King Son Rekindles A Dream

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Martin Luther King III said today that when tens of thousands gather Saturday to try to rekindle the dream his father shared with the nation 25 years ago, it should not be just a celebration.

"I think it's certainly going to be emotional. But although it's an anniversary, it should not be a celebration totally..." King said on the "CBS This Morning" television show.

"We've got some great problems in our society, and while now I'm optimistic that we're going to resolve them, we do have great problems and we've got to find ways to resolve those problems," he said.

He noted that black Americans continue to make less than other groups, while suffering from higher unemployment levels.

"I think individuals have made a lot of progress, but masses of people continue to suffer," he said in a separate appearance on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

But, King said, "the spirit grows each year to try to ensure that the dream can be fulfilled."

It was that dream of the future enunciated by the slain civil rights leader that stirred the nation, recalled his widow, Coretta Scott King.

"At the end of that speech, it was as if we all had been transformed and we had experienced, for a moment in history, the kingdom of God coming to Earth, and that was such a transcendent feeling that we felt better about America, we believed more in America, and we felt better about each other," she said today on "Good Morning America."

Mrs. King, Democratic presidential nominee Michael S. Dukakis and civil rights leader Jesse Jackson plan to address the gathering.

But Republican presidential nominee George Bush did not respond to an invitation, said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, who succeeded King as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"We have not heard from Mr. Bush," Lowery said at a news conference Thursday. A Bush spokesman, Dan McLagan, said the vice president plans to campaign in Texas on Saturday.

An estimated 250,000 people marched in Washington on Aug. 28, 1963, one of the great days in the civil rights movement and the occasion of King's moving "I have a dream" speech.

The same number of people commemorated the 20th anniversary of the march five years ago.

Lowery said he expects "thongs" to march Saturday, but he declined to predict the number.

Former GI Allegedly Passed On 'Extraordinarily' Top Secrets

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A former U.S. Army sergeant who allegedly led an international spy ring sold the Soviets secret documents on nuclear missile bases, military pipelines and NATO troop strength, news reports said today.

The Bild newspaper of Hamburg, which is known to have close contacts to intelligence sources, quoted an unidentified West German security official as saying Clyde Lee Conrad had sold "extraordinarily important information."

A special Supreme Court panel ordered Conrad held in prison pending further investigation following his arrest Tuesday. He was charged with "compelling suspicion of espionage activities in an especially grave case," according to the prosecutor's office.

Two men who officials said were part of the ring were arraigned today in Sweden.

Kurt Rebmann, the chief federal prosecutor, said Conrad also recruited a second American soldier who received a "five-figure sum" of money for supplying the ring with military secrets. Rebmann refused to elaborate.

Bild said information contained in documents that Conrad allegedly sold included "secret locations of nuclear missiles, classified documents about pipeline systems, defense plans of NATO and of U.S. divisions, and top-secret troop mobilization plans."

West Germany's ARD television network and The New York Times also reported that such information was sold by the ring, which allegedly had been operating since the late 1970s.

The Times quoted U.S. and German officials as saying Conrad guarded a safe that stored documents at the U.S. Army base in Bad Kreuznach in central West Germany.

Bild said Conrad lived in an elegantly furnished apartment near the base.

Officials have said the ring was be-

Contractor Cuts Cable, Knocks Out Phone Lines

Long-distance telephone service to much of the Fayetteville, Jacksonville, New Bern, Clinton and Kinston areas was cut off for about five hours Thursday afternoon when a fiber-optic cable was cut in southern Pitt County, Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. said today.

Service was cut off at 10:51 a.m. and restored at 4 p.m. after a 40-foot section was inserted into the badly damaged cable and fibers were spliced together between Ayden and Grifton, officials said.

"The disruption was caused by an accidental cut into a long-distance fiber-optic line during construction work by a contractor along highway 11 between Ayden and Grifton," said Jim Nichols, manager of information and publications in the Tarboro CT&T office. "The construction was being done for CT&T."

"Since it was a long-distance fiber-optic cable that was cut, it resulted, unfortunately, in a much greater disruption than if it had been a wire cable," he said. "The optic fiber cable carries a lot of calls, and the loss of this one affected a fairly wide area. No local calls were affected."

In Greenville, where all offices are tied in for monitoring lines, it was possible to get a pretty good idea of the location of the disruption of long distance calls and to get repairmen to the scene pretty quickly after discovering the location of the problem," he said.

Gulf Talks Moving Slowly

GENEVA (AP) — Iran and Iraq today returned to the negotiating tables for talks aimed at ending their 8-year-old war, but they abandoned face-to-face talks for the time being and met in separate chambers with U.N. officials.

Continuing direct talks, which began Thursday, still would be difficult, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said.

"It is too early for alone face-to-face," he told reporters before the meeting. "Even face-to-face with me alone... still would be very difficult." Problems between Iran and Iraq have lasted centuries, "and then it is not in one afternoon that we can decide," he said.

The morning meetings with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz lasted two hours and were to resume in the afternoon.

The session began Thursday with a joint session led by the secretary-general, and both sides addressed each other through interpreters. It was the first face-to-face meeting of foreign ministers since the Persian Gulf war began in September 1980.

But after two hours the session was suspended, and both sides met in separate chambers for three more hours, with U.N. officials meeting them and reporting to Perez de Cuellar.

The format of separate rooms was continued today, U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said. The secretary-general first met separately with each minister, then the delegations consulted in separate rooms, he said.

U.N. officials, based in another room, occasionally visited the delegations and Perez de Cuellar at times also met the delegations separately.

There was no word on progress in today's talks, but on Thursday Giuliani denied that separate meetings indicated a snag in the talks.

Land-Use Plan Goes Unnoticed

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority says discussion at the first two meetings concerning the airport's land-use plan has focused mostly on jets and noise, but he hopes residents will address the plan at the final meeting Tuesday.

"I'm not sure the land-use plan has been addressed," said Jack Duffus, chairman of the authority. "People are more concerned about other issues. And the land-use plan needs to be discussed."

"What I hope to do is try to turn (the meeting) in that direction a little bit," he said.

The third and final meeting is scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 at St. Gabriel's Church in Greenville.

The city's planning department drafted the land-use plan to see that the airport and neighboring communities can continue to co-exist.

In the past, airport officials say planning has been somewhat haphazard, and the land-use plan was needed to ensure that critical land remains vacant or is developed in a manner compatible with air traffic.

The airport authority, along with city and county officials, set up the neighborhood meetings to allow residents to ask questions about the land-use plan, but airport officials have been swamped with complaints of excessive noise, jets flying close to homes and accusations that the plan is aimed at harming the black community.

"People have in their minds other issues, rather than why the meetings were held in the first place," Duffus said. "Basically the land-use plan has not generated that much interest."

"What concerns me is that the airport has been there for a long time, and there have never been many complaints in the past."

"Now, all of a sudden, there are lots of complaints," he said. "The people are very vocal about it."

More than 150 people turned out for the first meeting August 15 at Wellcome Middle School and about 125 people attended the second meeting Tuesday at city hall.

Many of the same people attended both meetings, and nearly all of them black residents of North River Estates, Greenfield Terrace or Oak Grove Estates, neighborhoods north of the airport.

Airport officials have repeatedly assured residents that the land-use plan states that noise levels should not change in the future, no existing homes will be affected, commercial jet service to Greenville is highly unlikely and the plan is not aimed at blacks — the surrounding neighborhoods just happen to be predominantly black.

But most residents seem not to believe airport officials, and there have even been accusations that officials are knowingly handing out false information.

Probably the most heated discussion of the meetings has concerned

In The Area

Arrested

Michael Anthony Cappuccio, 36, of 2509 E. Fifth St., was arrested on auto larceny charges by Greenville police Thursday.

Sgt. T.V. Woolard said Cappuccio was charged in connection with a car theft incident reported to the department on Wednesday.

Two Arrested

Greenville police said two men were arrested on larceny charges in connection with separate incidents reported early this morning.

Officer J.W. Corbett said Michael Todd Meador, 21, of 1009 E. 10th St. was charged with larceny of city property in connection with the 1:34 a.m. theft of a seven-foot tall pear tree from Reade Street.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said Curtis Lamont Cash, 23, of 18 Hillcrest Mobile Home Park, was arrested on larceny charges in connection with the theft of lumber and mini-blinds from a University Apartments construction site on E. Fifth Street, near the 10th Street intersection, about 2:14 a.m.

Transformers Fail

Two transformers serving Kroger Sav-On Food and Drug on East Greenville Boulevard failed Thursday, closing the store for more than five hours, damaging equipment and spoiling some products.

The store was without power from shortly after 9 a.m. until 2:45 p.m.

"The power loss caused damage to some of our electrical equipment in an amount of about $2,000 as well as a loss of merchandise worth about $1,500 due to spoilage," said Marilyn Smith, Kroger's manager.

Ms. Smith said the store is considering seeking reimbursement from the Greenville Utilities Commission.

"We will certainly consider that action," she said.

Roger Jones, director of electrical systems for Greenville Utilities, said the first call came about 8:30 a.m.

"We sent people out to replace the

Entrepreneurs

Five eastern North Carolina leaders in business and banking will speak at the fall dinner meeting of the Entrepreneurial Council of Eastern North Carolina Sept. 20.

The program is scheduled from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Sheraton Inn, according to Dr. Louis H. Zincone of the East Carolina University School of Business faculty, council president.

Four of the speakers will chair simultaneous sessions on preparing a business plan and evaluating a business for investment. Session leaders are Bruce Wardrop of Greenville, president, Frank S. Love Inc.; Don Boldt, president, Wall-Lenk Inc., Kinston; Bill Zachman, a certified public accountant, and Michael Elliott, manager of the NCNB Venture Capital Fund.

L. Vincent Lowe Jr., president of Branch Banking and Trust Co., will speak on the North Carolina Rural Development Corp.

The Entrepreneurial Development Council was begun last year with assistance from the ECU School of Business. Its chief function is to plan dinner meetings featuring informative speakers and opportunities for "networking" between potential investors and owners of business enterprises seeking capital.

Prior registration is necessary to attend the dinner. If interested, send your name, address and check to Mike Ryan, treasurer, ECENC, Box 1767, Greenville, N.C. 27835. Cost for nonmembers is $35, and for members, $25.

transformer that had blown, and in efforts to re-energize it, the second transformer also failed," he said.

Jones said the exact cause of the failures had not been pinpointed, "but my guess is that during a recent storm, some damage was done to the transformers that did not show up until yesterday."

Land-Use Meeting

The Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority, the city of Greenville and Pitt County are hosting the last of three meetings on land use and development impacts of the growth of Pitt-Greenville Airport.

The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church. For more information, call 830-4434 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Absences Excused

With the opening of the public schools in Pitt County Monday comes a possible clash of classwork and farmwork.

Students in Pitt County will be allowed excused absences for farm-related work, Barry Gaskins, public information officer, said.

"The work must be documented by a signed note of explanation from the employer upon the student's entry or return to school," Gaskins said.

"Students who are going to be out have been advised to call the school to state that they intend to enroll but are involved in farm-related work," he said.

"Students shall be dealt with leniently in the makeup of any work missed."

At least two weeks will be allowed to make up work if five or more days are missed, Gaskins said. If students attend school on a day that work in fields cannot continue, due to rain or other conditions, they will enroll, receive books, pay fees, receive free lunch applications and obtain assignments from their teachers.

For more information, call Gaskins at 830-4258.

Courses Offered

Courses in music, language and photography appear on the fall schedule of adult, non-credit evening courses offered by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

Beginning Piano for Adults (Thursdays, Sept. 15 - Nov. 17); Piano II (Tuesdays, Sept. 13 - Nov. 22); and "Guitar Unlimited" (Tuesdays, Oct. 25 - Nov. 29) meet from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

"Conversational Japanese" is scheduled for Thursdays, Sept. 8 - Dec. 1 from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Two six-session sign language classes will be offered on Tuesday evenings. "Beginning Sign Language" will meet Sept. 6 - Oct. 11. "Sign Language II" is set for Oct. 25 - Nov. 29. All sessions are scheduled for 6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.

"Camera," scheduled for Tuesdays, Sept. 13 - Oct. 11, will meet from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Dean's Photography, 203 S. Evans St.

All other classes will be on campus.

Further information about these and other fall programs for personal development is available from "Non-Credit Programs," Division of Continuing Education, ECU, Greenville, N.C. 27858-4353 or telephone 757-6143.

'I Can' Workshop

Sycamore Hill Baptist Church is sponsoring a back-to-school workshop titled, "I Can," from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the church, 226 W. Eighth St.

A film titled "I Can" made by a Halifax County health educator will be a part of the program for kindergarten through high school students. For information, call 355-2374 or 757-1168.

Chairman Re-Elected

Howard Cummings was re-elected as chairman of the Greenville Board of Adjustment by board members at Thursday's monthly meeting at City Hall.

Re-elected as vice chairman of the board was Chris McCoy.

Trauma-Care Course

Fifty-two emergency care professionals from as far away as Wilkesboro and Hampton, Va., are participating in an 18-hour trauma-care course in Greenville today and Saturday.

The course being taught by trauma care specialists from North Carolina, Alabama and Virginia was developed in 1984 by Dr. John Campbell of the American College of Emergency Physicians. It is designed to train pre-hospital and hospital emergency-care personnel in a systematic approach to trauma care, Marty Edwards, course director said. He said the course includes lectures and practice assessing trauma patients. Advanced emergency equipment is on display during the course, he said.

Nursing Update

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Nursing continuing education program is offering "Nursing Update," a Board of Nursing approved refresher courses for registered nurses Sept. 12 through Dec. 9 and Jan. 16 to April 17. The course meets either four days a week, and includes both clinical and classroom instruction, or two days a week and includes only the classroom instructions.

Johnston Scholarship money is available for up to half the cost, and assistance is provided for finding short-term housing at reasonable cost. For more information call or write the Department of Continuing Education, UNC-CH School of Nursing, CB#7460, Carrington Hall, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27599-7460, (919) 966-3638.

Family Reunion

The Forlines Family Reunion is at 1 p.m. Sunday at the fellowship hall of Winterville Free Will Baptist Church on East Cooper and Glendale Streets in Winterville. Lee and Delia Forlines' descendants and their families should bring picnic lunch. Some family members will perform music.

Depression May Turn Into Storm

MIAMI (AP) — A westward-moving tropical depression reached Cuba today after dumping heavy rains over Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic. Forecasters said the foul-weather system, 500 miles southeast of Miami, could strengthen into a tropical storm.

The depression's loose center was near the eastern Cuban coast to the north of Guantanamo and packed top sustained winds of 35 mph with storm-force gusts, according to a 6 a.m. EDT advisory from the National Hurricane Center.

"The official forecast is for it to strengthen slowly to storm intensity by midday tomorrow (Saturday)," said forecaster Jim Lushine. "It's coming in our direction. Whether it will pass directly over, or pass through the Florida Straits, or east will be the critical element in determining what action we'll take."

If it attains tropical-storm strength, it will be called Chris.

A reconnaissance plane was checking out the depression early today, and that information will help forecasters decide if they should issue a tropical storm watch for South Florida, Lushine said.

The problem in forecasting where the depression will go, and how strong it will become, is that such systems become erratic when they hit land, as this one has. Depressions tend to weaken over land, and strengthen over open waters.

The depression, moving to the west-northwest at 12 mph, was expected to cause heavy rains over eastern Cuba and the southeastern Bahamas, and if it moved over South Florida, might dump 5 inches of rain, Lushine said.

ASU To Continue Chinese Exchange

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Despite the death last winter of a participant in Appalachian State University's exchange program in China, the program continues this fall, officials say.

T. Marvin Williamsen, ASU's coordinator of interdisciplinary studies, said university officials are convinced the exchange program is valuable, and they have taken measures to protect the group.

"We have given the faculty member new responsibility for overseeing student activity there," Williamsen said. "... We intend to be more cautious and take Chinese security measures more seriously."

Erin Elizabeth Johnston, 18, was found strangled and stabbed last January in a bedroom of her Chinese family's apartment near Northeast University of Technology in Shenyang, an industrial city. She had been sexually assaulted, authorities said.

Ms. Johnston's mother, Mary Jo Kindt, said exchange students bound for China should be just as cautious as if they were going to a big American city.

"For personal security, if they're living in a big city like Shenyang, it's the same as living in Chicago or New York, and they should not be led to believe that it's safe," Mrs. Kindt said.

Church Gets Permit For Day Care Center

The Greenville Board of Adjustment approved a request to operate a day-care center on Farmville Boulevard at its regular monthly meeting Thursday at City Hall.

The board granted a special-use permit to Phillip Church of Christ to operate a child day-care facility at 1610 Farmville Blvd. The property is zoned CH (highway commercial).

The board also granted a special-use permit to Joe Jolly in order to re-open a convenience store on the north side of N.C. 33, about .3 miles east of Academy Drive. The property is zoned RA-20 (residential/agricultural).

Also on Thursday, the board denied C.E. Carawan's appeal to overturn the building inspector's decision not to issue a permit allowing a building at 1009 Brownlea Dr. to become cabinet shop.

The building was used previously as an egg-packing plant. The property is zoned R-9 (residential medium-density).

The board also denied a variance to Harris Supermarket Inc. which would have allowed a vestibule within 6.1 feet of a street right-of-way at 2612 E. 10th St. The property is zoned CD (shopping center).

The board put off action on a request by Hostetter's Tennis Shop for a variance allowing a freestanding sign at 218-C Arlington Boulevard. The property is zoned CS (shopping center).

Decline In Personal Spending Tempers Worry Over Inflation

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

A rash of worrisome news on inflation and rising interest rates was tempered today by a Commerce Department report that showed Americans' personal income rose at a healthy pace last month but their rampant spending declined.

The report said personal incomes climbed 0.6 percent in July, matching a June increase. But personal consumption spending, which includes everything except interest payments on debt, rose 0.5 percent in July, less than half the 1.1 percent rise in June.

The slower consumer spending was seen as good news for the economy because of worries that demand for goods is overwhelming supply and pushing up prices, a classic inflation pattern.

Other economic reports released Thursday added to worries in the financial markets that inflation is rising.

The Commerce Department said the economy, overcoming a drag caused by the drought, grew at the surprisingly strong annual pace of 3.3 percent in the April-June quarter.

The department also said the growth in the gross national product, the total output of goods and services, would have soared to a 4.3 percent annual clip had it not been for a $9.5 billion loss in farm output in a drought-plagued year.

In another report, the department said after-tax profits by corporations surged 11.5 percent in the April-June quarter to an annual rate of $166.6 billion, the best showing since the same quarter of 1983.

