PCMH Caters To Patients While Boosting Its Image

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Certainly the days when a doctor braved a stormy night to make a house-call are gone.

Health care today has taken on a face which would render it barely recognizable some 50 years ago. Vast and complicated changes have occurred in all areas of the medical industry.

One of the most interesting and relatively newest aspects of health care providers is the introduction of marketing efforts.

Before the 1970s, marketing was often associated with the distribution of consumer goods such as automobiles or toothpaste.

But the introduction of low-cost substitutes to hospital care, health maintainance organizations and pressures to stem the spiraling cost of insurance premiums have left many hospitals with empty beds.

In addition, hospital patients are staying for shorter periods of time.

To remain competitive, many hospitals decided to adopt a more business-like approach to providing health care. Today virtually every hospital and health organization has a marketing department.

According to an article in a recent issue of Hospital magazine, the typical hospital last year spent $14,000 to $29,000 on market research. The industry as a whole spent about $50 million.

The average hospital, the magazine reported, spent $158,300 for advertising in 1987.

Why does a hospital need to market itself? Doesn't it exist simply to provide health care to those who need it?

"We market to let the public know what services we provide," said Dave McRae, senior vice president at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Another of the reasons for hospitals to market is the increasingly competitive nature of the health-service industry, according to Beth Nelson, marketing director for the Pitt County hospital.

"Nationally, hospitals are finding the need to advertise because there is less business to go around," she said. "In most areas there are several hospitals. Federal government reimbursement has been reduced dramatically.

"Many hospitals are closing. They see marketing in terms of advertising to be one way to hopefully maintain some portion of their patient base," she added.

"Health care, just like any other type of business, as a result has become more competitive."

But Mrs. Nelson said the aggressive stance taken by many hospitals seeking new patients for primary care is not the case at PCMH.

"Our philosophy is that the best place to get primary care is in your hometown hospital," she said, "and if you need something that you can't get in your hometown hospital, say MRI (magnetic resonance imaging), we want people to come here."

McCrae agreed that the hospital's marketing is not aimed at encouraging competition for patients who would otherwise seek treatment at smaller, adjacent hospitals.

"PCMH serves as a tertiary — third level — care hospital for eastern North Carolina," he said. "It does not compete with other hospitals for primary and secondary care services.

"We do not market to try to attract patients here if it makes sense for them to go to other hospitals. We just don't have the need to do that," he said.

"We encourage them to use their community hospitals or go to other medical centers comparable in scope to ours when that's appropriate."

McRae said Pitt Memorial's activities in public relations and in actual services are often designed to enhance the service and public image of the other hospitals in the region.

He cited as an example a recent cardiac-care training program for Craven County Regional Medical Center held especially for professionals in that field.

Because PCMH is the only tertiary care hospital in eastern North Carolina, Mrs. Nelson says it is not necessary for the hospital to advertise its services like hospitals in competitive markets.

"I think, by and large from my perspective, this hospital will continue to grow without needing to do any of that kind of advertising and marketing," she said.

"I guess you would say that we consider ourselves competitors with hospitals like Norfolk General in Norfolk, Virginia, Duke in Durham, and Memorial in Chapel Hill."

One example of PCMH advertising was a $1,280 color ad inside the back cover of North Carolina magazine, a publication of North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry.

The ad features a photograph of an infant connected to sophisticated monitoring equipment while being handled by two PCMH staff members. The phrase, "Progress is Our Inspiration," is prominently displayed.

Mrs. Nelson said such advertisements are rarely placed by PCMH. She said that ad appeared primarily because the issue featured an article on Greenville and eastern North Carolina.

"We want to inform the people of this region what we have here in a medical center as well as those decision-makers who might be considering a site for relocating their company or organization," she said.

But while PCMH officials say marketing efforts aren't geared to attracting new patients, other hospitals in larger markets are waging aggressive marketing efforts to draw patients and their subsequent flow of dollars.

The Patients Know Best

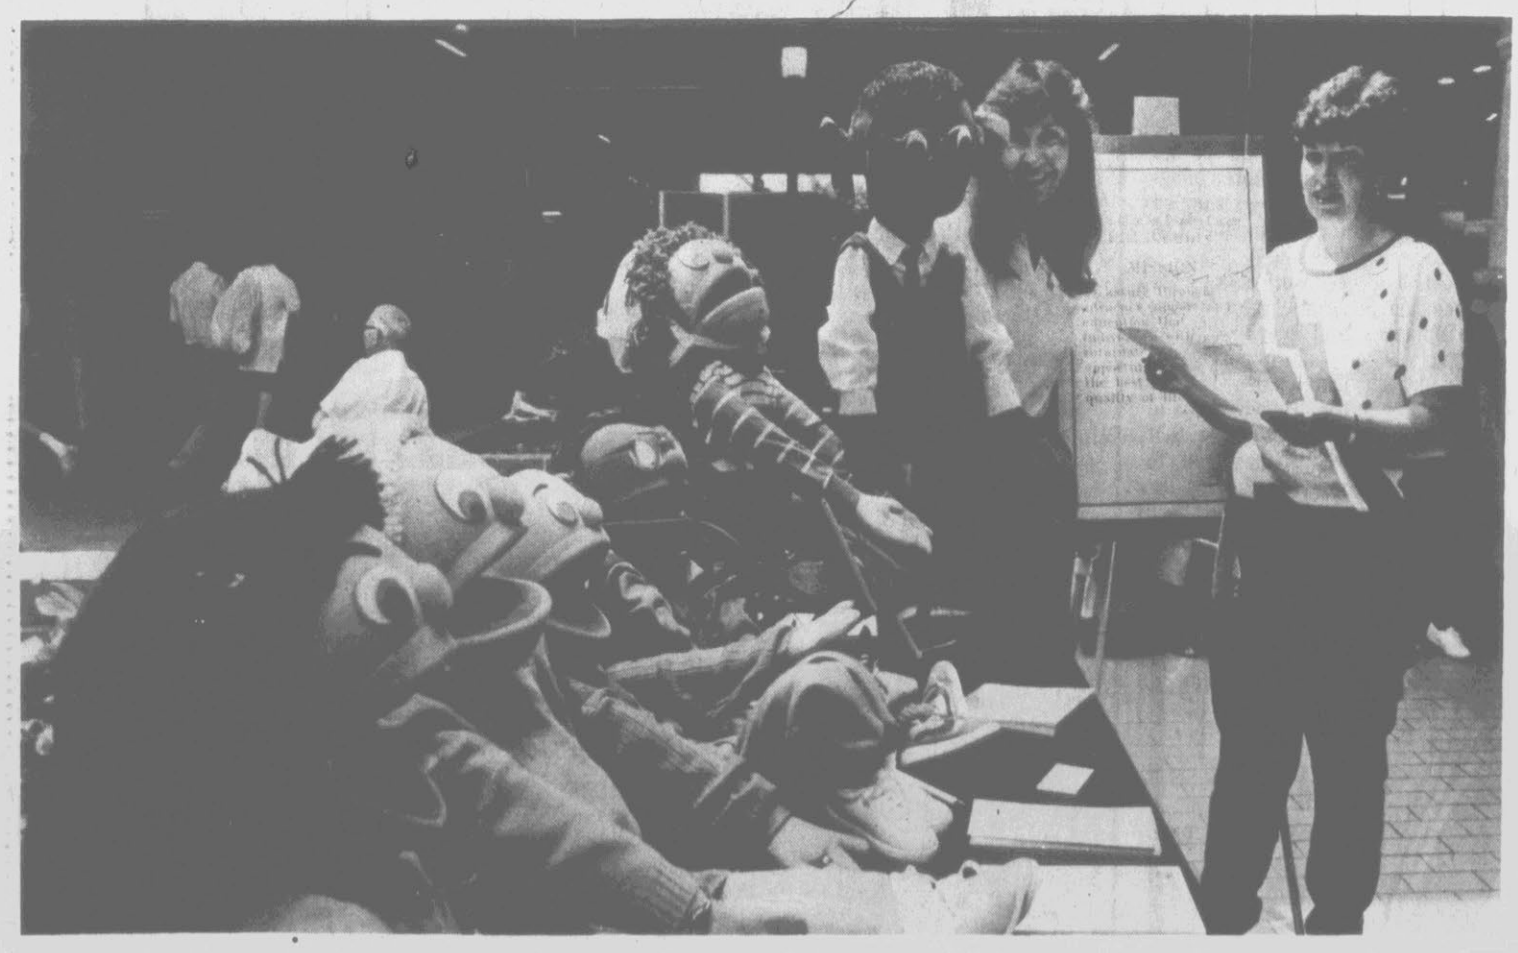

Mention Pitt County Memorial Hospital, this community's single largest employer, and one might first think of nurses running through hallways.

Or a doctor writing a prescription, or a cafeteria worker preparing the luncheon stew.

All these, of course, are important functions of Pitt Memorial. But there is one other which may not spring to mind.

Garrett, Dupree Face New Vote

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

The State Board of Elections has invalidated the results of the May 31 Democratic primary runoff between D.D. Garrett and James H. Dupree, calling for a new election to be held as soon as possible.

The decision was based on the finding that 15 unaffiliated or Republican voters cast ballots in the run-off election, which Garrett apparently won by two votes.

"It was a tough call, but we feel it was the right thing to do," board Chairman Robert Hunter Jr. said Friday following the decision. "We decided to toss it back to the voters."

"I'm very pleased with the decision," Dupree said Saturday morning. "I'm comfortable that they made a right decision; a good decision, in my opinion."

Dupree originally contested the results of the run-off, citing irregularites in the way the election was conducted. The Pitt County Board of Elections decided June 21 that the irregularities were significant enough to affect the election, and it was later discovered that 15 votes had been cast improperly either by unaffiliated or Republican voters.

The state board's decision came after an investigation by the county board into the illegal votes. The state board could have decided to award the election to Garrett or force the 15 ineligible voters to reveal their votes, both decisions Garrett's camp would have preferred.

Garrett was informed of the decision Saturday morning by a reporter. He said he had left Greensboro Friday before the final decision was handed down.

"I will need to talk to my attorney on it (the decision) and I will need to touch bases with some of my local advisers before I make a decision on what we plan to do," he said.

Later Saturday, Garrett said he still was not sure what the next step would be.

"I suppose they (the board) did what they had to do," he said. "I haven't fully decided yet whether I'm going to accept the second election or if I'm going to take it to the (N.C.) Supreme Court."

While Garrett would not comment on the propriety of the decision, he said he wasn't sure if it fitted his case. "Because," he said, "I think I've already won — as a matter of a fact, I know I have."

He said his attorney, David F. Kirby of Raleigh, left town following the hearing and that he had not consulted them as of Saturday concerning the possibility of his appeal.

Margaret Hardee, supervisor of elections in Pitt County, said Friday the board would schedule a new election "as soon as possible."

"I guess we're just in a holding pattern right now to wait until they set the new date, and then I guess it's the campaign trail for me," Dupree said.

'We Shall Overcome' Rings Again As Thousands Recall King's Oration

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of thousands of civil rights marchers tried to recapture the spirit of Martin Luther King on the 25th anniversary of his "I Have a Dream" speech Saturday with warnings that the struggle to fulfill King's dream of equality is far from over.

Singing "We Shall Overcome," demonstrators led by Jesse Jackson, Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis and Coretta Scott King, widow of the slain civil rights leader, marched from the Washington Monument to the Lincoln Memorial waving signs and banners in the hot midday sun.

U.S. Park Police estimated the crowd at 55,000 people, far fewer than the 250,000 who thronged the National Mall for King's famous oration climaxing the March on Washington on Aug. 28, 1963, a crowd that was equalled five years ago at a 20th anniversary march.

Dukakis' appeal to banish all forms of racism and discrimination was greeted warmly, but it was Jackson — his former rival for the Democratic nomination — who got the biggest cheers of the day with a scathing attack on Republican nominee George Bush.

"George Bush is not in Washington today," Jackson said to a roar of approval. "He must not be here for the Inauguration next January."

The civil rights activist said that a quarter-century ago, "we looked forward to new frontiers" under President Kennedy.

"Today, Reagan and Bush attempt to return us to an old fortress," he said. "They are trying to rebuild old walls. They have fought to crush the dream."

Jackson made no mention of the Dukakis or the Democratic ticket, but he appealed for his predominantly black audience to vote in the Nov. 8 elections.

"Hands that once picked cotton can now pick mayors, legislators, governors and presidents," he declared.

Others at the rally echoed Jackson's message.

"Twenty-five years later, we are here stronger and more determined than ever," said Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich.

Conyers told the demonstrators they were not marching so Jackson could be the next president, "but so that your son or daughter can be a future president of the United States."

Ethel D. Smith of Washington, who had marched in 1963, brought her grandson to the demonstration Saturday. Looking back, she said, "A whole lot of doors have been opened, but we've got a long way still to go."

Dukakis and Jackson met on the front ranks of the march for the first time since the Massachusetts governor defeated the civil rights activist for the Democratic nomination at last month's party convention in Atlanta.

Coast On Alert

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical depression 50 miles east of Miami drenched parts of the Bahamas Saturday, and hurricane experts predicted the poorly organized system would turn north Sunday.

Forecasters said East Coast residents from the middle of Florida to North Carolina should monitor progress of the system.

"If it stays close to the coast it's going to be difficult for it to become better organized than it is now," National Hurricane Center forecaster Gil Clark said. "The biggest threat is over the eastern Bahamas, where they have these squalls."

The hurricane center warned small craft in the central and northern Bahamas to stay in port, and the Bahamian government issued a tropical storm watch for that area.

Late Saturday, the system was moving to the northwest at 10 to 15 mph and was expected to gradually turn to the north over the next 12 to 24 hours.

Would Recognize Israel

PLO Ready To Proclaim New Palestinian State

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization is on the verge of proclaiming an independent Palestinian state that would recognize Israel's right to exist within pre-1967 boundaries, senior PLO officials say.

The PLO also will set up a provisional government to run the state in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, occupied by Israel since 1967, with Yasser Arafat's old guard sharing leadership for the first time with young militants in the territories, the officials say.

"We have the people and we have the land. With the declaration of our government, we would have fulfilled all the prerequisites for an independent state," chief PLO spokesman Bassam Abu Sharif said last week in a telephone interview from Baghdad.

Recognition of Israel would challenge the United States' refusal to talk to the PLO. Washington has said it would deal with the group only when it formally accepted the existence of a Jewish state and renounced terrorism.

But whether PLO recognition of Israel would signal a breakthough in Middle East peace efforts is highly questionable, at best. Israel has said it will not accept an independent Palestinian state on its doorstep. It refuses to negotiate with the PLO, which it views as a terrorist group.

The provisional government is expected to be announced when the 450-member Palestine National Council, a kind of parliament-in-exile, meets in Algiers, Algeria.

Palestinian leaders agreed to hold the meeting, originally set for Sept. 20, sometime "after September," said Salah Khalaf, second-in-command to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat. He said the delay will give the PLO leadership time to "crystallize a clear and firm vision and define the steps it will take."

The PLO, encouraged by some Arab governments, has long considered forming a government-in-exile, an idea given fresh impetus by the 8-month-old uprising in the occupied territories.

PLO officials said the difference between a government-in-exile and a provisional government is that the former would involve only PLO leaders, while the latter "will include known PLO figures and leaders from inside the occupied territories."

The inclusion of the young Palestinian militants is an acknowledgment by the middle-aged men who have long run the PLO that the rebellion in the West Bank and Gaza has breathed new life into the Palestinian struggle.

The uprising also produced a new generation of Palestinian figures who have long been frustrated with Arafat's failure to achieve a homeland and who could eventually challenge his authority.

More than 250 Palestinians and four Israelis have been killed since the uprising began Dec. 8.

The PLO move is a direct result of Jordanian King Hussein's abrupt decision last month to sever Amman's administrative and legal links with the West Bank, which Jordan has run with the tacit agreement of the Israelis.

Hussein's action challenged Arafat and the PLO to take responsibility for the West Bank and declare an independent Palestinian state.

"We're capable of filling any legal or adminstrative vacuum created by the Jordanian decision," Abu Sharif stressed.

The PLO announced last week it would pay the salaries of 21,200 officials and teachers who were laid off by Amman.

Asked if the PLO had secured enough international backing for a provisional government, Abu Sharif said: "The countries that will recognize our government will be more than those that recognize Israel."

The PLO is recognized as a liberation movement by 115 countries. Senior PLO officials, including Arafat, have been touring Arab and European capitals to lobby support for a provisional government.

Salah Khalaf, a senior Arafat lieutenant and a veteran hardliner, said this month in Vienna that the proclamation of a Palestinian state "will certainly come this year."

Asked if the state would recognize Israel, he said: "We're realistic. Israel is there. It exists as far as the political reality is concerned."

He earlier told France's Journal Du Dimanche weekly that the state would recognize Israel.

The new direction in PLO thinking emerged earlier this year in a document signed by Abu Sharif, one of Arafat's closest aides, which advocated recognition of Israel and a "two-state solution" — an independent Palestinian state existing alongside Israel.

Arafat cannily kept his options open by not endorsing the document publicly. But the document's emergence raised hopes that a new political awareness was creeping into Palestinian thinking.

A Palestine National Council committee drafted a comprehensive political program for a provisional government during an Aug. 10-12 meeting in Baghdad and the program is now being debated by the PLO's 15-man Executive Commitee, the decision-making body.

Abu Sharif said the document is based on the U.N. General Assembly's Resolution 181 of 1947, which partitioned Palestine into Jewish and Arab states.

Endorsement of that resolution is, in effect, recognition of the Jewish state within pre-1967 boundaries.

Palestinian hardliners have opposed the idea of a government-in-exile or a provisional government, arguing that would dilute the PLO's status as a liberation organization committed to armed struggle.

But one key opponent, George Habash of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, declared in Algiers this month that it was now time to form a government to run the affairs of the 5 million Palestinians inside and outside the occupied territories.

Inmate Carves Fake Gun From Soap Bar, Escapes

CHICAGO (AP) — Police searched Saturday for an inmate wanted on murder charges who escaped from jail using a "John Dillinger special" — a fake gun carved from a bar of soap that fooled a guard.

Victor Thomas, 27, told Cook County Jail officials that he was ill and wanted to go to Cermak Memorial Hospital, which is connected to the jail by a tunnel, said Robert Glotz, assistant director of the county corrections department.

In the basement of the hospital, the inmate pulled out a weapon made of soap and threatened the unarmed guard escorting him, Glotz said.

Thomas tied up the guard, then took his uniform, badge and wallet and walked out of the jail complex Friday, he said.

"People here are saying he got out using the John Dillinger special," said an officer in the Cook County sheriff's department, who spoke Saturday by telephone on condition of anonymity. "There are many ways out and he used the oldest ruse — the phony gun routine — and it worked."

"It was quite a work of art," said the officer, describing the soap-bar gun. "It was black with some light blue highlighting — probably made with a marker pen — it was approximately the size of .25-caliber automatic pistol with a delicately carved barrel, grooves and a trigger guard."

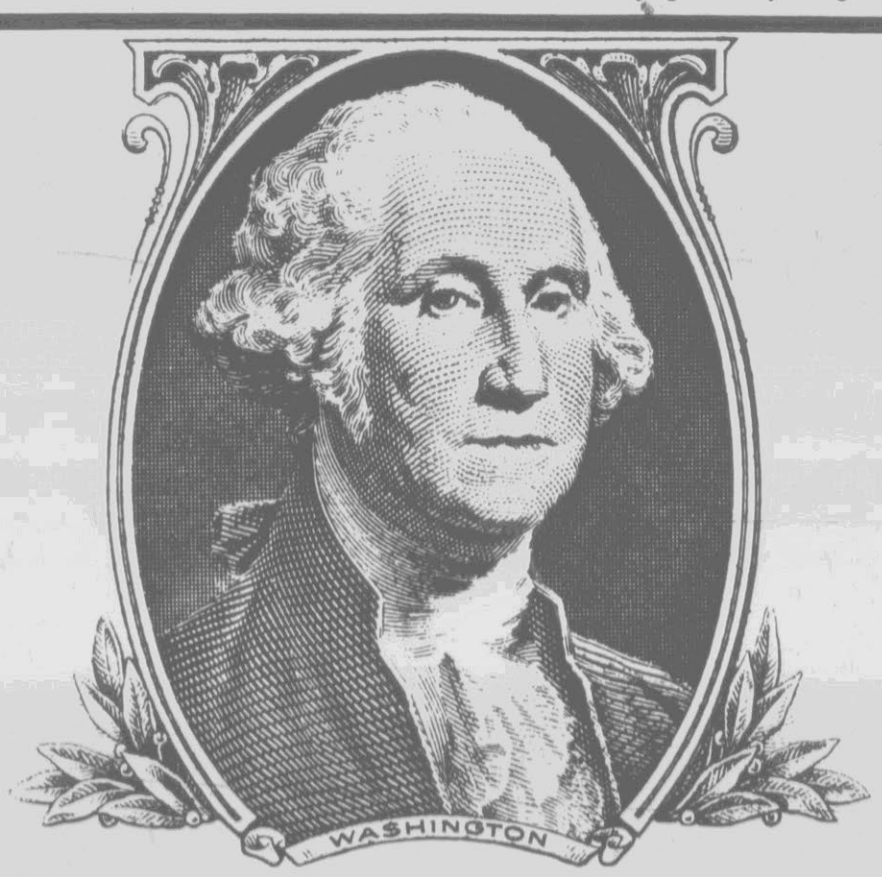

According to legend, Dillinger escaped from a jail in Crown Point, Ind., in 1934 after brandishing a fake gun that he carved out of wood. The legend lives though it later was revealed Dillinger accomplished the escape with a real .45-caliber automatic.

Glotz said Thomas had been in jail for a year on three armed robbery charges. His soap gun was recovered a block from the jail.

Thomas was in jail on three counts of armed robbery, police said. He also is wanted in California for the March 3, 1987, slaying of three alleged drug dealers who were strangled or stabbed to death in the Los Angeles area, police said.

About 40 officers were looking for Thomas on Saturday, interviewing acquaintances and checking areas Thomas has been known to frequent, said police Sgt. Tom Whalen.

According to the "Encyclopedia of American Crime," the story that Dillinger used a wooden gun to escape was a hoax to cover up the fact that the real gun had been smuggled into the jail by an Indiana judge bribed by Dillinger's lawyer.

Juror's Delay Brings Fine For Contempt Of Court

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Grimesland man who failed to show for jury duty Thursday morning was found guilty of contempt of court Friday and fined $50.

Superior Court Judge Paul M. Wright of Goldsboro said Tony Hamilton, a self-employed carpenter from Grimesland who was sitting on a jury scheduled to begin deliberations, did not make a sufficient effort to get to court in Greenville.

Wright gave Hamilton until 5 p.m. Monday to pay the fine.

Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood told Wright at the contempt hearing Friday that most people summoned for jury duty take the job seriously and perform well, and Hamilton should be found guilty of contempt.

"Every week we have 60 to 70 jurors who are summoned and appear up here," Haigwood said. "It's unusual for something like this to occur, frankly."

The judge said he liked to give jurors the benefit of the doubt, but Hamilton did not try hard enough to get to court on time.

"We try criminals every day, and we don't want to put jurors on trial," Wright said.

Wright said he had not found anyone guilty of contempt in four years.

Hamilton did not receive a jail sentence or a stiffer fine because he did call a deputy sheriff and say he could not find a ride to court, Wright said.

Wright could have sentenced Hamilton to 30 days in jail, ordered a fine, or both.

Haigwood estimated it costs about $1,000 a day to operate Superior Court, and Wright told Hamilton the two hours he caused to be wasted cost much more than $50.

Hamilton was sitting on a case that began Wednesday afternoon, and the jury was to have begun deliberations Thursday at 10 a.m.

But Hamilton derailed the case by never appearing Thursday morning, leaving prosecutors in a lurch and sending court clerks and sheriff's deputies on a two-hour search.

Hamilton told Wright he thought he could find a ride to court, but "time kept slipping by" and before long it was close to noon.

Hamilton had telephoned Deputy Sheriff Robert Hudson, a bailiff in Superior Court, at 9:15 a.m. Thursday saying he had no way to get to court.

Hudson said he told Hamilton he could go to jail for not appearing for jury duty, and he told Hamilton to stay at home and call the sheriff's department to get a deputy to give him a ride.

But Hamilton left home and did not call the sheriff's department until 11:40 a.m., more than an hour after the remaining 11 members of the jury had been excused until the afternoon session of court.

A deputy picked up Hamilton and took him to court, and the case was completed Thursday afternoon.

The delayed case — involving Johnny Baker, 31, of Washington, N.C., who was charged with resisting arrest and failing to stop for a blue light and siren — ended in a mistrial, but not because of Hamilton's absence.

One juror said she saw Baker driving a truck in Greenville the morning of the sentencing, and two other jurors said that would prevent them from deciding the case fairly, therefore Wright declared a mistrial.

ECU Surprised By Growth

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University, which for many years was the fastest-growing public college or university in North Carolina, has decelerated its rate of growth to a steady, sustained enrollment gain that has now climbed to 15,583 students.

The fall semester enrollment is above 15,000 students for the first time at the state's third largest university. And cracking the 15,000 mark by 583 students this fall surprised ECU officials.

Prior to announcement of the official on-campus enrollment, university officials anticipated 15,300 or about 418 more students than a year ago. The actual increase was 701.

"We're delighted with this record enrollment which exceeds our expectations," said Dr. Richard R. Eakin, ECU chancellor. 'I am especially pleased with the confidence that the students and their parents have expressed at East Carolina.

"This continuation of 12 years of enrollment growth at the university is most encouraging and reflects well on the work of our faculty and staff and the quality of our programs," Eakin said.

Of the total, 12,989 ECU students are undergraduates and 2,594 are graduate students.

ECU stopped accepting freshman applications from out-of-state applicants last Feb. 1 and from North Carolina applicants on March 15, which was the earliest cut-off of applications in the school's history.

Scout Recruiting

Representtives of the Pitt County Boy Scouts of America will visit schools through September to recruit boys in grades one through seven. Leaders of local troops will be on hand at centrally located schools throughout the county to sign-up boys, but there will be a need for some adult volunteers.

Adults must accompany their children to the schools for night meeting.

Students from W.H. Robinson and A.G. Cox will meet at A.G. Cox Sept. 8 at 7:30 p.m. Meetings will be held at Stokes Elementary Sept. 12 and on Sept. 13 at Grifton Elementary, both at 7 p.m.

Students from South Greenville, Sadie Saulter and Greenville Middle schools will meet at Greenville Middle Sept. 15 at 7 p.m. Students from Bethel Elementary will meet there Sept. 19 at 7 p.m.

Students from Eastern Elementary, Elmhurst Elementary, Trinity School, St. Peter's Catholic School and Wahl-Coates School will meet at Wahl-Coates Sept. 22 at 7 p.m.

A meeting will be held Sept. 26 at 7 p.m. at Ayden Middle School for students of that school and Ayden Elementary. Another meeting is tentatively planned for Chicod School Sept. 29 at 7:30 p.m.

Swine Show

Phillip Rowan, agricultural extension agent, said the show will offer a $500 premium to the grand champion hog. The reserve champion will receive $250 and other swine will receive a $25 exhibition fee.

Entries must be weighed in from 8 a.m. to noon on Oct. 3. Show weights are 200 to 250 pounds.

The show is open to adults and youth. Entries are not limited to Pitt County residents, but there is a limit of three entries per person.

For more information about the market hog show or other livestock entries at the Pitt County Fair, call Rowan at the Agricultural Extension Office, 830-6373.

Lloyd Reunion

The reunion of the family of John and Mary Lloyd planned for Sept. 4 has been rescheduled for Aug. 13, 1989, according to Faye Hathaway.

Ms. Hathaway may be reached at 355-6444.

Literacy Day

Greenville Mayor Edward E. Carter has proclaimed Sept. 8 to be "Literacy Day" in the city.

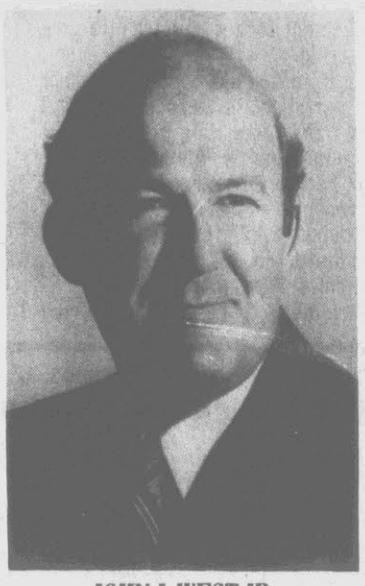

"People in Greenville and throughout America should be encouraged and motivated to read and acquire the basic skills necessary for responsible citizenship," Carter said.

Literacy Fair

Pitt Community College will sponsor an Adult Literacy Awareness Fair Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Everett Building on the PCC campus.

The event will provide opportunities to learn about literacy services at PCC and other services. Representatives of local industries will be present to discuss jobs available in the area and the basic skills required to qualify for the jobs.

United Way Fills Cabinet Posts

John J. West Jr., Joe Gantz, D. Jordan Whichard III and Jim Phillips have been named to the Campaign Cabinet for the 1988 United Way Campaign.

West, senior vice president and city executive for Wachovia Bank, will serve as vice chairman for this year's campaign.

He is also a member of the United Way Executive Committee and serves as the organization's treasurer. West is also a member of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, of which he is an executive committee member and board member. He is vice chairman of the chamber's Economic Development Division, and a board member of the Boys Club of Pitt County.

As vice chairman for the United Way campaign, West will assist campaign chairman Mac McCarley in divisions of the campaign.

Gantz, president of Empire Brushes Inc., will manage the leadership giving segment of the campaign.

Leadership giving was established in 1986 with the J. Curtis Hendrix Society and continued in 1987 with the Dr. Ray Minges Society.

Gantz is a member of the United Way Executive Committee and serves as the organization's second vice president.

He served as campaign chairman in 1986 and assistant campaign chairman in 1985.

Gantz is a member of the East Carolina Business Advisory Council, board chairman of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center and a board member of the Boys Club of Pitt County.

D. Jordan Whichard III, vice president and general manager of The Daily Reflector, is managing the United Way Loaned Executive Program.

In the loaned executive program, participating organizations "loan" management-level employees to the United Way to assist with United Way fund raising efforts.

A member of the United Way's Executive Committee and Allocations and Admissions Committee, Whichard served as the 1987 chairman for the Commercial Division.

He is also a board member of the Boys Club of Pitt County, Children's Services of Eastern North Carolina, and the Greenville Noon Rotary Club.

Jim Philips, employee relations manager at Yale Materials Handling Corp., will serve as training chairman for the campaign, a position he held in last year's campaign.

Phillips is a member of the United Way Allocations and Planning Committee and board of directors and he previously served on the executive committee.

Council Will Hear Annexation Views

Those in favor or opposed to the city of Greenville's proposed annexation of th Colonial Mobile Home Park and vicinity will have a chance to express their views and/or opinions on the matter at a public hearing to be held at 6 p.m. Monday in the council chambers at City Hall, 201 W. Fifth St.

Members of the Greenville City Council will be present to listen to concerns regarding the annexation, proposed to be effective Sept. 30.

The proposed annexation area involves approximately 218 acres located north of Greenfield Terrace Subdivision, west of N.C. 11 and U.S. 13 and south of Wellcome Middle School.

According to the city's annexation report, the area contains 274 mobile homes within Colonial Mobile Home Park; 26 duplexes in Colonial Village; two family-care homes; a private livestock yard; Greenfield Terrace Park, and a section of the right-of-way of N.C. 11 and U.S. 13.

The report indicates the area has 313 dwelling units with a total population of 1,017 at a density of 4.66 persons per acre.

Anticipated city expenditures to extend municipal services to the area in fiscal year 1988-89 are $178,268 while anticipated city revenues generated from the area during the same period are $141,568; a first year difference of $36,700.

Assistant City Manager Ron Kimble said $26,682 of those anticipated expenditures are for the purchase of capital items which include a $14,662 police vehicle.

Projected operating and personnel expenditures relating to the annexation include $90,930 for the salary, uniforms and training for six additional police officers; $34,261 for salary, uniform and supplies for three fire trainees and $23,695 for two additional publics works employees.

Kimble said, however, the city is currently negotiating fire service arrangements with the Staton House Fire Department for the proposed annexation area. He said differences in expenditures between city service and Staton House service for the area would be negligible.

The report also projects anticipated Greenville Utilities capital expenses for the annexation area to be $72,000.

Those expenses include construction costs for water mains, hydrants, valves and technical services.

Reunion

The Bethel Union School alumni will have its fifth school reunion Saturday. Edward Lewis, a former teacher at the school, will be the banquet speaker.

For additional information call Zeddie Hardy, 752-4250.

Reading Records

Children who participated in Sheppard Memorial Library's Summer Reading Club may pick up their reading records at their local public library. Children who have read enough books to earn certificates or blue ribbons may also receive them at their local library branch.

Mended Hearts

The Eastern Carolina chapter of Mended Hearts will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Gaskins-Leslie Building. The speaker will be Dr. Kathryn Kolasa of the East Carolina University Department of Medicine.

She will discuss diet, eating habits and proper nutrition for good heart health.

Budget

The Pitt Community College Foundation Board recently approved a budget with expenditures totaling $10,000 for the 1988-89 academic year.

The expenditures include $5,000 for new scholarships, $2,000 for instructional equipment, $1,500 for faculty and staff enrichment, $500 for minigrants for innovative projects and $1,000 for foundation operations.

The next PCC Foundation Board meeting was scheduled for Oct. 19.

South Greenville School Prepares For The Change To Kindergarteners

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Rebecca Oats gets a second year of challenge and an opportunity to grow as South Greenville School makes way for the little people.

This year, the school will teach kindergarten through fifth grades — a real change from its middle school days of teaching fourth through sixth grades.

"I'm really glad for the change," Ms. Oats, principal of the school, said. "It'll give me the opportunity to see what I'm made of. It'll give me the opportunity to see if I can really do the job."

Ms. Oats became principal of South Greenville last year, succeeding J.B. Smith, who currently is principal of E.B. Aycock Junior High School.

"Everyone knew what to do" last year to run the school smoothly but, with the new changes, "everybody has to ask questions," she said.

"There's been a curiosity," Ms. Oats said of summer visitors to the school. "Many parents want to see how we're going to make it a K-5 school after being 4-6."

Most of the changes in the school have taken place in the first wing as classrooms were renovated for kindergarteners, Ms. Oats said. Other big jobs were moving the materials for the primary teachers from other schools to South Greenville and also moving the cumulative folders of the students.

"We delivered 620 folders" to their respective schools, she said. "We wanted to make sure they were delivered, and we picked up ours."

In addition to the work in the building, the school grounds have been cleared of cement and have been leveled, and grass has been planted, Ms. Oats said. "We'll be looking for means and ways to get playground equipment that will go inside the fence," she said. Also, the Grounds Committee of the school's Parent Teacher Association has done some trimming on the grounds.

With 12 new teachers joining the five returning ones, "I felt good about the first day the teachers returned," Ms. Oats said. "But, I think jelling and coming together as a faculty will happen.

"I want the teachers to be involved in the management of the school, to be involved in the decision-making of what happens to kids at South Greenville," she said.

"Education is the 'in thing' for politicians and everybody but it doesn't really happen. I want to make it truly happen at South Greenville," Ms. Oats said. "All that we do will be for the kids, not necessarily the in-vogue types of things."

Ms. Oats said she's going to conduct miniworkshops with the teachers to discuss their teaching styles, their management styles and their communication with other people.

She also has a major goal when it comes to the students and their parents. "Some way, I want to visit the kids in their homes and talk to the parents. I want to meet all the parents in the school, and I want the parents to be involved."

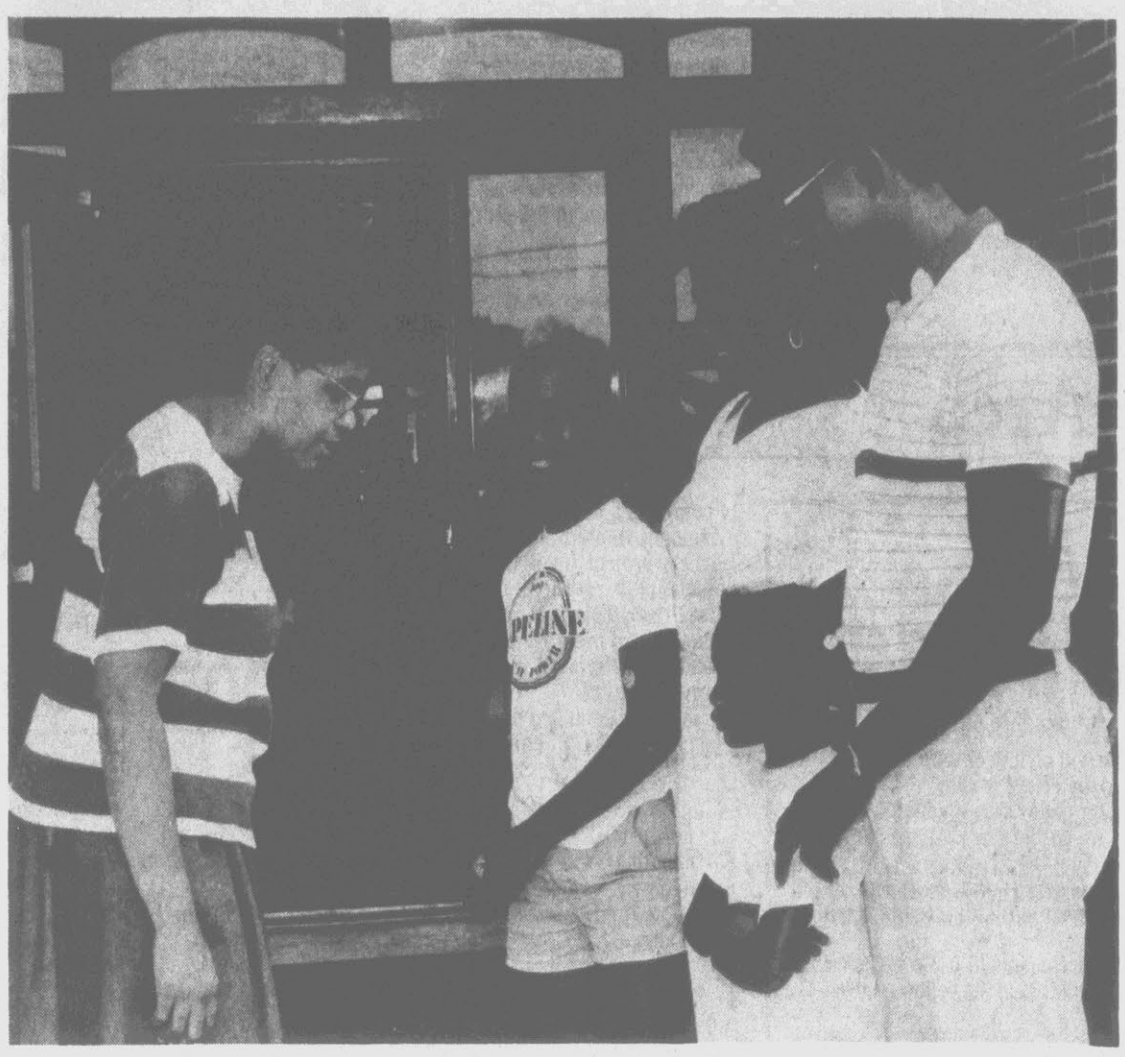

Ms. Oats said she also wants to keep the business community around the school updated on school activities. "I want to send the businesses a newsletter to keep them abreast of what we're doing at South Greenville."

The school celebrated its changes with a reopening reception Friday afternoon which included a ribbon-cutting ceremony and remarks by officials, including Pitt County Board of Education Chairman George Williams, Associate Superintendent Charle Ross, Greenville Mayor Ed Carter, state Reps. Ed Warren and Walter B. Jones Jr., state Sen. Tom Taft, and Phil Dixon, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Elmhurst and Sadie Saulter schools also will teach kindergarten through fifth grades this year. The schools each previously taught kindergarten through third graders.

W.H. Robinson's fourth graders of last year will remain at Robinson for the fifth grade as Robinson begins teaching kindergarten through fifth graders instead of kindergarten through fourth graders. Since fifth graders will not be moving from Robinson, A.G. Cox, which previously taught fifth through eighth grades, will only teach sixth through eighth grades.

Second Man Charged In Greene Murder

By The Associated Press

The second of two men who escaped Aug. 1 from the New Hanover County division of the state Department of Correction has been charged with murdering a man in Greene County on the day of the escape.

John McNeil, 23, of Snow Hill has been charged with murder and possession of a stolen car, Greene County Sheriff Early Whaley said.

McNeil escaped with Johnny Braswell, 24, of Walstonburg from the yard of the minimum-security unit in New Hanover County around 6 a.m. on Aug. 1. They were apprehended late that night in Greene County.

Braswell was charged soon after that with murder and with possession of a stolen car, Whaley said.

Dustin Scott Sosebee, 20, of Myrtle Beach, S.C., was found beaten to death in a wooded area of Greene County, the sheriff said. Sosebee apparently picked up McNeil and Braswell, who were hitchhiking in Myrtle Beach, he said.

A third man was arrested Aug. 1, after authorities found him driving a car registered in Sosebee's name. Matthew Worthington of Greene County is charged with driving without a license, Whaley said.

Worthington told authorities he had borrowed the car from McNeil and Braswell, who were staying with friends in Greene County, the sheriff said. McNeil and Braswell subsequently were arrested.

McNeil, who had been serving a prison sentence for larceny and for a previous escape, and Braswell, serving a sentence for forgery, are in Central Prison in Raleigh without bond.

Keynote speaker for the growers' meeting will be David Bacon, director of purchasing for RJR-Nabisco Planters LifeSavers Co., a major peanut product manufacturer.

Other scheduled speakers are James A. Graham, commissioner of agriculture; Dr. Durward F. Bateman, dean of the college of agriculture and life sciences at N.C. State University, and Dr. William H. Johnson, assistant director of the N.C. Agricultural Research Service at NCSU.

Scientists and extension specialists from NCSU will conduct field tours of peanut research in progress on the research farm. Topics include screening farmers' stock peanuts before grading, leafspot management, new peanut varieties and quality, and on-demand vs. preventative weed control.

Educational exhibits and displays by commercial companies will be located at the field day site.

Police Will Stop Unlocking Doors

Beginning Thursday, Greenville police will no longer unlock vehicles for those unlucky motorists who have locked their keys in cars.

Chief Jerry Tesmond said the change in policy was mandated by an increasing workload as well as concerns over liability for damage being done to vehicles in the unlocking process.

Tesmond said that in the event of an emergency, such as young children being locked inside a vehicle, the department will still attempt to unlock the car.

But at other times, Tesmond said, "citizens should use a locksmith of their choice whose telephone number in available in the yellow pages of the telephone book."

The police department will maintain a list of locksmiths who will be available on a 24-hour basis and, if requested, will advise callers of the next name on the rotation list, Tesmond said.

Adult Classes

Registration will begin Thursday for an adult basic education and adult high school class sponsored by Pitt Community College.

Classes will meet each Tuesday and Thursday from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at the Chicod Elementary School.

Classes in Ayden will be held Tuesday and Thursday from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to noon. A Tuesday and Thursday class in Ayden will meet from 9 a.m. to noon beginning Sept. 1. All classes will be in the old school building on South Lee Street.

Any adult 18 years of age or older who has not completed high school is eligible. The class is designed to teach the basic skills of reading, writing and math and to help students successfully pass the GED test which is equivalent to the high school diploma. To register for class, just attend the class. For more information call PCC Continuing Education, 756-3130, ext. 213 or 318.

Eagle Award

Robert Wesley Barnes, 18, of Greenville has earned his Eagle Award, the highest award offered by the Boy Scouts of America. Only 2 percent of all Scouts reach the rank of Eagle.

Barnes will be recognized in ceremonies Sunday at 11 a.m. at the First Presbyterian Church. He is a member of St. James Troop 340.

Each candidate for Eagle must earn 21 merit badges and successfully complete a community, church or synagogue-related service project. Barne's project involved the development of a resource room at the First Presbyterian Church.

Barnes is a member of First Presbyterian Church and will attend the Georgia Institute of Technology in the fall. He is the son of Donald and Peggy Barnes of Greenville.

Saturday Arrests

Kenneth Earl Moore, 26, of 1513 West 14th St. was arrested at 9 a.m. Saturday and charged with assault with a deadly weapon in connection with an incident late Friday night, according to Greenville Police Officer N.B. Rice.

Rice said Moore allegedly threatened Joseph Briggs of 1806 Kennelwood Circle with a hand gun following a dispute between the two at Park 4 parking lot at about 11:50 Friday.

Officer L.R. Kepler said Nadine N. Mewborn of Route 3, Box 254, Ayden, was also arrested Saturday. Mewborn was charged with filing a false report and resisting arrest at 12:12 p.m., Kepler said.

Two Charged In Larcenies

Greenville Police Officer J.G. Jenkins said Tito Reid, 16, of 205-A Eastbrook Apt. was arrested along with an unnamed juvenile Friday at 5:47 p.m. in connection with two larcenies from vehicles parked in the area.

Jenkins said Reid was accused of taking a $55 pocketbook, a $25 wallet and $78 in currency from a car parked at the apartments earlier Friday. In addition, Jenkins said Reid was accused of being involved in the theft of a $20 wallet and $13 cash earlier in the month.

Also on Friday, Officer J.E. Williams said Sheila Ann Coggins, 18, of 503-B Darden Drive was arrested at 7:30 p.m. in connection with a charge of obtaining property by false pretense from Anne's Temporaries on Aug. 12.

Williams also said David Earl Hines, 36, of 1908 Norcott Circle was arrested at 8:30 a.m. on a charge of communicating threats.

And Williams said Gary Etheridge Jr., 24, of 505 Forrestdale Drive in Atlanta was arrested at 9:30 a.m. and charged with writing worthless checks.

Williams also said Melvin Curtis Smith, 27, of 1493 Fleming St. was arrested on charges of breaking, entering and larceny at 10:30 a.m.

Officer M.A. Jordan said Kimberly Catrice Wilson, 17, of 2112 S. Village Drive was arrested at 2:38 p.m. in a case involving an assault on a child.

Jordan also said Levi Green, 57, of West Fifth Street, was arrested on a charge of second degree trespassing at 4:30 p.m. at the Trade Station at 912 W. Fifth St.

Officer N.B. Rice said Wayland Williams, 35, of 609 W. Fifth St. was arrested at 4 p.m. and charged with larceny from a person.

Officer C.S. Candler said James Wilbert McPhaul, 28, of 509-A Shepherd St. was arrested on a charge of second degree trespassing and communicating threats at the 500 block of Shepherd Street at 5:53 p.m.

Officer D.C. Johnson said Debra Allen Dunn, 32, of 312 Blount St., Ayden, was arrested at 8 p.m. in the theft of a $20 shirt earlier in the evening from Sears at the Carolina East Mall.

And Johnson said Dwayne Allan Smith, 18, of Route 2, Box 333 Greenville was arrested at 11:04 p.m. in an assault.

Research Is Prime To Marketing

Mrs. Nelson is not directly involved in heart surgery or any other medically technical procedure. Yet her area of specialty serves an important, but often misunderstood function at the medical center.

Mrs. Nelson is the hospital's director of marketing. She coordinates all marketing functions for the 550-bed regional health center. She also serves as a marketing resource for its management staff and a liaison with the East Carolina University School of Medicine's Office of Information and Publications.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill graduate first came to the ECU School of Medicine in October 1983 as an information specialist in charge of handling publication development and media relations for the medical school and PCMH.

Before arriving in Greenville, the Ahoskie native refined her communication skills working as a reporter at the Wilmington Morning Star.

When asked to define marketing, Mrs. Nelson paused for a moment, then replied, "Marketing is something which everybody seems to have a different idea of what it's about.

"From our perspective, marketing is just not advertising, it's not just public relations, it's essentially developing a system to determine what your customers — in our case our patients — want and developing a system to meet those wants and needs," she said.

Although the marketing department was not in place until 1985, Mrs. Nelson said marketing, loosely defined, probably began at the hospital when the doors first opened.

Her duties are varied, but she said her efforts concentrate primarily on one task.

"If I had to identify one thing that this department is built on, it's research," she said. "Finding out what patients want in a hospital, the types of services they feel best meet their needs in patient satisfaction."

She said many medical-care providers make the mistake of simply assuming what patients want.

"Our philosophy here is that you don't know what a patient wants unless you ask him or her," she said.

In order to acquire that information, Mrs. Nelson said, her office must employ scientific methodology.

"You can't just go out and pick out four or five patients every day and ask them what they want," she said.

Instead, Mrs. Nelson's office uses a patient survey.

"This is a document that was developed over a number of months with input from people from throughout the hospital," she said.

"We think this is the best instrument we could possibly develop for this hospital to solicit patient satisfaction and patient response."

The survey contains questions about matters such as the patient's nursing care, admissions, food service and financial counseling.

It goes to about 40 percent of hospital discharges, about 180 per week. It is mailed to the patient's home the day after the patient leaves the hospital.

Mrs. Nelson said about 30 percent of those surveyed respond.

"We have been very pleased with the response rate, because most hospitals across the country, if they get a 10 percent response rate to a survey of this type, they are thrilled," she said. "One of the goals for the year is to increase the response rate to 35 percent."

Mrs. Nelson said survey results can be used to identify problems as well as areas where the hospital is excelling.

"We take those results very seriously," she said. "I then write a letter to the patient indicating the problem will be looked into and patient representatives will be in contact with the patient within the next few days to further discuss the problem."

Among those who review patient-survey results, she said, are hospital President Jack Richardson and Dave McRae, senior vice president.

"The thing we want to leave with the people is that when they are responding to these things, somebody very important is listening to them — the president of the hospital," Mrs. Nelson said.

Identifying potential problems at PCMH is obviously important.

Mrs. Nelson said statistics have shown that a dissatisfied patient will tell 13 people about a negative experience at PCMH, while a person with a positive experience will share it with four others.

Besides identifying problems, those surveys also identify items patients believe the hospital lacks.

