Jobless Rates Edge Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate edged up 0.1 percentage point to 5.4 percent in July as the number of jobless Americans climbed 170,000, most of them teen-agers, the government said today.

The Labor Department's monthly survey of households nationwide showed only 41,000 more people at work last month, in contrast to an employment gain of 823,000 in June, when out-of-school teen-agers flooded the job market.

The unemployment rate for most segments of the population was unchanged last month. Teen-age joblessness, however, rose 1.6 percentage points to 15.2 percent.

Teen-agers accounted for 144,000 of the 170,000 rise in unemployment.

A separate survey of business payrolls showed a much healthier labor market, with the creation of 285,000 jobs in July — 150,000 of them in retail trade and manufacturing.

Factory employment climbed by 70,000 to 19.6 million. That is 200,000 more assembly line jobs than existed three months ago and 540,000 more than in July 1987.

The commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, said the July factory payroll growth "would have been even greater were it not for the absence from payrolls of about 15,000 workers in the shipbuilding and lumber industries who went on strike."

Employment in retail trade jumped by 80,000, matching June's strong growth. In the rapidly expanding business and health care service industries, however, job growth slowed to 65,000, about half what it had been running in recent months.

Wholesale trade added 25,000 workers, mostly in the distribution of durable goods. Ms. Norwood said wholesale trade employment has been growing by 25,000 to 30,000 jobs a month since last fall.

Economists are increasingly relying on the business payroll information rather than on the household survey — from which the jobless rate is calculated — as a better indicator of the health of the economy.

Over the last year, employment growth has averaged 200,000 a month in the household survey, but 325,000 a month in the payroll report.

"One reason for the more rapid employment growth in the business survey may be a possible increase in multiple job holding, which often occurs when the demand for labor is very strong," Ms. Norwood said.

The payroll survey counts each job a person holds while the household survey counts only the number of employed respondents.

College Board Says Four Years May Cost $80,000

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — College tuitions will rise an average of 7 percent this fall, and students at the most expensive private schools can now expect their four-year education to cost upwards of $80,000, the College Board said today.

Average "fixed charges" at private, four-year institutions — tuition, fees, room and board — will hit $11,330 for 1988-89, up 9 percent from last fall, the board estimated in its annual survey of college costs.

Adding another $1,600, which the board estimates the average student spends on incidentals like books, supplies and transportation, the total budget for resident four-year private school students will reach nearly $13,000.

"We are, of course, not at all surprised by these increases," said Bruce Carnes, deputy undersecretary of the U.S. Department of Education and an outspoken critic of rising tuitions. "We have stated that so far as we can see the price of college is going to go up at this rate forever."

Average fixed charges at four-year public schools will go up a more modest 5 percent to $4,445 for in-state students — or just over $6,000 including incidental expenses.

At two-year private schools, tuition, fees, room and board will average $7,627, up 7 percent. Average tuition and fees at public two-year institutions are increasing 4 percent to $767. The board said the sample of such schools charging room and board was too small to compile an average.

Students at tiny, selective Bennington College in Bennington, Vt., can expect costs to reach approximately $20,590, counting estimated incidental expenses. Sarah Lawrence College is second most expensive at an estimated $20,360, followed by Brandeis University, $20,186, and Barnard College, $20,150.

Other schools where student expenses will hover near the $20,000-a-year mark include Tufts University, University of Chicago, Harvard and Radcliffe, Dartmouth College, Boston University and New York University.

"Students and their families should not be discouraged by these increases," said College Board president Donald Stewart. About 5 million students will share more than $24 billion in public and private financial aid next year, he said.

Many college officials, however, blame sharp tuition increases at least partly on dwindling federal student aid which forces schools to make up the difference with aid programs of their own.

UNDER CONSTRUCTION — Workmen prepare the site at the Hooker Road bridge Thursday for a new structure. According to James Byrd of Greenville's city engineering department, the bridge will be of a triple barrel culvert design that includes three concrete boxes.

Byrd said the bridge was being replaced because of the low efficiency rating it was given during its last evaluation. Hooker Road will be blocked during the construction phase of the $215,000 project. The projected completion date is Oct. 15. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Pilot Draws Rebuke

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German government today rebuked Mathias Rust for not being more remorseful about his daredevil flight to Moscow's Red Square last year.

"It would have been better if Rust had stated immediately after his return that such an act should never again be performed," said government spokesman Norbert Schaefer.

Schaefer also criticized the West German news magazine Stern for ushering Rust away after his return without allowing other journalists to interview him. Stern has an exclusive contract with Rust for his story.

"The federal government is able to imagine better behavior than this," Schaefer said at a press conference.

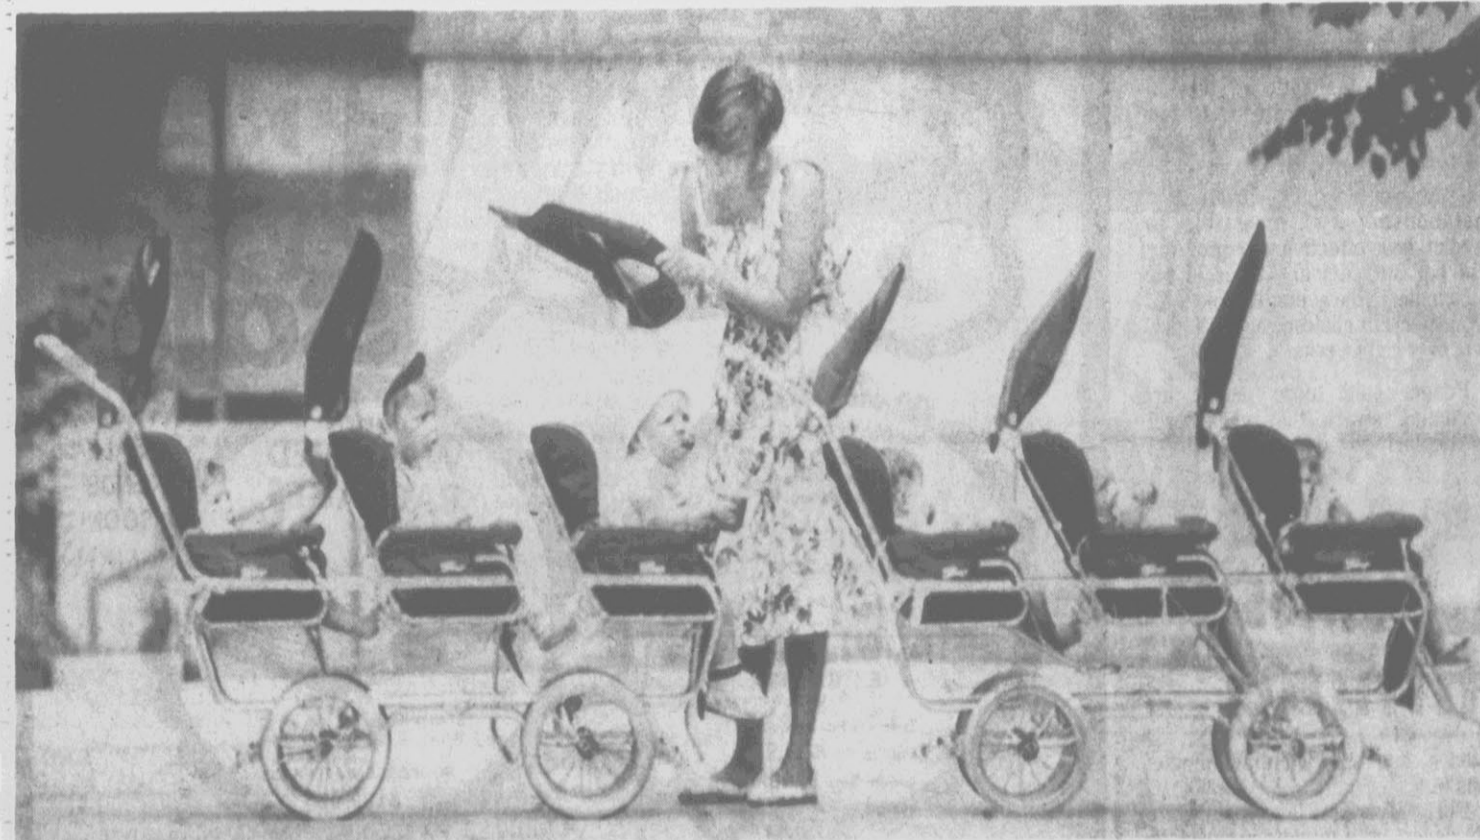

Rust was flown back to West Germany on Wednesday after the Kremlin cut short the four-year prison term he received for buzzing the Kremlin spires on May 28, 1987.

In an interview with The Associated Press on his flight from Moscow, Rust said he only partly regrets his stunt and maintained that it improved relations between his country and the Soviet Union.

The 20-year-old pilot returned today to his family home in Wedel, near Hamburg. He had been in seclusion with his family and Stern editorial staffers at an undisclosed location since his arrival in West Germany.

Hanrahan Grant

Pitt County will receive a $600,000 community development block grant to be used for revitalization of the Hanrahan community, a state official said today.

Lorraine Shinn, regional manager of the northeastern office of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said Pitt officials were notified Thursday that the county was one of 10 grant recipients in the region and one of 48 recipients statewide during the grant cycle period.

Mrs. Shinn said $558,000 of the award will be used to rehabilitate 11 houses in the Hanrahan community, install 1,200 linear feet of water lines to 11 households, perform 3,000 linear feet of sewer improvements to 11 houses, and to perform various street and drainage improvements for nine houses.

A $42,000 local option of the award will be used for drainage improvements for 10 households.

Mrs. Shinn said Pitt County has agreed to spend $60,000 in matching funds for sewer improvements to the area.

Of the 10 grants awarded to this region, nine amounted to $600,000 and one amounted to $395,000.

"The northeastern part of the state really fared well in the grant process this cycle," Mrs. Shinn remarked.

Community Development block grants come from federal funds which are allocated to the state for distribution.

GOP Hopefuls Wait In Wings

By DAVID ESPO
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The list of Republican vice presidential contenders is narrowing, with California Gov. George Deukmejian becoming the latest dropout as Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and others actively court an invitation to join George Bush's ticket.

Deukmejian notified Bush by letter on Thursday that he "cannot be considered" for the No. 2 spot on the ticket. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas said last weekend she wasn't interested, and sources say Sen. William Armstrong of Colorado has told Bush privately he doesn't wish to remain in contention.

But Kemp, who sharply attacked

Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis on Thursday, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico and others are making clear their interest.

Sen. Bob Dole, Bush's one-time scornful primary rival, appears to offer to be vice presidential candidate, although he won't say so. Ditto Howard Baker, the former Senate Republican Leader and White House chief of staff, and Senate Republican Whip Alan Simpson.

Welcome to the superheated Republican vice presidential guessing game in the superheated Washington summer.

With absolutely no suspense about Bush's presidential nomination at the GOP national convention this month, the Washington grapevine is atwitter over his choice of a vice presidential running mate.

Bush says he's keeping his thoughts to himself, and he won't tip his hand until he makes a formal announcement, now set for 10 a.m. on the final morning of the Aug. 15-18 GOP convention in New Orleans. He also says he has embarked on an "orderly process" and hopes no one will be demeaned by it.

Nonsense, says Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis' press secretary. Dayton Duncan said the Bush campaign was running an "ego massage parlor" in which politicians' names were floated with the objective of making them feel important — and raising their stature in the eyes of the home state voters.

In all, Bush aides have listed about 16 contenders, from the well-known Dole and Kemp, to less visible ones such as Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana to governors such as John Sununu of New Hampshire and Carroll Campbell of South Carolina.

Still, where there is smoke there might be fire. So agents of one candidate spend their time helping their own choice and undercutting rivals.

—Dole is up one day, depicted as a man of stature who could attract the support of independent voters in the fall. He is down the next — a man

School Teachers Advised To Spread Word To Public About AIDS Issue

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

"Tell the teachers to teach the kids. We've got to educate the public" is the message an AIDS victim delivers to audiences he talks to, a health professional told local elementary school teachers Thursday.

Cathy Thomas, health coordinator for Camp Lejeune Dependent Schools, said the AIDS victim lived and worked in Atlanta for two years with the symptoms before facing the realization that he had the disease.

"He spends $1,500 a month for the AZT treatment," she said.

Ms. Thomas spoke to about 25 local fourth through sixth grade teachers who are participating in the Adventures in Health's Summer Institute of Health Education being conducted at River Park North through today.

In another scenario, Ms. Thomas said a woman and eventually her child contracted the disease from the woman's unfaithful husband. And, when a woman who was hoping to become pregnant tested positive after contracting the disease from her husband, "they could hear her screaming from outside in the parking lot," she said.

"It's a very real problem" Ms. Thomas said. "When it first came out, we all thought it was just a homosexual problem, (but) it's an equal opportunity disease. It's devastating when you stop to think about it."

"I'm AIDS out," she said, as information about the disease continues to pour over the public. "It's amazing how much we've gained in our knowledge."

"By 1991, we'll all know someone personally who has AIDS," Ms. Thomas said. "It will affect us. You may have someone in your classroom this very year" with the disease.

"They're not predicting a cure until (the year) 2010," she said. "By 1991, 270,000 will be diagnosed with the disease; 179,000 will die from the disease."

As elementary teachers, "you know that some of them (students) are already sexually active," Ms. Thomas said.

Among teen-agers, 50 percent of the women are sexually active with four or more partners, and there are 3,000 conceptions daily among teen-agers, she said.

"You may multiply that in the summertime, you reckon? They've got plenty of time, mom and dad are at work," Ms. Thomas said. "And, if they're not sexually active, they will be at some point."

Plus, teen-agers are active in the use of intravenous drugs, which is an avenue for contracting the disease in addition to sexual intercourse, she said.

North Carolina has mandated the instruction of AIDS into the health curriculum for seventh- and eighth-graders, Ms. Thomas said. Monday, the Pitt County Board of Education adopted a health curriculum that begins teaching about AIDS in the seventh grade.

Ms. Thomas said her local school board has approved teaching about AIDS in the fifth grade.

But, "there's still the opportunity to miss the education," as the state Board of Education requires local boards to exempt students from participating in AIDS instruction upon written request of the parent or guardian.

"It should not be ostracized so that parents have to sign for it," she said. "I'll be glad when it gets to the point where we can talk about it like the four food groups of nutrition."

Ms. Thomas advised the teachers to learn everything they could about AIDS and to know the AIDS instruction and communicable disease policies of their school systems.

"I hope they will allow you to answer questions and talk openly and honestly about it," she said. "Pre-teens have a zillion questions ... they're talking about their bodies" as they go through adolescent development.

Robbery Charges

Greenville police said a 38-year-old man was arrested Thursday in connection with several armed robberies that occurred earlier this year throughout the city.

Detective J.E. Nichols said Mitchell Eugene Foreman of Maury was arrested at 4 p.m. and charged with armed robberies at the Buccaneer Theater on Arlington Boulevard on Feb. 26 and at Pic 'n Pay Shoes on Greenville Boulevard on March 26, and with two armed robberies which occurred at the Arbogate Inn across from Carolina East Mall on April 29.

Nichols said Foreman was scheduled to have a first appearance hearing today.

In other arrests Thursday, Officer Alexander Batts said Baxter Jeffery Honeycut of 309 Kings Arms Apartments was charged with discharging a firearm in an incident at 3 a.m. A .25-caliber pistol was confiscated, Batts said.

Officer K.R. Evans said Daniel Adam Rooks, 21, of 106 D Eastbrook Apartments was charged with conspiracy to traffic in cocaine in an incident at 3:15 p.m., while Officer S.D. Hilliard said Gwendolyn Delores Morning, 30, was charged with shoplifting after various meats were taken from the Farm Fresh store in an incident at 6:59 p.m.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said Ben Tracy O'Ham, 31, was charged with shoplifting after a cassette player valued at $149 and a radar detector valued at $89 were taken from Sears in an incident at 7 p.m.

weekend at the Holiday Inn in Greenville.

A picnic will be held Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Holiday area of the motel, while the annual birthday party will begin in the south annex of the building at 9 p.m.

A program and a buffet dinner will begin Sunday at 2 p.m. Music will be provided by Myriam Harris, Deborah Leathers and Carolyn Cox. Video services will be provided by Sammy Rombold.

'Lanterns For Hope'

The Eastern North Carolina Chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility is sponsoring its third annual "Lanterns for Hope" ceremony Saturday.

After dusk on Saturday, paper lanterns decorated by area young people with symbols of hope and peace will be floated on the pond north of the East Carolina University School of Medicine building. Beginning at 7 p.m., area residents are invited to share a pot luck supper.

Other lantern ceremonies in the state on Saturday will be held in Raleigh, Edenton, Manteo, Oriental, and Ocracoke Island. For further information call 756-9869.

Oil Spill

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Several hundred gallons of heating oil spilled into the Pigeon River in western North Carolina Thursday when a tanker truck was hit from behind by another vehicle, turning over the truck.

The accident occurred about 5 a.m. in the eastbound lane of Interstate 40, just 16 miles inside the North Carolina line with Tennessee. Five to six thousand gallons of oil spilled from the tank, but only 400 to 600 gallons got into the river, authorities said.

State and federal officials were called to the scene to contain the oil. The truck driver was identified as a 30-year-old Canton man.

PTL Jury Probe Enters 2nd Year

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A special grand jury is heading into its second year of an investigation into former PTL leader Jim Bakker, but the process is so secretive that a U.S. attorney involved in the probe still denies its existence.

The panel — which meets one week each month — originally was given one year to complete the investigation. In June, however, U.S. District Judge Robert Potter extended the term by six months, through January 1989.

U.S. Attorney Charles Alexander, one of the prosecutors handling the probe, declined to comment when asked Thursday when he thought the investigation would be finished.

"You know my position on that," he said. "I deny its existence."

When Potter empaneled the grand jury a year ago, he warned the jurors not to talk to anyone.

"You talk to no one. Ever," Potter said when the 23-member jury met for the first time on Aug. 21, 1987.

Since that day, all the work conducted by the grand jury and federal prosecutors has been done behind closed doors at the federal courthouse in downtown Charlotte.

When the investigation is complete, the grand jury will decide whether there is probable cause to charge anyone with a crime.

Some of the 50 or so witnesses summoned by the prosecutors — including former church secretary Jessica Hahn and several of Bakker's former associates — have spoken with reporters.

When Miss Hahn testified as the first witness last September, more than 20 video cameras were lined up outside the courthouse. Since then, the number of reporters has shrunk to no more than three or four during the weeks the jury meets.