But it was the 5.1 percent April-June inflation rate reported by the department, compared with just 1.7 percent in the prior three months, that incited new worries over possible hikes in interest rates by the Federal Reserve, which boosted rates earlier this month.

"The economy is growing much too fast," said Robert Dederick, chief economist of the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "It is nice to grow fast at the early stages of an expansion when you have an lot of unemployment, but at this stage we just can't afford it."

Aggravating the concern were moves by West Germany and other key European trading partners to hike interest rates in their countries, partly to combat what they called the unwelcome effects of a resurgent U.S. dollar.

"Today's step is an important signal which will be understood by the foreign-exchange and capital markets," proclaimed West German Bundesbank President Karl Otto Poehl. "It should lead to stabilization of the (currency) and capital markets and the first reactions should show this is the case."

In response, the dollar tumbled against the West German mark and British pound in heavy trading.

"Poehl used pretty strong language," said Derek Walker, an economist at Midland Bank PLC. "The Germans have shown us pretty clearly that they really haven't been happy with the mark at the level it's been."

The combined news of higher U.S. inflation, rising foreign interest rates and falling dollar rattled the stock and bond markets.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 15.82 points to 2,010.85. The Treasury's key 30-year bond fell $5 per $1,000 in face amount and its yield rose to 9.44 percent from 9.40 percent late Wednesday.

In another sign of the effects of rising interest rates, the National Association of Realtors said sales of existing single-family homes fell 5 percent in July, the first decline in six months, as rising mortgage interest rates dampened demand.

Plane Hits Shop Plaza, Kills Three

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (AP) — A small plane that crashed into a shopping center, killing three people and igniting a fire that destroyed four stores, had been unable to gain altitude after taking off, an investigator said.

"He didn't get very high, maybe 100 to 150 feet at the most," said Bruce Hill, an accident investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board.

The twin-engine Piper Aerostar broke through the roof of a print shop Thursday afternoon and sent workers and passers-by fleeing. One worker in the rear of the shop suffered severe burns and was in critical condition today.

Mall Day Saturday

The seventh annual United Way Mall Day is Saturday at Carolina East Mall.

More than 25 United Way agencies will have displays set up from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., providing information about programs and services.

The Pamlico Sound Chorus and Barbershop Quartet will perform at 11:30 a.m. and Literacy Volunteers of America are storytelling 12:30 p.m.

United Way Mall Day is the first official event of the 1988 campaign. This year's goal of $1.1 million will support the United Way's 35 agencies in 1989.

Record Enrollment

With a gain of more than 700 students, East Carolina University has a record enrollment of 15,583 on campus for the fall semester, university officials announced Thursday.

It is the first time that enrollment for any semester at ECU has exceeded 15,000. The previous record, for fall semester of last year, was 14,882.

Classes for the fall semester began Monday and late registration was completed Thursday, Registrar J. Gilbert Moore said.

Most of the increased enrollment is in undergraduates, with 578 more undergraduates than for the fall 1987 semester, Moore said. There was an increase in graduate students of 123 for a total of 2,594.

Moore counted 11,712 full-time undergraduates and 1,277 part-time undergraduates, with 853 full-time and 1,741 part-time graduate students.

The figures include 8,962 women and 6,621 men, Moore said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The End?

Election Decision Long Overdue

Hopefully the rubber ball election stopped bouncing today. Pitt County's interests will be well-served if the State Board of Elections authorized a new election to determine who will represent Consolidated District A on the County Commission. If the state board didn't settle the issue of the disputed May 31 runoff in its meeting today, the county was further backed into a corner by time and indecision.

And the Pitt Board of Elections didn't help resolve the issue by not clearly stating to the state board in a report what should be done. Why not make a recommendation? Why not let the state board know the best alternative for Pitt County is to order a new election? Why was the local board reluctant to take a firm position on the issue? After all, that's what its members are appointed to do.

The facts are clear. The local board determined 14 ineligible voters cast ballots in the runoff between D.D. Garrett and James Dupree. These significant flaws affect the integrity of that election and raise large doubts for voters about its outcome — doubts serious enough to merit a new election.

But instead of suggesting this action, the local board, for the second time, sent its findings on the issue to the state board without any recommended action.

It's past time for an end to the issue. The November election is only two months away. There's no opportunity left for buck-passing and foot-dragging. And there's scarcely time for candidates to campaign and voters to make judgments. A new election will let the voters decide, in a well-run, election, who will represent them.

In the absence of a clear position statement from the Pitt board, the state board should have acted in the best interest of the county's voters and firmly ordered another election. It did not hesitate to do so in disputed elections with similar circumstances in Surry and Hyde counties.

It's past time for this muddle to end, and for the voters of Pitt County to know just who their choices will be in November.

Cost & Benefit

Competitive Salaries For City EMTs

The City Council is facing the problem of how to retain fire-rescue personnel who have achieved higher levels of training for rescue operations.

The answer — as virtually always — is remuneration.

Representatives of the fire-rescue department discussed the situation with the council this week. It was pointed out that there is no incentive for advanced intermediate level (AI) trained people to remain here, even though there are 14 in the department at present.

Personnel are also trained as emergency medical technicians who can offer first aid and EMT intermediates who can draw blood. AIs can use medial defibrillators and give some drugs.

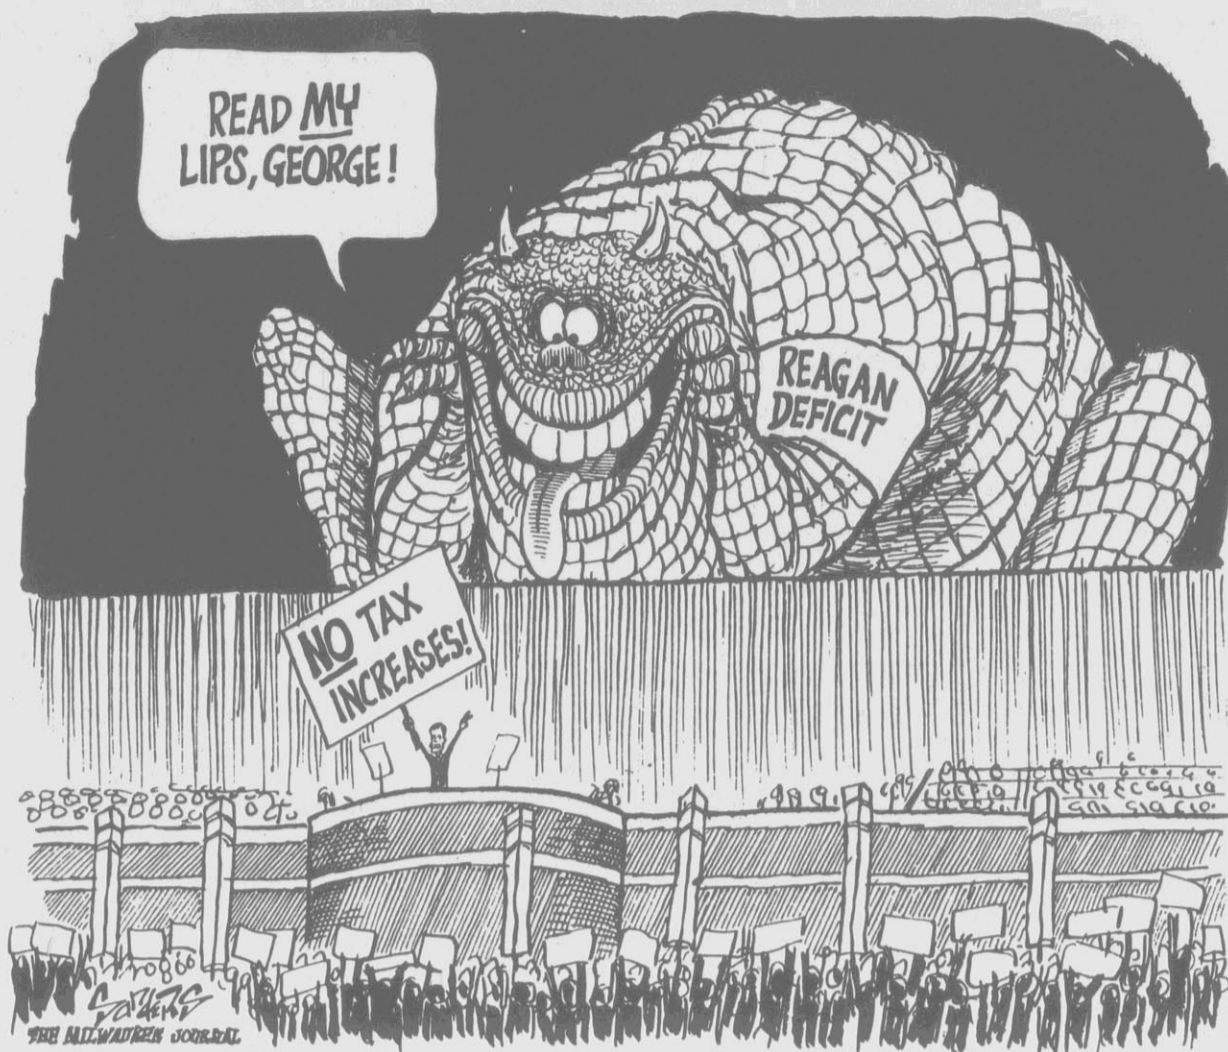

While the city has no paramedics, an East Carolina assistant professor of emergency medicine, Dr. Kathleen Cline, said the council should consider the possibility of developing a paramedic system. She said there are creative ways to provide such coverage "fairly economically."

It is foregone that as fire-rescue personnel increase their level of training better remuneration will have to follow. It is also certain that there is no incentive to obtain the additional training if it does not open the way to higher levels of pay.

The other side is that the additional training and pay will increase the department's budget and eventually reflect in local tax bills. Balance that against the sure knowledge that quick attention by trained emergency personnel can mean the difference between full recovery or disability for a heart attack or stroke victim. In a heart arrest case there could be brain damage before a patient is transported to the hospital if a defibrillator is not used by trained EMTs enroute.

Even though the cost of training and maintaining competent fire-rescue personnel may increase, the overall cost of health could be measurably reduced. What is truly important is that victims might receive the rapid treatment which will allow them to resume normal lives.

Cost has to be a factor and the city's goal should be to pay competitive salaries for EMTs as with any job classification. The situation deserves a careful look and the council has acted properly to name a sub-committee which will look for answers.

A Dutch Treat For Equal Rites

'Finally, lest we believe that the Equal Rites Award will be retired for lack of future entrants, a special Young Entrepreneurs in Sexism prize for the small folk in our smallest state.'

BOSTON — Each year, in order to honor my historic foremothers, I celebrate Aug. 26, anniversary of the passage of women's suffrage, by recognizing those people who have done their utmost in the past 12 months to slow progress.

This year, you might well wonder if there were any contestants. Since our one-woman jury last met, there have been all sorts of good signs. Women said no to miniskirts, Wayne Gretzky moved to be near his wife's work, presidential candidates spent their days in child-care centers, and Barbie turned 30.

Let me reassure you: The competition was as fierce as ever. So many candidates, so few prizes. Now, without further ado, I give you the annual Equal Rites Award winners. The envelopes please.

Let us begin at the top, or the second spot, with the Raging Hormonal Imbalance Award given to the man who has the most trouble with his male image. No one in America has worked as hard for this prize as George Bush, who has exhibited over the years incredible mood swings from macho to mouse and back again. Faster than a speeding testosterone tablet, he goes from kicking one fanny to patting another. We send George, loving grandpa and political pit bull, a new prescription to keep balanced until November.

As for Knight in Tarnished Armor Award, it goes for good cause to Bobby Knight, the Indiana basketball coach. When asked how he handles stress, the Hoosier replied, "I think if rape is inevitable, relax and enjoy." We resist the desire to slam dunk the coach or send him a net even lower than his consciousness.

The Citadel of Chauvinism Prize, which in previous years has gone to Iran and Mississippi, this year goes on a technicality to Arizona. It took schoolchildren to discover that the state constitution bans anyone from holding statewide elected office except "a male person." This was especially embarrassing since the governor is Rose Mofford. To Arizona, which is amending its ways, we send our constitutional condolences.

Meanwhile back in the media, The Ms-Guided Madison Avenue prize goes this year to the advertiser who best portrayed the new image for women in the safe sex era: The Tease. In the words of the Champion sportswear copywriter: "Yes" is easy. 'No' drives 'em crazy. 'Maybe' drives 'em...Maybe. Yeah." They get a citation from the Just Say Maybe committee.

The real surprise is the winner of The International Backlash Award. This year it is going to our friendly neighbors in Canada. In Toronto, a jury acquitted a man of murdering his mother-in-law on the grounds that he was sleepwalking when he drove 14 miles to her home, beat her with a tire iron and stabbed her to death. To Canada, we send a year's supply of NoDoz for every son-in-law.

The Dubious Equality Award is again sent to a woman who fought the hardest for the most questionable right: I give you Margo Adams. Margo accompanied married Red Sox slugger Wade Boggs on the road for 4 1/2 years. When it was over, she sued him for $6 million worth of time lost from work. To our gal Margo, we send the words of Annie from "Bull Durham" petit-pointed and suitable for framing: "Women do not get lured. They accept full responsibility for their actions."

The Bodily Fluids Award for flights of biological fancy must be sent winging to Pennsylvania State Rep. Stephen Freind. It was Freind who insisted that a woman can't become pregnant as a result of rape because the trauma causes a woman to release a "certain secretion" that can kill sperm. Science teachers: You have no Freind in Pennsylvania.

As for another man with biological interest, we award Hugh Hefner the Peter Pan Prize for the (play)boy who wouldn't grow up the longest. At age 62, he is finally "at a point in my life where I've sown my wild oats." We send a cozy rug and hearth for Hefner and the fiance too young to be his daughter: 25-year-old Kimberly Conrad.

Hugh also made the finals of our Ineligible Bosses Award, but that prize for equal-opportunity husbands ultimately went to Donald Trump. When Donald promoted wife Ivana to her job running the Plaza Hotel, he said she would be paid a dollar a year and "all the dresses she can buy." Do we know a little shoppe for Ivana.

As for the Ms-Anthropic Man of the Year, the winner is John Fedders, the former chief law-enforcement officer of the SEC. Fedders beat his wife Charlotte. Then when she wrote a book about being battered, he insisted on royalties. To Fedders we send a copy of "Shattered Dreams" inscribed: "To the man without whom this book would never have been written."

Finally, lest we believe that the Equal Rites Award will be retired for lack of future entrants, a special Young Entrepreneurs in Sexism prize for the small folk in our smallest state. One-quarter of the boys surveyed in Rhode Island's sixth to ninth grades said it's okay for a man to force sex on a woman if he's spent money courting her. To the future women of Rhode Island we send a Dutch Treat.

Reading Between Bush's Vietnam Lines

NEW YORK — Around the middle 1960s — I forget the exact date — someone I know visited the Canadian consulate here to inquire about fleeing to Canada to avoid service in Vietnam. The visit was tentative, exploratory and fell far short of making the decision to leave the country. The visit to the consulate was made on behalf of another person. That person was me.

In the end, I never had to face the dilemma of whether to leave my country or fight for it in a war that I abhorred. I was in the National Guard at the time and my unit was never activated and sent to Vietnam. Still, that was my fear — the fear of many of us — and that's why I had a friend visit the Canadians.

The controversy over Dan Quayle's service in the Guard has revived the issue of Vietnam — a beast that's been dormant for more than a decade. Once again, the nation is choosing sides, still arguing the merits of a war that, for young people, must seem to have ended eons ago — before VCRs, compact discs, personal computers and earrings worn by men. We argue the Vietnam War still and unfortunately, some people still argue it in the old way — with gross simplifications and demagogery. One of those is George Bush.

Take Bush's recent defense of Quayle's National Guard service. Quayle, he said, "did not go to Canada, did not burn his draft card and he damned sure did not burn the American flag." This is Bush's way of saying that no matter what Quayle did, he is better than those who fled the country, burned their draft cards or otherwise protested the war. He is wrong in that.

In recent years, the American public has tried to make amends to those men and women who served in Vietnam. They fought one of America's dirtier wars, but when they returned they were greeted with either hostility or indifference. Some on the left saw Vietnam vets as the witting or unwitting agents of what was then called American imperialism. Others just saw them as unfortunate figures. At any rate, Vietnam was a war we lost. There were no victory parades. Those are for winners.

The treatment of Vietnam vets was wrong. But it is equally wrong to denounce those who thought they were serving their country another way: by opposing the war. Of course, some men who ducked military service were mere cowards. But most were not. Some, in fact, had the courage to stand up for their beliefs and go to jail. Some risked police tear gas and nightsticks in anti-war protests. And one man whom I know resigned his commission in the Navy and sought conscientious-objector status because he concluded the Vietnam War was wrong. He was not avoiding combat. At the time, he was manning a desk right here in New York.

There is no recognition of moral courage in what George Bush said. There is not the slightest hint that he understands that some dissenters sacrificed much more by protesting the war than had they, as Quayle or I did, found safe haven in a National Guard or Army Reserve unit. There is no tip of the hat to those who wrestled with their conscience as Henry David Thoreau did at the time of the Mexican War: What is your obligation to your country? Does Americanism mean blind obedience to the government or fealty to a set of ethical and very American principles? These are tough questions — questions that I never had to answer. Others did, though, and they should be respected for it.

History may be kinder to those who protested the war than George Bush has been. We were told the loss of Vietnam would mean, in short order, the loss of the Philippines, Japan and, ultimately, Hawaii. Vietnam is lost. But not Japan and not the Philippines and not Hawaii.

Recently, Jane Fonda apologized for the way she conducted herself during the Vietnam War — for her notorious trip to Hanoi. She was right to do so. But where is the apology from Richard Nixon or Henry Kissinger for the lives wasted in a war that no longer could be won? Where is the acknowledgement by George Bush that those who dissented — who lost their careers, their loved one and sometimes their country — were also casualties of the war?

There is none. Bush fights the Vietnam War as if nothing has been learned. Maybe in his case, it hasn't.

Even Before The Olympics, South Korea Has Won Its Gold

Analysis

The Olympic pageantry about to unfold in Seoul will bring to South Korea, its citizens hope, the type of international attention and respect that the games brought to Japan in 1964.

Those who have not been to Seoul before will be impressed with the economic and social dynamism of that world-class city. And even if student radicals provoke clashes with the authorities, visitors will sense the genuinely democratic political process now strongly at work in that country.

