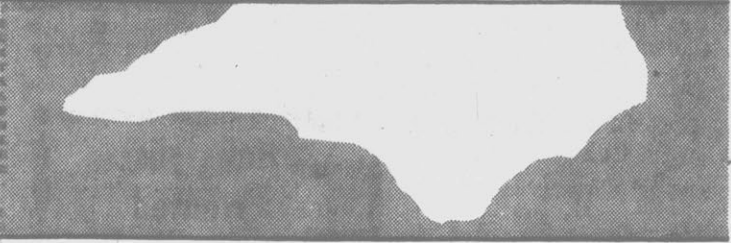

Taggart, who joined PTL in 1978 as a 21-year-old assistant to the ministry's music director, had no college degree or administrative training, but he soon became Bakker's most trusted aide, running Bakker's office, arranging Bakker's travel and buying Bakker's clothes and houses.

Under questioning by Leggett last week, Taggart often answered only reluctantly. Other times, he pleaded his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, refusing to answer many questions, including several asking him to describe his duties at PTL.

Taggart's attorney, Ben Cotten, said at the time that Taggart was invoking the Fifth Amendment on a wide range of topics because he might be subject to criminal prosecution. Cotten said former PTL trustee David Clark had mentioned such possible charges as mail fraud, wire fraud, criminal tax fraud, larceny after trust, forgery and embezzlement.

A federal grand jury in Charlotte has been investigating PTL since July 1987.

Exercise

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Members of the 82nd Airborne Division will learn to fight in dry, hot sand of southern California's Mojave Desert when they take part in an exercise called Gallant Eagle 88 during the next week.

About 1,350 paratroopers of "Task Force Devil" will take part in Gallant Eagle 88, a massive multi-service war game sponsored by the U.S. Central Command at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla. The command is responsible for the security and protection of U.S. national interests in the Middle East.

Following the task force from the division's 1st Brigade, will be support elements from both the 82nd and its higher headquarters, the XVIIIth Airborne Corps. In all, about 3,000 troops from the division and another 1,500 from Fort Bragg will play a role in the exercise. More than 28,000 troops will have participated by the end of the service-wide exercise next week.

Tax Cuts

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The North Carolina Legislature should cut taxes for companies with smaller profits to help small businesses and recruit established firms, the N.C. Commission on Jobs and Economic Growth said.

The commission, a 30-member group appointed by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and charged with advising the Legislature, made the recommendation this week. With Jordan's backing, many of the commission's recommendations have been adopted in the past two legislative sessions.

A graduated corporate income tax structure discussed by the commission would cut taxes for 90 percent of N.C. firms and would reduce revenue by about $29 million a year.

Postmark

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — After months of fighting and bickering, the Postal Service in Washington has approved a postmark for the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area.

The postmark will read Research Triangle Area. Under the name will appear Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill.

Town Found

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A lot of painstaking digging this summer and "a lot of luck" have enabled archeologists at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to discover an Indian village that flourished some 350 years ago before disappearing.

The archeologists, Trawick Ward and Steve Davis, and their students, found the village, Lower Saratown, during excavations on private property across the Dan River from Eden.

"This is the second time in the past five years that we have been able to locate an important Indian site in the Piedmont that was mentioned in colonial accounts," Ward said. "The first was Occaneechi in Hillsborough in 1983."

The approximate location of Lower Saratown was given on a map drawn in 1733 by William Mayor, a surveyor employed by William Byrd of Virginia. At that time Mayor found only traces of the village, which had been abandoned some 75 years earlier.

Lake Water

RALEIGH (AP) — Warning signs advising against eating too much fish from Belews Lake in Forsyth County and Hyco Lake in Person and Caswell counties were posted after state health officials found elevated levels of selenium in fish from those two lakes.

Selenium is a naturally occurring element present in coal fly ash. Selenium is required in low doses for good health, but high doses of it can cause illness.

"Given what is known about the levels of selenium in fish at Belews and Hyco lakes, it could be possible for some individuals to consume enough fish to lead to mild selenosis," said Dr. Ted Taylor, a toxicologist with the state Division of Health Services. "This mild form of illness would be expected to be reversible; it would disappear when fish consumption ceased."

The advisory sign states that a person should not eat more than one fish of 4 to 6 ounces per week from these lakes on the average. The signs also advise women of child-bearing age and preschool child to avoid eating any fish from the lakes.

Asbestos

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — A bag containing the cancer-causing material asbestos was found buried behind an Alamance County school maintenance garage, authorities said.

Workers unearthed the torn bag from several feet of soil Tuesday after a three-hour search initiated by the sheriff's department, which has been investigating illegal burials behind the facility, authorities said.

School officials covered the hole with polyurethane to help prevent asbestos fibers from being released into the air. They said the area, which is fenced, would be locked at night.

Pentagon Says Jet Shot Down In Human Error

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conclusion that human mistakes in the midst of combat caused the United States to shoot down a civilian Iranian airliner could tilt Congress to compensate families of the 290 people killed, the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee said today.

Defense officials said Wednesday that preliminary findings show human error rather than malfunctioning equipment caused the Navy warship Vincennes to fire on the Iran Air jetliner over the Persian Gulf on July 3.

The committee chairman, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said he has not seen a report that, according to sources, concludes there was no problem with the sophisticated Aegis air-defense radar system on the USS Vincennes.

"If it turns out the United States is totally responsible and human error was the responsibility, I think it will tilt the chances of ... Congress going along with the idea of compensation, not to the government but to the families," Aspin said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

One Pentagon official said, "The biggest question when this started was whether Aegis worked properly, and the inquiry has found no evidence of a malfunction."

Another official said the inquiry determined there was "no problem with the Aegis."

The defense officials agreed to discuss the preliminary findings into the tragedy only on condition they not be identified. The Vincennes shot down the airliner shortly after it had taken off from a military and civilian airfield in Iran. All 290 passengers and crew aboard the plane were killed.

The sources stressed that the findings of the investigative team that just returned from the gulf had yet to be accepted formally or "endorsed" by military brass or Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci.

"But this (explanation) is very plausible," one source said. "People underestimate the human factor and stress. You can't replicate that in exercises and training."

The Vincennes, one of the Navy's newest and most sophisticated ships, fired on the Iranian airliner after concluding it was an Iranian jet fighter. The Vincennes' crew classified the approaching radar "contact" as hostile and when the plane failed to respond to radio warnings, the ship's skipper gave the order to open fire.

The classification of that radar contact as hostile appears to have been made by crewmen in the heat of battle without adequate technical justification, one official said. There is no evidence the Aegis radar system malfunctioned or that it presented technical data to justify the "hostile" classification, the source explained.

"Perhaps, understandably, there was misinterpretation," another official said.

The ship was on high alert; Iranian fighters had been detected operating from the same airfield in Iran just a short time earlier, and the Vincennes had just survived its first combat action in the gulf, a fight with three Iranian gunboats.

Very quickly, almost upon takeoff, the plane was classified as hostile, a source said.

"Here you had a bunch of people believing that the inbound was hostile and thought to be a threat," the official said. "So here you've got a mindset."

"And you've got something (a contact) that obviously was not responding to warnings, which further suggests that it might be hostile. It's not as simple as just saying human error. They didn't purposely shoot down an airliner."

The Pentagon refused to discuss the matter Wednesday, saying the findings were still being reviewed by Gen. George B. Crist, the head of the U.S. Central Command, and had yet to be forwarded to Washington.

Crist must decide whether to accept the findings of his investigative team, which was led by Rear Adm. William Fogarty, the Pentagon noted.

President Reagan, in a brief question-and-answer exchange with reporters, also declined to comment on the matter.

"I have read and heard and seen what is being said about the report and assigning the blame to the people in the radar room interpreting the signals and all," the president said.

"I can't comment because neither the military nor my office has received the report," Reagan said.

The sources said Wednesday the written report and documentary evidence were still in Crist's hands, but that a few defense officials — including Carlucci — had received oral briefings on the status of the work.

The New York Times, in a report Wednesday, said it appeared the Vincennes crew mistook an electronic identification signal from a C-130 aircraft at Bandar Abbas to be from the passenger airliner.

The sources contacted by The Associated Press declined comment on that aspect of the inquiry and also refused to say whether investigators had advanced any explanation for the failure of the Iranian airliner to respond to the Vincennes' radio warnings.

House Impeaches Acquitted Judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that Judge Alcee L. Hastings has been impeached by the House, Senate leaders must decide whether the unprecedented case should go to trial in the waning days of the 100th Congress.

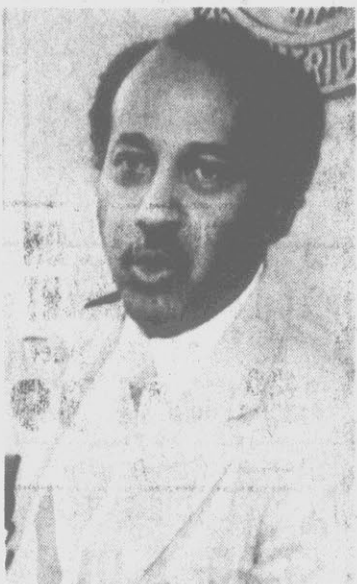

The Miami jurist on Wednesday became the first federal official ever impeached after he was acquitted in a criminal trial of similar charges.

The 413-3 vote approving 17 articles of impeachment sent the case to the Senate, making Hastings the first black official to be impeached. Senate conviction by a two-thirds majority would mean removal of Hastings from his $89,500 lifetime job as a U.S. district judge.

Hastings, 51, was accused by the House of participating with Washington attorney William Borders in a 1981 conspiracy to obtain a $150,000 payment from two convicted racketeers. In return, the judge was to give the two brothers lenient sentences without prison terms, and return forfeited assets to them.

Hastings also was charged by the House with lying at his 1983 trial to win acquittal. Borders was convicted in a separate trial.

The Senate has two major decisions to make: first, whether to conduct a trial before the full Senate or a 12-member committee; and whether to carry the case over to the 101st Congress next year.

Panel Urges Stronger Care For Mothers, New Babies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation would save money at the same time it saves its children by redirecting resources to health care for pregnant women and their newborn infants, a federal commission said today.

"We spend vast amounts on a compassionate effort to save sick children when we could spend far less to assure they are born healthy," said a report of the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the panel which was created by Congress in July 1987, was presenting the final report today during an appearance at the National Press Club.

"No nation can long call itself great that does not put its children first," Chiles said in a letter accompanying the report. "To that end, our commission report is a hammer on the anvil of public commitment. And we want the echoes to spread throughout the country."

The report says 40,000 infants die each year in the United States before they reach their first birthday and that, without changes, "in the next 13 years we will lose more American infants than we have lost soldiers in all the wars fought by the nation in this century."

