Garrett Seeks Federal Observers At Election

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

D.D. Garrett says he will not appeal the decision by the state Board of Elections to order a new election in the still undecided Pitt county commissioner race, contending he is ready to give his opponent, James H. Dupree, the "kind of beating he has never had."

Garrett, who is black, also repeated charges that racism among county officials prevented him from being declared a winner and said he has asked the U.S. Justice Department to send people to monitor the new election.

Mark Weaver, spokesman for the Justice Department, said the federal agency accepts virtually all requests for election observers, and they investigate the situations to determine whether racial discrimination is likely to affect the election.

The Justice Department will send the federal observers to Pitt County if it feels discrimination is likely, Weaver said, but the announcement will not be made until one day prior to the election.

At an afternoon press conference Thursday at the Pitt County Board of Elections office, Garrett said he was not pleased with any decisions made by the county board or state board, but he felt appealing the decision to civil court would further delay the outcome and put a strain on taxpayers.

Still, Garrett criticized the county board for setting the new election for Oct. 11.

"I stressed upon them I wanted this election — if it had to be held — to have it in September," Garrett said. "We feel very much like we have been taken advantage of. (The county election board) stole the election from me by not granting the election (to me) when I first won it.

"The sooner we can have it, the better off we'll all be. I don't want it tied to the general election (set for Nov. 8) in any way."

With the racism charges, Garrett said officials in a position of authori-

Knowles Says Race Charge Unfounded

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Some residents attending the three neighborhood meetings concerning the airport's land-use plan accused city and airport officials of racism, claiming blacks are not involved in city planning operations.

But Greenville City Manager Greg Knowles said that is not the case.

There is one black, Merrill Flood, on the city's staff of seven professional planners, Knowles said, and other black planners have been on staff in the past.

Flood, an East Carolina University graduate, said he joined the city's planning staff about three months ago after working on the planning staff for the town of Garner. He said he has not worked directly with the airport, but is interested in examining the land-use plan and participating in future decisions.

Pitt County has just one planner, Jeff Ulma, who is white. The airport authority also has one black member, Garrie Moore, who teaches radiological technology at Pitt Community College.

Moore was moderating the meeting Tuesday when Ms. Fenner made the racial accusations but he did not comment.

"I thought that (the comment) was made out of emotion," Moore said. "Perhaps she just hadn't thought about it ... I just elected not to respond to it. I just chose to ignore it."

Knowles said Ms. Fenner's state-

Fire Hits West End Circle Firms

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

An early morning fire destroyed two businesses at West End Shopping Circle and caused slight damage to two adjoining firms in the same building.

"We have no estimate of the damage at this time," said Greenville Fire-Rescue Department Assistant Chief Raymond Carney.

"The alarm for the fire came in at 12 midnight, with the blaze brought under control by 1:30 a.m.," Carney said. "We had five pieces of equipment, about 2,000 feet of hose and 27 firemen on the scene."

The two businesses destroyed by the fire were

NAPA Auto Parts of Greenville and Parrott Canvas Co. Spokesmen for the two businesses were not available this morning.

Morco Insurance and Realty and the Barnes Motor Shop, both located in the north end of the building hit by the fire, received only slight damage.

"We have some smoke and water damage," said David Meeks, shop foreman for Barnes. "But we can get back to work in both our shop and merchandise sections as soon as electricity is restored."

Vernon Morrison, manager of Morco, said "we received some smoke damage, but plan to be back in operation as soon as electric and phone service is restored, and as soon as the building inspector arrives to look over our place."

"The fire started in NAPA," Carney said, "but at this time we have not been able to pinpoint the cause of the fire. Our investigation is still under way."

Equipment from the main fire station and fire station No. 2 in Greenville responded to the blaze. "We were also assisted by a number of Pitt County volunteer firemen. They were a big help," Carney said.

Members of the Greenville Police Department closed to traffic sections of Greenville Boulevard, Dickinson Avenue and the Farmville highway during the time firemen were battling the blaze.

Attorney Says Ayden Man Charged In Warehouse Fire In Federal Custody

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Pitt County man who failed to appear in Superior Court this week on charges of drug trafficking and possession of stolen goods is in protective federal custody, according to an assistant U.S. attorney involved in the investigation of the 1986 Liberty Warehouse fire in Wilson.

Ronnie Lee Stocks of Route 2, Box 175, Ayden, pleaded guilty in June in federal court in New Bern to charges of conspiring and cooperating to burn the warehouse, and is now in protective custody of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Stocks also has six charges of marijuana trafficking and three charges of possession of stolen goods pending in Pitt County in connection with 1987 and 1988 cases, and Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood said he has no plans to drop the charges because of Stocks' cooperation with federal authorities.

Stocks' Pitt County case was continued from Aug. 17 to Aug. 30, but when Stocks did not appear in the Greenville court Tuesday, Judge J. Herbert Small of Elizabeth City issued an order for his arrest.

Stocks' attorney in the local matters, Willis Talton of Greenville, said he did not notify Stocks that he was to appear in court Tuesday because he thought Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood was working with the U.S. Attorney's office and Stocks would not be required to be in court.

Talton said he filed a motion Thursday in Superior Court asking Small to continue Stocks' case and withdraw the order for arrest and bond forfeiture, but Small did not allow Talton to argue the motion on Thursday.

The order for Stocks' arrest remains valid and Small is to hear more on Talton's motion next week.

"I'm hoping he will hear my motion and grant it," Talton said Thursday. "But I know the district attorney is opposing it because he feels (Stocks) could have been here for trial."

Haigwood said there has been no agreement made to drop the charges, and he will pursue the case.

"(Stocks) is charged with serious offenses and we intend to prosecute him," Haigwood said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Kieran J. Shanahan said that Stocks missed court because of a lack of communication between federal and local authorities.

"(Stocks) is in protective custody of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, meaning he is their designated ward," Shanahan said.

"It was a failure to communicate. We were not advised (Stocks) was to be in court, nor was Mr. Stocks advised he should be in court. Hopefully, we have worked that out," he said.

Shanahan said the two Greenville men arrested Wednesday by state and federal authorities were the main players in the Liberty Warehouse fire conspiracy, but the investigation is continuing.

More indictments could be handed down in related financial crimes or illegal tobacco transactions, Shanahan said, but he declined to comment on

Jobless Rate Takes Upward Turn

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate rose to 5.6 percent in August as four months of hiring booms on factory assembly lines and in retail stores came to an abrupt halt, the government said today.

The Labor Department said the number of jobless Americans jumped by 226,000 to 6,851,000 in August while the number of those with jobs rose by only 121,000 to 115,180,000.

The 0.2 percentage point increase from July's civilian jobless rate of 5.4 percent followed a 0.1 percent rise from June's 14-year low of 5.3 percent.

The report sparked a rally on Wall Street. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed sharply in early trading as investors apparently viewed the unemployment rise as reducing upward pressure on interest rates and inflation.

Most of the increased joblessness was suffered by adult men, with their unemployment rate rising 0.4 percentage points to 4.9 percent. The jobless rate among adult women, meanwhile, fell from 5.1 percent to 4.8 percent, the Labor Department said.

A separate survey of business payrolls — which many economists consider a more reliable indicator of the economy's health — showed 219,000 new jobs in August, well below the 400,000 average monthly increase in June and July.

The last time the civilian unemployment rate was at 5.6 percent was in May.

The goods-producing side of the economy lost jobs for the first time since last January, with employment in manufacturing dropping by 5,000 after a 70,000 jump in July.

The Labor Department said small employment gains in printing and publishing and export-related industries such as machinery and electrical equipment were more than offset by 9,000 job losses in textile and apparel plants and smaller declines in several other manufacturing industries.

Employment in oil and gas drilling also declined slightly, but it rose a minuscule 3,000 jobs in construction.

On the services side of the economy, large monthly increases in retail trade hiring — 80,000 in July alone — slowed to just 23,000 new jobs last month, virtually all in grocery stores.

Other recent high-growth job areas also slowed. Business services such as temporary help firms added just 16,000 new workers, compared with average monthly increases of 60,000 through the spring and early summer.

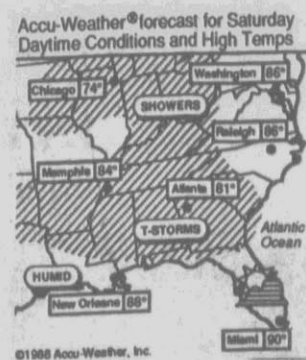

New employment in health services, which the government predicts will be the largest area of job growth in the 1990s as the Baby Boom population ages, slowed to 22,000 in August. It also had been rising an average 30,000 a month in the past year.

"The labor market showed less strength in August than earlier in the year," said Labor Statistics Commissioner Janet L. Norwood. "Looked at over a somewhat longer period, however, the rate has hovered in the 5.3 percent to 5.6 percent range since last March and is 0.4 percentage point below the level a year ago."

Council OKs Plan For Office Lease

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Council voted Thursday to enter into a lease agreement which will provide the city with additional office space for a five-year period.

At a workshop session at City Hall, the council agreed to lease the second floor of the Brown Building, located at Dickinson Avenue and Eighth Street.

The lease agreement with Phil Flowers and Associates Inc. will accommodate the relocation of various city offices, according to City Manager Greg Knowles. He said it will take approximately four months to prepare the building space for use and the city is expected to move into the offices in January.

According to the lease agreement, rent will amount to $2,856 per month.

Knowles said office space in over 20 buildings was evaluated by the city staff before a final decision was made on the matter. Among the factors considered in selecting the site were buildings size, ease of computer access, and parking availability.

In other action, the council agreed to change the effective date for the proposed annexation of Colonial Mobile Home Park from Sept. 30 to Oct. 30.

Meanwhile, the council agreed to revise the agenda for the Sept. 8 action meeting.

Consideration of a request by James D. Mellon Jr. to rezone a 3.26-acre tract located at the southwest corner of State Road 1725 and SR 1708 from RA-20 (residential/agricultural) to IU (unoffensive industry) was referred back to the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Consideration to annex 128.15 acres of the Westpointe subdivision on Stantonsburg Road and consideration to annex 25.58 acres of Treybrook subdivision on N.C. 43 just west of SR 1202 were continued for consideration until the council's second meeting in October.

The council also voted to change the starting time of Thursday's monthly action meeting from 7:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. to provide council members an opportunity to attend a literacy conference.

Board members agreed to consider changing Greenville's payroll system at a later session when all voting members are present. The city has two separate payroll systems and interest has been expressed by the council in combining them.

Council member Nancy Jenkins and Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn were absent from Thursday's workshop.

superintendent for public instruction. The three candidates presented a comprehensive plan to improve education in state schools. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Candidates Join On Education

The candidates probably will not campaign together on issues other than education, Jordan said, but they feel it is important for state officials to agree on a common plan to improve public schooling.

Jordan and Etheridge also emphasized the importance of improving attendance and lowering dropout rates.

"Every year, 23,000 youngsters drop out of school," Jordan said. "That is two school bus loads of children every day."

According to Etheridge, "Millions of dollars spent to create programs that will curb dropout rates mean nothing of the number of dropouts remains high.

"The root of the dropout problem ... is poor attendance. On any given school day in North Carolina, an average of 60,000 students are not in school," Etheridge said.

"If we can improve school attendance one percent statewide, that would mean an additional 1.8 million days of instruction. A one percent increase in attendance is not unrealistic," he said.

Hatcher's Mother Holds Government Responsible

RALEIGH (AP) — Fugitive Eddie Hatcher's mother said today she would hold the government responsible if anything happened to her son, who was ordered back to jail this week until his trial on hostage-taking charges.

But Hatcher's mother, Thelma Clark, said she didn't know where her son was. Mrs. Clark made her comments during a brief news conference at Durham County General Hospital, where she was discharged after surgery for a back ailment.

"I taught him when he was a baby ... to pray and (I want him) to do that right now," she said as she sat sobbing in a wheelchair outside the hospital's front entrance. She said she last heard from Hatcher, who took his grandfather's last name, early Tuesday.

Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs face hostage-taking charges after the Feb. 1 newsroom takeover at The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton.

Hatcher and Jacobs were ordered returned to jail Wednesday by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals while it considers whether they should be granted bond in July. Jacobs turned himself in promptly, but Hatcher did not and was declared a fugitive.

"We have no indication why he's doing this, none whatsoever," said U.S. Marshal Bill Berryhill. "It really does not make any sense.

"If he has any enemies, he's more likely to encounter them in a fugitive status than in the custody of the U.S. Marshal Service," Berryhill said. "Any concerns about his safety while in the custody of the Department of Justice would be totally erroneous."

But Jacobs, interviewed at the Buncombe County Jail Thursday, said he was concerned about Hatcher's safety.

Jacobs said he was "afraid whoever finds him, they might try to kill him. There's a lot of people out there who would like to make a name for themselves."

Jacobs said he had not had any contact with Hatcher, but if he could reach him he would tell him "good luck, because I know he's going to make it. We have a lot of friends around the country that will help."

He surrendered, Jacobs said, because he has "faith in God and my attorneys."

Hatcher's uncle, Jim Hatcher of Winston-Salem, said Thursday that Hatcher was on his way to a news conference before he turned himself in, and the family has not heard from him since.

"It's just strange. He's been in jail for five months, what's three more weeks?" Jim Hatcher said. "He was looking forward to going to trial. "Ed's not that stupid to be trying to hide out somewhere. He's well-known," Jim Hatcher said. "I just don't like the way things have been happening."

Hatcher and Jacobs are tentatively scheduled to face trial on federal hostage-taking and weapons charges Sept. 19.

Both were arrested after a 10-hour siege that ended when Gov. Jim Martin agreed to form a state task force to investigate charges of corruption in local government.

They were denied bond twice by a U.S. magistrate and once by a U.S.

district court judge before a three-judge panel of the appeals court ruled they had not been given a bond hearing soon enough after their arrest.

Hatcher and Jacobs were released on $100,000 unsecured bond each July 5, and ordered to stay out of Robeson County, report regularly to probation officers and live with court-approved custodians.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bruce had asked the full appeals court to review the panel's decision granting bond, after arguing at the bond hearing that both men posed a danger to the community.

Air Force Sends Secret Satellite Into Space Orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A Titan rocket today propelled into space a secret military payload that a civilian expert identified as a satellite capable of eavesdropping on Soviet military and diplomatic communications.

The powerful, 16-story-tall Titan 34D, scoring its third straight success after being grounded for 18 months, thundered from its launch pad at 8:05 a.m.

The Air Force did not announce the launch in advance, which has been its practice on military space flights, and afterward said only that the Titan 34D, "carrying a classified military payload," was successfully launched.

John E. Pike, a space policy expert for the Washington-based Federation of American Scientists, said last month the payload would be a satellite to monitor Soviet missile tests and radio, telephone, radar and other electronic military and diplomatic communications.

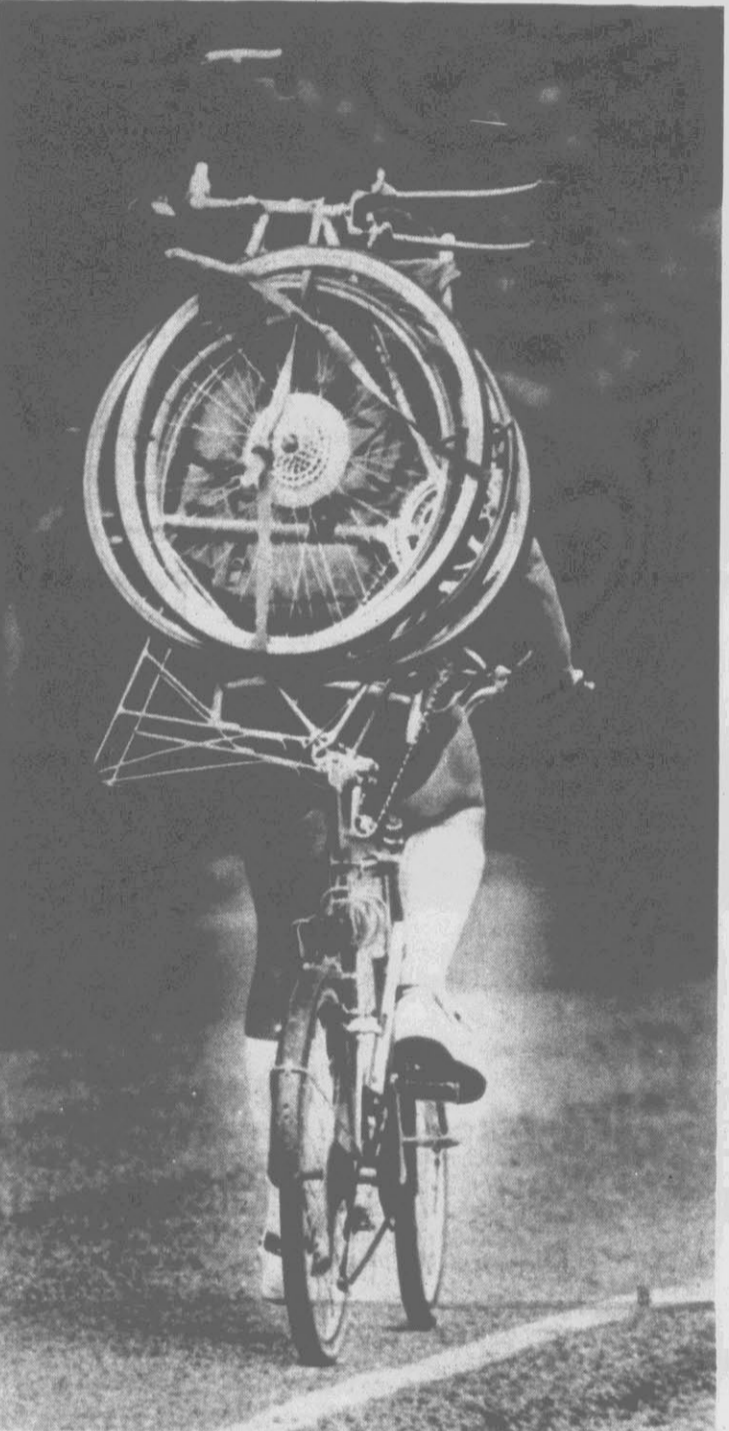

He said the payload carried an antenna built to unfold to the size of a baseball field.