Those who have not closely followed developments in Korea can be forgiven, however, for not recalling that both the games and the fundamental stability in the Republic of Korea were at risk as recently as 15 months ago. That this is now obscure to most Americans is testimony to the resilience of Koreans and their ability to create success out of near-disaster.

Many people suspected that President Chun Doo Hwan would seek to maintain power behind the scenes even as he fulfilled his pledge to step down this year after one term in office. And that seemed to be what he was doing when, in April 1987, he reversed an earlier decision to allow constitutional change and insisted instead on maintaining the indirect presidential election system that gave him and his ruling Democratic Justice Party the upper hand. Any change, he said, must wait until after the Olympics so as not to disturb the atmosphere for the games.

Plenty To Do

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Secretary of State George P. Shultz comes back from vacation after Labor Day, one of the first things he will have to do is set priorities from an immense list of foreign policy problems.

There simply is not enough time left for Shultz and others in the Reagan administration to take on all the woes of the world before ringing the curtain down in January.

But the long list is tempting because so many problems suddenly seem ripe for solution, and a nudge from the United States could make a difference.

In Africa, the United States is front and center, using its influence to seek solutions to the twin problems of Angola and Namibia.

It could be argued that only U.S. mediation could have moved the Cubans and South Africans to where they are now — holding talks in Brazzaville that might pay off in independence for Namibia and the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola.

The continuing unrest of the Israeli-held West Bank beckons for U.S. intercession. In Shultz's absence, the State Department gave the Palestinian Arabs a lift by hinting they may be entitled to a separate seat in peace talks and by admonishing Israel for ordering 25 more deportations from the troubled territory.

Shultz is likely to give the Mideast one more college try by scheduling a fifth visit to the region this year. There is little evidence, though, that prospects for success have improved.

Jordan's King Hussein has made official what seemed obvious to many for so long: He will not assume the responsibility for negotiating a solution to the Arab-Israeli dispute. Nor, with national elections looming in November, is Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir by any stretch of the imagination prepared to guarantee in advance of peace talks that Israel would withdraw from the West Bank.

Benny Begin, a rising star in Shamir's Likud party and son of former Prime Minister Menachem Begin, reminded reporters during a think-tank session this week on the Middle East that Sept. 30 will mark the 50th anniversary of Munich.

The Sudeten in 1938 was a strategic buffer between Germany and Czechoslovakia. But it was absorbed by Germany, setting the stage for the Nazis to attack Czechoslovakia, with the argument that the rights of 3 million Sudeten Germans were being violated.

Begin drew a parallel to the 1.5 million Palestinian Arabs whose demands also have attracted important international support. The fact that an Israeli politician finds Munich relevant to today's Middle East illustrates the determination of a sizable segment of the Israeli population not to give up the West Bank.

That resistance, of course, stands smack in the way of Shultz's plan for a settlement in which Israel would relinquish at least part of the territory.

So, when he is back in his comfortable office on the seventh floor of the State Department, tanned and rested after a golfing vacation, Shultz must decide how much energy to expend on the Middle East and, if he decides on a lot, what other world problems should be sidetracked.

Tugging at his sleeve, too, is the U.S.-Soviet relationship, and whether the improvement that resulted from four summit meetings between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev summit meetings could carry over into the negotiations to reduce strategic nuclear weapons.

There are a number of problems in verifying some of the more elusive variety of these destructive missiles, bombers and submarines that may defy solution. And yet many elements of a possible treaty are already in place. A big push by Shultz, who put the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty over the top through regular meetings with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, might just carry the day.

Barry Schweid covers foreign affairs for The Associated Press.

Chun evidently believed that the Korean people's strong desire for a successful Olympics would work in his favor, tempering their unhappiness with his decision. He miscalculated. Student protests in mid-June were supported by the broad masses of the Korean people, raising the prospect of continuing clashes over several months between rock-throwing students and tear gas-wielding police — or even armed forces.

The authorities could probably have maintained ultimate control. But social harmony in Korea would have been deeply affected and the negative images broadcast nightly to a world television audience would have threatened eventual cancellation of the games.

On June 29, 1987, Chun's hand-picked successor, Roh Tae Woo, transformed the South Korean political scene overnight. In a dramatic surprise announcement, Roh proposed a series of reforms, including acceptance of the demonstrators' key demand for direct presidential elections. In that effort the military, which has dominated Korean politics for almost three decades but has increasingly indicated a desire to retreat from that role unless confronted with a total breakdown of social order, gave him crucial support.

Roh won the presidential election in December with a plurality of under 37 percent. Still, that gave him a victory margin of more than 2 million votes over a divided opposition in what was considered by most Koreans to have been a basically fair, if imperfect, contest. Last May the Democratic Justice Party failed to win a majority of seats in the National Assembly. But that has not led to stalemate, as feared. Instead, Roh has seized this first-ever loss of parliamentary control by the ruling party to work with the opposition in a spirit of compromise absent from traditional Korean politics.

'And even if student radicals provoke clashes with the authorities, visitors will sense the genuinely democratic political process now strongly at work in that country.'

Moreover, Roh has deftly handled growing student demands for a more forthcoming approach to Korean reunification. On July 7 he announced a new policy designed to draw North Korea into the world, rather than trying to shut it out. That has not quelled student protests, and, in any case, the prospects for quick progress with the north are uncertain. But the major outside players — Washington, Tokyo, Beijing and Moscow — all agree that it is essential to entice Pyongyang to abandon its self-imposed isolation and military. And the opposition political parties and the South Korean people generally support Roh's approach and oppose the student demonstrators.

Despite these gains, the political road ahead in South Korea will not be smooth. The personal and political antagonisms built up over decades have not disappeared. Deep yearnings for reunification contend with a real threat from the north. Politically sensitive investigations — into alleged corruption of the Chun Doo Hwan regime, the Kwangju incident of May 1980, in which 200 or more people were killed by the armed forces, and charges of fraud in the recent elections — have been launched by the National Assembly.

Nonetheless, South Korean politicians understand that future success at the polls will be denied those who rely on the extremes of militarism or radicalism or even on narrow-minded partisan one-upmanship. Rather, victory will depend on the degree to which parties are seen to represent the people's aspirations for democracy and rapprochement with the north as well as their desire for stability, security and prosperity. Skillful handling of all those delicate questions by Seoul will be essential. But so will support and cooperation from Korea's friends.

For the United States, that means forthright but respectful handling of inevitable and growing trade frictions.

And it means sensitive and creative responses to emerging demands in the military area — for example, with respect to relocation of the U.S. military headquarters in a prime area of the rapidly expanding capital and turning over operational control of U.S. and Korean ground forces from an American to a Korean.

Moreover, despite North Korea's bombing of a South Korean airliner in late 1987, the United States should supplement Seoul's policy of drawing Pyongyang out. While it should not draw down its deterrent forces in South Korea anytime soon, Washington should scale back at least the largest of its military exercises to create a better atmosphere for north-south dialogue. It should restore permission for its diplomats to talk with North Koreans. It should allow North Korean visitors to the United States. And it should even permit non-strategic trade with Pyongyang.

Wishing Korea well is just not enough.

Candidates' Military Service Unlikely Issue In N.C. Races

RALEIGH (AP) — Questions over GOP vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle's military service have drawn attention to the service records of North Carolina politicians, but officials say military service is unlikely to be much of an issue in the fall elections.

In the governor's race, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan can boast Army service from 1955 to 1957 and a tour of duty in West Germany, while his opponent, GOP Gov. Jim Martin, did not serve in the military.

"There's only one veteran in the race for governor," said John Crumpler, Jordan's campaign manager. But even Crumpler said in an interview that he doubted it would be much of an issue in the fall election.

State Sen. Tony Rand, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, was not in the military, while his Republican opponent, Jim Gardner, served in the Army from 1953 to 1955, also with a tour in West Germany.

Many of the questions about Quayle have centered on whether he used his family's influence to join the National Guard and avoid active duty during the Vietnam War. That issue appeared unlikely to surface in any of the North Carolina races.

Martin graduated from high school in 1953, the Korean War era, and was too old for the selective service draft at the height of the Vietnam War. Rand graduated from high school in 1957, well after the Korean War had calmed down, and also was too old for the draft as the war in Vietnam heightened.

Jordan, 55, was a member of the Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps while a student at North Carolina State University. In 1954, he was the "Outstanding Ordinance ROTC" graduate. He was an Army officer from 1955 to 1957, and had a tour of duty in West Germany in 1955 and 1956. Following his active service, he was in the Army Reserves until 1962.

Gardner, 54, was in the Army for two years, 1953-1955, and had a tour of duty in West Germany.

People between the ages of about 36 and 50 would have been of draft age during 1964 to 1972 — the primary years of the war in Vietnam. About 8 percent of those eligible for the draft served in Vietnam. By comparison, 70 percent of the draft-age men served in World War II.

Here's the military service record of members of the U.S. House of Representatives and candidates for the office:

1st District — Neither Democratic incumbent Walter Jones, 75, nor Republican challenger Howard Moya, 46, were in the military. Moya had a family deferment.

2nd District — Democratic incumbent Tim Valentine, 62, was in the Army Air Corps during World War II. He is running for re-election unopposed.

3rd District — Rep. Martin Lancaster, a Democrat, is one of just 18 members of Congress who saw action in Vietnam. Lancaster, 45, was in the Navy from 1967 to 1970. Lancaster is unopposed for re-election.

4th District — Neither incumbent Democrat David Price, 48, nor Republican challenger Tom Fetzer, 33, were in the military. Price had student deferments. The district includes Randolph, Orange, Wake, Franklin and Chatham counties.

5th District — Rep. Steve Neal, 54, was not in the military. He was too young for service in Korea and too old when the Vietnam War escalated. Lyons Gray, 51, Neal's Republican opponent, was in the Coast Guard Reserve from 1964 to 1970. The district includes Forsyth, Rockingham and Stokes counties.

6th District — Rep. Howard Coble, 57, the Republican seeking re-election to his third term, has been in the U.S. Coast Guard Reserves since 1952. Tom Gilmore, his Democratic opponent, wasn't in the military. Gilmore, 51, was too young for service in Korea and too old for Vietnam. The 6th District includes Guilford, Alamance and Davidson counties.

7th District — Rep. Charles Rose, 49, the Democratic incumbent, was not in the military. George G. Thompson, his Republican opponent, could not be reached for comment.

8th District — Democratic incumbent Bill Hefner, 58, was not in the military. He was too young for service for World War II and too old for Korea. His Republican opponent, Ted Blanton, 38, had a student deferment while a college student, and his selective service lottery number was high enough that he did not get called.

9th District — Alex McMillan, 56, the Republican incumbent, was in the Army. His Democratic opponent, Mark Sholander, 34, was not in the military and was not of draft age between 1964 and 1972, the height of the Vietnam War.

10th District — Incumbent Republican Cass Ballanger, 62, was in the Navy. His Democratic opponent, Jack Rhyne, could not be reached for comment.

11th District — Jamie Clark, 71, the Democratic incumbent, was in the Navy during World War II. Charles Taylor, 47, Clarke's Republican challenger, could not be reached for comment.

Wake Forest Campus Set For Debate Next Month ... If Candidates Come

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The school cafeteria at Wake Forest is being transformed into a media center. One thousand telephone lines will be installed on campus next week. And 2,500 hotel rooms across Forsyth County are reserved.

Now if only Republican and Democratic presidential nominees George Bush and Michael Dukakis would show up for a planned debate, everything would be just fine.

"The train is on the track and heading down," Wake Forest President Thomas Hearn said. "It would be very difficult to be stopped."

From the steps of Wait Chapel, the planned site of the presidential debate, university representatives made an impassioned appeal Thursday for the candidates to officially commit to the debate students hope to hold next month.

The appeal came exactly one month before the planned Sept. 25 debate at Wake Forest. One day earlier, a spokesman for Republican nominee George Bush said it was unlikely Bush would meet Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis before Sept. 20 — seemingly eliminating the first round of planned debates.

That news sent tremors of apprehension through Wake Forest students and administrators who have worked diligently throughout the summer in preparation for one of the focal points of the fall campaign.

Mike Smith, Wake Forest student government president, urged Bush to commit to the Wake Forest debate and urged Dukakis to reaffirm his commitment to the debates sponsored by the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates, which selected Wake Forest.

"We are asking for voter awareness, a recognition up with the idea for the debate a year ago."

"Secondly, as thousands of students are returning to college campuses, it is an especially appropriate time to recognize this voting constituency and the vital role of education in American life and values," Smith said.

While Wake Forest President Thomas Hearn stressed, "We have no reason to believe our debate is in jeopardy," he acknowledged the debate commission requested he and student leaders appeal to the candidates on behalf of the university and citizens of North Carolina.

"We feel very confident that the Wake Forest site is doable and workable," debate commission spokesman Bob Neuman said from Washington.

"But we don't want to leave anything to chance," Neuman said. "The Wake site is unique because it was generated and is sponsored by the students, and we wanted to emphasize that particular angle."

Smith said he has sent letters to U.S. Sens. Jesse Helms and Terry Sanford to enlist their assistance in winning debate commitments. He said he has also sent a letter "to the office of the vice president to make our appeal as direct as possible."

When asked if the candidates might opt for a debate schedule planned by the League of Women Voters, which does not include Wake Forest, Hearn said such a scenario is unlikely.

"The two parties formed this commission so there would be complete bipartisan understanding of the significance, centrality and sponsorship of these debates," Hearn said of the Commission on Presidential Debates. "And it seems to me quite unimaginable that the two candidates would not keep the commitments of their parties."

In Washington, Neuman said the commission has received no official word from Bush concerning his debate plans. He said Bush's campaign chairman, James Baker, is to meet Tuesday with Dukakis' campaign chairman, Paul Brontas, presumably to negotiate when and where to debate.

Bush Visit

RALEIGH (AP) — State campaign officials for Vice President George Bush confirmed Thursday that the Republican presidential nominee would visit Rocky Mount next week.

The visit will be Bush's second to North Carolina this summer. He traveled to Charlotte in July for a rally on the final day of the Democratic National Convention.

Bush will arrive Monday night, spend the night in Rocky Mount and attend several campaign events Tuesday morning, according to Stephen Schwartz, director of Bush's state campaign.

On Tuesday, Bush will tour a Rocky Mount business.

Judge Raps Parole Process

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A convicted cocaine dealer was sentenced to 19 years in prison, but state prison authorities say he will be eligible for parole after serving less than two years behind bars.

Because of a clerical error, parole officials were considering releasing Robert Leroy Phelps on parole in October. But while that mistake has been cleared up, the judge who sentenced him says another 15 months or so in prison won't make much of a difference.

"Since when does 19 years equal two?" asked Judge Thomas S. Watts of Elizabeth City. "I am appalled they were considering paroling him in October, and I would still be appalled in December 1989, after he had served less than two years of a 19-year sentence."

"I think our entire sentencing scheme is a fraud upon the public," Watts said.

Phelps received a 10-year sentence after being convicted of two felony counts of selling cocaine. He received an additional nine-year sentence after being convicted of two more felony counts of selling cocaine and one felony count of conspiring to possess cocaine.

IN THE STATE

Fatal Wreck

BARNARDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two motorists were killed and three others injured — including the former principal of William W. Estes Elementary School — in a three-vehicle accident on N.C. 197 Thursday evening, authorities said.

Killed in the accident was Melba Estes, wife of the former principal. The identity of the other motorist who was killed — a 19-year-old man from Buncombe County — was not released pending notification of relatives, according to Trooper Gene Williamson of the state Highway Patrol.

Convicted

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill students were found guilty of second-degree trespassing Thursday in Orange County District Court.

Dale T. McKinley, 26, and William Graham Entwistle, 22, were found guilty of trespassing during an April protest of CIA recruitment at UNC-CH. Second-degree trespassing charges against two other UNC-CH students were dismissed.

On April 15, seven UNC-CH students were charged with trespassing when they refused to leave the school's Placement Services Office in Hanes Hall. They are all members of the UNC-CIA Action Committee.

In May, when the students originally were scheduled for trial, three of the students asked for and received deferred prosecutions. Under the agreement, Lisa M. House, 20, Jennifer Amy Thompson, 22, and Jerry C. Jones, 19, agreed to pay court costs and do 35 hours of community service. After the completion of the community service work, their records will be cleared.

Condemnation

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — Until construction money for the superconducting super collider is appropriated by the federal government, North Carolina should not condemn any private property for the project, officials said.

The N.C. Commission on the Superconducting Super Collider, set up in March by Gov. Jim Martin to represent the interests of citizens in Durham, Granville and Person counties, voted Wednesday night to recommend that the state not condemn private property until the construction money is appropriated.

Some property owners who could be relocated if the project does come

SBI Morale Running Low, Morgan Says

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Low salaries, no merit pay increases and slow promotions have lowered morale among State Bureau of Investigation agents, SBI Director Robert Morgan said.

Fifteen SBI agents have quit within the past year, including six or seven highly trained forensic laboratory experts, Morgan said.

SBI agents left for higher-paying jobs with the FBI, state highway patrol and the Internal Revenue Service or in corporations, he said.

"The morale is just terrible, and I've done all I can do without getting some help" through higher salaries from the General Assembly, Morgan said in an interview.

"All we do is train them" before many agents leave for better-paying jobs, he said.

"It's terribly expensive to train them," he said. "Some are forensic experts in the crime lab and it takes two years to get one trained before a judge will let them testify" as expert witnesses in court, he said.

The average starting salary for a new SBI agent is $20,000. The salary usually is increased to $23,000 at the end of an agent's first year. New FBI agents in training make about $25,000 annually.

Morgan has sent letters to members of the General Assembly asking for help in solving the SBI's pay and promotion problems.

"There are no merit pay raises. A man hired today makes just about the same as a man hired four years ago. They (SBI agents) just have to sit there until someone ahead of them dies or gets promoted," Morgan said.

The only pay raises normally received by SBI agents are across-the-board salary increases for all state employees approved by the state legislature.

FBI agents' pay is increased by a 25 percent automatic overtime allowance after they successfully complete a 13-week training program and are assigned to a field office, said Tom McPoyle, an FBI spokesman in Washington, D.C.

to North Carolina attended the meeting and expressed their appreciation for the recommendation.

Campaign

RALEIGH (AP) — The Michael Dukakis Campaign on Thursday added five members to its North Carolina executive committee who had been prominent in campaigns of other presidential hopefuls.

Those appointed were Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, previously with the Rev. Jesse Jackson's campaign organization; Jeannette Hyde, who was co-chairman of Albert Gore's North Carolina; the Rev. Joy Johnson, also with the Jackson campaign; Betty McCain, a prominent Gore supporter; and Vivian Powell, who served as North Carolina state director for the Richard Gephardt campaign.