"These facts would be sad enough were it not for the additional fact that at least half of the deaths are preventable," it said.

Chiles, discussing the report on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" before its formal release, said that those who "suffer the most are the poor — and that's true whether they're white poor in Appalachia or they're black poor."

A child born in the United States has a poorer chance of surviving his or her first year than one born in 19 other industrialized nations, the report said.

Chiles said in the interview that a child born in Hong Kong or Singapore "would have a better chance of reaching its first birthday than (one born) in the United States."

The report did not cite any source for this information.

EPA Arranges $33 Million Waste Clean-Up Proposal

BOSTON (AP) — A $33 million settlement with 48 companies over illegal dumping in Massachusetts and New Hampshire should "slam dunk" those who don't follow regulations in disposing toxic waste, an environmental official says.

The settlement was part of a civil complaint filed Wednesday by the Environmental Protection Agency in U.S. District Court seeking damages from 25 other companies that were allegedly involved in the illegal dumping and did not cooperate with federal officials.

"We're sending a message that says if you illegally dispose of illegal waste, you're going to get found, you're going to get caught and you'll have to pay for it," said Daniel S. Greenbaum, commissioner of Massachusetts' Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Part of the agreement, the culmination of a nine-year joint state and federal investigation, includes the largest cost recovery ever achieved under the U.S. Superfund law.

"This should slam dunk them (illegal dumpers) to the fullest extent of the law," said Michael Deland, the EPA's regional administrator.

"We're saying we can't tolerate this anymore."

The $33.1 million settlement is described technically as a "proposal" because federal law requires a 30-day public comment period though the parties involved have already agreed to the conditions.

The settlement involves major companies who were customers of Cannons Engineering Corp. hazardous waste sites in Bridgewater and Plymouth, Mass., and in Nashua and Londonderry, N.H.

Among the companies were Globe Newspaper Co., Polaroid Corp., Monsanto Co., Atlantic Richfield Co., General Electric and Clean Harbors of Braintree and Natick.

The shuttle program also must pass another key propulsion test before Discovery can be certified for flight: a full-scale firing, the fifth in a series, of the redesigned solid fuel booster rocket at the Morton Thiokol plant in Utah. It is scheduled about Aug. 20.

The Challenger explosion was blamed on a faulty booster rocket joint that allowed flame to escape and ignite the external fuel tank.

Contributing to the accident was a bending motion that strains the booster joints when the liquid fuel main engines ignite. The new joints have been designed to hold more tightly together, and sensors were to determine how they functioned during the test firing, although the two boosters would not be ignited.

On an actual launch, the main engines fire for six seconds before the two solid fuel rockets ignite and the bolts are severed by explosive charges to release the shuttle.

Since the Challenger disaster, several modifications have been made to high pressure turbopumps, valve actuators, electronic controllers and other main engine systems

Enrollment

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Schools in the University of North Carolina system appear confident they will keep out-of-state freshman enrollment below the ceiling of 18 percent, officials say.

The cap, which was approved by the UNC Board of Governors in 1985, takes effect this fall. Schools that did not expect to be in compliance with the cap could have asked for a one-year extension.

"No one has requested an extension of time," Raymond Dawson, UNC vice president of academic affairs, said Wednesday. "I think everyone is now planning to be within the limit."

Five schools had out-of-state freshman enrollments greater than 18 percent in fall 1987: East Carolina University, UNC-Greensboro, Western Carolina University, N.C. A&T State University and N.C. Central. Out-of-state enrollment system-wide was 16.5 percent.

Tobacco Prices Lower Than Expected

Goldsboro's Carolina Warehouse, criticized the General Assembly for slashing his requested budget increase for the Department of Commerce's overseas offices, which he said hampered development of new markets for tobacco products.

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham also observed the sales in Greenville.

The Associated Press reported that growers generally were optimistic that prices would improve for what has been described as the best tobacco crop in years.

"It's about the same as last year. I'd hoped it would be higher," grower Harry Ivey said as the first sheets of tobacco were auctioned off at Carolina Warehouse in Goldsboro.

Sentence

TAYLORSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Lori Mayse pleaded no contest Wednesday to the November 1986 murder of her husband, and was sentenced to 12 years in prison.

Mrs. Mayse, 19, admitted in Alexander County Superior Court on Wednesday that she asked her uncle, Estil Herman Ward, and her half-brother, Robert Kenneth Adams, to kill her husband, Robert Daniel Mayse. She also testified that her husband beat and sexually abused her throughout their one-year marriage.

Mrs. Mayse pleaded no contest to second-degree murder. Judge W. Terry Sherrill sentenced her to 12 years in prison. The maximum penalty for second-degree murder is life.

According to authorities and court testimony, Ward and Adams beat Robert Mayse with a shotgun barrel and strangled him with a rope in the bedroom of Mayse's Bethlehem mobile home on Nov. 18, 1986. About a week later, Ward and Adams burned the trailer to destroy evidence.

Ward was convicted last January of second-degree murder and arson. He was sentenced to life plus 12 years in prison. Adams pleaded guilty last April to second-degree murder and arson. He was sentenced to 20 years for murder and 15 years for arson.

"People are generally a little disappointed with what the buyers are doing."

Demand was good on Eastern Belt markets and almost no tobacco failed to bring at least 1 cent above the federal support price, in which case it would be purchased for resale by a grower-owned cooperative backed by the government.

"All the companies are supposed to be interested in buying a lot this year, so maybe it'll get better," said W.W. Robbins, an Elm City farmer.

Warehouse operators purchased some leaf for later resale to prevent cigarette companies from buying it at prices farmers considered unacceptable.

Most of the new crop tobacco consisted of bottom-leaf primings, followed by cutters and nondescript leaf, the news service said. Warehouses also offered a significant amount of upper-stalk leaf held over from 1987, which brought $165 to $170 per hundred pounds at Kinston markets.

At Wilson, the state's largest market, Eastern Belt growers said they were optimistic even though prices failed to jump above last year's.

"Things look great," U.S. Rep. Tim Valentine, a Democrat from Nashville, said during the opening ceremony at Growers Warehouse in Wilson. "I don't know when I've seen a prettier crop in my 62 years in eastern North Carolina."

Aside from good weather and the seller's market, another reason to be upbeat is that tobacco forces are enjoying a respite from the assault on the federal leaf program, Valentine said.

Attorney Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — Harry Woodrow McGalliard, who rose to the rank of chief deputy attorney general in 35 years with the state attorney general's office, died Tuesday. He was 77.

McGalliard, a Raleigh resident, joined the attorney general's office in 1940 to rewrite statutes for the General Assembly. His career was interrupted by three years in the Army, but he returned immediately after being discharged.

Society Preserving Memory Of Swiss Pioneers

By DAN GEORGE
Associated Press Writer
GRUETLI-LAAGER, Tenn. (AP) — You won't find any Swiss chalets along Tennessee Highway 108. A Texaco station and some rustic cafes, maybe, but no Swiss chalets. Likewise, there's a lot more poison ivy than edelweiss in the rugged forests on Monteagle Mountain. And ask someone around these parts to yodel, and the only thing you'll get is a funny look.

But a few minutes chatting with folks like Jake Suter and Rose Marie Stampfli, and you realize the Swiss heritage still runs deep in this mountain village about an hour north of Chattanooga.

"Hard work and doing with what they had," says Suter of his ancestors, who fled economically depressed Europe in the 1880s for a new chance in America. "That's what set them apart."

Suter is president of the Gruetli Swiss Historical Society, a 13-year-old organization dedicated to preserving the memory of the Swiss pioneers who settled Grundy County following the Civil War.

After Indian tribes like the Cherokee and Seminoles, perhaps the South was most strongly influenced by settlers of English descent, followed by the Spanish and French.

But in this little piece of Tennessee's Cumberland Plateau, it was farmers and craftsmen from places named Bern and Geneva and Luzern who left their mark.

In 1867, the Swiss Emigration Society sent a representative to the United States to find a suitable place for settlers interested in moving to the New World.

At the encouragement of President Andrew Johnson, a native Tennessean, the representative visited Grundy County, and soon brochures advertising the area's land were being distributed in Switzerland.

On April 11, 1869, about 100 Swiss families attracted by the lure of 100-acre plots selling for 40 cents to 90 cents an acre founded the town of Gruetli, a Swiss word that means "new beginning."

"When they got here, they were a little disappointed because it wasn't any garden spot or cleared land, just woods," said Suter. "But some managed to stay."

Some of the settlers were wagon makers, carpenters, blacksmiths and woodworkers. Others got into logging or manufacturing, sometimes moving to Nashville or Chattanooga.

Perhaps the area's most noted Swiss business remains the Dutch Maid Bakery, which John and Louise Baggenstoss opened in nearby Tracy City in 1902. Three of their six sons still run the business, which boasts customers across the country and is the oldest family-owned bakery in Tennessee.

But most of the Swiss were simple farmers.

"They experimented a lot to see what would grow. Even hops. They tried fescue. It didn't do too well at that time," Suter said. "But red clover and orchard grass did real well. And potatoes and cabbage. And grapes for wine."

Not to mention Swiss cheese, which they made from excess milk from their cows, then sold to neighbors.

"They wasted nothing," said Suter. The Swiss brought their own games and music to the new land, often holding dances that drew people from all around.

"People from Tracy City would come out. They'd walk out. They'd walk for miles," said Ms. Stampfli, whose family moved to Gruetli in 1913.

In 1922, the neighboring town of Laager was founded, and the two were combined in 1940.

Suter, who still lives in the farmhouse in which he was born 67 years ago, remembers his father and others talking about the old times in Grundy County.

"I thought, 'That's crazy.' But I missed a lot," he said.

That's why Suter helped form the historical society in 1975, the same year the settlers' descendants began conducting annual bus tours of old Swiss homes and farms on the last Saturday in July.

This year's event, set for July 30, will be followed by a dinner at the town's Swiss Memorial School, to which participants will be encouraged to bring such dishes as sauerkraut and rushti, grated and fried potatoes mixed with onions and tomatoes.

The tour and dinner, which usually draws people of Swiss descent from across the country, is simply a way for Grundy County's residents to remember their past, Suter said.

Letter On Smoking Inspires Teen-Ager

DEAR ABBY: As an 18-year-old teen-ager, I would like to say something to all the kids in America, like myself, who smoke. When I first got into this rotten habit, I had no idea how uncontrollable the urge to smoke would get — and everyone out there who is a smoker knows exactly what I mean.

The main reason I am speaking out on this subject is because of a note my mother, who is a heavy smoker, left in my room when she discovered that I smoked. She didn't yell or lecture me. She just left a short note for me to think about.

