Crowd Cheers 'Amen' To Pleas For New Airport Site

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pleas for a new location for the Pitt-Greenville Airport sent applause and "amens" through the crowd of about 125 black residents at a neighborhood meeting Tuesday night. More than 20 residents stepped to the microphone in the city hall chambers and blasted the airport's plan to extend a runway 1,000 feet north toward N.C. 33 and predominantly black neighborhoods, including North River Estates, Greenfield Terrace and Oak Grove Estates. The meeting was the second of three planned by the city and the airport authority in order to allow citizens to ask question about the land-use plan. Residents — many of whom attended last week's meeting — cheered at the first mention of moving the airport to another spot farther out in the county, and the group continued to applaud as the relocation was mentioned again and again. But John L. Caldwell, an engineer with the state Department of Transportation, was quick to say that relocating the airport is not likely to happen. "It's a moot issue," he said. "It's not realistic to move the airport." Caldwell said moving Pitt's airport is not a high priority for the state or the Federal Aviation Administration, therefore no money would be available. Airport officials say conservative estimates indicate moving the airport would cost $20 million, and airport Director Jim Turcotte said the FAA would have to support the move. Turcotte said airports have to show the FAA that there is a pressing need to move, and he said the process could take about 10 years. Residents also said they wanted an option to the existing land-use plan, which was drafted by the city's planning department to ensure that future development near the airport over the next 20 years is compatible with airport activities. Lynne James, strategic projects coordinator with the city, and Jack Duffus, chairman of the airport authority, stressed that the land-use study does not call for any changes in existing neighborhoods, and it was created so that incompatible land use does not continue. But the residents seemed not to believe that existing homes would not be affected by the plan or the runway extension, and many said they should not have to bear the burden for improper land development in the past.

GUC Sets Electric Rate Hike

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
A 5.2 percent electric rate increase was approved by Greenville Utilities Commission board members Tuesday night — the first such increase in four years. The increase is the result of a 5.2 percent rate hike imposed by Carolina Power & Light Co. on its customers to cover costs of the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant.

Greenville is one of 32 cities in the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency, which buys power from CP&L and supplies it to members at wholesale. As a result of the rate hike, the average GUC residential customer will see a 6.2 percent increase, while small general-service customers will see a jump of 3 percent in their bills. The bills of large general service users will climb an average of 3.5 percent.

What the rate hike means is that the average residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity per month will see his bill go from $77.79 in summer to $85.35. During the winter months — November through June — the electric bill would go from $74.92 to $75.25.

While the new residential rate is about 2 percent lower than the rate CP&L charges its residential customers, Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, told board members that the percent of increase, or in some cases a decrease, will depend on the amount of electricity used by customers.

For example, Green said from November through June, households using less than 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity will see drops of 1.1 percent to as much as 3 percent in bills, while those using more than 1,000 kilowatt hours of current will see increases of 1.8 percent to as much as 12.5 percent.

During the summer-rate period — July through October — residential bill increases will range from 6.1 percent to 10.2 percent, depending on the amount of electricity used.

And Will C. Changes Again ...

Will C. Morgan is wearing a new pair of yellow shorts and a T-shirt with a WDLX logo today — at least on the Evans Street billboard. A disc jockey for the Washington radio station painted the shirt and shorts on the sign Tuesday.

Three billboards — all featuring Morgan, a New Bern television announcer — attracted widespread attention last week after some Greenville residents complained that the reclining figure appeared to be nude.

So the signs, advertising the Carpet Bargain Center on Dickinson Avenue, were covered up with public service ads for a few days while Morgan's flesh-colored bathing suit was replaced with a red bikini.

Morgan's latest change of clothes came when WDLX disc jockey Jack Boston gave Morgan a pair of yellow shorts and a white T-shirt.

Efforts this morning to contact WDLX and Jeff French, who heads the Greenville ad agency which designed the sign, were unsuccessful.

But French told a Daily Reflector photographer Tuesday afternoon that he was "not happy" with the new clothes Morgan was sporting on Evans Street.

Greenville City Manager Greg Knowles said today that he went to the Evans Street sign when he heard that it was being painted Tuesday afternoon.

Knowles said he talked to French, "relative to what WDLX was doing up there. Based on that conversation, we just monitored the situation," the city manager said.

Knowles said he was listening to WDLX earlier in the day Tuesday and heard Boston say something to the effect that, "he didn't like the sign and if he received 25 telephone calls he would do something about it."

Elections Board Says 15 People Voted Improperly

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Board of Elections has ruled that 15 ineligible voters in the May 31 Democratic primary runoff between D.D. Garrett and James H. Dupree cast doubt on the outcome of the election, and the board has sent its findings to the state board for action.

The board — which does not have authority to order a new election — sent the findings on the state board without a recommendation.

The state board is scheduled to address the matter Friday at its meeting in Greensboro, and Garrett's attorney, David F. Kirby of Raleigh, said he will ask the state board to compel voters who cast improper ballots to testify under oath how they voted.

PCC Graduates 150 Students

More than 150 students received degrees, diplomas or certificates from Pitt Community College during summer commencement exercises Tuesday night in Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University. Harry Williams, senior vice president of Little & Associates Architects in Charlotte, was the keynote speaker for the event. Williams graduated from the school when it was Pitt Technical Institute. Williams told the graduates that PCC has set them on the road to success. "Whether or not you stay on the road will be up to you," he said. "Technology has already replaced millions of workers in a wide variety of jobs. The U.S. Department of Labor, the Department of Commerce and independent futurists agree that the U.S. is shifting to a high tech, service-oriented community. "Looking over the fields in which you are graduating tonight, each one of you is right on the money to fit successfully in tomorrow's world of work," Williams said. He charged the graduates to be creative and flexible. "Give serious thought and concentrated energy to finding your own personal niche in your particular field — where you are most content, productive and creative," Williams said. "Don't be afraid to try out the many different roles that will be available to you in your field." Williams was introduced by Dick McKee, a member of the PCC Board of Trustees. Carolina P. Moreno gave the students' response. "We have 12 years left before the end of this century, and hopefully, the end of an era of selfishness and waste," she said. "My message to you is that we should act as if the new century is tomorrow. We should dedicate our efforts to our betterment, and the betterment of the people and land surrounding us. "Let us start, with no delay, to further our education, to improve and modernize our skills and to do it for ourselves and for others," Ms. Moreno said. Degrees, diplomas and certificates were conferred by Clifton Everett, chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees, assisted by Ed Bright, dean of instruction, and Edgar Boyd, dean of students.

Permit Issued

Greenville police have issued a solicitation permit to the Pitt County Shrine Club to raise money for hospitals from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Sept. 30 in locations throughout the city.

Groups Form Team

The American Heart Association-Pitt County Chapter (AHA) and the Pitt County United Way have combined fund-raising efforts within the county's businesses, organizations and industries.

The Heart Association will participate in United Way's workplace solicitation during the fall, and will continue traditional fund-raising and educational efforts for the rest of the year.

United Way President Mike Renn said both groups will benefit from the union.

The AHA complements United Way agencies as a major health-related organization, he said. And United Way provides a well run fund-raising campaign for the AHA within the workplace.

Money raised for AHA will be available for community education programs and cardiovascular research at institutions including East Carolina University School of Medicine, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Duke University, North Carolina State University and Bowman-Gray School of Medicine.

Certificates Awarded

Willie A. Reid of the Greenville Police Department and John A. Roush of the East Carolina University Public Safety department have received advanced law enforcement certificates from the North Carolina Criminal Education and Training Standards Commission.

To qualify for the certificate, officers must complete a combination of training and education, as well as meet minimum experience requirements.

Reid, a detective, and Roush, a corporal, were awarded their certificates Aug. 19.

Pitt Schools To Screen Kindergarten Pupils To Pinpoint Needs, Strengths

By CHERIE EVANS

Kindergarten students in the Pitt County schools will be jumping, skipping, building, matching, counting, naming, copying and writing in September as part of the kindergarten screening program, the schools' pupil services coordinator said.

"The kids have a great time with it and we learn so much from it," Arleen Ferren said.

"Kindergarten testing is not new to Pitt County schools," she said. "Before consolidation, both previous school systems used a screening instrument. We did look at several instruments to select one to be used for the consolidated system."

A revised edition of the Diagnostic Indicators for the Assessment of Learning, DIAL-R, was chosen for the school system, Ms. Ferren said. The national standardized test helps "identify and meet the special needs of students and to help pinpoint specific strengths and weaknesses for instructional and remedial purposes," she said.

This is the third year DIAL-R has been used by the school system, Ms. Ferren said. As one of 19 school systems piloted by the state General Assembly, the Pitt schools have received about $64,000 over the three-year period. Of that, about $24,241 will be used to implement this year's program.

The money is used by buy a DIAL-R kit for each school, a video cassette to help train the teachers and materials to assist the students once their deficiencies are identified, she said.

The federal government mandates that schools screen students to ensure that special needs are identified early, Ms. Ferren said. On the state level, kindergarten screening guidelines have been developed within the Basic Education Program. The state requires that screening include cognitive social-emotional functioning, vision, hearing speech-language, motor and health assessments.

DIAL-R, for children ages 2 to 6, lasts from 20 to 30 minutes per student and will be administered by trained kindergarten teachers at each school Sept. 6-16.

Among activities evaluated are naming colors, identifying body parts, identifying concepts such as big, empty, night, cold and hot, naming letters, sorting chips, giving personal data such as name, sex, age, phone number and city, remembering clapping and numbers, naming nouns such as cat, phone, plane, pencil, ambulance, naming verbs such as sleep, drive, write, and other activities.

"At the end of screening, the DIAL-R coordinator and teachers meet and prepare parent letters informing the parents about their child's performance," Ms. Ferren said. "It says these are the areas we saw weaknesses and here's what you can do with your child at home."

The teacher, coordinator, speech therapist and psychologists also

Sloan Earns Eagle

Shane Stewart Sloan of Greenville received his Eagle Scout Award, Boy Scouting's highest award, Aug. 5 on his 16th birthday.

He received his driver's license and pilot's license the same day.

Only 2 percent of all scouts achieve the Eagle rank, which requires the completion of 21 merit badges and several service projects. Sloan completed two Eagle service projects, providing and installing fire equipment plus a fire escape plan for the Greenville Homeless Shelter, and raising money to buy smoke detectors and installing them in the home of underprivileged senior citizens.

Sloan is a member of Boy Scout Troop 340, sponsored by St. James United Methodist Church, and the Order of the Arrow. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sloan of Greenville, he attends D.H. Conley High School. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church.

Pitt County school bus drivers will be paid on the same salary scale as the teacher assistants in the school system, school officials said Wednesday.

"It was suggested from the state Department of Transportation," Rodney Bullock, the schools' transportation director said.

The state originally allotted school systems an hourly average of $6.10 per driver which was to be used to develop a salary schedule based on experience. Another 27 cents was added to the average to provide the same rate of pay as the assistants, he said.

"We're trying to make it uniform," Bullock said.

Beginning drivers will be paid $5.28 per hour through their third year.

"It goes up 21 or 22 cents for every three years of experience," Bullock said. The maximum hourly wage a driver could earn is about $7.82 after about 30 years of experience.

School officials said they understood that several drivers mistook the state allotment as the beginning salary for bus drivers in Pitt County.

"We find that it's an unfortunate occurrence," Chet Preyar, associate superintendent for personnel development services said. "It's not possible for us to pay $6.10 per hour."

The state allotment is an average, he said, adding that "a beginning driver is not an average driver."

Preyar said higher turnover is expected in the bus-driver pool as the U.S. Labor Department mandated that drivers have to be at least 18 years old this school year.

"There may be a few who find better employment," but the school system has an adequate number to begin school, he said. There are about 220 certified drivers, including substitutes, for about 213 Pitt County buses.

High school assistant principals who are responsible for buses in their attendance areas say they have not been confronted with disillusioned or grumbling bus drivers, but are aware of the misunderstanding.

"A couple of them had called me to talk about it," Cling Walter of Farmville Central said. "The principals are meeting with the drivers to talk about it."

"They all appear eager, happy and ready to go," Barbara Mallory of J.H. Rose said. "We haven't had anybody say anything to us here at school."

"None of the drivers I saw mentioned anything about a strike" because of the wage schedule, Claude Kennedy of D.H. Conley said.

Ernest McNair of North Pitt also said no drivers in that attendance area have told him of plans to quit.

Research Building Will Open

ECU News Bureau

A new research-laboratory building at the East Carolina University School of Medicine will open formally Thursday during a joint ceremony with the North Carolina Biotechnology Center of Research Triangle Park. An open house begins at 3 p.m., and a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 4:30 p.m.

The $2.1 million facility, which is designed to explore applications of biotechnology to health care, is north of the Brody Medical Sciences Building.

Speakers for the ceremony include Dr. Charles Hamner, president of the N.C. Biotechnology Center; Dr. Stuart Bondurant, chairman of the center's board of directors and dean of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine; Dr. Richard R. Eakin, ECU chancellor, and Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor of the ECU Health Sciences Division and dean of the school of medicine.

Biotechnology, which dates to the ancient discovery of fermentation, involves the application of scientific principles in the manipulation of natural processes to create practical and beneficial products and services.

Day Care Proposed

Whether to allow a child day-care facility on Farmville Boulevard is one of the items to be considered by members of the Greenville Board of Adjustment at its regular monthly meeting 7 p.m. Thursday in the council chambers of City Hall.

The petitioner, Phillipi Church of Christ, is requesting a special use permit in order to operate a day-care facility at 1610 Farmville Blvd. The property is zoned CH (highway commercial).

The board also will consider a request by C.E. Carawan to appeal the decision of the city's building inspector not to issue a permit to use an existing building at 1009 Brownlea Drive as a cabinet shop. The building was previously used as an egg packing plant and is zoned R-9 (residential medium-density).

In other matters, Hostetter's Tennis Shop is requesting a variance of the zoning ordinance in order to allow the placement of a freestanding sign at 218-C Arlington Boulevard. The property is zoned CS (shopping center).

Harris Supermarket Inc. is seeking a variance from the Zoning Ordinance to construct a vestibule within 6.1 feet of a street right-of-way at 2612 E. 10th St. The property is zoned CS (shopping center).

Joe Jolly is requesting a special use permit in order to reopen a convenience store on the north side of N.C. 33 approximately .3 miles east of Academy Drive. The property is zoned RA-20 (residential agricultural).

A public hearing will be held on all matters before the board.

Also scheduled for the meeting are board elections for the upcoming year.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Dollar Squeeze

Food Cost Rise Important Trend

When food prices go up it affects everybody — but it can squeeze those already financially strapped the hardest.

That's why a 1.4 percent grocery price increase in July and a prediction that trend will continue should be redflagged by economists. The grocery gain is an indication that the U.S. economy is on a much higher inflation curve than the 4 to 5 percent forecast for 1988 and a hint that the economy could play a significant role in the upcoming presidential election.

And that inflation could put the most pressure on those who can least afford it — low income and middle class consumers with families to feed. For that reason, a significant gain in food prices could have a much larger impact on American pocketbooks than the recent rise in the prime interest rate.

When lending money gets tight — and expensive — consumers cease borrowing. That may postpone major — and often necessary — big-ticket purchases such as cars, appliances and homes. It slows the economy and depresses housing, automobile and home furnishing industries. While that delay is inconvenient to families who find the basics out of reach for a while, it is usually a temporary condition.

But when grocery prices escalate, families cannot stop eating. Food is an essential purchase for households. When the cost goes sky high, that cost has to be met. That means the already bare-bones budgets of most low and middle income consumers gets even more paltry. It means less family funds can be spent for other consumer items such as clothes and transportation.

The deadly summer drought in the Midwest prompted the increase in food costs, and since it will take months for the economic effects of that disaster to clear the market, the price rise could continue through 1988. The political effects of that occurrence are two-fold.

First, it would propel inflation past predicted levels and force more belt-tightening moves from the Federal Reserve Board. That action, while economically sound, would be unpopular with both a Republican administration and consumers locked out of major purchases.

Such dissatisfaction would make Republicans more vulnerable to Democratic talk of economic unsteadiness in November. The economy, already a major issue in the upcoming election, could become the deciding factor in the 1988 election.

When prices on grocery shelves go up, all aspects of the economy feel the pinch. Low and middle income families already know the so-called economic recovery of the past eight years has its dark side. The drought of 1988 just may provide that knowledge for the rest of the nation.

Severe Test

Slow Response Let Issue Mushroom

Sen. Dan Quayle, the GOP vice presidential nominee, survived the initial phase of controversy over his National Guard membership during the Vietnam War but the question of his use of influence to secure a spot in the guard remains a significant concern.

Quayle served in the guard for six years and thus avoided active duty. The question that is hounding him, however, was whether family influence was key to his acceptance for membership in the guard. Given Quayle's wealthy background, properly answering the influence question becomes important in the forthcoming campaign.

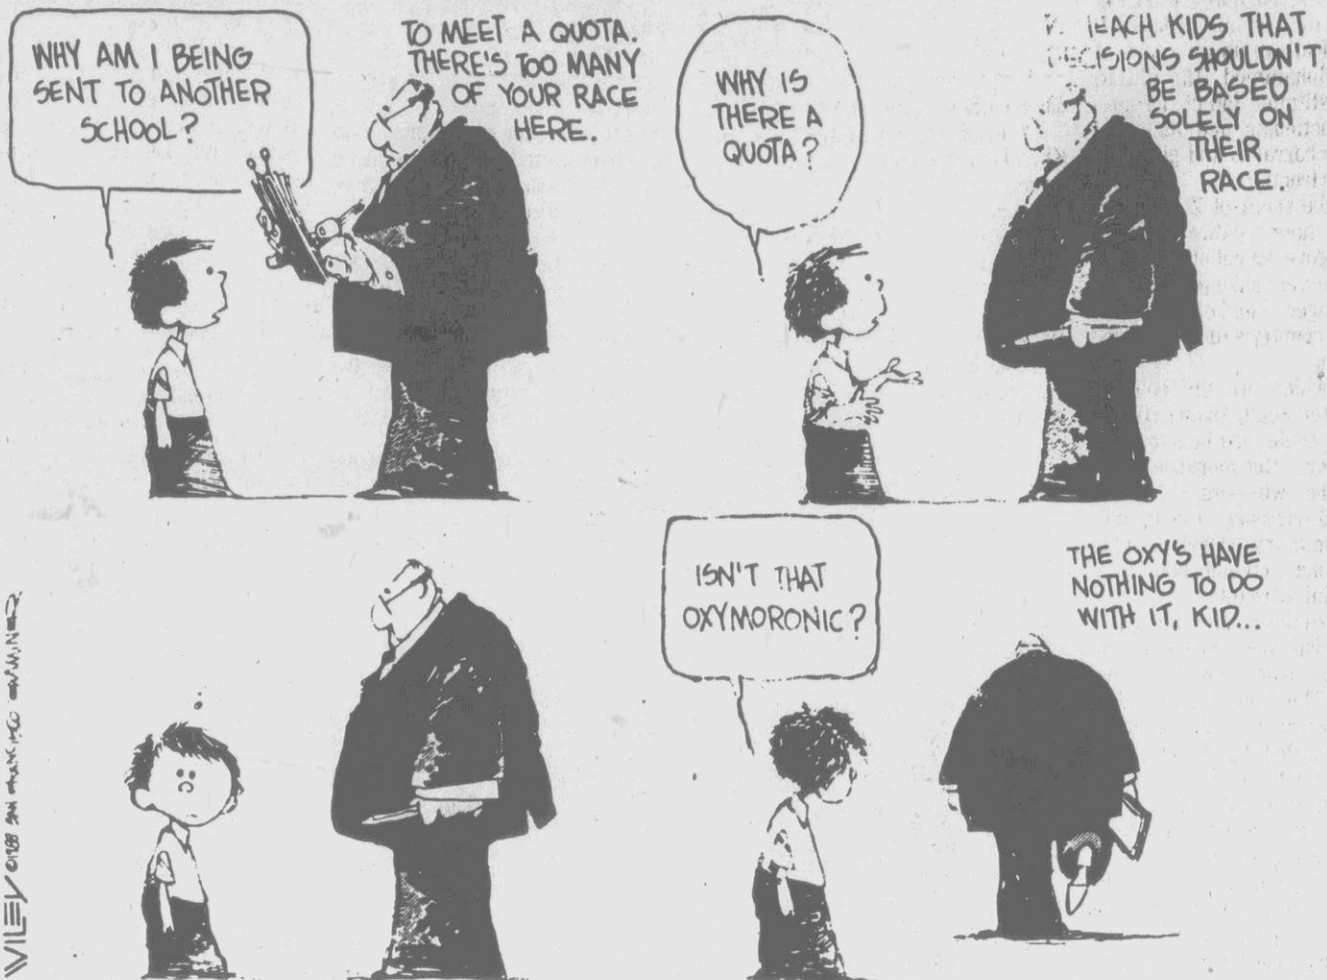

Initially Quayle's answers to questions about the guard incident were murky. In his nomination acceptance speech, however, he expressed pride in his six years service.

Democratic candidates Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen declined to exploit the issue and for good reason. Any comment that appears negative toward National Guard service could, even today, have an adverse reaction for the Democratic candidates.

Millions of voters who didn't experience the Vietnam era will wonder what all the fuss is about. There are groups, however, who will quietly resent the possibility of influence on the young Quayle's behalf. The problem is that the Republicans cannot afford to lose any votes to an issue such as this.

Quayle could have put the issue to rest quickly at the outset by addressing it forthrightly and making it clear he was proud of his National Guard service. By being slow to respond he allowed the issue to mushroom.

The incident is a severe test of a young and relatively unknown vice presidential candidate.

— George Will —

Quayle: Be Good Or Be Gone

WASHINGTON — Being a Democrat, pollster Peter Hart understandably relishes describing George Bush's "mildewed" running mate, around whom there hangs, Hart says, an irremediable odor. However, a campaign is in crisis not when criticism of it is savage but when defenses of it are as weird as New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu's. He says the Quayle controversy will be a "net plus" for Bush because it will generate a pro-military backlash against Democrats.

The Dukakis campaign, which knows not to speak unless speaking will improve the silence, says not a syllable about Quayle, whose defense is handled by Bob Dole: "I assume you could find better qualified people, but Dan Quayle is — I think as you've indicated, he's a young man. He's a quick study."

But enough testimonials. Republican effectiveness in recent presidential elections has derived from the party's ideological clarity, its ability to put to the country an easily comprehensible message. The Quayle controversy is erasing that advantage. Furthermore, the role of a Bush running mate must be to attack Michael Dukakis. Quayle's week on banana peels has blunted his lance. He is particularly diminished as a spokesman on defense issues. Will he be reduced to talking about the worker-retraining legislation he co-authored with Ted Kennedy?

'The confused and passionate nature of the controversy, and the number of men now in middle age whose lives were touched by the questions involved, make the moment ripe for a thoughtful talk.'

Since 1900, 38.6 percent of the presidential nominees have previously been Vice Presidents or vice-presidential nominees. Since 1960, the figure is 57 percent. Six of the last 15 Presidents were Vice Presidents first. Hence the growing insistence that running mates show reassuring substance. Bush, perhaps divulging a hitherto secret Republican criterion for vice-presidential aspirants, boasted to the Veterans of Foreign Wars that Quayle has never, not once, burned an American flag. But even with that virtue attested, Quayle should do two things.

First, he should deliver a "Checkers speech." It need not be as mawkish as the one by which Nixon saved his place as Eisenhower's running mate in 1952. However, it should be equally personal. It should reveal the quality of the inner life beneath the candidate's comely surface. The issue is no longer just his National Guard episode. He — his sensibility and gravity — is the issue.

The confused and passionate nature of the controversy, and the number of men now in middle age whose lives were touched by the questions involved, make the moment ripe for a thoughtful talk. It should explore the moral ambiguities that proliferate when a democracy with much less than universal conscription gradually enters a limited war in which the very idea of victory is problematic and policy ("graduated response" and all that) suggests that the war might not be important enough to be worth winning.

Such a speech could serve the second task that the Bush campaign must accomplish quickly. Quayle needs a stature transfusion. They should get him away from state fairs, which are odd venues for shouting enthusiasm about strategic-defense technologies. He should be put into more sedate settings, such as the Economic Club of Chicago or the Los Angeles World Affairs Council. There, he should take advantage of his new advantage — the low expectations for him — and deliver himself of serious thoughts.

He is young and looks younger than he is. He has an easy manner that suggests he might have come far on social graces alone and that almost everything, not just a position in the National Guard, has come with too little hard work. However, he has serious accomplishments.

Some of his critics, some of whom are not noticeably heavier than helium, say he is a lightweight. They should sample the work he did in mounting sustained, complex, technical criticism of the INF Treaty — the one Bush rhapsodized over before reading or understanding it. Although in the end he was not one of the five senators who voted against the treaty, he did much to slow the reckless rush toward an ill-considered START agreement. That rush was — is — fueled by a simplistic notion that any large cut in arsenals makes the world safer. Quayle knows better.

His reward was to receive the wrath of President Reagan, who said, critics like Quayle were ignorant of the facts and accept nuclear war as inevitable. The next day Quayle delivered a scalding reply, turning Reagan's remarks appalling "nonsense." Quayle can bite.

But neither Bush nor Quayle can do anything positive until the world in their campaign is cauterized. Between now and Labor Day, Quayle must accept the rule with which Bear Bryant greeted his football players at the beginning of autumn: Be good or be gone.

