Temps Hit 100 Degrees ... And Then Some

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

There is at least one thing man and animal have in common — the desire to be cool in 100-plus degree temperatures.

The mercury hit, then flew past 100 degrees in Pitt County and many parts of the state Thursday, reaching a local high of 104 degrees at the Greenville Utilities Commission weather center.

Hot conditions caused many humans to slow their pace but agricultural officials said livestock appeared to be holding up.

"I haven't heard any reports on a lot more death loss than we've been having" because of the heat, said Phillip Rowan, livestock agent with the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

"It's common to lose quite a lot of broilers (young chickens) in the barn this time of year.

"With livestock, cattle and swine, we're having some problems. It's not death loss," Rowan said. "With cattle, they're having problems not milking as well. It's just a matter of the farmers being able to cool the building. When it's over 100 degrees, you can use all you've got and it's still going to be hot on them. They're under a little more stress, they don't eat as well so they don't perform as well."

Tobacco agent Mitch Smith said, "I don't think the high temperature is especially detrimental on tobacco. Hot, humid nights are ideal for the crop. Heat and humidity during the night time really gives our tobacco what's necessary to go through these changes. It has a unique ability to withstand a lot of dry weather and high humidity."

"We didn't really have any major problems to speak of," said Roger Jones, director of electric systems at Greenville Utilities.

"There were scattered individual calls," he said, but they only amounted to about 10.

"We set a record demand as well as CP&L (Carolina Power & Light)," Jones said. "We peaked out at about 199.6 megawatts, which is an all-time high for us. CP&L had 8521 megawatts. We peaked between 4 and 5 in the afternoon. Our load management was in operation to hold down cost.

"If we get through this weekend, hopefully we've seen the worse of the summer," he said.

Today's temperatures should range in the mid to upper 90s, and there is a chance for scattered showers, forecasters said. Saturday and Sunday should see upper 80s to mid 90 temperatures with the likelihood of showers, according to weather observers.

Temperatures soared past the 100-degree mark all across North Carolina Thursday, matching the all-time at Raleigh-Durham Airport and smothering Fort Bragg under a sultry 106 degrees.

The 105-degree reading at Raleigh-Durham International Airport tied the previous all-time high set on July 23, 1952. RDU has kept weather records since 1887.

"It's just extremely warm," said Master Sgt. Michael Hartt, a public information officer at Fort Bragg.

"When you walk out, you feel it. You know it's there."

"Basically we are under a very, very warm and stable high pressure area," said Michael Sabones, meteorologist with the weather service at RDU.

"The stable part simply means that the atmosphere is not going to allow much cloudiness or many storms to form, and that only means more sunshine," he said.

Raleigh street vendor Martha Bryan knew it was hot Thursday. She ran out of her daily five-gallon supply of lemonade and iced tea shortly

Police Challenged In Bandits' Chase

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A bank robber fired the bullet that killed an 18-year-old woman hostage, one of three people who died in a 54-hour crime spree across West Germany and the Netherlands, officials said today.

West German media said if police had moved sooner, they may have prevented the deaths. Two bank robbers and a woman accomplice, who hijacked a bus at one point with 30 people aboard, left a trail of terror across Germany and the Netherlands before police captured them Thursday in a shootout near Bonn.

Hostage Silke Bischof, 18, squeezed next to one of the gunmen with a pistol pointed at her head, had spoken to reporters Thursday while the getaway car was parked in downtown Cologne. She said she was being treated well but that she feared someone would be killed if police moved in to end the hostage crisis.

Two hours later, she was killed in the gun battle with police, who set off flash bombs to stop the getaway car on a busy highway. The other hostage in the car, also a woman, was injured.

One of the gunmen, Hans-Juergen Roesner, 31, was shot in the thigh, said Reinhard Schmidt-Kuentzel, a spokesman for the North Rhine-Westphalia Interior Ministry. The other gunman, Dieter Degowski, 32, and Marion Irma Loeblich, the accomplice, were not injured, he said. All three were under arrest.

"We are 99 percent certain that Degowski fired the shot that killed Silke Bischof," he said. "We know one of the two gunmen killed her."

Earlier, a 15-year-old Italian boy held hostage and a police officer died in the bizarre drama. Reports said the boy died trying to protect his sister. "Did they have to die? Shouldn't the police have moved in much earlier?" the mass-circulation Bild newspaper asked in a front-page editorial.

Police gave the bank robbers two getaway cars and hundreds of thousands of dollars in efforts to persuade them to free their hostages and surrender. The shooting sprees and car chases left at least five people injured.

"Police should have acted much more decisively and swiftly," said Heinz Guenther, a lawmaker with Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Party.

Bush Vows 'We're Going To Win' As Nominees Open Fall Campaign

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush plunged into his campaign for president today, proclaiming "we're going to win this election," while embattled running mate Dan Quayle tried to fend off a controversy over his military record by making light of it.

Quayle, a conservative senator from Indiana, has been dogged by questions about whether he used family influence to get into the National Guard at the height of the Vietnam War, virtually assuring he would avoid combat.

Bush, still buoyed by the rave reviews for his convention speech, made no mention of the Quayle controversy, focusing instead on his own self-proclaimed underdog campaign for the White House.

"Now we start. Now comes the beginning of the end, and last night there was a shifting of the gears," Bush said, adding that he had received a congratulatory telephone call from President Reagan last night after accepting the GOP presidential nomination.

Bush said he was convinced that with the party behind him, "We are going to win this election."

He and Quayle appeared at a Republican National Committee affair before setting out for Quayle's hometown of Huntington, Ind., where a big welcoming rally awaited them. Bush told the Republicans "You have given us a tremendous sendoff. I can't think of a better way to get out of town." Quayle got a warm reception at the breakfast, receiving even more applause than Bush.

From Indiana, Bush will point his campaign toward big battlefield states for the November election, visiting Ohio, Illinois, Washington state, Oregon, California and Texas in a non-stop blitz through Wednesday.

"I know that what it all comes down to, this election — what it all comes down to, after all the shouting and the cheers, is the man at the desk" in the Oval Office "and who should sit at that desk," Bush told cheering delegates in a convention windup speech Thursday night.

"My friends, I am that man," Bush said.

Although speechmaking is not Bush's strong suit, he delivered his remarks with strength, confidence and poise.

"He hit it. He hit it out of the park," exulted Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. "For me, it was (a question of) survival, the speech of his life and he did it." Massachusetts delegate Joyce Hampers called it "a grand slam."

Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr said: "It

Pakistani Says Plane Sabotaged

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A government minister said today that sabotage was almost certainly the cause of a fiery plane crash that killed President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq and U.S. Ambassador Arnold Raphel.

But a government information officer discounted all speculation on the cause of the explosion and crash, which also killed 28 others.

The country, meanwhile, was preparing for Zia's funeral, scheduled Saturday at the world's largest mosque, Faisal Masjid. A grave was dug for him today on the lawn in front of the mosque.

Across the border in India, authorities lifted curfews in two towns on the India-Pakistan border after police clashed with Moslems protesting Zia's death.

India, which is mainly Hindu, and Pakistan, which is Moslem, are long-time adversaries and have fought three wars since they both gained independence from Britain in 1947.

Security forces today fired warning shots in the air to disperse crowds that violated the restrictions, but no one was hurt, they said. On Thursday, police killed four Moslems and wounded more than 100 others trying to set fire to Hindu homes, shops and temples.

Quayle Jokes At Guard Record As Critics Call For His Removal

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sen. Dan Quayle today poked fun at the controversy over his entry into the National Guard during the Vietnam War by introducing himself to party leaders in mock military fashion as if addressing a superior.

Quayle, who appeared with George Bush at a Republican National Committee meeting the morning after the GOP national convention unanimously ratified him as the vice presidential nominee, said jokingly that he had learned how to introduce himself on the campaign trail.

Then Quayle snapped to attention, and in loud, staccato-like military diction, said: "I stand at attention. Name: Dan Quayle. Serial number 303 50 4096. Indiana National Guard. Six years and proud of it." The audience applauded.

Quayle proceeded to praise Bush, the presidential nominee, before the two men headed out on the campaign trail, traveling first to Indiana, Quayle's home state.

The Indiana senator promised answers today to questions over what influence his family used to secure his entry into the National Guard. The issue tarnished Quayle's selection as the No. 2 on the GOP ticket even before he was nominated Thursday night.

Aides to Bush spent much of the day debating a response to the furor and denying any thought of replacing Quayle on the ticket.

"There's nothing we feel Sen. Quayle misled us on," Bush cam-

Burmese Students Protest Civilian As New President

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Burma's attorney general, Maung Maung, today was named chairman of Burma's ruling party and president, state-run radio said. The American-educated lawyer is the country's first civilian leader in 26 years.

Student leaders rejected the choice and called for a nationwide strike to press for an end to one-party rule, a Western diplomat in Rangoon said.

Burma's official Radio Rangoon said that Maung Maung, 63, was selected during emergency meetings of the central committee of the Burma Socialist Program Party and of the People's Assembly, Burma's parliament. The radio was monitored in Bangkok.

"Students have called for a nationwide strike on Monday," the Western diplomat said by telephone from Rangoon, the capital. "They're agitating for abolition of one-party rule. The more militant (student) leaders are disappointed."

He said students called for the strike in leaflets circulated during a peaceful rally in front of Rangoon General Hospital. Japan's Kyodo news service, reporting from Rangoon, said 15,000 people took part in the rally.

Maung Maung is one of only two civilians in the top ranks of the government hierarchy.

His selection was a surprise. Most

ECU Classes Open On Monday

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Thousands of students are making the return trip to Greenville this week in preparation for the beginning of classes at East Carolina University in the fall 1988 semester which get under way Monday.

William Shires, director of the East Carolina University News Bureau, said total enrollment at the university for the upcoming semester "is expected to be 15,300. This represents an increase of 418 over the enrollment for the fall 1987 semester, or a 2.8 percent increase."

Student dormitories opened Wednesday "and students have been moving in at a steady pace since," Shires said.

"Again this year, students are able to make any registration changes by a computer on-line registration system within the department office of the students' major area of study," Shires said. "This really is a big help in avoiding the former long lines that we used to have. That's especially good considering the hot weather we're having now."

"Because of the enrollment growth," Shires said, "the university has been authorized 36 new faculty members in academic divisions, and 57 new faculty positions in the school of medicine, the allied health and science programs and the nursing department."

Some of the newly authorized positions, Shires pointed out, "have been filled, while others are still to be filled. Some of those chosen as new faculty members have not yet arrived, but will be coming in soon."

Situations that will have a major impact on campus at an early date, Shires said, include "the expected completion of the new addition to Mendenhall Student Center by early spring, which will double the size of the facility, a much needed addition of space."

"The doubling of parking fees on campus is something that will affect both students and faculty. The fee has been increased from $25 to $50. Parking in university designated parking lots off campus, however, remains free."

The increased fees, along with other funds, Shires said, "will be used to help pay for repaving streets on campus and to provide for nearly 1,000 additional parking spaces planned on campus. Plans for this project are drawn up with the project to get under way soon."

Commenting on downtown traffic problems resulting from the arrival of students for the fall semester, Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond said that "so far, everything has been normal, much as it has been in past years at this time. We've not have any major problems so far."

Tourism Bureau Expanding Staff

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Al Nichols, director of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Bureau, is currently advertising for a receptionist, and he says he hopes to fill the new position by Sept. 15.

The convention and visitors authority has approved the description of the position, which was drafted by Nichols after the authority rejected a personnel plan he introduced last month.

The new position, which includes secretarial, clerical and receptionist work, parallels the county's job description for a clerk-typist III. Starting pay is set at $12,506 annually.

"We are not a full-fledged county organization," Nichols said. "But we have tried ... to make the positions fit county government as clearly as we can."

This position was approved after the authority rejected Nichols' proposal last month to promote Kim Henley to assistant director and hire a clerk-typist.

Ms. Henley, hired in early April, currently serves as Nichols' administrative assistant. She assists Nichols with bureau projects and also performs some clerical and receptionist duties. Her salary is set at $18,000 a year.

Ms. Henley's pay will remain the same under the plan approved last week, Nichols said, putting the total amount the bureau has budgeted for salaries in fiscal 1989 at $74,506 — or 31 percent of the bureau's $240,000 annual budget.

Nichols receives $40,000 a year in salary and the authority has budgeted $4,000 for temporary help. Nichols said the bureau will not always need a temporary employee to staff the office after the new person is hired, but temporaries will probably be used for special projects. The additional staff member will give Ms. Henley more freedom to work on high-level projects, Nichols said.

"It means she can concentrate more on the convention services program, which she coordinates," Nichols said. "It also allows her to get involved with sales work."

At the authority's July meeting, Nichols began discussing the proposed promotion during the open portion of the meeting, and he said he wanted to create an Administrative Officer III position for Ms. Henley.

"It makes sense to me to promote her and get on with the staff development and organization," Nichols said at the July meeting. "It makes sense to me."

There is no Administrative Officer III position listed in the county's pay scale, according to Assistant County Manager John Bulow, but the salary for an Administrative Officer II begins at $23,556 and would increase to $25,948 in 18 months.

Bulow said the top pay possible for a level II officer is $38,350, and he said it would be "very very rare" for anyone to start out with a level II job.

But before the authority could act on Nichols' proposal at the July meeting, authority Chairman Rudy Alexander stopped Nichols and told him such personnel matters should be discussed after the meeting in executive session.

The following day Nichols said the authority rejected his proposal to promote Ms. Henley and hire a clerk-typist, and he said he should not have brought her matter up in an open meeting.

Hilton Hosts Meeting Planners

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Hilton Inn in Greenville is rolling out the red carpet today for 10 meeting planners from across the state that have never booked large meetings in Pitt County.

"Some of them are actually directors of associations, some are just the corporate meeting planner for large corporations," said Rhessa Tucker, director of sales and marketing for the Hilton. "They are planning meetings for their particular association or their company."

"One or two have been in this area before," she said, "but not with the large regional convention we're after."

Ms. Tucker said the Hilton staff will entertain the meeting planners this weekend and attempt to sell them on the advantages of bringing statewide conventions to Greenville.

Hotels in the area have been the chief beneficiaries of the sharp increase in travel and tourism in Pitt County in recent years, and the hospitality industry generated $63 million in the county in last year.

But the project this weekend — a marketing tool called a familiarization trip — will be the first ever sponsored by a Greenville hotel, Ms. Tucker said.

Hotels in larger cities usually host meeting planners, but Ms. Tucker said Greenville has missed out on the large conventions in the past because no hotel was large enough to attract big groups.

"We're trying to put Greenville on the map as a place to hold large conventions for people all over the state," she said.

According to Ms. Tucker, marketing surveys show that people have two main questions about Greenville: they want to know if there is a hotel big enough for a convention and they want to know where the city of Greenville is.

First Hilton officials explained to prospective clients that their facility has 141 rooms and can accommodate conventions of up to 600 people, Ms. Tucker said, and next they had to convince meeting planners to come visit the city.

Officials from the N.C. Hospital Association, the N.C. Medical Society, General Motors Parts, Blue-Cross Blue-Shield of North Carolina and six other groups are to attend a cocktail party tonight and stop in at a local nightclub.

Saturday the meeting planners will visit the medical complex and take a riding tour around the major businesses on Industrial Boulevard. Ms. Tucker said industrial conventioners are often interested in touring Burroughs Wellcome and Grady White Boats.

The groups will also visit the Village of Yesteryear, picnic at River Park North and get a chance to shop at Carolina East Mall, The Plaza and Arlington Village.

Magazine Features Local Area

Greenville, Pitt County and East Carolina University are featured in the August edition of "We the People of North Carolina" magazine, which says in one of its articles, "Many believe Greenville has the opportunity to be a model city for the state of North Carolina."

Published monthly by the Raleigh-based North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry, the cover of the edition is a view of Wright Circle and Wright Building on ECU's main campus by university photographer Tony Rumble, with an inset showing Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the medical center's EastCare helicopter.

In a feature story titled "Becoming The Anchor City For Eastern North Carolina," Mark Rosenberg and Nancy Ingalls cite Greenville's "growth-oriented attitude," educational opportunities, medical facilities and quality of life which they term as "exceptional."

Another article, "It Can And It Must Be A Catalyst for Change," by Karen Edmiston Simmons, a writer for the ECU News Bureau, cites the growth of the state's third largest university, the school's commitment to provide a quality education, its outreach programs (such as the Regional Development Institute and the Center for Applied Technology) and the impact of the growth of the School of Medicine and Pitt Memorial Hospital has had on health care in eastern North Carolina.

Doctors Join ECU Faculty

ECU News Bureau
Two new faculty members have joined the cardiac surgery program at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, giving the program four surgeons.

Dr. Samuel B. Pollock Jr. and Dr. Paul A. Spence, specialists in adult cardiothoracic surgery, were named to assistant professor positions at ECU. They will be a part of the surgery team responsible for the nearly 500 cardiac surgical procedures performed annually at the medical center.

Pollock, a Madisonville, Ky., native, was chief resident in cardiothoracic surgery at the University of Alabama in Birmingham before his appointment. He is a graduate of the University of Kentucky College of Medicine, and received his undergraduate education at Duke University in Durham.

He completed his residency training in general surgery and a three-year cardiac surgery fellowship at the University of Alabama-Birmingham. Following his fellowship, he became cardiac and renal procure-and Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal. He then continued his medical education as a general surgery resident and fellow at the University of Toronto and St. Michael's Hospital. His residency included training in both vascular and cardiovascular surgery at Toronto General Hospital.

Lyme Disease

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Doctors at an Asheville hospital said they were treating what may be the first case of Lyme disease contracted by a Buncombe County resident within the county.

Tony Agan, 30, of Asheville, a laundry and linen processor at the hospital, was diagnosed with the illness that is transmitted by deer ticks after he noticed a rash on his left leg Thursday morning.

Physicians at Memorial Mission Hospital said they were able to make a clinical diagnosis when they learned that Agan had been bitten by a tick Aug. 7 while walking along the French Broad River.

Election Picket

"I'm trying to let the people know we don't think they are being fair," George Garrett — with a sign reading "Justice For Concerned Citizen Voters" hanging from his neck — said this morning.

Garrett, who will be 84 on Oct. 15, was picketing the Pitt County Board of Elections office at the intersection of Second and Cotaiche streets.

"I'm trying to stay in the shade," Garrett said. He said his purpose was to call attention to the disputed election for a seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in which his brother, D.D. Garrett, seemingly won over James Dupree by two votes.

But the election is still in question. The results of a county elections board hearing Wednesday will be reviewed by the State Board of Elections next week.

That board could declare Garrett the winner, order a new election — as Dupree has asked — or order more hearings.