Some witnesses have refused to discuss their testimony, while others have managed to slip out of the building unnoticed.

Bakker resigned from the television ministry in March 1987 after admitting to a sexual encounter with Miss Hahn and that hush money was paid to her.

Bakker and some of his associates are under investigation for possible mail, wire and tax fraud. The probe focuses on how the ministry raised and spent millions of dollars.

Prosecutors are trying to learn whether Bakker and his aides broke federal laws against raising money for one purpose and using it for another. Besides calling dozens of witnesses, prosecutors have subpoenaed thousands of records covering PTL operations since 1980.

EPA Programmer Develops High-Tech Plan Aimed At Lowering Cholesterol

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh software developer concerned about the effects of diet on heart disease has developed a high-tech plan to lower cholesterol.

Wade Ponder, a branch chief with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, developed a computer program based on the best-selling book, "The 8-Week Cholesterol Cure." His own problem with high cholesterol and frustration with record-keeping fueled the project.

The book called for compiling a daily list of foods eaten, with the fat and cholesterol content of each food (found on various tables), then adding up the columns.

"In order to do that, you almost had to have a full-time accountant with you," Ponder said. "The beauty of the program simply is that rather than making keeping records a 30- to 60-minute chore every night, the program allows you to do it in 10 minutes."

Ponder said he got the book by Bob Kowalski after learning his own cholesterol level put him at high risk for heart disease. Blood cholesterol, high blood pressure and cigarette smoking are the three biggest factors promoting heart attacks.

In the process of cutting his cholesterol from 268 to 168 in less than a year, Ponder compiled a mountain of dietary data.

"Now there are 340 foods in the (program) database," he said. "You just sit down and think over what you ate. Type those things into the computer and the work is over."

Of course, you still need a doctor to find your current cholesterol count, but the computer will compare your daily intake of three types of fat, total fat and cholesterol to National Heart Association guidelines. You can set up individual records for several people, saving the information after each use. Each person can set his own goals for weight loss, daily consumption of fats and cholesterol intake and the computer will monitor progress.

"Your first goal is to make sure fat is 30 percent or less of the total calories consumed," Ponder said. "Then you look at the ratio of polyunsaturated fats to saturated fats. That P-to-S ratio should always be greater than one."

Because of individual variations in metabolism, it's impossible to predict how effective the program will be. But clinical studies in the book indicate the average person will reduce serum cholesterol by 30 percent over eight weeks.

Ponder said more people are becoming aware that cholesterol, particularly low-density cholesterol, can clog arteries and imperil health even in physically active people.

Property Stolen

Two thefts were among the incidents reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said a dirt bicycle valued at $100 was taken from 1103-B Myrtle Ave. in an incident reported at 8:47 a.m., while Officer M.R. Benton said a motorized bicycle valued at $600 was taken from the front yard of a residence at 3034 Dartmouth Drive in an incident reported at 8:02 a.m.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said an attempted breaking and entering occurred at Deiner's Bakery, 815 Dickinson Ave., at 5:55 a.m. Damage to a screen was estimated at $10.

Officer P.W. Worthington said a larceny by trick occurred on 11th Street when a victim gave a person $70 for a television set but the set was never delivered.

Officer W.E. Davis said a car was scratched and the car radio antenna broken at Willow Street in an incident reported at 9:22 p.m.

State Ranks 2nd In Nation In Fatalities By Lightning

By The Associated Press

Lightning struck North Carolina with a vengeance last month, killing a 7-year-old boy and injuring at least 10 others, including the boy's grandmother.

Steven Johnson was killed while he picked up toys under a tree near his Fuquay-Varina home. His 64-year-old grandmother was injured.

Lightning also: shocked a Brevard woman using a curling iron; hurt three Boy Scouts and their Scoutmaster when it struck an oak tree near their Buncombe County campsite; and injured two Columbus County laborers working on a water line near a tree.

"We had seven people struck in one week," said Tom Ditt, a spokesman for the N.C. Division of Emergency Management.

Those episodes are dramatic, but they're not unusual in North Carolina. A quarter-century of statistics reveals that the state is second only to Florida in the number of lightning fatalities.

Ditt and others say they believe the reason is tied to the abundance of outdoor activities in North Carolina — the state's long coastline, its golf courses, its mountains, its agriculture.

But researchers also are beginning to see some surprises in the statistics they're gathering on the frequency of lightning strikes. They have discovered that parts of southeastern North Carolina are struck so often during the summer that they rival Florida, the nation's lightning capital.

Richard Orville, chairman of the State University of New York at Albany's atmospheric science department, said the nationwide lightning detection network his department operates has recorded up to 12 lightning flashes per square kilometer per year in parts of the southeast coastal plain. Five or six strikes per square kilometer is more normal, he said.

"That sometimes exceeds what you would find in Florida," he told the Greensboro News & Record.

Duke Power Co., which uses the detection system to learn where lightning is occurring, recorded more than a million cloud-to-ground strikes in its service area during 1986-87. The utility's service area includes most of Piedmont North Carolina and South Carolina.

The National Weather Service's compilation of thunderstorm days shows nothing spectacular about North Carolina's thunderstorm activity. The state averages 41 to 46 thunderstorm days a year, depending on location. Greensboro, for instance, has 45.8, while Wilmington has 46.1.

Fort Myers, Fla., meanwhile, averages 92.7 thunderstorm days, and New Orleans gets 68.6 days.

But what the statistics don't relate is the intensity of storms that pound North Carolina or the number that can spring up across the state in a day.

Jordan Backs Up Separation Move By Dismissing 21,000 Civil Servants

By MICHAEL ROSS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan announced Thursday that it is dismissing or retiring nearly all of the more than 23,000 civil servants and teachers that it employs in the West Bank, a move in line with King Hussein's decision to sever the kingdom's ties to the Israeli-occupied territories.

The action, expected for several days, is widely seen as part of a gamble by the king to check the decline of Jordan's influence in the territories and to revive the Middle East peace process by pressuring Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization to negotiate with each other.

Jordanian officials said that some 21,000 civil servants and teachers would be affected beginning Aug. 16, including 16,000 who will be dismissed with severance pay.

Another 5,300 employees who have at least 15 years of seniority also will be dismissed but will continue to receive their monthly salaries until they reach retirement age, when they will be eligible for Jordanian pensions.

Unaffected will be a relatively small group of less than 2,000 civil servants who deal with religious and legal affairs in the territories, officials said.

Announcing the decision, which was formally adopted at a Cabinet meeting, the state-run Jordan Radio said that responsibility for the dismissed workers and the extensive services they perform in the territories now belongs to the PLO.

The Cabinet, the radio said, noted that the dismissals were "in line with Jordan's legal and administrative disengagement from the West Bank at the request of the PLO, the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

Hussein announced over the weekend that he was ceding to the PLO his claim to the West Bank, which Jordan ruled from 1948 until its capture by Israel in 1967. This, he said, was in accordance with the PLO's own wishes and that of the general Arab consensus, as expressed by Arab League summit resolutions adopted over the past 14 years.

In fact, most analysts here interpret the king's move as an attempt to pressure the PLO to come to terms with Jordan — or, failing that, to discredit the organization by showing that it cannot give the financial and administrative support to the territories that Jordan has provided during 20 years of Israeli occupation.

It is also seen as a response to internal pressures created by the eight-month-old Palestinian uprising in the West Bank, which, although aimed against Israeli rule, has also generated much anti-Jordanian sentiment. This in turn has provoked a backlash in Jordan, where native East Bank residents, their own nationalism agitated, have been pressuring Hussein to loosen Jordan's ties to the West Bank.

"The West Bankers are not ready to say we represent them, but they've always been ready to take our money," said one East Bank businessman, who added that Hussein's continued support for the West Bank has caused "a lot of resentment" during a period of acute economic austerity in Jordan.

Although widely anticipated, Thursday's announcement nonetheless startled Israeli authorities, who had virtually dismissed Hussein's new policy as designed mostly to throw a scare into the PLO and its West Bank supporters.

The real test, a Foreign Ministry official had said earlier this week, would be whether Hussein took really serious action such as cutting salaries of West Bank employees, closing the bridges connecting the West Bank and Jordan, or withdrawing Jordanian passports from the Palestinians in the territories.

At that point, the official said, the view was that Hussein was essentially bluffing. "If he does one of those three things, we'll have to reassess the situation," he said then.

Mahmoud Abu Zulf, editor of the prominent Al Quds Arabic-language paper in East Jerusalem, said of the Jordanian announcement: "It hurts, it hurts. ... They want to just make living here unbearable and to tell the people: 'If you want the PLO, you will suffer. If you don't want us, you'll suffer.'"

Many of the affected employees were still waiting to learn details of the Jordanian announcement Thursday evening. "Call back tomorrow," said Nabel Qamar, a post office employee. "We don't know anything."

Ali Khatib, a teacher from Ramallah who is one of many for whom the Jordanian payment is a supplement to his Israeli salary, took the news philosophically.

"It's important," he said of the Jordanian money, "but we don't depend on it."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has banned the appearance of topless dancers and other risque acts at on-base clubs for officers and enlisted personnel, heeding complaints that such entertainment encourages abusive behavior toward women.

The ban is contained in a new "instruction" designed to update regulations for the operation of Navy messes. It was signed June 30 by Vice Adm. Leon A. Edney, the chief of naval personnel, but is only now being distributed to Navy bases around the world.

The Navy said Thursday that Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, the chief of naval operations, approved of the move and that the new directive was taking effect immediately upon receipt.

The revised guidelines specify that all entertainment acts at base clubs must meet "appropriate standards of discretion, modesty and good taste."

Base commanders should exercise common sense to ensure their clubs feature only "wholesome and high-quality entertainment" that would be suitable for a "typical mixed community audience."

"Female topless and/or bottomless exhibition, as well as male bottomless and other similar entertainment, is prohibited," the new rules say.

"Entertainment that could conceivably result in embarrassment to the (Department of the Navy) shall be avoided."

The new guidelines were urged on

Navy brass last fall by a study group created by former Navy Secretary James H. Webb.

Webb had asked his study group to survey the progress of women in the Navy after another panel — the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services — issued a blistering critique of the Navy's treatment of female sailors and Marines.

The advisory committee had concluded that women in the Navy and Marine Corps deployed in the Pacific region were frequently the victims of sexual harassment and abuse. And the panel made a point of complaining about on-base activities such as "noon-time burlesque shows and 'dining-ins' that emphasize sexually-oriented entertainment...."

"The issue of moral acceptability aside, on-base activities such as these contribute to creating an environment in which all females are regarded with less or no respect and abusive behavior toward all women is not only passively accepted and condoned, but encouraged."

The directive from Edney is meant to address that complaint and was "reviewed and endorsed" by the female members of Webb's study group, the Navy said Thursday.

The directive states that in selecting entertainment acts, club managers should consider "local mess patronage, the probable participants and potential media reaction."

Moreover, it stresses the new guidelines apply to entertainment acts even when hired for private parties. An individual who obtains space for a private party must disclose to the club manager the "full particulars" of his entertainment plans, the directive orders.

"Regardless of the type of entertainment that may be offered in the local community, it is not in the best interest of the Navy to allow standards of taste in entertainment to seek their own level on the assumption that anything that people desire is allowable," the instruction states.

Needs & Risks

Bond Issue Requires Careful Answers

There's little doubt Pitt County's school system has millions of dollars in construction needs.

The needs are quite visible. One-third of the facilities are near or over 30 years old. Ninety mobile units must be moved annually to the tune of $42,000. Sewer systems in six schools cannot meet Environmental Protection Agency standards. If current student growth continues, the system will need a new school every three years.

These problems are real and can be seen by anyone who cares to take a close look.

But the $25 million question the school board will be asking the county to answer is whether it can afford to meet these needs. By giving its tentative OK to a school bond referendum, the board is suggesting Pitt County weigh the affordability of such a project against the pitfalls of continuing to regress on building needs.

Both yes and no answers have merits and drawbacks, and before minds are closed and lines are drawn, these issues should be thoroughly, openly debated.

A bond referendum, known as the 'B' word by politicians, is a highly effective means of paying for large scale construction beyond the easy reach of taxpayer's dollars. In the past decade, proposing one meant certain political death for an aspiring candidate for higher office. But low interest rates have made the late 1980s a financially feasible time for counties and municipalities to bid bonds and use the money to get ahead.

For a school system, bond issues allow immediate progress on building needs. A pay-as-you-go approach keeps schools playing catch-up. By the time the money at hand is applied to needs, growth has made the funds inadequate. In addition, construction costs seldom remain constant. The $25 million spent in 1988 won't buy the same poundage in 1998.

North Carolina's Basic Education Program has exacerbated Pitt County's classroom space problems by setting minimum standards for curriculum. Schools must find adequate space to teach the duly-required courses. Add this crunch to already-critical building needs and a bond referendum looks like a good way out.

But a bond issue mortgages the county's future. It has risks. Should the local economy falter, bonds would be a liability. Large-scale debt could be a financial death blow.

Besides, taxpayers are paying 10 cents per $100 in property value to raise $3 million per year earmarked specifically for school construction. Although this allocation was muddled by tax adjustments after the 1988 revaluation, it should, for the remaining two years it is obligated, fill gaps in capital spending if applied properly. To date, this money has neither gone as far nor been spent as prudently as planned.

In addition, the county has capital needs aside from its school system. Pitt Community College needs to expand. A central office complex must be built to provide adequate space for county services. Solutions to solid waste disposal will be an expensive endeavor, but one that must be undertaken.

The school board can be commended for plainly delineating education needs and publicly committing to addressing them. The problems they expounded are not small ones; the needs they decry cannot be dismissed.

But the feasibility of bonds will depend on the particulars of the issue. How long will the terms of the bonds be? How will the money be administered? What is the payoff schedule and financing setup?

These questions must be satisfactorily settled before the county can seriously consider a bond referendum. Affordability can't be determined without vigorous public discussion and accurate answers.

Trickier Than Kissing Babies

BOSTON — Mark this down in your memory book. One day in the summer of 1988, both candidates for President of the United States were found campaigning in day-care centers.

The eldest of the citizens in these centers was six, ineligible to vote until the 21st century. Nevertheless, a cameo appearance by the would-be Presidents was considered a surefire vote-getter.

This may not be the ultimate symbol of the kiddie-care campaign, but it comes deliciously close. These days, Dukakis doesn't give a speech without uttering some phrase about the desperate need for care. When Bush brought out his big guns to aim at the front-runner, he shot out a proposal labeled child care. At the same time, ABC, the major (and largely Democratic) bill for child care is out of committee and headed for a vote before the election.

Is it possible that the politicians will do more for babies this year than kiss them?

The reason for the sudden stampede of candidates and their cameras onto the pre-school turf is a simple matter of demographics, economics and politics, to wit: working mothers. The baby-boom workers need help with their little echoes. And when the baby boom speaks, politicians listen.

But not all plans labeled child care look the same. The one supported by the Duke and the one initiated by Bush are a case in point. Like two kids, these candidates have attacked the same block pile with a different structure in mind.

The Bush plan would provide some support for Head Start, some seed money for after-school care, and a pool for business day-care insurance. But the bulk of the $2.2 billion in play-dough isn't for child care at all. It's a children's tax credit.

Under the Bush plan, every family that earns less than $10,000 (rising later to $20,000) would get $1,000 for any child under four years old. It doesn't matter whether that child is in day care or that mother is employed. As long as there is one worker — which rules out welfare mothers — they get the $1,000.

The political theory is that it doesn't discriminate between mothers in or out of the work force — something to please Bush's conservative supporters. The economic theory is that these families will take the money and use it to buy the sort of day care they choose. If they have the money to make the demand, the supply will follow. It's a demand-side child-care plan.

Few child-care supporters will disparage this proposal outright. Some are in a state of shock that a real live Republican plans to give low-income families money when they have children. "We've been saying, 'Oh my God, it's paid parental leave,'" says day-care advocate Ellen Galinsky.

But neither she nor most of her colleagues regard the Bush proposal as something that will expand the child-care system. For openers, $1,000 a year comes to about 50 cents an hour of care. Moreover, a family earning a meager $10,000 a year may not use that lump sum for child care.

These advocates prefer the supply-side plan, the day-care economics of the $2.5 billion ABC bill supported by the Dukakis camp. (Clap if you believe it's an accident that the two approaches have virtually the same price tag.) About 75 percent of that money would go to communities to buy child care for low-income families. It would go in the form of vouchers or state payments.

In some ways, these programs don't conflict. They are apples and oranges which would make a nice salad for low-income families. Bush would give money outright; the ABC bill would purchase child-care spaces. But only the ABC bill is directed at improvement, something once called "quality child care."

A big chunk of the bill goes toward creating and raising the standards of child care: operating a safe environment with a trained staff and a lower turnover rate. Says Galinsky: "I don't use the word quality anymore. 'People used to say that in this country we don't want a Cadillac, we want VWs. Now I talk about a level above which children won't be harmed. Giving parents money is just not doing enough.'"

Today we finally have the politicians captive in the child-care center of the campaign. They can't be pro-family without being pro-child care. The edge now goes to the candidate who knows that parents want good care, not just day care. It's a lot trickier than kissing babies.

School Reform Missing The Boat

WASHINGTON — The school learning required for success on examinations and the real-world learning needed for career success are two different things.

The insight is Lauren Resnick's. And, as is so often the case with breakthrough insights, Resnick tells us what we already "know" but could never quite find the words to express.

What she tells us, in an article in last December's issue of Educational Researcher is (1) that school learning is, in important ways, inconsistent with what is required on the job and (2) that the discontinuity between the two has profound implications for educational reform.

The key differences:
• School learning lays stress on individual cognition, while learning in virtually every context tends to be a cooperative enterprise.

• School learning stresses "pure thought," while the outside world makes heavy use of tool-aided learning.

• School learning emphasizes the manipulation of abstract symbols, while nonschool reasoning is heavily involved with objects and events.

• School learning tends to be generalized, while the learning required for on-the-job competency tends to be situation-specific.

School work, in short, draws on only a limited aspect of intelligence, ignoring many of the intelligences needed for vocational success, even notes, calculators, references. "Although use of these tools may sometimes be permitted during school ted the cheese into an approximately round pancake, divided it into quarters, and used three of the quarters...Very probably, the individual never knew, or cared, or needed to know that he was about to eat half a cup of cottage cheese."

As for the presumed importance of school-taught generalized learning, Resnick doubts that most of us can be truly successful on the job without developing situation-specific forms of competence. For instance, "extensive training in electronics and troubleshooting theories provides very little knowledge and fewer skills directly applicable to performing electronic troubleshooting."

