Long Night At Cape 'Sure Ended Right'

Shuttle Test Goes Smoothly

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery roared to life on the launch pad today as NASA ignited its main engines in a crucial 22-second test leading up to the first U.S. manned space mission since the Challenger disaster 2½ years ago.

The firing, delayed five times in two weeks by leaks and other mechanical problems, checked modifications to the engines and other systems. It was critical to certifying the shuttle for the first post-Challenger launching.

"It was a very smooth countdown; the team and the hardware all worked successfully," Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, told the team. "It's been a long night, but it sure ended right."

Launch director Bob Sieck thanked his crew "for making our toughest test look easy. You should be pleased because it was an excellent performance and you should look forward to the launch count with confidence."

Launch control center commentator Hugh Harris said it appeared all three engines fired for the required length of time.

Officials hoped to have a preliminary report on test results within hours.

The space agency said that if the firing was successful and there were no other problems, Discovery could be launched in late September. But because much work remains, most officials believe the liftoff will slip in to October.

At the end of today's near-flawless countdown, the three main liquid fuel engines at the base of the delta-winged spaceship flashed to life. The launch pedestal was engulfed in a huge cloud of steam as the fiery exhaust collided with protective water pouring over the foundation of the structure.

As the engines, fed by liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen, generated thrust equal to the energy output of 23 Hoover Dams, a loud thunderclap rolled across the Kennedy Space Center.

The 85-ton spaceship strained against eight 3-foot-long hardened steel bolts holding it down on the pad. On an actual launch, two solid fuel booster rockets would ignite and explosive charges would sever the bolts to free the shuttle.

A total of 732 instruments were installed throughout the shuttle to take detailed measurements of all system operations. That's five times more than on any previous shuttle test or launch.

The ground-shaking firing followed five postponements, including a computer-ordered halt a split second before ignition last Thursday.

"Super job, super team," NASA administrator James C. Fletcher told the launch team following the test.

The 22-second burst of power today was just a fraction of the more than eight minutes that the engines are to burn in propelling Discovery into orbit. But engineers said the firing was long enough to test the entire shuttle system.

"We'll test the hardware and the software and the people," launch director Bob Sieck said before the exercise. "We want to demonstrate the readiness of the total system for flight."

NASA spokeswoman Cindy Buck said a liquid oxygen pump in ground support equipment failed early today but crews shifted to a backup pump. Ignition was right on time at 7:30 a.m.

As the countdown entered the final minutes, the launch team watched a band of thundershowers moving over the Atlantic. If the storms had come within five miles of the pad, there would have been a countdown hold because of the possibility of lightning, but they remained offshore and were more than six miles away at ignition.

Two of the engines, which are reusable, are new. The third has been flown on three earlier shuttle launches.

A firing attempt last Thursday was

U.N. Needs Funds For Gulf Forces

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. officials say that unless withheld dues are paid, particularly by Washington, they'll be hard pressed to fund the force of international military observers monitoring a truce in the Iran-Iraq war.

A first contingent of five observers arrived in Tehran today, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater today said Persian Gulf nations would be urged to donate a substantial portion of the peacekeeping effort's cost.

"We'll be giving the same message to other countries like Japan and others who have an interest in the gulf," Fitzwater said.

Japan, which imports nearly all its oil from the gulf region, already has donated $20 million this year to U.N. peacekeeping efforts, earmarking half of the amount for the Iran-Iraq peace effort.

The Security Council voted unanimously Tuesday to authorize the 350-member U.N. Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group, a day after Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar announced a cease-fire effective Aug. 20.

Direct peace talks between Iran and Iraq are scheduled to begin five days later in Geneva.

Cyrus Nasseri, head of the Iranian mission to the United Nations in Geneva, said in Tehran today that lasting peace will result only if Iraq is branded the aggressor in the war and Iran receives compensation.

Tehran Radio said Iraqi warplanes violated Iranian airspace in the southwest. No bombing was reported, and the official Iraqi News Agency carried no reports of fighting.

More than 24 hours after receiving word of a truce in the 8-year-old war, Iraqis continued to celebrate, honking horns and jumping out of cars to dance in Baghdad's traffic-clogged streets.

Iran, which had suffered a recent string of battlefield defeats, had a more subdued reaction. The nation's acting commander-in-chief and parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said soldiers should remain vigilant in the face of Iraqi "mischiefs."

In a statement read over Tehran Radio, he said Iran would not initiate "any kind of military and armed moves. But just like always, (Iran) will be ready to give an appropriate response to the mischiefs of the enemy."

Marrick Goulding, U.N. undersecretary-general in charge of peacekeeping operations, told The Associated Press all 350 observers are expected at the 730-mile front in a week.

The observers will come from 25 nations, he told an earlier news conference. The nations were not immediately named.

Goulding said none of the five permanent Security Council members — the United States, Soviet Union, France, Britain and China — will send observers.

In a report to the 15-member Security Council, Perez de Cuellar estimated the force's cost at $74 million.

Beryl Weakens After Drenching Gulf Coast, Heads For Midwest

By The Associated Press
The former tropical storm known as Beryl drifted inland today, packing less punch but raising hopes of a hard rain for the drought-stricken Midwest as hundreds of evacuees on the Mississippi coast returned home.

Other thunderstorms hit Nebraska, Missouri, Illinois and Colorado, where flooding was reported.

An Alabama teen-ager remained missing as Beryl was downgraded to a tropical depression Tuesday. The Coast Guard suspended a search for the 15-year-boy, who fell overboard Monday when a fishing boat capsized in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Coast Guard also rescued six people who endured two days of wind and rain on an island 10 miles off the Mississippi coast after high seas prevented them from returning to the mainland.

"I think we missed the forecast," said Randy Gibson of Gilbertown, Ala., captain of the 17-foot boat.

"It's just a miracle that we survived," said his wife, Denvia. "God took care of us and brought us home."

The storm had little impact on New Orleans or south Louisiana, which was preparing to host next week's Republican National Convention.

"The beneficial aspects of this tropical storm are probably much greater than any negative effects from this system — and that's rain," said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

In Colorado Springs, Colo., a storm Tuesday dumped more than 3 inches of rain and golf-ball size hail, turning streets into rivers. Numerous motorists had to be rescued from floating cars.

Firefighters were dispatched to homes and businesses where rising water poured under doors and through electrical wall outlets. Lightning knocked out power to 2,400 customers, and an electric transformer exploded during the storm.

Beryl drifted toward the west-northwest at about 5 miles an hour early today, leaving behind higher than usual tides and some thunderstorms. But hundreds who evacuated their coastal Mississippi homes on Monday began returning Tuesday when the weakened storm moved inland.

The National Weather Service placed the storm's center near Lafayette, La., early today.

GREENVILLE PLANT — Fieldcrest Cannon Inc. employs about 300 people in its Greenville carpet and rug plant. Fieldcrest announced Tuesday that unidentified parties have expressed interest in acquiring the company's carpet and rug operations, which employ about 4,000 people in plants in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. (Reflector Photo By Thomas Forrest)

Fieldcrest May Sell Rug Division

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
Fieldcrest Cannon Inc. announced Tuesday that it is beginning a study of management alternatives including the sale of its carpet and rug operations, which operates a plant on Staten Boulevard in Greenville.

Osborne Raines, vice president of human resources for Fieldcrest Cannon Inc., said it would be impossible at this point to determine what effects, if any, a transfer of ownership would have on Greenville operations.

"We're very much in the preliminary stage of looking into the matter," Raines said. "Any effects brought about by the sale of this division at this time would be pure speculation."

Raines said Fieldcrest's Greenville plant employs approximately 300 people and has been in existence since the early '60s.

He said Fieldcrest has retained the investment banking firm of Kidder, Peabody and Co. to advise company officials about the suitability and appropriateness of acquisition inquiries.

"At this point the sale of that division is just one possibility for the company," he said.

The company announced at its headquarters in Eden Tuesday that parties it did not identify have expressed an interest in acquiring the carpet and rug division.

The division also has plants and distribution centers in Eden and Laurel Hill, in North Carolina; Lan-drum, Belton and Calhoun, in South Carolina, and Summerville and Lyle, in Georgia.

According to an Associated Press report, Fieldcrest became the nation's third-largest carpet and rug maker — behind Shaw Industries and Greensboro-based Burlington Industries — when it acquired Bigelow-Sanford Inc., based in Greenville, S.C., in 1986.

Carpet and rug division sales were $402 million in 1987, about one-third of Fieldcrest's total sales.

But the cost of perfecting stain-resistant carpeting caused the division to lose money for a year beginning with the second quarter of 1987. During that same period, Fieldcrest reported lower earnings for each quarter compared to the quarter a year before, including a net loss of $12 million during the past two quarters.

The division showed a "modest operating profit" during the quarter ended June 30. Fieldcrest also was back in the black, with first quarter profits of $4.1 million on sales of $323 million.

Fieldcrest Cannon is building a new headquarters complex near the Piedmont Triad Airport near Greensboro to put the division's management functions under one roof. It is expected to house about 350 Fieldcrest employees, with about 250 transferring from Eden, New York and Greenville, S.C., and about 100 hired locally in the Greensboro area.

City To Keep Tax Office Open Later

Because of a delay in county tax processing, City Hall will be open late during the last two weeks of August to help Greenville taxpayers meet the city's discount period for prepayment.

City Manager Greg Knowles said the revised operating hours will allow taxpayers to make tax payments at City Hall from Aug. 22 to the end of the month from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays.

City Hall normally closes at 5 p.m. weekdays.

City ordinances and state law mandates the city discount period for prepayment be applicable only during August. People who pay taxes during the discount period receive a 2 percent discount on their city tax bill.

Knowles said due to this year's revaluation of real property by Pitt County, the assessors have not yet completed all value updates for release of the city's files for billing. Subsequently the city's billing process has been delayed.

Knowles said the city has normally billed taxes around the first of August but this year's city taxes might not be billed until Aug. 18, so taxpayers have less time to take advantage of the discount period.

"We want to stay open and show our concern, our appreciation for the taxpayer's situation, and allow them an opportunity to deal with collection personnel before the end of the month runs out," Knowles said.

Council To Decide On Historic Panel

Members of the Greenville City Council will decide whether to establish a city Historic Properties-District Commission at their meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in council chambers of City Hall.

The city already has a seven-member Historic Properties Selection Committee which operates under the direction of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission. Funding for that committee is included in the Planning and Development Department's annual budget.

But the Planning and Zoning Commission voted June 21 to recommend a separate, 15-member Properties-District Commission. Commission members believe such a panel, directly responsible to the City Council, could promote historic preservation better.

Besides having the authority to select particular properties for historic designation, now a historic properties selection committee duty, the proposed commission could also recognize and set aside neighborhoods for historic designation.

Planning and Zoning also recommended that the proposed commission have a separate operating budget, or a separate line-item budget within the Planning and Development Department budget, and that the planning office continue to provide administrative and technical support.

If the council approves the proposed commission, city staff members will write an ordinance detailing its responsibilities which will return to the council for final adoption.

Over the past two years the Historic Properties Selection Committee has selected 11 properties for local historic designation, said Harry Hamilton, city planner.

Hamilton said five of those properties were designated by city ordinance and six by the N.C. Department of Archives and History for historical designation. Those six will be considered for designation at an upcoming council session.

Historic designation permits a percentage property tax deferral and grants particular time periods before a demolition can occur.

In other planned action, the council will also consider a request by Nancy Brown Harris to rezone a .48-acre tract at the northwest corner of 10th and Washington streets from IU (unoffensive industry) to CDF (commercial downtown fringe).

Also on Thursday's agenda is consideration of the sale of Disposal Parcel K-4 in the Southside Redevelopment Project, and the sale of 42-F-2A and 42-H-1A in the South Evans Community Development Project; the close-out of Community Development Block Grant 83-C-6635 for the South Evans Community Project; an application for the Rental Rehabilitation Program in West Greenville and East Meadowbrook; consideration of contracts for services to the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show, Greenville Jaycees, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Evergreen of Greenville, and the Greenville Museum of Art; a bid of $39,315 for winter and summer police uniforms; the establishment of a veterans memorial at the Town Commons, and an amendment to the Budget Ordinance authorizing funds originating from a state grant to be used for the purchase of spare engines for the GREAT Bus System.

Consent agenda items to be considered Thursday include the release of $174 in taxes; changing Sheppard Memorial Library by-laws specifying meeting times for the library board; placing a section of Kingsbrook Road under permanent city maintenance; an ordinance to establish a controlled residential-parking zone on the west side of South Library Street from East Fourth Street to East Fifth Street; establishing a no-parking zone on the north side of East Fifth Street from Hickory Street and extending 90 feet east, and the establishment of five new stop signs.

Texasgulf Gives N.C. State 172 Acres Of Land

AURORA — Texasgulf officials announced this morning the gift of 172 acres of land adjacent to the Pamlico Estuarine Laboratory on South Creek to N.C. State University.

The land, valued at more than $250,000, is about 3½ miles from Texasgulf's giant phosphate-mining operation at Lee Creek, and will be used to expand the Pamlico Aquaculture Center.

In conjunction with the announcement, a ground-breaking ceremony was held signaling improvements to the site, which include plans to add 25 ponds to the 14 already at the aquaculture center.

Tom Byrd, a N.C. State University spokesman, said with the addition of the land and ponds, the aquaculture center "will hopefully become one of the foremost aquaculture research centers in the nation."

The ponds, Byrd said, will be used for research primarily involving hybrid striped bass.

Participating in this morning's ceremonies were University of North Carolina President C.D. Spangler, Texasgulf President Thomas Wright, Dr. Durward F. Bateman, dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at N.C. State, and other.

Rand Carpenter, a Texasgulf spokesman, said the gift of the land resulted from discussions over the past 18 months between legislative leaders, N.C. State University and Texasgulf.

The 1987 General Assembly appropriated $2,482,000 to finance expansion of the aquaculture center.

GOP Platform Holds Tax Line

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 1988 Republican platform isn't "a done deal" yet, but the party's preliminary draft cheered conservatives with its hard line against higher taxes and abortion and in favor of rapid deployment of the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The full 106-member Republican Platform Committee today begins reviewing the document anew line by line, after seven subcommittees spent Tuesday putting their imprint on 158 pages of staff-produced working papers.

That draft is largely a distillation of policies from the 1984 GOP platform and stands that Vice President George Bush has staked out on such issues as child care and education.

It includes new planks on AIDS and the homeless, as well as the GOP's hard and fast line against abortion and higher taxes.

Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr said the subcommittees were not making major changes, but emphasized, "Until we're done on Friday, it's not a done deal. It's not over with."

The subcommittees, taking advice from such Bush campaign emissaries as former Texas Sen. John Tower, resisted most moves to push the platform to the left or right.

The defense subcommittee called for "rapid and certain deployment of SDI as technology permits." The original draft, echoing Bush campaign language, had just spoken of deployment "as soon as possible."

In the family subcommittee, Lynn Glaze, a Delaware delegate, was rebuffed three times when she sought to soften the anti-abortion language. Her motions were tabled without discussion, as was her call for support of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Bunny Chambers, a member of the conservative Eagle Forum from Oklahoma City who moved to table Glaze's amendments, said, "I felt like we'd discussed enough (in the past). I didn't want to spend all the time on it."

The family subcommittee also killed a plank on the special needs of "little persons" — dwarfs. Committee members expressed confusion about the term "little persons" and what the plank was doing in the draft.

On AIDS, not addressed in 1984, the draft promises to "not only marshal our scientific resources against AIDS, but ... protect those who do not have the disease." It is silent on the civil rights legislation for AIDS victims recommended by a presidential commission.

The family subcommittee did amend the AIDS plank to say victims "should be encouraged to seek early diagnosis and to remain on the job or in school as long as they are functionally able."

The defense subcommittee balked at an amendment by its co-chairman, Angela "Bay" Buchanan, to declare a goal of U.S. "space dominance." Buchanan, the former U.S. treasurer from Irvine, Calif., said she was satisfied with compromise language that space must be kept free and secure for all nations.

Gone from the draft documents was the 1984 GOP declaration that "we shall keep the peace by keeping our country stronger than any potential adversary."

On taxes, the draft says, "Republicans unequivocally reiterate the no-tax pledge we have proudly kept."

Like the 1984 platform, the draft calls for the appointment of judges "who respect traditional family values and the sanctity of human life."

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut skipped Tuesday's session to return to Washington, but planned to be back today to wage his uphill battle for liberal amendments.

The draft documents back a line-item veto, a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution and "a flexible freeze on current government spending."

They endorse a child-care tax credit for families of modest means. Bush recently proposed a $1,000-per-child credit for families with incomes up to $20,000.

The draft speaks of the importance of imparting to children "the Judeo-Christian values of Western civilization and our ideals of liberty." The family subcommittee rejected an amendment to change "Judeo-Christian" to "traditional."

On abortion, the draft declares "the unborn child has a fundamental individual right to life which cannot be infringed," and calls again for a constitutional amendment to ban abortion.

It says, "Republicans deplore the apartheid system of South Africa," but warns against economic pressures that harm black workers and entrepreneurs there.

The foreign policy panel added a plank declaring that, "Republicans are strongly committed to obtaining the freedom of all Americans held captive by terrorist elements in the Middle East."

Dansey Charges Reflector 'Managing' Campaign News; Whichard Denies Bias

Republican state Senate candidate W.E. Dansey charged Tuesday at a press conference that The Daily Reflector "is managing the news" and has refused to publish paid ads for his campaign for political reasons.

Dansey's charges stemmed from a July 26 press conference and campaign ads which dealt with an endorsement of Dansey by former Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger.

Jordan Whichard, the newspaper's general manager, said this morning that Dansey's July press conference "was attended by a senior reporter from The Daily Reflector," and "that afternoon's edition of the Reflector contained an article reporting Mayor Persinger's endorsement of Bill Dansey for state senator which also mentioned Mayor Persinger's difference with Senator (Tom) Taft over a lawsuit stemming from a May 1985 automobile accident."

"The Daily Reflector chose not to devote additional news space repeating Mayor Persinger's charges against Taft, which had been originally reported in the October 28, 1986, edition," when the former mayor endorsed another Taft opponent.

Following the publication of the article about Persinger's endorsement of Dansey, "Mr. Dansey and representatives of his campaign complained to representatives of the newspaper regarding its coverage of the news conference," Whichard said.

"The campaign then submitted a paid advertisement containing a copy of a press release distributed at the news conference and later a second ad repeating Mayor Persinger's charges against Taft."

"In both cases," Whichard said, "The Daily Reflector rejected the advertising, requesting substantiation and verification of certain statements contained therein which the Reflector believed were false or misleading."

"In neither case has the campaign provided that substantiation, although the second advertisement was accompanied by a release of liability signed by Ross Persinger," Whichard said.

Dansey said today that the report of the news conference "was very minimal (and) did not explain the situation," so "we elected to run a letter from Persinger as a paid political advertisement."

"Dave Whichard (co-publisher of the Reflector) personally told me he would not run old news. I told him that shouldn't worry him, I was paying for it, and had every right to run the ad."

"In my opinion," Dansey said, the Reflector "is not only censoring the news but the advertising as well. That's what you expect in Eastern Bloc countries but not in eastern North Carolina."

"That's what the news conference was about," Dansey said of Tuesday's gathering. "It's not old news. Even if it is, I'm willing to pay for it."

Jordan Whichard said the newspaper remained firm in its resolve.

"The Daily Reflector maintains guidelines for truth and accuracy in its news and advertising content which are not subject to partisan political considerations," he said. "We will not allow our standards to be compromised for the benefit of any candidate or party, be it Republican or Democrat," he said.

"The newspaper has not endorsed Mr. Taft or Mr. Dansey in this campaign. When and if it chooses to do so, it will be presented to our readers on clearly labeled opinion pages."

Soldiers Injured

FAYETTEVILLE) — Two Fort Bragg soldiers were injured Tuesday as about 600 members of the 82nd Airborne Division who took part in the Gallant Eagle exercise in southern California parachuted back onto the Army post, officials said.

One soldier possibly broke a leg and another possibly injured his hip as they returned to Fort Bragg with other members of the division's 3rd Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, officials said. The soldiers' names were not immediately available.

Most of the paratroopers left Pope Air Force Base on Aug. 3 to join the exercise, which was sponsored by U.S. Central Command and intended to exercise deployment procedures in a desert environment, officials said.

No Cesspool

Address Issue Of Medical Waste

The dangers of dumping medical waste in the ocean go far beyond the threat to public health and environment found inside the vials of unknown substances littering the Atlantic shores.

No reasonable person would dump medical or toxic waste in the ocean, would they? It's illegal and unthinkable. It could spoil an irreplaceable resource and endanger the lives and livelihoods of millions. No one would deliberately do that, would they?

Think again. Syringes and vials of blood have washed up on beaches from South Carolina to New Jersey. In the last two days bags of debris have lined Carteret County beaches. Nasty stuff. And appallingly, the U.S. Navy has claimed responsibility for dumping it.

The seagoing refuse of the last year likely didn't end up floating in the water accidentally. Chances are it wasn't casually tossed into the ocean as an oversight. It's a very safe bet the mess was deliberately, illegally and without conscience dumped into the ocean.

In that action lies the largest danger to public safety — the most threatening one and the hardest one to address. The disregard of health and environmental responsibility that placed the debris in the water represents a mentality and a failure of services that must be rectified.

The evidence that the Atlantic is being used as a waste dump for toxic medical waste proves neither hospitals, disposal companies, states — or the U.S. government, it seems — have opted to address the problem of refuse. All concerned have blinked, or looked the other way, or considered it someone else's problem. There are no uniform standards for disposal of medical waste; it isn't classified as hazardous waste. No firm regulations address medical waste.

Decisions have been too tough to make; solutions too expensive to implement. As a result, potentially deadly substances have found their way into the waters.

It is easier for hospitals to pay a disposal company to haul away waste than to deal with it responsibly on site. What happens to the stuff is then somebody else's problem.

It is easier for states to encourage private waste haulers to handle hazardous and potentially infectious materials rather than creating and regulating waste sites. What happens to the stuff is then somebody else's problem.

And in the face of costly disposal procedures, it is easy for any entity that deals with waste — private disposers or government — to dump it in the ocean.

It then, however, becomes everyone's problem. So just as the blood-filled tubes that litter the beaches contain threats to health and resources, the disregard and head-turning that perpetuates such action further menaces society.

It cannot continue. Waste producers and regulators must address the issue of disposing of medical refuse before the nation's oceans become one huge infectious cesspool.

Well Worth It

Value Of Education Remains High

What will it cost to attend college in the future?

Next year some of the more expensive schools will cost $80,000 for a four-year education. Tuition at some of these schools will be $11,330.

All schools are neither that exclusive nor that expensive. Average charges for four-year public schools are expected to increase five percent to $4,445 for in-state students.

Insisting costs must be kept as reasonable as possible — especially by public universities — goes without saying. If a college education is out of the reach of the average citizen, institutions of higher learning are of little use.

There is, of course financial aid for prospective students and now, as always, tales about about students who make their way through college by working part time jobs and living on incredibly small budgets.

Nevertheless there are few college educations which come free. Parents pay, students pay and scholarships and other assistance funds are part of it.

Higher education costs will go higher in future years and for families who have young children the planning must begin now.

Will it be worth the costs? By all criteria a college degree will be. A degree doesn't always translate into financial gain, but the recipient is better prepared to live life to the fullest — and find a decent-paying job.

A college education will probably become more necessary in the future as the world becomes more complex. Every family budget will be strained by the cost, but for the young man or woman it will be rewarding.

Walking The Education Plank

'What we must do, as a nation and a party, if we are to provide individual opportunity and prosperity for all our people, is invest in our human capital. We must make education and training priority one.'

Eight years ago, Ronald Reagan and the Republican Party won the White House by running on a platform of change. Tired of expensive, ineffectual, big-government solutions to the economic challenges facing the nation, voters opted for a new direction and a leader who proposed solutions that were — then and even now — termed revolutionary. In 1984 the Republican Party, having begun to deliver on its promises to revitalize the nation's economy and shrink the role of the federal government, recommitted itself to the 1980 platform.

Now, after 68 months of economic growth and eight years of peace and prosperity, it is understandable that some in our party should be tempted to focus on the successes of the recent past and consider pulling down from the shelf our 1984 platform, dusting it off and simply putting a new cover on it.

Understandable, perhaps, but doomed to failure. For in the past eight years, this nation, like its government, has undergone dramatic change. More than 50 percent of women with children under the age of one now work outside the home. In general, American workers are becoming older, more female, and more disadvantaged. In fact, over the next 12 years, only 15 percent of our new workers will be native white males, and many of our present jobs will become obsolete. The new jobs that are being created will require higher levels of education and training.

In spite of this nation's relative peace and prosperity, over 50 percent of Americans feel uneasy about the future and believe that we, as a nation, need to change direction. Women, particularly, question the country's ability to address these new challenges. Such sentiments are, I think, one major cause of our party's perceived gender gap.

What we must do, as a nation and a party, if we are to provide individual opportunity and prosperity for all our people, is invest in our human capital. We must make education and training priority one.

Our platform should begin with the youngest of our children by calling for an investment in child care and preschool, particularly for those at risk. We must recognize that as more and more children are raised in single-parent families, as women continue to make up a larger percentage of the work force, government must work with the private sector to ensure that affordable, quality child care is available to our families. And we should endorse additional funding for Head Start and other preschool programs.