"I'm representing a citizen," Garrett said. And "I will stick it out. I'm doing it until justice is done."

"We're concerned about what happens to us," Garrett said. "I thought we had made progress" in the area of civil rights and equal opportunity, "but this very little thing right here can cause friction between the races."

Hearing Set For Student

A D.H. Conley student accused of possessing a loaded sawed off shotgun on the J.H. Rose campus this summer is to be arraigned in Pitt County Superior Court Sept. 19 on a felony weapons charge.

Ehyim Mohamad Youssef, 16, of 2106 Charles St. was charged Aug. 2 with possessing a weapon of mass destruction and possessing a weapon on school grounds after Greenville police found the weapon in Youssef's gym bag.

He was released on a $500 bond and is to remain free pending arraignment.

Youssef was attending a countywide session of summer school held at Rose, and police say Youssef claimed he carried the gun to school to protect himself.

'Nude' Signs Get New Cover

Will C. Morgan has been covered up on the three billboards in the Greenville area promoting the Carpet Bargain Center on Dickinson Avenue.

The billboard, sporting Morgan's head and a body — not his — wearing nothing but a tiny bathing suit, drew complaints that the image of the semi-nude figure was inappropriate.

But William French, head of the agency that designed the ad, said the billboard was done "with humor in mind."

French could not be contacted today. But Don Pierce, manager of the Naegele Outdoor Advertising Companies office in Raleigh said this morning that all three billboards "have been covered ... with some type of public service ad."

"The client, the advertiser, is having the poster redone and it will probably go back up," according to Pierce, who said "I don't know what changes are being made."

Barbara Puryear, manager of the Carpet Bargain Center, confirmed that the billboards have been covered. "I don't know why. My understanding is that the Naegele Company had it covered up."

And she said, "I want my sign back up."

Holy Mission

Holy Mission United Holy Church in Greenville will host a women's conference Saturday at 10 a.m.

The theme will be "The Calling of Women and Their Roles in God and the World" and speakers will include Helen Locust of Faith and Victory Church and Roebud Prayer, pastor of Church of the Rock.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Smoking Ban

Compromises Among The Options

Smoke or not?

In our tobacco-producing area, public officials have been reluctant to ban smoking in public buildings. Tobacco for many decades was the mainstay of our economy and, while other economic forces are now at work in Pitt County, tobacco income is still vital.

Cigarettes have long been under attack throughout the nation, and locally it was viewed as giving aid to the enemy to kick smoking in any way.

Inevitably, however, there has to be some accommodation between smokers and nonsmokers, even in an area where tobacco has been king and is still important.

Dr. Tim Monroe, director of the Pitt County Health Department, has presented some carefully worded policies to county commissioners for limiting smoking in Pitt County offices. His board recommended by a 5-1 vote a policy to ban all smoking in the health department. The county commissioners, however, seem to feel that a uniform policy should be developed for all county offices.

Options would be smoking only in designated lounge areas, banning smoking in patient-client areas by allowing designated lounge smoking and smoking in office shared by employees who do not object. A third, more lenient option, would be banning smoking in patient-service and general-use areas, but allowing it in other areas.

The county commissioners have an unenviable task. Clearly the smokers versus nonsmokers controversy has reached Pitt County, and many of the people who object to smoking have never had any connection with the production of tobacco.

Smokers, here as elsewhere, feel their rights are being abridged since many other personal pursuits are not being restricted.

No doubt there is an area of compromise. An answer should be found among the options now before the county commissioners.

Choosing A Mate

Quayle Faces Test Of Time

It is virtually always the presidential nominee's right to choose his vice presidential running mate.

Republican presidential nominee George Bush exercised that right in a peculiar way last week and chose Sen. Dan Quayle, a good looking, youthful Midwestern conservative.

What puzzled observers was the timing of the announcement. Bush, who had played the vice presidential running mate game to the maximum, suddenly made his announcement late Tuesday afternoon catching most of the GOP convention and the nation by surprise.

In choosing Quayle, Bush had passed over the better known Bob Dole, Elizabeth Dole and Jack Kemp. That, in fact, was the reason he gave for the rush announcement of the Quayle choice — because he had begun to tell the people under consideration that they would not be his choice.

Quayle, following the announcement, ran into immediate controversy about his service in the National Guard during the Vietnam War era. His early response was not seen by some observers as helping the situation, thus raising questions about lack of experience to handle the rough and tumble of a national campaign.

Bush, however, is counting on Quayle's relative youth, good looks and other assets to help the ticket. The fact that he is not so well known nationally can be positive in that he will not make so a large target in the campaign.

Presidential candidates have sometimes chosen well known and powerful running mates to help their campaigns, as John Kennedy did in choosing Lyndon Johnson.

At other times the candidates have been less well known when they were picked, as Franklin Roosevelt's choice of Harry S Truman for his fourth term.

Running mates are selected for strategic reasons and George Bush feels that Dan Quayle will help bring in the baby-boomer and women votes. His choice was unquestioned by the GOP convention. Time will tell how wise it was.

—Richard Cohen—

A Mouth Full Of Marbles

NEW ORLEANS—At last I have something in common with a national politician. In 1969, both Dan Quayle and I were in the National Guard. That, though, seems to be the end of the similarity. I know why I joined while Dan Quayle seems to have forgotten why he joined. Maybe I can refresh his memory: It was a way to avoid the draft.

At his inaugural press conference here, Quayle stuffed his mouth full of marbles when he was asked why he joined the Guard. His bouncy enthusiasm seemed to drain from him. He mentioned a younger brother who had enlisted in the Marines — heroism by co-sanguinity. He mentioned his six years of service. We veterans of the National Guard know of what he speaks: six months of active duty and the rest — five and one-half years — of reserve duty. That entailed (depending on the unit) two weeks of summer training and monthly meetings. Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman would not have called the experience hell.

And that was the whole idea. By 1969, the United States was involved in Vietnam. To either enlist in the Army, or be drafted, likely meant service in Vietnam. For some of us, it meant fighting in a cause we either did not believe in or about which we had grave questions. It meant fighting for a policy that seemed wrong. It meant killing or being killed for a cause that seemed then — and still does now — to be wrong.

But Quayle said nothing about that. In fact, he clumsily refused to say why he had chosen the Guard — a legal option, after all — instead of active duty. He started by reciting the unexceptional fact that he had been born in a small town and that, like most small-town kids, he wanted to receive an education. (Does he think big-city kids want something different?) Then, having trotted out his Andy Hardy credentials, he said that he also wanted a wife, children and career. So, too, did the men and women whose names are carved into the Vietnam Memorial in Washington — the dead for which Quayle says he has "affection." And then Quayle said something stunning:

"I did not know in 1969 that I would be in this room today, I'll confess."

But he was. And Quayle's inability or downright refusal to account for where he was during the war says something about him. Combat in Vietnam was not, for most people, something to add to their resume, as another credential. In fact, most of the people who fought in Vietnam have only that as a credential. It was a war fought by the poor, by the underclass, by young men who could not, as Quayle could, get into a National Guard unit (by 1969, that was hard to do) or who never even knew the option existed. We Guardsmen were a proud bunch. But we were also privileged and well-educated — and knew how to legally avoid fighting a war we didn't believe in.

Had Quayle said he wanted to avoid the draft, it would have been fine. Had he said he did not think Vietnam worth dying or killing for, that too would have been fine. But he said nothing of the sort. Instead, he suggested that he served for six years — an attempt to have it both ways.

This is hypocrisy. This is what Vietnam was all about — at least the opposition to the war. The heart of the domestic protest was indignation at sending young men to their death to fulfill the anti-communist zealotry of the American foreign-policy establishment.

Now that same establishment talks the same line; only this time the venue of the jungle has been changed — Nicaragua instead of Vietnam. At this convention, the taking of Grenada is extolled; the bombing of Libya is praised. Each was a debatable action, and each cost the lives of Americans.

At their joint press conference, Vice President Bush introduced his running mate as a generational candidate, the first national candidate to be born after World War II. But that hardly seems to be the case. The defining experience of Quayle's generation was Vietnam — either the combat experience or the agony of how to avoid it. It raised profound questions about the role of America in the world, about when and under what circumstances force should be used.

To some of us, it taught a hard, bitter lesson about the limits of power and whether, in Quayle's terms, you sacrifice education, career, family when the national security of the United States is not directly menaced. When Quayle had to make that choice, he opted out. Now he exudes martial music.

Nothing in what Quayle said gives the slightest indication that he has given these matters much thought. Having avoided conscription and therefore the chance of combat, he has now joined the cheerleaders. The life he once valued, the education he so craved, the family he cherishes — all these were denied those who fought and died in one of mankind's sillier wars — our own Afghanistan.

On the basis of his press conference remarks, Dan Quayle is not the man Bush has advertised. He is not merely young. He is callow.

To the editor:

Recently George Bush and other Republicans have attacked Gov. Michael Dukakis for wanting to "weaken" our national defense and "undermine" our freedom. This reflects the conservative Republican notion that a strong national defense is only achievable by giving a blank check to the Pentagon.

To these people, anyone who questions or opposes some new, exorbitantly priced military hardware is ready to give the U.S. over to the "commies" tomorrow. That's just simple minded rhetoric. The Regan administration's military buying program has led to monumental deficits. Too many of these weapons systems end up way over cost projections and no where near as efficient or reliable as promised. Does this wastefulness make for a strong defense?

Let the Veep and the duke debate the specific pros and cons of these weapons and let the American people decide who makes the most sense. A lot of us are tired of this same old conservative rhetoric.

To the editor:

Everyone claiming to be a Christian needs to be on the alert. Universal Studios has filmed the controversial film, "The Last Temptation of Christ." Christians know Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour and the second person of the Trinity, but this shows the following about Jesus as quoted from a recent letter of the American Family Association's Stop Universal Studio's Project:

"He is a fornicator. He is a weak, unstable traitor to the Jews. He is one who curses the poor and sick. He marries Mary Magdalene and tells her, 'I worship you. God sleeps between your legs.' He believes he is the devil: 'I haven't been in my right mind. I am Lucifer.'"

Evidently, this filming is to blaspheme the name of Jesus Christ and make money. If Universal Studios refuses to respect Christians and their faith and not withdraw the film, it could result in millions of persons boycotting theaters to get a message to them. Persons of all faiths desire respect, which is certainly denied Christians in showing this film. The reasoning shown by Universal Studios, when analyzed, borders on the "Lunatic Fringe." The showing of this film can certainly damage the image of the United States.

Well-meaning persons defending showing of this film under the guise of "Constitutional freedoms," may not be concerned about its quality or contents. The interesting thing about this line of thought is, the film should not be challenged, only defended. This results in "censorship" in complete reverse.

To help in prevention of this film being shown, contact your local theater and Universal Studios, 100 Universal Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608, phone 818-777-1000. I have personally contacted them and registered my complaint.

To the editor:

This is in reference to the article in your paper on July 28 about the "Adult Day Care Centers Continue To Grow." I think the article was great. But I think someone needs to do an article about the one we have here in our own hometown. It is called the Creative Living Center and it is located at St. James United Methodist Church. I have two aunts who attend this center and they enjoy it very much.

The cost of care is according to one's income. Medicare recognizes this facility.

They really do a lot of things to stimulate the clients' minds. Also, they give a lot of tender loving care. They accept people in wheelchairs and from all walks of life. One day they took the clients fishing, even the ones in wheelchairs. They went to a pond and caught lots of fish. They carried the fish to the fish market and had them dressed, then cooked them for the clients.

To the editor:

In your July 28 issue, I read with interest the article on adult day care and the progressive, innovative program in Scranton, Pa.

For the last year, my mother, an Alzheimer's victim, has been attending a progressive innovative adult day care program in Greenville, the Creative Living Center, a private, nonprofit group. Without this tremendously valuable resource in our community, many of us would probably have to inappropriately place our parents in nursing homes, rest homes or seek some other option which would not meet the need of our parents and our families.

As a practicing health professional since 1975 and as a consumer of services of the Creative Living Center, I am positively impressed with the quality and variety of services offered. I have never had the pleasure of knowing a more sensitive, caring and, indeed, creative staff. I thank the staff, the board of directors, volunteers, public officials, the East Carolina University School of Medicine, St. James United Methodist Church and others who are truly providing a model program of adult day care.

Without reservation, I would say that the quality of our day care program exceeds any other in the country. Just visit the center and I'm sure you'll agree that Pitt County has an adult day care program that should be a model for other counties and states.

Should Medicare, Medicaid, etc. pay for adult day care? Nursing homes get reimbursed at twice the rate of adult day care costs and many of our adults aren't ready for nursing home placement, but would benefit from adult day care.

Let's put our support behind the Creative Living Center. They're providing a valuable, needed and outstanding program in our community.

Not A Question Of Definition

WASHINGTON — The newest advice to George Bush, now that he has decided on a running mate, is that he must "define himself."

It's no good running as a man who would continue the Reagan legacy (while ignoring the negatives of the past eight years), these unsolicited advisers tell him. Only Reagan can be Reagan — and recently, it seems, even he has lost the knack.

What the voters want to know (goes the advice) is, what manner of man is the candidate? Bush must define himself.

It may be the only thing about George Bush that evokes my sympathy. Lord knows I've been asked often enough to define myself.

If I write a column expressing doubts about school busing or high school birth-control clinics or our attempts to rid our schools of moral instruction, I get letters and phone calls demanding that I own up to being a closet conservative.

If I express doubts about school vouchers, or profess to see some good in increasing the minimum wage, or wonder whether the advocates of "Star Wars" have lost touch with reality, I'm sure to hear from people who insist that I stop pretending not to be a doctrinaire liberal.

If I argue that the Palestinians deserve not merely a break from the political brutality they have endured but also a homeland, the demand is that I confess my anti-Semitism. If I suggest that black Americans lay too much stress on racism, over which they have no control, and too little on the things they can do something about, someone is certain to demand that I admit to being the reincarnation of Clarence Pendleton.

Define yourself, they say. Now my colleagues in the media, as well as voters who have their doubts about Bush, are telling the vice president to define himself. What their advice really means, I suspect, is that either they don't like what they see or that none of their pre-printed labels seems quite appropriate. If they could categorize us — or if we would do it for them — then they would be free to embrace or dismiss us. What they can't abide is anyone's refusal to be predictable.

"I see Bush as an aristocrat who, while not contemptuous of those who aren't, cannot stop being what he is."

But it isn't just the appearance of philosophical inconsistency that triggers the demand for self-definition. When Ronald Reagan rails against "the Evil Empire" one day and embraces his friend Mikhail Gorbachev the next, does anyone demand that he define himself? When he declares that the government ought to get off our backs and then seeks to have his administration insinuate itself into our most private activities, is he told to define himself?

No. Both his friends and his enemies think they have a clear idea of who Reagan is. In Bush's case, they still aren't sure.

I can identify with that, though it may be the only thing about George Bush with which I can identify.

Is it so hard to accept the possibility that some politicians, like some newspaper columnists, are neither knee-jerk liberals, doctrinaire conservatives or even consistent moderates? Is it inconceivable that Bush might be (within the limits of political necessity) a simple pragmatist, willing to embrace what seems to make sense in a particular situation?

My minority opinion is that George Bush has long since defined himself as a man who prefers consensus to ideological purity, who is more team player than dominant personality, whose goal is to run the country rather than to remake it in his own image.

I see Bush as an aristocrat who, while not contemptuous of those who aren't, cannot stop being what he is. Indeed, his worst moments have occurred precisely when he has tried to define himself: as in his hopelessly awkward attempts to prove his blue-collar machismo by using salty language.

As it happens, he is not, by philosophy, by leadership potential or by political priority, the man I'd like to see elected President of the United States.

I take it as a given that George Herbert Walker Bush is very much what he appears to be; that what we see is what we'll get if he is elected. My objection to him is not that he has failed to define himself but that he has defined himself all too clearly, and I don't particularly like what I see.

Bouncing Benchmark

WASHINGTON — Foreigners must find it unnerving to see how high the presidential poll numbers bounce, to imagine that millions of Americans are switching blithely from one candidate to the other in a contest that is so consequential for everyone. In some elections the poll numbers change little: the 1960 contest, which the Democrats' Boston-Austin ticket mates like to hark back to, is one example. But this year the numbers are moving as wildly as in 1976, when the Democrats nominated the governor of a medium-sized state and the Republicans a national executive little known a few years before his nomination. The less the voters know about the candidates, it seems, the more likely any additional bit of information is to change their minds.

The proliferation of public polls has made it possible to track the numbers after the fact. From late May until about June 20, Michael Dukakis led George Bush by margins of about 53-40. Then until the Democratic convention July 18-21, Dukakis' lead was more like 47-39. After Atlanta the Dukakis lead widened to about 54-38. Then in four separate polls taken between Aug. 4 and 9, Dukakis hovered between 49 and 52 percent and Bush between 39 and 45. Then on Friday ABC reported that two days' interviews of a six-day poll showed Bush ahead 49-46, and this week's Campaign Hotline national polls have shown Bush down just one or two points. Is the race now even? Don't bet on it. On ABC Monday night, Peter Jennings reported that an ABC national overnight showed Dukakis ahead 55-40 and added, by way of analysis, "We're not sure what the heck is going on."

Neither, probably, are the leaders of the Bush campaign. Top Bush operatives said he was 10 or more points behind (over the weekend) or eight to 10 behind (on Monday). If that's what they really believe, they're just being cautious; in any case, they're determined to set a low benchmark from which to measure the postconvention bounce.

IN THE STATE

Kellogg Recall

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Kellogg Co. has announced a 25-state recall of about 29,000 boxes of Frosted Mini-Wheats Biscuits cereal that may contain too much vitamin A and cause a burning sensation in the mouth.

North Carolina is among the states included in the recall, the company said.

The giant cereal maker also said Thursday it had withdrawn an unspecified number of boxes of Rice Krispies cereal at distribution points because they may contain ten times more iron than normal.

The levels of vitamin A found in 16-ounce and 20-ounce boxes of Frosted Mini-Wheats coded BC117 and BC118 with the expiration date of Aug. 2, 1989, may cause short-term discomfort such as a burning, tingling sensation in the mouth, but will not cause any major health risks, company spokesman Joe Stewart said.

The levels of iron found in Rice Krispies with the code dates June 22-24, 1989, and the letter "M" are at 100 percent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance, but would not produce any health threat, Stewart said. The product normally contains 10 percent of the U.S. RDA of iron.

Debates

RALEIGH (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand announced Thursday that his campaign has arranged two televised debates with his opponent in the race for lieutenant governor.

The first hour-long debate between Rand, D-Cumberland, and Republican businessman Jim Gardner of Rocky Mount, will be held Sept. 25 at 11 a.m., and will be televised live by WRAL-TV of Raleigh. It will be offered to commercial stations statewide, campaign officials said.