"One thing that people have complained about more than anything else in the past year, people would like to see cable TV in this hospital," she said. "I think it's fascinating that that is such a major issue with people."

She said the hospital has included money to install cable TV in the budget for the coming fiscal year.

"We are responding to people based on the results of these surveys," she said.

She said patients responding in the survey often mention the good work specific hospital employees have performed.

"In that case, we'll follow up on those, too," she said.

A mylar "Presidential Balloon" is often sent to persons identified in the survey for a noteworthy task or for "going the extra mile."

The balloon is often attached to a fruit or candy basket and delivered with a dose of fanfare from the manager and fellow employees. A card from Richardson which summarizes the employee's good deeds is also attached and a copy of the card is sent to the employee's work file.

"We want to give credit to those people who are performing in a way that is a model for their peers," Mrs. Nelson said.

Marketing Is Way Of Life

Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, said an increase in competition for patients began shortly after DRGs (diagnostic related groups) were established in 1984, fixing prices on most goods and services offered by hospitals.

Until then, he said, hospitals simply billed the government (in the case of Medicare or Medicaid), the insurance companies or the patient, and the bill was paid. Now, he says, there are limits on charges for services, and hospitals have to rely increasingly on greater volume to make a profit.

"Hospitals who are successful are those who market their services well," he added.

Liz McRoberts, spokesman for Wake Medical Center in Raleigh, said Wake's marketing efforts concentrate on selling obstetrics, since the hospital recently completed a two-story addition which includes one-room care for new mothers.

Ms. McRoberts said the hospital is specifically targeting women ages 18-40 in newspaper and radio advertising and has even bought space in magazines such as Good Housekeeping.

Most efforts, she said, focus primarily in Wake County.

"Rather than dilute our efforts, we have decided to promote one aspect of the hospital," she said of the "have your baby here" advertising philosophy.

Eston Clarke, director of public relations at McCleod Regional Medical Center in Florence, S.C., said that hospital's marketing program began in 1984 and the marketing staff developed a plan of action that year.

Clarke said the department conducts market research, advertises in print, television and radio, and works with the community in public relations efforts.

He also said the department works with media to develop stories and offers the media help by answering medically related questions.

"We certainly keep track of our market share — where our numbers are — and we use the data to make decisions on existing services and on the need for new ones," he said.

"The bottom line is maintaining our place in the market."

Clarke said the department's average budget is approximately $300,000 per year, an amount which helps the hospital in its quest to remain competitive in what has become a highly competitive industry.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony Thursday at the East Carolina University School of Medicine marked the formal opening of a new $2.1 million research laboratory building equipped for extensive research and training in biotechnology, a young, rapidly growing scientific discipline.

Officials from ECU and the North Carolina Biotechnology Center in Research Triangle Park used the occasion to pay special tribute to Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor of the ECU Health Sciences Division and medical school dean, who first proposed that the ECU School of Medicine become involved in biotechnology and pursued funding for the facility.

ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin praised Laupus for his "lasting contributions that have led to ECU's participation in a long and productive alliance with the North Carolina Biotechnology Center."

The new medical school facility will carry out a dual role of research by ECU faculty and training for doctoral students, postdoctoral fellows and, in partnership with the ECU biology department, undergraduate and master's degree students in a special biotechnology track.

Dr. Charles Hamner, president of the state biotechnology center, told the crowd of about 200 that through the university's training programs biotechnologists will become available to meet an expected demand by new industries that will settle in the state.

"Availability of students will naturally attract biotechnology industries to the Greenville area," Hamner said.

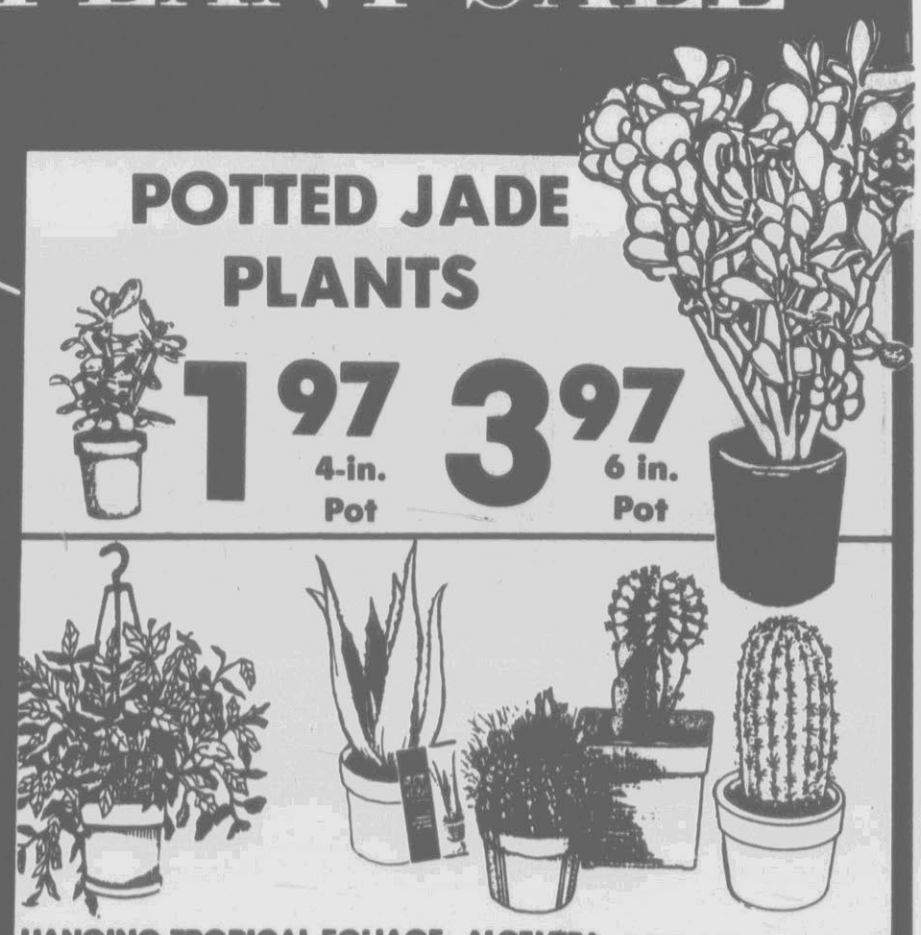

The biotechnology center, a nonprofit corporation that promotes the development and commercialization of biotechnology in North Carolina, contributed $158,390 to the ECU project for the purchase of sophisticated laboratory equipment.

The One Account℠ gives you more investment flexibility than any other checking account from any other bank in the state. There's no service charge or fees when you maintain a minimum monthly balance of $500. And you're allowed unlimited monthly transactions while earning attractive, market-competitive interest rates as long as you maintain a $1,000 monthly minimum balance.

You can open The One Account with any amount of money. If your monthly minimum balance is greater than $1,000, you will earn interest as follows:

4.66%	5.02%	5.37%	6.50%
with a minimum balance of $1,000	with a minimum balance of $5,000	with a minimum balance of $10,000	with a minimum balance of $50,000

Peoples Bank is the only bank in North Carolina that pays higher rates on higher balances in a checking account. Compare The One Account with any other account and you'll know this is the one for you.

DIMENSION TWO: CHECKING ACCOUNT ACCESSIBILITY
The One Account offers easy access to your money through regular checks and at hundreds of PAT and Relay℠ System automated teller machines throughout the Carolinas, Virginia and Georgia.

DIMENSION THREE: SECURITY
All One Account deposits are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, so you never have to worry.

THREE DIMENSIONAL BANKING, ONLY FROM THE ONE ACCOUNT
The combination of investment accounts and checking accounts backed with financial security makes The One Account the safest, most convenient way to make money on your money. Sign up today at any Peoples Bank office and enjoy unlimited checking, while you earn some of the highest interest rates in North Carolina.

Couple Sues Over Collider Testing

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — An Oxford couple has filed a $3,000 claim that Superconducting Super Collider opponents view as the first test of state promises to compensate residents for damage caused by the federal project.

Charles and Mary Elizabeth Crumpler filed the claim against the state, contending that sesmic testing for the super collider has damaged their well.

The couple wants the state to investigate their complaints — a process already under way — and reimburse them for water purification equipment and medical expenses.

The N.C. Superconducting Super Collider Commission, appointed in March by Gov. Jim Martin to represent potentially affected landowners in Durham, Granville and Person counties, will review the Crumplers' claim at its Sept. 27 meeting.

The commission's handling of the Crumpler's claim, super collider opponents say, will indicate how the state and federal government would treat them if the proposed $4 billion federal particle physics research center and its underground atom smasher are built in the state.

For 21 years, the Crumplers drank water from their well with no problems. But after nearby geological testing for the super collider, their water became discolored and oily smelling, unfit even for washing, the couple says.

Drinking it caused swollen kidneys and required medical treatment, they said.

In the spring of 1987, the state hired Law Engineering Testing Co. of Raleigh to prepare geological reports to be submitted to the U.S. Department of Energy as part a campaign to have the super collider built in North Carolina.

The testing included drilling 27 holes around the proposed collider ring. Explosives were detonated undergound and the shock waves measured to collect information about the types of underground rock formations in the area.

One test boring site is about 100 yards from the Crumpler's well. During the sesmic testing, an analytical instrument with a radioactive core separated from the cable that linked it to monitors on the surface. Efforts to retrieve it from the 209-foot hole failed.

The well boring was encased in concrete and sealed on June 2, 1987.

The Crumplers say they noticed a change in their household water a few days later. The water became cloudy and silty, with an oily or greasy texture. Dish cloths turned black after only a few uses.

The Crumplers also say they began suffering from swollen kidneys for the first time.

Officials with the state Radiation Protection Division quickly tested the Crumplers' water for increased radioactivity, but no increased levels were found.

The couple's expenses included doctor's bills, retaining an attorney, buying bottled water, long distance telephone calls to state offices in Raleigh and, eventually, $2,700 to have a water treatment system installed.

"After they dug that well, ours got messed up with acid in the water and everything. We had a man come from Greensboro and put four different containers down to clean the water up so we could drink it," Crumpler said.

He said the problems he and his wife had with their kidneys subsided after the filtering equipment was installed.

Coastal Communities Win Panel's Backing

RALEIGH (AP) — A governor's task force assembled to help guide environmentally sound development along the coast has chosen four communities that it will recommend for its pilot program.

The Coastal Initiative Blue Ribbon Commission reviewed 16 applications from coastal towns looking for technical and possibly financial assistance to bring tourism and development to their areas. The commission will recommend to Gov. Jim Martin that a task force pursue projects in Swansboro, Plymouth, Edenton and Columbia.

The communities were chosen on the basis of need, potential for success and a sense of focus in what the future should bring.

Alan Pugh, a commission member, said towns not chosen for the first phase of the project should not be discouraged.

"Not being designated doesn't mean your application was lousy, or that we're never going to talk to you any more," Pugh said Friday. "But we don't want to bite off more than we can chew the first time."

Greenville Residents Reap Many Benefits From H&R Block's Tax Course

Many successful Greenville tax preparers have begun their careers by enrolling in the H&R Block Income Tax Course. Others have taken the course to increase their ability to accurately prepare their own returns.

H&R Block, the nation's largest tax preparation firm, has been teaching income tax preparation for 22 years. This year the basic income tax course starts on September 8; morning, afternoon, and evening classes are available.

Students look at the course as a way to save money and make money by picking up or polishing up tax return preparation skills. The 13-week course progresses from simple to complex tax problems. Students learn through a combination of classroom discussion, hands-on problem solving and homework. This year's classes will introduce participants to the latest tax laws.

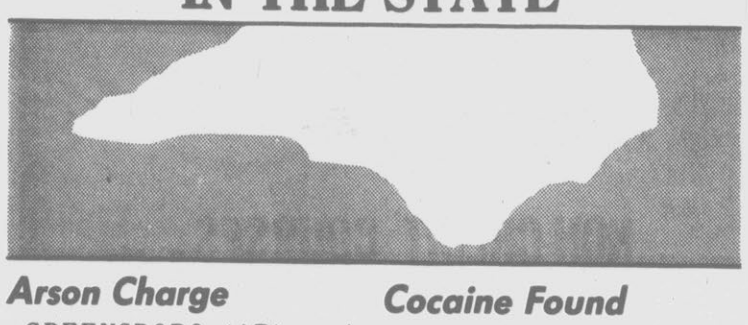

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many Block employees find the flexible scheduling a real benefit. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes all materials, supplies and textbooks. Successful graduates receive a Certificate of Achievement and 7.5 units of continuing education credit.

Additional information and registration forms are available from the H&R Block office at Buyers Market. The telephone number is 756-1209. An Early Bird Tuition Special is available to those who register by August 20th.

Arson Charge

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro man has been charged with attempted arson after trying to blow up the building of the company that fired him, officials said.

Steve Dewayne Neal, 25, was arrested on a charge of attempted arson by using an explosive and incendiary device.

Police said Neal placed a blow torch under a counter next to a large gas heater at Greensboro Refrigeration Services Inc. June 8. The end cap was taken off the heater's natural gas line and the vapor was turned on via a knob outside the buildling, said Det. M.D. Ingold of the Greensboro Police Department.

Ingold said a company employee found the torch before it could ignite the gas.

Drug Charge

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wilson roofing contractor was held on $1 million bond after his arrest Friday on cocaine trafficking charges, authorities said.

Donald Ray Pridgen, 50, was charged with two counts of trafficking cocaine and one count of conspiracy to traffic cocaine, Wilson County Sheriff Wayne Gay said. The owner of D.R. Pridgen Roofing Co. was held in the Wilson County Detention Center in Wilson.

Cocaine Found

WILMINGTON (AP) — A woman jogging on the south end of Bald Head Island, stopped to look at a pillowcase that had washed ashore and found eight soggy kilograms of cocaine.

Wrapped in layers of tape and plastic, the eight blocks have a total value of about $250,000 if sold by the kilogram and about $3 million if sold by the ounce, said Special Agent Ron Meyer of the Wrightsville Beach Coast Guard. A kilogram is equal to approximately 35 ounces.

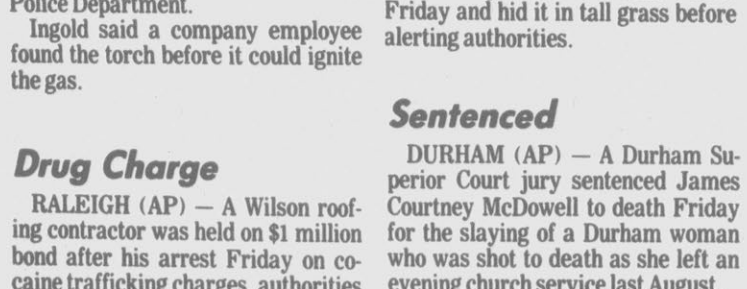

Ann Beray, a vacationer from Washington, told officials that she found the pillowcase around 7 a.m. Friday and hid it in tall grass before alerting authorities.

Sentenced

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham Superior Court jury sentenced James Courtney McDowell to death Friday for the slaying of a Durham woman who was shot to death as she left an evening church service last August.

McDowell, 20, convicted Tuesday of first-degree murder in the shooting death of Doris Gillie, bowed his head as the sentence was announced at about 11:30 a.m. Some of his relatives fled the courtroom in tears, while his father, D.L. "Bobby" McDowell, remained seated, noticably angered.

March

Jackson led the monument rally in chants of "Keep Hope Alive!" and Dukakis claimed that only a Democratic president could help meet the demonstrators' demands for full social and economic equality.

President Reagan, spending the day campaigning for Republican candidates in California, issued a statement asserting that since King led the landmark March on Washington in 1963, "America has made vast progress toward fully achieving Dr. King's dream of a color-blind society."

As a result, Reagan said, "America today is a freer land for Americans of all backgrounds."

He added: "On this anniversary, it is fitting that all Americans should give thanks for that progress and for the work of those who sacrificed so much to bring it about. And let us remember, as well, that freedom is our unending challenge and our continuing vocation as Americans."

But Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said the marchers are still "looking for jobs, looking for peace and looking for freedom."

Referring to a campaign dispute between Dukakis and GOP nominee George Bush, Rangel said freedom is not about reciting the Pledge of Allegiance. Rather, he said, "freedom means our children can get an education as easily as they can get cocaine in our schools."

From the Washington Monument the demonstrators retraced King's steps to the Lincoln Memorial, where Dukakis invoked King's "I Have a Dream" speech a quarter-century ago.

"Let us, in the words of Dr. King, 'transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood,'" Dukakis said to polite and friendly applause.

"We have to march not just so that some of us can reach the top of the hill," Dukakis said. "We must march until every American has reached the bright sunshine of opportunity, until we can stand, and stand together, in the golden glow of our shared dream."

"We must march until racism and anti-Semitism and discrimination of all kinds are banished from this land, until we have a Justice Department that understands the meaning of the word 'justice,' until we have a civil rights commission that believes in civil rights, and until we have a president who understands and respects the Constitution of the United States."

Bush and his running mate, Dan Quayle, did not respond to invitations to attend the rally, march organizers said. Bush was campaigning Saturday in Texas.

Jackson, in a speech on the eve of the rally, pledged to help get out the vote this fall for the Democratic ticket of Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen. "We do have a choice and a chance in November," Jackson said. "Dukakis and Bentsen represent an alternative, a chance to change."

At the time, the 1963 demonstration was the biggest ever held in Washington. The peaceful, orderly march — and King's galvanizing speech — are credited with spurring Congress to pass the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964 under pressure from President Johnson.

Mrs. King said the 1963 march "helped break the spine of racial segregation" in the United States, and that today "we still have a dream of a nation free of the cancer of racism."

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, recalled that King had said, "America has given the Negro people a bad check, a check which has come back marked 'insufficient funds'."

Lowery said the marchers had returned to cash that check.

"It's not that there are no funds," he said. "It's that your ways of accounting are faulty. We know the money is there. If you don't cash it now, we will be back again and again and again."

Recognition

East Carolina University will recognize and honor 447 veteran faculty and staff employees at an annual employee awards ceremony Sept. 19, which is State Employees Appreciation Day in North Carolina.

Thirty-six employees with 25 or more years of service will be introduced on stage at Hendrix Theater and will be presented with silver bowls. One employee, John H. Little of the university's power plant, is completing 35 years of service.

A total of 14 ECU employees have completed 30 years of service during the past year and 21 have completed 25 years.

GAO Says B-1 Bomber Fleet Faces Major Shortages Of Spare Parts

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major shortages of reliable spare parts are plaguing efforts to sustain operations of the B-1 bomber fleet, causing the Air Force to cannibalize grounded planes to continue flight training, the General Accounting Office said Saturday.

"The Air Force, even with its extraordinary efforts, has not been able to meet training and readiness objectives," the GAO said. "Reliability shortfalls — parts failing faster than expected — continue to be a major cause of spare parts shortages."

The Air Force took exception to the report, saying that while "challenges do remain," the service is "making steady progress in assuring adequate spare parts are available for the B-1B."

"The most important point is that the B-1B is performing its deterrent mission right now," said Capt. Jay DeFrank, an Air Force spokesman. "Today B-1B aircraft have trained crews and fly the necessary sorties to meet wartime requirements.

"The Air Force has steadily improved the planned rate of B-1B training flights and expects that trend to continue as the system matures and spare parts are delivered," he said.

The new GAO report comes just days after the Congressional Budget Office released estimates that making significant improvements in the B-1 program could cost up to $3.4 billion.

The budget office said those improvements, once made, would allow the bomber to fly to targets inside the Soviet Union, its original mission.

The reports mark the latest rounds in a long-running fight between the Air Force, which has defended the plane, and congressional critics who contend it may cost too much in trouble and money to improve it.

"It's very difficult to get a straight story out of the Pentagon about the plane's problems," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, who released the latest report on the aircraft from the GAO.

He noted that the Air Force disputed a GAO finding that the Strategic Air Command reduced the number of mission-ready crews available for the B-1 fleet because parts difficulties reduced the number of planes available for training.

"The Defense Department said the reason wasn't spare parts but the extensive modification of the B-1, Aspin said and added: "In fact, the GAO had training reports that cited spare parts shortages as the primary cause of the training limitation."

"Once again, the facts seem to contradict Pentagon assertions about the B-1," Aspin said.

Shortages of B-1 bombers ready to fly affect not only training but plans for placing bombers on alert to respond to a nuclear attack on the United States.

"Alert status is the bomber's reason for being," Aspin said. "If that's adversely affected — and it is here — then you've got problems."

The GA0 report said some problems have improved since its last examination of the B-1 bomber program last year.

"The Air Force's and contractor's attention to priority parts has resolved some parts problems, but a more systematic approach would ensure early and appropriate attention to the problem parts," the report said.

Two weeks ago, Aspin said it might be necessary to halt spending on the bomber rather than pay for expensive repairs.

The earlier Congressional Budget Office report on the bomber said problems center around electronic countermeasures, the complex, computer-driven system that defends the plane against attack as it flies on its mission.

The B-1 program was killed by President Carter in 1977, but resurrected by President Reagan four years later because Reagan said the plane was needed as a successor to the aging B-52.

The Air Force has bought 100 B-1s and will use the plane in conjunction with the so-called "stealth" B-2 bomber as the B-52 replacement in the nation's arsenal of strategic weapons. The B-2, nicknamed for its capability to evade enemy air defenses, will have its first public flight in November.

The last B-1 was delivered on April 30. The Air Force said the total cost of the program was $27.3 billion, but that figure doesn't include any improvements.

Glitches In Atom Smasher Bringing Frustration To Impatient Physicists

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Physicists wanting to "understand what's in the mind of God" are frustrated by glitches in a new $115 million atom smasher that may someday yield secrets about the makeup of matter and the birth of the universe.

"It's like you've been on a long trek to a mountaintop and thought you were going to reach it, but discover you're only on a ridge with another valley to cross," said physicist Michael Riordan, spokesman for the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, 30 miles southeast of San Francisco.

Construction was completed May 1987 on the taxpayer-funded collider, a 3-mile-long underground machine shaped like a tennis racket. That summer, it was expected to start its major task: mass-producing what are known as Z particles.

But numerous technical problems have prevented proper operation of the device, so "it's unlikely we'll make a Z particle before the end of the year," narrowing the U.S. lead in a race against European physicists to make new discoveries, Riordan said.

"People are frustrated," center director Burton Richter said last week. "There are thousands of components to this machine which all have to work at a high level of reliability to get everything to work properly. It's going to take months to get this thing in decent shape. I hope people don't get depressed waiting."

But Richter, who won the 1976 Nobel Prize in physics, declared: "We'll make this thing work. I have no doubt about it."

Z particles are so unstable they existed naturally only for an instant after the "big bang," the explosion scientists believe formed the universe up to 20 billion years ago.

By using the collider to manufacture Z particles and analyze how they decay into other particles, scientists can study the makeup of matter and the fundamental forces that governed the development of the universe.

"What we're really after is trying to understand what's in the mind of God," Richter said. "Something started all of this (universe). We call it the big bang, and we really don't understand what went on back then. We want to find out what are the most fundamental things and most fundamental forces in the physical universe."

Scientists hope collider experiments will bring them closer to developing and testing theories to explain why matter exists and how it developed from the big bang.

The collider is a daring attempt by American scientists to beat European physicists in making new discoveries.

Using unproven technology and old components, it cost only one-tenth as much as the conventional ring-shaped $1 billion Large Electron-Positron collider, which is due to mass-produce Z particles late next year at CERN, the European Laboratory for Particle Physics near Geneva. "We're concerned the more than one-year lead we thought we had over CERN is narrowing," Riordan said.

Stanford's collider is designed to produce Z particles by smashing together beams of subatomic particles called electrons and positrons. The beams will concentrate enough energy to power 30 homes on a point about one-tenth the width of a human hair.

Richter said Stanford already proved its approach works — and can serve as a model for future atom smashers — because "we can produce small beams, we can get them colliding so they don't wander around too much, and we can produce the (beam) intensities we wanted to produce."

But, he added, "The problem is we can't keep the whole thing going long enough."

So Richter, who labeled the machine a "miserable beast," and three colleagues assumed direct responsibility for further operation of the collider on Aug. 1. Since then, 100 people have worked around the clock on fix-it efforts, Riordan said.

He said as many as 20 flaws remain, but "there's no one major problem that defies solution."

Riordan said problems remain with transformers that provide power to magnets that direct the beams, and with old switches that sometimes stick as they regulate the flow of cooling water to the magnets.

One problem, which Riordan called overstated, was hot weather-induced malfunctions in computer microprocessors that control the beams.

"I'm a physicist myself and know what it means to have an experiment not work," said Dave Nelson, executive director of energy research at the U.S. Department of Energy, which provided the $115 million. "You're eating your fingernails and struggling to make it work. It's just not fun."

Newspaper Says Second Ex-GI Helped Bring Down Spy Ring

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The second former U.S. soldier implicated in a growing international spy scandal provided information that led investigators to crack the 10-year operation, a West German newspaper said Saturday.

West German prosecutors, meanwhile, said U.S. officials first informed the West Germans about the spy case a little more than two weeks ago.

The West Germany-based ring reportedly sold the Soviets secret information about NATO nuclear missiles, pipeline systems and troop strength. Prosecutors are predicting a lengthy inquiry to assess the damage to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Former U.S. Army Sgt. Clyde Lee Conrad, who allegedly led the spy ring, remained in prison Saturday, facing espionage charges carrying a maximum 10-year sentence.

Conrad paid another U.S. soldier "a five-figure sum" for obtaining secret NATO information, said chief West German prosecutor Kurt Rebmann.

The Bonn-based Die Welt newspaper said the second soldier, whose name has not been released, provided "the information that led to the arrest."

"Die Welt has found out that no charges have been filed against the (second) American citizen, although he is still in the Federal Republic (West Germany)," the conservative newspaper added. It did not elaborate.

Alexander Prechtel, spokesman for Rebmann, said he could not confirm or deny the report.

"The Americans first informed us about the suspicions against Conrad on Friday, Aug. 12," Prechtel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

He said U.S. investigators had been trailing Conrad long before then, but he said he did not know the source of the information that led investigators to suspect Conrad. West German officials arrested Conrad on Tuesday.

Although officials here say the second American was a soldier when he was recruited, The Washington Post quoted administration sources in Washington as saying he has since left the service.

Reports continued to emerge Saturday about Conrad's lavish lifestyle.

Gator Hunt Set

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — When 18th-century naturalist William Bartram explored Florida's St. Johns River he found alligators so plentiful "it would have been easy to have walked across their heads had the animals been harmless."

The reptiles' numbers and menacing jaws proved no protection against the human onslaught that pushed the Florida alligator to dangerously low numbers and onto the federal endangered species list by the late 1960s.

"There were times when the fate of the alligator didn't look too good," said Allan Woodward, head of the alligator research unit for the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

But now there are so many alligators, thanks to preservation and the animals' resilience, that a month-long alligator hunting season opens Thursday.

"I can say we've all been pleasantly surprised by how fast the gator has rebounded," Woodward said.

Florida's first widespread hunt in 26 years — small-scale experimental hunts have been held since 1981 — sets a maximum of 15 alligators for each of 238 license recipients who were selected at random from 5,000 applications.

It's not just sport. Alligator hides sell for $42 a foot and their meat brings about $5 a pound.

Four Die In Collision

Divers Rescue 18 Of 21 Sailors Trapped In Sub

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A diving bell carried 18 sailors to safety from a crippled submarine Saturday, one day after the vessel sank to the ocean floor after it was accidentally rammed by a Japanese fishing boat, Peru's navy said.

At least three other crewmen were believed still trapped inside the damaged submarine, which was in 96 feet of water, but authorities said the sailors were expected to be rescued Saturday night.

The submarine Pacocha sank after being accidentally rammed Friday evening by the Japanese fishing ship No. 8 Kyowa-Maru near the port city of Callao, the navy and the Japanese Embassy said.

Four people — the commanding officer and three junior officers — were killed immediately after the crash and three crew members remained unaccounted for, said navy spokesman Luis Castro.

Castro said 22 other crewmen were rescued as the vessel sank when they donned life preservers and jumped into the Pacific Ocean's frigid waters.

At least 21 others went down with the vessel and rescuers worked into the night and through Saturday to free them. By late Saturday, all but three had been rescued.

Official navy accounts have varied as to the number of crew members on board the vessel when it collided with the fishing boat, the number who have not been accounted for and the number believed trapped inside vessel.

Earlier, authorities said 52 sailors were on board the vessel when it collided with the fishing boat and that 24 were on board when it sank.

But Castro's most recent count indicated that 50 people were on board the ship and that 21 had been trapped.

On Saturday, rescuers used a diving bell that attached to the hatch of the submarine and began bringing crew members to the surface from the submarine.

The bell, linked to the surface ship by a cable, was bringing crew members up two at a time, Castro said.

Callao, Peru's largest port, is eight miles west of Lima. Port traffic was banned until Monday to facilitate rescue operations, the port authority said Saturday.

Helicopters and navy rescue boats could be seen maneuvering off the port, but officials refused to allow journalists into the area.

Castro said the 1,870-ton submarine, which was cruising on the surface toward the port, sank shortly after being rammed on the left stern side by the 412-ton, steel-hulled fishing boat.

There were no reported injuries on the fishing boat.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman who declined to be named said the U.S. Navy was sending a special team and equipment aboard three C-141 transport planes to assist in the rescue operations.

The U.S. equipment includes a diving bell designed for submarine rescues, the official said. The Peru navy did not describe the diving bell already used in the rescue.

Polish Government Under Fire Over Economic Woes

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist Party officials criticized the government of Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner on Saturday as Poland's leaders struggled to solve the economic problems that have bred widespread labor unrest.

Eleven strikes continued at mines, ports, shipyards and factories throughout Poland, but there were no reports of police attempts to dislodge the striking workers.

The Communist Party's 230-member Central Committee met on Saturday and several delegates lambasted the government's handling of Poland's dire economic problems and the labor unrest.

Messner, prime minister since 1985, acknowledged the criticism in a speech in which he reviewed his government's performance and stressed its plans to improve the economy, the state news agency PAP said.

In opening remarks to the party meeting earlier, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski said that the communist government would undertake a "self-critical analysis" of the problems behind the latest wave of strikes in Poland.

Messner, as head of the government, oversees the various ministries and is theoretically responsible for government performance. But ultimate power rests with the Communist Party led by Jaruzelski.

PAP said the party plenum would continue on Sunday.

On Saturday, the government was attacked by a series of committee members as ineffectual. Some of the sharpest criticism came from Politburo member Alfred Miodowicz, leader of the official trade union alliance OPZZ, which was set up after authorities crushed the Solidarity union in 1981.

"Nothing can explain the sluggishness in solving various problems, the failure to make progress," Miodowicz said, according to PAP. "Hence, the so-determined voices demanding personal accountability."

Aleksandra Koszada, a party member from a radio plant in Kutno, said, "It is tragic that the conviction is becoming widespread that only strikes can prod our government into resolute action.

"The government's ineptitude is responsible for many economic problems and wasted years," added Bogdan Borys, a metalworker from Czestochowa.

The attacks added strength to speculation that the plenum would lead to government changes, perhaps replacing Messner himself.

The meeting was held less than a day after the government offered to begin talking with workers, possibly including Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

But speakers also railed against the strikes. "They have an anarchy-generating, destructive character," said Politburo member Jozef Czyrek. "They cannot be accepted."

Jaruzelski denied that the party session was a direct result of the strikes. But he said the meeting would make a "critical and self-critical analysis of the causes for the present tensions."

Fleeing Inmates Killed

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — More than 500 prisoners escaped from a southern jail Saturday and 36 were killed trying to flee another prison, state radio said. A popular former defense minister joined calls for an interim government to end nationwide turmoil and restore democracy.

Unrest continued after massive demonstrations this month ended 26 years of authoritarian rule. Mob lootings were reported in several areas, including the capital, where 150 people stole 7,000 gallons of fuel from a railway station.

State-run Rangoon radio said more than 500 prisoners overpowered guards early Saturday to flee from their jail in Mergui, 350 miles southeast of Rangoon. It was the third mass prison escape in three days.

The radio said that on Friday, guards at the Insein jail, eight miles north of central Rangoon, fired on 2,000 prisoners who set fire to buildings and tried to break open the gates.

"Prison personnel had to control the situation and unavoidably had to shoot," the radio said. "As a result, 36 prisoners were killed and 103 injured."

The British Broadcasting Corp. had reported Friday that the rebellion at Insein left about 1,000 dead, but that report could not be independently verified.

Six Bombs Go Off In N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Six bombs exploded in Northern Ireland's two main cities and demonstrators hurled bottles and fought with police to protest the extradition of a convicted IRA guerrilla, police said.

Three police officers were injured during a clash outside a Dublin prison in the Irish Republic, four bombs exploded in west Belfast and two explosions were reported in Londonderry.

Authorities said a fourth police officer was injured during one of the bomb blasts in Belfast, and a 2-year-old boy was grazed by a bullet in west Belfast when gunmen fired on a military patrol, police said.

Police blamed the outlawed Irish Republican Army for the explosions in Londonderry and Belfast, Northern Ireland's two main cities.

The widespread violence Saturday came as authorities extradited convicted guerrilla Robert Russell from the republic to Northern Ireland to complete a prison term and face new charges for prison escape.

Russell fled prison in 1983 while serving a 20-year sentence for attempted murder of a police officer.

Bombs began exploding hours after Russell was extradited to Northern Ireland.

"No, they (the IRA) haven't claimed responsibility, but it's quite obvious who it is," said a spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary, speaking anonymously in keeping with regulations.

The IRA, which is fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the mostly Protestant province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic, has killed 27 British military personnel this year.

The Londonderry bombs followed two blasts late Friday that injured two elderly women, caused extensive damage in the city center and destroyed a border customs post, police said.

Bombs also exploded late Saturday morning outside City Hall in the heart of central Belfast and at a police station in west Belfast, police said.

A smaller bomb exploded at a shopping complex on Donegall Road, police said, and a roadside bomb exploded as a police patrol passed an intersection in west Belfast.

No casualties were reported from the four bombs in west Belfast.

Western Europe Takes Over Lead In Commercial Space Launchings

By ELAINE GANLEY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — In five short years, Western Europe's Ariane rocket has evolved from an Old World firecracker to a redoubtable launch vehicle, competing with Americans for the multi-billion dollar commercial space market.

With bookings worth $2.48 billion — 42 firm orders from around the globe — rockets are scheduled to blast off once a month starting Sept. 8 for the next 10 months and continue at a pace of nine launches a year.

They will put into orbit satellites for businesses and governments for use in improving communications, weather forecasting, telephone links or television transmission.

Ariane's commercial and technological success is a source of pride for France, the rocket's main backer in the 13-nation consortium.

Above all, it provides a boost to the Europeans' late bid to stake a claim to outer space.

European perseverence in developing a throwaway rocket — a dinosaur in the age of manned space flight — is sweetened by the "I told you so" syndrome.

The United States, which was relying exclusively on the space shuttle for satellite launches, has not yet recovered from the Challenger disaster Jan. 28, 1986, but it hopes to re-enter the picture sometime this year with a shuttle launch.

Patrick Baudry, the French astronaut who was a crew member on a 1985 U.S. shuttle flight, said Ariane's success should not be overstated, however.

"Ariane is just a launcher of satellites," he said in a telephone interview.

"In the end, Ariane performs a mission that the Russians and the Americans have been capable of for 25 years. It's a technical success, a commercial success. But there is still a long way to go before Europe is a completely adult space nation."

A latecomer to space, Western Europe has a vision of becoming an independent space power.

"The great nations of tomorrow will be those that can best master space," said Baudry, echoing official thinking. "The success of Ariane is essential for more ambitious programs. It symbolizes the mastery of technology."

Major European projects include an Ariane 5 rocket capable of lifting a manned space shuttle, Hermes, into orbit a decade from now and participation in the U.S. manned space station project.

Not all European Space Agency (ESA) member nations are enthusiastic about the plans.

Britain dissented at a ministerial meeting in November of the 13-nation agency, which also is made up of Austria, Belgium, Denmark, West Germany, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

Britain's industry and trade minister, Kenneth Clarke, called the European plans to put men in space a "hugely expensive industrial frolic" with "rather too much smacking of me-tooism."

For now, the competition is on the ground, and it is growing fierce.

President Reagan's decision to forbid commercial launches on future shuttle flights has given birth to a private U.S. space industry. Once reliant on the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), major U.S. rocket builders must now compete with a slick European sales machine that has been in place eight years.

The Soviet Union also has been wooing commercial customers for space launches through a new organization called Glavkosmos. With slick brochures and film advertisements, Glavkosmos proposes to launch communications satellites and other payloads from foreign countries aboard its powerful rocket booster, Proton.

The first Soviet commercial launch earlier this year sent up an Indian satellite.

Soviet space officials, however, say they are having trouble drumming up business because of Western governments' restrictions on the export of high technology equipment to the Soviet Union.

The restrictions discourage many potential customers from making a deal with the Soviets.

A child of the European Space Agency, the Ariane 1 through 4 series of rockets has been sold, financed and launched by ESA's commercial spinoff, Arianespace, since 1980.

Billed as "the world's first commercial space transport company," Arianespace is devoted to selling space on rockets and placing its clients' satellites into geostationary transfer orbit, about 22,000 miles from Earth.

In 1987, Arianespace, a French company with 50 European shareholders, who are mostly governments and state-run companies, reported a 44 percent increase in profits over 1986.

Sam Mihara, director of new business for the U.S. McDonnell Douglas Delta Program, credits Arianespace with providing the world's only available launcher after the Challenger accident.

"But a lot of the success of Ariane was unique to the situation," he said.

"I consider Ariane as the new kid on the block," he said, noting that Delta rockets have been launched for 28 years. "What might be new (for us) is a piece of paper. Previously, our customers were buying with NASA. NASA was the sales agent."

McDonnell Douglas and its Delta rocket, General Dynamics with its Atlas Centaur and Martin Marietta with the giant Titan are the three rocket builders now at the heart of America's fledgling private space launch industry.

In March, McDonnell Douglas is set to make the first private launch in the United States — a weather-communications satellite for the Indian government.

Such commercial launches will use federal facilities, mainly at Cape Canaveral, Fla., and reimburse the government for costs.

U.S. Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley has applauded the growth of the private launchers, which by mid-1988 had signed up 20 customers.

"American firms won 13 launch contracts last year compared to just two by the European consortium," Burley said in late June.

True, says Arianespace, but it notes that it is booked solid to 1992 and couldn't offer competitive launch dates.

Any giddiness at Arianespace is tempered by its rockets' four failed launches, and a 16-month shutdown for the European program, which left the West without any launch facilities at all.

Ariane has a monopoly now.

"But it is not normal," said Patrice Larcher, head of marketing for Arianespace, "just as it was not normal that yesterday NASA had 100 percent of the global market."

But a whole new commerical field is open in space as the more and more of the world is linked by an extensive network of satellites.

Communications satellites string continents together. Weather satellites provide the basis for often critical forecasts. Remote sensing satellites, such as France's SPOT or the U.S Landsat, provide Earth images.

The West African nation of Mali has begun its first forest inventory, which would not be possible without SPOT.

In Europe, satellites launched by Ariane are making life easier in small ways perhaps unnoticed by the people who benefit, such as when a long-distance call from Portugal to Turkey is less likely to be troubled by an echo on the line.

In the next few years, West Europeans may be able to enjoy a broader range of television viewing, if they buy small dishes able to receive signals broadcast directly from new high-powered satellites now being readied for launching.

Nearly half of Ariane's 25 customers in 12 countries are putting up communications satellites. Some are bringing service that has been long available in the United States to Europe, India, Brazil and elsewhere. U.S. companies are using Ariane to install replacements for a previous generation of satellites.

Patrick Dubarle, a space technology specialist at the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, based in Paris, said in an interview that communications satellites are actually losing out for most applications to a newer technology, fiber optics.

"Satellites will always have a certain share of the market, though it may be declining," he said. "They are useful in large countries such as Canada where fiber optics are too expensive."

Other applications, such as the "remote sensor" satellites, have found disappointing commercial results. Neither farmers nor oil companies, for instance, have shown as much interest as expected in the view of Earth from the skies.

"Right now, (Ariane) is trying to keep a launch pace that is very strenuous," said Troy Ellington, vice president of satellite systems and government services for GTE-Spacenet, whose Spacenet-F1 telecommunications satellite was Ariane's first commercial launch in May 1984. "They're under a lot of pressure by users to launch early and get them up as soon as they can."

The 16-month hiatus when neither European nor American launchers were available touched even major telecommunications companies.

"It delayed us getting some G-Star satellites into orbit," Ellington said. There also were "constraints" on transponder sales and leases, he said.

GTE-Spacenet, of Stamford, Conn., has launched six satellites with Ariane, losing one of them — in a failed launch Sept. 12, 1985. Ariane is to set aloft a GTE satellite Sept. 8 and another in 1990.

But Ellington said GTE's next generation of satellites could be launched by either European or American rockets.

The companies on both sides of the Atlantic are, in fact, scrambling for a limited number of launches. Of the 130 or so satellites launched each year over the last five years, only about 12 came from potential commercial clients, according to Arianespace's Larcher.

The rest are either Soviet satellites, U.S. military satellites, or were put up by countries whose launchers remain in their infancy, he said.

With the growth of telecommunications, Larcher predicted about 20 satellite launches a year four years from now.

But one aspect is unlikely to change.

In both its pricing and production rate, Arianespace writes failed launches into its plans and will continue to.

"I won't say that Ariane is reliable 100 percent of the time. There is not one in the world that is," Larcher said.

"You can't have a 100 percent success. One day or another there will be a failure."

Annual Report July 1, 1987 - June 30, 1988
Pitt Soil And Water Conservation District

Water quality is one the most important issues facing North Carolina. Pitt District now has a new capability to assist in cleaning up the Tar and Neuse Rivers through the N.C. Agriculture Cost-Share Program. Improving the quality of our water is essential for our environment and quality of life.

PITT SOIL AND WATER CONSERVATION DISTRICT is dedicated to the wise use of our natural resources and to the education of Pitt County citizens about the importance that soil and water have in our lives.

Pitt District is chartered as a legal subdivision of State Government. It is your unit of government which has the responsibility of conserving soil, water, and related resources. It is empowered to work with any federal, state, or local agency as well as any civic organization in the promotion of conservation. The District provides technical services for soil and water conservation planning and resource development to all people within the county. Assistance can be obtained by contacting our office - telephone 752-2720.

The Board of Supervisors meet monthly at the District office located in the Federal Building, 215 S. Evans Street, Greenville. All residents of Pitt County are welcome to attend these meetings.

1987-1988 - IMPROVING WATER QUALITY

Pitt County was included in the North Carolina Agriculture Cost-Share Program during the year. Pitt District planned, contracted, and administered over $236,000 in cost-share assistance to county farmers for water quality improvement. Much time was spent implementing this program which is designed to reduced the input of sediments, nutrients, animal waste, and pesticides (agricultural nonpoint source pollution) into the waters of our state.

Another area of emphasis was implementation of the conservation provisions of the 1985 Farm Bill. All highly erodible fields in the county were identified and conservation plans were developed for approximately two-thirds of those fields. When fully implemented, this program will significantly reduce erosion from farmland, enhance wildlife habitat, and improve water quality.

Some highlights of the year were:

- Attending Annual Meeting of the N.C. Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts in Raleigh
- Winning "Conservation Farm Family of the Year" Contest for Area V and the Coastal Plain region of the state
- Conducting a Conservation Education Program for students in Pitt County

We again take this opportunity to thank all the individuals, groups, and agencies who contributed to our program this year.

MEMBERS, BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Ralph C. Tucker - Chairman, Greenville
F. Curtis Martin - Vice Chairman, Bethel
J. Earl Sermons - Secretary-Treasurer, Farmville
Robert G. Little - Grimesland
Billy Phillips - Grifton

STAFF

Mrs. Ruth H. Smith - Office Manager
Albert Coffey - SCS District Conservationist
Claude M. Long - SCS Technician
Lonnie E. Faulkner - District Technician
J. Dalton Vincent - District Technician

JOHNNY BRILEY of Stokes installed this flashboard riser with assistance through the N.C. Agriculture Cost-Share Program. Water control structures reduce the amount of nutrients which enter streams from cropland fields.

District Board Chairman RALPH TUCKER (left) presented the first water quality program check to RONNIE CORBETT of Fountain. Mr. Corbett developed a plan to apply poultry and swine waste to his land by matching a nutrient analysis with crop needs. Twenty-two farmers developed plans to properly dispose of animal waste.

EARL SMITH, of Ayden, installed 2600 feet of shaped field border and an acre of grassed waterway. Fourteen farmers developed erosion control plans under the new program to reduce sediment delivery to streams.

THE YEAR IN SUMMARY

851	Individuals Assisted
220	Individuals Applied Conservation Practices
103	Conservation Plans Developed
23	Units of Government Assisted
120	Site-Development Plans Reviewed
8,675	Feet of Field Borders Established
22	Animal Waste Management Systems Planned
36,350	Acres Planted Using Conservation Tillage
112	Million gallons animal waste planned for land application
11,394	Tons of Soil Saved

The Mid-East Resource Conservation and Development Project provided engineering and financial assistance for the installation of a storm water outlet system at H.B. Sugg Grammar School in Farmville. The project included installation of a system of storm water outlets, grading, and seeding. Shown during the final inspection are (left to right) JOHN H. 'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Two Beats Four

Shorter Terms Mean Better Response

Two is better than four, especially in a rapidly-changing city.

That's why Greenville's public officials should resist a proposal to change the mayor and city council terms from two years to four. Neither should they allow staggered terms or a mayoral vote on issues.

Long, staggered terms — a system where only one or two officials are up for re-election at one time — spell slow turnover in government. Greenville's City Council experiences little membership deviation to begin with. Lengthening the terms of office could mean a long period with negligible change in the city's leadership.

For a community like Greenville, experiencing explosive growth and becoming increasingly diverse, such a move would prompt stagnation. Rapidly-shifting cities need governments that can quickly change — at the ballot box — to respond to demographics. Four-year terms would be a cumbersome option which would shackle progress.

The last thing Greenville needs moving into the 1990s is static leadership. As the community becomes increasingly complex, so do its problems. Four-year terms for officials would hinder the responsiveness of governing bodies to change — an undesirable result.

Such a move could also work against an increased minority presence on that board. Slow turnover means fewer chances for minorities to be elected to City Council. That impact could negate the intent of Greenville's redistricting and election method change in 1986. The hard work that went into those projects should be given full opportunity for effectiveness, and strengthening minority representation should not be compromised.

Besides, the majority of North Carolina's expanding, urban areas have two-year terms for both city council and mayor. Raleigh, Fayetteville, Wilmington, Wilson, Salisbury, Charlotte, Greensboro and New Bern all have two-year terms. Only Rocky Mount has four-year terms. Progressive cities prone to change function better with short terms of public office. Greenville should take a lesson from its peers.

The city charter soundly sets the term of office for Greenville's leaders at a flexible two years. That stipulation shouldn't be altered capriciously. During this period of dynamic growth and diversification, Greenville needs accountability at the ballot box.

So do your constituents a favor, council members, and leave the terms of office alone. It's no time to tamper with a good thing.

On The Way

Poland's Freedom Quest Continues

For Poland it has been nearly a half century since its people knew the freedom and independence which they seek today with strikes and rallies.

The country was overrun by the armies of Hitler during World War II and lived under the fear of the Gestapo. When the hated Germans were expelled the Polish people could hope for self rule and freedom, a hope which was quickly dashed by Stalin. Following the war Poland became a satellite of the Soviet Union. Despite numerous attempts at obtaining more freedom the Polish people still live under a regime of repression.

Last week there was still another try for a better life. Polish workers are using the strike weapon to attempt to improve their system. In a Communist society this can be considered an act against the government and the punishment can be severe indeed. That lesson was learned in 1981 when the military was designated to deal with labor unrest. Violence and bloodshed was widespread.

Since then, little has improved. Workers' wages have not kept up with the soaring inflation rate but yet no response has eased conditions.

The immediate cause of the labor unrest is lagging wages for workers. Underlying that is bitterness toward a government which does not allow the freedoms which persons of dignity so much desire.

The bitterness, the unhappiness with the state of things in Poland will not disappear until the government faces the problems. Repression is an effective tool of totalitarian governments for a time. Eventually, however, repressed people find a way to freedom.

That process, however explosive, is desirable if freedom and self-determination are to conquer repression. And that course is under way in Poland.

Sunday Morning Notes

Cooler weather last week brought thoughts of fall to many of us. That glorious season is not yet upon us. Officially it won't arrive until Sept. 21, almost a month away. In fact, there surely will be some more hot days before sweater weather arrives here.

There was relief from the heat last week, however, and that sets us to thinking that summer is nearly behind us.

Some signs:

•When the time of sunset has moved back a half hour. (From July 21 it has moved from after 8:30 p.m. to before 8 p.m.)

•When talk among young adults turns from beach trips to skiing trips. (Now that is pushing it.)

•When one can walk on the North Carolina beaches without tripping over the bodies of the sun worshipers.

•When the evening shadows begin to change as the sun finds a new place in the skies.

•When farmers quit worrying about the rainfall. (The crops, after all, are made.)

•When one wonders for the first time during the summer whether a tree with browning leaves is the first sign of fall, or merely a dead tree.

•When the assessment begins of how good the corn crop will be.

•When school kids start discussing how tough their new teachers will be for the coming school year.

•When forestry people start worrying about lack of rainfall considering the danger of forest fires as the leaves turn.

Finally there is that sure sign of fall — the first football game for ECU. In case you don't know the first game for 1988 is Saturday in Ficklen Stadium.

When Does Savagery Become Real?

William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — The ruling Tutsi tribe has once again turned tiny Burundi into a killing field, slaughtering at least 5,000 of the subjugated Hutu and sending some 38,000 others fleeing to neighboring Rwanda.

This is not war, civil or otherwise, but outrageous massacre.

Still it's hard to know which is more outrageous: the bloodiness of the Burundi government's attempt to prevent an anticipated uprising by the Hutu majority or the calm with which this newest savagery has been greeted by the rest of us.

