Pitt Memorial Says Growth Forces Need For More Beds

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital needs more beds to meet a growing patient load and the demands of educational programs for doctors and other health-care professionals, a PCMH official said Thursday.

Without them, Dave McRae said, the delivery of health services in eastern North Carolina will suffer, and teaching and research opportunities will be limited.

McRae, vice president and chief operating officer at the hospital, spoke at a certificate-of-need hearing held in Greenville by the North Carolina Department of Human Resources' Division of Facilities Services. The hearing, called by the Certificate of Need Section of that office, was held to discuss the PCMH application for 143 new beds. The hospital has 565 beds.

Plans to renovate 100 beds and to expand ancillary services at the hospital also hinge on the granting of the certificate of need by the N.C. Department of Human Resources' division of facility services.

Hospital officials have estimated that an additional 600 employees would be needed at PCMH after the $50 million expansion and renovation project is completed.

The state's medical facilities plan says new beds will not be needed in Pitt County until 1992. But under the state plan, Pitt and three other academic medical-center teaching hospitals can be granted exemptions.

"This expansion," McRae told the hearing, "will allow Pitt Memorial to continue to serve community patients from Pitt County and tertiary patients ... from the 29-county region. In order to fulfill the mission of the hospital and the ECU School of Medicine, we request that this project be approved under the exemption."

Tertiary services include cardiology and cardiac surgery, cancer diagnosis and treatment, high-risk obstetrical and neonatal and pediatric intensive care, neurology and neurosurgery, rehabilitation, psychiatry and trauma.

Those at PCMH available to the residents of eastern North Carolina were developed using a partnership between Pitt Memorial and the East Carolina University School of Medicine, McRae said.

"Because of the lack of bed space," he said, "there are waiting lists for all these tertiary services."

"More than 60 percent of the patients admitted to Pitt Memorial come from outside Pitt County," McRae said during the hearing. "Most of these patients are referred for services unavailable at other hospitals (in eastern North Carolina)."

McRae also said Pitt Memorial is unique among the four academic medical center teaching hospitals because it serves as a regional referral center, and as a community hospital for more than 90,000 residents of Pitt County.

"During the past year, we have experienced many occasions when it has been necessary to postpone admissions, including delay of scheduled surgery, because no rooms were

U.S. Inspectors Hide 'Souvenirs'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three members of an Energy Department team taking part in a nuclear testing experiment in the Soviet Union engaged in "some unauthorized souvenir collection" there, the White House said today.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, however, said that based on information available so far to U.S. officials, "we don't believe it was intelligence activity of any kind."

"The individuals picked up and attempted to ship on for their personal use some rock samples, a piece of barbed wire, an Allen wrench and a hammer," Fitzwater told reporters at the White House.

"The individuals involved have been removed from the list of those who might return for the experiment," he said.

Fitzwater noted that the U.S. Energy Department team was in the Soviet Union under the auspices of an agreement, announced by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, for a joint verification experiment in the field of nuclear testing.

"We don't believe it was intelligence activity of any kind, but it was a personal mistake on their part," Fitzwater said, adding that "we have informed the Soviet Union of this, yes."

Fitzwater declined to divulge the names of the three people involved.

The materials were discovered by Soviets inspecting equipment crates being prepared for shipment back to the United States, said Deputy Press Secretary Roman Popadiuk.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Moscow had issued a formal diplomatic protest over the July 17 incident. But Fitzwater said there had been no formal exchanges.

A U.S. official told the newspaper that both the Soviet Union and the United States were trying to resolve the problem in a "low-key" manner.

McCorvey Serving 2-Day Term

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Former East Carolina University football player Lester Errol McCorvey, who was convicted Thursday of assault on a female, is serving a two-day sentence in the Pitt County Jail.

Calling McCorvey's conduct inexcusable, Superior Court Judge Charles B. Winberry of Rocky Mount gave McCorvey a two-year suspended sentence and ordered him to spend 48 hours in the county jail.

The sentence began Thursday at noon and McCorvey, 20, of Pensacola, Fla., is scheduled to be released Saturday at noon.

McCorvey was convicted of sexually assaulting Michelle Battle, 23, of Rocky Mount last February in a campus dormitory.

According to a statement from McCorvey that was introduced at the trial on Wednesday, he pretended to be someone else when he entered the dorm room and attempted to have intercourse with Miss Battle. She was at ECU visiting her boyfriend, Lewis Wilson, also an ECU football player, at the time.

The jury of seven men and five women — including an ECU faculty member, a legal secretary and a vice president of the Fountain of Life ministries — deliberated about an hour Thursday before returning a guilty verdict just before noon. McCorvey was held in the county jail until the sentencing hearing at 2 p.m.

"Mr. McCorvey, I believe that this verdict speaks the truth in this case," Winberry said before announcing the sentence. "The conduct on this occasion is inexcusable."

Winberry also placed McCorvey on supervised probation for three years and ordered him to pay a $200 fine, $239 to cover Miss Battle's medical bills, court costs and a probation-supervision fee. Once the fees are paid, Winberry said McCorvey may be placed on unsupervised probation, where he would not have to report to a probation officer.

Before receiving the sentence, McCorvey stood and addressed the court, apologizing to his family and Miss Battle and promising that he has learned from his error.

"And if I caused any harm to the young lady ... I'm sorry," said McCorvey, dressed in a dark suit, white shirt and tie. "I'll never put myself in a situation like this again."

His case reached Superior Court on appeal after he was convicted on the assault charge in District Court and sentenced to two years in prison.

Wilson and another ECU football player were also involved in the incident, but both were acquitted in District Court.

Both Chief District Attorney Nancy Aycock and defense attorney Milton T. Fitch Jr. of Wilson asked the judge for leniency in sentencing McCorvey, and both attorneys hinted that the other players involved should have shared in the guilt.

Ms. Aycock said the state was not asking for any jail time, "But he did need to be convicted and found guilty for what happened in Scott Dormitory (where the assault occurred)."

She also said she wished McCorvey had chosen to testify in the District Court trial and tell what he knew about the incident. If he had, Ms. Aycock said, there would have been a fairer outcome and the case may have never reached Superior Court.

None of the three defendants testified in District Court, but McCorvey took the stand Wednesday and his statements implicated both Ernest L. Pendleton, who was also charged with assault, and Wilson, who was charged with aiding and abetting the assaults.

"If anyone needed to be here, it was probably Lewis Wilson," said Fitch, who represented both McCorvey and Pendleton in District Court.

"(McCorvey) has lived 19 years with a clean record," Fitch said. "He has presented no discipline problems to anyone inside or outside the home. This was his first brush with the law ... and the last."

Fitch also presented Winberry with letters of support from Pamela A. Penland, assistant athletic director in charge of academic affairs, ECU head football coach Art Baker, and McCorvey's uncle, Woody McCorvey, an assistant football coach at Clemson University.

West's Salary Safe

Class Size Plan Won't Affect Pitt

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The General Assembly's decision to close the loophole in the organization of class sizes should not affect the Pitt County school system or the salary of Superintendent Eddie West, the associate superintendent of personnel said.

"The General Assembly's decision will not affect the Pitt County schools," Leck Keeter said. "The Basic Education Program will continue to help us to reduce class size, and we're giving (students) a much broader curriculum opportunity."

The legislature this year mandated class sizes for each grade, saying that if class sizes were larger than they should be, the state Board of Education could withhold state funds from the salary of the superintendent. The law says the board must decide that the superintendent has willfully failed to comply with the standards.

"We allot our teachers in kindergarten through nine on a 1 to 26 ratio," Keeter said. "Then, in 10, 11 and 12 we allot on a 1 to 30 ratio."

But, students don't come in packages, Keeter said.

"The state allows us to exceed 26 and 30 by three students. They do allow some flexibility of three students per class. We're really shooting to have below 26 if we possibly can."

The Basic Education Program — which requires that foreign language, theater arts, dance, visual arts, orchestra, physical education and earth science be offered to kindergarten through high school students — helps control class size

WCI Will Build Plant In Lenoir

RALEIGH (AP) — White Consolidated Industries has announced plans for a $75 million appliance facility in Lenoir County, and the General Assembly's agreement to provide $3.5 million to lure industry to the county was a contributing factor, officials say.

Some 850 people will be employed at the facility.

Gov. Jim Martin announced Thursday that the money for extending services to the plant site helped White Consolidated pick North Carolina over two competing states. Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, took some lawmakers by surprise this summer by seeking $4 million to help lure a company to the Kinston area. Hardison declined at the time to say which company was interested, drawing some complaints on the Appropriations Committee.

"A great many people have worked hard to make this project a reality," said Martin. "Local development officials in Kinston and Lenoir County, local legislators, as well as officials of our state Department of Commerce have all been involved in bringing WCI to eastern North Carolina."

Down It Goes

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The $3.1 million, 40,000-pound scoreboard at the new Charlotte Coliseum crashed to the floor and shattered as it was being lowered from its perch in preparation for tonight's inaugural basketball games, police said.

Charlotte police Maj. J.J. Kelly said there were no injuries in the 9 a.m. accident, which occurred after workers heard the 40-foot-wide scoreboard creak and groan.

Witnesses said the scoreboard made by the American Sign Co. was broken into pieces.

Kelly said there is a second floor under the wooden floor that was hit, and tonight's basketball games should go on as scheduled.

The U.S. women's Olympic team is set to meet the Cuban national team at 6 p.m., while the U.S. men's team meets a team of NBA players at 9 p.m.

Judge Says There Are Limits To Reason

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Thinking about filing a lawsuit? Hoping a judge might grant you a large sum of money for an injustice against you?

A recent ruling involving a suit against the city of Greenville indicates that you had better be sure you have plenty of legal ground to stand on — or you just might find yourself digging deep into your own pockets.

A District Court judge this week ordered a man who filed a false arrest suit against the city to pay Greenville $3,280 because the judge believed the suit was unreasonable after it reached a certain point.

The case originates from the 1984 arrest of Dwain Teel.

Court documents show that Teel, who often used the street name "Bobby Wiggins," was arrested by Greenville police who had a warrant issued for the arrest of "Bobby Wiggins, a/k/a Bob Wayne."

Police learned that Teel was not the Wiggins they were looking for, and dropped the charges four days later, the suit says.

Teel sued the city, saying his constitutional rights were violated.

The city went to court, being assured by its attorney it was protected.

"The law states that if it was a reasonable mistake, no such claim exists," said City Attorney Mac McCarley.

McCarley said at a certain point in the case, the city successfully showed the court that facts supported the proposition that no such claim existed.

Yet, McCarley said, Teel continued to pursue the matter. Earlier this week, Judge James C. Fox ruled the city to be awarded $3,280 in attorney's fees incurred after the court told Teel there was no longer any reasonable argument of law to support his case.

"The judge found the plaintiff's pursuit of the lawsuit after a certain point to be frivolous and groundless under rule 11 of the rules of civil procedure," McCarley said.

"The story is significant because a U.S. District Court was willing to award attorney's fees to a government defendant. What we're talking about here is a rarity," McCarley commented. "Normally attorney's fees are awarded just to plaintiffs."

McCarley said he was surprised by the judge's award.

"I don't know of any other government defendants who have been granted fee awards," he said.

"Part of what this does is send a message to both attorneys and potential plaintiffs that in the Eastern District of North Carolina, the court is not going to tolerate frivolous lawsuits."

Thefts Reported

Police said two thefts were reported to the Greenville department early today.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said a sign valued at $65 was taken from Professor O'Cool's on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 1:44 a.m., while Officer R.L. Vandiford said the hubcaps were removed from a car parked at the intersection of Farmville Boulevard and Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 3:31 a.m.

Royal Arrested

Allen Royal, 32, of 101 Kenwood Lane, was arrested by Greenville police late Thursday on peeping tom charges.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said Royal was charged in connection with an 11:40 p.m. incident at Eastbrook Apartments.

Nobles Arrested

Police arrested Felix Celton Nobles, 23, of 618 Hudson St. on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon about 3 a.m. today in connection with a shooting that was reported at 11:39 p.m. Thursday.

Officer N.B. Rice said Nobles was charged with shooting another man in the leg at the intersection of Atlantic and Albemarle avenues.

Smith Arrested

William Alton Smith Jr., was arrested on first degree burglary and common law robbery charges by Greenville police Thursday.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said Smith, 20, of 1604 Henry St., was charged in connection with an Aug. 8, incident at 800 Howell St. where a man entered the house, knocked a woman to the floor and took $115.

Scales Stolen

Greenville police said a set of scales valued at $2,000 was taken from the Eveready Battery Co. at the intersection of Evans Street and Greenville Boulevard Thursday.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said the theft was reported at 11:40 a.m.

Special-Use Permits

Two special-use permits were granted by the Greenville Board of Adjustment at a special call meeting Thursday in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

In the first case, the board granted a special use permit to Morco Realty, A.J. Speight and Archie L. Edwards to place up to nine mobile homes in Walnut Ridge Estates north of SR 1421, directly across from the Greenville Utilities Water Treatment Plant. The property is zoned RA-20 (residential/agricultural).
The board also granted a special-

A public hearing was held regarding both matters.

Kristi Overton Day

Greenville Mayor Edward Carter and members of the City Council have proclaimed today "Kristi Overton Day" in the city.

Ms. Overton, has won numerous awards in water skiing and was named the recipient of the 1987 High School Scholastic Athlete of the Year award by the Dial Corporation.

She was given a city plaque of recognition Thursday by Carter at the City Council meeting.

"The elected officials of the city of Greenville are proud to have the honor to recognize Kristi Overton because she has become a community ambassador by promoting Greenville and this area through her state, national and international travels," Carter said.

"I would like to commend you on the efforts that you have put forth," he told her. "We are extremely proud of you."

Survey Planned

As many as 100 eastern North Carolina well owners will have a chance to have free confidential testing of their wells for pesticides.

The N.C. Board of Science and Technology has given a grant to UNC-Asheville researchers Richard Maas, Debra Van Engelen and Steven Patch to survey for the presence of agricultural pesticides in well water.

The study will focus on the Coastal Plain and the Mountains, which Maas says are especially vulnerable to pesticide well-water contamination.

The Coastal Plain study will focus on a search for the pesticide aldicarb, marketed under the brand name Temik. The highly toxic chemical is used extensively in this part of the state and has proven ability to leach into groundwater when applied to sandy soils. It has contaminated groundwater in other states where it has been used heavily.

For a well owner to participate in the study, aldicarb must have been used within 400 yards of his well during the past year. Results will be confidential.

For information, contact Dr. Richard Maas, Environmental Studies Program, UNC-Asheville, Asheville, NC 28804 or phone 704-251-6441 (days) 704-645-4798 (nights).

Doctors Join Medical Faculty

ECU News Bureau

Two assistant professors have joined the East Carolina University School of Medicine cardiology faculty.

Dr. Jose A. Caceres will specialize in cardiac electrophysiology, techniques which allow physicians to analyze and diagnose potential and known heartbeat irregularities in patients. Electrophysiology helps doctors identify safe and effective drug, surgical or device-based therapy for such patients.

Before his ECU appointment, he was clinical instructor of medicine and cardiac electrophysiology at the University of Wisconsin and Sinai Samaritan Medical Center in Milwaukee.

Caceres received his medical degree from the National University of Trujillo in Peru, where he also completed his undergraduate education. After an internship at the university's affiliated hospitals, he entered an internal medicine residency at Saint Francis Medical Center and the University of Illinois in Peoria. He furthered his medical training through fellowships in clinical cardiology and cardiac electrophysiology at the Jewish Hospital of St. Louis and Washington University Medical Center and at the University of Wisconsin and Mt. Sinai Medical Center in Milwaukee.

DALYNN T. BADENHOP

Dr. Dalynn T. Badenhop will direct the newly established cardiac rehabilitation program at ECU and Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The program is designed to help patients with recovery from heart attacks, heart surgery or various disabilities associated with cardiovascular disease. Patients will also be shown how to change their lifestyles to avoid further attacks and complications. Before his ECU appointment,

JOSE A. CACERES

Badenhop directed the cardiac rehabilitation program at Charlotte Memorial Hospital for four years.

His experience in developing and directing programs similar to ECU's includes work at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, where he directed the adult fitness and cardiac rehabilitation program and the exercise physiology laboratory. Before that, he was cardiac rehabilitation and cardiovascular physiology consultant at Georgia Baptist Medical Center in Atlanta. He has also directed adult fitness programs at Georgia Institute of Technology and The Ohio State University.

The Archbold, Ohio, native is a graduate of Ohio State University, where he received a doctorate degree in exercise physiology. He also holds master's and bachelor's degrees from Bowling Green State University.

He is a certified exercise program director and a fellow in the American College of Sports Medicine. He has written extensively on geriatric exercise, corporate health enhancement programs and the effects of at-home exercise on patients who have undergone open-heart surgery.

City Council Creates Panel To Preserve Historic Areas

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council approved Thursday the establishment of a Historic Properties-District Commission for the city at its meeting at City Hall.

The city's department of development will prepare an ordinance specifying the commission's responsibilities of promoting historic preservation for certain structures and neighborhoods.

The ordinance will be reviewed by the Planning and Zoning Commission for recommendation and submitted to the council for adoption.

Council members Lorraine Shinn and Nancy Jenkins voted against the establishment of the commission.

Mrs. Jenkins said although she is in favor of a forming a historical commission, she is concerned about a commission which would be responsible for recommending designation of entire historic districts.

She said she is worried about constraints property owners might face if their residence is situated in a historically designated neighborhood.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended June 21 that the council set up a 15-member Historical Properties-District Commission with authority to make recommendations directly to the council.

The planning commission also recommended the commission have a separate budget or a separate line item within the development department's budget.

Currently the city has a seven-member Historic Properties Selection Committee which operates under the direction of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission. Funding for that committee's efforts is allocated by the department of development.

The Historic Properties Selection Committee has selected 11 properties for historical designation over the last two years, said Harry Hamilton, city planner.

Five of those properties have been designated as historical through city ordinance, while the other six will be considered later by the council.

Historic designation permits a percentage property tax deferral and grants particular time periods before a structure's demolition can occur.

In other business at Thursday night's meeting, the council approved a request by Nancy Brown Harris to rezone a .48-acre tract on the northwest corner of 10th and Washington Streets from IU (unoffensive industry) to CDF (commercial downtown fringe). The proposal had no opposition at its public hearing.

Also approved was a grant application to be submitted to the N.C. Housing Finance Agency. The application calls for rehabilitating 13 substandard units in West Greenville and East Meadowbrook. Awards of $75,000 are being offered, with $3,750 being incorporated for administrative costs.

Under the program, the investor-owner will be expected to contribute half of the rehabilitation cost and receive a deferred loan for the other 50 percent. The maximum deferred loans available are $5,000 for an efficiency unit, $6,500 for a one-bedroom unit, $7,500 for a two-bedroom unit and $8,500 for a three or more bedroom unit.

At least 70 percent of the grant must be used to benefit low-income tenants.

Meanwhile, the council approved a bid of $39,315 to buy winter and summer police uniforms for 1988-89.

The council also approved the sale of the Disposal Parcel K-4 in the Southside Redevelopment Project for $2,000, and in the South Evans Community Development Project, Disposal Parcels 42-F-2A for $3,000, and 42-H-1A for $5,700; and approved an amendment to the city budget authorizing $20,898 to buy spare engines for the GREAT Bus System; 90 percent of the money will be reimbursed by a state grant.

In other action, the council appointed Dr. Lucy Jones and Dr. Bill Troutman to the Public Transportation Commission. Mavis L. Brown and Sylvia Wheelless were appointed one-year terms to the Community Appearance Commission, while Betty B. Fuqua and Cecil Jay Hardee were appointed two-year terms. Adrian Charles Snyder and Vickie Ogden were named to three-year terms.

The council also unanimously adopted the close-out of Community Development Block Grant 83-C-6635. No one spoke at a public hearing on the matter.

The program has provided a total of $1,169,466.50 of improvements in the South Evans Community. The final performance report detailing the accomplishments of the program has been approved by the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

A copy of the performance report may be reviewed in the Department of Development or the City Clerk's office. Copies are also available at Sheppard Memorial Library and its branches.

A request to establish a veteran's memorial at the Town Commons and renaming the commons "Veteran's Memorial Park" was referred to the Parks and Recreation Department.

Service contracts to various organizations were approved for the following amounts: $1,500 to the Greenville Jaycees; $11,500 to the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce; $2,000 to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council; $2,000 to the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show; $40,000 to Evergreen of Greenville Inc., and $8,000 to the Greenville Museum of Art.

Consent Agenda items approved Thursday include the release of $174.78 in taxes; changing the by-laws of the Sheppard Memorial Library eliminating specified meeting times for the library's board of trustees; placing a section of Kingsbrook Road under permanent city maintenance; an ordinance to establish a controlled residential-parking zone on the west side of South Library Street from East Fourth Street to east Fifth Street; establishing a no parking zone on the north side of East Fifth Street from Hickory Street and extending 90 feet east, and the establishment of five new stop signs.

PCMH Will Need 143 Beds

available," McRae said. "Patients who are referred to Pitt Memorial for urgent, specialized care, must take precedence over the less critical community patients."

"This situation causes great inconvenience to patients who consider Pitt Memorial their community hospital."

McRae said PCMH has a unique, three-fold mission to provide patient care, education and research.

"Each year 1,000 students receive valuable clinical experience at Pitt Memorial," he said. "The lack of sufficient beds, the inadequacy of educational space near the bedside and the overcrowding of virtually all space for support services have combined to delay — and in some cases block — plans for the East Carolina University School of Medicine to increase its entering medical student class size from 72 students to 80 and to expand its residency programs.

"Our facilities must be updated so teaching and research can be expanded," McRae told the hearing.

Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor for health sciences and dean of the medical school at ECU, said the request for expansion are consistent with the growth needs.

"I submit that Pitt County Memorial Hospital is an appropriately classified academic medical center teaching hospital and, as such, is entitled for consideration under the exemption policy," Laupus said.

"The particular needs in this application are ... for the specific purpose of providing the clinical environment to meet the requirements for education, research and concomitant tertiary care necessary to and for the education and training of health professionals..."

"In my judgment," Laupus said, "the granting of this certificate of need will have little or no effect on the overall ability of other hospitals operating in the same health service area."

While a number of area doctors, students, and other health-care professionals endorsed the project, two speakers were opposed.

"We need health care spread through eastern North Carolina and not just Greenville," said Dr. Robert N. Agee of Williamston.

Agee, who said he supports additional beds to provide more sophisticated treatment, said competition from private physicians in Greenville concerns him.

"We need support, help, from Pitt's physicians," he said. "We need more outreach into the communities, (more) support."

Earl Bassett, chief financial officer for two clinics in Wilson, said Wilson physicians "need the tertiary care available here."

But Bassette said he believed the PCHM request for more beds is not related to academics. Instead, he said, he thinks the application represents a call for more beds for Pitt County doctors in private practice.

A human resources spokesman said a decision of the certificate of need would probably be made by the last of October.

And PCMH officials said if the certificate of need is forthcoming, it will take a year to design the additions and renovations and the project would not be completed before late 1992 or 1993.

Censorship

DURHAM (AP) — Censorship challenges of North Carolina's libraries have increased over the past year, the chairman of a N.C. Library Association committee says.

But librarians are countering with a "censorship hotline" and the establishment of more standardized review procedures to help handle the wave of complaints.

"Since this time last year, I'd say we've had about a 50 percent increase in overall attacks on all libraries," said Gene Lanier, the chairman of the association's Intellectual Freedom Committee. "Most of our complaints, however, have been in primary and secondary schools and public libraries."

Bureau Seeks OK To Put Up Signs

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The executive director of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority has contacted a division engineer for the state Department of Transportation, asking for permission to erect informational signs along state-owned right of way.

The authority has been working with county planner Jeff Ulma to find a way to put up directional signs for food and lodging that do not conflict with the county's sign ordinance, director Al Nichols said at the authority's meeting Thursday night.

The ordinance bans all billboards from county highways, and if the authority is to erect signs small enough to meet the requirements, they must be placed within the state's right of way in order to be readable.

The authority is concerned that motorists coming to Greenville and following signs for the bypass are being directed away from hotel facilities along Greenville Boulevard. The new signs direct motorists to the new stretch of U.S. 264 running past Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"When travelers come into Greenville by that route, there is no effective directional signs to let them know where lodging facilities are located, and a large percentage of motorists passing through will turn left, away from our hotel facilities," Nichols said.

