HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy is expected to recover fully from an accident in a which a rod pierced his skull just below his right eye and punched through his brain and up against the back of his skull.

Brian Swartz was bicycle riding with his brother along a country road near the Cumberland County town of Newville last week when his bike struck a hay rake along the road, puncturing a tire and pitching him forward onto the metal rod, which his father said was part of the rake.

While his brother Jerry, 15, rushed to a nearby house for help, Brian lifted himself from the rod and, feeling dizzy, lay down on the ground.

"It was just scary," Brian said. "I pulled myself off — I guess I didn't realize what I was doing."

"I was scared I was going to die," Brian said. "It was close."

The boy's father, Jerry, soon arrived and he and his wife, Deborah, placed ice, towels and a damp cloth over the wound and took Brian to Carlisle Hospital, about 10 miles away. Brian was treated in the emergency room and transferred to Polyclinic Medical Center in Harrisburg.

"It's unbelievable," said Dr. Hugh Knight, who treated Brian at Carlisle. "It's very uncommon someone would survive. It just seemed to hit the right area."

Brian is expected to recover completely, said Dr. Howard Stein, senior resident in the joint pediatric program of Polyclinic and Hershey Medical Center.

"The injury is something we see occasionally," he said. "That he came through without anything wrong is remarkable. I've never seen anything like it."

Brian was transferred out of intensive care the day after the accident Tuesday and into the pediatric unit.

"I only have a headache and a big bump on the back of my head," Brian said.

Swartz, who passed out when he first learned details of his son's injury from doctors, said Brian's survival was a miracle.

"This is one in a million," he said. "It's hard to believe anything like this could happen and he would not have brain damage or a physical handicap."

"I really feel strongly that there was only one way this boy survived — God was looking over him," Swartz said.

Iraq Accepts Truce Plan, Fighting May Stop Soon

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Iraq's announcement Saturday that it will accept a conditional cease-fire with Iran is "a very important step forward" for stalled U.N. peace efforts, and he hoped to declare a truce early this week.

"I received information from the foreign minister of Iraq that his president has decided to accpt an immediate cease-fire followed by direct talks under my auspices," Perez de Cuellar said.

"I think this is a very important step forward," said Perez de Cuellar, noting that he needed clarifications from both sides. "The impression I have is that it can solve the problem."

But Iran gave no official reaction on President Saddam Hussein's promise to accept a cease-fire if Iran agrees to immediate direct talks.

Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran met the U.N. chief for more than an hour Saturday evening and later, smiling, brushed pass reporters without comment.

Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Ismat Kittani, met the secretary-general first to brief him on Hussein's proposal.

After the meeting, Kittani said: "If they (the Iranians) accept this, we are on the road to peace. If they refuse it, then it will be obvious to everyone that Iran and Iran alone is responsibile for shedding any additional blood."

Hussein's dropping of his demand for direct talks before a cease-fire represented acceptance of Perez de Cuellar's compromise plan to break the deadlock, according to diplomats who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Perez de Cuellar said that Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz was summoned home Saturday for consultations but would return "as soon as I tell him I am ready to initiate the direct talks."

Israel Says Seized Paper Called For PLO-Led State

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel Television on Saturday said authorities seized a draft of a "declaration of independence" drawn up by Palestinians leaders who planned to set up a PLO-led state in the occupied territories and parts of Israel.

The television said the seizure would either totally prevent or seriously disrupt the planned independence initiative, and it broadcast what it said were portions of it.

The broadcast came one hour after U.S. envoy Richard Murphy arrived for talks with Israeli leaders. The talks will focus on Jordan's cutting of ties with the occupied territorites and the impact on a U.S. plan that hinged on Jordanian representation of Palestinians in Middle East peace talks.

State-run television said the independence document was in works before Jordan's King Hussein announced last week his intention to pull back from the occupied territories and hand over responsibility to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The report said a draft version was seized by the Israeli security forces during a search at the east Jerusalem Arab Studies Institute immediately after the institute's leader, Feisal Husseini, was detained on Aug. 1. Husseini is viewed by Israeli officials as a leading PLO figure.

It was the first time that the seizure of the draft declaration was announced and its contents revealed.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's office issued a statement which said the document was filled with "insane and dangerous dreams that will not come true."

GOP Delegates Will Back Bush's Choice

By RICHARD L. VERNACI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delegates to the Republican National Convention say George Bush would do well to ask one of his former rivals to join him on the party's presidential ticket, but they indicate a willingness to go along with anyone he chooses.

Both Jack Kemp and Bob Dole stand out from the pack of three dozen candidates named by GOP delegates responding to an Associated Press survey, each receiving 14 percent. But the "candidate" backed by the largest group of delegates, 39 percent, is nobody in particular.

Of the 1,274 GOP delegates responding to the AP survey, 492 said they had no particular choice for the No. 2 spot on the party's ticket.

That sentiment is not at all uncommon as delegates tend to defer to whatever decision their party's presidential nominee makes on the

Tobacco Observers Say Leaf Prices Will Improve

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

With two days of selling completed, observers of the Greenville Tobacco Market say that selling has been brisk. Some call prices good, but say they look forward to seeing what the upstalk tobacco to be marketed over the next few weeks will bring.

Kenneth Allen, sales supervisor for the Greenville Tobacco Market, said the Thursday average was $139.23 per hundred pounds, down slightly from the Wednesday average of $139.52 per hundred.

The Thursday average was for three sales; Wednesday's for two. Greenville has two sets of buyers working here one day and three the next. There are seven warehouses in town and every one has at least one sale a day.

Some 1,136,338 pounds of tobacco were sold in Greenville Thursday, compared to 728,642 pounds on Wednesday.

Allen said only a "real small percentage, certainly less than 10 percent" of the tobacco sold last week was held over by farmers from last year. This upstalk tobacco is bringing good prices, he said, up to $1.80 a pound.

Most of the tobacco sold last week was primings — lowest on the stalk leaves. It averaged $1.30 to $1.40 per pound. Allen said most farmers were pleased that the better grades of primings are selling as well as they are.

Mitch Smith, Pitt County Agricultural Extension director, said he has heard mixed reactions to the two days of selling. "Some are satisfied," he said, "some had higher expectations." He said he expects to hear more pleased people talking when more upstalk tobacco comes in. "In the next few weeks, I feel sure prices will increase," he said.

As a person with the job of assisting farmers with the quality of production, he said, "One thing that pleases me is that everyone seems to be talking about quality. We started

Hiroshima Remembers

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Bells rang out across Hiroshima on Saturday in memory of 78,000 people killed instantly in the world's first atomic bomb attack 43 years ago.

In a ceremony attended by 50,000 people, black-clad mourners placed wreaths on a black granite cenotaph which contains the names of bomb victims on pieces of paper. They ladled water over the cenotaph in a common Buddhist practice showing concern for the deceased.

Many of the bomb victims cried out for water as they died of severe burns.

The cenotaph is in Peace Park, across the Motoyasugawa River from the bombed-out dome of Hiroshima's former industrial promotion center, left as a symbol of the bomb's fury.

It also contains the names of all Hiroshima survivors who have since died. Officials on Saturday added the names of 4,476 survivors who died during the past year, raising the total to 152,650.

Bells rang out at 8:15 a.m., the instant the United States dropped the bomb on Aug. 6, 1945. The uranium bomb, which had the power of 20,000 tons of TNT, exploded at a height of 1,915 feet almost directly over the promotion center.

Pitt Seeks Facility Equity With New Rose High

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

A new high school in Greenville will provide more program and facility equity and a consistent grade pattern throughout the Pitt County school system, the superintendent of the school system says.

The Pitt County Board of Education made its first step toward selling the J.H. Rose High School property in July when it instructed its attorney to write a letter of intent to sell Rose to East Carolina University.

"We're trying to have a consistent organizational pattern throughout the county," Dr. Eddie West said in explaining the rationale for selling the Rose facility. Kindergarten through fifth grade would be combined; sixth through eighth, and ninth through 12th.

Also, "we want to provide program equity so that each school would have comparable programs and facilities."

The present Rose facility doesn't have an auditorium and, until recently, did not have an athletic facility, he said. "You're also landlocked.

"When you put all those together, you have a sound rationale" for selling Rose, West said.

ECU is awaiting the General Assembly's approval and funds to buy the property, which may initially be used as offices and classrooms, C.G. Moore, ECU's vice chancellor for business affairs, said.

The Rose facility, sitting on a 25-acre site, is worth about $3.5 million, West said. The original facility was completed in 1957 to address overcrowding at the Greenville High School, which was located on the corner of Reade and Fifth streets.

Named for Junius Harris Rose, a superintendent of the Greenville city schools for more than 37 years, the facility was built to accommodate 750 students. The architect was J.W. Griffith, while the builder and contractor was W.G. Dunn, both of Greenville.

In 1969, Rose became overcrowded through integration as Greenville's black high school, C.M. Eppes, was converted into a junior high school and black high school students were transferred to Rose.

As a result, 12 new classrooms and administrative offices were added to the original facility in 1971, and other additions have been made since then to accommodate the present 1,150-student enrollment.

Assuming the state Legislature will provide the funds, ECU will acquire the Rose property by June 30, 1991, West said.

Through the vision of a former Greenville City Board of Education, "Greenville Middle was the site planned for the new high school," West said.

To build a new high school "from scratch," which would include acquiring the land, would cost about $12 million, West said.

"We won't have to spend that because we're using an existing school and an existing site. We won't

More Physicians Accept Medicare Payment Proposal

By SPENCER RICH
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In a development that will save the nation's elderly millions of dollars in medical bills, a record number of doctors have agreed not to charge Medicare patients more for any service than the amount approved by Medicare.

Program administrator William L. Roper announced Friday that the signup rate for Medicare's "participating physician" program had reached 37.3 percent. That compares with just over 30 percent recorded in January 1987.

Under the basic Medicare program, doctors can charge Medicare patients more than the Medicare-allowed amount for a service, but Medicare will not help pay for anything more than the amount it has approved. The extra charges come out of the patient's pocket.

Under the participating physician program, the doctor agrees not to charge any Medicare patient more than the Medicare-allowed amount, and receives certain rewards in return, such as being listed in a special doctor directory made available to Medicare beneficiaries. Patients are free to choose their doctors.

Rep. Fortney H. (Pete) Stark, D-Calif., chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on health and a key supporter of the participating physician concept, said the program saves the elderly at least $600 million a year in charges that doctors would otherwise impose on top of the amounts allowed by Medicare.

"This is because participating physicians accept the Medicare-approved charge as payment-in-full on all claims without any extra charges," Stark said.

Stark considers the program a prime example of a legislative success story, in which increases in doctor fees to Medicare patients have been brought under control by congressional action. When Congress began limiting payments to doctors for budgetary reasons years ago, Stark said he expected more doctors to try to start charging fees in excess of the Medicare allowable. But because of the success rate of the participating physician program, that expectation has been reversed.

Under Medicare, the Department of Health and Human Services, which runs the program, determines an allowed amount for each service it covers. If a doctor agrees to accept that amount as the total fee, Medicare pays the doctor for 80 percent of the allowed amount, and the doctor bills the patient for the remaining 20 percent.

Roper said that nationwide about 521,000 doctors treat Medicare patients, so the 37.3 percent signup rate for the participating physician program means that 194,343 doctors have signed agreements not to charge Medicare patients more than the Medicare allowable. The rate ranges from 15 percent in Idaho to 73 percent in Alabama.

Delegates Ready

issue of a running mate.

Two-thirds of the Democratic delegates did not name anyone as their choice for vice president, but when Michael Dukakis picked Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as his running mate, that decision was endorsed by acclamation at last month's convention in Atlanta.

Bush has said he will not announce his running mate until Aug. 18, the final day of the Republican convention, which opens Aug. 15 in New Orleans.

And while his list of possible running mates has been narrowed in recent weeks, the delegates who will attend the convention have named some three dozen possible candidates, including Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee A. Iacocca, major league baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, former White House communications director Patrick Buchanan and a couple of otherwise unknowns whose candidacies were advanced by relatives who happen to be delegates.

However, Kemp and Dole, both of whom lost in their bids to win the party's presidential nomination this year were running about even among the delegates responding to the AP's survey.

Kemp, a conservative congressman from New York, was favored by 14 percent of the delegates, the same as Dole, the Senate majority leader from Kansas, according to the AP survey.

Another 14 percent of the GOP delegates scattered their support among four women: former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, who was named by 82 delegates, former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, supported by 79 delegates, Kansas Sen. Nancy Kassebaum with 17 delegates and Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor with 5 delegates.

Polls have shown that Bush lags behind Dukakis among female voters, and 10 percent of the delegates responding to the AP survey said one way to overcome this would be to pick a woman as his running mate.

Kassebaum has said she does not want to be considered for the vice presidential spot, as has California Gov. George Deukmejian, who was named as the choice of two dozen delegates.

The delegates' education, gender and political experience appeared to have no effect on their choices for vice president. For example, roughly the same percentage of college graduates supported Dole as Kemp.

The survey was conducted by AP bureaus in all 50 states, as well as Puerto Rico and is based on responses from 56 percent of the 2,277 delegates who will attend the GOP convention.

Document Seized

Some Palestinians suggested the document was leaked to justify Husseini's arrest, which was protested by the United States, Israel Radio reported.

The television said that the paper, called "A declaration of Palestinian independence document," included names of dozens of Palestinians who were to become members of a "local Parliament."

It was not immediately clear whether Palestinians whose names appear on the list would be arrested.

It said the document called for a Palestinian state headed by PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, with PLO executive Farouk Kaddoumi as his foreign minister and heads of other PLO factions as ministers.

The state would include the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and some land inside Israel, according to the report. Israel seized the West Bank from Jordan and the Gaza Strip from Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War.

However, Palestinians who composed the document also called for recognition of Israel's right to exist and peace talks based on the clarification of future border lines, linkage between the West Bank and Gaza and future ties with Israel, the television said.

Protests erupted Saturday in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, where underground Palestinian leaders called on followers to "greet Murphy with demonstrations and clashes" with troops.

Murphy did not speak to reporters after his arrival. He is due to meet Sunday with Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Troops wounded three Arabs hours before Murphy's arrival, and a 15-year-old boy died after being shot Friday, Arab reports, the army and Israel Radio said.

The death raised to 237 the number of Palestinian victims in the uprising, which began Dec. 8. Four Israelis also have died.

He added that Iran appeared willing to hold direct talks, but said he would request a formal letter stating Iran's stand.

"I hope that I will be in a position early next week to announce" the beginning of a cease-fire to end the 8-year-old Persian Gulf war and other elements of a U.N. peace plan, he said.

One Middle Eastern diplomat familiar with the talks, speaking by telephone, said the Iraqi announcement should give fresh impetus to U.N. peace efforts.

"We have to study the entire text," said the diplomat, "but it appears that we have a major development and acceptance of the secretary-general's ideas."

He described Hussein's announcement as high drama and artful diplomacy and said he effectively "tossed the ball back into Iran's court."

Perez de Cuellar told the Security Council Friday he planned to dispatch a 250-man U.N. observer team to monitor a cease-fire and troop withdrawal.

Middle East diplomats said they expected Iran to welcome the Iraqi announcement.

The five permanent members of the Security Council are also working on a plan to guarantee Iraq that Iran will fully implement all aspects of a truce.

Specialist

The new disabled veterans outreach specialist in the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission is herself a disabled veteran. Lorraine Alexander is now on duty in Greenville as the replacement for Larry McMillin, who recently accepted a position with the Veterans Administration in Lenoir County.

A native of Norfolk, Va., Ms. Alexander has been military-oriented most of her life.

"My father, Richard S. Cavin, is a retired Army man, a veteran of Vietnam," she said. "So I grew up as a military brat, even though I spent a considerable part of my young years growing up in Nags Head."

She served in the Army from 1974 to 1977, and then served one year in the U.S. Army Reserve. Because of an illness acquired while in the military, Ms. Alexander has been certified as a disabled veteran.

"After I was discharged, I attended Elizabeth City State University, where I majored in business and administrative management," she said. While attending the university, she also worked in Employment Security offices in Elizabeth City and Edenton.

ECU Player Faces Assault Charge

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

An East Carolina University football player is scheduled to appear in Dare County District Court Sept. 8 to face charges of assault inflicting serious injury and trespassing.

Randell Joe Holmes, 21, of Manteo was arrested July 17 after an incident the night before in which he allegedly got into an argument with Joe Lamb III, 33, of Kill Devil Hills at a Nags Head restaurant-tavern. Holmes allegedly followed Lamb home and assaulted him, according to police records.

After Lamb filed a complaint, Holmes was arrested by Kill Devil Hills police and later released on a $500 secured bond.

Holmes, a 6-foot-4, 235-pound junior defensive end, is scheduled to report to fall football practice Tuesday in Greenville.

After Lamb and Holmes argued outside the nightclub, Lamb got in his car to drive home, according to Lamb's brother, Elizabeth City attorney Zee Lamb. Zee Lamb's wife, Nancy Lamb, is an assistant district attorney in the prosecutorial district that includes Dare County.

Joe Lamb suffered cuts and broken bones in his face and received stitches the night of the incident, his brother said. He also underwent surgery later to repair the broken bones. Zee Lamb said the hospital bills totaled about $5,000.

"He looks like he was hit by a truck," Zee Lamb said. "He looks bad. It's very noticeable." Zee Lamb also said his brother normally wears contact lenses, but he has had to wear glasses becauses of the injuries.

Holmes, who transferred to ECU from Chowan Junior College, was born in Snow Hill, and his father, Randell Holmes, lettered in football at ECU three times from 1956 to 1958.

Two other ECU football players, Ernest Edward Logan II of Spring Lake and Michael Shane Hubble of St. Petersburg, Fla., were each convicted of assault last semester.

Logan, who opened up a cut on the head of an ECU student that required 10 stitches, was sentenced to 48 hours in jail, fined $200 and placed on probation for one year. Hubble was fined $700 to cover medical expenses and damage to a vehicle and placed on probation for three years.

Athletic officials indefinitely suspended both players and there has been no official announcement on their status.

Council To Review Tourism Budget

Members of the Greenville City Council will again consider approval of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority budget for 1988-89 when they meet for a council workshop session Monday at 6 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

Upon consideration of the authority's $240,000 budget at their July 25 workshop session, council members voted 3-2 for its approval; however, four affirmative votes are legally required for passage.

Council members Rufus Huggins and Mildred Council voted in opposition to the proposed budget. Councilman Bill Hadden was absent from the session.

The bylaws and rules of the convention authority say the budget must be submitted to the city manager for processing and be approved through the regular budget procedures of the city.

At the July 25 workshop session, authority Chairman Rudolph Alexander told the council the primary thrust of activities in 1988-89 will be devoted to implementing a comprehensive marketing plan to help Greenville and Pitt County become the center for conventions and meetings in eastern North Carolina.

Also scheduled for Monday is a discussion regarding the length of the council's workshop sessions.

In a memorandum addressed to City Manager Greg Knowles, Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn voiced concern that council members are not at their best when the workshop sessions continue until 11 p.m. Recent workshop sessions, which usually begin at 6 p.m., have been averaging four to five hours in length.

The council will also consider a request by Mayor Edward E. Carter to reschedule the council's Sept. 6 workshop meeting to Sept. 1, and a discussion will be held regarding Pitt County tax revaluation and its impact upon city tax billings.

Also to be discussed Monday are items on the agenda for Thursday's City Council action meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall.

Among those items to be discussed Monday and considered Thursday are three rezoning requests.

Nancy Brown Harris has requested rezoning of a .48-acre tract located at the northwest corner of 10th and Washington streets from IU (unoffensive industry) to CDF (downtown commercial fringe).

James D. Mellon, Jr. has requested a 3.26-acre tract located at the southeast corner of SR 1725 and SR 1707 be rezoned from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to CH (highway commercial). The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission voted to recommend denial of this request at its July 19 meeting.

The East Group is requesting to amend the Zoning Ordinance to increase the maximum height limit from 35 feet to 80 feet in the MD-6 (medical) zoning district. The Planning and Zoning Commission also denied recommendation of the East Group's request.

Council will also consider the designation of a special Historic Properties-District Commission.

The Planning and Zoning Commission, at its June 21 meeting, recommended the establishment of a 15-member panel to serve as a Historic Preservation Commission with all associated powers conferred by state statute.

Also on Thursday's agenda to be discussed Monday is consideration of the sale of Disposal Parcel K-4 in the Southside Redevelopment Project, and the sale of 42-F-2A and 42-H-1A in the South Evans Community Development Project; the close-out of Community Development Block Grant 83-C-6635 for the South Evans Community Project; an application for the Rental Rehabilitation Program in West Greenville and East Meadowbrook; a lease agreement between the city and the Pitt County Family Violence Program for property at 431 W. Fifth St.; consideration of contracts for services to the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show, Greenville Jaycees, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Evergreen of Greenville, and the Greenville Museum of Art; a bid of $39,315 for winter and summer police uniforms; and the establishment of a veterans memorial at the Town Commons; an amendment to the Budget Ordinance authorizing funds originating from a state grant to be used for the purchase of spare engines for the Great Bus System.

Consent agenda items to be considered Thursday include the release of $174.78 in taxes; changing the Sheppard Memorial Library by-laws specifying meeting times for the library board; placing a section of Kingsbrook Road under permanent city maintenance; an ordinance to establish a controlled residential parking zone on the west side of South Library Street from East Fourth Street to East Fifht Street; establishing a no parking zone on the north side of East Fifth Street from Hickory Street and extending 90 feet east, and the establishment of five new stop signs.

Street Preacher Likes Ridicule Brought On By Family's Antics

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

MARION, N.C. (AP) — David Strode is so single-minded about his religious beliefs that he welcomes ridicule and willingly risks physical abuse to preach the Gospel where and whenever he sees the need, whether it's in the parking lot of a fast-food restaurant or on a crowded city street.

He even has a mini-sermon on his telephone answering machine.

"The Bible says repent ye, therefore, and be converted that your sins be blotted out," begins the taped message to those who phone his rented home in this western North Carolina mountain town.

Strode, 40, is a dark-haired, powerfully built man, a skilled machinist and a non-stop talker.

For the past three months, he has been mostly talking about the controversy which erupted last spring when his sons began preaching on their elementary school playground, calling their teachers and classmates "whoremongers" and "fornicators," among other things.

Strode says he sees his actions, and those of his children, as the living testimony and witness of "totally saved Christians."

Others in the community see the Strodes as the most frustrating and infuriating people they've ever encountered.

They describe the father as a know-it-all zealot who likes to spout scripture and loves the attention his actions, and those of his children, bring to the family.

"The media has made a big deal out of the Strodes and it has gone to their heads," asserts Doug Moyers, an area resident.

Lisa Mahan ruefully recalls the day last spring at Eastfield Elementary School, when she attempted to present Strode a parents' petition. It asked Strode to restrain his sons, Duffy, 11, and Matthew, 5, who were attracting hordes of reporters with their preaching and screeching on the school grounds.

"He simply wouldn't listen," said Mrs. Mahan, who has a child at the school. "We only wanted him to control his children and have them quit disrupting the school, but he just laughed and called me a 'Jezebel' and a lot worse."

She paused, then added, "I'll tell you one thing: nobody wants anything to do with him anymore, or those kids either."

Mike Jones, managing editor of The McDowell News, Marion's daily newspaper, says the Strodes have upset practically everyone in the community.

"It's not the fact that the Strodes preach that upsets people," he added. "It's where they do it and how they do it and what they call people. For example, the teachers really got upset after the boys started calling them whores and fornicators, as you might imagine."

The Strodes appear to have little or no support even among fundamentalist Christians locally, he said.

Strode himself, who swears by the King James version of the Bible and calls everything else "trash," readily acknowledges that he has become a pariah among Marion's 3,000 residents.

"A guy came at me with a crowbar the other night, while me and another preacher was preaching from the back of a pickup truck down at the Pizza Hut parking lot," he said. "They're trying to run us out of town.

"I was laid off from my job in May. The bosses at the plant deny it, but I know it was because of my preaching. Now, nobody will give me a job, even though I have 20 years of experience and there's a need for machinists in this area."

He also says the Rev. Danny Castle, pastor of Marion's New Manna Baptist Church, where his family has attended for the past 18 months, recently asked him not to come back.

"He said we were hurting the church," Strode said. "Can you believe that? Here I am living a good Christian life and preaching the Gospel and they ask me and my kids not to come back."

Castle has said publicly that his congregation is taking flak because of the Strodes' actions. Bruce Ward, the assistant pastor, said Strode repeatedly refused requests to tone down his preaching style, especially his tendency to call passersby names.

"David Strode is a very tough case," Ward said. "It's a real shame about those kids but I feel the church not only went the extra mile with Strode, but three extra miles; it's just that he seems to think differently from most other people."

Strode, who has been on several television and radio talk shows in recent weeks, says he is beginning to believe Marion is a "bad" community.

"The world is a wicked place," he said as he sat in his living room. "It's plain to see. The same thing happened to us up in Pennsylvania, before we came down here."

Park Rangers Now Carry Guns, But They Stress Tact

By DONNA BERKELHAMMER
Greensboro News & Record

A Greensboro man admires a rhododendron bush during a visit to a state park. He digs it up to take home with him.

In the past, if a park ranger saw him, the ranger could only issue a citation.

But two weeks ago, the first batch of rangers completed a basic law enforcement course, and now they have the same powers as police officers.

The ranger could arrest the man for digging up the bush.

And if the plant-lover really got belligerent, the ranger might show him his newly issued .38-caliber handgun to help make the point.

"But there's more to enforcement than a firearm," said Tommy Wagoner, superintendent of Hanging Rock State Park. "We have always had an educational approach to law enforcement.

"People are unaware in natural surroundings if they grew up in the city. They think picking one flower won't hurt anything. The authority comes in where the educational approach doesn't work."

The ranger's new role was added after a 1987 N.C. Division of Parks and Recreation survey found that 10 percent of all crimes commited in state parks were assaults on either visitors or staff, according to Don Reuter, the division's public information officer.

The study found that 240 illegal incidents took place in state parks from Jan. 1, 1985, to Dec. 31, 1986. About 30 percent involved vandalism or theft. Another 14 percent concerned speeding or other traffic violations.

Rangers felt uncomfortable with out law enforcement training in some remote parks, Reuter said. Before the training, rangers could issue citations that told lawbreakers either to pay a fine or go to court.

And so, S. Thomas Rhodes, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, decided to take advantage of a law that allowed rangers to be trained as police officers.

By mid-July, more than half of North Carolina's 105 park rangers completed a 369-hour basic law enforcement course at community colleges that made them peace officers within the park's boundaries.

The training teaches rangers how to spot potential problems and handle people better, Wagoner said.

North Carolina is one of the last southeastern states to give rangers law enforcement powers, Reuter said.

South Carolina considered adding two rangers specifically for law en forcement, but decided not enough crimes were being committed in state parks to warrant them, said Mike Hunt, training director of the S.C. Division of Parks, Recreation and Tourism.

Certain rangers are state constables with the authority to carry guns, although they are not required to.

Tennessee park rangers have been trained as law enforcement officers who carry handguns for more than 15 years, said Bob Rees, conservation security specialist with Tennessee state parks.

He said the rangers use their law enforcement powers as just another way to protect natural resources and visitors.

Certain Virginia park rangers can arrest people, said Gary Waugh, information officer of the Virginia division of parks and Recreation. Handguns are issued to each park, but rangers don't routinely carry them. He said in most situations requiring law enforcement, Virginia rangers take a "passive" role and call local police.

North Carolina rangers have been protecting and managing parks since 1915, when the General Assembly named Mount Mitchell the first state park, Reuter said.

Democrats Cry Foul As Martin Asks Aides To List Staff Goals

RALEIGH (AP) — Top appointees in Gov. Jim Martin's administration have been asked to flesh out the skeletal list of second-term goals the Republican governor outlined during a campaign debate in June, and the assignment is drawing fire from Democrats.

In a memo dated July 14, Martin Chief of Staff Phillip J. Kirk Jr. assigned six Cabinet officers and four key advisers to prepare "position papers" on the issues with cost estimates and other background information. The goals range from as drug-free schools to cutting the state's welfare rolls in half.

The memo has drawn protests from the campaign of Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, Martin's opponent in the fall election.

Jordan campaign manager John C. Crumpler said the memo proved two things: Martin threw out the ideas at the debate without knowing the details, and the governor is using state employees to further his political campaign.

"He's saying, 'You tell me what I meant,'" Crumpler said. Those are campaign (ideas), and he's got state employees developing them. That's wrong."

State Sen. Kenneth C. Royall Jr., a Durham Democrat who has fought openly with Martin this year, also said the policy was improper.

"I've never heard of that being done before," Royall said. "It makes me mad, but there's nothing you can do about it. They don't know how to do things above board over there."

Kirk was out of town and couldn't be reached for comment, but Transportation Secretary James E. Harrington — assigned three position papers in the memo — said the policy was proper.

"None of these goals have anything to do with personal gain or short-term political gain," Harrington said. "They are all obvious state government programs. Not only do I see nothing wrong, but everything right in asking the professional staff to detail what might be needed to meet that kind of goal."

Harrington said the memo from Kirk was "nearly identical to requests we get from the Legislature all the time."

Tim R. Pittman, Martin's campaign press secretary, said the goals were developed over time, not "conjured up" for the debate.

"What's wrong with a solid presentation of solid issues to the public?" Pittman asked. "Anytime anyone in the Martin administration takes a breath in 1988, somebody on the other side is going to be complaining."

Kirk's July 14 memo urged the state officials to use the Budget Office and the governor's research director to gather information and the governor's policy and planning staff for help with writing and policy ideas.

"As you know, Governor Martin recently handed out a list of his major goals for the second term after his debate with his opponent at the Bar Association meeting in Myrtle Beach," Kirk wrote. "The list is attached. . . . Position papers should provide any background information on the issue, information on what action is needed to accomplish the goal, cost estimates, and any other information relevant to the issue."

The 24 goals, outlined by Martin in campaign literature distributed at the debate, were simple statements accompanied by target dates for them to be accomplished. They included the following:

— "Cut dropout rate in half or better with intermediate goals each biennium."

— "Cut welfare rolls in half by reforms."

— "Cut drunk driving accidents in half."

— "Build decent facilities at half of our state parks."

— "Bring all 100 counties under 10 percent unemployment and at least 95 counties under 7 percent unemployment."

Helms Will Back Bush

By The Associated Press

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will be the North Carolina cochairman of Republican George Bush's presidential campaign.

Helms confirmed that he agreed to serve in the post in a telephone conversation with the vice president on Friday.

The campaign had previously announced that North Carolina Banking Commissioner Bill Graham would be state chairman of the Bush campaign and that former Sen. Jim Broyhill would be honorary chairman.

"We just haven't worked out details yet" on who will do what, said Lanny Griffith, Bush's Southern political director.

A leader of the GOP's conservative wing, Helms has not been an ardent supporter of Bush in the past. He supported others for vice president when Ronald Reagan chose Bush as his running mate in 1980.

State May Appeal Rate Hike Approved For CP&L

RALEIGH (AP) — An appeal of the State Utilities Commission's decision granting Carolina Power & Light Co. a 9.1 percent rate increase is "highly probable," says state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

"I am not at all pleased," Thornburg said. "In the short run, it doesn't sound too bad, but it is the type of thing that is done with blue smoke and mirrors. ... The bottom line is the case was not a win for the ratepayers."

Thornburg could appeal the decision to the state Court of Appeals.

The $135-million-a-year rate hike approved Friday brought mixed reactions from both CP&L officials and consumer advocates who vigorously had fought the increase during a nine-week hearing. Industry analysts called the ruling a disappointment, but said the decision was not "disastrous" for the company.

Robert Gruber, executive director of the Utilities Commisson's Public Staff, which represents consumers in utility cases, said the ruling would result in excessive rates for CP&L customers.

To soften the impact of the rate hike, the commission ordered CP&L to use a so-called "rate moderation plan" that would effectively increase the rate by about 3.03 percent a year. The full impact will be offset with revenues collected as deferred income taxes.

The commission ordered CP&L to make a series of refunds to its customers that will postpone the full impact of the rate increase until August 1990. The net effect on CP&L customers this year will be a 5.18 percent rate increase.

A residential customer who uses 1,000 kilowatts of electricity a month would see his monthly power bill rise $4.53 a month. In the summer, the monthly bill would rise from $79.86 to $84.39; in the winter, the bill would jump from $69.86 to $74.39

Sherwood H. Smith Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of CP&L, said that now that the rate case is over, CP&L customers can expect three to four years of stability in their rates unless financial situations change drastically for the utility.

"I certainly would hope that it wouldn't be for another three or four years," Smith said of the need for another rate hike. "Because we didn't get the full increase we requested, it may be necessary for us to come back sooner. But we would hope that it would be three to four years."

Smith said he was disappointed that the Utilities Commission rejected $142 million of the cost of building the Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant.

Air Space Sought

By The Associated Press

The Marine Corps is asking for a temporary increase in military air space in eastern North Carolina to accommodate more low-level flights in training exercises in October and November, officials say.

If approved by the Federal Aviation Administration, jets could fly as low as 500 feet and faster than 325 mph in areas between Camp Lejeune in Jacksonville and the Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station in Havelock. The area includes airspace around a military landing field at Bogue Field near Emerald Isle in Carteret County.

Col. K.D. Holland, director of operations at Cherry Point, said the changes were needed to give pilots realistic training. He said about 160 aircraft, including 55 helicopters, would be involved in the training exercises between Oct. 17 and Nov. 8.

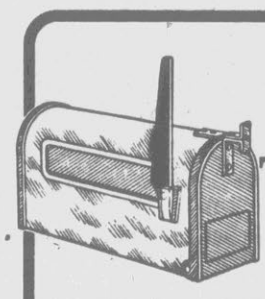

The Marines want to expand an existing military operating airspace over Topsail Island southwest of Camp Lejeune that now extends from 3,000 feet above ground to 13,000 feet.

A restricted area between Cherry Point and Camp Lejeune that now includes airspace from 1,200 feet to 18,000 feet would have the lower portion dropped to 500 feet.

IN THE STATE

Criticism

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two Mitchell Community College trustees are blasting the school's president, accusing him of damaging efforts to improve race relations on campus.

Trustee A.J. Waring said President Charles Poindexter ignored the trustees' recommendation to consult with members of the NAACP and Iredell Political Action Coalition before hiring the school's first minority affairs officer. He said in an interview that Poindexter "turned around a positive approach to reducing racial problems."

The criticism was the first public denouncement of Poindexter by any member of the Mitchell trustees. Waring and Mayor Ralph Bentley, members of the board's personnel committee, met Friday morning with nine of the school's 16 black employees in a second meeting to discuss the school's racial problems.

The first discussion in May led to a trustees' resolution denouncing racism on campus.

Forest Land

BAKERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Hikers are reaping benefits this summer from the U.S. Forest Service's purchase of 1,301 mountaintop acres in Yancey and Mitchell counties, the agency's only purchases in the state this year.

More than $1 million in Federal Land and Water Conservation Funds went into the purchase of 59 acres on Roan Mountain's Grassy Ridge and 1,242 acres on Celo Knob, Forest Service lands staff officer Ralph Bauman said.

A notice that once barred hikers from taking a spur off the Appalachian Trail to the summit of Grassy Ridge has been removed from the fence at Carvers Gap on the Mitchell County-Tennessee line now that ownership of the ridge has passed into public hands.

Teen Released

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — A Stanley County teen-ager charged with killing his father and burying the body under the house was free on bond Saturday after a court rejected the prosecutor's concern about the safety of a witness in the case.

Nearly 100 relatives and friends, including the suspect's high school football teammates, packed the bond hearing for Michael Thompson, 16, and his mother, Peggy Sue Eudy Thompson, 40, who is charged with helping conceal the killing.

Witnesses at the hearing revealed more details about June 8, the day Lanny Dan Thompson, 46, was killed, including allegations that Peggy Thompson helped her son measure the grave beneath the house. Autopsy reports indicate that Lanny Thompson's legs were broken after he died, possibly to fit the 3½-foot-deep grave.

Ozone Alert

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Asheville may soon be joining larger and more traffic-clogged cities in North Carolina that are mandated to take steps to reduce levels of ozone in the air, officials say.

A monitoring station downwind of downtown recently registered a record level of the lung-damaging pollutant. At a time when there was little wind and a dense haze blanketed the city, a level of 118 parts per billion was recorded.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency standard is 120 ppb, said Ronald Boone, director of the Western North Carolina Air Pollution Control Agency.

Asheville's ozone problem is greater than many larger cities primarily because of geography, Boone said. It is surrounded by mountains, and therefore is subject to temperature inversions about 70 percent of the time.

That's when warmer air holds in the cooler air below it, effectively putting a lid on the valley and not allowing air pollution to escape.

"We're sitting in a bowl," he said.

Oil Spill

WEAVERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Cleanup crews skimmed 400 gallons of diesel fuel off Waterville Lake Friday, battling rain and rattlesnake warnings, officials said. A state official said the spill would be around through the weekend.

Cleanup crews hired by Belue Trucking Co. floated long booms across the water Thursday afternoon to contain the spill, concentrated in a mass 75 feet wide and 100 feet long. Less concentrated diesel fuel spread over an area 1,000 feet long.

About 6,500 gallons of diesel fuel poured from a ruptured tanker truck Thursday when two vehicles collided in a traffic jam caused by another wreck on I-40.

Orange Grant

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A $600,000 grant from the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources will allow Orange County to modernize a Hillsborough neighborhood where outhouses were still being used.

The Orange County government has applied for a grant for the neighborhood improvement three times. The grant comes through the Department of Natural Resources' Small Cities Community Development Block Grant program.

The money will provide for water and sewer improvements, repairs to housing and street paving, according to Tara Fikes, county housing services director.

Ms. Fikes said the county applied for the grant in 1985, 1987 and again this year. "I'm not really sure why we got it this year and didn't get it before. I'm just glad we got it," she said.

Canadian Firm May Buy PTL Properties

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A tentative deal has been struck to sell PTL's network, theme park and other assets to a Canadian company for $113 million, says the ministry's bankruptcy trustee.

However, attorneys for founder Jim Bakker and another party say other offers remain possible.

PTL's bankruptcy trustee, M.C. "Red" Benton, said he had tentatively agreed to sell the ministry's assets to Samoth Capital Corp, it was announced Saturday.

"We'll sell it to them unless somebody else comes in at the last minute with a better proposal," Benton said.

The sale of the Heritage USA Christian theme park, in Fort Mill, S.C.; the PTL network, and 1,700 undeveloped acres must also be approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds in Columbia, S.C.

"It's my understanding the door is open for other offers to be made and probably will be made," said an attorney for Bakker, Ervin Bazzle.

Bazzle said he didn't know whether Bakker would submit an offer, but said, "He's always said he will do everything he can to save the ministry."

The other party, Charlotte businessman George Shinn, will continue talking with Benton, said Shinn's attorney, Spencer Stolpen.

Stolpen said Friday night that Shinn, majority owner of the Charlotte Hornets pro basketball team, had originally offered $75 million for PTL, but has increased his offer.

"We have been talking about significantly larger numbers since," Stolpen said.

"They (PTL officials) are not selling the property out from under us," Stolpen said after reviewing the letter of understanding with Samoth. "They are still working with us, and we still believe they are dealing with us in good faith. And they are looking out for the best interest of the estate."

Samoth's principals are Peter Thomas of Vancouver, British Columbia, and Karsten von Wersebe of Toronto. Thomas is chairman of Century 21 real estate of Canada and Von Wersebe is president of York Hanover Development Ltd.

"We look to own and operate Heritage USA as a major resort and conference center, which would focus on creating an atmosphere and which would stress traditional family values," Thomas said.

Thomas indicated he would strip the park of its religious focus.

"If you do a theme park, you know, it's got to be for everybody," Thomas said. "I see having people of all faiths, creeds and colors to the site."

"I think this is a step in the right direction," Benton said of the proposed sale. "It will take care of a lot of the creditors, but not all of them."

PTL has been in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings since June 1987, three months after Bakker resigned amid a sex and money scandal.

Under the deal, Thomas and Von Wersebe would have up to six weeks to inspect the property and financial records before deciding whether to go through with the purchase, the Observer said.

Republicans Ready For Changing Of Guard As Bush Gets Spotlight

By DAVID ESPO
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans usher out the Ronald Reagan era and usher in George Bush and his vice presidential mystery guest next week at a national convention scripted with Democratic mayhem in mind.

Bush goes to the four-day convention in the New Orleans Superdome as the unquestioned nominee of his party — the fruits of a stunningly strong primary campaign — yet still in the process of emerging from Reagan's shadow. He hopes to use the week, as well, to begin chipping away in the public opinion polls that show him well behind in the race for the White House.

"This is the first time that the vice president has been first and center in front of the American people explaining his own beliefs, priorities and goals," says Lee Atwater, his campaign manager. "Conventions are transforming events and we're convinced the more the American people know about George Bush...the more they will like him."

One GOP strategist, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Bush high command is aiming to reduce Democrat Michael Dukakis' lead in the polls by half, to somewhere under 10 points, by the time the convention ends.

To accomplish that, Republicans have designed a prime-time show designed to depict Dukakis as a liberal throwback and foreign policy novice. At the same time, they want the spotlight to begin shining on Bush after his years in Reagan's shadows.

"Part of our convention will be to contrast the experienced leader (Bush) against the governor of Massachusetts," says Craig Fuller, Bush's chief of staff.

The contrast is likely to begin with President Reagan's speech to highlight the convention's first night a week from Monday. It will include an address by former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, who roused Republicans four years ago with her scathing reference to Walter F. Mondale and the "blame America first Democrats."

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, a leading light of fiscal conservatism, is on the roster of speakers as a counter to the heavy Texas influence at Dukakis' convention last month, but also to rip into Dukakis on economic issues.

Reagan leaves the convention city Tuesday morning and Bush arrives a few hours later in a carefully orchestrated political two-step designed to symbolize the changing of the Republican guard. The man who twice won the White House by landslide will not appear on the convention stage with his vice president, although the two are expected to campaign side-by-side before the summer ends.

"We're trying to communicate the notion that we're going to run on the record that has been established over the last seven and a half years, but that George Bush recognizes that he can build on that record," says Fuller.

"Part of the transition of the week, part of the movement from the record to articulating how an experienced leader like George Bush can make America better is creating a little separation. Tuesday is that break."

There is no doubt that Bush controls the convention. He effectively wrapped up the GOP nomination with a spectacular string of primary victories on Super Tuesday March 8. Television evangelist Pat Robertson is the only rival to arrive in New Orleans with delegates pledged to him — 93 as compared with Bush's 1998 — and an aide says they will be released.

The aide, Barbara Gattullo, said Robertson will have his name entered into nomination only if Republican National Committee officials signal their approval. He will address the convention during Tuesday's prime time session.

Thus the only mystery of the convention centers around Bush's running mate, and the vice president says he'll make the suspense last as long as possible.

More than a dozen names have been floated as potential partners for the race against Dukakis and Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. The roster includes Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, both of whom Bush defeated for the presidential nomination.

The other contenders include Sens. Dan Quayle of Indiana; William Armstrong of Colorado; Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas; John Danforth of Missouri and Alan Simpson of Wyoming. Also on the list are Govs. John Sununu of New Hanpshire, Carroll Campbell of South Carolina; James Thompson of Illinois and Thomas Kean of New Jersey, who delivers the keynote address at Tuesday night's convention session.

Others mentioned as possible partners for Bush are former Senate Republican Leader and White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker as well as Richard Thornburgh, a former governor of Pennsylvania recently nominated as attorney general.

California Gov. George Deukmejian notified Bush last week he was not interested.

Bush's choice is certain to be ratified on the final night of the convention. But conservatives have signalled they might try to raise the Superdome roof if the pick doesn't meet with their approval.

"He has to have a vice presidential nominee who unifies the party," says Rep. Newt Gingrich, a five-term conservative congressman from Georgia. "They will run the risk of real problems if they pick someone who offends the conservative wing of the party. They don't want to spend all day (Thursday) fighting the vice presidential nomination."

Thursday is the day of Bush's acceptance speech, the moment he launches his fall offensive for the White House.

The vice president will be putting his imprint on the convention long before that. He travels to New Orleans on Monday to appear before the party's platform committee. He has already signalled that he wants the platform to echo most of the positions the party took in 1984, when the GOP rejected any tx increases, endorsed a line-item veto and balanced budget amendment, abandoned their support for the Equal Rights Amendment and promised to appoint judges "who respect traditional family values and the sanctity of innocent human life."

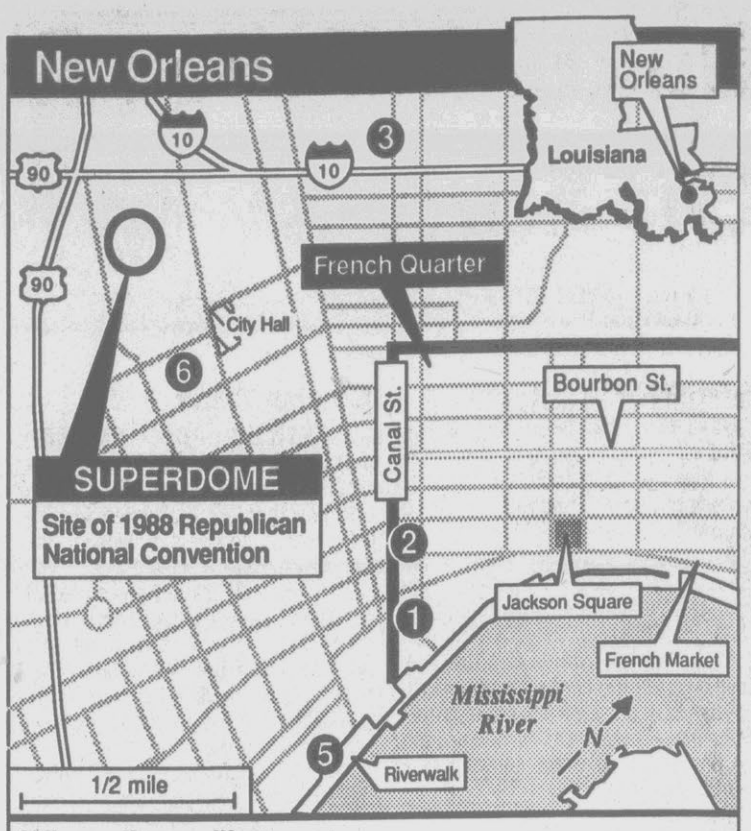

New Orleans has spent months sprucing for its role of host to the army of Republican delegates and journalists who will overrun its fabled restaurants and French Quarter tourist attractions for four days next week.

Dukakis Takes Riding Reporters On Early Morning 'Speed Walk'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — After a week of answering questions about his health, Michael Dukakis invited — or perhaps challenged — the press corps that travels with him to a spirited speed walk workout Saturday.

POWER WALKING — Presidential hopeful Michael Dukakis, center, was joined by Colarado Gov. Roy Romer, right, and other staff members and a few reporters for a brisk early morning walk in Denver on Saturday. Dukakis met with western governors to discuss issues in the 1988 elections. (AP Laserphoto)

As the sun rose on Denver at 6 a.m., Dukakis was walking briskly around City Park, accompanied by a couple dozen reporters, aides, photographers and network television cameras.