Thanks to her, I realized that endangering your life is not only stupid, it is avoidable, and if there are other moms out there who cared as much as mine did, many teens would learn a valuable lesson. Here's Mom's letter:

"Dear Sue: As a person who is addicted to cigarettes, I would like to stop, but I am powerless to do so. Please, stop smoking before it's too late!"

"Your Dad will bury me, because smoking does shorten one's life."

"Did you ever take a good look at my face? I look much older than I should at my age, and I can thank cigarettes for this. I am not writing this as your mother, but as a cigarette smoker who knows that the habit starts with one cigarette at a time, then you get hooked and can't do anything about it. Love, Mom"

Abby, please print my mom's letter. Maybe someone else will realize that life is too precious to throw away, and quit smoking. — SUE DUFFY, PHILADELPHIA

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR SUE: Thank you for wanting to share your mom's letter. I'm sure many moms and their smoking teen-aged children will see themselves.

Sue, please tell your mother it's not too late — and there is something she can do about her smoking if she really wants to. The American Lung Association has an excellent stop-smoking program. Thomas Gill, a Kansas City, Mo., attorney who says he owes his life to this program, told me that a helpful thought to him was (and is) that "the urge to smoke will pass whether I smoke or not."

Interested readers: Check the white pages of your local telephone directory, or write to: American Lung Association, 1740 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019, for information about the group in your area. And please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THINKING IT OVER IN WEST PALM BEACH: Money isn't everything. Sometimes it's not even enough.

Abby's favorite recipes are going like hotcakes! For your copy, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Dying Man, Students Form Bond

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
DAVENPORT, Fla. (AP) — Deep in thought, the dying man gazed across the green fields behind his trailer house. The only sounds were those of summer birds and several puppies yapping in a nearby pen, ignoring the pair of black bears pacing in their steel enclosure.

Immobile in his wheelchair, Mike Aria took a deep breath causing the weakened muscles of his neck to bulge slightly. It took all the strength he could muster to talk.

He chose his words carefully because a single sentence will exhaust him. Aria is dying of ALS — amyotrophic lateral sclerosis or Lou Gehrig's Disease.

"Even if I feel completely down in the morning, when I see the kids I'm animated. A load has been lifted off me," he said in strained, slurred speech, a smile covering his face.

The children Aria spoke of are the 300 handicapped students at Roosevelt Vocation School in Lake Wales, 16 miles south of this Central Florida rural community.

The 7th- through 12th-graders, explained Principal Harold Maready, have learning disabilities, emotional problems, hearing impairment or are educable mentally handicapped.

What began as a student Christmas project in 1985 to help the needy, said Maready, became a bond between these afflicted children and Aria, a former animal trainer.

When they learned that Aria, paralyzed from the neck down, is wife, Janice, and their 8-year-old daughter Amber existed on $575-a-month Social Security benefits, and that their newfound friend had few amenities for the remaining years of his life, they made a decision.

"After that Christmas, it was the kids' decision to keep it going," recalled Maready. "They turned it into an adoption."

Through cake and candy sales, car washes, auctions and fund-raising, the handicapped children have provided Aria with a motorized wheelchair and an electric page-turner to help him read.

Learning of Aria's love for nature, they came in groups and painstakingly laid pebble trails for his wheelchair through 10 acres of greenery owned by his in-laws. They also bought lumber and built a ramp so he could manipulate his wheelchair in and out of the raised trailer house.

Last year, the children built a roomy outside bathroom and shower, making it easier for his wife to bathe him.

"He's one of my friends," observed Donna Ellzey, 18, who visited Aria during vacation.

"I feel I've done something real good for somebody when I help him," explained the senior from Bartow.

Ellzey maintains a newsletter at school to keep Roosevelt students informed of Aria's activities.

"He gives us so much in return by letting these kids be part of his life," said Maready. "Mike teaches the kids that they have something to give the world."

Mike, once a strapping 210-pound college linebacker, fell in love with Janice when they were teen-agers in New Jersey — she from Long Branch, he from Jersey City.

In her senior year at New York University, Janice took an independent study course at Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus's clown school in Venice, Fla. She soon became a featured performer.

"I had no intention of joining the circus," she said.

After college, Mike joined Janice and learned to handle wild animals including bears, elephants, leopards and lions.

They were married in 1974. In 1978, joined by Janice's schoolteacher brother, Gil Gillespie, they formed their own act using North American black bears and toured the world.

In 1983, Aria began to experience an occasional slurring of speech. Then, the strength in his hands deteriorated.

"That December, they told us Mike has a motor neuron disease causing the muscles to atrophy," said his wife. "There's no known cause or cure."

The following year, paralysis consumed Aria's body and their circus careers came to an end. With two favorite bears and a number of dogs from their act, they moved here. Gillespie lives in a small trailer in back, works in the area as a stage artist and helps support the Aria family.

Because Aria needs constant care, his wife is always nearby to feed, clothe, bathe and dress him. To visitors, they appear as young lovers.

"We were so right to run away and join the circus," reflects Janice. "It was a romantic kind of thing to do."

Amber spends much time with her father, who studied art and sculpture in college. It was she who convinced him to begin painting a couple years ago.

Watching him use a pencil held in his mouth to change television stations, she asked, "If you can do that, why not try painting?"

As a result, he's painted two calendars which provide a little extra income.

ALS is usually terminal after five years and, at 38, Aria accepts the end is near.

"Right now, I'm living on borrowed time," said Aria, "but I have my wife, daughter, brother-in-law and the kids."

"Those children have been supportive. They reinforce me. They give me more things to be thankful for."

He paused to find new energy for a personal observation.

"Life threw me a curve ball. I think I ought to stand in the batter's box and try to hit it."

After Grocery Store Trip, It's Time To Buy Food

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I hate to go grocery shopping with my husband. It's hard to explain. He doesn't really say anything. He just stands around watching like a con-science waiting for me to do something dumb. Sometimes he looks at me the same way the kids do when I'm watching a movie on television — the moment they enter the room, both of the principals in the movie take off their clothes and hit the sheets. It's not a look of disappointment; it's more like shock.

I throw a box of cookies into the cart, and his eyes widen as he says, "Did you mean to buy 13 ounces for the same price as a pound of the same cookies?"

Or he'll pick a quart of milk out of my cart, study it and say, "Is it important that the expiration date was two days ago or do you have a recipe calling for sour milk?"

But what really frosts me is, when on the way to the car to unload the cart, all I have to say is, "I don't have anything for dinner. Let's stop and get a pizza," and he's all over me.

"Are you saying that I just wrote a check for $123 for two carts of groceries and you have nothing to cook!"

"Don't start," I say. "I don't have time to explain it to you."

What I don't have time to explain is the pressure put on women to buy non-edibles over food. The old-time general store was nothing compared to today's temptations. After I've pushed my cart through the pet boutique, the florist, small appliances, greeting cards, cutlery, books and magazines, lightbulb center, cleaning supplies, paper products, pantyhose carousel, records and tapes, toys, beer mugs, ceiling fans, encyclopedias, candles, stationery and tennis shoes, there's no money or space in my cart for food.

Stopping off at a fast-food store on the way home from the grocery store has become such a familiar scene, I feel we've lived it before. I know in another life in the 1800s, the Bombecks drove a buckboard into a general store 60 miles from their spread.

As we load up the wagon, I smile and say, "Couldn't we stop off at Mabel's Cafe for chicken and dumplings before heading back to our empty, lonely, meaningless existence?"

"We can eat when we get home," he says. "We got a whole wagon full of food."

"Not unless you're going to eat a hundred pounds of seed, oil for the lamps, lye for the soap, 15 yards of gingham, 50 pounds of flour and a new saddle. I told you about general stores. You never come out with anything to eat."

"So, where do you have to go in this town to get food?" he snaps.

"I told you. Drop by Mabel's and we'll get chicken and dumplings. Hey, if it makes you feel better, we'll get 'em to go."

Eiland's Big Night Becomes Righetti's Long Nightmare

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

Dave Eiland's first game in the majors was one to remember. Dave Righetti's 393rd was one to forget.

Eiland, called up from the minor leagues to replace injured New York starter Ron Guidry, allowed the Milwaukee Brewers just three hits in seven innings Wednesday night and had a 5-1 lead before leaving with leg cramps.

Righetti, who leads the Yankees with 16 saves, was pounded for five runs on five hits in the eighth as Milwaukee came back to win 6-5.

"I've seen this before here," said Righetti, 3-2. "The craziest things seem to happen in this park (Milwaukee County Stadium).

Singles by B.J. Surhoff, Dale Sveum and Paul Molitor loaded the bases in the eighth. Righetti struck out Jim Gantner, but Robin Yount doubled home two runs and Greg Brock followed with a two-run single to tie the game.

"I let them get the leadoff hitter on and everything seemed to snowball after that. I didn't feel any different. There's no excuse for what happened."

Cecilio Guante replaced Righetti and gave up an RBI double to Rob Deer, who had struck out twice and hit into a double play in his previous at-bats.

"I was sitting there thinking, 'Forget everything that happened the last couple of nights and try to do something before they boo you out of the park,'" Deer said.

Elsewhere, it was Seattle 8, California 7; Baltimore 8, Cleveland 3; Boston 5, Texas 4; Minnesota 8, Toronto 3; Oakland 4, Chicago 3 in 11 innings; and Kansas City 2, Detroit 1.

The Yankees are 1½ games behind Boston and Detroit, who are tied for first in the American League East.

After Paul Molitor led off the first with his seventh homer, Eiland allowed just two singles over the next six innings. The Yankees' Rickey Henderson reached safely in the first for the 15th consecutive game as New York took a quick 2-0 lead.

Jack Clark hit his 20th homer in the third and Ken Phelps connected for his 15th in the eighth.

"He (Eiland) did his job. He had a 5-1 lead," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said.

Red Sox 5, Rangers 4

Rookie Jody Reed singled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning as Boston tied an American League record by winning its 22nd consecutive game at home.

The victory also broke Boston's own team record for the longest winning streak at home, set in 1949. Only two other major league clubs have longer home winning streaks in this century. The 1916 New York Giants won 26 in a row at home and the 1978 Pittsburgh Pirates won 24 straight.

Texas had comeback for a 4-3 lead in the seventh when Pete Incaviglia singled across the tie-breaking run after a two-run throwing error by relief pitcher Bob Stanley.

The Red Sox tied the score in their half of the seventh Texas starter Bobby Witt, 3-7.

Dennis Lamp, 6-3, the fourth Boston pitcher, worked 1 1-3 innings. Lee Smith worked a perfect ninth to earn his 18th save.

Mariners 8, Angels 7

Steve Balboni had five RBI, including a game-winning home run in the ninth inning, as the Seattle snapped the Angels' seven-game winning streak.