The world is outraged at the Israeli savagery in the West Bank and Gaza in an effort to put down a Palestinian revolt. Fewer than 250 Palestinians and only half a dozen Israelis have been killed since the revolt began last December.

Sharpeville has been etched in our memory since the 1960 massacre in which South African government troops fired on a black crowd, killing 69 and wounding 180.

At least five thousand are dead in Burundi, and we do scarcely more than cluck our tongues. It is as though we accept the official government explanation that this newest savagery was necessary to "restore peace."

Where are the protesters? The U.N. resolutions and peace-force proposals? The sanctions-demanding members of Congress? The cries of genocide? The embassy demonstrators?

What accounts for the relative indifference to this atrocity? Is it the absence of television? Certainly the TV footage has helped to trigger our outrage at what has been happening in the West Bank and Gaza. Certainly TV brought home to us the savagery of the South African government.

But surely that isn't the sole explanation. Is it the fact that the Hutu, unlike the Palestinians and the black South Africans, have no American partisans? Is it the fact that both the victims and the victimizers in Burundi, as was the case in pre-revolutionary Liberia, are black that keeps us from identifying villains and screaming for an end to the slaughter? Is it the fact that Burundi is of no economic or political consequence to American interests?

Or can it be our expectation that certain people (Israelis and South African whites) to behave in civilized fashion that triggers our outrage when they don't?

Maybe it's all of these things, plus the fact that, as things go in that part of the world, this is a relatively minor affair. After all, after a 1972 coup attempt, the Tutsi wiped out somewhere between 100,000 and 300,000 Hutu, including virtually all of the tribe's educated members.

It still is not clear how the latest atrocity began. The government blames infiltrators from neighboring Rwanda, like Burundi a former Belgian colony, with inciting a Hutu revolt. Others say that the Hutu, who make up some 85 percent of the population but hold little power, were convinced that the Tutsi were planning a massacre and decided to strike first.

Government reports even suggest that, at least in some northern regions of the country, the Tutsi were the principal victims. "What the government did was restore peace," an official communique said.

The one thing that is clear is the overwhelming brutality of the official response to whatever the provocation might have been. One Hutu, who managed to escape (though without his wife and five of his children whom, he fears, may be dead), told the Reuter news agency that the Tutsi-dominated army called the people of his district to the local government headquarters and, when they were assembled, opened fire on the crowd. Those who tried to flee were chased by helicopters and gunned down, he said.

Other witnesses say the soldiers went from house to house, bayoneting Hutu men, women and children.

Are the word pictures insufficient to stir our outrage? Do we have to see it on television before it becomes real for us?

"The aim of the government," said a communique in the wake of the slaughter that began Aug. 14, "is to restore peace, not to butcher its citizens."

Maybe. But viewed from here, and taken with the 1972 atrocities and the long-standing animosities between Hutu and Tutsi, it looks an awful lot like genocide.

The question for the rest of us is whether we will become sufficiently outraged to try to stop it, or simply shrug it off.

To the editor:

Now that the need to move the airport is becoming an issue, let me tell you what I told the City Council two years ago when we were looking for relief from the proposed garbage fee. I said, "You don't need to look for ways to increase revenues. You need to look for ways to reduce spending." Here are some reasons for my wanting the airport to stay small.

We do not need a large airport in the city, where it could be a hazard to the hospital area and the surrounding residential areas. It is inevitable that Greenville will become more densely populated in the airport area and the increased traffic will create more noise nuisance and crash hazard to the citizens as the airport grows.

I think the citizens do not need the expense caused by our airport operating at a loss and the airport's use of city, county and federal grant funds that could be used wiser. I am in favor of a tax-mon[illegible] (if required)-supported airport for the use of private citizens. I am not [illegible]or of a commercial airport that would require tax money to be able to op[illegible].

We have an airport 26 miles away, in Kinston, which is closer for the citizens of Greenville than the Raleigh-Durham Airport is for the citizens of East Raleigh. The Kinston Airport is in an area that would allow for expansion, is close to Greenville, Goldsboro and New Bern markets, and with their aid, could provide much better services cheaper than can be obtained by the bureaucracy fighting to get everything everywhere.

Ask the Council members how much money — federal, state, county and city — the Greenville Airport Authority has required the last five years, above revenues.

The 1988 Election: Recipe For A Sharp Contraction

George Will

WASHINGTON — Republicans have learned from Ronald Reagan to look on the bright side of everything from deficits (growth stimulated by them cures them) to Gorbachev (good liberals come from Moscow, not Boston). So Republicans, preaching what Reagan practices, can say their presidential campaign will recover from its rocky start.

Reagan himself had an awful August in 1980 when he said, among other interesting things, that trees cause pollution, then arrived at a rally and found a tree decorated with this sign: "Chop me down before I kill again."

But this year, both parties' campaigns are likely to produce an anemic President and therefore produce congressional government. Such government will be the result of a second consecutive vacuous election.

In 1984, there barely was an election. There was an Olympics and Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the USA" tour, and in that celebratory atmosphere Reagan elevated contentment to a political platform: "Morning in America....Back and standing tall." The result was a landslide without a mandate and the reassertion of the national norm: congressional government.

If in 1988 the winner wins principally because he is not the other guy, then by 1992 the nation will have gone 12 years without a clarifying, energizing choice. With either Dukakis or Bush we're apt to enter an era of unheroic politics. It will be an era more typical of American experience than either the Reagan era or the Kennedy era that Dukakis invokes so insistently.

Under either Dukakis or Bush, few Americans are apt to regard the presidency heroically, as many did under, say, Teddy Roosevelt and Franklin Roosevelt and John Kennedy. Few will regard it as a tone-setting institution imparting fundamental direction to national life. Conservatives, with their Jeffersonian impulses, may say: Splendid. That role is not for government, let alone the central government.

> 'If in 1988 the winner wins principally because he is not the other guy, then by 1992 the nation will have gone 12 years without a clarifying, energizing choice.'

But Hamilton, a source of a more sensible conservatism, warned that energy in the executive is a prerequisite of good government.

A weak presidency does not produce sweet passivity in Washington and the blooming of 100 flowers of local control. Rather, it produces congressional ascendancy. That means the enervation of foreign policy and, in domestic affairs, the primacy of parochial interests at the expense of national aspirations. Try to imagine either Dukakis or Bush going over the heads of Congress to appeal directly to the people.

Conservatives, forgetting their enjoyment of Reagan's success doing that, may say: Fine. We oppose plebiscitary uses of the presidency. But, again, they should consider the real alternative. It has been increasingly visible since Reagan's 1986 failure to hold Republican control of the Senate. The alternative is government by a fractious committee of 535.

Reagan's presidency has demonstrated the perishable nature of even a real mandate. Reagan's mandate was worn out by September 1981 and only a series of unplanned events made it last that long. He was gallant when shot. A Supreme Court vacancy enabled him to nominate a woman. Two Libyan fighter planes let him act like Teddy Roosevelt. The striking air-traffic controllers let him act like Truman. Even so, his tax and spending cuts, the crux of his agenda, barely passed that summer. How evanescent would Dukakis' or Bush's sway over Congress be?

The presidency is so prominent in national life, and the tendency is so strong to confuse prominence with power, Americans forget that the presidency is an inherently (meaning constitutionally) weak office. There is little a President can do on his own. What he can do is move the country by the force of his words or the pull of his personality and, by doing so, move, or at least inhibit, Congress.

The power of the presidency varies greatly (more than that of, say, the power of the British prime minister) with the personal attributes of the occupant of the office. The power of Congress to initiate and block action, a power increasingly radiated in new laws, only expands. It expands most rapidly when presidential influence contracts.

The 1988 election looks like a recipe for a sharp contraction. We have two low-voltage candidates. One of them, Dukakis, talks with lawyerly wariness about his plans. Bush praises the Pledge of Allegiance and promises not to furlough killers. So even more people than usual are melancholy about the choice. They may see congressional government coming.

Perhaps they should reason as did Sam Weller, Mr. Pickwick's servant: "Well, it's no use talking about it now. It's over, and can't be helped, and that's one consolation, as they always says in Turkey, when they cuts the wrong man's head off."

Let Schools Compete

Denis Doyle

WASHINGTON — A growing number of school reformers have something in common with such world leaders as Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Deng Xiaoping and Margaret Thatcher: Their answer for failed public enterprise is to stop throwing more money at it, and introduce competitive market forces. In public as well as private sectors, there is no substitute for a market to distribute goods and services efficiently.

Just as the Soviet Union, China and Britain are applying principles of free enterprise to state-owned concerns, more and more educators — not to mention parents and students — think that America's public schools could use a dose of the same medicine.

The issue is straightforward: Today's schools are admirably suited to the past; they will not prepare us for our high-tech future. For more than 150 years American schools have been monopolies; student assignment is based on geography. That's what "neighborhood" schools are all about.

If you live in a "good" neighborhood you may have "good" schools. If you live in a bad neighborhood you're almost certain to have bad schools. If you're black or Latino and poor, odds are that your schools are third-rate. Improving the schools, however, is not a matter of altruism or philanthropy; it is a survival issue.

The economy of the future — not to mention modern democracy — cannot tolerate "bad" schools for poor children. We can't compete in a global economy without a world-class work force; that means world-class schools — for everyone.

In addition to being monopolies, our public schools are organized like factories with a hierarchical, command-control management style that would be the envy of most Soviet commissars. In all but our most antiquated firms, this practice has disappeared. Certainly, no high-tech firm could long endure if it were run like a typical school; top-down management is now a thoroughly discredited practice.

Finally, our schools are organized around the agrarian calendar of the late 19th century. In important respects U.S. public schools are about as exciting and productive as a Soviet collective farm. Teachers have few incentives to produce; that so many teachers do is a tribute to their perseverance, because the system is not designed to encourage or reinforce them.

The public at large is in a fix as well; if school problems surface they can complain to the school board or vote down the next tax increase, but that is the practical limit to their power.

Think what it would mean, however, if schools systems were restructured using a "public sector market." Instead of neighborhood assignment, imagine a public system allowing a family to select a school based on its academic and extracurricular offerings; imagine a school system where teachers selected the school in which they would teach as well.

Put simply, would you rather chose a school or rely on bureaucratic assignment? The most recent Gallup poll on education indicates that an overwhelming majority of Americans — 71 percent — think that families should be able to chose their public school.

Choice systems are in place or on the drawing boards across the country. Minnesota, for example, recently enacted legislation to permit statewide open enrollment. And school districts as diverse as Los Angeles, San Diego, Prince Georges County, Md., New York City's District Four (Spanish Harlem), Cambridge, Mass., Rochester, N.Y. and Miami have successfully implemented "magnet" school programs.

Magnet schools introduce market mechanisms in the public sector. They are schools organized around an academic or vocational theme — music and art, math and science, the humanities, for example — and they attract (or fail to attract) students based on their "character." In most respects they look like private schools, but they are in the public sector.

Instead of "supply side" education, in which the system is run for the convenience of the bureaucrats, a public-sector market enshrines the concept of consumer sovereignty. But if a school has to "earn its way," in the same way a business does, it must be free to organize itself as it sees fit. That means the freedom to spend its "income," to hire and even fire teachers and other staff, to design a curriculum that will attract and hold students and generally to behave in an autonomous and independent manner.

'Pray, Remove Them Both'

Richard Cohen

NEW YORK — It is said that at a dinner party once, Winston Churchill looked down as a pudding was placed before him and said, "Pray remove it, it lacks theme." Churchill is not around to comment on the current presidential race, but if he is — as we hope — looking down, he is almost certainly repeating that remark. The current campaign is a themeless pudding.

Journalistic ethics would insist that the blame for this silly campaign be equally apportioned. Alas, the facts get in the way. George Bush has done more than Michael Dukakis to turn the race for the Oval Office into a frivolous event. The issue at the moment is the Pledge of Allegiance.

The Pledge was first published by a youth magazine (The Youth Companion) in 1892 and recited by most of us ever since. In 1954, Congress gave atheistic communism a mortal blow by inserting the words "under God." In this form, it was recited by all the pot-smoking Vietnam War protestors who infest Bush's imagination and who were, it seems, put on Earth to make Dan Quayle look good by comparison. The efficacy of the Pledge is somewhat in doubt.

In 1977, Dukakis vetoed a Massachusetts bill to require all school teachers to begin their students' day with the Pledge. He did so, he says, for two reasons: The U.S. Supreme Court in 1943 ruled it unconstitutional to compel the recitation of the Pledge and in an advisory opinion Massachusetts' highest court, the Supreme Judicial Court, agreed. It would have been sheer grandstanding for Dukakis to have signed what is after all an unenforceable bill. Now Bush is grandstanding on Dukakis' refusal to do the same.

You may or may not agree with what Dukakis did. You will surely agree, though, that as an act of state it is a trivial matter. The next President of the United States is going to have to deal with the challenge of glasnost in the Soviet Union, apartheid in South Africa, debt in the Third World, communist insurgencies in Central America, a staggering federal deficit here at home — acid rain, unemployment, the plight of the inner city, the farm crisis, competitiveness and the loss of the ozone layer which, I take it, will make all of us look like Yul Brynner. Should a nation of bald people be required to recite the Pledge?

I don't know. And I don't care. I do know, though, that this is one of the sillier issues upon which to campaign. But we now have yet another momentous issue: the debate about the debate. Once again, Bush is the culprit. His campaign organization says that two dates set for presidential debates are too early. Dukakis says he will show up for the first debate anyway. Maybe he will talk to his snow blower.

But Dukakis is not entirely blameless for a presidential campaign that Americans must find unenlightening. The man absolutely refuses to work without safety nets. Having bared his soul in Atlanta with his acceptance address (He choked on a mention of his late father), Dukakis has since gone back into his shell. His caution is not just boring, it is downright soporific.

Take what Dukakis did at the Neshoba County Fair in Mississippi. The event is redolent with history. Nearby is Philadelphia, Miss., where, in 1964, three civil-rights workers were lynched. Dukakis spoke on the 24th anniversary of the discovery of the bodies. Did he mention those martyrs? No. He was speaking to a mostly white audience and it would have been most unDukakis-like to have actually said something bold. Instead, he merely alluded to what had happened 24 years before — and left it at that. As President, Dukakis would go to Pearl Harbor and probably not mention the bombing for fear of offending the Japanese.

The polls tell us the voters flit from candidate to candidate like bees to flowers. First one leads and then the other — and never by very much. Is there any wonder?

Bush has raised the Pledge of Allegiance issue. Dukakis raises almost no issue. The two of them stand for everything and, therefore, for nothing. Bush will give us new social programs and a terrific military and not raise taxes. Dukakis will give us the sun in the morning, the moon at night — and competence. Bush has already given us his sun. He's called Dan Quayle.

I write this week from New York. Outside my window, the Manhattan traffic is relatively light. At lunch, the restaurant was nearly empty. Summer is staging its finale and much of America seems to be on vacation. For the candidates, this is a lucky state of affairs. Maybe the pudding they've offered in August will harden after Labor Day and they'll both address the issues. If not, Churchill's remark will have to be amended: Pray, remove them both.

Vietnam Ties Still Snarled With History & Hard Feelings

David DeVoss

When Arizona Sen. John McCain recently introduced a congressional resolution calling for diplomatic normalization with the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, it seemed the painful legacy of America's most divisive war might finally be coming to an end.

The fact that McCain — Republican, Vietnam hero, prisoner of war for 5½ years after his A-4 Skyhawk was shot down — favors an exchange of envoys underscores what even some of Hanoi's harshest critics are saying: The time has come for America to consider a bilateral relationship with its old adversary.

Vietnam certainly wants improved relations. Establishing diplomatic ties not only would end America's crippling economic embargo, but also serve as a signal to Western nations and lending institutions that trade and development assistance, in limbo because of Hanoi's continued occupation of Cambodia, can now be resumed.

Because they have so much to gain, Vietnam's leaders are trying to project a new, conciliatory image. Official communiques that once consisted of little more than denunciations of "U.S. imperialism" and "Chinese hegemony" now brim with offers of "peaceful coexistence" and "traditional friendship." Indeed, after years of numbing dialectic, Hanoi over the past several weeks has:

- Begun withdrawing half of its 120,000 troops from Cambodia, and hinted the remainder could be brought home by early 1990.
- Voted to excise all unflattering references to the U.S. from the preamble to its constitution.
- Hastened the return of dozens of MIA remains and invited U.S. officials to participate in "joint investigative and excavation activities" designed to resolve the controversy.
- Promised to provide exit visas for all former officials of the defeated Saigon republic who wish to emigrate to the United States.
- Rescued, entertained and promptly released three U.S. Naval aviators who ditched their malfunctioning cargo plane off the Vietnamese coast.

Waged on several fronts, Vietnam's charm offensive has been conducted with blitzkrieg intensity. Vietnam's non-communist neighbors are delighted with foreign minister Nguyen Co Thach's offer to welcome back the 60,000 Vietnamese boat people living in refugee camps throughout Southeast Asia. Even Communist Party boss Nguyen Van Linh has gotten into the act, urging refugees living abroad to take vacations in Vietnam.

Given Washington's star-crossed relation with Hanoi, the boomlet of good will almost seemed too good to be true. Of course, it was. When the Reagan administration failed to respond with enthusiasm to the McCain resolution, Thach angrily accused the United States of having a "negative attitude." Then, in a bizarre act of diplomatic "seppuku" — hara kiri — worthy of Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega, he withdrew Vietnam's offer to search jointly for unaccounted American servicemen.

This is not the first time the United States and Vietnam have botched a diplomatic breakthrough. In March 1977 both presidential envoy Leonard Woodcock and Vietnamese President Pham Van Dong were eager to establish diplomatic relations; Vietnam offered to search for missing U.S. soldiers. Later, Dong quietly dropped his government's claim to billions in reparations secretly promised by Henry Kissinger in return for "peace with honor." When Hanoi in the autumn of 1978 finally shelved its demand for massive redevelopment aid, it seemed normalization was just around the corner.

Was there a chance Vietnam could become an Asian Yugoslavia? For Jimmy Carter that possibility alone was enough to tip the scale in favor of normalization. In October 1978 he invited Nguyen Co Thach to New York to sign the protocols leading to an exchange of ambassadors.

But history thwarted the peacemakers. Thach's arrival coincided with an intelligence report on Vietnamese troop concentrations along the Cambodian border. News of the planned invasion diminished enthusiasm for normalization. Then Woodcock, who by that time had moved on to Beijing, reported that Deng Xiaoping also was anxious to normalize. Washington's choice became clear.

City Leaders Say Some Houses Are Just Getting Too Massive

By LINDA STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — The lifestyles of the rich and famous in this swank New York suburb may become a little less opulent if some city leaders have their way: They want to pass a law limiting the size of some houses.

"I never thought I'd see the day when the Planning and Zoning Commission would say a rich man cannot build a large house in Greenwich," said Willis N. Mills of SMS Architects of New Canaan.

Greenwich, population 60,000, is home to many celebrities and corporate leaders, including singer Diana Ross, real estate magnates Donald Trump and Harry and Leona Helmsley, and tennis star Ivan Lendl. It is also where Vice President George Bush grew up.

The problem, suporters of the proposed ordinance say, is not the big old estates but the huge homes being built on small lots — small by Greenwich standards, that is.

Peter Joyce, chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission, said the ordinance would allow homes of up to 6,500 square feet on a two-acre lot and up to 8,700 square feet on a four-acre lot. It also would limit expansion of existing homes.

"In the past five years, each new house that is being built is bulkier than the one before it," said Jara Burnett, president of a neighborhood group. "It is distressing to the neighborhood. ... There is a loss of sunshine and a definite loss of privacy."

The town had its first hearing on the proposed ordinance last week and 150 people showed. The heated discussion went late into the night. Another hearing is set for Sept. 13.

"There is a mystique and an ambiance to Greenwich that you can build the big house," said G. Thomas Dadakis, a commercial real-estate developer. "I don't think the commission has looked at the economic impact of this, which will happen in 20 years."

Dadakis also said the commission shouldn't have selected August for the hearing because "everybody is up in Nantucket or the Vineyard at this time of year."

First Selectman John Margenot said he opposes the ordinance because "it's a little like the last man over the bridge syndrome: 'I got my house so let's do it now.'"

The reason houses are getting so big is economic, he said.

"The land is too expensive and people want to get their money out of it by building large homes," Margenot said Friday. "How could a builder charge you $1.5 million for a three-bedroom colonial? So, they're building a super house with a pool and everything."

Real estate agents say that even without a house, four acres can cost $1 million.

"I think it's a good idea as long as it's not so restrictive that people in homes can't make some additions and it doesn't influence the architecture," said Bett McCarthy, executive director of the Greenwich Board of Realtors.

McCarthy said people in Greenwich "have lost their sense of proportion in the size of a lot to a house."

Fires Flare Near Geyser

By The Associated Press

Firefighters in Yellowstone National Park focused their attention once again on an area near Old Faithful geyser on Saturday, and a fast-moving forest fire in Idaho killed a flock of sheep and their accompanying sheep dogs.

Oregon activated 100 National Guardsmen and borrowed firefighters from Canada to help battle out-of-control blazes.

"We're hanging on by our fingernails," said Lee Oman, incident commander at a firefighters' base camp in Valley of the Rogue State Park near Grants Pass, Ore., where crews battled two blazes that threatened homes in rural areas.

Forest also burned in parts of northern California and Washington state.

Officials in Yellowstone appealed Saturday for private helicopters and crews to help fight the blazes that have charred more than 400,000 acres of the park. About 35 helicopters have been working on the Yellowstone Complex of fires in Yellowstone and Grand Teton parks and the adjoining Bridger-Teton, Shoshone and Targhee national forests.

Dave Poncin, a firefighting commander in Wyoming, said he would like to have another 15 to 20 helicopters. Most military copters are too big for firefighting.

"Military pilots are good, but they're not bush pilots. What we need are oilfield pilots, people who fly in the mountains a lot and are familiar with this kind of terrain," he said at a news briefing. "We're looking of course for the best in the business, and they're probably not available. So that's where we're at."

A shift in wind direction in Yellowstone created a 250-acre spot fire about five miles from Old Faithful, the park's most popular attraction, where nearby structures earlier were threatened by flames.

Linda Miller, a fire information officer, said the spot fire was created when wind fanned flames on the southern end of the 114,000-acre North Fork fire.

Crews worked to build a containment line around the blaze by hand and were aided by an air tanker, and the buildings around the geyser were not threatened Saturday, morning, Miller said.

In eastern Idaho, wind pushed a forest fire over an extra 1,200 acres to a total 3,500 acres and killed an undetermined number of sheep, Caribou National Forest spokesman Dan Pugmire said Saturday.

Huskers Ease Past Aggies

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Steve Taylor got Nebraska's offense untracked in the third period with his scrambling and passing and the second-ranked Cornhuskers scored on their first three second-half possessions and defeated No. 10 Texas A&M 23-14 Saturday night in the sixth annual Kickoff Classic.

The Cornhuskers, who failed to capitalize on two Texas A&M turnovers in the first half, turned Tim Jackson's interception into the go-ahead touchdown, a 1-yard run by tailback Ken Clark at 10:28 of the third period that gave Nebraska a 12-7 lead.

Taylor, who was shaken up one play before Gregg Barrios kicked a 38-yard field goal that brought Nebraska within 7-6 on the Cornhuskers' first second-half possession, returned to become the top rushing quarterback in Nebraska history. He also teamed up with tight end Todd Millikan for the decisive touchdown, a 24-yard pass at 1:37 of the fourth quarter.

Millikan broke a tackle by defensive back William Thomas at the 9 and carried two more defenders the final two yards to cap a seven-play, 80-yard drive and give the Cornhuskers a 20-7 lead.

After being limited to 100 yards in the first half by Texas A&M's super-quick defense, Nebraska rolled up 108 yards in the third period alone in handing the Aggies their sixth opening-game setback in Jackie Sherrill's seven years as head coach.

Barrios, a left-footed sophomore filling in for the injured Chris Drennan, missed his first collegiate field goal try from 35 yards out early in the game but then tied a Kickoff Classic record by connecting from 44, 38 and 48 yards, the last one the longest in the brief history of this game.

Nebraska spotted the Aggies a 7-0 lead on Matt Gurley's 1-yard plunge at 12:38 of the first period. After that, A&M's only score was a 2-yard run by freshman Randy Simmons with 10:15 left in the game, six plays after Nebraska's Dana Brinson fumbled a punt at his 44.

Sherrill and offensive coordinator Joe Avezzano know all about Nebraska. Their players may not be quite as knowledgeable.

Sherrill and Avezzano were on Johnny Majors' Iowa State staff from 1969-72 where, Sherrill says: "On a range of 1 to 10, we were probably a 5 and they were a 10."

When 10th-ranked Texas A&M met No. 2 Nebraska in the sixth annual Kickoff Classic on Saturday night there was little, if any, difference in talent.

"Jackie and I know what it's like to take the field against the Nebraskas and Oklahomas with a great discrepancy in talent," Avezzano said. "And that's no big thrill just to say you played those people.

"I've been associated with teams that have gone out and then all of a sudden in the third quarter or after the game decided that they could have done better if they had just believed they could do better."

Despite its overall youth, Texas A&M has few doubts that it can compete with Nebraska.

"It's been a pleasure to be around a group of guys who have a great deal of respect for their opponents, yet haven't been in awe of their opponents," Avezzano said.

"This situation is different (from Iowa State) because we've got good football players. We've got talent, we've got depth and we've had success. And those ingredients are extremely important when you play people like Nebraska."

Taiwan Blanks U.S.A, 10-0

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Chen-Lung Yu relied on a 75 mph fastball to throw a one-hitter against Pearl City, Hawaii, and lead Tai Chung, Taiwan to a 10-0 victory in the 42nd Little League World Series Saturday, the fifth consecutive Far East team to win the tournament.

"He was really throwing hard," Pearl City coach Richard Numata said. "I guess he was a little bit too strong for us."

Yu, a 5-foot-4½, 134-pound right-hander, pitched all six innings, striking out 10 while walking one. He retired the last 17 batters in order.

Chris Yoshimoto had the only hit for Pearl City, a community of 40,000 people near Pearl Harbor. He reached safely with one out in the first inning on a slow roller in front of the plate.

Manager Ta-Yuan Lai said Yu picked up confidence as the game went along.

"In the first inning he was not as stable as he was afterwards," said Lai, who managed the 1981 Little League champion from Tai Chung.

Wei-Chih Chen led Tai Chung's offense, going 4-for-4 with a three-run homer.

Chen singled in the first and third innings, belted a three-run homer in the fourth and singled in the fifth.

Tai Chung, a city of 700,000 people in central Taiwan, scored in every inning but the first and sixth, amassing 14 hits against four Pearl City pitchers.

Pearl City starter Ryan Morioka was the losing pitcher. The 4-foot-11, 91-pound righty allowed two runs on two hits in 1 2-3 innings, using mostly a curveball.

Watson's Rejuvinated Putter Keys Third-Round Turnaround

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Tom Watson, rejuvinated by a refound putting stroke, played what he called "a great round of golf" and moved to within a stroke of collapsing leaders Saturday in the World Series of Golf.

"Today, a spark of greatness came back. I have to build on that," the slump-ridden Watson said after he tied a tournament record with eight birdies in a round of 64. That 6-under-par score, his best of the year, put him at 207, 3-under for three rounds.

"I just hope the leaders don't get too far away," said Watson, who was four strokes off the pace when he finished. The leaders — Ian Baker-Finch and Mike Reid cooperated by finishing horribly on the Firestone Country Club course.

"It's all even-steven now," said Reid, who double bogeyed the 16th hole from a pond. "That put a different look to tomorrow. There's a lot of good players close.

"Now, it all comes down to who has the best day tomorrow," said Reid, tied in first with Baker-Finch and Larry Nelson, a stroke in front of Watson, Mark McCumber and Masters champion Sandy Lyle.

There seemed little doubt in Watson's mind that the final round Sunday should be his.

"I have a feeling of confidence," said Watson, winner of five British Opens and once the game's premier performer. "I have that old mind-set. Heck, why shouldn't you after shooting 64. I feel like I can shoot another one. I feel like I can do some damage tomorrow. I have a chance

A Five-Shot Lead Puts Jones In An Uncomfortable Position

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Rosie Jones has never carried such a commanding lead into the final round of a golf tournament.

"I don't feel real comfortable with a five-shot lead," Jones said Saturday after shooting a 6-under-par 66 to pull away from the limited field in the $265,000 LPGA World Championship.

"I'd feel more comfortable with a nine-shot lead, but I'm not going to be conservative tomorrow," she said.

Jones, making her first appearance in the World Championship and bidding for the third victory of her seven-year career, had a tournament-record-tying 11-under-par 205 total for 54 holes on the 6,107-yard, par-72 Stouffer PineIsle Resort course.

"I've had leads before, but I never would have imagined having a five-shot lead," she said.

Jones, who birdied four of the last five holes, held her five-shot lead over Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez., who shot a 71 for a 210 total.

"I want to get out of here before Rosie gets here," Lopez said as she arrived at the media center to explain her round. "I might get burned. She's hot."

Lopez said she would have to play her own game on Sunday, not worry about Jones.

"I'm due for a low number," Lopez said. "I'm hitting the ball too well."

Okamoto said she struggled because she was tired.

"It was my personal condition that made the difference in my game today," Okamoto said. "With Rosie playing so good it seemed like it was maybe too many strokes to catch up."

Jones, winner of the USX Classic earlier this year, got one birdie on the front side, a 30-footer on the fourth hole.

Cavaliers Looking To Add To Success Of Last Season

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer
(Last of a series)

Virginia, entering its 100th year of football with the 1988 season, hopes to have a year worth celebrating over.

The Cavaliers, coming off an 8-4 record and All-American Bowl victory last year, return 15 starters this season. Last season, the Cavaliers compiled a 5-2 Atlantic Coast Conference record and scored a 22-16 victory over Brigham Young in the All-American showdown. Virginia finished the campaign as the 20th-ranked team in the county by The Sporting News.

"This is the best shape that the football program has been in during my six years at Virginia," Cavalier head coach George Welsh said. "We have a lot of people coming back and we've got some depth. To be successful though, the 1988 team will have to take the same attitude as our 1987 team."

Defensively, the Cavaliers have eight starters returning from last year's squad, including the top four tacklers. Heading the list of returnees are linebackers Jeff Lageman, David Griggs and Phil Thomas, end Ray Savage, and defensive backs Keith McMeans, Kevin Cook and Tony Covington.

Cook was an All-Atlantic Coast Conference selection at free safety last season and McMeans was an honorable mention All-America at cornerback.

Lageman was the team's leading tackler last season with 89 stops, while Griggs finished third with 73.

Pirate Defensive Linemen Must Maintain Motivation

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
(Last of A Series)

East Carolina's defensive linemen are going to have to stay motivated for every snap of the ball if they want to please their coach, Donnie Thompson.

"They are going to have to play every play like it is their last play because it may be," the coach said. "If we can do that, even being young, we can play. If we don't, if any complacency sets in, then we are looking for trouble."

The Pirates shifted to an even four-man front during the off-season and head into the 1988 campaign with little experience up front, other than senior defensive tackle Shannon Boling.

"That is the thing that worries everybody," Thompson said. "All of the defensive linemen are very young. We only have two seniors (Boling and Rodney Glover). The rest of them are underclassmen. We just hope we can keep them progressing.

"In the spring, they picked up the new system extremely well that coach (Richard) Bell (defensive coordinator) brought. Physically over the summer, our strength and conditioning coach Jay Omer did an excellent job getting them physically prepared for the test. Right now we are right on schedule to have a solid front (four) with a lot of young players."

One of the biggest benefactors from the off-season conditioning has been junior defensive tackle Mike Applewhite, who lost 30 pounds and is presently playing at around 255. Applewhite came in last year as a transfer from North Carolina and wound up alternating with Ron Gilliard at the defensive end spot in the old three-man front.

"I think he is right on schedule," Thompson said. "I think a lot of people, the press and he himself, put a lot of pressure on to be a great player without paying the price. To be a great player you have got to first pay a great price, play after play and time after time.

"We put unfair pressure on the young man, coming in as a transfer when he really hadn't done anything on the field."

McNeil Makes U.S. Relay Team

From Staff and Wire Reports

Former East Carolina track standout Lee McNeill has been named to the United States 4X100 relay team following his performance at a number of tune-up meets in Europe, according to coach Al Buehler.

McNeill was competing with a number of sprinters for the right to join Carl Lewis, Dennis Mitchell and Calvin Smith on the relay team.

This move allows McNeill to travel with the six-member U.S. team to the Olympic Games in Seoul.

One other sprinter will be elevated to the final team, possibly Joe Deloach or Albert Robinson.

McNeill, a native of St. Pauls, was a three-time All-American for the Pirates in the 100-meter dash as well as the driving force behind a number of 4x100 relay teams that qualified for the NCAA Championships.

He was a member of the gold-medal winning 4x100 relay team at the World University Games last summer.

He finished eight at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials in July, but still qualified for reserve status on the relay team.

ECU QB Club Set To Open Season

The East Carolina Quarterback Club will begin its program schedule on Tuesday at the Pirate Club Building. Meetings will continue each Tuesday for the next 12 weeks, with the exception of Nov. 15.

Doors will open at 5:30 for a social, with game films shown at 5:45 p.m. Dinner will be at 6:45 p.m., and ECU head football coach Art Baker and his staff will be available for questions at 7:15 p.m.

Recognition will be made each week to athletes who have made exceptional contributions to the previous week's game.

The Quarterback Club is open to all football fans and not just to Pirate Club members, although it is sponsored by the Pitt County Chapter of the Pirate Club.

Belangia, Gulledge Take Wins At Ayden

AYDEN — Laurie Belangia and Glenn Gulledge captured the Ayden Golf and Country Club's championship tournament, held recently.

Belangia shot a 73-81—154 to capture the championship flight of the ladies division while Gulledge shot a 69-71—140 to win the men's championship A flight.

Second place in the women's event went to Carol Crew, while pete Beaman was the runner-up in the men's championship.

In the third flight, Todd Galloway took first and Jeff Woolard was second. Jimmy Medlin won the fourth flight, with Ralph Haddock taking second place. The fifth flight went to David Woolard with Joe Warren second. D.A. Laux edged past Bill Ellington Sr. to win the sixth flight.

Closest to the pin winners were Al Piland at four, Jesse Childers at nine, Diane Murphrey at 12 and W.G. Moye at 17 during Saturday's play. Sunday winners were Allen Moye at four, Gaynell Deans at nine, Janet Wingate at 12 and Tony Joyner at 17.

A total of 128 members participated in the two-day event.

The club's next tournament will be the Tenth annual Collard Festival, Sept. 10-11. A superball tournament for members is also scheduled for Sept. 25.

Ayden's Collard Festival Is Set

AYDEN — The Ayden Collard Festival will hold a doubles tennis tournament in conjunction with the 1988 festival. The tournament will be held on Sept. 10-11.

Divisions will include open men's doubles, 35 and over men's doubles and mixed doubles. Players will be limited to two divisions and all matches will use no-add scoring.

Any division which attracts eight or more entrants will have a consolation division. Winners and runners-up in each division will receive trophies.

The entry deadline is Sept. 6 at 6 p.m. A $16 entry fee, per team, per event, is charged. Checks should be made payable to the Ayden Collard Festival and should be sent to Tennis Tournament, P.O. Box 219, Ayden, N.C. 2853.

All matches will be played at the Third St. Park's courts.

For more information, contact Gil Davis at 746-3956 (day) or 746-2537 (evenings) or Tom Sayetta at 756-7576.

Rose Duo Lead Area Prep Prospects

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Rose High's Tim Moore and Carlester T.Crumpler, two of the top high school football players in the state, head the list of top college prospects in the area for 1988.

Moore, a tailback and defensive end, and Crumpler, a defensive end, were key components of last year's Rose team that finished as undefeated regular season champions of the Big East Conference.

Moore, who was part of a two-man rotation at tailback in 1987, still managed to rush for over 1,000 yards and was chosen the Big East player of the year. He is as big a college prospect as there has been in the Pitt County area for a number of years.

A 5-10, 225-pounder, Moore has attracted the attention of college recruiters across the country in football as well as professional talent scouts in baseball.

Crumpler, a 6-5, 225-pounder, is the son of former East Carolina standout tailback Carlester Crumpler, who played in the National Football League and the Canadian Football League after a standout career at ECU in the early 1970s.

"I'm sure that they have caught a lot of the college people's eye and now they have to go out and prove it their senior year," said Dick Lascola, a recruiting analyst based out of California. "Both those kids are great athletes, but a lot of people get mail their junior year, but then they have to go out and do it their senior year. They have to get through their senior year and stay healthy."

Moore and Crumpler were listed by Athlon as two of the top recruits in all of North Carolina. Other top recruits in the state this year are Burlington Williams quarterback Chuckie Burnette (6-1, 175) and Brevard defensive lineman Kelly Whitmire (6-5, 235).

While Moore and Crumpler may be the big names in the area, a number of other players could also move into the spotlight if they have big senior seasons.

Ayden-Grifton tight-end/fullback Ronnell Peterson (6-1, 190) is receiving a good deal of attention from schools in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

While he doesn't have the outstanding statistics some players have, Peterson is a versatile enough athlete to play a number of positions.

He is also an outstanding basketball player and his choice of a college may hinge on what happens during the basketball season.

Another top player for the Chargers is fullback-defensive end Aaron Harper (6-1, 195, Sr.), who has been a starter for the last two seasons paving the way for Eric Blount and company.

North Pitt defensive back Billy Hardison (5-9, 170) has been a four-year starter in the Panthers' defensive backfield. His 4.4 speed in the 40 has drawn the attention of some Atlantic Coast Conference recruiters.

North Pitt's other top prospect is tackle Tony Hopkins (6-1, 260), who has been a mainstay on the offensive and defensive lines for the Panthers for the past two years.

Pamlico County running back Terance Tatum (5-9, 160) led the Eastern Plains Conference in rushing last year with 1,275. His lack of size might turn some of the bigger schools away, but he had a good junior season on a team that finished near the bottom of the conference.

Tony Reeves (5-11, 175) of Ayden-Grifton played in the shadow of Eric Blount last year, but still managed to total over 500 yards rushing. He dominated competition at the JV level as a sophomore, rushing for over 2,000 yards. A strong senior season could attract some notice.

Joe Randolph of Washington (5-9, 150) lacks size but is long on speed. A standout in the 100 and 200-yard dashes for the Pam Pack track team, he has the potential to be a game-breaking wide receiver for Washington.

Greene Central quarterback Kris Radford (6-1, 175) was the Eastern Plains Conference's leading passer as a junior, throwing for over 1,000 yards. He could draw some notice from some smaller schools with a strong senior year.

D.H. Conley linebacker Terry Williams (6-3, 215, Jr.) heads a list of four outstanding underclassmen in the Pitt County area.

Williams was a part-time, two-way starter for Conley as a sophomore and will play both tight end and linebacker for the Vikings this year.

His teammate, Martin Patrick (6-4, 195, Jr.) plays both offensive and defensive end and also started as a sophomore.

North Pitt linebacker Reggie Daniels (6-3, 190, Jr.) is cut from the same mold as former Panther standout Ashley Sheppard, now at Fork Union. He has started for the Panthers since he was a freshman.

Morris Foreman (6-1, 162, So.), who moved up to the Farmville varsity squad late in his freshman year, is a versatile quarterback good enough to start as a sophomore. By the time he is a senior, Foreman has the potential to be a top Division I prospect.

It's not every year that high school prospects from North Carolina attract national attention, but there are always exceptions. Also, attracting notice as an underclassman is a big help.

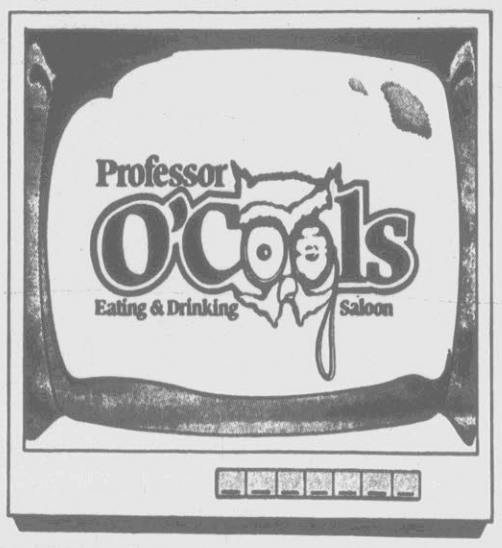

"It depends on the position you play," Lascola said. "It depends on how dominant a force your are. For a university on the west coast to get interested, the kid would have to be an outstanding prospect because for every one of him there are 10 in California. You are talking about exceptional athletes to get that kind of national exposure."

"Over 45 Years Service to Our Customers"

Clark Shuts Out Yankees, 12-0

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Terry Clark wanted more than just a victory on Saturday.

Clark pitched a seven-hitter for his first major-league shutout and the California Angels got a club-record seven consecutive hits during a nine-run second inning, beating the slumping New York Yankees 12-0.

"I wanted the shutout real bad. It feels great," said Clark, given a 10-0 lead by the time the Angels were through kicking around Charles Hudson during the nine-run outburst. "They beat me up in New York, and I wanted to get back at them."

California, which rallied from a six-run deficit to beat New York 7-6 in 12 innings Friday night, had 17 hits off four pitchers.

New York, 6-12 since Aug. 9, has allowed 10 or more hits in 13 of its last 18 games and 171 runs in 25 games this month, a 6.84 earned run average.

Clark, 6-2, struck out five and walked three in his second complete game. Hudson, 6-5, allowed 10 hits and nine runs in 1 1-3 innings.

"I give Clark credit, but pitching with a ten-run lead after two innings isn't too tough a chore," Yankees manager Lou Piniella said.

"They were getting on me about not throwing enough fastballs with a 10-0 lead," said Clark, a control pitcher who relies on changing speeds. "But I was going for a shutout.

"I got it, so they can say whatever they want."

Piniella didn't have much to say about the Angels as he has enough problems with his own starters. On 37 occasions this season, Yankee starters have failed to make it past the fifth inning.

"Charles Hudson didn't have his good stuff warming up," Piniella said. "There is a good possibility that (Ron) Guidry will start in his spot next time. If we could just get a quality start from anyone it would be a big plus now. It becomes difficult to be in a pennant race and try to find starting pitchers."

Wally Joyner's 11th homer gave the Angels a 1-0 lead in the first before the nine-run, nine-hit second, California's biggest inning of the season and the worst for New York.

Jack Howell and Thad Bosley singled and Tony Armas flied out before the seven consecutive hits. Bob Boone and Dick Schofield each singled in runs, Devon White hit an RBI double and Johnny Ray's two-run single made it 6-0.

Howell hit a two-run homer, his 14th, on Ron Guidry's second pitch.

Guidry pitched 4 2-3 innings, allowing only four hits, and only one run, the home run to Howell.

Armas hit a sacrifice fly off Neil Allen in the seventh and Jim Eppard hit an RBI single off Cecilio Guante in the eighth.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Todd Burns and Greg Cadaret combined on a seven-hitter and Luis Polonia hit a pair of run-scoring singles Saturday, leading the Oakland Athletics past the Baltimore Orioles 5-1.

Burns, 6-1, is 4-0 with a 1.17 earned-run average over seven starts in the Oakland Coliseum. He allowed five hits in 5 1-3 innings before Cadaret finished for his third save.

Oswald Peraza, 5-7, gave up nine hits and all five runs in four innings.

Cal Ripken's 22nd home run gave Baltimore the lead in the fifth before Oakland went ahead in the second.

Dave Parker and Carney Lansford singled and Terry Steinbach's RBI double tied it 1-1. Glenn Hubbard, who leads Oakland with 18 runs batted in during August, scored Lansford with a bunt single and Polonia singled with two outs to make it 3-1.

Montreal Blanks San Diego, 4-0

MONTREAL (AP) — Bryn Smith and Joe Hesketh combined on a six-hitter as the Montreal Expos beat the San Diego Padres 4-0 Saturday night.

Smith, 9-8, pitched seven innings allowing five hits in winning for the first time in four starts. Hesketh worked two innings for his seventh save. It was the Expos' 10th shutout.

Monteal took the lead with an unearned run in the second inning off Jimmy Jones, 8-12. Mike Fitzgerald reached on an infield single and moved to second when shortstop Dickie Thon made a wild throw for an error. Luis Rivera followed with a bloop RBI single.

Dave Martinez led off the bottom of the third with a triple and scored on Tom Foley's sacrifice fly.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Herm Winningham singled with two outs and the bases loaded in the bottom of the 14th inning Saturday night to give the Cincinnati Reds a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Winningham, who had struck out in a bases-loaded situation in the 10th, pulled a single down the first-base line on a 3-2 pitch from Larry McWilliams, 4-5, to score Chris Sabo from third with the winning run. John Franco, 5-5, pitched a perfect 14th to get the victory.

Jeff Treadway started the 14th with a leadoff single. He was sacrificed to second by Barry Larkin, then thrown out at the plate by center fielder Vince Coleman when he tried to score on Sabo's single.

Kal Daniels then walked, and Eric Davis was intentionally walked to load the bases for Winningham.

St. Louis starter Joe Magrane had a 2-0 lead in the eighth when he walked Larkin leading off. With two outs, Davis hit his 24th homer, an opposite-field drive to right field to tie the score.

Magrane pitched nine innings and allowed six hits.

HOUSTON (AP) — Dave Meads pitched 5 1-3 scoreless innings in relief of injured starter Mike Scott as the Houston Astros beat the slumping Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1 Saturday night.

The second-place Pirates have lost seven of their last 11 games and have dropped 7½ games behind the New York Mets in the National League East.

Meads, 3-0, allowed three hits and struck out a career-high five. He retired 11 straight batters before pinch-hitter John Cangelosi singled with one out in the seventh and Juan Agosto relieved for his fourth save.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead in the first when Barry Bonds led off with a single, stole second, moved to third on a fly ball and scored on a Sid Bream's single.

Houston made it 2-1 in the third inning off starter Bob Walk, 11-10. Meads led off with a single and moved to second on Bobby Bonilla's throwing error on Gerald Young's grounder. Both runners advanced on a grounder, before Meads scored on Billy Hatcher's groundout with Young going to third. Young then scored on a wild pitch.

Steelers Rally To Top Saints

All of Pittsburgh's scoring came after New Orleans had taken a 21-0 first-quarter lead.

Bubby Brister hit Louis Lipps on a 48-yard scoring play 1:28 into the second quarter, then set up a 1-yard scoring plunge by Earnest Jackson with a 59-yard pass to Charles Lockett. Jackson's touchdown came with 2:17 left in the second quarter.

New Orleans made it 28-14 on a 49-yard touchdown run by first-round draft choice Craig Heyward with 25 seconds left in the first half.

The Steelers scored 27 seconds into the second half on a 33-yard fumble return by Thomas Everett and tied it at 28 on an 8-yard pass from Brister to Weegie Thompson with 2:19 left in the third quarter.

Everett's return came off a fumble by the Saints' Rueben Mayes, a two-time Pro Bowl pick who ended a 10-day walkout on Thursday.

Brister went all the way at quarterback for the Steelers, completing 18 of 29 passes for 313 yards.

Bobby Hebert passed for three first-quarter Saints touchdowns. He hit Eric Martin in the end zone with a 24-yard scoring pass on New Orleans' first play from scrimmage, a short drive set up when Sam Mills recovered a fumble by Walter Abercrombie.

Packers..... 27
Jets..... 24

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Don Majkowski and Paul Ott Carruth rallied Green Bay to two fourth-quarter touchdowns Saturday and the Packers beat the New York Jets 27-24 in their preseason finale.

Carruth's run capped a 76-yard drive and came less than three minutes after the Jets' Bobby Humphrey returned a kickoff 103 yards to give New York a 24-20 lead.

The Jets, trailing 13-0 at the half, scored 17 consecutive third-quarter points as Ken O'Brien and Al Toon hooked up on two touchdown passes. O'Brien's 29-yard pass to Toon with 1:38 left in the third quarter gave New York a 17-13 lead.

But Majkowski, battling Marc Wilson for the Packers' backup quarterback spot, entered the game in the fourth quarter and immediately led a 74-yard drive in 10 plays, scrambling twice himself for gains of 14 and 16 yards. He capped the drive with a 16-yard pass to Carruth to give Green Bay a 20-17 lead with 9:29 to go.

Humphrey took the ensuing kickoff and broke through the Packers defense to make it 24-20 Jets with 9:12 remaining.

Pat Leahy kicked a 45-yard field goal with 8:16 to go in the third quarter to cut Green Bay's lead to 13-3. Then O'Brien and Toon, the former University of Wisconsin star, went to work.

Wilson fumbled on his third play of the game after replacing Randy Wright at quarterback and Gerald Nichols recovered for the Jets at the Packers 11.

O'Brien hit Toon with a 9-yard scoring pass to make it 13-10 with 6:37 remaining.

O'Brien and Toon hooked up again five minutes later on the 29-yarder that made it 17-13.

Redskins..... 34
Falcons..... 17

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Timmy Smith ran for 99 yards and scored twice from a yard out as the Washington Redskins defeated the Atlanta Falcons 34-17 Saturday night in the final exhibition game for both NFL teams.

Washington, the defending Super Bowl champion, ended its preseason with a 3-1 record while Atlanta fell to 2-2, with 51,400 fans on hand at Legion Field.

The Falcons open their season at Detroit Sept. 4, while Washington will start defense of its title at New York the next night against the Giants.

Smith's second touchdown capped an 88-yard drive in which he carried eight times for 39 yards, putting the Redskins ahead for good, 21-17, late in the second period.

Smith's first touchdown, also from the 1, came after a 31-yard pass interference call on Atlanta's Charles Dimry and gave Washington a 7-3 edge.

Defensive end Charles Mann recovered a fumble and ran it in from the 12 to give the Skins a 14-3 lead. Wilber Marshall caused the fumble by knocking the ball from Craig Miller's hand.

Atlanta, however, rallied for a 17-14 lead on two scoring runs by Gerald Riggs, the second set up by a fumble recovery by Tom Strauthers at the 4.

After Atlanta punted three times and Washington twice in the third period, without a first down by either team, Chip Lohmiller kicked field goals of 23 and 27 yards and Mark Rypien threw a 15-yard scoring pass to Mike Oliphant to wind up the scoring for Washington.