Charged

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A Spring Lake man has been charged with first-degree murder in the Aug. 22 slaying of his wife, authorities said Thursday.

Paul Daly, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said Donald Maurice Onar, 21, was charged Wednesday in the death of Andrea Alisa Onar at Fort Bragg.

Three Tar Heel Candidates Rank Among Top 50 Spenders In Nation

RALEIGH (AP) — If the amount of money spent on election campaigns is any gauge, three congressional races in North Carolina are among the most hotly contested in the nation this year, according to a Federal Elections Commission report on campaign finances.

"Obviously, these districts are among the most marginal, not only in the South, but in the entire country," Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, said Thursday.

In the areas of spending money, raising money from individuals and raising money from political action committees, the challengers in the state's 4th, 5th and 6th congressional districts rank among the top 50 challengers in the nation.

The FEC report covers campaign financial activities for the past 18 months, beginning in January 1987 and ending June 30, 1988.

Democrat Tom Gilmore, seeking to unseat two-term incumbent Republican Howard Coble in the 6th District, ranks 10th across the nation in money raised — $321,547 — and fourth in donations from PACs — $146,379.

Gilmore is 21st among challengers in donations from individuals — $125,281; and eighth in spending among challengers — $284,917. Gilmore is 39th among challengers in cash on hand — $34,810. The district includes Guilford, Alamance and Davidson counties.

Republican Lyons Gray, seeking to unseat six-term Democratic incumbent Steve Neal in the 5th District, ranks 17th nationwide in money raised — $229,556 — and 49th in contributions from PACs — $13,996.

Gray is 11th in contributions from individuals — $178,062; and 12th in spending at $205,657. Gray is 48th in cash on hand — $29,256. He is 37th in debts owed — $30,454. The district includes Forsyth, Rockingham and six other counties in the northwest part of the state.

Republican Tom Fetzter, trying to unseat Democrat David Price in the 4th District after a single term in the House, ranks 12th in total money raised — $281,800 — and 39th in money raised from PACs — $19,250.

Fetzter ranks fourth in money raised from individuals — $258,550; and 10th in spending — $272,544. Fetzter is 25th in debts owed — $44,905. The district includes Randolph, Orange, Chatham, Franklin and Wake counties.

Nationwide — among incumbents and challengers alike — Price in the 4th District ranks 39th in total fund raising — $518,256. That puts him 28th among all incumbents.

In money raised from PACs, Price ranks 21st among all candidates — $270,314. He ranks 44th among incumbents in money raised from individuals — $237,720 — and 37th among incumbents in total spending — $333,757. He reported $193,705 on hand.

Neal ranks 36th among all candidates in contributions from PACs — $228,350. He raised a total of $384,197 for the period, with $119,764 from individuals, and he spent $188,313. He has $239,534 on hand.

Coble didn't rank in the top 50 in any of the areas reviewed. He raised $343,047 with $186,780 from individuals and $135,300 from PACs. He spent $223,588 and reported $137,984 on hand.

Republican incumbent Cass Ballenger in the 10th District, ranked 32nd among all candidates and 13th among incumbents, in debt owed — $84,000. Democratic incumbent Charles Rose, in the 7th District, ranked 21st among incumbents in debt owed — $50,000.

Democratic incumbent Bill Hefner in the 8th District, ranked 50th among incumbents in cash on hand — $363,921.

Giveaway Running Out Of Food

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal program that has given away tons of cheese, butter, dried milk and other surplus commodities to poor people since 1982 is running out of food.

But officials say the government's cupboard may be refilled with healthier foods, such as tuna and peanut butter.

The Emergency Hunger Prevention Act, which passed the U.S. House and Senate last week, is awaiting President Reagan's signature. If the bill becomes law, the U.S. Department of Agriculture would spend $120 million to buy high-protein foods to be distributed to about 15 million people across the country.

Whether those foods reach about 2 million needy North Carolinians will depend on whether officials in each of the state's 100 counties decide to stay in the food distribution program or close the pantry door.

Under the existing program, cheese, butter, dried milk, flour, corn meal, rice and honey have been given away, partly in an effort to reduce government surpluses created by price supports.

Recently, however, the surpluses of cheese, dried milk, rice and honey have dwindled, leaving only flour, corn meal and butter to be distributed. That change has prompted officials in most counties to consider getting out of the program. B.W. Ray of the N.C. Department of Agriculture told the Winston-Salem Journal.

Quayle Faces Questions Over Official Senate Resume

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer
Vice President George Bush promised new jobs for minorities and said he'd be a "good president for all Americans" during a swing through his adopted home state, but his running mate ran into fresh questions today with a report he fudged on his official resume.

Democrat Michael Dukakis kept up his code of silence on Dan Quayle questions but unloaded again on the Reagan administration, saying it has lost the war on drugs with Bush as the lieutenant.

Quayle was campaigning in the Midwest trying to answer questions on farm and trade issues when The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer reported that he exaggerated his job record in the Indiana Attorney General's office.

Quayle had just begun to shed some of the questioning about his military record and relations with a former lobbyist.

Quayle's Senate biography, which is being distributed as official background of the Republican vice presidential nominee, says: "He was chief investigator for the Consumer Protection Division of the Indiana Attorney General's Office from 1970-1971."

The Plain Dealer reported that the Consumer Protection Division didn't even exist in 1970 and that Quayle spent most of the period as a low-level clerk. It said he put in less than three months in the investigator's job, and had already moved on to another job when the division officially opened for business in September 1971.

The new disclosure came just a few hours after Bush had declared the controversy over his running mate to be a thing of the past.

Campaigning in Texas with a Mariachi band and wearing a guayabera, Bush promised in the sweltering late-summer heat of San Antonio "to help those minorities who haven't really had a shot at the starting line."

"The best way to do that in employment is to have urban and rural enterprise zones, a break in that tax structure that will encourage business to locate where those populations are."

Reagan tried to create such zones on a national level in the early part of his administration as a means to combat unemployment, but opponents said they failed to produce results when tried on a state level.

Bush also said he supports affirmative action programs "so minorities have a better shot at the American dream," pledged to fight gun control and help the faltering oil industry.

Dukakis, returning to Boston after a Midwest sojourn, escalated his attacks on Bush through his role in the Reagan administration.

"Why after seven years of task forces and policy boards and grandiose claims have cocaine imports tripled, drug-related deaths doubled, and heroin imports risen by 50 percent?" he asked at a rally in Cleveland.

He also said the administration's association with Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega while he was "actively involved in the drug business" was "criminal."

Dukakis later attended a fundraiser in Boston, where 150 gay rights advocates had protested a state policy they say virtually bans placement of foster children in gay and lesbian homes. Only a few protesters remained when he arrived.

"Dukakis vetoed this measure from the 1988 budget, but now that he has become the Democratic presidential candidate, he has once again chosen to pander to bigotry and prejudice," a flier said. Dukakis running mate Lloyd Bentsen ran into flak Thursday when the World War II veteran pilot told a veterans' group that Dukakis and the Democrats could be trusted with the nation's defense.

Bentsen, wearing a VFW cap, was warmly received at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Convention in Chicago. But in trying to make the case for Dukakis on defense, he was interrupted four times by boos or jeers — once when he mentioned former President Carter's name.

Bush, meanwhile, appeared to be softening his stance on the Strategic Defense Initiative. The New York Times quoted the Republican in its editions today as saying a decision on whether to deploy a full or partial Star Wars defense system must await more research into its capabilities and costs.

"What I want to do is to continue research at the levels of funding, essentially, that we have requested," said Bush, who earlier was promising deployment "as soon as feasible."

In Washington, the debate over campaign debates continued. Nancy M. Neuman, president of the League of Women Voters, said she was encouraged that aides to Bush and Dukakis would meet next week to begin negotiations on debates for the fall.

Democratic chairman Paul Kirk criticized Bush for indicating on Wednesday that he wanted to wait until at least Sept. 20 before meeting Dukakis in debate. "He's not going to be able to refuse to debate," Kirk said.

Republican chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said neither he nor anyone in the Bush campaign "agreed to a set number of debates on dates certain or at particular locations."

President Undergoes Checkups

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan is undergoing a battery of annual health checkups, but White House officials say they'll keep the results private.

Reagan, who is spending a week of his August vacation in Los Angeles with his wife, Nancy, had a checkup Thursday with his allergist, Dr. Ralph Bookman, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

The spokesman described the session as "his regular, annual allergy checkup," conducted in the privacy of the president's penthouse suite at the plush Century Plaza Hotel.

The president was to undergo eye, ear, nose and throat examinations before returning to his ranch near Santa Barbara on Saturday, the spokesman said.

Fitzwater said the president "takes weekly shots for desensitization to pollen. He has for years."

The spokesman said the White House, holding to past practice, would not release the results of the examinations.

Reagan spent two days this week trying to rev up his conservative California followers for Vice President George Bush.

He also has attended private dinners with longtime friends, but otherwise has remained secluded in his penthouse tower.

Mrs. Reagan, meanwhile, has been overseeing the refurbishment of the home in Bel-Air that the couple plans to inhabit after leaving the White House.

The $2.5 million ranch-style home is owned by Wall Management Services, a group of about 20 unidentified Reagan friends who bought it with the Reagans in mind, according to Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin.

The three-year lease gives the Reagans the option to renew the lease or purchase the property.

The estate includes 1.4 acres of grounds, a pool and a 35-year-old house with 7,192 square feet of living space.

Reagan is scheduled to attend two Republican fund-raisers Saturday on his way north to his 688-acre ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

Purse Snatcher

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A suspected purse snatcher, who apparently tried to elude Charlotte police by commandeering a truck at gunpoint, was killed Wednesday, authorities said.

During a struggle between the truck driver and the suspected robber, a Charlotte police officer shot three times at the suspect, killing him.

Police identified the dead man as Alphonzo Henry Mason Jr., 35. Charlotte police said they had arrested him 30 times, on charges ranging from armed robbery to carrying a concealed weapon.

Guard Issue Fades As Quayle Holds On

By LESLIE H. DREYFOUS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The controversy over whether Dan Quayle used family influence to secure a spot with the Vietnam-era National Guard dogged the Republican presidential ticket for a full week before finally fading in recent days.

Quayle said Thursday he had answered questions "for seven days now," and that the public was "getting a little bit sick" of the issue. He said it was time to focus on the differences between the two tickets.

The guard questions arose immediately after the 41-year-old Indiana senator was named to the Republican ticket by Bush. In his inaugural news conference, Quayle was asked about his decision in May 1969 to seek a guard position instead of accepting a draft or volunteering for military service in Vietnam.

Later, in the midst of a round of network television interviews, Quayle was asked whether his prominent family pulled strings to get him into the guard. He joined just six days before he became eligible for the draft at the height of the Vietnam War. His answers were not always consistent, but last Friday his spokesman acknowledged that phone calls may have been made on Quayle's behalf, and a former family employee acknowledged he had made one such call.

Thus began a controversy that occupied most of the vice presidential candidate's first week of candidacy.

Millions of young American men sought alternatives to Vietnam service in the late 1960s, but Quayle's effort raised eyebrows because of his pro-war stance then and his outspoken advocacy of a strong national defense now. Quayle's decision to join the guard in preference to service in Vietnam didn't sit well with everyone, even among the higher ranks of the GOP.

"I must tell you, in my generation you knew who was in the Guard and who was in uniform fighting for their country," said Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole in a Sunday television interview. "So they're very sensitive about it — they didn't have anybody they could call, they couldn't influence anyone, say, 'I asked my parents.' Well, my father wore overalls, who's he going to influence?"

Quayle has run into scattered hecklers chanting "Quayle's a chicken" and bearing signs reading "Sissy Rich Boy," "Dump Quayle" and "War Wimp."

National Guard officials have repeatedly denied Quayle received preferential treatment, insisting places were available in certain units, including Quayle's.

"We have found nothing anywhere in our files that would indicate any problem," said Capt. Cathi Kiger, a spokeswoman for the National Guard in Indianapolis.

A retired major general in the National Guard did acknowledge Tuesday he told subordinates to hold open a space for Quayle after retired Guard commander — and Pulliam employee — called to recommend Quayle.

Retired Maj. Gen. Alfred Ahner, who in 1969 was military support plans officer for the state of Indiana and later headed the state Guard, said he was contacted by retired Maj. Gen. Wendell Phillippi, then managing editor of Pulliam's Indianapolis News.

"Wendell Phillippi had called and said he had a good man, and said he thought he'd make a good Guardsman," Ahner said. "That's when I went over to personnel."

"They said they had a couple of spaces. I said hold one of them, there's a good guy coming over."

Kiger on Wednesday cited General Order 25, which authorized officials to fill the headquarters detachment's 138 allotted places as of April 1, 1969. Guard records show no more than 134 men were enlisted during April, May — the month Quayle joined — and June.

"We're not waving the flag here, but a lot of people are saying 'what's the big deal?'" Kiger said.

Ahner notwithstanding, Quayle dismissed the issue Monday when he spoke at a Veterans of Foreign Wars meeting in Chicago, saying he didn't need his family's help to join the Guard.

"My Indiana National Guard unit had openings before I applied, they had openings when I applied and they had openings after I applied. So there was absolutely no influence used," said the maternal grandfather of Eugene C. Pulliam, who published newspapers in Arizona and Indiana at the time Quayle enlisted.

Retired Col. Jerome Rafferty, who was director of personnel in 1969, said the then-22-year-old Quayle was a solid Guard candidate, but conceded the recommendations of high-ranking officers carried some weight.

"If ... any of the generals called me and said they knew a man who would make a good Guardsman, I'd prick my ears," he said, "because they only sent the highest quality young man. That's the way the system worked."

But Rafferty maintained that, despite a certain amount of networking among officers, the service was fundamentally egalitarian.

"We recruited on the basis of the needs of the service — not the individual," he said.

The experience of a college dropout sworn in within three days of Quayle seemed to confirm Rafferty's claims.

Retired Sgt. Stephen W. Morell was able to complete processing in three days while there was a 22-day span between Quayle's initial testing and his enlistment. Morell, now an unemployed truck driver, said he dropped out of college and walked in to a local recruitment office. He enlisted as a clerk-typist and served side-by-side with Quayle.

Jury Indicts N.Y. Suspect Over Threat

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A 38-year-old man has been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges that he threatened to have President Ronald Reagan and several other top federal officials killed.

Craig O. Copley, of Herrings, who has criminal charges involving violence on his police record dating back to the 1970s, is also accused of threatening three federal judges, a magistrate and a U.S. marshal in two letters.

The threat against Reagan, former Attorney General Edwin Meese III and FBI directors William Sessions and William Webster was made orally July 15 while he was being investigated for the letters, according to the indictment, which was handed up Wednesday.

The government takes all threats against officials seriously. "but when a person has a long history of violent offenses, we re-double our efforts," Assistant U.S. Attorney Craig Benedict said Thursday.

Copley sent the letters from a cell in the Jefferson County Jail, where he was serving time for a parole violation, said Benedict. The motive for the alleged threats was unclear, he said.

Benedict said Copley will be examined to determine if he is competent to defend himself against the threat charges.

If convicted on all three threats, Copley faces a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and a $3,000 fine.

Towns In Oregon, Montana Get Ready For Evacuations

By BART ZIEGLER
Associated Press Writer

Authorities ordered evacuation plans for several communities in Oregon and Montana as flames approached, while firefighters at Yellowstone National Park prepared for another blowup of a blaze threatening a hotel-campground complex.

Fire crews in Washington, Idaho, Utah and California also battled wildfires blackening thousands of acres Thursday.

In southern Oregon, a lightning-sparked fire shot flames 100 feet into the sky less than a mile from a subdivision north of Grants Pass, said Kathy Aplin of the Oregon Department of Forestry.

The blaze doubled in size Thursday to 1,250 acres, prompting state officials Thursday night to order evacuation plans for the subdivision of about 1,000 residents.

"There are ashes falling just like rain on our deck," said Helen McCall, who lives at the Grants Pass city limits, about two miles south of the fire.

In northeast Oregon, the growing Ward Canyon fire prompted officials to order evacuation plans for the tiny town of Troy, near the Washington line.

The blaze expanded to 5,000 acres Thursday, crossing the Grand Ronde River and burning 15 unoccupied structures, mostly hunting cabins, Aplin said.

Effie Rozier of the Red Cross said Troy is a "motel and a restaurant" with about 50 residents scattered nearby.

In both communities, either state fire officials or the county sheriff could order evacuations if conditions worsened.

Forest fires also were burning out of control just east of Grants Pass near the towns of Rogue River and Medford, in Crater Lake National Park and south of Pendleton in eastern Oregon.

Near Grants Pass, firefighters using bulldozers to clear a fire break early Thursday came upon the secluded home of Pam and Will Abbott, 200 yards from the flames.

"It was just like something out of science-fiction movie," Mrs. Abbott said. "At 3 a.m. the floodlights poured in from two giant bulldozers. We are scared out of our wits. We just took pictures of every room of our house and packed our clothes."

But the house was saved, Aplin said.

Residents of Maxville, Mont., a town of two dozen homes about 90 miles southwest of Helena, were told to prepare for possible evacuation as fire engulfed more than 5,000 acres of heavy timber and forced closure of the main road through the area, U.S. Forest Service officials said.

Firefighters battling another 30,000-acre fire in south-central Montana were trying to prevent flames from moving closer to Cooke City and Silver Gate, two Montana communities near Yellowstone.

In central Montana, a fifth 1,300-acre fire that edged to within a half mile of a Minuteman II missile silo Wednesday continued to burn out of control.

The Air Force on Thursday withdrew crews and equipment it had sent as a precaution. Capt. Donald Planalp of Malmstrom Air Force Base in Great Falls said there never was any danger to the underground silo.

Firefighters in Montana also battled two other blazes that covered 30,000 and 37,600 acres apiece.

In northwest Wyoming, the weather forecast called for more brisk winds today as Yellowstone officials prepared for another afternoon blowup of a 108,000-acre fire.

The blaze moved to within a quarter-mile of the Canyon hotel and campground complex Thursday, but firefighters turned the flames away using backfires, or fires intentionally set to burn up fuel.

Park spokeswoman Amy Vanderbilt said the threat to the 600 cabins and other buildings in the area abated before sunset.

The blaze is one of 10 burning in the nation's oldest national park. Firefighters in the Bridger-Teton and Grand Teton national forests to the south were trying to direct another 19,000-acre fire toward Yellowstone's southern border.