Pike said the satellite project originally was code-named Chalet but was changed to Vortex when Chalet became known. Vortex became compromised some time ago and yet another name may have been substituted, he said.

The Titan 34D will remain the nation's most powerful unmanned rocket until an upgraded version, the Titan 4, makes its launch debut later this year, also with a military satellite. Both are made by Martin Marietta in Denver.

A Titan 34D carrying a reconnaissance satellite was launched in October from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. Another blasted away from Cape Canaveral a month later and placed in orbit a satellite to provide warning of a missile attack.

Before the October launch, the Titan 34D had been grounded following two straight explosions of the rocket.

Officer Acquitted In Death

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A "gung-ho" Navy lieutenant accused of dereliction of duty in the drowning of a rescue-swimmer trainee was acquitted in the court-martial he sought in an effort to exonerate himself.

"All I can say is the military (justice) system worked," a smiling Lt. Thomas Torchia said after the verdict Thursday night. "The system that charged me found me innocent."

A four-officer panel found the 32-year-old Princeton, Ill., man innocent of two counts of dereliction of duty after deliberating 3½ hours in the weeklong trial.

Torchia was in charge of the Navy Rescue Swimmer School at the Pensacola Naval Air Station when Airman Recruit Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis., died March 2 in a training pool.

Instructors threw a panic-stricken Mirecki back into the pool after he climbed out and shouted that he wanted to quit the voluntary training, witnesses said.

Mirecki, who had a phobia about being pulled under water, suffered a fear-induced heart attack before drowning, a Navy pathologist testified in Torchia's trial.

A panel may be selected today for the court-martial of a second defendant, Petty Officer 2nd Class Michael Combe, 28, of Tempe, Ariz., who is accused of holding Mirecki's head under water. He faces more serious charges of involuntary manslaughter, battery and conspiracy to commit battery.

Torchia had been offered unspecified non-judicial punishment, but turned it down and sought the court-martial in an effort to clear his name.

Homecoming

Homecoming will be held at Sweet Gum Grove Church on Route 1, Stokes, Sunday.

The church's new steeple will be dedicated during an 11 a.m. service conducted by the Rev. David Hill. The steeple was given by Steve Whitehurst in memory of his grandparents, the Rev. and Mrs. D.W. Alexander.

Lunch will be served on the church grounds. A singspiration will be held at 1:30 p.m., featuring various church members.

Investigators Say Flap Handle Of Delta Jet In Wrong Place

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Investigators are pointing to possible problems with Delta Flight 1141's engine thrust and wing flaps before it crashed on takeoff, and they hope to get answers from the crew and their recorded cockpit conversations.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators said Thursday a flap indicator handle in the wrecked cockpit was found in the wrong position for most takeoffs, raising questions whether the plane's wing flaps were set properly.

Incorrectly set flaps led to the fatal crash of a Northwest Airlines flight last summer. The Delta Air Lines flight's indicator handle, however, could have been accidentally jarred during or after the crash, investigators said.

The Boeing 727 got no more than 30 feet off the runway at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport before it crashed Wednesday, witnesses told the NTSB. Thirteen people were killed.

Pilots in planes waiting on adjacent taxiways told investigators "a white flame or vapor" came from the left engine, said NTSB member Lee Dickinson.

A cockpit tape recording recovered from the burned wreckage revealed that the pilots talked about engine trouble seconds before the crash, he said.

Further reviews of the tape and of the flight data recorder were planned today at the NTSB's Washington laboratory.

The Delta jetliner crashed as it tried to take off for Salt Lake City with 108 people aboard. Ninety-five people survived the crash and resulting flames, most by escaping through emergency exits or torn-open areas of the fuselage. Thirty-three remained hospitalized Thursday.

Medical examiners said the 13 died from smoke inhalation. Many were trapped when an emergency door wouldn't open.

All three of the JT-8D engines eventually will be removed and examined by their manufacturer, Pratt & Whitney of Hartford, Conn.

POSSESSION IS NEGOTIABLE!

When you purchase a home, when can you move in? On the surface, you might assume that once you close the transaction, you are free to take possession.

The actual possession date is determined long before closing. In fact, it is one of the items which is included in the negotiations before even signing an agreement to purchase your home.

Generally, there is a customary possession date which varies from city to city. I can give you that information for this area. But, nothing is set in concrete when it comes to a possession date. The date must be one agreeable to both purchaser and seller and becomes a firm part of the signed agreement to purchase.

There are three basic variations: 1) possession at closing, 2) possession before closing, or 3) possession after closing.

Possession at closing simply means that the seller will vacate the property before the date and hour of closing making it possible for the purchaser to have control at the time of closing.

If the purchaser is allowed possession before closing, a landlord/tenant relationship is created, and that agreement should be reduced to writing defining the responsibilities of each.

If the seller remains in the home after closing, a reverse landlord/tenant situation is created which should also be in writing.

New Storm Forms Off Mexican Coast

MIAMI (AP) — A weather system off the east coast of Mexico strengthened today into Tropical Storm Debby, but was expected to fizzle out when it hits land.

The Mexican government posted storm warnings from Santa Cruz to Vera Cruz for Debby, which had winds of 40 mph and gusts up to 50 mph, said National Hurricane Center forecaster Hal Gerrish.

"Locally heavy rains up to 10 inches can be expected over portions of Mexico," Gerrish said. "Some flash floods and mud slides may occur in the warned area and inland today and tonight."

The storm, named Debby when its winds passed the minimum 39 mph mark, was expected to weaken and die out soon after hitting the coast, however.

At 8 a.m. EDT Debby was located 180 miles southeast of Tampico, Mexico, moving west at 8 mph. The center was located at 20.8 degrees north latitude and 95.9 degrees west longitude.

Debby was the fourth named storm of the 1988 Atlantic hurricane season. None have reached the 74 mph wind speed necessary to classify it as a hurricane.

Hostages Held

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Two gunmen took four people hostage inside a bank this morning, police said.

"Apparently they've broken a window in the back part of the bank this morning and were waiting inside for the employees to come in," said Officer Douglas Anderson.

Police surrounded the single-story granite building, and SWAT team members were posted to either side of the front door of the downtown Third National Bank branch after the hostages were taken about 8 a.m., police said.

Sgt. W.O. Smith said police negotiated with the gunmen by bullhorn at the back of the building. Police had been unable to reach the hostage takers by telephone.

It was not known if the hostages, thought to be three women and a man, had been injured, Anderson said.

The curtains in the building were closed.

"What it boils down to is a give and take, just like any type of negotiation situation," said Anderson.

Worker Killed

LEXINGTON (AP) — The N.C. Department of Labor is investigating the accidental death of a furniture worker who was killed Wednesday when a wooden board shot out of a rip saw and struck him in the chest.

Garland E. Shaw Sr., 52, was killed while working in the machine room at the Dixie Furniture Co. plant on Railroad Street, where he had worked for 25 years.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Enough!

Get Involved, Gov. Jim Martin

Just what is North Carolina's governor doing about the medical waste washing up on the state's beaches?

More disgusting debris showed up this week — bottles of blood, garbage bags with syringes, broken lab dishes. So far, Gov. Jim Martin has been conspicuously quiet on the issue.

If ever there were an issue to rant and rave over — especially in an election year — it's this one. Not that rhetoric would solve the problem. But it certainly would let the electorate know its leader won't stand for garbage — and potentially deadly trash at that — spoiling a valuable, important resource.

And a little fussing backed up with leadership might be the beginning of a revolt against the practice of dumping medical waste in the ocean. Most of the states on the Atlantic coast have had beaches awash with medical trash. If Martin could form a coalition with governors of these states and use the resulting political clout to push for aggressive investigations and strong, workable disposal regulations, that would be a beginning.

In addition, Martin should firmly oppose the off-shore ocean garbage dumping that's now allowed by federal law. Putting waste in the sea is an environmentally unsound practice that needs re-examination. The states with coastline should see the issue receives attention — and not back down until it does.

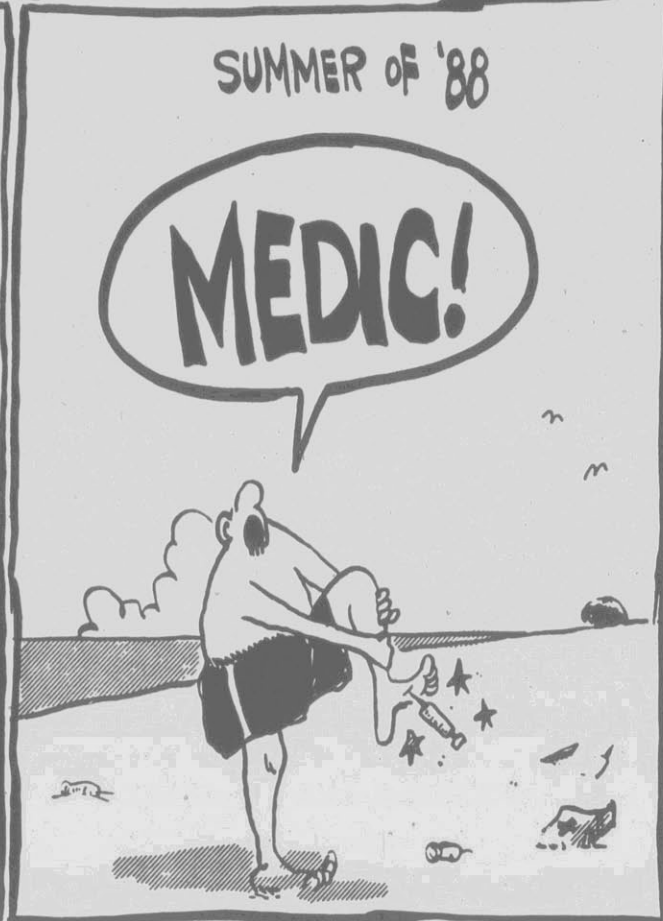

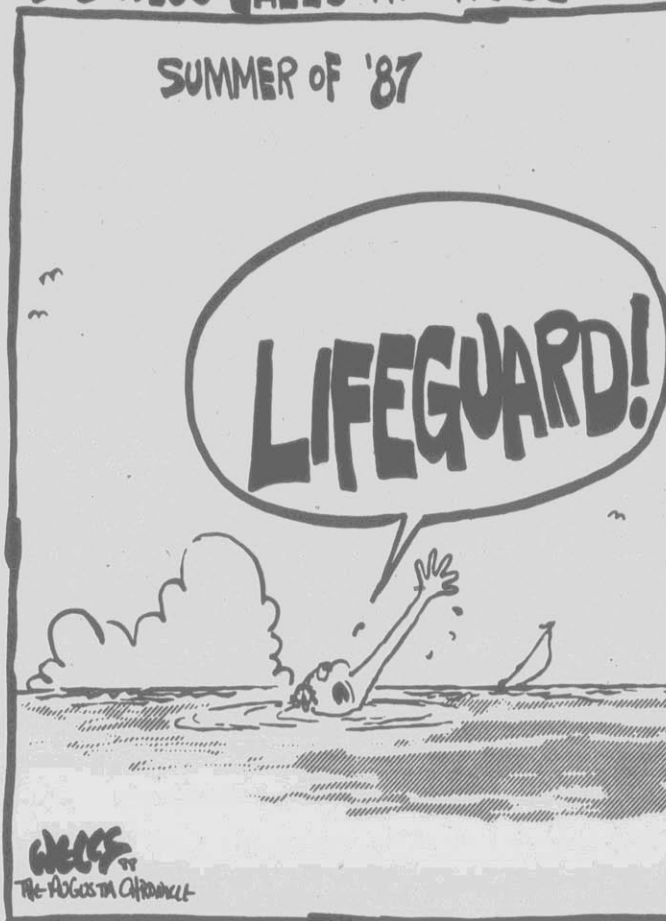

But none of this can be accomplished without a little noise from leaders. And so far, Gov. Martin's response has been tepid. Outrage, not calm, will get attention. Strong words will bring the needed response.

Sure loud talk might, during the state's tourist season, discourage some vacationers from visiting the beaches. But the benefits will outweigh the drawbacks.

Whether the most recent trash was dumped by private sources or whether it came, once again, from the U.S. Navy, the practice has to end. And for that to happen, the source of the pollution must be located and stopped.

So how about it, Gov. Martin? Is this an issue for November?

DISTRESS CALLS AT THE SEASHORE

Public Forum

To the editor:

I have read with some amusement, articles about the "nude" billboard gracing a heavily traveled Greenville street. I did have occasion to see the aforementioned billboard and found it to be in bad taste. Not in bad taste because it attempted to depict the form of a nude male, but in bad taste at the artistic attempt to depict the nude form of a male. Put simply, the "artist" who did the board has little or no knowledge of anatomy or artistic talent. That is what is really offensive to me. The presentation of a nude or semi-nude body to sell anything in public should and must be carefully thought out and then that presentation should be done in the most tasteful of manner.

I am sure that I have no use for any business that would visually pollute our fine city. Greenville is the place which I have chosen to live and Greenville is a place that I am proud of. Please, merchants and advertisers, show a little pride in our city.

To the editor:

"The Last Temptation of Christ" may be the most controversial film in recent memory. Protest marches, demonstrations and petition drives have been staged across the country against the film. Ironically, many of the movie's harshest critics are attacking a film they haven't seen. I attended a preview of the film with other religious leaders, and, while I found some portions that I would have done differently, I saw nothing that would justify the denunciations of this film.

In North Carolina, protesters have attempted to forestall distribution of the film and have initiated petitions to remove the novel on which the film is based from public libraries.

The film, based on a novel, portrays a Christ who is subjected to — but does not submit to — the temptations of this world. The Bible does say that Jesus was tempted, but rejected these temptations. Many Christians are so protective of Christ's divinity that they de-emphasize his humanity. Although my Lutheran theology is not offended by the suggestion that the fully human Christ might have been tempted and then resisted that temptation, others might be, and they have the right to express their views.

Opponents of the film have every right to speak out against it, to demonstrate peaceably, and to organize consumer boycotts. But they do not have the right to inject religious intolerance or to question the religious faith of those who defend the film. Suppression of ideas, even though that are deeply troubling, is censorship, plain and simple.

Whatever your religious view or opinion of the film, consider this: the same constitutional guarantees that protect your right to your beliefs also protect the rights of those with whom you may disagree. Remember this civics lesson whether you choose to praise the film, condemn it or simply remain indifferent to the hoopla.

To the editor:

The Panthertown Valley, located about 50 miles southwest of Asheville in Jackson County, is called "The Yosemite of the East" because of its awe-inspiring peaks, cascading waterfalls, sparkling trout streams and undisturbed wildlife habitat. It's one of North Carolina's last wild and scenic places, and environmentalists here and in neighboring states have been working hard to keep it that way. In 1987 and 1988 Congress appropriated a total of $8 million for the U.S. Forest Service to buy Panthertown from its present owner, Duke Power Company.

Our bureaucracies often work in mysterious ways and delay can spell disaster. Letters urging the immediate commitment of the $8 million appropriation for the Forest Service purchase of Panthertown should be sent to: Mr. Bjorn Dahl, Supervisor, National Forests in North Carolina, P.O. A special thank you to Congressman Walter B. Jones for his role in securing the appropriation for Panthertown.

Time Management, Money & Mortality

WASHINGTON — People like Michael Fortino are probably necessary, but is it necessary for him to be so depressing? Probably. He lives in Pittsburgh (which has suffered enough) and runs a consulting firm specializing in "priority time-management training," a new form of efficiency studies. His slogan should be, "You shall know the truth and it shall make you neurotic."

He says he has determined that over a lifetime the average American spends seven years in the bathroom, six years eating, five years waiting in lines, four years cleaning house, three years in meetings, one year searching for things, eight months opening junk mail, six months sitting at red lights. He also says the average married couple spends four minutes a day conversing and the average working parent converses 30 seconds a day with children.

Even if not all of those numbers describe your life, they are nevertheless cumulatively depressing. They underscore the fact that life is cumulative and we do in fact measure out our lives in coffee spoons of small activities.

Think of something, anything, you do for the minor pleasure of it. When you calculate its cumulative cost in time, the pleasure will evaporate. At least it will if you are, as Americans tend to be, determined to streamline your life for enhanced efficiency.

You say that for about 175 days a year you devote 15 minutes a day to reading baseball box scores? You wastrel. Try enjoying the sports pages tomorrow knowing that over 50 years your diversion devours 2,187 hours, or nearly 55 weeks of eight-hour working days.

Much of what we do we cannot avoid doing — shaving, commuting, shopping and all the rest of life's maintenance functions. It is shattering to calculate that you will spend 120 hours in the next decade brushing your teeth (assuming just two minutes a day). A depressing sense of being nibbled to death by ducks comes over you when you think how much time is consumed by demands that are little in themselves but not in their accumulation.

