N.C. 11 North To Get Facelift

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
It's been said that nothing counts more than a first impression. For many new arrivals, the first impression of Greenville is not the traditional collegiate setting of East Carolina University, nor is it the outlying acres of tobacco fields where harvesting is under way. For people flying into Pitt-Greenville Airport, many first impressions of the city are made along N.C. 11 north of the city, and one volunteer organization is putting forth an effort to beautify that particular stretch of road. Members of Greenville's Community Appearance Commission are in the process of raising an estimated $15,000 to landscape N.C. 11 from the Tar River bridge to N.C. 903. The volunteer organization's plans include planting crepe myrtles along the entire distance, with concentrated plantings of crepe myrtles, evergreens and junipers at various locations, including the Tar River bridge and the airport intersection. Commission Chairman Tom Morgan said efforts have begun to raise the needed money for the project. He said letters have been sent to property owners, businesses and industry along N.C. 11 and within the industrial park informing them of the project's scope. Morgan said volunteers will soon be calling upon those parties and requesting donations in order to reach the commission's goals. He said the city has an opportunity to beautify the area with the assistance of the state Department of Transportation. "The arrangement that we have with the Department of Transportation is if we will supply the plants, they will supply the labor. Basically they will put them in for us if we buy the materials," he said. Morgan said, however, that in order to be placed on the DOT's list of projects, the state will have to be notified this month of the commission's financial commitment to purchase plants. Subsequently, the commission's project is running on deadline. "We'd like to have these plants planted in late fall," Morgan said. "After that, (city) public works and the DOT do not have the (human) resources to maintain them in terms of watering them every couple of weeks. He said that if the plants are placed along the highway in late fall, the survival rate is much higher than if planted in other seasons. Morgan said a landscape architect has assisted the commission in pro-

'Upbeat' Bush Ready To Cast Off Role As Loyal No. 2 For Star Billing

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush, declaring "the gears shift tonight" from the Reagan era to his own, readied a nomination acceptance speech intended to light a fire under his come-from-behind quest for the White House. "I'm upbeat and ready to go," Bush told cheering Texas delegates at a breakfast gathering on the final day of the Republican National Convention. "I've been a loyal vice president, but now the gears shift tonight, and I'm going to be the nominee of the party for president and I'm going to set the agenda," he said.

Recently revived in the polls, Bush still faces the challenge of defining his vision of the nation's future and dealing with voters' remaining questions about his ability to lead and what he stands for. Bush had been expected to bring his new running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle, to the Texas breakfast, but he said the Indiana senator was "upstairs working on his speech." Later, Bush was to attend a rally for his wife, Barbara, and then go to a $1,000-a-plate luncheon expected to raise $4 million for the Republican National Committee. Meanwhile, there was encouraging news for him in a new public opinion poll. Several polls after last month's Democratic National Convention gave Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis leads of 17 points or so, but recent surveys have suggested the gap has narrowed to next to nothing. The latest, published today by The Washington Post, showed a Dukakis lead of 49 percent to 46 percent — within the poll's 3-point margin of potential sampling error. The survey was conducted from July 11 through Tuesday, the day Bush named Quayle, among 1,119 likely voters nationwide. Bush swept uncontested to the GOP presidential nomination Wednesday night in a balloon-filled celebration that ran past midnight. Before it was over, thousands of people had already left the Louisiana Superdome. For Bush, it was a family affair. All five of his now-adult children were delegates to the convention, and his Mexican-born daughter-in-law,

Board Says 14 Voters Ineligible

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Board of Elections is preparing a report to send to the state Board of Elections concerning evidence that at least 14 ineligible voters participated in the still undecided county commissioner race between D.D. Garrett and James H. Dupree. At a five-hour hearing Thursday the board refused a request by Garrett's attorney to force voters to testify under oath as to which candidate they voted for in the May 31

Democratic primary runoff, which Garrett won by two votes. Citing cases from Texas, New Mexico, Kansas and several other states, David F. Kirby of Raleigh, counsel for Garrett, argued to the board that once it is established that a voter cast an illegal or improper ballot, the person loses the right to secrecy. "This board has the legal authority to compel a witness to disclose the party for which they voted," Kirby said. "The secrecy of a ballot... is not

Voters Surprised At Registration

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer
Three of the voters testifying Wednesday at the hearing concerning ineligible voters in the county commissioner race between D.D. Garrett and James H. Dupree seemed baffled to find out their actual party registration. "I thought I was a Democrat until today," said Maggie Grimes of Bethel, a registered Republican who voted in the May 31 primary runoff in which only registered Democrats were qualified. Mrs. Grimes identified her signature on her voter registration form that was dated April 13, 1968. The form stated she was a Republican, but she said she always has voted in Democratic elections. Artie Marie Ward of Bethel also seemed surprised to learn she was registered as an unaffiliated voter, not a Democrat. She said she'd been

Burroughs Building Addition

A ground-breaking ceremony was held today at Burroughs Wellcome Co. to mark the beginning of an $8.2 million addition at the Greenville plant. The 71,000 square-foot addition will adjoin the north and northeast sides of the existing Development Building which was renovated in 1987. Construction of the two-story building is scheduled to begin immediately with completion estimated in the spring of 1990, a BW spokesman said. The new building will contain laboratory facilities and administrative office space, as well as a company library. The addition will be of compatible design to the Development Building and will feature continuous glass windows which will wrap around the building, said Larry Seigler, general manager.

ECU To Launch Planning Effort

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin told a faculty convocation this morning that the school will face a "university-wide strategic planning effort over the next two years," including plans to purchase the J.H. Rose High School property adjacent to the campus by 1991. Saying the university is "performing well," Eakin told the annual faculty assembly, which signals the opening of the academic year, that he was impressed with ECU's achievements and "the considerable gains we have made in a broad array of endeavors." Even in light of the school's accomplishments — and the fact that a record 15,300 students will begin fall semester classes Monday — Eakin said, "We are not perfect. There is much to be accomplished to improve this fine university." Some improvements, he said, "will require our collective energies and ideas over a more extended period. "We have a need to examine our university to be sure that we are satisfied with our structure of programs and services in the light of present opportunities and state and regional needs," Eakin said. "In short, we need to plan for the future." Eakin, beginning his second academic year as chancellor, stressed strategic planning in his first convocation address a year ago as "the first and most critical challenge." Today he said much of the ground-work had been laid for such an effort. A faculty committee redrafted the formal university mission statement and the university's new director of planning and institutional research has formulated a design for strategic planning. Eakin said the draft of the university mission statement would serve as a basis for the planning effort. He said the planning design is to be previewed by vice chancellors, deans, representatives of the Faculty Senate and staff members in September and that planning efforts should get under way during the fall semester. "Planning has many dimensions and, if done properly, is a dynamic, ongoing process," he said. One aspect, he said, will concern physical constraints on the university, including parking and the limited

Fountain Phone Service Approved

The North Carolina Utilities Commission has approved a proposal to replace long-distance telephone charges from Fountain to Greenville with one-way extended area service. G.C. Strickland, district commercial manager for Carolina Telephone, said the company is proceeding with plans to put the service into effect. Strickland said about 18 months to 24 months are normally required to install the additional equipment to make the new EAS arrangement possible. He said when EAS becomes effective, customers will get toll-free calling from Fountain to Greenville but higher local service rates will apply for Fountain customers. A majority of the customers in Fountain favored EAS in a mail poll conducted by Carolina Telephone, Strickland said, as 90 percent of those returning ballots endorsed the service. When EAS becomes effective, Fountain customers will have access to more than 35,000 additional telephone numbers without paying long-distance charges. Based on existing rates, monthly local service rates for customers in Fountain will increase $2.36 for residential one-party and $5.50 for business one-party, the spokesman said.

A group of home economists have returned from the Central American nation of Costa Rica, where they completed "Global Connections," a course sponsored by East Carolina University and the Universidad Nacional de Costa Rica.

Taking the course were Frances Parnell of Wilmington, Sherry Clary of Winterville and New Bern, Wanda Montgomery of Howey-in-the-Hills, Fla., Janie Fields of Lumberton, Sederis Sutton of Greenville and Carla Gray of Raleigh.

Computer Sessions

Eleven all-day Saturday classes on how to use various types of computer software will be offered this fall by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

Each class meets from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. either on campus or at Computerland in Greenville's Carolina East shopping center.

Courses and dates are: Beginning Lotus 1-2-3, Sept. 10; Word for Macintosh, Sept. 17; Intermediate Lotus 1-2-3, Sept. 24; Advanced Macros for Lotus 1-2-3, Oct. 1; Lotus 1-2-3 Functions and Formulas, Oct. 8; Introduction to dBASE III Plus, Oct. 15; Introduction to WordPerfect, Oct. 22; Desktop Publishing, Oct. 29; Advanced WordPerfect, Nov. 5; Networking, Nov. 12, and DisplayWrite 4, Nov. 19.

Registration materials and information are available from the Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville, N.C., 27858-4353.

Classes Offered

Two classes for adults who enjoy water sports will be offered by East Carolina University this fall.

"Basic Sailing" is set for Sept. 8, 15 and 22 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Sept. 11, 18 and 25 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

"NAUI-Open Water I Scuba Certification" will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays, Sept. 6-29, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Evening sessions of the sailing class will be held on campus, while weekend sessions will be held aboard various sized boats on the Pamlico River. Instructor Lee Hemink requested that persons interested in the course read the first five chapters in the text, "Invitation to Sailing" before attending the first class. The text is available at the ECU Student Store, Wright Building.

The scuba class, to be taught by Ray Scharf, ECU's director of aquatics, will begin with a required swim test at the first session. Each student must provide his or her own fins, snorkel, weight belt, weights and gloves.

Registration forms and information are available from the ECU Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville, N.C., 27858.

Moore, Laupus To Retire June 30

Clifton G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs at East Carolina University for the past 16 years, will retire from university service next June 30, while Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor for health sciences, will give up his administrative duties on the same date.

Announcement of the impending retirements was made by ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin this morning during the chancellor's faculty convocation address.

Eakin said Laupus, who recently resigned as dean of the ECU School of Medicine, also will retire as vice chancellor and will return to teaching duties, while Moore will retire from university service.

"East Carolina University and I owe a great debt of gratitude to these men for their outstanding contributions over many years," Eakin said.

Moore, a native of Raleigh, came to East Carolina in 1962 as assistant business manager. He was named business manager in 1970 and administrative vice president in 1971.

In 1972, he was appointed vice chancellor for business affairs and is the university's senior vice chancellor in point of service.

Laupus has been dean of the medical school since 1975. He was appointed vice chancellor in 1983 and in July of this year was named head of the new Division of Health Sciences, comprising the schools of medicine, nursing and allied health sciences.

Laupus will be replaced as dean of the medical school on Sept. 1 by Dr. James Hallock, who has served since 1972 at the University of South Florida School of Medicine.

Eakin said that selection committees will be appointed to conduct national searches to recommend successors to Moore and Laupus.

Correction

In a story Wednesday concerning airport fueling regulations and a citation issued to a Greenville pilot for using an improper fueling method, it was incorrectly reported that the pilot had used handheld plastic jugs to pour gasoline into his plane.

Airport director Jim Turcotte said Lonnie Willer of 113 Osceola Drive has admitted using a plastic fueling system, not plastic containers.

Student Store Shows Profit

ECU News Bureau For the first time in 10 years, East Carolina University will use $75,000 in student store profits for scholarships or a scholarship endowment this year, ECU officials have announced.

C.G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs, said use of student store profits for scholarships was mandated by the university trustees some years ago but that this is the first time in a decade that it has been possible.

"We are glad to be able to resume this scholarship funding program which has been interrupted for a number of years," Moore said. "We hope that it will be ongoing from now on."

The ECU student stores operate on a self-sustaining basis and incurred indebtedness because of a series of expansions and renovations. Last year, a final $60,000 payment was made to retire the debt, Moore said.

Ray Edwards, director of student financial aid, will administer the scholarships. He said decisions will be made soon by the Student Financial Aid committee on the awarding of what will be known as ECU Resource Scholarships.

"We don't know yet how many may be awarded nor on what basis," he said.

Ray And Yarbrough Win Alumni Awards

The East Carolina University Alumni Association presented its annual Teaching Excellence Awards this morning to Mavis Ray, associate professor in the department of theater arts, and Dr. Tinsley E. Yarbrough, professor and acting chairman of the department of political science.

Both were presented $500 stipends and engraved pewter plates by Burney R. Rivenbark of Fayetteville, alumni association president, during the annual faculty convocation.

Recipients are selected each year through a process established by the Faculty Senate's Teaching Effectiveness Committee. Criteria for selection include peer evaluations, student survey data and scholarly achievement.

Ms. Ray received the Mays Award for Teaching Excellence, named for Robert and Lina Worthington Mays of Greensboro. She was born in London and joined the ECU faculty in 1964. She is recognized as the founder of the dance program.

Yarbrough received the Robert L. "Roddy" Jones Award, established in honor of the Raleigh developer and ECU alumnus who now serves as chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina.

Yarbrough, who has been with ECU since 1967, is an Alabama native and received his bachelor's and master's degrees and doctorate from the University of Alabama.

Vote Studied

attached to an illegally cast ballot. "There is a public policy consideration which overrides the secrecy of the ballot ... so we can remove any taint from the election process," he said.

Kirby said it is prevailing law throughout the country that the importance of accurately determining the winner of an election outweighs the right to secrecy of an illegally cast vote.

There is a North Carolina case that states voters have the right to refuse to reveal whom they voted for, but no case in the state addresses whether ineligible voters have that same right.

Election board Chairwoman Nelson B. Crisp said she had been advised by the state Attorney General's office, the state Board of Elections and the executive secretary of the state board not to force voters to reveal the information.

Mrs. Crisp announced prior to the start of the hearing that the board would not allow attorneys to compel testimony revealing how people voted.

When the first voter of the day took the stand and Kirby asked which candidate she voted for, county attorney William Watson objected and Mrs. Crisp reminded the witness she did not have to disclose the information.

Kirby took issue with Mrs. Crisp's practice of repeatedly advising the voters, and he and Dupree's attorney, James A. Nelson Jr. of Greenville, met with the board about 15 minutes.

The board still did not agree to compel the testimony and Watson continued to object to Kirby's inquiries into whether voters would reveal how ballots were cast.

Mrs. Crisp upheld the objections, but the voters were allowed to answer for the record; all 14 declined to say how they voted and Mrs. Crisp reminded Kirby over and over that the board would not force witnesses to disclose the information.

Nelson did not ask any voters to reveal how they cast their ballots, and very often asked just one or two questions before Kirby began cross-examination.

Nelson did call 15 pollworkers to the stand and they all said they had no knowledge of any Republicans or unaffiliated voters that voted in the primary runoff. Nelson also submitted pollbooks and registration books into the record that indicate ineligible voters participated.

Kirby said he planned to ask the state board to compel the testimony from any voters that admit they participated in the primary runoff, and there may be additional hearings in the future. He said he thought North Carolina would follow along if all other states in the country did not recognize the right to secrecy of illegally cast ballots.

Garrett is black and Dupree is white, and Kirby claims that since the votes fell largely along racial divisions, the ineligible voters benefitted Dupree and, therefore,

Garrett should be certified the winner.

Sixteen of the 21 ineligible voters are white, and 11 of the voters who admitted they participated in the election are white.

Kirby asked the board to force the voters to reveal whom they voted for and then subtract the illegal votes from the total, claiming Garrett's lead would increase and earlier irregularities cited by Dupree would no longer be sufficient to affect the outcome of the election and the taxpayers would not have to finance another election.

Board member Myra Cain said the board did not have the authority to add or subtract votes in such a manner.

When the state board addresses the Garrett-Dupree race at its Aug. 26 meeting, the group's options include declaring Garrett the winner, ordering a new election — as Dupree has requested — or ordering more hearings, in which Kirby could possibly compel testimony.

Mrs. Crisp emphasized to members of the media that the county board does not have the authority to order a new election, and the board may only issue findings of fact and conclusions and send the information to the state board for action.

Election records show 18 Republicans and four unaffiliated voters participated in the race, but only registered Democrats were eligible to participate in the election.

Under cross-examination by Kirby, 14 of the voters took the stand and admitted they were registered Republicans at the time of the election and cast ballots in the race.

It would be a misdemeanor for a voter to intentionally commit fraud or illegally vote in an election, but no evidence of intentional violations came out in the hearing.

Kirby said he spoke informally with Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood about granting immunity to anyone refusing to tell whether they voted in the election on the grounds that they might incriminate themselves, but he said there was no evidence that any fraud occurred. A few voters said they thought the primary runoff was an open election in which anyone could vote.

One person declined to say whether or not he actually voted in the contest and another person included on the list of ineligible voters, Pauline Dail, who was also a pollworker in Greenville precinct No. 3 on May 31, denied voting at all in the election.

Five voters were absent, but one of the absent voters sent an affidavit stating he was a registered Republican and did vote in the election, and the wife of another absent voter testified that her husband is a Republican and did vote in the election.

Another of the voters who initially was included on the list of ineligible participants, Jean Darden, was a registered Democrat at the time of the election and has since changed her registration to unaffiliated.

Carter Holds 'Community Night'

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Mayor Edward E. Carter took plans of his Community Improvement Association to the public Wednesday, conducting the first of three scheduled "community nights" designed to provide an association overview and generate interest in his newly formed project.

Approximately 35 people attended the first session at Sadie Sautter Elementary School, a facility located in the center of the west Greenville neighborhood — an area recently plagued by the effects of drug abuse, narcotics dealings and murder.

Carter opened the session with a brief overview of the new association, details of which were announced Tuesday.

Carter said the association will consist of members representing local businesses, industry, religious groups, public agencies and neighborhood organizations. The group is charged with finding solutions to various problems that undermine Greenville's quality of life. Such problems include the lack of affordable housing, care and safety of the elderly, and youth unemployment.

But at Wednesday's session, most of the discussion centered around drug abuse and crimes associated with drugs.

Carter again took a "get mad and get mean" stance on local drug dealers, issuing to them a strong warning — "If you want to push drugs, you had better move out of Greenville."

The drug abuse topic drew a robust exchange from various members of the assembly, which consisted of a wide variety of community members: men, women, young and old, black and white.

One man told Carter his family had been ravaged by the effects of drugs, while another stood and spoke of juveniles who occupy vacant structures adjacent to his home, who keep him awake during the night.

A local church leader told Carter he thought the association's intentions were admirable but told Carter efforts should be aimed also at powerful and wealthy members of the community, whom he did not identify, who are helping to finance the local drug flow.

Carter responded by saying that if such individuals are identified, those

"14 carat citizens" will face the same consequences as any other community member who chooses to break the law.

Also speaking at the meeting was the association's chairman, Wade Johnson Jr., alcohol and drug coordinator for the Pitt County schools.

Johnson said drug abuse is a symptom of underlying problems. He said to start the process of solving those problems, the association is going to examine ways in which to "replace negatives in the community with positives."

Johnson said an important step in that process begins with community members themselves, with people teaching their children proper values and morals.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," Johnson said.

Carter's next "community night" is scheduled Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Rotary Building, 809 Johnston St., with the third meeting scheduled on Aug. 31 at 7:30 p.m. at the Church of Christ, 264 Crestline Drive.

Voters Surprised

a Democrat all of her life, even though she confirmed her signature on a form dated 1974 that states she registered unaffiliated.

On the other hand, Garland Ray Parnell of Stokes said he thought he was a registered Republican, and he voted in the primary runoff because he thought it was an open election.

Election records show Parnell is registered as unaffiliated, but he said he did not think he had done anything wrong until a sheriff's deputy called to subpoena him to the hearing.

None of the three had their voter registration cards, which includes party registration, voting site and voting districts for various elections from city office to congressional office, said elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee.

"Every voter receives a registration card," she said. "They are instructed to read the card and they are given an oath on the registration."

"They are asked to determine if the information is correct, and they sign after they have had the oath," Mrs. Hardee said. "I can't think of anything else we can do."

