Carter Forms Force Aimed At Drug Abuse

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Mayor Edward E. Carter on Tuesday announced the formation of a new citywide organization designed to deal with problems that undermine Greenville's quality of life.

At a press conference at the corner of Bancroft and Fleming streets — a location which Carter said is a major area for drug trafficking — the mayor described details of a new Community Improvement Association, the primary focus of which will be drug abuse. Carter emphasized, however, that all concerns which impact the community adversely will be targeted by the association.

"There are things we find that cause people to want to resort to drugs, such as delapidated housing, lack of jobs, lack of education, et cetera, and we've assembled some of the best minds in the city of Greenville to try to address some of these problems," Carter said.

Appointed as association chairman was Wade Johnson, alcohol and drug coordinator for the Pitt County schools. Carter said Sgt. Cecil J. Hardy of the Greenville Police Department will serve as vice president.

Carter said leaders from various segments of the community will be asked to serve on the association, representing local businesses, industry, religious organizations, public agencies, neighborhood groups, and educational institutions.

Also attending the press conference was Ed Walker, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce president, who has agreed to spearhead the business

'Temptation'

Representatives of a Farmville radio station presented petitions Tuesday with 7,600 or more names urging Pitt County theaters not to show the controversial movie, "The Last Temptation of Christ."

The petitions were presented at the Plaza Cinema at The Plaza Shopping Center by Tom Lamprecht, president of "Southern Gospel" radio station WGHB. Lamprecht said he understands that neither the Plaza Cinema nor the Park Theater, owned by the same company, plan to show the controversial film.

The Buccaneer Theater on Arlington Boulevard announces in its recorded telephone message about coming attractions and show times that it will not be showing "The Last Temptation of Christ." No spokesman for the Plitt Theater at Carolina East Center shopping center could be reached for comment.

The petitions delivered to the theaters by Lamprecht were circulated for about a month, he said.

The movie has been produced by Universal Pictures of California from a book by Nikos Kazantzakis. The studio announced last week that it was releasing the film a month earlier than had been planned "to answer mounting criticism."

Bush Picks Quayle For Veep

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush bantered with reporters and joked from the podium today at the Louisiana Superdome, hours before he was to be nominated for the presidency by a Republican convention still abuzz over his choice of young, conservative Sen. Dan Quayle as his running mate.

He said the response to his choice has been "overwhelmingly favorable."

Bush checked out the surroundings at the podium where he will return Thursday night to give the acceptance speech that by all accounts will be one of the most important addresses of his political life.

He seemed in a jovial mood, calling for questions from non-existent people in the mostly empty hall, banging the gavel and intoning, "Alternates, guests of the Republican National Convention, the 14th session of the 1988 convention is hereby called to order at 3:45 a.m."

Earlier today, he spoke at a "Salute to Rural America" breakfast, calling Quayle a "son of the Midwest" who would be a strong supporter of farmers. He planned a news conference with Quayle later.

The vice president spoke repeatedly of Quayle's youth in announcing the choice Tuesday, and early reactions included many comments on Quayle's youthful good looks. But top Bush aides emphasized experience in remarks today.

Quayle, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, "has more defense and foreign policy experience, if I may say so, than the Democratic ticket combined," said James Baker III, who is taking over as Bush's campaign chief.

With the suspense ended about the vice presidential nomination, the Republican National Convention was practically on automatic pilot.

As the victor over five other rivals in caucuses and primaries stretching back into the winter, Bush came before the convention unopposed.

Underscoring the importance of Texas and its 29 electoral votes in the fall election, Bush chose Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, a onetime Democrat, to nominate him tonight.

In another bow to the Lone Star state, convention planners planned to interrupt the roll call and turn to the Texas delegation — led by the vice president's eldest son, George W. Bush — to give Bush the majority needed to make him the nominee.

Former President Gerald Ford told the convention Tuesday night that Bush did not deserve to have the Democrats ask: "Where was George?"

Speaking in a hall already vacated by many delegates, Ford said, "I'll be damned if I will stand by and let anyone with a smirk and a sneer discredit the honor, service, accountability and competence of George Bush."

Former television evangelist Pat Robertson, whose army of fundamentalist Christian supporters threw a scare into the Republican establishment during the early primaries and caucuses, urged his supporters to "rally with wholehearted support" behind Bush.

Gov. Thomas Kean of New Jersey, the keynote speaker, said, "Add up the way-out programs of the Democratic Party. What does the name of Dukakis sound like to you?" The delegates shouted back the answer Kean suggested: "More taxes."

Airport Changes Rules On Fuels

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority has agreed to create new, more flexible fueling regulations, but the group unanimously voted to reissue a $50 citation against a Greenville pilot accused of improperly fueling his aircraft.

Lonnie Willer of 113 Osceola Drive, who is accused of using automobile gasoline in his aircraft and fueling the plane with handheld plastic jugs, has 72 hours to pay the fine or face civil charges.

Both charges violated the airport's fueling regulations when the instances allegedly occurred on July 15, officials said. City Attorney Mac McCarley, counsel for the authority, mailed Willer warning letters May 23 and June 1 regarding reports of prior violations.

The authority first cited Willer at its July 19 meeting but allowed Willer not to pay the fine until he could address the authority at its meeting Tuesday.

Willer claims that because the FAA approved the use of gasoline in aircraft in 1984 and because he had FAA approval to put the fuel in his plane, the local airport regulation could supersede federal rules.

Other airports in the state sell gasoline, which is cheaper and runs better in his aircraft than the aviation fuel sold at Pitt-Greenville Airport, Willer said.

At Tuesday's meeting the authority agreed to strike its regulation banning the use of automobile fuel, but airport director Jim Turcotte said he and McCarley have not been able to write new rules addressing how pilots are to load fuel into their aircraft.

Therefore, the authority agreed to reissue the citation against Willer, eliminating the reference to the violation of the old rule concerning the use of automobile fuel, but upholding the penalty against Willer for break-

Council Studies Charter Changes

Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Council and Mayor Ed Carter have expressed interest in changing the city charter relating to the form of Greenville's city government and the city attorney has begun informing the community and obtaining feedback to the particular proposals.

City Attorney Mac McCarley said Tuesday an information campaign will begin immediately in an effort to get public response over several proposed changes to the charter.

Proposed changes include:

- Increasing the term of council members from two years to four years.

- Staggering or overlapping the terms of council members.
- Increasing the mayor's term of office from two years to four years.

- Granting the mayor a vote on all issues coming before the council. (currently the mayor votes only to break a tie of voting council members)

After distribution of materials, McCarley said he plans to arrange meeting with groups to elaborate on pros and cons regarding the proposed changes and to obtain citizen input.

"We will be saying to the people, 'Here is what the council is considering and here are the options. Now the council would like your opinion on these proposed changes,'" Mc Carley said.

"If the terms of office should stay at two years, tell me so and why. If they ought to go to four but ought not to be staggered, tell me so and why. The whole purpose of this is to educate the community and to get comments," he said.

"If the comments are either neutral or positive, then I think the next part of this process will be to start moving toward preparing the community for accepting the change."

In order to make the changes, the city will have to change its charter relating to form of government which requires a specific procedure.

Statutory requirements say the city has to put forth a resolution of intent, conduct a public hearing on the matter, adopt an ordinance, and submit it to the U.S. Justice Department for preclearance.

McCarley said instead of merely complying with the minimum requirements of the statute the council indicated a desire to first receive community input on the matter.

"The paperwork to this is simple. The hard part is public education."

BUCK-NAKED BILLBOARD? — A billboard featuring New Bern television personality Will C. Morgan's face on a semi-nude male figure stares out at motorists on three signs in the Greenville area. Several people have reported the signs offend them but city officials say the advertising is legal. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Will C. Draws Attention

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Will C. Morgan's face grins at the cars and trucks passing by on the roadway. His head is topped by a hat. The body — not his — wears nothing but a tiny bathing suit.

Whether the billboard is funny — as it was intended — or offensive depends on an individual's point of view. But the semi-nude reclining man seems to have achieved its goal of calling people's attention to the Carpet Bargain Center on Dickinson Avenue as the "Largest Congoleum Dealer in N.C."

City officials said Tuesday they have received a dozen calls from people complaining that the image was inappropriate for a billboard.

But a close look by police, a city attorney and inspectors has resulted in a ruling that the billboard is legal because the figure is not nude.

City Manager Greg Knowles said, "We find it is in poor taste and offensive to some people." But he said the signs do not violate outdoor advertising ordinances or laws on obscenity.

"There is a lot of concern about the tastefulness of it," Knowles said. But the city manager said all that the city can do is notify the advertiser and sign company of the complaints.

"I think that if you were to drive by slow and take a look at it, it's obviously not a nude person. But since most people drive by fast, it appears it is a nude person," he said.

The billboards, Knowles said, are "probably in poor taste and could be offensive to a number of people. But at this point we don't see any legal problems in that there are no violations of laws or codes that we can determine."

But Knowles said, "I think that while some people may find it cute or funny, especially the guy that's pictured," the billboards "may have the exact opposite effect." The signs may be bringing the advertiser "name recognition ... but may be keeping customers away because of the method used to bring their name to the public's attention."

But Barbara Puryear, manager of the Carpet Bargain Center, seems pleased with the ad campaign.

"We've had four complaints," she said this morning, but "more positive comments."

"A lady yesterday told me she thought they (the signs) were cute. Two ladies came in from New Bern that loved them."

Ms. Puryear said the idea for the billboards came from Jeff French of the French Agency, a Greenville advertising firm. The billboards are located on Memorial Drive, on Evans Street and on N.C. 33 east of Greenville.

French said today that, "We did this with humor in mind. The face is Will C. Morgan," whom he described as a "personality in eastern North Carolina for 15 or 16 years," and who has been doing Carpet Bargain Center television ads for about a year.

But French said those that have seen Morgan know that "the body does not belong to the face. It's supposed to be done in humor, comedy."

"I'm very sorry that some people are taking the billboard with pornographic opinion. That was not at all the design when the billboard was put together."

"This billboard was my idea," French said, but it "is not a new idea. There have been many variations of this idea done across the nation," al-

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday recommended approval of a request to rezone a 40.7-acre tract on Greenville Boulevard from highway commercial, office and institutional, and residential to a shopping center designation.

The request by Ann-Carr Inc. to rezone the property, located at the northeast corner of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road across from the Hilton and Sheraton hotels, was one of the items considered by the board at its monthly meeting at City Hall.

City Planner Harry Hamilton said the Greenville planning staff endorsed the rezoning because commercial use is recommended for the tract by the city's Comprehensive Plan.

Hamilton said the size of the tract is adequate for the development of a limited access consolidated shopping center which would eliminate the existing strip commercial development along the adjacent major thoroughfare. He said no additional traffic would be generated by shopping center zoning, and CS zoning is less of a nuisance than highway commercial for adjoining property owners.

The request, accompanied with the commission's recommendation, will likely be considered by the City Council in September.

In other action Tuesday, the commission voted to deny recommendation of a request by Christine H. McCaskill to rezone a 30-acre tract north of N.C. 33, south of Proctor and Gamble and east of Country Squire Estates from RA-20 (residential/agricultural) to R6-MH (residential/mobile home).

Approximately 25 people attended the meeting to oppose the request. Speaking against mobile home zoning for the tract were residential developers, homeowners, and an industry representative.

Hamilton said the planning staff also opposes the request. He said the location of a mobile home park adjacent to the neighboring subdivision would be incompatible with the existing development. It would prohibit expansion of the desirable medium-density residential development, and the current supply of mobile home space in the city is adequate, he said.

Hamilton said representatives of the Pitt County Development Commission expressed concern that relocating industries might look unfavorably on the area if mobile home zoning existed on the requested site.

Meanwhile, the commission voted 8-1 to deny recommendation of a request by James D. Mellon Jr. to rezone a 3.26-acre tract located at the southwest corner of State Road 1725 and SR 1708 from RA-20 to IU (unoffensive industry).

The same tract was requested to be rezoned to highway commercial at the board's July meeting and was denied recommendation at that time.

A request by the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority to annex 81.7 acres located adjacent to the Pitt-Greenville Airport facility was recommended for approval, while a preliminary plat of Brasswood Apartments, located north of Greenville Boulevard and west of Laughinghouse Drive was also approved. The plat involves 176 units and 732 feet of public street on a 9.75-acre tract.

Also approved for recommendation was a request by the council to amend the subdivision ordinance by deleting the requirement of City Council membership on the Subdivision Review Board, and a recommendation to amend the Planning and Zoning Commission rules of procedure by deleting reference to City Council membership on the review board.

A request by Bernice C. Branch to rezone an 8.1-acre tract located east of Memorial Drive, west of Legion Street and being the Four Square Christian Church property from O&I to CH was withdrawn.

A request by the city's department of development to rezone a 1.54-acre tract located off the northeastern intersection of 14th Street and the railroad from R-6 and CDF (commercial downtown fringe) to IU was continued. The department's request had previously been considered by the City Council and has been referred back to the planning commission for further study and recommendation.

Hospital Studies Need For Day Care Plan

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees said they are looking at whether the hospital needs to start a day care program for hospital employees' children.

The board was told of a survey that has been conducted among employees of the hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine which seems to show that 24-hour-a-day, 7-day-a-week day care is wanted and needed by hospital employees. Several other medical centers in the state have such programs, the board was told. It was agreed that the idea would be studied.

Hospital President Jack Richardson announced that a meeting with Washington County officials to study affiliation and joint outreach possibilities between PCMH and the Washington County hospital will be held Aug. 29.

The board members were shown a film made entirely without audio other than music which depicted the services and the humanity offered at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. This film was shown during a recent hearing on whether the hospital will be granted permission by the state to add an additional 143 beds and related services.

Trustees were invited to tour the hospital's new neonatal ambulance and have its functions explained to them by transportation manager Charles Mayo.

A report was given on the training of health professionals engaged in by the hospital in conjunction with many educational institutions throughout the area. It was pointed out that 1,075 health professionals were trained by PCMH this year and 25 percent of these were later hired by the hospital.

Capital budget expenditures of $162,052 were approved. These include a sterilizer for central services at $37,200; modification to the gift shop and main lobby at $40,000; for magnetic resonance imaging, a dual console switch and laser T upgrade package at $32,767 and a display console and specialty coil at $6,200; and for the information systems, a copier with console for $5,885.

A sale of surplus hospital property was set for Oct. 7 at 9 a.m. at ABC Moving and Storage Warehouse No. 7.

A resolution was adopted affirming that the hospital's Affirmative Action Plan for the equal employment opportunity of women and members of minority ethnic groups is being followed as a matter of organizational policy.

The resignation of Dennison D. Garrett as the hospital's vice president for guest relations was announced.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Delay

Need For Expansion Unquestionable

Pitt County Memorial Hospital must be allowed to expand if it is to meet its commitment to providing regional health care and medical training for health professionals.

That was made abundantly clear at a certificate of need hearing held here by the N.C. Department of Human Resources' Division of Facilities Services. The hearing addressed PCMH's application to construct 143 new beds to be added to the 565 beds currently in service. The $50 million project also calls for renovation of 100 beds and expansion of ancillary services. The entire project, however, hinges on the granting of a certificate of need by the division of facility services.

The addition would require 600 new employees and that raised concerns in area hospitals about creating a shortage of health care workers. However, PCMH and ECU officials pointed out that the hospital trains health care workers.

It was also reported that over 60 percent of the patients admitted are from outside Pitt County and most are referred for medical care which is not available in other area hospitals.

That the project is needed is unquestioned since the hospital is having to postpone admissions due to all beds being filled.

The situation is also affecting the ECU School of Medicine which is hindered in expanding its numbers of medical students and also in expanding its residency program. The hospital is also involved in the training of nurses and other health professionals.

Thus we see a hospital that is already filled to capacity. It has a unique role in the training of health professionals and if it is not expanded then these additional professionals cannot become available to the hospitals of North Carolina.

There is virtually no choice but to grant the certificate of need and provide the facilities which this regional hospital needs to serve Pitt County and the eastern area, as well as fulfilling its medical education role. There must be no delay in moving this project along.

Goodbye, Ron

Reagan Popularity Goes On & On Monday night it was all Ronald Reagan.

The old warrior was saying his farewells to the Republican party with a final speech to the convention which will nominate his vice president, George Bush, as a candidate for president.

The Republicans overwhelmingly showed their love for Reagan. And well they should. There have been many crises during the Reagan administration, including some dark times. The Reagan popularity has shone through it all, however, and after nearly eight years in office the Reagan mystique is still the best thing the party has going for it.

The president handled his farewell to the Republican National Convention with accustomed class. He made it clear that he would fight for Bush as the vice president campaigns to succeed him. Reagan also made it known that, while he will continue to be heard, he has no intention of attempting to continue dominating the national scene.

"I'll leave my phone number and address behind just in case you need a foot soldier," was the Reagan way of putting it.

He defended his record and urged a continuation of his policies, with enthusiastic response from GOP well-wishers.

Unfortunately those outside the convention hall who are not so enamored might recall some of the non-accomplishments of the Reagan administration. The soaring national deficit, Iran-Contra and scandals which have rocked the administrations.

Economists might wonder just how solid an economic future Reagan will leave to the next president. The United States' huge trade deficit puts the nation behind the eight ball in a global economy markets. The national debt, which Reagan promised, and failed, to ease, places this country in financial jeopardy. The government simply can't continue to spend more than it takes in.

In addition, the Reagan cabinet cannot live down its reputation of impropriety and it will take some time for the U.S. Justice Department to restore its image tarnished by Attorney General Ed Meese's sleaze.

But none of that was the issue Monday night to the adoring delegates at the Republican National Convention. They cheered their retiring leader and made it clear that they genuinely loved him.

Even with the warts on his eight year tenure, no one can deny Ronald Reagan's extraordinary popularity and his incredible endurance. Those characteristics continue to shine through his farewell.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I agree with Alice Banks' writeup. There are many taking a standing for the removal of that unforgivable picture called "The Last Temptation of Christ." During the last four years, I have written many letters to our President, senators, congressmen and four of the television networks to clean up all the garbage everywhere.

We can't see a decent commercial without seeing a bikini girl on top of a car at the body shop to be fixed, at the car wash, selling pearls at the beach, and everything we look at has that bikini girl. It is time for a heart and mind cleanup in all places and things. All of this is hurting us. I feel we women are being used for a big show of fun for men.

Please, I beg the guilty ones to protect our little and young that they can have a good, decent, caring place to grow up.

We won't stand divided and I do care about their future.

I feel for those little ones and I would like to tell each one each day that I love them.

Have a righteous heart of gold and you will end up one day at the Golden Gate - a promise.

To the editor:

The board of directors of the Greenville Community Life Center expresses thanks to the Pitt County legislative delegation for their support and assistance.

Due to their effort, the center obtained a grant of money in the last session of the General Assembly to be used for the further development of shelter programs for homeless people.

The Greenville Shelter has operated for seven months, providing overnight care to homeless men, women and children. The success of this work has been due to the efforts of hundreds of volunteers who spend the night at the shelter or assist in other ways, and to all the individuals, churches and other groups that have donated money, food and other material. The support of the legislative delegation adds to this effort and allows the work to go forward.

Image, Image, On The Superdome Wall

NEW ORLEANS - The talk of the town this week is equally divided between the Cajun cuisine and the Bush image. The spicy cooking gets raves. The image is, well, a more complicated dish.

If politics were a kitchen art, many of these delegates would choose Paul Prudhomme for vice president. They want something to get the salivary glands going.

Image, image on the Superdome wall. The people here don't use the "wimp" word very much. They talk instead about the "stature" problem of the man who would be President. It is much more genteel.

It was bad enough in Atlanta when Jimmy Carter called the vice president kind of "effeminate." After all, Carter's a Democrat. But nearly 32 percent of the Republican delegates cited Bush's "image" and speaking style as the obstacles he needs to overcome in his race for the White House.

And Bush's wife Barbara said, "I think a good vice president goes through what a good wife goes through." However insightful that comment, it probably doesn't help to compare her husband to Ronald Reagan's wife.

George Bush's family and his supporters remain somewhat bewildered by the lingering impression of weakness that Bush is trying to shake. Talk to his people over coffee, stop them in the lobby of the Hyatt or the streets surrounding the Superdome, and sooner or later they will try to rebut the image with the biography.

How can anyone think that a guy who flew 58 missions in World War II, a war hero, the head of the CIA for gawdsakes, a Texas oil man, isn't strong enough? If Bush is the resume candidate, isn't he also the resume Man? Traditional father of five. Husband of one. Tall and athletic. Successful.

This is one of the puzzles of the 1988 campaign. How has it happened that the traditionalist George Bush has a "stature" problem? How has it happened that Michael Dukakis, the T-riding, power-walking, cooking, grocery-shopping man with the 25-year-old snow blower, has no such problem?

Ten years ago, the old boys of Beacon Hill, in their charming vernacular, said the governor was "Kitty-whipped" because he went home for dinner every night. Now Bush, the man who moved his wife some two dozen times, is at pains to portray himself publicly as a family man.

In part, there has been a shift in male values, which is to say the kind of maleness we value. The warrior is not automatically lauded in peacetime America. Today's wars are less a defense of homeland as in World War II, than a destruction of other people's homelands. In contrast, a central drama of this era has been domestic: the story of men taking emotional risks at home.

So Bush's image suffers both ways. It suffers in traditional male terms among those who see him as a congenial number two, Reagan's "wife." And it suffers among those, particularly women, who judge him in non-traditional male terms.

When he kicked a little ass in '84, when he pats his wife's on television in '88, when he tries to be one of the guys, it's embarrassing. It's like watching someone perform awkwardly on the stage. You want to look away. He is like the boss coming to the workman's bar for a pop. The workers squirm until he's gone.

"The mold for me is kind of Ivy League and I resist that," said Bush, and that is obvious. It is not so obvious why. He tells the world about a country-music station to prove his down-home credentials. He adds, "I like pork rinds," and doesn't realize why everyone laughs.

The image, then, is of a misunderstood self-image. Americans were comfortable with Ronald Reagan because he was comfortable with himself. Bush is a man ill at ease in his own history, his own skin - and that unease is what makes him appear weak. He cannot be the self he is resisting.

Will the "image thing" go away? Candidate George Bush believes the public doesn't know him yet. But the public sees that Bush doesn't know himself.

IN THE STATE

Murder Charge

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — A Sampson County man who reported an accidental shooting to authorities ended up charged with first-degree murder in the death of his girlfriend, authorities say.

Wanda Kin Ingram, 22, of Roseboro, was found shot to death, with gunshot wounds to her head and back, in a wooded area eight miles south of Clinton late Monday, Sampson County sheriff's detective Laqdis Lee said.

Alfred Arness Herring, 23, of Clinton, was jailed pending a court hearing, Lee said Tuesday.

On Monday, Herring walked into the sheriff's department in Clinton, pulled a .25-caliber pistol out of his pocket and said he needed some help, Lee said. Herring told authorities that he had accidentally shot someone and that he did not know whether the person was dead, Lee said.

Extradited

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh man has been extradited to Montana, where he is charged in connection with the brutal slayings last month of a wealthy retired stock trader and his wife.

Terry Allen Langford, 22, is charged in the slayings of Ned and Celene Blackwood, whose bodies were found July 5 in their home in west central Montana.

The couple was killed either July 1 or 2, according to The Missoulian, a Missoula, Mont., newspaper.

Langford reportedly was in Great Falls, Mont., on July 1, where witnesses said he boarded a bus that dropped him off in Ovando, a community near the Blackwoods' ranch.

Store Death

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A Catawba County Superior Court judge approved a plea agreement on Tuesday for a Lincoln County man charged with robbing and killing a Maiden convenience store clerk last year.

Lamar Dean Hensley, 19, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and armed robbery in the June 1987 killing of Deborah Foster Keever of Denver. He was given two 40-year sentences, to be served concurrently.

Authorities believe Mrs. Keever, 33, was killed June 14, 1987, after she left work at Phillips General Store in Maiden. She was taking money bags containing the day's receipts, about $1,000, to store owner Daniel Phillips' house about 10 p.m. Her body was found the next day in her husband's pickup truck on a road near the Lincoln County line. She had been shot twice in the face and stabbed 27 times.

Klan March

DURHAM (AP) — Durham officials have rejected a request from the Ku Klux Klan to hold a march Sept. 3, but a Klan spokesman says his group may seek a court hearing on the rejection.

The Durham City Council, in a 10-0, endorsed a decision by City Manager Orville Powell to deny the Sept. 3 permit request. Powell, who was absent from the meeting, has said city police will be stretched thin that day because of the Labor Day holiday and a football game at North Carolina Central University.

He suggested the Klan parade in Durham on the following Saturday, Sept. 10.

Embezzlement

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP) — The former director of the Moore County Children's Center has been ordered to repay $15,000 she was accused of embezzling from the center over a three-year period.

Nancy Brostrum also got a three-year suspended sentence and was ordered to pay $113 in court costs after pleading no contest last week in Moore County Superior Court to one count of obtaining property by false pretense.

She will be on unsupervised probation for three years for the offense.

Suspended

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An Asheville Police officer has been suspended after a 20-year-old woman accused him of driving her to an isolated part of the city and raping her.

Patrolman Edward Blaine Stephens has been suspended with pay pending an investigation by the police department and a criminal probe by the State Bureau of Investigation, Chief of Police Fred Hensley said Tuesday.

Record Low Jobless Rate Is Offset By Low Wages, High Poverty Rate

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's work force has reached "full employment," but officials say the low jobless rate masks problems such as low wages and the fact that some people who, although employed, are still living in poverty.

"What is overlooked among jobless rates is the quality of jobs and the wages that go with it," said Katherine McKee, associate director for the Center for Community Self-Help, a non-profit agency in Durham.

"As jobless rates go down, my hunch is that the problem of the working poor does not disappear," McKee said.

North Carolina's jobless rate was at 2.9 percent in July, its lowest level since the government began tracking such figures in 1974. At such a low rate, labor analysts say, the state's work force is at full employment, meaning most people who do not have jobs are either unemployable or in the process of switching jobs.

But an employee earning $5 an hour, for example, would make $10,400 a year, still below the federal poverty guideline of $11,208 a year for a family of four.

The low jobless rate also doesn't count workers who have become frustrated in their search for work and have given up. And for purposes of the jobless figures, all part-time workers are considered employed, even those who work as little as one hour a week.

