U.S. Experts Question Soviet Peril

WASHINGTON (AP) — A space mission that endangered two cosmonauts was hastily organized for "pure propaganda" reasons and the crewmen were lucky to escape with their lives, according to an American expert on the Soviet space program.

James Oberg said Soyuz TM-5, with an Afghan crewman aboard, was rushed into space a year ahead of schedule to assure that it flew before Soviet troops completed withdrawal from Afghanistan.

"They asked for this trouble by throwing this mission together for pure propaganda," said Oberg, a space engineer and author of several books on the Soviet space program.

The craft landed safely Wednesday after a tense 24 hours in which malfunctions threatened to leave the cosmonauts marooned in orbit.

In a telephone interview, Oberg said he believes the cosmonauts "were seconds away from death" when a de-orbit rocket engine shut down prematurely left the Soyuz TM-5 in an orbit 155 miles above the Earth. Had the rocket fired for only a minute longer, he said, the craft could have fallen through the atmosphere and burned.

Nicholas Johnson, another U.S. space expert, agreed that the Soyuz mission was organized quickly, but he doubts the rush was related to the malfunction.

"It (the mission) was accelerated and there is every reason to believe it was politically motivated," said Johnson, who works for Teledyne Brown engineering in Colorado Springs, Colo., a major space contractor. "But that had absolutely no impact on the problem that occurred on the spacecraft."

Soyuz TM-5, commanded by veteran cosmonaut Vladimir Lyakhov and with Abdul Ahad Mohmand of Afghanistan on board, undocked from the Mir space station early Tuesday on what was expected to be a three-hour flight back to Earth. But the craft's braking rocket failed to fire on time and then, seven minutes later, fired automatically for three seconds.

Two orbits later, the rocket fired again, but shut down after about 60 seconds. This left the craft in a 155-mile orbit.

A third attempt was successful and the Soyuz landed safely and on target in the Soviet province of Kazakhstan.

Oberg said that based on Soviet public discussions and on tracking data collected by the U.S. Space

Command in Colorado Springs, he believes the problem was caused by some type of computer "software glitch."

"The lighting at the de-orbit burn was not standard, and had never been followed in the four previous TM flights," said Oberg. "The TM is a completely re-engineered spacecraft with new computers, new software, new guidance."

He said the Soyuz TM aligns itself for the braking rocket firing by taking readings with a guidance sensor on the Earth's horizon. On the four earlier flights, these readings were taken as the Soyuz TM craft were approaching sunrise. For Soyuz TM-5, said Oberg, the readings were taken after sunset, in the darkness.

Oberg said he believes the "fault detection" system in the computer was "falsely rejecting the data" from the sensor.

Rangoon Crippled By Strike

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Government officials, soldiers and intelligence agents today joined about 1 million people from all walks of life in peaceful marches for democracy and a strike that brought the capital to a halt.

The Soviet Union, China and other foreign governments evacuated dependents of diplomats and other citizens, diplomats said. An attempt by the United States to do the same was delayed by an airport strike.

Residents said more than 700,000 protesters marched in Mandalay, 350 miles north of Rangoon, and the same number in Monywa, an important trading town 60 miles northwest of Mandalay. More than 100,000 marched in Moulmein, the Mon State capital 50 miles southeast of Rangoon.

In Mandalay, residents said hand-written pro-democracy posters have been put up in front of virtually all houses.

A Western diplomat in Bangkok said the evacuations were ordered because embassies believed the country was "sliding toward chaos."

"It looks like it's drifting towards a real nasty confrontation," the diplomat said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Buildings Razed Near Old Faithful

Two Montana men who refused to evacuate before flames engulfed their home were missing today, and a "firestorm" gutted 17 buildings near Old Faithful geyser in Yellowstone National Park, authorities said.

Wildfires also forced the evacuations of 50 homes in the Shoshone National Forest in Wyoming east of Yellowstone and two dozen homes and a Boy Scout camp near Boulder and Golden, Colo. Fire crews continued to protect two Montana towns near Yellowstone from a huge fire, and battled blazes in Idaho, California, Oregon, Washington and Utah.

In northwest Montana along the North Fork of the Flathead River, one man and possibly his brother may have been caught in the onrushing flames after refusing an evacuation order, said Pam Virdell, a Flathead National Forest spokeswoman.

A man shouted for firefighters to help get his brother out of a cabin, which then erupted in flames, said Dan Black, editor of the Kalispell Inter Lake newspaper, who was at the scene. The man then ran into the forest toward another dwelling moments before fire broke out there, Black said.

Forest officials could not confirm whether anybody perished because "things were happening so fast," Virdell said.

Although federal officials have called this the worst fire season in 30 years, no direct fatalities have been attributed to the blazes, which have charred 3.65 million acres, an area larger than Connecticut.

Last month, a helicopter involved in battling a blaze in Wyoming's Bighorn National Forest crashed after losing power, killing a passenger, a Bureau of Land Management technician.

The northwest Montana blaze, discovered Tuesday, expanded to an estimated 7,500 acres by early today and moved into Glacier National Park, where it burned a ranger station complex and numerous cabins.

Four hikers near the park's Lower Quartz Lake were rescued by helicopter Wednesday afternoon after flames cut off their escape route and they drove their vehicle into the lake to save it.

More than 100 people who live in the area were evacuated, and two park campgrounds were evacuated.

About 200 firefighters protected other structures, including the historic Old Faithful Inn, where a sprinkler line on the roof was activated.

Magazine Ad Promotes Area

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Millions of people across the nation will soon be getting a glimpse of Greenville and Pitt County.

That glimpse will be coming in the form of a promotional advertisement to appear in the Sept. 19 edition of Business Week magazine, a widely distributed publication which focuses on all areas of national business including commerce, marketing and banking.

The half-page advertisement will appear in a special Business Week insert featuring a variety of articles specifically on North Carolina, said Wanda Yuhas, assistant director of marketing and research at the Pitt County Development Commission.

The color advertisement prominently features a tobacco leaf imposed on the keyboard of a personal computer. Under the photograph, the copy reads, "In an area where business has always been growing ... we're growing a lot of business."

Several paragraphs describe Pitt County's economy as recession-proof, calling Greenville and Pitt County an "emerging metro area — a center of attention in N.C. for business, education, health care and the arts."

"It's a vibrant mix of diversified manufacturing, expanding service businesses, a major university, and a sophisticated teaching hospital and research medical school," the advertisement says.

Near the bottom of the ad is an address and telephone number where interested persons can contact the Pitt County Development Commission.

Ms. Yuhas said the ad was placed by the development commission in an effort to position Greenville and Pitt County as an attractive place to either start a business or to relocate one.

She said with an estimated circulation of 2.5 million, Business Week is the kind of publication likely to be read by business decision makers.

Ms. Yuhas said another reason for the advertisement is to help position Greenville and Pitt County in relation to other metropolitan growth areas of the state.

"We want to remind people we are out here," she said. "When people say 'there's Charlotte and then the Triad and then the Triangle,' when they make that next step toward the coast, we want them to say, 'There's Greenville and Pitt County.'"

In addition to the Sept. 19 appearance in Business Week, Ms. Yuhas said the publisher, McGraw-Hill, will send the North Carolina insert as a direct mailing to 1,000 of the cash-richest companies in America, the fastest growing divisions of the 500 cash-richest companies, and to directors of real estate companies involved in corporate site selection.

Storm

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Florence today hovered off the Yucatan Peninsula in the southern Gulf of Mexico, and forecasters warned that it could strengthen to a hurricane within the next two days.

Day-old Florence, with wind of 55 mph, swirled about 120 miles north of Merida, Mexico, this morning, the National Hurricane Center said.

"It has weak steering currents and has moved very little from where it originally formed," said forecaster Miles Lawrence. "But it's over warm water and stands a very good chance of developing into a hurricane."

Florence is the sixth named storm of the 1988 Atlantic hurricane season.

Airport Marks Record Month

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

More passengers passed through Pitt-Greenville Airport in August than in any other month in history, says airport Director Jim Turcotte, who predicted business will pick up even more.

With Piedmont Commuter Airlines and American Eagle Airlines operating 14 daily flights to hubs in Raleigh-Durham and Charlotte, Turcotte said 8,385 people passed through the airport last month, topping the old record of 8,271 in October of 1987.

Piedmont Commuter has 11 daily flights — seven to Charlotte and four to Raleigh-Durham — and an airline official said more flights may be added next year.

Of the August total at Pitt-Greenville, 4,208 passengers flew into the airport on Piedmont and American Eagle and 4,177 passengers boarded the airlines, Turcotte said. Both of those figures are also all-time records.

With the last six months of the year traditionally 25 percent busier than the first half of the year, Turcotte said the airport is on schedule to reach its goal to have 100,000 passengers pass through the facility this year.

"We're going to push that awfully hard," Turcotte said.

Through August, 59,417 people had passed through the airport, and October — usually the airport's biggest month — is yet to arrive.

In addition to the Piedmont and American Eagle passengers, Turcotte said other commercial flights at Pitt-Greenville usually add about 2,500 passengers to the yearly total.

Burroughs Wellcome, for example, operates three daily flights between Raleigh and Greenville for business, but the Federal Aviation Administration considers the flights commercial, Turcotte said, and such flights add to passenger totals.

At neighborhood meetings conducted by the airport last month to allow residents to ask questions about the airport's land-use plan, people from subdivisions north of the airport voiced strong opposition to airport expansion and growth.

But Turcotte said the number of passengers has steadily increased in recent months, and he does not foresee any change in the trend. "We do not see any downturn in what we're doing," he said. "I don't think the meetings we've had have really had any impact on our operations."

Eddie Bacon of Charlotte, marketing director for Piedmont Commuter Airlines, said the airline has had three big months in a row and it may increase the number of daily flights in the spring of next year.

"We still have a ways to grow," Bacon said. "We know the market is there; it just keeps building and building and building."

Bacon said the growth of Pitt Coun-

Family Doctor Says Med Schools Facing Threat

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The number of persons applying to medical schools in the United States is dwindling and those becoming physicians are too concentrated in the medical and surgical subspecialties, Dr. Harry L. Metcalf, president of the American Academy of Family Physicians, said in a talk at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Metcalf was in Greenville Wednesday to deliver the East Carolina University School of Medicine's annual American Family Medicine Lecture.

Metcalf said few medical school applicants and an increasing choice of subspecialties both bode no good for the American public.

He said that if the current trend of fewer applications for medical school continues, schools will need to be closed in order to maintain the quality of the physicians that are graduated.

Metcalf cited the situation in Ohio now in which there are only 1.1 applicants for each of the slots in dental schools within the state. Quality of education will suffer if virtually everyone who applies is accepted, he said. The number of dental schools in that state must be decreased, he said. The same is true or is becoming true of medical schools.

Much federal money, he said, was poured into creating and improving medical schools in the 1960s when a shortage of doctors was perceived. There is still a shortage of family and other primary care physicians, he said, but there are fast becoming too many subspecialists in such fields as neurosurgery and internal medicine. The number of residency slots in these subspecialties need to be adjusted downward, he suggested.

Metcalf said the federal government has contributed to the dilemma with its Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement system. He suggested that it makes little sense for a person spending 30 minutes conducting an angiograph procedure to be able to charge $800, while he, as a family physician, can spend much more time counseling and arranging for treatment for a teen-ager on drugs and be able to charge no more than $80.

The money incentive of entering subspecialties has been strong, he said. He suggested that the large debt that many medical students incur and wish to pay back quickly is an important reason for choosing the more potentially lucrative subspecialties.

He said he believes the ECU School of Medicine is an exception, but that the faculty of many medical schools and other mentors of medical students tend to encourage students to enter the subspecialties rather than primary care. He said he believes, per a suggestion from the American Academy of Family Practice, that every medical student should be required to have at least a clerkship in family medicine during his or her time in medical school.

Metcalf is a family physician practicing in Williamsville, N.Y., who is also a clinical professor of family medicine at the school of medicine at the State University of New York at Buffalo. He has served on the admissions committee of the medical school.

Strong Rhetoric

Bush Seizes The Initiative

Is Republican candidate George Bush currently outcampaigning Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis?

There are signs that Bush is dominating the campaign rhetoric at this point. He seems to have seized the initiative after the flap faded over his vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle's military service.

Perhaps Bush is coming on as a forceful candidate to offset the "wimp" image which was hung on him during the primaries. Considering his long service in high government offices, a "wimp" Bush could not be. It is more likely that he filled the long-time role of an American vice president, never upstaging the president.

At any rate the vice president, who was well behind in the polls taken prior to the Republican National Convention, is now running close with Dukakis and sometimes ahead. While an upsurge in GOP popularity was to be expected at the time of the convention, the poll gap closing has been dramatic.

A sign of concern in the Dukakis camp is the political risk taken by the candidate in restoring John Sasso to the organization. Sasso left during the primaries after acknowledging that he distributed a video tape of Sen. Joseph Biden using excerpts from a British Labor Party leader's speech.

Sasso's expertise is valued by Dukakis and the candidate apparently felt restoring Sasso was an acceptable risk. That might indicate some concern on Dukakis' part as to how the campaign is going.

Dukakis doesn't need Sasso to tell him he must raise concrete issues that are of real concern to the American public if he is to win. While the Republicans are claiming a rosy economy, Dukakis can point to the increasingly widening gap between poor, and even middle class Americans, and the affluent. He can discuss the embarrassment of a record federal deficit run up during the Reagan years. He can point to the waste in defense spending and pledge to keep a strong defense posture while making military procurement more efficient.

Dukakis can pinpoint the concern middle class Americans have for the care of their elderly parents and for themselves in the future.

There are issues aplenty in the record of the Reagan-Bush administration and Dukakis has to pound away at them in the couple of months he has left to campaign. If he lets George Bush get away with the "everything is rosy" approach the public will remain blissfully unaware of the problems our nation faces. On top of that Bush will win.

Stirring The Soviet Conscience

Slowly, agonizingly, the Soviet Union is coming to terms with its past. It is having to accept that for more than 25 years, with the consent of the people, it was ruled by one of the most fearsome tyrants in history. And during all those years, he was revered by most as an all-wise infallible genius.

Nikita S. Khrushchev's "secret" speech detailing Josef Stalin's crimes shocked many in the Soviet Union in 1956, but his message was largely forgotten after Khrushchev's ouster in 1964. During the long Leonid Brezhnev era, the policy was to avoid any discussion of the subject. No biography of Stalin has been published in the Soviet Union since his death 35 years ago.

Until very recently the younger generation, and much of the older one as well, was largely ignorant of the horrors of the Stalin era. They simply did not know, or refused to contemplate, the fact that the victims of Stalin's terror numbered not in the thousands, not in the millions, but in the tens of millions.

Now, gradually, the true story is being told, although understandably with great reluctance, discomfort and embarrassment. In his long speech in November on the 70th anniversary of the revolution, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev could only bring himself to say that the victims numbered in the "thousands."

But while the nation's leaders continue to be circumspect on the subject, a number of writers have stepped forward to provide a truer picture. Perhaps the most telling example was an article by Yevgeny Nosov that appeared in the newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta. Of Stalin, Nosov wrote:

"He left behind a country that was broken in spirit and worn down by the purges, a country crammed full with informers, where even barbed wire was in short supply. He left behind a society without a voice, a society forced by the constant threat of denunciation to think one thing, to say something else, and to nod in agreement with everything."