"Growing evidence of this kind points to the possibility that very little can be transported directly from school to out-of-school use. Both the structure of the knowledge and the social conditions of its use may be more fundamentally mismatched than we previously thought."

Resnick isn't sure what to make of her conclusions, except that the present educational reforms, geared toward enhancing traditional school learning, may be missing the boat.

It may be that school learning itself needs to be reconsidered — and restructured. More about that in a subsequent column.
(c) 1988, Washington Post Writers Group in the more prestigious vocations.

The success or failure of a student is, above all, individual. Even when school work involves group undertakings, Resnick notes, "students ultimately are judged on what they can do by themselves." In the outside world, by contrast, "each person's ability to function successfully depends on what others do and how several individuals' mental and physical performances mesh."

As Albert Shanker, head of the American Federation of Teachers, put it in his review of Resnick's work: "On the job, in the family and at play, we are expected to ask those close to us to show us, to explain, to help. The important thing is to get something done right, and usually that means doing it together with others. In school, asking others for help is called cheating."

So, too, is reliance on "tools":

No Bridges Over The Mote Of Despair In El Salvador

At a conference in El Salvador that brought leftist rebel politicians and pro-government activists together, one speaker identified a "paradox of despair and opportunity" that is evident as the civil war grinds into its ninth year.

The despair is pervasive; after $3 billion of U.S. aid, the military balance is virtually unchanged, while economic and social conditions have deteriorated dramatically. But the very occurrence of a public conference including the rebels engenders some optimism about the possibilities for peace. More and more Salvadorans see continuation of the war as unacceptable, creating a sense of re-evaluation that has extended even to the U.S. Congress. The first legislative fight over U.S. policy in the four years since the inauguration of President Jose Napoleon Duarte erupted in June in Washington.

The U.S. policy of "marginalizing" the rebels with military pressure while making political and economic reforms to defuse the roots of the conflict has not worked, lending credibility to moderate voices in El Salvador who have urged both sides to give up hopes of victory and negotiate an end to the war. There are a thousand casualties annually on each side; neither the rebels nor the army are any closer to winning.

The "dirty" war has escalated sharply this year; both military-sanctioned death squads and rebels kill unarmed civilian opponents. Unemployment has soared to 50 percent and average income has fallen 40 percent since the start of the war, as the economy has suffered from constant rebel attacks on infrastructure and the cost of a fivefold military increase. The war has driven 10 percent of the population from the country and another 10 percent to refugee and squatter camps. The country is kept afloat only by U.S. aid at record levels.

On top of these military and economic woes, the government's political leadership had fragmented badly, even before Duarte's recent hospitalization for cancer. No one knows just who has the authority to cut the war-ending deal that El Salvador needs. The public is disillusioned with Duarte; he failed to end the war and his party's staggering corruption led to victory for the right-wing ARENA party in the Assembly elections this spring. ARENA, the party of reputed death-squad leader Roberto D'Aubuisson, is expected to win the presidency next spring, as well, taking advantage of a split in Duarte's party.

'The despair is pervasive; after $3 billion of U.S. aid, the military balance is virtually unchanged, while economic and social conditions have deteriorated dramatically.'

Remarkably, in the midst of all this, is the first glimmer of hope for El Salvador since Duarte traveled to La Palma to meet with rebel leaders soon after his election in 1984. That meeting came to naught, and both sides have held to the positions they presented there: The government says the rebels should lay down arms and run for office; the rebels say that first they need a restructured government that can protect their supporters from the death squads. No member of the military has been tried for abuses of human rights, not even the one who recently killed the sole judge who tried to bring the army to justice.

A wide spectrum of Salvadorans now appears to believe that the deadly stalemate requires — and may even generate — creative thinking and concessions on both sides. One important step in that direction is the recent announcement by rebel political leaders that, contrary to the advice of their military leaders, they will contest the presidential elections next spring. Another is the rebels' recent decision to propose a mutual de-escalation of the war, to be followed by a three-month truce for negotiations.

The man who organized the June conference on negotiations, the Rev. Ignacio Ellacuria, rector of a Catholic university, is one of the few Salvadorans who commands enough respect on both sides to serve as a mediator. He told both sides they must believe the alternative to concessions is an unwinnable war.

Certainly most civilian leaders on both sides have come to believe this; unfortunately, many military leaders — both rebel and army — have become inured to war. They hope against all the evidence that the stalemate can be broken in their favor. The Salvadoran officers now moving into top leadership and the right-wing leaders who recently took control of the Legislature speak ominously of "total" war, beyond the control of U.S. policy-makers and their concern for human rights. Rebel military leaders speak once more of an "urban uprising" this fall to sweep the military from the country. To head off such bloody campaigns, civilians on both sides must be able to offer some proof that a negotiated settlement is possible. For this, the United States must provide active encouragement.

Unfortunately, U.S. policy appears to be drifting in El Salvador, waiting for new presidents to be elected in both countries. The U.S. Embassy reportedly agreed to attend the conference on negotiations, but then received other orders from Washington — not to appear with rebel politicians until they first break their alliance with the rebel military, so as not to "legitimize" their presence.

If the goal of U.S. policy is to end the war with some prospect for democracy, this refusal to bring rebel politicians as far as possible into the political process appears to be self-defeating. The political wing of the rebels is led by some of the most "legitimate" politicians in Salvadoran history, whose participation will be required for any settlement to be successful. Their president, Guillermo Ungo, was Duarte's vice presidential running mate in the 1972 election that was stolen by the military, and served in the civilian-military junta that tried to chart a course back to civilian rule in 1979.

The rebel vice president, Ruben Zamora, was a top official in Duarte's party until 1980, when the military raided a party meeting and assassinated his brother, a Cabinet minister, and he fled for his life. These men have allied with the Marxist-led rebel military because it is the only force capable of challenging military rule — and of offering, through the threat of retribution, protection from the military and the death squads. Their roots are in political rather than military action — they have shown a far greater willingness than their military wing to seek a negotiated settlement.

The recent deterioration of the political situation in Nicaragua makes it hard to conceive of negotiating a solution to any of the deep-seated political problems in Central America. Nonetheless, the military resiliency of both sides in El Salvador shows that negotiations are the only way out. If El Salvador could establish the same kind of uneasy truce that for more than six months has stopped most of the killing in Nicaragua, it might be tough for the combatants to restart the war.

Contra Intransigence Broke Talks

In his July 30 radio address, President Reagan assured the nation that it was U.S. failure to continue aid to the Contras that had caused the peace talks in Nicaragua to break down. Saying that only its resumption would get the Sandinistas back to the negotiating table, he urged the Congress to pass an aid package now being put forward by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., which includes military as well as logistical support.

As usual, the president has turned the situation in Nicaragua on its head. The peace talks broke down not because of the suspension of U.S. aid to the Contras, but because the Reagan administration and the Contra faction led by Col. Enrique Bermudez wanted them to break down. On June 9, Contra negotiators tabled a series of demands they knew the Sandinistas could not accept — indeed, that no self-respecting government would accept. They demanded, for example, that all captured Contras be freed immediately and without questions, even though the Contra army remains in the field under arms; that all soldiers drafted into the Sandinista army be allowed to go home immediately; and that all Supreme Court justices be forced to resign and the Contras then given the right to name the majority of new justices. These "non-negotiable" demands, moreover, were put forward as an ultimatum, which the Sandinistas were given just two hours to accept!

When the Sandinistas replied that they were prepared to discuss the demands but not to accept them on a non-negotiable basis, the Contras walked out of the talks and Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams and his men, with their inimitable chutzpah, rushed to announce that the peace process had broken down because of Sandinista intransigence!

But if it was the Reagan administration which engineered the suspension of the peace talks, responsibility for the internal crackdown that followed in Nicaragua rests more squarely on the Sandinistas. True, reaching the full opening to democracy is contingent upon ending the war. With the peace talks halted, Sandinista incentives to press ahead with the democratization process were reduced.

True also, the United States has been funding the opposition newspaper La Prensa and one can imagine how frantically the CIA station in Managua has been trying to convert political rallies into civil disturbances — to do anything, in fact, which would provoke the Sandinistas to overreact and move against internal dissent. But, on the other hand, the Sandinistas seemed ready to move against the political opposition, and close La Prensa and several radio stations irrespective of anything the CIA did. Opponents have become increasingly vocal and the Sandinistas don't like it. Whether the one or the other, whether provoked by the United States or simply reflecting an aversion to democratic processes, the crackdown was a serious mistake on the part of the Sandinistas. If the former, the Sandinistas foolishly fell into the trap planted for them by the Reagan administration. If the latter, their aversion is inconsistent with the spirit of the peace plan put forward by President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica and must be overcome. Perhaps negative reaction abroad is bringing that point home to them. La Prensa has already been reopened and a number of the radio stations soon will be.

Meanwhile, the Reagan administration hopes that reaction in the U.S. Congress to recent events in Nicaragua will be such as to open the way to more Contra aid. But that is to beat a dead horse. The hard fact is that Contra aid didn't work before and it would work no better now. No matter what the mistakes committed by the Sandinistas, aid to the Contras will not solve our problems in Nicaragua. On the contrary, it would violate the Arias plan and give the Sandinistas the pretext for a more comprehensive crackdown.

One reason the Contra play won't work was pointed up by a poll taken in June by the Jesuit-run Central American University in Managua — the first independent poll to have been taken in Nicaragua since 1979. There will be those who will question its accuracy and objectivity, but the poll can hardly be seen as biased in favor of the Sandinistas. Only 28 percent of those polled identified with the Sandinistas.

Another reason the Contra policy won't work is that it isn't supported by the other Latin American countries. The United States has tried unsuccessfully to persuade the other four Central American states to take a united position against Nicaragua and in favor of the Contras. Guatemala and Costa Rica have refused.

Wayne S. Smith, adjunct professor of Latin American studies at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies, is the author of "The Closest of Enemies" (W.W. Norton), an account of U.S.-Cuban relations since 1957.

POW Search

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Bill Hendon of Asheville, a driving force behind the POW-MIA issue, is scheduled to leave for Thailand next week with the promise of a reward of more than $2.4 million to any resident of Vietnam, Laos or Cambodia who returns a live American soldier to United States custody.

Hendon and the Washington-based American Defense Institute have received commitments of $100,000 each from 21 congressmen and three private citizens, along with pledges from hundreds of others who believe American servicemen are still being held in communist prisons 15 years after the end of the Vietnam War.

grant to a University of North Carolina at Asheville scientist for research into a procedure that could help clear the Pigeon River of its coffee color.

Environmental scientist Richard Maas has demonstrated since April a colleague's technique for clearing the river. Last month, Maas moved the tests from individual vials to a tabletop treatment plant that continuously pumps the brown water through a series of hoses and additives until clear.

Maas said the process, now awaiting a patent, can clear Pigeon River water more completely and economically than $100 million plans required of Champion in the company's new wastewater permit.

Charlotte Jury Indicts 65 People In Food-Stamp Fraud Investigation

By PAUL NOWELL

Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — A federal grand jury in Charlotte has indicted 65 people after a 14-month food-stamp fraud investigation, during which food stamps were exchanged for everything from cocaine to cash to a car.

"The investigation revealed that food stamps have become a virtual second currency in Charlotte," said U.S. Attorney Thomas Ashcraft.

"They are used to purchase cash, cocaine, marijuana, cars, televisions, VCRs, telephones, guns, clothing and other items," he said. "Food stamps have also been used for illegal gambling and to pay for hotel rooms."

Some of the suspects — 52 of whom had been arrested by Thursday night — were charged with exchanging drugs and guns for food stamps, Ashcraft said. In all, almost $127,000 worth of food stamps was said to have been involved in the illegal trafficking.

The arrests were announced at a news conference attended by local, state and federal officials, including Robert Beuley, inspector general of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which runs the federal food stamp program.

"This is the kind of abuse that undermines the goal of the food stamp program, which is to provide nutritious food to the needy," Beuley said.

Beuley described the investigation — dubbed Operation STIC for Stop Trafficking in Charlotte — as one of the largest his agency had ever been involved in.

"Based on the number of people and amount involved, I'd tell anyone in the drug trafficking business to lay off food stamps," he said.

Authorities said the investigation was launched in May 1987 after Beuley's office received a number of citizen complaints about illegal food stamp trafficking in Charlotte.

Using undercover officers from the USDA and the Charlotte and Mecklenburg County police departments, authorities investigated 10 Charlotte-area grocery stores.

A total of 132 illegal transactions between the undercover officers and 68 suspects were conducted during the course of the investigation, authorities said.

The 65 suspects are accused of buying the food stamps so they could redeem them for cash, authorities said. In most cases, they said, the suspects paid as little as 35 cents on the dollar for the food stamps. For example, someone wanting to buy a television worth $200 would have to pay $400 in food stamps. The suspect could then go to the bank and redeem the stamps at their full face value, authorities said.

Ashcraft said five of the indictments returned by a federal grand jury in Charlotte charged 13 of the 65 suspects with drug charges.

Adam Rivers Jr., the owner of Rivers Mart and Laundromat in Charlotte, was charged with 16 drug charges, nine food stamp violations, two gun-related charges, Ashcraft said. If convicted, he added, the federal government could seek the forfeiture of his business and two vehicles.

While most of the 65 suspects live in the Charlotte area, some were from Gastonia, Huntersville and Shelby.

Premiums

RALEIGH (AP) — Officials of the state's largest health insurer, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, have predicted that its premium increases for 1988 will average 40 percent.

The projected increase represents an even higher jump than the estimated average increase of 25 percent for 1987, said James Singleton, director of public relations.

Singleton made the comments after Blue Cross released a "white paper" analyzing soaring hospital costs. The report, based on a survey of 10 representative hospitals in the state, estimated that hospital budgets for the year that began July 1 would be up an average of 18 percent. Most of the increase will come from higher charges to patients.

Other health insurers in the state have been raising their rates at an average of 30 percent this year, said Leonard Wood Jr., deputy commissioner of the N.C. Department of Insurance.

President

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — James O. Roberson has been elected president of the Research Triangle Foundation, succeeding interim president Dr. John T. Caldwell, the foundation said.

Roberson currently is president of the Louisville, Ky., chamber of commerce, and his new appointment is effective Sept. 1, said Louis C. Stephens Jr., chairman of the foundation.

The Research Triangle Park is the largest university-related research park in the nation, and was established by the foundation in 1958. The park began as a 4,000-acre parcel and has grown to include almost 7,000 acres with more than 50 organizations as residents. The facilities located in the park employ 32,000 people.

Fire Death

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — A 30-year-old Lenoir County man was charged with murder Thursday in the death of a man found dead in a mobile-home fire, authorities said.

Jerry Eason surrendered peacefully at his house hours after firefighters extinguished the blaze that apparently killed 34-year-old Guy Warren, authorities said.

Authorities speculated that Eason and Warren had fought previously and the fire was set in retaliation.

Charged

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A former Winston-Salem nightclub owner was in the Guilford County Jail after he and four other men were arrested on charges that they bought and sold large amounts of cocaine in North Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Robert Pons Martinat, 40, of Pilot Mountain is charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and three counts of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute. Martinat was a part-owner of the defunct Players nightclub in Winston-Salem until 1984, when he was convicted of drug charges in the same case that sent Winston-Salem lawyer Renn Drum Jr. to prison.

Martinat was one of five men indicted by a federal grand jury in Winston-Salem last week.

Martin Editorial

RALEIGH (AP) — A newspaper allied with the National Congressional Club has blasted Republican Gov. Jim Martin, saying his campaign has strayed from conservative principles.

Common Sense, a tabloid newspaper with ties to the club, which allied with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chided Martin for inconsistency on the abortion issue, for proposing a preschool program for 4- and 5-year-olds that is favored by "left-wing sociologists in Chapel Hill" and for proposing an unbalanced state budget.

But the paper said it favored Martin's re-election.

Strike Ends At Turkey Processor

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — Representatives of the union that is trying to organize workers at a Hoke County turkey-processing plant say they'll file charges if the company refuses to rehire the leaders of an informal strike.

"I hope they do (refuse to rehire the leaders)," said Glenn Harris of the United Food and Commercial Workers union. "That's definitely grounds for charges."

Wildcat strikers at the House of Raeford turkey-processing plant returned to work Thursday. But they vowed to continue efforts to unionize the plant and press for concessions from management.

A group of about 100 workers from the plant's first shift gathered across from the turkey plant at 6 a.m. Thursday and walked together to the personnel office to pick up their time cards and clock in.

Workers coming out of the office said they were told they were being hired back unconditionally at their same rate of pay and were reminded that plant owner Marvin Johnson told them Monday he would give raises on Labor Day.

Some of those who walked out of the plant Monday demanding more pay, better working conditions and benefits had already gone back to work on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Johnson said Wednesday that all those still on strike were considered officially to have quit their jobs. But he said they would be hired back as long as their jobs had not been filled by replacements. He said he had hired about 25 new workers on Tuesday and an undetermined number on Wednesday.

Workers decided at a meeting with union officials Wednesday to go back to work Thursday.

"I figured we could do more damage on the inside than the outside," one worker said Thursday while waiting for his time card.

State's Handling Of Funds For Aging Plans Studied

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina faces the prospect of having to repay $18 million in federal funds for the aging unless state officials can document that the money was accounted for properly, it was reported Thursday.

State officials acknowledged that the Division of Aging had "lousy record-keeping," but they said they were confident that none of the money would have to be repaid.

"We're not going to lose $18 million," said David Flaherty, the state's human resources secretary. "I don't think that should even be implied."

At issue is not whether the state mispent the money, but rather the accounting procedures used to document that spending, state officials said.

"I agree that they have lousy record-keeping," said Joyce H. Johnson, controller for the state Department of Human Resources, whose office has taken control of the division's accounting since the problems occurred.

"The records are the worst ones I've ever seen in state government," Ms. Johnson said.

The issue could be a ticklish one for Republican Gov. Jim Martin, who has made programs for the elderly one of his top priorities this year. Democrats also have sought to put their stamp on new programs for the state's growing population of senior citizens. The Division on Aging has an annual budget of $33 million, with about $16 million of that coming from the federal government under the Older Americans Act. If the state were forced to repay $18 million, that could have serious consequences for programs for the aging, state lawmakers said.

"That certainly bothers me," said state Sen. James Richardson, D-Mecklenburg, chairman of the Senate Committee on Veterans Affairs and Senior Citizens. "That would hurt. I just hope it doesn't come to that."