California had also won 11 in a row on the road, a club record.

Balboni hit his 15th home run with one out in the ninth inning off reliever Brian Harvey, 4-4. He also had a two-run double in the first and a two-run single in the second.

Mike Schooler, 3-4, the third Seattle pitcher, worked out of bases-loaded jams in the eighth and ninth innings.

California rallied from a 7-2 deficit with the help of a pair of two-run homers by Jack Howell.

Orioles 8, Indians 3

Jeff Ballard survived a shaky start to snap a personal five-game losing streak and Baltimore back him with three home runs.

Ballard, 5-9, allowed three runs in the first two innings but shut out the Indians over the next five. Ballard scattered seven hits in seven innings, walked one and did not strike out a batter. Tom Niedenfuer closed.

Baltimore has 52 homers in its last 39 games. Larry Sheets led off the bottom of the second inning against Rick Rodriguez, 1-2, with his seventh homer. Terry Kennedy hit his second homer in the third and Eddie Murray got his 19th, a two-run shot, in the fourth.

The Orioles batted around in the second and scored four runs.

Twins 8, Blue Jays 3

Steve Lombardozzi and Gary Gaetti each went 4-for-5 and Toronto left fielder George Bell committed his 14th and 15th errors of the season to set a club record as Minnesota won its 29th game on the road, equaling last season's total.

Reliever Keith Atherton, 6-5, allowed three hits in three innings. Jeff Reardon worked two innings to earn his 27th save. Juan Berenguer, replacing the injured Bert Blyleven, lasted four innings in his first start since June 27, 1987.

The Twins had a season-high 16 hits. It was Lombardozzi's first major-league four-hit game.

Minnesota scored three times off Jeff Musselman, 3-1, in the first. Fred McGriff drove in all three Toronto runs with his 26th homer in the fourth.

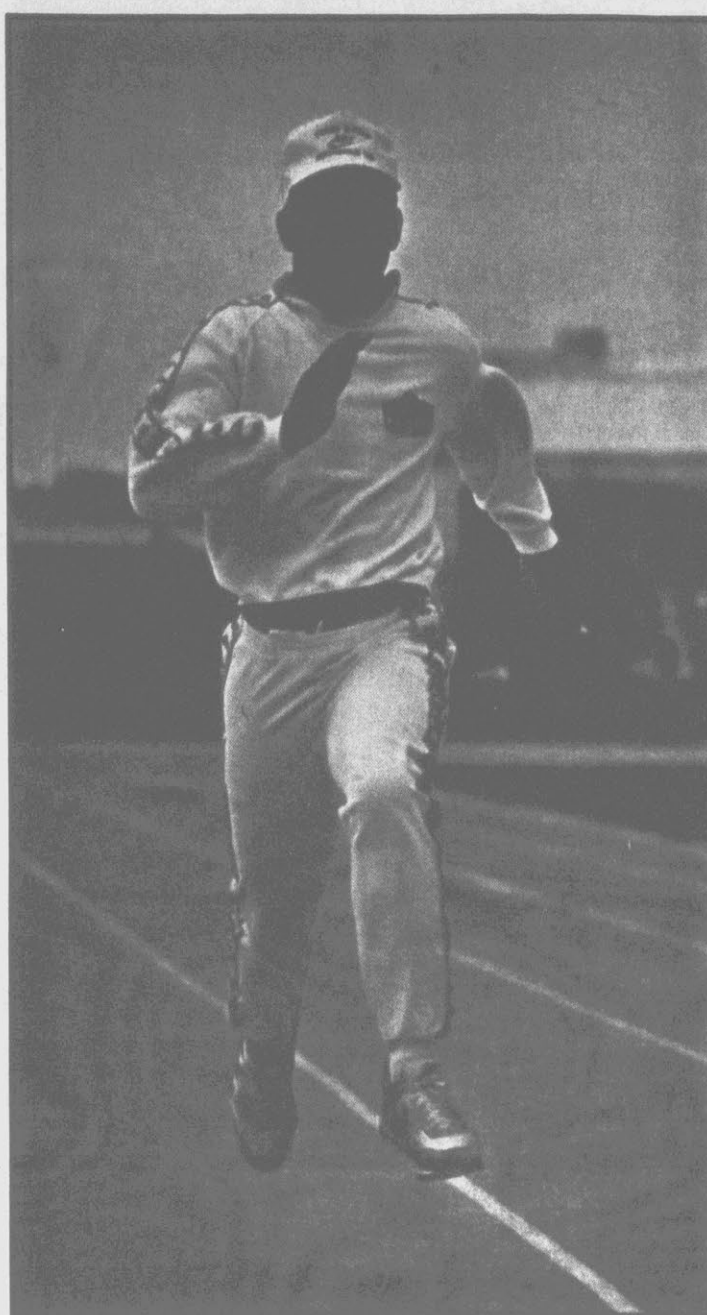

Athletics 4, White Sox 3

Stan Javier hit an RBI single with two outs in the top of the 11th inning as Oakland defeated Chicago.

With one out in the 11th, Mark McGwire singled to left against relief ace Bobby Thigpen, 5-6, and went to third on a single to right by Ron Hassey. After Carney Lansford lined to second, Javier singled sharply to right field.

Gene Nelson, 6-3, the third Oakland pitcher, worked two innings. Dennis Eckersley pitched the 11th, striking out two, to earn his major-league leading 31st save.

Olympic Hopeful

East Carolina sprinter Lee McNeill works out at the Pirate track as he prepares for four international meets that will decide whether he will make the U.S. Olympic team's 4x100-meter relay. McNeill leaves Friday for a meet in Europe. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

EC's Lee McNeill Thinking Gold In Final Trials

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina sprinter Lee McNeill has had Olympic gold on his mind for quite a while, but now he is on the threshold of his dream as he attempts to win a spot on the United States 4x100 meter Olympic relay team.

McNeill placed seventh in the finals of the 100 meters at the United States Olympic Track and Field Trials in late July to qualify for the Olympic team. The top eight sprinters from the trials are chosen for the team, with six of those going on to Seoul for the competition.

The main competition for McNeill will come from Joe DeLoach, who will also be running the 200 meters at the Olympics. DeLoach is a student at the University of Houston and also trains with Carl Lewis, representing the Santa Monica Track Club.

"I think I got a better chance than anybody else because I think I've got a better second leg than anybody I'll be competing against," McNeill said. "I have to show them I can run the best second leg of anybody out there."

"I think I got more experience running second (leg) than him. I've been on just about every (4x100 relay) team there is. He's a good 100 man and 200 man, but I think I have more experience than him in handling the baton and handing it off."

McNeill won three gold medals in international track competition last summer, starting with the United States Olympic Festival in Durham, followed by the Pan American games in Indianapolis and the World University Games in Rome.

In the final race, McNeill ran a strong second leg to help the U.S. team, which also included Lee McRae, Harvey Glance and Lewis, to victory over the Soviets.

McNeill, who was a three-time All-American during his career at ECU, appears to have overcome a senior year that was plagued by weather and injury problems with his strong performance at the trials, which included a third-place finish in the semi-finals of the 100 meters as Lewis and Smith just beat him out in the stretch.

"It was a great race, but the time he (Lewis) passed me it just knocked me out," he said. "I said I was going to just run my race and that's when Calvin Smith got me."

"In the finals, I tried to run their race and I was just so tired. I think I learned a lot. You can't make a mistake in a final like that. You have to get everything right. Calvin told me just to give it all I got, but my hamstring started hurting the last ten meters and there was no use in pulling it."

The hopefuls will run four meets, with each running in two relays. The other legs will probably be run by Lewis, Dennis Mitchell and Smith.

McNeill leaves Friday and his first meet is Aug. 17 in Zurich, Switzerland, followed by meets in Cologne, UCLA and Japan.

For now, McNeill is hoping that he can concentrate solely on the

Broncos Rally Past Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Ken Karcher threw for one touchdown and Ken Bell ran for another late in the game to cap a 33-point second half comeback as the Denver Broncos beat the mistake-prone Los Angeles Rams 40-31 in an NFL exhibition game Wednesday night.

The Broncos capitalized on two fumble recoveries deep in Los Angeles territory as they rallied from a 31-27 deficit with 6:21 remaining.

Karcher's 4-yard TD pass to rookie Pat Kelly with 4:11 left came after Brad Humphreys recovered a fumble by Los Angeles' Keith Jones at the Rams' 15-yard line.

Bell then gave Denver a 9-point edge on a 1-yard run after Steve Bryan recovered a fumble by Ram quarterback Steve Dils at the Los Angeles 12-yard line 18 seconds later.

The victory came in the preseason opener for the defending AFC champion Broncos, while the Rams dropped to 0-2.

The Rams fumbled seven times, losing four, and also were hurt by numerous penalties.

Denver's Tony Dorsett, who ranks fourth on the all-time NFL career rushing list and was acquired from the Dallas Cowboys during the off-season, gained 27 yards on 10 carries and caught two passes for six yards in his Broncos' debut.

Rams' newcomer Gaston Green, the former UCLA player who was the 14th player taken in the latest NFL draft, carried 13 times for 23 yards in his first pro appearance.

Both teams' backup quarterbacks threw a pair of touchdown passes in the second half. Denver's Gary Kubiak connected on scoring throws of 5 yards to Clarence Kay and 9 yards to Vance Johnson. Los Angeles' Dils threw scoring passes of 3 yards each to Jon Embree and Buford McGee.

Rich Karlis kicked a 22-yard field goal during the second-half surge by the Broncos, who trailed 17-7 at halftime, and David Treadwell added a 39-yarder for Denver.

Los Angeles' first-half scoring came on a 9-yard run by Charles White, a 27-yard pass from Jim Everett to Henry Ellard and a 23-yard field goal by Mike Lansford.

A 2-yard run by Warren Marshall provided Denver its only scoring in the opening half.

Everett played the entire first half for the Rams, completing 16 of 24 throws for 168 yards. Denver starter John Elway left after the first quarter, having completed 4 of 5 for 19 yards.

Kubiak went 10 of 15 for 75 yards, and Karcher was 5 of 7 for 48. Dils completed 9 of 13 for 75 yards for the Rams.

In a roster move Wednesday, Denver's Dan Rensberg is back with his old team, in this case the Denver Broncos, where he's the third-string right tackle.

Rensberg was traded to Philadelphia last Friday, but failed his physical because he had sprained an ankle the day before the trade.

"A team isn't trading for a player to come in and rehab at their place," said Rensberg, who said he thought his chances were good in Philadelphia, which has only four offensive tackles in camp.

Denver Coach Dan Reeves, meanwhile, conceded that he had made the deal because he thought Rensberg would have a hard time making his team.

