Medical Debris Washes Ashore At Indian Beach

INDIAN BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Medical debris was found on a North Carolina beach Monday night, and police are investigating reports that more material washed up on Carteret County beaches this morning, Indian Beach Police Chief John Stevens said today.

Used syringes and vials such as those used in blood tests were found in a plastic trash bag that washed up at Indian Beach Monday night, Stevens said.

"It has blood vials, testing vials, and some used syringes in it and other medical debris," Stevens said. "I did not detect any blood. I opened the top of the sack up to see what was in it. There were no blood samples or anything.... I didn't see any needles. It appeared the needles had been cut off."

"We don't foresee any problems at this time as far as closing the beaches," Stevens said.

Stevens said he is awaiting direction from Tom Hinton, the emergency management coordinator for Carteret County, on what to do with the bag of material found Monday night.

"I don't think anybody is dumping anything from around here," Hinton said. "It's probably washing down from New York and New Jersey. If it hits this beach, it'll probably turn up further south too, around Onslow County."

Because of the high tide, Stevens said he and the police chief of nearby Pine Knoll Shores had so far been unable to get onto the beach to look at the other materials found today.

"All we know is there's some stuff washed up and we don't know what it contains," Stevens said. "The tide is high and it will be two hours before we can get out on the beach with a vehicle. I understand there are several items up and down the beach."

The discoveries are the latest in a series of reports of medical debris found along North Carolina beaches in recent days.

The state public health laboratory will analyze the dark brown substance in a clear glass vial that washed ashore at Atlantic Beach on Saturday, authorities said. The vial is being sent to Raleigh today, Hinton said.

A Raleigh nurse, Lois Cummings, told WTVD in Durham that she found an intravenous unit Sunday at Cape Lookout. Ms. Cummings said she turned the material over to U.S. Park Service officials.

The head of the Duke University Marine Lab in Beaufort said a woman had called him Monday and asked about two other vials she had discovered on the beach.

John Costlow, the lab's director, said none of the vials had come from Duke researchers. The dark brown substance, which some officials speculated might be blood, could be any number of things, he said.

As for the other two, Costlow said he asked the woman who had called to read the label inscriptions to him. They apparently were empty vials that had contained sodium bicarbonate — baking soda — which doctors sometimes use with intravenous injections, he said.

Fed Boosts Bank Lending Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board announced today it is boosting its key bank lending rate from 6 percent to 6.5 percent, effective immediately.

It was the first change in the central bank's discount rate since Sept. 7 and put the rate at its highest in more than two years.

The boost is expected to send higher a variety of other interest rates, including those on credit cards and mortgages.

The increase put the discount rate, which is the fee the Fed charges to make loans to U.S. financial institutions, at its highest level since March 7, 1986, when it was 7 percent.

The Fed, in a statement, said its decision "reflects the intent of the Federal Reserve to reduce inflationary pressures" and "was taken in light of the growing spread of market interest rates over the discount rate."

Analysts had expected the Fed to tighten its reins on the money supply this week, but few were expecting an increase in the discount rate, which is the most dramatic move the Fed can take.

Most were expecting the Fed to push up the federal funds rate, the interest banks charge each other for overnight loans, by an eighth or a quarter of a percentage point from its current 7.75 percent.

Tuesday's discount rate increase marked the second under the reign of Alan Greenspan, who took over as Fed chairman a year ago. In September, the central bank boosted the rate from 5.5 percent to 6 percent, the first increase in three years.

That move was also taken in response to inflationary fears, but was later cited by some analysts as a contributing factor to the October stock market crash.

After the crash, the Fed pumped liquidity into the banking system. It loosened money supplies again in mid-winter, when rising business inventories raised concern that the economy was softening.

Since then, however, government statistics have portrayed a strong economy and concern has shifted from recession to inflation.

Last month, Greenspan said in congressional testimony that the Fed "at this juncture might be well advised to err more on the side of restrictiveness rather than of stimulus."

Iraqis Dance In Streets As U.N. Sets Aug. 20 Date For Gulf Truce

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Fireworks and gunfire pierced the sky in the Iraqi capital early today and people danced in the streets as the government declared victory in its eight-year war against Iran.

Fireworks cascaded over the Tigris River that cuts through the city and tens of thousands of rounds of ammunition exploded against the sky after the post-midnight announcement on Iraqi television.

State-controlled TV and radio called on Iraqis to "celebrate the great victory achieved by Iraq" on "the greatest day of all" and announced a three-day period of celebration.

The celebrations followed an announcement Monday by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar that a cease-fire would begin Aug. 20, followed by direct talks between Iraq and Iran.

Men danced in the streets of Baghdad during the pre-dawn celebrations and horn-honking cars loaded with jubilant Iraqis waving palm and laurel branches drove wildly through the city.

"The war is over. Victory for Iraq," said a man at the entrance to the Al-Rashid Hotel as he looked at a sky exploding with gunfire.

"The war is over. Praise be to God," said a woman beside him.

Tracer bullets, flares and machine-gun fire streamed into the sky for hours after the announcement while bangs, booms and thuds from anti-aircraft guns, rifles and pistols echoed through the city.

Teen-agers in T-shirts fired off repeated rounds from automatic rifles while stranded in a median of a street in the posh Mansour district by a gridlock of noisy traffic at about 4:30 a.m.

Jubilant soldiers blocked one of the city's main streets to pound on cars and shake hands with passers-by.

"Here, take this," giddy security men told a reporter in front of the Al-Rashid Hotel as they thrust a loaded Kalashnikov rifle toward him.

But instead of handing it to him, the guards turned and fired the gun into the sky. They laughed with men guarding a government building across the street, one of whom unleashed rounds from a machine gun barely pointed in the air.

One car in the hotel's parking lot showed a fresh bullet hole in its hood.

Children scampered about the parking lot and through the city streets, collecting empty rifle cartridges that clattered from the guns.

Pitt Will Have Adult Drivers

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County schools should have enough adult bus drivers to begin the 1988-89 school year, but they're still looking to expand the roll, school officials say.

"We are in good shape right now," Chet Preyar, assistant superintendent of personnel development services, said. "It appears we will have fully certified drivers for all of the districts to begin school," but each attendance area will continue to recruit adults because of the higher turnover rate expected.

"The adult drivers generally are driving for economic reasons," he said. "They are seeking employment, and this is not a full-time job. When it (the full-time job) comes down the road, they're going to accept it."

June 15 was the last day the U.S. Labor Department allowed 17-year-old school bus drivers to remain on the job in North Carolina. The extension from April 1 given to the state was on the condition that Gov. Jim Martin ask the General Assembly for $24 million to raise bus driver salaries across the state.

The state has increased the average hourly wage to $6.10. Carl Toot, transportation supervisor, said. "We have not set a scale yet. That has to include benefits so the salary may be $5.30 with 80 cents worth of benefits." The pay scale for the drivers will be set later this month, Toot said.

There are about 230 certified drivers for the 213 Pitt County buses that will be on the road, Preyar said. "Ideally, we'd like 250 approved and on the list," which would provide a pool of substitute drivers.

The school system is conducting a bus-driver class today through Thursday at D.H. Conley High School from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. for those interested in being certified to drive a bus. Bus drivers must be at least 18 years old, have a valid driver's license and have not received a ticket in the last six months.

On Aug. 22 a workshop for all bus drivers will be conducted at Conley from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Preyar said.

"We ensure the bus drivers are oriented to the opening procedures of the coming year, and they will receive first aid" instruction, he said. Student discipline also will be discussed.

"Right at the present time, we have 56 slots to fill," Claude Kennedy, assistant principal and bus supervisor at D.H. Conley, said. "With the individuals I have contacted, the ones that have driven last year, and the ones that completed the bus classes this year, we are three to seven short."

"It's not as critical as I thought it might be," he said, adding the driver wage increase from the General Assembly helped recruiting.

"That has probably had much of an impact as anything else," he said. "If the legislature continues to help and even if we find funds at the local level that would provide an incentive."

Beryl Goes Over Louisiana Coast

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tropical storm Beryl moved across New Orleans today, prompting the National Weather Service to alert 16 coastal parishes for possible heavy rains and raising hopes the storm might eventually dissipate.

"If it continues to move west or northwest, Beryl should gradually weaken," the service said.

Earlier, several coastal communities were evacuated as the storm, which has already forced thousands of oil workers from their offshore rigs, intensified off the Louisiana-Mississippi Gulf Coast.

At 7 a.m. CDT today, the National Weather Service said, the center of the Atlantic season's second tropical storm was just northwest of New Orleans at 7 a.m. CDT today at latitude 30.2 north and longitude 90.3 west. Highest sustained winds were 50 mph.

Tropical storm warnings were posted from Morgan City, La., to Pensacola, Fla.

Champagne Flows For Sarah's Baby

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew arrived at a London hospital today with a bouquet of red roses to visit his wife, Sarah, and their newborn daughter as delighted Britons celebrated the princess' birth on an especially lucky day.

Champagne corks popped, bells rang and cameras flashed outside Portland Hospital in central London with the announcement Monday night of the birth of a 6-pound, 12-ounce girl to Andrew, the Duke of York, and his red-haired duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson.

The Princess of York, who has not yet been named, is their first child and the fifth grandchild of Queen Elizabeth II.

Jane Makim, the duchess' elder sister who lives in Australia, told British reporters that her mother, Susan Barrantes, who was at the hospital for the birth, had telephoned to say the baby was very alert, didn't have much hair and had "a petite little face... just fit for a princess."

Andrew, sporting a yellow rose in the lapel of his dark blue suit, smiled and waved to a large crowd of journalists and several dozen well-

Firm Admits Driver Negligent

RALEIGH (AP) — Just before the start of a trial arising from a 1985 truck-school bus collision in Greene County that killed eight people, a Virginia food-supply company said its truck driver had been negligent.

The admission by Military Distributors of Virginia Inc., which supplies food to military bases, came Monday in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

"This is somewhat unique," said Joseph D. Morrissey of Richmond, Va., an attorney representing six children injured in the wreck and the estate of a seventh child who died.

"The defense has admitted, in the context of this case only, the negligence of their driver," Morrissey said.

Seven children died and many more were injured May 31, 1985, after a tractor-trailer truck driven by Karson Lee Conger of Norfolk, Va., crossed the center line of U.S. 13 just south of Snow Hill and sheared off the right side of the bus, which had been carrying 25 elementary students from Snow Hill Primary and West Greene School.

The tractor-trailer veered into another truck and burst into flames. Conger, who died in the wreck, apparently lost consciousness and was trapped inside the flaming cab of the truck.

The trial that began Monday consolidates three lawsuits filed against Military Distributors by the estate of James Arthur Lee, 12, who died at the scene of the accident from massive injuries, and by six children who were injured. Other suits are pending.

The trial was to be heard on allegations of negligence by Conger and by the company for hiring him. Because the company admitted negligence, U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. instructed the jury of six men and six women to determine if the plaintiffs were entitled to damages and the amount.

The company's last-minute admission presented a problem for the plaintiffs' attorneys.

Numerous objections by George Ragsdale of Raleigh, who represents Military Distributors, prompted Dupree to remind the plaintiffs several times that information on the negligence of the driver was no longer relevant.

Dupree also excluded from evidence, over a lengthy protest by Morrissey, an eight-minute videotape recorded by a television news reporter who happened upon the scene of the accident.

Dupree first dismissed the jury before viewing the tape showing the aftermath of the collision with bodies of children lying in the road and rescue workers covered in blood moving the injured to safety.

Dupree said the tape was "unduly inflammatory and... not necessary

Two Arrested

Greenville police arrested two people on lottery ticket possession charges Monday.

Officers A.P. White and S.C. Locke said Jasper James Burnette, 34, of 321 Oak Grove Ave. and Willie J. Hobbs, 50, of 709 Fleming St. were charged with possession of lottery tickets about 8:11 p.m. in connection with an incident at the intersection of Pamlico and Myrtle avenues.

Locke said Hobbs was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

The officers said $1,569 in cash and $18.31 in change, as well as a .38 caliber pistol and seven books and a number of loose lottery tickets were confiscated in connection with the arrests.

Burnett was listed on arrest records as an employee of the city's public works department, while Hobbs was identified as an Empire Brushes Inc. employee.