"The problem is that left turn takes travelers away from our community's lodging facilities," Nichols wrote in his letter to G.R. Shirley, DOT division engineer in Greenville.

"Thus, travelers with a Greenville destination have difficulty locating their hotels," Nichols said, "and travelers who are passing through Greenville but could stay overnight in one of our hotels pass around us and stay in another hotel in another town down the road."

Under the authority's proposal, the first sign would be placed at the intersection of U.S. 264 and SR 1210 at Branchridge Estates. The sign would indicate there is information three miles ahead concerning food, gas and lodging.

The second sign would be placed at the intersection of Allen Road, SR 1203, and indicate information is just ahead.

The third sign, just before Memorial Drive, would direct motorists to turn left for food and gas, and right for lodging, food and gas. No business logos would appear on the signs.

Authority member Art Thompson, manager of the Hilton Inn on Greenville Boulevard, has been working closely with Nichols to develop the proposal. Area hotels and motels would pay for the signs, he said.

The authority initially wanted to erect informational signs with logos of businesses like the signs on interstate highways, but the DOT officials said those signs are erected only on interstates. Thompson said at Thursday's meeting that logos are no longer feasible.

Now, the authority has presented the state DOT with its own proposal. In previous meetings, the authority has discussed asking the state to construct the signs and area hotels and motels would pay the cost and maintenance.

But since the signs would be placed on the state's right of way, the authority needs permission from the DOT.

Nichols' letter states that Ulma does not feel the informational signs will conflict with the county's ordinance banning billboards.

Schools

because it reduces the amount of time students spend with their regular classroom teachers, Keeter said.

For example, in a middle school there would be a physical education teacher, a vocational teacher, a music teacher, an art teacher, a band instructor and others involved in teaching the children, he said.

"Every time you put another teacher in the school, if they've got the students, it reduces size for the regular classroom teacher."

The county's high school and middle school ratio is more like 1 teacher to 18 students, Keeter said. "The lower grades are a little higher because you don't have all of the support people."

The ratio in those grades is about 1 teacher to 22 students.

"We're in compliance in two ways," Keeter said. "We're in the class-size and the teacher daily-load compliance."

The statute also says that teachers in grades seven through 12 cannot be assigned more than 150 students to teach each day. Schools once were allowed to exceed that number by 10 percent.

Some classes, such as band, music and physical education, allow for teaching more in students in a day, Keeter said.

"Last year when we filled out our class-size report, I think we had maybe three classes that had maybe 30 students in them," he said. "We corrected that, and all classes from that first report had been corrected before the second report."

School systems must notify the state Board of Education when they go over the limits to request teacher allotment adjustments or waivers from the standards, Keeter said.

College Audit

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A state audit of Winston-Salem State University that was released Thursday revealed some problems with accounting procedures but gives the school a positive evaluation overall.

The state lists discrepancies in some accounts and notes the lateness of reports for fiscal years 1986 and 1987. But it also says that no money has been lost or intentionally used improperly.

Lightning Death

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A 42-year-old migrant worker was struck and killed by lightning Thursday afternoon in a tobacco field in southeastern Forsyth County, authorities said.

Gelacio Aquilos Mejia of Kernersville was struck about 5 p.m. in a field about seven miles north of the Davidson County line, said John A. Baker, a paramedic with the Forsyth County Emergency Medical Service.

Mejia was dead when the Forsyth County EMS arrived at the field about 5:10 p.m., Baker said.

Several other migrant workers, who were also working in the field when the lightning struck, were not injured.

"Mr. Jones has proved to be a hard-working, dedicated employee of this city and he will surely be missed by all," Carter said.

Alumni To Meet

The Pitt County Chapter of St. Augustine's College Alumni Association will meet on Sunday at 6 p.m. at the Eppes Gym.

Banquet Planned

A banquet honoring former Greenville residents Ernest Brown and his family will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday at Phillip Church of Christ, 1610 Farmville Blvd.

Gladys Graves, past president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, is keynote speaker.

Brown, a Charlotte resident, was a spokesman for the Concerned Citizens for Justice, a member of the Greenville Board of Education, and was active in the NAACP, the SCLC, the Pitt County chapter of the North Carolina Central University Alumni Association and the Scottish Rite Masonic Order while living in Greenville. He was a co-founder of the Pasco-Norfleet American Legion Post 160.

Tickets for the banquet are available at Scott's Cleaners No. 2 on W. Fifth Street. For information, call 355-2497.

A social hour before the banquet begins at 5:30 p.m. at the Lake Ellsworth Clubhouse.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Surprise Move

Strong Action In Election Year

The Federal Reserve Board may or may not have struck a blow against inflation, but it has surprised some people in an election year.

An increase in the federal key bank lending rate just three months before a presidential election is a dramatic signal the board, all appointed by President Reagan, is troubled enough by inflation to risk Vice President George Bush's presidential aspirations.

The move could also be an indication the nation's economy isn't as healthy as Republicans would like voters to believe.

Raising the discount rate, in theory, is a valid means of curbing inflation because it increases the cost of borrowing money. Forcing consumers to pay higher interest on loans can slow debt, which fuels inflation. And raising the fee the Federal Reserve charges for short-term loans to member banks by one-half a percent is the central bank's most direct way of pushing interest rates higher as a curb on economic growth.

But fighting inflation through tightened credit can have economic drawbacks. The last increase came in September 1987 and contributed heavily to the October 1987 stock crash. And both stock and bond markets fell after the increase was announced. Although the initial impact was moderate, the repercussions from another stock market collapse could be worse than the effects of inflation.

For consumers, the rise in interest rates will be a mixed bag. Those with home equity loans and adjustable rate mortgages, which are tied to rate fluctuations, will feel the impact immediately. In addition, new borrowers will find it less affordable to secure loans.

That's bad news for potential homebuyers and purchasers of high-ticket items like automobiles. It's also a bad omen for the building and the real estate industry, two segments of the economy that could find themselves stymied by higher interest.

But if the move does indeed head off inflation, consumers will ultimately benefit from the frugality forced upon them.

Adjustments like the rise in the key lending rate are necessary actions in a diverse economy. Such a direct statement is a shock, however, from a Republican-appointed reserve board in an election year when the party will have a tough road to re-election.

Dry Times

Water Is Precious Commodity

Ocracoke Island, surrounded by water, has a water problem.

The fresh water system on the island was turned off for as long as 14 hours a day over a period of three days this week.

Greenville had a similar problem. Its water supply was interrupted for some customers Wednesday when a 12-inch water line burst north of the Tar River. Fortunately for the city, repairs were made overnight and alternate mains continued to serve most of its customers.

On Ocracoke it is different. The water around it is not potable and the pump problems caused trouble for those who live on the island, restaurants, motels and, this time of the year, the all-important visitors to the island.

The complaints were loud from restaurant and motel owners whose customers were inconvenienced or left because of the water crisis. State officials were drawn into the situation because of the possibility that a protracted water shortage could cause health problems.

At any rate, both situations made the point of just how essential fresh water supplies are to any community. The predicaments also demonstrate how important careful utilization of water is. Do communities need all the water they use? And can supply keep up with demand?

Farm families once used water from shallow wells or artesian wells. Now such water is not considered safe for drinking unless it is carefully monitored.

Thus cities, rural areas and even coastal islands are coming to depend on water treatment systems which provide the water by pipes and mains. Any disruption of service can quickly prove disastrous to the customers the system serves.

Greenville had a threatening situation and Ocracoke Island was severely affected by its water problem. It tells us that good water systems must be constructed and maintained to meet today's public needs and that the groundwater and rivers which feed these systems must be protected from environmental threats. The water troubles also underscore the need for conservation and thrift where natural resources are concerned.

Insurance Not A Civil Right

WASHINGTON — It sometimes seems that accident insurance covers only improbable eventualities. You get arguments from the insurance company about fender-benders but, as a wit has said, indemnity is instantaneous if your ox kicks a hole in your neighbor's Maserati.

However, health insurance covers many "volitional illnesses," damage people do to themselves by behavior they should know is harmful. Now the Circle K Corporation, the second largest chain of convenience stores, wants to do something about that.

Circle K, which operates 4,097 stores in 27 states, notified approximately 8,000 of its employees that health-insurance benefits will be denied to employees who require care because of ailments resulting from certain "personal lifestyle decisions." Circle K specifies drug and alcohol abuse, self-inflicted wounds and AIDS proven not to have been contracted from blood transfusions.

The purpose of insurance is to socialize risk. This can be done over an entire society by means of government programs. (A conservative, Bismarck, pioneered such plans in the 1880s, providing workers with sickness, accident, disability and old-age insurance.) Or insurance can be devised for a voluntary community of people contracting with a private company. In either case, insurance presupposes some consensus about which of life's risks deserve to be socialized. Many diseases and other misfortunes are covered by today's consensus.

However, the consensus is becoming frayed because of increasing knowledge about the behavioral causes of many ailments. Such knowledge is constantly and often effectively disseminated by public and private agencies. The public's responsiveness to the information is attested by such changes as increased automobile safety-belt use, decreased smoking and changed eating habits concerning, for example, cholesterol. So there is a moral as well as financial reason for refusing to socialize the cost of risky behavior that is, in the face of so much information, clearly willful.

Few would argue that someone whose hobby is Russian roulette has a right, let alone a "civil right," to insurance against the risk. Circle K is saying, correctly, that certain illnesses more closely resemble injuries resulting from Russian roulette than illnesses deriving from the unavoidable lottery of life — illnesses unrelated to risky habits.

There has been insurance for almost as long as there has been commerce. Merchants with property to lose from fire or maritime disaster have paid others to share their risks. However, as historian Daniel Boorstin notes, insurance first became a democratic product when Americans began insuring against something that is not a risk but a certainty: death. Like much of modern America, the growth of the insurance industry was accelerated by the Civil War, which put death on men's minds and caused the business of New York insurance companies to double between 1861 and 1862.

In an extensive nation of highly mobile citizens who could not rely on community care of widows and orphans, insurance became, as Boorstin says, a substitute for family, neighborhood, community. But as Circle K's action attests, insurance draws us into particular communities with a stake in other people's behavior.

Today, insurance is a large item in the average family's budget — larger than most people imagine. The cost of auto-workers' health insurance adds $250 to the cost of an average car. Employees' health insurance is part of the cost of operating, and hence of shopping at, convenience stores.

Circle K is acting on this fact: A huge component of the nation's soaring, staggering medical bill derives from behavior clearly identified as risky. Such behavior includes smoking, drinking excessively, exercising too little, eating unwisely, abusing drugs, driving recklessly.

Because AIDS is on the list of non-covered ailments, some homosexual groups have denounced Circle K for violating "civil rights." But that debased phrase is today a classification that barely classifies. Civil rights, properly understood, are those central to civic life. They do not include the right to insurance coverage for all of one's behaviorally based ailments.

However, Circle K and companies that emulate it can minimize "civil rights" issues by broadening the category of uninsurable behavior. As Boorstin says, modern technologies of work, transportation and play have multiplied insurable risks: Plate glass, gas lines, electrical wiring, water pipes in houses, automobiles, boats, skis, snowmobiles — an affluent nation lives with many more health hazards than just rich saucers.

Circle K should include in its uninsured category injuries sustained in an automobile while not using safety belts, and injuries from certain hazardous recreations, such as sky diving.

However, let us not go too far. For the sake of the Circle K Corp., as well as those of us who buy the snack foods that convenience stores sell in vast quantities, we should stop short of linking insurance to diets that are severely sensible.

Racism Could Cost Japan

WASHINGTON — Robert Christopher isn't surprised by the latest anti-black insults from Japan: the Sambo manikins in department-store windows; the hot-selling black caricatures — all of it coming after a government official's comments about black irresponsibility and while anti-Semitic books remain on Japanese best-seller lists.

"They really are racists," you know. Christopher is no anti-Japanese bigot. He knows Japan better than most Americans ever will. He was there on the day World War II ended, and he has been back more times than he can count since then. Even Japanese who have read his book, "The Japanese Mind" (Linden Press, 1983), say he has captured the character and the culture of Japan.

"Their racism extends not just to blacks but to any non-Japanese," he says. "They don't grasp the fact that, to Americans, their attitude violates the very principles on which our country was founded. Of course there are plenty who do — certainly those who have spent much time in the States. But the great majority don't."

"Homogeneity is as central to their identity as ethnic diversity is to ours." Christopher's explanation won't make black Americans feel any better. Indeed, it may make some of us more anxious — and vengeance-minded, as the Japanese assume an increasingly important role in the world economy. He was simply trying to respond, as honestly and as dispassionately as he could, to my questions.

He believes that is the key reason postwar Japan was able to turn — virtually overnight — from its imperial past to Western-style capitalist democracy.

"They were astounded at the way they were treated by the country that defeated them," he recalled. "I was in Yokohama when the war ended, and there were no women to be seen in the city. They had all fled on the expectation of American ruthlessness. They thought the women would be raped and the population brutalized. They were in awe of us when we set about helping them to rebuild their country."

"So instead of hating America, they set about imitating us. They took the fact that we had beaten them as a demonstration that our system was better than theirs, so they adopted our system to a very remarkable degree. "That's one of the things that Westerners find hard to understand. There are certain concepts and attitudes that are inherently un-American. But there is nothing that is inherently un-Japanese; all they require is consensus."

Just as the Japanese accepted the superiority of postwar American products — and set about copying (and modifying) them, they also accepted the superiority of the American political and economic system and set about copying that, modifying it only to the extent that, given their tribal attitude, they are "culturally incapable of embracing American individualism."

If the Japanese found stark differences between their system and America's, they also found one key similarity: Some elements of the society are outside the family. For Americans, it is the non-European minorities; for the Japanese, it is ethnic foreigners — for instance, Koreans, no matter that they have lived in Japan for generations.

What they missed is the fact that ethnic discrimination in America is a source of shame and embarrassment, whereas the Japanese take it as an unremarkable fact of life.

"It might occur to them that their anti-black attitude might spark resentment among blacks, but it would never occur to them that white Americans might resent it too," Christopher said. Maybe, he suggested, they see their anti-black attitude as just another instance of mimicking America.

But if Christopher (who is administrator of the Pulitzer Prizes at Columbia University) understands the "Japanese mind," he doesn't condone their racism.

Whatever their history of racism, he said, he is still "surprised that anybody in a high government position would not be smart enough — particularly after former Prime Minister Nakasone's gaffe about black intelligence — to know that they would get in trouble."

Nor is it enough simply to apologize after each embarrassing gaffe. "If they expect to continue functioning as a world economic power, they have got to knock off their incredible xenophobia," Christopher believes.

He's right. Japan, already a major trader with America, where blacks spend millions of dollars on Japanese automobiles, cameras and electronic products, recently surpassed America as the world's leading trader with South Africa, whose black majority also favors Japanese goods.

Japan's continued racism could threaten those markets. For my money, it already has.

Navy Steps Up Beach Trash Hunt

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The 30 bags of trash which washed up on North Carolina's beaches apparently have not put a damper on the tourist trade, and curious onlookers have been lending a hand to seamen and Marines as they pick up the garbage.

"They've been stopping us and thanking us for our efforts," said Lt. Cmdr. John Lloyd, spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet, based in Norfolk, Va. People are collecting trash and asking if it's Navy debris, he said.

About 90 Marines and sailors will continue to search Bogue Banks beaches today for medical waste and other trash that has been washing ashore since Saturday after being dumped by Navy ships.

On Thursday, 40 sailors from Norfolk joined Marines from Camp Lejeune who have been on beach-trash patrol from Atlantic Beach to Emerald Isle since late Wednesday. The original 26-mile search of the area from Fort Macon to Emerald Isle was widened Thursday to include Shackleford Banks, which is owned by the National Park Service. A cleanup team will also be sent Shackleford Banks, a remote undeveloped island in the Cape Lookout National Seashore, to pick up debris there.

Helicopters flew over the area searching for debris in the ocean.

Two bags of trash were collected Thursday. Thirty bags of Navy debris have been picked up off North Carolina shores, but less than a bag of that was medical waste, Lloyd said.

"It's definitely less than one bag," he said. "It's a very, very small amount."

Only two of the eight or nine syringes that washed ashore still carried needles, according to Steven L. Gibson, the civilian director of environmental and safety programs for the naval base in Norfolk. The rest had been clipped off, in compliance with Navy regulations.

Most of the debris is discarded clothing, rags and empty toiletry containers such as shampoo bottles, Lloyd said. "That's what we're finding in what we believe are the Navy bags."

Dr. Ronald Levine, the state health director, said waste was not considered toxic under federal or state laws.

The sailors and Marines also are picking up garbage left behind by others who use the beach, he said. They're out there "so why not pick up what they see," Lloyd said. That garbage is not included in the 30-bag count, he said.

Under Navy regulations, ships can dump biodegradable garbage such as potato peels 12 miles from shore. Trash, such as paper and cloth, can be dumped at 25 miles. Bilge water and oily waste can be dumped at 50 miles out.

Naval authorities say Navy regulations prohibit disposing of certain debris found this week: drugs, blood, syringes with needles and syringes not crushed or broken. Spokeswoman Lt. Barbara Kent in Washington refused to say whether regulations were violated. Authorities said the investigation would take a month.

But a naval spokesman, who refused to be identified, told The Charlotte Observer Thursday: "There were some violations."

Steve Reid, a spokesman for the state's Solid Waste Management Section, said debris doesn't usually come ashore along the North Carolina coast because the prevailing offshore currents move from south to north, then out to sea.

"We really don't know how it washed ashore," Lloyd said. "And that's what we're trying to find out."

Martin Says No Action Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin congratulated the Navy for its "prompt, cooperative response" in cleaning up debris from two of its vessels of the North Carolina coast, and said he saw no reason for legal action.

"Even beyond confession, the contrite heart has led them as a further step to dispatch about 48 Marines from Camp Lejeune yesterday," Martin said at his news conference Thursday. "They are being joined by representatives of the United States Navy who will continue that clean-up operation today."

Martin said legal action did not appear to be necessary.

"We know they were not within the three-mile limit where states have jurisdiction because they don't come in that far," Martin said. "... Based on the cooperation we've had so far, there is no basis for an action."

"You could probably cause that (cooperation) to degenerate by creating an armed camp and assaulting the U.S. Navy."

But Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said earlier Thursday he would not hesitate to take the Navy to court if problems continue.

"If we saw ... a pattern developing there would be no question but that we would go into federal court immediately to seek some relief," he said.

White House Opposes Lumbee Recognition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charlie Rose says an official recognition for the Lumbee Indian tribe is a matter of pride, but a Reagan administration official says the designation would cost the federal government up to $100 million a year, and urged that the recognition be denied.

The Interior Department's assistant secretary for Indian affairs, Ross O. Swimmer, urged the House Interior Committee on Thursday to reject the legislation sponsored by Rose and let the application process run its course.

Swimmer said the recognition could lead to unwarranted dependence on the federal government.

Official recognition of the Lumbees could cost the federal government up to $100 million a year in services that include subsidized health care, land management and education, he said.

Swimmer said the government eventually might grant some form of recognition to the Lumbees, who are concentrated in Robeson County. But he said he would prefer a federal relationship that is "a little different from the dependent, ward relationship" that has developed with some officially recognized tribes that are heavily subsidized by the government.

Swimmer praised the Lumbees as self-sufficient people who "don't need this kind of dependency."

But Rose, a Democrat from Fayetteville, said the effort to achieve official federal recognition was "a matter of pride for those individuals who cherish their heritage as Lumbee Indians. I feel I have demonstrated the need to circumvent what many will agree is an ineffective administrative process (to obtain federal recognition) in this case."

About three dozen Lumbees attended the hearing before the House

Interior Committee. A similar hearing is planned for Friday before the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs. The panels are considering identical bills that would grant federal recognition to the Lumbees, bypassing an application to the Interior Department that could take years to be decided.

Rose noted that his bill does not require spending federal money on the Lumbees until Congress makes a separate appropriation. If his bill is enacted, he said, he would urge the Lumbees and the government to draft a list of government programs that the Lumbees need and deserve.

DOT Board To Protect Roadways

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — In an effort to curb highway costs, the state Board of Transportation will preserve rights of way along major state road projects by halting development along the roads for three years, transportation officials say.

The process will allow the state for the first time to protect rights of way for projects such as outer loops around Raleigh and Charlotte.

"We think millions of dollars will be saved in right of way costs at a time when they are running at 50 to 60 percent of highway project costs in urban areas," Larry R. Goode, program and policy branch manager for the state Department of Transportation, said during a Board of Transportation meeting Thursday.

"We'd like to get those right of way costs back to where they were a few years ago, 20 to 35 percent of a project's costs," Goode told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

In 1987 the General Assembly enacted legislation allowing the board to adopt official road corridor maps. Some other states, including Florida and some Western states, have such authority.

Goode told board members Thursday that the DOT staff would begin proposing maps for adoption this fall, after board members consider regulations for the process next month.

The maps, which would be adopted after public hearings, would be as close as possible to the final corridor for a planned road. The maps will be filed at local tax offices and at register of deeds offices.

After the board adopts a corridor map for a road project, local governments would not be allowed to issue building permits for property in the right of way for up to three years, Goode said. Landowners could seek variances for some uses, such as parking lots, until the road is built.

During the three-year period, Goode said, property owners only would have to pay 20 percent of the property taxes on the affected land as an incentive not to develop it. At the end of the three years, the DOT would have to buy the land at fair market value or allow development.

Goode said the maps also would eliminate confusion about exactly where rights of way would be.

Abduction

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A woman accused in the abduction of a baby from a High Point hospital still believes that Jason Ray McClure is her baby, involuntary commitment papers show.

For the last four months, Brenda Joyce Nobles has been plagued by crying, appetite fluctuation, weight loss and fatigue, the report by Dr. Irving Lugo of High Point Mental Health Center said. The report, which was done on Aug. 4, says that Ms. Nobles is mentally ill and dangerous to herself.

On Lugo's recommendation, Ms. Nobles has been taken to John Umstead Hospital in Butner for further evaluation.

Two days after he was abducted, police found Jason McClure unharmed in a closet at the home of Ms. Nobles' boyfriend. Ms. Nobles and her daughter, who police said were also at the house, were taken into custody.

Lugo examined Ms. Nobles Aug. 4 after Superior Court Judge Richard Boner found her incompetent to stand trial.

Hot Peppers

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — The judges say they were prepared for three-alarm fires at the fourth annual Union County Hot Pepper Taste-Off, but ended up putting most of the 36 entries into the "salad pile" as not hot enough.

"That's got a bit of a tang to it, but it doesn't pack a wallop," Carolyn Gaddy, this year's rookie judge, said as she waded through the entries. "I'm sorry, but that one goes in the salad pile."

Many of the entries sent to radio station WDEX came with warning notes about delayed reactions and the possibility that the distinguished panel of three judges might become the extinguished panel.

When all was done, the judges finally came up with the four winning entries, the top two being tiny green peppers with the infamous delayed reaction.

Drought Will Slash U.S. Crop Yields

Ravaged by the Drought

Because of the year's heat and lack of rain, 1988 harvests of corn and soybeans will be far short of recent production totals

Projected total production for 1988 based on field estimates as of Aug. 1; figures for earlier years are actual production

Source: U.S. Dept. of Agriculture AP/Pat Lyons

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department experts believe drought damage to the nation's crops, including an expected 37 percent drop in corn production, will increase consumer food prices for the next two years.

For this year, USDA experts "continue to believe that the drought will add only 1 percentage point" to consumer food prices, said Assistant Secretary Ewen M. Wilson, the department's chief economist.

The department now is forecasting a food price increase for this year of 3 percent to 5 percent. Before the heat and dry weather, USDA had expected a 1988 food price hike of 2 percent to 4 percent.

But the impact might be even bigger in 1989, when food costs could go up an additional 2 percent due to the drought, he said.

"That's on top of an additional estimated increase in food prices somewhere in the region of 4 percent," Wilson said. "So this would bring it up to a total of 6 percent."

According to a USDA crop production report issued Thursday, the corn harvest this fall may be about 4.48 billion bushels, down 37 percent from last year's harvest and the smallest output since 1983.

Sharp reductions also were reported for soybeans, wheat and a number of other crops. Cotton, which thrived last month in the hot, humid weather, is expected to increase from last year.

The grim news from USDA came only hours after President Reagan signed a $3.9 billion disaster relief bill aimed at helping drought-stricken farmers.