Frank Nicholson, regional program director for the federal Administration on Aging, told state officials in a July 15 letter that a fiscal review of the state's administration of the federal Older Americans Act found significant deficiencies in the financial management of the program.

"The information provided to us indicates there may be the potential for substantial program funding disallowances," Nicholson wrote.

The problem, according to the review, is that $8 million in federal funds allocated for fiscal year 1987 and $10 million in federal funds allocated for fiscal year 1986 were not obligated, as required, by the end of the respective fiscal years.

The state has until Aug. 22 to present further documentation to the federal agency.

The Administration on Aging review also found that the Division of Aging has often failed to properly administer certain programs for the elderly.

"The North Carolina Division of Aging has adequate program policies and procedures to appropriately administer Older American Act programs," the review said. "It appears that in practice, however, these standards often are not used" by the staff.

Flaherty and state aging officials said most of the report's criticisms of the program administration were unwarranted.

Martin Wants Death For Drug Kingpins

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he will ask the Legislature to approve the death penalty for drug "kingpins" if he's re-elected in order to "get the message across ... that you're not going to fool around."

"You've got to set a standard, a punishment that gets the attention of people who otherwise wouldn't care," Martin said Thursday in an interview after a speech to the North Carolina Law Enforcement Training Association conference.

The penalty would be applied to any convicted drug dealer "who organizes six or more other drug dealers ... That's a racketeering organization," Martin said.

In his speech, Martin blasted the General Assembly for not approving proposals to abolish parole and good-behavior credits for drug traffickers; to give drug "kingpins" mandatory life sentences; to allow juries to consider involvement in drug trafficking when considering whether or not to sentence a convicted murderer to death; or to make it a felony "to possess any amount of cocaine," no matter how small.

Asked how he could get the Legislature to approve the death penalty proposal when it turned down less severe measures, Martin said, "You never know if you don't try."

"If we can call the public's attention to the way the legislative leadership has ignored these issues, then the public's going to rise up and demand that they do something about it," Martin said.

FAREWELL AUTOGRAPH — Attorney General Edwin Meese III, left, signs autographs for well-wishers after a reception in his honor at the Justice Department Thursday. Meese is scheduled to leave office later this month. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan Expected To Sign Internee Payment Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to sign legislation providing more than $1 billion in payments to Japanese-Americans who were held in World War II detention camps, bringing to a close what he calls "a sad chapter in American history."

The House on Thursday, on a 257-156 vote, sent to the president legislation calling for $20,000 payments to each survivor. The Senate approved the bill by voice vote last week.

Once signed by Reagan, the attorney general will have one year to compile a list of the estimated 60,000 surviving internees. Those eligible then will be able to claim the $20,000 payments, providing they agree to drop any other internment camp claims pending against the government.

The oldest of the internees will be given priority on receiving the payments, which will total about $1.25 billion. The payments will be made over a 10-year period to lessen the impact on the federal budget, with the first payments likely in about January 1990.

Relief for dislocated Aleut Indians also was included in the package. Payments of up to $12,000 will be made to surviving members of the Aleut Indian tribes who were removed from the Aleutian Islands during the Japanese attack on those islands in 1942.

For Japanese-Americans, the money is an apology from the U.S. government for having forced the estimated 120,000 people — both citizens and resident aliens — from their homes and jobs following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on Dec. 7, 1941.

In a letter earlier this week to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, Reagan said the bill will "close a sad chapter in American history in a way that reaffirms America's commitment to the preservation of liberty and justice for all."

For Rep. Norman Y. Mineta, D-Calif., passage of the bill was especially important. He was 10 years old when he and his parents were sent to a camp at Santa Anita racetrack in Southern California in 1942.

"Though this is a deeply personal issue for myself, and a comparatively small number of Americans, this legislation touches the heart and soul of what it means to be an American, and, therefore, the very core of our nation," said Mineta, who sat in the speaker's chair for the vote.

But Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., said, "I can argue that in a time of war, when a country is threatened for its very survival, as this country was, many things happened and many lives were disrupted for many reasons."

Rep. Helen Delich Bentley, R-Md., said her husband was a Korean War veteran and that he told her "if you want a fast divorce you vote for that legislation." Ms. Bentley said she, her husband and other veterans opposed the bill.

Rep. Patrick L. Swindall, R-Ga., disagreed with Ms. Bentley, saying "one of her constituents said we didn't start this war."

Meese Says His Farewells

WASHINGTON (AP) — Embattled outgoing Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who has faced a barrage of criticism for his conduct during 3½ years on the job, heard nothing but kind words at a farewell ceremony at the Justice Department.

Meese said he was "really overwhelmed" by the outpouring of praise which came mostly from men who are political appointees, although a few had risen through the career ranks.

During the two-hour ceremonies Thursday attended by hundreds of department employees, Meese was showered with plaques and other souvenirs including a tomahawk with a peace pipe, an inoperative hand grenade, and a cap supposedly designed for a czar.

None of the 21 speakers commented directly on independent counsel James C. McKay's investigation of Meese's personal financial dealings or on claims by two former Justice Department officials — Arnold I. Burns, the former deputy attorney general, and William Weld, former head of the criminal division — that a deep malaise had overcome the agency as a result of Meese's legal troubles.

McKay issued a report last month that concluded that criminal prosecution of Meese was unwarranted, although he said Meese probably violated tax laws.

Meese, who initially said McKay's report vindicated him, later attacked the report as well as the testimony by Burns and Weld, who criticized the attorney general on Capitol Hill last week.

The attorney general plans to leave his job later this month.

William Bradford Reynolds, Meese's counselor and one of his closest working confidants, said Meese has been "fully engaged and fully involved" in leading the department. "There is no rancor or vindictiveness" in the attorney general, he said.

The attorney general is a "friendly and affable" man who has a "genial nature" and "never loses his temper," said his spokesman, Patrick Kortzen. One of the best things about the job, Kortzen said, was, "It's never been boring."

Speakers at the farewell included FBI Director William Sessions; Solicitor General Charles Fried; J. Michael Quinlan, director of the bureau of prisons; Alan Nelson, head of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and several assistant attorneys general.

Meese has promoted civil rights, assisted Indians, worked with Europeans, helped spur the economy and cracked down on crime, various speakers said.

In his remarks, Meese thanked the Justice Department's 72,000 employees for their "selfless devotion," and cited the agency's handling of prison riots in Atlanta and Louisiana last November as one of its finest moments. Prison workers who had been taken hostage by Cuban inmates were released unharmed after more than a week of negotiations.

The ceremonies ran on so long that Meese said he was keeping his remarks short because the activities were "intruding on lunch hour." His wife, Ursula, and his daughter, Dana, sat in the front row.

Later in the day, Meese invited several hundred Justice Department officials and others to a drop-in party where he stood in a receiving line as people sipped white wine and punch and ate hors d'oeuvres.

Jackson Sues Over Videotapes

CHICAGO (AP) — Jesse Jackson says he's being exploited by a company selling videotapes of his speech to the Democratic National Convention without his permission. The company says it's a simple case of First Amendment rights.

Jackson is suing MPI Home Video of suburban Oak Forest to try to halt sales of the tape, and he testified in federal court Thursday in support of a request that the company be permanently barred from distributing it.

"It has hurt the ability of my family to negotiate with a distributor to sell my own words and image and likeness," Jackson told U.S. District Judge James B. Zagel as 100 spectators watched.

"It has reduced our ability to make a living off my work," he added.

At the close of the hearing, Zagel renewed a temporary order prohibiting MPI from distributing more of the tapes until Aug. 12. Another hearing was set for Aug. 11.

On the stand, Jackson said he received $100,000 four years ago from marketing a videotape of his speech at the 1984 Democratic National Convention.

MPI's distribution of this year's speech, he said, has limited his chance at making money.

Grand Jurors Indict Six People In Trading Probe

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A grand jury delivered the first-ever racketeering indictment against securities traders, including a former trader for Drexel Burnham Lambert, the firm at the center of Wall Street's insider trading scandal.

The 35-count indictment returned Thursday by a federal grand jury signaled a toughened attitude by authorities, marking one of the biggest outgrowths of the massive insider trading investigation that snared speculator Ivan Boesky in 1986.

The indictment charged a multimillion-dollar racketeering, conspiracy and mail and wire fraud scheme, naming five top partners and employees of Princeton-Newport Partners, headquartered in Princeton, N.J., and Newport Beach, Calif.

It also named Bruce L. Newberg, a former trader in the high-yield bond department of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

The indictment charges there was a scheme involving the bogus sale of securities between Princeton-Newport and Drexel to create more than $13 million in phony tax losses and avoid regulatory disclosure requirements. The indictment also alleged stock manipulation from July 1, 1984, to the present.

Drexel Burnham, which was not named as a defendant, has been the focus of intense government scrutiny stemming from the insider trading investigation. U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani declined to say whether any other Drexel officials or the firm itself would be indicted. There has been persistent speculation that Drexel soon would be charged with securities law violations. The firm has denied any wrongdoing.

"Obviously, today's indictment of Bruce Newberg, a former employee of the firm, is deeply disturbing," said Drexel spokesman Steven Anreder. He declined to comment further.

The indictment was the first to charge brokerage officials under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act, which originally was intended to fight organized crime and drug trafficking, attorneys said.

It carries severe penalties, including up to 20 years in prison and immediate seizure of assets.

Attorneys for the six defendants denied wrongdoing, and characterized the indictment as a pressure tactic to blackmail their clients into cooperating with the much-larger insider trading investigation.

"This harmless activity has been twisted into a RICO charge solely as a device to bludgeon these reputable people into testifying against others," said Paul Grand, an attorney for one of the defendants.

"We're pawns in a much larger game," said Robert Schwartz, another defense attorney. "When the elephants fight, it's the ants that get slaughtered."

Princeton-Newport issued a statement defending the accused, and emphasized that the firm itself was not charged. It said the use of the racketeering statute against the defendants "is inappropriate and unprecedented."

Giuliani declined to comment on those allegations, but said indictment "stands on its own."

"This is a multimillion-dollar crime," Giuliani told a news conference. "It happened not once, not twice. It was a classic pattern of criminal activity."

The indictment also alleged Princeton-Newport conducted fraudulent trading activity through Merrill Lynch & Co., but Merrill cooperated fully with the investigation and was not accused of wrongdoing.

Named as defendants were James S. Regan, 46, a managing partner of Princeton-Newport; Jack Z. Rabinowitz, 41, general partner; Charles M. Zarzecki, 40, partner and chief trader; Paul Berkman, 41, partner and trader in Princeton-Newport Arbitrage Partners, a subsidiary of Princeton-Newport; Steven B. Smotrich, 33, comptroller of Princeton-Newport; and Newberg, 31, securities trader in Drexel's high-yield bond department until early this year.

Each was charged with one count of conspiracy, one count of racketeering and one count of racketeering conspiracy. The five Princeton-Newport defendants also were charged with 32 counts of mail and wire fraud. Newberg additionally was charged with 26 counts of mail and wire fraud.

If convicted, the defendants face 20 years in prison on each racketeering count, five years in prison on each remaining count, and $250,000 in fines on each count for a total of $18.75 million.

All will be arraigned next Thursday in U.S. District Court.

EPA Backs Penalties For Waste Dumpers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is backing a congressional move to stiffen prison terms and fines for the kind of medical waste dumping that has left coastlines from Massachusetts to Maryland littered with syringes, dirty bandages and other hospital refuse.

Legislation drafted by Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., would make medical waste dumping at sea a federal crime punishable by up to $250,000 in fines and five years in prison.

A hauler dumping hospital debris less than three miles from shore today could face up to 15 years in prison and $250,000 in fines under the Clean Water Act, but violators outside the three-mile limit would face a maximum of $50,000 in fines and one year in prison under the applicable Marine Sanctuary Act.

Hughes expressed concern that the current laws may not apply to liquid medical waste or cover streams and other non-navigable waters.

"It's clear that our existing state and federal laws dealing with the handling and disposal of medical wastes are inadequate and are not being properly enforced," Hughes said. "It's equally clear that time has come to treat this problem as a criminal offense, not just a regulatory matter."

Hughes, chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime, said he hoped the measure would act as a deterrent. And he said he would consider adding one provision to allow federal agents to claim the vessels and trucks used by illegal dumpers and a second provision to extend coverage to land dumping. Bill Muszynski, deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency for the New York-New Jersey region, told the subcommittee the agency supports the measure.

"Clearly, it is the feeling of most people that up to a year (in prison) is insufficient," Muszynski said.

Last year, the problem of medical waste washing up on beaches was relegated to New Jersey shores. But in the past month, syringes and other hospital debris have been reported extensively on New York beaches and sporadically in Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Late Wednesday, Maryland reported its first case of medical waste.

"The sad fact is, there seems to be no scarcity of persons willing to dump these wastes anywhere and everywhere in order to avoid the cost of proper disposal or to reap the profits of improper disposal procedures," Hughes said.

The congressman said it costs hospitals $50 to $60 a ton for disposal of non-infectious trash, but up to $2,000 a ton for "red bag" materials that must be handled by private incineration companies. An estimated 25 percent of the 150 million pounds of waste produced annually by hospitals is considered infectious, Hughes said.

The Hughes bill was introduced Tuesday. On Wednesday, the Senate passed a measure by Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., that would require a "cradle-to-grave" manifest system in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut to help officials track medical waste.

Prosecutors Claim 20 Pilots Cheated

MIAMI (AP) — A Federal Aviation Administration official hoping to secure a job in private industry devised a plan used by up to 20 military pilots to cheat on exams for commercial airline pilot's licenses, prosecutors charge.

The three-count federal indictment announced Thursday charged that four applicants for commercial licenses were given answers to written exams administered by the FAA official and a U.S. Air Force officer at Homestead Air Force Base, although neither was a designated FAA test examiner.

In addition, the indictment accuses at least one of the six defendants of obtaining an airline transport pilot license without ever taking the test and charges that some of the pilots gave false statements trying to cover up the scheme.

The accused leader of the operation, FAA Aviation Safety Inspector Charles Chinn, who is also a major in the Air Force reserve, allegedly devised the operation to help himself obtain employment.

"Chinn hoped to create a pool of pilots (to help him) with any job he would eventually secure in the private sector," said interim U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen.

No money was involved in the case, he added.

"The public should be shocked at the willingness of fighter pilots to cheat in this fashion," said Lehtinen, who called the indictment "essential in assuring that commercial aviation remains safe."

The tests — the Airline Transport Pilot test, the Flight Engineer test and others — are 75-question multiple-choice exams. Pilots must pass them to get FAA certification to fly civilian airliners.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Esther, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

EVIL HAMAN

BELIEVING THAT THE MAN WHOM THE KING WISHES TO HONOR CAN BE NONE OTHER THAN HIMSELF, HAMAN IS PRODUCE IN ADVISING THE KING JUST HOW TO HONOR THE MAN....

...BE SET UPON THE VERY HORSE WHICH THE KING RIDETH AND....

...LET THE KING'S MOST NOBLE PRINCE LEAD THIS MAN THROUGHOUT ALL THE STREETS OF THE CITY, PROCLAIMING THE KING'S DELIGHT IN HIM WHOM HE WOULD HONOR!

MAKE HASTE, THEN—AND DO ALL THAT THOU HAST SAID UNTO MORDECAI, THE JEW, FOR I WOULD HONOR HIM!

QUIVERING INWARDLY WITH RAGE, HAMAN CAN DO NOTHING ELSE BUT OBEY THE KING'S COMMAND! AND, AS HE LEADS THE ROYALLY ARRAYED MORDECAI THROUGH THE STREETS OF SHUSHAN, LOUDLY PROCLAIMING THE KING'S DELIGHT IN MORDECAI, THIS IS HIS BLACKEST HOUR—HIS MOST BITTER DEFEAT!

Priest Says Liberation Theology 'More Faithful To The Gospel'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
 AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A stimulating ally of the poor, the Rev. Gustavo Gutierrez, applies Christianity in ways that have prodded — and sometimes disturbed — the church world. He is known as the father of "liberation theology," which has drawn both acclaim and denunciations. He lately discussed his approach to U.S. and international church audiences. "To be a church of the poor is not to lose, but to affirm our identity," says the Peruvian Roman Catholic priest. "It is not to reduce the Gospel. It is to be more faithful to the Gospel."

Gutierrez, 60, of Lima, Peru, coined the phrase, "a theology of liberation" in a 1968 talk in a poor district, and later authored a seminal book by that name.

His ideas have ricocheted through modern church thought, elaborated by other theologians and gaining a widespread following, as well as some caustic and high-level criticism.

Humorously tweaking his own writings, he says: "The Vatican has devised a new form of torture. They have made me defend what I have written. I have had to reread my writings three times!"

Marking the 20th anniversary of "liberation theology," he was honored at a mid-July ecumenical gathering at Maryknoll, N.Y., headquarters of the mission order of Maryknoll Fathers and Sisters.

Liberation theology is hinged to the Bible's special concern for the poor and Jesus' declaration of purpose to liberate the suffering and oppressed. It identifies with their political struggles for better conditions.

The movement is particularly strong among worker "base" communities in South America. Critics have accused it of applying Marxist analysis to instigate class struggle and socialism.

Gutierrez says liberation theology, while using Marxist social analysis, "clearly excludes the possibility of adopting Marxism as a philosophical system which is in clear contradiction to a believer's perspective.

"This should be obvious to everyone."

The Vatican in 1984 condemned some forms of liberation theology, but then in 1986 offered a more positive assessment of it, recognizing values in it in pursuing social justice.

The critiques included some "relevant observations for myself," Gutierrez told National Catholic News Service. He said he became "more sensitive" to the need for varied approaches.

Among his observations culled by the National Catholic Reporter from his discourses at Maryknoll: "I am not interested in the future of liberation theology. I am interested in the liberation of my people."

"To announce liberation theology is to announce life, resurrection in the face of death."

"We must be friends of the poor. We do not love if we do not consider others as equals."

"I have learned from my people that to be a Christian is to find joy in the midst of suffering... In finding joy, I can better see the suffering."

Gutierrez also spoke at an international conference of Anglican bishops ending this weekend in England, calling commitment to the poor indispensable to living close to God.

He said the poor are most sensitive to the key biblical message — that God gives his love freely. "That is why the voice of the poor is important for all Christians."

In an interview carried by Lutheran World Information service, Gutierrez denied liberation theology fomenters class struggle, but he added: "There are conflicts in society, one of which is a confrontation among classes... It is necessary to overcome this situation in a perspective of justice and support for weak and marginalized peoples."

Asked about claims he reduced religion to politics, he said he tried to "make demands of the Gospel present in the social and political spheres. The preferential option for the poor based on faith in God and Jesus Christ does not mean any single political choice, but it does make demands."