Let it be said of Fortino that he is as American as mass-produced apple pies and his profession has a fascinating pedigree. Its founding father was Frederick Taylor, pioneer of the "science of shoveling" and other applications of scientific management.

As historian Daniel Boorstin writes, it was not until clocks and watches became common that it became possible to analyze work in small units of time. Mass production made such analysis profitable: Assembly lines can move only as fast as the slowest task can be performed.

This was one of those perceptions that, years later, look banal. But at the time it was a blazing insight. It blazed from Taylor, one of those creatively obsessed persons whose mania for efficiency led him to wear loafers in an era of high-button shoes, thereby saving Lord knows (and Taylor knew) how many minutes a year.

The exertion of becoming valedictorian of his Exeter class produced in him a physical breakdown, for which a doctor prescribed manual labor. Taylor became a machinist and then a revolutionist, reshaping the concept of work.

His method was to break every factory operation down to its elementary components of workers' movements and then find the most efficient way to perform each. After three years of studying shovels and shovelers at a steel mill, 140 men were doing work previously done by 600 and were being paid 60 percent higher wages.

"Scientific management" became famous in 1910 when Louis Brandeis, representing shippers, convinced the Interstate Commerce Commission to deny some railroads a rate increase because more efficient management of the railroads would produce sufficient profits. The human cost of the passion for efficiency was the reduction of workers from craftsmen to interchangeable parts in a relentless process of the sort Charles Chaplin satirized in "Modern Times." But this human cost led to a new science.

A long, close study of six women assembling telephones at a Western Electric plant showed that no matter what variable varied, from the organization of the work to the sleep the women got the night before, their productivity improved. Suddenly it dawned on the researchers: Research itself — the show of concern for the workers — was enhancing efficiency. As Boorstin says, the "science of human relations" was born. The quest for efficiency led to a more humane workplace.

Fortino, like Taylor, has a humane vision: efficiency producing time for conversation. Time is money, but the efficiency story has an anti-materialist moral: Use money to buy time, not things. Fortino's cool numbers radiate a chilling intimation of our mortality. Time is the only thing that no one can ever have enough of.

More Freedom

A Dream Harbored For Decades

The mountain has moved in Poland. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa met with the Communist government which hopes to solve the latest crisis.

Following the meeting Walesa called on workers to end the strike, which indicated some progress in the talks.

This meeting was unprecedented in recent years. Government officials have not met with Walesa since the union faced a ban in 1982.

The government, faced with a bevy of strikes, felt it was necessary to take some action to quell the unrest. Meeting with Walesa apparently was the most appropriate way to demonstrate flexibility.

Strikes have been under way since Aug. 16 starting in coal fields. The strikes have moved to the shipyards and ports in the coastal area. they can cripple the Polish economy.

Polish workers are particularly unhappy with their standard of living, inflation and wages which don't keep up. Their plight is one with which workers everywhere can feel empathy. When you work hard and can't keep up — much less get ahead and establish a decent standard of living — and don't have the power to improve your situation, oppression has a stranglehold.

The Walesa meeting was a highly significant event since he has been interned in the past for his Solidarity activities. The meetings are expected to lead to further negotiations between the government and workers.

The developments are startling in a communist nation where strikes are considered an act against the government. Viewed from outside the events tell us that communistic economy is failing the Polish people. It is not producing the goods to provide an adequate standard of living for the workers. Thus it is clear that reforms will be necessary.

Communism may not disappear in Poland as events unfold. There will have to be radical changes, however, if the system is not to unravel. The world can hope for more individual freedom and more worker freedom which will allow for individual initiative. It is a dream that the Polish people have harbored for decades and those watching the current proceedings may be witnessing the welcome changes.

A World Of Invigorating Isolation For Ronald Reagan

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Santa Barbara's sandy beaches were rimmed with fog Wednesday and all but abandoned until late afternoon, but it was bright and sunlit in the morning at Rancho del Cielo, where Ronald Reagan is spending the last sentimental summer of his presidency on horseback.

"There is nothing better for the inside of a man than the outside of a horse," Reagan is fond of saying, and he has ridden every day since he arrived here Sunday after a week of partying and politicking in Los Angeles.

For Reagan, the joys of summer begin after breakfast when he saddles up one of the five horses at his 688-acre "ranch in the sky," 2,250 feet above sea level. The president's favorite is El Alamein, an Arabian horse given him by former Mexican president Lopez Portillo. First Lady Nancy Reagan prefers a quarter horse named No Strings.

No one pretends that the First Lady enjoys ranch living as much as her husband, but she is considered an accomplished rider and usually accompanies the president on his morning rides. She also values their time together at an adobe ranch home that Reagan and an assistant have largely rebuilt with their own hands.

The cowboy isolation of the 77-year-old president at his spread in the Santa Ynez Mountains northwest of here may be symbolic of the Reagan presidency. Rancher Reagan is secure, self-reliant, always ready for physical labor and somewhat set in his ways. He is also far removed from the give-and-take of Washington and the workaday cares of Americans, let alone the world.

When a South Korean jumbo jet was downed by a Soviet fighter, killing all 269 aboard, during Reagan's summer vacation in 1983, he argued with his public relations-conscious advisers that he did not need to return to Washington, telling them that "I can do anything here that I could do back in Washington." His advisers agreed with Reagan but said appearances required his return. It took them a day to convince Reagan to cut his vacation two days short.

Reagan has owned his ranch since 1974, when he paid $527,000 for property now believed to be worth more than $2 million, and he has never regretted it. Early in his presidency, longtime aide Michael K. Deaver quoted Reagan as

Bush's Coalition

WASHINGTON — Republican presidential nominee George Bush is challenging Democratic rival Michael S. Dukakis in recent polls with a coalition of voters that differs in key ways from the one that elected Ronald Reagan.

Conspicuous by their absence are the "Reagan Democrats" — self-identified Democrats who supported Reagan in 1984 — who have largely stayed with Dukakis even as his lead over Bush has evaporated.

An analysis of recent survey results suggests that Bush has achieved political parity by winning among men, younger voters, working-class suburbanites and particularly voters with no firm ties to either political party — a volatile voter bloc that represents about a third of the probable electorate.

If he were able to hold onto these voters, Bush would not need anything close to a majority of the Democrats who voted for Reagan in 1984, according to both GOP and Democratic strategists and recent surveys.

These polls, however, also document how susceptible to change the key elements of a potential Bush coalition are. A Washington Post-ABC News poll of 1,088 likely voters in late July showed Dukakis with a 12 percentage-point lead. It also showed that voters who do not strongly identify with either party — a group with a high percentage of younger and less educated voters — supported Dukakis by 47 to 37 percent.

But after the Republican National Convention, polls showed that these same voters backed Bush 53 to 40 percent and that overall Bush pulled even with Dukakis, though no single factor is entirely responsible for the Republican's improved showing.

Significantly, at the same time this stampede to Bush occurred, the Republican nominee claimed less than a third of the Reagan Democrats in each poll.

"All we need is about a third of the Reagan Democrats to win," said Neil Newhouse, a GOP pollster and vice president of the Wirthlin Group. "But the most important statistic that we've been finding in our data is that only about a third of all the Democrats who support Bush voted for Reagan in 1984."

Newhouse suggested that a new swing group may be emerging — Bush Democrats — that could help soften the loss of Reagan partisans to the Democratic Party.

Recent Post-ABC News surveys show that a large majority of Bush's support among Democrats comes from those who did not vote for Reagan in 1984. They also show that Bush gets about one out of eight Democratic votes. But these polls disclose that Dukakis does just about as well with Republicans.

The latest Washington Post-ABC News survey indicates a dead even race, with Dukakis at 48 percent and Bush at 47 percent. That's unchanged from last week's result that found Bush with 48 percent and Dukakis with 46 percent. The polls have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Bush's recent bounce up may be attributable in large part to the afterglow of the Republican National Convention. But approached with a degree of skepticism appropriate for all polls at this early stage of the campaign, the recent surveys do show how Bush has closed the gap and suggest what he must do to achieve victory in the fall.

•Win big among the 30 percent of the electorate with no firm ties to either party. Maintaining a 10 to 15-point advantage among these independents means that Bush can afford to lose two out of three Reagan Democrats.

•Win the gender gap, which doesn't necessarily mean winning a majority of female voters. It does mean maintaining a double-digit lead among men while staying within single digits of Dukakis among women voters, particularly among married women where the gender gap is narrowest. In the latest Post-ABC poll, Bush's lead among men had dropped to 8 percentage points while he trailed by 8 among women.

•Hold onto voters under age 45. In the latest poll, Bush held a slim 5-point lead among 25- to 44-year-olds and a somewhat larger advantage among 18- to 25 year-olds. Success among the under-45 age group has obvious long-range implications for both parties, as younger "Baby Boomers" are now establishing the voting patterns that many will carry for the rest of their lives.

•Win outside the cities, particularly in the inner suburbs that are home to lower-middle-class whites, while giving up no further ground to Dukakis in the urban core and rural areas.

•Win or draw with Dukakis among the fifth of the population with annual incomes at or just below the median, which is about $30,000. Bush can largely write off the poorest voters, who consistently have supported Dukakis by a 2-to-1 margin. And the Republican message continues to appeal strongly to more affluent voters, with Bush leading by about a dozen points among those with total earnings of $40,000 a year or more.

Among likely voters with household incomes between $15,000 and $25,000, however, polls show the race is a dead heat. And among white voters and 18- to 34-year-olds in this income group, Bush currently enjoys double-digit leads.

Holding those results up to a mirror produces some of the key elements of a Dukakis coalition: continued success among middle-aged and older voters, women, blacks, liberals and midwesterners.

The real fight between Bush and Dukakis may come over weakly affiliated Democrats and Republicans and independents, who constitute about 30 percent of the overall electorate. According to the combined results of the last two weekly Post-ABC polls, these voters tend to be disproportionately young, male and live in metropolitan areas. More than half of them have not attended college. They are more likely than either strong Republicans or Democrats to describe themselves as political moderates. And by nearly a four-to-one ratio, they voted for Reagan in 1984.

Bush does extremely well among these Reagan independents, winning seven out of 10 votes. But among persons in this group who voted for Mondale in 1984, Bush gets only one in eight.

Despite the attention that has been given to Reagan Democrats, Bush's improvement in recent polls has little to do with shifts among these voters.

When Bush trailed Dukakis by 13 percentage points in the May Post-ABC News poll, for example, Bush received 24 percent of the support of Reagan Democrats, or only slightly below that found in the recent polls showing him tied or marginally ahead of Dukakis.

Even big changes in the sentiments of Reagan Democrats would translate into only modest shifts in the overall race. That's because Reagan Democrats account for only about 10 percent of the likely electorate. And that means a 10 percentage-point shift among Reagan Democrats would translate into only about one percentage-point change in each candidate's share of support.

Recent surveys also suggest that many Reagan Democrats appear to have made a firm choice. About a third in recent Post-ABC polls say they strongly support Dukakis, while about one out of five are strong Bush supporters. That means only about half of this key group are Reagan Democrats with weak ties to either candidate.

Analysis

telling him, "Look, Mike, you can tell me to do a lot of things, but you're not going to tell me when to go to the ranch. I'm 70 years old, and I figure that the ranch is going to add some years onto my life, and I'm going to enjoy it."

Only once during his presidency — in June 1985 when American passengers were held hostage in the Mideast aboard hijacked TWA Flight 847 — has Reagan canceled a planned vacation at the ranch. By the time he returns to Washington Tuesday he will have spent 335 days of his presidency at Rancho del Cielo and another 95 in California. This means Reagan has spent 430 days, one day in eight during his presidency, in his home state, where the Reagans will retire when he leaves office Jan. 20.

The dwindling White House press corps is sequestered 20 miles away in Santa Barbara, where easygoing spokesman Marlin Fitzwater briefs three times a week. His ranch reports rarely vary: the Reagans breakfast together, they ride, he does routine paperwork, then he chops wood for their fireplace-heated house in the afternoon. In the evening they have dinner together. When a reporter Wednesday observed that the ranch report sounded much like Tuesday's, Fitzwater cracked that he was really giving Thursday's report a day ahead of time.

Santa Barbara has often been a busy place during the Reagan administration. The shooting down of two Libyan fighter planes in 1981, the KAL catastrophe and the 1984 death of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov were among the many reminders that a president cannot control world events. On Reagan's first day of vacation here this year, Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq was killed when his plane exploded.

But this week has been quiet, and the White House is trying to keep it that way. As one reporter put it, "I figured there wasn't much going on when Marlin opened his Monday briefing with the announcement of an NBC party being held four days later."

On Monday, the Reagans took time away from their ranch to host their eighth and final barbecue for the White House press corps. The Reagans for the first time stayed through dinner and led the singing of "Happy Birthday" to White House press secretary James S. Brady, who was 48 Monday.

In appreciation for the barbecues, the traveling White House press corps gave Reagan a seven-foot redwood tree for his ranch, inscribed with a plaque from his "fellow travelers." The corps rejected a plaque reading "Cut me down before I kill again," a famous political sign that mocked Reagan's contention that trees are the principal source of air pollution.

Reagan's trip back to Washington on Tuesday will be a long one. It includes stops in Hasting, Neb., to address a journalism center named after Washington lobbyist Robert K. Gray, who counts Hastings College as his alma mater, and a speech to the American Legion in Louisville.

Reagan has been addressing the Legion since 1980, but the Hastings stop, aides say, is a months-long commitment to Gray by former White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr.

When a reporter asked a White House official if this was Reagan's "most meaningless" stop, the official thought a moment and replied, "I'd have to say it was in the top five."

Martin Pledges Financial Help For Coastal Projects

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Edenton wants a fishing pier, Hyde County, a marina on the Intracoastal Waterway; Plymouth, a boardwalk; Swansboro, marking of Bogue Inlet; and Columbia, a marina and ship's store on the Scuppernon River.

Gov. Jim Martin pledged the state's technical assistance to the projects Thursday, and said money could be forthcoming, though he doesn't know where it will come from.

In another facet of the Governor's Coastal Initiative, Martin also announced that he would ask the state Environmental Management Commission to give nine coastal water bodies a special designation to prevent development that would threaten their "unique value."

"I feel that this will be a good start for our coastal initiative," the governor said at a news conference with several mayors and county commissioners from the participating towns. "We can direct and encourage the right kind of environmentally sensitive development ... to areas where it's appropriate and away from the areas where it would be inappropriate," Martin said.

The coastal plan, which Martin unveiled in November 1987, is going forward in the midst of a sharp debate between developers, environmentalists and government officials over the future of North Carolina's sensitive coastlands.

Critics have voiced skepticism about whether the Republican governor, an outspoken champion of business, would give environmental protection equal footing as the program is implemented.

But Martin said the projects that his initiative would support were proposed by local officials who have to live with the results and would gain nothing from the destruction of the environment.

"None of these made a proposal where they said they wanted to pillage and plunder," he said. "They all made proposals where they said they wanted to ... get the benefit from the beautiful resource that they have and that includes protecting that resource."

Aside from protecting environmentally sensitive areas and stimulating growth in coastal towns, the plan is designed to promote commercial use of the waterway system.

Joe Hollowell, Democratic chairman of the Chowan County commissioners, said Edenton and Chowan County looked at Martin's coastal plan as a challenge.

"Northeastern North Carolina is coming alive; people from up North are finding us out," Hollowell said. "We can either sit back and just watch them or we can control our destiny."

"We will accept the challenge and we plan on taking the initiative. We're not looking at you doing it for us, but we're looking at you giving us the opportunity to do it ourselves."

Sixteen communities applied to take part in the program. The requests were reviewed by a commission headed by former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, and Martin chose the five initial participants. He said all 16 eventually would be brought into the program.

Edenton's projects include converting a section of a bridge over the Albemarle Sound into a town fishing pier when a new bridge is built, improving channel markers and mooring facilities in Edenton Bay, increasing downtown parking space and opening a visitor center.

Areas around Edenton designated for special protection are swamp forests, cypress and gum tree swamps, wetlands and fish nursery spots in Edenton Bay.

Projects in the other communities include marina and boardwalk construction, designation of safe harbors, dredging of Bogue Inlet and establishment of new recreation areas.

The nine water bodies Martin selected as "outstanding resource waters," which Martin said would afford them greater environmental protection, include:

- Swan Quarter and the Juniper Bay area and the Swan Quarter National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County.
- Western Bogue Sound and the Bear Island Area in Carteret County.
- Core Sound in Carteret County.
- Lower Lockwood Folly River in Brunswick County.
- Masonboro Sound in New Hanover County.
- Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge in Tyrrell County.
- Southeastern Pamlico Sound in Carteret and Hyde counties.
- Stump Sound, Permuda and Ashe islands in Onslow County.
- Topsail Island and Middle Sound in Pender and New Hanover counties.

The Environmental Management Commission will consider Martin's request to apply the designations at its Sept. 8 meeting.

Judge Rules Out Home Education

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A federal judge's ruling that the public school system does not have to provide a mentally handicapped teen-ager with round-the-clock home education may prevent a flurry of lawsuits seeking aides for handicapped children, an attorney says.

"I don't think it would be the last (case), if the (decision) went the other way," Ann Majestic, attorney for Burke County schools, said after Wednesday's ruling. "I think there would be limitless requests."

Burke schools filed the lawsuit against the parents of 18-year-old Chris Denton, contending that the schools have set up an adequate special education program in the classroom.

The suit was an appeal of a state hearing officer's ruling in March that sided with the parents and ordered the school system to extend Denton's classroom education to his home by providing one-on-one aides, at least five days a week, during all his waking hours.