"This bill isn't as good as rain," Reagan said to the nation's farmers. "But it will tide you over until normal weather and your own skills permit you to return to your accustomed role."

Overall, the department's Agricultural Statistics Board put total U.S. crop production at 88 percent of the 1977 average, a scale used to compare output from year to year. That matched the low 1983 reading, when sharp cutbacks in government acreage programs, along with drought, reduced production sharply.

The corn crop is expected to average 78.5 bushels per harvested acre, down from 119.4 bushels per acre last year, a record year-to-year decline of 34 percent.

Corn is the largest and most important crop grown by American farmers and, as a feed ingredient, is essential to the production of meat, poultry and dairy products.

"Today's reports confirm that the drought has had a major impact on this year's crops," Wilson told reporters. "But because of large pre-season stocks, total supplies are enough in most cases to assure an adequate food supply at home, satisfy foreign customers and meet our food-aid commitments."

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said in a statement, "Today's crop report confirms our fears about the impacts of this summer's tragic drought. Fortunately, it appears we will have enough stocks to make it through this marketing year."

The new USDA crop estimates were based on field surveys as of Aug. 1. In May and June, before drought had made its biggest impact, USDA projected the corn harvest — based on trends and an assumption of normal weather — at 7.3 billion bushels.

But those projections were revised downward a month ago to 5.2 billion bushels, assuming farmers got normal weather the remainder of the season.

The soybean harvest was estimated at 1.47 billion bushels, down 23 percent from 1.9 billion bushels produced last year. Prospects last spring called for about 1.88 billion bushels, and the July projection was 1.65 billion bushels.

Production of all wheat was indicated at 1.82 billion bushels, down 13 percent from 2.1 billion produced in 1987.

Winter wheat production was estimated at 1.55 billion bushels, down 1 percent from last year. But durum and the other spring varieties, which are produced in the hard-hit northern plains, showed sharp declines.

Durum was estimated at 54.6 million bushels, down 41 percent from last year's harvest, and other spring wheat was shown at 212 million bushels, down 53 percent from 1987.

Cotton production was estimated at 14.9 million bales, up 1 percent from last year. The crop was projected at 13.7 billion bales in July.

Production of some other spring-planted crops also has suffered, including: oats, 206 million bushels, down 45 percent; barley, 288 million bushels, also down 45 percent; and sorghum, 561 million bushels, down 24 percent.

Earlier, at the White House, Reagan praised Democratic and Republican congressional leaders for putting aside partisan differences to speed action on the disaster relief bill.

Reagan said the legislation, which also provides assistance to dairy cattlemen and ethanol producers, "represents the largest disaster relief measure in history."

The measure, among other things, provides aid for farmers suffering crop losses of more than 35 percent of their expected harvest because of the drought or other calamities. The payments would be equal to 65 percent of the lost income. Farmers whose crop losses exceeded 75 percent of the expected yield would receive payments equal to 90 percent of lost income.

The Agriculture Department said farmers intending to apply for relief under the drought bill should organize all their records and other evidence of their crop losses. The department said, however, that the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service would not be ready to start accepting applications for several weeks.

Soviet Harvest Declining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects for this year's grain harvest in the Soviet Union have declined slightly from earlier indications, the Agriculture Department said.

Officials said the Soviet harvest is now expected to be around 210 million metric tons, a decline of 5 million tons from the level forecast in recent months. Yields were said to be smaller than expected.

Production of spring-planted grain has been hit hardest, including spring wheat, oats and barley, the USDA report said Thursday. The output of spring wheat could be the lowest since 1984.

N.C. Crops May Produce Record Yields This Year

By The Associated Press

July rains have produced near-record yields of some North Carolina crops, and farmers can expect to see higher prices at the marketplace — a sharp contrast to the dismal crop prospects for their fellow farmers across the country, the state Department of Agriculture reported.

"For those that have it, those that are able to grow it and produce it this year ... income for 1988 should be pretty good," Weldon B. Denny, the state's assistant commissioner of Agriculture, told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "Except for some counties in the far west ... crops in North Carolina are as good as I've seen in many years."

The largest increase in production will be in cotton, with 130,000 bales expected to be harvested — 33 percent more than in 1987. Hot, humid weather in eastern counties during recent weeks has helped the crop, officials say.

According to the report, released by the state Department of Agriculture and based on crop conditions near Aug. 1, oats are the only field crop that will show a drop in production from 1987, because of a decrease in the number of acres harvested. Apples, measured in pounds, also will be down, because of dry weather in the western part of the state during the fruit's normal growing period.

Denny said that though corn acreage was down, yields were up. This season also has been particularly good for the state's small grain crop, along with tobacco, cotton and soybeans.

Carl N. Cross, who travels the state to collect data for the report, said farmers should consider themselves lucky.

"With the drought, if you look at the rest of the country, we're doing pretty well," ... said Cross, a statistician with the state agriculture department. "Especially those crops that grow in the eastern part of the state, where there has been plenty of rain. It's still very dry in the west, and that will show in the apples and in the burley tobacco. But overall, it looks pretty good. Very optimistic."

Also showing a healthy rise is winter wheat, with 22.5 million bushels expected at harvest, 25 percent more than last year. Grapes, largely an Eastern North Carolina crop, will show a 22 percent increase in production when 2,200 tons are harvested.

Peanuts also should have an exceptional year, according to the report. With 153,000 acres planted — 3 percent more than last year — and the second highest yield ever recorded at 3,100 pounds per acre, growers can expect to see a total of 474.3 million pounds. In 1986, North Carolina ranked 3rd in peanut production nationwide.

Apples, stunted by the drought in Western North Carolina, will show a 15 percent drop in production from 1987. Officials expect 330 million pounds.

Flue-cured tobacco, on the other hand, has done even better than expected. In the past month, generous rain over the eastern part of the state has spruced up the tobacco crop and improved its outlook. Forecasters expect to see almost 517.2 million pounds of flue-cured leaf when harvesting is completed, a 14 percent increase over last year.

North Carolina growers produce about two-thirds of the nation's flue-cured crop, and both acreage and yield-per-acre are up in the state. The yield is expected to average 2,182 pounds on 237,000 acres.

Burley tobacco has not fared as well. Grown primarily in the mountain counties where the drought continues to be the most severe, the crop will show only a 5 percent increase in production over 1987, with about 14.9 million pounds expected at harvest.

Oat production is down as well, but primarily because of an 8 percent drop in the number of acres harvested, the report says. A resulting 7 percent drop in production left North Carolina growers with 3.3 million bushels.

Strong soybean prices this year — attributed to low crop production in other, more heavily drought-stricken parts of the country — inspired many growers to add the crop to their rotation or increase the number of acres they normally plant.

'Temptation' Film's Debut Spurs Mass Protest

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — About 25,000 demonstrators, some lugging crosses, threatened mass boycotts of "The Last Temptation of Christ" upon its release today, and at least one major theater chain has decided against showing the film.

The movie opens in eight major cities at the height of a nationwide fundamentalist furor sparked by Christians who say it is blasphemous in its portrayal of a Jesus Christ tempted to abandon his divinity.

An estimated 25,000 protesters jammed the streets around Universal Studios Thursday, adding their voices to a chorus of protest that has stretched from the studio lot to the halls of Congress.

"A lot of impressionable people who would see this ... will receive a totally skewed, biased, and blatantly false portrayal of the person who is nearest and dearest to our hearts — our savior Jesus Christ," said the Rev. Paul Crouch, president of Trinity Broadcasting.

Newton, Mass.-based General Cinema Theaters decided against showing the movie after company executives screened it this week. The company — the nation's fourth-largest movie chain with 1,338 screens in 318 locations — offered no explanation for its decision.

In Maryland and Delaware, newsletters and petitions are being circulated in churches urging their members to convince theaters not to book the movie.

STUDIO PROTEST — Some of the estimated 25,000 protesters at Universal Studios stand attentive Thursday as they listened to organizers of a demonstration against the showing of a new film, "The Last Temptations of Christ." The movie was to open in eight cities across the country today. (AP Laserphoto)

Last week, the studio suddenly advanced the release of the film by six weeks, giving its opponents less time to organize threatened boycotts and, perhaps, taking advantage of the current publicity.

In Thursday's protest, buses carrying thousands of Christians rolled into the Universal parking lot, backing up traffic for a mile on the nearby Hollywood Freeway and on roads around the headquarters of MCA Inc., Universal's parent company.

Many of the demonstrators lugged wooden crosses. Others, with children in tow, carried hand-printed signs reading "Boycott Blasphemy" and "The Greatest Story Ever Distorted."

Opponents of the film are enraged by Scorsese's portrayal of Jesus as an ambivalent savior. In a hallucination while dying on the cross, Christ imagines abandoning his divinity to live as an ordinary man, and fantasizes about sex with Mary Magdalene.

Most of the film's antagonists have not seen "Last Temptation" and base their enmity on reports from the small number of clergy who have viewed it.

Tar Heels Joining Protest

By The Associated Press

A national wave of protest against "The Last Temptation of Christ" has rolled into North Carolina, with cinema operators reporting a deluge of letters and signatures urging them not to show the film.

"Have I got petitions — phew!" said Ron Forner, assistant manager of Beauatcher Cinemas in Asheville, the city's largest movie theater.

"About 10 days, two weeks ago, they started coming in. Now we're getting six or seven a day."

The movie, which depicts Jesus Christ tempted to abandon his divinity, opens in eight major cities today at the height of a nationwide fundamentalist furor sparked by Christians who say it is blasphemous.

"If they can show this, all doors will be broken down," said the Rev. Earl Lamm of rural Harnett County, co-organizer of a religious group planning to picket movie theaters should the film come to North Carolina. "If people will allow this, every other kind of pornography will be minor."

Spokesmen for Universal Studios and its distributing agents have not said when or whether the film will come to North Carolina.

But some North Carolina opponents planned to be ready for it nonetheless.

In several counties, churches circulated newsletters urging their members to persuade theaters not to book the movie.

One church in Asheville, the Merrimon Avenue Baptist Church, collected hundreds of signatures on blank petitions mailed by the county Baptist Association to its 92 member churches, said association secretary Betty Orr.

In Fayetteville, officials of Cross Pointe Cinema and Cross Creek Mall, both of the Newton, Mass.-based General Cinema theater chain, announced they would not show the film after company executives screened it.

"Petitions are floating everywhere," said the Rev. Jimmy Cox of Naples Baptist Church north of Hendersonville.

While many have yet to view "Last Temptation," opponents say they are enraged by director Martin Scorsese's portrayal of Jesus as an ambivalent savior.

Most of the film's antagonists base their enmity on reports from the small number of clergy who have viewed it.

"They are reacting to reaction, that's what they're doing," said Bill Cline, a motion picture distributor in Charlotte.

Doris Lusk of Fayetteville told of a plan to have protesters form long lines at theater box offices, only to ask the price of the movie, tell the ticket seller "No, thanks," and return to the end of the line — thus blocking others from seeing it.

"We are upset about the fact that our Lord's name has been blasphemed hideously, blatantly," she said.

U.S. Plans New Space Project

By FRANK D. ROYLANCE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

BALTIMORE — Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., have taken the wraps off plans to land unmanned spacecraft on the nucleus of a comet, and on Titan, the largest moon of Saturn, early in the next century.

Each of the spacecraft will also buzz asteroids in the region between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter en route to their main targets: Saturn and the Comet Kopff. Their missions are to learn more about the origins of the solar system and to gather clues to the origins of life on Earth.

The missions are being planned at JPL for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. JPL officials announced their proposal Wednesday at the 20th General Assembly of the International Astronomical Union here.

"These two missions will re-establish our pre-eminence in outer solar system exploration," JPL project manager Ronald Draper said. "It's something only the U.S. can do at the moment, and it's something we'd like to preserve."

Draper said that he could not disclose the total estimated cost of the missions until it is submitted to Congress next year. But he did say that about $100 million has been spent in seven years of planning and development.

The project is being carried out in cooperation with West Germany, which is furnishing propulsion systems for at least one of the spacecraft, and the European Space Agency, which is building the landers.

If Congress provides the money and foreign partners give their final approval, the two missions will expand dramatically the U.S. effort to return to unmanned planetary exploration after a long drought. It has been more than 10 years since the last U.S. planetary missions. Pioneer voyages to Venus, were launched.

The Challenger shuttle explosion has delayed until 1989 NASA's unmanned Magellan mission to Venus as well as the Galileo mission to orbit Jupiter and send a probe into its atmosphere. A Mars Observer unmanned mission is due for launch in 1992.

In the meantime, the Soviet Union has announced ambitious plans to place robot and manned landers on Mars, and to explore the outer planets beyond Mars, placing intense competitive pressures on U.S. scientists.

The two missions announced Wednesday would fly aboard NASA's Mariner Mark II spacecraft, mating state-of-the-art scientific hardware with an improved generation of the old Mariner planetary exploration craft which began with missions to Venus and Mars in the 1960s.

Draper said that the use of a single type of spacecraft for both missions will reduce overall costs by one-third.

Tobias Owen, U.S. chairman of the international scientific group working on the project, described the missions as "a sort of celestial archaeology."

"The atmosphere on Titan will reveal a chemical evolution that may resemble what occurred on the early Earth," forming the complex organic chemicals needed for the beginnings of life, he said.

Saturn's other moons will also be studied at distances far closer than was possible during the Voyager flybys in 1980 and 1981, and with more sophisticated instruments.

Comets and asteroids are also believed by scientists to be bodies little changed since the solar system began, bearing clues to the origins of the solar system and organic chemicals that suggest a rain of comets may have contributed to the beginnings of life on Earth.

The first of the Mariner Mark II missions, called CRAF (Comet Rendezvous-Asteroid Flyby), is planned for launch Aug. 22, 1995 aboard a Titan IV-Centaur rocket. It would not depend on the Space Shuttle.

In January 1998, CRAF would fly past Asteroid 449 Hamburga, a 55-mile long chunk of carbon-rich rock discovered in 1899 and orbiting the sun once every four years. Instruments on board the craft will beam back to Earth data on its size, shape, spin, craters and the nearby environment before streaking on toward its main target.

If all goes well, CRAF would rendezvous with Comet Kopff on Aug. 14, 2000 as the inbound comet nears the orbit of Jupiter. It would then fly in formation alongside the comet for at least three years.

After photographing and studying the comet's nucleus, coma and tail with a variety of instruments for 109 days, CRAF would fire an instrument-packed lander shaped like a five-foot-long golf tee into the icy nucleus of the comet.

The penetrator is designed to sample and analyze the comet's ice, determine its strength and temperature and radio the data back to the mother craft for relay back to Earth.

As the comet streaks around the sun, heats up and develops its characteristic tail, CRAF's instruments would monitor it and beam the data back to Earth.

The second Mariner Mark II mission, which has been named for 17th-century Italian astronomer Gian Domenico Cassini, who discovered four of Saturn's 21-plus moons, is planned for April 1996.

Cassini would fly by the 50-mile-long asteroid Maja in March 1997, and later would head further out into the solar system toward a rendezvous with Saturn on Oct. 2, 2002.

Eighty-five days after arriving, Cassini would launch a 10-foot-wide saucer-shaped probe toward the Saturnian moon Titan. The probe would parachute down through the moon's dense atmosphere, sending back detailed information on its makeup during a three-hour descent,

GOP Says Platform Will Reflect Bush's Policies

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Republican platform writers turn to defense and foreign policy today to wrap up their pre-convention work on a platform the party chairman said would be conservative but reflect the "new direction" proposed by George Bush.

Party leaders also were trying to avoid a fight over the Star Wars anti-missile system.
GOP Chairman Frankahrenkopf, interviewed on "CBS This Morning," said the heart of the platform "will not change that much," adding, "We're a conservative political party. We're proud of that. We're not afraid of the 'c' word."

Fahrenkopf said, however, the document will reflect Bush's plans for "a new direction in education, in environment, in child care." "The vice president came here in an unprecedented event and spoke to this platform committee and tried to give them that direction, so that this really will truly be a Bush platform," he said.

The 106-member platform committee finished with the domestic chapters of the 30,000-word document Thursday after calling for an expensive loophole for the oil industry to be reopened and engaging in another bitter tangle over AIDS.

But the more moderate party faithful opted not to disturb Bush's plans for a peaceful convention despite their dissent on a variety of issues in what is mostly a conservative document.

"I doubt very much that there will be any floor fights," said Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin, co-chairman of committee. "The moderates in our party have had a significant impact on the newer issues in the platform."

The committee turns to 60 pages on foreign policy and defense, an area Bush sees as one of his main strengths against Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

Bush has said the nation cannot be trusted to someone as inexperienced in foreign affairs as the Massachusetts governor. Dukakis counters by pointing to the Iran-Contra affair and administration dealings with Panamanian ruler Manuel Noriega as black marks on the Reagan-Bush record.

The GOP platform committee will meet again Monday afternoon, after the opening session of the convention, to take a final vote before the convention faces the issues on Tuesday.

One possible fight today looms over when to deploy President Reagan's Star Wars plan, formally called the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Strong Star Wars backers, led by Angela Buchanan of California, pushed through a change earlier this week to make the platform call for "rapid and certain deployment" of SDI.

But former Sen. John Tower of Texas, a Bush spokesman on defense, told reporters that the platform would reflect the original draft language, calling for deployment as soon as feasible.

"I don't think we should begin the program by acting too precipitously," he said.

Ms. Buchanan vowed a fight at the committee against any changes.

"My understanding is that the vice president is comfortable with the language," she said.

Most of Thursday's session was peaceful, in sharp contrast to the heated debates earlier in the week on such topics as abortion. Potentially divisive fights were avoided by private compromises in the name of party unity.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut dropped his plans to press an amendment calling upon the GOP to back tough economic sanctions against South Africa. And a possible floor fight was averted over abortion when moderates dropped plans to challenge a plank that says, "We believe the unborn child has a fundamental individual right to life which cannot be infringed."

Marjorie Bell Chambers of Los Alamos, N.M., had tried to strike the last four words but said Thursday she "did not want to cause problems for the Bush campaign with a floor fight."

The committee also approved another amendment calling for giving a major tax break back to independent oil and gas producers.

Currently, "intangible drilling costs" can greatly reduce an independent producer's taxes. But the 1986 tax revision is closing that loophole.

The platform plank calls for reversing that provision, in effect reopening the loophole that is estimated to cost the U.S. Treasury up to $1 billion a year. The change, sponsored by Rick Montoya of New Mexico and backed by the Bush campaign, was approved by a voice vote.

The committee's peaceful atmosphere was shattered late in the day Thursday, when AIDS again was debated.

A proposal for testing all transportation personnel for the disease was put forward by Porter Davis of Oklahoma.

"When you travel around New Orleans, you will take taxis and buses," he said. "When you go home, you will take planes and rely on pilots and mechanics."

But it was not an idea that drew a lot of support.

"This is overkill," retorted Rep. Guy Molinari of New York. "My God, we won't be able to get out of New Orleans if we adopt this."

"Fellow delegates, let's come to our senses. ... Why pick on these people?" said Bill Graham of North Carolina.

The amendment was defeated without a formal vote tally.

Dukakis Blames Rate Hikes On Reagan Spending Plans

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer
RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Michael Dukakis placed the blame for rising rates on the Reagan administration's failure to keep government spending under control, particularly in the defense budget.

The Democratic presidential nominee, campaigning today in Virginia and Florida, said Thursday the increase of the prime rate to 10 percent would prevent young families from buying homes and farmers and businesses from improving their operations.

"A 10 percent prime rate. It's 3 1/2 in Japan," Dukakis said at a rally in Hartford, Conn. "Why? Because we haven't been able to pay our bills for eight years in Washington, D.C."

Dukakis blamed the soaring federal deficit on Reagan's failure to make "tough choices" on spending.

"We have to say no to a lot of things we'd like to say yes to," Dukakis said. "We've got to decide whether we want Star Wars or star schools in this country."

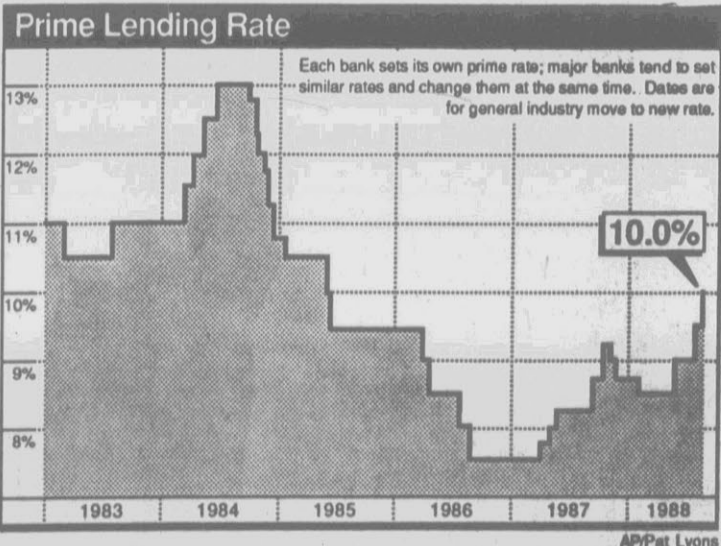

Dukakis first blamed the administration for spurring the increase in the prime lending rate in remarks he made Thursday after touring Fort Dix in New Jersey.

"I think it's regrettable," he said. "I think it's what happens after eight years of borrowing and spending, borrowing and spending."

The Massachusetts governor spent most of Thursday trying to establish himself as a tough leader on military and foreign policy issues — areas Republicans frequently cite as Dukakis' greatest weaknesses.

Dukakis toured Fort Dix, where he had eight weeks of basic training after joining the Army in 1955. Earlier, he delivered a speech in New York in which he said the country needed "new leadership in the White House" prepared to carefully manage the defense budget and negotiate further nuclear arms reductions with the Soviet Union.

While in Connecticut, Dukakis attended two fund-raisers which raised well in excess of $500,000 for the Democratic National Committee's 1988 "Victory Fund."

Thornburgh Wins Confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard L. Thornburgh says he's eager to begin work as the nation's 76th attorney general, but is not counting on keeping the job if George Bush becomes president.

"I look on this as a six-month assignment," Thornburgh said Thursday after an 85-0 Senate vote confirmed him as successor to the controversial Edwin Meese III.

The former GOP Pennsylvania governor said in a television interview, aired in Philadelphia, that he'll "let the future take care of itself" even if Vice President Bush is elected.

Thornburgh, 56, already has told senators that he's a loyalist to President Reagan, declaring last week, "His agenda is my agenda."

Thornburgh likely will be able to concentrate solely on department programs, unlike Meese, who spent considerable time defending his personal conduct.

Meese's ethical behavior was investigated by Independent Counsel James McKay, who concluded that the attorney general "probably" broke the law. Meese consistently denied that, and maintained that the department was running normally despite defections by top aides during his final months as attorney general.

Senate Puts New Limits On Pentagon Consultants

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, reacting to the Pentagon bribery investigation, placed new restrictions on defense consultants as it approved a $282 billion military budget bill designed to win President Reagan's approval.

If the proposal becomes law, consultants will be required, for the first time, to spell out who hires them and whether they have potential conflicts of interests.

"The sad fact is that there is nothing requiring consultants under contract to the Pentagon to disclose conflicts of interest," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., one of the co-sponsors of the proposal approved Thursday.

The amendment was adopted on a voice vote shortly before the Senate approved the $282 billion bill on a 90-4 vote.

Levin's proposal arose in the wake of the Pentagon bribery case, which involves allegations that private consultants, many of them former Pentagon employees, paid current Defense Department employees for inside details about future contracts. No charges have yet been filed.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., a co-sponsor of the proposal, said the registration is needed because "we need some mechanism for finding out who these people are working for and whether they're working both sides of the street."

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., agreed, saying, "This is an increasingly large problem."

The Senate also added an amendment intended to send a message to U.S. allies in Japan and Western Europe that they should do more to pay for allied defense.

The votes came shortly before the Senate passed the bill and followed by one week Reagan's veto of the first congressional attempt to pass a Pentagon budget.

Reagan vetoed that bill because he didn't like its restrictions on arms control policy or its deep cuts into his proposal for Star Wars spending. The measure passed Thursday includes the Star Wars reductions, but none of the arms control limitations.

Reagan rejected the bill authorizing the Pentagon budget, which is the first half of the congressional budget process. A second measure is needed to appropriate money for the authorized projects, and Thursday's bill was the appropriation measure.