Also along was California Sen. Alan Cranston, a serious jogger, and Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, also a jogger.

Behind, a group of newspaper reporters less committed to exercise than the Massachusetts governor and Democratic presidential nominee rode in a dark, stretch limousine, getting out occasionally to walk a few paces.

Dukakis regularly spends 30 to 40 minutes in the morning or evening taking what he calls a "power walk," a fast-paced walk carrying hand weights in an exercise he says keeps him in shape.

"It's enough to get the heart rate up," Dukakis said as he began.

Normally he works out only with senior aide Nick Mitropolous. But on his campaign trip Thursday and Friday Dukakis needled reporters traveling aboard his jet about their health, at one point calling them an unhealthy looking bunch.

And at Laguna Beach, Calif., on Friday, he told a large audience he was inviting the press on his next workout "as long as they bring a doctor's letter" — remark that hinted at Dukakis' own doctor's report released Wednesday to squelch unsubstantiated rumors he had previously sought psychiatric care.

No letter was required for the workout, however.

'We're going to get out there and exercise for about 45 minutes and see just who's in shape and who isn't," Dukakis said.

He and some of those accompanying him walked — some jogged — twice around a paved 1.3 mile course through the park and around a lake. They made the rounds in 35 minutes.

He ignored the exhaust fumes from gas-powered golf carts that moved ahead of him, carrying television camera crews and news photographers, and from the police car that traveled ahead.

Governors Planning No-Politics Session

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Republican chairman of the National Governors Association opened the group's election-year meeting Saturday with a pledge to make the conference non-political and non-partisan.

"I'm going to display tremendous discipline," said Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire, a strong supporter of Vice President George Bush and frequent critic of Gov. Michael Dukakis, his Massachusetts neighbor and the Democratic nominee for president.

Dukakis planned to attend Tuesday's final session of the four-day meeting of the nation's governors.

President Reagan was flying in Monday to address the conference.

At a news conference opening the meeting, Sununu said, "I'm aware that our meeting has been bookended by the two major political gatherings of 1988 — the Democratic National Convention and the Republican National Convention.

"We're also as governors very much aware that the success of the NGA depends on the very bipartisan, non-partisan character of our deliberations."

He added that "for my part I'm going to try to make this the most non-political, non-partisan, non-presidential year event that you've ever seen."

Participating in the news conference with Sununu were two Democratic governors, host Richard Celeste of Ohio and Gerald Baliles of Virginia, who is slated to succeed Sununu as NGA chairman.

The two Democrats agreed that during the past seven and a half years, President Reagan had succeeded, at times over the protests of governors, in transferring many domestic responsibilities from the federal government to the states.

In keeping with Sununu's admonition to keep the meeting non-political, neither he nor his Democratic colleagues would address directly the question of how they felt Bush and Dukakis would deal with relations between the federal and state governments.

"I won't touch that one with a 10-foot poll," said Sununu.

Sununu has had a long, bitter fight with Dukakis over the Seabrook nuclear power plant. Dukakis played a key role in blocking licensing of the facility that sits on the New Hampshire seacoast near the Massachusetts border.

Falwell Blasts 'Temptation Of Christ' Film

By LAURA SESSIONS STEPP
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Television evangelist Jerry Falwell has declared holy war on the makers of the upcoming film "The Last Temptation of Christ," urging Americans to boycott theaters that show the film and all business interests of parent company MCA, including Spencer Gifts stores and G.P. Putnam's Sons, the publishing house.

The strongly worded announcement, reminiscent of the early 1980s, when Falwell's Moral Majority persuaded major convenience store chains to remove explicit magazines from their shelves, is sure to inflame what is already a heated battle between conservative Christians and Hollywood over whether the film, which emphasizes the humanity of Jesus Christ, should be released at all. The studio, Universal Pictures, announced Thursday that it would release it next Friday, a month ahead of schedule.

"This is Hollywood's worst hour," said Falwell. "Neither the label 'fiction' nor the First Amendment gives Universal the right to libel, slander and ridicule the most central figure in world history."

Falwell's remarks Friday are also certain to encourage continued debate between leaders of the protest and Jewish organizations. Several earlier assaults on the movie have been blatantly anti-Semitic, arguing that top officials of Universal and MCA, who are Jewish, intended to denigrate Christ. Falwell tried to distance himself from those attacks, saying, "This is not a Jewish issue."

"When you say the Jews control the media, the Jews control Universal, that's unfair, it's incorrect, and it's what you do when you don't have an argument," Falwell said.

At another point in the press conference, however, Falwell praised one such attacker, the Rev. Donald Wildmon, for alerting the public more than a month ago to the film. Falwell did not mention that Wildmon, a Mississippi Baptist, recently sent a letter to 500,000 people asking them to complain about the film to "the non-Christian officials who run Universal."

Rabbi A. James Rudin, an official of the American Jewish Committee, said that such comments distort "what should be a discussion of the artistic and spiritual message of a movie." Calling on mainstream Christian leaders to denounce anti-Semitic tactics, Rudin called the concept that Jews killed Jesus "an old myth that dies hard ... (It's) very deep and dangerous."

As Falwell prepares his boycott, using the resources, he said, of his TV ministry, his Lynchburg, Va., church and the Moral Majority, the U.S. Catholic Conference is getting ready to give the movie a "morally objectionable" rating, its lowest mark, USCC spokesman Richard Hirsch said. Hirsch said he hopes to view the film before distributing a critique, which would be circulated in Catholic newspapers around the country.

Another Catholic, Franco Zeffirelli, maker of the 1969 movie "Romeo and Juliet," has called the movie "truly horrible and completely deranged." Italy's Association of Filmmakers denounced Zeffirelli after National Public Radio reported him saying the movie was the product of "that Jewish cultural scum of Los Angeles, which is always spoiling for a chance to attack the Christian world."

Zeffirelli later said he was only quoting what fundamentalist Christians had said about the movie, but the association was not appeased, saying his statement was "not the first time he has shown arrogance toward cultures other than his own."

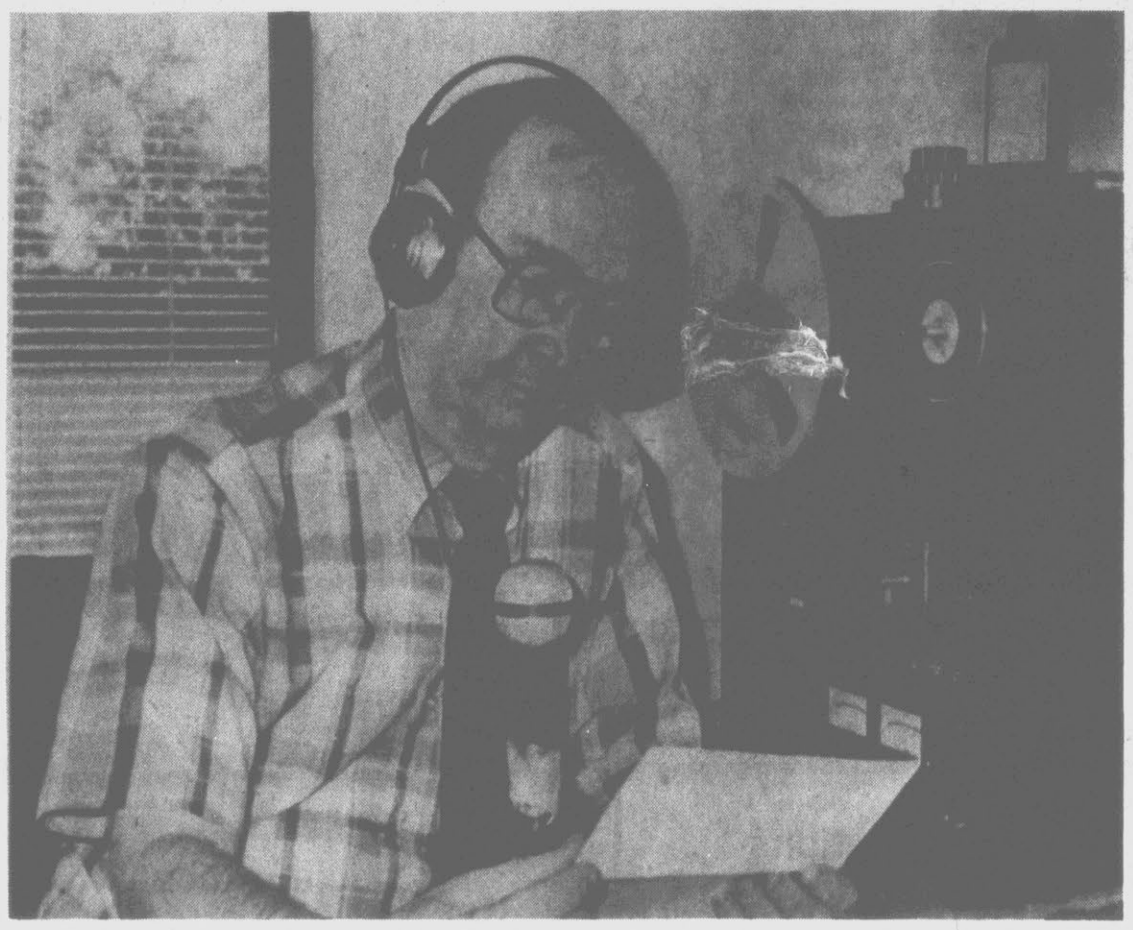

Drawing on a pilfered early script of the movie, which he acknowledged was not the final one, Falwell quoted several lines that he said he found objectionable.

In one, John the Baptist kisses Jesus on the mouth, a hint at homosexuality, according to conservative critics. In another, Jesus is dreaming about making love to Mary Magdalene on blankets spread over straw. "I never knew the world was so beautiful," Falwell quoted the film's Jesus as saying. "I tried to find a way outside my own flesh ... but now I know: A woman is God's greatest work, and I worship you."

The film's supporters have noted that the dream sequence is revealed to be the work of Satan, and that Jesus ultimately rejects the idea of marrying Mary and accepts his martyrdom.

Arthur Kropp, president of the organization People for the American Way, said Falwell "has the ability to make life difficult for MCA. I know that MCA is worried about it." Kropp, who saw the film at a preview organized by Universal last month, said, "I didn't find it blasphemous or threatening."

"Falwell's movement doesn't like people to hear or to see things they don't agree with," Kropp continued. "It's either right or wrong, Christian or non-Christian. It's consistent with what they do in the public schools, or in their efforts to purge society of 'ungodly humanists.'"

PROTEST LEADER — The Rev. Donald Wildmon of Tupelo, Miss., is leading a national protest and urging boycotts over the upcoming release of the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ." Wildmon, a Baptist minister, has been campaigning against pornography and violence for the past 12 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Evangelists Say Churches Are Failing To Reach Out

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Churches are losing their hold on the hearts and souls of Americans in part because they're too busy taking care of their own to reach outsiders, leaders at an evangelism conference said.

"We do almost nothing for the truly 'unchurched,'" said the Rev. Alvin A. Illig, director of the Washington, D.C.-based Paulist National Catholic Evangelization Association.

He noted that 44 percent of adult Americans — 78 million people — consider themselves "unchurched," meaning they belong to no church or attend services only on holidays or for weddings or funerals, according to a recent Gallup poll.

That is up from 41 percent, or 61 million, 10 years ago, the Gallup Organization said.

Ninety-nine percent of U.S. Catholic parishes consciously choose not to try to reach the average of 4,000 unchurched people who live in each parish, Illig said Friday at Congress '88, a national evangelism conference in this Chicago suburb.

"The vast majority of our time, effort and money is spent on maintaining the faith of the active," added Illig, whose organization is a missionary arm of the church that reaches out to inactive Catholics and non-Catholics.

Protestant churches are just as guilty as Catholic churches in that regard, Illig said.

Paul Benjamin, director of the Washington, D.C.-based National Church Growth Research Center, agreed.

"American churches are going to have to take a really sharp look at themselves," said Benjamin, a minister in the 1.5-million member Christian Church movement.

"There's a tendency in the church to go along with business as usual. What these people want is a congregation that has warmth and ... a biblical emphasis," he said.

"I think churches are going to have to tone down their blatant fundraising and realize that people are more important than things," Benjamin added.

Sometimes churches are put off by the challenge of reaching potential members, Illig said.

Passenger Tries To Storm Cockpit

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A man who said he would "have to kill everyone who was not a born-again Christian" tried to storm the cockpit of a jetliner as it was preparing to land, authorities said.

The Delta Air Lines DC-9 landed safely at Greenville-Spartanburg airport Friday morning, but federal authorities said the unarmed man could have caused the plane to crash if he had made it into the cockpit.

"The biggest concern for me was just getting the thing on the ground and not letting him into the cockpit," said the pilot, R.L. Cassell.

Delta flight 925 from Atlanta had 47 passengers and crew members.

Ricky Lavern Burdette, 40, of Anderson was arrested and charged with assaulting, intimidating and threatening a flight attendant, according to documents filed in federal court. He faces up to 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine if convicted, said Will Lucius, an assistant U.S. attorney.

U.S. Magistrate William Catoe Jr. set bond at $250,000.

Burdette, who described himself as an electrical supervisor, said he was traveling from Melbourne, Fla., home to Anderson.

The passenger was "fairly docile on most of the flight, then all of a sudden something snapped or something," Cassell said.

Burdette stormed toward the cabin as the plane approached the airport and told a flight attendant "he would have to kill everyone who was not a born-again Christian," the affidavit charged.

The plane was about 500 feet off the runway when he threw his coffee cup at the cockpit door and began kicking it "in an attempt to gain entry into the cockpit and force the plane to land," the affidavit said.

Cassell said the cockpit door was locked, but he and the the co-pilot were concerned the man might crash through it and strike the controls.

Boys Turn In Mom, Stepdad Over Drugs

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Two brothers who told police marijuana plants were growing behind their house said they turned their parents in because they didn't want their 15-month-old sister "to grow up with that."

"I just told (police) we had witnessed marijuana plants growing in a shed," said Timothy Gustafs, 11.

"We were a little scared because we didn't know what was going to happen," added his brother, Christopher, 9.

Their mother, Cathleen Joyce Smith, 28, and stepfather, Leo David Smith, 29, were charged with possession and cultivation of marijuana, said Lt. Don Nettles, head of the Titusville Police Department's narcotics division.

The Smiths were taken to jail Thursday and later released on bond. The boys and their 7-year-old sister went to stay with their father in Massachusetts, while the Smith's baby remained at home.

Timothy said he and his brother learned what marijuana smells and looks like in science class.

When they saw about 15 plants in the shed Thursday, the boys picked some leaves and put them in an empty bread bag to show police. Their parents were at work.

The boys and a 13-year-old friend rode their bicycles to a nearby grocery store and called police.

The boys told officers they had seen their mother and stepfather smoking marijuana twice and often could smell the smoke in the house, Nettles said.

Police took the children's statements at the station, then drove the kids back to their neighborhood. One of the boys told the baby sitter what had happened, Nettles said, and she called their mother at work.

Officers obtained a search warrant and confiscated the plants, some of which were 4 feet tall.

Judge Delays Trial Date For Ollie North

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The federal judge in the Iran-Contra case has postponed the trial of retired Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, delaying it until after the election and near the end of the Reagan administration.

The action by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell potentially could reduce the intensity of the Iran-Contra scandal as a political issue in the presidential campaign. The trial had been due to start Sept. 20, keeping the scandal at a high level of visibility at the peak of the campaign.

The judge, citing problems that both sides were having in getting secret documents ready to start the trial next month, canceled that date and did not set a new one. He is expected to act before the end of the year to set a new trial date.

Lawyers close to the case said that the new schedule of pre-trial actions spelled out by the judge would mean that the case probably could not be ready for trial until January, at the earliest.

The new schedule immediately stirred renewed speculation here over whether President Reagan would consider a pardon for North and others involved in the case before he leaves office on Jan. 20.

Earlier, White House aides had insisted that the president would not even consider a pardon until after the case had been tried. But that was at a time when it had appeared that the trial could be over before the president's term was up.

After the election Nov. 8, supporters of North — including the Rev. Jerry Falwell — are expected to put increased pressure on the president to end the case by a pardon.

Gesell's action appeared to mean that, if North's case does go to trial, it would cover all 16 counts in the grand jury indictment of the former Marine officer, who was the key figure in running the Iran-Contra operation from his office in the White House basement.

The main charges, which go to the heart of the operation in which profits from selling U.S. arms to Iran at inflated prices were diverted to buy arms for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, accuse North of a conspiracy to defraud the government, stealing government property and wire fraud.

N.Y. City Torn Politically Over Desegregation Issue

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — City manager Neil DeLuca outlined his "doomsday scenario" as fines levied by a federal judge mounted: First he would lay off non-essential workers, then sanitation workers and then police and firefighters. Finally, he'd fire himself.

"It might be the best thing that ever happened to me," he said.

A dispute between a defiant City Council and a judge who ordered it to desegregate housing has split this already divided city, which has been hit with fines that double daily and could bankrupt Yonkers this month unless the council complies with the order or gets an appeals court to intervene.

"The city moves from crisis to crisis and this is the worst yet," said former Mayor Angelo Martinelli. "It's one thing to have the councilmen go down. It's another to see the city go down the tubes after all everyone has done in the past to save it."

Yonkers hovered on the brink of bankruptcy in 1984 because it underfunded its school system.

In 1985, U.S. District Leonard Sand, who last week found the city in contempt and imposed the fines, found the city liable for 40 years of intentionally segregating its schools through segregated housing.

The racial divisions evolved through the city's shape — split by the Saw Mill River Parkway, with the older, more industrial section on the west and the affluent area, which includes Sarah Lawrence College and houses with manicured lawns, to the east.

Some 6,800 units of low-income housing were built in the 1960s, mostly on the west side. Originally, they housed the Irish, Italians and Slavs, but those groups prospered and moved to the east side.

Blacks and Hispanics from New York City's borough of the Bronx, on Yonkers' southern border, took their place and now account for nearly 30 percent of the city's population.

The judge wants the city to build low- and middle-income housing all over the city, not just on the west side.

But last week the City Council voted 4-3 to reject a package of incentives to attract developers of 800 housing units.

Sand, as promised, assessed fines of $500 a day against each recalcitrant councilman and an escalating fine against the city that began at $100 a day Tuesday and doubles daily. It reached $3,200 Saturday and by day 22 the city's $337 million budget will be wiped out, along with the jobs of its 1,800 municipal employees.

The councilmen also are threatened with jail terms if they are still in contempt after Aug. 10.

"The real tragedy is Yonkers was doing so well economically before this," said Mayor Nicholas Wasiscko, 29, who supports the desegregation order. "We've had three years of surpluses and there really has been an economic rebirth. Except for this."

Once, the city of 200,000 people was known as the City of Gracious Living. Some black leaders now call it the City of Racist Living.

"Whites will violate the law to keep blacks out of their neighborhoods, whites will pay huge fines to keep blacks out of their neighborhoods and whites may even go to jail to keep blacks out of their neighborhoods," said Marvin Andisson, 27, who lives in the Schlobohm Houses, one of the city's worst housing projects.

Others say race is not at issue. "I am absolutely convinced it is (a dispute) of class," said Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Residents focus on the effect of the judge's order on the value of their homes and complain bitterly that Yonkers is being persecuted.

Yonkers has 24 percent of the population of Westchester County, but about 40 percent of the county's low-income housing. Other towns have none.

Biaggi Resigns, Vows Innocence

By GEORGE LARDNER JR. and MARIANNE YEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., sobbing and shaking with emotion, announced his resignation from Congress Friday, "effective immediately," in the wake of his conviction for racketeering in the Wedtech scandal.

Found guilty of federal corruption charges for the second time in less than a year, Biaggi, who was elected to the House in 1968, said he would not seek re-election this fall so that he could devote all his time to court appeals.

A former policeman once known as "the most decorated cop" in New York, Biaggi, 70, denied ever taking a bribe — "not a single penny, trip, gift or stock has ever been given in my name" — and said he eventually would be exonerated.

But meanwhile, he said, "in light of all these consuming legal battles I must continue to fight, I am withdrawing as a candidate for re-election to an 11th term in Congress... . I will not campaign. I will not run."

Biaggi broke down several times as he read a prepared statement in his storefront office in the north Bronx. His wife, Marie, and three of their children, Jacqueline, Barbara and Richard, stood behind him as he spoke. He choked up entirely after telling the packed office: "I admit I leave with sadness but with no regrets."

Biaggi was found guilty Thursday of federal racketeering, extortion and conspiracy charges for taking bribes from the scandal-torn Wedtech Corp. in exchange for his political influence. His son, Richard, a lawyer, was convicted of aiding and abetting him in the receipt of one Wedtech bribe consisting of nearly $4 million in company stock.

Denounced by government prosecutors as "a thug in a congressman's suit," Biaggi was facing expulsion from the House because of his conviction in Brooklyn last September for obstruction of justice and accepting an illegal gratuity from Meade H. Esposito, the former Brooklyn Democratic leader. Biaggi faces 2½ years in prison in that case.

But he was still widely popular among Italian and Irish constituents of his Bronx-Westchester congressional district and until his conviction Thursday was favored to win re-election this fall. Two rivals were challenging him in the Sept. 14 Democratic primary, but Biaggi was still guaranteed a spot on the Nov. 8 ballot as the Republican nominee.

Biaggi said he had authorized leaders of both parties to remove his name as their nominee. He said staying in the race "would have been a luxury and I would love to have indulged myself, but it wouldn't be fair" to his constituents.

Convicted on 15 of 16 counts in the Wedtech case, Biaggi faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison on the racketeering charge, the most serious violation, and fines and forfeitures of hundreds of thousands of dollars. In addition to Biaggi's son, four other men, including his former law partner, Wedtech founder John Mariotta, and the former borough president of the Bronx, also were convicted of looting the company as it picked up millions of dollars in no-bid government contracts.

Wounded 10 times and awarded 28 citations in a 23-year career as a police officer, Biaggi retired from the force in 1965, earned a law degree, and was elected to Congress in 1968. He said he was proud of his record, on behalf of the disabled, victims of cancer and child abuse, the elderly, and others. Asked about being called "a thug," he said: "Name-calling is easy. You get it at every level of the gutter."

At his trial, Biaggi contended that the payments his law firm got from Wedtech were for legitimate legal services and that the company's real partner in corruption was Attorney General Edwin Meese III. Prosecutors agreed that Meese, who helped Wedtech secure a $32 million Army engine contract in 1982, was "a sleaze," but convinced the jury such talk was simply a smokescreen for Biaggi's own misdeeds.

At a news conference after the verdicts, U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani confirmed that he had authorized use the word, "sleaze," and commended Ed Little, the prosecutor who invoked it in closing argument.

"Those comments were authorized by me and approved by me in advance and they are as if I had said them," Giuliani said.

Anti-Abortionists Jailed In Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Anti-abortion demonstrations at three clinics landed 69 more activists behind bars Saturday, joining more than 120 others already in jail from previous demonstrations who have refused to identify themselves to police.

Fifty-three members of "Operation Rescue" were arrested at Midtown Hospital, 12 at the Atlanta Women's Medical Center on the northside and four at the Atlanta SurgiCenter in midtown, said Tom Pocock, deputy director of the Atlanta Bureau of Corrections.

The clinics are three of seven in the area licensed to perform abortions.

In Florida, 111 anti-abortion demonstrators were arrested Saturday at Tallahassee.

The demonstrators arrested in Atlanta were charged with criminal trespass and giving a false name to police, bringing to 276 the number who have gone to jail since the current series of protests began on July 19, during the Democratic National Convention. Twenty-eight were charged with obstructing a sidewalk or highway, Pocock said.

Many refuse to give their names.

Operation Rescue leader Randall Terry also was arrested and charged with being a party to a crime, Pocock said. Initial hearings for the protesters arrested Saturday were scheduled for Monday but may be changed to accomodate the arresting officers' schedules, Pocock said.

Demonstrators are being held separately from the general inmate population at various jails.

As of Friday, 82 arrested protesters had been released by disclosing their names and either posting $500 bond or being released on their own recognizance.

The group will continue pressing for the prisoners' release under the names "Baby Jane Doe" and "Baby John Doe" — which many of the arrested have given in solidarity with aborted fetuses, said Operation Rescue spokeswoman Dawn Stover.

The activists have said they are willing to plead guilty to criminal trespass charges under their aliases — a deal prosecutors have said would compromise the criminal justice system.

Operation Rescue leader Randall Terry has said his group will fill the jails as long as its members remain in custody, and that hundreds of supporters will flock to Atlanta in the next few weeks.

Train Rams Into Station Barrier In Paris

PARIS (AP) — A passenger train rammed into a barrier at the end of the line in Paris' Gare de L'Est station Saturday, killing one person, injuring 57 and trapping some victims for more than two hours, authorities said.

It was the second major train crash in Paris in six weeks.

Rescue workers used electric saws, hammers, pliers and cutters to extract those caught in the wreckage. Doctors standing by administered local anesthetics.

Raoul Vigier, a spokesman for the Paris fire department, said nine victims were in serious condition. He said all nine spent 2½ hours trapped in the wreckage before rescue workers could free them.

The fatality was identified only as a man in his 30s who was dead when rescuers reached him in the wreckage.

There was no information on how many people were on the train.

The four-car train arrived at the station at 1:10 p.m. from Chateau Thierry, 60 miles northeast of Paris. A railroad employee who saw the accident from about a dozen yards away said the train appeared to be traveling about 12 mph.

The first car slammed into the retaining barrier at the end of the line, pushing up over top of it and twisting at a right angle. All of the seriously injured were in the first car. The other three cars and the engine, which was in the rear, remained on the rails.

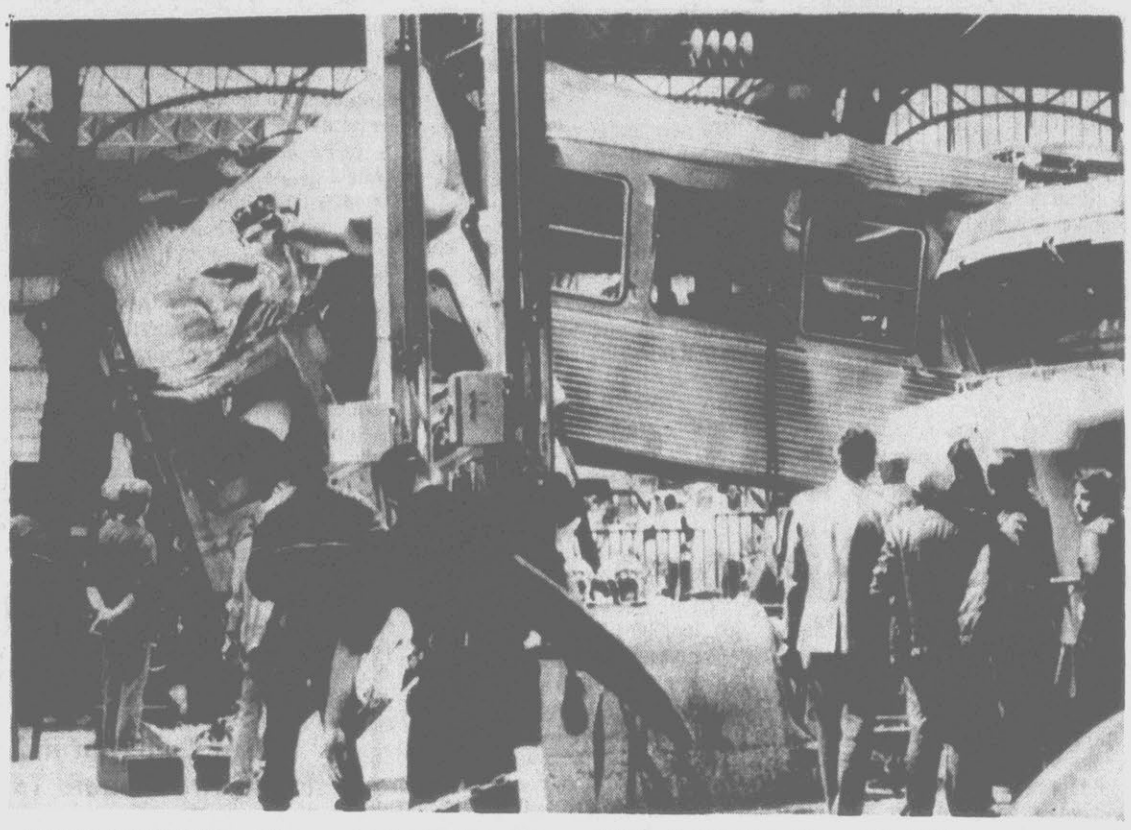

"I saw, in the last 10 meters, that it was not going to stop," said the employee, who did not want to be identified. "I watched it. There was a big shock, then a flash caused by the overhead electrical contact wire.

"In one second, I saw the train climb, then straddle the terminal buffer. There was a moment of panic. The shock blew out the windows of the car."

Vigier said most of the injured suffered cuts, bruises, broke bones and shock.

The cause of the accident was not known. Two investigations were launched — a judicial inquiry and an internal investigation by the state-run railroad's experts. Railroad officials refused to speculate on the cause, but employees at the scene said some sort of brake failure appeared to be the cause.

On June 27, a passenger train lost its brakes and crashed at about 45 mph into another train in Paris' Gare de Lyon station. Fifty-six people died.

Derailed Train Hits Oil Tank

ELSBERRY, Mo. (AP) — Twelve cars of a freight train derailed Saturday and struck a tank of diesel fuel that caught fire, forcing the evacuation of about 300 people, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

A 15-block downtown area was evacuated and traffic was rerouted around the town because of the fire and potential chemical hazards, said Cape Girardeau Fire Chief Jerry Reineke, who was acting as public information officer for the incident.

The fire was extinguished late Saturday afternoon, and firefighters said they believed the evacuees would be able to return home late Saturday or early Sunday. The number of evacuees remained unclear, as Reineke and others at a command post gave out figures ranging from 200 to 1,000, with 300 the latest estimate.

The 113-car southbound train from Galesburg, Ill., to St. Louis derailed about 6:45 a.m., said Burlington Northern Railroad spokesman Brian Sweeney.

Several cars hit the diesel tank, knocking off a valve and allowing diesel fuel to spill, said Reineke. The spilled fuel and several rail cars carrying lumber products and piping caught fire, he said, but there was no explosion as authorities earlier reported.

The cars also damaged a grain elevator and a storage tank containing anhydrous ammonia, a potentially hazardous material, but that tank was not leaking.

Heat Warps Tracks

SACO, Mont. (AP) — Thirteen passengers and an Amtrak employee remained hospitalized Saturday after a 12-car train derailment that was blamed on tracks warped by near-100-degree heat.

The train, en route from Chicago to Seattle, was traveling at 79 mph when it derailed Friday, toppling at least five of nine passenger cars and throwing passengers from their seats, leaving more than 160 injured, authorities said.

Hospitals treated and released 149 passengers, said Sue Martin, an Amtrak spokeswoman in Washington, D.C.

The train was carrying about 375 passengers and a crew of 10 to 15, Amtrak officials said.

The engineer said the derailment was caused by deformed rails near this northern Montana farming community.

A secondary track near the derailment site was cleared late Friday, allowing rail traffic to go through, Martin said. Crews planned to spend the weekend repairing the twisted track.

Amtrak made arrangements Saturday to get passengers to their destinations.

Shultz Falling Short In Taking Over Peace Effort

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

A News Analysis

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz returns to Central America Monday for the third time in little more than a month in yet another effort to put a U.S. stamp on a year-old peace initiative.

He is not likely to do any better this time.

Shultz's latest visit comes a year and a day after the presidents of Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica signed a peace plan that has done little to end the region's bloody conflicts.

It also comes a week after Shultz failed to get a strong condemnation of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government from the other four countries during a meeting with their foreign ministers.

Costa Rica's foreign minister, Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto, signaled the reason for Shultz's failure at a news conference following Monday's meeting in Guatemala City.

"The leadership of Central America will not be abandoned, will not be given up," Madrigal said. "We are very interested in having the Central American countries retain their leadership in this entire effort for peace and democracy."

Shultz also visited the region in June.

The peace plan was designed by Costa Rica's president, Oscar Arias. It earned him last year's Nobel Peace Prize, and he has made it clear he does not want to see it fall into Washington's hands.

After several months of relatively little diplomatic activity, Arias appears to be planning a new initiative of his own.

In a meeting with foreign reporters Friday, Arias hinted he will seek Latin American support this week for political and economic sanctions against Nicaragua for its failure to comply with his plan.

The plan calls for cease-fires in civil conflicts in Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras, amnesty decrees in all four countries, democratization, and the lifting of emergency or martial laws.

It also calls for an end to all outside aid to the region's insurgents and an end to use of any country's territory by those seeking overthrow of a neighboring nation.

El Salvador is still gripped by a bloody civil war. A fragile cease-fire in Nicaragua is broken almost daily, and leftist insurgencies still trouble Honduras and Guatemala.

Shultz will meet with Arias upon his arrival here Monday from Bolivia. The secretary flies Tuesday to Honduras and El Salvador to meet presidents of those countries, and on Wednesday both he and Arias go to Ecuador for the inauguration of President-elect Rodrigo Borja.

In Ecuador, Arias will discuss a new initiative with the presidents and foreign ministers of other Latin American nations. He said if he gets the support he seeks, he may announce a new plan shortly after his return.

"My new initiative is to convince the other democracies that we must put pressure on the Sandinistas," Arias told reporters.

He refsued to elaborate, but when his peace plan was signed last year, Arias promised to seek political and economic sanctions against any nation that failed to comply.

If Arias succeeds, Shultz will have indirectly achieved a U.S. goal of isolating Nicaragua politically and economically from the rest of Central and Latin America. The difference is that an Arias initiative will not be stamped, "Made in the USA."

Like Shultz, Arias harbors little love for the Sandinistas. But he differs from the Reagan administration in his belief that the U.S.-backed right-wing rebels known as Contras are no better.

A Contra victory in Nicaragua, Arias said Friday, would simply replace a dictatorship of the left with a tyranny of the right.

In his last meeting with Shultz in late July, Arias said, he told the secretary that "the Sandinistas today are the bad guys."

"They have unmasked themselves," he added. "They were not really honest when they committed themselves to democratize and to advance toward a pluralistic society.

"If any president of Central America has signed (the plan) ... and simply tried to deceive the world, or the rest of the Central American presidents, Arias said, he "should be punished."

But Arias said he remained strongly opposed to further U.S. military aid to the Contras, who have been trying to topple the Sandinistas for the past seven years.

Asked about charges by some U.S. congressmen and administration officials that he is naive in believing the Sandinistas can be made to bargain in good faith without a Contra threat, Arias replied:

"Was George Shultz naive when he proposed a Middle East peace plan?"

U.S. Office Attacked In Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Radical students demanding talks with North Korean youths on national unification attacked a U.S. diplomatic office and police stations Saturday in street battles in Kwangju, news reports said.

The South Korean news agency Yonhap said clashes broke out in the southern city when police fired tear gas to stop about 1,000 students from marching off a university campus after a rally supporting proposed talks in the border truce village of Panmunjom.

Two policemen were injured, the report said, and about 10 students were arrested as scattered clashes continued for several hours in downtown streets. Students armed with firebombs attacked three police stations, the agency said.

It said about 100 students hurled firebombs at the U.S. Information Service office, shattering 10 windows and gutting a van parked in front of the building.

The students, representing more than a dozen universities in the Kwangju area, rallied in support of proposed Aug. 15 talks with their North Korean counterparts. Dissident sources said the students shouted anti-U.S. slogans and demanded that former President Chun Doo-hwan be punished for ordering the army to crush a 1980 civil uprising in Kwangju in which nearly 200 people were killed.

Saturday's clashes followed a police order banning student rallies in support of the talks with the North Korean students.

In a statement, National Police Director Cho Chung-sup said demonstrations would be blocked to prevent students from marching to the border, about 30 miles north of Seoul. Cho said the meeting could create social unrest and threaten preparations for the Sept. 17-Oct. 2 Olympics in Seoul.

The police chief accused the students of planning the march to draw attention to their anti-government, anti-U.S. campaign.

South Korean authorities have said all contacts with the North should be arranged through government channels.

House Panel Says U.S. Allies Should Do More

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should consider withdrawing some troops from Western Europe and the Western Pacific unless American allies in those regions pick up more of the cost and burden of defending against the Soviets, a congressional study said Saturday.

"U.S. diplomacy has failed in attaining equitable burden-sharing," concluded the report by the House Armed Services Committee.

The document was the latest in an increasingly loud, election-year chorus of calls from Congress to have America's allies pay more for defense.

Reagan administration officials have agreed that U.S. allies should do more, but have rejected any attempts to force allied increases and have instead relied on trying to pursuade other nations to increase their defense commitments.

Even as the report was issued, the Senate is considering legislation that would force U.S. allies in Japan and Western Europe to do more.

The report was prepared by the Armed Services defense policy subcommittee, which held a series of hearings on the subject.

It said "the United States should perform a zero-based study of U.S. military bases and commitments overseas in order to assess and prioritize U.S. interests in various countries and regions of the world and realign and possibly withdraw some U.S. forces in some locations."

No locations or possible troops levels that might be withdrawn were spelled out in the report.

But it did note the panel wasn't in favor of "near-term, large-scale U.S. troops withdrawals from Europe so long as a reasonable possibility exists for negotiating asymmetrical conventional force reductions with the Soviet Union."

The Reagan administration's attempt at pursuading U.S. allies to do more simply hasn't worked, the report said, and won't be effective unless the United States is ready to act.

"As long as the U.S. accepts carrying a disproportionate share of the free world's defense burden, the allies will be reluctant to assume a greater share," the report said.

It noted that both Japan and Western Europe were rebuilt from the wreckage of World War II chiefly with U.S. aid. Now, those areas are strong.

"Many Americans feel that we are competing 100 percent militarily with the Soviets and 100 percent economically with our defense allies," it said. "Some have said that the United States has incurred all the burdens of empire and few, if any, of the benefits."

Speaking of the 16-member North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the report "states in the strongest possible terms that Europeans had better be prepared to defend their own territory without a large-scale U.S. ground commitment, because that commitment cannot be guaranteed forever."

Capsized Ferry Kills 38 On Ganges River

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A ferry carrying more than 500 people capsized in the Ganges River in eastern India on Saturday, killing as many as 38 people and leaving hundreds missing, local officials and reporters said.

About 100 people were rescued after the accident in Bihar state, according to reports from the remote area. Indian news agencies and local reporters said as many as 400 people were feared drowned.

Most of the passengers on the steam-powered ferry were Hindu pilgrims who were crossing the sacred river to catch a train to the Hindu town of Deoghar, whose shrines are visited by thousands of pilgrims every day.

"The launch is still under water. We are told by local officials that at least 400 people are feared dead. Many of the victims are still trapped," an Indian reporter said when contacted by telephone in Patna, capital of Bihar state, more than six hours after the accident.

The reporter, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he had seen the boat's passenger list and said there were 535 passengers.

The accident occured near Katihar, 185 miles east of Patna and 650 miles east of New Delhi.

PHYSICIANS WEIGHT LOSS CENTERS
Celebrate 6 Year Anniversary

THOUSANDS OF PWLC CLIENTS CREATE CELEBRATIONS

The staff and management of Physicians Weight Loss Centers are excited and very proud to announce their 1988 birthdays. Garner, NC just celebrated its one year in March and Asheboro, NC was one year old in April. Raleigh II opened in May 1986. Greenville opened in July 1985 along with Fayetteville in February 1985. Cary opened in September, 1984. Durham and Raleigh I opened in 1982 in August and November respectively. These anniversary celebrations give Physicians Weight Loss Centers an opportunity to say "Thank You" to all the wonderful clients who made this tremendous expansion possible. It also gives the owner and management an opportunity to recognize the outstanding staff from each of the eight centers owned by Triangle resident Ron R. Mock.

"On this special occasion, we would like to express our appreciation to all the people who have recommended our program to others, allowing our program to expand. Word of mouth is the most effective advertising around, and we're very fortunate and appreciative of all the kind words from happy patients and the recommendations from so many physicians," Mock said in an interview.

Courage, self confidence and poise are synonymous with an acceptable body weight. It's impossible to camouflage an overweight body and the negative self actualization that accompanies obesity. Looking your best is equivalent to feeling your best. There are no age or social restrictions regarding individuals wanting to look and feel their best. An experienced, competent and caring staff delivers Physicians Weight Loss Centers services to you as a pleasurable experience — not a grueling task.

Any person striving for excellence and self improvement can benefit by choosing Physicians Weight Loss Centers' services. This choice can restore optimism, and deliver immediate, safe and nutritious weight loss.

A second center will open in Durham soon in a site near the South Square area. The location, as of yet, is undisclosed. It will open in 90 days. Mock seemed very excited about this next grand opening since he grew up just a mile away — some 45 years ago. Other locations will be Goldsboro, scheduled for early fall, and possibly Wilson or Rocky Mount scheduled to open in late fall.

MEDICAL SUPPORT IS APPRECIATED!

Physicians Weight Loss Centers are very appreciative of our program's acceptance within the medical communities of North Carolina. Medical doctors referring their overweight patients to Physicians Weight Loss Centers for structured assistance have been very pleased with the results. In the eight centers, each are staffed with Registered and/or Licensed Practical Nurses, Staff Counselors, a Manager and a Physician. The Physician accepts the potential client ONLY after a thorough screening of their medical history, electrocardiogram evaluation, blood chemistry studies and a physical examination. Medical supervision within the staff is a requirement. Physicians Weight Loss Centers have the expertise and skill to guarantee a weight loss of 3 or more pounds per week. Medical monitoring, staff guidance and encouragement help the client to follow the prescribed program. The program utilizes several calorie and carbohydrate restricted diets. Adequate amounts of protein, vegetables, fruits and starches create well-balanced menus at each meal. Our clients successes are related to menu plans that encourage dining in any atmosphere, from fast foods to elegant restaurants. The convenience factors of Physicians Weight Loss Centers program allow for out-of-town, interstate and intercontinental travel. Clients are also taught improved eating habits for eating at home and social occasions.

Shop with Caution...

There are several offspring of Physicians Weight Loss Centers program, which have opened without proper planning, staff training, adequate funding and franchise support. Consequently, several competitors who had high hopes of a fast profit have closed their operations and moved on to other towns.

"I would highly recommend that a person searching for help in diet control only visit centers with a very good track record — such as Nutri-Systems, Diet Center or, of course, our program here at Physicians Weight Loss Centers. We're here to stay and our success in weight loss speaks loud and clear," says Mock.

The others are "fly-by-nights" that may or may not be there when you go back for your next visit.

PERMANENT WEIGHT CONTROL

Most time, poor eating habits have become ingrained over the years. Many people may not realize these habits even exist. Behavior Guidance classes arranged near the lunch hour or immediately following the workday are conducive to more efficient management of the precious time of our clients. Since 1979, Physicians Weight Loss Centers have recognized the importance of catering to individuals. We realize the necessity of being a result-oriented outpatient weight loss facility. We take great pride in offering effective weight loss and weight maintenance programs that blend well with the most hectic of schedules. Client success and dedicated service are the primary focuses during operating hours of 8:30 am to 7:30 pm. After reaching ones weight loss goal, a full one year weight maintenance schedule is encouraged and established. This period of calorie adjustment stabilizes the individuals newly attained and desired weight. Weight maintenance is the overall objective. A primary goal of Physicians Weight Loss Centers is to create the climate of attention, recognition and achievement for our clients, many of whom have never experienced the joys of a totally acceptable body weight. 'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Another Way?

Supervision, Not System, Failed

All the voting procedures in the world won't work if those charged with administrating elections aren't meticulous about following the rules.

Carelessness circumvents any sound policy. Only when poll workers scrupulously adhere to procedures can reform work.

That's why new voter eligibility verification procedures proposed by the Pitt elections office won't do any good unless the office in turn tightens up on slack administration.

It's a shame when 22 Republican and unaffiliated voters can cast ballots in a Democratic primary — an incident which occurred in the disputed May 31 runoff in Pitt County. That finding further muddied an already-turbid election but made it clear a new vote is mandatory.

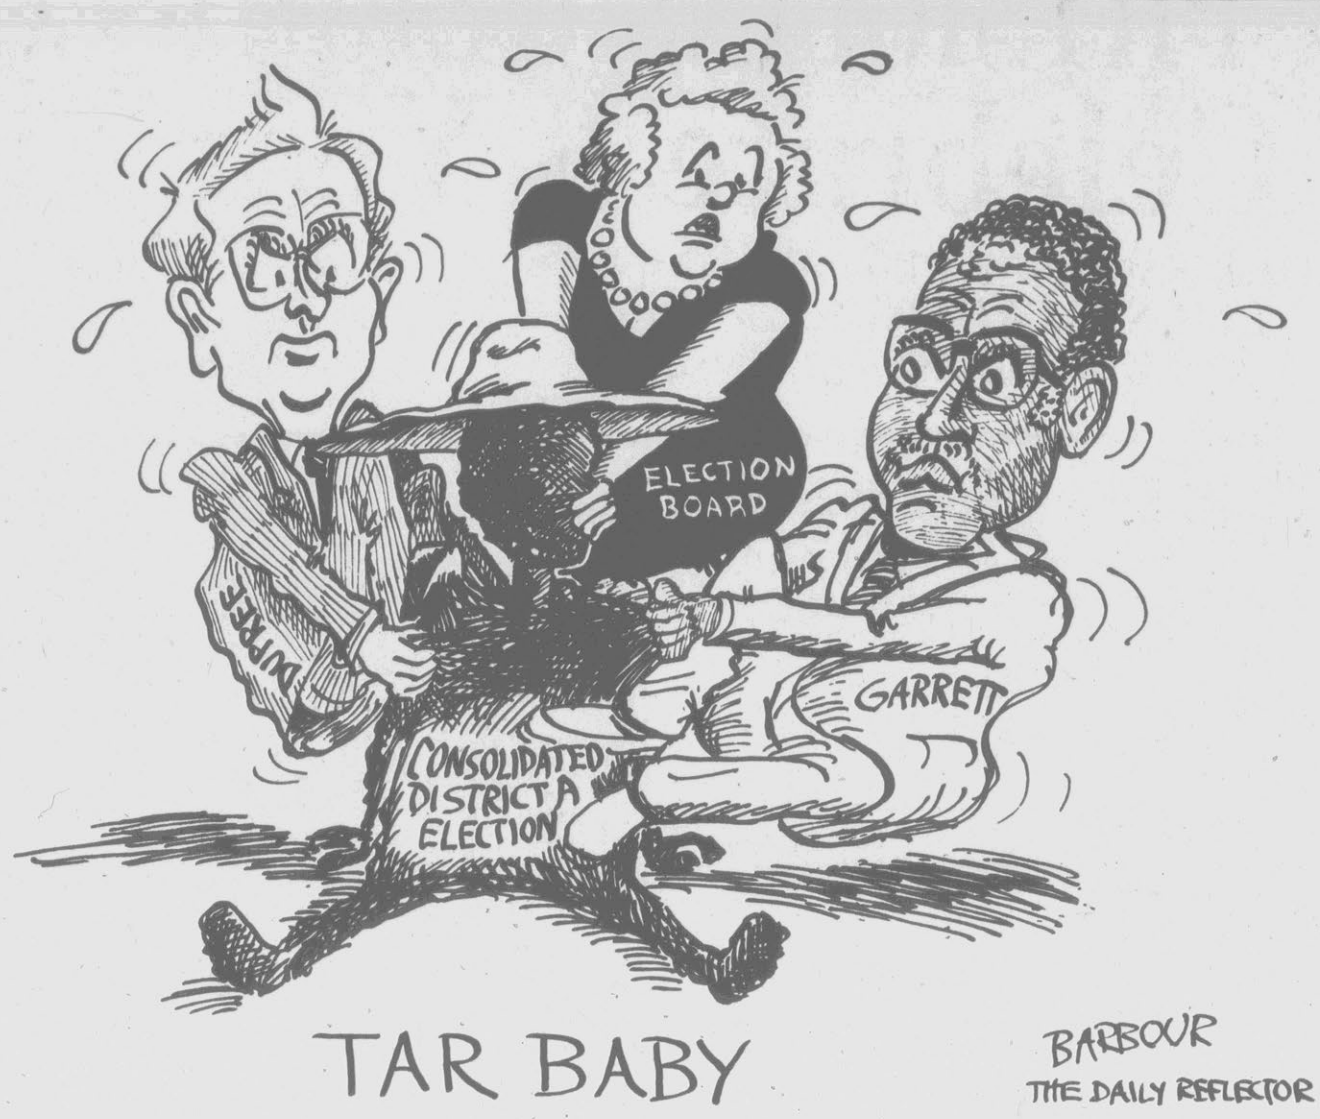

The incident occurred primarily because of carelessness. Likely, poll workers didn't check the eligibility of friends and neighbors who showed up to vote. The system didn't fail; slipshod supervision flawed the process.