That's because many people who were laid off from factory jobs accepted lower-paying service jobs, which rarely lift workers out of poverty, McKee said.

In addition, Tar Heel workers generally would rather accept a lower-paying job than a welfare check. So more workers are counted as employed in North Carolina, although the state has a relatively high poverty rate.

"Other states have a higher jobless rate, but they have fewer people living in poverty," said Billy Ray Hall, director of the N.C. Rural Economic Development Center in Raleigh. "We have to realize that in North Carolina, we would rather work than be unemployed."

About 17 percent of all North Carolinians live below the poverty line, compared with about 13 percent nationwide. In some rural North Carolina areas, however, as much as 25 percent of the population lives in poverty, federal studies have shown.

"The relative prosperity is not inclusive," said George Autry, president of MDC Inc. in Chapel Hill, an economic research firm. "You have a high poverty rate in the face of a very low jobless rate."

But it is unclear how many North Carolinians who live in poverty also hold jobs. Nationwide, according to a 1986 federal study, 62 percent of impoverished adults living in rural areas — and 54 percent of those living in urban areas — held jobs for at least a portion of the year.

Labor analysts expect a similar trend in North Carolina. The average factory wage of $8 an hour in North Carolina in the first three months of 1988 is the second-lowest among 10 Southeastern states, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. And Tar Heel factory wages are 25 percent lower than the national average of $10.07 an hour.

Of the state's 3.3 million workers, 97,000 were unemployed last month, down 33 percent from the same month last year, according to the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina.

"That's about as robust as you can get," said Gregory B. Sampson, the commission's director of research. "You would be hard-pressed to find a better situation."

The healthy numbers spilled into rural areas, with 81 of the state's 100 counties reporting jobless rates under 5 percent. The rates could improve over the next year as large manufacturers open factories in rural areas, say analysts.

In Tarboro, for example, Sara Lee Corp. will hire 500 people to work in a new bakery. In Kinston, White Consolidated Industries Inc. expects to hire 850 workers to make dishwashers in a factory it plans to build there.

"We are having trouble finding enough workers to fill orders that are coming in," John H. Thomas, manager of the state employment office that serves Rocky Mount and Tarboro, said.

"Wages are going up also," he said. "A year ago, (factory) trainees could expect $4.50 an hour (as a) starting wage. Now we get a lot of orders from companies that are paying $5 and $6 an hour."

EPA Report Says Vehicle Inspections Inadequate

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina is not cracking down on auto inspectors in Mecklenburg and Wake counties who fail to properly inspect exhaust emissions, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says.

The report criticized the N.C. Division of Motor Vehicles, which audits service stations to ensure that they are properly inspecting vehicles for acceptable carbon monoxide emissions.

"The record clearly shows that ... DMV management is not imposing tough penalties on stations that break the rules ...," said the report from EPA's Atlanta office, which was delivered to the state Tuesday.

"The station failure rates and the condition of vehicles on the road in Charlotte and Raleigh, as well as the covert and overt observations by the (EPA) audit team, all indicate that improper testing is still a common problem in North Carolina," the report says.

A roadside survey conducted by the audit team showed that 19.7 percent of vehicles in Charlotte failed the test. Service stations have been failing only 4 percent of the vehicles they inspect, according to the report.

In some cases, the report said, service stations approve the inspection without checking the exhaust, then make up data.

For such violations, DMV has the power to suspend a service station's inspection license.

Gov. Jim Martin moved quickly Tuesday to respond to the report. In a memo to Jim Harrington, secretary of the N.C. Department of Transportation, and Tommy Rhodes, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, Martin directed them to meet to discuss the problem.

"I would like for the end product of this meeting to result in a proper course of action for the state," Martin wrote.

"We're trying to get to the bottom of this," said Don Follmer, a spokesman for the Martin administration. "The governor feels like if there is a problem with the division's vehicle inspection program, it needs to be fixed."

Mandatory auto exhaust inspections were started in Mecklenburg County in 1982 and in Wake County in 1986. Because of high carbon monoxide levels, those are the only two North Carolina counties now required to have the inspections.

In July a DMV and EPA audit team, working undercover, took vehicles to five service stations in Charlotte and three in Raleigh. The vehicles were rigged to fail the emission inspection.

"All eight stations conducted inaccurate or incomplete inspections," the report said.

Five stations approved vehicles that should have failed.

"This includes one station that conducted no inspection and even made up analyzer results," the report said.

Money Kills Truck Guard

ARCHDALE, N.C. (AP) — A Wells Fargo guard was killed on Interstate 85 when the armored truck he was riding in overturned and money bags crushed him to death, authorities said.

The driver and another Wells Fargo guard, Scott Burger, 22, of Charlotte, were thrown from the truck in the accident Tuesday afternoon, and more than $1 million in coins and paper currency fell out the back door, officials said. Burger was killed.

The driver apparently fell asleep while traveling 55 mph on the highway about two miles south of Archdale in Randolph County, state trooper Ricky Doss said.

The truck was carrying money from Greensboro to a bank in Charlotte about 4 p.m. when it ran off southbound I-85, crashed into a guard rail, rolled down an embankment and overturned in a ditch.

Driver Donald Carol Greenway, 42, of Charlotte, was in stable condition following surgery late Tuesday at High Point Regional Hospital.

Water Shortage May Delay Chatham School Opening

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Chatham County schools may delay opening some schools as scheduled Tuesday because of a water shortage, Siler City could move to water rationing by Friday and Orange County water officials say mandatory water restrictions could be invoked early next week.

"If you don't have water, you can't do anything," said Perry Harrison, superintendent of Chatham County Schools.

Siler City, which enacted mandatory restrictions Aug. 4, had enough water on Tuesday to last for 30 to 35 days without rain. Six of the county's 12 schools get their water from Siler City's supplies. About 2,700 of the county's 5,800 students attend the six schools.

Under the current level of restrictions, enacted Aug. 11 and classified as a "water shortage emergency," no water can be used outside except in the case of a fire or an emergency.

Violators face a penalty of $50 and up to 30 days in jail.

Harrison said that on Monday he discussed with Siler City Town Manager Ben Shivar whether the schools should delay opening.

"He felt we could go ahead and sort of play it by ear," Harrison said. In the meantime, the schools have ordered thousands of disposable plates, forks, knives and spoons to use in the lunchrooms of the six schools.

"That's one way to save," Harrison said. "We just hope there will be some rain to help us out."

If necessary, the schools could also shorten the school day to cut down on water consumption, Harrison said.

A decision to delay opening is not likely to be made until Monday, Harrison said.

Three of the schools — Siler City Elementary, Chatham Middle and Jordan Matthews High schools — are in Siler City. Three others —

Chatham Central High School and Bonlee and Bennett elementary schools — are served by county water lines and buy their water from Siler City.

Five other county schools get their water from Pittsboro, Harrison said. Silk Hope Elementary School gets its water from a well, he said.

Water allocations restricting the town's major water users to a percentage of their normal usage could go into effect by Friday, said Joel Brower, public works director for Siler City.

Consumption has dropped somewhat among the 6,000 customers served by Siler City, Brower said. But it hasn't made up for the lack of rain around Siler City.

"There's nothing but scattered showers, and they're falling some where else," Brower said.

In the seven-day period that ended Sunday, average consumption was 2.23 million gallons a day — down from an average of 2.47 million gallons a day, he said.

"It does appear that there is some good conservation going on with some businesses and residences," Brower said.

For the past month, Siler City has piped a million gallons of water a day — just less than half its current daily usage — from a private lake in Alamance County, via an emergency pipeline laid to help out in last year's water shortage.

But the town may have to stop taking water from that source with in two weeks, Brower said.

Orange Water and Sewer Authority could invoke mandatory restrictions by Monday, said Patrick Davis, assistant to the director.

With about 57,000 customers, mostly in southern Orange, OWASA has about a two-month supply of water left without rain, Davis said Tuesday. The authority is buying nearly half its daily water usage, about 4 million gallons a day, under an emergency water agreement with the city of Durham.

High Point Furniture Market Takes On New Name

HIGH POINT (AP) — The Southern Furniture Market Center, the 2.5 million-square-foot building which dominates the world's largest furniture trade show in High Point, is changing its name to reflect its global reputation.

After months of speculation, center officials announced this week the new name of the building will be the International Home Furnishings Center.

The switch was made to drive home the point that the center has become a truly international place to do business, drawing some 80 foreign exhibitors, they said.

"These things are always symbolic," William DiPaolo, vice president of the center, said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "We think it signals the direction of the High Point market for the future. It demonstrates where we're going to be looking for growth."

DiPaolo was quick to point out that the word 'furniture' does not appear in the new title.

"We wanted to select a name that more accurately reflects what goes on here," he said. "So we changed it from 'Southern' to 'International' and from 'Furniture' to 'Home Furnishings.'"

Drought 3rd Longest Of Century

By The Associated Press
The drought plaguing western North Carolina and other parts of the country is the third-longest to hit the country in the 1900s, but this one is more severe than dry spells in the 1930s and 1950s, meteorologists say.

"The way to really end it would be to get about three or four hurricanes or hurricane remnants to move through the area nicely spaced about a week apart," said Richard Heim, a meteorologist with the National Climate Data Center in Asheville.

"But will we get it?" he asked. "Probably not."
In parts of the Southeast, including western North Carolina, the drought is almost 47 months old, having started in October 1984. Only 56-month stretches in the 1930s and the 1950s are longer.

A wet July halted the spread of the drought in North Carolina, but the dryness still persists.

"After sprawling from 29 percent of the nation's land area June 11 to 43.3 percent a month later, it appears to be holding steady at 42.5 percent now."

"The drought hasn't gotten any bigger, but it hasn't gotten any smaller either," Heim said. Parts of New England, he said, have actually gone from dry to wet conditions over the past month. But the Southeast, the Northern Plains, the West and parts of the Midwest are still very dry, he said.

The Weather Service's forecast is for drier than normal weather over much of the region for the next several months.

Through Monday, only 0.2 of an inch had fallen this month at Piedmont Triad International Airport — well shy of the 2.1 inches that is normal for this date.

The precipitation shortage has plagued much of the state this month, but there has been enough rain in many areas to revive crops hardy enough to have survived this long. "It has rained enough now that everything has greened up," said Clayton Davis, director of the Western North Carolina Farmers Market near Asheville.

Rains there and elsewhere across the state have been spotty, though. Officially, Asheville is still 16 inches below normal for the year, and this month has had only had 0.68 of an inch through Monday afternoon.

"There's been quite a bit of heavy rain today," said Craig Carpenter, a weather service specialist at the Asheville airport. "But it doesn't seem to be where we have people recording for us."

For the 2,400 county extension agents from across the nation who are gathering in Charlotte, the drought is a major topic of conversation.

"Everybody's concerned about it since we're the people working directly with the farmers who are affected by it," said Ed Nolley of Newton, N.C., the chairman of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents' convention. "We've had a lot of talk about that and about how it's going to affect food prices."

In the Greensboro and Winston-Salem area, where rainfall is almost eight inches below normal for the year, there has been enough moisture at crucial times for crops to thrive.

"We've got one of the best tobacco crops we've had in a while," said Rodney Spears, executive director of the Guilford County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The dry weather has been brought on by the Bermuda High, a large area of high pressure extending west from the Atlantic now in control of the state's weather.

"There for a while we were getting these little fronts that would slide through the area," said Johnnie Smith, official in charge of the National Weather Service office at the Triad airport. "They would bring the increased chance of showers and thunderstorms."

The Bermuda High, which began building over the state a couple weeks ago, has acted as a barrier preventing weather fronts from passing through, he said.

That means any rain must come from what meteorologists call "convective" storms. Such storms occur when the sun heats the earth, causing masses of moisture-laden hot air to rise. As the air climbs through the atmosphere, it cools, condenses and develops into storms.

"This type of system would give you the widely scattered stuff," Smith said. "There've been a few around, but nothing widespread. We just got back to a typical summer time pattern where we depend totally on convection."

The latest Palmer Drought Index, issued last week, indicates that conditions deteriorated in every section of the state except the Southern Coastal Plain — the only section of the state having a wet year.

The Heat Goes On ...

By The Associated Press
Air-conditioned government buildings were opened for the elderly in two states, state fair exhibitors packed livestock in ice and band members sweltered in a scorching stadium as record heat covered much of the nation.

Record highs fell Tuesday from the eastern Plains to the Ohio Valley, but the Northeast got a break.

"It's great," 25-year-old New York City sanitation worker Frank Nahodyl said while sweeping a street.

"We've been sweating like hell the last few weeks. I start at 6 in the morning. I'd be dripping wet by 7 and drying by 10. But now there's a breeze."

The temperature in New York City "only" reached 86 Tuesday, after 32 days of 90-degree and above temperatures.

The heat continued elsewhere. Temperature records for the date were reached in more than a dozen cities.

Milwaukee broke a 52-year-old record for the most days of triple-digit temperatures in a year — five. The 100-degree reading Tuesday also broke the high for the date of 98, set in 1937.

In Chicago, the temperature hit 100, making the 46th day of 90s or higher this season.

Things didn't cool down much by early today; it was 86 in both St. Louis and Minneapolis-St. Paul after midnight.

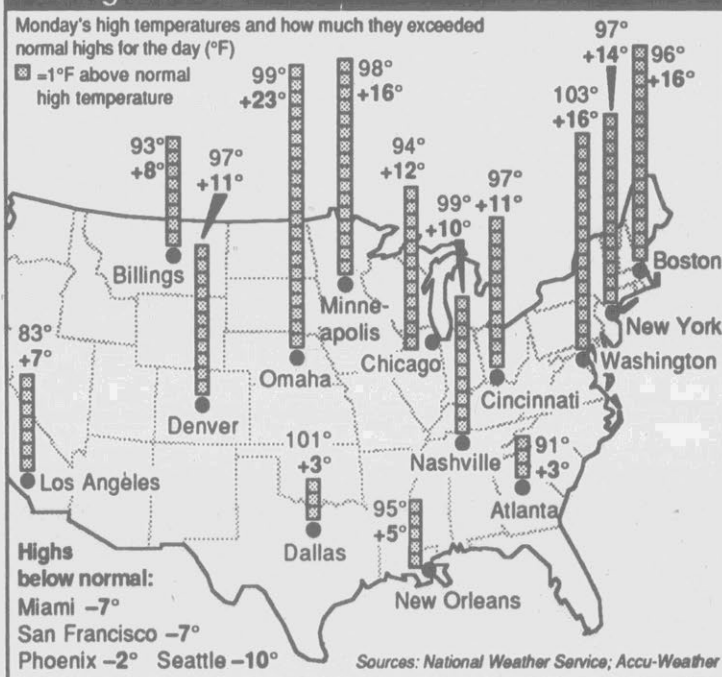

High temperatures today were expected to range from the middle 90s to near 105 degrees from the mid-Atlantic states through the lower Ohio, mid-Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys into the central Plains.

Livestock exhibitors were taking extra precautions in the fair barns.

"They're packing some (animals) down with ice. They're putting ice in front of fans to blow cool air," Fisher said.

Tar Heel GOP Looking For Way To Recruit Blacks

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Large-scale racial integration of the Republican Party is unlikely until the GOP becomes more sensitive and blacks shed a "plantation mentality" keeping most of them loyal to the Democrats, a black North Carolinian says.

"The Republican Party needs the black vote," said Howard Clement, the only black delegate among 54 representing the state at the party's national convention. "To get that, it must become more people-oriented in terms of jobs, employment, retraining opportunities ... and less ideologically focused on things like busing, abortion, school prayer."

Meanwhile, blacks must realize that individual initiative, rather than government largesse, is the key to prosperity, the Durham City Council member said.

"Once black people relieve themselves of the plantation mentality as espoused by the other party and start thinking for themselves, they will want to join us," said Clement, who was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1972 but jumped to the GOP in 1985.

Of the 108 members of the North Carolina delegation — 54 delegates and 54 alternates — three are black.

Aside from Clement, there are two black alternates.

Party leaders acknowledge the GOP needs more blacks but say they cannot make major philosophical concessions in wooing them.

"We believe in the rights of the individual," said state Rep. Betsy Cochrane of Advance. "We believe in people working for themselves, not looking to the government to take care of everything."

Bill Graham, state chairman of George Bush's campaign, said the state GOP had tried for years to enlist more blacks.

"I wish to hell I knew how to attract the black voter to the party," he said. "We have run candidates, we have adopted platforms that some of the old-timers probably bite their teeth over."

Black voters "must realize it's a two-way street," Graham said. "They've got to realize somewhere along the line that they waste their votes. The Democratic Party takes them for granted."

But Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, the state's highest-ranking Democrat, said blacks knew the Democratic Party historically had been more responsive to their needs and had no reason to switch.

"I do not see anything that's been done by this administration that should encourage blacks to support it," Jordan said. "I don't think you'll see any major movement in that direction until they (Republicans) become a party for all the people."

Clement, 54, said his father and grandfather were lifelong Republicans.

An official with the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co., the nation's largest black-operated financial institution, Clement said he finally converted to the GOP after becoming convinced the party's economic philosophy held the answer to prosperity for blacks.

"There is an emerging black middle class that is becoming more noticeable in terms of numbers and impact ... and they will be joining the Republican Party," he said.

The GOP can be more attractive to blacks by showing flexibility in areas where they are especially sensitive,

HOWARD CLEMENT

Clement said. For example, he said, GOP opposition to the Martin Luther King Jr. national holiday has reinforced a widespread perception among blacks that Republicans don't care about them.

N. Carolina Delegates Say Quayle Will Appeal To Tar Heel Republicans

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sen. Dan Quayle's youth and solid conservative credentials make him an ideal vice presidential running mate for George Bush, members of North Carolina's delegation to the Republican National Convention said.

"It is his philosophy that will appeal to North Carolina voters," Gov. Jim Martin said, calling the Indiana senator's selection "a pleasant surprise ... a significant asset to our team."

"It's the best possible choice," said Bill Graham, co-chairman of Bush's North Carolina campaign. "He automatically closes the youth gap. He brings experience and energy to the ticket and he has no baggage."

Quayle is "a great speaker and a good values man," said Theresa Esposito, a state representative from Winston-Salem.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, North Carolina's highest-ranking Democrat, also voiced pleasure with the Quayle selection — but for a different reason. He said he had worried that Bush would pick Kansas Sen. Bob Dole or his wife, Elizabeth, a North Carolina native.

"They would have had an appeal in North Carolina that could have created some real competition for us," he said in a telephone interview from Raleigh. "I am not that familiar with Senator Quayle, but he certainly should not provide any extra difficulty for us."

In New Orleans, Republican state Rep. Betsy Cochrane wasted no time pinning a Bush-Quayle button to her jacket.

"I had anticipated that he (Bush) would choose someone sort of in the unknown category," Mrs. Cochrane said. "I see him as a young man who will appeal to a large segment of our society."

Youth was a recurrent theme in the North Carolina delegation's initial reaction to Quayle, 41. Most responded positively to Quayle although several delegates acknowledged that they did not know enough about the Indiana senator to provide much comment.

"I don't know a lot about Quayle, but what I do know is that he's a pre-ty conservative fellow," said Barry McCarty, a professor at Roanoke Bible College in Elizabeth City and an ally of the National Congressional Club. "I think it is not a bad choice."

Carter Wrenn, the club's executive director, said the selection was "great."

"He's been a close friend of Jesse Helms and is one of the senator's top choices," Wrenn said by telephone. "Quayle will help motivate the conservatives, give them renewed enthusiasm for the ticket. Even more important, his voting record will help with the conservative Democrats and that's who we've got to reach."

Wrenn is skipping the convention, but some of his conservative allies had vowed to stage a public protest or push a rival if Bob Dole or former White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker were nominated for the No. 2 spot.

Dole's past support of tax increases and Baker's support of the Panama Canal treaties made them unacceptable to the North Carolina conservatives.

"Quayle's conservative credentials and voting record are solid right down the line," Wrenn said.

Former Sen. Jim Broyhill, the North Carolina delegation chairman, said Quayle was "a good man. He's a young, vigorous fellow. He'll bring a lot of excitement to the ticket."

State GOP chairman Jack Hawke said, "He's young, articulate, an exciting kind of guy."

Many delegates had voiced hope that Bush would choose a Southerner, especially since Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis' running mate is Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. Mrs. Dole was a sentimental favorite for some North Carolinians.

But Mrs. Cochrane said most North Carolina delegates never saw Mrs. Dole as a top contender and therefore the disappointment was not acute.

"Liddy was kind of a favorite son or daughter ... but it seemed that there wasn't evidence of much momentum for a Dole ticket," she said.

Hawke said the No. 2 spot on the presidential ticket wasn't a deciding factor for most voters.

"I think Southerners would rather vote for a Southern president than a Southern vice president. George Bush is a Southerner. He has voted in Texas ... and it's ridiculous to say he's not a Southerner."

Broyhill and Hawke were surprised that Bush announced his decision Tuesday instead of letting the drama build another day. But Hawke said making the choice public was probably a good move.

"I guess he was concerned about it leaking out and having the embarrassing situation the Democrats had when Jesse Jackson found out from the media and got upset," Hawke said.

Broyhill And Funderburk Square Off On Alleged Slight Of Conservatives

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — David Funderburk has accused the state Republican leadership of slighting conservatives at the national party convention, bringing a sharp rebuke from the man who defeated him in the 1986 Senate primary.

"They've just said, 'we don't need you, we don't want you,'" said Funderburk, former U.S. ambassador to Romania and an alternate delegate to the Republican National Convention.

Former Sen. Jim Broyhill, the chairman of the North Carolina delegation who defeated Funderburk by a 2-to-1 margin in the bitter Senate race, said the contention was "just not true" and questioned Funderburk's motives.

"Some of us are down here to win an election and it seems that some others are in it to play games," Broyhill said.

"It just infuriates Republicans like me, who have been Republicans all our lives, to see these guys come along and join the party and right off say we're not conservative enough," Broyhill said. "Frankly, I resent it."

Republicans aligned with the state party's traditional, business-oriented faction have feuded with New Right Republicans, who emphasize anti-communism and social issues such as abortion, since the early 1970s.

But the two factions generally have coexisted peacefully at the convention, with old-guard Republicans loyal to George Bush and Gov. Jim Martin firmly in control. Most of the dozen or so delegates and alternates who backed Jack Kemp or Pat Robertson for president have stayed in the background.

Funderburk, however, has been outspoken, criticizing the state GOP leadership and describing Bush as a moderate pragmatist who has little to offer the conservative Democrats who crossed over to support Ronald Reagan.

Last week, Funderburk submitted a statement to the national convention's platform committee urging adoption of a resolution calling on the next administration to purge "soft-on-communism liberals" from the State Department.

After Tuesday morning's delegation caucus, Funderburk told reporters the leadership had not kept conservatives abreast of the schedule and had made no effort to involve them.

"They might say, 'well, who's Funderburk and ... why doesn't he come to us,'" he said. "But I think they should go to Funderburk and people like him and say 'we need you, we want you.'"

Jack Hawke, the state GOP chairman, said he didn't know what Funderburk was talking about, but that he appeared to want to stir up trouble.

"I think it's unfortunate if there are a few people who will go to any length to create a disturbance ... that could distract attention from the importance of winning this election," Hawke said. "In their self-centered approach, they tend to aid and comfort the enemy."

The party leadership has seated in the delegate section two alternates who supported Robertson and arranged for others to be on the floor for his Tuesday evening speech, Hawke said. "We've done everything we could to make everyone feel a part."

Bush Stirs Hispanics' Resentment

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush's description of his three Mexican-American grandchildren as "the little brown ones" drew a mixed reaction among some Hispanic Americans. One Hispanic labor leader said the remark showed the vice president is insensitive.

Bush greeted President Reagan on Tuesday at Belle Chasse Naval Air Station, and the vice president told the president he wanted him to meet his grandchildren who had flown with him on Air Force Two from Washington.

"These are Jebby's kids from Florida, the little brown ones," the vice president said.

The three youngsters — Jeb Jr., Noelle, and George P. — are the children of Bush's son, Jeb, and his Mexican-born wife, Columba.

Roy Barrera Jr., a Hispanic delegate to the Republican National Convention from San Antonio, Texas, said Bush's comment was a "remark of sincere affection" that shouldn't be taken out of context.

"All my discussions with the Bushes has led me to believe that George Bush cherishes the uniqueness of his family, has an overwhelming love and affection for his grandchildren, Jeb's children," said Barrera, who accompanied the Bush family on their riverboat ride on Tuesday.

The former district judge said there is "nothing at all vulgar or insidious or disrespectful about being brown or being black. It is simply just a description."

In Los Angeles, Al Belmontez, vice president of one of the local labor chapters of the Mexican-American Political Association, said Bush's remark reflected insensitivity.

"Just saying that means he knows they're different. He didn't say 'those are my grandchildren.' He didn't just refer to the kids by their names," Belmontez said in a telephone interview. "That just shows that he's ... insensitive."

Belmontez said it was unlikely the remark would affect Bush's standing with members of his own party.

"Republicans will support him no matter what," Belmontez said.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, Bush's campaign chairman, told reporters, "The vice president is extremely proud of the fact that his grandchildren are 50 percent Hispanic."

Bush has often bragged about the family, which lives in Tallahassee, Fla.

George P. Bush, 13, gave the pledge of allegiance at Tuesday's session of the convention.

Dukakis Opens Four-Day Tour

BOSTON (AP) — Democrat Michael Dukakis begins a four-day campaign swing today, hoping to steal some of the spotlight from the Republican National Convention after going on the offensive to counter criticism from President Reagan.

The Massachusetts governor was leaving Boston this morning for Minnesota to attend an early afternoon rally and a private reception before flying to Miami, where he was to address the convention of a Greek organization on Thursday.

Dukakis spent Monday and Tuesday on a tour of central Massachusetts but interrupted his busy schedule of state events long enough to turn Reagan's "facts are stubborn things" refrain on the Republicans and their certain nominee, Vice President George Bush.

"Facts are stubborn things," Dukakis agreed as he listed facts he said Republicans are failing to acknowledge at their convention: increases in the national crime rate and the federal trade and budget deficit.

"This is a nation that eight years ago was the largest creditor nation in the world," Dukakis said in Worcester. "Today we are the largest debtor nation in the world. That's the consequence of eight years of borrowing and spending and borrowing and spending."