In a 21-page decision, U.S. District Judge Woodrow Jones said Carolyn and Lee Edward Denton want the schools to provide home "care," not "education," for their child, who has autism and moderate mental retardation.

"If the (Burke County Board of Education) is required to furnish all the home care demanded for this one handicapped child, would it not follow that all other handicapped children in the Burke County school system might also be entitled to such services," Jones wrote.

Jones said such a situation could cost the school system millions of dollars a year.

During the Aug. 3 and 4 trial, Denton's father and some experts said home aides are needed to reinforce what Denton learns at school and prevent regression.

Jones called the home aides "guards ... to protect the parents and other members of the family, to prepare the child's meals and to take him out to eat four or more times per week ..."

He ruled that state and federal law do not require such in-home services be provided to handicapped people under their right to "free education" between the ages of 5 and 20.

Denton could receive round-the-clock care at a state institution, such as the Western Carolina Center in Morgantown, at no cost to the parents or school system, Jones wrote.

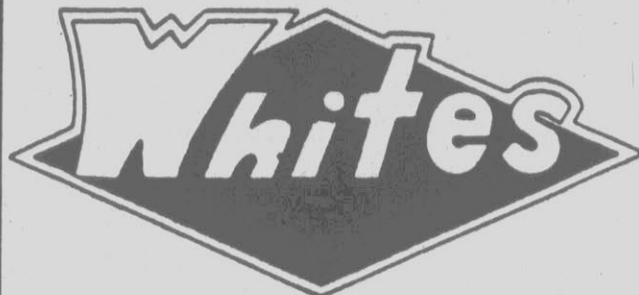

Jones' decision reverses the state hearing officer's ruling and reinstates an earlier local hearing officer's decision that ordered the schools to set up a specialized program for Denton at school, but not at home.

Since January, Denton has attended the West Concord School in Morgantown, where he follows a rigid schedule, similar to the one he followed for four years attending Greensboro schools and living at a group home in Guilford County.

He has an individual aide, a special workplace and longer school hours than the other 71 students at the school for handicapped people.

The program includes summer school. This year, West Concord offered summer school only to Denton. In addition, Denton has one-on-one aides working with him at home before and after the school day.

Before Denton "aged-out" of the Willie M program in mid-July, the aides were funded through the state program for violent, mentally ill children. Now his parents are paying for those aides.

IN THE STATE

Debate

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Bush presidential campaign has challenged the Dukakis campaign to two televised debates, and officials say they are hopeful that one of the events will be held at Wake Forest University.

On Thursday, the Bush campaign proposed two presidential debates and one vice presidential debate, to be held between Sept. 25 and Oct. 17. A debate at Wake Forest was tentatively scheduled for Sept. 25 by a presidential-debate commission.

"Wake Forest looks pretty good," Bob Neuman of the Commission on Presidential Debates said Thursday. "But nothing is final at this point in time."

Bus Service

DURHAM (AP) — Raleigh Transportation Service has gotten $77,115 in federal money to plan and advertise a bus service in Durham, Orange and Wake counties.

"We've got the plan on fast burn and we want to move as quickly as possible," William Williams, president of Raleigh Transportation Service, said.

New buses will cost an estimated $480,000, which the company will pay, Williams said. The first buses will roll in December and early plans are for six buses to cover the new routes.

Child Abuse

SHELBY (AP) — Officers from the Cleveland County Sheriff's Department, while arresting a 21-year-old man for being absent without leave from the U.S. Army, say they discovered a case of child abuse as well.

Michael Brian Church of Stroup Road northeast of Fallston was charged with abusing his 17-month-old and 3-year-old stepsons and was taken to the Cleveland County Jail.

The 17-month-old was in critical condition in Charlotte Memorial Hospital with a fractured skull and second-degree burns on his face, buttocks and the back of his left leg and foot, according to Detective Sgt. David Luckadoo of the Cleveland County Sheriff's Department.

The child has lost the sight in one eye, is missing two teeth and may have permanent brain damage, Luckadoo said.

The older boy was treated at Cleveland Memorial Hospital for bruises on his back and was released into the custody of his grandparents.

Price Probe

SHELBY (AP) — A federal grand jury is looking into gasoline prices in Cleveland and surrounding counties, but details about the probe were not available.

James Gulick, head of the state justice department's Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division, said he was aware of the investigation but would not comment further.

One local oil industry executive, who spoke on the condition that his name not be used, said he and other local distributors were served subpoenas ordering them to appear before a grand jury in Charlotte the week of Oct. 3.

Strangled

ROCKY MOUNT (AP) — A Rocky Mount businessman found dead Wednesday morning was apparently strangled, a pathologist at Nash General Hospital said Thursday.

No arrests have been made in connection with the death of Charles Doak, the 69-year-old owner of Wilson Candy Co. Police suspect robbery as the motive.

"He had a fracture of the skull, fractures of the bones in the face and jaw and he was strangled ... probably (with) hands," pathologist Dr. Patrick Dorion said.

Nurses Pass

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Nursing's 1988 graduates posted an 88 percent passing rate on the national nursing licensing exam given by the state Board of Nursing in July.

Of the 84 UNC graduates taking the test, 74 passed. Statewide, the passing rate was 84 percent of all first-time takers of the exam.

Corps Hears Debate On Texasgulf Permit

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Environmentalists said Thursday that Texasgulf Inc. should not receive a federal permit to mine Beaufort County wetlands in the future, but a company official said failure to be issued a permit would shut down its phosphate operation.

The two sides faced off at a meeting called by the Army Corps of Engineers to discuss preparation of an environmental impact statement for the company's plans to mine 4,300 acres on the south side of the Pamlico River.

Representatives of the N.C. Coastal Federation and the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation said the company should use upland alternatives to mining in wetlands.

But Thomas Regan, manager of Texasgulf's facility near Aurora, said there was no practical way to obtain phosphate ore buried deep under the land away from the rivers and creeks. He said that if the corps denied the permit, the company could not operate its open pit mine and fertilizer plants.

"We have to have the ability to mine the phosphate or we have no reason for being here," he said in an interview.

Corps officials will make a decision on the permit after a lengthy review. The meeting Thursday was intended to identify issues that should be addressed in an impact statement for areas to be mined in the 20-year period beginning in 1990.

Todd Miller, executive director of the coastal federation, said his group was concerned that preparation of an impact statement was "a waste of time and money."

He said the permit requested by the company could not be issued under federal law because phosphate mining is not a water-dependent activity. He also noted that there were alternatives to mining wetlands, and that mining would violate water quality standards.

SUC Rejects Challenge To CP&L Increase

RALEIGH (AP) — Efforts to have parts of Carolina Power & Light Co.'s 9.1 percent rate increase reconsidered have been rejected.

The state Utilities Commission denied requests Thursday by the Public Staff, which represents consumers in rate cases, and the state attorney general's office for reconsideration of evidence involving the value of some facilities at CP&L's Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant. The two agencies contend those facilities were overbuilt and the $135 million rate increase granted CP&L should be reduced by $31 million.

In its ruling, the commission also rejected an effort by the attorney general's office to challenge $6 million CP&L spent to prepare for the rate case.

Thursday's ruling involved the cost of facilities at the Harris plant that were overbuilt because they were designed to serve four reactors but serve only one. CP&L had designed the Harris plant for four reactors but later canceled three of them.

The Public Staff and the attorney general's office contended during rate hearings that the company should have redesigned the entire Harris plant when it began canceling the reactors in the mid-1970s.

The commission, however, ruled Aug. 5 that CP&L had acted prudently in proceeding with its original plans, which included the facilities to serve four reactors.

The commission did rule that $180 million of the cost of the facilities serving the reactor should not be included in the costs to CP&L on which rates are made but should be considered as costs of canceled plants. The move allows CP&L to recover the $180 million from customers over 10 years, but does not make that money part of the basis on which rates are determined.

The Public Staff and the attorney general's office asked the commission to reconsider, citing evidence presented during the rate hearings that showed the excess cost of the facilities for the reactor was $570 million, not $180 million.

Pro-Democracy Protesters Take Burmese Towns

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of anti-government protesters marched today through major cities, and demonstrators took over dozens of towns across the country, sources said.

Students and Buddhist monks led the protesters in Moulmein, 50 miles east of the capital of Rangoon, a Western diplomat said. He said some protesters occupied local government buildings.

"We estimate that up to 40 townships are under the control of the people," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In Monywa, 400 miles northwest of Rangoon, an estimated 300,000 people, including striking government workers and policemen, rallied for democracy and rejected the president's call to return to work, a resident said.

Thousands of people also rallied peacefully in Rangoon, but far fewer were in the streets than the estimated 100,000 who rallied the day before. The demonstrations today were concentrated near two major rallying points, Rangoon General Hospital and the U.S. Embassy.

Demonstrators have demanded formation of an interim government to lead the country back to democracy. President Maung Maung said Thursday that this would be unconstitutional, but he said the ruling party planned a Sept. 12 congress to consider a referendum on ending 26 years of authoritarian single-party rule.

A leading dissident, former Defense Minister Tin Oo, said today: "It is no longer necessary to hold a referendum. The whole country has rejected one-party rule. Only an interim government will be able to ... ease the situation."

A lawyer speaking for the new League for Democracy and Peace, headed by former President Win Maung, said: "It is no time to talk about constitutionality at this stage. The situation calls for an immediate change of government."

A statement from the Rangoon Lawyers' Council said the government violated the Constitution by shooting demonstrators and indefinitely detaining suspects. "It is ridiculous to talk about constitutionality by the government that has violated the Constitution on various occasions," it said.

In his speech, Maung Maung also said his government would legalize student unions, banned since 1962, and rebuild the Rangoon University Student Union Building, which the army destroyed in suppressing dissent that year.

But about 3,000 students rejected that and marched through the streets of the capital. They and thousands of others, including striking government workers, shouted: "The students' cause and the people's cause are indivisible."

A 17-year-old student leader called Maung Maung's speech, "a cunning trick to divide students from the people."

"We are fighting not only for students' rights, but for the entire people. We will continue to demonstrate until the one-party regime is replaced by a democratic regime," he said.

The diplomat said protesters have called for the biggest demonstrations ever in Burma on Sept. 8.

On Thursday night, the newly formed Committee for Democracy, which is composed of 21 elder statesmen and former military officers, called a news conference to air demands for an interim government. The diplomat said they called on protesters to vacate government buildings to avoid confrontation.

The government Wednesday warned it would take action against the illegal occupiers, but the diplomat said there were no signs it was carrying out the threat.

Traffic has become considerably lighter in Rangoon with an ongoing strike at the nation's oil refineries and a shortage of gasoline.

Rangoon's airport reopened today, and Union Burma Airways resumed international flights. Striking employees closed the airport Thursday, further isolating the Southeast Asian nation. Burma's national airline halted domestic flights on Aug. 26.

In Bangkok, Thailand, a Western diplomat said it is "only a matter of time" before former leader Ne Win flees from Burma and that the 77-year-old ex-general probably will go either to West Germany or Switzerland.

"Ne Win's departure would lance the boil in Burma," the diplomat said, also speaking anonymously.

Ne Win led the 1962 military coup that ended democracy in Burma and ushered in authoritarian rule.

Airman, Eight Others Arrested In Zia Crash

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A newspaper said today that an air force squadron leader and eight other people have been arrested in connection with the plane crash that killed President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq.

Jang, an Urdu-language daily, quoted "informed sources" as saying the nine were arrested Thursday night at Islamabad Airport, which doubles as a military airbase.

It did not name the suspects, identify them further, say where they were held, or detail their alleged involvement in the case. Government offices were closed today, the Moslem Sabbath, and officials were not available for comment.

Zia's personal C-130 transport plane took off from Islamabad on Aug. 17 to the southeastern city of Bahawalpur, where he watched a demonstration of the U.S. M-1 Abrams battle tank.

The four-engine turboprop exploded after takeoff on the return flight and crashed. All 30 people aboard were killed, including Zia, U.S. Ambassador Arnold Raphel and several top generals.

More than 20 Pakistanis have been arrested in the crash investigation, which government officials said is focusing on sabotage.

Jang said an airport security officer and some civilian aviation officials had also been detained but were released before the Thursday arrests.

No formal charges have been filed.

Pakistani newspapers have carried uncorroborated reports that investigators suspect the plane either had a bomb on board or was hit by an anti-aircraft missile. U.S. teams are assisting in the probe but officials said no cause has been determined.

Iran Claims 60 Violations In Cease-Fire

GENEVA (AP) — Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati today charged that Iraq has violated the cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war more than 60 times since it took effect two weeks ago.

Velayati also said Iraq was raising new conditions every day to block progress in peace talks aimed at ending the eight-year conflict.

He spoke to reporters as he left the U.N. building after meeting with Jan Eliasson, a Swedish diplomat who is the new U.N. special representative for the talks. Shortly afterward, Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz also met Eliasson to brief him on Iraq's position at the talks.

Iraq is prepared to continue working "sincerely and seriously" toward full agreement on implementing the U.N. cease-fire resolution that forms the basis of the negotiations, Aziz told reporters.

He did not comment on Velayati's allegations.

Both sides have traded charges of cease-fire violations. But U.N. observers monitoring the truce did not report any serious violations by either side, only "minor problems" that were resolved.

"After the establishment of the cease-fire, Iraq has had more than 60 kinds of violations of the terms of the cease-fire," Velayati said. "We have some difficulties because day-by-day they raise some new preconditions."

The two 90-minute meetings were Eliasson's first talks with Velayati and Aziz on substantial issues. Eliasson was formally introduced to them by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar after Eliasson's appointment Thursday.

The two ministers have not met face-to-face since Aug. 26, when the talks stalled. Negotiations have continued at a lower, technical level since.

Perez de Cuellar, who had mediated the talks since they began Aug. 25, left Geneva on Thursday because of other commitments. He said he was frustrated by the slow pace of the talks but that he was trying to end the stalemate. He said he would return to Geneva if necessary.

The talks are stalled over follow-up procedures to the cease-fire that went into effect Aug. 20.

The major problem is the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, which forms the southern border.

Walesa Takes Plea To Striking Miners

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa met today with striking miners in southwestern Poland to persuade them to return to work, and hundreds of port workers in Gdansk protested a management decision to fire strikers.

Five other enterprises remained on strike after Walesa appealed for an end to the work stoppages that began Aug. 16. Walesa said ending the strikes would open the way for talks with the government on workers' demands, including legalization of Solidarity.

Mine spokesman Antoni Pilny said Walesa accompanied by an aide and his parish priest, the Rev. Henryk Jankowski, arrived at the July Manifesto mine and began talks with the miners, who launched the recent wave of labor unrest.

The striking miners said they would not stop their strike unless Walesa came to the mine to explain his decision calling for an end to strikes.

The Solidarity leader had hoped to settle the strike by telephone, Walesa's wife, Danuta, said in a telephone conversation.

In Gdansk, 700 workers gathered at the port this morning after management told about 400 involved in the strike action not to return to their jobs, Gdansk Solidarity spokesman Bogdan Borusewicz said.

Management told the workers to file applications for reinstatement but finally allowed most of the protesters to return to work, the spokesman said.

Strike committee leaders were negotiating with port authorities to secure formal reinstatement. No agreement had been reached, he said.

In the Baltic port of Szczecin, striking dock workers resumed talks with management over pay issues. Striking bus workers there sent a letter to Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak asking for his help to obtain a guarantee of job security for strike leaders.

Walesa called for an end to strikes after meeting Wednesday with government officials to discuss the labor unrest — Poland's worst in seven years.

Explosions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A hand grenade was hurled from a passing vehicle at the home of South Africa's leading mixed-race politician today, and a mine blast damaged a post office in another town, police said.

No one was injured in the grenade attack, which damaged a parked car but did not hit the house, they said. The mine exploded inside a package and caused extensive damage to the post office but no injuries, police said.

The incidents followed a bombing Wednesday that destroyed a Johannesburg office building used by anti-apartheid groups and explosions Thursday in Windhoek, the capital of South-West Africa.

Two people were killed and 15 injured when a bomb went off at a Windhoek hotel, and a mine exploded later alongside a railroad track near the city in the South African-ruled territory. No injuries were reported in the railroad bombing. Officials earlier had said two people were injured.

Bakker May Regain PTL

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The expected announcement that Jim Bakker would sign papers to regain control of PTL has been postponed until at least Tuesday, officials said today. A spokeswoman at the World Outreach Center, PTL's executive offices at Heritage USA, said two lawyers for the bankruptcy trustee and a lawyer for Bakker were meeting today to work on details of the contract. She said the contract would not be signed until Tuesday morning at the earliest.

Bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton was not at PTL today, and had returned home to Winston-Salem, N.C., the spokeswoman said. Telephone calls to Benton's home were not answered.

Benton and Bakker attorney Ryan Hovis of Rock Hill had said Thursday afternoon that the contract would be signed this morning, but a person close to the negotiations who declined identification told The Associated Press today a number of details still had to be worked out, including what to do with Heritage Ministries.

Heritage Ministries is the newly formed non-profit organization that includes the religious operations of the theme park and television complex.

Benton also was waiting on a $3 million letter of credit to secure Bakker's offer of $165 million to buy PTL's assets.

Hovis said Thursday the letter of credit should be available within days.

Benton and Hovis declined Thursday to give details of Bakker's unidentified Greek financiers who were said to be backing the deal.

The person who spoke to the AP said PTL needs more details about the nature of the financing. He declined to be specific.

At Vietnam Memorial, A Friend Is Waiting

By LINDA WHEELER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Marsha Sternberg, with tears streaming down her cheeks, and with her husband, Ken, beside her, stared at the names of her brother and cousin etched in the granite of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. In her hand she held rubbings of both names done for her by volunteer guide John Bender.