The UNC Center for Public Television will televise a second debate Oct. 2 at 8 p.m. from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. It will be carried statewide on the Center for Public Television Network, and will be offered to commercial stations as well.

Water Testing

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — Town board members, hoping to rid the Eno River of its red tint, on Thursday approved 60 days of large-scale testing at the Flynt Fabrics and Finishing Inc. plant.

Until now, testing has been done on a small scale, mainly at a laboratory at the Hillsborough waste treatment plant. Town engineer John Pridgen told town commissioners, however, that the testing is at a point where it must be done on a large scale.

Pridgen said he had tried several methods of eliminating the red tint and decided that activated carbon was most effective. A polymer, which will allow the carbon to settle, will also be added to the water.

The action comes a week after the state found Hillsborough in violation of a state water regulation. The state has required the town to submit a plan to eliminate the red dye by Sept. 1.

Child Dies

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A 3-year-old girl whose head injury and comatose condition prompted allegations of child abuse has died at Craven Regional Medical Center, officials said.

The child's mother, Erineal Elizabeth Passarelli, 22, gave consent for life support devices to be removed and Elysia Felix was pronounced dead at 7:25 p.m. Wednesday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Meanwhile, officials at Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station would not say Thursday what charges, if any, will be brought against the child's stepfather, who has been in pretrial confinement at Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base since Aug. 1.

Mrs. Passarelli has denied allegations of abuse by her husband or herself.

DOT Grant

DURHAM (AP) — Studies of transportation problems will get a boost from a $2 million federal grant to the University of North Carolina Institute for Transportation Research and Education, officials said.

The grant, from the U.S. Department of Transportation, will be used to establish a southeastern center for transportation research, one of 10 regional centers in the United States.

The money will be spread over four years and matched by funds from state and local sources, plus private universities such as Duke.

Student Charged

ARCHDALE, N.C. (AP) — Phillip Ray Bundy, a rising 10th-grader at Trinity High School, has been charged with second-degree murder in connection with the shooting death of 17-year-old Gary Brian Dennis.

Bundy, 16, said the shooting was an accident. Dennis died Monday after Bundy shot him in the face with his family's .22-caliber revolver while Dennis was talking with Bundy's girlfriend on the telephone, Bundy told investigators.

Bed Shortage

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg County's nursing home bed shortage has been put on hold again.

This week, Arbor Health Care Co. of Delaware appealed the state's decision to allocate 100 beds to the Brian Center Health and Retirement Home and nine beds jointly to Britthaven Inc. and Wesleyan Nursing Home Inc.

Until the appeal is resolved, none of the beds can be developed, said Lee Hoffman of the N.C. Division of Facility Services.

The appeals process can take months. Appeals are still pending on 211 nursing home beds approved for Mecklenburg County in 1987.

Transportation Chief Says Road Funding Formula Needs Changing

RALEIGH (AP) — State Transportation Secretary James Harrington is urging lawmakers to consider changing the state formula for paving secondary roads.

Harrington also urged establishing a new fund to build access roads to new industries and including funds for state ferries in the nine-year road planning program.

Harrington made the recommendations Thursday as the state Department of Transportation reported that the current backlog of highway needs stands at $11.7 billion, up $500 million from a report made in March.

The report projects a backlog of $15.9 billion by the year 2000 if funding for highway projects is not increased.

"That's an optimum presentation," Harrington told members of the legislature's Highway Study Commission, a panel examining the state's highway needs.

"Absent practical and political restraints, if you have $1.5 billion a year to add to the highway program we could meet the optimum. ... It is a function of how much you want to accomplish in what period of time."

Harrington and other DOT officials also told the panel that it needed to take another look at the way the state allocates the $60 million a year to pave secondary roads.

Currently, allocated is based on the amount of unpaved roads in each county. Of the 59,313 miles of secondary roads maintained by the state, 16,932 miles are unpaved.

But Jack Murdock, the state's secondary road officer, said that the formula was depriving some counties of their fair share of funds.

Murdock said that New Hanover County received $47,000 in secondary road funds because it only has 12 miles of unpaved roads. In some counties, he said, roads on which only a few people live are being paved before roads that might have 100 or more residents in other counties.

He said the panel should consider changing the road formula so that it would include factors such as the cost of paving each mile of secondary road and the number of residents living on the roads.

To help meet a $14 million backlog in needs for the state's ferries, Harrington said the panel should consider including them in the annual update of the Transportation Improvement Program, a nine-year list of highway needs. He said that would provide more continuity and dependability in financing.

Harrington's third recommendation was the creation of a special highway fund to build access roads for industries that locate in the state. Currently, the state has $2 million a year that is used on a first-come, first-served basis to link the highway system to new industries, hospitals, schools, and fire departments.

Harrington said that any other funds needed for access roads for new industries are taken from other funds. In the last three years, the state has spent $20 million on building access roads to new industries, including $3.9 million to relocate a road near Raleigh-Durham International Airport for access to a new American Airlines terminal.

Although such funding helped the state's economic development efforts, Harrington said it slowed progress on other highway projects. He recommended that the state provide $5 million to $7 million a year to build industrial access roads.

The panel took no actions on Harrington's recommendations, but set up a tentative list of four meetings across the state in September and October to begin discussions on how to raise funds to meet the state's highway needs. Those meetings are planned for Marion, Greensboro, New Bern, and Charlotte.

Wildlife Panel Member Under Fire

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin has asked for the resignation of a Wildlife Commission member who blocked the promotion of a popular Elizabeth City game warden, officials say.

Robert Hester, a Hyde County farmer-conservationist, was asked to resign from the 13-member Wildlife Commission for "violating policy," Jim Sughrue, the governor's press secretary, told The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star on Thursday.

Martin thinks members of the board should confine themselves to general planning and not become involved in personnel matters, Sughrue said.

"In the opinion of the governor, Mr. Hester violated that policy," Sughrue said.

On July 18, Hester and four other Martin-appointed Republicans won a majority vote that rejected the promotion of wildlife Sgt. Terry Lee Waterfield, the Elizabeth City game warden, who had been unanimously picked for lieutenant by the service's selection board.

The 5-4 vote came in the absence of the regular commission chairman, Eugene Price, a Goldsboro newspaper editor who was hospitalized for surgery. Two panel members abstained, and the acting chairman did not vote.

Waterfield's promotion to lieutenant had been routinely sent to the commission members for endorsement after he had emerged as the top candidate in tests and interviews conducted by the service's selection board.

Traditionally, promotions in the service are made by the high-level review board of career supervisors in the agency and automatically approved by the Wildlife Commission.

Earlier this year, Martin sent a memorandum to the commission, reminding the 13 members that their role was solely to establish policy for the game agency, which is under the Department of National Resources and Community Development.

But at the July 18 meeting, Hester reportedly persuaded the commissioners that they should concern themselves with personnel matters, too, and when Waterfield's promotion came up it was rejected. As a result, the second-ranking candidate on the lieutenant's list, Sgt. David Hardy of New Bern, got the promotion.

Hardy became Waterfield's superior officer when he reported for duty Aug. 3, as the supervisor of the service's 1st District. That territory encompasses 13 northeastern counties.

Hester refused to comment on his reasons for blocking Waterfield's promotion, although commission sources said Hester suggested that Waterfield, a 16-year veteran of wildlife law enforcement for the commission, would have difficulty enforcing game laws in the Albemarle, where he has many friends. It also was reported that Hester believed Waterfield had favored Maughan Hull, an Elizabeth City neighbor, who was in the running for the commission appointment that Hester eventually received.

Martin intervened when he discovered that his own appointees had disregarded his memorandum that members restrict themselves to policy matters. He appointed Philip Kirk Jr., his chief of staff, to head a three-member inquiry board. "This is a matter of grave concern," Martin said at the time.

Kirk's group told Martin that the Wildlife Commission already had affirmed Hardy's promotion, so there was no way to reverse the agency's action.

After he sent the letter, dated Aug. 11, requesting Hester's resignation, Martin prepared an executive order that was sent this week to all members of the Wildlife Commission and to career supervisors in the agency.

"The executive order clearly restates the governor's previous policy for the commission," Sughrue said.

Farmers Offer Hay

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Thirteen Duplin County farmers shipped some of their hay Thursday to western North Carolina farmers whose hay crop has been hurt by the drought.

Farmers in Bladen and Sampson counties have already sent hay to the western part of the state, where rainfall is 12 inches or more below average.

The donation from Duplin farmers consisted of about 775 rectangular bales, which weigh 40 to 50 pounds each, and 20 to 25 round bales, which weigh about 1,200 pounds each.

Students from Blanton Tractor Trailer Training Center, a school that teaches people to drive tractor-trailer rigs, agreed to haul the hay to farmers in Cherokee and Clay counties. The school has offices in Lumberton and Fletcher, west of Asheville.

Twelve prisoners from the Duplin Correctional Center of the N.C. Division of Prisons agreed to load the hay. In exchange, the Duplin County Farm Bureau gave them lunch.

The hay should reach needy farmers Friday, officials said.

"I might need some help one day down the road," said Neil Barwick, who donated 15 bales.

Hay from Sampson County was sent Wednesday to the western part of the state. Bladen County growers sent hay shipments to Buncombe County about two weeks ago.

Deposit

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Canadian businessman who wants to buy PTL's assets says he has removed his conditions for the purchase and has put down a $1 million deposit toward the $113 million deal.

"The only reason Peter Thomas won't own it," Thomas said Thursday, "is if somebody comes in with a higher offer."

Earlier this month, Thomas and PTL trustee M.C. "Red" Benton signed an agreement giving Thomas until Sept. 16 to decide whether he wanted the assets, which include the PTL satellite TV network and the Heritage USA Christian retreat near Fort Mill, S.C.

School Bars Street Preachers

MARION, N.C. (AP) — Street preacher David Strode says he will fight an order barring him and his wife, Robin, from school grounds when classes start Monday for their three children at a Marion elementary school.

A certified letter from Superintendent David Ricketts gave notice that officials at Eastfield School officials had barred the Strode parents from school grounds.

Strode said he was shocked by the edict and was considering a legal injunction against it, or not sending his preaching children to school.

"The children may preach outside (the school gate) Monday, but right now I can't see letting them go inside when they won't let me or my wife go inside," he said.

Ricketts said the order is similar to others he has issued barring disruptive students and parents from school grounds. The three children were suspended repeatedly last spring for disruptive preaching on school grounds. When Strode appeared on campus in May with his children, angry parents argued with him and called for him to leave town.

"We are not allowed as parents to walk our children to school across school property," Strode said. "The school must be behind it. We have heard people tell us that somebody will take action against us if we go on the property."

The letter said officials would take "appropriate action" if the Strode parents escort their children across school grounds.

Strode said he feared he would be jailed if he stepped on school property or, worse yet, his children might be taken from him by the Department of Social Services.

"That is ridiculous," Ricketts said. Ricketts would not say what action school officials would take if the Strodes escorted their children across campus.

"We can't say what we will do because we don't know what he is going to do," Ricketts said. "We just want his nice kids to be normal and come to school."

Delegates Fear Guard Issue Will Hurt Quayle

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — North Carolina Republicans are standing behind Sen. Dan Quayle, but some fear the presidential ticket will be hurt by allegations he enrolled in the National Guard to avoid service in Vietnam.

"If I were a minority and had been to Vietnam, it might cause me to wonder why did I have to go and why didn't the rich people ever have to go," said Orville Coward, an alternate delegate to the Republican National Convention from Sylvania.

But Coward, a World War II Army veteran who did not see combat, said he saw nothing wrong with Quayle's actions and echoed other members of the state's delegation Thursday who said the GOP vice presidential nominee should stay on the ticket.

State Democratic leaders, meanwhile, said the disclosure could pose a major problem for Quayle and George Bush, who selected the Indiana senator as his running mate.

A retired executive of the Pulliam family newspaper company acknowledged Thursday that he made phone calls to ease Quayle's way into the Indiana National Guard during the Vietnam War. Quayle is a member of the Pulliam family.

Bush campaign spokeswoman

Alix Glenn said, "Not a single thought is being given" to dropping Quayle from the ticket.

"Hey, this is America. It's the way things are done everywhere," Coward said. "I don't think this is illegal or immoral. We all do it all the time. You do it to get a job, a promotion, a new assignment. It's the American way."

John Redding, an alternate delegate from Asheboro and another World War II Army veteran, dismissed the flap as "ridiculous."

"Some people will complain about anything. They'd complain about his going to the toilet," Redding said. "The idea that the National Guard is not a part of the armed services is ridiculous. Those National Guard guys, they fought and bled and died alongside us. I don't think they would resent what he (Quayle) did."

However, Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, said, "The hypocrisy is what's going to strike a chord. On the one hand ... Quayle is using his family money and family ties to avoid service in Vietnam while being Mr. Rambo in the House and Senate on the other hand."

Reaction to the disclosure about Quayle's military service was mixed among North Carolina GOP delegates. Most said they were concerned about how the matter would play in the news media but did not object to what Quayle did.

"My understanding is he had honorable service in the National Guard," said former Sen. Jim Broyhill, chairman of the delegation.

Bill Graham, state Bush co-chairman, said Quayle's six years in the National Guard more than matched his own two-year stint in the Army.

"He did his share," Graham said. "(Michael) Dukakis doesn't have a combat record either. He has a military record but not a combat record. So do I. Big damn deal."

Betsy Cochrane, minority leader of the state House, said she hoped Quayle had not used undue influence to escape combat.

"I'm very hopeful that it's not all true, that there was a misunderstanding or that no effort was made to get himself ahead of others," Ms. Cochrane said. "These are the kinds of details you uncover as you put a person in the spotlight. I'd say there is a mood of concern" among delegates.

Coward said he would reserve judgment on whether Quayle should stay on the ticket.

"I'm a lawyer and I've got to wait until the evidence is in," he said.

Troubles Follow Veep Candidates

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Presidential nominees probably would prefer to run without having to share the ticket. Running mates can be such a burden sometimes.

George Bush's day of acceptance, dulled by the questions that surfaced about how Sen. Dan Quayle joined the National Guard in 1969, is only the latest problem to attach to a party's ticket.

But usually it takes a little longer.

After Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower chose young California senator Richard Nixon to run with him in 1952, the campaign was roiled by reports that a "slush fund" had been set up for him in California.

As the issue festered, it seemed Eisenhower would drop his running mate, but Nixon regained public support with a broadcast speech in which he denied the implications. He said everything he owned could be stripped from his family, except their dog, Checkers. The address became known as "The Checkers speech."

It was Nixon's turn next to be embarrassed by his running mate. In 1968, after choosing little known Maryland Gov. Spiro Agnew, the campaign was rocked by Agnew's greeting a reporter on the campaign as a "fat Jap."

Agnew insisted that he had meant no offense to the reporter, with whom he had been friends, and the issue went away.

In 1972, the Democratic convention chose Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota to run for president and Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri to share the ticket.

Ten days later, Eagleton disclosed he had voluntarily entered hospitals three times between 1960 and 1966 for "nervous exhaustion and fatigue." Although he supported Eagleton after the disclosure, McGovern cooled on his running mate and the Missouri senator withdrew — the first time a major party candidate left a national ticket after a convention.

In 1984, Democrat Walter Mondale announced his choice of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York in the week before the convention.

She won nomination by acclamation, but immediately questions were raised about the finances of her husband, John Zaccaro, a real estate investor, and about her financial disclosure forms filed with the Congress.

To quiet the storm, she released reams of financial documents and held a news conference in New York that allayed most questions, but the affair distracted the Democratic campaigners from issues they wanted to emphasize.

N.C. Delegates Say Bush Speech Highlighted His Political Strength

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush dispelled the "wimp factor" and escaped President Reagan's shadow with a speech that clearly established the philosophical chasm between himself and Michael Dukakis, North Carolina Republicans said.

"Democrats, eat your hearts out," said Katherine Kinney of Asheville, tears streaming down her cheeks as delegates celebrated Bush's acceptance of the presidential nomination that brought the Republican National Convention to a rousing conclusion Thursday.

"He spelled it all out," Ms. Kinney said. "There's no doubt in my mind where George Bush stands. He said he's not eloquent, but he sure was tonight."

"So much for the charisma gap," said Kathleen Moyer of Wilson, wife of alternate James D. Moyer.

"A real take-no-prisoners speech," shouted Bill Graham, state Bush co-chairman, as balloons and confetti descended from the ceiling of the Superdome convention hall onto the rollicking crowd. "It's the best speech I've ever heard him make. He said the right things and he said it the right way."

Bush's speech was billed as a major test of his ability to emerge from President Reagan's shadow and establish his own political identity, plus dispel the perception that he is weak.

"You notice he didn't mention Reagan that many times," said J.A. Dalpiaz of Gastonia. "He kind of bridged the past into the future. He's now his own man."

James Moyer, a former Texan who said he and his wife had supported Bush since getting to know him during his unsuccessful Senate bid in the early 1970s, said Bush accomplished his goal of articulating the differences between himself and Michael Dukakis.

"He got the message across and people are going to see where George Bush stands," Moyer yelled over the celebratory din. "Now we have to keep the heat on Dukakis to tell us where he stands. He's the most liberal person we've ever had run for president."

Many of the delegates were visibly moved, wiping away tears and embracing, as GOP leaders joined Bush on the podium for the traditional show of unity. Many stood on chairs, put their arms around each other and swayed as the convention sang "America the Beautiful."

"Some of us have waited nine years for this," said Graham, who supported Bush for the GOP nomination in 1980. "We knew he'd come through in the end. Look at this crowd!"

"This is George Bush being himself, showing the decent, experienced kind of man he is, talking from the heart," said Alan Pugh, Gov. Jim Martin's political adviser. "I know it's a cliché, but he has a lot of quiet strength and it really came through."

"He pointed with pride to the accomplishments of the Reagan-Bush administration, he sharpened the differences between himself and Michael Dukakis, and he expressed in strong terms his vision for America," said former Sen. Jim Broyhill, the delegation chairman. "He is going to win."

Dukakis Tops Southern Campaign Swing With Midwestern Train Tour

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis was heading out on a whistle-stop tour of three states today after campaigning in the South and reaffirming his commitment to civil rights.

"After eight long years, this nation needs a president who understands that civil rights can never be a sometime thing," Dukakis told black voters Thursday at the Sixth Avenue Baptist Church in Birmingham, Ala.

The Massachusetts governor spent the night in St. Louis after a day of campaigning in Florida and Alabama. He was to board a train this morning for a tour of rural Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas before flying on to Texas tonight. He planned to campaign in Tennessee on Saturday.

Dukakis all but conceded the black vote to Jesse Jackson during the primary season and held few campaign events designed for black audiences.