From Here On, The Years Belong To Bush

NEW ORLEANS — It took George Bush precisely eight pages to say goodbye to Ronald Reagan. There, on the eighth page of his prepared text, Bush veered from the hard right and into the center — a moderate Republican at last moving back to where he started. A Connecticut Yankee had come home.

His acceptance speech here was not the address of the caricatured Texas conservative he sometimes claims to be. There was little of the oil buccaneer in what he said — no simplistic denunciation of government, no sideswipes at the evil commies, no cheap shots at the United Nations and no proclamation that the good work of government would be rolled back or ignored.

Instead, Bush set out a program that would never have passed Ronald Reagan's lips. His first blasphemy was the mention of the Head Start program. In the text, the words were capitalized — the name of the program itself. It is the pride, indeed the legacy, of Lyndon Johnson's War on Poverty — an enrichment program for preschool children. In the early days of the Reagan administration, it was slated for oblivion — but saved by Congress. Never mind that its success has been documented. Never mind that it has won almost universal praise. Reagan ideologues tried to kill it.

Next Bush mentioned the handicapped. "I am going to do whatever it takes to make sure the disabled are included in the mainstream." This, too, was a departure. The handicapped are politically marginal, an interest group few politicians take an interest in. It is for their wheelchairs that curbs have been grated, that public elevators have been widened and, in some cases, installed at all. They are a costly group and there are, relatively speaking, few of them. In his speech, though, Bush remembered them.

Bush mentioned "ocean dumping" — yet another ecological disaster of the Reagan years. The beaches this year have been foul. Sewerage pollutes the beaches and hypodermic needles float in the surf. "I am going to have the FBI trace the medical wastes and we are going to punish those who dump those infected needles into our oceans, lakes and rivers," Bush said. Reagan might have said something similar, but his heart would not have been in it. To him, once you've seen one ocean, you've seen them all.

Bush conceded the harm done by acid rain. Reagan doubted its existence. Bush called for clean air. Reagan is unperturbed; he finds the air in the mountains near Santa Barbara just fine. The environment, a cause that sought sanctuary in the Democratic Party, has been re-born as a bipartisan cause.

Unmentioned were two causes dear to the heart of Reagan conservatives: the Nicaragua contras and "Star Wars."

There is historic irony in the importance attached to convention speeches. In an electronic age in which video — the 30-second spot, the photo opportunity — has replaced not only speech but thought, the candidate's speech has nevertheless become the coda — the thumping finale. It's as if we have moved back into the Chautauqua tent and eloquence has once again become important. Maybe this is a Reagan-induced phenomenon — a tribute to his sparkling talent as a speaker — or maybe it's a dour reflection of how little we know the two major candidates. The speech is where they declare who they are — even though we all know the words are written by others.

But in his acceptance speech, Bush emerged as a gentle man — a man concerned with the plight of others. He condemned the purposeless and amoral pursuit of wealth for its own sake. He spoke of obligation — the wonderful, Yankee tradition that we all owe something to the less fortunate. It was this ethic that propelled missionaries to China, that founded universities and charities, that established foundations. Bush put it best when he spoke glowingly of his wife's effort to combat illiteracy: "Where is it written that we must act as if we do not care, as if we are not moved? Well, I am moved. I want a kinder, gentler nation."

Until that night, the speeches of George Bush had a grating edge — a cutting defensiveness, an exaggerated toughness, a kind of juvenile machismo. That was barely in evidence the other night. Instead, the man seemed thoughtful, at peace with himself — saying words, although written by others, he seemed to sincerely believe: a condemnation of bigotry, a concern for "the urban children who play amid the shattered glass and shattered lives." George Bush came in to his own on the eighth page of his speech — one page for every year as vice president.

From here on in, the years belong to him.

Pakistan Enters New Political Era

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — To the surprise and relief of many, Pakistan has survived the first fateful days following the death in an air crash of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq with its constitution intact, its government functioning and its army safely in the barracks and guarding the country's frontiers.

But with the shock of Zia's death wearing off, there are dire warnings from senior government officials and political observers alike that the real period of danger — and of opportunity — for the country's future may be just beginning.

Rumors, which are the political currency of this South Asian nation of 100 million people, are beginning to flow like rivers after monsoon rains. Some of the whispers — about backroom discussions among factions in the military, as well as splits and plots among civilian politicians — carry a whiff of reality.

"Four times this country has faced a time of crisis, and four times the military has said, 'enough,' and taken over. This time, thank God, it hasn't happened. Still, the chances are 60 percent that it will," one political leader said this week.

In the first hours after Zia's C-130 crashed near Bahawalpur in eastern Pakistan, members of the Army high command "made it very clear to the Cabinet they don't want to take over," a senior government official said. But they also reportedly made it clear that they will tolerate no chaos, no burning of property. Law and order, the generals said, must be maintained.

"There is no inclination at the moment to come in. It is a test of the maturity of the political parties not to tempt them."

But senior diplomats have detected extreme nervousness within the military over the country's security. After harsh warnings from the Soviet Union about continuing arms supplies for Afghan rebels and chiding from Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi over alleged aid to Sikh militants, the military is said to be edgy since much of its high command also died in the plane crash that killed Zia.

For now, senior political leaders, like Peoples Party chief Benazir Bhutto, are urging restraint. But their promises of cooperation remain mortgaged to progress toward democracy through free and open elections this autumn.

Political analysts say there are four key power centers that need to be watched closely to determine where Pakistan's current, fragile political system will move.

First, the military command must be rebuilt and scrutinized for signs of the limits of its tolerance. Former military figures stress that the army is tired of playing a role in politics, but they stop short of saying that the armed forces could not resume having a political role.

The second important factor is acting president Ghulam Ishaq Khan, the 73-year-old civil servant-turned-politician who suddenly has found himself as the only surviving constitutional leader of his country.

He is a man said to be precise in his thinking and use of language, encyclopedic in his knowledge of the government and sensitive to the political winds after years of serving in top positions of government.

He is one of the few men who managed to serve under former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto — as defense secretary — and then to make the transition to serve in several positions under the man who hanged Bhutto-President Zia.

As head of government, Ishaq Khan is in a position to influence the structure of elections and the future of potential candidates in a way that could enhance his own chances of remaining in power.

He has said little about the subject, but few with real insight into Pakistani politics are willing to overlook him.

A third power center, by common consensus, is Bhutto.

As head of the only true national political party, the daughter and political heir of the late prime minister is in a position to make a major showing in national elections, if they are held. Whether she is in a position to take a clear majority, as she insists, is still disputed by many in Islamabad.

Instead of being the challenger, Bhutto's Peoples Party now has become the front runner. But in doing so, she has lost her platform, which, in the words of one senior government official, has been defined in one phrase: "Anti-Zia."

"She will no longer be able to be ambiguous and get away with it" on issues such as land reform, nationalization of industries, tax policy, social and economic reform and foreign policy, the official said.

Senior Pakistani officials expect the nature of forthcoming elections to be decided within the next two weeks, after the Supreme Court delivers a judgment on a Peoples Party petition seeking party-based elections.

Zia had decreed that the elections would be held on a non-party basis, which served to undercut the opposition's base of support.

President Ishaq Khan has made it clear that, should the court decide in favor of allowing full party participation, the Cabinet will not stand in the way.

Many observers expect the opposition alliance to fall apart now that its main reason for existence, Zia, is gone. Bhutto and other opposition leaders say they will attempt to keep the alliance together by rallying around the cause of party-based elections, but observers expect the unity to be fragile, at best.

Piyar Ali Allana, longtime political strategist for the Peoples Party, said in recent interviews that it is only a matter of time before the opposition alliance begins to show its natural fissures.

The pressures on the fourth power center, the former ruling party, the Pakistan Moslem League, are even more apparent.

Utility Bills Running About Normal Despite July's Stifling Temperatures

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Despite last month's stifling temperatures across the state, North Carolinians didn't have to dig much deeper into their pockets to cool their homes than in a typical July, according to the state's utilities.

"July was a very hot month across the Carolinas, so customers can expect one of their highest (electric) bills," said Anne Sheffield, a spokeswoman for Duke Power Co. in Charlotte. "It's not unusual for bills to be $150 or more."

Based on peak usage records for the month, however, the average this year was slightly lower than July 1987, said Joe Maher, another spokesman for Duke Power, which provides electricity for some 1.3 million residential customers in North Carolina and South Carolina.

"How that will translate into (overall) usage is not known yet," he said. "But we don't expect much of a difference (from July 1987 bills)."

Last week, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported that the national air conditioning bill for July was $4.3 billion, some $255 million more than would have been expected in normal weather.

While exact figures were not known, NOAA estimated the average cost per household in the South Atlantic region — which included both Carolinas — at $112, or about $5 more than normal.

"In most heat spells there's usually a three- or four-day break in the middle when temperatures dip into the 80s," Maher said. "We got it in July this year — but it came on July 4th weekend. That's the wrong time for a break."

"The fact that it's been consistently hot without a break has led to the perception that July's bills would be higher (than normal)," he said.

According to NOAA's report, the only region in the country where air conditioning bills were less than in a typical July were Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The largest increases were in the upper Midwest and Middle Atlantic states, which were up by $16 and $14, respectively.

Kyle Hampton, a spokesman for Carolina Power & Light Co. in Raleigh, said he reviewed company records for July 1987 and July 1988 and found no discernable difference.

"In July 1987, our average residential customer used 1,117 kilowatt hours and paid $83.80," he said. "In July 1988, the average usage was 1,076 kilowatt hours with an average bill of $85.42."

Hampton, reflecting on last week's record-setting temperatures in the Raleigh area, said last month's heat was not as bad as it was in the same month in the two previous years.

So far, August has been much worse, though, with both utilities setting new records for peak demand when temperatures hovered around the 100-degree mark.

On Aug. 18, Duke Power set a new record with 13,618 megawatts. CP&L which serves about 775,000 residential customers in both Carolinas, smashed records for all-time peak demand last week when the temperature in some parts of its service area reached 102 degrees.

"This week has been a welcome relief," said Ms. Sheffield. "We had three record days last week and the power supply has been very tight."

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Anti-abortion activists say they held a funeral for 157 fetuses to show their dignity, but pro-choice advocates say it was a "grotesque exercise" that demonstrated the frustration of a movement that has been unable to change federal abortion laws.

"It's an affront to the women who chose the procedure, an invasion of their personal privacy and completely insensitive to the circumstances of their lives and to their religious beliefs," said Ruth Ziegler, director of the National Abortion Rights Action League of North Carolina.

"Basically, I think most people find it repugnant," Ziegler said.

But Lucy O'Keefe of Chapel Hill, who organized the service Tuesday, said the funeral was an answer to those who think "the unborn are trash."

"What we are doing is something very straight-forward — praying for the dead," Ms. O'Keefe said after the service at Our Lady of Lodes Catholic Church in Raleigh.

"It's not about labs in Chicago or abortion clinics, or even mothers, in North Carolina," Ms. O'Keefe said. "It's about 157 dead human beings."

Joseph Scheidler, director of the Pro-Life Action League, a national anti-abortion group based in Chicago, said Sunday that the fetuses had been found during a search through the garbage at a research lab in Chicago by activists looking for abortion remains. The fetuses were individually packaged and labeled, he said, with the names of the mothers, doctors, dates and places abortions were performed.

The fetuses were sent to Ms. O'Keefe, who had a single coffin made for them and asked the Diocese of Raleigh to conduct the service. The coffin, which was not present at the funeral service, was taken to Guadalupe Catholic Church in Newton Grove for burial Tuesday afternoon.

Monsignor James McSweeney said even though the fetuses were not present at the service, an envelope with 157 names "chosen by concerned people" was placed on the church altar and would be buried with the casket.

"We are here to give reverence to our belief that God is the creator and sustainer of life and that every stage of human development from conception to natural death is sacred to God," McSweeney told about 200 people, including many mothers with young children. "We are here because of the intrinsic dignity of these human beings whose lives will never flourish."

McSweeney said the world had been "repulsed and horrified" by the slaughter of 6 million Jews during World War II, but he said abortions "are a new holocaust in which millions of lives are snuffed out for no other reason than that their existence is an embarrassment."

"With the enormity of this tragic waste of precious human life ... our faith requires us to make our own fervent prayer, 'Father forgive them, for they know not what they do,'" McSweeney said.

He said the world would never know what music, art, love or compassion the fetuses could have brought.

"We were never given an opportunity to know these unborn children," McSweeney said. "Our lives will not be enriched by them. The lives of us all have been diminished by their being deprived of life."

Ms. O'Keefe, who had kept the fetuses in her kitchen, said she initially feared she would have nightmares with the bags of remains in her house.

Jordan Says Martin Failed To Safeguard Environment

RALEIGH (AP) — Pollutants aren't the only thing in the North Carolina air these days — so are allegations about which gubernatorial candidate has done the most to help the environment.

LA Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat, accused incumbent Republican Gov. Jim Martin Tuesday of failing to adequately safeguard the environment. But Martin aides said Jordan's record is hardly spotless.

"When the waste showed up on our beaches, Jim Martin made light of the problem," Jordan said. "He said it was nothing to worry about. He said no action was needed."

Jordan said he had pushed for a statewide phosphate ban, right-to-know legislation and the cleanup of orphan dumps, all measures he said were opposed by Martin's Republican administration.

If elected governor, Jordan said he would push for a ban on ocean dumping, take action to stop fish kills in coastal rivers and require strict enforcement of the state's emissions-control law.

Jordan said the unusually hot summer, acid rain and polluted air in the state's largest cities showed the governor "must lead the fight to protect our environment."

Jordan, who owns a Montgomery County lumber company, said the governor must perform a "balancing act" between jobs created by industry and the need for a clean environment.

"You cannot have the jobs you need and shut down all the plants," Jordan said. "And you cannot have the environment you need by letting businesses do whatever they want, whatever is the least costly. My job as governor is to strike a balance between those two needs."

Martin spokesman Tim Pittman disputed Jordan's claims the governor is insensitive to environmental issues.

"I think the fact that Jordan blamed the governor for the hot weather showed the general lack of substance to the news conference," Pittman said. "In fact, the omissions were far more interesting than the inclusions."

"He didn't mention that a company in which he was an owner ... was fined $5,000 for violation of sedimentation control practices," Pittman said. "And he didn't mention that he supported the Hardison amendments while a senator."

IN THE STATE

Police Award

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Kevin Cline was almost 20 months old when he stopped breathing. He'll be 21 months old soon, thanks to quick action by his mother and a communications supervisor for the Winston-Salem Police Department.

The Police Department honored L. Michele Poe Tuesday with a Medal of Merit for talking Kevin's mother, Patricia A. Cline, through mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when she called the department for help.

Kevin, the Clines' only child, has a congenital kidney problem and spent the first 50 days of his life in the hospital.

"He has been in and out of the hospital since he was born," Mrs. Cline said. He now has one kidney.

Kevin had a seizure shortly before 2 p.m. Aug. 2. His mother called 911 to get an ambulance. While she was giving directions to their home, Kevin stopped breathing and turned blue.

The call was turned over to Mrs. Poe, 30, and she talked Mrs. Cline through the mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and stayed on the phone until the Emergency Medical Service arrived.

Trade Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., will lead a group of North Carolina business representatives to Canada to learn about new opportunities arising from the Free Trade Agreement between the United States and Canada.

"The purpose of this mission is to familiarize North Carolina companies with new opportunities in the Canadian market as a result of the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement, so that they may be advantageously positioned in the Canadian market when the FTA enters into effect," Sanford said.

The 11-member delegation is scheduled to leave North Carolina Sept. 4. During their six-day stay, they will travel to Quebec City, Montreal and Toronto to meet Canadian government officials and business leaders.

Convicted

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham man was found guilty of murder Tuesday in the death of Doris Gillie, who was killed last year as she left church.

The Durham County Superior Court jury found James Cortney McDowell guilty of first-degree murder after deliberating about two hours Tuesday. The jury also found McDowell guilty of attempted armed robbery and firing into an occupied vehicle.

He could be sentenced to life in prison or the death penalty.

McDowell, 20, was charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Mrs. Gillie, 51, as she left the Gospel Center on Aug. 19, 1987.

Suit Dismissed

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit accusing two Veterans Administration hospitals of negligence in refusing to admit a Vietnam veteran who ambushed two people in a parking lot, killing one and wounding another.

The suit was filed against the federal government by Sherrill B. Enroughly, who was injured in the August 1982 attack in Rocky Mount, and the mother of Steven J. Cantrell, who was fatally shot.

The suit said that John G. Puckett had sought treatment for severe post-traumatic stress disorder at VA medical centers in Durham and Fayetteville before he dressed in military garb, armed himself with a pistol and a "sniper" rifle, and shot Cantrell and Ms. Enroughly.

U.S. District Judge Terrence W. Boyle dismissed the suit Monday, ruling that VA medical personnel were immune from negligence suits when dealing with mental patients, that they had no duty to have Puckett involuntarily committed and that they would have had no control over Puckett even if he had been committed at his own request.

Water Coolers

GREENSBORO (AP) — Lead testing of water at drinking fountains at Greensboro public schools has revealed higher than acceptable levels of lead in water from at least six fountains, officials have reported.

The tests were conducted this summer by the Greensboro water and sewer department.

Fountains showing lead content above the acceptable federal level of .05 parts per million include three at the Gateway Education Center, two at Aycock Junior High School and one at Weaver Education Center, according to Joanna Colodin, spokeswoman for the city.

President

RALEIGH (AP) — Donald Beilman, who resigned as president of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina earlier this year, was reinstated Tuesday. But not for long.

In a unanimous vote, the board of directors re-elected Beilman as president of the research institution until June 30, 1989. In the meantime, they said they will continue to search for his replacement.

Beilman, who resigned effective last June 30 without explanation, never left the state-funded center. The board informally asked him to stay through September because the microelectronics center had been given a critical role in acquiring a state supercomputer.

The microelectronics center is a state-funded facility in Research Triangle Park where researchers work on projects related to the semiconductor industry.

Preaching Kids May Study At Home

MARION, N.C. (AP) — After repeated suspensions from school, it appears that three McDowell County children who preached at the school gates will be taught at home.

After day-long negotiations Tuesday, the president of a Chicago-based advocacy organization said David and Robin Strode, the children's parents, had signed a piece of paper asking that their children be removed from Eastfield Elementary School and be taught at home.

"We pretty much got what everybody wanted," said Dan Rodden, president of Caleb Campaign, a non-profit Christian civil rights organization.

But David Ricketts, superintendent of the McDowell County schools, said he was not sure an agreement had been reached.

"We don't know that that's their decision," he said.

Just who would teach the children and what arrangements would be made were not part of the agreement disclosed to reporters.

Strode said he and his family could not afford to hire a teacher or to pay for the at-home curriculum needed.

"I don't want to run a school here," he said. "But I am for the children."

Rodden said his non-profit organization would help with the education program and even help the unemployed Strode, 40, find a job.

"We know he has had a hard time and we know people who would be willing to help," he said.

The Strodes did not meet with school officials Tuesday, but instead allowed Rodden and Ralph Davis, another representative of the Caleb Campaign, to shuttle back and forth between the school and the Strode home, about 1 1/2 blocks.

"I know how Henry Kissinger feels," Rodden said, referring to his negotiations.

Until noon Tuesday, Rodden and Davis were "working to save the marriage" between the children — Duffey, 11, Pepper, 7 and Matthew, 6 — and the school, Rodden said. "At noon today, I realized the marriage was unsavable and we went for a divorce."

Although Rodden said the agreement satisfied everyone, David Strode did not appear happy when he came out of the house late Tuesday afternoon. His eyes were red and he appeared to have been crying.

"As the world builds bigger and better schools and bigger and better churches, the children are going to hell by the thousands," he said before turning away.

Negotiations continued Tuesday as Rodden, Davis, Ricketts and Richard Schwartz, attorney for the North Carolina School Boards Association, met with Eastfield Elementary Assistant Principal Shirley Ramsey and Assistant Superintendent Shearon Crawford.

As reporters gathered on the Strodes' front lawn earlier Tuesday, Pepper said, "Not again."

The Strode children's first day of school Monday lasted less than a minute and ended with Duffey being suspended for 10 days.

At the school gate, Duffey and Matthew began to shout Bible verses and Pepper yelled "Repent."

Candidates Balk At Ballot Changes

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin, who opposed ballot changes in 1980 that moved congressional races — including his own — farther down the ticket, has asked for and received a similar repositioning this year.

At the request of Martin's campaign, the State Board of Elections has rearranged the Nov. 8 election ballot to put the gubernatorial and other statewide candidates right after candidates for president — thus moving congressional races far lower on the ballot.

The move has disturbed some congressional candidates — Republicans and Democrats alike — and marks a change in the way ballots have been arranged since 1982.

In counties that use voting machines with levers or that list candidates horizontally, such as Guilford, Wake, Mecklenburg, Durham and 16 others, the move means that the race for Congress will be in the 16th column, sandwiched between statewide elections for Court of Appeals and Superior Court judges, instead of in the fourth column after the straight-ticket column, the Democratic and Republican presidential column and an extra New Alliance Party column.

Now the race for governor will be in the fourth column. Had the ballot not been rearranged, it would have been in the fifth column.

"Very candidly, I'd prefer to be at the top of the ballot," Rep. Howard Coble, a Greensboro Republican who represents the 6th District, said Monday. "But if we're not, we'll operate from where we'll be."

Lewis Tuggle, campaign manager for Democrat Tom Gilmore, Coble's challenger, questioned the change.

"The State Board of Elections seems to be playing partisan politics with the decision," Tuggle said. "I question their motives."

The state elections board, which has sole power to set the ballot, changed it last month.

The board has a Republican majority appointed by Martin, who is running for re-election against Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat.

HOME FEDERAL SAVINGS

AND LOAN ASSOCIATION OF EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA

Serving Eastern North Carolina since 1906

A MESSAGE FROM YOUR LOCAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTION

Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Eastern North Carolina is based in Greenville, North Carolina, and has branch offices in Edenton, Plymouth, Williamston and Bethel.

We are a mutually owned and independent company dedicated to the principles of thrift and homeownership. These two ideas have helped build our nation. Home Federal Savings has been in business since 1906 and we have seen a lot of changes, but some things remain the same. People still need a home and a safe place to keep their life savings. Home Federal has always operated and will continue to operate with these basic principles in mind. In today's deregulated marketplace, there are many players in the market with all sorts of gimmicks and "come ons". They are in the market for the short gain, not the long term. How are they investing your money? This is an important question.

Home Federal continues to invest directly in the local communities it serves through home mortgage financing activities. Through our expertise and knowledge of the area markets, we have built a strong, stable portfolio of mortgage loans. That is how your money works — by helping your community and local economy grow. Home Federal has consistently provided an above average return to its depositors. We would like to thank our customers who have helped us grow steadily and profitably to over $100 million in assets.

Sincerely,

J. Larkin Little, President

Southern Students Show Little Interest In Teaching

By BRAD HAMM
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Only 4 percent of public high school students in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia are interested in teaching careers, according to a University of South Carolina survey.

"Without some strong efforts, we are facing a drastic shortage of teachers by the end of the century," said Barnett Berry, director of the South Carolina Educational Policy Center at the university's College of Education. Researchers at the center interviewed 375 high school sophomores at 10 schools in the three states.

The United States will need more than a million new teachers between 1989 and 1993, according to the National Center for Educational Statistics.

Berry said that students can be attracted to the profession by improving working conditions, salaries and the image of teaching.

"I think we can get them," he said. "To me, the kids are not very informed about other careers. If so, they might see teaching in a better light. They see teachers for 12 years. They get some very profound perceptions."

Students cited poor working conditions and wages as reasons not to become teachers.

"Irrespective of race, gender or school location, most of these students loathed teaching as a career alternative," Berry said.

"These students perceive teaching as boring work," Berry said. "They see teachers as underpaid, lacking in autonomy and frustrated both by their physical working conditions and lack of administrative support in dealing with discipline problems."

Sixteen of 375 students expressed an interest in teaching.

The survey was commissioned by the Southeastern Educational Improvement Laboratory at North Carolina's Research Triangle. Results were included in a report, "Recruiting the Next Generation of Teachers," written by Berry and USC professors Christine McCormick and Thomas Buxton.

The report recommends higher salaries, internship programs and more flexible scheduling for teachers.

"Higher salaries are necessary, but they definitely are not sufficient," Berry said.

The report also calls for increases in teacher standards and accountability and changes in programs that do not provide recognition for superior performance.

State leaders should start in-school programs that enhance the image of teachers and provide accurate information about teaching and other professions, the report says.

The one-hour focus group interviews were done in the spring by researchers in the educational policy center.

Students were chosen from English classes, including the advanced and general classes.

"The kids did not know we were interviewing them about teaching," Berry said. The first 15 minutes of the survey dealt with questions about career expectations. Students then were asked to describe the careers of teachers.

Appeals Court Says Politics Used In Setting Guidelines

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A U.S. appeals court struck down new guidelines establishing a range of sentences for federal crimes, ruling the standards are unconstitutional because they were drafted by judges as a political act.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the highest court to rule on the issue, said Tuesday that placing three federal judges on the seven-member sentencing commission violated constitutional separation of powers.

In a 2-1 vote, the court decided the use of judges on the commission interfered with the "aura of judicial impartiality" by allowing the president to appoint and remove members, said the opinion by Judge Alex Kozinski.

"Congress may not, under our system of separated powers, require judges to serve on bodies that make political decisions," Kozinski said.

The decision affects only the region covered by the 9th Circuit, comprising nine Western states, Guam and the Northern Marianas. However, the court is the nation's first on the appellate level to rule on the validity of the guidelines.