Of the prisoners released from the camps by Khrushchev, Nosov wrote:

"They appeared at railway stations and on trains, their hair turned leaden gray, with sunken faded eyes, gasping for breath, with a shuffling gait, old before their time. Silent and uncommunicative, they made their way back to their homes, back to their equally aged and withered spouses, to their grown-up unrecognizable and unrecognizing children. Many of those who returned died soon afterward. They could not adjust; they could not withstand this taste of freedom, just as divers who spend a long time at the bottom of the sea cannot withstand the shock of being quickly brought to the surface."

The emotional impact of all this on the Soviet populace is something that probably can never be accurately judged or measured. Shock, bewilderment, anger, resentment, disillusionment, embarrassment, sadness, remorse and shame are only some of the emotions they obviously feel. For the older generation there is the haunting realization that they had been deceived and lied to over the years, and that they were gullible enough to have believed everything they were told. During all the purges, trials, executions and mass deportations, they asked no questions, expressed no doubts, showed not the slightest trace of independent thought. Why not? A question to ponder for the rest of their lives.

After an article about Stalin's crimes appeared in the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, a woman called the editorial office and exclaimed, "What are you doing? After reading your article, my mother and I and my two sisters spent the whole night sitting in the kitchen talking, crying and reminiscing. We cannot accept this. Has our whole life been for naught? Do you realize what you've done to us?"

Others, however, refuse to be disillusioned. An old Bolshevik, A.I. Kuptsov, who had "carried his cross through many camps," was quoted in Literaturnaya Gazeta:

"There were many of us in the camps who were there for no reason. But never once did it occur to me to suspect that our system or our ideals were flawed. The monstrous injustices were simply tragic mistakes of some kind, errors by certain individuals. All my comrades in misfortune felt the same way. We sincerely rejoiced in reports from the outside of the opening of new factories, and we grieved over our shocking defeats at the

The Haunting Specter Of Inflation

A specter is haunting American politics; it is the specter of inflation.

Yet neither side in the presidential campaign wants to raise this unpleasant issue. Not George Bush, for that would give the lie to the greatest supposed accomplishment of Reaganomics. And not Michael S. Dukakis, for even talk of inflation is not thought good for Democrats. And, in any event, neither candidate is ready to say what, if elected, he would do about inflation.

Standing small in this breach is Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who after long delay now admits that inflation is again a problem. To this he offers a most unheroic solution. Small, irregular increases in interest rates are the order of monetary policy this year. These increases are enough to signal anxiety but not so large, we are assured, to threaten the economic expansion. But tight money and high interest rates work against inflation only by slowing economic growth. Measures too weak to slow growth will not appreciably slow inflation.

The fact is that the roots of this inflation are deep, going back to the Reagan administration's decision to depreciate the dollar and restore the growth of exports in 1985. It was a necessary decision at the time; otherwise the expansion itself would have ended. But it had a large, inevitable, unacknowledged consequence: No amount of tight money and high interest rates, short of recession, can stop inflation now.

If Bush becomes president, precedent suggests that he will deal with inflation as Ronald Reagan did: an early, sharp move to supertight money, taking a recession and high unemployment in 1989 or 1990 so as to restore non-inflationary growth by 1992. If so, the '90s will replay the '80s with even larger Keynesian deficits necessary to revive the economy once the bout with old-time religion is over.

For Dukakis the problem is much more difficult. His commitment is to those (the poor and the middle class) who are not cushioned against the effects of recession. His program requires steady growth of the federal revenue base, and so is predicated on sustained economic growth. Dukakis cannot produce social progress and cope with double-digit unemployment at the same time.

Should Dukakis be elected, is there a way for him to get out of this dilemma? I believe so, provided that he and Greenspan agree to work together, on the basis of three jointly accepted principles:

— If recession is bad policy, then the urge to slow inflation with high interest rates must be resisted. The administration and the Federal Reserve should agree instead on the priority of sustained growth, without recession, even as both work to cut the trade gap and restore fiscal order. This means that, as Dukakis reduces the deficit, the Federal Reserve should cut interest rates sharply and let the dollar find its floor in the market. This would spur the continued growth of investment and exports on which growth depends. Meanwhile, deficit reduction would help transfer resources from consumption to the export and investment sectors.

— It is time to settle and not merely manage the debt crisis of the Third World. Settlement must come on terms that favor development, not sterile interest payments on old and unproductive debt. Such a settlement would further raise demand for advanced U.S. investment goods, our major export. And, as a settlement is reached, the Federal Reserve must act to preserve the stability of the U.S. banking system, including bold action to quickly recognize a few irretrievable institutions.

— The United States must pursue a concerted strategy to raise growth rates among our advanced trading partners. Japan and Britain can be encouraged to continue what they have already started. West Germany, a more difficult case on whose policies the fate of Europe depends, must be subjected to unremitting political pressure, and especially to the discipline of a competitive dollar.

Taken together, such policies can work to sustain American and world growth through the first term of the next administration. Yet under this strategy a higher inflation rate is certain, for a time. It is a sad fact that we cannot correct the trade deficit or control the runaway pileup of external debt without some temporary cut in average national living standards.

James K. Galbraith, an associate professor with the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas, Austin, is the author of "Balancing Acts" (Basic Books), to be published in early 1989.

No Ears To Hear

WASHINGTON — Every year I welcome some 1,200 new freshmen to Georgetown University. As the years go on, I am beginning to sound, at least to myself, like a broken record. The basic problem is that I talk from an experience they have not had. Many of the things I want to tell them they don't have ears to hear.

The first is that most of the reasons they had for coming here are either irrelevant or wrong. The beauty of the campus itself, its long lawns and old buildings, the excitement of this capital city, the beauty of the river and rolling country — all are the baseless fabric of a freshman vision, and while they are indeed "such things as dreams are made on" they make for pretty amorphous motivation.

As I stand on the platform and look at these hundreds of young people, bright-eyed and bushy-tailed as they are, I want to tell them another blunt truth: they are in no way a replacement for the seniors the university lost in May. May's graduates were a "class," self-starting, independent and in the way of all living things different from all other classes. Among them, I saw the men and women who had run service groups, edited papers, headed activities, done sports, above all shared with each other and the faculty the life and work of the university.

Classes give, imagine, share and grow together. They are not replaceable by a gaggle of freshmen no matter how promising. I keep saying to myself, "time, time, time," but no bromide like that will overcure the sense of loss. Four years from now these men and women too will be a class. Even for me, four years is a long time off.

Finally I want to tell them that almost 40 years in higher education has taught me that there is only one lesson the best of them will share as they graduate. They will, of course, go through the innards of the university and pick up lots of lore, even though most of it will be neither brought to unity nor ready for use. They will also take on real ballast, called a major, one subject to serve as a measuring rod inside their heads to prevent them from ever again mistaking ignorance for knowledge.

But the best of them (how much I long to say most of them) will all learn one lesson that, while it draws on learning, is not only of the mind. They will learn that in the university as in any other human enterprise you only get what you give.

The Rev. Timothy Healy is president of Georgetown University.

IN THE STATE

Duke Layoffs

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Duke Power Co. officials say layoffs are being considered as part of a sweeping plan to control costs, but officials said reductions would not amount to more than 10 percent of the company's 20,000 employees.

The officials wouldn't disclose an exact number of layoffs Wednesday, but said the size of staff reductions will vary by department.

"We expect to be able to retain more than 90 percent of our employees," Duke Chairman Bill Lee said in a statement. "With these employees and our commitment to be the best, we will maintain our record of quality service to our customers at competitive prices."

Duke officials said the company has begun an intensive 10-week review of its operations and a detailed "self-evaluation" will be completed by mid-November.

Transfers

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Forsyth County Sheriff Preston Oldham says he will demote one lieutenant and transfer two officers who responded to reports of a July 17 shooting that left four people dead, but he denied that the moves were disciplinary actions.

"Based on all of the factors made known to me, I feel my officers were justified in what they did," Oldham said Wednesday.

Questions have been raised about the handling of the case, in which Michael Charles Hayes was charged with four counts of first-degree murder and several counts of assault, among other charges. Two people were killed and at least two injured after officers arrived at the scene. In addition, Hayes' family has said authorities discouraged attempts to have him committed prior to the shootings.

Guard Departs

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The first group of North Carolina National Guard troops to leave the state for an exercise with Italian forces boarded planes Wednesday at Pope Air Force Base.

Nearly 1,100 members of the National Guard will be heading to Italy when all contingents are loaded and airborne this week, said Al Warlick, spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

The 21-day exercise in the countryside of northern Italy is part of NATO's Display Determination '88 exercise.

DWI Acquittal

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Guilford County man on probation for an October 1987 driving-while-impaired conviction was acquitted Wednesday of all charges stemming from the April 1 death of a motorcyclist in a wreck near Summerfield.

Guilford District Judge Bruce Morton found Earl Davis Chaney, 43, of Summerfield innocent of misdemeanor death by vehicle, failure to yield the right of way, driving left of center and driving while his license was revoked.

The charges stemmed from a wreck in which Robert Alan Lisle, 26, of Summerfield died when his motorcycle and Chaney's Ford Thunderbird collided in northwest Guilford County.

A lab report showed that Lisle's blood-alcohol level was 0.29 when he died, almost three times the legal limit of 0.10.

Bus Accident

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Harnett County school bus carrying 37 students was involved in a minor accident Wednesday morning, but no injuries were reported, officials said.

According to Cynthia Wood of the state Highway Patrol, the school bus, driven by Casandra Gail McLean, 18, of Erwin, was traveling north on U.S. 401 when a truck driven by William Harvey Hester, 57, of Greensboro, began to pass on a narrow bridge and the two vehicles sideswiped.

A.T. Greyard of the Highway Patrol investigated the accident. No charges were filed.

None Has Answer To Financing

Candidates Agree More Highway Work Needed To Reduce Backlog

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — While both Republican Jim Martin and Democrat Bob Jordan touted themselves as the gubernatorial candidate better able to produce an effective plan for reducing the state's highway construction backlog, neither candidate knows where the money will come from.

While declining to rule out higher taxes, Martin and Jordan avoided committing themselves Wednesday to specific measures for raising billions of dollars for road construction that both said were desperately needed.

The estimated price tag of state highway needs ranges from $12 billion to $16 billion.

Martin, the Republican candidate for governor, and his Democratic challenger Jordan faced off at a candidates' forum before the North Carolina Highway Users Conference. The conference represents trade associations, companies and individuals ranging from equipment distributors to retail merchants to truckers.

Earlier, the nominees for lieutenant governor — Democratic state Sen. Tony Rand and Republican former congressman Jim Gardner — also discussed highway financing at a separate forum.

The candidates lined up along partisan lines over the $450 million bond issue Martin unsuccessfully pushed during this year's General Assembly session. Martin and Gardner criticized the Democrat-dominated Legislature for rejecting it and Martin said if re-elected he would recommend it again next year.

Repeating a phrase he has used to characterize the Legislature's attitude toward his election-year initiatives, Martin said the Democratic leadership's response to his bond plan had been "not now."

"That proposal is still valid and is still on the table and it's a good way to finance the capital needs, despite what timid critics would say to the contrary," he said.

Jordan and Rand countered bond financing was a worthwhile tool in some instances. But they said Martin's plan — which involved refinancing of existing bonds — would have imposed unacceptably high interest rates and drastically increased the cost to taxpayers.

"It wasn't 'not now, Jim,' it was 'not smart, Jim, to do that,'" Jordan said, turning to his opponent seated nearby on the dais.

But aside from the Martin bond plan, neither was willing to take a stand on the financing tools that have been mentioned: toll roads, user fees, higher sales tax on automobiles, boats and parts and another increase in the motor fuels tax.

Both said they were awaiting the results of a legislative panel's study — which will be released after the Nov. 8 election but before the 1989 legislative session convenes in January.

If re-elected, Martin said, he will resurrect his bond plan "and I'll be looking for other combinations that might elicit or draw out some constructive response from the other side. I'm not locked in concrete."

Holmes Resigns As Chief

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A search will begin immediately to find a new police chief for Goldsboro, following the resignation of Ted Holmes after a woman broadcast personal accusations about him over the town's police radio.

Holmes was replaced Wednesday by Chester Hill, the acting chief.

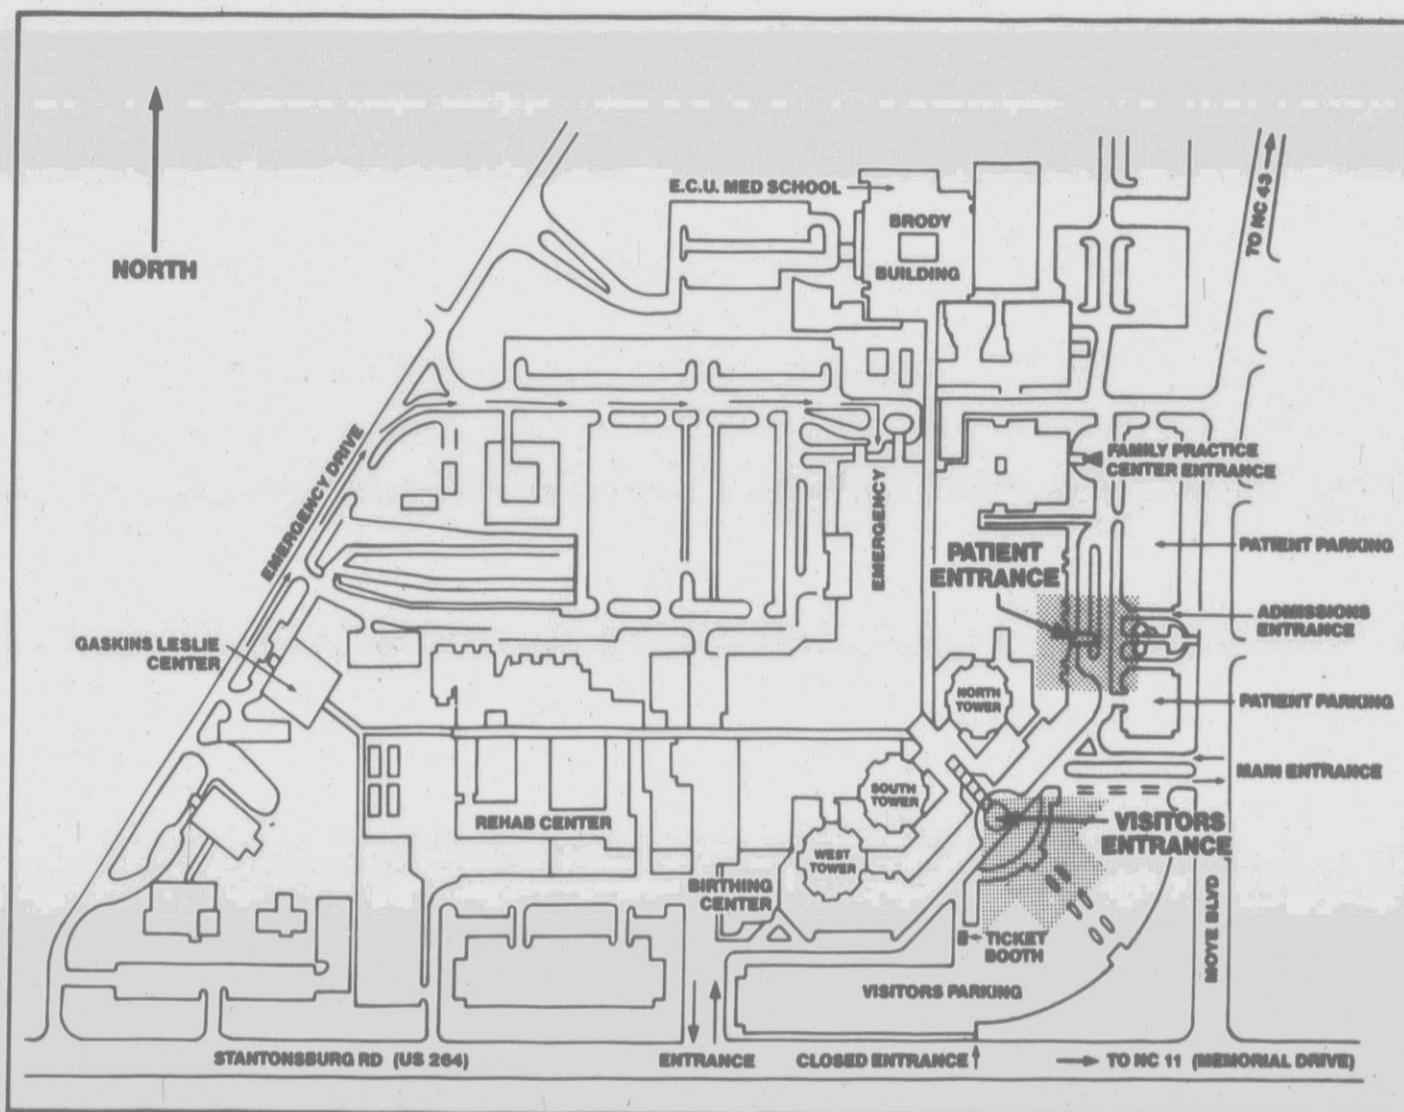

City Manager Richard Slozak said the resignation followed completion of an investigation into an incident in which a woman interrupted police radio transmissions with accusations against the chief. The woman identified herself as the chief's wife.