When Congress returns after Labor Day from its recess, a House-Senate conference committee will meet to resolve differences between the measures approved by each chamber.

The House approved its defense appropriation bill two months ago and it doesn't contain either of the amendments approved Thursday by the Senate. Although both chambers are controlled by Democrats, Reagan's military budget generally fared better in the House than the Senate.

The Senate's "burden-sharing" amendment orders a major review of U.S. overseas commitments, limits the deployment of American troops to Japan and South Korea, and sets a limit on spending for U.S. military personnel stationed overseas. The last provision requires the allies to pay the difference if deployment costs of U.S. troops rise above 1988 levels.

The Senate rejected, 59-36, another provision which proposed a 10 percent reduction in the number of U.S. military dependents living overseas.

In the past year, both Democrats and Republicans on Capitol Hill have complained that U.S. allies should pay more for allied defenses. Japan, in particular, has been a prime target of such criticism.

Voting against the spending bill were Sens. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.; Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.; and William Proxmire, D-Wis. Not voting were Sens. Joseph Biden, D-Del.; Thad Cochran, R-Miss.; Bob Kasten, R-Wis.; Larry Pressler, R-S.D.; Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.; and James Exon, D-Neb.

Emergency Spending Package Wins Quick OK In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican lawmakers say they expect President Reagan to sign legislation that rushes $672 million to the Veterans Administration, the federal prison system and an assortment of other programs said to need the money.

The House approved the supplemental spending bill by a 270-32 tally late Thursday, then sent the measure to the Senate, where it passed on a voice vote and was sent to the White House.

Lawmakers prided themselves on fighting off temptation and refraining from the frequent practice of attaching pet projects to the measure, saying they abided by a pact congressional leaders reached with Reagan last fall. The legislation was labeled a "dire emergency" bill because the measure was supposed to be limited to that type of spending.

House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said it was "a very stringently conceived bill that is absolutely required for the continuation of many essential services."

The $672 million bill was a compromise between a $189 million measure approved by the House on July 27 and a $633 million version passed by the Senate on Wednesday. The bill is for the 1988 fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. In addition to the fresh money, the bill would allow $200 million to be transferred among the budgets of various agencies.

Eyeing a nearly month-long recess that began at the close of the day's business, conference committee members worked out the compromise and rushed the bill through final approval in both houses in a single day.

The few objections in the House came from legislators who complained this measure was no different from other spending bills.

"This is no emergency," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn.

As often happens with spending bills in Congress, the deal was reached by each chamber agreeing to most of what the other had proposed, rather than mutually chopping away at each other's sought-after projects.

Thus, the House accepted Senate provisions that would give the Veterans Administration $530 million in new spending to help pay for an increase in some benefits, a burgeoning caseload and medical care.

The Senate also had sought $23 million to help the FBI keep an eye on Soviet inspectors monitoring American compliance with the new nuclear arms treaty. The final bill contained $14 million of that amount.

Miami Financial Planner Skips Town With Millions

MIAMI (AP) — A financial planner may have fled with as much as $25 million in retirement funds belonging to a group of doctors and other investors, each of whom received an apologetic note explaining, "I have run away."

Henry Gherman, 51, a former self-made millionaire whose career as an ace salesman collapsed in personal bankruptcy, is believed to have fled the Miami area, and sources close to the case say he may have left the country.

About 50 of Gherman's clients learned of his disappearance when they received copies of the handwritten note in the mail this week.

"Everybody is pretty much in a state of shock," said Leonard Filhaber, a 61-year-old salesman who says he had total trust in Gherman for 12 years. "We're all sort of walking around bouncing off walls."

"My wife and I have worked 17 bloody years, morning, noon and night, and now we're broke," Filhaber said Thursday. "Now I can understand why old people believe in mattresses."

In his note, Gherman said he was "unable to face the humiliation, disgrace and consequences" that would follow once his company, Fi-

Congress OKs Hunger Package

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Congress gave final approval Thursday to the biggest increase in money to alleviate hunger in more than a decade, allocating $1.4 billion for feeding the needy over the next three years.

The bill, passed with overwhelming bipartisan support in the House and Senate the last day before the start of a three-week recess, was sent to President Reagan. Sponsors said they expected him to sign the measure into law because it did not exceed budget ceilings.

Under the legislation, basic food stamp benefits would be raised in stages by $4.41 per person each month over the current average monthly level of $50 per recipient.

The Department of Agriculture would be required to spend $112 million during the next three years for commodities that would be channeled to food banks and soup kitchens serving the homeless.

A temporary emergency food assistance program, serving an estimated 50 million people, would be extended for two more years, and the government would buy $120 million worth of food in the next two years for distribution to needy families.

In addition, school breakfast and child nutrition programs would be expanded, and restrictions against farmers, farm workers, the elderly and the disabled in the food stamp program would be reduced.

Another provision would revise the system for imposing penalties on states with high rates of improper food stamp payments, ending sanctions for states whose records are better than average and targeting enforcement against states with the largest number of errors.

ancial & Investment Planning Inc., collapsed. He added that he would try to return the doctors' money.

"I have been dealing with financial and emotional problems for the past many months and have been unable to come up with any solution other than running," the note said. "By the time you receive this letter, I will be gone. ... I have run away."

Gherman and his companies were being investigated for possible wire fraud, bank fraud, embezzlement and interstate transportation of stolen property, FBI spokesman Paul Miller said.

Gherman handled pension funds for a long list of clients that included at least 20 doctors, many of whom are wondering whether they'll see their money again.

"I'm very angry," said Dr. Jack Lubin, a Miami Beach pathologist. "But I don't want to talk about it. I might say something I shouldn't."

A court statement filed Wednesday by 12 clients who are suing Gherman to recover the funds says the financial adviser fled town Monday, leaving behind his wife and two grown children. Gherman worked for some of the doctors for as long as 20 years, even managing their offices.

A Dade circuit judge on Wednesday granted the clients' request to appoint a receiver to oversee the finances of Gherman, his family and his companies.

The investors also filed a $25 million lawsuit accusing Gherman of fraudulently shifting their money to his wife and two children, according to their attorney, Jay Solowsky.

Gherman's wife said through an attorney that she had "no prior knowledge of his intentions to leave."

Solowsky said Gherman accepted money from clients to invest in certificates of deposit, but banks said they had no record of any CDs being purchased.

House Wants U.S. Investments Pulled From S. Africa

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House-passed legislation to withdraw all U.S. investment from racially segregated South Africa and impose a near-total trade embargo faces a possible Republican filibuster in the Senate and a likely veto by President Reagan.

The House adopted the disinvestment bill Thursday evening on a 244-132 vote.

Supporters hailed the dramatic measure as a last-chance opportunity to bring strong economic pressure to bear to help end South Africa's apartheid system of racial separation by expanding the less sweeping sanctions adopted in 1986.

But Republicans said the bill represents a "scorched earth" policy that amounts to declaring economic war against South Africa, a war they said would hurt the blacks it is designed to help by causing millions to lose their jobs.

GOP members called on the House to reverse course and adopt a policy of "black empowerment" to increase the economic and political power of blacks and weaken the foundations of the apartheid system.

But Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., and other sanctions supporters said that course simply will not work.

"Black economic empowerment in the face of apartheid is an impossibility," Wolpe said as the House voted down a trio of Republican-sponsored amendments designed to dilute or change the legislation.

With the House and Senate eager to adjourn for the fall elections, little time remains to push the bill through Congress, especially since both houses likely would be faced with votes to override a presidential veto.

In a policy statement, the administration said Reagan's senior advisers will recommend that he veto the sanctions bill if it emerges from Congress in its present form because it "undermines the president's ability to conduct foreign policy."

It was likely that Senate opponents of the measure would launch a filibuster, since there is no limit on discourse in that chamber. Opponents have refused in the past to agree voluntarily to limit discussion on such issues, forcing the chamber to a cloture vote to shut off debate, a vote that requires the support of a two-thirds majority.

Many Republican opponents accused the House Democratic leadership of staging a political vote to score points among black voters for Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis and for political activist Jesse Jackson on the eve of the Republican National Convention.

"Some of us wonder if the real purpose of this bill is to be responsive to the Jackson-Dukakis foreign policy," said Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich.

"We are not bringing this bill to embarrass Republicans," said Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., principal sponsor of the measure. "We are here to free black South Africa. This has nothing to do with presidential politics."

Dellums said White House officials, citing ongoing peace negotiations in southern Africa, had asked him repeatedly over the last several days not to bring up the bill until after Congress returns from its Labor Day recess.

He said he agreed to do so, but only if Reagan promised in writing not to veto the bill if it reached his desk.

Dellums said that in the end, the White House declined to make such a promise and he decided to go ahead.

Botha Says Sanctions May Delay Peace

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha said today that a tough sanctions bill passed by the U.S. House of Representatives will not help South African blacks and might derail a regional peace initiative.

"The recklessness of members of Congress who do not care in the least whether their actions adversely affect the search for a peaceful solution to the problems of southern Africa as a whole is astounding," Botha said.

He said the legislation, which was forwarded to the Senate after a vote Thursday night, might "obstruct or make impossible" an ongoing initiative to end South Africa's 73-year rule over South-West Africa, also known as Namibia.

The sanctions bill, which still needs Senate approval and President Reagan's signature to become law, would halt U.S. investment in South Africa and impose a near-total trade embargo. It was approved by the House 244-132, with most Democrats supporting it and most Republicans opposing it.

The bill faces a possible Republican filibuster in the Senate and a likely veto by Reagan. Earlier legislation, which passed despite Reagan's veto, bars imports of various South African commodities and forbids South African planes to land at U.S. airports.

Botha said in a statement that the pending bill was being debated "for purely internal political aims."

"It (the bill) has no bearing on the promotion of the interests of black people in South Africa," he said. "The members of the House of Representatives are by now fully aware that prominent black leaders in South Africa, as well as governments in certain neighboring states, strongly oppose this legislation."

Korean President Appeals For Truce

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae-woo called today for a political truce during the Olympics and warned that violent protests would expose the country to "worldwide scorn."

Roh condemned demonstrations by radical students and said dissident groups were trying to spoil the mood before the Sept. 17 start of the Olympic Games in Seoul. He appealed to opposition leaders to support the government in curbing unrest.

"An eruption of demonstrations involving firebombs, stones and tear gas during the Olympics would disrupt the Olympics and our nation would become an object of worldwide scorn," Roh told a meeting reviewing Olympic preparations.

Later, radical students battled riot police with firebombs and rocks at least three campuses in Seoul after rallies to prepare for a march Monday to the border for reunification talks with North Korean students.

Riot police fired tear gas to drive students back. Eyewitnesses reported some arrests and injuries, but police refused to give any figures.

National Police Headquarters in Seoul said today that 2,099 radicals were detained the previous two days for taking part in demonstrations to support the Monday march, which the government has prohibited. All but 243 students were released.

Police officials said 13 police stations were attacked by students nationwide this week and several dozen officers were injured.

Radical students have staged scattered protests in Seoul and other cities to prepare for the march and fought riot police in minor confrontations in some places. Turnouts at rallies during the past five days have been low.

Sudan Says Floods Razed 83,000 Homes

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Floods have destroyed about 83,000 homes in Sudan's capital of Khartoum, more than twice the number previously estimated, the Middle East News Agency reported today.

The floods, which hit over the weekend after torrential rains, caused shortages of electricity, drinking water and food in Khartoum, a city of 4 million residents. At least 11 people were killed, and Sudanese Prime Minister Sadek Mahdi said 1.5 million people were left homeless.

The United Nations said a lack of boats was hampering relief operations for people stranded on piles of rubble.

Sudanese officials blamed the floods on inadequate drainage systems. Last week, Khartoum and surrounding areas received 8.4 inches of rain, compared with 1.44 inches in all of 1987.

Officials say the country faces more destruction from the annual flooding of the Nile River in coming weeks. They said the river level has risen dangerously after heavy rains in Sudan and neighboring Ethiopia, whose rivers feed into the Nile.

Graham Sees Spiritual Tone At Sessions

NEW YORK (AP) — God usually gets some polite nods at American political conventions, but an odd-timer of the candidate-crowning powwows says he detects a stronger religious element this time around.

"There was more of a spiritual tone at the Democratic Convention and I think we'll also see it at the Republican Convention," says evangelist Billy Graham, a convention regular since midcentury. As he has done at every Democratic and Republican national convention over the last 36 years, Graham will be offering prayers at next week's Republican affair as he did for the Democrats in July.

"I never go to one without the other," he said in telephone interview with Buffalo, N.Y., where he would up a heavily attended crusade last Sunday in that mostly Roman Catholic city.

"I always stay neutral politically, and I'm going to be neutral this time," he said. I won't tell who I'm voting for, and I'm not endorsing anybody. That's the reason I go to both conventions.

Graham, 69, a personal friend and unofficial chaplain to the country's seven presidents since 1952, attributed the increased spiritual tone at the Democratic Convention to the influence of black delegates.

"The black people made a great impression on white delegates as dignified, highly educated and they love the Lord," he said. "They came out of the churches. These black people made a spiritual impact."

He said that unlike some past conventions, when delegates would "walk around and talk" during prayers, the crowd this time would all stand "and it would be so quiet you could hear a pin drop."

At one point, he said he watched a network television reporter trying to question the Rev. Jesse Jackson on the floor during the benediction, but Jackson deflected the reporter's questions, saying, "We're praying now."

Jackson bowed his head while African Methodist Episcopal Bishop Frederick C. James led the benediction, refusing to continue the interview until the prayer was finished, Graham said.

While Jackson, the second-running Democratic candidate, gave a rousing address in Gospel-preaching style to the Democrats, another also-ran minister, Pat Robertson, was to address the Republicans.

"I'm happily surprised for clergymen to be addressing both conventions," Graham said. "It's healthy for there to be more recognition of spiritual life whenever people gather."

At the Republican Convention, Graham is to lead a prayer Monday night when President Reagan finishes his address, and will sit with the George Bush family on the closing night when he gives his acceptance speech.

"They're both long-time friends," Graham said, noting that he had spent a dozen nights at the White House in Reagan's presidency, and regularly spent part of his vacation in Maine with Bush.

J.L. Wilson's birthday, Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Elder Frederick Hopkins, the Faith And Truth Christian Center, and Sister Shirley Bonner, minister of music, from Washington will lead the service.

Service Postponed

The Joy Service featuring missionary Mary Sheppard, Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Sycamore Chapel Church, has been postponed. A new date will be announced.

Gospel Reunion

The Class of '59 Homecoming Gospel Reunion will be held Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

The program will feature "The Mack Singers" of Cleveland and the Zion Chapel choirs.

Quarterly Meeting

Mayo Chapel Baptist Church will hold its quarterly meeting and homecoming service on Sunday.

Walter Chenny will conduct the 11 a.m. service. Dinner will follow at 2 p.m.

Anniversary Meeting

Middle Ground Ushers Union will join Roanoke Tabernacle for its 12th Anniversary meeting, Monday at 10:30 a.m.

Evening Services

Bishop J.N. Gilbert and Arthur's Chapel will conduct services at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Burney's Chapel Church. The Traveling Choir is sponsoring the program.

Eldress To Preach

Eldress Marie Grimes will preach Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in St. Matthew True Born Faith of Christ Church.

Services For Fund

The Rev. Earnest Roberson and Clemon Grove Holy Church, Stokes, will conduct services for the building fund Sunday at 3 p.m. at Mount Moriah Holy Church in Farmville.

Services Start

The Guiding Light Temple of Faith, Farmville, will begin quarterly meeting services tonight with Elder Ed Thomas Edwards and Ellis Chapel Church conducting the services.

Holy Communion will be held Saturday night with Eldress Rosemary Baker as the speaker. After regular 11 a.m. services Sunday, Robert Phillips and St. James Church of Fountain will conduct the 3 p.m. service.

Women's Day

Women's Day will be observed at Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m. Eldress Shirley Braxton will be the guest minister.

Community-Run Centers Pioneer Helping Families

SARA ENGRAM
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

BALTIMORE — Like Humpty Dumpty, families are fragile organisms. Yet the health of families — the basic unit of society — is a matter of public concern. This year, it's also an issue that presidential candidates hope to capitalize on.

So far, only one family issue — day care — has gotten much public attention on the campaign trail. But the interest in these issues among voters is so strong that, regardless of who wins in November, the new president is likely to move into the White House next January with family and children's issues in a prominent spot on the national agenda.

A year ago, Peter D. Hart Research Associates Inc. conducted a poll for KidsPac, a group interested in health and education issues affecting young children. In 1987, 47 percent of the voters surveyed said that a presidential candidate who gave special attention to early childhood health and education programs would have special appeal to them. This year, as the election approaches, the proportion has risen to 60 percent — an increase of 13 points.

The attention candidates are paying to family issues has a lot to do with the polls. But it makes sense in other ways as well.

When families crumble, social services agencies — the modern equivalent of the king's horses and men — rush into action, trying to repair the damage.

Can they? The record of government involvement in troubled and needy families is not reassuring. Programs such as foster care and welfare are expensive, often ineffective, difficult to administer and, in some cases, increasingly unpopular with taxpayers.

But the task is one that government cannot abandon. The law and the norms of civilized society charge government with protecting the safety and well-being of its citizens — whether the danger is hunger or the threat of violent abuse from a member of their own families.

The question is: Can government agencies, bogged down as they often are in bureaucracy and inefficiency, meet that responsibility?

If so, it would seem that their best chance of success is to do whatever they can to keep Humpty Dumpty from falling in the first place.

That is precisely the theory behind Maryland's 3-year-old experiment with Family Support Centers, a concept based on community-based organizations funded by a combination of state money and grants from private foundations. That unique public-private partnership has made the Maryland program a national pioneer in new efforts to help American families stay together, rather than rushing in to sweep up the damage after they fall apart.

In real life, this theory takes on the familiar comfort of a well-lived-in home. At Our House in Cherry Hill, an inner-city Baltimore neighborhood, toddlers busy themselves with coloring or other art work during a supervised play period. When children cry or misbehave, staff members and volunteers comfort them or provide some gentle discipline — providing an informal lesson in good parenting for young mothers and fathers, some of whom are still children themselves.

Rosalie Street, executive director of Friends of the Family, the umbrella group formed in 1986 to oversee the Family Support Center initiative, likens the centers' role to that played in earlier years by the extended family. In effect, these places function in much the same way grandmothers and aunts did for previous generations.

The baby's been crying all night? A volunteer sympathizes with an exhausted young mother and offers a suggestion or two.

"I got on the bus and my child started hitting people," a conscientious young mother reports over a cup of coffee in the kitchen. "I don't know what got into him, but it sure made me mad. ..." That remark opens an informal discussion on corporal punishment — the kind of casual but important discussion this young woman may not have as easily with her own mother, who lives a hour's bus ride across town.

Family support centers target their programs to teen-age parents, the families that have proven to be the most fragile. But everyone is welcome, and centers make a point of actively recruiting participants through door-to-door visits or presentations at churches or local community groups. Centers vary in size, as do the groups that sponsor them. In September 1987, a survey found that participation levels ranged from a couple of hundred in some centers to a thousand or more in others.

In addition to its activities for young parents, Our House serves as a drop-in center for boys and girls in junior and senior high. They come for discussion groups, homework sessions and tutoring — activities designed to help them stay in school and postpone parenthood until they are physically, emotionally and financially able to handle the responsibility.

The sense of belonging that neighborhood people feel in a successful support center reflects a key ingredient of success for this initiative — the fact that the local community "owns" the program, that they are not simply being "serviced" by impersonal government agencies. Once the Department of Human Resources puts out a request for proposals, the action shifts to local communities. Through non-profit public or private organizations, members of the community draw up the proposal, decide who will manage it and must make it work.

This community involvement makes the program a leading example of one of the two new approaches to providing family services around the country. The other model, largely pioneered in Minnesota, takes a school-based approach, attempting to draw in young parents in a way that will make school a positive influence for families.

Both approaches have strengths and liabilities, according to Frank Farrow of the Center for the Study of Social Policy in Washington, D.C. Farrow works with private foundations in evaluating efforts to reform services for children and families.

Schools provide a ready-made network, they reach a broad population and they can allow a new service to expand rapidly. But they already have plenty to do; some critics say that adding programs targeted at families hands them one more social problem to solve.

Family support centers grew out of a more traditional social services approach to aiding families, and many of the people it hopes to reach come from the population traditionally served by social services agencies.

Engagements Announced

NATALIE SUE RUSSELL — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne E. Russell of Davenport, Iowa, who announce her engagement to Dr. Kenneth Franklin Branch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Branch of Ayden. The wedding is planned for Sept. 3.

CINDY S. COGHILL — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy R. Sawyer of Southport, who announce her engagement to Richard L. Parker, son of Kathleen Parker of Southport and the late George Parker. The bride-elect is also the daughter of Raymond E. Coghill of Greenville. The wedding is set for Sept. 3.

Computer Junkies Need Open Pockets

DEAR ABBY: We have a computer addict in our office. He's the office manager. He comes to work at 5 a.m. so he can "work" on his computer before anyone comes in to interrupt him. He's here on Saturday and Sunday, too! In the last three years, he has spent a fortune of the company's money on computers, printers, software, etc.

Before the rest of us have time to learn a program, it's been replaced with an "updated" version. We have an accounting package installed with all the extras, such as report generators, built-in spreadsheets, payroll modules, a network, etc., but nothing ever works right, which gives him a perfect opportunity to spend more time playing with the computer — trying to "fix" it. He never gets enough.

Everyone in this office has a computer on his desk whether he needs it or not. I won't even tell you how much we spend every month on computer paper, ribbons and other supplies to keep all the hardware running. The owners of this company would be flabbergasted if they knew that their money is being spent on the manager's hobby.

Well, Abby, I think you get the picture. I'm sure there are many other offices just like ours. Computers are marvelous machines, but for the most part, they are fascinating toys for people who need to play. Sign me ... CONTROL C.

DEAR CONTROL C.: Computers have revolutionized the business world, but there are many who are intimidated by them. Read on for a teen-ager's evaluation:

DEAR ABBY: I'm only 13, but I think I have the right to write to you. I'm writing about the people who wrote to you saying they think computers are a big waste of time.

Well, here's my opinion: I think computers are fun, but really, people use something new. — EAGER BEAVER

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the office worker with the computer-crazy boss must have come out of our company. In our 40-person office, we have four separate computer systems — three of which do not talk to each other.

Why? Because our boss (who talks to no one) buys computers like a 5-year-old would buy toys if he had a credit card with no limit.

It will be interesting to see who in this office is willing to learn how to use them. Some of the old-timers have already threatened to take early retirement. — HAPPY WITH MY TYPEWRITER are becoming too dependent upon them. I think they should get off their butts and figure things out for themselves.

People are eating them up! To order your copy of Abby's favorite recipes, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

After all, that's why we go to school, isn't it? It's true what you said. Next year there will be more computer junk to suck more of your hard earned-money up! It stinks! So tell people to use their brains! That's what God gave us brains for, right? By the way, I love your column. Disgustingly yours, ANGELA ISAACSON OF WASH.

DEAR ABBY: People who criticize their fellow office workers for playing computer games and doing useless computer work on company time usually fall into one of the following categories:

People who hope to hang on until they retire so they won't have to learn how to operate "those things."

Administrators who command someone else to learn to use the new computer because they are too busy shuffling paper to learn anything new themselves.

Workers who are afraid that one of those instruments from outer space will take over their jobs.

Ninety percent of computer-literate managers would love to have the problem of telling their workers to stop playing computer games. When I go into the office, I see far more useless talking and eating than game-playing. More often than not, the new computer sits unused on a corner of the desk while the electric typewriters type like they did in the good old days — mainly because no training time is given, or people are too lazy to learn how to

Area Debutantes To Be Presented Sept. 9

By AMY GAVIGAN and SHANNON HOWARD Reflector Staff Writers

Eleven debutantes from Pitt and Martin counties will make their formal bows to society Sept. 9 at the annual North Carolina Debutante Ball in Raleigh's Civic Center.

The first ball, "The Raleigh Fall Festival," was held in 1923, and was sponsored by the Raleigh Merchants. Since then, the ball has been held every year with the exception of the World War II years.

In 1927, the Terpsichorean Club, made up of Wake County businessmen ages 21-35, sponsored its first ball. And the tradition continues today.

Young ladies, who will be presented by their fathers this fall, were chosen from over 200 nominators statewide.