Other federal judges nationwide have issued numerous conflicting rulings on challenges to the guidelines, mostly based on the separation-of-powers issue.

The guidelines were challenged by public defenders, who were displeased with provisions that lengthened sentences for many crimes and restricted judges' authority.

Chrysler To Pay Buyers $500 Each

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Nearly 40,000 owners of Chrysler Motors Corp. cars whose odometers were disconnected while company executives test-drove them are entitled to more than $16 million in restitution under a nationwide settlement.

Attorneys general from 10 states assisted in the settlement, which will pay the wronged car owners at least $500 apiece, Missouri Attorney General William Webster said at a news conference Tuesday.

Chrysler already has announced it will increase warranty coverage for cars on which odometers had been disconnected in the company's "Overnight Evaluation Program." A few were involved in accidents, and consumers that later purchased those cars will receive new automobiles, Webster said.

Webster served as the lead negotiator in the settlement affecting 39,500 consumers in 46 states, Guam and Puerto Rico. The agreement was filed Aug. 19 in U.S. District Court in St. Louis.

The states that did not participate in the settlement were Georgia, Kentucky, Nevada and South Carolina, Webster said.

Webster said his office and officials in some other states were mailing letters to the car owners. Chrysler also will run advertisements about the settlement in 20 newspapers Friday, he said.

Guard Had Missing Artwork In Home

BALTIMORE (AP) — Up to $1 million in Asian artwork stolen from The Walters Art Gallery has been discovered in a museum guard's basement, authorities say.

Gregory Bartgis, 30, a museum security supervisor, was arrested at his home Tuesday, said FBI agent James Dearborn.

All 81 items reported stolen from the gallery Aug. 16 appear to have been recovered, said Joseph Corless, agent in charge of the FBI office in Baltimore. "It looks like we've recovered all the items, plus some additional items we located that hadn't been reported stolen as yet," said police Lt. Lawrence Leeson.

Bartgis was to be charged in the theft today, Leeson said. No federal charges will be filed because the items did not leave the state, Corless said.

The artwork includes jade, Chinese snuff bottles, figurines, incense burners, boxes and an 18-inch porcelain vase dating to the 18th century known as the Peach Bloom Vase. The pieces were valued at between $500,000 and $1 million.

Quayle Sets Out On Solo Campaign

CINCINNATI (AP) — Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle began his first solo campaign trip today by ignoring the controversy over his Vietnam-era military service and instead urging creation of "real jobs" for millions of needy Americans.

The Indiana senator also told an audience of Midwestern state legislators that "Congress could stand a little bit of perestroika" — a reference to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of economic restructuring — in the way it drafts the federal budget.

Quayle made only an oblique reference to the persistent controversy over his 1969 entry into the Indiana National Guard and reports of a Florida golfing weekend he spent in 1980 with a female former lobbyist.

"Those of you thinking of running for vice president," he said, "I want you to know that taking out your trash is a photo opportunity."

It was while Quayle was taking out his trash at his McLean, Va., home in the Washington suburbs Tuesday that waiting reporters and cameramen pounced on him for comment about the controversy swirling around him.

Quayle denounced the allegations as rumor, gossip and "outright lies" which were preventing him from showing the public how he intends to work with Bush to promote GOP goals of "jobs, peace, freedom."

In his Cincinnati speech, at the outset of his first foray alone on the campaign trail, Quayle sought to do just that.

He stressed his support for a job training bill he co-sponsored in the early 1980s, which he said had created millions of jobs for women, minorities and disadvantaged workers.

"These aren't make-work, makeshift type of jobs," he said. "They are real jobs."

Quayle also proposed that the federal budget be written every two years rather than going through the current laborious process every year in a crisis atmosphere.

He said the budget process should be simplified, and the president should be given line-item veto authority to reject objectionable portions of legislation rather than requiring veto of an entire bill.

From Cincinnati, Quayle planned to travel to Lexington, Ky., before addressing a national conference of enlisted National Guardsmen in St. Louis tonight.

At home Tuesday, Quayle said he believed the Guard issue will fade during the campaign because Americans would rather hear about peace, jobs and freedom.

As for new reports about his entry into the Guard and relationship with former lobbyist Paula Parkinson, Quayle said: "This is just getting a little bit outrageous and I'm getting a little bit indignant about just one bum rap after another."

Quayle has denied using his family's influence to get into the Indiana National Guard during the Vietnam War, saying that the Guard had openings at the time.

But a retired Indiana guard official acknowledged Tuesday that he asked the Guard personnel office to "hold" a space for Quayle after receiving a call from a Quayle family friend in 1969.

Retired Major Gen. Alfred Ahner, former military support officer for Indiana and later head of the state's National Guard, said he was contacted by an old friend, Wendell Phillippi, a retired Guard commander who then worked for a newspaper owned by Quayle's family.

Sinatra Wins Lawsuit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Swiss clinic that falsely claimed it had treated Frank Sinatra with a "youth serum" of sheep cells has been ordered to pay the singer $450,000 in damages.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday upheld the September 1986 award against the Clinic La Prairie, rejecting the Montreux, Switzerland, clinic's claim that U.S. courts lacked jurisdiction in the case.

"The clinic's employees fabricated an elaborate story calculated to link Sinatra's name with their services," said Judge Dorothy Nelson in the 3-0 decision.

Sinatra sued the Enquirer and the clinic in Los Angeles, and later settled the case against the newspaper on undisclosed terms.

Yellowstone Park Flames Threaten Hotel Complex

By The Associated Press
A fire that has scorched nearly 92,000 acres in Yellowstone National Park burned within a mile of a hotel complex today, while crews near Helena, Mont., aimed to contain a 37,000-acre blaze by tonight.

A rash of wildfires broke out Tuesday in Oregon, including a small blaze ignited by a plane crash that killed three people, while a fresh fire in Washington state spread to 500 acres in a few hours.

In western Yellowstone, part of the North Fork fire was pushed by gusting winds to within a mile of the Canyon Junction campground and hotel complex, said park spokeswoman Joan Anzelmo.

A park employee who wouldn't give her name said officials would evacuate the area today as a precaution.

The Canyon Junction campground, 25 miles northeast of Old Faithful and on the main park road, also contains three dormitories for park staff and a visitor center.

No significant growth was reported

Tuesday in the nine other major Yellowstone fires, but one park road, the park's south entrance, four campgrounds and the Grant Village hotel, campground and visitors center complex remained closed.

Shorter days and cooler air signaling the approach of fall in northwestern Wyoming indicate relief may be on the way for the 4,000 firefighters and 1,200 soldiers battling the flames over 350,000 acres in the nation's oldest national park.

Although temperatures Tuesday reached the mid-80s, lows early Tuesday in the mid-30s helped firefighters. Similar lows and damp air were forecast for today, and officials hoped frost would form to further discourage the flames.

"Even a little bit of a break can be very helpful with firefighting efforts," Anzelmo said.

Firefighters at a 156,500-acre blaze in the park's northeastern corner were aided Tuesday by about 600 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., who began mopping up on the fire's eastern edge in Shoshone National Forest. The military relief enabled 600 firefighters to attack the active sections of the fire.

Another 600 Fort Lewis soldiers were to help clean up a 4,300-acre fire in Wyoming's Bridger-Teton National Forest and adjacent Grand Teton National Park. The fire was about 60 percent contained Tuesday.

Favorable weather also helped firefighters at Bighorn National Forest in north-central Wyoming, where they hoped to contain a 9,000-acre fire tonight.

A 27,000-acre fire in the same wilderness was causing problems for 500 firefighters trying to keep it from invading private land dotted with cabins. In Montana, easterly winds Tuesday pushed a blaze away from the towns of Cooke City and Silver Gate, Yellowstone officials said.

Reinforcements were due today from Alaska to help direct efforts to contain a stubborn, 26,000-acre fire in the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness near Yellowstone. The Alaskan firefighters were freed by authorities after wildfires in that state diminished.

In the mountains southeast of Helena, nearly 3,000 firefighters gained a foothold in a two-week battle to contain the 37,600-acre fire that destroyed more than a dozen structures.

"There are no problems on the line that we've heard of, and we're still hoping for containment by 8 p.m.," said Gordon Gray, a fire information officer.

Fire officials also said a 12,600-acre fire south of the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation in southeastern Montana was nearly contained Tuesday night.

In addition, 30 firefighters worked on the outskirts of a 34,000-acre fire in the Scapegoat Wilderness north of Lincoln, Mont.

In the west-central Oregon town of LaPine, three families were briefly evacuated Tuesday night due to one of a series of small fires in the state. Lightning was blamed for at least 50 of the blazes, while record-breaking heat was a contributing factor.

In east-central Oregon, a plane crashed Tuesday near a mountaintop in the Malheur National Forest, killing three people and starting a fire that charred a quarter-acre of woods before it was extinguished.

Near Morton, Wash., gusty winds and 100-degree temperatures allowed a forest fire to grow from 60 acres to 500 within a few hours Tuesday, officials said. The blaze burned mostly on land owned by the Murray Pacific Co., a timber firm.

Thornburgh Studies Prosecutor Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Richard L. Thornburgh says he is concerned that a special prosecutor plan aimed at Congress by his predecessor, Edwin Meese III, is a "cure where there is no disease."

Thornburgh said in an interview Tuesday that he is taking a "second look" at an order Meese signed on his last day as attorney general that requires special investigations of members of Congress suspected of criminal wrongdoing.

"I want to find out what the underlying premise was in the issuance of the order," said Thornburgh.

The former Pennsylvania governor, who was sworn in Aug. 12, arrived in the waning days of the Reagan administration to head a department that had been buffeted by Meese's tenure.

Meese was the subject of a lengthy investigation by Independent Counsel James C. McKay, who declined to seek indictments but said in his final report that Meese "probably" had broken ethics laws.

Meese's final-day order for special prosecutors to investigate members of Congress was widely viewed on Capitol Hill as a parting shot by Meese at his critics there.

Thornburgh, 56, a former head of the Justice Department's criminal division in the Ford administration, said Tuesday that it is "pretty well known that I see a very limited role for special prosecutors' criminal counsels in the process of investigating and prosecuting criminal cases."

He said U.S. attorneys and the department's office of public integrity, which investigates corruption of public officials, do a fine job pursuing allegations of criminal conduct, and prosecuting if necessary.

Thornburgh established the public integrity office in the mid-1970s.

"I guess what I am curious about is what is being proposed ... a cure where there is no disease" he said. "I am taking what could be called fairly a second look at that order."

While Meese was attorney general, a number of high-ranking officials resigned, and a number expressed unhappiness with the attention Meese was forced to give to McKay's investigation.

Asked how he planned to restore morale, Thornburgh said: "You lead by example, and I want to make it clear that my view of the department is one that requires an absolute fidelity to high standards of professional conduct and integrity in our operations ... the values and principles of any organization are transmitted from the top."

Metric System Gets Boost In Trade Bill

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Give 'em an inch and they'll take a kilometer.

Crusaders for wider use of the metric system are happy about an obscure section of the trade bill signed Tuesday by President Reagan, a section they say will help America measure up in a metric world.

The bill designates the metric system as the preferred method of measure for trade and commerce and requires government agencies to start buying metric whenever practical.

For the U.S. Metric Association, which since 1916 has been prodding America to join most of the world in using metric measure, the bill is a milestone, or perhaps a kilometer post.

"I think the government's decision to adopt this law is pulling the country in the right direction," said Lorelle Young, association president.

"We interpret it to be saying that the metric system is highly important to the United States — to educate our youngsters in this scientific world, to put us in sync with the rest of the world and to give us the advantage of the best measurement system ever devised."

The Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988 gives U.S. negotiators more leeway to bargain at international trade talks, strengthens the government's ability to fight restrictive trade policies of other countries, and provides for retraining of Americans who lose their jobs because of foreign competition.

It also says that by 1993, agencies should "use the metric system of measurement in procurement, grants and other business-related activities, except to the extent that such use is impractical or is likely to cause significant inefficiency or loss of markets to U.S. firms."

Analysts at the National Association of Manufacturers don't expect much impact from the section because of the language giving agencies an economic out, said Howard Lewis, a vice president of the Washington, D.C., lobbying group.

But for the 3,500-member Metric Association, which promotes the switch nationwide from its headquarters in the Los Angeles suburb of Northridge, the bill seems likely to hasten the inevitable conversion.

Dog Trainer Has No Hands

By NANCY BARKEMEYER
Monroe Enquirer-Journal
WINGATE — (AP) — Billy Wagner lost both of his hands 15 years ago. But, he says, he didn't lose his spirit.

The Wingate resident still takes care of the little everyday chores of life. He shaves. He drives a car. And after 10 years of practice, he even ties his shoes.

But most of Wagner's time for the past 14 years has been spent with a business he designed to operate at his home after he had to take disability retirement. He obedience trains dogs. But there too, Wagner says, "handicapped is only a word.

His "hooks" as Wagner calls his prostheses serve the purpose when it's time to give hand motions for "down" or "stay." He can manipulate the leash with his hooks just as expertly as any other trainer can with his hands. And at times, Wagner says, having no hands may have been a plus.

"When you're showing a dog his limits and he realizes that you aren't going to let him get away with anything, if he's aggressive he may come at you. There are times that I've been bitten on the hook — a lot less painful than being bitten somewhere else."

Wagner can take even the rowdiest of collies, Dobermans or chows, he says, and in 15 to 20 days teach them the basic commands. Police dogs and even a full-blooded wolf are graduates of his course that has included 900 to 1,000 dogs, he says.

But despite Wagner's positive on his disability, there were times that the going was not so easy, said his wife and business partner, Susie.

The accident happened in March 1973 when Wagner, an electrician, was installing lights on an outdoor advertising sign. The aluminum pole he was working with and a nearby Duke Power electric wire arced, jolting him with a 12,000 volt current.

Wagner's three-month stay at Charlotte Memorial Hospital involved some dozen skin grafts, Mrs. Wagner said. But during that period he also suffered kidney failure as a result of internal damage from the shock, so the loss of his hands was not the only immediate concern.

"The doctors gave me no hope at all," Mrs. Wagner said. "I think with every day they were surprised to see that he had made it."

During those difficult days, Wagner, too, recalls thinking that he probably would not survive. But when he tried to prepare his wife for finally, she refused to accept it. And after that, Mrs. Wagner says, there has been no more depression.

"They asked me when I left the hospital if I needed to talk to a psychologist or anything," Wagner said, "but I told them I would be OK without it. I don't know why, but I wasn't depressed any more."

Now Wagner credits his religious faith with his will to go on. And, drawing from his inner resources, he has had the opportunity to talk to other amputees.

"For kids it's especially hard," Wagner said. "Sometimes at school other kids will pick on them or make fun of them. But I talk to them about going on. I think it helps someone who has just lost one hand just to see somebody like me. And we go on because we have no choice."

Now, after 15 years of healing, Wagner says he still thinks about the accident. He probably always will, he says, but that too is something he has learned to accept.

The only part of his life that has drastically changed, he says, is that he has given up hunting. But the reason for that isn't that he couldn't pull the trigger with his hook. The reason is his wife.

"When he used to hunt, I'd go with him," Mrs. Wagner said. "He'd shoot the ducks and I'd follow along behind him, picking them up and seeing if I could nurse any of them back to health."

Sellers Buying Cheap Is Rip-Off

DEAR ABBY: If you can solve this, you will be helping hundreds of organizations that raise money by putting on "white elephant" sales, garage sales, bake sales, used book sales, etc.

I'm referring to "pre-buying" privileges given to committee members. For years, I've watched these well-to-do women snatch up designer clothes, rare books and the choice items at rock-bottom prices. The public never even gets a chance to see them!

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Don't they realize that it is those special treasures that bring in the customers? This year I saw a museum-quality book of poetry "sell" for a dollar — before the sale started.

I once baked and decorated a gorgeous cake for my club's bake sale to raffle off. I'm sure they could have made $25 from it. It was snapped up by the head of the bake sale committee — for $5.

I raised this issue once and got the cold shoulder. Abby, the only organizations I know of in this town that do not allow members special pre-sale privileges are the Lions Club and the Junior League.

Any ideas for halting these rip-offs? — IN THE STATE OF WASHINGTON

DEAR IN: Yes. Those who are responsible for the sale, auction, raffle or whatever should declare: "The committee shall agree on the sale price, then mark each item with the asking price. And only after the public has had first crack at all the merchandise should it be offered to members of the organization. No exception." Period.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a couple of years old, but it still bothers me. I have a sister and a brother. All of us are married and only a few years apart in age. A couple of years ago, my mother had two very nice rings. One was her engagement ring from our father, and the other was her own mother's ring. My mother asked my sister to choose the ring she wanted, then Mother gave my brother's wife the other one. I was overlooked completely. To make matters worse, my mother told everyone involved not to tell me. (I found out from a relative who didn't know it was supposed to be a secret.)

I am very hurt because my mother chose my sister-in-law over me to give something important to. The ironic part is that my sister-in-law and my brother are now getting divorced — and there goes the ring!

Every time I see my mother, I think of this ring business and feel hurt and resentful. I avoid going over to see her. I don't know what to do. I have two faces — one feels guilty for not showing my mother the affection and attention a daughter should, and the other one can't seem to get over the hurt I feel. It's not really the ring; it's the idea that I was passed over in favor of my sister-in-law.

What should I do? — HURT

DEAR HURT: Call your mother and ask to meet with her — just the two of you alone. And when you meet, be totally honest. Say, "Mother, you hurt me." Then tell her why — without being judgmental or unkind. This way, the cold war — and your feelings of guilt — will come to an end.

Whether she apologizes or explains is not important. But everything will be out in the open and you will have cleared the air.

Author Ken Barun Says

'Just Say No' Is Not Enough

The former coordinator of Nancy Reagan's anti-drug campaign says that parents who teach their kids only the "Just Say No" concept are guilty of a terrible abdication of responsibility.

Parents are the primary determinants of whether children develop drug or alcohol problems, Ken Barun says. "Children need much more structure, direction and a much more disciplined way to make decisions, and we (parents) are the influencing factor," he says. "In the '60s and '70s, our parents tended to say to us, 'We're going to give you the information, and you make the decision yourselves.' We made the strangest decisions imaginable," he said.

Barun, who is now vice president and executive director of Ronald McDonald Children's Charities, worked on the "Just Say No" drug awareness campaign while engaged as Reagan's director of projects and policy. He also is a recovering heroin addict and co-author of "How To Keep the Children You Love Off Drugs" (Atlantic Monthly Press, $12.95).

"Parents have no excuse anymore for not educating their children about drugs," Barun says. In a way, his parents can be excused of responsibility for his drug problem, he continues — there wasn't much information around for parents in the late '60s. But now there is plenty, and parents must inform themselves and their children, he says.

Parents like to think that children will get the proper information from school or others, he says, but "in many cases that's not true. The No. 1 cause of drug abuse is peer pressure. If we leave our kids without education in the area of drug abuse, they will be approached by friends with other ideas."

Parents must give a consistent message to their children about drug abuse, from their preschool days through adolescence, Barun says.

In some cases, instilling the proper attitude will require "a 180-degree turnaround," he says. "If Dad can't function without having a drink every night, or uses drugs, there's no way we can expect children to be drug-free."

Recommendations from his book include:

—"Be cognizant of the subliminal message you may transmit. ... When you reach for a bottle of beer, a headache remedy, even a container of ice cream, is it because you want to or need to? Eliminate 'I need' from your vocabulary."

—"Avoid, if you can, purchasing pleasantly flavored children's medicines. ... Never allow drugs to be associated with pleasure."

—"Children are more likely to use drugs if their parents smoke cigarettes, abuse alcohol ... take illicit drugs, use any substance to help master stress, or impart an ambivalent or positive attitude toward drugs."

—"Discard all medications except those absolutely essential. ... Sometimes parents' medicine cabinets serve as convenient drug sources for teen-agers."

—"Parents can consume alcohol, but in moderation. If your child asks you why you imbibe, reply, 'Because I like the taste, but I never drink to alter my mood.'" (Barun would prefer it if parents did not drink at all.)

DWI Charge

SMITHFIELD (AP) — State Rep. George W. Brannan, a Democrat whose district includes Johnston and Franklin counties, has been arrested and charged with driving while impaired in Smithfield, authorities say.

Brannan, 56, a member of the House Law Enforcement Committee, was arrested late Monday night after a police officer stopped his van on a Smithfield street, Police Chief J.R. Peterson said Tuesday. Peterson said he could provide no other details.

A spokesman for the Johnston County court clerk's office said records there showed Brannan took a Breathalyzer test and registered a .20. In North Carolina, a person is legally drunk when he registers .10 or higher.

The court spokesman, who declined to be identified, said Brannan was ordered to appear in court on Oct. 17 and that a magistrate had suspended his license for 10 days, as required by state law.

AIDS Center

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina School of Medicine has been selected as one of the nation's five new AIDS Dementia Centers by the National Institute for Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke.

A $3.5 million grant announced Tuesday will pay for the center's activities over its first three years. The centers will be established to allow physicians and scientists to better understand and treat neurological symptoms associated with the fatal illness.

Other institutions selected by the national institute are Johns Hopkins University, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center and the universities of Maryland and Miami.

Rate Hike Approved

The effect of the rate hike on small general-service and large general-service customers will also vary, according to the customer's demand for electricity.

Green emphasized that the rate hike is "revenue neutral" to GUC, meaning that any increase in funds generated by the hike will be offset by what the utility pays for electricity.

Though the rate increase is the first in four years, GUC's wholesale cost of power increased 2 percent in September 1987 and 4 percent in June. GUC absorbed these increases — at a cost of $3 million annually — by using the savings from its load-management program and other cost-containment measures, Green said.

And Green said every effort will be made to increase load management efficiency in the future. Because of the way the increase was applied to wholesale rates — to demand charges — Green said the commission would realize almost 13 percent more savings for the same effort.

This rate hike is the first of three planned by CP&L and approved by the N.C. Utilities Commission.

Green said the State Utilities Commission — which must approve rate hikes for CP&L and other private power companies — has approved a 7.5 percent rate increase for CP&L to take effect in August of 1989 and a 3 percent increase for August 1990.

The last wholesale rate hike passed on to GUC customers was a 6.5 percent increase in November 1984. A small rate cut — between 1 percent and 2 percent — was approved by the GUC board for customers in the spring of 1985.

The GUC offers a number of programs designed to help customers keep their utility bills as low as possible.

The Beat-the-Peak program can save customers as much as 40 a year. Radio-controlled switches are placed on central air conditioning units and water heaters to allow the commission to turn them off during peak-use periods.

Other programs: an energy survey to assist customers in making their homes more energy efficient; GUC's rebate program that offers up to $400 per unit when customers purchase new energy efficient heating and cooling equipment; the E-300 program which sets energy efficiency standards for new homes.

Residents Want New Airport

James Moore of Greenfield Terrace said the authority has "taken us for a ride," and he said the airport development is aimed at harming the black community.

"We are trapped," said William Gibbs of Greenfield Terrace. "We are not going to be able to sell our homes, now or ever ... Nobody is going to move out there."

Ms. James said the runway extension was not aimed at any specific community, but physical barriers make it impractical to extend any other runways at the airport. As for an alternative to the land-use plan, Ms. James said all other options had been considered and extending the runway north toward N.C. 33 is the most logical choice.

The land-use plan recommends that the airport purchase undeveloped land north of N.C. 33 to provide pilots with a landing approach free of trees, buildings and other obstacles, but Turcotte said the airport has not begun negotiations for the land or asked the FAA to finance the acquisition.

two votes, but neither candidate was declared the winner.

The county board ruled in June that irregularities cited by Dupree were significant enough to affect the election, but before the state board could act on the ruling, election records revealed a number of Republicans and unaffiliated voters participated in the race for a county commissioner seat from Consolidated District A.

Only registered Democrats were qualified to vote in the race.

The state board then ordered the county board to hold another hearing and submit formal evidence that ineligible voters participated.

At the board's second hearing Wednesday, 15 pollworkers from six precincts testified that no one intentionally allowed Republicans or unaffiliated voters to participate.

The board also heard testimony from 16 ineligible voters. One denied voting and another declined to say whether or not he voted, but 14 others admitted they improperly participated in the election.

Five voters on the list of ineligible participants were absent, but one voter testified that her husband, one of the Republican absentees, also voted in the election. Another absent Republican submitted an affidavit stating he too voted in the race.

With this evidence, the county board today issued findings that 15 of the 21 ineligible voters actually cast ballots in the race, and the irregularities were sufficient to cast doubt on the election.

The findings also state that no one committed fraud or intentionally unacceptable and there is no way to lessen the noise, then the FAA will purchase the home at a fair price and pay all moving expenses, Turcotte said, but current data does not indicate unacceptable noise levels exist.

Charles Gooding of North River Estates said it does not matter if the land-use plan is adopted or the runway is extended because the noise over his house is already too loud.

Mayor Ed Carter said he would recommend that the City Council ask the FAA to conduct a noise impact study to determine if air traffic causes unacceptable noise or adversely affects the homes.

Turcotte said the airport would have to show a need before the FAA will conduct the noise impact study, which would cost about $150,000.

If the FAA agrees to the study, it will pay at least 75 percent of the cost, but Turcotte said the airport must go through a lengthy application process before the FAA will do the study.

If the FAA agrees with the residents that the noise level are voted improperly, which would be a misdemeanor.

The state board has numerous options, including declaring Garrett the winner, ordering a new election or asking the local board to hold more hearings.