Reid was two strokes in front of the field before his double bogey. He also bogeyed the 17th hole and finished with a 1-over 71 and a 206.

Baker-Finch, given the lead alone by Reid's late collapse, promptly backed off, too. He three-putted for bogey on the 18th, setting up the three-way tie for the lead. He also shot a 71.

"I'm not a very happy boy right now," said Baker-Finch, winner of seven titles in Australia, New Zealand, Japan and Europe.

Nelson, twice a PGA champion and a former U.S. Open winner, was three shots back when he finished with a 66, but saw the leaders come back to him.

"Now I have a chance to win the golf tournament just by playing a good round," he said. "Before, I needed somebody to play bad and for me to play good. Now I can do it on my own."

Watson, the winner of only one title in four years, said he made "a little adjustment in my putting. It felt a lot better, a heckova lot better. I've got the ball going at the hole. I haven't had a lot of confidence in my putting in a long time."

McCumber did not make a bogey in a round of 66. Lyle, once tied for the lead, bogeyed the 18th hole and shot a 71.

Ben Crenshaw had a 68 despite hitting into the water on the 16th and was only two back at 208.

Defensive Line ...

scheme is more compatible with the existing players since it emphasizes quickness and mobility.

"Back in the 1970s when they had the great defenses here they had the great runners and coach Bell has kind of brought that characteristic back," Thompson said. "We lost weight but we didn't lose any strength.

"It seems like it is more compatible. Applewhite comes in 30 pounds lighter at 255 and can run a 4.8 40. With the mobility that Ernie Logan has as a standup end and with Joe Bright only 211 pounds, it creates a lot of problems for a 270-pound tackle to wind down and try to block a Joe Bright who is 4.7. The things we're doing to keep them on the move are more adaptable to quick linemen."

Position By Position Analysis

Defensive Ends:

Bright (6-4, 220, red-shirt-freshman): "Joe has good strength and good quickness," Thompson said. "He can play the run well and he can play the pass well. He hasn't played so you don't know when the big lights come on how he is going to react but we'll see about that."

Logan (6-4, 240, Jr.): "Ernie is potentially as good as Ernie will allow himself to be," Thompson said. "There are no limitations on Ernie Logan. He could be a great, dominant rusher if Ernie decides to rush. It's just a matter of him going out and executing play after play after play."

Defensive Tackles

Applewhite (6-3, 255, Jr.): "He has shown that he can do great things by getting himself in tip-top shape," Thompson said. "Now he's worked himself where he can compete with anybody."

Boling (6-3, 240, Sr.): "Shannon probably is the most valuable performer on the front in that he is not the fastest, not the strongest, but he has the ability to play against anybody at all four positions," Thompson said.

This lineup was by no means set, according to Thompson, because the players still have a week of practice to go before the season opener with Tennessee Tech on Sept. 3.

"We are going to play the best four players," he said. "You may see Shannon playing one position and Carl Carney playing another. We have some guys behind those guys that are not that far off.

"Glover (6-5, 268, Sr.) has shown great improvement in the off-season he has cut his 40 time and he's worked very hard to go out on a positive note. He is expected to play this year."

Two freshmen, Robbie Jones (6-2, 215) and Greg Gardill (6-3, 235), have also made a good impression on Thompson during fall drills. "He's (Jones) exceeded all my expectations. He's playing well enough to expect to play in the first two ball games. He's done extremely well," he added.

Defensive end Joe Holmes, who last spring was number two on the depth chart, was suspended from the team as fall practice opened pending an assault trial set for Sept. 6 in Dare County.

His status will be reviewed by University officials later in the year.

"Assessments are made in our group every day," Thompson said. "I feel today that we are as strong as we would have been with him or without him. At the rate that Robbie Jones and Greg Gardill have come, he would have been battling to make the top eight players."

As a group, Thompson said his players' inexperience has one positive characteristic.

"The potential of this group is good," he said. "One of the good things is that our egos are very flat because our guys are young and they don't have anything to pat themselves on the back about."

Joining the pair at the linebacking positions will be Matt Woods.

Savage, who was second on the team in tackles last year with 76, will be joined at the other defensive end spot by either Preston Hicks or Jim Sanford.

The Cavalier secondary should be anchored by cornerback Means and free safety Cook, while Covington, who was the leading tackler in the secondary last year also returns. Competing for the starting strong safety position this year will be red-shirt freshmen Tyrone Lewis and Keith Fuller.

"One of the crucial areas for us defensively is the strong safety position," Welsh said. "We don't have anybody that has played there (before)."

Along the defensive line, Virginia returns starters Ron Carey at nose guard and Elton Toliver at one of the tackle positions. Also returning are Joe Hall and Chris Stearns at tackle.

Offensively, the Cavaliers return seven seven starters and have their top six rushers back, along with eight of their top nine receivers.

Gone, however, is All-ACC quarterback Scott Secules. Secules threw for 2,311 yards last year and completed 174-296 passes for a 58.8 percent clip.

Red-shirt sophomore Shawn Moore is the leading candidate to replace Secules at the signal caller position. Moore played in six games last season, completing 11-18 passes for 131 yards.

Bolstering the backfield behind Moore will be tailback Marcus Wilson and fullback Durwin Greggs. Wilson led the Cavaliers in rushing last season with 692 yards on 172 carries. Greggs compiled 436 yards for the 1987 campaign on 111 attempts.

At receiver, senior All-America candidate John Ford returns as the Cavaliers' leading receiver. Ford earned All-ACC honors and set a single season Virginia receiving record with 855 yards receiving last year.

Along the offensive line, four starters return this season. Back are junior Tim Morris at center, Roy Brown at one guard spot and Tim O'Connor at tackle along with Joel Dempsey at tight end. Sophomore Paul Collins started two games last season and is expected to start at the other tackle position, while sophomore Trevor Ryals should start at the other guard spot.

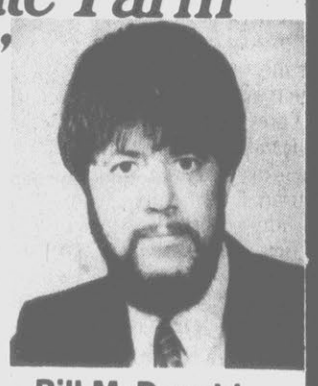

Senior Mark Inderlied returns as Virginia's placekicker and either Joel Dempsey or Fred Carter will compete for the punting responsibilities. Inderlied connected on 13-19 field goals last season and was a perfect 29-29 in PAT's.

"Nobody can tell at this stage how good you are going to be," Welsh said when asked how he thought the 1988 team would do. "I think we should be pretty good, how good is just hard to say until you get on the field."

Welsh should get an idea pretty early in the year how good his team is though as the Cavaliers face Penn State in week two of the season and Clemson in week five.

The Track Is The Focus At Bristol

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Alan Kulwicki won the pole for the Busch 500, but it was the track that got everyone's attenton.

Geoff Bodine was only half kidding about getting a few extra thrills during his two qualifying laps Friday night on the half-mile, high-banked oval at Bristol International Raceway.

The track has been patched in turns one and three and a sealer that makes the asphalt surface more slippery has been applied in several places since the spring race.

"It was pretty wild out there on both laps," Bodine said. "I feel like I just ran 500 laps here. I'm so out of breath, I don't think my car was straight any time around there. It was two laps out of control."

Kulwicki, who set a race qualifying record of 116.893 mph, talked less about winning his third pole of the season — and sixth of his career — than about the bumpy, treacherous track surface.

The race tonight could be hard on everyone because of the rough track.

"It's bumpier than it's ever been and as slick or slicker than it's ever been," Kulwicki said of the track. "It's the same for everybody, but it's really going to be treacherous (in the race).

"It's tough because when you get in traffic, it's hard to go over the bumps side-by-side. You get airborne when you go over those bumps. I think this track needs to be repaved. It was marginal before, and now it's worse."

Kulwicki was second to Rick Wilson in qualifying here in April when Wilson set the track record of 117.552 mph.

"In the spring, I missed out by four-hundredths (of a second), then I win this time by four-hundredths," he said. "This place is close.

"I figured before we went out there that it would be between me and Mark because we were fast in practice," Kulwicki added. "We both ran hard and I just came out a little ahead."

Kulwicki, driving a Ford Thunderbird, moved into a tie with fellow Ford driver Bill Elliott in the battle for the $30,000 that goes to the winner of the most poles during the 29-race Winston Cup season.

Elliott was next at 114.740, with Harry Gant at 114.316, Wilson at 114.092, Ken Schrader at 114.085 and Labonte at 113.950 rounding out the top 10.

Another round of qualifying today will determine the final 15 starters in the 30-car field.

Among those who failed to make the lineup Friday night were Ricky Rudd, who won the race at Watkins Glen, N.Y., two weeks ago, and a large group of veterans including Richard Petty, Kyle Petty, Neil Bonnett, Lake Speed, Michael Waltrip, Morgan Shepherd and Mike Alexander.

Rusty Wallace, the current Winston Cup point leader, missed the first round of time trials entirely, spending the night in a Bristol hospital after crashing during a Friday practice session.

Wallace, 31, from Fenton, Mo., came away from his wild, barrel-rolling crash with no apparent injuries, but was kept overnight in the hospital for observation. His crew was readying a backup car for him to qualify today.

Hendrickson Conquers Nerves For Lead

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — It didn't take Dick Hendrickson very long to get over a case of the nerves in the $250,000 Senior Golf Classic.

"The first hole was nerve-wracking to say the least," Hendrickson said. "If I could get the ball in play and make par, I felt I could avoid disaster."

Hendrickson, an imposing 6-foot-7 and 275 pounds, went on to a shoot a 5-under-par 65 to tie Charles at 129 going into Sunday's final 18 holes over the 6,595-yard layout.

Their total of 11 shots under par was the lowest numerical score for two rounds on the Senior Tour this year.

"I'm playing well from tee to green," said Hendrickson, 53, of West Chester, Pa. "If I can keep my composure and confidence, there's no reason I can't be the first alternate to win a tournament."

Hendrickson birdied the second hole after a 4-iron approach shot left him with a 15-foot putt birdie putt, which he made, and went on to record five more birdies.

Charles, who had a course-tying 63 on the first day, also had a shaky start by missing birdie opportunities on the first three holes. But he had six birdies, including the last three holes with putts of 12, 30 and 6 feet, to finish with a 66.

"I was playing sloppy golf thorugh the first nine holes," said Charles. "I hit a chip shot on No. 10 to get even par and pick me up and the result was a 30 on the back nine."

Charles, the Senior Tour's leading money winner this year with $357,758, thought he might be more relaxed than Hendrickson on Sunday.

"The tension is not as great as it is for somebody trying to win their first tournament," said Charles, who has three victories in 1988. "But the fact is that you have to play a good round of golf to win."

Bob Erickson, who led early Saturday after rolling in six birdies on the front nine for a 29, finished with a 67 and was three strokes off the pace at 132.

Gary Player also rallied after shooting an even-par 35 on the first nine to finish with a 68 and 133 total. That was good enough for a tie with Miller Barber, who started his round with an 18-foot birdie putt on the first hole and shot 65.

Larry Mowry had the best round of the day with a 64, which included three birdies on both the front and back nines, to join Lou Graham and Bob Boldt at 134. Graham shot a 66 and Boldt a 69.

Billy Casper, with a 68, was at 135, while Dale Douglass (67), Don Bies (67), J.C. Goosie (70) and Bobby Nichols (70) were knotted at 136.

Al Geiberger withdrew from the tournament Friday after learning that his 2-year-old son, Matthew, was seriously injured in a pool accident in California. The boy died Saturday.

The Super Seniors is a two-day tournament within the Senior Classic for golfers over the age of 60. Dickinson won $7,000 while Fetchick earned $5,250 of the $35,000 purse.

Yates And Meeks Advance To Final

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Danny Yates, who is playing in his ninth U.S. Amateur, and Eric Meeks, who failed to make the match-play field in his previous four tries, both won a pair of matches Saturday to advance to Sunday's 36-hole final of the 88th annual national championship.

"It's obviously a very special thing for me," said Yates, 38, an insurance agent from Atlanta.

Yates was a 5-and-4 winner over fellow Atlanta resident Jack Larkin in a quarterfinal match Saturday morning.

Yates never trailed in his afternoon match against Doug Martin, but admitted he tired toward the end of his 1-up victory, which represented the first time any of his five matches had gone the full 18 holes of the Cascades course at The Homestead.

"I'm just glad to still be standing," he said. "We were like a couple of old drunks just fighting it out."

Meeks, 23, who this past spring was named third-team All-American as a senior at Arizona, beat teammate Robert Gamez by a 2-up margin in the morning before a 1-up victory over David Toms of Bossier City, La., in the semifinals.

"I'm kind of shocked," said Meeks, of Walnut, Calif. "I thought I had a chance of making the finals, but it's a dream come true."

Meeks, who missed making the 64-man match play field by one stroke in each of the past four U.S. Amateurs, said he wasn't completely prepared to last the entire week in this year's tournament.

"I've got to do some laundry tonight," he said.

Yates, a 1972 Georgia graduate whose victories include the 1974 Southern Amateur, the 1974 North & South and the 1977 Georgia Amateur, took his biggest advantage over Martin at 2-up with a winning 4 at No. 12, a 476-yard par-4.

Yates lost the next hole, a 438-yard dogleg left, when his drive went into thick woods at the base of a mountain, but Martin, a 21-year-old resident of Van Buren, Ohio, and a senior at Oklahoma, was unable to draw closer over the final five holes.

Both players took double-bogey 6s at the par-4 14th. At No. 15, a 222-yard par-3 where both golfers missed he green with their tee shots, Yates sank a 14-foot downhill putt with a looping break to save par and half the hole.

Moore Paces Rose To 36-7 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

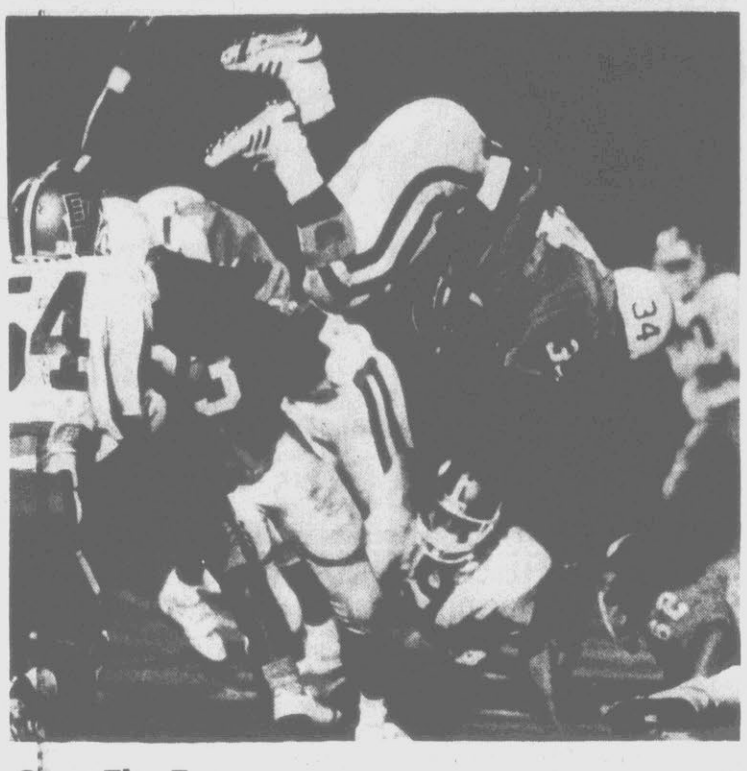

Rose High School made some mistakes, but didn't let them slow them down as Timmy Moore led the Rampants to a 36-7 victory over Eastern Wayne in the opening football game of the year Friday night at Daniels Field.

Moore, seemingly taking up where he left off at the end of his junior season, carried the ball 15 times for 154 yards, scoring on runs of 1 and 18 yards.

Backup Tony Williams scored two times also, on rushes of 2 and 12 yards, while Malcolm Wilson scored on a 15-yard pass from Jamie Brewington and Billy Carr scored on a 13-yard scamper to wind up the Rose side of the scoring.

Eastern Wayne's lone touchdown came on a 7-yard run by Earl Lewis.

Rose made mistakes, drawing nine penalties for 60 yards, but in each instance overcame them. A holding penalty, for instance, wiped out Moore's first scoring effort, but Brewington came back with the scoring toss to Wilson, who made a second effort catch of the ball for the first score of the game.

Over The Top

Rose High School tailback Timmy Moore (34) vaults over the line to score the first of two touchdowns Friday night against Eastern Wayne as the Rampants opened the 1988 season. Moore rushed 15 times for 154 yards in leading Rose to a 36-7 victory in the game. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Moore drew the praises of both coaches in the aftermath. "He's a man playing with boys," Eastern's Gerald Whisenhunt said. "Timmy did well," a less-praising Rose coach Chip Williams contributed.

Whisenhunt said the Rampants were about as he expected them to be. "But we're not as good as we were last year," he added. Rose downed the Warriors 47-12 last time around.

The Rampants, however, were unable to convert on any of their extra points on the night, twice having kicks blocked and twice missing on kicks. The other two times, Rose went for two and failed to convert.

"That bothers me some," Williams said, "but we haven't put a lot of time on our kicking game. I was disappointed with both our placements and our punting (26.7 yard average) but Felix Robinson wasn't supposed to punt tonight. Mac Wilson was supposed to, but his leg started hurting, so we had to put Felix in at the last minute."

Not that it mattered. Rose was in control from the opening moments of the game, taking the first two possessions into the end zone.

After being stopped for just two yards on his first carry, Moore rambled 21 yards on the second to the Eastern 40. Brewington hit Keith Anderson for 19 more yards to the 26 after a loss and two plays later, Moore seemingly scored on a 13-yard run.

But holing was called, moving the ball back to the 19. Brewington hit Abram Lang for seven and Moore carried for two more before Rose was penalized back to the 15 on third down for delay. A third-down pass fell incomplete before Brewington hit Wilson in the end zone. The end had the ball knocked out of his hands initially, but stayed with it and caught it just before hitting the ground for the score.

Rose regained the ball at its own 24 and made its longest drive of the night on the next series. Moore went over left tackle for 20 on the first play. Then on third and seven, Brewington hit Eric Morris for 26 yards to the Warrior 27. Moore added 15, then 11, down to the one. He was stopped for no gain on the next play, then hurdled the line for the score on second down.

Rose went for two, but again failed to convert, making it 12-0.

After exchanging punts, Rose got the ball back on the Eastern 41 after a partially blocked punt with just under six minutes left in the half. Moore ripped 19 yards off on first down, then, two plays later, went the final 18 for the score. Moore ran over the PAT, but a holding call again negated it and a second try, a pass failed and Rose led 18-0.

Two plays after the kickoff, Rose recovered a Warrior fumble at the Eastern 23. Maurice Hines gained 11 yards on two plays and a two penalties against the Warriors moved it to the two. From there, Williams scored over left tackle, running the lead to 24-0 with 1:56 left in the half.

Eastern scored on its first possession of the second half, driving 75 yards for the score. Only once in the drive did the Warriors get off a run of over nine yards, that a 24-yard reverse by Marc Isom that put the ball on the Rose seven. From there, Lewis scored straight up the middle. Marty McAlduff kicked the PAT to close it to 24-7 with 7:07 left.

But Eastern crossed midfield but once more and had a field goal attempt blocked in its only other threat.

Rose, meanwhile, came back to score twice more in the period. Moore ran twice in the series, his only carries in the second half, picking up 30 yards on the two. Williams finished it off with the final 12 yards, making it 30-7 with 5:20 showing.

Two plays after the kickoff, Anderson intercepted Eastern at the Warrior 27, setting up the final score. Hines ran twice for 14 yards to the 13 and Carr, on his only carry of the game, took the ball up the middle for the score to run it to 36-7.

"I'm very pleased with the effort tonight," Williams said. "We were able to get a lot of people their first taste of varsity play and I think they found out the level they're going to have to play on to be successful.

"We were coming in wondering about a lot of things. We put in a lot of offense and we wondered if we had tried to do too much. But we didn't show it all by any means. I thought Jamie did a good job throwing the ball, too. His only interception came when the pattern was not run correctly.

"Obviously we have trouble with the kicking game, but our kickoff coverage was much improved," Williams said.

Rose plays at home again on Friday, playing host to Jacksonville, the team that ended its playoff hopes last year.

Daniels Sends A Warning

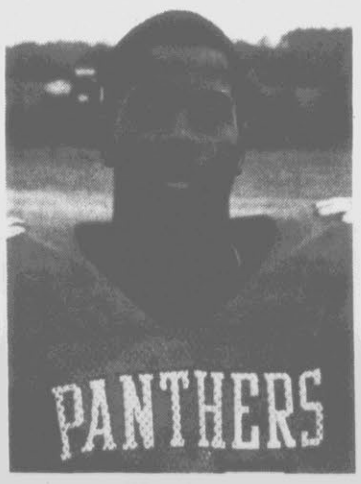

North Pitt Rolls, 49-28

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt senior running back Michael Daniels sent a warning to North Pitt opponents Friday night: "The fourth quarter is our quarter."

Daniels helped to key the Panthers to 21 unanswered points in the final period Friday night as North Pitt's football team defeated West Craven 49-28 in both teams' season opening game.

The North Pitt victory overshadowed a brilliant performance by West Craven sophomore running back Lee Becton. Becton rushed for 244 yards on 19 carries and tallied two touchdowns.

Michael Daniels

"We work on the fourth quarter drills every day in practice," Daniels, who had 180 yards on 16 carries for two touchdowns, said. "That's when we go all out."

After see-sawing back and forth into a 28-28 tie, fullback Michael Blow put the Panthers on top for good with 7:57 to play in the game with a 2-yard touchdown run, which capped a seven play, 63-yard drive. Dave Sawyer's PAT made the score 35-28.

Daniels then came up with the big defensive play for the Panthers on the Eagles' next possession. On a third and nine play, Daniels picked off a Kevin Holzworth pass, giving North Pitt the ball at the West Craven 35.

One play later, Blow, who tallied 75 yards on 15 carries, burst up the middle to the end zone. Sawyer's PAT gave the Panthers a 42-28 lead with 6:27 remaining.

After North Pitt recovered a fumbled snap on a West Craven attempted punt at the Eagles' 4-yard line, quarterback Billy Hardison put the icing on the Panthers' victory cake when he scored on a keeper from three yards out with 1:41 to play. West Craven finished the game with four turnovers.

"I thought at one time the score was going to end up at 100-100," North Pitt head coach Stuart Ennis said. "But our defense really buckled down in the fourth quarter and did the job for us. I think the big plays defensively were when we held them on a 2-point (conversion) try when it was 28-28 and Michael's (Daniel) interception."

"Defensively, we just had a total collapse," said West Craven coach Clay Jordan. "If you're only 12-years old you need to be able to play better defense than we did tonight."

North Pitt broke out on top first in the game thanks to a 37-yard run by Daniels with 9:50 to play in the opening period. Sawyer's PAT was wide, giving the Panthers a 6-0 lead. The touchdown was set up when Holzworth, a sophomore, fumbled on the first play from scrimmage. Senior Johnny Sherrod recovered the loose ball for the Panthers.

The Eagles managed to move on top before the end of the quarter when Becton broke loose for a 65-yard scoring run with 4:54 left in the first. Holzworth scored the 2-point conversion on a keeper for an 8-6 lead.

After holding West Craven on a fourth down try, the Panthers went on a six-play, 60-yard drive, which was capped off with a 13-yard touchdown run by Daniels. Malcolm Wiggins went over the middle for the 2-point conversion to give North Pitt a 14-8 lead with 7:55 to play in the opening half.

The Panthers moved on top 20-8 less than a minute later when Hardison hooked up with Reggie Daniels on a 29-yard scoring strike. The touchdown was set up when Jeff Oakley recovered a Becton fumble at the Eagle 29-yard line.

Three-plays later, the Eagles pulled to within 20-16 when Holzworth hit Kip Bryan on a 64-yard screen pass for a touchdown with 5:42 to play before the half. Holzworth also fired a pass to Becton for the 2-point conversion.

After West Craven stymied a Panther drive at its own 31, the Eagles went 69 yards in three plays to take over the lead. Becton put the touchdown on the board with a 46-yard scamper. The 2-point try failed giving the Eagles a 22-20 lead with 7:48 left in the third.

North Pitt then mounted its most impressive drive of the night, going 80 yards in nine plays to to retake the lead. Hardison connected with William Mourning from 37 yards out for the score. Wiggins' 2-point run gave the Panthers a 28-22 lead with 2:39 left in the third quarter.

The Eagles then tied the contest on its next possession thanks to a 43-yard scoring run by Becton, which capped off a 70-yard drive. The Panthers held on the 2-point try by West Craven leaving the game deadlocked at 28-28 with 11:11 to play in the game.

Bulldogs' Early Scores Sink Chargers

Wallace-Rose Hill Wins, 14-8

Looking For Room

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton finally got its offense straightened out in the second half, but with only two quarters to go, the Chargers couldn't quite make up lost ground on Eastern 2-A powerhouse Wallace-Rose Hill.

After the Bulldogs scored twice in the second quarter, the Chargers' offense sputtered until they rallied for one score in the second half. Ayden-Grifton also had a chance at the end, but fell short, 14-8, in the opening game of the 1988 high school football season for both Friday night.

"We said going into the ball game that our offensive line was going to be the key," said Charger coach B.T. Chappell. "When they blocked, we ran the ball well. In the second half, we moved the ball well."

After totaling only 20 net yards rushing over the first two quarters, Ayden-Grifton ran for 184 yards in the second half, led by fullback Aaron Harper, who had 64 of his 77 yards in the second half.

In fact, with the clock running down in the fourth quarter, the Chargers put together a drive that reached the Bulldog 28 before falling apart.

Harper had 40 of the drive's 47 yards on the march, but with a fourth-and-five situation at the 28, a halfback pass from Tony Reeves to Rashid Williams fell incomplete, killing the drive.

The Bulldogs' Charles Williams set up the long fourth down on the previous play when he broke through the line and tackled Harper for a four-yard loss on a third-and-one try.

"That was the game," said Wallace-Rose Hill coach Jack Holley. "Our backer made a real big play on that sweep. They had hurt us wide."

Still, the Chargers made a game of it in the second half.

"We weren't blocking (in the first half)," Chappell said. "We worked on our blocking scheme with our guard and tackle. They were shooting down real hard and our tackle wasn't able to get penetration."

Holley said the Bulldogs made a change on their defensive front after the Chargers' first offensive series of the game.

"We changed our look on defense," he said. "We took our outside linebackers and put them over the ends."

After halftime, the Chargers got things straightened out. They scored on their initial possession of the second half.

Halfback Tony Reeves got things started out with a 14-yard run on the first play of the march. He added runs of 11 and 12 yards late in the drive that culminated with a one-yard sneak by quarterback Darryl Moye with 5:30 to go in the third period. Moye then hit Ronnell Peterson for the two-point conversion to make it 14-8.

Unfortunately for the Chargers, Moye was hurt later in the half and didn't return. That left junior Jay Tripp, the number three-quarterback, to lead the Chargers, but he turned in a solid performance, according to Chappell. Number-two signal caller Terry Dixon was late getting to practice due to Governor's school. Tripp didn't complete his only pass attempt but he was able to lead the Chargers on the final drive that fell just short.

"There is a lot of hope for us," Chappell said. "I feel like we can keep our heads up. I watched them (Wallace-Rose Hill) scrimmage last week and they dominated a 4-A team."

The Bulldogs scored their first touchdown on a 69-yard drive midway through the first half. The key play on the drive was a 28-yard pass from Battle Holley to David Barnes on a third-and-10 situation that gave Wallace-Rose Hill the ball at the Charger 12-yard line. Eric Carter later scored the first of his two touchdowns on the night when he went in from two yards out.

Carter's second score was set up when Fonzo Bennerman blocked a James Woodard punt and later recovered it at the Ayden-Grifton 12-yard line.

"One breakdown was the punt," Chappell said. "The man just came up the middle. That was the difference in the ball game."

Harper had 77 yards to lead Ayden-Grifton while Reeves had 66.

"I told him he was the strongest one out there," Chappell said of Harper. "He was getting a lot of it on his own. Aaron was able to bull his way along. Tony Reeves, I thought, ran hard too."

Carter had 88 yards for the Bulldogs.

Prep QB Arrested

JACKSONVILLE — On the eve of Jacksonville High School's traditional season-opening clash with its cross-town rival, the school's starting quarterback was arrested on a charge of possessing "crack," a powerful form of cocaine.

Charles Edward Pierce, 17, a senior, was suspended from the football team Friday, hours before the game. Jacksonville won the contest, 7-0.

Pierce was among four teen-agers arrested late Thursday night. He was charged with felonious possession of 18 vials of cocaine with intent to sell or deliver and with a misdemeanor offense of carrying a concealed weapon, after a paring knife was seized during the arrest.

According to court records, Pierce was placed on five years' supervised probation in October after pleading guilty to death by vehicle in a July 5, 1987, two-car collision in which a woman was killed.

Pierce, who also pleaded guilty to driving with a provisional license after drinking and driving left of center in the same incident, was ordered to pay $4,637.81 in restitution to the victim's family, a $500 fine and court costs. A charge of driving while impaired was dismissed.

Chuck Martin, the school's head football coach, said he was shocked to learn of Thursday's charges against Pierce. He said the suspension could be lifted if Pierce, whom he described as having "very good athletic skills," is cleared of the charges.

Also charged with possession of cocaine with intent to sell or deliver were Cory Anthony Williams, 19; Darius Demetrus Morgan, 18; and Timothy Renato Franklin, 19, all of Jacksonville.

Franklin was also charged with a misdemeanor offense of carrying a concealed weapon, a .25-caliber pistol.

Delma Collins, deputy chief of the Jacksonville Police Department, said the four youths were in a car that police stopped Thursday night. The drugs, knife and gun were found in the car, he said.

Collins said the crack had a street value of "several hundred dollars."

Williams, who attends St. Augustine's College in Raleigh, was also charged with the felony offense of maintaining a vehicle for storage, sale or use of a controlled substance. Collins said police confiscated the car, which is registered to Williams' mother.

Pierce and Franklin, who listed no occupation on his arrest warrant, were both released under bonds of $10,300 each. Williams was released after posting a $20,000 bond.

Morgan, a student at Jacksonville High, remained in the Onslow County Jail late Friday in lieu of $7,500 bond.

Hardison's Return Keys Jaguars

FARMVILLE — Billy Hardison came up with a 30-yard fumble return for a touchdown with just over four minutes remaining in the game to help Farmville Central take a 16-14 win over North Edgecombe in a non-conference football game Friday night.

North Edgecombe took and early lead when Rodney Conyers caught a 10-yard scoring pass from Orlando Whitaker. Kelvin Lyons added the point after to make it 7-0.

Farmville came back with 10 points in the second quarter as Lyons ran out of the end zone for a safety.

Farmville then scored on the final play of the first half as Reggie Barrett caught a 17-yard pass from Mack Davis, who was replacing the injured Morris Foreman at quarterback. Darryl Wilkes ran in the two-point conversion to make it 10-7.

Conyers and Whitaker hooked up again in the third quarter, this time on a 22-yard scoring play, to put North Edgecombe up 13-10, but it wasn't enough as the Jaguars came back to win on Hardison's defensive score.

Foreman wasn't the only quarterback casualty for the Jaguars as Davis cut his hand in the third quarter and had to be replaced by number-three quarterback Jeff Tyson.

Scott Gardner had 19 tackles to lead the Jaguar defense while linebacker Bernard Newsome had 12.

Williamston 12

WILLIAMSTON — Manteo High School took advantage of a late fumble by Williamston to tie the score, then halted a two-point overtime conversion play to gain a 13-12 victory over the Tigers in the opening football game of the season for both teams.

Williamston scored first in the game, as Tony Williams went in from four yards out just seconds into the second quarter. David Jewell broke through to block the extra point, however, and the Tigers took a 6-0 lead into halftime.

Late in the game, Manteo drove down to the three yard line before the Tigers dug in and stopped the drive.

But two plays later, Williamston fumbled and Willie Ethridge recovered for Redskins at the four. Two plays later, Tyrone Gordon scored from the one to tie it at 6-6.

Williamston drove back down the field, following the kickoff, but suffered an interception at the 14 yard line, sending the game into overtime.

Gordon scored for Manteo on the first play, from 10 yards out and Les Alston kicked the PAT for a 13-6 lead.

Williamston's Tyrone Bland scored from the four on the second play of its series, but Williamston elected to go for the win and fell short on the two-point conversion try.

The Tigers return to action on Friday, traveling to Perquimans.

WASHINGTON — David Williams rushed for 99 yards on 10 carries as 3-A Washington rolled over 1-A Belhaven-Wilkenson in high school football action Friday.

After going ahead 15-0 over the first two quarters, courtesy of a three-yard run by Darrell Dixon, a safety and a one-yard run by Brian Jones, the Pam Pack came up with three scores in the third quarter to break the game open.

Williams had a 64-yard run during the spurt, while Damien Moore and Brian Reddick also scored touchdowns.

"Belhaven never threatened," said Washington coach Bob Hanna. "Other than penalties, we did a lot of good things and a lot of stupid things. But for the most part, I was pleaeed with the effort. We got after the ball well, but have to iron out lot of the mental mistakes we made."

Camden 26
Chocowinity 8

CHOCOWINITY — Camden High School quarterback Brian Webster threw two touchdown passes in the second period, leading the Bruins to a 26-8 football victory over hosting Chocowinity Friday night as the two teams opened the 1988 season.

The two teams played scoreless through the first quarter of the game, but Webster's two TD passes helped break open the game as the Bruins scored three times before the half ended.

Webster first teamed up with Jody Williams on a 60-yard scoring strike for a 6-0 lead. He next went to Marvin Burnham on a 20-yard pass for the second score. Jody Linton then added the PAT kick for a 13-0 edge.

Camden closed out the first half scoring on a 34-yard run by Ernest Harris with Linton again kicking to make it 20-0 at that point.

Camden added a fourth touchdown in the third period. Shawn Bigbie did the honors this time, scoring from 17 yards away.

Chocowinity's lone score came in the final period when Chris Haywood snatched a pitchout out of the air and returned it 28 yards. Quarterback Dale Cole then hit Julius Smith for the two-point conversion.

Chocowinity had two drives stalled inside the 20 yard line by the Bruins as they failed to get their offense consistently on track.

Bigbie and Harris each had 86 yards rushing to lead Camden, on 14 and 12 carries, respectively.

Chocowinity returns to action on Friday, traveling to Swansboro.

Jackson Refutes Comeback Talk

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying he is "done," Reggie Jackson will not be signing with the New York Yankees or any other major league team.

Jackson admitted Friday that he gave New York lawyer Bill Goodstein permission to talk with Yankees principal owner George Steinbrenner about possibly returning to the team for which he starred from 1977-81. But he insists that he won't be coming back.

"This one sounds a little goofy," Jackson said of the reports he was ready to put on a Yankees uniform. "You will not see me in uniform. I'm done. Stick a fork in me."

Goodstein, the agent for pitcher Dave Righetti and "a friend of the Yankees" according to a club spokesman, met with Jackson last week and suggested the idea of a possible return.

"I was in New York for a week last week," Jackson said. "Bill Goodstein was a guy I saw in New York and we talked about projects in real estate and other investments. I hadn't seen Bill Goodstein in eight years."

Dove Hunting Violators Beware

North Carolina wildlife officers will be out in full force looking for baiting and other hunting violations as dove season comes in on Saturday.

"Both state and federal courts have jurisdiction over dove regulations because they are migratory birds," said Col. Harold Ragland, chief of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission's Division of Enforcement.

"Most of these violations, including hunting over bait, hunting with an unplugged shotgun and taking over the bag limit, carry an automatic suspension of hunting licenses for one year," he commented.

Licenses may be suspended by a judge or administratively by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. The 1988-89 season will be the second year that violators of migratory game bird laws will face stiffer penalities.

Last year, at the request of the Commission, the N.C. General Assembly adopted legislation that set $150 as the minimum fine for using improper firearms when hunting migratory birds, using live decoys or bait, hunting during closed seasons and exceeding the bag limit or possession limits.

"We'll be looking for these violations," Ragland said. "We'll be checking closely to see if people are hunting over bait and if they've gone over the bag limit of 15 birds."

Ragland explained that baiting exists where grain is foreign to a field. But hunting is legal over fields consisting of normal agricultural practices.

"The dove hunting regulations are designed to protect mourning doves as a state and national resource and provide hunting opportunities," Ragland added.

The Commission adopted in July a 60-day dove season with a 15-bird daily bag limit. The possession limit is 30 birds. Season dates are Sept. 3 through Oct. 8, Nov. 23-26 and Dec. 19 through Jan. 7.

The action shortens the number of hunting days over last year's 70 days, but extends the bag limit from 12 birds last year to 15 doves this year.

New Flounder Size Limit Takes Effect

At a recent meeting in Greenville of the Marine Fisheries Commission, fisheries biologists increased the size limit of flounder from 11 inches to 13 inches.

"This regulation was necessary to protect flounder so they will spawn at least once before they are caught," said Dr. William T. Hogarth, director of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries.

Hogarth said the summer flounder population has shown a drastic reduction in catch during the last three years and there is heavy pressure on small flounder.

According to information collected from sport fishermen during the 1987 National Marine Recreational Fisheries Statistics Survey, the 13-inch size limit will eliminate approximately 61 percent of the flounder harvested by sport fishermen.

Fisheries biologists said an estimated 411,000 summer flounder were landed in North Carolina last year by recreational fishermen. Data indicate that the limit on flounder will prohibit harvest of fish presently exploited in substantial numbers by both the estuarine and oceanic commercial fisheries and the recreational fishery.

Several states, including Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, New York and those states north of New York, already have higher minimum size limits for flounder.

Several other new regulations, regarding crabs, clams, gill nets and pound nets, will become effective Sept. 1. More information on these regulations may be obtained by calling the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries at 1-800-682-2632 between 7 a.m. and 11 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A series of public meetings are scheduled to allow fishermen the opportunity to present their views and suggestions for commercial and recreational fishing regulations for the 1989 regulatory cycle.

"We will have staff available to discuss recently adopted regulations so everyone will understand them before they go into effect," Hogarth said. These meetings will be held in Morehead City, Wilmington, Elizabeth City and Swan Quarter.

Rewards Offered for Mackerel Tags

Fishermen who catch king or Spanish mackerel bearing a plastic tag have an award waiting for them. They are also eligaible to win a $100 or $1,000 prize if the tag is returned.

King and Spanish mackerel are being tagged off the coast of North Carolina by the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries and the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Through tagging, biologists hope to learn more about the movements and stocks of these fish. King mackerel are being tagged with tags bearing the NMFS Miami, Florida, address as part of a coastwide South Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico tagging program. Spanish mackerel tags bear the DMF, Morehead City, North Carolina, address.

Fishermen are asked to return tags immediately. There is a reward of $10 for each king mackerel tag returned and an annual drawing for a $1,000 prize. The reward for Spanish mackerel tags is $2, with three annual drawings for $100 prizes.

Since 1985, 2,350 king mackerel have been tagged. Only 45 tags have been returned, and the longest time a fish has swum free has been 989 days.

More tag returns are needed to determine how many populations of king mackerel occur along the Atlantic coast and what their migratory patterns are. Biologists know that king mackerel can be caught off the North carolina coast year round; however, some of the tag returns indicate north-south movements along the coast. Scientists think migratory patterns may change with the size and age of fish and that there may be inshore and offshore stocks of king mackerel off the state's coast.

Spanish mackerel are known to migrate north and south in the spring and fall. To date, 3,600 Spanish mackerel have been tagged and only 30 tags have been returned.

The low number of tag returns for king and Spanish mackerel may indicate that some fish die from being tagged or that tags are not being returned. The tags are small plastic devices, usually harmlessly implanted in the belly area of the fish.

Cooperation of fishermen is needed to ensure the success of these projects, which are funded by the Wallop-Breaux Sport Fish Restoration Program (monies from the public's purchase of fishing equipment and motor boat fuels).

Future fishery management decisions will be influenced by tag results; therefore, fishermen are urged to return tags to the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries, P.O. Box 769, Morehead City, N.C. 28557, or to the National Marine Fisheries Service, Miami Laboratory, 75 Virginia Beach Drive, Miami, Fla., 33149.

Pennsylvania Ducks Are Not Suffering

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — While much of the rest of the country will see severe drops in duck numbers this fall, Pennsylvania flocks will be largely unaffected, according to a state waterfowl biologist.

But Keystone State waterfowlers may still have to pay the price of restricted seasons and reduced bag limits despite similar, or even larger, duck populations than last year.

"It will impact very little in Pennsylvania," said Pennsylvania Game Commission waterfowl biologist Fred Hartman of the severe duck number drops in other flyways. "In some places, like the (Pennsylvania) northeast, it will probably have zero impact."

Hartman said that the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, which establishes parameters under which individual states must operate, tends to set "broad-brush" guidelines in setting waterfowl seasons and bag limits nationwide.

Hartman said Pennsylvania hunters will be subject to the same 25 percent reduction in hunting days, reduction of the daily duck limit to three and the elimination or restructuring of bonus birds, special seasons and zoning regulations that usually affect one part of the state and not another.

"The projected fall flight in the Atlantic Flyway will probably show no change (from previous years)," said Hartman, who attended a recent meeting meeting of the Atlantic Flyway Council composed of eastern states biologists.

Only about 5 percent of Pennsylvania's fall ducks come from the prairie pothole region which was severely affected this year due to drought and loss of wetlands in which the birds breed, Hartman said. Another 30 percent of Pennsylvania's ducks are born in Eastern Ontario, Quebec and New York with "more than 50 percent composed of birds produced in Pennsylvania."

He added that the easternmost prairie region of the United States and Canada that produces the ducks that migrate into Pennsylvania is not the sector heavily affected by the summer drought.

Nevertheless, Pennsylvania duck hunters will find their seasons altered during the October through December season.

N.C. Coastal Fishing Gets Mixed Report

By The Associated Press

Fishing was mixed along the North Carolina coast last week, with several operators reporting good catches and others reporting bad weather.

"A northeast wind brought the fish in," said Hardin Crouch of the Jolly Roger Pier on Topsail Island. "I've seen some smiles on people's faces.

"I think it's just a little preview of what's to come," he said. "I think it's a little early yet. We have a few more days to wait to get into or fall fishing."

John Dudley of Dudley's Marina in Swansboro said inclement weather was not giving fishermen much chance to get their hooks in.

"Since July 4, It's been about as bad as I can remember," he said. "It's been so rough that you're just so uncomfortable out there fishing."

Hatteras

Jenny Veal of the Pelican's Roost reported catches of sheepshead and pompano close to shore.

"Offshore, they caught tuna and the king mackerel are back," she said.

Southport

At the Long Beach Pier, Tom Day had a good report to make.

"We got about 300 pounds of mullet and they're out catching black drum and puppy drum left and right — the first ones that I've seen," he said.

Topsail Island

"We're picking up a few blues, whiting, pompano, a few Spanish and there has been several cravelle jack from 17 to 31 pounds," he said.

Nags Head

Tom Ferguson of the Nags Head Fishing Pier said activity was up in his area.

"We've had a good run of Spanish mackerel, spots and croaker. There's been a few flounder ... and blues," Ferguson said. "They have been really active the last several days. We had an east wind for several days and that has really increased the water temperature and brought in the fish,

Fish Can Survive

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — An ongoing experiment with fish in Bass Anglers Sportsman Society tournaments is showing that properly handled fish will almost always survive weigh-in and return to the water.

"We are achieving a 98 percent survival rate on this project," said Doug Hannon of Modessa, Fla., the "Bassin' Professor."

The trick is to cool the fish and treat them with medications while they are in boat live wells, to better enable them to withstand the handling at the weigh-in.

At this week's classic, fish in each boat's livewell were treated with "Catch and Release," a chemical that includes a mild tranquilizer, as well as a fungicide and an antibiotic.

In addition, eight pounds of ice was put in each livewell, to try to lower the water temperature for the mid 80s to mid 60s for the 30-minute trip from the take-out point on the James River to the Richmond Coliseum.

Major League Baseball Notes

By The Associated Press

Arbitrator George Nicolau is close to issuing his decision in the Collusion II case.

A ruling is expected this week or next. Nicolau said last week that he was waiting for Don Fehr, head of the Major League Baseball Players Association, to recover from an illness.

Nicolau, Fehr and Barry Rona, head of the owners' Player Relations Committee, are technically all part of the three-man panel deciding the grievance. But Nicolau's is the only vote that matters.

Meanwhile, arbitrator Thomas Roberts is nearing his first ruling on monetary damages in the Collusion I case, covering 1985 free agents. Roberts heard additional evidence presented by the union two weeks ago in New York.

"The hearings have been continued until October to permit the clubs the opportunity of respond," Roberts said, adding that he and lawyers for both sides had "defined the first phase of the case."

The hearing will resume in Washington and Roberts then will issue an award based on the testimony and evidence from the economic experts. The union believes $20 million to $30 million in damages occurred in the 1986 season and $50 to $60 million more occurred in 1987.

Rona concluded his testimony in the Collusion III case last Monday. Nicolau heard additional testimony on Thursday and Friday, the seventh and eighth days of the hearing in the lastest case, which covers free agents from last winter.

Stieb Situation

Toronto's Dave Stieb says his contract, not his ability on the mound, is preventing other major league teams from making a deal for him. After striking out a career-high 12 batters and allowing only one unearned run in a complete-game 6-3 victory over Chicago Monday night, the Blue Jays pitcher said his million-dollar contract is scaring away potential suitors. The contract, which could run through 1995, pays more that $1.5 million in 1989 — guaranteed if he pitches 225 innings this year. If not, the Blue Jays have the option to buy it out for $200,000. Pitching every five days, Stieb could get seven more starts this season. A complete-game each time out would give him 222 innings. If Toronto buys him out, he's free to make a deal elsewhere, a prospect he doesn't think will happen. "I'll be here in September and I'll be here next year, too," Stieb said.

Los Angeles expressed an interest in Stieb during the off-season, but manager Tom Lasorda said in Santo Domingo last January the Dodgers were scared off by Stieb's arm problems.

Trading Places

Chicago manager Don Zimmer and Houston Astros manager Hal Lanier both were asked about the rumors involving a trade between the two clubs for Cubs catcher Jody Davis, who has lost his starting job to Damon Berryhill. "I don't know anymore about it than I did six weeks ago," Zimmer said. "I know he has lost weight and he can still play and help some team." Said Lanier: "Jody can help anybody. I know the two clubs have been talking. But if there is a trade, it's up to the general managers, it's not up to me or Zimmer."

Goose Cooked

After blowing a couple of leads recently Rich "Goose" Goosage heard the boo birds at Wrigley Field. "I used to get booed more and worse, and yes, more often when I was in Yankee Stadium and I had some great years there," Gossage said. "In fact, it did not make any difference if I got the job done or not, those fans were always on me.

"I've never been one to get upset because when I come into a game with the game on the line, I'm always in the limelight, and I have to sink or swim. But, the unfortunate thing is, that fans never remember the time you struck out a batter with the bases loaded."

Stealing Thunder

Vince Coleman says there is little chance of him stealing 100 bases for a fourth consecutive season. But Coleman, who leads the league with 63 stolen bases, hasn't given up. "If I get on base four or five night, no telling what will happen," Coleman said.

International Relations

Knopa, the Russian bear who is part of the Moscow Circus performing at the Canadian National Exhibition, threw out the first pitch at Toronto's Exhibition Stadium Monday. According to the Blue Jays' pregame notes, Knopa has plenty of baseball experience, having been a former Cub.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves traded veteran infielder Ken Oberkfell to the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday for a player to be named later.

The Pirates also will receive an undisclosed amount of cash.

The player to be named will be one of five from a list Pittsburgh general manager Syd Thrift submitted to Cox, and will be chosen on or before Sept. 15.

Oberkfell, 32, hit .277 with three homers and 40 RBI for the Braves this season. His 10-year career totals are .282 with 26 homers and 391 RBI.

Signed by St. Louis as a free agent in May of 1975, Oberkfell joined the Cardinals full-time in 1979. St. Louis traded him to the Braves for pitcher Ken Dayley and first baseman Mike Jorgensen on June 15, 1984.

Oberkfell, mainly a third baseman, is expected to join the Pirates in time for their Sunday game in Houston.

"You don't see me in tears," Oberkfell said of his trade to a contending team. "I'm kind of happy to be with a ball club that's in the middle of a pennant race. I don't think they would have traded for me if they hadn't thought I could help them. I'll do the best I can to help them catch the Mets."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Schmidt said Saturday he is optimistic he will not need surgery even though the Philadelphia Phillies' club physician has diagnosed at least a partial tear in the rotator cuff of his right shoulder.

"Tear's a very harsh word," Schmidt said Saturday. "I've got a shoulder injury. I'm rehabilitating it. I'm coming along and I'm going to be 100 percent by Jan. 1."

Tests are scheduled for Tuesday to determine whether the cuff, a structure of muscle and tendon, is partially or completely torn, Schmidt said. Dr. Philip Marone made the preliminary diagnosis.

"It's a logical and smart decision that we have made" to have tests, Schmidt said. "But I think i will continue to heal and my optimistic outlook is by the end of the season I'll be OK."

If the cuff is fully torn, Marone said Schmidt, 38, will need surgery and six months' recovery.

News of the tear came amid the Phillies' deliberations over whether to exercise the option on Schmidt's $2.15 million contract. Schmidt has said he would like to play one more season before retirement.

Schmidt's contract calls for a $350,000 buyout if the Phillies do not exerice the option, but only if Schmidt plays 130 games and is healthful for the final game of the season.

He had played in 108 games, batting .249 with 12 homers and 62 runs batted in before he was disabled on Aug. 12.

"I won't believe it if they tell me I need surgery," said Schmidt, who has noticed improvement in his shoulder with rehabilitation exercise. "If I continue to do what I've been doing, I think everything will be fine."

Schmidt, who has 542 career homers, seventh of the all-time list, said he also would seek a second opinion if surgery is suggested.