"Invitations (to the ball) are given in recognition to the family's contribution to the social, cultural and civic life in North Carolina," said Dorothea L. Bitler, publicity chairman for the 1988 ball.

"The leader of ball, which is an honorary position, is chosen from the Wake County Debutantes, while 14 other assistant leaders are chosen from outside Wake County," she said.

"Most of the young ladies (selected) are very career-oriented and active volunteers in their communities," Mrs. Bitler said. "This is a nice social event, but we're not grooming them to be socialites."

The debutantes are:

her summer working in a restaurant in Nags Head and enjoying one of her favorite pastimes — surfing.

"I like to surf," Miss Miller said. "I've lived at the beach every summer for most of my life, so I just kind of picked up on it."

Basketball, softball and playing intramurals at school are other things Miss Miller enjoys.

Miss Miller's chief marshal will be her father, while her assistant marshal has not been chosen.

A white floor-length dress with lace trimming the hemline, short puffed sleeves, drop waist and a sequined neckline was chosen by Miss Miller for the ball.

CARI ELIZABETH SMITH

Cari Elizabeth Smith is a rising sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where she is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority. She plans to major in business but is not yet sure of her career plans.

Miss Smith has spent the last two summers and most holidays working for Brody's of Greenville. "I may incorporate fashion/retail with my business major somehow," she said. "I'm not sure yet."

In her spare time, Miss Smith enjoys sports. "I like to play a lot of sports; tennis, water-skiing, and snow skiing," she said. "And I love to dance."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. James Smith, her father will be her chief marshal and her assistant will be David Eidson. Eidson is an accounting major at East Carolina University.

Miss Smith hopes that experiences gained as a debutante will aid her in later years.

"For one thing, I'll meet a lot of people and that will help me have confidence and to be able to adjust to situations where I don't know many people," she said.

Miss Smith took a statistics course in the first session at East Carolina University summer school "because I was bored when I first got home and I wanted to get it (statistics) out of the way."

MARILYN VIRGINIA BROWN

Marilyn Virginia Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Zeno Brown attended Peace College in Raleigh her freshman year but plans to transfer to East Carolina University in the fall.

"It (Peace College) did a lot for me academically, but I wanted to be in a different environment," she said. "Peace could be confining."

A rising sophomore, Miss Brown plans to major in business with a possible concentration in accounting. She spent the first part of her summer taking a course in health at Peace. She is in her third summer working with Overton's Sports Center in the shipping department.

"I run a UPS computer," Miss Brown said. "I ship and confirm most of the parcels that go out."

Miss Brown enjoys the beach, being in the sun and "traveling anytime I can." She says her favorite places are the Bahamas, where she traveled for spring break, and Paris.

Mr. Lester Zeno Brown will be her chief marshal and Chris Coble of Greenville will be her assistant marshal.

Miss Brown will share her debutante experiences with her mother, who was also a debutante, and says her favorite aspect of the activities is "meeting new people from different places."

MARY ELIZABETH BECKMAN

Mary Elizabeth Beckman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Beckman III of Farmville, has chosen her father to be chief marshal at the annual ball. Joshua McKinnon Hickman of Greenville, a rising sophomore at Davidson College, will be her assistant marshal.

A graduate of Arendell Parrott Academy, Miss Beckman was president of her senior class, homecoming queen and the DAR Good Citizen Award recipient.

Miss Beckman has studied piano for 10 years and violin for 12. She also enjoys playing tennis and water-skiing.

Miss Beckman, a Benjamin C. Dunford Violin Scholar, is a rising sophomore at Salem College. She will serve as treasurer for her class and plans to continue participating in the 12-member singing group, The Archways.

Working as a senior counselor at Camp Morehead in Morehead City has occupied most of Miss Beckman's time this summer.

Miss Beckman will wear the white gown that she wore for her farewell address as Pitt County's first Junior Miss in 1987 to the Debutante Ball in September.

ELIZABETH DAVIS ALLEN

Elizabeth Davis Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Alexander Allen III, of Farmville, attends St. Mary's College in Raleigh. She will serve as chief marshal for the 1988-89 school year and as secretary-treasurer for her sophomore class.

Miss Allen hopes to transfer to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in the fall of 1989 to pursue a career enabling her to work with children.

Attending summer school at UNC-W, Wrightsville Beach, filled the first part of Miss Allen's summer. The remainder of the time has been spent playing tennis, water-skiing and enjoying the beach.

Miss Allen's mother, aunts and sister each made their respective debuts which, Miss Allen says, will add meaning to her experiences.

"It is very special to me that I will join my grandmother, (the late) Margaret Davis Allen, my mother and sister in making my debut," Miss Allen said.

William Alexander Allen III, who served as his wife's marshal when she made her debut, will attend as chief marshal for his daughter. Miss Allen has chosen Tilden White Collier of Kinston as her assistant marshal. Collier is a student at the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill where he is a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity.

ANNE BOUSHELL STOUGHTON

Anne Boushell Stoughton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dickson McLean Jr. and the late Mr. Jack Elliot Stoughton, spent the first part of her summer working in the customer-service department of Overton's Sports Center, Inc., but plans to spend the rest of the summer working on projects of her own.

Miss Stoughton will be returning for her sophomore year at St. Mary's College in Raleigh but plans to transfer to North Carolina State's school of design her junior year to "pursue an advertising major, possibly graphic design."

"I've been making T-Shirts at home, some to sell to friends, some to give as gifts," Miss Stoughton said. "Most are decorated with summer scenes, but some for my friends are specialized."

Tommy Stoughton will assist his sister as chief marshal. Tim Clark, a rising sophomore at East Carolina University and a business major, will be her assistant marshal.

"Being asked by the Terpsichorean Club to be in their annual Ball is a wonderful honor," Miss Stoughton said. "My father was a member of the club and I feel it is important to keep all the traditions and ideals he believed important for his family."

Leigh Hadley Taylor graduated as Valedictorian from Arendell Parrott Academy in Kinston before entering the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill last fall. She is a rising sophomore at UNC majoring in biology. She hopes to attend graduate school in a medically related field.

A member of Chi Omega sorority, Miss Taylor spent the first part of her summer taking classes at UNC-CH. She is spending the remainder of the summer at her family's summer home near Bath.

In her spare time, Miss Taylor enjoys photography, water- and snow-skiing and traveling.

Miss Taylor is the daughter of Vance Bunting Taylor, a native of Bethel, and the former Sue Worthington of Winterville. Several members of Mr. Taylor's relatives have been debutantes.

Lewis Wardlaw Lamar Jr. of Rocky Mount will be her assistant

MARTHA ANNA TAFT

Martha Anna Taft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marvin Taft Jr., will follow in the footsteps of her two sisters, Louise Carmen Taft and Camilla Henderson Taft, as she makes her debut in September. The two sisters and an aunt on Miss Taft's father's side made their respective debuts.

A rising sophomore at Peace College in Raleigh, Miss Taft plans to major in art. At the completion of her second year, she is considering transferring to East Carolina University.

Miss Taft enjoys reading and vacationing in the mountains with her family when she is not busy working at Kids World Day Care Center in Greenville.

Joseph M. Taft Jr. will assist his daughter as chief marshal while Mack Aldridge, an incoming freshman at Duke University in Durham, will be her assistant marshal.

Miss Taft believes meeting people is the most rewarding part of her debutante experiences.

"My favorite parts are the parties, getting to know people, and seeing people I haven't seen in awhile," Miss Taft said.

MARIAH SUSAN EHRICH TAYLOR

Mariah Susan Ehrich Taylor is a rising sophomore at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., majoring in economics in hopes of pursuing a career in politics.

"I hope that with a major in economics I can pursue law to facilitate a career in politics," Miss Taylor said.

Miss Taylor interned with both Sen. Jesse Helms and Sen. John East while attending Salem Academy in Winston-Salem, which helped to spark her interest in politics.

Miss Taylor is a member of the Chi

Omega sorority and the Eta Sigma Phi Fraternity, an honor fraternity in the study of the classics.

In her spare time, Miss Taylor enjoys tennis and snow skiing. She is spending her summer in Atlantic Beach working at the Dock House in Beaufort.

The youngest of five girls, Miss Taylor will follow her sisters, Lauren, Eliza, Adelia and Martha, in making her debut Sept. 9. She will wear the same dress that each of her sisters wore for their debut.

marshal and her father will be chief marshal.

Miss Taylor has toured and performed in England with violin students in high school, and has studied dance, piano and violin for eight years.

ELIZABETH LESLIE WARREN

Elizabeth Leslie Warren, a rising sophomore at the University at Chapel Hill, plans to major in business.

"I'm interested in an MBA-JD which is a four-year program where you get your business and law degree at the same time," Miss Warren said. "I'm thinking about going into corporate law."

Miss Warren is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Daniel Warren III and Ms. Elizabeth Ross Warren. Ms. Warren and her two sisters were debutantes in Cabarrus County.

Miss Warren has chosen her father as chief marshal and Burt Aycock, a rising sophomore at Appalachian State University in Boone, as her assistant marshal.

Miss Warren attended the first session of summer school at UNC-CH taking business statistics and golf.

"I'd never played golf before. I was really bad, but it was a lot of fun," she said.

Working at Brody's Department Store in the mall takes up much of Miss Warren's time but when she's not busy she enjoys skiing and windsurfing.

ALISON COX HENDRIX

Alison Cox Hendrix graduated from J.H. Rose High School and attends East Carolina University, where she is a rising sophomore. Her minor is in dance, but Miss Hendrix is undecided in her major.

Miss Hendrix, the daughter of Mrs. James Curtis Hendrix and the late Mr. Hendrix, has performed in the "Nutcracker" with the N.C. Academy of Dance Arts for six years and has taught ballet and pointe classes for the academy.

Working as a hostess at Annabelle's restaurant for a year, Miss Hendrix "enjoys meeting new people every day."

Next summer, she plans to spend one month abroad in various European countries.

Other debutantes in Miss Hendrix's family include cousins, Melissa Messick and Elizabeth Messick, both of Wilmington.

Miss Hendrix has chosen her uncle, John Messick of Wilmington, as chief marshal, but has not decided upon an assistant marshal.

Miss Hendrix feels that experiences gained this summer will open doors for her.

"Becoming a debutante has broadened my horizons, and enhanced my social activity," she said. "I have really enjoyed meeting people from across the state. Any girl given the opportunity, should become a debutante."

CHAMBERLEE RUTH MILLER

Chamberlee Ruth Miller of Williamston is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harrington Miller, the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodland Finley Ruth Jr. of Windsor, and Mr. William John Miller Jr. and the late Jean Harrington Miller of Williamston. She is the great-granddaughter of Mary Flanagan Harrington and the late Walter Lancaster Harrington of Greenville.

A rising sophomore at Peace College in Raleigh, Miss Miller plans to major in pharmacy. She spent the first part of her summer taking physics at North Carolina State University, required for her major.

Miss Miller plans to transfer to Campbell University or to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill after completing her two years at Peace.

She is spending the remainder of

Bed-Wetting Breakthrough
Worried about when your child will stop bed-wetting? We believe bedwetters are deep sleepers and find the following remedies usually do not work: restricting fluids, using drugs, offering rewards, getting them up or using punishment. Bedwetting causes loss of self esteem and embarrassment about spending the night with friends for fear of wetting the bed. Nightly, 10-15 million children and adults suffer from enuresis (bed-wetting). 2% of all bedwetters have a physical disorder. So, if you have not already done so, consult your doctor. It is hereditary, psychologically damaging, and can be treated after age four. Most often parents are told, "Don't worry, your child will outgrow it." Now this problem can be cured in a few weeks, so don't delay help for many harmful years. Bedwetting is costly to maintain. Wet-NO-More® can save families $5-$10 a week on diapers, soap, and hot water for laundry and baths. Wet-NO-More® is FDA registered and your family's success is money-back guaranteed.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lost more ground today as rising interest rates kept the pressure on the market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 7.83 to 2,031.47 in the first half hour of trading.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 310 up, 546 down and 490 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 48.65 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Major banks raised their base lending rates by a half-percentage point to 10 percent on Thursday — a more than three-year high — in reaction to the Federal Reserve's drive to push all interest rates higher to curb inflation.

The Fed increased its benchmark discount rate by the same amount, to 6.5 percent, on Tuesday.

The prime rate increase, the second in a month, puts the key lending rate in double digits for the first time since June 1985.

In the credit markets today, prices of long-term government bonds fell by roughly $5 for each $1,000 in face value, putting their yields in the 9.45-9.5 percent range.

The government said its producer price index of finished goods rose 0.5 percent in July. This was in line with advance inflation estimates, but analysts said some traders were troubled by the 0.6 percent increase in the index after the volatile food and energy components were excluded.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines dropped 3/8 to 118 3/8; Coca-Cola lost 1/4 to 37 3/8, and American Express was unchanged at 28.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 41 to 148.19. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .32 at 296.42.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.16 to 2,039.30.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE, with 638 up, 811 down and 526 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 173 million shares, against 200.95 million in the previous session.

Burmese President Resigns

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Sein Lwin resigned today as president of Burma and from all his other major posts, state-owned Radio Rangoon said, after thousands of people protested his 17-day rule with violent demonstrations nationwide.

Troops have killed at least 95 people in massive anti-government protests since Sein Lwin became president on July 27, the radio said. The People's Assembly elected him to replace Ne Win, who resigned after 26 years in power.

However, Western diplomats said the death toll may be in the hundreds, and unconfirmed reports reaching Bangkok put the figure as high as 1,000. The broadcast gave no reason for the resignation, and no successor was immediately named. The radio said a special meeting of both the central committee of the Burma Socialist Program Party and the People's Assembly would meet next Friday.

Earlier today, a Burmese guerrilla leader called on rebel groups to launch a nationwide offensive against Sein Lwin's government.

Radio Rangoon said the 92nd meeting of the party's central committee today accepted Sein Lwin's resignation as the party chairman, by far the most powerful political position in the country.

Kinston Plant Set

Lenoir County officials say they will use the $3.5 million to extend water, sewer and natural gas service to the plant site. They also expect to apply to the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development for a $600,000 grant to support improvements related to the project.

Lenoir County Community College will provide job skills training for the plant, Martin said.

"Once again we have shown that by working effectively with local economic development agencies, we can bring new jobs and economic opportunity to rural areas of the state," he said.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS!
When you decide to buy a home you can expect a lot of questions and answers. In fact, the more questions your agent asks, the more likely you are to have a pleasant and rewarding homebuying experience.
But, just as your agent can simplify the buying process with the answers you give, you will be getting answers to your important questions too.
Expect your agent to ask you about your income, debts, and the source and amount of your down-payment. The agent will also want to know about the size home you want, as well as any special features or special neighborhoods you prefer. These questions are not asked out of curiosity, but for the specific purpose of helping you focus your home search in order to find just the right home for you and your family. Make a list ahead of time which highlights the desired amenities and features you would like to find in a home.

Then it's your turn to ask questions! In advance, make up a list of important questions to ask your agent. Perhaps you will want to know about the construction of certain homes, who built them, and the annual property taxes on them. Since there are many new mortgage loan programs available, ask about adjustable rates, closing costs and how to qualify.
Be prepared to ask as well as answer questions. You will be more informed and your home purchase will proceed smoothly.

Oiler Owner Says Gretzky's Ego Was Determining Factor

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The King finally spoke. As did the Queen. And the King's old boss. And the King's new boss.

And the Wayne Gretzky trade got more confusing amid accusations and denials of all involved.

Edmonton Oilers' owner Peter Pocklington, the man who traded hockey's most celebrated superstar, claimed on Thursday Gretzky's ego was "the size of Manhattan."

"I understand that though. If people had told me how great I was day in and day out for 10 years, I'm sure my ego would be a pretty generous size, too."

Then Pocklington said his former star faked his tear-filled goodbye at Tuesday's news conference announcing the trade.

"He's a great actor. I thought he pulled it off beautifully when he showed how upset he was," Pocklington said. "I think he was upset, but he wants the big dream."

Later, Pocklington said the Edmonton Sun, the paper which printed the interview, took the quotes out of context. Further, he would not make any additional public statements about the trade.

Then Gretzky added his voice. In an interview with the Edmonton Sun from Los Angeles, Gretzky repeated earlier statements that he asked to be traded to the Los Angeles Kings.

Gretzky said he asked to leave only after he learned Pocklington was shopping among National Hockey League teams to sell him. But he was clearly wounded by his former boss's suggestion that tears he shed were an act.

"I'm surprised and shocked by what he (Pocklington) said," Gretzky, 27, told the Sun. "But, the only thing that disappointed me was his statements of me being theatrical. That was totally uncalled for."

"I took that bit as a personal insult, but I'm still not going to get into a war of words. It's time to turn the page."

The multi-player, multi-million dollar deal has landed Pocklington in hot water with Edmonton fans and set the sports world buzzing.

Dismayed fans have been asking who is responsible for their hero's departure from the champion Oilers, who have won four Stanley Cups in the last five seasons.

"In my mind a trade was going to happen within four years (prior to his becoming a free agent), so why wait until I was 31?" Gretzky said. "I figured it was best to make a move now and kind of forced the issue."

"For nine years people have told me I've been underpaid so..."

Gretzky said he and Pocklington talked in the past about a trade, but it wasn't until after his July 16 wedding in Edmonton to Hollywood actress Janet Jones that it all came to a head.

With permission from Pocklington, Kings' owner Bruce McNall called Gretzky on his honeymoon five days after the wedding to discuss a move to Los Angeles.

While Gretzky maintains the trade was his idea, his bride laid the blame squarely on Pocklington.

"I know the whole story," Jones said in a separate interview with the Sun. "I know Wayne didn't deserve any of this."

"He wouldn't let Edmonton fans, Canada and, most important, his teammates down without good reason."

Jones explained that the phone call from McNall angered her husband.

"Wayne couldn't believe it. He said 'This is crazy!' That's where it all happened. Wayne saw the writing right there."

"Think about it," said Jones, who reportedly requested the Sun interview. "Another owner calls you and tells you that. There was no call from Pocklington. You play for a man 10 years and he doesn't even have the courtesy to call you and tell you what is happening."

Before the wedding, she said the couple intended to live "the rest of our lives in Edmonton" and spend time in Los Angeles during Gretzky's off-season.

Both denied Thursday that Jones's acting career lured them to Los Angeles.

"If we wanted her to have a career, she wouldn't be having a child," Gretzky said.

He revealed at Tuesday's news conference in Edmonton that Jones is pregnant.

For his part, McNall is prepared to offer his new center a lifetime contract when the player's deal is renegotiated prior to training camp. McNall said he and Gretzky agreed to renegotiate before the trade was made.

"I'd like to have as long a deal as I can possibly get," McNall said. "I think Wayne can be good for me and for hockey long after his playing career is over."

"That's what I'd like, and I think he's amenable to that kind of an idea, too. It's just a matter of getting it done. In the next week or so, we'll sit down with his people and try to work out a deal."

Gretzky signed a five-year contract with the Oilers last summer. That deal reportedly paid him about $900,000 last season, when he led the NHL in assists for the ninth straight season.

PGA Leader

Gilder Leads Attack On Oak Tree Reputation

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Oak Tree Golf Club's reputation as the most difficult par-71 in America is in jeopardy after the first round of the $1-million PGA Championship.

Bob Guilder's 5-under par 66 led a record-tying sub-par charge on Thursday over the Pete Dye-designed layout of ravines and treacherous greens.

Perfect scoring conditions of light wind, soft fairways, short rough, and moist greens set the course up for the "target golf" on which the professionals thrive.

Gilder and four other players David Edwards' course record 68 at the 7,015-yard layout which the United States Golf Association proclaimed as the harshest in the country.

Dye defended the course's lack of bite, saying "without any wind and having to water the greens to keep them soft Oak Tree is vulnerable. If the greens were faster, they would be having a lot more trouble."

Dye also said modern equipment made par almost impossible to protect. Oak Tree was opened for play in 1976.

"With square grooves, metal heads, and the lively balls, the modern player has a lot of weapons," Dye said.

Thirty-one players broke par, tying the PGA record for sub-par scores in one round, and 13 players matched par.

The PGA record for sub-par scores in one round is 31, set at Shoal Creek in 1984 and Cherry Hills in 1985.

Gilder, who finished eighth in the U.S. Open, said "the golf course was in perfect shape and there was no wind. We could fire right at the pin on every hole. I've always thought the PGA set up courses better than the USGA."

Gilder had 29 putts in his five-birdie, no-bogey round of 33-33.

Paul Azinger, the 1987 PGA Player of the Year; 1987 British Open champion Nick Faldo, Chip Beck, and four veteran John Cook each shot 67.

Faldo said "it's a tough course, but the thing that saved us was the soft greens. The course normally plays a lot tougher in the wind."

"You don't have to soup up the great courses," Beck said. "It's a great test of golf just as it is."

Craig Stadler, who double bogeyed the 18th hole to join six other players at 68, said "We'd love to play the course like this all week. We like it like this instead of the wind blowing 25 miles an hour where you have to invent a shot every hole."

Also at 68 were Greg Norman, Mike Reid, Jay Overton, Australia's Peter Senior, Ray Floyd, and Rocco Mediate.

The round was Norman's first since he injured his left wrist in the U.S. Open and he said he was "happy and excited" about the way he played.

"My wrist felt good on shots coming out of the rough and everything is going to be great for the next three days," he said. "I had a few butterflies at first but I got over them. It

Hoosier Tires Ousted At Glen

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Everybody is back to one brand of tire again this weekend at Watkins Glen International. But this time it is Goodyear.

It is the latest episode of the NASCAR stock car tire war, which has seen newcomer Hoosier Tire challenge the entrenched Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

As the race teams prepared for the first practice session on the 2.4-mile, seven-turn road course on Thursday, a random check revealed that the Hoosier tires brought in for Sunday's Budweiser at the Glen were wider than the rules allow.

Dick Beatty, Winston Cup competition director, was unable to pass the tire tolerance "hoop" over several of the more than 1,000 tires brought to the track by Hoosier.

It was precisely the same infraction that sent Goodyear home with more than 1,000 disqualified tires on the weekend of the July 24 race at Pocono International Raceway.

"We were too tight on the hoop," said Ray Hill, stock car field manager for the Hoosier, the small Indiana company which manufactures only racing tires.

"No, it wasn't a new tire," Hill said. "It was our Riverside (Calif.) tire. I don't think they ever checked them there; at least I don't recall them ever doing it."

After measuring several Goodyear tires, with no problem, Beatty went to the Hoosier compound and picked two tires at random for checking. Both were too wide to allow the hoop to slide over them.

He then allowed Hoosier representatives to go to their truck and pick four more tires for testing. Those also failed inspection.

competition for NASCAR, said he was somewhat surprised that Hoosier hadn't learned from Goodyear's problem in July.

"Certainly I would think with the seriousness of the situation of the decision at Pocono, everyone would be aware that we are inspecting tires and that if they don't conform to specifications, we're going to deal with the matter," Richter said. "I would think that would make people concerned."

Hill said, as in the case of the disallowed Goodyear tires, the Hoosier tires were barely too wide.

"Marginal is what you would call it, I guess," he said. "But the tires will be usually consistent. We checked 12 to 15 tires and they were all too wide."

Hill said he called company owner Bob Newton to explain the situation. "There wasn't much he could say,"

Hill said. "Really, the least said about it, the better. It would just be stirring up a hornet's nest. We'll go home and get ready for next week (at Michigan International Speedway)."

A semi-trailer truck carrying all of Hoosier's Watkins Glen tires left the track Thursday, moments before the first stock car practice session of the weekend.

Phil Holmer, stock car field manager for Goodyear, said his company has plenty of tires available for Sunday's race on the 2.428-mile road circuit.

"NASCAR requires each (tire) company bring a minimum amount," Holmer said. "I think it's 500 a side. We've got 557 rights and 537 lefts. Last year, we were the sole supplier here and only used 657 tires, total."

Two Rejoin Pirates After Suspensions End

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Two of five East Carolina football players suspended because of disciplinary action during the spring 1988 semester have been reinstated to the team, according to head coach Art Baker, as the Pirates opened practice for the 1988 season.

Ernest Pendleton, a redshirt freshman defensive back, and Shane Hubble, a redshirt freshman defensive lineman, were reinstated by Baker upon arrival at fall camp Tuesday. The two were involved in separate assault incidents this past semester which led to their suspensions.