Was she surprised to find voters unaware of their party membership? "At this point, nothing surprises me about the elections in Pitt County," she said. "If something will happen, it will happen in Pitt County."

Because the City Council elections are open to all voters, she said some voters probably did not know the county commissioner races are partisan.

Mrs. Hardee said the cards are small enough to fit into a wallet and it's a good idea for voters to keep one with them at all times. The card can sometimes be used as identification and to help obtain a passport, she said.

Anyone unsure of their registration can contact the Board of Elections, and anyone wishing to change their registration in time for the Nov. 8 elections must do so by Oct. 10.

Facelift Planned

ducing landscaping plans for N.C. 11, a stretch which Morgan said is very important.

"We felt the first priority in Greenville would be Highway 11 because of the growth of the airport, and the amount of traffic that is on that highway," Morgan said. "Another concern is we felt there was enough development on that stretch that we could have a chance of soliciting enough funds to be able to (work with) the Department of Transportation."

A special fund for the N.C. 11 project has been formed and is being administered by the city's public works department.

Those interested in contributing to the fund or wanting additional information can call public works at 830-4521 or call Morgan at 830-2300.

The Community Appearance Commission meets the first Wednesday of every month at the public works facility. The commission discusses ways to make the city more attractive, and initiates projects in conjunction with the public works department.

Firefighters

CHARLOTTE (AP) — About 120 firefighters from North Carolina and South Carolina came to the N.C. Air National Guard in Charlotte on Wednesday to fly cross-country to fight forest fires.

The six crews of firefighters boarded a chartered United Airlines 727 jet for the 4-hour, 13-minute flight to Boise, Idaho. Each firefighter was carrying 55 pounds of safety gear.

Likely hot spots for the firefighters are stubborn fires in the Yellowstone National Park area and in Montana.

Planning Key To Quality & Growth

The whir of motors and the hum of propellers don't mix with quiet suburban living. That's why a land use plan for the area surrounding the Pitt-Greenville Airport is important.

The land use plan spells out the airport's need for expansion and addresses the conflicts this growth can create. It identifies the pressures increased air traffic and runway expansion will place on neighborhoods and properties near the airport and proposes zoning to ease this stress while giving the facility elbow room.

Complaints from homeowners voiced at a public meeting Monday about noise and disruption from low-flying planes are valid grievances. They should be taken seriously, for they articulate the very problem the land use plan seeks to eliminate.

But the airport is a community resource. It provides a convenient and profitable link to North Carolina's major metropolitan areas — a link that allows business growth and travel convenience. For Greenville to prosper, the airport must continue to be an asset.

To do so, it needs space to expand. Already, development is encroaching on available land, and some of that development is inappropriate for an airport zone. Residences in approach and take-off paths raise safety questions. Radio towers and tall structures pose navigation hazards. That's where the land use plan comes in.

That plan is designed to protect property owners as well as the airport. Its purpose is to keep more conflicts from occurring; to direct growth around the airport so that complaints like those heard at Monday's meeting won't increase.

The current problems exist because previous land development around the airport has been incompatible with air traffic. The land-use plan did not create the existing problems; the plan would prevent unwise development in the future.

It is a proposal that, because of its far-sightedness, should be met with praise from citizens and approval from public bodies. The purpose of planning is to circumvent problems.

It was a mistake to allow growth around the airport to continue unchecked this long. But officials are learning from mistakes; the land-use plan is an indication of this cognizance.

Solid planning for the future is essential for a progressive community seeking both growth and quality of life. The sound of airplane motors shouldn't — and doesn't have to — drown out the voice of those who live nearby. Regrettable land conflicts exist now; the land use plan has identified them. It can also, if applied effectively, prevent more errors.

Ogle & Laugh

Bill Shakespeare Said It Best

Even William Shakespeare might have problems with Will C partially naked on a billboard.

The master of poetic and prose and occasionally raunchy humor might have found himself at a loss for words when facing the flesh colored bikini-clad man on the billboard startling Greenville drivers into protest these days.

Then again, he might have found a few Elizabethan phrases suitable for the occasion.

We've come to laugh at Will C., not to ogle him, Shakespeare might have said. He is pretty funny-looking looming over the roadway wearing little more than a smile.

To look or not to look, Old Bill might have cried. For those who did get an eyeful, it was a mistake. The man isn't handsome.

Whatever words of wisdom Shakespeare might utter, he certainly couldn't have cried pornography. Bad taste, maybe. Ugly, perhaps. Obscene, yes, but not for the reasons the offended drivers think. Anyone who has glimpsed the creature on the sign with Will C's face and the body of a ... well ... a gargoyle couldn't help but notice how unattractive the billboard mutant is. The face of a late-night movie king and the physique of a scarecrow just isn't sexually appealing.

But the provocative billboard did serve its purpose. Two daily newspapers carried photos and stories about the spectacle. Every television station within 100 miles aired footage. The name of the advertiser was, of course, prominently displayed in this coverage. Evidently nearly-nude men are a sure-fire free advertising gimmick.

And now the billboard has been canceled and the image will disappear from Greenville's streets.

Good move, protesters say. Good riddance, art lovers say.

Much ado about nothing, Shakespeare might say.

Real Importance In A City Of Egos

WASHINGTON — Ask a dozen people to make lists of the most important figures in the American civil-rights movement, and chances are that the name of M. Carl Holman, who died last week at age 69, won't be on any of them.

But if you ask those whose names are on the lists to name their most important influences, you'll find Carl Holman mentioned with astonishing regularity.

Holman, poet, teacher, philosopher and an integral part of the movement from its earliest days, was never a civil-rights leader in the traditional sense.

"He was never out front," the New York Times' Paul Delaney said from his current post in the Times' Madrid Bureau the other day.

Delaney, who was in Atlanta when the student movement caught fire in 1960, recalls that the student activists routinely went to Holman to test their ideas and proposals for action. "None of the students would make a move without coming to Carl. And whenever they got in trouble, they would look to him for a solution."

You'll hear the same sort of thing from today's leaders. Carl was the "Godfather." They'll tell you, the man everybody looked to for advice and calm counsel.

Robert Woodson, the black conservative head of the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise, will confide that it was Carl Holman who brought him and Rep. Walter Fauntroy, the quintessential liberal, together — at Holman's Southwest Washington home — because he thought they ought to know each other. The result: a piece of legislation that facilitated the establishment of public-housing tenant-management councils.

'Holman's particular genius was to act as a mirror in which those who sought his counsel could see themselves as they ought to be, and he regularly made people better than they were.'

Vernon Jordan, John Lewis, Ben Hooks, John Jacob, Marian Wright Edelman, Richard Hatcher, Jesse Jackson, all relied on Holman, who was president of the National Urban Coalition, to advise them on program initiatives in which Holman's name never surfaced.

Dorothy Height, head of the National Council of Negro Women, will tell you stories of how Holman single-handedly brought peace between squabbling factions of the black leadership.

Aside from his recent leadership of the riot-born Urban Coalition, the closest Holman came to a public status was in the early 1960s, when he started a tiny weekly newspaper to tell the story of the Atlanta student movement. His reporters included Delaney, John and James Gibson, Charlayne Hunter (Gault) and Julian Bond.

But mostly, he accepted his behind-the-scenes role as strategist and bridge-builder, preferring worthwhile results to personal publicity.

He was famous for his bridge-building — whether, as in Atlanta, it was bringing skeptical adults around to support the newly militant students; as more recently in Washington, helping the new black conservatives and the civil-rights traditionalists to see their shared goals; or, in his Urban Coalition role, bringing black and white, rich and poor, together in common purpose.

Holman was never fond of foolishness, but he seldom argued with those he thought were headed off in inappropriate directions. That wasn't his style. Instead, he'd steer the conversation to fundamental principles, or tell one of his famous stories to illustrate the pitfalls of the erroneous view — and the misguided activist would decide that maybe there was a better way to proceed.

He was always the teacher but never the know-it-all veteran ready to tell the young Turks that they were wrong. He had the knack of treating everybody he came in contact with, no matter how young or innocent of real-world experience they might be, as peers. He had close friends who were half his age.

Holman's particular genius was to act as a mirror in which those who sought his counsel could see themselves as they ought to be, and he regularly made people better than they were.

He was always a trusted friend, never a competitor, and no one who knew him was ever reluctant to take him into confidence.

But he was never much for headlines, preferring to let others have the credit. As a result, he was always more influential than famous.

As John Gardner, former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and founder of Common Cause, put it the other day:

"In a city of egos on parade, Carl never showed off."

Scentsless, But Without Thorns

NEW ORLEANS — A lion in winter is still a lion, and Ronald Reagan's roar here, near the end of his political calendar, expressed his remarkably high level of irritation with Michael Dukakis. It also expressed conservatives' resentment against what they consider the deceptiveness of the campaign being waged by what Elizabeth Dole calls "the Bentsen and Hedges ticket." Hedging one's beliefs is not considered cricket by the conservatives who comprise the party that Reagan is bequeathing to George Bush.

Reagan came here cast, by himself, in a role that many of his critics, condescending to him to the end, still find incongruous, even incredible. He came to insist on the primacy of ideas in politics.

Bush, in his most memorable phrase since "voodoo economics," calls Michael Dukakis — a.k.a. Hedges — the "stealth candidate." But Bush is not naturally suited to the task most crucial to his campaign. That task is to challenge head-on the crucial theme in Dukakis' acceptance speech in Atlanta: the notion that political labels are "meaningless" and that this election is about "competence," not "ideology."

Bush, to be blunt, shows scant signs of ever having had much of a life of the mind. When asked by essayist Gail Sheehy to name a book that has been important to him, he replied that he vaguely remembers reading "The Robe," a forgettable Biblical epic. Yet, Bush, whose instinct is to run on his resume — to run on Dukakis' track, offering his "experience," as his counter to Dukakis' claim of competence — must insist on the importance of ideology.

Now, "ideology" is, more often than not, the label people attach to ideas they reject. It is a term of disparagement intended to suggest dogmatism. Dukakis' celebration of competence over ideology may be, in part, a faint echo, bouncing off the banks of the Charles River near Harvard and MIT, of the 19th-century faith in a science of politics that would replace the messy governance of men with the tidy administration of things. But most of all, Dukakis' celebration of competence must be understood in the light of his flight from political labels.

Such flight is what one expects from people who find that the labels that fit them are politically inconvenient. Bush has about 80 days to cast this election as an ideological choice between liberalism and conservatism.

He has the early and energetic help of Reagan's roar because the amiable king of the political jungle has been energized by Dukakis. It is not just that Dukakis called the Reagan administration a rotting fish. By disparaging ideology — the politics of basic beliefs — Dukakis is disparaging what always made Reagan run. It is only August and already Dukakis has done to Reagan what John Kennedy in 1960 tried not to do to Eisenhower. He has goaded him to the edge of anger.

The 1960 campaign is, for Dukakis, a young man's obsession carried into middle age. But Dukakis would do well to remember that Kennedy's theme of more "vigilance" so that "we can do better" fell far short of a campaign to repeal Eisenhower's legacy.

Reagan recently told a friend that he looks forward to 1989 and beyond when he can be back on what he calls the "mashed-potato circuit" campaigning for such ideas as the line-item veto. In the last 30 years Reagan has had put in front of him at speaking engagements enough mashed potatoes to cover Montana. But he was summing up his life, as well as the party now cast in his mold, on Monday evening when he told the delegates: "You walk not just precincts, but for a cause. You stand for something...."

In the 20 years that Reagan has been the incarnation of conservatism, the GOP has become a thoroughly conservative party. It is brimming over with contempt for the Democrats' current quest for perfect vacuity, as symbolized by the thin gruel of their platform.

Furthermore, many Republicans believe that Dukakis peaked a little early, the night he accepted his nomination, and that there is nothing he can do about the fact that he does not wear well in people's living rooms on the evening news. He is too testy, abrupt, impatient. Republicans also believe that the close scrutiny he will receive in the next 80 days will confirm the judgment of Horace Busby, a Washington analyst: that Dukakis, who is something of an outsider even in Massachusetts politics, is the most parochial presidential candidate since Calvin Coolidge, another Massachusetts governor.

As the baton is passed to Bush, he has 80 days to make ideas, not Dukakis' competence or his own resume, the issue. The battle of the personalities, such as they are, Bush can win by proving that he, unlike Dukakis, is a flower without thorns and that some agreeable flowers are scentsless.

Need A Signature? Nope, Credit Card Number Is Enough

WASHINGTON — A hotel in Richmond, Va., discovers some telephone charges after a guest has checked out. No problem. An employee telephones the guest and tells him the hotel will simply put the charges on his credit card.

A restaurant in Washington demands a credit-card number when taking reservations. If the guests fail to show, a $15 charge is placed on the credit card.

A busy professional spots an appealing item in a catalog, dials an 800 number and says, "Ship it and put it on my credit card."

These transactions, like millions of others in today's charge-it world, have one thing in common: a charge was recorded on a credit card but no signed document changed hands.

The signature, in fact, is rapidly becoming obsolete in credit-card transactions.

Having a customer sign a slip when he or she buys something is already "less significant than it was" in the past, said Dan Brigham of Visa International. Credit cards today are evolving into "a national payment system," said Spencer Nilson, publisher of the Nilson Report, a California-based newsletter that tracks the credit-card industry.

"It allows you to do things you cannot do with cash," such as make long-distance transactions, Nilson said. "That is what people pay interest for, what they pay fees for," and as the system becomes increasingly electronic "the trend is for more transactions to be without signatures," he added.

"Nothing in the law specifically requires a signature" in a credit-card transaction, said Elgie Holstein of Bankcard Holders of America, a Virginia-based consumer group.

"The issue is positive identification of the cardmember," said Phillip Riese of American Express. This can be done several ways — by comparing the signature on the back of the card to the one on the charge slip, by using a personal identification number similar to those for automated teller machines, and by "what is known generically as 'signature on file,'" Riese said.

In the third case, which arises mostly in telephone transactions, the burden is on the merchant to ascertain the cardholder's identity, though American Express helps by providing an address-verification system that matches the cardholder's address against the one to which merchandise is to be sent.

In some cases signatures are being dropped for in-person transactions, especially where signing a slip may be viewed as an impediment to a speedy sale.

For example, Visa and Arby's, the roast beef chain, are experimenting with putting fast food on plastic. In an effort to keep the fast food fast, they require no signature for purchases under $25.

The clerk merely "swipes" the customer's Visa card through a magnetic stripe reader, which checks a "hot sheet" to see if the card is OK. If it is, then the customer is on his way.

The experiment promises to put fast food where mail order and other forms of remote marketing have been for years. The appeal to these marketers is obvious. Customers enjoy the convenience and merchants find they are able to capture more impulse business — sales that would be lost if the buyer had to write out a check and mail it in.

While acknowledging the convenience, however, many customers feel just a bit nervous at this "loosey goosey" system, as Holstein termed it, of telephone and other signatureless transactions.

But lawyers and others who follow the industry agree that it is the merchant and the card issuer that bear the bulk of the risk.

Under the Truth in Lending Act, consumers are generally protected from losses of more than $50 due to unauthorized use of their credit card. And in practice, said Holstein, the customer's chance of successfully disputing a charge "is in fact enhanced when they don't have your signature."

The law specifically states that if a card issuer seeks to collect a disputed charge, "the burden of proof is upon the card issuer to show that the use (of the card) was authorized" by the cardholder, he added.

Visa's Brigham said that, if a cardholder swears in an affidavit that he did not authorize a disputed transaction, "that's generally the end of it."

This does not mean, however, that there is no risk for the cardholder.

Nilson noted that fraud by "telemarketing" is increasing rapidly and that these thieves prey particularly on those who are not aware of their rights or who may for some reason be unwilling to assert them.

Many of these scams are aimed at merchants by crooks who collect card numbers, run up a lot of charges and quickly skip before the cardholders begin to complain.

But others are aimed at the cardholders themselves.

Nilson said purchasers of pornography offer a fertile field for such scams. Some thieves even make deals with pornography sellers to buy the right to collect their credit-card accounts. They then run up phony charges with the numbers.

Often, he said, cardholders pay up for fear that any dispute would reveal what they had been involved with.

In other cases, cardholders may find the issuer willing to go to court with even marginal cases if the amount involved is large enough.

In addition to being a payment system, credit cards are on their way to becoming a national identity-card system, as anyone who has tried to check in to a hotel recently can attest.

Businesses that use credit cards as identification are "trying to confirm who you are, that you're not a phony," said Nilson. They regard the credit card "as sort of a monitor. If you don't have one it doesn't mean you're rejected but it triggers something else," such as requirement for further identification.

But when you give a credit-card number to a maitre d', or a clerk writes it on the back of a check you have written, the chances increase that the number will find its way into the wrong hands.

Although consumers are warned over and over to be careful about giving out their credit-card numbers, as a practical matter it is difficult to be very selective about it.

Nilson said, though, that fraud losses related to signatureless transactions have not been great enough to provoke industry action. Of the $165.3 billion in bank credit-card transactions last year, all types of fraud losses amounted to $606 million, with telemarketing accounting for about $64 million of that, he said.

The speed with which signatureless business grows will be a function of the industry's experience, Nilson added. If gains from increased business outrun fraud losses, the practice will catch on faster and faster.

And it will gain most where the potential for loss is least. A merchant selling roast-beef sandwiches will be a lot less security-conscious than one selling diamonds.

"It's a developing industry," said Nilson. "There are a lot of loopholes where people may be able to make a lot of money" fraudulently. But so far, he said, "there isn't that much loss."

Friends Pay Tribute To Zumwalt

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Friends of Elmo Zumwalt III paid tribute to his humor and sense of mission, saying his "final lesson" to others was showing grace under pressure.

"I think many of us feel cheated" by Zumwalt's death, said John Pekkanen, one of the publishers of "My Father, My Son," the book by Zumwalt and his father, Elmo Zumwalt Jr.

"I know I do because Elmo was taken away," Pekkanen said. "But I think Elmo more than anyone believed it wasn't what you were dealt, but how you played the hand. Elmo played the hand better than anyone."

Zumwalt, 42, died Saturday of cancer believed caused by exposure during the Vietnam War to Agent Orange. The defoliant was sprayed on the order of his father, then the American naval commander in Vietnam.

The senior Zumwalt, a retired admiral, says the spraying of Agent

Orange saved thousands of soldiers lives by defoliating dense jungle near the rivers of Vietnam.

Zumwalt steadfastly defended his father's action, saying that Agent Orange's danger was not understood at the time and that defoliation of the jungle routed Viet Cong guerrillas and significantly reduced American casualties.

"It did not take me long to realize Elmo was a very special person," said Bob Barrett, who met Zumwalt eight years ago at a hotel in Pinehurst. "He was full of fun, always the life of the party and he had a teasing sense of humor that was punctuated with a loud laugh."

A few months ago, Zumwalt and Barrett told each other good-bye, he said.

"He looked really sick and as I was leaving the house, he gave a big bear hug," Barrett said. "I knew then I would never see him again. I said,

"Elmo, do me a favor. Give me your laugh.' And he laughed for me. He could laugh and joke even in his tremendous plight. Let's not be sad. We'll see him again someday."

Pekkanen recalled Zumwalt's sense of humor.

He said he visited Zumwalt when he had just under gone a bone marrow transplant and was drifting in and out of consciousness. When he awoke, Pekkanen peppered him with questions.

Pekkanen left the home for a minute. When he came back, Zumwalt, who appeared to be asleep, began thrashing around. He was moaning, "no more questions, no more questions." Then he stopped moving.

"He opened one eye, then he opened the other eye. Then he burst into laughter. I wasn't the only one struck by the Zumwalt humor," Pekkanen said.

No ministers spoke at the memorial service Wednesday, which was held at Jernigan-Warren Funeral Home and attended by an overflow crowd of at least 350 people. Instead, 10 friends spoke.

"This is truly a service to honor Elmo's sterling interpretation of life," said Reggie Barton, Zumwalt's law partner.

Walter Anderson, editor at Parade magazine, met Zumwalt when the publication wrote a story about him and his father.