Garrett is black and Dupree is white, and 12 of the 15 ineligible voters are white. Kirby claims that the ineligible voters benefited Dupree. And without the ineligible voters, Kirby said Garrett's margin of victory would be larger than two votes.

Kirby said he would like the state board to force the ineligible to say how they voted and then subtract the illegal votes from the total.

Kirby said prevailing law throughout the country is that once it is established that a voter cast an illegal ballot, the voter loses the right to secrecy of ballot.

The need to make sure election totals are accurate outweigh the need to protect the secrecy an illegally cast ballot, Kirby said.

The county board refused to compel the testimony, but Garrett's co-counsel, Cheryl Swart, said she has cases from 21 states that state ineligible voters may be forced to say how they voted.

Carter Balks At Plan

and he reprimanded airport officials for not telling him.

"Last week I came before you without my saddlebags packed," Carter said to the crowd.

"I was somewhat embarrassed. But if they're not packed tonight, someone else is going to be embarrassed," he said. "I've raised pure Cain since that last meeting."

Carter said he wanted airport officials to explain why the plan said one thing about jet service, but airport officials were telling the people another.

Carter also said the plan contains some unrealistic things officials must be "dreaming about," adding that he has been assured that no change in neighborhoods or airline service is planned through the year 2006.

No airlines would want to fly jets to Greenville, said Carter, and the airport is not designed to handle regular jet service. He called the airport "rinky-dink" in his effort to show it is too small for large jets.

Airport officials said jet service was mentioned in the land-use plan because the draft was designed to cover every possible circumstance, likely or not.

But airport authority Chairman Jack Duffus said it would not be economically practical for airlines to fly large jets into Greenville because the hub system is designed so that small planes carry a few passengers to larger airports — like Raleigh-Durham — where jet service is available.

Duffus said the largest commercial planes likely to use the airport would carry about 50 passengers.

Airport Director Jim Turcotte said

the authority is negotiating for land. Though he said the land is not north of N.C. 33, where black neighborhoods are located, he would not be specific about where the land is.

The plan does recommend that the airport buy undeveloped land north of the highway to provide pilots with a clear approach path, but Turcotte said no negotiations for the property have taken place, and no request for funding has been submitted to the Federal Aviation Administration.

Carter said his top concern is the welfare of Greenville residents, but he is also involved with the growth of the city and the airport.

The mayor said he supports growth at the airport, but "at no time will I compromise my honesty and integrity in presenting the facts."

City Council member Mildred Council spoke at the meeting, saying she wanted to remind citizens that she stood alone two months ago in opposition to the land-use plan, but Carter said only he pushed to have the neighborhood meetings.

The mayor said he supports the reasoning for drafting the plan, because land around the airport has been improperly developed for years and the land-use plan will keep things from getting worse.

Wake Forest, N.C. (AP) — The new president of troubled Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary opened the school year Tuesday with a call to "walk in godliness."

"I have a goal for Southeastern Seminary: I want to see this place go," the Rev. Lewis A. Drummond told a crowd of more than 300 in Binkley Chapel during his convocation address.

Tyson Breaks Hand In Scuffle

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson's defense of his world heavyweight title against Britain's Frank Bruno is in jeopardy because the champion sustained a broken right hand during an early-morning street fight with former opponent Mitch Green.

Tyson claimed at a news conference that he punched the 31-year-old Green early Tuesday morning after Green ripped his shirt and shoved into him, "ranting and raving" that Tyson and promoter Don King owed him money.

"You both owe me. I want my money," Tyson recalled Green telling him.

"I pushed him off. He came back at me. He threw a punch at me," Tyson recalled. "I was nervous. I hadn't had a fight like a street fight in seven years. I was getting paranoid because he was close to me so I defended myself."

"I had no other choice but to defend myself. He hit me in the chest. I wasn't planning to punch him. I was fighting because I was scared."

Tyson said he punched Green above the eye but damaged his own right hand in the process, causing a hairline fracture to the third metacarpal.

The break "was not of a serious nature," said the boxer's manager, Bill Cayton.

Whether Tyson's Oct. 8 fight against Bruno in Wembley, England will have to be rescheduled will be left to Dr. David Chiu, a hand surgeon. Chiu ordered that a cast be put on "really just to make sure that there is no further injury of any kind," Cayton said.

After three weeks, when the cast that covers most of Tyson's forearm is removed, Chiu will decide whether "the fight can take place with no further risk of any kind to Mike," he said.

"It will be enough time for Mike to train," Cayton said.

Tyson said the fight occurred around 4:30 a.m. outside a 24-hour clothing store, Dapper Dan's Boutique at 43 E. 125th St., where he had gone to pick up an $800 jacket.

But Green, who filed an assault complaint against Tyson, told police the fight occurred outside an after-hours club at 41 E. 125th St., where Tyson and two other men had been, according to a police spokesman, Sgt. John Clifford.

Green of Jamaica, Queens, said in interviews that Tyson punched him first after he told the unbeaten champion that he did not think he (Tyson) won their May 1986 fight. Tyson won the non-title bout on a decision.

Green said that during the argument "Tyson popped him on the bridge of his nose," Clifford said. The injury required five stitches, he said.

Tyson brought two witnesses — San Antonio Spurs' basketball player Walter Berry and Berry's cousin, Tom Smalls — to the news conference to support his version of the facts.

Both Berry and Smalls described Green as the aggressor.

"Just leave me alone," Berry quoted Tyson as telling Green.

But Berry said Green ignored the plea, grabbed Tyson's shirt and ripped it. He said that later Green knocked the rear view mirror of Tyson's car to the ground.

Tyson said he had not been at a bar but instead had just come from Brooklyn and was planning to go to breakfast after picking up the white leather jacket inscribed "Don't Believe the Hype."

Now, he said he wants to put the fight behind him.

"I really don't want to press charges because it's really ludicrous, the whole scene. I'm a victim and then he presses charges on me," Tyson said. "We fought one time. He had a bad deal on his purse and he didn't make a great deal of money."

Detective Harold Dice of the 25th Precinct said Tyson was expected to appear there today to receive a summons charging him with simple assault, a misdemeanor.

Ford Downplaying Preseason Hoopla

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

The Daily Reflector's annual Football Edition will appear in Thursday's edition.

The tabloid includes previews of the 11 area high schools, East Carolina, the 11 East Carolina opponents and the Big Four schools of North Carolina.

Additional stories on the remaining Atlantic Coast Conference schools will appear in the regular run of The Daily Reflector, beginning with Clemson today.

Danny Ford

To the surprise of almost no one, Clemson is again loaded, but you would never get head coach Danny Ford to admit it.

Clemson has been tabbed by many as a consensus pre-season top 10 team and with good reason. The Tigers return 16 starters, the majority of whom are seniors, off last year's 10-2 team that defeated defending national champion Penn State, 35-10 in the Florida Citrus Bowl.

"We've got a lot of youngsters coming back, but all I know is what I read," Ford said. "We've got a bunch coming back but that doesn't take into account the people that were in summer school. We got some we're trying to get eligible."

Clemson returns its top three tailbacks, including 1987 ACC rookie of the year Terry Allen, the conference's leading rusher in 1987 with 868 yards. Also returning are backups Wesley McFadden and Joe Henderson, along with fullback Tracy Johnson. One big loss, however, is senior fullback Chris Lancaster, who is out for the year because of neck injury that dates back to high school.

"We lost (tackle John) Phillips, one of our very best offensive linemen, but everyone else is back," Ford said. "We've got good running backs. We've got two very fine fullbacks. We feel like we have good running backs. We've got a quarterback (Rodney Williams) who doesn't do anything but win."

Williams, who has quarterbacked the Tigers to 22 victories during his career, also has the luxury of returning receivers Ricardo Hooper and Keith Jennings. Tight end James Coley also got valuable playing time last year.

Williams threw for 1,272 yards last year, but completed only 46 percent of his passes. He did however pick up the Most Valuable Player award in the 35-10 Citrus Bowl win over the Nittany Lions by passing for 214 yards.

"Defensively, we have a lot of defensive linemen back, but not our best ones," Ford said. "Our best ones graduated in Tony Stephens, James Earle and (Michael Dean) Perry. They were all great players. They were our best players. We got some others (Jesse Hatcher at defensive end and Raymond Chavous at defensive tackle) back and some of them could blossom into good players. We've got a little better depth."

"Our problems is at linebacker, we don't have any (real-experienced) linebackers back. Henry Carter is passing up his fifth year so we have to pick on some young people. (Doug) Brewster came in last year as a freshman and was a pleasant surprise. I hope we can find some more people like him. Brewster and (Vince) Taylor right now are the starters."

There are few questions in the secondary, where Donnell Woolford is establishing himself as one of the best cornerbacks in the country.

"In the secondary, with the exception of a little bit of depth, we're in pretty good shape," Ford said.

"(Woolford) is the best player I've seen at his position in the time I've been in football. If he can stay injury free we believe he will be a top notch football player. We're real proud of him."

Also returning in the defensive backfield are safeties Gene Beasley and Richard Smith, along with cornerback James Lott.

If Clemson does have a pre-season weakness, it might be the kicking game, where David Treadwell is no longer around to provide game-winning kicks. A replacement must be found.

"I guess when we talk about our football team we've got to start with our kicking game and we've got to completely overhaul that deal," Ford said. "David Treadwell, who won about six or seven games with his foot, I wish David was still there, but he graduated."

"We've got a freshman (Chris Gardocki) coming in who is supposed to be a pretty good kicker."

Clemson's schedule includes an out-of-conference encounter on Sept. 17 with Florida State, which like Clemson is ranked near the top in the pre-season polls. Ford, though, has not even thought about that contest.

"Two years ago at Clemson we stunned 72,000 people against Virginia Tech, they busted our bubble (20-14)," he said. "I know, I was there. I had maybe four friends, and they were my family, when I walked out of the stadium."

"In 1984 we had everybody coming back we were coming off probation and we were like 1-3. We're not getting into that. Who cares about Florida State."

Musselman Answers Wolves' Call

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Timberwolves say they did their homework. And every time they looked at a question, Bill Musselman came up as the answer.

Musselman, who both rescued and punished the University of Minnesota basketball program in the early 1970s and who mortgaged the Cleveland Cavaliers' future in the early 1980s, was introduced Tuesday as the first coach of the expansion Timberwolves. The team begins NBA play in 1989-90.

"We could have had safer choices where everybody would have said, 'That's a good choice,'" Timberwolves president Bob Stein said. "That entered my mind, but I never considered that as a good reason to make a choice."

Musselman, 48, has won over 64 percent of all games in which he has coached and has led teams from three different cities to the last four Continental Basketball Association championships.

Nevertheless, he is most often remembered for the ugly Minnesota-Ohio State brawl of 1972, the 100-plus NCAA violations that were discovered after he left Minnesota and the fact he traded away four of Cleveland's No. 1 draft choices for marginal NBA players.

"I didn't know too much about him (before Musselman became a serious candidate) except some general reputation things. And on that basis, I didn't think he was a guy we'd want to consider," Stein said. "But the more I talked to people, I kept hearing about what a great coach he is."

Musselman, who signed a four-year contract at an undisclosed salary, has always been known for his intensity.

On Tuesday, he showed no sign that his intensity and desire to win had waned.

"If you want to picture the type of team that I feel the Timberwolves want and I want, I would say that you could visualize a cold, dark winter night in the state of Minnesota, a pack of timberwolves stalking and waiting for its prey," he said. "And the prey — and the opposition — is fearful of what might happen. World War III will take place. In lighter terms, the prey is in for a tough night and the battle of its life."

Musselman coached the Albany Patroons to the CBA title last year. Albany general manager Gary Holle described Musselman as "one of the most intense people I've ever met."

FBI Probe Reportedly To Have 3 Indictments

CHICAGO (AP) — An 18-month FBI investigation into the actions of two New York-based professional sports agents is expected to result in the indictment of at least three people, according to published reports.

U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas, who has headed the investigation, called a news conference for today and said he would reveal "three indictments in connection with the management and representation of professional athletes and others."

The investigation into agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom has focused on the alleged use of illegal payments and threats to induce college athletes to sign improper contracts with agents who would then represent them in dealing with professional teams.

Neither Walters or Bloom, who no longer are business associates, could be reached for comment Tuesday night.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported today that two sports agents and a professional football player were expected to be indicted on racketeering charges and a third agent was expected to be charged with lying to the grand jury. The newspaper, which did not name the suspects, also said a New York gangster was accused of attempting to force athletes into signing contracts with certain sports agents.

A Chicago grand jury has been considering possible charges of mail fraud, wire fraud, tax fraud, extortion, racketeering and obstruction of justice against Walters and Bloom, sources told The Atlanta Constitution earlier.

Walters and Bloom dealt with more than 50 college athletes from 1985-87.

"I said a couple of weeks ago that it was my understanding that they would indict Lloyd and Norby sometime this month," M.L. Trope, Bloom's attorney, said Tuesday. "So nothing they do at this stage will be surprise."

Prosecutors claim Walters and Bloom conspired to induce the athletes to defraud their schools by offering them cash and contracts in violation of NCAA rules, then induced them to sign "student-athlete affidavits" stating they had not broken NCAA rules by signing with an agent.

The Chicago Tribune said the investigation began in March 1987 after the beating of Kathy Clements, 32, an associate of Chicago agent Steve Zucker. The beating came after Zucker had signed two players who had severed ties to Walters and Bloom and was trying to woo another player, the Tribune said.

Sources said earlier that the athletes who received money are not expected to be charged criminally, but have agreed to make restitution to their colleges for scholarship money received, and to perform community service.

Libretto Putting Past Behind Him

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

When Charlie Libretto arrived on the East Carolina campus as a freshman in 1986, he was heralded as the answer to the Pirates' quarterback woes.

After a turbulent sophomore year that saw him quit the team twice, he is back on the squad for his junior year just hoping to contribute.

It's been a rocky two years for Libretto, who came in as a freshman and earned the starting job only to go up against over-powering foes such as Auburn, Miami, West Virginia and Penn State. Libretto and fellow freshman Travis Hunter alternated at the quarterback spot most of the year as the Pirates went 2-9.

As a sophomore, Hunter earned the starting job at quarterback. Libretto still saw some playing time, but the offense drifted toward an option-oriented attack that favored Hunter's talents and Libretto briefly quit the team but then decided to return. He missed the game against Florida State, but returned for the rest of the season.

At the end of the fall semester, Libretto left the team again and this time he thought it was for good.

"It was such a bad situation everywhere I turned with football," he said. "I felt going to school and getting my education was the main reason I had come to college anyway and I should keep that as my number one goal and go ahead and put my full time into that."

"It was a pretty tough situation after playing football for the last six years all through high school and expecting to play four more through college. Only going two and deciding to end it there was a very tough decision, but one that I had to make at the time and one that I felt was a pretty good choice."

He had decided to remain at ECU during the spring semester rather than transfer, but his plans changed again during the summer.

"When coach Baker asked me to return to the team I was just going to go to school at the time," Libretto said. "(Offensive coordinator) Coach (Kevin) Gilbride had spoken to me about it and I was really glad that

Wednesday Notebook

Pirate Pride To Be Tested

East Carolina University fans will have an opportunity to showcase their pride in the Pirate football program Sept. 3 when the Pirates open up the 1988 season at home against Tennessee Tech for a 7:30 p.m. contest. The game marks the first time since 1981 that the Pirates have opened up the season at home.

The opener was set up when N.C. State canceled its planned game with the Pirates. It seems that the Wolfpack is in much the same boat as the Pirates in hoping for a large crowd with their opener against Western Carolina. A good draw by the Pirates could possibly mark the only sellout in the state for that day and maybe show others around the area that, indeed, the Pirate program is on the rise. A large turnout on Sept. 3 could also play havoc on the Golden Eagles. It seems that the team has never played before a crowd larger than 32,000 before. Last year, in fact, the average attendance at a Tennessee Tech game was 8,700.

Former Pirates Holding Their Own

As the NFL teams trimmed their rosters to 60 players earlier this week, three members of the 1987 Pirate football team remained among those in contention to make a pro squad. Teams still have to trim the rosters to 45 before the season begins, but for now Vinson Smith, Anthony Simpson and Ellis Dillahunt are still listed on NFL rosters.

Smith, who signed as a free agent with the Atlanta Falcons, may be in the best shape of the trio even though he wasn't drafted.

Smith is currently listed third on the Falcons' depth chart at outside linebacker and he has also seen a great deal of playing time on kickoff and punt coverage teams, according to team officials.

Simpson, who was drafted in the eighth round by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, is presently the team's third-string fullback. Officials on the team say Simpson has not received a lot of playing time during the preseason. The bad news for Simpson is Tampa Bay officials say they are not sure if the team will keep two fullbacks or three. Dillahunt, who was taken in the 10th round by the Cincinnati Bengals, is listed fourth on the depth chart at the free safety position.

Reunion For The Coaches

The Pirates game against Tennessee Tech will serve as a reunion for Golden Eagle head coach Jimmy Ragland and ECU head coach Art Baker, along with ECU defensive coordinator Richard Bell. The three served together as assistant coaches on the Texas Tech football team back in the early 1970's.

Final Scrimmage Set For Tonight

The Pirates will go under the lights at Ficklen Stadium tonight for their final scrimmage before opening the season against Tennessee Tech. The projected first-team players are expected to see more action in this scrimmage than in the previous two outings. The scrimmage has a 7:30 p.m. kickoff. If the scrimmage goes like the first two have gone, the defense will be the dominating power in the game. Bell, although only in his first year as Pirate defensive coordinator, has won the praise of Baker during the fall workouts. Bell, who had a defense minus seven starters from a year ago, has worked his troops into shape and dominated the first two scrimmage games. Bell formerly served as Duke's defensive coordinator and as head coach at South Carolina.

Looking Good On The Defensive Side

Bell said several players have come to the front as the leaders on the defensive line thus far in the fall. Bell listed Mike Applewhite, Carl Carney Shannon Boling, Rodney Glover and Shane Hubble as the leaders at the tackle positions. At defensive end, Bell tabbed Ernie Logan, Joe Bright and Robert Jones as the current standouts.

A pair of Pirate football players left the team this past week. Walk-on defensive lineman Norwood Davis and red-shirt sophomore defensive end Joey Maddux both have departed. Maddux (6-2, 250) came out of spring drills listed as a starter at defensive end. Maddux was awarded the "Every Play, Every Day" award this past spring.

Festivities Planned For Opener

The Eighth Annual East Carolina University Pep Rally will officially kickoff the 1988 season. The event is set for Sept. 1 at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium. The festivities prior to the ECU home opener will continue Sept. 3 at 4:30 p.m. when the Pirate Bahama Beach Tailgate Party gets cranked up in the tailgate parking area around Ficklen Stadium. Featured at the party will be the Breeze Band and Brice Street.

New "Voice Of The Pirates" This Year

The Pirate footballers will be heard on 35 different radio stations this fall and play-by-play will be done by Jeff Charles, Director of Electronic/Media Promotions at East Carolina. Charles replaces Frank Giardina as the "Voice of the Pirates." Charles comes to East Carolina after having served for five years as "Voice of the Hokies" at Virginia Tech. Joining Charles in the booth with color commentary will be former Pirate standout running back Carlester Crumpler. Crumpler was added to the ECU athletic staff as director of administrative services earlier this summer.

Braves Lead Trimmed To Half Game

You've heard about the three-way race for the American League East title between Detroit, Boston and New York, and information has been flowing around about the Mets and the Pirates race in the National League East. But did you realize that the race for last place in Major League Baseball was heating up too. When the Braves lost to the St. Louis Cardinals 7-0 Tuesday night, their season record slipped to 43-82, only a half-game better than the Baltimore Orioles mark of 42-82. The Orioles, who started the season with 21 consecutive losses were rained out Monday in their game against Seattle, but when they enter tonight's doubleheader against the Mariners they will have the opportunity to take over the Braves and let them swelter in the heat of the cellar for a while.

Tigers Just Can't Stop Twins

Detroit may be leading the American League East for now, but one has to wonder how long they will lead if they play the Minnesota Twins much more. The Tigers have lost 10 out of 11 games to the Twins this season, that after losing the American League Championship Series to them last year. The Tigers seemed poised to finally win Tuesday as they held a 5-4 lead heading into the bottom of the eighth inning. The Twins, however, tied the game and sent it into extra innings. In the 10th frame, Kent Hrbek belted a two-run homer to lift the Twins to a 7-5 win and leave scratching his forehead once again.

Twins May Be In For Long Fall

The Twins may have the Tigers number, but they have got to be going crazy trying to catch up with the Oakland A's in the American League West Division. The Twins, 71-54 for the year, are currently seven games behind the A's, who sport the best record in the Major Leagues at 79-48. There is a possibility that the Twins could win more games during the regular season this year than they did last year when they collected 88 victories and still wind up 10 games or more behind the A's if Oakland continues to win at the better than 60-percent clip which it has sported throughout the season.

Dooley Sticks To His Thinking

By The Associated Press

Bill Dooley said his Wake Forest football team would have to rely on underclassmen in some positions in the 1988 season, and he has stuck to that philosophy to gird his defensive backfield.

Sophomore strong safety Brad Benson, a 6-foot, 185-pound redshirt from Seneca, S.C., will join seniors A.J. Greene, Tony Mosley and Ernie Purnsley in the starting unit. Greene is a four-year starter while Mosley and Purnsley are three-year starters.

Benson played mainly on special teams last season, but saw some action as a cornerback before switching to strong safety prior to this season.

"Brad was a valuable member of our special teams last fall but saw little game action as a cornerback," Dooley said. "We gave him the chance to play more as a strong safety and he has responded very well."

North Carolina State held its second scrimmage and Coach Dick

Sheridan said he was impressed with the defense.

"Defensively we have made some progress," Sheridan said. "We were very, very poor on offense. We're struggling both running and throwing the ball."

Senior free safety Michael Brooks and freshman strong safety Jesse Campbell made interceptions in the scrimmage and the defense turned three blocked punts into two touchdowns and a safety.

Offensively, junior quarterback Shane Montgomery completed 10 of 20 passes for 108 yards and one touchdown and he also ran for a touchdown. Freshman wide receiver William Turner caught two passes for 98 yards and one touchdown and freshman tailback Anthony Barbour rushed for 47 yards and one touchdown on four carries.

Duke Coach Steve Spurrier said one of his priorities for this year was to strengthen a rushing attack that averaged slightly more than 100 yards a game last season.

With four returning starters on his offensive line, Spurrier and offensive line coach Rich McGeorge should be able to achieve that goal.

Senior Ted McNairy and juniors Chris Port, Carey Metts and Brett Tulacro started every game for the Blue Devils last season and, with an average size of 6-5, 278, rank as one of the largest units in school history.

"We're definitely stronger as a team this year," McGeorge said. "Something we've worked a lot on has been coming off the ball well and we've done a good job of that in practice. Our execution has gotten better with more reps in practice."

"We should be able to knock some people off the ball and create some running lanes for our backs. We plan on putting in some new wrinkles because of so much experience up front."

Georgia Tech ended non-contact drills Tuesday with a morning and evening session and Coach Bobby Ross praised the play of two linebackers.

"The move of Kevin Salisbury and Chris Simmons to inside linebacker has worked out quite well," Ross said. "I'm really pleased with the progress that they've made."

Salisbury, a 6-4, 225-pound junior, and Simmons, a 6-2, 253-pound sophomore, were moved to inside linebacker when pre-season drills began Saturday. Salisbury moves from outside linebacker while Simmons had been listed as a starting defensive tackle.

"We will have had seven practices in shorts" when the Yellow Jackets begin full contact drills Wednesday, "and I think we've gotten an awful lot accomplished," Ross said.

"We've almost completely installed both our offensive and our defensive systems, and we've done quite a bit with our kicking game as well."

Top 2 Could Be Better And Worse

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers and New Orleans Saints lost only five regular-season games between them last season, but they share an ironic destiny this year.

Both may be better but wind up with worse records.

The 49ers were 13-2 last year and the Saints 12-3. But both were soundly beaten by Minnesota in their first playoff games and enter this season with schedules that by themselves could drag them down.

They should still lead the division. But the Los Angeles Rams, who faded to 6-9 last season, could surprise if they get quick help from their rookies, particularly running back Gaston Green and wide receiver Aaron Cox. The Atlanta Falcons will still trail.

San Francisco is still haunted by its 36-24 playoff loss to Minnesota.

The 49ers also face a killer schedule the first half of the season as several new players move into a starting lineup that showed its age against the Vikings.

The 49ers open on the road at New Orleans and at New York against the Giants. Before October is over, San Francisco will have played Denver and Minnesota at home and the Rams and Chicago on the road.

The 49ers won Super Bowls in the 1981 and 1984 seasons and have captured five division titles in the last seven years. But last year, for the third year in a row, the 49ers lost their first playoff game decisively.

"I don't think we have any real severe weaknesses," Coach Bill Walsh said. "More likely, we're good in some areas, but maybe not great. What we have to do is find what it takes to make that last difference to take us to the championship, and we're hoping we can do that this year."

Walsh expects quarterbacks Joe Montana and Steve Young and receiver Jerry Rice to repeat their spectacular play of last year. They will be augmented by receivers Dokie Williams and Wes Chandler, acquired from the Los Angeles Raiders and San Diego Chargers in trades.

Montana has looked as strong in preseason as he did last season, when he threw for 3,054 yards and 31 touchdowns. In one stretch, he completed 22 consecutive passes against Cleveland and Green Bay.