The GOP platform must emphasize educational excellence at the elementary and secondary level. It should acknowledge that American education is not measuring up, that more educational reform is needed, and that our country must make a greater commitment to our schools. The platform must include a strong statement on the importance of early drug education, and should call for improving teachers' skills, demanding more of students and reducing our high school dropout rate so that we are graduating from high school students who have the skills they need to go on to postsecondary education.

To finance that additional schooling, the platform should support

George Bush's proposed educational IRA and take one step further Richard Nixon's assertion of over 15 years ago that no child should be denied a postsecondary education due solely to the inability to pay. We must guarantee sufficient funds for higher education for all in need.

A strong education plank is important for the children. But as the work force ages, as some jobs become obsolete and workers are displaced, as international competition increases and the face of the American worker changes, we must widen that plank to include education and job training for all our people.

Combined, the cost of these programs is not insignificant, but the expense can be met through state funding and public-private partnerships. What is needed now is not significantly more funding but more inspiration, direction and leadership from the federal government. Matching grants, added flexibility in existing programs, and support of pilot programs are tools that can help states get the job done efficiently and effectively.

John R. McKernan is governor of Maine and a member of the Republican Platform Committee.

The Cold Facts Spell Taxes

'The worse thing about the unwillingness of the candidates to talk candidly about taxes is that it keeps the rest of us from talking about which taxes should be increased, in the interest of effectiveness and fairness.'

WASHINGTON — "Taxes will go up," Walter Mondale said in his 1984 speech accepting the Democratic nomination for President. "Let's tell the truth. It must be done, it must be done. Mr. Reagan will raise taxes, and so will I. He won't tell you. I just did."

I thought it was a masterful way of dealing with a tough issue, of playing to the intelligence of the people and not to their idle fantasies. I thought it was candor deserving of reward.

Which shows you how much I know. The voters, whatever other reasons they had for preferring Reagan in 1984, obviously were not ready for such candor. George Bush and Michael Dukakis, this year's nominees, aren't about to repeat the Mondale mistake.

Which is a pity, given the fact that both men understand the peril of our present budget deficits and promise to work for their reduction. Dukakis won't absolutely rule out a tax increase, though he will lead you to believe that such an increase would come only as a last resort under circumstances he can scarcely imagine. Bush says flatly: "No new taxes."

Like "Joe Isuzu," the TV car salesman, they look you in the eye and lie through their teeth.

How can there not be a tax increase? And how can these savvy men not know it? There are, after all, only two ways to reduce the federal deficit: by reducing spending and by increasing revenues. The easy spending cuts — and some fairly painful ones as well — have already been made. The most obvious targets for further cuts — defense and Social Security — have been ruled out. Medicare already has the equivalent of a tax increase in the increased premiums mandated for catastrophic illness (though it is the elderly who will be stuck with the increase). Bush, having projected himself as the "education President," will hardly be in position to make further significant cuts in the education budget (even if there were enough money there to make much difference) and, given the plight of America's farmers, farm subsidies seem an unlikely target for more cuts.

I've been thinking about the unfortunate Mondale during this liar's campaign. I thought about him again when I came across a major article in the Aug. 15 issue of Fortune magazine.

Associate Editor Ann Reilly Dowd walks us through the fiscal realities — the economic damage that continued deficits could do to the American economy, the already austere federal budget, the optimistic assumptions of the two candidates, the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings mandate that the budget be reduced to $100 billion for fiscal 1990 — and concludes that the only real question is: Which taxes will rise?

Dukakis' proposal to cut spending for SDI, MX missiles and strategic bombers is mere juggling; the savings would go to conventional forces: a wash. His proposed amnesty for tax delinquents, by which he recovered some revenues for Massachusetts, Dowd dismisses as wishful thinking. She quotes former IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander:

"At the state level, amnesty programs pick up relatively easy targets — people who are on the federal tax rolls, including out-of-state people doing business in-state and not paying taxes. At the federal level, you're talking about the underground economy. It's highly doubtful that organized crime figures would come forward because of an amnesty."

Nor is Bush any more convincing. His "flexible freeze" idea is gibberish. His economic projections — steady economic growth, no spending beyond inflation and lowered interest rates — are dismissed as "an impossible dream." But even if the miracle occurred, how would he keep his promise to spend more on education, AIDS research and education?

The worse thing about the unwillingness of the candidates to talk candidly about taxes is that it keeps the rest of us from talking about which taxes should be increased, in the interest of effectiveness and fairness. Should we target earnings or consumption? The rich or the whole range of taxpayers? Individuals or corporations (though, in the final analysis, that amounts to the same thing)? Gasoline, cigarettes, liquor?

There is a good case to be made for Fortune's preference, a value-added tax. But the case won't be made, or even debated, as long as the candidates are guided (in Walter Lippmann's phrase) not by "whether a proposition is good, but whether it is popular."

There will have to be a tax increase. George and Michael Isuzu won't tell you. The cold facts already have.

Internee Payments Opposed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Civil rights advocates and historians have called the United States government's internment of Japanese-Americans during World War II one of the nation's most regrettable actions. President Reagan said internment was "a sad chapter in American history."

But seven of North Carolina's 11 congressmen say that a $1.25 billion apology to survivors of the internment camps is unwarranted. Congress gave final approval last week to a bill that will provide tax-free payments of $20,000 each to survivors of the camps. Reagan said that he will sign the legislation, which passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 257-256.

About half of the 120,000 Japanese-Americans who were interned are believed to be living.

The internment was ordered by President Franklin D. Roosevelt after the Japanese navy bombed Pearl Harbor in 1941.

Japanese-Americans of all ages in California, Oregon, Washington and Hawaii were forced from their homes, and their businesses were closed, as they were brought to the camps. The action was taken under the belief that some Japanese-Americans might be disloyal to the United States and pose a security threat on the West Coast.

Rep. Steve Neal, a Democrat who represents the Winston-Salem area, was one of the North Carolina congressmen who voted against compensation to the survivors.

"I think that what was done was wrong," Neal said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Washington. "These were Americans who were rounded up. ... It was done in the hysteria of war."

"But, unfortunately, in our history, we have done a number of things that were wrong, and to different groups — American Indians, black people, others... I just don't think the right way to correct those wrongs is by paying all those groups money," Neal told The Winston-Salem Journal.

Neal said an apology would have sufficed. Neal was joined in his opposition by three of the six other Democratic congressmen from North Carolina: Charlie Rose, Bill Hefner and Jamie Clarke.

All three of the state's Republican congressmen — Howard Coble, Alex McMillan and Cass Ballenger, also voted against the bill.

Four members of the North Carolina delegation — all Democrats — voted for the bill: Walter B. Jones, Tim Valentine, Martin Lancaster and David Price.

Valentine said he voted for the bill because he thought the internment was unfair and illegal, but he also said that it was "a fiscally responsible thing to do, in one way."

He said lawsuits are pending against the federal government from victims of the camps and that the $20,000 payments would be accepted in lieu of any money collected from those suits.

"That is the closest we have ever come to putting people into concentration camps," Valentine said. "We were at war with the Italians and Germans, and didn't put them in camps. We ought to try to atone for this."

Like Neal, other North Carolina congressmen who voted against the bill said the internment was wrong, but that paying victims is not the answer.

"I don't think anybody objected to the fact that we need to apologize," Coble said. "It was the money that caused the consternation."

Coble said he knew that voting against the bill would cause him to be labeled "insensitive and uncaring." He added: "But I had to make it clear that this is not good legislation. With 2020 hindsight, we can do a lot of second-guessing about what to do when our national security is threatened."

"I'm in favor of an apology, but where do we draw the line?" Coble asked. "We cannot make reparations for all the wrongs that occurred in the second World War."

The Senate approved the legislation by a 69-27 vote in April. Sen. Terry Sanford voted for the bill. Sen. Jesse A. Helms voted against it.

UNC-Chapel Hill Trustee Chairman Rebuked For 'Charting Own Course'

RALEIGH (AP) — A former chairman of the UNC Board of Governors has rebuked the chairman of the UNC-Chapel Hill Board of Trustees for making "bothersome" public statements about university policy and "charting your own course."

About two weeks before Philip G. Carson stepped down as chairman of the governing board, he told Robert Eubanks Jr. in a letter dated July 12 that Eubanks' comments in an article in The Winston-Salem Journal on UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. were "regrettable."

"I am sorry to feel the need to respond to a news story," Carson wrote, "but I feel that your actions have made it clear that you are charting your own course and find no need to work with the Board of Governors except when it suits."

"Your selection of this tactic makes it impossible for us to address complex and serious concerns of the university (system) in the most effective manner. I find that to be the most regrettable result of all," Carson wrote.

Neither Eubanks, who is fishing in the Arctic Circle, nor Carson, who is vacationing in Canada, could be reached for comment.

But in a four-sentence letter to Carson dated July 13, Eubanks described his remarks in the newspaper interview as "a description of the issues that I thought the Board of Governors and our trustees need to address. It was an attempt to be helpful."

"I regret very much that you misinterpreted it," Eubanks wrote.

In the article that provoked Carson's rebuke, Eubanks voiced several concerns about matters ranging from faculty pay to tuition.

Eubanks warned that UNC-CH was losing its best professors to universities that offered better pay and benefits. He cited the example of a department head at the school of business who had been hired away by Rutgers University, which offered him $90,000 a year, $25,000 more than his salary at UNC-CH.

To make the point that tuition for more money for maintenance, Eubanks described a leaky ceiling in the campus' development office.

To make the point that tuition at UNC-CH's professional schools was too low, Eubanks singled out the $930 fee charged in-state candidates for a master's degree in business administration.

"That's insane to do that when you could raise tuition in the state to $1,500 and keep your faculty," Eubanks was quoted as saying.

Eubanks also was quoted as saying that he had asked legislative leaders to study the UNC system "to see if it's delivering the most efficient product for the people of North Carolina."

In his two-page reply, Carson took Eubanks to task on nearly every point. Printed on university letterhead stationery, Carson's letter was mailed to Spangler and nine selected members of both boards. A copy of the letter was mailed anonymously to The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Spangler declined in a telephone interview to comment on the letter.

The nine others who received a copy of the letter are members of an informal group appointed by Carson last winter to iron out differences between the UNC board of governors and the Chapel Hill trustees.

Navy Accepts Blame For Beach Debris, Begins Cleaning Shore

INDIAN BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Teams from the Navy and Marine Corps will begin cleaning up medical debris from parts of the North Carolina shore today, but officials said it was unlikely the debris posed a public-health hazard.

"Based on what we have seen, our principal concern about the debris is the possibility of trauma injuries such as those caused by someone stepping on a sharp object," said Dr. Ron Levine, state health director.

"After consulting with experts in communicable diseases, we have determined that the potential for disease transmission from these materials appears to be extremely low," he said.

"With effective cleanup and proper assurance, I believe it will not be necessary to close the beaches," Levine said Tuesday night after a six-hour meeting in Atlantic Beach on the issue.

The Navy said it was apparently responsible for medical debris washed ashore along Carteret County beaches, and ordered an investigation and cleanup operation.

"The debris which is washing ashore ... in North Carolina appears to be connected with the United States Navy," said Chief Petty Officer Joseph Mowery, a spokesman for the Navy's Atlantic Fleet in Norfolk, Va. "Accordingly, we have ordered a cleanup operation to remove the debris as quickly and thoroughly as possible."

"Navy regulations regarding the disposal of trash, especially medical wastes, are very stringent and we do not yet know how this refuse came to be washed up as it has," he said.

Some of the debris apparently had Navy markings on it, Cmdr. Deborah Burnette, deputy public affairs officer for the Atlantic Fleet, told the News and Observer of Raleigh. She said she did not know how much more waste could still be at sea.

"We don't foresee any problems at this time as far as closing the beaches," said John Stevens, police chief of Indian Beach, where syringes and vials such as those used in blood tests were found in a trash bag Monday night.

"It has blood vials, testing vials, and some used syringes in it and other medical debris," Stevens said. "I did not detect any blood. I opened the top of the sack up to see what was in it. There were no blood samples or anything.... I didn't see any needles. It appeared the needles had been cut off."

Gov. Jim Martin said the problem may have been exaggerated because of recent concerns at some Northeast beaches.

"In the past, there have always been occasions of things like syringes or test tubes washing up onto the beach, but people would just pick them up and throw them away," Martin said. "But, with the well-publicized problems of the New Jersey beaches, people are more alert to potential problems with medical debris."

The governor related the problems being faced by the coasts to the lack of hazardous waste dumps in the country.

"If we cannot provide adequate facilities for properly disposing of hazardous wastes, people are going to dump them in the ocean," he said. "We made a real mistake last year in not deciding on a hazardous waste site for North Carolina."

Atlantic Beach Police Chief William Duke downplayed the danger of the medical debris.

"It's not medical debris as we know it," he said. "It's mixed in with waste food products. We do not think it is related to the New Jersey-New York problem. We think it is related to a passing vessel."

Levine said officials would survey the beaches, look for more debris and "determine what are the necessary and appropriate measures to take in terms of identifying exactly what the material is, how it might be safely disposed of."

Half Of N.C. Bridges Need Replacement

RALEIGH (AP) — About half of the 16,900 bridges maintained by the state of North Carolina are "structurally deficient" or "functionally obsolete" and need to be replaced, the state Transportation Department says.

But the bridges are still safe, officials said, and they added that they knew of no accidents caused by the structural condition of the bridges.

"We feel like all our bridges are safe," said Dottie Bagwell, an engineer with the N.C. Bridge Maintenance Unit. "If a bridge is in one of those two conditions, we'll post it accordingly to make it safe...."

"Many of the bridges were built in the '30s and '40s. The original design was for traffic in the '40s or '50s, not in the '80s."

Officials told The Charlotte Observer it would cost $1.2 billion to replace problem bridges. Because federal funding has dropped dramatically, alternative sources of revenue could include bond issues and tax increases.

The commission, which meets next week in Raleigh, will make recommendations to the 1989 General Assembly.

The state inspects each bridge at least once every two years.

Problem bridges are considered either "structurally deficient" due to design or deterioration or "functionally obsolete" due to increased traffic or inadequate overhead clearance.

Whale Autopsy

AVON, N.C. (AP) — A team from the Smithsonian Institution's Marine Mammal Division performed an autopsy Tuesday on a pygmy sperm whale that beached itself on the Outer Banks.

The nine-foot-long whale beached itself Monday about a mile-and-a-half from Cape Point, according to Yugo Desch of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

The whale had been bitten by a shark, Desch said.

Sentenced

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A man charged with the slaying of his wife has been convicted of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced to five years in prison in Caswell County Superior Court.

Lorenzo Smith, 28, of Yanceyville, had been charged with first-degree murder in the stabbing of his wife Diane, 27.

District Attorney Thurman Hampton agreed to a plea arrangement with Smith which was heard Monday by special Superior Court Judge Jack B. Crawley Jr. of Raleigh.

Smith pled guilty to the manslaughter charge and faced a maximum prison sentence of 20 years. He received five years in prison and a recommendation for work release after he undergoes a psychiatric evaluation at Central Prison in Raleigh.

Charged

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 27-year-old Bunnlevel man has been arrested and charged in connection with the July 4 death of a 2-year-old Dunn boy, according to Harnett County Sheriff's Department officials.

Robert Earl Ray was charged with one count of murder and one count of kidnapping.

Chief Deputy Larry Knott said Ray is charged in the death of William Thomas Watts. The child died July 4 after a trip to Fayetteville, Knott said. Ray reportedly picked the child up without permission and took him to Fayetteville, Knott said. On the return trip from Fayetteville, according to original reports, Ray said a tractor-trailer pulled out in front of him, forcing him off Interstate 95 and the child fell to the floor of the truck.

The child was returned to his home unconscious, taken to Betsy Johnson Memorial Hospital, where he was declared dead on arrival, Knott said.

The child died of multiple complications, Knott said.

Bias Charged

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Greensboro chapter of the NAACP is protesting employment practices at the Greensboro Coliseum and has met with city officials to discuss allegations of racial discrimination.

Reports circulated Monday that the civil rights organization would call for coliseum manager Jim Evans' resignation, but local NAACP executive director C.C. Draughn said a decision has not been made.

The NAACP's protest is the second the organization has aimed at a local government-related agency this summer. The NAACP has charged the Greensboro Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, which operates with tax funds, discriminates in its hiring practices and ignores the black community when promoting the city.

Phone Connection

DURHAM (AP) — A new $10 million central telephone switch developed by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. now ties Duke University's telephone system directly into its computer files.

As one of the first institutions to use the new switch, Duke, which operates the nation's oldest university-owned telephone system, will be able to identify the switch's strengths and weaknesses, officials said.

Eventually, students could use the telephone system for tasks such as electronically sifting through the library's card catalog using computers in their dormitory rooms, school officials said.

Duke's new computerized switch, which handles about 14,000 lines, replaces a 10-year-old electromagnetic switch that served about 10,000 lines, officials said.

NCNB Posts

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NCNB Corp. of Charlotte unveiled its senior management team for its Texas bank Tuesday, with NCNB executives from North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida taking seven of the top 10 posts.

They include two Charlotte executives — H.A. "Rusty" Rainey and Cal Hunkele — whose moves to Dallas hadn't been previously disclosed. Three managers of First Republic-Bank Corp. have gained senior posts as well.

Less than two weeks ago, NCNB was chosen by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to acquire the holdings of insolvent First Republic, Texas's largest banking firm, over five years. The Dallas bank has been renamed NCNB Texas National Bank.

NCNB President Francis "Buddy" Kemp will be chairman of the Texas bank and Timothy Hartman, NCNB's chief financial officer, becomes vice chairman. Half of the eight executives whose posts were announced Tuesday report to Kemp, while half report to Hartman.

Jump Injury

MAGGIE VALLEY, N.C. (AP) — A patron of a mountain theme park was injured Tuesday afternoon when he jumped from a chairlift stalled by a lightning storm, authorities said.

Anthony Longworth, whose address was not available, was taken to Haywood County Hospital where he was listed in good condition in the emergency room, a hospital spokesman said.

A Haywood County Sheriff's Department dispatcher said Longworth was injured about 6 p.m. after a thunderstorm in Maggie Valley shut down the chairlift at Ghost Mountain.

Phosphorus Ban Cutting Pollution, Reducing Cost Of Water Treatments

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

Officials in Raleigh and Greensboro say reduced levels of phosphorus in wastewater could avert the need for costly expansions in treatment plants.

"Quite frankly, what it's done is we're looking at moving ahead with the installation of additional facilities and it's given us some latitude to rethink what our plans are for final construction," said Dale Crisp, assistant public utilities director for Raleigh.

"We may in fact be able to go with a lot less equipment to comply with the state than we had thought to begin with," Crisp said.

Statewide figures are still being compiled, but North Carolina's ban on phosphorus in household laundry detergents appears to be making significant inroads in the water pollution problem after seven months, officials say.

"We have seen a decline in the amount of phosphorus coming into the plant," said Ron Williamson of the Orange County Water and Sewer Authority. "We have to attribute that to the phosphate detergent ban."

Since the ban took effect Jan. 1, phosphorus has declined about 20 percent there, Williamson said. In the first seven months of 1987, incoming waste water had an average of 458 pounds of phosphorus per day, he said. Since January the average has been 368 pounds.

"There was not any real intensive effort to make sure retailers didn't sell off what they had on the shelves," he said. "When we looked at it in March, there was still some phosphate detergents on the shelves — about half the amount of a year before."

Crisp said phosphorus reductions in Raleigh had remained around 15 percent since January. In Greensboro, Arthur White, superintendent of waste water plants, put the figure at 22 percent.

"It looks like with the effect it has had we will possibly be able to do it (treat water) with chemical as opposed to biological treatment," White said. "It will save us some money down the road."

Tom Bruce, deputy director of Durham's Department of Water Resources, said phosphorus reductions since the ban have ranged from 25 percent to 35 percent coming into the plants.

"It might be saving a little money, but we're still going to have to do some expansion because of new state requirements," he said.

While water leaving treatment plants is down to 3 or 4 milligrams of phosphorus per liter, state guidelines call for a limit of 2 milligrams, Bruce said.

Bryson Jenkins of the Division of Environmental Management said the state is in the process of compiling its own figures but wasn't sure when the figures would be available.

Helms Urges Action On Judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms says prompt action is needed to allow U.S. District Judge Richard C. Erwin of Winston-Salem to become the first black chief district judge in North Carolina.

"I would like to see him set that precedent," Helms said Tuesday.

But Democrats say Erwin could become chief judge of the state's middle district without the Senate's action. A key Judiciary Committee aide said the Senate would not speed up its normal procedures in order to accommodate Helms.

Erwin would become chief judge if the Senate confirms N. Carlton "Woody" Tilley of Greensboro for a federal judgeship, clearing the way for Chief Judge Hiram Ward to go on senior status, a form of semi-retirement.

But Helms contends the action must be taken quickly.

Helms also accused Senate Democrats of stalling numerous Republican judicial nominations in hopes of killing them if Democrats win the White House in November. Because Republicans hold the presidency, they make nominations for federal judgeships; Helms controls all nominations from North Carolina because he is the state's only Republican senator.

Reagan Set To Sign $4 Billion Drought Relief Bill

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to sign a $3.9 billion aid package for drought-stricken farmers that cleared Congress with overwhelming support in both the House and Senate.

"We have kept the faith," House Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, said Tuesday as the House approved the bill on a 383-18 vote. "Our promise has been kept."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan plans to sign the bill, which whisked through Congress in a matter of weeks. It emerged from a House-Senate conference committee last week and won Senate approval Monday.

The measure provides relief for farmers suffering crop losses of more than 35 percent of expected harvest due to drought or a variety of other causes, including hail, insect damage or even excessive moisture.

For damage exceeding the 35 percent eligibility level, the Agriculture Department would provide payments equal to 65 percent of lost income.

Also in the bill are larger payments for farmers with extraordinary losses. They would be eligible for payments equal to 90 percent of income lost as a result of crop losses exceeding 75 percent of expected yield.

The money for these payments is expected to come from savings that the government will realize as a result of the drought itself.

Income-support payments, known to farmers as deficiency payments, are based in part on how much the individual farmers produce. Destruction of crops by the drought has thus lowered the amount that the government-owned Commodity Credit Corp. must spend on these payments.

Some urban lawmakers in recent years have been highly critical of the amount the government spends on farm subsidies, but the drought bill largely escaped such criticism.

The House had been viewed as the toughest test. Unlike the Senate, it has members who represent no agricultural interests of any kind and some relish playing the role of fiscal watchdog when farm bills are on the floor.

Rep. Bob Walker, R-Pa., did complain about a $5.5 billion authorization contained in the bill to control water temperatures in the Sacramento River near California's Shasta Dam as a way to enhance salmon spawning.

"So the bill is going to take care of yuppies, too, and make sure their salmon moussé supply is not interfered with?" Walker said. He grumbled that the public "is sick and tired of Congress using every sort of emergency to pork barrel."

But there was virtually no political opposition to the general idea of drought relief.

"This bill is the product of a tremendous concerted effort to produce relief for drought-stricken farmers," said Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., the top Republican on the House Agriculture Committee.

Under the bill, farmers would not have to repay deficiency payments they have received in advance if production losses resulting from drought damage has now lowered their payment amount. But they would not be allowed to retain deficiency payments for lost crops and still receive disaster aid payments for the same lost crops.

To be eligible for disaster payments, farmers would have to purchase federal crop insurance for 1989.

The bill would furnish aid to livestock producers who ordinarily grow their own feed but now must buy it instead because of the drought. The measure would make such aid available to producers of cattle, sheep, goats, pigs, poultry, fish and horses used for food.

Individual farmers can collect no more than $100,000 apiece. The measure also prohibits payments to any producer whose "qualifying gross revenues" as set by a congressional formula amount to more than $2 million.

The Drought of 1988: Status and Outlook

Mt. ps and data © 1988 Accu-Weather, Inc. AP

Drought Will Cut Corn Crop Sharply

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The drought will cut U.S. corn production about 40 percent, crop analysts say, but they hold out more hope for improvement in soybeans.

"The potential for change in corn is very, very small," said Jim Quinton, of the AgriVisor marketing service in Bloomington. "Soybeans can go up, down or sideways."

Figures released Tuesday by AgriVisor put the 1988 corn harvest at more than 4.3 billion bushels and the soybean harvest at less than 1.5 billion bushels, respective declines of nearly 39 percent and 21 percent from 1987.

The figures followed a recent survey by the American Farm Bureau Federation, which predicted farmers would harvest 4.34 billion bushels of corn, down 40 percent, and 1.44 billion bushels of soybeans, down 24 percent from last year's yields.

"Much of the crop damage has been done to corn and it's too late for improved weather conditions to substantially reverse the losses," said Tim Price, a federation grains specialist.

Quinton said farmers in parts of Iowa, South Dakota, Minnesota and Nebraska probably can expect better crops than those farther east.

The AgriVisor estimates are based largely on an examination of fields in 10 key farm states by a group of young farmers from Douglas County, Ill. They drove 11,000 miles in late July and early August, checking crops from Nebraska and South Dakota to Michigan and Ohio.

The bureau report is based on responses from nearly 1,400 producers surveyed in the major producing states.