He called right-wing charges that he is Marxist "absolutely false," declaring "Christian faith gives meaning to my life." He said "there is a kind of McCarthyism at large," also existing in "certain Christian sectors."

At an ecumenical dinner honoring him, he was called "the inspiration of the folks on the firing line" by the Rev. Robert McAfee Brown, a Presbyterian professor emeritus of the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, Calif.

China-appointed auxiliary Catholic Bishop of Shanghai Aloysius Jin, imprisoned 27 years for his faith, told Gutierrez "you did a lot of good for the Chinese church."

"Anti-religious propagandists said the church was for the rich. But we show your book, 'Theology of Liberation,' to the communists and we say to them, 'You see, the church is for the poor.'"

Lutherans Rule Out Gays For Ordination

CHICAGO (AP) — The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America says that none of three seminarians who publicly declared their homosexuality last year will be recommended for ordination in the 5.3 million-member denomination.

It said two of them, Jim Lancaster of Westminster, Calif., and Joel Working of Walcott, N.D., were ruled out because they would not pledge compliance with a policy allowing only non-practicing homosexuals to be ordained.

The third, Jeff Johnson of Lancaster, Calif., was excluded after he told his bishop he would comply with the celibacy requirement and would resign if that situation changed.

Bishop Lyle Miller of San Francisco said that Johnson's statement of compliance was "conditional and temporary and therefore not consistent with the spirit of the abstinence requirement."

Miller said Johnson "is a person of honesty and Christian faith," but differences between his position and church policy were "too significant to allow for recommendation."

Maryann J. Dotts of the Cape Coral, Fla., United Methodist Church told leaders of single adults at a meeting sponsored by the denomination's Board of Discipleship that the older population is increasing three times faster than any other age group.

"This is their time," she said.

Secretary Seeks Career Should Gifts Be Opened? In Professional Opera

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When aspiring opera singer Trudy Wodinsky found herself divorced and living on welfare, with an autistic son to support, her interest in music was put on hold.

It was an untoward happenstance for Trudy, an attractive 5-foot-11 brunette with dark eyes and long hair and the kind of figure that only recently got her into trouble when she wore stretch pants and high heels to the office.

Here she was, unable to support herself, a talented girl from a comfortable middle-class family on Long Island that was able to enroll her in violin lessons at age 9. Her father worked as an accountant five days a week and did gigs as a jazz saxophonist on weekends, playing weddings and bar mitzvahs. Her mother was a high school math teacher and later taught at Queensborough Community College.

Trudy won a scholarship to Manhattan School of Music, majoring in violin. Her passion for opera would come later. She was working in the college cafeteria when she met her husband-to-be, a student from Peru, a symphony conductor who eventually worked with singer Al Martino and others.

Married at age 18, Trudy had a son at 19. But the marriage fell apart after about eight years.

"I was on welfare for several years because my son's father wasn't supporting us," says Trudy, who now works as a secretary while actively pursuing an operatic career. She works mainly with some of New York's prestigious small opera companies, putting in long nights after long days at the office.

"At that time I couldn't do anything. I went from my parents' home to school to marriage. I was totally unprepared."

The road out of her welfare morass began with a part-time job in a photography studio in the apartment building on Manhattan's West Side, where she still lives. Next she worked in a health food store, then for a wholesale gourmet food concern during the Christmas rush. Her first full-time secretarial job was for an insurance agency.

"That got to be uncomfortable in certain ways, because it was only a two-person office and the other person was a man," she recalls.

Next came work at Gimbel's, first in the customer service department and then in the credit office. About three years ago, Trudy got her present job as a secretary at Corporate Property Investors, a Manhattan firm that, among other things, owns and manages shopping malls around the country.

As her son grew older and more active, Trudy was no longer able to control him. He now lives with his father in Queens.

While she still plays the violin professionally on occasion, she now spends her extra money for weekly sessions with voice teachers and coaches, two different things, serious singers will tell you. In the past few years she has had roles as a soprano with such amateur groups as the Amato Opera, Bel Canto Opera, New York Opera Theater and Manhattan Opera.

The most she has ever been paid for singing with these companies is a $100 honorarium. She does get paid, however, as a soloist with a choir that performs in the Catskills during the Jewish holidays.

"That's something that's very unfortunate in this country, that young singers often don't get paid and they do what I do, which is to support themselves in other ways," she says.

Her days are long these days, 9 to 5 in the office, most nights in rehearsal, no time for social life. A recent romance fizzled. Blame her busy schedule.

"Right now I'm involved with the Bel Canto Opera, which is a small opera company," she says. "I'm doing the part of a satyr, which is half human male, half goat. It's my second male part in a year. I don't know what they're trying to tell me. They told me it's definitely not type-casting."

Bill Zakariassen, music critic of the New York Daily News, said in a review of the Amato Opera Company's performance of "Salvator Rosa" that "Soprano Trudy Wodinsky was very appealing in the trouser role of Rosa's youthful assistant Gennariello."

But nobody would mistake Trudy Wodinsky for a guy in her street clothes.

Recently an executive in her company relayed word that she should dress more appropriately in her office, forgo the stretch pants that she was wont to wear.

"They were form-fitting," she says, laughing. "This day I was dressed for the theater. I thought I looked rather nice. I had on a nice black top and black high-heeled shoes."

A day or two later I was told I have to learn to project a corporate image."

Trudy says Re Koster, an elderly but well-known voice teacher in The Netherlands, has invited her to visit Amsterdam for some lessons.

"She came to New York and worked with several people," she says. "She likes me a lot and invited me to go. So I'm going to go and work very intensely for two weeks."

In November she will make her New York city recital debut at the Merkin Concert Hall under the auspices of the Hans and Rosy L. Epstein Committee for the Enhancement of Creativity Among Children.

What kind of voice does Trudy Wodinsky have?

"If I had to categorize myself I'd call myself a lyric coloratura soprano," says Trudy, who counts Dame Joan Sutherland and Beverly Sills among the singers she most admires. "Coloratura is the very highest of the voices and a lyric is lower and fuller. I'm kind of in between."

Trudy is realistic about her chances of finding a career in opera.

"There are too many Trudys out there, too many sopranos out there, too many people I'm competing with," she says. "How many people I don't know. Hundreds of thousands."

"I was pretty naive. In the beginning I thought, well, I'm talented, I have a pretty voice, I'm cute, so everything will work out for me. I had no idea how difficult it is."

DEAR ABBY: I have a question that only you can answer. I recently had a chistening for my daughter and was told by my husband's family (specifically my mother-in-law) that the gifts were supposed to be opened. She said everyone opens gifts at a christening.

Well, I didn't think it was appropriate since it wasn't a shower for me, it was for my daughter. Anyway, I didn't open the gifts and my mother-in-law was very angry. As she left, she was still commenting on how wrong I was.

I understand there aren't any set rules on this subject, but I would like to have your opinion. Was I... RIGHT OR WRONG?

DEAR RIGHT: I think you were wrong. Since usually only family and very close friends attend a christening, it would have given the occasion a festive air to have opened the baby's gifts. Guests enjoy seeing what others have brought and showing what they have selected.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns your letter about common-law marriages.

I worked for the Allotment Division of the U.S. Air Force when it moved to Denver from St. Louis, and the clerks had specified criteria upon which to evaluate a claimed common-law marriage.

"Living together for a specified number of years" is not enough to constitute a common-law marriage as legal. The couple living together must be known as man and wife by friends, neighbors, associates and by the landlady. They must profess to be husband and wife and receive mail addressed to them as Mr. and Mrs. If their acquaintances, business associates and friends recognize that they are merely "living together," they do not qualify as a married couple.

Further, if a couple establishes a common-law marriage in a state where such is recognized as legal, the marriage is recognized as legal in all the other 49 states. — MARIE PERLMAN, DENVER

DEAR MS. PERLMAN: Thank you for some valuable legal information, particularly since the living-together lifestyle appears to be gaining popularity.

Not all live-in arrangements are a trial for marriage; for some, it's a matter of economics.

Jigsaw Puzzle History Is No Mystery

NEW YORK (AP) — The jigsaw puzzle has come a long way since its invention over two centuries ago by a London mapmaker. These first puzzles, called dissected maps, were designed to help children learn geography.

Current puzzles offer almost unlimited choices for "kids" from 2 to 102, but this was not always the case, according to researchers at Random House Inc., which makes still-popular puzzles today for children and adults.

In the 1760s, printer John Spilsbury produced map puzzles with large pieces that slid together instead of interlocking like modern jigsaws. They were priced at $5, so only the wealthy could afford puzzles until the 19th century, when technological advances brought them within the reach of the middle classes.

Then, the range of titles broadened to include topics such as "Chronological Tables of English History for the Instruction of Youth" and "Lessons for Young and Old on Industry, Temperance and Frugality."

Puzzles reached America at the time of the Revolutionary War. However, they did not truly come into their own until the Great Depression of this century, when millions of American searched for inexpensive entertainment.

Puzzles today feature a wealth of themes, shapes, sizes and subjects, all reproduced with brilliant graphics on precision-cut pieces. Children's puzzles may depict favorite characters from books and movies, and can be printed on extra-large pieces designed especially for young children's hands.

Although today's jigsaw puzzles are more sophisticated than the earlier creations, they continue to be excellent teaching tools, experts agree.

Playthings magazine, the toy industry bible, reports that "parents seem to be latching onto puzzles these days in hopes that their children will develop earlier. They're discovering that children are capable of learning much more than anyone thought, at a younger age, and puzzles are a great tool for this."

"Puzzles encourage the imagination and help kids learn, adds Suzanne Glazer of Random House. "Perhaps that's why they continue to be a favorite. They teach problem solving, lead to a sense of accomplishment, and help children increase manual dexterity."

"It's important to select the right puzzle for a child's age and development," she points out. "For very young children, for example, choose inlaid puzzles with no more than 12 large pieces that fit into framework. These are designed for easy manipulation by young hands."

"For older children, ages 5 and up, boxed puzzles are available with up to 100 pieces. For teen-agers and adults, the most popular puzzles have 500, 1,000 or even 1,500 pieces that form intricate patterns, photographs or drawings."

Today the increased popularity of puzzles can clearly be seen in their growing sales, industry officials say. In 1986, puzzles accounted for $77 million in sales, and in 1987 sales rose to $86 million — an 11 percent increase in one year.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market steady to 25 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 44.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadborn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 43.75; Wilson 44.25. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 31.00; Wallace 31.00; Spivey's Corner 32.00; Rowland 32.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 60.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 53 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 62.45 cents. The market is very firm and the live supply is mostly adequate for a good, occasionally very good, demand. Average weights are light to desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,438,000, compared to 2,178,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply very short for a good demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 22 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 6-8 cents higher at mostly 3.00-3.14 in East and mostly 3.17-3.30 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 26-27 cents higher at mostly 8.57-8.72 in East and mostly 8.20-8.38 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.32-3.43; new crop corn 2.90-3.27; new crop soybeans 8.07-8.67. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 97 to 102 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, faced with news of continuing rapid growth in employment.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 3.73 to 2,122.87 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 5 to 2 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 263 up, 637 down and 483 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 16.88 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Before the market opened the Labor Department reported that the unemployment rate edged up to 5.4 percent last month from the 14-year low of 5.3 percent it reached in June.

Obituary

Woodard
Mrs. Maggie Maulsby Woodard of 1601 W. 5th St., Greenville died Thursday in Pitt Memorial Hospital. Funeral Services will be Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church. Rev. Luther Brown will be officiating with burial in Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Woodard was born to the late Rev. Tony Samuel and Clementine Maulsby in Bladenboro, NC (Bladen County). She spent her early childhood there. After moving to Greenville from Bladenboro, she joined what was then known as York Temple A.M.E. Zion Church. She attended school in New Bern, NC and graduated from Eastern North Carolina Academy. She continued her education in State Teacher's College, Elizabeth City, NC and then to St. Augustine in Raleigh, NC. She was married to the late Mr. Linwood Woodard. She was a member of the Senior Choir, a class leader, Golden Link Club member, a Deaconess, missionary in Tent Lodge #458 and labored faithfully in the Master's Vineyard. She was also a retired school teacher. Her survivors are a granddaughter, Denise Hughes of New York; a stepson, Fred Batts of Burgaw, N.C.; four nephews, Vernon Dawson of Greenville, NC, Alfonso Humphrey, Heber Dawson, Bronx, NY and Howard Maulsby, Washington, NC.; two nieces-in-law; Martha Jean Dawson of Greenville, NC and Frances Humphrey of New York. Indian Says Protection Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — Accused hostage taker Eddie Hatcher today demanded that state government protect Indians in Robeson County, claiming that 13 of the nearly 50 witnesses he planned to present at his trial have died this year. Many of the other witnesses have been threatened or otherwise harassed, Hatcher said at a news conference. If the state Commission on Indian Affairs cannot protect them through any other means, it should organize a militia, he said. "We need from protection from this commission," said Hatcher, standing outside the offices of the 27-member panel that sets policy dealing with North Carolina's Indian population. "They need to get off their rumps and do something." But the commission director, Bruce Jones, said he knew of no threats or suspicious deaths of potential witnesses in the Hatcher case. "I don't think we have the power to form a militia," Jones said. He said Hatcher is welcome to appear before the commission at its next meeting Sept. 8 and present any evidence of threats or other danger to North Carolina's Indians. Hatcher said the panel should call an emergency meeting to discuss the situation, noting the state law that created the commission says one of its purposes is "to provide aid and protection for Indians as needs are demonstrated."

If the commission does not take immediate action to protect the witnesses, it is a "fraud," Hatcher said.

Jones said the commission had worked to help Lumbee Indians in Robeson County, where they make up about one-third of the population, long before Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs were accused of invading the offices of the Robesonian newspaper Feb. 1. They are charged with holding up to 21 people hostage for roughly 10 hours, saying they wanted to call attention to alleged corruption and racism in the local government. Hatcher and Jacobs are scheduled to go on trial next month on federal hostage taking charges. "We've been a credible agency since 1971," Jones said. "I feel we do have credibility in the Indian community."

In The Memory Of Jesse Ray Patrick

It's hard to see tomorrow
When someone you love is gone.
And it's harder still to realize
That your life will still go on.
But the Lord won't give you burdens
Which He knows you can not bear,
And He will not leave you comfortless.
You'll always find Him there.
We're all our Father's children,
Here on earth and up above,
And your loved one now walks close to God, Surrounded by His love.

who three times has sought national office and has failed each time. "I haven't been asked," he said Thursday, in words that didn't exactly rule out accepting an offer.

Kemp is the darling of the right wing, touted by his backers as the man who can help cement Bush's conservative base for the fall election and reach out to blue-collar workers, as well. There is irony in that since six months ago, when conservatives had an opportunity to propel Kemp toward the presidential nomination, many said he wasn't tough enough.

Baker did not receive a request to fill out a questionnaire that Bush sent to other candidates, whispers an associate of another prominent candidate. True enough, says a Baker man, but as the former White House chief of staff, previously subjected to rigorous security clearances, that probably doesn't mean much.

Simpson is a personal friend of Bush but says he really isn't interested in joining the ticket. Just in case he gets interested, an aide to another potential vice president says Simpson is closely identified with the massive immigration bill that cleared Congress a few years ago and is viewed with suspicion by Hispanic voters.

Domenici, the New Mexico senator, is clearly interested. "I still believe it's a long shot," he said a few days ago. "But I can't go (to New Orleans) without a support group and without some plans."

Quayle of Indiana was the hot name one day last week. It didn't hurt any when Bush called a well-known Republican and asked his opinion of three possible running mates: Simpson, Dole and Quayle. For the record, Quayle says he would run if asked.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

RAISE THE PRICE & BARGAIN!

When you sell your home, is it best to set a high price initially, then be prepared to bargain? That's a question often asked by homeowners.

The first step towards setting the price on your home is called a "Competitive Market Analysis." This analysis compares your home to similar homes which have already sold, and to homes against which your home will be competing for buyers. The purpose is to establish a price range at which buyers would be likely to purchase your home.

Let's say that price range will be $98,000 - $101,000. Believing you will have to bargain, you ask $108,000, which invites buyers to "make an offer." When they do, it may be for $95,000! Here's what happens. The buyers, realizing the home is overpriced, and not knowing the suggested range was $98,000 - $101,000, assume you want to bargain. They don't want to lose in the process so they make an unacceptably low offer.

The entire process can be easily eliminated, possibly resulting in a full price offer. Ask your real estate agent for the list-to-sale ratio for your neighborhood. A 98.5% ratio means that buyers have been paying almost full price, thus by raising your price only 1.5% you could succeed in receiving the price you want without the frustration of making offers and counteroffers. Pricing your home properly from the beginning is an invaluable service offered by your agent.

Overpricing a home will often insure that it doesn't sell; whereas, underpricing it leaves you less financially satisfied. Please call me for a competitive price range when you decide to sell your home.

Kenan May Not Be Ready For Opener

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Only 36 days remain before Sept. 10, when the North Carolina football team is scheduled to show off its refurbished Kenan Stadium in a nationally televised game against Oklahoma, and the facility is far from ready.

The $7.1 million renovation is adding a new press box; 2,100 seats between the 40-yard lines; a new chancellor's box; a lounge for lettermen, and a lounge for the university's Educational Foundation. The new lights are already in place.

The hole blasted into the top middle of the north stands has not been filled with the seats which have already been sold and assigned. The south side press box is beginning to take shape but is only 25 percent covered by exterior siding. Seats below high-construction areas have been damaged and must be replaced.

Outside on the concourse level, scraps of metal and blocks of cement cover the ground.

Despite the work left, Metric Contractors officials insist the stadium will be operational for the Oklahoma game.

"We're going to be there," Roy Jackson, Metric's on-site project manager, told The Charlotte Observer. "I think we'll be working right up until Sept. 9 to get it ready. There will be some touching up left to do but nothing major. We took this job as a challenge, and it still is."

Work is going on virtually around the clock. Some people are putting in 17-hour days and almost all are working seven days a week.

"We're working our butts off," said Ray Blackwell, a carpenter. "I don't see how we're going to make it. It looks like a whole lot to be done to me. There's not enough manpower either. Two guys I know have quit."

University officials attempted to boost morale two weeks ago by providing the workers a prime rib lunch, which included a pep talk from football coach Mack Brown. T-shirts were handed out which read "We will make it happen ... Kenan Stadium on time." Workers were promised two passes each for the Oklahoma game if the deadline was met.