Young played superbly as a backup, throwing 10 touchdown passes and running for 190 yards while starting three of the eight games in which he appeared. Montana will open as the starter, but Walsh says Young will play a more prominent role this season.

Rookie Danny Stubbs at defensive end and third-round pick Bill Romanowski at linebacker should bolster a pass rush with lighter, quicker Michael Carter at noseguard and Charles Haley moved to strongside linebacker.

Cornerbacks Tim McKyer and Don Griffin held out for a month but give the 49ers one of the best pairings in the game.

The big star last year was Rice, the league's offensive player of the year. Rice led the league and set a team record with 138 points, including an NFL record 22 touchdown catches and one scoring run while playing just 12 games due to the strike. He also set an NFL record by catching touchdown passes in 13 consecutive games.

With Williams and Chandler taking some of the pressure off, Rice could be even better. Roger Craig, lighter and quicker, is the key to the running game.

After its first winning season ever, that gaudy 12-3, New Orleans was shocked by Minnesota 44-10 in the NFC wild-card game.

The Saints should be strong again under Coach Jim Mora. But the schedule problems come in the second half, when New Orleans faces the Rams twice, Washington, Denver, the Giants, Minnesota and San Francisco.

Reuben Mayes, who led the Saints last year with 917 yards rushing, had off-season surgery on his left knee and has been brought along slowly.

If he can regain his form, the Saints' running game, which averaged 146 yards in 1987, should be even stronger with the addition of top draft pick Craig Heyward, a 260-pound fullback with good hands.

Quarterback Bobby Hebert is coming off his first full season as an NFL starter and has shown maturity and confidence this summer. Hebert has a good, accurate arm and could blossom this year.

Late last year, teams loaded up the defensive front and dared New Orleans to go deep, knowing there wasn't enough speed to burn them. But Brett Perriman, the No. 2 draft choice from Miami, could change that.

The New Orleans defense is fundamental but very physical. The Saints led the league in takeaways with 48 — 30 interceptions and 18 fumble recoveries.

The heart of the defense is the linebacker corps of four-time Pro Bowler Rickey Jackson, Vaughan Johnson, Sam Mills and Pat Swilling.

The defensive line, headed by Bruce Clark and Tony Elliott, should be bolstered by the return of pass-rushing specialist James Geathers, who missed last year with an injury.

they were willing to give me the opportunity to return and finish my career at East Carolina.

"It was a real tough situation when I came in after the incidents that occurred throughout the year, but the team has really responded well now and I just hope to feel like a member of the team again. Whatever I can do to benefit the team will be fine with me."

With the departure of number two quarterback Brad Walsh early in fall practice, Libretto is currently leading the battle for the number two spot behind Hunter.

Mostly, Libretto would like to keep a low profile and just blend in as part of the team.

"All I'm hoping now is to support the team in any way I can," he said. "I hurt it last year, and this year I just want to make up for it. I don't know if I can ever make up for it in a lot of the guys' minds, but I sure am going to try. However the team sees fit to use me this year, I'll be there for them."

It's been anything but an easy situation for the Middleburg, Fla., native, but he hopes to overcome any left-over resentment by playing as hard as possible, taking his licks and getting right back up.

"A lot of that goes along with it now that I came back — taking your licks, being in the best shape of your life and really being ready to play in whatever situation the coaches see fit for you to play," he said. "(It's) putting yourself behind. Maybe earlier in my career, it was always an I (mentality) in my mind and now it's putting all that behind and starting all over again as a team."

It's amazing how much of a difference two years can make. In 1986, Libretto was an 18-year old who was being told he was going to break every passing record at ECU. Now, he's just happy to be a part of the team.

"Whoever came up with the saying that you learn from your mistakes was a wise person because you really do," he said. "I'm just glad I was able to learn from my mistakes and return to the team."

"When I came in as a freshman, I thought it was going to be a great four or five years playing for East Carolina. I've (still) had a good time playing for East Carolina. Even through the rough times I've enjoyed my two years."

New York Continues Streak Over L.A.

By The Associated Press
More than 30 years ago, the Dodgers beat every team except the New York Yankees. Now their problem is the New York Mets.

From 1947 to 1956, the Dodgers won six pennants but lost five World Series to the Yankees. They may have moved to Los Angeles, but the Dodgers still have a New York problem. Tuesday's 5-1 loss to the Mets was the seventh in eight games against New York this season, including all five in Dodger Stadium.

"They've got a very good team and they've been tough on us," said Steve Sax, who drove in the Dodgers' only run with an infield hit in the second inning. "Hopefully, we can turn it around and do better if we meet them in the playoffs. Right now we just have to go out and get them tomorrow."

"It's one of the mysteries of baseball," said David Cone, who scattered nine hits over 7 2-3 innings. "We play well against the Dodgers and we don't against the Padres. I can't put my finger on it or come up with some profound explanation."

Cone, 13-3, struck out six and walked none. Randy Myers finished with hitless relief for his 18th save and hit a run-scoring double in the ninth before Wally Backman added an RBI single.

Trailing 1-0, New York rallied for three runs in the fifth on Mookie Wilson's RBI single, Backman's run-scoring double and Keith Hernandez's sacrifice fly.

"This is a big series, and I hope this is going to carry over," Backman said, looking forward to a potential playoff matchup. "We're ready to play these guys. We match up pretty well with them. The teams are built around pitching. We've got some power and they've got some power, but we've got a better defensive ballclub. But when you get to the playoffs, it's a whole different story and these games are meaningless."

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati 2-0, Chicago beat Houston 9-3, Montreal beat San Francisco 2-1 in 13 innings, St. Louis beat Atlanta 7-0 and San Diego beat Philadelphia 9-1.

"It's always good to get up for a good team like the Dodgers," Cone said. "But if we see them in the playoffs, you can throw all these games out the window."

Los Angeles rookie Ramon Martinez, 0-1, allowed six hits and three runs over 4 1-3 innings. The 20-year-old Dominican right-hander had allowed two runs over 14 2-3 innings without a decision in his first two starts.

Pirates 2, Reds 0
Dave LaPoint, 2-0, won his second consecutive game since his trade to Pittsburgh and his fifth straight overall, giving up four hits in 7 2-3 innings. Jim Gott finished with one-hit relief for his 24th save.

Andy Van Slyke hit a two-run homer, his 22nd, as the Pirates ended a 25-inning scoreless streak. LaPoint, traded from the Chicago White Sox on Aug. 13 for reliever Barry Jones, has given up one run and seven hits in 14 2-3 innings for Pittsburgh.

Cubs 9, Astros 3
Damon Berryhill's two-run homer and Vance Law's two-run single highlighted a seven-run seventh inning, Chicago's biggest this season.

Mark Grace broke a 2-2 tie with an RBI single and Rafael Palmeiro followed with a sacrifice fly before Law's single and Berryhill's fifth home run. Mitch Webster's run-scoring single made it 9-2.

Jamie Moyer, 7-12, gave up 12 hits and three runs, striking out seven in his third complete game. Danny Darwin, 6-10, gave up 11 of Chicago's 16 hits, allowing six runs in six-plus innings.

Expos 2, Giants 1
Hubie Brooks drove in Rex Hudler with a two-out, pinch-single in the 13th inning as Montreal ended its nine-game losing streak and improved to 17-5 in extra innings this season.

Scott Garrelts, 3-7, who allowed only two hits in five innings, walked Nelson Santovenia to open the 13th. Hudler pinch ran, was sacrificed to second and stole third.

Andy McGaffigan, 5-0, pitched two innings of hitless relief. Joe Hesketh pitched the 13th for his fifth save. San Francisco, which had its five-game winning streak stopped, hit into five double plays.

Cardinals 7, Braves 0
Bob Forsch pitched a six-hitter and Tom Brunansky drove in three runs, including two with a first-inning homer.

Forsch, 8-4, struck out five, walked two and allowed one runner past second base in first complete game since he shut out Pittsburgh on Aug. 10, 1987.

John Smoltz, 1-4, pitched 1 2-3 innings and gave up six hits and four runs. Nine of the 14 batters he faced reached base. Jim Morrison, normally an infielder, made his second mound appearance this season, pitching the ninth.

Padres 9, Phillies 1
Carmelo Martinez hit a pair of two-run homers and Ed Whitson, 11-8, pitched a seven-hitter, striking out seven, for his first complete game since July 26, 1987.

Kevin Gross, 11-10, pitched 3 2-3 innings, his shortest outing in 27 starts, allowing seven hits and six runs.

Royals Eight-Run Ninth Inning Tops Texas

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Kansas City Royals had a wild time in Texas. The Royals combined six walks with four hits and a wild pitch, rallying for eight runs with two outs in the top of the ninth inning Tuesday night for a stunning 11-7 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"You've got a four-run lead going into the ninth, you've got to figure the bullpen's going to do the job," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said. "But we ran into big trouble. We gave it away. We walked it away."

Trailing 7-3, George Brett began the comeback with a single. Later, he drew a bases-loaded walk that put Kansas City ahead. The Rangers used four pitchers while Valentine and catcher Jim Sundberg were ejected.

"Winning like this has tremendous possibilities for us," Manager John Wathan said. "Now we have to take advantage of it. It's an entirely different mood in the clubhouse tonight. The music's blaring. Everybody's happy."

In other games, Minnesota downed Detroit 7-5, New York beat Oakland 5-4, Boston routed California 10-2, Toronto stopped Chicago 7-2 and Cleveland defeated Milwaukee 6-2. Seattle at Baltimore was rained out.

Texas starter Jeff Russell held the Royals to five hits and left after eight innings with a four-run lead.

"Jeff said he had nothing left," Valentine said. "It had been a long game. It was a situation where Jeff was gassed and where Mitch (Williams) hadn't pitched and I could get him into the game. But he just didn't have it."

Brett met Williams a leadoff single and Brad Wellman and Bill Buckner drew one-out walks.

Dale Mohoric, 2-6, struck out Bo Jackson, but pinch hitter Danny Tartabull got a two-run single and Willie Wilson's RBI single pulled Kansas City within 7-6.

Kurt Stillwell walked to load the bases and Kevin Seitzer's walk tied the score. Sundberg was ejected for arguing and reliever Guy Hoffman then walked Brett, forcing home the go-ahead run.

Valentine was ejected by home plate umpire Tim Tschida after Brett's walk, which capped 12 straight balls by Texas pitchers.

"Several of those pitches could have been called strikes," Mohoric said. "But when a guy's a little wild I think the umpire has a tendency that when you throw a good pitch, he's going to think it's an accident and call it a ball."

A wild pitch by Craig McMurtry enabled another run to score, Pat Tabler walked and Wellman hit a two-run single.

"I never said anything to him," said Valentine, explaining his third ejection this season and 17th of his career. "I was asking my catcher where the pitch was on the walk to Seitzer. I was upset, no doubt, but there's nothing in the rules that says you can't be upset."

"He (catcher Mike Stanley) said the pitch was down the middle. I didn't say he (Tschida) was blind or anything. But he thought I was showing him up." Steve Farr, 4-2, got the victory.

Twins 7, Tigers 5
Kent Hrbek's second homer of the game, a two-run shot in the 10th inning at the Metrodome, led Minnesota over Detroit for the 10th straight time.

The Twins are 10-1 against the AL East leaders this season. In last year's AL playoffs, Minnesota beat Detroit in five games. The Tigers had not lost 10 consecutive times to the same team since Boston beat them in 1975.

Hrbek hit a two-run homer in the first inning, later singled and then homered in the 10th after Kirby Puckett singled off Mike Henneman, 6-3. All 24 of Hrbek's home runs have come against AL East teams, six versus Detroit.

Jeff Reardon, 1-4, won his first game since last Sept. 13. The Twins won their first extra-inning game in six tries this season.

Red Sox 10, Angels 2
Mike Greenwell drove in his major league-leading 100th run, sending Mike Boddicker and Boston over California.

Greenwell went 3-for-4 with an RBI single that capped a three-run fifth inning and put the Red Sox ahead 3-2. Wade Boggs also had three hits and raised his AL-leading average to .359.

Jim Rice, Rich Gedman and Todd Benzing homered for host Boston. Boddicker, celebrating his 31st birthday, scattered six hits over 7 1-3 innings and raised his record 10-14 overall and 4-2 for the Red Sox.

Chuck Finley, 7-12, took the loss.

Yankees 5, Athletics 4

Don Mattingly singled home the winning run in the ninth inning and New York ended its four-game losing streak by beating visiting Oakland.

Rafael Santana opened the ninth with a single and took second on a one-out single by Claudell Washington, who had four hits. Mattingly followed with his single off Greg Cadaret, 4-2.

Dave Righetti, 5-3, who allowed the Athletics to tie the game with four runs in the eighth, was the winner. The Yankees have won just five of their last 15 games.

Blue Jays 7, White Sox 2
Fred McGriff, Jesse Barfield and Ernie Whitt homered and Toronto sent Chicago to its sixth straight loss. The start of the game at Exhibition Stadium was delayed 2 hours, 13 minutes by rain.

McGriff tripled and scored on Barfield's single, giving him 500 career

RBI, for a 2-1 lead in the second. McGriff hit a 452-foot homer, his 29th, and the two-run shot made it 5-1 in the sixth.

Barfield hit a two-run homer, his 14th, and Whitt had a solo homer, his 10th.

Jim Clancy, 7-15, got the victory and Duane Ward picked up his 10th save. Melido Perez, 11-8, was the loser.

Indians 6, Brewers 2
Joe Carter doubled twice and Rich Yett pitched five-hit ball for seven innings as Cleveland won at Milwaukee.

Paul Zuvella hit an RBI double during a three-run fifth and Carter and Mell Hall had run-scoring doubles during a three-run seventh.

Yett, 8-4, helped the Indians end a three-game losing streak. Bill Wegman, 10-11, dropped his fifth straight decision since July 19.

With Court Battle Over, The Racing Battle Begins

NEW YORK (AP) — The courtroom battle is over. Now the yacht racing battle begins.

After a year of legal maneuvering, the America's Cup showdown between Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes and Michael Fay's New Zealand is scheduled to start Sept. 7 off the coast of San Diego.

"I'm happy it's finally going to be decided on the water instead of in the courtroom," Conner said Tuesday. "I think everyone is glad about that, with the possible exception of New Zealand."

New Zealand enters the best-of-three series as a heavy underdog because of a judge's ruling that cleared the way for Conner to race a multihull 60-foot catamaran against Fay's monohull 120-foot sloop. Traditionally, the America's Cup has been contested in 12-meter boats.

Some sailors say matching Conner's 6,000-pound boat against Fay's 70,000-pound yacht is like racing a Ferrari against a pickup truck. But Conner says his speed advantage may be offset by mechanical problems.

"You always have the possibility of a breakdown with a small boat," said Conner, who skipped the San Diego Yacht Club entry to a victory over Australia last year.

During practice sessions, masts have broken, gears have failed and the boat has capsized.

"As soon as you fix something, there always seems to be a problem somewhere else," Conner said.

Another major concern are conditions off the San Diego coast, where Conner is hoping for moderate winds of 7-11 knots and smooth water.

"If the water is rough, we could be in trouble," he said. "The New Zealand boat is much heavier than ours, which means it's much more stable."

Hornets Sign Three Players To Pacts

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets have gotten a little closer to filling out their first NBA roster by signing Tim Kempton and rookie Jeff Moore and picking up a contract option on Michael Holton.

But, with 11 players now under contract and NBA teams restricted to 12, changes can be expected.

"We don't have much room left on the roster," Hornets vice president Carl Scheer said. "We've got to make some moves, and we will."

"This is a slow time now. Really, general managers don't address their rosters until Labor Day to mid-September," he told The Charlotte Observer.

Several guards are trade possibilities, with Holton and former Wake Forest star Tyrone "Muggsy" Bogues the most likely to be on the block as the Hornets continue to search for more strength up front. They could trade a guard for a big man or, more likely, trade a guard for a draft choice and use the opening on the roster to sign a free agent.

The signing of Kempton had been expected since the team's rookie and free agent camp several weeks ago. Kempton, a 6-foot-10 forward-center, played for the Los Angeles Clippers two years ago and in Italy last season.

Kempton played well in a series of exhibitions and should help the Hornets in the middle, where they lack depth. The only other center is expansion draft pick Dave Hoppen, who was a backup at Golden State last season.

Kempton reportedly received a multiyear contract with only part of it guaranteed.

Holton, a 6-4 guard obtained in the expansion draft from the Portland Trail Blazers; had completed his contract and was about to play the additional option year in Portland. The Hornets assume terms of his Trail Blazers contract.

The signing of Moore, a 6-7 forward from Auburn and Charlotte's third-round pick in the college draft, was a mild surprise. Moore has been overweight — he has lost 20 pounds this summer but is still at 240 — and his contract is not guaranteed, meaning he would have to trim down and play his way onto the roster in training camp in October.

Neither of the Hornets' first two college picks have signed. David Falk, agent for first-round selection Rex Chapman of Kentucky, has taken two weeks off work while his wife has a child. Scheer said he would meet Falk next week in Washington to resume negotiations.

Second-round pick Tom Tolbert, a 6-8 forward from Arizona, is expected to choose this week or next between a Hornets contract, reportedly with only one year guaranteed, and an offer from a team in Italy. Tolbert reportedly wants guaranteed money for two years.

"We still have a couple of loose ends to talk about," Scheer said of the Tolbert negotiations. "There are some things on each side to clear up. But we should know something soon on that."

Williams Leads Gamecock Scrimmage

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina concluded its two-a-day workouts with a 20-minute goal line scrimmage in which running back Gerald Williams scored three times.

Starting from the 7-yard line with three plays, South Carolina's offense scored five times in 10 possessions Tuesday.

Williams scored twice from the 1-yard line and once from the 4. Quarterback Todd Ellis threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to Hardin Brown and running back Keith Bing had a 7-yard TD run.

"We were real pleased with the way things went in two-a-day drills, Coach Joe Morrison said. "Our young men worked hard throughout the heat last week and have responded well thus far this week. We are all looking forward to one-a-day drills and the season opener on Sept. 3 against North Carolina."

Davidson Hoping To End Drought

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — As a long-suffering Davidson football player, senior defensive end David Lilley talks of bowing out with a winning season.

As the Wildcats' long-suffering coach, Vic Gatto believes those thoughts are finally reasonable. If that seems lofty for a program that has gone 2-29 in Gatto's first three seasons, one thing is certain.

This is the year — the fourth on Gatto's five-year contract — that athletic director Kit Morris says he expects the Wildcats to become more competitive. Several factors indicate they might.

One is that they began to play more competitively in the second half of last season. Davidson scored in double figures in five of their last six games and were close in their final two games, losses to West Virginia Tech 41-25 and Catawba 27-20.

Another indicator is attitude. "It's totally different after our finish last year," Lilley said during Tuesday's media luncheon on campus. "Guys are stronger, there's a lot more competition and we're tighter as a group."

"We really have expectations."

Martin Hopes To Rebound From 1987

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina reserve tailback Kennard Martin, who was idle in the second half of the 1987 football season for disciplinary reasons, says he's thankful to have a second chance to play this year.

"I feel like this is a new year," Martin said. "I have a new coach (Mack Brown), and basically, a new team, with a different attitude. It's just a different year, and I'm ready to play ball."

Martin was suspended the week after Carolina's 22-14 loss to Wake Forest. He could only stand and watch as the season fell apart for his teammates, culminating with head coach Dick Crum's resignation in November and the arrival of Brown in December.

"A couple of times (during games), I was standing right here, in the back of the end zone," Martin said at North Carolina's annual Picture Day, as he stood on the same spot near the Kenan Stadium Field House and discussed his past troubles.

"It was my lowest period," Martin said. "It was the toughest period I have ever had in my life."

Media accounts following his suspension claimed Martin had been dismissed because he tested positive for drugs. He declined to comment on the cause, saying only that it was for disciplinary reasons.

Brown said Martin has performed well in this summer's preseason drills. In Saturday's intrasquad scrimmage, he ran for 63 yards on 14 carries. His longest run was 21 yards.

"He's come back from like 210, 215 (pounds) to 202, and he's really looked good," Brown said. "He has not had a bad practice, so he will definitely move up into the second-team slot. And leaving spring, he was more like three or four."

Kickers Are Victim Of The Turk

By The Associated Press

The Turk gave the boot to some veteran NFL kickers.

As teams cut down to the required 60 players Tuesday, New England waived Tony Franklin, Super Bowl champion Washington released Ali Haji-Sheikh and Minnesota got rid of punter Greg Coleman.

Kansas City cut Lewis Colbert, the Chiefs' regular punter at the start of last season, and Dallas let go of Eric Schubert, who has kicked for several NFL teams.

Franklin, the NFL's leading scorer in 1986, lost his job to fourth-round draftee Teddy Garcia.

"He was responsible for a lot of our victories over the last four seasons and was one of the best kickers I've ever been associated with," Coach Raymond Berry said. "But it's been pretty clear that his productivity and performance have drastically fallen off, and it was in our best interests to make the move now."

In his nine professional seasons, the barefooted kicker scored 854 points for Philadelphia and New England. He scored just one point in three exhibition games and was bothered with a groin injury.

"It's a decision they made, but I know I can still play," Franklin said. "I'll know one way or another in the next 24 hours where I'll be, but I know I'll be kicking somewhere."

Garcia, of Northeast Louisiana, will be kicking in New England.

"I'm pretty excited," he said. "But I still have to prove myself. I came here to compete against myself, not against Tony Franklin, and if I was to relax now, it would defeat everything I came here for."

Haji-Sheikh also was beaten for the job by a rookie, Chip Lohmiller, even though he did not miss an extra point or field goal attempt during the preseason. In last January's Super Bowl, the former Giant and Falcon kicked six extra points. He was 13-for-19 on field goals and missed three of 32 conversions in 1987.

"It always hurts more the first time (you are cut), but this is right up there," Haji-Sheikh said. "I'll probably wait a day or two. If nothing happens, I'll call around. It could be quick or it could be long."

Lohmiller has missed two conversions and two field goals in the preseason. "We feel Chip is the strongest (of the two) and he has the potential to be a real good kicker," Coach Joe Gibbs said.

Coleman, who joined the Vikings in 1978, lost the job to Bucky Scribner at the end of last season and never regained it.

"Coleman's done a lot of excellent work for us," Minnesota coach Jerry Burns said. "He's a classy person, and he lends a lot to the team in terms of morale."

Coleman said he knew the decision was difficult for Burns.

"I understand his point of view, but still I wanted to come in and prove I was still capable of kicking, and I think I did."

But not well enough.

Other veterans released included Pittsburgh nose tackle Gary Dunn, one of the Steelers' last links to their Super Bowl years; Patriots center Guy Morriss, who accepted a position as assistant offensive line coach; Cleveland safety Chris Rockins, who left the team's training camp last week after he was held out of an 11-7 loss to the Jets, and Dallas defensive end Don Smerek and quarterback Paul McDonald.

The Patriots said they would place quarterback Tony Eason on injured reserve when teams are required to cut down to 47 players next Monday. Eason has not recovered sufficiently from offseason surgery on his throwing arm to be available when the regular season begins Sept. 4.

Tony's brother, safety Bo Eason, was released by San Francisco, which also placed four former starters on the injured list — defensive end Pete Kugler, cornerback Tory Nixon, safety Carlton Williamson and linebacker Todd Shell.

Pittsburgh cut three rookies, including ninth-round draft choice Gordie Lockbaum, who finished third in last year's Heisman Trophy balloting after playing both offense and defense for Holy Cross.

"I just wasn't making the plays," Lockbaum said. "I got every opportunity in the world. I just couldn't make the plays when I needed to."

Corporate Money Has Hidden Ties

DALLAS (AP) — American athletes are going for the gold in the Olympics with the help of multimillion-dollar corporate contributions, but such support has a hidden price tag, according to a published report.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Tuesday that corporate sponsorship is the primary fuel behind a growing U.S. sports machine that supports athletes in a style to which they never before had been accustomed.

Commercial sponsorships are "unbelievably important," said Bart Conner, a gold-medal-winning gymnast. "You just can't compete without them. You just can't."

Corporations gave an estimated $72 million in cash and products to the United States Olympic Committee for the 1985-1988 quadrennium. The four-year take previously was $62.4 million.

Vigil Says Critics Unfair

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Joe Vigil thinks the criticism heaped on American long-distance runners is unfair.

"I believe our distance runners are among the best in the world," Vigil, the distance running coach for the U.S. Olympic track and field team, said at the squad's training camp at the University of California-Santa Barbara.

Statistics, especially those involving the Olympic Games, do not support Vigil's contention.

The last American gold medalists at a distance race between 800 meters and the marathon were Dave Wottle, winner of the 800, and Frank Shorter, winner of the marathon, both in 1972.

In the 1,500 meters, the U.S. hasn't had a gold medalist since Mel Sheppard in 1908. In the 3,000-meter steeplechase, the last gold medalist was Horace Ashenfelter in 1952.

The last American to win Olympic gold in the 5,000 was Bob Schul in 1964, and in the 10,000, it was Billy Mills, also in 1964.

"The rest of the world is catching up with us," Vigil said.

Caught and passed would appear to be more appropriate.

The prospects again seem dim of the Americans winning one of those long-distance events in next month's Seoul Games.

Only Johnny Gray, the American record-holder in the 800, appears to have a legitimate shot. He has run the best time in the world this year in the 800, clocking 1 minute, 42.65 seconds, but was beaten last week by Said Aouita of Morocco, the 1984 Olympic champion at 5,000 meters, who is running the 800 and 1,500 this year.