Illinois was one of the states hardest hit by the drought, especially in the corn fields.

Quinton said farmers in the state probably will average 67 bushels of corn per acre for a 636.5 million-bushel crop. That compares with 132 bushels per acre in 1987 for total corn production of 1.2 billion bushels.

A 67-bushel corn yield would be the lowest since 1959 and the 636.5 million-bushel harvest would be the smallest since 1983, a year of drought and of a major government acreage-reduction program.

Illinois farmers are expected to average 28 bushels of soybeans per acre this fall and put 243.6 million bushels into their bins, Quinton said. They had a yield of 38 bushels per acre in 1987 for production of 323 million bushels.

Hispanic Named To Cabinet Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanic Americans say they're pleased that President Reagan has finally named one of their own to his Cabinet, but many see it as a last-minute, election-year ploy.

"I'm sorry that it took so long. It's obviously a political move to ingratiate," said Jose de Lara, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

But, he added, "whether it's political or not political, we don't care. It's a giant step for Hispanic Americans."

Calling it "a proud day for all Americans," Reagan announced on Tuesday his selection of Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech University, to succeed William Bennett as secretary of education.

Reagan took the action about a month after Vice President George Bush pledged to de Lara's group that he would put a Hispanic on his Cabinet if elected president.

Asked whether that played a role in his decision, Reagan said, "No, I'm just still working at the job here."

Of Cavazos, he said: "I selected him because he seemed to be the best-fitted man."

Henry Santiestevan, a consultant to a Washington-based educational research organization, the Hispanic Policy Development Project, said, "I think it's high time and I'm sorry that it's so late that it now has the aspect of a strictly political move to affect the campaign."

Alicia Sandoval, spokeswoman for the National Education Association, called the nomination "just a ploy to help get Bush elected, and carry Texas. A classic case of tokenism."

"We are glad that the Reagan administration has finally appointed a Hispanic to the Cabinet, especially in the education field," Ms. Sandoval said. "However, we feel this particular announcement is politically motivated. Cavazos is like a substitute teacher. He won't have the clout to change anything in the little time he has."

Bush's pledge in July was a measure of the political importance of Hispanics, particularly in key battleground states such as Texas, California and Florida which have large Spanish-speaking populations.

Since 1980, the number of Hispanics in the United States has increased 30 percent, to 19 million, accounting for about 7.9 percent of the nation's population.

Cavazos, 61, appeared with Reagan in the White House briefing room and said, "This administration has clearly demonstrated that education is one of its highest priorities, and the initiatives that you have begun in this vital area will be of tremendous benefit to this nation and to this nation's future."

Cavazos, who has been president of Texas Tech in Lubbock since 1980, had announced in May that he planned to resign next July. He said he planned to take a leave and then return to teach anatomy in the medical school, where he is a tenured professor.

The educator is a native of South Texas, where his father was a foreman on the Santa Gertrudis division of the huge King Ranch. He and his wife, the former Peggy Murdock, have 10 children.

Cavazos received the National Hispanic Leadership award of the League of United Latin American Citizens in July for his efforts to reduce the dropout rate among Hispanic youth.

He is a former dean of the Tufts University School of Medicine. He began his teaching career as an associate professor of anatomy at the Medical College of Virginia.

At Tech, he headed a university and health sciences center with more than 24,000 students and 8,500 employees.

"His story is an American success story," Bennett said of Cavazos. "It is a tribute to his ability, to his hard work and to opportunity in the United States of America."

Cavazos is not a medical doctor, but received a Ph.D. in 1954 from Iowa State University. He earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at Texas Tech.

Critics Pan 'Last Temptation'

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — "The Last Temptation of Christ," a film that is enraging segments of the Christian community for its reinterpretation of the Bible, is drawing mixed reviews as art on the secular front.

Included in the film is some nudity, Mary Magdalene plying her trade as a prostitute, and the scene that has most outraged its antagonists, in which the crucified Jesus hallucinates he marries her and has sex with her.

Film critics who viewed the R-rated movie in a Universal Studios screening room Tuesday, including Michael Medved of "Sneak Previews," Charles Champlin of the Los Angeles Times and Bob Thomas of The Associated Press, said they were unimpressed overall.

"It's the height of irony that this level of controversy could be generated by a movie this awful," said Medved.

"An intellectual exercise of the 'What if?' variety," Thomas said. "At times moving, often overwrought, and at least 40 minutes too long."

Daily Variety raved about the film. "A film of challenging ideas, and not salacious provocations," the industry paper's review said.

And Time magazine's Richard Corliss wrote in this week's edition, "Those willing to accompany (director Martin) Scorsese on his dangerous ride through the Gospels may believe he has created his masterpiece."

Scorsese, who also directed "Taxi Driver" and "Raging Bull," defended the film Tuesday night on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

Regarding the sex scenes, he said, "It was important to show him go through all the steps of an ordinary life, to be married, to make love with his wife for the purposes of having children."

He denied any blasphemous intent.

"I'm a Catholic, raised Catholic," he said. "We have a right to explore God in our way."

As the critics watched, 150 protesters, none of whom had seen the film, rallied on another part of the studio lot to castigate Universal and its parent company, MCA Inc.

At the climax of the protest orchestrated by the Rev. R.L. Hymers Jr., a Baptist preacher, a mock crucifixion depicted a bloodied Jesus screaming as a man portraying MCA Chairman Lew Wasserman nailed him to a 10-foot cross.

Wasserman, encountered later, would not acknowledge a reporter's questions.

Earlier protests have drawn charges of anti-Semitism. Other Christian ministers denounced a march led by Hymers at a synagogue where he thought Wasserman worshipped.

There was no demonstration outside a New York screening.

Regarding the protests, Scorsese said: "I am not surprised at people being shocked by the idea of it. Not everybody's going to like it." But, he added, "I'm surprised at the anti-Semitism that's been brought around in the protesting."

"It's very important that people understand this film is not based on the Gospels. It's based on a work of fiction."

Scorsese said he was bothered by the Roman Catholic church's objectionable rating.

"It disturbs me I know but I do know the church has to protect what they feel is its flock. I do know that the book on which the movie is based is used in seminaries at times to open discussions."

The U.S. Catholic Conference said Tuesday it is urging the nation's 53 million Catholics not to see the film.

The furor is likely to boost the movie's fortunes, said Harold Vogel of Merrill Lynch Co., an entertainment industry analyst.

Richard Hirsch, director of communications for the U.S. Catholic Conference, acknowledged that dilemma, saying "It's a case of damned if you do and damned if you don't."

The film, which opens to the public Friday, depicts Jesus as tempted to resist divinity, until the point of death on the cross.

Bible Tells It Differently

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The controversial movie, "The Last Temptation of Christ," sees Jesus' longing for a woman and family as the biggest threat to his calling, but that isn't the way Scripture tells it.

He was tempted, and tempted hard, by some of the most distorting lures of human history — the lures of power, wealth and glory on the threshold of his ministry, as portrayed in Luke 4.

The movie, previewed Tuesday, offers an altered representation of this episode, adding female enticement to it as a main snare, yet also retaining the tug to worldly power. Jesus is jolted loose from both.

Some Christian leaders who have seen the movie, while criticizing elements of it, cite valid aspects, particularly in trying to explore tensions between Jesus' conceived humanity and Godhood.

He is regarded both fully God and fully man, "one who in every respect has been tempted as we are," Scripture says, "yet without sin."

In the movie, he is depicted as an anxious, uncertain and wavering individual, hardly the strong, yet tender and compelling Jesus of Scripture. Yet, in the movie, he realizes his special role from the start.

"One morning he (God) brushed over me like a cool breeze and said, 'Stand up.'" Jesus relates as he undertakes the movie version of his ministry. But he is continually beset with hesitations and fear.

Fear was not unknown to the Scriptural Jesus, although specified only on that last night before his arrest and crucifixion, when he prayed to be freed of the ordeal, yet submitted to it.

This also occurs in imagined fashion in the movie, which brings cinematic suppositions to many biblical episodes — ejection from Nazareth, healing of a blind man, raising of Lazarus, saving of a loose woman from stoning, storming of the temple, Peter's denial.

The movie is explicitly fiction, based on a novel by Greek author Nikos Kazantzakis, and not bound to the Scriptural record. That record sometimes offers possible hints to the movie's elaborations.

Some twists, however, were sheer conjecture, such as theorizing that in Jesus' early days as a carpenter he made crosses for Roman executions, and that he later purposely arranged with Judas to betray him.

Also entirely contrived was a lengthy dream sequence in which Jesus, while dying on the cross, envisions himself leaving the cross while under the persuasion of an "angel," and living naturally as he often had wanted to do.

He is shown having sexual relations with Mary Magdalene, for whom he had suppressed his yearnings. In the dream, she dies and then he is married to Mary, the sister of the Scriptural Martha, and has children.

As an old man, his apostles confront him, upbraiding him for not being crucified and resurrected as he promised — for not being "the door," bringing God and man together, for not being a sacrifice.

He realizes then that the "angel" that had called him off the cross was actually Satan. Jesus crawls back toward reality, saying, "I want to pay the price. I want salvation. I want to be crucified and rise again."

Back in torture on the cross, he smiles and shouts at the end, "It is accomplished!"

The movie contains some nudity, including women in the crowd to which John the Baptist was preaching, but it isn't erotic. However, the concentration on Mary Magdalene as Jesus' potential pitfall diverges from the gospel.

Jesus liked women, Scripture makes clear, visited with them, conversed with them in public contrary to custom, and had women among his followers, which was most unconventional for a first-century rabbi.

The Discount Rate and T-Bond Rates, 1987-88

Discount Increase Will Boost Other Rates

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Federal Reserve's unexpected jolt to its key bank lending rate — to a 2½-year high — likely will push other interest rates higher, including those on home mortgages, economists predict.

The Fed announced Tuesday it was raising its discount rate to 6.5 percent from 6 percent, to help curb inflation and to account for the recent rise of open-market interest rates.

The discount rate is the interest the central bank charges on loans to member banks. A change in the closely-watched rate is the most dramatic move the Fed can make in signaling its credit policies.

Because the banks set their interest rates based on how much it costs them to borrow money, many economists predict other rates will edge higher due to Tuesday's action. That likely will mean consumers will have to pay more for credit on houses, cars and items charged on credit cards.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we had another (bank) prime rate hike by Friday," said David Resler, chief economist for Nomura Securities Inc.

Financial markets reacted quickly to Tuesday's move, with the dollar soaring and stock and bond prices falling sharply.

The dollar jumped to 135.15 Japanese yen in New York from 133.725 yen late Monday, and rose sharply against other major currencies.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 28.27 points to 2,079.13, amid speculation of further rate hikes.

In the credit markets, the Treasury's bellwether 30-year bond fell by about $10 per $1,000 face amount, while its yield jumped to 9.19 percent from 9.10 percent late Monday.

A month ago, major banks boosted their prime lending rates to 9.5 percent, the highest level in more than two years, from 9 percent in response to rising interest rates in the credit markets, which had boosted the banks' cost of borrowing.

The prime is a key rate used to calculate a range of fixed and adjustable-rate corporate and consumer loans.

Many economists had expected the Fed to tighten its reins on the money supply this week, but few were expecting a discount rate hike.

"The (credit) markets have been screaming for a discount rate increase for quite some time; the surprise was in the timing of it," said Irwin Kellner, chief economist for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.

"Not only is the Republican convention coming up, but we're in the middle of a Treasury refunding," in which the government is auctioning off $22 billion in new notes this week to pay off its old debts, Kellner said.

"I don't think inflation is any worse today than it was last year," said Kellner.

Robert A. Brusca, chief financial economist for Nikko Securities Co. International Inc., defended the discount-rate hike.

"It's the Fed's job to throw cold water on the economy when it starts overheating and that's what it appears to be doing right now," he said.

South Sets Sipping Pace For Alcohol

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Southerners drank more alcoholic beverages than residents of any other U.S. region last year, and households with incomes above $35,000 drank more than any other income group, a study found.

The study, released Tuesday by the alcoholic beverage research publication Impact, was based on diaries kept by 12,000 people during 1987. The survey, compiled by NFO Research Inc. of Toledo, Ohio, covered beverage consumption by location, time of day, sex, age, geographic region and household income.

The South, when considered as one of four U.S. regions, drank the most alcoholic beverages — 32.3 percent of all consumed — followed by the Northeast at 24.8 percent, the North Central region at 24.1 percent and the West at 18.8 percent. But the West led the nation in wine consumption, at 31.3 percent of all wine drunk.

Southerners drank 39.2 percent of all wine coolers and 33.8 percent of beer, leading in those categories. Consumption of distilled spirits, or hard liquor, was almost evenly divided among the four regions.

Households with incomes of $35,000 and above drank the most of every type of alcoholic beverage, 35.2 percent. People in that category consumed 42.7 percent of all distilled spirits, twice the level of the $15,000-$24,000 group.

The next-highest group in overall alcohol consumption were households with incomes under $15,000, accounting for 22.7 percent of all alcohol consumed. Households with incomes from $15,000 to $24,000 consumed 18.5 percent, the $25,000 to $29,000 group consumed 12.7 percent and the $30,000 to $34,000 group drank 10.9 percent.

In the under-$24,000 groups, beer and wine coolers were the favorite beverages, at 42.7 percent and 37.6 percent, respectively. The $25,000-to-$29,000 households drank the least wine and spirits, 11 percent and 10 percent respectively.

Men consumed 75.2 percent of all alcohol last year. Men drank 81.8 percent of all beer, 59.3 percent of hard liquor and 47.4 percent of wine, while females drank 61.7 percent of coolers and 52.6 percent of wine.

Drinkers under 20 years old accounted for only 0.5 percent of all alcohol consumed. The report noted that every state has adopted the 21-year-old minimum drinking age.

Fatal Fire

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — City firefighters found the body of an elderly man on a couch Tuesday in his smoke-filled apartment at a high-rise nursing home, a spokesman for the Fire Department said.

The man's identity was being withheld pending notification of relatives, said Battalion Chief S.M. Sloan of the Winston-Salem Fire Department.

Fanny Watkins, who lives near the victim's apartment on the seventh floor, suffered minor smoke inhalation, and was treated at Forsyth Memorial Hospital and released, authorities said.

Topless Italians Are Covering Up

ROME (AP) — The battle of the bare bodies has heated up in Italy this summer, with several towns and resort islands ruling that men and women must wear shirts in public or face penalties.

A Belgian man was even reported beaten up after he refused a request by a Rome subway attendant to cover his naked chest.

One southern town has made a notable break with the trend, guaranteeing that people can walk around topless. Agropoli's tourism chief has called on women to bare all, but the local priest is fighting back.

Topless bathing, popular in Italy for some time, now appears to be on the decline. One-piece suits, unthinkable a few years ago, have now become fashionable.

"It's necessary to return to the good taste of the past," Capri tourism commissioner Giuseppe Massa told the Italian news agency ANSA.

The famous island put into effect a new "cover-up" ordinance Tuesday that bars anyone from walking the streets with a bare chest or just a swimsuit. Penalties for offenders range from $70 to $350.

According to Mayor Saverio Valente, the law was necessary "for reasons not only aesthetic, but hygienic."

On the island of Ponza, about 65 miles to the north in the Tyrrhenian Sea, bathers are also barred from strolling the streets in swimsuits.

Mayor Francesco Ferraiuolo acted this month after receiving a note from local Roman Catholic priest worried about the practice, according to Italian press reports.

In Venice, meanwhile, a former director of tourism, Augusto Salvadori, is organizing patrols to advise tourists on how to dress and eat properly in the canal city. Travelers in shorts or too-slimy sundresses are barred from the main section of St. Mark's Basilica.

A clash of a different sort has broken out in Agropoli, where the tourism commissioner, seeking a new image for the town, has called on women to go topless whenever possible.

British Royalty Works Its Old Magic On Public

LONDON (AP) — She's only fifth in line to the throne, but from the hospital crowds to the headlines, the birth of Britain's newest princess has shown the royal family working a magic that defies even the experts.

"I can't think why there's such hysterical interest really," said Charles Kidd, editor of DeBrett's Peerage, which chronicles Britain's blue bloods.

"But it just keeps increasing ... Maybe it's because there's been a leveling out of social classes — which is very good, but at the same time does, make for rather boring reading," Kidd said in an interview.

"And these characters are supposed to be a bit bigger than life, or we're led to believe they are," he added.

And so they seemed Tuesday. Almost all of Britain's dozen national newspapers splashed across their front pages the Monday night birth of the Princess of York to Queen Elizabeth's second son, Andrew, and his wife, Sarah.

Radio and television networks led bulletins repeatedly with the news, edging out the cease-fire agreement in the Iran-Iraq war.

Only the Communist Morning Star and the newest upscale newspaper, the 375,000-circulation Independent, ignored or paid little attention to the birth of the queen's fifth grandchild.

"We are not much interested in minor royals, but we did record the event," said John Price, news editor of the Independent, which gave the story three lines on page 2. "The Independent's view is that these people don't matter."

It was a lonely view. Compared with the attention given to Europe's other major surviving monarchies — the Spanish, the Scandinavians, the Dutch and the Belgians — Britain erupted with royal fever.

The monarchs of Sweden, Denmark and Norway attract plenty of attention among their Scandinavian subjects, but not much elsewhere.

In the Netherlands, by the time former Queen Juliana's youngest grandchild, also Juliana, was born in October 1981, interest in royal babies had cooled. The little Juliana was the ex-queen's 13th grandchild.

In Sweden, the birth in 1982 of a third child, Princess Madeleine, to King Carl Gustaf and Queen Silvia, dominated the local news but did not make world headlines.

Royal babies not in direct line to the throne receive scant attention. Only one newspaper in Norway mentioned the birth in Brazil last month of Norwegian King Olav's second great-grandchild.

In Belgium, pictures of King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola seldom appear in then news. The heir to the throne, Baudouin's nephew, Prince Albert, keeps even further out of the limelight.

In contrast, the royal family of the tiny principality of Monaco has the photographers in hot pursuit, particularly Princess Caroline and Princess Stephanie, daughters of Prince Rainier and the late Grace Kelly.

But even for them, the scrutiny palls compared to the life of the British monarch's children and their offspring.

Harold Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burke's Peerage, attributes the publicity given Andrew's wife, Sarah, partly to what he says has become an international hobby — British royal-watching — and partly to her unusual background for a royal bride.

Leftist President Pledges End To Free Enterprise In Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Leftist law professor Rodrigo Borja, who today replaces an archconservative as Ecuador's president, has pledged renewed ties with Nicaragua and an end to the nation's free market economy.

Borja, leader of the Democratic Left Party, succeeds Leon Febres Cordero, a bitter political rival and President Reagan's closest ally in South America.

dero was barred from re-election by the constitution.

Borja, who describes himself as a leftist but not a Marxist, defeated populist candidate Abdala Bucaram in a runoff May 8.

Presidents Fidel Castro of Cuba and Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua were among foreign leaders who came to Ecuador for today's inauguration, and Castro took a swipe at the United States in his arrival statement Tuesday.

In a brief speech at the Quito airport, he praised the good relations he said exist between his communist country and Ecuador.

"They are a proof of independence in the face of those who would like to see us not so united," Castro said in an obvious reference to the United States.

Castro rarely travels abroad, and his visit was seen as a sign of strong support for the Borja government.

Borja has criticized Ecuador's pro-American foreign policy and said he would seek close ties to the non-aligned movement.

Nevertheless, U.S. officials say they expect to be able to work with Borja and note that friends and foes consider him a highly intelligent and honest political leader.

"Borja may prove to be a problem for the U.S. at times, but he is no threat to democracy in Ecuador," said one U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz was to represent the United States at the inauguration.

This Colorado-size nation of 10 million on the northwestern shoulder of South America returned to democracy in 1979 after nine years of civilian and military dictatorships.

Borja said one of his first official acts after being sworn in would be to renew diplomatic relations with Nicaragua, where the leftist government has been fighting U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

Ties were broken in October 1985 after Febres Cordero accused Ortega of insulting him by calling him a pawn of U.S. foreign policy.

Borja, 53, is a long-time political foe of Febres Cordero, 57, and lost a bitterly fought runoff to him in 1984.

He vowed to dismantle Febres Cordero's free-market economic program, which he blames for the country's bleak economic situation.

The economy shrank by 3.5 percent in 1987. Annual inflation is running at nearly 60 percent, and less than half the work force is employed full-time.

No payments have been made since January on Ecuador's $9.2 billion foreign debt. The nation is now more than a billion dollars in arrears.

Heart-Shaped Rug Lends Cozy Country Look

CROCHETED RUG — This heart-shaped rug can be used at hearthside, in the kitchen, bathroom or bedroom.

Bring a touch of romance into your home with this heart-shaped crocheted rug. At hearthside, in your kitchen, bathroom or bedroom, its braided look and pretty shape will lend a cozy feel to any decor. Four strands of worsted-weight acrylic yarn are used with a large crochet hook, so it works up quickly and easily. It's easy to keep clean, too, since it's machine washable and dryable.

To obtain directions for making the Crocheted Heart Rug, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-080788 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-080788 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and yarn in your choice of earth tones or blue tones.

Pat's Pointers Pat Trexler

Dear Pat: I am enclosing a copy of a star stitch afghan pattern that is driving me crazy. After working a few rows, the rows get lopsided. Some of my friends are having the same problem and we hope you can help us.—Ellie W., Cheektowaga, N.Y.

Dear Ellie: This lovely pattern stitch can cause problems when first tried, with this and many other pattern stitches, I think it is wise to work on a small sample swatch—which you also need for your gauge—until you are comfortable with it and are sure that you are keeping the number of pattern repeats consistent.

To start your practice piece, work 15 chains, which will result in 6 star stitches per row. (It can be worked on any uneven number of chains.) When you are to "draw up a loop," do this simply by inserting the hook into the specified chain, stitch or space and pulling through a loop of yarn.

For the first row, draw up a loop in the 2nd chain from the hook and in each of the next 3 chains (5 loops on hook); yarnover and pull yarn through the 5 loops; chain 1 for "eye" (first star stitch made). For the second star stitch, Step 1: Draw up a loop in the eye just made. Step 2: Draw up a loop in the last chain used for previous star stitch. Step 3: Draw up a loop in each of the next 2 chains. Step 4: Yarnover and pull yarn through the 5 loops. Step 5: Chain 1 for eye. Repeat Steps 1 through 5 across the length of the chain, then chain 2 and turn. You will have 6 star stitches.

Row 2: Make one half-double crochet in the first "eye" then work 2 half-double crochets in each remaining "eye" across row, ending with one half-double crochet in turning chain. If you have worked correctly so far, you will have 12 half-double crochets plus the turning chain. Chain 3 and turn.

Row 3: Draw up a loop in the 2nd and 3rd stitches of the chain-3 just made; skip the half-double crochet below the chain and draw up a loop in each of the next 2 half-double crochets; yarnover and pull yarn through the 5 loops, chain 1 for eye. Step 1: Draw up a loop in the eye just made. Step 2: Draw up a loop in the last half-double crochet used in previous star stitch. Step 3: Draw up a loop in each of the next 2 half-double crochets. Step 4: Yarnover and pull yarn through the 5 loops. Step 5: Chain 1 for eye. Repeat Steps 1 through 5 across row. On your last repeat of Step 3, you will be working the final half-double crochet in top of the turning chain. Complete this final star stitch as in all others. Chain 2 and turn.

Repeat Rows 2 and 3 for the pattern stitch.

Wife Alarmed Over Military Pen Pals

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is stationed in Korea and he wrote to tell me that the GIs there are having a ball with all the Operation Dear Abby mail. He says it's great for their morale. The guys go nuts when the mail comes in and a lot of them spend hours writing letters. He says all of a sudden, the most popular book in the barracks is the dictionary!

I would like to know if they give the mail only to men who don't get any mail at all, or do all the GIs — including the married ones — get a crack at the mail? My husband doesn't need to get mail from a strange woman — he gets enough mail from me.

Have you ever thought that maybe a married GI could get one of those letters and become pen pals with a single chick? You could bust up a marriage, Abby, letting young girls send pictures of themselves in bathing suits to some of those lonesome guys over there. The girls who write just assume only single men will write back.

Think about it, Abby. How are we wives at home going to protect ourselves from stuff like that? — CONCERNED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR CONCERNED: If any marriages have gone on the rocks because a married GI went ape over a picture of a girl in a bathing suit, I am not aware of it. I would hope that a married man would not pursue a romantic-type correspondence with a single woman, just as I would hope that no stateside married woman would encourage a romantic pen pal relationship with a single serviceman who's far from home and lonely.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of the millions of Californians who buy lottery tickets. If and when I win, I do not want anyone except my husband and the IRS to know about it. Could the lottery association keep this information confidential if I requested it?

The lives of lottery winners change the minute the word gets out that they have won. They are besieged by con artists, promoters and people trying to sell them something. Even their friends and relatives treat them differently.

I know it's possible for people to give money to charity anonymously, so if you can be an anonymous donor, why can't you be an anonymous receiver?

Please let me know at once. I should be so lucky as to find myself in a position to use your advice. — LA JOLLA GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: According to Bob Taylor, public affairs director for the California State Lottery, it is absolutely mandatory to announce the names of the winners. (If they were to say, "We have a winner, but we can't disclose the name," the uproar would be heard in New Jersey!) However, their addresses and telephone numbers may be withheld at the request of the winners.

