Air Show Crash Kills 45, Injures 500

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer
RAMSTEIN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany today suspended military air shows and called on NATO to abandon such stunt flying spectacles after three Italian fighter jets collided and one slammed into a crowd in a fireball, killing at least 45 people.

to be the world's worst air show tragedy involving spectators. Many of the dead were children.

Defense Minister Rupert Scholz quickly canceled a military air demonstration show scheduled for next month, and today announced that Bonn officials and their NATO allies were suspending any further military air shows in West Germany.

More than 300,000 people, most of them Americans and West Germans, were watching as the Italian air force team's 10 jets, flying about 180 feet off the ground, intersected over the field from three directions.

Two planes plunged to the ground and a third careened in flames into the crowd, setting off an inferno more than 100 feet high and 100 feet wide. Terrified spectators ran for their lives as the flames scorched scores of people and destroyed buses, trucks and cars.

"Some were missing skin on their arms," said DeeDee Arrington Duke, a reporter for the unofficial U.S. military newspaper Stars and Stripes. "A lot had black burns."

She said that after the crash "people started crying and screaming. The ones who were stopped were hugging each other and crying like they were saying 'What are we going to do?' The ones who were running were screaming."

AFN, the U.S. military radio network, today quoted American officials as saying at least 46 people were killed — including the pilots of the three Italian planes — and 500 injured at the base 60 miles southwest of Frankfurt.

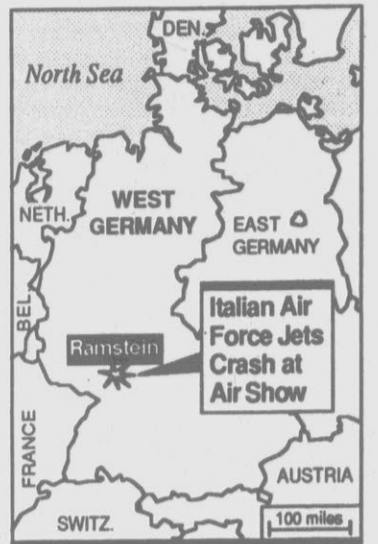

Authorities issued no list of dead or injured and said identification of victims would be a lengthy process because many people were badly burned. The nationalities of the dead were not known.

"They've been working throughout the night to identify the bodies. Then the next of kin must be notified," said Ramstein spokesman Sgt. Eddie Lee. He said he did not know when a casualty list would be available.

Rudolf Tartter, head of the local West German government district that includes Ramstein, said 45 people were killed. There was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy.

Schools Off On 'Well-Oiled' Basis

School bells rang across Pitt County this morning as the Pitt County schools began the 1988-89 year. The first day ran like a "well-oiled machine," one official said.

"It almost sounds like we've been in school a month a more," Charles Johnson, principal of Chicod School, said. "It's run just like a well-oiled machine."

"It's almost like we just closed school yesterday and opened back up today," Beth Ward, principal of G.R. Whitfield School, said.

"I've just gotten back in the office from walking past all the classrooms. It went very, very smoothly. We're getting into our new buildings this morning for the first time," she said.

The new buildings house the seventh and eighth grade students.

"We sent post cards out on Wednesday with the room numbers on them," Ms. Ward said. "The majority of them got off the bus with those post cards."

"I think we've had an excellent enrollment for the first day of school," Glenn Strickland, principal of Eastern Elementary, said. "All the teachers and aides were prepared. All the students are in the classes."

"The school climate for the opening was excellent," Richard Cutler, principal of Farmville Middle School, said. "The teachers were well prepared, and students came in enthusiastic and ready to learn."

"We're short a few students probably due to the tobacco," he said. "Overall, it's gone extremely smooth. Those that didn't show up, we'll be checking up on."

Ayden Middle School also got off to a good start, Norwood Randolph, principal, said. "Everyone is assigned to a class except those who are just now registering."

The school was projecting about 40 unregistered students, he said. "All the reports are not in at this stage, but we're looking pretty good right now."

At the high-school level, the first day went just as well, Josh Potter, principal of North Pitt, said. "It went very smoothly with just the number routine things" such as a late bus and new students who needed schedules.

Smooth school openings followed the smooth bus operations this morning.

Rodney Bullock, director the schools' Transportation Department said the buses got off to a good start.

But, there was some bus vandalism over the weekend, he said. A bus was painted in the Ayden-Grifton area, and windows were broken out of buses at Wintergreen Elementary.

"Otherwise, things were very smoothly," Bullock said.

Twisters Spawned By Storm Chris Leave $1 Million Trail Of Damage

By The Associated Press

The remnants of Tropical Storm Chris brought some much needed rain to the parched North Carolina Piedmont today, but not before it spawned several twisters that caused property damage in excess of $1 million, state officials said.

No deaths related to the storm were reported in North Carolina, officials said.

In Charlotte, officials said high winds apparently ripped off part of the facade of the Adams Mark Hotel, prompting the evacuation of 35 rooms. Frank Klare, general manager, said the visitors were moved to rooms in the south tower of the hotel as a precaution after part of the stucco facade fell from the 16th and 17th floors. But he said there was no sign of interior damage to the hotel.

Several hundred households were without electricity this morning after high winds and rain toppled some trees and utility poles. Wayne Ennis of Carolina Power & Light Co. said about 2,000 people lost power in an area north of Oxford to the Virginia state line. Power outages were also reported in Roxboro, Dunn, Maxton, Rockingham, Southern Pines, Sanford, Troy, Pittsboro, Asheboro and Siler City.

The storm was downgraded to a tropical depression a few hours after it moved over land and began to weaken Sunday afternoon, but forecasters at the National Weather Service in Raleigh said some sections of the Tar Heel state would receive about 3-5 inches of rain from the storm.

"I think it will certainly help in some respects," Larry Lee, a meteorologist with the weather service said today. "But it's much too late to help crops. In terms of areas with groundwater and reservoir problems, I think this storm will help."

At 7 a.m., the center of the storm was over south central Virginia, about 30 miles south of Roanoke, and was moving toward the north and northeast at 20 miles an hour, the National Weather Service reported.

Parts of Charlotte reported up to 3.5 inches of rain late Sunday evening with more than 1 inch falling at

Carrier, Freighter Collide In Harbor

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The aircraft carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower struck an anchored freighter this morning when it entered Hampton Roads harbor on its return from a six-month deployment in the Mediterranean Sea, the Navy and witnesses said.

"The Eisenhower may have received some superficial damage, but the extent is unknown at this time," said Chief Petty Officer Joseph C. Mowery, a spokesman for the U.S. Atlantic Fleet Command.

"We have no reports of any injury or any pollution," said Chief Petty Officer A. Woods.

The collision with the Spanish collier occurred at 8:22 a.m. and the Eisenhower arrived at the Norfolk Naval Station at 9 a.m., Mowery said.

Joyce Parnell, a secretary at the Chamberlin Hotel which overlooks the passage into Hampton Roads from Chesapeake Bay, hotel, said the Eisenhower drifted into the other ship. She told WNIS radio that it was hooked on the tanker for about 20 minutes before tugs pushed them apart.

A spokesman for the Fifth Coast Guard District in Portsmouth said the Coast Guard was not called for assistance, nor had it received any reports of injuries within the port.

War On Drugs Opens

Drug sellers, pushers and users had better watch out — the Drug Stoppers are coming to Pitt County.

Pitt County schools have teamed up with municipalities "to send a message that we simply will not tolerate the use, sale or possession of illegal drugs by students on our school campuses," said George Williams, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education.

Williams and school personnel announced the establishment of the Drug Stoppers program with the mayors and law enforcement agencies of the county municipalities in a news conference this morning.

"This program is similar to and will be coordinated with Crime Stoppers," Williams said. "Through the financial support of the mayors and municipalities, posters have been printed and will be strategically placed in each school and in various areas in each community."

"Anyone with information related to the possession, sale or use of illegal drugs may call the Drug Stoppers number and anonymously submit this information," he said. Additionally, law enforcement officers will provide programs in the schools to increase awareness and provide information on the identification of drugs.

Sgt. Doug Jackson of the Crime Stoppers program said Drug Stoppers will work the same way. Drug Competition within the health-service industry is one of the biggest reasons hospitals have turned to marketing, said Beth Nelson, marketing director at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

And one of the most competitive areas is that of staff recruitment. Shortages of registered nurses and medical technologists have reached drastic proportions in areas throughout the county.

In order to try to fill PCMH's staffing needs on both an immediate and long-term basis, Mrs. Nelson said the hospital's marketing department is also involved in staff recruitment.

recruit staff is the placement of billboards advertising the hospital's need for nurses. The billboards display a phone number to call for more information.

"We've got eight billboards in Raleigh and three placed in Greenville," Mrs. Nelson said.

Meanwhile, the marketing department has helped develop a glossy, color brochure describing career opportunities in nursing and allied health professions at PCMH.

"We've also developed a fairly expensive 'rap' tape which airs on a couple of the stations that high school kids listen to," she said.

"But rather than air it with our name on it, we've offered it to all the hospitals in eastern North Carolina and told them 'here, have that. Use it in your own community,'" Mrs. Nelson said.

"Our goal with this is not to encourage young people" to go into health professions and come to work at PCMH. Our goal is to encourage them to think about health professions," she said. "Hopefully they'll go into health professions and go to work somewhere in the region."

Other hospitals in eastern North Carolina also feel the pinch caused by the nursing shortage, and some wonder if marketing efforts by PCMH and its proposed expansion won't make the situation worse.

George Brandt, administrator of Martin General Hospital in Williamston, said an expansion at PCMH would make it difficult for Martin General to retain medical personnel.

He said the expansion might require 600 new staff members at PCMH.

In The Area

Thefts Reported

Investigators said five thefts were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said a radar detector and 25 cassette tapes were taken from a car parked at 207 S. Elm St. in an incident reported at 3:20 p.m. Saturday, while Officer T.E. Nevelle said a wallet containing $73 in cash was taken from McDonald's restaurant on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 10:29 p.m.

Officer R.L. Vandiford said a Greenville School of Commerce sign was taken from the intersection of Fourth and Sycamore Streets in an incident reported at 8:01 a.m. Sunday, and a bicycle was taken from 310 E. 13th St. in an incident reported at 12:18 p.m., while Officer P.W. Worthington said a motorized bicycle was taken from an alley behind Chico's restaurant at the intersection of Cotanche Street and Reade Circle in an incident reported at 8:04 p.m.

Bright Arrested

Johnny Ray Bright, 39, of Route 1, Ayden, was arrested Saturday by Greenville police on drug and theft related charges in connection with a 1:26 p.m. incident at Belk's at Carolina East Mall.

Officer L.C. Overby said Bright was charged with larceny and possession of stolen property in connection with the theft of $145 worth of jewelry from Belk's.

Bright was also charged with a second count of possession of stolen property when police found him with five shirts from Sears Roebuck & Co., and with possession of heroin after a small amount of cocaine was found in his possession, Overby said.

Suspect Sought

Greenville police are looking for Johnny Ray Barnhill, 27, of 1106B Washington St. today, armed with warrants charging him with assault on a law enforcement officer with a firearm and larceny of a firearm.

Capt. Nelson Staton said Officer L.E. White investigating a complaint, went to the parking lot at the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive about 7 p.m. Sunday and tried to arrest Barnhill on a worthless check charge.

A struggle developed. Staton said Barnhill took White's .38 caliber service revolver, then held the officer at bay with the pistol until he could escape.

Orientation Dates

Our Redeemer Lutheran Church has scheduled orientation dates for children pre-registered for the 1988-89 school year at the Lutheran Church Nursery School, 1801 S. Elm St.

The 4-year old class will meet from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Wednesday. Those enrolled in the 3-year old class will meet from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Thursday. Parents can stay the day with the children.

Services Nightly

FALKLAND — Consecration and dedication services are at 8 p.m. daily through Friday at Friendship Holiness Church.

Deacon James Foreman is charge; special singing nightly.

Vaccination Clinics

Rabies vaccination clinics will be offered from 8 a.m. to noon Saturday in all Pitt County veterinarians' offices.

The county's veterinarians are cooperating with the Pitt County Health Department to offer this service. State law requires that all dogs and cats four months or older be vaccinated against rabies, Dr. Tim Monroe, county health director, said. The fee is $5 per cat or dog vaccinated.

Watchman Found Dead At Warehouse

An autopsy was performed this morning on the body of Wilbur Lee Stocks, 72, of Route 1, Winterville, who was found dead Sunday morning at Keel's Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue.

Greenville police Detective J.E. Harris said Stocks, a night watchman at the warehouse, was found in the office area about 8:06 a.m. by his son, who went to check on Stocks after telephone calls went unanswered.

Harris said Stocks suffered "apparent wounds to the head." Other investigators said they were unsure whether Stocks had been beaten, shot or both.

Stocks was last seen alive about 1 p.m. Saturday when he reported to work. Capt. R.M. Nichols said officers estimated that Stocks had been dead since late Saturday afternoon or early Saturday night.

Carl Averette, co-owner of the warehouse, said Stocks, a retired farmer, had been night watchman at Keel's for four years. Prior to that, Averette said, Stocks had been a night watchman for a tobacco warehouse in Farmville.

Stocks had a gun, Averette said, which he usually kept in the office.

"He did not carry it around with him."

Greenville police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation are investigating the death.

New Home Sales Decline in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes plunged 4.7 percent in July from the month before, the steepest drop since December, the government said today.

Rising mortgage interest rates apparently discouraged buyers.

Sales of new single-family homes fell to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 686,000 units last month, following a sharp 6.7 percent increase in June, according to a joint report of the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development.

The July decline was the biggest monthly drop since a 6.2 percent fall in December.

Economists attributed the sharp June increase to attempts by buyers to close deals before interest rates went higher. Analysts had expected the decline in July and anticipate further dampening this month. Fixed-rate mortgages have climbed to 10.67 percent, up from 10.39 percent at the end of June.

The price of new homes was up sharply in July even though sales fell. The median price of a new home rose to $123,500, 5.6 percent higher than the June median price of $117,000, meaning half the homes sold in that month cost more and half less.

The average price of a home was up as well, climbing 7.1 percent to $146,000.

He said a brochure has been circulated statewide containing professional and biographical information about doctors available through the service. The center is also advertised in state medical journals and discussed at state medical meetings.

Stokes said the center has paid big dividends.

During fiscal year 1987-88, the hospital invested $198,000 in the center, and fielded 30,000 calls, generating $7.6 million in patient revenue (gross receipts for hospitalization or other services given as a direct result of calls).

"That is the major thrust of our marketing effort," Stokes said. "We are focused on the audience that is important to us."

Liz McRoberts, speaking for Wake Medical Center in Raleigh, said Wake advertises in local classifieds and in select editions of regional and national publications to recruit staff.

She said about 40 percent of Wake Medical's advertising concentrates on Wake County, while 35 percent targets the rest of the state. She said 10 percent of recruitment advertising targets the Southeast, while 15 percent is directed at a national audience.

PCMH Expansion Causes Concern In Area

"That's a lot of people to try and generate in eastern North Carolina," he commented.

According to Brandt, PCMH has done an inadequate job of proving a need for the extra tertiary care beds.