"If I have somebody I think isn't going to make the team because of the numbers situation, then I'll try to find a place for him," Reeves said.

The NFL exhibition season officially opened last Saturday when Cincinnati beat the Los Angeles Rams 14-7 in the annual Hall of Fame Game in Canton, Ohio. Miami defeated San Francisco 27-21 in the "American Bowl" in London last Sunday.

Eason Sparks Snow Hill Win

KERNERSVILLE — Tommy Eason had two hits, including a three-run homer in the fourth inning, to help Snow Hill take a 9-4 win over Kernersville in the opening game of the State American Legion baseball finals Wednesday night.

Snow Hill overcame an early 1-0 deficit when Walt McKeel hit a solo homer that tied the game at 1-1 in the top of the second.

In the third, Snow Hill took the lead for good when George Burnette led off with a base hit. T.J. Johnson followed with a single. Burnette stole third and scored off a sacrifice fly.

Snow Hill took control in the fourth. A drag bunt by Anthony Jones was mishandled and he stole second. McKeel doubled in Jones. Todd Mewborn drew a walk. Burnette singled in McKeel. Eason then cleared the bases with a three-run homer.

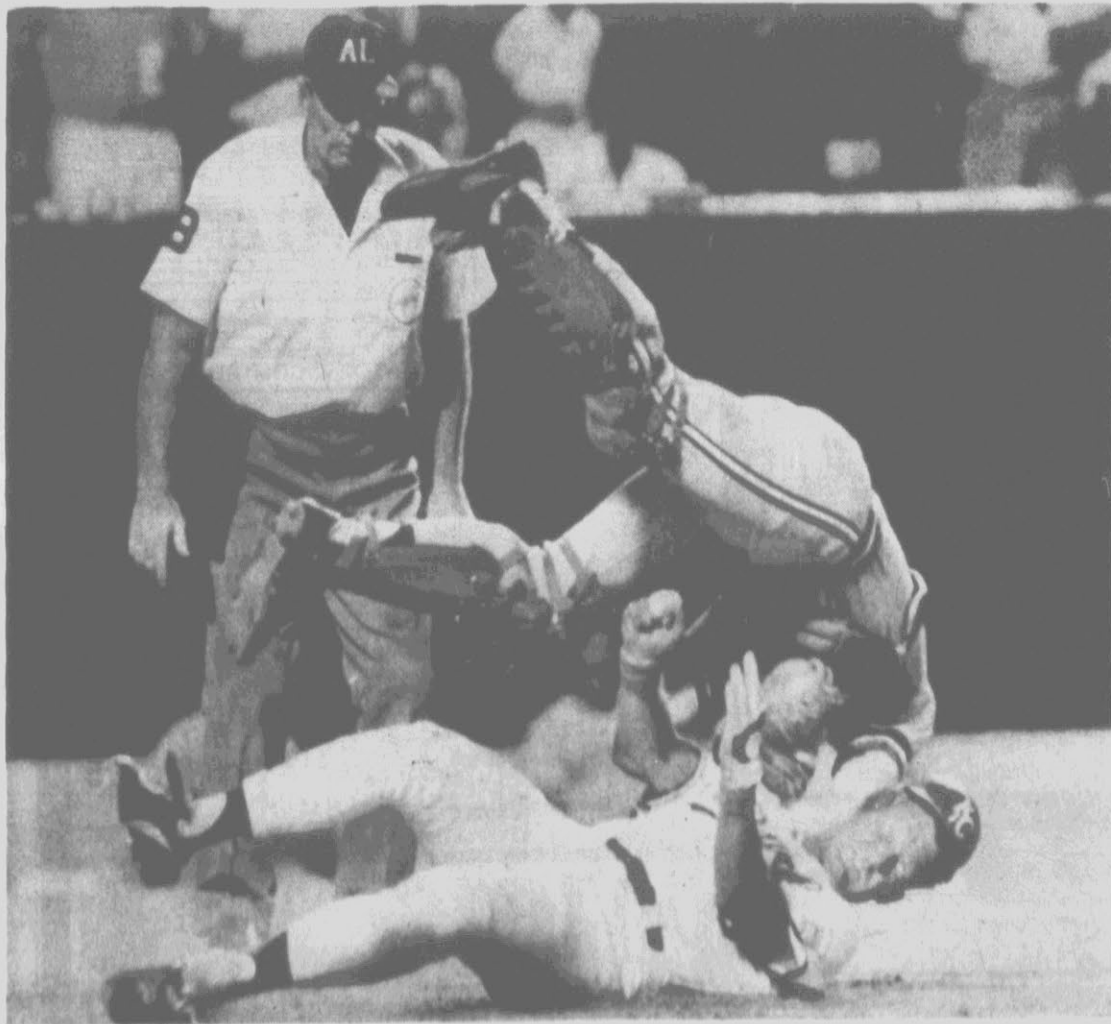

In the ninth, Snow Hill added two runs as Eason singled to open the inning. Shay Beaman doubled. Eason scored off a ground out by Chris West. Beaman went to third and scored off a sacrifice fly by Jones.

Burnette, Johnson, McKeel, Mewborn and Eason had two hits apiece.

Kernersville was led by Shane Ring, Johnny Slate and Chad Stampert with two hits apiece.

The teams return to action tonight in the second game of their best-of-seven series also at Kernersville. They move to Snow Hill on Friday for the next three games, if needed.

Coca-Cola Will Continue To Sponsor Race

CONCORD (AP) — The longest race on the NASCAR Winston Cup circuit — Charlotte Motor Speedway's Coca-Cola 600 — will continue to be sponsored by Coca-Cola for at least five more years.

The agreement between the speedway and Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Consolidated of Charlotte will extend through the 1993 Coca-Cola 600.

Coca-Cola became the first corporate sponsor of the World 600 in May 1985, when the company sponsored Charlotte Motor Speedway's Coca-Cola World 600. The company assumed sole title sponsorship in 1986 and will continue to hold that position for the next five years.

Coca-Cola's involvement with the speedway began in 1980 when Coke's Mello Yello brand soft drink sponsored the spring Grand National races through the 1984 race season.

"By the time this new sponsorship agreement matures, Coca-Cola and Charlotte Motor Speedway will have been together 13 years," said Jim Duncan, director of sales for the speedway. "That period of time is an eternity in the competitive world of sports marketing."

Darrell Waltrip won the 1988 Coca-Cola 600 last May when he crossed the finish line ahead of Rusty Wallace.

Sheehan Looking Forward To Bradley

HIGH POINT (AP) — With two victories at the course under her belt and a vacation on the horizon, Patty Sheehan says she is looking forward to returning to the course, after skipping the stop on the tour the last two years.

Sheehan, 31, who has won $1.5 million on the LPGA tour in eight years, won the Henredon Classic in 1983 and 1984. This year the $400,000 tournament has been renamed the Pat Bradley International, and it has adopted the Stableford scoring system.

"This year I think I've played a little bit more in the last two months, but I know I'm going to reward myself in the next couple of weeks by getting a couple of weeks off," she said Wednesday. "And I certainly wanted to try out this new format."

The new format gives players points for scores better than par, and subtracts points for above-par holes.

Sheehan, of Middlebury, Vt., hinted that a big payoff also may have lured her back to North Carolina. While winning $27,000 each for her two earlier wins at Willow Creek, the champion on Sunday gets a payoff of at least $62,500. She also feels comfortable at Willow Creek.

"When I came here in 1982 ... I felt very much at home," she said. "People were real nice to me. Usually when I feel that way, I play well in a tournament."

Sheehan talked more about the chances of others winning the four-day tournament than herself, but not many golfers have been as hot recently.

She has finished second in her last two tournaments — the Boston Five Classic and the U.S. Women's Open — and is rested after skipping last week's Greater Washington Open.

"The pressure is off, all the majors are gone," Sheehan said. "I'm going to just sit back and enjoy playing a fun golf course."

The new-look tournament by the Ladies Professional Golf Association is a welcome change, Sheehan said.

"I like the fact that the LPGA has a tournament that is different from all the rest," said Sheehan, who has 10 top 10 finishes this season. "I said in the past that I think we need to have some imagination out here and some new ideas."

Sloan Aids Investigation Into Florida Drugs

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — University of Florida basketball coach Norm Sloan has provided a federal grand jury with 90 minutes of "helpful" testimony in the government's widening investigation into drug usage in Central Florida that may have included some Gator athletes.

"Everything went fine, just fine," said Gainesville attorney Huntley Johnson, who accompanied Sloan.

"On behalf of Coach Sloan, we appreciate the opportunity to come up and talk to the grand jury," Johnson said. "We hope we've been helpful, and we think we've been helpful, and out of deference to the investigation, we have nothing further to say at this time."

The grand jury, which will determine whether the government has enough evidence to take the case to trial. Witnesses are prohibited by law from discussing their testimony to a grand jury.

Sloan, who led North Carolina State to a national championship in 1974, seemed impassive after his testimony, which he volunteered to give.

Johnson said Sloan requested the opportunity to appear after a 90-minute meeting Monday with DEA agents.

The attorney said Sloan's appearance signalled an "ongoing attempt by the University of Florida basketball program, specifically by coach Sloan himself, to cooperate 100 percent with this investigation."

The U.S. Attorney's Office in Tallahassee and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration have been conducting a drug-related investigation in connection with drug use and sales in Gainesville.

Three former players, Vernon Maxwell, Patrick Aaron and Kenny McClary, were subpoenaed and testified before the grand jury last month.

University of Florida President Marshall Criser called for an internal investigation last week after receiving information from federal authorities about possible drug use by former and current athletes and other students.

Tracy Austin Ready To Make Comeback

SAN DIEGO (AP) — As she embarks on her comeback in professional tennis after a four-year absence, Tracy Austin realizes the path may not be as smooth as the original one that led to the No. 1 ranking in the world at age 17.

In her return Wednesday night, Austin teamed with Robin White in a two-set loss to the top-seeded doubles team in the $100,000 Virginia Slims of San Diego tournament. Austin, 25, saw good results in her play, while admitting the loss reinforced her perspective about playing on the women's tour again.

"I know to get back, it takes a long time," said Austin, who had been sidelined by recurring back and neck injuries. "I've talked to other athletes, and they've told me how important it is to have patience."

The win went to Betsy Nagelsen and Dinky Van Rensburg, 7-6, 6-1, before a sellout crowd approaching 2,000 fans.

Austin plans to play doubles next week in the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles, possibly teaming with Mary Joe Fernandez, and then enter mixed doubles at the U.S. Open with Ken Flach as her partner.

Also on her agenda is a return to singles, but she says the timing isn't certain.

"I definitely want to play," Austin. "But before I play singles in a tournament, I want to play some exhibitions."