Slozak said no criminal actions on the part of the chief or his wife were turned up in the investigation. But a report of the radio incident is being filed with the Federal Communications Commission, he said.

Holmes, 50, became chief of the Goldsboro Police Department in July of 1987 after serving for four years as chief of the Greenville Police Department.

Bad Bond?

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An Alamance County man has been arrested after he allegedly tried to bail his girlfriend out of jail using cocaine and stolen clothing as collateral, authorities say.

Greensboro police said Wayne High, 33, of Elon College was charged with possession of stolen property, possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine and possession of drug paraphernalia after a meeting with Greensboro bail bondsman Barry Cohen on Sunday evening.

High's girlfriend, Michelle Swann of Danville, Va., had been charged with shoplifting $400 worth of dresses from a department store. Cohen said High called about posting Ms. Swann's $1,000 bond. Cohen was dubious, however, because the defendant, being an out-of-towner, could be considered a likely candidate to skip her court date.

When asked about possible collateral, High took the bondsman to a car parked outside the Guilford County Jail and opened the trunk, Cohen said. Inside were about a dozen dresses, the price tags still attached.

"He told me they stole them from Belk's," Cohen said in an interview. "I told him I don't know anything about clothes. I'll take TVs, cars, but I don't know clothes."

Cohen said High then produced a foil of white powder from inside the car, claiming it contained high-grade cocaine.

The bondsman protested that he knew nothing about cocaine, either, and would have to get his friend Dave to vouch for the value of the loot. High lent him a quarter to make the call.

Dave, also known as Detective Dave Spagnola of the Greensboro Police Department, said, "As he held up the last piece, I put the handcuffs on him." Magistrate Bill Hohenwarter set his bond at $10,000, explaining that the sum worked out to $1,000 for each charge and $7,000 "for being so stupid," according to Cohen.

High and Ms. Swann, 26, were both placed in the Guilford County Jail.

State Court Says Death Law Valid

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's death-penalty law does not have the flaws that led the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn Maryland's capital-punishment law, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

The ruling in the Maryland case had been cited in appeals of numerous death sentences in North Carolina, according to the state attorney general's office.

"We believe our clear, stable, considered procedure ... is properly responsive to the requirement that capital-sentencing schemes provide for both individualized sentencing and guided sentencer discretion," Associate Justice Willis Whichard wrote for the majority.

"We thus continue to adhere to our decisions in (State vs. Kirkley, a 1983 case) and its progeny and hold that the instructions in question were without error," Whichard wrote.

The state Supreme Court upheld the death penalty in two of the cases Wednesday, ruling 5-2 that the Maryland case had no bearing on North Carolina law.

"Of central importance to these cases is that North Carolina's capital sentencing procedure is constitutional under both the United States and North Carolina constitutions," Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said in a statement.

In North Carolina and Maryland, capital punishment is imposed only if recommended by the jury that convicts a defendant of first-degree murder. The jury decides whether to suggest death or life imprisonment after a post-conviction hearing.

In its deliberations, the jury examines "aggravating" circumstances — factors surrounding the case that would tend to weigh in favor of a death sentence — and "mitigating" factors, which are favorable to the defendant.

For example, an aggravating factor might be a record of previous criminal activity, while a mitigating factor might be cooperation with law enforcement officials during the investigation.

To find that a defendant should be executed, the jury must rule that the aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating factors.

Under the Maryland law, if a jury finds that there was one or more aggravating factors but no mitigating factors, it automatically must recommend the death penalty. That was the major reason for the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to strike down the law as unconstitutional.

But that requirement is not contained in the North Carolina law — a factor in the state Supreme Court's rulings in the two cases Wednesday.

"I believe these cases conclusively decide the ... issue in North Carolina," Thornburg said.

The key ruling came in the case of Dock McKoy, who was convicted of shooting to death an Anson County sheriff's deputy on Dec. 22, 1984. The court applied the same reasoning in upholding the death sentence given Elton Ozell McLaughlin for killing three people, including a 4-year-old girl, in Bladen County in 1984.

Labor Chief Says Union Still Active

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's labor force is one of the least unionized in the nation, but Tar Heel politicians have recently supported several measures that have benefited workers, the head of the state AFL-CIO says.

"Our future is unlimited," Christopher Scott said Wednesday of unions in North Carolina. "Just like (the Polish labor movement) Solidarity, our best days are ahead of us."

Scott said Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., has "a superb record" of working for labor. He cited his support of legislation requiring 60 days notice to workers of plant closings and prohibiting employers from requiring workers to submit to polygraph tests.

"We have good representation in Congress ... now a better representation than ever before," Scott said.

He also credited the state Legislature for enacting improved workers' compensation laws and a right-to-know law that requires informing employees of hazardous materials in the workplace.

Scott said North Carolina leads Southern states and is ahead of many other states in the amount of unemployment compensation pay its workers can draw — up to $228 a week.

He also several upcoming union votes in the state, including one next month at the House of Raeford turkey plant, where he said there have been "shocking and disturbing reports about the treatment of women workers."

"I am appalled by what I've heard," Scott said. "There are allegations of sexual harassment, unsafe working conditions, including frequent ammonia leaks and poverty wages."

Red Tide Leaves Rash Of Surprises

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

In the months since the ebb and flow of the red tide, the algae has had a curious effect on some forms of sea life that has both delighted and defeated some fishermen, experts say.

The infestation of Ptychodiscus brevis left behind algae that proved to be a tasty snack for shrimp and hard clams. But damage to the bay scallop harvest was extensive, said Pete Peterson, a professor of marine science, biology and ecology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The harvest of bay scallops could be more than 50 percent below the average harvest, he said.

"The impact on the bay scallops was surprising," Peterson said. "Some damage to bay scallops had been observed before, but not to this extent."

"The story here seems to be that bay scallops were hurt by it, and clams and oysters were not," Peterson said.

The outbreak of red tide, which began early last November, eventually forced state officials to ban shellfishing along almost 200 miles of coastline. On May 6, the last oyster area was opened to fishing in Carteret County.

But by then, state officials estimated that $5.5 million was lost because of closed fishing areas.

"It's excellent that the fishermen can recover so well from the winter," said Bill Hogarth of the state Division of Marine Fisheries. "In 1987, we were down about $8 to $10 million on brown shrimp. They had a very terrible year."

The news is better this year. The red tide did not affect shrimp in a detrimental way, and it left behind something that was good for them.

"It did improve the carbon levels for bottom eating fish," said Pat Tester, a biological oceanographer with the National Marine Fisheries Service laboratory.

In 1985, shrimpers had a record year with $21 million, according to Hogarth. But in 1987, the figure dropped to $8 million, and Hogarth blamed runoff into the water and cold temperatures in the spring. But North Carolina's 12,000 shrimpers appear to be rebounding.

"Most fishermen I've talked to have been extremely happy with the shrimp season," Hogarth said. "They feel like there's been a little bit of recovery."

Some of the shrimpers are finding out about the crab season first-hand.

"They've been pests," Peterson said of the crabs. "The fishermen go out shrimping and the crabs get in the nets and chew off the heads of the shrimp."

The effect of the toxic algae on crabs, however, is not known.

"Did the red tide help the crabs? I just don't know," Peterson said.

Meanwhile, scientists are trying to figure out what killed the bay scallops, which reproduce around early November, when the red tide was first noticed along the North Carolina coast.

"The areas inland took a beating," Peterson said. "Subsequent data shows that the areas around Bogue Sound and Beaufort Inlet — areas that often contribute to bay scallops — are almost devoid."

There are two theories — the red tide contributed to the deaths of the scallops, or the harvesting of adults disturbed an environment that was critical to the baby scallops, Peterson said.

Offshore Gas Well Opposed

RALEIGH (AP) — Mobil Oil Corp. wants to dig a 14,000-foot well 50 miles off the North Carolina coast, but environmentalists are urging state officials to consider the indirect impact drilling might have on the Tar Heel coast.

"The area under question — the Albemarle Sound and Pamlico Sound and their tributaries — is extremely sensitive from an environmental standpoint," said Douglas Rader, senior scientist with the Environmental Defense Fund in Raleigh.

Rader said the coast is sensitive because it depends on high water quality for its fishing and tourism industries. He also expressed concern over oil spills, mud spills and hydrogen sulfide emissions — a common waste gas associated with natural gas deposits.

At a meeting of a U.S. Department of Interior committee on Wednesday, government officials and environmentalists urged Mobil to seek public input and conduct thorough studies before drilling for natural gas.

"Public input hasn't been accommodated to date," Rader said. "The state at least ... needs to be careful in allowing clear and abundant public input."

Mobil expects to file a permit application with the Department of Interior later this month for a well within a nine-square-mile tract about 47 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras. Drilling could begin as early as next spring, Mobil officials have said.

Accounting Change Cuts Trade Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — An election-year bookkeeping change pushed by the Reagan administration will cause official estimates of the U.S. trade deficit to drop $1.5 billion a month, even though the actual imbalance won't have changed at all.

The change is being made two months before a presidential election in which Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis has repeatedly attacked soaring trade deficits, calling them examples of failed Reagan administration economic policies.

Commerce Undersecretary Robert Ortner defended the change at a briefing Wednesday, telling reporters it was not an effort to manipulate government statistics for political purposes.

"It doesn't change the basic story," he said. "Either way the trade deficit is still large, but it is now improving substantially."

The monthly merchandise trade report due out next week will be the first to reflect the new accounting procedure.

It will show that the United States is importing about $1.5 billion less each month even though the total amount of color televisions, cars and other foreign products purchased by Americans will not have changed at all.

Since the official import figure will be on average $1.5 billion lower, the closely watched monthly trade deficit, the difference between imports and exports, also will be $1.5 billion lower.

Since 1979, the government has included the costs paid to foreigners to ship and insure their products as part of the country's total import bill.

Before then, the monthly merchandise trade figures did not include shipping and insurance costs for imports. These payments were classified as a service and were added to a quarterly trade report known as the current account, which reflects U.S. transactions in both goods and services.

Former Sen. Russell Long, D-La., sponsored an amendment in 1979 that changed the merchandise trade report to include the insurance and shipping costs, arguing that without these costs, the monthly trade report did not properly reflect U.S. obligations to foreigners.

The Long amendment prohibited the Commerce Department from releasing any trade figures stripped of insurance and shipping costs until 48 hours after release of the initial trade report.

The government continued to release the lower import figures, but they received little notice compared to the initial trade report, with its larger deficit.

The administration has now changed that process by getting Congress to approve an amendment removing the 48-hour delay requirement. The change, which attracted little notice, was part of the 1,000-page omnibus trade bill.

Beginning with next Wednesday's release of the July merchandise trade report, the government will release both sets of import statistics. Beginning next year, only the trade data minus shipping costs will be released, Ortner said.

Investments May Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. businesses plan to increase capital spending by 11.6 percent this year, a fivefold increase over 1987, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the increase, if realized, would be the biggest advance since 1984, when spending shot up 16.6 percent as American industry recovered from the steep 1981-82 recession.

The advance would push business investment to expand and modernize production facilities up to a record high of $429.4 billion, after adjusting for the effects of inflation.

The boom in capital investment this year has been one of the main forces driving the economic expansion as businesses have stepped up investment plans in response to heavy demand.

The demand is coming in large part from a rebound in U.S. exports as a decline in the dollar since 1985 has helped manufacturers regain lost overseas markets.

The latest estimate of business investment plans is based on an industry survey conducted over the last two months.

It represented only a small change from a June report, which estimated spending would rise 11.9 percent this year.

Wall Street Firm Faces 'Insider Trading' Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government sued Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. and the head of its high-risk junk bond business, alleging they secretly schemed with convicted inside-trader Ivan Boesky to violate securities laws.

Wednesday's civil complaint by the Securities and Exchange Commission seeks an estimated $100 million, according to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

It followed months of guessing about whether the government had built an extensive case against the Wall Street firm on evidence turned up during the nearly 2-year-old Boesky scandal, which resulted in his imprisonment.

The SEC's complaint accuses Drexel and Michael Milken, head of Drexel's pioneering junk bond operation, of engaging in an arrangement with Boesky that included insider trading, stock manipulation and fraud that benefited Boesky and Drexel at the expense of Drexel clients. Junk bonds, which offer high yields but are highly risky, are often used to finance corporate takeovers.

Drexel's chief executive officer, Frederick H. Joseph, reiterated the company's longstanding claim that it would be absolved of any charges. Milken also again denied any wrongdoing.

"For the past 22 months I have been the subject of a shadow trial of systematic leaks and innuendo based upon false accusations," Milken said in a statement. "No one likes to be sued, but I welcome the opportunity to have at long last a full and open hearing of the allegations in an unbiased forum."

The charges against Drexel, with whom Boesky worked extensively, had been expected since his illegal dealings were revealed in November 1986.

The SEC said it would seek to have the defendants — three companies and six individuals, including Miami industrialist Victor Posner — surrender profits made from illegal stock trades. The lawsuit also sought from Drexel, Milken and Cary J. Mautsch, another Drexel employee, civil penalties of three times those profits.

The agency offered no specific amount, but Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said the SEC was seeking $100 million. In addition, all the defendants could be barred from the securities business.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, whose office successfully prosecuted Boesky and other Wall Street investors for using secret information to make stock transactions, declined to comment on whether Drexel or any of the other defendants faced criminal charges.

There had been speculation the SEC delayed filing its civil complaint to avoid interfering with a criminal investigation. The agency cannot bring criminal charges.

Boesky, who is serving a three-year federal prison term, was forced to surrender a record $100 million in penalties and illegal trading profits.

Drexel and Milken had an arrangement with Boesky involving at least 16 series of illegal securities transactions, the lawsuit said.

Under that agreement, Boesky-controlled companies secretly bought, sold or held securities for Drexel or individual defendants while Drexel sometimes reciprocated with secret transactions for Boesky, the lawsuit said.