Miss USA Started Career As Model

By SHANNON HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

Courtney Gibbs did not start out as Miss USA. Her career began as a model — with a little luck and a supportive grandmother.

"I was one of those lucky girls with a grandmother who absolutely adored me," Miss Gibbs said during a promotional visit to Greenville. "We went into the agency in Dallas, signed a contract and I started the next day."

After seven years as a model, including two of European assignments, Miss Gibbs entered the Miss Texas pageant.

She was apprehensive, but found the 11 days of activities rewarding. "I was skeptical about participating in the pageant and was the last girl to enter," she said. "As it turned out, I won."

In March, Miss Gibbs became the fourth Miss Texas to be crowned Miss USA.

"When I heard my name announced as the new Miss USA, I felt as if I were not breathing, my heart was not beating, and my blood was not flowing," Miss Gibbs said.

As a representative of J.C. Penney's and Procter & Gamble, Miss Gibbs has toured Mexico, Germany, Italy, Turkey and Greece.

"We met with government officials," she said. "That's when I began to feel like a political ambassador, instead of just a beauty pageant contestant."

Before coming to Greenville, Miss Gibbs visited Wilmington, Hickory and Winston-Salem. She left the area for planned appearances in Rocky Mount and Goldsboro.

Frequent rains did not dampen her opinion of North Carolina.

"I was impressed with the area," Miss Gibbs said. "I didn't realize how close to the beach I would be."

To keep in shape while traveling, Miss Gibbs enjoys swimming, aerobics and walking around the cities she visits.

"Traveling makes dieting a problem," she said. "I like to splurge, so I have to watch myself."

Following her reign as Miss USA, she hopes to pursue a career in broadcasting or acting, specifically in television movies.

Miss Gibbs gave some advice to young girls aspiring to be involved in pageants.

"Be yourself, have fun," she said. "Only enter (pageants) for yourself, not for others."

The rewards, she said, go beyond the title and tiara.

"I have made friends in Texas, across the country and around the world."

Boardings Increase

A total of 4,058 passengers boarded commuter-airline flights at Pitt-Greenville Airport during July, making it the busiest month this year and the second busiest month ever for commercial air traffic.

Airport manager Jim Turcotte said the number of July boardings ranked second behind October 1987, when 4,203 passengers boarded Piedmont Commuter and American Eagle flights at Pitt-Greenville.

In July, Piedmont Commuter, operated by Charlotte-based CCAir Inc., accounted for 3,404 boardings, a 22-percent increase over the 2,794 boardings in July 1987.

American Eagle boardings totaled 654, compared with the 718 passengers boarded in July 1987.

In October of last year, Piedmont Commuter boarded 3,443 passengers, while American Eagle boarded 760.

Systemwide, July boardings set a record for the most passengers for any month in the history of CCAir's Piedmont Commuter, with 73,964 passengers.

Ayden Board OKs Conditional Work

AYDEN — The Ayden Board of Commissioners has approved seven rehabilitation contracts for houses under the Community Development Block Grant Program on the condition that the work be scaled down to meet the program's budget.

Town clerk Ralph Ford said the eight houses on West Avenue, East Avenue and Mill Street are in need of repair as much as any in the town, but the bids on the houses came in high.

The town budgeted $13,026 for each house, and the bids averaged $13,740 per unit. Ford said the town will try to reduce the work on each house to ensure that every house is included.

Avery Construction was the low bidder on three houses, Vernon Pittman was low bidder on two and Jones Plumbing was low bidder on two. All three contractors are already working on Ayden houses under the program.

Work on a eighth house, which is unoccupied, will be delayed until the end of the project because of the high cost, Ford said. Jones Plumbing was low bidder on the project.

At the group's monthly meeting Monday night, the board also renewed the town's contract with attorney Paul White, who provides legal services for Ayden. Under the agreement, White will receive $225 a month for five hours of work, and $60 an hour for any additional work.

The board also approved a measure to grant a 15-foot wide easement for American Telephone and Telegraph. The easement begins at the end of the town's cemetery and runs 500-feet across the west side of the town dump. AT&T plans to install underground fiber optic cable four-foot deep.

In other business, the board approved a request to annex Freedom Baptist Church; the board selected Carolina Telephone Long Distance to serve as the town's long distance company and the board authorized accountant Lloyd Moody of Greenville to audit the Housing Authority for a fee of $1,000.

Six Thefts Reported

Investigators said six thefts, among them a video-cassette recorder, a motorized bicycle and a lawnmower, were reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer E.L. Butts said a video-cassette recorder valued at $700 was taken from an office in the regional rehabilitation center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 7:38 a.m., while Officer R.G. Mendenhall said a 1980 model motorized bicycle was taken from an apartment in Tar River Estates in an incident reported at 11:01 a.m.

Officer B.D. Dobbs said a lawnmower was taken from 702 E. Third St. in an incident reported at 1:16 a.m. and a stereo and two speakers were taken from a vehicle parked at Evans Street Auto Service at 1525 S. Evans St. in an incident reported at 3:35 p.m. Officer H.D. Hines said a bicycle was taken from 105 S. Eastern St. in an incident reported at 5:32 p.m.

According to Officer S.C. Locke, a purse containing $50 was taken from an office in the Pitt County office building at 1717 W. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 5:41 p.m.

Board To Meet

The Subdivision Review Board will meet Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Community Building on the corner of Fourth and Greene streets.

Council Accepts Tourism Budget

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1988-89 budget for the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority was approved by the Greenville City Council Monday at a workshop session at City Hall, but not before the authority was criticized by two black council members.

The 4-1 vote approving the $240,000 budget came after Rufus Huggins and Mildred Council voiced concerns about black representation relating to the authority's staffing and efforts.

Negative votes from those two council members defeated the authority's budget when it first appeared before Greenville's governing body July 25.

Although the 3-2 vote at that session favored approval, the budget could not pass because four "yes" votes are required for passage. The matter was referred to Monday night's workshop session for more consideration.

Huggins changed his vote Monday to the affirmative — but said he still feels the authority does not fully incorporate all representatives of the entire community.

"I understand the importance of getting this budget passed and that the county has already approved it," he said. "I am willing to sacrifice the next year to more fully understand how this authority operates and to give some more direct input."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Council again cast a negative vote.

"Until I can really feel assured that this convention authority can truly be representative in terms of staff and also in its promotions, and be a representative of the whole city, I still have problems with it and I'm not prepared at this moment, unless I can be assured that efforts are made to have some black representation," she said.

"It is all our taxpayer's money (involved) and I feel that there definitely needs to be some representation and I do not like to support anything that doesn't represent all the people," she added.

Council member Nancy Jenkins said, after talking with authority representatives, she believes they intend to keep the council better informed of authority activities and efforts in the coming year.

"I don't have any problem at this point voting for (the budget) with those assurances," she said.

Although the authority's budget was being considered by the council for the second time, no representatives of the authority were present to listen or comment on the minority councilmembers concerns. Al Nichols, executive director of the authority, could not be reached this morning for comment.

According to the bylaws and rules of the convention authority, the budget must be submitted to the city manager for processing and be approved through the regular budget procedures of the city. Budget approval was also required from the Pitt County Commissioners.

At the July 25 workshop session, authority Chairman Rudolph Alexander told the council the primary thrust of activities in 1988-89 will be devoted to implementing a comprehensive marketing plan to help Greenville and Pitt County to become the center for conventions and meetings in eastern North Carolina.

Of the $240,000 budget — which shows no increase over last year's amount — $70,000 is allocated to staff salary and benefits including $4,000 for temporary employment; $20,000 for printing brochures, newsletters and other marketing materials; $9,000 for specialty promotional aids such as bumper stickers, buttons and flags; $8,000 for meeting and trade show registrations, $6,300 for rent; $4,000 for planning and development, and $20,243 listed as a contingency fund.

Edgecombe Backs Out Of Merger

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Edgecombe County Board of Commissioners has voted to withdraw its support of a school merger plan for Nash and Edgecombe counties, a move likely to halt plans for a merger referendum this fall.

The commissioners rescinded a June 30 vote after a Superior Court judge dismissed a lawsuit that would have blocked the referendum. Judge William C. Griffin Jr. of Williamston ruled that rival plans developed by school officials in Nash and Edgecombe counties could be reviewed by the state Board of Education in order to be placed on a ballot for a November referendum.

Edgecombe County endorsed a plan, called "area merger," that would combine four school systems in Nash and Edgecombe counties into one system encompassed by both counties. The Tarboro and Rocky Mount school boards also approved that plan. The Nash County plan, called "county-line merger," would create one system in each county and split Rocky Mount, which straddles the two counties, between them.

Edgecombe County attorney Herbert Taylor told commissioners late Monday afternoon that withdrawing their support for area merger would avoid a divisive referendum and would allow merger supporters to develop a plan satisfactory to everyone, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

He said lawyers for the city of Rocky Mount and school boards of Rocky Mount, Tarboro and Edgecombe would recommend that those boards also withdraw support for the area merger plan from consideration by the state board, totally withdrawing support of the plan. According to Taylor, the state Attorney General's Office has said that withdrawing the plans would mean a referendum would not be held.

Rocky Mount city council member Helen Gay has said she is concerned that the Nash County proposal would divide the black community and dilute black voting strength.

Raleigh Site May Hide Early Society

RALEIGH (AP) — They paved in 1971. With the modern dirt cleared away, workers will begin the more exacting task of digging by hand and mapping foundations and other remnants of what was once an upper-class neighborhood.

"The vast majority of history that is written, is written about movers and shakers," Clauser said. "Here we have a chance to learn something about plain, ordinary folks."

"We're dealing with the first lot that was sold in Raleigh," he said. "We know this was an upper-class area, but what does upper class mean in the 1700s?"

John Clauser, state archaeologist with the Division of Archives and History, used a backhoe to scrape away soil piled on a corner of the site

On Monday, archaeologists began excavating the site, which will host the new state History Museum, hoping to unearth information about the "upper crust" of Raleigh society.

Strodes Preach In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — David Strode and his two preaching sons coped with noisy street cleaners, a marching band and some disapproving onlookers during two hours of sidewalk sermonizing Monday at Charlotte's main intersection.

Duffy, 11, and Matthew, 5, preached last spring at Eastfield Elementary School in Marion and were suspended from school, gaining nationwide publicity.

Monday, Strode said the boys again would preach before classes at school, to open Aug. 22. He said he might sue school officials if they again suspend the boys for violating a rule requiring students to enter school after arriving.

The Strodes' preaching Monday faced competition briefly from a drum and bugle corps performing at nearby NCNB Plaza.

The Strode boys preached loudly in one-minute intervals, stopping to sip soft frozen lemonade while their father preached or spoke to about six news reporters.

Costly Interchange Nears Construction

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Final engineering plans for the costliest, most elaborate highway interchange between Washington and Atlanta — the $43 million connection between Interstate 77 and Charlotte's southern outerbelt — will be authorized this week, state officials said.

Real estate agents for the N.C. Transportation Department have already begun acquiring part of the 105 acres needed to build the massive, sweeping interchange just south of Sugar Creek on I-77. Land purchases alone are expected to cost $12.2 million, officials said Monday.

The N.C. Board of Transportation, meeting Friday in Cherokee, is expected to appropriate the last of $1.1 million needed to design the interchange, a three-year effort being conducted by a state-hired consultant, American Engineers Inc. of Raleigh.

By May 1992, a complex web of ramps and bridges will rise 90 feet above the ground — equivalent to a seven-story building — connecting eight-lane sections of I-77 to the newly opened six-lane southern outerbelt that will extend to N.C. 51 in Pineville.

Work has already begun on a 1.3-mile section of the outerbelt connecting N.C. 51 to U.S. 521.

The interchange, which will incorporate 28.6 miles of single-lane roadway, is being designed to carry up to 100,000 vehicles a day by the year 2007, officials said.

IN THE STATE

Tailgaters

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Tailgaters are No. 1 on "Ten Most Disliked List" by members of the AAA Carolina Motor Club.

The 1,091 members who responded to the poll by the Aug. 1 deadline made tailgating their top complaint by a total of 2,352 points. Also ranking high on the "most disliked" list were drivers who failed to give adequate signals before turning and speeding.