It was Bender who approached the couple from Jasper, Ind., and explained that the 58,156 names are organized by day and year of death on the long black wall. And it was Bender who got a six-foot ladder and scrambled to the top to make the rubbings.

"It is clear he loves the wall, that he believes in it," Marsha Sternberg said last week.

"That is one impressive guy," her husband said. "We have met few helpful people in Washington. He was not only very helpful but very kind to us."

Bender, 68, a World War II veteran and a retired Foreign Service officer, seems always to be in the center of a crowd of tourists who are drawn to the tall, angular man with the kindly face. The dark-rimmed glasses, a bit crooked after numerous pushes back along his narrow nose, collide with the bright yellow baseball cap that Bender wears at a jaunty angle. The heels of his black leather shoes are worn from the numerous brisk trips he makes along the cobbled path of the 493-foot-long memorial wall.

People seem to love him. Bender attributes his obvious success in dealing with visitors, many still distraught about relatives and friends lost long ago, to his own life experiences.

"Well, I am kind of a broken-down old drunk who has been faithful to AA for 20 years," he said with a chuckle. "I survived a bout with cancer. And I saw active duty during my war. All in all, I can relate to people with problems."

Bender said he chooses to spend his Wednesday afternoons and evenings at the wall because it makes him feel good to help people understand and appreciate the memorial.

He is helpful on other days as well when he drives cancer patients to appointments or helps his daughter run a day care center for more than 100 children.

Bender has been honored for his work at the memorial by the National Park Service, which named him the volunteer of the year in 1984. Since the memorial was unveiled in 1982, he has worked more than 2,000 hours to show people how to find the names they want to see and to make rubbings of the names.

Three years ago, he formed Friends of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, a private, nonprofit organization that strives to ensure that the memorial continues to honor those who died in Vietnam and help in healing the division and grief caused by the war in the rest of the country.

Friends President Ira Hamburg said the group goes about its work through projects such as making the name rubbings for those who cannot come to Washington.

"We have done more than 10,000 rubbings in the past 18 months," he said. "We also bring in enough volunteers for the monthly wall-washing."

Bender said the group's next project is a proposal to the National Park Service to build a permanent, one-story museum near the memorial to store all the souvenirs and keepsakes left at the wall, such as yearbooks, teddy bears and military medals, which are now kept in a suburban Maryland warehouse.

Park Ranger Terry Barbot, who until recently was in charge of coordinating volunteer activities, said the 160 volunteers who help at the memorials and monuments along the Mall are of critical importance to the Park Service. She said about 80 work at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

"We absolutely need them," she said. "We can't get along without them. And we can use as many more as there are people willing to help out."

"What the volunteers do is assist people on a one-to-one basis, and that is what makes a visit to Washington successful," she said. "Everyone is bewildered by all the names, and then a volunteer steps forward to help, and you can see the bewilderment fade and be replaced by understanding and appreciation."

On Friday, Bender stepped up to Leroy Vogt of San Antonio and asked if Vogt needed help. Bender looked up the name of Henry Garza for Vogt in his large green-covered directory, and found the name on Panel 12 East, Line 44.

Then he and Vogt walked to the panel and jointly made a rubbing of Garza's name on a special form printed by the Friends.

Afterward, Vogt carefully held the rubbing. "Henry and I grew up together," he said softly. "We were best friends. I went into the Air Force and he went into the Army."

Vogt said he was pleased Bender had approached him.

"It was like he looked into my heart and knew I needed help," he said. "I tried to give him money, but he wouldn't take it. I am used to people only being helpful if they are going to be paid for it."

Also on Friday, a day Bender usually isn't at the wall, he stepped into the path of a jogger who seemed oblivious to the crowd of visitors on the sidewalk. As the man tried to push past Bender, the jogger was stopped by a powerful grip on his arm.

"Running is prohibited here,"

Bender said quietly to the startled runner. "I know the sign is hard to see, but you cannot run through here."

The jogger shook free and walked slowly away.

Bender said joggers and people who come to the memorial with large blaring radios upset him. But what concerns him more is the arrival of a group of children who have been given no information about the memorial.

"They will be laughing and shouting, and it's clear they don't understand where they are," he said. "So I go right up to them and say, 'Excuse me, did any of you lose a friend or relative in Vietnam? Well, if he is dead or missing, his name is on this wall.' They quiet right down."

Hamburg, who is also a volunteer at the memorial, said it is Bender's directness that works so well with the visitors.

"He is a dynamic person," he said. "He doesn't wrap himself inside and just stand there hugging the directory. He is always making eye contact. People are hungry for knowledge about the memorial, and John is ready to talk to them."

One of the things Bender is most ready to talk about is security at the memorial. He thinks there is plenty in place already and that the news of the scratches on three of the panels was overblown.

"It seems to me the real story is that there has been no vandalism despite the more than 15 million visitors here since 1982," he said. "Those scratches were just someone acting stupid. Some child playing around. What is important is that we have had no graffiti and no spray painting."

But Bender has done more than simply be helpful to visitors. It was he who devised the system of counting lines of names by 10 to find the right line more quickly, according to Hamburg.

"At first he used little paste-on dots," he said. "Then everyone agreed it was a better system, and the dots were engraved."

It was also Bender who persuaded the Fine Arts Commission to change the proposed design of the night lights for the memorial to one that would be less likely to cause people to trip, Hamburg said.

"If I could, I would clone John," he said. "If we had a John Bender on all shifts, then the memorial would really be serving the public."

Dusting Causes Controversy

DEAR ABBY: I retired about a year ago. Since that time, I have had the opportunity to observe how my wife goes about her housewifely duties — much to her annoyance.

We now have an ongoing disagreement about whether she should dust first or vacuum first. I have brought up that question among our friends, and you cannot believe the arguments it generates.

I say she should vacuum first because vacuuming raises the dust, which can be disposed of by dusting. My wife took the other side: Dust first — then vacuum.

Not to be sexist, most men opted for vacuuming first.

I would like to hear from you, Abby. And perhaps your readers would let you know in what order these chores should be done.

Please don't say, "If you kept yourself busy, you would not care about the order one dusts and vacuums." — JAMES R. PETERSON, CINCINNATI

DEAR MR. PETERSON: Shucks, you stole my answer. But now that you've shown a sincere interest in improving the efficiency of the domestic routine, why don't you take over the vacuuming and dusting yourself? Then you can do it your way, and you'll have nothing to argue about.

Dear Abby

But to answer your question, the last time I cleaned house, I vacuumed last (what a memory!). Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 and recently married a 42-year-old divorced man with two children, ages 18 and 20. My husband told me that he and his ex-wife have had a very good relationship since their divorce. Knowing this, I have tried not to let any feelings of jealousy or insecurity cause problems in our marriage. He told me that he had asked his ex-wife to call him for emergencies only. Well, I think she calls here entirely too much. She calls not only to talk about the children, but mainly because she feels they should have the same closeness as before.

Abby, how do we keep a lot of problems and confusion down, and at the same time keep his ex-wife out of our lives? I feel that his "ex" wants him to continue to treat her as his wife, which is far from reality. Please give me some advice on how to make peace and still solve this. — THE NEW WIFE

DEAR NEW WIFE: Does your husband think that his ex calls too much and wants to continue to be treated as his "wife" — or is that your conclusion?

You need to discuss this with him and come to an understanding. If he is displeased with his ex's behavior, too, then he, not you, should be the one to let her know. Meanwhile, try to cultivate an attitude of compassion rather than competition, since you're the one who won the "prize."

DEAR ABBY: I really would like to have an answer to a dumb question: What is leap year, and how often does it come? Thank you. — CHRIS

DEAR CHRIS: There are no "dumb" questions in my book, so, please, don't apologize. Leap year is a year in which there are 366 days, instead of 365. It occurs every four years. The extra day is added to the month of February, giving it 29 days instead of the usual 28 days.

Flowers Grow Where Drug Dealers Were Weeded Out

By JUSTIN BURKE
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Mary Neil spends most of her time on Detroit's West Side tending her flower garden, trying to make something grow from nothing.

The garden, dominated by pink petunias and cultivated from the rubble of a vacant lot next to her house, still has its fair share of weeds. But Neil says the weeds don't concern her. She's more concerned about planting seeds that will bloom in the future.

Neil's garden is symbolic of the surrounding neighborhood. The area still has a rundown look typical of many sections of Detroit — houses with broken windows and grass growing out of the cracks in the sidewalks. But thanks to projects sponsored by the 12th Street Missionary Baptist Church, the area about four miles northwest of downtown is edging toward a comeback.

"Particularly in the black community, we need economic development," said Charlene Johnson, the administrator of the church-sponsored programs. "We need to be able to use our own resources to do as much as we can for ourselves."

Perhaps the church's most effective program has been REACH — Reach Everyone, Administer, Care and Help. Through REACH, the church has been able to help clean up the neighborhood by purchasing houses suspected of being drug dens.

Johnson said the program has helped reduce crime in the neighborhood but Detroit Police Department officials said there were no available figures to corroborate the claim.

Johnson also said that evicted drug dealers have not caused any problems for the church.

"There are plenty of places where (drug dealers) can go and find abandoned houses," Johnson said. "They don't want any hassles, and they don't want to deal with an organization as large as a church."

The program also has had a noticeable aesthetic effect on the area.

"We're concentrating on renovating houses in a small area, so we can have a visual impact," Johnson said.

The neighborhood still has dilapidated homes with overgrown front lawns. However, houses with newly sodded lawns, fresh white paint, with beds of yellow and pink flowers can also be seen on the block.

Activity in the neighborhood stimulates the senses: the smell of fresh paint, the sounds of hammers banging away and power saws cutting through wood.

The church finds out about potential houses for sale mostly through word of mouth. It bought its first house through REACH in 1982 and has purchased 12 buildings overall. The program has received $299,000 in grants in the past 24 months, allowing for the purchase of five houses last year.

Johnson said the average cost of renovation is about $18,000. The cost would be higher if the church didn't receive a lot of volunteer help, she said.

One who has benefited from the program is Philip Buggs. He said REACH sold him one of its homes for $16,000 after he failed to get a loan from banks. REACH gave him a 15-year mortgage, which he hopes to pay off in seven years.

"Ownership is power," Buggs said. "That's part of the American dream. It trickles all the way down, and we want a little bit of it, too."

Buggs, his face and arms covered with tiny dots of paint, spoke from the porch of a house he was helping to renovate. He said he was painting as part of the church's "sweat equity program," in which a person indebted to REACH can work on church-owned houses to earn credit toward repaying the loan.

"I've worked out in the suburbs and have seen the nice neighborhoods," Buggs said. "This is still in the incubation period, but you can see the difference when you move in; people who want to make something of themselves."

As for the drug dealers, he said it was only natural that they would leave the neighborhood.

"Drug dealers have to have some kind of cover, (such as) abandoned and run-down houses," he said. "And when you start eliminating that cover, they run, just like roaches."

Ruth Eileen Norris Weds Randy L. Nevin

SEATTLE, Wash. — Christ Episcopal Church was scene of the wedding of Ruth Eileen Norris and Randy Lee Nevin, both of Seattle. Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. H. Thomas Norris of Greenville, N.C., and Mr. and Mrs. Willis Nevin of Coos Bay, Ore.

The Rev. Barrett K. Lindsey performed the double-ring ceremony Aug. 20 at noon. Gordon S. Peek was organist for the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Lisa Carloye of Seattle was maid of honor and Margaret Norris Boning of Boston, Mass., was bridesmaid for her sister.

Bill McCash of Charlotte, N.C., was best man. Ushers were Chris Nevin, brother of the bridegroom, and Mike Richards, both of Coos Bay, Kip Wyss of Seattle, and Edward Norris of Greenville, N.C., brother of the bride.

The bride's brother read several selections from the Bible.

The bride wore a gown of white taffeta styled with an English net yoke and wedding band neckline. The fitted bodice was accented by pearls and lace and the skirt extended into a semi-cathedral length train. Her fingertip-length veil had a blusher. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white, lavender and pink lilies, carnations, roses and baby's breath tied with white streamers.

The bride's parents entertained at a buffet luncheon after the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to the Oregon coast, the couple will live in Seattle.

The bride is a graduate of Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash., with a degree in math. The bridegroom is a graduate of Oregon State University and received a master's degree in computer science from the University of Washington. He is employed by Microsoft.

Fascinating Masks Of Fame Draw Crowds To Church

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Inside an old, disused church on Edinburgh's Royal Mile, a strange, even macabre spectacle draws a steady line throughout the day.

Upon a narrow wooden platform around three of the walls, the faces of 45 famous and infamous men are displayed in a dozen glass cases — plaster casts made in their lifetime or after death, and not seen in public since 1886.

They start with a cheerful-looking Sir Isaac Newton, greatest of scientists, who died in 1717, and end with expressionless George Bryce, who murdered a nursemaid in 1864 and was the last man to be publicly hanged in Edinburgh, the Scottish capital.

In between are such historic figures as Prime Minister William Pitt the Younger, composer Felix Mendelssohn and the poets Friedrich Schiller and John Keats.

Novelist Sir Walter Scott's mask has a line across the forehead, showing it was made after the top of the skull was removed at the autopsy in the stroke that killed him.

There is baby-faced John Any Bird Bell, hanged in Kent in 1831 before a crowd of 10,000 for cutting the throat of another youth. "Lord have mercy upon us, all people before me take warning from me," he cried before the gallows trap was sprung beneath his feet.

Visitors pay 50 pence (85 cents) to enter, and lapse into a strange silence as they gaze at the masks.

"I think visitors find it so fascinating because we aren't exposed to this sort of material any more," said Dr. Matthew Kaufman, professor of anatomy at Edinburgh University, who organized the exhibition.

"To see the real features of the famous in three dimensions when they are long dead is fairly startling. If you are looking at a painted portrait you can never be absolutely sure that the image is lifelike, but about these there can be no doubt," Kaufman, 45, said in an interview.

Of the 45 masks on display, nine were made in life and 24 in death. The others could be either.

Those of the poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge and playwright Richard Brinsley Sheridan are far from peaceful and clearly show the final spasm of death.

Kaufman said life masks were common before photography was invented. They were made of plaster with quills through which to breathe, and moulds were then made from the hollow plaster casts.

"We found the masks covered in grime in the cellars and an attic of the university anatomy department," said Kaufman. "It seems ludicrous that they were hidden away for so long."

The collection of 300 masks is one of the world's largest and was once double that number. Damaged masks and duplicates were disposed of years ago and many were smashed in the late 1950s when their shelves collapsed.

The masks include that of John James Audubon, the American artist and naturalist who died in 1851.

French artist Jacques-Louis David is there, and so is Jean-Paul Marat, the French revolutionary agitator murdered in his bath by Charlotte Corday in 1793. David's painting of Marat dead in the bath was a high point of European painting of that time.

Corsican assassin Joseph Fieschi's death mask shows the mutilations he suffered trying to kill King Louis Philippe of France in 1835 with a contraption of 25 rifles bolted to a metal frame and fired simultaneously.

The king escaped and Fieschi and two accomplices were guillotined.

The rogues' gallery includes Edinburgh's notorious William Burke and William Hare, who murdered at least 16 adults and children in the early 19th century to sell the bodies to Dr. Robert Knox, an anatomist.

"There are all sorts of strange things like this lying about, neglected or forgotten. Quite often they get thrown out, sold, broken or destroyed because the right person with the curiosity or the imagination is not there at the right time to rescue them," Kaufman said.

"I'm interested in the masks — and I was sure others would be — because I'm interested in out-of-the-way things," the anatomist said. "They are a welcome distraction from my bread-and-butter work."

Sort clothes carefully and wash very dirty clothes separately. This keeps dirt from being redeposited on less soiled garments.

FALL SUITING — The dramatic peplumed camel suit tapers from broad curving shoulders to fitted waist and slim skirt. Top stitching on the lapels, peplum, cuffs and hem illustrates couture detailing.

Garrett Wants Federal Observers For Vote

ty had worked against him, but he refused to call names.

"This county has ... stuck out its ugly racist neck that we thought was dead. We have seen racism (from people in power) in this election we thought didn't exist."

Election board Chairwoman Nelson B. Crisp said the board has followed election statutes and treated Garrett just as it would have any other candidate.

"There was absolutely no racial involvement in our decisions," she said. "We're sorry he feels that way and we regret he has to make those statements," Mrs. Crisp said. "I'm pleased that he's decided not to give notice of appeal because I feel it's time we got a candidate. I'm sorry he's still angry with us."

Though Garrett apparently won the May 31 Democrat primary runoff by two votes, the county board ruled that irregularities cited by Dupree were significant enough to affect the outcome of the election. Garrett claims Dupree's complaint was not filed within the given time limits and the county board erred by agreeing to conduct a hearing to investigate the issue.

But before the state board could rule on the decision, Pitt election officials uncovered information that Republicans and unaffiliated voters participated in the election.

Only registered Democrats were qualified to vote in the election. The county board held a second hearing last month and ruled that 15 ineligible voters actually cast ballots and the error put the outcome in doubt.

The state board agreed and ordered a new election, and Garrett said he has asked the Justice Department to monitor the election to see that it is conducted fairly.

"We ... (have) invited the Justice Department down to monitor the election as it goes on. We are going to make sure we don't get shafted," Garrett said.

Pitt Elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee said she has submitted a request to the Justice Department to hold the election Oct. 11 because the Voting Rights Act of 1965 requires the county to receive clearance for all election activity.