Quayle Offers Youth, Freshness To GOP

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sen. Dan Quayle, the conservative baby boomer who will be George Bush's running mate, introduces himself today to a party stunned by the choice of an unknown quantity but hopeful his youth will electrify the ticket.

Bush aides already are inviting comparisons between the handsome, vigorous Indiana senator with John F. Kennedy, who galvanized young voters nearly three decades ago. Bush himself called Quayle "a man of the future."

The two men make a joint appearance at a news conference today and Quayle presumably will be working on his acceptance speech for Thursday night.

The choice of Quayle, 41, a telegenic politician whose career rise has been meteoric, brought stunned silence and then applause from supporters who watched Bush make the announcement Tuesday after days of suspense. Conservatives said they were pleased by the choice.

Quayle bounced up and down on his toes at the riverfront area where Bush's tour boat had cruised to greet supporters, and could hardly contain his enthusiasm. "Let's go get 'em!" he shouted.

Sheila Tate, Bush's press secretary, said Quayle was Bush's "first choice, his only choice" for the ticket's No. 2 spot. He was picked over about a dozen hopefuls, whom Bush personally notified from Belle Chasse Naval Air Station before phoning Quayle at his hotel at 2:06 p.m., aides said.

Bush and Quayle enjoy a warm relationship and talk often by telephone or in Bush's office in the Old Executive Office Building. Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., who polled Senate Republicans at Bush's request two weeks ago, said Quayle was not among those they recommended for the spot. But when McConnell gave Bush the recommendations, Bush asked, "What about Dan Quayle?"

Quayle is relatively unknown on the national stage, but he quickly seized the moment at Tuesday's riverfront festivities, his right hand chopping the air in a gesture reminiscent of Kennedy.

"George Bush's America believes and has the commitment to the American family that is so important to all of us," he said, his voice rising to a shout. "George Bush's America understands the problems that confront us and can lead us to the future and the 21st century."

Quayle is married to the former Marilyn Tucker, a lawyer, and they have three children, the oldest 14. He comes from a prominent Indiana newspaper family and is the grandson of the late Eugene C. Pulliam, a multimillionaire publisher.

It is not clear how much, if any, of the family fortune Quayle himself has. He says his principal source of income is his Senate salary. He lists more than $250,000 in stock in a family-controlled newspaper group as his only substantial asset, but the figure may be understated because congressional financial disclosure forms require that holdings be reported only in broad ranges.

Quayle made no major marks in two terms in the House before his Senate bid, defeating incumbent Democrat Birch Bayh in 1980 and winning re-election handily in 1986.

In the Senate, Quayle has not attained the stature of his senior Indiana colleague, Richard Lugar. But in choosing Quayle, Bush opted for someone with whom he felt comfortable rather than someone with instant name recognition.

James A. Baker III, Bush's new campaign chairman, said the choice was "a bold stroke across generations" and predicted that those Republicans who don't now back Quayle "will be enthusiastic supporters of his" once they "look at his record and see him perform."

Robert Teeter, Bush's pollster, said Quayle should strengthen the ticket in the Midwest, where Bush ran poorly in the primaries, and also help bridge the celebrated gender gap problem Bush has with women voters.

"He is someone of the younger generation. He has a very attractive family, a wife that has been a professional woman, and I think he will be someone who will help the ticket with all the voters and particularly women voters of that generation," Teeter said.

Teeter also called Quayle a "strong conservative." The senator has supported President Reagan's Star Wars missile defense system and defense spending measures. He was a chief Senate opponent of the legislation, which Reagan also initially opposed, that required companies to give employees advance notice of plant closings.

Republican political consultant Eddie Mahe said Quayle, unlike other potential running mates for Bush, "will not have to publicly change any position to be in complete agreement or substantial agreement with George Bush."

The choice of Quayle brought accolades from conservatives, who have been lobbying for a running mate from their ranks. Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., said he couldn't be more pleased. Pat Robertson called Quayle "a very smart choice" who is "right down the line with the evangelicals" on areas like abortion and school prayer.

Others were less enthusiastic. "I was kind of stunned," said Sen. William Cohen of Maine. "He doesn't have the stature of a (Bob) Dole ... or the following of Jack Kemp." But, Cohen added, "This may put some spark and life into a campaign that has been described as uninspiring."

"It's risky," said Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., an outspoken conservative who called Quayle "terrific on the issues" but a "total unknown."

Quayle said earlier this week he had provided exhaustive information to the Bush campaign on his personal, medical, financial and tax history.

NASA Technicians Trying To Seal Gas Leak In Shuttle's Cargo Bay

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians moved into Discovery's cargo bay to begin plugging a tiny gas leak that threatens to delay the first post-Challenger shuttle launch.

With the shuttle poised on the launch pad, the technicians today were to drill into the cargo bay wall and an engine compartment to repair the tiny leak discovered a month ago. The leak in a steering engine compartment must be stopped before Discovery can be launched in late September or early October.

The plan was to use a routing tool to cut two holes in the rear bulkhead of the 60-foot-long cargo bay and two more in the adjoining aluminum hull of the steering engine compartment. The dual openings would allow a technician to reach about 12 inches into the compartment to clamp a clamshell-shaped device over the leak and fill it under pressure with a sealant. The device measures 4 inches by 1 inch and should fit easily over a fitting that is slowly leaking nitrogen tetroxide gas from a vent line. Because Discovery is poised vertically on the launch pad, the technicians would have to do much of the work on their hands and knees or lying on their stomachs on the cargo bay's rear bulkhead. On Tuesday, workers opened the bay's doors and erected a tent-like structure over the work area to prevent debris from getting into the rest of the shuttle or into a nearby enclosure where Discovery's payload is waiting to be loaded. The payload, a communications satellite, would be placed aboard once the repairs are complete.

Malone said the source of the hydrogen remains a mystery, and pressure tests on Monday failed to detect any leak. She said officials did not consider it a serious problem. "Once the source of the hydrogen is found, engineers will determine whether it is an acceptable condition or what course of action is necessary to proceed," Malone said.

Elsewhere, at the Morton Thiokol plant in Utah, engineers prepared for Thursday's fifth and final prelaunch test-firing of a redesigned solid fuel booster rocket. Insulation, seals and O-rings have been deliberately flawed in segment joints to see how well backup systems contain the blazing exhaust gas. A faulty booster rocket joint was blamed for the Jan. 28, 1986 explosion of Challenger that killed its seven-member crew. The Utah test is the last major hurdle before NASA sets a firm launch date for Discovery.

Steel Mill Bars Display Of U.S. Flag During Visit By Japanese

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — The management of a steel plant ordered workers to take down an American flag because company officials said it had been hung primarily to embarrass visiting Japanese businessmen. However, Michael Hewlett, president of United Steelworkers of America Local 1865, said the flag was displayed at Armco Inc.'s Ashland Works "to show the Japanese we are proud to be American steelworkers."

Hewlett was particularly incensed by a company offer to let steelworkers keep the flag up if they displayed a Japanese flag alongside. "These men didn't do that because of their proud heritage," Hewlett said. "I didn't see Armco flying the Japanese flag from their flagpole." Scaggs said the Japanese traditionally display both countries' flags during business meetings with Americans.

"If our people wanted to follow that custom, it would have been acceptable to display both flags," Scaggs said. "We also offered to let the men display the flag permanently after our guests left." The union turned down the offer and gave no explanation for its decision, Scaggs said. The issue of Japanese imports displacing American jobs has long been a sore spot with steelworkers. In 1982, union members here took sledgehammers and pounded a Japanese car into junk, then packed the pieces into a coffin and tried to ship it to Japan.

Armco spokesman Bill Scaggs said the order to remove the flag was made after consulting with top managers at plant, which employs about 3,500 people. "The flag was put up principally to embarrass our visitors from Kawasaki," he said. "It was much the same as not offending a guest in our homes. It was unfortunate that

Boy Carries Cash In Sack

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 9-year-old boy caught by department store security guards while trying to shoplift two pairs of sunglasses was carrying more than $121,000 and a revolver in a knapsack, police said.

The boy's father was arrested by police and held in the Allegheny County Jail on charges of violating firearms laws.

The father, who was identified through fingerprints as Howard Page, was with the boy, Pittsburgh Police Cmdr. Ronald Freeman said Tuesday. Page unsuccessfully tried to prevent security guards from opening the boy's blue nylon knapsack, he said.

"The father obviously didn't want the kid to be shoplifting with all that money on him," Freeman said. "The kid tried to steal the sunglasses on impulse."

Upon discovering the gun and money Monday, security officers contacted police, who confiscated $121,000 from the bag and $1,741 found on Page. The guards said the boy was trying to steal two pairs of $40 sunglasses.

Charleston Port Tops Baltimore

L.A. Times-Washington Post

BALTIMORE — Once a minor-league player in an industry dominated by North Atlantic superstars, the Port of Charleston, S.C., has officially joined the majors by surpassing Baltimore as the second busiest container port in the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

The port, which has benefited richly from the same transportation industry deregulation that has hurt Baltimore, reported 4.96 million tons of container cargo during the 12 months ending June 30.

Baltimore reported 4.45 million tons passing over its publicly owned docks during the same period. Charleston operates its own terminals and has only publicly owned facilities.

New York, the undisputed king of the coast, handled slightly less than 13 million tons of container cargo in calendar 1987. Sixth-month 1988 figures have not been calculated, a spokesman said.

Containerized cargo, which is merchandise transported in standardized, vanlike containers, is hotly sought after by ports because of the cargo-handling jobs it creates and the growth it has enjoyed in the transportation industry.

"As a port authority we are glad to be in the same league with those guys," said Duane Grantham, director of marketing and sales for the South Carolina State Ports Authority.

But, he added, "We're not in competition with Baltimore. It's a competition for cargo."

David A. Wagner, executive director of the Maryland Port Administration, said, "They've inched ahead of us. ... It's indicative of the pressures in this industry."

He predicted that the next two or three years could see the No. 2 position passed between several ports as the business continues to adjust to the deregulated world.

"They better keep growing, because we plan to," Wagner said.

Report Says U.S. Agency Polluting Antarctic Bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Science Foundation says it is working to clean up its act in Antarctica, where an environmental group says the federal agency's research bases are polluting the frigid environment.

"We're making progress," says Jack Talmadge, head of NSF's polar coordination and information section. "Nobody here wants to rape Antarctica. We want to preserve it."

Talmadge made the comments Tuesday after the Environmental Defense Fund released a report alleging that the agency's bases in Antarctica are violating U.S. environmental laws and an international agreement governing use of the frozen continent.

"The environmental practices of the NSF ... would not be permitted anywhere in the United States," said the EDF, which frequently brings lawsuits against polluters in this country.

The group said the science agency is dumping untreated sewage and other wastes in Antarctic waters, engaging in open burning of some wastes and operating diesel power generators without emissions controls.

The report said McMurdo Sound, adjacent to the largest U.S. installation, is more polluted than virtually any U.S. waterway and that highly toxic polychlorinated biphenyls and heavy metals are being found in the tissues of penguins and seals.

"It is incredible that these practices are observed by the U.S. government in the most pristine environment in the world," said Bruce Manheim, the report's author and an EDF attorney and scientist. "Rather than addressing environmental threats in Antarctica, NSF has ignored them."

Talmadge said that many of the report's findings are true, but he said the agency is taking steps to improve environmental practices at its four bases.

NSF, which gets $125 million a year for its Antarctic activities, is in the process of adopting an environmental protection plan and may ask Congress for cleanup money, according to Talmadge.

"We have been doing pollution control, maybe not as aggressively as they'd like," he said, referring to the EDF. "We have been undertaking extensive efforts to clean up since 1980."

Talmadge said this year, NSF shipped 160 tons of scrap metal and more than 500 drums of waste oil out of Antarctica. He said those materials are no longer dumped in the Antarctic waters.

He said the agency is reviewing a recommendation by an internal safety panel that it stop using hazardous materials to ignite wastes in open-air burning pits. He said raw sewage is dumped into Antarctic waters because officials believe it is less harmful than the chemicals that could be used to treat it.

The EDF report said the United States is not the only polluter among the 18 nations with bases in Antarctica. It noted, however, that Australia and Japan remove all wastes from the continent and that Poland and New Zealand treat sewage and control incineration position to press for more comprehensive pollution control by less responsible nations.

EDF said the NSF operations, which include 1,000 people at McMurdo during the Antarctic summer months, violate U.S. laws regulating ocean dumping and land disposal of waste materials.

Heart And Flowers Decorate Pillows

Appealing heart and flower motifs embellish two romantic, charming quickpoint pillow tops, worked from a chart on five-mesh canvas with double strands of worsted-weight yarn. A delight for any needlepointer, they are simple to make, and add an elegant look to your decorating scene.

To complete the romantic look, add a ruffle and backing (not included in kit) or simply whipstitch the finished needlepoint to the top of a pre-made pillow. The flowered pillow measures 12 inches square; the heart design is 9 by 12 inches.

To obtain directions for making the Hearts and Flowers Quickpoint Pillows, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-081488 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 4190148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-081488 by sending a check or money or order for $18.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet, canvas and yarn in your choice of blue, rose, yellow or peach shades.

Dear Pat: Why is it that graph charts for needlepoint show the stitch symbols in the holes rather than crossing the lines as stitches actually do? I find this very confusing when deciding exactly how far to come in from a particular edge or corner. — Debbie T., Harrisburg, Pa.

Pat's Pointers Pat Trexler

Dear Debbie: For those who have not worked from graph charts, perhaps a word of explanation would be in order.

When you start with blank canvas, unless you are a talented artist, you need a guide or "map" of where to place the various colored stitches in order to stitch a picture onto the canvas. A graph chart is used to represent the canvas, with the chart lines representing the canvas threads or ribs and the blank squares denoting the canvas holes.

Symbols are then drawn on the chart to represent the color of the stitch to be used in particular place on the canvas. For example, X may represent red, and O might represent green, with all blank squares to be worked in white. Therefore, you will work one red stitch for each X, one green stitch for each O and one white stitch for each blank square.

Usually, in this type of needlepoint, the simple tent stitch (also called half-cross, continental and basketweave) is used, crossing one mesh or intersection of the canvas diagonally.

It would seem more logical to place the symbols directly over the intersection of the lines, but the stitchers usually find it easier to see and follow the symbols when they appear in the squares. If you will think of the symbol when they appear in the squares. If you will think of the symbol position as the hole in which your needle comes up, you should have no difficulty in finding the proper placement for the stitch itself.

The surest way to center your design properly is to mark the exact center of both design and canvas. On the graph chart, draw lines at the outer edges of the top, bottom, left and right sides of the design. Then, draw a vertical line halfway in from the edges and a horizontal line halfway between the top and bottom line. The point where these two lines cross is the design center.

Fold the fabric or canvas in half first in one direction and then the other. The point where the fold lines meet is the center of your working material. You can start by working the stitch at the design chart center then working out from there.

Home-Based Work Called Profitable

NEW YORK (AP) — Many American women are finding their homes can be a profitable environment.

Of the estimated 2.2 million Americans who work exclusively at home, some two-thirds of them are women, according to the U.S. Small Business Administration. By the 1990s, home-based businesses are expected to double, the agency adds.

In 1985, female-owned business generated $65 billion in revenues, a 78 percent increase over $36 billion in 1980, while revenues of male-owned businesses increased by 22 percent over the same period.

Indicative of the trend, three of the five 1988 Women of Enterprise Awards winners selected in a nationwide search by Avon Products Inc. and the U.S. Small Business Administration, began their thriving enterprises at home. The awards program was launched last year to salute the courage and determination of self-employed women "who beat odds" to achieve success.

Two of the award winners, M. Charito Krivant, owner of a multimillion-dollar management consulting firm in Washington D.C., and Mary G. Winston, founder of the largest female-owned janitorial service in Indiana, started their firms in their basements.

A third award winner, Sydney A. Stoeppelwerth of Prairie Village, Kan., who is blind, owns an oil production company and four years ago started a blossoming motivational speaking business. She runs her entrepreneurial ventures from an office in her home.

The other two winners are Laura Balverde-Sanchez, president of New El Rey Sausage Co. in Vernon, Calif., who purchased a bankrupt sausage company and made it profitable; and Susan K. Terry, president of SKT Construction Inc., West Des Moines, Iowa, who started a successful construction business while she was a 23-year-old secretary at a plumbing company.

Changes Proposed

Currently the city has two-year terms, which means everybody on the council including the mayor is elected every time there is a municipal election — every two years.

"A person has to run every two years to keep the seat," McCarley said. "The council is talking about wanting a four-year term."

"There's no requirement that what you choose for the mayor (must) match the council members," he explained. "For example, you could have a four-year term for council members and the mayor elected every two years."

As for the mayor being allowed to vote, McCarley said that was the policy Greenville had before 1981.

"In 1981, the city went before the Legislature for a major charter revision and in that revision, they took out the mayor's vote," he said. "The proposal now is to go back to the system that Greenville had in 1981 and before."

McCarley pointed out that any changes this council should make regarding terms of office or the mayor's vote would not affect this council.

"The earliest they could be effective is the November 1989 election," he said. "I think we should go to four-year terms and have them staggered," Carter said. "I think by the time one gets productive as a member of the council, it's time for re-election."

Carter also said council members whose terms are coming to an end might have a tendency to be overly cautious about particular decisions if the vote is perceived to be politically sensitive.

"I don't see any reasons not to make the changes," Carter said. By having the council's terms staggered, Carter said council continuity would be better ensured.

"Currently it's possible to lose the entire council at one election. I think it's important to have some continuity in leadership," he said. Carter also said he is a supporter of allowing the mayor to vote.

"In two years, officials aren't effective. In the first year you are in the process of learning the job, while in the second year, officials might be sensitive to running again and not make the decisions they ordinarily might make," she said.

Mrs. Shinn also said the high cost of campaigning is a reason why she prefers four-year terms for the council and mayor.

"It's very expensive running for election," she said. "If elections happen every two years, you probably have people who might want to run or to run again for office but don't because they can't afford it."

She also said allowing the mayor vote would prevent situations from occurring where council members delay a vote on an issue by being absent.

Meanwhile, Council member Nancy Jenkins said she likes the current system of two-year terms and prefers the mayor not have a vote in city matters.

However, Mrs. Jenkins said she is more than willing to listen to information and arguments about possible changes.

"Let's say I don't have a closed mind on the subject," she said. "I just think things are functioning all right just the way it is."

First-year council member Rufus Huggins also agreed a four-year term for the council is desirable.

"Being a new council member, I think I can truly express an opinion on this," he said. "This has been truly a learning experience, and it is still a learning process. By the time you fully understand council matters and methods, your term is up."

Huggins also said he is concerned about council members being particularly concerned over re-election campaigning as the term of office winds down.

"It's no different from presidential or senatorial elections," he said.

Airport Rules

The authority's Operations Committee recommended that Turcotte and McCarley devise new fueling regulations, and the two say they hope to have the rules drafted by the authority's next meeting, which is set for Sept. 15.

Until the new rules are approved, self-fueling by Willer — or any other pilot who does not have permission from the airport — will continue to be a violation, Turcotte said.

Willer said FAA officials in Washington D.C., have told him his method of fueling is safe, but Turcotte said Willer should use metal containers to pour gasoline into the plane instead of plastic containers.

Gasoline is not sold at the airport, and airport regulations do not allow pilots to bring any fuel into the airport without approval. Turcotte said Willer did not have permission to bring in the gasoline.

Willer also did not follow the airport's self-fueling regulations and obtain approval for fuel storage, safety equipment and electrical grounding, Turcotte said.

Though gasoline has been approved for use, Turcotte said the airport will still not sell the fuel because of the high liability.

Turcotte also said the new fueling regulations will be very specific and restrictive to ensure that all pilots using gasoline follow uniform procedures, and pilots will also have to pay a fee to self-fuel.

Willer said pilots have been pouring gasoline in their planes at Pitt-Greenville for years, and he asked the authority why he was the only one punished.

Turcotte and authority Chairman Jack Duffus said they contact every pilot who reportedly violates a rule, and most of them voluntarily comply with the regulations.

McCarley pointed out that he had written the two letters to Willer asking him to stop, yet reports of the violations continued.

Willer also repeatedly demanded to know what pilot reported the violation and agreed to testify in court, but Duffus and McCarley declined to release the name.

"I really want to know the name of the pilot," Willer said to the authority. "This isn't a communist state. I'm supposed to be told who my accuser is."

McCarley said the authority was satisfied by the report that the violation actually occurred, and the authority was acting as the accuser.

MacCarley recommended that the board reissue the citation, and if Willer refuses to pay the fine, the board should file a civil suit to collect the money. If Willer contests the suit, court testimony could show who reported the violation, MacCarley said.

Fatal Crash

aboard were believed to have survived.

In addition to Zia and Raphel, the passengers included several senior Pakistani army generals, the radio said. An earlier report said the plane crashed after taking off from an airport in Lahore.

In Washington, State Department and congressional sources confirmed Zia and Raphel died in the crash. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said two Pakistani generals were on board and there were no survivors.

The Pakistan air force C-130 transport plane had just taken off from Bahawalpur, 330 miles southwest of Islamabad, when it exploded, the report said. The government statement read over radio at 8 p.m. (11 a.m. EDT) said that none of 37 people

Task Force Set

Carter said the first phase of the group's effort will be a series of Mayor's Community Nights' during which the mayor will present an overview of the association to interested citizens.

The first meeting will be held today at 7:30 p.m. at Sadie Saulter Elementary School on Fleming Street.

"I hope to get input from citizens and their comments and their commitment to this effort," Carter said. "If enough citizens are willing to make a commitment to improve the quality of life in Greenville, the CIA (committee) can have a positive impact throughout the entire community," Carter said.

"It's high time that we get rid of some of these, what I call 'scum factors' in our community. I have no sympathy in my heart for drug pushers. We're going to deal severely with them," Carter warned. "I've made necessary contact with law enforcement agencies and judges, and I've asked them to be extremely hard on drug pushers in our community. They must go."

"For the victims, the drug addicts, I do have sympathy," Carter commented. "I do sympathize with them because they are victims of their particular problem and we have programs to deal with their particular problems."

But as for the drug dealers, Carter took a tough stance, saying, "We are going to eradicate this scum in our community."

"I'd like to ask every citizen in this community to refuse to stand the bond of anyone who is found or convicted or charged with pushing drugs. We feel the judicial system will afford them some protection and let it rest there. My feeling is that if you are not part of the solution, you're part of the problem," he said.

Johnson said he is looking forward to the task of coordinating a variety of agencies and groups to work together to fight for common causes such as reducing the demand for drugs.

"You can't place responsibility on the police department or (the) mental health (department) or any other agency," Johnson said. "It has to be placed on the citizens of the community, those families, moms and dads, are going to have to teach and take control of the situation. That has to come from the community. All the churches, all the businesses, it's got to be placed on the community."

City Council member Rufus Huggins said he is supportive of the mayor's association.

"Someone had to take the initiative in this community and I commend the mayor for doing that," he said. "We have a mayor now that's taking a stance and enacting something and if we continue to do that, there's no telling where we'll lead to."

Upcoming Mayor's Community Nights are scheduled for Aug. 24 at the Rotary Building, 809 Johnston St., and on Aug. 31 at the Church of Christ, 264 Crestline Drive. Both meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Mets Warm Up In Cold Candlestick; Run Past San Francisco By 13-6

By The Associated Press
In the heat of the East, the Mets' bats have been weak. But in the chill of Candlestick Park, New York heated up.

The Mets scored nine runs in the first inning against San Francisco on Tuesday night and beat the Giants 13-6. The Mets remained 5½ games ahead of Pittsburgh in the National League East.

"The cool weather definitely was refreshing, no question about it," said Mookie Wilson, who had two hits and scored two runs — in the first inning.

It was 60 degrees in windy Candlestick, a marked change from the 90- and 100-degree days in the East for late.

"The nine runs helped more than the weather did, I'll tell you," Wilson said.

"I've never seen anything as tough as that first inning," Giants manager Roger Craig said.

Dwight Gooden, who won for the first time in four starts, waited 35 minutes after the start of the game to face his first batter.

Gooden, 14-6, allowed six hits and two runs in seven innings, striking out five. He said he felt "a little pain" as well as tightness early in the game.

"I'm fine," he said. "I've had a little tightness like this my last five or six starts. I'll try to do some exercises for it."

"I think it's minor, but it does concern me," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "I took him out after seven innings as a precautionary move ... but I don't think he'll miss a start."

In other games, Los Angeles beat Philadelphia 7-5, Pittsburgh beat Atlanta 4-2, Cincinnati beat Chicago 6-4, St. Louis beat Houston 3-0 and San Diego beat Montreal 6-2.

Kevin McReynolds and Darryl Strawberry hit two-run homers in the Mets' 15-hit attack. It was the 19th home run for McReynolds, the 30th for Strawberry.

Atlee Hammaker, 6-5, gave up seven runs and six of New York's eight first-inning hits.

Joe Price relieved, felt an arm problem and left with an inflamed shoulder that will put him on the 15-day disabled list. Veteran right-hander Lary Sorensen will be brought up from the minors today.

Dodgers 7, Phillies 5

Kirk Gibson triggered a five-run fifth inning with his 23rd homer and Rick Dempsey drove in two runs with a double and sacrifice fly as Los Angeles increased its lead to 3½ games over Houston.

Tim Leary, 13-8, won for the sixth time in eight starts, allowing five runs and nine hits in 6 2/3 innings. Jay Howell allowed one hit in two innings for his 15th save.

Phil Bradley tied his career high with five hits, including a double in that ninth that was knocked down above the wall by John Shelby in center.

Don Carman, 9-7, lost his second straight game after five consecutive victories.

Pirates 4, Braves 2

Barry Bonds hit a tie-breaking two-run single in the fifth inning and Doug Drabek won his sixth consecutive decision since June 21.

Drabek, 12-5, struck out six and walked none. Jim Gott got three outs for his 21st save. Pete Smith, 5-12, allowed six hits and five runs in six innings.

R.J. Reynolds hit his sixth home run of the season in the second and singled to start Pittsburgh's two-run fifth.

Reds 6, Cubs 4

Eric Davis hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning off reliever Les Lancaster to snap a 4-4 tie as Cincinnati rallied from a 3-0 deficit.