"Any other primary-care hospital would have to show a need for more primary-care beds before it could expand," he said. "But because PCMH is a teaching hospital and a research hospital, it can sort of circumvent normal procedure and get approval for expansion another way.

"But there's no guarantee the extra beds would not then be used for primary care," he said. "It's a great situation for Pitt (County) taxpayers, but the problem is that they cannot identify with problems in other community hospitals.

"What if Pitt expands, then Pitt County continues to grow. Will they expand again in five years to handle more primary care patients? That's a concern of Martin General," he said.

But Brandt said Martin General has had no drop in business that could be attributed directly to the growth of PCMH, and said an expansion would not take patients away from Martin General.

Allison McDuffy of Lenoir Memorial Hospital, said although Lenoir Memorial has been successful in its public-relations activities, it's been hard to compete with PCMH.

"When you have a medical center that is within a short distance of a community ... you have to some extent a migration of patients to the larger medical center," she said.

"I think all of the community hospitals would say the same thing," she said. "Many of the hospitals have to fight the 'bigger is better' image."

She said at its April 25 meeting, the Lenoir hospital board declined to endorse the PCMH expansion because it felt eastern North Carolina hospitals have enough beds, and because the board was concerned that 140 more beds would "have a negative effect on Lenoir Memorial's effort to recruit and retain nurses."

She said Lenoir Memorial patients are referred to PCMH for complicated procedures such as open heart surgery, neurosurgery and neonatal care for extremely small babies.

Linda Stauch, public relations director for Craven Regional Medical Center in New Bern, said Craven Regional did provide a letter of endorsement for PCMH expansion and said the Greenville hospital definitely needs the extra beds. But, she said, the New Bern hospital has some concerns.

"With the expansion, we hope that it won't draw nursing staff from our area. That would be our major concern," she said.

North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill has scored success in marketing to one specific target group — physicians.

John Stokes, director of institutional relations at N.C. Memorial, said his hospital set up the Carolina Consultation Center, a phone bank for the state's physicians. The hospital guarantees that doctors who call there will speak to a specialist within two minutes.

Doing Fewer Things Well ...

EDEN (AP) — Concentrating on doing fewer things well may be the answer for rural hospitals struggling to maintain their niche across North Carolina, health officials say.

"One thing they are finding is that they can offer a higher level of personal care," said Thomas Howerton, director of the North Carolina Hospital Foundation, which advises rural hospitals. "Homefolk are taking care of home folk. They can provide that tender, loving care because they know the people they are dealing with."

Annie Penn Hospital in Reidsville, with 152 beds, and Morehead Hospital in Eden, with 133 beds, have acted on that theory, developing maternity programs that cater to the needs of expectant parents, officials say.

Morehead also gives away free infant car seats. Annie Penn offers skilled at-home nursing care.

Both contract with other, smaller hospitals to purchase supplies in bulk at reduced cost.

Still, occupancy rates are dropping at smaller hospitals — despite the driving distance, frequently higher room rates and less individual attention associated with larger institutions.

When it comes to medical treatment, many people equate bigger with better, said Terry Linn, a hospital management consultant for Ernst and Whinney in Charlotte.

"Patients lack confidence in local capabilities," Ms.

Linn said. "People go to the hospital of their choice, and this is an increasing trend that is developing into a significant problem."

"We don't do brain surgery here," said Robert Enders, president of Morehead Hospital. "When it comes to primary care, there's no need to drive 45 minutes to deliver a baby. We can do that here, and we do a good job of it."

John Currin, administrator of 139-bed Memorial Hospital in Burlington, agreed.

"If we don't do a good job, people will vote with their feet and leave," he said.

However, Ms. Linn said rural hospitals face three serious threats to survival:

— A reduction in the number of patients treated, creating serious cash-flow troubles for hospitals with small financial margins.

— Difficulty in finding and retaining medical and professional staff. Smaller hospitals, particularly struggling institutions, usually offer less attractive benefit packages.

— Less Medicare reimbursement from the federal government, which pays less for care at what it classifies as "rural hospitals."

Hospitals with fewer than 200 beds are reimbursed by Medicare an average of $500 less per patient than larger hospitals in urban areas, said Tom Gillespie, vice president for finance at Morehead.

Gang Warfare Leaves 13 Dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Weekend shootings that claimed 13 lives forced police to deploy extra officers in one area and caution against "unrealistic expectations" today at a second summit aimed at ending gang warfare.

Ten of the deaths were gang-related, police said. Three other people were killed and one was critically wounded in three separate shootings late Sunday night, but police said the three deaths didn't appear to be gang-related.

At least 17 other people were wounded in the shootings, police said.

Piedmont Battered

Greensboro during the three hours ending at 4 a.m., the weather service said.

One tornado threw a tractor-trailer rig into a building at an Iredell County industrial park, officials said.

Al Warlick, a spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said damage was estimated as high as $1 million in Iredell County.

The most extensive damage was done to the Iredell Container Corp., where Bobby West watched the tornado hit the container company about 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

"It came up the hollow and made a right turn," West said, motioning toward the corrugated container manufacturing company. "It scared me to death."

Larry Lipard, who is in charge of maintenance for the company, also saw the tornado coming.

"I heard a wind blowing, and I thought it was a plane," Lipard said.

"Then I heard an explosion. I told my wife that a plane had crashed over there somewhere," he said, pointing in the direction of the plant.

Sections of the tin roof were as much as 1,000 yards from the building. Others pieces flew across Interstate 40, according to eyewitness accounts.

Ben Wilkerson, the owner, said the company's 35 employees will continue cleanup today. Lipard estimated work will be back to normal by Friday.

Several mobile homes also were damaged, said Marty Byers, a dispatcher at the Iredell County emergency communications center.

Twisters were also reported in Alexander, Catawba and Cumberland counties, but there were no reports of injuries, authorities said.

A tornado in Cumberland County damaged four houses in a subdivision and destroyed a produce stand off U.S. 401 north of Fayetteville, authorities said.

Steve Vann, 21, of Goldsboro said he was helping his uncle move into a home when a tornado ripped apart

Percy Currin's produce stand.

"I seen it hit the ground about 3:30 p.m. The wind got to whipping up pretty good, clouds moving in a tornado like motion, then it quit raining. All of a sudden, it came out of nowhere," Vann said. "It sounded just like somebody throwing a match on gasoline—Whoosh!"

In Catawba County, a dispatcher at the sheriff's department said that there were reports of power outages, shingles torn off the roof of a building near Newton and a trampoline blown across a road.

A tornado that was reported near Maiden uprooted trees, the National Weather Service said. A third funnel cloud was spotted near Clairmont.

Three funnel clouds were reported in Alexander County near Love Valley, but no damage was reported, said dispatcher Alan Van Story of the Alexander County Sheriff's Department.

Another funnel cloud was spotted near Hiddenite, but there were no reports of damage from that twister.

Tropical storm warnings were issued from Savannah, Ga., to Cape Hatteras, N.C., but were lifted Sunday after the storm moved ashore near Charleston, S.C., and began to lose strength.

The National Hurricane Center said tides one to three feet above already abnormally high tides could cause coastal flooding or beach erosion.

Operators of small craft were advised to stay in port from Cape Hatteras to Virginia Beach, Va.

The area most vulnerable to flooding and ocean overwash is N.C. 12 on Ocracoke Island from the ferry terminal to the pony stable, the weather service said. The rain and winds could also cause flooding from canals and creeks in mainland Hyde and Dare counties.

Schools, Towns Open War On Drugs

Stoppers even uses the same number as the Crime Stoppers program, and money will be paid for useful information.

"Supplementing these efforts, the municipalities have also agreed to underwrite the cost associated with the implementation of the DARE program — the Drug Abuse Resistance Education Program — for the fifth and sixth graders, and through a coordinated effort with the various councils of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, to help defray the cost of implementing project Find as recently approved by the Pitt County Board of Education to assist identified students and their parents in overcoming existing drug-related problems," Williams said.

The new programs, Drug Stoppers, DARE and Project Find, allow the county to focus upon three areas of concern this year — drug detection, drug prevention and drug intervention, Frank Hemingway, mayor of Bethel and spokesman for mayors, said.

The Drug Stoppers program will be a key element in drug detection, he said.

"It is our hope that through the use of these posters and the involvement of community leaders, we can spread the word that we are actively soliciting information as to the whereabouts of those who possess, use and sale illegal drugs."

The DARE program provides an avenue for drug prevention, Hemingway said. It is a 17-week course taught by trained law enforcement officers, and it recently received the endorsement of Attorney General Lacy Thornburg and state Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips. The Department of Public Instruction is soliciting school systems for pilot districts, he said.

"We want the children in Pitt County to be afforded the benefits of this program as early as possible, and that is why we have agreed to support the costs associated with Pitt County schools being one of those pilot sites," he said.

Sheriff's deputies and police officers approved for the program will participate in two to three weeks of training, Hemingway said. After completing the training, each officer will spend at least one day a week in each assigned school, teaching a 17-lesson plan curriculum to fifth- and sixth-grade students.

They also will visit other classes in the school, conduct faculty workshops and present programs to the school's PTA or PTO group.

To implement this program in Pitt County, each municipality has agreed to assign an individual to work with the local school personnel; to pay for officer training, lodging and meals, and for classroom materials needed for students and teachers.

Project FIND will be a tool for intervention, Hemingway said.

Approved by the Pitt County Board of Education in its Student Abuse Policy, Project FIND is a family and youth intervention program offered by the Pitt County Mental Health Department for students with drug-related problems.

"Both those students and their parents must attend structured workshop courses at the Mental Health Center for a period of eight weeks for the student to remain in school," Hemingway said. "The $100 fee for each student participating in the program with their parents will be reimbursed to the school system through the joint efforts of the various councils of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the local municipalities."

Total cost of implementing the programs are dependent upon the number of officers being trained for the DARE program and the number of students who participate in Project FIND, Eddie West, superintendent of the school system, said.

School's In ...

But On The First Day ... Ouch!

The back-to-school blues hit Pitt County hard today. Kids from 5 to 18 left their summertime behind for the confines of a classroom. And as the 1988-89 academic year began today, it was a day of opening doors that meant different things to different people.

For kids trying to survive their first day at school, there was anguish at the carefree world of play left behind — although they might not readily recognize the change.

For the parents of these first-timers, there was either sadness or relief. "John's growing up. He's not a baby anymore." Or: "No more child care bills." Or: "Now I can go back to work."

For teen-agers who spent the summer working for money to buy school clothes or secure those wheels or save for college, today meant the end of earning power. School and homework can put a substantial dent in work hours.

For teachers and principals today was the day all those carefully-devised plans for educating the county's children went into action. That meant those quiet, yet hectic days of brainstorming and pre-school paperwork have been traded in for frenzied days of quick problem-solving and more paperwork. Throw in a roomful of itchy youngsters who can't get baseball and Nickelodean and skateboards off their minds and ... well, that's self-explanatory.

But today might have been the most painful for those in-between students who are neither tender first-day-at-schoolers nor young adults working for their future. It just may have been most difficult for those kids who have experienced the end of summer vacation-hit the books routine before — those youngsters still gripped by childhood's persuasive spell. They knew full well what was being sacrificed today.

For those, the memory of bare feet on warm summer dirt was overpowering today. Their feet twitched nervously in new shoes. For those, the scrape of chalk on blackboards couldn't quite drown out the hum of bike tires on August pavement. The nervous anticipation of a classroom was no competition for the laughter-laden environment of the neighborhood pool.

It will be, but today — no way.

So while the doors of a new school year opened wide today — forever expanding the horizons of the youngsters who entered — kids of all ages felt the pain. The back-to-school blues don't last long, but on the first day ... ouch!

Up, Up, Up

Health Bills Keep Costs Rising

Health care costs are exploding once again and the result will be ever higher health insurance costs for employers and employees.

Jack Owen, an official with the America Hospital Association, told the N.C. Hospital Association that health care costs are out of control.

Many workers in the public and private sector are covered by health insurance with all, or most, of the cost covered by employers. Families can be brought under the plan for varying costs.

Employees will be affected by the increasing costs of health care and insurance because it is a part of their overall package of remuneration and benefits. With Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina estimating premium increases for 1988 averaging up to 40 percent, it is not difficult to gauge the alarm.

For a time cost containment programs seemed to be working but health field officials say a new medical inflation cycle is upon us, and it is nationwide in scope.

Hospitals blame Medicare, the federal system which covers persons over 65 and the disabled for its flat fee system of payment.

In general, however, the root cause is that everyone wants the best medical care possible when illness strikes. While that is understandable, the best can be expensive.

So far no one has been prepared to say that medical service will not be available in the most desperate cases, and likely that approach will never be taken. Economics, however, may force such decisions.

Individuals can help by not making unnecessary demands on the health care system. Hospitals must do all they can to operate more efficiently. To alleviate the problem cooperation of all involved, from patient to health care provider will be necessary.

The United States has the best health care available in the world and everyone's needs can be seen to without bankrupting the system. A universal understanding of the financing problem is needed, however.

To the editor:

Pride in Pitt County schools! That's the slogan for the 1988-89 school year for those working in the Pitt County school system.

However, how much pride can the leaders take in seemingly being more concerned with reducing hourly wages for bus drivers than with the overall security and welfare of Pitt County's children? How much pride can they take in hiring bus drivers (apparently of any caliber, as long as they meet the minimum-age requirement) who will earn less than Greenville's garbage collectors?

Pride is not prohibiting teacher assistants from driving buses due to wage technicalities. Teacher assistants are the very ones who know the children best and genuinely have their welfare at heart. We who are in education obviously are not in it for the money — teachers nor assistants. We are dedicated to molding better human beings and hope that the love, time and effort put into our jobs will make a difference in the youngsters whose lives we touch.

Parents should be alarmed at some of the prospective bus drivers present at the mandatory bus drivers' meeting Monday night. All "adult drivers" can not possibly know or care as much about the children as we who work with them daily. What Dr. West could be proud of would be to take a firm stand on mandatory drug testing before any hiring takes place.

Parents need to be fully informed on all aspects of this issue. They should be aware that we, the teacher assistant-bus drivers were recruited last school year for these jobs and were told at the time that we were the ideal choice of drivers — for some of the very reasons stated above. This year the powers that be have reversed themselves. Why?

Let's put politics aside and put the children's best interests first. Now that would be something to be proud of.

To the editor:

Members of the Jehovah's Witness religious sect believe that saluting and pledging allegiance to a flag amount to bowing down before a "graven image" forbidden by the Ten Commandments. During World War II, Witness parents refused to allow their children to participate in school flag programs. Enraged officials in 17 states made such programs compulsory, expelled children who refused to participate, and threatened to send them to reform school and their parents to jail.

At first, the Supreme Court acquiesced in this affront to religious liberty. In the 1943 Barnette case, however, the Justices resoundingly rejected compulsory flag-saluting. "If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation," Justice Robert H. Jackson eloquently and forcefully asserted, "it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion or other matters of opinion or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein." Such compulsory programs might be acceptable in a totalitarian society, but not in ours.