Aouita has lost only one race in the past three years, that in a rare steeplechase appearance in 1987.

Other than Gray, the U.S. has only one other runner, miler Jim Spivey, ranked in the top 10 in the world this year in the long-distance races. And Spivey, 10th on the world list in the 1,500 meters, did not make the Olympic team.

Vigil, however, insists that the Americans can be competitive with the rest of the world in the distance events.

"In the 10,000, for example, we have six guys who have run under 28 (minutes)," he said. "They have range just below the world leaders. In fact, Mark Nenow (the American record-holder at 27:20.56) is a world leader."

"Those guys are capable of running a good race. They have the speed and the endurance. They have to make it happen."

"They (the Olympians) have to be in the right environment before the Games."

Vigil thinks that factor has been taken care of properly this year.

"This has not been like four years ago, when nearly all of them competed on the roads before the Games," Vigil said.

"And most have stayed at home, not gone to Europe. I like their attitude. I think this will be more of a team effort than in the past, not that there wasn't a team effort before. But this is a more polarized effort."

"In the past, the Olympic coaches didn't know where their athletes were before the Games. Now, I can tell you where they all are and what they're doing."

"Our primary concerns have been that they don't compete too much, and if they get hurt, we'll know about it immediately. We don't want to repeat that 1984 incident," when 1,500-meter runner Sydney Maree was injured and didn't give up his spot on the team, even though he didn't compete in the Games.

"Everything is going according to plan," Vigil said.

He said that because most runners have their own coaches, the job of the Olympic coach is mostly mental.

"We have to set their minds thinking positively," he said.

"Most of our team has been in big international competition, but every competition is different. We have to remind each kid of his setbacks in the past and protect against that happening again."

"There is nothing bigger than the Olympic Games."

Vigil's position as an Olympic coach was put in jeopardy last year when a magazine quoted him as saying that minorities lack the dedication necessary to succeed in distance running.

Vigil, whose ancestry is Mexican-American, said he "emphatically denied making these statements," and received votes of confidence from the International Competition Committee and the Athletes Advisory Committee of track and field's national governing body.

"I hate to talk about it now," Vigil said. "Everything's been fine since then. I've tried to eliminate it and put it behind me. It was a bad deal on my part to have to go through it."

Defending Amateur Champion Trying To Use Simple Approach

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Jay Sigel is playing in his 22nd U.S. Amateur Championship, and his experience has led him to take a simple approach to the early stages of the six-day event.

"To win the tournament, you've got to get in the tournament," Sigel said Tuesday after shooting a 4-under-par 68 on the first of two days of stroke play in the 88th U.S. Amateur.

The tournament to which Sigel alluded was the match-play portion of the competition, which begins Thursday and is open only to the 64 lowest scorers in the 36-hole stroke play qualifying. The cut of the 291-golfer field comes after today's second round at The Homestead, a mountain resort in the George Washington National Forest.

Sigel has won the U.S. Amateur twice — in 1983 he became the last man to successfully defend his title — but he has never taken medalist honors in the stroke play portion of the tournament.

"It would be nice, but I'm not thinking about that. I just want to get to match play first," said the 44-year-old insurance executive from Philadelphia.

Sigel's 68 came at the Lower Cascades course, one of two layouts being used for stroke play in the event.

Also shooting 68 on the Lower Cascades was Sam Stein, a supervisor for a package delivery company in Richmond, Va.

Josh Mondry, a graduate student from Franklin, Mich., posted the lowest number of the day, a 66, but because he was playing the par-70 Cascades course, he also was at 4-under-par. Mondry and the rest of the field which played Cascades on Tuesday faced a round over Lower Cascades today.

The match play portion of the championship will be held exclusively on the Cascades.

Also positioned well for medalist honors after Tuesday's round was Brett Quigley, a 19-year-old sophomore at South Carolina from Barrington, R.I., who shot a 1-under 69 on the Cascades.

A large group at 70 included Bill Hadden, a resident of North Haven, Conn., who won this year's New England Amateur. Hadden played on Lower Cascades, as did defending champion Bill Mayfair, who headed a pack at 71.

Sigel, who has more U.S. Amateur appearances than anyone else in the field, had five birdies and an eagle to offset one bogey and a double-bogey.

"The score actually could have been somewhat better," Sigel said. "But I'm pleased with 68, especially with two sixes on the card."

Stein, 28, a veteran amateur player in Virginia, had no bogeys, two birdies and an eagle on a course he estimated he has played about six times in competition over the years.

"I felt like I knew the golf course as well as anybody in the tournament," he said.

Stein, co-medalist in his sectional qualifying tournament for the U.S. Amateur, said his game has been strong for several weeks.

"I feel like I have a couple things going for me this week," he said.

Mondry, 24, birdied the first three holes, bogeyed three more to make the turn at even and slipped to one over for his round with a bogey on the 12th hole. Mondry responded with birdies on five of his last six holes.

"It was a nice finish and a nice start, but I feel I'd like to be a little more consistent," Mondry said.

As a junior at Stanford, Mondry gave up his golf scholarship, saying he no longer enjoyed the game.

He played very little over the next three years, and now that he is playing again on a reduced schedule, his main concern is getting a master's degree in business at Northwestern. Mondry said he will join his family's retail business upon graduation, and wouldn't consider a pro golf career no matter how well he fares on the amateur level.

U.N. Backs Claim

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A U.N. team of chemical weapons experts has backed Iran's claim that Iraq dropped mustard gas on an Iranian city this month in a raid that came after both sides had accepted a U.N. cease-fire resolution.

In a note attached to the report Tuesday, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said the bomb attack violated provisions in the 1925 Geneva Convention on the use of poison gases.

There were no reported deaths in the Aug. 2 attack on the city of Oshnaviyah, which is a few miles from the northeast corner of Iraq, though Iran said 2,680 people were injured. Baghdad denied responsibility for the raid.

Polish Police Smash Wine Barricades

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Riot police smashed barricades to break up a strike at a coal mine and cleared strikers from an idled bus depot today, opposition sources said. Still, more than a dozen enterprises remained on strike.

Confronted by an 8-day-old strike wave posing the stiffest challenge to its rule since 1981, the Politburo called on Communist Party members "to counter attempts to stir illegal strikes," the state-run news agency PAP reported.

"The stoppages have idled plants employing about 100,000 workers to press demands for legalization of the Solidarity free trade union movement, reinstatement of workers fired for union activity and wage increases.

PAP said the Politburo also decided to convene an extraordinary meeting of the policy-making Central Committee "in the nearest future."

In Szczecin, police today routed strikers from a bus depot, said Jozef Kowalczyk, spokesman for the Inter-Factory Strike Committee in the Baltic port. PAP said strikers left the Klonowice depot "at the call of security forces," leaving only the Dabie depot still on strike. On Monday, police raided three depots around the city and arrested strikers. Police evicted 150 strikers from the Miesko mine in the Silesian town of Walbrzych in an assault Tuesday evening, said Robert Kozak of the Solidarity Information Commission. A government spokesman had no comment.

But at another colliery in the Silesian coal fields, miners on Tuesday blocked themselves 580 yards underground in a shaft near the curfew-bound southern town of Jastrzebie.

The roughly 125 miners pledged to stay underground at the 30 Years of People's Poland mine "until the end of their lives, until all the demands are met," said Wojciech Maziarz, a Solidarity spokesman in Warsaw.

A strike ended peacefully at another coal mine, the Lenin mine in Myslowice, leaving a total of 10 still on strike, PAP said.

On Tuesday, PAP reported two new mine strikes but said stoppages had ended at four plants and that just a few thousand workers remained on strike. There was no way to confirm the claim.

The Politburo issued a communique saying speedy changes must be made to correct the country's economic policies. The government has raised prices 40 percent this year and wages have lagged far behind inflation.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said at least 49 people have been detained in connection with the strikes.

From the strikebound Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa appealed again for dialogue with authorities to end the strikes.

The government, which has declared the strikes illegal, refused. Communist authorities stifled Solidarity in a December 1981 military crackdown.

"There will be no political talks under the 'pistol' of a strike," Urban told a Warsaw news conference.

He did not rule out declaring a state of emergency in the affected provinces: "The measures that will be applied will be adequate to developments."

Hungarian Miners Strike To Protest Economic Policies

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — More than 300 miners were on strike at an important southern mining area today in the first reported worker protest of strict economic policies under Premier Karoly Grosz, state radio said.

The workers at the Mescekk mine in Komlo were demanding restoration of cuts in bonuses and changes in the income tax introduced by Grosz, who took over as premier and Communist Party leader in July, the radio said.

Reports on strikes in Hungary have been rare since the anti-Soviet uprising was quashed in 1956. Scattered labor unrest was reported in Hungary in 1969, in 1977 and in 1980-81.

Today's relatively swift reporting of the mine strike appeared to reflect the greater openness of state-run media under Grosz.

The state news agency MTI said the strike began Tuesday night when 150 miners refused to work at one entrance to the mine at Komlo, about 100 miles south of Budapest near the Yugoslav border.

State radio said this afternoon that 150 more workers on the day shift refused to work and that the stoppage spread to "several other sections of the Komlo mine."

MTI said a senior official from Budapest went to the mines to mediate the dispute. The official, Laszlo Kapolyi, returned to Budapest today with representatives from management and the work force to negotiate with the government, MTI said.

Laszlo Kovacs, head of the official mineworkers' union, was reported to be taking part in the negotiations.

Don't Delay, Take That Vacation On Time

By ALBERT B. CREWNSHAW
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Are you reading this at the beach?

Or are you hunched over your desk, chortling over how your boss will love you because you never take a vacation?

If you're in the latter category, you may want to reconsider your workaholic tendencies.

First, you may be throwing away a benefit you have earned. Most employers have, at the least, a "use it or lose it" provision that erases vacation after too much has built up or too much time has passed. Some require employees to forfeit unused vacation when they leave the firm.

And second, your untaken vacation time may be gumming up the books of the employer you think you are pleasing. If the company's policy is to pay departing employees for untaken vacation, your vacation days may be piling up as a liability on the balance sheet.

"Most companies want employees to take their vacation," said Phil Billard of Hewitt Associates, an Illinois-based benefits consulting firm.

Most Firms Want 'Time Off' Out Of The Way

For large employers who pay for untaken vacation, "vacation liability in total is quite large. If people work many years and accrue vacation and the company doesn't have a cap (on accumulations), employers do have a huge liability, no doubt about that," he said.

A survey of more than 800 medium-sized and large firms, conducted by Hay-Huggins Co. Inc., of Philadelphia, found that 38 percent force employees to forfeit vacation time not taken.

Some 27 percent allow carryover for one year only, and 14 percent allow longer carryovers. Fifty-three percent — a figure that includes some that allow carryovers — allow employees to take pay in lieu of time off.

"So 38 percent are saying 'tough luck' if you don't take your vacation," said Michael Carter of Hay-Huggins.

At the other extreme, Carter noted, of the firms that allow carryovers, 16 percent allow employees to accumulate unlimited amounts of vacation, and another 5 percent allow accumulations of up to 10 weeks.

"Some industries encourage their employees to sell back their vacation," he said. This is particularly common in industries that have trouble finding employees and must have shifts covered — hospitals, for example — and in industries that don't pay well and are troubled by absenteeism.

Vacation pay in most states remains largely unregulated. Some states, such as Virginia, leave the matter entirely up to the employer. If employees feel they have been treated unfairly, they must bring a civil lawsuit to recover.

Other states, such as Maryland, allow the employer to set vacation-pay policy, but will help departed employees recover back vacation pay if the company violates its own policy.

Still others, such as California, have laws that treat vacation or vacation pay as a form of compensation that the company is obligated to pay once it has been earned.

"Most people think vacation is pretty much a matter of the employer's policy, and generally that's still true," said Billard. "But some things are changing. There is some regulation that has developed and more that could be coming."

With the growing regulation has come growing complication. Foremost among the difficulties is the question of whether state or federal law prevails in vacation-pay disputes.

The federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 includes vacation as a protected benefit. Some employers who have run afoul of state laws have used ERISA to mount a series of legal challenges, contending that the act pre-empts state-enforcement actions.

Different courts have resolved the issue in contradictory ways. In California, such a case worked its way through the federal courts to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which upheld the state statute.

In Massachusetts, one of about 15 states in which stiffing an employee out of vacation pay is a criminal violation, the state's highest court recently ruled that ERISA prevails, so that complaints should go to the Labor Department, which oversees ERISA.

"So you have different results depending on where you live," said Billard. Employee rights and employer obligations are a function of "the types of labor laws states have coupled with how they interact with ERISA. It's an unsettled area."

Several employee-benefits experts noted that the Massachusetts court's view leaves workers effectively without a remedy against an employer who refuses to pay a few hundred dollars in vacation pay, since bringing a private lawsuit would be costly and it is unlikely the Labor Department would involve itself.

And for employers with workers in many locations, the legal disparities have the makings of a major headache, Billard said.

"You could end up with 50 different sets of rules."

Samuel Berger of Price Waterhouse Employee Benefits Services here said the situation "cries out for clear guidance from the Supreme Court."

State and federal laws also pose complications for employers and employees who want flexibility in their vacation benefits. Employers with "cafeteria" plans, for example, may wish to offer extra vacation as an option.

An employee could get more time off by giving up some other benefit.

"Some people want to work more, some people like leisure," Billard said. Cafeteria plans can accommodate both.

But employees can't carry vacation forward under a cafeteria plan because that runs afoul of tax rules on deferred compensation and in California it can't be forfeited because of state law.

Adventure In Carteret

Coastal Ferries Keep Way Open To Primitive Beaches

By SHERRY WELLS
The News-Times

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — One of the best-kept secrets in Carteret County is the accessibility of the barrier islands that lie within a mile of the mainland, stretching from one end of the county to the other.

While Bogue Banks has gone the commercial route, with condominiums, piers and marinas, most of the islands were taken over by the U.S. Department of the Interior in the mid-1970s and have become part of the Cape Lookout National Seashore.

Just over the west side of the Carteret County line is Hammock Beach State Park, which runs a free ferry to Bear Island. At the northeast end of the county is the state Department of Transportation's Cedar Island-Ocracoke ferry.

But the three seashore service ferries, operated by private concessionaires, offer unique opportunities for camping and communing with nature.

One ferry makes daily runs from Shell Point at Harkers Island to Cape Lookout lighthouse.

Carteret Boat Tours, which runs the service, is a people-only ferry. There are no camps on the south ends of Core Banks.

Camping is by tent or recreational vehicle only. Vehicles may cross several miles north, at Davis, and drive down to the lighthouse. The ferry operates from April 1 through Nov. 30.

About 15 miles farther east on U.S. 70, just about a half mile from Davis Corner in Davis, is the Alger Willis Fishing Camps.

Willis began carrying people to the banks 35 years ago. Several other mainlanders had groups of camps and transported fishermen back and forth across the sound. But over the years, Willis acquired most of those camps. Some were burned; some were moved.

His son, Glen, retired to Davis in the mid-1970s, after a career with NASA, and took over management of the camps.

There are almost 35 fish camps at Shingle Point, the destination point of the Willis Ferry. The trip takes about 45 minutes. Cabins rent for $7 a night and are furnished with cold running water, gas stoves, bunk beds, tables, chairs and flush toilets. Most of the camps have showers.

At the end of U.S. 70 in Atlantic, you come to the end of the road. There sits a gray building on pilings known as Morris Marina.

Capt. Don Morris and his father, Ira, have been boating fishermen to north Core Banks since 1936.

Don took over management of the camps in 1961. In 1969, he bought a used barge and began taking vehicles across Core Sound. Morris tells the tale of how his ferry, the Green Grass, got its name.

When boat builder Roger Willis of Harkers Island was building the ferry, he told Morris he would keep building as long as the green grass — money — kept coming.

"He kept saying, 'Keep the green grass coming,'" Morris said. "So I named her the Green Grass."

Camps run from $24 to $90 and sleep from one to 12 people. Cabins have hot running water, bunk beds, tables, chairs and flush toilets. The Kabin Kamps are open from mid-March through the end of November.

Mississippi Children Learn Good Work In Classroom Saves At Store

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Many elementary and high school students here never leave home without it.

Take 11-year-old Mike Burt, typical of those who possess a very special kind of gold card entitling them to discounts at certain local stores and restaurants.

"When I was in fifth grade, I had Bs and Cs," he said. "Now that I'm in sixth grade I'm getting all A's because of the gold card."

Mike is part of an unusual motivational program designed to enhance the academic achievement of 3,000 students in seven rural schools here.

The brainchild of Forrest County District Superintendent Walter Cartier and second-grade teacher Martha Williams, the program was begun in 1986. Already, they say, the number of straight-A students has more than doubled and there has been a marked improvement in grades for more than a third of the district's students.

Straight-A students receive a laminated gold card entitling them and their family members to discounts ranging from 10 percent to 50 percent at 25 Hattiesburg businesses.

Report cards are issued four times a year or every nine weeks at the district's five elementary and two high schools. There were 179 straight-A students before the program began. That figure jumped to 295 after the program's first nine weeks. Last November there were 427 straight-A students.

"Of course, not every boy or girl is able to achieve straight A's," said

Williams, 30, who teaches at Dixie School. "Those unable to earn a gold card receive silver cards if they show improvement in their studies, receive no Fs and have good conduct."

About 600 students are awarded silver cards, entitling them to discounts at 13 Hattiesburg businesses, including camera shops, drugstores, fast-food restaurants and department, clothing and sporting goods stores.

HBO May Drop 'Tanner' But PBS Could Take Over

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Boy, will HBO be in trouble if Michael Dukakis is elected president. The cable channel has dropped "Tanner '88," the series about a fictional underdog presidential candidate, and Kitty Dukakis is such a fan, she was in it.

Mrs. Dukakis did a cameo in the final episode, filmed last month at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

HBO had agreed to carry the Robert Altman-Garry Trudeau series only through the convention, but the Tanner crew hoped to get an extension, based on their good critical notices, and take candidate Jack Tanner through the November election as an independent.

Except for a possible pre-election special, the series' final episode, "The Reality Check," airs Thursday as well as Aug. 28 and 30.

"Otherwise, this is it — I'll ride off into the sunset," said Michael Murphy, who plays Tanner. "Next week this time I'll ... be out of work and depressed."

Murphy may only be out of work temporarily. The Public Broadcasting Service is hoping to find an underwriter to pick up the series and move it to public television for the rest of the campaign. That will take some doing, since time is short and the show is expensive.

"I've never had response to a character that I've had with this," said Murphy in an interview on the set in Atlanta. "The response is not only positive, it's intelligent. We get people who get it, who get what we're trying to do here. Everybody except HBO, I guess."

"If I had a show that was talked about the way this show is, and had Garry Trudeau and Robert Altman under my wing, I'd be jumpin' up and down. We'd love to take it to the election, which would be a nice way to finish this thing."

A move to PBS, said Murphy, "would be great, because we could reach the audience we're really looking for, and you wouldn't have to be wired up and there still wouldn't be any commercials. I'd love to be over there. And they're trying as we speak, they're trying to get the dough."

Trudeau, who writes the scripts and is co-producer, is the cartoonist of "Doonesbury" fame. Director Altman ("M-A-S-H," "Nashville") is known for his facility with improvisation and gritty realism.

The two combined to create a fictional series that feels like the real thing, and in fact Tanner's campaign slogan is "For Real." In Atlanta, confused passersby spotted the Tanner office in the CNN Center and stopped stock-still. "Which one is that?" one woman wondered when confronted with the Tanner billboards.

But most of the politically savvy crowd in town for the convention were up on Tanner.

"What'll you do if you really win?" joked a woman who spotted Murphy relaxing near the set. Murphy just laughed.

Tanner has run into all his "oppo-ners" along the campaign trail, and many have done cameos. In Atlanta, the Tanner crew learned Mrs. Dukakis was a fan when one of her staffers told them she'd like to do a scene.

"We said what do you want to do?" Murphy recounted, "and she said, 'Well I want to do a scene with that girlfriend.'"

Tanner's girlfriend, Joanna, was skulking around in the early episodes because she was working for the Dukakis campaign.

"We went up and sort of started kicking things around," Murphy said. "Garry Trudeau said, 'Well, she (Joanna) should be a little nervous, because she's shown some lapses in judgment here,' and Kitty said, quite spontaneously, 'What, for falling in love?' So we thought that was great, and we thought we'd shoot something like that."

In "The Reality Check," Joanna (Wendy Crewson) has lunch with Mrs. Dukakis, who forgives Joanna her indiscretions, then asks her to seek Tanner's support for Dukakis.

By the end of the episode, Tanner's staff is pondering whether to run their man as an independent.

Emile, the campaign's pollster, played by Jim Fyfe, argues in favor of an independent run: "Leadership isn't about management, especially given the very real limitations on presidential power. It's about values. It's about choosing roads, not paving them."

The episode concludes with Joanna, back from her lunch. "It's over, Jack," she says. "Isn't it? ... Jack?" Tanner stares enigmatically into the camera as the credits roll.

A Reflector Review

Dinner Theater Succeeds

If the theatrical fare — and the food — offered last Saturday and Sunday evenings in the joint inauguration of Actor's Theater SouthEast and The Hilton Inn is an indication, dinner theater should have a promising future in Greenville.

With the recent demise of The Playwrights Fund of North Carolina after several years being headquartered in Greenville, it's good to have the ATSE appear on the scene as a group dedicated to carry on live theater in Greenville in addition to university-originated entertainment.

And it's encouraging that The Hilton Inn has provided the premises for staging dinner theater.

"Murder at the Howard Johnson's," a two-act comedy by Ron Clark and Sam Bobrick, was the vehicle chosen for this premier effort. It was a wise choice, suited in scale for the intimacy appropriate to dinner theater.

The cast of three — Ann Secord as Arlene Miller, Joey Pollock as Mitchell Lovell and Greg Watkins as Paul Miller — is one of veterans of numerous local and area theater.

They worked beautifully as a finely honed trio, getting the most from the ludicrous plot, without falling prey to what could have so easily been a temptation to ham-up the fast-paced action. Restraint is the keynote to this genre of play with its almost-too-clever for credibility dialogue. The three realized the value of the element of intelligent restraint and thus made capital of the best within the hackneyed comedy.

Helen Hayes Recovering

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Helen Hayes, who was hospitalized last weekend for an irregular heartbeat, plans to go home today, her son says.

Her son, actor James MacArthur, said the 87-year-old actress became ill Sunday while visiting MacArthur in Crested Butte. She was flown 100 miles from the Rocky Mountain town to St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction.

Doctors initially suspected the elevation was bothering Miss Hayes. She had attended the Republican National Convention in New Orleans last week and "had gone from a lower elevation to a higher elevation and her body wouldn't tolerate it," said nursing supervisor Karen Bennett.

Both the scenes in Act One and the single scene in Act Two are set in the same room of a Howard Johnson's, a factor making the play easily presentable given the limitations of a dinner theater stage.

The plot — admittedly somewhat a contrived one — revolves around a dentist, Lovell, who has seduced Arlene Miller, wife of a used-car salesman, Paul Miller. In the first scene, we discover that Mrs. Miller and her dentist lover are luring Mr. Miller to the room in order to a: have him agree to a divorce, or b: to kill him. Miller, a gentleman of solid, old-fashioned virtues, refuses to agree on a divorce and the two botch their attempt to murder him.

In scene two, Mrs. Miller conspires with her husband to entice dentist Lovell to the same room, also for the purpose of killing him — because she is miffed that he has had an affair with his dental assistant. Then, in the final episode, the two gentlemen concoct a scheme on New Year's Eve to do away with the lady who has spurned both for a much younger man.

Nobody dies, and at play's end all turns out well — or does it?

Watkins directed the play. Joe Leichte was stage manager. Crewman for the production was Brett Hursey.

Hursey is also a local playwright, and his play, "Figment," is to be featured in an upcoming ATSE production at The Hilton Inn.

The dinner course covered by tickets for the dinner theater was one of appetizing choices with a large variety of well-prepared food.

Anyone interested in being a patron or participant of ACSE may write to: Actor's Theater SouthEast, 2462 Stantonsburg Road 188, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Nashville's Parthenon To Reopen After $2 Million Renovation

By MARGARET HABERMAN
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The 91-year-old Nashville Parthenon, the only scale replica of the ancient Greek temple and a monument to the city's billing as the Athens of the South, reopens in September after a $2 million renovation.

The columned curiosity, originally built in 1897 to celebrate the state's centennial, was closed in December 1986 to undergo a major interior face lift.

The landmark, based on the original finished in 438 B.C. on the Acropolis, is the centerpiece of a large city park in the middle of Nashville and draws up to 200,000 visitors a year, ranging from Greek scholars to inquisitive tourists.

"It is kind of weird, but wonderful," said Wesley Paine, director of the Parthenon.

"We get the entire gamut. We get people who do not even know what it's a copy of and then we get people who know a good bit," she said.

The reopening is set for Sept. 6 and marks the start of an admission fee — $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children.

A number of special events also are set for the month. A production of the Greek play "Thesmophoriazousae" (Trial of Euripides), is to be staged on the steps of the building Sept. 15-18 and Sept. 22-25. The first annual Athena Fest with food, music and dancing also is scheduled Sept. 24-25.

The improvements were much needed to upgrade the building, Paine said, and focused on remodeling the basement, including a refurbished art gallery, new offices, better art storage, new bathrooms and a new gift shop area.

"The area was out of date and didn't work well in terms of people flow and support space," she said. "Our needs had really just outgrown this space."