Frank Williams, 3-1, got one out for the victory before John Franco, the Reds' fourth pitcher, threw one inning for his 26th save, his 103rd as a Red, surpassing Clay Carroll's club record.

Cardinals 3, Astros 0

Vince Coleman got two singles, stole three bases and scored two runs in the Cardinals' third shutout in their last six games.

Scott Terry, 3-3, allowed five hits in 6 2/3 innings. Ken Dayley, the third St. Louis pitcher, threw two innings for his fourth save. Jim Deshaies, 8-10, allowed six hits and all three runs in six innings.

Padres 6, Expos 2

Tony Gwynn had three hits, raising his average to .320, and drove in two runs as Montreal lost its third consecutive game. Keith Moreland singled twice and drove in two runs, and Carmelo Martinez hit a two-run single in the Padres' 10-hit attack.

Adios, Pedro

Los Angeles Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda and now-former Dodger Pedro Guerrero embrace in the Dodger Stadium clubhouse as Guerrero paid a farewell visit Tuesday afternoon. It was announced Tuesday that Guerrero would go to the St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for their pitcher John Tudor. (AP Laserphoto)

Tudor Says Guerrero Will Get Chance To Earn Bucks

ST. LOUIS (AP) — John Tudor says Pedro Guerrero will have a chance to earn the $6.2 million the beleaguered St. Louis Cardinals will pay him the next three years.

"He's a big power hitter, and that's what we need right now — the Cardinals need right now," Tudor said Tuesday after St. Louis traded his pitching arm to the Los Angeles Dodgers for Guerrero's bat. "I knew it could happen. We were struggling to score runs, and they needed to do something."

Guerrero, who reportedly had been seeking a three-year contract worth $5.5 million to succeed one paying him $1.72 million for 1988, fared better than that.

"It's a bit low," St. Louis general manager Dal Maxvill said of that sum compared with what Guerrero agreed to. "He was earning $1.72 (annually). You're not going to pay yesterday's prices."

Guerrero, 32, will be paid $1.7 million by the Cardinals in 1989, followed by $1.95 million in 1990 and $2.15 million in 1991. In addition, he will receive a $400,000 bonus.

"Basically, it's a premier pitcher for a premier hitter," St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog said of an exchange the Cardinals hope will revive an offense averaging only 3.5 runs a game.

"We're looking for a premier hitter. We can't continue to go the way we're going. We've played (118) ballgames; 65 times we've had three runs or less. You're not going to win many ballgames hitting like that."

Herzog said he is not worried about Guerrero's health despite the 59 games the slugger has missed this season with a pinched nerve in his neck.

"Pedro's the kind of guy that can carry a ballclub," Herzog said of Guerrero, who has a .298 batting average with only five home runs and 35 runs-batted-in. "He's had some injuries this year, but his history hasn't been that way."

Los Angeles, likewise, expressed hope that Tudor will be able to take up the slack left in its pitching staff by an injury that has disabled Fernando Valenzuela.

"This is something that we need," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "He's a big, big addition to our staff. I love Pete (Guerrero), but we needed a left-handed pitcher. You have to give up something to get something."

Tudor, 34, has a 6-5 record this season but leads the National League with a 2.29 earned-run average.

Off-season arthroscopic surgery and the flu slowed his start. Last year, he suffered a broken leg in an April dugout collision but returned in time to post a 10-2 record. His 50-22 overall record for St. Louis featured a 21-8 mark in 1985 followed by a 13-7 ledger in 1986. "A lot of days John went out there when he wasn't really 100 percent," Herzog said of Tudor's grit. "He always took the baseball. It really was a pleasure to manage him."

Herzog said Guerrero would be in the Cardinals' lineup tonight at first base in a game at Busch Stadium against the Houston Astros as Tudor was making his first start in Dodger Stadium for Los Angeles.

"We've got to hope Guerrero not only complements the other players in the lineup (but) that he just sparks the whole team offensively," Herzog said. "He's going to hit third or fourth, but I've got to mull that over a little bit to see which is the way I'm going to go. But wherever he's at in the lineup you know he's going to do the job for us."

St. Louis, heading into tonight's game, is fifth in the NL East after a year ago winning its second league pennant in three seasons.

"I think the two things that really come back to me are two World Series championships blown. I'm just the type of guy that can't accept negative things as opposed to positive things," Tudor said of his 3½ years with the Cardinals.

"I remember the times that hurt more than the times that felt good. It's been a lot of fun here, but the

Beating Goes On For AL East

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The beat goes on in the American League East. Detroit, Boston and New York each lost a game and a chance to improve its position atop the division.

"I can't explain why we're suddenly beating Detroit," Kirby Puckett said after Minnesota again tripped the Tigers 4-1 Tuesday night. The Twins, who defeated the Tigers in five games in last year's playoffs, are 7-1 against them this season.

Detroit managed to hold its three-game lead over Boston and 3½-game edge over New York as both contenders were routed.

Seattle trounced the Red Sox 7-0 and California crushed the Yankees 15-6.

"We got hit awfully hard tonight, the game was out of reach early and there was nothing much we could do," Yankees manager Lou Pinella said.

In other games, Oakland downed Baltimore 6-3, Chicago held off Toronto 5-4, Texas topped Kansas City 5-4 and Cleveland beat Milwaukee 6-5 in 10 innings.

Bert Blyleven pitched six shutout innings at Tiger Stadium and ended his five-game losing streak. He gave up four hits in his first start since July 29, when he sprained his right thumb and went on the disabled list. "The layoff gave me time to sit for a couple of weeks, collect my thoughts," Blyleven said. "I came in with a positive frame of mind. When you've lost five straight, you need something."

Jack Morris, 10-12, saw his three-game winning streak stopped. He has lost four consecutive decisions to Minnesota starting with Game 2 of the playoffs.

"You're intelligent people. You saw the game. Go ahead and write about it," Morris said as he left the clubhouse.

Kent Hrbek hit his 22nd home run, all of them against AL East opponents, to lead off the second inning. A wild pitch by Morris enabled another run to score in the third.

Puckett, who earlier threw out Lou Whitaker at the plate from center field, hit a two-run single in the fifth. Whitaker homered in the ninth and Jeff Reardon relieved for his 31st save.

Mariners 7, Red Sox 0

Scott Bankhead scattered nine hits for his first major league shutout as Seattle won at Boston.

The Red Sox lost their second straight game at Fenway Park since setting an AL record with 24 consecutive victories at home.

Bankhead, 6-7, walked none and struck out eight. It was his second complete game since April 30, 1987. Scott Bradley went 4-for-4 and Rey Quinones hit a three-run homer. Wes Gardner, 5-4, was the loser.

Angels 15, Yankees 6

Wally Joyner homered and drove in five runs and California took an 11-0 lead in the third inning and coasted at Yankee Stadium.

The Angels scored their most runs ever against New York and tied a season high with 19 hits. Brian Downing hit a two-run homer, Chili Davis singled twice during a seven-run third and Mark McLemore doubled twice and drove in two runs.

Willie Fraser, 9-10, got the victory despite allowing a team-record five home runs in 6 1/3 innings. Don Mattingly homered twice for the Yankees and Dave Winfield, Claudell Washington and Randy Velarde also connected.

Rick Rhoden, 7-9, lasted only 1 1/3 innings for his shortest start since Sept. 21, 1985, for Pittsburgh, a span of 86 outings.

Athletics 6, Orioles 3

Storm Davis, starting for the first time against his former team, won his seventh straight decision as Oakland won at Baltimore.

Davis, 12-4, helped the Athletics win for the sixth time in seven games. Dennis Eckersley got his 34th save.

Mark McGwire had three hits and drove in two runs. Dave Henderson hit his 18th home run off Jay Tibbs, 4-10.

Eddie Murray hit a three-run homer, his 23rd, for the Orioles. He has homered 19 times since June 7, most in the majors during that stretch.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 4

Carlton Fisk hit a two-run homer and an RBI single that led Chicago past visiting Toronto.

Fisk caught his 1,804th game, one behind Rick Ferrell's AL record. Fisk has hit 315 career homers and 295 as a catcher, 18 behind Yogi Berra's league mark.

Jack McDowell, 5-8, got the victory and Bobby Thigpen earned his 26th save. Jimmy Key, 7-3, took the loss.

Indians 6, Brewers 5

Andy Allanson singled home the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning as Cleveland beat Milwaukee.

Willie Upshaw opened the 10th with a single off Chuck Crim, 5-6, and stole

Fenner To Play Football For Gardner-Webb

BOILING SPRINGS (AP) — As former Atlantic Coast Conference rushing leader Derrick Fenner prepares to play football with Gardner-Webb of the NAIA, it appears that many eyes will be watching to make sure he doesn't do anything he's not supposed to.

"There will be some stringent guidelines placed upon Derrick and he has accepted these restrictions," Woody Fish, the school's athletic director and head football coach, said Tuesday as Fenner accepted a scholarship to play at the college in Boiling Springs. "We cannot divulge the guidelines."

Fenner, who last played in the 1986 season for North Carolina, will report for football practice Saturday, said Gardner-Webb Sports Information Director Ozie McFarland.

"We have decided to allow Derrick Fenner to continue his academic and football careers at Gardner-Webb College," Fish said. "Given the nature of the institution, we believe in giving some folks who are sincere another chance. Derrick has expressed his desire to be a positive campus citizen and student."

Fenner led the ACC in rushing as a sophomore in 1986 with 1,250 yards and set a single-game record of 328 yards against Virginia.

He was suspended from the Tar Heel team for academic reasons before the Aloha Bowl in December 1986.

Fenner was arrested June 2, 1987, and charged with first-degree murder in a drug-related shooting in Hyattsville, Md. That charge was later dropped, but Fenner pleaded guilty in April to one count of cocaine possession and was placed on three years probation.

Fenner, who has two years of football eligibility left, had planned to re-enroll at North Carolina and rejoin the Tar Heel football team, but was told earlier this year by Athletic Director John Swofford that he would not be allowed to do so because of the drug conviction.

McFarland said Fenner is taking a summer school course at North Carolina and must make at least a C to be eligible to play football this year under SAC-8 guidelines.

"It's not a haphazard decision," McFarland said. "They made a decision based on what they feel like is a pretty decent kid, one that Gardner-Webb College can help."

Fenner was driving to his home in Oxon Hill, Md., Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

Gardner-Webb was 11-2 last season, winning the SAC-8 championship. The Bulldogs lost in the quarter-finals of the NAIA playoffs to Carson-Newman.

Auburn Senate Supports Measure

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — The Auburn University faculty senate unanimously passed a resolution Tuesday expressing support for President James Martin and a new Southeastern Conference academic rule that football coach Pat Dye has criticized.

The resolution contained no language critical of Dye, as some faculty members had earlier said it might. Dye, who also serves as athletic director at Auburn, has said he opposed the policy because it leaves "the little guy" from an impoverished background without a chance to use athletic skills to earn a college education.

The rule will eventually eliminate an SEC standard that allows league schools to accept on a non-playing basis athletes who don't immediately meet NCAA academic requirements.

Ian Hardin, chairman of the university senate's commission of academic studies and athletics, said the senate had on a number of occasions supported the idea of recruiting only those students who have a good chance to graduate.

"The senate has reaffirmed a commitment to trying to upgrade the academic standards for the entire university and to getting the best combination of students and athletes that we can," Hardin said.

Hardin said copies of the resolution will be sent to presidents and athletic directors at each SEC institution.

Baker's Surgery Termed Very Successful

CHARLOTTE — Stock car driver Buddy Baker may be moved soon from the intensive care unit at Charlotte Memorial Hospital if he continues to recover from a brain operation to remove a blood clot.

Doctors removed the clot from Baker's brain on Tuesday in an operation that was called "very successful."

Baker, in good spirits following the surgery, joked that he felt well enough to come to the hospital's auditorium and hold a press conference on his condition, according to Dr. Jerry Petty, Baker's neurosurgeon.

"We'll keep Buddy in the intensive care unit overnight and hopefully move him to a regular room Wednesday if everything goes well," Petty said. "I expect him to be hospitalized about a week."

"I'd say the healing process will take six weeks minimum, but these race drivers are amazing people and often they're not on the same timetable as others."

Petty would not say exactly when Baker's could return to racing the cars he co-owns with Danny Schiff. But told that the Southern 500 on Sept. 4 at Darlington, S.C., is especially meaningful to Baker, Petty shook his head and softly said, "No way."

Baker won the classic in 1970, one of the biggest of his 19 career victories, and hasn't missed the race since.

Morgan Shepherd will drive the Baker's car in the Champion 400 Sunday at Michigan International Speedway. However, he will be unavailable beyond that, and team manager John Suggs said no decision has been made on who will drive thereafter.

Baker was cracking one-liners after surgery. "They've taken a perfectly decent looking head and turned me into the Frankenstein monster's brother," the 47-year-old driver said.

The blood clot was removed from the right frontal lobe of Baker's brain. The clot was just under the covering of the brain, the result of trauma suffered in a crash at Charlotte Motor Speedway on May 29.

Pressure from the clot had caused the right side of Baker's brain to almost overlap the left.

Although optimistic about full recovery, Petty said while Baker is healing "we will worry about the reaccumulation" of fluid in the area of the brain from which the clot was removed. "It's a process where we'll have to wait and see what happens."

Falcons Continue To Trim Roster

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons cut 12th-round draft pick Carter Wiley and two other players to trim the NFL club's roster to 83 players. Wiley, a defensive back from Virginia Tech, was the first of the Falcons' 1988 draft choices to be cut.

Also waived were free agent tight end Joel Williams of Notre Dame and free agent safety Anthony Anderson of Grambling.

All NFL squads must reduce their rosters to 60 players by Aug. 23.

No. 1 draft choice Aundray Bruce, a linebacker from Auburn, worked out in pads Tuesday, the second day since his return from time off with a knee injury.

"He looks ready and will play Saturday against Tampa Bay," said Coach Marion Campbell. The Falcons host the Bucs Saturday night in Atlanta in the third pre-season game for both clubs.

The Falcons also said there was no progress in negotiations with five veteran starters from last season who are holding out. They are defensive end Rick Bryan, cornerback Scott Case, punter Rick Donnelly, offensive tackle Leonard Mitchell and inside linebacker John Rade.

Starting nose tackle Tony Casillas, the No. 1 draft choice in 1986, also remained absent from camp for personal reasons.

Leonard-Lalonde Fight Date Is Set

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard's latest comeback fight will take place on Nov. 7 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., his opponent's manager confirmed.

Leonard will fight Donny Lalonde of Canada, the World Boxing Council's light heavyweight champion, in an attempt to become the first five-time champion. Also up for grabs in the bout will be the new WBC super middleweight crown.

"Well, at least we weren't the ones who leaked it," Lalonde's manager, David Wolf, said Tuesday night.

Details of the fight are to be announced Thursday at a 10:30 a.m. (EDT) news conference in New York.

Wolf said he is pleased the fight will take place at Caesars.

"I like it. They have a history of doing the biggest and best events. There's something about saying a fight is coming from Caesars that has an extra lustre to it."

The fight is to take place in a stadium to be constructed on the hotel's parking lot or its tennis courts.

Hawks Ink Moses Malone

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks finally landed the center they had been seeking by signing free-agent Moses Malone to a three-year contract that is fueling dreams of an NBA championship.

Despite his age — 33 — Malone made the All-Star squad for the 11th consecutive year last season, averaging 20.3 points and 11.2 rebounds.

The Hawks declined to release details of the agreement during a news conference Tuesday, but the 6-foot-10 Malone reportedly signed a deal worth a minimum of $4.67 million over the three years.

"People look at my age. But I feel like I'm 18," Malone said as he unveiled a Hawks jersey with his name and the No. 2 on the back. "I work hard and prepare myself to be in shape. People don't understand."

"But I think the Lord is taking care of me. ... My name is Moses, isn't it?"

"I may be in my 30s, but I still will get my 20 points and 10 rebounds a game. People just don't realize I can still do it," he said, after 14 years of professional basketball. In 12 NBA seasons, he has been selected Most Valuable Player three times.

"My goal is to win, to bring a championship to Atlanta," Malone said. "I'm not a superstar. I'm just a player, but I'm a better player with a good team and the Hawks are a good team. Now that I'm here, they (other teams) will have to pay attention to me and the other players. It will create problems for other teams."

"He's a winner. Moses is a guy that burns to win games. All he's talked about since getting here is about winning a championship in Atlanta," said Hawks president Stan Kasten, who negotiated the deal with Malone's agent, Lee Fentress.

"It will be a difficult job for the coaches because we've got a lot of talent and egos to mesh," he said. "But every great team has had that problem. We're taking a gamble with talent. Without talent, you have no chance. We think we have that talent now."

Coach Mike Fratello said the addition of Malone and an earlier deal that brought high-scoring guard Reggie Theus to the Hawks makes his club a legitimate title threat.

"Los Angeles and Detroit, the two teams that met in the NBA finals, have to be considered the favorites," Fratello said. "But we like to look at it that we have two new starting pieces and hopefully we'll be stronger."

"I know that one player guarantees nothing and that to win a championship you need a lot of luck and everything has to mesh," team owner Ted Turner said. "This was the piece of the puzzle we all felt we needed to give us our best chance at a championship."

Atlanta has never won a championship since the franchise moved from St. Louis in 1968. The Hawks last won a title in 1958.

The Hawks have won at least 50 games the last three seasons, but each year were eliminated in the second round of the playoffs. "This is a great situation for me," said Malone, who played the last two seasons at Washington.

Noting that he has won only one NBA championship in his career — in 1983 with the Philadelphia 76ers — Malone said, "I need some rings. I've got five fingers and only one ring, and I think we've got the team to do it."

The Hawks first expressed interest in Malone last month, but efforts to confirm negotiations between Atlanta and the 6-foot-10 center were met with a firm "no comment" from Kasten. He admitted Tuesday that an agreement was reached with Malone Aug. 5, but was kept quiet because Malone was overseas on a tour and Fentress was vacationing in Europe.

Atlanta's starting center last year, Wayne "Tree" Rollins, averaged 4.4 points and 6 rebounds. Rollins, also an unrestricted free agent, signed recently with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The 255-pound Malone has led the NBA in rebounding six times, most recently in 1985. During his career, he has averaged 23.7 points and 13.9 rebounds per game while playing with Houston, Philadelphia and Washington.

The Hawks front office had promised to pursue scorers at both guard and center after last season. The first goal was met with the acquisition of Theus in a trade with Sacramento.

Malone went directly from Petersburg High School in Virginia to the old American Basketball Association in 1974 as a third-round draft choice by Utah. He moved to the NBA in the 1976 ABA dispersal draft.

Clemens To Miss A Start Due To A Pulled Muscle

BOSTON (AP) — American League Cy Young Award winner Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox will miss a scheduled start for the first time in three years because of a muscle strain in his back.

Clemens, 15-8, said Tuesday that he will skip a scheduled appearance against Oakland at Fenway Park on Friday night.

The right-handed pitcher said he and Dr. Arthur Pappas, the team physician, didn't want to risk a possible arm injury by a change in his pitching mechanics because of the muscle strain in the left ribcage area.

"I've had things like this before, but I've been able to pitch my way through it," Clemens said. "That's what I tried to do Sunday (against Detroit), but I couldn't do it."

Clemens said he will "take a couple of days off and let it heal," rather than pitch as scheduled against Oakland.

"Dr. Pappas is afraid I might hurt my arm by changing my mechanics trying to compensate for the injury and I don't want to take a chance on that," he said. "Hopefully, I'll be able to pitch again a week from Wednesday."

With time running out on his bid for a third consecutive Cy Young Award, Clemens confirmed he hurt his back doing household chores "about 15 days ago" in his suburban Boston home.

"Maybe I shouldn't have, but I like doing things around the house," he said before the Red Sox' game Tuesday night with Seattle.

Since the injury, Clemens has lost three starts in a row for the first time in his career, dropping his record to 15-8.

Clemens has not missed a start in the rotation because of injury since he came back in 1986 from shoulder surgery on Aug. 30, 1985.

Clemens was rocked for eight runs on five hits and four walks in 1 1/3 innings against Detroit on Sunday.

Pappas said then he didn't know when Clemens would be able to pitch again, but emphasized the disabled list would not be necessary. Muscle relaxants and rest were prescribed.

"He's mentally and physically tough, but I think Roger knows that he's not right and he needs some time," Boston Manager Joe Morgan said.

After allowing seven runs on nine hits and four walks in 5 1/3 innings in Detroit on Aug. 4, his 26th birthday, Clemens said he had hurt his back while moving furniture.

But he came back as scheduled against the Brewers in Milwaukee on Aug. 9, only to drop a 3-2 decision on Joey Meyer's leadoff homer in the ninth inning. Clemens said the home run on the first pitch of the inning also was a first in his career.

Charlie Hough, 10-13, gave up six hits in 8 2/3 innings. He walked seven and struck out eight before Mitch Williams got the final out for his 15th save.

First Football Scrimmage Set

East Carolina's football team will meet on the grounds of Ficklen Stadium this evening at 7:15 p.m. for its first scrimmage of the fall season. The Pirates will also scrimmage again Saturday at 7:30 p.m. One player to look for tonight will be junior college transfer Charles Freeman. Freeman, a 6-3, 210-pounder, from Clearwater, Fla., has impressed the Pirates coaches thus far in fall practices at the tight end position.

HTS To Televis Four ECU Games

Four East Carolina University football games this season will be televised on a tape-delay basis, Home Team Sports officials announced earlier this week.

Home Team Sports is a cable television network based out of Washington, D.C., which plans to televise 57 games this year, including four Pirate games — all in the month of October.

HTS is available to cable subscribers within the Greenville area and to more than one million subscribers on the east coast.

Scheduled home games with West Virginia, Syracuse and Miami along with ECU's road game at Florida State are the games to be shown.

Dates to be televised: West Virginia (Oct. 11 7:30 p.m.); Florida State (Oct. 18, 7:30 p.m.-tentative); Syracuse (Oct. 23, 9:30 a.m.) and Miami (Oct. 30, 7 p.m.)

ECU's Growing Grid Injury List

Starting tailback Reggie McKinney has been hampered with a hamstring pull and is doubtful for tonight's scrimmage, but the injury doesn't appear serious.

Starting guard Stewart Southall has been bothered by an ingrown toe nail. Andre Fields, wide receiver, back on the team after a one-year absence, is on the injured list with a leg injury. His status is uncertain at present.

Also ailing with injuries are sophomore slotback Charlie Tyson and freshman wide receiver Terry Bennett. Both players have received injuries in fall camp. Tyson injured his thumb and Bennett injured his shoulder.

Applewhite Impresses At Lower Weight

Walk-on Davis Is Getting Attention

Walk-on defensive lineman Norwood Davis has been making a good impression on Pirate coaches since joining the team in the spring. Davis, who played on the Gold team at the end of spring drills, has been getting a lot of reps on the defensive line this week in practice.

Errol McCorvey Heads To Seminoles

Former East Carolina defensive back Errol McCorvey has returned to his home state of Florida and plans to walk-on the Florida State football squad. McCorvey, a 6-0, 176-pounder, from Pensacola, who was recently found guilty of assault on a female in Pitt County Superior Court, completed a 48-hour jail sentence last week and will be allowed to serve his two years of probation in Florida.

Libretto May Move Up Depth Chart

The departure of backup quarterback Brad Walsh from the Pirate football squad earlier in the week may open up the door for Charlie Libretto to fill the spot. Libretto returned to the team at the beginning of fall drills after having quit the squad for the second time. Libretto is currently battling for the number two spot with walk-on Darren Bynum and freshman Jeff Blake. The Pirate coaches like what they see in Blake, but look for him to be red-shirted this year if at all possible.

Pirates Turn To Music Video

Several Pirate football players might be looking for a spot on the television talent show Star Search after making a debut video. At the recent Photo Day held at Ficklen Stadium, some of the team got together and made a music video. Requests for copies were already pouring in even before the taping had been completed.

QBs Move Over To Defensive Backfield

Former quarterbacks Sam Beverly and Andrew Ward have been working exclusively on defense so far in practice, both in the defensive backfield.

Kicking Battles Are Continuing On

The punting situation is in a dead heat as Craig Losito and John Jett battle for the starting spot. The scrimmages will be a good indicator of who gets the starting nod.

Robb Imperato is the leading challenger to replace place kicker Chuck Berleth, but is being challenged by Jake Fine.

Hats Off To Snow Hill's Jim Fulghum

One has to admire the coaching job done this year by Greene Central baseball coach and athletic director Jim Fulghum. Fulghum just missed claiming two baseball state championships this year. His high school team lost only two games all year in making it to the eastern finals and his American Legion baseball team stretched Kernersville to seven games in the state finals before bowing out.

Tar Heels Have A Tough Schedule Too

You've heard a lot about ECU's murderous schedule for the 1988 season, but what about the tough start first-year North Carolina coach Mac Brown has awaiting him? The Tar Heels open their season Sept. 3 on the road at South Carolina. They then return home the next week to face Oklahoma in Kenan Stadium and two weeks later have to travel to Auburn. Toss in the ACC schedule and Brown could be in for a long year in Chapel Hill.

Dye's Golf Course Took A Beating

Pete Dye's famed Oak Tree Golf Club course took a beating from the PGA professionals over the weekend. The course, rated the toughest par-71 in the country, yielded four holes-in-one over the weekend and a 12-under par winning score by Jeff Sluman.

Another First-Time Winner In PGA

The victory for the 30-year old Sluman, by the way, marked his first tournament championship. Ironically, Sluman was the seventh straight first-time winner on the PGA tour this season and ninth overall.

Baylor Goes For Three Series Appearances

Oakland A's designated hitter Don Baylor may get the unusual thrill this season of playing for his third consecutive different World Series team. Baylor played for the Boston Red Sox in 1986 when they lost in seven games to the New York Mets. He also played for the Minnesota Twins last season when they took the series in seven games over the Cardinals.

Dodgers Trade May Win Pennant

By Scott Ostler
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

The Dodgers win the pennant! The Dodgers win the pennant! Excuse me, Geez, I guess I lost my head there for a minute.

The rule is, "No cheering in the press box." As an objective reporter, I must maintain my detached perspective. But I'm excited about the Dodgers' big trade.