"There's really no difference between what a hero and a coward feel. They feel the same thing. The difference is what they do," he said.

Anderson said Zumwalt had asked him to address his children, Elmo Russell Zumwalt IV and Maya, and wife, Katherine, directly.

To his wife, Anderson said Zumwalt left the following message: "As unlikely as it seems right now, there will come a time when the pain of grieving will be less than the joy of remembering. It will come."

Temps Top 100 Degrees In N.C.

By The Associated Press
A few more words about the heat — you'd better get used to it.

Records were shattered in three North Carolina cities Wednesday, a Charlotte hospital reported a daily average of five patients with heat-related illnesses, and coaches delayed or cancelled football practices.

"Hot as hell," said Chris Keber, a starting quarterback at Charlotte Catholic High School, midway through practice Wednesday. "Literally."

And meteorologists say relief won't come until Saturday, when a cool front may push temperatures into the 80s. Until then, temperatures will hover in the mid to upper 90s throughout much of the state.

At Piedmont Triad International Airport, between Greensboro and Winston-Salem, the mercury climbed to 99 degrees Wednesday, breaking the previous high of 95 set in 1965.

The high of 94 at Asheville Airport broke the 90-degree record set in 1983. And the 99 degrees at Raleigh-Durham International Airport broke the previous high of 95 set in 1944.

Goldsboro hit 101 and it was 100 degrees in Tryon, the National Weather Service said.

The heat caused Duke University to change its football practice plans Wednesday, which was the first day in full pads and gear. The afternoon session was moved to 7:30 p.m.

"We were trying to avoid the hottest part of the day," said Duke head coach Steve Spurrier. "I think we can get a better effort out of the players and better concentration when it is not quite as hot in the evening."

Five North Carolina State University football players complained about heat-related problems during Wednesday afternoon's practice. No one collapsed, but they went to the university infirmary as a precaution, said N.C. State sports information Mark Bockelman. All were released within an hour, he said.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system's 10 public high schools also banned outdoor activities, such as football and soccer practices, between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The decision came four days after a Raleigh high school football player died from heat stroke.

"Certainly the Raleigh student was on our minds," said Elton Hawley, athletic training coordinator for Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools. "But we would have done this regardless. We just don't want the kids out in this heat taking unnecessary chances."

"We'll continue to do things this way as long as the heat and humidity are so high and the air quality is so poor."

Football practices also were canceled at Union County public schools. At Hickory High School in Hickory and West Caldwell near Hudson, practices were delayed until the cool of the evening.

Charlotte Memorial Hospital has been treating an average five to six patients with heat-related illnesses each day, said Dr. John Baker, head of the emergency room.

Two people have been treated with heat strokes, Baker said.

At Mercy Urgent Care Center in Pineville, nurses reported seeing eight to 10 heat-related illnesses this week.

In Raleigh, the Wake Council on Aging, which distributes fans to elderly people who don't have air conditioning, ran out of fans early Wednesday.

"We have no fans left," said Ellen Lentz, interim director of intervention services with the council. "We have given out all the donated fans we had."

Elderly people should drink plenty of fluids during the extremely hot weather to prevent dehydration and heat stroke, Mrs. Lentz said.

Soaring temperatures can also harm animals. The National Weather Service issued warnings to livestock farmers because of the life-threatening heat.

"This is a really serious situation," Greg Johnson, an agricultural meteorologist at N.C. State University.

Poultry producers should separate the birds as much as possible, provide maximum ventilation and avoid shipping them during the heat. Cattle affected by the heat should be taken to ponds for relief, Johnson said.

Wednesday was hot enough for Duke Power Co. to set a peak use record with 13,585,000 kilowatts, according to Mike Mullens, a power company spokesman.

The record, which was only a day old, was broken between 4 and 5 p.m.

"We were able to meet customer demand without instituting any voluntary conservation measures," Mullens said.

Carolina Power & Light Co. customers used a record 8,355,000 kilowatts of power on Tuesday, breaking the mark set July 18 of 8,094,000.

"We're not having any problem meeting demand, but certainly that is high," said CP&L spokesman Kyle Hampton, who added that under the right weather conditions, the record might be broken again Thursday.

Construction crew bosses preached heat safety.

"We tell the men if they feel like they are being overcome by the heat, take a break and find some shade and sit," said Jim Vance, a foreman for McDevitt & Street Construction Co. "And we always have two 30-gallon water coolers on the site."

REALLY HOT — A pedestrian walking down Rosemary Street in Chapel Hill Wednesday afternoon passes a thermometer that reads 111 degrees. The official reading in Chapel Hill was well below that, but temperatures hit the 100-degree mark in several sections of North Carolina Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Pier operators along the Outer Banks said a steady west wind has helped keep the beach unseasonably hot and the water unseasonably cold.

"We have real cold water temperatures right now, with the water just below 70 degrees," said Andy McCann of the Nags Head Fishing Pier. "We have had nothing but west winds pushing the Gulf Stream away from us and it's kept the water from warming up."

"We get people who step in the water to put their boat in and jump right back out because it's so cold," he said.

Minuteman Melting?

BOSTON (AP) — The Minuteman statue, a symbol of revolutionary readiness, appears to have retreated a bit under a barrage of heat and humidity.

A black resinous substance has dripped from the musket of the 113-year-old statue, making it appear as if the Minuteman melted beneath the 90-degree plus heat, officials said Wednesday.

"When it gets hot, and I expect the inside of that statue must be very hot, the substance liquefies," said Bob Nash, superintendent of the Minute Man National Historic Park in Concord.

The most likely explanation is that a material applied to the monument in 1975 to make a protective plaster casting of the monument seeped into the statue and has been liquefied by heat and humidity, said Ed McManus, a National Park Service conservator in Boston.

"It's rabbit skin glue that got into the interior of the gunstock, the musket stock, when molds were made to reproduce the statue in plaster," McManus said. "The rabbit skin glue is soluble, so that's dissolving and dripping out."

The glue was often used in the 1970s to generate casts of delicate sculptures. The substance is applied as a liquid and then hardens, creating an impression that is then transferred to plaster.

This summer is the second time the substance has leaked, Nash said.

McManus said rainwater has built up in the statue, which was cast in sections, and the resulting humidity made the resin run.

Judge Voids State Barrier On Third-Party Candidates

DURHAM (AP) — North Carolina elections law has prohibited new parties from running candidates for county offices, but a judge has ruled that the provision is unconstitutional. State officials say they probably won't appeal the decision.

"We don't agree with the ruling, but we will comply," said State Elections Director Alex Brock, adding that he thought an appeal would be expensive, time-consuming and ultimately futile.

Brock said the General Assembly would be asked to consider revising the law in its next session.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt stemmed from a lawsuit by Amy Freeman and Bernard Obie of Durham and the New Alliance Party against the state board and the Durham County Board of Elections.

Britt also ruled Tuesday that Ms. Freeman and Obie, who wanted to run for Durham County commissioner seats, could not be prevented by state and county elections officials from being placed on the Nov. 8 ballot as commission candidates of the New Alliance Party.

Obie, 35, and Ms. Freeman, 27, were pleased with the judge's decision.

"I think the judge ruled reasonably," said Ms. Freeman, 27, who also heads the New Alliance Party in North Carolina. The ruling, she added, is "not just in our favor but in favor of fairness."

Obie and Ms. Freeman said their local races are part of a larger effort to draw attention to the candidacy of Lenora Fulani, who is expected to be nominated for president by the New Alliance Party when it holds its national convention in New York City Saturday and Sunday.

But Obie said he wanted to focus attention "on behalf of the common people" on local issues such as the superconducting super collider, air and water quality, land use, the homeless, and impoverished children and elderly people.

The New Alliance Party, which is based in New York, was certified by the state Board of Elections last month after it gathered petitions from more than 43,000 registered voters in North Carolina.

Under existing state elections laws, a political party that qualifies for the ballot by petition may run candidates for national, state and General Assembly offices.

But until Britt's ruling, the law had prohibited such new parties from running candidates for county offices.

Ms. Freeman and Obie had sued the state and county boards of elections to let them run as New Alliance candidates, claiming that the state law violated their constitutional rights.

Britt, chief judge of the U.S. District Court for eastern North Carolina, Tuesday issued a "memorandum of opinion" on the suit, following a hearing Aug. 10 in Wilmington.

Britt also ruled that the state and county elections boards would have to pay the costs of the lawsuit. The boards have 20 days to respond to the ruling, the clerk said.

The lawsuit was sponsored by the N.C. Civil Liberties Union.

Norma Harrell, an assistant state attorney general who argued the case before Britt last week, said the state had held that the law was valid because new parties need to show grassroots support before putting local candidates on the ballot.

New Cruiser

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — Chadbourn police will be cruising the streets in a three-year-old, six-cylinder Chevy Celebrity for the next few days because the department has run out of police cars.

Assistant Police Chief Tom Connor crashed the last one Friday while chasing a robbery suspect on a dirt road.

The town council earlier this month had voted to investigate replacing the town's other police car, which had been taken out of service. After Friday's crash, the board voted to buy another car, but it won't be ready until the end of the week.

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University is considering the construction of a $50 million to $80 million science building to provide laboratory and additional classrooms and offices, officials say.

The proposal was presented Wednesday to the executive committee of the Academic Council — the chief governing body of the faculty — in a closed session.

Chlorine Sends 32 To Hospital

RALEIGH (AP) — Dozens of people were sent to the hospital with coughing problems, burning throats and stinging eyes after excess liquid chlorine leaked into a Raleigh city swimming pool, but no serious injuries were reported.

Thirty-two people were transported to hospital emergency rooms in ambulances and police vans, said E.F. Fowler, a district fire chief. Ten people were admitted to hospitals for observation overnight, but none of the injuries was listed as serious.

Some victims were administered oxygen by firefighters and Emergency Medical Services personnel who responded. Other victims were taken to personal doctors or hospitals by relatives or friends.

Jack Duncan, city director of parks and recreation, said the problem was in the Pullen Park swimming pool's circulation system, which filters and treats the water. City officials were still investigating late Wednesday, he said.

The pool was closed immediately after the leak, which was reported at 11:34 a.m.

Most Tar Heels See Higher Property Taxes

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
Property taxes are on the rise across North Carolina, but if there's any tax revolt sentiment brewing, it hasn't come to a boil.

"I haven't received one phone call complaining about it," Mecklenburg County Budget Administrator Buck Squires said about the county's 3.8-cent increase that will raise taxes on a $80,000 house to $502 a year, up from $471.

In boosting its rate this fiscal year, Mecklenburg County is far from alone.

Tax hikes took effect in two-thirds of the 88 counties not undergoing revaluation. In most years, about half of the counties raise taxes, according to the N.C. Association of County Commissioners.

The Associated Press interviewed officials from almost 20 North Carolina counties, cities and towns to determine whether they are raising taxes. Many had boosted their rates, while others were trying to hold the line for at least another year.

Meanwhile, in some counties that underwent revaluation last year, the new, lower tax rate for each $100 of valuation actually will cause tax bills to go up because of higher appraisals.

Such is the case in Lee County, where the new lower rate of 78 cents actually represents a 16-cent increase on tax bills over the old 85-cent rate. To bring in the same amount of tax dollars, the revised rate would have had to have been 62 cents, county officials said. Greensboro also did revaluation this year and the rate dropped from 63.75 cents to 52.75 cents. But city officials said the new rate actually represents a 9-cent increase in the effective tax rate because of the higher tax values.

Nearly all of the officials said their job has been made more difficult since the phasing out of federal revenue sharing and other programs.

The federal grants had provided seed money for large capital projects such as libraries or sewers, or allowed local governments to pay cash for smaller-scale projects or for equipment such as police cars and garbage trucks.

Recent changes in state tax laws also have reduced the tax base of some local governments, the officials said. The changes appear to have particularly hurt large urban areas, where population gains have outpaced new schools, libraries and jails.

While the average tax increase across the state was about 4 or 5 cents, two counties — Wake and Wilson — have raised taxes by more than 12 cents. For residents of Raleigh, the combined city and Wake County increase adds up to 19 cents.

"It's a huge increase, but you pay for the services you get," Wake County Commissioner Vernon Malone, who lives in Raleigh, said during a break at the association's recent meeting in Greensboro. "With growth as it is, the only way to deal with it is through taxes."

Raleigh's 6-cent hike was needed to pay off bonds that were used for parks, land purchases, streets and other projects, said Z. Bryan Hill, the city's finance director.

The increase means the owner of an $85,000 house in Raleigh will pay a total of $1,224 in property taxes this year, up about 15 percent from $1,062 last year, he said.

Charlotte and Chapel Hill will keep the same rate this year. Last month, though, the Charlotte City Council authorized the largest bond referendum in the city's history.

The $183 million package, most of which will go to road projects, will go before voters on Nov. 8. It is the largest ever put before voters by a local government in the state, surpassing Wake County's $125 million school bond issue that passed in June.

Nancy Elliott, assistant budget director for the city, said Charlotte used to get about $6 million a year in federal revenue sharing funds and about $10 million in community development grants.

"We'll probably be doing more bond issues for the big-dollar projects," she said. Bonds enable local governments to finance large projects without having to impose large one-time tax increases, she said, adding that city officials do not expect the $183 million bond issue to cause the 62.75-cent tax rate to go up.

Winston-Salem also will not have an increase this year. The rate recently went up by 6 cents before revaluation reduced it from 61 cents to 53 cents, said Ann Jones, the city's budget evaluation director. She said tax bills will remain about the same under the new rate.

"That was the first real increase in six or seven years," she said about the 6-cent hike.

Ed Regan, assistant director of the county commissioners' association, said many local governments have been forced to raise property taxes to make up for lost revenues from the federal and state governments to pay for big-ticket items such as new schools and jails or add social services programs.

"Our welfare rolls keep growing," said Squires. "It's not the same thing when you're deciding whether to build a coliseum or roads. You can't defer welfare."

Local governments no longer can count on big chunks of money from the federal government in the form of revenue sharing funds and community development grants, said Bill Campbell of the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Most of the local officials said they used the federal funds for capital projects instead of using it to pay staff or initiate new programs.

Campbell said actions taken by the N.C. General Assembly to exempt manufacturers' inventories and some intangible assets from local property taxes have forced local governments to tighten their belts.

"The Legislature has been shrinking (local governments') property tax bases consistently every session," he said.

Although lawmakers promised to reimburse the local governments for their losses, many county and city officials, particularly those in high growth areas, claim they are getting back less than they might have collected in property taxes.

In Monroe, Claudette Smith, assistant city manager, said a 5-cent increase in the city's property tax rate was enacted specifically to offset those losses.

Regan said almost all of the counties and cities used the federal grants to fund sewer and water projects, school renovations or construction, and for parks and other government needs.

"A large part of the increases are directly attributable to capital projects," he said. In Wake County, for example, 10 cents of the 13-cent hike will be used for school construction and to pay off a $125 million school bond issue.

Wilson County raised its property tax rate by 12 cents. Like Wake County, most of the jump will be used to retire a $15 million bond issue for schools.

"Nobody likes tax increases," said Wilson County Manager Gary Mercer. "But we have a number of projects that need to be done and we were down to our reserves."

Mercer said a only handful of residents appeared at the budget hearing to protest the increase, which will cause the tax bill on a $50,000 home to go up by nearly $60 a year.

Mercer said he felt Wilson County was getting a "bum rap" for raising its rate by 12 cents in one year. While Wilson County hasn't raised its rate in several years, he said, some local governments have been raising their rates by several pennies each year to keep up with the growing demand for services.

For example, Buncombe County's rate will remain the same this year at 74 cents. But since 1985, the county has raised the rate from 59.5 cents to the current levy.

County Finance Director James Roach said the county is considering whether to build a new jail. In addition, office space for county government officials is extremely tight.

Because county voters recently approved bond issues for schools, the airport and other projects, he said, county commissioners are "reluctant to go back on the jail." As for office space, he said, "We can continue to lease private space."

Asheville residents won't see an increase on their tax bills this year either. City Manager Douglas O. Bean said the city council approved a 7-cent hike two years ago to pay off bonds for road projects and county operations.

The city's traffic congestion could lead to more expensive projects, he said. "Next year will be very tight," Bean said.

In Hendersonville, the 76-cent rate has remained in effect since 1982.

"Our economy is booming construction-wise," said city Controller Jim Rudisill. "So far we've been able to hold the line. But that's not to say we can in the future."

Even tiny towns like Belhaven, with 2,500 residents, have felt the pressure to raise more revenue. City Manager Tim Johnson said the tax rate was hiked from 45 cents to 48 cents this year.

In Murphy, the city council hasn't raised taxes in about 10 years, said Mayor Cloe Moore. But a number of projects — including rebuilding the town's tennis courts — have been on hold for lack of funds, he said.

Jackson County increased its tax rate 3 cents to 45 cents to raise $300,000 for repairs to the county courthouse, said Wayne Hooper, chairman of the county board of commissioners.

Local Governments Opt For Bond Issues

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — In late June, Wake County voters overwhelmingly approved a $125 million school bond referendum, the largest ever proposed by one local government in North Carolina.

To retire the bonds, county officials raised taxes. Ten cents of the 13-cent increase was tied to the bond package. Just three years ago, county voters passed a $70 million school bond issue.

A similar situation occurred in Wilson County, where voters passed a school bond issue in 1986 and taxes went up this year by 12 cents. Again, most of the increase was needed to pay off the bond issue.

There are other examples. A $19.7 million bond issue — again for schools — passed easily earlier this year in Dare County.

In Charlotte, voters will be asked Nov. 8 to approve a $183 million bond package, primarily for roads. Observers say the record amount will likely win voter approval, one year after voters in the city and Mecklenburg County overwhelmingly approved a $173 million bond package.

With reduced federal and state support, are more local governments in North Carolina opting for bond issues to finance capital projects such as schools, roads, and libraries?

"The impression is yes, there seems to be a larger number of bond issues," said Ron Aycock, executive director of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners.

He attributes the bond issues to one factor — more people — which stresses local governments' ability to provide services.

"Growth is here," he said, "but it's not sufficient to do these things without tax increases."

Vernon Malone, a member of the Wake County Board of Commissioners, said the number of school-age children in the county is growing by about 1,500 a year.

"We got way behind (in our building program). It's a catch-up situation," he said in a recent interview. "With all of this money we're spending, we won't be dealing with our needs 10 years from now if the growth continues."

In 1979, N.C. voters approved less than $250 million in bonds. Last year, the total amount of bond issues approved in the state was closer to $550 million.

Bill Campbell, an attorney with the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, said local elected officials feel more comfortable about raising taxes if the voters have their say in a bond referendum.

"If someone voted in favor of a bond issue, he can't very well come back and say he doesn't want to pay for it," he said. "You have to fund those bond issues and a tax increase is often part of that."

Aycock said the advantage of bond issues is obvious. "It's the same reason why we buy a home the way we do instead of waiting until we're 60 years old to save up enough to pay it off," he said.

Delegates Say Convention Keeps Human Factor Alive

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Most of the drama has faded from a Republican National Convention that began with little substantive business to conduct, but North Carolina delegates don't seem to think they are wasting time.

"I'm having a ball," said Cheryl Sisk of Shelby. "I'd love to do it again — but I won't be ready for another four years."

"This is the time for us to celebrate who we are," Greensboro delegate Frederick Robbins said.

With the rise of the primary system, presidential nominations increasingly are being determined weeks or months before national conventions, leading some to call them anachronistic.

Some critics say the four-day events should be shortened while others call for eliminating them altogether.

But North Carolinians interviewed Wednesday showed little support for either change.

"That would be a real shame," said Marty Cooke, a delegate from Ocean Isle Beach. "It's one of the few times when you really get to view these politicians close up. It's like a big debate — the Democrats have their say and then we have ours."

Among the most enthusiastic delegates were those attending their first convention. Veterans were more receptive to packaging the events more tightly but even they stopped short of calling for an end to conventions.

"We could get down to the meat and potatoes a bit faster and cut out some of the cotton candy," said J.A. Dalpiaz of Gastonia, who has attended four conventions including the one in 1976, when Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford squared off.