She said it usually takes the Justice Department 60 days to answer a request, but in an emergency situation — such as this one — the response time is quicker.

Mrs. Hardee said her correspondence with the federal agency concerns only approval of the election date and is separate from any request by Garrett for officials to monitor activity.

Garrett said the controversy surrounding the election has generated lots of interest in the black community and his supporters are itching to go to the polls.

In the May 31 Democratic primary runoff for the commissioner seat from Consolidated District A, election records show 42 percent of the eligible white voters turned out to vote, but only about 18 percent of the eligible black voters participated.

"I think (my supporters) are really ready to get out and beat the socks off this guy," he said.

"I have decided I am going to pull all of my forces together and give him the kind of beating that he has never had. He is going to wish that he had never forced us into this special election."

"I think the black voters have come to realize that their votes do count. I'm expecting to have at least 60 to 65 percent of the registered blacks voting."

Garrett, who first ran for public office in 1956 but has never won office, said his role has changed in Pitt County politics and the voters are ready to elect him.

"Most of my running for office has been for ice-breaking," he said, and he initially ran for office just to show blacks they could do it. "But now I'm for real," he said.

Though the race in question is a primary, the stakes are high because there is no Republican opposition in the Nov. 8 general election and the primary winner would be able to assume office.

Stolen Weapon

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — A Marine has been charged with stealing a 9mm pistol — the missing gun that caused a 73-member artillery battery to be sequestered July 23 for a week.

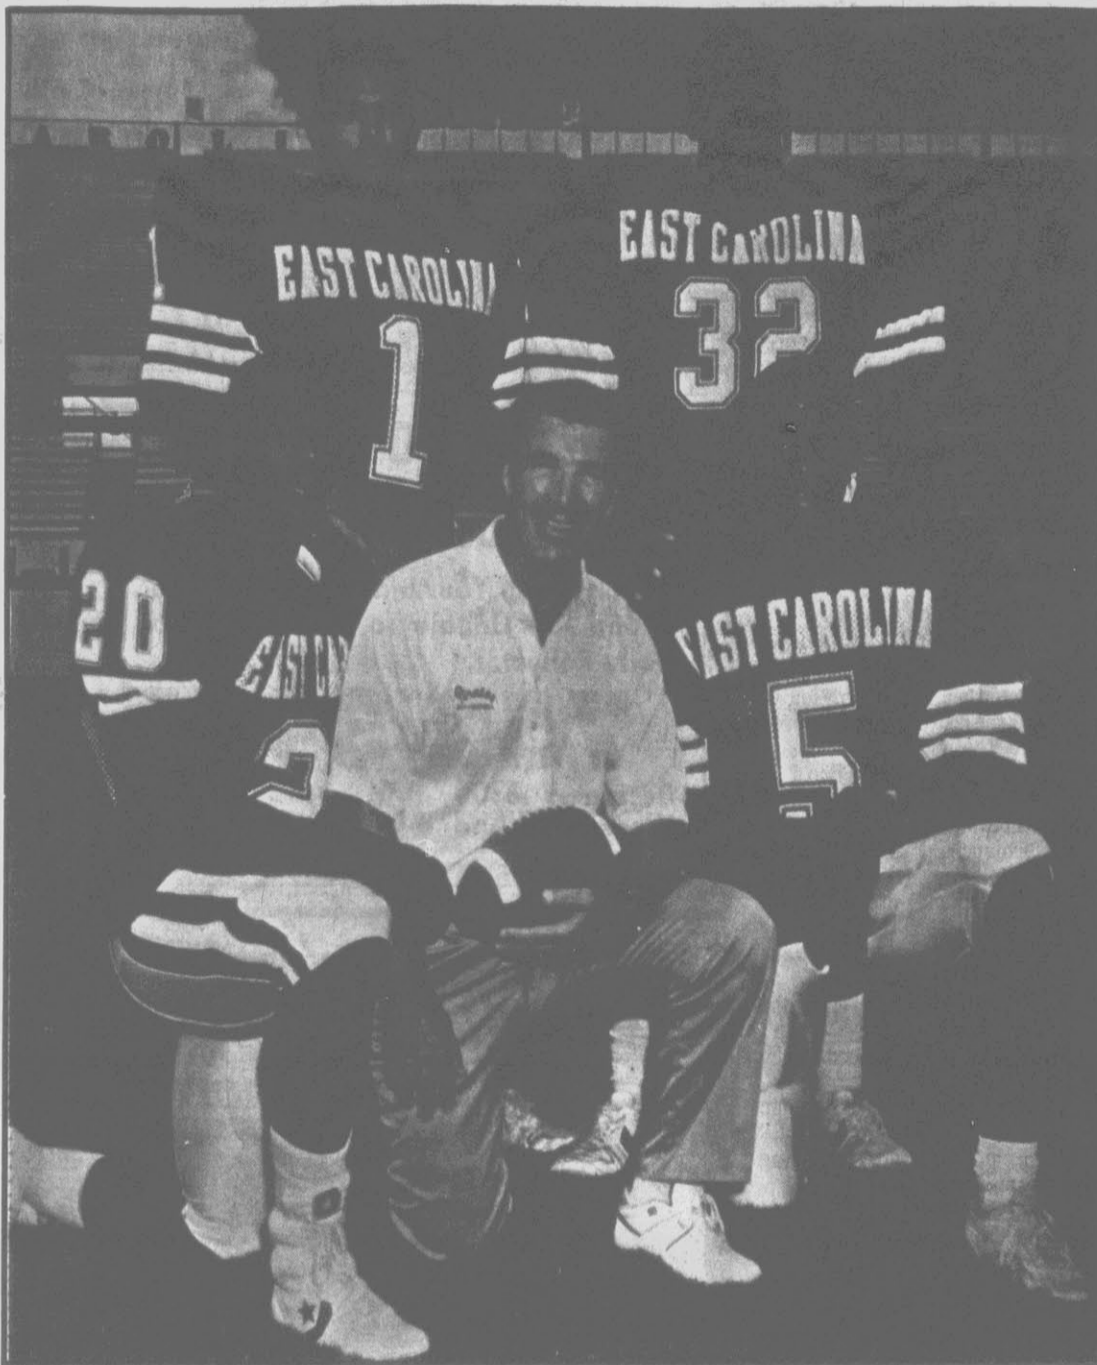

Lance Cpl. Brian Cherry, a member of the sequestered "R" Battery, 5th Battalion, 10th Marines, has been charged with stealing, concealing and attempting to sell the pistol. He has also been charged with possession of marijuana, Camp Lejeune officials said Thursday.

The unit was released after Cherry retrieved the pistol from a wooded area July 29 and turned it over to the base Naval Investigative Service.

East Carolina, Baker Set To Open Season Against Tennessee Tech In Ficklen

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

If there's one person who'll be happy to see the sun come up on Saturday, it may be head East Carolina football coach Art Baker.

It's the first day of the rest of his life, and before the sun comes up on Sunday morning, some of the questions about Baker's future at East Carolina may have been answered. Not all of them, but maybe enough to give somewhat of a trend.

Baker is in the final year of his contract with the Pirates, and Saturday night at 7 p.m., ECU plays Tennessee Tech in Ficklen Stadium. The Pirates return a veteran offense to the field, but have a less-than-tested defense to put up against the Golden Eagles.

While some sources say Baker must win six or seven games to be assured of another year at the helm, others say only continued progress in the program must be shown. Others say discipline problems on the team could be a factor. Those who really know — Athletic Director Dave Hart and Chancellor Richard Eakin — aren't saying what it will take.

Nevertheless — and despite Baker's wishes to not have it as an issue this year — it will remain so until it is settled.

East Carolina, with nine starters back on offense, will be going up against an experienced defense fielded by Tech. They, too, return nine starters on that unit.

Both, however, will field inexperienced teams when Tech has the ball. The Golden Eagles' top returning experience is at wide receiver while the Pirates are most experienced in the secondary.

For the Pirates, it's their first home opener since 1981. For Tech, it will be a chance to beat a Division I-A team for the first time in at least four years. In each of the last four years, they've fallen to Division I-A school — by a combined total of 142-36.

Tech is expected to be much improved this year, the third under Jim Ragland, who coached with Baker when both were assistants at Texas Tech. Ragland's first team went winless in 10 starts, but last year improved to 5-6.

"They ended (last) season on a strong note," Baker said, "with a win over Tennessee-Chattanooga in Chattanooga (20-13)."

Actually, however, that was the next-to-last game. Like East Carolina, the Eagles had a chance to claim a winning season in their final game, but bowed to Middle Tennessee, 17-13, in a close contest on the road. East Carolina, also on the road, bowed to Southern Mississippi, 38-34.

"Jim Ragland has brought their program along well," Baker said. "They played Cincinnati last year (a team ECU beat 56-28) and were tied at the half before finally losing (38-17). I have great respect for Coach Ragland. He's an excellent coach, very offensive-minded, and an excellent motivator. This is sort of like a bowl game for them, since we're the only Division I-A school on their schedule. Too, there are a lot of connections between the two schools."

Former ECU vice-chancellor for academic affairs Angelo Volpe is now the president of Tennessee Tech.

Whi' Tech usually runs from the run-and-shoot, as do the Pirates, they will occasionally line up for the option, and they have been known to run out of the wishbone, too.

"We really don't know what to expect from them offensively," Baker said.

The meeting between the two schools is the first ever. East Carolina has, however, played other Ohio Valley Conference members in the past, Murray State and Eastern Kentucky, winning two of three games.

The Pirates will operate with a veteran quarterback at the helm for the first time in several years. Junior Travis Hunter started every game last year, and is said to be improved in his passing game. He has a newcomer behind him in the backfield in Tim James — but James is a newcomer as a starter only. He saw a good deal of action last year in relief of Anthony Simpson, and is rated as a more versatile player than Simpson.

The slots, Reggie McKinney and Jarrod Moody, both return. McKinney will sometimes shift into the Joe Morgan predicted Larry Parrish would hit his first home run since July 20, and the Boston Red Sox designated hitter made his manager look prophetic.

"He must be psychic or something," Parrish said of Morgan after his two-run homer lifted Boston to a 4-2 victory over California on Thursday night. "He told me I'd hit one tonight."

The victory cut second-place Boston's deficit in the American League East to one game behind the Detroit Tigers, who lost 6-2 to Milwaukee.

Parrish's 10th homer of the season — and third for Boston — gave the Red Sox a 3-2 lead and keyed a four-run sixth inning off Terry Clark, 6-3.

"I think he tried to get the (9-and-2) pitch away, but he made it too good. Too much plate," Parrish said. "It was good for me and good for the club. Anytime I get a chance to help the club, I'm happy about that."

"He left the ball out over the plate to Parrish," California manager Cookie Rojas said. "It should've been a 2-1 game, but he made that pitch too good."

In the only other AL games Thursday night, Toronto beat Texas 5-1 and Kansas City tripped Minnesota 5-2.

With Boston trailing 2-0 on Wally Joyner's two-run homer in the fifth, Dwight Evans led off the sixth with a single off Clark. Evans moved around to third base on a pair of groundouts before scoring on Todd Benzinger's single.

Parrish followed with his line-drive homer to left-center field. Jody Reed then drew a walk and scored as Mike Brown lost Rich Gedman's drive to left in the lights for a run-scoring double.

Wes Gardner, 6-4, went five innings for his first victory in six starts since Aug. 2. He allowed six hits, including Joyner's 13th homer, and gave way to Bob Stanley after Jack Howell's leadoff single in the sixth.

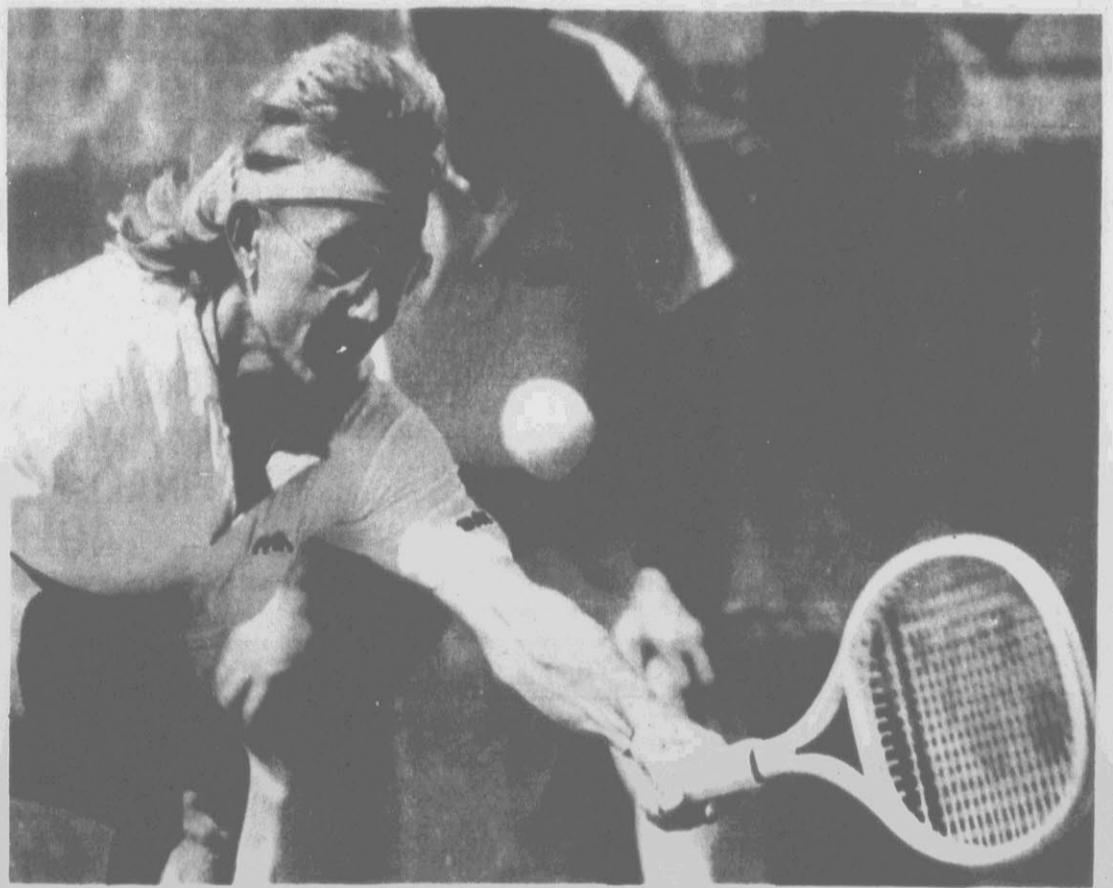

Stanley and Lee Smith then pitched two hitless innings apiece, with Smith striking out four for his 21st save.

"Detroit is all but trying to give us something to us," Gardner said. "We've got to keep plugging away. We're in a pennant race, and if we win, it doesn't matter who gets the victory or how long guys get to pitch."

The win snapped a three-game losing streak for the Red Sox, who were swept by Oakland in their prior series.

"We struggled in Oakland, but we came back tonight," Stanley said. "This is a big series for us. It's good

Elliott Surprised When He Takes Darlington Pole

By RICK SCOPPE
AP Sports Writer

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Winston Cup points leader Bill Elliott is surprised that he will be on the pole Sunday in the 39th annual Southern 500 NASCAR stock car race.

"This particular car here was the one I wrecked in Charlotte in May," Elliott said Thursday after he broke the Southern 500 qualifying record to capture his fourth pole of the year. "It was totally rebuilt. I ran it at Michigan. It ran well there. I hope I've got a few more bugs worked out of it for this particular place."

"Still, you never know. Week in and week out, things change. The car ran good in practice. Really, it kind of surprised me. This place is usually tough to get around and the car drove very well," he said.

Elliott, driving a Ford, was clocked at 160.827 at the Darlington International Raceway to break the race qualifying mark of 158.489 set by Tim Richmond in 1986. Elliott was one of nine drivers to eclipse the qualifying record at the 1.366-mile, egg-shaped oval.

But the Dawsonville, Ga., driver was far off the track qualiifying record of 162.657 mph set by Ken Schrader in March at the TranSouth 500. Schrader failed to qualify Thursday.

Starting alongside Elliott on the front row will be defending champ Dale Earnhardt, who turned in a lap of 160.198 in his Chevrolet.

"That lap felt pretty good," said Earnhardt, who has won three of the last four races at Darlington.

"You always feel like you get a little more out of it. We'd run good in practice, so I knew we had a shot at it. We ran faster in qualifying than we did in practice."

Alan Kulwicki qualified third at 160.167 in a Ford, while Geoff Bodine will start fourth at 159.922 in a Chevrolet.

Kulwicki, who has won three poles this year, was happy but not satisfied with his run.

"It was good but not good enough," he said. "I slipped a little bit. We were real close. We just missed it."

Rusty Wallace will start fifth in a Pontiac, while Darrell Waltrip is sixth in a Chevrolet. Rounding out the top 10 are Mark Martin, Brett Bodine, Harry Gant and Morgan Shepherd.

The first 20 spots for the 367-lap race were decided Thursday, with the other 20 spots to be determined during qualifying today. The race is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. EDT Sunday.

Among those who failed to make the field Thursday were Richard Petty and his son, Kyle, Ricky Rudd, Benny Parsons and Neil Bonnett.

Aussies Bid Farewell To Becker, McEnroe In Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Bye-bye Boom Boom. Hit the road, Mac.

Boris Becker, who never has won a U.S. Open, and John McEnroe, who looks like he might never win another one, were ousted from the tournament Thursday by a pair of Australians.