I just got the news that the Los Angeles Dodgers have traded Pedro Guerrero to the St. Louis Cardinals for a pitcher. Or maybe it was a bat-boy, or a veteran Clydesdale. Early reports are sketchy. It doesn't matter. Whomever or whatever the Dodgers get, they have significantly improved a team that is already leading its division.

If I'm a San Francisco Giant or a Houston Astro, right about now I've got to be cursing and slamming my morning newspaper to the floor.

What a week in baseball, as Mel Allen might say. Within a nine-day span, lights go on at Wrigley Field and in the Dodgers' front-office cerebriums.

Not that Guerrero was a cancer on the team. That's pretty harsh terminology. But at this stage of his career, let's just say Pedro was at least an inflamed appendix.

On defense, Guerrero was OK unless someone hit or threw the ball to him. I was going to say Pedro played first base with all the verve and enthusiasm of a rubbish-truck can-slinger, but that would be a cheap shot. My neighborhood happens to be blessed with the services of two refuse collection men who are the Pete Rose and Ernie Banks of their profession.

Guerrero will be missed, of course. He could hit, and he had a certain style, an athletic grace and power, and a pride and cockiness that could set a tone for a team. Faint heart ne'er won fair pennant.

I love the Guerrero home run trot, for instance. But not on ground balls to short.

The Dodgers' front office and Tommy Lasorda were tolerant of Guerrero's shortcomings. When he threw away an entire season with a half-hearted slide in spring training two years ago, Pedro received only praise for his comeback efforts.

When he actually reported to training camp on time last spring, Lasorda did everything but present Pete with a dozen blue roses.

When Guerrero, paid $1.72 million a year to play a team game, finally volunteered to play third base, where the team desperately needed him, Dodgers leaders all but nominated Pete for the Nobel Prize in humanitarianism.

Guerrero missed almost two months of action this season with a chronic pinched nerve in his neck. He was supposed to undergo daily traction treatments, but eventually he stopped.

"He didn't do it very religiously," Dodgers trainer Bill Buhler said at the time. "He just stopped coming in, and we stopped nagging him about it."

Nagging. Whew. Ironically, when Mike Marshall was missing chunks of action last season with a variety of injuries that some Dodgers players felt were less than life-threatening, Guerrero was one of the chief finger-pointers.

Monday night, apparently because of the impending trade, Guerrero sat out the Dodgers' game against the San Francisco Giants. The Dodgers won, 1-0. That has been the pattern this season, the Dodgers winning with Pedro sitting.

It's not all Guerrero's fault that the Dodgers play better without him. Maybe it's pure coincidence, although I doubt it. But baseball is a superstitious sport. In a winning streak, guys won't even change their underwear, so obviously you don't want to break up a winning lineup. Pedro's too good a hitter to sit, so a trade made perfect sense.

This is the type of dynamic, do-it-now move that has characterized the Dodgers under Fast Freddie Claire. If the general manager waits until the end of the season to shop Guerrero, the Dodgers lose him to free agency and gain nothing. The kid executive who was laughed at during the baseball winter meetings for his seeming hesitancy to make any kind of deal, is gaining a reputation for decisive action.

When the Dodgers needed a pitcher last week, instead of playing it safe by keeping Don Sutton or finding a semi-serviceable retread starter somewhere, Claire called up a 20-year-old beanpole from the minor leagues and throws the kid into the jaws of the pennant race.

Then Fast Freddie deals Slow Petey to St. Louie and gets a real starting pitcher in return.

Maybe Claire has just been lucky, but I wouldn't want to bring my rent money into a poker game if he's dealing.

This week in history, then, will leave us with two enduring — though surely not of equal magnitude — news images. In New Orleans, Ronald Reagan bids farewell to Americans, walking away carrying a gigantic, symbolic gavel. In Los Angeles, Pedro Guerrero will be packing up his oversized bats and bidding farewell to Los Angeles.

Two heavy hitters, both somewhat battered and tattered, moving on.

Lomax Not Concerned With Start

By The Associated Press

Phoenix Cardinals quarterback Neil Lomax, an eight-year veteran and two-time Pro Bowl player, is not overly concerned with his slow start this preseason.

Lomax has completed just two of 10 passes for 20 yards in a 21-7 loss Aug. 4 at Seattle in the Cardinals' exhibition opener. Last Friday night in Tempe, Lomax got off to a slow start before hitting eight of 16 passes for 110 yards in his half of work.

Cliff Stoudt came on in the second half to complete 11 of 17 passes for 129 yards and two touchdowns, but the New Orleans Saints still beat Phoenix 33-28.

"Yeah, I think that's our game plan. I go out there and throw four or five incompletions, then Cliff brings us back," Lomax said. "I'm working for the (regular-season) opener (Sept. 4 at Cincinnati). But still, when I'm out there, I have to perform."

Lomax severely has looked nothing like the quarterback who completed 275 of 463 attempts for 3,387 yards and 24 touchdowns last season.

"The only thing I can figure is he's wanting to perform so well, maybe he's too tight," Coach Gene Stallings said. "This is sort of a new start. People here like him. Sometimes when you want to really do well, you play bad."

HOLDING OUT

The Seattle Seahawks have tried to trade holdout defensive end Jeff Bryant, but haven't been successful because of Bryant's salary demands, president Mike McCormack said.

"I've tried trading him, but other teams won't pay him what I've already offered," McCormack said.

Bryant, a six-year veteran from Clemson who was Seattle's first-round draft choice in 1982, reportedly is seeking $750,000 a year. The Seahawks reportedly have offered him about $500,000 a year. He made a reported $450,000 last season.

McCormack said Bryant's agent, Marvin Demoff of Los Angeles, told him Tuesday nothing had changed in Bryant's contract demands.

"I said, 'Then we're at an impasse because I don't feel that's where we should be,'" McCormack said.

According to McCormack, Demoff then asked him if he'd tried to trade his client.

"He (Demoff) said he knows 18 clubs that will pay (Bryant) him that ($750,000), so I said, 'Fine, if you want to be an ipso facto general manager, make the phone calls and you work out the financial arrangements and we'll work out the compensation and make the trade."

McCormack said he hadn't heard from Demoff since that conversation.

McCormack said there also is no progress in bringing walkout linebacker Fredd Young back to camp.

Young, a four-time Pro Bowler, left camp three weeks ago and wants his contract renegotiated.

SIGNING UP

Linebacker Duane Bickett has signed a contract extension with the Indianapolis Colts that will put him in the "upper echelon of defensive players in the league," General Manager Jim Irsay said.

Terms of the deal were not announced, although Irsay said the contract will run through the 1992 season.

"We have in Duane Bickett one of the top defensive players in the game today and we've done a contract to reflect that," said Irsay.

Bickett, the Colts' first-round draft pick in 1985, led the club with 113 tackles and eight sacks last season.

A veteran punter for three National Football League teams, Jeff Gossett, was obtained by the Los Angeles Raiders, who also released veteran offensive lineman Brad Budde.

The Raiders said they obtained Gossett from the Houston Oilers in exchange for previous considerations.

Gossett, 31, joined the Oilers at midseason last year as a free agent after being cut by the Cleveland Browns. He finished up the 1987 season with an average punt of 40.4 yards and a longest punt of 55 yards.

Budde was the Kansas City Chiefs' first-round draft choice in 1980 from Southern California. He played at offensive guard for seven seasons with the Chiefs before being signed as a free agent by the Raiders in the off-season.

Defensive lineman Shawn Miller ended a 26-day holdout and reported to the Los Angeles Rams' training camp in time for a light evening practice.

Terms of the contract Miller signed after a 13-hour drive from Ogden, Utah were not disclosed.

The Rams also announced that they had claimed rookie punter Scott Tabor from the Los Angeles Raiders. Fourth-year punter Dale Hatcher is still recovering from knee surgery.

Miller, a five-year veteran who joined the Rams as a rookie free agent in 1984, has been a starter since 1985.

AROUND THE CAMPS

Hot or not, the Minnesota Vikings are back home.

And despite the 102-degree temperatures and the humidity Tuesday, most Vikings are glad they're back from their journey to Sweden.

"I'm just glad to be home," Tim Irwin said. "It was nice over there, but I got it out of my system."

Added Chuck Nelson: "It was in the low-60s over there in Sweden (where the Vikings beat the Chicago Bears on Sunday). So if you average them out with what we've had here, we'd have some nice 80-degree days. Still, even though it was cooler over there, we're glad to be home. I would say it was a good experience more than it was fun."

Veteran quarterback Steve Fuller has left the San Diego Chargers training camp to consider whether he wants to stay with the team or seek employment elsewhere, Coach Al Saunders said.

Fuller, an eight-year veteran, missed practices Monday and Tuesday for personal reasons, team officials said.

Bills-Lions Set To Play Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Buffalo Bills and Detroit Lions will play an NFL exhibition game at a site to be determined in Charlotte next year.

"Charlotte Motor Speedway, Memorial Stadium and perhaps the new (Charlotte) Knights Stadium are all possibilities," said attorney Spencer Stolpen, who is representing George Shinn and partner Cy Bahakel in their bid for an NFL expansion team. Stolpen said more study was needed before a site would be selected for the game, which will be the fourth preseason game of the 1989 season.

"We don't have a first choice until we learn more about the possibilities," he said.

Improvements to the speedway to add a field and temporary bleachers would cost about $900,000, he said. A recent request by the speedway to obtain funding for the project was turned down by the city of Concord.

Perles Wants Spartans To Return To Basics

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — In an era of fancy formations and potent passing attacks, George Perles wants to get back to basics.

"I dream of the day when we need three inches and we tell everybody where we're going, what the play is, and they can't stop it," the Michigan State football coach said. "That turns me on."

"We tell everybody when they go out the door, 'Throw out the X's and the O's. Go out there and beat 'em up. Go out there and play the game like it was meant to be played."

That's exactly what the Spartans did last year, going 8-2-1, winning the Big Ten championship, then beating Southern Cal 20-17 in the Rose Bowl.

The Spartans could afford to keep things simple a year ago. All they had to do was hand the ball to tailback Lorenzo White. In four years, White rushed for 4,513 yards and a school-record 41 touchdowns.

"It's a simple game. We've told coaches that from coast to coast," Perles said. "The only ones who goof up the game are the ones who come into it and think they're scientists, they're surgeons. They get so fancy that everything gets goofed up."

"It's a simple game for simple people. Most of us are phys ed majors."

The Perles philosophy will be put to the test this season with White gone. If junior Blake Ezor can fill White's shoes, the Spartans can keep things simple.

If not, then quarterback Bobby McAllister is going to have to air it out more, and passing is not his strength.

Behind Ezor, the Spartans have Hyland Hickson, another Floridian who broke most of White's prep rushing records at Fort Lauderdale's Dillard High School. Hickson was a Proposition 48 casualty in 1987.

If the Spartans have to throw the football, they have a first-class receiver in split end Andre Rison, who is closing in on school records despite playing in a run-oriented offense.

In the nation against the rush last year and second in fewest total yards allowed. With all but three starters returning, the defense figures to be respectable again in 1988.

Linebacker Percy Snow, who was voted the Most Valuable Player in the Rose Bowl game, is the heart and soul of the defense. A punishing hitter, Snow had 110 tackles during the regular season.

"I don't think you'll see us ever have a bad defense," said Perles, who uses the same 4-3 scheme at East Lansing that he used when the Pittsburgh Steelers won four Super Bowls. "We've got people that can run, people that have the right size for the positions, and we do have a good scheme."

Kimball Says Diving Will Help Him Cope With Grief

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bruce Kimball says competing in the U.S. Olympic diving trials will help him cope with the grief he feels about an auto accident that left two Florida teen-agers dead and six injured.

"If I were in the workforce, I would go back to work. For me, diving is my work and at times my job and, therefore, a means for me to cope with each day," Kimball said during a news conference Tuesday.

The 1984 Olympic silver medalist held back tears and tried to calm his shaking hands as he read a statement explaining why he would compete despite five felony charges pending against him from the Aug. 1 traffic accident at Brandon, Fla.

the right to put the United States "up to ridicule" during the competition at Seoul.

Veteran University of Texas diving coach Mike Brown took a different stand, saying: "The system that we have in this country is, you're innocent until proven otherwise. He hasn't had his day in court."

Kimball, who followed his lawyers' advice that he not answer questions, said he did not make a statement before Tuesday because he has been emotionally devastated and didn't know what to say.

He stressed in a quavering voice that he felt grief and remorse and wanted to express his "deepest sympathies to the families and friends of the victims of this tragedy."

Kimball also said he was in Indianapolis for three reasons — to help him get from one day to the next; "to reinforce the feelings of love and friendship" he's shared with his fellow divers, and to "face up to what lies in front" of him.

"I've dealt with a tremendous amount of adversity in my life. I've experienced enough to know that a person doesn't give up," he said.

"I don't give up and I won't give up. I'm not sure I could live with myself if I do."

"I think I'm the guy to replace Lorenzo White," the 5-foot-10, 180-pound Ezor said. "That's what I've worked for since the end of last season. I had a good spring. I think the coaches have confidence in me now."

Confidence isn't a problem, as far as Perles is concerned. Durability is. Perles has been trying to get Ezor to try running away from people rather than trying to run over them.

"Blake might be the type of back who can't carry the ball 100 times," Perles said. "I wish he could. Someday, I have a dream that a back carries the ball 100 times in one game. It makes it very simple on the sidelines."

"I'm close to being the No. 1 receiver in Michigan State history and that's playing with one of the greatest tailbacks ever," said Rison, who also played on the Spartans basketball team last season. "I know I couldn't ask for much more."

The Spartans lost only two starters on the offensive line, tackle David Houle and center Pat Shurmer. But the fate of All-American tackle Tony Mandarich, a 6-6, 303-pound senior, has been in doubt.

Mandarich, who asked to be included in the NFL supplementary draft and later changed his mind, was ruled ineligible by the NCAA. Michigan State appealed, and the NCAA ruled Thursday that Mandarich could play in all but the first three games of the season. The school planned to appeal that decision as well.

"Everybody is going to lose some people," Perles said. "Nobody has everybody back. We'll play with the people we have."

The Spartans defense was the best in the nation against the rush last year and second in fewest total yards allowed. With all but three starters returning, the defense figures to be respectable again in 1988.

Linebacker Percy Snow, who was voted the Most Valuable Player in the Rose Bowl game, is the heart and soul of the defense. A punishing hitter, Snow had 110 tackles during the regular season.

"I don't think you'll see us ever have a bad defense," said Perles, who uses the same 4-3 scheme at East Lansing that he used when the Pittsburgh Steelers won four Super Bowls. "We've got people that can run, people that have the right size for the positions, and we do have a good scheme."

If Perles has a problem, it could be special teams. The Spartans held an open tryout among students to find a capable replacement for punter Greg Montgomery because Perles was unhappy with what he saw from freshman Josh Butland.

The placekicking will be handled by John Langloh, who made 17 of 24 field goal attempts and all 28 extra point attempts last season.

"We should be one of the contenders if we stay healthy," Perles said. "That's the biggest factor. If we do, we should be in there slugging it out with our opponents."

The Spartans open with Rutgers and Notre Dame in East Lansing, then travel to Florida State before beginning Big Ten play.

"Motor Oil Is NOT Just Motor Oil."

"I've come to Indianapolis with the feeling that I will compete in these Olympic trials and will attempt to do the very best I can under the circumstances," said Kimball, who was flanked by a security guard, his lawyers, family, friends and teammates.

"I've dedicated 21 years of my life to the sport of diving. I've made incredible sacrifices to achieve the level of excellence which I've pursued, and I hold a strong bond of commitment towards the people who have encouraged me, supported me and, most importantly, instilled a piece of themselves inside of me," he said. "I cannot disappoint my family, friends and teammates by giving up on myself."

Barb McLaughlin, assistant executive director for U.S. Diving Inc., declined comment on Kimball's decision. She had said earlier, however, that the sanctioning body has no rule that would disqualify Kimball because of the charges and that "the judicial system will have to run its course."

Kimball's lawyers, Frank Quesada and Lee Fugate of Clearwater, Fla., said they do not expect the case to reach the courtroom before the Olympics are over because of the large number of witnesses expected to testify.

"It's unlikely we'll be ready to go to trial before December, at best," Fugate said.

Kimball could face up to 45 years in prison if convicted of the two counts of driving under the influence-manslaughter and three counts of driving under the influence with serious personal injuries that were filed against him Monday at Tampa, authorities said.

Some residents of the Tampa suburb of Brandon were upset Tuesday about Kimball's decision to try for a spot on the Olympic team.

"If he really dives, it will show me that he doesn't care. I don't know how he could even go to Indianapolis," said 19-year-old Steve Chesser, who suffered minor injuries when Kimball's car crashed into a crowd at a teen-age hangout in Brandon.

Robert Bedell, whose 19-year-old son, Robbie, was killed in the crash, was stunned by the announcement.

"He doesn't represent Olympic caliber. I can't imagine they would let such a person represent the United States," Bedell said from his home.

Bedell said he would try to stop Kimball from competing.

"I'll pursue it through the U.S. Olympic Committee, but I don't know how just yet," he said.

During the news conference on the Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis campus, where the diving trials are scheduled through Sunday, members of Mothers Against Drunk Driving also spoke out against Kimball.

As he left the room, Kathryn Owen of the Hamilton County chapter of MADD shouted, "Go home, Bruce."

"People are not going to tolerate this," she said later, adding that protests are likely during the diving trials.

Mrs. Owen, whose teen-age daughter was killed by a drunken driver three years ago, contended Kimball came to Indianapolis because he thought his problems would be "swept under the rug" here.

"I wanted him and his attorneys ... to know the people of Indiana agree with the people of Florida that we don't want him to compete in the Summer Olympics," she said, adding that she does not believe Kimball has

Yow Is Still Crusading For Women's Basketball

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Sometimes it seems that Kay Yow, coach of the women's Olympic basketball team and head coach at North Carolina State, spends almost as much time talking to people about the changes in women's basketball as she does courtside.

"We're changing," said Yow, "but it takes a generation to change attitudes about women's basketball."

"That's why we work so hard to develop a quality product; if people who watch us don't like what they see, they just will give up on women's basketball," she said.

Right now, members of this year's U.S. Olympic team say they're having a problem convincing people that there is more to women's amateur basketball than one talented player.

"Excuse me?" a spectator said to the University of Georgia's Teresa Edwards. "I thought Cheryl Miller was on the team?"

"No," said Edwards, then taking a water break during practice at downtown Charlotte's Central YMCA. "She had a little bit of trouble with injuries and she isn't on the team any more."

"Oh."

By the time Edwards finished her drink, the spectator was gone.

The recently released former USC star casts a long shadow, say this year's team members.

Losing a player of Miller's caliber would have devastated a U.S. National team as recently as four years ago, Yow said. But not this year.

"I see anybody in this country coaching women's basketball as having the ability to be an ambassador for the sport," she said.

"From community teams to national teams to those that bring basketball to the world in international competition."

We just need as many people talking about women's basketball, as many articles and as much visibility as we can get."

Yow's visibility as a basketball coach is considerable. After coming to N.C. State after five years at Elon, the Gibsonville native led the Wolfpack to three ACC championships. Along the way she served as assistant coach for the 1984 U.S. Olympic team, which won the gold medal in Los Angeles.

In 1986, she was picked to coach the USA Goodwill games team, and led the U.S. to a win over the Soviets — in Moscow. It was the first time the Russians had been defeated in major international competition in 28 years.

The U.S. came back and beat the Soviets again in the 1986 World Basketball Championships. American officials named Yow coach of this year's Olympic team. The Soviet coach was fired. The Soviet staff was fired.

This Olympic squad has several players with the potential to be dominating players like Miller was — 6-8 center Anne Donovan, for one. But the rest of the world's teams will be gunning for the Americans this time around. Winning once is tough, says the coach. Twice even more so. Three times...

"The top four teams are the U.S., the Soviets, Yugoslavia and China," she said. "But look for South Korea to be strong on their home court. Czechoslovakia is a big team and is strong off the boards. Australia has a good defensive team."

Winning, then, is going to be tough. But Yow is not as much pleased with winning as she is with simply competing; competing with people, instead of against them.

"I want to go and make friends, and promote peace and friendship," she said. "That's what the Olympics are all about."

PGA Tourney Titles Are Up In The Air

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — Seven straight weeks of first-time winners has sent a surge of optimism through locker rooms on the PGA Tour.

"You're seeing guys in the locker room saying, 'I haven't won; is it my time next?'" said John Cook, defending champion of the $1 million International golf tournament, which begins today.

"Guys like Mike Donald and David Frost are licking their chops."

Donald and Frost are two of the more prominent non-winners on the Tour, and both must feel this could be the week for their own breakthroughs.

Starting with the Western Open in early July, which was won by Jim Bane, the Tour has seen Tom Sieckmann, Blaine McCallister, Mark Brooks, Scott Verplank, Jodie Mudd and Jeff Sluman post their first professional victories.

Sluman's first triumph came in last week's PGA Championship, when he posted a 6-under-par 65 in the final round to overtake Paul Azinger.

Cook, of course, would like to put a stop to the trend.

"I'm very proud to be the defending champion, and it's a title I don't plan to give up easily," Cook said. "My game is in good shape, and I kind of got pumped up going around the course" in Tuesday's practice round.

Cook had an eagle-3 on the par-5 17th hole in the final round of last year's International, earning five points under the modified Stableford scoring system used in this event, now in its third year.

A birdie is worth two points, a par zero points, a bogey minus-1 point and double bogey or worse minus-3 points. There are also daily cuts and typically daily playoffs, with the surviving 18 golfers on Saturday playing for a first-place prize of $180,000 on Sunday.

Women's Olympic Team Set For 2 Exhibition Games

SURFSIDE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The U.S. Women's Olympic basketball team squares off in an exhibition against the Cuban national team tonight — one of two exhibition games the Americans will play during 12 days of workouts in South Carolina.

During practice at this beachside resort, the team will also be trimmed from the 14 players who remain on the roster to the 12 who will make the trip to Seoul next month.

"We have no specific date to make the cuts, but we will make them while we're here," said Kay Yow, the head coach at North Carolina State who's also head coach of the Olympic squad.

On Tuesday, the roster dwindled from 15 to 14 with the departure of Clarissa Davis, a 6-1 forward from the University of Texas.

She was the Naismith women's player of the year in 1987, but had suffered a bruised kneecap and had been unable to rehabilitate the knee. She had not participated in any of the workouts since the team arrived in South Carolina Monday.

Davis was averaging 24.8 points and 9.7 rebounds for Texas before injuring her knee during a Dec. 29, 1987 game against Rutgers. She had received an injury waiver from the initial Olympic Trials in May.

"Clarissa Davis has departed ... because of her injury status," Yow said. She said Davis "just frankly needed more time to recover and I don't have that kind of time."

She told reporters Tuesday the team will be built around three strengths.

"The most important thing for us is our defense — to have a very aggressive man-to-man defense," she said.

The team will also stress "a strong transition game — pushing the ball up and down the court," she said, adding the club will look for a lot of ball movement in the half court game on offense.

"Our strength is our quickness. We have a lot of quickness and we play tall. That's more important than just having size," Yow said.

The squad plays the Cuban National Women's team during exhibitions at Francis Marion College in Florence tonight and again at Socastee High School on Saturday.

The 12 players selected for the Olympic squad will get a few days off following workouts in South Carolina, she said. Then the group will reassemble in Los Angeles, practice a week there, and then head on to Hawaii and Seoul.

"The team is on track," Yow said, adding her players are "hard workers and enthusiastic."

There's pressure on all the players because there's still one cut to be made, said Katrina McClain, a Charleston, S.C., native who played at the University of Georgia.

"We're all competing for those 12 spots," she said. "You can't deny the fact that two are going to be left out."

Swedish Report Cites Decline In Arms Trade

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Global arms sales are on the decline and the superpowers are losing an important source of political leverage as nations that once relied on them for weapons turn elsewhere, a report said today.

In its 1988 yearbook, the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute said international arms trading reached $35 billion last year. It said $24.7 billion worth of weapons, about 70 percent, were delivered to Third World countries. India was the world's largest buyer with $5.2 billion.

The United States, Soviet Union, France, Britain and China supplied

80 percent of the international market, the report said.

But developing countries are reducing their dependency on the superpowers for weaponry, buying less and varying their sources, and military hardware is not the foreign policy tool it was in the 1960s and 1970s, according to the institute.

Buyers "are increasingly able to insulate themselves from the supplier's influence," it said.

In addition, it said developing countries cannot afford U.S.-built first-line weapons systems, they don't want inferior Soviet-built equipment, and they are turning to other manufacturers.

The institute, an independent group mostly funded by the Swedish

Parliament, monitors worldwide developments in weapons and arms control.

The 600-page annual report said arms deliveries increased last year by $2.8 billion, the largest jump in at least five years. It attributed the increase to U.S. and Soviet supplies of jet fighters ordered in the early 1980s.

But it said orders were declining, and with an end to the wars in Afghanistan and the Persian Gulf, "the trade in major weapons could drop precipitously."

The Iran-Iraq war spawned a thriving black market. "Virtually all Western nations found themselves embroiled in controversies over illegal arms sales," said the report, written by Aaron Karp, a researcher from the institute.

A "gray market" of officially approved covert sales was thought to be worth $2 billion last year, the report said. Illegal or covert sales to Iran over the last few years included anti-tank missiles and Hawk anti-aircraft missiles from the United States, explosives and speedboats from Sweden, artillery shells from France, and a factory from Czechoslovakia for producing AK-47 assault rifles.

Government-to-government sales still dominated the arms market, but more deals involved licensing agreements, technology transfers, and the modernization of outdated systems.

The arms business "is becoming less tidy. It has diversified into many new forms, making the trade less predictable and harder to evaluate," said the report.

The report also said:

—At the end of last year, 36 major wars were in progress, as defined by more than 1,000 fatalities. Many of them involved several conflicts among various factions.

—Despite the breakthrough in the U.S.-Soviet agreement to dismantle medium-range nuclear missiles, both countries deployed a total of 1,250 new long-range missiles last year. Britain and France moved toward a collaboration agreement on a new missile, and China continued its modernization program.

—The five countries that admit they have nuclear arms conducted test explosions last year at an average rate of one per week, about the same level as before the 18-month Soviet moratorium that ended in February 1987.

The Soviets conducted 23 tests, the United States 14, France 8, China 1 and Britain 1.