The renovation, paid for through a bond issue, also covered such things as inspecting the roof and cleaning out the gutters, she said.

An entrance on the east side was restructured, an elevator and other handicapped access features were added and better lighting was put in.

To meet fire codes, glass doors were installed at the west end of the building and the towering bronze doors at that end must remain open during the day.

The doors, which are located at both the Parthenon's west and east ends, are billed as among the largest in the world — weighing in at 7½ tons each. They are 24 feet high, 6½ feet wide and a foot thick.

But the most dramatic addition won't be ready until next May — a 42½-foot statue in one of the Parthenon's rooms of Athena Parthenos, the patron deity of Athens.

Local artist Alan LeQuire has been working on the statue for six years. The sculpture, with a price tag of about $250,000 from private donations, is about 80 percent complete.

His work area will be roped off and curtained with a suspended drape when the Parthenon is reopened, Paine said.

On a recent visit, LeQuire listened to the radio as he worked on a 6-foot-4 statue of Nike that Athena holds in an outstretched hand. Brushes for the top of the statue's helmet were scattered on the floor.

The original statue was carved in wood and covered in ivory and gold. LeQuire's version is built of a lightweight fiberglass-reinforced cement welded to a steel armature. Plans call for everything but the statue's flesh to be gold-leafed, but funding still is needed for that, Paine said.

The figure will weigh about 12 tons when done, LeQuire said.

Many people believe Nashville got its nickname as the Athens of the South from the Parthenon, but the reverse is true, Paine said.

The replica was built because the city already had that distinction, she said.

There's debate about the origin of the nickname. Among the theories is that Nashville with its numerous colleges and universities was the seat of learning in Tennessee as Athens was in Greece.

Other hypotheses are that the name stemmed from the city's standing as a cultural outpost, its Greco-Roman architecture or its role as a center of commerce and transportation.

When the Nashville Parthenon was built, at a cost of about $100,000, it was supposed to be only temporary and was made on a brick foundation with brick walls and had a plaster exterior, Paine said.

But the building became too popular to tear down as planned and was allowed to remain standing.

In the intervening years, however, the replica deteriorated to the point that it either needed to be razed or reconstructed with a more permanent material.

So in the 1920s, the Parthenon was rebuilt with concrete and reopened in 1931 after about a decade of work.

The Nashville Parthenon also includes plaster casts of pieces of the original's pediment sculptures from the British Museum that were used in the 1920s remake.

8-Year-Old Sharpshooting Girl Could Make Dirty Harry Cringe

By NINA J. NIDIFFER
Aiken Standard

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Caren Dichiaro is a slender, wide-eyed 8-year-old with a blond braid spilling down her back and pink heart earrings adorning her ears.

She is shy with strangers, makes straight A's in her classes at Redcliffe Elementary School, and hates to wear her glasses unless absolutely necessary.

But watch out, Dirty Harry: this little girl can shoot, and she hits her targets with devastating accuracy.

Her .38- and .45-caliber handguns look large in her hands, but she has no problem controlling them. In fact, she even likes to try her father's Colt AR-15 — a civilian version of the M-16 rifle — once in a while.

Caren dispels the myth that women cannot shoot, her father, Al Dichiaro, said.

"Some people say girls can't shoot because the grips on the gun are too big or the recoil is too great. That's not true. If Caren can do it, anyone can," he said.

Dichiaro is a gunsmith who makes custom handguns and teaches military, law enforcement and security personnel how to shoot. He has a gunshop in his home and several weapons of his own. He and his students often practice shooting on a range in front of his house.

When Caren was 6 years old, she would go out on the range and watch the adults shoot. She would help any way she could, her father said, by fetching ammunition, targets and cold drinks.

"After a while," Dichiaro said, "I noticed she was giving hints to the shooters. She was watching and picking things up, and she could apply it."

So Dichiaro gave his daughter a .22 and began to teach her the basics of handling a gun safely. She learned to stay out of the way when other people are shooting and to keep her gun pointing down. Her curiosity and good memory made her a quick learner. Now, Dichiaro said, "she could probably write a course on shooting instruction."

When she is practicing on the range in front of her home, Caren can hit a bowling pin from 17 yards away, a feat that is difficult even for more experienced shooters. Her father instructs her and gives her hints before and after each shot.

Caren said she prefers the .38 because it is light and because — unlike the heavier .45 — it doesn't throw the cartridge case back.

"You have to watch out for the .45," she said. "It will come back and hit you if you aren't careful."

She also helps her father around his shop by cleaning weapons, putting grips on guns, cleaning tools and assisting customers. Someday, she said, she would like to be a gunsmith too.

"Give her another three years," Dichiaro said, "and she'll be teaching people how to shoot."

Choral Society Slates Rehearsals

The Greenville Choral Society will begin rehearsals for its 19th season at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 6. Singers interested in joining the society may audition Sunday at St. James United Methodist Church, 2000 E. 6th St., Greenville, between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

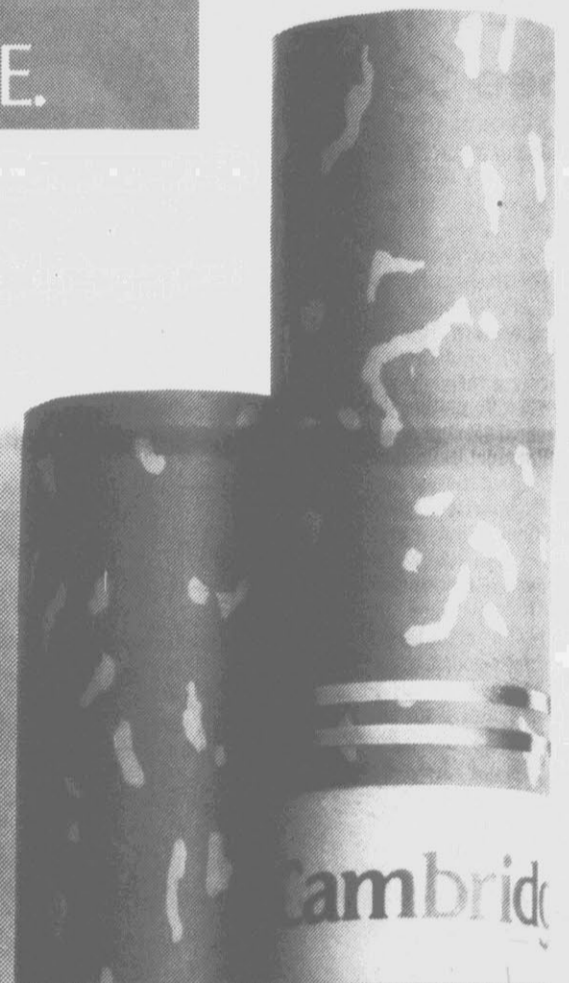

For the fall program, the Choral Society will join forces with the Tar River Choral and Orchestral Society of Rocky Mount. The program will include the opening chorus of J.S. Bach's Christmas Oratorio, "Christians Be Joyful;" "Fantasia on Christmas Carols" by Ralph Vaughan Williams; Puccini's "Gloria" from Messe Di Gloria, and various well-known carols.

In March 1989, the society will appear with other choral groups and the North Carolina Symphony performing Mahler's Symphony No. 8 "Symphony of a Thousand" in Raleigh. A concert of lighter compositions will be given in May for the Greenville audience.

Since its beginnings in 1969, the society has set its goal to bring the finest choral music to the singers and listeners of Greenville and the surrounding areas. All singers interested in participating may Sunday or contact the musical director, Dr. Rhonda Fleming, at 756-3618.

School

"It's helping all the kids," said Sidney Gilbert, 8, a second-grader who was getting his hair cut at Robin Geter's barbershop. "My mom and dad like it because my gold card saves them money. My dad gets his haircut here at half price when he comes with me."

The program motivates students to achieve and encourages parents to motivate their children, said Linda Steele, 46, principal of Dixie Elementary School. "Parents are very excited about the program, knowing their children are working harder in school, and they like those discounts at the stores."

She said that underachievers, especially, are showing improvement. "Many of the boys and girls who were getting Ds and Fs are now getting Cs."

Cartier and Williams were sitting around talking one day, thinking of ways to motivate their students. "Martha mentioned how kids get excited when their parents bring them something special from the store," recalled Cartier, 59. "We thought, let's reward them somehow for good work."

"The idea struck us that if we could get local merchants to give discounts to students who improved, we could involve the whole community in a scholastic program. And, here we are."

Thirty other school districts have since adopted similar programs.

Bob Chain, 58, former Hattiesburg mayor and appliance store owner, donated $1,400 to purchase a camera to help create the laminated cards and paid for the cards' printing as well.

Said Joel Breland, 41, owner of the barber shop that gives discounts to gold and silver card-holders and their families: "It shows the kids that working hard pays off. It makes a winner out of them. It helps my business, too, by bringing in a lot of new customers even though they don't pay as much."

Virginia Aborom, 16, a high school junior and class vice president last year, has earned straight A's since the program began. "A gold card makes you feel good about yourself," she said.

Deepstep, Ga.: It Has Only 120 People, But It's No Ghost Town

By BINKY STRICKLAND
Milledgeville Union-Recorder
DEEPSTEP, Ga. (AP) — It's Sunday afternoon. The pesky gnats seem to be the only creatures stirring. It's so quiet you feel like whispering.

This is Deepstep, a small Washington County town that likely would be a ghost town if it were not for the kaolin industry.

On this summer Sunday the mayor, 36-year-old William Hutchings, has just returned from Flowing Well, the town's recreational area, where most people head after church to swim and play volleyball.

Hutchings grew up "about five or six miles down the road" from where he now lives with his wife, June, and 4-year-old son, Jarrod. He returned to Deepstep in 1983, and owns the town's only general store and raises beef cattle on the side.

Hutchings said having a population of 120 assures that "just about everyone knows everyone else."

"When I was in high school I thought the thing was to move to the 'big city,'" he said. "You get a little older and see that's not what you want."

The name of the town gets a few chuckles from outsiders traveling on Georgia 24 between Milledgeville and Sandersville who see the signs pointing the way to Deepstep. Legend says the town got its name after an Indian crossing Deepstep Creek stepped into a hole and said, "Deep step!"

The town was chartered in 1920 by the Legislature, but Hutchings said Deepstep began as a farming community, settled in the 1800s by "three sets of Veals."

"Most everybody can trace their roots back to the Veals," he said.

Deepstep once reigned as the commercial center for surrounding agricultural districts. But the population declined when farms became larger and more mechanized.

Today, 65 percent of the residents are either younger than 14 or older than 60, Hutchings said. The majority of the young adults work at the kaolin mines, and there are two or three full-time farmers, he said.

Despite its small size, Deepstep is no ghost town. A hair salon sits next door to Hutchings' store, while a florist shop is around the corner. The Georgia Kaolin Lands Department is located in the town, as is C.T. Harris' trucking company, whose fleet of trucks haul kaolin. Shearam Construction Co. also has its offices there.

Many of the social activities of Deepstep center around the two churches, Deepstep Methodist and Smyrna Baptist. "Eating out" means going to Sandersville (about 10 miles east of Deepstep) or Milledgeville, and major shopping is done in both towns.

Hutchings said he likes the "quiet environment" of the small community.

And if it were up to Hilliard Veal and his wife, Bernice, Deepstep would be even quieter. On a steamy Sunday afternoon the Veals, still dressed in their church clothes, sat in rocking chairs on their front porch sipping tea.

Their house faces Deepstep Road, the county-maintained road that runs straight through town.

Hilliard Veal, who was "born and raised" in Deepstep, remembers when it was still a farming community and cotton was king.

Veal said his father had a "one-horse" farm where he worked for wages. In 1927, he opened a general merchandise store which he operated for 45 years. He went to Deepstep School, located about a half a mile from his home.

Deepstep School closed in 1963 when Washington County Schools were consolidated.

"It's the worse thing that can happen to any community when they do away with the school," Veal said.

Though it's quiet on Sundays, there's a steady roar on weekdays from the kaolin trucks traveling the highway, the Veals said. And other activity in Deepstep heightens on weekdays. Around noon on a Friday, Faye Avant and her sister Brenda Tanner are working in their florist shop. Lois Everett is enjoying a brisk business at the hair salon, and customers are crowding into William Hutchings' store. His new short-order restaurant, a new wing to his store, opened Monday, but business is booming. Most of the customers at the store and restaurant are men, and most of them work at the kaolin mines, Hutchings said.

Neither the florist shop nor the hair salon has had trouble attracting customers. Owners of both businesses said people warned them they'd better move to Sandersville if they wanted to succeed. But Floral Designs has thrived for six years, and Lois's Styling for Men and Women has done a steady business for almost 10 years.

Everett and her husband, Roy, have lived in Deepstep for 32 years.

"I love it because everybody's neighbors," she said. "There aren't any strangers. When you're down and out, you always have a friend."

She said she would like to see Deepstep grow. Avant and Tanner agreed it might have become a ghost town were it not for the kaolin industry and related businesses, which have provided Deepstep's economy. They believe that the kaolin companies will bring even more people into the area.

Everett was asked if there was anything new she'd like to see in Deepstep. She told a story about working as a waitress at a restaurant located in her hair salon building. A co-worker was commenting on living in Deepstep.

"She said, 'Deepstep has everything we need but a drug store,'" Everett said. "I don't think we'll ever get a drug store, but it would be nice."

Medical Students See South

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Cultural and religious beliefs that affect health care in Appalachia are studied by medical students who travel to the region each year to assist rural doctors.

The students from across the country are funneled to tiny towns in northeastern Tennessee, southwestern Virginia and western North Carolina through a program offered by East Tennessee State University's medical school.

The doctors-in-training are paired for about five weeks each summer with volunteer physicians, but the students first attend a week of lectures that cover the belief systems prevalent among their patients.

"It helps them understand health care in a different culture. The ultimate goal is to recruit people with an interest in rural medicine," said a coordinator, Tom Tull.

The Appalachian Preceptorship Program includes time with two herbalists who teach the students about traditional remedies. The students are better equipped to help their patients if they know what beliefs are behind attitudes toward medicine, said the program's director, Dr. Forrest Lang.

"There's probably one in five patients who tries something that was handed down to them by their parents or relatives. They either use it before they go to a physician or concurrent with what a physician is prescribing," he said.

"Religion, stress reduction, beliefs in vitamins all are culturally determined," Lang said.

Many in rural Appalachia believe the devil makes them sick for bad deeds they commit, he said. That brings a lot of guilt to the healing process which must be dealt with by a doctor.

"That's important for the physician to know. Most physicians who don't get this experience don't even ask. You have to accept the patient's culture and values and work with them rather than criticize them," Lang said.

Nine students from Texas, Ohio, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Oklahoma recently completed stints in Newport, Big Stone Gap, Va., Pennington Gap, Va., Lebanon, Va., Saltville, Va., and Andrews, N.C.

"The medical students in most schools don't get much of an emphasis on the interface between culture and medicine," Lang said.

Before the students fan out, physicians already working in rural areas fill them in on health education, community health needs and their overall experiences in Appalachia.

The program is 4 years old and takes no more than 12 summer students a year who must be finished with their first year of medical school, Tull said. Five of about 25 students who have completed the program since its creation are in family practice residencies in East Tennessee, Lang said.

Lang has not tracked participants now in residency out of state, though he's satisfied with the number who returned to the region.

"We do need to study where the other ones are going," he said.

The students can use the program as a required or elective rotation, Lang said.

 Deception need not be elaborate to be successful. East's play on this hand is within the grasp of everyone—provided you can foresee the problem you will be posing for your opponents.

 Note North's cue-bid of the enemy suit despite the fact that he had two losers there. In the modern style, the immediate cue-bid by responder simply sets up a forcing situation and fixes trumps, but does not promise control of the enemy suit.
 Assume you are East. Partner leads the king of clubs and you follow with the deuce. How do you hope to defeat the contract?
 If you are looking for a way now, the boat has already sailed—you should have thought before playing to the first trick. Now partner will take two club tricks and then shift. Eventually you will get your ace of diamonds, but declarer will finesse you out of your trump king and make his contract.

 See the difference if you start an echo on the first club by dropping the eight, and complete it with the deuce when partner continues the suit at trick three. Partner will surely lead a third club and declarer, fearing that you are out of the suit, will ruff with one of dummy's honors to prevent an uppercut with the nine of spades.
 Declarer might be a little surprised when you follow suit. He will be far more disconcerted when he finds that, by ruffing high, he has established your nine of trumps as the setting trick—all you have to do is cover with the king when declarer leads one of dummy's trump honors. Not what you would call a spectacular falsecard; just a simple little coup that is almost bound to succeed.

Strange Seafood Festival Features New Wave Delicacies

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The conch blew ... signaling the start of the 12th annual Strange Seafood Exhibition in Beaufort.

About 1,000 people converged on the Beaufort Restoration site to sample some foods beyond their imagination — battered-fried stingray, shark creole, pickled eel, sea urchin roe, Korean-style squid, mussels in wine sauce and sea lettuce squares, to name a few.

The North Carolina Maritime Museum in Beaufort began the exhibition in 1977, with five staff members cooking and two serving a total of 10 dishes. About 150 attended that first exhibition, held inside the old museum building.

By 1982, crowds had become so large that a policy limiting attendance to 1,000 ticket holders was adopted for the next year.

In addition to giving the public an opportunity to sample edible and harvestable foods of the North Carolina waters, demonstrations of cleaning and preparing various seafoods were conducted.

But the real highlight of the festival was the food. About 100 volunteers who cooked and served the food willingly shared the recipes of the dish they served.

For example, just the wings of the stingray are used for the battered-fried stingray dish, Bill Ward of Morehead, said. "You need real large stingrays otherwise the meat is stringy."

The stingray, usually an unexpected and undesirable catch in the commercial fisherman's net, does not have any bones, just cartilage that is cut out in preparation, he said.

Once the stingray is caught, the wings must be cut off and bled immediately, Ward said. The blood is high in urea, which is found in the body fluids of mammals or is produced synthetically. It's used in making plastics, fertilizer and adhesives.

After bleeding the stingray, "put it in a blend of water and vinegar to neutralize the high urea content," he said. Otherwise, the meat will taste bitter and spoil quickly.

Ike O'Neal of Newport is a fan of mussels. They are "truly are one of the underutilized seafoods," he said. Grown in clumps in tidal marshes, mussels can be combined in a stew of salt, pepper, onions, potatoes and chicken broth, like that O'Neal cooked.

Sea urchin roe and dip are another delicacy of the water, according to Gail Cannon of the Duke University Marine Lab in Beaufort.

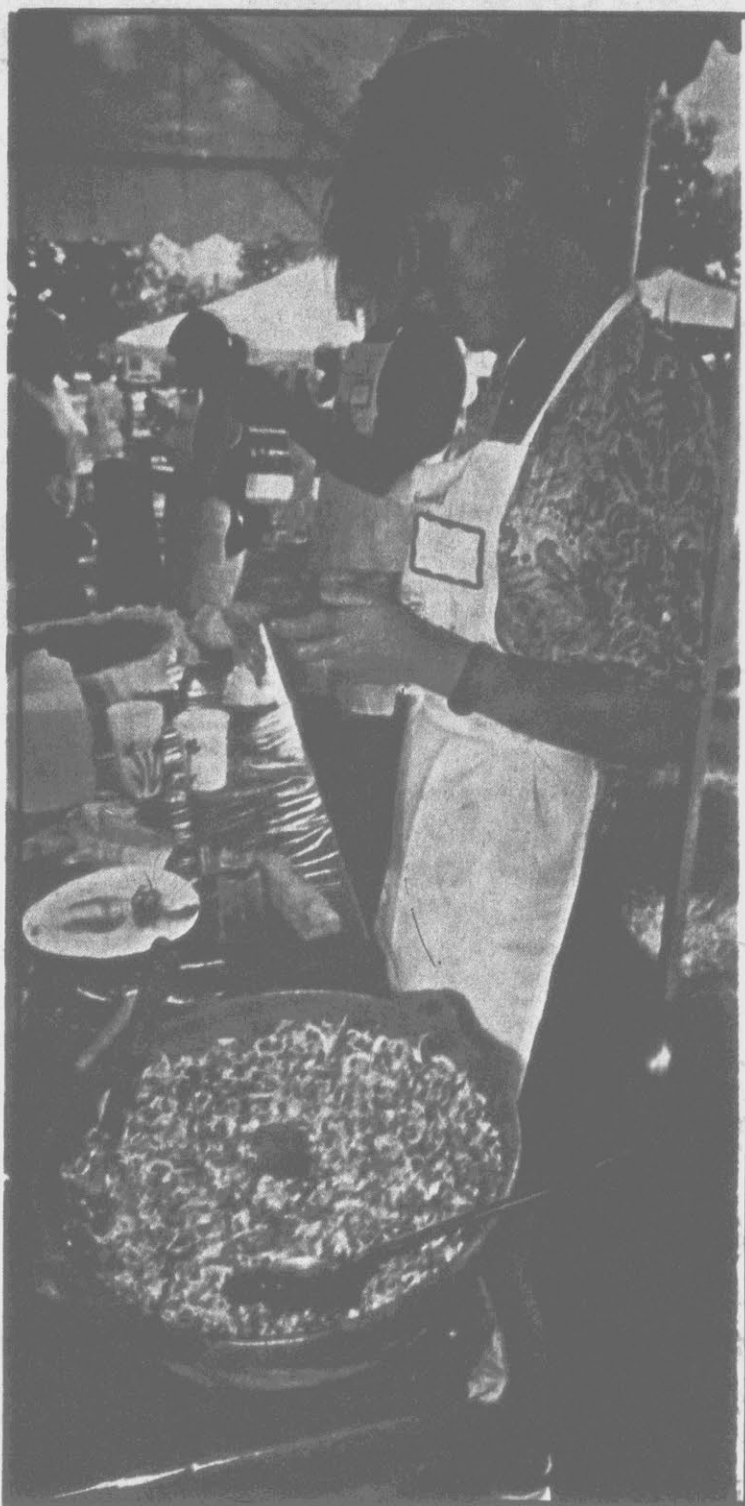

But, "we don't have a big enough market to make them commercial."

Oriental eat the eggs of sea urchins in gourmet dining, she said. In North Carolina, both the eggs and the sperm of the male are eaten.

For a quick tasty treat, periwinkles are the key, Pam Deal of Beaufort said. "You just steam them and dip them in butter."

Jeannie Kraus was the coordinator for this year's exhibition, while Nancy Martin was the seafood coordinator.

Eighty recipes used during the past seafood exhibitions are available in the third edition of "The Strange Seafood Cookbook," sold through the Maritime Museum bookstore (See story below)

DEMONSTRATIONS — Sam Osburn, left, of Beaufort puts the finishing touches on a Squid Salad that was served during the 12th annual Strange Seafood Exhibition recently. More than 35 dishes were available for sampling during the exhibition, which is sponsored by the North Carolina Maritime Museum in Beaufort. # Cookbook Has 'Strange' Recipes

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Cooks who specialize in seafood cookery or those who want to try something different might want to consider a North Carolina cookbook, "Strange Seafood Cookbook."

The sturdy, spiral-bound 112-page book was compiled and published by the North Carolina Maritime Museum in Beaufort. Each seafood specimen is depicted in line drawings and described with a detailed physical description. The book also includes information on where and how each can be obtained and gives steps in preparation for cooking.

This information is followed by one or more recipes for each seafood.

The variety of seafood available for the table from our coastal waters is amazing when one considers that seafood is usually thought of in terms of fish, oysters, shrimp and scallops.

The "Strange Seafood Cookbook," is divided into five sections covering molluscs, crustaceans, fish, plants, and a lone echinoderm, the sea urchin.

The sea urchin, incidentally, is one of the most difficult to prepare, with several steps to follow before the urchin's delicacy, the eggs, can be extracted. They are eaten raw, best with crackers as hors d'ouvres.

Eight plants are listed, including coastal land plants as well as water plants. Seven recipes are provided for eel, a fish often thrown away by local fishermen, but considered a prime seafood in the Orient and in a number of European countries.

Cooks wanting something a little different in fish can consider the filefish, for which two recipes for marinated, uncooked dishes are offered.

Other distinctive dishes can be made from squid, coquina clams, periwinkles, whelk or conch and octopus.

Once sampled, most people will find that these not frequently used sources of seafood are not after all, so strange, but instead are simply delicacies not previously tried.

A copy of "Strange Seafood Cookbook" can be purchased at the Maritime Museum in Beaufort or ordered by mail from: North Carolina Maritime Museum, 315 Front Street, Beaufort, N.C., 28516, with checks or money orders payable to the N.C. Maritime Museum. The cookbook is $6, plus $2 for postage and handling.

Here's a sample of the recipes included:

OCTOPUS SALAD

- 2 pounds octopus, fresh or frozen
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/2 cup red onion, thinly sliced
- 1 teaspoon salt

- 1/8 cup white wine
- 1 teaspoon fresh basil (or 1/2 teaspoon dried)
- 4 teaspoons fresh parsley (or 1 teaspoon dried)
- 1 teaspoon fresh oregano (or 1/2 teaspoon dried)
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/8 cup olive oil
- 1/8 cup vegetable oil

Clean and cut up octopus by placing the blade of a sharp knife at the junction of the arms and forcing it up through the top of the head. Next remove all the internal organs, cut out the beak and slice off the tentacles which are probably the tastiest part. Wash thoroughly in cold water. Cut into pieces no larger than 1x1 inch.