Candidate, Soviets Watch Missiles Burn

KARNACK, Texas (AP) — Munitions workers today prepared to destroy two rocket motors from Pershing II nuclear missiles, the first of 867 U.S. missiles to be eliminated under the U.S.-Soviet intermediate-range disarmament treaty.

The static firings at the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant were to be observed by Vice President George Bush and a team of Soviet inspectors, along with hundreds of other people at the 8,500-acre arsenal.

"The Soviets watch the motors' static firing to eliminate the rocket propellant in the motor," said Dave Harris of Karnack, a civilian employee with the U.S. Army's Redstone Arsenal.

In static firings, motors are bolted into a concrete and steel structure, ignited and allowed to burn up their fuel.

"We must then physically disable the rocket motor so the motor casing could not be reloaded and reused again," Harris said. "We're going to do that in a car crusher, squash them in a car crusher."

Weather permitting, workers planned a 50-second burn of one Pershing II motor, followed 15 minutes later by a 40-second burning of a lighter Pershing 1A, said Longhorn spokeswoman Joann Roberts.

"This is the first elimination of such U.S. missiles under the INF treaty anywhere, worldwide," said Susan Franklin, Washington, D.C., spokeswoman for the On-site Inspection Agency, established to implement inspection provisions of the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty between the two superpowers. The Soviets arrived Wednesday afternoon at Gregg County Airport. The treaty allows up to 20 such observers at each elimination inspection.

"There's a cast of thousands behind this thing, including many ambassadors, with people from New York to Russia," said Ms. Roberts. "It's exciting."

Ms. Franklin said that about nine more rocket motors were scheduled to be eliminated in the following week at Longhorn, which is 170 miles east of Dallas.

Officials also will destroy Pershing and their launchers at Pueblo Depot Activity near Pueblo, Colo., and Pershing launchers will be eliminated in West Germany.

The treaty also provides for destruction of ground-launched cruise missiles and their launchers at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base near Tucson, Ariz., said Ms. Franklin.

The treaty became effective this summer and requires the superpowers to dismantle and destroy their intermediate- and shorter-range nuclear missiles. The United States has 867 ground-launched cruise and Pershing missiles scheduled for destruction.

As of Aug. 30, the Soviet Union destroyed 22 medium and 50 shorter range missiles. It must destroy a total of 1,752 SS-4, SS-12 and SS-20 missiles under the treaty.

Real Estate Agent Wins $55 Million

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A 63-year-old real estate agent who "always needs money" randomly picked numbers from the front page of a newspaper to beat the 14 million-to-1 odds for Florida's Lotto, winning a U.S. record $55 million.

Sheelah Ryan, 63, said Wednesday her winning six-number combination — 3, 5, 19, 20, 27 and 35 — was drawn from the first six numbers she saw in The Orlando Sentinel last week. She then bought her ticket near her home in central Florida's Winter Springs.

Twice earlier, Ms. Ryan said she had $4 winners in Florida's 8-month-old lottery. Since then, she bought five tickets each week but was stunned when she watched Saturday's drawing on television and realized she was rich.

"I just kept saying 'Oh, my God!'" she told a room packed with journalists as she was introduced at the Florida Lottery Department offices.

Her first call was to her lawyer. "She told me not to leave the house," Ms. Ryan said, calling Wednesday a day of firsts.

"Today I had my first plane ride. It is not that I'm afraid. I never had a reason to fly before," she said. "This is my first press conference. And this is the first time I ever won $55 million."

The prize was the largest single lottery jackpot in U.S. history. The odds of winning were estimated by lottery officials at 14 million to 1.

Previously, the largest single jackpot was Pennsylvania's $46 million that went to Donald R. Woomer Sr. and Linda K. Despot, a couple from Hollidaysburg, Pa., last October. Two individual ticket-buyers divided a $51.4 million California lottery jackpot in June.

Florida Floods Force Hundreds To Flee

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — More rain along Florida's coast today kept at least 1,000 evacuated residents wondering when they could return to homes swamped by a four-day torrent that swept away a motorist and left a toddler drowned.

"We have to make sure everything is OK before we let people back in," Red Cross spokeswoman Rita Dralus said. "There are water moccasins and there are gators because ponds have overflowed, and electricity and water definitely don't mix."

The National Guard was placed on alert as residents bailed out from the 9 to 15 inches of rain that has fallen along the state's central Gulf Coast since Sunday, turning streets into rivers and spilling sewage into living rooms.

It is the area's heaviest rain in a decade, surpassing the deluge that accompanied Hurricane Elena in 1985.

"We just cannot handle all that rain," said George Parks, Manatee County's drainage superintendent.

"It's the worst we've had in the 11 years I've been here."

The rain fell from a near-stationary cold front hovering across the central Florida peninsula. The National Weather Service predicted that 4 more inches could fall today before the front slowly moved northeast.

Showers and thunderstorms were also predicted today for southern Georgia and coastal South Carolina, but no other flood warnings were issued.

Almost all low-lying areas were flooded in 10 Tampa Bay-area counties. Most rivers were either flooded or forecast to reach flood stage.

In Tampa, divers were still searching for James Edward Mercer, 45, who disappeared in floodwaters after a car stalled in a drainage ditch and began to float. Three passengers were rescued by passersby.

Witnesses saw Mercer surface in the murky water, his arms flailing, but he was towed under by the strong current before rescuers could reach him, said Tampa police spokesman Steve Cole.

U.N. Holds $7 Billion Nest Egg, While It Goes Broke

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. officials are caught in a maddening situation, sitting on a $7.2 billion nest egg they can't touch while planning to close the world body next month for lack of cash.

Members countries owe the United Nations $602 million in dues. Two-thirds of it is owed by the United States, which has been withholding funds to try to force the world body to implement fiscal reforms.

Undersecretary-General Joseph V. Reed, the top U.S. official at the United Nations, says the organization will be unable to meet its payroll and other fixed expenses by late October if the United States doesn't pay some of its $467 million debt.

Meanwhile, the untouchable pension fund managed by the United Nations since 1949 has grown to a gross value of $7.2 billion, a U.N. official said Wednesday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The United Nations manages the pension fund for its employees and those of 16 related agencies such as UNESCO, the World Health Organization, and the International Labor Organization.

About 43 percent of the fund is invested in stocks; 34 percent in bonds; 11 percent in real estate funds, but not in any actual property; and 12 percent is in short-term investments, said the official.

The investments are spread among 27 different currencies in 44 nations, so the U.N. pension fund won't be sapped by currency fluctuations. The fund grew at an average rate of 22.3 percent each year for five years while riding the stock market boom, a cycle that went bust last October when the markets crashed. Because of the diversity of the fund, it lost only about 5 percent of its value in the crash, the official said.

About 54,000 participants are paying into the fund, and about 27,000 people are receiving benefits, he said.

While the pension fund is solvent, the U.N. budget is about to go bust.

The United States is assessed one-fourth of the regular U.N. budget, which in 1988 was $876 million. Congress appropriated $144 million this year toward U.N. dues but Washington has paid only $60 million.

The United States began withholding a portion of its dues early in the 1980s due to displeasure over anti-U.S. and anti-Israel rhetoric in the General Assembly, and to save funds at a time when the U.S. budget deficit was growing rapidly.

More recently, funds have been withheld in an effort to force the United Nations to cut its staff by 15 percent, reduce expenses and make personnel changes.

In particular, the United States wants Soviet U.N. staffers converted from temporary contracts to permanent international civil servant status, thus making them independent of the Kremlin's policy goals — at least in theory.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry has said it will transfer some of its U.N. staff to the international civil service, but so far none of its U.N. employees has been reassigned.

Trimming spending in the U.N.'s regular budget is an ongoing battle currently being fought in the U.N.'s key budget committee, the Committee for Programs and Coordination.

That committee consists of 34 nations, including the United States and the other large contributors. They began meeting on Tuesday for two weeks to consider the U.N.'s budgets for 1990 and 1991.

Soviet Delegation Visits Alaskan Eskimos

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Soviet and American Eskimos embraced and chatted excitedly in their native language as a delegation from the Soviet Far East arrived in this historic gold-mining town to resume ties broken 40 years ago.

The Soviets arrived Wednesday aboard the hydrological research ship Dmitri Laptev, which left the Soviet coastal town of Provideniya 24 hours earlier for a goodwill trip intended to build new economic and cultural contacts between the superpowers' most remote regions.

"Not only do you resemble the people of Provideniya, you act like them," Provideniya Mayor Oleg Kulinkin said at a luncheon, praising Nome for its hospitality.

"I arrived, it's just like home. In the first minutes there was the land, grass, the weather, and most important, friends," he said.

The visit by the 11-member Soviet delegation and a crowd of Soviet and foreign journalists came in response to a U.S. "friendship flight" in June, when Gov. Steve Cowper led 82 Alaska Eskimos, politicians and journalists to Provideniya.

Immediately after the Soviets debarked from tugboat here, one Soviet Eskimo, Vasily Nanok, spotted distant relatives he first met in June.

Members of the group embraced and talked excitedly in their native language. Several minutes later, they were inside a store souvenir hunting. One Nome radio station broadcast an elementary Russian language lesson.

Officials of both sides said they not only hope to allow regular contacts among Eskimos, who had been cut off from relatives on opposite sides of the Bering Strait since 1948. They want to establish ties that will mean increased trade, tourism and scientific cooperation.

"If you have relatives, you cannot help but know this will turn out well," said Nadezhda Otko, a member of Presidium of the upreme Soviet, the country's highest executive body. "This will help achieve peace on the entire planet."

Jim Stimpfle, a Nome businessman who began efforts to improve relations across the strait 2½ years ago, said he hoped that "maybe some day our common border will be guarded by friendship alone."

The Soviet delegation flew to Anchorage later, and were greeted at the airport by Cowper. They will be in Alaska's largest city for a day before returning to Nome and then back across the strait.

Under Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Moscow is seeking to form joint ventures with Western companies to help modernize the sluggish Soviet economy. Like Alaska, the Soviet Far East is a region rich in minerals, but harsh and sparsely populated.

Vincennes Crew Unlikely To Draw Senate Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislators looking at the destruction of an Iranian airliner by a Navy cruiser want to know how well equipment on the USS Vincennes performed but are unlikely to criticize the ship's crew, says the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The panel was holding a hearing today to discuss the results of the Navy's investigation into the July 3 incident. The chief witness was scheduled to be Rear Adm. William M. Fogarty, head of the investigating team.

Iran Air Flight 655 was shot down by two missiles from the Vincennes in the Strait of Hormuz, killing all 290 persons aboard. The Vincennes mistakenly thought it was shooting at an Iranian military jet headed toward the ship.

The Vincennes is a $1 billion Aegis-class cruiser, equipped with the Navy's most sophisticated air defense system.

Navy investigators attributed the incident to human errors made under stress and during "the fog of war." They said Navy officers misread data from the Aegis system and gave mistaken information to Capt. Will C. Rogers, who made the decision to fire the cruiser's missiles.

A public version of the report was released three weeks ago. A classified version has also been sent to Capitol Hill.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said many of the questions surrounding the incident had been answered by the Fogarty investigation.

"But we want a chance to talk to him in person and ask some questions," Nunn explained. "I think we are going to be looking at how the Aegis system performed, how the weapons on board performed, and other secondary questions like that."

The Fogarty investigation found that the Aegis system worked as designed.

"Overall, I think I'm pretty sympathetic to the plight of the captain and I think there's a lot of sympathy for him here, given the compressed time frame for making a decision and given the other constraints of operating a blue-water ship in a brown-water environment," Nunn said.

He was referring to using the Vincennes, which was designed for large-scale, open-ocean situations, in the small, crowded Persian Gulf. The ship was on duty as part of the Reagan administration policy of protecting tankers in the gulf.

Nunn's comments echoed statements made by top Pentagon officers last month when the report was released.

Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said that given the confusion surrounding an earlier fight between the Vincennes and Iranian gunboats, "Capt. Rogers acted reasonably and did what his nation expected of him in the defense of his ship and crew."

Crowe called the airliner's destruction "a by-product" of the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war. The two nations are now negotiating through the United Nations to end the conflict.

The Vincennes was to leave from the Persian Gulf last Sunday, but its departure has been postponed until U.S. officials have been assured there is no longer a need for U.S. tanker escorts in the region.

The Vincennes' withdrawal from the carrier battle group in the Arabian Sea would reduce the American naval force in the region from 27 to 26 warships, the first reduction since the Iran-Iraq cease-fire officially went into effect Aug. 15.

The Pentagon says the U.S. fleet will be scaled back if the cease-fire holds. But it has given no timetable, and other ships in the force are still being replaced on schedule.

Parental Leave Plan Faces Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stage is set for a showdown over a bill guaranteeing job-protected leave to new parents, with supporters urging politicians to "put your votes where your mouths are" or risk being turned out of office.

"If politicians truly want to capture women's votes, they must go beyond pro-family rhetoric and photo opportunities with children," said Judith Lichtman, president of the Women's Legal Defense Fund. "It's really quite simple: Put your votes where your mouths are."

Added Irene Natividad, chairman of the National Women's Political Caucus: "We need a response beyond window dressing."

The caucus is among more than two dozen women's groups, ranging from Church Women United to the National Abortion Rights Action League, mounting an intensive lobbying drive for the Family and Medical Leave Act. It is scheduled for a House vote next Wednesday.

The bill has 151 co-sponsors, but only 16 of them are Republicans. Compromises are being discussed with conservative lawmakers, many of them southern Democrats, as supporters attempt to secure a majority for the bill before the floor vote.

The act would require businesses employing more than 50 people to offer unpaid job-protected leave of at least 10 weeks to parents of newborn, newly adopted or seriously ill children. At least 15 weeks would have to be available to employees suffering a serious illness themselves. An "elder care" provision would permit leaves to care for seriously ill parents.

The elder care section is likely to die either in the House or later in the Senate, supporters acknowledge, and the bill may ultimately guarantee workers a single 12-week leave for either illness or parental responsibilities.

Utility Will Pay Record Fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philadelphia Electric Co. has decided not to contest a Nuclear Regulatory Commission fine of $1.25 million for failing to prevent control room workers from sleeping on duty at Pennsylvania's Peach Bottom nuclear plant, officials said.

The fine is the largest ever imposed by the NRC.

The utility is expected to announce later this week or Monday that it intends to pay its share of the fine, which amounts to about $531,000, according to Philadelphia Electric officials who spoke Wednesday on condition of anonymity.

Three other utilities in New Jersey and Delaware are liable for portions of the fine because they are part owners of the plant at Delta, Pa., near the Pennsylvania-Maryland border, according to Philadelphia Electric, the plant operator.

The fine was assessed on Aug. 11 "for failing to detect, report and deal with inattentive operators, and supervisors who condoned it." Three-ty-three present and former Peach Bottom reactor operators have been fined between $500 and $1,000 by the NRC for "sleeping and/or other acts of inattention to duty."

Last month, the NRC called the levy a "proposed fine," explaining that the utility had 30 days either to admit or deny the proposed violations. If it admits the allegations, Philadelphia Electric is required to list any corrective actions.

Philadelphia Electric spokesman William Jones said Wednesday that a decision had been made, "but obviously I'm not at liberty to say what it is."

However, two officials said the company had decided to pay the fine in the interest of putting the issue behind it and focusing on getting the plant restarted.

If it admits the allegations, Jones said, Philadelphia Electric will be liable for about $531,000, or 42.49 percent of the fine. That is the percentage share of Peach Bottom held by Philadelphia Electric, which operates the plant.

Public Service Electric and Gas Co. of Newark, N.J., also owns 42.49 percent of the plant. Other co-owners are Atlantic Electric Co. of Atlantic City, N.J., and Delmarva Power and Light Co. of Wilmington, Del., both with 7.51 percent.