Dalpiaz said he would be receptive to shortening conventions from four to three days and transacting the more mundane business in off-year "mini-conventions."

But even if conventions retain only a fraction of their clout from yesteryear, they serve a valuable function, he said.

"It's true that this convention is a big rubber stamp," said J.A. Dalpiaz of Gastonia, a veteran of four conventions. "The individual delegate doesn't have as much influence."

"But you've got to get the troops together and have the hoopla and the hollering to get them fired up. There are still some things that you can't do by pressing a button. I'd hate to see the human factor go out of politics."

Tar Heels Divided Over GOP Rule Changes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The bitter dispute between traditional and ideological conservatives over delegate slots to the Republican National Convention is no reason to rewrite the North Carolina GOP's rules. Pat Robertson supporters say.

But some delegates who backed George Bush or Bob Dole in the state primary say the state party should amend its plan of organization to ensure that supporters of the primary winner control the delegation.

"We can be a primary state or a caucus state but we shouldn't try to be both," said George Little, 8th District Republican chairman. "That's what we're doing now... and it opens the door for people to come in and turn over the results of the primary."

State Chairman Jack Hawke said he does not care what the policy is as long as everyone understands it.

"All I'm saying is before we do this again let's get the rules down pat and then whoever wins, so be it," he said Wednesday.

Under the state GOP's plan of organization, delegates to the national convention are bound to a particular candidate on the first ballot. But if there are subsequent ballots, the delegates are free to vote as they wish.

However, the General Assembly has decreed that national-convention delegations must reflect the outcome of the presidential primaries. Under the law, the delegates committed to a candidate must be actual supporters of the candidate.

Bush won the North Carolina primary March 8, picking up 29 of the state's 54 GOP delegates. Kansas Sen. Bob Dole won the other 25. Robertson was awarded no delegates because he failed to garner at least 10 percent of vote.

But Robertson supporters packed numerous precinct, county and district meetings this spring, believing that the state plan of organization permitted them to gain a majority of the delegate slots if they could control the grassroots selection process.

Bush supporters, meanwhile, made only a halfhearted showing at the local meetings, convinced that the state law guaranteed them control of the delegation.

The differing interpretations led to some bitter confrontations at district conventions. At the 4th District gathering in April, a fist fight broke out and the Franklin County sheriff was called in.

The Bush forces ultimately prevailed, as state party officials cited a national party policy that state law takes precedence over state plans of organization. The state Robertson leadership retaliated by calling a boycott of the state GOP convention in June.

Little favors bringing the plan of organization in line with the state law, enabling the campaigns of presidential contenders who make a good showing in the primary to handpick the delegates.

Another option would be having would-be delegates run in the primaries, so that votes would be cast for slates of delegates as well as presidential candidates, Hawke said.

"The biggest problem I see is that once the primary's over, the general Republicans out there think everything's over," Little said. "They don't understand party rules and procedures and therefore you can't get them out to the precinct meetings."

Robertson supporters disagreed. "The people who get out at the neighborhood precinct level and stay with the process through the county and district, who do the work, ought to be the delegates," Bill Garrott of Charlotte said.

Robertson supporters who attended the meetings and were denied delegate positions felt cheated, Garrott said.

John Wilkinson, 78, a longtime party warhorse, said he feared the change recommended by Little would run contrary to "the proposition that the Republican Party is against the centralization of authority."

People who want to be delegates are obligated to attend party meetings at all levels, said Wilkinson, a member of the Republican National Committee. "Those who don't, they don't have anything to complain about but their own laziness and lack of interest in the process."

Hodel, Burnley Blast Democratic Candidates

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Michael Dukakis and the Democrats are concealing a liberal agenda and may get away with it unless Republicans get the message out, Reagan administration officials warned North Carolina's GOP delegation.

"The Democratic Party has never nominated a more liberal candidate for the presidency than Michael Dukakis," Interior Secretary Donald Hodel said at a Wednesday caucus of the state's delegates to the Republican National Convention.

"When you get back home, please carry the message: There are differences that matter," Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley said. "I know if the people of North Carolina understand what those differences are that George Bush and Dan Quayle will carry the state by a massive margin in November."

Burnley and his predecessor, Elizabeth Dole, both native North Carolinians, were joined by Hodel, Kansas Sen. Nancy Kassebaum and Lynne Cheney, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Repeatedly drawing standing ovations, they excoriated the Democrats as being out of step with mainstream America but trying to hide it, a recurrent theme of Bush's campaign.

"The American people have not yet really focused fully on the issues, and when they do, there isn't going to be any question about it. We're going to have a resounding victory," Mrs. Dole said.

Democrats are trying to avoid detailed scrutiny of Dukakis' record and stands by charging that criticism of either is negative campaigning, said Burnley, a High Point native who was deputy transportation secretary under Mrs. Dole and succeeded her when she resigned last year.

"I don't want to be unduly negative, but the public record is there," Burnley said. "His record is his problem."

Republican activists should tell voters that the GOP platform emphasizes punishment of drug users as well as rehabilitation of addicts, while the Democrats are too sympathetic toward users, Burnley said.

Hodel also touched on the drug issue, criticizing those who favor distributing clean needles to drug users to discourage sharing, which increases the chances of contracting AIDS.

"What we're telling young people in the community is we're more serious about AIDS than we are about drugs," Hodel said. "They are both killers."

Mrs. Cheney focused on education, saying the Reagan administration had been responsible for awakening the nation to the need for reform and the importance of teaching American values.

"The Reagan-Bush administration, and Vice President Bush in his campaign, have been very specific about saying we don't improve our schools simply by pouring more money in," Mrs. Cheney said. "That's what Governor Dukakis essentially has been saying."

Dukakis' lack of credentials in foreign affairs, especially in comparison with Bush's lengthy experience, is another issue Republicans

Peanut Vote

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina peanut growers have overwhelmingly to continue the $2 assessment per farm stock ton on their crop.

Norfleet L. Sugg, executive secretary of the North Carolina Peanut Growers Association, said that out of 1,272 farmers casting ballots, 1,245 — or 98 percent — voted for the proposal and 27 voted against it.

"The 'yes' vote in the referendum will continue the funding of peanut promotion, marketing and research through the 1994 crop," Sugg said.

Martin Plugs NFL Franchise

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and the North Carolina delegation used their moment in the spotlight at the Republican National Convention to give a new meaning to the phrase "political football."

Martin, who announced the delegation's vote on the GOP presidential nomination during the roll call of the states Wednesday night, took advantage of the opportunity to plug one of his pet projects.

"North Carolina is working with our sister state of South Carolina to bring our own National Football League franchise to Carolina," Martin said into the Superdome microphone as network television cameras focused on him.

Delegates, wearing red caps with a white-lettered insignia reading "Nothing could be finer than NFL in North Carolina," erupted in a cheer.

Martin is not a delegate and attended the convention only two of four days.

should raise, Mrs. Dole said. "When we're talking about the national security of this country, we can't afford on-the-job training," she said.

The Massachusetts governor would not have been able to match President Reagan's arms control accomplishments because Dukakis would not have taken the tough stands that brought the Soviets to the table, Mrs. Dole said.

Gov. Jim Martin said the Democrats were reluctant to show their true colors in state politics as well.

He cited Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's widely publicized statement in March that he would not discuss in public all the areas where he agreed with blacks for fear of alienating "redneck" voters.

"You've got to work hard," Martin told the delegates. "We can take the distinction between the two platforms and make a strong case for support just on that alone, in addition to the great candidates we've got."

Quayle Now Must Convince GOP He's Right

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sen. Dan Quayle, who tonight becomes the Republican vice presidential nominee, is discovering that he has a tough task persuading his party of his worthiness for the job.

Praised by George Bush as one of the party's "rising young stars," the youthful Indiana senator exulted in the spotlight Wednesday but ran into some long shadows cast by questions about his experience, wealth, military record and a 1980 sex-and-influence scandal.

"And while some delegates said they were thrilled with the choice of the conservative senator as Bush's running mate, others wondered what Quayle brings to the ticket and whether he had skeletons in his closet.

"We don't know much about Dan Quayle. ... He's a very attractive and up-and-coming young star. They just brought him along faster than people thought," said Rhode Island delegate William B. Anderson of Barrington.

At a joint news conference Wednesday with Bush and in media interviews later, Quayle got a sampling of what concerns he will have to address.

QUAYLE FAMILY — Sen. Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn stand with their children Benjamin, with glasses, Corinne and Tucker, right, after the children arrived in New Orleans Wednesday. Quayle will be nominated tonight as the Republicans' choice for vice president. (AP Laserphoto)

He denied suggestions he had a sexual relationship with Washington lobbyist Paula Parkinson in 1980: "There's nothing to it," he said. However, he declined to give a detailed accounting of the episode, in which Mrs. Parkinson said she shared a vacation home with several lawmakers, including Quayle. He did say he has not seen her since the golfing vacation.

Later Wednesday, during a combative interview on Cable News Network, Quayle said a questioner was "trying to create something that doesn't exist, as if something was wrong." Asked to elaborate on his activities that weekend, Quayle replied, "I went down and I played golf and I came home and anybody that knows me, that's exactly what I did."

A "cheap shot" is how Quayle characterized questions about his decision to join the National Guard after graduating from college, avoiding the possibility of being drafted and sent to Vietnam.

"I have a deep affection for those men and women that have sacrificed their lives in Vietnam. ... To imply anything differently is just simply wrong," he said.

He later told ABC that he chose the National Guard because it allowed him to fulfill his military obligation and still go to law school, adding that if his unit had been called for service in Vietnam, "I would have gone and served very proudly."

Quayle, who comes from a wealthy publishing family, said reports that he was worth $200 million were "not correct." But he did not elaborate, saying only that he would release tax returns that will show "it's far less."

As for suggestions that he lacks experience for the job, Quayle told reporters, "I know perhaps as much about national security as anybody, with few exceptions."

He said his experience on the Senate Armed Services Committee and in national security matters "gives me a very important background ... about what needs to be done to preserve the freedoms and the opportunities in this country. I feel prepared."

A baby-boomer who has demonstrated appeal among Indiana's blue-collar workers, marginal Democrats and women voters, Quayle is seen by Bush strategists as the spark that can help ignite the ticket and bridge the so-called gender gap.

Bush aides praise Quayle's campaigning skills, painting him as an exuberant, vigorous politician reminiscent of John F. Kennedy. After the convention, Bush and Quayle will set out on a joint campaign trip through Indiana, Ohio and Illinois — the latter two states key industrial battlegrounds in the fall election.

But before that trip, Quayle must sell himself to many delegates skeptical about his youth and experience. Aides say much of his acceptance speech may well be extemporaneous comments praising Bush, attacking Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis and stressing his own experience on national security and defense issues.

Many delegates say they don't have to be sold.

John Holmes, former Rhode Island GOP chairman, said Quayle solves Bush's biggest problem: alienating the party's conservative wing. Conservatives, he said, "are thrilled with this selection" and now have "a reason to go out and vote for George Bush."

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson scoffed at a suggestion that the hard-sell pitch was needed because Quayle was regarded as a weak choice by rank-and-file Republicans.

"If you don't make speeches pumping up George Bush and Dan Quayle at a Republican convention, you'd be the kind of person that slept in the precinct before election day and you wouldn't get the job done," Thompson said.

California Gov. George Deukmejian called the choice of Quayle bold and imaginative at Quayle's appearance Wednesday before that state's delegation. Afterward, Deukmejian said:

"I think we have to see him out there speaking to many groups, answering questions, meeting with the media. So I don't think today you can draw any conclusions" on whether Quayle will help Bush in California, an important campaign battleground.

But other delegates clearly had stronger reservations.

"I don't think he's the right man for the job," said Jack Dunlop, a delegate from Auburn, Ala. "I don't think the people of Alabama will support him. He's too young and too inexperienced."

"I hope he doesn't have any skeletons in his closet," said E. Leroy Owens, a GOP district leader from Manhattan.

Candidates Are Men Of Wealth

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The presidential election will give Americans a choice of wealthy candidates: two millionaires and two men who stand to benefit from large inheritances.

Three of the four were born into wealth: Vice President George Bush, the newly named the GOP standard-bearer; Dan Quayle, whom Bush named as his running mate Tuesday, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

Quayle and Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis both are in high income brackets, but both their bank accounts do not yet contain the funds from million-dollar inheritances of which they are beneficiaries.

Besides being born rich, both Bush and Bentsen became millionaires through their own business ventures.

Bush was born to privilege in Connecticut, the son of a wealthy investment banker and U.S. senator. He grew up with maids, cooks and a chauffeur, before going off to elite Yale University. Staked by his family, he went to Texas to make his own fortune in the oil business, ultimately entering politics.

On his tax returns last year, Bush reported total income of more than $300,000, including income from the blind trust that was set up when he became vice president. His wealth has been estimated at upwards of $2 million.

Bentsen's father was a self-made land baron in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas, and Bentsen earned his own wealth through business dealings in Houston between his service in the House and his return to Washington as a senator.

Bentsen's exact worth is unknown, but a source close to the senator would not argue with estimates that it exceeds $10 million. "I don't know what my net worth is," Bentsen said Wednesday. "Frankly, I haven't made out a financial statement that has given me my net worth in a number of years."

Dukakis, noted for his frugality, has a net worth of at least $500,000 in property, investments and salary.

Dukakis is beneficiary of two trust funds valued at $1 million each that were set up by his late father, Panos, a Greek immigrant who was a physician. Half the proceeds, however, go to his father's alma mater, Bates College in Maine.

Quayle is the scion of the privately owned Central Newspapers Inc., an Indianapolis headquartered publishing empire whose holdings include the Indianapolis Star and the Arizona Republic. Quayle is an heir to the portion of the company that is not held in trust.

In addition, on his personal financial disclosure statement in Congress, he listed stock in Central Newspapers valued at more than $250,000. The exact figure is not required on the financial disclosure forms.

Pakistan Enters Official Mourning For Zia; Probe Of Crash Ordered

By BRYAN WILDER
Associated Press Writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan's new president declared a state of emergency today and businesses were shuttered in official mourning for President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, who died in a fiery plane crash with the U.S. ambassador.

Senate Chairman Ghulam Ishaq Khan, who became head of state in accordance with the constitution, ordered a probe into why the air force C-130 exploded in the sky Wednesday. He said he couldn't rule out sabotage.

In neighboring India, Pakistan's long-time adversary, security forces reportedly shot and killed two people and wounded seven today in battles with pro-Pakistani crowds.

A funeral for Zia, a close U.S. ally, was set for Saturday. The U.S. Embassy said Secretary of State George P. Shultz would attend.

The government originally put the number of dead at 37, but an official release listed 30 victims, including U.S. Ambassador Arnold Raphel, U.S. defense adviser Brig. Gen. Herbert M. Wassom and five top Pakistani generals.

The transport plane crashed just minutes after leaving Bahawalpur, 330 miles south of Islamabad near the Indian border. The group had been inspecting a military unit near the city.

Unofficial reports and rumors circulated that the American-made C-130 was hit by an anti-aircraft missile or a helicopter or was shot down by India.

Pakistan was created from Moslem-dominated areas of predominantly Hindu India when the subcontinent became independent of Britain in 1947. The two countries have fought three wars.

The Indian border states of Jammu and Kashmir were placed under curfews today after pro-Pakistanis tried to set two bridges ablaze. Indian news reports said two people were killed and seven wounded by security forces when a crowd defied the curfew.

A U.S. official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States will assist in Pakistan's investigation of the crash.

Zia was a close U.S. ally and allowed his country to be used as a staging ground for guerrillas fighting Soviet and government troops in neighboring Afghanistan. Since the Soviet troop withdrawal began there May 15, the Kremlin has accused Pakistan of continuing to funnel arms to the insurgents.

The Soviet Union expressed its condolences to Pakistani authorities. "The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR sent to the interim president of that country ... our deepest condolences with regard to the incident and conveyed our deepest sympathy to the families of all those who perished in the air incident," Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov announced at a news briefing.

There was no immediate reaction from official Afghan media.

"There is no confirmation of any foul play, but we are not taking anything for granted," the U.S. official said. "An incident like this arouses suspicion."

The Reagan administration refused to speculate about any possibility of foul play.

At the United Nations in New York, Pakistani Ambassador S. Shah Nawaz told The Associated Press: "The C-130 is a very sturdy plane. I have never heard of one exploding like this."

When asked if another aircraft might have collided with it, he declared: "No, no, no. When the president flies, no other planes fly" in the area.

Zia, 64, ruled Pakistan for 11 years, longest of anyone in the nation's 41-year history.

Ishaq Khan pledged to continue Zia's foreign policy of close ties with the United States as well as with fellow Moslem nations.

He declared a state of emergency in a midnight televised address to the nation. Army troops were posted around broadcast stations and government buildings, but there were no reports of major unrest.

Ishaq Khan also declared 10 days of national mourning and closed government offices for three days. He said general elections scheduled for Nov. 16 would be held as planned.

The new head of state retained the caretaker Cabinet that Zia appointed after firing his civilian government on May 29.

Ishaq Khan also appointed Gen. Mirza Aslam Baig as army chief of staff. Baig had been vice chief under Zia, who also was an army general.

On domestic issues, Ishaq Khan said he would proceed with Zia's vision of an Islamic society under a Moslem code of law.

Pakistani opposition leaders expressed sorrow at the loss of lives but refrained from speculating how the absence of Zia, a military strongman, would affect their political strategies.

Zia, then army chief of staff, seized power in a bloodless coup in 1977 and ruled under martial law until December 1985. He began sharing power with a civilian government in early 1986, but dismissed last spring on the grounds it failed to maintain law and order and enact Islamic law.

After the coup, Zia had the Cabinet arrested and sent ousted Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto to trial for conspiracy to murder a political opponent. Bhutto was hanged in 1979 and his daughter, Benazir, became Zia's main political foe.

"Life and death is in the hands of God," she told the AP after Zia's death. "We will not say anything."

Rajiv Gandhi, India's prime minister, said he was "deeply shocked and distressed" by the death of Zia and sent condolences to the president's family. The Indian government declared three days of mourning for Zia.

Raphel, 45, was a native of Troy, N.Y. and appointed ambassador in January 1987 by President Reagan. It was his second assignment to Pakistan, where he served from 1975 to 1978 as political officer in the U.S. Embassy.

Extremists Say Demands Must Be Met

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists holding at least two American hostages said today they will not release any captives unless all their demands are met.

The typewritten statement from Islamic Jihad was delivered to the Beirut office of the Reuters news agency along with a black-and-white photograph of American hostage Terry Anderson.

Islamic Jihad, or Holy War, has admitted holding Anderson and Thomas Sutherland. A total of 18 foreigners, including nine Americans, are missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon.

Anderson, 40, of Lorain, Ohio, is the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He is the longest-held foreign captive, kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut on March 16, 1985.

On Wednesday night, a telephone call to Reuters, purportedly from Islamic Jihad, said British hostage Terry Waite, an Anglican church envoy, may be freed on a Shiite anniversary Monday if the British government shows "good intentions."

The developments came during speculation that Iran might use its influence on its supporters in Lebanon to release the hostages. A cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war is scheduled to start Saturday, and Iran has been making conciliatory statements toward the West since accepting the U.N.-sponsored cease-fire on July 18.

But the Islamic Jihad statement released today said: "None of the captives will be released until our demands are met in full."

The statement outlined the demands as:

"The release of all our mujahedeens (holy fighters) from all Arab and foreign prisons ... The release of all Lebanese and Palestinian mujahedeens from the prisons of Israel and its surrogates in the (southern Lebanese) security zone and (Christian) east Beirut.

"The unconditional withdrawal of all the Israeli forces and their allies from south Lebanon.

Poland's Strikes Spread

JASTRZEBIE, Poland (AP) — Work stoppages today crippled four coal mines in southwestern Poland and spread in the key Baltic port of Szczecin, where bus workers joined longshoremen on strike, opposition activists said.

The protests, which began Tuesday with an occupation strike at a major mine in Jastrzebie, were called to demand pay raises and legalization of the banned Solidarity trade union movement.