Also drawing complaints were motorists who weave from lane to lane, motorists who run yellow lights, drivers who aren't paying attention, motorists driving too slow, changing lanes too quickly, not dimming lights and not coming to a complete stop before turning at red lights.

Garbage Crisis

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg County will produce about 649,000 tons of garbage this year, and the county is nearing a crisis in trying to get rid of it all.

If the trend continues, there's "a good possibility" that the Harrisburg Road landfill will have to close before a new landfill can open, said Ken Hoffman, county engineering director.

His comments came after a judge ruled last week against the county's proposed south Mecklenburg landfill.

Kidnap Ruling

HIGH POINT (AP) — A woman charged with kidnapping a 2-day-old baby from High Point Regional Hospital in June has been declared mentally incompetent to stand trial, authorities said.

Brenda Joyce Nobles, 37, of High Point is accused of dressing up as a nurse and taking the infant from his mother's arms June 20th, on the pretext that the baby had to be weighed.

The child, Jason McClure, was found unharmed two days later in the closet of a High Point home. Ms. Nobles was charged with abduction and her daughter, 19-year-old Sharon Slaydon, was charged with being an accessory after the abduction.

Youth Remove Camp Barriers

TUCKASEGEE, N.C. (AP) — Two organizations that had been seeking to establish, with the U.S. Forest Service, a recreational facility accessible to the handicapped have found it at Balsam Lodge in Jackson County.

"We hope to make this a model. It has the potential to help thousands," said Janie Robinson of Promoting Awareness Through The Environment and Recreation Network Systems, or PATTERNS.

Fourteen workers from Operation Raleigh, an international youth development program founded in Great Britain, are working to make the lodge and Balsam Lake barrier-free.

For the first time in his life, Colm Holmes last week found himself confined to a wheelchair, unable to move his legs or arms.

But Holmes, an 18-year-old from Northern Ireland, was far luckier than the dozen or so other handicapped people at Balsam Lodge last week. At the end of the day, he got to remove the rag that bound his knees and leave the wheelchair.

"When I started, I couldn't cope. I could do very little. I was having to ask a lot of people to do things for me," Holmes said.

Each of the 14 "venturers" from 10 countries must spend a day and night living as a handicapped person as part of their community service project.

Venturers are working alongside handicapped people to make bathrooms in the lodge accessible and to build trails that the handicapped can traverse easily. The trails are being built with a maximum grade of 5 percent to allow a person to maneuver a wheelchair to the lake or a quiet spot in the woods.

Ramps have been built into the lodge and facilities are being lowered so a wheelchair-bound person can reach them.

Holmes said he found out last Tuesday how hard it is to cook when the stove's controls are out of reach. He had been assigned to help with cooking while confined to the wheelchair.

15,000 Futures

Enrollment Means Record Needs

To a university, students mean black ink. So when the news of East Carolina University's anticipated record 15,000-student fall enrollment, some glee understandably accompanied the announcement. Twelve straight years of increased enrollment — what a coup for a school that's had to earn every advantage at least twice. Now, it's expanding on its own prowess.

But 15,000 students represent 15,000 individual needs. Fifteen thousand educations — 15,000 futures. That's a heavy charge. In exchange for this record growth, ECU must deliver a quality product to its burgeoning numbers.

Doing so means keeping the University's focus on academics, not figures. The education those 15,000 students seek must take priority. The numbers only serve to reinforce the importance of the learning process.

These students come to college for information, opportunity and enrichment. They need skills to help them live satisfying, productive lives and use their talents to society's advantage. These talents may be teaching, healing, programming, swimming, writing, budgeting, planning, designing, manufacturing, managing, acting or sculpting. And it is the diversity of this talent that perhaps has drawn a record 15,000 to ECU.

In 20 years the school has grown from a college that trained primarily teachers to a university offering higher degrees and distinguished research opportunities in most liberal arts fields. In addition, its business department garnered national recognition and its medical school grew from a fledgling to a leader.

As a result, ECU's challenge has become more complex. No longer can it concentrate on a small circle of strengths. It must work hard to serve the broad needs the growth of the past two decades has produced.

That's why the University has an obligation to the 15,000 students who seek knowledge from it this fall. ECU is duty-bound to provide this record-setting enrollment with learning that also breaks new ground.

So as growth and maturity bring ECU renown, the University must devote its attention to education — not numbers. Fifteen thousand minds and 15,000 futures shouldn't be wasted.

Problems Test Morale, Determination

Morale can't be very good among NASA technicians with the latest shutdown in a test firing of the space shuttle Discovery.

A problem caused computers to end the test just as it began last week.

It was one more of the many problems which has plagued Challenger since the disastrous flight explosion which destroyed the shuttle and killed its crew 2½ years ago. Since then engineers have been redesigning the rocket to make it safer. Even without flying, however, the shuttle has been plagued with problems — the latest causing still another delay.

There is not a person in the country who wouldn't want the shuttle to be as safe as possible before it takes another crew into space. Still one has to wonder when the next flight will come, if it will ever come, and if not, why should the nation continue to spend money on an expensive space program?

The United States' early rocket experiments produced failures. Nevertheless, when it made a national commitment to land men on the moon, it forged ahead until success came. That determination to get back into space does not seem to be present in 1988 even though the nation continues to spend billions on space vehicle development.

Obviously the United States made a mistake to begin sending relatively untrained civilians into space so soon. No doubt future flights will include only highly trained crewmen who are on board for technical or scientific purposes.

The nation will have to consider its commitment to space exploration and make a decision about whether to proceed with determination. The alternatives will be to spend funds without clear goals or to scale back on our space spending projects. With other nations moving into space, that last alternative doesn't seem viable.

Safety is essential but constant failure is embarrassing to a nation that has led the world in space exploration and technology. After the shuttle tragedy, NASA may be a little gun shy but it should not let that incident cripple its effectiveness.

The nation is clearly in a position of having to prove its space prowess again. Considering the competition — and the significance of space exploration to the country's national ideals — the United States has little choice but to apply the best in research and technology to its rocket program.

Flexible, Adaptive Education

WASHINGTON — Some years ago, a group of minority students took a standard pencil-and-paper examination as part of their training at Temple University's medical school. Most scored below average on the exam.

Then they were tested again — by the same professor, for the same knowledge — this time not in a classroom but in a hospital setting, using the tools that doctors use. Most scored well above average.

Lauren Resnick may not be familiar with the Temple experiment, but she would not be surprised by the results. It would simply underscore the point she has been making: that the learning needed for success on school examinations and the learning needed for on-the-job success are different things.

'What is needed, Resnick suggests, is a synthesis between the two approaches, for both school learning and work learning. What our schools ought to be imparting is neither purely abstract knowledge nor training for particular jobs.'

School learning, says this University of Pittsburgh scholar, is individual and relies heavily on symbol manipulation and "pure mentation," while learning on the job involves other people and relies on tools and objects in context.

Thus, neither law school admissions tests nor bar examinations (which do not allow the use of such lawyers' tools as reference books and collegial discussion) are very good predictors of success in the legal profession.

Does Resnick's conclusion have implications for restructuring schools? She believes so. But unfortunately, from her point of view, the trend is the other way.

Hands-on experience, using the setting and the tools of the profession, was the norm when apprenticeships were the principal method of gaining professional competency. Now, she says, on-the-job training — in business, in the military, in the professions — looks more and more like school.

"Corporate America, it is estimated, spends at least $40 billion per year on educating and training its employees, mostly for management functions," Resnick notes. "But when we examine the situation closely, we discover that in corporate education programs people go to classes, take tests, and proceed through a sequence of school-like activities."

In short, business, for all its rhetoric about "corporate classrooms," typically does not use the work place itself as a learning environment for training professionals.

What is needed, Resnick suggests, is a synthesis between the two approaches, for both school learning and work learning.

"Ways must be found to reintroduce key elements of traditional apprenticeship in forms appropriate to modern conditions of work. Since the technological and social complexity of modern work sites often makes it impossible to observe and practice in the traditional ways, special forms of 'bridging apprenticeships' that use simulated work environments and specially designed social interactions may be beneficial."

But thinking skills — the ability to manipulate abstractions as though they are realities — is vital, too.

"Such education is essential to prepare people to function when breakdowns in the customary structure of activity occur...When breakdowns occur, people have to do exactly what machines cannot: step outside the system and reason about it. People using various mechanized and computerized systems need to be equipped to recognize breakdowns, to work around them temporarily, to repair them, and, ultimately, to design better systems."

But what would a school restructured to incorporate both sorts of learning look like? Resnick thinks she may have gained a glimpse of the possibilities when she studied a number of school programs designed to teach so-called thinking skills.

The most successful programs, she said, share three features. First, they involve socially shared intellectual work, "organized around joint accomplishment of tasks, so that elements of the skill take on meaning in the context of the whole." Second, like apprenticeships, they encourage student observation and commentary, allow skills to be built up bit by bit, and "make usually hidden processes overt."

And finally, "the most successful programs are organized around particular bodies of knowledge and interpretation — subject matters, if you will, rather than general abilities."

What our schools ought to be imparting, Resnick believes, is neither purely abstract knowledge nor training for particular jobs.

"School should focus its efforts on preparing people to be good adaptive learners, so that they can perform effectively when situations are unpredictable and task demands change."

Debating The Debate Of '88

BOSTON — And now, as all the political junkies pack for New Orleans, a brief reminder from that nattering nabob of negativism: the Nielsen ratings. The public that tuned out the Democrats in July is sure to preempt the Republicans in August with reruns, game shows and movie rentals.

For most American viewers and voters, the presidential campaign is still a turnoff. They won't really focus until the fall, when George Bush and Michael Dukakis are likely to meet in their living rooms for an hour or four of televised debate.

But then watch out. In 1984, an astounding 125 million Americans watched Mondale vs. Reagan and Bush vs. Ferraro. That's more than watched the Redskins versus the Broncos in 1988's somewhat less decorous Super Bowl. This is a statistic that should give heart to the civics teachers of America, if there are any left.

Equally remarkable, these pivotal minutes in partisan politics were put on by a nonpartisan organization, the League of Women Voters. But now the League, the goody-government guru of politics, may lose its franchise. This year the debates themselves have become a subject of debate.

The League was founded in the post-suffrage blush when newly enfranchised women of America believed they could reform politics. It has been running presidential debates since 1960. These straight arrows have had better luck some years than others in getting the candidates into the arena. At least three times, incumbent Presidents said no. Even those who finally agreed balked over some detail in the elaborate rules of engagement.

Over these years, party leaders inevitably came to regard the Leaguers as difficult, even impossible, to deal with: an annoying circle of amateurs and rules sticklers. In translation, the League may also have been an incorruptible, independent and strong-willed broker for the voters — not the parties.

In either case, after the debates of 1984, the Democrats and Republicans decided to take over the last harbor of nonpartisanship. Paul Kirk, chair of the Democratic Party, went so far as to say that letting the League run the debates was a bit like letting your big sister do your homework: "At some point we have to take up our own responsibilities." Thank you, brother.

The two parties set up a commission whose job was, in one civic-sounding phrase, to "institutionalize" debates. Conveniently forgetting that it was their own candidates who had finked out of previous debates, the party chiefs said loftily that they would make sure debates happened.

Now there is a standoff. We have two groups that have each announced a full schedule of 1988 debates: the nonpartisan League of Women Voters and the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates. Dukakis has agreed to the Commission debates but hasn't ruled out the League. Bush has also agreed to debate, but hasn't said which one. The League's one hope is that the Republicans, starting into the gender gap, won't say no to the women's organization.

From the point of view of the voter, the most important part of the debate is the structure, not the sponsor. As Janet Brown, executive director of the parties' Commission, puts it: "A good debate is one that gets the most information to the viewer and listener." An organization created by the parties isn't necessarily craven to them.

But there is a nagging little worry here. We can be pretty sure that both candidates will debate in 1988 at least once. But what about 1992? 1996? Would the parties be more likely to get their candidate up to the rostrum than the League? Or less?

If a candidate said no, any party chief worth his title could simply — and quietly — scuttle the debate, blaming the other guy. Old hands like Walter Mondale say that, in contrast, nobody could cut a deal with the League, unless he "wanted to hear about it on the nightly news."

Beyond that, what if a third-party candidate arose again? If the two parties had a lock on the debate, they'd be less likely than the League to welcome the newcomer.