He also came in for criticism after he spoke at a Philadelphia, Miss., rally Aug. 4, on the anniversary of the slaying of three civil rights workers there in 1964, but made no mention of the episode.

At the Birmingham rally, he accused the Reagan administration of ignoring the concerns of black Americans. He called for improved job training, prenatal care, drug education and housing opportunities for minorities.

He also paid tribute to four young girls killed in a 1963 bombing at a nearby church.

"We can turn our heads and wish that hate crimes never took place or ... we can provide the moral leadership we need to banish racial and religious violence forever from this country," Dukakis said. "And that leadership must begin in the White House. It must begin at the top."

Dukakis called civil rights activists "true American heroes" and promised to participate later this month in a march to mark the 25th anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr.'s march on Washington.

"It will be a day for America to march together, as one community, rich and poor, young and old, black brown and white, a community of citizens that cares for each other and — yes — loves each other," Dukakis said. Former rival Jesse Jackson is scheduled to appear at the march with Dukakis.

Dukakis was introduced the the congregation by Birmingham Mayor Richard Arrington, a Jackson supporter in the primaries.

"In Mike Dukakis we have a man that we can all be very proud of," said Arrington. "All we have to do is roll up our sleeves and go to work. Alabama is going to be in the Democratic column."

On another matter, Dukakis continued to boost the credentials of his running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in response to questions about GOP vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle's Vietnam-era service in the Indiana National Guard.

"We leave it to the American people to judge who made the best decision, who made the presidential decision," said Paul Brontas, chairman of the Dukakis campaign. "The key question is: Did (Bush) pick the person who is best qualified to serve?"

Fund-Raiser Nets $4 Million

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was the Republicans' richest fund-raiser of the year, and all the big names were there: the Bushes, the Quayles, the Doles; Jack Kemp and a fistful of senators; Muhammad Ali, Rosie Grier, Leo Nadeau.

"You're wondering: Who the hell is Leo Nadeau?" the silver-haired man told 4,500 mystified guests at the New Orleans Convention Center, most of whom paid $1,000 to rub shoulders Thursday with brighter luminaries.

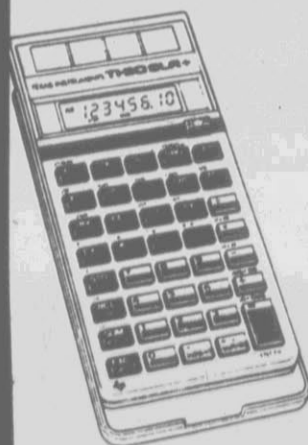

The answer: He was George Bush's tail-gunner 45 years ago, when Bush was a Navy bomber pilot during World War II. And of all the speakers who paid Bush tribute, Nadeau is the only one the vice president thanked with a hug.

"We were just a couple of kids," Nadeau told the crowd as he introduced his old war buddy. "But we became men overnight."

They shared the stage Thursday under more pleasant circumstances, helping raise roughly $4.3 million for the Republican National Committee's operating budget. That was twice what the RNC collected at its 1984 convention gala.

Gala chairman Lodwick Cook took the microphone. "Rosie," he said, "when you tell us to sit, we'll sit."

Delegate Rates Bush Speech 'Grand Slam'

was a sensitive speech because he was so strong and yet so sensitive. He showed that he is attuned to the American people. I believe he revealed a George Bush people have not yet seen and had a chance to appreciate."

"The main message here," said Florida Gov. Bob Martinez, "is America discovered George Bush."

Bush's wife, Barbara, delighted the convention with a tribute to her husband. "You've nominated for the presidency a man who is as strong and caring and decent as America herself."

Yet, the controversy over Quayle cast a cloud over the convention euphoria and the forging of a ticket to challenge Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

Republicans fretted that the furor would undermine GOP chances of renewing their eight-year lease on the White House.

"It's not going to help the ticket," said Illinois Secretary of State Jim Edgar, a Republican. "I think we'll just have to wait a few days and see how this thing settles out."

"Let's face it, the question is whether a rich kid's family got him into the Guard when other people were getting drafted," said John DeCamp, a Vietnam veteran and GOP delegate from Nebraska. "Some of them like me got shot at a lot and great many of them just got shot and killed."

Quayle, a member of an influential newspaper family, refused to discuss the matter Thursday on the grounds it would detract from Bush's acceptance speech. "It's the vice president's night, why should Sen. Quayle hold some big news conference?" said press secretary Sheila Tate.

The Democratic opposition campaign stepped around the controversy over Quayle and the National Guard but raised questions about his qualifications. "We leave it to the American people to judge who made the best decision, who made the presidential decision," said Paul Brontas, chairman of Michael Dukakis' presidential campaign. "The key question is: Did (Bush) pick the person who is best qualified to serve?"

Quayle had an abundance of defenders, most notably George Bush. "I'm proud to have Dan Quayle at my side," Bush said, giving delegates an unmistakable sign that he was not backing away from his running mate. The declaration triggered roars of approval.

Bush, recently revived in the polls after a 17-point deficit to Dukakis, said: "There are a lot of great stories in politics about the underdog winning — and this is going to be one of them. I mean to run hard, to fight hard, to stand on the issues — and I mean to win."

Striking back at the theme of Dukakis' speech in the Democratic convention last month, Bush said, "Some say this isn't an election about ideology, it's an election about competence."

"But this election isn't only about competence, for competence is a narrow idea," Bush said. "Competence makes the trains run on time but doesn't know where they're going."

Quayle, accepting the vice presidential nomination, referred only indirectly to the flap surrounding him. He mentioned his service in the National Guard and said, "I am proud of it."

"I am privileged to be the first person of my generation to be on a national ticket," said the 41-year-old baby-boomer. "I don't presume to talk for everyone of my generation, but I know that a great many will agree with me when I express thanks to George Bush's generation for bringing us an era of peace and freedom and opportunity."

Quayle Holds On

paign official Rich Bond said today on NBC-TV.

But critics were harsher.

"Let's face it, the question is whether a rich kid's family got him into the Guard when other people were getting drafted," said John DeCamp, a Vietnam veteran and Republican delegate from Nebraska. "Some of them like me got shot at a lot and a great many of them just plain got shot and killed."

Rep. Bob Dornan of California, every bit a conservative, said, "It requires a Checkers-like speech, and he must do — must do it — quickly, before this gets out of hand."

Dornan referred to a televised speech during the 1952 campaign in which then-GOP vice presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon successfully responded to allegations he had a slush fund while serving in the Senate from California. The speech, in which he said his family and dog, Checkers, were more important anything else, kept Nixon on Dwight Eisenhower's ticket.

"I don't like the fact that Quayle denied yesterday that anybody had interceded on his behalf when apparently someone had," said Rep. Helen Bentley, chairman of the Bush campaign in Maryland. "Quayle can do one of two things: admit this and that he was a liar — or he can withdraw from the race."

But later Thursday, she backed off her strong criticism, saying the issue was "dead" and had been based on "inaccurate news reports."

Quayle drew many defenders as well. And at the end of the day, it was certain he had the most important supporter of all.

"I'm proud to have Dan Quayle at my side," Bush told the delegates.

For his part, Quayle said the focus should be on Bush in the convention hall and refused on Thursday to answer questions about how he got into the Indiana National Guard.

"I'm going to continue to answer questions you raise about me, about issues, about anything through this campaign," he said entering the Superdome. "Tonight is George Bush's night. And in deference to George Bush, I'm not going to get into all the details."

"I'll be around ... to answer your questions," he added.

During his acceptance speech inside the hall, the second-term senator added a reference to show an unbending stand.

"As a young man, I served six years in the National Guard. And, like the millions of Americans who have served in the Guard ... I am proud of it," Quayle said.

Questions were first raised about his military service on Wednesday, when he and Bush faced reporters for the first time together. Quayle called suggestions that his choice of the National Guard was a method to avoid the draft — and service in Vietnam — "a cheap shot."

Later Wednesday, he said he was not aware of any efforts by his family or friends to win him a spot in the Guard.

He joined the National Guard in 1969, days after he was graduated from college and thus lost his student deferment from the draft. Quayle was a private first class in the Guard, serving as a writer in a public information unit until 1975.

Medical Sculptors Use Artistry For Healing

By ANGELA AHN
Associated Press Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Silicone, plaster and glue can go a long way toward helping to heal wounded self-images.

"I think it's amazing," says Denis Lee, head of the University of Michigan Medical Center's Medical Sculpture Unit. "A lot of people, when they first come, are hesitant about wearing anything artificial or rubber. They think it will fall off, or people will laugh."

"After they see the results, it's incredible."

Hundreds of people each year who have lost an eye, ear, nose, finger, toe, breast or other feature to birth defects, cancer, accidents and fire — and who can't be helped by plastic surgery — seek assistance from prosthetic artists.

"I really don't know what to say for making me feel like a whole person again," a 69-year-old Ohio woman, whose face was disfigured and right eye lost to cancer, wrote to Lee. "People just can't believe how anyone can do such a wonderful job. I can go anyplace and people don't stare."

"It's a wonderful feeling to have in my life again."

Stan Stasiowicz, 63, of Union Lake, lost his right ear to cancer two decades ago. "I said to some of my cronies that I got a new ear, and they said which one? It was very exhilarating."

Prosthetics can be especially important for children, says Lee, who is seeking a corporate sponsor for a center for disfigured children here.

"If not treated properly and quickly, they can have psychological problems. Children can be pretty cruel and (disfigured) children get teased."

Popular shows and movies have helped alleviate that problem. In the "Six Million Dollar Man," and "Bionic Woman" series, people with mechanical parts have superhuman strength, and the recent movie "Robo Cop" dealt with replacing lost features and organs with mechanical ones.

"If they're the bionic kid," Lee says, "they're the hit of the class."

Of about 200 patients treated here annually Lee estimates the breakdown is 50 ears, 30 breasts, 20 noses, 20 eyes and 50 "miscellaneous." Most health insurance covers the cost, which runs about $1,400 for an ear or nose and $2,000 for an eye.

There are about 200 prosthetic sculptors working in the United States, most of them affiliated with Michigan, a Veterans Administration clinic in New York City and a medical center associated with Baylor University, according to Lee, who also directs a 22-year-old graduate program to train the artists.

The University of Illinois, Ohio State University, Johns Hopkins

University, the Medical College of Georgia and the University of Texas also offer such courses. "It's harder to get into than medical school. It's a very strange combination to have people interested in science and art — that's why the program is so small," Lee says.

The course of study includes anatomy, pathology, anatomical sketching, medical and scientific drawing, and medical graphics. Graduates generally can set up their own business, freelance, or work for a hospital or medical center.

One works for "Star Wars" creator George Lucas' Industrial Light and Magic making creatures for science fiction films.

Sculptors take a plaster mold of the patient's undamaged feature, then make a silicone rubber copy and carefully match skin tone. The replacement is applied daily with a medical adhesive.

Though the appearance of prostheses are strikingly realistic, many of Lee's patients are apprehensive about how well they will work. "People ask if it will fall off in their soup."

One of the center's success stories is a 3-year-old Lakewood, Fla., girl who lost half her right foot in a lawnmower accident. Within six months of getting her prosthesis, she was taking ballet lessons.

"Her mother says she won't take her silicone rubber toes off," Lee says.

Competitor Agrees To Bail Out TV Fashion Channel

By LINDA WILLIAMS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Fashion Channel Network, which filed for bankruptcy court protection last month, won some relief from its severe cash problems this week when a rival home-shopping service assumed the expense of keeping Fashion Channel on the air.

CVN Cos., the Minneapolis-based operator of Cable Value Network, took over the operations of Fashion Channel under a three-year agreement tentatively approved in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Los Angeles. The agreement is subject to final court ratification next month, but CVN plans to continue operating the cable-TV shopping service without interruption.

The arrangement falls short of the bailout Carson, Calif.-based Fashion Channel sought when it began looking last month for a cash infusion and filed to reorganize under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. But it allows the channel to stay on the air and removes the burden of further expenses from its shareholders, giving the company a chance to successfully reorganize, said Richard Harvey, a Fashion Channel attorney.

Under the agreement, CVN has begun financing Fashion Channel's broadcasts and handling its marketing and sales. It also will pay sales commissions to cable-television operators that carry Fashion Channel's programming, some of whom had threatened to cancel their service. Home-shopping services display merchandise to cable-TV viewers and take sales orders for the goods over the phone.

In return for its financing and management, CVN will keep 97.5 percent of Fashion Channel's sales. Fashion Channel will receive the rest.

CVN also was given an option to buy 51 percent of the Fashion Channel for 50 cents a share. The option has not been approved by the court and CVN said it has "no present intenion" to exercise it, given the financial condition of the Fashion Channel.

Under the agreement, CVN won't be responsible for liabilities Fashion Channel incurred prior to Monday, the companies said. Nor will it put any other cash into the company.

The agreement gives CVN, which bills itself as the largest cable-television shopping service, "a second channel to sell merchandise over the air," said Ronald L. Rotter, an analyst with Morgan, Olmstead, Kennedy & Gardner in Los Angeles. The channel, whose largest shareholder is Minneapolis investor Irwin Jacobs, reaches about 20 million cable subscribers.

CVN was formed in May 1986 as a joint venture of C.O.M.B. Co., a Minneapolis discount merchandiser, and Tele-Communications Inc., the giant Denver-based cable operator. Warner Communications also acquired an interest in the venture, but C.O.M.B. bought out its partners in July 1987 and renamed itself CVN.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Teacher Cleans Classroom

By DEBBIE VRANA
Merced Sun-Star Staff Writer

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — Charles Peterson is probably one of the few college instructors in America who cleans up the same room in which he teaches.

Mornings, Peterson explains algebraic equations from a Merced College classroom podium. But by nightfall, he changes into a navy blue uniform, grabs a mop and returns to the same classroom as a janitor.

Peterson, 44, a janitor at Merced College for 15 years, went back to school and was graduated from Merced College in 1985. He got a bachelor's degree in mathematics this June from California State University, Stanislaus.

"You sit there in a classroom and you notice that the lights are flickering, and you think, Oh no, I need to change that bulb," Peterson said of his time as both a student and custodian at Merced College, a two-year school.

He added that he often wanted to tell students to pick up paper they dropped on the floor or to be careful with their sodas in the classroom.

Peterson said he is looking forward to teaching two Math 24 courses this summer, adding that he never thought he'd be teaching in classrooms when he started working at Merced College.

Peterson decided to take his first refresher math course when his son began taking algebra in high school.

"How can I help him, I thought, when I don't even remember what I had," said Peterson. "So I did the course in a short period of time."

Peterson then continued taking math courses.

"Once people find out you want to do something, they are willing to help," he said. "I got a lot of encouragement."

He plans to teach through the fall semester at Merced College, then get his credential so he can teach at the high school level. Peterson eventually hopes to get a master's degree so he can teach full time at the college level.

He could then give up janitorial work.

"Right now I have to continue to work at night," he said. "The part-time teaching pay is just not enough."

The janitor-math instructor seems comfortable with both his diverse roles.

"What I want to do is help people — share my knowledge with someone else. That's my goal," he said.

Awnings, shutters, overhangs, louvered screens and trees can reduce solar heat gain by as much as 80 percent.

Allowing gas flames to "lick up" the sides of pots and pans can cause heat stains on the utensils.

Welcome Mat Rolls Out, Then In

DEAR ABBY: Today a woman who has been a friend of my wife for many years telephoned to tell her that she and a married couple whom we have never met would be visiting our city in the near future.

"Agnes," my wife's friend, then invited herself and the couple to stay with us for the week of their visit. To my surprise, my wife accepted this "offer," then "asked" if it would be OK with me.

Abby, I love my wife and I am willing to have Agnes stay here, but I do not like the idea of having a strange couple staying here as well. We have a small (two bedroom, one bathroom) house, and it would be too much of an inconvenience for five adults to live here for "only" one week. I think I should have been consulted before my wife made these arrangements. Furthermore, I think Agnes should be informed that she is welcome, but her friends should make arrangements to stay elsewhere (like a hotel).

My wife thinks I'm being selfish, unreasonable and inhospitable. What do you think? — FRIED IN FRISCO

DEAR FRIED: I think Agnes was presumptuous to have asked if she could invite a couple of strangers to be guests in your home. (She put your wife on the spot.) And your wife

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

should not have agreed to welcome the additional couple without having consulted you. She should telephone Agnes and say, "I'm sorry, I just shared this with my husband. Now we both agree that our little place cannot accommodate five adults for a week." Then she should offer to make reservations for Agnes' friends. Don't worry about offending Agnes. She appears to be anything but thin-skinned.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion on a difficult matter. I am one of many divorced fathers and I'm doing my best to build a good relationship with our 2-year-old daughter.

My ex-wife is in the process of toilet-training her, and has voiced concern over the fact that I intend to take our little girl into a men's rest room when she has to use the bathroom.

I cannot think of another reasonable alternative during our outings together, and feel that if this is done using good judgment, there is no problem with it. Is there another way for divorced fathers to handle this situation? — DIVORCED DAD

DEAR DAD: Obviously, you should take your daughter to the men's room. Of course, if there is a stall with a door, that's the one you should choose. (Women would be properly outraged to see a man in the women's bathroom even though he's there tending to his little girl's needs.)

If your wife is concerned because the plumbing facilities are unlike those in the women's bathrooms, she need not be. A 2-year-old will think nothing of it — unless an adult makes a fuss.

DEAR ABBY: I want very much to write to you about a personal matter. What address should I use? — DOVER, OHIO, READER

DEAR READER: Address all mail to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. If you want a personal, unpublished reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "On the Seashore," who complained about well-heeled moochers, reminded me of the way my late sister dealt with those leeches. She had a plan that never failed. I've concocted a letter like the one she would use. The names are fictitious, of course:

"Dear Janice: Harry and I are thrilled to learn that you and Bob are planning to visit us. We look forward to seeing you and hearing about your latest trip to Europe. We know that you wouldn't dream of imposing on us knowing how cramped we are, but we will gladly make a hotel reservation for you. In keeping with your expensive taste, I recommend The Paymore Plaza. It may not compare with the Ritz in Paris, or the Excelsior in Rome, but you'll find it adequate and surprisingly reasonable with rates that start at only $165 a day. And for $20 per person, its limousine will pick you up at the airport. However, you may want to rent a car if you plan to do some sightseeing here. There are several car rental offices right at the airport — how convenient!"

"It's so sweet of you to want to include us in your travel plans. Please let us know when you'll be here so we can make all the necessary arrangements for you. Love, Denise"

Abby, if this doesn't work, nothing will. I hope you print this, as many of your readers will want to keep it on their writing tables — or next to their phones. — O.G., ANYWHERE, U.S.A.

DEAR O.G.: Should anyone ever write a book titled "How to Lose Friends and Alienate People," your suggested letter should be included.