Since then, officials have given Tar Heels hats to those who worked extra hours on weekends. A barbecue is also planned for the workers and their wives.

"What we need is a totally positive mindset. There's no room for the faint of heart now," said Paul Hoolahan, an associate athlete director overseeing the renovation for the university. "The job is not measured any more in days and hours. It's down to seconds."

The incentives seem to be inspiring some workers, as evidenced by the numerous requests Hoolahan said he gets daily for hats. Other workers, however, are less impressed.

"It was nice at first, but by now it's grown old," said carpenter James Haney. "In this heat, you can't do but so much."

The contract between the university and Metric calls for the project to be completed by Aug. 25, with incentives included for an early finish and penalties if the deadline is not met. Athletic director John Swofford said he did not yet know whether Metric will be penalized.

Fight Plans

Boxers Sugar Ray Leonard, left, and Donnie Lalonde put their heads together Thursday at a news conference in Washington to announce that they will fight each other for the World Boxing

Association light heavyweight championship, held by Lalonde, and for the World Boxing Council super middleweight title, which is vacant. (AP Laserphoto)

Leonard Signs Contract To Go For Two Crowns

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I do what I feel," Sugar Ray Leonard says.

Once again, he feels like fighting, and once again he'll fight for a lot of money.

The 32-year-old Leonard signed a contract Thursday for his third comeback fight since 1984. This time it will be against Donnie Lalonde for the World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship held by the Canadian and also for the vacant WBC super middleweight title.

The super middleweight division has a 168-pound limit, seven pounds less than the light heavyweight limit.

"This fight is kind of a continuation of my lifestyle," Leonard said during a news conference. "I told you guys some time ago I was going to try to retire. I tried. It didn't work."

Leonard's last retirement came after he upset Marvelous Marvin

Hagler on a 12-round split decision April 6, 1987, and won his third title — the WBC middleweight championship.

"I'm going to say officially now I will never retire again," a grinning Leonard said.

The 28-year-old Lalonde called it "the opportunity of a lifetime."

A key to making the fight was the fact that Leonard will have the opportunity of winning at least pieces of five world titles.

Thomas Hearns, the only fighter to win four titles, is scheduled to try for a fifth sometime in late October when he challenges Fulgencio Obelmejias for the World Boxing Association super middleweight championship.

The scheduled 12-round bout will be held in the last week of October or the first two weeks of November, said Mike Trainer, Leonard's attorney.

A site has not been picked, but Las Vegas, Nev., apparently is the leading contender.

The fight will be shown on closed-circuit and pay-per-view television.

Trainer said he believes Leonard will top his previous best purse of $12 million, which he got for stopping Hearns for the undisputed welterweight title in 1981. He made a little under $12 million for fighting Hagler, Trainer said.

Trainer also said there is no question Lalonde's purse will top the record of $1.75 million for a light heavyweight title fight set by Michael Spinks when he outpointed Dwight Muhammad Qawi for the undisputed 175-pound title in 1983.

The fight will be shown on pay-per-view and closed-circuit television.

Trainer said both fighters will be working on percentages, but would not reveal them.

Bradley Players Back To Zero For Second Day Play

HIGH POINT (AP) — It will be back to square one for 72 LPGA golfers during today's second round of the $400,000 Pat Bradley International tournament. Or will it be back to square zero?

"Whether you are at plus six or plus 19, we are all zero today," said Pat Bradley, for whom the tournament is named. "The key is you've got to maintain your game."

Under the Stableford scoring system, which is being used for the first time at an LPGA event, players earn five points for an eagle, three for a birdie and none for a par. They lose one point for a bogey and three for a double bogey or worse and will not carry over their opening-round scores into today's second round.

That means Amy Benz, Kim Bauer and Janet Anderson, each of whom made seven birdies and finished with 19 points Thursday to win the first-day competition, will start at zero along with Bradley, who squeezed into the second round with only six points.

"You hate to throw (Thursday's) round out the window, but this is the format," Benz said. "I'm thankful for all the birdies. That's the key to this format."

However, some players didn't seem as comfortable with the new scoring system.

"It doesn't feel very good (starting back at zero)," said Val Skinner, who recorded 15 points Thursday. "You go out and play really well and it's like all for naught ... Don't I get a stuffed bear or something?"

Benz, riding a hot putter, took the early lead Thursday on the par-72, 6,260-yard Willow Creek Golf Club course.

Playing through occasional early-morning rain that soaked and softened the greens, Benz sank five 15-foot putts on the front side and put a 4-iron to within four feet on No. 9 for another birdie.

"It was weird not thinking score out there," said Benz, who split the first-day first- and second-place prize money of $6,000 with Bauer and Anderson. "It was weird thinking points. People are playing more aggressively."

Benz, who is 23rd on the LPGA money list this season with more than $96,000, made both of her bogeys on the back nine after putting shots in the bunker, adding only one birdie.

Neither Bauer nor Anderson have fared as well as Benz this year, but both said the tournament — and its scoring system — could turn out to be a boost to their confidence.

Bauer had three birdies on the front side and four on the back, while Anderson reversed that with four birdies on the front and three on the back. Both also had two bogeys.

"I think the format has brought back my aggressiveness," said Bauer, who has suffered from various injuries this year, including a broken finger she received catching a football last month. "I think this tournament will help me a lot."

"I've been struggling," said Anderson, who has failed to make the cut or has withdrawn in 10 of the 17 tournaments this season. "This is more of a go-for-broke attitude. There is more incentive in this format than any other."

Three players finished with 15 points, including Hall of Famer Kathy Whitworth, who recorded five birdies and no bogeys. Also at 15 points were Skinner and Cindy Rarick.

"The hardest part was keeping score," Whitworth joked.

Other top finishers included Juli Inkster with 14 points, Laurie Rinker with 13, and Nancy Lopez and Ayako Okamoto with 12 each.

Leading money-winner Sherri Turner advanced with seven points, while Bradley moved on after sinking an 18-foot birdie putt on her next-to-last hole.

It appeared Skinner would be the only afternoon starter to challenge the morning leaders when she carded four birdies on her first seven holes, but she managed only one more birdie the rest of her round.

Becker, McEnroe Advance With U.S. Hardcourt Wins

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A rash of upsets has swept the field at the U.S. Hardcourts tennis tournament and just five seeded players remain for the quarterfinals, including a relieved Boris Becker.

Becker, the No. 1 seed, beat Rick Leach 6-3, 6-4 during third round play Thursday night in his first tournament appearance since losing the Wimbledon final to Stefan Edberg on July 4.

"I was kind of pleased just to have it under my belt," said Becker, who never lost his serve against Leach.

"I am feeling more comfortable now. I think the key to the match was that he had to put a lot of first serves in because he wasn't winning a lot of points on his second serve," Becker said.

Fifth seed John McEnroe needed three sets to overcome 11th-seeded Australian John Frawley, 6-7, 6-2, 6-3.

The New Yorker has struggled while trying to regain the form that made him the world's top-ranked player from 1981-84.

"This was a hard-won victory," he said. "The consistency is not there. I need to put more pressure on the opponent."

Instead, Frawley tightened his grip on McEnroe by winning his service game at deuce to force the first tiebreaker. He took the tiebreaker 8-6 when McEnroe's approach sailed long.

McEnroe, seeking to improve his world ranking of 17, says his concentration lapses more easily than before.

"It's a new thing for me. I have more distractions in general. I'm thrown off for a couple of points and it's harder for me to get back in it," he said.

Tatum O'Neal, who is most likely a pleasant distraction for her husband, cheered him on along with 6,600 fans.

No. 2 Jimmy Connors, third seed Brad Gilbert, No. 6 Aaron Krickstein and No. 8 Peter Lundgren were beaten.

Becker, McEnroe and three other little-known Americans — No. 10 Derrick Rostagno, 13th seed Jim Pugh and No. 15 Robert Seguso — are the only other seeded players left in the tournament that ends Sunday.

Fourth seed Tim Mayotte, No. 7 John Fitzgerald and No. 14 Kelly Everndon exited in the second round on Tuesday.

Becker's quarterfinal opponent today will be Senegal's Yahya Dombia, a 6-4, 6-4 winner over Lundgren.

McEnroe next plays American qualifier Michael Robertson. Robertson beat Mark Dickson 6-4, 6-4.

Connors disappointed a partisan stadium court crowd with his 7-6, 4-6, 7-6 loss to Seguso.

It was only Seguso's second win

Pease Guides Houston To 13-9 Win Over Bills

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Brent Pease wasn't thinking as much against the Buffalo Bills, so he played better.

"I'm a better game player because I tend to think too much in practice," Pease said. "We have two good young quarterbacks. Right now, I don't think I'm No. 2."

Pease completed eight of 15 passes and drove the Oilers to a 37-yard go-ahead field goal by Tony Zendejas in a 13-9 NFL exhibition victory Thursday night.

Pease, who led the replacement Oilers to a 2-1 record during the NFL players' strike last season, is battling Cody Carlson for the No. 2 quarterback position.

"I did well, but I made some mistakes, too," said Pease, who played the second half. "(Willie) Drewrey made two great catches that weren't thrown so well."

Starting quarterback Warren Moon directed the Oilers on their only touchdown drive on the first series and then sat out the rest of the game.

"I wanted to make sure I executed the plays we ran while I was in there because I knew I wouldn't play very much," said Moon, who completed three of three passes for 62 yards.

Buffalo's Kerry Brady kicked second-quarter field goals of 33, 25 and 21 yards for a 9-7 halftime lead.

But Zendejas kicked the go-ahead 37-yarder with 2:42 to go in the third quarter and added a 22-yarder with 11:20 left in the game.

Buffalo played its exhibition opener without starting quarterback Jim Kelly, recovering from an ankle injury.

Backup quarterback Frank Reich played the first half but suffered a shoulder injury and yielded to Stan Gelbaugh in the second half.

"The impressions I had (of Gelbaugh) were favorable," Buffalo Coach Marv Levy said. "He showed good touch. I thought he threw nicely."

were negative, but Bills officials weren't sure when he would return to practice.

Mike Rozier had runs of nine and 11 yards in the Oilers' touchdown drive and Moon hit running back Allen Pinkett on a 43-yard pass play to the Bills' one-yard line.

"It's great to get the win and still play all those people," Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville said. "It was fun to watch the first unit play."

"They hit hard and executed well. I feel like we're going to be a good football team."

The game was a homecoming for Bills rookie running back Thurman Thomas, who was a schoolboy player at nearby Sugar Land Willowridge. Thomas was a work horse in the fourth quarter.

"Once we got down the fundamental plays that worked, I guess the coach wanted to stick with it," Thomas said. "I was happy with my performance but I wasn't happy with the game. I hate to lose."

Sports Notes

Elliott Puts Image 'On The Line'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bill Elliott puts in a lot of hours and a lot of work preparing his Ford Thunderbird for the Winston Cup stock car series. On Thursday, he spent a lot of hours at the local Ford Motor Co. light truck assembly plant, getting a taste of what it's like to put a car together.

For 10 hours, the 32-year-old Elliott set aside his fire-retardant driving suit in favor of a workman's coveralls as he entered the world of the automobile assembly line.

"My life revolves around automobiles, and when I met many of the assembly employees ... I enjoyed being with them," Elliott said. "It was great." Elliott learned a lot about several of the assembly-line jobs, but said he "never intended to change careers."

Ford industrial relations manager Tom Ryan said Elliott punched in at 6 a.m. with the rest of the shift workers. He spent some time spot-welding in the body shop, worked a stretch in the trim department, did some spray-painting and drove a forklift for the engine assembly line.

During a visit in June marking the 75th anniversary of the plant, which builds Ranger compact pickup trucks and Ford Bronco II sports vehicles, Elliott expressed an interest in finding out what work on "a high-quality assembly line" was like.

He said he didn't just want to make a "celebrity appearance" and in fact appeared visibly upset when the media showed up at the plant.

"It doesn't have anything to do with promotion," Elliott said. "I just wanted to get to know the guys, let them know I'd be willing to come in here, work and see what it's like."

Employees held contests to see who would win the right to work alongside Elliott, whose racing nickname of "Awesome Bill" was changed to "Wild Bill" by co-workers who watched his performance at the wheel of the forklift.

Forklift driver Dennis Hayes said Elliott is "obviously comfortable behind a wheel, but he did get behind on feeding pallets."

"In a couple of days," Hayes added, "I'd have him up to speed." Hayes and other workers dressed up the lift in Elliott's racing colors, complete with the No. 9 and beer decals.

The plant workers got along well with Elliott, joking with him and ribbing him when he fell behind in his work.

"It takes a special breed of people to do what we do," Rick Bennett, an engine line worker, said. "It's tedious work, but he fit right in. He's just like one of us."

"Work's work," Elliott said. "I just wanted to show them that I was willing to come in and spend time with them," to give them "a pat on the back."

"It's no different," Elliott said of the long shift on the line. "I work a lot of 14- and 16-hour days. Everybody sees just what you do on Sundays, but they don't see what you do leading up to it."

Elliott said he wasn't a natural at everything involved with assembly line work, but added, "Everybody helped me out."

Several workers asked Elliott for an autograph, and others had snapshots taken with him.

Elliott spent his half-hour lunch break chatting with workers between bites on a bologna sandwich. After the shift, everybody got together at a local restaurant to talk about the day's work — and the plant's worker for a day.

Allison Getting Differing Therapy

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A spokesman for Bobby Allison's racing team said the veteran driver is undergoing different types of therapy "to help him down the road a bit."

Allison was seriously injured June 19 in a NASCAR race at Pocono International Raceway, and last Sunday was moved to Lakeshore Hospital in Birmingham from an Allentown, Pa., hospital.

Eddie Gossage, spokesman for Allison's team, said Thursday that Allison is walking and bracing himself on parallel bars to increase his strength.

"The doctors say it will be a couple of weeks before they can completely evaluate his situation," Gossage said. "After his release from the hospital he will continue in therapy for some time at home."

He said Allison is undergoing speech, physical, occupational and recreational therapy.

The crash caused a concussion, broken ribs and a broken leg.

Wilson Captures Swimming Championship

TARBORO — Wilson captured first place in the East Carolina Swim League Championships held recently at Tarboro.

Defending champion Greenville finished fourth in the meet.

Greenville Swim Club members placing in the event are as follows:

Eight and under Boys: David Simo, 1st in 25 back, 3rd in 100 IM, 3rd in 25 free, 3rd in 25 breast, 4th in 50 free and 4th in 25 fly.

Eight and under Girls: Kathryn Hicks, 6th in 25 breast, 8th in 25 back, 7th in 100 IM, 3rd in 50 free, 7th in 25 free, 3rd in 25 fly.

Stewart's One-Hitter Paces A's

By The Associated Press
This time, the Oakland Athletics got only two runs for Dave Stewart. It could have been 20.

Stewart pitched the first one-hitter of his eight-year career, yielding only Jay Buhner's single leading off the third inning. The two runs were enough as Oakland beat Seattle 2-0 Thursday night.

Stewart, 14-10, won his first eight decisions this season and then lost 10 of the next 14.

"People were all asking, 'What's wrong with Dave Stewart?' But there was nothing wrong with him. We just weren't scoring runs for him," said catcher Terry Steinbach, who broke up a scoreless game with an RBI double in the seventh.

Indeed, Stewart isn't used to much offensive support — he's had nights where he was lucky to get any runs at all. In his 10 losses, the A's have scored a total of 16 runs.

Thursday night, he was at his best. After Buhner's hit, Stewart retired 16 straight Mariners. He struck out seven and walked one.

"For a guy who's 'struggling,' I feel pretty good about it," Stewart said after besting Mike Moore. The complete game was Stewart's fifth straight and 12th of the season, giving him the major league lead in that category.

"It's by far my best game. I only walked one guy, gave up one hit and got a shutout. You can't do much better than that. If I'd given up 10 hits and shut them out I'd feel good." In the battle for the American League East lead, Detroit romped past Boston 11-6. It was only the second loss for the Red Sox under Manager Joe Morgan, who is 19-2 since taking over from the fired John McNamara on July 14.

Also, it was Minnesota 2, Toronto 1, and Baltimore 5, Cleveland 0. New York's game at Milwaukee was rained out.

Moore pitched almost as well as Stewart. At 4-13, he hasn't gotten much help from the Seattle bats.

"Mike pitched 23 consecutive scoreless innings in June and all he had to show for it was one win," Mariners manager Jimmy Snyder recalled. "What we have to do is make good pitching count."

Ron Hassey beat out an infield single leading off Oakland's seventh. After a fielder's choice, Terry Steinbach drove in the game's first run with a double. Doug Jennings made it 2-0 with a pinch-hit single.

Moore pitched his fifth complete game, allowing seven hits, striking out four and walking none.

Tigers 11, Red Sox 6
At Detroit, the Tigers rapped around Roger Clemens to win the opener of the five-game series between the leaders of the AL East.

While Walt Terrell was winning for the third time in four decisions since the All-Star break, Clemens, 15-6 — he was 10-0 on the road this season — lasted only 5 1-3 innings, giving up seven runs on nine hits. It was only the second time in 25 starts that Clemens had not pitched into the seventh inning.

He wasn't real worried about it. "This is a ballpark where you can put runs up in a hurry if a pitcher is struggling," Clemens said. "I was struggling all the time out there."

"We've got a long way to go yet. We'll see them four games at our place next week and we've still got four more here, too, so we'll see. Our guys were putting up numbers, too."

Todd Benzinger put up the best Boston numbers with two home runs. Dwight Evans and Jim Rice also homered.

But they couldn't match the Tigers, who broke out of a hitting slump that had seen them bat only .207 in the previous 13 games. Alan Trammell had a pair of bases-loaded doubles, knocking in five runs and Matt Nokes went 3-for-3, scoring twice and driving in two runs.

"We're just trying to get something going," Trammell said. "The thing is: you don't push a button and say, 'Let's go score six today.' We're trying, believe me, but it just doesn't work out that way."

Twins 2, Blue Jays 1
At Toronto, Allan Anderson pitched a four-hitter and Kirby Puckett homered as Minnesota surpassed its road victory total for all of last year.

Minnesota was 29-52 on the road in 1987, winning the World Series with four victories in the Metrodome. The Twins are 30-25 on the road this year.

Anderson, 9-7, did not walk or strike out a batter in winning for the fourth time in five decisions. He got 17 groundball outs, including two double plays.

Orioles 5, Indians 0
The Orioles completed their first series sweep since Aug. 18-20 last year, when they took three of the Angels in Anaheim. Dave Schmidt, in his first start since last Aug. 22, and Doug Sisk combined for the shutout.

All five Baltimore runs were unearned.