In eastern Utah, officials hoped to contain a wind-whipped, 200-acre fire that briefly threatened a cluster of summer homes in Ashley National Forest. Near Idaho's Hell's Canyon, an elite fire crew grappled with a spot fire in a huge stand of timber. The blaze, part of a 2,540-acre fire on the Idaho-Oregon line, burned in such steep terrain that only a helicopter dumping water from a bucket was used.

In Washington, firefighters battled two fires covering more than 750 acres southwest of Mount Rainier National Park, and a 200-acre lightning-sparked fire threatened about 15 homes near the Oregon line.

Armed rangers and sheriff's deputies in Northern California barricaded some 460 square miles, or about 40 percent, of Stanislaus National Forest because of the fire hazard in the tinder-dry woods.

North of San Francisco in Cloverdale, Calif., firefighters frustrated by wind and steep terrain expected to battle a 1,500-acre fire most of today before stopping its spread.

Morton Thiokol Says Shuttle Seals Worked In Test Firing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Seals in a revamped version of the shuttle booster joint blamed for Challenger's destruction worked in a test firing despite intentional flaws, helping Discovery pass its "most significant milestone," the rocket's manufacturer says.

An analysis of the Aug. 18 test at Morton Thiokol Inc.'s northern Utah plant found that the aft seal, though the worst flawed deliberately, succeeded in preventing superhot gases from escaping, the company said Thursday.

The success of the test, the fifth and final qualifying firing of the new 126-foot solid-fuel booster, was vital to NASA's plans to resume shuttle missions grounded since the Challenger disaster on Jan. 28, 1986.

"This may be the most critical milestone as far as getting us back into space," said Morton Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab. "It's certainly the most significant milestone we've had to pass in the solid rocket motor design."

If the positive evaluation of the test holds, NASA officials have said they expect to set a firm date late next month or in early October for Discovery's mission, the first shuttle flight since the Challenger accident.

Engineers who took apart the booster's aft segment "looked at the intentional flaws and were very pleased to see that hot gases had not blown by the primary O-ring, that it had sealed properly," said Ed Snow, another company spokesman.

A presidential commission blamed a faulty aft joint on one of Challenger's two boosters for the spacecraft's explosion shortly after liftoff. A plume of superhot gas burned through a rubber-like O-ring in the joint and caused Challenger's outside fuel tank to explode, killing all seven astronauts.

The redesigned joint incorporates a so-called "capture feature" designed to seal the rocket during liftoff, preventing hot gases from escaping.

Snow said Morton Thiokol and National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers will continue tearing down the four-segment rocket over the next week and a half.

Applications For Medical School Fall For Sixth Year

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The number of applicants to medical schools is at a 10-year low, partly because "Baby Boomers" are passing college age and partly because the medical profession has lost some of its glow, officials say.

Medical school applicants numbered 10 percent fewer for the 1987-88 academic year than in 1986-87, and more than 30 percent fewer than a decade before, according to a report in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Physicians are generally advising potential medical school applicants not to go to medical school," said Dr. Marten Kernis, vice dean of the University of Illinois College of Medicine, the nation's largest medical school with 1,300 students.

"Physicians are working right now in a changing environment with all sorts of federal regulations being imposed, changing reimbursement policies, huge increases in medical malpractice liability premiums, large increases in lawsuits, changes in the tax structure, et cetera," he said Thursday.

"Many physicians are arguing that these characteristics are mitigating against the practice of medicine."

The journal also noted that eight of 10 medical students are in debt when they graduate, and their average debt load is larger than it has ever been — $35,621 in 1987.

The greatest increases in medical school enrollment are among women and minorities, the journal said.

John Sherman, executive vice president of the Association of American Medical Colleges, agreed that medicine has lost some of its luster.

"We know for certain that young people these days who otherwise would be interested and qualified are being turned away from medicine by their perception of what's involved — both medical education and practice," he said in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C.

The University of Illinois last week decided to cut 1989 enrollment by 10 percent, in keeping with reduced federal support the past several years because of a projected doctor glut.

Other schools are following a similar course, said Kernis, who noted that colleges and medical schools are seeing the end of the "Baby Boom" generation.

In addition, potential applicants may be discouraged by the increasing cost of medical education, the perception that medicine is more technological and less humane than it once was and the long period of training involved, he said.

The AMA reported that a total of 65,742 students were enrolled in the nation's 127 accredited medical schools for 1987-88, a decline of 400 students from the previous year and 1,701 fewer than in 1983-84.

The number of applicants was down for the third straight year, to 28,123, and reflects a general decline over the past 10 years. In 1977-78, for example, medical school applicants numbered 40,569, the AMA said.

In the past five years, the number of first-year white male students has decreased by 13.2 percent, to 8,216, while the number of black male students has decreased by 6.8 percent, to 572, the journal said.

But in the same period, the number of first-year white female students increased by less than one-tenth of 1 percent, to 4,363, while the number of black female students increased 31.7 percent, to 682, it said.

Women accounted for 37 percent of 1987-88 medical school applicants and 36.5 percent of entering classes, the journal said.

The number of Asians or Pacific Islanders entering U.S. medical schools has more than doubled, with the percentage of first-year male students increasing by 106.5 percent, to 1,179, and that of female students by 128.4 percent, to 676, the journal said.

"I think that's a social phenomenon," Kernis said. "We've had a lot of immigration among Pacific Islanders and Vietnamese and Cambodians."

Foreman Dies At 86

HOUSTON (AP) — Famed trial attorney Percy Eugene Foreman, best known for bartering a guilty plea for the life of the man who killed Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., has died at age 86.

Foreman, often hailed as the king of Texas' criminal defense lawyers, died minutes after suffering cardiac arrest Thursday at Methodist Hospital.

Mike DeGeurin, Foreman's law partner, said Foreman was admitted to the hospital July 15. He was being released last week when he suffered a heart attack.

"He worked up until the day he went into the hospital," said DeGeurin, who worked with Foreman for 14 years. "He actually conducted business in the intensive care unit. He was shoeing doctors away."

Foreman was known for his courtroom theatrics, issue-clouding rhetoric, spotlight shifting and verbal attacks on prosecution witnesses that kept law students and spectators spellbound.

"In a murder case, you should never allow the defendant to be tried," he once explained. "Try someone else — the husband, the lover, the police, or if the case has social implications, society generally. But never the defendant."

Foreman, however, persuaded James Earl Ray to plead guilty to the 1968 slaying of King, the Nobel Prize-winning civil rights activist, in exchange for a 99-year sentence. Ray charged later that Foreman pressured him into the plea by saying the odds were "99 percent" certain he would go to the electric chair if he faced a jury.

Supreme Court Taking More Tolerant Tack On Religion

NEW YORK (AP) — Seasoned by some new, more conservative members, the U.S. Supreme Court seems to be occasionally taking a more tolerant tack about religion's place in public affairs.

This was indicated in several of the court's rulings in its 1987-88 term, notably in upholding inclusion of religious organizations in a federal program to fight teen-age pregnancy and abortion.

In a time of soaring church-state litigation, the case was among a dozen of this kind handled in the high court's latest term.

The Family Life Act of 1981, which critics derisively call the "chastity law," had been challenged as unconstitutional advancing religion by funding religious as well as secular groups to foster sexual discipline among youths.

There are nearly a million teen-age pregnancies annually in the United States, with about half of them aborted.

Under the law, about a fourth of the $10 million spent annually under the act has gone to religious groups.

However, in a 5-4 decision on the final day of the court's term June 30, it upheld the law, saying Congress may recognize "the important part that ... religious organizations play in resolving certain secular problems."

Such organizations aren't barred "from participating in publicly sponsored social welfare programs," wrote Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, adding that any boost to religion was "at most incidental."

Justice Harry A. Blackmun dissented, saying "government funds are paying for religious organization to teach and counsel impressionable adolescents on a highly sensitive subject of considerable religious significance."

Lifestyle

County Provides Leisure Living

By MIKE HENDRICKS
Associated Press Writer
INDIAN LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Cross over the Hamilton County line and you leave behind the America of shopping centers, franchised fast food and traffic jams.

One of the most sparsely populated regions in the continental United States, Hamilton County is a place where the local general store is still the place to buy what you need, a telephone call still costs a dime, and sons follow in their father's footsteps.

There is not a single McDonald's or shopping mall, and only one crossroads in the entire 1,806 square miles of Hamilton County, a remote expanse larger than the state of Rhode Island that is punctuated by a hundred glacial lakes, Adirondack Mountains and clean, fast-moving streams.

Although in the same state as Manhattan's skyscrapers, the 5,034 people around here have more in common with the folks in stretches of Nevada and New Mexico.

Hamilton County's isolation is protected by the Adirondack forest preserve that completely covers the territory.

Larger than Yellowstone, Yosemite, Grand Canyon, Glacier and Olympic national parks combined, the Adirondacks are being kept "forever wild" by mandate of the New York state constitution.

Manhattan, just a four-hour drive to the south, is the nation's most densely populated county, with 64,395 people per square mile. Hamilton, with less than three people per square mile, is the least densely populated county east of the Mississippi River, according to census records.

The closest thing to a city is where 1,410 people live around the junction of routes 28 and 30 to form a hamlet called Indian Lake. Metropolitan Indian Lake includes a small car lot, a tiny bank branch office, a supermarket, general store, bar, liquor store, bakery and several rafting companies.

"Some people who come up here get frustrated because the pace is slower," says Sheriff Doug Parker. "If you want a carpenter you might get him to come over in the next six weeks or six months. The attitude around here is that if not today, there's always tomorrow."

This summer, Hamilton County residents are getting a brief taste of big city hassles as bridges over Big Brook and Cedar River are strengthened. Until the bridge work is completed, temporary stop lights restrict traffic to one lane over each bridge. More often than not, motorists sit patiently through a red light without another car passing by. By the end of summer, the signals will be down and people can drive throughout the entire county without the inconvenience of a traffic light.

The only place where two roads even cross in the whole county is some 30 miles to the south of Indian Lake in Speculator, a village of 408 people.

There are no hospitals, no doctors, no colleges and no factories. There are only two relatively small supermarkets, and two main roads in the whole county.

"We don't have many of anything in this county," says Ernest Lorenzen, who doubles as the county official responsible for promoting tourism and economic development and holds court as a town justice.

They don't have many crimes, either. It has been more than four years since the last murder.

But even though Hamilton County is sparsely populated, it is no haven for fugitives. "If you come up here to hide, you stand out," says the sheriff. "There are not enough people up here to hide among."

Bill Abrams, the Piseco Lake fire chief, recalls a stretch of nearly three years without having to fight a fire. During an average year, the Piseco Fire Department may be called out three or four times, Abrams says.

But Hamilton County also has the least commercial development of any county in New York state. Consequently, jobs are hard to find.

The fast-moving rivers, clear lakes, dense pine forests and Adirondack Mountains, along with the lake trout, northern pike, bass, black bear and white-tailed deer all attract tourists, providing the locals with much of their economy. Nearly 55,000 city dwellers keep summer homes along the shores of the nearly 100 lakes in the area.

But in the off-season, Hamilton County reports some of the highest unemployment rates in the nation.

"We have a terrible depression every year," Lorenzen says.

In January, Hamilton's unemployment rate hit 15.8 percent, more than double the national rate, while just 80 miles to the southeast Albany had a 4.4 jobless rate.

"The spring is the slowest time for us," says Neil McGovern, who operates an inn in Speculator. "Between the bugs and the mud we have a lot of trouble convincing anyone to come up here in the spring, partly because we don't believe it ourselves."

Summer eases the job pinch. By the Fourth of July, Hamilton County has virtually full employment.

When the tourists are not around, everything stops. The two modest movie theaters shut down. Restaurants and hotels close. And highway workers stop maintaining the back roads where no one lives.

To lure winter visitors to the area, which usually gets about 150 inches of snow, the local people created 750 miles of trails for snowmobiles.

"The snowmobiler is the largest contributor to our wintertime economy. Usually they come in at least overnight and often stay a Friday and Saturday night while the skiers and ice fishermen are day-trippers," Lorenzen says.

A furniture maker employs about 20 people in Indian Lake, a lumbering operation over in Long Lake keeps about 30 people working and the county has a work force of about 40 people.

The lack of economic opportunity forces the children to leave home when they grow up.

"They can make a living here, but if they want a career, to be a doctor or a lawyer, they have to move away," says Loretta Bancroft, who has had five of her children leave the county when they grew up.

About the only way young people can afford to stay in Hamilton County is to follow their father's footsteps. Sheriff Parker followed his father into law enforcement, and he can rattle off several examples of sons who took their father's place at garages, contracting and other jobs around the county.

While the forces of nature provide local residents with what economic base they have, it also works to isolate them. Officials have been forced to shut down one-third of the runway at the county's only airport because the tops of pine trees in the dense forest are intruding into the flight path. State officials have said it would take an amendment to the state Constitution to cut the trees to allow full use of the runway.

There has been talk of town house and condominium developments going up in Speculator and Inlet. Those proposals can generate heated arguments between people who resent the zoning restrictions for holding back the local economy and folks who worry about preserving the wilderness.

Neil McGovern, who moved his family to Speculator nine years ago from Long Island, says he's not worried about development turning Speculator into the kind of suburban sprawl common to so many other communities.

"I moved here from Long Island so I would not have to hear somebody else's john flush," says McGovern. "We are so far away from any saturation point."

Some conveniences taken for granted in most places are not to be had in Hamilton County.

"We have to go out of town for our haircuts," McGovern says. "There are no bagels, and it took my wife and mother-in-law some time to get used to the 120-mile round-trip to the mall."

Lorenzen says "it's a myth" that living in Hamilton County is inexpensive. "We have to truck everything in here. Food is higher. Gas is higher. People try to do their shopping outside."

"You do try to fix the little things when you can, rather than call a serviceman," says Bill Abrams, who still drives the Chevy pickup truck his father bought new 21 years ago.

There are only 892 more people living in the entire county now than there were in 1925, and the population is not expected to reach 6,000 for the next two decades.

Lorenzen, who moved to the shore of Piseco Lake 19 years ago, says, "Actually it's a very fine bit of Americana that is slipping away. A lot of business is carried on just a handshake and trust. We don't have to lock our cars. It's an unusual bit of Americana."

For Fall Jewel Colors Will Dominate Makeup

By JOY L. HAENLEIN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Beauty takes its cue from fashion this fall, with eyeshadows and lipsticks in rich jewel shades to complement the season's gem-toned clothing and jewelry.

For the eyes, the palette is dominated by deep emerald, royal blues and every shade of purple — from crimson to violet to Bordeaux. Lips are washed in ruby red or topaz, and are set against lightly blushed skin with a matte, but healthy, glow, said Glenn Roberts, creative beauty director for Elizabeth Arden.

"However, the most wonderful thing this fall is that there's not just one color that is important," he said. "There are neutral, soft shades as well as really rich shades that are dramatic. There's a wonderful choice this season because there's not one way to look." While regal purple eyeshadows will be popular, Roberts said that more of a subtle approach can be just as appealing.

The eyelid can be shadowed with a muted pink or gray, for example, then lined with a peacock blue pencil for a bold streak of color. At night, bright liquid eyeliners and mascaras add drama, he said.

"Jewel-toned eyeshadows can also be layered over neutral shades, or applied in the corners of the eye only," Roberts said.

The layered eyeshadow look also dominates the fall face at Estee Lauder, said Nancy Swenson, Lauder's executive director for training. But while other companies see different colors brushed over each other, Lauder believes that a monotone approach of applying varying shades of the same color is the biggest news this season, Swenson said.

"With this 'monotone' look, you should always use the lighter shade in areas you want to appear larger, such as under the brow area," she said. "The medium tone is used on the eyelid, with the deepest shade in the crease of the eye to set the eyes back."

Here, too, jeweled emeralds, wines and purples are the major eye colors for fall, she said. Brown is also strong, with a package of brandy, cinnamon, tea and nutmeg eyeshadows expected to be very popular, Swenson said.

Vibrant, regal lip colors also play a key role in creating the look. But here, too, options abound, Roberts said.

"The mouth can be as soft as a neutral gloss, to a rich ruby, a red, topaz, or a soft brown color," he said, "and it is defined and shaped with a pencil liner."

Cheeks are played up slightly this season. Where pale skin was the rule for spring and summer, blush gives cheeks a healthy, well-blended look for fall, Roberts said. As a finishing touch, loose powder remains essential for a matte look.

"The fall cheek colors are cleaner and more intense than those of past seasons, but they should also be applied sparingly," he said. "The look to avoid is anything like blush stripes along the skin, or an overdone cheek."

"The colors are rich, but they're not heavy-handed," Swenson agreed. "The face isn't pale anymore, but it is natural and healthy-looking."

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

FALL FEATURE — Prints on faux suede make seasonal fashion news in an interesting mix of textures as seen in this jacket and skirt set.

For a different sandwich spread, mix 1 cup chunky peanut butter, 1 cup chopped raisins and 1/2 cup shredded carrots.

Sleepwalker's Dream Is Nightmare

DEAR ABBY: I've been in the U.S. Navy for 13 years. Last year I was a Navy recruiter. My brother's son was considering joining the Navy when he graduated from high school last year. It is a well-known fact in our family that this nephew is a sleepwalker, so I told my brother and his wife that their son was not enlistment-eligible. His mom asked me to "overlook" the fact that her son was a sleepwalker, and I told her there was no way I would jeopardize my Navy career and her son's life by overlooking something like that.

My sleepwalking nephew were to join the Navy without acknowledging that he was a sleepwalker, he could very well sleepwalk right over the side of his ship at sea, or if he were assigned to an aircraft carrier, he could walk into a piece of machinery and get killed.

Furthermore, if it became known that his recruiter knew of his condition and suppressed it, the recruiter could be court-martialed.

My nephew was all for keeping his sleepwalking a secret, but I would have no part of it, so he's not in the Navy. My conscience is clear and I know I did the right thing, but my family has been very cool to me and my wife, and we feel terrible about this.

Dear Abby

Now I hear that this sleepwalking nephew wants to enlist in the Air Force. Is there anything I should do? — TRUE TO THE NAVY

DEAR TRUE: If your nephew is man enough to defend his country, he should be man enough to speak for himself. Talk with him, man-to-man, and impress upon him the importance of being 100 percent truthful about his sleepwalking. Tell him that if he either lies or knowingly withholds this information on his application or during his physical, he could be liable for a stiff fine and possibly a prison term.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you for advice at my age, but I've read your column for years, and have never seen a problem like mine. I need an answer.

What do you tell a bride who calls you after the wedding to tell you that she didn't like the wedding gift you gave her, and she'd like to have the sales slip so she can return it for something else?

Mind you, Abby, the gift was not a duplicate; she just didn't like it.