In the future, the elections supervisor wants to eliminate the possibility of this happening again by diverting Democratic and Republican voters to two separate sets of poll workers who would then verify the voters' eligibility. That setup has merits, but would cost taxpayers more money.

And that kind of system is thorough but it is not error-proof. Nor would it keep poll workers from casually waving acquaintances on to vote in a party primary. The way to do that is by setting meticulous standards and demanding adherence to those guidelines. Poll workers should ask for name, address and party and look this information up to make sure what they're told is correct. They should be required to mark off a voter before ballots are handed out.

Proposing to separate Democrats and Republicans would provide another safeguard, but it won't eliminate what happened May 31. Only strengthening the integrity of the poll process can accomplish this goal, along with stressing the importance of staffing polls with qualified, well-trained workers.

More money and verification won't solve the problem. It may help, but the real solution lies in eliminating carelessness and the circumstances that encourage it.

Public Forum

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Carlton Smith's letter to the editor which appeared in the Daily Reflector Sunday, July 31.

As an employee of the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, Northeastern Regional Office, I resent the implication made by Mr. Smith pertaining to the professional abilities of regional manager Lorraine Shinn.

Mr. Smith should acquaint himself more fully with the facts and the progress made in the region under Mrs. Shinn's capable management. I refer specifically to the office space and expertise made available there to the Albemarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study (APES), a joint effort of the State of North Carolina and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency aimed at the effective management of the valuable, productive resources of the estuaries of northern and central North Carolina. I refer also to the formation of the Pamlico Emergency Response Team (PERT) which is comprised of NRCD scientists and technicians dedicated to the preservation of our natural resources and the mitigation of degradation of the Pamlico River. I refer, also, to the custodial position and efficacy of the Washington Regional Office as affects corporate giants like Weyerhaeuser, Texasgulf and Union Camp. I could go on.

I realize Mr. Smith's letter was in retort to Mrs. Shinn's comments to the editor (Daily Reflector, July 27) however, it needs to be pointed out plainly that Mrs. Shinn's comments were confined to the political behavior and political shortcomings of Mr. Smith during his abbreviated tenure as chairman of the Pitt County GOP. Mr. Smith's comments, on the other hand, are a blatant and vicious attack on Mrs. Shinn's personal and professional credibility. For the record, Mrs. Shinn was never a social worker, but rather holds a B.A. degree in psychology which she combined with several years managerial experience to work as a mental health professional. I can think of no better a background combination to deal with the public.

Joan Giordano

To the editor:

As a member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission and a strong supporter of the Medical District Plan, I read your July 31 editorial "Be Tough" with interest. I agree wholeheartedly with your position concerning this important area of development for Greenville and Pitt County, so you can imagine my surprise when you implied that the Planning and Zoning Commission has suggested that the land across from PCMH be rezoned for non-medical use. The fact is, the Planning and Zoning Commission's primary recommendation calls for a more strict interpretation of the current zoning ordinances. I can attest to this because I served on the subcommittee that made this recommendation, which included a revision of the "50/50" rule to ensure that medical uses exist in at least 50 percent of the floor space of buildings in MD-2 zoning.

The suggestion that you refer to as being made by the Planning and Zoning Commission, was, in fact, a position taken by one commission member and reported accordingly to the City Council. Nowhere in your editorial is this made clear. Were this a single incident of an editorial concerning the Medical District being based on erroneous information, it might be forgivable. However, the same inaccuracy was reflected in your June 26 editorial about the Medical District, "On The Edge," in which you reached a conclusion based on incomplete information that cast doubt on an appropriate decision.

Philosophical positions that appear as editorials are essential to educating the public about important issues that affect each and every one of us. However, individuals who write editorials have a moral and ethical responsibility to base their positions on accurate information. Decisions about the future of the Medical District are crucial to the future development of Greenville and Pitt County. We all deserve to be able to reach our own personal point of view based on competent and thorough reporting by The Daily Reflector.

New Leader

From Embryo To Maturation

Dr. James A. Hallock, the next dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, won't join a long line of predecessors.

There has been only one dean of the four-year medical school — Dr. William E. Laupus who has become vice chancellor for health sciences. Before that, Dr. Wallace Wooles served as dean and developed the embryo school until it became a degree granting school of medicine.

Dean Laupus' goals were clear when he assumed the job. They were to develop a creditable medical school which would serve the unique needs of North Carolina. That mission included better health care in the eastern section of the state, bringing more minorities into medicine and providing more primary health care physicians, particularly for the sections of the state which do not have adequate access to physicians.

The school of medicine could not have had better leadership than Dr. Laupus for this critical period of development. He assembled an outstanding staff, helped hammer out an agreement with Pitt County Memorial Hospital, carried out the building phase for the Brody building and other projects. The school's development was fully supported by the UNC administration and the Legislature.

Dr. Hallock will logically lead the school into a new era of development. To say it will strive for greatness is to acknowledge its goal. It must continue to develop with the aim of becoming the best.

Some of the old challenges are still there — providing better health care for rural areas and improving the infant mortality rate of North Carolina. New challenges are constantly arising for the ECU School of Medicine as well as medical education in general.

Dr. Hallock comes from the University of South Florida College of Medicine which, established in 1975, closely parallels the development of the ECU School of Medicine.

Here Dr. Hallock will find much support for the goals of the school. It is support that he no doubt will welcome as he leads the medical school and East Carolina University into an all-important era of maturation.

Tobacco Days Aren't The Same

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Then and now. There was a time, believe it or not, when farmers hauled their tobacco to markets such as Greenville and Farmville in mule-pulled wagons.

Since it wasn't a 20-minute trip in those days, the farmer frequently had to come in one day and sell his tobacco the next. Consequently tobacco warehouse often built in bunk rooms where the tobacco grower could spend the night.

There was a time, too, when there was no federal tobacco program. The farmer harvested his crop and took his chances on what price it would receive when the markets opened. If any of it was not sold there was no Stabilization to take it up. It went back home with the farmer.

When the 1988 selling season opened in Greenville last week, things were quite different. Mules weren't needed to get the crop to town. Many of those with tobacco on the selling floor weren't even there to watch the proceedings. They were more likely in an air-conditioned office, juggling profit margins.

Yes, the tobacco market has changed startlingly since the old days, a change reflective of a shifting agricultural sector.

In these times of $1.60 tobacco it is well to remember the 12 cents per pound tobacco of depression years. Farmers couldn't make expenses and tobacco was swept up in a federal program as the nation attempted to restore its ailing farm economy. The program, as it is referred to, has survived through many stormy times since.

Though times were tough during the early years of tobacco production, health wasn't one of the concerns. Though some offered the opinion that tobacco might be harmful, there was little scientific evidence to defend that position.

And now... Tobacco comes to market in modern trucks, more often than not, grown by big producers. The small allotment holders long ago rented their allotments to larger producers who could afford the bulk barns and harvesters needed for volume production.

Nobody stays over night any more. There's no need to, and if there was, farmers would undoubtedly go to a clean motel.

'The town doesn't come alive with a holiday spirit as the market opens. In Greenville that is now reserved for the return of the university students.'

The tobacco trucks don't dominate the town as they once did when warehouse and processing plants were in the center of things. Since a majority of the residents are now engaged in other occupations they rarely see the tobacco sales in progress.

The town doesn't come alive with a holiday spirit as the market opens. In Greenville that is now reserved for the return of the university students.

Given all that it would be a mistake to assume that tobacco isn't important to the area economy anymore. It is. It is still the biggest cash crop around and the surest way to a profit in farming.

Time To Finish The Job Kennedy & Khrushchev Started

John Moskop

Twenty-five years ago, President John F. Kennedy offered the Soviet Union a proposal to end all nuclear weapons tests. At a commencement speech at American University, he spoke the following words: "We are both caught up in a vicious and dangerous cycle in which suspicion on one side breeds suspicion on the other, and new weapons beget counter-weapons."

Kennedy and Khrushchev had to settle for a Limited Test Ban Treaty, signing it on August 5, 1963. This treaty prohibited atmospheric and underwater nuclear tests, thus reducing the threat of radioactive fallout to the people of the world. The Limited Test Ban Treaty, however, permitted underground nuclear tests. More than 1,000 underground tests over the last 25 years have enabled the development of deadly new weapons — including MX's, SS-4's, cruise missiles, neutron bombs, x-ray lasers and many others — and the world is far less secure as a result.

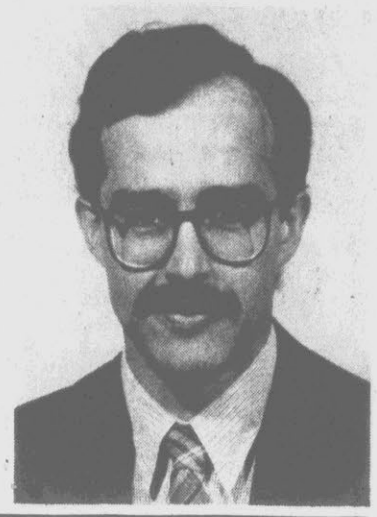

Now that we and the Soviets have agreed to remove our Pershing 2s and SS-20's and other intermediate range missiles from Europe, our governments are looking for ways to negotiate much deeper cuts in strategic nuclear arsenals. Yet as long as nuclear testing continues, those weapons can be replace by others that, with their technological sophistication, would wipe out any benefit gained from simple numerical reductions.

What can we expect to gain from more nuclear tests? Not confidence that our existing weapons are reliable — we can determine that through non-explosive tests. Since 1970, the U.S. has conducted only eight nuclear tests out of 300 to insure that existing warheads would explode as predicted.

Local Perspective

John Moskop, Ph.D, is local chapter contact for the Physicians For Social Responsibility. He works at the East Carolina University Medical School.

Local Perspective is an occasional feature on The Daily Reflector Commentary page and features the point of view of community specialists.

Instead, most nuclear tests are stll designed to develop new kinds of nuclear weapons, the next cycle of a costly and deadly nuclear arms race. Theodore B.Taylor, a former deputy director of the U.S. Defense Atomic Support Agency, wrote about some of the "third generation" nuclear weapons the Pentagon is developing in the April, 1987 issue of "Scientific American." The list includes nuclear weapons that could concetrate and aim different types of radiation, such as x-rays, gamma rays or microwaves; underground nuclear cannons that could hurl weapons at satellinte in space; and nuclear weapons that could fuel x-ray lasers, which could by key elements in the Administration's Star Wars plans. The whole trend of nuclear testing, in fact, is toward the development of nuclear weapons with specific military uses — as though we could ever use those weapons without risking all-out nuclear war.

We can get off the treadmill of the nuclear arms race. The recent success of the INF Treaty negotiations and dramatic improvements in verification techniques offer hope that it is now possible to reach the goal President Kennedy set for us 25 years ago. Seismic monitoring capabilities — only one of several types of non-intrusive verification — are now so precise that even very small nuclear explosions down to one kiloton can be confidently identified. The Soviet Union has agreed to such on-site seismic monitoring as a means of verifying a comprehensive test ban.

In his speech 25 years ago, President Kennedy articulated a central truth about nuclear testing. Both the U.S. and the Soviet Union, he said, "are devoting massive sums of money to weapons that could be better combating ignorance, poverty, and disease." Twenty-five years later, the U.S. spends between 12 and 70 million dollars on each nuclear test, while programs to deal with homelessness, AIDS, child care, health care, education, and employment remain tragically underfunded.

But the real cost of nuclear testing, as Dr. Christine Cassel, President of Physicians for Social Responsibility points out, is reflected less in the cost of each particular test than in the billions of dollars our government will spend in the future on weapons now being tested and developed.

The best way to commemorate this 25th anniversary of the Limited Test Ban Treaty is to ban to finish the job Kennedy and Khrushchev started. Now is the time to stop nuclear testing world-wide and prevent the next cycle of the nuclear arms race.

Missed The Mark

Charles Corddry

WASHINGTON — With his assault on congressional Democrats in vetoing the defense bill, President Reagan seemed to obscure his real political target — Michael S. Dukakis — and risk further losses to his defense program.

The Democratic presidential candidate's stated positions on a wide range of military issues are to the left of those staked out in the $299.6 billion measure that Reagan rejected Wednesday.

But in creating turmoil over defense financing, the Republicans seemingly failed to focus attention on the gap between congressional Democrats and the top of the Democratic presidential ticket.

"They've driven a wedge in the wrong place," said Rep. Dave McCurdy, a moderate Oklahoma Democrat who is generally supportive of defense programs. McCurdy, who has been openly critical of Dukakis' defense positions, said that the Republican veto was so transparently political that it would backfire.

It may be that the Republicans were willing to take a short-term tactical loss in Congress in the hope of a later political gain on the defense issue in the presidential campaign.

In that regard, Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., contended that "good government and good politics coincide" in the veto case. Elaborating, aides said that the veto would drive the defense issue to the forefront later in the campaign and force Dukakis to respond.

In blaming congressional liberals for eroding military strength, Reagan rejected a bill that differs from Dukakis' positions on the Strategic Defense Initiative, mobile intercontinental missiles, nuclear testing, missile flight-testing, the new Trident-2 submarine-launched missile and the B-2 Stealth bomber. In varying degrees, the Massachusetts governor opposes all these.

In outlining the vetoed measure's provisions to the Senate, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the Senate Armed Services Committee chairman, said that it provided $752 million for continued development of mobile MX and Midgetman missiles so that the next president can make a choice. Dukakis opposes both missiles.

The bill provided $4 billion for SDI, or "Star Wars," while Dukakis has said that he would cut it back to plain research at about $1 billion a year. (As another military measure moves forward in Congress, the prospect now is for a cut in SDI to $3.7 billion).

The bill, Nunn said, funded administration requests for Trident-2 missile and Stealth bomber production. Dukakis has said he would continue development of these two strategic weapons but withhold decisions on deployment pending arms control negotiations.

Nunn noted, regarding presidential complaints about funding cuts in the MX and Midgetman requests, that the secretary of the Air Force, Edward C. Aldridge Jr., had "stated ... that he could accept" the congressional action.

By accounts widely accepted on Capitol Hill, what first inflamed the White House regarding the defense bill was a press release issued by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the House Armed Services Committee chairman, claiming the bill "takes the stars out of 'Star Wars.'"

The press release, Nunn asserted, was "misleading and inaccurate" and "if President Reagan can figure out a way to veto this press release, I will certainly vote to sustain that veto."

On "Star Wars," the bill restricted the way the $4 billion could be spent, requiring emphasis on ground-based weapons rather than space-based and on improved warning satellites. It was considered generally in line with Pentagon thinking on a reoriented SDI plan.

Dukakis, on the other hand, has called SDI "a fantasy — a technological illusion." He has said that he would cut the program back to where it was before Reagan turned it into the expanded Strategic Defense Initiative in 1983.

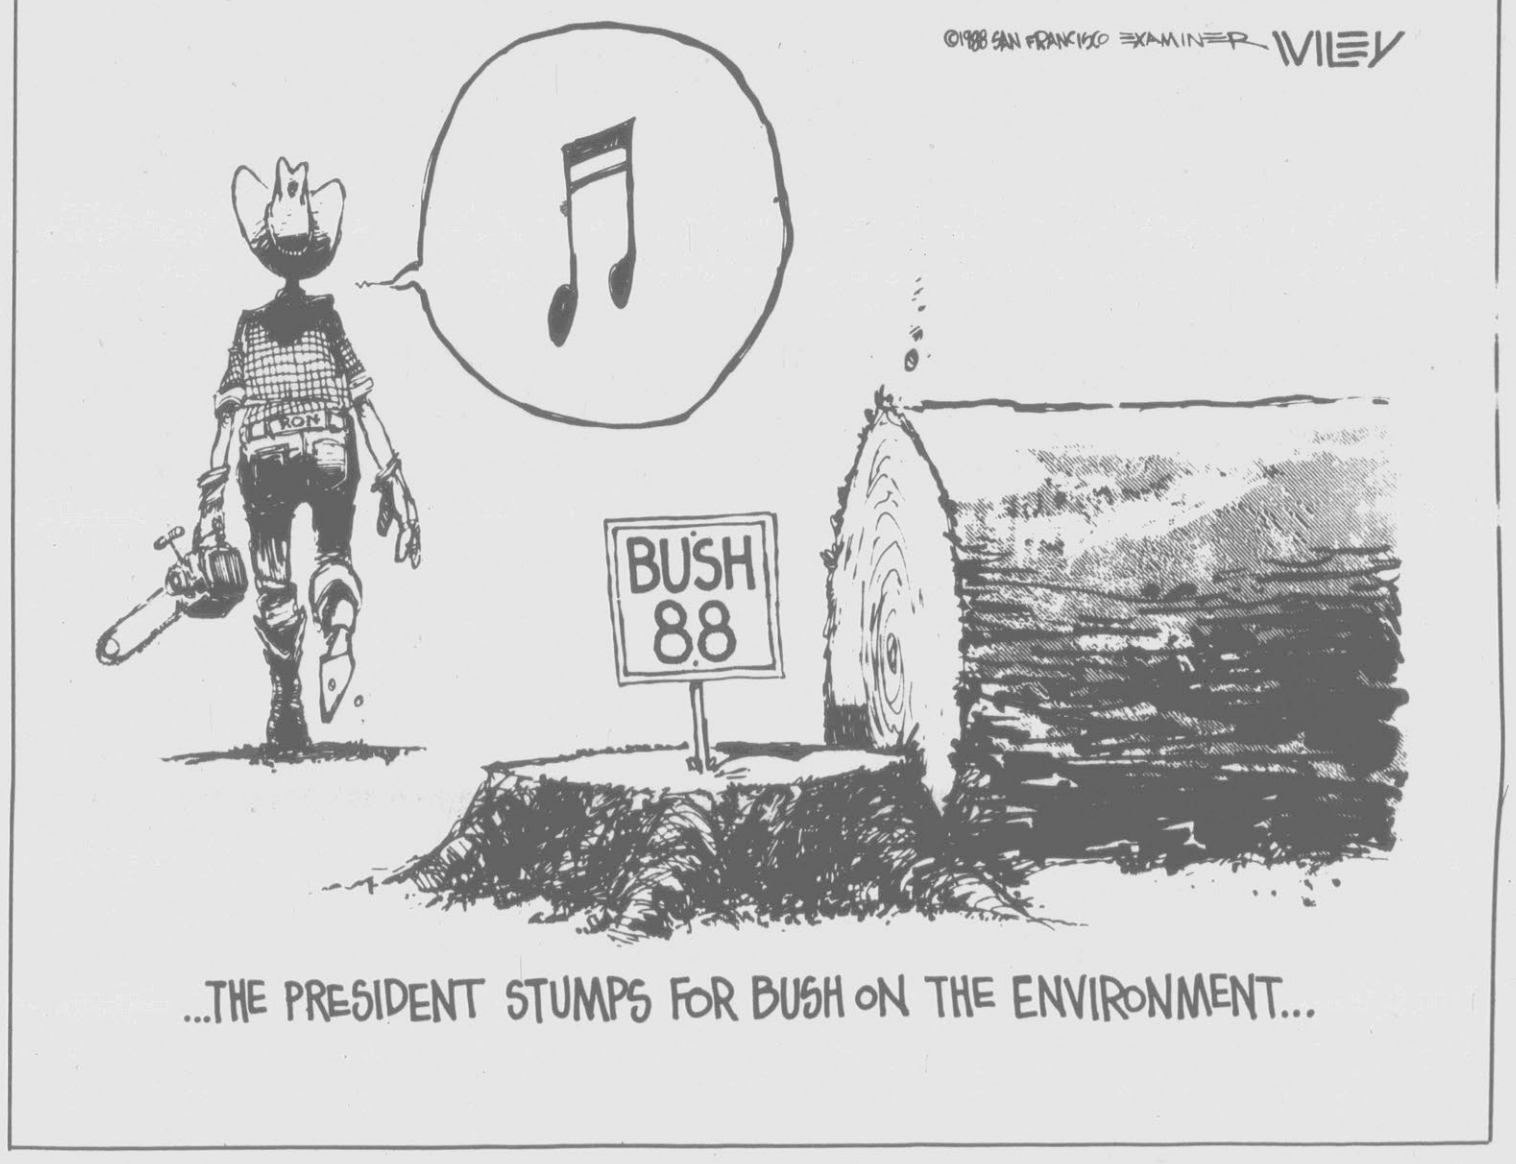

Dukakis has backed a comprehensive nuclear test ban and a ban on missile flight testing.

The vetoed bill would not ban nuclear testing but would direct the Department of Energy to begin preparations to keep the U.S. nuclear deterrent effective if a ban should eventually come about.

Nunn said the Reagan administration had agreed with the Soviets to negotiate a gradual approach to a test ban, and thus the bill was consistent with that policy — "unless the ... policy is a sham."

The bill did not address missile flight testing. But approval of developing mobile missiles implied approval of testing them.

Hussein Cut Losses, But With Risk

Robert Satloff

For a man who has built a reputation on his Darwinian sense of survival, King Hussein's declaration renouncing any territorial claims to the West Bank is chock-full of risks and uncertainties.

Almost across the board, analysts agree that Hussein's statements should not be taken at face value. Rather than a strategic move to divorce himself from the Palestine issue, common wisdom holds that the monarch's decision to sever "legal and administrative ties" with the occupied territories is a shrewd tactical ploy to outflank the Palestine Liberation Organization.

After years of beseeching Yasser Arafat to join him as junior partner in the peace process, the king now seems to be foisting the Palestina Liberation Organization into the limelight of Middle East politics, challenging it to deliver liberation for the Palestinians on its own. Though he says that he is prepared to accept a PLO-governed Palestinian state in land he once ruled, few believe that Hussein expects the PLO to succeed.

On the contrary, one envisions the king ruefully waiting for Arafat to fail, at which time Jordan would once again offer its aid to the Palestinian cause. As a leading Amman newspaper editorialized last week, Jordan "will support the PLO as long as it faithfully and honestly serves the Palestine question. But we will not do so if the PLO becomes a burden on the Palestinian people."

But Hussein's gambit is not risk-free. On the contrary, by ceding center stage to Arafat, the king has sacrificed the political initiative to other players in the peace process. He is also wagering that none of the three following scenarios come to pass:

—He is gambling that the United States does not open its own dialogue with the PLO. On the surface, Hussein's recent declarations undermine a longstanding premise of Washington's Middle East policy, namely that Jordan is the primary Arab partner in the peace process. A new U.S. administration, eager for visible movement in the peace process but lacking a ready Palestinian partner, will be advised that the only avenue for progress is in talking with Arafat, if only to challenge him to engage in direct talks with Israel.

If Hussein's long-range plan is to marginalize the PLO, a U.S.-PLO dialogue could be catastrophic. Arafat would probably pocket the gain of U.S. recognition and use it to drive a wedge between Washington and Israel, undermining Jordan's role in the process.

Most likely Hussein is betting that a new president will not abandon America's 13-year-old commitment against negotiating with the PLO. But in so doing he may be underestimating every president's thirst for the peace process while overestimating the historical memory of a new administration.

—The king has wagered that he can hold his own in a showdown with Israel's Likud bloc. By renouncing territorial claims to the West Bank less than 100 days before Israel's parliamentary elections, Hussein effectively torpedoed the Labor Party's basic peace strategy, the "Jordanian option," and boosted the already promising electoral prospects of Yitzhak Shamir and other hard-liners.

In snubbing Shimon Peres, his long-time tacit partner in the peace process, Hussein may have thought it wise to signal to Likud that he was not "Labor's boy." In that case he would be following the lead of others who have recently made openings to Shamir, including Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, who met with the prime minister last June, and Egypt's Hosni Mubarak, who only two weeks ago broached the possibility of a summit meeting with him.

For Jordan, though, playing with Likud may be like playing with fire. Traditionally, Likud has viewed the Hashemites not as part of the solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict but as part of the problem. A central theme of Likud ideology holds that Jordan is Palestine and that Hussein is actually the usurper of the Palestinian state. Moreover, some in Likud subscribe to the concept of "transfer" — mass expulsion — as a possible answer to Israel's short-term "intifada" headache as well as its long-term demographic problem. By helping Likud's election chances, Hussein has at least raised the level of tension across the Jordan River.

—The king has wagered that the West Bankers themselves will not "cut a deal" with Israel. Nine months into the intifada, Hussein still disparages the Palestinians' capacity to take matters into their own hands. Jordan's tactic is premised on the idea that the Palestinians in the occupied territories will never create their own local leadership but will always look to some outside party, usually either Jordan or the PLO, for political patronage.

Hussein, however, may be overlooking the most important aspect of the Palestinian uprising — that for the first time in 50 years Palestinians are actors, not reactors, in the Arab-Israeli conflict. Once Arafat proves himself incapable of liberating the territories, local Palestinians may not turn back to Jordan but may, over time, opt for the radical notion of coming to terms with Israel. In that case Hussein might be permanently, not just temporarily, on the peace-process margin.

Jordan's recent maneuvers, therefore, cut the king's losses in the West Bank and force Arafat to deliver on decades of promises. Indeed, with his West Bank popularity at an all-time low, Hussein has miraculously managed to transform irrelevance into a virtue. But in taking himself out of the peace-process game, if only for a while, Hussein may find it no less dangerous standing on the sidelines.

emphasizing quality four years ago. Having high quality gives this region a more competitive advantage in the world market. If we hold onto the strides we have made, we will surely benefit this season and in the seasons to come."

Quality, he said, includes ripeness and skillful curing, tobacco free of illegal pesticides and other residues, tobacco that's harvested according to separate stalk positions (primings, lugs, cutters and leaf), and tobacco that's free of foreign matter, and tobacco that's consistent in quality and stalk position of origin throughout each sheet.

"Nesting," putting things in tobacco sheet that shouldn't be there to add weight, has been a problem in years past, but "is getting less common," he said.

"We are recognized as standing in a key position to re-establish our dominance in a world trade position. We can realize this by keeping our quality up," he said.

J.S.W. Brown of Greenville said he sold 5,100 pounds of tobacco last week and feels it "could have done better."

"It was pretty tobacco," he said. "Much better than my primings last year and the price was not better. I didn't feel the quality of my tobacco showed up in the price."

He said he saw tobacco much inferior in quality to his that brought prices comparable to his. "The averages last week sounded high," he said. "But there was a lot of leftover upstalk tobacco in there that sold for $1.78 and $1.80 and that brought the average up a lot. Saying the average was $139 doesn't tell you how much brought a lot less."

He said he'll be selling more tobacco Monday. "I've got to go ahead and sell some more," he said. "I've got 26 barns in the packhouse and I've only sold 3.2 so far," he said. "I've got to go ahead and sell some more so I'll have room for more that's out there in the field ready to harvest now."

be putting in that kind of money," he said, estimating a conversion price tag from $3 million to $6 million.

"This is one of the cost-saving features," West said. "There is a lot of space at Greenville Middle that we don't have to convert."

In planning for the high school, the Boys Club and the Sycamore Hill Baptist Church properties, both of which are adjacent the middle school property, were purchased at $900,000 and about $300,000, respectively. Also, the Minges-Farley Athletic Complex was built on the site.

In addition, eight classrooms have been added to Greenville Middle for the 1988-89 school year, and eight more will be added for the 1989-90 school year at a total cost of about $1 million, Deputy Superintendent John McKnight said.

Until Greenville Middle is converted into the high school, the additions will make it possible to house all of the city's sixth and seventh graders. After conversion, the sixth and seventh graders will join the eighth graders at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, and the ninth graders will move into the new high school.

Recently, "the different high school department heads (at Rose) met with the principal and the architect and talked about what they would ideally like to see in the new school," McKnight said. "It's a good input device because we try to accommodate their needs as much as possible."

Architect Jimmy Hite of Greenville is developing the initial drawings of what the new school will look like, he said.

Bird War

MEBANE, N.C. (AP) — The town of Mebane is waging a war on its feathered foes and it has some new ammunition.

Mebane has borrowed four propane cannons from Forsyth County. The cannons make a lot of noise. That frightens the birds.

Police Chief Gary Bumgarner said the four noise-makers seemed to do the job the first time the they were used last week.

He said a large flock of black birds — starlings and grackles — have become a nuisance in a section of Mebane, where they have been roosting in trees.

Winning Form

Geoff Bodine waves to fans at Michigan International Speedway Saturday after he won the International Race of Champions event. (AP Laserphoto)

Bodine After More Points

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Geoff Bodine said what he was looking for going into Saturday's third round of the International Race of Champions was points.

The NASCAR stock car star got 26 of them, winning the race and vaulting into first place in the $739,600 series with only next Saturday's race at Watkins Glen, N.Y., standing between him and his second straight IROC title.

"Last year, I won two races and the championship and they automatically invited me back," Bodine said. "This year, I really wasn't doing very much and I really want to be back next year.

"This is such a great series and I enjoy being a part of it. I knew I had to do something here to get back in the hunt."

What Bodine did was lead 46 of 50 laps on the 2-mile, high-banked oval at Michigan International Speedway, giving the 1985 Daytona 500 winner his third career IROC victory.

Last year's IROC triumphs came on the high banks at Daytona and on the road circuit at Watkins Glen International.

Stock car drivers now have won 24 of the 48 IROC races, with 14 victories going to Indy-car drivers and the other 10 to road racers.

Bodine started third in one of the 11 identically prepared IROC-Z Chevrolet Camaros, but moved to second moments after the start. He then passed pole-starter Roberto Guerrero, an Indy-car racer from Colombia, for the lead on lap five of the 50-lap, 100-mile event.

Dale Earnhardt, the two-time defending NASCAR Winston Cup champion, was sixth at the start, but worked his way to second on lap 11.

That's the way it stayed the rest of the way, with Earnhardt able to move up close to Bodine's rear bumper several times, but never able to mount a serious challenge.

"I saw that blue car (Earnhardt) back there dogging me and trying to get up to me," Bodine said. "I knew if he got by me I'd be in trouble.

"In the last five or six laps, I stretched it out just a little to get a little safety margin."

Earnhardt said, "I made a couple of runs at Bodine, but my car was pushing. I kept trying to get him, but my tires got too hot and I'd cool them and try again."

Bodine crossed the finish line 0.783-seconds ahead of Earnhardt, while third-place finisher Al Unser Jr., the 1986 series champion and current CART-PPG Indy-car point leader, was just over three seconds behind in third.

NASCAR star Terry Labonte finished fourth, followed by four-time Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser, three-time LeMans champion Al Holbert and two-time Daytona 500 winner Bill Elliott.

Then came two-time defending Indy-car champion Bobby Rahal, defending SCCA Trans-Am champion Scott Pruett, Guerrero and IMSA Camel GT star Chip Robinson.

Chris Cord, the 12th all-star driver in the 12th IROC series, missed the race while recuperating from abdominal surgery. Cord is expected to race at Watkins Glen.

Bodine began Saturday's race ninth in the points, with Elliott and Pruett, winners of the first two races at Daytona and Riverside, Calif., respectively, tied for the lead.

Heading into Watkins Glen, Bodine now leads in the chase for the $200,000 first prize. But 10 of the 12 entries in the IROC series still hold a mathematical chance to take the title.

Bodine has 42 points, followed by Unser Jr. with 40, Elliott 39, Labonte 38, Earnhardt and Pruett 37 apiece, Robinson 30; Unser Sr. 28, Holbert 27 and Rahal 19.

The only drivers eliminated from championship contention are Cord with 17 points and Guerrero with 15.

The only caution flag in the 37-minute, 38.01-second event came at the start when several cars began racing too soon. The grid was reformed and the second start was flawless.

Bodine, who won $9,500 Saturday, averaged 159.432 mph.

3-Way Deadlock At Bradley Golf

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Pat Bradley and Jody Rosenthal caught early leader Dot Germain with birdies on the back nine Saturday to finish with 15 points and lead the field into an 18-hole final-round shootout at the $400,000 Pat Bradley International LPGA tournament.

All three golfers won $5,000, and will be among 18 players who will compete Sunday for a $62,500 first prize. The 36-player field in Saturday's third round was cut in half, with Janet Anderson beating Sherri Steinhauer in a playoff for the last position.

Germain, a North Carolina native whose Greensboro home is 20 minutes from the Willow Creek Golf Club course, steadied her game after a roller-coaster start.

After a 39-minute rain delay, Bradley caught Germain with a birdie at the par-5 16th hole when her putt hit the back of the cup, popped into the air and landed in the hole.

Rosenthal hit a sand wedge to within eight feet of the pin and made her birdie to join the tie.

"This week seems long because every day seems like match play," Germain said. "You really have to get up for every day in a little different way than you used to."

Germain said her style of play hasn't changed under the modified Stableford system, being used for the first time in an LPGA tournament. She did get putting lessons from Debbie Massey, and they paid off in a pair of 10-foot putts and a 15-footer for three of her six birdies.

For Bradley, the entire week has been busy because of her direct connection to the tournament. She is trying to rally her game after hyperthyroidism took

Mudd Is Hungry For His 1st Win

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — After six second-place finishes during his PGA Tour career, Jodie Mudd is anxious to find out what it's like to win.

"In my mind, I've been a co-winner twice," said Mudd, who lost playoffs in the 1985 Texas Open and the 1985 Greater Hartford Open. "But to go out and win the tournament is something I've yet to do."

Mudd strung together three straight birdies on the back nine Saturday to overtake Tim Simpson and grab a one-stroke lead after three rounds of the $953,842 St. Jude Classic.

The seven-year pro chopped two strokes off par on the front nine, pulled even with Simpson with birdies at the par-4 14th and par-3 15th and then grabbed the lead with a 15-foot birdie putt on the par-5, 545-yard 16th hole.

The former Georgia Southern All-American broke a string of two straight 68s with Saturday's 67 and was at 13-under-par 203 going into Sunday's final round.

Mudd and Simpson, who shot his third straight 68 to finish at 204, began the third round in a three-way tie for the lead with Peter Jacobsen, who matched par with a 72 and was at 208.

David Rummells, who shot a 66, was alone in third place at 205.

U.S. Open winner and defending St. Jude champion Curtis Strange and Tom Kite were at 207.

Mudd said he will try to avoid getting into a head-to-head competition with Simpson during the final 18 holes.

"I'm not going to worry too much about Tim Simpson, if I can continue to play the way I've been playing," said Mudd, who has bogeyed only one hole during the tournament.

"I just want to remain patient. You're out there all day and you can get anxious. I try not to get very emotional on the golf course. I need to play on an even keel and that's hard to do sometimes," Mudd said.

Snow Hill Takes 5-4 Win To Take 2-1 Series Lead

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — George Greene overcame an tough start early on to help Snow Hill take a 5-4 win in the American Legion State Championship series Saturday night.

Greene gave up four runs in the first two innings, but settled down and gave up only three hits the rest of the way. He yielded to Mike Vandiford in the ninth with two outs.

"He got off to a rough start," said Snow Hill coach Jim Fulghum. "We were fortunate that they didn't get any more runs in the early innings. Once he settled down, we seemed to gain control."

Snow Hill leads the best-of-seven series 2-1, The teams return to action Sunday at 8 p.m. in Snow Hill.

For Kernersville coach Dale Ijmes, Greene's rebound was the turning point of the game.

"The kid got his second win and pitched a heck of a game," Ijmes said. "Instead of putting them away early on, we let him take us out of the game."

Greene was aided by a trio of home runs by Tommy Eason, Shay Beaman and Anthony Jones over the second and third innings.

Snow Hill punched across the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning. Beaman, who was 2-4 on the night, led off the frame with a single. Beaman stole second and scored one out later on an RBI single by Jones.

"Four runs are not going to win at this level," Ijmes said. "I was disappointed in our performance. Once we got the 4-0 lead, we didn't stay in the game mentally. I felt like we bozoed it up after that."

Kernversville went ahead early in the first when Matt Swain reached on a fielder's choice and scored following a double by Cameron Brawder. Bryan Hasting then drove in Brawder with a fielder's choice to make it 2-0.

In the top of the second, Mike Gordon led off the inning with a single, which was followed by a two-run homer by Brannon Hoover.

Snow Hill got on the board in the bottom of the second. Beaman cracked a solo shot over the left-field fence. One out later, Jones, who went 2-4 on the night, followed with a solo shot of his own, this one going over the centerfield fence.

In the third, Snow Hill tied the score when T.J. Johnson singled with one away. Eason then crushed a ball over the centerfield fence to tie the game and get Greene out of his early hole.

"We felt like we needed to win tonight," Fulghum said. "We would like to take all three here, but we'll take what is served to us."

Greene walked two batters with two out in the ninth to put men at first and second, but Vandiford came on and got the final Kernersville batter to hit into a ground out to end the game.

Pirates Are Looking To Fill Vacated Linebacker Spots

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

For East Carolina defensive coordinator and linebacker coach Richard Bell, the early part of fall practice figures to be an intense question-and-answer session for the Pirate linebacking corps.

"It's still pretty much a wide open area," Bell said. "I'm going to have to make some quick decisions in probably the first 10 days of practice."

James Singletary emerged from a pack of hopeful starters for one of two inside linebacking spots during the spring, but a number of other players will compete for the other starting spot in the fall.

"It's real critical," Bell said. "You can't get that many guys ready to play. You'll do well if you can get two sets of linebackers and possibly a fifth ready to play. It's really important that we identify (starters) quickly and move on."

On the outside, things are a bit clearer as Brian McPhatter will start at the same spot, or strongside outside linebacker, while Brian Haywood will the starter on the opposite side at rover, where he will be spelled by veteran Flint McCallum.

"If you drew up what you wanted in those two positions, they would be exactly what you want," said ECU outside linebacker coach Clyde Christensen.

"They are both mirror positions. Both (players) will know both sides and they'll know all the techniques involved. Sam will be outside linebacker with a little more inside flare. Rover will be a little bit of defensive back."

At the inside linebacking spots, only Glen Willis has any real experience, but he missed the spring with an elbow injury, further complicating things.

"That is a real critical position. We have some kids with some talent but not a lot of experience," Bell said. "We lost three kids in Vinson Smith, Bubba Waters and Essray Taliaferro that were excellent players. It's a matter of how quickly these (young) guys can perform at a winning level. It's just a matter of experience."

Inside Positions

Singletary (6-2, 232, Junior): A transfer from Winston-Salem State University, Singletary played sparingly last year. "He probably had to re-establish confidence in himself," Bell said. "He began the spring with the rest of them and as the spring went on he seemed to pick up confidence as he went. I'm a firm believer that ability really doesn't win for you. Attitude is the key in this game because ability is equal. He is willing to do the little things to be a good player."

Willis (6-2, 219, Sr.) "(Of) the others, I would mention Glen Willis first because he has some playing experience," Bell said. "He was one of the top four linebackers (last year) but Glen missed the entire spring practice due to an elbow injury. I did not have an opportunity to see him."

Mike Leggett (6-3, 220, So.) "Mike Leggett is an aggressive kid, probably an over-achiever type that came on good at the end of the spring," Bell said.

Anthony Thompson (6-1, 220, Jr.)"We like Anthony Thompson," Bell said. "Anthony has bounced around at a number of positions. He came here as a running back and he was looked at in certain other places. We have him at linebacker and he is going to stay. It's been about three or four years since he played it

Spurrier Unhappy With ACC Predictions

DURHAM (AP) — Steve Spurrier said he is insulted that his Duke football team was picked to finish last in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season, and has begun to retaliate.

"I didn't expect to be picked in the top part of the league," Spurrier said Friday. "But in the same essence, if you're looking back on last year, the only way the media people could pick us last is that they just believe Duke football is the worst in the league, that we have the worst players, the worst coaches and that these other schools are better than us."

Duke finished eighth in a summer poll of ACC writers and broadcasters, accumulating 179 points, 30 less than seventh-place Georgia Tech and 39 fewer than No. 6 Maryland. Clemson was first with 542 points.

Spurrier expected a higher ranking with 16 players returning from last year's 5-6 team, which lost five games by a combined 20 points and finished first in the ACC in total offense. However, the Blue Devils were last in total defense and next-to-last nationally in pass defense.

"This really just shows how we are perceived in the ACC area," Spurrier told The Charlotte Observer. "I also feel like it's a perception of me as a coach. I think maybe these guys around the league have the feeling that the only thing I can do is coach throwing the football up and down the field."

In an attempt to prove that the Blue Devils deserve to be rated higher, Spurrier asked the Duke sports information office to research the final point differential of ACC teams in league games last year. The figures lay typed on his desk Friday. They revealed Duke, which had a 2-5 ACC record, finished plus-11 points. Maryland, 3-3, was minus 53, and Georgia Tech, 0-6, was minus 118.

Citrus Bowl Makes Bid To ACC

DURHAM (AP) — The Florida Citrus Bowl has made a preliminary proposal to the Atlantic Coast Conference regarding an automatic berth in the New Year's Day game for the league's football champion, ACC commissioner Gene Corrigan said Friday.

Subcommittees from both sides met Wednesday and Thursday in Durham and Chapel Hill, The Charlotte Observer reported Saturday.

"We had a great visit," Corrigan said. "It was very positive, but many things are still to be determined. They have made a proposal to us. However, this issue is not resolved."

"It's still in the preliminary stages. It's not even what I'd call totally firm on their side. It was just a matter of saying 'Hey, let's nail this thing down.'"

A source told The Observer that the bowl's proposal stresses flexibility. The source said that under the proposal, the Citrus Bowl would have the option in alternating years to invite a team other than the ACC champion to serve as host of the game.

The report said the automatic berth could be waived if it interfered with the ACC champion playing for the national championship or with the bowl staging a national championship game.

Other elements of the proposal, the newspaper said, are that bowl officials would guarantee to play the game on New Year's Day and be affiliated with a major television network. The game currently is under contract with ABC.

Corrigan said no deadline has been set, but both sides hope to settle the issue before the season begins Sept. 3.

The deal is subject to the approval of both subcommittees, the ACC athletic directors and the bowl's executive committee.

Minneapolis Narrows List To Four

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The four leading candidates to become head coach of the NBA expansion team in Minneapolis are Bill Musselman, Bob Weiss, Dick Motta and Bill Fitch, the team's director of player personnel said Friday.

Billy McKinney told the Gastonia Gazette he hopes to hire a head coach by the end of the summer.

Musselman is coach of the Albany Patroons of the Continental Basketball Association and former coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers and the University of Minnesota. Weiss, a former coach of the San Antonio Spurs, was replaced by Larry Brown after last season.

Motta formerly coached the Dallas Mavericks, Washington Bullets, and Chicago Bulls, while Fitch has coached the Houston Rockets, Boston Celtice and Cleveland Cavaliers.

"When I get back to Minneapolis, I will discuss those candidates and anyone else we may want to consider," McKinney said. "One of the things I'd think is a key, is that the head coach and myself can go out and scout together. I can match players up to what the coaches want. Having a year to talk basketball will help us establish a great basketball relationship."

McKinney was at the Charlotte Coliseum to scout the four rookie-free agent teams in the NBA summer preview. The Charlotee Hornets, Miami Heat, Atlanta Hawks, and Milwaukee Bucks are participating in the event.

Tar Heel All-Stars Stay Alive

FAYETTEVILLE — Wilbur Levett provided the pitching and Russell Williamson came up with the hitting as the Greenville Little League Tar Heel All-Stars handed Cherryville a 9-1 loss to force a final game in the State Little League Baseball Tournament Championship Saturday.

The Tar Heel team, which had advanced through the loser's bracket, handed Cherryville its first loss of the tournament. The two teams will meet again today at 2 p.m. to decide who advances to the Southeastern Regionals in Florida.

Levett retired the first 11 Cherryville batters and gave up only one hit the rest of the way. He allowed three hits over six innings with six strikeouts and didn't walk a batter.

Williamson went 3-3 with a three RBI and a triple to lead the Greenville hitting. Geoff Stallings added a key two-run double in the first inning.

Greenville scored three runs in the first as Stallings had a two-run double to key the inning.

Greenville pushed across another run in the second as Curtis McKray singled. Russell Williamson then drove him in with a triple.

Greenville scored four more runs in the fourth as McKray walked. Pearsall reached on a fielder's choice. Williamson drove both runners in and went to second on the throw. Nicky Phillips, pinch-hitting, tripled down the left-field line to score Williamson and later came home himself on a passed ball to make it 8-1.

Cherryville scored its only run in the fifth, while Greenville scored its final run in the bottom of the inning.

Greenville advanced to the finals thanks to a 5-4 win Friday over Hudson.

Hudson led 4-0 through the top of the third, but Greenville rallied in the bottom of the inning, pushing across its first run of the game.

Williamson singled to start things out and moved up on a passed ball. Phillips then drove in Williamson with a base hit to make it 4-1.

Greenville added two more runs in the bottom of the fifth.

Phillips and Jon Gavigan each singled in the fifth. Levett then drove both in with a base hit to pull the Tar Heel All-Stars within 4-3.

In the bottom of the sixth, Allen Columbo opened with a walk and stole second. Craig Brannon followed with a bunt.

Pearsall singled in Columbo to tie the game at 4-4. Williamson then hit a ball to deep center to score Brannon and win the game.

Phillips, Williamson and Levett had two hits each to lead Greenville. Brannon picked up the win, striking out 11 while giving up three hits and three walks.

ECU Looking

(linebacker), so it is an entirely new position for him. He has good athletic talent. He's motivated to do better. Again it's a matter of a guy closing the gap quick enough to help you in the fall."

William Pretty (5-11, 238, Sr.) and Compton McCurry (6-2, 223, Jr.) are also competing for playing time at the inside slots. Ken Portis, who was challenging for a spot in the spring, won't be back because of academic troubles.

Outside Positions

McPhatter (6-2, 207, Jr.): "Brian McPhatter was highly recruited as a running back and just switched to defense last fall," Christensen said. "He had a great spring and was recognized as one of the outstanding performers of the spring. He can run and he's big and he can strike you. I really expect big things of him. He's exactly what you want at that position. He just needs experience."