—A re-examination of seismic data revealed that the United States conducted dozens of unannounced tests from 1963 to 1986. Moscow, ending its policy of secrecy, announced all tests since the moratorium ended.

—Last year, 85 satellites were launched with military functions, or about 75 percent of all satellites put into orbit. The Soviet Union reported four launch failures — compared with two for the United States — and three other Soviet satellites malfunctioned.

Burmese Renewing Rallies

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — About 3,000 people staged an anti-government rally today in Rangoon, an Asian diplomat said. It was the largest such protest reported in the Burmese capital since last week's bloody riots.

The diplomat said protesters rallied in front of Rangoon General Hospital, a gathering spot for demonstrators after security forces allegedly shot doctors and nurses there during last week's unrest.

The diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, had no details on the rally. He said the city was otherwise quiet.

Student leaders called for demonstrations today to press for an end to 26 years of authoritarian, one-party rule in the Southeast Asian nation, where economic woes borne of isolationist policies have triggered widespread public resentment.

A Western diplomat said about 1,000 people gathered in front of the hospital Tuesday to hear speeches by student leaders and read anti-government leaflets and posters that demanded the dismantlement of the government and the country's sole political party, the Burma Socialist Program Party.

There were no reports of any attempt by security forces to interfere with the peaceful demonstration, he said.

Arabs Close Shops, Stay Out Of Jobs

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians boycotted their jobs in Israel today, and Arab-owned businesses across the occupied lands were closed in observance of a general strike called by leaders of the Palestinian uprising.

In the West Bank, witnesses said protesters blocked roads with burning tires, waved Palestinian flags and scribbled anti-Israeli slogans on walls in the cities of Bethlehem and Nablus.

Soldiers sealed off the occupied Gaza Strip, confining 650,000 Palestinians to their homes for a third straight day following an upsurge of violence.

Troops and police were on high alert in Jerusalem and the occupied lands after calls by underground leaders for confrontations with Israeli forces.

Many of the 110,000 Palestinians who work in Israel boycotted their jobs. Arab-owned shops and businesses were closed in at least a dozen towns and cities in lands Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

The strike came in response to a leaflet issued this month by underground leaders of the uprising. It said the strike was "in honor of Jerusalem, the capital of our Palestinian state and to protest oppressive measures and arrests."

Israel says about 5,000 Palestinians have been jailed since the revolt began, about half without trial.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has said it plans to declare a state or set up a government-in-exile for the occupied lands in response to Jordan's decision to sever administrative ties with the territories. Israel opposes a Palestinian state.

Tensions were high following a riot Tuesday afternoon in the desert prison of Ketziot, 20 miles south of the Gaza Strip, by hundreds of Palestinian prisoners.

The army said two Palestinians were shot to death in the melee and a third was wounded, but it refused to elaborate, saying the riot was under investigation.

The deaths brought to 247 the number of Palestinians killed since the uprising began Dec. 8. Four Israelis have died.

Miners At Second Unit Go On Strike

JASTRZEBIE, Poland (AP) — Workers at a second coal mine in southwestern Poland today declared a sympathy strike with miners occupying a nearby colliery who are demanding reinstatement of Solidarity, opposition activists said.

In support of an estimated 3,000 colleagues holed up for a second day at the July Manifesto mine in Jastrzebie, workers at Morcinek mine refused early to take up their tools and launched their own occupation strike.

Andrzej Andrzejczak, head of the Morcinek mine strike committee, said: "We support all of the demands of the July Manifesto mine workers."

The mine is about 12 miles south of July Manifesto, where strikers were demanding legalization of the outlawed independent labor federation, pay raises and reinstatement of workers fired for trade union activities.

Police ringing July Manifesto, one of Poland's largest coal mines, today turned away area residents who tried to bring food to the strikers.

Andrzejczak said the Morcinek miners broke off talks with management when they were refused access to loudspeakers and contact with the strikers at July Manifesto. He said miners erected a large Polish flag atop the administration building and were blocking the complex's main entrance.

It was not immediately known how many workers were involved.

The second strike came as Solidarity strike committee members met with management and representatives of the Industry Ministry at the July Manifesto colliery.

Adam Kowalczyk, a regional Solidarity leader, said more workers were joining colleagues inside by leaping over police barricades.

The strike committee issued a communique today saying the workers would not end their stoppage until their demands are met and charged: "The mine management is trying to end the strike by hunger."

Police surrounded the mine after workers put down their tools on Tuesday. Witnesses said about 600 officers were outside and about 3,000 strikers inside.

The strikes mark the eighth anniversary of the birth of the Solidarity, which Communist authorities crushed in a 1981 military crackdown.

Miners leaving July Manifesto this morning said wage demands were based on hardships caused by Poland's worsening economy, including 60 percent inflation.

"The economy is in ruins," one told The Associated Press. "Miners cannot live on their salaries because of recent price hikes."

Miners earn nearly twice the average national salary and receive extra benefits because of the vital role they play in the economy.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending August 12.

HOUSE
MANASSAS BATTLEFIELD PARK — By a vote of 307 for and 98 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 4526) authorizing the federal government to acquire 542 privately owned acres next to Manassas National Battlefield Park at an unspecified cost.

"The Civil War's Second Battle of Manassas on 1862 occurred on and near the northern Virginia site, which if not federally protected will be developed as a shopping mall.

Supporter Robert Mrazek, D-N.Y., said soldiers buried at the site "are owed more than having their graves paved over with a Burger King or a Bloomingdale's."

Opponent Ron Marlene, R-Mont., said "I object to...the U.S. Congress being used to settle a local land zoning dispute."

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Tim Valentin, D-2, Howard Coble, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7.

Not voting: None.

FREE TRADE PACT — By a vote of 366 for and 40 against, the House passed a bill (HR 5090) implementing the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement, a newly-negotiated pact to phase out all tariffs and dismantle many other trade barriers between the North American neighbors.

Despite the many protectionist measures each country has layered on over the years to safeguard its industries, Canada and the United States have emerged as the world's most prolific pair of trading partners, exchanging more than $166 billion in goods and services last year.

Both the U.S. Senate and the Canadian Parliament also must approve the agreement if it is to take effect.

Supporter Philip Crane, R-Ill., said there is "vast potential for economic expansion and growth under this historic agreement."

Opponent Olympi Snowe, R-Maine, complained that pact negotiators "have run rough-shod over the agriculture and natural resource industries in my state..."

Members voting yes want the trade agreement implemented.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.
 Voting no: Rose.
 Not voting: None.

THE HUD BUDGET — By a vote of 373 for and 30 against, the House approved the conference report on a $59.4 billion fiscal 1989 appropriations bill (HR 4800) for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and agencies such as the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Environmental Protection Agency and Veterans Administration.

While funding scores of existing housing, environmental, scientific and veterans programs, the bill also provides money for a major new venture — the manned space station — and kills the Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) program much favored by city revitalization officials.

Supporter Bob Traxler, D-Mic., called the bill "the best we could (do) under very difficult economic circumstances..."

Opponent Robert Walker, R-Pa., complained that the bill exceeds President Reagan's budget request by $719 million.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.
 Voting no: None.
 Not voting: None.

SENATE
CONTRA AID — The Senate adopted, 49 for and 47 against, an amendment providing $27.1 million in additional non-military aid to Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's Marxist government.

This Democratic-drafted aid package stopped short of supplying military aid sought by the White House and most GOP senators (see issue below). But it did set the stage for later House and Senate votes on sending $16.3 million worth of stockpiled arms and military supplies to the Contras.

The amendment was attached to a fiscal 1989 defense appropriations bill (MR 4781) later sent to conference with the House.

Senators voting yes favored another installment of non-lethal aid to the Contras.

NC Terry Sanford, D, voted yes. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

TO REARM CONTRAS — By a vote of 57 for and 39 against, the Senate tabled (killed) a GOP-drafted Contra funding package providing for the immediate delivery of $16.3 million in military aid and $27.1 million in non-lethal assistance to the Nicaraguan rebels.

The Administration and GOP leaders in the Senate supported the proposal, which sought to resume military aid that has been banned by Congress pending the outcome of Central American peace talks.

Senators voting yes were opposed to sending military as well as non-lethal aid to the Contras.

NC Sanford voted yes. Helms voted no.

Librarian Says Soviets Purging Pre-Gorby Books

MOSCOW (AP) — Public libraries in some Soviet cities have been ordered to remove from their shelves all political and economic literature published before Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to power, a librarian says in a letter published by Izvestia.

In a brief letter appearing in the government daily on Tuesday, I. Zavgorodnyaya said authorities also ordered the removal of works by Leonid I. Brezhnev and other former leaders now in disgrace.

The librarian said the directive to library workers suggested they tell people asking for the removed materials that they are all on loan.

"Within the past few days, we, workers of city public libraries, were summoned to an irregular seminar and they, relying on the distribution of high-standing orders, demanded that we remove from the funds the works of Brezhnev, Grishin, Suslov, Chernenko and a series of other authors," said Zavgorodnyaya, whose library is in the Crimean region of the Ukraine.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov said he was surprised by the letter and had heard of no such order. In a telephone interview, he said the action sounded like a "local initiative" by officials who were "doing more than necessary" to set the country on the right course.

He also cited a Russian proverb to point to incompetence of some local officials: "Make a fool bow and he will be sure to knock his head."

It is not clear whether the order affects public libraries throughout the Soviet Union, and the letter didn't mention specific cities. The letter did not say who issued the order, although regional officials have the power to do so. Viktor V. Grishin was the Moscow party leader under Brezhnev, who ruled from 1964 until his death in 1982. Mikhail A. Suslov was Brezhnev's ideologist. Yuri V. Andropov replaced Brezhnev, died in February 1984 and was succeeded by Konstantin U. Chernenko.

Chernenko died in March 1985, and Gorbachev was named party chief.

Brezhnev's rule has been criticized as plagued by corruption, cronyism, nepotism and economic stagnation. He and his aides have also been blamed for covering up the country's problems and repressing independent political and cultural thinkers.

Zavgorodnyaya said authorities ordered the removal of all political and economic literature published before the March 1985 Communist Party congress at which Gorbachev was named general secretary. It specifically cited reports on the Communist Party congresses from 1961-1981.

The order said this material is "outdated in its content and is no longer topical," according to the letter in Izvestia.

The order seems to go against the new trend of taking the wraps off materials that were closed to the public for many years, the librarian said.

"Wouldn't this mean that, while opening access to archival materials of a half-century ago, we are creating new blank spots in our most recent history?" Zavgorodnyaya asked in the letter, published under the headline "New Blank Spots."

Gorbachev, under his policy of glasnost, or openness, has encouraged a more accurate and honest examination of Soviet history.

Uncooperative Robbers

GLADBECK, West Germany (AP) — Police plans to pursue two bank robbers who fled with hostages and a small fortune in a getaway car provided by authorities backfired when the pair commandeered a high-powered BMW, officials said today.

Authorities said they provided the first automobile and the bulk of the 420,000 marks ($227,000) the robbers demanded to prevent any harm to the two captive bank employees, and had planned to pursue the getaway car.

Then, in a statement issued 24 hours after the robbery began, police in Gladbeck said they had "lost contact with the gunmen and their victims."

The statement said the bank robbers switched cars twice after fleeing the scene with their hostages late Tuesday.

In the first, the gunmen rushed into a restaurant and demanded the keys to a high-powered BMW, which they used as part of the escape. Details of the second car change were not included in the police statement, which added that the fugitives presumably had left the Gladbeck area in central Germany.

The gunmen had burst into a bank early Tuesday in this town 50 miles north of Cologne and held police at bay for 14 hours before fleeing with $65,000 stolen from the bank and an additional $162,000 provided by authorities.

Trauma PCMH One Of Four Specialized Centers

By SALLIE WHELAN
PCMH Information and Publications
 Trauma kills approximately 150,000 Americans each year, four times the capacity of East Carolina University's Ficklen Stadium. Trauma permanently maims another 340,000, according to Dr. Paul Cunningham, medical director of the trauma service of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Trauma is the medical term for injury — any kind of injury. Motor vehicle crashes, shootings, falls, drownings, poisonings and fires account for most trauma deaths in the United States, according to Cunningham, who is also assistant professor of surgery at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

"Trauma frequently occurs to people who have limited resources. It affects young people who are busy building their lives. It is the leading cause of death among people younger than age 45. For those people ages 1 to 34, trauma claims more lives than all other causes combined. That age span, for many people, is the most productive time of their lives," he added.

Pitt Memorial became a Level I Regional Trauma Center in November 1985, making it one of only four hospitals in the state with that designation. The other hospitals are N.C. Memorial in Chapel Hill, Duke in Durham, and N.C. Baptist in Winston-Salem. All are affiliated with medical schools.

Each month approximately 100 trauma victims are admitted to Pitt Memorial through the trauma service which provides specialized care to 29 counties in eastern North Carolina.

"Trauma is a specific disease that requires a certain level of care and a defined approach. Our Level I status means we have made a hospital-wide decision to provide an optimum level of care to trauma victims," Cunningham explained.

To obtain Level I status, a hospital must have a variety of specialized resources available, including 24-hour coverage in the emergency department, anesthesiology and operating room, the immediate availability of skilled surgeons, intensive care units for trauma patients, a variety of clinical laboratory services, a trauma research program, a training program for medical personnel, and a system for evaluating the medical care given. Cunningham says an air ambulance system, like the hospital's EastCare, is an important asset at a Level I center, particularly in eastern North Carolina.

"In our rural situation, EastCare is crucial," Cunningham said. "Approximately half of our patients come from outside Pitt County. It is essential that we tie in with supporting institutions and emergency medical services and have this critical care transport capacity. We complement the emergency services provided in neighboring counties."

The hospital is able to track the quality of care it gives as well as gather statistics about trauma through use of a computerized trauma registry.

"The trauma registry is an integral part of the trauma service. You can't have an effective quality assurance system if you can't track trauma patients," Cunningham said.

Trauma registrar Bonnie Long enters and analyzes data on each patient seen in the trauma service. She collects demographic and financial information, as well as specific data on the nature and cause of injury. This information is linked to a statewide trauma registry.

"We have used the data for the first time in eastern North Carolina to document the types of injuries that occur at higher frequency here than in other areas of the country," Cunningham explains. "We find that many rural injuries are related to motor vehicle accidents. These accidents occur at greater frequency here than in urban areas and the outcome is less satisfactory. The data is still preliminary, but seem to be pointing in that direction."

Several factors contribute to the poor outcome, he says. Many of the accidents involve one vehicle and one driver. The rural environment sometimes makes it difficult to get to a victim. Another factor is the time between identification of the accident and transfer of the patient to the first medical intervention site and possible transfer to a trauma center.

Trauma Program Manager Kathy Bailey says much can be done to prevent trauma.

"Prevention is an important part of the trauma service," she said. "We are committed to educating the public regarding the prevention of injury in the home, industry, and on the highways. Programs aimed at increasing public awareness can reduce the needless suffering, death and disability due to trauma," she said.

Ms. Bailey's interest in trauma care stems from her experiences as a volunteer emergency medical technician with the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad and as a head nurse in Pitt Memorial's neurosurgical intensive care unit. She now directs the trauma service's outreach programs, including an active seatbelt safety program in which hospital employees encourage seatbelt use to civic, professional and school groups throughout eastern North Carolina. She also serves as a resource for hospital employees and a liaison with other trauma centers and outlying hospitals.

A support group was recently formed for survivors of traumatic injury. Developed by Sue Collier, head nurse in Pitt Memorial's surgical intensive care unit, the group called TraumaCare provides individuals recovering from serious injuries and their families an opportunity to meet with people who have been through similar experiences.

But there is still work to be done, Cunningham says.

"Trauma is a $100-billion-a-year problem. Yet it has not been until very recently that the government has recognized the need to put research dollars into trauma. We need to be aware of what is happening at the state and federal levels and to lobby the legislature appropriately to make changes that will improve trauma care. We need more research funding, more support for emergency medical services systems throughout the state and more support for regionalization and coordination of trauma centers throughout the country."

For more information about Pitt County Memorial Hospital's trauma service and its outreach programs, call 551-4299 or write to Trauma Center, Pitt County Memorial Hospital, P.O. Box 6028, Greenville, N.C. 27835-6028.

RESCUERS ARRIVE — Many volunteer and a few paid rescue squads play an important role in trauma care of people in this region, according to Dr. Paul Cunningham, medical director of Pitt County Memorial Hospital's trauma program.

Soviet Water Area Explored

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first U.S. research vessel in a decade to steam through the waters of a restricted Soviet economic zone is making scientific and diplomatic breakthroughs, say officials involved.

"It's going well. All the equipment is working and the weather is fine," said Peter Lonsdale, chief scientist aboard the Thomas Washington, owned by the U.S. Navy and operated by the Scripps Institution of Oceanography of the University of California at San Diego.

Lonsdale, in a telephone interview Tuesday from the ship, said the expedition was using a range of measuring and sampling techniques "to understand a period of volcanic activity on the sea floor 100 million years ago."

The research, Lonsdale said, will contribute to scientific understanding of the giant plates which form the earth's crust, moving and shifting to form continents, island chains and mountain ranges.

The ship was charting an undersea plateau at the intersection of the North Pacific Ocean and the Bering Sea, 190 miles from the Soviet island of Medny, and 220 miles from the U.S. island of Attu at the eastern tip of the Aleutian chain.

The vessel, with Soviet scientists Mikhail Krasny and Vyacheslav Partikheyev aboard, began the 33-day expedition Aug. 5.

Ex-City Slicker Takes New Life In Wilderness

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

POINT WASHINGTON, Fla. (AP) — Carl Forrester's old city friends were stunned when he told them he had become a wilderness guide.

The 42-year-old former corporate-jet pilot and marketing representative had lived virtually all his life in Birmingham, Ala., and Chicago before giving up the city lights four years ago for the beaches, forests and swamps of the Florida Panhandle.

"They said, 'Man, you are 'Crocodile' Dundee,'" recalled Forrester, known in these parts as Captain Carl. "I said, 'Who's he?'"

After Forrester read about Paul Hogan, the Australian actor who portrays the movie character, and watched the film on videotape, he agreed there were similarities, although the plot is reversed.

Instead of the wily rustic from the Australian Outback going to the big city, the city slicker has come to the alligator-infested Choctawhatchee River Swamp.

"When we got down here we didn't try to change this world to fit our world," Forrester said during a recent swamp tour aboard the Marsh Hen, his 18-foot, flat-bottom outboard. "We tried to adapt to a different way of life. And I sell samples of it."

Forrester, who has a business administration degree from Auburn University, left Chicago with his wife, Alice, and daughter, Dara, 15, after business reversals compelled him to "seek refuge ... under the federal bankruptcy laws."

They decided to look first for a new life in nearby Sea Grove Beach, a favorite family vacation spot. Forrester mowed lawns, spun records in a disco bar and was a school janitor.

The couple also has undergone a role reversal. Mrs. Forrester, who never before worked outside the home, became a real estate broker and the family's breadwinner, while her husband's swamp tour enterprise has yet to show a profit.

But no one is complaining. "I'm all for him; it's one thing he really loves to do," Mrs. Forrester said. "I love having a career. For once, I feel I'm really doing something."

They live in "The Palmetto Patch," a comfortable wooden home friends helped them build on the swamp's edge.

Forrester charges $100 to take up to six passengers on tours of four to five hours. They see few other people, but plenty of alligators, fish, birds and other wildlife. The emerald forest reflects in the still waters like a scene from a jungle movie.

There is a stop at the "Choctawhatchee Hilton," a shack built by hunters and fishermen that can be shared by anyone.

Forrester wears a Dundee-style hat and clothing. Strapped to his waist is a large knife like the one favored by the movie character. He professes no use for the oversize knife, saying a friend gave it to him because people expect "Crocodile" Dundee to have one.

Along the way he tells stories about creatures and people of the swamp. Afterwards he'll strum a guitar and sing about his new life.

As the Marsh Hen scooted down the river, Forrester spotted a large gator. The gator dived and he slowed, waiting for it to surface.

But after a couple minutes the reptile still hadn't reappeared. "This is bad voodoo," Forrester murmured as he pushed on.

"I believe in voodoo," he said. "I never say my engine runs perfect, never say my boat won't sink, never say I won't get lost."

Forrester said he has overcome a fear of snakes and is unworried by the gators because they are just as scared of people as people are of them.

The tour includes Cooter Lake, Watermelon Bayou, Muddy Lake, Nancy's Cut, Little Bunker, Big Bunker and Pine Log Creek.

Forrester admits he's not a real Dundee, but says he's learned from those who are: fishermen, lumbermen and others who make a living from the land and waters of the Panhandle.

"Those people know the things that are necessary to survive and know them well, and they are my mentors," Forrester said. Some people might say "the real Dundeos are tattooed and toothless and not very interesting."

But he said that's not the case. "They talk slow, but they are not stupid," he said.

Forrester, who suffers from a heart condition and other ailments despite his athletic appearance, said he is a storyteller rather than adventurer, a naturalist not a hunter.

Once, however, he did shoot a 200-pound wild pig, although all he was thinking about was getting away as the hog charged toward him.

"When I jerked, the gun happened to be pointed right between the eyes and killed him," Forrester said.

Castro Hints He Wants Havana To Become Tourist Mecca Again

By JULIO PRESTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HAVANA — Fidel Castro has decided that Cuba, once a main Caribbean mecca for sun-seekers and high-rollers, should become a major tourist attraction once again.

At palm-lined resort spots all over Castro's communist island, painters are at work on peeling, neglected hotels, and construction crews are working around the clock to raise new ones. Castro has rattled off speeches in recent weeks exhorting Cubans to welcome vacationers.

But Castro is not suddenly throwing open the doors of his long-isolated revolution to let the traffic of humanity flow freely. On the contrary, in a speech July 26, he made one of his toughest rejections of outside influences, be they capitalist or even Soviet, on Cuban socialism.

"We must guard the ideological purity of our revolution," he said. "We will use nothing of any method that smells of capitalism."

Castro does not really like tourists, the international arm of consumerism. But the bottom line, he says, is that Cuba needs western foreign exchange.

Castro lamented in his July speech that Cuba's need for hard cash had never in 30 years been more pressing than today. Foreigners — from Canada, West Germany, Latin America — are to be a source of dollars second only to sugar. From 193,000 "pure capitalist" tourists, as they are called here, expected in 1988, Cuba is hoping for 600,000 by 1991.

The plan is fraught with ideological contradictions, and you can feel them at work the minute you reach your hotel.

During a summer heat wave, a wayfarer is greeted at the front doors of the Havana Libre, formerly the Hilton, by a torpid wave of even hotter air rolling out from the lobby. Inside, dozens of gasping, perspiring guests are laid about on chairs fanning and mopping themselves.

Even the kindly ladies who run the airless and infrequently arriving elevators, many of whom have been at their posts for a decade or more, can't remember a time when the hotel's air conditioning worked properly.

Much of the original 1950s carpeting has been preserved — by a coat of waxy grime. Although the skyscraping Havana Libre is Cuba's premier and most conspicuous luxury hotel, it serves a luncheon buffet that would draw grumbles at a reformatory in the United States.

Moreover, you can't just plop yourself down anywhere you want in the huge dining room, once a salon for glitzy balls. An elderly maitre d' at the door will tell you cordially but firmly and without explanation that if your registration ID card is green, you MUST sit in one sweltering corner. If it is orange, you MUST sit in another.

Until Castro's changed attitude began to take hold about a year ago, tourism was considered a scar from Cuba's debauched, prerevolutionary past. Hotels, deemed unworthy of maintenance, sagged. Today, Havana has half the hotel rooms it had when Castro ousted Fulgencio Batista in 1959.

"Under capitalism ... tourism here was prostitution, gambling, drugs. That's over now," Castro said recently. But he also admitted, "What we need is experience. How a hotel is run. How to treat a tourist. If we ever had any of that, there is none today."

Up to now, travelers lived by the same egalitarian ethic as Cubans: You couldn't get exactly what you wanted, but you could settle for what you got on the theory that all Cubans

'Sesame Street' Characters Beginning 20th TV Season

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 20th season of PBS' "Sesame Street," beginning this November, will lead up to the birth of a baby for Maria and Luis, two of the characters who married last season.

This season will also mark the 20th anniversary of two of the show's charter cast members — singer-actor Bob McGrath and Carroll Spinney, the man inside Big Bird.

They recalled their beginnings on the now historic PBS children's series at a recent news conference.

"When I first heard about it, I didn't think I wanted to be involved with a new children's show, because there was nothing that exciting in terms of children's shows at that point," said McGrath, who had been featured on the Mitch Miller show and joined "Sesame Street" in 1969.

"But when I saw some of the film and animation that Jim Henson and some of the other people had done, I knew this was really something quite out of the ordinary from what had been on television before."

The producers of the show expect to add new graphics and use more films, including ones by director Jonathan Demme and photographer-artist William Wegman, this season, a likely response to the trend toward multimedia kids' shows like "Pee-wee's Playhouse."

Guest stars will include Lily Tomlin, Tracey Ullman, Susan St. James, Rhea Perlman and James Galway, among others.

One of the major episodes last season was the wedding of characters Luis and Maria. This season's finale will be the birth of their baby, the producers hope to see the baby grow up on the show. Producer-director Lisa Simon said a search is on for expectant parents who would be willing to let the show follow their child's growth.

Big Bird has become the show's biggest star, but he didn't start out that way, said Spinney.

A peripheral character in the early episodes, he was sort of "the village idiot," Spinney said.

"One day, I realized he was really a child," said Spinney. "One of the scripts said he had to go to day care or something. So I said, we really should play him as a child."

Big Bird came to embody "all the fears of children and things they have to learn — a wide-eyed view of the world," said Spinney. "He gradually learned to read and write and so he grew from 4, which I felt he was the beginning, to 6½, which is where he stays."

Spinney carefully protects Big Bird's real identity from little children, but admits when he sees a child toting one of the big yellow dolls, "I keep wanting to say, you know, (he goes into Big Bird's high voice) 'Hey, I do that!'"

Spinney had been into puppeting since he was a child. McGrath had intended to have a career entertaining adults as a singer, but when rock music began to take over the business, he decided he would have to take another path.

Both men said the rewards of working for children are great, though the task is sometimes exasperating.