George Bush, "General" Quayle and other politicians who have condemned Michael Dukakis for his opposition to compulsory flag programs may simply be unaware of this important episode in our history as a free nation. Or they hope that the voters are ignorant of that history and will confuse Governor Dukakis' commitment to religious liberty with a lack of patriotism. On either count, they should be ashamed of themselves.

No Context, No Credibility

'The subject is the media's coverage of Quayle, the 41-year-old Indiana senator picked by Republican presidential candidate George Bush to be his running mate.'

LOS ANGELES — At ABC News, the switchboard lights up every time the network airs a Dan Quayle story.

At the Los Angeles Times, the calls and letters come in torrents — 429 letters to the editor by Friday morning. "He's not up there with Ollie (North), but it's a lot of letters," said letters editor Mary Cox.

Wrote Washington Post columnist Haynes Johnson this week: "Not since Spiro T. Agnew's attacks on the press ... 18 years ago have I received such an outpouring of hostile, threatening, obscene mail."

The subject is the media's coverage of Quayle, the 41-year-old Indiana senator picked by Republican presidential candidate George Bush to be his running mate. Since his selection, Quayle has become the subject of a clamorous national character hunt. An army of reporters has deployed in Indiana and elsewhere to sift through his record, interview his high school golf partners and videotape him taking out the garbage.

In the process, the press has become part of the story.

"Who appointed these 'holier-than-thou' media moguls the voice of our national conscience?" Edward Senesi of Huntington Beach, Calif., asked the Los Angeles Times in a letter.

"I am sure the American people are not and will not be misled by the ... media and their obvious one-sided" ed" news judgments, wrote John Powell of Los Angeles.

The Quayle controversy — like the furor surrounding coverage of Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro in 1984 — reflects not so much a growing arrogance by the media as it does the decline of political parties, the recognition that the public picks presidents on character rather than issues, and the proliferation of media power into more hands, not fewer.

"I think the press is doing what the vice president and his staff failed to do," said Howard Simons, curator of the Nieman Foundation at Harvard. "Turn the guy upside down and shake him and see what's in his pockets."

One item that fell out, say the critics, was Quayle's service in the National Guard, the subject that dominated presidential campaign coverage for more than a week.

Quayle has tried to depict the scrutiny as an attack on the reputation of the Guard itself. But even some conservative critics of the press dismiss that as a political evasion.

The issue is not the Guard, journalists such as New York Times political editor Adam Clymer argue. It is a question of character: What does it mean that a man who advances himself as an outspoken supporter of the military and a supporter of the Vietnam war deliberately avoided going to Vietnam?

Maybe so, replies conservative commentator Patrick Buchanan, but the press fixated on the National Guard issue too long.

"We don't know anything more than we knew about Wednesday a week ago, yet this story has been ... repeated and repeated," Buchanan said Tuesday on ABC's "Nightline."

Many journalists agree. "I don't know why we are still bothering with the question of influence," said Baltimore Evening Sun columnist Jack Germond. "We knew within two days that he called a friend on his father's newspaper, who in turn called another Guard general."

If the Guard issue dragged on too long, some journalists blame the press.

"We have allowed our presentation to make it look like a very narrow issue because we have failed to give it sufficient context," argued Bill Kovach, editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

"The fact is he used influence to get in the Guard, or tried to, at a time when almost no blacks or Hispanics could get into the Guard, and a disproportionate number of minorities were dying because they didn't have the help Dan Quayle had to avoid it," Kovach said. "And very few news organizations have dealt with it on that basis."

"The Pulliam family (Quayle is a grandson) is a very powerful presence (in Indiana), and they needn't do anything active to exert influence," added Dennis Britton, deputy managing editor of the Los Angeles Times. "They have influence by their very existence ... and the media didn't adequately explain that to readers."

The story that has attracted more press criticism than any other concerns sometime Playboy model and former Washington lobbyist Paula Parkinson.

Eight years ago, Quayle attended a weekend golf retreat where Parkinson was present. She was later revealed to be having an affair with another congressman, though no proof was ever documented that she had any involvement with Quayle.

Last week, Playboy fished out some old pictures of Parkinson, called her for a new quote, and let it be known that next month's issue would contain the charge that Quayle propositioned her.

CBS News led its broadcast that night with the story. ABC and NBC mentioned it at the end of longer stories on Quayle, which were near but not at the top of their newscasts.

Commentator Buchanan, who has served as a White House aide in the Reagan and Nixon administrations, called the prominent play "mildly revolting."

But Bob Schieffer, the CBS correspondent who anchored that broadcast, said that while "you can question whether this woman is a credible source," CBS had an audio tape, which it did not broadcast, of Parkinson's 1981 interview with the FBI, and it corroborated her story.

Again, said Atlanta editor Kovach, however, the problem is the press failed to provide context: "The key question is a member of Congress who is considering legislation agreeing to go on a golfing weekend in Florida paid for by the lobbyists, at which one member of Congress is sleeping with a lobbyist."

In the press' coverage of Quayle symptomatic of a liberal ideology? Even senior Bush operatives generally say no.

"I do not sense any great ... liberal conspiracy of the press trying to constantly hack up Republicans," a Bush campaign official said recently. "I do think more reporters are liberal than not, but ... if Dukakis screws up he is going to get nailed."

Just What Has Quayle Revealed Besides More Questions?

WASHINGTON — Not since Spiro T. Agnew's attacks on the press as "nattering nabobs of negativism" 18 years ago have I received such an outpouring of hostile, threatening, obscene mail. As usual, much of it is anonymous and nearly all of it sounds a familiar message: that those of us in the "national media" are hopelessly biased, liberals if not communists, hypocrites, soft on defense, un-American and determined to destroy a real patriot, Sen. Dan Quayle.

There's also the old refrain: Who elected you? What gives you the right to sit in judgment? Where did you serve, buddy?

The tenor and volume of the protests are not surprising, nor is the viciousness of it. The Quayle case has torn open old wounds barely healed from the Vietnam era, the press in a pack always presents a large and often deserved target, and the controversy is being fueled by political motivations.

Only a fool could fail to see that making the press the collective fall guy diverts attention from troubling questions about Quayle. So batten down, fellow scribblers and broadcasters. It's going to be a long and ugly campaign.

That is not the point and a matter of no consequence anyway. The point is not what this episode tells us about the performance of the press. It is what we have learned about Dan Quayle.

Two questions count, and I don't mean questions about National Guard service or lobbyist Paula Parkinson. They involve character and qualifications. To date, Quayle has not answered either satisfactorily. He has only raised more questions about each.

From the moment he stepped before reporters in New Orleans, Quayle demonstrated that he was not prepared to handle obvious questions that would be asked. They were about his Vietnam-era service, logical since he has been a strong defender of the war, enthusiastic flag-waver and proponent of more defense spending; his financial background and holdings, natural given his family's great wealth and political prominence in Indiana; his relationship, if any, with Parkinson, a subject certain to arise since it had already destroyed one Republican congressional career years ago.

He brushed them all aside dismissively and gave the impression that none needed to be addressed. They had already been answered, "gone into," somewhere, somehow.

Since then, Quayle and not the press has disclosed the most damaging information about him.

First, he pleaded lapse of memory about the circumstances surrounding his admission to the National Guard in 1969, shortly before his graduation from college. It was nearly 20 years ago; how could you remember? and so forth. Later, it turned out he had already passed his pre-induction draft physical and was subject to active-duty call only days before entering the Guard — a curious failure of memory for anyone who faced the prospect of being drafted and sent into combat. No one in that situation is ever likely to forget it. I speak from experience, and my war was Korea, long before Vietnam.

Then he began volunteering other information in a round of network television interviews. Yes, "calls had been made" on his behalf. Yes, he had let it be known that he was "very interested" in getting into the Guard. Thus, he raised more questions, and those questions begat more questions.

Back home in Indiana, in the staged street-scene news conference where the reporters played gladiators facing townspeople as lions, he provided a much different answer: "I do — I do — I do — I do what any normal person would do at that age, you call home. You call home to mother and father and say, 'I'd like to get in the National Guard.' Mr. Phillippi's a good friend of my father. And there's — I don't think there's anything wrong with asking your mother or father or friends for advice."

So he did seek favors, and proud of it. Since then, he has denied that he profited from favoritism or influence exerted on his behalf. No strings were pulled, he insists — though transparently they were.

All these raise questions about Quayle's character, his believability, his standards, his values. Reports of his poor scholastic performance and his, at best, insubstantial congressional record raise questions about his qualifications to be the proverbial "heartbeat away."

George Will is right. Only Quayle can resolve these questions, and he won't do so by set speeches before veterans' and National Guard groups or staged street news conferences.

Challenge

DURHAM (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson issued a challenge "to be bigger and to be better" to Duke University, where enrolling black students and hiring black faculty has been emphasized during the past year.

"Does your student and faculty ratio match your basketball team ratio?" asked Jackson, whose orientation talk for new students at the university was sponsored by the Black Student Alliance and Duke University Union.

"If I can aspire to be president of the United States of America, you can aspire to be president of Duke University," Jackson said Sunday night.

A sweltering crowd of 7,000 waited two hours without air conditioning in Duke University's Cameron Indoor Stadium for classic Jackson one-liners and alliteration.

Huge Raise

RALEIGH (AP) — In 2½ years, the salary of an employee in the North Carolina Office of Administrative Hearings has increased by 88 percent — a boost some state officials say is highly unusual.

The employee, Mary "Molly" Mason, received four promotions from January 1986 to July 1988, raising her annual salary from $19,800 to $37,176. During that period, the average state salary rose 19 percent, officials said.

"It's shocking," Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake and chairwoman of the House State Personnel Committee, said of Ms. Mason's increase. "I'm speechless. That will not be good for the morale of the other state employees."

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt and chair-man of the Senate's State Personnel Committee, said he intends to question OAH Director Bob Melott about the "extraordinary circumstances" that would have resulted in such pay boosts.

Taft called the promotions "extremely unusual" but "not necessarily inappropriate."

INDIAN TRAIL, N.C. (AP) — A fire has destroyed much of the Indian Trail Shopping Center, forcing the temporary closing of five of the center's six businesses.

"It's a suspicious fire and it's still under investigation," said Janet Hammonds, assistant coordinator of Union County's emergency management office.

She said the blaze apparently started Sunday morning in the front of a beauty shop, but she declined to reveal other details.

When firefighters arrived between 10:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. Sunday, flames were shooting through the roof of the New Image beauty shop, said Stallings Fire Chief Ed Deason.

State Studies Military-Style Camp For Young Offenders

By The Associated Press

Proponents of military-style "shock incarceration" say the proposed program will lessen prison overcrowding in North Carolina and instill values in youthful offenders.

"It's very much like a military situation. The only difference is we won't give them ammunition," David Guth, a spokesman for the N.C. Division of Prisons, said in an interview.

North Carolina's version of shock incarceration is called IMPACT — Intensive Motivational Program of Alternative Correctional Treatment. Under it, felony offenders ages 18-24 who face up to five years imprisonment for non-assaultive crimes are immersed in correctional basic training instead of prison.

"We have done a lot of the preliminaries. We looked at it. We liked it. The (General Assembly's) Select Committee on Prisons likes it. But we can't do it until we have funding," Guth said Sunday. "So the earliest funding could be available is July 1 of next year if it's included in next biennial budget."

"The military experience is that once you break down through absolute discipline and absolutely control their resistance to authority, then you can use that same response to authority to train," said Dwight Jarvis, manager of the Youth Services Command in the N.C. Division of Prisons and IMPACT's designer.

Jarvis hopes that 400 men — 100 per 90-day cycle — would enter the program in its first full year. Eventually, the program may be offered to women, as it is in a similar South Carolina program.

For its first site, North Carolina has chosen 150 acres at the medium- and minimum-security Cameron Morrison Youth Center near Hoffman in Richmond County.

The program will cost about $650,000 to start and about $480,000 annually to run, but proponents estimate it could save the state $5 million a year.

If, as expected, IMPACT is financed during the next session of the General Assembly, the program could be in operation by 1990, Jarvis says.

Then the Division of Prisons will screen offenders for candidates, who must volunteer for the program. The parole commission must agree to parole the candidates if they complete the program.

For 90 days, the offenders won't speak to a corrections officer without permission. They will march double time to meals and take them in silence. They will drill. They will exercise. They will put in 17-hour work days. They will endure daily inspections.

They will wear uniforms. Beards and mustaches will be shaved and hair shorn. They will take orders.

The 90-day training cycles will be divided into three 30-day phases.

The initial phase will offer few privileges and will emphasize physical work. By the third phase, offenders will do less labor as they work on high school equivalency certificates and parole contracts.

Shock incarceration is based on a program designed by the Army 20 years ago, when it noted a high failure rate among soldiers who had returned to civilian life after incarceration at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Five years ago, Georgia became the first state to start such a program.

Now, eight states have them, and three, including North Carolina, are considering them.

The IMPACT program is one of several alternatives to longtime incarceration the state hopes will relieve overcrowding as it continues an ambitious prison construction program. Between 1977 and 1987, the state has built 7,400 beds at a cost of $137 million and more building is planned.

Mountaineers Balk At Bear Sales Laws

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Gerald "Jinks" Parker just can't understand how he could be facing a $5,000 fine and five years in prison on charges of selling parts of the black bears he killed legally.

"I'm selling m'guns," said Parker, 37. "I'm selling m'dogs. I just can't afford it no more. ... This just don't make no sense."

Parker, whose ancestors were Cherokee Indians, lives on the Quallah Reservation at the edge of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

All animals in the park, including wild boar, birds and bears, are protected from hunting.

Parker and 34 others were arrested on federal charges of killing or selling black bear in North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia, culminating a three-year undercover investigation of poaching in the Appalachians.

Some of those arrested are charged with shooting bears in the Smoky Mountains Park. Some are charged with hunting outside of the annual six-week season. Still others, like Parker, were charged not with an illegal kill but violating a law that prohibits the sale of any part of a black bear, even one killed legally.

That puzzles Parker. "If I shoot a bear, should I just let it rot in the woods?" Parker asked. "Why can't I just sell it to feed my dogs, pay for gas?"

Parker and others with deep roots in the Appalachians have often found themselves at odds with those who protect wildlife over an act that is second nature to them: hunting.

Independent mountain folk often distrust central authority, especially when laws conflict with family and community traditions, said Curtis W. Wood, a history professor at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee.

"With some of them, I don't think you can talk of this as a general disregard" for the law, Wood said. "For some, it is honest disagreement."

Thomas L. Bennett, a special agent with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, rode with a federal marshal in the unsuccessful search for Parker, who surrendered the next day.

"It's a passion for these people," Bennett said. "It's a macho thing, too. Many of these guys like the thrill of killing something, anything. And, because their family did it on the land before them, it's their right, too."

The black bear, the smallest in the bear family, typically is 5 feet tall and weighs 200 pounds. Its head and feet make for startling trophies; its hide can be used as a rug or wall-hanging; claws can become part of a necklace.

Bear meat is a staple for many mountain residents and can bring a couple of dollars a pound. But in recent years, it is the bear's gall bladder that has proved the most lucrative enticement for killing the animal.

On the Oriental market, powdered bear bladder can bring $540 an ounce or more. The powder, diluted with liquor, is believed to make an aphrodisiac.