"How to Have a Lovely Wedding" is a revised, up-to-date guide for formal church weddings, home weddings, second-time-around weddings, and even barefoot-in-the-park weddings. It covers who pays for what, wedding etiquette, accepted customs and dress, and who sits where. To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. # Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market 25 to 50 cents higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 45.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 45.00; Wilson 44.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 32.00; Wallace 33.00; Spivey's Corner 33.00; Rowland 33.50.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 66.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 58 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 55.66 cents. The market is weak and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights light to desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,203,000, compared to 1,734,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply adequate for a good demand. Prices paid per pound of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 22 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 2 to 3 cents higher at mostly 2.78-3.01 in East and mostly 3.07-3.17 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly steady at mostly 8.62-8.87 in East and mostly 8.37-8.51 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.40-3.60; new crop corn 2.62-3.12; new crop soybeans 8.22-8.77. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 97 to 102 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks strengthened this morning in a mild advance that brokers attributed largely to eased interest rates, but few saw signs of a clear breakout from the market's current slump.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 5.69 points to 2,032.72 as of noon EDT in thin trading.

Among broader market indicators, the New York Stock Exchange composite index of all listed issues rose 0.36 to 148.17. The American Stock Exchange market-value index rose 0.23 to 295.19.

Gaining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 7-to-5 on the NYSE, with 672 up, 493 down and 573 unchanged. Volume totaled 49.59 million shares in the morning, vs. 69.27 million Thursday morning.

Hildegard Zagorski, a stock analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York, linked the strength to a rally in the bond market, which pushed yields lower and made stocks a more attractive investment than bonds.

Burmese

Burma watchers had predicted the new party boss would be chosen from among the clique of active and retired top military officers who supported former leader Ne Win's system of rigid socialist economics, strict military control and international isolation.

Maung Maung is considered a relative moderate, and thought more acceptable than other figures to Burmese who took to the streets in waves in the past two weeks to topple hard-line President Sein Lwin and press demands for an end to a quarter-century of military dominated, authoritarian rule.

Sein Lwin was party chairman and president for 17 days until his resignation Aug. 12 following five days of bloody battles between security forces and anti-government demonstrators. At least 95 people were killed.

After Burma gained independence in 1948, Maung Maung studied at Rangoon University. He later received a doctorate in international law from Utrecht University in the Netherlands and a law degree from Yale University, where he spent two years as a visiting lecturer in the early 1960s.

After the 1962 coup, he served as Ne Win's legal adviser. He was elected to the party central committee at the first party congress in 1972, and in 1974 became a member of the State Council, the highest state organ.

In a 1974 autobiography, "To a Soldier Son," he wrote admiringly of the military but also praised the ideals of youthful activism.

Crenshaw: A Long Hitter Should Win International

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — A player who hits the ball long and with a high trajectory has to be favored to win The International, according to noted golf analyst and historian Ben Crenshaw, who also plays a little bit.

Crenshaw, after blistering the 7,503-yard Castle Pines Golf Club for a 4-under-par 68 Thursday that was worth 10 points under the Stableford scoring system used in this tournament, offered his insights into the potential champion.

"I think Freddie Couples would be a wonderful pick here this week," Crenshaw said. "He hits the ball so far and so high. You have to drop your shots softly on the greens here. Some shots are hard to get in the air, like your second shots uphill at number 9 and 17. If you're hitting a 6-iron instead of 4-iron, it helps.

"I'd look for the longer hitters to do well on Sunday. It takes a certain amount of length on this course. Joey Sindelar would be an excellent pick. He plays well here about every year.

And (Coloradan) Steve Jones is a good choice. He's a fine player and he has some local knowledge."

Crenshaw, Couples, Jones, Mark O'Meara and PGA champion Jeff Sluman were among the survivors Thursday as half of the field completed its first round. The other half played on Wednesday.

The 78 qualifiers faced another cut in the second round today, with 54 of them moving on to Saturday's third round. Eighteen players will advance to Sunday's final round.

Meanwhile, the dreaded daily cut claimed a number of notables Thursday, including Tom Watson, Payne Stewart, Johnny Miller, Hale Irwin and defending champion John Cook.

Watson stood at minus-1 heading into the final two holes. He figured to need an eagle at the par-5 17th, or birdies on both 17 and 18 to make it.

He birdied the 17th, two-putting from 20 feet, to earn two points and move to plus-1.

At 18, he came within inches of holing out his 7-iron approach shot, but he lipped out his four-foot birdie putt and fell short.

"It doesn't matter how close you hit it if you can't make the putts," Watson said. "I had my chance and I blew it. It's the same thing I've been doing all year."

Stewart was eliminated in a playoff. Seven players at plus-2 competed for three spots. Stewart bogeyed the first playoff hole, No. 9, and was ousted along with two others.

On the next playoff hole, Tom Purtzer bogeyed, leaving David Ogren, Richard Zokol and Mark Wiebe as the final three qualifiers.

Crenshaw and O'Meara both led the way with plus-10 scores and each won $8,750 from the daily purse.

Couples, Jones and Billy Andrade were at plus-9 and won $2,500 apiece.

"I would like to have saved a few birdies for tomorrow," Crenshaw said. "I played well. I kept it in play, hit a lot of good iron shots and kept giving myself chances for birdies."

O'Meara matched Crenshaw's six-birdie, two-bogey round.

"My iron game is there and my putting seems to be coming around," O'Meara said. "If I can drive better, maybe I can get to Sunday."

Others who advanced from Wednesday's first round include Sindelar, Jack Nicklaus, Nick Price, Tom Kite, Paul Azinger, Raymond Floyd and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Scores, which are not cumulative, are awarded on the basis of eight points for a double eagle, five points for eagle, two points for birdie, zero for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double bogey or worse.

table with the decision. I wanted to do it as soon as possible, but I wanted to feel comfortable with it."

Among those who made the team were Katrina McClain, a 6-2, 175-pounder who is a native of Charleston and played at Georgia, and Anne Donovan, the former 6-8 star at Old Dominion.

Two active college players also made the roster — Maryland senior Vicki Bullett, a 6-3, 175-pounder, and Tennessee senior Bridgette Gordon, a 6-0, 158-pounder.

Others who made the team were: Cindy Brown, a 6-2, 165-pound player from Long Beach State; Cynthia Cooper, 5-10, 147-pounder who played at Southern California; Teresa Edwards, a 5-11, 155-pound player from Georgia; Kamie Ethridge, a 5-5, 122-pounder who played for Texas; and Jennifer Gillom, a 6-3, 175-pound player from Mississippi.

Three other players completed their eligibility last year: Andrea Lloyd, a 6-2, 160-pounder who played for Texas, Suzie McConnell, a 5-4, 110-pounder who played for Penn State and Teresa Weatherspoon, a 5-8, 155-pounder who played for Louisiana Tech.

In selecting the team, Yow said she wanted players who were not slow or unwilling to sacrifice their individual talents for the good of the team.

"We have to have as much speed and quickness because of our style. We're going to play pressure defense and push the ball up every time," she said. "So we needed quickness."

"We also wanted physical players who can battle on the boards. You know, fighters — determined players who are willing to get the job done," Yow said. "We also wanted them to have a good attitude. You can have a lot of talent, but we wanted them to be eager to do whatever you can to play whatever role is necessary for the team to do well."

The team will continue to practice at Socastee High School until Aug. 26 when the players will return home for three days. Yow said. After that, the team will fly to Los Angeles on Aug. 30, where it will stay until Sept. 4. The team will then fly to Hawaii and then on to Seoul on Sept. 11.

Yow Makes Last Cuts For Team

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — With the final cut completed, U.S. Olympic women's basketball coach Kay Yow says it is time for her players to begin defining — and accepting — the roles they will play.

"We will continue to teach and evaluate. I think the thing we should be focusing on is what the roles will be for the players and coming together as one, united as a group of individuals," Yow said.

Yow made her final cuts Thursday, reducing the team to the dozen players she'll take to Seoul, South Korea, to represent the United States in the Olympics. Yow cut Fran Harris, a 5-foot, 156-pound, 1986 Texas graduate, and San Diego State senior Chana Perry, a 6-4, 185-pounder, to reduce her roster to 12.

While the team has now been picked, Yow said it would be a while before she knows who will start.

"I can't answer when that will be determined," Yow said Thursday in a telephone interview from Surfside Beach, where the squad is working out in preparation for the Olympics. "That will be an ongoing process."

In fact, she said who starts may not be that important.

"We've been playing a large number of people," Yow said. "I don't place a high value on who's starting. We might say the finishers might be a lot more important than the starters."

Yow, who is also the women's basketball coach at North Carolina State, said the final cut was not easy.

"I think the cuts have been tough all along," she said. "From the time we had 16, every one of them could be an Olympian. But we could only take 12. We had to determine what were the greatest needs of the team."

Yow said she hoped to make her final cut by Thursday.

"I had hoped to be able to cut by today," she said. "We just felt a lot of tension was building within the team, a lot of pressure on the players and on the staff."

"I think a lot of people were ready for me to name the team," she said. "But I couldn't until I felt comfort-

White Sox Mistakes Help Detroit Turn Deficit Into Win; Snaps 3-Game Dip

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Detroit Tigers were having trouble scoring runs until the Chicago White Sox showed them the way in the ninth inning.

Dave Bergman capped a four-run rally with a two-run homer off Bobby Thigpen Thursday night after the Tigers went into the ninth trailing 4-2.

The Tigers had scored one run in three consecutive losses to Minnesota and were on the verge of another defeat before a series of mistakes gave Bergman the chance to win it.

"We won ugly today, but a win is a win — you take them all," Bergman said. "I was just trying to get a good swing, not necessarily to hit a home run. But there's a long way to go. I wish there were two games left and we had a three-game lead."

"With 42 to go, I'll take anything that changes the numbers in the standings," Manager Sparky Anderson said after the Tigers increased their American League East lead to three games over Boston and 3½ over New York.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was California 7, New York 1; Baltimore 10, Oakland 1; Seattle 6, Boston 1; Cleveland 4, Milwaukee 3; and Texas 4, Minnesota 2.

Tom Brookens started Detroit's ninth with a single that might have been caught by left fielder Gary Redus. After Lou Whitaker walked, both runners moved up on a sacrifice by Luis Salazar.

A wild pitch scored Brookens and moved Whitaker to third. Thigpen then got Alan Trammell to hit a pop up to second baseman Fred Manrique, but he dropped the ball, and Whitaker scored to make it 4-4.

"We miss the ball in left, we miss a popup. You can't give a club that many outs in the ninth inning," White Sox manager Jim Fregosi said. "They did just what they're supposed to do."

Bergman followed Manrique's miss with his fourth homer, into the upper deck in right field, making a winner of reliever Mike Henneman, 6-2, and snapping a streak of three straight losses and five in six games by the Tigers.

"I didn't make good pitches," said Thigpen, 5-7. "It's going to happen, but it's not a good feeling."

Trammell and Darrell Evans also homered for Detroit, while Daryl Boston homered for Chicago.

Mariners 6, Red Sox 1

Seattle became the first team since Toronto on June 2-5 to win a series from Boston at Fenway Park as Jim Presley hit a three-run double in the sixth inning and Mark Langston pitched a five-hitter for 7 1-3 innings.

Langston, 9-11, struck out three and walked five before giving up a run-scoring single to Dwight Evans in the eighth.

But by then, the Mariners already had six runs and had chased Mike Boddicker, 9-14, who gave up eight hits and five runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Seattle took the lead in the second when Harold Reynolds tripled and Bruce Fields doubled, then broke open the game with a four-run sixth. After Presley's three-run double, Reynolds followed with an RBI double off reliever Jeff Sellers.

Angels 7, Yankees 1

New York also lost ground to Detroit as California got strong pitching from Chuck Finley and Greg Minton.

Finley, 7-11, allowed one run in 5 2-3 innings and Minton pitched 3 1-3 innings of hitless relief for the Angels.

Tommy John, 8-5, allowed only six hits in seven innings, but was the victim of fielding lapses in the third when the Angels scored two unearned runs.

The first run scored on a bad throw by shortstop Rafael Santana, and the second on a double by Johnny Ray over the head of center fielder Gary Ward, who first broke in on the ball and could not recover to make the catch.

Brian Downing hit a sacrifice fly and homered for the Angels, giving him 20 homers this season, five of them at Yankee Stadium, where he had never homered before this season.

The Yankees' only run came on a 478-foot homer by Dave Winfield, his 23rd.

Orioles 10, Athletics 1

Baltimore snapped a nine-game losing streak against AL West teams and handed Oakland only its second loss in 10 games.

Jeff Ballard, 7-10, pitched a four-hitter and Terry Kennedy, Jim Traher and Cal Ripken had three hits each for the Orioles. Ballard did not allow a runner past first base after

Ramon Martinez Still Has No Win For His Efforts

By The Associated Press

Ramon Martinez has pitched great ball in his first two major-league starts for the Los Angeles Dodgers, but he doesn't have a victory to show for it.

Martinez, making his second major-league appearance, gave up four hits in seven innings Thursday against the Philadelphia Phillies, striking out seven and walking three. But he left with the score tied 1-1.

The Dodgers went on to beat Philadelphia 2-1 on Dave Anderson's eighth-inning RBI single and took a 4½-game lead over Houston in the National League West.

How badly did Martinez want the victory?

"I was trying, but it's OK," the 20-year-old Dominican said. "I pitched well and we got the win. That's the most important thing."

Martinez has given up two runs in his first 14 2-3 innings in the majors.

"He's won at every level, and with his arm, there's no reason why he shouldn't be able to continue to win in the major leagues," Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia said. "He's got a changeup that you just can't teach. And if he improves with it, it will be a devastating pitch."

Anderson singled off Kevin Gross in the eighth to score Tracy Woodson from second base with the go-ahead run.

"It was one of those balls that was a base hit as soon as it hit the end of the bat," Anderson said. "You couldn't have thrown the ball out there any better. We needed some breaks today to beat him. I had faced him in the past, so I pretty much knew what he was throwing. I knew he had his good stuff today, so you just go out there and take a shot and try to put the ball in play because if you do, a lot of things can happen."

Gross, 11-9, allowed five hits in his fifth complete game, striking out five and walking none. Philadelphia is last in the National League in hitting and it was the ninth time in 25 starts that Gross has been involved in a one-run game.

"We're a last-place team, and we're not scoring a lot of runs," Gross said. "We had Martinez on the ropes a few times and nothing happened. They know they were lucky to win that game."

In other games, San Francisco beat New York 4-1, St. Louis beat Houston 2-1, San Diego beat Montreal 5-4 and Cincinnati beat Chicago 9-1.

Philadelphia went ahead in the second. Chris James and Darren Daulton singled and James scored when shortstop Alfredo Griffin let Jeltz's potential double-play grounder bounce off his chest. Los Angeles tied it in the fourth on John Shelby's sacrifice fly.

Giants 4, Mets 1

Mike Krukow beat New York for the third time this season and increased his career record against the Mets to 20-7. San Francisco is 7-2 against New York this year.

Krukow, 7-4, has won seven of his last eight decisions against New York. He gave up four hits in six innings, struck out a season-high seven and hit an RBI double. Scott Garrelts pitched the ninth for 11th save.

Bob Ojeda, 8-12, gave up seven hits and all four runs in four innings.

Cardinals 2, Astros 1

Tom Brunansky tripled in the Cardinals' first run and snapped a tie with a sixth-inning homer off Mike Scott, his 18th of the season.

Bob Forsch, 7-4, allowed four hits in seven innings, his longest outing this season. Todd Worrell got two outs for his 23rd save, finishing a combined four-hitter.

Scott, 13-4, gave up six hits, struck out six and walked none as his four-game winning streak ended.

Padres 5, Expos 4

Carmelo Martinez snapped a tie with a ninth-inning bases-loaded single after Andres Galarra tied the score 4-4 in the top of the inning with his second two-run homer of the game, his 24th. The Expos have lost five straight.

Mark Parent doubled off Tim Bruke, 3-3, to open the ninth. After a sacrifice and a popup, Roberto Alomar and Tony Gwynn were intentionally walked, bringing up Martinez.

Lance McCullers, 2-6, got the victory.

Reds 9, Cubs 1

Danny Jackson pitched a seven-hitter to become the National League's first 17-game winner and Eric Davis drove in five runs as Cincinnati won for the seventh time in 10 games.

Jackson, 17-5, has won his last seven decisions and 10 of his last 11. He has won eight consecutive home decisions and is 10-1 in Riverfront Stadium this season.

Davis hit a two-run homer off Jamie Moyer, 6-12, and doubled and singled off Frank DiPino to drive in three runs. It was Davis' first five-RBI game this season.

Tolbert May Bypass Hornets For Italy

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Former University of Arizona center Tom Tolbert is considering bypassing the NBA to play pro basketball in Italy, his agent says. The 6-foot-8, 245-pound Tolbert was taken in the second round of the June 28 draft by the expansion Charlotte Hornets as the No. 34 pick overall. Paul Rutigliano, Tolbert's Cleveland-based agent, said Wednesday that contract negotiations with Charlotte general manager Carl Scheer have reached an impasse over the number of guaranteed years on the contract. Tolbert reportedly is seeking a two-year guaranteed deal for about $350,000 to $400,000. Rutigliano said if an agreement isn't reached by the end of next week, Tolbert probably will play in Italy. He said teams from Rome, Milan and Forli have expressed interest in Tolbert, who helped lead Arizona to the Pacific-10 Conference championship and a berth in the NCAA's Final Four last season. Tolbert averaged 14.1 points and 5.8 rebounds during the regular season and 6.8 rebounds during five NCAA tournament games.

Duke's Moreland Signs In Europe

DURHAM (AP) — Chris Moreland, Duke's all-time leading scorer and rebounder, has signed a professional contract with the Racing Club of Paris, school officials announced Thursday. Moreland will leave for Europe on Aug. 25, where she will begin her training for the competitive French Cup league schedule. The league consists of players from throughout Europe and the U.S. Moreland finished her career at Duke with 2,232 points and 1,229 rebounds. She was the school's first All-American and Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year during her four years.