DEAR ABBY: I like to read my horoscope, but do not feel compelled by the suggestions. However, I am finding that the majority of my horoscopes all say the same thing: "Be careful while driving today!" "Take extra care when you are on the highway!" "Don't take any risks while in motion!"

Abby, is it true that all Pisces are incredible klutzes, and, therefore, accident-prone? Can you shed any light on this? Or is it possible that the astrologer who writes for my newspaper is just down on all Pisces? — OFFENDED PISCES

DEAR OFFENDED: An astrologer can't go wrong advising anyone who drives to drive with great care today. The same can be said of an Aries, Cancer, Gemini, Sagittarius, Aquarius, etc.

Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Volunteer Work Keeps Doctor Busy

By LESLIE LLOYD
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dr. Yolanda Mapp recently won in competition at a judo clinic at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., and now she wants to earn her third degree black belt.

In 1974, she built an award-winning model airplane with a six-foot wingspan out of balsa wood. Now, she wants to build a radio controlled plane.

Mapp went on a bicycle trip through Vermont in 1986, the same year she rode in the American Cancer Society's Bike-A-Thon. She wants to ride again this year.

She collects yo-yos, plays the violin, trombone, glockenspiel and recorder and does volunteer work for the American Cancer Society. All that in addition to her job as acting director of Health Services at Temple University.

"You don't do everything at the same time," said Mapp, 57, in a telephone interview. "I believe you have to live each day at a time. When death catches up with me, I'll stop living."

In 1974, she was diagnosed as having cancer and was told she had six months to live.

"It's amazing I survived," she said of the cancer. She underwent a mastectomy followed by radiotherapy and chemotherapy. "I wasn't going to let the cancer interfere with my life."

She competed in the U.S. Judo National Championship while undergoing chemotherapy.

Now, the mother of six children, ranging in age from 17 to 32, does volunteer work for the American Cancer Society.

"One of Dr. Mapp's major interests is public education," said Charles P. O'Brien, chairman of the board of Philadelphia Division of ACS, in a news release. "She's a former chairman of the ACS's public education committee. She often speaks about cancer and its prevention at schools, churches, synagogues and meetings of community groups."

In March, she represented Philadelphia at the ACS's "Celebration of Life" program in Washington honoring cancer survivors.

Recently, she returned from the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., where she attended a judo clinic and won first place in self-defense judo. She took up the hobby in 1963 after a fellow physician was attacked while answering a call.

"I started out for self defense and just liked it," she said. Now, she's working on her third degree black belt.

Mapp was raised in Red Bank, N.J. Her mother said she didn't have enough money for college, so Mapp worked her way through school. She started out at nearby Monmouth College, then a junior college, and graduated with an associate of arts degree. From there, she went to Douglas Women's College at Rutgers University where she got her bachelor of science degree.

She went to medical school at Howard University. After graduating in 1957, she did her internship and residency in Washington. When she applied for a job at the now-closed Philadelphia General Hospital, she was asked for an interview after officials reviewed her transcripts.

But during the interview she was told she could not work at the hospital because she was not a state resident. When she applied for a job at the Navy Yard, she was told they didn't hire women.

"I never knew why I was having difficulties," she said, explaining that she was discriminated against both for being a black and a woman.

"You use what you have in life," she said. "You don't complain because you don't have this, that or the other. Just think about what you have and use it to your best advantage."

She has traveled to Central America, Europe, the Caribbean and Japan, but wants to visit Africa.

In the meantime, she can add to her collection of yo-yos, which she started in medical school after a professor called her "Yo-Yo Jones." Her maiden name is Jones.

Mapp said she lets children play with the yo-yos when they visit her Cherry Hills, N.J., home, but admits that she enjoys them as well.

'Latchkey Kids' Use Appliances

Dick and Jane are home from school. Mom and Dad are still at work. So, Dick pops a couple bowls of soup into the microwave oven while Jane starts a load of laundry to make sure her cheerleading outfit is ready for tonight's game. After eating, the pair loads and starts the dishwasher.

Dick and Jane are "latchkey children," largely responsible for their own care between their return home from school and the return of their care-givers from work.

And Dick and Jane's scenario is repeated daily in millions of American homes, according to the recently released national research study, "The Whirlpool report on Children's Use of Appliances."

The report is based on more than 380 interviews with families having at least one child age 14 or younger. The study sought to determine the types of appliances children operate regularly, how they learned to use those appliances, the types of chores children perform and parents' concerns about having their children operate major appliances.

The survey reveals that in 71 percent of homes, children help out with at least one chore daily, most commonly house cleaning (60 percent) or washing dishes (46 percent). It further indicates that children age 14 or younger routinely use at least one major home appliance, (56 percent) often without any adult supervision. The millions of so-called "latchkey children" who care for themselves after school are significantly more likely to operate clothes dryers, gas or electric ranges and microwave ovens than children of non-latchkey families.

"The survey confirms the common belief that children of all ages assume responsibilities for household care and self-care," says Joy Schrage, general manager, Whirlpool appliance information service.

These are some of the report's other major findings:

Homemaker's Haven

Evelyn Spangler

-Microwave ovens are the home appliance most frequently used by children (28 percent).

-The refrigerator/freezer is the second most-used appliance (16 percent), while trash compactors (2 percent) and gas or electric ovens (6 percent) are the least used by children.

-In non-latchkey families, the children do housecleaning, compared to 31 percent of non-latchkey families.

-In 73 percent of latchkey families, the children do housecleaning, compared to 31 percent of non-latchkey families.

-Most children learn to use appliances from an adult (74 percent).

-Many parents (40 percent) do not have concerns about their children using appliances. Those who do worry most about fire (24 percent).

-Electric shock is the second biggest concern for non-latchkey parents (17 percent), while burns and cuts are the second biggest worry for latchkey parents (20 percent).

"If children are helping with kitchen and laundry chores, it's important that parents take the time to show them how to use appliances safely," advises Schrage.

Birth

Daughtridge
Born to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray Daughtridge, Grimesland, a son, Steven Ray, on July 16, 1988, in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Bed-Wetting Breakthrough
Worried about when your child will stop bed-wetting? We believe bedwetters are deep sleepers and find the following remedies usually do not work: restricting fluids, using drugs, offering rewards, getting them up or using punishment. Bedwetting causes loss of self esteem and embarrassment about spending the night with friends for fear of wetting the bed. Nightly, 10-15 million children and adults suffer from enuresis (bed-wetting). 2% of all bed-wetters have a physical disorder. So, if you have not already done so, consult your doctor. It is hereditary, psychologically damaging, and can be treated after age four. Most often parents are told, "Don't worry, your child will outgrow it." Now this problem can be cured in a few weeks, so don't delay help for many harmful years. Bedwetting is costly to maintain. Wet-NO-More® can save families $3-$10 a week on diapers, soap, and hot water for laundry and baths. Wet-NO-More® is FDA registered and your family's success is money-back guaranteed.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today, extending Tuesday's drop amid continuing interest-rate worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 8.54 to 2,070.59 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 4 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 191 up, 751 down and 478 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 20.45 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Federal Reserve's move Tuesday to raise its discount rate from 6 percent to 6.5 percent remained the dominant topic on Wall Street.

Farmers Group climbed 6 1/2 to 64 1/4 as the most active issue in the over-the-counter market. The company, which had rejected a $63-a-share takeover bid by B.A.T. Industries of Britain, said it would consider a sweetened offer of $72 a share.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .54 to 150.12. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.32 at 299.80.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 28.27 to 2,079.13.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 2 on the NYSE, with 348 up, 1,206 down and 418 unchanged. Big Board volume came to 20.71 million shares, against 148.80 million in the previous session.

Chavez Fast Enters 25th Day

DELANO, Calif. (AP) — The hunger strike by a bedridden Cesar Chavez headed into its 25th day today, as it matched the length of his fast 20 years ago to gain recognition of the United Farm Workers.

The 61-year-old union leader has given no indication that he plans to stop his water-only fast for union contracts and a boycott of California table grapes because of five pesticides used on them.

Chavez's levels of uric acid remain constant but high, threatening to cause kidney failure, and his blood pressure is rising, union spokeswoman Lorena Parlee said Tuesday, quoting Dr. Fidel Huerta.

The union said Chavez has lost at least 20 pounds during the fast, an effort to gain support for a 4-year-old boycott of California grapes that has been virtually ignored by the public.

On Monday, a caravan of Hollywood film and television stars trekked to this community 200 miles north of Los Angeles to give the boycott a publicity boost. They visited the labor leader, six at a time, at his bedside and then issued a strong public plea to support the table grape boycott.

Among the celebrities were actors Martin Sheen, Eddie Albert and Robert Blake and comedian and political activist Dick Gregory.

But their pleas have had "absolute no effect on sales whatsoever," said Bruce Obink, president of the California Table Grape Commission. State officials and growers deny that table grapes contain dangerous pesticide residues, as the union contends.

Chavez' United Farm Workers union has no contracts among California table grape growers and the union has lost 30,000 dues-paying members during the last decade.

In 1968, Chavez fasted for 25 days to gain recognition of the union and to make a plea for nonviolence during bitter union fights.

Shuttle Roars Alive

aborted a fraction of a second before ignition when an electronic sensor erroneously reported a valve was not closing properly.

Engineers replaced the valve containing the sensor and made a computer change to lessen the possibility that a bad signal could force another shutdown.

Earlier delays were caused by problems with ground support equipment.

Still facing the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is a small gas leak in a steering engine system separate from Discovery's three main engines. Shuttle managers are expected to give a go-ahead within a few days to a plan for engineers to cut through the rear wall of the shuttle's cargo bay to reach and repair a nitrogen tetroxide leak in a vent valve seal.

The shuttle program also must pass another key propulsion test before Discovery can be certified for flight: a full-scale two-minute firing, the fifth in a series, of the redesigned solid fuel booster rocket. That is scheduled Aug. 18 at the Morton Thiokol plant in Utah.

A faulty booster rocket joint was blamed for the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion that destroyed Challenger and killed its crew of seven.

Checked today were modifications to turbopumps, valve actuators, electronic controllers and other engine systems. Also being tested were ground support equipment, communications links, new countdown procedures and personnel.

Five veteran shuttle fliers have been assigned to the Discovery mission. During the four-day flight they are to deploy a communications satellite, conduct experiments and evaluate new spaceship systems.

Gretzky Traded To Kings In Stunning Oilers' Move

By Scott Howard-Cooper
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — In one of the biggest deals in sports history, Wayne Gretzky, widely regarded as the best player in National Hockey League history, was traded by the Edmonton Oilers to the Los Angeles Kings Tuesday.

Gretzky, 27, has been voted the league's most valuable player eight times and holds or shares 49 scoring records. He has led the Oilers to four Stanley Cup titles in the last five years.

The superstar center iceman and two teammates, forward Mike Krushelnyski and defenseman Marty McSorley, were sent to the Kings for center Jimmy Carson, forward Martin Gelinias (the King's first-round draft pick this year) and first-round picks in 1989, 1991 and 1993. Also, according to Kings' owner Bruce McNall, "in excess of $10 million" was sent to the Canadian team.

The transaction sent shock waves across Canada, where Gretzky is considered a national treasure. His wedding to Los Angeles actress Janet Jones July 16 was billed as a royal wedding.

Tuesday, however, Jones was being blamed by some fans for taking "The Great Gretzky" from Edmonton.

Gretzky said Tuesday that his bride had not asked him to seek a trade. He told a late-afternoon press conference in Edmonton that he wanted a move "for the benefit of Wayne Gretzky, my new wife and our expected child in the new year."

Then, he was overcome with emotion.

"There comes a time when..." he said, rubbing bleary eyes in an effort to regain his composure. Unable to continue, he stood up, stepped back from the microphones and took a seat.

Oiler fans reacted swiftly to the trade. Callers jammed the 21 telephone lines at team offices, some threatening to cancel season tickets.

Reports of the trade were the top story on Edmonton radio stations.

The Kings gave away much of their future to get Gretzky, most notably Carson, a native of Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich.

Last season, at 19, he set NHL records for American-born players with 55 goals and 107 points. He was the Kings' leading goal scorer and was second in points — goals and assists combined — behind Luc Robitaille who had 111.

"The future has to arrive some day," said Cliff Fletcher, general manager of the Calgary Flames. "It arrived today in Los Angeles."

Gretzky missed 16 games with eye and knee injuries last season, but still had 40 goals and 109 assists in finishing second in league scoring to Mario Lemieux of the Pittsburgh Penguins. Gretzky then won his second Conn Smythe Trophy as most valuable player of the playoffs when the Oilers swept the Boston Bruins in the Stanley Cup final.

Gretzky holds the NHL record for most goals, 92; assists, 163, and points, 215, in a season. He is also the all-time assist leader with 1,086. Gordie Howe, the all-time scoring leader, took 26 seasons to amass 1,850 points. Gretzky is on a pace to surpass that in his 10th season.

Until recently, Gretzky, who is signed through the 1991-92 season had said he wanted to play only two or three more seasons. But prior to the marriage, he suggested he might play longer.

He was making $900,000 a year in Canadian money, but now must be paid the same amount in U.S. funds, nearly a 20+ increase. That would put him at $1.08 million.

Rest Of League Closing In On 1st Place Dodgers

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Remember how the Los Angeles Dodgers seemed to have the National League West race to themselves a couple of weeks ago?

Take a look at the standings now. The Houston Astros, San Francisco Giants and Cincinnati Reds like what they see. The Dodgers just shudder and hope to find some runs.

Houston moved within a half-game of the first-place Dodgers Tuesday night by edging San Francisco 3-2. The Giants stayed 3½ games behind Los Angeles, which was blanked 6-0 by Danny Jackson of the Reds. Cincinnati is six games out.

On July 26, the Dodgers led Houston by seven games, San Francisco by eight with Cincinnati by 11.

In the East, it was Chicago 6, New York 4 in the Cubs' first official home night game ever; Pittsburgh 10, Montreal 8; and St. Louis 7, Philadelphia 3. The Mets lead the Pirates by five games and Montreal by 6½.

San Diego beat Atlanta 5-1 in the other West game.

Reds 6, Dodgers 0

Jackson, the NL leader with nine complete games in 24 starts, including four shutouts, is 15-5. His best season was 1985, when he was 14-12 for Kansas City. The Royals traded him to the Reds last November for Kurt Stillwell.

He kept the clamps on the Dodgers' bats, allowing four singles and fanning eight, including the side in the ninth. Los Angeles has been shut out in its last two games and has scored just two runs over the last 29 innings.

"When you're struggling, everything seems to go wrong for you," Jackson said. "You look over there (in the Dodgers' dugout) toward the end of the game, and they were just sitting there."

Jackson is ecstatic with the way his team has climbed back into the pennant race.

"I feel the confidence. This ballclub is playing like we knew we can play. We're playing like we should be playing," he said. "You've got to keep a perspective. It's not like the World Series or the playoffs, but it was a big game. There's bigger games down the line."

Bo Diaz had a three-run homer and Paul O'Neill a solo shot.

Astros 3, Giants 2

Glenn Davis' run-scoring single in the eighth inning was decisive as Houston won for the sixth time in its last seven games.

"We're sitting in good position after playing the Dodgers on the last road trip," Davis said. "To me that was really the key. We know we play well at home and the Dodgers play good on the road. We beat them here, too, so I like our chances."

The Astros won five of seven meetings with Los Angeles in the last two weeks.

"We can't watch the scoreboard, we can't worry about that," Astros manager Hal Lanier said. "This club is right behind us, so we have to take care of them."

Terry Puhl had three hits for Houston and Juan Agosto won his eighth game in as many decisions.

Cubs 6, Mets 4

Night baseball finally got started at Wrigley Field. The first scheduled game after dark at the 74-year-old ballpark was rained out in the fourth inning Monday night.

This time, minus all the fanfare, the game was started and completed. Chicago rallied to win with four runs in the seventh inning.

Mark Grace, Andre Dawson and Ryne Sandberg hit RBI singles in the seventh after pinch hitter Jody Davis' two-out double drove in the tie-breaking run.

Len Dykstra and Howard Johnson homered for the Mets.

Pirates 10, Expos 8

At Montreal, New York's closest pursuers met in a sloppy game. Sid Bream drove in four runs and Bobby Bonilla hit a two-run homer for Pittsburgh.

"It looked like two high school teams out there," Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said. "We beat ourselves on the mound and in the field. We gave them run after run. It was an ugly game."

Hubie Brooks led the Expos with three hits.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 3

At Philadelphia, Terry Pendleton singled twice, knocking in three runs, in a seven-run eighth inning. Phillies rookie Marvin Freeman had shut out St. Louis for seven innings, then was relieved by Steve Bedrosian, the 1987 Cy Young Award winner.

St. Louis blitzed Bedrosian and Bruce Ruffin. Ozzie Smith led off with a walk, took second on a passed ball and scored on Pendleton's first single. Tom Brunansky doubled and Willie McGee reached base and Pendleton scored when second baseman Juan Samuel booted McGee's grounder.

Ruffin relieved Bedrosian. Jose Oquendo singled, scoring Brunansky and tying the score 3-3, and pinch-hitter Tom Lawless sacrificed. Tony Pena was intentionally walked, loading the bases, and pinch hitter Tom Pagnozzi singled home McGee and Oquendo, putting the Cardinals ahead 5-3.

After Vince Coleman flied out, Smith walked for the second time in the inning. Pendleton then singled home Pena and Pagnozzi to make it 7-3.

Padres 5, Braves 1

At Atlanta, San Diego's Eric Show held the Braves to four hits and Benito Santiago hit two home runs. Ron Gant's homer provided the only run allowed by Show, 9-10, who struck out four in his second straight complete game and seventh of the season.

Back In Time

Kernersville Nips Snow Hill In 11 To Stay Alive, 12-9

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill's bid to win the American Legion state baseball championship series was put on hold in the wee hours this morning as Kernersville took a 12-9, 11-inning victory.

Kernersville recorded the final out in the rain-delayed marathon game after 1 a.m. this morning.

The win by Post 36 trimmed Post 94's lead in the best-of-seven series to 3-2. Game six will be played today at 2 p.m. in Kernersville, followed by a seventh game, if necessary, at 8 p.m.

Post 36's three-run eleventh inning was aided by a pair of Snow Hill errors. Eric Norris led off the inning by receiving a base on balls. Eric Gluzenhauser then advanced Norris to third thanks to a throwing error on third baseman Cornelius Hill. One out later, Brannon Hooven punched across both Norris and Gluzenhauser with a double off the centerfield fence.

Another error by Snow Hill allowed Derrick Redmond to score Hooven with two outs in the inning.

"We accomplished our goal," Kernersville coach Dan Ijmes said. "We wanted to win one game here and make them come back to Kernersville. Now we have it (the series) back in our hands."

"It was a game of survival of the fittest," Snow Hill coach Jim Fulghum said. "We haven't closed out but one series at home since the playoffs started. We've had to go back to the other team's field every time."

Snow Hill forced the extra innings by scoring a run in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Chris West led off the inning with a single to right and moved to second on an infield single by Anthony Jones. Following a fielder's choice sacrifice bunt by Walt McKeel which advanced the runners, Mike Vandiford knocked in the tying run with an infield grounder.

At the outset of the game, Kernersville seemed poised to make the game a blowout as it rolled to a 7-0 lead through three innings.

An RBI single by Bryan Hasting in the first inning put Post 36 up 1-0, while a grand slam homer by Cameron Brawder in the second frame made the score 5-0.

After giving up two more runs in the top of the third, Snow Hill's defense settled down and its offense came to life in the fourth inning.

George Burnette led off the Snow Hill half of the fourth with an infield single. Walks to T.J. Johnson, Tommy Eason and Chris West loaded the bases and scored the first run in the inning.

Jones then knocked Johnson in with a fielder's choice to close the gap to 7-2. McKeel capped the five-run inning with a three-run blast over the centerfield fence.

Post 94's rally continued in the fifth inning as it added three more runs to take a 8-7 lead.

Burnette led off the inning with a walk, stole second and scored on a single to right by Eason. Following walks to Beaman and West, Jones managed to push across two runs and give Snow Hill a 8-7 lead thanks to a Kernersville error.

"We dug us a hole early and made a good comeback," Fulghum said. "That's the way you have to win it, with the bats and the ball."

Kernersville grabbed the lead back in the top of the sixth with a pair of runs.

Cockrell received a base on balls to start the inning. Brawder then reached base following a Snow Hill error. After Johnny Slate was walked to load the bases, Hastings delivered a two-run single to centerfield.

"We finally got some big hits tonight," Ijmes said. "(Kevin) Cockrell (who was 4-4 on the night with an RBI and three runs scored) really held us together."

L.A. Fans Can Go Ape; Great Gretzky's Theirs

By Scott Ostler
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Having designed new uniforms for the local hockey club, owner Bruce McNall went shopping Tuesday and bought something to put in 'em — Wayne Gretzky.

For about a dozen solid reasons, the deal might be the Kings' all-time bonehead trade, a sellout of the franchise's future.

However, if this is the same Wayne Gretzky I'm thinking of, you can take those dozen reasons, wrap 'em in a bundle shaped like a large hockey puck, slap-shoot the bundle into the L.A. River and watch it drift to sea with the other debris.

We got Gretzky. Eat your hearts out, world.

So what if Gretzky will have to skate in a line with Dyan Cannon and a Forum usher? So what if they'll have to spray Wayne's uniform with Goon-Be-Gone to keep the league's thugs from treating him the way Mike Tyson treats his heavy bag? So what if Wayne might only play a couple of years, then retire?

Picky, picky, picky.

This is Wayne Gretzky, fans. The Great One. The greatest hockey player ever. Maybe the greatest athlete ever.

Excuse my hyperventilating.

After all, this might be a bad trade for the Kings.

Let's consult our panel of experts, shall we?

"It's unbelievable!" said Magic Johnson, the Wayne Gretzky of basketball. "This is a dream come true for the fans. This will put the Kings where they want to be. I'm definitely going to get season tickets. I used to go to four or five games a year, whenever Edmonton was in town. I'll really go to a lot of games now."

"He's amazing. Even if they never win a game, it will still be exciting to go now."

Wait, Magic. Gretzky won't be surrounded by great players, as he was in Edmonton.

"He's going to add the winningness that he has to the other Kings players," Johnson explained.

Pat Quinn, former King coach and now general manager and president of the Vancouver Canucks, seconded Magic.

"Wayne was the catalyst in Edmonton," Quinn said. "He can serve the same purpose down there. I think it's a tremendous deal for Los Angeles."

"It does make a big sacrifice for the future. Historically, deals like this have been made and haven't worked well (for the team receiving the superstar), but usually it's a declining veteran that's involved. Gretzky hasn't shown signs of decline. If he plays longer than three years, it's a tough deal not to make."

Kirk McCaskill, the Angels' ace pitcher and a former pro hockey player, made it unanimous.

"Gretzky in L.A.!" McCaskill said. "That's unbelievable! This is the greatest thing that could happen! The Kings need some excitement. They need to get people involved. I'll be lining up to get my season tickets.... Actually I won't, because I already get free tickets. But I'll be going to a lot of games."

Trying once again to interject reason into the discussion, I mentioned that Gretzky might not be as good a player with the Kings, with less protection and less talented teammates. McCaskill dismissed this speculation with two words:

"Gretzky's Gretzky."

In Edmonton, he's more than that. That city is outraged. Gretzky may have to sneak out of town the way the Colts left Baltimore. On Edmonton radio call-in shows, Wayne's new wife, L.A. actress Janet Jones, is being likened to Yoko Ono, the woman who supposedly broke up the Beatles.

Holmes Suspended From The ECU Team

From Staff Reports

East Carolina head football coach Art Baker announced today that junior defensive end Joe Holmes has been suspended from the team. Holmes was handed the suspension after an alleged assault charge originating near his hometown of Manteo. The 6-4 235-pound Holmes was expected to battle for a starting position in the Pirate defensive line. "Holmes' suspension maintains consistency with the policy established at East Carolina University last spring," Baker said. "Any athlete involved in an incident of this nature will be suspended indefinitely as a representative of the team. "Once the issue has been clarified, we will take action as deemed appropriate." Holmes was arrested July 17 regarding in connection with the alleged assault. His court date is set for Sept. 6. Holmes transferred to ECU from Chowan Junior College and was expected to battle Shannon Boling for the starting defensive end job this fall.

Greenville Holds Tennis Rally

Goldsboro took top honors in a United States Tennis Association-Greenville Recreation and Parks Department co-sponsored Regional Tennis Rally here Tuesday. The Rally was one of 13 held around the country and brought six teams together from the Eastern United States. The Rally is a part of the National Junior Tennis League conducted by the USTA each summer for junior boys and girls, 18 and under. The youngest participating Tuesday was nine years old. Goldsboro finished the event with 38 points while Greenville was second with 23. Chapel Hill took third place with 18 followed by Plymouth with 15, Decatur, Ala., with 10 and Birmingham, Ala., with nine.