Bennett said that following last week's poacher roundup he has gotten calls from people who wanted to surrender rather than risk arrest.

"We'll never stop it completely," he said. "But we can put a dent in it."

More Waste Hits Shore

KURE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The Navy probably isn't responsible for the latest batch of medical trash that has washed ashore along North Carolina's beaches, state officials said.

Less than three weeks ago, beachgoers found empty blood vials, used syringes and other medical debris in several locations along the North Carolina coast. After news of the discoveries spread, the Navy claimed responsibility for tossing the items overboard from ships off the state's coast.

"It can be from anybody — there's just no way to identify it a lot of times," said Will Brothers of the state Division of Emergency Management. "This stuff is getting to be like air pollution."

Officials said they doubted the needles found Sunday belonged to the Navy, as they contained no Navy seal like much of the debris that washed up in early August.

The 3-inch-long needles, enclosed in plastic tubes bearing the brand name "Monojet," were found by a passerby and were scattered on sand near the Kure Beach pier — south of Wilmington near North Carolina's southernmost tip, said Dan Summers, director of Emergency Services for New Hanover County.

He described the needles as a type that, when fitted to a vacuum apparatus, were used to draw blood in hospitals and clinics. He did not know if the needles had been used, but insisted they posed no danger to anyone.

"With them being covered on each end, there's no health hazard," Summers said. "There will be no beach closings."

Yuppie-Type Freshmen Keep An Eye On Future

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

Yuppies with a growing responsibility toward the future? That's what administrators say North Carolina colleges and universities are now receiving as incoming freshmen.

"They really are yuppie-oriented," said Richard Cox, dean for residential life at Duke University, where he has worked for 20 years. "They make plans fairly early about what kind of house, what kind of furniture, what kind of car they want," he said. But "given the material sights they have, they have a considerable amount of sense of responsibility."

"At the same time, they're very competitive," Cox said. "They're very pre-professional-oriented. They think in terms of when I'm a doctor, when I'm the Indian chief. But they're not necessarily thinking that I'm going to be the CEO. They want the good life, but they're beginning to feel the needs of the rest of society and how they might contribute to that."

Both Cox and Carolyn Fulghum, assistant vice chancellor and director of residence life and housing at East Carolina University in Greenville, said they had noticed a change in students' attitudes over the past two or three years.

"The students now are more serious, they're more career-oriented," Ms. Fulghum said. "They basically are concerned about their future."

Some students are still interested in "making money in the MBA programs," she said. "But more of them are interested in the teaching programs. ... At this point in time, I don't think you can say students are going into teaching for money."

Much has been made of a conservative shift in students' political attitudes. Surveys taken at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill show that 49.2 percent of the students who entered UNC-CH in 1971 considered their views to be "liberal or far left," compared to 26.8 percent last fall. In this same time period, "middle of the road" grew from 38.3 percent to 49.8 percent, and "conservative and far right" from 12.5 percent to 23.3 percent.

But students have moved in another direction on some specific issues. The proportion of students supporting job equity for women has increased since 1971 from 91 percent to 96.2 percent. Since 1981, there has been an increase in support of: legalizing abortion (65.8 percent to 71 percent); establishing a national health care policy (40.3 percent to 50.4 percent); living together before marriage (30.2 percent to 43.6 percent); and busing to help achieve racial balance in the schools (42.3 percent to 51.7 percent).

On the other hand, there also has been a significant decrease in support of abolishing the death penalty and legalizing marijuana, the report said.

"These trends on specific issues call into question, perhaps, the validity and stability of the wholesale usage of such terms as 'liberal' and 'conservative'" the study said.

Students have shown their changing beliefs in their willingness to volunteer, Ms. Fulghum and Cox said.

Cox said he had also noticed more students volunteering — so many more that Duke is setting up a volunteer center. "We have a soup kitchen in Durham, and the students line up to work in it."

The campus service fraternity, along with a group for Christian athletes, helped students move in recently, he said.

But students also feel a sense of helplessness that they cannot change the world, said Ken Webb, dean of the general college at Appalachian State University in Boone. They concentrate on their career because they believe "the system is too big for them to make much difference," said Webb, who has worked with freshmen as an administrator since 1964.

Students are very willing to stand up for their individual rights, he said. "They have a different relationship with authority figures," Webb said. "Things I would never dream about going to the dean about, I see students about every day."

Ms. Fulghum said students now "feel free to come and discuss their concerns with the administration. They don't mind coming in and making suggestions about what they think is wrong."

Federal Judge Says School Funds Wrong

HAMILTON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A former nun who left her religious order to enlist in the civil rights movement won a seven-year legal battle when a judge ruled unconstitutional New Jersey's system of paying for public education.

Marilyn Morheuser, 64, said that at times during the fight, she imagined she knew how David felt trying to slay Goliath.

Administrative Law Judge Steven Lefelt concluded Thursday that the state's funding discriminates against poor urban districts and perpetuates wide budget disparities between wealthy and poor school districts.

"This case is about the failure of the state to provide an opportunity to develop children's potential," Ms. Morheuser said. "I think we all suffer tremendously when children are not given opportunity to develop their full potential."

Lefelt's ruling is one of a few in the country in which state education funding has been declared unconstitutional. It follows two decades of legal and legislative battles and could force the state to spend millions more each year to aid local schools. In the 1988-89 school year alone, the state will spend more than $3 billion.

Lefelt concluded that a child in an affluent district clearly enjoys broad advantages over one in a poor urban district.

"I believe this case comes down to whether this state desires to enhance the educational opportunity of students living in poor urban areas," he said.

"Suffice it to say that I opt for providing equal opportunity to all our children, no matter where they may live."

He endorsed a statewide school tax so all property owners pay the same rate, and letting the state make up the difference so all students are paid for equally. He called it the only way to control spending differences.

"Urban educators needed this victory to provide the opportunity for the urban children who are predominantly minority children," said Anthony Scardaville, superintendent of the Irvington Public School system, whose 9,000 enrollment is 82 percent black and 11 percent Hispanic. "Everybody should have the same — not good for the rich and mediocre for the poor."

The state had argued that pouring more money in poor districts was not a solution because their problems are mostly the result of bad management. It also argued that more state money would erode local control of schools.

John Samerjian, a spokesman for Gov. Thomas H. Kean, said the ruling is one step in a long process, but it would be mistaken to think it will bring a "massive infusion of funds" to poor districts.

Study Says

Second Marriage Comes Late

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An estimated 738,000 divorced women got married again last year, but a study suggests that remarriage will come late or never for many women who recently separated.

Half the women who separated in the early 1980s will remain single seven years later, and about 40 percent who were in their 30s when they divorced will never remarry, the study says.

For those 40 or older, about 70 percent will never return to the altar, the estimates say. And only 46 percent of black women who separated during that period are expected to remarry, compared with 76 percent for non-Hispanic white women.

The estimates imply long periods of single life and possible economic hardship for some women and their children, said researchers from the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

"For many of the children, it's the rest of their childhood years," said co-author Larry Bumpass. "For many of these women, it's for the rest of their lives."

Bumpass, a sociology professor, developed the projections with colleagues James Sweet and Teresa Castro. He spoke in a telephone interview before presenting the study Sunday in Atlanta at the annual meeting of the American Sociological Association.

"It's a very important study, and it's very well done," said Barbara Foley Wilson, a marriage trends researcher at the National Center for Health Statistics.

The projections assume that remarriage trends observed during the early 1980s will continue for 20 years. But remarriage rates have been declining, so the projections may turn out to overestimate remarriages, Bumpass said.

He also said the projections do not differentiate between women who seek to remarry and those who do not, nor do they count as remarried women who are simply living with a man.

The projections were developed from analyzing a 1985 federal survey that included 2,700 women. The analysis focused on women because information on marital histories is more accurate for women than men, Bumpass said.

The calculations assume that if a woman has not remarried within 20 years of the separation, she will never do so. Studies show only a relatively tiny proportion marry after that time.

Overall, 72 percent of women who separated in the early 1980s will remarry, the projections suggest.

That includes 89 percent of women who were younger than 25 when they separated. The percentage drops to 79 percent for ages 25 to 29, 59 percent for ages 30 to 39, and 31 percent for 40 and older.

The researchers decided that separation would be the best indicator of when a marriage ended because extraneous factors can delay divorces.

Bumpass attributed the trend to a "shrinking marriage market" as women age, created by a progressive decrease in supply of available older men plus a preference by men to marry younger women.

But Wilson said an age-related decline in remarriage rates also shows up for men.

Perhaps marriage becomes less attractive for older people who have already had a family and whose children provide companionship they might otherwise seek in a spouse, she said. Older women also may have to spend energy caring for elderly parents, she said.

Overall, 81 percent of women who had no children when they separated were expected to remarry. The rate dips to 73 percent for women who had one or two children, and 57 percent for those with at least three.

One reason is that women with more children tend to be older, researchers said. But when that was accounted for statistically, children still reduced the prospect of remarriage in the study, in agreement with past research.

"It's just harder to get out and date," Bumpass said. Children also present a potential mate with added costs and social responsibility, he said.

Women who were younger when they first married also tended to show higher projected rates of remarriage, ranging from 84 percent for women who were 14 to 17 at their first wedding to 51 percent for women who were 23 and older.

Wedding Vows Are Performed Sunday

AYDEN — Connie Lynn Smith of Charlotte became the bride of Franklin Westerly Eppley, also of Charlotte, in a wedding held at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Ayden Christian Church.

The Rev. James M. Daily conducted the double-ring ceremony. The bride's parents gave her in marriage.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William R. Smith of Ayden, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest D. Eppley of Boone.

The matron of honor was Tena S. Hardee, sister of the bride, of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Danielle Elks of Nashville, Tenn., Daniele Sullivan of Wilmington and Jo R. Dawes of Charlotte. Patty B. Richardson was an honorary bridesmaid. Jordan Lee Hardee, niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Christopher Eppley, nephew of the bridegroom, of Lewisville, was the ring bearer. Ushers were E. Luke Eppley of Lewisville and P. Brad Eppley of High Point, brothers of the bridegroom, and Charles R. Hardee of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bride.

Music selections included "The Wedding Song," "One Hand, One Heart," and "How Great Thou Art," the last sung by the congregation. Sue Branch was the organist and Julie Tucker was the vocal soloist.

MRS. EPPLEY

A reception followed the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church.

Both the bride and the bridegroom graduated from Pitt Community College. The bridegroom is employed by Leo Kirkman Residential Design in Charlotte; the bride by Applied Electronics in Charlotte.

After a wedding trip to the Florida Keys, the couple will live in Charlotte.

Where Is Right Place To Meet?

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a very nice man I met on a street corner. You probably won't believe this, but I was lost and this nice-looking, well-dressed man approached me and asked if he could help me. I told him my plight and he walked me to where I was going, and that's how we got acquainted.

When people ask how we met, I'm embarrassed to say I just met him on a street corner. It just doesn't sound right.

Abby, what if you meet a person in a restaurant? Would you call that a "pickup"? How about getting acquainted in a library? (That has a little higher-class ring to it.) Meeting someone in a bar sounds rather cheap, but some nice people go to bars alone and don't mind if someone strikes up a conversation with them.

I avoid eye contact with people I pass in a park, especially if they're walking slowly, or like they're just killing time.

I think you get the idea. What's OK and what isn't? — FRIENDLY, BUT CONFUSED

DEAR FRIENDLY: It's OK to be friendly, but never should a woman or man get into an automobile with a stranger, regardless of how "nice" he appears to be. It's OK to strike up a conversation with a stranger on a train or plane, in a library, a store, a bar or restaurant, but it's not OK to go anywhere (to his place or hers) that is so private that you can't say goodbye in case you've misjudged the stranger.

DEAR ABBY: I have read in your column that you don't like people to smoke in your home, so instead of having ashtrays in the house, you put them outside on the patio. My husband and I are non-smokers who feel the way you do.

We are military personnel, so we move frequently. My question: When we meet new friends, at what point do I say we prefer that people do not smoke in our house?

I don't know whether to say something at the time we issue the invitations, or wait until they arrive at our house. On first meeting people, I have no way of knowing whether they smoke or not. — NO SMOKERS IN VIRGINIA

DEAR NO SMOKERS: In recent years smoking has become less socially acceptable. Guests seldom light up without asking permission first, so that's the time to say, "Thank you for asking. We prefer that guests do not smoke in the house," — then suggest the porch or patio.

Action on Smoking and Health, a non-profit organization, sells small plastic "Thank You for Not Smoking" signs.

To order, send (check or money order) $3 for one sign or two for $5 to: ASH/SIGNS, 2013 H St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

I have several "Thank You for Not

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Smoking" signs in my home. They are neat, inoffensive and effective, and make lovely gifts for people who cannot tolerate smoke but are reluctant to mention it. Most smokers are considerate people who will appreciate this subtle message.

DEAR ABBY: I liked your answer to "56 and Still Learning" on how to measure success. I would like to offer still another description of success:

"A successful man is one who can lay a firm foundation with the bricks others have thrown at him." — SHERRI MELSBY

DEAR ABBY: The employees of a small retail business in Milwaukie, Ore., are sending you the yellowed, tattered Dear Abby letter that we have had taped to our cash register for at least 10 years.

We run a party and wedding supply store that carries invitations for weddings. It takes from 45 minutes to an hour to write up an order.

However, we are constantly having brides run through the door five minutes before closing time to "just look" through our catalogs — then leave an hour later to "think about it."

Also, we have customers showing up at our door just seconds after we have locked the door and put up the "closed" sign. They peer through the window, see other customers inside (who showed up five minutes before closing time), then start banging on the door demanding to be let in.

Please, Abby, run this letter again for all of us in the retail business. This article says it so well! — THE PARTY WORLD STAFF

DEAR STAFF: Knowing how many people will appreciate it, here it is:

DEAR READERS: There is also a flip side to this scenario: Equally annoying are the early birds trying to worm their way into the store before it's officially open. While shopkeepers busily work to get their merchandise displayed for the day's business, some yahoo rattles the door, pleading to be let in "a few minutes" early.

The employees inside, who have heard this song before, go about their business, avoiding eye contact with the impatient shoppers.

Wedding bells? Wedding bills! Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.99 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Eagle-Colbert Vows Solemnized Sunday

Judy Cox Colbert and Edward Lynn Eagle were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in a double-ring ceremony performed in Faith and Victory Church in Greenville.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. J.R. Puett of Hickory and the late B.D. Cox. The bridegroom's parents are Margaret Eagle of Hudson Falls, N.Y.

The Rev. John Zabawski conducted the ceremony. Music was provided by organist June Taylor and vocalists Paula Mills, Valine Greene, Robert Greene, Scott Dixon and Pam Dixon.

Paula Mills of Greenville was matron of honor. Honorary bridesmaids were Cathi Davis of Greenville and Teresa Patterson of Hickory, daughters of the bride, Patti Colbert of Raleigh, daughter-in-law of the bride, Julianne Eagle and Cindy Eagle of Greenville, daughters of the bridegroom, Karen Eagle of Virginia Beach, Va., daughter-in-law of the bridegroom, Zara Burns of Charlotte and Melodie Yancy of Hickory, sisters of the bride, and Kimberly Davis of Greenville.