League President Nancy Neuman puts it simply. "The parties' goal is to get the candidates elected. The League's goal is to inform the voters. We have different motives."

The voters' needs are more in tune with the League. Anyway you cut it, the appearance of party control over the most important 60-minute sequences in the political process is bad for folks in the living room.

As Neuman says, "I keep thinking about those Super Bowl viewers. They don't want the coaches to be the referees."

Survey Indicates Teen-Agers Often Make Bad Choice But Know Better

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Teen-agers understand how AIDS is caught but don't know how to avoid getting other sexually transmitted diseases. Many drink to excess, use drugs, eat badly, neglect to wear seat belts and ride with drinking drivers. A substantial number have seriously considered suicide.

Those are the results of a survey, sponsored by health education groups and the Health and Human Services Department, which showed that teens often make wrong decisions about their health and safety even when they know better.

Dr. Robert E. Windom, assistant health secretary and head of the U.S. Public Health Service, called the results "somewhat dismaying."

"The results give us fresh insight concerning what our nation's teen-agers know and how they act concerning health and sex-related issues — but they also show that too many young people, even when they know better, don't always make the right health decisions," Windom said.

A margin of error for the survey was not immediately available, said spokeswoman Lisa Clough, but about 11,000 eighth- and 10-graders from a nationally representative sample of more than 200 public and private schools were surveyed.

The survey, conducted in the fall of 1987, showed that alcohol and drug use continue to be problems among the nation's young people.

Twenty-six percent of the eighth-graders and 38 percent of the 10-graders said they had had five or more drinks on one occasion during the two weeks preceding the survey.

About one in 10 adolescents said they had smoked marijuana during the past month, and one in 15 said they had used cocaine during that period.

Most teens understand that acquired immune deficiency syndrome is transmitted by sexual intercourse and drug needles. They know that condoms are effective in helping avoid AIDS and believe they should be used.

But 47 percent mistakenly believe that there is an increased risk of getting AIDS when donating blood, and about half of the students are unsure or mistakenly believe that washing after sex reduces the chances of being infected.

The survey noted that 2.5 million teen-agers are infected with sexually transmitted disease each year and that many teens cannot identify common early signs of the infections. A majority of those surveyed do not know that taking birth control pills is ineffective in avoiding such diseases. More than a third said they would not know where to go for medical care if they caught a sexually transmitted disease.

Suicide is a leading cause of death for young people between the ages of 15 and 24, the survey noted. Forty-two percent of the girls and 25 percent of the boys surveyed said they have "seriously thought" about committing suicide at some time in their lives. Nearly one in five girls and one in 10 boys responded that they have actually tried to commit suicide.

The survey confirmed what many already suspected — teens don't eat right. Many of the teens said they ate foods high in fat and sugar or skipped breakfast.

Sixty-one percent of the girls and 28 percent of the boys said they had dieted during the past year, and about half of the students who dieted used unsafe methods such as fasting. Others tried diet pills, laxatives or vomiting.

Unintentional injuries are the leading cause of death for young people age 15 to 25, with motor vehicle accidents accounting for more than 70 percent of accidental deaths. The survey showed that a substantial portion of the nation's teens do not guard against such injuries.

About 56 percent of those surveyed said they did not wear a seat belt the last time they rode in a vehicle. About 44 percent of 10th-graders and 32 percent of eighth-graders said they had ridden during the past month with a driver who had used drugs or alcohol. And when they ride bicycles or motorcycles, 92 percent say they never wear a protective helmet.

Seventeen percent said they had used alcohol or drugs while swimming or boating during the last year. And 64 percent of the boys and 19 percent of girls said they had used a gun during the past year.

The survey results will be used to improve health education efforts and to develop public policies about adolescent health. The survey was initiated by the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance and Association for the Advancement of Health Education; American School Health Association and the Society for Public Health Education. Funding was provided by HHS.

LIZARDMANIA — Donna Lawrence of Asheville points to an inflated rubber toy resembling a lizard which is part of the "Lizardmania" that has grabbed the farming community of Bishopville, S.C. Lizardmania Hits South Carolina Town

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer
BISHOPVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Some say it's Bigfoot. Some say it's only a bear. To some, the creature described as 7 feet tall with red eyes and three-fingered hands that quickly became known as the Lizard Man is simply a hoax.

Whichever explanation one believes, there's no question Lizardmania has seized this rural community this summer.

It all started when 17-year-old Christopher Davis told police he had been attacked by a creature while changing a tire in nearby Scape Ore Swamp about 2 a.m. one morning back in June.

The creature, he said, was more than 7 feet tall, was black-green and grabbed the door of his car, running as fast as 35 mph as he fled.

Davis said he swerved along the road before the creature, which had jumped on his car, was thrown off. "It was strong and it wasn't an animal and it wasn't no man," he told Sheriff Liston Truesdale.

As word of the sighting spread, hundreds of outsiders came to walk through the swamp west of town. A Columbia radio station offered a $1 million reward and reporters descended on the quiet farming community of about 3,500.

Sheriff's department spokesman Billy Moore said he has no doubt there was something on the road with Davis that night.

"I believe he saw something. What it was I have no earthly idea. But it wasn't no Lizard Man," he said.

It may have been a bear, Moore suggested. Or, he said, it could have been people stopping by an artesian well in the area. He said locals are known to frequent the well at all hours of the day and night.

Scape Ore Swamp got its name in Revolutionary War days. It was near a British encampment and, when the Americans moved against the area, the British camp followers escaped into the swamp.

What became known as Escaped Whore Swamp became shortened over time to Scape Ore, Moore said.

Since the sighting, however, the sheriff's department has received dozens of calls from townspeople when their dogs bark at night or their farm animals act strangely.

"I think most of the people think it's a prankster or a joke," Moore said.

"You're dealing with a skunk ape, which is a colloquial name," said Erik Beckjord, who has researched the creatures for 10 years. "You can call it anything you want but it's a Bigfoot."

Authorities say there have been hoaxes as Lizardmania spread. Deputies made plaster casts of large tracks purportedly made by the creature. Moore said wildlife biologists determined the tracks were man-made.

Last week, an unidentified man reported shooting the thing along Interstate 20, and gave authorities some scales and blood that purportedly came from the creature.

The blood and scales, headed for a state crime lab for analysis, apparently are from a dead fish, the sheriff said. "It doesn't take an expert to see what they are."

Visitors have been pulling off Interstate 20 for the past few weeks to satisfy their curiosity about the Lizard Man.

Marina Watson of the local Chamber of Commerce said business has been brisk this summer, but she had no estimate of how much money Lizardmania has put into the local economy.

If it's Lizard Man paraphernalia you're after, there are hats, T-shirts, inflatable toy dinosaurs and even wanted posters with an artist's impression of the Lizard Man.

Truesdale has had enough. He said that when stories like the Lizard Man circulate, "a lot of people try to get publicity and feel important. We have enough to do without tracking down things like this."

Shuttle Countdown Beginning

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A new countdown begins tonight for a 22-second firing of space shuttle Discovery's three main engines, a vital test that has been postponed five times because of malfunctions.

If this test succeeds, NASA officials will set a date for the first American manned space flight since the Challenger burst into flames on liftoff in January 1986. The Discovery launch date, already officially moved four times, is not likely to be before October because of all the test delays.

The flight readiness firing, as it's called, is an overall workout of the main engines, computer software, ground support equipment, communications lines and the launch teams.

The "call to stations" that begins the countdown was scheduled for 6:10 p.m. with the test set for 7:30 a.m. Wednesday. Without further problems, fueling of the shuttle's huge tank begins a half hour before midnight.

The shuttle's No. 2 engine is fitted with a new "hydrogen bleed valve" and sensor to replace units that caused a scheduled test to be scrapped last Thursday in the split second before the start of ignition.

"The recovery from the problem on Thursday shows that the team is working smoothly and I am expecting an on-time engine firing on Wednesday morning," said Hugh Harris.

Hamadi Admits Hijacking Plane

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Mohammed Ali Hamadi admitted in court today to being one of four men who hijacked a TWA jetliner to Beirut in 1985, but denied shooting to death a U.S. Navy diver during the ordeal.

"I took part in the hijacking," the Lebanese Shiite Moslem said, reading from a statement in the heavily guarded courtroom.

Thirty-nine Americans were held captive for 17 days after TWA Flight 847 was hijacked on an Athens-to-Rome flight. During the ordeal, Navy diver Robert Stethem was killed and his body thrown onto a Beirut airport runway.

Hamadi, on trial for air piracy and murder, said he hijacked a U.S. aircraft "because the United States is the greatest ally and supporter of Israel."

Clean-shave and wearing an open-neck cream-colored shirt, Hamadi read calmly and clearly from the statement.

He said the goal of the June 1985 hijacking was to gain freedom for Shiite Moslems imprisoned in Israel.

"The decision to hijack the plane came after everything else failed," Hamadi said in 45-minute presentation. "There was no other way to free the prisoners other than the means chosen."

Shortly after the June 1985 hijacking ended, Israel released approximately 700 Shiites.

House Ready To Approve $3.9 Billion Drought Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Senate passage of the $3.9 billion drought relief bill, the only suspense remaining about the measure's final congressional approval is when it will happen.

The Senate gave its assent Monday on a 92-0 vote. Just a few minutes earlier, the House cleared the way for expedited consideration of the measure, which could come as early as today.

"There's no question about passage," Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said Monday. "It's just by how many votes."

The measure — the biggest federal emergency relief bill ever passed for farmers — is aimed at the hundreds of thousands of farmers and ranchers who have been buffeted by one of the worst droughts in the nation's history. Growers in the Eastern cornbelt and the Northern plains have been hit particularly hard.

According to the Department of Agriculture, 43 percent of the country was suffering from severe or extreme drought in mid-July, the fourth worst percentage since the government began keeping the statistics in 1895. The highest measurement was made in 1934, when 61 percent of the nation's area was similarly parched.

The government estimated last month that the country's corn crop will be down from a normal year by 29 percent, barley production down 42 percent, oats down 43 percent and spring wheat down 51 percent.

The Agriculture Department has estimated that the government's regular farm payments would be about $7 billion lower than expected this year — not including the cost of this bill — because of the drought. Supporters of the legislation say those savings will more than pay for the costs of the assistance.

President Reagan is expected to sign the bill quickly. Department of Agriculture officials say they believe it will take about two months for the assistance to reach the farmers.

Governors from farm states, meeting at the National Governor's Association conference in Cincinnati, unanimously approved a resolution Monday praising Congress for the quick action.

"The legislation that Congress is set to pass is excellent, far-reaching legislation that provides assistance to livestock and crop producers," the resolution by the governors' Committee on Agriculture and Rural Development said.

The legislation would let growers who lose up to 35 percent of their crops because of the drought keep the "deficiency payments" they have already received in advance. Normally, they have to repay the government if crop prices rise, as they have because of the drought.

Farmers losing more than 35 percent of their crop would be entitled to an emergency payment of 65 percent of their expected federal subsidy or of the anticipated market price of the crop, up to $100,000. Those farmers, however, would have to repay their advance deficiency payments.

Farmers would receive aid covering 90 percent of their drought-caused damage for all losses they suffer beyond three-fourths of their crop.

Burma Protests Lead To School Closings

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Burmese authorities today closed schools indefinitely after anti-government protests across the country in which state-owned Radio Rangoon said eight people were killed and more than 800 arrested.

The radio said the arrests occurred and four people were injured in Rangoon, the capital, early today as demonstrators burned vehicles and destroyed traffic lights.

Diplomats reported shooting in the capital today and a number of foreign missions, including the U.S. Embassy, closed their doors. Burmese consulates in Bangkok and Hong Kong stopped issuing entry visas to tourists.

On Monday, tens of thousands of people surged into the streets of Rangoon and 14 other Burmese towns and cities to protest the new government of President Sein Lwin, a hard-line retired army general.

It was the largest anti-government protest since democracy was overthrown in this Southeast Asian nation 26 years ago.

Rangoon Radio, monitored in Bangkok, said that after demonstrators refused requests to disperse today, security forces shot into the air to try to scare them.

Governors Say Deficit Has Priority

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis joined fellow governors today as they were told the next president "will have a limited amount of time to make the tough choices" needed to deal with the federal budget deficit.