The host Orioles scored three runs in the second inning off Greg Swindell, 12-10, and two more in the fifth. The Indians made two errors and catcher Chris Bando was charged with a passed ball in the second inning.

An error by shortstop Ron Washington kept the Orioles alive in the fifth. Swindell had fanned the first two hitters before walking Cal Ripken. Washington booted Eddie Murray's grounder, and Mickey Tetleton followed with a two-run double.

In four career starts against Baltimore, Swindell has pitched 32 2-3 innings and allowed only two earned runs.

Tar Heelers Rally For 7-6 Win

FORT BRAGG — Greenville's Tar Heel Little League all-stars rallied from a 3-0 deficit to defeat Sylva, 7-6, Thursday, in the losers' bracket of the State Little League baseball tournament.

The victory sends the Tar Heels up against Hudson, the only team to have beaten them, today. The winner will advance to the finals against the lone unbeaten left in the double-elimination field, Cherryville.

Sylva jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring three times. But pitcher Russell Williamson settled down and retired 12 straight batters between then and the fifth inning, keeping Greenville in the game.

The Tar Heels tied it up in the third, then struck for the lead in the fourth. Derrick Hopkins singled and Greg Pearsall reached on a fielder's choice that left both safe. Williamson walked and Nicky Phillips followed with a single to drive in both Hopkins and Pearsall.

Two more Greenville runs crossed in the fifth to up the lead to 7-3.

Sylva, however, rallied for three runs in the sixth inning with only one out, but had a baserunner thrown out trying to steal. Williamson then fanned the final batter to end the game.

Greenville's pitching in the series thus far has been strong with only five walks, including two against Sylva Thursday, in four games thus far.

Phillips led the Tar Heel hitting with three, including a triple. Pearsall and Hopkins each had two.

Ninth-Inning Run Evens Series, 1-1

KERNERSVILLE — Kernersville pushed over a run in the bottom of the ninth inning to nip Snow Hill, 5-4, in game two of the State American Legion baseball finals.

The victory by Kernersville evened the best-of-seven series for the state championship at one game apiece.

Kernersville took the lead with a run in the first inning and added a second run in the third. Snow Hill finally got into the act in the top of the fourth, cutting it to 2-1. Shay Beaman walked and scored on a double by Chris West.

But Kernersville came right back with a run in the bottom of the inning, then added a fourth one in the fifth frame to make it 4-1.

Beaman and West teamed up again in the sixth to account for Snow Hill's second run. Beaman singled this time and once again scored when West doubled off the fence, just missing a home run.

It remained 4-2 until the top of the ninth when Snow Hill rallied to tie it up at 4-4. Cedric Collins singled and Mike Vandiford drew a pinch-hit walk. George Burnette then doubled to drive in both runners and knot the game, but Snow Hill was unable to advance Burnette further.

Kernersville then came back to score the game-winner in the bottom of the ninth. Johnny Slade singled and was sacrificed up. Cameron Briley was then intentionally walked and on a two-strike pitch, Eric Norris was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

Kevin Cockrell then slapped the ball through the middle of the infield to score Slade with the game-winning run.

Cockrell led the Kernersville hitting with two in four trips while West had three hits in four appearances for Snow Hill.

The series moves to Snow Hill for the next three games, starting tonight at 8 p.m. at Greene Central High School. Saturday and Sunday's games will also be played at Snow Hill at 8 p.m. If necessary, the series will then return to Kernersville for Monday and Tuesday night games.

The winner of the series will advance to the Southern regional tournament.

Smith, Ferrell Still Have Hopes Of Making Hornets

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Ranzino Smith of North Carolina and Duane Ferrell of Georgia Tech have survived the latest cut by the Charlotte Hornets.

Neither was drafted when the NBA made its three rounds of selections in June. That didn't seem to bother Smith, but it did rankle Ferrell, a four-year starter at Georgia Tech.

"I was expecting to get drafted, knowing the four years I had at Georgia Tech," Ferrell said. But he said he felt better after the draft when about half a dozen NBA teams got in contact with him.

Smith didn't seem concerned about not being drafted. The main thing, he said, was that he wanted a chance to make an NBA roster.

Three players who didn't make it, in cuts announced Wednesday, were 7-0 center Brett Vroman, 6-8 forward Joe Binion and 6-7 forward Reggie Gaines. The Hornets now have 17 players who will compete in the exhibition games this week.

Meanwhile, the Hornets invited Tim Kempton to their camp for rookies and free agents as something of a favor. As it turns out, he has been one of their favorites in the first few days of practices.

The Hornets are desperate for inside bulk, and Kempton stood out in practices Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the old Charlotte Coliseum. Kempton is listed as a 7-footer, but he is closer to 6-10 and weighs 240 pounds.

"We don't have any illusions," Hornets vice president Carl Scheer said Wednesday. "He's a journeyman who works hard. But there's a place for guys like that in the NBA."

There may be a place on the Hornets' roster for Kempton, who came out of Notre Dame in 1986.

Kempton was far from being a star for the Fighting Irish. He averaged 10.6 points and 5.9 rebounds as a freshman. But after that, he said, he failed to improve. Kempton said he was stubborn and didn't learn as he should have. In his senior year, he averaged only 6.5 points and 5.1 rebounds.

Kempton played 66 games with the Clippers in 1986-87, averaging 4.4 points per game.

He spent last season in Italy, playing for a pro team in Naples. He averaged more than 17 points a game, chipped in nine rebounds a game and improved his ball-handling away from the basket.

"I feel confident," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh after practice Wednesday. "I think I have to improve as a post-up player, but I feel confident stepping away from the basket."

Kempton is lucky to have the shot with the Hornets. He is represented by Larry Fleisher, who is also executive director of the NBA Players Association. Fleisher mentioned Kempton to Scheer and Scheer invited Kempton to the camp.

Kempton will play when Charlotte's rookie team competes in the old Coliseum Friday and Saturday against other rookie teams.

Michael Holton scored 15 points and Ralph Lewis added 14 to lead the Charlotte Hornets to a 98-87 victory over the Atlanta Hawks Thursday night in the NBA Summer Preview exhibition.

Six of the Hornets players had NBA experience, Charlotte coach Dick Harter noted.

"We were very aggressive," Harter said. "The score was a very nice surprise, but we had more guys with NBA experience. At one point, we had five on the floor with NBA experience and they had none."

While Harter didn't complain about the victory, he said the main purpose of the game was to evaluate talent.

"You can't say out of this group, a certain number will make it to the team, but certainly Ralph Lewis and Michael Holton are in pretty good shape," Harter said. "But the best guard play of the week was Rickey Green Tuesday afternoon. His guard play was light years ahead of anyone else."

Holton, who led the team at point-guard the first time he took the floor, said he was confident he could add to the team.

"I'm not concerned with all the guards the Hornets have," he said. "I think I can play and contribute to this team."

Harter said he will make one or two more cuts before Friday night's game and will take 12 players when the Hornets head to Miami for three more nights of doubleheader games beginning Monday night.

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The Myrtle Beach Tennis Festival has announced that Jimmy Connors will play in Myrtle Beach on Oct. 1.

Southern Pitt Team Divides Four Games

The Southern Pitt 9-10 year old all-star baseball team recently competed in the Southeast Regionals in Jackson, Miss., and came away with a 2-2 record in the event.

Expos Climbing Back Into Contention

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The Montreal Expos are getting closer, but that's not good enough for Manager Buck Rodgers. "We're not playing to get close," he said. "We're playing to win this. We're 6 1/2 out, and we still have two months to play. We're not out of it by any means."

The Expos held on to beat the Pirates 3-2 Thursday night in Pittsburgh. The Pirates stayed four games behind the National League East-leading New York Mets, who lost 4-3 to Chicago, while the Expos crept within 2 1/2 of Pittsburgh. The Pirates now have lost five of their last seven at home and have scored just 17 runs in their last seven games, seven of them in a 7-2 victory Monday night in New York.

"Unless we get aggressive with our bats, start taking it to somebody, we're going to continue to struggle," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "You can look for a million reasons why, but the fact is you've got to score some runs."

In the only other game, St. Louis defeated Philadelphia 9-2. Rex Hudler hit his second major league homer, and John Dopson worked seven four-hit innings for the Expos. Andres Galarraga and Tom Foley also drove in runs for Mon-treah, which took two of three in the series. Andy McGaffigan, who came on in the eighth, walked the first batter in the ninth, and Tim Burke came on, hitting Glenn Wilson with a pitch. The runners were sacrificed ahead, and Burke then struck out Denny Gonzalez and Orestes Destrade to end the threat.

"We're all very excited," Hudler said. "I don't think there's a man in this clubhouse who doesn't think we can win this thing."

Andy Van Slyke hit his 19th homer for Pittsburgh.

Cubs 4, Mets 3
The Cubs took two of three against the Mets, winning the final game of the series on the pitching of Calvin Schiraldi and Damon Berryhill's two-run single. Schiraldi also had an RBI and scored a run on Shawn Dunston's triple.

Schiraldi, 7-8 but a winner of his third straight start, gave up five hits, struck out six and walked one in six innings before he had to leave with a leg cramp sustained while running the bases. Frank DiPino got the final two outs for his fourth save.

Sid Fernandez, 6-9, gave up five hits in 6 2-3 innings, striking out 11 and walking two for the Mets. He has struck out 10 or more in his last three outings.

Kevin McReynolds homered for the Mets. Cardinals 9, Phillies 2 Jose Oquendo had an RBI ground-out in the first inning, a run-scoring single in the third and a two-run single in the seventh, when the Cardinals scored five runs.

Jose DeLeon, 8-8, allowed four hits, struck out five and walked one in six innings for St. Louis.

Shane Rawley, 5-13, lost his seventh straight decision, a career high, after giving up seven hits and four runs in four innings.

Mike Schmidt got the 1,000th extra-base hit of his career when he drove in a first-inning run with a double for the Phillies.

Bosworth Likes The Look Of Seattle's New Defense

SEATTLE (AP) — Brian Bosworth, the glamour name in the Seattle Seahawks defense, liked what he saw.

He thought the Kingdome crowd of 54,778 Thursday night should have liked it, too.

"I think what you saw in the first quarter was basically what the defense is going to be like this season," the second-year linebacker said after the Seahawks beat the mistake-prone Phoenix Cardinals 21-7 in an NFL exhibition opener.

"Obviously, we've got some wrinkles to iron out because we're putting in a new defensive scheme. But I think it's going to work out to be fine."

The Seahawks led 14-0 after the opening quarter, rolling up 105 total yards to just 17 for the Cardinals. They had the ball 11:43 to Phoenix's 3:07.

Bosworth made two tackles and defended a pass in his one half of work. He drew a roar of appreciation from the Kingdome fans when he ran down Stump Mitchell after a 5-yard Mitchell run on the first Phoenix offensive play of the game.

Phoenix did finish with a big statistical advantage in the game, with 24 first downs to Seattle's 11 and 365 total yards to the Seahawks 287.

But Seattle's defense recovered six Phoenix turnovers — five fumbles and an intercepted pass. The Cardinals failed to score five times after getting the ball inside Seattle's 25-yard line.

"We should have had more points," lamented Phoenix coach Gene Stallings.

"Phoenix made some adjustments after the first quarter, but we didn't want to show them everything we can do," explained Bosworth.

Dave Krieg, Seattle's starting quarterback, passed for a pair of touchdowns in the opening quarter in a span of just 13 seconds.

With the score 14-7 in the third quarter, Seattle reserve defensive back Mark Moore outmuscled veteran tight end Jay Novacek after Novacek caught a 1-yard pass from Cliff Stoudt. Moore ran the ball 81 yards down the sideline for a touchdown.

"It's a team effort," said Moore, a second-year pro from Oklahoma State said.

"Everybody's out there trying to set the tempo. Any time anybody can come up with the big play, it'll help the team."

Krieg played only in the first quarter. He gave the Seahawks their 14-0 lead on touchdown passes of 6 yards to fullback John L. Williams and 26 yards to Steve Largent.

Neither Krieg nor Largent was willing to make any predictions based on a preseason game.

"It's an exhibition game," Krieg protested. "I thought we did a good job overall. For the first exhibition game, it was all right. But we've got a lot of work to do."

"You can't tell much," added Largent. "It's way too early."

Moore is listed as Seattle's backup strong safety behind veteran Paul Moyer in the battle for Kenny Easley's starting job.

"I made sure I got the tackle," Moore said. "Then I sid my right hand down the ball and used my left hand to hold onto him."

The Cardinals, making their official NFL debut after moving during the offseason from St. Louis to Phoenix, avoided a shutout on rookie Tony Jordan's 15-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

Jim Gallery missed a 28-yard field goal attempt with 30 seconds left in the first half on one of the five aborted Phoenix scoring drives inside the Seattle 25. In addition to the Novacek fumble on the Seattle 19 in the third quarter, Broderick Sargent fumbled at the Seattle 7-yard line and rookie quarterback Tom Tupa fumbled at the Seahawks 9 in the third quarter.

Phoenix lost three fumbles in the third quarter and Sargent lost two of them.

"Offensively, we're a come-from-behind team, but we can't afford to do what we did, to make the mistakes and give the ball away like that," said starting Phoenix quarterback Neil Lomax, who played just the first quarter.

Phoenix lost three fumbles in the third quarter and Sargent lost two of them.

"Offensively, we're a come-from-behind team, but we can't afford to do what we did, to make the mistakes and give the ball away like that," said starting Phoenix quarterback Neil Lomax, who played just the first quarter.

Lomax was just 2-for-10 for 20 yards in the opening quarter. His wife is expecting the couple's second child any day.

"My mind wasn't on the game," he admitted. "But I guess a lot of our guys weren't mentally prepared."

"It's hard to tell yourself these don't count, though. You take it personally."

Stoudt went most of the way after Lomax was taken out of the game and completed 13 of 27 passes for 117 yards, including a 43-yarder to Ron Brown in the third quarter.

Kelly Stouffer, 1987 St. Louis first-round draft choice who was traded by the Cardinals to Seattle in April, made his official NFL debut in the fourth quarter. He attempted just one pass.

Larry Nelson, winner of the 1981 and 1987 PGA Tournaments and the 1983 U.S. Open, did not become an active golfer until he was 20 years old.

Casper Hoping To Add Weight

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — Go on, ask Billy Casper his weight. Everybody else does.

"Too much," Casper told reporters after shooting a 3-under-par 69 Thursday to grab a share of the first-round lead in the U.S. Senior Open golf championship.

"But I may weigh more at the end of the week," added Casper, who won this event in 1983, "because I'll have more money in my pocket."

Ask co-leader Walt Zembriski whether being at the top of the leader board makes him dizzy. Then prepare to duck.

The former steelworker, who spent 11 years scampering around the skeletons of skyscrapers, saw four friends die after falling from great heights.

"You don't bounce," he explained. "You splatter."

Nothing that drastic befell the field of 150 who teed it up Thursday at Medinah Country Club.

But South African Harold Henning, who was one stroke back at 70, was the only other player to finish in the red during a day when near-100-degree temperatures made the grueling 6,881-yard No. 3 layout at Medinah more formidable than usual.

And only four other players — Orville Moody, Lou Graham, Peter Thomson and Doug Dalziel — managed even-par 72's.

"I don't know what the temperature was, but there was a breeze blowing and I was in the shade a lot," said Graham, who won the U.S. Open at Medinah in 1975. "Being in the trees today was good for something."

Chi Chi Rodriguez, who won last weekend's PGA Senior's tournament at Concord, Mass., was the best-known name in a group of players four strokes off the lead at 73.

And defending champion Gary Player, who missed a two-foot putt for birdie at No. 15 and then bogeyed two of the last three three holes, led the group at 74. Included in that bunch were the low amateurs — Robert Eaton of Greeley, Colo., Jim Keim of Erie, Pa., and Robert Galloway of Florence, S.C.

Arnold Palmer, winner of the 1981 Senior Open, electrified the gallery by going 2-under through 12 holes, only to fall back to 75 after taking an eight at No. 15 that included a double-hit from the rough alongside the green.

Casper, who is listed at 5-foot-11 and 215 pounds, began his round with a birdie at No. 1, the first of five birdies on the day. He slipped back into a tie with Zembriski when he carded his second bogey at 18.

Casper played sub-par golf the entire round, but said more than one of the putting surfaces proved unnerving.

"It was like putting on ice. ... Several of them were 'browns,'" the 57-year-old Casper said.

Zembriski made the turn at 1-over-par 37, then birdied four of the final eight holes — all with putts of 10 feet or less — to earn his spot atop the leader board.

But his best putt came at No. 12, where he made a twisting 15-footer to save par.

"I'm doing something different with my putting, and it's working," said Zembriski, 53, whose only win since joining the Senior tour in 1985 came two weeks ago in the rain-shortened Newport Cup.

"If those other guys get hold of it," he added, "they might be using it too."

Zembriski joined the regular PGA Tour in 1967, but money woes and marriage problems forced him off 2 1/2 years later.

"My sponsor was my father-in-law and we got divorced," he said. "I knew then the picnic was over."

Zembriski became an ironworker in his native New Jersey, and after the divorce was settled, drifted to Florida. There, he played the Space Coast mini-tour for 10 years before joining the Seniors in 1985.

Simpson's Ailing Shoulder Holds Up Enough For Lead

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Even after starting play in the $750,000 St. Jude Classic, Tim Simpson wasn't sure how long he would last with an injured shoulder. But he found an ally in the scorching heat.

Nursing a shoulder he reinjured Tuesday while carrying his luggage, Simpson fashioned a 4-under-par 68 on Thursday to sit only two shots off the pace set by first-round co-leaders Doug Tewell and Ed Fiori.

Diver Reportedly Was Drinking

BRANDON, Fla. (AP) — Olympic diver Bruce Kimball reportedly had begun drinking early in the afternoon and investigators say he had eight beer empties in his car when he lost control and plowed into a group of teens.

Two were killed and six injured in the accident that, according to a scenario pieced together by the Tampa Tribune, capped a day that began with practice at the Brandon Tennis & Swim Center.

Kimball, charged with two counts of vehicular homicide, told investigators he had four beers before the accident Monday. The Tribune reported Thursday that the 1984 Olympic silver medalist and two companions started drinking in a bar around 2 p.m. and continued off and on until just before the 10:56 p.m. accident.

In between the trio's stop for a pitcher of beer at Happy Days bar and the dead-end road crash that killed teen-agers Kevin Gossic and Robbie Bedell, Kimball and divers Chuck Wade, 23, and Colleen "Cokey" Smith, 23, reportedly played pool at the bar, drank beer at two homes and purchased single beers at a convenience store a mile from the accident scene.