Danny Eagle of Virginia Beach was best man for his father. Ushers were Grant Colbert of Raleigh, Mark Colbert and Robert Colbert of Hickory, all sons of the bride, and Tim Eagle of Greenville, son of the bridegroom.

Ring bearers were Shawn Patterson, Trey Colbert and Kyle Colbert, grandsons of the bride of Hickory and Raleigh.

The bride's gown was designed and made by the bridegroom's daughter-in-law, Karen Eagle of Virginia Beach. The tea-length pale pink tulle gown had a white tulle overlay. The bodice had miniature satin bows, a bateau neckline, a scoop back, bell sleeves and was covered with alencon beaded re-embroidered lace. She wore baby's breath and roses in her hair and carried a nosegay bouquet of pink sweetheart roses and white daisies.

The honor attendant wore a mint green tea-length gown styled with a chantilly lace bodice with iridescent. The skirt was of chiffon over taffeta. She carried sweetheart roses and daisies.

A poolside reception was given by the children of the couple at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Davis.

After a wedding trip to Hilton Head Island, S.C., the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is employed by Brody's of Greenville and the bridegroom is plant manager of Hexagon Honeycomb in Farmville.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Davis given by the bridal couple. The bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower and a dinner party was given by family and friends Friday evening.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly in very quiet late-summer trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial rose 10.31 points to 2,027.74 in the first half hour of the session.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 605 up, 288 down and 416 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 12.38 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Interest rates dropped a bit in the government bond market this morning, giving stock prices a lift. But analysts were reluctant to read much into the market's swings, given the slow pace of activity.

Friday was the quietest session of the year at the Big Board, and trading was expected to remain light through this week as the Labor Day holiday approaches next Monday.

In the economic news, the center of attention during the week is likely to be the government's monthly report on the employment situation, which isn't due out until Friday.

Gainers among the blue chips this morning included American Express, up 3/4 at 29; International Business Machines, up 3/4 at 113; General Electric, up 1/4 at 40, and RJR Nabisco, up 3/8 at 52.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .58 to 147.82. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .67 at 294.54.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.58 to 2,017.43. That left the market's best-known index with a gain of 1.43 points for the week.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 6 in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 725 up, 605 down and 601 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 89.24 million shares, down from 127.64 million in the previous session.

Five Die In Crash

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Two trains crashed head-on in a rail station in western Austria, killing at least five people and injuring 46 others, railroad officials and police said.

The accident occurred at 12:37 p.m. at Wolfurt, about three miles from the West German border.

Railroad Authority spokesman Walther Kollerits said the crash involved a train coming from Linz en route to West Germany and an express train bound for the resort city of Innsbruck from Lindau.

Police in Vorarlberg said five bodies had been recovered from the wreckage. Kollerits said the engines of both trains were entangled and that one car was smashed to three-quarters its length.

Kollerits identified one of the dead as a 67-year-old woman. Police said 18 of the 46 injured were seriously hurt and that about 20 were West-German citizens.

All the injured were aboard the train headed for Innsbruck, Kollerits said. He said there had been about 100 people on that train.

Kollerits said the cause of the crash was not known.

Track Fire

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — A fire caused $200,000 in damage to Concord Motor Speedway's three-story VIP, kitchen and office building.

The blaze broke out about 12:15 a.m. Sunday in the kitchen area of the speedway on U.S. 601 about five miles south of Concord.

No one was injured, but the fire destroyed the 60-seat, air-conditioned VIP area, a $25,000 telephone system, radio equipment and kitchen equipment.

Some 3,500 race fans had been at the track Saturday night for the Clincher 200, a late-model sportsman event that had been rained out a week earlier. Most of the people had left the track when the fire broke out, authorities said.

Boy Shot

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 3-year-old boy who was struck by stray bullets from a high-powered rifle as he slept may have been the victim of a drug-related shooting, police say.

Police charged Reginald Eugene Ray, 30, of Charlotte, with shooting into an unoccupied dwelling and assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury.

Travis Lloyd Cuthbertson was taken to Charlotte Memorial Hospital after the 5 a.m. Friday shooting and remained in the pediatric intensive care unit, a hospital spokeswoman said. He was struck in the chest and right forearm.

Waterway Snag Snarls Gulf Talks

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz of Iraq today accused Iran of stalling peace talks by rejecting the immediate reopening of the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, Iraq's only outlet to the sea.

The disputed waterway has been blocked by sunken ships since the outbreak of the 8-year-old Persian Gulf war.

The peace talks resumed today at a downgraded, technical level because both countries' foreign ministers removed themselves after a snag developed late Sunday over Iraqi demands for full sovereignty over the Shatt-al-Arab.

U.N. Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar met for six hours Sunday night with the separate delegations and acknowledged the talks had run into difficulties over the withdrawal of troops behind internationally recognized borders.

In reply to a question, the U.N. leader said: "We cannot say now that we have reached deadlock. ... The possibility always exists."

With negotiations on the verge of a deadlock, Aziz said at a morning news conference, "We have not found any measure of good faith from the other side" since the peace talks started last week.

"I hope we will move back to the ministerial level as soon as the disagreement is settled," Perez de Cuellar said.

"The negotiations are continuing without underrating the difficulties that we face at the moment," added U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani.

Aziz said the immediate clearing of the Shatt-al-Arab would allow Iraq to regain use of its only outlet to the sea.

The foreign minister said this would provide "an equitable balance" to the acceptance by Iraq of freedom of navigation for Iranian vessels in the gulf, already enforced in accordance with the U.N.-sponsored cease-fire that took effect Aug. 20.

"To my knowledge the U.N. secretary general has understood our position and is sympathizing with it," Aziz said. There was no immediate word from Perez de Cuellar.

Aziz added that Iraq is prepared to stay in Geneva to continue the negotiations "as long as the mission requires."

A statement made in Baghdad by Iraq's deputy foreign minister, Saadoun Hamadi, threw doubt on the possibility of progress.

"There are many children among the dead and injured," said Kris Kumpf, a medical assistant who treated some victims. "And the worst part of it is, we're still trying to find some of the parents," she told reporters.

The U.S. military set up special telephones that Ramstein service members could use to call home in the states.

Demonstrators opposed to air shows because of the risk of accidents rallied outside Ramstein as Sunday's show began.

Angels Stomp Yankees Once More

By The Associated Press
Lou Piniella is starting to question the pride of the Yankees.
"I feel as bad as anyone, and if the players don't feel the same way, they don't have any pride," the Yankees manager said Sunday after California beat New York 13-2, sweeping a three-game series by a combined 32-8.

The Yankees led Friday's opener 6-0 in the third inning and then gave up 32 consecutive runs over the next 26 innings.
New York has lost four straight and eight of 10. The Yankees, 6-13 since Aug. 9, have allowed 10 or more hits in 14 of their last 19 games and 184 runs in 26 games this month, a 7.08 average.

Detroit lost to Milwaukee 12-10 Sunday, so New York remained 5½ games out of first.
"This whole series was embarrassing. It really was," said Don Mattingly, whose name began to be mentioned in trade rumors over the weekend. "We're only 5½ games out, but it's hard to feel like we're in a pennant race. It's hard to stay positive. You can't avoid it once in a while, but this has happened too often. We've gotten blown out too many times."

There's nothing to say to the team, according to Piniella.
"I've said no more meetings," Piniella said. "We've already had more meetings than the Kremlin."
Tommy John allowed nine runs and 12 hits in 4 1-3 innings.
"I know I was embarrassed," John said. "I don't like to look bad. There's nothing I could do. I should've either thrown the ball better, so they wouldn't hit it, or thrown it worse, so they would've hit it harder for some simpler plays."

In other games, Milwaukee beat Detroit 12-10, Baltimore beat Oakland 2-1 in 11 innings, Kansas City beat Minnesota 12-3, Boston beat Seattle 7-2, Cleveland beat Chicago 5-4 in 11 innings and Toronto beat Texas 6-5 in 11 innings.
Tony Armas had four of California's 19 hits, which equalled the team's high for the season, set June 17 against Kansas City. Chili Davis hit a three-run homer in the seventh.
Chuck Finley, 8-12, pitched 5 2-3 scoreless innings, allowing six hits.
Brewers 12, Tigers 10
Paul Molitor's two-run, seventh-inning homer snapped a 10-10 tie after Milwaukee bounced back from deficits of 5-0 in the third and 9-4 in the sixth.

Pete Stanicek's two-out, 11th-inning single off Gene Nelson, 7-6, as four Baltimore pitchers combined on a four-hitter. Orsulak had singled and scored the tying run off Dennis Eckersley in the ninth.
Mark Williamson, 4-5, pitched a hitless 10th and Tom Niedenfuer pitched a one-hit 11th for his 14th save. Jose Bautista allowed two hits in seven innings and Don Asse allowed one hit in the eighth and ninth. Oakland remained eight games ahead of the second-place Twins.

But that was just a sidelight compared to what Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn did with his lineup card. Robin Yount was forced to leave the game in the third after Detroit manager Sparky Anderson alerted umpires that Yount was listed as batting both third and fifth in Milwaukee's lineup. Designated hitter Mike Young was supposed to bat fifth.
"I goofed," Trebelhorn said. "I stupidly wrote out the fifth spot with Yount's name instead of Young's. I checked it and didn't see it and I now have one of my embarrassing moments in baseball."
Trebelhorn thought Yount should be allowed to remain in the game and was ejected for arguing Yount's removal.
"That's the strangest one I've had in 17 years in this business," home plate umpire Mike Reilly said.

Milwaukee scored six runs in the sixth to go ahead 10-9 on Molitor's sacrifice fly, run-scoring singles by Jim Adduci and Rob Deer and Joey Meyer's three-run double off Mike Henneman, 7-4.
Gary Pettis tied the score 10-10 with an RBI single in the seventh before Molitor's 10th homer.
Odell Jones, 5-0, the second Milwaukee pitcher, allowed one run and two hits in 1 2-3 innings. Chris Bosio pitched two hitless innings for his first save.

The little guy won.
Watson let him off the hook on the first playoff hole, pushing a 30-inch second putt for a three-putt bogey, while Reid got it down in two for the routine par.
The birdie didn't win.
But the bogey lost.
"It's disappointing," said Watson, winner of only one title in the last four years.
"It's disappointing," said Watson, a five-time British Open champ who was seeking his 33rd American tour title.
"It's disappointing in that I didn't make it happen when I had a chance to make it happen," he said.
"My putter let me down a little bit," Watson repeated, then let some of the disappointment and frustration creep through as he added:
"But that's been the norm for Tom Watson here lately. And he doesn't like it any better than anybody else."
"But in defeat you have to take positives. I played well. I hit the ball well. For the most part I putted well."

Reid Survives To Win In Playoff

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The themes from Mike Reid and Tom Watson were adversity and defeat.
But, since this was the World Series of Golf, the talk eventually got around to birdies and bogeys.
"It is not the birdies you make to win, it's the bogeys you make to lose," Reid said.
That's the way it turned out.
Watson made a bogey and he lost.
Reid made a par and he won on the first playoff hole Sunday of the rain-delayed tournament.
Watson — the five-time British Open champion, once the greatest player in the game and a recent inductee into the World Golf Hall of Fame — went head to head with Reid, a shy, soft-spoken man whose major claim to fame was that he'd won $1 million without winning a tournament.
It's David and Goliath.
It's one of the great players of all time against that skinny little guy who sweated out 11 years on the PGA Tour before he finally crept in there and won a golf tournament in Tucson last season.

The Big Wins For The Pirates

This fall will mark the 26th season for East Carolina's Ficklen Stadium. Hard to believe, isn't it?
The opening of the stadium, back in 1963, was the start of a new era for East Carolina's football program. Dr. Leo Jenkins, then the president of East Carolina College, had brought Clarence Stasavich out of the mountains of North Carolina to move the school from the college division ranks to the university ranks — the equivalent in those days of the current Division I and II.
Stasavich was in the second year of his tenure when Ficklen opened in early September, 1963, when the Pirates hosted Wake Forest.
Despite the fact that the Pirates have suffered through some hard years recently, there is no question that the school's program has come a long way. In those days, ECC was playing such teams as Wofford, Lenoir Rhyne, Catawba and the like. Now ECC plays teams like Miami, Florida State and West Virginia.
Over those 25 years since that opening game, there have been some outstanding wins for the Pirates, both in Ficklen and on the road. I was recently asked what I thought the 15 top victories since 1963 were. You may have others, but I believe in that in their context these 15, listed in chronological order, were the most important.
1963 — East Carolina 20, Wake Forest 10. This was the first game played in Ficklen Stadium — the start of the new era. While Wake, which won only one game that year, was certainly no major power, the fact that East Carolina could beat the Deacs boosted the hopes of fans that the Pirates could, after all, compete with others in the state.
1964 — East Carolina 14, Massachusetts 13. This game was in the Tangerine Bowl, winding up the season. The two schools were playing for the College Division's East championship and the Pirates were decided underdogs. Massachusetts was led by an outstanding quarterback in Gary Welch and tight end Mill Morin, who went on to an outstanding pro career. ECC scored late in the game and converted a two-point conversion to pull out the win, further giving credibility to its growing program.
1965 — East Carolina 21, George Washington 20. The following year, the Pirates were in their probationary year as a member of the Southern Conference and the University Division of the NCAA. However, they were still being considered for the Tangerine Bowl, which again was the NCAA College Division's East Championship game. The Tangerine Bowl people let ECC know that it would take a win over the strong GW team to earn the berth. The Pirates again came from behind to pull out the victory, and went on to beat Maine, 31-0, in the Tangerine.
1971 — East Carolina 31, North Carolina State 15. This was the first victory over the Wolfpack for the Pirates in only the second game of the series. Again, it was a case of the Pirates not being a great team, but it did earn respect from the rest of the football world by winning the game.
1973 — East Carolina 13, Southern Mississippi 0. This is one that a lot of people might not list. But the week before, the Pirates, under second year coach Sonny Randle, had been thrashed by State, 57-8, one of the worst defeats in ECC history. Many observers were forecasting a long, long season for the Pirates. But Randle rallied his Pirates over a favored Golden Eagle team, turned things around and went on to a 9-2 year.
1973 — East Carolina 34, William & Mary 3. Again, one of the games that not many people would pick. The year before, ECC had defeated both William & Mary and Richmond to win the Southern Conference championship, and both schools loudly proclaimed that the Pirates were not of championship caliber, but only lucky. They both vowed revenge in 1973. But Randle and his Pirates wasted little time in disposing of the Indians, setting up their game with the Spiders the next weekend with the conference championship going to the winner.
1973 — East Carolina 44, Richmond 14. This was the game the very next week. Richmond brought in a strong team, and, again, there were many who were picking Richmond to win behind their strong running back, Barty Smith. But ECC's Danny Kepley, Butch Strawderman and Cary Godette crunched him on an early tackle and the Pirates went on to roll up an easy win, winning their second straight Southern title.