The Peach Bottom fine is the largest since Congress gave the NRC authority to issue civil penalties in 1969. But it pales in comparison to the $100 million that Philadelphia Electric has already lost because of the cost of purchasing replacement power.

Peach Bottom, which is capable of producing 1 million kilowatts of electric power, was ordered shut down by the NRC on March 31, 1987, because operators sleeping on duty were said to pose a safety threat.

Since then, Philadelphia Electric has shuffled management at the plant and ordered reactor operators retrained.

N. Korea Observing 40th Year

TOKYO (AP) — Four decades after its founding, North Korea remains an isolated, secretive state with an enigmatic leader who shows no signs of handing over power to his designated heir — his son.

The Democratic People's Republic of Korea celebrates its 40th anniversary Friday with praise for President Kim Il Sung, 76, the communist strongman.

The country plans a huge celebration, with senior foreign emissaries including President Yang Shangkun of China and Soviet KGB chief Viktor Chebrikov representing North Korea's two major allies.

No political figures or journalists from the West have been invited, and requests from Western news agencies to cover the anniversary have gone unanswered. North Korea rarely allows Western journalists into the country.

The ceremonies Friday will include a mass rally, a sports competition and cultural performances in praise of Kim.

"Koreans respect Kim Il Sung as a prominent leader in anti-Japanese warfare and hero of the Korean revolution," said Choe Kwan Ick, an official of the pro-North Korean General Association of Korean Residents of Japan (Chongryon). "He goes to every corner of the country, among farmers and workers, to solve problems they face. The people respect this, and that is why he has remained in power so long."

A 1986 U.S. State Department report called Kim "the object of an intensive and far-reaching personality cult, probably unequalled in the rest of today's world."

Huge statues of the Great Leader, as Kim is known, stand throughout the country and almost all North Koreans wear badges with his picture.

Similar public loyalty to Kim's son Kim Jong Il, 46, is encouraged. The elder Kim plans to hand power over to his son in what may be the world's first communist dynasty.

It has been a troubling year for North Korea. World attention has focused on rival South Korea and on the upcoming Olympic Games, which begin in Seoul Sept. 17. South Korea has stressed security preparations against a possible terrorist attack from the north.

North Korea finally stated this week that it would not use military or other means to interrupt the Olympics.

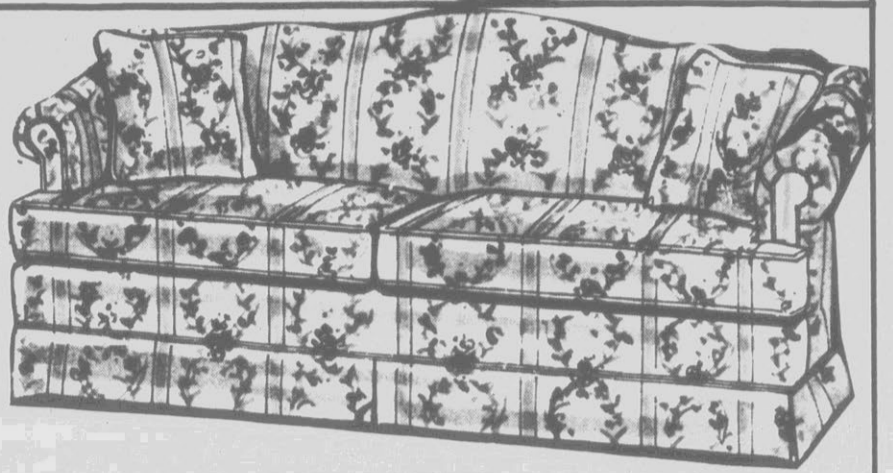

"As for 'terrorism,' it is utterly alien to us and the United States itself is the chieftain of state terrorism as already exposed to the world," the North Korean Foreign Ministry said.

Once-Abandoned Lace Has Been Rediscovered

By LINDA LOWE MORRIS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

"Nothing save a little thread" is the way one Thomas Fuller, a 17th-century English cleric, described lace. And so it is: single threads woven and stitched and braided by the hands of the lacemaker or the power of the lacemaking machine to become an openwork fabric of incredible beauty.

Lace was born in Renaissance Italy, then brought to its highest form in 17th and 18th centuries. Many of the old laces in the United States can be traced to the enormous quantities of lace — both hand and machine made — that were produced from the later part of the last century up through World War I.

Modern times saw lacemaking decline and its value reduced to near worthlessness, but now after years of being tucked away in dusty attics and linen closets, lace has been rediscovered, its beauty brought out and appreciated.

Once again lace covers windows and beds, decorates pillows and table tops, and often the pieces themselves are being used in ways the lacemaker never imagined.

"People are using things in non-traditional but very creative ways," said Marie Neuman, who sells old lace and linens at an antique store. "People are making window dressings using old pieces, doing lots of things with pillows, using handkerchiefs to make sachets and even framing little doilies."

Its renewed popularity comes in part from the current vogue for Victoriana, but also from the way lace softens a room. It can be used in almost any style home from Victorian to country to contemporary with equal style.

Many of the old pieces of lace come in forms we no longer use or perhaps use less.

In the days of our grandmothers and great-grandmothers, every chair was adorned with antimacassars covering the backs and arms.

"I don't believe those antimacassars will ever come back," said Pat Zimmerman, who sells antique laces and vintage clothing under the name Circa 1880 in Cockeysville, Md. "But there are so many of them on the market. What people are doing is making valances for windows out of them. They're putting the semicircle part that went on the back of the chair or sofa in the center and then attaching the arm pieces to either side."

"There's always a way of converting something into something else," she said. "But I don't believe in ever destroying a really fine piece of lace in order to turn it into something else. There are ways you can alter it temporarily."

In her guest bedroom, Mrs. Zimmerman has a single-panel curtain made from a beautiful old lace tablecloth with a large center medallion. By folding it over a few inches from the top and sewing a single line of broad stitches an inch from the fold, she created a curtain rod pocket, and the folded end of the curtain gives the illusion of a separate valance.

"When I decide I want something else there, I'll just pull that thread out and I've got my tablecloth again. People aren't doing a lot of formal entertaining today, and these magnificent tablecloths just sit in drawers and all the beauty is hidden."

Other people are using large tablecloths as bed covers, accenting the open lacework with a contrasting color sheet or blanket underneath, she said. "Then if you're going to have someone to dinner, all you have to do is take it off, launder it and put it on the table."

Long dresser runners that have holes or stains in the center can be cut in half and the flaw cut out. The two halves can be used as cafe curtains. Small damaged tablecloths can be used on a table against the wall with the damaged section either cut off or placed behind the back of the table, out of view. If a tablecloth has holes in it, these will disappear into the folds if it is used as a swag over a window.

Barbara Pfeiffer, of Linens and Lace Ltd. takes large pieces of old lace or embroidered bedcovers, ones that are not extremely valuable or decorative, and makes duvet covers out of them, using an antique linen sheet underneath.

"They're made just like a great big pillow slip — one open end with three antique buttons on it. You just slide the comforter in."

Prices for the duvet covers run from $300 to $700, depending on the amount of work.

Because many of these antique linens were made for high beds, she said, they will fit a king-sized bed today.

Mrs. Pfeiffer recently bought a museum-quality bed cover of Maltese lace from a private collection in England. "I have customers who are looking for this kind of thing as their accent to an ultramodern room, and they want to use a fabulous piece of old lace to set the whole room off. Usually I work with a decorator for this kind of thing, because this is quite an expensive piece, over $1,200."

Often strips of old lace that were dress trimmings can be found. Mrs. Pfeiffer has had lace pillows made up using various strips of lace applied across the pillow on the diagonal and then the whole outlined with a lace ruffle.

Small doilies can be sewn as an applique onto pillows with just a few stitches. Mrs. Neuman had a friend who made pillows using a moire fabric for the pillow. She then tied the piece of lace onto the pillow using little pieces of ribbon sewn at the four corners. "When she needed to launder them she could just release the ribbon and the pieces would come off," she said.

"The old towels with pretty pieces of crochet attached — a lot of people are using these as single window treatments in bathrooms. And antique dust ruffles with very deep crocheted lace can be used as a valance across the top of a window," Mrs. Pfeiffer said.

Antique nightdress cases, which were made of a single piece of fabric sewn into an envelope shape, are now being used to cover pillows and as accents on the bed. And long dresser scarves are being made into the same type of pillow. A little over one-third of the length of the cloth is folded back on itself and stitched down each side. The other end then forms a little flap which is sometimes tied or decorated with a ribbon bow. A small boudoir or child-size pillow tucks neatly inside.

"That's a very popular pillow in contemporary decorating," Mrs. Pfeiffer said.

Mrs. Neuman has a clever way of using the good half of a small damaged lace cloth. She cuts it in half from point to point and uses the point of the resulting triangle as the flap for an envelope pillow, stitching the piece to a cotton pillow cover.

Handkerchief cases, which are about 8 inches square, are also being made into tiny pillows, sometimes stuffed with potpourri (enclosed in cotton, because by itself, potpourri would stain the fabric). "These have become very, very popular as gift items," Mrs. Neuman added.

Where she finds pieces or torn laces with some parts still intact, Mrs. Pfeiffer starches and uses the pieces to make Christmas tree ornaments, either angels with lace dresses or cornucopias filled with potpourri. The cornucopias can also be used for dresser ornaments.

Mrs. Neuman takes small lace doilies and starches them stiff, then hangs them up at the windows as snowflakes at Christmastime.

With the best of handmade work a rare and almost lost skill, lace is now seen as the art it is and is being framed.

Mrs. Pfeiffer works part-time in a framing shop and finds that many people are having family heirloom laces or other special lace pieces framed. "Sometimes they'll do collages or groupings of lace either in one frame or in groupings of frames," she said.

"I mount lace by sewing it by hand on something that is acid-free, usually a fabric like silk or velvet or some other natural fabric. That fabric is in turn mounted on a piece of acid-free foam core and then mounted in a frame. If it's a very, very valuable piece of fabric being preserved for historic reasons, we'll museum mount it, which is basically sealing it between two pieces of Mylar."

"The glass should always be away from the actual lace, whether you have a mat around the fabric or have something that will set it away. But it should never be pressed against the glass because that will deteriorate the actual lace."

"I frame christening dresses that way too, which is kind of fun. They're beautiful."

A completed small framed piece of lace, a 9 by 12 or 12 by 15, usually costs from $70 to 100, depending on how extensive the sewing is, she added.

Vote For The Man And Not Fashion

Before you get all choked up about electing a president who will have a strong foreign policy, implement new domestic programs and run a stable economy, listen to this.

I read the other day that "Washington retailers tend to favor a Dukakis administration because they fear Barbara Bush's style would take Washington back to the Carter years."

I've heard of coalition and special interest groups dictating leadership, but this is ridiculous. I expect a statement any day now from the queen-size pantyhose alliance and the elastic waistband lobbyists. I suppose it's only a matter of weeks before Ted Koppel devotes an hour to the dolman sleeve and its effect on trade unions.

Since when does what a first lady wears carry that much clout? Did Pat Nixon's respectable Republican cloth coat really catch on? Did we reserve judgment on Eleanor Roosevelt until we had walked in her orthopedic shoes? Seven years ago did American women run right out and finance an Adolfo suit?

People love the strangest ideas about the power of the people who live at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. During President Reagan's first inauguration, I was in Washington doing some stories for television. On the way to my hotel, the driver beamed and said, "Thank God for the Reagans."

"Are you a Republican?" I asked. "Nah, but I'm a limo driver, and limousines are back!" "Back where?" I asked. "On the American scene. You're gonna start seeing everyone in limos."

At Wits End

He'd be shocked to know that middle America has to either die or go to the prom to ride in a limo.

History is more egalitarian when it comes to first ladies than the fashion industry and retailers in this country. Take a walk sometime through the Smithsonian's display in Washington of first ladies in their inaugural gowns. Notice anything? There isn't one "forgotten woman" among them. They're all size 8's. Every single one of them. From petite Louise Adams (I've stuffed bigger turkeys at Thanksgiving) to Dolley Madison, who is a challenge to satin. (What can I tell you? The woman invented ice cream.) It's a rule at the Smithsonian that every first lady is equal in the eyes of tourists. The museum not only alters cellulite; it alters history.

So I say vote your conscience in November. And don't worry about whether or not Kitty likes coat dresses or Barbara adores pleated skirts. We've got a country to run.

'Shoe Fairy' Matches Up Sole Mates

By PAT CONNER
The Arizona Daily Star

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Jeanne Sallman's home is stacked with shoes: Satin-and-rhinestone high heels. Leather boots. White Nike high-tops. Tan walking shoes. Dainty summer sandals.

Their boxes stashed haphazardly in an extra bedroom overflow to the floors, shelves and table tops of her office and living room.

Ms. Sallman, sometimes known as "the shoe fairy," is director of the National Odd Shoe Exchange, a non-profit service that helps people who need single shoes or mismatched pairs.

Her main duty is to match up sole mates — like a right-footed amputee with a left-footed amputee who wears the same size, people who wear two sizes because of birth defects or disease, consumers who cannot afford to buy two pairs of shoes to get a matched set or a single shoe.

The 47-year-old woman runs the nearly 16,000-member exchange from her three-bedroom Phoenix home. It's filled with about 10,000 shoes and hundreds of single socks donated by companies across the country.

The phone rings constantly with calls from members, potential members, television and newspaper reporters and companies who want to donate shoes. German and Japanese television networks recently have aired segments on the shoe service.

Ms. Sallman, who wears a size 4 right and size 6 left because of a congenital defect, joined the exchange in the mid-1950s, after her mother saw the founder, Ruth Rubin Feldman, on a TV show.

At that time, membership was $1 a year. Now it is $7.50 annually for children and senior citizens and $10 for adults, which includes the mailing cost of shoes. The initial registration fee is $15 for children and senior citizens and $25 for adults.

The exchange was founded in 1943 by Ms. Feldman, a St. Louis occupational therapist who had infantile paralysis when she was 10. Responding to the special needs of people with polio, birth defects, illness and amputation, she created a registry to help people trade footwear.

Her letterhead, still used by Ms. Sallman, says: "When odd shoes are left, to trade them is right."

When she decided to retire from her volunteer position, she asked Ms. Sallman, a nurse knowledgeable about podiatry, to take over.

Ms. Sallman became director in 1983 while living in Indianola, Iowa. In 1987, Ms. Sallman moved to Phoenix after a divorce. Her two grown sons live in Iowa.

The founder preferred to restrict the organization to a referral service, but Ms. Sallman has expanded it to include donations of mismatched pairs and singles from shoe stores and manufacturers.

She mails them out to members across the country and allows local people to try them on at her home.

One of the newest participants, The Rockport Co., sent a shipment of 2,625 single shoes to Ms. Sallman's house from Marlboro, Mass.

Stanley Kravetz, the company president, had seen an article in a national magazine about Ms. Sallman and wanted to help her, according to Kravetz's daughter Debby, who is a communications assistant at the company.

"We had an inventory of single shoes, and this is a terrific cause," she says, adding that the company plans another shipment of about 2,500 shoes.

Jane Baldwin of Sun City joined the Odd Shoe Exchange this summer. The 62-year-old woman, who had her left leg amputated two years ago, wears a 10-B on her right foot.

She's still paying off the money she owes on her operation, she says.

"I haven't had any extra money to buy shoes. When you have to buy good shoes, they run about $50 a pair. It's awful to pay that much and throw the other one away. Now I have a place to take the extra shoe," she says.