Dukakis took his seat at a corner of the square table at which the nation's governors sat for the closing session of the 80th annual meeting of the National Governors' Association.

The governors' first order of business at the session was to hear from former Reagan administration Cabinet official Drew Lewis and Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., co-chairmen of the National Economic Commission, a panel established to recommend ways to deal with the deficit.

"That commission is not going to come up with any magic answers, but it can provide important political cover for the next president," said Panetta.

The California congressman said the next president would face difficult choices on such questions as the level of defense spending, whether to cut programs that include automatic benefit increases, and whether to ask for a tax increase.

Dukakis said nothing during that opening discussion.

Governor of Massachusetts for 10 years, Dukakis attended the meeting the day after the governors warmly applauded President Reagan when he told them that during his two terms in the White House the states had gained far more flexibility and power to deal with domestic problems.

No longer just one of 50 state governors seated around the conference table, Dukakis also was meeting with Democratic governors for a closed session on strategy for his campaign against Republican George Bush.

"He will ask the governors to speak out on his behalf," said campaign spokesman Leslie Dach, who added that Dukakis believes his record as a governor is one of his greatest strengths.

Before Reagan spoke to the governors Monday, he stopped at a local plant and told workers that "some people" were campaigning on the idea that "it's time for a change, take a chance on us."

But "you can't unplug our pro-growth economic policies and expect things to stay the same," he said.

In that speech and in his later talk to the governors, Reagan cited the number of jobs created during his tenure, as well as lower unemployment in general and reduced taxes.

Reagan's theme was picked up by Gov. George Deukmejian of California, who said Vice President Bush would carry the nation's largest state despite current polls there giving Dukakis a double-digit lead over Bush.

"Why would the people want to risk a change in going to a total unknown person, an unknown administration?" asked Deukmejian.

As governor of a state with 47 electoral votes, nearly one-fifth of the 270 needed for election, Deukmejian was mentioned often as a potential running mate for Bush.

Storm

The biggest threat was the storm's heavy rains, forecasters said. The weather service said the heaviest rainfall — 5 inches or more — might hit New Orleans and a half-dozen parishes around it. It also warned of locally heavy rains for the other parishes.

"Heavy squalls continue to wrap around Beryl. They are capable of producing copious amounts of rainfall in a period of just a few hours. For example Biloxi, Miss., got over 3 inches of rain during a six-hour period ending at 1 a.m.," the weather service said.

Thousands of workers from the marshes and offshore oil rigs were evacuated Monday as a precaution.

"We're on cautious alert now and we don't expect to go beyond that," said Andy Valence, mayor of Grand Isle, a coastal town about 40 miles south of New Orleans.

Homes were being evacuated today east of New Orleans in the low-lying St. Bernard Parish fishing villages of Hopedale, Ysloskey and Shell Beach. Coastal tides were 3 to 4 feet above normal, but were expected to reach 7 feet above normal.

Chevron spokesman Jonathan Lita said about 2,000 workers were evacuated by boat and helicopter from offshore rigs to Venice, Leeville and Morgan City.

There were scattered power failures along the Mississippi Gulf Coast on Monday and stores reported heavy sales of supplies like flashlights and batteries.

Coastal Brewery Has German Taste What Is Core Of Big Apple Name?

By ELIZABETH LELAND
The Charlotte Observer
MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — It took a new North Carolina law to put Uli Bennewitz in business, and that was the easy part.

Running a German brewery on remote Roanoke Island has proved as difficult as walking a straight line after chugging a liter of the tangy beer. "In hindsight, it's an absolutely ludicrous idea," Bennewitz said. "Normally breweries are in urban areas. Manteo is a highly seasonal town and the brewery isn't. As naive as we were, we thought all you had to do was plug it in the wall and run with it."

In the two years since Bennewitz began brewing beer at The Weeping Radish Brewery & Restaurant, the floor caved in, the German brew master's visa expired and — the last straw — the kegs ran dry.

The new 1985 law, which allowed small breweries to sell beer on the premises for the first time, is worded in such a way that the only beer Bennewitz can sell is his own. A brewery without beer, he realized, is like a German draft without any head. It doesn't sell.

So Bennewitz and his partners poured money into more vats, coils and glasses — a total of $35,000 — and began brewing with a gusto not seen since Sir Walter Raleigh's Lost Colony brewed beer on Roanoke Island 400 years ago.

"It's a pure fluke that we're brewing beer where it was first brewed in America," Bennewitz said. "But it's recorded."

Bennewitz, a 36-year-old native of Bavaria, settled in Manteo in 1982, not to brew beer, but to grow vegetables. A farm manager by trade, he makes his living managing 14,000 acres of corn, soybeans and wheat.

"The brewery is just an unpaid hobby," Bennewitz said. "It just mushroomed. All we wanted to do was come down here once a week to drink German beer and have a general manager run the show. Now, it's beginning to resemble a business."

Lately he's also been trying to grow the German radish for which the brewery is named.

"It's big and white and looks like a turnip," Bennewitz said. "In Germany, you slice it with a special spiral cutter and put it in a pot like an accordion and sprinkle it with salt. The salt will withdraw the moisture and the radish starts weeping."

The Weeping Radish is one of 41 brew-pubs — a combination brewery and pub — nationwide, the only one in North Carolina. It brews a small drop in the nation's beer bucket. Last year, The Weeping Radish brewed 268 barrels of beer — there are 31 gallons to the barrel — out of a total 178 million barrels.

There are three brewing rooms in The Weeping Radish, each maintained at a different temperature depending on the stage of the brewing process. Fermentation and aging require six weeks.

Bennewitz is building a second brewery-restaurant in Durham, financed publicly in Europe.

He hires only German brew masters, trained for seven years. But if all goes according to plan, the brew masters will, in turn, teach Americans the art.

"We are displaying a true craft," Bennewitz said. "What the Germans have and the Americans lost was the traditional craft system. What we're doing is saying, 'There is some value in this old craft.'"

And a lot of taste.

Beer made at The Weeping Radish is known as Hopfen beer, brewed according to the German Purity Law of 1516, which mandates that only hops, malt, yeast and water be used and no chemical additives. Although a light beer by German standards, it has a stronger punch and more robust flavor than American brands.

"I didn't want people to keel over after two beers," Bennewitz said. "It really is an original German light beer. Nothing compares to it."

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Every now and then someone asks, "Why is New York City called the Big Apple?" I asked my readers. Here's a sample of the responses:

DEAR ABBY: The Bible tells us that the apple was forbidden fruit. (Remember, the serpent in the Garden of Eden dared Adam to eat the apple?) Well, from that time on, the apple signified temptation. And since New York City is the most tempting city in the world, the traveling men named New York City the Big Apple.

My grandfather was a traveling salesman and told me this. — NORMAN IN NEWARK

DEAR ABBY: I once read a story written by a man who used to travel with a circus. He said that when they referred to the town they would be playing next, they called it the "apple." All entertainers hoped that one day they would play New York — the choice spot, the "big one," or "the big apple," and that is how New York City came to be known as the Big Apple. — CORNELL THOMPSON, HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: I have researched the Big Apple appellation given to New York City. I offer the following:

Sir Isaac Newton, who discovered the universe's gravitation force, was sitting under an apple tree in New York, when an apple fell from the tree and struck him in the head. He picked it up and said "Wow, that was a big apple!"

Due to his fame as a scientist, New York City was called the Big Apple. — THOMAS E. PENDERGAST

DEAR ABBY: "The Big Apple" was the name of a song which inspired a dance wherein a small group made a circle, held hands and danced to a lively beat. A gossip columnist named Walter Winchell made it popular in 1930. It took New York City by storm — that is why they call New York City the Big Apple. — A. NOLAN, ATLANTA

DEAR ABBY: New York City was named the Big Apple because during the Depression of 1929-1930, all the banks closed and many people were suddenly unemployed so they stood on the street corners and sold apples for a nickel apiece. There were so many apple stands in New York City, they called it the Big Apple. — MRS. LEONARD COOKSON, PARADISE VALLEY, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: As a former resident of New York, I believe it came to be known as the Big Apple because New York grows the most varied apples of any state in the union. For example: Delicious, Rome, MacIntosh, Baldwins, Golden Delicious, Spy Greivies, Jonathon, etc. Hence the name, the Big Apple. — N. WHITMAN, LAUDERDALE LAKES, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I saw a letter in your column from a reader asking why New York City is known the world over as the Big Apple.

Back in the 1920s and '30s, people in the entertainment world — particularly jazz musicians — talked about making it to the top of the tree. To "play" New York City was to make the big time, or the "big apple," which was a jazz term.

Today, New York City remains the No. 1 visitor destination in the world, thanks to both the New York City Convention and Visitors' Bureau's efforts and the state's own "I Love New York" statewide tourism campaign. Last year, we welcomed 17.8 million visitors to the Big Apple — over 3 million of them from overseas.

So, we welcome the world — and especially you and your readers.

Come and enjoy all of New York state's beauty, history, culture and unlimited recreation, from Buffalo to the Big Apple! — MARIO M. CUOMO, GOVERNOR

Talking To No One Is Time Waste

You have all probably read the same story. The one that tallied up how many years you spend wasting time. A group of people with stopwatches in hand studied hundreds of people throughout the nation for more than a year. (Sounds like a job right up there with measuring potatoes in the spring.)

Anyway, they found out people spend a whole year of time looking for misplaced objects, eight months opening junk mail, and four years doing housework.

The statistic that really grabbed me was the one that said callers spend a total of two years trying to return telephone calls to people who never seem to be in.

It didn't use to take that long. You'd call someone and let the phone ring 10 times and hang up. You didn't have to be too bright to figure out that if they were home, they'd have answered it. Not today. I have to sit through Van Halen screeching "Runnin' With the Devil" for God knows how long before I hear the sound of the beep to leave a message for a son who is pushing buttons from his bed.

He's not the only one. Everyone who owns a phone answering machine now has a case of the terminally clever. Each one tries to outdo the other one in cuteness. It's the AT&T Comedy Store.

I wish they had done a study on the time it takes for people to write, produce and record messages for their answering machines. They could record an album in the time it takes to lay a track of background music and amaze and stun the caller with their own voice in 30 seconds.

It's stupid when you think about it. I can't tell you how much time I waste sitting through voices that tell me an office is closed but if I will call back during business hours they will be happy to serve me. If they didn't answer their phone on the 10th ring, I'd know all that anyway. Not to mention the money I spend calling my kids long-distance to talk to their machines.

Well, I have been born again. I am no longer going to waste my time talking to people who aren't there. In fact, I'm taking a long, hard look at my life, and I could cut corners in a lot of places. I'm going to stop talking to animals. Every time I see one, I say, "Hey, buddy, how's it goin'?" like they know and are going to answer.

I waste a lot of time carrying on conversations with babies. I bounce them on my knee for hours and have a one-sided conversation with myself. "Is he a good baby? Are we sleepy? Are we ready to have our pants changed?" (If he's in his right mind, is he going to admit to any of that?)

And I'm going to stop talking to myself. If I can't take the time to sit down and drop myself a note, then it couldn't have been important in the first place.

Wedding Vows Said In Hawaiian Ceremony

KAUAI, Hawaii — The wedding ceremony of Helen Beth Walls and James Randall Turner, both of Greenville, N.C., took place Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

Parents of the bride are Bettie R. Hazelwood of New Kent, Va., and Wayne Walls of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Barbara Turner of Ayden, and James Turner of Raleigh.

The bride wore a formal tea-length gown of white satin. The sweetheart neckline featured satin puffed sleeves edged with imported lace, seed pearls and sequins. The bodice was accented with a basque waist and featured lace appliques, seed pearls and sequins which extended into an A-line skirt. She wore a white headpiece with satin bead flowers and sprays of pearl ornaments. The bride carried a bouquet of variegated pink orchids. The bride and bridegroom wore pink traditional Hawaiian leis.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands.

The bride is a graduate of Pitt Community College in the nursing program and is employed with Medical Staffing Services in Raleigh. The bridegroom is a graduate of Pitt Community College and is self-employed. Both graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School.

Sarah Has Girl

 wishes before going inside the American-owned Portland Hospital.

Only 24 hours earlier, he had looked somber and anxious as he drove his 28-year-old wife to the hospital from the country home west of London which they are renting from King Hussein of Jordan.