Haywood (5-10, 187, Sr.): "He is going to give us a good sized, physical defensive back type of player," Christensen said. "He has the quickness of a defensive back, but he hits and is aggressive with the mentality of a linebacker."

Other competitors for playing time at the outside spots are McCallum, along with redshirt freshmen Stephen Braddy (6-2, 197) and Luke Fisher (6-2, 207).

"Flint McCallum (5-9, 191, Sr.), I would consider a starter," Christensen said. "He had a really good spring and bounced around between a couple of positions. He's at the place where he should be able to play. He's physical and he's aggressive.

"We really want Luke Fisher or Stephen Braddy to come through. Right now I feel like I have three and I'd like to have five before the first game."

For Christensen, this season will be the first on the defensive side of the ball after spending his first two years at ECU coaching offense.

"I'd never been on the defensive side of the ball at all," he said. "So that part of it's been kind of fun. It's all fresh and new. I've been coaching quarterbacks for about 10 years. It (the move) kind of sent me back to just coaching and teaching fundamentals. That part of it's been good for me professionally.

"I've never had a problem with kids playing for me and I wondered about that. I'm kind of mild-mannered in my techniques and with quarterbacks that is kind of conducive. I had questioned whether it would work with linebackers, you know, do you feed them nails or what. So far it hasn't been that way."

Bell, who was Duke's defensive coordinator last year, faces one of the tougher challenges of his 17-year collegiate coaching career, but he said the transition to the new scheme in the spring was a smooth one.

"I was really pleased with how they adapted in going from a seven-man front to an eight-man front," he said. "We were pleased with the initial approach to it. Now we just have to build with what we established in the spring.

"Once you get into the season and game preparation, then it's a fight against time to teach all the little things that are necessary, fundamental-wise and technique wise. We're going to spend a lot of time on the practice field trying to get these guys ready to play."

2 Lead At Bradley

her off the course for six weeks. After she finished her round Thursday, Bradley learned that her father had suffered an apparent heart attack two days earlier.

But she said the emotions of the week have helped her take a relaxed approach to golf and resume her comeback.

"It has taken away the thoughts of me trying to force or concentrate too hard on my golf game," Bradley said. "I have been able to release a few things and worry about things on the side."

Bradley said making the finals is a sign that she is ready to resume her charge toward the LPGA Hall of Fame.

"Ready or not, I am here to try my damndest," Bradley said.

Rosenthal says it's been an enjoyable week, especially since the scoring format suits her game.

"This week has let me let it go," she said. "I've been sluggish this year."

Germain, a 14-year Tour veteran who hasn't won an LPGA event since her initial triumph in 1980, opened with a birdie for three points. Germain bogeyed the next two holes, losing one point each time, but made up the ground with a birdie at four, and followed with birdies at seven and nine to make the turn at 10 points. A bogey at 12 was wiped out with birdies at 13 and 15.

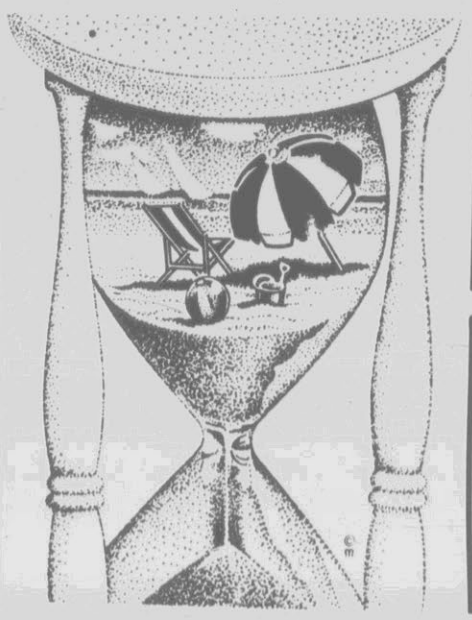

Bradley played bogey-free golf for the second straight day, getting birdies on three of the first four holes en route to her score. Rosenthal opened with a birdie, bogeyed two of the next three holes and finished the front nine with birdie putts of 10 and 15 feet.

Henderson Provides Spark For Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Rickey Henderson hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the seventh inning and stole three bases Saturday night as the New York Yankees stopped a four-game losing streak by beating Minnesota 5-3, ending the Twins' four-game winning string.

The Yankees remained four games behind American League East-leading Detroit, matching New York's largest deficit this season. Boston is tied for second with the Yankees.

With the score tied 3-3, Luis Aguayo drew a leadoff walk in the seventh from Mark Portugal, 1-2. Randy Velarde bunted into a forceout, but Rafael Santana singled and Henderson followed with a long fly to center.

Jack Clark made it a two-run lead with his 21st homer of the year in the eighth off Keith Atherton.

Earlier, Henderson increased his major league-leading stolen base total to 60. He walked twice and scored once.

Steve Shields, 2-3, pitched 2 2-3 scoreless innings for the victory abd Dave Righetti struck out Kent Hrbek for his 17th save.

The Twins had tied it with a run in the seventh. Tim Laudner and Hrbek led off with singles, finishing Tommy John, and Greg Gagne had an RBI forceout against Shields.

Roy Smith, promoted from Class AAA this week, started for Minnesota and allowed only two hits but three runs in five-plus innings.

Don Slaught hit a solo home run in the second and the Yankees scored twice in the sixth. Henderson led off with a walk, stole second and came home on a single by Don Mattingly. Mattingly continued to second on right fielder Mark Davidson's error and scored on Claudell Washington's single.

Hrbek hit a solo home run, his 19th, in the second. All of his homers have come against AL East opponents, but only two have come off left-handed pitchers.

Gary Gaetti opened the Twins' fourth with a single, his 1,000th major league hit in seven full seasons, stole second and later scored on John's wild pitch.

TORONTO (AP) — Mark Gubicza allowed three hits over eight innings, striking out a season-high 10, and four Royals hit solo homers as Kansas City routed the Toronto Blue Jays 11-1 Saturday.

Kurt Stillwell, Jamie Quirk, Danny Tartabull and George Brett each homered for the Royals. Brett's was the 250th of his career.

Gubicza, 14-6, allowed only Fred McGriff's 27th homer of the season in the second inning before giving way to Steve Farr, who pitched a hitless ninth.

Quirk led off the third against Dave Stieb, 11-8, with his fourth homer. One out later, Stillwell hit his 10th homer. Tartabull hit his 17th homer in the fourth inning.

The Royals sealed the outcome with five runs in the fifth. Stillwell walked, stole second, and came home when Kevin Seitzer singled, chasing Stieb.

Brett hit reliever Frank Wills' first pitch for a single, and after a sacrifice, Wills intentionally walked Frank White to load the bases. Pat Tabler drew a walk on five pitches to force in a run, and Brett came in on a wild pitch, scoring the 1,200th run of his career. Quirk hit a single to drive in two more.

Tabler is 5-for-6 with 13 RBI in bases-loaded situations this year. In his career, he's 34-for-61, with 81 RBI.

In the eighth, Willie Wilson hit an RBI triple and scored on a grounder, and with two out Brett hit his 19th homer.

DETROIT (AP) — Matt Nokes hit a two-run homer that backed the seven-hit pitching of Doyle Alexander, and the Detroit Tigers beat Boston for the fourth straight time Saturday, 4-2, matching the Red Sox's longest losing streak of the season.

The victory increased the Tigers' first-place lead over Boston to four games in the American League East. The Red Sox entered the five-game showdown series riding the crest of a 19-1 streak under Manager Joe Morgan, who took over after the All-Star break. Boston now is 19-5 under Morgan.

Wes Gardner, making his eighth start since being forced into the Boston rotation by an injury to Jeff Sellers, allowed four runs on nine hits in 6 2-3 innings. Gardner walked five and struck out six.

Atlanta Surprises Giants, 7-2

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Smith allowed five hits in six innings to win for the first time since July 4 and Lonnie Smith singled twice and doubled to lead a 14-hit attack as the Atlanta Braves defeated the San Francisco Giants 7-2 Saturday night.

It was the Braves' third straight victory, tying their longest winning streak of the season.

Smith, 4-11, struck out three and walked two. He was 0-3 in his last five starts. Jose Alvarez allowed two hits and struck out six in three innings to earn his first major-league save in 42 appearances.

The Braves scored a run in the first against Atlee Hammaker, 5-4. Ron Gant led off with a single, stole second and scored on Gerald Perry's single.

Atlanta made it 2-0 in the third on Lonnie Smith's RBI single and broke the game open with two runs in the fifth and three in the sixth.

Lonnie Smith opened the fifth with a double and scored on Dale Murphy's bloop single. Murphy took second on a single by Andres Thomas, went to third on a fly out and scored on Bruce Benedict's single.

Mets 5
Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Reliever Jim Gott's major league record-tying three balks in the eighth inning scored two runs and set up a third as the New York Mets opened up a six-game lead in the National League East by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3 Saturday night.

The Mets have won five of six games over the last two weekends against the second-place Pirates, who have lost 11 of 15 and now lead third-place Montreal by a half-game.

Gott, 5-4, immediately got into trouble in the eighth, walking pinch-hitter Tim Teufel and balking him to second. Teufel moved to third on Dave Magadan's grounder and scored when he beat second baseman Jose Lind's throw to the plate on Darryl Strawberry's grounder.

Kevin McReynolds followed with a ground-rule double to left. With runners on second and third and Gary Carter at bat, home plate umpire John McSherry called Gott for failing to come to a stop, his second balk of the inning.

Gott struck out Howard Johnson for the second out, but was called for his third balk by second base umpire Greg Bonin to score McReynolds and make it 5-3.

Gott had balked just twice previously in 44 games. His two other balks came May 7 against San Diego and led to the two deciding runs in a 3-2 Pirates' loss.

Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland twice argued the balk calls. Once with McSherry and the second time with Bonin. Leyland pulled Gott, who also argued with Bonin, after the third balk.

The Mets, trailing 3-1 after Pittsburgh's three-run sixth inning, got a run back in the seventh on pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli's RBI single, which chased starter Doug Drabek. Drabek was trying for his sixth consecutive win.

Bob McClure, 2-3, pitched a scoreless seventh in relief of Dwight Gooden. Randy Myers allowed singles to Sid Bream and R.J. Reynolds to start the ninth and was replaced by Roger McDowell, who earned his 11th save.

Drabek, who has a 1.54 ERA in his last six starts, pitched 4 1-3 no-hit innings until Johnson hit his 19th home run of the season with one out in the fifth.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dennis Rasmussen allowed six hits in eight-plus innings to beat his former Cincinnati teammates for the third time since being traded June 8 and the San Diego Padres defeated the Reds 4-1 Saturday night.

Rasmussen, 10-7, retired the first 10 batters of the game, striking out the side in the second and third innings. The left-hander struck out eight and walked two to win for the eighth time in nine decisions with the Padres.

Mark Davis relieved after Eric Davis opened the ninth with a single and earned his 19th save in 23 opportunities.

Keith Moreland's single in the sixth inning drove in the go-ahead run against Jose Rijo, 11-7. The hit scored Roberto Alomar, who had tripled.

San Diego added a pair of insurance runs in the eighth. Marvell Wynne led off with his 10th homer. Tony Gwynn followed with a single, took second on an infield out and scored on Moreland's single.

Expos 5
Cardinals 4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tom Foley hit a two-run triple, and Otis Nixon added a two-run double as the Montreal Expos continued their hex over the St. Louis Cardinals with a 5-4 triumph Saturday.

The Expos are 10-2 against the Cards this season and have won 11 of their last 13 games. They also have won 14 of their last 16 on the road.

Rookie Brian Holman, 2-3, allowed five hits over five innings for the victory. Andy McGaffigan pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh, and Tim Burke pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his 12th save, allowing a ninth-inning run before pitching out of a jam of his own making.

With one out in the Cards ninth, Vince Coleman and Ozzie Smith singled consecutively off Burke. Smith's single sent Coleman to third, and Smith stole second. Coleman scored on a groundout by Willie McGee as Smith went to third, Tom Brunansky walked and Burke finally got out of it when Terry Pendleton grounded out.

Danny Cox, 3-8, was the loser. The Expos got three runs off Cox in the first inning. Nixon led off with a single, Dave Martinez singled him to third, and Tim Raines drove in the first run with a sacrifice fly.

After Craig Nettles walked, Foley hit a soft liner that eluded right fielder Brunansky for a triple and two more runs.

Holman set down the first seven Cards batters until Tom Pagnozzi doubled to center with one out in the third. Pinch-hitter Tim Jones singled Pagnozzi to third, and Coleman drove in a run with a fielder's choice grounder. The RBI was only Coleman's fifth since May 25.

Montreal scored twice off reliever Larry McWilliams in the fourth to pad their lead to 5-1. With one out, Mike Fitzgerald and Rex Hudler singled. McWilliams fielded Holman's sacrifice bunt but dropped the ball for an error, loading the bases.

Cubs 7
Phillies 4

CHICAGO (AP) — Al Nipper allowed five hits in 5 1-3 innings to win for the first time since May 24 and reliever Pat Perry hit his first major-league home run as the Chicago Cubs defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 7-4 Saturday.

Rafael Palmeiro extended his hitting streak to 16 games with an RBI single off Mike Maddux, 3-2, in the fifth inning.

Nipper, 2-4, has made only three starts since beating Atlanta in May. He allowed five hits, walked one and struck out three before being replaced by Perry with one in the sixth.

Perry allowed Lance Parrish's two-run single with two outs in the ninth and was replaced by Rich Gossage, who earned his 11th save of the season and 300th of his career. Gossage is second on the all-time saves list behind Rollie Fingers, who has 341.

After a one-out walk to Shawon Dunston in the sixth, Perry connected on a 2-0 pitch from Maddux for his first homer in 20 major-league at-bats. It was the first home run by a Cub pitcher since May 1, 1987, when Scott Sanderson connected off San Diego's Eric Show.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first. Mitch Webster led off with a single and took second when center fielder Milt Thompson overran the ball for an error.

Webster went to third on Ryne Sandberg's single and Sandberg moved up on a wild pitch by Maddux. Mark Grace singled to score Webster and Sandberg came around on first baseman Ricky Jordan's throwing error on the same play.

Dunston doubled in the second, stole third and scored on Sandberg's sacrifice fly to give Chicago a 3-0 lead.

The Phillies came back with two runs in the fifth on RBI singles by Maddux and Phil Bradley. Chicago made it 5-2 in the bottom half of the inning on right fielder Mike Young's throwing error and Palmeiro's RBI single.

Dodgers 5

HOUSTON (AP) — Tim Belcher and Jay Howell combined on a seven-hitter and the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Houston 5-3 Saturday night to increase their lead to 3½ games over the second-place Astros in the National League West.

Belcher, 8-4, had shut out the Astros on four hits through seven innings, but Glenn Davis and Terry Puhl singled with one out in the eighth and Kevin Bass followed with his 11th homer. Howell set down five of the last six batters to earn his 14th save.

Nolan Ryan, 8-9, has lost four straight decisions to the Dodgers and is 11-19 lifetime against Los Angeles. The right-hander struck out six in seven innings. Ryan, the all-time strikeout leader, increased his league-leading total to 163 for the season.

Los Angeles took a 2-0 lead in the fourth. Kirk Gibson led off with a walk and Mike Marshall doubled. Two outs later, Mike Scioscia was walked intentionally and Tracy Woodson lined a two-run single.

Steve Sax reached on an infield hit in the fifth, stole second and scored on Gibson's single.

Two Are Tied For Lead At Sr. Open

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — See no evil, hear no evil, and help yourself to a share of the lead going into the final round of U.S. Senior Open golf championship.

That was how New Zealander Bob Charles and South African Gary Player must have felt Saturday after escaping with two of only five subpar rounds logged on Medinah Country Club's No. 3 course to share the third-round lead.

"It was a peaceful round," said Player, the defending champion, who shot a 71 and was even with Charles at 1-under-par 215. "Today, it was on the green and two putts.

"But," he added, noting he had 12 putts of six inches or less, "67 would have been a fair reflection of this round."

Charles held his tongue as well.

"I played pretty much the same way all three days," he said, nonplussed after shooting his second consecutive 70, "hitting a lot of greens and a taking a lot of putts."

But he, too, felt compelled to add something.

"The slopes in the greens are diabolical here. It makes you putt very negatively," the left-hander said.

Both players managed to sidestep the problems that befell second-round leader Billy Casper and their other pursuers at the national championship for players 50 and over.

Charles, a left-hander and the Senior Tour's leading money-winner, had three birdies and a bogey, while Player birdied No. 2 and made 17 pars. His only birdie came after a 6-iron tee shot left him three feet from the cup on the 169-yard hole.

Casper, the 1983 champion and the only player to break par on each of the first two days, started the round bogey-double-bogey, limped into the turn with a 40 and finished with a 76 for a 216 total, tying him with Lou Graham.

"Ble-e-e-ech," grunted Casper when asked to describe his round. "It may have been some of the worst golf I've ever played."

Casper had to rally for his share of the runner-up spot. He bogeyed Nos. 14 and 15 to go 2-over for the tourney, but birdied No. 16 and sank a wide-breaking 25-foot putt for another birdie on No. 17.

Graham, who began the day tied with South African Harold Henning at 143, three shots behind Casper, struggled to a 73. Graham won the 1975 U.S. Open at Medinah.

Bruce Crampton shot a 70 to finish at 217, along with fellow Australian Peter Thomson and Orville Moody. Crampton also shared with Walter Zembriski the dubious honor of playing the day's wildest round.

Crampton collected three birdies on each nine, but hurt himself with a bogey on No. 12 and a triple-bogey at the 163-yard, par-3 13th after dumping one ball into the water and the next into a bunker.

Moody and Thomson matched par with 72s.

Zembriski, who began the day at even-par 144, matched Crampton's 3-under 33 at the turn and was leading the tournament at 2-under after 16 holes.

But on No. 17, a 151-yard, par-3 over Lake Kadijah, the body of water that traverses the 6,881-yard layout remodeled for this championship, the one-time steelworker dumped his tee shot into the water, repeated the feat after a drop and finished with a 7.

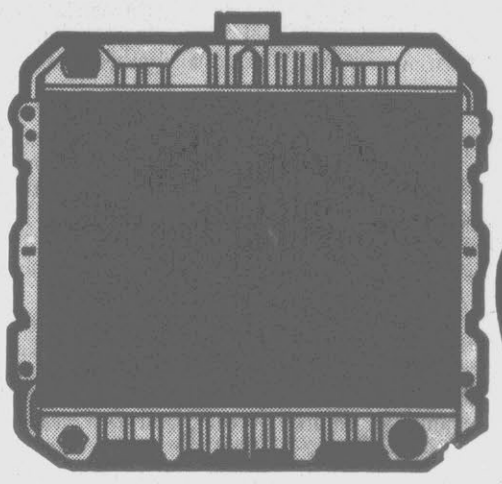

He wound up with a 74 and was alone at 218.

Mills Takes Top Position On U.S. Women's Team

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Phoebe Mills reached another milestone Saturday in her impressive march to the Summer Olympics, capturing the top spot on the U.S. women's gymnastics team headed for Seoul.

The 5-foot, 15-year-old national champion from Northfield, Ill., will head an American team dominated by youth and proteges of internationally noted coach Bela Karolyi.

Joining Mills on the elite squad that's expected to challenge the reigning world champion squad from Romania, the Soviet Union and East Germany for the team medals, are two-time NCAA champion Kelly Garrison-Steves from Altus, Oklahoma; Hope Spivey, 17, from Allentown, Pa., the Karolyi-trained pair of Brandy Johnson, of Altamonte Springs, Fla., and Chelle Stack, of Birmingham, Ala., — both 15 — and Melissa Marlowe, 16, who excelled before a partisan hometown crowd at Salt Lake City's Salt Palace.

Mills won the floor exercise in Saturday's final round, performing a variety of layouts and backhands somersaults to the accompanyment of the western song "Red River Valley."

Her score of 9.963 effectively wrapped up first place.

Half of the U.S. team is from Karolyi's Houston camp. So too are Rhonda Faehn and Kristie Phillips, who finished seventh and eight, respectively.

Faehn, 17, from Coon Rapids, Minn., will be the alternate member of the team and also will make the trip to Seoul.

Mills won the All-Around title, her third major win this year, with 78.572 points after the two days of compulsory and optional routines that decided the Olympic squad.

She captured the McDonald's Cup early in the year, beating the Soviet Union's Svetlana Baitova, and won the national title last month in Houston.

Steves, at 21 the only non-teenager on the team, was solid through the trials and finished with 77.891 points.

Spivey, despite a shaky beam score of 9.188 after she fell off the apparatus, finished third with 77.520 points.

Johnson and the 4-foot-8, 74-pound Stack had scored well in Thursday's compulsory competition and were able to hold off the challenges from Faehn and Phillips.

So too did Marlowe, who found in the hometown crowd the inspiration she needed.

With a signing proclaiming "Marlowe Country" in the background and the crowd of more than 9,000 holdings its collective breath, Marlowe wrapped up the final spot on the team with a 9.663 score on the precarious 4-inch wide balance beam. The crowd erupted as she finished her double somersault dismount, and she ran into the arms of her coach, Mark Lee.

Phillips, who less than two years ago was being tabbed the next Mary Lou Retton, made a high-score-filled bid to make the team in the optionals, but simply could not catch the talent in front of her.

She scored a winning 9.863 in the beam, including in the routine the butt-on-the head and human "J" moves that made her the 1987 national champion and spurred comparisons with Retton.

But it was too late. She could not rally from a yearlong slump, during which she gained weight and changed coaches before returning to Karolyi this summer.

Faehn started the day in ninth place but made an early move on the leaders with a 9.85 score in the uneven bars that featured a spectacular dismount in which she did a double-twisting backflip over the low bar. She edged closer with a perfect score — 10.00 — in the vault, but fell back with a 9.588 in the balance beam.

Biondi Not Drawing Comparisons

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Matt Biondi hopes to swim in seven events at next month's Olympics, but that's where the similarities end between him and Mark Spitz.

Biondi will try out for four individual events at the U.S. Swimming Olympic trials, starting Monday at the Texas Swimming Center, and he also could be on three relay teams at the Games in Seoul, South Korea.

Spitz won an unprecedented seven gold medals at the 1972 Olympics at Munich.

Spitz captured individual golds in the 100 and 200-meter freestyles and the 100 and 200 butterfly events, while Biondi will swim the 50, 100 and 200 freestyles and the 100 butterfly.

"There's really no parallel between him and me," Biondi said Saturday at a news conference. "He had four world records in his events and I have just one, and I have to swim against the world record-holders in the other three."

On the first day of the trials Monday, Biondi will swim the 200 freestyle. He set the American record of 1 minute, 47.89 seconds, .41 off the world record, in 1985.

He wasn't even in the top 10 in the world in 1987 and is listed as the sixth seed at the trials, but said he has worked especially hard to get ready for the 200.

"I'm in better shape than I've been in the past because I've put a lot of my effort in training for the 200," said the 6-foot-6 Biondi, the world record-holder in the 100. "The 100 was the event I was born for. But when you prepare for the 200, the 100 and 50 can take care of themselves."

The trials begin with the women's 100 freestyle and continue with the men's 100 breaststroke and the women's 400 individual medley before the men's 200 freestyle.

Biondi was on the gold medal-winning 400 freestyle relay team at the 1984 Olympics, but in the intervening years, he has become one of the dominant swimmers in the world.

"I know what it's like to experience the Olympics, but I wasn't under pressure to do well," Biondi said of 1984. "I was only on a relay team, so I had three other guys to rely on.

"Now I'm one of the forerunners of the team and I think I'm ready to face it."

"He's accepting a leadership role that he didn't have before," Olympic head coach Richard Quick said.

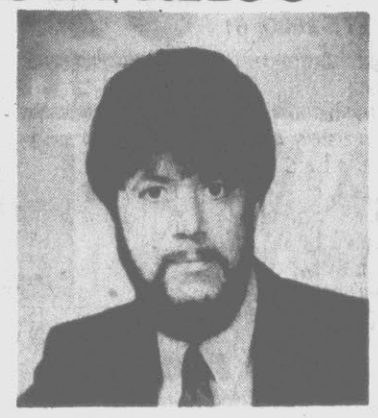

Quick called Biondi "one of the best athletes ever in the sport of swimming. He has the size, power, agility, the endurance capability and the tremendous competitive spirit of a great athlete.

"I've seen him on a basketball court and I believe he could have played in college at some level. He also could be a world-class water polo player. It takes tremendous strength, as well as speed to play water polo."

Biondi was wearing a goatee Saturday, but he plans to shave it and the rest of his body hair in a ritual that is both physical and psychological.

"When you're in the water and haven't shaved in a while, you can feel the hair as the water flows by," he said. "When you shave, the water flows so smooth and you can really tell the difference. You feel like you're going faster and that's a lift emotionally. Every top swimmer looks forward to shaving before a big meet."

Irish QB Is Reportedly Having Grade Problems

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The academic advisor to Notre Dame quarterback Tony Rice said reports that Rice would be ineligible to play this fall took him by surprise.

WSBT-TV quoted sources at Notre Dame on Friday as saying Rice would be ineligible for the fall campaign for academic reasons. Notre Dame officials could not confirm the report.

Athletic Academic Advisor Mike DeCicco said, "In all honesty, that's not very factual. In fact I know it isn't, but nothing is certain until the grades are entered with the registrar."

A final report from the registrar's office is expected Monday, but DeCicco said Rice was doing well in the classroom this summer.

"As far as I know, and what I've been told unofficially, he will be in good academic standing," DeCicco said. "He told me what two of the three grades were and that was official as far as I was concerned."

Rice was enrolled in three two-credit courses this summer in order to lift his second-semester grade-point average to the required 2.0 level.

According to Associate Sports Information Director John Heisler, "Tony left for home Friday (when classes ended) confident that he'd be returning next week and be eligible to play."

Neither Rice nor coach Lou Holtz could be reached for comment.

Rice sat out his freshman season after not meeting Proposition 48 academic entrance requirements. He took over the Irish offense in the fourth game last season at Pittsburgh when Terry Andrysiak suffered a serious shoulder injury.

The 6-2, 190-pounder from Woodruff, S.C., engineered victories over Air Force, USC, Navy, Boston College and Alabama before the Irish suffered a 21-20 setback at Penn State.

A 24-0 loss to Miami followed and Andrysiak returned to start in a 35-10 loss to Texas A&M in the Cotton Bowl.

Rice, a former Parade high school All-American, completed 35 of 82 pass attempts for 663 yards.

Boz's Book Details Highjinks At OU

DALLAS (AP) — Oklahoma University football players freebased cocaine the day of a game and steroid use was commonplace when he was on the team, Brian Bosworth says in his autobiography.

"The Boz: Confessions of a Modern Anti-Hero," also details other NCAA violations, which the All America linebacker said took place while he was at the school, the Dallas Morning News reported in Saturday's editions.

The News obtained an advance copy of the book, which is planned for release next month, a spokesman for the newspaper said Friday night. The 252-page book was written with Rick Reilly of Sports Illustrated.

The book also tells of running back Buster Rhymes shooting a machine gun off an OU dormitory balcony to end a snowball fight.

Bosworth said in the book that while he was on scholarship, he lived in a $500-a-month condominium with a big-screen TV and two cars parked outside.

Bosworth, writing that the football program bordered on anarchy, said that Coach Barry Switzer did not discipline players who broke the law or circumvented NCAA rules as long as the team won.

"Some guys, especially some of the city guys, would freebase a lot of cocaine," Bosworth wrote. "One day, I happened to see them doing it on the day of the game.

"If you were a star on the University of Oklahoma football team, you could do just about anything you wanted. You had no rules."

The 23-year-old Bosworth left Oklahoma after his graduation in May 1987, disdaining a fourth year of eligibility, and was picked by the Seattle Seahawks in the NFL supplemental draft. He signed a 10-year, $11 million contract.

Bosworth, asked by The Associated Press to elaborate on his charges after Saturday's Seahawk workout, declined to talk about the book. Calls to Switzer's office Saturday went unanswered, and phone calls to his home received a busy signal or a recorded message which ended with the coach saying, "have a nice day."

Gary Wichard, Bosworth's business manager, characterized the book as giving a true picture of big-time college football, or at least what transpired at Oklahoma from fall 1982 through spring 1987.

"Before saying anything publicly, I want to have an opportunity to look at the entire book," Oklahoma athletic director Donnie Duncan told the Morning News.

A snowball fight in 1984 outside the athletic dormitory that ended abruptly when Rhymes fired "about 150 rounds out of an Uzi machine gun," wrote Bosworth.

"Somebody hit him with a snowball. He got a little upset," Bosworth wrote of Rhymes. "So right in the middle of the fight, Buster went up to his room, opened his door, and let fly with this Uzi above all their heads. Just a few innocent warning blasts."

Sonny Brown, a member of the team that year was contacted Saturday at Houston Oilers' training camp in San Marcos, and asked about the incident. "No, that didn't happen," Brown said. "He might have pulled it (the gun) out and waved it, but he didn't fire any rounds."

Brown, one of four captains during his and Bosworth's final year at Oklahoma, said of Switzer's discipline, "He was loose with the players. He wasn't like a drill sergeant. If we went out of line, he'd let you know about it."

Brown was named most outstanding back in the 1986 Orange Bowl, when Oklahoma defeated Penn State 25-10 for the national championship.

Of steroids, Brown said, "Maybe that stuff went on, but I never saw any of it."

Bosworth was suspended from the 1987 Orange Bowl because a drug test detected the presence of a steroid in his system. Bosworth said he took the steroid under a doctor's care and before the NCAA had ruled the drug illegal. But his teammates weren't as careful, he wrote.

"Steroids were about as common as Anacin in our lockerroom. I'd guess about half the guys on the team took them just to look good ... and another 20 to 25 percent took them seriously to get strong and put on weight," Bosworth wrote.

He wrote Switzer visited his home "four or five" times, more than the NCAA-prescribed limit of three, "but then so did every other head coach who visited me."

Bosworth said of Switzer he "respected him for a lot of things" and also wrote that the coach "just turns his back" to what his players did off the field.

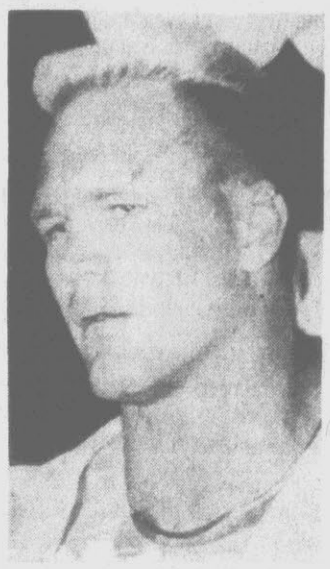

"He never wanted to know how it was that I was living in a nice $500-a-month condo, watching a big-screen TV, driving a Jeep and a Corvette, and always operating with $2,000 in my checking account," Bosworth wrote.

He said that, while under suspension for steroid use, "I flew down to the Orange Bowl after Christmas — Switzer took care of my ticket, but I still don't know how."

NCAA Legislative Services director Rick Evrard said the ticket would be a violation of NCAA rules. "A student-athlete who is ineligible to participate is not eligible to receive expenses incidental to getting to the event," Evrard said.

"Everybody in Oklahoma wants to feel like they're contributing to your cause.," Bosworth wrote. "So, if they want to pick up your dinner check and feel big-time, who was I to stop them? If somebody wanted to pay for your clothes when you brought them up to the register and if that made them feel good, okay by me."

NCAA enforcement official Dan Beebe told the newspaper that school liability would be found upon "establishing a relationship between the institution and the individual (giver) to show they are some type of representative."

Some Holdouts Are Really Vacations

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

The agent likes to tell the story about his veteran player, for whom he thought he had worked out a great contract.

"It's all done," he told the player. "Just sign and you'll be ready to start camp."

"Hold off a little," the player replied. "Let's keep it going for a few weeks.

As the list of veteran holdouts from NFL camps continues to remain high, it's hard to tell how many are real and how many are the kind denoted above — the holdout prompted by the veteran who's had enough of two-a-day practices in 98-degree heat and humidity.

In fact, many NFL coaches have reason to be relatively happy this year about attendance at training camps. Most of the rookies, who need time to familiarize themselves with new systems, signed early; veteran holdouts, who already know those systems, can report with a couple of weeks left and be ready for the opener.

The large number of veterans out is due in large measure to last year's strike and the suit that ensued from it. Until three weeks ago, when Judge David Doty ruled that they still belonged to their teams, most of the high-priced veterans held off from signing.

But how many are serious holdouts?

Some certainly are — or were — like Willie Gault of the Bears, who was dealt to the Raiders a week ago; Tim McKyer and James Griffin of the 49ers; Ron Solt of the Colts and Mike Merriweather of the Steelers, who's already in one of those bitter public fueds that has Coach Chuck Noll muttering:

"He's out of sight, out of mind. I don't know whether he'll play this year. We'll get the people ready we have here."

Then there are Chip Banks of the Chargers and Carl Banks of the Giants, unrelated except in the fact that they're both premier linebackers.

Chip Banks is a perenniel holdout — malcontent might be a better word — and was traded by the Browns last year for that reason. Now he wants to go to the Raiders because they seem to be trading for everyone else — like Gault and Jim Lachey.

"I hope he's kidding," says his agent, Harold Daniels.

The tipoff on Carl Banks, whose attitude is 180 degrees opposite from Chip, is that he's already signed to do a radio show in New York starting in late August. Despite a lot of rhetoric — his agent, Dr. Charles Tucker, says he's prepared to sit out the season if he doesn't get his $1 million a year — chances are good that he'll be signed by then.

In fact, Carl Banks' holdout may have already benefitted the Giants, who think Lawrence Taylor is having the best training camp of his eight-year career. Why? He's jealous that Banks made All-Pro last year and he made only second team and he wants to become the team's best linebacker again.

MONEY IN THE BANK

While a few NFL owners poor-mouth, they've quietly been paying this year's crop of rookies about 10 percent more on average than last year's.

Some examples:

San Diego's Anthony Miller, the 14th pick this year, is getting about $1.775 over four years while John Clay got $1.5 million from the Raiders after being picked at the same spot. Ironically, Clay was just traded to the Chargers in the Lachey deal.

This year's No. 9, Dave Cadigan of the Jets, is getting $2.075 million. Last year's No 5, Mike Junkin of the Browns, got $1.732 million.

And this year's 11th pick, Michael Irvin of the Cowboys is getting $1.875 million; last year's Shawn Knight of the Saints, $1.675 million.

This comes after three years of declining salaries — the owners started cutting back in 1985, when the USFL, in its final throes, ceased competing for players.

"I think they looked at the balance sheet," says Leigh Steinberg, who represented Cadigan this year and Knight last year. "The television revenue is good, there's not going to be a strike and the coaches want their guys in camp. It's turned out to be a good year."

OWNER AND GENIUS

Steve Young's performance in last Sunday's London showcase has intensified the talk that Joe Montana may be on his way out of San Francisco. But continued hard feelings between owner Edward DeBartolo Jr. and Coach Bill Walsh may block a deal.

"I think Bill would trade Joe if he had a backup quarterback and job security," says one source close to the situation. "I think he thinks he's solid with Young."

The backup might be John Paye, the ex-Stanford star who sat out last year while his sore arm was healing.

But job security may be hard to come by in the last year of Walsh's contract.

After three straight maulings in the first round of the playoffs, DeBartolo has become disenchanted with what he thinks his Walsh's haughty demeanor and is less inclined to think of his two-time Super Bowl-winning coach as the genius he's suppposed to be.

DeBartolo is particularly miffed about last season, when San Francisco, whose 13-2 record was the best in the league, was summarily thrashed by Minnesota, 36-24 in its first playoff game.

"It wouldn't have been so bad if they'd been 9-6 or 10-5," says the source. "But Eddie thought Bill had a powerhouse."

SPEED KILLS

The Colts and Bucs are both interested in the rights to Ron Brown, who "retired" from the Rams to pursue a spot on the U.S. Olympic team. He didn't get it and might be willing to return to football if the price is right.

The problem is, the Rams' price probably isn't. They want a No. 1 draft pick for a man whose only true skill is kick returning — he lacks the hands of a top-level wide receiver.

MOTIVATION

When the Lions and Saints worked out against each other in La Crosse, Wis. this week there were at least three separate fights.

There was also this motivating — disparaging? — comment from Coach Jim Mora of the Saints, who were 12-3 last season to Detroit's 4-11.

"C'mon, fellows, don't walk, run," he told his players on Wednesday.

"You look like the Lions walking around."

LA CROSSE, Wis. — Quarterback Bobby Hebert has a mild pull of an abdominal muscle and may be held out of the preseason opener at Minnesota on Sunday, New Orleans Saints Coach Jim Mora said Friday.

"Our plan right now is to play three quarterbacks. We will play Bobby — if Bobby can play — most of the first half,' Mora said.

"Our plan is to play Bobby all of the first quarter and part of the second quarter," he said. "Dave (Wilson) will play the rest of the second and all of the third, and (John) Fourcade will play the fourth quarter."

Dalton Hilliard and Buford Jordan will start at the running back spots, he said. Rueben Mayes is being held out of the game to protect a knee that underwent post-season surgery, Mora said.

First-round draft choice Craig Heyward will relieve Jordan. "He'll probably see some action quicker than some of the other people will see," Mora said.

Major League Baseball Notes

By The Associated Press

Rick Sutcliffe is scheduled to start for the Cubs Monday against Philadelphia in the first night game at Wrigley Field. However, it will not be the first night event in the brick-and-ivy ballpark. In Septmber 1934, 10,000 fans attended a night wrestling match between Jim Londos and Stragler Lewis. Temporary lights were put on the roof for the match.

Other evening events at Wrigley have included boxing matches, rodeos and a Harlem Globetrotters basketball game in 1954.

Attention has focused on the first night game in the major leagues, when Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 2-1 on May 24, 1935. Also receiving frequent mention is the next-to-last of the original parks to install lights — Briggs Stadium in Detroit on June 15, 1948.

The first baseball game ever played at night was between two amateur teams in Hull, Mass., on Sept. 2, 1880, according to the commissioner's office. The first professional night game was between Independance, Kan., and Muskogee, Okla., of the Class D Western Alliance on April 28, 1930, at Independance.

ON THE SOUTH SIDE

To make room for a new White Sox stadium, the state is offering to buy homes and throw in extra cash, move houses to a free piece of land or even buy and build new dwellings, an official said. ... "A home is a very emotional entity, and there's no way we can pay anybody to compensate for that loss," said Peter C.B. Bynoe, executive director of the Illinois Sports Facilities Authority. "What we can do is make them economically whole." ...

COLLUSION I

Arbitrator Thomas Roberts has asked owners and the union to submit briefs by Aug. 10 on the next stage of the Collusion I damage hearings. Testimony by economic experts concluded last week. The owners want Roberts to decide on a damage award now. The union is thinking of asking for individual hearings for every player who feels he was damaged by the collusion between the 1985 and 1986 seasons. If Roberts decides to do that, cases may be distrubuted to several of the arbitrators who hear salary arbitration cases.

Meanwhile in Collusion II, arbitrator George Nicolau said last week he would issue his decision sometime this month.

Roster Moves

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros activated infielder Denny Walling Saturday and placed third baseman Buddy Bell on the 15-day disabled list.

Walling was placed on the 21-day DL on June 20 after suffering back spasms. He missed 44 games.

Bell, acquired from the Cincinnati Reds on June 18 for a player to be named later, was placed on the DL retroactive to Aug. 4 with a muscle strain in his left rib cage. He is batting .246 with four home runs and 27 runs batted in.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — New York Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez did not start Saturday night's game against Pittsburgh after reporting tightness in his right hamstring.

Hernandez returned to the Mets' lineup Friday night for the first time since reinjuring the hamstring June 23 in Chicago. He went 2-for-5 with a two-run home run and a double in the Mets' 3-2 victory over the Pirates.

Mets trainers do not believe Hernandez reaggravated the injury he first suffered June 6, but he was rested Saturday night as a precaution.

Hernandez first went on the disabled list June 7 with the injury, then played in two games before reinjuring his leg.

McEnroe, Becker Advance To Final

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Fifth-seeded John McEnroe downed No. 15 Robert Seguso 7-5, 6-3 Saturday to reach the finals of the $415,000 U.S. Hardcourts tennis tournament.

Earlier, top-seeded Boris Becker ended the surprising run of local favorite Todd Witsken with a 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 victory in the other semifinal.

Becker and McEnroe will compete Sunday for the winner's check worth $50,575.

McEnroe has been off-form throughout the tournament, but both he and Seguso began the match on top of their powerful serve-and-volley games.

It was the 29-year-old New Yorker's second match within 15 hours. He didn't complete his 7-5, 6-2 quarterfinal victory against Michael Robertson until 1:30 a.m. EDT after thunderstorms suspended play for 3½ hours Friday.

McEnroe and Seguso, teammates on the U.S. Davis Cup squad, held serve until Seguso broke in the sixth game, but McEnroe broke back to move within 3-4.

The two then traded service games without surrendering a point, with Seguso going up 5-4 when McEnroe's lob dropped inches beyond the baseline.

McEnroe tied it by holding serve, then broke Seguso, who mishit a volley to fall behind 5-6. McEnroe held serve to win the first set.

Seguso won the first game of the second set and, during the changeover, McEnroe received a warning for unsportsmanlike conduct and expressed his disgust by tossing a cup of water on the court.

The action seemed to inspire McEnroe. He held serve, then later broke Seguso for a 3-2 lead.

"I started yelling at the guy in the chair because he wasn't controlling the match, and then John thought I was getting out of hand and he started yelling at me. That just really hacked me off and I started yelling at John," Seguso said. "I don't know what the hell the guy's problem is."

Tempers boiled over again on the changeover as the players exchanged words and Seguso lunged at McEnroe, who was sitting a few feet away. Seguso was restrained by an umpire as he shouted at his McEnroe for talking between points.

He charged McEnroe with complaining about balls that were clearly out and talking between points. McEnroe, who eventually lost a point for the conduct warning, claimed innocence.

"I could say the same about him, and I will," he said. "If they're going to be tight with me, I want them to be tight with the other players. It was clearly heard that he called the guy a wimp and he said it on a number of occasions."

Witsken, 24, thrilled the sellout Indianapolis Sports Center crowd during his first career meeting against the world's fifth-ranked player by rallying after a slow start.

The West German used his powerful serve to dominate the 28-minute first set, allowing Witsken just seven points in the first five games.

"After losing the first set he was very loose," Becker said. "That probably brought him back in the match."

Witsken, from nearby Carmel, Ind., shook off his early jitters and won the first game of the second set at love.

"Each game that I lost on my serve in the first set they were pretty close games, so I knew if I could get a little tougher and keep him off the net I could do all right," Witsken said.

He had two break points on Becker's next service game, but fell back to deuce as Becker served consecutive aces. The game went to deuce three more times before Witsken netted a forehand return and Becker tied the set 1-1.

Witsken, 24, began hitting the lines with accurate passing shots against a charging Becker for a crucial service break that gave him a 4-3 lead. He lost his serve again at 15 as Witsken took the second set to level the match.

McEnroe thought Seguso should have received a warning for his comments, just as McEnroe had earlier.

"It wasn't like anything I said, I just requested to see the supervisor during the game and he wouldn't let me do it," McEnroe said about chair umpire Paulo Pereira of Brazil.

The outburst apparently shook Seguso. He won just one point in the next game to fall behind 2-4.

He rebounded to hold serve at 3-4. But McEnroe came back from 15-40 to win the next game, winning with an ace, and closed out the match with another service break.

"I thought he played extremely well," Becker said. "He made very difficult shots look easy."

In the third set, Witsken was broken in the seventh game when Becker punched a forehand volley deep in Witsken's backcourt. Becker then held serve at love to take a 5-3 lead.

Refusing to fold, Witsken took advantage of Becker's unforced errors to win the ninth game and prolong the 2-hour, 10-minute match. But Becker reached back for an ace to go up 30-15 and gained match point when Witsken's forehand sailed long. He advanced to the final when Witsken netted a service return.

"I knew it was going to be tough to break him so I just wanted to concentrate on holding my serve," Witsken said.

Wins against Bahamian Roger Smith, Australian Simon Youl, No. 6 Aaron Krickstein and 13th seed Jim Pugh helped Witsken, a three-time college All-American, advance to his first semifinal since January 1986.

Becker has lost just two sets in his first tournament since losing the men's singles final at Wimbledon on July 4.

Browns, Colts And Bears All Win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ozzie Newsome, held without a touchdown last season for the first time in his NFL career, caught a 7-yard scoring pass from Bernie Kosar, and Jeff Jaeger kicked two field goals Saturday night as the Cleveland Browns beat the Detroit Lions 13-10 in the exhibition opener for both teams.

Detroit has lost four straight exhibition openers, while Cleveland has won its last three.

Newsome leaped in the end zone to grab the first-quarter pass from Kosar after the Browns' Larry Williams recovered Jaeger's blocked 37-yard field goal at the Lions' 16-yard line.

Cleveland was awarded the ball because Detroit's Vernon Maxwell touched the kick after it had passed the line of scrimmage. The ball was blocked by Curtis Green.

Detroit played without starting quarterback Chuck Long, who is bothered by a sore arm. Eric Hipple, who sat out the 1987 season with a dislocated thumb, played the first three quarters and completed 10 of 17 passes for 144 yards.

Bucs.....7

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Eric Dickerson ran 6 yards for a touchdown on the only offensive series he played, and George Wonsley ran 8 yards for another first-half score to lead the Indianapolis Colts to a 20-7 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers Saturday night.

The exhibition opener for both teams attracted a crowd of 44,258 that watched the Colts build a 17-0 halftime lead and hold off the rebuilding Bucs with rookie Chris Chandler at quarterback in the second half.

Indianapolis drove 78 yards in nine plays after the opening kickoff to take a 7-0 lead on Dickerson's sweep of right end less than five minutes into the game.

Jack Trudeau, starting in place of injured quarterback Gary Hogeboom, completed three of four passes for 32 yards in the drive and Dickerson, who left the game after scoring, gained 30 yards on five carries against the Bucs' No. 1 defense.

Bears.....20
Dolphins.....17

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Tomczak's 25-yard touchdown pass to Jim Thornton and Eric Starr's 1-yard replay touchdown Saturday night rallied the Chicago Bears to a 20-17 exhibition victory over the Miami Dolphins.

Tomczak directed a 72-yard touchdown drive to open the second half. He completed passes of 15 yards to Brad Muster and 24 yards to Thornton before hitting Thornton with the touchdown pass to tie the game 14-14.

Miami wide receiver James Pruitt scored a pair of touchdowns in the first half on passes of 14 yards from Dan Marino and 24 yards from Ron Jaworski.

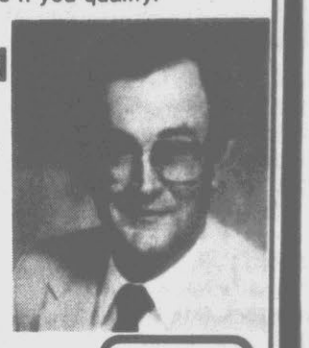

Starr, a rookie out of North Carolina, appeared to be stopped at the goal line but television replays showed he had broken the plane of the goal line and the Bears were awarded the touchdown, putting them ahead. Tim Lashar's extra point attempt was kicked into a pile of players.