Austin finalized plans to team with White for the first time about two weeks ago, but the seeds of her return developed earlier this summer.

"My body finally healed," she said. "That's probably the main factor. I was able to practice longer..."

"Then it all came to me at Wimbledon when I was doing TV and sitting with you guys (in the media), asking questions. I had a strong desire to play."

Wednesday night's match was her first since February 1984. She had been forced by her injuries to stop playing regularly on the women's tour during July of the previous year.

"I always had it in my mind (to return)," Austin said. "There wasn't one day that I didn't think I would come back."

Austin and White fell to a 1-3 deficit at the outset of the first set, but improved their play to even the score at 4-4 and eventually force a tiebreaker on a service break.

After having a set points in the tiebreaker, though, they lost three straight points to drop the set. Still, Austin showed instances of her past form.

"I'm very excited," she said. "... I wasn't nervous, and I enjoyed myself. I felt I concentrated well. Doubles is a little different from singles, but the last part that comes is concentration."

Austin became the youngest player ever to win the U.S. Open when she topped Chris Evert, 6-4, 6-3, in 1979 at the age of 16 years, nine months.

In 1980, she achieved the No. 1 ranking for more than three months, breaking a five-year hold by either Evert or Martina Navratilova.

Austin won her second U.S. Open championship in 1981.

Brawls Highlight Montreal's Win

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Although he didn't realize it at the time, Montreal's Hubie Brooks was taking the advice Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland had offered his Pirates for dealing with beanballs.

"I've told my players that if they believe they're being thrown at, either go to first base or the mound..." Leyland said in discussing a visit Brooks paid Pittsburgh pitcher John Smiley after being hit in the back. "If Hubie Brooks believed he was being thrown at, he did what he should have done."

That he did, setting off the first of two bench-clearing incidents in the third inning of Montreal's 6-4 victory Wednesday night over the Pirates.

"He hit me in the back because one guy (Andres Galarrraga) hit a home run," Brooks said. "I don't like being anybody's target. I didn't hit the home run."

After Galarrraga gave the Expos a 4-2 lead with a two-run homer, Smiley, 9-8, hit Brooks in the back with the next pitch. Smiley stood his ground as Brooks charged the mound and landed two punches. Both benches emptied.

The fight ended quickly. But after Smiley and Brooks were ejected, another incident broke out in the runway between the two dugouts.

"Galarrraga hits a tape-measure home run, he (Smiley) hits Hubie Brooks in the back and Hubie doesn't like being target practice, so he goes out there," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said.

Rodgers downplayed the second incident, in which no punches were thrown.

"Smiley and Hubie both went to their clubhouses," Rodgers said. "The other guys went out there to make sure they found their way."

Brooks said he understands the brushback pitch, but felt Smiley was doing more than moving him away from home plate.

"I don't mind anybody pitching me up and in, but he threw the ball as hard as he could right at me," Brooks said. "I've got to stand up for myself." Elsewhere, it was Chicago 3, New York 1; Cincinnati 7, Los Angeles 4 in 11 innings; Houston 3, San Francisco 2; St. Louis 4, Philadelphia 2; and Atlanta 4, San Diego 2.

Galarrraga followed a third-inning double by Rex Hudler with his 22nd homer of the season and fourth this year in Pittsburgh. Smiley hit Brooks with his next pitch.

Pascual Perez, 8-5, allowed five hits over seven innings for the victory. Among those hits was Andy Van Slyke's 18th homer.

Montreal scored in the first when Hudler singled, stole second and third and scored on Brooks' sacrifice fly. The Pirates took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the inning on Glenn Wilson's two-run single.

Montreal rookie Nelson Santovenia tied it in the second with his fourth homer.

Hudler, 4-for-10 in the series with three extra base hits and four runs scored, was thrown out stealing for the first time this season. He was 19-19 until thrown out at second base by rookie catcher Tom Prince.

Tim Burke got the final four outs for his 10th save.

Reds 7, Dodgers 4

Jeff Reed wasn't apologizing for an opposite-field bloop single that broke a 4-4 tie in the 11th inning.

"In that situation all I wanted to do was hit a fly ball or put the ball in play somewhere," he said.

Paul O'Neill, whose run-scoring double in the eighth off reliever Jay Howell tied the game, began the winning rally on an error by reliever Alejandro Pena, who missed first base after taking a throw from Pedro Guerrero.

O'Neill went to third on a single by Ken Griffey and came home on Reed's soft hit over the drawn-in infield. Ron Oester, who drove in three runs, and Herm Wijnham added run-scoring singles.

The Dodgers got a two-run homer from Kirk Gibson, his 20th and seventh in the first inning this season, and a solo shot from Guerrero.

Eric Davis hit his 19th homer for Cincinnati, which escaped defeat when third baseman Chris Sabo made a sprawling stop of Dave Anderson's two-out grounder in the ninth inning and forced Mickey Hatcher at third.

Cubs 3, Mets 1

Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe didn't mind losing his shutout in the ninth inning.

"I don't care if I give up a lot of hits or a lot of runs," he said. "The only thing is to win."

Sutcliffe, 9-9, lost his shutout on a two-out RBI single by pinch-hitter Mookie Wilson.

Sutcliffe, who pitched his seventh complete game, had lost four of his last five starts. In his nine defeats, the Cubs scored only 12 runs.

Astros 3, Giants 2

San Francisco reliever Scott Garrels wanted to pitch "hard, down and away." But his slider bounced near home plate and carried into the grandstand, enabling Houston's Billy Hatcher to score from third base with two out in the ninth inning as the Astros broke their second-place tie with the Giants.

"It was just a bounce in our favor," Astros Manager Hal Lanier said after his club won for the 17th time in 23 games.

The bases were loaded and Garrels, 3-6, had an 0-2 count on pinch-hitter Glenn Davis when he threw the wild pitch.

Cardinals 4, Phillies 2

Tom Brunansky, mired in a 2-for-32 slump, could hardly be blamed for his confusion.

"I should have had the double ... but I was just amazed I got the hit," Brunansky said of a single, one of two he had in addition to his 15th homer and a triple. "I'd been making so many right turns (after outs) I didn't know to turn left."

Brunansky enjoyed his first fourth-hit game since May 27, 1986, and Bob Forsch won for the first time since May 21 as St. Louis beat Philadelphia.

Braves 4, Padres 2

Now that Atlanta has broken an eight-game winning streak, Manager Russ Nixon is heading home for a celebration.

"That off day tomorrow is going to feel so good," he said. "I'm going to get on my tractor and mow forever."

Andres Thomas broke a 1-1 tie with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, and Zane Smith, 5-8, pitched a six-hitter.

Tar Heelers Top King In Tourney

FAYETTEVILLE — Greenville's Tar Heel All-Star Little League team stayed alive in the consolation bracket of the state tournament with a 17-9 win over King Wednesday.

After a 3-3 tie in the first, Greenville scored 10 runs in the fourth, taking advantage of six hits and four walks, to make it 13-3. J.P. Devoe keyed the inning with a three-run homer. Jon Gavigan added a two-run double for the Tar Heel team.

Greenville added two more runs in both the fifth and sixth innings. In the sixth, Allen Columbo had a two-run double to complete the Greenville scoring.

Nicky Phillips and Wilbur Levett combined on a eight-hitter, but gave up only one walk while striking out six.

Devoe and Greg Pearsall had three hits apiece for Greenville, while Gavigan, Levett and Jason Tetterton had two hits each.

Greenville returns to action today against at 6 p.m. against Sylva, a team the Tar Heels defeated Monday, 11-2, in the opening game of the double-elimination tournament.

The A's tied it in the top of the eighth when then third baseman Steve Lyons booted Dave Henderson's grounder for an error, allowing Walt Weiss to score.

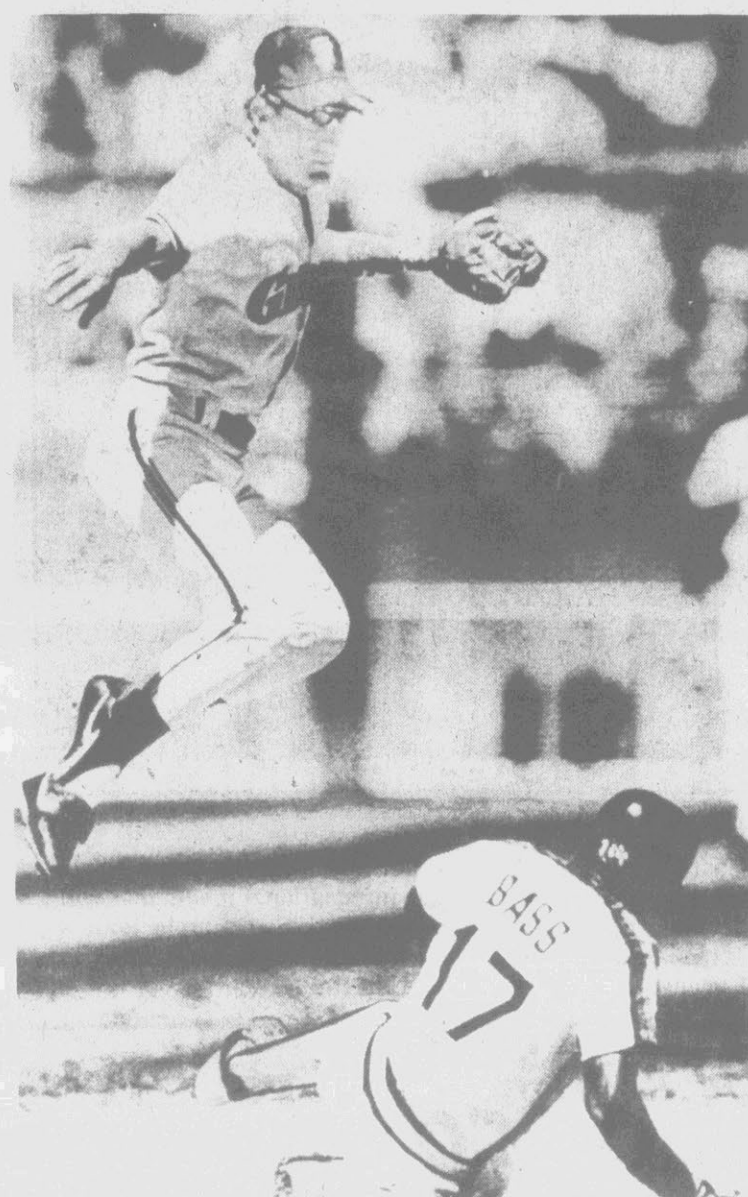

Royals 2, Tigers 1

Bret Saberhagen pitched a four-hitter and Pat Tabler hit a tie-breaking single in the sixth as Detroit's Frank Tanana fell to 0-12 at Royals Stadium.