"If they told me I'd never be able to play catch with my son, then that might be a different story," he said. "But I'd say there's a 95 percent chance that there will be no surgery."

Phillies president Bill Giles said last week the team would hold off on deciding whether to renew Schmidt's contract until he spoke with team physicians.

The Phillies have until the three days after the season's final game to make that decision. Giles said if the injury were serious, the decision would be made sooner.

Rooney Mourned By Family, Friends

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers founder Art Rooney Sr., "a man who achieved all his goals, a man who achieved all his dreams," was laid to rest Saturday in a Roman Catholic service attended by wealthy NFL club owners and ordinary fans.

"Perhaps we shall never see his like again," the Most Rev. Vincent M. Leonard, retired Roman Catholic Bishop of Pittsburgh, said during a St. Peter Church burial Mass for 1,500 friends, family members, former players, team executives, player agents and neighbors.

Rooney, 87, died Thursday of complications from a stroke. He was buried in a Catholic cemetary near his North Side home beside his wife, Kathleen, who died in 1982.

Among those attending the 90-minute service were NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle; Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis; Buffalo Bills owner Ralph Wilson; former Steelers Jack Lambert, Mel Blount and Lynn Swann, and dozens of Pittsburgh-area politicians, including Mayor Sophie Masloff.

"Art Rooney was the most revered man in American sports," said Atlanta Falcons owner Rankin Smith.

Leonard said everyone in Pittsburgh and the world of sports seemed to know and love Rooney — and the feeling was mutual.

"I remember what Art said at the Steelers' 50th anniversary banquet (in 1982) ... that there never was a (Steelers) player he didn't like," Leonard said. "I cannot imagine anyone else but Art saying that ... because I wonder if there was anyone Art met he didn't like."

Leonard, who eulogized Rooney while standing directly behind his closed casket, said the Steelers owner was a wealthy yet unpretentious man whose friends numbered millionaires and custodians, corporate chiefs and stadium ushers, mayors and the man on the street.

The funeral mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Donald W. Wuerl, current Bishop of Pittsburgh, who said Rooney "ran the race of life, and he ran it well."

Rooney, a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, always had time for the common man, because that is exactly what he considered himself, Leonard said.

"He was the friend of politicians, of thugs and thieves, of people good and evil ... and the three qualities he possessed that left the most lasting impression were his humility, his courage and his charity," Leonard said.

"He remained a simple person, a man who could speak to the little child as easily as he could a college professor. He was ever so sensitive. ... He greeted people with a genuine warmth that told them he was interested in them and really cared."

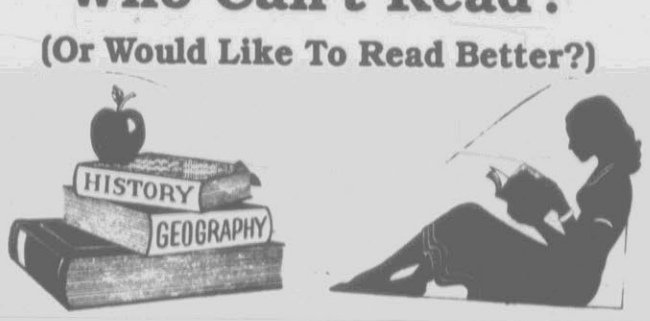

Rooney, he said, "never could understand the fuss people made over him," yet gave vast sums of money to charity, paid the college tuitions of students he barely knew, and gave bonuses to players that weren't called for in their contracts.

"I never heard him say a hard word about another," Leonard said. "He never had time to criticize, but always had time to listen and give advice, which changed many a life."

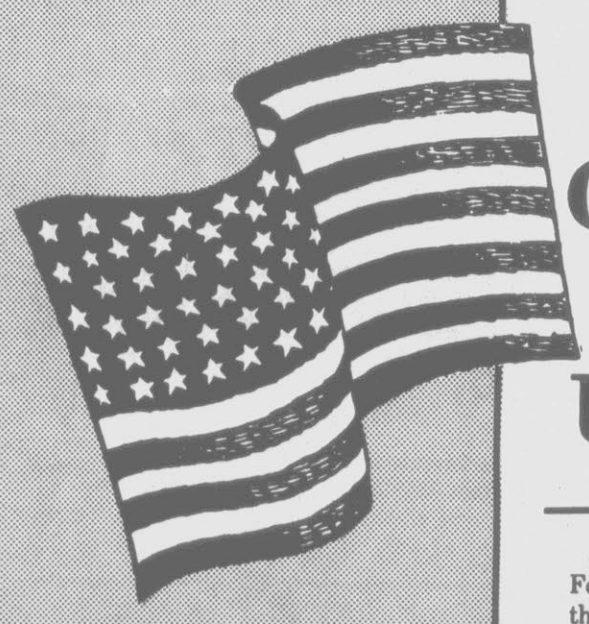

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, formerly the governor of Pennsylvania, said Rooney — perhaps the state's most famous citizen — "was a champion not only in football, but in the game of life. It is sad we have to bid him farewell, but he shared a wonderful life with thousands of people."

Schools Taking Bylaw Too Far

Two years after the inception of bylaw 5-1-(j), more commonly known as proposition 48, it seems some conferences, including the Colonial Athletic Association, are taking the intent of the legislation too far.

The original bylaw requires incoming student-athletes to have a 2.0 grade point average in specified college prepatory curriculum as well as a score of at least 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT. Those who do not qualify under these standards are ruled ineligible for any kind of athletic participation for their freshman year.

The original intent of the law, as far as I can see, was to impose more stringent academic requirements on student-athletes. At the time, it was a bold and necessary move.

Recently, Sports Illustrated reported that in a study done by the Ann Arbor (Mich.) News of 105 Division IA football schools, 79 percent of the those who were admitted as non-qualifiers under the bylaw are still in school. That is a substantial number.

Now the CAA wants to propose legislation at the 1989 NCAA Convention that would prevent non-qualifiers from accepting grants-in-aid. This follows a move by the Southeastern Conference to phase out non-qualifiers all together by 1993.

There is a delicate balance somewhere along the line that is seemingly being ignored. On the one hand, it would seem wrong for a school to sign 10-15 football recruits, for example, who failed to qualify. That would ignore the original intent of the bylaw.

On the other hand, to have a policy across the board that eliminates all non-qualifiers, regardless of circumstances, also seems to ignore the rule's original intent.

To put a total ban on non-qualifiers would prevent schools from admitting any students as athletic exceptions. Yet most every school in the nation has a formal exceptions policy for the regular student body.

Why should there be a difference with athletes?

East Carolina, for instance, has admitted six football players as non-qualifiers under the bylaw in the last three years and all six are still enrolled.

"All six are still in school and are making satisfactor progress," said Pam Penland, associate athletic director for academic counseling at East Carolina. "They have done well."

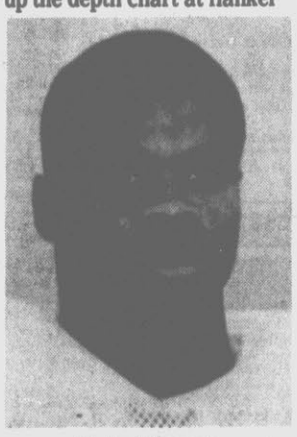

In some situations, an admissions case needs to be examined on an individual basis.

What about the student-athlete that has close to a 3.0 grade point, but can't seem to get above a 650 on the SAT, or say a 13 on the ACT.

If a ban on non-qualifiers is employed, a student-athlete in this situation would be left on the wrong side of a bylaw that is being further complicated instead of simplified.

Blount Moving Up Chart; Tripp On 1st Team

Former Ayden-Grifton standout Eric Blount, who is in his first year playing football for North Carolina, has moved quickly up the depth chart at flanker and is currently holding down the second-team position behind senior Randy Marriott.

Eric Blount

Marriott is the Tar Heels' leading returning receiver. Blount, who played running back in high school, has emerged from a pack of receiving candidates to challenge for playing time.

Heading into fall practice, senior Junie Demery had been the second-team flanker, followed by junior Kurt Green, who has since been shifted to split end. Demery is now listed at third string.

Former Farmville Central standout Dennis Tripp, who earned a starting position at defensive tackle during the spring, is still listed on the first string for the Tar Heels, but not at defensive tackle. Tripp has been shifted to first-team noseguard.

Daniels, Barnhill Still In The Battle

Daniels is currently number three on the depth chart behind starter Tim James and veteran Michael Rhett.

If the upperclassmen are able to handle the load though, both Daniels and Barnhill will likely be redshirted. The next two weeks should be a good indicator for the two rookies.

Church Champions

Business Notes

New Officer

Pam Stancill, sales support manager for the BB&T Life Insurance Department in Wilson, has been promoted to banking officer by the BB&T Board of Directors.

A native of Roanoke Rapids, Ms. Stancill is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in business administration. She is married to Mike Stancill of Ayden. They have one child.

Earnings Drop

Integon Corp. reported Monday that second quarter income from operations reached $3 million, down from $6.1 million for the same period last year. Net income for the quarter totaled $2.6 million, down from $11 million last year. For the six months ended June 30, Integon reported $8.9 million in income from operations, down from $13.1 million, and net income of $2.6 million, down from $21.7 million.

For the second quarter combined premiums from Integon's insurance operations rose 9.1 percent to $106.4 million, up from $97.6 million last year. Investment income also rose 31.3 percent to $23.2 million.

Negotiations are under way for the acquisition of Integon by an undisclosed purchaser. Integon operates an office in Greenville.

Certification Earned

Ronald B. Greene and Catherine A. Smith of the Greenville offices of Lowrimore, Warwick & Co. have passed their May 1988 Certified Public Accountant examinations.

Greene, a staff accountant, is a graduate of North Carolina State University. Prior to joining the firm, he worked with the East Carolina University School of Medicine and Hamilton Beach Manufacturing Company. He is president of the board of directors of the Boys Club of Pitt County and a member of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club. He and his wife, Laura, are Greenville residents and have one son. They are members of Jarvis United Memorial Methodist Church.

Ms. Smith, also a staff accountant, is a cum laude graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University with a bachelors degree in business administration. Ms. Smith completed concentration in accounting at ECU in 1987. She is married to Jerry Smith and they live in Greenville.

New Manager

Ruth Matous has been named manager of the Greenville office of Personnel Temps Inc.

Ms. Matous has resided in Greenville for six years and has been associated with both the Sheraton Hotel and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

RUTH MATOUS

Service Recognition

Barbara C. Weid, a local employee of Carolina Telephone, received an emblem this month in recognition of 20 years of service with the coumpany.

Mrs. Weid is an engineering clerk in the company's distribution department here. She is married to Dietmar Weid and they reside in Jamesville, where they are members of the Poplar Chapel Church of Christ. They have two children.

New Manager

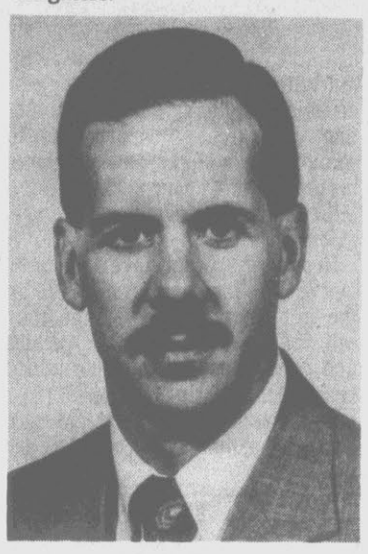

Gary Clay has been named the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's manager of the Small Business Council and will assist the president with economic development, according to Ed Walker, president of the chamber.

Clay received his education at Westwood High School in Fulton County, Ga. He attended Clayton Junior College of Morrow, Ga., majoring in small business and horticulture.

He was the unit operator of Chick-Fil-A in Greenville before joining the chamber staff.

Clay has served on the board of directors of Carolina East Mall's Merchant Association and served as its president in 1987. He has been involved with several programs within the Pitt County school system such as beginning a perfect attendance program in conjunction with Chick-Fil-A and the school system.

GARY CLAY

Promotion Made

Brenda Stallings of Kinston has been promoted to area manager in charge of the Greenville, Kinston and Goldsboro areas for CopyPro Inc. She has been employed with CopyPro for three years.

New Store

White Stores Ltd., a department store chain with headquarters in Greenville, opened a new store in Clinton's Jordan Shopping Center Thursday.

John Moynahan, White's general manager, also announced the appointment of Linda Barnhill as store manager and Rachel Bullock as assistant manager.

In attendance at the opening were Carlton Taylor, president of White's Stores; Moynahan; Bill and Ray Jordan, the center owners, and city and county officials.

Honor Earned

Waightstill M. "Waighty" Scales III, CLU, was honored as Inner Circle second vice president recently at Integon Life Insurance Corporation's 1988 awards seminar.

Scales received the award for finishing the year as the third leading producer among Integon's more than 1,200 life insurance agents. The Inner Circle Club is a select group of 19 of the company's leading life insurance agents.

Awards Won

Ann Brown of Greenville was named to the Director Court of Personal Sales at Mary Kay Cosmetics' "Silver Celebration" national seminar, celebrating the company's 25th year in business. Ms. Brown, who joined the company in 1981, was also named to the Court of Unit Sales for leading her team of independent consultants to annual retail sales exceeding $300,000.

Lois Daniels Gray, also of Greenville, was named to the Consultant Court of Personal Sales at the same ceremony.

Also attending the conference from the Greenville area were Onna Briley, Ruby Ennis, Ann Speight, Lola Thompson and Annie Watts.

New Staff

CopyPro has announced the addition of four new sales people to its sales staff.

Larry Ball is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and will handle sales in the Wilmington area.

Windy Bowen attended East Carolina University and is the junior sales representative for the Kinston and Goldsboro.

Patrick Brown is a graduate of ECU and will be the junior sales representative for the Greenville area.

Sandy Giles attended the University of Mansfield, Pa. She will be the junior sales representative for the New Bern, Morehead City and Havelock areas.

Service Recognition

John R. Byrd, a local employee of Carolina Telephone, received a 35 mm camera this month in recognition of his 35 years of service with the company.

Byrd is district manager in the company's Installation and Repair Department here. He is responsible for all single line residence and business installations and the maintanance of outside plant facilities in an eight county area.

He and his wife Elizabeth live in Washington, N.C. with their son, John Jr. They also have a daugher, Mary B. Dowless of Bladenboro.

Teleconference

Pitt Community College Small Business Center will offer a teleconference entitled "The National Flood Insurance Program — Quality In...Quality Out" Wednesday from 11:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. The teleconference will be held in room 145 of the Everett Building.

The teleconference is produced by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and is intended for insurance agents, brokers, loan officers and other persons involved in servicing flood insurance.

Competition, Takeovers Change Supermarkets

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
AP Business Writer

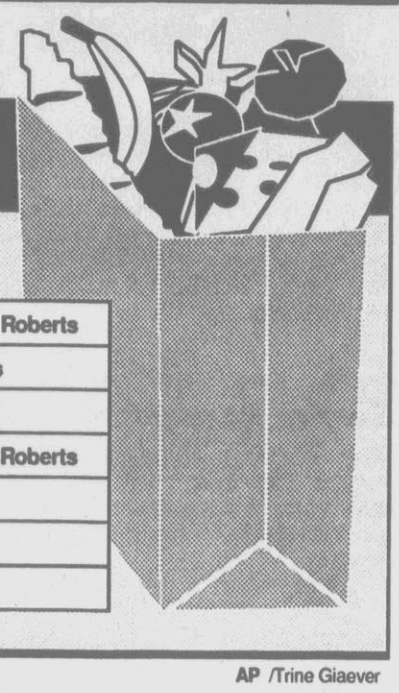

NEW YORK (AP) — A trip to the supermarket no longer means just picking up eggs and milk and the ingredients for tonight's dinner. It can also mean buying the completed meal, ready to serve, and, while you're at it, an oil filter and a couple of videos.

Supermarkets may be an American institution, but they're being forced to change the way they do business to defend against takeover attempts and increasing competition from other retailers trying to muscle in on their turf.

A wave of mergers and acquisitions has washed over the industry in the last two years, consolidating the holdings of some companies and reducing the number of stores held by other firms.

The most prominent transactions are the recent acquisition of Lucky Stores Inc. by American Stores Co., and the leveraged buyouts that took Supermarkets General Corp. and Safeway Stores Inc. private.

A number of smaller deals also have been done, some of them spawned directly by the bigger buyouts.

"These guys trade stores like playing cards sometimes," observed Edward Comeau, a supermarket industry analyst with the investment firm Oppenheimer & Co.

The $4.2 billion Safeway buyout was partially financed by the sale of several divisions. Vons Cos. Inc. bought 172 Safeway stores in Southern California and Nevada, and Supermarket Development Corp., which operates Furrs supermarkets, acquired 59 Safeways in Texas and New Mexico.

When federal regulators gave their blessings to the American-Lucky combination, it was with the stipulation that a number of stores in California be sold. Lucky also sold its supermarkets in Arizona to Phoenix-based ABCO Markets and agreed to sell stores in Florida to the investment firm Gibbons, Green, van Amerongen.

Location is often a factor in such deals, as players look to expand their reach or consolidate their holdings in a particular market. American was attracted to Lucky because of the latter's strong presence in Southern California, the nation's second biggest market. In New York, the country's largest market, the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. — better known as A&P — now holds a 20 percent share after the acquisitions of Shopwell, Food Emporium and Waldbaum's supermarkets.

At first glance, supermarkets, with their low margins, or profits, may not seem to be very attractive properties. But they have the flexibility that prospective acquirers look for.

"The biggest reason for the takeover activity is that in recent years, you've had money available for takeovers and the managers of those funds have learned that food chains have very strong and recession-resistant cash flows" to help finance a deal, said Charles Cerankosky, an analyst with Prescott Ball & Turben Inc.

Additionally, "they have many and small units, which makes them quite marketable to another chain or operator if you need to sell the assets," Cerankosky said.

Wall Street analysts say Kroger Co., one of the biggest supermarket companies in the nation, is a possible future target. Kroger stock has surged amid takeover speculation, and Gary Giblen, who tracks supermarkets for Rotan Mosle Inc. in Houston, said in a recent analysis the company's relatively flat earnings and broad, multi-regional operations make it vulnerable.

Kroger management is taking defensive steps, including the sale of its Florida stores.

The takeover wave, which sometimes benefits consumers by heating up price competition, arrives at a time of even greater upheaval in the marketing end of the business. Shifting demographics and the entrance of other types of retailers have produced dramatic changes.

Today, consumers can buy food from a variety of retail outlets. For example, K Mart Corp. and Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the nation's biggest discount retailers, are experimenting with grocery departments in some of their stores and also have branched into hypermarkets, combination discount stores and supermarkets.

Drug stores, which have sold candy and cookies for years, are increasing the amount of grocery items they sell. Canned hams, jars of pickles and cans of pet food are positioned near the toothpaste and aspirin.

Convenience stores and gas stations selling milk, bread and soda are also competing for consumers' food dollars.

Supermarkets are fighting back by boosting their own offerings of general merchandise. Larger stores carry lines of housewares, automotive supplies, toys, fabrics, greeting cards and beauty and health aids.

Some supermarkets also have pharmacies or provide video rental or other services, and analysts recommend that stores trying to improve their sales and earnings offer such high-margin amenities to lure more customers.

Many stores also offer products to meet the demands of different lifestyles.

New Firm Delivers Convenience

By CATALINA ORTIZ
Associated Press Writer

But Mary Garvey sees it differently.

"This is a laboratory," she says. "We're creating a new industry."

Ms. Garvey, 31, is president of Grocery Express, a company that delivers just about anything you can find on a supermarket shelf to people who can't or don't want to shop and who are glad to pay a little extra for convenience.

"People have less and less time. And that trend is not reversing," Ms. Garvey said in a recent interview.

About 5,000 people in the city and the northern San Francisco Peninsula save time by ordering groceries from Ms. Garvey's 7-year-old company and having them delivered for a flat fee of $4.25. Prices are about 15 percent higher than at large supermarkets and about the same as at a corner grocery, Ms. Garvey said.

Forty percent of her patrons are businesses, elderly and homebound people, but the rest are two-income couples, professional singles or families with young children.

"These are people who have no time but lots of demands on their time," she said.

Katherine Craven, a writer and homemaker, first called Grocery Express 6½ years ago when she was pregnant and didn't want to climb stairs to her second-floor Victorian flat with bags of groceries.

"For me it's been a great thing, and particularly in the winter or if someone is sick, it's just a godsend," said Craven.

Customers order from among several hundred items in Grocery Express' catalog, a 128-page guide that includes fresh flowers, restaurant meals and food gift baskets as well as fresh meat and produce and canned and packaged goods.

Each item has a number, which Grocery Express' clerks punch into a computer, noting whether customers want their chicken boned or bananas barely ripe. Customers also can file orders through their home computers.

Orders are put together in the company's 18,000-square-foot warehouse and delivered in one of seven vans.

Ms. Garvey, who has an economics degree from Stanford University, learned about business from her family's company, Garvey Industries, a Wichita, Kan.-based concern dealing in oil and gas, grain and real estate.

Grocery delivery, while not a new idea, has not been a very profitable one. Over the past 15 years, other entrepreneurs have started companies like Grocery Express but failed, Ms. Garvey said.

Grocery Express nearly became one of those failures after an enthusiastic beginning. Ms. Garvey was an original investor, but it was her former husband, Michael Meagher, and friend John Coghlan who were the real founders, she said.

Ms. Garvey became more involved in the business and took it over two years later.

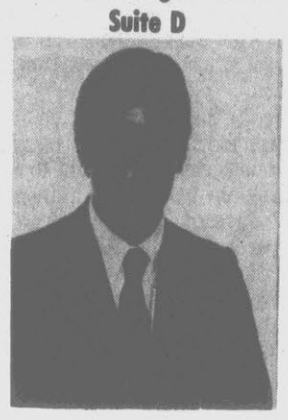

In 1984, the company's sales had leveled off at about $2 million, but the firm had yet to turn a profit. Grocery Express raised its prices, but lost customers and even more money.

The next year, it came close to shutting down. But Ms. Garvey, who describes herself as eternally optimistic, was sure she could turn the company around.

"I was just certain this is a business people need," she said. "I looked at it from a different point of view — long term — and was willing to spend the additional time and money."

Since 1985, Ms. Garvey has put between $1.5 million and $2 million into the firm, reduced prices and used direct mail and radio ads to regain former customers and win new ones.

In 1986, sales rose to $2.3 million with a loss of $330,000, and last year, sales increased to $2.7 million while the company's loss shrank to $75,000.

Balloon Maker Uses Cartoon Characters To Build Company

GLEN BURNIE, Md. (AP) — Bob Kemp remembers when he was a novice businessman and needed a loan. He listed Chicken Licken, Goosy Loosy and Ducky Lucky as collateral.

He got the money after explaining that the animals were the parade balloons on which he planned to build his company, Kemp Balloons Inc.

"I told them that's what makes the money for me," said Kemp. "It was survival at that point. We'd only been in business a couple of years."

The turning point was President Carter's inauguration, which was 12 days away when the call came asking for a giant, inflatable peanut.

"We said, 'If the peanut's there, pay us. If not, forget it.' We made it in 12 days," Kemp said.

That accomplishment and the ensuing publicity launched the company's reputation as a premier builder of parade balloons. Kemp's cast of more than 50 characters includes Popeye the Sailor Man and his wife, Olive Oyl, the Pillsbury Dough Boy Poppin' Fresh, Woody Woodpecker and Felix the Cat.

His colorful creations meander parade routes across the country and around the world, including the Tournament of Roses parade, the Orange Bowl, the Indianapolis 500 and other major festivals.

"It's fun. It's like being on the fringe of show business," said the affable Kemp, 57.

On the paint-splattered floor of Kemp's suburban Baltimore warehouse, Humpty Dumpty sits in a corner with a perpetual grin on his massive face and Popeye's head occupies much of the opposite side of the room. Various pieces of other characters wait for a fresh coat of paint or a call from a promoter who wants to hire a balloon.

"We've done a lot of exciting things," said Kemp.

Don Lunday, the executive director of the International Festivals Association in Pasadena, Calif., an organization of festival promoters and suppliers, says Kemp Balloons is one of the oldest and largest balloon makers.

"There's a quality about Bob's, but the fact remains he is expensive. You can rent cheaper inflatables. But the odds are they are not going to do what Bob's do," Lunday said.

Kemp's balloons rent from $500 to $11,000, depending on the character and the season. Prices go higher during holiday periods.

"There are other balloon makers, but I haven't come across anyone who has the balloons Bob has and the quality he has," said Jo Hauck, executive director of the Indianapolis 500 Festival Associates Inc., a civic organization that stages festivities leading up to the big auto race.

"His Felix the Cat has one arm that waves to everybody. The kids just go wild," said Hauck.

Kemp built his first balloons in 1973 for Gimbel's Thanksgiving parade in Philadelphia and made many of the balloons used in Macy's legendary parades.

This year, Kemp expects sales to top $1 million — a long way for a man who says he learned how to starve while employed as a social worker. He's also taught ballroom dancing, sold cars, promoted wine in California and was director of tourism for the city of Baltimore.

Kemp employs about 10 fulltime workers and as many as 30 during a busy period. His son, Bobby, is the chief designer. Once the design is created, a pattern is traced on long sheets of black rubber. The pieces are cut and sewn together, then inflated and painted.

Business Notes

when your investments aren't balanced?

What happens

There are literally thousands of investment opportunities out there. And while the trick isn't so much finding good investments, it is finding just the right balance between safety and high return.

If you talk with an Interstate broker, you'll find out which investments are ideal for you. Now, that doesn't mean recommending investments that just happen to be hot this week. An Interstate broker looks at you. What you need. What you will need. From that thoroughness comes the advice that can protect your investments while still earning a high return.

For instance, depending on your situation, your broker might recommend investing in futures funds for growth. Perhaps unit trusts for tax savings. And builder bonds for a steady income.

Talk with an Interstate broker today about balancing your investments. And straighten out your portfolio.

U.S.-Soviet Sea Venture Could Hurt Fishermen

WILMINGTON (AP) — A joint seafood venture between a Maine seafood company and a Soviet processor could sink a multimillion-dollar industry in North Carolina, state fisheries officials say.

Last month, Resource Trading Co., a seafood exporter in Maine, entered an agreement to sell a Soviet fleet menhaden caught by local fishermen.

Under a four-year pact, the Soviets will process 40,000 metric tons per year of the fish, which is used to produce oil and fish meal, Tom Dowling, Resource Trading managing director, told the Wilmington Morning Star. The fish will be processed in a ship anchored offshore.

Previously, boats in Maine caught between 25,000 and 30,000 metric tons of menhaden stock a year, allowing a sufficient number to swim south and spawn in Virginia and North Carolina in the winter. Apparently to make the contract worthwhile to the Soviets, Maine raised the limit on catches.

N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries officials think the new quota will reduce the menhaden stock and "further depress an industry that is still recovering from economic problems," said William Hogarth, the agency's director.

If the menhaden stocks in the Atlantic Ocean are reduced, state marine officials say, fewer mature females will survive to spawn in the South.

"Our main problem with this is not that we're opposed to a joint venture with the Russians," said Dennis Spitsbergen, a biologist with Marine Fisheries. "We're concerned about the reduction of spawning populations in the South."

Last year North Carolina commercial fishermen landed 55.5 million pounds of the fish at a value of $1.62 million, Marine Fisheries records show. North Carolina has one menhaden processing plant, in Beaufort.

Sexually mature fish, at least three years old, accounted for 85 percent of those caught in the North Atlantic in 1987, according to National Marine Fisheries Service statistics. Most menhaden in the North Atlantic are caught in the Gulf of Maine.

The prime age for spawning is 3 years old; older fish rarely produce offspring.

However, the National Marine Fisheries Service doesn't think the increased harvest will hurt Southern fishermen.

"Based on a simulation I've done, there would be about a 5 percent reduction in stock in the Atlantic," said Douglas Vaughan, of National Marine Fisheries. "That's relatively small. Also, consider the fact that 80 percent of the fish are caught in Virginia and North Carolina."

Vaughan also said Maine fishermen are unlikely to fill the new quota during the first year of the joint venture.

"They'll be lucky if they catch half that," he said.

He said he also thinks there is some concern about the Soviet plant replacing a fish meal processing plant in Maine that will shut down in October. The facility is the only processing plant in Maine.

But Dowling says the Soviet plant will help keep American fishermen employed who would otherwise be out of business. It will also keep the industry viable until Maine can open a new plant, he said.

"Our fishing has no impact on the availability of Southern stocks. ... The only economic impact it has is keeping 75 people employed in the main sector," he said.

Dowling said transporting menhaden for processing to other states would be difficult because the nearest plants are in New Brunswick, Canada and Reedville, Va.

Consumers Hailing New Check Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting this week, a new federal law will put limits on the number of days that banks and other financial instutions can place holds on checks which customers deposit in their accounts.

The law has been hailed by consumer groups, who charged that Americans were losing millions of dollars annually because banks were freezing funds for undue amounts of time.

Banks, however, complain that the new guidelines are confusing, proving costly to implement and will subject them to greater risks of fraud.

The controversy is being stirred up by the Expedited Funds Availability Act, which goes into effect Sept. 1.

Under the law, banks, savings and loans and credit unions must give customers access to deposited funds within one, three or seven days, depending on the type of check.

While many banks have been operating voluntarily under such deadlines, consumer groups argued that a law was needed because too many banks were freezing funds for periods as long as two weeks even though 99 percent of the time they were getting credit for the money within two days.

The U.S. Public Interest Research Group, which led the lobbying effort for the new law, charged that banks were making $290 million annually in interest on the money they were withholding from customers during the so-called "float period."

Additionally, the consumer research group said that banks were collecting another $145 million a year in bounced-check fees because funds were not released faster for depositors' use.

In broad terms, the new law requires that all local checks must be cleared by the bank within three business days. A local check is one written on an institution in the same metropolitan area or within the same Federal Reserve check processing region. There are 48 such regions in the country.

Non-local checks must be cleared within seven business days.

Funds deposited in the form of cashiers' checks, certified checks and government checks must be available to depositors the next business day.

By Sept. 1, 1990, the maximum hold period will drop to two days for local checks and five days for non-local checks.

Many bankers grumble that the new law will open the door to con artists. They complain that they will not have enough time to make sure deposited checks don't bounce or were not forged, especially in the case of the one-day deadline for government and cashiers' checks.

The regulations implementing the new law have proven to be complex, requiring a 600-page guide from the Federal Reserve, dealing not only with the deadlines but such matters as how checks should be endorsed and what information banks must supply to depositors.

By Oct. 31, all banks are required to have placed notices explaining the new rules in customers' monthly statements.

One area of confusion concerns new guidelines for check endorsements. They state that only the first 1.5 inches on the back of the check should be used by depositors to endorse their checks.

This is proving to be a major headache for many retail stores who routinely stamp the backs of checks with a lengthy list of identification items store clerks must obtain from customers.

As a consequence, many stores are rushing to buy new rubber stamps or reprogram cash registers to print within the smaller endorsement area.

Salvation Army Enables Giving, Recycling

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The newly expanded Salvation Army Thrift Store in Greenville is not only a source of inexpensive used clothing and other items, but serves the Greenville area as a readily available recycling resource.

A no-longer-wanted household item or garment needs ever to fill the increasingly expensive-to-operate Pitt County Landfill. The Salvation Army Thrift Store staff, along with bargain shopping opportunity, provides recycling service to the community. And those who donate to the Salvation Army get tax deduction credit, if they request it.

Items donated to the Salvation Army that appear to be saleable are sorted and priced by the Thrift Store staff. Each of these eventually will appear on the racks, tables and shelves of the new 15,000-square-foot store.

"We have learned during our 10 years of operating Salvation Army thrift stores that we serve many, many more people by asking small prices for the saleable items that are donated to us than we would if we gave everything away," Maj. Earl Woodard, co-commander with his wife of the local Salvation Army unit, said. "When someone is burned out of a home or has a major illness, we certify them through our office and then let them go to the store and pick out free-of-charge 20 clothing items or so for each family member, plus we give them bed linens, towels, dishes and other household items.

"But so many of the people who shop with us are single mothers with several children, young people going to college on tight budgets, or others who can afford our prices when they cannot afford those at the major department stores. They like the dignity of shopping instead of accepting handouts. Indeed, most of these people who come and shop here would never come to our office and ask for assistance."

According to Jean Harrison, chief pricer of store items, prices are based on condition of the garment or other item. No price for anything other than large pieces of furniture or appliances ever goes over $10. Most clothing items are in the 25-cents-to-$2 range.

Money made in the store goes for paying staff and other expenses, to cover a $550-per-month 10-year mortgage on the new building and into the general fund of the Salvation Army. The Salvation Army locally earns or has donated individually 70 percent of its budget. Thirty percent comes via The United Way.

In the old Salvation Army store, one-fourth the size of the present one, clothing was stacked high on tables or crowded onto long pole racks. Lack of space made it difficult to keep the store neat. The present store more nearly resembles a department store, with revolving racks for most hanging clothes and artfully arranged tables for other items. Wide shelves around the side of the building enable orderly display of "bric-a-brac" — miscellaneous household items. There is a long shelf of 25-cent to $1 books, a fabric table, a jewelry area, a large rack of shoes, etc. Furniture is kept in a section to itself, to the right of the double front doors.

Not visible to the public is storage and work space about as large as the store itself. Here receiving, sorting, repairing, baling of recyclable fabric, and the like are done.

Every Saturday afternoon dozens of cars and trucks and vans roll up to the big overhead door with leftovers from yard sales. And donations come in throughout every week from individuals and from Salvation Army donation houses placed at shopping places in the county. Pick up of large items can be arranged by calling the store.

There is now some storage of out-of-season garments, but Mrs. Woodard says she believes that these items soon will be incorporated into the regular stock, with season not considered as much as in the past.

Clothing items that are not deemed saleable or that don't sell after a month or so in the store are compacted and baled. When a tractor-trailer-full of 700-pound bales is accumulated, these are sent to a fabric recycling center in Baltimore. The lining in the trunks of cars and certain furniture filling are made from such compressed and glued fabric shreds. In addition to the local volume, the Greenville staff recycles fabric from the Salvation Army's Elizabeth City thrift store.

In addition to Maj. and Mrs. Maj. Woodard and Ms. Harrison, the store staff is composed by Nell Bland, store manager; Wanda Harris, Mary Wingate, Christine Bright, warehouse foreman Tom Wadford and warehouse assistant Leroy Reeves.

Brenda Gayhardt is manager of a branch store at Main and Church streets in Farmville, with Greenville staffers relieving her at times. Merchandise is shared between the two stores, with changes of Farmville merchandise taking place about twice a week.

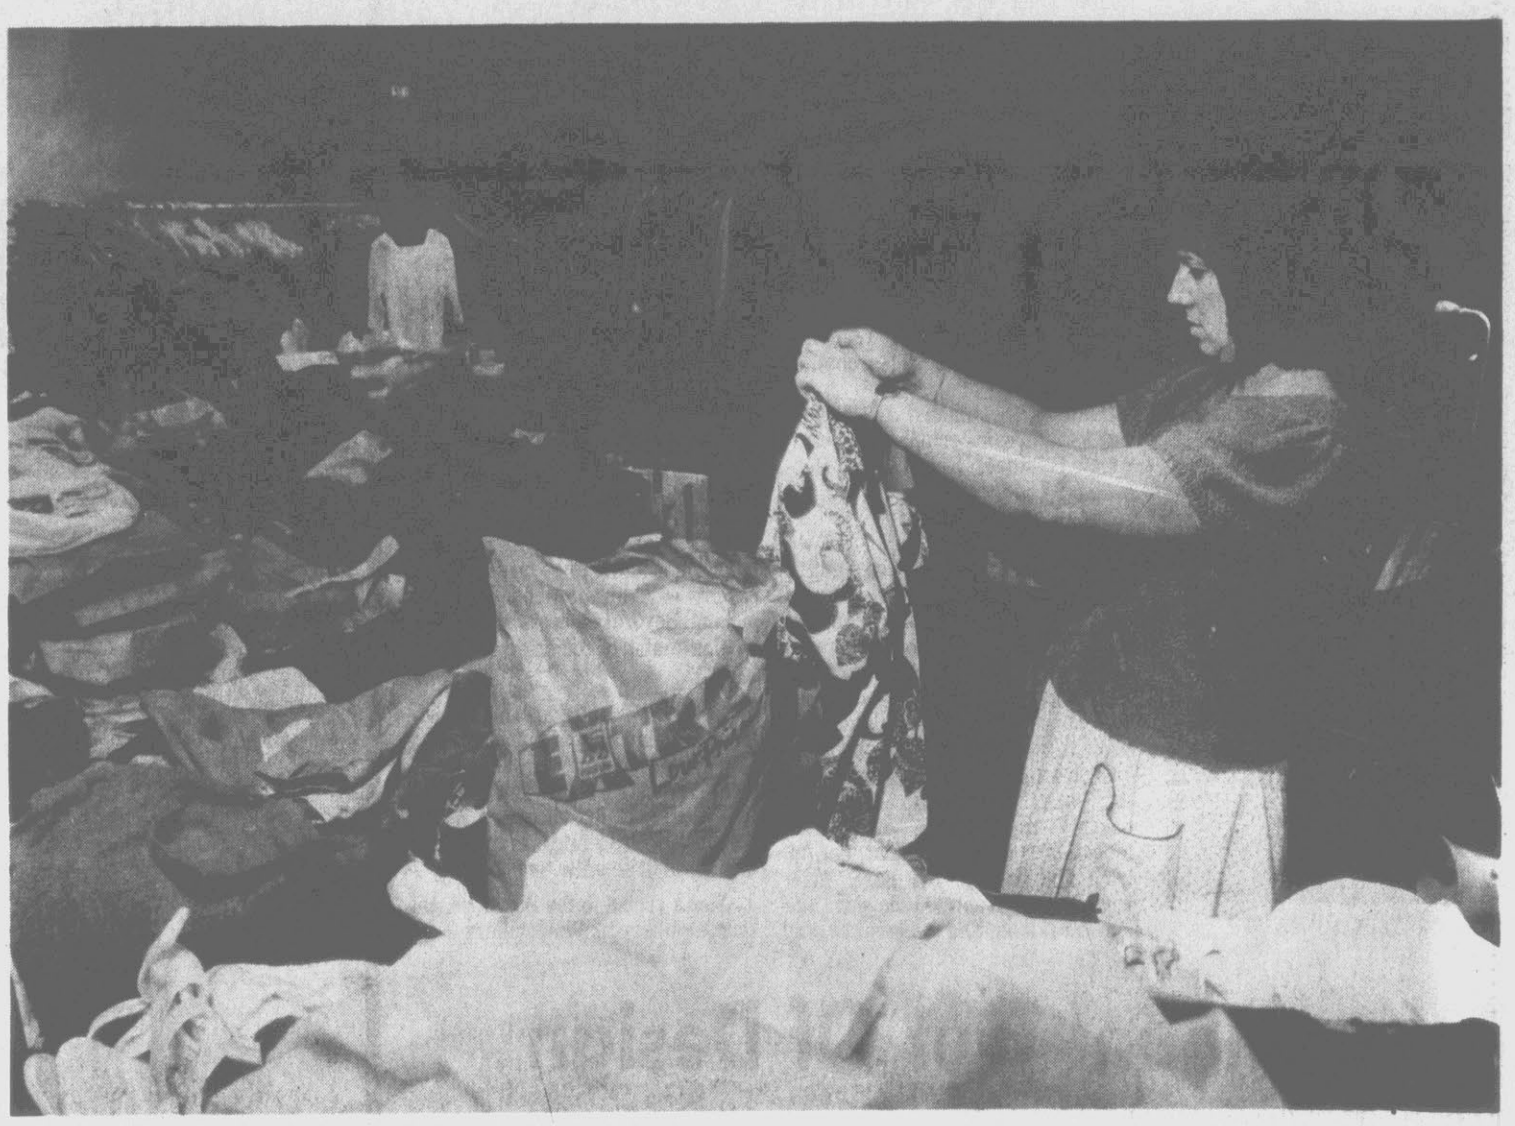

Greenville store hours are 9 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Monday-Saturday. Farmville store hours are 9:15 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

Virtually all appliances and furniture items that come into the store are checked out by Wadford and Reeves. They often can use items in disrepair for parts, so the public is encouraged to donate even broken appliances and furniture items. Sometimes people buy certain broken items for parts, too, they say.

The old Salvation Army store on the same site with the church, offices and the new store, is expected to be turned into a church-run recreation center, Maj. Woodard said.

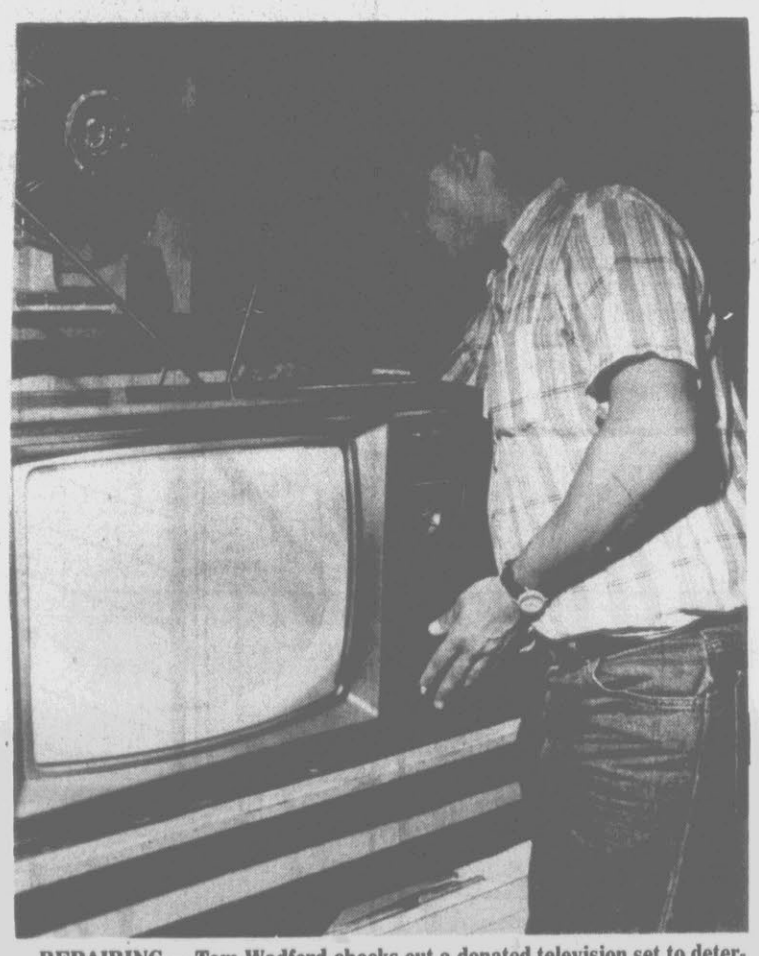

The Salvation Army has been existence since 1865 when it was formed by General William Booth to meet the spiritual and physical needs of the poor in London. Its organization is much like the Methodist Church and, like Methodists, ministers never stay in one place long.

In the 28 years that the Woodards have been Salvation Army officers, they have served in High Point, Lexington, Waynesville, Orangeburg, S.C., New Bern, Gaffney, S.C., Sumter, S.C., Wilmington and Hickory. Both Wilson natives, the couple plans to retire in the Wilson area about five years from now.

SORTING — Wanda Harris makes decisions about whether donated clothes should be channeled to the thrift store or sent to the baler for recycling.

Greenville's Salvation Army Thrift Store — one of the largest in North Carolina — serves, not only as a channel for people to give to the less fortunate, but is a source of inexpensive used goods for the public and a vehicle for recyling clothing and other consumer items through both resale and other reuse.

REPAIRING — Tom Wadford checks out a donated television set to determine if repairs need to be made and, if so, how extensive they must be.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

WINTERVILLE — The wedding of Lori Catherine Tripp of Route 3, Greenville, and Linwood Ray Hines of Winterville was held at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church.

The Rev. Stanley Wingard conducted the double-ring ceremony. The bride's father gave her in marriage.

MRS. HINES

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Mack H. Tripp of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Alton R. Hines of Winterville.

The maid of honor was Amber Tripp of Greenville, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Linda Hines of Winterville and Teresa Smith of Shelmerdine, both sisters of the bridegroom, Billie Mulhearn of Norfolk, Va., and Rita Lynn Shaver of Verona, Va., both cousins of the bride.

The flower girl was Selanie Whitehurst of Stokes.

The best man was Doug Branch of Winterville. Ushers were Eric Tripp, brother of the bride, of Grimesland, Joey Joyner, Michael Joyner and Danny Hines, all cousins of the bridegroom, of Winterville.

Music was provided by Debbie Hines, Catherine Jenkins, Ann Searl, Wendy Bissinger, Erwin Hines, Debbie Gray and Tony Smart.

The bride wore a formal gown of white crystalline with a jeweled schiffli lace bodice and a pearl-edged sabrina neckline and a scalloped deep V-back. The illusion sweetheart yoke had scattered pearls, pearl droplets and a schiffli lace motif. At the shoulder were wire-edged ruffles with satin rosettes extending from slim lace sleeves. The dropped basque waist had a large satin bow at the back. The pickup skirt was caught with rosettes. Venise lace medallions were scattered on the front and back of the skirt. Wire-edged ruffles encircled the skirt and cathedral train and the hemline was bordered with schiffli lace. Her veil was a white halo with pearl sprays and silk flowers with a ruffled pouf at the back extending into a two-tier veil edged in pearls. Her flowers were a cascade of silk peach orchids, miniature white roses, baby's breath, with sprays of pearls and matching streamers.

The maid of honor wore a teal blue satin dress fashioned with short puffed sleeves, a princess bodice overlaid with matching lace, a full tea-length skirt extending frm a V-waistline. Her headpiece was of silk flowers and baby's breath. She carried a lighted candle in a brass candlestick encircled by ivory lace, mauve, peach and pink silk roses and matching streamers.

The flower girl wore a white floor-length gown of satin and chantilly lace. Her headpiece was of silk flowers and baby's breath. She carried a white basket of peach silk roses, lace and baby's breath.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall. The bridegroom's parents gave an after-rehearsal pig-picking. Several showers were given by classmates of the bride and other friends.

The bride is a graduate of Greenville Christian Academy and is a nursing student at Pitt Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and Wilson Techincal College. He is employed by the City of Greenville.

After a cruise to the Bahamas, the couple will live in Winterville.

Take 'Moon' Out Of Design

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Two hospital gowns arrived in my mail last week.

I know, some columnists get baskets of fruit, scotch or proposals of marriage. I tell myself the gowns were sent to me because I stand for all that is decent and clean and keeps America free.

Somewhere along the line, I've probably written about the infamous hospital gown that comes with a "Moon River" recording. I can't remember. But these gowns came with a clever poem written by Susan Blake-Smith and an explanation from designer Sandra N. Price. The poem reads, in part:

"I can handle the shots,
"For the X-rays I'm mellow,
"I'll pop all those pills,
"I'll eat lime green Jello,
"I'll even be friendly to the doctors on their rounds,
"But I cringe at the thought of those hospital gowns.
"So let's get the hospitals
"Out of their ruts,
"And demand the new gowns,
"No ifs, ands, or butts!

When it comes to wardrobes, hospitals have always been the "home of the brave." There isn't one of us who has not become hysterical and screamed to our doctors, "You've got to give me something for the pain!" When he asks, "Where are you feeling discomfort?" we reply, "I'm talking about something for my humiliation. I just went to the bathroom in front of the painters."

According to Sandra, her "Eclipse" gown puts an end to humiliation. It is stitched down one side and the shoulders are held together with Velcro. This leaves one side completely open. Hold that thought.

Now, what is really astounding is the response from doctors when they were sent a prototype for their reaction. One said he liked the idea that there were no knots to be tied in the back. Another commented he liked it but would suggest a "scooped neckline" to increase comfort. Another had a small concern that it would take time to "educate the public in the use of the gown."

NOT ONE DOCTOR MENTIONED THAT YOU COULDN'T DIAL A PHONE IN IT WITHOUT BECOMING A CENTERFOLD! You have to wear the gown with a wall.

It seems incongruous to me that we can put a man on the moon, but in the year 1988, we still can't take the moon out of a hospital gown. True, this one is a giant step for mankind. Modesty is creeping in. But when one is developed that I can wave bye-bye in without crouching, send it to me. I'll wear it around the house for a few days, and then we'll talk.

MUSIC EASES STRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — Music played during an aerobic dance class often relieves the mental stress of exercise, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says Ohio State University researchers had nine men run on treadmills for 30 minutes. First, they listened to upbeat rock music. Then they exercised without music. When they ran with musical accompaniment, the exercisers felt they had exerted themselves less.

Taylor-Norman Vows Performed On Friday

St. James United Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding of Kathryn Zimmerman Norman and Robert Tyrone Taylor. The Rev. Caswell Shaw performed the double-ring ceremony Friday at 7 p.m.

A program of wedding music was presented by Frances Cain.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Norman of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The honor attendant was Suzanne Spruill, sister of the bride.

Dana Cox, Samantha Adams, and Kelly Owens, all of Greenville, and Allison Rogers of Raleigh were bridesmaids. Courtney Stephens, niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Taylor of Ayden. The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were William Allen, Robert Baker, and David James, all of Greenville, and Neil Spruill of New Bern. Daron Taylor, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The bride wore a formal white gown of bridal satin featuring a Queen Anne neckline of schiffli embroidered illusion beaded with pearls and sequins. The fitted bodice fell to a basque waistline embroidered with matching lace, pearls and sequins. The long satin sleeves had cut-outs of matching embroidery. The full circular skirt was embroidered and extended into a semi-cathedral train. Her veil was shaped in tiara form and was accented with alencon lace, pearls, sequins and crystals. A double layer of imported, scalloped illusion fell fingertip-length and was trimmed with seed pearls. The bride carried a crescent bouquet of gardenias,lily of the valley sprays and baby's breath.

MRS. TAYLOR

The mother of the bride wore a lavender tea-length dress and the mother of the bridegroom wore a floral tea-length dress. They were honored with wrist corsages of cymbidium orchids. Grandmothers received ivory roses.