The Dolphins lost the services of linebacker Hugh Green, who suffered a broken left rib in the third quarter and will be out for three weeks.

Major League Baseball Notes

By The Associated Press

Rick Sutcliffe is scheduled to start for the Cubs Monday against Philadelphia in the first night game at Wrigley Field. However, it will not be the first night event in the brick-and-ivy ballpark. In Septmber 1934, 10,000 fans attended a night wrestling match between Jim Londos and Stragler Lewis. Temporary lights were put on the roof for the match.

Other evening events at Wrigley have included boxing matches, rodeos and a Harlem Globetrotters basketball game in 1954.

Attention has focused on the first night game in the major leagues, when Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 2-1 on May 24, 1935. Also receiving frequent mention is the next-to-last of the original parks to install lights — Briggs Stadium in Detroit on June 15, 1948.

The first baseball game ever played at night was between two amateur teams in Hull, Mass., on Sept. 2, 1880, according to the commissioner's office. The first professional night game was between Independance, Kan., and Muskogee, Okla., of the Class D Western Alliance on April 28, 1930, at Independance.

ON THE SOUTH SIDE

To make room for a new White Sox stadium, the state is offering to buy homes and throw in extra cash, move houses to a free piece of land or even buy and build new dwellings, an official said. ... "A home is a very emotional entity, and there's no way we can pay anybody to compensate for that loss," said Peter C.B. Bynoe, executive director of the Illinois Sports Facilities Authority. "What we can do is make them economically whole." ...

COLLUSION I

Arbitrator Thomas Roberts has asked owners and the union to submit briefs by Aug. 10 on the next stage of the Collusion I damage hearings. Testimony by economic experts concluded last week. The owners want Roberts to decide on a damage award now. The union is thinking of asking for individual hearings for every player who feels he was damaged by the collusion between the 1985 and 1986 seasons. If Roberts decides to do that, cases may be distrubuted to several of the arbitrators who hear salary arbitration cases.

Meanwhile in Collusion II, arbitrator George Nicolau said last week he would issue his decision sometime this month.

Roster Moves

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros activated infielder Denny Walling Saturday and placed third baseman Buddy Bell on the 15-day disabled list.

Walling was placed on the 21-day DL on June 20 after suffering back spasms. He missed 44 games.

Bell, acquired from the Cincinnati Reds on June 18 for a player to be named later, was placed on the DL retroactive to Aug. 4 with a muscle strain in his left rib cage. He is batting .246 with four home runs and 27 runs batted in.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — New York Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez did not start Saturday night's game against Pittsburgh after reporting tightness in his right hamstring.

Hernandez returned to the Mets' lineup Friday night for the first time since reinjuring the hamstring June 23 in Chicago. He went 2-for-5 with a two-run home run and a double in the Mets' 3-2 victory over the Pirates.

Mets trainers do not believe Hernandez reaggravated the injury he first suffered June 6, but he was rested Saturday night as a precaution.

Hernandez first went on the disabled list June 7 with the injury, then played in two games before reinjuring his leg.

McEnroe, Becker Advance To Final

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Fifth-seeded John McEnroe downed No. 15 Robert Seguso 7-5, 6-3 Saturday to reach the finals of the $415,000 U.S. Hardcourts tennis tournament.

Earlier, top-seeded Boris Becker ended the surprising run of local favorite Todd Witsken with a 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 victory in the other semifinal.

Becker and McEnroe will compete Sunday for the winner's check worth $50,575.

McEnroe has been off-form throughout the tournament, but both he and Seguso began the match on top of their powerful serve-and-volley games.

It was the 29-year-old New Yorker's second match within 15 hours. He didn't complete his 7-5, 6-2 quarterfinal victory against Michael Robertson until 1:30 a.m. EDT after thunderstorms suspended play for 3½ hours Friday.

McEnroe and Seguso, teammates on the U.S. Davis Cup squad, held serve until Seguso broke in the sixth game, but McEnroe broke back to move within 3-4.

The two then traded service games without surrendering a point, with Seguso going up 5-4 when McEnroe's lob dropped inches beyond the baseline.

McEnroe tied it by holding serve, then broke Seguso, who mishit a volley to fall behind 5-6. McEnroe held serve to win the first set.

Seguso won the first game of the second set and, during the changeover, McEnroe received a warning for unsportsmanlike conduct and expressed his disgust by tossing a cup of water on the court.

The action seemed to inspire McEnroe. He held serve, then later broke Seguso for a 3-2 lead.

"I started yelling at the guy in the chair because he wasn't controlling the match, and then John thought I was getting out of hand and he started yelling at me. That just really hacked me off and I started yelling at John," Seguso said. "I don't know what the hell the guy's problem is."

Tempers boiled over again on the changeover as the players exchanged words and Seguso lunged at McEnroe, who was sitting a few feet away. Seguso was restrained by an umpire as he shouted at his McEnroe for talking between points.

He charged McEnroe with complaining about balls that were clearly out and talking between points. McEnroe, who eventually lost a point for the conduct warning, claimed innocence.

"I could say the same about him, and I will," he said. "If they're going to be tight with me, I want them to be tight with the other players. It was clearly heard that he called the guy a wimp and he said it on a number of occasions."

Witsken, 24, thrilled the sellout Indianapolis Sports Center crowd during his first career meeting against the world's fifth-ranked player by rallying after a slow start.

The West German used his powerful serve to dominate the 28-minute first set, allowing Witsken just seven points in the first five games.

"After losing the first set he was very loose," Becker said. "That probably brought him back in the match."

Witsken, from nearby Carmel, Ind., shook off his early jitters and won the first game of the second set at love.

"Each game that I lost on my serve in the first set they were pretty close games, so I knew if I could get a little tougher and keep him off the net I could do all right," Witsken said.

He had two break points on Becker's next service game, but fell back to deuce as Becker served consecutive aces. The game went to deuce three more times before Witsken netted a forehand return and Becker tied the set 1-1.

Witsken, 24, began hitting the lines with accurate passing shots against a charging Becker for a crucial service break that gave him a 4-3 lead. He lost his serve again at 15 as Witsken took the second set to level the match.

McEnroe thought Seguso should have received a warning for his comments, just as McEnroe had earlier.

"It wasn't like anything I said, I just requested to see the supervisor during the game and he wouldn't let me do it," McEnroe said about chair umpire Paulo Pereira of Brazil.

The outburst apparently shook Seguso. He won just one point in the next game to fall behind 2-4.

He rebounded to hold serve at 3-4. But McEnroe came back from 15-40 to win the next game, winning with an ace, and closed out the match with another service break.

"I thought he played extremely well," Becker said. "He made very difficult shots look easy."

In the third set, Witsken was broken in the seventh game when Becker punched a forehand volley deep in Witsken's backcourt. Becker then held serve at love to take a 5-3 lead.

Refusing to fold, Witsken took advantage of Becker's unforced errors to win the ninth game and prolong the 2-hour, 10-minute match. But Becker reached back for an ace to go up 30-15 and gained match point when Witsken's forehand sailed long. He advanced to the final when Witsken netted a service return.

"I knew it was going to be tough to break him so I just wanted to concentrate on holding my serve," Witsken said.

Wins against Bahamian Roger Smith, Australian Simon Youl, No. 6 Aaron Krickstein and 13th seed Jim Pugh helped Witsken, a three-time college All-American, advance to his first semifinal since January 1986.

Becker has lost just two sets in his first tournament since losing the men's singles final at Wimbledon on July 4.

Browns, Colts And Bears All Win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ozzie Newsome, held without a touchdown last season for the first time in his NFL career, caught a 7-yard scoring pass from Bernie Kosar, and Jeff Jaeger kicked two field goals Saturday night as the Cleveland Browns beat the Detroit Lions 13-10 in the exhibition opener for both teams.

Detroit has lost four straight exhibition openers, while Cleveland has won its last three.

Newsome leaped in the end zone to grab the first-quarter pass from Kosar after the Browns' Larry Williams recovered Jaeger's blocked 37-yard field goal at the Lions' 16-yard line.

Cleveland was awarded the ball because Detroit's Vernon Maxwell touched the kick after it had passed the line of scrimmage. The ball was blocked by Curtis Green.

Detroit played without starting quarterback Chuck Long, who is bothered by a sore arm. Eric Hipple, who sat out the 1987 season with a dislocated thumb, played the first three quarters and completed 10 of 17 passes for 144 yards.

Bucs.....7

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Eric Dickerson ran 6 yards for a touchdown on the only offensive series he played, and George Wonsley ran 8 yards for another first-half score to lead the Indianapolis Colts to a 20-7 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers Saturday night.

The exhibition opener for both teams attracted a crowd of 44,258 that watched the Colts build a 17-0 halftime lead and hold off the rebuilding Bucs with rookie Chris Chandler at quarterback in the second half.

Indianapolis drove 78 yards in nine plays after the opening kickoff to take a 7-0 lead on Dickerson's sweep of right end less than five minutes into the game.

Jack Trudeau, starting in place of injured quarterback Gary Hogeboom, completed three of four passes for 32 yards in the drive and Dickerson, who left the game after scoring, gained 30 yards on five carries against the Bucs' No. 1 defense.

Bears.....20
Dolphins.....17

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Tomczak's 25-yard touchdown pass to Jim Thornton and Eric Starr's 1-yard replay touchdown Saturday night rallied the Chicago Bears to a 20-17 exhibition victory over the Miami Dolphins.

Tomczak directed a 72-yard touchdown drive to open the second half. He completed passes of 15 yards to Brad Muster and 24 yards to Thornton before hitting Thornton with the touchdown pass to tie the game 14-14.

Miami wide receiver James Pruitt scored a pair of touchdowns in the first half on passes of 14 yards from Dan Marino and 24 yards from Ron Jaworski.

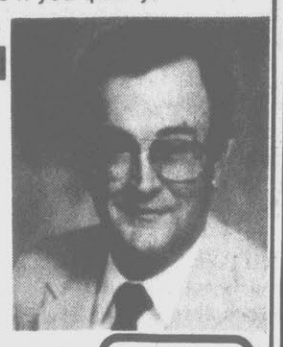

Starr, a rookie out of North Carolina, appeared to be stopped at the goal line but television replays showed he had broken the plane of the goal line and the Bears were awarded the touchdown, putting them ahead. Tim Lashar's extra point attempt was kicked into a pile of players.

The Dolphins lost the services of linebacker Hugh Green, who suffered a broken left rib in the third quarter and will be out for three weeks.

Wrigley's Promise Set To Be Broken

CHICAGO (AP) — Phillip K. Wrigley promised this day would never come, but Monday night it does.

Seventy-two years after the Chicago Cubs set up shop in a turn-of-the-century, working-class neighborhood and began a love-hate affair that has taken a turn for the worse, night baseball comes to Wrigley Field.

Two decades after the late heir to the chewing-gum fortune promised day baseball forever, the lights come on.

This long day's journey into night picked up speed in 1981 when the Tribune Co. began calling the shots down some of baseball's most venerated halls and guaranteed the good people of Wrigleyville they would see the lights.

"For seven years, we won every battle (over lights) against one of the most powerful corporations around," said Mike Quigley, vice president of Citizens United for Baseball in the Sunshine, the community group that spearheaded opposition to the night games.

"We won in the City Council, in the (state) Legislature and on every referendum that was held. We stretched dollars, we used smoke and mirrors, we always found a way to pull another rabbit out of the hat.

"But they only had to win once," he said, "and the lights go on."

They go on five decades after the Cincinnati Reds played the first major league game under the lights of now-defunct Crosley Field, and 40 years after the Detroit Tigers became the last team to join baseball's fraternity of the illumined.

And like some concrete dowager with a bundle to spend after a divorce, the City Council vote in February lifting the ban on lights has whetted Wrigley Field's appetite for the nightlife — seven times this first season, 18 night games a season after that through the year 2002.

"It doesn't feel like the end of an era," said Ernie Banks, the Cub great who hit 290 of his 512 career home runs at Wrigley.

"When I first came into the majors, nobody ever believed the Dodgers or the Giants would go to California, or that Jackie Robinson would play in the big leagues. But they did.

"And in my advanced years, I've learned that change is a big part of life," added Banks, "and that baseball has learned to deal with it much better than almost any other part of our society.

"Wrigley Field is still there, after all, and it's still one of the most beautiful spots on this earth," concluded Banks. "The only difference is now we have lights."

There is a sense of history about to be made inside, hysteria over what is likely to happen outside. And the neighborhood caught in the middle, ambivalent about this latest twist of fate, prays resignedly: "Let there be light. Don't let it be too bright."

The sermon is repeated in frame houses on narrow streets, in the courtyards and lobbies of rennovated apartment buildings, in the toney little stores and restaurants that followed a wave of gentrification up Chicago's sparkling lakefront, and in the small, sleepy shops where the constant rumble of elevated trains has come to be regarded as so much background noise.

All the way, in fact, into the boardrooms of Tribune Co., the media conglomerate whose holdings include the city's largest-circulation daily newspaper and WGN-TV, the superstation that carries Cubs games around the nation.

"Wrigley Field has been here for three-quarters of a century and I think everybody who moved here recognized that it was here. And everybody who wanted us to stay here recognized this was the only equitable solution," said Don Grenesko, the Cubs' executive vice president and for most of the last four years, the ballclub's articulate point man in the fight for lights.

"Anytime you bring 35,000 people into an area, there's going to be problems — we've never stuck our heads in the sand and pretended otherwise.

"But we've always cultivated a family atmosphere at the ballpark. We've cut off beer sales and taken other steps to make sure our fans behave responsibly — during and after the games," he added.

"And we're taking every measure imaginable to make sure we don't exacerbate that with the night games."

They have done even more.

Wrigley Field will have just six banks of lights, three each atop the left- and right-field decks. The 1,500-watt floodlights sit atop 26 fabricated steel panels, the latticework mirroring the arches found throughout the aging structure.

Most important, though, the lights may have saved ivy-covered Wrigley Field itself, baseball's most famous anachronism — built in 1914 to house the Chicago Whales of the short-lived Federal League — and one of the most magical shrines in all of American sports.

It was there, in 1933, where Babe Ruth was supposed to have pointed to a spot in the right-field bleachers where he would park Charlie Root's baseball, then proceeded to drive it there; there, in 1938, where Gabby Hartnett hit his famous "Homer in the Gloamin,'" a two-out, ninth-inning, pennant-winning shot into the darkness; there, in 1917, where Fred Toney of the Reds and Hippo Vaughn of the Cubs pitched a double no-hitter that ended with Cincinnati winning 1-0 in the tenth on two hits.

"It's easy to see why people have formed such a radical attachment to the place," said National League President Bart Giammatti, who was on hand July 25, the night the lights went on the first time for a Cubs charity benefit and practice.

"And this should put to rest the anxiety that the Cubs will play elsewhere. It's a moment to celebrate. To preserve the best of the past," he added, "you have to be willing to change."

And yet, people who worked while the Cubs played, who came home at dinnertime and to deal with the residue of boisterous fans — litter and clogged streets — now will have to deal with the boisterous fans themselves.

The same fans that former manager Lee Elia, in a legendary tirade, once suggested should "go out and get a job and find out what it's like to make a (deleted) living. ...

"Eighty percent of the (deleted) world's out making a (deleted) living," continued Elia, who in a nice bit of irony will return Monday night at the helm of the Phillies. "The other 15 come out here."

And so it must seem still to the neighborhood merchants who built businesses large and small catering to the early-morning or late-night crowd, and now will be forced to work around a new clock.

"Here we've spent the last couple of years persuading people that our area is safe — that they won't be mugged or something," said Bob Chaney, co-owner of the Music Box Theater.

"Now they'll think of our area as a place you can't park," he added. "Just how do you go about bringing up a neighborhood in this city?"

Ironically, Wrigleyville's steady transition during the 1980s from bust to boom, from a community of blue-collar families to white-collar singles, may have laid the groundwork for its defeat on the lights issue earlier this year.

A state statute in 1982 and a city ordinance the following year breezed through their respective legislative chambers, helped along by sympathetic lawmakers who wrote noise-pollution measures specific enough to allow night-time contests to continue at the city's two other outdoor stadiums — Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox; and Soldier Field, den of the National Football League's Chicago Bears.

Flush with victory after winning the NL East in 1984, the Cubs went to court the following year to repeal both laws, claiming the club was "tried, condemned and convicted" of operating a public nuisance before being given a chance to defend itself.

The team also cited baseball's contract with the television networks requiring some night games during post-season play and a warning from Commissioner Peter Ueberroth the previous December that "drastic action" was in the offing unless the team resolved the problem of night baseball.

But Cook County Circuit Judge Richard Curry's memorable March 1985 decision, interspersing lyrics from the song, "Take Me Out To The Ballgame," upheld the constitutionality of both laws and concluded on this light-hearted note: "Justice is a southpaw and the Cubs just don't hit lefties!"

Six months later, the state Supreme Court affirmed the ruling, and almost immediately, threats the team would leave Wrigley Field began issuing forth with greater regularity.

Few people took them seriously at first, especially since the Cubs were in fourth place in the standings and nose-diving at the time then-General Manager Dallas Green suggested the team might take its post-season dates somewhere else, like St. Louis.

But the tide turned gradually, helped along in no small part by the power and prestige of the Tribune Co., which one week before the City Council vote in February labeled the aldermen still opposed to lights "boneheads" and "political lightweights."

And with city officials waving studies that put the team's economic impact at between $80 million and $120 million annually, Chicago's politicians fell into line.

"I don't know that there was a turning point as such," said Grenesko, "but during the entire time I worked on this, CUBS did a bang-up job getting everyone to believe they spoke for the community.

"They were the underdogs until the laws passed, but once we got the chance to make our case, once people saw that we were an asset to this city, too ... once people began to see what the alternatives were, people viewed this matter a little differently."

The state statute remains on the books, and while few people believe it ever was effective enough to prevent night baseball at Wrigley in the first place, CUBS will be monitoring decibel levels at the games and may put it to a test.

The group is also talking about public nuisance lawsuits and a referendum on the November ballot to vote dry the precinct Wrigley Field sits in, among other measures.

"You tell me that a last-place ballclub that sold 2.4 million tickets last year needs additional revenue," said Quigley, "and I'm reminded of what P.K. Wrigley said when they told him to put in lights in the late 1960s — 'It's not night baseball we need, it's winning baseball.'"

The Real Crash

Borrowed Name Interrupts Quiet Retirement For Davis

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Lawrence "Crash" Davis was enjoying his retirement in North Carolina until a movie director asked permission to use his name for one of his characters in an upcoming feature. Life hasn't been the same since.

Crash Davis is the name of Kevin Costner's character in the hit movie "Bull Durham." In the movie, Costner is a catcher trying to keep his career alive and at the same time play nursemaid to a fireballing rookie pitcher. The real Davis, 69 and looking like he can still hit a baseball, enjoyed his notoriety as a second baseman at Duke and in a brief career with the Philadelphia Athletics in the 1940s.

"Back in my heyday, I got a lot of recognition," Davis said in an interview. "But never, never in my wildest dreams ..."

Both the movie's "Davis" and the real Davis spent time with the Durham Bulls. However, while Costner's character was released before getting his chance at stardom, Davis was an all-star in the Carolina League, setting a record for doubles in a season with 50 in 1948.

It was that listing in the Carolina League guide that led director Ron Shelton to the idea that "Crash Davis" would be the perfect name for his fictional character. The real Davis was shocked, but it was nothing compared to the surprise he provided when he first met the production company at a Durham motel.

"All these people jumped up when I said my name was Crash Davis," he said "You would have thought I'd been resurrected."

During the shooting of the movie in Durham, Davis met actress Susan Sarandon, who eventually became Costner's love interest in the movie, and Tim Robbins, who was the rookie pitcher who drew Sarandon's initial attention. But the real Davis hasn't met the man who took his name in the film. And, at the premiere, Davis wanted to be sure everyone knew who he was.

"They chauffeured me down there, stopped traffic, you know how they do it," he said. "I was in awe. I hadn't had that sort of attention since I hit a home run.

"When I went to the premiere, I wore a little tag I made up myself: 'Kevin Costner is not Crash Davis.'"

A native of Gastonia, N.C., Davis was a player on the local 1935 American Legion team that won the Little World Series. He went back to his hometown in 1954 and coached the team to a runner-up spot in the series.

He went to Duke as a second baseman and climbed the ladder to captain, hitting .330 for his career and leading the Blue Devils to a Southern Conference championship.

Davis' coach was Jack Coombs, and his connections with Philadelphia helped him get a spot on the A's roster. But World War II interrupted his major league career and the Navy was the next stop for his baseball career. In Norfolk, he played on the naval base team against Pee Wee Reese and Dom DiMaggio. In one game, he watched some 19-year-old hit a 450-foot home run. It was Yogi Berra.

After World War II, Davis returned to the A's, but he was cut in spring training. He returned to North Carolina, caught on with the Bulls and was a three-time all star. His baseball career ended in 1952 at Raleigh, and he returned to Gastonia to coach the high school to three state titles.

Davis does look back on his career and, like his movie character image, wonders if he might have been able to last longer in "the show."

"I was a great fielder. I could hit the ball," Davis said. "It was just that quickness you need to be a great athlete." He blames the lack of speed to an ankle injury suffered while playing a pickup basketball game.

In 1956, Davis went to Burlington Industries, where he worked for the next 30 years in personnel development. Except for an occasional outing for local youth baseball, he had put the game away in his scrapbooks.

Late in 1986, Davis got a telephone call from Beth Semans, the daughter of Mary Duke Trent Biddle Semans, the granddaughter of Benjamin Duke, who helped change Trinity College to Duke University. She told Davis that Shelton wanted to use his name in the movie.

Actually, the nickname goes back to the 1930s, when Davis played for his American Legion team. In the comic strip "Freckles," there was a character named "Crash Davis." A sportswriter picked up on it and it stayed with him.

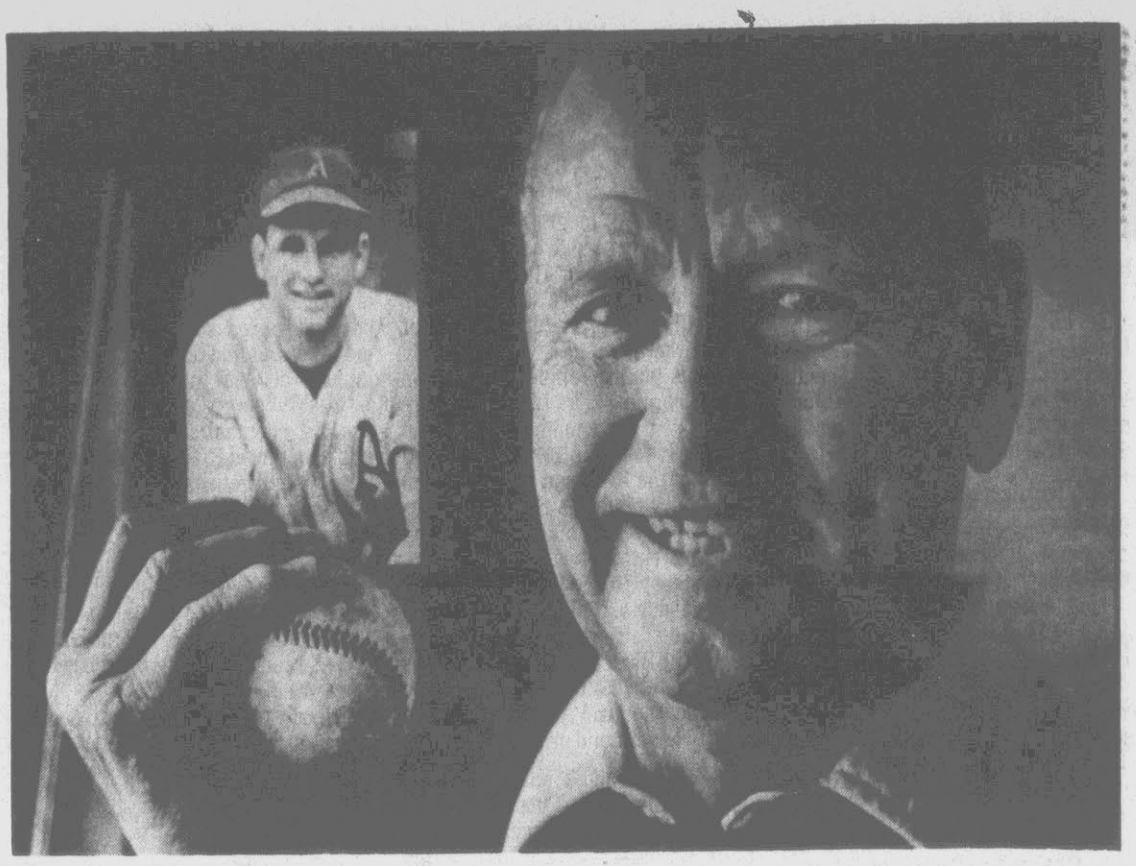

"No one calls me Lawrence," he jokes. "Some place, I have to say my name is L.C. Davis."

Some of his friends have suggested that me might want to stick with his initials because of the profanity that spices the movie's dialogue — and the sex that heats up the screen. Davis said he has received mail from some friends displeased with the language and nudity, and his two daughters have asked him if that's the way it was when he played baseball.

"I thought it was sort of funny. It was sort of down to earth and it sort of depicted things in the raw," he said.

"The things that 'Nuke' (rookie pitcher in the movie) was doing like wearing a garter belt, that might be a little bit far fetched," Davis said. "I think he took some things and embellished them, make it theatrical. It's funnier that way; don't we do that in life."

There was time for fun in Davis' career, like the time when he hid a ball in his pants pocket, let a ground ball go through the infield, then plucked the hidden ball out of his pocket and threw out the base runner.

They Said It

"It's not so much tension that I feel in the clubhouse, but it's just not that friendly, outgoing type of clubhouse. I sat in the trainer's room for 15 to 20 minutes after Wednesday night's game. There were three or four of us in there, and two words weren't said. I mean nothing. It's hard to have cohesiveness when no one's talking to each other." — George Brett on the state of the Royals.

Bruce's Lifestyle Changed By Professional Ranks

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Aundray Bruce, who once ran through the athletic dorm at Auburn University dressed as "Rambo" and waiving a machete, claims he has toned down his act with the Atlanta Falcons.

"People don't realize that I did those things in college to keep myself going," said Bruce, the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft last spring. "I'm really not the person I portray."

He sees himself as a man of many talents.

"I can play from various positions," Bruce said after a workout at the Falcons' training camp. "I can play outside (linebacker), I can play defensive end. I can cover backs, I can cover receivers. And when the time is right, I can push in the button for 'Operation Pass Rush' and we'll have some fun with the quarterback."

Chuck Clausen, the Falcons' linebacker coach who has worked at the pro and college level for nearly 20 years, said Bruce is "the finest athlete I've ever coached." He plans to use Bruce at both outside linebacker and defensive end.

Bruce has no doubts that he can make an immediate impact.

"I didn't feel there was a defensive player coming out of college who could do the things I can do," he said.

His progress, however, has been slowed by a knee injury which has kept him on the sideline for a couple of weeks and forced him to miss Saturday night's exhibition opener at New England.

"I've been playing football since the seventh grade and this is the most serious injury I've ever had," the Montgomery, Ala., native said. "It happened at a time that I guess was advantageous since we're not into the season yet."

The Falcons' decision to pick Bruce No. 1 surprised some people. There were questions about his dedication to football, and he readily admits that he didn't get serious about the sport until his junior season.

Ayden Golf and Country Club

Ayden Golf and Country Club participated in the Longest Day of Golf for the American Cancer Society this past week.

Four golfers played from dawn to dusk with members of the club donating various amounts on a per hole basis. The four were Trae Wilson, Chris Brick, Brian Heath and Todd Buck, all former members of the Ayden-Grifton High School golf team. They began play at 6:20 a.m. and completed play 14 hours later at 8:20, having played 117 holes.

They raised over $400 for the American Cancer Society.

Ayden is holding its Member-Guest Tournament this weekend.

Faldo Is Tied For B&H Lead

FULFORD, England (AP) — Nick Faldo and Peter Baker both shot third-round 66s Saturday to share a two-stroke lead after three rounds of the $450,000 Benson and Hedges International golf tournament.

The two Englishmen will partner each other on Sunday, even at 14-under-par 202 and two shots up on their nearest rival, Mark McNulty of Zimbabwe, who is second with 204 after a 68 Saturday.

Baker, at 20 years old one of the brightest prospects on the European golf circuit, might have had a two-shot lead on his own but for his own sportsmanship.

On the first green he noted that Faldo was replacing his ball on the wrong spot and called out, "Don't forget to move your marker."

Tournament director Andy McFee said that had Faldo putted from the wrong place he would have incurred a two-stroke penalty.

Faldo said, "I think I would have realized I was putting from the wrong place. Peter and my caddie both spotted it at the same time. Everybody does that sort of thing on the Tour. We are always nice to each other."

Baker, who has been a professional for two years after making his Walker Cup debut in 1985, said he relished the prospect of his last round battle against Faldo.

"I stayed with him today so there is no reason why I can't do it again," he said.

They put on a scintilating display for the vast gallery, especially over the last 10 holes. Between them they had 13 birdies in this stretch, both coming home in 31. Faldo missed the chance of a one-stroke lead when he three-putted the last, missing from only a yard.

"It was a great battle between the pair of us," said Faldo. "Peter kept holing the long ones and I had to try and follow him in. We birdied every hole but one of the last ten."

Baker admitted that he was nervous standing alongside the former Open champion and that he played badly for eight holes.

But, after dropping two shots in the first four, he birdied eight of the next 11 holes to take over as the new leader.

The key shot was played at the 12th where Baker drove into the trees. He had a gap of only three feet and had to keep his ball under branches only five feet high. Somehow, he managed to flick his six-iron shot about 120 yards over a bank, the ball pulling up only 12 feet from the hole.

Overnight leader Christy O'Connor Jr.of Ireland dropped four shots behind the leaders with a 71 that included an untidy seven at the 13th while U.S. Masters championship Sandy Lyle of Scotland birdied three of the last four holes and also is at 206.

Another Irishman, Des Smyth, scored the day's low round of 65 for a share of fourth place with 205.

Norman To Return From Wrist Injury

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Greg Norman, who has been sidelined since the U.S. Open with a wrist injury, returns to action this week at the 70th PGA National Championship, the last of the year's Big Four events.

"I'm very anxious to get back. I'm chomping at the bit to start playing again," Norman said.

The return of Norman, who has not competed since withdrawing from the Open June 17, and the presence of British Open champion Seve Ballesteros, offsets the absense of Masters champion Sandy Lyle in the 150-man field that begins play Thursday at the 7,015 yard, par 71 Oak Tree Golf Club.

Norman had planned to return to competition at the British Open last month, but he found the injury had not healed sufficiently and he was forced to withdraw.

"I've been climbing the walls," he said of the enforced two-month break, probably the longest of his globe-trotting career.

Norman, a transplanted Australian, began practicing at his home in Florida last week and said he now is able "to play without pain.

"I'm very excited about the prospect of getting back at it," said Norman, the outstanding figure in world golf in 1986 and winner of five international titles this season.

Lyle, the leading money-winner on the United States PGA Tour this year and holder of three 1988 American titles, withdrew last week.

PGA officials said only that Lyle's management group had telephoned, withdrawing him from the tournament. No reason was given.

The other major foreign figures — who have helped over-shadow American efforts in the last couple of years and have prompted an "us vs. them" theme in golf's major events — all are included in the chase for a winner's share of $160,000 from the total purse of $1 million.

Chief among them is a revitalized Ballesteros, the Spaniard who scored his third British Open triumph last month.

Ballesteros, for several seasons mired in the golfing doldrums, said that victory gave him renewed confidence and enthusiasm and proved his point by winning the Scandanavian Open two weeks ago.

Also on hand are Nick Faldo of England, Ian Woosnam of Wales, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and David Frost of South Africa.

The American contingent is led by U.S. Open title-holder Curtis Strange, defending champion Larry Nelson, Lanny Wadkins, Chip Beck, Ben Crenshaw, Paul Azinger and three hometown boys.

Those are Scott Verplank, Bob Tway and Doug Tewell, all members of the large colony of touring pros who have made Edmond their home and Oak Tree their home course.

The deeply-talented Verplank began to fulfill the bright promise of his extraordinary amateur career when he scored his first professional victory last month in the Buick Open.

Tway, the 1986 PGA champion and Player of the Year, and the veteran Tewell both have had consistently strong performances in recent weeks and are strengthened by great local knowledge of the extremely-difficult Pete Dye course.

Strange, Wadkins and Beck all are multiple winners this season. Crenshaw has won once and has a series of high finishes and, like the veteran Nelson, often plays his best in the Grand Slam events.

Some other leading American contenders include Mark Calcavecchia, Tom Kite, Payne Stewart, Joey Sindelar, Fred Couples and Mark McCumber.

Hambletonian Winner
Armbro Goal, driven by John Campbell, passes the finish line to win the Hambletonian one-mile trot at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., Saturday afternoon. (AP Laserphoto)

Campbell Winds Up Back In The Winner's Circle

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Driver John Campbell had the most horse for the second straight Hambletonian at The Meadowlands Saturday, but he didn't have all the answers.

Campbell, who won the prestigious race for 3-year-old trotters last year with Mack Lobell in straight heats, won it in straight heats again with Armbro Goal, and was asked to compare the two colts.

"I won't compare the two," said Campbell, who drove Mack Lobell to a world record of 1:56 on a half-mile track at Saratoga Harness Raceway Friday night. "It's an unfair question. They're both good in their own right, and each has proved themselves many times over."

Armbro Goal was much the best Saturday as he dominated 12 other trotters. Especially impressed was Tomas Bertmark of Sweden, who last weekend purchased Armbro Gold for $2.5 million, although the colt will continue to race this year in the names of James Plate, Paul Ryan and Michael Cagiano of New Jersey and New York.

When it was mentioned that his expensive purchase looked like a good one, Bertmark replied, "It looked like a good one before the race. This was gravy — lots of it."

Armbro Goal led almost every step of the way in both heats in winning the $1,156,800 Hambletonian.

Campbell became the first driver to win consecutive Hambletonians since the late Billy Haughton did it with Steve Lobell and Green Speed in 1976-77.

Armbro Goal raced the fastest first half-mile in the 63-year history of the Hambletonian in the second heat after trotting the fastest opening quarter-mile in the history of the race in the first heat.

Armbro Goal won the second heat in 1:55 2-5 after an opening-heat victory in 1:54 3-5. The Hambletonian record is 1:53 3-5, set by Mack Lobell.

Armbro Goal's victory also snapped a long Hambletonian drought for Swedish trainer Jan Johnson. Johnson failed to win with a total of 24 starters in eight previous Hambletonians. Johnson also started Supergill Saturday, and that colt finished sixth in the first heat and fourth in the second.

Armbro Goal took the lead shortly after the start in the second heat and led the field around the first turn. Rule The Wind was second, just off the lead, with a half-mile to go. Then, on the final turn, he faded and with a quarter-mile left, Sherpa Kosmos moved into second behind Armbro Goal.

But no one could challenge the son of Speedy Crown through the stretch and he won by 4¼ lengths over Firm Tribute, with Bolla another neck back.

In the first heat, Armbro Goal took the lead shortly after the start and held it for a three-length triumph over Rule The Wind with Firm Tribute another 1¾ lengths back.

Rule The Wind was trying to become the first trotter to win the Hambletonian in his first paramutuel start as a 3-year-old. Because of a joint problem in his right hind leg, he raced with no rear shoes.

Firm Tribute, considered Armbro Goal's top challenger, started in the second tier in the first heat and fought his way into third place. However, he was unable to take advantage of his No. 3 post position in the second heat.

Armbro Goal paid $3.20, $2.60 and $2.20 in winning the first heat and $2.60, $2.20 and $2.10 for his second-heat victory before a crowd of 34,212 on a hot, muggy day. He earned $578,400. All 13 trotters were supposed to return for the second heat, but Defiant One, Grundy's Cohnection and Jermyn Street were scratched.

If Armbro Goal had not won the second heat, there would have been a two-horse raceoff to determine the Hambletonian champion. At the top of the home stretch of the second heat, it was obvious there would be no raceoff.

The complete order of finish after Firm Tribute in the first heat was Bolla, Huggie Hanover, Supergill, Somollison, Petri Kosmos, Rising Chief, Grundy's Cohnection, Sherpa Kosmos and Jermyn Street.

After Bolla in the second heat were Supergill, Sherpa Kosmos, Somollison, Rule The Wind, Petri Kosmos, Rising Chief and Huggie Hanover.

Charlotte's New Coliseum Is Still Lacking A Name

CHARLOTTE (AP) — There are several loose ends still to tie before the dedication of the Charlotte's new arena next week, including its official name, officials say.

From the start, it has been called the Charlotte Coliseum, but that's also the name of the city's current sports arena. The city council is expected to vote later this month on a proposal to change the name of the new coliseum to the Charlotte Crown.

With less than a week to go before its coming out party, the media was given a sneak preview Friday of the new 25,000-seat coliseum, including the 8-foot-high shower heads in the Charlotte Hornets locker room and the 30,000-watt sound system.

"We're here to celebrate a facility, one that is undoubtably one of the best in the country," the facility's manager, Steve Camp, said as he led reporters and photographers on a tour of the still unfinished $52 million building.

As the tour proceeded, workers were busy washing windows, cleaning floors, installing equipment and painting walls in preparation for its dedication on Thursday.

"As you can see we have some cleanup to do, but we'll be ready," Camp said.

The first sports event at the coliseum will be Friday, when the pre-Olympic Carolinas Invitational begins. The coliseum will be the site of men's and women's basketball as well as a gymnasitics exhibition featuring members of the 1988 U.S. Olympic Team during the three-day event.

On Aug. 19, Frank Sinatra will give the first concert.

The facility, which was funded by a $47.4 million bond issue four years ago, will be the home of the Hornets, who will be making their NBA debut later this year. The Hornets teal uniforms designed by North Carolina native Alexander Julian won't clash with the rows of seats of the same color.

At a news conference Friday, Camp stressed that the 465,000-square-foot facility located on the west side of the city can accomodate a variety of events besides basketball, including tennis, hockey, ice shows, tractor pulls, conventions and concerts.

Some 25,000 free tickets already have been distributed for the Aug. 11 grand opening celebration, which will feature marching bands and special guest performers. Dr. Billy Graham will be on hand to dedicate the building.

For those people who didn't get tickets to that event, there will be an open house at the arena on the weekend of Aug. 20-21.

The coliseum has six luxury skyboxes and an eight-sided video scoreboard with 200,000 lights. TV monitors are located near the concession areas so fans won't miss any of the action while waiting on line for hot dogs and popcorn.

Camp said the coliseum will be the first one in the country with a basketball floor with interchangable panels. The design will enable workers to change team logos whenever area college teams play a home game at the coliseum.

Outside, there are four parking lots with a total of 8,000 spaces that feed into a new reversible-lane road system designed to cut down on traffic jams. The direction of the traffic lanes can be controlled from inside the building, Camp said, so more lanes can be opened before and after events.

Wetlands Hunts Scheduled

The Roanoke River Wetlands in northeastern North Carolina will open to special permit hunting this fall, according to N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission officials.

The Commission's Division of Wildlife Management will issue permits through a computer selection process for hunting white-tailed deer, waterfowl, wild turkey, raccoon and small game.

The schedule will offer two bow and arrow deer hunts set for Sept. 30 through Oct. 1 and Oct. 7-8. A two-day muzzleloader hunt on Oct. 14-15 is scheduled. The gun hunting dates for deer are Oct. 28-29, Nov. 25-26, Dec. 9-10 and Dec. 30-31. A limited number of trapping permits will be issued for Jan. 21-31, 1989.

The Commission has acquired five tracts of land totaling 9,108 acres that make up the Roanoke River Wetlands. They include the Conine Island, Company Swamp, Speller-Outlaw, Broadneck and Urquhart tracts. Hunting for deer, wild turkey and small game will be allowed on all five tracts of land, but waterfowl hunting will be permitted only on Conine Island.

The schedule for waterfowl hunts provides for one-day hunts only. Those dates are the opening day of the October season, opening day of the November season and on Wednesdays and Saturdays during January. Those hunts will last from one half hour before sunrise until 1 p.m.

Small game hunting will be allowed on all tracts of land. Authorized hunters participating in deer and waterfowl hunts may also take small game. Small game hunting dates will be Dec. 3, 17 and 24.

These tracts of land are wilderness areas and hunters will be required to furnish all of their own equipment and be responsible for transportation to the hunting area. Access to Broadneck, Speller-Outlaw and Urquhart tracts is limited to boat travel on the Roanoke River from Hamilton or Williamston boating access areas.

Hunters and trappers must have the required state licenses, including the game lands use license, in addition to the special permits to be issued by the Commission. Waterfowl hunters must have both the new state waterfowl license and the federal duck stamp. Lifetime license holders are not required to buy a state waterfowl license, which costs $5.

Sportsmen may apply for the permits by writing to the Division of Wildlife Management, N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, and requesting an application. The address is 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611. The deadline for applications to be submitted is Sept. 1.

Sportsman's Show Needs Sponsors

The first annual North Carolina Wildlife and Sportsman's Show, to be held Sept. 17-18 in New Bern, is seeking sponsors.

The show will include exhibitions of wildlife artwork from more than 100 artists. The exhibits, featuring sculpture, paintings, photography and prints, will be held in historic buildings in downtown New Bern.

Sponsorships for the event are being solicited from local and regional businesses. Sponsors will receive recognition and gifts for their participation.

A portion of the show's proceeds will benefit Keep America Beautiful, Ducks Unlimited and the N.C. Wildlife Federation. Interested businesses may call the New Bern Area Chamber of Commerce at 637-2111.

Fisheries Meetings

The N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries is conducting a series of public meetings along the coast so that "fishermen can speak their minds and give the Division input as to the concerns of the fishing community," according to William T. Hogarth, director.

The schedule of meetings follows:

Aug. 15, 8 p.m. — Room 305, New Hanover Courthouse, Wilmington.

Aug. 16, 2 p.m. — Joslyn Hall, Carteret Community College, Morehead City.

Aug. 17, 8 p.m. — Kermit E. White Continuing Education Building, State University, Elizabeth City.

Aug. 18, 8 p.m. — Hyde County Courthouse, Swanquarter.

State Record Set

The N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission has confirmed a new state record for shellcracker. Ronald Sweet of Hiddenite caught a four-pound, six-ounce fish on June 12 at Lookout Shoals Lake near Hickory. He was using an orange rooster tail lure.

Pungo Refuge Deer Hunting

Pungo National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County will open to archery deer hunting during 1988 in accordance with the state archery season and regulations.

Bow hunting permits are not required. Also, special either-sex deer hunts with shotguns or primitive weapons will be held Oct. 11, 13, 15, 17, 19 and 21. More information may be obtained by writing Pungo NWR, Route 1, Box N-2, Swanquarter, N.C. 27885.

Old Shoes A Key Rig

By BRUCE WHITMAN
The (Harrisburg) Patriot-News

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Searching for the perfect rig to fish the river this hot and dry summer?

Chances are you already have one — or rather, two.

Look in the closet, or maybe under the cellar steps, and it's a good bet you'll find an old pair of sneakers. Presto, you're ready.

Those sneaks will take you where you have to go in order to find top-water smallmouth action, jigging joys and even baitfishing fun. Throw on a pair of cut-off jeans, or the ugliest shorts you own, and you've become a lean, mean fishin' machine.

Leave the bass boat, the trolling motors and the electronics at home. You won't need any of that high-priced gear. It wouldn't hold up where you're going, anyway.

Equip yourself with an ultra-light rod-and-reel combination and a packet of plugs and jig heads, then head for one of those river sections you've always wanted to fish, but were afraid to take your boat into due to low water.

When you get to the water's edge, don't stop. Just put on your old sneakers and wade right in.

If you're worried about going in over your head in a deep hole, consider wearing a personal flotation device jacket. One with pockets to hold lure and other incidentals is a good choice.

Expect to scrape your legs and stub a toe or two. The rocky river bottom can be as slippery as an ice-covered sidewalk. You'll soon get the hang of crabbing along. Slow but sure is the best approach.

Some waders add a rubber inner tube to their sneakers-and-shorts outfit. Commercial float tubes are also available.

Wading provides the river fisherman with nearly the same experience often enjoyed by trout anglers. You're casting, retrieving and, with luck, playing your quarry from a fish-eye's point of view. It's much different than being perched on a seat in a bass boat.

No need for a depth finder when wading — unless you have no idea how far it is from your waist down to your toes. Water temperature sensor? You're it. Locate a cool flow of water among the currents, and chances are you'll locate fish at the same time.

Operating costs will be low, and maintenance limited. Throw the sneakers and shorts into the same washer load. Once dry, they — and you — will be ready for the next outing.

License Sales Hit High Mark

By The Associated Press

For the first time in four years, the sale of hunting licenses increased last year.

But the fact that 15.82 million licenses were sold, up 46,000 from the previous year, does not say there are about 16 million hunters in the United States, said Bob Delfay, executive director of the National Shooting Sports Foundation.

License sales generated more than $345 million, an all-time record, for state game and fish agencies, according to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service figures.

License sales figures, Delfay said, indicate only little more than half the country's hunting population.

"What few people seem to understand or address, is that there are actually more than 25 million, probably 26 million, hunters in the country, but they don't all hunt every year," Delfay said in an interview.

One year, a hunter will say, "There's a reason I don't hunt this year, but next year I will," he said.

"We have research that indicates that 26 million people hunted in 1986, or in 1987, but only 18 million hunted in 1982. Only about 14 million hunted in both 1986 and 1987.

"That shows you the degree to which people come in and out of the sport," he said.

The biggest reason for the annual change, he speculated "without surveying every state," is probably changes in game populations.

"If game populations are particularly good one year, a little more than the average will buy their license and go out hunting, or if the weather is good, more will go out hunting.

"And with the exception of waterfowl, game populations are excellent, big game particularly."

Populations of deer and turkey are growing nationside.

The license sales figures, he said, show Texas has ousted Pennsylvania as the nation's No. 1 hunting state.

There were 1.19 million Pennsylvania hunting licenses sold in Texas last year, compared with 1.17 million in Pennsylvania, according to FWS statistics. Michigan was third with 926,329 paid licenses.

Trading Scandal Focuses On Use Of News Tips

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Insider trading on information purloined from upcoming issues of Business Week has raised troubling questions that go to the heart of the relationship between financial markets and influential news reports.

The Business Week scandal also illustrates the problems of the securities industry in detecting suspicious trades, despite its sophisticated surveillance gear.

Although Business Week has been faulted by some for not disclosing longtime suspicions of insider trading on its "Inside Wall Street" columns, lawyers agree the biggest U.S. business weekly bears no legal liability for what happened and took sincere action to stop the thefts.

But the magazine's policy of reporting on little-known, thinly traded stocks — a key element of the scandal — has aroused concern that Business Week may have been an unwitting accomplice of the insider traders.

"It does make the situation more troubling," said Sam Scott Miller, a securities lawyer in New York. "But it's always easy to judge what the right thing to do was after it's clear what was going on."

Trades at at least two dozen securities firms are under investigation in the scandal, in which some employees of R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co., which prints Business Week, peddled issues to brokers before the magazine reached the public.