Piedmont Drops NASCAR Sponsorship

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Piedmont Airlines will end its sponsorship of a NASCAR racing team after the 1988 Winston Cup racing season, a move which an airline spokesman says was based on economic factors. "It is an advertising and sales promotion expense for the company," Piedmont spokesman Mike Clark said in a telephone interview Thursday. "With all of the things coming up, we had to reassess our allocation of the money budgeted for those things." "At this point, it seemed that it was time perhaps to reallocate those funds," Clark said. Clark would not specify where the funds would be placed, except to say the money would be used in the promotion of the combined forces of Piedmont and USAir, which will merge next year. Billy Hagan, the owner of the team that won the 1984 driving championship under Piedmont's red, white and blue colors, learned of USAir's withdrawal Wednesday afternoon. Hagan's team has been sponsored by Piedmont for nearly five years. During that span, Piedmont has been a sponsor of the NASCAR series and is listed as the official airline of NASCAR. Hagan said he was disappointed with the decision. "But at least it comes at a good point, where we can start looking for a new sponsor," Hagan told the Winston-Salem Journal. The Piedmont team had helped launch the careers of Ricky Rudd and Terry Labonte. Sterling Marlin was the current driver for Hagan's team. "We think we have given a great deal to the sport in addition to it being good for us," Clark said. "The two men who brought Piedmont into NASCAR racing, Bill Howard and Bill McGee, have left the company. Howard went to work for the pilots at United Airlines; McGee is now the president of Braniff Airlines. A Piedmont official who requested anonymity told the newspaper that USAir's decision to drop out of NASCAR "has upset a lot of people at Piedmont." Clark said the change was not an attempt by USAir to change Piedmont's image on the heels of the merger. "We think both USAir and Piedmont have solid images and we want to project the best of those companies as we head into next year," Clark said.

Rooney Critical After Suffering Stroke

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Art Rooney Sr., chairman and founder of the Pittsburgh Steelers, remained in critical condition after suffering a stroke that paralyzed his upper right arm, officials say. Rooney, 87, has a pacemaker and his heart problems were complicating the stroke he suffered Wednesday evening, said cardiologist Theodore R. Gelet, Rooney's family physician. "We've had to give him medication to take care of his heart, and this is also producing problems with swelling that covers up some of the symptoms of the stroke," the doctor said Thursday at a news conference. "He's awake. He responded to questioning," Gelet said. He described Rooney's prognosis as guarded. Rooney's sons Dan, who is team president, and Art Jr. were among those at his bedside Thursday, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Donnelly. Rooney was unable to speak because he was connected to a respirator to help him breathe. He apparently recognized his sons and responded to them by squeezing their hands or blinking his eyes, Gelet said. "The Steelers' patriarch experienced dizziness then difficulty speaking at 4:55 p.m. Wednesday at the Steelers' offices at Three Rivers Stadium, Gelet said. Shortly after that, Rooney suffered a stroke that probably involved the middle artery on the left side of his brain and caused paralysis of the upper right arm and further difficulty speaking. Rooney, who founded the NFL's fifth-oldest franchise in 1933, was admitted to Mercy Hospital in stable condition around 5:30 p.m. He soon regained his speech and was in "full charge of his mental faculties," Gelet said. Around 9:30 a.m. Thursday, however, Rooney began having difficulty breathing. He was moved to the intensive care unit in critical condition and was connected to the respirator, which also helps control the heart and monitors brain activity, he said. Rooney was being given a sedative, a blood-thinning medication to prevent clotting and the same heart medications he has been taking for problems that have plagued him for at least eight years, Gelet said. "A stroke occurs when a clot of blood or fatty tissue blocks the flow of blood to the brain, causing swelling around the brain that can lead to paralysis, difficulty breathing and speaking and loss of mental ability. Rooney underwent minor surgery in May to remove a blood clot in his left arm that created numbness in the limb. He was discharged fully recovered and returned to his home in a North Side neighborhood near Three Rivers Stadium. Gelet said he examined Rooney on Tuesday. "The last thing he told me was, 'Keep me going 13 more years,'" Gelet said. "He's very strong."

Aaron May Quit; No Place To Go

ATLANTA (AP) — Home run king Henry Aaron, now the highest ranking black executive on a major league team, said he is considering leaving baseball because blacks are not being allowed to move into the game's top positions. "I can't go any further in baseball, that's obvious," said Aaron, the director of player development for the Atlanta Braves. "I've been here 12 years and I'm still in the same position. Nobody's called me and said, 'Will you be our general manager? Our president?' Nobody's ever going to do that," he said. "But that's America, and it's the black plight in America, and the black plight in baseball. I've reached my plateau, so it may be time to go on to another phase of my life." He commented in an interview published in today's editions of The Atlanta Constitution.

Gastineau Does The Job

MONTREAL (AP) — He had to journey to another country for his first sack and first tackles of the NFL exhibition season, but Mark Gastineau may have saved his job in New York by doing so.

The controversial defensive end gave his best performance in more than a year Thursday night, helping the Jets defense stymie the Cleveland Browns in an 11-7 victory at Olympic Stadium. After the Browns drove 79 yards in 12 plays for a touchdown on their first possession, the Jets shut them down.

Four times, the usually anemic pass rush got to Cleveland's quarterbacks. But none of those sacks, not even cornerback Carl Howard's blitz that resulted in a safety, could have been as satisfying as Gastineau's.

"It was very much a relief," said Gastineau, once the king of NFL sack artists and holder of the one-season league record of 22 quarterback traps. "It's been a long time coming."

Gastineau had 4½ sacks last year, but rarely was a factor in a game. And when he failed to get a sack or a tackle in New York's first two preseason games this year, his status with the rebuilding Jets became shaky.

Gastineau wasn't exactly dominant against Cleveland, especially early when he faced Pro Bowl tackle Cody Risien. But he did make an impact later on.

When he sacked Mike Pagel for an 8-yard loss in the third quarter, Gastineau celebrated by punching the air and jumping around.

"It really felt good," he said. "I thought I played well tonight. It's been a rough few weeks and I've been trying to live up to what people expect of me. Tonight was one of the first positive signs in a while."

It was also the first positive result for the Jets since they beat Cincinnati in the 12th week of the 1987 season. They lost their final four games of last season and their first two of this preseason.

"It gets old losing," said Pat Ryan, who returned from a hamstring injury to quarterback the Jets in the second half. "Preseason or regular season, in a football game or a pickup basketball game, it's always better to win."

The Jets won the first NFL game played in Canada in 19 years because they made the big plays, particularly on defense.

Howard came from the blind side to slam Pagel into the end zone on a third-and-14 play from the 8. The two points lifted New York to within 7-5.

Late in the first half, it was Rich Miano, a safety playing linebacker, that intercepted Pagel's poorly thrown pass in the end zone to snuff a Cleveland threat.

Tom McCarthy's 39-yard punt pined the Browns at their 1 late in the third quarter, and the Jets got the ball back at the Cleveland 49. Ryan guided them to the 21 before Chris O'Brien kicked the winning field goal from 38 yards.

Pat Leahy, who earlier connected from 34 yards, hit from 22 for the only points of the fourth quarter.

"The whole team is starting to get a good feeling," Coach Joe Walton said. "I know the whole darn team had a good feeling about itself tonight."

The Browns, one of the favorites in the AFC, had little to feel positive about. Bernie Kosar was effective in his short stint, taking Cleveland to its score on a 4-yard pass to Kevin Mack. Kosar completed six of eight passes for 61 yards.

But he didn't like what he saw the rest of the game.

"We scored and made good progress early," Kosar said. "But we were not very successful after the first couple of series."

"There were a lot of problems out there, offensively and defensively. But that's kind of natural, too, in the third week of the preseason. You're not going to be as sharp or work together as well as in the regular season."

"I don't think there is a team in the league that does not need some tuning up at this stage."

Montreal will need some tuning up if it hopes to continue staging such games — or, in the long run, to get an expansion team. The game drew 39,112, most of whom rooted for the Browns, even though the Jets were the home team.

Problems with the scoreboard clock marred the first quarter and caused several delays. A few times, the clock didn't stop on incomplete passes and plays that went out-of-bounds.

But at least it didn't rain — the Olympic Stadium roof leaks and Wednesday's practices were interrupted by a cascade that fell in the middle of the field.

Still, organizers said the game was "a tremendous success."

Gastineau certainly would agree. The game kicked off the third full week of the NFL exhibition schedule.

Tonight, it will be Kansas City vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Denver at Miami and Buffalo at Seattle.

On Saturday night, it will be Detroit at Cincinnati, New England at Philadelphia, Tampa Bay at Atlanta, Pittsburgh at the New York Giants, New Orleans at Indianapolis, San Francisco at San Diego, Houston at the Los Angeles Rams and Washington at the Los Angeles Raiders.

Minnesota visits Phoenix on Sunday night and Chicago is at Dallas on Monday night.

AROUND THE CAMPS
Four-time Pro Bowl tackle Chris Hinton walked out of the Indianapolis

Colts training camp Thursday while two other veterans ended holdouts.

Hinton, who will be fined $1,000 a day until he returns, was unavailable for comment. He was nursing a sore knee and wasn't expected to see much action Saturday night against the New Orleans Saints.

The Colts signed offensive tackle Kevin Call, a 6-foot-7, 302-pound, fifth-year pro from Colorado State, and cornerback Willie Tullis, a 1987 starter.

Tampa Bay signed wide receiver Greg Harris, a rookie from Troy State recently waived by the New York Giants. Harris had been the Giants' 11th-round draft choice.

Zeke Gadsen, a linebacker from Pitt, was claimed on waivers by the Houston Oilers. Gadsen was Buffalo's fifth-round draft pick this year.

The Dallas Cowboys waived end Randy Watts and kicker Jess Atkinson as well as eight other players. The 305-pound Watts was a star on Dallas' replacement team last year. Atkinson, who also played for the Patriots, Giants and Cardinals, was claimed on waivers by the Cowboys after being released earlier this month by Washington.

Detroit cut cornerback Earl Johnson and defensive end George McDuffie.

Defending Champs May Have Trouble Repeating

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Garner, Shelby, Whiteville and Murphy are the feared four in North Carolina prep football — the returning champions.

But making a repeat performance may be easier said than done, according to coaches.

"People expect you to win," said Murphy Coach David Gentry, whose two-time defending 1-A champions have won 38 of their last 40 games. "That's the kind of pressure you feel. Sometimes it gets hard to pull a rug out of the hat, but we think we have a pretty solid football team."

Whiteville Coach Bill Hewett agrees with Gentry.

"They (the team) have a lot of pride going but we are way off from being a good football team," said Hewett, whose 2-A team is co-owner of the state's longest winning streak at 15. "We have some talent but it's going to take them some time to work in."

The 1988 prep football season, which begins Aug. 26, marks the 75th straight year the North Carolina High School Athletic Association has crowned football champions from the 311 football-playing schools.

Shelby, the two-time defending 3-A champion, also faces experience problems as it opens the season a week later, while the 4-A Garner Trojans, also winners of 15 straight, must try life — and winning — without graduated record-setting running back Anthony Barbour.

"The kids are in a daze," Garner Coach Hal Stewart said. "They keep looking around like he (Barbour) might drop out of the sky."

Garner returns five starters on offense and six on defense, but the Trojans will again field a small 4-A team.

"I'm the only beef in town," Stewart joked. "As far as repeating, there are so many good teams around. Things have to go your way."

While inexperience may hurt the defending state champions, there appears to be a host of veteran teams ready to take over the reigns.

In 4-A, Richmond Senior, 10-3 last season and a loser to Garner in the state semifinals, will look to 6-3, 205-pound junior quarterback Mike Thomas and 23 returning lettermen.

The Mid-South Conference will once again be strong with Fayetteville Smith possibly the best with 17 starters returning from a 7-3 squad a year ago.

Running back Keith Battle, who rushed for more than 1,300 yards and 17 touchdowns last season, should give Asheville Reynolds one of the best teams in the mountains.

In the eastern part of the state, Greenville Rose, with star defensive ends Timmy Moore and Carlester Crumpler, may surprise.

Other 4-A schools to watch include perennial powers Greensboro North, Northern Durham, Kannapolis Brown and Morganton Freedom, Greensboro Grimsley, West Mecklenburg, Garner, Wilson Hunt, Rocky Mount and Gastonia Hunter Huss.

The 4-A title game will be played Dec. 9 at Wake Forest's Groves Stadium.

All-state quarterback Chuckie Burnette, also listed by Street & Smith's college football guide as one of the top quarterback prospects in the country, could lead Burlington Cummings to the 3-A title this season.

Shelby, riding a 13-game winning streak, is also led by a good quarterback in 165-pound Chad Holbrook.

Brevard, somewhat of a disappointment the past two seasons, appears ready once again to take a shot at the 3-A crown. Lineman Kelly Whitmore is rated by scouts as one of the state's top linemen.

The surprise 3-A squad may be Belmont South Point, which returns its entire backfield from a 9-3 team.

Other 3-A schools to watch include High Point Andrews, Burlington Williams, Tarboro and Havelock.

Whoever survives the powerful Southern District 7 Conference may march to the 2-A championship. Bunker Hill, Maiden and Newton-Conover all appear ready to field strong teams.

Thomasville, 14-12 losers to Whiteville in last year's 2-A title game, Lexington, Fuquay-Varina and Wallace-Rose Hill also should make a run at the crown. Two new schools — Hertford County, a combination of Ahsoskie and Murfreesboro, and Smoky Mountain, a combination of Sylva-Webster and Cullowhee, could also make some noise in 2-A.

Look west for the best 1-A teams with Swain County and Murphy heading the list. Their battle on Nov. 4 should decide who has the top squad.

Murphy only returns two starters on defense and five from an offense that led the state in scoring last season at 48.9 points per game.

"The major thing is to get some experience under us," Gentry said. "I don't think we can put as many points on the scoreboard ... that's unrealistic. Even some great teams can't do that."

East Montgomery and Red Springs also appear strong in 1-A.

Andrews holds the state's longest losing streak at 21 heading into the 1988 season, followed by Piedmont's 20 and Surry Central's 19.

Northern Durham has won the most consecutive games on the road at 20, while Charlotte Garinger has lost 17 in a row at home.

Offensive blockers will have an additional technique to employ in 1988 — probably the most important rule change heading into the season. They will be allowed to fully extend their arms and use open hands.

the fourth inning, when Mark McGwire homered to account for Oakland's only run.

Baltimore went ahead 5-0 in the first and made it 10-1 in the fourth, batting around in both innings.

Bob Welch, 14-7, allowed nine runs in 3 1/3 innings and walked five for the Athletics.

Rangers 4, Twins 2
Minnesota failed to gain ground on the A's as Jeff Russell pitched a five-hitter and Pete Incaviglia and Geno Petralli hit consecutive homers for Texas.

Russell, 10-5, allowed only one hit, a fourth-inning double by John Moses, until the eighth, when he gave up two runs and three hits.

With two outs in the eighth, Russell surrendered a double by Al Newman, an RBI single by Dan Gladden and a single by Moses. Gladden then scored from third on a wild pitch, but Kirby Puckett struck out to end the threat.

Incaviglia led off the second by hitting the first pitch from Charlie Lea, 6-7, for his 22nd home run. Two pitches later, Petralli hit his sixth homer.

The Rangers scored their final run in the eighth on Pete O'Brien's 12th homer.

Indians 4, Brewers 3
Cleveland stopped a Milwaukee rally when right fielder Cory Snyder threw out the potential tying run at home plate in the ninth inning.

With the Indians ahead 4-1, Cleveland starter Rich Yett allowed two hits to start the ninth and was replaced by Doug Jones, who gave up an RBI double to B.J. Surhoff, leaving two runners in scoring position.

Jones got the next two outs without allowing a run before Jim Gantner singled to right field. Rob Deer scored from third, but Snyder's one-hop throw to Allanson got Surhoff for the final out, giving Jones his 27th save and Snyder his 14th assist, tops among AL outfielders.

Yett, 7-4, allowed eight hits, struck out six and walked none as Cleveland won its fourth consecutive game. The loss was Milwaukee's third straight.

Surprise Diver Earns Olympic Spot

INDIANAPOLIS — Olympic silver medalist Kelly McCormick is headed to the Seoul Olympics with a surprise teammate in 3-meter springboard diving.

McCormick, the daughter of two-time double Olympic gold medalist Patty McCormick, scored 578.22 points in the finals of the event Thursday to easily win with a 1107.12 score for her 20 dives.

Wendy Lucero, who claimed the other women's springboard berth on the team by less than a point, was second at 1030.98. Mary Fischbach, her teammate on Kimball's Divers, was third and captured the alternate's spot with 1030.17.

"I felt bad," Lucero said of her teammate. "We as a team are so close. It's very difficult, we all want to be there for each other. I felt happy for myself and sad for her and I told so."

The berths were the first claimed at the Indiana Natatorium, where the U.S. Olympic trials continue through Sunday. The two men's springboard berths will be filled tonight with defending gold medalist Greg Louganis leading after Thursday's preliminaries.

"Yesterday was more nerve wrecking... I was just shaky," said McCormick, who took the lead in the seventh round of Wednesday's prelims and was never caught again. "Tonight I was trying to go on remote control."

McCormick, who suffered a calf injury in her left leg in January that has limited her training, began pulling away on her second dive Thursday when she received four 9's and 47.52 points for a back dive in the pike position.

She said she wasn't aware of her score or that she had the competition clinched heading into her final dive.

"You've got to compete with yourself. You can't worry about everybody else. If I would have been worried about them, I might not have landed on my head (dive correctly)," McCormick said.

Lucero, who never finished higher than fourth in eight national championship meets on the 3-meter board, didn't know she had the Olympic berth until her coach told her after Fischbach had made her final dive.

"I'm a performer and I try not to look at the other opposition," Lucero said. "I really feel that to do my best I cannot look at somebody else, because everyone dives a little differently."

McCormick, 28, called her performance in the finals one of the most consistent of her career and thought it was her best ever.

She received 14 scores of 9 and her low award was a single 6.5, which came on her final dive.

"I wanted to feel like I gave this audience the best performance I have ever given," Lucero said. "I worked so long and so hard for this. In 1984, I sat in the Olympic trials audience. I wasn't even good enough to get on the deck."

Lucero moved into second in the seventh round with a reverse 2½ somersault in the tuck position that netted her 63.84 points, gained 63.51 with a reverse 1½ that included 2½ twists and earned the Olympic spot with her top score of the night — a 65.61 on her final effort, an inward 2½ somersault in the tuck position.

"Because she was my teammate we had a really good time together," Lucero said of Fischbach. "It sort of spurred us on to dive better. Within this last year we've dove harder and better and both improved each other by being together."

Louganis the defending Olympic gold medalist in springboard and platform diving, scored 722.88 points in the preliminary round of the men's competition. He took the lead for good on the fifth of his 11 dives in scoring his highest point total in the event this year.

Kent Ferguson, who has been training with Louganis the past 2½ years at Boca Raton, Fla., is second with 678.90 points and Mark Bradshaw third at 660.84.

All 12 men competing in the prelims moved into tonight's finals and carried their preliminary scores with them under the new international format being used this year.

The top two scorers in each event earn a berth on the U.S. team for the Olympics at Seoul, South Korea beginning Sept. 17.