The wedding was directed by Jane Vaughn.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church after the ceremony. Guests were greeted by parents of the bridal couple.

The first tax-supported public library was founded in Peterborough, N.H., in 1833.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

DO YOU REALIZE ALL THE KINDS OF DESKS AVAILABLE?

When you say the work "desk", many people picture only the kind of desk you see in an office or a school room--but today there are so many different types of desks--including "decorator" desks--that not only serve their function but also add attractive touches to a room.

Don't forget that there are desks that run the gamut from masculine to feminine and everywhere in between. There are small desks for the lady which can be used in the bedroom or kitchen. There are large desks which can serve a husband's home needs. There are different shapes to fit any room, decor and mood.

There are desks with all kinds of tops and desks that also include shelves in addition to drawers.

Actually, furniture manufacturers have made desks for every room of the house and for every member of the household. But the best thing is that you can pick out desks that not only give you practical uses--but many of these desks can actually improve the looks of a room, too. You'll be surprised at the added interest the right desk can give to your decorating scheme. And, for all your furnishing needs we invite you to stop in.

Double-Ring Vows Spoken Saturday

GRIFTON — The wedding of Angela Lynn Nobles of Route 1, Grifton, and Hal E. Campbell Jr. of Route 8, Kinston, was conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday in Riverside Christian Church.

The Rev. Ben E. Hobgood officiated during the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nobles of Route 1, Grifton, and Donnie Campbell of Route 8, Greenville, and the late Hal. E. Campbell. The bride's parents gave her in marriage and her father escorted her. The best man was Phil Sabio of Hawthorne, N.J.

The bride wore a white satin and silk floss lace gown designed with a sweetheart neckline outlined with scalloped lace etched with pearls and iridescents. The short capped sleeves were accented with pearl cascades and satin bows. The flowing skirt bordered with scalloped lace and accented with a back satin bow and eutout lace appliques flowed into a cathedral train. Her rolled-edge fingertip veil of silk illusion was attached to a circlet of silk flowers accented with pearl filaments. Her bouquet was composed of yellow roses, gypsophilia and greenery backed with lace and white satin streamers.

The matron of honor was Rhonda Barwick, sister of the bride, of Grifton. She wore a formal-length gown of maize taffeta featuring a fitted bodice and a basque waistline. The shirred sleeves were elbow-length. A taffeta bow was tied across the keyhole back. She carried a nosegay of white buttons, lavender fuchsia, yellow and pink alstromeria, greenery and lace backing, tied with white streamers.

Bridesmaids were Gail White of New Bern and Trish Nobles of Grifton, both sisters of the bride, and Diane Conrad of Grifton and Mrs. Noel Wallace of Washington, N.C. Each was dressed like the matron of honor and carried a similar bouquet.

The flower girl was Kelly Lancaster of Aberdeen, niece of the bridegroom. She wore a white formal-length gown and carried a basket of white daisies.

Lemmie Barwick, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer. Ushers were Mike Campbell, brother of the bridegroom, of Greenville, Danny Ray Lane of Grifton, Windall Franks

Doreta Nobles, aunt of the bride, directed the wedding. Beverly Coltrain served as pianist and vocalist. Music selections included "The Wedding Song," "Household of Faith," and "Take A Lifetime."

A reception was given in the fellowship hall of the church by the bride's parents. Rhonda Stokes of Greenville poured punch and Connie Rouse of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, served cake.

The bridgroom's mother gave a rehearsal party. Parties and showers were given by co-workers and other friends of the couple.

The bride attended Ayden-Grifton High School, Beaufort Community College and is employed as a medical lab technician at Lenoir Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom, who attended North Lenoir High School and North Carolina State University, is employed by Frank S. Love and Co.

After a wedding trip the couple will live in Kinston.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Claudia Beth Taylor and Stephen Todd Roberson, both of Washington, were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in Snowd Branch Church of God.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. C. James Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Roberson Jr., all of Washington.

The maid of honor was Cherry L. Taylor, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Bobbie Jo Hopkins and Kim O'Neal. Kelly Peele was flower girl. All are from Washington.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Drew Roberson of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, and Wayne Cutler of Washington. Christopher Woolard of Greenville was the ring bearer. He is cousin of the bride.

Presenting a program of music were pianist Lisa B. Eaton and vocalists Sidney Hammonds and Donna Mizelle.

The bride is employed by Industrial Sales Co., Inc. and the bridegroom is employed by Stanadyne of Washington. Both attended Washington High School and Beaufort County Community College.

The bride wore a formal-length gown of white satin styled with a Victorian collar of schiffli lace and pearl dangles. The basque bodice was accented with Venise lace, pearls and sequins. The Victorian sleeves had pearl motifs, as did the full skirt which flowed into a semi-cathedral train with miniature ruffles trimmed with lace. Her fingertip-length veil flowed from a headband of pearls and beads with a back pouf. She carried a cascade of silk white roses and blue stephanotis centered with an orchid with pearl sprays.

The honor attendant wore a formal-length gown of romance blue taffeta fashioned with an embroidered bodice and short puffed sleeves. She carried an arm bouquet of white mums with blue ribbons. The bridesmaids' gowns and flowers were identical. The flower girl wore a formal-length princess style gown with a blue sash.

After a wedding trip to Georgia, the couple will live in Washington.

A reception was held after the ceremony. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Brentwood Lodge of Washington. Pre-nuptial parties honoring the couple included a bridesmaids luncheon, cookout, birdseed bagging party, pig picking and several bridal showers.

BURIED TREASURE

MAHONE BAY, Nova Scotia (AP) — Stories of pirates and buried treasure have long captured the imagination of the people on a small island off the coast here, 40 miles from Halifax.

In 1975, evidence of buried treasure was found on Oak Island but no one has ever been able to retrieve it or even prove it exists.

A group of Canadian and American businessmen hope to change that by investing $10 million to dig up the original "money pit."

Miss Walker And Mr. Hudson Are Married

Wedding vows were exchanged by Angela Dawn Walker of Winterville and Gregory Leon Hudson of Grifton at 5 p.m. Saturday in the Greenville Church of God.

The Rev. Curtis Haislip conducted the double-ring ceremony. The bride's grandfather, Cecil Bradshaw, gave her in marriage. The bridegroom's brother, Freddie Hudson Jr. of Farmville served as best man.

The bride's mother is Cecelia Bradshaw Walker of Winterville. The bridegroom's parents are Sandra Mayo of Grifton and Freddie Hudson Sr. of Surf City.

The maid of honor was Denise Morales of Ayden. Bridesmaids were Lisa Hudson, sister-in-law of the bridegroom of Farmville, and Tammy Roebuck of Greenville. Mindy Spain of Greenville was the flower girl.

Ushers were Christopher Mayo, stepbrother of the bridegroom, of Greenville and Brent Labenski of Greenville.

Christy Emory was the organist for the ceremony. Soloists were Rae Emory and Gay Nelson. Music selections included "Wedding Prayer" and "You and I."

The bride wore a white chapel-length gown of satin and chantilly lace with seed pearls and sequins. The sweetheart neckline was lace-edged. The bodice and melon-shaped lace sleeves were overlaid with lace, pearls and sequins. The bodice extended into an A-line skirt with satin bow pickups and a lace hem. The chapel-length train had lace border etching. Her veil fell from a Juliet cap with three tiers of chantilly lace and pearls. Silk rosettes with satin streamers and appliques accented the veil. She carried a cascade of white roses, gardenias and daisies accented with trailing ivy and baby's breath.

The honor attendant and the bridesmaid were dressed in off-shoulder royal blue gowns of lustrous satin embellished with fabric flowers. Their close-fitting bodices dipped to asymmetrical dropped waists and full floor-length skirts. They wore baby's breath in their hair.

A reception ws held in the fellowship hall of the church. Eleanor Baker, great-aunt of the bride, served cake. The flower girl also passed out birdseed bags.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy. She is employed by Great Expectations hair salon. The bridegroom is a graduate of West Carteret High School and is employed by J.H. Hudson Co.

The couple will live in Winterville.

Couple Speaks Wedding Vows

Diane Elise Williams and Steven Wayne Dawson, both of Kinston, were united in marriage at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Gospel Baptist Church.

The Revs. Michael Parker and R. Douglas Dawson, the latter brother of the bridegroom, officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Williams of Kinston. The bridegroom is the son of Lucille H. Dawson of Kinston and the late Cedric Dawson.

The bride wore a champagne-length gown of ivory schiffli lace over silk. The fitted bodice was designed with a jewel neckline and three-quarter sleeves. A scalloped overlay of lace enhanced the basque waistline and deep motifs of schiffli lace highlighted the hemline of the fitted skit. Her lace windsor hat was decorated with seed pearls and silk flowers and had an attached pouf of French fingertip-length illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, white pixie carnations and stephanotis accented with variegated English ivy.

The wedding was directed by Ann Baker of Kinston. Annie Kay Harper of Kinston attended the register.

The bride attends Pitt Community College and is employed by Dr. Charles L. Herring. The bridegroom is a graduate of Lenoir Memorial Hospital School of Nursing and is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

After a wedding trip to Virginia, the couple will live in Grifton.

Parties given for the couple included a pig-picking and cake cutting hosted by their parents, a cookout hosted by Dick and Lea Cutler, and several miscellaneous showers.

MRS. DAWSON

Gray-Clark Vows Are Solemnized

VANCEBORO — The marriage of Alice Ruth Clark and Michael James Gray, both of Greenville, was solemnized at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Vanceboro United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Claude T. Wilson officiated during the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Clark of Vanceboro, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Joseph Gray of Elyria, Ohio.

The bride wore a tea-length white strapless sundress with a white and off-white floral design. Her arm bouquet was of sonia gerbera daisies, baby's breath and plumosia. She wore a floral headpiece of daisies, roses and baby's breath.

The matron of honor was Cynthia P. Donahoe of Havelock; the best man, Leonard B. Fleming III of Greenville. Ms. Donahoe wore a tea-length two-piece dress and had baby's breath in her hair. Her arm bouquet was similar to the bride's.

Music was provided by Michael Morris of Vanceboro, who played the organ and sang. Among the music selections was "Longer Than."

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

The bride is employed by James McGraw Inc. of Greenville; the bridegroom by Coastal Plains Freight of Greenville. After a wedding trip to Elyria, Ohio, the couple will live in Greenville.

Bingo Mom Is Compulsive Gambler

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother is hooked on bingo. She has always been a very honest person, but when it comes to bingo, she lies. For example, she'll say she's working late, but when I call her at work, she's not there.

We are a close family, but we've had it with Mom. She owes me $1,100, she owes my brother $500, and she owes other family members lesser amounts. She's two months behind in her house payments, a month behind on her car payments, and she's also behind on her electric, telephone and cable bills. The interest on what she owes is putting her deeper and deeper in debt. The bank already closed her checking account.

The cost of bingo is $40 a night, and Mom plays nearly every night and twice on Sundays. She has a good job, but she blows it all on bingo. She says it's just a pastime, but it's like a sickness.

What can we do, Abby? She gets hostile when we confront her. — BINGO BABY

DEAR BINGO BABY: Your mother is a compulsive gambler, and there is help for her. There is a chapter of Gamblers Anonymous listed in the white pages of the telephone book in every major city. There is also a Gam-Anon to assist family members who need help living with a compulsive gambler. G.A. operates very much like Alcoholics Anonymous. It's free, and the success rate is remarkable.

If Gamblers Anonymous is not listed in your telephone book, send a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to: Gamblers Anonymous, P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles, Calif. 90017, for the address of the chapter nearest you.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please tell men to quit giving women these backhanded, obnoxious compliments: "Boy, you must have been something when you were in high school!" Or, "Gee, I'd sure like to have seen you 10 years ago!" Is that supposed to make a woman in her 40s feel good?

Not this one! I work out in a gym four evenings a week, and, frankly, I like my body better now than when I was a bookworm in high school.

Why can't these oafish men see their stupidity? If you can't say something in the here and now that rings my bell, don't bother to climb up the belfry! — SUZANNE IN LONG BEACH

DEAR SUZANNE: You said it very well. Such obnoxious compliments offered by oafish men are meant in the spirit of generosity. Your comment may cause others to think twice before offering such deflating compliments.

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'ONE DAY AT A TIME': You are to be commended for taking your Alcoholics Anonymous pledge seriously, but you are in error to say that as a group, alcoholics are thought to be "inferior." Please read what one great man had to say in an address to a temperance meeting:

"I believe if we take habitual drunkards as a class, their heads and their hearts will bear advantageous comparison with those of any other class. There seems ever to have been a proneness in the brilliant, and the warm-blooded, to fall into this vice. The demon of intemperance ever seems to have delighted in sucking the blood of genius and generosity." — ABRAHAM LINCOLN (1842)

DEAR ABBY: Will you please say a few words to the public on behalf of the shopkeepers whose customers arrive five minutes before closing time to do their shopping?

Most businesses have their hours clearly posted and rely on the good sense of the customers to be out of the store by closing time. However, there are always those who feel that if they get inside the door one minute before closing time, they are welcome to stay as long as they please.

This can be very difficult for the employees who have put their full shift in already. Transportation and appointments can be missed and baby sitters made angry when we are kept late. Once in a while is not minded, but I am writing after a 9 1/2-hour day on my feet, no coffee breaks, and an hour late out of the door. And this is the second time this week.

So, Abby, please be a dear and speak for those of us who can't very well speak for ourselves without offending our customers. — SPEAKING FOR MANY

DEAR SPEAKING: Consider me your spokesperson. I'm sure most customers who arrive late and shop leisurely are not deliberately thoughtless. Let's hope this makes the lateniks more aware of the inconvenience they may cause.

(P.S. I am addressing only customers who can't decide whether to buy 1 or 1 1/2 yards of ribbon. I have heard of jewelers who cheerfully stay open as long as it takes to close an important sale. And for a Texas oil tycoon, they might even have dinner sent in!)

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage is included).

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Jim Blair Is Guest Speaker

Furniture Makers Turn To Innovations To Boost Sales

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — After last year's record growth, furniture industry analysts projected business would flatten out in 1988.

So far, their projections are on the mark. But that doesn't mean the furniture manufacturers, many of them in North Carolina, are sitting on their hands.

Faced with the industry's first prolonged no-growth period since 1982, the manufacturers are developing innovative ways to attract retailers and consumers.

Some are pushing new furniture lines to catch the eyes of potential customers. Others are working to improve services. Prices have been sharpened and new marketing strategies devised.

"The people who will be successful will do their homework, come out with some new lines and sharpen their pricing," said High Point designer Randy Culler.

Culler, who designs furniture for 10 different companies, feels it will take good business acumen rather than exotic designs if manufacturers are to entice consumers to buy as they did in 1987.

"I've always said 80 percent of what we do is merchandising and 20 percent (is) design," he said in an interview.

William DiPaolo, vice president of the Southern Furniture Market Center in High Point, said the business slowdown during the first few months of this year caused some difficulties for some factories.

"Their cash flow has become squeezed," he said in an interview. "We might start seeing some shorter work weeks."

Marty Reddan, an economist for the American Furniture Manufacturers Association, said shipments and orders from factories to retailers have been flat this year, when compared with the record levels of a year ago.

First quarter shipments, measured by units, were up less than 1 percent over the same period in 1987, he said.

Jerry Epperson, a furniture industry analyst with Wheat, First Securities, a Richmond, Va., brokerage house, said the reductions could lead to shorter work weeks and smaller backlogs in orders.

"It's not that business is not clipping along at a good rate," he said. "Retailers are not ordering as far in advance because the backlogs aren't as large. Business in the popular price points has been tough most of the year. But it's more complicated than to just say consumers aren't buying furniture."

Epperson said many furniture retailers have been struggling to comply with the federal tax reforms of 1986. No longer can they pay their taxes on an installment basis and defer some payments, he said.

"Now they have to pre-pay the government before taking out of their inventories," he said. "They are less generous in credit terms and stricter in inventories.

Reddan stressed that 1987 was a record year for shipments and orders.

"You must remember that employment is at an all-time high in the furniture industry," he said. "Flat is very good — a lot better than some people had feared."

Until last October's stock market crash, optimism was strong in North Carolina, the nation's leading producer of household goods. In 1987, manufacturers shipped nearly $15.8 billion worth of furniture, a 10 percent increase over 1986. Retail sales last year advanced 5 percent to $27.2 billion.

Topping those figures is difficult when the growth in the national economy has slowed, especially when new home starts, housing resales and interest rates also reflect a slowdown over 1987.

"It will be a flat year at retail, down between 3 to 5 percent below last year in unit terms," Epperson said.

Prior to last April's Southern Furniture Market in High Point, some analysts were predicting that manufacturers would bring out many new product lines to generate business.

Epperson said that didn't turn out to be the case.

"If anything, many factories are cutting back on the number of items they offer," he said. "When you produce 600 sofas at one time, the cost is less."

Many manufacturers are working to strengthen their relationship with a smaller number of retailers by providing better services — such as accelerated delivery, guaranteed delivery or better credit terms, Epperson said.

Richard Barentine, executive director of the Furniture Factories' Marketing Association of the South, said prospects are picking up for the fall furniture market.

"If interest rates remain stable as well as housing starts, and consumer demand is strong, we'll be OK," he said.

Barentine said many manufacturers have decided to stay with successful lines rather than try to push new ones. They also follow consumer preference — for example, in case goods.

Q. We found a large gray beetle crawling across the patio this morning. It is about two inches long and an inch wide. It is gray but has some black spots. It also has two horns — one that comes out from the top of its head and points down and another smaller one that points up to the top one. It looks fierce. What could it be? Will it damage the garden?

A. It is the Eastern Hercules beetle, the largest of the beetles in the United States. Males have the two horns, but the female has only the smaller horn. The larvae of this beetle feed in decaying wood. It is not harmful to you or your garden. Its size and appearance do make it a curiosity, however.

Q. Is it all right to set out pansies in the fall?

A. Go ahead and purchase and plant pansies in the fall. Pansies are hardy, and planting in the fall allows the roots more time to become established before spring. Also, depending upon the weather, you will have a few blossoms all winter.

Q. Please give me some information on making a garden pizza. I have a crust recipe; I just need one for the sauce and toppings.

A. Here is a recipe for a summertime pizza with white cheese sauce and toppings from the garden.

WHITE CHEESE SAUCE

1 1/2 cups low-fat cottage cheese (or a 12-ounce container)
1/2 cup mozzarella cheese
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
1 egg
2 tablespoons parsley
2 tablespoons fresh basil (2 teaspoons dried)
1 large garlic clove

Combine all ingredients (except Parmesan cheese) in a mixing bowl or food processor and blend well. Spread on pizza crust. Add these toppings to your pizza.

1 tomato, sliced thin
1/4 pepper, finely diced and sprinkled over sauce
1 green onion, sliced thin and spread over toppings
1/2 cup broccoli (steam flowerettes for 5 minutes, until bright green)
1 small carrot (slice thin and steam two to three minutes until tender yet crisp)
1 small zucchini, sliced thin

Arrange vegetables of your choice on your pizza's cheese sauce. Top with Parmesan cheese. Bake at 500 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes, or until crust is brown.

On The House
By ANDY LANG

That old saying that "you never miss the water until the well runs dry" has been given many variations this year by droughts in different parts of the country.

Precious as it is to life, water gets little attention until there isn't enough of it. Billions of gallons of water are wasted day after day in homes and businesses. The tiniest drip from a faucet wastes as much water as it normally takes to meet a family's daily needs. Think of the waste in the thousands of places where faucets send water down the drains because they are in need of repair or are left partly open throughout the day for one reason or another.

Entirely aside from the water conservation factor is that wasted water is wasted money. Meters go on clicking whether water is being utilized properly or not utilized at all. Even where there are no meters, the careless use of water can cause shortages that, in turn, cost money.

There are many ways to prevent the waste of water, but most of them are overlooked. In this category is the use of water to flush the toilet bowl. It usually takes about five gallons of water for proper flushing. Some manufacturers have come up with devices that permit the flushing to be done with less water, but some of the do-it-yourself solutions that have been recommended in various quarters don't always work. A much-discussed method of saving water is to place a brick in the toilet tank. That will mean less water in the tank and consequently less water used during the flushing process. All well and good when it works, but reducing the amount of water in a tank in a conventional setup reduces efficiency and results in a second flushing, which defeats the very purpose of the plan. You get a more certain result when you use one of the new water-saving devices or make an adjustment to reduce the flush cycle.

You can conserve water easily without drastically changing your whole way of life. Putting one inch less water in the tub when taking a bath saves many gallons. Cut down on your showering time and use a gadget that slows the flow of water. Don't wash the dishes or use the clothes washer until you have a full load of dishes or clothes. Do you have to run the water from the faucet for a few minutes until it gets cold? Keep a pitcher or bottle of water in the refrigerator and you will have cold water instantly. Get out of the common habit of keeping the water running while shaving. Instead, turn the faucet on and off as necessary.

Ever see a person washing a car with a hose that is spouting gallons of water while the car is being wiped off? Shut off the hose when you are not using it, even for a few minutes. Some communities have restrictions about which days and which times of the day you can water your lawns and gardens. Why not have your own water-saving plan even when there are no restrictions?

Aerators used on faucets will reduce the amount of water emitting from them. As simple a thing as tightening a nut on a piece of plumbing equipment is a water-saver. Don't be intimidated by the plumbing system in your house. It is true that certain code regulations prevent you from working on certain parts of the water supply system in your house, but there are many things you can do yourself. Changing a faucet washer to stop a drip is easier than most people think. Remember always to shut off the water before you start to work. Incidentally, when there is a water emergency in your house, does every adult or near-adult know where the water shutoff valve is and how to turn it off? Should there be major break in a water pipe when the knowledgeable member of the family is away, knowing how to shut off the water coming into the house can save water, money and damage to your household furnishings. It's a good idea to place tags on all the water valves telling which lines they control. And remember, all valves are shut off when they are turned clockwise.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I am having our kitchen renovated and expect to do some of the work myself. I intend to use two base cabinets without putting backs on them. Is this feasible and is there anything I should know about it?

A. — Yes. It is a fairly common practice. But you must first install wooden cleats on the wall. One bit of advice that applies to all cabinets that are to be attached to a wall. Make sure the cabinets are perfect before they are screwed into place. See that everything is level and that all doors and other equipment work properly. If you don't and there is even a slight adjustment necessary later, it will be much more difficult to make corrections after the cabinet is attached.

Q. — We have plaster walls in a bathroom which I plan to cover partially with ceramic tiles. Can the tiles be attached to any kind of wall or must it be in excellent condition? Our walls are fairly sound, but starting to look a bit seedy.

A. — You will have to be the judge of whether the walls are in good enough shape or whether new gypsum walls are necessary. It is assumed you mean the old-fashioned solid plaster walls. In that event, the chances are any defects can be fixed. Fill any gaps with patching plaster. Be sure to wash down the walls to remove any grease or dirt on them. This is especially important in a bathroom or kitchen. The test is whether the old walls afford a solid base for the tiles.

Q. — I want to redo an old bureau. Its varnish is in fair condition but I want to remove it and apply a lacquer finish. Can the lacquer be applied right over the varnish?

A. — A frequently asked question, which always has the same reply: no. Lacquer tends to act as a varnish softener. If you want to refinish the cabinet with lacquer, you will have to remove the old finish.

(The techniques of applying varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Parts Now Available For Antique Values

By COUNTRY LIVING
A Hearst Magazine

Antique collectors need no longer walker away from that Chippendale dresser with missing pulls or a roll-top desk with splintered rolls — replacements may be readily available.

These antiques can be great bargains because of missing parts, according to an article in the current issue of Country Living, but that is no reason to pass them by.

The key to restoring such pieces is to know where to find the missing parts.

In the past antiques dealers and collectors were faced with three unpleasant alternatives.

They could pay a premium price to have the missing part custom-made, they could buy an inappropriate but readily available hardware-store substitute, or they could live with the piece the way they found it.

Today there are dozens of firms that have begun to reproduce hundreds of different styles of pulls, latches, castors, carvings, shades, locks, finishes and decorative accessories, including antique wallpapers, stencils and fabrics.

There are outfits that specialize in chair and seating supplies, clock parts, clothing patterns, Morris chairs and Hoosier cupboards, wrought-iron hardware and leather supplies.

There are firms that offer architectural molding, square nails, plumbing fixtures, porcelain knobs and castors, Shaker seats and supplies and even wooden spindles.

It is no longer necessary to walk away from a curved-glass china cabinet with broken glass doors — there's a firm in Lexington, Mich., that specializes in curved glass.

If you see a "Gone With the Wind" lamp with cracked globes, there's a firm in Upper Falls, Md., that specializes in lamp shades and chimneys.

There is no reason to walk away from a pie safe with rusted tin panels, an icebox missing a hinge or a house stripped of its charming gingerbread trim.

The demand for restoration items has turned several cottage industries into nationally recognized corporations with toll-free numbers and glossy, full-color catalogues.

Instead of having to turn your back on a once-useful antique in need of a hard-to-find part, you can cinch the deal, take the piece home and feel proud of the fact you could save something that might otherwise have been discarded.

The list of reproduction firms and their products is growing steadily. Some of those that have already established reputations for quality and reliability are listed in Country Living, and further firms can be found in the back of this and other antique-related periodicals.

There are a variety of supplies and a number of useful items, ranging from furniture hardware to woodworking tools to books on the history and restoration of antiques.

Despite the ever-increasing number of items being reproduced, however, few are exact duplicates of one another.

Having several catalogues in your bookcase will improve both your antiques library and your home.

Our computer training has captured two very important names in business: IBM and Sandy Decker-Jones, office temporary.

IBM took a close look at Manpower's Skillware® training and liked what they saw. And, now, we're working with IBM to provide training for their customers at the time of installation.

Sandy Decker-Jones, one of our long-time office temps also took a close look at Manpower's Skillware® training. She decided to learn more about it. And she did — nine different brands of it. In fact, she just recently trained on IBM's System/36.

It's time you took a close look at our training for word processing operators. Call us. You'll find out all about the advantages of working as a Manpower office temporary in today's working world. We know you'll like what you see.

240 DL Sedan

Look at it this way:
You'll save $1000. And you'll get a car that comes with a history for safety and durability that's nothing short of legendary. As well as a three-year limited warranty that puts no limit on mileage. And a free roadside assistance plan.

But, if you prefer, you can spend the extra $1000, and get a car that doesn't come with any of that.

Oh what a feeling.

VOLVO
A car you can believe in.

SOCIETY CHAIRMAN — British Colonel John Blashford-Snell is seen saying farewell on Tuesday to a venturer at the Engelhard campsite of young people engaged in the excavation of an Indian village there. The colonel is chairman of the Scientific Exploration Society of Operation Raleigh.

Operation Raleigh Venturers Work At Eastern North Carolina Sites

British Army Colonel John Blashford-Snell, chairman of the Scientific Exploration Society of Operation Raleigh, was on an inspection tour and contact with people visit to two eastern North Carolina sites on August 23.

Hosted by the North Carolina National Guard, the colonel traveled by helicopter, first to a site near Engelhard in Hyde County, later to the Beaufort County village of Oriental.

At both sites, contingents of young people from several foreign countries and the United States, members of Operation Raleigh who are designated by the term venturers, are currently engaged in archaeological explorations.

At the site three miles west of Engelhard, venturers are excavating a field under the auspices of East Carolina University in search of evidence of Pomeiooc, a 16th century Algonkian Indian village. At Oriental, the project is an underwater archaeology one involving a sunken vessel.

After a brief look at the Indian village excavation site, Colonel Blashford-Snell, his N.C. National Guard hosts, the excavation staff and the venturers walked the half mile distance to the tents housing the Operation Raleigh venturers.

The walk was past fields of corn heavy with a coming good harvest, green fields of soybeans and two neighboring old Hyde County wooden churches — the small St. George Episcopal Church and the larger Amity United Methodist Church, both with church cemeteries.

Tents providing living quarters and a dining facility for the venturers are placed under large trees on the green lawn of a farmhouse.

Blashford-Snell commented on the greenery and rural beauty of the site, and reminded the Engelhard contingent that they would soon be leaving to go to an Operation Raleigh site in Colorado. (The venturers there are coming to Engelhard in an exchange program to continue excavations through September).

"You need to be prepared to adjust to the mountain site in Colorado, which is far less humid than here and at a much higher elevation." he said.

"I've just come from the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, the Colorado site where you will be going, and I must warn you that a mad Irishman is running the show there. But don't worry, he is very much appreciated by the Indians. You'll like him too."

Outlining the work the Engelhard venturers will be involved in at the Colorado site, Blashford-Snell said "the Indians are delighted to be getting running water. The project there is being given support by the Christian Aid Society.

"Maybe," he told the venturers, "you might get to see a Sun Dance, such as I saw there. It's most remarkable, the coming of age ritual in which young men place hooks in the sinews of their chests as a mark of courage."

Summary Of Project

While the Engelhard venturers sat on the grass in cool morning shade, Colonel Blashford-Snell gave them a colorful account of his experiences and observations during recent visits to other Operation Raleigh sites worldwide.

He had a most attentive audience as he related both the achievements and some of the comic incidents that he emphasized as part of the total experiences of being a venturer in Operation Raleigh expeditions.

The first project he spoke about was "the building of bridges in a remote location in Alaska for use by the natives there. It was truly exciting, watching a sky crane lift the bridge segments into position.

"The venturers there," he added, "had some rather terrifying encounters with bears that visited their camps. On one occasion they resorted to tear gas as a means of driving the bears away. Unfortunately, the wind changed direction and came back on the people, forcing them, not the bears, away from camp."

The African country of Kenya, site of several Operation Raleigh expeditions, resulted in solid achievement as well as moments of unexpected comedy.

"At one site, venturers were testing the use of electric shocks as an experiment to counter the venom of snake bites. Can you imagine, while suffering from snake bit pain, to being treated to electric shocks from cattle prods as a remedy?

"One venturer, a French boy with the group, sat on and was bitten by a poisonous scorpion. A glamorous nurse sat astride him, holding him down while electric prods were applied to his bottom five times. I'm sure that's an experience he'll never forget."

Another Kenya expedition was mentioned by Blashford-Snell as an example of environmental involvement in various areas of the world.

"Lake Baringo," he said, "was once a thriving refuge for flocks of flamingoes. But the land was overgrazed by flocks of cattle, sheep and goats so that the soil eroded into the lake, shrinking it. Our mission was to try to find out how to preserve the lake, to clear the water of sediment. We knew that alum is effective, but it is far too expensive. Then it was discovered that a native root served the same purpose, was readily available and inexpensive, so we were able to register success there."

Just before Colonel Blashford-Snell's trip to that area of Kenya, there had been a severe drought. "Right after my arrival, rains came and the people said 'God has sent you with the rains.' I told them no, it was not me, but my great white queen who was responsible.

"At any rate, the rains kept falling and flooding then became a problem, so the people came to me and asked that I please send someone to stop the rains."

One of the colonel's happiest memories was being able to help a Kenyan boy named Cosmo. "He had selected his bride, and the price had been named. I was looking forward to attending a Masai wedding with its elaborate ceremonies. But Cosmos could not give me an exact date, saying that elders set the time based on omens and phases of the moon, and I had to go away to other places.

"Later, when I came back to the area, I encountered a sad Cosmos. A suitable date had been decided on, but in the meantime, the bride purchase price had been increased. However, we were able to pass the hat and collect enough for Cosmos to buy his bride, so all ended well."

Value Of Contacts

Colonel Blansford-Snell emphasized the value of international contacts between people of diverse origins and cultures in their experiences as venturers in Operation Raleigh projects, of friendships made and opportunities for young people to see what for them are strange new places.

"An excellent example of cross-cultural exchanges is that of two Eskimos who were in Wales recently on a small expedition to Britain. They were there to help construct a building for disabled children in South Wales. The one thing that most impressed them was seeing our double decker buses in London.

"At the same time," he said, "a couple of venturers from Wales had the chance to see the vast wilderness of Alaska in a project that involved building log cabins for Eskimos."

Not all Operation Raleigh expeditions are oriented to projects that involve services such as construction, archaeological excavations or erecting facilities.

Some are rather unusual in nature, such as the upcoming October 17 sailing voyage of the brigantine Lord Nelson. "On this voyage, which will be from the port of Plymouth to the Turks and Cacos Islands," Blashford-Snell said, "venturers will be working with a crew that includes people in wheelchairs, with special rigging so that they will be able to do many things that able-bodied sailors normally do. That will be a wonderful challenge."

Past and present venturers will be invited in April to a grand reunion in Albert Hall in London. "We will have an enormous run of audios-visuals followed perhaps by a grand orgy," Blashford-Snell commented. "It should be a grand affair."

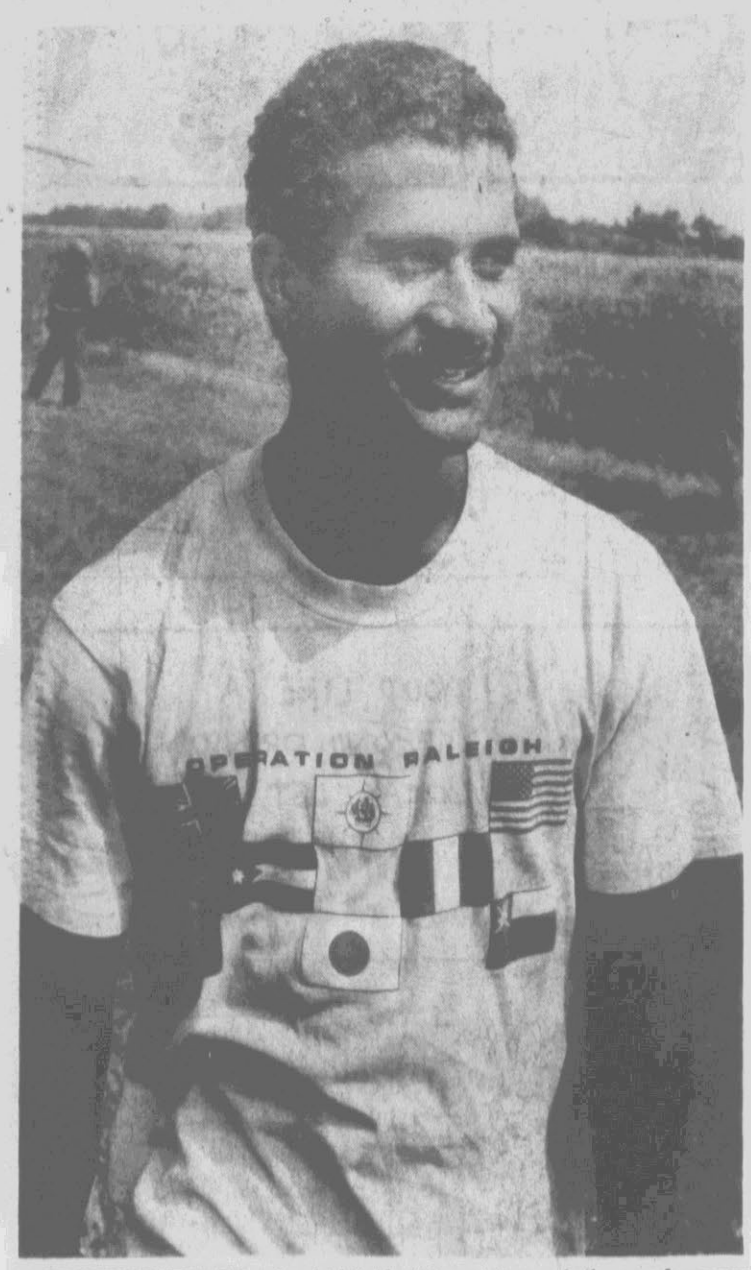

Future Plans

Tentative future plans are for an expedition to Chile "hopefuly in 1989 and 1990 with, we hope, help from the Chilean Air Force to get into the glaciers and mountains of that country." Also in the planning stages are expeditions to Nepal, to Botswana and Zimbabwe.

Something entirely new is being considered in extending the availability of Operation Raleigh expeditions to older persons. "We're thinking in terms of people 26 and upwards, far upwards," the colonel said.

"We'd like to interest companies in getting their executives out into the field, to send them on expeditions of four to five weeks, using the same techniques we use for our younger venturers. We feel this could be a very stimulating, successful project."

Operation Raleigh

Operation Raleigh is the largest, most ambitioius multinational expedition ever established for youth ages 17-24. Participants are known as venturers. To date, more than 4,000 venturers from 30 nations, 1,000 of which have been Americans, have taken part in some 40 worldwide expeditions in over 40 countries from 1984 to date.

Each project is three months long. Those selected must be able to speak English and swim 500 yards. To participate, a venturer has to raise $5,500 in sponsorship. A scholarship fund has been established and is accessible to all venturers by special application.

AT THE MESS TENT — Six members of the Engelhard expedition gather in front of the tent which serves as the outdoors under-the-trees dining hall for the venturers working in Hyde County. This sextet represents venturers from Australia, France, Ireland, Japan, Oman and England.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY Aug. 28

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Tap into your subconscious, and come up with ideas to help you most now and in the future. Have a worthwhile discussion with your mate.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Get together with friends, and exchange valuable, mutually helpful ideas. Be sure you know what your wishes are, and go after them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Show respect for those in power. Garner the data you need most. The evening would be best spent in the safety of your home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Look into new outlets that can bring you greater prosperity in the days ahead. A new acquaintance can help you solve a problem.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): It is a good day to study just what your true position is in life, and then plan how to have greater prosperity in the future. Avoid arguments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): A long talk with an associate is needed before you can reach a perfect understanding. Show that you are a true humanitarian.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Take any health treatments you may need. Reach greater accord with family members in the evening to increase your happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Take part in activities that can elevate your spirits and inspire you to greater things in the future. Agree to do what your mate wants.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Study the situation at home, and plan how to bring more harmony there. Be peaceful and set a good example. Invite friends home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): Take a short trip with close friends. Enjoy a hobby that you all like. Be careful driving back home in the evening. Be a courteous driver.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Study your property, and plan to make any repairs needed. Make a plan that can increase your assets, also. Enjoy a family dinner.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You will wake up in a good mood. Plan to see friends you have neglected lately. Enjoy hobbies that give you the greatest pleasure.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Aug. 29

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Avoid someone in power who does not comprehend your ideas. If a friend likes to argue, say nothing, and you can soon get back to work.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Study a new arrangement before you bring it to the attention of someone who can assist you. Do not get in the middle of an argument.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You can rely on a good friend instead of a person in business you were depending on who backed out. Schedule your time wisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Your energy will have to be divided between an important business matter and a civic duty, so plan your time well in the morning.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Be sure you garner the information you need before you go on with an enterprise you are working on. Be more willing to listen to new ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Get your life balanced between work and play so that you can be happier and healthier. Don't spend so much money on your friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Get out and meet those who can assist you in improving your public stature. If family members are arguing, don't get involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Don't drop everything to get involved in something you know little about, or you stand to lose a great deal. Be loyal to a friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You need money, so find a new outlet that pays well, and you can earn it very soon. Show that you are efficient and talented.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): Be more concerned with your family's needs, and help them. Stop thinking only of yourself. Come to a better understanding at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Stop fussing about what you can do little about, and get involved in activities that are profitable. Your family can help solve a problem.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A smark aleck friend wants you to get into something you do not approve of, but don't fall for this scheme. Get busy at worthwhile affairs.

It is comforting to declarer at a no trump contract to have a sure trick in the opening leader's suit. But sometimes the whole hand dictates giving up that security blanket in favor of a chance to make the contract.

South had a difficult rebid problem. All in all, his jump to three no trump was a practical solution, despite the fact that he really didn't have a heart stopper. However, there were any number of hands that partner might hold which would compensate for the deficiency; and the opponents might lead some other suit.

West led his fourth-best heart, and declarer saw that he could make sure of a heart trick by playing low from dummy. Guaranteeing that one trick cost the contract. East took his queen and returned the suit. West rose with the ace and cleared hearts, and declarer found that he had no way to get dummy for the diamond finesse. He could come to only two spade tricks, one heart, three diamonds and two clubs, for a total of eight tricks.

Had declarer counted his tricks, he would have seen that the propects of making game without four diamond tricks were slim indeed. What was needed urgently was an entry to dummy, and the only possible card to serve that purpose was the king of hearts. Therefore, declarer should have eschewed the "sure" trick in hearts in favor of the risky play of flying up with the king at trick one. True, that risked not making a trick in hearts if the ace and queen were reversed. As the cards lay, however, valor would have prevailed.

When the king of hearts wins, it is a simple matter to pick up the king of diamonds via repeat finesses. That extra trick in diamonds is just enough to bring declarer's total to nine.

N.C. Poetry Society Meeting To Be Held In Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL — The North Carolina Poetry Society will hold its fall meeting at Bolin Brook Farm, Chapel Hill, on Sept. 10, beginning with registration at 9:30 a.m. A business session will begin at 10 a.m. followed at 10:30 a.m. by a presentation of Resources for Poets by Sandra Redding, a free-lance writer and MFA candidate at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Following lunch at noon, the afternoon session will feature a program, "Your Poem into Song," by David Gude of Burlington, creative director for Gude Studios. He holds an English BA from Appalachian State University and is employed by Alamance Community College as an instructor of Adult Basic Education and English as a Second Language.

He has been writing poems, lyrics and songs for 18 years and has had 10 years experience with multi-track recording. He, along with his wife, Beverly, performs in coffee houses, talent shows and craft fairs in the area.

At 2 p.m. Evalyn Gill, chairman of the Zoe Kincaid Brockman Award Committee, will announce the winner of that award, and the recipient will read from the winning volume. The award is presented for the best book-length volume of poetry published during the preceding calendar year by a native of North Carolina or current resident who has lived in North Carolina for three years. The award carries a cash prize of $200 and an engraved silver bowl to be kept permanently.

This year's judge is Mary Oliver, who received a Pulitzer Prize for poetry for her book "American Primitive." She is the author of several other books, including "Dream-Work," and is serving as one of the judges of the prestigious Lamont Poetry Selection sponsored by The Academy of American Poets.

A board meeting will follow the meeting of the membership.

Interested poets and non-poets are invited to attend the membership meeting. Anyone interested in learning more about membership in the society or attending the fall meeting may write, enclosing a SASE, to: Membership Chairman, 1413 New Hope Trace, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27516, or call 929-5722.

St. Andrews Forum In September

LAURINBURG — Two Charlotte writers will launch the third decade of the Fortner Writers' Forum at St. Andrews Presbyterian College in Laurinburg on Sept. 8.

The two will read at 8 p.m. in Mecklenburg Residence Hall Lounge at St. Andrews. The Forum is open to the public and is free of charge.

The two readers are Judy Goldman and recent St. Andrews graduate Kris Deal.

Goldman's recent book of poetry, "Holding Back Winter" from St. Andrews Press, is now in its third printing in less than 18 months. Deal recently completed a manuscript of verse entitled "The Last Quarter."

The Fortner Forum, named after St. Andrews' writing benefactor Ethel Fortner, late of Estacada, Ore., has met each week on the St. Andrews campus since September, 1968.

The forum was founded by St. Andrews writer-in-residence Ron Bayes, who also was the founding editor of the St. Andrews Review and the St. Andrews Press.

A firm believer in Ezra Pound's concepts of "The Live Tradition," and "Making it New," Bayes points out that the forum may draw from 20 to 300 people.

The forum meets 12 months of the year.

In addition to Goldman and Deal, this fall's readers will include E. Waverly Land of Wahshington, D.C., author of "Painful Entry"; Carroll Terrell of the University of Maine and president of the National Poetry Foundation, author of "Rod & Lightning" as well as editor of the national Ezra Pound journal "Paideuma"; Jargon Press poet Thomas Meyer, and Black Mountain poet Jonathan Williams, president of the Jargon Foundation.

The readings are made possible by the N.C. State Arts Council, the National Endowment for the Arts, the St. Andrews student body and the college.

EC Playhouse Sets Auditions For A Musical

The East Carolina Playhouse will hold open auditions for the musical "Carnival" at 7:30 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday, with callbacks, if necessary, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. Needed are men and women who can sing and act.

Auditions will be in Room 206 of the Messick Theatre Arts Center on the East Carolina University campus.

The musical will open the 1988-89 East Carolina Playhouse season on October 5, with additional performances Oct. 6, 7, 8 and 10 at 8:15 p.m.

Those wishing to audition are asked to prepare a song of his or her choice and to bring sheet music. An accompanist will be provided.

FLYING OVER THE WAVES

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — One of the ocean's strangest inhabitants is the flying fish, or Exocoetidae, which can leap from the water and travel just above the waves for 150 to 1,000 feet.

The flying fish, which is about 18 inches long, does not fly. It glides. Leaving the water by flicking its powerful tail, the fish's broad fins act like the wings of a glider. The body muscles and tail fin enable the fish to turn in flight. How far it glides often depends on the speed and direction of the wind.

BABY BOOM

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — William Carter Co. says it has been licensed by Campbell Soup to market a line of baby clothing featuring the Campbell Kids logos.

The babywear maker says the infants wear industry is a $16 billion business. It says we are in the middle of a baby boom, with nearly 4 million babies expected to be born in 1988 in the United States.

Art Museum Sets Program For Local Area Youngsters

The First Look Program for fall 1988, a session of classes for the discovery and exploration of children's artistic abilities, will get under way beginning the week of September 5 at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street.

Through both two and three dimensional art projects, the art classes will encourage children in cooperative, creative learning designed to enhance their ability to create, both alone and with others.

The museum program is for children in age groups from preschool through the sixth grades.

Linda Darty, teacher and program director, has had extensive teaching expereince with children of every grade level as well as with handicapped and exceptional groups and adults.

Schedules will cover times for each age and grade level.

The fee for the 11 weeks of instruction will be $50 for children whose parents are not members of the museum, and $45 for those whose parents are members. The fee covers all costs of instructions and all supplies needed during the 11 weeks of classes.

The schedule for various age groups and other pertinent information is available by calling the museum at 758-1946.

Marine Symposium Scheduled In October

ECU News Bureau

BEAUFORT — "Coastal Cultural Heritage: 19th Century Influences" is the theme of the first North Carolina Maritime Museum Symposium to be held Oct. 23-25 in Beaufort. The event is co-sponsored by the N. C. Maritime Museum and the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

Symposium fee is $99 per person, which includes lectures, materials, tours, social hours and planned meals.

Registration forms, symposium brochures and information about lodging are available from: N. C. Maritime Museum Symposium Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N. C. 27858-4353.

Symposium sessions will focus on seaside personalities, changes in the coastline, the lifestyle of the Outer Banks, coastal boats, coastal architecture and events in the history of the coastal region.

The symposium is designed for persons with a personal or professional interest in the life and culture of North Carolina's coast, said an ECU official.

Topics and speakers are:

• "Carteret County Characters," Nelson W. Taylor III, Morehead City attorney and native of Beaufort.

• "Evaluation of the Dynamic North Carolina Coastal Zone: Its Effect Upon Our Cultural Heritage," Dr. Stanley Riggs, professor of geology at ECU.

• "Wind, Water and Song: Life on Portsmouth Island and Core Banks," Constance Mason, N. C. Maritime Museum curator-researcher.

"By Their Boats Shall Ye Know Them," Michael Alford, curator of maritime research, N. C. Maritime Museum.

"By Ocean, Sounds, and Rivers: A Glimpse into the Architectural Heritage of the North Carolina Coast," Drucilla Haley York, head of the eastern office of the N. C. Division of Archives and History.

"Not Far at All from America: The 19th Century and Coastal Culture," Dr. Thomas Parramore, associate professor of history at Meredith College.

The symposium features several tours of Beaufort's historic area, social gatherings and meals, among them a dinner cruise aboard the "Carolina Princess" on Monday evening.

A Maritime Museum program, "Traditional Trades and Pastimes," featuring local artisans and musicians, will be offered twice during the symposium.

The N.C. Maritime Museum displays a variety of exhibits commemorating the maritime and coastal natural history of North Carolina.

Its collections are housed in an all-wood 18,000-square foot building whose design blends 19th century Beaufort architecture with that of the early lifesaving stations found along the North Carolina coast.

Among the museum's exhibits are ship models, bird, fish and mammal specimens, marine fossils, shells and coastal artifacts.

More than 100 historic homes still stand in the harbor village named for the Duke of Beaufort which was founded by French Huguenots and English sailors more than 275 years ago. Nearby are the Barrier Islands of Cape Lookout National Seashore.

Events In Brief

Local Band To Meet Each Thursday

The Tar River Community Band, a group of amateur musicians from the Greenville area, will meet every Thursday from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Rose High School Band Room beginning Sept. 8. Any musician interested in the possibility of playing with the band is invited to attend the first meeting. Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MERIDETH FOLTZ

Many people sincerely deplore crime and violence yet cannot deny the dark fascination of such activities. If "true crime" books are your guilty secret, indulge in these new titles at Sheppard Memorial Library.

"Masquerade" by Lowell Cauffiel. Dr. Alan Canty was a respected, successful psychologist who assumed a fake identity to enter the world of drug abuse and sex-for-sale in a notorious Detroit neighborhood. His obsessive association with an addicted teenage prostitute cost him thousands of dollars. It also cost him his life at the hands of the girl's pimp boyfriend.

"The Mormon Murders" by Steven Naifeh and Gregory Smith. In two days during 1985, three Mormons in Salt Lake City were victims of pipe bombs. The lone survivor of the bombs was a rare-documents dealer. An intense, mammoth investigation linked the three victims, probed the history and teachings of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, galvanized church officials, and uncovered an elaborate forgery plot.

"A Crime of Self-Defense" by George Fletcher. Bernhard Goetz became the center of a national debate when he responded to a teenager's demand for money by shooting the boy and his companions in a New York City subway in 1984. Despite his claim of self-defense, Goetz was indicted and tried on 13 counts. Fletcher analyzes Goetz's trial and the questions of criminal law raised in and by the trial; the jury's verdict, and the implications of the acquittal of the "subway vigilante" on most of the charges.

A Reflector Review

Fine Material Is, Poorly Presented

THE CLIFFS. By Thomas Powell. Goldsboro, N.C., P.O. Box 404, Goldwayne Publishers. 1984, 107 pp., Soft Cover, $5 postpaid.