"Shane Hubble and Ernest Pendleton have met the requirements and have been reinstated to full status," Baker said.

Baker added that the status of junior defensive end Ernie Logan, who was also suspended last spring for disciplinary actions, is still being examined.

"His evaluation period will end Friday (today)," the coach said. "I have been well pleased with the things Ernie has done (to be eligible for reinstatement)."

Errol McCorvey, a redshirt freshman defensive back, and Lewis Wilson, a reserve defensive back, were also suspended during the past spring semester, but neither has been reinstated.

McCorvey, a redshirt freshman in 1987, was found guilty in April of assault on a female and was sentenced to two years in prison. Pendleton and Wilson were also involved in the incident, but charges against Pendleton were dismissed and Wilson was acquitted.

McCorvey appealed his case to Superior Court, and he was found guilty Thursday and given a two-year suspended sentence, ordered to spend 48 hours in jail, fined $200 and ordered to pay $239 to cover medical bills.

McCorvey said on the witness stand Wednesday that he does not plan to attend ECU this fall.

Logan was found guilty of assault and inflicting serious injury in Pitt County District Court April 19 and sentenced to 48 hours in the county jail. He was also fined $200 and placed on probation for one year.

Hubble was sentenced to three years of probation and ordered to pay $700 in damages in connection with an assault and damage to property case on March 31. Hubble appealed the case, but later decided to accept the District Court judgment.

Hubble was also found guilty of disorderly conduct April 26 and given a 60-day suspended sentence, placed on probation for one year and fined $50 plus court costs.

"When those players were suspended, they were suspended by the Athletic Department through coach Baker because their actions misrepresented not only the athletic department and the football program, but also the university," said ECU athletic director Dave Hart.

"From that point on, they were given a set of guidelines and they were expected to meet them in order to be eligible for reinstatement for the fall."

"In each of those cases, especially those with nothing pending, Coach Baker has kept me updated about these players and that they have done what we expected them to do."

Baker refused specific comment on any individual case because he said it was a matter of privacy for the individual players involved.

"I have 130 football players to administer discipline to," he said. "The problem represents 5-6 percent. Every time a young man has a discipline problem, when they get to a certain point, they are jeopardizing their position on the football team. I notify them if there are any further incidents."

Wilson did not have his scholarship renewed.

"He was (already) on disciplinary probation when that (incident) occurred," Baker said.

McCorvey's status is still undecided. Hart said he could not say anything regarding any cases that are still involved in litigation. That situation will be reviewed on an individual basis after the matter is decided in the courts.

In testimony Wednesday, McCorvey said he does not plan to attend ECU this fall.

Baker said he has tried to deal with the players in question on an individual basis.

"It's like my own children," he said. "My children have not always done things exactly the way I've wanted them to do, but when they did something wrong, I never let them forget that I cared about them and loved them."

"At the same time, I want people to know that Errol McCorvey, Shane Hubble and Ernie Logan, some of these guys that have been in trouble, I've been in their homes, I know their parents. There is good in everyone of those young men. They made mistakes, they're sorry. But it does not reflect in any way that we don't care about them. They can turn these instances into situations where they are positive."

Hart said the suspensions, as well as the reinstatements, are part of a policy adopted by the university at the beginning of 1988.

"We have delivered a very clear message to our athletes," he said. "I perceive this as a positive move. These suspensions really had nothing to do with a guilty-not guilty (decision)."

"They had to do with misrepresentation. Now being fair to the student-athletes involved, if they have taken appropriate corrective actions to be reinstated, I think a person must also have an avenue to have another chance if he or she proves themselves worthy."

Joe Holmes, a junior defensive end, was suspended from the team Monday regarding an alleged assault.

According to Hart, once the matter is cleared up, his case will be treated the same as the other suspended athletes and his status will then be reviewed on an individual basis.

"I felt this indeed was a misrepresentation and was not a guilty-not guilty (decision)," Hart said. "It is a situation our athletes must avoid. As you attempt to be consistent and fair, you must realize (also that) each case is different."

"This policy is not punitive. It is meant to be educational. We're very cognizant of the fact that we want to be fair and consistent."

"We will implement one of four seminars this fall where we have an obligation to educate and orient our student-athletes to the spotlight they are in and make them understand what visible representatives they are to this university. Their actions have to be exemplary."

Baker said the players have to remember they are public figures.

"Anytime that members of our football team create incidents or react to incidents in way that embarrasses our football program, I'm disappointed," he said. "One of the points that I continue to point out to them is that they live in a glass house."

"They have to learn to react and be aggressive on the football field, but they also have to learn how to live in society without that. It is tough to discern between the two sometimes, but that is part of the value of football that makes it worthwhile."

Big Seventh Inning Lifts Kernersville To Title, 10-8

KERNERSVILLE — Snow Hill gave up four unearned runs in the bottom of the seventh inning as Kernersville rallied to take a 10-8 victory in the final game of the State American Legion baseball championships Thursday afternoon.

Snow Hill had worked up a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series, but Kernersville won the final game played in Snow Hill, then won two more back on its home field to rally and win the state title. The victory earned them a berth in the Southern Regional Tournament which starts next week in Gainesville, Ga.

Snow Hill went into the bottom of the seventh with a 7-4 lead in the game, but was unable to cut off the Kernersville rally once it began.

Eric Norris started it off with a solo homer, cutting it to 7-5. Kevin Cockrell then walked and Cameron Browder followed with a single. Both were sacrificed up and Matt Swain singled to score Cockrell. That base hit came when Todd Mewborn was late covering first base from the mound. Mike Gordon then reached on an error, loading the bases.

After two men were out, Dennis Redman struck out, but the ball got away from Tommy Eason and scored Browder with the tying run. Successive walks to Chad Stamper, Norris and Cockrell brought in three more runs to give Kernersville a 10-7 lead.

Snow Hill spotted Kernersville a 1-0 lead in the first, then came back to score three in the top of the second. Shay Beaman singled and advanced on an error, taking third on an infield out. He scored when Anthony Jones grounded out. Walt McKeel singled and Cedric Collins was hit by a pitch. Both advanced on a wild pitch and George Green singled in McKeel. A throwing error on the relay allowed Collins to score also.

Kernersville rallied for two in the bottom of the inning to tie it at 3-3, but Snow Hill again moved out, scoring two in the third. Beaman singled and Chris West cracked a two-run homer, making it 5-3.

Both teams scored single runs in the fifth and Snow Hill added another run in the seventh. In the fifth, Snow Hill scored when Eason walked and Beaman doubled. In the seventh, T.J. Johnson singled, moved up on an out and scored on a hit by Beaman.

Following Kernersville's eruption in the seventh, Snow Hill scored once in the ninth and had the tying runs on base when the game ended.

Beaman went 5-5 in the game while Eason and McKeel both were 2-4. Cockrell, Browder and Swain each had two hits for Kernersville.

Snow Hill closes out its year with a 26-19 record.

South Applauds Latest IOC Effort

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea is welcoming the International Olympic Committee's latest attempt to persuade North Korea to enter the Summer Games in Seoul.

"We are still very anxious to have their participation," Shin Hyon-ung, director general of international press for the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee, said today.

On Thursday, the IOC urged Communist North Korea to demonstrate its desire for Korean unity and reconciliation by entering the Olympics, being staged by its archrival, South Korea.

In a letter to both Koreas, IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch proposed that the North and South Korean teams march side by side in the opening and closing ceremonies, each carrying its own flag, while a single Olympic flag preceded the overall Korean group.

Samaranch described this as a "highly symbolic event" that would demonstrate a "strong desire for dialogue and reconciliation."

"If North Korea accepts the IOC offer, it would be a very good idea to march in parallel with North Korea in the opening ceremony," Shin said. He added: "The most important thing is having their participation."

Kim Chong-ha, president of South Korea's Olympic committee, said the side-by-side march proposal "completely coincides with the position of the (South) Korea National Olympic Committee as well as the meaning of the Seoul Olympic Games and the national aspiration."

Kim received the South's copy of Samaranch's letter.

North Korea is one of six nations that have not accepted their invitations to next month's Olympics. The others are Cuba, Ethiopia, Nicaragua, Albania and the Seychelles. A record 12,000 athletes from 161 nations are expected to compete in Seoul.

The North has said it will boycott the Games unless it is made a co-host. The IOC rejected formal co-host status for North Korea, but had offered to let it stage five events from the Games. With the Games opening Sept. 17, however, Samaranch has indicated it may be too late for North Korea to organize all of those events.

The final decision on when it is too late is up to the IOC, Shin said, but technically and logistically, moving events now would not be easy.

"We are very worried that time is running short," he said. "We have to wait as long as we can."

North Korea has proposed that the parliaments of the two Koreas meet to discuss the Olympic issue and other matters, including a non-aggression pact between the two sides, divided since 1945. They fought a bloody war in 1950-53.

The two sides still are talking about preliminary meetings to set up such a full-scale discussion.

Samaranch's letter said the Olympic movement "spared no efforts to offer all the national Olympic committees conditions which will allow them to accept the IOC's invitation to take part in the Games."

"The IOC wishes to reaffirm its fervent desire to bring the youth of the whole Korea into the Games of the 24th Olympiad," it said.

Seahawks Rally To Down 'New Attitude' Detroit

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — After two NFL exhibition games, it appears that Detroit's "New Attitude" is only a slogan.

The Seattle Seahawks, who let their football do the talking, overcame a 13-0 deficit to beat the Lions 16-13 in overtime Thursday night.

Tonight, the only game scheduled is New Orleans at Phoenix. On Saturday, it's Dallas at the Los Angeles Raiders; Cleveland at Tampa Bay; Green Bay at Indianapolis; Cincinnati at Buffalo; Kansas City at Atlanta; Washington at Miami; the New York Jets at the New York Giants; San Francisco at Denver; San Diego at the Los Angeles Rams; and Houston vs. New England at Memphis, Tenn.

The two games Sunday are Philadelphia at Pittsburgh; and Chicago vs. Minnesota at Goteborg, Sweden, the first NFL contest played on the European continent.

If nothing else, Seattle's victory showed clearly the difference between the NFL's haves and have-nots.

The Seahawks, one of the NFL's elite teams, has played two struggling clubs — Phoenix and Detroit — and defeated both. The Lions now have played two quality teams, losing both to Cleveland and Seattle.

"We played a lot better than last week," Detroit coach Darryl Rogers said. "What we have to do is sustain. If you can't get it done on offense in the second half, you're not going to last very long."

"I was pleased with the first half but we were stinko in the second half."

So stinko that Garry James, the game's leading rusher with 51 yards on eight carries, including a 16-yard touchdown, was talking about quitting.

"I think between now and next game, I'm going to be thinking about what I want to do," James said. "I feel like I bust my tail to get the job done, but at game time people are still going to be saying, 'He's not tough enough,' because of the injuries."

"Who would care if I retire? It's like I'm not here anyway."

James will probably cool off. So will his coach. But they won't soon forget how the Seahawks were able to turn it on, almost at will at crunch time.

James scored on a 16-yard run in the first quarter and Eddie Murray kicked field goals of 27 and 35 yards in the second quarter. Then Seattle started to play football.

Both teams started rookie quarterbacks in the second half — Lee Saltz for Detroit and Kelly Stouffer for Seattle.

A third-quarter field goal by Norm Johnson and a 4-yard TD run by Lucius Floyd in the fourth quarter got Seattle back in the game.

Then, with 2:13 remaining, Knox gave Stouffer the hook and put Jeff Kemp back in. Kemp engineered a 67-yard, nine-play drive that ended in Johnson's 28-yard field goal with 31 seconds remaining.

Kemp took the Seahawks 21 yards in four plays and Johnson won it with a 43-yarder 4:07 into the overtime.

"Kelly played a good game," Knox said. "He did what he was supposed to do and he executed well."

Stouffer, who had attempted just one pass against Phoenix, completed 8-of-11 for 123 yards against Detroit. Kemp hit 7-of-16 for 108 yards.

NOT AGAIN
Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon injured himself walking across a street in Goteborg.
"I tripped over a curb last night and sprained my ankle a little bit," he said. "The ankle still hurts, but I hope will be all right for the game."

McMahon thinks he will be able to lead the Bears at the 52,000-seat Ullevi Stadium.

"Hopefully, the people will enjoy the game," McMahon said. "I think it's good that Europe is starting to get a taste of American football. It's a great game and it's nice that the Europeans are taking interest in it."

IN GOD WE TRUST

The agent for Mike Merriweather, the Steelers most valuable player last season, says the linebacker will sit out the season if Pittsburgh won't increase his salary or trade him to San Francisco.

"He has it in his mind now that he would like to go to theology school and play for the 49ers," agent Mike Blatt said.

Merriweather is attending Golden State School of Theology in Oakland, Calif., and wants to become a Baptist minister. He asked Steelers' president Dan Rooney to trade him to the 49ers so he can combine football with theology and be near his home in Stockton, Calif.

COMINGS AND GOINGS

Randy McMillan, a 6-foot, 219-pound fullback waived by Indianapolis last week, was signed by the Miami Dolphins. McMillan spent six years with the Colts and gained 3,876 yards on 990 carries with 24 touchdowns.

The Atlanta Falcons released Curtis Rouse, a 344-pound offensive tackle picked up from San Diego and signed Reggie Camp, a 6-4, 280-pound defensive lineman claimed off the waiver wire from Cleveland.

Reserve linebacker Woody Vann, a special-teams standout during his first four years with the Los Angeles Rams, was put on waivers.

Pro Football's Injuries Mount As Doctors Worry

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Blood-stained and limping, the wounded men troop off the field and line up for the doctors.

Is this war? No, but it's close. It's the NFL, where team physicians juggle their love of football with ethical dilemmas similar to those of Army surgeons as they cope with the game's weekly carnage.

The American Medical Association has urged a ban on boxing because of the brain damage that can result from repeated head blows.

The fiery death of an auto racer every so often prompts cries to shut down that sport.

Complaints about pro football, though, are much quieter, despite long lists after each game of aching players neatly divided among probable, questionable, doubtful and out.

No sport matches football for the sheer number of injuries, and that is a source of worry for many doctors.

"It is ethically difficult," says San Francisco 49ers consultant Dr. Jeffrey A. Saal. "The physician's role, historically, is a healer. This is a mutation of that role. We're not healing, we're patching up and sending people back in, knowing they have a risk of repeat injury because they're in a violent sport."

It may be easier for battlefield doctors to rationalize fixing up wounded soldiers so they can go to war again, Saal says, because they're fighting for life and country.

Pro football players are fighting for their livelihoods, which may be no less important to them but may not justify the toll in wrecked bodies.

Dramatic injuries, like Joe Theismann's badly fractured leg or Darryl Stingley's paralysis from a broken neck, are in some ways less disturbing than the hundreds of other disabling injuries.

NFL teams reported an average of 1,450 injuries each year from 1983 through 1986, when the league averaged 1,582 players per season, according to a study by the NFL Players Association.

Twenty percent of the injuries in the weekly post-game reports were among the most serious — "out" or "doubtful," the union says, and another 35 percent were listed as "questionable."

In the NFL, "out" means the club believes there's no chance the player will play the next game; "doubtful" means there's a 75-percent chance he won't play; "questionable" means 50 percent; and "probable" means 25 percent.

"One of the major roles of team physicians in the NFL is what I term the 'court soothsayer,'" Saal says. "You have to be the predictor for the coach, to say how long someone's going to be out or how healthy a guy is to make a trade."

The doctor makes an educated guess based on his "gut feeling" and experience, Saal says, "but that's a difficult position to be put in. Where do they teach you that in medical school? What book do you read that in?"

Equipment has improved over the years and the NFL has made rule changes to reduce injuries — barring certain types of tackles, stopping plays when a quarterback is in the defender's grasp, penalizing late hits. Yet the injuries continue to mount.

Perhaps it is time for doctors, players and coaches to press for much more significant changes, even if it means cutting into profits or sacrificing some of the violence that is part of football's appeal.

The players union study found a 19-percent higher overall injury rate on artificial turf than on grass. Among the more serious injuries — those listed as out or doubtful — there were 28 percent more on fake grass.

Players generally complain about the jarring effects of running or landing on artificial turf, but a detailed study needs to be done to determine the severity and types of injuries that occur.

The training camp and exhibition season is the worst of times. Some players show up out of shape, rookies are pitted against veterans and everyone is fighting for jobs with dog-eat-dog ferocity. Preseason injuries would be cut down, Saal believes, if players would report to camp in peak condition rather than try to work themselves into shape.

However, the players' union objects to contract rules requiring pre-training camp workouts and there's no way to enforce fitness.

Once the season begins, coaches shrug off injuries as "part of the game" and hope their rosters are deep enough to compensate for lost players. Larger rosters might take some pressure off wounded players to stay in the games.

Many of the serious injuries occur on kickoffs and punt returns when players are running toward each other at higher speeds. Rules could be amended to address those hazards.

At playoff time or during a winning streak, a doctor's ethics about allowing a player to stay in a game "get pressed to the max," Saal says.

"It's easier to decide to pull someone out of the game when you're having a losing season, or it's not the playoffs," he says. "The only way you're going to keep them out of the Super Bowl is if they're in a wheelchair."

No one knows who'll be in the next Super Bowl, but it's certain hundreds of players will be hurt before the season ends.

was a great boost for my confidence."

Floyd joined the chorus of players giving Oak Tree high marks.

"I don't think a course has to be made unplayable," he said. "I think the course was set up perfect. The rough is playable but also penal."

"We had perfect conditions and you can't really say anybody shot the grass off the course. You have to hit great shots."

Defending champion Larry Nelson shot 70 and British Open champion Seve Ballesteros shot 71. U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange was at 72 along with Tom Watson, seeking to win his first PGA crown.

Five time PGA champion Jack Nicklaus was at 72. Arnold Palmer, 59, trying to win his first PGA title, was 3-over at 74.

The weather even did the pros a favor, reaching only 90 degrees. They had been practicing in near 100-degree temperatures.

Women's Olympic Squad Begins The Real Action

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — No more pickup games for the U.S. Olympic women's basketball team. Tonight, the competition starts to heat up with a game against Cuba.

When Coach Kay Yow's team began its trials in Raleigh, its scrimmage competition consisted of a group of men from the local YMCA. In Colorado Springs, the women had two scrimmages against the U.S. men's handball team. Finally, after two-a-day drills for two weeks, Yow's team gets its first major pre-Olympic test.

"It's great to play someone other than a pickup team," said Susan Yow, Kay Yow's younger sister and an assistant coach on the team.

"The change has been good for us," Susan Yow said. "It's another segment in our progress to Seoul."

Another positive of the game will be the opportunity to redirect the aggressive play, which Kay Yow said occasionally led to overheated emotions at Colorado Springs.

"We've had to stop and have a couple of talks every once in a while," Yow said following a three-hour workout, "because as time goes by, competing for a position is really tough. We talked about competing with people versus competing against people and tried to get our mental outlook and attitude right."

The contests with the Cubans will be the opener of doubleheaders in the Carolinas Invitational, a series of Olympic exhibitions which also will showcase baseball, gymnastics, cycling and boxing.

The men's basketball team will meet a group of NBA stars Friday night and Sunday afternoon following the women's games. The basketball

Greenville Swimmers Qualify For Tourney

Four Greenville swimmers qualified to compete in the North Carolina Swimming Long Course Age Group Championships to be held in High Point Aug. 5-8.

Kristy Cain qualified in the Girls 10 & Under division by finishing 12th in the 100 fly with a time of 1:29.80 and 27th in the 50 fly with a clocking of 41.34.

Two boys qualified in the 13-14 division. Josh Glienke placed 17th in the 50 freestyle with a time of 28.46 and 35th in the 100 freestyle at 1:04.05 to be eligible and David Kelly placed in the 24th spot in the 50 freestyle with a time of 29.02 and in 32nd place in the 100 freestyle with a clocking of 1:04.05 to qualify.

The final qualifier from the Greenville Swim Club was Trey Stroud in the Boys 15-18 division. Stroud finished 55th in the 50 freestyle with a time of 28.28 and 45th in the 100 freestyle with a clocking of 1:00.47.

Tyson Set To Defend Title Against Bruno

LONDON (AP) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson is set to defend his crown Oct. 8 against Frank Bruno at Wembley Stadium, British promoter Jarvis Astaire says.

Astaire, co-owner of Wembley, Britain's foremost sporting venue, said Thursday that Tyson agreed to the date only two weeks after he announced he was pulling out of a Sept. 3 fight and taking "six to eight weeks off."

"The lawyers worked it out last night after Tyson returned home from Los Angeles," Astaire said. "We will have a 60,000 capacity, which is the same as we were planning for Sept. 3."

Bruno has been the World Boxing Council's No. 1 challenger since last October, and the World Boxing Association made him a leading contender earlier this year.

His bout with Tyson was originally scheduled for June, but the 26-year-old British fighter was forced to wait when the American decided instead to meet Michael Spinks on June 27.

After Tyson dismantled Spinks in 91 seconds, the 22-year-old champion became embroiled in a dispute with his manager, Bill Cayton, and stunned the boxing world by announcing his retirement.

Cayton and Tyson eventually came to terms, leaving Cayton still holding the managerial reins, but Tyson more in control of his own destiny.

Both Astaire, and British co-promoter Mickey Duff, feared that if the postponement was more than a month they would have to take the fight indoors because of worries about the weather.

But Duff received assurances that there was only a 10 percent chance of worse conditions in early October than early September and so Wembley Stadium was kept as a possibility.

Washington Loses Bid To Stay In Coastal

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Murphy will be allowed to stay in class 1-A and its teams will be eligible for the playoffs each year despite its 2-A enrollment, according to a ruling by the realignment committee of the N.C. High School Athletic Association.

Murphy, the two-time defending state 1-A football champion, could not be placed in a 2-A conference because of its location in the western corner of North Carolina, the committee decided Thursday.

Then, after a 30-minute discussion, the panel altered its May decision and dropped a restriction that would have made the school's teams ineligible for the 1-A playoffs in two consecutive years.

The other eight appeals to the committee were rejected, although the committee wrestled at length with having a six-team 3-A league, the Mid-State, in the heart of state while other nearby 3-A leagues have eight members. The Mid-State had asked that another 3-A team be added to the conference.

The committee, in an 11-6 vote, lifted the playoff restrictions for Murphy after an emotional plea from Murphy principal Robert Hendrix. Although the school has the enrollment of a 2-A school (460 students), its closest league game in a 2-A conference would be 130 miles through the mountains. Travel time would stretch to four hours each way for some of the more distant games.

"Everybody here knows it is not realistic for us to be in that 2-A league," Hendrix said. "You aren't going to schedule a Tuesday night basketball game 200 miles away from home in the mountains of North Carolina."

The committee also rejected:
— Washington's appeal to be moved from the Tar-Roanoke 3-A Conference to the Coastal 3-A.

— A request by Burlington Williams, which had been placed in the Metro 4-A Conference, to be placed in the Mid-State 3-A.

— Lee County's bid to join the Capital Area-I 4-A Conference.

— Oxford Webb's request to leave the Piedmont Athletic 4-A and join the Mid-State 3-A.

— The Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf's request to be moved from the Carolina 1-A to the Tobacco Belt 1-A.

— Shelby Crest's bid to be placed in a 3-A conference, although it is 4-A by enrollment, because of poor gate receipts in the Tri-County Conference.

— A request by Sun Valley, a member of the South Piedmont Conference, to be placed in a league with fewer than nine members.

Charlotte Shows Off New Coliseum

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Some 20,000 people, wearing everything from formal wear to baseball caps and blue jeans, came to watch Charlotte become the new home of the Southeast's largest arena — a $54 million coliseum won the praise of evangelist Billy Graham.

"This dedication is an historic night in the history of Charlotte," Graham during Thursday's ceremonies. "It's one of the finest facilities in the world and I've had a lot of experience with arenas and stadiums."

Graham, a Charlotte native who dedicated the city's first coliseum 33 years ago, said the new coliseum was a symbol that "Charlotte is taking its place among the great cities of America ... A symbol of Charlotte's unity and cooperation."

"A magnificent showplace," Gov. Jim Martin said.

The opening night celebration also featured parades, a laser light show and dozens of musicians, dancers and other performers, including Charlotte's Moody Brothers and an appearance by B.J. Thomas, who performed several of his hits, including "Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head."

The coliseum's coming out party also attracted Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, Charlotte Mayor Sue Myrick and Charlotte Hornets owner George Shinn, who received the biggest ovation from the crowd.