After trying on about a dozen shoes, Ms. Baldwin decided on a white leather tennis shoe and white sandal.

On a nearby rack stood a dozen or so pairs of boots. Ms. Sallman pulled out a mismatched pair: size 10 left and size 8 right. Through her system of handwritten 3-by-5 index cards, she was able to match the boots with someone who wears those sizes.

Her extensive files include outlines of members' feet and shoe ads that illustrate their preferences.

Many of the mismatches that Ms. Sallman helps pair never meet. They correspond and send each other shoes. Others live close enough to shop together and trade mismatched pairs.

Ms. Sallman shared shoes with one mismatch for 11 years before meeting the woman, a Los Angeles bookkeeper. They were mismatches from 1972 through about 1984, when Ms. Sallman developed a bunion that made her foot wider.

Ms. Sallman recalls one mismatch, a New York career woman who bought expensive shoes. Ms. Sallman could not keep up.

But many mismatches share happy endings.

"I matched these two women up in California, and unbeknownst to me, they lived an hour's drive apart," Ms. Sallman recalls. "They would meet each other and go shoe shopping."

"Another member, I gave her a mate in another state who, unbeknownst to me, lived down the street from a relative. The best part about this service is the friends you make."

Ms. Sallman, a volunteer, has little time to make a living as a part-time private-duty nurse because she is working to make some of her dreams come true for the shoe exchange.

Those dreams include a storefront shop where she can warehouse donated shoes, as well as offer a place for members to try on shoes, and an office for the organization's headquarters.

Her wish list also includes volunteers, a computer and additional funding.

"We make it month to month, rarely with anything left over," says Ms. Sallman, who nevertheless believes someone will make the shoe fairy's dreams come true.

The biggest expense is postage. About half of the membership fees are waived, she explains, mostly for children and senior citizens on fixed incomes.

Living Will Is Healthy Investment

DEAR ABBY: Please send me any information you have on how to obtain a Living Will.

My elderly grandmother died recently, and it was a terrible ordeal for her and the family. She had been hooked up to a respirator after we were told there was no hope for her recovery. Her physician told us that he had to put her on the machine because she had not signed a Living Will.

We knew that Mother did not want to be kept alive that way, because our father had also been hooked up to a respirator after he had been pronounced brain-dead.

Please help me. The people I have talked to here told me they have heard of the Living Will, but nobody knows how to obtain one. Thank you. — MRS. MALONE KIMBRELL, TRUSSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR MRS. KIMBRELL: The Living Will is a document stating: "To my family physician and hospital caretakers: Should the time come when it is medically confirmed that there is no reasonable hope for my recovery, I direct that I be allowed to die naturally, receiving only the administration of comfort care. I do not wish to have my life prolonged by artificial means. Should I become unable to participate in decisions regarding my medical treatment, it is my intention that my wishes be honored by my family and physician."

Copies of this document should be given to your physician, clergyman and lawyer, and to as many close family members and friends as you wish.

To obtain a Living Will, write to: The Society for the Right to Die, 250 W. 57th St., Suite 323, New York, N.Y. 10107.

The Society for the Right to Die is a non-profit organization. There is no charge for the Living Will, but a donation to cover the cost of the document and the mailing is appreciated.

I sent $10 for three documents to give to my physician, my lawyer and a family member. It was the best investment in peace of mind I've ever made.

The Living Will is honored in the United States, and at this time, Canadians are considering its approval. I sincerely hope they succeed.

this crass manner? — INCREDULOUS VICTIM

DEAR VICTIM: There is no excuse for talking longer than one's allotted time. To do so is the epitome of arrogance, insensitivity and stupidity. What are such speakers thinking of? They probably think that their message is sufficiently important to justify the imposition. They are dead wrong, of course.

Abby's favorite recipes are going like hotcakes! Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

"As they grow, I'm sure they'll be more aware of the airport and what we have to offer," he said.

Airport Authority Chairman Jack Duffus, said the record-setting month shows that the airport is providing a valuable service to Pitt County residents.

"It's self-evident what the airport is doing as a service to the community," Duffus said. "The boarding figures would indicate that the airport is well used by the citizens of Pitt."

Ad Goes Nationally

Ms. Yuhas said cost for the advertisement including creative design is approximately $17,000.

"That is far more than we would typically spend for an ad. However, for a project of this nature, we felt that it was worthwhile," she said. "One response to this ad that we can then pursue and secure as an investment in the community will pay for the ad many times over."

Helping pay for the ad was the city of Greenville, Greenville Utilities, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Pitt Community College and East Carolina University.

"We did have a good deal of support from people in town to put the ad together," she commented.

According to Donna Jernigan, a Business Week representative, the issue with the 18-page N.C. insert should be on the newstands next week.

"Greenville and Pitt County will also be covered in the textual material of the insert as well as the ad," Ms. Jernigan said.

In U.S. Open Quarterfinals

Garrison Ousts Navratilova

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time in eight years, Martina Navratilova didn't hook the big one.

"If this year was a fish," Navratilova said, "I would throw it back in." Navratilova failed to win a Grand Slam event for the first time since 1980 and the final flop in a disappointing year came Wednesday when Zina Garrison beat her for the first time in 22 tries.

Garrison's gutsy 6-4, 6-7 (3-7), 7-5 quarterfinal victory sent the No. 2 seed to the sidelines of the U.S. Open, which she won the last two years and made the finals in the last five. Navratilova also lost in the quarterfinals at the French Open (to Natalia Zvereva), in the semifinals at the Australian Open (to Chris Evert) and to Steffi Graf in the Wimbledon finals, snapping her run of six straight titles there.

"She played the best match of her life and I didn't play well," Navratilova said. "That's what it was going to take for her to beat me. If you play someone that many times, they are bound to be on their game when I am not."

And she was not. While Garrison played spectacularly in spots — she broke Navratilova in the 10th game to take the first set and jumped ahead 5-0 in the second set — Navratilova rarely showed the skills that made her one of the greatest players ever. She rallied more on guts than shotmaking, more on Garrison's mistakes than her own miracles.

"She started to come back and, before I knew it, the second set was gone," Garrison said. "But I've been keeping my composure pretty well during this tournament."

"I've always gotten up 3-0 against Martina and she's come back. I think the thing that hurt her is that I stayed in there and won the first set, no matter what."

"This is definitely my best," said the 24-year-old Garrison, seeded 11th and in her first Open semifinal. "I've lost to Martina 21 times."

Garrison faces No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina on Friday. Sabatini struggled early, then put away No. 16 Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Navratilova's loss seemed to open the way for Graf to finish off her Grand Slam without much trouble. The top seed from West Germany is within two match victories of the first Grand Slam since 1970.

Graf routed No. 14 Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-3, 6-0. She'll play No. 3 Evert, who beat Katerina's sister, sixth-seeded Manuela Maleeva, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

"I think any of the three have an even chance (of beating Graf), but they have to play the match of their life," Navratilova said. "Once I lost the match to Zina, I thought, 'Oh well, so much for trying to stop her (Graf).'"

Among the men, No. 2 Mats Wilander beat Emilio Sanchez of Spain 3-6, 7-6 (8-6), 6-0, 6-4, and will play Darren Cahill of Australia in the semis on Saturday. Cahill knocked out Aaron Krickstein 6-2, 5-7, 7-6 (7-2), 5-7, 6-3.

The other quarterfinals were played today, with No. 1 Ivan Lendl, seeking an unprecedented fourth consecutive Open crown, facing American Derrick Rostagno, and No. 4 Andre Agassi against No. 6 Jimmy Connors at night.

Garrison's dramatic victory came after she had wasted five match points. She even double-faulted on one.

"I double-faulted so many times that I didn't worry about that one time," Garrison said. "I think she saw I was staying in there because I kept playing the points and not worrying about it."

But Garrison was somewhat surprised to win. "Naturally, I was already thinking about going home on the next flight," she admitted. "That's just being realistic."

Realistically, it doesn't look like anyone can stop Graf. Evert has lost the last six meetings without taking a set.

"Every round, I've played a baseliner," said Evert, a six-time Open winner. "I've hit a lot of balls these last 10 days. But Steffi is a different class above the girls I've played."

No kidding? Graf has won 33 consecutive matches. She is 58-2 this year, with both losses to Sabatini.

"I'm excited to be in the semis and playing Chris," Graf said. "I'm happy at this stage — for me, it's more like the tournament is just starting."

"I'm going against the tougher opponents, now, starting with Chris." Sabatini likes where her game is as she prepares for Garrison, against whom she is 5-2.

"I think this match helps me because it's good preparation," she said. "Now I have to get things a little better."

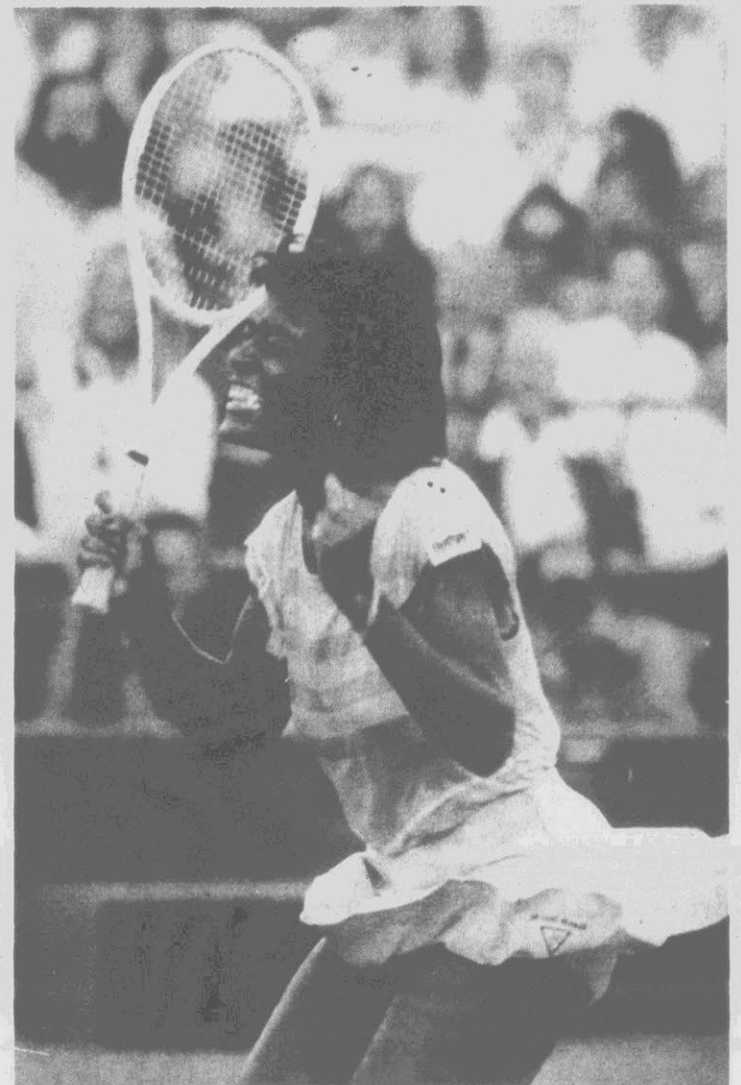

Wilander got a lot better after winning the second-set tiebreaker with Sanchez.

"The tiebreaker was the whole match," said Wilander, winner of the Australian and French opens this year. "Obviously, I started to play better and he lost concentration and wasn't working as hard. He had trouble getting back into the match."

Cahill became the first unseeded player to make the semifinals since Johan Kriek in 1980.

"I feel I belong there," said Cahill, 22 and ranked 33rd in the world. "I've beaten (No. 5 Boris) Becker here. Whoever won between Aaron and me would be a surprise semifinalist."

"I think with the progress I've made over the last three months, my game has improved 50 percent. I can go out four or five days out of 10 and match these guys."

Victory Is Hers

Kiwis Angry Over Easy American Win

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dennis Conner's country-mile victory in the first America's Cup race reduced the New Zealand challenger yacht to a ship of "fools," the angry Kiwi tactician says.

"We go out on the track and we're treated like fools, because we go out there and we sail around the track as fast as we could in our boat and we have a boat ahead of us making a mockery of the race," says Peter Lester, New Zealand's tactician and alternate helmsman.

"I must say I have lost a lot of respect for the Stars & Stripes organization," Lester said at an acrimonious Wednesday night news conference, shortly after Conner's dual-hulled catamaran breezed to an 18-minute, 15-second victory over the Kiwis' monohull challenger in the opening of a best-of-three series. The next race is scheduled for Friday.

Lester, New Zealand skipper David Barnes and Bruce Farr, designer of the challenger, all claimed Conner held back his arrow-hulled flier by deliberately sailing the Stars & Stripes catamaran below its potential over the 40-mile windward-leeward course.

They contended the catamaran should have beaten them by an hour or more had it been sailed to its potential.

Asked if he "dogged it," Conner replied, "I'm sailing a cat. Somebody else is sailing a dog."

The crews' bitter exchange added gasoline to the fire smoldering between the two camps since New Zealand Challenge chairman Michael Fay sprang his unorthodox challenge on the San Diego Yacht Club in July 1987 and then prevailed in court over the defenders to get it validated.

A second court fight ensued when the SDYC took the unprecedented step in Cup competition of replying with a 60-foot-catamaran with a revolutionary hard-wing sail. Fay's attempt to oust the cat as an allegedly illegal defender resulted in a July 25 court order to race first and protest later. Regardless of the series' outcome, Fay has said he will return to court to protest the issue of the catamaran, which he says is unfair and unsportsmanlike because it does not "match" his 133-foot monohull and that the dual-hulled vessel is inherently faster.

"We'd like to win this next race as soon as possible and get on to an America's Cup that the whole rest of the world would like to see," Conner said. "Enough of all this shenanigans from New Zealand."

Unlike past Cup competitions, which had been held in 12-meter yachts since 1958, all other competitors were excluded from the current event because the two sides

Stars & Stripes, New Zealand Get Underway

Tech Has A Few Bad Memories

Virginia Tech comes into Saturday's home football opener against East Carolina with a couple of bad memories to think about.

First, there was the 32-23 defeat handed the Hokies at last year's Homecoming game in Blacksburg, Va. The Hokies ran out to an early 10-0 lead in the contest before quarterback Travis Hunter brought the Pirates back in a record-setting afternoon.

East Carolina battled back to trail 17-13 at the half, kicking a field goal in the closing seconds of the half. Ellis Dillahunt then intercepted a Virginia Tech pass with just 27 seconds left in the half to keep the Pirates close.

The Pirates then took the opening kickoff of the second half and marched for a 19-17 lead but Tech came right back to score again and regain the lead at 23-19 going into the final period.

But Hunter, who finished the day with 313 yards of total offense, a new ECU single game record, guided the Pirates back once more, scoring on a six-yard run to move the Pirates back to a 25-23 lead. Then, Hunter hit fullback Tim James on a 74-yard scoring pass that sealed it.

Coach Art Baker and his Pirates are certain that the Hokies will recall that game as they prepare for this Saturday afternoon's contest.

But Virginia Tech, too, must remember this past Saturday, when they were kicked around the field by nationally ranked Clemson, 40-7, in Death Valley. Clemson rolled up only 342 yards in total offense in the game, but it was enough.

What scares Baker and his staff was that Tech was able to move the ball at times against the Tigers, finishing the game with 214 points. Baker warns, too, that it will be a different Tech team that will take the field this weekend, aiming for a double dose of revenge — for last year's Pirate win and to make up for some of the damage done by Clemson.