McGrath does a lot of concerts and benefits as his "Sesame Street" character. Children, he said, "are a wonderful audience. First of all, they're very, very honest. I had a little girl in Vancouver some years ago. I was shaking hands after a concert. She had me lean over to her and said (he drops to a stage whisper), 'You know something, Bob?' And I said, 'No, what?' 'Up close, you don't look too good.'"

McGrath at least can appear as himself to children, though he is careful when they're around. "I don't walk on red," for instance, he said.

Spinney has to be incognito, though he does have some fun. When he heard a mother call her child by name as the girl was examining a bunch of talking Big Bird dolls in a toy department, "I bent down near one and said, 'Hello, Jessica. How are you? Isn't it a nice day?'"

Shy Cuban-Born Singer Finds Her Power With Miami Sound Machine

By RICHARD HARRINGTON
K.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Gloria Estefan should be an inspiration to shy people everywhere.

After all, it wasn't that long ago that she was a painfully shy parochial-school student who'd married the first man she ever dated.

Luckily that man, Emilio Estefan, happened to be leading a band called the Miami Sound Machine, and soon, putting aside her brand new B.A. in psychology from the University of Miami, Gloria Estefan was moving into the spotlight — first singing, then writing and singing a string of pop and dance hits like "Bad Boy," "Words Get in the Way," "Rhythm Is Gonna Getcha" and "Anything You Want," a recent chart-topper.

Along the way, she's gone through one of the more remarkable makeovers in pop history. From the time she started performing in the mid-'70s until the early '80s, Gloria was your basic not-so-ugly duckling, pleasing to the eye and ear in a Top 40 manner.

SOUND MACHINE — Gloria Estefan, once a shy Cuban-born girl growing up in Miami, saw her life change when she married. Her husband, Emilio, leads the Miami Sound Machine, for which she is now the lead singer. (L.A. Times-Washington Photo Pix)

But starting with 1984's "Dr. Beat" and continuing a year later with "Conga" (which sold 2 million copies), she's been turning into a musical swan.

With her tangle of dark hair, smoldering almond-shaped eyes and lithe good looks, Gloria, 30, has emerged as one of the more charismatic performers since Madonna or George Michael, with a similarly defined pop sensibility encompassing not only irresistible dance-floor workouts, but aching ballads reminiscent of Karen Carpenter.

Gloria has even turned into a cover girl on the Hispanic edition of Cosmopolitan and the very first issue of a new magazine, Hispanic.

"When I was shy, I felt I had something in me I wanted to bring out; I just didn't know how to do it," Gloria says. "It was a painful process, but I forced myself to do it, mostly by watching myself on videotape, which is the most horrendous experience there is. But it's the only time you can see what people are seeing, and if you want to fix it..."

Well, it was hardly broken.

Neither was Miami Sound Machine for that matter, or Gloria Estefan and Miami Sound Machine, as the group is billed these days. The band has certainly had its share of successes in the last two years: a pair of multiplatinum albums; exposure on four hit sound tracks, including "Top Gun"; a grand prize representing the United States at the Tokyo Music Festival; the chance to close the Pan American Games; being named Billboard's Best New Pop Artist and Top Pop Singles Artists for 1986. But MSM's road to success winds back a lot further.

The music business being ethnocentric, you weren't likely to know that unless you lived in Miami or followed the pop scene in Europe and — especially — in Central and South America, where the group has been huge since the late '70s. Their current sound may be quintessential American pop, but not that long ago Miami Sound Machine was the hottest Spanish-singing pop act around.

Once upon a time — before Gloria — there were the Miami Latin Boys, four schoolmates at Miami High with a passion for music as well as a shared cultural and political heritage.

They'd all been born in Cuba and moved to Miami with their families in the late '50s and early '60s. Gloria had done the same, leaving Cuba when she was 14 months old. Her father at one time had been the personal bodyguard of dictator Fulgenio Batista's wife, hardly a helpful reference in Castro's new Cuba.

While the Latin Boys polished their skills under Emilio Estefan's direction, Gloria was going through her own familial trials. Many years earlier, in April 1961, her father had led the tank division in the Bay of Pigs invasion and had been captured (by his cousin, as it happened).

It was a traumatic period in the Cuban-exile community — "all the men were gone, all mothers and kids were living together," Gloria recalls — but only the beginning of her family's difficulties.

After President Kennedy negotiated the release of the captured prisoners, her father joined the U.S. Army and spent two years in Vietnam; when he came back, he was diagnosed as having multiple sclerosis, and his condition quickly deteriorated, though he didn't die until 1980.

With her mother working and going to school at night, it fell to Gloria to care for her father and her younger sister.

"When my father was ill, music was my escape," Gloria says. "I would lock myself up in my room for hours and just sing. I wouldn't cry — I refused to cry."

"At 17 and 18, I looked so much older than I do now, because I was carrying the weight of the whole world on my shoulders," she adds. "I was used to being so full of responsibility, never being able to let go, because I was afraid to. I was handling a lot, trying to be strong for my mom, and I was kind of like my sister's mom..."

"Music was the only way I had to just let go, so I sang — for fun and for emotional catharsis."

Gloria's roots have never been obscure, but events in the last year have made them more public.

First, there was the Cuban team's threatened boycott of the Pan Am games after it was announced that Miami Sound Machine would perform at the closing ceremony (never mind that they were popular in just about every country that sent teams).

More recently, "West 57th" did a segment on Gloria called "Rhythm in Exile," focusing on her father and her role in the exile community.

"It put a lot of things from my past into the spotlight," Gloria says of that program. "Yes, they happened, but it's not something I want people to dwell on. I don't want it to become a recurring theme. I don't want people to want me to champion their cause..."

"It's a double-edged sword, the fact that we're a symbol," she adds. "It's funny, because during the Pan Am games, we didn't have to make a statement and we did: Just by being there and performing, we really bothered Castro." She laughs. "I thought, Why should he even care that we're around, but it's such a paranoid society..."

In Cuba, in fact, Miami Sound Machine is quite well-known — as MSM, to avoid any reference to Miami. "But everybody knows."

"Conga" went to the top of charts there, as it did in a number of countries. "They sell our records on the black market; they make money off of us," Gloria complains. She has said she'll never perform in Cuba ("It would be a slap in my father's face," she told CBS) but for the most part refuses to be drawn into political debate, though the band will participate in this summer's Amnesty International concert tour.

It's not that she doesn't have opinions, she says. But "discussing politics or religion is a sure-fire way of getting in deep trouble, and what I say is not going to affect anyone or change anything. My business is not that; my business is to try evoke emotion."

Diner For The Poor Serves Up Menu Of Respect

By DAVID TREADWELL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

ATLANTA — There are waiters, menus and fresh-cut flowers on the tables. Patrons have their choice of such appetizing entrees and desserts as beef Burgundy and chocolate cheesecake. And reservations are a must.

It's not another trendy Atlanta restaurant but the "458 Cafe" — a diner for the poor and homeless in the battered downtown "Sweet Auburn" neighborhood. The eatery wants to do more than fill empty stomachs. It tries to restore its patrons' lives by giving them big helpings of dignity and self-respect — something that they rarely find in traditional soup kitchens.

"We're serving hospitality, community, brotherhood and sisterhood," said the Rev. A.B. Short, a 43-year-old Southern Baptist minister and social activist who helped found the 28-seat diner that may be the first of its kind for the homeless in the nation.

The cafe, which began operating in June and is open six days a week for lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., is located in a one-story brick building on Edgewood Ave. that once served as a drive-in liquor store.

From the moment the homeless patrons approach the building, they know that they are in for a different experience. The outside has been renovated in an eye-catching Art Deco style in colors of pink, mauve and sea-foam green.

Inside, patrons sit in a sunny, air-conditioned dining room with white Formica-topped tables and colorful curtains at the window. Cheery volunteer waiters take orders for the food, which is served on real plates — not paper or plastic. The menu each day features a choice of two entrees, three side dishes and two desserts plus a wide selection of beverages. There is no charge to patrons.

"This place is like heaven," said Lela Hadsell, 66, who has been living under a viaduct and gets her one square meal of the day at the cafe.

"I don't have to stand in line two or three hours, I don't have to walk up 16 dozen steps and I don't have to settle for soup and sandwiches."

An unemployed truck driver from Chicago, who was leaving for a job interview after a hearty lunch of shepherd's pie, said: "I'll be in a much better mood now to go job hunting. Your morale is important when you're homeless. This place makes you want to get back into the mainstream."

That, according to the Rev. Short, is the whole idea of the restaurant.

"If we can get people to have meals together in a relaxed atmosphere like this, then we can build personal relationships and develop a sense of trust that will help us in dealing with their problems," he said.

Plans are for the cafe eventually to serve as a multipurpose resource center that will offer legal services, support groups for alcoholics and drug abusers, and weekly visits by a mobile health clinic.

Short said that he also hopes to expand the meal hours to include breakfast and dinner.

Reservations for meals are required because staff members are trying to build a steady clientele of homeless people whom they can get to know so that they can determine their needs, in addition to food. About 25 persons have been signed up so far from homeless shelters and a nearby day-labor center. The reservations are good for several weeks.

Keith Summa, project director of the New York-based National Coalition for the Homeless, said that the cafe is probably the only one of its kind serving full-course meals for the homeless in a restaurant atmosphere.

"It's a magnificent idea," he said. "One thing so often forgotten is that the homeless haven't just lost their homes but often they have lost their dignity as well. This type of facility gives that back. You are treated like a person."

The idea for the cafe grew out of a chance remark to Short two years ago by Bobby Freeman, a retired businessman who is board chairman of the Atlanta Community Food Bank.

Freeman had worked as a volunteer at one of Atlanta's big soup kitchens but was disappointed at the drab impersonality of the place and the lack of interaction between the staff and the clients.

"Wouldn't it be great if there were some place where the homeless could sit down and be served a meal with more dignity?" he asked Short one day as he was recounting his experiences.

"Let's open a restaurant for these people," replied Short, who is head of a non-profit religious group that is known as the Community of Hospitality and is based in suburban Decatur, where Short lives.

Renovation work on the cafe began last November with the help of $30,000 in state and federal grants and an additional $35,000 worth of material donations such as air-conditioning equipment and kitchen gear. The building, which is right behind the Martin Luther King Jr. memorial center, required a top-to-bottom overhaul. Much of the work was done by volunteers, who included several homeless.

The cafe operates with an all-volunteer staff and with donations of food and money from governmental agencies and private organizations and individuals.

"All of us are only one or two mortgage payments away from homelessness anyway," Ife, Clarke, owner of a residential maid service, said in explaining her involvement as a volunteer worker at the cafe. "For me, working here is right on time."

Short said that the cafe's anticipated yearly operating budget is about $32,000 a year, which includes a monthly mortgage payment of $1,000.

He has already begun receiving calls from other cities interested in setting up projects on his model.

"We're not going to replace soup kitchens entirely," he said. "But we can offer an alternative. And you can get the money and support for this kind of venture if you can articulate what it is you want to do."

His biggest battle now is fighting the "American urge for bigness and numbers," he said.

"We don't want to get any bigger here," he explained. "We're interested in the quality of the interaction — not the quantity."

FOUNDER — The Rev. A.B. Short, a 43-year-old Southern Baptist minister, helped found the 458 Cafe in Atlanta, which may be the first of its kind for the homeless in the United States. "We're serving hospitality, community, brotherhood and sisterhood," he said. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photos)

Cuba

were getting a little something, too.

But now Cuba has decided to put its white sand beaches up against, for example, Jamaica's. So far, the Cuban tourist industry seems at sea.

The recently inaugurated Bucanero hotel, on a cliff at the southeastern end of the island, about 15 miles from Santiago, boasts a haunting setting and an ocean view as wide as the horizon.

But guests at the Bucanero quickly discovered they should only attempt to eat food kept from the hands of its cooks, who embalmed the chicken in rancid grease and curdled the milk for coffee.

Tourism Minister Rafael Sed knows about the shortcomings. He said at a recent press conference that tough new regulations governing the industry specify that only trained workers will get hotel jobs, and those whose service is poor will be fired — a practice avoided in other areas of the economy. A $2 million air conditioner is on order for the Havana Libre.

But the minister said he has not traveled anywhere else in the Caribbean to garner ideas. When asked what Cuba could offer over other nearby nations, Sed seemed taken aback, as though the question had never occurred to him. Finally he said: "Safety from thieves."

Sed promised that visitors will be able to go anywhere they like on the island, without restriction. But to judge from the remote Bucanero, Cuba is really hoping to segregate them in enclaves. One black American woman who visited Havana in July was repeatedly accosted at the entrances of hotels and restaurants by policemen demanding to see her identification. Thinking she was Cuban, they did not want to let her in.

Many Cubans are frustrated and ashamed to learn they will not be allowed to use the new facilities. For years, hotel rooms have been in such short supply for Cubans that a special program was devised to give newlyweds at least one night alone together. A lyric by popular folk singer Carlos Varela says, "If you go to a hotel and you're not a foreigner, they treat you differently."

But on July 26, Castro disdained these concerns. "Only a petit-bourgeois dandy would fail to understand why Cubans can't use those rooms," he said.

Cuba does offer the vast beach at Varadero.

VOLUNTEER — Bob Freeman, a volunteer worker, waits on homeless diners at the 458 Cafe in Atlanta. The cafe differs from other soup kitchens with its restaurant-style service and its emphasis on creating a dignified atmosphere.

Some stories are true and some not so true. Forrester admitted, saying he developed his yarn-spinning talent during his prior life in marketing.

On a recent visit to Chicago, he said he told his city friends only "little, bitty simple stories."

"I decided not to tell them the real Dundee stuff because they would have thought I had made it up," Forrester said.

Grist Mill Turns Again After 109 Years Of Silence

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

ST. HELENA, Calif. — For the first time in 109 years, the huge old waterwheel at the Bale Grist Mill here is turning again.

Erected in 1850, the 36-foot-diameter redwood wheel was last operational in March 1879, when it was replaced by a more efficient water turbine. Ever since, the wheel has stood idle.

Now, after a nine-year, $900,000 restoration project by the state Parks and Recreation Department, the wheel is moving again at the rate of 3 1/2 revolutions per minute, powered by water pouring from an overhead wooden flume. The mill is included in the one-acre Bale Grist Mill State Historic Park here in the heart of Napa Valley in Northern California.

British surgeon Edward Turner Bale, shipwrecked in California, built the mill in 1846 when Napa Valley was famous for wheat, barley and oats, not grapes and wine. The big wheel replaced a smaller one four years later.

The mill operated with the water turbine until 1905, but in the years afterward, the giant wheel, a four-story frame mill house, adjacent granary and 400-foot-long flume atop the towering wooden trestle, became overgrown with ivy.

In 1923, Sara Lyman, widow of Theodore B. Lyman, who had purchased the mill in 1871, presented it to the Native Sons of the Golden West with the hope that it would be restored and preserved as a historic monument.

The Native Sons removed the ivy, cared for and maintained the mill structures until 1941, when the property was given to Napa County, which began but never completed the restoration.

Bale Grist Mill became a state historic park in 1974, and restoration work resumed five years later.

As work continued, visitors who observed the restoration were invited to leave their names and addresses at the park with a promise that they were to be notified of the official rededication of the mill, now scheduled for Oct. 1.

Those invited to the rededication party will include wine country visitors from throughout the nation and around the world, said Bill Graummer, 47, ranger at the grist mill.

The party will include a re-enactment of farmers bringing wheat by horse-drawn wagons to the mill to be ground on the original grindstones that were imported from France.

"We have a request in the current Parks Department budget to hire a miller who will operate and maintain the mill," explained Doug Kauffman, 39, Napa district superintendent for the department. "When the mill operated, it processed 4 1/2 tons of wheat to flour a day. We're not General Mills. We will run the wheel in gears throughout the day to demonstrate the mill's workings, but we'll grind corn and wheat only for a short period each day, with the output sold at the park."

Originally, the water from a pond a quarter-mile behind the mill ran through a ditch into the flume, then spilled into wooden buckets on the wheel. Because only one-fourth of the flume was reconstructed, the water is now recycled and pumped through a pipe back up to the flume.

Joe Marino, 37, restoration specialist with the Office of the State Architect, has spent the last nine years as foreman of the restoration project.

"We put new foundations and supports in the buildings and dismantled and replaced boards and beams in the floors, walls, ceilings and roof that were weakened with age, replacing damaged and rotted timber with hand-hewn pieces identical to the original," Marino said.

OLYMPIC COINS DESIGN — Shown here is the basic design of the 1988 U.S. Olympic coins now available. Coins in two denominations are being issued by the U.S. Mint, a $1 silver coin and a $5 gold coin. The obverse design is

Coins Raising Olympic Funds

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The United States Mint is marketing two coins designed for collectors and issued for the purpose of raising $59 million in support of the nation's Olympic athletes.

The two coins, authorized by Congress, are a $5 gold coin and a $1 silver coin. They are now available at participating banks and other financial institutions nationwide, at coin dealers and at retail stores including K-Mart and Sears.

Surcharges included in the purchase price of the coins will be contributed to the U.S. Olympic Committee for three congressionally mandated uses — to support the training of Olympic athletes; to support community athletic programs, and to erect facilities for the training of these athletes.

The U.S. Olympic Committee has also announced plans to earmark $25 million from the projected coin sale proceeds for direct support of athletes.

Numerous public officials, including more than 60 governors and mayors, have issued proclamations supporting public awareness of the coin sales and the purpose for which the coins have been minted.

Washington Gallery Will Close During Reconstruction

By BENJAMIN FORGERY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — The Freer Gallery of Art is not one of the better-known great buildings in Washington, but in 65 years it has attracted a devoted following of admirers who go there often for surcease from the incessant pressures of the power city. Let these people, and those who might want to visit for the first time, be forewarned: At 5:30 p.m. on Labor Day the Freer will close its doors for at least three years.

The reasons are the construction of additional storage space and of an underground link to the adjacent Sackler Gallery, which opened last fall, and a refurbishment of the Freer building inside and out. The option of keeping the Freer open during construction by shifting the collection around was regrettably rejected, according to Milo Beach, acting director of both institutions. "But on the other hand," he said, "when the Freer reopens it will seem more wonderful than it ever has been."

One hopes intently that he is right; it will be in all respects a delicate operation. Of pre-eminent concern, of course, is the safety of the 26,813 Asian and Near Eastern artifacts in the Freer's collection, presenting tricky engineering problems because the art will be stored in the old building while construction work goes on.

"We must proceed literally with kid gloves and with pick and shovel," explained Patrick Sears, assistant director for exhibitions and facilities, in order to make sure existing foundations, walls and floors remain stable. A special worry is the amount of excavation, Sears said. Dirt must be dug from under the Freer's southeastern corner to make room for the connection to the Sackler, and from under its central courtyard to make way for new storage rooms.

The principal architectural challenges, as they affect public perception of the place, are two: the placement and quality of the connecting passage, and maintaining the Freer's distinctive character while updating certain of its facilities and fixtures.

Decisions about the connection have pretty much been made, Sears said. It will be a deep stairwell (with adjacent elevator) accessible from the Freer's half basement and leading to a new, 1,500-square-foot gallery and on into the first underground level of the Sackler. This is a somewhat shadowy, meandering arrangement, but maybe it is best, all things considered: Making crystal clear the link between the two buildings would have meant breaking through into the Freer's raised main floor and disrupting the measured flow of the galleries there.

In any case, to counteract that lost-in-the-depths feeling (familiar to wanderers in both the Sackler and the adjoining National Museum of African Art) Sears does intend to make the stairwell as Freer-like a space as possible — dados, balusters, risers and lantern will be adapted from features of the old building, and in fine, appropriate materials.

More vexing are the issues involved in updating existing Freer spaces, which even in their present, relatively frumpy condition make up an extraordinary ensemble of art and architecture. "The Freer is the product of a particular time, a particular moment in American understanding of Asia," observed Beach.

And how. The donor of both the building and the original collection, Charles Lang Freer, was a capitalist baron turned esthete who would wow visitors to his mansion in Detroit with exquisitely choreographed presentations of his nonpareil collection of oriental art. Freer's architect, Charles A. Platt, was a consummate professional who, after World War I, according to his biographer Keith N. Morgan, "provided his clients with traditional symbols for the Protestant, Eastern financial and cultural establishment that was fighting to maintain the control it had firmly enjoyed before the war."

All that, and superb buildings, too! The Freer is really splendid — it stands on the Mall with understated authority, a clear, self-confident but not unwelcoming statement; the sequence of spaces behind its triple-arched entryway is calm, ordered; the vaulted, skylit exhibition rooms are beautifully proportioned; the materials are fine, as is the craftsmanship. Spend an hour there, and one understands the loyalty of its following.

But the question, in Beach's mind, is whether the Freer should maintain this lofty particularity or whether it should become "a museum of Asian art that just happens to be in America." The differences between these two positions can be seen clearly by comparing the Freer with its new neighbor, the Sackler — they're very different institutions, although they're managed by the same people and own and exhibit the same kinds of art.

At the Freer the art objects, hanging simply on unadorned walls or standing in impressive black-walnut cases, are the unrivaled stars. "There's nothing at the Freer to give any sense of cultural context, no photo murals, no maps," said Beach (although there are, it should be pointed out, detailed labels). "It is the object itself, a very great piece of Ming blue-and-white (for example), and the feeling is that you don't need to know anything else," he said. "It's self-explanatory."

At the Sackler, by contrast, in the series of inaugural exhibitions designed by Sears, tastefully placed cultural clues abound — door moldings, photo murals, maps, period furniture — reflecting a view that the art object is not, simply, esthetically self-sufficient. Rather, it is the most culture-bound of things, literally a sign of the human society that created it, an indication not only of the transcendence of art but also of the real-world, real-time concerns of people who made it.

 At first glance, it might seem that South's only chance at a heart slam lies in the diamond finesse succeeding. However, there is an additional possibility. Can you spot it?

The interesting point in the auction is North's jump to four spades. By an unpassed hand, that would be preemptive; by a passed hand, it denotes a holding that has been promoted to the equivalent of an opening bid. When North then cue-bid his ace of diamonds in response to his partner's slam try, South decided that slam would offer reasonable prospects.

Declarer won the first trick in hand, and immediately crossed to the king of trumps. Next, he led the jack of hearts. East was caught in a position where, had he stopped to consider, he would be giving away the location of the ace of hearts. So he played low smoothly, as recommended in all the bridge columns.

Unfortunately, this was not the right time, and declarer happily scooped in his singleton king of hearts and the slam was guaranteed regardless of whether the diamond finesse won or lost.

South's bit of larceny cost nothing. Had either defender grabbed the ace of hearts, declarer would still have been able to take the diamond finesse for his contract. But note how carefully he timed his psychological lead of the jack of hearts.

He drew only one round of trumps, to try to prevent either defender from making a telling discard in hearts. And he made the play early in the hand, when the defenders would have to make a decision in relative ignorance of the actual lie of the cards.

Fresh Herbs Give Meals Special Taste

Most of us equate summer with the very freshest of fresh foods. We have available the widest range of the tastiest, most colorful and most nutritious fruits and vegetables we'll see all year. Yet how many of us, when preparing summer dishes, go straight to the cupboard and select dried herbs for seasoning?

Summer is a time to savor the distinctive flavors and fragrances of fresh parsley, basil, thyme, rosemary, chervil and other delightful herbs. They're among the easiest plants to grow, and they're becoming increasingly available in local markets. They can help meet a goal the American institute for Cancer Research often emphasizes — eating healthy doesn't have to mean bland or boring.

The flavor of fresh herbs is much more subtle than that of the dried variety. A good rule of thumb when cooking is to use two to four times the quantity of fresh herbs as dried.

Robust herbs — including sage, sorrel, marjoram and oregano — retain their flavor even if cooked a long time. Fine herbs — such as basil, chervil, tarragon and dill — have a delicate flavor and should be added to dishes just before serving. There are few other rules for using fresh herbs, so be creative. When a recipe calls for an herb you don't have, you can generally substitute others with excellent results.

Most cooking will call for herb leaves, but the stems usually have the strongest flavor. Whole stems of parsley, thyme, rosemary or basil can be used in long-simmering dishes such as soups or stews. Purists insist on hand chopping or tearing, but fresh herbs can be prepared with a blender or food mill.

The following vegetarian main dish has a pleasant sweetness and the nutritious lowfat protein of legumes. Serve this dish with a grain or dairy product to compliment the protein it provides. Some whole-grain rolls, for example, would be a good addition.

With An 'Improved' Watermelon, Forget The Seed-Spitting Contests

By Nina Killham
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Is it a blessing, or an aberration?

Seedless watermelons are on the market. Basketball-sized, tight, crisp and deep red — they're everything you've always wanted in a watermelon and less.

"They're now sweeter, crunchier and crisper," according to David

Marguleas, spokesperson for Sun World International of Indio, Calif., the company introducing them in the East.

Sun World is also the company that brought the world extended-life Divine Ripe tomatoes, brilliantly colored Le Rouge Royale sweet red peppers and Red Flame Seedless grapes.

"We tried to take a look at the fresh fruits and vegetables that consumers are dissatisfied with and improve them," says Marguleas.

When deciding what to tinker with next, Marguleas says, Sun World decided that of the fruits and vegetables in the market, the watermelon could most stand to be improved.

"Customers complained that the watermelon was too darn big. They'd say, 'I can't eat that much watermelon.'" Now at 15 to 16 pounds, half the size of a regular watermelon, the new seedless watermelon can fit comfortably into a refrigerator. Perfect, says Marguleas, for today's smaller households.

The improvement of texture mainly comes from the absence of the large black seeds, which speed up the ripening process, explaining the dense mushiness that makes rings around the seeds in normal watermelons.

Seedless is, however, a bit of a misnomer: the rows of black hard seeds are merely replaced by rows of white soft edible undeveloped seed pods. And now instead of that heavy waxy green rind, the new watermelons sport a thin trim pale green-and-white skin.

Though seedless watermelons were developed almost 50 years ago,

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: We have been asked lots of questions about cholesterol-lowering diets. We will give some summary answers in the next few columns.

1) Can I eat any red meat: beef or pork? Yes. Eat small (3-ounce portions) and lean cuts of beef, pork, lamb, chicken (without skin) and fish. The leanest beef cuts are top, bottom and eye of round, tip, sirloin, tenderloin, top loin, chuck arm and brisket. The leanest pork cuts are leg, loin or chop, Canadian bacon and boneless ham.