The brokers then bought stocks described in "Inside Wall Street" and sold them later for profit, after other investors had read the column and purchased the stocks, thereby driving up the prices.

John Dierdorff, Business Week's managing editor, said the magazine is acutely aware of the potential impact on prices of offbeat stocks described in "Inside Wall Street" but has to balance that concern against the news value of telling readers about interesting situations.

"We do not tip stocks," Dierdorff said. "If you actually make recommendations, you'd have to get yourself a license from one of the regulatory bodies."

The magazine's aim in the column, Dierdorff said, is "to report what some smart guys on Wall Street are doing."

At least seven people have lost their jobs because of alleged roles in the scandal. No charges have been filed, but the Securities and Exchange Commission and law enforcement agencies in at least two states are investigating.

The use of information not available to the public to buy and sell stocks is insider trading and is a felony under federal securities law.

Business Week said its editors had suspected leaks of the column in early 1987.

In the latest issue, distributed Friday, Business Week said it first tried to plug the suspected leaks by tightening security, restricting access to "Inside Wall Street" during editing and reminding printers of the need for confidentiality. The problem appeared to abate until this spring.

Editor in Chief Stephen Shepard defended the magazine's decision not to alert the SEC, saying regulators may have demanded disclosure of confidential news sources as part of any investigation.

Moreover, Business Week had no obligation to notify the commission, in the opinion of its general counsel, Robert N. Landes. Other lawyers agreed, especially since the magazine had determined none of its staff was implicated.

"When you go talk to the cops, the first thing the cops do is chase the people who reported the incident," said Stephen R. Miller, a securities lawyer in Philadelphia. "So you're a little wary and want to be sure you know the guy who did it."

As in many insider trading cases, the key to finding the culprits is abnormal trading of the stocks in question. But even the most sophisticated technology used to track stock activity does not reveal more than simple hints.

Market surveillance computers at the major exchanges are designed to sound alarms when a stock breaks its historical price or volume pattern, an aberration called a "kickout."

In the Business Week case, more than two dozen stocks kicked out over a period of many months and were noticed by surveillance officials at the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange and National Association of Securities Dealers, which monitors over-the-counter trading.

But these officials said that trading patterns can be extremely difficult to detect, especially if the stocks have no apparent relationship or the kickouts occur irregularly.

Even if kickouts are traceable to a column in Business Week or some other publication, said Agnes Gautier, vice president of market surveillance at the NYSE, "Of necessity, you're talking about time and a number of issues. You have to see that before you say there's a problem here."

Analysts Expect Brady To Be Caretaker As Treasury Chief

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, displaying his usual unbridled optimism, welcomed his newest Cabinet choice, Nicholas Brady, to "what just might be the most active six months of our administration."

But analysts said they will be very much surprised if the New York investment banker serves as anything but a caretaker treasury secretary in the administration's closing months.

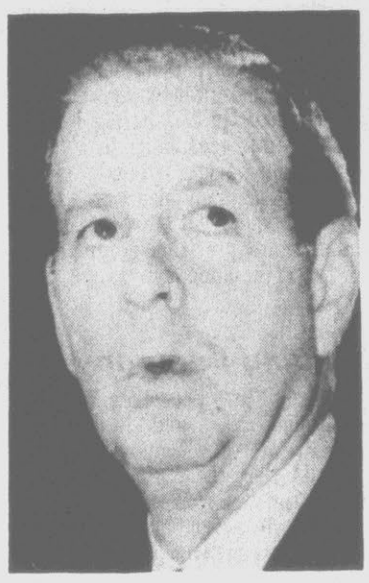

They said they expect no new policy initiatives and predicted that Brady's only task will be to make sure nothing derails the economy and jeopardizes George Bush's election chances.

Brady, co-chairman of Dillon, Read & Co., a Wall Street investment house, was nominated by Reagan on Friday to replace Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who is stepping down to take command of Bush's presidential campaign.

The president waited until after the financial markets had closed to make the announcement to minimize the impact. But Baker's impending resignation and Brady's selection had been open secrets for weeks and the markets had taken both in stride.

In fact, the dollar has been on a steady rise since the end of June, bolstered by good news on the U.S. trade deficit and better-than-expected American economic growth.

Further evidence of the good economic performance came on Friday with the government report that unemployment stood at 5.4 percent in July, up only slightly from the 14-year-low of 5.3 percent the month before.

JAMES A. BAKER III

NICHOLAS BRADY

Analysts said Brady's basic goal will be to make sure that the government doesn't do anything inadvertently to unsettle financial markets.

"The main objective is to keep things stable and prevent any mistakes that would look bad for the Bush campaign between now and November," said Michael Penzer, senior economist at Bank of America in San Francisco.

Because he served briefly as a senator from New Jersey, Brady is expected to win easy Senate confirmation, but he will not take office until mid-September at the earliest, after the required background checks and hearings are completed. Until he takes over, the Treasury will be run by M. Peter McPherson, the deputy secretary.

Brady is expected to be in place in time to represent the United States in late September at meetings of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund in West Berlin. The finance ministers of the world's seven largest industrial countries will also convene at that time to review developments since the Toronto economic summit.

However, those meetings had not been expected to feature any new initiatives even before Baker's departure. The Toronto summit in June was little more than a prolonged farewell for Reagan as the other world leaders bided their time waiting to see what the U.S. elections bring.

"The blunt fact is that nobody is particularly concerned about what this administration has to say. The world is waiting to see what the new administration does," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

There is always the chance that Brady will be called upon to deal with some unforeseen market crisis, similar to last year's October crash.

But analysts say that with his long background on Wall Street, Brady is well equipped to handle such an occurrence. In fact, Brady was the man the administration turned to after the Oct. 19 crash to head up a fact-finding group to recommend reforms.

The Brady commission called for major changes in the financial market regulatory structure, recommendations that were largely ignored by the free-market administration. However, Brady is not expected to try to change the administration's position on this issue.

The fact that Brady is unlikely to launch any new initiatives in the coming six months does not mean that there are not plenty of economic problems to be addressed by a new administration.

The biggest problem is the still huge federal budget deficit and the related U.S. trade deficit. The national debt more than doubled during Reagan's eight years in office and those huge borrowing needs helped to turn the United States into the world's largest debtor country.

That means that foreigners now own more in U.S. assets than Americans own overseas. Many economists believe this situation has left the U.S. economy extremely vulnerable to foreign investors. Unless the next administration makes substantial progress quickly in reducing the budget deficits, a loss of foreign confidence could trigger an economic slump, these analysts fear.

Brady could well be the man making those decisions. Just like Baker, he is a longtime friend of Bush and is the leading candidate to serve as Treasury secretary in a Bush administration.

If Bush does win the election, analysts said they would expect Brady to continue many of the economic initiatives launched by Baker, who won widespread praise during his 3½-year tenure for his initiatives to develop closer international economic coordination between the seven summit nations.

Reagan Reported Ready To Sign Trade Package

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is preparing to sign legislation to curb U.S. trade deficits with most of its tough enforcement features long gone, most of its benefits for key industries still intact and almost everybody happy with the end product.

"America is starting back," Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., declared Wednesday as the Senate gave 85-11 approval to the measure and sped it toward Reagan's desk and a guaranteed signature.

Bandwagon rhetoric swept the Senate, leaving in the dust a handful of critics bold enough to find flaws in the 1,000-page measure, some of whom grudgingly voted for the bill.

"Unfortunately, the bill is still wrongheaded," declared Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who voted for it nevertheless.

He proclaimed himself torn between what he regards as a lingering aura of protectionism and a provision that would repeal the 1980 windfall profits tax. He is a critic of both protectionism and the tax on oil industry earnings.

For a while, he said, he thought about cheering loudly for the bill and voting quietly against it. "On the other hand, I would have to admit that there would be a little hypocrisy in that," Gramm added.

He ended up voting for the measure, "but I do not want anybody to be confused that somehow I think this is a good bill."

As measured by the overwhelming majority of lawmakers, what protectionist features were once part of the bill are long gone.

Major provisions would streamline machinery under which the government imposes tariffs and quotas on imports to protect U.S. industries being damaged by imports and retaliate against international trade violations.

But authority to take such steps already exists. New provisions would require industries benefiting from import restraints to show that they could become competitive and thus could actually make such protection harder to get.

State Revokes Texasgulf Permit

RALEIGH (AP) — State environmental officials have revoked a permit for Texasgulf Inc. because the company did not fully inform the state of air pollutants emitted by its fertilizer manufacturing plant in Beaufort County, officials say.

The revocation could shut down portions of the plant if the company does not appeal the case and fails to resolve it within 60 days of the Aug. 3 notice, state officials said Friday.

"They can't operate without a permit," said Don Follmer, spokesman for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. "That means they might have to shut down some of their plants if they don't get their act together.

"If they can get back in compliance during that appeal period, they certainly will be issued another permit. We don't want to shut them down. We want them to adhere to state regulations concerning air, water and soil," Follmer said.

The revocation deals with an air emissions permit issued Feb. 1 for the company's phosphoric acid production units. In reviewing company records, state officials said they had found that the phosphoric acid units had discharged sulfur dioxide — an air pollutant not allowed under the permit.

Sulfur dioxide is a colorless gas that can irritate and inflame body tissues, increasing the severity of respiratory diseases such as asthma, bronchitis and emphysema. It also can damage plants, and is one of the primary precursors of acid rain.

"They didn't tell us they were discharging any sulfur dioxide," Follmer said. "We've been keeping a very close eye on them."

Texasgulf officials said they were unaware of the revocation and would not comment on it until they receive written notice from the state. Nevertheless, company officials said such a permit revocation — if carried out — could have drastic effects on the plant.

"If we were unable to produce phosphoric acid, it would have serious consequences for our operations," company spokesman J. Randolph Carpenter said by telephone from the plant. "All of our various operations are an integral part of the total operation."

Texasgulf annually produces about 1.3 million tons of phosphoric acid, he said. About 100 of the company's 1,200 employees work directly or indirectly with the manufacturing of it, he said.

HOME FEDERAL SAVINGS
AND LOAN ASSOCIATION OF EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA
Serving Eastern North Carolina since 1906

A MESSAGE FROM YOUR LOCAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTION

Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Eastern North Carolina is based in Greenville, North Carolina, and has branch offices in Edenton, Plymouth, Williamston and Bethel.

We are a mutually owned and independent company dedicated to the principles of thrift and homeownership. These two ideas have helped build our nation. Home Federal Savings has been in business since 1906 and we have seen a lot of changes, but some things remain the same. People still need a home and a safe place to keep their life savings. Home Federal has always operated and will continue to operate with these basic principles in mind. In today's deregulated marketplace, there are many players in the market with all sorts of gimmicks and "come ons". They are in the market for the short gain, not the long term. How are they investing your money? This is an important question.

Home Federal continues to invest directly in the local communities it serves through home mortgage financing activities. Through our expertise and knowledge of the area markets, we have built a strong, stable portfolio of mortgage loans. That is how your money works -- by helping your community and local economy grow. Home Federal has consistently provided an above average return to its depositors. We would like to thank our customers who have helped us grow steadily and profitably to over $100 million in assets.

Sincerely,
J. Larkin Little
J. Larkin Little, President

Farm Analyst Urges Caution In Drought Reactions

By BARRY MASSEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — This summer's drought has focused more attention on the "greenhouse effect," but an agricultural analyst says it's impossible to predict whether the Grain Belt will be among the early losers from a global warming.

In an article published by Resources for the Future and the National Center for Food and Agricultural Policy, Norman J. Rosenberg also cautions against prematurely adjusting U.S. agriculture to cope with potential changes in the climate.

"One cannot rule out the possibility that some lands now too arid for cultivation of food crops may indeed become more usable for these purposes in the future," writes Rosenberg, director of the climate resources program for Resources for the Future, an independent research and education group.

"However, there is no more evidence to support that assumption than there is to support the idea, popularized by the media, that productive lands in the U.S. Midwest and Great Plains are certain to become drier and less productive."

Still, Rosenberg strongly suggests that some agricultural efforts be vigorously continued as precautions against possible problems. He also says more research is needed to develop techniques to help farming prepare for the natural ups and downs of climatic variations.

"There is nothing in the predictions of the climate change community to suggest that we should reduce emphasis on soil and water conservation programs," he writes.

Rosenberg was a professor of agricultural meteorology and director of the Center for Agricultural Meteorology and Climatology at the University of Nebraska before joining the Washington-based organization last year.

"The conservation reserve program and sodbuster provisions are likely to be needed as much in the future as they are today," he writes.

"Conservation of groundwater should be emphasized, especially in aquifers, like the Ogallalla, that are only slowly rechargeable. Vast quantities of water in storage may provide a buffer to lessen the negative impacts of greater aridity in the mid-latitudes of North America, should climate change occur as some global climate models suggest."

The Ogallala covers portions of Great Plains states from Nebraska to Texas and is primary source of irrigation for farming.

In an interview, Rosenberg expressed concerns that the current drought gripping portions of the Grain Belt has generated "hype and sophistry" about the greenhouse effect — that increasing concentrations of carbon dioxide and other gases would cause a general warming of the atmosphere by trapping heat around the Earth.

Rosenberg contends the drought shouldn't be blamed on the greenhouse effect but is a product of natural variations in weather patterns.

However, he says the drought should serve as a lesson for policy makers and as an indicator of the kinds of severe weather changes that could occur more frequently in the future if the greenhouse effect manifests itself as some have suggested.

"I think the people who are using this year's drought as some kind of omen of the greenhouse effect are doing us a bit of a disservice ... because this drought is not at all unprecedented," says Rosenberg. "But the drought does drive home the point that we're very vulnerable and climate change can make us more vulnerable."

Rosenberg says he is "reasonably convinced" that the greenhouse effect is responsible for the gradual warming trend that has occurred worldwide. But he says scientists lack the ability to accurately predict the regional effects of a continuation of that warming. Past greenhouse effect studies have predicted widely ranging temperature and precipitation changes.

For example, a "state-of-the-art" study by the Energy Department in 1985 projected temperature increases for the middle of North America from 2 degrees to 8 degrees Celsius, depending upon which scientific model was used by researchers.

In his article, Rosenberg says there are indicators that agriculture can adjust to some of the predicted climatic changes. He points to the expansion of the nation's winter-wheat growing region since 1920.

Hard red winter wheat is grown in the northern Plains, including Montana, where average temperatures are lower, the growing season shorter and there is less rainfall than traditional areas like Kansas. That expansion, Rosenberg says, "has occurred over a climatic gradient greater in many ways" than the greenhouse changes predicted in some studies.

Still, Rosenberg says the current drought illustrates how modern agriculture remains extremely vulnerable to weather-related stresses. He contends that more emphasis should be placed on research to develop crops and "techniques that minimize that vulnerability."

That, he says, is the best strategy for agriculture to prepare for what the greenhouse effect could bring.

"Even if the whole greenhouse effect would turn out to be a misconception, but we had invested a lot more in research to fortify agriculture against climatic variability, natural variability, we'd still be coming out ahead," says Rosenberg.

Indicators Are Helpful In Projecting

By PETER COY

NEW YORK (AP) — The contest between economic forecasting tools is a little like the war between supermarket tabloids over who has the best psychic.

Economic indicators won't help anyone find out when Elizabeth Taylor will remarry, but they are vital to planners in government and corporate America.

The Commerce Department insists that its index of leading indicators is the best prediction of which way the economy is headed, toward prosperity or recession.

But the venerable index is under attack from people who say it ignores the growing service sector of the economy; that is, lawyers, accountants and hamburger flippers.

It is also under fire from those who say the best forecasters of the economy are ordinary Americans who pick up telltale signs in their daily lives of working and shopping.

The debate gained prominence again this past week as the government announced the leading indicators jumped 1.4 percent in June for their biggest rise in 1½ years.

The muted reaction in the financial markets might have been a sign of skepticism about the index's clairvoyance. Significantly, bond prices rose even though they usually fall in reaction to strong growth because of inflation fears.

People who say the service sector is being ignored have created a new index of the services industry under the direction of Geoffrey Moore, Columbia University's guru of business cycle research.

In contrast to the strength of the government's measure, the leading index of services for June showed only a modest gain, suggesting to its authors that "growth in service sector activity will continue at recent levels or possibly weaken slightly during the remainder of 1988."

As for the voice of the people, the Conference Board asserts the superiority of its own monthly survey of 5,000 consumers, claiming the consumer expectations component of the survey has outperformed the government's leading index since 1983.

Consumers are the first people to notice signs of economic change such as changes in the price of milk or expansion of the night shift, said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's Consumer Research Center.

"Consumers experience economic events as they happen, not after they are digested and analyzed in Washington," he said in a statement prepared for The Associated Press.

HIGH-TECH TOOL — By using InfoTrak, librarian Carol Washburn locates a list of magazine articles which will help her in completing an assigned research project. A recent acquisition of Sheppard Memorial Library, the computer displays information which is stored on a compact disc.

Library Has 'Year Of Progress'

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

At the front desk a young girl is in the process of checking out a book about horses. A middle-aged man and his wife wait in line to check out a painting for their living room, while the librarian tells a student how to find background information about Michael Dukakis.

Just out of sight from all this activity at Sheppard Memorial Library is the office of the library's director, Willie Nelms.

Inside his office, Nelms glances at a recently printed copy of the library's 1987-88 annual report. At his side are several charts and graphs which illustrate some of the report's statistics.

He takes in the overall scene with satisfaction.

Total circulation for the system in the past fiscal year reached an all-time high of 417,098, an increase of 9 percent over the previous year.

The number of registered borrowers grew to 24,474. That means one of every four Pitt County residents now owns a Sheppard Memorial Library card.

The library in 1987-88 also experienced a 6 percent increase in attendance over the previous year, as patrons made a record 196,701 visits to the Main Library facility on Evans Street and the other library facilities such as the East and Carver branches and the Pitt County Bookmobile.

When asked how he would describe the previous year, Nelms glanced at the annual report, then at the rising slopes charted on the graphs, and replied, "I would say it's been a year of continued progress."

During the year 120,675 books were borrowed from the Adult Public Services Department. That represents a 5 percent increase over the 1986-87 fiscal year.

Those adults borrowing books during the past year might have noticed a wider variety and a larger selection of books from which to choose.

"We added over 9,000 books last year, an 8 percent increase in the number of books that we added compared with the previous year." Nelms said. "We added more books last year than we ever have in (the library's) history."

"We have tried in our book selection to get the items that people want to borrow and we've tried to anticipate those needs in both fiction and non-fiction items," he explained.

Nelms said another significant statistic in the past year was the increase in attendance and circulation in the children's section of the library.

During the past fiscal year, 103,391 books were borrowed from the Children's Library, representing a 16 percent increase over 1986-87.

Nelms said an expansion of the children's room at the Main Library from 950 to 4,000 square feet could be one explanation for the increase.

"When we expanded, there were a lot of children's books that we had in storage that we were able to bring out into the library. The public could then see them on the shelves for the first time," he said.

Nelms said the increased use of the children's library could also be attributed as an outgrowth of concerns in the community and throughout the nation about illiteracy.

"There is an increased interest for children to be introduced to reading and being aware of reading at earlier ages," he said.

"The people who recently have moved into the child-bearing age probably have a higher level of education than any people who have ever been on the face of the earth before," Nelms said. "People who have education are more likely to use libraries than people who don't and they are also more likely to see that their children are exposed to books and to reading at an early age."

"Parents are really concerned about their kid's education more than they have been. They realize the importance of that," he added.

Other highlights and achievements

Besides an increase in both usage and attendance, Nelms cites other highlights and achievements made at Sheppard Memorial Library during 1987-88.

For example the library was successful in its application for $65,000 in construction grant funds from the state to expand and renovate the George Washington Carver Branch Library. The $65,000 will be used to match an equal appropriation by the city for the project.

Located at 618 W. 14th Ave., the Carver branch has served the library needs of the west Greenville community since its opening in 1962.

Preliminary plans call for the branch's outside courtyard area to be brought into the library as a large reading room, adding approximately 1,000 square feet of space.

Meanwhile, renovation plans include upgrading the appearance of the circulation desk, adding carpet and enhancing the front of the building with new landscaping.

The project's completion is estimated for June 1989.

During the year the library acquired several high-tech pieces of equipment to assist patrons in quickly locating books and magazine articles.

"The Intelligent Catalog and the InfoTrac systems both take advantage of compact disc technology, which to me is the most exciting technology to impact small- to medium-size libraries," Nelms said.

"The Intelligent Catalog is a computerized search machine that ultimately, if it continues to work out as we hope it will, will replace our card catalog," he said.

Currently 90 percent of the library's books are stored on the compact disc, the machine's means of storage. By following the machine's instructions, users can easily find the name of a book's author and its location on the shelves, even if all the words of the book's title are not known — the computer will look for those key words listed and automatically fill in the unknown words to complete the request.

The machine also has the ability to recommend other available books the user might be interested in, based on the user's previous search requests.

"The amazing part about it is it's so affordable," Nelms said.

The entire unit costs $2,495. That cost includes keyboard, monitor, the compact disc, a printer, a stand and an audio compact disc component that actually talks the user through procedures with verbal instructions via a telephone receiver.

Another acquisition, InfoTrac, allows a person to locate magazine articles on almost any subject desired.

"Small- to medium-size libraries like us now have a chance at this technology that years ago cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. The microcomputer has brought it down to a cost-effective level for us," Nelms said.

Another highlight during the year was the installation of an electronic theft detection system at the Main library.

"After doing an analysis of the cost, we saw it would pay for itself in about three years time in reduced losses," Nelms said.

"It really helps us in two ways. First, it means we don't have to use the book budget to buy replacement items that have been stolen. We now have that money to spend on positive new additions to the library," he said.

"Second, it cuts down on the aggravation of the staff and public when they come in and they can't find material because it's been stolen."

"Initially it was going off quite often but now it's very rare that it goes off," Nelms said of the alarm.

People browsing through the main library recently might have noticed an increase in the number of videocassettes shelved.

Nelms said the library has expanded its selection of VHS format videocassettes to nearly 570 in the past year, ranging in variety from guitar lessons to chronicles of the Vietnam War.

"We find that video is an excellent format for providing information," Nelms said. "These things are unbelievably popular. We turn over our complete inventory on average three times a month."

In making selections for the library's video collection, Nelms said the library did not want to duplicate what the various video rental stores were doing.

"Instead we choose non-fictional, educational and instructional types of videos that we lend out for a week at a time," Nelms said.

"If you go to a video store, most of them will just lend things out overnight and that's understandable. But if you borrow a tape like "Jack Nicklaus on Golf," you need to have that for more than one night to do you any good," he said.

Also made available to the library and the public through a partial grant are videocassettes of popular Public Broadcasting System series such as "A Walk Through the 20th Century with Bill Moyers.

Looking into the future

Nelms said a key initiative to be undertaken in the immediate future is for library officials to go through a process of further defining the library's role in the community as this decade comes to a close and a new one begins.

"We're going to be going through a process with the library board over the next several months developing what kind of library we want to have in the future. We're going to go through a process of role setting," he explained.

"We'll be looking at whether there are gaps in our collection that we are having people ask us for things that we don't have and to try to fill those gaps; to try to be responsive to what the public wants," he said.

"I think that all really gets back to the library's basic philosophy. We want to get people to use the library. The library belongs to the public and we want them to use it," he said.

Melms also said library officials will be carefully monitoring progress made in automated circulation systems — ways of tracking circulation.

"We still operate with 1930 technology here in checking in and checking out books," Nelms said.

"In my estimation the biggest breakthrough as far as internal operations for libraries our size would be affordable automated circulation systems. Most of them now are either too expensive or they're affordable but too small for our use," he said.

However, Nelms said the last thing the library would want to do is to inconvenience people by any future acquisition of new equipment or procedures.

"We want people to feel comfortable with changes we might make. We're not going to make the mistake of simply because we have that technology to start carting out the card catalog out the back door," he said.

Overall, Nelms said he feels optimistic about the road ahead for Sheppard Memorial Library.

"I'm enthusiastic about the future," he said.

CHILD'S PLAY — Listening to instructions from the Intelligent Catalog, four-year-old Kelly Atkinson checks to see if Sheppard Memorial Library has any books by Dr. Seuss. Many library goers have found the newly acquired computer easier to use than the traditional card catalog.

Williams-Beers Vows Performed

RALEIGH — Pullen Memorial Baptist Church was the setting for the marriage of Martha McDowell Beers and Dr. William Edward Williams. Dr. M. Mahan Siler conducted the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Burton Floyd Beers of Raleigh. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Thomas Williams of Greenville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk shantung. The dress was styled with elbow-length puff sleeves. The fitted bodice featured a bateau neckline and a deep V back which fell into a large bow centered with a silk rose. Handmade silk lace appliques adorned the sleeves, bodice, and chapel-length train of the dress. Her headpiece was a chapel-length veil of illusion attached to three silk roses matching the rose on the dress. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, lily of the valley, miniature gardenias and stephanotis.

Susan Andrews Steele of Raleigh was the maid of honor. She wore an ankle-length polished cotton garden print dress. The dress was styled with an off-the-shoulder neckline with bows on each sleeve and a dropped waist with a large bow centered at the back waistline. She carried long stemmed white roses tied with white satin ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Elizabeth Jones, Britt Asher, Anne Hart Norwood and Carla Graham, all of Raleigh, Kaye Lehman, and Anna Brake, both of Rocky Mount, Julie Rowe of Chapel Hill, and Mrs. Troy Hutchinson of Virginia Beach. Each attendant wore a dress and carried flowers identical to those of the maid of honor.

The flower girl was Taylor Williams, niece of the bridegroom, of Greenville. She wore a white cotton ankle-length dress trimmed with lace and tied with white satin ribbons at the waistline. She carried a basket of white rose petals.

The bridegroom's father served as the best man. Ushers were Jesse Williams Jr., brother of the bridegroom, Robert Williams, brother of the bridegroom, Julian White, and Alexander King, all of Greenville, Burton Beers Jr., brother of the bride, John Coffman, Richardson Battle, and Reid Jones, all of Raleigh.

Nephews of the bridegroom, Tyler Williams and Trey Williams, both of Greenville, were the train bearers.

Organist Patricia Pace presented music for the service.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Capital City Club. Music was provided by a string quintet with piano.

Prior the wedding, the couple was honored with several miscellaneous showers, luncheons, and dinners.

After a wedding trip to Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket, the couple will reside in Greenville.

MRS. WILLIAMS

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of the University of North Carolina. The bridegroom graduated from the UNC-CH School of Dentistry.

The bride was an assistant buyer for Lord and Taylor in New York prior to her marriage. The bridegroom practices dentistry in Greenville.

Evening Wedding Vows Said

Leslie Susan Holloman and Christopher Averette Corey, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at 7 p.m. in Grace Church in Greenville. The Rev. Ed Walker conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lewis Holloman of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Corey, Sr. of Route 9, Greenville.

Organist Susan Forlines and soloists John Rardon, Terry Rardon, Jon Forlines, and Susan Forlines presented music for the ceremony.

The matron of honor was Wendy Keith, sister of the bride, of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Cindy Corey, sister of the bridegroom, and Christy Boyd, cousin of the bridegroom, both of Greenville, Rhonda Dail of Tarboro, Dawn Faulkner of Ayden, Terri Lamn, cousin of the bride, of Charlotte, Becky Peed, cousin of the bride, of Ayden, and Sheryl Wainwright of Greenville.

The flower girl was Ashley Dunn, cousin of the bride, of Ayden.

The father of the bridegroom served as the best man. Ushers were Tony Boyd, cousin of the bridegroom, Ricky Buck, Jimmy Corey, brother of the bridegroom, Marc Holloman, brother of the bride, Mike Holloman, brother of the bride, and Allen Nuthercutt, all of Greenville, and Shannon Peede, cousin of the bride, of Ayden.

The ring bearer was Stephen Pugh of Greenville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a chapel train of sata peau with re-embroidered alencon lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke, accented with shiffli embroidery, lego-mutton sleeves, and a basque waist. Alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls were appliqued on the bodice and sleeves and encircled the collar. The floor-length skirt extended into a chapel train. Scattered motifs of beaded alencon lace appliqued the skirt. The torso back and bustle accented the train and garlands of shiffli embroidery bordered the hemline of the gown. BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

HERE ARE SOME MIRROR IDEAS

There's one thing that can do so much in so many rooms--and that's a mirror.

Let's start with the foyer or entrance hall. A decorative mirror can add warmth, beauty and depth to that area besides serving a most useful purpose.

In the living room, one or two small decorative mirrors might be used with a group of pictures on a wall for a nice effect. A large mirror might be used to reflect an outdoor view or reflect the colors of the room. Place a mirror where it reflects something you'd like to have reflected. In this sense, a mirror is a picture in itself--a picture of your room.

In your bedroom, is the mirror over your dresser skimpy? Why not get a larger mirror that will give you both better use and decor.

Today mirrors, both framed and unframed, are available in every size, shape and style to be used effectively in hundreds of different ways.

As they say when a stage magician does a trick, "It's all done with mirrors." Remember, mirrors can add magic to your home. Let us help you find the right one for you along with any of your furnishing needs.

Women Enter the Business World Through H&R Block's Tax Course

Women across the country are entering the business world by learning how to prepare income tax returns. This skill has provided them with an effective key to new career opportunities. At the same time, it offers them information about how to save money at tax time.

H&R Block, the world's largest tax preparation service, offers its tax course starting September 8. Students may choose from morning, afternoon, and evening classes. No prerequisites are required for enrollment. Classes take place over a 13-week period.

Experienced Block instructors teach all phases of income tax preparation. Classwork includes group discussions, practice problems, and hands-on experience preparing individual tax returns. This year's course will also cover the latest tax law changes.

For many women, skills learned in the H&R Block Tax Course pave the way to part-time positions as tax preparers with Block. The flexible hours constitute a definite plus for women with other obligations. Block, however, is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes materials, supplies, and textbooks. Students successfully completing the course receive certificates and 7.5 continuing education units of credit.

Additional information and registration forms are available from the H&R Block office at Buyers Market. The telephone number is 756-1209. An Early Bird Tuition Special is available to those who register by August 20th.

Smokers Can't Break Addiction

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For years I've been wanting to write to you every time I see your callous answers concerning smoking. I always calmed myself down with the knowledge that you probably never have smoked, so you can't know what it's like.

How I wish there were clinics for smokers, paid for by insurance, like there are for alcoholics and drug addicts, but there aren't any! There's a stop-smoking program here, located in a Catholic hospital, run by a nun who has never smoked in her life who can't possibly relate to the problem faced by smokers who really want to quit. I have tried everything, and it's been one big disappointment after another.

Abby, I hope you will quit beating smokers over the head; we need help, and it just isn't out there.

I am enclosing a clipping from the letters-to-the-editor column of The Arizona Daily Star in Tucson. It says everything I feel because I am walking in this writer's shoes (for as long as I can walk before being bedridden with cancer, emphysema or heart disease).

Please give us smokers a break, and run the letter in your column. — A "CHAINED" CHAIN-SMOKER

DEAR CHAINED: I will. Here it is:

CHAINS OF ADDICTION

I feel very angry when I read articles in the newspaper regarding tobacco companies with lawsuits pending that say an individual smokes because he or she wants to, and therefore their company is not liable for a smoker's death. They are disregarding the fact that nicotine is a highly addictive substance, much like heroin, and that is not a matter of will power or "choosing" to smoke.

Once health is affected, smoking is a cross to bear and causes much suffering and anxiety. Smoking is continued despite good intentions or wishes for a healthier existence, because it is so highly addictive. Many times have I cried out in the night to a God that I much believe in to make whatever changes are necessary inside of me to let go of this destructive habit.

I have tried a non-smoking clinic, psychiatry, addiction counseling, hypnosis, staples in my ear, Adult Children of Alcoholics (ACOA) groups, along with countless attempts at quitting on my own. I moved to a community 10 miles from the nearest store and walked this distance to have a smoke. I have had to give up relationships, desired living space and job opportunities because of this habit. My repeated "failures" have left me with a belief that I do not have the power to change.

I need help and no longer know what to do about this situation. I feel angry, fearful and hopeless. I am afraid because I need an inhaler to breathe and have a long-standing cough. To all young people who are thinking of or just starting to smoke — don't. Denial and rationalization go a long way to paving the road to self-destruction. — PATRICIA VALORE

DEAR PATRICIA AND CHAINED: I have never smoked, but, believe me, I feel your pain. But you are "powerless to change" only if you believe you are.

Some suggestions: Contact your local chapter of the American Cancer Society or the American Lung Association. The Seventh-day Adventists also offer an excellent program to anyone who's serious about quitting the tobacco habit. Help is available, and it's usually free. Go for it and good luck.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

A Novel About Vietnam Shows Bitterness, Pain

THAI HORSE. William Diehl. Villard Books. 451 Pages. $18.95.

The search for "Thai Horse" begins at MARS, an acronymn for the Museum and Archaeological Regional Storage Facility, located in a small village in Maryland 40 miles south of Washington, D.C.

It is in this plain, one-story building that items left at the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial are sorted, cataloged and stored.

The note, attached to a green beret, reads: "Thanks for everything, Polo. And thank God for Thai Horse. Jaimie."

To Vietnam vets, Thai Horse means Thailand cocaine; China white. But could it have another meaning? Christian Hatcher, an old friend of Polo, searches for the answer in William Diehl's new, fast-paced and gripping novel.

Polo is the nickname for Navy Lt. Murphy Roger Cody, shot down over Vietnam in 1972 and presumed dead. Now Polo's father, U.S. Army Gen. William John Cody, who was the commander of all the field forces in Vietnam, is dying. He wants proof positive of his son's death — or, if he is alive, the chance to see him one more time.

Hatcher, who went to school with Polo, travels to Thailand in search of his old friend. And everyone knows that if anyone can find Polo, it's Hatcher. Hatcher is a ruthless killer, a man with impeccable instincts and a talent for survival.

"Thai Horse" is a story about drug smuggling, secret U.S. government operations, and murder. It is also a story about duty and moral obligations, friendship and loyalty, treachery and deceit.

Some of the scenes are awkward, and some of the literary devices are painfully obvious, but these are minor flaws. Diehl, author of "Sharky's Machine," "Chameleon" and "Hooligans," tells an unforgettable story of the bitterness and pain of U.S. servicemen who fought in Vietnam, who are alive but not well, and who can never go home again.

Pigeon Fancier Has 2,500 Birds

By SCOTTIE VICKERY
The Birmingham News

ARGO, Ala. (AP) — Charles Williams still remembers the first pigeon that ever caught his attention.

It was 72 years ago, and he was a 6-year-old boy in Gastonia, N.C. His grandfather worked as an express agent, and people sent their homing pigeons to Gastonia to be released for a race to their homes.

Williams said he remembers that each pigeon was in a separate coop. There were hinges on the doors, and each coop was opened at exactly the same time so no pigeon would have a head start.

It was from one of those coops that Williams' grandfather got the egg he gave to his grandson.

The egg hatched, and Williams kept that pigeon in his room for three months because, he said, "I didn't know what to do with it."

He must have figured it out, because he has been raising pigeons ever since.

Today, Williams has about 2,500 pigeons. And that's not counting the 150 ducks, guineas, or the turkeys, geese or chickens.

"I just took a fancy to them," he said. "I raise most anything in the book."

Of the 15 breeds of pigeons he raises, Williams said he likes homers the best. They are often called carrier pigeons.

Homing pigeons never forget where they are raised, Williams said, and they always fly back home no matter where they are released.

The Birmingham News had a pigeon loft on the roof of its building many years ago, Williams said. Sportswriters took carrier pigeons to games, and tied notes with scores onto the bird. The pigeons flew back to the newspaper in time to get the scores into the first edition.

"Nobody has ever figured out how they come back like that," Williams said.

Williams has sold pigeons that he raised, and they have flown back to him. They remembered exactly where their nest was, and they usually found it occupied with other pigeons.

"They're just like people," he said. "They have a home, and they'll fight all day for it. It's the biggest squabble you ever saw."

Homing pigeons can fly about 60 mph, and two of Williams' pigeons have flown home from as far away as Miami, about 875 miles away.

Raising pigeons hasn't always been just a hobby for Williams, who retired from the Birmingham post office in 1968. He sold squab, young pigeons which some people consider a delicacy, to many Birmingham restaurants and hotels for 40 years.

"The Club used to be one of my best customers," he said. "I sold a lot to rich people who had parties and wanted to dress squab."

Although Williams still sells squab to individuals, he said he quit dressing them when he retired.

But most of the selling he does now is to people who also raise pigeons as a hobby.

Most of Williams' pigeons sell for $10 to $15 a pair, but some of the more exotic types cost $20 a pair.

Williams said business seems to pick up during the spring and summer, but after feeding 2,500 birds, "I'm not making any money off them."

After hatching in the Sargasso Sea near Bermuda, young freshwater eels swim as far as 3,000 miles to reach European rivers, and may even wriggle across land for brief periods, says National Geographic World.

4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

Declarer has a great advantage over the defenders. He knows when the defenders have enough fast tricks to beat him. That information is not available to the enemy, so they do not always succeed in getting their due.

North's three-diamond response was a transfer to hearts, and his bid of three no trump showed a balanced hand which included a five-card heart suit. South might have been wiser not to have converted to four hearts—three no trump would have been defeated only if the opponents could take five diamond tricks on the go—but, not unnaturally, he was concerned about his wide-open diamond holding.

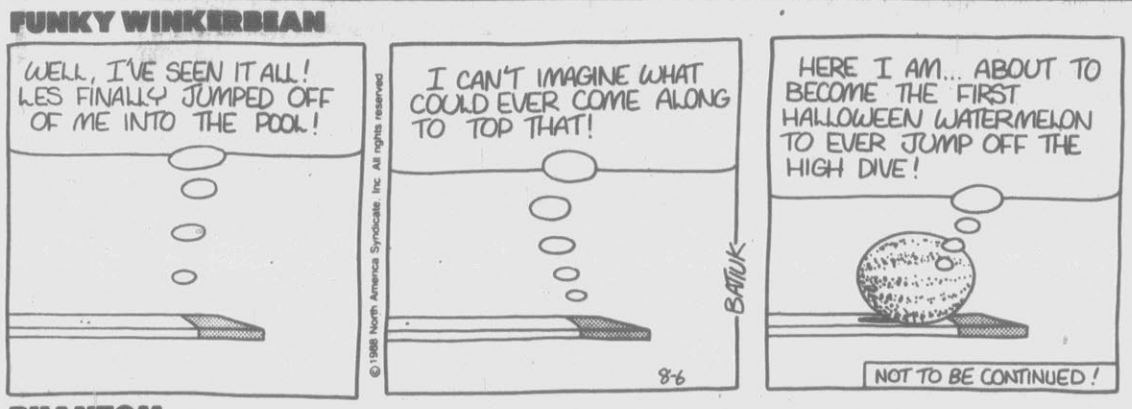

West led the queen of spades, and declarer was not overjoyed with his prospects. It seemed that he had three sure losers in diamonds and one in clubs. However, the spade lead offered a temporary reprieve. With a good slice of luck, he saw a line that would get him through if the defenders did not find an immediate diamond shift.

Declarer allowed West's queen of spades to win the first trick! From West's point of view, a diamond switch was not attractive, so he continued with a spade despite his partner's discouraging three-spot. That was won in the closed hand, and the king-ace of trumps were drawn. On the remaining high spade declarer discarded a club. After cashing the ace-king of that suit, he continued by ruffing a club on the board. When the clubs split evenly, the long club in declarer's hand was established. He came back to hand with a trump, discarded a diamond on the good club and cheerfully surrendered two diamond tricks—making four-odd!

Moving Produces New Problems

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Summer is peak moving season for Americans, according to statistics gathered by the American Movers Conferences.

The association found that over 46 million people or 20 percent of the population changed their address last year. About two-thirds of all moves take place between the Memorial Day and Labor Day weekends and over 40 percent involve long distances.

Those contemplating a move or finding themselves in new quarters may well be facing the quandary of how to make a house a home in a short period of time and how to do that without spending a great deal of extra money.

Some interior designers were asked to offer suggestions to help Americans out of their difficulties and the group came up with some useful tips.

For example, Scottsdale, Arizona-based Elaine Ryan (who relocated from the New York area some years ago) advised relying on paint.

"Paint the entrance to your new home in the deepest tone of the color you love best. This makes the new place your own in a special way," she said.

Another of Ryan's tips is to paint at least two walls and the ceiling of the living room in a strong color you like. Place the largest piece of furniture you have against one of the colored walls, thus creating an instant focal point.

Often the biggest disappointment with new quarters is that they contain some large decoration you simply can't abide. Maybe it's olive green wall-to-wall carpeting or a wallpaper you know you'll never be happy with.

While awaiting the time (and money) to change it, try camouflage first. If you hate the carpet or other flooring and the color doesn't go with what you have, cover the offending floor with small rugs in every size. Orientals and area rugs of any design are fine together. Put the largest rug in front of the sofa or under the dining table. Work from the largest out to the rest of the carpeted floors. But keep at least 10 inches of space between the different rugs.

Cover walls that are bad or the wrong color or merely anonymous with collections, pictures of every size and all types of frames. You can frame photos, memorabilia, children's art work, interesting fabric scraps. You can simply hang without framing plates, fiber pieces, antique advertising signs, architectural elements.

Begin your wall arrangements about six inches from the ceiling with the largest item in the center of the group, moving out and down as you go. If the room is small, it will be dramatized. If large, you will have warmed it up considerably. You will also have hidden most of the color or pattern you don't like.

Gain a fresh perspective in a new place by moving your furniture and accessories around so they are in a different room from the last place.

Bedroom chests, mirrors and bedside tables can go into the foyer or living room.

One quick way to give furniture a whole new look is to camouflage it. Cover a side table with fabric and use as a bedside table, suggests Peter O'Hayre, a showroom and home furnishings catalogue stylist.

If you look carefully in magazines and catalogues you'll find that bedroom furniture is rarely a matched set. The large case pieces may match but the bed is often distinctive. It may be brass, white metal, wicker, upholstered or painted.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I will be putting wooden posts in the ground to support a fence I will put up. I have read about the necessity of seeing that you go below the frost line, which I understand is the depth at which freezing takes place. But how deep is that? Nobody seems to say precisely.

A. — With good reason. The frost line varies in different localities depending on how severe the winters are. If you have a friend in the business of handling concrete, ask him. If not, your local building authorities can tell you. It could be about 18 inches below ground level, but in colder areas it will be deeper.

Q. — I made some wooden shelves a few years ago with ½-inch plywood. They turned out well, but I wasn't crazy about the edges of the plywood, which I left as they were, although I sealed them with shellac. I understand I can use strips of molding along the edges that show, but I have seen some plywood that had a kind of edging. What was this and is it something that can be bought or must it be done by a carpenter?

A. — All lumber yards, home centers and some hardware stores sell edging. It is made of real wood and is very thin. After the backing is peeled off, a self adhesive is exposed. The adhesive side is then pressed against the edges of the plywood. If you purchase this edging, be sure it matches the kind of plywood you have and make certain it is of the necessary width. Take time putting it on and you will wind up with a professional result.

Q. — I expect to finish a floor soon. After sanding it, I intend to stain it a little darker than it is, then put on a final finish. Will the color come out the same as it looks on the sample? I ask because I once had a bad experience with matching a stain with the color I want.

A. — Generally, an entire floor that has been stained and finished will seem to be darker than the stain, simply because the finishing material itself makes it darker. To get the desired color, stain a small area of the floor that will not be conspicuous and then finish it. If it is OK, do the floor that way. If not, make it lighter or darker as desired. Generally, a regular so-called wiping stain becomes darker if it isn't wiped off immediately. Thus, you can control the shade by how long you wait between the application and the wipe-off.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

First-Time Home Buyers Face Higher Adjustable Loan Rates

By DAVID W. MYERS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Just as it has been an up-and-down year for the real estate industry, so it has been a year of "win some, lose some" for America's home buyers.

Lately, most of the marks on consumers' score cards have gone into the loss column.

The bad news for first-time buyers concerns adjustable-rate mortgages. Since the typical ARM starts out with an interest rate far below that of a fixed-rate mortgage, an ARM has long been the only kind of loan cash-strapped borrowers could obtain.

Now, however, a growing number of lenders aren't using those low introductory rates when qualifying potential borrowers. Instead, they're estimating what the rate will be the first time that it is adjusted upward, and then using the higher rate when reviewing the loan application.

As result, thousands of first-time buyers can no longer qualify for a loan, and thousands more are being forced to accept smaller loan amounts.

The tougher standards are designed to weed out marginal borrowers, and, generally, apply to those who make a down payment of less than 20 percent.

Joel Singer, chief economist for the California Association of Realtors, says borrowers who can't qualify for a loan under the new rules should probably hunt for less-expensive homes or try to make a bigger down payment. They could also seek out lenders who aren't using the stricter guidelines, although they could run into financial trouble if their payments soar as soon as the rate is adjusted upward.

Singer can't estimate how many would-be buyers have been knocked out of the housing market by the new rules. But, he adds, the guidelines may benefit some consumers by keeping buyers of modest means from taking on too much debt.

"It won't do you any good to get a loan if you won't be able to pay the money back when the rate goes up a year from now," he says.

The "get-tough" policy on ARMs is exacerbating problems caused by record home prices and rising interest rates. While soaring prices are squeezing home buyers and delighting homeowners, the increase in interest rates is hurting almost everyone.

Most owners with adjustable-rate mortgages are seeing their monthly payments rise, and home-equity loans have become more expensive, too. Of course, higher rates also make it tougher for would-be buyers to purchase a home — and fewer buyers may eventually make it harder for sellers to get their asking price.

Rates on 30-year, fixed-rate loans have climbed to about 10½ percent from 10 percent in the spring, according to Compufund, a computerized mortgage network based in Pleasanton, Calif. Introductory rates on ARMs have increased to about 8½ percent from 8 percent.

The half-point rise has added about $40 to the monthly payment on a $100,000 loan. Most economists predict that things are going to get worse before they get better.

"I think we'll see rates gradually climb upward through the end of the year ... rising about three-quarters of a point from where they are now," says John Tuccillo, chief economist of the National Association of Realtors.

Still, the expected increase should put only a mild damper on the nation's hot housing market. "There's a shortage of homes for sale in Southern California and some other parts of the country, and that's one reason why prices have been rising so fast," Tuccillo says. "I think most people realize that it doesn't pay to wait for rates to come back down a half-point or so when prices are rising 10 percent or 20 percent."

While many lenders are getting tough on first-time buyers, they're making life easier for folks who can make big down payments.

The latest loan catering to big spenders: "low-documentation" loans, sometimes called "low-doc" or "no-qualifying" mortgages. Borrowers who select this kind of loan don't have to provide previous tax returns and the usual ream of other financial documents. Instead, a couple of paycheck stubs or a single bank statement may suffice.

A few lenders simply require a satisfactory credit report that can be obtained in a few minutes.

The catch — and it's a big one — is that low-doc borrowers must usually make a down payment of at least 25 percent. Some lenders require a minimum 30 percent down.

The large down payment reduces the chances of the borrower defaulting and virtually assures that the lender will be able to get all its money back if it must eventually foreclose.

"We've made more than 1,000 of these loans, and not a single one has gone into default," says Martin Stroiman of San Diego-based Builders Funding Corp., one of the few lenders making the loans to borrowers who put just 20 percent down.