Kyle's Departure Creates No Openings

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Kyle Petty is looking for a new ride for the 1989 Winston Cup racing season, but his father, Richard, says there won't be any openings at the family's Petty Enterprises for at least a few years. "In regard to media speculation regarding my future, I plan to continue to race at least through the 1991 racing season and there will be no change in the racing operation at Petty Enterprises until I retire," Richard Petty said in a prepared statement Tuesday. Kyle Petty told The Courier-Tribune in Asheboro that he was told last week he would be replaced as the driver of the Wood Brothers' No. 21 Ford next season. "I'll be driving somewhere," the 28-year-old Petty said in a telephone interview from his High Point home. "Hopefully I can start talking to some people now in the open and get something lined up. I'll just have to wait and see what's available. "I won't go back to Petty Enterprises until Richard Petty is ready to get out of the race car. And right now, Richard Petty is not ready to get out. He'll be there a couple of more years," Kyle Petty said. Eddie Wood, a spokesman for the Stuart, Va.-based, team, announced the split Monday. "We're going to split at the end of the year," Wood said. "That's all I want to say about it." Kyle Petty has won two races for the Wood Brothers. Kyle Petty said he had no ill feelings toward the Wood Brothers and planned to "do as good a job as I can" for the rest of the season. "They decided to make the change because they felt it was the best thing to do," he said. "Racing is a sport, but just like everything else, it's a business too. They had to do what they felt was best for their business."

SAC 8 Expanding To All Sports

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Athletic directors and college presidents from the South Atlantic Conference have approved a constitution and by-laws that would expand the conference into an all-sports league by next year. Conference officials Tuesday said the expanded SAC-8 would include a full-time commissioner's office and 11 varsity sports: football, men's and women's basketball, baseball, men's soccer, men's and women's tennis, men's golf, men's track and field, women's volleyball and women's softball. Women's soccer is expected to be added by 1990-91. The league's athletic directors gave unanimous approval to the final draft of the constitution and by-laws that would make the SAC-8 a comprehensive conference beginning with the 1989-90 school year. The football-only conference was formed in 1975. The constitution and by-laws will be sent to the full presidents' council for formal approval prior to September 15. The SAC-8 member schools are Carson-Newman of Jefferson City, Tenn.; Catawba College of Salisbury; Elon College in Elon College; Gardner-Webb of Boiling Springs; Lenoir-Rhyne of Hickory; Mars Hill in Mars Hill; Newberry College of Newberry, S.C. and Presbyterian College of Clinton, S.C.

Shinn Hopeful Of Building A Stadium

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Sports entrepreneur George Shinn says he's counting on working out a financing arrangement with the York County Council for a new minor league baseball stadium. "If York County decides they don't want to help — and I'm working under the assumption that they will — well, all I can say is something this big has to be done jointly," says the owner of the Charlotte, N.C., Knights. "Shinn, who is also owner of the new Charlotte Hornets of the NBA, says the Knights' new stadium will be built in York County, but he's not yet sure yet at which location. York County is just south of Charlotte. "Our stadium will be in York County," Shinn told The (Rock Hill) Herald Monday night. "There's no question about that. We'll be playing baseball in South Carolina." Shinn, who said he could not reveal the exact site nor the financing arrangements of the proposed $12 million stadium, said he's not yet ready to count out PTL's Heritage USA Christian retreat as the location for professional sports. "Although PTL trustee M.C. Benton has given his tentative approval to a Canadian company's $113 million offer for Heritage USA, Shinn believes he's still in the running for the 2,200-acre retreat. "I'm not going to write off anything until I make a definite decision on what I'm going to do," he said, adding that a decision could come as early as Thursday. In addition to Heritage USA, Shinn is known to be considering at least two other York County sites: one off Gold Hill Road near exit 88 on Interstate 77, and the other on I-77 between Gold Hill and Coltharp roads, The Herald said. Shinn said the stadium will seat 15,000 people, but could be expanded to seat 65,000 for professional football and for 40,000 to 45,000 for major-league baseball. The expansion would depend on Charlotte being awarded a franchise for a major league football or baseball team.

Norman Calls Injury A Blessing

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Greg Norman says the wrist injury that forced him into two months of inactivity, may have been "a blessing in disguise." "I think it's done me a world of good," Norman said Tuesday. "Not only has the injury healed, it's also refueled the desire inside of me. "I'm rested and ready to go," golf's Great White Shark said after a practice round for the 70th PGA National Championship. The tournament, the last of the year's Big Four events, gets under way Thursday at the Oak Tree Golf Club with 150 pros chasing a total purse of $1 million. Norman, a former British Open champion and the dominant player in world golf in 1986, has been away from competition since he suffered torn ligaments in his wrist during the U.S. Open.

Be Glad It Wasn't Bulldozed

By Scott Ostler
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Relax, baseball fans. I know Monday night was traumatic. Two baseball teams played a night game at Wrigley Field. Under lights. You're still in shock. You are saddened and disillusioned at baseball's brazen sellout, angry that the game would abandon one of its hallowed traditions for the sake of money. You feel your shrine has been desecrated. Buck up, fans. They just lit up the place. They didn't carpet it or remodel it. Best of all, they didn't bulldoze it.

Let me tell you a little story about Wrigley Field, a different Wrigley Field. Once upon a time there was a Wrigley Field in Los Angeles. It was a charming ballpark with ivy-covered walls. It was the home of a minor league team known as the Los Angeles Angels. The Angels were a Chicago Cubs farm team, so the ballpark here was designed to resemble — and was named after — Chicago's Wrigley Field. The West Coast Wrigley Field, built in 1925, featured an elegant clock tower as tall as a 12-story building, double-decked seating along both foul lines, and, in later years, ivy-covered walls. There were homes behind the walls in left and center fields. When a player hit a home run, he hit a real home run. The ball would sail over the ivy and into somebody's back yard. If you sat in the upper deck, you would often see whoever lived in the house come out his or her back door to collect the souvenir. For all I know, these people lived in constant terror of being skulled by a baseball while gardening or watching Milton Berle on television. For all I know, they all hated baseball, and had cellars full of baseballs that they didn't know what the heck to do with. But as a kid watching games at Wrigley, I couldn't even comprehend the colossal good fortune of living in a house where home runs landed in your back yard. By the way, that Wrigley Field had lights. Now, with all this Cubs' stuff in the news these days, people are getting downright weepy about the death of day baseball. It will be OK, I assure you. Even with lights, Wrigley Field ain't the Astrodome. It's Wrigley Field with lights.

I went to my first real ballgame at Los Angeles' Wrigley Field, at age 8 or 9. It was a night game. Under the lights, the field and ballpark were beautiful. I couldn't have been more awe-struck by the spectacle if they had wheeled out Ben Hur chariots and raced to the death. I went to more night games at Wrigley, and to many day games. In my memory, you didn't lose much at night, aesthetically. In fact, the place had even more charm under the lights. The grass was greener at night, the chalk lines and the uniforms were whiter, the players faster. The neighbors who came out to harvest home run balls might turn on the back-porch light and pad into the dew wearing robes and slippers. The Dodgers started playing in this town in '58 and the Angels — and cross-town rival Hollywood Stars — had to leave. Wrigley Field was used by the major league Angels in their first season of existence, 1961, but the park was too small — 26,000 capacity — for a big league team. So, Wrigley was torn down, blasted and bulldozed into dust, hauled away in dump trucks. I assume the home run houses went, too. I guess it just wasn't practical to save Wrigley Field for youth baseball, concerts, prizefights, football games, things like that. The empty lot was turned into low-income housing. So, there are worse fates that can befall a ballpark, fans. I didn't like the idea of installing lights at Chicago's Wrigley Field. But I also thought it was a lousy idea to stop putting running boards and rumble seats on cars. I sympathize with your sorrow. But I can't hop on your handwagon of outrage, fans. I can't join the mourning. Not yet. Call me when the bullies of baseball and local politics gang up and try to install AstroTurf or AstroVly. Call me when someone decides it's unsafe for home runs to sail out onto Waveland Avenue and they try to put up a plexiglass shield. Call me when they start discussing a dome to keep out the Lake Michigan wind. Call me when they try to neonize the old scoreboard, or add three more decks to the stadium and increase seating capacity to 140,000. Call me when you hear the distant rumble of bulldozers. Call me when they try to pave paradise, put up a parking lot. Until then, fans, sit back and enjoy your ballpark.

Impact Goes Beyond Money

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The economic impact of the Carolinas Invitational, a five-sport Olympics tune-up that opens Friday, goes way beyond the millions of dollars that will be spent at hotels, restaurants and shops, city tourism officials say. "The most valuable thing to us is the national exposure for Charlotte," said Doug Stafford of the Charlotte Convention & Visitors Bureau. "You can't put a dollar figure on that." Stafford was referring to the almost 16 hours of live coverage of the basketball, baseball, boxing, gymnastics and cycling by NBC and the USA Network. "We're tremendously excited about what this kind of exposure can do for our area," said Pete Marco, director of the event. The tourism bureau has estimated that out-of-town visitors will pump about $8.7 million into the area's economy during the three-day sports festival. Basketball and gymnastics will be the first sports events ever held in Charlotte's new 25,000-seat, $52 million coliseum. The Invitational will include more than 300 athletes, including boxers from Canada and baseball players and basketball players from Cuba. Organizers expect between 140,000 and 150,000 spectators and 100 media representatives during the Invitational's three-day run. That compares with the nearly 450,000 spectators who attended the 14-day U.S. Olympic Festival in five North Carolina cities last year. Charlotte was not one of those cities. The men's basketball team, which is favored to win the gold medal in the Summer Games in Seoul, South Korea, will include such players as J.R. Reid from the University of North Carolina and Navy's David Robinson. They will play two games against an NBA all-star team that will include Michael Jordan, Charles Barkley and Sam Perkins. The women's basketball team coached by N.C. State University's Kay Yow also will play two games in Charlotte against Cuba. Yow's squad, led by Cheryl Miller and Anne Donovan, also is touted to bring home the gold in the Olympics. As expected, tickets to the basketball games have been selling the fastest. About 17,000 tickets have been sold for Sunday's games and close to 14,000 for Friday's games, Marco said. About 14,000 tickets for the gymnastics exhibition have been sold. The new coliseum can hold about 23,500 fans for basketball — roughly twice as many as the old coliseum. If those events had been held in the old coliseum, he said, they all would be sellouts. "These new numbers (of seats) are something we're going to have to get used to," Marco said. "We think we're doing very well."

Marco did admit he was disappointed with the advance sales for the boxing, which will be held at the old coliseum. As of Tuesday, about 3,500 tickets had been sold. "Boxing might be more of a walk-up crowd," he said. For his part, Stafford said events like the Carolinas Invitational often don't sell out until the last week. "The usual pattern is a lot of ticket sales early on, then a dead period, then a big rush just before it opens," he said. Tickets are priced from $5 to $25.50 for four sports. Cycling — which will be held on a 1-mile course in downtown Charlotte — is free. The U.S. Olympic baseball team will play two games against Cuba at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

For Los Angeles, this is almost embarrassing. We keep stealing superstars. The Lakers stole Wilt Chamberlain, then Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, then Magic. Result: Several National Basketball Association championships. The Raiders needed help, so they stole Marcus Allen from the rest of the league, and he led the team to a Super Bowl championship. They needed help again, so they stole Bo Jackson from the Kansas City Royals and he turned the team around, sort of. The Rams stole Eric Dickerson from the World Football League, and he turned the franchise around before being chased out of town. Los Angeles stole entire championship franchises from Brooklyn and Minneapolis and Oakland. It's almost as if all we have to do is whistle and wave our Hollywood sign, and the great ones, including the Great One, come running. Hey, can we help it if we're a lovable city? "It's so funny," Magic Johnson said, "I talked to Wayne four or five years ago and he was saying how he always wanted to be here. Hey, he belongs here. He's the greatest. Wayne Gretzky belongs in L.A." That kind of civic smugness won't endear our city to the rest of the world. But what the heck, it's true. Edmonton probably thinks Gretzky won't be appreciated in a city where hockey players rank below rhythmic gymnasts on the celebrity scale. All that changed Tuesday. I pity the poor maitre d' who has one table open when both Magic Johnson and Wayne

Gretzky are standing at the front door. Like Magic, Gretzky is dripping with charm and class. He is warm and accommodating to the fans and reporters. He donates great amounts of time and money to charity. He would go off at no worse than even money in a wardrobe showdown with Pat Riley. Teachers Reinforce your textbook lessons using the newspaper. # Witt Hurls Rangers By Tigers

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer
Bobby Witt is paying more attention to the hitters. The hitters wish he would leave them alone.

Witt pitched his sixth straight complete game since being recalled from the minor leagues as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 6-2 Tuesday night. He held the first-place Tigers to just three hits.

"He's worrying about the hitter, not the baserunners," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "That's one of the things we've been preaching to him about."

Witt, 4-7, began the season with the Rangers, but quickly pitched his way to Oklahoma City. In his first six starts, Witt was 0-5 with a 7.68 earned run average.

"I went to Oklahoma City with the right attitude," said Witt, who was optioned May 10. "A lot of people, when they get sent down they dog it. But I wanted to get back as soon as possible and I knew I had to put in the work to get that done."

In other American League games, Boston and Milwaukee split a doubleheader, with the Brewers winning the first game 3-2 and the Red Sox taking the nightcap 5-1. Elsewhere, it was Toronto 6, New York 3; Minnesota 4, Cleveland 3; Kansas City 5, Baltimore 4; Seattle 4, California 1, and Oakland 8, Chicago 1.

Witt worked with Oklahoma City pitching instructor Ferguson Jenkins on his motion and approach to the game.

"Before, I'd go into the dugout between innings, cursing about some mistake I'd made," Witt said. "I'd dwell on what happened before, not on what I needed to do the next inning."

After Pat Sheridan's RBI double in the first, Witt set down the next 13 batters. He walked four and struck out four and is 4-2 with a 2.08 ERA since being recalled.

"Witt was just outstanding," Tigers manager Sparky Anderson said. "He deserved to win the way he pitched."

Brewers 3, Red Sox 2
Red Sox 5, Brewers 1
Milwaukee's Joey Meyer homered on Roger Clemens' first pitch in the bottom of the ninth inning in the first game, but Boston earned a split in the second behind the seven-hit pitching of Mike Boddicker and Bob Stanley.

Meyer's seventh homer snapped Clemens' seven-game winning streak against the Brewers. Clemens, 15-7, struck out six to increase his major-league total to 241.

Chuck Crim, 5-5, relieved Juan Nieves in the top of the sixth and got the final two outs. Nieves allowed only six hits, walked none and struck out five in his first start since coming off the disabled list July 29.

In the second game, Boddicker, 8-13, won for the second time in three starts for Boston. Stanley retired 11 of the 13 batters he faced to earn his fourth save.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 3
Sal Butera's two-run triple keyed a five-run sixth inning and reliever Duane Ward pitched four shutout innings as New York fell to third place in the East.

Toronto rallied against John Candelaria, 12-7.

Twins 4, Indians 3
Gary Gaetti hit a two-run homer and Kent Hrbek broke a sixth-inning tie with an RBI single as Minnesota sent Cleveland's Greg Swindell to his 10th loss in 12 decisions.

Fred Toliver, 4-1, allowed nine hits and struck out six in six innings. Jeff Reardon, the third Minnesota pitcher, pitched the ninth for his 30th save and 223rd of his career, moving past Sparky Lyle for fifth place on the all-time list.

Cleveland's Willie Upshaw had tied the game in the top of the sixth with his 10th homer, a three-run shot.

Gaetti's homer, his 26th, gave Minnesota a 2-0 lead in the first inning against Swindell, 12-11.

Royals 5, Orioles 4
Pat Tabler's three-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning raised his lifetime batting average to .571 with the bases loaded as Kansas City beat Baltimore for the 10th straight time this season.

Tabler is 35-for-62 lifetime with the bases loaded and has 84 RBI. This season, Tabler is 3-for-3 with a walk and nine RBI. His game-winning hit came off Tom Niedenfuer, 1-2.

The Royals have not lost to Baltimore since July 25 of last season.

Israel Sanchez, 1-1, relieved Luis Aquino, making his first major-league start, and allowed three hits in five innings.

Mariners 4, Angels 1
Alvin Davis became Seattle's all-time home run leader with a two-run shot in the fourth inning and Mike Moore won for the first time since June 24.

The Mariners have won three straight games, matching their high for the season.

Athletics 8, White Sox 1
Dave Stewart kept up with Bobby Witt, pitching a five-hitter for his sixth straight complete game as Oakland hit three home runs to win for the ninth time in 11 games.

Stewart, 15-10, struck out nine and walked one.

Glenn Hubbard hit his third homer in as many days. Dave Henderson hit his 17th homer, tying his career high for a season.

Bethea Ineligible For Grid Campaign

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina wide receiver Ryan Bethea will be declared ineligible for accepting plane fare from a lawyer, a newspaper reports today.

Bethea told The (Columbia) State that he was told of his ineligibility by school officials. However, school officials declined to comment about Bethea.

On Tuesday, the school said another wide receiver, David Pitchko, also is out for the season.

The redshirt freshman, who had been expected to replace All-American Sterling Sharpe in the lineup, underwent major knee surgery Tuesday after tearing ligaments in a summer workout.

"He's definitely out for the year," head trainer Terry Lewis said of Pitchko.

Bethea said he told South Carolina coaches about his dealing with the lawyer. He also talked to a sports agent on the trip.

"I couldn't jeopardize the rest of the team," Bethea said. "I didn't want to cause any problems. It happened when I was suspended from the team and it looked like I wouldn't play college football again."

South Carolina would have the option of appealing the ineligibility to the NCAA.

Bethea was suspended from the team after he was charged with simple possession of marijuana and possession with intent to distribute cocaine. His car also was seized. Those charges were later dismissed by Solicitor James Anders, who cited irregularities with the police investigation.

Bethea said the problem began when he flew to a meeting with a lawyer who specializes in recovering seized cars. The lawyer paid for the flight, which is a violation of NCAA rules.

Great Shake Felt In Southern California

By The Associated Press
No Richter scale recorded it, but there was a major earthquake in Canada, and the shockwaves were felt all the way to Southern California.

Call it the Great Shake.
The Great One, Wayne Gretzky, was traded Tuesday from the Edmonton Oilers to the Los Angeles Kings. In perhaps the biggest transaction in sports history, hockey's greatest player and Canada's leading personality announced he was moving to Los Angeles. He said he asked to be traded, in large part because he wanted to live and work in the same city as his wife of three weeks, actress Janet Jones.

Canadians, particularly those who live in Edmonton, were appalled that Gretzky would no longer be theirs. A lot of them expressed anger at the loss.

"We've had literally hundreds of calls from people upset," said Rod Phillips, the Oilers' play-by-play announcer on CFRN radio. "Everyone we talked to said, 'That's it, I'm never going to see another Oilers game.'"

CITV, an independent TV station that airs some Oilers games, got calls from as far away as Germany and Austria.

"The switchboard usually screens most of those calls, but people were getting through anyway," sportscaster Dan Palsson said. Several callers assigned blame to Gretzky's wife and to Oilers owner Peter Pocklington.

Pocklington came in for more barbs from those contacting the Edmonton Sun.

Edmonton mayor Laurence Decore said it was "like taking all the bridges away and saying, 'Edmonton, this is what you're going to look like.'" He called Gretzky the city's greatest ambassador.

Another Edmonton radio station, CHQT, said it received some sympathetic calls.

"It's been sort of a mixed bag," sportscaster Scott Johnston said. "We've got the ones that are just outraged and others saying if he wants to move with his wife, that's fine, because he's done a lot for the community."

Bryan Hall, sports director at CJCA, said only about a half-dozen callers were irate and dozens of others were understanding.

"Most seem to be accepting it," Hall said. "When a young lady comes into a guy's life, that's the way things go."

Given that hockey is the only game and Gretzky the only player in Canada, reaction south of the border was understandably more restrained. But there was certainly happiness in Los Angeles, where hockey has fared no better than an ice cube on a warm day.

Canadians must have scratched their heads when they heard some Angelinos actually complain about losing 20-year-old Jimmy Carson to Edmonton in exchange for a fellow who is only 27 and has for years been acclaimed as perhaps the greatest player ever to lace on skates.

"People thought the team was committed to a youth movement," said Jay Christensen, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner's night sports editor. "They feel Carson at 19 is quite a talent and he would have been around longer than a Gretzky."

For his part, Carson, who turned 20 four days after Gretzky's celebrated hit July 16 wedding, wants no part in a comparison contest.

"Going to Edmonton is a great break for me, playing with many great players. I hope I can help them win another Stanley Cup," he said. "But by no means will I ever replace the Great One."

"I understand that people are saying they're going to boycott the games. And I guess they want their season-ticket money back, too. I don't know what to expect when I go there. I guess I've just got to brace myself for the worst. But what they have to realize is that Gretzky asked for the trade. I didn't."

Elliott Porter, a longtime fan, recalled that the "only joy in watching the Kings was, if you appreciate good hockey, going to see other teams, like the Oilers, come in to play them."

"It really makes me happy that the Kings got Gretzky. I didn't think it was possible. It shows that the owner (Bruce McNall) is serious about bringing a winner to Los Angeles and I think that's great."

"Where do I get my tickets?" Kings spokesman Ron Muniz said a lot of people were asking that question on Tuesday.

"As for exact numbers, I couldn't tell you, but there have been a few hundred," he said.

Hockey people were enthusiastic about the impact Gretzky likely would have on the second-largest market in the country.

"There's no question L.A. will be a better hockey team with the world's greatest hockey player, but whether he'll make them the contender everyone hopes he will remains to be seen," said Pat Quinn, general manager and president of the Vancouver Canucks, who share the Smythe Division with Los Angeles, Edmonton, the Calgary Flames and the Winnipeg Jets, said.

Quinn, a former Kings head coach, called the swap "good for hockey, especially for the Los Angeles market where there will be increased interest because of the star syndrome that exists in that city. As far as the loss for the Edmonton fans and Canada, it's a tough deal and I would be very disappointed if I were an Edmonton fan."

John Ferguson, general manager of the Jets, said: "Well, there's one way of looking at it — it just brought the Edmonton Oilers one step closer to the Winnipeg Jets. But with Gretzky going to Los Angeles, that's a major, major trade in the world of hockey. I think it's good for the television market, certainly in the United States."

Said Cliff Fletcher, general manager of the Flames: "It's going to have an unbelievable impact. That franchise has struggled for 21 years. With Wayne Gretzky going there, it brings instant credibility, respect and notoriety."

Kings goaltender Rolie Melanson "pinched myself a few times to see if I was dreaming" when he heard the news. "I just find it incredible. I'm almost speechless to find him playing on the same team. I think it's just great for hockey."

Detroit Red Wings general manager Jimmy Devellano tipped his hat to Oilers GM Glen Sather.

"He's trading a 27-year-old star, but he's securing the next 12 years for his club," Devellano said. "It was very, very smart. His payroll now will be in line and he'll have a great, competitive team for the next 12 years..."

Full value or not from a hockey point of view, a member of the Canadian Parliament saw it as an incalculable loss.

"The Edmonton Oilers without Wayne Gretzky is like apple pie without ice cream, like winter without snow, like the 'Wheel of Fortune' without Vanna White — it's quite simply unthinkable," said Nelson Riis, an MP from British Columbia. "I figure the federal government could purchase Gretzky's contract and then resell him to a Canadian team."

"I'm surprised," Gretzky's mother, Phyllis, said as she watched

Hard Work And Drive Earns Kersee Respect

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — It was no accident that Bob Kersee coached more athletes who made the U.S. Olympic track and field team than any other coach.

Kersee, coach of the World Class Athletic Club, drives his athletes hard, but has gained their utmost respect.

The result was that seven of his athletes made the team, although the sensation of the U.S. Olympic Trials, women's sprinter Florence Griffith Joyner, broke with Kersee shortly after the Trials, apparently in a dispute over money.

After the Trials, which ended July 23, Kersee and his wife, long jumper and heptathlete Jackie Joyner-Kersee, took a brief vacation in The Bahamas before resuming their preparation for the Seoul Games.

"When the flag goes up and the torch is lit, they'll be ready to go," Kersee said. "They'll be ready to go the rounds — and go the rounds all out. That's what it's all about."

"I got what I wanted and now we're going after whoever is best in the world."

Kersee will not have to do that much chasing, because he now has some of the world's best athletes, and the rest of the world will have to be coming after his group.

"We've added excitement to American track and field and concern to European track and field," Kersee said.

His prize pupil is his wife. Joyner-Kersee is the world record-holder in the heptathlon, the American record-holder in the long jump and the 1987 world champion in both events.

She and her husband argue constantly in public, but their disagreements appear friendly and playful.

For example, about his wife's stubbornness, Kersee said, "She has gone from being hard-headed to half hard-headed."

And on his wife's thirst for training but lack of aggressiveness at other times, Kersee quipped, "She never says she's tired — except for cooking and cleaning around the house."

The two occasionally disagree on what events the talented and versatile Joyner-Kersee should enter. Jackie thrives on competition, while her husband does not want her to overexert herself, for fear of getting injured.

"Sometimes I deliberately provoke him," Jackie said, referring to time during her workouts. "I like him jumping down my throat."

But she added, "Bobby thinks of everything. He's out there concentrating on what will make me a better person or a better athlete, and I'm out there listening to what he says. There are times we have our difficulties, and sometimes I don't want to listen."

"It's not like I'm getting away with anything, because he's my husband," she said. "When he's coaching me, he's a different person than when he's at home."