2) What cooking fat should I use? Avoid as much fat as possible and avoid fried foods. But if you need a cooking fat, use an oil high in monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats. Some of those cooking oils are safflower, sunflower, peanut or olive oil. Corn oil is also OK to use. Do not use one just labeled vegetable oil, they may have coconut or palm oil which you need to avoid.

3) What margarine can I use? Use one lower in saturated fats. Don't be fooled by the No Cholesterol label. Some good brands are Promise, Fleishman, Mazola, Mrs. Filberts or Weight Watchers. Look at the nutrition label. Make sure the polyunsaturated amount is at least double the saturated number. Or try seasoning with Molly McButter, Molly McButter Sour Cream Flavor or Butter Bud Sprinkles (all found in the grocery store's spice aisle).

4) Eat eggs? Limit egg yolks to three or less a week. Use egg whites freely. Two egg whites can be substituted for an egg in most recipes.

5) What milk should I use? Use skim milk to drink, in your coffee and in your cooking. If you must have a dry coffee whitener, use PREAM. Powdered milk (non-fat dry milk) or evaporated skimmed milk may also be used.

6) Should I eat oat bran muffins or take oat bran tablets? Definitely eat more high fiber foods. It would be good to have three servings of food high in certain soluble fibers every day. The foods high in beta glucan are oat bran muffins, oat bran cereal, oatmeal, Team Flakes, Product 19, Pro Grain, Life, Cheerios, Quaker Oak Squares, Kellogg Nutrifric Oatmeal Flakes, Muslix 5 Grain, Oatios, Oat Bran Flakes by Health Valley. Also, a half cup serving of dry beans or peas is a good source of beta glucan.

Foods high in pectin are grapefruits, oranges, bananas, apples, strawberries, soybeans, carrots, beets, potatoes and brussel sprouts. Good sources of pectin are prunes, figs, pears, quince, Concord grapes and sour plums.

The oat bran tablets are expensive. The amount of fiber varies from product to product, so it is difficult to determine how many tablets are needed. For some it would be 10 tablets in one day. It is better to eat the foods listed above. We do not generally recommend you use this supplement. Watch next week for six more cholesterol questions and answers.

School Cafeterias Key On Nutrition In Meal Planning

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

North Carolina public school cafeterias will serve lunch to more than 700,000 students during the 1988-89 school year and about 1,500 of the students will be served in Pitt County.

All 2,000 public schools serve lunch each day, while about 160,000 school breakfasts will be served daily in the 1,700 schools participating in the breakfast program, according to the Department of Public Instruction's Division of Child Nutrition.

The elementary schools in Pitt County serve breakfast, said Valerie Lindsay, child nutrition supervisor with the Pitt County schools. "The high schools and the middle schools generally do not serve breakfast."

Payment for meals is determined on the basis of a federal means test. Some students receive meals without charge, while others pay full or reduced price.

In Pitt County, kindergarteners through 12th-graders will pay $1 for lunch at the full price and 40 cents at the reduced price, Ms. Lindsay said. Adults pay $1.60.

Breakfast prices in the county schools are 55 cents at full price; 30 cents, reduced, and 85 cents, adult.

A typical school lunch consists of five items — one serving of meat, two servings of vegetables and/or fruits, one serving of bread and a serving of milk. The serving size is often adjusted according to age or grade.

The central office managers in the county prepare a lunch menu that must be served in the schools but individual school managers also may prepare a "choice" menu, Ms. Lindsay said. "There are two choices in each school offered during the day. They (school managers) try to pick out foods they know their particular kids in their school would like to eat."

The students "have to take at least three of the five items to make up the tray, and they can't be the same item like two servings of applesauce," she said. "All their menus are screened one month in advance of it being served, and it is sent to school so that principals can distribute them to all the children. We started that last year because we thought it was necessary for the kids to see it and the parents to see it so they could plan their meals."

School breakfasts include one serving of a fruit or vegetable, one serving of

Cool, Main-Dish Salads Go Well With Seafoods

By Toni Tipton
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Seafood can be a delicious addition to main-dish salads so popular during the warm weather months of summer. It supplies adequate amounts of protein and, depending upon the variety chosen, can add a boost of omega-3 fatty acid as well. Best of all, the fish can be broiled or baked the night before, when the weather is cooler, then wrapped tightly and refrigerated until ready to toss in the salad.

A variety of shellfish and fish can be added to your favorite salad recipe, and the possibilities are limitless where produce is concerned. In addition to standards like shrimp, crab, tuna and lobster, smoked salmon — once served almost exclusively as an appetizer — is gaining popularity in main-dish salads, and with this option cooking is unnecessary.

If the salad will be made the same day, opt for poaching because it requires little time and adds no fat. Otherwise follow this simple procedure if baking is the chosen method of preparation.

Season whole dressed fish, steaks or fillets lightly with pepper, salt and lemon juice and wrap tightly in foil. Place foil packet in an oven heated to 350 degrees and bake, allowing 10 minutes per inch of thickness. Unwrap to check for doneness, then rewrap to continue cooking. Allow to cool, then gently remove meat from bones and chill in covered container.

TOMATO SHRIMP TOSTADA SALAD

- 12 corn tortillas
- Oil
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/3 pounds tomatoes, seeded, diced and drained
- 1/2 pound small cooked shrimp
- 1 cup thinly sliced celery
- 1/2 cup finely chopped red onion
- 1 (4-ounce) can diced green chiles
- 3 tablespoons chopped cilantro
- 2 cups shredded lettuce
- 2 avocados, diced
- 1 1/2 cups plain yogurt

Fry tortillas in small amount oil until crisp, drain on paper towels and reserve.

Combine lemon juice, cumin and salt. Beat in 1/4 cup oil. Gently combine dressing with tomatoes, shrimp, celery, onion, chiles and cilantro. To serve, top each tortilla with 1 cup lettuce and 1/2 cup tomato-shrimp mixture. Garnish each serving with avocado and yogurt. Makes 6 servings.

Often-Overlooked Summer Fruit Can Really Be A Plum Of A Pick

By Irene Kraft
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

As summer fruit showers the marketplace with a rainbow of tempting colors, eager cooks may find they cannot resist digging through their recipe files for cherry pie, peach cobbler and other fresh fruit favorites.

But often overlooked in this quest to make the best of summer's harvest is the plum. Its plight is rather mundane — from the market to the fruit bowl and seldom subjected to anything more imaginative than a plum sauce or pudding.

The California Tree Fruit Agreement, an organization that represents the growers of fresh peaches, plums, nectarines and Bartlett pears in the Golden State, says that plums are available in a rainbow of colors — red, yellow, blue, purple and green — and they can be a colorful and flavorful addition to salads, entrees and desserts.

Plum recipes need not be complicated, said Deborah Lane Beall, registered dietician and director of consumer affairs for the California Tree Fruit Agreement.

The suggested slicing fresh plums between layers of melted Cheddar cheese on wheat bread for a special grilled sandwich; stuffing whole, pitted plums with cream cheese and chopped nuts, candied ginger or coconut, or, serving wedges of fresh plums with garlic-herb-flavored soft cheese for a deliciously different appetizer.

In addition, Beall offered the following quick and easy ideas for incorporating plums into your meals and snacks:

—In a tall glass, layer coarsely chopped plums, low-fat yogurt and crunchy cereal or nuts for a refreshing treat.

—Before baking bran or sweet muffins, place a plum half, dipped in a cinnamon-sugar mixture, into the batter in each muffin cup.

—Make plum pops by blending 6 medium-fresh plums, pureed, with 1/2 cup lemonade and 2 tablespoons sugar (optional). Pour into Popsicle mold and freeze until firm.

—Prepare plum frappe by combining, in a blender, 2 to 3 coarsely chopped plums, 1/2 cup plain low-fat yogurt, 2 tablespoons honey, 2 tablespoons wheat germ and 3 cracked ice cubes, and whirl until smooth. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

—For a flavorful punch, combine in a blender, 2 cups coarsely chopped plums, 1 6-ounce can cranberry juice concentrate and several ice cubes, and whirl until smooth. Makes 1 quart.

—Make a creamy plum milk shake by combining, in a blender, 2 to 3 plums, 1 cup vanilla ice cream, 1/2 cup milk, 1/2 teaspoon grated orange peel and 4 ice cubes, and whirl until smooth. Makes 2 1/3 cups.

—Prepare plum ice cream bars by combining chopped plums with softened vanilla ice cream. Sandwich between oatmeal cookies and freeze until firm.

Interesting though these possibilities may be, there is absolutely nothing wrong with enjoying plums out of hand.

Any way you like them, plums are a healthful addition to the diet. High in pectin, low in sodium and a source of dietary fiber, vitamins A, B and C, iron and other trace minerals, a medium-size plum, with skin intact, provides only about 33 calories. Nearly 100 percent of those calories are carbohydrates, which makes them a good source of quick energy.

This year promises to be a plentiful one for plums, Beall says. "Our largest crop this year will be plums. We will ship more than 200 varieties, so consumers will have a lot to choose from," she says.

More than three-quarters of the world's plum supply and 90 percent of the nation's are grown in California, where conditions are extremely favorable for the fruit.

Very little of California's plum supply goes into processing, she added. The majority of the harvest is sold as fresh produce.

Because fruit must be picked for shipping before it is ripened, it becomes the consumer's responsibility to ripen it to his or her liking, Beall says.

But all too many plum lovers may recall having unsuccessful experiences attempting to do so. If they put their plums in the refrigerator they never seem to ripen. And if they leave them in a bowl on the counter, often the fruit becomes too soft too quickly.

SALMON BASKETS

1 egg, lightly beaten
1 tablespoon water
1 (8-ounce) package refrigerated crescent roll dough
Flour
2 (6 3/4-ounce) cans chunk pink boneless and skinless salmon, drained and chunked
3/4 cup frozen peas, thawed
1/3 cup carrot slices, blanched
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1/3 cup oil
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon dried dill weed
Lettuce

Combine egg and water and mix well. Unroll half of dough into long rectangle. Cut lengthwise into 6 strips and roll each strip into rope about 25-inches long, using small amount flour as needed.

Using 3 ropes for each basket, begin coiling 1 rope on outside bottom of 6-ounce glass custard cup. Attach ends of rope together with small amount egg mixture. Continue coiling until most of custard cup is covered. Place cup upside-down on baking sheet. Continue making baskets with remaining dough. Press bottom of each basket lightly for flatter surface and press sides lightly so there is no space between coils.

Brush baskets lightly with remaining egg mixture and bake at 375 degrees about 15 minutes or until golden brown. Press bottoms to flatten slightly, then let cool on pan about 20 minutes or until no longer warm but no longer than 1 hour. With sharp knife, gently loosen basket from cup sides and twist to remove cup completely.

Toss salmon, peas, carrots and onion together in bowl. Combine oil, vinegar, lemon juice, sugar and dill until well mixed. For each serving, line basket with lettuce, fill with salmon mixture and pour dressing over. Makes 4 servings.

PINEAPPLE RING SALAD

1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
Dash dried dill weed
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon honey
1/2 cup oil
1/2 cup tarragon white wine vinegar

1 teaspoon instant minced onion
1/2 teaspoon toasted sesame seeds
1 pineapple
1 cup cooked shrimp
6 firm cherry tomatoes, sliced
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
12 small romaine lettuce leaves
Beat egg yolk with salt, pepper, dill, mustard and honey. Beat in oil and vinegar and add instant onion and sesame seeds. Cover and refrigerate several hours or longer.

Meanwhile, cut 4 crosswise slices about 1-inch thick from center portion of pineapple, reserving remainder for other use. Cut about 3/8 inch in from outer rim of each slice and remove fruit. Cut out and discard core. Cut pineapple in wedges. Toss fruit with shrimp, tomatoes and onion. Place pineapple shell rings on chilled salad plates. Fill rings with shrimp mixture and tuck 3 small romaine leaves at back of each salad. Stir dressing and pour desired amount over each serving. Makes 4 servings.

SMOKED SALMON NICOISE

1/2 cup olive oil
2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
Salt, pepper
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1 pound small boiling potatoes

1 tablespoon minced green onion
1/4 cup dry white wine
1/2 pound green beans, cooked and chilled
1 head Boston lettuce
2 medium tomatoes, quartered
2 hard cooked eggs, quartered
1/8 pound cooked salmon, boned and chunked

1 (3-ounce) package smoked salmon, sliced
1/2 cup black olives
2 tablespoons capers
2 tablespoons minced parsley
Combine oil, vinegar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, pepper to taste and mustard in small bowl and blend. Cook potatoes until just tender, then peel and cut into halves lengthwise. Cut halves in 3/8-inch thick slices and place in large bowl. Add green onion, salt and pepper to taste and wine. Toss very gently, then let stand 5 minutes. Toss again until liquid is absorbed. Pour about 1/4 cup dressing over potatoes and toss gently to blend. Cover and refrigerate. Marinate beans in small amount dressing in refrigerator.

To serve, arrange lettuce in large salad bowl or deep platter. Place potato salad in center. Alternately arrange beans, tomatoes, eggs and salmon around potato salad. Cut smoked salmon into strips and place over eggs around potatoes. Ring potato salad with olives and sprinkle with capers and parsley. Drizzle salad dressing over all. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

FISH SALAD WITH CELERY SEED DRESSING

1/2 cup sour cream
3 tablespoons water
1 1/2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon celery seeds
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/4 teaspoon onion powder

1/4 teaspoon grated orange zest
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash black pepper
1 cup halved cucumber slices
1 cup diced sweet red pepper
1/2 pound cooked boned halibut chunks
1/2 cup orange sections
4 leaves lettuce
1/4 cup sliced green onions
Combine sour cream, water, lemon juice, celery, paprika, onion powder, orange zest, salt and pepper. Stir in cucumber and red pepper. Carefully stir in oranges. Serve on lettuce leaves, sprinkled with green onions. Makes 4 servings.

SUMMER GARDEN SEA SALAD

2 cups cubed poached sole, chilled
1/4 cup thinly sliced radishes
1/2 cup coarsely diced green pepper

1 cup sliced unpeeled cucumber
Herb Cottage Cheese Dressing
12 lettuce leaves
2 tomatoes, cut into wedges
2 tablespoons minced parsley
Mix chilled fish, radishes, green pepper and cucumber in large bowl and toss lightly. Pour on Herb Cottage Cheese Dressing and toss to coat. Chill thoroughly. Serve on lettuce leaves, garnished with tomato wedges and parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Herb Cottage Cheese Dressing

1/2 cup low-fat cottage cheese
1 1/2 teaspoons milk
1 tablespoon chopped green onion
1/8 teaspoon salt
Pepper
Dash dill seeds
Whip cottage cheese with milk until creamy. Stir in green onions, salt, dash pepper and dill. Chill.

Plum Is Overlooked

Color does not always indicate ripeness, she warned. At the supermarket, choose plums that are firm and plump. When ripe and ready to eat, they should give to gentle palm pressure.

Another good sign of ripeness is bloom, a hazy protective coating that occurs naturally on the plum's surface. Plums should be washed immediately before eating to retain the protective coating as long as possible.

Plums ripen best at 65 to 70 degrees, with a relative humidity of 95 percent. To hasten the process, place firm plums in a loosely closed paper (not plastic) bag on the counter. The bag traps a gas called ethylene that is released from plums and aids in their ripening. The more plums in the bag, the more ethylene is produced, so the sooner the fruit will ripen, Beall says.

But, if you do not want all your plums to ripen at once, put only a few in the bag at a time and keep the rest in the refrigerator.

Check progress daily until they have ripened, then chill them or eat them as soon as possible.

Ripened plums keep best at temperatures between 32 and 38 degrees at a relative humidity of 95 percent. Keep them at the bottom of the refrigerator — the coldest point — and store in an open bowl rather than a plastic bag, advised Haas. Plums can be eaten chilled or at room temperature, but are juiciest when at room temperature, Beall says.

Extend the plum season by freezing them to use in recipes year round, she suggested. Ripe, firm fruit freezes best. Slice plums, with skins on, into wedges of eight, put them on cookie sheets and place them in the freezer. As soon as wedges are firm, package the wedges in freezer bags and return them to the freezer.

As for now, enjoy the season while it lasts, Beall says. With so many varieties available, and flavors ranging from sweet to tangy, there is a good chance there is one out there to satisfy just about anyone's tastes.

FROZEN FIG CREAM

Two 16-ounce cans figs, drained
One 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
4 egg whites, beaten to stiff peaks
Process figs in blender until smooth; strain and discard seeds. Add condensed milk, milk and lemon juice; process until blended, about 5 seconds. Pour mixture into medium bowl and fold in egg whites. Pour mixture into a 9- by 5- by 3-inch loaf pan; cover with aluminum foil. Freeze for 3-4 hours until slushy; beat mixture with mixer until fluffy. Freeze, covered, until firm, 8 hours or overnight. Makes 1 3/4 quarts.

Melon

it's only been in the last few years that the company has improved the quality enough to grow them on a large scale. By the summer of 1989, says the company, the watermelons will be available 10 to 12 months a year.

The growing of a seedless (thereby sterile) melon is a simple process. Three rows of seedless watermelon plants and one row of seed watermelon are planted alternately. After the watermelons have produced a flower, bees are introduced into the equation. And when the bees pollinate the seedless plants with pollen from the seed watermelons, the result is seedless watermelons.

While all of this year's melons came from California, soon farms will be cropping up in Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and Maryland.

On the average, according to Marguleas, the seedless melon costs 10 to 15 cents more a pound than the seeded kind. The seedless watermelon is available at Safeway in Washington by the slice for 59 cents per pound. (Regular watermelon by the slice is 39 cents per pound).

"We have found no resistance to paying a little more for a much better watermelon," says Marguleas.

But what about the seed-spitting contests?

Marguleas gets the question a lot. "It's still only a small piece of the watermelon market. We ourselves still rely on the seed watermelons to grow our seedless variety. We aren't going to completely replace them."

Balance And Moderation Key To Good Eating Habits

One of the most practical services a good dietitian can provide is helping people develop diets that meet the guidelines of sound nutrition and take into account individual tastes and food preferences.

The following recipe shows how moderate use of ham and substitution of lowfat dairy products can transform a high-fat traditional recipe into a delicious and healthy dish. The name of this Italian dish literally means Straw and Hay (from the white and green macaroni used). Although typically high in fat from the butter and cream found in the traditional version, this updated recipe uses much less fat. This dish can be the basis of a light, tasty meal.

PABLA E FIENO

- 1 lb. colored macaroni
  - 1/2 lb. mushrooms, sliced
  - 1/2 of 10 oz. package frozen green peas, thawed
  - 1/2 lb. extra lean cooked ham, minced
  - 1 tbsp. margarine
  - 1/4 tsp. garlic powder
  - 1/4 tsp. nutmeg
  - 12 oz. can evaporated skim milk
  - 1/2 cup parmesan cheese, grated
- Cook the macaroni in a large pot of rapidly boiling water. Follow package instructions for al dente (still slightly firm when cooked). Meanwhile, steam the mushrooms in a small amount of water in a large skillet. When tender, drain well. Add

stirring occasionally, until well-blended and cooked through. In a large serving dish combine the macaroni, vegetable-ham mixture and parmesan cheese. Toss well and serve.

This will yield 6 servings, each containing about 490 calories and only 8 grams of fat.

Herbs

CHICK-PEAS PIQUANT

- 1 16 oz. can chick-peas, drained and rinsed (2 cups)
- 1 red or green pepper, diced
- 2 scallions, chopped
- 2 tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 to 2 tbsp. red wine vinegar
- 2 tbsp. olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tsp. fresh oregano and marjoram, finely chopped

Combine all the ingredients in a medium sized bowl. Mix well. Cover and chill in the refrigerator for at least one hour to allow flavors to blend. Serve chilled.

This will yield about 3 servings, each 3/4 cup in size, with 13 grams of fat and 365 calories per serving.

FRUIT AND YOGURT PARFAIT

- 1/2 cup fruit, chopped or sliced
  - 2 tablespoons yogurt
  - 1 tablespoon granola
- Place fruit into bowl. Top with yogurt. Sprinkle with granola. Serve. Yields 1 1/2 cup serving.

BANANA TREE STUMPS

- 1 cup butterscotch pieces
  - 2 tablespoons peanut butter
  - 2 medium bananas, peeled
  - 1 cup finely chopped peanuts
- In a small saucepan, combine the butterscotch pieces and peanut butter. Cook over low heat, stirring until butterscotch pieces are melted. Remove from heat. Cut the bananas into 1-inch pieces. Dip each banana piece into butterscotch mixture. Lift out with fork. Roll each piece into the chopped nuts; coat well. Place onto a plate lined with waxed paper. Chill two hours. Yields 3 1/2 cup servings.

Double Coupon Gimmick Means

PET FOODS COST $14.90 MORE AT KROGER

Kroger has recently been advertising Double Coupons. However, the problem with Double Coupons is that they end up costing you more money for groceries. In order to give you 50¢ for a 25¢ coupon, for example, Kroger has to make up the extra 25¢ by charging you more for the other groceries you buy. For example, a recent comparison of pet food prices shows Kroger charged $14.90 more for the same pet food items than Food Lion. At Food Lion we don't believe in gimmicks like Double Coupons. But we do believe in Extra Low Prices on all the groceries you buy. And when you shop at Food Lion you'll discover a lower total food bill - - without gimmicks like double coupons.

August Means Pear Time

Need A Car? Find It Fast In Classified

August may mean the last weeks of summer, but it also means the first weeks of pear season. Right now, those sweet, juicy fruits are reaching their peak, ready for a harvest that will continue through the fall.

Picking the perfect pear can be a tricky business. If you have the luxury of picking them from the tree select those that are still green but mature enough to yield to a little pressure. Pears ripen much better off the tree than on, so if it's picked at the right time a pear will have a juicier, sweeter flavor and a smoother texture. If picked too early, a pear never develops its sweetness and juices; if left on the tree to ripen, it will become coarse or gritty.

If, like most of us, you buy your pears in a market, be sure they are between the hard, immature stage and the point when they are wilting or shriveling with age. To help pears complete their ripening process, place them in a loosely closed paper bag for two or three days. However, since pears ripen from the inside out, don't wait until the outside is soft. By then the inside may be too soft and tasteless to eat. Once the pears are ripened, store them in the refrigerator.

Pears are a good low-calorie source for a spectrum of nutrients. They are a fairly good source of B vitamins and vitamin C. They are also a good source of dietary fiber, a nutritional factor several studies funded by the American Institute for Cancer Research have shown is important in helping reduce cancer risk. Pears can thus be a healthful addition to a fruit salad, served poached and spiced, or combined in a pear and potato salad.

Or, celebrate the return of the pear season with the following sweet, old-fashioned dessert recipe! It uses less fat than traditional fruit crisps, but has enough flavor to make it a tasty treat.

CRUNCHY PEAR DELIGHT

- 4 fresh pears
- 2 tsp. lemon juice
- 3/4 tsp. cinnamon
- 1/8 tsp. ground cloves
- 1/3 cup brown sugar
- 2/3 cup quick-cooking oats
- 2 tbsp. margarine or butter, melted
- 2 tbsp. whole wheat flour

Peel, halve, core and dice the pears. Place the pieces in shallow, lightly oiled baking dish (1 1/2 to 2 quart). Sprinkle the pear pieces with the lemon juice. Combine the remaining ingredients in a small bowl and mix well. Spread this mixture over the pears.

Place the baking dish in a 375 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes, or until the pears are tender and the top is lightly browned. Serve warm or cold, plain or wit a bit of milk.

This will produce four servings, each with 7 grams of fat and 315 calories.

Chowder Has A New Twist With Bluefish

By Bill Burton

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

The last place I would ever think of using fresh bluefish would be in a chowder. Make that past tense, because I cooked some in a chowder the other day, and it was pretty good.

Credit for recipe belongs to Betty E. Gilbert of Ocean City, Md. Earlier this season, I found her Angler's Bluefish Supreme Casserole different and tasty.

The same can be said for her Bluefish Shrimp and Rice Chowder.

So, if the blues keep coming to the kitchen, and you want to try something different with zip, this chowder might interest you, especially if eight to ten will be dining. That is how many this recipe serves.

BLUEFISH SHRIMP AND RICE CHOWDER

- 2 pounds bluefish fillets cut into 1-inch cubes
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 teaspoons black pepper
- 1 teaspoon seafood seasoning
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 3/4 cup olive oil
- 1 cup minced onion
- 2 1/2 cups thinly sliced celery
- 3 15-ounce cans tomato sauce
- 2 cans water
- 1 cup Burgundy wine
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon liquid smoke
- 2 teaspoons fresh minced parsley
- 1 pound shrimp, shelled, deveined and cut into chunks
- 1 cup rice
- Parsley for garnish.

Put garlic, salt, black pepper, seasoning and oregano in a mortar; pestle and mash to blend. Rub mixture on fish cubes. Heat olive oil in a heavy, large saucepan. Add the bluefish cubes and the onion; saute for five minutes stirring constantly. Add all other ingredients except rice and bring to a boil. Add the rice, and turn to simmer and cook for 20 to 25 minutes until rice is tender. Serve in soup bowls and garnish with parsley.

If you prefer baked fish to a chowder, Gilbert also has a suggestion. This should serve eight:

TASTER'S CHOICE BAKED BLUEFISH

- 5-pound fresh bluefish, scaled and cleaned; leave head on
  - Red wine
  - 6 lemons, sliced
  - 2 large onions sliced
  - 3 tablespoons salt
  - 1 tablespoon black pepper
  - 1 teaspoon hot sauce (less if desired)
  - 3 teaspoons minced garlic
  - 12 bay leaves
  - 1 teaspoon celery salt
  - 1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate
  - 1 tablespoon parsley flakes
  - 1 teaspoon oregano
  - 1 teaspoon chervil
  - 1 bunch Belgian endive for garnish
- Place fish in poaching pan or on a rack in a roasting pan. Add enough wine to cover fish, 3 sliced lemons, onion, salt, pepper, hot sauce, garlic, bay leaves, celery salt, monosodium glutamate, parsley, oregano and chervil. Cover with lid. Place in preheated 400-degree oven and cook for three hours, or until fish flakes. Add more wine if needed. Put endive leaves on large serving platter; place bluefish in the center of endive, and arrange remaining slices of lemon on top of fish and around the sides of the platter.