The Hokies will start a freshman quarterback for the second straight week. Will Furrer, who red-shirted last year, earned the starting nod during the spring and fall pre-season drills, and performed well under a lot of pressure last week. He completed 17 of 36 passes for 116 yards with two picked off. Most of them were short, however, with a long of 17 yards.

Three different receivers caught as many as three passes. They included backup tailback Lamar Smith, with 28 yards; tight end Brian McCall, with 22 yards, and tailback Jon Jeffries. Despite three receptions, Jeffries finished with a net of minus one yard receiving.

On the ground, the Hokies were led by fullback Rich Fox, who carried 14

Vikes, Rampants Face New Tests

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

For D.H. Conley to bounce back from its season-opening 24-7 loss to Ayden-Grifton, the team will have to develop consistency on both sides of the football, according to Viking head coach Steve Craft.

Conley's next task comes against North Pitt, another Pitt County 2-A power, this Friday on the Vikings' home field.

"We went back and found some positive things when we looked at the (game) film," Craft said. "Now we just have to work on the negative things we did and try to get ready for Friday."

Craft attributed some of his team's problems to the "first-game jitters."

"They (Ayden-Grifton) already had a game under their belt and we didn't," Craft said. "They knew where the problem areas on their team were and were able to work on how to respond. We didn't know what to expect in the first game since we're such a young team, but now that we know where our problem areas are we have another angle to work from."

Defensively, Craft said his team must control play on third down if it hopes to control its fate in the outcome of any game.

"We played two out of three downs well just about every time defensively last week," Craft said. "Over 75 percent of their (Ayden-Grifton) offensive yardage came on third down plays. We just found ways to stop ourselves. The word for us this week in practice is going to be consistency on both sides of the ball."

The Vikings, who were picked in preseason to finish high in the Coastal 3-A Conference standings can gain a great deal from the tough 2-A non-conference opponents it is playing in the preseason, according to Craft.

"These first three games (Ayden-Grifton, North Pitt and Farmville Central) are as tough as any games we will play all year long," Craft said. "What we have to do is improve over last week and continue to improve each week and I think by the time we start our conference schedule we will be a much better team because of the tough competition that we lined up against in these early games."

J.H. Rose

Rose High School football coach Chip Williams is looking at the Rampants final non-conference game Friday against Fayetteville Terry Sanford as a good learning experience for his team.

"They (Terry Sanford) are an option-oriented team that likes to pass," Williams said. "We will probably see much the same offense when we play teams like Northern Nash and Rocky Mount in the (Big East 4-A) conference. So this should give us an idea of what to expect in those games."

Both the Rampants and the Bulldogs will enter the contest with unbeaten records, Rose is 2-0, while Terry Sanford is 1-0. The Rampants are coming off a 26-13 victory over Jacksonville and Terry Sanford upset Wilmington New Hanover 17-7 in its season-opener.

"New Hanover was picked to win their league (Mid-eastern 4-A Conference), so that game could be considered an upset," Williams said. "They (Terry Sanford) thought they were going to have a good team last year, but they got off to a bad start with losses to New Hanover and to us (21-0). So I expect them to be a tough challenge."

Offensively, the Bulldogs have the potential for the big play. Last week on the first play from scrimmage quarterback David Hedgecoe hooked up with wide receiver Eugene Roberts for a 74-yard touchdown pass.

But the main concern for Williams heading into the contest isn't controlling the pass, it's improving the Rampant punting game.

"Obviously, our punting game has got to get better," Williams said. "We had two blocked last week (against Jacksonville) and that's more than we had all of last year. Last season, we blocked 13 punts on

Sports Notes

Rose Wins Its 1st Match Of Year

NEW BERN — Rose High School captured its first soccer victory of the year Wednesday, defeating Southern Wayne 6-0 to take third place in the New Bern Sun-Journal Soccer Tournament.

Rose took a 1-0 lead when Patrick Joyner headed the ball into the goal on a pass from Michael Thompson. Goals by Marty Measamer, assisted by Toure Claibourne, David Leister on a pass from Joyner, and Joyner, unassisted, upheld the Rampant lead to 4-0 by halftime.

Thompson and Jason Bizzaro each scored in the second half to finish off the scoring.

"I'm glad to see us win one," Coach Charlie Harvey said. "Tonight, we were able to play our game and do the things we've been practicing."

Rose outshot the Saints, 38-1, in the game, completely dominating play.

Claibourne and Bizzaro were both selected to the all-tournament team. Rose, now 1-3, opens Big East Conference play Tuesday at Northern Nash at 7 p.m.

Former ECU Standout Vann Is Waived

LOS ALAMEDA, Calif. — Former East Carolina football standout Norwood Vann was placed on waivers by the Los Angeles Raiders Wednesday, team officials announced.

Vann, who was the tight end on ECU's 1983 team that went 8-3, had played linebacker for the Los Angeles Rams for the last four years, but was let go by that club during this year's training camp. He hooked on with the Raiders toward the end of the exhibition schedule but was let go to make room on the roster for one of two players, defensive back Russell Carter or offensive lineman Steve Wright recently signed.

ECU Graduate To Train Olympic Cyclists

Wayne Cannon, supervisor at Outpatient Physical Therapy in Winston-Salem, will serve as athletic trainer for the U.S. Men's and Women's Cycling teams at the 1988 Summer Olympic Games in Seoul.

Cannon, who received his bachelor's degree in physical therapy from East Carolina University, served as athletic trainer for the U.S. Olympic Committee at Olympic Festivals in 1986 and 1987. In 1985, he worked with Junior Select Ice and Field Hockey teams.

He is a former assistant trainer with the NFL Baltimore Colts and Washington Redskins. He also holds degrees from the University of North Carolina.

City Mixed Doubles Champions Named

Randy Bridgman and Holly Murray won the City Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. The duo defeated Doug and Cheri Getsinger, 7-6, 6-4, in the championship match.

In the consolation bracket, Bobby and Vivian Short downed Tommy Roach and Sharon Ricks, 7-5, 6-1.

State Honors Week's Best Performances

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Malcombe Moore of Waynesville Tuscola was honored as the North Carolina High School Athletic Association-Drug Emporium 4-A player of the week Wednesday for leading his team to a 28-14 victory over West Henderson last Friday.

Moore carried the ball 37 times for 239 yards and three touchdowns.

Other players honored were Lee Becton of West Craven, Austin Roberts of Bunker Hill and Elijah Timmons of Hendersonville.

Becton won the 3-A award for leading West Craven to a 24-20 victory over Greene Central. Becton had 24 carries for 231 yards and scored all four touchdowns. It was his second straight game with over 200 yards rushing.

Roberts was honored as the 2-A player for his two-way performance against West Iredell. Roberts rushed for 129 yards and two touchdowns and made 11 tackles on defense as Bears took a 39-19 victory.

Timmons scored three touchdowns — on an 85-yard kickoff return, 50-yard punt return and 25-yard pass reception — to lead Hendersonville to a 30-12 victory over Mitchell. He finished with over 200 yards in all-purpose offense.

Hornets Name Their TV Announcers

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets have called a press conference for Thursday to announce that Gary Sparber and Mike Pratt will be the team's television announcers, The Gastonia Gazette reported Wednesday.

Sparber works for WBT radio in Charlotte and did play-by-play for Atlantic Coast Conference football games from 1986-87. He has also done play-by-play for Sun-Belt Conference basketball games the last three years.

Pratt is the former head coach at North Carolina-Charlotte who played for the Kentucky Colonels of the American Basketball Association. Pratt guided the 49ers to a 56-52 record from 1978-83.

In addition to being the Hornets' color commentator, Pratt is the team's East Coast scout.

Creative Sports Marketing has put together a Hornets television network throughout the Carolinas and Virginia and will televise 29 Hornets games this season.

West Charlotte Coach Returns

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Five days after he was struck by a stray bullet, West Charlotte assistant football coach John Overcash was back at work, walking on the leg despite a doctor's instructions and preparing for Friday's game.

For Overcash, it was more than a return to work. It was another recovery period, 20 years after having beaten Hodgkin's disease.

Overcash directed the Lions' defensive secondary from a golf cart Tuesday afternoon, his leg elevated and wrapped in ice. Players and coaches were buoyed by Overcash's path to recovery after he was one of four people injured Friday night in a shooting incident at the West Charlotte Garinger game.

West Charlotte's 23-6 lead over Garinger Friday night, when the game was suspended, stands as a Lions victory.

Overcash was less concerned with his pierced leg than he was with South Mecklenburg, whom West Charlotte will host Friday night.

Shelby's Homer Leads Dodgers

By The Associated Press

John Shelby hit the shot heard around Los Angeles to beat the Houston Astros, and just perhaps secure the Dodgers' path to the playoffs.

Shelby hit three-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning to snap a tie and Tim Lincecum allowed four hits in eight-plus innings as the Dodgers beat visiting Houston 4-1 Wednesday night to take a six-game lead over the Astros in the National League West.

Shelby came to the Dodgers from Baltimore in the Tom Niedenfuer deal to fill a void in center field last season. But he surprised Manager Tom Lasorda and his teammates with surprising power, hitting a career-high 21 homers and making the plays defensively.

"When John Shelby came here, I didn't know him from a load of hay," Lasorda said. "We needed a center fielder, and he worked awful hard to overcome the things he couldn't do. He's got a ton of talent. The Shelby in Baltimore isn't the same player he is here, because he didn't believe he was a good ballplayer. Now he does."

Steve Sax opened the eighth with a single and took second on a sacrifice by Alfredo Griffin. After Kirk Gibson drew an intentional walk from Mike Scott, 13-6, the runners executed a double steal. One out later, Shelby hit his seventh home run.

"I didn't have home run on my mind," Shelby said. "I've never hit a home run when I've tried to hit one. I don't think I was swinging real hard, the way I swung when I struck out the other two times. I just wanted to put the ball in play in the outfield because I thought I'd have a good chance to drive in the runner from third."

Elsewhere in the NL it was Chicago 9, New York 8; Pittsburgh 5, Montreal 4; Atlanta 4, San Francisco 1; San Diego 1, Cincinnati 0; and St. Louis 5, Philadelphia 0.

Leary, 16-9, struck out eight and walked four en route to his fifth victory in his last six starts. Buddy Bell led off the Houston ninth with a single off Leary and Jay Howell relieved and struck out the side for his 18th save.

Scott allowed five hits and struck out nine in eight innings. His inning-ending strikeout of Sax in the fifth was his 1,000th as an Astro, making him the sixth pitcher to reach that number in a Houston uniform. The others are Nolan Ryan, J.R. Richard, Larry Dierker, Don Wilson and Joe Niekro.

"I made a pitch I thought I could get him out on, and he hit it out," Scott said of Shelby's homer. "It was in a bad location."

Cubs 9, Mets 8

Rafael Palmeiro led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a triple and scored on Damon Berryhill's one-out single as Chicago beat New York in a night game at Wrigley Field after blowing a five-run lead in the top of the inning.

After Palmeiro tripped off reliever Roger McDowell, 5-4, Vance Law grounded out. Berryhill then hit a hard drive down the left-field line to end the game.

The loss reduced the Mets' lead over second-place Pittsburgh to eight games in the NL East.

Trailing 8-3, the Mets rallied for five runs in the ninth inning off starter Jeff Pico and reliever Drew Hall on Lee Mazzilli's RBI pinch single, Keith Hernandez's three-run homer, and a solo shot by Darryl Strawberry.

Pirates 5, Expos 4

Doug Drabek won for the ninth time in his last 10 decisions and drove in a run with a single as Pittsburgh beat Montreal at Three Rivers Stadium.

Drabek, 14-6, is 9-1 with a 1.78 earned-run average in his last 12 starts. He walked one and struck out five in 6 2-3 innings. Jeff Robinson pitched 1 1-3 innings and Jim Gott retired the side in the ninth for his 27th save.

Second baseman Tom Foley's error led to a pair of unearned Pittsburgh runs in the first inning against Bryn Smith, 10-9.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 0

Joe Magrane pitched a seven-hitter for his second consecutive shutout and Terry Pendleton drove in two runs as St. Louis beat Philadelphia at Busch Stadium.

Magrane, 4-8, extended his string of shutout innings to 19, as St. Louis won its third straight game. His previous shutouts this season were a 4-0, one-hitter on Aug. 12 in Chicago and 2-0 victory last week in Houston.

Braves 4, Giants 1

Tom Glavine pitched a three-hitter and also drove in two runs with a single as Atlanta beat slumping San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

The Giants, who have lost six straight, have only 11 extra base hits and no homers in its last 12 games.

Glavine, 6-15, struck out five and walked three for his first big-league complete game.

Padres 1, Reds 0

Andy Hawkins allowed four hits in 8 1-3 innings and San Diego scored its only run as a result of an error to beat Cincinnati at Jack Murphy Stadium.

The Padres, who equaled their longest winning streak of the season, moved within 1 1/2 games of the third-place Reds in the NL West. San Diego has won six straight, 19 of its last 26 games, and has a 54-37 record since Jack McKeon took over as manager from Larry Bowa on May 28.

Hawkins, 14-10, struck out two and walked four en route to his fourth straight victory. Mark Davis struck out the last two batters for his 27th save while extending his scoreless streak to 27 2-3 innings.

NFL Suspension List Continues To Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — Last season's top rusher and the 1986 Super Bowl MVP have joined the list of NFL players suspended for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

Running back Charles White of the Los Angeles Rams, and a pair of Chicago Bears, star defensive end Richard Dent and running back Calvin Thomas, were suspended by the league for 30 days Wednesday for violating its substance abuse policy.

The three players were placed on their teams' non-football illness list and cannot return to their clubs until Oct. 7.

The three increased the number of players suspended this year for violating the NFL's substance-abuse policy to 17. Sixteen received 30-day suspensions — given to second-time offenders — and one, running back Tony Collins, was suspended for at least a year after testing positive for a third time.

White was arrested last summer and charged with being under the influence of a controlled substance, later revealed to be cocaine. He was ordered into a drug counseling program and was allowed to remain with the Rams only with the stipulation that he pass a daily drug test.

The 1979 Heisman Trophy winner went on to lead the league in rushing and was voted into the Pro Bowl. He had 44 yards in 16 carries Sunday in a 34-7 win at Green Bay.

Rams coach John Robinson said the substance found in White's test was alcohol.

"We just found out the results of the test today," Robinson said. "It's a crushing-type situation, but there isn't much else to talk about."

White took part in practice before being informed of the 30-day suspension. He was unavailable for comment, but Robinson indicated White was shocked by the decision.

"I think he was caught by surprise," Robinson said. "He told me he had had a few drinks and told the nurse when he went in for his test. Obviously, he's disappointed."

Because of his previous problems with cocaine, White was subject to suspension for using alcohol under the league's substance abuse policy. Players who have never had a substance-abuse problem cannot be suspended for using alcohol under the league's policy.

This is the third year of the testing program, which began in 1986.

could not agree to terms that would allow their entry.

Conner, who is one win away from tying skipper Charley Barr's three Cup victories, had said repeatedly that assuming he was in the lead he would sail the cat conservatively. He said that would be the smart thing to do because winning was the bottom line and pushing the catamaran could invite defeat through possible gear failure on the boat.

The New Zealand skipper, though, said his counterpart had sullied his illustrious record with his tactics Wednesday.

"It was disappointing for us to see a boat which is potentially a lot faster than ours which was not really sailed very well," Barnes said. "I think if that is the best Dennis can do, then I think it's a disappointment for him to be defending the America's Cup."

Conner shot back at Barnes, a rookie Cup skipper, "I guess when he's won four America's Cups, then he can tell me how to do it."