Saberhagen, 12-10, got his first complete-game victory in exactly two months. He struck out six and walked one. In his 12 losses at Kansas City, Tanana, 12-7, has been supported by a total of 18 runs and seen his team shut out four times.

Willie Wilson and Kurt Stillwell singled leading off the game and one out later the Royals took a 1-0 lead on George Brett's RBI single.

Detroit tied it in the fifth, but the Royals went ahead in the sixth despite managing just one run on three singles and two walks.

Pat Bradley Event To Use Stableford Scoring System

HIGH POINT (AP) — The Stableford scoring system will be used for the first time on the LPGA tour today, when the first round of the $400,000 Pat Bradley International golf tournament gets underway.

"I think it gives spectators something different to look at," said Patty Sheehan, who has twice won the tournament, previously known as the Henredon Classic, at the par-72, 6,260-yard Willow Creek Golf Club.

The system rewards aggressive play by awarding points for scores below par and subtracting points for scores over par. A par is counted as zero, while a double eagle is worth eight points, an eagle five and a birdie three. A bogey costs golfers one point, while a double bogey costs three points, the most a player can lose.

"It will test their mathematical abilities after they have been out of school for 30 years," Sheehan said. "It's fun to do different things ... I don't see any shortcomings. With only one week like this, I don't think you can be too critical."

The golfer for whom the four-day tournament is named for agrees with Sheehan.

"I think it's going to be exciting," said 37-year-old Pat Bradley. "The players have already seen 22 events this year with the 72-hole format. With this system, as the saying goes, no guts — no glory."

Today's field will consist of 144 golfers, with the group being cut in half each day. A final field of 18 will play for the top prize of $62,500.

"The format I'm really not sure about yet," said Nancy Lopez, who has won three times this year and who won at Willow Creek in 1985. "I know I can be aggressive because of it and my caddy's real excited about it. He thinks we'll do real well."

"The only thing that bothers me is I want to be here Sunday," Lopez added. "Maybe with the points system you can still be close, but be out of the tournament."

But Sheehan lists Lopez as one of the gamblers and long-hitters who could walk away with the top prize. Sheehan also mentioned Val Skinner, leading money winner Sherri Turner, and Joan Joyce. Neither Skinner nor Joyce have won this year.

Sheehan, who has finished second in her last two tournaments, said she won't change her plodding style.

"I'm hoping to go out and play as well as I've been playing last month," she said. "I'm going to try not to alter my game too much, but this format lends itself to really changing the way you think on the golf course."

"I think it's going to be totally foreign to them to be as aggressive as they need to be to pile up the points," Sheehan said.

The tournament, one of the richest on the LPGA tour, will be televised for two hours each day by ESPN. And the new scoring format could pose a problem for those telecasts.

Since all players begin each day with no points, it is possible that a player in the first group on Sunday could win the tournament. And with only two hours of coverage, ESPN viewers may never see the winner.

"It's going to be the luck of the draw," technical director Larry Kristiansen said.

task before him and avoid any distractions.

"1986 is what got me because I missed my plane going to TAC and then I didn't run all summer," he said. "I had problems with weight this year. I was about 160-170. Now I'm back to 143 and I'm glad about that. I took a chance playing basketball in the gym. It seemed like I couldn't lose it outside."

McNeill spent most of indoor season and then a good deal of the outdoor season at that weight, but he found the extra weight affected him.

"I just couldn't get it going," he said. "It took about 50-60 meters when I'd get rolling."

"Now my start is looking a whole lot better, except for that final (at the trials). It feels pretty good but now I'm just worrying about making the team."

Peter Falk Set For Return Of Rumpled TV 'Columbo'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the realm of television programming there is no such thing as a sure thing, but if there was one it would probably be "Columbo."

After a decade off the air, ABC is bringing back Peter Falk as the beloved, rumpled detective in a series of movies. Like other fall shows, its debut has been delayed by the writers' strike.

Falk told a meeting of television critics that, far from balking at a return to the small screen as Columbo, "I never wanted it to go off in the first place."

"It was always a problem to find out some way whereby from my point of view, we could do a limited number of 'Columbos' and still do something else, so I wouldn't spend my whole life doing this. There were movies I wanted to do."

Since the show left the air in 1977, Falk has had a successful movie career. But he still is recognized worldwide as the character, even when he was shooting a movie, "Vibes," in South America recently.

"We're in the Andes Mountains, 18,000 feet above sea level," he said. "And there are these little villages, Indians, descendants of the Aztecs, very poor little hovels. I come there, and they all run out and yell, 'Columbo!'"

"God did not design anybody to be recognized by 2 billion people. It's something I can't get used to. Do you know what that is, that they know who you are? You don't know who they are. ... It's a strange thing, this television."

Executive producer William Link, who created "Columbo" with his late partner Richard Levinson, expects "Columbo" to be a hit once again.

For one thing, he says, "Columbo" is still wildly popular in foreign reruns. For another, mysteries are more popular than ever.

Link is also the producer of the highly successful and long-running CBS series "Murder, She Wrote."

The reason "Columbo" remains so popular, said Link, "is that the format and that character met Falk, and it was a marriage made in TV heaven."

"Peter brought to it I think a humanity that wasn't there on paper. He brought an everyman quality to it."

"Columbo" will be part of a rotation series of mystery movies, as it was in the '70s. The other two movies will be "Gideon Oliver," starring Louis Gossett Jr., and an as yet-untitled movie starring Burt Reynolds.

Link said "Columbo" will not likely get on the air before January because of the writers' strike, and because the producers refuse to rush the series.

There will be no tinkering with the successful format of "Columbo," he said. Each episode pits the seemingly dull-witted detective against a brilliant killer who has gotten away with a perfect crime until Columbo hesitates, turns and issues his trademark line, "There's just one thing that bothers me ..."

"It's a rigid format. We're not going to change it," said Link. "There'll be no car chases, he doesn't carry a gun, still smokes cigars, still has that raincoat that probably stands up by itself."

The raincoat may even be the same one Columbo wore during seven years on the air in the '70s, though Falk worries that the aging and fragile garment is not as up for a new round of crime-solving as he is.

The raincoat became almost as big a star as Falk. One of the TV critics was even convinced it had been enshrined in the Smithsonian. Falk said no, the coat he bought on 57th Street in Manhattan in 1967 is only enshrined in his closet.

"I have a great deal of affection for it, and I take very good care of it. I've been known to say I put out a saucer of milk for it every night."

He and Link get a little fuzzy on who is responsible for the raincoat.

Falk insists the raincoat was called for in the first "Columbo" script, based on the stage play "Prescription: Murder."

"I would like to get that script and see, because I think it said in the script that he wore a raincoat," Falk told Link.

"In the stage play, I remember it was a topcoat," recalled Link. "The screenplay 'Prescription: Murder,' which was based on the play — I suspect it said a topcoat. I think you brought the raincoat."

Writers Guild Accepts Compromise Agreement

By JOHN HORN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scriptwriters say they can probably start work on a delayed fall TV season by next week, giving viewers hope of relief from reruns after a tentative agreement to end the 22-week strike by 9,000 writers.

Leaders of the Writers Guild of America voted late Wednesday to urge union members to accept the proposed contract, despite what union negotiators acknowledged were concessions on key issues.

"Thank God! Isn't that wonderful news? We're all champing at the bit to go back to work," said actress Betty White, the Emmy-winning star of NBC-TV's "The Golden Girls."

The settlement announced Wednesday signaled the end to one of the longest and most painful strikes in modern Hollywood history, surpassed only by the guild's 1960 walkout, which lasted 23 weeks.

One Hollywood agent predicted a flood of work from writers who have been forbidden by strike rules to submit scripts to producers.

"It will be weird for a few weeks. There will be such a rush to the marketplace, such an overabundance of material, that it will confuse the studios," said Martin Bauer of the Bauer, Benedek Agency.

Despite the settlement, the start of the fall TV season will be delayed, perhaps until November. Costs to the networks will be extraordinary, and could range into tens of millions of dollars.

Writers estimated their losses were in the millions of dollars and thousands of people employed in all parts of the entertainment industry suffered layoffs because of production shutdowns.

George Kirgo, president of the guild's West Coast unit, said the leadership voted 25-6 to recommend that the rank-and-file ratify the contract. One member abstained. If the union members approve the pact when they vote Sunday, they could return to work by Monday, Kirgo said.

"It was time to bring it to a conclusion and the deal was there," said chief union negotiator Brian Walton.

"We are very pleased to have reached a tentative agreement," said Nicholas Counter III, chief negotiator for the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers. "No one wins a strike."

But one guild negotiator, Del Reisman, acknowledged "very mixed feelings" about the settlement. He said the writers failed to achieve one of their key aims, a substantial improvement in payment for reruns of television shows broadcast in foreign markets.

However, guild leaders feared that prolonging the strike and longer could weaken the union, said Reisman, vice president of the West Coast guild unit.

The guild did win improvements in creative control over scripts and the re-acquisition of original screenplays, he said.

"We wound up with an equation that was actually less than most of us hoped for," Reisman said. "But it is the first improvement in 18 years."

The settlement came after a collapse of talks last weekend produced two days of intense efforts by a variety of intermediaries. Contract issues were resolved during a 12-hour meeting between Walton and Counter.

Reisman said guild leaders instructed Walton on Monday to "go out and get a deal and make it the best that you can."

The guild, which began the strike March 7, has 9,000 members, most in Southern California. The alliance has 217 member companies responsible for 85 percent of network prime-time television and 90 percent of feature film production and distribution.

Losses to guild writers were estimated at $500,000 each strike week, and the guild paid out more than $2 million in hardship loans to its members.

CBS could begin broadcasting new shows the third week of October, Kim LeMasters, president of CBS Entertainment, said shortly before announcement of the settlement.

ABC Entertainment President Brandon Stoddard said a contract would leave his network "able to premiere most of our fall schedule either before, after or combined with (the miniseries) 'War and Remembrance' in November."

ABC already said it would delay its premieres until after NBC's combined fall schedule of the Summer Olympics and World Series had ended, but left in question when the new season would actually start.

NBC had no immediate comment.

Norris Loses Speed Attempt

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — Action movie star Chuck Norris was beaten by a propeller in his attempt to set an ocean speed record from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

A chipped propeller took 41 minutes to repair at sea Wednesday, preventing Norris and his crew of four from racing their 46-foot Scarab from the Golden Gate Bridge to Marina del Rey in less than seven hours, two minutes, 32 seconds.

The boat, under reduced power because a second propeller was causing problems, arrived here in 7:41:19, said Joe Hice, spokesman for Wellcraft Marine, which made the hull.