Patrick Jeffrey is fourth with 638.55 points in the men's competition, followed by Ron Meyer with 624.60. Bruce Kimball, competing despite the controversy surrounding his involvement in the trials, was sixth with 601.14.

Kimball was involved in an auto accident on Aug. 1 at Brandon, Fla., in which two teen-agers were killed and six others injured. Seven Florida residents who identified themselves as friends of the victims watched the prelims staging what they called "a silent protest."

"We wanted to see Bruce dive and see if he had any remorse for what happened," Jennifer Beck, a senior at Brandon High School, said Thursday night. "It's strange to have seen the devastation he caused and then see him free to compete. We don't believe he should represent our nation and we're going to continue our efforts if he makes the team."

"I did not realize they were there," Dick Kimball, the diver's father and coach, said.

Bruce Kimball wasn't available for comment after the competition, but his father claimed that many of the facts about the accident hadn't been reported and that his son was correct in deciding to compete.

"They've got to understand that Bruce has done nothing but train for diving the last four years," the elder Kimball said. "He was in the house four days and didn't want to move out of his room. He was devastated. It was a very difficult time for him."

Kimball was eighth after the opening round when he scored 37.44 points, receiving marks of 7.5 and 8.0 from the judges.

"I think he was very nervous and then he found out it was OK," Kimball's father said. "He was more relaxed then and he did better as he went along."

Louganis received four scores of 10 for perfect dives during the competition, including three on a simple forward dive that also earned him four 9.5's from the seven judges.

Louganis, who scored a record 755.49 points off the board in 1983, accumulated nine 9.5's and 14 9.0's Thursday.

"I felt real good. I felt strong, getting more in synch with the diving board. That's always a contest," Louganis said.

Kimball's Dad Feels Confident

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bruce Kimball's father is confident his son can make the U.S. Olympic diving team — a happening that is distressing to a group of Florida residents petitioning to have him banned from representing the United States.

Kimball, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist in platform diving, is competing here despite protestors who claim he should not be given the chance to represent his nation because he has been charged with five felonies for driving under the influence on Aug. 1.

Two teen-agers were killed and six others injured when Kimball's car plowed into a crowd in front of a meeting place in Brandon, Fla. His arraignment is scheduled for Aug. 29 and he is free on $10,000 bond. U.S. diving officials have said Kimball is qualified to compete in the trials and that they have no rule to stop him from participating.

"He wouldn't be here if he didn't think he could make it. When you have a lifetime dream you don't give it up easily," Dick Kimball, his father and coach, said after Thursday's competition.

His son announced Tuesday that he planned to compete, a decision that has led to a group of seven Brandon residents making the trip here to protest his participation.

Jennifer Beck, 17, who says she was friendly with the victims, said members of the group would be outside the Indiana University today collecting signatures on petitions seeking disqualification of Kimball.

"We're not going to enter the building. We don't want to interfere with the participation of the other divers. They should be punished," the teen-ager said. "We're going to be there collecting signatures on petitions. We decided to organize after hearing Bruce Kimball make his statement of why he planned to compete here.

"He said 'if I don't compete I'd be giving up and I won't give up.' Well I don't give up and I won't give up," Beck said. "I have nightmares about what happened. I feel I'm doing the right thing."

"This has been a difficult time for a lot of people," Kimball's father said. "I was just lucky that I had another week of camp when the accident happened. That helped get my mind off the subject. For me, coaching diving is work and for me to go back and do that was the best therapy for me."

Kimball said the competition here is working the same way for his son, who has remained silent since making a statement that he would compete on Tuesday.

"A diver has to be able to block things out of their mind. Being here is something that takes his mind off the terrible tragedy. It's like going back to work," Kimball said.

Kimball is sixth going into tonight's finals of the 3-meter springboard competition. He scored 601.14 points. Greg Louganis led the prelims with 722.88 and Kent Ferguson was second at 678.90.

The prelim scores are carried over to the finals with the top two finishers earning a trip to Seoul, South Korea, for the Summer Olympics.

"I was real pleased. He dove real well," the elder Kimball said. "He dove a lot better than I expected and springboard is not his event."

Watching Kimball compete were the Florida residents upset over his participation. They arrived with the prelims of the men's competition already under way.

Rookie Is Trying To Stay Alive

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP) — "The undertaker" is fighting to stay alive in the New England Patriots' linebacking picture.

Rookie Vincent Brown, who earned that nickname because of his hard-hitting style at Mississippi Valley State, has found that being drafted in the second round doesn't guarantee a smooth transition or a job on the NFL team.

While he wrestles with the more sophisticated defenses in pro football, his coaches are making judgments on his ability.

The Patriots are desperate for linebackers and need a player with Brown's potential.

"If he's good enough," New England linebackers coach Don Shinnick said, "we need him."

But shouldn't his high selection in the draft assure him of a job?

"If we feel they're not good enough, they're not going to play here," Shinnick added. "It's as simple as that. Number one draft choice, number 10, free agent, whatever."

Brown has made some progress since his poor performance Aug. 6 in the Patriots' preseason opener against Atlanta and Shinnick said he "is coming along."

But, Brown admits, "I've still got a long way to go."

His difficulties seem more serious when compared with the smoothness of first-round draft choice John Stephens' transition to the NFL. Stephens has led the Patriots in rushing in each of their two preseason games.

Brown also must overcome the lack of top competition he encountered while playing for a Division I-AA school.

"On defense, a guy playing on a small college is harder to accommodate than on offense," Shinnick said. "A receiver is lining up here and go catch the stupid ball. A back can get the ball and run through the hole."

But a defensive player, especially a linebacker, must make a quick decision on where a play is going. He must anticipate whether to guard a receiver or try to tackle a runner. He must figure things out on the fly.

That's been Brown's biggest problem.

He frequently was out of position and made only two tackles in the 34-30 loss to Atlanta. He made progress a week later when he made six tackles in a 27-14 loss to Houston.

"We saw some spurts, so that was encouraging," Shinnick said.

"I was a little more pleased," Brown said. "I didn't play real well my second game but I didn't make the same kind of mental errors that I made in the first game. I concentrated a little better."

The opener "made me realize how important your mind is in this game as well as the physical part because I was physically ready," he added. "I just wasn't mentally ready."

The Patriots, who suddenly find themselves weak at linebacker, are hoping he gets ready soon.

Brown plays inside linebacker, a position held by Steve Nelson until his retirement in the offseason. Starting outside linebacker Don Blackmon also retired and his replacement, Ed Williams, suffered a season-ending knee injury against Atlanta.

"I knew that I would probably have a pretty good opportunity to play," said the 6-foot-2, 245-pound Brown, whose speed and strength made him outstanding against the run and the pass in college. "The most difficult part is concentrating on all my assignments each particular down, being able to recognize certain things rapidly. It takes time."

Texas A&M Hopes To Make 1 More Trip To Cotton Bowl

One of a Series
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The only thing different about the Cotton Bowl this year might be its new name. Texas A&M could be there for the fourth consecutive year.

While it's now the Mobil-Cotton Bowl, the mobile-and-hostile Aggies very well could earn another invitation as the host team because of a talent pool as deep as any in the nation.

A&M, facing a tough non-conference schedule, should know by October what kind of team it will field.

The Aggies, who defeated Notre Dame 35-10 in the Cotton Bowl to finish 10th in the final Associated Press poll, open with Nebraska on Aug. 27 in the Kickoff Classic at East Rutherford, N.J.

The next Saturday, A&M visits Louisiana State. Then, after a week off, the Aggies will play host to Alabama before traveling to Stillwater, Okla., to play Oklahoma State.

A&M launches its Southwest Conference title defense on Oct. 1 against Texas Tech at Kyle Field. The Red Raiders were the only SWC team to beat the Aggies in 1987.

Texas, Arkansas, Baylor, Texas Christian, and Tech could give the Aggies trouble. A&M plays SWC games on the road at Arkansas and Texas.

"We should be better on offense than we were last year," A&M coach Jackie Sherrill said. "The schedule is the most difficult we've ever played."

Sherrill, who also is athletic director, was asked why he gave himself such a tough schedule.

"I strongly believe that it does a team more harm to play easy non-conference opponents early," he said. "When conference play begins, you're not nearly as ready as you are when you've got some tough games under your belt."

"It might hurt you in the polls but the real gauge of how good a team is is how well it finishes."

The Aggies have some potent offensive weapons in quarterback Bucky Richardson, offensive MVP of the Cotton Bowl, and Darren Lewis, one of the top running backs in the nation.

Sherrill said Richardson, Lance Pavlas and Chris Osgood, a transfer from Mississippi, will share time at quarterback.

"We'll play all three of them," Sherrill said. "I'm not as concerned about that as the media and fans seem to be. They all bring something to the table."

The defense is led by All-American linebacker John Roper and linebacker Adam Bob, the defensive MVP of the Cotton Bowl.

The Aggies also must handle the distractions of an NCAA investigation, charging them with 31 violations and seven other allegations of possible cover-up. The NCAA's decision could be announced in late August.

The Texas Longhorns could ride the explosive runs of Eric Metcalf to a surprise championship.

Texas loses only seven seniors from a team that defeated Pittsburgh 32-27 in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Coach Dave McWilliams has an experienced defense, a Longhorn tradition. Texas opens at Brigham Young on Sept. 8.

Arkansas is talented, but must develop a passing attack. Coach Ken Hatfield believes he has one through the improvement of Quinn Grovey.

"We have exciting potential an offense," Hatfield says. "We have more weapons at the skill positions than we've ever had."

Baylor could be a sleeper if the Bears' young-offensive line comes on strong. Pittsburgh transfer Bobby Sign, considered one of the best centers in the nation, will anchor it.

"Bobby started three years at Pitt and should give us some of the experience we need," Teaff said.

Quarterback Brad Goebel could be the best passer in the SWC.

TCU should be ready to spring an ambush with 31 seniors. "This is potentially the best team we've had," Coach Jim Wacker said.

However, TCU has to open at Georgia. Texas Tech has a big-play producer in quarterback Billy Joe Tulliver and a corps of speedy wide receivers.

"We've got great skill people but it won't mean much if we can't get the job done up front," Tech Coach Spike Dykes said. "We'll be average as everyday wash if the offensive line doesn't come through."

Houston could be troublesome with Jack Pardee's run-and-shoot offense, which piled up a 60-40 victory over Texas last year.

Jason Phillips caught 99 passes last year and the Cougars have one of the top defensive backs in the nation in cornerback Johnny Jackson, who set an NCAA record by returning three interceptions for touchdowns in the win over Texas.

Houston also is under investigation by the NCAA on accusations of illegal payments to players.

Rice's lack of depth keeps the Owls from being legitimate threats although Coach Jerry Berndt said, "I expect our offense to be among the best in the conference."

SMU will not field a team this year because of NCAA probation. The Mustangs will begin workouts in late August under the direction of Forrest Gregg.

"We'll work just like we're getting ready for a game," Gregg said.

SMU's first game since the NCAA "death penalty" is Sept. 2, 1989 against Rice.

SMU has dropped Oklahoma from its schedule, but the Mustangs will play Notre Dame in non-conference play in two years.

The Mustangs will practice this fall, scrimmage each other and attend some SWC games.

Sports Medicine Advances Preventing Many Injuries

CHICAGO (AP) — Football players are bigger, stronger and tougher than ever before, but advances in sports medicine have prevented an increase in serious injuries on the field, a new study finds.

The most controversial part of the study, reported in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, is its finding that injury rates did not differ significantly for players on artificial surfaces over the study period.

"We're doing a helluva job keeping injuries in a violent game from getting worse," said New York Jets' team physician Dr. James Nicholas, who led the study.

An orthopedic surgeon, Nicholas is credited with extending quarterback Joe Namath's career and serves on the staff at both Lenox Hill Hospital and Cornell Medical College.

"We profile our draft picks, medically speaking, better than we ever have, we diagnose their injuries quicker, and the surgery we use to repair them is less intrusive," he said.

"The ironic thing," he added, "is that a guy like Namath, given his bad knees, probably wouldn't have passed the physicals we're using today."

Nicholas and colleagues found the number of significant injuries — those requiring a player to miss at least two consecutive games — averaged less than one per game from 1960 to 1986.

The study also found the rate of "major" injuries — those requiring a player to miss at least eight consecutive games — was less than half that over the same period.

"Everybody thinks injury rates are high, and according to press reports 'violently and brutally higher,'" Nicholas said. "There doesn't appear any basis for those kinds of statements."

But the finding that injury rates did not differ on artificial surfaces drew howls of protest from the National Football League Players Association. The union said it contradicts an earlier study examining injury rates of high school players on grass and artificial turf fields, as well as what the union contends is anecdotal evidence gathered by players over the years.

Players maintain the sure-footedness provided by artificial turf, and considered its most attractive element, also is its most damaging element. An attempt to change direction suddenly can put damaging stress on the knee because the joint pivots while the foot remains planted.

"That's why no one wants to play on turf. No one. Their careers are short enough as it is," said M.J. Duberstein, research director for the union.

The union, which contends the league will not make injury data available, did its own study during 1983-84 and concluded players sustained 20 percent more injuries on artificial surfaces. The data was gathered from injury lists released by the clubs and was published in most newspapers.

"Since it's been shown artificial turf is neither cheaper than grass, nor safer," said Duberstein, "you can go ahead and be cynical about why we get biased studies defending it ..."

"The more injuries and the more severe they are, the more turnover you get," he said. "And more turnover means cheaper players."

But Nicholas countered, "I have no ax to grind. I'm not selling artificial turf."

The first artificial turf surface used in the NFL was Houston's Astrodome in 1968. Fifteen of the league's 28 teams have such surfaces now, although the newest facility — Joe Robbie Stadium, home of the Miami Dolphins — has grass, and the Chicago Bears recently switched from turf to grass.

The Jets switched from grass at Shea Stadium to artificial turf when they moved into the Meadowlands in 1984.

"During the study period, the Jets played 177 games on grass and 84 on turf. There were 45 major injuries on grass and 29 on turf. After adjusting those figures, we found no meaningful statistical difference between the two surfaces," Nicholas said.

The JAMA report was based on data collected by Nicholas since the Jets franchise began as a member of the American Football League in 1960. The AFL merged with the larger National Football League in 1968.

Among its other findings:

— The knee was the site of the greatest number of injuries, accounting for 39 percent of all significant injuries and 58 percent of major injuries between 1969-85, the study found.

— The position players most likely to suffer those injuries were running backs and cornerbacks.

"The reason the running backs get hurt most often is because they're smaller and tend to get hit much harder, and get piled on. With teams throwing the ball more, cornerbacks tend to play a faster and more wide-open game, they get cross-blocked or hit from the side."

Brinton Wins Cycle Race

HOUSTON (AP) — David Brinton pulled away from Steve Hegg on the final lap to win the men's individual pursuit championship and a spot on the U.S. Olympic cycling team.

Brinton finished the see-saw final, which featured five lead changes, in 4:47.07, just 1.60 seconds ahead of Hegg, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist in the 4,000-meter event.

Connie Young, who competed in the Winter Olympics as a speed skater in 1980 and 1984, reached the women's match sprint semifinals, as did Renee Duprel, Ellen Braun and Janie Eickhoff.

1980 Boycott Memories Still Lingering For Some

By CHRIS DEHNEL
(c) 1988, Greenwich Time

Every four years, the Summer Olympics bring back bitter memories for Karla Drewsen.

A former Olympic crew team member, 1980 was to be her Olympic year in Moscow. That was the year the United States decided to boycott the games after the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan.

"It's not only every four years that the memories are there because I don't think I'll ever forget it," Drewsen said in a phone interview from Amherst, Mass., where she is working on a doctorate in animal behavior at the University of Massachusetts. "It was difficult not being able to go."

Drewsen, a member of the U.S. eight-woman boat in 1980, had been selected to compete in the Olympics when she found out about President Carter's decision. She was in West Germany, where the team was training on a lake near the East German border, when the boycott was announced.

"There had been rumors of a boycott for a long time, but when we found out it was for real, we were in shock," she said. "We couldn't believe that we weren't going to go. If we wanted to, we could have jumped the border into East Germany. Some members of the team talked about it, but no one actually did it. It was a shame because we had just beaten the East German boat in two of three races, and that boat won the gold medal that year in Moscow."

What hit Drewsen hardest was the realization that the Olympic Games had not only been influenced, but also affected by politics. Months of hard work were wasted and a childhood dream was gone.

"I had a friend who worked for the Associated Press and she was assigned to cover the Olympics," said Drewsen. "It was a dream of ours to go to the Olympics, and we were all set to go. But the boycott ruined everything."

"What also made me angry was the fact that athletics and politics were able to mix. I don't remember exactly where I was at the time, but I remember thinking that this was against the whole Olympic ideal."

There were massive protests after the boycott was announced. For Drewsen, her big statement came when she chose not to attend a reception in Washington for the Olympic team.

"When they had the reception, a lot of rowers refused to shake hands with the president," Drewsen said. "I just didn't go. If I did, it might have helped resolve some of the bad feelings I had. But that was my way of protesting."

"As mad as I was, though, I have to congratulate the United States. The U.S. handled the boycott much better than Canada. At least we were recognized as Olympians. The Canadians barely received Olympic status."

But that is not to say that Drewsen has forgiven the people involved. She said the boycott would forever be a sore spot. Eight years later, Drewsen said some of the U.S. crew team members were still angry.

"I missed the chance to have that camaraderie and to be among the best in the world. I think I'll always miss it," Drewsen said. "The best athletes in the world are at the Olympics and it would have been nice to be there with them. It also would have been nice knowing you were among the best in the world."

Drewsen has been away from crew racing ever since she failed to make the 1984 Olympic team in the U.S. four-woman boat. However, she hopes to finish her doctorate work in January and she might even get back into rowing.

"I may get back into rowing next summer, but I don't know how it will be," Drewsen said. "The reality is that politics are still there and I am still bitter because it seems like they will never come out. It was also a farce in 1984 because there were not a lot of countries in Los Angeles. Yeah, we won the gold medal, but there was no one to go against. I think it will go on and on. It will be a sore spot forever."

Pro Hockey Is Suddenly L.A.'s Hot New Ticket

By BOB BAKER
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — My friend Tom, a rabid hockey fan, is unhappy.

Now, you'd expect Tom to be very happy because the local hockey team just paid the equivalent of 800 Cadillacs for some guy who is supposed to be the greatest player in history.

But Tom is not happy.

Tom is not happy because of people like me: people who know nothing about hockey but now desperately want to. People who sense, out of a need to be in on whatever is new and different, that hockey is about to become a big deal in Los Angeles.

However, people like me have a problem. We know nothing about this game, and we have to learn before they throw out the first puck in the fall. Now, there you have it. That's the problem. Do they throw out the first puck, or do they just drop it? Do they begin their season in the fall?