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia provided plenty of brotherly love to the Los Angeles Dodgers this season.
The Dodgers entered the weekend series with the Phillies having lost three straight games and their lead being threatened in the National League West.
On Sunday, John Tudor allowed four hits in seven innings as the Dodgers defeated the Phillies 5-0 for a sweep of the three-game series. It was the Dodgers' 11th straight victory over the Phillies this year, the only loss coming in Los Angeles.
The Dodgers' sweep of all six games in Philadelphia represented the first time a visitor has done that since Veterans Stadium opened in 1971.
Los Angeles left Philadelphia with a 5½-game lead over second-place Houston and 6½ over San Francisco.
On Saturday, Los Angeles beat Philadelphia 4-2 for Tom Lasorda's 1,000th victory as Dodgers manager.
"My brothers and family were here, so it was really nice," Lasorda said. "I would like to have done it in Los Angeles, but if not, this would have been my second choice."

Lasorda's choice on the mound Sunday was Tudor and the left-hander continued his mastery over the Phillies.
Tudor, 8-6, struck out five and walked one in improving his record against the Phillies this season to 4-0 with a 0.68 earned run average. He's 12-4 lifetime against them.
"I don't understand it," Tudor said of his success against Philadelphia. "I can't understand why they don't score more runs. I know they're not playing well and I guess slumps are contagious, but I really don't like to face them."
Elsewhere in the NL, it was Pittsburgh 4, Houston 3; San Francisco 7, New York 4; St. Louis 5, Cincinnati 3; Atlanta 4, Chicago 2; and San Diego 5, Montreal 3.
The loss was the Phillies' fifth straight and the 13th in 14 games.
Franklin Stubbs' three-run double in the first inning gave the Dodgers a 3-0 lead.
"They got three runs on one base hit and against a pitcher like Tudor, right away you're in trouble," Phillies manager Lee Elia said. "His fastball isn't that overpowering, but he changes speeds and hits corners. He really knows how to pitch."

And, he knows how to beat the Phillies.
Pirates 4, Astros 3
Pittsburgh rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to beat Houston at the Astrodome.
Doug Drabek, 13-6, pitched seven innings, allowing two runs and six hits. Jim Gott pitched two innings for his 27th save.
Trailing 2-1 against starter Danny Darwin, pinch-hitter John Cangelosi led off with a walk and Gary Redus, hitting for Drabek, was hit by a pitch, bringing on reliever Juan Agosto.
One out later, pinch-hitter Jose Lind singled in Cangelosi and Andy Van Slyke singled in Redus. The Pirates scored the third run of the inning on reliever Larry Andersen's throwing error, allowing Lind to score.
Glenn Davis, Billy Hatcher and Kevin Bass homered for the Astros.
Giants 7, Mets 4
San Francisco scored four runs in the ninth inning off reliever Roger McDowell to beat New York at Shea Stadium.

The Giants stopped their four-game losing streak and won the season series against the Mets, 8-4.
The Giants loaded the bases with one out in the ninth and McDowell hit Joel Youngblood with a pitch to force in a run. Kirk Manwaring followed with a three-run single.
Cardinals 5, Reds 3
Tony Pena hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning off Tom Browning as St. Louis beat Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.
Bob Forsch, 9-4, allowed six hits in six-plus innings for his third consecutive victory. Forsch is 5-1 in his last six starts, allowing just 10 earned runs. Ken Dayley pitched 2 2-3 innings of one-hit ball and Todd Worrell got the last out for his 26th save.
Braves 4, Cubs 2
Rookie John Smoltz allowed four hits in eight innings and doubled to key the winning rally as Atlanta beat visiting Chicago.
With the Cubs leading 2-1, Smoltz led off the fifth with a double, and two outs later, scored on Gerald Perry's single. The Braves then loaded the bases and Paul Runge walked to force in the go-ahead run.
Padres 5, Expos 3
Tim Flannery went 4-for-4 and pinch-hitter Keith Moreland's sacrifice fly snapped a ninth-inning tie, lifting San Diego past Montreal at Olympic Stadium.
With the score tied 3-3, Roberto Alomar walked with one out off reliever Neal Heaton and advanced to third on Tony Gwynn's single. Gwynn moved to second on the relay and Carmelo Martinez was intentionally walked.
Moreland, facing reliever Jeff Parrett, hit a sacrifice fly to left and Flannery singled for an insurance run.

Aftermath

Joel Youngblood of the San Francisco Giants and New York Mets catcher Barry Lyons sprawl in the dust at home plate after Youngblood slammed into Lyons, knocking the ball away to score in the ninth inning Sunday at Shea Stadium. The Giants rallied for four runs to take a 7-4 win. (AP Laserphoto)

Simpson Cut By Buccaneers

From Staff Reports

Former East Carolina fullback Anthony Simpson was cut yesterday by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers as the team came closer to its 45-man roster limit. Simpson, who led the Pirates to a 5-6 record in 1987, while gaining 670 yards and scoring seven touchdowns, was listed third on the Buccaneers' depth chart at fullback before he was released.

Two other 1987 ECU players remain on NFL rosters. Defensive back Ellis Dillahunt is currently listed fourth at free safety on the Cincinnati Bengals' depth chart and Vinson Smith is listed third on the Atlanta Falcons' depth chart at linebacker.

Bol Charged With Second DWI

BOWIE, Md. (AP) — Former Washington Bullets basketball player Manute Bol has been charged with drunken driving for the second time in two months, Maryland state police say.

Bol was arrested and charged with drunken driving and speeding Sunday night around 11:30 after a trooper observed a speeding vehicle, said state police spokesman Chuck Jackson. Bol failed to pass a sobriety test and was arrested, Jackson said.

He was released early today. The 25-year-old Bol was awaiting trial on charges of drunken driving, resisting arrest and assaulting three police officers stemming from an arrest on July 2.

Olympic Hoopsters Still Have Work To Do

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Just a couple of weeks away from the Seoul Olympics, Coach John Thompson thinks his U.S. basketball team still has a long way to go.

"We're searching for the right combinations," Thompson said following Saturday night's 90-85 loss to a group of NBA players. "We still need some work. We still need some time."

Thompson was particularly worried about how his team will match up, experience-wise, with the Soviets.

"The Russians have played 101 games and we've only played nine," Thompson said. "It's not an easy situation."

The loss to the NBA players was only the second against six wins in the eight-game tour designed to get the team ready for Olympic competition. But the U.S. Olympians appeared disjointed at times and could not keep up their pressure tempo with any consistency.

Thompson, whose team plays its final game Tuesday night against Athletes in Action at Los Angeles before leaving for Seoul, said his squad must come together more as a team if it is to win the gold medal.

Thompson dropped high school senior Alonzo Mourning from the team Saturday, cutting the roster to 13. One more player still must be cut.

Myers Released From Swim Team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Angel Myers, who had a shot at winning five medals in swimming at the Seoul Olympics, is off the U.S. squad because she tested positive for a banned substance.

Myers' supporters, however, claim that birth control pills caused a false positive on the test, and said Myers would appeal the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision to remove her from the team.

"We are not biochemists, but other things can be confused in the drug testing process. The drug test was erroneous," said Harriet Peak, one of the coaches for Myers' local swim team in Americus, Ga.

Peak said Myers was taking Ortho-Novum, a birth control pill that could have appeared in tests as a steroid.

U.S. Swimming, governing body for the sport, announced Sunday that Myers, winner of three events at the national trials, was disqualified from the Olympics next month for use of a banned drug. Team officials refused to disclose the drug.

But Myers' family issued a statement in Americus saying that she had been informed by the USOC that she was taken off the team "due to the fact that her urine sample tested positive for a steroid."

According to the statement, Myers was taking a legal prescription for Ortho-Novum, which "has almost identical characteristics to the steroid the USOC claims she was testing positive for."

"Angel denies that she was taking this banned steroid or any other banned substance," the statement concluded.

"We are exploring our avenues of appeal," said Martha Fennessey, another coach with Myers' swim team in Americus.

Angel and her father, Kirt, who also coaches her, left Los Angeles shortly after the USOC decision was announced Sunday. She had been among some members of the U.S. team who had gathered in Los Angeles for processing prior to departing for Seoul.

Myers tested positive at the recent Olympic trials at Austin, Texas, during which she set two American records. In a statement, U.S. Swimming said initial tests of Myers were confirmed by a second urinalysis "in accordance with strictly controlled procedures outlined in the USOC-USS agreement on drug testing."

Although Myers' supporters claimed the birth control pills could have provided a false positive on the test, USOC spokesman Mike Moran said, "We stand by the integrity and validity of the test."

"We have tested over 10,000 people since 1984. We have tested thousands of women, a significant number of them on birth control, and we have not had this problem before."

Carolina League Names Most Valuable

GREENSBORO (AP) — Outfielder Mickey Pina of Lynchburg has been selected most valuable player and his manager, Dick Berardino, was named manager of the year as the Carolina League announced the results of all-star balloting today.

Ballots were cast by the league's general managers, managers and the media covering the eight Carolina League teams.

Durham lefthander Kent Mercker and Kinston's Kevin Barse were tied for pitcher of the year as all three were voted to the league's all-star team.

Pina, the league leader in home runs and runs batted in, was joined in the outfield by teammate Bob Zupic and Bernie Williams of Prince William, the league's leading hitter.

The Winston-Salem tandem of Shawn Boskie and Bill Kazmierczak were selected as the team's righthanded pitchers.

Selected to the infield were Lynchburg's Jim Orsag at first base, Greg Smith of Winston-Salem at second base, Ever Magallanes of Kinston at shortstop and Scott Cooper of Lynchburg at third base.

Mike Twardoski of Kinston was chosen as utility infielder. Tie for the pick as utility outfielders were Derrick May of Winston-Salem and Mike Westbrook of Kinston.

Mitch Lyden of Prince Williams is the team's designated hitter.

Nebraska Makes Up Ground

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Thanks to an impressive victory over Texas A&M in the season-opening Kickoff Classic, second-ranked Nebraska made up a good deal of ground on idle, No. 1 Florida State in the first Associated Press regular-season college football poll.

Nebraska's 23-14 triumph in the only game played thus far also knocked the Aggies out of the Top Ten, dropping them from 10th to 11th.

Florida State, which opens next Saturday night against defending national champion Miami, received 41 of 53 first-place votes and 1,032 of a possible 11,130 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Nebraska received four first-place votes and 939 points.

In the preseason poll, with 60 voters participating, Florida State led Nebraska 44-2 in first-place votes and 1,161-952 in total points.

Although this week's 20 ranked teams are the same as the preseason poll, there was some shuffling in the order.

Oklahoma held onto third place with one first-place vote and 845 points, Clemson remained fourth with three first-place ballots and 832 points and UCLA is again fifth with two first-place votes and 754 points.

However, Miami moved up from eighth to sixth with one first-place vote and 714 points, Auburn remained No. 7 with 707 points and Southern Cal dropped from sixth to eighth with one first-place vote and 687 points.

Iowa held onto ninth place with 619 points and Michigan moved up from 11th to 10th with 562 points.

The Second Ten consists of Texas A&M, Georgia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan State, West Virginia, LSU, Tennessee, South Carolina and Penn State.

The preseason Second Ten had Michigan, Georgia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan State, West Virginia, Tennessee, LSU, South Carolina and Penn State.

Earnhardt Victory Issues Warning

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt has issued a warning.

"We're on the offensive right now," he said following his victory Saturday night in the Busch 500 NASCAR stock car race at Bristol International Raceway.

"If they stumble at all, we'll be on 'em," he said, referring to new Winston Cup point leader Bill Elliott and second-place Rusty Wallace, the two men standing between Earnhardt and a third consecutive season title.

Elliott finished second Saturday night, challenging Earnhardt over the last 100 laps but falling about one car-length short at the end of the 500-lap, 266.5-mile event.

The strong finish vaulted Elliott past Wallace in the standings by 16 points, 3,027-3,011. Earnhardt remained third, but closed to within 126 points of the leader.

"It's a tough business when you've got so many working parts on the car and so many guys working on the car," Earnhardt said. "You miss a beat and you're going to lose something. That's what happened to Rusty."

Wallace, who had led the point standings since June 12, watched from the pits as Elliott moved ahead of him. A crash during practice on Friday left Wallace with an aching neck. He qualified his backup car and started it in the race, but gave up the driver's seat to Larry Pearson on lap 209.

Pearson, the son of longtime NASCAR star David Pearson, wound up ninth, seven laps behind Earnhardt.

"He did a very, very good job," Wallace said. "It's tough to get into somebody else's car in the middle of a race."

The race was a wild one, with crashes causing most of the 14 caution flags that held the winning average speed to 78.768 mph.

Somehow, Earnhardt and Elliott managed to stay out of serious trouble on the bumpy and treacherous half-mile oval.

Both lost laps early because of flat tires, but made them up quickly with the help of the caution periods.

"We got a couple laps down with flats, but the car was real consistent and we were able to come through the traffic and just kept running hard," Earnhardt said. "It hadn't been for the flats, I think I could have led most of the race."

Even with those problems, Earnhardt led five times for 218 laps, including the final 110.

Elliott made a run at Earnhardt, particularly over the final 10 laps.

"I had a tire pushing and I don't think I could have held Bill off much longer," Earnhardt said. "Another 10 laps and we'd have been in trouble."

Elliott, trying to win his first season title and happy about taking the lead, said, "Lapped traffic hurt us both at the end. I felt his car kind of giving up, but the slow cars just held me up."

"We did everything we needed to do to win this race, but we came up just a little short."

Geoff Bodine finished third, a lap off the pace, followed by Davey Allison and Alan Kulwicki.

A track-record crowd of 53,100 saw a race-record 23 lead changes, breaking the mark of 22 set in 1974.

Despite all the accidents, no injuries were reported.

The scene now switches to Darlington, S.C., for next Sunday's Southern 500.

Earnhardt, who was the defending champion here, also is the defending champ at Darlington.

"We feel we can be aggressive and do well there again," he said. "That's the kind of racetrack we like to go to make our luck."

"We're on the offensive right now. We've got the ball and we've got to play aggressive to make up those points."

Peele Column...

1975 — East Carolina 3, The Citadel 0. A big game? Surely! East Carolina was only 2-3 at that point in the season, Pat Dye's second. The fans were grumbling because ECU's Southern Conference chances were almost shot after losses to Appalachian State and Richmond. Had Dye and his Pirates lost to The Citadel, it might have been the beginning of the end. But instead, in an outstanding defensive struggle, the Pirates pulled it out on a field goal and went on to win the remaining five games of the season.

1975 — East Carolina 38, North Carolina 17. No question about this, perhaps the biggest victory in the school's history. The day before, Stasovich, then the athletic director, had died of a heart attack. That put even more meaning into the game, and it will remain as a lasting memorial to Stas.

1975 — East Carolina 23, Virginia 10. Just two weeks after the ECU win over UNC, the Pirates met Virginia for the only time. Randle, who had jumped from ECU to his alma mater, was on the opposite side of the field, and Pirate fans dubbed this one the Apple Bowl, tossing them on the field in the late stages when the ECU victory was assured.

1976 — East Carolina 23, North Carolina State 14. This is the second win over N.C. State to make the list. At the time, the Pirates were only 1-5 against the Wolfpack. But this was the turning point in the series, as ECU won five while State won seven in the remaining years of the series. It was Dye's first win over the Wolfpack and let everyone know that the Pirates could play on an even basis with the 'Pack.