The event was broadcast live by two of the city's television stations.

Some of those who attended the opening shared Graham's enthusiasms for the new coliseum.

"It's something we didn't want to miss," said Sherry Hite of Charlotte, who came with her husband and their two young sons. "It's something my children can say 30 years from now 'We were here.'"

Nancy Smith of nearby Lucia, N.C., said she had planned to watch the festivities on television but was talked into coming Thursday night by her grandson, Mark Mangum, who had waited for hours to get the free tickets.

"I'm glad he dragged me out," Mrs. Smith said. "This is history."

But outside, things did not run quite so smoothly.

Despite a new $22 million highway — Tyvola Road Extension — and a computerized system of lights and reversible drivng lanes, traffic backed up several miles.

At 6:30 p.m., Fezzi Akbay was a mile from the new coliseum's 8,000-car parking lot. "It will be over before I get there," he complained.

Coliseum director Steve Camp said too many drivers chose the southern route to the new building, which jammed the coliseum's turn-in road and parking lot.

Workers were busy Thursday adding finishing touches to the sprawling, sandstone-colored arena, which was financed by a $47.4 million bond issue four years ago. The official opening comes nearly three years to the day that ground was broken at the site on the city's west side.

From the beginning, the new arena has been called the Charlotte Coliseum, but that's also the name of the city's current sports arena. The city council is expected to vote later this month on a recommendation by the coliseum authority to name it The Charlotte Crown.

City officials expect the 465,000-square-foot facility and its 25,000 teal-green seats to attract major sports and entertainment events that have not come to the city in recent years because of limited seating and parking at the old coliseum.

The new facility will gets its first sports events Friday night, when the men's and women's U.S. Olympic basketball teams take on a squad of NBA all-stars, including North Carolina native Michael Jordan, and the Cuban national team. The games are part of the three-day Carolinas Invitational, a tune-up to the summer Olympics.

On Saturday, the U.S. Olympic gymnastics team will put on an exhibition at the coliseum. On Sunday, the basketball teams will go at it again.

The coliseum also is home to the Charlotte Hornets, who will open play in the NBA at home Nov. 4 against the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament — which hasn't been held in Charlotte since 1970 — already has been booked at the coliseum for 1990 and 1991. Other tournaments also have been booked.

Questions On Drug Testing Remain

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — It remains to be seen how much long-range impact a California court may have on the NCAA's drug-testing program.

But the state judge, ruling the NCAA's program unconstitutional, did re-open the debate in colleges around the nation on whether — and how — the NCAA can require its athletes to undergo the tests.

"There's a bit of ambivalence," said Jim Delany, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference. "Some people wonder how testing fits into university life, when you're testing athletes but not other students."

That was apparently a key point in the ruling Wednesday by Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Conrad Rushing in a suit brought by Stanford University and two of its athletes. Rushing declared the program unconstitutional. The ruling applies only to Stanford, and almost certainly will be appealed. But it could be used as a precedent if other legal challenges are raised.

NCAA schools voted overwhelmingly in January 1986 to test at NCAA championships and football bowl games, not during the regular season. Many schools have their own separate testing plan.

"I have seen no evidence that the sentiment of the majority of the membership has changed," NCAA President Wilford S. Bailey said.

At least one NCAA school, Eastern Kentucky, decided Thursday to suspend its own drug-testing program in the wake of the California ruling.

NCAA Executive director Dick Schultz said the drug-testing program remains the perview of NCAA members.

"This program to test athletes participating in NCAA championships and certified post-season events was adopted by the NCAA member colleges and universities throughout the United States in 1986," Schultz said.

"Such a program was instituted because of the members' interest in protecting the health of the student-athletes, reducing peer pressure and the temptation to use drugs, and ensuring fair competition for the student-athletes and the public, educating athletes about drugs and detering drug abuse in sports competition."

Bailey said the constitutionality of the program has been twice upheld in federal court.

"The right to engage in NCAA competition is not a right guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution," Bailey said. "It's a privilege. And if an individual wishes to compete in NCAA championship events, the individual must be prepared to comply with the rules established by the membership."

In Louisiana in December 1986, a federal court denied the injunction sought by Roland Barbay, an LSU football player who tested positive for steroids and was declared ineligible for the 1987 Sugar Bowl.

Earlier this year in Seattle, Federal District Judge Walter T. McGovern, in a motion for preliminary injunction, ruled the NCAA's program "would likely succeed on its merits."

"In other words, it was likely to be proven to be a constitutional program," said Carol Nicolls, an assistant attorney general for the state of Washington.

Nicolls cautioned against putting too much interpretation on the ongoing court battles.

"At this point, it's too early to say where all this is going," Nicolls told The Associated Press. "Everything is still in the preliminary stage."

Eastern Kentucky athletic director Don Combs decided Thursday to suspend his school's testing program "in light of the legal climate right now."

"We were bringing in freshmen this week in football and volleyball and were going to have drug-testing," Combs said. "But the legal climate does not appear to be favorable at this time. We will continue the educational part of the program."

Bailey and other NCAA officials said they knew of no other schools that had taken similar action.

Rushing said the NCAA test "invades student athletes' privacy," and that it "interfers with the athletes' right to treat themselves with appropriate over-the-counter medications as other students do."

Ironically, it was a resolution five years ago by the Pacific 10 Conference, to which Stanford belongs, that first urged the NCAA to look into drug-testing.

After much discussion, NCAA schools voted overwhelmingly in January 1986 to begin testing for performance-enhancing substances such as steroids as well as "street" drugs like as cocaine and marijuana. Many schools have established their own programs for in-seasing testing.

"There's no question but that there is an element of invasion of privacy," Bailey said. "And until there are effective ways of testing for drugs that do not require that, this is necessary in order to have an effective drug-testing program."

"We wish we did not have to invade privacy at all. We wish there was no question of vioalton of constitutional rights. But we think these issues are so important, it justifies it." Tom Hansen, executive director of the Pacific-10 Conference, said many schools "look at this in a different light from Stanford."

"Everybody has some concerns about the intrusion of the rights of the individuals," Hansen said.

Reds Top Dodgers In 10, 9-8

By The Associated Press
It sounded as if the Cincinnati Reds had just won the pennant. They didn't, but they might have taken the biggest step toward making a run in the National League West.

The Reds entered the bottom of the ninth inning down 8-6 to the Los Angeles Dodgers, who lead the division. Eric Davis led off with a single and stole second. Paul O'Neill singled for his fourth hit of the game and Jeff Reed singled home Davis. O'Neill scored on Jeff Treadway's sacrifice fly.

In the 10th, Kal Daniels singled, moved up on a groundout and scored the winning run on Davis' single off Dodgers ace reliever Jay Howell. That prompted the rest of the Reds to rush onto the field to congratulate Davis.

Cincinnati, which took two of three games with Los Angeles, now trails the National League West leader by six games. The Reds were as far back as 11 games two weeks ago.

"It was a great game," said O'Neill, who led the Reds with a solo homer, a double and two singles in five at-bats, giving him nine hits in his last 12 at-bats. He has hit a homer in each of his last three games. "I'm just happy to be a part of it."

"It was the biggest game we've played all year. Being six out is a lot different than being out eight ... It was fun coming in here after the game. There was a lot of screaming and yelling, a lot of enthusiasm. It was fun to see."

Not for the Dodgers, who have not won a series since sweeping Pittsburgh from July 22-24.

Despite the loss, the Dodgers remaining 1½ games in front of Houston, which was beaten 6-0 by San Francisco. Elsewhere, it was New York 9, Chicago 6; Pittsburgh 6, Montreal 1; Philadelphia 1, St. Louis 0; and Atlanta 2, San Diego 1.

"I'm basically exhausted," Dodgers slugger Kirk Gibson said after hitting a homer and three doubles, stealing a base and scoring four times. "It was something we felt we should have won, but didn't."

Reds manager Pete Rose doesn't think they'll win the division, either.

"I just think they're going to come back to reality," Rose said. "Tonight's game is just verifying it in my mind. They used their whole bullpen, and we still got (19) hits."

The Dodgers used six pitchers. "They threw their best at us," O'Neill said. "Howell's the best in their bullpen. We didn't give up."

Giants 6, Astros 0

San Francisco won a series from Houston for the first time in seven tries, taking two of three, both on shutouts. After Don Robinson one-hit Houston the previous night, Atlee Hamaker pitched a five-hitter. Will Clark, who is 6-for-10 against Nolan Ryan this season, and Kevin Mitchell hit consecutive homers.

"It's a situation where Don and I have risen to the occasion," Hamaker said. "We were setup men and now were in starting roles. To find a staff that can go that way is unusual."

The Giants play the Dodgers four times in Los Angeles, beginning tonight.

"We feel we can catch them," Manager Roger Craig said. "I feel Houston is the team to beat. Everybody is talking about Houston and Los Angeles, but we're in there, too."

Mets 9, Cubs 6

The Mets were in danger of being swept by the Cubs in a three-game series at Wrigley Field for the first time since 1980. Then Kevin McReynolds sent a Rich Gossage pitch over the center-field wall for a grand slam, capping a five-run rally in the ninth inning.

The Mets trailed 6-4 entering the ninth, but Len Dykstra singled in a run and, one out later, Pat Perry, 4-4, walked Keith Hernandez, loading the bases. Perry fanned Darryl Strawberry, then was relieved by Gossage, who allowed McReynolds' second grand slam this season.

Gary Carter hit his 300th career home run leading off the second inning against Al Nipper. The shot to left was his ninth homer of the season and his first since May 16, a span of 79 games.

"I'll be a good trivia question," said a relieved Carter of his 225 at-bats between homers. "In my whole career I never went more than two months without a homer."

Pirates 6, Expos 1
Doug Drabek got his sixth consecutive victory as the Pirates stayed five games in back of the Mets in the East. Montreal, which opens a four-game series in New York tonight, is 6½ behind.

Drabek, 11-5, whose last loss was on June 21, allowed five hits, struck out five and walked two in seven innings. Jim Gott earned his 20th save even though he yielded a solo home run to Hubie Brooks in the eighth inning.

But Pittsburgh scored four runs in the ninth. R.J. Reynolds had a bases-loaded double and Barry Bonds added a two-run single.

Phillies 1, Cardinals 0

Ricky Jordan's one-out double in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Chris James with the game's only run.

James walked with one out, then Jordan lined the first pitch to left-center.

Braves 2, Padres 1

Rookie Terry Blocker, batting only .130, drove in his first major-league run with a seventh-inning triple as the Braves snapped a four-game losing streak. Blocker lined the triple in to left-center field off Jimmy Jones, 7-10, who had yielded only three hits in the first six innings. Dion James had doubled with one out and Bruce Benedict flied out, setting up Blocker's game-winning hit.

Rookie Pete Smith, 5-11, retired the first 10 Padres he faced and turned in his second complete game with a seven-hitter. He fanned a career-high eight and walked none.

Dale Murphy hit his 21st home run for Atlanta.

300 Homers For Carter

After Three Months Carter Hits 300th

CHICAGO (AP) — After taking nearly three months to hit his 300th career homer, New York Mets catcher Gary Carter says he is part of a good trivia question.

Carter hit the milestone homer Thursday in a 9-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"I'll be a good trivia question," said a relieved Carter, who had gone 225 at-bats between homers. "In my whole career I never went more than two months without a homer."

Carter says now he can concentrate more on playing the game. "The monkey is off my back and we can get on to other things now," he said.

His manager, Davey Johnson, said the monkey is off the whole team's back. "It wiped off some pressure and now we'll be able to wait another three months for 301," Johnson said with a laugh.

Carter, 34, has 275 home runs as a catcher. That ranks him fourth on the all-time list for that position, behind Carlton Fisk, Yogi Berra and No. 1 Johnny Bench.

"It's wonderful that I'm in such good company. I dreamed as a kid to make the majors, so this is really just extra special," Carter said.

Leading off the second inning, Carter hit a 2-2 pitch into the left-field bleachers off Cubs starter Al Nipper.

"I had faced Nipper in the World Series and in spring training, so I kind of knew what pitches he throws," said Carter, who connected on a low fastball.

Nipper had pitched for the Boston Red Sox in the 1986 World Series.

Carter hadn't hit a homer since May 16 against San Diego.

"I pressed pretty often during that time and it was brought to my attention every day," he said.

"It's a nice feeling. It was a long time coming but very special. But more important, it was nice to come back and win the ballgame. It was a long, hot day and this was a total team effort," Carter said of the three-hour, 16-minute game on a muggy afternoon.

The veteran catcher had a very mixed day as a batter and behind home plate. Besides the homer, Carter went 0-4, threw out a Cub runner trying to steal second, allowed a batter to reach first when he interfered with his swing and permitted a run to score from third on a passed ball.

Carter, who broke into the majors in 1974 with Montreal and has been a mainstay on a New York club that has never finished worse than second place in the last four years, had a career-high 31 homers in 1977 and tailed off to 20 last year.

Despite his homer drought this summer and the whole team's lack of punch in recent weeks, Carter had been hitting fairly well of late — 19-of-63 for a .302 average in his last 19 games. He entered Thursday's contest, batting .252 in 107 games, but had only eight homers.

Teenagers Want Kimball Out Of Olympic Trials

BRANDON, Fla. (AP) — A group of teen-agers, disappointed that 1984 silver medalist Bruce Kimball has not withdrawn from the Olympics after killing two of their brethren, is passing a petition aimed at influencing him to do so.

"We were hoping for him to withdraw from the Olympics," said Shari Wilson, 18. "But he didn't so we had to take action."

Hillsborough County authorities say Kimball's speeding car crashed into a crowd at a popular teen hangout Aug. 1, killing two teen-agers and injuring six others. Kimball admitted drinking at least four beers before the accident, according to investigators.

The petitioners are friends of the victims.

Diving trials are scheduled Wednesday through Aug. 21 in Indianapolis to determine who will represent the United States in the Summer Games in Seoul, South Korea.

"I don't think it would be right for my little brother to see Kimball's picture on the front of a Wheaties box," said Jennifer Beck, 17, who organized the petition drive that started Wednesday.

The petition, which the teen-agers intend to send to the U.S. Olympic Committee, reads in part:

"We, as Americans, strongly feel he (Kimball) is not the appropriate person to be representing our country, nor does he project the image of respect or admiration. The Olympics are a privilege to participate in and we feel, as United States citizens, that he lost the privilege while driving under the influence of alcohol, which resulted in the deaths and permanent maiming of several children."

Replacing The Greek Is Biggest Challenge

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — Pro Football Hall of Famer Dick Butkus is hardly recognized as he walks the streets in Europe's latest NFL venue.

Practically no one paid attention to former Chicago Bears linebacker as he walked down the street in downtown Goteborg on Thursday.

"Well, a few people did recognize me," Butkus said. "One kid, who told me he plays for the Goteborg Giants (football team), asked for an autograph."

Butkus likes it that way, not being recognized.

"That's one of the reasons why I like it here in Sweden," said Butkus, whose wife's parents came from the Stockholm area. "There is no particular attention paid to you here."

Now 45, Butkus says his new job — replacing Jimmy the Greek on the NFL Today — is one of his biggest challenges off the football field.

"This is a big challenge because of the situation that I'm put in," said Butkus, who also stars in "My Two Dads," a TV sitcom.

"Everybody will be watching and see how I do, whether I will pick off here (Jimmy the Greek) left off or if I'm a bust or whatever. Career-wise it's a big move for me also."

Butkus, who is a color commentator for WGN Radio in Chicago for the Bears' preseason game against the Minnesota Vikings at this southwestern Swedish city on Sunday, retired in 1973 because of knee problems after nine NFL seasons.

One of the greatest middle linebackers in pro football history, Butkus was an All-Pro in all but one of his seasons.

"I've had four operations on my knee, two when I was playing," Butkus said. "It bothers me sometimes, if I have to stand on something hard or whatever."

But Butkus doesn't regret playing football.

"No way, I'd do it all over again," he said.

A lot of people don't think the Bears will do very well this year, but Butkus doesn't know why they're saying those things.

"I think they will be right there," he said. "It's between them and Minnesota in their (the NFC Central) division."

"They'll be a contender if (quarterback) Jim McMahon stays healthy."

Cars And Drivers Equal In Series

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — The cars are equal and so, apparently, are most of the drivers in the International Race of Champions series.

Heading into Saturday's final round of the 12th IROC series, defending champion Geoff Bodine, winner of the IROC race at Michigan, holds a 42-40 lead in points over 1986 champion Al Unser Jr.

But no less than eight of the other 10 drivers in the all-star series, featuring identically prepared IROC-Z Chevrolet Camaros, remain at least mathematically in contention for the $200,000 prize that goes to the overall winner of the four-race $739,600 series.

Bill Elliott, winner of the IROC opener at Daytona, is third with 39 points, followed by Terry Labonte, 38; Dale Earnhardt and Scott Pruett, the Riverside winner, both 37; Chip Robinson, 30; Al Unser, 28; Al Holbert, 27, and Bobby Rahal, 19. All entertain at least some hope of overtaking Bodine in Saturday's 30-lap, 72.8-mile race.

The other two starters, Roberto Guerrero of Colombia and Chris Cord, each missed one of the three previous IROC events with physical ailments and fell out of the points chase.

Bodine was in much the same position last year, when he came into this race leading Unser Jr. by two points, and went on to win the race and the title.

"The situation isn't quite the same as last year," Bodine said Thursday after practice. "The one big difference is the top five or six drivers have a point difference that is just a few points, I expect a much stronger race than last year.

"I watched Al Unser (Jr.) practice this morning. He ran a whole race out there. You think he's serious? And Bill Elliott was out there practicing. He never does that. There will be a lot of pressure."

The younger Unser, who won this race two years ago to clinch his IROC title, said, "Geoff just flat gets around this racetrack very good. We just need a good, fair start. Last year was not an ideal start for me and it was an ideal start for Geoff. He just got a little jump on me and I couldn't catch him."

Pruett, who will start ninth Saturday, said, "It's going to be a little tougher starting from the back of the pack, but I'm just going to have to get some guys at the start, work hard on the others, drive a clean race and have a good car."

The drivers will start in rows of two, according to the point standings. The cars, as usual in IROC, will be selected by each driver in a blind draw just prior to the race.

Indians Snare Defeat From Jaws Of Victory

By The Associated Press
 Grounder to shortstop ... error.
 Grounder to pitcher ... error.
 Throw home ... error.
 Grounder to shortstop ... error.
 With two outs in the ninth inning Thursday night, the Cleveland Indians treated the baseball like a hand grenade and turned a 3-1 victory over the Texas Rangers into a 5-4 loss.

Cleveland had a two-run lead with two outs and none on. Geno Petralli's ground ball went through shortstop Ron Washington for Error One. Oddibe McDowell singled to right and Curtis Wilkerson loaded the bases on a fielder's choice grounder to Washington, whose throw to second was too late to force McDowell.

Steve Buechele then bounced a grounder in front of the plate that Jones grabbed and threw past first, letting three runs score on Error Two. Buechele went to third as catcher Andy Allanson made Error Three.

Cecil Espy's grounder skipped past Washington for Error Four, allowing Buechele to score for a 5-3 lead. "It wasn't off target," Jones said of his throw to first baseman Willie Upshaw. "He was just trying to keep from getting his glove into the runner. He pulled away and the ball hit off his glove."

"I'm not a bad fielder," Washington said. "I'm just in one of those spells where your rhythm is off, just like happens to a hitter."

"Oddibe's play at second made the whole inning," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "They draw the curtains with that one. He made an outstanding effort."

Washington, who made Cleveland's second and fifth errors of the game, said he would not allow the sloppy fielding to fluster him.

"I'm not dropping my head. I don't care if the fans boo me. I'm going to accept it, just the same as if things were going good."

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland beat California 7-2, Toronto beat New York 6-5 in 11 innings; Milwaukee beat Boston 4-0, Kansas City beat Baltimore 6-5 in 12 innings and Chicago beat Milwaukee 4-3. Detroit and Minnesota were off.

Ron Kittle hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth for Cleveland, which has lost 11 of 12.

Mitch Williams, 2-4, pitched two innings of relief for the victory, despite giving up a two-run pinch double to Carmen Castillo in the seventh. Dale Mohoric got the final two outs for his fifth save.

Texas took a 1-0 lead in the second on Wilkerson's RBI single. Cleveland scored three times in the seventh on Washington's pinch single and Castillo's double.

Athletics 7, Angels 2
 Mark McGwire hit his first grand slam after DeWayne Buice walked in the go-ahead run in the eighth inning as Oakland won its fourth straight and 11th in its last 13 games.

Dennis Eckersley, 3-2, allowed one hit in 1 2-3 innings, an eighth-inning home run to Brian Downing that tied the score 2-2.

Walt Weiss singled off Terry Clark, 5-1, to open the eighth. Luis Polonia sacrificed and Buice relieved. One out later, Jose Canseco was walked intentionally and Carney Lansford got an infield single, loading the bases for Ron Hassey, who walked on a 3-1 pitch. McGwire then hit his 21st homer on a 1-2 pitch.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 5
 Jesse Barfield stole second and then scored on catcher Don Slaught's throwing error with two outs in the 11th inning as the Toronto completed a three-game sweep, the first sweep of the Yankees this season.

Barfield singled with one out off Dave Righetti, 3-3. One out later, with Nelson Liriano batting, Barfield was safe at second when Slaught's bouncing throw hit him in the leg.

The ball caromed into shallow left and Barfield kept running, barely beating Rickey Henderson's throw home with a hook slide.

Duane Ward, 8-1, got the victory, Toronto's fourth straight. The Yankees, temporarily rescued on Don Mattingly's two-run homer with two outs in the ninth, have lost seven of nine. They were 2-5 on their homestand.

Henderson stole four bases, tying a Yankees' club record for steals in a game.

Brewers 4, Red Sox 0
 Don August pitched a six-hitter for his first major-league shutout and Rob Deer and Joey Meyer homered in the fourth inning.

Boston, which won 19 of its first 20 games after the All-Star break, has lost seven of its last nine.

August, 7-5, struck out four and walked one. Wes Gardner, 5-3, allowed five hits in seven innings and all four runs.

Royals 6, Orioles 5
 Kevin Seitzer's sacrifice fly scored Bill Pecota with one out in the 12th inning as Baltimore became the first AL team in 10 years to be swept in a season series. Kansas City won all 12 games.

With one out, Pecota singled off Tom Niedenfuer, 1-3. Kurt Stillwell singled Pecota to third for his fourth hit, and Seitzer hit a sacrifice fly to left.

Jeff Montgomery, 5-2, pitched one inning of hitless relief for the Royals, who got a first-inning grand slam from Danny Tartabull.

White Sox 4, Mariners 3
 Dave Gallagher singled home Kelly Paris with the go-ahead run and Chicago snapped a three-game losing streak.

Paris singled to lead off the eighth, advanced to second on Bill McGuire's passed ball and scored on Gallagher's two-out single off Mike Jackson, 6-4.

Jerry Reuss, 8-7, gave up seven hits in seven innings. Bobby Thigpen pitched two innings of two-hit relief for his 25th save.

Harold Baines hit a three-run double to tie the score 3-3 in the seventh.

Winning Run

Toronto Blue Jay Jesse Barfield slides across home plate as New York Yankee catcher Don Slaught tries to make a tag in the 11th inning

Bodybuilder Bryniarski Gives New Meaning To The Word Big

By Gary R. Blockus
 L.A. Times-Washington Post
 News Service

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — Imposing doesn't seem the proper word to describe Andy Bryniarski. Incredible is more apt.

Bryniarski, a Lansdale, Pa., resident, gives new meaning to the word big. The handsome brute stands 6-foot-3 and tips the scales at close to 250 pounds.

While he did play defensive tackle at North Penn High School, he hardly qualifies as a "Refrigerator." Still, he is just starting to heat up with some appliance-size accomplishments in the world of bodybuilding.

He will be featured as one of the up-and-coming new bodybuilders on an American Muscle Magazine segment, which will air Aug. 28 on ESPN. He won the AAU Teen-Age Mr. USA contest in Des Moines, Iowa, last Saturday, and this Saturday, he will compete in the Tournament of Champions in Los Angeles.

ESPN will carry the Tournament of Champions on American Muscle Magazine, and Bryniarski will be the subject of a feature segment. American Muscle Magazine will also carry the Teen-Age Mr. USA contest later in the year.