Dr. Anthony Kenney, the duchess' obstetrician, was also at the hospital today. He led a team of four doctors in the delivery room.

Hundreds of people on their way to work this morning stopped off at Buckingham Palace to see the brief notice posted on the gates announcing the baby's birth.

Polish student Arek Ilnicki went straight there after arriving in London. "I think the English are a bit mad about the baby. But it's good."

Andrew, the 28-year-old second son of the monarch and a Royal Navy lieutenant, flew to London on Sunday from Singapore where he is on sea duty on HMS Edinburgh. News of the birth was announced to the ship's crew and the prince's fellow officers immediately toasted to the health of the baby and parents.

The Buckingham Palace statement announcing the birth said the Duchess of York was "safely delivered of a daughter at 8:18 p.m."

The statement said the delivery was "a normal birth" and "there were no complications." Neither the palace nor the doctors would say whether the birth had been induced, as newspapers had speculated.

Andrew was present at his daughter's birth, the palace said. British press reports said the prince, an accomplished amateur photographer, took the first photos of his daughter.

There was much speculation over the baby's name, with Elizabeth and Victoria as favorites. Early in his wife's pregnancy Andrew had been quoted as saying the baby would be called Annabel.

Whatever the choice, the baby will be Her Royal Highness, Princess (name) of York. She is fifth in line to the throne behind Andrew's older brother, Prince Charles, Charles' two children Prince William and Prince Harry, and Andrew himself. The queen's two other grandchildren, Peter and Zara Phillips, are the children of her only daughter, Anne.

Drivers

 Other assistant principals in the county, also serving as bus supervisors, said they have enough drivers for the beginning of school, but they're still recruiting and training drivers.

"If everything goes as planned now, we have enough to begin the year," Ernest McNair of North Pitt said. "For the North Pitt area, we need 54 to operate the whole area, if we don't get any extra buses. But, we're continuing to train and we will need more drivers."

"We have more drivers than we need, and I'm hoping it will stay that way," Cling Walton of Farmville Central High School said. "We need 28 drivers total, and we have 34 drivers who have indicated they are willing to work. Eight more are in the process of either going to class or waiting for the road test."

Bernie Haselrig of Ayden-Grifton High School said, "At this point we have just enough, but we don't have a number of substitutes."

The Ayden-Grifton area needs 23 drivers, he said.

Lights Go On At Wrigley Field

CHICAGO (AP) — Although rain eventually washed away the first night game ever at Wrigley Field, Rick Sutcliffe of the Chicago Cubs says he'll never forget that first pitch.

"I didn't know where the pitch went, I never saw it," Sutcliffe said. "It seemed like 40,000 flash bulbs went off and the whole stadium lit up. I'll never forget it."

The fans were ready with their cameras to record history, the first pitch of the first night game at the last bastion of daytime-only baseball in the major leagues.

Sutcliffe won't forget the fourth pitch either. Philadelphia's Phil Bradley hit it out of the park for the first hit, first run, and homer in the first night game at the cozy ballpark on the near northside. But it won't count.

With the Cubs holding a 3-1 lead, the rains came and they never stopped. The umpires called the game after waiting two hours, 10 minutes.

"There was a sadness," Sutcliffe said. "Wrigley Field has always been known for sunshine and day baseball. It was like the good Lord said 'I'm going to show you.' The Good Lord had the final say."

It will not count as the first night game at Wrigley Field, but as far as Cubs manager Don Zimmer was concerned "I'll always look back at it as the first night game. It was beautiful with the fans waving all those white hats. If we had won, it would have been more beautiful. The lights were great. This was THE first night game in Wrigley Field."

Bradley knows better. "It's always disappointing to get hits washed out, especially home runs," he said. "It would have been nice to say it happened even though it didn't really happen. I guess now someone else is going to be able to say he got the first official hit, even though I did."

Zimmer said he had heard reports all day that it might rain. "I thought about it and I said 'Please, don't let it rain.'"

Zimmer was at the park early Monday and obliged wave after wave of reporters asking pregame questions.

"I'm not going to go through it again tomorrow," Zimmer said, alluding to the Cubs' meeting tonight with the New York Mets. The Cubs also announced there would be no pregame ceremonies.

With 556 members of the media present and a crowd of 39,008 packing the stands for the historic event, a circus-like atmosphere prevailed Monday night. Outside the park, revolving floodlights gave it a Hollywood touch. A high-rise on the outer drive had a sign blinking "Go Cubs."

At 6:09 p.m. CDT, Harry Grossman, 91, and a Cub fan for 83 years, flipped on the lights after telling the crowd to shout "Let there be lights."

At 6:52, former Cubs Ernie Banks and Billy Williams, both members of the Hall of Fame, threw out the ceremonial first pitches.

At 7:01, Sutcliffe threw the first pitch as the flash bulbs went off throughout the park.

At 7:03, Bradley took all the anticipation and anxiety from a number of firsts when he hit Sutcliffe's fourth pitch into the left field bleachers to take care of the first hit, first run, first home run and first run batted in. It would have been his sixth homer, but it won't count.

Mitch Webster led off the bottom of the first with a single and with Ryne Sandberg coming to bat, Morganna Roberts, "The Kissing Bandit," made her appearance on the field.

The object of her affection was Sandberg, but she never reached him as the ushers caught up to her and escorted her off the field. The crowd jeered. Sandberg responded with a home run into the left field bleachers.

"Actually, I think when she was caught it helped my at-bat," Sandberg said. "It took the pressure off me."

Sandberg walked to lead off the Chicago third, stole second, went to third on a sacrifice by Mark Grace and scored on a single by Rafael Palmeiro. It would have extended his hitting streak to 18 games. But it didn't count.

At 7:55, the lights took full effect as darkness shrouded the ballpark.

At 8:14, lightning and thunder struck.

At 8:15, the rains came. A minute later the ground crew had the field covered.

At 8:23, the first fan broke loose on the field and did a bellyflop with an usher on top of him. Others followed later, including two women. An usher was injured and had to be taken off the field on a stretcher.

At 9:29, four Cubs — Jody Davis, Al Nipper, Greg Maddux and Les Lancaster — ran on the field and did their version of bellyflops on the tarp. They were unmolested and left after a few turns. The crowd cheered.

"I thought it stunk," Zimmer said. "I've got one guy with a stiff foot (Davis), one guy with a bad elbow (Nipper), one guy with appendicitis (Lancaster) and the best pitcher (Maddux) in the league."

Does he plan any action against them?

"I'll take care of it," Zimmer said. "It was a fun night."

But the tradition of day baseball only in Wrigley Field is gone.

"It's always tough to see a long-standing tradition go by the wayside," said Philadelphia Manager Lee Elia, who played for and managed the Cubs in the past.

"I wish we could have finished the game," he said. "Things in this ballpark are never over. The lights seem to be good. The field was well lit but the rain came. It was a great night. The Chicago fans were energetic as ever."

The Cubs will lose a hefty gate. Fans can get cash refunds or exchange their rain checks for tickets available for future dates. The game against the Mets tonight already is a sellout so fans with tickets Monday night will not be able to exchange them.

Those who paid outrageous prices to scalpers, however, will be able to redeem the tickets at face value only.

Bleacher View

Baseball fans sit in the bleachers under the glowing lights that illuminate Wrigley Field Monday night in Chicago. After 6,852 day games and decades of debate, the light switch at Wrigley was turned on at 7:09 p.m. CDT, four minutes later than planned. The game was rained out before it was completed, however. (AP Laserphoto)

Peters Resigns As Coach Of Women's Gymnastics

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A bitter power play has led to the resignation of U.S. Olympic women's gymnastics coach Don Peters, who will be replaced by a trio of coaches who will share the spotlight at Seoul.

"There had been too much controversy, too much said, and I can't effectively coach this team," Peters said Monday afternoon at a news conference at his SCATS gymnastics center. "We have a great chance to win some medals over there and we can't blow this chance. For me to stay on would hurt that chance."

"It is my hope that by stepping down now that all the controversy will end and that unified effort will become a reality."

The controversy Peters was referring to was the dissatisfaction of Bela Karolyi, the personal coach of three of the U.S. Olympic team's six members and its two alternates. Karolyi, who guided Nadia Comaneci to Olympic perfection in 1980, had to watch his gold medalist, Mary Lou Retton, from the sidelines during the 1984 Olympics.

Karolyi and the U.S. Gymnastics Federation have disagreed over his role on the Olympic team since Peters was again chosen to coach the women. Peters also was the coach in 1984. Karolyi wanted a larger role in coaching, especially his 15-year-old proteges, all starters on the 1988 team.

USGF executive director Mike Jacki announced Monday that the personal coaches of the team starters would be given the three coaching credentials for the Summer Games. Jacki said a triad would share coaching duties.

Before Peters resigned he and his two assistants, Karolyi's wife, Marta, and Tom McCarthy of Burkes Academy, a gymnastics training center in Pennsylvania, held the credentials. Other than Karolyi, it was not immediately announced who would get the two remaining credentials.

"We will not name a new Olympic head coach," Jacki said. "We're going to ask all of them to work together."

The International Olympic Committee rules limit the number of coaches who can be on the floor during competition.

Three of the spots are held by gymnasts — Phoebe Mills, Brandy Johnson and Chelle Stack — trained at Marta and Bela Karolyi's club at Houston. Kelly Garrison-Stevens is coached by Becky Buwick at the University of Oklahoma. Hope Spivey is guided by Bill and Donna Strauss of the Parkettes club at Allentown, Pa., and Mark Lee trains Melissa Marlowe at Salt Lake City.

The alternates are Kristie Phillips and Rhonda Faehn.

Karolyi said Jacki had called him Monday afternoon to tell him that Peters was resigning and asked whether he would take Peters' place. Karolyi explained that a designated head coach is not needed, and that each athlete should be accompanied by her individual coach.

"I will take the position as a coach," he said. "This position (head coach) has caused so much problems. I just think that if I'm going to provide a good athlete then I should go with the athlete."

Peters, who was elected 6-2 in January by the USGF executive committee to replace Greg Marsden, said he will have no involvement with the 1988 team.

"Things are beyond repair," he said.

Jacki accepted Peters' resignation and offered him the post as delegation leader for the women's team. That was the position Karolyi resigned from last month because it includes no coaching responsibilities. Peters refused Jacki's offer.

The head coach at SCATS for the past nine years said he can't afford to attend the Games. Peters plans to spend time with his family and work more closely with SCATS gymnasts.

"I didn't want to remain as the head coach and have the division continue. The girls should begin to think together as a team. These girls have to be a team."

Alan 'The Horse' Ameche Dies Following Surgery

HOUSTON (AP) — It was only a short run, but it propelled Alan Ameche into football immortality and the National Football League into the prominence it had long sought.

Ameche, whose winning touchdown in the game called "The Greatest Game Ever Played," died Monday after undergoing heart bypass surgery.

Hospital spokeswoman Brenda Blake said Ameche, 55, died of a heart attack at 5:30 p.m. CDT. at Methodist Hospital in the Texas Medical Center.

She said Ameche, being treated by famed heart surgeon Michael DeBakey, underwent heart bypass and valve replacement surgery last Friday. He had a similar operation 10 years ago, she said.

Nicknamed "The Horse" because coaches said he worked like one in practice, Ameche scored the biggest touchdown of his career on Dec. 28, 1958, when his Baltimore Colts and the New York Giants played the first overtime game in NFL championship history.

A national television audience was watching as Baltimore quarterback Johnny Unitas drove the Colts toward the New York end zone.

At 8:15 of overtime, Ameche barged into the end zone from a yard out to give Baltimore a 23-17 victory in the game that almost overnight made the NFL a challenger to baseball as the national pastime.

Ameche set a national record by rushing for 3,212 yards and won the Heisman Trophy as the top college football player in 1954 at the University of Wisconsin.

He ran 79 yards for a touchdown the first time he carried the ball as a pro, and went on to lead the league in rushing his rookie season.

Ameche was voted rookie of the year, was an All-Pro selection from 1955 through 1958 and played in five Pro Bowl games before a severe Achilles tendon injury ended his career after the 1960 season.

He was inducted into the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame in 1975.

In his pro career, he ran for 4,045 yards and scored 40 touchdowns, but is best remembered for that 1-yard run against the Giants.