I have the sales slip, but I don't want to give it to her. I think such rudeness deserves to be ignored.

How should I handle this? — DISGUSTED SENIOR CITIZEN

DEAR DISGUSTED: Tell her the gift is hers to do with what she chooses, but you wouldn't feel comfortable giving her the sales slip, and let it go at that.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DISGRACED IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.: You cannot be disgraced by anyone but yourself, so hold your head high. Your son disgraced only himself.

The facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy are all in Abby's new, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 67.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. 58 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 68.30 cents. The market is higher and the live supply is adequate for a mostly good demand. Average weights light to desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,174,000, compared to 2,066,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply moderate for a good demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 22 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 3-5 cents lower at mostly 2.77-2.94 in East and mostly 3.00-3.11 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2 cents higher at mostly 8.27-8.42 in East and mostly 7.85-8.07 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.38-3.61; new crop corn 2.55-3.00; new crop soybeans 7.77-8.32. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 97 to 100 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was narrowly mixed today, following a broad retreat in the previous session.

The level of trading was very slow. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which marked the first anniversary of its peak of by falling 15.82 on Thursday, was up 3.91 at 2,014.76 after 30 minutes of trading today.

But declining issues took a narrow lead over gainers among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange, with 359 up, 453 down and 495 unchanged.

Spy

 lieved to have stolen documents concerning NATO defense plans for Europe and U.S. Army contingency plans for a ground war with the Soviet Union in Europe.

Alexander Prechtel, a spokesman for the federal prosecutor's office, said Thursday that it's too early to determine what damage the spying caused the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"We can't exclude the possibility that millions of dollars are involved," he said.

"It could take months before we know the full extent of the damage to NATO defenses," he added. He refused to release any further details about the probe.

In Goteborg, Sweden, a district court today arraigned two Hungarian-born brothers, who Prechtel said were part of the ring. Chief Prosecutor Sven-Olof Hakansson said the men, arrested Tuesday, acknowledged working for the Hungarian intelligence service.

Security officials said Sandor Kercsik, 48, and Imre Kercsik, 34, were suspected of "preparing unlawful intelligence activity and supporting preparations of criminal acts."

A third suspect, the wife of one of the brothers, was detained for questioning and released. Her arraignment was not immediately sought.

A U.S. Justice Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, called the spy case "a serious encroachment on our national security."

Army records released in Washington said Conrad, of Sebring, Ohio, was born in 1947 and worked for the U.S. military for 20 years, first as an infantryman and then as an "administration specialist."

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

HITTING THE TARGET!

When selling their home, many owners use a method called the "Three P's of Marketing" - Put a sign in the yard, Put an ad in the newspaper and ... PRAY!

Doesn't sound very productive, does it? Today, through the many advancements of the real estate industry, we offer a viable alternative called "target marketing." And, just as its name implies, this method isolates specific target groups of buyers resulting in more effective advertising and promotion of the home.

With the aid of in-house computers, extensive records are kept on the various types of buyers attracted to particular homes. A few examples might be:

- 1) families with children, 2) double-income career couples, 3) singles, 4) retirees, 5) military, 6) first-time buyers or 7) "empty nesters" (couples with grown children not living at home).

By understanding their buying preferences, it is possible to create advertising and direct mail which is especially appealing to the targeted group. For example, if you are selling a low-maintenance townhome or condo we might target the "empty nester" or career couple who have interest outside the home, and who want to avoid mowing a large lawn or doing periodic exterior maintenance.

Target marketing is just one of many valuable tools available to help sell your home successfully!

Thousands To Gather In Washington

 The march in 1963 spurred Congress to pass the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

"Something magic happened there. A new vision was shared with the American people. Whether that happens on Saturday or not, I don't know," said Andrew Young, who in 1963 was a young minister working with King and is now the mayor of Atlanta.

Since 1963, said Lowery, "everything has changed and nothing has changed. We have come a long, long way. But we still have a terribly long way to go, particularly in the arena of economic justice."

Thirty-one years after King, Lowery and Ralph Abernathy helped found the SCLC, the median income of blacks remains only 57 percent of the median white income, Lowery said.

"We won the battle about where you sit on the customer's side of the lunch counter, but the battle about the cash register side of the lunch counter is still raging," he said.

With or without Bush in attendance, Saturday's event was shaping up as a broad attack on the Reagan administration.

The march, said Lowery, "will emphasize jobs, peace, freedom and equality. We will leave Washington with an intensified voter registration effort. ... It is our concern that we not allow the electricity of the campaign of Jesse Jackson to stop."

Although the SCLC will not endorse a presidential candidate, Lowery said, it will challenge what he called "the marriage of the political right and the religious right."

"This marriage has led this country to support tyranny, to sanctify war and to subsidize terrorism. We shall reject this illicit, illegitimate union of the political right and religious right," said Lowery, a Baptist minister.

Young criticized the Reagan-Bush administration more directly.

In the time it takes for a neighborly chat, you'll do something important for your family.

Gravesite selection is such a simple task that it takes no longer to accomplish than a neighborly chat over the backyard fence, 20 minutes or so. It's hard to believe that something so simple could end up being so important to your family.

At S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, we'll do everything we can to make selecting a gravesite seem as natural and easy as a chat with a friend. Call us.

Philadelphia, Phoenix, Buffalo, Denver Capture Final Pre-Season Victories

By The Associated Press

Motown has been Showtown in professional sports recently. The Detroit Pistons, Tigers and Red Wings have been division winners in the last year.

Their NFL counterparts, the Lions, would settle for any kind of win right about now. But they won't get one in the exhibition season.

The Philadelphia Eagles, behind the passing of Randall Cunningham and three sacks by Reggie White, routed the Lions 27-9 Thursday night in the final preseason game for both teams. The victory left Philadelphia 2-2, while the Lions finished 0-4, their worst preseason mark since 1966.

"Right now, we have no continuity or rhythm," Lions quarterback Chuck Long said. "We have to do something about that this week. It's frustrating (to go 0-4) but it doesn't count. We have to go back to the drawing board."

And they don't have much time. On Sept. 4, they Lions open the regular season at home to another struggling squad, the Atlanta Falcons.

"I'm concerned but I'm not alarmed," defensive end Eric Williams said. "I'm not pushing any panic buttons. If things don't start falling against Atlanta, then I'll push the panic button."

"The new attitude is going to show next week or it will just be a bunch of lip service. I'm going to be one of the guys who won't let it die."

While the Lions are trying to survive, the Eagles might be flourishing, especially if Cunningham keeps improving. He completed 19 of 25 passes for 245 yards, including a 49-yard TD to Mike Quick in the first quarter.

"As Cunningham goes, so go the Eagles," Coach Buddy Ryan said. "If the rest of the team comes up to Cunningham's level, we'll be all right."

The Eagles rushed for 127 yards and held Detroit to 27; had 24 first downs to 13 for Detroit; and added six sacks.

In other games Thursday, it was Buffalo 14, Tampa Bay 7; Phoenix 41, Kansas City 21; and Denver 21, Indianapolis 20.

Tonight, it will be Cincinnati at New England, Miami at Minnesota, Seattle at San Francisco, the Los Angeles Raiders at Chicago, the New York Giants at Cleveland and the Los Angeles Rams at San Diego.

On Saturday, it will be Pittsburgh at New Orleans, the New York Jets vs. Green Bay at Madison, Wis., Atlanta vs. Washington at Birmingham, Ala., and Houston at Dallas.

Bills 14, Buccaneers 7

At Nashville, Tenn, Jim Kelly hit on nine of 12 passes and threw for a touchdown in the first half. Kelly passed for 86 yards before leaving at halftime with a slightly sprained ankle.

After Tampa Bay took a 7-0 lead on a 41-yard pass from Vinny Testaverde to Frank Pillow, rookie Thurman Thomas swept seven yards for a touchdown at the end of an 82-yard drive.

On the next series, Testaverde was intercepted by Ray Bentley and Kelly marched the Bills 45 yards in seven plays, capping the drive with a 1-yard touchdown pass to Jamie Mueller.

Cardinals 41, Chiefs 21

Neil Lomax wiped out the memory of a subpar preseason by completing 12 of 15 passes, including his first touchdown pass. Vai Sikaheima scored on an 81-yard punt return and Tony Jeffery had an 80-yard touchdown run as Phoenix won its first game of the exhibition season. Cliff Stoudt also threw a touchdown pass for the Cardinals, while Bill Kenney had a 46-yard scoring pass for host Kansas City.

Broncos 21, Colts 20

John Elway and Eric Dickerson, the resident stars of each team, didn't disappoint. Elway, who left the game in the third quarter with a strained right shoulder, threw two touchdown passes to Ricky Nattiel. Dickerson rushed 17 times for 128 yards, including a 67-yard scoring dash in the third quarter.

The Colts held the edge in total offense, 449 yards to 362, but twice fumbled the ball away — at the Denver 7 and 2 yard lines — and Dean Biasucci was wide on a 55-yard field goal attempt on the final play of the game.

Around the Camps

All-Pro tackle Gary Zimmerman came to terms with the Vikings, leaving defensive tackle Doug Martin as the lone holdout.

Zimmerman had said if he wasn't signed by Thursday, he would go hunting and would miss the Sept. 4 regular-season opener at Buffalo.

Linebacker Garry Cobb, released Tuesday by the Philadelphia Eagles, agreed to terms Thursday with the Dallas Cowboys. Cobb, 31, is in his 10th NFL season.

Dokie Williams, the wide receiver worth a first-round draft pick to the San Francisco 49ers when they acquired for him from the Los Angeles Raiders. The 49ers traded their No.1 draft pick to the Raiders on draft day for Williams and the Raiders' second- and fourth-round picks.

Untested Youngsters Hold Key To Maryland Hopes

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

The fortunes of the 1988 Maryland football team could rest in the hands of untested youngsters, according to head coach Joe Krivak.

"With the last two recruiting classes, we've brought in over 50 youngsters," said Krivak, who enters his second season as coach of the Terps. "The key now is to build upon that. We've got a lot of good, young players in the program and we also have good depth with upperclassmen at certain positions. When you look at the total squad, it's basically a young team."

The Terps will be trying to improve on a 4-7 1987 campaign this year against a schedule loaded with six bowl participants from a year ago. Those teams include West Virginia, Syracuse, Penn State, Clemson and Virginia.

Offensively, Maryland returns the services of junior Neil O'Donnell at the quarterback position. O'Donnell passed for 913 yards and four touchdowns in five games last year.

Among the returnees to the Terrapin backfield are Bren Lowery, the team's leading rusher last season with 556 yards on 168 carries and fullback Dennis Spinelli, who teamed with Lowery in the backfield last year most of the time. Adding depth at the positions will be Arnold Watker and Mike Beasley, who each acquired experience last season and junior college transfers James Matthews and Ricky Johnson.

"I believe that the situation at running back is a lot brighter than it was a year ago," Krivak said. "Everyone from our 1987 backfield returns. We can now put together a depth chart to see where we are at running back. This is something we were not able to do last year."

With the graduation of three seniors from the receiving corps last year, Krivak is looking to Vernon Joines, who tallied 381 yards on 24 receptions last season to pick up the slack. Others vying for playing time there will be Barry Jones, who saw time in all 11 games for the Terps last season, and Dean Green, who performed in the defensive backfield last year.

At tight end, the Terps must replace All-American Ferrell Edmunds. A quintet of players could see time at the spot this year, according to Krivak.

Along the offensive line, Maryland must replace three four-year lettermen. Mark Agent, who played tackle in 1987, will be moved to center this season. At the guard spots, John Rugg and Richard Nelson, both experienced starters, return for another season. The tackle positions are up for grabs with JUCO transfer Heston Silbert along with fifth-year Ben Jefferson being the probable starters.

Defensively, the Terps also have to replace some valuable players on the line. Filling the void left behind at the guard position with the departure of Bob Arnold and Rob Klein, will be Mike Kiselak, Rick Fleece, Ralph Orta and Dereck Steele. At tackle, experienced senior lettermen Wayne Brunson and Warren Powers both return.

At linebacker Maryland lost four starters from last year's squad. Gone are Richie Pettibon, Kevin Walker, O'Brein Alston and Sean Scott. Vying for the inside spots are Scott Saylor, Scott Whittier, Glen Page and Matt D'Amico. At the outside position, the coaching staff will choose from the likes of Karl Edwards, Mark Walsh and Bob Rushnak.

The secondary should prove to be the strength of the Maryland defense this season as the starting defensive backfield for most of 1987 returns. J.B. Brown, Chad Snyder, Irvin Smith and Mike Hollis had 10 interceptions between them last year and all four are back for another season. In addition to those four, Kevin Fowlkes, who started a trio of games in 1987, also returns.

The Terrapin kicking game should be in good shape for the upcoming campaign with the return of placekicker Dan Plocki. Plocki went 8-14 in field goal attempts last season and was a perfect 16-16 on PATs. Red-shirt freshman Danny DeArmas will take over the punting chores following the departure of last year's starter Darryl Wright.

"A lot of work needs to be done," Krivak said in summing up his 1988 team. "The nice thing about this squad is that it is relatively young, but we've got a sprinkling of seniors in there that gives us a chance to be a good football team. Hopefully, we can become a football team that is better than a lot of people think."

Yankees Fall To Brewers As They Open Road Trip

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The New York Yankees made a refueling stop in Milwaukee on their way to the West Coast for a long road trip, but it turned out to be a draining experience thanks to Brewers left-hander Teddy Higuera.

Higuera pitched a three-hitter Thursday for his fourth straight victory as the Brewers beat the Yankees 4-1 in the makeup of an Aug. 4 rainout. The loss dropped the Yankees 4½ games behind the first-place Detroit Tigers in the American League East.

It was the only game played in the AL. Tonight, it will be Cleveland at Chicago, Minnesota at Kansas City, the Tigers at the Brewers, Toronto at Texas, Boston at Seattle, the Yankees at California and Baltimore at Oakland.

"We missed him on the rainout, but we got him today ... unfortunately," Yankees manager Lou Pinella said.

"He threw more changeups that I've seen him throw in a game before. He just threw all his pitches well. I think we can chalk this game here up to facing a pitcher that on his game."

"It was vintage Higuera. He mixed his pitches and got better as the game went on."

Higuera is 11-8 after the nine-strikeout performance raised his career record against the Yankees to 9-2, including 6-0 at County Stadium. He retired the final 19 batters and dropped his earned run average to 2.41, second lowest in the league.

The Brewers, to a man, will tell you that Higuera's record would be much better if he'd had the luxury of an offense. But Milwaukee has scored only 11 runs in his eight losses.

"When he has some runs and we're ahead you feel great. But so many times this year he goes out and pitches a great game and it's 1-0 or 1-1 in the seventh or eighth," said Milwaukee outfielder Rob Deer, who hit his 17th homer and drove in three runs.

"When you get him runs, he's just a whole different pitcher."

The Brewers got three first-inning runs, two on Deer's homer and another on a double steal, to take a 3-1 lead against Rich Dotson, who didn't pitch so poorly himself. Dotson, 9-7, gave up only eight hits, including a run-scoring double to Deer in the third.

"I made a mistake. I had made a couple of good pitches and Deer fought them off. Then I made one bad pitch and he was all over it," Dotson said of Deer's homer.

But Higuera, who gave a first-inning RBI single to Jack Clark that snapped an 0-for-20 hitting slump, was too tough. He surrendered a second-inning single to Luis Aguayo and a third-inning walk to Dave Winfield, but nothing thereafter.

"I like to pitch against the good teams. I pitch hard against the Yankees," Higuera said.

"We play a little more relaxed with Teddy pitching," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "Sometimes that's good, sometimes bad. Sometimes we don't score as many runs for him, but I think we usually have a good approach with him pitching."

"He gets tougher and tougher if we can get him some runs. This was the best day off I've had in a long time."

New Allegations Against Sooners

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The NCAA has developed several new allegations against the University of Oklahoma football program, a school attorney says.

"There are a couple more instances where they claim we arranged some travel for a couple of kids, and there was maybe another instance where they were talking about some additional ticket sales," Andy Coats said Thursday.

Coats said the new allegations were similar to 18 allegations included in an NCAA Letter of Official Inquiry sent to Oklahoma on Feb. 25.

Coats is a member of the Oklahoma City law firm of Crowe & Dunlevy, which was hired by Oklahoma to help investigate and respond to the NCAA allegations.

The NCAA had alleged in its February letter that an Oklahoma staff member arranged a one-way airline ticket to Oklahoma City for one prospect and that a supporter had arranged rides for some prospects between their home and airport and between their home and their high school.

There was another allegation that a staff member sold two season football tickets in excess of the face price for each of two players and gave them the money.

Coats said the NCAA notified Oklahoma by phone of the additional allegations.

"We said it was the same kind of thing they had before, and they pretty much agreed to that," said Coats. "We are going to check them out and see if there's anything to it. We'll cooperate with them on it."

Coats said he did not think the NCAA would send out a new Letter of Official Inquiry.

The attorney said he thought they might be able to finish the investigation and respond to the NCAA letter by the first week in September. He said there was some indication Oklahoma might get a hearing before the NCAA in late September or early October.

After Oklahoma responds, there will be a pre-hearing conference between the school and the NCAA and then a hearing before the NCAA Infractions Committee, which would assess any possible penalties.

Winterville Pee Wee Tryouts Set

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Parks and Recreation Department will hold tryouts for 1988 Winterville Pee Wee League football season Tuesday and Wednesday, officials announced.

All interested players should report to A.G. Cox Junior High and should dress to participate the first night. All interested players must be at least eight years but cannot be 13 years old before Aug. 1. Also, 12 year-olds must weigh less than 112 pounds, while 11-and-below can't weigh above than 125.

Rams-Bruins Play To Scoreless Tie

SNOW HILL — Greene Central and Wilson Beddingfield played to a scoreless tie in a pre-season football scrimmage Thursday night.

Greene Central quarterback Kris Radford hit 5-13 passes for 77 yards, including a 4-8 performance in the first half. Cornelius Hill led the Rams' rushing with eight carries for 29 yards. As a team, though, Greene Central netted only 32 yards on the ground off 39 carries.

The Rams' defense, led by Donald Speight and Brian Harris in the secondary, limited Beddingfield to just one complete pass in 18 attempts.

Speight, a cornerback, had five tackles and one assist with an interception. Brian Harris, a safety, had three tackles and seven assists along with a fumble recovery. Wes Sugg, at outside linebacker, had four tackles and seven assists, while the other outside linebacker, Jimmy Hardy, had four solos and three assists.

The Rams open the season next Friday against West Craven.