Darren Cahill, ranked 33rd in the world, and sore feet did in Becker. The fifth seed from West Germany, who hasn't won a Grand Slam title since Wimbledon in 1986, never was in the match, losing 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

"Anyone could see that he was pretty injured," said Cahill, who had words with Becker in England before Wimbledon. "He gave me a little bit of a stink. I chose (Pat) Cash to win Wimbledon, and he (Becker) said that I wasn't that good a player."

"I was very keyed up to play this match. I wanted to win very badly."

Mark Woodforde, ranked 36th, took care of four-time Open champion McEnroe, 7-5, 4-6, 6-7 (3-7), 6-3, 6-1. McEnroe, who lost to Woodforde at the Canadian Open last month, looked very ordinary.

"Of course, when Darren won, it lifted me up," Woodforde said. "We grew up together. I thought he could beat Becker, but when I found out, I still was surprised. I felt if Darren can do it, I can do it."

Becker and McEnroe weren't the only seeds ousted. No. 11 Brad Gilbert was beaten by Jaime Yzaga of Peru 1-6, 6-0, 6-4, 6-2.

The biggest upset among the women was Leila Meskhi of the Soviet Union stunning No. 4 Pam Shriver, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Women's winners included No. 1 Steffi Graf, No. 2 Martina Navratilova, No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 10 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, 11th-rated Zina Garrison, 13th-seed Mary Jo Fernandez and No. 16 Larisa Savchenko.

Advancing in the men's draw were No. 2 Mats Wilander, extended to five sets by Kevin Curren; No. 3 Stefan Edberg; No. 8 Miloslav Mecir; No. 10 Henri Leconte; and No. 14 Andres Gomez.

Guillermo Perez-Roldan, seeded 12th, needed a fifth-set tiebreaker to beat Ken Flach in a match carried over from Wednesday. The Argentine won 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (7-4), 3-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7-4).

Panel Set To Kick Off New Season

Woody Peele

There are a couple of new faces on our panel of experts for this year's football season.

First off, our sports staff has been expanded to three reporters this year as Tim Chandler joins us. Naturally, he will be a member of the group.

Joe Jenkins, after years of toiling at the bottom of the pack, has elected to "retire," so we won't have him to kick around anymore.

In his place, Greg Laudick of the news staff, has joined our group and we wish him luck.

The rest of us are back — sports staffer Tom Morris, news editor Tom Baines, advertising saleswoman Vickie Spivey, and this writer.

For those who care to remember, Morris was the winner of last year's picks while Don Reuter and Clay Deanhardt finished second. Reuter started the year with us and Deanhardt finished off for him when he left the staff for a job in Raleigh. Spivey finished third, while I was fourth, Baines was fifth and Jenkins (yes, we will miss him) was sixth.

Last week's high school picks came out with five right and two wrong. This week, all 11 area schools are in action.

North Pitt travels to North Edgemont. The Panthers were very offensive in pounding West Craven last weekend while North Edgemont threw a scare into Farmville Central. The Warriors have an outstanding passing attack but don't appear to have a runner like Mike Daniels. North Pitt should post win number two in this one, 28-7.

Farmville Central, meanwhile, travels to Roanoke, which is opening its season. The Jaguars will have to operate with a third-string quarterback, but that should be enough. They've made their game-opening errors, and Roanoke hasn't. Farmville to win this one, 20-12.

Rose High School plays host to Jacksonville. The Ram-pants looked quite strong last week against Eastern Wayne while Jacksonville struggled against 2-A White Oak. But don't look for a rout. Something about Rose usually brings out the best in the Cardinals. If they can stop Timmy Moore, it could be close. Still, we pick Rose, 24-14.

In other games, I like Plymouth over Washington, 21-19; Bath over Jamesville, 28-7; Swansboro over Chocowinity, 23-8; Williamston over Perquimans, 7-6; and West Craven over Greene Central, 21-18.

Rounding out the high school action, D.H. Conley visits Ayden-Grifton. The Chargers have a game behind them while Conley is playing its opener. The Vikes are among the favorites in the Coastal, while Ayden-Grifton is coming off a hard loss to strong Wallace-Rose Hill. But the Chargers were coming back strong when the game ended last week.

Our panel is divided on this one, splitting 3-3. My own pick, however, is Conley, 20-14.

East Carolina opens its season Saturday night in Ficklen Stadium against Tennessee Tech. Ironically, ECU sports a veteran offense while Tech has a veteran defense; Tech has an inexperienced offense and ECU has an inexperienced defense. The panel is going down the line with the Pirates in this one, all six of us picking East Carolina. My own pick is the Pirates by 35-17.

Our other consensus picks: Duke and Northwestern, a toss-up; South Carolina over North Carolina; Virginia over William & Mary; Louisiana State over Texas A&M; Clemson over Virginia Tech; Maryland over Louisville; N.C. State over Western Carolina; Georgia over Tennessee; and Florida State and Miami, a toss-up.

Aussies Down Seeds...

Navratilova was scheduled to play again today, against Anne Minter of Australia. No. 3 Chris Evert played Halle Cioffi; No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini took on Julie Richardson of New Zealand; seventh-seed Helena Sukova faced Dianne Balestrat of Australia; No. 9 Lori McNeil played Natalie Bykova of the Soviet Union; and 10th-seeded Claudia Kohde-Kilsch opposed Stephanie Rehe.

Ivan Lendl, the top-seeded man who is seeking an unprecedented fourth consecutive Open crown, played Jay Berger; No. 4 Andre Agassi went against Rick Leach; No. 6 Jimmy Connors took on Gilad Bloom of Israel; seventh-rated Yannick Noah played Jason Stoltenberg of Australia; No. 9 Tim Mayotte played Gianluca Pozzi of Italy; 13th-seeded Jonas Svensson had a night match against Michael Chang; and No. 15 Anders Jarryd played Richey Reneberg.

McEnroe's defeat was his first in a five-set match at the Open after nine wins.

"I expected more out of myself in the end," the 29-year-old McEnroe admitted. "There were a lot of close games the last couple sets, I had a lot of chances and just missed it."

"That's been the story," he said of his performances during his second comeback following self-imposed exiles. "I'm not doing it on the big points. As soon as I can overcome that feeling of choking up, I'll be OK."

Woodforde, who made it to the fourth round here last year, wasn't spectacular. He didn't need to be against the fading McEnroe.

"I think beating him in Toronto made me believe I could repeat it," he said, noting that defeating McEnroe still is "a great thrill."

"He's a legend, one of the best players ever. It's a thrill just to see him. To actually play him is great; to win is even better."

Becker has no idea when his feet will feel better.

"Once you cannot step on your feet, left and right, basically you shouldn't be out there," he said. "It is the U.S. Open, you have to come and you have to play your best."

Becker is hopeful he will be healthy for the Olympics next month.

"I still have a little bit of time, at least three weeks," he said. "I am going. I don't know what is happening in four years, so I would go even with a broken leg."

Wilander improved his Grand

Slam record to 12-1 in five-setters against Curren, playing his best tennis since 1985, when he made the finals at Wimbledon.

"In the fifth set, it's who plays more steady," said Wilander, winner of the Australian and French titles this year. "There is a lot of percentage play, you put a lot of balls into play, you go for the huge shots just once in a while."

Curren's analysis of the loss was simple:

"I didn't play the big points well. I had my chances and I didn't capitalize."

As he almost always does, Wilander did capitalize in the final set, although it took six match points to put Curren away.

"Mentally, this could help me," Wilander admitted. "I've played a big match now, I played a lot of big points and won them."

"I think I will have to be more aggressive the rest of the way."

Edberg, the Wimbledon champion, was plenty aggressive.

"That was a pretty tough opponent and a pretty good match," he said of his 7-5, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Guy Forget of France.

to see Detroit lose again and get it back to one. But our attitude is to play the games one at a time."

Brewers 6, Tigers 2
Milwaukee beat Detroit as Mike Birkbeck and Chris Bosio combined on a four-hitter and Rob Deer hit a two-run single to highlight the Brewers' five-run fifth inning.

The first-place Tigers, who have lost eight of their last 10, didn't get a hit off Birkbeck, 10-6, until the fifth.

Birkbeck, 8-1 with eight straight victories since being called up from the minors July 2, gave up four hits — including a two-run homer by ou Whitaker — and walked one in 5 1-3 innings. Bosio pitched hitless ball for the final 3 2-3 innings, earning his second save.

Loser Doyle Alexander, 11-10, allowed six runs and eight hits in 4 1-3 innings. The Tigers' right-hander is winless in his last five starts, going 0-4 since his last win Aug. 6.

Royals 5, Twins 2
Kansas City right-hander Mark

Gubicza held Minnesota in check for the second time in five days and Jamie Quirk knocked in two runs.

Gubicza, 17-7, who struck out a club-record 14 Twins on Aug. 27 to defeat them 4-1, allowed nine hits in his latest victory, with eight strikeouts and no walks.

Kansas City took a 4-0 lead with three runs on five hits in the fourth inning off Bert Blyleven, 9-13, making his 600th career start. Frank White, Quirk and Bill Pecota hit RBI singles during the inning.

The Twins broke Gubicza's shutout in the sixth on a one-out triple by Kirby Puckett and Kent Hrbek's third straight single. Puckett added an RBI single in the eighth for Minnesota's second run, giving him 60 multiple-hit games this season.

Quirk's seventh homer of the year, leading off the seventh, made it 5-1.

Blue Jays 5, Rangers 1

Toronto's Jimmy Key held Texas to six hits in eight innings and Ernie Whit homered for the Blue Jays.

Key, 9-4, struck out five and walked two before being relieved by Tom Henke to start the ninth. Scott Fletcher's RBI infield single in the second inning accounted for the Rangers' only run.

Knuckleballer Charlie Hough, 11-15, who gave up six hits, four walks and five runs in 5 1-3 innings, held the Blue Jays hitless for 3 1-3 innings until Whitt ignited a three-run rally by connecting on a 2-0 pitch for his 11th homer.

Later in the inning, Rick Leach hit an RBI single and another run scored on the play as right fielder Ruben Sierra booted the ball for an error.

Peete, Trojans Roll By Eagles

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Quarterback Rodney Peete and the eighth-ranked Southern California Trojans let the Boston College Eagles do the talking.

So, on their first trip east since a victory at Pitt in 1974, Peete and his teammates let talent prove itself.

"We heard all week they were going to stuff us," Peete said Thursday night after leading USC to a 34-7 romp over BC in a 1988 opener.

Frustrated in a 23-17 loss which ended a 10-game winning streak last Sept. 19 in Los Angeles, BC vowed vengeance in a renovated Alumni Stadium before a crowd of 32,000.

The Trojans, who used the victory over the Eagles as a springboard to the Pac-10 championship and a trip to the Rose Bowl last season, simply pounded BC into submission in a nationally televised mismatch.

Peete, a fifth year senior with enormous talent, said the Trojans "talked about" BC comments. "But we're not a team that puts everything up on the bulletin board."

Indeed, the Trojans do not. They just put things up on the board that counts, like the scoreboard.

Peete, one of the nation's premier quarterbacks at a school noted for producing great runners, picked apart the BC defense.

He burned the Eagles with two scoring passes of more than 50 yards in the teams' first meeting in history a year ago. This time he took a shorter route.

Peete completed 12 of 19 passes for 173 yards and one touchdown in leading USC to a 21-0 lead before BC scored on a 60-yard pass play from Mark Kampaus to Tom Waddle just before the half.

Then, Peete hit on 9 of 14 passes for 98 yards in the second half, going overhead only to complement his powerful gang of runners who hit the line 53 times for 229 of the Trojans 502 yards.

Owner of a dozen USC passing records, Peete tied another with his 37th career TD pass to Gary Wellman just before BC's only score.

His overhead wizardry played a part in each of USC's other scores. He later said he suffered a cramp in his throwing arm for a while. BC never noticed. There was no cramp in his style.

"I don't think Rodney Peete played any differently than he did last year," BC Coach Jack Bicknell said. "He is a great player. He got the ball off just in time every time. Our defensive line just couldn't get to him and he displayed a great short passing game."

Bicknell, whose Eagles dropped to 5-6 last year after the loss to USC, was disappointed and concerned over "a very frustrating game for all of us."

"I think USC is a better team than the one we played last year," Bicknell said. "We just didn't play very well. The offense didn't play well, the defense didn't play well, and I didn't coach very well."

USC Coach Larry Smith felt his Trojans played "pretty darn well" — even if he and his staff got "greedy" at times.

"I thought we played very, very hard," Smith said, even absolving Peete for throwing interceptions on two long passes.

"Rodney played a fine game, he was really sharp early," Smith said. "We made a few mistakes, but that was the coaches who were being greedy."

"We kept our game under control and I'm pleased with our fire."

"Southern Cal played an excellent game and proved why they are ranked among the best teams in the country," Bicknell said. "I think the key to their success was the short passing game."

USC was so dominating that it only had to punt once while holding BC to 253 total yards, including 65 on the ground. The Trojans ran off 87 plays, 30 more than the Eagles.

Junior Aaron Emanuel, a backup fullback, scored two touchdowns, the first on a short run with the game just 3:17 old, the other on a pass from place-kick holder Chris Sperle after a high snap on a field goal attempt in the third quarter.

Quin Rodriguez booted field goals from 33 and 39 yards in the first half and Leroy Holt added an insurance touchdown on a short run in the fourth period.

In another game Thursday night,

Wyoming edged mistake-prone Brigham Young 24-14 as Randy Welniak tossed two touchdown passes and ran for a third score.

The Cowboys went 8-0 for the WAC crown a year ago and opened defense of that title with a stellar defensive effort in their first game of the 1988 season.

Brigham Young lost starting quarterback Sean Covey to a mild concussion late in the first half and backup Ty Detmer threw three third-quarter interceptions on consecutive drives.

Wyoming's Dave Edeen sparked the defense with five sacks and one interception.

Twelve other members of the Associated Press Top Twenty are in action Saturday, headed by a nationally televised night game (CBS-TV, 9 p.m., EDT) between last year's No. 1 and No. 2 teams — runnerup Florida State at defending national champion Miami. It's the first time the top two teams from the previous season have opened against each other.

In this week's rankings, however, Florida State is No. 1 and Miami No. 6.

But Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden insists, "There's no doubt who is number 1 in the country — Miami."

Hornets Sign Tolbert To Contract

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Former Arizona forward Tom Tolbert, a second-round draft selection by the Charlotte Hornets in this year's college draft, has been signed by the NBA team, officials said.

"I think he's a kid with a lot of potential," said Hornets assistant coach Ed Badger. "He's got an NBA body, a better-than-average shooter and can really pass the ball well."

The 6-foot-8, 242-pound Tolbert played his final two seasons at Arizona after transferring from Cerritos Junior College in Norwalk, Calif., averaging 14.0 points and 6.0 rebounds per game for the Sun Devils.

Tolbert is the second college draft player signed by the Hornets, having previously signed third-round selection Jeff Moore.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed Wednesday.

Senior Games Set To Get Underway

RALEIGH (AP) — More than 1,000 North Carolinians over the age of 55 will converge on Raleigh Sept. 22 for four days of Olympic-style competition, entertainment and fellowship at the fourth annual North Carolina Senior Games state finals.

Each of the 1,155 senior athletes participating in this year's finals qualified at one of the 37 local games held throughout North Carolina last spring. Only the first through third place finishers in each sport at a local game may earn the right to compete at the state finals.

By The Associated Press

Two more NFL players have joined the growing list suspended for drug use.

"Obviously, it's a blow. It's disappointing," Cincinnati General Manager Paul Brown said after learning Thursday that the league had suspended linebacker Emanuel King and cornerback Daryl Smith for 30 days. "But we go on without them. I don't accept it. These people can't feel very deeply about their football team."

King and Smith were the third and fourth players suspended this week under the league's substance abuse policy and the 11th and 12th overall since training camp opened. On Monday, New York Giants' All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor was suspended for 30 days. Seattle cornerback Terry Taylor was suspended for 30 days on Wednesday.

Also on Wednesday, the NFL reinstated six players who had been suspended for 30 days for violating the substance abuse policy. Another player, Washington's Dexter Manley, was reinstated Monday after also serving a 30-day suspension.

King and Smith were informed of the league action after Thursday's practice in the Bengals' camp. They have been instructed to remain out of the Bengals' training facilities until Sept. 30 and will miss at least four games.

"It was a small amount. It was a really small amount," said King, a three-year veteran. "It really hurts a lot. I can't say too much about it. It hurts me in how my teammates are going to look at me. I hope they still look at me the same way as before."

Neither the league, the club or players involved would disclose the exact nature of the chemical abuse.

Smith, who played for the team during the players' strike last year, said: "I don't think it's best if I talk about this. It's probably best for me not to comment either way. Any way you look at it, I won't be playing for 30 days."

The 30-day suspension usually given for a second offense and requires that a player undergo treatment. The initial positive finding doesn't necessarily have to be released by the team or NFL. A third positive test calls for a lifetime suspension which, if given, allows a player to ask for reinstatement after a year.

Meanwhile, teams prepared for the opening games of the season. On Sunday, Atlanta is at Detroit, Dallas at Pittsburgh, the Los Angeles Rams at Green Bay, Miami at Chicago, Minnesota at Buffalo, Philadelphia at Tampa Bay, Phoenix at Cincinnati, San Francisco at New Orleans, the New York Jets at New England, Houston at Indianapolis, San Diego at the Los Angeles Raiders, Seattle at Denver and Cleveland at Kansas City. On Monday night, Washington visits the New York Giants.