At home, peace reigns. "Once we step into the house, it's husband and wife," Kersee said. "We're best friends."

Home is in Long Beach, Calif. It is not only home for the Kersees, but a place to stay for some other members of the World Class AC.

One who dropped into the "dormitory" last April was sprinter Roy Martin.

Martin was a surprise at the 1984 Trials, finishing fourth in the 200 meters at age 17. Since then, Martin had been plagued by academic difficulties and indifference, and his potential was disappearing.

But Kersee whipped him into shape, taught him some discipline and changed his attitude. Martin responded by finishing third in the 200 Trials in 20.05 seconds, the best time of his career.

The other World Class AC members who made the U.S. team were Valerie Brisco in the women's 400 meters and 1,600-meter relay, Gail Devers-Roberts in the women's 100-meter high hurdles, Pam Marshall in the women's 200 and Andre Phillips in the men's 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

In the 1984 Olympics, Kersee's pupils won a total of 10 gold and silver medals. His No. 1 prodigy then was Brisco, winner of the 200 and 400 meters, and a member of the 1,600-meter relay team.

Heat May Play Role In PGA Championship

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — While most of the players praise Pete Dye's devilish Oak Tree Golf Club, some wish they were playing the 70th PGA Championship at another time of the year.

Near 100 degree heat baked the tournament site during Tuesday's practice rounds, then a tremendous rainstorm in the afternoon chased the players to the clubhouse.

A prime topic during the storm was why the PGA, the last of the four major championships, should be played in the dog days of August where heat and storms are not uncommon.

"In my modest opinion I think they should move the PGA to May before the U.S. Open," British Open champion Seve Ballesteros said. "It's always too hot. It was hot and humid in Florida last year and we had storms every day. It's hot here and we're also getting storms. The heat is always a big problem at the PGA."

Ballesteros suggested that the heat was one of the reason Scotland's Sandy Lyle, the Masters' champion, decided to skip the tournament.

"Maybe if it was May Sandy would be here," Ballesteros said. "I don't think he likes it real hot."

There is precedent for a move although there is a busy schedule of PGA Tour events in May, including tournaments in Las Vegas and Texas.

"We played the 1971 PGA in Florida (at the Palm Beach Gardens) and it was a great time to play it," said Jack Nicklaus, who also won that tournament. "I guess it all depends on what course you play it on."

"You couldn't play the PGA in February or May in Oklahoma because the bermuda fairways wouldn't be ready. In this instance, I guess you can say August in Oklahoma is fine."

Greg Norman said "There's nothing wrong with playing this time of year." Then he paused as thunder boomed and continued... "except for this."

Norman said the heat was a problem, but sympathized with the PGA because of schedule problems.

"They just can't fit this tournament in any earlier," he said. "They have the Masters in April, a full schedule of four events in May, the U.S. Open in June, and the British Open in July. Maybe they could drop it back to September, though. That might be a better time."

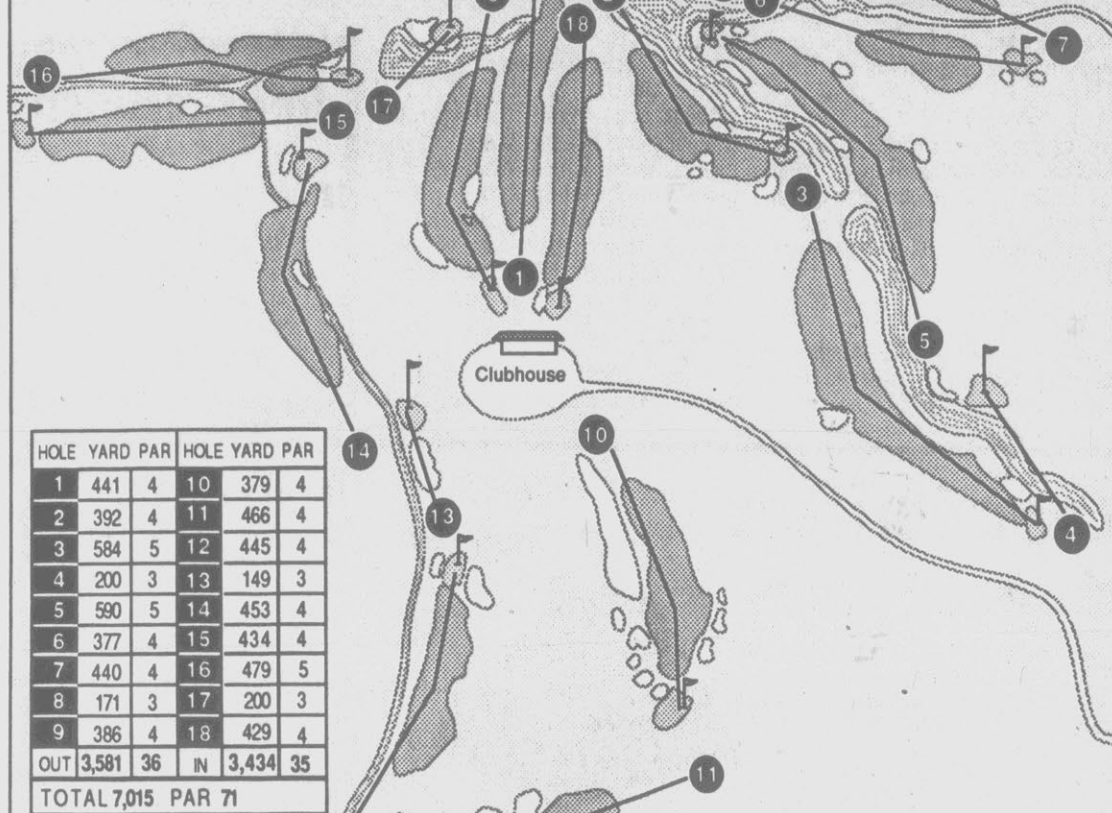

Despite all the clubhouse theory, the tournament will be held in August again next year, at Kemper Lakes Golf Club in Hawthorn Woods, Ill.

The heavy rains that broke the heat wave late Tuesday also did the players a favor by softening the 7,015-yard course, rated by The United States Golf Association as the toughest Par-71 in the nation.

Canadians End Skid

TORONTO (AP) — Veteran Glenn Michibata and newcomer Andrew Sznajder ended a six-year Canadian losing run at the National Tennis Centre when both won their first-round matches at the $815,000 Player's International.

Michibata, one of the last Canadians to win in Toronto in 1982, defeated Jorge Lozano of Mexico 7-5, 6-3, while Sznajder, the Canadian national champion who turned professional only two months ago, downed Britain's Andrew Castle 6-4, 7-5.

In a second-round match, fourth-seeded Jimmy Connors had an easy time downing fellow American Doug Flach, a qualifier who turns 18 Wednesday, 6-1, 6-3.

Lawrence Taylor Predicts Victory

By The Associated Press

All-pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor, preparing himself for a leadership role with the New York Giants, predicts a victory over the Washington Redskins in the season opener and hopes for a trip to the Super Bowl.

Taylor said his leadership role will be important because All-Pro middle linebacker Harry Carson and defensive end George Martin are nearing retirement.

"Harry and George Martin are looking at retiring soon so somebody has got to come up and be a leader," the 29-year-old Taylor said Tuesday at the Giants' camp at Madison, N.J. "Somebody has got to take the reins. I've led this team before. I led by example."

Carson, 34, and Martin, 35, are the eldest of the Giants. Both have spoken of retirement, but have not announced definite plans.

Taylor says he is readying himself for the day when they will not be around to offer advice and leadership.

"I'm taking the game more seriously," he said, a thinly veiled reference to the trouble the seven-time All-Pro had with cocaine two seasons ago. "I'm taking what I do off the field more seriously. I'm taking my family more seriously."

Taylor said he is relishing the Giants' first week crack at the defending Super Bowl champion Redskins.

"I love the Redskins," he said. "There's no other team I like playing against more. They're good physically and mentally. There is no trickery. You just line up and play."

Taylor said the Giants have a "great defense if we keep our heads together."

"We're not going to give anybody a touchdown," he said. "If they want to score they're going to have to set up for three points."

INJURED RETURN

Seattle Seahawks coach Chuck Knox says there's a chance All-Pro running back Curt Warner will see his first preseason action Thursday night against Detroit.

Warner underwent off-season surgery to remove bone spurs from his ankle and has been brought along slowly in training camp.

"We'll see how he feels," Knox said of Warner. "He's been working hard all this week."

Knox said starting cornerback Terry Taylor will be held out as he continues recovering from a pulled hamstring.

All-pro defensive end Howie Long and Pro Bowl center Don Mosebar returned to practice with the Los Angeles Raiders.

Long had been sidelined for a week after suffering a tingling sensation in his neck during a practice session.

Mosebar, recovering from off-season back surgery, had been gradually working his way back through drills and individual work. He participated in contact work for the first time.

Another Raider veteran, wide receiver James Lofton, suffered a slight groin pull during drills and was held out. He is expected to be ready for Saturday's exhibition game against the Dallas Cowboys.

AROUND THE CAMPS

Coach Bill Walsh said he's considering switching starting strong safety Jeff Fuller to cornerback if Tim McKyer and Don Griffin, the San Francisco 49ers' starting corners as rookies last year, remain holdouts much longer.

"We're preparing to open the season without them," Walsh said. "We're certainly not ready, but we have to assume that their plan is to sit out beyond the exhibition season and into the regular season."

Fuller, in his fifth year, played some at cornerback his rookie year, but primarily was a backup safety until he unseated Carlton Williamson for the starting strong safety job last season.

"If they continue this holdout, we very well could have Fuller playing cornerback and Williamson back at strong safety," Walsh said.

Pittsburgh Steelers offensive tackle Mark Behning was hospitalized for heat exhaustion after practice.

Behning was listed good condition at Latrobe Area Hospital, a nursing supervisor said.

Team spokesman Pat Hanlon said Behning was expected to stay in the hospital overnight.

Washington Redskins guard Rick Kehr missed Tuesday's practice with a sprained knee, making him the third player to be injured at the position in the past seven days.

The multiple injuries have forced second-year lineman Ed Simmons to log double duty as a tackle and a guard and caused more than passing concern among the Redskins' coaching staff.

Simmons started training camp at left tackle. But injuries to guards R.C. Thielemann and Russ Grimm, as well as Kehr, have caused the Redskins to move the 6-foot-5, 300-pound Simmons to the other side of the line.

"Just when you think you have some good depth, two or three guys are knocked out of the lineup," offensive line coach Joe Bugel said.

Holdout guard Rich Moran practiced for the first time with the Green Bay Packers, and Coach Lindy Infante said the team might start looking for new players to fill the gaps in a troubled offensive line. Moran had missed 17 days of training camp and 25 practices.

"It's good to be back," the fourth-year player said. "The first practice felt pretty good. It's good to get around the guys again and just get things going. It will take a little time, but working with all the guys, I think it will come together."

Other returning starters in the offensive line — center Mark Cannon, right guard Ron Hallstrom and left tackle Ken Ruetters — are out. Ruetters has a shoulder injury expected to keep him sidelined two weeks and the other two remain contract holdouts.

The Dallas Cowboys claimed veteran kicker Jess Atkinson.

Atkinson, who played in two regular-season and three playoff games with the Redskins the past two seasons, was placed on waivers Monday by Washington.

The Cowboys are seeking a kicker to replace second-year pro Roger Ruzek, who officially "retired" while holding out for a new contract.

Ninth-year fullback Mike Guman of the Los Angeles Rams, underwent arthroscopic knee surgery at Centinela Hospital in Inglewood, Calif.

Results of the surgery, done to examine the lateral cartilage of Guman's right knee, were not immediately available. Guman, who also underwent knee surgery in 1985 and 1986, is expected to miss about four weeks.

"It's just something that's the result of wear and tear on the knee," Coach John Robinson said. "It was no specific injury."

Rams spokesman Jason Stein categorized it as "a nagging injury."

In eight years with the Rams, Guman has gained 1,285 yards and caught 150 passes for 1,433 yards. He is considered a solid blocker.

Yankees May Leave After Lease Expires

NEW YORK (AP) — Associates of New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner say he is not interested in keeping the team in the Bronx after its Yankee Stadium lease expires in 14 years, according to a published report.

The city and the team have been unable to close a deal announced in October, in which the city and state would fund $90 million in stadium improvements in exchange for the team's commitment to extend its lease by 30 years.

Those negotiations have broken off, New York Newsday reported today.

A spokesman for Deputy Mayor Robert Esnard said a top Yankee executive, Vice President William Dowling, and a close friend of Steinbrenner have both told the city that "Mr. Steinbrenner is not interested in staying beyond 2002," when the stadium lease expires.

A team spokesman declined comment on the threat of a Yankee departure. But he said Dowling stands by comments in this week's Sports Inc. magazine in which he said continued talks are pointless because the city's lease terms are "unreasonable."

The signing of the deal, which calls for construction of a new parking garage, restaurant, commuter rail station and 24 luxury skyboxes at the stadium, has been hung up over how to calculate the Yankees' rent.

The city wants a percentage of the Yankees' take from the gate, concessions and cable-television rights, a formula that would enable it to benefit from future booms in club revenue. The Yankees, however, want the city to set a schedule of specific lump-sum yearly rent payments.

Barry Cox, a city negotiator, said "no one is able to understand why" the Yankees are not willing to sign the agreement.

But William Fugazy, a close friend of Steinbrenner, said the city has reneged on promises it made. He said Steinbrenner was particularly upset by the city's refusal to let him build the skyboxes and restaurant — at Steinbrenner's expense — while the two sides haggle over the rent.

"They held it over his head and that's the wrong way to treat Steinbrenner," Fugazy said.

Steinbrenner is still being courted by people who want the team moved to New Jersey, Fugazy said.

In addition, the team may also be interested in relocating to Long Island, where Steinbrenner has looked into purchasing the financially troubled Roosevelt Raceway, Fugazy said.

Canadians No Longer Have The Great One

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

It has been said that Canada has an inferiority complex where the United States is concerned. But there has always been hockey on the side of the folks up north.

And they've had Wayne Gretzky to more than even that out.

Canadians don't have the Great One anymore. Oh, sure, he'll still star for Team Canada in whatever international events he can make. And he'll play a bunch of games in the seven Canadian cities with NHL hockey.

It won't be the same. There is great, and then there is Gretzky. And the Great Gretzky is in Los Angeles now. The big loser is the birthplace of the sport.

"I figure the federal government could purchase Gretzky's contract and then resell him to a Canadian team," said Nelson Riis, a member of Canada's Parliament. "I think the (Toronto Maple) Leafs would be interested, and what about those (Vancouver) Canucks, and let's not forget the Jets who need a little more depth down the center."

"The bottom line is that we have to keep Wayne in Canada, where Canadians can see their greatest hockey player ever on a regular basis."

Just three weeks ago, throughout the Dominion, Gretzky's marriage to actress Janet Jones drew the kind of attention usually reserved for royal weddings — live television coverage, pull-out sections in newspapers, TV specials devoted to the Great One and his betrothed.

Today, Canadians mourn the passing on to Los Angeles of the man who has represented them internationally with dignity, class and unparalleled success. No matter how many millions of dollars were sent north, no matter how many players were dealt to Edmonton, nothing can equal the value of what Gretzky has been and has done.

"Wayne has given so much to this city and to hockey in the past decade that I believe he has the right to set his own destiny," Edmonton Oilers owner Peter Pocklington said.

"I made a decision based on Wayne the person rather than Wayne the hockey player," Pocklington said in honoring Gretzky's request. "Wayne, good luck."

Actually, it's Pocklington who might need the luck. His many business dealings have turned sour in recent years and he nearly sold the team twice. The $10 million he wangled out of the Kings might make Pocklington more solvent, but the ill will created by the trade — no matter who initiated it — could make him as unpopular as Gretzky is revered.

It also could cost him at the gate. Already, season ticket holders have deluged the Oilers' ticket office with threats of cancellation.

Fan criticism of the trade, heard on radio talk shows throughout Canada, largely pinpointed Pocklington as the villain.

Peter, good luck.

Jones hasn't escaped the wrath of the fans, either. Some callers even compared her to Yoko Ono, whose marriage to John Lennon was blamed by many rock fans for the 1970 breakup of the Beatles.

Is Jones another Robin Givens, the wife of heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, who seems in control of her husband's life and career?

Were there other motivations in this monster deal, perhaps the biggest trade in sports history? Sure.

The Oilers had to consider that Gretzky, 27, has mentioned retiring when he hits 30. He hates air travel and has said so often enough not to dismiss it as a possible cause of retirement.

For the first time since turning pro in 1978 with the Indianapolis Racers of the WHA, Gretzky suffered a major injury last season. He was sidelined for 16 games with knee and eye problems.

The Oilers also knew that if Wayne's heart was in Los Angeles, if he was unhappy in Edmonton, it could be counterproductive.

The Kings don't have to explain anything. Bruce McNall, who bought the struggling franchise from Jerry Buss two seasons back, has been searching for some magic. Buss was concerned only with Magic and the Lakers, allowing the Kings to flounder.

McNall has found that magic in Gretzky.

"I've got to do something radical to sell hockey in L.A., and there's no name in hockey like Wayne Gretzky," he said.

The smiling faces at NHL headquarters realize how helpful the trade will be to a sport that has failed just about everywhere but the Northeast and Midwest. A successful team in Los Angeles — artistically and financially — could provide the kind of spark the NHL needs to become more than a regional attraction in the United States.

Who could provide a bigger spark than Gretzky?

"For the next few years, the trade will help Los Angeles," says Barclay Plager, St. Louis Blues player personnel director. "Gretzky's still great and he will be for years."

Gretzky's wish is to continue his unparalleled career in Los Angeles, with his wife close by. Somehow, it seems appropriate that the king of hockey is now a King.

But it also seems so wrong. We're not only talking about the most dominant player in any team sport, ever, but a national landmark. As one observer said, "You just don't trade Canada."

Even if Canada wants to go.

For Four, Swim Trials Are Special

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — For four 1984 Olympians, the second night of the U.S. Olympic swimming trials carried the sweet smell of success. For the fifth, it was a bitter disappointment.

No world or American records were set Tuesday after four were established on opening day Monday. But Dave Wharton of Westminster, Pa., joined Matt Biondi of Moraga, Calif., in swimming best times in the world this year.

And Olympic swim coach Richard Quick said the failure to break records — even though the times were good — could make the team "hungrier" when it reaches Seoul.

Wharton, seeking his first Olympic berth, won the 400 individual medley in 4 minutes, 16.32 seconds, .20 seconds slower than his own American record. Hungary's Tamas Darnyi holds the world mark of 4:15.42.

"This summer is going to be a really fast battle between me and the other IMers in the world, because the field has broken wide open," Wharton said.

He predicted the Olympic winner at Seoul will go a "lot faster than the current world record."

Wharton beat second-place finisher Jeff Kostoff of Upland, Calif., by nearly four seconds.

Police Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — The wife of a man fatally shot by a Smithfield police officer has agreed to drop her $8 million lawsuit against the town and three former officers under a settlement.

Yvette King, 26, of New York said Tuesday she was satisfied with the arrangement but declined to discuss its details. The terms were kept secret.

She alleged in her suit that a Smithfield police officer shot her husband, Ellis King, then 22, in the back of the head without justification after beating him with a blackjack March 10, 1986.

Police said King had been shot because he had gotten an officer's gun and was threatening to shoot. An attorney for the town, Robert Spence of Smithfield, said the town had admitted no wrongdoing in the settlement.

Lawyers in the case privately negotiated the arrangement during the second day of a trial of the suit in U.S. District Court. Afterward, they said the settlement had called for non-disclosure of its terms.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Aug. 5.

HOUSE NUCLEAR ACCIDENT LIABILITY — By a vote of 346 for and 54 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 1414) setting a higher liability limit on the nuclear power industry in the event of a Chernobyl-style catastrophe.

The bill extends the 1958 Price-Anderson Act, which automatically fixes liability and puts recovery procedures in motion.

It raises from $710 million to $7.1 billion the maximum industry liability for personal and property damages resulting from a nuclear accident. The U.S. Treasury would cover any higher damages.

Supporter Phil Sharp, D-Ind., praised the bill for its "large, assured compensation fund and (its) ease of recovery."

Calling the bill "a taxpayer ripoff," opponent Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, said the $7.1 billion ceiling on industry liability was too low.

Members voting yes supported the bill. Most members voting no wanted the nuclear industry to shoulder more liability.

Voting no: None.
Not voting: Charles Rose, D-7.

JAPANESE-AMERICAN REDRESS — By a vote of 257 for and 156 against, the House passed and sent to the White House a bill to pay reparations and extend a national apology to Japanese-Americans kept in internment camps during World War II because of their ancestry.

An estimated 60,000 living internees will receive tax-free payments of $20,000 each when the bill becomes law. Overall, about 120,000 U.S. citizens and aliens from Japan were confined under an executive order provoked by Japan's Dec. 7, 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor.

Supporter Norman Mineta, D-Calif., said the House was taking "the brave step of admitting and redressing a monumental injustice."

Opponent Howard Coble, R-N.C., termed it "unfair and perhaps even presumptuous" for the House to judge a government policy set when America's survival was at stake.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price.

Voting no: Neal, Coble, Rose, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.
Not voting: None.

HOMELESS AID — By a vote of 203 for and 215 against, the House rejected an amendment to use block grants rather than categorical grants for distributing federal homeless aid.

The vote occurred as the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR 4352) reauthorizing a wide range of programs for the homeless.

The rejected amendment sought to combine categorical grants for emergency shelters, housing demonstration projects and general aid into a single block grant that was to be awarded to states and localities nationwide with few strings attached.

Categorical grants channel scarce homeless aid to a limited number of larger cities, while block grants spread the money among many more jurisdictions nationwide.

Members voting yes wanted homeless aid distributed via block grants.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Valentine, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Lancaster.
Not voting: None.

IMPEACHMENT — The House voter 413 for and 3 against to impeach U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings of the Southern District of Florida.

The impeachment resolution (H Res 499) charges Hastings with conspiring to accept bribes, disclosing confidential FBI information and committing perjury.

If convicted in a Senate trial expected next year, the 51-year-old jurist would become the sixth federal official since 1787 removed from office by impeachment.

Voting no were Mervyn Dymally, D-Calif., Edward Roybal, D-Calif. and Gus Savage, D-Ill.

Chicago Pupils Tour Africa

CHICAGO (AP) — Carrying carved African walking sticks, 10 pupils from one of Chicago's poorest neighborhoods returned from a three-country African tour during which they met people "poorer than we are."

The Suder Elementary School students, ages 11 to 14, raised $30,000 in less than 10 months to pay for the two-week trip that took them to Senegal, the Ivory Coast and Togo.

"I remember last October, when they came home from school and said, 'Guess what? We're going to go to Africa,'" said George West, as he waited for his sons, Brian, 12, and Daryl, 11, to clear customs at O'Hare International Airport upon their return Tuesday night.

"I just said, 'Y-e-a-h ... r-i-g-h-t,' but a couple of months later they told me they'd already raised a third of the money, so they made a believer out of me."

The truest believer was Suder Principal Brenda Daigre, who planned the trip after her own second visit to Africa.

Mrs. Daigre said her trip made her feel as if she had "come home," and she wanted her students, all of whom are black, to get a chance to discover their own African roots.

"I have traveled extensively, and nothing hit me as hard as when I went to Africa," she said before the students left. "There is a kinship that you feel, there is an openness that you feel."

Vernya Baines, whose 13-year-old daughter, Yo-seanda, was in the group, said before the trip she thought it would be a "beautiful experience" for her daughter, who had never been on airplane or out of Illinois.

"We're poor, but I think it'll give them a chance to see people that are poorer than we are," Mrs. Baines said. "Maybe she'll appreciate some of the things she maybe takes for granted."

By voyage's end, however, many of the students seemed too excited to dwell on moral lessons as they trooped off the plane while carrying African walking sticks and green knapsacks.

"We saw the slave houses where they kept the slaves. We saw the Senegal museum. It was wonderful," said Hardy Shorter, 12. "We saw the African sculptures from long ago."

Raising money for the journey presented problems since eight of the students live in the Henry Horner Homes public housing project, and two live across the street from the project, Ms. Daigre said.

Some of the funds came from churches and community groups, but the students raised much of it by running a candy store at school and by putting on a talent show and basketball and volleyball games.

"We taught them how to set long-range goals," the principal said.

Mrs. Daigre had the students write to African pen pals, take after-school classes in African culture and art, and study French for a year to prepare for their visits to the countries, all former French colonies.

"We just spoke French a little because so many people we met knew English, but we did say 'Bonjour' a lot," said Yo-seanda Baines.

The mother of Charlene Brown's pen pal braided her hair African style.

"I saw some of my Senegalese peers and I decided to get my hair like this," Charlene said. "It was a souvenir I could take everywhere."

The principal, who accompanied the students on the trip, said it was such a success she wants to repeat it soon.

Sisters Finding Peace In Hills Of Big Laurel

By SARAH GOTTFRIED
Asheville Citizen-Times
BIG LAUREL, N.C. (AP) — Some- one looking for a little space for themselves could search a long time and do no better than Lillian Tipton and Mary Capps has here on Big Laurel near the northern border of Madison County.