"We still got a lot of work in our offensive line. We're not moving anybody around," said coach Spence Grantham. "Kris was very impressive. He ran the option real well and threw the ball real well the first half."

Moss Defeats Daniels For East Title

Richard Moss of Goldsboro Country Club defeated Derrick Daniels of Brook Valley to win the 17-year-old championship of the Eastern North Carolina Junior Golf Association tournament, held at Greenville Country Club.

Moss and Daniels each fired even-par 71 scores, with Moss winning the title on the first hole of sudden death with a birdie.

Don Atkinson of Rocky Mount shot a 77 to take the 16-year-old title while Steve Creasy of New Bern won a playoff from Lee Watson of Greenville for second place. Charles Smith of New Bern won the 15-year-old division.

Brooks Honeycutt of Greenville Country Club topped Ben Edwards of Brook Valley on the second hole of sudden death to win the 14-year-old title. Both had carded 78s in regulation play.

Winners and runners-up were as follows:

Boys
 Age 17 — Richard Moss 71 (won playoff), Derrick Daniels 71; Age 16 — Don Atkinson 77, Steve Creasy 79 (won playoff); Age 15 — Charles Smith 77, Chris Warren 78 (won playoff); Age 14 — Brooks Honeycutt 78 (won playoff), Ben Edwards 78; Age 13 — Will Mackenzie 76, Mark Edwards 82; Age 12 — John Gaddy 84 (won playoff), Clark Smith 84; Age 11 — Bradley Quick 44, Nathan Hamrick 50.
 Age 10 — Neil Hill 43, Garrett Honeycutt 45.
 Girls: Age 17 — Laura Creasy 40; Age 15 — Camilla Brown 46.
 Age 12 — Ann Eckstein 86; Age 11 — Beth Measamer 69; Age 10 — Beth Vincent 57.

North Edgecombe JV Tops Farmville

LEGGETT — North Edgecombe's junior varsity slipped past Farmville Central, 8-0, in the opening football game of the year Thursday night.

The game's lone touchdown came on a 1-yard plunge late in the first half.

The game was hampered by fumbles. Farmville had six and lost four while North Edgecombe had seven and lost five.

Farmville finished with 121 yards in total offense while Edgecombe had 224.

New Jersey Signs 1st-Round Pick Morris

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Nets have signed first-round draft choice Chris Morris, the club and Morris announced Thursday.

The 6-foot-8 forward told reporters he has been staying in shape since the season ended and is ready to help give the basement-dwelling Nets a lift, despite having missed the team's strength and conditioning program and its summer league for rookies.

"I just want to come in and put the team back on the map," Morris said at a news conference. "It's going to be a tough battle, but I think I can handle it."

Morris said he will be in shape when training camp opens Oct. 7. He has been keeping fit by playing in a summer league in Houston and working on his leg strength, he said.

Neither Nets General Manager Harry Weltman nor Morris would comment on terms of the contract. Morris, picked fourth overall, is the highest 1988 NBA draft selection to be signed so far.

The former Auburn star averaged 20.7 points per game during his senior year and finished his career there as the school's all-time leader in three-point field goals with 417 and in dunks with 174. He finished fifth in career scoring at Auburn with 1,717 points and sixth in rebounding with 960.

Nets coach Willis Reed said he will use Morris' rebounding and scoring skills to continue building a running team. He said the team is not as big as he would like but that the running and gunning of Morris and others should help improve last season's dismal 19-63 record.

"Chris is going to add to a team that you will see will be a scrappy, hustling bunch," Reed said. "We may have — may have — gotten the best small forward of all of them, and that includes Danny Manning."

Weltman said Morris was drafted in part because of the then-uncertain future of forward Orlando Woolridge, recently released after a bout with drugs.

Adding Morris to the front line gives Reed a rotation that includes Buck Williams, Roy Hinson, Tim McCormick and Keith Lee. Morris also could be used in the backcourt if necessary, Weltman said.

"Morris can score, he can rebound and he can really run the floor," Weltman said. "He will complement our other players very well."

Ford Pleased With Tigers' Progress

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson coach Danny Ford said he was pleased with the progress of his players, who got a break in the weather and practiced Thursday under blue skies and mild temperatures as they move toward the Sept. 3 opener with Virginia Tech.

"We were not displeased with anything we worked on," Ford said. "We don't ever perform perfectly, and that is what we expect every time we practice, but we had a good practice."

"We still have to improve a couple of things on our football team, but as far as our team offense and team defense are concerned, we are pleased with our progress," he said.

The Tigers are working on getting some of their starting offensive linemen back into playing condition. Ty Granger, who reinjured a hamstring last week after sitting out the first two weeks of practice, is still missing workouts.

"We are trying to get Granger to the point where he can try to play," Ford said.

Brown Makes Dramatic Debut

CINCINNATI (AP) — Keith Brown showed up at Riverfront Stadium as an unknown minor-league commodity and left nine innings later as a major-league winner.

Brown, 24, allowed just four hits over seven innings in his major-league debut Thursday night to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. He surprised a few people in the process — himself, his manager, his new teammates and the Cardinals.

"A lot of guys in there (the Reds' clubhouse) are in the same situation as me — they'd never seen Keith throw before," Manager Pete Rose said.

That's because the Reds have jumped him from the Class AA to the majors in just one season. Brown, a right-handed forkball specialist, made just 12 starts for Class AAA Nashville in-between, going 6-3 with a 1.90 earned run average.

He doesn't throw hard — his fastball reached 86 mph occasionally in his debut. But he kept the Cardinals off-balance by mixing up his fastball, slider and forkball.

"I don't think he ever threw two balls in succession that were the same pitch," Rose said. "That's why he's tough to figure out."

"He's one of those guys where you've got guys in the other clubhouse who go 0-for-4 and are say, 'How'd he get me out?' But he does." Tell it to the Cardinals.

"Give him credit," said Jose Oquendo, 0-for-3. "Everything he threw worked for him tonight."

"He was pretty poised," Manager Whitey Herzog said. "He threw a lot of breaking balls."

Even his pitching opponent was impressed.

"What he did that I didn't do was throw strikes," said Greg Mathews, 2-4, who walked six in 4 1-3 innings. "He made them hit the ball. After he started them out with strikes, he was able to work in and out and make them hit his pitch."

Mathews summed up the formula that has made Brown a minor-league success and now a major-league winner.

"Everything has just been going my way," Brown said. "I've been pitching pretty good, I've been having good defense to back me up. Everything's been going my way."

Brown also was surprised at the ease with which he got the Cardinals out.

"A little bit," he admitted. "Everybody says hitters in the big leagues are a lot tougher and stuff. They are. A couple of them are free swingers. A lot of them are more finesse. A lot of them wait for their pitch."

Brown didn't give it to them. He allowed a pair of first-inning singles, then didn't allow a ball out of the infield until Willie McGee hit a solo homer with two out in the sixth, his third. Brown walked two and struck out three before yielding to John Franco, who pitched two shutout innings for his National League-leading 27th save.

Mathews said he felt strong in his second start since his stay on the disabled list from May 14 to Aug. 16 with a sore shoulder. He gave up just three hits, but hurt himself with the six walks. He attributed the wildness to trying to throw too hard because his arm felt good.

"It's been a long time since I've thrown," he said. "I've got to expect situations like this to happen. I've got to be able to correct them. Today I didn't."

McNeill Awaits Decision On Final Spot On Relay

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Carl Lewis will be "Go'ing For The Gold" — four times — once again.

He did it in 1984, when he became only the third track and field athlete to win four golds in the same Olympic Games, matching the accomplishments of Alvin Kranzlein in 1900 and Jesse Owens in 1936. Lewis did it after recording the song, "Go'ing For The Gold."

Doubt had been cast last week whether Lewis would get the opportunity to repeat his 1984 accomplishments because of a dispute with relay coach Russ Rogers.

Rogers, recently appointed head coach at Ohio State after spending eight years at Fairleigh Dickinson, angered Lewis and his Santa Monica Track Club teammate Joe DeLoach when he barred them from competing on the U.S. 400-meter relay team in a meet at Brussels, Belgium, last Friday.

Rogers said he made the decision because neither sprinter had practiced with the team at its Davos, Switzerland, camp and hadn't proven themselves.

Asked then if he would still run the relay anchor leg in the Olympics after the dispute, Lewis said, "At this point, no. At this point, I am just going to focus on the three individual events," the 100- and 200-meter dashes and the long jump.

"Rogers was acting like a junior high school coach," Lewis said, adding that his personal coach, Tom Tellez, told him "not to focus on the relay anymore."

Later, Rogers relented somewhat, saying, "No person in his right mind is going to kick Carl off the team."

"Carl and Joe ... have created a bad situation," Rogers added. "Once they come to training camp, it's a different situation. Just because Carl Lewis tells me, 'I want to run in the relay and I want Joe to run as well,' am I to drop two guys who have been working for me the last four weeks?"

"... No athlete is bigger than any team. You cannot have a situation where an athlete is telling a coach what to do. That is not in the best interests of the team."

While Rogers was in Europe, head coach Stan Huntsman was at the University of California-Santa Barbara. Huntsman had been in Europe through last Wednesday, and when he left he had thought Lewis would be running in the relay at Brussels.

"As far as running on the team, no one will be kicked off unless I do it," Huntsman said last week. "There's no way he (Rogers) can drop anyone off the team."

On Thursday, Huntsman confirmed that Lewis would run on the Olympic relay team, and that Calvin Smith and Dennis Mitchell would be a part of that team for the final at the Seoul Games. The fourth spot is yet to be decided.

Lewis won the 100-meter dash in last month's Olympic trials at Indianapolis, while DeLoach won the 200 with Lewis second.

Huntsman, after conferring with Rogers, Lewis and others involved in the flap, said, "We have three sprinters who have proven themselves without a shadow of a doubt — Carl, Calvin and Dennis."

He also stressed that Lewis, along with Smith and Mitchell, "would have to fulfill their obligations of practicing with the team in Japan (at its training camp in Chiba early next month)."

"The practices will be worked out around his (Lewis') schedule and the rest of the sprinters," Huntsman said.

Lewis, Mitchell and Smith finished 1-2-3 in the 100 at the Trials, followed by Albert Robinson, DeLoach and Mike Marsh.

The 4-5-6 finishers, along with Emmitt King and Lee McNeill, who were seventh and eighth, still are battling for the fourth place in the relay final.

Huntsman said that Robinson and Marsh definitely were a part of the six-man relay team, which includes two alternates.

"Emmitt (King) and Lee (McNeill) are the only two not on the team at this time," Huntsman said.

Huntsman said the decisions on who would be the sixth member of the team — DeLoach, King or McNeill — and who would be the fourth runner in the final would be solved in a day or two.

One way to settle it is a possible runoff in a pre-Olympic meet at Los Angeles Sept. 3. The other would be by a decision of the coaches.

The determination of the entire U.S. team has to be made by the coaches by Sept. 4.

Huntsman said the relay problem was caused by "coaching miscommunications — whether by us, the U.S. staff coaches, or from personal coaches."

Lewis has anchored the only four relay teams ever to run under 38 seconds, including the 1984 Olympic team which holds the world record of 37.83.

The victory put the Reds four games over .500 for the first time this season. They've won eight of their last 12.

Brown, called up because Jose Rijo had to miss another start with a sore elbow, will go into the bullpen unless Rijo can't pitch next week.

"We appreciate what Keith did for us," Rose said. "Now we know we've got a guy sitting over there (who can start) if we need him. Hopefully, we're not going to need him."

Cubs 6, Braves 1

Calvin Schiraldi struck out a career-high 12 batters as visiting Chicago beat Atlanta.

Schiraldi, 8-8, suffered a leg injury in New York on Aug. 4 and went on the disabled list until Aug. 20. He allowed eight hits en route to his second complete game.

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the third on Ryne Sandberg's homer off starter German Jimenez, 1-5.

After singles by Sandberg, Mark Grace and Andre Dawson loaded the bases with one out in the fifth, Rafael Palmeiro walked to force in a run. Jody Davis then singled home two more runs for a 5-0 lead.

Prep Season Set To Open

It only seems like yesterday that the final whistle blew on the 1987 football season, and here we are again, set to kick off the 1988 season.

Tonight, seven of our area's 11 football teams will begin the season, and by some quirk of fate, every one of them are opening on their home fields.

The other four schools, D.H. Conley, Greene Central, Roanoke and Jamesville, will join in the fun next Friday night.

What can we look for in the 1988 season?

Well, there'll be at least one surprise. It may be a team that is expected to perform well that falls on its face. Or it may be a team that no one really took seriously coming to the front and making the playoffs.

Last year, all five teams in Pitt County made the playoffs. Very likely, no other county in the state with as many schools can make that statement.

Rose High School is again among the favorites in the Big East Conference, and has been ranked high across the state in pre-season polls. The Rampants went undefeated last year during the regular season and advanced to the second round of the playoffs before finally losing to Jacksonville, a team Rose had beaten during the regular season.

D.H. Conley, which surprised everyone last year by making the playoffs, is one of the favorites in the Coastal Conference race this year. They, too, have attracted high voting among the best 3-A teams in the state.

Ayden-Grifton's Chargers were co-champs of the Eastern Plains Conference last year, and are picked to win again this year. Again, here, the Chargers were voted among the best in the east for this season in pre-season balloting.

North Pitt, the other co-champion, lost two of its top players, but return a host of veterans, and many give them a good shot at a return to the playoffs again this year.

Farmville Central, the other county school to make the playoffs last year as the EPC's number three team, also returns a lot of vets, and could end up in the playoffs once more.

Still, there are other teams waiting in the wings, and the prospect of all five making it into the playoffs for a second year would appear marginal at best. Time, however, will tell.

Meanwhile, tonight the season begins.

As usual, our panel will pick games throughout the season, starting next Friday afternoon, when the colleges swing into action.

Tonight, Rose High School opens the season by playing host to Eastern Wayne. The Warriors should be improved from last season, and this will probably be more of a test for the Rampants than in the past. The big question for the Rampants will be whether the line can open those holes for Timmy Moore and company.

Until they show differently, however, Rose is the solid choice, say 21-7.

North Pitt plays host to West Craven in a real test of the Panthers. West Craven has a tradition of being strong in the 3-A ranks, but may be down somewhat this year, having only four starters back each way. The Eagles are young and it may take a few games before their wings get strong enough to carry them.

The Panthers, meanwhile, have a good nucleus back, but must come up with a new starting quarterback. Dave Sawyer saw a lot of action last year when Calvin Hunter was sidelined, but Billy Hardison is contesting for the job.

This is a hard one to choose, but we'll go with the Panthers, 14-13.

Farmville Central is at home to North Edgecombe, a 1-A school. The Jaguars will certainly get their test from one of the top quarterbacks in the east, Orlando Whitaker, who passed for over 1,500 yards last year. He will certainly give the Jag defense a trying time, and perhaps pull it out.

Our pick is the Warriors in a close one, 22-20.

Finally in Pitt County, Ayden-Grifton plays host to Wallace-Rose Hill, a team that also is drawing support as one of the top teams in the east in the 2-A ranks. This could be a preview of a possible state playoff matchup, assuming both make it and last a couple of rounds.

The Chargers have Ronnell Peterson, who can play about anywhere in the skill positions, but they have some rebuilding to do also. The Bulldogs will be looking at this one as a chance to show what they can do. Last year, they took a 26-20 victory, and we would not be surprised to see that score repeated tonight.

Elsewhere in the area, Washington should rout Belhaven, 35-7; Camden should top Chocowinity, 24-12; and Williamston should down Manteo, 14-6.

Alcoti also said she enjoyed this course.

"I wish every tournament was played here," she said.

Her only problem, she said, was the Bermuda grass in the rough, which she said "not only tests your nerves, but your skills to the max."

Jan Stephenson, the Australian native, was alone in fourth place at 69, but she expressed her frustration over coming up short on seven putts of 10 feet or less on the front nine.

"I read them great, I just didn't have the speed," Stephenson said.

U.S. Open champion Liselotte Neumann of Sweden, helped by an eagle-2 on the 14th when she holed a 7-iron from 133 yards, shot a 70 and was tied with Rosie Jones and Patty Sheehan.

"I wasn't swinging well and everything was wrong," Lyle said, "and at that time I thought if I could scramble in with a 75 I'd be doing well."

But he touched off a string of four consecutive birdies on the ninth hole, where his hooked drive hit a spectator in the back and bounded back into the fairway, and salvaged a 69.

"I bogeyed three in a row. I saved three in a row. I was at rock bottom," Lyle said. "Then it all turned around and I birdied four in a row. A 69 after the start I had, it's a real saved round."

"It's a daft game sometimes," Ian Baker-Finch of Australia and Mark Brooks, who like McCallister is making his first appearance in this elite, international event, shared second with 68's.

Ken Brown of Scotland and Jay Haas, who were tied with Lyle at 69, were the only others in the 42-man field able to break par in the strong, gusty winds.

Curtis Strange, the U.S. Open title-holder and the defending champion here, was at 71. So were Joey Sindelar, who leads the money-winning race, and PGA champion Jeff Sluman.

Australian Greg Normam was another shot higher at 72. Tom Watson had a 74 that included a double bogey on the 16th.

Walters, Bloom Plead Innocent

CHICAGO (AP) — Sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom have pleaded innocent to charges of fraud, extortion and racketeering, while officials try to assess damages from the nationwide scandal involving college athletes.

"College athletics has gotten a black eye and been bloodied but we will recover," Bill Myles, associate athletic director at Ohio State University, said Thursday.

His comments came a day after Walters, 56, and Bloom, 29, both based in New York, were indicted on charges of racketeering, mail fraud, wire fraud and extortion. The two men pleaded innocent Thursday before U.S. District Judge George Marovich, who released them on bond pending a Feb. 27 trial.

"In every movie I've ever seen they say, 'Anything you say can and will be used against you,' so I'm not saying anything," Walters told reporters outside the courtroom.

Walters and Bloom are accused of using money, gifts and threats of violence to get dozens of college players to sign agreements that allow the agents to represent them in professional contract negotiations.

If the players tried to back out of the deals, they were warned that Walters and Bloom had friends who would break their legs, said U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas.

Contractual arrangements between athletes and agents are barred by the National Collegiate Athletic Association while athletes are participating in amateur sports.

"We will defend this case extremely vigorously, you can count on that," said Walters' attorney, Robert Gold.

Reputed organized crime figure Michael Franzese was named as an unindicted co-conspirator, and prosecutors alleged that Walters and Bloom used his reputation to coerce athletes into signing contracts.