Norris did set a record for a diesel-powered craft because this was the first time a diesel boat attempted the 440-mile run, said Hice.

The record was set in 1984 by a gasoline-powered boat.

Always 'Uncle Jed'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — He's been a song and dance man, Davy Crockett's sidekick and a TV detective, but actor Buddy Ebsen says he expects he'll always be remembered as a rich bumpkin in Beverly Hills.

"The Beverly Hillbillies" will be around as long as there's a planet. It's a piece of Americana," said Ebsen, one of the actors invited to this year's Memphis Film Festival, an annual four-day showing of old movies.

"I still have 4-year-old kids come up to me and say, 'There's Uncle Jed,'" the 80-year-old Ebsen said recently.

On the Hillbillies, with 267 episodes made between 1962 and 1971, Ebsen played Jed Clampett, a likable rural resident who struck it rich and moved his family to California.

The series still shows up from time to time on cable TV.

If, lately, we've looked rather bleary-eyed in the mornings, its because we've been burning the midnight oil reading Frank Stewart's "The Bridge Player's Comprehensive Guide to Defense" (Dodd Mead & Company, 404 pp, paperback, $12.95. Available post free from The Bridge World, 39 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025, if you mention this column). The problems, of varying degrees of difficulty, are all testing. The book is well-organized and informative, and comprehensively covers the whole spectrum of defensive tactics.

To simulate the way the problems are presented in the book, cover the West and South hands and decide how you, as East, would defend against four hearts after partner's low spade opening lead is covered by dummy's queen. You win the ace. What next?
Partner must have at least one trump trick to give the defense a chance. Since you can see that your side has no diamond tricks coming, you will probably need two club tricks if you are going to force declarer into submission. (Partner would probably have led a singleton diamond.)
You can accomplish your goal if partner has the ten of clubs; even the nine might do it, when you shift to a low club, declarer does not go in with the ten. So, at trick two you must shift to a low club. Success. Partner's ten fetches the table's queen. Now when he gains the lead with his trump trick, a club return through the board's king allows you to score two club tricks and set the contract.
We must remember to get a few copies for our favorite partners!
Available for a limited time as a special offer is a two-for-one package of DOUBLES booklets. For your copies send $3 to "GOREN DOUBLES," care this newspaper, P.O. Box 4426, Orlando, Fla. 32802-4426. Make checks payable to "Newspaperbooks."

Eight U.S. Planes Found After 46 Years On Icecap

By WILLIAM E. SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — When the probe clunked against airplane metal buried deep beneath polar ice, it was the fulfillment of a 46-year quest by Norman Vaughan for a lost squadron of eight World War II planes.

"I thought, 'My God, here we are at the plane from which I took the bombsight'" to prevent it from falling into the hands of the Germans, Vaughan said Wednesday.

The plane is one of two U.S. bombers and six fighters that crash-landed on the Greenland icecap in 1942. After a seven-year search, they were discovered in July buried under 260 feet of ice.

The Atlanta-based Greenland Expedition Society plans to tunnel down into the ice and bring the airplanes to the surface.

"Then, if we can, Pat Epps and I are going to fly two of them off the ice," said Richard Taylor, an Atlanta architect who along with Epps is the expedition co-leader. The other planes will be dismantled and returned to the United States for restoration. Some will be sold to finance the expedition.

The saga of Bolero Mission's Tomcat Blue and Tomcat Yellow flights began July 15, 1942, as the two B-17 bombers and six P-38 fighters flew from Greenland to Reykjavik, Iceland.

They ran into bad weather. A German submarine jammed their communications with Reykjavik, and the planes, low on fuel and unable to find their destination, returned to Greenland, where they belly-landed on the ice about 10 miles inland.

All 25 crew members were rescued, but the top-secret Norden bombsight was left on one of the bombers.

The Army sent Vaughan, then a major and an expert sled-dog musher, to retrieve the bombsight because it didn't want the device to fall into the hands of the Germans, who had weather stations in the area. The planes were left for the ice to cover.

Vaughn has been the force behind the search since a previous 1981 expedition that failed because of poor weather.

Taylor said he and Epps had heard about the aircraft during a trip to the Arctic, when they had become smitten with the area and "were looking for reasons to go back."

Vaughn's brother-in-law read about their plans and phoned him at his home in Alaska.

"We got this telephone call from Alaska," Taylor recalled. "He said, 'We've got to get them out.'"

"I'd been thinking about it since the day I arrived back at the base with the bombsight," Vaughan, 82, said. "When the opportunity came in '81, I jumped at it."

With permission from the Danish government, Epps, owner of Epps Air Service in suburban Atlanta, began a new expedition this year with Taylor, Vaughan and investors. They found the planes with subsurface radar and the steam probe, which uses steam to drill a small hole through the ice.

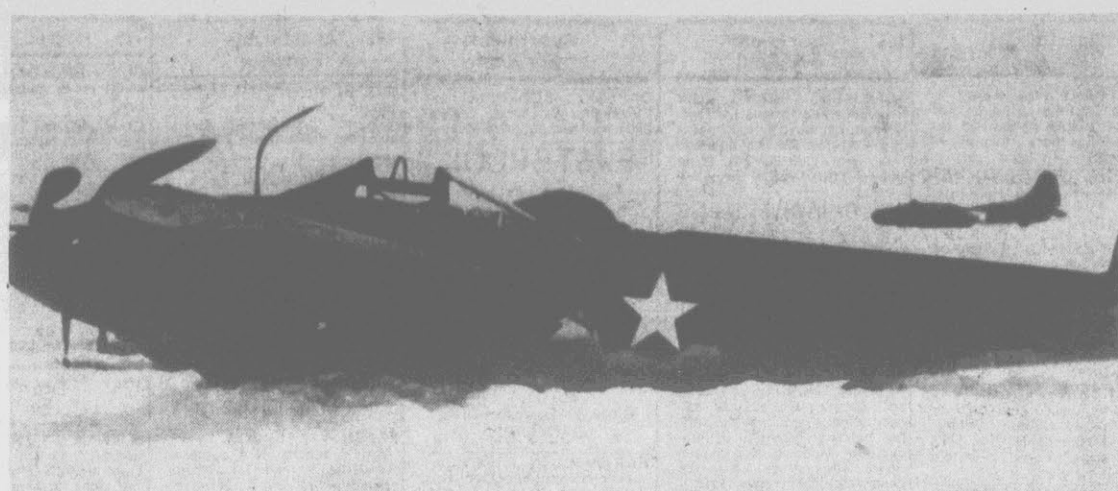

"After that, we took a satellite navigation system and plotted the coordinates, so we can go right back to that spot" next year during the short summer, when conditions will allow crews to work, Taylor said.

Denmark will get one of the P-38

Lightnings, Taylor said. There are only five known P-38s still flying. One was recently sold for $800,000, he said. The B-17s could be worth $400,000 each.

Plans call for tunneling to the planes at a 28-degree angle, removing the winds and propellers, and towing them to the surface.

Scientists Confirm Planet Is Orbiting Star Other Than Sun

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — A group of astronomers making routine measurements on a star have found the first confirmed evidence of a planet orbiting a star other than our own sun.

David W. Latham, who led the team that made the discovery, said the planet is 30,000 times larger than the Earth and probably lifeless because it would have a surface temperature of hundreds of degrees.

"It's much hotter than an oven," said Latham. "This is not a place you would look for life."

The planet is so close to its star that it orbits once every 84 days, Latham said. Mercury, the planet closest to the sun, has an orbit of 87 days.

Latham reported on the discovery Wednesday at the 20th general assembly of the International Astronomical Union in Baltimore.

Latham and his team found the planet while running instrument tests on a star called HD 114762. He said the star was one of a group called "candidate standard stars" that astronomers have been measuring for years to establish the characteristics of basic star types. The study is being conducted to give astronomers worldwide a standard for calibrating instruments.

Using light gathered by a 61-inch reflector telescope at the Oak Ridge Observatory in Massachusetts, the astronomers processed the star sightings through an instrument called the photon counting system.

The instrument detected a slight wobble in the motion of the star that could only be caused by a nearby orbiting body.

Latham said the planet would have to be massive, some 20 times larger than Jupiter, the largest planet in the solar system, in order to give star HD 114762 such a wobble.

"It's at the upper edge (of being the size) of a planet," Latham said. Minimum starlike bodies are usually 100 times the size of Jupiter.

Despite its size, the planet is too small and too distant to be seen directly. Star HD 114762 is 90 light years from Earth, about 522 trillion miles away. Seeing the planet would be like trying to sight a single candle placed beside a powerful searchlight on the moon, Latham said.

Instead, the scientists used calculations of the gravitational effects on the star to determine that another body was there.

Latham said the discovery raises the intriguing possibility that "companion bodies," or planet-like bodies orbiting stars, may be more common than previously believed.

"It wouldn't surprise me if more people started finding them," he said. Latham added: "It would be pretty boring if there weren't lots of planets because that would mean there aren't many chances for life."

The technique that discovered the planet around star HD 114762 is not sensitive enough, he said, to find a planet the size of Earth.

"We're far short of being able to find anything as small as Earth," he said, because the gravitational effect on a star would be too slight to be detected.

Star HD 114762 is a magnitude 7, too faint to be seen by the naked eye. It is also a spring star, seen only from March through July. The tilt of the Earth causes it to be blotted from view by the sun from August through February.

Detection of the planet around the star has been confirmed by a Swiss astronomer, Michel Mayor, at the Geneva Observatory.

Members of Latham's team include Robert Stefanik, Richard McCrosky and Robert Davis of the Smithsonian, and Tsevi Mazeh of the University of Tel Aviv.

An Eye On The Sky

BALTIMORE (AP) — Now that people and machines go regularly into space, can advertising and art be far behind? That's what worries astronomers who want to keep the nighttime skies from becoming background for orbiting billboards or burial grounds for the dead.

"Once we let it get started, the next thing you know there'll be Golden Arches up there," astronomer David Crawford said Wednesday. "We have to keep an eagle eye out for this type of thing."

Astronomers gathered for the 20th assembly of the International Astronomical Union are concerned that what Crawford calls "the unproductive uses of space" will block observations of the universe by ground-based telescopes and possibly damage astronomy instruments that will be launched into Earth orbit.

Crawford, a Kitt Peak National Observatory astronomer, and Sidney van den Bergh, an astronomer for the National Research Council of Canada, are on an international committee that is attempting to keep space free of "frivolous uses."

Among the proposals that worry them:

—A group of artists in France wants to build a kite-like object the size of a football field and place it in orbit as an art object. The work of art would be designed to catch and reflect the sunlight so it could be seen from Earth.

"Astronomers are appalled," van den Bergh said.