About eight miles off U.S. 23 on the way out of North Carolina over the mountains to Tennessee, its a place where people who leave it dream all their lives about returning.

The green hills, the quiet coves and meandering paths to the barns, the newly-churned butter and fresh milk cooling in the springhouses and yellow corn ripening on sturdy stalks at creekside are just part of it.

Much of the yearning for a place such as this comes from the desire to be in a community with good people who share a need for some individual distance.

Lillian Tipton and Mary Capps came back some seven years ago and successfully challenged a doctor's

Lillian, who is 101, loves to tell her secret for long life.

"I worked hard all my life and chewed tobacco," she said smiling, then laughing at herself.

Mary, 98, shakes her head and marvels at her sister's tomfoolery.

"Lillian's a lot like her father was," she says.

Lillian Tipton and Mary Capps, two of the six children born to Newton and Nellie Lewis Bailey in Yancey County, live in a little house on Big Laurel.

They are the last of the Bailey girls and boys. Their youngest sister, Emma Bingham, with whom they lived in Henderson County's Hooper's Creek for 15 years, died in 1970. Mother Nellie died in 1949, long after their father Newt was laid to rest in Yancey County.

Nevertheless, Mary and Lillian well remember their father. He was a rugged mountain man who taught his two sons and four daughters the value of hard work.

But he wanted them to look up ever so often and take notice that life feels good and acknowledge the feeling with laughter.

The sisters and Jeff the cat share the three rooms in their modest frame house that was once a part of the Amos Capps estate.

Still quite active, they manage for themselves, have a vegetable garden and raise chickens. And they piece quilts. Beautiful quilts.

Born and raised in Yancey County, they never had a chance to go to school and spent their days at hard work on their father's farm.

"Farm work gave me big knuckles," Lillian said.

Like the one about Jeff, her cat. He sometimes hops into a chair at the table at mealtime, sits up on his hind legs and begs to eat with the family.

Mary, who was twice married before she became the wife of Amos Capps, raised three daughters and two sons. She also raised a grandson, Donald Briggs who lives less than 100 yards from Mary and Lillian in the Big Laurel community.

Briggs is quite proud of his grandmother and great aunt.

"I see them every day and buy what they need, but they do very well for themselves," Briggs said. "You just have to talk to them to know their minds are brilliant."

Carowinds

The Carolina Sternwheeler paddleboat is docked awaiting passengers at the Carowinds family theme park located on the North Carolina-South Carolina border between Charlotte and Rock Hill, S.C. The paddleboat is located at the center of the park and takes riders on a leisurely cruise around Smurf Island. On the park's monorail and skytower, guests can get a bird's-eye view of the 325-acre Carowinds complex.

Among other attractions are the monster roller coasters, like Thunder Road, White Lightning and Carolina Cyclone, the looping Frenzo and a large assortment of state-of-the-art attractions.

Carowinds is open six days a week through Aug. 18.

Miniature 'Shangri-La' City Stands Complete With Over 30 Buildings

By EMILY SMITH
Durham Morning Herald
PROSPECT HILL, N.C. (AP) — It's been 20 years since Henry Pleasant Warren began building the miniature city outside his Caswell County home that he would eventually name Shangri-La.

"Roosevelt talked about his Shangri-La during the war as being a place of rest," said Warren's widow, Satira Pleasant Warren. "I think that's what Henry had in mind when he named it."

But this retired tobacco farmer didn't get much rest while building his city of white flint rock, cement and red brick. He began the project when he was 75 years old and worked on it almost every day until he died of lung cancer at age 84 in 1977.

"When he started it, he wasn't going to build much," said Mrs. Warren, 70, "but people inspired him to build all kinds of buildings."

This village, whose name is taken from the imaginary utopian land in James Hilton's "Lost Horizon," has almost anything a person could possibly need.

The Munchkin city of chest-high buildings has more than 30 structures, including the Dew Drop Inn, the Little Brown Church in the Dell, Rocky Theatre, White Rock Motel, complete with a miniature swimming pool, Shang Hi School (with a separate cafeteria, gymnasium and library), a jailhouse, courthouse, fire station, bank, town hall, dance hall, residence, dog house, outhouse, garage, a well, a farmhouse, silo, windmill, mill pond, mill wheel, a water tower, an ABC store and the infamous Watergate building.

One of the buildings, White Rock Hospital, wasn't finished when Warren died, and it stands the way he left it.

"People were always suggesting things for him to build for his village, and he was always looking in antique shops and hardware stores for things to go in his village," Mrs. Warren said.

Pieces from a disjointed plow make up the handrails of the three steps that lead visitors from the driveway to the village. Ceramic chickens roost in the windmill, which is topped with a blade from an old fan. Parts from a gutted washing machine crown the water tower.

East had seen that his partner had only a singleton diamond, and he knew from the opening lead that his partner held only four spades. Since it was reasonable to assume that his partner would lead from his longest suit, West could not have a five-card holding. His distribution had to be 4-4-1-4.

Updated 'Blob' Film Isn't Art, But It Is Kind Of Neat

By STEPHEN HUNTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

"Man chews bubblegum" is not news; "Bubblegum chews man" is news, and that was the charm of "The Blob" of 1958 and that is the charm of "The Blob" of 1988. It is still amusing, still junky, still antic, still stupid.

That 1958 film was campy enough to begin with, costing about $3.59 and meant to parody the conventions of the it-came-from-outer-space genre at whose tail-end it arrived. It was meant to be instant kitsch, with a monster that looked like a large lump of well-masticated Fleer's Double Bubble or something wet and shiny on your shoe whose components you really didn't want to learn. But by a casting fluke, it has entered legend — it was the film that made Steve McQueen a star.

Like many a legend, this one is wrong; McQueen made the picture before he was really McQueen, but only a callow blond boy-bimbo, and his contribution to it and its contribution to our culture were swiftly enough forgotten. He then went on to "Wanted Dead Or Alive" on the tube; broke out in a featured part in a long-forgotten World War II epic called "Never So Few" (otherwise memorable merely because it was the only movie ever made in which Frank Sinatra wore a goatee at the end of his chinny-chin-chin); and then jumped to full-fledged stardom in "The Magnificent Seven" and "The Great Escape," thus recalling "The Blob" from the depths of junk-movie oblivion and making it into a minor cult item.

Kevin Dillon, who inherits the role that did not make Steve McQueen a star, probably won't be made a star either by this one, though he gives it a pretty good thrash. He is not too bad and if you want to talk bad, imagine the movie with his brother Matt in the lead. Kevin doesn't look quite as good, and his cheekbones aren't quite the flying buttresses of Matt, but at least he can act, as he proved before in "Platoon."

And although the movie has been updated for the '80s, it still boasts a number of '50s affectations. The Dillon character, for example, on his cycle, with his jeans and black leather jacket and weird cowboy shirt — the quintessential teen outsider as romantic hero — is pure '50s, an almost direct descendent of the original James Dean, with only the little gold earring added to anchor him to our time and place. And this is clearly a romantically imagined '50s town, where nobody will "believe" the kids — Dillon and perky Shawnee Smith — as they try and raise the alarm.

The subtext — then as now — is that only "the kids" really know what is happening; the difference is that what is happening now is different from what was happening then. In a fascinating way, the movie's message has been inverted. In 1958, the film makers simply absorbed and reflected the us-them political schism in the world, as inherited from the far more earnest xenophobic watch-the-skies-and-beware films like "The Thing" and "War of the Worlds" which in their cartoonish way reflected the absolutes of the Cold War; for the '80s, the film has been tarted up with a just-as-conventional-us-us schism. It does not come from outer space; it comes from the Pentagon, and we are the people our parents warned us against. It turns out that the Mucus-monster is the result of an out-of-control biological warfare experiment, and a laborious layer of conspiracy has been added in which kindly old Joe Seneca — an Uncle Remus for our times — is really fronting for the Military-Industrial complex, who have declared the national defense more important than a few hick kids in a hick town in Southern California.

Of course, one place where this film completely trumps the original is in the special effects department. This Blob is like psychotic aspic — and when it takes people, there's nothing particularly comic about it (It even takes a kid, a violation of the unusual taboo that insists upon conferring survival to those under 14). It rips them apart and they die screaming, to be glimpsed floating and disintegrating within its confines shortly thereafter, like pieces of human fruit suspended in Jell-O. And when it strikes it strikes faster somehow, with an animal's cunning and guiltless violence.

I think the director, Chuck Russell, means "The Blob" (rated R) to achieve that level of camp delirium and outrageousness of such films as Stuart Gordon's "Re-Animator" and Sam Raimi's "The Evil Dead II." I also think he does not quite make it, though I particularly enjoyed some of his allusions to classic monster — rather than horror — movies of the '50s, especially that famous scene in "It Came From Beneath the Sea" where the giant squid uncoils a tentacle the size of a Dodge van and squashes a running man. OK, it's not art, but it is kind of neat.

Picasso's Daughter Puts Her Design Art To Work

By SUZY PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Paloma Picasso is not resting on her father's laurels. Her jewelry sells at Tiffany, her face sells her own perfumes and she designs accessories to sell under her own name.

She started to draw at age 3 alongside her famous father, the artist Pablo Picasso, who was then 71. Some of his talent seems to have rubbed off, helping his youngest child succeed as a designer.

"These look like my own eyebrows," she said, brandishing a pair of chic sunglasses with arched upper rims, one of the accessories from a new line she has designed to be launched later this month.

Then she arched her eyebrows even higher, as she expressed contempt for the latest biography of her father. "It's one of the really bad books," she said.

"Picasso: Creator and Destroyer" by Arianna Stassinopoulos Huffington is a gossipy, not well documented best-seller that has generated storms of critical protest.

Sitting in a hotel bar near the Louvre, Picasso and her husband, Rafael Lopez Cambil, were in Paris to see fashion shows on their way to Madrid for the opening of a new museum.

"I haven't read the book all the way through. It bores me and I get upset with it," she said.

"What I've read shows Arianna indeed doesn't know anything about art. She just portrayed one side of the man, the negative side. It's a self-serving book, written to prove its title, that Picasso was a destroyer."

"I wouldn't change anything about my father. We had a very strong relationship."

She doesn't understand how the author persuaded her mother to cooperate on the book. "I think it's a shame," she said.

Francoise Gilot, the mother of Paloma, 39, and Claude, 41, lived with Picasso from 1944 to 1953, but was never married to him. She is now married to Dr. Jonas Salk, a medical pioneer in polio, and lives in California.

After their mother, a painter, left Picasso in 1953, Paloma and Claude were raised in Paris and in their maternal grandparents' home in the fashionable suburb of Neuilly.

But until 1961, when Picasso married Jacqueline Roque, who kept family members from seeing the artist, they continued to see their father. He allowed Paloma the rare privilege of watching him work.

"I was a quiet, little girl," she said. "He would give me a pencil for sketching or let me color something he drew for me. But he never taught me how to draw; he loathed the idea that art can be taught."

When Picasso died at age 92 in 1973, leaving no will, his surviving relatives fought over the vast estate estimated at $240 million. In 1977, an agreement was finally reached, giving Claude and Paloma a share valued at about $20 million each.

But they did not merely lie back and relax to enjoy the Picasso money. Paloma, particularly, has kept very busy since she started designing jewelry for Tiffany 10 years ago.

"We had a 'Bohemian' period about 15 years ago when I first met Rafael and we lived in a Left Bank walk-up," she said. "He was a play-wright from Argentina, and I was a student of jewelry design who liked avant-garde plays."

She was photographed for Vogue, met and became a friend of Yves Saint-Laurent and was soon an avid fashion fan. Then came the Tiffany contract, and six years ago they moved to New York.

"I love it," she said. "It's dynamic, stimulating. You can accomplish so much there."

NBC-TV To Start New Fall Prime-Time Series Oct. 3

By DIANE HAITMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — In spite of delays precipitated by the Writers Guild of America strike, NBC will premiere 13 of its fall prime-time series the week of Oct. 3 and five more by the end of that month, NBC entertainment chief Brandon Tartikoff said Monday.

But NBC's Tuesday-night series lineup, which includes "Matlock," "In the Heat of the Night" and the new "Midnight Caller," will be delayed until the last week of November, he said, although not because of the 154-day strike. Rather, Tartikoff said, those shows will be postponed to avoid competition with ABC's "War and Remembrance" miniseries in mid-November.

Tartikoff, the last of the three network entertainment division presidents to face journalists who cover television as part of the TV industry's semi-annual press tour here, disputed earlier news reports that suggested the writers' dispute would cost NBC the opportunity to promote its new programming during its Summer Olympic broadcasts in September — one of the chief reasons the network purchased rights to the Games. Thanks to the strike having ended Sunday, that will not be true now, he said.

"I think we're in very good shape vis-a-vis the strike and in terms of the Olympics," Tartikoff said, adding that NBC has "23 series going on within four weeks of the Olympics" that could easily be promoted during the two weeks of programming from Seoul.

NBC is also well-prepared to compete with "War and Remembrance" during the November ratings "sweeps" with youth-oriented theatrical movies and the 4-hour miniseries "Goddess of Love," starring "Wheel of Fortune" alphabet queen Vanna White, he said.

Calling "War and Remembrance" a "very big book," Tartikoff joked that NBC would instead offer the viewers "nice little books with very big print — and I would say 'Goddess of Love' was the biggest print we could find."

Tartikoff said that NBC will be able to get its new season underway earlier than the other networks — which have predicted season start dates of late October and early November — because NBC prepared for the strike in advance.

Aside from the series that went into production during the strike under interim contracts with the writers guild — "ALF," "Highway to Heaven," "The Cosby Show," "A Different World" and "Amen" — NBC will benefit because there were extra scripts left over from last season to start up this season's production on "L.A. Law," "Miami Vice" and "Hunter," he said.

NBC's new drama "Tattling's" also has several scripts that were near completion when the strike hit, he said.

Also working to NBC's advantage,

Tartikoff added, is that its prime-time schedule is dominated by comedies — 14 in all — which are ready to air about 10 days after shooting is completed, while post-production on an hourlong drama takes from three weeks to a month.

Tartikoff acknowledged, however, that the strike had caused some "psychic damage" to the usual momentum of the fall season. Producers, writers and other creative personnel have been sidelined so long "that nobody is in fighting form," he said.

He said that NBC would not rush production on its new shows despite strike-related delays. "Getting 'Tattling's' or 'Midnight Caller' on the air a week early is not going to tip the balance" in getting good ratings for the fall, he said.

Old Louisiana Capitol Falls Victim To Hard Times

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The Old State Capitol has withstood federal cannonballs, a fire and barbs from Mark Twain but an economic depression is getting the best of the 19th century landmark.

The four-story building stands on the only hill in coastal Louisiana, but with its crenellated towers it would look more at home in Europe. It stares out at a big bend of the Mississippi River, which in the 1850s lapped at the edge of terraced Capitol grounds.

Architect James H. Dakin grandly called it "castellated gothic" when he designed the building in 1847, apparently raising a few eyebrows from the gentry in their Grecian-columned antebellum homes.

The Old Capitol, replaced a half-century ago, deserves better than it now gets, said Bob Reilly, the curator whose voice echoes in the empty building, accentuating his loneliness.

"I'm it," he said when asked how many employees were on the payroll of the state-owned building.

Reilly sweats a lot because the air conditioning doesn't work well but at least the rain's no bother anymore.

The building was reopened to the public on July 4 after being closed for more than two years while government scraped together dollars to repair the leaky roof and do other renovations necessary for pure structural survival.

"We had a bill in the Legislature this year for a $6.3 million expansion to make it into a museum of government and politics," said James Sefcik, head of state museums. "But with our hard economic times, it didn't pass. I'm confident in a year or two as times get better, we'll get some money for the Old Capitol." All of Louisiana's museums are suffering, about the lowest priority with a Legislature that recently approved a $1 billion bond issue to stave off bankruptcy.

Tourists share the sidewalks with residents looking for work in a state with the highest unemployment in the nation — 10.6 percent.

"The building is mostly empty now but we get a large number of tourists," said Sefcik.

Reilly said he's been averaging 200 to 250 tourists each day since the July 4 re-opening.

"It's admission free. It would be embarrassing to charge a fee when the building is empty," he said.

The marble, granite and castiron structure features floors that once were rattled by the peg-legged stomping of Gov. Francis Nichols, who lost a hand and a foot as a Civil War general and was nominated for the governor's chair by an unnamed delegate who said he was nominating "all that is left of General Nicholls."

The building was a barracks for the 6th Michigan and 4th Wisconsin after the 1862 battle of Baton Rouge.

Federal gunboats bombarded the city but the Capitol took only a shell or two at the most, handling the impact with ease. The masonry-covered brick walls are three feet thick.

Shortly after the battle, a cooking fire got out of hand and despite efforts by both federal troops and confederate prisoners, the building was gutted.

The landmark for river travelers became an abandoned eyecore as the postwar Legislature decided to move the seat of government back to New Orleans.

But, the then fabled city that had no cares but plenty of bistros was too much for delegates of the 1879 Constitutional Convention, who moved the seat back to Baton Rouge because of "outside influences" in the Crescent City.

The Old Capitol was renovated, a fourth floor added and in business again by 1882.

A skylight also was added in the four-story tall rotunda and a new castiron circular staircase.

Nothing much changed physically from that time until the new Capitol was constructed in 1932.

Louisiana's legendary Huey P. "The Kingfish" Long was the last governor to serve a full term in the old building.

He was a one-man government who owned the Legislature and overcame opposition that gathered in the old building to impeach him.

Dream

Warren began building Shangri-La after he saw an old water wheel that he liked in a nearby antique shop.

"He decided to build one himself and from there he just kept building more," his wife said. "Sometimes I thought he was crazy, but I really think building his city made him live longer."

His four grandchildren don't think he was crazy, though. They love to play in the city.

Incorporated into the walkways around the house are more than 11,000 arrowheads taken from his land.

"For a while, Henry ran a store over in Hightowers, and when children would bring arrowheads to the store, he would trade them for candy," Mrs. Warren explained. "I heard people say they would look for arrowheads as hard as they could so they could take it to the store and get some candy."

Sisters

Yancey County to marry, but as they grew older they decided to make their home with a younger sister in Henderson County.

While living in Hoopers Creek, Mary became ill and her doctor told her she would never be well enough to take care of herself again.

It was then that Briggs brought his grandmother to Big Laurel to live with him and his family.

"But after a few months she got stronger and her health improved, and she wanted a place of her own again," Briggs said.

He fixed up the little house next to his home, and although there is no indoor plumbing, it has electricity. And Mary Capps proved her doctor wrong and has been keeping house ever since.

Soon her sister Lillian joined her, and they stay busy working the garden, cooking and cleaning and sewing the quilt tops.

Mary, who has a touch of arthritis, tends the garden, still believing hard work can cure all ills.

Lillian carries a walkingstick when she goes for a stroll "to help me up and down the hills."

But they have good memories of the 15 years they spent in the Hoopers Creek community near Fletcher. They had a bigger house then with room for a quilting frame. They made quilts from the pieces of brightly colored cloth they had stitched together, and sold them.

"I liked Hoopers Creek," Lillian said. "We had many neighbors and friends there, and more of our grandchildren lived nearby."

Briggs tries to make up for the loss of contact with other grandchildren by seeing them on a daily basis. He brings in their water and wood for their stoves, and sees that they get whatever else they need. "I don't know what we'd do without my grandson," Mary said.

But neither of them complain. Talk of old age and its problems doesn't really concern them.

Deaf Ball Player Needs Little Special Attention

By LEANNE WAXMAN
Associated Press Writer

KINGSFORT, Tenn. (AP) — Curtis Pride clutches his batting gloves, one in each hand, as he takes a lead off first base and crouches for a run to second at the pitch.

No. 23's Kingsport Mets are visiting the Elizabethton Twins for a doubleheader. The bases are loaded. The score is tied at 5 in the second game.

The first base coach taps Pride on the shoulder. They face and talk about his position near the bag.

Pride, who is 95 percent deaf, neither requires nor desires special treatment, except for the chance to read lips. He's a young, very busy athlete who's been deaf since birth.

"They drafted me because of my ability, not my deafness," said the 19-year-old leftfielder who attends college on a basketball scholarship. "I do not consider my deafness as a handicap."

The Appalachian League, the Kingsport farm affiliate of the New York Mets, William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Va., and the NCAA agreed that Pride can play professional baseball while he retains amateur status in basketball and soccer, another of his many athletic loves.

The arrangement isn't unprecedented, but it's rare, said Roland Johnson, scouting director for the New York Mets.

"He's got a great attitude. He's a fine kid, fine athlete. He's just got a whole lot of things going for him," Johnson said.

Pride has tried it all — wrestling, track, swimming and gymnastics along with his three top sports. But it's baseball where he hopes to forge a career.

"I've always wanted to play professional baseball since I was a little kid, but getting an education is the most important thing in my life, to give me something to fall back on," Pride said. "I've always played sports all my life. I like the action."

Pride, who grew up in Silver Spring, Md., can hear enough to make out simple sentences at close range with the assistance of a hearing aid in his left ear. He's understood with little difficulty when he speaks and never learned sign language to communicate.

Pride is in his third season with the Mets. He misses spring training because of basketball and a bit of basketball because of baseball, though he does better than average in both.

"It's an inner drive, not only in sports but in anything," said his mother, Sallie Pride. "Sports were something fun for him to do. We wanted him to be around hearing kids and to do things outside of school so he could make friends. I can't think of one coach in all the sports Curt has been in since he was 6 that there was ever really a problem."

At age 16, Pride was among 18 young soccer players in the country picked for the U.S. junior team that played in an international tournament in China before 90,000 fans. Soccer is fun and he continues to play in college, but there's no money in it on the professional level, Pride said. At 6 feet and 190 pounds, Pride may be too short for professional basketball.

Pride is a starter in his third season for the Mets. His batting average was .275 after 23 games and 80 trips to the plate, with 16 runs, 22 hits and eight RBI to his credit. Pride misses about 10 baseball games a year because of basketball.

"His deafness was a consideration. I mean we thought about it, but his ability was so good it was certainly worth seeing what he could do," Johnson said.

Deafness is not new to baseball. The Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. lists five totally deaf and three partially deaf players in the major leagues over the years.

They include Grover Cleveland Alexander, who pitched for the St. Louis Cardinals. Alexander struck out the New York Yankees in the seventh inning of the last game of the 1926 World Series to carry the Cardinals over the Yankees four games to three. Ronald Reagan portrayed Alexander in a movie.

Pride's mother was exposed to German measles when she was pregnant with him. He considers himself lucky.

"A lot of people that happened to were retarded or worse," he said.

Pride attended public school, but went to some special classes with other deaf children until the seventh grade, when he was completely mainstreamed, his mother said.

"We could see that he had a lot of ability in the sports area and it was going to be up to him. We've never had to push him. He soon caught on that he was good and it was something that he enjoyed," Mrs. Pride said.

Pride earned a 3.5 grade point average in high school and is majoring in finance and marketing at William and Mary. He begins his junior year in the fall and said his grades were decent.

Kingsport manager Bobby Floyd said Pride has made continued progress and is hitting the ball better than his first two seasons.

"He's a very talented and intelligent young man and I don't see any hindrance to him in the big leagues because of his deafness," Floyd said. "He's got a long way to go. He's got to make it here, but he's making progress. That's the key."

Pride's teammates have learned to adapt through careful attention to hand signals that all prospective New York Mets are taught to rely on because of blaring noise in Shea Stadium.

Pride said he must look often to the sidelines when he's in the field to keep tabs on where his coaches want him to stand. The same goes when he's on second base.

Pride said he gets a lot of mail from both hearing and deaf fans. He tries to answer each letter.

"I try to set an example for not only deaf people but all handicapped people," Pride said. "They should not let their handicap stop them from doing what they want to do."

Restoration Effort Needs More Funding

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Several buildings on the estate where William Faulkner spent the last half of his life are in serious danger of fading into the past unless funds are obtained for their restoration, curators said.

The house at Rowan Oak, a white-pillared building at the end of a long row of ancient cedars, is safe. It's the barn, kitchen house and tenant house — which hold much of the character of the estate — that are in trouble.

"The roofs are caving in. The bricks are turning back to sand. The logs are rotting away," curator Howard Bahr said.

Officials estimate $250,000 is needed to restore the three buildings, but only about $30,000 has been raised over the last several years.

Part of the problem has been the nature of the estate itself.

"We have to walk kind of a fine line," assistant curator Danny Toma said. "We try to be as non-commercial as possible. We don't charge admission, we don't have a gift shop. I think the people who are interested in Faulkner are interested in seeing the surroundings and appreciate the fact that they can walk into the house and with the exception of a few intrusions it's the same as when he lived here."

The University of Mississippi has published brochures asking for donations and has set up a Faulkner Fund.

Another problem is the house itself was restored eight years ago, and the outbuildings on the 33-acre wooded estate don't seem to attract as much attention. Toma said, however, that despite the three building's association with the estate, they would be worth saving in any event.

Toma said it is rare to find an antebellum house such as Rowan Oak, built in 1840, with its outbuildings intact.

The barn is made of hand-hewn timbers and is part of the original homestead. The timbers are rotting, the ceiling is rotted through and one wall bulges over a foot.

The free-standing kitchen, originally used for cooking food to be carried to the main house, and used as a smokehouse by Faulkner, is slowly disintegrating as its slave-made bricks crumble with each succeeding season.