Franzese is serving a 10-year federal prison term in California for racketeering and tax violations. The Chicago Tribune, citing unidentified sources, said prosecutors obtained Franzese's cooperation in the 18-month investigation.

Edward Bozick, athletic director at the University of Pittsburgh, said he was gratified by the indictments.

"This sends a strong message to the student athletes that they can be held accountable if they are involved in a fraud," Bozick said.

Prosecutors said Walters and Bloom induced the athletes to defraud their schools by accepting cash and signing contracts in violation of NCAA rules, and then signing affidavits saying they had not broken any rules.

Valukas said 43 college athletes who signed with Walters and Bloom avoided prosecution by signing pretrial agreements to perform community service and to reimburse portions of their scholarships to their universities.

Alvin Miller, who played football for Notre Dame, told the newspaper that he took $2,500 from Walters even though he knew it was illegal, because he wanted to help his older sister get through nursing school.

"It may sound stupid to say you didn't know, but it was something you didn't see," Miller said.

"I knew (it was wrong). That's all that mattered," said Miller, now out of football and looking for work. He said he regrets the mistake, which has embarrassed his family and school.

The indictment said Walters, who heads World Sports & Entertainment in New York, also used threats to sign acts in the music business, including the Jackson Five.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Sun-Times reported today that Bloom's attorney, Michael Trope, was told he cannot defend Bloom at trial because Trope — a former sports agent — once represented a potential trial witness. The Sun-Times said prosecutors contend that means Trope, 37, has a conflict of interest in the case.

The Tribune said Trope received $27,000 earlier this year from Bloom out of an account of Lincolnshire Financial Services, a California company. But Trope said that his fee arrangement with Bloom had been examined by authorities and was free of any impropriety.

Trope refused to comment on the Sun-Times report, except to say, "Right now, I'm Lloyd's attorney and anticipate being so for the foreseeable future."

Taylor The Latest In A Long Line

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — In his 26 years at Nebraska, first as an assistant and the last 15 as head coach, Tom Osborne has seen such outstanding quarterbacks as Jerry Tagge, David Humm, Vince Ferragamo, Turner Gill — and Steve Taylor.

Tagge, Ferragamo and Humm were "great pure throwers," Osborne says. Taylor probably is the closest thing to the multi-talented Gill, who could hurt teams running with the football or throwing it.

Or is Gill the closest thing to Taylor?

"Probably in terms of all-around athletic ability, he (Taylor) is the most gifted," Osborne said Thursday.

day. "He has great physical skills and he's run an electronically timed 4.5 40, which translates to under 4.4. He has a very strong arm, a lot of agility and he's a great leader."

Taylor, a 6-foot, 205-pound senior, has been listed among the preseason favorites for the Heisman Trophy. And he will be the first of the front-runners to make his 1988 debut when the second-ranked Cornhuskers meet No. 10 Texas A&M on Saturday night in the sixth annual Kickoff Classic.

Taylor's other early-season performances have been memorable.

In the 1986 opener against Florida State, his first career start, Taylor completed 10 of 16 passes for 130 yards and two touchdowns and rushed 12 times for 139 yards and two more scores.

A year ago, he rushed for 157 yards against Utah State, a single-game record for a Nebraska quarterback.

One week later, he tied a Big Eight Conference record by throwing five touchdown passes against UCLA.

"Those were pretty good accomplishments," he said. "But as long as I play consistently and don't make too many errors, I think I'll play pretty well."

"It's good to start off on the right track and you want to do the things you have to do in order to win."

"You want to stay team-oriented. You don't want to go out there and try to win the Heisman every game. You just want to go out there and do the best you can."

"The reason I'm going for the Heisman now is because of the things I've been doing in the past (1,748 yards and 19 touchdowns passing, 1,299 yards and 19 touchdowns rushing).

"Right now, there's probably 50-100 players legitimately qualified to be a Heisman candidate. It's an honor to be one. I really don't want to let it affect me."

"I just want to go out and play football and just let the voters do what they have to do. I just hope Nebraska keeps winning. I've still got, what, 12-13 games to play."

Taylor will have to play the first one without starting center Jake Young, who suffered a knee injury in practice this week. He doesn't foresee any problems on the center-quarterback exchange.

"(Senior) Jeff Anderson's the backup and I work out with him every day," Taylor said. "They take an equal number of snaps, so I'm very familiar with Jeff. He's a solid player, he's good. We have a guy named (Roger) Fitzke behind him who's solid, too."

"At Nebraska, if someone gets hurt, we have the depth to fill in with a solid player so I don't think it should affect us in any way."

Lopez Gets Lift From Her Hubby

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Ray Knight of the Detroit Tigers took advantage of an off day to watch his wife, Nancy Lopez, play a round of golf.

"I love having Ray with me," Lopez said. "When Ray's here, I stay on my toes a little more."

It took some time, but it finally paid off for Lopez, who overcame a five-shot deficit with a birdie-birdie-eagle-birdie burst beginning on the 14th hole to give her a share of the lead with Japan's Ayako Okamoto in Thursday's opening round of the $265,000 LPGA World Championship.

Lopez and Okamoto, the defending champion, each recorded 5-under-par 67's on the hilly, 6,107-yard Stouffville PineIsle Resort course.

They shared a one-shot lead over Amy Alcott, who won the event over this layout three years ago.

Eleven of the 16 players in the elite field broke par in the warm, 89-degree weather.

Lopez, second on this year's money list, was plodding along until she began her burst of under-par scores.

Her only two birdies on the first 13 holes were offset by a double-bogey 7 on the ninth when she buried a wedge in a greenside bunker and then three-putted from 30 feet.

"That hole kind of made me really mad," she said. "But the birdie on the 10th kind of brought me back."

Lopez says she's had streaks before, but it's been a while.

She called it "a good, nice change. You just get more and more positive."

All three birdies came on putts of 10 feet and the eagle when she chipped in from the fringe from 25 feet.

Okamoto birdied from 18 feet on the first hole and stayed under par the rest of the day. She scored from 15 feet on the fourth, 10 feet on the fifth and then sank a 20-footer on No. 6.

Okamoto didn't get a birdie on the back side until two-putting for 25 feet for a four on the par-5 16th.

"I was very comfortable, very relaxed," Okamoto said. "My putting and my irons were very consistent."

Okamoto said she liked this course because second shots are either uphill or downhill, not flat.

"I have good concentration for that kind of shot," she said.

TWISTING AWAY — Jose Fusco and Carole Scaldeferri, both of Philadelphia, rehearse Thursday night for a Labor Day weekend reunion appearance of 27 dancers from the original "American Bandstand" TV show. (AP Laserphoto)

'Bandstand' To Use Original TV Cast For Labor Day Bash

By A.J. HOSTETLER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They twisted, coffee-grinded and jitterbugged their way into the nation's living rooms on the original "American Bandstand" in the 1950s. Now, older and a little less svelte, they're back in the city where it all began to recapture their glory days.

On Thursday, for the first time in a quarter century, 27 of the original Bandstand dancers, including Joe, Kenny, Arlene, Carole, Flossie and Jim, reunited to rehearse their steps for a rock 'n' roll celebration over Labor Day weekend in Philadelphia.

"Any place there's dancing, I'll still go," said Joe Fusco, who was 15 when he joined the show.

Fusco, now 46, of south Philadelphia and Lis Braun of the Hot Foot Agency, a talent agency for dancers, cooked up the idea of bringing the gang together to dance, gossip and reminisce at the rock 'n' roll event, called Rock 'A' Rama.

Fusco developed the two-hour show with Braun, contacted the dancers and helped with the choreography.

"American Bandstand" started life as a Philadelphia TV show in 1952, with Bob Horn as master of ceremonies. Dick Clark took over as host in 1956, and the show made its network debut on ABC-TV on Aug. 5, 1957.

Clark moved the show to California in 1964, but many fans remember it as a Philadelphia phenomenon.

The Bandstanders invented steps that are still given a whirl: the bunny hop, the chalypto and the stroll.

"You were like a big star. Girls chased ya; the guys hated ya," said Fusco.

So in a dance studio Thursday night, remembering the glory days, they practiced their jitterbugs and coffee-grinding and listened to Bobby Darin, Frankie Avalon and Neil Sedaka.

The dancers have aged, some have gained weight or grown mustaches, but they continue to follow what's hip in fashion and dance steps. Several wore miniskirts, others donned sneakers and pedal pushers.

During breaks, they grabbed cameras and cigarettes and tried to catch up with each others' lives before Joe called them back for another try at "Rock Around the Clock" or "Oh, Carole."

The reunion gossip even included a love story.

Philadelphia's Carole Scaldeferri, a regular on the show from 1957 to 1961, met Richard Spada in 1957, when he was a fan who traveled to Philadelphia to see the show in person.

In 1977, Carole appeared on a Dick Clark television special, where Richard spotted her. With the help of Clark and his wife, Richard contacted Carole and the two were married six months later.

"Now I only dance at weddings," said Carole, 42.

Suit Against Joel Dismissed

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A defamation lawsuit filed by a musician against rock star Billy Joel has been dismissed by the Nevada Supreme Court because the musician's lawyer failed to file a timely notice of appeal.

Carson City musician John Powers sued after Joel called him "a creep" and "a poor little schlump" and said he would like "to break his legs with my own hands" in a 1982 Playboy magazine interview.

The Supreme Court's dismissal of the case Wednesday ended a 10-year legal battle that began when Powers sued Joel, claiming Joel's 1978 hit "My Life" was originally recorded by Powers.

Joel settled that suit in 1980 for $42,500, later saying his attorneys and business manager told him to settle it as a nuisance suit because it would cost him more to fight it.

Part of the settlement was that Powers stop claiming the Joel hit was a song Powers recorded in 1974. But Powers allegedly continued to claim Joel's song was stolen, prompting Joel's comments in the magazine interview.

The state Supreme Court appeal was filed after a Reno judge ruled in April that Joel didn't commit slander or defamation although his remarks appeared to vilify Powers.

Maestro Laughs, Weeps At Tribute

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Nearly 12,000 people and dozens of famous friends sang "Happy Birthday" to Leonard Bernstein in a four-hour tribute that left America's most famous living conductor, usually loquacious, nearly speechless.

Bernstein chuckled and wept as friends, including actress Lauren Bacall and composer-producer Quincy Jones, recalled the conductor-composer's life and work at Thursday night's 70th birthday gala at the Tanglewood music festival.

But words almost failed the maestro when he was pulled to the lectern for the finale.

As hundreds of performers and the audience of 12,000 stamped their feet, Bernstein shook his head "no."

He grabbed the microphone, said, "As Victor Borge would say ..." then let out a wail characteristic of the comic pianist.

Most of the audience and 250 performers then sang "Happy Birthday" to Bernstein before he walked offstage ahead of Bacall, Jones and other celebrated pals.

The Berkshire Hills gala was billed as one of the music world's great events. The master of ceremonies was Beverly Sills, the former diva who is retiring as director of the New York City Opera in November.

"I love Lenny," she said. "The only thing I would not do for him is sing."

Besides the friends who volunteered their talents to honor Bernstein and benefit the music school where he cut his conducting teeth, performers, playwrights, poets and the New York Philharmonic — his old orchestra — videotaped birthday messages that were televised on huge screens at Tanglewood.

Story" to classical compositions like "Mass."

Borge praised Bernstein's flamboyance at the baton.

"A normal conductor comes in, bows, turns his back on the audience and that's it," Borge said. "With Lenny, he comes in, you're already smiling."

It was all in honor of a man who gained enormous popularity and fame with works ranging from Broadway classics like "West Side

ABC Special For Tuesday Studies Foster Care Crisis

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Kathy, a teen-ager who feels unloved and unwanted after growing up in a series of foster homes, sums up the circular problem of foster care more succinctly than an army of experts:

"I would tell the people that want to put their kids in foster care that they shouldn't do it, because they shouldn't have brung their kids into the world if they can't take care of 'em."

As described in ABC's documentary "Crimes Against Children: Failure of Foster Care," airing Tuesday, an overburdened bureaucracy is forced to make extremely delicate choices: try to keep the family together and risk further neglect, abuse, even the ultimate horror of a child's death? Or break up the family and consign the child to a life of shuffling among foster homes, where abuse is not unknown?

ABC previously examined the issue of foster care in 1979's "Nobody's Children." Since then, reports of child abuse have skyrocketed, and there are more unwed mothers and poverty-stricken families putting even more pressure on the system.

The documentary uses praiseworthy restraint; the stories of abused children, wrecked families and frustrated social workers need no embellishment. The reporter is Rebecca Chase. Av Westin is executive producer, Ray Nunn senior producer.

Take the story of Jesse, a neglected Houston infant who was placed in a loving foster home but returned to his mother and her new husband — an alcoholic with a history of child abuse — after they underwent counseling.

Not long afterwards, before a social worker could get the obviously battered 2-year-old out of the home, he was admitted to the hospital in a coma. Jesse's former foster mother, Sharon Wilkens, recalled visiting him at the hospital in hopes he could hear her. "We told him that we loved him, and that he hadn't done anything wrong, and that we were very sorry, we thought his new parents were going to be able to love him too, and that Jesus would be waiting to meet him."

Jesse never came out of the coma. On the other side are families torn asunder by hard times and put back together only after years of struggling through red tape.

Bright, articulate 12-year-old Boyd was not abused. His mother voluntarily gave up her children when she was hospitalized and couldn't care for them.

"My worst fear is never seeing my mother again," Boyd says. "The foster care people are trying to tell my mother that she's not good enough right now. She's good enough for me anyway."

It took five years for Boyd's mother to get her children back. Boyd, accompanied by his mother, testified before a congressional committee investigating foster care.

Some foster parents seriously abuse the children they are supposed to care for. One Chicago child was tortured to death by her foster parents after her case was lost in a bureaucratic maze and the couple moved her illegally to North Carolina.

There are also stories of social workers strapped by lack of resources. Jackie Gillard of Chicago must enter dangerous neighborhoods trying to track down many of the dozens of families she oversees, 90 percent of whom do not have telephones. She complains that her agency gets attention only when one of its failures makes the news.

The documentary concludes with more uplifting stories, most of them based on successful local programs — educating foster parents, keeping families together in times of trouble and helping grown foster children adjust to life on their own.

Most documentaries on social problems end with calls for more money. And obviously, money for more workers to ease caseloads would help enormously. But this is one problem that only human caring will eventually solve.

As Chase concludes, "The need for community involvement has never been greater. The system desperately needs more foster parents, adoptive parents, court advocates and just friends. How else are we going to put real caring into foster care?"

Vets Ask For Probe Of Fonda

CHICAGO (AP) — The Veterans of Foreign Wars rejected Jane Fonda's apology for her support of North Vietnam during the Vietnam war, and passed a resolution asking Congress to investigate the actress's "traitorous acts."

At their 89th annual convention Thursday, about 13,400 VFW delegates passed three resolutions by voice vote, one of which said the apology "is not enough to redeem the situation."

"The VFW is not insensitive to a sincere expression of contrition," the resolution stated, "but the VFW wants to be assured that the 'apology' is not simply a means of bolstering her sagging career and political fortunes."

The resolution said that in 1969, in a speech at Michigan State University in 1969, Ms. Fonda said "all of us should 'pray' to become communists."

"Does her 'apology' mean she also disavows her communist sympathies?" the resolution asks.

The resolutions accused the actress of committing "traitorous acts," urged veterans to ask Congress to investigate her actions during the war, and denounced "Union Street," a movie that stars Ms. Fonda and was partially filmed in Waterbury, Conn.

Ms. Fonda, an ardent opponent of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, took a highly publicized trip to Hanoi during the war and posed for pictures next to a North Vietnamese anti-aircraft gun.

Last June, at her request, she appeared on the ABC program "20/20" to apologize.

There was no immediate comment from Ms. Fonda or her representatives.

Rock Group Faces Suit Over Death

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — The Nevada Supreme Court has refused to drop the rock group Judas Priest from a lawsuit filed on behalf of a youth who killed himself and another who attempted suicide after listening to the band's music.

The heavy metal group's attorney contended the British band isn't subject to Nevada jurisdiction, but the state high court said Thursday that jurisdiction "is not unreasonable because the state has a strong interest in protecting its citizens from personal injury."

"While it is true that the members of Judas Priest will now be forced to defend a lawsuit in a country distant from their own, it is more equitable to place such a burden on them, and not the plaintiffs, because the band members consciously and deliberately chose to develop a worldwide market," the court said.

The case is scheduled to go to trial Oct. 10 in Washoe District Court in Reno. Attorneys are expected to seek millions of dollars in damages against the group, sued two years ago along with CBS Records after James Vance, 19, and Ray Belknap, 18, shot themselves two days before Christmas 1985.

The suit, filed on behalf of Vance, who survived, and Belknap's mother, Aunetta Roberson, claims the apparent suicide pact resulted from the lyrics of the songs on Judas Priest's "Stained Glass" album, particularly "Beyond the Realms of Death" and "Hero's End."

The suit also blames the alleged hypnotic effect of the music and the group's intentional cultivation of a cult following.

 North East South West
 1 ♠ 1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♥
 2 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass
 Pass Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠ Nothing at the table costs more points, or coin of the realm, than carelessness. On this hand from a rubber bridge game, South failed to take advantage of his spot cards, so he ended up failing in a contract that should have been brought home.

South's decision to bid game rather than three spades is commendable. First, a raise to three spades would have sounded competitive rather than based on values. Secondly, the king of hearts behind the overall is worth a full trick, making the hand strong enough to contract for game.

West led his top heart, East took the ace and returned the suit to declarer's king. Two top spades revealed the unhappy news that there was a sure trump loser and, therefore, a potential loser in each suit. Declarer had to find either a fortunate club position or an endplay if he were going to bring home his contract.

Without giving the matter much thought, declarer tried ace, king and another club. West won the eight and returned the jack, forcing declarer to ruff. Now declarer tried for the endplay by cashing the ace-king of diamonds and then tossing East on lead with a trump, but East had a diamond to cash for paid one.

Declarer should have paid more heed to the spots. Once East had dropped two club honors, declarer could almost have claimed his contract. All he had to do was return to hand with the ace of diamonds and lead a club up to the nine. If West follows low and the nine loses to the jack, the fourth club is set up for a diamond discard. And should East turn up with four clubs and has been indulging in some fancy falsecarding, you simply weren't making this contract anyway.

240 DL Sedan $17,585*

Look at it this way: You'll save $1000. And you'll get a car that comes with a history for safety and durability that's nothing short of legendary. As well as a three-year limited warranty that puts no limit on mileage.** And a free roadside assistance plan. But, if you prefer, you can spend the extra $1000, and get a car that doesn't come with any of that.

Oh what a feeling.