Chicago took steps Thursday to shore up an injury-riddled team by picking up former Michigan State Rose Bowl defensive standout Todd Krumm to complete its 47-man roster.

Krumm, named an all-Big Ten safety by The Associated Press, replaced defensive end Gerald Robinson, who was waived earlier Thursday when he failed to report for his physical.

"We are very short on defensive players and are giving several players 24-hour tryouts," said Bill Tobin, the Bears' director of player personnel.

Phoenix brought in veteran cornerback Ron Fellows for a possible tryout with other free agents.

"Starting next week, we're going to start bringing in players for physicals and workouts," Cardinals pro personnel director Larry Wilson said. "It's a way of getting more information on players we have some interest in."

Fellows passed his physical examination but was not signed to a contract. Cardinals Coach Gene Stallings said he will wait to see how newly acquired cornerback Reggie Phillips performs in Sunday's game at Cincinnati before making a decision on Fellows. Phillips was claimed off the waiver wire Tuesday after he was cut Monday by Chicago.

The Los Angeles Raiders released two veteran reserves, cornerback Sam Seale and offensive tackle Steve Wright.

The two were released because roster spots were needed for pass-rushing defensive end Greg Townsend and starting strong safety Stacey Toran. Townsend returned from a 30-day suspension for substance abuse Wednesday while Toran ended a training camp holdout Monday.

The Denver Broncos placed nose tackle Andrew Provenge on injured reserve and re-signed defensive end Walt Bowyer.

Provenge damaged the connective tissue in his right foot during Wednesday's practice and is expected to be sidelined four to five weeks. By going on injured reserve, Provenge is ineligible to be activated for a minimum of four games.

Bowyer, a three-year veteran, had been waived by the Broncos on Monday.

In the Washington camp, Manley met with coach Joe Gibbs to discuss the defensive end's status for the season opener against the Giants.

Manley has been working with the second team behind Markus Koch since returning to camp. Manley wants to start against the Giants, and met with Gibbs to tell him so.

Gibbs, however, says he needs more time to assess Manley's condition.

"He's ready to go to work, that's been his statement," Gibbs said. "Anybody who's a veteran, someone who has played a lot, doesn't want to be a backup."

backfield to run from the tailback position. However, assistant coach Kevin Gilbride, one of the more knowledgeable run-and-shoot coaches in the country, according to Baker, has installed more flexibility to the offense this year.

At the wide receivers, Walter Wilson returns while Al Whiting moves into the spot vacated by Ron Jones, the other senior lost off last year's team.

The offensive line returns intact — guards Stewart Southall and Billy Michel, tackles Grant Lowe and Todd Drugac and center Kyle Condry.

While the defense is not as experienced as last year's, there is a veteran backfield. New defensive coordinator Richard Bell has switched from a three-man to a four-man front for the Pirates, leaving three men in the backfield.

Those three include all-star candidate Junior Robinson, Ricky Torain and Ed Brogdon.

Up front, the Pirates will have Ernie Logan and Joe Bright at the ends, Mike Applewhite and Shannon Boling at tackle. Linebackers will be Anthony Thompson, James Singletary, Brian McPhatter and Flint McCallum.

If there is a part of the game that is questionable, it is the kicking game. Robb Imperato will handle the place-kicking duties, his first varsity experience, while John Jett will do the punting — also for the first time on the varsity.

Robinson, Wilson and McKinney provide the Pirates with a dangerous weapon as kick returners.

Following the Tech game, the Pirates will be on the road for their next two games, at Virginia Tech on Sept. 10, and at South Carolina on Sept. 17.

 Recently, we have shown several examples of deceptive plays that do not need to be elaborate to succeed.

Once in a while, however, a player must weave a very tangled web if he wants to trap an opponent. It is difficult to fault North-South for reaching an inferior slam. As little as the jack of spades instead of the queen-jack of clubs would have made the venture sound indeed.

West led the jack of diamonds, and the only legitimate way for declarer to hold his trump losers to one is to play an opponent for a doubleton ace of trumps, then lead through him up to an honor and play low from both hands to the next trick. The technical name for this maneuver is the Obligatory Finesse. However, that wasn't possible here, but declarer succeeded in pulling the wool over the defender's eyes and so came home nevertheless.

As the first move in his canvas of false images, declarer covered the jack with the queen. East put up the king and declarer won. Next, he cashed the ace of clubs before leading a low spade toward dummy's king.

Let's move into the West seat. From that vantage point, declarer had played as if he had a doubleton diamond and a singleton ace of clubs. He was now trying to get to the table with the king of spades to get rid of his diamond loser, or losers, on the good clubs. West was having none of that, so he shot up with the ace of trumps to try to cash the ten of diamonds. Finis.

TV Industry Plans Anti-Drunken Driving Campaign

By CARLA HALL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

The television industry plans to launch a campaign against drinking and driving, featuring not only public service advertisements but also — in an unusual move — occasional references in entertainment programs about the issue.

The project was developed by Jay Winsten, an assistant dean at the Harvard School of Public Health and director of its Center for Health Communication, to help combat the public health issue of drinking and driving.

According to Winsten, 13 studios have agreed to include some character dialogue relating to the issue, and the three major networks have agreed to create and air public service advertisements during the season between Thanksgiving and New Year's.

"I've asked them not for character development, not for an episode," said Winsten, "but simply to lay in a line or two, so when a character is offered a drink, occasionally he will comfortably say, 'No thanks, I'm driving.'"

The idea, says Winsten, is not to inundate viewers with constant references but to casually and occasionally communicate what the public is increasingly aware of — that drinking and driving is dangerous. "When it's embedded right into the narrative," Winsten says, "you've got (the viewers') attention, they're identifying with the characters."

How the campaign will be played out in the upcoming television season is still unclear.

In the past at CBS, "producers have been encouraged where it is appropriate to create an awareness of substance abuse," said Ann Morfogon, CBS vice president for media relations, West Coast. Morfogon said that approach would continue.

"There aren't any hard and fast rules," she said. "This isn't an assembly line process where we're going to cookie cutter every show. It's up to the producers."

But some studios, perhaps prematurely, have been quite specific — at least in conversations with Winsten. "One studio head committed that he would ask his producers and writers to write it in a minimum of two times per show per season," Winsten said, declining to identify the studio chief.

A number of studio spokesmen said yesterday that plans were not yet firm, and indicated that participation will be up to the individual producers.

"I never mandate to my producers," said Harris Katleman, president of the television division of the 20th Century Fox Film Corp. "However, I know that whenever possible they will put in whatever they can related to drinking and driving. All of them are vitally concerned with this. I would hope that when we had a scene in a tavern where everyone was drinking, someone would say, 'I'm the designated driver.'"

One of 20th Century Fox's most popular shows is NBC's "L.A. Law." Asked about the plans of "L.A. Law" producer Steven Bochco, NBC publicist Brian Robinette said, "He doesn't necessarily respond to blanket endorsements... 'L.A. Law' has been responsible to social issues before. (Bochco) doesn't have to be told to do this in a certain way. He'll find a way to do it."

Marshall Herskovitz, executive producer of the Emmy-winning "thirtysomething," expressed mixed reactions to the campaign.

"Our show is much more an observer of social behavior than a prescriber of social behavior," Herskovitz said. "I certainly hope if in the course of a story the issue came up of drinking and driving that we would handle the issue in a responsible fashion... I'm certainly for designated drivers. But I don't think we're going to programmatically tell people what to do. I just don't think it's the role of the show."

"Television has seen itself as an instructor for change," he continued, "(which is) all to the good. But that role militates against one's role as an artist. It's very hard to do both."

Herskovitz said if the subject or the reference comes up "organically" in the creation of a script that would be fine, but "it would be against the process of this show to agree beforehand we were going to do something like that."

One of the campaign's biggest supporters, television producer and former NBC president Grant Tinker, emphasizes that the campaign is voluntary. "I wouldn't want people to legislate content of any show," Tinker said.

However, Tinker said of Herskovitz's comments, "I think he's taking too narrow a view of the whole thing. He's got a natural vehicle for this message."

Tinker, who now runs GTG Entertainment Inc., said he "will talk with the producers about finding opportunities" to make mention of drinking and driving in his two new comedy series and one new drama series — which is set in a high school and already has one episode focused on a teen-ager killed by a drunk driver.

"I hope that people don't see this in a Big Brotherish fashion," Tinker said. Tinker was one of the first producers contacted by Winsten.

Some television shows have in recent past seasons created episodes where the entire theme was drinking and driving.

"She's the Sheriff" aired an episode last year in which the star, Suzanne Somers, who plays the sheriff (who was widowed when her husband was killed by a drunk driver), holds a New Year's Eve party at the sheriff's station to keep people sober that evening.

"The Hogan Family," in an episode on the theme of friendship, featured one of the teen-age stars of the show, played by Jason Bateman, preventing a friend from driving away drunk from a party by locking him in a closet.

Chuck Norris Takes On Calmer Role For 'Hero And The Terror'

By LOU CEDRONE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Chuck Norris departs from the Norris formula with his newest film.

In most of his recent movies, he has been kicking the bad guys around or searching for MIAs. In his newest film, "Hero and the Terror," he is a police detective in pursuit of a serial killer, which, at first glance, doesn't seem that different.

But, Norris said, "The character has sensitivity and vulnerability, and I liked that."

"Clint Eastwood did 'Tightrope.' That was a stretch for him, and it worked. That was one of the reasons I tried this... I thought it would be interesting to see Chuck Norris in a different kind of film. The man has a sense of honor, and there is romance in the movie. It's a multidimensional film, more so than most I have made."

In Norris' first movie, Bruce Lee's "Return of the Dragon" in 1972, Norris played the villain. For the next seven years, he tended his chain of karate schools. Then in 1979, he did "Good Guys Wear Black," and from then on, he devoted his time to his career as a film actor.

A few years ago, he signed a contract with Cannon Films, an upstart company that was doing very well as long as it stuck to the smaller-budget movies. Later, it began to expand its horizons. It began to make bigger films with bigger names, and when some of them failed, Cannon was in trouble.

"That seems to be changing," Norris said. "They got some Italian money, and they seem to be working their way out of the crisis. I think they were growing too fast, and they fell behind."

He'll continue working for them. "They came along when no one else cared," he said. "It would be easy to jump ship, but I feel a certain amount of loyalty to them, and they're good guys."

The script of "Hero and the Terror" calls for a bit of sex play between the cop and his girl, but it is typical Norris. That is, there is nothing obvious about it. Man and woman do not get into bed and write.

"There are a lot of steamy sex scenes in the book, but I want to see romance come back," Norris said. "If I want to see sexy movies, I'll buy a porno film and show it at home. Let Richard Gere do the sex scenes. I like to see that sort of thing left to the imagination. People want to see relationships on the screen."

Norris is aware that most of the action films that have been released this year haven't done as well as was hoped.

"Well," he said, "Die Hard" is doing very well. "Rambo III" didn't live up to expectations, but the film had problems. He goes out there and gets caught, and there's no one to root for. You've got to have something that grabs, and the film didn't have it."

Norris has one career wish. He would love to do a Western.

He is already working on his next project, a sequel to "Delta Force," in which he was a commando who helped free hostages who were being held on a plane. "The plot will have the Americans unite with the Russians to face a common enemy in the Middle East," he said.

Meanwhile, Norris is on the road, helping publicize his latest movie, something he does rather often. He did the same thing for his book, "The Secret of Inner Strength."

"It was incredible. I signed 18,000 books, and a lot of the people who bought them were women," he said. "I had always pictured my audience as predominantly male, and when you see all those women buying your book, it tends to surprise you."

Role Change

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Rich, who worked on such hit movies as "A Fish Called Wanda" and "Baby Boom" while head of MGMUA Communications Co., has joined Warner Bros.

Rich, chairman and chief executive officer of MGMUA from April 1986 to mid-July, will develop and produce movies and television shows, Warner announced Thursday.

Crawford Leaving 'Phantom Of Opera'

NEW YORK (AP) — "Phantom of the Opera" star Michael Crawford is giving up the ghost, and the lead role in the hit Broadway show will be taken over next month by opera singer Timothy Nolen.

Crawford, who hangs up his mask and cape Oct. 8, won the Tony Award for his portrayal of the deformed composer in Andrew Lloyd Webber's lavish musical.

He played the Phantom in London and New York, and may star in the Los Angeles production opening next spring.

Nolen, who becomes the Phantom on Oct. 10, played the title role in the Houston Grand Opera's premiere of "Willie Stark," later televised on PBS. He starred in "Sweeney Todd" for the Houston company as well as for the New York City Opera.

Nolen appeared on Broadway in 1985 in "Grind," a short-lived musical set in a Chicago burlesque house.

Jerry Lewis Maps Plans With Local Hosts For Telethon

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jerry Lewis, who's spent a lifetime making people laugh, was deadly serious as he faced 250 local television personalities from cities across America — key players in this year's Labor Day Telethon.

"What probably put me in that hospital five years ago was saying goodbye to those little giants," said Lewis, referring to his 1982 double-bypass heart surgery and the children who've been lost to muscular dystrophy in the 22 years he has been raising money through the telethons to fight the crippling disease.

The local TV hosts, ranging from rookies to 20-year veterans, were gathered at Caesars Palace, where final preparations were under way for the telethon this weekend. They spent two days mapping strategy for what has become "the" telethon, Lewis' annual effort for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Lewis, the consummate showman, understands the impact of the local TV hosts in his Labor Day entertainment extravaganza. They orchestrate the 15-minute local cutaways each hour on some 200 stations, dubbed by Lewis his "Love Network."

Last year's telethon raised a record $39,021,723. The annual TV events, which began in 1966 and feature arrays of stars who participate at Lewis' behest, have raised $443,182,370.

This year's show is scheduled to run from 9 p.m. EDT Sunday until 6:30 p.m. Monday.

"Your work has produced some tremendous inroads this year," Lewis told the local TV hosts.

"This is my one shot at thanking you," he said. "We are No. 1 because of your dedication. This year our research-and-patient-care budget was over $100 million, thanks to you."

He praised the hosts who have been with the telethon for as long as 20 years, and he promised the first-timers, "Tis will be the first day of the rest of your life."

Lewis guided the local TV hosts through an emotional three-hour presentation of some poignant taped presentations for this year's show and introduced several victims and their families who are subjects of the segments.

Paul Miller, director of the show, said his hope was that "someday, I'll be able to say I directed the last Jerry Lewis Telethon."

Singer Tony Orlando, one of the co-hosts, urged the local hosts to make 1988 "one more year better than the last year, so we can get closer to that final year."

One of the afternoon's more dramatic moments came when the local hosts previewed a segment on singer-comedian Dennis Day, who died this summer of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's Disease. ALS is one of 40 neuromuscular diseases fought by MDA.

The video segment includes old black-and-white footage of Day as sidekick for the late Jack Benny. As some of his songs play in the background, Day talks of his hope for beating the disease. And two of his 10 children fight back tears as they recall the final months of their father's life.

"I could see it in his eyes," said son Tom McNulty. "He was afraid. I was afraid, too, afraid of losing him."

McNulty then appeared in person before the local TV hosts.

"I wish my dad could be here to celebrate this time," he said. "I wish my dad was here to sing."

Lewis wept at one point when Susan and Leonard DeStefano talked of losing their daughter at the age of 6½ months.

"It's so hard," he said, hugging the parents. "What we don't plan on is the Susan and Leonard DeStefanos. We ask of them an outrageous task — to relieve that pain."

United Airlines executive Bob Sampson, himself crippled by muscular dystrophy, told the local hosts they hold the key to the success of the telethon. He cried as he talked of two of his young grandchildren who died of neuromuscular disease.

"They never had a chance; they never had a chance," Sampson wept, as many of the hosts dabbed at their eyes. "Let's do this for them."

FCC Sets Development Rules For Enhanced TV Technology

WASHINGTON (AP) — The broadcast and electronics industries are praising the Federal Communications Commission's endorsement of advanced television systems with enhanced sound and picture quality.

The FCC on Thursday declared the new systems in the public interest and approved some preliminary rules for bringing them into American homes. But the commission said many technical and procedural problems still must be ironed out.

The "high definition" TV systems will be designed to have the clarity of movie film and the sound of compact discs. They probably will not be available from the U.S. broadcast industry before 1993, according to an official of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Michael Rau, the NAB's vice president for science and technology, said the FCC made a "strong commitment to bring advanced TV to the public. They seemed to reaffirm support for free, over-the-air broadcasting."

"But the commission must solve the difficulties of delivering the system over broadcast outlets."

In a series of preliminary rulings, the FCC said:

—Existing broadcasters and stations are best equipped to bring the new system to viewers.

—Advanced television programs must be received on existing television sets so viewers won't have to replace their equipment.

—If additional frequency space is needed, it should be found within existing VHF and UHF television bands. The FCC found that looking for frequencies outside those bands would delay the service, and noted that bands now suitable for the systems are in use for other purposes.

Mark Rosenker, spokesman for the Electronics Industry Association, said his group of electronics manufacturers is "pleased that the FCC's decision ... has begun to define the complex issues regarding high definition television so that the American public will be able to enjoy the benefits ... within a relatively short period."

The FCC sought public comment on three options for using the airwaves for high definition TV. There would be a 60-day comment period and 30 days for replies.

FCC Chairman Dennis R. Patrick and Commissioner Patricia Diaz Dennis supported all the commission's findings and proposed options. Commissioner James H. Quello dissented on grounds the commission acted prematurely.

Quello said the FCC based its preliminary findings on computer projections and should have waited until the technology was tested and developed.

But Patrick said the technology to improve picture resolution exists today, and the FCC should spur further research and development.