Ameche recalled it as "probably the shortest run I ever made and the most remembered."

Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry was on the sidelines that day in his role as a defensive coach for Giants.

"I hate to hear that," Landry said upon hearing of Ameche's death.

"He beat us with that touchdown," Landry recalled.

"I have known him since. He was an excellent person and a great football player," Landry said from the Cowboys' training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Ameche and a former Colts teammate Gino Marchetti went into business together, founding a successful chain of East Coast restaurants called Gino's. Ameche later sold his interest in the restaurants.

Ameche presented his Heisman Trophy to the University of Wisconsin in 1984.

Player Fires 68 To Win Senior Open Golf Crown

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — Gary Player took a big bite out of the hand that fed him, chewed, and spit out this pearl.

"I'm particularly pleased to win because when you're second — and I've said this many times — nobody remembers but your wife and your dog," the defending champion said after firing a 4-under-par 68 to score a two-stroke victory over Bob Charles in an 18-hole playoff for the U.S. Senior Open golf title.

The playoff over Medinah's grueling No. 3 course became necessary when Charles, a 52-year-old New Zealander and the Senior Tour's leading money-winner, blew a three-shot lead Sunday over the final four holes of the 6,881-yard layout. He finished tied with the steady Player at even-par 288 after regulation.

Walking to the first tee Monday, Charles must have felt like a man who shot himself in the foot — only worse. He, after all, put the extra round in Player's dueling pistol.

"After having the tournament in my pocket yesterday," said Charles, "and thinking back that I played them in 3-over yesterday and 1-under today, they were not quite the monsters I made them out to be."

"Probably, this is one of the biggest disappointments in my career... I haven't won a major in Senior golf, and this was the best opportunity I've had," said Charles, who did manage to capture the 1963 British Open by defeating Phil Rodgers in a playoff.

Player, a 52-year-old South African, grabbed the two-stroke advantage that he never yielded with a 12-foot birdie putt at the 404-yard third hole while Charles made bogey after being forced to play his approach from the trees on the right side of the fairway following an errant tee shot.

"I felt if I could get him quickly and capitalize on the fact that Bob let me in the door, psychologically, it would help," Player said.

It also didn't hurt that Player played nearly flawless golf, hitting 16 greens en route to his bogey-free round. He scorched the front nine in 3-under 33, and held off a late charge by Charles with another birdie at No. 13 before rolling home with pars the rest of the way.

Charles made the turn in 1-over 37, then collected three birdies on the back for 33 and a finishing 70.

The No. 3 course, remodeled for this championship, played the senior field in regulation at an average of six strokes over par, helped in part by temperatures that hovered near 100 degrees for most of the tournament, including Monday.

But both Player and Charles finished the fourth round Sunday as the only players at even-par, that after shooting 73s. And the two, who have been friends for more than 30 years, were co-leaders after the third round as well, leaving the clubhouse Sunday as the only players still in the red.

Both had birdie putts at No. 18 Sunday, but neither cashed in, setting up the playoff between the two foreign-born golfers for the $65,000 first-place purse awarded the winner of the over-50 U.S. national championship.

Despite the check, Player remained third on the money list, still trailing Orville Moody and Charles, who pocketed $32,500.

Bruce Crampton finished third at 1-over 289, followed by fellow Australian Peter Thomson and Moody, who were another stroke back at 290.

Player's victory in consecutive Senior Opens — he shattered the tournament record last year with a 14-under 270 total at Brooklawn Country Club — marked the second time that feat has been accomplished.

Miller Barber, who also won in 1982, won the 1984-85 Opens.

"It's really something to see that U.S. Open trophy in your cabinet," said Player, who won his sixth major on the Senior Tour following five on the regular PGA tour. "Much better than seeing that medal that says runner-up."

Bucs Are Happy To Have Mondays On Their Side

By The Associated Press
Monday, Monday, can't top that day.

For the Pittsburgh Pirates, Monday is the only day to play the New York Mets. The Pirates have won just four games against New York this season. All four, including a 1-0 victory to close out their four-game series in Pittsburgh, have been on Mondays.

"It was a big game for us, because it meant we're six out instead of eight out," Manager Jim Leyland said. "I don't think you can start draping a flag on our coffin just yet."

The Mets won the first three games of a series in New York last weekend before the Pirates took the closer 7-2. The NL East leaders did the same thing in Pittsburgh, failing to get the sweep when rookie Rick Reed and reliever Jim Gott blanked them on three hits. That effort was slightly better than Bobby Ojeda's for the Mets, who lead Pittsburgh by six games and Montreal by 6 1/2.

"When you win the first three games, you want the sweep, but we just didn't do it," Keith Hernandez said. "But I'll still take three out of four. Bobby pitched a great game but we just didn't give him any support." The victory ended Pittsburgh's five-game slide.

"We could win four in a row and the Mets could lose three out of four and suddenly, we're a couple of games back and everybody says we're back in the race," Leyland said. "I'm not saying it's going to happen, but it could."

"I'm frustrated and disappointed about what happened (the last two weekends), but at the same time they were great series and I feel good about the way we played. We were about four hits away from being 4-4 or 5-3 instead of 2-6. We were in all of the games — just look at the scores, 1-0, 2-1, 3-2, every game was close — but the tough part is we didn't win enough of them."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Houston 10, Los Angeles 0; San Francisco 5, Atlanta 2; and St. Louis 4, Montreal 2.

The first night game at Wrigley Field was rained out with Chicago leading Philadelphia 3-1 in the fourth inning.

Reed went eight innings in his major-league debut, using offspeed pitches to keep the Mets off balance. He got the only run he needed in the fourth inning when Jose Lind got an infield single, stole second, moved to third when catcher Gary Carter's throw sailed into center field and scored on Bobby Bonilla's groundout.

"I've dreamed my whole life of just getting the chance to pitch to the Mets, because they're such a great team, and I shut them out for eight innings?" said Reed, who struck out four and walked one. "It can't be real."

It was. After all, it was a Monday.

walking two and giving up two run-scoring hits.

Cardinals 4, Expos 2
Bob Forsch, in what he feels might be an audition, allowed eight hits in 6-2-3 innings and drove in the go-ahead run as the Cardinals snapped the Expos' five-game winning streak.

By winning, St. Louis averted a four-game series sweep and knocked the Expos into third place in the East behind New York and Pittsburgh. The Cardinals have won only three of 14 games against the Expos this season.

Forsch, 6-3, gave up six hits, struck out two and walked one in his longest stint of the season. Ken Dayley replaced Forsch, then Todd Worrell got his 21st save with 1-2-3 innings of relief.

"If I pitch well enough, somebody might want me," said Forsch, 38. "I like it here, it's just really, one of those things."

Montreal's Pascual Perez, 8-6, who entered the game with the best earned run average in the major leagues at 2.19, allowed seven hits, struck out three and walked one in six innings.

Giants 5, Braves 2
At Atlanta, the Giants got a two-run double in a five-run third inning from Kevin Mitchell, who now has 34 RBI in his last 34 games. Four pitchers combined on a four-hitter.

The Giants used three hits and five walks for their five runs in the third inning. All the runs and hits and four of the walks came off Atlanta starter John Smoltz, 1-3.

Brett Butler led off with the first of his two walks in the inning. He took second on Robby Thompson's fly to deep center and Will Clark walked. Both runners scored on the double by Mitchell.

Mitchell scored on a single by Mike Aldrete, who then raced to third on Joel Youngblood's single and came in when the ball eluded Lonnie Smith in left field. Butler eventually walked with the bases loaded for the fifth run.

Ron Davis, 1-1, who relieved starter Joe Price after four innings, got his first National League win. Craig Lefferts and Scott Garrelts also pitched, with Garrelts working the ninth for his 10th save.

Petty Will Leave Team

RICHMOND (AP) — Kyle Petty's decision to leave the Wood Brothers NASCAR racing team does not mean his father, Richard Petty, is considering retirement, Kyle's manager says.

Kyle Petty, who drove for the family team from 1980 to 1984, reportedly would be in line for his 51-year-old father's STP car should Richard Petty step down.

But Don Light, Kyle Petty's manager, said that isn't likely.

"I'd be surprised if that happened," said Light. "Richard's likely to be driving when Kyle retires."

Eddie Wood, a spokesman for the Wood Brothers, told The Richmond News Leader Monday that Kyle and the Woods will part company at the end of the season, ending a four-year association.

"We're going to split at the end of the year," Wood said. "That's all I want to say about it."

Twins' D Keys Win

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

The Minnesota Twins' best offense has been a good defense.

The Twins have committed the fewest errors in baseball this season and turned a triple play in the fourth inning against Cleveland to lead them past the Indians 7-2 Monday night.

"They were threatening. It took momentum from their side and brought it into our dugout," said left fielder Dan Gladden, whose spectacular catch of a liner hit by Joe Carter started the triple play.

The Twins came back with three runs in the bottom of the fourth.

"Baseball is a game played with a lot of emotion and momentum," Gladden said. "They had a rally going and it pretty much killed it."

Alan Anderson, 10-7, gave up singles to Ron Washington and Willie Upshaw, bringing up Carter, the Indians' RBI leader with 75. Carter hit a drive to left with Washington and Upshaw running at the crack of the bat.

Gladden leaped against the wall to make the catch and threw back to second baseman Steve Lombardozzi. Lombardozzi tagged Washington as he raced back to second and with Upshaw frozen at second, Lombardozzi threw back to first baseman Gene Larkin to complete the triple play.

"You're looking at first and second and nobody out with Joe Carter at the plate and Ron Kittle on deck," Anderson said. "That's one of the biggest plays I've ever had made behind me."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Toronto 5, Kansas City 1; Detroit 3, Texas 2; Seattle 4, California 3, and Oakland 9, Chicago 5.

Indians manager Doc Edwards was angry at his team's sloppy baserunning.

"The play is in front of the runners and it's their job to react," Edwards said. "It's the guy in front that watches the ball, and he sucked the other guy in behind him."

Washington admitted he had taken off too quickly.

"I overreacted," Washington said. "I thought it was at least off the wall or out. I got so excited. And I made it look so good that Willie followed me."

The triple play preserved a scoreless tie. Kirby Puckett led off the bottom of the fourth with a double against Chris Codiroli, 0-3, Gary Gaetti tripled and Larkin hit the next pitch for his fifth homer.

"It was something of a spark, which the club needed at the time," Twins manager Tom Kelly said.

It was the second triple play turned by the Twins this season and the eighth in their 28-year history.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 1

Jeff Musselman allowed three hits in seven innings and Ernie Whitt and Tony Fernandez combined for five RBI as Toronto beat Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen for the third straight time this season.

Musselman, 4-1, struck out five, walked four and lowered his earned run average to 1.80. Tom Henke worked two hitless innings to earn his 21st save.

Tigers 3, Rangers 2

Frank Tanana improved to 4-0 against Texas this season and Jim Walewander scored the go-ahead run when reliever Ed Vande Berg balked in the seventh inning.

Detroit has won five of six and leads New York and Boston by 3½ games in the American League.

Mariners 4, Angels 3

Jay Buhner singled to snap an eighth-inning tie and Mark Langston allowed four hits in eight innings to lead Seattle.

Alvin Davis and Steve Balboni drew walks against California's Kirk McCaskill, 8-6, before Buhner lined to center to score pinch-runner Darnell Coles.

Athletics 9, White Sox 5

Mark McGwire hit his 20th home run and Dave Henderson had four of Oakland's 14 hits.

Glenn Hubbard hit a homer, his second of the season and also his second in as many days, and Jose Canseco got his 88th RBI on calendar date 8-8-88 to tie Boston's Mike Greenwell for the league lead.

Davidson Named New Ohio U. Coach

ATHENS, Ohio — Lynn Davidson, a former East Carolina University volleyball coach, has been named to the same post at Ohio University.

Davidson comes to Ohio from James Madison, where the 30-year-old has been head coach. At James Madison, she guided the Lady Dukes to a 63-22 record, including a 35-7 mark last season. Her overall record is 100-59.

She also coached the men's team at Minnesota, taking them to the 1985-86 Northern Intercollegiate championship. Her 1982 team at East Carolina posted the school's best record, 26-14.

Davidson received her bachelor's degree from North Carolina State and her masters' from Minnesota.