Investigators found seven beer cans and a bottle inside Kimball's Mazda RX-7, all empty. An unopened can of beer lay in the passenger seat, still cold, the newspaper said.

Sheriff's deputies estimate Kimball was traveling 70 to 90 mph down Culbreath Road, an unlighted dead-end road. Wade lives in the southernmost home on the street, and Kimball said he was planning to drop him off when he missed the turn at the driveway, clipped a parked car and plowed through a group of 30-40 teen-agers gathered at a popular meeting place called "The Spot."

While Kimball said he was driving 40 to 45 mph, investigators noted the car traveled 388 feet even with the brakes locked and the bent right front axle gouging the pavement along the way.

"It was an extremely solid 4-under. That was about as high as I could have shot," said Simpson, whose shoulder problems had him thinking of withdrawing from the tournament as he approached the first tee.

"I withdrew from the pro-am (on Wednesday) and iced it last night," Simpson said.

While several of the golfers complained about the humid and hot weather, Simpson said the temperature in the high 90s "probably helped" keep his shoulder loose.

"I was about 85 percent sure I would withdraw today. I told my playing partners I was going to play a few holes and see how it goes," Simpson said.

"The key to the rest of the tournament for me will be how my shoulder holds up and how I putt."

Simpson stands tied with Jody Mudd and Peter Jacobsen after the opening round over the 7,282-yard Colonial Country Club course.

Defending St. Jude and current U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange is involved in an 11-player logjam at 69.

Tewell, who finished second in last week's Buick Open, and Fiori had nearly identical rounds as they moved to the head of the pack.

Both men chopped three shots off par on both the front and back nine and played bogey-free golf.

Despite his impressive play, Tewell said he could have done better.

"I probably had the best striking day I have had all year," said Tewell, who missed only one green.

A four-time winner on the PGA Tour, Tewell shot a final-round 64 last Sunday and has not made a bogey in his last 36 holes.

"I'm in a groove and when you're in a groove you have to be aware, you have to keep concentrating," Tewell said.

"When you're coming off a 64, everybody is talking. This is the day you have to show extreme patience because everyone is expecting you to play well."

"Still, I was a little disgusted, but you can't complain when you're hitting the ball good. Today I didn't make everything. I had about four reasonable (birdie) putts that I could have made."

Fiori, who has three career PGA Tour victories, fashioned one of his best rounds ever.

"I played well. I played solid," Fiori said. "I made a few good putts when I needed them. I have never really played well here. I don't mind the golf course, but it is playing long right now."

Starting on the back nine, Fiori had birdies on the 12th, 14th and 16th holes.

The former University of Houston All-American went to 4-under with a birdie-4 on the 582-yard No. 1 hole and then took the lead with a birdie on the par-3, 182-yard No. 3.

Fiori pushed his lead to two shots with a birdie on the par-5, 564-yard No. 7.

The 12-year tour veteran had a great day with his short irons. His longest birdie putt was from 20 feet on the 14th hole.

David Ogrin caused a stir among the early leaders when he finished the front nine with a 5-under 31.

But Ogrin was unable to cope with Colonial's back nine, skidding to a 4-over 40 and a round of 1-under 71.

On the back nine, Ogrin bogeyed the 12th and 18th holes and took a double-bogey at the par-4, 464-yard 13th hole.

"I folded like a cheap lawn chair," Ogrin said.

The bidding:

West North East South
 Pass 1♥ Pass 1♣
 Pass 2♣ Pass 4♣

Opening lead: King of ♦
 When we were first approached with this hand, we were shown only the North-South spade holding and asked for the percentage play in the suit. "With ten cards in the combined hands, finesse for the king," we stated unequivocally. "What did I tell you," the inquirer remarked to his friend. Only later did we get the full facts of the deal, and we are rushing our apologies into print.

North-South reached four spades the quick and easy way. Obviously, South's honors in his partner's suit are worth their weight in gold.

West led the king of diamonds, then cashed the ace of clubs and ace of diamonds before exiting with a club. Declarer won in hand and finessed in trumps—down one.

Declarer indeed took the percentage play in the trump suit. However, on this hand it was a guaranteed loser! West had passed in first seat, and he had already shown up with two aces and a king. Had he held the king of spades as well, he would have had 14 prime points, and he would certainly have opened the bidding.

Therefore, East was marked with the king of spades, so declarer should have thrown his table of mathematical odds out of the window and played a spade to the ace. This would have been his lucky day. The singleton king would have come tumbling down and the contract would have scampered home.

The moral: Percentage plays are fine and dandy if you consider only that specific suit. The correct line takes the whole hand into account.

Soviets Will Use Atomic-Power Rocket

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Soviet scientists are developing an atomic rocket to use in a manned voyage to Mars in about 20 years, a Russian space expert says.

Vasily I. Moroz, a scientist in the Soviet Space Research Institute, said an atomic-electric rocket engine will be used to accelerate an explorer craft on a 1½-year mission to Mars.

Moroz said the nuclear powered rocket would be used to accelerate a manned craft toward Mars after the craft had been boosted into Earth orbit by a chemical rocket.

Speaking Thursday at a news conference at the 20th assembly of the International Astronomical Union, Moroz declined to give any details of the atomic rocket, but he said a Mars mission will require a new type of propulsion.

The current Soviet fleet includes the world's most powerful rocket, the Energia, but Moroz said the chemical rocket could not be used to accelerate a manned craft to Mars.

American space scientists long have recognized the need to develop propulsion systems that did not depend upon the chemical reaction of fuel and oxidizer. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has conducted some research on electric and ion drive rockets, but the work never has received development funds.

An atomic-electric rocket uses charged particles as the propulsion medium. These rockets in theory would give small thrusts but for a long period of time since they are powered by atomic energy. This would enable the craft to accelerate slowly and achieve a high rate of speed. Such a craft would have to carry less weight in fuel than chemical rockets that provide the same energy.

Moroz said the Soviets are giving the exploration of Mars a high priority. Two Soviet probes to Phobos, a moon of Mars, were launched last month.

In 1994, he said, the Soviets will send an unmanned craft to Mars carrying a robot rover that would explore hundreds of miles on the planet's surface. The rover also would take drill samples and measurements of the atmosphere.

After the 1994 mission, he said, the Soviets plan to test new technical elements needed for a manned mission. These elements, Moroz said, include the nuclear-electric rocket and a rocket to return to orbit from the Mars surface. The Soviets also plan a robot craft that would land on Mars, collect soil samples and return them to Earth.

A manned Martian mission, Moroz said, could be mounted by 2005 or 2010. Preliminary plans, he said, call for a six-member crew to make the voyage in a two-stage craft that would be assembled in Earth orbit.

Although the Soviets have gathered a great deal of information about the de-conditioning effects on the human body of longterm space flight, Moroz said the Mars mission may use artificial gravity to keep the crew members healthy.

American and Soviet studies have shown that long exposure to the weightlessness of space causes the heart to weaken and the body to lose bone mass.

Moroz said the Soviets hope American scientists and astronauts will take part in the Mars mission, but even without U.S. participation, the Soviets are determined to explore the red planet.

Mars has been only partially explored by the American Viking spacecraft, he said, adding: "It is our impression that it is time to return to Mars."

Soviet scientists, he said, want to search for traces of liquid water on the Martian surface, and they hold out hope that there may be life, even though Viking found no traces.

"You can't give guarantees that life in some form doesn't exist there now, despite the negative findings of Viking," he said.

Latest Test Delay May Postpone Discovery's Sept. 29 Launch Date

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle engineers, having failed for the fifth time to test-fire Discovery's engines, were deciding today on a course that could mean a delay of a few days or one of up to a week.

Either way, it was doubtful that NASA will be able to launch Discovery on the first post-Challenger flight Sept. 29 as planned.

If officials elect only to make a change in computer commands, another test could be scheduled as early as Sunday morning. But a swap of parts to solve the valve problem that caused the latest delay Thursday could mean a delay of up to seven days.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials met into the night after Thursday's test failure and planned to announce their decision today. By rough calculation, each day's delay in the timetable leading up to launch means a day's postponement.

The test failure Thursday was the first in the series within the last two weeks to be caused by a flaw in the shuttle. The other four failures all had to do with ground equipment that had not been used since Challenger's fatal explosion shortly after liftoff Jan. 28, 1986, killing seven crew members.

An onboard computer masterminding the countdown Thursday noticed that a valve had not closed properly and, in the last second before ignition, commanded a halt to the firing sequence. None of the three engines had started.

"The valve can't be open more than 20 percent," said Boyce Mix, engine manager from NASA's Mississippi propulsion facility. "If it is, the engine won't start." At the cutoff, the valve was 24 percent open.

The problem either was that the valve didn't close as fast as it was supposed to or a sensor gave a wrong reading of the valve's open-closed position.

"We don't know whether it was a faulty indication or really a malfunction in the valve," said Joseph A. Lombardo, engine program director at NASA's propulsion facility in Mississippi.

Engineers were looking at the possibility that the sensor might have been affected by long ex-posure to the extreme cold of the liquid hydrogen fuel. The tanks were loaded for 10 hours, four hours longer than normal, so that special tests could be run on the fuel system.

To test it, engineers cycled the valve through a range of temperatures, down to the 423 degrees below zero necessary to keep hydrogen in a liquid state. Meanwhile, a new set of parts was being readied.

The position of the valves is one of the most critical checks made by the computer. If the valve were open when liquid hydrogen rushes through at the rate of 1,035 gallons a second the fuel would enter areas unable to withstand such pressure and cause a rupture.

Mix said historically some sensors are more temperature-sensitive than others. As the tanks were being drained, he said, the valve was tested and it worked sluggishly the first time but normally after it warmed up.

If all had gone well, the shuttle's three main engines should have fired for 20 seconds — the major test before committing a shuttle to flight.

McDonnell Douglas To Examine Its Ties With Ex-Pentagon Consultants

By JIM SCHACHTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service
McDonnell Douglas, the nation's largest defense contractor, has launched an internal investigation into its use of former top-level Department of Defense officials as procurement consultants, the company's chief executive said Thursday.

The St. Louis-based company's relationship with Melvyn R. Paisley — who became a consultant to McDonnell Douglas after leaving his post as assistant secretary of the Navy in April 1987 — is a central focus of the nationwide federal investigation into possible bribery and influence-peddling in Pentagon purchasing.

In an open letter to employees, Chairman and Chief Executive John F. McDonnell said the company was confident its policies for employing and supervising consultants were sound. Nonetheless, McDonnell said a task force, consisting of senior managers and outside lawyers, had been named to determine whether additional guidelines were needed.

"We want to leave no doubt that McDonnell Douglas believes in and acts in accordance with the highest ethical standards," he said.

The internal inquiry is separate from a wide-ranging review McDonnell Douglas initiated days after its St. Louis offices were searched by federal investigators June 14, according to Jim Reed, a company spokesman.

Unisys — another target of the procurement investigation — announced last month that it had suspended six employees and cancelled all its consultants' contracts in the wake of the federal investigation. Unisys Chairman W. Michael Blumenthal said at the time he was "appalled and dismayed" by the conduct alleged by investigators.

Unisys Cuts Ties To Challenged Firm

L.A. Times-Washington Post
The Unisys Corp. Thursday stopped doing business with Armtec Inc., a Florida defense subcontractor under federal investigation in a Pentagon procurement probe. Unisys did not disclose the reason for the cutoff.

"We're permanently closed," said Ken Brooke, a financial consultant to Armtec, a Palatka, Fla., firm that made wire harnesses for a Unisys shipboard electronic weapon system. "They want all their products shipped back to them in whatever status they're in. Our workers will get paid this week and that's it."

Unisys officials said that an internal company probe has found indications of questionable practices involving the company and Armtec, which they declined to detail. By forcing Armtec to close doors and lay off 89 employees, Unisys hopes to eliminate what has become a highly visible target of the Pentagon procurement scandal and a source of continuing embarrassment, according to Unisys sources. "They'll fold and that's the end of the story," one official said.

William Beckham, a Unisys spokesman, said company executives and attorneys decided Wednesday to indefinitely suspend making payments and giving work orders to Armtec, "based on the results that were becoming apparent through the (internal) investigation."

The action was taken hours after it was reported that investigators in the Pentagon procurement scandal are probing whether three defense industry executives diverted money illegally from Unisys through Armtec to Rep. Bill Chappell, D-Fla., and others influential in defense contracting.

Unisys has declined to divulge specific findings of the internal review.

fighter jets, bids for the advanced tactical aircraft project and inside information about its competitors' Pentagon business.

In his letter to employees, which the company made available to the Los Angeles Times, McDonnell said Paisley's work for the corporation on the advanced tactical aircraft project — on which McDonnell Douglas is teamed with General Dynamics — "was inconsequential and could not have had any impact on the Navy's contract award."

Generally, Paisley's job was to help McDonnell Douglas "by assessing our advanced technologies and offering suggestions on how they should be applied to the marketplace," McDonnell said.

Art Carney Gives Brotherly Twist To TV's 'Cavanaughs'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Art Carney and Bernard Hughes, a couple of Irish actors who never had acted together before but who look enough alike to be brothers, are now playing brothers on "The Cavanaughs."

After a year and a half on hiatus, the CBS series returns Monday night with a plot-packed, sometimes touching half hour. Hughes plays Pop Cavanaugh, who unlovingly refers to his brother as "the weasel." Carney appears only in the first of eight new episodes ready to air. He hopes to be in more after the writers' strike ends.

In 1986, Carney's daughter praised "The Cavanaughs," so he watched. "I went after the part; I've never done that before. I called up my agent and said, 'If the brother ever shows up, I'd love to take a crack at it.'"

"I used to mention him occasionally," Hughes said. "There was no brother in sight until you suggested it."

Carney shot one episode in February 1987. The new one was shot in January.

The hard-working Hughes traveled from Montreal where he's shooting a CBS movie, "Day One," for a day of "Cavanaugh's" promotion. Carney, who is semiretired, came from his home on the Connecticut shore.

Interviewing the pair is more like eavesdropping. They reminisce, compare notes and update family news, much like brothers. Both married years ago, stayed married, have children. Carney has six grandchildren, Hughes none.

The conversation drifted to remembering names of actors on radio's long-ago "It Pays To Be Ignorant."

"This is why I love you to come on the set," Hughes told Carney.

TV's Cavanaugh brothers are two years apart, which is close to life. "I'll be 70 in November," said Carney. "I'm 73 since July 16," said Hughes.

"Bob" Moloney (writer and producer) captures the flavor of the Irish so beautifully," Carney said. "The humor of the Irish is all there; the stubborn qualities come through. He's Irish himself, which helps. This show wasn't too schmaltzy. It was beautifully written."

"That's one of the saving graces of the show. It never goes too far in that area," Hughes added.

Hughes' parents were born in Ireland. Carney's connections are more complicated: "My mother's name was Fleming. Her mother was a Farrell. My grandmother on my father's side was a Quinn. My wife's a Myers, a little bit of several things."

"All my sisters and brothers married Irish. My wife, Helen Stenborg, is Swedish. I try to get her to use Helen Hughes when she acts, but no go. She wanted me to change my name to Stenborg."

"My wife's not in the business," Carney said. "We went steady four years in high school. They don't use that expression any more. We met in 1936 in Mount Vernon, N.Y., and got married in 1940."

"Helen and I went steady four years, too," Hughes said. "We got married in 1950. You were very precocious, weren't you?"

At the time, Carney recalled, he worked for Horace Heidt's band.

"I got a break. I auditioned and joined him eight months out of high school," Carney said. "I did imitations of FDR, Al Smith, Wendell Wilkie, Winston Churchill, Fred Allen, Jimmy Durante, Edward G. Robinson and Ned Sparks, a sour-faced comedic actor in motion pictures. When I was a kid I said to my folks, 'I can sound like Ned Sparks.'"

"Thank God for FDR. That was my break getting into radio acting. I did 'Report to the Nation' Sunday nights at CBS. I would do a live impersonation of Roosevelt, quoting from his speeches. I got confidence in myself, to do some soap operas, 'Gangbusters,' 'Counterspy.' That was a nice way to make a living."

"I never did any radio," Hughes said. "Da," the stage play, was like radio. You'd sit on these steps and people would imagine. When we did the picture, I sat on the real mountain and looked out over the real Irish sea."

"My friend over here, Arthur Carney, came to see 'Da' with his wife Jean and forgot to wear his hearing aid. He didn't hear a word. That's the first time we met."

"I had to go back to say hello and tell him how wonderful he was in a great play," Carney said.

"That's when I realized what a phony he was," said Hughes, who won a Tony in 1978 for "Da."

With Carney, the conversation inevitably turns to his role as Ed Norton on "The Honeymooners" with Jackie Gleason, and Hughes obliged by asking what it was like to work with the late "Great One."

"I started with Gleason in 1950. A couple of writers suggested me," Carney said. "Gleason didn't know me from a hole in the ground. I knew him from 'The Life of Riley.' He did that before (William) Bendix."

"I never thought Norton should have been married. He would drive Ralph mad because he had a different girlfriend every night."

"I still have the hat Norton used to wear. I got that hat at Edson-Lewis Men's Shop in Mount Vernon when I was in high school, for $5. I thought I was springing for a nice hat. It paid the bills for a good number of years."

Brown Faces Oral Surgery

ATLANTA (AP) — "Godfather of Soul" James Brown was admitted to a hospital for oral surgery today to mend bone damage in his lower jaw, a spokeswoman said.

The 2½-hour operation was necessary because the 55-year-old singer has suffered degeneration of his jawbone, said Debra Bloom, a spokeswoman for Crawford Long Hospital.

In the procedure, an impression will be made of the singer's lower jaw. An artificial support made from the impression will be implanted when Brown returns to the hospital in three to four weeks, Ms. Bloom said.

Brown was accompanied to the hospital by his wife, Adrienne, with whom he has recently been involved in a much-publicized series of domestic problems.

A South Carolina judge recently ordered him to perform a benefit concert as part of a probated sentence for drug and weapons charges stemming from the marital disputes.

Too Popular

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Michael Jackson is so popular here that the government has decided he cannot come for a concert in December, an official said today.

Syed Zainal Abidin, secretary general of the Welfare Ministry, told reporters the Cabinet decided recently the concert could not be held because it would be too difficult to control the crowd.

He said the ministry had wanted the American singer to perform here to raise money for the Welfare Fund, from which money is given out periodically to orphanages and charities.

The ministry will appeal to the Cabinet to reconsider its decision, he added.