1976 — East Carolina 35, Appalachian State 7. The Mountaineers had been one of the biggest thorns in the side of Pat Dye, beating him and his Pirates, 23-21, and 41-25, the two previous years — and that last one hurt most of all, Dye would say. This victory got him his revenge, and ECU never lost again in the remaining games of the series.

1977 — East Carolina 17, Duke 16. This was the first of four meetings between the two schools and it was a hard-fought contest that the Pirates — as seems their habit in a number of these games — pulled out late.

1978 — East Carolina 35, Louisiana Tech 13. This represents the only bowl game that the Pirates have played in since moving into Division I. The year before ECU appeared on the verge of a bowl bid but William & Mary spoiled that. This year, however, the Pirates were effective in their lobbying for the game, and proved it with the victory.

1983 — East Carolina 13, Missouri 6. This game was the key to the last winning season the Pirates recorded. Ed Emory's fourth team, the only one to gain national ranking in Division I, was 2-1 going into the Missouri game. They had raised eyebrows with a near-miss at Florida State to open the season, then had beaten N.C. State the following week. Just before playing Missouri, the Pirates beat Murray State, but were not all that impressive. The win over Missouri — a big name school in a big name conference — was the catalyst in keeping the Pirates on the road to an 8-3 year and four near misses — three on the field and one in the eyes of the bowl people who ignored ECU to pick other teams with lesser credentials.

The best of the bunch, that's the easy one. ECU 38, UNC 17

Two Grand Slams Possible At U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Two Grand Slams may be completed at the 1988 U.S. Open — one by Steffi Graf, the other by a country.

Graf can become the first player in 18 years to win the four major tennis championships in the same year. Her quest has been well publicized. Another possible Slam has not.

If Mats Wilander, Stefan Edberg or a lesser-known Swede wins the Open, it will give Sweden a sweep of the major men's titles in 1988. Wilander won the Australian and French Opens, while Edberg beat Boris Becker to win the Wimbledon championship.

Wilander and Edberg were in action today when the U.S. Open started its two-week run at the National Tennis Center.

Wilander, seeded second behind

Ivan Lendl, opened play on center court against American Greg Holmes. Edberg, seeded third, played Libor Pimek of Czechoslovakia on the grandstand court.

Other seeded men scheduled to play today were No. 5 Becker, No. 13 Jonas Svensson, No. 14 Andres Gomez and No. 16 John McEnroe.

Becker met Todd Nelson of San Diego, Svensson faced Todd Witsken of Carmel, Ind., Gomez was paired against Javier Sanchez of Spain and McEnroe played Leonardo Lavalle of Mexico.

Six women's seeds were scheduled to play today — No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 8 Natalia Zvereva, No. 9 Lori McNeil, No. 10 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, No. 11 Zina Garrison and No. 16 Larisa Savchenko.

Sabatini played Bettina Fulco of Argentina, Zvereva met Kim Steinmetz of St. Louis and McNeil faced Iva Budarova of Czechoslovakia. In other matches, it was Kohde-Kilsch vs. Angeliki Kanellopoulou of Greece, Garrison vs. Nicole Provis of Australia and Savchenko vs. Laura Golarsa of Italy.

The top four women's seeds — Graf, Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert and Pam Shriver — are scheduled to play Tuesday.

Navratilova has won four of the last five U.S. Opens, including the last two. But Graf enters the tournament as the heavy favorite, having lost only one set in Grand Slam competition this year.

If Graf wins, she will become only the fifth player to win the Grand Slam. The others were Don Budge in 1938, Maureen Connolly in 1953, Rod Laver in 1962 and 1969, and Margaret Court in 1970.

Lendl hasn't won any Grand Slam events this year, but he is seeking his fourth straight U.S. title. The last man to win four in a row was Bill Tilden, who captured six straight from 1920-25.

"Four in a row would be nice," Lendl said, "but I'm not really thinking of that. I'm just focusing on trying to win the tournament."

To do that, he may have to beat Andre Agassi in the semifinals.

The 18-year-old from Las Vegas,

Nev., has won seven tournaments this year and risen from No. 25 to No. 4 in the world rankings.

"I haven't won a Grand Slam tournament yet. If I do it this early, it would be icing on the cake," he said.

The men's and women's singles champions each receive $275,000, while the runner-ups get $137,500.

Pirates, Wolfpack Begin Grid Campaign Strangely

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State and East Carolina both open their respective football seasons Saturday, the only strange thing being they won't be playing one another for the first time in 18 seasons.

"There's no question the game will be missed," said N.C. State Athletic Director Jim Valvano. "I already miss it, and I think that's true for most football fans in this area."

"It was a headliner regional event that was capable of drawing 60,000 or more fans on an annual basis. It served as a tremendous launching device for football in this state. In that regard, what it generated in interest for college football is hard to put a price tag on. But it was significant."

The Pirates and Wolfpack played for 18 straight seasons, 1970 through 1987, but Saturday's game was canceled in the wake of a melee following East Carolina's 32-14 victory last season. Several fans and an NCSU security officer were injured and damage was done at the stadium.

Officials at both schools would not rule out resuming the series, but N.C. State's future schedules are filled through the 1993 season, according to Valvano.

"Our earliest possible opening is in 1994," Valvano said. "But then on the 1995 schedule, we're booked completely. What could happen, if it could be worked to the satisfaction of both schools, might be a possible 'test' game in 1994, and then a renewal agreement beginning in 1996."

Valvano said he and ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart Jr. had discussed future games.

"We still have reservations about making it home-and-home," Valvano said. "But we are talking."

Hart told The News and Observer of Raleigh ECU was "extremely" interested in a revival but he reiterated arrangements must be made to play some games in Greenville.

"Particularly," Hart said, "if we enlarge our stadium to 50,000 seats, which is a challenge we fully intend to meet."

N.C. State, which led the series 12-6, was the host for all 18 games in Carter-Finley Stadium.

Hart said the N.C. State game constituted a large portion of East Carolina's operating budget for football. By comparison to the $202,000 payoff last season, the Pirates made about $125,000 from their share of the College Football Association television package and grossed $150,000 from a 1986 trip to Auburn.

Valvano said that although this season's opener against Western Carolina probably would not draw as many people, State stood to realize more of a profit. State will pay Western Carolina $75,000 to play in Carter-Finley.

Valvano noted the series, which often opened the football season, encompassed more than dollars and cents, however.

State's games against East Carolina accounted for the Nos. 1, 2, 4, 6, 7, 9, 11 and 12 largest draws in Carter-Finley history. Hart said that the loss of a regional rival made an impact on ECU's program.

"Ideally, we would like to play all four other Division I-A schools each season," Hart said. "And I don't think that games against some other in-state schools can be ruled out. We are pursuing some interest in those areas."

Hart would not specify which schools, but discussions reportedly have been held with Duke, Wake Forest and Appalachian State, a Division I-AA team. Hart said he hoped long-range contracts would be secured with Virginia Tech and South Carolina. Outside the area, the Pirates are believed to be pursuing series with Navy, Rutgers, Boston College and Army.

Mediocre Preseason Raising Questions

DENVER (AP) — Tony Dorsett's mediocre preseason is raising questions about whether he is capable — at age 34 — of filling the Denver Broncos' hole at running back.

Dorsett failed to get a handle on the Broncos' complex offense, and he averaged barely 2 yards per carry in four preseason games, half his career average that netted him more than 12,000 yards for the Dallas Cowboys, fourth-highest in NFL history.

Dorsett said he had "come a long way" in learning the offense.

"Not being sure of what I'm supposed to do takes away from me as a runner," he said. "I've been so accustomed to when you make a mistake, you forget about it. The next play is the most important play."

"But when you're learning a new system you don't forget about it. You find yourself saying, 'I don't want to make another mental error.' What it does is it takes away some of your aggressiveness and your ability to run with the authority you're accustomed to."

Some critics say the former Cowboys star, traded to Denver three months ago, was distracted by an avalanche of national print and television media interviews.

"I never thought I'd come in here and get all the media attention I have," he said. "I'm still trying to get myself acclimated to the whole scenario."

Throughout the preseason, Bronco fans waited for Dorsett to break a long run. His longest was an 11-yarder against the Rams. He finished the exhibition season last Thursday with 39 yards against the Colts on 14 carries.

However, Dorsett ran behind the Broncos second-string line much of the time, behind blockers as unfamiliar with the Denver offense as he was.

After the Colts game, Coach Dan Reeves replied to a question about Dorsett's lackluster performance by saying, "A lot of times, that's not just the running back," an obvious reference to the line.

Reeves has kept the preseason game plans basic so he won't tip off regular-season opponents to new plays, sending runners mostly off tackle.

Dorsett also has averaged a half-a-yard more per play on artificial turf during his career, while all four tuneups were played on grass.

And the great running back admits maybe his calendar has been too crowded.

"I've found myself pressing out there. I'm trying so hard to do some good things out there and it's having an adverse affect on me," Dorsett said. "I just need to calm down and relax and not worry so much about the media and what people are thinking. From this point on, I'm going to relax and be myself — the football player I've been accustomed to being for the last 11 years."

In the long run, preseason statistics are meaningless. The real games that Dorsett was hired by the Broncos to play begin next week.

And as Reeves has said about Dorsett, "The one thing I always knew about him was that he's a gamer."

five-run sixth inning and George Brett and Bo Jackson hit three-run homers in the seventh as Kansas City completed a three-game sweep.

Jackson's last five hits have been home runs as have nine of his last 19 since July 29.

Allan Anderson, 12-8, who had won six straight since July 19, allowed six hits and five runs in 4 1-3 innings. Jeff Montgomery, 7-2, threw 2-2-3 innings before Steve Farr finished.

Red Sox 7, Mariners 2

Bruce Hurst pitched a five-hitter for his seventh consecutive victory since July 6 and Mike Greenwell hit a three-run double in a five-run sixth-inning, rallying Boston to within a game of first-place Detroit.

Hurst, 16-4, struck out 11, equalling his season high, and walked one in his fifth complete game. He struck out Steve Balboni in the first for his 1,000th career strikeout. Mike Moore, 7-14, gave up five runs and five hits and struck out six.

Indians 5, White Sox 4
Ron Kittle homered off Barry

Jones leading off the 11th inning as Cleveland won for the fourth time in five games.

Kittle hit his 17th home run of the season and his third as a pinch-hitter. Jones, 0-1, had relieved to start the 10th.

Doug Jones, 2-3, who is not related to Barry, gave up three hits and one run in four innings.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 5

Craig McMurtry misplayed a bunt, then walked three consecutive batters in the 11th inning to force in the go-ahead run, and Toronto rallied from a 5-0 deficit.

McMurtry's error allowed Nelson Liriano to reach first before McMurtry, 2-2, walked Tony Fernandez, Lloyd Moseby and Manny Lee.

Tom Henke, 2-3, pitched 3 1-3 innings of one-hit relief, striking out five.

Toronto scored four runs in the seventh on George Bell's solo homer and Kelly Gruber's three-run homer and tied it in the ninth on Liriano's RBI single.

Reid...

I have to take that and build on it," he said.

Reid spoke of adversity and positive thinking.

"You have to look at the challenges as opportunities," he said.

"I'm not supposed to win on this golf course. It's too long. It's raining. They're saying it's raining and the golf course is playing long and Mike Reid is a short hitter."

"And I'm saying it's more opportunities. A challenge is an opportunity and they're talking about adversity and I'm saying 'Give me more adversity.'"

He got them. Rain. Long course. Great players in contention. He beat them all. He won with a routine par putt on the first playoff hole.

"I can't believe it," Reid said. "I'm the most surprised guy here."

With the victory, he won $162,000. That was the prize Watson needed to pass Jack Nicklaus and become the No. 1 career money-winner.

As it was, Watson won $97,200. It pushed his career earnings to $4,971,113, still behind Nicklaus' leading $5,002,825.

"It's not the amount of money you win. It's the number of titles you win that your career will be judged by," Watson said.

Ian Baker-Finch, a 27-year-old Australian hoping to play the American Tour, had a piece of the lead until he bogeyed the final two holes and dropped back into a tie for third with Larry Nelson at 277. Baker-Finch and Nelson each had a 71.

Bob Costas Proves Worth With Late, Late Night Show

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — OK, so you've managed to stay awake all the way through "Late Night with David Letterman." Now it's time to hit the hay, right?

Wrong. NBC is torturing sleepyheads sans VCRs by tacking on a new half hour after Letterman that's gonna be hard to turn off — "Later with Bob Costas."

Yeah, Costas is that sports guy, the one who does baseball for NBC. But this is not a sports show, and Costas has quickly proven himself a facile interviewer with an intelligent, easygoing style that fits just about any kind of guest.

For his premiere week last week, he had a candid, two-part interview with newswoman-author Linda Ellerbee, handled delicate questioning of former child superstar Gary Coleman and traded bits with comedian Billy Crystal. Part 2 of the Crystal interview airs tonight.

The first show with Ellerbee was extremely serious. Outspoken as she is, Ellerbee seemed even more open than usual when she talked about her late colleague Jessica Savitch, the subject of a couple of recent tell-all books that raise questions about the way NBC handled the troubled star.

Ellerbee told Costas of her one-time jealousy toward the beautiful blond anchorwoman, then her eventual realization that Savitch was a woman out of her league and painfully aware of it, gradually sinking into drug abuse. Ellerbee said she and some NBC colleagues met over a weekend to plan some kind of psychological rescue mission, but it was too late. Savitch drowned when her car fell into a canal adjoining a restaurant parking lot; the accident was unrelated to drugs.

Costas handles the subject sensitively. The next night with Ellerbee was lighter as she offered up her irreverent assessment of network news, and the two ended up in a funny, casual discussion of the movie "Broadcast News." Viewers might as well have been sitting around the kitchen table with them.

With Coleman, Costas had another serious story on his hands. The one-time toast of TV when he starred on "Diff'rent Strokes," Coleman is now a grown young man with serious health problems — he needs a third kidney transplant — and very little acting work. He is bitter toward his parents and management for not giving him more guidance as a child. Costas elicited the necessary information, but allowed the young actor to maintain his dignity throughout.

Costas seemed overprepared for Crystal, occasionally asking questions that contained answers — "What's different about your (Muhammad) Ali (impression) compared to others who may have gotten the voice but not the character?" or, about life on the road as a standup comic, "Is it true you often ate dinner by the bathroom light in the motel?"

By tonight's show, Costas hits his stride with Crystal. There's a very nice exchange when Crystal recalls the genesis of perhaps his best comedy bit, his bittersweet impersonation of an old, black jazz musician — "Can you dig it? I knew that you could." Crystal's father produced jazz shows and he remembers being around those guys when he was a child and being profoundly influenced by them.

"That's the reason I've always performed, was these guys," he tells Costas. "Because no matter what was happening to them, when they got up and played, they felt good."

Costas gets to combine his first love, baseball, in this interview when he and Crystal discuss the brilliant, 8-minute film Crystal and Christopher Guest made for "Saturday Night Live," in which they played two retired Negro League baseball players, Rooster and The King. Costas doesn't miss a beat when Crystal suggests being interviewed for a few minutes in character as Rooster.