"All of the outbuildings have to have work done," Toma said. "They're going to start where the need is most critical, in the barn and kitchen. I understand we have enough money to at least start with the barn."

Fire The Grill With A Flair

Among our country's many distinctions is that of being the birthplace and foremost popularizer of the outdoor barbecue. According to the Barbecue Industry Association, 78 percent of U.S. families own a barbecue grill.

In 1988, grill-happy Americans will host 60 different barbecue festivals. No other country pursues this passion with such fervor.

The origin of barbecuing is claimed by both Louisiana and Texas. Louisiana contends that it originated among the Acadians who called it "barb-a-que" meaning "from whiskers to tail."

Texans, on the other hand, claim that American barbecuing began with Spanish settlers who adapted a process learned from the Carib Indians. They called it "barbacoa."

The essential charcoal briquet has an indisputably American originator: Henry Ford. History records that in 1924 the Father of the Model T decided to burn the sawdust of wood scraps left over from his car industry. And voila, charcoal!

When Ford realized the potential of this black powder, he had it pressed into uniform briquets for easy packing and transport, and a new industry was born. In 1987, charcoal briquet sales amounted to 760 million tons.

According to "Food & Wine" magazine, 75 percent of U.S. households hosted a barbecue at least once in 1987. People enjoy barbecues because of their informality, and as 89 percent of the people who barbecue claim, because it tastes good. Wives may enjoy because it is the one occasion where the husband is more likely to take responsibility for the cooking, at least 60 percent of the time.

No matter who does the cooking, Pork Fajitas will win rave reviews. A marinade of dry red wine, lime juice, cilantro, oregano and onion mushroom soup and recipe mix provides just the right seasonings for pork tenderloin strips.

Serve grilled meat on warm tortillas and top with your favorite Southwestern-style condiments: salsa, peppers, guacamole or sour cream.

Grilled Chicken Tandoori offers another variation on traditional barbecued favorites. Marinate chicken the night before in cinnamon, ginger, garlic, cumin, nutmeg and onion soup and recipe mix, and you'll be able to enjoy this chicken dish in practically no time.

Round out your meal with a Picnic Potato Salad. Onion soup and recipe mix provides the seasonings and cuts down on preparation time.

PORK FAJITAS

- 1 pouch onion mushroom soup and recipe mix
- 3/4 cup loosely packed fresh cilantro, finely chopped
- 1/3 cup Burgundy or other dry red wine
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- 2 medium cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon grated lime peel
- 1 pound pork tenderloin
- 4 warm flour tortillas (10-inch)
- Salsa
- Sliced sweet red or green peppers.

PORK FAJITAS — Join the great American tradition of barbecuing with some non-traditional foods like pork fajitas. Pork tenderloin strips are marinated in cilantro, dry red wine, lime juice and onion mushroom soup and recipe mix before grilling. The spicy meat is served in warm tortilla shells and topped with salsa, peppers, guacamole or sour cream.

Apples Add Zip To Meals From Grill

With Labor Day just weeks away, everyone's looking for ways to hold onto the lazy, hazy days of summer. What better way to prolong the easy going, casual mood than with that all-American hallmark of summer — the barbecue? You can enjoy barbecues right into Indian summer — nobody says you have to put away the grill on Labor Day.

Nothing captures summer's glory days better than dining al fresco, be it an outdoor feast of fifty fun-loving neighbors and friends under the noonday sun or an intimate dinner for two under the twinkling stars at dusk. Plan on getting the most out of the summer of '88 before that soft evening breeze turns nippy and those fireflies and ktydids fade away.

The best barbecue is a creative barbecue! Don't just rely on the old standby of steak and potato salad — jazz up your barbecue with the unexpected. Choose a "star" ingredient that can set the stage for the whole menu. One of the most versatile ingredients in your twilight-of-summer barbecue could be as simple as the apple. It adds texture and snap to barbecue sauce (especially tasty doused over chicken or pork chops!), ups the crunch quotient in a sumptuous summer salad (no more macaroni salad blues!), and takes center stage at dessert when whipped into an elegant, refreshing apple sorbet. Unlike summer fruits that are only "in season" for a few weeks each year, perfect apples are available all year long, thanks to a special technique called controlled atmosphere storage. Only the choicest apples from each harvest are selected for this unique reduced oxygen process that preserves just-picked crispness and taste. No need to panic about timing your end-of-summer barbecue or picnic around the availability of certain vegetables or fruits.

The apple, one of nature's most versatile fruits, can elevate your next barbecue into haute cuisine. Packed with potassium, vitamins A and C, and fiber, the apple also boasts a healthy roster of nutrients, and weighs in at a slim 81 calories per medium-sized apple.

For starters, try grilling apples: brush apple quarters or slices with melted butter or margarine and dust with cinnamon or nutmeg; grill for three to five minutes per side until soft. A wire basket can make handling easier. Serve as a side dish or dessert. For a twist on baked apples, grill whole apples: wrap in foil and

New Grill Designs Barbecue In Style

By Jonathan Susskind
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Since the first barbecuer dropped a hunk of meat in a fire and pulled out a deliciously charred and smoky meal, grilling has been a favorite cooking method, one used in practically every cuisine. It is also become a bit more complicated.

You can still grill a weenie on a stick over an open fire, but such low-tech devices do not fan the flames of American commerce, which has come up with a myriad new barbecues, fuels and tools to spark consumers into replacing and updating their outdoor hearths.

This year Americans will light nearly 1.5 billion grills, an average of about six times per month, according to the Barbecue Industry Association, a trade group.

If your household does not have a grill, it is in the minority, because more than seven out of 10 American households own one, be it a tiny hibachi or a built-in behemoth.

Food and Wine magazine last year reported that grilling is one of America's favorite ways of entertaining, and it is showing no signs of becoming less popular, despite scientific reports of cancer-causing agents and other unhealthy stuff in barbecued foods.

So whether you are looking to join the grilling gang for the first time, or planning to upgrade your barbecue style, or just wondering how to get dispose of some income and enrich the coffers of what has become a $6.2 billion industry, there are plenty of products, useful and not so, to choose.

If you are in the market for a new grill, your first decision has to be what kind of fuel you want to use — charcoal, gas or electric — and explore the advantages and drawbacks of each kind of grill. (By the way, some food fanciers maintain that grilled food is cooked fast and directly over the coals, while barbecued food is cooked slowly and indirectly, with the heat source to one side. But for this article as well as for the average backyard chef, the words grilled and barbecued are interchangeable.)

Electric grills make up only about 1 percent of the market. They can be used indoors or outdoors, as long as there is good weather and a plug, and they are relatively portable and easy to use. They are usually not big and do not impart much smoky flavor to foods, but they are affordable, starting around $65.

Charcoal grills are by far the most popular, accounting for about 71 percent of the grills in use, according to the industry association. Whether you cook with a $15 brazier or a $150 lidded kettle, a custom-built fixed hearth or a homemade halved steel drum, such grills have the fuel — charcoal briquettes, hardwood charcoal or wood — as common denominator. They take the longest time to get hot enough for cooking, and they create the biggest mess with their ashes, but the fuel is cheap and available.

Gas grills are in about 28 percent of homes, but sales are growing faster than for charcoal grills, according to manufacturers. One reason may be that gas is cleaner than charcoal and easier to ignite. Doubtless another reason is that grill makers and retailers can make more profit on gas units. But a gas grill does not

Q. I have a very good friend who loves cooked potato skins because of its vitamins and roughage and fiber. Recently I heard that skins can cause headaches and nausea due to a group of toxins called glycoalkaloids. My friend says he eats cooked skins so they are safe. I don't think glycoalkaloids are killed by heat. Are the skins healthy or not. Is it a good way to get fiber? Mr. E.M., Greenville.

A. Thank you Mr. Miller for your letter. You may have missed the articles I wrote on Jan. 14 and Feb. 17 about potato skins. I had a lively disagreement with the Cornell researcher who told us we should not eat potato skins. She is firm in her belief that you take too many risks to your health by eating the skins. She feels that there are high risks that you will eat too many toxins, especially chaconine, in the potato skin and get nausea, vomiting and diarrhea. So, she tells people not to eat them. I feel her concern is not justified for most people. If you get side effects eating potato skins, don't eat them.

You are correct that glycoalkaloids are not destroyed with cooking. The research the Cornell researcher conducted was on a type of potato we do not grow (nor, to my knowledge, sell in North Carolina). It takes about 30 milligrams of glycoalkaloids before most people would feel sick. That would mean eating about 1 and 1/2 pounds of potato skins. Remember, we've already talked about the fact that many foods have "naturally occurring toxins" that if you eat too much at one time, will cause sickness, but these toxins don't tend to accumulate to cause later illness.

I would say that eating potato skins is a healthy practice although the skin does not provide much fiber. A medium potato without skin has about 1/2 gram of fiber; with the skin just .1 gram more. For most of us in eastern North Carolina, increasing our fiber intake would be desirable. The recommended dietary fiber intake is between 25 to 30 grams.

But, I also advise careful attention to food safety with all food. If there is a defect, remove it before eating. For example, if you see green parts on the potato skin (solanine), cut it off before cooking or eating.

I did agree with the researcher that people should know what's in their food. That way you can make choices. I don't think, though, we should scare people needlessly.

I hope you and others are enjoying fresh produce from your gardens or from the Pitt County Farmers Market. They are open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Friday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Fruits and vegetables are excellent sources of dietary fiber. And nothing beats the fresh "homegrown" flavors.

Dear Readers: I had a layover at RDU's new American terminal and went exploring the snack shops. A popcorn concession had a sign, "No Cholesterol." So what! Popcorn, or the way we have ever popped it, has never added cholesterol, although adding real butter might have added a tiny bit of cholesterol. No cholesterol signs really are not helpful — think twice. It's fat, especially saturated fat, we're on the lookout for!

Invite A Squash To Dine And Share The Table With 'The Apple Of God'

Considered "The Apple of God," by the Ancients, the name "squash" is a puzzle. In most of the indigenous tongues it translates literally to "uncooked thing" and yet the Indians indeed took the first varieties of it.

Squash are divided into two categories; the delicate green or golden summer varieties (cucurbita pepo), and the larger hard-shelled winter squashes (cucurbita maxima). Summer's sunshine and mild days yield the yellow Crookneck and Straight Necks; the Patty pan ("cymplings" in the South) or Scallop; and the newer Scallopini, a spruce-hued miniature which grows from one and-a-half to two inches in diameter. It is one of the darlings of the New American Cuisine's Zen-like platter presentations.

Winter squash has a tough exterior but a heart of gold. Hundreds of different kinds in all shapes and colors are grown in America's kitchen gardens. The most common ones offered by markets are: Acorn, Butternut, Hubbard, Banana, Spaghetti, the striped Turban, and of course the autumn Pumpkin.

The cook's handling of the two categories varies considerably. If planning a dinner for four, don't look for a large squash but rather four smaller ones. Handle gently at all times, wiping with a damp paper towel before preparing. Sauteeing or steaming are preferred cooking methods.

The winter squash fattens itself on the vine, growing sweeter with size. It keeps well too, as long as three to four months if stored in a dry, cool area. Also unlike their early season cousins, each of the hard-shelled varieties has a distinctive flavor lending itself to everything from hearty soups to spicy fall pies.

Invite a squash to dine, you'll be glad you did. And its versatility may surprise you. Herbed Squash Pie, for instance, provides a hearty quiche-like main dish. Condensed cream of chicken soup, cheese, sage, white pepper and butternut squash make this a flavorful egg dish.

In Savory Squash Casserole, acorn squash takes center stage, surrounded by apples and seasoned with bacon, onion and cinnamon in a condensed chicken broth sauce.

Another main dish, Creamy Squash and Pasta, features zucchini, onion, garlic and cumin atop macaroni in a Cheddar cheese sauce. Condensed Cheddar cheese soup cuts preparation time in this delicious main dish.

Grill Companies Offer Some Fancy Alternatives

Portable gas grills ideal for a small patio or for beach parties can be had for as little as $25, plus $2 to $3 for a tank of gas that lasts several hours. With larger grills — most cost between $125 and $300 — there is the bother of having to unhook the tank and fill it at a gas station or gas company outlet at a cost of $5 to $9. In the early 1970s, gas companies aggressively promoted sales of grills and hookups to their utility lines, but that generally ended with the energy crunch in the middle of that decade.

The biggest debate among barbecuers — besides, of course, which regional sauces and styles are best — is the gas vs. charcoal question. Charcoal enthusiasts are adamant that the smoke from burning carbon flavors food. Gas grillers insist that the great taste comes from vaporized fat and juices dripping on heated lava rocks (The rocks, which are heated by the burning gas below, provide the radiant heat that actually cooks food).

Now comes a new product from Char-Broil, the Georgia-based manufacturer of gas grills, that attempts to soothe both sides. Char-Broil is marketing a charcoal briquette for use in gas grills that burns slowly to provide the flavor of charcoal and then turns into a ceramic chunk, much like a lava rock, that can be removed or left alone as a permanent heat radiant. The briquettes are made of natural charcoal, clay and binders, said Ron Sack, the company's vice president for marketing. When all the charcoal has been burned out, the clay is cured into a ceramic and turns red and white, he said.

The secret of the briquettes is not to be disclosed, he added: "There's only a few people who know the formula."

The briquettes are being provided with all new Char-Broil grills or can be bought for about $5 for a 6-pound bag wherever the company's products are sold. It takes about a third of a bag to put a layer of briquettes in the average grill, and one load lasts about 10 hours, Sack said.

Another problem sometimes experienced with grills (gas more so than charcoal) is flare-up. Fats and juices drip from foods onto the coals or pitted lava rocks and burn. If not controlled, flare-up can char food and dry it out, and food scientists blame flare-up for the carcinogenic compounds in grilled foods that health experts warn against. Grill builders have worked diligently to devise grills and technical innovations to reduce flare-up.

One ingenious solution is the Vertikal Grill, a small portable grill designed in Sweden and marketed by a Southern California company, which cooks meats vertically. Phyllis Meyer of Posh Products explained that easy-lighting coals are piled in the central firebox that clips into the base of the unit. The food (chicken and fish are particularly good, Meyer said) is placed in two spring-loaded baskets, which stand vertically to either side of the firebox. Meats stay moist because juices flow through their length, not width, and flare-up is eliminated because fats and juices drip into the bottom pan, not onto the coals. The Vertikal Grill costs $50, is steady and ideal for small patios, boats and the beach, Meyer said. Next year Posh Products will introduce a similar gas grill.

Debuting next year will be Char-Broil's series of three "Flame Fighter" grills. Movable shutters under the cooking grid can be closed by the user when flare-up occurs, snuffing the flames, and then opened again. Sack said the mechanism "allows you to get back in control" of the cooking process and will eliminate the need to keep a spray bottle of water around, which is the usual method of dealing with flare-up. The "Flame Fighter" grills will retail for an estimated $189 and up, Sack said.

Weber claims that its Flavorizer System, with a patent pending, gives foods barbecued flavors without either lava rock or charcoal in its Genesis series of five grills and the portable Go-Anywhere gas tabletop grill. Porcelain-coated, angled steel bars in the heart of the cooking chamber catch the dripping fat and juice, which vaporize without flame and produce smoke to impart that taste. Any liquids that do not evaporate run off into a catch pan, and the company claims the Flavorizer bars are practically self-cleaning.

Long known for its trademarked kettle charcoal barbecues, Weber two years ago moved into the gas-grill business and plans to push its products vigorously, according to company spokesman Kara Tourville. Suggested retail costs of the Genesis series range from $350 to $600; the tabletop grill costs about $45. The top of the line Genesis model even has a separate range-type burner next to the grill for cooking sauces, side dishes and coffee.

Bridging the gap among gas, charcoal and electric grills are smokers, which still make up a tiny fraction of sales but are gaining ground with outdoor chefs desiring something different. Smokers are covered grills with features to evaporate a pan of water and burn fuel slowly, so that smoke and steam heat and permeate the food on the rack. Most smokers can be used to grill or roast foods as well as smoke them, and they may be fueled by gas, charcoal or electricity. Williams-Sonoma is selling the tabletop size electric Brinkmann Smoke 'N Grill for $125; larger gas smokers retail for up to $250.

Decide what cooking you will do and what features you desire before choosing a grill. Most people want it to have a lid, adjustable cooking grids, and removable pans to catch spent fuel. If the grill is stored outdoors, protect it with a plastic cover. Thermostats are niceties that do not always work well, but electric ignition on a gas grill is a big plus. When buying a gas grill, be sure to ask about delivery and assembly. Be careful when attaching the tank that you do not strip the screw threads or leave a loose connection. A solution of water and liquid detergent brushed over the connection between the tank and the grill will bubble if there is a gas leak.

If your budget or balcony will not accommodate a new grill this summer, you can still beef up your barbecues with new accessories and flavor ingredients.

Both charcoal and gas grillers can enjoy the smoky tastes of hickory, mesquite, oak and fruit and nut woods in foods, thanks to a plethora of companies that sell chunks and chips of those woods by the bag through mail-order, gourmet stores and discount stores.

Summer Fruit Plentiful Now

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

Fresh summer fruits are plentiful now, and I can't resist their bright colors and sweet fragrances. Here are tips on selecting and using two of my favorites: papayas and plums.

PAPAYAS

— A 1-pound papaya serves two, contains about 160 calories, and gives twice as much vitamin C and 2-3rds as much vitamin A as an adult needs.

— Look for blemish-free fruit that is turning from green to gold. A ripe papaya is lightly soft to the touch and mostly golden yellow.

— To ripen at home, leave at room temperature for a day or so. As soon as it is ripe, store in the refrigerator.

— For breakfast or a supersimple dessert, halve a papaya, scoop out the seeds, and serve with a wedge of lime to squeeze over it.

— Saute papaya chunks in margarine or butter just until heated. Dust with nutmeg and serve over pancakes or waffles. Sprinkle with brown sugar if desired.

PLUMS

— Each plum has about 33 calories.

— The season begins in late May for early varieties and lasts until early fall for later types. The varieties available vary from week to week.

— Look for plums that have good color for their variety, yield to gentle pressure, and are slightly soft at the tip.

Microwave Has Become An Everyday Appliance

By Minnie Bernardino
Washington Post-L.A. Times
News Service

It is the year 2001. You are driving on the maddeningly crowded freeway joining the morning rush. There was absolutely no time to cook and eat breakfast at home so you automatically had to grab a cassette-like packet of "heat and eat" bacon and eggs from your selection of instant breakfast meals.

Zap! You pull this packet from the little microwave oven built into your dashboard and voila — your hot meal is ready. Zap again! Your steaming cup of coffee comes out of the unit, all set to perk you up on this busy day. Vision impossible? No.

The Campbell Microwave Institute predicts that at about that time in the future, 25 percent of cars will have microwave units.

"The idea is not goofy," said Bill Pisceck, manager of marketing research for Campbell Soup Co., claiming that they have already received a call from a Ford representative who heard about their idea of putting a microwave in the glove compartment of a car.

The two-year old research institute also projected that around that future time period, microwave ovens will be found in eight out of 10 homes and will be the major driving force in the food-related marketplace.

"Years ago, you were known as a weirdo if you owned a microwave," Pisceck said. "Now you are a weirdo if you don't own one." The institute's latest study shows that microwave ownership is now 66 percent, up 10 percent in the past year. Pisceck disclosed that "there are about 60 million microwave ovens in today's kitchens, more than dishwashers or VCRs."

By 1990, 50 percent of all cooking will be done via microwave, he added. Advances in packaging technology have made possible a startling variety of "zappables." Just take a look at your grocer's shelves today. They are filled with a tidal wave of convenience food cartons that say "microwaveable." The gamut runs from frozen entrees and vegetables to shelf-stable cake mixes and frostings.

Last year alone, 284 microwave food products were introduced, according to Marketing Intelligence Service Ltd. A promise of double that amount in the next year or so would not be at all surprising.

The following recipes are geared especially for microwave ovens.

RATATOUILLE A LA ANNE

- 1 small eggplant, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 onion, sliced
- 3 cups combined red, yellow or green sweet peppers, sliced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 zucchini, sliced
- 4 tomatoes
- 1 teaspoon anise seeds
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 teaspoon dried basil or 2 tablespoons chopped fresh
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Pepper

In 3-quart microwave-safe casserole, combine eggplant, onion, sweet peppers, garlic and olive oil. Microwave uncovered at HIGH (100 percent power) until vegetables are tender, 8 to 10 minutes, stirring once or twice during cooking.

Add zucchini, tomatoes, anise seeds, bay leaf, basil, and salt and pepper to taste. Microwave covered at HIGH until zucchini slices are tender, 5 to 7 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Serve hot or cold. Serve hot with rice or cold in pita bread pockets. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

SHARP BARBECUE SAUCE

- 1 medium onion, chopped
  - 1 tablespoon oil
  - 1 cup beef broth
  - 1 (6-ounce) can tomato paste
  - 1-3 cup vinegar
  - 3 tablespoons brown sugar, packed
  - 3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
  - 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
  - 2 teaspoons salt
  - 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- Place onion and oil in medium bowl. Microwave at HIGH (100 percent power) until onion is tender, about 1 to 2 minutes. Blend in beef broth, tomato paste, vinegar, brown sugar, Worcestershire, mustard, salt and pepper.

Microwave at HIGH until bubbly, about 5 minutes. Reduce power to MEDIUM (50 percent power). Microwave until thickened, about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally during cooking. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS WITH HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

- 2 boneless, skinless chicken breasts, split (about 3/4 pound)
  - 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
  - 1 teaspoon minced shallot or onion
  - 1 (10-ounce) package frozen asparagus spears, thawed
  - 1/4 cup buttery cracker crumbs
  - 1-3 cup butter or margarine
  - 2 tablespoons lemon juice
  - 2 egg yolks
  - 1/8 teaspoon salt
  - 1/4 cup sliced almonds, toasted
- Cover chicken breasts with film wrap and pound lightly with meat mallet. Combine mustard and shallot. Spread evenly on inside of each chicken breast. Place 1/4 of asparagus spears on each mustard-coated side of chicken breast and roll up. Coat roll-ups with crumbs. Place seam side down, in 8-inch square glass baking dish. Cover with vented plastic wrap.

Microwave at HIGH (100 percent power) 6 to 7 minutes, or until chicken is tender. Let stand covered 3 minutes. For hollandaise sauce, place butter in 2-cup glass measure. Microwave at HIGH 45 to 60 seconds, or until melted. Whisk in lemon juice, egg yolks and salt. Microwave at MEDIUM HIGH (70 percent power) 45 to 60 seconds or until thickened, whisking every 15 seconds. Serve sauce immediately over chicken. Sprinkle with toasted almonds. Makes 4 servings.

Note: To toast almonds in microwave, place 1 teaspoon butter in 1-cup glass measure. Microwave at HIGH 15 to 30 seconds, or until melted. Stir in 1/4 cup sliced almonds. Microwave at HIGH 5 to 6 minutes, or until toasted. Stir every 30 seconds.

SUMMER VEGETABLE EGGSTRAVAGANZA

- 1 medium onion, thinly sliced
- 1 medium green pepper, cut into julienne strips
- 1 medium yellow pepper, cut into julienne strips
- 1 medium sweet red pepper, cut into julienne strips
- 2 medium tomatoes, cored, seeded and diced
- 1 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1 teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon ground red pepper

1 cup nonfat milk
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 teaspoons cornstarch
4 cups cooked Spaghetti Squash Strands (about 1 medium squash)
8 Poached Eggs

In 2-quart glass baking dish or glass measure, toss together onion and peppers. Cover with plastic wrap, turning back 1 corner to vent. Microwave on full power for 3 minutes or until vegetables are tender-crisp, stirring each minute. Stir in tomatoes, garlic salt, basil and red pepper. Microwave, uncovered, on full power 3 minutes or until thoroughly heated, stirring each minute. Cover and keep warm.

In 2-cup bowl or glass measure, combine milk, cheese and cornstarch. Microwave, uncovered, at HIGH (100 percent power) 4 minutes or until mixture thickens and boils, stirring each minute. For each serving spoon about 1/4 cup milk sauce over 1 cup hot spaghetti squash strands. Top with about 1 cup reserved vegetable mixture and 2 poached eggs. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

SPAGHETTI SQUASH STRANDS

1 medium spaghetti squash
Pierce squash with fork. Cook at HIGH (100 percent power) in microwave oven, turning occasionally until fork-tender, allowing 4 to 5 minutes per pound, or cook whole in steamer, or in boiling water to cover, about 20 to 30 minutes. Cool until comfortable to handle. Cut in half crosswise. Scoop out seeds and discard. With fork, pull across squash to loosen strands.

POACHED EGGS

Water
8 eggs
Heat 1 cup water to boiling in 1- to 1 1/2-quart microwave-proof casserole at HIGH (100 percent power). Break and slip 4 eggs into water. Gently pierce yolks with tip of knife or wood pick. Cover and cook on full power or HIGH, rotating each minute, until almost set, 2 to 3 minutes. Let stand 1 to 2 minutes, if necessary, to complete cooking to desired doneness. Lift out eggs with slotted spoon. Drain from spoon or on paper towels. Trim any rough edges, if desired. Repeat with additional 1 cup water and remaining eggs.