This is the story of the Talbot family and of a family of slaves belonging to the Talbots. The story spans four generations from 1819 to 1966.

John and Catherine Talbot, of Warwick County, Va., inherit a vast, uncleared plantation on the Neuse River between Goldsboro and La Grange and move there in 1819, living in a tarpaulin-covered wagon until they build a cabin. Opposed to slavery, they are persuaded by a neighboring planter to trade a piece of their land for a family of slaves.

The story follows the intertwined fortunes of these two families — black and white — as together they build Cliffs into a beautiful, workable plantation. It follows them through good fortune and tragedy, war and peace, prosperity and hard times.

The narrator is Matt Applewood, who in 1919 at the age of 10 goes to live with his uncle and aunt at Cliffs Plantation, and who hears the story from Cyrus, fourth generation black descendent of the Talbot slaves. From that point, the book also tells the story of Matt Applewood.

It is a good story, but it loses something in the telling. The fault seems to lie mainly in the author's simply not taking enough time to develop the characters sufficiently; he crams too much into too few pages.

For instance, the terrible story of the rape of Susan Talbot by one of Sherman's Bummers and the subsequent killing of that Bummer by Susan's 12-year old son Seth leaves many unanswered questions: How did the incident affect Susan? How did it affect Seth? What was the father's reaction? Is it possible that Seth could gun down a Yankee soldier in broad daylight on the streets of Goldsboro, where more than 100,000 Yankees were camped, and ride away unmolested and unpunished? And why did the Bummers, who were ordered to reduce the countryside to a condition where "even a crow would starve," conveniently leave a horse for Seth to ride.

The author has tapped an incredibly rich resevoir of information. It is a pity that he did not take the time to develop his character fully, vary his sentence structure a little, and let the reader see and be part of the action.

Lithographs At NCMA

RALEIGH — Seven lithographs printed by the Winstone Press will be on view Aug. 30 through Nov. 27 in the changing selections area of the Twentieth Century Gallery at the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh.

Located outside Mocksville, Winstone Press was established five years ago by Catherine Kuhn. Ms. Kuhn is one of the few professionally trained master printers in the United States, and hers is the only such press in this region of the country.

The name "Winstone" is derived by combining the "Winston" of nearby Winston-Salem and the "stone" used in the lithographic process.

The seven lithographs in the exhibition focus attention on the collaborative nature of the printing process. The printer, providing technical expertise, helps the artist realize the artistic statement he has in mind.

All works on view were printed by Winstone Press in the last four years.

They include works by North Carolina artists Maud Gatewood of Yanceyville, Russ Warren of Davidson and David Faber of Winston-Salem; Virginia artists Robert Marsh, William Dunlap and Walter Piepke; and South Carolina artist Judy Jones.

The North Carolina Museum of Art is located at 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard in Raleigh. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, until 9 p.m. on Friday, and from noon until 5 p.m. Sunday. The museum is closed Monday. Admission is free.

Four Artists Featured In Gray Gallery Exhibition

IN NEW SHOW — "Coalescence," an oil on cotton work by Richard Spiller, is one of the pieces to be seen in a show of art by four artists at Gray Art Gallery on the East Carolina University campus. The show opens Monday and will be on view through Sept. 23. An opening reception is set for 7:30 p.m. Sept. 1.

By JOY M. HOLSTER
ECU News Bureau

Gray Art Gallery, East Carolina University, opens its fall season with the work of graphic designer April Greiman and four visiting faculty artists on Monday, with an opening reception on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the gallery.

April Greiman was born in New York, attended school at the Kansas City Art Institutes and did her graduate work in Basel, Switzerland, at Allegemeine Kinstgewerbeschule. The imagery in her large scale posters, "celebrates the rich history of poster art within a contemporary context," according to Jon Jicha, professor at Western Carolina University and curator of this exhibition.

Greiman's list of clients include Esprit, the Xerox Corporation, The Los Angeles Times, the 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games, Pentagram, Warner Records, Art Forum, and Time.

The "Contrasting Views Visiting Faculty at East Carolina University, Fall 1988" exhibition will include showings by R.G. Brown, III, an installation-sculptor; Steve Sherman, a figurative painter; Richard Spiller, who works in sculpture, ceramics, paint-cotton; and Gabrielle Yablonsky, who will be exhibiting photo-montages.

Brown's installation, "Cybele's Grove," will be constructed on site in the gallery and will extend onto an adjoining patio. Brown has received a master's degree from Harvard University in Landscape Architecture, an MFA in sculpture from the University of Georgia, Athens, and a BA from the University of Hawaii, Honolulu.

Sherman will exhibit paintings which depict figures reflecting their state of mind, described as floating on water, standing at the water's edge and flying on bizarre flying machines. His degrees are from Queens College in Flushing, New York, MFA; Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, BFA; and the School of Visual Arts. He has exhibited widely and received awards from the Ohio Arts Council, New York, State Council on the Arts, Edna St. Vincent Millay Foundation and Pennsylvania State University.

Spiller, who has worked primarily in ceramics and sculpture, will show experimental pieces in oil on cotton linters and sculptural forms of painted wood. Spiller's degrees are from the University of Wisconsin, MFA; Alfred University and Western Michigan University, BS. He has been both a production potter and boat builder in northern Wisconsin.

Ms. Yablonsky — artist, photographer and art historian-anthropologist — will exhibit photo-montages based on throw-away food containers, which she views as 'the residue of our society's preoccupation with speed, violence, and impermanence.'

She is completing her PhD dissertation at UCLA, and received her masters from Yale University and an MFA from Boston University. She has been the recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship, a Ford Foundation grant, a Fulbright Scholarship, an American Philosophical Society grant, and a Yale University Fellowship. She has traveled throughout Europe, Asia, the Middle East, Africa, Mexico, Canada and the Soviet Union.

The September 1 opening reception, as well as a slide lecture by Sherman on Sept. 8 and a lecture by R.G. Brown on Sept. 15 are all free and open to the public. Both lectures will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Jenkins Auditorium.

The Gallery and Jenkins Auditorium are located in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the ECU campus. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, except for holidays, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Thursday evening until 8 p.m. For more information, contact Perry Nesbitt at 757-6336.

Wilson Show

WILSON — "Paper Invitational," an exhibition of works by artists who employ paper forming techniques as a primary focus, opens on the campus of Atlantic Christian College Monday in Case Art Gallery. The exhibition will continue through Sept. 23.

Artists represented in the exhibit have been included in numerous exhibitions and collections.

Among those participating in the event are Fritzi Huber, Susanne Nielsen, Geroldine Plato, Nancy Pritchard, Beatrice Schall, Walter Von Gunten, Emily Whittle and Ellen Zoherec.

"This is the first exhibition of its type in our gallery and will afford viewers a fine opportunity to see new directions in paper related art," said Edward Brown, gallery director. "The past few years have seen a rebirth of interest in handmade paper being used as a medium by itself. Most works in this exhibition are two dimensional as with collage, while others are three dimensional sculpture pieces."

Gallery hours are weekdays 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Saturday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Admission is free and school groups are welcome.

Outer Banks Photo Competition

MANTEO — Judges have been picked to decide the winners in the third annual Outer Banks Photography Contest with cash prizes totalling over $2,000.

The deadline for entering is Sept. 6, with judging taking place on Sept. 7. Winners will be announced on Sept. 10 at an awards ceremony at the Aycock Brown Welcome Center, operated by the Dare County Tourist Bureau.

The awards ceremony will be at 11 a.m.

The 1988 contest has divisions for youth (age 18 and under) amateur and professional.

Contestants may submit up to three color and three black and white photos in each classification. Entry forms and a list of rules and regulations for the contest may be picked up at the Aycock Brown Welcome Center on U.S. 158 in Kitty Hawk, at the Tourist Bureau office in Manteo and at area hotels and restaurants, or by mail from: Dare County Tourist Bureau, P.O. Box 399, Manteo, N.C., 27954.

The contest is sponsored by the Dare County Tourist Bureau and has become one of the top events of the year on the Outer Banks with more than 100 entries expected.

Judges for the 1988 contest are Drew Wilson, staff photographer for the Virginia Pilot newspaper; Ransy Morr, news photographer for the Daily-Press and Times-Herald in Newport News, Va.; and Rhett White, director of the N.C. Aquarium on Roanoke Island and chairman of the tourist bureau.

Wilson is based on the Outer Banks but photographs all of northeastern North Carolina for the Virginia Pilot and the Carolina Coast, the newspaper's weekly supplement. He began his career with the Coastland Times.

Morr, a native of Iceland, has been with the Daily-Press since the late 1950s, and is an award winning photographer. She and her husband, Earle, maintain a residence in Nags Head.

White has been director of the N.C. Aquarium for eight years. He previously served in the administrative positions with the Dare County School system.

The general theme for the 1988 contest is "An Outer Banks Vacation" with the following classifications; beach activities, historic sites and attractions, wildlife, recreational, fishing and natural scenes.

The followers of the Prophet Muhammad spread the word of Islam westward from Mecca through North Africa to Spain and France in only a century, but it took seven centuries for the Christians to reconquer their territory.

Biggest And Most Varied Ever ECU Arts Series Scheduled

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1988-1989 Performing Arts Series of East Carolina University will be the biggest and most varied season ever programmed on campus, with a total of 14 events scheduled beginning October 3 and concluding April 20.

The series is sponsored, as it has been traditionally in past years, by the Department of University Unions at ECU.

An Appeal For Support

For more than 25 years, the university has made this series available to university, Greenville, local and area residents, with a goal to bring fine entertainment to the public at the lowest possible cost.

Inevitably, as in all sectors of the economy, the fees necessary to bring to Greenville the best in state, national and international entertainment has risen drastically. The 1988-89 series, for example, entails a cost more than three times the amount spent for the series just three seasons ago.

Fully one-third of these fees are subsidized by student funds, but this subsidy is now at its authorized limit.

Because of this cost factor, the Department of University Unions for the first time is making an appeal to local and area industries, businesses and agencies to support the series through two arrangement levels of local support.

The first level is that of event sponsorship, where the sponsor contributes one-half or more of the fees for a particular attraction. A sponsor at this level is subsequently credited in all forms of publicity and promotion — (For example, a typical accreditation would read: "The Alpha-Zebra Manufacturers and the Department of University Unions present the musical, "Along The Banks of The Tar River.")

A sponsor in the first level also receives a proportionate number of tickets to the sponsored event for distribution to clients, employees, friends, etc.

The second level of sponsor support is two-tiered. In the first support tier, a sponsor can contribute $1,000 which in turn purchases ten season tickets.

The second support tier is one in which a sponsor can contribute $400 and receive four season tickets.

Under any of the above plans, the season tickets provided a sponsor is each good for attendance at all 14 scheduled attractions.

Additionally, an appropriate notation in all printed program will reflect a sponsor's participation whenever and in whatever manner is possible.

"There is no question that a quality series such as the one that will be presented at East Carolina this fall and in the coming spring is good for the region culturally, socially, and economically. It makes the quality of life better," said Stuart Secttor, ECU marketing director for the series.

"Quite frankly, it is also good business, an investment in the future of North Carolina. It is an innovative program that deserves active support."

Secttor mentioned too that tickets provided to clients, employees and friends will constitute a much-appreciated gift.

Another bonus available for each performance is a card to be received by subscribers good for a ten percent discount off their meal at several Greenville restaurants.

Ten of the 14 attractions fall into the category of The Performing Arts Series, with four events to comprise The Chamber Music Series as an adjunct to the total entertainments scheduled.

Performances will be in two East Carolina University sites — at Wright Auditorium for some events and at the Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center for other events.

All attractions will have a curtain time of 8 p.m. with the exception of the performance by the North Carolina and East Carolina University Symphonies, which will begin at 3 p.m.

Ticket prices for all ten of the Performing Arts Series are $100 for adults, and $50 for students and youths. (The definition of youths is for those high school age and younger).

Additionally, a "select your own" choice of seven of the ten events are available at a cost of $80 for adults, and $40 for students and youths.

Ticket prices for the four Chamber Music Series are $25 for adults and $12 for students and youths.

Information on ticket prices of any individual attraction — in instances where such tickets may still be available after sale of season tickets, will be provided the public shortly in advance of each event.

Tickets may be purchased in advance by going to the ticket office at Mendenhall Student Center on campus; through mail order with payment by check or money order to: Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27858-4353; or by phone orders between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays by calling 757-6611, extension 266, using either VISA or Mastercard.

A 50 cents fee will be charged for all ticket orders except direct purchase at the ticket office window.

For handicapped patrons, both Wright and Hendrix have handicapped accessibility facilities, with wheelchair locations available on the main floor at each place. Parking spaces are located close to each of the two building.

Attractions Scheduled

The list of attractions, with dates and place of performance, are:

The Chamber Music Series:

- October 3, Hendrix Theatre — The Buswell-Parnas-Luvisi Trio, consisting of a pianist, violinist and cellist.
- November 14, National Gallery of Art Vocal Ensemble, Hendrix Theatre — Four singers who explore music ranging from medieval balladry to contemporary music.
- March 16, Wright Auditorium — Tokyo String Quartet, an acclaimed quartet that has performed worldwide.
- April 5, Hendrix Theatre — Oregon. This jazz quartet specializes in music influenced by American traditions, European classics and African/Indian musical forms.

The Performing Arts Series:

(All events in this series will be performed in Wright Auditorium)

- October 12 — The Ohio Ballet. This dance troupe focues on a contemporary repertoire of dance with roots in the 20th century.
- November 1 — Wynton Marsalis, classical/jazz trumpeter performer, at 26 he is already the winner of a Grammy award.
- November 17 — The Atlanta Symphony, an outstanding Southeastern U.S. orchestra.
- January 17 — Philadanco. A dance group known for both its vibrant stage colors and its distinctive beat in both modern and classical performances.

Chinese Jazz Band Hits The Road

By JOHN POMFRET
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — After a tug on his smoking jacket and a nod to the piano player, Zhou Wanrong snaps up his trumpet and uncorks a melodic solo. "Satin Doll" never sounded so good, so far away.

From their art deco home in the Peace Hotel in Shanghai, China's only jazz band has hit the road, bringing its bag of favorites to fans in Beijing.

The Old Peace Jazz Band of Shanghai, as they are formally called, has booked a week at the Kunlun Hotel, amidst the ersatz glitter of its cavernous Function Room.

"Us old codgers, we just do this for fun," said Zhou, 65, the leader of the six-member band.

In the Function Room, Western and Japanese couples twirl to Zhou's rendition of "Hawaiian Sunrise." A lone Chinese couple embraces in the darkness.

All of the band's members are above 60, with drummer Cheng Yueqiang the oldest at 70. They learned their trade in the late 1930s and '40s, playing the night spots that made pre-revolutionary Shanghai famous.

"Those were great days for jazz in Shanghai," Cheng recalled. "We played the Metropole, the Majestic, the Paramount. We had bands from America, the Philippines — now those boys could play. The competition was rough but we had good times."

Then came the revolution. In its quest to clean up the prostitution and opium smoking that ran rampant in the city, the communist government closed Shanghai's clubs and banned jazz as "pornographic."

Cheng, Zhou and their four colleagues got jobs as music teachers at schools in Shanghai, trading their Glen Miller and Tommy Dorsey for Mozart, Bach and Beethoven.

Later on, as the country turned further to the left during the Cultural Revolution of 1966-76, the six players were criticized for playing jazz before the revolution.

"The Cultural Revolution was a waste of this country's time," Zhou said. "All of us suffered. And even those musicians who didn't suffer physically, we couldn't play what we wanted."

"It was like creativity died here," said Cao Ziping, the band's piano player. "We just waited for a change."

That change came in 1980, two years after Deng Xiaoping took power and pushed through a series of reforms designed to open China to the West.

"The Shanghai government decided to bring jazz back to Shanghai so that Christmas we started playing again," Zhou said.

In the ballroom, a Japanese couple took a few steps on the dance floor to a mournful rendition of "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and then fled to the back of the room for more practice. The lights dimmed and more couples swayed to the music.

"The Japanese are intense," said Cao. "They know all the songs and they love jazz."

Zhou said the band was started with foreigners in mind. It wasn't until last year that Chinese were allowed into the Peace Hotel to watch them play.

The band members argue that most Chinese don't like jazz, but they also concede they've never really been given a chance.

"We are here for foreign guests," Zhou said. "They like us because when they see us it's like time stopped. Nowhere else in the world can you find players like us, with no modern influences."

Indeed, the group's rehabilitation seems akin to the renovation being done on Chinese temples around the country as China scurries to make itself more attractive to tourist dollars from abroad.

Just like a Qing dynasty tower or cave paintings in the desert, the Old Peace Jazz Band of Shanghai symbolizes money to the new government.

"I don't know how much the Peace Hotel is losing by letting us play up here," said Zhou. "But we'll make more friends here and that is good for business, too."

Each member of the band gets about $162 a month.

But, quipped Zhou, "we're not egalitarian, mind you. Some of us get more than others."

A DANCE 'JOURNEY' — A dance choreographed by Salvatore Aiello, artistic director of the North Carolina Dance Theater, is one of several pieces being presented in a joint dance theater-N.C. Symphony program in Memorial Auditorium, Raleigh, on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. each evening. The dance, an athletic one, features Mel Tomlinson, center, and eight other male dancers. Tickets can be ordered by calling 733-9536.

An Evening Of N.C. Dance And Music

RALEIGH — For the first time in the Triangle area, two of North Carolina's major performing groups will join forces for an evening of music and dance. On Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., the North Carolina Dance Theater and the North Carolina Symphony will be together in performance.

Tickets are priced at $17 and $15 for reserved seats, $12 for general admission and $11 for senior citizens and students. These can be reserved by calling the symphony box office at 733-9536 Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The entertainment will feature two dancers, natives of Raleigh, and organist Shayne Doty. The dancers are Mel Tomlinson and Traci Owens.

Tomlinson, a graduate of the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, has recently joined the N.C. Dance Theater after having had a successful dance career in New York. Ms. Owens is in her third season with the company.

SAlvatore Aielo, artistic director for N.C. Dance Theater is in charge of the dance portion of the program, with James Ogle to conduct the N.C. Symphony Orchestra.

The dance performance will feature both classically-oriented and contemporary dances. The classical pieces are "Napoli, Act III," an 1842 dance originally choregraphed by August Bournonville, and the "Coppelia pas de deux," a portion of the full-length comic dance ballet adapted by Aiello. He choreographed his "Coppelia" using music from Delibes' "Syliva."

"Journey," created in 1979 was Aiello's first choreogrpahy for a professional company. It premiered by the Royal Winnipeg Ballet at the Centennial Concert Hall in that city on May 2, 1979. The N.C. Dance Theater frist performed the dance at the Roger L. Stevens Center in Winston-Salem in January this year. The music is Malcolm Arnold's "Concerto for Organ, opus 47," featuring organist Shayne Doty.

In addition to Tomlinson, the other male dancers in "Journey" are Talal Al-Muhanna, Kenneth Balint, David Bushman, Diego Carrasco, Alain Charron, Robin Frankin, Timothy Gleason and Michael Johnson.

"As Quiet As . . ." with music by Micahel Colgrass, makes us of a seven-part sculpture by Winston-Salem artist Martha Dunigan as an integral part of the choreography.

Dancers in "As Quiet As . . .," in additon to the "Journey" dancers, are Diane Woleson, Anita Intrieri, Helen Rosentahl and Katherine Thompson.

Aiello began his professional career in dance in 1963 with the Joffrey Ballet. In 1964 he became a charter member of the Harkness Ballet and was promoted to soloist in 1967. In 1971 he as invited to join Canada's Royal Winnepeg Ballet and was a principal dancer there for seven years. He has also worked with John Neuemiere at the Hamburg, Germany, State Opera.

The Valle Crucis Mission School Has An Interesting History

VALLE CRUCIS — The air is heavy with the smell of honeysuckle. Huge catalpa trees, in full bloom, shade big patches of lawn. The sound of a lone bagpipe pierces the stillness. In the valley below, cows laze away the morning in one field; in another, rows of fledgling tobacco plants curve across the land like ripples over water.

The Valle Crucis Mission School Conference Center is as peaceful a spot as you're likely to find in the North Carolina High Country.

But the center, operated by the Episcopal Diocese of Western North Carolina, has a history more interesting than most, for it was once the home of the first Anglican monastery to be established in the United States, indeed, the first established anywhere since the English reformation occurred in the mid-1500s, according to center director Jim Tester.

Its story begins nearly 150 years ago, when the quiet beauty of the valley it overlooks so struck a New Yorker traveling through the region on a botanizing excursion that he brought it to the attention of Levi Silliman Ives, then Episcopal bishop of the diocese of North Carolina, when the traveler stopped in Raleigh on his way home.

Impressed by the botanist's glowing description, Ives paid a personal visit to the valley in July, 1842.

At a worship service he held in the settlement, he promised to send a missionary to teach and preach there, a promise he fulfilled by buying 2,000 acres of the valley and establishing a mission there.

It was Ives, too, who gave the settlement its name — Valle Crucis or "Vale of the Cross" — for the three streams that intersected in the shape of a cross on the valley floor. The famous 1940 flood altered the stream pattern, but the name remains.

Though the bishop worked tirelessly to establish the mission school, buying a sawmill and overseeing construction of numerous buildings (the only survivor is the Bishop Ives Cabin, that now stands at the entrance to the mission grounds, importing divinity students to serve as teachers for the day and boarding students who came to school, his practices came under increasing criticism by the church hierarchy, Tester said.

"A lot of the things that Bishop Ives was doing, though they are now common practice, were at the time associated with the Catholic church, and were therefore considered inappropriate.

"He was holding communion every Sunday, using candles and incense in the church. And though Episcopal monks are common now, at the time he established the monastery here, there were none. After years of reprimands, Bishop Ives left the Anglican church in 1852 to become a Catholic layman," Tester said.

Only one of the monks who inhabited the short-lived monastery (disbanded when Ives resigned) lived out his vows.

William West Skiles, hired by Ives to supervise the mission's farming operation (which included a heard of dairy cattle Ives shipped in from Pennsylvania), was an experienced farmer when he came to work at the mission, but his increased involvement in all phases of the mission work led him to join the monastic order.

He was ordained deacon in August, 1847, and remained a monk until his death in December, 1862, when he was buried in the churchyard at the church (St. John's) he built on the Watauga River.

With Skiles death, the church's work in the area came to a near standstill, but was revived in 1895 by Joseph Blount Hampshire, bishop of North Carolina.

When Junius M. Horner was installed three years later as bishop in the newly established Missionary District of Asheville, he provided the leadership needed to make missionary work in the Valle Crucis flourish once again.

Under his leadership apple orchards were set out, a Holstein herd was imported from Ohio to establish a dairy, a sawmill and wagon factory were built, a hydro-electric power plant to provide electricity for the mission and sorrounding areas was installed, and buildings to house boarding students and classrooms were erected.

Teachers from as far away as Boston and Washington, D.C., were hired, and the mission's orchard, dairy, factory, sawmill and school provided employment for community residents and students working their way through school.

During the early decades of the 20th century, in the absence of public schools to provide education in isolated mountain communities, the mission school served a large number of day and boarding students. But with the advent of widespread public schooling in the 1930s and enrollment declines, the school dropped its first six grades and stopped accepting boys.

World War II posed additional difficulties for the school, both in staffing and transportation, and in 1943, it closed altogether. For several years after the war, the mission served as a summer training grounds for seminary students and operated as a summer inn, before being transformed into a year-round conference center in the 1960s.

Today its cluster of buildings provide accomodations and meals for groups of 15 to 180 for everything from church retreats (all denominations welcome) to ski weekends. The North American Academy of Piping, for example, takes up residence at the center for four weeks in the summer, coinciding with the Highland Games at nearby Grandfather Mountain, where its members compete in piping contests.

For more information about the center, or other places to visit in the High Country, call North Carolina High Country Host toll-free within North Carolina at 1-800-222-7515.

Plans Announced For Book Group

Sheppard Memorial Library's Book Discussion Group for adults will begin its fourth year at 10 a.m. on September 13.

Sessions will be held weekly at the main library, 530 Evans Street.

This series will focus on a variety of readings from the humanites. Works to be discussed are selected by the gorup and as many sessions are spent on each work as the members find profitable.

A trained discussion leader will be provided to help promote the discussion at each session. Participants are not required to attend every session, and new members may join the group once the series is under way.

The activity is free and open to any interested person.

For more information, call 830-4580.

Mutual admirers Sonia Braga and Robert Redford

Q. My son, who is a seaman, writes from Rio de Janeiro. He says the rumors are very strong down there about Robert Redford falling in love with Sonia Braga, the seductive actress who is known as "Brazil's sex-bomb." Are the rumors accurate? —Mrs. Helen D., Grand Rapids, Mich.

A. In the course of directing her in "The Milagro Beanfield War," Redford and the sexy Brazilian star became ardent mutual admirers. To what extent they carried that admiration, only they know.

Q. Trevor Howard, the British screen star who died in January at age 71, was magnificent in so many motion pictures, like "Brief Encounter," "The Third Man," "Mutiny on the Bounty." I have two questions: 1) Why was he never even nominated for an Oscar? 2) How large was his estate? —Jeremy Goldman, Toronto, Canada

A. Trevor Howard was nominated for an Oscar in 1960 for his outstanding performance as the father in "Sons and Lovers." He left an estate valued at $5.1 million, almost all of it going to his widow, the actress Helen Cherry, whom he married in 1944. Howard acted in more than 70 films and was a hard-drinking hell-raiser on location but a quiet man at home.

Q. Does Martina Navratilova, the tennis star, play with a racket manufactured by Yonex of Tokyo or Dunlop of England? —Shelley Patton, Phoenix, Ariz.

A. Navratilova reportedly has played with rackets manufactured by both Yonex and Dunlop. Yonex pays the Czech-born tennis star a reported $500,000 a year to endorse its rackets.

Q. Jim Brady, Ronald Reagan's press secretary, who was badly brain-damaged in the attempted assassination of the President on March 30, 1981—has he been on the White House payroll these past seven years, or was his name quietly deleted some time ago? —A.W., Alexandria, Va.

A. He is still carried on the White House payroll as James S. Brady, Assistant to the President and Press Secretary. His annual salary is $89,500, and he will remain on salary as long as President Reagan does, possibly longer.

Q. Lee Iacocca, the automobile executive, was married to Peggy Johnson, a flight attendant, for about eight months before they agreed to disagree. How much did the divorce cost him? —Tina Namura, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Iacocca, 63, reportedly settled an amount between $2.5 million and $3 million on his second wife, Peggy, 37. They were wed in April 1986, divorced in November 1987.

Q. I implore you to answer my question as promptly as possible. It is important to many people besides myself. I've heard that Presidential hopeful Gov. Michael Dukakis has appointed an official witch to his staff. If this is true, is she still in office? What would prompt an intelligent man to do such a thing? Doesn't he realize that such an abomination will be held against him come voting time? —Kathy Hamilton, Charleston, W.Va.

A. You need have no fear. Governor Dukakis has never trafficked with witches of any kind.

Q. Have you heard of a man named Corcorian? I'm not sure how he spells his name, which is Armenian. But a girlfriend tells me he is rated "the best catch in the world." She says he is the most fabulously rich tycoon in Hollywood and Las Vegas since the late Howard Hughes. Any information will be deeply appreciated. —E.D., Beaumont, Tex.

Grant with Kerkorian

A. You probably have reference to Kirk Kerkorian, born in Fresno, Calif., on June 6, 1917, the son of Armenian immigrants. During the last 20 years, Kerkorian—a brilliant and imaginative financier—has bought and sold MGM and United Artists periodically on different levels, organizing separate corporations, retaining some assets for himself and offering others to the public.

Kerkorian's own personal holding corporation, Tracinda—said to be worth more than $1 billion—is named after his two daughters: Tracy, born in 1959, and Linda, born in 1965, both by his second wife, Jean Hardy, a Las Vegas dancer. His first wife was the former Hilda Schmidt. They were married from 1942 to 1951, during which years Kerkorian ferried planes for the British Royal Air Force in World War II and later organized his own airline in Los Angeles. For some time, the divorced billionaire reportedly has been interested in the companionship of Cary Grant's beautiful young widow, Barbara, 37. He lives in Beverly Hills and Las Vegas.

TOUGH WORDS

Eddie Adams

Left: Costa Rica's President Arias in his office in San José. Below: With President Reagan at White House, September 1987.

"BE NICE. STOP BEING the ugly American," President Oscar Arias Sánchez of Costa Rica told me amiably. I had asked him what he thought would be the most fruitful approach the United States could take to his crisis-ridden part of the world.

"There are so many ways of obtaining the support, affection and gratitude of the people of Latin America through U.S. help and understanding," he went on, "that I think you should concentrate on a dialogue with us—not the use of force." It is urgent, Arias added, to do this as soon as possible to avoid new confrontations like those over Nicaragua or Panama. In both countries, Washington has tried military and economic pressures to achieve controversial goals.

He is upset, for example, over the way the Reagan Administration, earlier this year, went about trying to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the Panamanian strongman who was indicted by Florida grand juries on charges of trafficking in narcotics. And he was regretful that the U.S. killed his mediation efforts to persuade Noriega to depart quietly.

"I said publicly that I was not in agreement with economic sanctions against Panama to force Noriega out," Arias told me. "This is a way of making enemies in a country that, until now, has been a friend of the United States. When such great errors are committed, you must remember, it is easy to convert your best friends into your worst enemies. This can happen in Panama, if you do not act intelligently."

With the U.S. at a crossroads in its relations with Latin America and a new administration to be installed in Washington next January, I recently flew to San José, the volcano-ringed Costa Rican capital, to discuss with President Arias the future of relations in our hemisphere.

What Arias thinks—and what he represents—is extremely important to North Americans. In tiny Costa Rica, a peaceful republic with 2.7 million inhabitants, he presides over Latin America's most effective and prosperous democracy. Since winning the Nobel Peace Prize last year for his August 1987 plan to end the decade of fratricidal warfare tearing apart his Central American neighbors—and deeply involving the U.S.—the 46-year-old soft-spoken Costa Rican lawyer has become one of the most respected voices in international diplomacy. His talents as an arbiter are in constant demand.

Relaxed, quick to smile but doggedly stubborn and brutally honest, Arias has been in office since May 1986. He is both a hell-raising politician and a man of great intellectual resources. He has a saturnine countenance, which he says comes from Indian blood "that almost all Costa Ricans have in their veins—a mixture of Spanish and Indian blood." He resembles somewhat Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, whom he met many years ago. The two men admire each other, and Arias told me, "We share the problem of lacking sufficient sense of humor and of being too serious and too intellectual in talking to our people, but we are both overcoming it."

As the only mediator acceptable to all sides in the Central American conflicts, Arias astounded Washington and most news analysts by bringing about in March the first extended cease-fire between the Marxist Sandinista regime in Nicaragua and the U.S.-backed rebels, the contras, and directing peace negotiations between the two hostile bands—an event that was unthinkable even a few months earlier. The talks were halted in mid-June because the Sandinistas and the contras could not agree on a political settlement, but full-fledged fighting did not resume. As a result of the Arias plan, Nicaraguan battlefields were still silent this summer after seven years of war, except for scattered clashes, but the civil war next door in El Salvador between the U.S.-supported government and Marxist guerrillas went on unabated.

THE SITUATION IN CENTRAL AMERICA AND MEXICO

Map by Jim Lubitz

MEXICO Relations between this democracy and the U.S. are generally friendly, though they ebb and flow with disagreements over Cuba, Central America and issues such as the treatment of the millions of Mexicans illegally crossing into the U.S. every year. While a single political party has won every election in this democracy for the last 60 years, there is considerable freedom. Population: 83.5 million.

GUATEMALA After a long succession of military regimes, this republic of 8.7 million has been under democratic rule for two years. It is under constant pressure from left-wing guerrillas and right-wing army officers.

EL SALVADOR A savage civil war between the army of the centrist Salvadoran government and leftist guerrillas has been going on for eight years; more than 60,000 have been killed in this nation of 5.4 million. The government is supported by the U.S., the rebels by Nicaragua and Cuba. The war is stalemated.

NICARAGUA A cease-fire between the army of the revolutionary Marxist government and U.S.-supported contra rebels went into effect in March 1988 after seven years of fighting on Nicaraguan territory. The contras are based in Honduras, across the border. Nicaragua's population is 3.6 million.

COSTA RICA An oasis of peace and democracy and of relative prosperity for its 2.7 million people. The army was abolished 40 years ago, and freely elected governments have been succeeding each other every four years since then.

PANAMA Though not formally part of Central America, it is very much a part of the Central American problem. Since early this year, the U.S. has been at odds with Panama's military dictator, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, whom it attempted to oust by all means short of military intervention. Noriega, indicted in the U.S. for international narcotics trafficking, charges that Washington is practicing "imperialism" in seeking to impose its will on Panama. By treaty, the U.S. will control the vital Panama Canal until the year 2000. Panama's population is 2.3 million.

HONDURAS This destitute country of 4.8 million has an elected government and political democracy, but leftist opposition has grown—especially with the rise of anti-U.S. sentiment over the use of Honduras as an "aircraft carrier" for contra operations against Nicaragua and as a site for U.S. military exercises.

porting the contras despite a Congressional ban that brought the Reagan Administration into scandal when it secretly and illegally sold arms to Iran in order to finance the contras with the profits. Arias does not believe that the Sandinistas can be dislodged through the contra war. "If this war continues," he told me, "it will be a prolonged war of many years that will get us nowhere. Nicaragua's leadership uses military pressure as an excuse not to negotiate, and they use the war as an excuse to justify the economic failure of the Marxist experiment in Nicaragua. So we must remove all these excuses and force them to democratize."

Arias and his fellow Costa Ricans are vigorously pro-United States—possibly more so than most other Latin Americans. But the president believes that speaking his mind, sometimes very critically, is an essential part of the friendship between the two countries.

idential House" in another suburb.

Arias insisted that his peace plan was signed by the other four Central American presidents—of Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador—only when they understood that it was a "balanced proposal" designed "to advance the interests of all the countries in the area—and not just to please, let us say, Washington, D.C." He has conveyed similar views in private meetings with President Reagan and other top U.S. officials and before a joint session of the U.S. Congress last autumn.

Arias' outspokenness has earned him respect in Washington. Last October, the Senate and the House of Representatives passed resolutions congratulating him on the Nobel Peace Prize. And the Administration, which often expresses resentment over his opposition to the Nicaraguan contras, recently paid Arias a high compliment by naming one of the U.S.'s most experienced diplomats, Deane R. Hinton, as ambassador to Costa Rica.

Though Arias criticizes certain U.S. actions, he also wastes no opportunity to lecture Nicaragua's leftist President Daniel Ortega Saavedra on what "real democracy" is, and the Sandinista chief listens attentively. Arias spoke in detail about his relationship with Ortega, whom the Reagan Administration regards as dangerous because of his ideological and military ties with Cuban President Fidel Castro. This regime took power in the 1979 revolution, and Ortega was elected in 1984 in a virtually one-man race.

"First," Arias said, "Costa Rica felt betrayed by the Sandinista revolution—betrayed and deceived—because nobody helped the Sandinistas more in their fight 10 years ago against the Somoza dictatorship than Costa Rica. Our national territory was used as an airport—as an aircraft carrier—for defeating Somoza. But we wanted a new Nicaragua, not a second Cuba.

"Dracula, the vampire, can be killed only with the Cross. In Nicaragua, democracy is the Cross," Arias said, an amused twinkle in his eye. "But I keep telling Ortega that he needs democracy in his revolution. I once said to him: 'You can call the regime you have anything you want—except a democracy, because there is no democracy without political pluralism, without free elections, without freedom of the press, without respect for individual liberties.'"

Ortega's reaction, Arias recalled, was surprising. He informed Arias that he could conceive of a system developing in Nicaragua along the lines of Mexico. There, the dominant political party—the Party of Revolutionary Institutions—has managed to win every presidential election in the last 60 years because of its total control over the country, but the people enjoy considerable freedom.

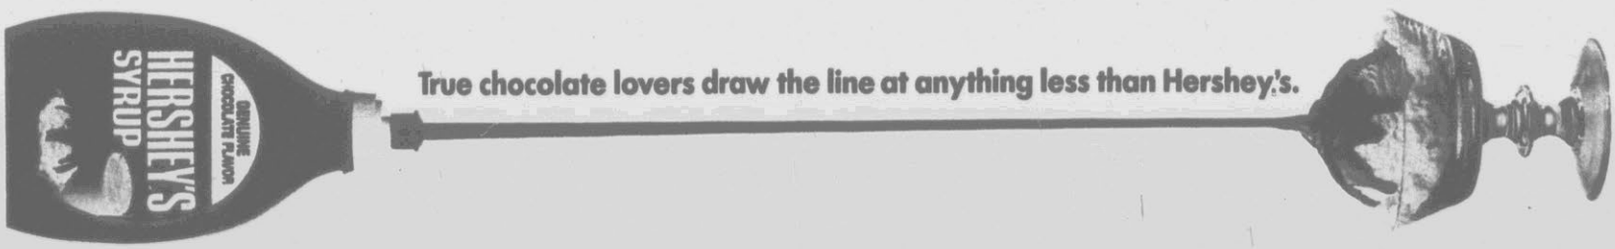

Meiselas/Magnum

Arias (r) with Nicaragua's President Daniel Ortega in Managua during a July 1987 tour of the Central American countries to determine the prospects for his peace plan. "I keep telling Ortega that he needs democracy in his revolution," says Arias.

If permanent peace is achieved, Arias says, Nicaragua may have to evolve toward some form of democracy—and away from the Marxist-Leninist totalitarian model—because the peace plan, which Ortega signed, establishes democratization as crucial to an overall peace settlement. Arias told me that Ortega decided to sign the plan when he realized that all the other Central American presidents would do so, and the Sandinistas could not afford to be isolated in the eyes of the world in opposing a peaceful solution to the civil war. The Sandinistas know that failure of the peace plan, which bans military assistance to anti-government forces such as the contras and the leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, may well mean fresh U.S. funds for the contras—and more war for their devastated country.

Oscar Arias' success in launching his peace plan is based on his credibility as an independent-minded democratic leader and on the image of Costa Rica as a neutral and peaceful nation which, having abolished its armed forces following a civil war in 1948, has been able to harness all its resources for social and economic development. Costa Rica today enjoys the highest living standard in Latin America. There are pockets of poverty, but one sees no sickly, barefoot children in the villages and no beggars and almost no slums in the capital and provincial towns—in high contrast with the familiar sights of Third World misery elsewhere. The literacy rate stands at about 95 percent, and the mortality of children under the age of 5 is 23 per 1000 (in the U.S., the figure is 13, but it is 70 in Mexico, 87 in Brazil and 261 in Ethiopia). Arias' main goal during his term is to build enough low-cost housing so there would be "no Costa Rican without his own home."

Costa Rica was the first Latin American nation to abolish slavery (in 1813), the first to provide free and compulsory education (120 years ago), the first to abolish capital punishment (in 1882) and the first—and the only—to do away with its army. Women received the vote only in 1949, but when Arias was elected in 1986, he submitted to the national assembly legislation granting women absolute equality with men. President Arias' wife, Margarita Penon de Arias Sánchez, who has a degree in chemistry from New York's Vassar College, is deeply involved in politics and is very popular.

Costa Ricans have made their country what it is today. Its natural resources are limited, and it has no tradition of wealth, even as a Spanish colony. Yet they have almost entirely avoided violence, having suffered only one civil war in nearly a century.

"We are a nation of teachers and lawyers," Arias told me, "and we are a democratic welfare state, not a garrison state." Internal security is provided by the police, numbering less than 12,000 men. As Arias told the U.S. Congress, "In my homeland, you will not find a single tank, artillery piece, warship or military helicopter. In Costa Rica, we are not afraid of freedom." The democratic process has not been interrupted in 40 years, and Costa Rica is the only country in Central America with no leftist guerrillas or conspiracies.

Arias is continually criticized by the conservative press in Costa Rica. At one point, after complaining about it, he suddenly brightened. "Well, they can criticize me all they want," he said, "but they can't throw me out because they don't have an army. Besides," he joked, "I'm the one who made Costa Rica famous with my Nobel Prize—Americans no longer confuse Costa Rica with Puerto Rico."

In health care and education, democratic Costa Rica does as well or better for its people than Marxist-Leninist Cuba. Arias noted that Costa Rica has "the same social indicators today as Cuba, but without the paredón [execution wall], without thousands and thousands of citizens in exile." This is another reason why Costa Rica is so important to the United States: It establishes the principle that small nations can grow in stability and freedom if given a chance by their own societies as well as the outside world.

The United States has shown that it appreciates Costa Rica as a democratic showcase and is prepared to support it in every way. With the national economy seriously damaged by the fall in the prices of coffee and bananas, its principal exports, the U.S. provided Costa Rica with $338 million in 1986 and 1987, making our assistance program there second only to Israel in per capita civilian grants and low-interest loans.

To the annoyance of the Reagan Administration, Arias forbade the use of a Costa Rican airport by the U.S. for secret deliveries of war supplies for the contras in Nicaragua, refused to allow the installation of a secret communications center to relay intelligence data to the rebels and expelled contra leaders from his country. There was enough wisdom in Washington to avoid any retaliation.

In dealing with the United States, Oscar Arias has the special advantage of understanding the gringos better than most Latin American leaders. His English is so fluent that he can deliver first-rate extemporaneous speeches at the drop of a sombrero. After receiving a degree in law and economics from the University of Costa Rica, he graduated from the University of Essex in England, then attended Boston University and Harvard. As minister of planning and economic policy (at age 31), he began building up his network of contacts and friendships in the United States, where he feels absolutely at home.

He told me how he forced his fellow Central American presidents to agree on his peace plan—at their meeting in Guatemala on Aug. 7, 1987—by keeping them in the conference room until 4 o'clock in the morning, fearing that a recess might interrupt the negotiations for good. He was inspired, he said, by the example of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who would lock his aides in a room until they reached an agreement. (Arias read it in Roosevelt: The Lion and The Fox, a biography by James MacGregor Burns.)

Precisely because of his feeling of kinship with the U. S. Arias is troubled by the way Washington has been acting among its southern neighbors. In addition to the crises affecting Nicaragua and El Salvador, both caught up in full-fledged wars, Arias sees Panama as the latest —and unnecessary—flashpoint in U.S. policies.

With the security of the Panama Canal at stake, the U.S. faced a dilemma in Panama, and Arias has been fearful of the consequences.

"In Panama," Arias said, "the U.S. realized that the policy of force did not work. This preoccupies me, because I believe that the United States cannot afford to lose its credibility. And Costa Rica, as a defenseless country, needs for a friendly country—the United States—to be respected and to be trusted. If you lose credibility, we all lose it. If you say, 'I give you 48 hours to leave,' and a man like Noriega doesn't leave, and then you apply sanctions to a little country for disobeying you, then you're losing credibility. As it is, we missed a great opportunity when our mediation in Panama was made to fail."

As I was bidding him farewell, Arias put his hand on my arm. "Let me repeat," he said. "If I had to advise Washington on its policy in Latin America, I'd say, 'Please be nice—please stop being the ugly American.'"

LIVE IN MEXICO ON $14 A DAY

ONE MILLION AMERICANS live in Mexico--more than any other place in the world. Why do so many Americans live in Mexico? Here's why:

- Living costs--they are ridiculously low. Recent peso devaluations make Mexico one of the cheapest places to live in the entire world. Many Americans live comfortably on a small pension or social security.
- The climate--it's comfortable year round. And most parts of Mexico are unspoiled with beautiful, clear, warm waters, green mountains, and colorful flowers.
- Live in a community of other Americans. There are many retirement havens in Mexico--only a short distance from the U.S.--where Americans live comfortably on a minimal income.

The book Living Easy in Mexico describes American retirement communities throughout Mexico. It covers lakeside villages nestled in the mountains, sleepy fishing villages alongside the ocean, and modern cities having a large community of Americans. The book tells you how to get to these retirement havens, the Americans living there, climate, cost of living, housing, recreation, advantages, disadvantages, and which communities to avoid.

The book gives you practical facts on living in Mexico--health care, laws, travel, customs, food and water, selecting a home, making extra money. The author spent 30 years living and traveling throughout Mexico. The book contains plenty of photographs so you can see for yourself the beauty of these retirement havens. Whatever kind of retirement living you want, Mexico has something to offer you.

Living in Mexico is cheap. For about $14 a day each, two people can live in a spacious home, eat good food, have a cook, housekeeper and gardener, and still have money left over for entertainment or savings.

If you're fed up with high living costs, bad weather, congestion, pollution, too much stress and tension, consider Mexico as tens of thousands of Americans are already doing.

Get all the facts. Order Living Easy in Mexico today. Send only $12.95 plus $1 postage and handling to: United Research Publishers, 103 North Highway 101, Dept. RL-04, Encinitas, CA 92024. You can return the book within 30 days for full refund if not satisfied.

EARLY AMERICAN MARRIAGE

Our forbears were not as straitlaced as we thought, says an article in American Heritage: "Birth and marriage records reveal that in late-18th century America pregnancy was frequently a prelude to marriage." Only later did the birthrate drop. By 1840, in most New England towns, it had gone "from nearly one pregnant bride in three to one in five or six." Why? Couples' intimate correspondence reveals that "many were living through long engagements while the husband-to-be strove to establish his place in the world," explains author Jack Larkin. "They chose not to risk a pregnancy that would precipitate them into an early marriage." September/October issue.

You can't depend on an instant energy pick-me-up. You need an all-day-long eating plan.

How Do I Beat The 4 O'Clock Slump?

NO MATTER WHAT your age or activity, if you're not eating properly, late afternoon can bring about a major energy fadeout. Suddenly, vitality disappears, body and soul slump together and are in desperate need of revitalization. So, all too often, you reach for some "quick fix" food—coffee, cola, ice cream, a cookie, a candy bar or a cocktail.

These are the worst possible solutions. They give you a quick injection of sugar or caffeine, but just as quickly there's a drop-off, brought about by a state of low blood sugar as your body deals with the overload. And it's most likely lowered blood sugar that made you feel drowsy in the first place.

The truth is that by 4:00 p.m. there just isn't any quick fix. You need to plan and eat for energy all day long. Energy comes from burning calories, the "fuel" we get from food. Too few calories eaten during the day, and your body begins to feel that it is starving. To preserve energy, it slows down its calorie-burning (lowers its rate of metablolism). You feel this slowdown as a lack of energy—there's just not enough fuel to burn.

If you usually save your main meal for dinner, you're running on empty by day, when you need calories most, and loading them on at night, when you need them least. Not only do you have a midafternoon fade, but the pounds sneak on. An evenly balanced distribution of daytime calories—starting in the morning—helps to raise your metabolism and give you sustained energy all day long.

Balance is the key—a healthy balance of the three main sources of calories: carbohydrates, proteins and fats. For energy, complex carbohydrates—pastas, Yogurt plus six high-energy toppings—pick your favorite—for a healthy late-afternoon boost.

Tomato & Watercress Sandwich

The quintessential tea sandwich—peppery watercress combined with the best tomatoes you can find.

1 bunch watercress
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
4 ripe plum tomatoes, sliced crosswise
4 slices thin whole-wheat bread

1. Wash watercress and pat dry. Take off the leaves, reserving a few whole sprigs for garnish.
2. Chop up the leaves and mix them with mayonnaise and pepper.
3. Spread mixture over bread. Arrange tomato slices on top and cut each into three finger-size sandwiches. Garnish with watercress sprigs.

Serves 4

A Plan For More Energy All Day Long

1. Start keeping a log of what you eat. You'll learn you can't fool yourself.
2. Balance your calories by including protein, carbohydrates and some fats in each meal, starting with breakfast. Emphasize vegetables, fruits, fibers and grain products. Keep it low in sugars and fats.
3. Plan your food for each day. Pack several healthy snacks, so you don't grab the first thing available when you're hungry. Choose fruits, vegetables, fibers, starches, low-fat milk or yogurt—foods that fill you up and give you a slow energy burn.
4. Lower your intake of caffeine, sugar and alcohol to minimize roller-coaster mood swings. Diet sodas seem to increase our sugar cravings, so we drink water and lemon all day long—from 6 to 10 glasses.
5. Get moving. For high energy, you need plenty of oxygen—it's the "fire" your body uses to burn calories. Exercise increases your oxygen intake. Do simple exercises regularly, if possible. When you're in a slump, take a 10-minute walk—it will relieve fatigue and tension and get your blood circulating.

IDEAS FROM THE SILVER PALATE

rice, grains and cereals, vegetables and fruits—are the best; they readily convert to glucose (sugar for energy) without causing huge rises or dips in the blood sugar level. But for energy all day long—and to avoid sudden slumps—you need to balance carbohydrates with protein (from lean meat, skim or low-fat milk, occasional eggs, tofu, etc.). Protein makes carbohydrates burn more slowly, all day. If you overload on carbs only, you will become drowsy. (Fats are also necessary, of course, but fats convert less quickly to energy and those not burned are stored as unwanted pounds.)

You've heard it all your life: "Eat three square meals a day to balance calories." The overall ideal, nutritionists say, is 15% protein, 60% carbohydrate and about 25% fat. And they now tell us that even better than three are four or five balanced light meals and snacks. Your metabolism stays high, and you are less likely to overload in the evening. It becomes obvious that just a quick snack alone can't fix a poor eating pattern.

It takes planning and awareness of what you eat to insure that you will have good food handy when you need it. Our solution is to prepare healthy midmorning and midafternoon snacks in advance and take them with us when when we go out to work. Fruit and vegetable drinks, light open-faced sandwiches and low-fat yogurt with interesting toppings give us natural sugars that pass quickly into the bloodstream but sustain an energy level longer. When snacks are simple and tasty, they're well worth the extra thought and effort to prepare them ahead. And once you've created your new eating patterns, you'll find yourself enjoying a new energy level. That's the best motivation for continued good eating we know.