More than 2,000 workers at the Andaluzja coal mine went on strike today, Solidarity leaders said. The mine is about 40 miles from three other coal mines closed by strikes. Its director, Henryk Pyka, confirmed a strike had begun.

Solidarity leaders said about 600 bus workers in Szczecin also launched a sympathy strike today, paralyzing public transportation in the city. Solidarity spokesman Wojciech Maziarowski said about 1,000 dock workers were on strike there in the second day of a stoppage.

Workers at the Moszczenica mine near Jastrzebie refused to pick up their tools late Wednesday, declaring support for other striking miners, said Adam Kowalczyk, a Solidarity leader.

Kowalczyk said about 700 workers were occupying the mine, which employs about 11,000 workers and is one of the nation's largest. He said workers put up a huge Solidarity banner over the front gate and demanded louspeakers.

Witnesses said police moved in to seal off the area.

The coal mine is in the rich mining region of Silesia, where workers at the July Manifesto mining complex put down their tools Tuesday. Witnesses and Solidarity officials said there were about 5,000 miners in the complex today. More than 400 miners struck for a second day at the Morcinek coal mine 12 miles away near the Czech border.

"There is a strike mood in many parts of the country," said Bogdan Lis, a Solidarity leader. "One should expect that there will be more strikes."

The strikers are demanding legalization of Solidarity, along with improved working conditions and higher pay to offset 60 percent inflation and nationwide price increases of 40 percent.

Communist authorities, coping with the second serious wave of strikes this year, declared the stoppages illegal and appeared to have cut off telephone lines to several key Solidarity spokesmen.

Boycott Postpones Lebanese Election

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Presidential elections were postponed today after hard-line Christians sympathetic to Israel missed a Parliament session where a Syrian-backed candidate was favored to win election.

Interior Minister Abdulla Rassi accused the Lebanese Forces of "forcefully preventing" 15 members of Parliament from attending the meeting. The military denied that.

Christian radio stations said two shells slammed "near the premises" of President Amin Gemayel's palace in suburban Baabda after the session was called off. They said there were no casualties.

Police said they could not confirm the report and Gemayel's spokesmen refused to comment.

The parliamentary boycott prevented the election of Suleiman Franjeh, a feudal lord opposed by Lebanon's main Christian militia.

It blocked a quorum for the crucial session. Only 38 Parliament members showed up, with 51 required for a quorum.

"The session has been called off," Moslem deputy Ali Abdullah told reporters as he left the building.

House Speaker Hussein Husseini said the date of the new session would be set after a new round of "speedy and extensive consultations with parliamentary blocs."

Soviets See U.S. Nuclear Explosion

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (AP) — U.S. and Soviet officials say their historic joint nuclear weapons test explosion could be the first step toward a world without atomic bombs.

Wednesday's Joint Verification Experiment was the culmination of a four-year effort to slow the nuclear arms race and a product of better U.S.-Soviet relations.

It was the first time Soviet scientists joined their American counterparts in the control room at the top-secret Nevada Test Site to monitor a nuclear weapons explosion. Forty-five American scientists and diplomats will gather similar data Sept. 14 at the Soviet's Semipalatinsk test site.

The detonation beneath this picturesque, 7,500-foot mesa had 12 times the force of the Hiroshima bomb. The scientists watched the surface effects of the underground explosion, 30 miles away, by television.

"It was a resounding success," said James Magruder, the test controller for the experiment dubbed Kearsarge.

The blast registered 5.4 on the Richter scale of ground movement at the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., and caused some high-rise hotels in Las Vegas, 100 miles away, to sway.

C. Paul Robinson, the U.S. ambassador to the negotiations that led to the test, called the test "a step down the road to a more stable world."

availability of property to meet present and future growth.

Eakin said the university plans to purchase the J.H. Rose High School property on Elm Street by 1991, a move which will provide "considerable relief to our crowded conditions."

Eakin said the Rose High building would be used to house "non-academic functions" now located on the main campus.

After citing record private giving to the university in the past year (a total of $5.8 million, up 7 per cent over the previous year), the record enrollment for the fall semester, "exceptional" faculty research productivity in the past year, and the fact that Robert "Roddy" Jones of Raleigh, a 1958 ECU graduate, was recently named chairman of the University of North Carolina board of Governors (the first non-lawyer and son UNC-Chapel Hill graduate to be named chairman of the board), Eakin said, "It is time, I believe, for East Carolina University to consider a major, universitywide fund-raising campaign."

He said discussions have been initiated with the ECU Foundation, the Medical School Foundation and the Pirate Club "to build a base for a cooperative effort."

"Some objectives for a major campaign are either clear today or could be readily identified," he said. "Others will likely emerge from the strategic planning effort."

Concurrent with the development of a strategic plan for ECU, Eakin said he would "take those first steps necessary to initiate a major fund-raising effort" on behalf of the university.

"Much is happening at ECU," the chancellor said. "Record enrollments and budgets, new buildings under construction and planned, new faculty and staff to add new and stimulating insights, record private giving and new initiatives from alumni — all contribute to making our university a source of well-deserved pride," Eakin said.

"In the face of all these records, though, we would do well to heed the wise caution of a recent editorial in The Daily Reflector," which, Eakin said, stressed that the university's priority must be to provide a quality education to the students, who represent "15,000 individual needs, 15,000 educations, 15,000 futures..."

"Amen," Eakin concluded.

The addition will increase the total Greenville site size to 1.18 million square feet.

Seigler said the expansion will centralize many areas of the company and will allow for future growth.

The addition was designed by Fluor Daniel of Greenville, S.C., while the construction contract was awarded to McDevitt and Street, Triangle Division, located in Raleigh.

Burroughs Wellcome Co. was established in New York in 1906. In 1970, U.S. operations were moved to Research Triangle Park and Greenville. The company employs over 1,560 people at the Greenville site.

Roosevelt Dies Of Lung Cancer

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Franklin Delano Roosevelt Jr., who as the third son of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt lived by the values synonymous with his family's name, died of lung cancer on his 74th birthday.

Roosevelt, a resident of nearby Millbrook, was admitted to the hospital July 21 and died Wednesday, said Charles Gill, a Vassar Brothers Hospital spokesman.

"It was a very late diagnosis and very fast-moving," said his son, Christopher Roosevelt.

Roosevelt entered politics in 1949, four years after his father's death, defeating the Tammany Hall candidate for the 20th Congressional District seat in Manhattan. He served three terms before retiring in 1955.

He failed twice to win the New York governor's office once occupied by his father.

"He inherited a concern for the well-being of the community that he used to benefit his state and nation, defending democratic ideals with valor and serving in Congress under two presidents," said New York Gov. Mario Cuomo.

When first elected to Congress, Roosevelt said his victory was "proof that we are experiencing a revolution in American politics" and predicted the end of "big-city party organizations formerly held by irresponsible clubhouse loafers."

Although he held several appointed posts, Roosevelt never won another election. In 1954, he lost the Democratic nomination for governor to Averell Harriman and the election for attorney general to Republican Jacob Javits.

The funeral will be private, according to Christopher Roosevelt. A memorial service will be held Sept. 4 in New York.

Women Warned About Heart Disease Danger

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Heart disease is an "equal opportunity" illness and women should be as aware of potential cardiovascular problems as men, warns Dr. Carolyn Corn, cardiologist and assistant professor of medicine at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center here.

Although men are generally associated with heart disease, more women die of heart ailments per year than all forms of cancer combined, numbers that should be taken seriously by women, she says.

Roughly 300,000 women die annually of heart disease compared with 231,000 female cancer victims, according to American Heart Association and American Cancer Society figures.

"I saw a classic case recently when a 41-year-old female patient learned she had extremely high cholesterol," said Corn. "Her reaction was 'It can't happen to me. I'm a woman.' But that's simply not true."

The reason women are generally overlooked in most scientific cardiovascular studies is that most women who die of heart disease are in their 60s or beyond, while many more males are affected in their 40s and 50s, said Dr. Karen Hamilton, cardiologist and assistant professor at the OU Health Sciences Center.

"Being male is only one of several risk factors for heart disease," said Corn. "In mid-life, the death rates in men are three to four times greater than for women, but within 10 years after menopause, the rates tend to equalize."

Women generally are protected from heart attack, strokes and other cardiovascular ailments until menopause, Hamilton points out, because the estrogen they produce tends to increase the beneficial form of cholesterol (HDL) and decrease the harmful form (LDL).

Some studies indicate that women who have had a hysterectomy (in which the ovaries were also removed) and who take an estrogen replacement have a much lower incidence of heart disease than those who don't take estrogen, said Dr. Leann Olansky, endocrinologist and assistant professor at the center.

Only about half of all post-menopausal women take estrogen replacements, however, because estrogen is believed to increase the risk of some forms of cancer, Olansky said.

"Those cancers are not very common, though," she said. "Only 3,000 women a year die of uterine cancer."

Said Hamilton, "Even if estrogen replacements increased your risk of uterine cancer tenfold, your risk of that would be very minute compared to your risk of dying of heart disease."

Post-menopausal women who have a strong family history of cancer are usually the only ones for whom estrogen supplements are not recommended, said Olansky.

The lesson for women, said Hamilton, is to adopt a healthy lifestyle at an early age in order to lower post-menopausal risk of heart disease.

"The time to change your lifestyle is when you're 25, not when you have a heart attack," she says.

That lifestyle, said the OU College of Medicine physicians, includes not smoking, keeping cholesterol levels below 200 through dietary restrictions (the average among U.S. adults is 210) and regular exercise.

Readers Tell Lightning Storm Dangers

DEAR ABBY: Living in the section of the country with the highest annual occurrences of lightning, I was very interested in your recent article concerning lightning safety. More recently, many readers have written to you debating the safety of using the telephone during a storm.

I recently was away on business, and it was obvious that my boyfriend was taking advantage of my absence by spending many late nights out (always with a good alibi ready). One morning I called and asked where he had been all night because I called until the wee hours and he wasn't home. He quickly responded that he had indeed been home, but a terrible electrical storm had been going on and he was afraid to answer the phone!

Abby, this weak excuse might have flown, but he has one of those new cordless telephones! (By the way, this man is an engineer at the Kennedy Space Center.) Sign me ... RAINY DAY FOOL

DEAR RAINY DAY FOOL: If you don't sever your connection with this shifty space engineer, I predict stormy weather ahead — with little chance for sunshine.

DEAR ABBY: The person who said there is no danger in using a telephone during a thunder and lightning storm is in for a shock, if you'll pardon the pun.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Several years ago when I was at summer camp with the Michigan National Guard, one of my friends decided to make a telephone call during a thunderstorm. Ten minutes later he was back in the duty office with a sore jaw and a temporarily paralyzed arm! It seems lightning had struck the telephone wire and traveled down the phone line and jumped to the braces on his teeth! It knocked him and two other men approximately 20 feet across the road. — JIM ANDERSEN, ANN ARBOR

DEAR ABBY: On July 2, 1970, our mother went to the bank to cash our father's paycheck. When she got home, our father, Ernie Craze of Mansfield, Ohio, discovered the bank had given Mom $100 too much. So, being the honest person he was, Dad picked up the telephone and called the bank to alert it of the error.

A lightning storm was going on outside at the time, and about halfway through the call, lightning struck! Dad dropped the phone and said, "Oh my God — my ear!" Those were his last words. Then he fell back dead. The cause of death: electrocution.

Dad left a wife of 34 years and five children. So, Dear Abby, please let your readers know that using the telephone during a rainstorm can be fatal. — THE CRAZES FROM MANSFIELD, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I am 77 years old and have had lots of close encounters with lightning. Once, while making an emergency telephone call from Crookston, Minn., in the late '30s, lightning struck the telephone wire and the results were electrifying! My arms stretched out sideways and every muscle in my body vibrated. I was told I lit up like a neon tube! Fortunately, I was spared because the line was grounded. — GEORGE W.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

To keep the kitchen cool, cook the meat on top of the stove in the evening. Refrigerate it promptly and use it later for cold plates, hot sandwiches or chef salads.

Companies Try New Swimsuit Tack Visitors Should Leave Very Soon

By DENISE GELLENE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — From an office in the Los Angeles Mart, a huge building housing dozens of showrooms for fashion wholesalers, Warren S. Gaudineer is quietly directing a drive to revive the nation's swimwear business.

That is no easy task. A $50,000 study on his desk says that women hate to buy swimsuits, and hate even more the skimpy suits with low backs and plunging necklines that seem to dominate most swimwear shops.

A chain-smoking salesman for chemical giant Du Pont, Gaudineer seems an unlikely choice for the job. Gaudineer doesn't know a thing about retailing, and his employer, Du Pont, doesn't make swimsuits.

Yet Du Pont is keenly interested in swimsuit sales because it makes Lycra, an elastic fiber that is woven into nearly every women's swimsuit. The more swimsuits women buy, the more Lycra Du Pont sells.

That simple calculation has helped forge an unusual, 2-year-old alliance between the nation's swimwear makers and Du Pont, in a quiet campaign to get women into new swimsuits. At Gaudineer's suggestion, the swimwear manufacturers formed an industry association — called SWIM — that has spent thousands of dollars on surveys to figure out what kinds of swimsuits women want.

Beyond that, swimwear makers dished out more than $100,000 this year to train and help pay the salaries of "swimsuit specialists" in eight department store chains throughout the nation. The swimwear manufacturers hope to persuade retailers that customers will buy more swimsuits if they receive personal attention.

At the same time, Du Pont has spent around $100,000 creating training kits for department store sales clerks that includes a videotape that tells clerks how to sell swimsuits.

Millions of dollars are at stake. American women now cling to their old swimsuits for three years before buying a new one. By persuading women to buy new suits more often, the $800 million swimsuit industry could explode. "This could be a $2 billion industry," said Al Zindel, a vice president with Jantzen Inc., the nation's largest swimwear maker.

Even a modest increase in swimsuit sales would be welcomed by Gaudineer, who promised his bosses in Du Pont's headquarters in Wilmington, Del., that he could expand the swimwear business by 25 percent before he retires three years from now.

What that requires is nothing less than a revolution in the way swimwear is sold. For years, department stores have viewed swimsuits as a seasonal item that sells briskly only when the price is slashed. Unwilling to pour resources into swim boutiques, department stores counted on "fit specialists" from swimwear companies to help sell suits.

"We've had videos and seminars, and worked in the fitting rooms," said Pamela Andrea, sales vice president for swimwear maker Rose Marie Reid Inc. "We've been holding the hands of department stores for years."

Now, swimwear manufacturers and Du Pont are showing retailers how to sell swimsuits themselves, and for the most part, retail executives don't mind the unsolicited advice.

"We'll take whatever help we get," said Eva Holzafel, a swimwear buyer for Sears, Roebuck & Co. who handed out 900 Du Pont sales kits to department managers in Sears stores this spring. "A swimsuit is a tough garment to sell."

After all, says Milton Brandt, a Michigan fashion consultant who did market research for SWIM, "When else do you have to strip naked to buy something?"

Some merchants are trying to make swimsuit purchases less painful. G. Foxx, a Hartford, Conn. department store chain, arranged its swimsuits on racks under signs that say "Big Bust" or "Short Torso" or "Wide Hips" in an attempt to help women find the right suit. Explains swimwear buyer Susan Chamberlain: "We group suits according to — I don't want to say problem — a woman's shape."

Even so, it hasn't been easy for women to find a suit that fits. Brandt says that women over 35 — the fastest-growing population group — think that most swimsuits, with their deep necklines and stringy straps, are too revealing. "Women are very sensitive about how they look," Brandt said. "They are not opposed to looking sexy. They are opposed to looking ugly."

Brandt's survey results stunned swimwear manufacturers, who hadn't realized that aging baby boomers wanted less sizzle and more suit. "Women were upset," said Jantzen's Zindel.

Swimsuit designers slowly lost their love for hip-high leg lines, and developed an interest in underwire. The new swimwear designs are a lot fuller and contain such features as "power netting," a girder-tight liner that flattens bulges. Other suits contain padded bras "to give women a little help where they need it," said Rose Marie Reid's Andrea.

Jantzen created a tight-fitting, one-piece suit called "five pounds under" because, said Zindel, "women always wish they were five pounds underweight." Los Angeles swimwear designer Anne Cole came up with a simple, conservative tank suit that comes in 14 solid colors. "Women want to show off their shape," Cole said, "without wildly exposing themselves."

Du Pont, leading the effort to overhaul swimsuit sales methods, developed posters, brochures and two special videotapes for retailers. It sent about 1,500 department stores copies of "A Fitting Suit," a 19-minute film narrated by an actress who offers sales tips as she flits through a well-stocked swimwear department.

Some 800 stores, including Sears, received copies of "What Suits You," a 6-minute film that features the same actress, dressed in a swimsuit. She bends and stretches to show customers how to make certain a suit fits.

"Look at the underarms, back, derriere and crotch line," she cheerfully advises. "Sagging or drooping? Try a smaller size."

SWIM also launched a "swimsuit specialist" program. For three days last fall, 16 sales clerks from eight department store chains gathered in New York showrooms, where they watched a steady stream of models exhibit new swimsuit styles. To better show the magic of elastic and bust seams, Jantzen's models even wore their suits inside-out.

After the intensive training, the swimsuit specialists were sent back to their stores to sell swimsuits, and after the summer swim season ends on Labor Day, retail executives will learn whether the program worked. Early results indicate that swimsuits sales are up in some stores. Macy's California, for example, says sales at its Pleasanton and San Francisco stores, the two branches in the program, are up more than 10 percent over a year ago.

That may be good news for Macy's but it's even better news for Du Pont's Gaudineer, who anticipates nationwide sales gains of just 5 percent this year.

"If we can just get growth like that," he said, wistfully. "I'll have no problem reaching my goal."

At Wits End Erma Bombeck

My mom has a plaque just inside her front door that reads, "If we get to drinking Sunday afternoon and start insisting that you stay over until Tuesday, please remember we don't mean it."

My mother likes houseguests as well as the next person, but let's be realistic. Houseguests should be regarded as perishables: Leave them out too long and they go bad.

It is rare when you can unite in holy wedlock two families in one house any longer than 48 hours without the hostess attacking her welcome mat with a steak knife.

Some families eat at 4:30 in the afternoon. Others fall right out of happy hour into bed. Some guests consider a picnic in the park as a forced death march, while others, if allowed to sit around and watch TV for more than an hour, whine, "We can do this at home. We want to see something!" It's a game.

Take Len and Bernadine. Take their children, Puberty and Sissy. Take their dog, Carl. Please.

We could hardly wait until they came for a visit. Hadn't seen them in six years. You forget a lot in six years.

We forgot that Bernadine was a vegetarian but was allergic to 18 vegetables and nine fruits.

We forgot that when Len snored, cattle became restless 40 miles away.

Somehow we had forgotten that Puberty was light-fingered, so you had to hide your purse in the crisper in the refrigerator.

There were a lot of little things. One was the fact that Sissy could bounce a ball against your bedroom window at 6 in the morning 5,786 times without missing.

We had forgotten that Len and Bernadine each smoked three packs of cigarettes a day and kept assuring us we would get hit by a beer truck driven by the surgeon general before the smoke got us.

It had slipped my mind that Bernadine never touched a dish because "I don't know where they belong," or a washer because "I don't want to break it," or came into the kitchen because "I don't want to get in your way."

It's a sandlot game. If you are hospitable, you can't seem to get a hit. You get walked a lot. You strike out a lot. You sit on the bench helplessly and let it all happen.

And then on the last day of their visit, Len and Bernadine said, "You know, you should get a booster for your hot water. We've been taking cold showers since we got here."

They had forgotten something, too. They had forgotten that my husband, in his infinite wisdom, had installed the hot water spigot on the cold water and the cold water spigot on the hot water.

TEEDRA BROWN

Americans eat some 75 times as much chicken today than they did 40 years ago.

Teedra Brown Receives Honor

Teedra Brown has been chosen Miss Operation Sunshine 1988.