Tom has become rather upset with me in the past week because I have approached him with a number of well-intentioned questions aimed at helping me grasp the essence of hockey, so that I can watch what's-his-name skate gracefully through the five (it is five, isn't it?) opposing players and slam the puck into the net at close range. Given, that is, that he does not pull up and slap in a long-distance shot, for which I presume they give extra points.

Tom blew up at me the other night after I walked over to his desk in our office and asked four foundation-building questions:

This blue line I keep hearing about, I said, how thick is it? Is it raised? Does anyone ever trip on it?

These skates these guys wear. Do they lace them up like in the old days, or do they use Velcro?

That red light that flashes after each goal. How soon is it turned off? Does someone else have to score before that happens? Or does a green light go on instead?

This term high-sticking. Does that signify the manner in which the player holds his stick? Or am I misspelling it? Does it refer to a good-natured greeting that opposing players use as they enter the rink, waving their sticks to wish each other good luck?

I'll tell you, this experience has given me a massive injection of empathy for people who are sports fans but have blind spots. I can imagine what it was like the day back in '79 that the Lakers signed Magic Johnson and the whole world here exploded and people who might have been, say, big golf fans scratched their heads and said: Hmhmhm. There they stood, aware they were on the periphery of an awesome event but embarrassed to admit they did not quite know what to look for.

I'm not embarrassed. I need help, a lot of it, and I bet there are a lot of other people out there just like me, self-styled sports fans who don't go to hockey games but are suddenly itching to see this guy whose nickname is "Great."

What do we do? We form study groups, that's what we do. We hire consultants. We study videotapes. We ask our friends, like Tom, as many questions as possible.

This will require courage. There will be massive resistance to the nouveaux pucksters among hockey fanatics. Expect this, friends. Expect these people to jealously guard their cult sport. Expect them to resent its "discovery" by the washed-and-permed masses. For years, hockey fans in Los Angeles have been a small, prideful knot of people. Now they face the painful specter of tens of thousands of people vying for the same limited number of Forum tickets, parking places and souvenir programs. It may get ugly.

WAS JESUS A LUNATIC? ARE YOU A CRANK?

A major movie maker has just released a movie that many Christians believe depicts Jesus as a lunatic. The same studio, a part owner of a local theater, says you are a crank if you disagree with them.

Universal studios is now releasing a movie "The Last Temptation of Christ" which one Christian observer has called "absolutely the most perverted, distorted account of the historical and Biblical Jesus I have ever read." The movie was released last week by Cineplex Odeon, a corporation half owned by Universal and owner of the Plitt Theatre in Greenville. Garth Drabinsky, chairman of Cineplex Odeon said that if any of his theaters received complaints about the movie they would dismiss those complaints as "cranks".

THE MOUNT PLEASANT CHRISTIAN CHURCH CALLS CHRISTIANS TO DECENCY!

The Mount Pleasant Christian Church is asking Christian people in this community to oppose this blasphemous movie and the businesses that have so little regard for our religious beliefs.

ALL THAT HAS TO HAPPEN FOR THE TREND TOWARD BLASPHEMY AND IMMORALITY TO CONTINUE IS FOR CHRISTIAN PEOPLE TO DO NOTHING! CAN WE DO ANYTHING TO FIGHT THIS BLASPHEMY? YES!

1. Write the chairman of Cineplex Odeon at 1303 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada m4t-249 to express your outrage and let them know you will not attend a movie at a Cineplex Odeon theater for at least one year.
2. Write Mr. Lew Wasserman, chairman, MCA, Inc. 100 Universal Plaza, Universal City, Ca. 91608 to voice your disapproval. Also express that you will boycott all MCA businesses for one year. These businesses include MCA Music, Motown Records, Putnam Publishing Group, Berkley Publishing Corp. and several others. For a further list, call the Mount Pleasant Christian Church at 758-1830, or write us at Rt. 6, Box 344, Greenville.

IN A DAY OF LIBERALISM AND DECAY IN CHURCHES, THE MOUNT PLEASANT CHRISTIAN CHURCH STANDS FIRM ON CHRIST AND HIS WORD THE BIBLE!

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Aug. 20

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be more objective, and you can easily keep the promises you have made. It is wise to stay at home this evening. Be tactful with your mate. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't get into an argument with someone who annoys you. Just quietly walk away from this person. Don't try to impress anyone. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't be careless in handling your work, or you could get into big trouble. Try not to criticize a co-worker. Control your temper at all times. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't accept that offer of recreation during the day that you could later regret. Don't be difficult with your mate this evening. LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Arguing over different views with family can bring a lot of trouble, so maintain the peace. Go out with friends, but don't argue with them either. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Be careful while running around doing errands. Don't let any gripes from others disturb you. Rise above all of this nonsense. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Be careful with your wallet, and safeguard your money. Avoid an automobile accident. Talk little to others, or they may misunderstand. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Don't try to force others to do as you wish. Try to assist a friend in distress this evening. Handle personal problems during the day. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Be careful not to confide in others about an important private matter. Tension with your mate may arise if you aren't careful. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Try to reconcile with someone you need in your life. It's not a good day to be forceful about anything or with anyone. Drive carefully. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Don't get involved in a public dispute, thus avoid big trouble you could get into. Be very loyal to a superior who likes you. PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A new idea seems to be exactly what you need at this time to solve a problem, but just the opposite could occur. Be considerate with all. Had this succeeded, he would have been able to discard one of dummy's diamonds on the king of hearts, and he would have been able to try for an overtrick with the diamond finesse.

"Unfortunately, the heart finesse lost and East returned a club. My client ruffed, crossed to the ace of hearts and took the diamond finesse. That, too, lost, so my client went down one trick. Since the odds on one of two finesses working is at least 3-to-1, how can anyone blame my client?"

"Ladies and gentlemen, honorable counsel's defense of South has been more learned than accurate! Mr. South would have done better to claim his slam at trick one—the defenders would probably have conceded.

"Suppose he wins the opening lead, then ruffs a club. Two rounds of trumps, ending on the table, are followed by another club ruff, and then come ace-king of hearts and a heart ruff. Now declarer completes the elimination by leading the jack of clubs and stuffing a diamond from hand!

"When West wins the queen—he must hold milady in light of his opening lead—he can either yield a ruff-sluff or else lead a diamond into declarer's major tenace. Either way, declarer loses a club trick and no more. We insist on a guilty verdict and damages."

Kathy Mattea Wins Nominations For Three Country Music Awards

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kathy Mattea has gone from being a Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum tour guide to having three nominations for the 22nd annual Country Music Association Awards.

"You can knock me over with a feather," she said. "This is amazing."

In nominations announced Thursday, Ms. Mattea found out she is a finalist for single of the year for "Eighteen Wheels and a Dozen Roses" and album of the year for "Untasted Honey," besides No. 1 female vocalist.

Grammy winners K.T. Oslin and Randy Travis each garnered nominations in four categories, including top vocalist, the association announced.

Some of the biggest stars in country music — Willie Nelson, Kenny Rogers, Barbara Mandrell, the Oak Ridge Boys, Loretta Lynn and Ricky Skaggs — were not among the finalists. And the band Alabama, which has dominated country music awards this decade, is a finalist in one category — vocal group of the year.

Oslin, who's been singing country music less than two years, was voted a finalist for top female vocalist, single of the year for "Do Ya" and Horizon Award for a rising star. She also received two nominations in the song of the year category as composer of the Grammy-winning "80's Ladies" and "Do Ya."

Travis, a former short-order cook and dishwasher, is a finalist for entertainer of the year, male vocalist of the year and single and song of the year, both for his self-penned "I Told You So." He won a Grammy in February for "Always and Forever."

Completing the finalists for entertainer of the year, the top award, are the Judds, 1986 winner Reba McEntire, George Strait and 1987 winner Hank Williams Jr.

Joining Ms. Mattea, Ms. McEntire, Ms. Oslin as finalists for female vocalist of the year are Rosanne Cash and Tanya Tucker.

Other finalists for top male vocalist are veteran Vern Gosdin, fast-rising Ricky Van Shelton, Strait and Williams.

Winners will be announced during a two-hour

CBS television special Oct. 10 with Dolly Parton.

Ms. McEntire, a former rodeo barrel racer, has been voted No. 1 female vocalist for an unprecedented four straight years.

Travis was voted male vocalist of the year last year and won top album for "Always and Forever" and No. 1 single for "Forever and Ever."

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo, have won the vocal group of the year award three straight times and are a finalist again this year. Others are the Bellamy Brothers, Foster & Lloyd, the O'Kanes and Sweethearts of the Rodeo.

Ms. Cash, daughter of country music star Johnny Cash, is also nominated for single of the year for "Tennessee Flat Top Box," a song written about 30 years ago by her father.

Her third nomination is with husband Rodney Crowell for vocal event of the year. This is a new category for two or more performers who do not normally sing together. They recorded the recent hit duet, "It's Such a Small World."

Winners and finalists are picked by the approximately 7,000 singers, songwriters, musicians, disc jockeys and others in country music.

Fall TV Schedule Has Little To Offer Viewers, Critics Say

By JAMES ENDRIS

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — TV audiences call it the new fall lineup. TV critics call it "the death march."

Part Disneyland, part reality, the recently concluded fall press tour for TV critics — an annual three-week marathon of screenings; breakfast, lunch and dinner interviews; and just plain orchestrated hoopla — is the kind of assignment that only a mother would understand isn't as cushy as it seems.

This has been especially true this season, thanks to the five-month Writers Guild of America strike that turned out most of the lights in Hollywood, halting productions, story lines and those who would "do lunch" and talk about television. Though the strike ended about two-thirds of the way through this year's tour, its effect on television coverage for the fall season is widespread.

So consider this a consumer advisory.

To begin with, next to no one at the networks had more than a pilot in hand to even talk about. And because the strike made it officially (but not privately) impossible to develop future scripts, many producers and actors just could not say what would happen to their characters beyond the first show.

Cable and public television programmers, on the other hand, got a break this year. Because their production schedules are not anchored to the fall and many make use of foreign productions, cable and PBS have more of the attention of critics and viewers while the networks have been busy trying to get their act together.

Which leads to the TV trivia question(s) of the year.

Is there a fall season, and when exactly does it start?

"It will be a roll-out of the season," CBS Entertainment President Kim LeMasters said during his network's portion of the tour. "I don't believe we'll have a specific 'Here is Premiere Week.' I don't think that's going to happen."

Though NBC, which is in the best shape of any of the networks, has announced the launch dates of many of its new series, the collective, scatter-shot approach to the introduction of season premieres into January 1989 by the Big 3 will have a disorienting effect on how the media cover the fall season and, therefore, how viewers perceive it.

There are, of course, always slight perceptual problems when it comes to the way TV critics review programs at press tours. And although the networks were more than a little befuddled about where their series were going and that there were still more than enough shows to view. Which leads to this standard, cautionary tale:

TV critics, after all, are only human. So it is only natural that they can watch only so many uninspired dramas, swallow so many sitcoms, fully comprehend so many made and remade network battle plans and envision televised works of art that are not there to see in the first place.

The difference in TV viewing habits of critics on a press tour and the public at large is, to begin with, extreme.

Most viewers sit with their families. They get up and go to the refrigerator when they feel the urge, answer the phone or put the kids to bed. And, best of all, they can turn off the set if they do not like what they see.

TV critics, who attend three (and not long ago, four) press marathons a year, often watch four or more hours per day in a hotel room. Alone, or, even worse, in a screening room with anywhere between a dozen and 150 other TV critics (A jaded audience to say the least). If they take their jobs seriously, they will sit dutifully through the worst of the worst because it is on the fall schedule.

There are other complications.

Many pilots — the tryout and usually opening episodes of new programs — are often not indicative of the real product because they are artificially juiced up to sell the concept. More often than not, script and even casting changes are made after critics have screened the show. The producers of CBS' "The Van Dyke Show," a new sitcom starring Dick Van Dyke, dumped the original pilot and, therefore, had nothing to show critics. Mary Tyler Moore's new CBS show had a pilot but no title.

Furthermore, TV writers sometimes get the "unsweetened" version of a program, which means it does not have all of the sound track and special effects that the nationwide audience will see when it finally goes on the air. In the case of so-called "rough cuts," entire sections of the work may be missing and the film marred by scratches, color tones that are not fixed and volume that varies wildly.

Finally, there comes a time when critics find themselves overloaded. They have had that one sitcom too many. And almost anything looks good. If they can still focus.

And, have no doubts, the networks, PBS and cable networks can suffer depending upon how late in the tour they make their presentations.

But somehow, when TV reporters call the home office to file the latest TV tidbit, their bosses always ask, "Are you calling from the pool?"

MTM, Dick Van Dyke To Help Give Emmys

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rob and Laura Petrie, that comical couple, will be back together briefly for the Emmy Awards on Aug. 28.

Mary Tyler Moore and Dick Van Dyke, co-stars of the old Dick Van Dyke Show, will help present the awards, along with Michael J. Fox and Danny DeVito, the Fox Broadcasting Co. announced Thursday.

Other presenters for the three-hour telecast will include the puppet Alf from the NBC comedy, "Star Trek" veterans Leonard Nimoy and William Shatner, comedians Garry Shandling and Tracey Ullman, Susan Dey of "L.A. Law," Sharon Gless of "Cagney & Lacey" and John Larroquette of "Night Court."

Gary Merrill In Hospital

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Actor Gary Merrill, suffering from lung cancer, has been hospitalized for treatment of a chest infection, a spokeswoman said.

The 73-year-old Merrill, who appeared in the 1950 Oscar-winning movie "All About Eve" and later married co-star Bette Davis, was rushed to Mercy Hospital Tuesday from his Portland-area home. Merrill said he had undergone exploratory surgery at the hospital last week and was released after two days.

"I didn't slow down after they let me out," he said. "I'm like any other little kid. So they've grounded me; they want to keep track of me."

Hospital spokeswoman Leslie Gall said Thursday that Merrill was being treated for a skin infection in his chest wall and was in good condition.

Merrill's stormy 10-year marriage to Davis ended in divorce.

Lee Horsley Returning To TV In Western Series

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Lee Horsley was starring in "Matt Houston," it just wasn't done for a TV actor to cross over into films.

"Now seems to be the wonderful time to cross over from television into feature films. Everybody seems to do it," said Horsley, who will star this season in the CBS Western, "Paradise."

"Back when 'Houston' was on the air, you couldn't get arrested if you were on television. It was unheard-of. No one would touch you. That was tough. Going out and trying to have a feature career after havin' a television show."

So he cheered when friend and co-TV detective hunk Tom Selleck finally scored last year with the feature film "Three Men and a Cradle" after several attempts at movie success.

"Tom's great, a neat, neat guy, and I was glad it happened," Horsley said.

Horsley would still like to cross over into feature films. He starred in the cult favorite "The Sword and the Sorcerer," but otherwise found TV miniseries, such as "Crossings," and theater more available. He was interviewed in New York recently during a run with "Mack and Mabel" in New Jersey.

Horsley became popular in the detective series "Matt Houston," but actually started out in musical theater, appearing in the road productions of "West Side Story," "Oklahoma!" and "1776," among others.

He was born in the quaintly named Muleshoe, a small West Texas town, but was raised in Colorado and considers it home, though he and his family live in Los Angeles.

He's an avid horseman and had wanted to do a Western "forever." "I've just been crazy for the Western to come back, and I hope that this is a ticket to it. I really hope it will work."

Horsley plays Ethan Cord, a mysterious former gunfighter who inherits his late sister's four children, sent to him in the depressed mining town where their mother thought he was a successful merchant.

The romantic interest is a local businesswoman, played by Sigrid Thornton (of "The Man from Snowy River"), who is cool toward Cord but begins to warm toward the children.

"This particular show, the reason it's so exciting is it really has all the elements I like," Horsley said. "It has that possibility of going in those directions — the good guy and the bad guy, the Code, the relationship with the kids. There's so many wonderful ways to round it out that I think is real special, so I'm real excited."

"To be able to work with two of my favorite things, kids and horses, that's not all bad either. It's outdoors, which I love. I'm a little bit claustrophobic. The thought of going back to episodic television and being on a soundstage seven days a week did not appeal to me."

The show will have an uphill battle in the ratings. CBS is putting it on Thursday against NBC's hit comedy lineup. It's lead-in will be the CBS News documentary series "48 Hours," which hasn't scored very high in the ratings.

Horsley said he's been approached to do movie Westerns, but he turned them down. "It's amazing how badly written some of these Westerns are," he said.

David Jacobs and Robert Porter co-created "Paradise."

"They do not look like cowboys, so I got a little concerned," Horsley joked. "But the dialogue is right on the money. It's better than anything I've ever come up with as far as the flavor, and being a Western buff myself, there's not too much that gets by."

The show seems to have elements of "Shane" in it, not to mention the potential for the subtle romance of "Gunsmoke."

Horsley said he was concerned about returning to "the episodic triangle."

"But I guess now I am ready to do it again, and I'm especially excited about this show. It's one that hopefully if all goes well will be comfortable to run for a period of time."

"Being a period piece it's certainly not going to get stuck with your standard private-detective kind of syndrome. It takes a long time to beat after you do something like that, so I think all the right elements are there."

"Also, I'm gettin' older," he said, "an older daddy. And episodic's pretty comfortable."

Roy Rogers Pulls TV Beef Ad

NEW YORK (AP) — School cafeteria workers got results after complaining about a Roy Rogers commercial that depicted them foisting unpleasant-looking food on students, with a warning that school was imminent.

The Bethesda, Md.-based Marriott Corp., which owns the chain of stores purveying roast beef sandwiches, fried chicken and hamburgers, said Thursday it would pull the TV ad.

But it maintained that the spot was misunderstood — it was supposed to be a spoof of the way school cafeterias were years ago.

"Marriott has over 65,000 employees that work in cafeterias, and the last thing we're going to do is try and offend somebody," said Marriott spokesman Rick Sneed.

Charles Hughes, president of Local 372 of the State, County and Municipal Workers, AFL-CIO, which represents more than 8,000 school cafeteria workers, had called the commercial "despicable."

"I think they've stooped to a new low by advocating that children ought to eat junk food on a daily basis," Hughes said.

The commercial starts with the tune, "See You in September," and shows a series of cafeteria workers holding trays of unappealing food close to the camera. An announcer intones that students have only a few weeks left to eat at Roy Rogers before the fall term begins.

"The ad very clearly sends a message that one of the things you ought to be dreading as Labor Day approaches is a return to the school cafeteria," said City Councilwoman Ruth Messinger.

The ad began airing about 10 days ago and was to run until Sept. 9, but Sneed said, "It's our intent to pull it as soon as we can. It will not run its full course."