Despite their hefty down-payment requirement, low-doc loans are catching on. "They're appealing to a lot of buyers who don't have 9-to-5 jobs and regular paychecks, like people in the arts and entertainment business," says Richard Rosenthal, a Westside real estate broker. "By choosing this kind of loan, they can get the money even if they aren't currently employed."

The loans also appeal to self-employed people, many of whom have been under-reporting their incomes to the Internal Revenue Service. Since their tax returns have excluded much of their earnings, these borrowers can't qualify for a loan through the conventional process.

Then there are foreigners buying in America with money they've smuggled in from abroad. For a variety of reasons, says Stroiman, these borrowers "don't want to fill out the usual forms that ask where the money is now, and where it has been for the previous two months. We don't ask those questions: As long as the money is here prior to close of escrow, we'll make the loan."

Still, buyers who can make a large down payment and don't mind doing the standard paper work are advised to take out a conventional mortgage. That's because a borrower who takes out a low-doc loan must usually pay a slightly higher interest rate than a borrower who makes an identical down payment and produces all the usual documentation.

Garden Clinic

Q: What makes okra pods tough and stringy?

A: You have probably let the pods become too old and large before picking them. Pick the pods when they are shot about two inches long.

Q: What soil and sunlight requirements do a crepe myrtle have?

A: The ideal planting site for crepe myrtle has well-drained soil, full sun and good air damage. Crepe myrtles do not flower well in partial shade and not at all in heavy shade. Powdery mildew is minimized by planting in an open area where air movement will not be restricted. Crepe myrtles grow well in most of our heavy loam and clay soils and tolerate a pH range of 5.0-6.5.

Q: When should a fall vegetable garden be planted?

A: For the most part, August is the main planting month. Vegetables that have a 60 to 80 maturity cycle should be planted about August 1 to August 10. Vegetables that require shorter seasons, like turnips and leafy greens, do not need to be seeded until Sept. 1.

Q: What are some vegetables for the fall garden?

A: Snap beans, beets, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, carrots, collards, cucumbers, kale, kohlrabi, leaf lettuce, mustard, radish, rutabaga, spinach, turnip, squash and Southern peas.

Our computer training has captured two very important names in business: IBM and Sandy Decker-Jones, office temporary.

IBM took a close look at Manpower's Skillware® training and liked what they saw. And, now, we're working with IBM to provide training for their customers at the time of installation.

Sandy Decker-Jones, one of our long-time office temps also took a close look at Manpower's Skillware® training. She decided to learn more about it. And she did — nine different brands of it. In fact, she just recently trained on IBM's System/36.

It's time you took a close look at our training for word processing operators. Call us. You'll find out all about the advantages of working as a Manpower office temporary in today's working world. We know you'll like what you see.

ANTICIPITORY DISPLAY — Birds fan their feathers and open wide their mouths to communicate their hunger, stopping when they've had enough. That's how mama birds feeding several know which ones need more to eat, Nann says.

HI, HAPI — Nann Babcock plays with Hapi, a 15-foot-long Burmese python. The snake's tongue is not menacing, she says. It's his primary sense organ.

Couple Shares Enthusiasm For Snakes

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

When Nannse Babcock talks to groups about snakes, she lets members of her audience know she understands the fear many of them have about these animals she now appreciates and handles comfortably.

"All my life — until about four years ago — I had nightmares about snakes. But I got over that fear that caused those nightmares. And you can, too, if you want to sincerely enough."

The Greenville area woman's victory over long-held fears was a result of her love for her husband, Richard, and her desire to join in his pursuit of an enthusiasm he has had since childhood.

"I can't remember when I wasn't fascinated with snakes and didn't enjoy having them and learning all I could about them," he said. Reared in the Tarboro area, he said his parents condoned his love of snakes. Nann likes to tell audiences that her husband's mother found 26 baby water moccasins in his room when he was 7 years old.

It was their love of animals that brought the Babcocks together. Nann, who is registered by the state of North Carolina to care for orphaned and injured wildlife, has always enjoyed caring for small animals. Richard's children, who used to play with her children, would often tell her, "You really ought to meet my daddy."

Finally the two did meet and each recognized in the other someone who could day-in and day-out make a lifestyle out of loving, learning about and caring for animals. Now they've also made it their mission to help people understand that snakes are a wonder of creation to be appreciated and not destroyed indiscriminately.

Snakes Can Stay In

And since Richard's been married to Nann, he can keep his snakes in the house. The couple has 27 snakes. Some are his; some are hers. Responsibility for their care is shared. "Almost every snake gets attached to one person," Nann said. "For instance, our Burmese python named Hapi was a birthday gift of mine from Richard. And Buto, another Burmese python, was his. But it soon became clear that Hapi liked Richard best and Buto liked me best, so we traded. We've since given Buto to a friend who fell in love with him."

Most of their snakes are kept in aquariums with lids weighted down by bricks. They are careful not let their charges escape, for the creatures are dependent on them for feeding and care. The couple is also concerned about how neighbors might react to these pets running loose.

Their snakes vary in size from a smaller-than-a-pencil brown snake named Mrs. Brownie to Hapi, who's 15 feet long, 18 inches in circumference — and still growing.

Every snake, bird, rabbit, squirrel or oppossum who enters the Babcock household has a name as soon as Richard or Nann learn their characters well enough to make a selection. At present, there is a gray squirrel named Monkey, a gray squirrel named Rosie, a flying squirrel named Bandit, a robin named Big Bird, and five baby oppossums being named.

Among others, there are mole king snakes named Swamp Fox and Gypsy, corn snakes named Sunset and Pocahontas, a Brazilian rainbow boa named Beauty, an indigo snake named P.J. (Pride and Joy), hognose snakes named Mrs. Kelly and Roadhog, a black racer named Slenderella, a pine snake named Patches, California king snakes named Coco and Stripe, garter snakes named Ribbons and Ashley, a rat snake named Grayboy, and eastern king snakes named Broken Lady, Little Mike and Phantom.

Each snake has his own health and feeding record, meticulously kept by the Babcocks. Some don't eat more than once a week to once every two weeks, so it's necessary to keep up with how long it's been between feedings. The Babcocks raise rats and mice to feed their snakes and consciously don't make pets of these. Once a week, they buy a domestic rabbit to feed Hapi, who eats only rabbits.

They monitor the health of their snakes by their eating habits, the restlessness they show when mealtime nears and by other conditions they know to look for. They say they have good support from local veterinarians in caring for them. At present, they're giving Hapi shots to combat a parasitic condition.

Both Knowledgeable

The knowledge the two have of snakes and their habits is encylopedic. And Nann seems to have been quickly brought up to speed by her husband. Both are voracious readers of natural history books. Books like "Amphibians and Reptiles of the Carolinas and Virginia" are as much a part of their life as Richard's decorated snakehook or the bathtub in which Hapi loves to splash.

Snakes and other animals are what they enjoy talking about. "When Richard gets home from work, I don't tell him gossip I've heard about other people," Nann said. "I tell him about each of the animals here and those at the pet store where I work part-time, how the presentations I've made at a school went, or what I learned in my reading.

"Richard is my best friend. We do so many fun things together. We both like to camp. We like to go snake hunting — in this area and in far-off places when we can. We like to look for arrowheads. We like to go to Herpetology Society meetings. We love our children and we're soon to be grandparents. And the list goes on."

"And I admire Nan so much," Richard said. "Nobody else knows how devoted she is to every animal she deals with, how she will get up many, many times during the night if that's what's needed to keep a baby bird or squirrel or rabbit alive.

"And the way the animals respond to her shows that they sense what a loving person she is.

"I admire her compassion for people, too. She's always ready to help someone who needs her. She even brings home from the pet store animals that she knows are near the end of their lifespans. She has at home now a guinea pig that has only a 456-day life span. She brought him home because, though he appears happy and healthy now, it's likely he's going to die soon and she doesn't want a child to buy him, have him die almost right away and be upset and disappointed."

"You never get used to it, but when you deal with animals as much as I do, you know that death is a part of life," Nann said. "And for me, so is emotionally letting go of the animals I care for and then have to put back into the wild."

Must Release

Nann has an agreement, as a licensee to care for injured wildlife, that she will put each animal back into the wild as soon as he or she appears able to thrive.

Because he cannot survive on his own ever, her squirrel named Monkey must remain a member of the Babcock household for life. If he is not daily given seizure-controlling medication, he has fits. He wears a harness and leash when he goes out and likes nothing better than to ride on Nann's shoulder and show off for the children when she makes presentations at schools.

It's still questionable whether the robin named Big Bird is going to be able to cope on his own. He was hatched with his tongue protruding through his chin and has never been able to make regular robin sounds. Perhaps, Nann tells groups, this is why his mother pushed him from the nest. Nature has a way of destroying the defective members of each family to keep the species strong. Nan is committed to returning him to the wild, but her first attempt failed. A few days after setting him free in Greenville's River Park North, she got reports that he was perching on fishermen's shoulders begging their bait. So she went and got him and has since taken him to a veterinarian who has cut off the hardened protruding part of his tongue and pushed it back into his throat. Now she is renewing her effort to train him to eat on his own.

Himalayan Desert Region Springs To Life In Summer

By SEEMA SIROHI
Associated Press Writer

LEH, India (AP) — Isolated and dreary all winter long, Leh springs to life in summer when vegetables ripen in the fields and tourists swarm in from 11,500 feet below, filling up 80 hotels and guest houses in the world's highest desert.

Women wearing shining strings of turquoise and coral greet the visitors with shy smiles and a soft "julley" — hello.

With about 10,000 permanent residents, Leh is the major town of India's Ladakh region, a Himalayan desert because high surrounding mountains block rain and snow. But the area is cut off when snow at lower altitudes block roads and the region's 68,000 people settle in for eight months of winter privation.

But this time of year people and supplies flow in and Leh, known as the "Last Shangri-La," vibrates.

Stark, brown mountains surround the town and the Buddhist monasteries perched on hilltops.

The moonlike landscape is broken occasionally by splashes of willow and poplar and small farms growing wheat, barley and vegetables.

Come June, the Leh valley fills with Europeans and Americans — tourists and mountain trekkers.

The road from Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir, opens as the snow melts down the mountains. "Last year, even matchsticks were not available because the road closed early and opened late," said Akbar Ladakhi, a long-time resident.

"People survive on tsempa," he said.

Tsempa, a salted paste of chickpea flour, is eaten sometimes with onions and sometimes thinned into a soup. Wealthier Ladakhis spice their winters with a barley wine.

But with summer, these high-desert people feast on tomatoes, turnips, carrots, peas, potatoes and beans, all either grown locally or shipped from below when the road opens.

Akbar Ladakhi said tourism has helped improve the region's economy, providing money for reviving dying arts, restoring monastries and preserving old Buddhist paintings.

But some others feel tourists have commercialized Ladakh, where merchants once slept amid their wares and buyers simply took goods and left money behind.

"Corruption culture has invaded us. People have become clever and business-minded," said Sonam Wangchuk, a student involved in promoting Ladakhi culture and dance.

He complained youngsters were becoming Westernized, discarding their traditional robes for T-shirts and jeans. Leh's main street is filled with the music of Hindi movies and and Michael Jackson.

For the summer tourists, restaurants offer an array of Chinese and Tibetan foods but cooks also have mastered apple and banana pancakes for those preferring a Western-style breakfast.

Ladakh is a predominantly Buddhist region influenced over the centuries by nearby Tibet. The region was originally a Tibetan province and is still known as "Little Tibet."

But rock carvings found nearby indicate Ladakh had been used for thousands of years by nomadic tribes, including the Mons of north India, the Dards of Baltistan and the Mongols of central Asia.

Ladakh's Golden Age began in 1533 when King Soyang Namgyal united the region, established his capital at Leh, and extended his boundaries to the outskirts of Lhasa in Tibet.

Kashmiri rulers invaded in the last century and, since India's independence from Britain in 1947, the region has been caught up in India's border wars with Pakistan and China.

The Namgyal Palace overlooking Leh stands as a mute testimony to the battles, its sprawling walls bearing wide, gaping holes.

Most Ladakhis are followers of the Dalai Lama, the exiled god-king of Tibet who lives in the Indian Himalayan town of Dharamsala.

Tibetan prayer flags flutter over most houses and shops, their colors fading under summer's bright sun.

Being near the Indian-Chinese border, Ladakh also is an army base. Convoys of army trucks spew black smoke along the narrow roads. The army also is the region's biggest employer, hiring local people to build military roads and dams.

But most work ends in September when winter begins. People lay in food and firewood; only emergency goods are brought in by army planes.

Temperatures go down to 18 degrees below zero Farhenheit and prices soar.

But Wangchuk, the traditionalist, says the people are enured to it.

"We have grown up with hardship," he said. "It doesn't matter if you don't have vegetables or milk."

Proposal To Keep Monitor Artifacts

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A proposal by First District Congressman Walter B. Jones to keep artifacts from the Civil War ironclad U.S.S. Monitor in North Carolina was approved by the U.S. House of Representatives.

The Jones bill directs the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) to provide apropriate artifacts fom the Monitor for display in North Carolina.

NOAA is required to develop — in consultation with the state of North Carolina — a plan for the permanent display of artifacts within six mnths after enactment. This plan is to include possible display sites and suitable artifacts, as well as suggest an interpretative plan for display.

"The wreck of the Monitor lies 16 miles off North Carolina's Outer Banks in the area known as 'The Graveyard of the Atlantic.' The ship is an important part of the history of coastal North Carolina and to run the risk of losing our ability to play a role in interpreting the history of this famous ship would be intolerable," Jones stated.

The requirements of the Jones plan do not affect the designation of the Mariners Museum in Newport New, Va., as the principal museum for Monitor artifacts.

Jones, who heads the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, had an agreement with the former head of NOAA to accomplish the purposes of this legislation.

However, when the leadership of the agency changed, it became necessary to formalize the agreement in statutory language to ensure that there would be no misunderstandings.

The Jones plan was added to a reauthorization of the National Marine Sanctuaries program, H.R. 4208. The program was established in 1972 to provide recognition and comprehensive protection to marine resources of special national significance.

The Monitor was the first of seven sites that have thus far received this designation.

The bill will now be sent to the Senate for further consideration.

Clarence Morgan Receives Fellowship

ATLANTA — A Greenville artist, Clarence Morgan, with the faculty at East Carolina University, is one of 20 southeastern artists who have each been awarded $3,500 fellowships.

As a fellowship recipient, each will have their works featured in a two-year traveling exhibition as winners in the 1988 Visual Arts Fellowship Program co-sponsored by the Southern Arts Federation and the National Endowment for the Arts.

A panel of artists selected the winners from a field of 505 applicants from the federation's nine member-state service area which includes North Carolina.

Each year, the Visual Arts Fellowships are awarded in different disciplines. This year's awards were given in drawing, painting, and printmaking.

OLYMPIC STAMP — The U.S. Postal Service plans to salute the Games of the XXIVth Olympia with this commemorative stamp to be released August 19 at the U.S. Olympic Complex in Colorado Springs, Col. The design is based on a painting by Bart Forbes. (AP Laserphoto)

Anniversaries are the mainstays of stamp topics for countries throughout the world. Commemorations of famous people's birthdays, special historic dates for proud nations and significant honors for organizations that contribute greatly to the benefit of mankind have been highlighted on the postage stamps of the world.

"Anniversaries," consequently, is the theme of the latest set of stamps issued by the West African land of Gambia, a former British colony. The set consists of eight adhesives and two souvenir sheets that highlight major historical and aviational anniversaries.

The 50-butut stamp depicts the flag of the International Red Cross on its 125th anniversary (1863-1988).

The 1-dalasy features a British Airways Concorde on its 10th anniversary flight from London to New York.

The 1.25-dalasy hails the 60th anniversary of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's solo flight across the Atlantic. Shown on the stamp is the "Spirit of St. Louis." (The 60th anniversary actually took place last year but the Gambia postal authorities liked the idea of the anniversary for this stamp set.)

The 2-d illustrates the fiight of the North American X-15 by Maj. William Knight of the U.S. Air Force when he attained the fastest speed ever achieved by an airplane. It notes the 20th anniversary of the event.

The 3-d pictures the 40th anniversary of the first supersonic flight by Chuck Yeager of the United States. Yeager piloted the Bell X-1 rocket-powered research aircraft to a speed of Mach 1.015 (670 miles per hour) at an altitude of 42,000 feet.

The 10-d marks the 400th anniversary of the defeat of the Spanish Armada by the British in 1588. Shown is a scene of the famous battle at sea.

The 75-butut depicts the Friendship 7 spacecraft piloted by U.S. astronaut John Glenn into three orbits around the earth. The stamp honors the 25th anniversary of the first American to make that orbit.

The highest value, 12-dalasy, marks the 75th anniversary of the sinking of the British liner Titanic, which went down on its maiden voyage.

The stamps are available at your local dealer.

A new, colorful 15-cent postal card is being released to honor the settling of Ohio and the founding of government in the Northwest Territory.

Depicted on the design is a flatboat floating on the waters of the Ohio River. Aboard the flatboat are livestock, luggage, crates and a Conestoga wagon. The crowded boat is carrying a New England family past Fort Harmar toward a new territorial home. The settlement at Marietta, Ohio, and the mouth of the Muskingum River can be seen in the background.

At the lower left of the postal card is a drawing of the eastern United States and the Northwest Territory as it existed 200 years ago.

When Congress passed the Ordinance of 1787, it created the Northwest Territory and opened the doors to America's western frontier. On July 15, 1788, the First Congregational Church in Marietta was established as the first capital of the Northwest Territory.

As settlers began coming to the region in greater numbers, they became the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. Some land east of the Mississippi River became part of Minnesota.

Here's how you get your first-day cancellations:

You may purchase the cards and send to: Customer-Provided Stationery, Postmaster, Marietta, OH 45750-9991. No remittance is required. It must be postmarked by Aug. 14. If you prefer to have the USPS supply the card, then enclose a money order or personal check for 15 cents per card and send to: Northwest Territory Postal Card, Postmaster, Marietta, OH 45750-9992. The deadline also is Aug. 14.

The East African republic of Kenya has issued a set of stamps that highlights six of the many game lodges that attract tens of thousands of foreigners — mainly Americans — to see fabulous wildlife of the country. Each stamp shows a different lodge with wildlife species in the background.

The 1-shilling stamp depicts the Samburu Lodge, which offers visitors a rare chance to view crocodiles wading onshore. The 3-shillings features Naro Moru River Lodge with mountains in the background.

The 4-shillings shows the Mara Serena Lodge, a circular group of guesthouses, with a mother zebra and her baby near the lodge. The 5-shillings illustrates Voi Safari Lodge with African water buffalo nearby.

The 7-shillings pictures the Kilimanjaro Buffalo Lodge, a short distance from the majestic base of Mount Kilimanjaro. Inside the cluster of lodges are a male and female giraffe. The 10-shillings features a pair of adult rhinoceros outside the Meru Mulika Lodge.

The stamp set is available at your local dealer.

Reunion Of Descendants Of Somerset Slaves On September 3

By MARY COOK
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — On a somnolent June day in 1786, the slave ship "Camden" drifted into Edenton harbor and unloaded her cargo of African slaves. Stumbling from the slaver's fetid hold, these dazed and exhausted men and women found three prosperous white planters eagerly awaiting their arrival. Josiah Collins, Nathaniel Allen and Samuel Dickinson has purchased Guinea Jack, Fanny and the 78 other Africans to work 100,000 acres they owned near Lake Phelps in modern-day Washington County.

Separated from homes and traditions, these Africans, their descendants, and other American slaves, carved out a white agricultural, manufacturing and lumber empire on the edge of the malarial "Great Alegator Dismal" swamp. In the process, they left their indelible mark on Josiah Collis' lucrative 5,870 acre plantation, Somerset Place.

On Saturday, September 3, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., this former antebellum coastal estate near Creswell, now a state historic site, will host a special reunion. Thousands of Somerset slave descendants from across the U.S. (some first-generation born free), along with such luminaries as "Roots" author Alex Haley, will celebrate ancestral contributions and a common heritage at the 1988 Somerset Place Homecoming.

A highlight of this reunion (the first took place in 1986) will be African-American folklike, musical, and artistic traditions — "The American Black Contribution."

Though the small clearing near Lake Phelps changed completely between Colonial and Civil War times, the slaves who labored here always retained their unique African heritage. Seen by most whites only as human chattels, they passed the traditions of their native land from generation to generation.

And theirs is a rich history. The estate entered its glory days when Josiah Collins III took over Somerset Place in 1829. Utilizing the muscle and talents of over three hundred black slaves, Collins offered aristocratic guests formal gardens overhung with majestic cypress and sycamore trees and a splendid fourteen-room mansion. Christmas at Somerset became famous throughout Eastern North Carolina and included a joyous slave folk celebration known as "John Kooner."

Of uncertain origin, historians have linked the ceremony to Muslim influences in Africa. At Somerset, it was a ritualistic, costumed slave presentation incorporating both traditional dance and music. Culminating in gifts from the Collins family, the event was eagerly awaited in the slave quarters.

This ceremony will be re-enacted at the Homecoming by Chuck Davis' African-American Dance Ensemble, an award-winning dance troupe from Durham whose forte is music and movement inspired by West African and African-American cultures. The Ensemble is currently packing in crowds across North Carolina on the Black Folk Heritage Tour.

Somerset visitors may also enjoy another talented Black Folk Heritage Tour group, the Badgett Sisters. Performing without musical accompaniment, this "jubilee-style" (named for the famous Fisk Jubilee Singers) gospel trio from Caswell County exhibits vibrant sound and artistry. Connie Stedman, Celestar Sellars, and Cleonia Graves sing harmonized spirituals and gospel music rooted in Southern black bondage and African tradition.

Blues — another black musical contribution to America — will be performed at the Homecoming by Greenville's Littlejohn and Company. Lead guitarist Jeff Littlejohn is descended from Somerset slave Alpheus Littlejohn. In honor of the reunion attendees' ancestors, the trio will play an original composition, "Somerset, The Children."

Other musical entertainment will include the Drums of Africa and slave songs by the 40-voice Angelic Choraleers choir. In a salute to jazz, pianist Dr. Ernest Brown perform ragtime.

Although Somerset slaves were better treated then many — some were taught to read and Collins family usually sold their slaves as a family unit — a life a bondage was still their daily lot. Most lived in 18-foot square cabins shared with 14 other slaves and could be beaten or even hung for various infractions. However, by the 1860's, change began to blow across the plantation's manicured acres.

When Yankee troops invaded the Albemarle region during the Civil War, the Collins family was forced to leave Somerset and flee inland with many of their slaves. And in 1863, Josiah Collins III died in poverty at Hillsborough. A seventh generation Collins descendant, Frances Ingliss, commented at the first Somerset reunion:

"Slavery was an awful system and it eventually brought down those who favored it. Josiah Collins lost everything in the end. The only thing he took out of the old plantation was a broken silver knife."

After the war, the Collins' returned home to a looted, rundown plantation. Although they tried to revive the crippled estate, Reconstruction's depressed economy and lack of slave labor eventually forced the family to sell Somerset.

Over the next 60-odd years, the old plantation had seven different owners. Former slaves scattered all over the U.S. and antebellum Somerset became a dim memory of the freed slaves and their progeny.

The State of North Carolina stepped in and acquired a ruined Somerset Place in 1939. Although the mansion house and outbuildings were still intact, the slave quarters were rubble. The slave hospital, chapel, and cemetery were vitually lost.

Sylvia Whitford of Plymouth will demonstrate traditional African-design handicrafts such as the "Somerset basket" — a broom sedge and split oak container once made at the plantation. Nantucket and South Carolina sweetgrass basketmaking also will be showcased. In addition, ancient traditions such as African baby wrapping (a method for carrying children on one's back) will be explained.

Somerset's antebellum past will also come to life through dramatic interpretations and reenactments. Famous black abolitionist Harriet Tubman's tremendous achievements will be spotlighted through the talents of actress Gloria Lowery-Tyrell.

In addition, a re-enactment of a slave wedding directed by Terrance Afer-Anderson and featuring two Somerset descendants will be held.

Complementing the live entertainment, homecoming visitors can browse among distinctive Afro-Anerican sculpture, paintings, collages, quilts, pottery, and pen ink drawings.

Dorothy Redford, Somerset Homecoming organizer and the plantation's genealogist, will present her new book, "Somerset Homecoming — Recovering a Lost Heritage." A Book-of-the-Month Club Selection, it will be published nationally in August by Doubleday.

"Researching Somerset family links and history has been one of the most fulfilling experiences of my life," said Mrs. Redford. "Both Somerset Place and the events scheduled for the 1988 homecoming embody African-Americans' contributions to America's cultural heritage."

For further information, call the Public Information Office at 733-5722 or Somerset Place at 797-4560.

UNCG Journal Popular With Scholars

By SUE BOOKS
Office of Information Services
UNC-Greensboro

GREENSBORO — The literary journal English Fiction in Transition — or EFT, was renamed English Literature in Transition in 1963 when editor Helmut Gerber learned that the acronym is the Old English word for "newt."

A bit obscure, perhaps, but ELT exists to bring to light the not so well known. Each issue includes articles and reviews of books about "minor" turn-of-the-century authors — Joseph Conrad, E.M. Forster, Thomas Hardy, Rudyard Kipling, Katherine Mansfield, W. Somerset Maugham, H. G. Wells and Oscar Wilde, to name just a few.

The journal "has provided an influential forum for the discussion of authors who rightly deserve scholarly attention," said Dr. Robert Langenfeld, an assistant professor of English at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and ELT's editor since 1982. "It is no exaggeration...to see Elt as an authoritative touchstone for the 1880-1920 period in English literature — in a sense, a microcosm of scholarly attitudes, interests and emphases."

Now 30, a ripe old age for an academic journal, ELT is an international quarterly that goes to 800 Edwardian specialists and scholars in 38 countries. ELT has been successful, Langenfeld said, because it bridges a gap in literary history. "People recognize that these 'minor authors' made a contribution to British culture, but that no one was studying them," he said. "The journal has a niche."

What began in 1957 as a kind of mom-and-pop operation at Purdue University with Helmut and Helga Gerber hand-mimeographing stencils has become a far more sophisticated desktop-publishing venture, though still one that pays for itself.

Vol. 1 No. 1 is a 43-page, typewritten newsletter; Vol 30 No. 1 is a 128-page, laser-printed journal. What hasn't changed is its personality.

"The personal touch is sort of the raison d'etre of the journal — to keep it human, with an individual personality at work in the center," Langenfeld said. "This makes it a little different in scholarly publishing."

The "personal element" has been a guiding principle for the journal since its beginning. "We still try to send fairly detailed evaluative comments with most rejected papers; we still try to guide authors patiently through revisions whenever we feel such revision might produce a publishable paper; we still write personal responses to all kinds of inquiries . . . The journal still retains something of the human touch of an autobiography," then-editor Helmut Gerber wrote in 1975 in an essay reflecting on his journal's first 18 years.

Langenfeld has carried forth the tradition. Each issue contains an "Editor's Fence" column, a place where the editor can talk to readers like a neighbor leaning on the backyard fence to chat with friends. Langenfeld said.

He believes scholars who submit their work — and whose promotions or jobs sometimes depend on publication — deserve at least a personal letter with thoughtful comments about any perceived problems, rather than the 3-by-5 cards all too familiar to most scholars.

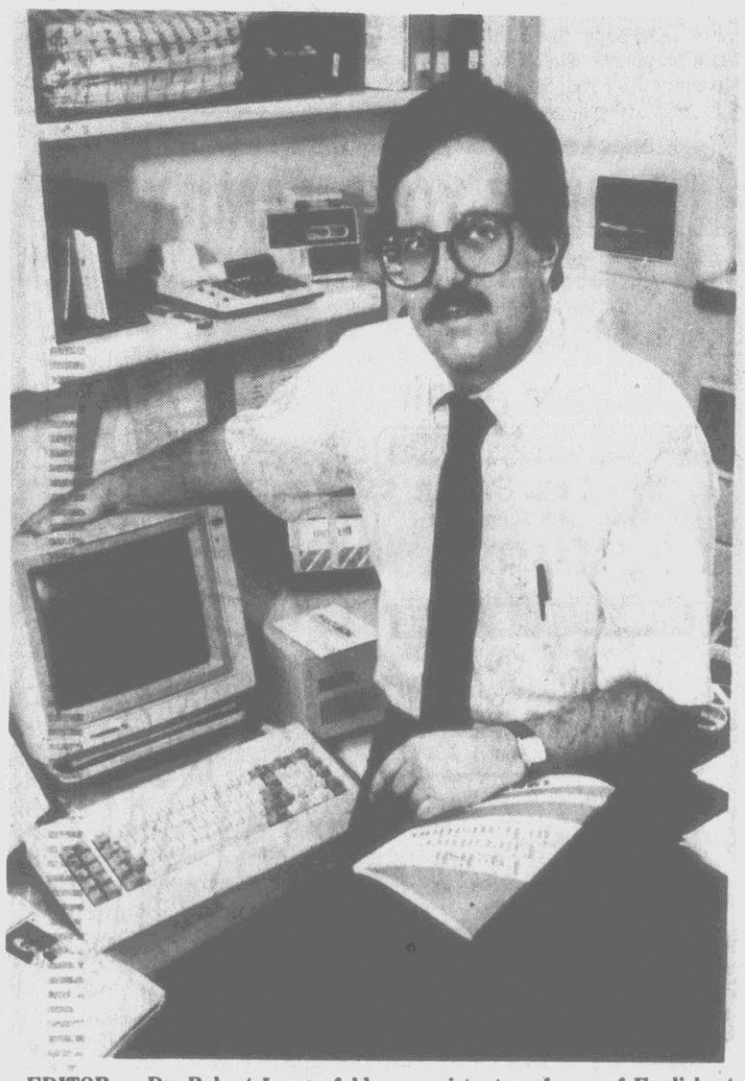

Scholarship is judged — "as of course it should be," he said — on its innate value, without regard for the author's reputation or institutional affiliations. Manuscripts submitted for the journal are read by Langenfeld and at least two other scholars. If there is no consensus, associate editors Dr. Michael Case of Boise State University and Dr. David Eakin of McNeese State University help make the call.

While an editor's expertise is central to maintaining a level of scholarship in an academic journal, the best editors strive to leave themselves out of their judgments, Langenfeld suggested. Good editors are fair-minded and "don't ride their own hobby horses."

The hobby horse in his case is George Moore, a turn-of-the-century writer about as well known in his time as James Michener is today. Langenfeld routinely seeks others' opinions about all Moore scholarship to keep those judgments as fair as possible.

Besides editing the journal, Langenfeld has started the ELT Press at UNC-Greensboro to publish book-length studies on the ELT authors. Two books aready are in the works and Langenfeld is aware of "a lot of good, primary material that doesn't make print."

He has been teaching courses in contemporary publishing and writing in the professions since joining the UNCG English faculy, and has completed a 500-plus page annotated bibliography of George Moore, which will be out in the fall.

Literary Conference Set On S.C. Writers

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The movie "Deliverance," the television miniseries "North and South," and the acclaimed novel "Dreams of Sleep" all have something in common.

The story told in each was crafted by a South Carolinian.

And dozens of writers with ties to the state will come together in Charleston late this summer for a three-day literary festival called Carolina Connections.

The idea is to highlight the work of South Carolina writers through workshops, readings and panel discussions, said Steven Lewis, the festival director.

The Sept. 9-11 event organized by the South Carolina Arts Commission will provide writers a chance to discuss their craft, give aspiring writers hints on getting published and allow laymen a chance to hear South Carolina authors read from their works.

Among the 80 writers expected to attend are James Dickey, the author of "Deliverance"; Josephine Humphreys, who penned "Dreams of Sleep"; and John Jakes, who wrote "North and South."

Others include William Price Fox, Gail Godwin, Theodore Rosengarten and Alice Childress.

Lewis said some of the writers live or have lived in the state while others have family roots in South Carolina.

"It does focus on South Carolina writers but the real intention is broader than that — to increase audiences for contemporary American fiction," he said. "The point is not to be provincial but to broaden people's scope as much as possible."

In addition to creative writing workshops and readings, editors from publishing houses and magazines that print fiction will share their thoughts on how writers get published.

Aspiring writers will be able to have their work critiqued by authors at writing workshops. Participants will be asked to submit a manuscript beforehand, Lewis said.

"You can learn a lot just by meeting writers," he added. "Writers in general are very kind and helpful people to younger writers. They'll give you advice" on getting published and where to send manuscripts.

There'll also be a book fair featuring works by the participating authors.

Lewis, who is the director of literary arts for the Arts Commission, said upwards to 2,000 people are expected to attend the festival.

Brochures announcing the event have been mailed to about 30,000 writers and educators nationwide.

The festival has been in planning for over three years, Lewis said, noting the initial idea was to have a small one-day gathering where South Carolina writers could get acquainted with one another.

"Over a period of several years it mushroomed into a more comprehensive thing," he said. "We had planned to have 35 or 40 writers and now we have a little more than 80."

The festival is co-sponsored by the city of Charleston and the College of Charleston as well as the South Carolina State Library.

Lewis said the festival probably will continue in the future under the sponsorship of the college.

New Members

RALEIGH — Governor Jim Martin has appointed five new members to the Historic Bath Commision, with terms to expire June 30, 1993.

The five are: Dorothy Spruill Redford of Creswell; Melinda Coleman Wall of Greenville; Henry M. Shaw, Jr. of Raleigh; Jean Davis Winstead of Bath, and Margaret S. McMicken of Aurora.

The 28-member commission is charged with acquiring, disposing, restoring and maintaining historic properties in and near the Town of Bath in Beaufort County, North Carolina's oldest town. It also advises the Secretary of Cultural Resources on the administration of Bath Historic Site.

Writers To Meet Tuesday Evening

The first meeting in August of members of the Greenville Writers Club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Jerry Raynor, 2106 Pendleton Street.

Those wanting to share rides or get more detailed directions are to meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Krispy Kreme Doughnut Shop, East Tenth Street.

Playwright George Bernard Shaw wrote, "Patriotism is your conviction that this country is superior to all other countries because you were born in it."

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By ALAN R. BAILEY

"In the Shadow of the Peacock" is a touching first novel by Grace Edwards-Yearwood, a young black American writer. It is a novel vibrant with emotion and rich with the color of everyday life in Harlem during the '40s, '50s, and '60s.

Frieda has lived with her daughter Celia since the child's birth during a riot in the early 1940's. Celia's father died in that riot trying to save a boy's grandmother from a burning building. The shock of his death, added to earlier abuse suffered in the South, instills permanent fear in Frieda's heart.

As a result, Celia's upbringing is strict and carefully controlled. As Celia slowly discovers who she is, she encounters her mother's affection — and sometimes suffocating will — as she experiences the excitement and pain of both first love and first friendship.

All of life in this Harlem neighborhood travels directly or indirectly through the blues-playing bar called the Peacock, a social mecca where personal and professional news is exchanged. Drugs, violence and vengeance all ignite in the shadow of the Peacock.

"In the Shadow of the Peacock" is an impressive first novel from a woman who bears convincing witness to the hopes and sorrows of Celia's coming of age. It is a story of black women as they fight to assert and save themselves from the predations of racist society. These women are victims who subsequently survive and eventually triumph.

Top Award To UNC Television

RALEIGH — North Carolina Public Television has won one of the highest awards in television for its presentation of A "Singing Stream: A Black Family Chronicle."

Recently, in San Francisco, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting presented to NCPT staff members the first place independent productions award in its local public television program competition.

Produced by independent filmmaker Tom Davenport and the UNC-Chapel Hill Curriculum in Folklore Department, "A Singing Stream" was broadcast by NCPT in February and will air nationally on PBS later this year.

North Carolina Public Televisions "Globe Watch: Iran And Iraq" was a finalist in the instructional program category. A production of North Carolina Public Television in association with Hampden Sydney College, Hampden Sydney, Va., "Globe Watch" is a current events program that ties world events into a comprehensive background.

The first place award for "A Singing Stream" edged out entries from WNET in New York and WGBH in Boston, among others. This was the fourth film in the "American Culture Series" produced by filmmaker Davenport in collaboration with Daniel Patterson, chair of the curriculum in folklore.

The program profiles North Carolina folk traditions through the gospel music of the Landis family of Creedmoor. "We chose this gospel-singing family," says co-producer Daniel Patterson, "because they represent a strong North Carolina traditional art rooted in family, community and church." Several members of the family sing in the Golden Echoes Gospel Quartet.

The film has received numerous recent awards including honorable mention at the San Francisco International Film Festival, first prize at the UCLA Film/Folklore Festival, the Bronze Hugo at the Chicago International Film Festival and second place at the National Black Programming Consortium.

Two Artists Have Work In August PCMH Show

Two women, one now living in Greenville, the other from Jacksonville, are the artists with work being shown at Pitt County Memorial Hospital during the month of August.

Brenda Pena Jester of Greenville and Elizabeth Storm Harris of Jacksonville are this month's featured artists for the changing monthly series of art show at the hospital, with work displayed in the ground floor main corridors.

Ms. Jester, a native of New York, is a graduate of Brooklyn Museum of Art, the Pratt Institute and the Fashion Institute of Technology of New York City with a degree in fashion illustration.

She has worked for Fashion Buyers Mart in New York City, for Hart, Shaffner, Marx and for Panama Jack.

Since coming to Greenville, she has engaged in free lance art and as a professional hairdresser (her avocation) at The Salon.

Her work is primarily in pen and ink but occasionally she uses watercolor. She has had numerous exhibits in New York and North Carolina. Works in the hospital show contains several studies of the same subject.

Ms. Harris has called Jacksonville her home for over 30 years. She is a charter member of the Onslow Art Society and an active member of a number of art organizations, including the Onslow Arts Council, the Wilmington Art Association, Craven County Arts Guild, and the Kinston Arts Council.

A collection of scenes and the flora and fauna of North Carolina are the subjects she has chosen for her portion of the August hospital show.

Ms. Harris received her training from Coastal Carolina College and from several private instructors. In addition to painting, she is a photographer and musician.

The show can be viewed 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Monies realized from the sale of art from this show, as in all Pitt County Memorial Hospital shows, go to help extend the hospital's private collection.

PLACES VISITED — This work of art, titled "Places Visited," is by Jacksonville artist Elizabeth Harris. Ms. Harris, of Jacksonville, and Brenda Pena Jester of Greenville, are jointly exhibiting examples of their art during the month of August in the main corridors of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Modern Dance Art Merges And Emerges At Summer Festival

MYSTERY DEVICE — This sturdy metal wheel of about three feet in circumference is enclosed within a metal stand centered in a circular pool of stagnant green water. It is located at the site of a deserted home in the town of Seven Springs. The purpose for which this wheel with 30 stationary bucket-devices served is unknown. Perhaps some reader has an answer. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — It's been more than 50 years since modern dance pioneers Martha Graham and Doris Humphrey defiantly kicked off their toe shoes and whirled in bare feet for a tiny Vermont college audience.

The revolt against the rigid parameters of ballet that characterized the movement's earliest days has faded. Indeed, ballet itself has lost much of its formality over the past four decades largely due to the late George Balanchine and his influence on other choreographers.

"The war is over," said Charles Reinhart, director of the American Dance Festival. "The ballet world is more and more turning to modern choreographers for their creative work.

"We need each other, there's no doubt about that."

The proof was in the line-up for the recent six-week festival on the forested campus of Duke University. Outside of New York — the nation's dance capital — the annual event is considered the mecca of modern dance.

Virtually every major name associated with modern dance — from Martha Graham to Martha Clarke — has studied, taught or performed at the festival. More than 300 new works have premiered here, more than 100 of them since 1969, when Reinhart took over. And thousands of dance students — including Betty Ford, Kitty Dukakis and Madonna — have studied here.

At this year's festival, choreographers known for their collaboration with big-name ballet companies, such as Paul Taylor and Lar Lubovitch, mixed with experimental and sometimes bizarre talent.

"When I hear, 'That isn't dance,' that's when I sit up and take a look," Reinhart said in an interview. Some of his "far-out" proteges, such as Twyla Tharp, have gone on to become darlings of the modern dance world. Tharp was recently named resident choreographer at American Ballet Theatre.

This year's event devoted two weeks to revivals of black American composers' works — including Pearl Primus' "Strange Fruit" of 1943, an eerie portrayal of a white woman who has just witnessed a lynching; Donald McKayle's "Games," a dance set to the chanting of black ghetto children playing a street game; and works by Talley Beatty and Eleo Pomare.

The festival also showcased 26 choreographers from China, South Africa, Nicaragua and other parts of Asia, Africa and Europe who traded ideas and styles from their own cultures as part of the International Choreographers Workshop, co-sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency.

"We have to help to interchange (dance styles), because the world is dying," said visiting choreographer Stella Urzua of Chile.

The world's only festival devoted to modern dance was born in 1934 at Bennington College in Vermont. Martha Graham, Doris Humphrey, Hanya Holm and Charles Weidman, fed up with the New York summer heat and the constraints of classical ballet, headed for the cool New England climate to encourage each other and to start the revolution.

They danced in bare feet, gained weight and practiced movements while lying or sitting on the ground — all antithetical to the ethereal world of ballet. They also taught students in order to support themselves, and at the end of the six-week session performed only for each other on the campus.

The festival moved to Connecticut College in New London in 1948. In 1959, New York City Ballet director George Balanchine choreographed "Episodes" with Martha Graham, using Paul Taylor as a solo dancer.

"That was the beginning of the coming-together, choreographically, of the two worlds," Reinhart said.

Since moving to Duke University in 1978, the festival has continued its cautious partnership with classical ballet, while maintaining the endless battle for funding.

Raising money to support the festival — $1.75 million for this year's operating budget — is a year-round operation for Reinhart, his wife, Stephanie, and two staff members at ADF's New York office.

About 45 percent comes from festival tuition and ticket sales, with the rest gathered from private corporations, foundations and individual dance lovers, as well as local governments, Reinhart said.

With funding uncertain, the festival's trappings are modest. An old white frame house shaded by crepe myrtle trees on Duke's East campus serves as summer headquarters. More than 300 dancers attend classes and perform in converted classrooms and gymnasiums around the university — most of which lack air-conditioning to ward off the stifling North Carolina heat.

In a sweltering gymnasium, Betty Jones, a diminutive blonde in her 60s who helped found the Jose Limon dance troupe, called out instructions to about 30 muscular men and women in leotards.

Outside on the campus lawn, more than three dozen dancers in Chuck Davis' African American Dance class hopped frenetically and sang the words to an African folk song, while drummers played African rhythms.

In a makeshift studio off the university's student union cafeteria, the sound of clattering dishes competed with a jazz dance recording.

$20,000 Grant Made To Summer Theatre

A $20,000 grant has been awarded the East Carolina Summer Theatre by the Theatre Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council.

The grant was designated for operating support in order to help the summer theatre celebrate its 25th year in Greenville. The theatre employed over 125 actors, singers, dancrs, orchestra members and technical personnel this summer.

The Theatre Arts Section recommends awrads to professional theatre companies in North Carolina from funds appropriated by the General Assembly specifically for this purpose.

"Being a not-for-profit theatre, the support from the arts council enables us to offer quality professional theatre to patrons in eastern North Carolina," said Gary Faircloth, the theatre's general manager. "This support extends to the community and to East Carolina University."

Members of the panel making the awards are its director, George Parides, along with panel members Mark Woods of Charlotte; Ron Bayes of Laurinburg; Mollie Blankenship of Cherokee; Albert Gooch of Hendersonville; Ruth Revels of Greensboro; Enoch Morris of Pembroke, and Don Wolf of Winston-Salem.

Dance Theatre Commissions New Dances

NEW BERN — Two choreographers have been commissioned to create new dance works for the Atlantic Dance Theatre, Inc. of New Bern for programs to be performed in New Bern and in eastern North Carolina at a future date.

The two are Salvatore Aiello, artistic director of the North Carolina Dance Theatre, based in Winston-Salem, and Fred Benjamin, who has his own company in New York City. Benjamin also teaches jazz at Steps and at the Alvin Ailey American Dance Center, both New York City.

The commissioned works are being funded in part by a $2,000 grant from the North Carolina Arts Council. Atlantic Dance Theatre will fund the remainder of the project from proceeeds of its recent fund drive, which raised nearly $10,000 from local and area contributors.

Joins Dance Staff

NEW BERN — Barbara Dore Rowe has been added to the staff of Atlantic Dance Theatre, Inc., New Bern. She will serve as administrative assistant to the artistic director, Elizabeth Pope.

Previously, Ms. Rowe coordinated the "After School Fine Arts" program in the Columbia, S.C. public school system. She has danced with the Maine State Ballet Company and the South Carolina Dance Theatre, and in New Bern has performed with the Footlight Theatre.

Snakes

found on the road with a cracked shell. After reading up on what to do, they treated his wound for several days with hydrogen peroxide, then repaired "his mobile home" as Richard likes to call it, with fiberglass, a mixture similar to what's used in boat repair.

The baby oppossums were found beside a highway close to the body of their dead mother. Like so many others of her charges, a phone call summoned Mrs. Babcock to get them. She has her name posted with veterinarians throughout this area and asks that anyone who finds a disabled or orphaned animal call her at any time of the day and night. She'll drop everything and go.

With his free snake removal service, Richard is also on call. He goes any time anyone calls and says there's a snake on their property that they'd like to have taken elsewhere. He has the equipment and the know-how to move snakes without harming them, himself nor anyone else. While he advises people that they'd do well to keep non-poisonous snakes on their property to keep down the populations of rodents and poisonous snakes, he will take these to other places where they're appreciated if this is what is asked. Poisonous snakes he takes to sparsely populated areas like the Croatan National Forest.

Serve With Others

The Babcocks belong to the North Carolina Herpetological Society with headquarters at the North Carolina State Museum of Natural Sciences. The group meets twice a year. The Babcocks enjoy their participation in this group, because they're among friends there, with people who understand their devotion to snakes. They encourage other interested in being snake conservationists to join the group. The mailing address is P.O. Box 27647, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Sept. 10 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., they plan to take some of their snakes and participate in a "Reptiles and Amphibians Day" for the public to be held at the North Carolina Museum of Life and Science, 433 Murray Ave., Durham.

Nann accepts nothing beyond expenses for her educational presentations on snakes and other wildlife. All the expense of caring for orphaned and injured animals and for their pets comes of of the Babcocks' own pockets.

"It's a mission with us," Richard said. "When you look at this beautiful indigo snake and know that he's now on the endangered species list, so far as anyone knows existing only in captivity, you know how important this mission is. Prior to the 1920's, this snake was a native of North Carolina found all over this state. But people killed off and killed off his ancestors — harmless, even helpful, though they were — until now there aren't any.

"There's talk of releasing some back into the wild. But it's still being debated as to whether this should be done. So many people really think they're doing something useful when they kill a non-poisonous snake. Or they say they can't tell the difference, so, to be safe, they'll kill any snake they see.

"There's nothing difficult about learning to discriminate between the non-poisonous and poisonous snakes in a particular area. With this simple discrimination and a little bit of consciously seeking to overcome the fear patterns one probably acquired in childhood, an appreciation of snakes can be realized."

"It's well worth the effort," his wife said. "I can't tell you how much my life has been enriched by joining Richard in his enthusiasm for snakes."