She is the 13-year-old daughter of Cynthia Brown and a seventh grade honor student at Greenville Middle School.

The eight-week five-day-a-week activities program for girls closed recently with an awards ceremony.

Perfect attendance was received by Jennifer Hampton, Kim Crandall and Urekha Parks. Patricia Barrett was recognized for sportmanship.

Recognized in daily activities were Rhesaha Carr and Patricia Barrett, track; Kim Crandall and Shajuana Clemmons, table pool; Nikki Bell and Teedra Brown, bumper pool, and Melissa Smith, Buffy Clemmons, Teedra Brown and Latasha Whichard, foosball.

An original play written by the 10-13 year-olds, "Let's Say No To Drug," was presented. "Operation Sunshine Angels" was the program for the nine-year-olds, "Twisters" was given by the eight-year-olds and "Get Fresh Crew" was the topic for seven-year-olds.

During the summer trips were made to Tryon Palace, N.C. Museum of History, Cliff of the Neuse, Whichard's Beach, Pullen Park and a tour in Bath. Clubs included library, weaving, deaf and sign language, stamps, softball and ceramics.

Other program areas included dental and personal hygiene, nutrition and education and a presentation by the Greenville Police Department.

Summer volunteers were Sonja Smith, Jawatta White, Dawatta White, Mamie Tyson, Jackie Murphy and Nikki Hardy.

Summer workers included Jennifer Fields, Catherine Barnhill,

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 66.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate for a mostly moderate demand. Average weights light to desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,992,000, compared to 2,048,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 2 cents lower at mostly 2.75-2.98 in East and mostly 3.05-3.14 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 12 cents higher at mostly 8.62-8.90 in East and mostly 8.37-8.52 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.38-3.58; new crop corn 2.64-3.00; new crop soybeans 8.22-8.77. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 97 to 102 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices barely budged this morning in light trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 0.18 point to 2,026.14 by 10 a.m. EDT.

Among broader market indicators, the New York Stock Exchange composite index of all listed issues rose 0.04 to 147.68. The American Stock Exchange's market-value index fell 0.07 to 294.06.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE, with 416 up, 365 down and 551 unchanged.

Two Hostages, Officer Killed As Police Chase Bank Robbers

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Two bank robbers who took more than 30 people hostage as they fled across West Germany and the Netherlands were captured today near Bonn after a gunbattle with police on a busy highway. Two hostages and a police officer were killed during the two-day ordeal.

The robbers and a female accomplice had freed all but two of their hostages before the shootout today on the highway in Bad Honnef, police said. One hostage was killed in the gunbattle and the other seriously injured, police said. The two bank robbers and their accomplice also were hurt.

Another hostage and a policeman died Wednesday when the robbers and their accomplice held about 25 people in a bus they commandeered.

The hostage drama ended this afternoon after police stopped a speeding car carrying the two bank robbers, their accomplice and two women hostages.

Police spokesman Horst Fechner said officers stopped the car by setting off exploding devices that emit a powerful flash of light, then closed in from both sides. Hesse state radio said a special tactical unit led the assault.

Fechner said that in the gunfire that ensued, one of the women hostages was killed and the other received "life-threatening injuries." He said he could not release their names.

The spokesman said the two gunmen, Hans-Juergen Roegner, 31, and 32-year-old Dieter Degowski, were seriously injured and their female accomplice received minor injuries. Her name was not released.

Fechner is the police spokesman in the city of Recklinghausen, where a special command post had been set up to coordinate the police strategy.

Ambulances and medical rescue helicopters sped to Bad Honnef. Many people stopped their cars and watched the gunbattle, leading to massive traffic jams.

The ordeal started when the gunmen took two hostages during a bank robbery Tuesday morning in the northwestern town of Gladbeck and later fled in a car provided by authorities. They escaped with two hostages and $227,000. Police provided $162,000 of the money to try to ensure the hostages' safety.

The gunmen surfaced Wednesday in Bremen, 135 miles northwest of Gladbeck. Police said they opened fire in a vegetable market and took a third hostage. No one was injured.

The bandits then commandeered the nearby passenger bus and drove away with about 30 hostages. Five elderly people were freed before the bus careened along the autobahn for several hours late Wednesday and early today.

Police spokesman Hermann Wahl in the city of Recklinghausen near Gladbeck said a policeman died in a crash and two others were injured while pursuing the gunmen.

The armed robbers also shot to death a 15-year-old Italian boy aboard the bus after police captured the robbers' accomplice.

Columba, delivered the final seconding speech for his nomination in Spanish.

By design, Bush's oldest son, George W. Bush, delivered the 111 votes of the Texas delegation that put the state's "favorite son and the world's best father" over the 1,139 delegates needed for nomination.

From a hotel suite nearby, Bush watched the proceedings on television, surrounded by grandchildren and other relatives.

Big East, ACC Planning Annual Tourney, Could Start In December, 1989

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Big East and Atlantic Coast basketball conferences are planning a unique tournament that would have teams in the two leagues play each other annually to decide which was superior.

The interleague tournament could begin as early as next December, according to a report published Wednesday in the Syracuse Herald-Journal.

Details of the Big East-ACC playoff are still being worked out, but officials are optimistic the yearly tournament will become a reality, said Big East Associate Commissioner Mike Tranghese.

"There is nothing definitive yet. But the athletic directors in both leagues have directed the commissioners to pursue the whole concept and idea," Tranghese told the Associated Press.

"We (conference officials) have met twice and talked in great detail about all the areas that would have to be touched upon, areas of concern and how they could be treated. We have not talked specific buildings or TV entities or anything like that," Tranghese said in a telephone interview from the Big East's headquarters in Providence, R.I.

Big East Commissioner Dave Gavitt will discuss more specifically with school officials at their next meeting in October what must be done before the tournament can occur, said Tranghese.

"If it came about, we'd begin playing in December 1989. Obviously, we would have to get through and deal with the particulars with a pretty rapid pace," he said. Most likely, officials would use media preseason rankings to match team against team. That means the top-rated team in the Big East would play the top-rated ACC team. The second place teams in both leagues would play each other, and so on.

Each team would play one game, period. "It's a tournament in the sense that one league would win, not that one team would win," explained Tranghese. Currently, no such style tournament exists.

Because the Big East has nine teams and the ACC eight, one Big East team would have to sit. However, that school would share in the revenues generated by the tournament, Tranghese said.

The tournament would consist of double-headers at four sites. Possible venues would include the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, Madison Square Garden, the Capital Centre in Washington D.C. and the Dean Smith Center at Chapel Hill, N.C. However, it is equally possible that off-campus or neutral facilities would be used.

Tranghese said Big East and ACC officials have been discussing the play-off since last year.

"At that time of year, before the conference seasons start, we believe we could captivate those interested in college basketball," he said. "It has the potential to be very valuable to both our leagues and to college basketball in general."

QB's Return Enough To Make UCLA Optimistic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA returns only 10 starters, the fewest in the Pacific-10 Conference. But one of them is quarterback Troy Aikman, and that's enough to make coach Terry Donahue of the Bruins optimistic about the 1988 season.

"His talent is phenomenal, and he has the kind of arm that comes along only once in a while," Donahue said of Aikman. "And the thing which is so impressive is that he's so much better now than he was when he came to UCLA."

"He has a total grasp of the offense now and is seasoned. He knows the checks to make, knows what to do when he's blitzed. The game experience has helped him tremendously."

Aikman transferred to UCLA from Oklahoma with two years of eligibility. He made quite a splash last season, leading the Bruins to a 10-2 record including a 20-16 victory over Florida in the Aloha Bowl.

Including the Aloha Bowl, Aikman completed 178 of 273 passes for 2,527 yards and 17 touchdowns to go with just eight interceptions. He ranked second in the nation in passing efficiency.

The Bruins have won bowl games following each of the last six seasons. Another such victory after the 1988 campaign would set a national record.

Southern California's Rodney Peete was ranked fourth in the last season, completing 175 of 291 passes for 2,460 yards and 19 touchdowns. Peete enters his senior season as the holder of 12 school records.

"He's the most versatile quarterback I've ever been around," second-year Southern Cal Coach Larry Smith said of Peete. "He can throw from the pocket, throw on the sprint-out, run the option. And he's so intelligent. It may be a cliché, but he's like having a coach on the field."

UCLA and Southern Cal tied for the Pac-10 title at 7-1, but it was Southern Cal which went to the Rose Bowl after upsetting the Bruins 17-13.

Michigan State beat the Trojans 20-17, the Pac-10's only loss in four bowls. Southern Cal's overall record was 8-4.

Peete and Aikman are two of nine starting quarterbacks returning in the Pac-10. Erik Wilhelm of Oregon State, Troy Taylor of California and Timm Rosenbach of Washington State also threw for more than 2,000 yards in 1987.

Meanwhile, Washington believes it has a strong replacement for the graduated Chris Chandler in junior Cary Conklin.

The Huskies have played in bowl games following each of the last nine seasons. Last year, they beat Tulane 24-12 in the Independence Bowl.

Nevertheless, the last three seasons have been disappointing for coach Don James. The Huskies were supposed to be contenders for the Pac-10 championship each year, but fell short.

James needs only three victories to break former Southern Cal coach John McKay's conference record of 70 wins. James is 133-62-3 overall in 13 seasons.

Oregon enters the season with most of its big guns back from last year, when the Ducks went 6-5 despite losing four of their last six games.

Redshirt sophomore quarterback Bill Musgrave completed 139 of 234 passes for 1,836 yards and 13 touchdowns last season.

Musgrave, who has worked extensively to improve his strength in the off-season, ranked 13th nationally in passing efficiency and was the country's highest-ranking freshman quarterback.

Arizona has a strong nucleus back this season.

Top returnees for coach Dick Tomey's Wildcats are All-Pac-10 center Joe Tofflemire and the conference's most valuable defensive lineman, nose guard Dana Wells.

At quarterback, fifth-year senior Bobby Watters is back, as is sophomore Ronald Veal, who led Arizona rushers last year.

Arizona State has a new coach, Larry Marmie, at the controls. Marmie succeeds John Cooper, who left the Sun Devils after three seasons to take the head coaching job at Ohio State.

ASU returns 32 lettermen from last season's team, which had a 7-4-1 mark including a 33-28 victory over Air Force in the Freedom Bowl.

But the Sun Devils lost 15 lettermen, including All-America offensive guard Randall McDaniel and five other all-conference players.

The top returnee is senior quarterback Daniel Ford, who threw for 1,756 yards and 12 touchdowns despite 15 interceptions.

Brian Johnson, who passed for 1,510 yards and 11 touchdowns, returns at Stanford, where Coach Jack Elway has added run-and-shoot formations to the playbook.

California and Washington State, under second-year coaches Bruce Snyder and Dennis Erickson, return 20 starters each.

For the second year in a row, a team other than Brigham Young won the Western Athletic Conference championship. Wyoming, under first-year coach Paul Roach, had a perfect 8-0 WAC record before losing a 20-19 decision to Iowa in the Holiday Bowl. The Cowboys finished with a 10-3 record.

BYU, behind quarterback Sean Covey, and Air Force, behind Dee Dowis, are expected to fight it out for the title. BYU went 9-4 last year while Air Force was 9-4.

Dowis set an NCAA single-season rushing record for quarterbacks with 1,315 yards, but broke a wrist and missed the Freedom Bowl.

Another contender could be Texas-El Paso. The Miners finished 7-4 and 5-3 last year. Returning are quarterback Pat Hegarty (2,064 yards, 13 TDs) and running back John Harvey (1,170 yards). Harvey needs just 22 yards to become UTEP's all-time leading rusher.

No longer is there a Pacific Coast Athletic Association — member schools decided recently to rename the league the Big West Conference.

San Jose State won the 19th and final PCAA football title last fall, but the Spartans have just five starters back from last year.

Fresno State, which finished in a four-way tie for second place last year with a 4-3 league record, has an experienced offensive unit back, and a promising newcomer in Myron Jones, a junior fullback who transferred from Los Angeles Valley Junior College.

"I call him 'Iron Myron,'" Fresno State coach Jim Sweeney said. "He has the best ability to break long runs of any back we've had since I've been at FSU."

Carlton Fisk Sets Record For Catching — Or Did He?

By The Associated Press

Carlton Fisk tied the American League record for games caught. Or did he?

Fisk caught his 1,805th game Wednesday night. The Baseball Encyclopedia says that ties him with Rick Ferrell, who played in the 1930s and 1940s for the St. Louis Browns, Boston Red Sox and Washington Senators.

However, The Elias Sports Bureau and The Sporting News Record Books say Ferrell caught 1,806.

"If I go out and play every day, it will happen," said Fisk, who homered twice and walked with the bases loaded to lead the Chicago White Sox past the Toronto Blue Jays 5-1.

"It turned out to be an occasion," Fisk said. "I'm glad we won. I go out and try to do good, but it's not easy to do good every day. It just worked out that way tonight."

"I told you he'd find a way to rise to the occasion," White Sox manager Jim Fregosi said.

Fisk homered in the second inning and in the sixth, giving him 13 this season. He walked off Duane Ward with the bases loaded in the eighth.

"I just wanted to get the run in from third base," Fisk said. "By then I was gassed and the bat was a little slow."

"Fisk always hurts us," Toronto manager Jimmy Williams said. "The guy takes care of himself during the off-season and he's always in good shape. We can't seem to score. We had a few chances."

In other games, Oakland beat Baltimore 10-4, Minnesota beat Detroit 2-1, Boston beat Seattle 7-2, New York beat California 11-7, Cleveland beat Milwaukee 11-7 and Kansas City beat Texas 9-6.

Chicago's Jerry Reuss, 9-7, allowed seven hits in seven innings. Steve Rosenberg got four outs in order for his first major-league save.

Jim Clancy, 6-13, who gave up both homers, allowed six hits and all three runs in six innings.

Athletics 10, Orioles 4
Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire homered in the same game for the seventh time this season as Oakland won for the eighth time in nine games.

The Athletics, unbeaten when both have homered, had 11 hits, eight for extra bases, and overcame a 3-2 deficit with a five-run fifth.

Baltimore pitchers walked 10 batters, the third time this season Orioles' pitchers have walked 10 or more.

Curt Young, 7-7, won for the first time since July 1, allowing nine hits and three runs in five innings. Eric Plunk pitched four innings of five-hit relief for his fourth save. Doug Sisk, 3-3, allowed four hits and five runs in 11-3 innings, walking three.

Twins 2, Tigers 1
Allan Anderson won his fifth consecutive decision and Dan Gladden hit a two-run homer as Minnesota completed a three-game sweep and beat Detroit for the seventh straight time this season.

The Tigers have lost five of their last six games and were swept at home in a three-game series for the first time this year.

Anderson, 11-7, allowed six hits in eight innings. Jeff Reardon finished for his 32nd save. Doyle Alexander, 11-8 and unbeaten in his previous seven games at Tiger Stadium, gave up eight hits in 8 1-3 innings, striking out eight.

Red Sox 7, Mariners 2
Bruce Hurst won his fifth consecutive decision and Rich Gedman and Ellis Burks homered as Boston moved to within two games of first-place Detroit in the American League East.

Hurst, 14-4, allowed eight hits in 5 1-3 innings. Bob Stanley followed for 2-3 innings and Lee Smith struck out the side in the ninth. Bill Swift, 6-10, gave up six hits and four runs in 12-3 innings.

Yankees 11, Angels 7
Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield had four hits apiece and drove three runs each in New York's 16-hit attack as the Yankees closed to within 2½ games of Detroit.

Henderson drove in two runs with a seventh-inning single that gave the Yankees a 9-7 lead after the Angels had wiped out a 7-2 deficit.

Scott Nielsen, 1-0, pitched two innings of two-hit relief and Dave Righetti got his 19th save with 1 1-3 hitless innings. Stu Cliburn, 4-2, allowed four hits and four runs in 2 2-3 innings.

Indians 11, Brewers 7
Joe Carter hit two solo home runs to break out of a 5-for-40 slump and Cory Snyder homered as Cleveland won its third straight. Carter's two-homer game was his fourth this season and the 15th multiple-homer game of his career.

John Farrell, 13-7, gave up five runs and eight hits in 7 1-3 innings, leaving after being hit with Mike Felder's liner. Mike Birkbeck, 8-6, gave up eight runs and eight hits in 4 1-3 innings, walking five.

Royals 9, Rangers 6
Danny Tartabull doubled, tripled and drove in three runs.

Pettis during the third inning of Wednesday afternoon's game at Tiger Stadium. Anderson made the catch as he tumbled over and the Twins took a 2-1 win. (AP Laserphoto)

Defense Sparkles

An aggressive East Carolina defense highlighted the Pirates' first scrimmage Wednesday night in Ficklen Stadium.

Senior Brian Hayward intercepted a deflected Travis Hunter pass on the opening play and the starting defensive unit gave up just two first downs in the controlled scrimmage.

Hunter, however, did finish with a six-for-nine evening through the air.

"I was especially pleased with our defense tonight," Pirate coach Art Baker said after the scrimmage. "They played aggressively and are further along than we thought they might be at this point."

"We still have a long, long way to go," Baker said. "The scrimmage tonight will be a good indicator of the many things we need to work on."

Michael Rhett rambled four yards for one touchdown and freshman Jeff Blake hit Larry Farrare for a 51-yard strike for the only other score. Sophomore placekicker Robb Imperato added both PATs.

East Carolina opens the 1988 season against Tennessee Tech on Sept. 3 in Greenville, marking the first time the Pirates have opened at home since 1981.

Sports Notes

Joyner Earns 1-A/2-A Track Honor

Former Farmville Central track standout Tyrone Joyner was named the 1A-2A State Male Track High School Athlete of the Year, North Carolina High School Athletic Association officials announced.

Joyner, who was a two-time triple state champion in the 1-A/2-A classification as well as the 1988 long jump champion, will attend Auburn this fall on a track and field scholarship.

Joyner also won a first and a second place in two national meets this summer.

Carolinas-NFL Search Has Unique Link

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — An official of the group trying to bring professional football to the Carolinas says it was no mistake that the firm doing a feasibility study on the project has a link to the NFL.

The Carolina National Football League Expansion Committee has retained the Stanford Research Institute of California to do a study on the feasibility of attracting and supporting a pro football franchise, said committee Co-chairman W.W. "Hootie" Johnson.

The institute is the same research firm that did the study used by the NFL in the 1970s to choose its last two expansion franchises.

"We were aware of that," said Johnson, chairman of NCNB in South Carolina. "We knew they had credibility with the league."

The research group in 1973 investigated for the NFL 24 possible locations for franchises. That study was used as the basis for research that led the NFL to choose Tampa, Fla. and Seattle for its expansion franchises, which began play in 1976.

The NFL is expected within the next few years to add two to four teams to its 28-team league.

Earlier this month, the governors of South Carolina and North Carolina announced a joint effort to land a team, tentatively to be located in the Charlotte, N.C., area near the states' common border.

Areas also competing for professional football teams include Baltimore, Oakland, Calif., Sacramento, Calif., Jacksonville, Fla., Memphis, Tenn. and others.

The expansion committee will lead the two-state effort to coax the NFL into coming to the Carolinas. The committee is expected to have a bankroll of at least $200,000 raised privately.

Johnson declined to reveal the cost of the Stanford research study, saying it came from private funds.

A spokeswoman for the research institute declined to reveal any details about the study, saying that was information privileged to the client.

In the 1973 study for the NFL, the research group looked into the areas' total urbanized population, male population between the ages of 25 and 65, and the number of households with relatively high income.

Pembroke's McRae May Join Pitt Grid Team

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — University of Pittsburgh track star Lee McRae joined the Panthers' football team Wednesday as a wide receiver, but his new career could be delayed if he makes the Olympic track team.

McRae, who came to Pitt on a football scholarship in 1984, but has not played the sport there, hopes to be added to the U.S. 4x100 meter relay team. If he is named to the Olympic team, he may return to Pitt's football team next season, said school spokesman Larry Eldridge.

"I always wanted to play football at Pitt," McRae said. "It's been in the back of my mind for four years. My hands are a little rusty, but in due time I think they'll come around."