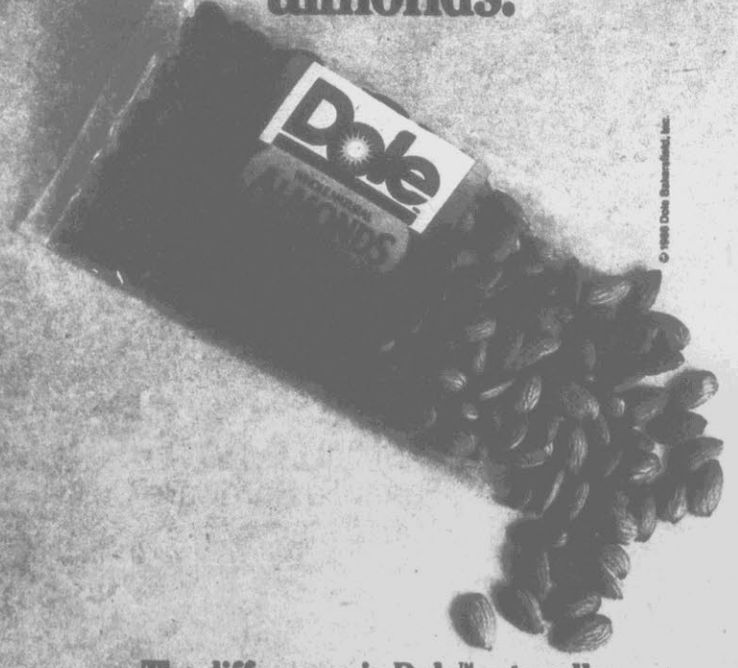

Yogurt Plus

Energy Toppings:

Wheat germ
Bran
Coconut flakes
Sliced bananas
Granola
Raisins
Chopped nuts
Sprinkles (for fun)
Fresh berries
Orange sections

Vegetable Pick-Me-Up Drink

A drink full of vitamin-rich vegetables—including robust tomatoes, cool cucumber and sweet carrot—all blended with just a bit of spice. Make it in advance, so the flavors mingle. Goes great with Julee's Tuna & Egg Sandwich.

2 plum tomatoes, cored
2 scallions, including green parts
1 green pepper, cored and seeded
1/2 cucumber, peeled, halved and seeded
1 carrot, peeled
1 stalk celery, leaves removed
2 cups tomato juice
Salt to taste
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
Dash of Tabasco sauce
Chopped chives (garnish)

1. Chop all the vegetables and puree them in a blender or food processor fitted with a steel blade. With motor running, add tomato juice, a little at a time, and continue to process until the mixture is smooth.
2. Remove to a large pitcher. Add salt, pepper and Tabasco. Stir well and chill for 2 hours before serving. Garnish with chives.

Cantaloupe, Watermelon & Strawberry Slush

This cool, refreshing, low-calorie blend combines cantaloupe, watermelon, juicy strawberries and fresh orange juice. Make it ahead and take it with you to work. When you're feeling a fade-out coming on, just shake it and drink.

2 cups ripe cantaloupe (rind removed), cubed
2 cups watermelon (rind removed), seeded and cubed
2 cups ripe strawberries, hulled and sliced
1/4 cup fresh orange juice
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup crushed ice
4 sprigs fresh mint

1. In a blender or food processor fitted with a steel blade, combine cantaloupe, watermelon, strawberries, orange juice, sugar and crushed ice. Process for 1 minute.
2. Serve in tall glasses over ice cubes; garnish with a sprig of mint. Store in refrigerator.
Serves 4

Julee's Tuna & Egg Sandwich

1 small can (3¼ ounces) water-packed tuna, drained
2 hard-boiled eggs, coarsely chopped
1/4 cup green seedless grapes, halved
1 tablespoon chopped red onion
1/2 teaspoon finely grated lemon zest
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1½ tablespoons mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sour cream
4 slices thin rye or multi-grain bread
4 small radishes, thinly sliced

2. Mix mayonnaise and sour cream together. Toss with the tuna salad.
3. Spread salad evenly on slices of bread and cut each slice into three finger-size sandwiches. Garnish each with thin radish slices. (See photo, above right.)

FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH

FOR WOMEN OVER 35

BY ANN DUGAN AND THE EDITORS OF CONSUMER GUIDE®

WHAT DIET ALONE WON'T DO, AND SIT-UPS WON'T DO— THIS BOOK CAN DO FOR WOMEN OVER 35 . . . OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

It's never too late to flatten your stomach and narrow your waistline. But as you have probably noticed, diets alone are not enough.

That is especially true as you get older. Even if you keep your weight down and get some exercise, your stomach may bulge and sag because your abdominal muscles are not properly toned.

Sit-ups alone work on only some of these muscles. But unless you exercise all four major abdominal muscles—your stomach may be hard, but it won't be flat.

This new book shows you how to flatten your stomach by exercising all—and not just some—of your stomach muscles. And it is specially designed to meet the needs of women over 35. Strenuous exercises are avoided . . . so you need not be in shape to get started.* After you get going, you progress at your own speed to intermediate and advanced programs. And each level includes exercises to strengthen your back and give your cardiovascular system vital aerobic conditioning.

Give this NEW QUICK, EASY WAY TO FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH FOR WOMEN OVER 35 a try. It has easy-to-follow directions. All exercises are fully illustrated in color. Plus it's spiral bound to stay open and lie flat while you exercise. See if you don't feel more fit, energetic and self-confident in just a few short weeks. You must get the results you want or we'll give you your money back. So don't wait any longer. Put your order in the mail today!

Official announcement of the

SPACE SHUTTLE DISCOVERY $5 COMMEMORATIVE COIN

An affirmation of America's undaunted courage, available at the face value of only $5.00. A piece of history you can hold in your hand.*

As America celebrates the rebirth of its manned space program—the launch of the Discovery—the historic moment will be officially marked with the issuance of the Space Shuttle Discovery $5 Commemorative Coin. It is being issued by the Republic of the Marshall Islands, whose tracking station has long been part of America's world-wide tracking network.

This heavy legal-tender coin will portray the triumphant lift-off of the Discovery. About the same diameter as a Silver Dollar, it is even thicker—and painstakingly minted in a gleaming proof-like finish.

Each coin is protectively encased, after passing the Mint's exacting standards, and is accompanied by an authoritative narrative.

This historic commemorative coin will be issued on the date of the shuttle's launch and minted only in 1988. The coin will be available only for a short time and in limited quantity. This legal-tender coin is offered without any premium over its $5.00 face value (*plus $1.00 per coin for shipping and handling). To assure fair distribution, the Mint has adopted a limit of five coins per order.

Order from the Republic of the Marshall Islands Mint, Coin Fulfillment Center, One Unicover Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008-1988. Please order promptly. All orders are subject to limitation and acceptance.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

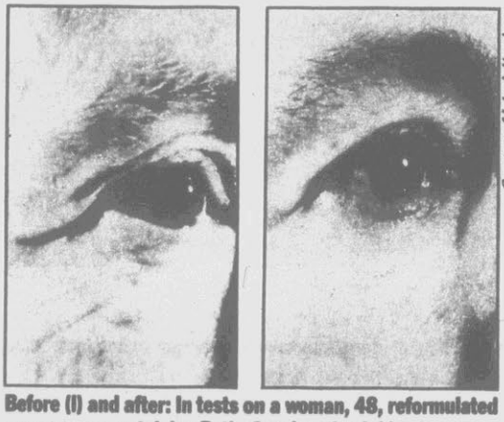

Intelligence Report

Warning on Wrinkle Creams

Last year, this department ran a piece on Retin-A, a derivative of vitamin A known chemically as tretinoin. We explained at the time that Retin-A was a 17-year-old prescription drug approved for the treatment of acne. We also pointed out that several physicians were experimenting with the drug in the form of a cream to determine if it had wrinkle-removing and other properties which might reverse the damage done to skin by too much sun exposure.

On Jan. 22, 1988, the Journal of the American Medical Association published the results of a study involving 30 people aged 35 to 70. The study showed "mild to moderate" improvement in those using the cream, which is manufactured by Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp. of Raritan, N.J., a branch of Johnson & Johnson. Since then, the publicity concerning Retin-A has become so intense and widespread that the demand for the product—particularly in California, Florida and other sun-drenched areas—has exceeded the supply. Last month, it reached the stage where the Food and Drug Administration began warning consumers against the indiscriminate use and purchase of Retin-A and its imitations.

Courtesy of John J. Voorhees

According to a statement by FDA Commissioner Frank Young, "Retin-A has not undergone proper long-term testing for use as a wrinkle cream, and the present formulation is known to cause some adverse local effects, such as severe swelling and peeling."

Retin-A is available only by prescription in this country and solely for the treatment of acne. But once the FDA authorizes the sale of a drug, physicians may prescribe it in various dosages. It is best to be attended by a dermatologist experienced in its use. Be warned, too, that counterfeit versions of Retin-A have been concocted by unethical physicians, pharmacists and chemists and sold at exorbitant prices. Many of these bogus creams lack the basic ingredient of retinoic acid.

Many people are allergic and sensitive to Retin-A and will suffer reddening, severe pain and skin irritation once it is applied, no matter how genuine the cream and careful the dosage.

Retin-A, if used daily for at least four months, may reduce fine wrinkles, but it has no effect on deep lines and furrows, no matter how long it's applied. To have any effect, even in diminishing fine wrinkles, it must be used daily—else the lines revert to their original depth.

Retin-A is on sale without a prescription in Tijuana and other Mexican border cities at prices ranging from $2 to $30 for a 20-gram tube. But no one knows how genuine it is. And only a fool would gamble on its legitimacy.

The Duesenberg SSJ...the most legendary of all classic cars...the fastest, best-handling and most opulent of all Duesenbergs. Only two were ever built, and both are virtually priceless.

Remarkable attention to detail.

The Danbury Mint devoted over twelve months of painstaking research and development to recreate the Duesenberg SSJ in large 1:24 scale.

All the important components — the body, chassis, drivetrain and engine block — are crafted of metal. The seats are glove leather and the tires are genuine rubber.

Both the engine and the undercarriage are authentically recreated and, of course, the doors and both sides of the hood open.

Each component of this model is individually inspected, then hand-assembled. Note the gleam of the model's finish. It is achieved by polishing each piece of metal, then hand-spraying the paint finish. Finally, and perhaps most remarkably, each car is actually handwaxed.

Surprisingly modest price.

The Duesenberg SSJ is the stuff of dreams — but the original issue price of this Duesenberg SSJ replica is only $88.50, payable in three monthly installments of just $29.50 each. This is an exclusive commission available only by direct subscription from the Danbury Mint; it is not available in any store.

Satisfaction guaranteed.

To reserve a Duesenberg SSJ in your name, you need send no money now. You will be billed in three convenient monthly installments, your first in advance of shipment. If you prefer, you may charge each monthly installment to your VISA or MasterCard account.

If you are not completely satisfied, for whatever reason, you may return your Duesenberg SSJ within 30 days of receipt for a prompt refund or replacement.

Over 450 Woodworking Patterns!

Patterns are the woodworker's most important tool, and now you can own the biggest collection for scroll saws ever put into a single book—over 450 patterns, all of them imaginative and easy to copy, with complete step-by-step instructions, plus lots of handy shortcuts and money-saving tips.

Never again pay $2.00, $3.00 or more for woodworking patterns, when you can get over 450 in this book for less than three cents each! Most of these patterns are simple enough for beginners, or for teaching kids the basics of using a scroll saw. But dozens of advanced designs will assure you the most beautiful and valuable projects you've ever made.

And if you like to challenge your skills, you'll want to try the beautiful recess, relief, marquetry, and inlay techniques.

Handy tips show you how to experiment with a whole range of paint and stain color schemes, woodburning, stencilling, and decal applications—everything you need to add your own distinctive personal touches.

You can even adapt these 450 patterns to discover literally thousands of new project possibilities, with the simple instructions for enlarging and reducing, cropping and flopping, repeating and inverting the designs.

Here's a lifetime of ideas in a book you'll pick up again and again. It's always your first stop whenever you're looking for great woodworking projects! Order your copy today!

Youth Communiqué

DeBasel/LFI

R.E.M.—popular band among young people

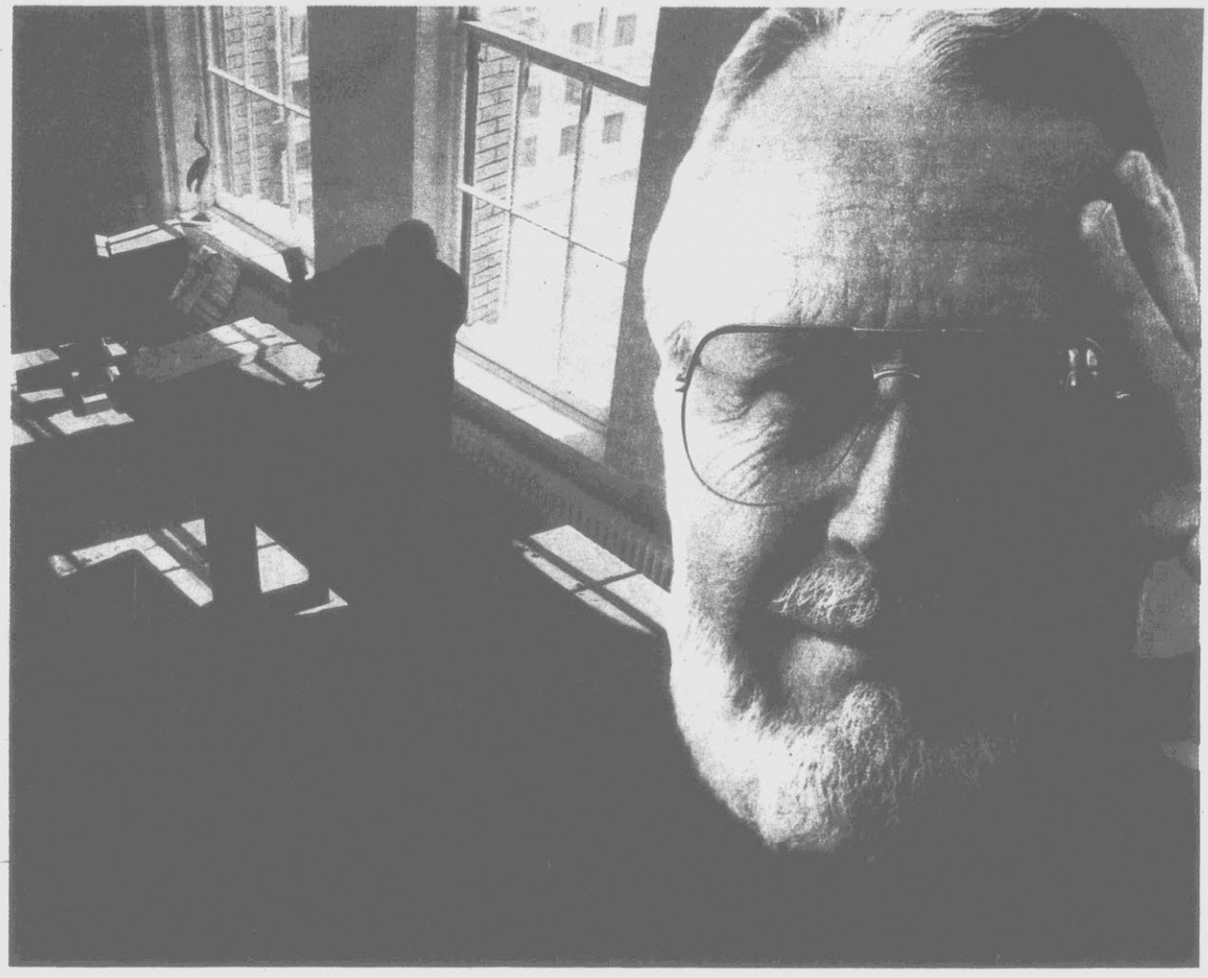

From a college-going niece comes this random bit of incidental intelligence: "Thought you'd like to know in this summer of '88 that most of my friends own at least one album recorded by the following performers and bands, which are not listed in order of popularity: 1) R.E.M., 2) INXS, 3) U2, 4) Sting, 5) Peter Gabriel, 6) Bob Marley, 7) The Grateful Dead, 8) The Police, 9) The Cure and 10) The Smiths. The older you are, the fewer of these names you will recognize. Love, Julie."

From the Reagan Joke File

'Well, as you all know, a week from today I'll be receiving a rather important visitor [General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev of the Soviet Union]. There has been a lot of intensive preparation for this summit...

"With all of the things going on, however, one might be forgiven if one felt a little like Harold Macmillan [former prime minister of Great Britain] in his famous exchange with Nikita Khrushchev. It was Macmillan, of course, who was delivering an address at the United Nations when Khrushchev pulled off his shoe and started banging it on the table. Unflappable as ever, Macmillan simply remarked, 'I'd like that translated, if I may.'"

—Reagan remarks at a luncheon for trustees and founders of the Heritage Foundation, Nov. 30, 1987.

"Every piece of wood is a challenge. You have to treat it like an individual. So when your idea finally takes shape, the satisfaction is great. I like challenges. Like turning my retirement money into the income I need for my lifestyle. I did a lot of research, and, well, the Prudential agent was the only one with the knowledge and background I wanted. He seemed to be interested in me as an individual. He made no rash promises. He suggested a variable annuity. With The Prudential, I've got very little to worry about."

BY JAMES BRADY

Joan Lunden

Eddie Adams

From David Hartman to Charles Gibson, the one unifying element on Good Morning America the last eight years has been Joan Lunden

BORN: Sept. 19, 1950, in Fair Oaks, Calif.
PERSONAL: Married Michael Krauss in 1978; three daughters: Jamie, 8, Lindsay, 5, and Sarah, 1.
CAREER HIGHLIGHTS: Worked at KCRA-TV and Radio in Sacramento, 1973-75, as weather person, consumer reporter and anchor. Reporter for WABC-TV in New York, 1975-80, rising to weekend co-anchor in 1976. Co-host of Good Morning America on ABC-TV, 1980–. Named Outstanding Mother of the Year by National Mother's Day Council, 1982. Author of Good Morning, I'm Joan Lunden, 1986.

FIVE NIGHTS A WEEK, JOAN Lunden is in bed by 9:30 p.m. Five mornings a week, she is up at 3:45 a.m. She and her husband, Michael Krauss, and their three daughters live in a suburb north of New York. By 4:30 a.m., with Michael still asleep, Joan is in a chauffeured car and reading an 80-page script on her way to the office.

In her case, the office is a television studio on Manhattan's West Side, near Central Park, and her job is that of co-host of Good Morning America, the ABC-TV show that has been battling it out for ratings dominance with NBC's Today show. Joan has been doing this for eight years. "I get awfully tired of that [the dawn patrol], but you just don't walk away from GMA."

These days, she works alongside Charles Gibson. But, for a long time, Joan played second banana to David Hartman. I asked what the difference was. "Charlie's a friend of mine," she said. "I worked next to David. I liked him—we got along well. But he didn't allow me to grow. David wanted to retain control. I was so green when I came here, he [Hartman] was a big help. It took me a long time to earn that [co-anchor's] chair."

Morning television has its drawbacks—and its advantages. "I love being a mommie," Joan said. "I'm out of here by 11 a.m. and home with Sarah, the baby, by noon. I get to spend time with her. Then I pick up the two older girls at school. In the early afternoon, a messenger comes to the house with material for the next day's show. I work, answer letters at home, and about 5:30 I call in and do some research. In the morning, Michael sleeps right through my alarm. I've even oiled the hinges on the door."

She and Michael tried to launch an afternoon talk show, "to establish an Oprah Winfrey-type franchise," she said. "The soaps are so neurotic. We gave it a good shot, but ABC was not thrilled with the idea that I might be leaving GMA, and we couldn't get New York and Los Angeles stations." Joan said she probably would renew her Good Morning America deal for yet another year.

When we spoke, Joan had just returned from Ireland and Sweden. "Michael and the two older girls came with me to Sweden," she said. "We had a wonderful time. I love traveling. I'd like to see mainland China. And do a photo safari in Africa. I'd even like to go to Afghanistan, but then I realize, 'You've got three kids,' and I have to temper my ambition. I was edgy in Yugoslavia during the Olympics. After all, it was behind the Iron Curtain. And I was nervous covering Fergie's wedding to Prince Andrew, with all the terrorism in Europe around then."

I wondered about the secret of why she's so good at what she does. "People wake up in the morning," Joan said, "still in their pajamas, their teeth dirty and their guard down. Most people like me. Some don't. But no one seems to find me really objectionable." Then she added, "But I could be a terrific afternoon person."

BRADY'S BITS

Joan is much more than simply another television host. She and her husband, a TV producer, are in fact a thriving cottage industry, centering on parenting. They've produced TV specials and several books on the subject of babies and young children, with complementary videos, and Joan does ads for Revlon children's products like tearless shampoo and baby nail-clippers. "No children's beauty products," she says firmly. "I get approached with lots of commercial opportunities, but in my job you have to be very careful."

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ALL AMERICANS OVER 30 WHO DO NOT YET HAVE A WILL

Your complete LEGAL WILL drawn up – only $9

- LEGALLY VALID IN ALL 50 STATES.
- FEATURED ON TV AND IN NEWSPAPERS FROM COAST-TO-COAST.
- ALREADY USED BY OVER 500,000 AMERICANS.

In just 30 minutes, you can now protect your family (and save them huge problems and potentially-huge expenses) with an iron-clad, legally-valid will.

Up to now, it would have cost you and your family up to $150.00 (and possibly much more) to have your Will drawn up. Now, with the AMERICAN WILL KIT, you can have your complete Legal Will and save up to $140.00 and more (for both husband and wife).

Prepared by a team of legal experts, the highly acclaimed AMERICAN WILL KIT allows you to draw up your own Legal Will quickly and easily without an attorney—guaranteeing you a safe Estate Plan. It provides your family with everything you want for them.

IMPORTANT

Without a Will, the court (not you) will determine the outcome of your estate. Don't risk what you've worked a lifetime to earn.

Everything you need— for only $9

The AMERICAN WILL KIT provides everything you need to have your personal Will drawn up quickly and safely. And with your WILL KIT, you will also receive, without charge, the easy-to-read "Personal Protection Guide." This valuable Guide gives you important tips and special information that can be worth hundreds, even thousands of dollars, to you and your family.

This remarkable Kit is considered so beneficial, it has been featured on television and in newspapers throughout America—and already, over 500,000 people have used it.

Whatever your status—married, single, divorced, widowed—make sure you protect your family. MAKE SURE YOU HAVE A WILL BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE. (Keep in mind this important fact: Without a Will, the Court decides—not you—who inherits your Estate and who becomes guardian of your minor children.)

Regardless of the size of your estate, failing to make a will means taking unnecessary chances.

ALL ORDERS RUSHED VIA FIRST CLASS MAIL

If you're 30 or older . . . if you don't yet have a Will . . . if you want to protect your loved ones . . . and if you want to save up to $140.00 (and possibly more)—send for your personal WILL KIT now. You must be 100% satisfied or your money will be returned at once.

PUBLISHERS CHOICE GUARANTEE

If you are dissatisfied with your purchase in any way, you may return it for a prompt and full refund. All orders are processed promptly and notification will be sent in case of delay. Shipment is guaranteed within 60 days.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and check or money order for $9.00 plus $1.90 postage and handling to: Publishers Choice, Box 4171, Dept. CO21-PF, Huntington Station, NY 11746. NY, NJ, IA, IL and MI residents please add appropriate sales tax.

Cover Story....

'Funny People' Airs On Wednesdays

By Robert DiMatteo

Veteran producer George Schlatter is banking on the commercial value of the tried-and-true. Schlatter's "Funny People" (airing Wednesdays on NBC) is a blatant hybrid of his earlier hits "Laugh-In" and "Real People." This new one-hour weekly series combines "Laugh-In" 's comic potpourri approach with the human-interest eclecticism of "Real People." Four hosts — "Entertainment Tonight"'s Leeza Gibbons and comics Blake Clark, Rita Rudner and Scott Blakeman — introduce segments on supposedly amusing people and events that span the globe.

Schlatter's track record surely helped sell NBC on this mid-summer addition to its schedule, though another consideration may have loomed even larger. Until the recent settlement of the Writers Guild strike, NBC was banking on "writer-proof" ventures like "Funny People" to fill its schedule. Yet after watching the first two lackluster episodes, one may wonder if the series is also going to be audience-proof as well as writer-proof.

There's something a little wrong from the start. Take the title, please. The quality of being "funny" is something best discerned by the viewer, not announced by the humorist. Coming to a series called "Funny People," we expect one thing: to laugh. Again, based on the humor of the first two shows, the title is a bit of an overstatement. Stuck with its title,though, the series must now live up to it.

It would help if the hosts loosened up a bit. Using real-life comedians for three of the four regular spots on the show must have seemed very clever. But what works well in stand-up may not work as well in TV variety. Rita Rudner, a frequent guest on Letterman and Carson, is a zingy comedian whose specialty is wry, offbeat humor. On "Funny People," she's toned down considerably. She comes across as a saucer-eyed eccentric trying to be — well, Leeza Gibbons.

Meanwhile, one Gibbons is more than enough. Attractive and competent, Gibbons is also a classic case of hostess overstatement. She seems to buy the Schlatter show's title more than is healthy and desirable. You've never seen such amusement as Gibbons musters. After every attempted joke, we can count on a shot of Leeza absolutely doubling over with mirth. The other two regulars, Scott Blakeman and Blake Clark, have potential. Blakeman looks like your typical host — he's conventionally appealing and crisp. Clark, meanwhile, brings a good-ol'-boy touch to the proceedings.

Unfortunately, cable comedy specials and late-night broadcast-TV talk shows may have spoiled us for the tame prime-time humor displayed on "Funny People." When we can watch people like Robin Williams and Eddie Murphy in all their unfettered, edgy brilliance on cable, why settle for "Funny People"?

If this show is going to really come alive, it may have to change its basic attitude. Though it's debatable whether dwarf-tossing is ever going to be a very amusing topic, it certainly requires a hipper, more absurdist presentation than it got. So far, "Funny People" seems stranded between the corny, show-and-tell sensibility of "TV's Bloopers & Practical Jokes" and the more off-the-wall sensibility on view in the nation's hot comedy clubs.

MONDAY
FANDANGO

In "Fandango," Sam Robards (l.) and Judd Nelson play two members of a group of friends who decide to have one last adventure after graduating from college. It makes its network debut Monday, Aug. 29 on NBC.

TUESDAY
MATLOCK

On NBC's "Matlock," Matlock (Andy Griffith) defends a dance instructor who has been accused of murdering his benefactor, a woman who decides to cut off his money. The rebroadcast airs Tuesday, Aug. 30.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK

Perspiration Stains

With summer's hot and sticky weather, perspiring is our body's system to regulate its internal temperature. But if it's healthy for our bodies, it isn't necessarily so for our garments.

Fresh perspiration is an acid that turns alkaline through bacterial reaction, causing a deteriorating effect on some dyes and fabrics. Misuses of deodorants and antiperspirants can also contribute to color change and fabric deterioration.

A Cleaner World suggests that you bring your garments in for cleaning more often during hot summer months.

A Cleaner World

We repair and alter garments. God repairs and alters lives.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: Could you please give me a few facts on singer/songwriter Paul Simon? How old is he? I'd also like to know about his career history with Art Garfunkel and the reason for his divorce from actress Carrie Fisher. — STEPHANIE L. WALKER, HAMMOND, IND.

Pop songwriter Paul Simon was born Nov. 5, 1942, in Newark, N.J., and later moved to Forest Hills, N.Y. His association with Art Garfunkel goes all the way back to when they both attended grammar school together in Forest Hills. Following Simon and Garfunkel's debut album, "Wednesday Morning, 3 a.m." (1964), the duo scored 15 top-40 hits and have recorded nine albums thus far. All oftheir albums were certified gold. Simon, who has a 16-year-old son, Harper, from his first marriage to Peggy Simon, lived together with actress Carrie Fisher for a number of years prior to their 1983 marriage. They split just after a few months. Reportedly, Fisher's miscarriage and subsequent return to her career were behind the divorce.

Dear Michele: I am inquiring regarding the fate of Edith Bunker on "All in the Family." I must have missed the show that explained her disappearance, although I've heard she met with some sort of disaster. — VIRGINIA E. ROBERTS, ROSAMOND, CALIF.

Jean Stapleton had had enough of playing "The Dingbat" by the 1979-80 season of "All in the Family." During that year, she was seen less on camera, and asked to be phased out of the series in order to explore new projects. Edith was written out of the show in the first episode of the 1980-81 season when it was explained that she had suffered a fatal stroke. Viewers never witnessed Edith's demise on camera.

Dear Michele: I'm interested in learning the name of an adventure/thriller film starring Roy Scheider in the mid-to-late 1970s. The movie takes place in the jungles of South America, with Scheider playing a man who was hired to deliver explosives while being pursued by local rebel forces. Is the film available on videocassette? — FAYE BONIN, NEW IBERIA, LA.

I believe the film you are referring to is "Sorcerer" (1977). Although it has been shown on television, this thriller is still unavailable on videocassette.

Dear Michele: I am interested in learning why the first Mr. Wilson on "Dennis the Menace" left the show, and why he was replaced by actor Gale Gordon. — VENA LARY, BANGOR, MAINE

From 1959-62, Joseph Kearns portrayed Mr. Wilson on "Dennis the Menace." Kearns died on Feb. 17, 1962, and was replaced in May 1962 by Gordon, playing Wilson's brother, John, a visiting houseguest. Gordon returned in the final season of the series.

Dear Michele: I adore "L.A. Law" 's Susan Ruttan, and would like to know how she got her start in show business. Where was she born? — ALBERT PANNEBAKER, PRINCETON, ILL.

Ruttan was born in Oregon City, Ore., and is the daughter of a logger and a surgical nurse. She was shuttled from one Oregon logging camp to another wherever her father found work managing a bar. In 1974, she headed for California where she landed a role in "Hot L Baltimore" with a local repertory theater. She stayed with the company for four years before her thirst for knowledge of the other side of the business beckoned, and she was hired as a production assistant in the casting department at Universal Studios. Ruttan eventually emerged on camera, appearing on such series as "Remington Steele," "Newhart" and "Night Court," and in the TV movies "Second Sight" and "Packing It In." The role of Roxanne Melman on "L.A. Law" is her first series-starring venture. Off-screen, she enjoys designing clothes for her own small company.

Dear Michele: Would you please tell me if Michael Beck of "Houston Knights" is married, and if he has any children? Also, when and where was he born? — CONNIE BASTEIN, IDA, MICH.

Beck was born Feb. 4, 1949 in Memphis Tenn. He and his songwriter/actress wife Cari are the parents of a 5-year-old son, Jesse, and a 2-year-old daughter, Ashley.

Kennedys Of Massachusetts

Tracy Pollan, William Petersen, Charles Durning and Pat Hingle are the stars of "The Kennedys of Massachusetts," an upcoming ABC movie that dramatizes the life of the family, from Joseph Kennedy's enterprises in the 1920s through John F. Kennedy's term as U.S. president. ABC is likely to air the movie in November, the 25th anniversary of the assassination of JFK.

THURSDAY

HALF 'N' HALF

Dorian Harewood (l.) and Perry King play two men who have very mixed feelings when they discover they've inherited a struggling newspaper. "Half 'n' Half," an unsold pilot, airs Thursday, Sept. 1, on ABC.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

Blair Underwood, who plays Jonathan Rollins, the black yuppie lawyer on "L.A. Law," has a tale of success that will make many struggling actors jealous. The Tacoma, Wash., native left his drama studies at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh to try his fortune in New York City. Within two days of arrival, he had landed a role on "The Cosby Show." It was a tiny role as Denise Huxtable's boyfriend, but it led only a few weeks later to a larger part in the rap film "Krush Groove." From there, Underwood really lucked out, winning a regular role on "One Life to Live." Underwood was especially lucky because the role was originally written for a tough urban Italian kid. "Fortunately, I didn't know what they were looking for," Underwood says. "I just went in there and read. I guess I changed their mind without really trying to." On "L.A. Law," Underwood doesn't feel he's carrying any banner for black causes. "Jonathan is not a spokesman for the movement, but the fact that he's there at all is a statement in itself."

"Murphy Brown," the new CBS comedy starring Candice Bergen as an investigative reporter for a "60 Minutes"-type program, opens with Murphy (Bergen) having just been released from the Betty Ford Clinic, where she was treated for addiction to alcohol and prescription drugs. Not exactly the kind of premise that might have launched "Green Acres" or "Petticoat Junction." At a recent press conference, Bergen conceded that Warner Bros. (the show's producer) and CBS expressed some skepticism about the concept. "But they changed their mind when we got such positive feedback from test audiences," says Bergen. "In fact, the response was overwhelmingly positive. And I think (the premise) is in keeping with the anti-drug sentiment of the times because it's commendable that (Murphy) has made an attempt to clean up her act."

Bruce Willis isn't complaining about the reported $50,000 per episode he makes on "Moonlighting" or the fact that the show has made him one of the hottest actors around. What really irks him is the short preparation time he's given on the set. "Moonlighting" functions in an atmosphere of creative chaos, and that wreaks havoc on the stage-trained Willis, who was used to having months to prepare for a role in the theater. "TV is instant acting," Willis complains. "More often than not, when I show up on the 'Moonlighting' set, I'm handed that day's work at 10 o'clock that morning. So they take away all the tools of preparation I was taught on how to approach work. While I've mastered the technique of instant acting, I don't like it at all."

Soap Scoop

By Connie Passalacqua

Ew-ee! Just when "The Bold and the Beautiful" (a.k.a. "The Dull and the Dreary") was becoming positively comatose, along came a shocker story line, and a revelatory scene that just about blew everyone out of the water. Talk about making up for a boring summer!

The revelation was of a secret Stephanie Forrester (played by Susan Flannery) had kept from husband Eric (played by John McCook) for 25 years. All that time, Stephanie had retained Dr. Todd Powell (played by Calvin Bartlett) to live full-time with someone behind a bedroom door. In the shocking climax, Stephanie let Eric walk into the room to discover the sleeping figure of a daughter, Angela, he never knew he had. Stephanie painfully said that Angela was born a microcephalic, with a brain that would never develop.

"She has no comprehension and no mobility, and there's no hope," Stephanie explained. As Eric gasped in shock, Angela woke up, stared only into space and let out a high-pitched primal wail. The scene was shattering, and it was the best soap moment in eons!

What goes into making such an emotionally affecting scene? First of all, most soap story-line secrets get out and make the soap industry grapevine (and soap columns) weeks before the shockers have a chance to air. "B&B" succeeded in keeping this one a total secret.

Next, this secret was such an enormous one! And it was genuinely new to daytime. No soap has ever come close to touching a chronic congenital problem – or any kind of birth defect for that matter. The sound of Angela's scream and the look on Eric's face were more horror movie than daytime soap opera.

Finally, everything was drawn out slowly, one revelation building on another. Flannery, who has been the whole show on the usually poorly acted "B&B," was her usual sublime self. And McCook, the show's major disappointment since its premiere (he had charmingly played romantic hero Lance Prentiss on "The Young and the Restless" throughout the '70s), finally woke up from his somnambulism doing this scene.

But wait, wasn't this startling scene written during the writers' strike? Are we really supposed to believe that such a major scene and groundbreaking story line was written by inexperienced scabs? Well, if Stephanie could keep Angela a secret for almost 25 years ...

SUNDAY POLICE ACADEMY 2

ABC Announces Movies

ABC has announced six movies of the week scheduled to air during the 1988-89 season. One, "Tony," casts Broadway star Bernadette Peters in her first television dramatic role; another features Katherine Hepburn playing herself in the story of her relationship with her longtime personal assistant. The others: "Libererace," a dramatized life of the pianist; "The Ryan White Story," about a 13-year-old AIDS victim; "Silo," about a 1980 nuclear disaster; and "Second Chance," which stars Bea Arthur ("The Golden Girls").

COVER

(Clockwise from l.) Christine Ebersole, Peter Michael Goetz, John Short, Danny Cooksey, Mary Tanner, Parker Jacobs and Barnard Hughes star in "The Cavanaughs." It airs Mondays on CBS.

No one ever succeeds by just sitting back and waiting for things to happen. If you would rather have an agent who is a professional, dedicated and aggressive working for you, please call me today.

Sports Roundup

SUNDAY, AUG. 28
PGA Golf (CBS)

World Series of Golf, final round from Firestone Country Club, Akron, Ohio. There will be a lot of new faces at this tournament this year; in one stretch on this year's Tour, four consecutive tournaments were won by first-time victors. "The number of good younger players is one reason why nobody dominates anymore," says veteran Lee Trevino. "Instead of five, six or eight excellent players, now you have 100. A great number of the younger players have had the advantage of playing four years in high school and four years in college before going on the Tour. Heck, 25 years ago, I doubt that there were 25 colleges with golf players."

Amateur Golf (ABC)

U.S. Amateur Championship, final round from The Homestead, Hot Springs, Va. Perhaps the stars of the future will turn up here. Last year's champ, Billy Mayfair (Arizona State) and last runner-up, Eric Rebmann (Arizona State), are both the products of college programs.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 1
College Football (ESPN)

USC at Boston College. Last year's Eagles finished with a disappointing 5-6 record, but coach Jack Bicknell (50-31-1 at BC) has had the winning knack. He returns six starters on each side of the ball this season, including QB Mike Power and outstanding DE Eric Lindstrom. Power was the 11th-ranked signal-caller in the nation last year. However, starting your season against the high-powered Trojans is no fun.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 3
Tennis (CBS)

U.S. Open, live from Flushing Meadows, N.Y. The last of the Grand Slam events for 1988 should have a lot of drama in both men's and women's draws. The No. 1 men's ranking may be up for grabs. Stefan Edberg's victory at Wimbledon, combined with Ivan Lendl's tank job at Stratton Mountain, put the Swede at the top of the men's rankings for the first time. Whether he can stay there is another question. There is no doubt who the top woman singles player is, but a victory here for Steffi Graf would give her the first Grand Slam sweep since Margaret Court in 1970.

Baseball (NBC)

Kansas City Royals at Minnesota Twins or Los Angeles Dodgers at New York Mets. By the time you read this, John Wathan may be the ex-manager of the Royals. Wathan's low-key approach hasn't produced results with a team that many (including us) thought would have a shot at the AL West title. In spite of a seemingly deep pitching staff, the Royals haven't been able to threaten Oakland.

College Football (CBS)

Florida State at Miami.

Last year, when the Seminoles lost to Miami by only one point, some people thought the better team came out on the short end. Certainly, it was a victory worth a national title to Miami. This year, with Miami stripped of 15 starters, the result may be different. Florida State is certainly one of the strongest teams in the nation with tailback Sammie Smith (1,230 yards rushing and 7 TDs) anchoring an excellent defense that includes talented tackles Jon Ionata and Pat Tomberlin, and all-everything cornerback Deion Sanders leading a very aggressive defensiveunit. If Chip Ferguson can do the job at quarterback, FSU may have another shot at the mythical "national championship."

Graf, Agassi Favored At This Year's U.S. Open

By Marty Linehan

It's time for the men and women of late August, as the U.S. Open Tennis Championships start on Monday, Aug. 29, at the National Tennis Center across the street from Shea Stadium in Flushing, N.Y. And there is the rub.

It seems the noise of the Mets crowds when they play on days of the Open matches, and the deafening noise of the airplanes from nearby LaGuardia Airport, are too much for the gentle ears of the players, who require hospital-zone quiet while cussing the judges. They want to make sure the judges hear their complaints.

As it is now, a fan cannot take a seat while the game is being played. He has to wait for a lull in the action. Compare this with a college basketball player trying to make a late-game foul shot with 20,000 fans screaming in his ears in a Final Four tournament.

There is a story that the man who decided the tournament should be played in the National Tennis Center back in 1978 claims he didn't know LaGuardia Airport was that close. Where has he been all his life?

Another complaint the United States Tennis Association has is a shortage of parking space for the championships. The matches, which were held in the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills starting in 1968, were thought to bring tennis into big-time sports when it moved to the Tennis Center. And one of the prices of big-time sports is enough parking.

This year's U.S. Open appears to be a teenage feast with 19-year-old West German Steffi Graf leading the women's division, and American 18-year-old Andre Agassi the leading man.

Graf can become the first woman since Margaret Court in 1970 to win the Grand Slam of Tennis — Australian Open, French Open, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. Agassi, who passed up Wimbledon this year, is ripe for a big win. CBS covers most of the action.

Gumbel Signs With NBC

After a long and at times bitter salary dispute, "Today" co-host Bryant Gumbel has signed a contract to continue as co-host of the show through 1991. The contract, which reportedly will pay Gumbel $7 million, also calls for Gumbel to host the network's coverage of the 1988 Summer Olympics, which begin next month in Seoul., South Korea. He also will host two primetime specials.

Speaking Out About Aldridge and Southerland:

Nancy Dudley, GRI

Now that we are settled in Raleigh, we wanted to write and thank you for the professional manner in which your agency handled the sale of our home in Greenville.

Nancy Dudley listed and sold the house. She did a market analysis, listed and personally sold the house all within a three week period. We were very impressed with her professionalism, particularly in showing the house and handling the many details of closing.

As you know, moving is not always the most pleasurable experience; however Nancy helped to make it a smooth transaction for both buyer and seller. Nancy was a pleasure to work with and we would like you to know how pleased we were with the services she provided.

-Larry and Mary Jo Nason

Nancy Dudley was a high school guidance counselor before deciding to make a career move into the field of Real Estate. She has been able to use those counseling experiences to guide buyers from all backgrounds through the intricate maze of purchasing or selling homes. A consistent 3 million dollar a year producer the past few years, most of Nancy's business comes from past customers telling a friend about her expertise. The fact that she is consistently an office leader in listings shows us the confidence sellers have in her ability to market and manage the sale of their property. Nancy has earned the GRI designation and is now a candidate for the CRS, a coveted award.
Give Nancy a call for friendly, knowledgeable service!

-Mike Aldridge

Over the years, the Aldridge & Southerland management has consistently given me the support I've needed to be a leader in my profession. Aldridge & Southerland has allowed me to provide superior service to my clients by providing me with many educational opportunities, the latest in technology, and a generous advertising budget. I'm proud to present our record of integrity and leading sales to both buyers and sellers.

High blood pressure?

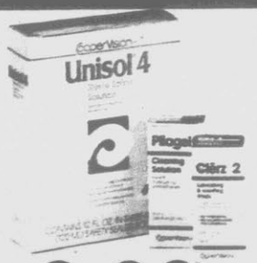

High blood pressure, also called hypertension, often occurs without any noticeable symptoms. If left undetected and uncontrolled, it can be very dangerous. That's why it's important to have your blood pressure checked regularly. Eckerd offers free blood pressure tests in the pharmacy. It's one more reason to count on Eckerd.

To an Eckerd Pharmacist, nothing's more important than your health.

KITCHEN KORNER

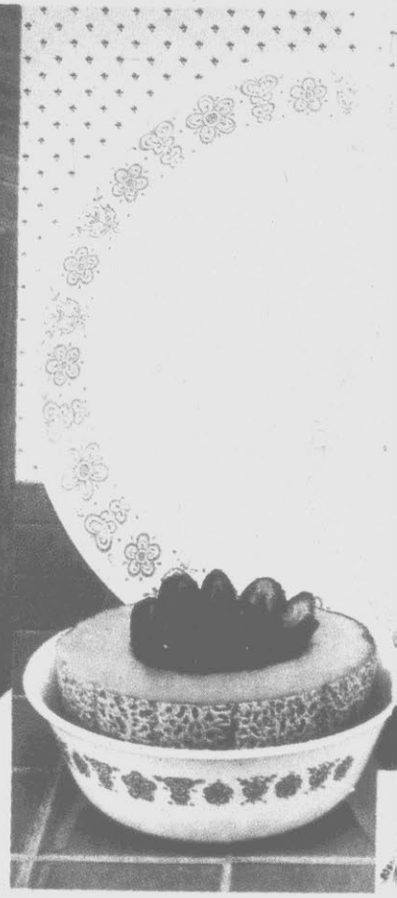

A Tip From Martha Stewart:
K mart Entertainment And Lifestyle Consultant

"Entertaining is a matter of taking something very appealing to me and making it bigger, to include others. There are many ways of entertaining, and each ultimately depends not on pomp or show or elaborate technique, but on thought, effort, and caring---much like friendship itself."

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Difference: 1. Head is tilted. 2. Jacket flap is missing. 3. Box is missing. 4. Shoe is moved. 5. Purse strap is missing. 6. Hair is different.

Junior Whirl®

by Hal Kaufman

• TREE PACK! Challenge: Complete the names of five familiar trees in the diagram at right. These names contain five letters, one of which is already in place. See how fast you can find the rest.

Clue: Tree No. 1 has the name of a garden flower that conjures up visions of windmills.

1	T	_	_	_	_
2	_	_	R	_	_
3	_	E	_	_	_
4	_	_	E	_	_
5	_	S	_	_	_

1. Tulip. 2. Birch. 3. Cedar. 4. Beech. 5. Aspen. Other answers are possible.

• SUM FUN! Add this number to 1.5 and the result is the same as if you had multiplied it instead. What number? Solve this in your head, if you can.

EVENTFUL ADDITION

The sum on the blackboard above is correct. That is to say, one plus two plus five equals eight. However, letters of these words as shown also may be used to add up in a rather EVENTful way.

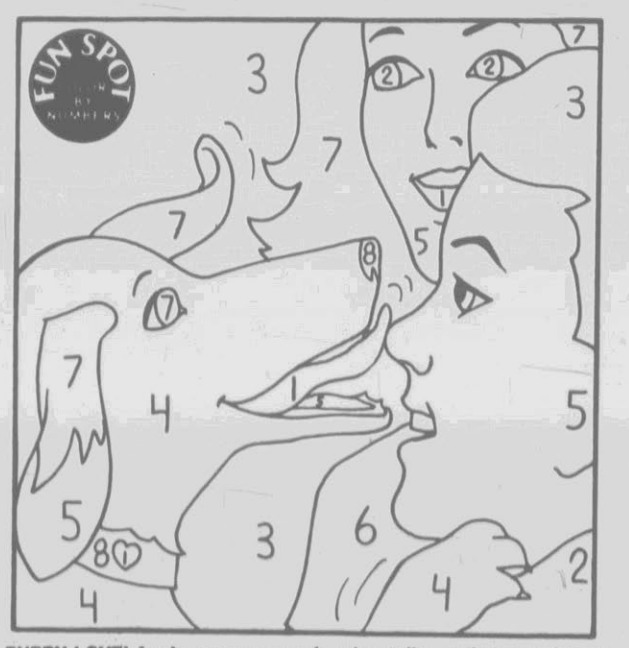

Here's how: Let it be known that letters of the word EVENT stand for 17128 in that order. And that each of the digits zero through nine appears at least once in the problem.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

DIRECTOR

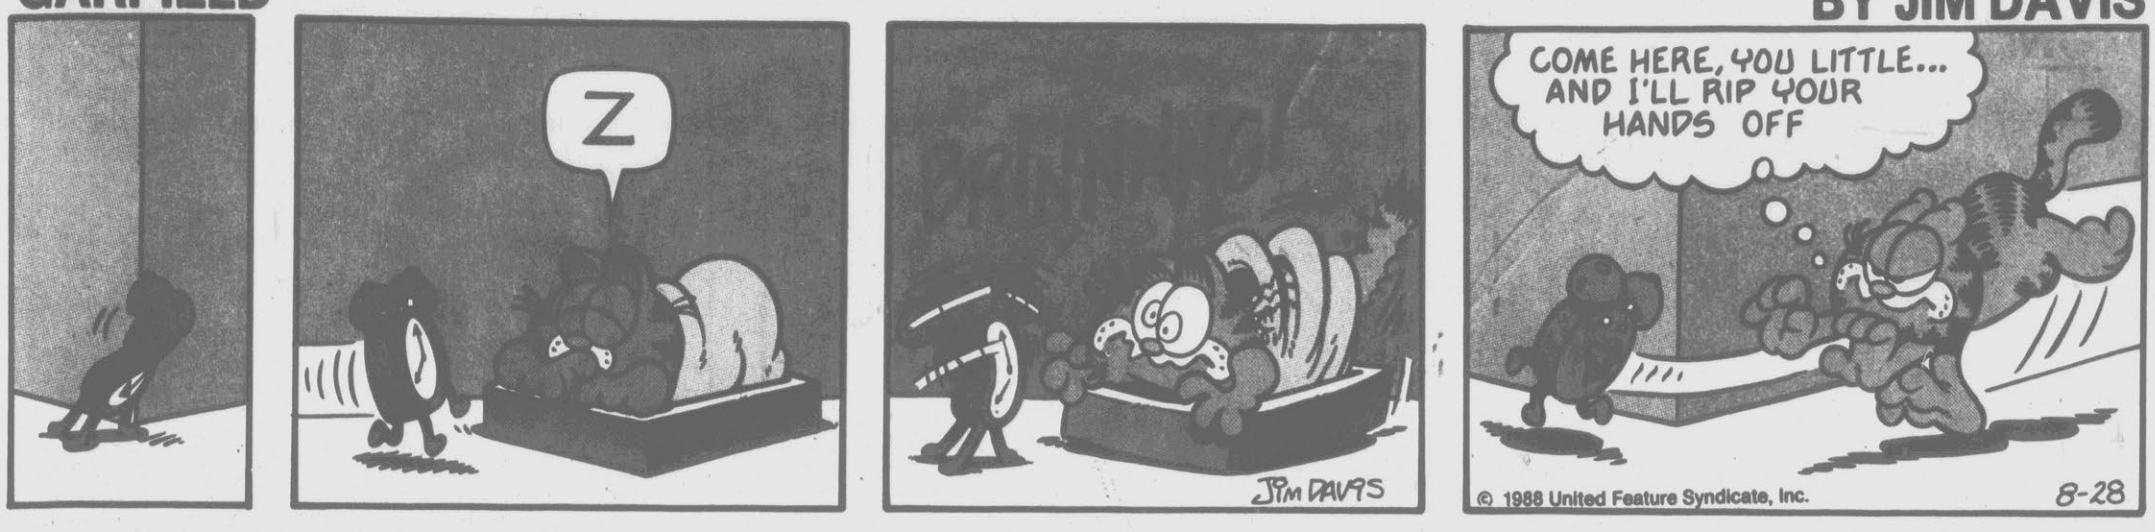

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible answers: The, cord.