So what makes the finely-chiseled Bryniarski such an attraction? He's a mere 19 years old.

"I haven't seen any teen-agers that have impressed me that much," the reserved youngster said prior to a workout preparing for the Teen-Age Mr. USA. "I should be the biggest guy. I've never seen a teen-ager bigger than me."

Indeed, no one was bigger than him in Iowa. "I was the biggest guy in the contest. Now, I'm going to compete in the Mr. America and Mr. Universe (both AAU) Sept. 24 and Sept. 25 in Tucson, Ariz. I will be the youngest person ever to compete in both contests!"

Bryniarski obviously feels confident going into this weekend's contest. "The only thing is some small guy with good symmetry might be ripped, but I feel I'm very symmetrical," Bryniarski added.

He is also optimistic because of the attention he has received from promoters such as Lou Zwick, the president of American Sports Network, the company responsible for American Muscle Magazine.

"He called me a couple of years ago," Bryniarski explained. "He heard good things about me through local promoters and gyms. He asked me to send him some photos. He liked what he saw and he kept in touch."

These last two weeks are the biggest of the teen-ager's life, but not the most important. The distinction of the most crucial time in his life came five years ago.

"I was always athletic and was a competitive swimmer for seven years," he said. "For a while, though, I strayed from the pack. I hung out in the park and listened to heavy metal music. I was 5-8, 230 when I was 14 and I decided that is not what I wanted to look like."

Bryniarski had some help. His grandfather took him to a gym, where he met Laverne Schmed, a competitive bodybuilder who talked the youngster into giving the sport a try.

"The more I learned, the more I saw myself change to the point where I thought I could compete."

He entered his first contest, a local show, when he was '16 or 17, and I got killed! I was skinny then, I've gained almost 100 pounds in the last three or four years. I just stuck with it.

"I used to get discouraged when I'd see bigger guys in the gym. I used to say I'd never get that big, but then I changed my attitude and knew one day I would be better than them. I drew inspiration from the guys who were better than me. The more you learn, the more you grow, the more you prepare."

"I'd like to thank Mr. America, (Catasauqua's) Joe Meeko, for his help. He's my mentor."

"I'd like to give special thanks to the entire staff at Gold's Gym Lehigh Valley for their help in my contest preparation."

Swimming Records Falling Quickly At Olympic Trials

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Champion swimmers get no respect — at least from other swimmers who want to be champions.

Matt Cetlinski, who joined Mike Barrowman and Tracey McFarlane in setting American records at the U.S. Olympic swimming trials Thursday night, shattered the 400-meter freestyle mark with a time of 3 minutes, 48.06 seconds. Cetlinski beat the former record holder, Dan Jorgensen of San Diego, who was second in 3:50.10. Jorgensen's American record, set in 1986, was 3:49.41.

Barrowman, of Rockville, Md., equaled the U.S. standard of 2:13.74, which he set earlier in the day in the 200-meter breaststroke. Former record holder Steve Bentley of Fountain Valley, Calif., finished fifth.

"I was just hoping to God that I could maybe make it under 2:15 and squeak in," to the Olympic team, Barrowman said.

McFarlane, of Palm Springs, Calif., a native of Canada who was granted U.S. citizenship in April, was timed in 1:08.91 in the women's 100 breaststroke, breaking the American record of 1:09.53 set by Tracy Caulkins in 1981.

"Just because it's American makes it a lot nicer," McFarlane said.

Another American record holder was defeated as Angel Myers of Americus, Ga., beat Mary T. Meagher of Louisville, Ky., in the 100 butterfly in the non-record time of 59.77 second. Meagher was clocked in 59.82.

"It gives me a little bit more confidence, knowing that she (Meagher) can be beaten," Myers said.

Meagher, 23, still holds the American and world 100 butterfly records, which she set in 1981. She was asked if either would ever be broken.

"There's a little tyke out there that has the build and the discipline and mind to put it all together and do it — it'll just be a matter of a little while, I'm sure," she said.

Meagher, a 1984 triple gold medal-winner, won a berth on her third Olympic team by finishing second.

A total of seven American records have been set in four days at the trials. Matt Biondi of Moraga, Calif., has the only world record, in the 100-meter freestyle.

Entering the trials, Barrowman's best previous time was 2:18.56. His two record performances were the fastest in the world this year, surpassing by nearly two seconds the 2:15.54 by Soviet Valeri Lozik.

But Barrowman, coached by Hungarian Joe Nagy, said he thought the man to beat in the Olympics would be Josef Szabo of Hungary, the 1986 world champion.

"I don't think any man alive can touch him," Barrowman said.

Kirk Stackle of San Diego, with a time of 2:16.49, also grabbed an Olympic berth in the 200 breaststroke, alongside Barrowman.

It was the second individual event in which McFarlane, who also won the 200 breaststroke, qualified for the Olympics. Susan Johnson of Boca Raton, Fla., got the second Olympic berth behind McFarlane.

Both swam this year for the University of Texas, and their coach, Richard Quick, also the Olympic coach, said, "Way to go two Longhorns."

Jorgensen's second-place finish in Thursday's 400 freestyle gave him an Olympic berth. Cetlinski, of Lake Worth, Fla., previously made the U.S. team on the 800 freestyle relay by finishing fourth in the 200 freestyle.

"It's always disappointing to lose your American record, but my main concern coming into the meet was to make the team, and if it was a subpar performance, I'd be happy with it," Jorgensen said.

He said he has been sick with a sinus infection, which he blamed on air-conditioning.

Earlier Thursday, Janet Evans of Placentia, Calif., was the top qualifier for tonight's final in the women's 800 freestyle.

Evans, already on the Olympic team in the 400 freestyle and the 400 individual medley, was timed in 8:30.78. Tami Bruce of San Diego, second behind Evans in the 400 freestyle, also was the No. 2 qualifier in the 800 in 8:34.63.

Evans' world record in the event is 8:17.12.

Paulsen Will Be Candidate

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian-candidate Pat Paulsen kicked off his 1988 presidential campaign — his sixth — by dropping a political bombshell: he's becoming a Republican.

"I'm going to New Orleans — I have to, because the Democrats tossed me right out of Atlanta," Paulsen said Thursday after declaring his candidacy. "They're not very friendly people."

Paulsen, who made his first run for the White House 20 years ago, announced his election bid on a boat in New York Harbor with the Statue of Liberty in the background.

The former regular on the "Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" didn't have too much good to say about his opponents, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Vice President George Bush.

Actress Says Anger Spurred Recovery

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Eileen Brennan says anger helped her recover from a car accident that nearly killed her shortly after the success of the movie "Private Benjamin," in which she starred with Goldie Hawn.

"I was no saint," she says in September's Ladies Home Journal. "I was angry, and anger is a powerful emotion. It increased my determination not to go under, to get well."

dicted to the painkillers she took. Two years after the accident, Ms. Brennan, 50, entered the Betty Ford Center to cure her addiction to drugs.

"We get addicted to dull the pain of life," she says. "But once we accept that life is tough and painful, we can move on and grow and evolve."

Although her television series "Off the Rack" was canceled in 1986 after only six episodes, Ms. Brennan appeared in the film "Sticky Fingers" last spring, has plans for a new television series, "Off Duty," and stars in the current film "The New Adventures of Pippi Longstocking."

Candice Bergen Will Play TV Reporter In New Series

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Candice Bergen is a glamorous film actress married to esteemed French film director Louis Malle. They have a young daughter and an elegant lifestyle divided between New York and Paris.

Nevertheless, Ms. Bergen this fall will undertake the relative drudgery of starring in a weekly comedy on CBS, "Murphy Brown."

She plays the title character, a hard-driving television reporter who has gone a few rounds with alcohol and nicotine addiction at the Betty Ford Clinic and just been sent back to her high-stress world as a correspondent on the network newsmagazine "F.Y.I."

"I wasn't quite ready to do a television series, but then there were whispers about this pilot script," Ms. Bergen told a group of TV critics. "Everybody was sort of grabbing it and there were little fingernail marks all over it, and they said, you know there's this pilot script that's as if it's been written for you."

Ms. Bergen was skeptical but finally read the script, by Diane English, during a boring plane trip.

"I got up, and it was the first time I ever made a phone call from an airplane," Ms. Bergen said. "I was then so panic-stricken that I might have lost the script, that I'd waited too long. And so I called my agent and said, what do I have to do?"

"I hadn't read a feature script that was as good as this in a long time. And I hadn't read a character that I thought was any better for me than this, maybe ever. I just was so excited at the possibility of doing this kind of work and doing comedy work."

The idea of Ms. Bergen doing comedy will not surprise anyone who saw her in "Starting Over" or on "Saturday Night Live," and it certainly comes as no surprise to anyone who has seen the pilot of "Murphy Brown."

In that episode, Murphy has just gotten out of the clinic and everybody is taking odds as to whether she'll be her old tough-reporter self without the aid of outside stimuli. Murphy herself isn't certain.

Her first hurdle is an interview with a young man whose alleged affair with a female politician caused a scandal.

Murphy also has a home life, so to speak. Her companions are a house painter-in-residence (Robert Pastorelli), who has begun a mural on her kitchen ceiling, and a collection of Motown records to which she caterwauls, a skill Ms. Bergen perfected in "Starting Over."

"I think it's hard to sing badly the first time, and then once you kind of break the bad singing barrier, it's like you're superhuman," Ms. Bergen said.

Co-starring with Ms. Bergen are Grant Shaud as the new executive producer of "F.Y.I.," who looks 14, Charles Kimbrough plays a dead-pan fellow correspondent, Joe Regalbuto, is a crazed investigative reporter and Faith Ford plays a former beauty queen more interested in reliving past triumphs than uncovering new stories.

Because of the writers' strike, the premiere will likely not reach the air until November, said Ms. English. She and her husband, Joel Shukov-sky, are co-executive producers of the series. Ms. English produced "My Sister Sam" and previously "Foley Square," two critically praised series that failed because of poor time periods.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You feel like running around town, but it is wiser to get your work load taken care of. Spend the evening with your family.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you keep an eye on your wallet and don't spend lavishly, especially for pleasure, you'll be better off. Discuss plans with your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You may not be thinking cleverly today, so listen to the ideas of family members and partners. Let your guests do most of the talking.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't mope around the house over something you can do little about. Instead get to activities that are worthwhile.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Avoid that superior who may criticize the work you are doing only because he or she is under pressure. Cut expenses wherever you can.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Today handle personal matters, and put aside worldly affairs that can wait. Be with people you like, and avoid that big show-off.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): It's not a good day to make new friends, but it's fine for improving present relationships and handling personal duties. Be romantic with your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Put aside business matters that can wait, and see your friends. You can gain many personal wishes that have been impossible to get before.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Get out and do your shopping, run important errands, and avoid an overly talkative friend who often takes up a lot of your time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Put aside the usual Saturday chores, and get into activities that can increase your income and add to your present assets. Plan a trip.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Handle practical matters today that are important, and forget recreation. Contact a co-worker who can help with some work.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Meet with associates and talk over projects that need better planning to make them work out successfully. Then make out reports.

Some defensive plays have been around so long they have almost become routine. However, that doesn't mean that they won't still succeed. This one we first came across at the Second World Bridge Olympiad, held in New York in 1964. The East defender then was Benito Garozzo, one of the greatest players in the history of the game.

At his second turn South, who was playing five-card majors, had a choice between showing a major or jumping to two no trump. With two good majors and a ruffing value, he elected to introduce one of his suits and, once the 4-4 fit was located, the heart game became the natural choice.

Declarer won the opening lead with the king of clubs, cashed the ace and ruffed a club with the ten. Had East overruffed with the jack, declarer would have been forced to make his contract. Since he still would have to concede two diamond tricks, he could not afford to lose another trump trick as well. The percentage play would have been to take a finesse, and all would have been well.

Consider what would happen if, instead, East were to overruff with the king instead of the jack, as Garozzo did. We have yet to find a declarer who would assume that the defender was falsecarding from a four-card holding including the king-jack. The natural way to proceed is to assume that West holds the jack of trumps, so when declarer regains the lead he would automatically cash the ace-queen of the suit, expecting to fell West's knave. Down one!

Space Telescope Will Open Way into Past

By STEVE WILSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — An optical telescope destined to float next year from a space shuttle orbiting beyond the haze of atmosphere will let scientists peer into the depths of the universe and 14 billion years into the past.

In orbit, the Edwin P. Hubble Space Telescope should see seven times as far as the 2 billion light years of the most powerful earth-bound telescopes.

First scheduled for an August 1986 launch, it so far hasn't looked at anything. It sits in a windowless room, wrapped in silvery thermal blankets, running up bills.

After the Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger accident halted the shuttle program, a NASA official told Congress the telescope would be expensive to "baby-sit."

"Baby-sit makes it sound like the telescope's sitting there, all ready to go," said Bert Bulkin, director of scientific space programs here at Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. Inc. "You put it in the cocoon, and just before flight take it out of the cocoon and fly it. Well, that's not the case."

Beyond $1.5 billion to build the telescope, the cost of continuing work during the first 30 months of delay will reach $400 million, according to NASA project manager Fred S. Wozniak. Faulty devices installed originally have led to dozens of alerts and driven up costs by as much as $10 million a year.

That's for a project approved in 1977 at $572 million.

The telescope was built to work in the vacuum of space and must be protected from even minute amounts of dust, moisture and noise. Its 94.5-inch primary mirror has been kept virtually free of contamination.

In the "clean room," giant fans cleanse the air through filters that can screen particles 200 times thinner than a hair. The 350 scientists, engineers, computer experts and others attending the craft must wear uncomfortable white "bunny suits," masks and rubber gloves; anyone entering must be covered completely and pass through an air shower.

The 42-foot-tall, 25,000-pound, alu-

NASA Awaits Launch

Minimum-framed spacecraft has been taken apart and almost put back together in preparation for shipping in November to Cape Canaveral via the Panama Canal. The scientific instruments, designed to be serviced every three to five years in space, have been pulled out more than a dozen times for inspections, repairs and improvements.

The Hubble got a clean bill of health two years ago after what Bulkin calls "57 nightmarish days" of around-the-clock testing using extreme cold and heat to simulate space. The longer it sat on the ground, though, the more problems it developed.

"We had alerts coming out of the bazoo," Bulkin said. When a part fails, an alert is signaled and contractors of other devices using that part are notified. Reams of computer printouts have to be analyzed.

"If it's a problem like the thermostats, where six out of about 150 of them were bad, and you're sitting on the launch pad, you replace the bad ones and go," he said. "If you have time, like we've had for the last two years, then you pull the boxes and fix them all."

Defective thermostats and resistors were replaced and more efficient solar cells and batteries added.

For its 17-day trip to Florida, the telescope will be placed in a 27-by-19-by-60-foot, hermetically sealed, steel container, moved by barge to the Oakland Army Terminal across San Francisco Bay in Alameda and loaded on a ship.

"There is a lot of anxiety about the move. The canal is not the safest area," said Bulkin. "Every time you lift it up, you're sitting there and your heart goes 'Boom! Boom! Boom!' I'm not going to be happy until it's in orbit from the time it leaves here."

In the future, such telescopes will be moved by a specially modified Army transport plane, but the plane won't be ready in time.

Meanwhile, budget-minded officials aren't the only ones concerned about the delay. So are astronomers and the European Space Agency, which paid 15 percent of the building costs and provided the sophisticated faint object camera.

The International Astronomical Union decided five years ago to hold its 1988 meeting in Baltimore, near the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, which is managing the Hubble instruments, mission operations and data.

"It was to be the centerpiece of the meeting. They expected to have their first views ready by now," said Lisa Hooker, a spokeswoman for Johns Hopkins University, which was host for the assembly last week.

"We're all frustrated by having to wait so long, but it's going to be fantastic fun when it's in orbit," said Jim Westphal, professor of planetary science at California Institute of Technology and a principal investigator on the telescope. "I suspect we're going to find many amazing things that will thrill the public, not once a year but maybe once a week."

The Hubble is named after an American astronomer who used the 100-inch Hooker Telescope in Pasadena to examine stars in the Andromeda Galaxy, the first conclusive proof of galaxies other than our Milky Way.

The space telescope is smaller than many land-based observatories, but should transmit much sharper images because it will be stationed more than 350 miles above the distorting effects of the atmosphere. It also will be able to make images in the ultraviolet or black spectra that can't be made on Earth.

Telescopes that follow the Hubble into orbit will study X-rays, gamma rays and infrared radiation.

The new view of the universe scientists for, Westphal said, is similar in impact to the vision a very near-sighted person would get by putting

The Hubble Space Telescope

Free from the distorting affect of the atmosphere and backscattered radiation from city lights, the space telescope should allow scientists to see much more than ever before.

| 1. The space telescope will be deployed by the space shuttle.   | • Observe potential planets in other solar systems.          |
| 2. Once in operation it receives stellar light through the aperture.  | • Look deeper into space and therefore further back in time. |
| 3. The light strikes the primary mirror, is reflected back to the secondary mirror where it is again reflected through a hole in the primary mirror to the focal plane. | • Observe quasars, neutron stars and indirectly black holes. |
| 4. The scientific instruments pick up the image.  | • View 350 times more volume of space.                       |
| 5. This information is then transmitted by the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite.   |  |
| 6. The satellite, in turn, transmits the information to White Sands, N.M.   |  |
| 7. It is then sent to Goddard Flight Center in Maryland where the raw data is corrected.  |  |
| 8. Finally, the data is sent to Space Telescope Science Institute.  |  | on glasses for the first time. "I'm prejudiced, but I think it is well worth the money because it will help solve some of the puzzles man has wondered about for thousands of years," he said.

"I'll let you know after it sends back some pictures," Bulkin said.

Astronomers plan to look for evidence of planets in other solar systems, study planets in our solar system in greater detail, search for "black holes" in galaxies and measure the distance between stars more accurately.

They will try, too, for a better understanding of the origins and possible fate of the universe as they gaze at light that took 14 billion years to get here — close to the beginning of time in the universe.

Scientists will be able to explore a region 350 times larger than they can, said Italian astrophysicist Duccio Macchetto.

"Looking far away means going back in time," Macchetto said. "We hope to go back to those periods in which galaxies and quasars were formed."

Health Experts Say Americans Still Overweight

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Despite greater awareness of exercise and healthy foods, many Americans remain "significantly overweight," according to federal researchers who say most government nutritional goals are unlikely to be met.

"Everybody knows what is required to lose weight, yet the prevalence of overweight doesn't seem to change much," said Dr. Marion Nestle of the U.S. Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion in Washington.

The national Centers for Disease Control, in its weekly report Thursday, reviewed the progress toward the government's 15 top-priority goals for American nutrition in 1990, including raising public knowledge of the effects of salt and lowering average blood-cholesterol levels.

"Substantial progress" has been made in several areas, and three of the goals will be fully met, researchers said.

But despite the progress, Americans will probably fall short of eight major goals, including that of getting people to lose weight, said Ms. Nestle, whose office helped prepare the report.

"The research that relates (poor) diet to disease is now incontrovertible," she said. "It's really time now to start looking at ways to implement the recommendations that everybody is familiar with — ways to improve the nutritional status of the population."

The goals that will likely not be met, she said, are:

— Having less than 10 percent of American men and 17 percent of American women over the "significantly overweight" level, defined as more than 20 percent over desired weight.

"There's just been little change on that through the years," Ms. Nestle said. "It's still about one-fourth of the country."

— Having 50 percent of the overweight population on a weight-loss program combining diet and exercise. The CDC said recent surveys show half the nation's overweight people are indeed trying to lose weight — but only half are using both diet and exercise.

— Cutting the average adult level of harmful serum cholesterol below the 200 count. In a 1976-80 survey, average cholesterol levels were 211 for women and 215 for men, down from 214 and 217 in 1971-74. "That rate of decline is not as fast as it should be," Ms. Nestle said.

— Having at least three-fourths of all mothers breast-feeding their babies at the time they leave the hospital. A 1984 survey put the figure at 61 percent, up from 45 percent in 1978.

— Having all packaged foods labeled with "useful calorie and nutrient information." Such is the case in 55 percent of packaged foods, up from 42 percent in 1978, Ms. Nestle said.

— Including nutrition counseling in "virtually all routine health contacts with health professionals." A 1985 survey showed the figure at less than 30 percent, the CDC noted.

— Elimination of cases where a child's growth is retarded because of nutritional deficiencies. Although the problem cannot be precisely measured, it persists, Ms. Nestle said.

— Including nutrition education in the required school curriculum in all states. By 1985, only 12 states had such a requirement, the CDC said.

The three objectives that researchers think will be fully met, she said, are:

— Having more than 75 percent of the population aware of nutritional risks for conditions such as heart disease and high blood pressure (fats and salt) and tooth decay (between-meal sweets). Awareness already runs as high as 90 percent in some categories, the CDC report said.

— Having 90 percent of U.S. adults aware that to lose weight they must eat fewer calories or increase physical activity, or both. The percentage was 73 in 1985 and is rising quickly, Ms. Nestle said.

— Implementation of a comprehensive national nutrition status monitoring system. It is already in place, the CDC reported.

Aspirin And Blood Clot Dissolvers Can Aid Heart Patients

By MICHAEL SPECTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — Heart attack victims treated with a combination of aspirin and the blood clot dissolver streptokinase are nearly twice as likely to survive as those who receive routine hospital care, leaders of the world's largest study of heart attack treatment reported Thursday.

In an international trial involving more than 17,000 heart attack patients, people receiving the two drugs within four hours of their first symptoms had 53 percent fewer deaths than patients given neither. Even when the therapy was delayed for up to one day, reductions in deaths were striking.

"These results are as remarkable as you will find in medicine," said Dr. Peter Sleight, chairman of the study and professor of cardiovascular medicine at Oxford University in Britain. "The implications for public health are enormous. Every doctor should pay close attention because using these two drugs properly will save tens of thousands of lives each year."

Preliminary results of the study were presented earlier this year at a meeting of the American College of Cardiology. These expanded findings will be published in Saturday's issue of The Lancet, a British medical magazine.

In the past two years clot dissolvers such as streptokinase have changed the standard for treating heart attacks. Another, TPA, or tissue plasminogen activator, is cloned from a protein made naturally in the body. But TPA, approved for sale last year, is almost 10 times as expensive as streptokinase. While many experts assume it will prove at least as effective in preventing death as streptokinase, studies have not been completed so that the two can be compared.

Heart attacks are by far the largest single cause of death in the United States, killing almost 500,000 people each year. A therapy resulting in even a small improvement in survival can save thousands of lives. The streptokinase-aspirin treatment, if used widely, would have a greater effect.

Dr. Richard Peto, chief statistician for the study and a researcher at Oxford, estimated that widespread use of the combination among the 500,000 heart attack patients who reach U.S. hospitals each year could save at least 25,000 lives. In Britain, he said 5,000 lives could be saved annually.

The study put patients into four groups at random: Those receiving streptokinase, which dissolves the blood clots responsible for most heart attacks; those receiving aspirin, which has a property that thins certain blood cells and lowers the chance that clots will form; those receiving both; and those receiving neither.

Researchers found that using either drug alone significantly improved a patient's chances of survival but that using them together was far better. To their surprise, the researchers found that aspirin appeared to solve one of the biggest problems caused by streptokinase. Patients' arteries often clogged up again not long after receiving the dissolver, in many cases faster than if they had received none at all. But when the two drugs are given together, aspirin prevents new clots from developing.

The study also found mistaken two common assumptions about using thrombolytic therapy, which uses the growing class of drugs that work by dissolving blood clots.

It had been conventional wisdom that thrombolytic therapy would prove useful only if administered right after a heart attack begins. This study found that, even when streptokinase and aspirin were given up to 24 hours after pain began mortality rates still dropped by 38 percent, although the sooner the drug was administered the better the chances are for survival.

Physicians have also been wary of giving the drugs to elderly patients, fearing to increase the chance of serious bleeding or strokes. But the study showed that people well into their eighties tolerated the regimen without problems.

"The biggest problem we have now is making sure doctors are aware of these results and what they mean," said Dr. Charles Hennekens, of Harvard Medical School, a leading researcher in heart disease who directed the U.S. arm of the study. "The remarkable reality is that fewer than one heart attack patient in five now receives thrombolytic therapy."

He and other physicians said this trial provided the most compelling evidence yet that nearly anyone who is having a heart attack should be given aspirin by their physician. Because it prevents clots, aspirin taken over a long period of time has been shown to help prevent heart attacks.