"The ball is a foreign object to him right now," said receivers coach Steve Coury. "He's used to running with a baton, but he's got a great chance to make it with his speed."

McRae, a high school tailback in Pembroke, N.C., has one year of football eligibility remaining. NCAA rules permit an athlete to delay a year of eligibility if he competes in the Olympics.

McRae, who claims to have been timed in 3.98 seconds in the 40-meter dash, is a three-time NCAA indoor champion in the 55-meter dash. He broke the world record for the event in 1986.

Kyle Petty Injury Won't Slow Him Down

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NASCAR driver Kyle Petty broke his left leg and tore ligaments in his left knee in a crash Sunday during the Budweiser At The Glen race at Watkins Glen, N.Y.

"Kyle is in a lot of pain and he's limping, but he doesn't expect the injury to keep him out of any races," Patti Petty, Kyle's wife, told The Charlotte Observer in a telephone interview Tuesday. The next NASCAR Winston Cup race for Petty is Sunday at the Champion Spark Plug 400 at Michigan International Speedway.

Petty's injured leg has not been put in a cast, but is heavily bandaged, Mrs. Petty said.

Defending Champion Wins Carolinas Open

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Defending champion Mike Kallam of Greenville fired a final-round 3-under-par 69 Wednesday to easily win the Carolinas Open golf tournament.

Kallam trailed Roy Hunter by 1 stroke going into the last round before rallying with five birdies — three on the back nine — to win by 5 strokes. Hunter, of Gastonia, N.C., stumbled to a final-round 78.

Kallam earned $4,500 for winning the title. Kallam finished with a three-day total of an 8-under-par 208 on the par-72, 6,900-yard Bay Tree Golf Plantation. Three golfers were 5 strokes back at 213 — Hugh Gill of Calabash, N.C., Stuart Taylor of Vass, N.C. and Bob Boyd of Florence.

Boyd had a 68 Wednesday, while Taylor had a 69 and Gill an even-par 72. Kallam had two birdies and one bogey on the front nine and then birdied Nos. 11, 12 and 13 to seal the victory. He also had a bogey on the back nine, but it wasn't enough to keep him from winning the 54-hole tournament.

Eddie Pinnix of Ahsokie, N.C., was fifth at 214 after shooting a 67 on Wednesday, while Bobby Groff of Reidsville, N.C., was next at 215 after two straight 2-under-par 70s.

Rick Pruchnik of Charlotte, N.C., was the low amateur, tying for eighth at 217 after a final-round 69.

More than 300 of the best professional and amateur golfers in South Carolina and North Carolina took part in the tournament.

Ellis, Green Star In Gamecock Scrimmage

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Junior running back Harold Green scored five touchdowns and junior quarterback Todd Ellis threw two touchdowns as South Carolina conducted a controlled, 20-minute goal line scrimmage Wednesday.

Operating out of their new multiple offensive set, the Gamecocks ran 25 plays near the goal line.

"For the first scrimmage, we appeared to do a pretty good job," Coach Joe Morrison said. "It was good to see the offense go up against the defense for the first time and I think we will learn a lot from the afternoon's work."

Morrison said Green "had some nice runs and it was obvious he was getting some good blocking up front."

The Gamecocks will continue two-a-day workouts Thursday, with another 20-minute controlled scrimmage in the afternoon.

Tudor Wins Dodger Debut

By The Associated Press
Only hours after his flight from St. Louis, John Tudor showed why his arrival may land the Los Angeles Dodgers the National League West championship.

Tudor pitched a complete game in his debut with Los Angeles and Kirk Gibson and Mike Scioscia had three hits apiece as the Dodgers beat Philadelphia 7-2 Wednesday night.

Tudor, dealt to the Dodgers on Tuesday for slugger Pedro Guerrero, scattered 11 hits, struck out one and walked two as he lowered his NL-leading earned run average to 2.22. In his debut with St. Louis on Wednesday, Guerrero went 0-for-3 with a walk.

Tudor, 7-5, settled down after allowing five hits and two runs in the first two innings, and held the Phillies to six hits over the final seven innings en route to his fifth complete game of the season and his 11th victory over Philadelphia in 15 career decisions.

"That was a little bit rough," Tudor said of his long journey to the West Coast. "Once I settled into the flow of the game, it didn't have an effect on how I pitched."

The Dodgers, who have won three straight, welcomed their new teammate with a three-run first inning highlighted by Franklin Stubbs' two-run double off Mike Maddux, 3-3.

"I made some good pitches when I needed to, but I kept falling behind the hitters all night. I was lucky tonight," Tudor said.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Houston 1, St. Louis 0; Chicago 5, Cincinnati 0; Pittsburgh 2, Atlanta 1; San Francisco 4, New York 0; and San Diego 4, Montreal 2.

Tudor said that although he's now in Dodger blue his heart is still Cardinal red.

"I don't think anyone can expect me to sever my ties (with St. Louis) just because somebody calls me on the phone and tells me I'm pitching for another club. I love St. Louis.

"I really wanted to get off to a good start here. It's definitely a different situation, going from 18 games out to a first-place ballclub," he said.

The victory kept the Dodgers 3½ games ahead of the second-place Astros in the NL West.

Astros 1, Cardinals 0
Emergency starter Dave Meads allowed two hits for six innings and Glenn Davis scored on Joe Magrane's wild pitch to give visiting Houston its victory over St. Louis.

Meads, 2-0, combined with three relievers on a three-hitter in his first major-league start to outduel Magrane, 2-7. Magrane pitched eight innings and allowed three hits, two by Davis, and Todd Worrell pitched a hitless ninth.

Meads struck out four and walked two in his substitute role for Bob Knepper, who was forced to miss a start because of injury for the first time since 1978.

In Magrane's seven losses, the Cardinals have scored eight runs and been shut out four times.

Pirates 2, Braves 1
In his debut with Pittsburgh, Dave LaPoint allowed three hits over seven innings as the Bucs beat Atlanta at Three Rivers Stadium on RBI by Jose Lind and Tom Prince.

The victory moved the Pirates to within 4½ games of first-place New York in the NL East.

LaPoint, who won his last three decisions with the Chicago White Sox before being traded for relief pitcher Barry Jones last Saturday, retired 11 consecutive batters at one point. He struck out two and walked none while throwing just 71 pitches in beating Atlanta for just the second time in seven career decisions.

Cubs 5, Reds 0
Rick Sutcliffe, the subject of trade rumors recently, pitched a four-hitter and Mitch Webster drove in two runs as Chicago beat Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

Sutcliffe, 10-10, allowed three singles and a double in his team-leading ninth complete game in 23 starts. He allowed just one runner to reach third base as he won for the third time in his last four starts. It was the right-hander's second shutout of the season and 15th of his career. He struck out four and walked none.

Cincinnati starter Jack Armstrong, 2-6, allowed four runs in just 1 2-3 innings. The rookie has failed to last five innings in each of his last three starts, yielding 13 runs in 9 2-3 innings. Armstrong was sent to the minors after the game.

Padres 4, Expos 2
Tony Gwynn took over the NL batting lead as he went 2-for-4 and drove in two runs and Dennis Rasmussen improved to 10-1 since being traded to San Diego by Cincinnati on June 8 as the Padres beat visiting Montreal.

It was the 11th multiple hit game in the last 15 for Gwynn, who has raised his average to .321 from a low point of .246 on July 2. Gerald Perry of Atlanta also has a .321 average, but Gwynn ranks slightly higher when the averages are extended an extra decimal point.

Rasmussen, 12-7, won his fifth straight decision with relief help from Mark Davis, who earned his 21st save.

Giants 4, Mets 0
Rick Reuschel pitched a two-hitter en route to his 26th career shutout as San Francisco beat New York at Candlestick Park.

Reuschel, 16-6, has pitched five two-hitters in his career, including three last season.

Robby Thompson hit his fifth homer of the year, a long shot to straightaway center in the third, to make it 1-0 against David Cone, 12-3. Cone struck out 12 in seven innings.

Zoeller Avoids Elimination To Play Golf Another Day

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller and Bruce Lietzke, who toyed with elimination in the opening round of The International golf tournament, will live to play another day.

So will Jack Nicklaus, Nick Price, Tom Kite, Raymond Floyd, Paul Azinger and Andy Bean.

All were survivors Wednesday as half the field of 162 golfers played the first round in this unconventional, $1-million tournament.

The other half, including defending champion John Cook, PGA champion Jeff Sluman and Tom Watson, tees up today.

Mike Reid had Wednesday's best round, a 5-under-par 67 that translated to 11 Stableford points and a $10,000 payoff in daily money. Australian Ian Baker-Finch had eight points and earned $7,500.

At seven points were Price, Bobby Clampett, Sam Randolph and J.C. Sneed.

No scores are cumulative, however, so the 39 survivors from Wednesday, along with 39 more survivors from today, will head into Friday's second round all even and facing another cut.

Scoring in this tournament is based on eight points for a double eagle, five points for an eagle, two points for a birdie, zero points for par, minus-1 point for bogey and minus-3 points for double bogey or worse.

Among the casualties on Wednesday were Craig Stadler, who lost in a playoff; David Graham, John Mahaffey and Scott Simpson.

Lietzke, who has reached the final day in both previous Internationals, was extended to a playoff to advance this time. Eight players who finished at plus-1 played off for five spots. The sudden-death playoff lasted five holes.

Lietzke, Jose Rivero, Curt Byrum and Bill Glasson all made it in with pars on the first playoff hole, No. 9. The other four, all with bogeys, went on to No. 10, where John Huston was eliminated. Stadler and Bob Eastwood both birdied the next hole, No. 17, eliminating Jay Haas, who had a par.

After Stadler and Eastwood parred No. 18, Eastwood claimed the last qualifying spot with a 20-foot birdie putt at No. 10.

Zoeller avoided being ousted with a dramatic eagle on the 17th hole.

Zoeller was at minus-3 when he hit his 3-iron second shot to within four feet at the par-5 17th, then made the putt for eagle and five points. He finished at plus-2, as did Kite, Bob Tway, 1986 champion Ken Green and Ronnie Black, who had the day's only other eagle.

Nicklaus, the course designer, was in a group at plus-3 along with Azinger. Floyd was at plus-4 and Bean at plus-6.

"My golf game has been like an artist the past few weeks," said Reid, the day's pacesetter. "One day it's a masterpiece, like today, and the next it's finger painting."

"Today I hit a lot of good shots and hit the right club most of the time, which is difficult at this altitude (about 5,000 feet). And I had the putter rolling."

Reid birdied his first three holes to jump to plus-6.

"I wasn't really thinking about the day money until my caddie mentioned it on the 15th green," he said. "At that point I decided not to take my foot off the gas."

Comes Back From Personal Problems

Casillas Returns With New Attitude

By The Associated Press
Twenty-three days after leaving the Atlanta Falcons because he was under too much stress to play football, nose tackle Tony Casillas is back at training camp.

"My therapy for stress has helped me come to the conclusion that I want to continue my football career," Casillas said in a statement Wednesday. "I feel like now I can contribute to the team 100 percent." He thanked team officials for "their concern and professionalism" and said he would have no further comment on the matter.

Casillas, 24, a first-round draft pick out of Oklahoma in 1986, left camp July 26, saying he needed to ponder his future. Casillas saw a psychiatrist three times a week after leaving camp.

Coach Marion Campbell said Casillas will practice this week and may see action for a few plays in Saturday's preseason game against Tampa Bay in Atlanta.

"Needless to say, we're happy he's back. We're satisfied he's totally committed to playing football," Campbell said. "He's really upbeat and looks excited to be back."

Campbell said he believes Casillas has returned as a better player.

"He had to have time to work it out in his mind," the coach said. "He knows what role he plays here and he's back to play hard."

Casillas was hampered by injuries last year — including a strained groin, sprained thumb, hand lacerations and a sprained toe and knee — before a fractured left fibula sidelined him for the season. He averaged nine tackles per game and had two quarterback sacks and a fumble recovery.

In 1986, Casillas led the Falcons with 111 tackles and one sack.

HOLDING OUT

Pittsburgh Steelers coach Chuck Noll is losing patience with the holdout of standout linebacker Mike Merriweather.

Merriweather, a three-time Pro Bowl linebacker, wants the Steelers to renegotiate a contract that would pay him $300,000 this season and $330,000 next year, plus $50,000 playing time bonuses each season.

"We want people who want to be here and want to play and want to help us win," Noll said Wednesday. "The only way I judge people are the people who are here to win."

The Steelers reportedly have offered to tear up the option year of Merriweather's contract, extend the contract for two years and double his salary to $600,000 a year.

Meanwhile, third-year linebacker Seth Joyner, the Philadelphia Eagles' last holdout, signed a three-year contract.

Minnesota Vikings center Kirk Lowdermilk ended his 26-day holdout and signed two one-year contracts.

Lowdermilk's signing leaves the Vikings with three holdouts: running back Darrin Nelson, defensive end Doug Martin and offensive tackle Gary Zimmerman. Martin and Zimmerman are unsigned free agents; Nelson wants a raise and an extension of his $400,000 contract.

Defensive end Lee Williams, the San Diego Chargers' sack leader in each of the past three seasons, ended his month-long holdout and signed a reported five-year contract.

Defensive lineman Doug Reed signed a two-year contract, ending a 27-day holdout and leaving the Los Angeles Rams with only one unsigned player 18 days before the season opener.

The Rams still must satisfy third-year guard Tom Newberry. He has two years left on a four-year deal, but is not happy with the way extension talks have gone.

The agent for Miami Dolphins holdout Mark Duper proposed a contract with higher incentive payments that he said could create a breakthrough in negotiations.

"I think we made a lot of headway," agent Dan Bakst said of Wednesday's negotiations. "We'd like to see Duper sign as early as (today)."

SEEING IS BELIEVING

Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wyche is a believer in contact lenses.

Wyche, who wears the lenses himself, credits contacts for defensive lineman Jim Skow's pass interception in Saturday night's 24-13 exhibition victory over Buffalo.

"Jim can barely see his hands in front of his face," Wyche said. "He has about as poor vision, I would say, as anybody we have. That was one of the first times he's worn them in a game, and he had a chance with the ball coming right at him. Before, the ball would have just been a big blur and he'd have been batting at it."

Wyche said other Bengals using the contacts include wide receiver Cris Collinsworth and offensive linemen Brian Blados and Anthony Munoz.

"Anthony Munoz will be wearing one lens this week, for the first time," Wyche said. "He's got one eye that's 20-20 and the other's not very good. He felt that if he could see a little more clearly he might do a better job."

SCHOLARLY CUT

Wide receiver Mike Lanese, who returned from England last month as a Rhodes Scholar, has been cut by the Cleveland Browns.

Lanese, hindered early in training camp by a pulled hamstring muscle, did not play in Cleveland's 23-3 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers last Saturday night.

"Even though I didn't make it with the Browns, it was a good experience and a lot of fun," Lanese said. "I always heard the Browns are a class organization and they didn't disappoint me. This is a team I believe can go to the Super Bowl."

GOOD-BYE TRAINING CAMP

The Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins, in exchange for a promise not to celebrate the end of training camp by trashing their Dickinson College dormitory rooms, have been allowed to leave camp two days early.

The final night of training camp usually is the time the veterans live out the phrase "boys will be boys." The rookies get blasted by fire extinguishers, buckets of water and shaving cream, and by early morning the dormitory usually resembles a battlefield.

But Coach Joe Gibbs figured the team would rather get home early than have that final fling.

"Coach Gibbs said that if we tear up the dorm or do anything to the rookies, we'd have to stay until Friday," guard R.C. Thielemann said. "Since we're leaving today, obviously we didn't do anything last night."

VICTORY NEEDED

Tampa Bay coach Ray Perkins says the team needs a taste of success in Saturday night's preseason game at Atlanta.

"You can say that about any team that hasn't won its first two games," Perkins said. "You'd like to win this game a lot more so than the first two. Still, it's not an all-telling thing. They know that. The main thing is not to get discouraged. I don't know if I've ever been discouraged. But, yes, I've been frustrated."

The Bucs have been outscored 43-10 in home exhibition losses to Indianapolis and Cleveland.

McCormick Is Following Her Path From '84 Games

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kelly McCormick, who overcame adversity to claim the 1984 Olympic silver medal in 3-meter springboard diving, is following the same path in her bid to earn a return trip to the 1988 Olympics.

McCormick moved into tonight's finals of the U.S. Olympic diving trials holding a slim advantage over her closest challengers for the two women's springboard berths on the U.S. team.

McCormick, 28, scored 528.90 points for her 10 dives in Wednesday's prelims. Wendy Williams, 21 and the reigning U.S. women's indoor and outdoor platform champion, was second with 513.57, and Tristan Baker-Schultz, this year's indoor and outdoor U.S. champion off the board, was third at 506.43.

"I was pretty happy. There was one dive that I didn't do up to par," said Baker-Schultz, 26. "I felt pretty good."

That dive was her seventh, a back 2½ somersault for which she received awards of 5.0 from five of the seven judges. Her total points for the dive were 42 and it dropped her to fifth place with only three dives remaining.

"I thought the pressure of the first event of the Olympic trials struck the whole field today," said Ron O'Brien, who will be the coach of the U.S. team in the Seoul Olympics. "Nobody was that steady."

The preliminary scores will be added to those recorded in tonight's finals, with the top two scorers securing a trip to Korea.

McCormick, an eight-time national springboard champion and the daughter of two-time Olympic springboard and platform gold medalist Patty McCormick, earned her Olympic medal after finishing first in the 1984 trials two weeks after suffering a back injury.

This year she's had a pulled calf muscle in her left leg that contributed to her placing 12th on the board in the national indoor championships. She didn't compete in last month's outdoor national championships.

"Her leg still isn't right," said her coach, Vince Panzano, who kept her away from the interview room after the prelims. "Her training has been limited this summer."

Panzano said McCormick suffered her injury in January while diving.

"It's the last step she puts down and that affects her hurdle to the end of the board and on inward dives when she stretches out," Panzano explained.

He estimated that McCormick was able to perform 100 percent mentally, but only 80 physically and was only able to do 75 percent of her normal training.

"She does the same dives she normally performs. It's the same thing as in 1984 when she had that back injury," Panzano said. "She's used to diving under adverse conditions."

McCormick moved ahead for good on her seventh dive, a back 2½ somersault with a 3.0 maximum degree of difficulty. She scored 71.10 points with a pair of 8.5 marks, two 7.5s and a 7 from the panel of seven judges.

"She got in pretty clean," said Panzano, who agreed with O'Brien that the competition is still wide open.

"None of the girls in the top six are out of it," Panzano said.

Also still in the race for the two Olympic spots in the event are Wendy Lucero with 501 points, Karen LaFace, 485.25; and 1982 world champion Megan Neyer at 481.50.

No Brash Predictions

Archer Using Realism Approach For LSU's 1988 Football Hopes

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University football coach Mike Archer says he's not being more cautious this year, just realistic.

Last year at this time, Archer was earning a reputation for brashness by talking about a national championship for LSU. The Tigers stumbled twice, tying Ohio State and getting upset by Alabama before finishing No. 5 in the national poll.

The loss to Alabama left LSU a half-game behind Auburn in the Southeastern Conference title chase.

The SEC race is tighter this year than he's ever seen it, Archer said.

"There's no clear-cut favorite," he said. "This is the first time I've seen that any team could win it. Any one of six teams could win it."

LSU lost 12 starters through graduation, and star tailback Harvey Williams is coming off knee surgery.

"Number one is what we're shooting for, of course. You always do," Archer said. "But you haven't heard me or our players talking about it as much this year."

"Last year, looking at the people we had, I think it was a realistic goal. This year, although it's still possible, you look at the people we lost, and it's not so realistic."

Williams rushed for 1,001 yards last season before getting his knee wrecked in the final game of the regular season. "That night in the Superdome, our doctors told me he would not be back this year," Archer said.

But the surgery was successful, and the junior tailback worked hard on rehabilitation. "He's been cleared by our doctors to start practice. Structurally, the knee has done tremendously. The biggest thing is the mental part," Archer said.