Snow Hill-Kernersville Rained Out

SNOW HILL — Game five in the American Legion state baseball championship series was rained out Monday night in Snow Hill. Post 94 holds a 3-1 lead over Kernersville in the best-of-seven series for the state title, and the right to advance to regional competition.

The series is scheduled to resume tonight at 8 p.m. in Snow Hill. If it should be rained out, the remainder of the series will be played in Kernersville, starting Thursday at 2 p.m. If another game is needed, it would be played at 8 p.m., with a seventh game, if needed, scheduled at 8 p.m. Friday.

Auburn Professors Disagree With Dye

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Two Auburn University faculty members said they will use the school's faculty senate to express their support for President James Martin and a new Southeastern Conference academic rule that has been heavily criticized by Auburn football coach Pat Dye.

During the recent SEC media program in Birmingham, Dye lashed out at a new conference policy that will eventually eliminate an SEC standard that allows league schools to accept on a non-playing basis athletes who don't immediately meet NCAA academic requirements.

Martin responded that he supported the new rule. He said although there is no divisiveness between himself and Dye, the coach's remarks could hurt Auburn's academic reputation, which has suffered from several widely publicized incidents involving the academic troubles of football players.

A five-member panel of faculty senators met Friday and drafted a resolution supporting Martin and the new rule.

Ian Hardin, chairman of the university senate's commission of academic studies and athletics, said the proposed resolution will probably be introduced at the senate's next meeting on Aug. 16.

Hardin said the resolution supports Martin and the new SEC rule, but he would not say how the resolution is worded.

Another member of the commission, electrical engineering professor Victor Nelson, said the resolution will be forwarded to the senate rule committee for consideration and possible introduction.

Dye, who also serves as athletic director at Auburn, has said he opposed the policy because it leaves "the little guy" from an impoverished background without a chance to use athletic skills to earn a college education.

Dye's handling of an academic matter that touches on the rule is currently being investigated by Auburn and the SEC. The probe began after allegations that Dye promised Charlie Dare, a highly recruited offensive lineman, that Dare would be eligible if he attended Auburn.

Dare, who decided to attend Alabama instead, is ineligible this year because he failed to meet NCAA requirements of a 2.0 grade point average in high school courses.

The new conference rule will gradually eliminate the acceptance of "partial qualifiers" such as Dare, athletes who do not meet the minimum requirements before their freshman year. To qualify under NCAA regulations, students must have at least a 2.0 average in a high school core curriculum and score 15 or better on the American College Test or 700 or better on the Standard Aptitude Test.

SEC schools, with the exception of Georgia and Vanderbilt, currently accept "partial qualifiers." The athletes are ineligible to play during their freshman year, but can earn their eligibility for future years by meeting the requirements.

The new conference policy will limit each school to signing three "partial qualifiers" in 1989, two in 1990, two in 1991, one in 1992 and none in 1993.

Bears Make Their Longest Road Trip

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — The Chicago Bears arrived in Sweden after the longest road trip in the club's history Monday, a week before their NFL exhibition game against the Minnesota Vikings.

Sunday's "American Football Classic" between the NFC Central Division rivals will be played at Ullevi Stadium's natural turf field. A sellout crowd of 52,000 is expected.

It's the first time an NFL game will be played in Scandinavia and the first time on the European continent. There have been four NFL preseason games in London's Wembley Stadium, the last on July 31 when the Miami Dolphins defeated the San Francisco 49ers 27-21.

The Bears beat the Dallas Cowboys 17-6 at Wembley two years ago in their only previous European preseason game. The Vikings also have played there once, beating the St. Louis Cardinals 28-10 in 1983.

"This game will be good for both parties," Chicago Head Coach Mike Ditka told a news conference after the Bears flew into this Swedish southwest coast city.

"It will give the Swedes a close look to see American football first hand. It's a good exposure for the NFL and a good opportunity to show our product."

The Bears scheduled a two-hour practice session Monday at Slotsskogsvallen, a wooden stadium outside the city.

Mariable Glad To Be Back On Field

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson linebacker Dorian Mariable says he hoped to be in better shape at the beginning of football practice, but he's doing considerably better than he was after a major car wreck earlier this year.

"I'd like to be a little further along, but considering where I was when I started lifting in July, I think I've come a long way," Mariable said as the upperclassmen arrived at school Sunday.

Mariable, a junior from Spartanburg and one of the Tigers' defensive stars, fell asleep at the wheel of his car after last April's spring football game and smacked into a telephone pole.

"The glass cut through my jugular vein and there was blood all over the place," he said.

 Bridge is a logical game. If you can draw the right conclusion from a particular play, it will usually point you in the winning direction. South judged his hand well. His partner's bidding virtually blueprinted the fact that North held a singleton heart. Therefore, South's honor cards in his partner's suits greatly increased the value of his hand, so he elected to gamble out a small slam in spades. West also realized that dummy was going to be short in hearts, so he led a trump to cut down the enemy ruffing power. The table's queen won the first trick, and declarer continued by running the ten. West grabbed the king and shot back another trump, and declarer found he had only 11 tricks. He tried the diamond finesse—to no avail. Had declarer assumed that West was unlikely to have led a singleton trump, he could have guaranteed the contract as soon as East followed to the second trick. The location of the king was unimportant. Declarer should have risen with the ace and, leaving the king outstanding, started on the clubs. As long as that suit is no worse than 4-2, the contract is safe. On the third club declarer discards a diamond, and he is in control. West can score his master trump whenever he pleases, but thanks to a heart ruff in dummy declarer will score 10 tricks in the black suits and the two red aces.

Corporations Using Videos To Get Messages Across

By FELIX GUTIERREZ
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — As the TV generation comes of age, more companies are turning to video magazines, brochures, catalogues and annual reports to get their message across with sound, sight and action.

"It's very much a growing trend... We're in the television generation," said International Television Association spokesman Paul Kleyman.

The group's U.S. members, who operate corporate video efforts, have grown from 1,600 to 9,000 since 1978. Corporate video outlays reached $5.5 billion in 1987, up from $1.1 billion in 1980, according to a recent study, Kleyman said.

Using telegenic visuals, sharp graphics and background music, video publications are becoming the way to reach teens and adults who prefer the tube. Some of the slickly produced videos are televised companions of printed media. Others stand alone or supplement face-to-face meetings.

"Little by little younger employees are asking for more things on video," said Ron Hale of Southern California Gas Co., which began "Newsline," a TV show for staffers, in 1984. "The generation that has grown up on television expects to get their information quickly and on the tube."

Much like a company newspaper, the magazine-format show features segments on gaining customers, how to safely use torches when cutting gas lines, and how gas delivery to some customers was curtailed during a winter shortage.

Programs are produced four times yearly, for $20,000 to $25,000 each. The utility's 9,500 employees view them at 200 sites throughout the company. Some take videocassettes home to watch, Hale said.

Allstate Insurance produces its own videos to welcome new workers, show corporate policyholders how to reduce accidents, and help claims adjusters standardize estimates. This year some agents are visiting families with a new life insurance video they can play on home recorders.

"He'll pop the video in the VCR and it will show how the product can really benefit them," said Allstate assistant vice president Deborah Kamp. "It's an emotional product that we're selling. The use of emotions can help people understand the importance of the product to their family's livelihood." Video publishing also is moving into stockholder meetings. Instead of speeches from top executives, some corporations show a company-produced video before taking questions from the floor, said George Hobgood, who prepares corporate annual reports.

"Three years ago I wasn't doing any video work," said Hobgood, who expects to produce five to six annual report videos this year. "People will watch a 10 or 12 minute video. You may or may not be able to get them to read the same thing on paper."

Since companies must file printed reports with government agencies, Hobgood doesn't see television replacing print. Cost and portability are other print advantages.

"I don't see them replacing print," said Jody Uttal-Gold, who has produced corporate videos for five years. Unlike print, she said, people "can't take the video home." "There's still a lot of resistance," from some corporations, she said. "They don't want to spend that kind of money and they don't think people are going to view it."

Still, video uses are growing as a TV generation finds new applications for its favorite medium. Redlands, Calif., produced a video "windshield tour" of itself when officials presented a $7 million municipal bond issue to New York firms setting the city's credit rating last Spring.

"Normally it is done verbally and maybe with some flip charts or slides showing the city or project that's going to be financed," said John Fitzgerald of the firm organizing the bond issue.

Video publishing has natural advantages for some topics and audiences, said Victor Livingston, executive producer of "Business Television Report," a quarterly videocassette magazine for television industry executives.

"We cover the business of television on television," said Livingston in a telephone interview from New York. The video magazine is sent on cassettes to targeted industry leaders and distributed by satellite to TV stations.

Several printed trade magazines cover the television business. But Livingston, a former Cablevision Magazine editor, started the video magazine last Autumn because he "wondered why the television industry did not use the power and impact of its own medium to report on itself."

The television magazine shows examples of programs and screens new technologies, along with on-camera interviews. Also included are commercials geared for TV executives; such as the Nickelodeon cable channel and video equipment makers.

Other video publishing includes colleges sending tapes to high schools to recruit students and companies issuing video catalogues of wares. Hardware stores and supermarkets screen videos in their aisles to demonstrate how products are used.

Video publishing is growing "simply because organizations understand they have to communicate in ways that people are comfortable being communicated with," said Marcy Rothenberg, a University of Southern California journalism professor. "It's a format people are used to seeing. It's visual."

Documentary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "L.A. Law" star Jill Eikenberry was treated for breast cancer during early filming of the hit series and plans to help produce a documentary about breast cancer survivors.

The documentary, "Destined to Survive: 100 Roads to Recovery," is to be shown Oct. 12, she said Monday at a news conference.

It will profile 100 survivors of breast cancer, some famous, such as first lady Nancy Reagan, and others not. The aim is to encourage women to carefully examine themselves for signs of the disease.

MICKEY AND FRIENDS — Actor-comedian Mickey Rooney is welcomed to London Monday by The Sugar Babies, a dancing group which claims to have the most galmorous legs in the world. Rooney will star in a burlesque musical in London by the same name. (AP Laser-photo)

Stars Turn Out To Support Fast

DELANO, Calif. (AP) — Hollywood stars turned out to support a boycott of California table grapes by farm labor union leader Cesar Chavez, who is bedridden in a hunger strike over pesticides.

Monday was the 23rd day of his water-only fast, an effort to gain support for the 4-year-old boycott that has been virtually ignored by the public.

Martin Sheen, Eddy Albert and Robert Blake were among the stars who met six at a time Monday in private with Chavez before talking with reporters. Chavez's fast has boosted levels of uric acid in his system, threatening to cause kidney failure, his doctors said.

"A man (Chavez) is putting his life on the line so you will wake up and save your own," said actress Rose

Portillo, who appeared in the film "Zoot Suit."

Portillo was joined by about 20 actors who said that five pesticides used on California table grapes threaten consumers, farm workers and the environment.

Growers deny that table grapes contain dangerous pesticide residues.

Chavez' United Farm Workers union has no contracts among California table grape growers and the union has lost 30,000 dues-paying members during the last decade.

Monday's meetings in this town 200 miles north of Los Angeles was presided over by Luis Valdez, creator of "Zoot Suit" and a longtime Chavez friend.

Sheen led a "meditation," asking all to hold hands. "Let my country awake," he said as he ended his prayer, with the stars raising their clasped hands.

"The problem we are addressing today is silent and invisible. It is the poison brought to us on our food," said Mike Farrell of TV's old "M-A-S-H" series.

Charlie Haid, who played Renko on the old "Hill Street Blues" series, said, "Wake up! Your children will be the next victims. The children here are the victims."

Mickey Will Return To TV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A new edition of the "Mickey Mouse Club," produced at Disney-MGM Studios at Walt Disney World is scheduled to reach a new generation of children this fall, on cable's Disney Channel.

The original "Mickey Mouse Club" was broadcast 1955-59 and some of its child performers, including Annette Funicello became entertainment stars. Aimed at the 6-12 age bracket, the renewed series will have innovations that include a toll-free phone number for watchers to call in to take part in games, interview guests and vote in polls.

Other portions of the show will be familiar to middle-agers — songs, dances and skits featuring a cast of talented children who will be regulars on the programs weekdays from 5-6 p.m. Eastern and Pacific time.