Cook on low boil in very little water until meat reaches the desired state of tenderness. After 1 1/2 to 2 hours, it should be tender enough to cut with a fork. If not, cook longer. Drain. Liquid can be served for chowder or other uses. Rinse in cold water until cool. Place in above dressing; mix well, refrigerate at least five hours, mixing every hour. Serve with

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: Last week we listed six common questions about diet and cholesterol. Here are six more questions.

1) I have heard Metamucil lowers cholesterol, should I take it? Check with your doctor first. It is probably better to try to eat more of the foods listed last week, first. But your doctor may suggest you take three doses of Metamucil (sugarfree) daily.

2) Should I take fish oil supplements? We recommend you eat two fish meals each week. But don't fry the fish. The fish oil supplements are expensive. There is little proof that taking 1-5 pills helps anyone. We do not recommend taking these supplements.

3) Can I eat shrimp? Yes. New analysis of shrimp find them lower in cholesterol than we thought in the past. But better than that, shrimp are very low in fat. Enjoy a shrimp meal, but don't have them fried.

4) Can I eat eastern barbecue? Yes. An occasional barbecue meal is OK. Most of the fat in the barbecue meal is not from the meat, but from the other items. Go slow on the coleslaw, if made with salad dressing, hushpuppies, extra mayonnaise, french fries.

5) What salad dressing should I use? Read the salad dressing label and find the ones lowest in fat. Use Lite mayonnaise or salad dressing. Use a vinegar and oil or diet dressing for salads.

6) What cheese can I eat? Cheese is a high fat food. There are few cheeses that are reduced in saturated fat. Use cheese sparingly. Read the labels to find lowfat cheese. The low fat cheeses are cottage cheese and Ricotta. Other lowfat cheeses are Farmers, Hoop, Laughing Cow, Light & Lively, Lite Line, Weight Watchers Pot cheese and part skim mozzarella have a little more fat, but are still low fat. Medium fat cheeses are pasteurized process cheese spread, Camembert, Neufchatel and mozzarella.

Pack Lunch Boxes With Fun

NEW YORK (AP) — As summer fades, thoughts turn to going back to school, and that means new lunch boxes and an old dilemma — what to pack that the kids will eat?

The first rule of thumb is this: if your child doesn't like it, he isn't going to eat it.

Rule number two: Lunch is always more appetizing, if it's fun.

Just as the right lunch box can make all the difference, so, too, can those non-edible items that kids like to find with their meal including fancy napkins, a personal note from Mom, a riddle, baseball cards, some stickers, or an interesting picture from a magazine.

Now for the food basics: sandwich or sandwich substitute, fruit or vegetable, juice or milk, and dessert.

Is your child fairly flexible about what he will eat? If so, peanut butter sandwiches can be enlivened by adding cheddar cheese, mashed bananas, chopped dates, raisins, dried apples, shredded coconut or dried apricots. A variation on this theme: cream cheese, instead of peanut butter, mixed with raisins and chopped nuts.

To give tuna or chicken salad sandwiches some crunch, add bean sprouts, sliced green peppers, pea pods, sliced almonds, chopped walnuts, bamboo shoots or celery.

Instead of American cheese, try Swiss, cheddar, Muenster, provolone or mozzarella. Other possibilities: sliced turkey, lean roast beef or roast chicken sandwiches.

Mott's, maker of the new single-serve Mott's Fruit Paks, has these sandwich suggestions:

- Peanut butter with banana. Slice the bananas lengthwise for a more secure sandwich.
- Sliced cheese and tomato drizzled with Italian dressing.
- Tuna or chicken salad with finely chopped celery, carrots or green pepper.

You can also add variety by using different types of bread including wheat, honey bran, rye, pumpernickel or raisin. You can also use bagels, pita, an English muffin or an onion roll.

However, be sure to check with your child before packing a substitute for his usual sandwich. Your child probably won't try it if he doesn't know what it is.

If your child prefers a "no frills" sandwich — just peanut butter or plain cheese, please, no extras — you can still add variety by cutting the sandwiches into triangles, or using cookie cutters to make animal shaped-sandwiches.

Popcorn, minus the butter and salt, can substitute for a small bag of potato chips to go with the sandwich.

When sandwiches become tiresome, try string cheese, hard-boiled eggs or leftover pizza. A widemouth thermos can be filled with pasta salad, coleslaw, grated carrot and raisin salad, fruit salad, or low-fat cottage cheese. For winter, fill the thermos with stew, chili, soup, baked beans or macaroni and cheese. Be sure to include a spoon.

Now for the veggies and fruits: Sliced carrots, celery sticks, raisins and apples are familiar lunchbox items. Other possibilities:

— Celery sticks filled with peanut butter or cream cheese and topped with raisins.

— Green or red peppers (or tomatoes) stuffed with low-fat cottage cheese. The cottage cheese can be mixed with sunflower seeds, grated carrot, crushed pineapple, raisins, chopped celery or scallions.

— Individual containers of applesauce, pudding and yogurt. Mott's has just introduced four new chunky applesauces, each with real pieces of strawberry, cherry, peach or pineapple.

— For homemade snacks, layer yogurt and chopped fruit in small plastic cups. (You might want to include a small frozen chemical ice pack to keep the fruit and yogurt chilled.)

STUFFED SQUID

1 teaspoon salt
1 quart water
Bread crumbs
3/4 cup olive oil
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup chopped parsley
1 small garlic clove
1/2 cup chopped pimento
Lemon slices and juice
Paprika or parsley to garnish

Boil cleaned squid in one quart of water and one teaspoon of salt until tender to the fork. Remove from the water and cut off tentacles. Set bodies aside and chop tentacles very fine.

Mix chopped tentacles with an equal part of bread crumbs. Moisten with a mixture of 3/4 cup olive oil and 1/4 cup lemon juice (you may not have to use all the liquid). Add 1/2 cup chopped parsley, finely chopped garlic and 1/2 cup chopped pimento. Mix together and salt to taste.

Fill squid bodies with the mixture, garnish with lemon slices, paprika or parsley and sprinkle with lemon juice. Serve cold, whole or sliced, as a meal or as an appetizer which is commonly known as "Sea Eyes."

SCALLOP FRITTERS

1-2 pints scallops, chopped
1 3/4 cup flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons onion, grated
1 tablespoon butter or other fat, melted

The ingredient amounts stated here are for use with one pint of scallops or clams. You can double the quantity to two pints for even more flavorful fritters. Drain chopped scallops or clams. Sift dry ingredients together. Combine egg, milk, onion, butter and scallops. Pour into dry ingredients and stir until batter is smooth. Drop batter by teaspoonfuls into hot fat, 350 degrees, and fry about 3 minutes or until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Cooked in these small bite-sized bits, these fritters make excellent hors d'oeuvres. In larger pieces, the fritters make a main meat dish.

MUSSEL DRESSING

3 dozen mussels
1/2 to 3/4 cup chicken broth
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup onion, minced
4 cups bread, crumbs or soft cubes

Cook the shucked mussels (and clams) in their own juices over moderate high heat in a frying pan for 3 to 5 minutes. Drain and mix all ingredients in a pot. Bring to a boil, lower heat and simmer for 10 to 15 minutes. Serve hot. Variations include adding one medium to large green pepper, diced or one cup diced chicken gizzards.

SMOKED CLAM APPETIZER

1/2 pound sour cream

Steam open chowder clams and remove meats. Make brine of 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 cup salt and one quart of water. Brine meats for 2 1/2 hours in refrigerator. Rinse clams lightly and air dry for one-half hour. Separate clams on screen or grill and smoke for 2 1/2 to 3 hours using 2-3 pans of apple, hickory, alder or cherry sawdust and chips. Remove from smoker when golden brown.

Grind clams in meat grinder to small size. Mix sour cream with ground clams to taste and proper consistency. Serve on crackers.

FRIED SOFT CRABS

1 dozen soft shelled blue crabs
2 cups flour
Salt
Oil for frying

Cut crabs into halves, from front to back, but keep the legs attached. Coat crabs in flour. Cook in oil at medium to hot for five minutes on each side. Blot on absorbent paper, salt and serve hot. Serves two to four, depending on number of people eating supper with you.

CREW'S SHRIMP SELECTION

1 pound rock shrimp peeled and deveined
2 tablespoons butter, melted
1/2 cup mushrooms, sliced
2 tablespoons onion, chopped
2 tablespoons green pepper, chopped

1 can cream of mushroom soup
 1/2 cup Cheddar cheese, grated
 1/4 teaspoon pepper

1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter, melted

Boil rock shrimp in a full pan of water for 2 to 3 minutes. Drain water from shrimp and cool slightly. Cut large shrimp in half. In a separate saucepan, cook mushrooms, soup, cheese and pepper. Heat, stirring constantly, until cheese melts. Stir in rock shrimp. Pour into a well-greased one-quart casserole. Combine bread crumbs and butter, then sprinkle this over top of mixture. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees for 10 minutes or until thoroughly heated and crumbs are brown. Serves six.

SHARK STEAK

1 to 2 pounds shark filets, cut 1 inch thick
Juice from 2 to 3 fresh lemons
Butter
2 onions, cut in rings
Salt and pepper

Soak overnight by coating the meat with fresh lemon juice and covering with water in a flat pan. When ready to cook, brush the meat with butter, dot with onion rings, and salt and pepper to taste. Place on a charcoal grill. Do not overcook — keep the meat moist. Serve with vegetables or whatever you prefer.

EEL STEW IN WINE

3 pounds eel, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup onions, thinly sliced
4 garlic cloves, crushed
1/2 cup brandy
Salt
White and black pepper
1 quart red wine
2 bay leaves
1 sprig thyme, minced
2 sprigs parsley, minced
1 cup small mushrooms
1/2 cup small cubes pork fat, browned and drained
1 cup small glazed onions

Beurre manie (2 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons flour rolled together in to several small balls)

Melt butter in a deep frying pan, but do not let it brown. Add onions and garlic and cook slowly until onions are transparent. Add the eel to this. Carefully pour in brandy, light it, and shake pan until flames die. Season with salt and white pepper to taste, along with a pinch of black pepper. Pour red wine onto all (burgundy is preferable), and cook with the pan covered until eel is tender, about 10 minutes. Sprinkle bay leaves, thyme and parsley on top.

Remove eel from pan, but keep meat warm in oven. Reduce the stock in which the eels have been cooked to two-thirds of its original volume. Next, to the stock add mushrooms, pork fat and onions. Thicken the stock with the beurre manie, adding several of flour-butter balls at a time, and blending them slowly into the stock using a spoon for stirring. Bring to a simmer, add the eels back to the stock and cook slowly for about 30 minutes.

Serve with French bread, croutons, or small slices of French bread fried in clarified butter.

STINGRAY CASSEROLE

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup mushrooms
3 stalks celery, diced
4 tablespoons grated onion
1/2 green pepper, minced
1/3 teaspoon basil

Melt butter in sauce pan over medium heat. Add other ingredients and simmer for 10 minutes or until the celery is tender, but not soft. While simmering, prepare the following for white sauce:

4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Pinch of nutmeg
2 cups cold milk

Melt butter in top of double boiler and, stirring constantly, gradually add flour. Add seasonings and slowly pour in milk. Cook and stir for about six minutes until sauce is smooth.

2 tablespoons butter
1 pound fillet of stingray, cut into 1/4 inch pieces
1/2 cup cracker crumbs
4 tablespoons grated cheese
2 teaspoons butter (additional)

Add butter and then the pieces of ray meat to the mushroom mixture and stir well. Let heat for five minutes. Combine with the white sauce mix and stir well. Pour mixture into casserole dish. Cover with cracker crumbs. Top with grated cheese and dot with butter. Bake 25 minutes at 350 degrees or until golden brown.

FRIED FRESH FISH ROE

STANDING IN LINE — About 1,000 people recently attended the 12th annual Strange Seafood Exhibition in Beaufort. Folks lined up early to be among the first to sample some of the 35 dishes prepared for the exhibition. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

THE CONCH BLEW — Mike Alford, a staff member of the Maritime Museum, blew the conch to begin the 12th annual Strange Seafood Exhibition in Beaufort officially. Once the conch was blown, servers of the seafood began sharing samples of the dishes to those lined up to taste. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

2 cups flour or corn meal
Salt and pepper
1 cup vegetable oil with 4 tablespoons bacon drippings for flavoring

Wash the roe gently, but thoroughly, removing any veins from the outside. Pat dry on paper towels, and salt and pepper to taste. The roe generally requires fairly heavy salting. Roll in either flour or corn meal. Roe can be deepfat or skillet fried in a pan coated with oil at a medium heat until golden brown.

Use prepared pizza dough or make your own. Flatten the dough and shape onto a pizza pan or shape into small bite-size portions for use as an hors d'oeuvre. Spread the mozzarella cheese on the raw dough, baking in a 450-degree oven long enough to melt the cheese, then apply the sauce. Spread the sauce thinly and evenly to avoid a soggy pizza.

Sprinkle on additional cheese and finish baking in 450-degree oven until done.

SEAFOOD PIZZA SAUCE

4 1/2 teaspoons olive oil
1 1/2 cups onions, finely chopped
2 cups fish flakes
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
6 cups tomatoes, coarsely chopped
9 ounces tomato paste
1 1/2 tablespoons dried oregano
1 1/2 teaspoon dried basil
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 cup fish broth
1 cup raw shrimp, chopped
1 1/2 cup mozzarella cheese, grated

Pizza dough

Heat oil and gently saute onions. Add fish flakes and the garlic powder, and stir for one minute. Stir in tomatoes, paste, oregano, basil, bay leaf, sugar, salt, pepper and broth. Add shrimp. Simmer one to two hours, gradually reducing volume to half, or until thickening occurs.

FISH MULLIGAN STEW

2 cups fish flakes
2 tablespoons salt pork, chopped
1 onion, chopped
2 large potatoes, chopped
2 to 3 cups water
1 small can tomatoes
1 can celery soup
Salt and pepper

Fry the salt pork at low heat for about 10 to 15 minutes, or until browned, and remove from pan. Sauté the onion in the pork drippings until glazed. Pour the fried pork, along with the onions and the drippings, into a large sauce pan with lid. Add the potatoes, water and tomatoes. The exact amount of water added depends on how thick you want the stew. Cook until the potatoes are done, about 20 to 30 minutes at medium heat. Add fish flakes, the celery soup and salt and pepper to taste. Cook slowly until the chowder thickens to desired consistency.

Lunches When It Comes To Diets, Teens Are All Talk

available in strawberry, blueberry, raspberry and peach.

Boxed fruit juices and milk eliminate the need for a thermos. You can put these boxes in the freezer until they are ready to go into the lunch box. After they come out of the freezer, be sure to wrap them in plastic wrap to keep condensing moisture away from other foods. (However, some children may object to the ice crystals these drinks may still contain at lunchtime.)

Home-baked muffins (use minimuffin tins), cookies and brownies often contain less sugar and fat than commercially prepared varieties. Cookies and snack bars made with fruit are generally more moist and flavorful.

The following recipe for a no-sugar cookie is from "Baby Let's Eat!" by Rena Coyle with Patricia Messing, nutritionist. This attractive cookbook, designed for children and their families, has a variety of interesting recipes, with complete nutritional guidelines for children aged 6 months to 3 years.

There are over 100 recipes including Chicken Nicoise, Sweet Shepherd's Pie and Pastina With Cheese and Vegetables.

The following recipe for Fruit Chewies is a sample from the cookbook.

FRUIT CHEWIES

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 1/4 cups whole wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/4 cup melted unsalted butter or safflower oil

- 3/4 cup frozen apple juice concentrate, thawed
- 3/4 cup raisins
- 2/3 cup dried apples
- 1/2 cup sweetened strawberry preserves

Oil and lightly flour an 18-inch long sheet of aluminum foil.

In a mixing bowl, combine the flours, baking powder, baking soda and spices. Stir in the butter or oil and the juice concentrate. Mix thoroughly.

Roll the dough out on the prepared foil until about 1/4-inch thick. Transfer the foil to a clean baking sheet and refrigerate the dough for 20 minutes.

To prepare the filling, chop the raisins in a food processor until they form a coarse paste. Add the dried apples and process briefly. Add the preserves, process briefly, and set aside.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F. Oil and lightly flour a baking sheet. Set aside.

Remove the dough from the refrigerator. Cut the dough into three rectangular strips, each about 2 inches wide. Spread some of the filling about 1-inch wide down the center of each strip of dough. With the aid of the foil, close the dough strips over the filling, as you would fold a business letter. Press together slightly to seal. Transfer the rolls to the prepared baking sheet, seam side down.

Bake until the crust is golden brown, about 25 minutes. Let the rolls cool for 10 minutes. Using a sharp knife, cut each roll into 1 1/2-inch pieces. Let them cool completely, then store in airtight containers.

Makes 24 cookies. Preparation time: 30 minutes. Baking time: 30 minutes. Holds in an airtight container: 5 days

NEW YORK (AP) — The results of a recent Gallup Organization survey indicate that although American teens talk about healthy diets, they often act differently.

Survey results were based on telephone interviews with 375 teens, 12- to 17-years of age, and 375 parents. Merck Sharp & Dohme, a pharmaceutical company, sponsored the survey.

"The results of the survey indicate that a majority of teens, although aware of the importance of healthy eating, actually practice poor eating habits," said George Gallup Jr., president of the Gallup Poll, during a recent symposium on cholesterol.

"It seems clear that more needs to be done to educate the country's youth about why it is important to eat properly and which foods are most detrimental to long-term good health," he said.

Gallup officials said the survey showed the following:

— Although 87 percent of teens say they put a lot or some effort into a diet they think is good for them, potato or corn chips, cookies, candies, ice cream and other sweets led the list of preferred snack foods. Only 10 percent named fruit as their favorite snack food.

— While 94 percent of teens recognized the importance of diet in controlling cholesterol, only half that number — 47 percent — said they try to avoid high cholesterol foods.

— Teens make generally healthier food choices at breakfast than at other meals. Cereal was among the favorite breakfast food of 39 percent, although 23 percent said they eat eggs for breakfast at least three times a week. For lunch, 79 percent named hamburgers, cheeseburgers, pizza and luncheon meat as preferred foods.

— Even among teens who said they try to eat a "heart healthy" diet, there is confusion as to which foods are high in cholesterol. Fifty-one percent who avoid cholesterol-rich foods shy away from fried foods, while only 30 percent stay away from butter, 28 percent shun eggs, 25 percent avoid beef and 19 percent pass up ice cream.

According to the Gallup survey, one reason for the poor eating habits of teens may be the lack of good sources of information about cholesterol. Fewer than one-quarter of teens have discussed cholesterol issues with their parents.

In addition, survey officials said, although 63 percent of the adolescents reported that they learned about cholesterol from classes at school, 74 percent believe their schools could do more to teach them about cholesterol.

In a parallel survey that the Gallup

Organization conducted among the surveyed teens' parents, 37 percent indicated they have discussed topics relating to cholesterol with their children, indicated a discrepancy between the teens' response to this question (24 percent) and that of their parents.

When parents were asked what specifically about cholesterol they discussed with their teen-age children, nearly half (46 percent) said they told their children to avoid foods containing cholesterol, one-third talked about the importance of eating healthy foods, and only 15 percent discussed the cardiovascular risks associated with eating a high cholesterol diet.

Soup Is The Secret To 'Very Best Meat Loaf Ever'

By BEA LEWIS

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

When Carrie Levin tasted the "very best meat loaf ever," she asked the hostess for the recipe.

She was shocked — the key ingredient was Campbell's canned cream of mushroom soup.

Later, when Levin and her partner, Ann Nickinson, wanted to put a meat loaf on the menu at their New York restaurant, Good Enough to Eat, they tried to duplicate the taste without resorting to a canned soup.

"We tried, believe me, we tried very hard," Levin said. The two substituted cream, tomatoes and fresh herbs aiming for different textures, different tastes. But to no avail. They still needed their can opener.

"It's embarrassing to cook with canned soup when you're in the food business," Levin said.

Many restaurants have canned soup in the pantry, but few are willing to say it for the record, said Kevin Lowery, a spokesman for Campbell Soup Co. As Levin discovered, canned soup provides an essential texture — "the product is designed to hold up to heat where other creamy sauces might separate under the same cooking condition," Lowery said.

But convenience is the prime reason for its continued sales. "The cook loves having all the spices and flavorings in one place," Lowery added.

While Levin thought she had discovered something new, can-of-soup cooking has been around since 1916 when "Help for the Hostess" was published, with the first-ever recipe using canned soup (condensed soup was invented in 1892). These recipes, however, had their heyday in the '50s, the glory years when green bean bake, tuna casserole and the souperburger were invented.

They appealed to "the home cook who could start creative cooking again, after the end of food rationing, the beginning of the baby boom," said Lowery, referring to the post-war years.

By the late '70s, when America's cooks leaned toward a healthier style of eating with less fat and less salt, Campbell was keeping a low profile; canned soups are very high in salt. Then, the interest in regional food and America's nostalgia for the '50s grew and "time constraints on a woman's workday rekindled Americans' interest in cooking with soup," Lowery said.

Today, the new recipes reflect current food styles. Magazine ads tell us how to use a can of soup to make shrimp and fettucini or tortellini salad with Parmesan cheese. There is even a recipe for a Thai soup using condensed chicken broth along with lemon grass, garlic and ginger. The recipes also work with the company's new line, Special Request, salt-reduced, canned soups.

These days, soup cuisine creativity is still going strong. More than 70 percent of all American households are using canned soups; Campbell sells more than 325 million cans of cream of mushroom soup a year with about 80 percent used as an ingredient in cooking. Thirty thousand home cooks nationwide recently entered Campbell's annual soup recipe contest. The contests help Campbell gain insight into how Americans use canned soup for cooking — for example, last year's $10,000 winner capitalized on the current bar-food favorite — Buffalo chicken wings, made with dry soup mix.

The following recipe is for the "best-ever" meat loaf served at Good Enough to Eat restaurant. For a copy of the five winning recipes in Campbell's contest, write to Campbell Soup Company, P.O. Box 964, Bensalem, Pa. 19020, and ask for those recipes.

Avoid Frying Mess With A Microwave

In your microwave oven you can cook crisp-coated fish without the added fat and mess of frying. Salad dressing adds flavor and helps the chips cling to the fish. Be sure to coat only the tops of the fillets.

- CHIP 'N' CHEESE FILLETS
- 1 lb. fresh or frozen fish fillets
- 2 to 3 tbsps. creamy Italian or ranch-style salad dressing
- 1/2 cup crushed potato chips
- 1/4 cup shredded American or Swiss cheese (1 oz.)

Thaw fish, if frozen. In an 8- by 8- by 2-inch baking dish arrange fish fillets with thicker portions toward edges of dish. Turn under any thin portions to obtain an even thickness. Spoon salad dressing over fish. Pat on crushed potato chips.

Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 4 to 7 minutes or until fish flakes easily with a fork, giving dish a half-turn once. Sprinkle with shredded cheese. Cook on high 30 to 60 seconds more or until cheese just begins to melt. Use a wide spatula to transfer fillets to a serving platter. Makes 4 servings.

For Hot Summer, It's Pressure Cooker To The Rescue

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Summer is here, and yet you are craving for the comfort and aroma of hot food. A steaming bowl of beef chili or chicken stew on a warm evening? Perhaps some rice pudding or warm creme caramel? It is easy to fall for these, particularly if the night offers a bonus of a gentle cooling breeze, but would anyone want to suffer through the long cooking preparation in a hot kitchen?

Pressure cooker to the rescue. About 50 percent to 70 percent of cooking time can be saved by using this pressurized cooking vessel, which works on the principle of increasing the boiling temperature of water and trapping the steam produced. Even frozen foods need not be thawed before cooking in this cookpot.

In the past couple of years, pressure cookers have been a hot item. More and more cooks have erased from their minds danger images of explosions from using unsafe old cookers and have put their trust in modern pots with reliable, updated safety factors. The latest entry in the pressure cooker market is the DeLonghi Stainless Steel Pressure Cooker, which looks user-friendly indeed. The newer unit, the more simple the styling, sans all the complicated-looking screws and valves.

Designed in Italy and manufactured by the world leader in home-heating appliances, the six-quart DeLonghi cooker ($89) is made of 18-10 stainless steel body and lid with graceful lines. The base plate is aluminum, which has the advantage of quick and consistent, even heating.

For maximum safety, the following features are offered by DeLonghi:

An automatic valve allows the steam out from the inside, preventing an increase in pressure greater than that selected; the cooker cannot reach any pressure at all unless the lid is correctly closed; a device prevents the lid from being opened while there is still any pressure inside the cooker; an additional safety valve makes it impossible for damage to be caused to the cooker by an abnormal increase in the pressure; a pressure indicator allows you to see if there is any pressure inside the cooker. A small rear handle conveniently positioned opposite the long handle eases lifting or carrying the cooker.

To maximize energy savings when using a pressure cooker, the heat should be turned to low once the pressure indicator rises, indicating that the pressure has been reached.

Double Coupon Gimmick Means

DETERGENTS COST $26.42 MORE AT KROGER

Kroger has recently been advertising Double Coupons. However, the problem with Double Coupons is that they end up costing you more money for groceries. In order to give you 50¢ for a 25¢ coupon, for example, Kroger has to make up the extra 25¢ by charging you more for the other groceries you buy. For example, a recent comparison of detergent prices shows Kroger charged $26.42 more for the same detergent items than Food Lion. At Food Lion we don't believe in gimmicks like Double Coupons. But we do believe in Extra Low Prices on all the groceries you buy. And when you shop at Food Lion you'll discover a lower total food bill -- without gimmicks like double coupons.