"He has some concerns, mentally. He's asked me a lot of questions, and that's natural."

Archer said he will probably ease Williams into full-scale workouts, the way the New Orleans Saints have done with running back Rueben Mayes: "Practice him, and if it gives him a problem, back off a bit."

Should Williams be slow returning to form, junior Eddie Fuller will start. Fuller averaged over six yards a carry in a relief role last season.

Less experienced are the replacements for departed wide receivers Wendell Davis and Rogie Magee. Davis was the SEC's leading receiver last season. He was a first-round pick of the Chicago Bears, and Magee went to the Bears in the ninth round.

The most experienced receiver returning, Tony Moss, had 11 catches for 217 yards last year, and Alvin Lee had two for 25 yards.

"This is a place where one of our young people could step in and play," Archer said. "Fortunately, that's a position where a freshman could play most easily."

It could be more difficult to replace All America center Nacho Albergamo, now in medical school, and All Southeastern Conference guard Eric Andolsek, now with the Detroit Lions.

Archer said a lot of attention will be given to pass protection in the preseason.

"If we give our guy time to throw, we'll be successful," he said.

"Our Guy" is junior quarterback Tom Hodson, who has thrown for 4,386 yards in two years as a starter, leading LSU to 9-3 and 10-1 seasons and earning All-SEC honors in a conference loaded with good quarterbacks.

Hodson is backed by talented senior Mickey Guidry and sophomore Sol Graves, giving Archer one comfort zone when he considers the depth chart.

Defensively, both inside linebacker spots and three of four spots in the secondary will be filled by letterman moving up on the depth chart.

"We've got some guys back there who can play. They just haven't," Archer said. "We just hope to get by the first three or four ball games and not give up the big play."

The kicking game is his biggest concern, he said. "Our field goal guy (David Browndyke) is, I believe, one of the best in college football. But we have to have to find a holder, a punter, a snapper and a kickoff man," he said.

LSU opens at home against defending Southwest Conference champion Texas A&M, then goes on a three-game road swing against Tennessee, Ohio State and Florida before returning home to meet defending SEC champion Auburn.

"The first five games — not to take anything away from the last six — will probably have a lot to say about the success of our season," Archer said. All five opponents are Top 20-caliber, he said, and three could be in the Top 10 at game time.

It's an exciting prospect, Archer said. "We open at home, 77,000 people, a ranked opponent; we go on the road before 90,000 and national television, 85,000 and national television, 72,000, then come home to 77,000," he said.

"If you don't get the adrenalin going for those kind of people before those kinds of crowds, you're in the wrong business."

Taylor The Triggerman

Husker Offense Drawing Comparison To '83 Squad

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The last time Nebraska coach Tom Osborne had as much firepower on offense as his year's team, his 1983 Cornhuskers shot holes in the NCAA and school record books on the way to a 2-1 record and a near-miss at a national championship.

That team had three All-Americans — quarterback Turner Gill, running back and Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier and wingback Irving Fryar. It opened with a 44-6 thrashing of Penn State in the first Kickoff Classic.

The 1988 team, which opens against Texas A&M in the Aug. 27 Kickoff Classic, has what some may look at as Triplets II, although only third-team All-American quarterback Steve Taylor has gained post-season honors to date.

Taylor has been referred to on the Nebraska campus as a Gill clone with his strong arm, quick feet and knack for creating big plays just when the defense believes it has him cornered.

"We feel very good about him because he has a lot of ability," Osborne said. "He's got a lot of experience ... probably about as good as he's going to get. We're not talking about the future with him."

It remains to be seen whether Taylor can lead his team to the lofty status of the 1983 Huskers, who still hold NCAA records for yards gained, 4 touchdowns and an average of seven touchdowns per game. But the senior quarterback will have a strong supporting cast.

Linebacker Ken Clark carried 11 times or 87 yards to lead the team in rushing in the first fall scrimmage. That prompted defensive coordinator Charlie McBride to compare the 5-foot-11, 200-pound junior speedster with Rozier.

"You can't tackle him," McBride said. "He's got a little of Mike Rozier in him. Maybe he's a little quicker, fiftier. I don't know about overall strength, right now, but he looked pretty good to me."

Wingback Dana Brinson has been making big plays for Nebraska for two seasons, but the speedy senior also has been troubled by injuries that limited his playing time. He averaged more than 101 yards per game in all-purpose yards a year ago.

But Clark and Brinson, with all their talents, don't have their jobs wrapped up. Clark is battling senior Tyreese Knox and redshirt sophomore Terry Rodgers, while Brinson used to battle past junior Richard Bell and senior Jamie Worden to regain his top spot after a slow spring.

Taylor also has a fleet of top-notch receivers in tight ends Todd Millikan and Monte Kratzstein, and split ends Morgan Gregory, Chip Bahe and Nate Turner. They go with bruising fullbacks Sam Schmidt and Bryan Carpenter.

Put all those scoring threats behind an offensive line that Osborne calls "pretty good" and you have a more than typical Nebraska offense.

The line is solid behind returning starters Jake Young at center, Andy Keeler at left guard and Bob Sledge at left tackle. Lettermen John Nelson and Doug Glaser hold down the right side.

If Osborne has any questions on offense, it would be development of depth in the line and whether the oft-injured Millikan can hold up.

Unlike the 1983 team, which had few stars on a defense that spent a lot of time on the field because of a quick-scoring offense, the 1988 Black Shirts say they will make life difficult for opponents this fall. Five starters return from a team that was eighth nationally in total defense a year ago.

The headliner is Broderick Thomas, an outside linebacker who earned second-team All-American honors a year ago. Jon Marco, a two-year letterman, and Mike Croel hold down the other side in what Osborne calls one of the strongest positions on the team. The 1987 team's leading tackler, LeRoy Etienne, is battling junior Randall Jobman for a starting strongside linebacker spot, while newcomer Pat Tyrance has come on as the No. 1 weakside linebacker.

The secondary has starters Lorenzo Hicks and Charles Fryar at the corners, and Mark Blazek at either safety or strong safety, although he entered the fall behind sophomore letterman Reggie Cooper at strong safety and senior Tim Jackson at safety. Osborne calls Cooper one of the best Nebraska has ever had at the position.

The most pressing question at Nebraska will be a rebuilt interior line on defense after losing top NFL prospects Neil Smith and Tim Rother at tackles. Ray Valladao is the only returnee with extensive playing time, but Osborne is placing his confidence in senior Willie Griffin, sophomore Joe Sims, sophomore Paul Brungard and junior Kent Wells to come through.

At nose guard, letterman Mike Murray returns and 1987 starter Lawrence Pete also came back after quitting the team in the spring. A throat infection caused Pete to miss all of fall two-a-day practices, however, so his status early is uncertain.

The kicking game also is solid with returnees John Kroeker doing the punting and Chris Drennan placekicking.

"I think right now on paper, this figures to be a good team," Osborne said.

Paterno Steps Into The Political Arena

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Penn State University football coach Joe Paterno had an answer to criticism that it was inappropriate for him to make a speech for George Bush: "Being a football coach doesn't make me a non-citizen."

Paterno delivered an ear-splitting second nominating speech for Bush at the Republican National Convention on Wednesday night, telling delegates, "I'll be damned if I'll sit still while people who can't carry George Bush's shoes ridicule him."

Pennsylvania Gov. Robert Casey had said it was "probably not a good thing for the university" for Paterno to make the televised appearance at the political convention.

Seth Williams, Penn State's student government president, said, "It's wrong for an academic institution to actually involve itself in partisan politics."

Bush heard about the controversy and telephoned Paterno last week and said, "Gee, I hope I didn't get you into a mess up there," the coach told reporters.

Paterno, 61, admitted he had second thoughts about giving one of the seven speeches on behalf of Bush's nomination, but decided to go forward because of his admiration for the vice president.

"Being a football coach doesn't make me a non-citizen," he told reporters before the speech.

In his speech, Paterno said, "I know a lot of you are wondering what an Italian-American football coach from Brooklyn is doing here. So am I. But, after 40 years of trying to help young men and women reach their potential as human beings, I'm here as an educator."

He compared Bush's "quiet, dignified confidence" to that of New York Yankees great Joe DiMaggio and retired Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton.

Asked before his two-minute address whether he had any second thoughts, Paterno replied, "To be frank with you, a little bit after the flak came out. And then I said, that's ridiculous because I really want to do it. Let me put it this way — because I have that kind of respect for Bush."

Paterno said that, if asked, he would even appear in a campaign commercial for Bush.

The coach's speech marked his return to the Superdome, where his football team has won one Sugar Bowl game and lost two. Paterno won his first national championship at the arena by beating Georgia in 1982.

Paterno dismissed suggestions that his speech could serve as a springboard into politics, saying he liked to participate in campaigns but has no personal political ambitions.

Study Shows VCRs Bring Family Together For TV

By FELIX GUTIERREZ
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — VCRs are turning television viewing into video campfire gatherings — kids and parents not only watching more prime-time TV together, but also talking to each other more, recent studies show.

"When a VCR comes into a household and the household has children, people tend to talk to each other more," said Southern Illinois University Professor Carolyn Lin, who has studied home video cultures since 1984.

"They have to negotiate about what videos to rent and when to play these videos," Ms. Lin explained. "If someone wants to 'time-shift' (record) a show for later viewing the person will have to get consent from the other people as well."

More communication is only one side effect of families adding video cassette recorders to their television sets. Although many homes have more than one set, VCRs are bringing people together to watch a single screen, much like the campfires of yesteryear.

In a survey of 233 VCR homes in three Midwestern communities, Ms. Lin found that after adding a video recorder 58 percent of the people spent more time watching TV with the family and 35 percent spent more time having video parties at home.

"Pre-recorded cassettes appear to have brought back 'family viewing' during prime time," said Debra Krayson of AGB Television Research. Prime time tape viewing "not only brings the family together but also appears to be a social event. AGB data show a significant number of guests in the audience."

AGB, a British-owned firm that recently withdrew from the battle for U.S. use of People Meter measurement of viewers per set, tracked national VCR recording and playback last April.

The number of prime-time viewers watching movies and other prerecorded tapes averaged nearly three persons per household, according to AGB. Regular prime-time TV programs averaged 1.7 persons per household.

Studies by academic and commercial researchers now provide a profile of the impact of VCRs, now found in 56 percent of U.S. homes. Just five years ago only 10 percent of households had video recorders, said Tom Lederback of the Electronic Industries Association Consumer Electronics Group.

VCRs were reported by nearly two-thirds of those polled in a Gallup survey of homes with telephones for the electronics trade group last Spring. Video recorders were second in popularity only to TV sets themselves, found in 99 percent of the households.

The Gallup survey found 78 percent of the households with children had VCRs; versus 63 percent of the two-adult homes and 40 percent of the singles.

Children are the VCRs' most avid users, spending 50 percent more time watching tapes than adults. According to the AGB study released last month, children under 18 spend an average of 3.4 hours a week watching videotapes, while adults average 2.3 hours weekly.

Teen-agers developed their own versions of video campfires, often watching tapes in groups at parties. Often they have little adult supervision, said Ms. Lin.

Despite parent group fears that racy adult videos are the biggest video moneymakers, 1987 Video Software Dealers Association figures show comedy and action-adventure tapes are tops with nearly 20 percent of the dollar-volume apiece. Adult videos rank fourth behind drama at 11.4 percent.

Though video stores have reigned as the place to find VCR tapes, more convenience stores, record shops, supermarkets, and bookstores are now stocking cassettes, according to a survey of the booming business released at the recent software dealers meeting in Las Vegas.

Bernstein's Dream: Good Singing Voice

By CAROLYN LUMSDEN
Associated Press Writer

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Leonard Bernstein says he would trade his considerable conducting and composing talents for a good voice.

"If I could get up on the stage and sing one phrase of Verdi or Bizet or Wagner so that people would be moved, I would give up everything for that," the nation's best-known composer said Wednesday.

"I can sing, but I empty rooms," he confessed.

The composer of "West Side Story" and "Candide" held a rare news conference at the Tanglewood Music Center to talk about the four-day extravaganza planned there next week in honor of his 70th birthday.

Among those at the celebration that starts on his birthday, Aug. 25, will be such friends as actress Lauren Bacall, diva Bevely Sills and record producer Quincy Jones. Actress Elizabeth Taylor and publisher Malcolm Forbes are planning to arrive in a hot-air balloon, Tanglewood officials said.

Bernstein, however, played down the festivities that organizers have promised will be one of the music world's great occasions.

"I'm not celebrating anything. I'm just at Tanglewood," he said, chain-smoking and sweating after a vigorous hour spent conducting the student orchestra in preparation for Sunday's performance of his "Songfest."

The flamboyant maestro, wearing a trademark red bandanna around his neck, forbade any mention of the word "birthday."

"Every time someone says that word I feel a year older."

Bernstein was a member of the original Tanglewood Music Center class of 1940, where he became a protégé of the festival's founder, Serge Koussevitzky.

"I feel I built the bloody place," he said Wednesday.

When Koussevitzky retired as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1949, he tried to have the young Bernstein named as his successor. The orchestra's trustees, however, considered Bernstein too young and tainted by popular music.

Bernstein declined Wednesday to sum up his prodigious accomplishments as recording artist, conductor, composer and musician.

"That's your problem," he told the 50 reporters and admirers at the news conference. "I'm too busy. I can't think about things like that, to assess myself or to place myself in various categories of ranks or to decide whether I've achieved everything or a portion or a fraction."

"I feel as though I've lived many, many lifetimes ... more than I had any right to expect."

He said the only birthday gift he wanted was more time to write music.

"I have everything. I am blessed and grateful. I have no further requests of fate except time. ... Of course, I'd like to see a few more grandchildren."

He refused to talk about the pieces he is working on, except to say he was collaborating with choreographer Martha Graham on a ballet and experimenting with "song cycles" and other vocal compositions.

 We have often been accused of being male chauvinist pigs. On some counts we plead guilty, but not when it comes to ability at the bridge table. Perhaps at the very top level the males are dominant, but nowhere else need the ladies hide their heads in shame.

This deal was played in a duplicate game many years ago. Sitting North-South were two of the great players of the time, Charles Lochridge and Lee Hazen. Sitting East-West were their respective spouses. The males reached four spades on the auction shown.

West, Sylvia Hazen, realized that she could not expect much from her partner. So she found the devilish opening lead of a low diamond away from her ace. Her spouse Lee did not expect such a dastardly maneuver, so he not unnaturally elected to run the opening lead to his ten. East's queen won, and a diamond was returned to the ace. West continued with a third diamond, taken on the table as declarer discarded a heart.

The percentage play in trumps was to take two finesses, but declarer decided instead to put some psychological pressure on West. He came to hand with the queen of hearts and led a low trump.

Without a moment's hesitation, West played low. Declarer finessed West's ten, East won the jack and shot back her last diamond. Now there was no way to prevent West for scoring her king of trumps for down one. As a result of this hand, the men finished fourth instead of first, while the ladies topped the East-West section.

Canadian Grain Exports Fall Before Long Drought

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — The rich soil of the Red River Valley normally produces 40 bushels of red spring wheat per acre, helping make Canada the world's second-largest wheat exporter. The drought of 1988 has changed that.

Farmer Glenn Whitmore, harvesting 300 acres in St. Norbert just south of Winnipeg, is getting just 10 bushels an acre from fields parched by the sun and infested with weeds and grasshoppers.

"Well, at least we've got the seed back," Whitmore, 35, said with resignation as he rode a mower over stunted foot-high stalks of wheat. "I don't know if there's any lessons in farming. You just take it one year at a time."

Things are worse in southern Saskatchewan, the country's major wheat producer. Many farmers failed to get any crop at all in conditions likened to the dust bowl of the 1930s.

Wheat and barley yields overall will be 50 percent below normal.

In Alberta, Canada's other breadbasket province, the weather has been whimsical to the point of perversity. Southern areas felt the full impact of the drought while farmers in the northern Peace River region had 22 inches of rain and could collect bumper crops if their fields dried out long enough for harvesting.

Across the prairies, experts predict a harvest down at least 30 percent from last year, and that means Canada's 105,000 grain farmers will find it harder to fill orders from the Soviet Union, Japan, China and other traditional markets.

"It's a terrible year," said John

Morris of the Canadian Wheat Board, the Winnipeg-based government marketing agency for prairie grain. "We're going to have substantially reduced exports."

After selling 31.6 million metric tons of wheat and other prairie grain last year, earning about $2.5 billion despite a global price war, there may be just 15 million metric tons available for export this year.

A metric ton is equivalent to 2,205 pounds or 1.1 short tons.

One of the major grain cooperatives, United Grain Growers Ltd., estimated Wednesday that the 1988 harvest of six major grains will total 31.7 million metric tons, only 69 percent of last year's 45.9 million tons.

The reduction is even greater in comparison with the record 51.4 million metric tons harvested in the West two years ago.

"It's sort of worse than people had hoped or thought," said United Grain official George Weaver. "Farmers that thought they might get 15 to 20 bushels an acre found they were getting 12 to 15."

The company forecast a wheat harvest of 15.3 million metric tons, down 40 percent, while barley and rye harvests will be 40 to 50 percent of normal in many areas.

"We went into the season with virtually no snow or moisture reserves in the soil," said Dave McIntyre of the Alberta Wheat Pool, "and some areas have still seen virtually no rain since that August."

Things appear much brighter for the floor traders at the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange who have handled record volume this summer as speculators gambled on the future price of grain and prices almost doubled.

"I've never seen so much action," said Bill Craddock, an independent dealer who also farms 3,000 acres of wheat, barley, canola and flax.

He said the wildcard in the market is the farmer who's been able to fill his bins with grain but may let prices rise further before selling any of it. "A lot of farmers are just holding on," Craddock said.

Most farming towns across the Canadian prairies became towns because of the local grain elevator and railroad loading bay, but the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta wheat pools expect to handle just 60 percent of normal traffic this season because of the drought.

That could have a devastating impact on isolated communities where elevators are closed down, while the reduced volume also threatens jobs at grain-handling ports such as Thunder Bay and along the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Drought-Boosted Prices Cutting Subsidies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices for drought-reduced commodities and cutbacks in subsidy payments will mean a two-year saving of $10.6 billion for major farm price support programs, according to Agriculture Department projections.

When USDA's proposed operating budget was sent to Congress last February, net price support outlays by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. were estimated at $17.7 billion for the current year and $17.1 billion for the fiscal year that will begin Oct. 1.

The revised estimates, based upon a "mid-session review" of USDA budget figures, are tentative and still subject to revision. However, as of now, they call for commodity price support spending to drop this year to around $13.1 billion and in fiscal 1989 to $11.1 billion.

Spending on farm supports soared to a record $25.8 billion in 1986, the first year of a new farm law passed in 1985. The law authorized gradual reductions in "deficiency payments" made to farmers when market prices are depressed. It also allowed other adjustments, including the lowering of basic price support loan rates for major commodities.

Outlays for support edged down to $22.4 billion in 1987 but were expected to decline more in future years as lower adjustments were made in the law's various formulas, including reduced dairy supports.

But rising exports, followed by drought this year, boosted commodity prices sharply. That has lessened the need for large deficiency payments for some crops.

Not all commodities have shared in the expected cost reduction. Some programs, including cotton and rice, will be more costly to operate in the coming year.

But the anticipated savings in direct payments to farmers was an important arguing point in favor of the recent $3.9 billion drought relief measure signed Aug. 11 by President Reagan. Corn, soybeans and spring wheat areas have been the hardest hit.

According to a summary provided at the request of The Associated Press, most of the $10.6 billion in savings this year and next will come as a result of reduced payments to producers of feed grains, which include corn, sorghum, oats and barley.

Feed grains payments in fiscal 1987 totaled nearly $14 billion. This year's payments are expected to decline to $8.2 billion and in 1989 those will drop to less than $2.73 billion, according to the estimates.

Last February, USDA budget analysts said feed grains payments might be about $12.6 billion this year and $11.1 billion in 1989.