Folklore Awards

RALEIGH — Five individual folklorists and one couple have been named recipients of the first annual North Carolina Folk Heritage Award.

The award is a new one, added for the first time this year, to the categories of fellowships and awards given to North Carolinians in the fields of visual and performing arts. The award carries a cash grant of $2,000 to each recipient.

Those chosen by a panel of folklorists selected by the North Carolina Arts Council are: Doug Wallin, an Appalachian ballad singer, and Tommy Hunter, a fiddler, both from Madison County; Etta Baker, a Burke County blues guitarist; Eva Wolfe and Emma taylor, two Cherokee County basket makers, and a couple, Dorothy and Walter Auman, Seagrove traditional potters.

Willis and Shepherd on Moonlighting: Is he worth more?

Q Please explain this situation if you can: Cybill Shepherd and Bruce Willis co-star in the TV series "Moonlighting." Why then does he get $5 million when he stars in a feature theatrical motion picture, and she gets only $1.5 million when she stars in a feature theatrical motion picture?—Rita Lee, Memphis, Tenn.

A Generally, male stars are paid higher salaries or larger sums than female stars because they attract more moviegoers to the box office.

Q Now that President Reagan no longer regards the Soviet Union as an "evil empire," and Mikhail Gorbachev has his hands full restructuring the Soviet Union, which country constitutes the leading threat to our own nation?—A.C., Taos, N.M.

A Here are some possibilities, ranging from the reasonable to the ridiculous: the Soviet Union, Iran, Panama, North Korea, Colombia, Nicaragua, Libya, Cuba and Grenada.

Q Your opinion, please, as to the three most-publicized businessmen in this country.—C.B., Roswell, Ga.

A Lee Iacocca of Chrysler, who writes books about himself and appears on TV commercials; Armand Hammer of Occidental Petroleum, who is the greatest self-promoter in the nation; and Donald J. Trump, the real-estate tycoon who is rarely out of the public's eye.

Q The following "Goldwynisms" have been attributed to the pioneer Hollywood film producer Samuel Goldwyn: "Excuse me. I'm going out for some tea and trumpets." "The trouble with this business is the dearth of bad pictures." "For this part I want a lady, somebody that's couth." "We can get all the Indians we need at the reservoir." "This music doesn't have enough sarcasm in it." Were the above malapropisms the creations of the late Sam Goldwyn or, as I have heard, the purposely malformed maxims of his press agents? —Dorothy Dowling, Somerville, Mass.

A Some were the work of such talented Goldwyn press agents as Harry Reichenbach, Pete Smith and Jock Lawrence. Others were Goldwyn originals. It's difficult to differentiate.

Q Once and for all: How old, how tall and how rich is screen star Paul Newman?—Niccola Price, St. Louis, Mo.

A Newman was born in Cleveland on Jan. 26, 1925, is 5 feet 9½ and reportedly is worth a minimum of $25 million.

Q Has Clint Eastwood really dumped actress Sondra Locke after eight years of togetherness for a woman of his own age, which happens to be 58?—Laura Spence, Greenville, S.C.

A Eastwood reportedly has become close friends with Jean Grace, 52, the divorced mother of three who succeeded him as mayor of Carmel, Calif. But he hasn't dumped Locke, who is 41.

Great Walks

Eastwood's job belongs to Grace, his heart to Locke (r)

Q Was Ed Bradley of "60 Minutes" ever affianced or married to the late Jessica Savitch, the NBC-TV news commentator who died so tragically in 1983?—Amanda Potts, Atlantic City, N.J.

A Jessica Savitch and Ed Bradley were fast friends and colleagues but never were engaged or married to each other.

Ed Bradley and the late Jessica Savitch: Fast friends

Q I read recently that Farah Diba, widow of the Shah of Iran, lives in Rye, N.Y., and that her daughter, Leila Pahlavi, was graduated from the Rye Country Day School. Is this true? Is it also true that the children of Imelda and Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines attended the same school? —B.F., Harrison, N.Y.

A Leila Pahlavi was graduated from Rye Country Day School in the Class of 1988, but her family does not reside in Rye, N.Y., although they do live in a community not too distant. The Marcos children never attended Rye Country Day School.

Q It is well known in Great Britain that Prince Charles was circumcised a few days after he was born in Buckingham Palace. Was the same procedure practiced on his sons, Prince William and Prince Harry?—Thomas Brandt, Philadelphia, Pa.

A According to the National Organization of Circumcision Information Resource Centers in San Anselmo, Calif.—which is opposed to the procedure—it was not practiced, and both young princes are "intact."

And now the definitive die-cast model is being crafted to be every bit as irresistible as Gary Cooper's famous "Duesy."

Every fine detail will be authenticated by the legendary designer Gordon Buehrig—the same man who created the body of Gary Cooper's classic. And officially authorized by the Heritage Plantation of Sandwich Antique Automobile Museum on Cape Cod Massachusetts—where the original is maintained in perfect order.

136 HAND-ASSEMBLED PARTS

Gary Cooper's Duesenberg J will be crafted with the most exceptional care—precisely matching the original inside and out. Even the complete engine and undercarriage.

Each model requires 136 separate die-cast components. Beautifully painted in the original color scheme. Trimmed in real chrome. Hand-polished, hand-assembled and ready to display.

The wheels and steering are fully operable. The seats have the right degree of "give." The tan top easily snaps on and off. The hood and doors open and close.

Ray Charles Sees The Beauty

He was born into desperate poverty. At age 5, he watched helplessly as his 4-year-old brother drowned. That same year, he began to go blind from glaucoma; his family was too poor to afford the medicine that could have helped him. When he was in his teens, both his parents died and he was left alone in the world, orphaned in a state institution for the blind. There, because of his race, he was not allowed free access to the music room. Yet, over the course of his life, he would change American popular music forever. His name is Ray Charles, and this is his story.

ON A LOVELY SUMMER day, I visited Ray Charles, 57, at his hotel suite in Manhattan. He greeted me with a wide grin and a laugh. I sat at a dining table while he walked into the kitchen and made me a drink, returned and sat down next to me. I was immediately impressed by how comfortable this sightless man was in the physical world.

"I was thinking about my mom today," he began, his voice hoarse, gravelly—a smoke-and-whiskey voice. "I'm always thinking about my mom!" He laughed, rolling his head from side to side, his body swaying back and forth as it does when he performs. "My mom to me was the most fantastic woman in the world. As I think of her today, she didn't have a lot of what people say you're supposed to have. I mean, she didn't have a college education. She only went to about the fifth grade. We were in a very small town [Greenville, Fla.] and very poor, and there were no such things as psychologists to teach her how to raise a kid who was an oddity in that town. I was the only blind kid in this little town, so that made me odd to all the other kids. You know, people laugh a little. They don't know. But my mom, she somehow knew that there's nothing wrong with my brain. I just couldn't see."

Ray Charles was born on Sept. 23, 1930, to Aretha Robinson, who took in washing and ironing, and Bailey Robinson, who drove spikes into railroad ties. He later dropped his surname to avoid being confused with boxing champion Sugar Ray Robinson. His mother would die when Ray was 15, his father two years later.

"She made me do everything other kids did," he continued, his upper body almost constantly in motion, a permanent grin on his face. "I mean, I had to make my bed. I had to scrub the floor and wash the dishes. My mom taught me how to cook. It was miraculous, this woman, to me. Can you imagine an extremely poor family in the South where, if we didn't raise our own vegetables, I'm sure we would have starved to death? Me and my mom had a little garden out back. You see, when she knew I was going to lose my sight, she knew she had to teach me how to do normal things, to learn so I could take care of myself when she was gone."

He reached over and touched my knee. He is a very tactile man, constantly reaching over and touching, in an affectionate way, to ensure your attention or maybe just to make sure you're still there.

I asked if his mother had taught him music.

He laughed, turning his head, his pitch-black glasses catching, mirrorlike, the sunlight through the windows. "My mom couldn't sing. Nobody could sing anything! However, when I was very little, naturally my mom knew I liked to try to play the piano, and she would encourage me to do that. By the time I was 15, I was in school, and so she didn't live to see me become anything."

"How did your mother die?" I inquired.

"You know, they think it was one of those gastro things," he replied quietly. "Being in a small town—if you want to know the truth—back in those days everybody died of a 'heart attack,' no matter what it really was. Well, that's pretty hard to argue with, isn't it? Because everybody's heart stops when they're dead!"

"And your brother?" I asked.

Charles was quiet. For a moment, I suspected that he wouldn't reply, and I was not about to press him. He sighed, and then, his voice sad: "I had but one brother. I was 5, and George was a little fellow about 4. And he was drowned. And I watched him drown. And it took me a long time to get over that guilt and sorrow I still feel a bit."

"There were big round tubs," he explained, "and there was water in them. You'd wash clothes in these tubs, you know? Kids, they love to play in water, and we were back there playing in one of these big tubs of water, and my brother keeled over in the thing, and I was trying to pull him out, and he had on his clothes, and they were too heavy, and I couldn't get him out. I think, 'I got to get my mom,' and she comes, and she gets him, and she goes through all this trying to wring the water out of him, but it's too late. And ever since you always tell yourself, 'Why didn't I go get her in the first place?'" He thought awhile. Then: "It took me a long time to get over that—I never could understand why I couldn't get him out. It just looked to me that I should have been able to. You know how you just feel terrible. On top of that, I was standing watching my mom squeeze all the water out of him and trying to breathe in him and trying so hard to bring him back. At that time, I could still see some. That was before all went."

Florida School for the Deaf and the Blind

Classroom at state school for the blind in St. Augustine, Fla., around 1940.

"This campus had a 'colored side' and a 'white side' then. The piano was on the white side."

When Charles was 7, he was legally blind and was sent to a state school for the blind in St. Augustine, Fla. Toward the end of his first term, his right eye was in constant pain and had to be removed.

At the school, a racially segregated institution, Charles learned to read in Braille, took formal piano lessons (he'd been playing informally since age 4) and learned to play the clarinet and to memorize music, often as many as 2000 bars at a time. I asked him about his school days and how he fared on his own.

"There were three things I never did want to own," he said. "A dog, a cane and a guitar. In my mind, they each meant blindness and helplessness. Why, it seems every blind blues singer I ever heard played a guitar.

"The kids come from all over the state and go to the school to live. If you went home—say, Christmastime or Easter—your parents had to pay for the ticket home. I had my parents until I was 15, but we didn't have the money, so I missed going home for the holidays. I had to stay at school, which was a hurtin' feeling. You feel bad, you hurt about something when it's happening to you at the moment, but after that you manage to get over it. The whole school was damn near empty except for a few of us kids who couldn't afford to go home. I had this little thing—I like music—and that was one time I could get in the piano room without having any trouble. This campus I'm speaking of had what they called the colored side and the white side. The only time you went on the, quote, 'white side' was if you got sick, because that's where the hospital was. Now this was a blind school. The kids were blind. Stupid, isn't it? The piano room was on the white side, and I liked playing the piano, but I couldn't always use it—except on the holidays, when everybody was gone. So it worked out a little bit."

After his mother died, Charles decided to quit the St. Augustine school for the blind. He was 15 and on his own. To support himself, he started traveling with hillbilly and rhythm-and-blues bands around the South, playing piano, saxophone and clarinet. He also wrote music, having taught himself to compose in Braille or by dictating songs and arrangements to a sighted musician. I asked him about those early years.

"After school, I had to earn my keep," he said, tapping my arm for emphasis. "I did whatever it took. I worked wherever I could with some of the cats. In most cases, I'd play the piano, because they already had singers. Some bands would let me sing. And if I couldn't get work playing or singing, I'd write. I'd been writing music since I was 12."

"If one is blind," I said, "how do you write music?"

He laughed. "Very simple. I sit here and give you the notes—each note for each horn. All you got to do is write it down. You have to know how to write—your chord structure, how to compose, how to think, how to plan what's going to happen with the reeds, the trombone, the drums. Most guys write the score first and then write parts from the score. Naturally, I do it backwards. I write

Should We Change Our National Anthem?

Brock/Black Star

With President and Mrs. Reagan at Republican Convention, 1984.

RAY CHARLES SUGGESTS THAT "AMERICA THE Beautiful" would make a better national anthem than "The Star-Spangled Banner." And we'd like to know how you, our readers, feel about it.

Here are the antecedents of the two songs:

"The Star-Spangled Banner"—which was designated officially as our national anthem only in 1931—dates back to 1814, when Francis Scott Key, a lawyer from Georgetown, near Washington, observed the British fleet's shelling of Fort McHenry in Baltimore harbor during the War of 1812. For music, he used an old British lodge song—sometimes described as a drinking song—called "To Anacreon in Heaven."

"America the Beautiful" was written in 1893—and published two years later—by Katherine Lee Bates, a professor of English at Wellesley College in Massachusetts. For music, she used a hymn tune by Samuel A. Ward.

One of the problems with "The Star-Spangled Banner" has always been the inordinate difficulty of singing it. Its vocal range extends over an octave and a fifth, and few people can reach both ends with comfort. Even more questionable are the words—martial, almost bombastic—describing an isolated incident in a relatively minor war.

"America the Beautiful," with its noble, soaring melody, deals with the positive attributes of America—its great natural beauty, its ideals of brotherhood, its true significance and symbolism for the American people. And, as Ray Charles himself has demonstrated, it can be sung far more beautifully than "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Musical historian Sigmund Spaeth, in his authoritative book A History of Popular Music in America, described "America the Beautiful" as "a great and deservedly popular song, definitely superior in both words and music to 'The Star-Spangled Banner.'" As Ray Charles asked Dotson Rader: "Honestly, wouldn't you rather sing about the beauty of America? It's such a shame it's not our national anthem."

"The Star-Spangled Banner"

Oh, say can you see
early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's
last gleaming?
Whose broad
stars thru the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts
we watched were so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's
red glare,
the bombs
bursting in air,
Gave proof
through the night
was still there.
Oh, say does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

"America The Beautiful"

for spacious skies.
For amber waves
of grain.
For purple mountain majesties
fruited plain.
America! America!
God shed
His grace on thee.
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea.

Perhaps you agree. Please let us know by checking the following ballot and mailing it to: National Anthem, P.O. Box 3869, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10163.

☐ YES. I think "America the Beautiful" should be our national anthem.

☐ NO. I think we should keep "The Star-Spangled Banner."

the parts first and then the score! I know that's wrong, so you don't have to tell me. I started doing it because I was in such a hurry to hear the music."

I asked how he finally broke out on his own as a musician.

He grinned, throwing his head back. "After my mom died, I was on my own. It wasn't no breakin' out and gettin' on. See, 'cause I didn't have no brothers or sisters. I went to Jacksonville because I thought, 'Well, if I go to the city, maybe I can find work.' You start trying to hunt for work, man. I'm by myself, and my mom told me that I've got to take care of myself. When I was just a little kid, I thought, 'Oh, wouldn't it be great to make a record!' I thought people who made records were great people. I just knew that had to be great. My chance came when I was living in Seattle in 1948."

> "I think that I'm a contented man. I've learned how to let things that don't mean a damn go past me."

In Seattle, Charles formed the McSon Trio, the first black band to have its own television show in the American Northwest. "To make a long story short," he continued, "we were working in this place in Seattle called the Rocking Chair. They had a private club upstairs for gambling, and this guy comes downstairs to hear some music. He happened to own this record company, and I got signed. I would say that was a beginning for me. One song was called 'Confession Blues.' On the other side was 'I Love You, I Love You.' I was so happy when they made that record! What that said to me was, 'Wow, if somebody wants you to make a record, you must be good, boy!'"

Charles stayed with his original record company, Swing Time, until 1952, when his contract was bought by Atlantic, a major company. His music had found a largely black audience until Atlantic released "I Got a Woman" (1955), a smash hit and the first of his distinctive recordings to cross over and reach a nonblack audience. It was the beginning of a star career that would produce such hits as "Crying Time," "I Can't Stop Loving You," "Busted," "Drown in My Own Tears," "Hit the Road, Jack," "Ruby," "What'd I Say," "Unchain My Heart" and "America the Beautiful." In 1959 he recorded his greatest hit, "Georgia on My Mind," which became the official song of the state of Georgia in 1979. His many awards include numerous Grammys, the Grammy Lifetime Achievement Award, two Emmys, induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, and the Kennedy Center Honors.

Today, Charles travels almost constantly on tour. When home in Los Angeles, he is usually in a recording studio working on his music. With music, says Charles, who is twice divorced, he never feels alone.

I observed that famous, successful people often have a fear in the back of their minds that somehow their success was a fluke and that somehow it will all be taken away from them. I asked Charles if he had a similar fear of being poor again.

"Oh, God, no!" he declared, grabbing my arm and squeezing it. "That's a great question. If you hadn't put it to me like that, I wouldn't even have thought of it. I don't have no fear of that because I started out with nothing. I know how to live with nothing. Because I've done it. I feel as long as I have breath in my body and a little good health, I could get success again. It's like going through a divorce. You say, 'Well, my old lady took everything I had. Well, that's okay. I ain't going to go and blow her brains out for it. I'll make some more.' That's my attitude. I think I know how I got here, doing what I do. I figure if I've been out here over 40 years, there has to be some good in what I'm doing. You know what I mean? So I ain't going to get bent out of shape."

"One of the great questions in life," I said to him, "goes back to Job: 'Why do good men suffer?' You're a good man, yet you're blind. You lost your parents. You lost your brother. You suffered bigotry and rough times. And yet there seems to be no bitterness, no anger. Why is that?"

"That's a nice point in talking about Job," Charles replied, smiling. "If you want to say, as a kid who comes up from a very, very poverty-stricken area, where he goes around with holes in his pants and little patches on his clothes and barefoot and all, and yet sat down in the presence of three Presidents of the most powerful country in the world—I mean, there are people who live forever and don't get to do that! You understand what I'm saying? I have been given honors that you don't normally get unless you're very ancient or you're dead. I've had tragedies in my life, you know, but you got to tell yourself, if you believe in the good, what Job knew in the end: 'The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away.' And you've got to remember that 'taketh away' part—that's the part that's hard to deal with. There's nothing written in the Bible, in the Old or New Testament, where it says: 'If you believe in Me, you ain't going to have no trouble.' As a matter of fact, if you look at most of the people who were followers of God, they had all kinds of problems. Although I've had bad things happen to me—let's face it, let's be honest about it—would you say I'm probably better off, more well off, than most sighted people? I ain't bragging, don't get me wrong."

> "What's beautiful about America is the freedom. I was dirt poor, blind, you name it. Yet here I am today."

I asked if he was a happy man.

"No," he said. "I think I'm a contented man. I'm blessed that I'm able to say that to you. I've learned, number one, how to let things that don't mean a damn go past me. I mean that sincerely. I've learned to appreciate when people are kind to me, when people compliment me—although it's difficult to accept, because I really don't know how to respond to it. It's not like when somebody wants to beat the hell out of you—you know how to react to that. I have no regrets, and I thank God for that.

"I would like to work with people with talent. And I guess the last thing, hopefully, is to continue to play my music, sing my songs and make the public happy. If I could just do that until the Good Lord says, 'Okay, I'm going to rein you in,' that'd be cool for me."

Before I left, I noted that his version of "America the Beautiful" had become a kind of unofficial national anthem and said that I was deeply moved every time I heard him sing it. What, I asked, makes America beautiful for him?

He grinned, rolling his head back.

"I love 'America the Beautiful' so much," he said. "I've always loved it, even as a kid. I know it's not very patriotic, but I never did care for 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' Think of the words: 'The rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting...' Honestly, wouldn't you rather sing about the beauty of America? To me, when you have a song like 'America the Beautiful' around, it's such a shame it's not our national anthem. But I guess maybe people think it's important we sing in praise of our bombs.

"What's beautiful to me about America—and it sounds corny—is the freedom. Not the freedom to walk out that door, but to say anything you want and go anywhere you want. I was reared in a small town, dirt poor, blind, you name it. And yet, here I am today. I find that great. I know there has to be something great about my country when other people in other countries are willing to die to try and get here. I think you can overcome any obstacle in this country. It may be a little harder for you than someone else. Like when Jackie Robinson got into baseball [as the first black player in the major leagues]. He couldn't just be an average second baseman, 'cause there were plenty of them around. He had to be better than what was already there. So sometimes you have to be a little bit better, but that's all right too."

Women at the Top

Melanie Stetson Freeman

Newspaper editors Fanning (l) and Chusmir

More women than men are enrolled in the nation's schools of journalism. If the gender trend continues, an increasing number of females will inexorably, albeit slowly, defeat traditional male prejudice and struggle to the top rung of the editorial ladder.

At the moment, however, it is sad to report that only seven women have reached the upper editorial echelon at major U.S. newspapers (more than 100,000 circulation). They are: Kay Fanning of The Christian Science Monitor, Janet Chusmir of The Miami Herald, Barbara Henry of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, Jane Amsterdam of the New York Post. Also Sandra Rowe of The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star in Norfolk, Deborah Howell of the St. Paul Pioneer Press-Dispatch and Beverly Kees of The Fresno Bee.

Incidentally, Kay Mills, who writes editorials for the Los Angeles Times, is the author of a seminal new book on women in journalism, A Place in the News: From the Women's Pages to the Front Page. Well written, informative and carefully researched, it chronicles the long march female journalists have plod in their search for professional equality in the U.S.

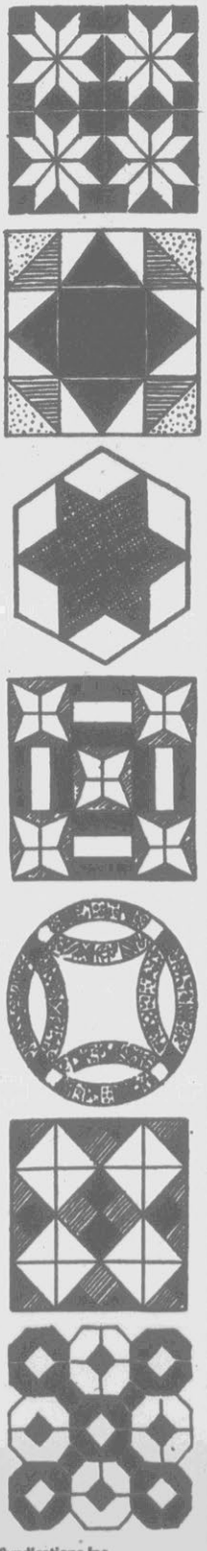

Mills points out that theirs has been a painstaking trek with

Collector's QUILT Blocks from — The Kansas City Star —

At last you can make the quilts you have admired in antique shops with the same blocks your grandmother used!

Between 1928 and 1961 the "Kansas City Star" and its successors, "The Weekly Star Farmer" and "The Weekly Kansas City Star," published quilt blocks as a constant feature. It is estimated that as many as 1,000 patterns were printed over this period.

The "Star" was one of the largest newspapers of its time; in 1931 it had more than 490,000 paid subscribers. The influence of these quilt patterns was therefore significant. To this day quilt historians refer to quilts made from these patterns as "Kansas City Stars."

From 1928 to 1961 the "Star" published a weekly feature of sewing and embroidery patterns, most of which were quilt patterns. The first of these patterns appeared in September, 1928 and continued in the Saturday edition of the paper until the late 1930's. The weekly edition often duplicated the previous Saturday's pattern, and continued to publish patterns after the daily paper dropped the feature.

Now for the first time, many of these patterns have been collected in one beautiful edition. Reproduced exactly as they appeared in their original form, the patterns are as fresh today as they were over 50 years ago.

Whether you are a quilter or a quilt collector, you will find this volume an invaluable source of patterns.

Included are such favorites as:

Broken Dish • Carrie Nation • Four-Corner Puzzle
Hands All Around • Kansas Dugout • Seven Sisters
Turkey Tracks • Wedding Ring • Our Country
Sunlight and Shadows • Plus More . . .

In addition, more than half of the blocks have been recreated in the suggested colors and appear in a special full-color section.

All of this plus much more in QUILT BLOCKS FROM "THE KANSAS CITY STAR". Order your copy today!

Since 1960, hormone levels in the Pill have dropped considerably.

Pumping iron has replaced flower power. Pinstripes have replaced paisley. And Wall Street has replaced Woodstock.

But of all the major changes that have taken place since the 60's, one is hardly visible at all: the change that has taken place in the Pill.

In 1960, the Pill contained as much as 150 mcgs. of the hormone estrogen. Today, it's down to 35 mcgs. or less. That's a fraction of the original dosage.

Yet, today's Pill is as effective as yesterday's. In fact, it's still the most effective birth control available other than sterilization.

But is the Pill right for you? You should see your doctor to help you answer that. If the answer is yes, then the ultimate decision is yours. And it's important that you learn all you can about oral contraceptives.

First and foremost, what are the risks? Does the Pill cause cancer? Will it make you less fertile? Do you need to take a rest from it? These are just a few questions that have surrounded the Pill since 1960. Questions which must be addressed by you and your physician.

What about the Pill and breast cancer? Although there are conflicting reports concerning this issue, the Centers for Disease Control reported that women who took the Pill, even for 15 years, ran no higher risk of breast cancer than women who didn't. The CDC also reported that ovarian and uterine cancer are substantially less common among women who use oral contraceptives.

The Pill has been shown to have other health benefits as well. Pill users are less likely to develop pelvic inflammatory disease (tubal infections), benign breast disease and iron deficiency anemia, not to mention menstrual cramps.

But if the Pill is so effective at preventing pregnancy, can it later prevent you from having a baby when you're ready to have one? Studies indicate that if you were fertile before you took the Pill, taking it will not affect your ability to have children later. Some women may experience a short period of readjustment after discontinuing the Pill. Even so, most women usually become pregnant soon.

One piece of advice you may have heard if you're on the Pill is that you should take an occasional rest from it. Yet there's no medical basis for this advice. Furthermore, a rest could turn out to be anything but restful, since switching to a less effective form of birth control increases your chances for unplanned pregnancy.

Now that you know what the risks aren't, you should know what the risks are. For example, if you are taking the Pill, you should not smoke. Especially if you are over 35. Cigarette smoking is known to increase the risk of serious and possibly life-threatening adverse effects on the heart and blood vessels from Pill use. What's more, women with certain conditions or medical histories should not use the Pill.

Even if you're already on the Pill, you should see your doctor at least once a year. And read the patient information regularly.

Taking the Pill is easy. Deciding whether or not to take it isn't. That's why it's so important for you to make an informed decision. Continue reading everything you can about birth control methods. Seek out reliable sources. Talk to your doctor.

You've already taken a step in the right direction. Just think, since you began reading this, there's a good chance your knowledge level about the Pill has increased. Considerably.

Get Your Money Back

From 1984 to January 1988, Dream Away and Advanced Dream Away tablets were advertised on cable TV. "Just take Dream Away before going to bed. You will wake up the next morning slimmer, trimmer and looking better than you did before," spieled the ads. The tablets cost $19.95 for a 21-day supply and consisted of small amounts of amino acids, plentiful in ordinary diets.

Are you one of the small army of the gullible who fell for the TV pitch? You may be eligible for a refund. If you have any proof of purchase—a credit slip or canceled check—include it with your request to: Redress Offer, Dream Away Settlement Fund, Federal Trade Commission, Box 990, Corte Madera, Calif. 94925. The deadline is Aug. 22, 1988.

Upward and Upward

For the 1988-89 school year, combined tuition, room and board rates for Princeton undergraduates will rise 6.2%, to $17,967, marking the 23rd consecutive annual increase in such fees. Other comparable private institutions—such as Harvard, Brown, MIT, Dartmouth, Penn, Chicago, Yale, Columbia and Stanford—will charge their undergraduates similar sums. At this time, no relief is in sight.

On Sleeping With Pets

Not too long ago, the German wire service DPA (Deutsche Presse Agentur) reported on a meeting of scientists in Dusseldorf. According to DPA, the scientists declared that sleeping with your dog or cat can prove more hazardous to the health of the pet than to you. Citing epidemiologist Anton Mayr of the University of Munich, the report said dogs and cats are especially at risk of contracting tuberculosis, diphtheria, syphilis, influenza and various fungus infections from their masters.

Because we judged that statement to be newsworthy if true, we phoned Dr. P. Eric Hughes, senior veterinarian in charge of disease investigation for Los Angeles County, and asked his opinion.

"Human beings," he said, "may spread tuberculosis and ringworm, a disease caused by fungi, to animals in rare cases. But insofar as diphtheria, syphilis and influenza are concerned, forget it. It's also not true that for dogs and cats who sleep with or near their masters, the risk of infection for the animal is considerably greater than the other way around."

From the Reagan Joke File

"Well, it reminds me of the story about Harry Truman and his use of colorful language. It seems that Eleanor Roosevelt called Bess [Truman] one day and, in the course of the conversation, asked where Harry was and what he was doing. And Bess said, 'He's out putting manure on the flower garden.' And Eleanor said, 'Oh, Bess, can't you get him to use some other term, like fertilizer, instead of manure?' And Bess said, 'It's taken me 20 years to get him to call it manure.'"

Meats are Red, Breads-Brown, Vegetables-Green, Fats-Yellow, Dairy-White, Fruits-Pink. The back of each card lists the food equivalents that card is worth. For example, one bread (brown) card is worth a slice of bread, a dinner roll, half a bagel, half a bun, a half cup of pasta, a tortilla, etc.

2. You start each day with a set number of cards of each color.

For example, if you want to lose 40 pounds or more, you start off each day with 6 Red cards, 6 Brown, 2 White, 4 Green, 4 Pink, 5 Yellow.

3. Whenever you eat a meal or a snack, you "play" the appropriate cards.

Anytime you eat, whether a snack, or a complete meal, you simply take the appropriate cards out of the left side of your "Deal-A-Meal Wallet," and place them into a "meal" pocket on the right side of the wallet. When you run out of cards, you're done eating for the day. You've eaten the appropriate number of calories in a nutritionally balanced combination.

SOME CALL THEM SLEAZY OPERATIONS, OTHERS SAY THEY'RE A VALUABLE SERVICE. EITHER WAY, MAIL-ORDER MARRIAGES ARE BOOMING.

WOULD YOU ORDER A MATE THROUGH THE MAIL?

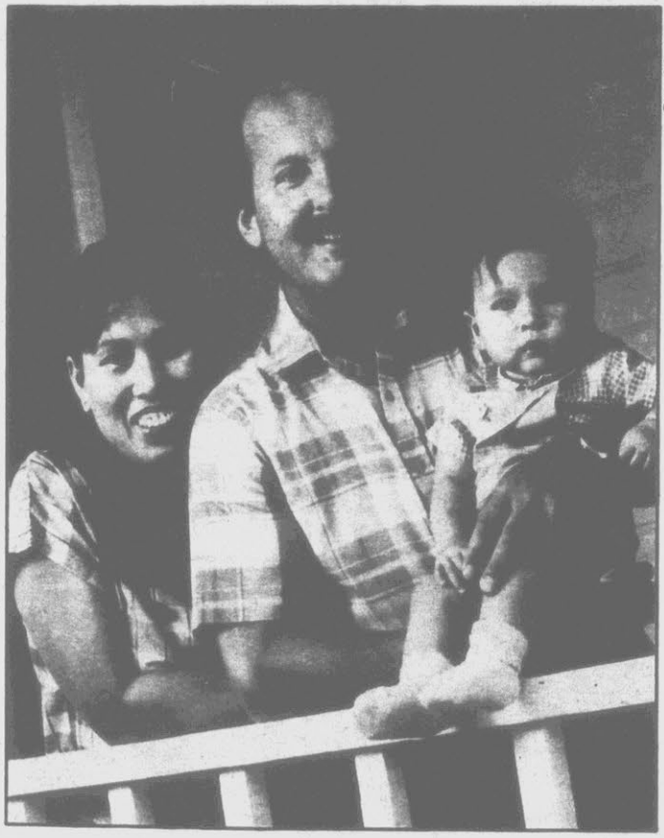

SMILING BRIGHTLY, TESSIE Lim Florence trundles a cart containing five mail sacks to the loading dock of the Santa Maria, Calif., post office. The sacks contain thousands of catalogs that she is mailing to men all over the U.S. The products advertised are Asian women who wish to marry Americans.

The mail-order bride market has mushroomed in the last decade. In 1970, only two Asians entered the U.S. on fiancé visas. In 1987, the number was 3233.

Three very sophisticated companies —all registered businesses—dominate the market. Tessie Florence's American Asian Worldwide Services, which began in 1979, will gross about $350,000 this year, trailing behind the kingpin, Cherry Blossoms. That operation was started in Washington State in 1974 by John Broussard, a 64-year-old Harvard graduate. It now is owned by Dr. Charles Morin and Bob Burrows, who used to manage the business. "We do about $500,000 a year," says Burrows. And George Elkington and his mail-order wife, Victoria, figure that their firm, The Asian Experience, started in 1984 in Novato, Calif., will gross $200,000 this year.

The mainstay of each service is a catalog with photos, biographies and pithy statements from the women. The women pay nothing. The charge for the men may be as little as $14 for an introductory catalog to $750 for a series of catalogs displaying 3375 different women.

American Asian Worldwide Services helped Roger Lirette, 57, find a wife by placing a personal ad for him in a Manila newspaper. "After many letters and phone calls," says Lirette, an artist from Santa Maria, Calif., "I settled on Raquel, a university graduate in the Philippines. She was a 31-year-old widow with an 11-year-old son. I was there a month. We didn't fall in love right away. I went home and returned later for an additional two months. And we got married. Her boy has put spice in my life."

Gwendolen Cates

Fred Roleff, 41, with wife, Edna, 32, and son, Max, at their home in Savage, Minn. The couple met in 1986 through American Asian Worldwide Services.

THE MEN TEND TO BE FED UP WITH FEMINISM. THE ASIAN WIVES THEY SEEK ARE YOUNG, SUBMISSIVE, EAGER TO IMPROVE THEIR LOT.

More than 50 percent of the mail-order brides come from the Philippines. "They are favored because they speak English and have some familiarity with American ways," explains Feelie Lee of UCLA's Pacific Rim Programs.

What's in it for the mail-order bride? Are these forlorn country girls—uneducated, jobless, unmarriageable?

"None of the above," says Esminia Luluquisen of Honolulu, the project director of a one-year study financed by the U.S. Department of Education. "We found that all had at least a high school education. Many were nurses or teachers or in finance. But they wanted to economically improve their lives. And some of them really are better off."

It sounds great, but is there a flip side?

There are some sleazy operations. Typical is one in El Paso called Training and Discipline for Live-In Maids. It has attempted to circulate fliers in Manila recruiting women as "maidservants." The flier says it is a maidservant's "duty to satisfy her employer's sexual desires as he tries you out for marriage." But the legitimate operators, according to the Department of Education study, "do not arrange marriages... and make no specific guarantees of sexual favors, marriage or even that letters will be answered."

Still, many feminists object to the practice for other reasons. "We don't like the aura of it seeming to be women up for sale," says Kelli Conlin of the New York City chapter of the National Organization for Women. "And we are concerned about what may happen to them if the marriage falls apart and they are abandoned in a strange land."

To ensure legitimacy, a new law requires that anyone planning a mail-order marriage must prove that the parties have met face to face within two years prior to seeking a visa. Before that meeting, the couple exchange photos. But a picture doesn't tell everything—as Tessie Lim Florence herself knows well. When she was 35 and a science teacher in Manila, a personal ad led her to Louis Florence, a 42-year-old aerospace engineer on early retirement because of a heart condition. He and Tessie began a feverish exchange of letters, audiotapes and phone calls. When he proposed, Tessie said "yes." They arranged to meet at the Manila airport. Tessie, 4 feet 11½ and weighing less than 100 pounds, remained out of view. Then she saw her fiancé—all 300 pounds of him.

"I thought, 'God help me. What can I do?'" she recalls. "But then I thought, 'He is a good man. He has come so far. At least I should welcome him.'" In short order, there were wedding bells.

Are the men who use such services losers? "No," says Davor Jedlicka, a sociologist at the University of Texas at

BY BERNARD GAVZER

Tyler who four years ago conducted a study of 265 men with mail-order brides. "In that group," he says, "63 percent earned more than $20,000 a year, 42 percent were managers or professionals, and more than half had at least two years of college. Most had been married at least once. The median age was 37."

The Department of Education study found no divorces among the mail-order brides it interviewed, and Tessie Florence says only 10 percent of her clients' marriages have ended in divorce. By contrast, the National Center for Health Statistics in Hyattsville, Md., reported that in 1980—the most recent year for which there are figures—44 percent of all marriages in the U.S. ended in divorce.

But the reason for the difference isn't necessarily that mail-order marriages are made in heaven. As UCLA's Feelie Lee sees it, "First, many of the women are Catholic and do not believe in divorce. Divorce would be disgraceful. And they are at the mercy of a strange society and would be fearful of being abandoned. Also, romantic love is a Western concept. For the Asian, marriage is for procreation. Love is icing on the cake."

Religious leaders are reluctant to criticize the practice on the face of it. "Historically, there is no basis for saying this is wrong," says Msgr. John G. Woolsey, director of the Archdiocese of New York's Office of Christian and Family Development, although he adds that such practices may violate the spirit of a loving relationship. Rabbi Alexander Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, notes that many Jewish immigrants sought mates by placing ads in personal columns. "Of course, there could be abuses," he admits. "But I see nothing wrong in this. I say, 'God bless them and give them success.'"

Many of the operators of mail-order bride businesses think there should be a licensing system. "That could keep the sleazos out of this very legitimate and useful service," says Victoria Elkington. All insist that the prospects look very good for their firms. "The men who have made happy marriages can't seem to stop talking about it," says Bob Burrows.

And what about Tessie Florence, a widow since her husband's death in 1985? She admits that she would like to marry again. So why not place an ad?

"I don't think I'd be good for them," she says candidly. "I am too much Americanized and too independent."

Wendy Ralston seems like a normal young woman—except for one thing. Every so often, her heart stops beating.

'THEY WOULDN'T LET ME GIVE UP'

Gwendolen Cates

Wendy Ralston, now a junior at Western Illinois University, says, "I have a lot of good friends that care about me." That includes 30 students and professors who learned CPR "just in case" she needs it.

WENDY RALSTON looks like nothing so much as a normal 20-year-old college kid—and that is a considerable achievement. In her dorm at Western Illinois University, surrounded by pictures of her family and her dog, she seemed like just another young woman living away from home for the first time. That she is a medical phenomenon, a person whose heart has stopped beating 86 times, is not a fact that she advertises—and it certainly hasn't slowed her down. "A lot of that has to do with my parents," she says. "They wouldn't let me give up. They wouldn't let me turn myself into the kind of person who's incapable of taking care of herself."

Wendy was born with an unusual heart condition—long QT syndrome—that causes her heart occasionally to beat so rapidly that it fibrillates, has rapid irregular contractions, then goes into cardiopulmonary arrest. Today, thanks to new medical technology, she is living a relatively normal life. Even Wendy is somewhat amazed she has come this far.

"When I was 8 years old, I had a blackout spell in class," she remembers. "They thought it was epilepsy." Unlike most epileptics, though, Wendy suffered persistent spells of weakness that left her feeling sick and unable to do chores or schoolwork. A series of doctors found nothing wrong. "They said I was a hypochondriac," she says. "My teachers were told to just ignore me when I said I didn't feel well. They tended to do just that."

All that changed on one dramatic summer afternoon six years ago.

"I was waiting in line at a movie theater with some friends," Wendy recalls. "I went into what I thought was an epileptic attack. I woke up about three weeks later, in the hospital."

Wendy's heart had stopped. Through some incredible luck, a paramedic team happened to be parked at a store a few yards away. In the next 24 hours, her heart stopped 56 times. Each time, she was revived. Finally, after three weeks in a coma, she pulled through—with surprisingly few ill effects.

"I have some memory loss," she says. "My childhood has to be filled in for me. I have a harsh voice because they were in a hurry when they put the respirator down my throat, and they scraped it. But mentally I'm all here." Wendy is fuzzy about most of the period when she and the doctors fought for her life, but she's clear on one important point. "The thing I remember," she says with a conspiratorial smile, "was my dad telling me that if I pulled through, I would never have to do dishes again. I never have."

Her heart was subject to near-fatal seizures. Now a small, implanted machine keeps it in rhythm.

The six years since then have been a time of recovery—and not just from physical illness. Wendy has had to deal with the experience of not being believed when she knew she was sick. "I've had trouble forgiving people," she admits. But, with the aid of counseling and her own strength, most of the anger has faded. "I'm a very stubborn person," she says, then laughs. "I've been called 'Rockhead' Ralston. I don't let things like that get the better of me."

Although she finally was diagnosed correctly, Wendy was far from cured. Her rare heart defect meant that she had to be continually monitored. Her parents refused to let her sleep over at friends' houses or even to date boys who did not know cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). She started her higher education at a community college near her home in Romeoville, Ill., but she yearned for the life of a college student at a big school. A breakthrough in medical technology made that possible.

"I had an operation in 1986 to install an automatic defibrillator in my abdomen," Wendy says. The machine, set in a pocket crafted under the skin of the stomach, is a small equivalent to the paddles that doctors apply to the chests of heart-attack victims to restart their hearts. When her heart rate reaches 150, and the rhythm is abnormal, the defibrillator sends electrical currents to the heart to shock it back into rhythm.

It has made a tremendous difference in the kind of life she can lead. "If I didn't have the defibrillator, I wouldn't be here at college," Wendy says. "I can do things for myself and take care of things on my own now."

She isn't quite over her problems—yet. "I can still get into a deep depression," Wendy admits. "I have self-pity now and then. I think, 'Why me?' But I have a cheeseburger, and it goes away."

She is generous in thanking the people who have made her new life possible—not just her parents and doctors but also the 30 professors and students at Western Illinois who learned CPR just in case a disaster occurs. "They'll probably have to use it on somebody's grandmother before they use it on me," Wendy says, "but they'll never know how much I appreciate it. I have a lot of good friends that care about me. They're there for me. That has helped me a lot more than they realize."

Wendy believes she has survived all this for a reason. "I don't know what it is," she says. "I don't know what I'm going to do. But I'm going to do something. I better do something pretty big. I figure I should stick around and see what it is."

Terrified Teenagers Meet the Blob

Chuck Russell's variation on the 1958 horror classic The Blob uses state-of-the-art high tech and a bigger budget to create new unimaginable horrors to terrify teenagers Kevin Dillon and Shawnee Smith during one very long night in California. The blob evolves from an embryo into a complex predator that changes shape and grows a lot each time it feeds. Yet it can still slide under a door or squeeze through an air vent: You can't escape. P.S. To double your fun, also try the '58 version, with Steve McQueen in his first starring role. It's on video.

Mob Biggie Takes a Wife

Blood Vows: The Story of a Mafia Wife got fantastic ratings when it first aired, and no wonder. Melissa Gilbert plays a struggling young working woman from the Midwest who meets a gorgeous and charming multimillionaire lawyer (Joe Penny) who falls madly in love with her, marries her and wants to set her up in business. Unfortunately, Gorgeous is a biggie in the mob, and bad things happen to good people. Stock the fridge, sit back and enjoy. NBC, tonight, 9-11 p.m. EDT.

Rue McClanahan

ON THE GOLDEN GIRLS, RUE McClanahan's hobby seems to be sex. But that's television. In real life, she walks. "I can't stand jogging," she told me, "and a couple of years ago I ran into a class of speed walkers. Now I walk three miles a day, but no more. And I'm going to get those things you strap on your ankles. They burn up the calories even more."

Rue was in New York as spokesman for Sanka, the coffee people, who sponsor a national walking program. Besides walking a bit, she saw six plays in five days and did eight interviews. But she didn't do much shopping. "I hate to shop," she said. "I buy my clothes at discount from Judy Evans, who designs the costumes for The Golden Girls."

She was born in Oklahoma and lives in California ("I just bought a big house I didn't like, and now I have to redo it," she said). Her first professional acting job was onstage in Erie, Pa. Then it was off to L.A. to be "discovered." Instead, she recalled, "I worked four years as a waitress, a secretary, a delivery girl, trying to break in. In 1964, I moved to New York and got an off-Broadway role in The Secret Life of Walter Mitty. And, except for one brief, panicky moment when I took in sewing, I've been a professional actress ever since. I guess one of these days I may get good at it."

She still studies and right now is taking a class in Shakespeare. Her theory as to why The Golden Girls works? "Two reasons: The scripts are so good, and we know how to interpret the scripts." She likes her role as Blanche best but thinks Sophia is really the richest role in the series.

The "girls" are together almost constantly for eight months a year, doing the show. But the actresses don't socialize much during their breaks. "We fly off our separate ways," Rue said. Each, however, spends time making appearances at banquets, both for business and charity. "I go to lots of banquets," she said. "Too many."

Rue has done a made-for-TV film that's to be aired late this year, about a mother trying to marry off four daughters, and she has two other projects on the burner. "I was asked to do The Glass Menagerie onstage in Los Angeles," she said, "but I'm still undecided. And then, next year, there's this outrageous Auntie Mame-type spy thriller NBC wants me to play."

In the meantime, there are her pets—five dogs and two cats—and several pet-care charities. "I don't watch television, and I don't go to very many films," she admitted. "But I love the theater." And, she adds, her only child, a 29-year-old son who teaches guitar in California.

BORN: Feb. 21, 1935, in Healdton, Okla.
PERSONAL: Married and divorced: Tom Bish (one son, Mark); Norman Hartweg; Peter DeMaio; Gus Fisher; Tom Keel.
TV SERIES: Maude, 1972-78; Apple Pie, 1978; Mama's Family, 1983; The Golden Girls, 1985–.
THEATER: Includes The Secret Life of Walter Mitty, 1964; Who's Happy Now?, 1970 (Obie Award); California Suite, 1977 (Broadway).
AWARDS: Emmy, 1987, for The Golden Girls.

Buck Sheeting, Star

Rue McClanahan will be playing the sexpot on "The Golden Girls" again next season. She'll also star in an NBC movie, playing mama to four slightly younger "girls."

BRADY'S BITS

She got her name because of a deal her mother and her Aunt Winona worked out. "They agreed each one could name the other's firstborn," said Rue. "My father was Edwin and my mother was Breda Rhona-Nell. So my Aunt Winona badgered my mother into naming me Eddi-Rue. When I was 21 and trying to become an actress, my boyfriend convinced me that wasn't an actress's name, so I dropped the Eddi." What happened to the boyfriend? "He didn't want to be married to an actress, and I didn't want to be a schoolteacher's wife in Denver."

Differences: 1. Sign is missing. 2. Cap is different. 3. Club is shorter. 4. Arm is lowered. 5. Flag is different. 6. Sleeve is shorter.

• BORDER WAR! Arrange a dozen coins, four to a side in the form of a square, as shown at right. Now challenge friends to change the position of four of these coins so that each of the square's four sides contains a total of five coins rather than four. Just how can this be done?

No fair peeking.

Place coin 2 atop coin 1; 5 atop 4; 8 on 7; 11 on 10.

WORD SQUARE PUZZLER

Five five-letter words corresponding to the definitions below complete this word square poser (diagram above). How quickly can you fill in missing words?

Definitions

2. 007's job description.
3. All keyed up.
4. To occur as a result.

Remember, a word square consists of words that read alike both across and down.

1. Flea. 2. Louse. 3. Wasp. 4. Ant. 5. Moth.

SWIM TEAM! One partner of a swim team is missing above. To complete picture, draw connecting lines 1 to 2, 3, etc.