For the next two weeks, Costas continues his eclectic guest list with Larry King, Sonny Bono, Chuck Norris, Rona Barrett, "Phantom of the Opera" star Michael Crawford and "Night Court" star John Larroquette.

The show airs only Monday-Thursday, because, as Costas notes, "nobody wants to tinker with that great American institution, 'Friday Night Videos,'" which incidentally also has Dick Ebersol as its executive producer.

Costas will not be relegated to only late-night all season. He's on NBC's team covering the prime-time Summer Olympics starting next month. But insomniacs needn't worry. Costas has taped enough shows to cover him while he's in Seoul.

HEADING FOR A WIN — Actress Patricia Wettig of "thirtysomething" arrives at the 40th annual Emmy Awards in Pasadena, Calif., Sunday with her husband, Ken Olin, who also stars in the show. She later won the Emmy for best supporting actress in a drama series. (AP Laserphoto)

Baby Boom Series Score Big As ABC Tops Emmys

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — ABC's baby-boomer series "thirtysomething" and "The Wonder Years" won Emmys as best dramatic and comedy shows, upsetting NBC and it's highly touted "L.A. Law."

ABC won 21 awards Sunday, to CBS's 20 and NBC's 19. PBS won seven, syndicated shows won three and Home Box Office won three in the first year cable television participated in the awards.

"L.A. Law," the ensemble drama about the bad and beautiful in the legal profession, went into the show with the most nominations, 19, but

Calendar Pose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Malcolm Jamal Warner of "The Cosby Show" and Peter De Luise, Holly Robinson and Dustin Nguyen of "21 Jump Street" are among 16 young television and film stars who have posed for a calendar that warns against mixing drinking and driving.

The entertainers cooperated with the Los Angeles chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, which said the calendar, aimed at teen-agers, is a first of its kind.

Newman Role

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Actor Paul Newman will portray the late Earl Long in a movie about the Louisiana governor's romance with former striptease artist Blaze Starr, according to a writer who helped Starr with her autobiography.

Ron Shelton, writer and director of this summer's hit movie "Bull Durham," will direct the movie, to be titled "Blaze," Huey Perry said.

Filming is expected to take place next spring, "probably in Louisiana," Perry said, adding that the role of Starr has not been cast yet.

lost its case with Television Academy of Arts and Sciences.

It won only two Emmys, for supporting actor — Larry Drake, for his sensitive portrayal of a retarded office assistant — and for editing.

In all, "thirtysomething" won four Emmys, including one for Patricia Wettig as best supporting actress and Paul Haggis and Marshall Herskovitz for writing. The show features a cast of baby boomers facing adult responsibilities.

"I suppose if there was another category for most annoying show on television we'd win that, too," said Ed Zwick, co-executive producer with Herskovitz. Backstage, Herskovitz said, "We really didn't expect to win."

"The Wonder Years," created by the husband-and-wife writing team of Neal Marlens and Carol Black, tells the story of the "thirtysomething" generation as they grew up in the 1960s.

It was also a good night for shows that will not return this fall.

Richard Kiley won for best lead actor in a drama series in NBC's canceled "A Year in the Life."

He thanked people on the show, but added, "I have nothing but sadness for the corporate myopia that killed a fine show."

CBS' "Frank's Place," slated to return later, won three awards, including one to creator Hugh Wilson for writing and one to guest actress Beah Richards.

Tyne Daly of the canceled CBS series "Cagney & Lacey," won as best lead actress in a drama series.

Beatrice Arthur of "The Golden Girls" was named best lead actress and costar Estelle Getty as supporting actress for a comedy series. That made it a sweep for "The Golden Girls" cast. Rue McClanahan won as best lead actress last year and Betty White the year before.

John Larroquette captured his fourth straight Emmy as best supporting actor in a comedy series for his role as the lecherous prosecutor, Dan Fielding, in NBC's "Night Court."

"Now I am officially overwhelmed!" said Larroquette.

Michael J. Fox won his third consecutive award for NBC's "Family Ties." Later, as a presenter, Fox said, "I want to thank Dan Quayle for showing that Alex Keaton really can exist."

NBC's "The Murder of Mary Phagan," based on the lynching of Leo Frank in a murder case 75 years ago that stirred anti-Semitism in the South, won best miniseries. NBC's "Inherit the Wind" won as best drama or comedy special and CBS's "Irving Berlin's 100th Birthday Celebration" was best variety, music or comedy program.

Jason Robards was picked as best lead actor in a miniseries or special for NBC's "Inherit the Wind" and Jessica Tandy as best lead actress for CBS' "Foxfire." Jane Seymour was named best supporting actress in a miniseries for ABC's "Onassis: The Richest Man in the World." John Shea won as best supporting actor in the ABC miniseries "Baby M."

The Emmy show, produced by Lorne Michaels of "Saturday Night Live," ran three hours and 21 minutes on Fox Broadcasting Co., much shorter than in past years.

"This show won't take itself too seriously," Michaels said.

To that end, it featured a "designated acceptor" for absent winners — actor Tony Danza. He was kept busy throughout the night as others winners were not present, and after a half-dozen walks to the stage, he cracked: "Now I'm mad; where are these people?"

'Dobie Gillis Creator Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Humorist Max Shulman, who created the love-seeking 1950s teen-ager Dobie Gillis, was remembered upon his death as "a unique comic voice."

Shulman, a novelist, screenwriter and playwright, died at age 69 Sunday at his Hollywood home surrounded by his family, said George Kirgo, West Coast president of the Writers Guild of America.

Shulman was born in 1919 in St. Paul, Minn., the son of a Russian-born housepainter. He graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1942 and quickly produced two successful comic novels: "Barefoot Boy With Cheek" in 1943 and "The Feather Merchants" in 1944.

Perhaps his best known creation was the Gillis character, which became the basis for the motion picture "The Affairs of Dobie Gillis" and the popular TV series "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis," which ran on CBS from 1959-1962 and starred Dwayne Hickman.

"He was a unique comic voice in American letters," said Kirgo, who had been working on a screenplay with Shulman. "He'll be sorely missed by the writing community and anybody who loved literature. He was one of a kind."

Shulman wrote many successful novels including "Sleep Till Noon," "The Zebra Derby," "Rally Round The Flag, Boys," "I Was a Teenage Dwarf," "Anybody Got A Match" and "Potatoes Are Cheaper."

His Broadway credits included "Barefoot Boy With Cheek" in 1947; "The Tender Trap" in 1954; and "How Now, Dow Jones" in 1967.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠QJ6 ♥A108 ♦6 ♣AKJ1095
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—For his vulnerable overall at the two-level, North must have a good suit and a good hand—at least the equivalent of an opening bid. Both minor suits are potential sources of tricks, so we would gamble out three no trump. Two no trump or three clubs wins the buck-passer of the year award.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥K6 ♦AJ85 ♣AK1063
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
 3 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—If partner has a fit for one of your suits, or a good suit of his own, you might still have a slam. If the hand is a misfit, three no trump might be your limit. So don't bypass that by jumping. Three clubs, which shows a good hand, is adequate at this stage.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠7 ♥AJ9 ♦KQ1063 ♣AK65
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
 3 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner's bidding has shown minimum hand with six spades and four hearts. Under the circumstances, you should give up all thoughts of slam and settle for three

A.—Resist bidding three no trump. Had no trump appealed to partner as a resting spot, he could either have bid it or have shown a stopper by bidding three hearts. Since you have at least an eight-card fit in spades and ruffing value, you should raise to four spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠7 ♥AJ9 ♦KQ1063 ♣AK65
 Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—You have a very good hand, but you can't jump shift because of your potential misfit. For the moment, bid two diamonds to see how partner reacts.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠7 ♥AJ9 ♦KQ1063 ♣AK65
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West

no trump. Four spades is an alternative, but if partner has good spades, he can correct.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠QJ7 ♥KQJ8 ♦Q1062 ♣76
 Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—When responding to partner's opening on a hand good enough for more than one bid, show your four-card suits up-the-line. Therefore, your correct response is one diamond. If partner has four hearts, he will introduce the suit; if he does not rebid in hearts, you can afford to suppress that suit in favor of no trump, because you know that no 4-4 fit exists.

Bentzen Keeps Up Attacks On Quayle Qualifications

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentzen continues to cast doubts on the experience of Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, who in turn says he is saving his criticism for the top of the Democratic ticket.

"Frankly, he would not have been on my short list as I look over my Senate colleagues," Bentzen said Sunday when asked about Quayle on NBC's "Meet The Press." "He obviously was on the short list of the hard right...."

"Now, I wouldn't say that he couldn't grow into the job; he probably could. But if a tragedy befell a president, you'd have to be able to move in immediately and take over and do what has to be done in facing whatever issues that confront you at that time."

Bentzen, in suggesting that Quayle could not step right up to presidency, was continuing a line of attack that was clear last week: show that the 41-year-old Indiana senator lacked the depth and experience for the job that is only a heartbeat away from any vice presidency.

Quayle declined to criticize his 67-year-old colleague in the Senate, saying that his gripe is with Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis. In last week's seven-state campaign, Quayle's only mention of Bentzen was to praise his views on defense spending and other issues where he stands to the right of Dukakis.

"I've served with Sen. Bentzen for almost eight years. He is not the issue," Quayle said Sunday in an interview with The Associated Press. "The issue is Michael Dukakis. Michael Dukakis' view of America is a much different view than George Bush's. Michael Dukakis' approach to national defense, his approach to the economy, his approach to child care — all of those approaches are much different than George Bush's."

Quayle said doubts about his qualifications are nothing that a good debate wouldn't cure.

"The American people are just beginning to see Dan Quayle," he said. "I'm going to continue to talk about the issues. When we have the debate between Lloyd Bentzen and Dan Quayle, the American people will have a lot better picture of who will be the best qualified vice presidential candidate."

Quayle traveled to the Midwest and West last week, and will leave again Wednesday for a swing through the Southeast that will take him through to Labor Day.

Former presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, interviewed on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said meanwhile that the Dukakis campaign can become too preoccupied with trying to win back conservative Democrats who have been voting for Ronald Reagan.

"I think the Democrats' strength is not between the 45-yard lines with this obsession to recall the Reagan Democrats who are with Quayle under the Bush," he said.

He said that more could be accomplished by massive registration of new voters, and reaching out to the working and non-working poor.

Bush was traveling today from Houston to St. Louis, where he planned a tour of an aerospace plant, and then to Nashville for a rally and visit to the Reserve Officer Training program at Middle Tennessee State University.

He returns to Washington tonight for a series of day campaign trips to various states and may head west to California and Colorado on the weekend.

Bush's last day of his Texas trip was low-key compared with the usual hectic pace of campaigning.

He went to an Episcopal church service in Houston, attended an Astros baseball game, and flew to Austin for the memorial service for former Gov. Price Daniel, a longtime friend.

Talking to reporters aboard Air Force Two, Chief of Staff Craig Fuller said Bush will continue to stress his pro-military views in the coming week and paint Democratic rival Michael Dukakis as weak on defense, a theme the campaign thinks is going over well.

Fuller said Bush would likely return to Texas by mid-September, and in the meantime send surrogates and family members to work the state.

Dukakis was touring several western Massachusetts communities today and Tuesday as part of his annual summer visit to the region. He also planned to use the area, which is rebouncing economically, for two national economic speeches. He was returning to Boston Tuesday night and departing for a campaign swing through western states Wednesday.

He flew to western Massachusetts on Saturday after attending a rally marking the 25th anniversary of the civil rights March on Washington led by Martin Luther King Jr.

Indians Accept Cash Settlement

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — An American Indian tribal leader says a $162 million land-claims settlement, one of the largest this century, will offer prosperity for the tribe's members, who stand to receive $20,000 each.

After four years of negotiations, the Puyallup Indian Tribe voted overwhelmingly to accept the settlement and drop a legal challenge for the one-time reservation land that included parts of downtown Tacoma.

The settlement calls for the federal government to pay $77.5 million. The rest would be paid by Washington state, Tacoma, the port and private industry. It must still be approved by Congress and President Reagan.

"The tribal membership has voted to express their belief that our children's future can best be secured through the settlement process rather than through the uncertainty of a lengthy court battle," Bill Stord, chairman of the Tribal Council, said after Saturday's 319-162 vote.

The settlement also calls for a four-year job-training program to serve 265 people; a $22 million permanent trust fund for social-service projects; a $10 million fish-enhancement program; $9.5 million for the tribe to buy land and pursue economic opportunities; plus land around the Blair Waterway on which to build its own port.

At issue was ownership within the boundaries of the old reservation, which included parts of downtown and the Tacoma Tidelands, now home of the booming Port of Tacoma, the nation's 16th largest port.

Los Angeles Facing EPA Bans On Pollution-Producing Sources

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is moving to fill a congressional void with plans to ban new pollution sources in the nation's most populous area, greater Los Angeles.

EPA officials, speaking on condition they not be identified by name, say Administrator Lee Thomas will impose the sanction this week on a major chunk of the smog-plagued Los Angeles metropolitan area.

The ban on construction of new pollution sources, the minimum penalty for failing to meet federal air-quality standards, would take effect at midnight Tuesday with the expiration of a stopgap law that has prevented EPA action against cities and areas with dirty air.

Last December, Congress imposed an eight-month moratorium on EPA sanctions, supposedly to buy time to produce legislation strengthening the Clean Air Act and such attacks against acid rain and toxic fumes.

But that time is running out, and when Congress returns from recess next week it will have only about a month left in its scheduled 1988 session. Neither the House nor Senate is ready for debate on setting the nation's air-quality goals into the 21st century.

Los Angeles is one of about 100 cities, counties and metropolitan areas that the EPA says missed last December's deadline to meet health-protecting standards restricting levels of carbon monoxide and ozone, a major component of smog.

Ozone not only causes respiratory problems for humans but in high concentrations can injure animals and damage crops, forests and even building materials, according to EPA.

It is formed in sunlight by a complex chemical reaction involving volatile organic compounds such as gasoline and emissions of nitrogen oxides from transportation and industrial sources.

Ozone pollution frequently is worsened by the type of hot, dry weather much of the nation has experienced this summer.

Under the Clean Air Act, an area formally cited by EPA for failing to meet the standards is subject to an automatic ban on construction of new facilities that would emit more than 100 tons a year of ozone or carbon monoxide.

Before the moratorium was imposed, such bans were imposed on St. Cloud, Minn., Albuquerque, N.M., the Kentucky suburbs of Cincinnati and various parts of Illinois.

The law provides for other penalties such as a cutoff of federal aid for air-pollution control programs and highway construction. Albuquerque was hit with these sanctions, although EPA has proposed lifting them.

EPA officials say Los Angeles, which lacks an agency-approved plan to clean up its air pollution, is just the first of a number of cities that will face construction bans with the expiration of the moratorium.

They said that by late October bans could be imposed against Ventura County, Calif., Chicago, and the northwestern Indiana area adjacent to Chicago.

Waiting in the wings are 10 more whose air-quality attainment plans are on the verge of being formally rejected by EPA, an action that would trigger construction bans.

They are Denver; Atlanta; Dallas; Cleveland; Sacramento, Calif.; Reno, Nev.; Bakersfield, Calif.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Fresno, Calif.; and Indiana counties adjacent to Louisville, Ky.