Stars & Stripes tactician Tom Whidden also defended their tactics.

"I'm a little confused," he said. "We feel this is a match race. We're out there to try to beat the other boat the best way we know how."

"I think Dennis sailed a real nice race. He showed good discipline... he mixed it up and didn't get himself in a spot where there might have been a problem."

The start of Wednesday's race was gentlemanly enough as both boats remained fairly clear of each other, with Conner rebuffing Barnes' attempts to engage in pre-race maneuvering by simply accelerating away.

Though the New Zealand boat took the start by 10 seconds, the catamaran cruised alongside moments later, pointing nearly as high into the southerly 8-knot wind as the Kiwis.

The New Zealanders briefly initiated a tacking duel but continued losing ground as the catamaran showed unexpected maneuverability in covering.

Farr said the New Zealanders pushed their boat to its maximum possible performance even as the Americans were trying to slow themselves down.

He said early in the race, Conner's cat had one hull lifted out of the water, its maximum speed position, in a 7-knot breeze. Later, in a stronger 10-knot wind, both hulls were in the water, he said.

"They were working very hard to keep both hulls in the water," Farr said.

At the turn, Stars & Stripes trailed a school of dolphins but had a lead of nine minutes, four seconds over the challenger.

Rounding the weather mark, which was in Mexican waters, the first time a Cup course overlapped the territory of two countries, Stars & Stripes then unfurled a headsail for the downwind run to the finish line. The headsail was emblazoned with a soft drink advertisement, the first time a commercial logo appeared on a Cup racer during competition.

times for 43 yards and the lone touchdown of the game for Tech. Backup Malcolm Blacken added 40 yards on seven carries, while Jeffries had 11 carries for 27 yards.

Tech, which usually prefers to establish a ground game, was unable to do so against Clemson and was forced to go to the air after falling behind by 31-7 at halftime.

Baker expects Tech to be much stronger in its ground game this Saturday.

Leading the defense for Tech will be tackles Scott Hill (6-3, 270) and Horacio Moronto (6-1, 276).

Tech gave up 261 yards rushing to the Tigers and 81 yards passing as Clemson made good on seven of 18 attempts.

The game between the Pirates and Hokies will be the third in the series. Each team has won once.

Kickoff is set for 1 p.m. Saturday.

Tigers Turn To Trammell For Help

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

With the Detroit Tigers limping through their worst slump of the season, Manager Sparky Anderson turned to one of his walking wounded, and the patient provided the cure.

"Trammell might be the greatest player in the game," Anderson said of injured shortstop Alan Trammell, who in a rare pinch-hitting appearance got a two-out single in the ninth inning Wednesday night to give Detroit a crucial 4-3 victory over the streaking Toronto Blue Jays.

"This one meant a lot," Anderson said after the Tigers broke a six-game losing streak to move within a game of the Boston Red Sox in the American League East. "We just lost 13 of 15. People have got to understand that's a lot of losses."

But Trammell, whose single scored a hustling Chet Lemon from second base, said the slump was not a major concern.

"A lot of people forget that last year we were three back with only seven to go," he said. "We're very much in it."

Indeed they are, thanks to some daring baserunning by Lemon, who had three hits — two doubles — in four at-bats.

The final hit, immediately preceding Trammell's game-winner, was a line drive toward the left field corner that appeared to be a long single. But Lemon never broke stride and easily beat George Bell's throw to second base for a double.

"The ball was hit so hard, I'm sure everybody in the ballpark said, 'You ain't going anyplace on a ball hit that hard,'" Lemon said. "When I looked up, he either had the ball or was about to pick it up ... I didn't make the decision to keep going until I was three or four steps past first."

The victory, which ended Toronto's six-game winning streak, marked the 16th time the Tigers won a game in their final at-bat.

Elsewhere, it was Baltimore 4, Boston 3; Cleveland 5, New York 4; Chicago 7, Milwaukee 2; Seattle 2, Minnesota 1 in 10 innings; Oakland 6, Texas 3, and Kansas City 4, California 2.

The Blue Jays had tied the game with two runs in the eighth. Fred McGriff doubled, Kelly Gruber walked and Guillermo Hernandez relieved Detroit starter Frank Tanana. Sal Butera bunted the runners up, and Hernandez hit Tony Fernandez to load the bases. McGriff scored on Lloyd Moseby's grounder that forced Fernandez.

Mike Henneman, 8-4, relieved Hernandez and threw a wild pitch to Jesse Barfield, allowing Gruber to score the tying run.

Tanana, who had a perfect game until Butera's two-out single in the sixth, struck out four and walked one, allowing four hits in seven innings plus.

Matt Nokes and Darrell Evans walked to start a three-run Detroit second. Lemon singled past a diving shortstop Fernandez to score Nokes. Evans moved to third on a grounder by Tom Brookens that forced Lemon and scored on a single by Jim Walewander. Brookens scored when Toronto catcher Butera threw wild to second in an attempt to catch the stealing Walewander.

Jesse Barfield reached on a grounder that forced Lloyd Moseby, who had singled in the Toronto seventh, and scored on a two-out double by Pat Borders.

Orioles 4, Red Sox 3
Larry Sheets scored from third base in the ninth inning as Boston failed to complete what would have been an inning-ending double play. Instead, Baltimore rallied for two runs to hand the Red Sox their first defeat in 72 games in which Boston led entering the final inning.

Cal Ripken hit bases-loaded grounder to shortstop Jody Reed, who flipped to second baseman Marty Barrett to force Bill Ripken. But Barrett's throw to first was wide and Todd Benzinger was unable to record the third out.

Boston led 3-2 entering the bottom of the ninth, and was two outs away from victory after reliever Lee Smith struck out pinch-hitter Brady Anderson.

Smith gave up a single to Jim Traber, then left the game with a sore neck. Bob Stanley, 6-3, walked Larry Sheets and Pete Stanicek on nine pitches to load the bases.

The Orioles tied the game when Billy Ripken hit a single to right, scoring Rick Schu, who was running for Traber.

Ellis Burks hit his 16th homer for Boston.

Indians 5, Yankees 4
Luis Medina hit the first two home runs of his major league career and drove in three runs to lead the Cleveland over New York. Despite the loss, the Yankees remained five games behind the Red Sox.

Medina led off the third inning with a solo homer and hit a two-run shot in Cleveland's three-run fourth to help Rod Nichols to his first major league victory in five decisions. Doug Jones, the fourth Cleveland pitcher, earned his 31st save.

Both of Medina's homers came off Tommy John, 9-7, as New York lost for the fourth time in five games.

Mariners 2, Twins 1
Seattle's Harold Reynolds hit a two-out double in the 10th inning off Minnesota reliever Jeff Reardon to score Rey Quinones.

With Dan Schatzeder pitching, Edgar Martinez drew a leadoff walk and was forced at second on Quinones' unsuccessful sacrifice. Reardon relieved Schatzeder and got Henry Cotto to ground out to second, advancing Quinones to second. Reynolds then doubled down the right field line.

Bill Swift, the fifth Seattle pitcher, raised his record to 7-10, pitching the final 1 2-3 innings. Schatzeder fell to 0-3.

Royals 4, Angels 2
George Brett had three hits, including a home run, and Bo Jackson hit a two-run triple as Kansas City beat California.

Floyd Bannister, aided by three double plays and a shoestring, bases-loaded catch by left fielder Pat Tabler, improved to 10-12. Bannister surrendered eight hits in seven innings.

Steve Farr, the fourth Kansas City pitcher, worked the final inning for his 18th save. He gave up a run on a sacrifice fly by Johnny Ray.

White Sox 7, Brewers 2
Jerry Reuss pitched a four-hitter over seven innings as Chicago stopped Milwaukee's seven game winning streak.

Reuss, 11-8, beat the Brewers for the third time this season. The loss kept Milwaukee 4 1/2 games behind Boston.

The White Sox roughed up Milwaukee's Mike Birkbeck for three runs in the third inning and added two more in the fourth off reliever Paul Mirabella.

Bobby Thigpen earned his 30th save despite allowing a leadoff home run by Rob Deer, his 21st, in the ninth.

Athletics 6, Rangers 3
Jose Canseco's major league-leading 37th homer tied the game in the fifth inning, and Gene Nelson pitched three innings of scoreless relief for Oakland.

With the score tied 2-2 in the sixth, Terry Steinbach drew a one-out walk and was running as Stan Javier hit a ball sharply to second baseman Jerry Browne. Browne's throw to shortstop Scott Fletcher skipped into left field. A fan leaned over the railing and touched the ball and the umpires ruled Steinbach would have scored.

The Athletics added two runs in the seventh when Jose Guzman, 11-11, committed a club-record 10th balk of the season and Steinbach added an RBI single.

Nelson, 7-6, relieved rookie starter Dave Otto to open the fourth inning.

Cuba Tops USA, 4-3

PARMA, Italy (AP) — Cuba sent the U.S. Olympic baseball team on its way to the Games with a loss and set off a celebration by fans at home.

Cuba, which will not participate in Seoul this month, beat the United States 4-3 Wednesday night to win the World Baseball Championships. The Cubans did it with a three-run rally in the bottom of the ninth, their second last-ditch effort over the U.S. Olympians in four days.

Cuba's Prensa Latina news agency reported celebrations in the streets throughout the country as the winning run crossed home plate.

"Many Cubans lost their voices (screaming), and it can be said that the island sank a centimeter as everyone jumped in unison when the baseball game ended," the news agency said in a dispatch monitored in Mexico City.

The United States' chance for a sweet sendoff to the Olympics was ended with a controversial call by the first base umpire and a home run by Lourdes Gurriel.

defense and only had one blocked. In fact, of the 13 punts we blocked last year, 10 of those turned into touchdowns. To be a good football team you have to have a good punting game to go along with everything else."

In last week's victory over the Cardinals, Williams credited lineman Andy Smith and receiver Abram Lang as the offensive keys.

Lang hauled in one touchdown pass and nearly caught another, while Smith, according to Williams, controlled the offensive line better than anyone else enabling the Rampants to take control of the contest.

Mike Tyson Soap Opera Continues

©1988 Lowe's Companies, Inc.

NEW YORK (AP) — The woman who raised Mike Tyson through his teens called it "some sort of soap opera." Her foster son did not try to kill himself. He couldn't do such a thing.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, called the idea "outrageous," and said the story was "a pack of falsehoods and untruths — despicable lies."

Again, Cayton was portrayed as a villain, the heavy, with one hand over his heart, the other in Mike Tyson's pocket.

Enter Donald Trump, who helped Tyson in his lawsuit against Cayton, Trump's public relations man, Howard Rubenstein, lawyers Peter Parcher and Steven Hayes, the heavyweight champion's actress-bridge since February, Robin Givens, and her mother, Ruth Roper.

"White knights," Cayton said. "They've known him for a few months and, out of the clear blue, suddenly they're the people with the knowledge of Tyson's problems. I've been working with Mike, solving his problems since he was 14 ... and now Bill Cayton, who has protected and taken care of Mike for eight years, is worried only about making money on Mike."

"It's deplorable. Not true." This, the latest chapter in the soap opera of Mike Tyson, began on Sunday. Tyson, 22, was staying in his room at Camille Ewald's house in Catskill, N.Y., where he had lived since he was 13 — seven years before he became heavyweight champion of the world.

On a cool, rainy evening, he got into his silver BMW, which was parked on the grass in front of Ewald's house, and drove it into a tree, knocking himself unconscious for a half hour and forcing a second postponement of his title defense against Frank Bruno.

Though doctors say he is now OK, Tyson can't train for at least a month, delaying the scheduled Oct. 8 fight in London until December.

Then, on Wednesday, the New York Daily News quoted unnamed sources close to Tyson as saying he had told Givens, who was in New York at the time, that he was going to commit suicide by smashing his car.

"It's not true," Ewald said. "Mike spent the whole week here in my house training. He was not depressed."

She said he did seem a little unhappy, though, but she said it was because of his hand, which he broke two weeks ago in a fist fight in Harlem with former boxer Mitch Green.

Tyson had been held incommunicado in Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York from his arrival Sunday night until his release on Wednesday. Givens, Roper and Rubenstein did not even allow Cayton to see him or talk to him by telephone, Cayton said.

Cayton said he tried to see Tyson on Monday but was barred from his hospital room by Rubenstein and Roper. He met with Roper, Givens and Rubenstein on Tuesday, when they told him they were trying to get Tyson to see a psychiatrist, Henry L. McCurtis of Manhattan.

Cayton told them: "If you think it's indicated, I have no problem with that."

But that was the first that Cayton had heard of any potential mental problems, although Tyson did come to Ewald nine years ago from the Tyson School for Boys, an upstate New York home for delinquents.

The Daily News said in its story that Tyson had taken medication to correct a mental imbalance as a youth and now apparently was suffering a recurrence. That could not be confirmed.

"I've known him since he was 13," said Ewald, a shirttail-in-law of the late Cus D'Amato, Tyson's first trainer. Ewald and D'Amato lived together in a 14-room house on 9½ acres overlooking the Hudson River in Catskill, and they brought Tyson into their home.

He still lives there off-and-on, especially when he's training.

And, according to sources close to Tyson, he likes Givens with him when he's training. One source said those around Tyson believe this alleged suicide attempt was merely a way of "looking for a little attention" from his wife.

"Maybe he told his wife that," the source said about the suicide threat. "But it was an idle threat."

Ewald said it was an accident. She was an eyewitness.

Tyson had his car parked on her front lawn. It had been raining, and it was about 10:30 at night. Tyson said he wanted to go out to get some papers and magazines to read.

"When he started the car, the wheels began to spin," Ewald said.

"Then, I suppose, he put more pressure on, and the car shot up and hit a tree. He lost control, and it ran into some shrubbery."

Ewald says she asked someone, she doesn't remember who, to call an ambulance, and 10 minutes later, Tyson was taken to the hospital unconscious.

"Doctors say he still can't remember what happened."

NBC TV Movie Focuses On War Photographers

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Matt Thompson is first and foremost a "shooter," and if the soldier framed in his camera lens dies in combat — well, it's going to make a great picture.

Thompson, clutching his cameras, is tramping through the jungle, aware of the Viet Cong stalking him and the American soldiers around him, yet concentrating on getting "the shot."

The shot that's going to amaze his wire service bosses back in New York. The shot that's going to land on the front page of every newspaper around the world. The shot that's going to win him the Pulitzer Prize. The shot that's finally going to spark the job offer from Life magazine.

"I didn't want combat photographers to be overly glamorized," said David Hume Kennerly, writer-producer of the NBC movie "Shooter," airing Sunday. "I wanted to show what it's really like. The competitive nature. I wanted to show a guy whose purpose is getting the one great photo to the exclusion of everything else. He was going to wind up either famous or dead."

Kennerly is himself a Pulitzer Prize-winning photographer who covered Vietnam, a one-time Life magazine staffer and White House photographer in the Ford administration. In "Shooter," he tells a compelling story of combat photographers.

The photographers work for International Press, a fictitious wire service operating out of a bureau in Saigon.

The movie has the feel and texture of the real thing. It throbs with the passion, the cut-throat competition and the pranks of the photographers. It swings between the dangers of combat to such humorous episodes as elderly American tourists who keep wandering into the shooting zones, and the sticky-fingered German photographer bent on shipping home the national art treasures of Vietnam.

One of the photographers' schemes involves the invention of a phony photo "stringer" named Growald. Thompson wants to use the money paid the non-existent stringer to aid a Vietnam orphanage. The other shooters, without charity in mind, horn in and start crediting some of their film to Growald. Soon Growald is the most talked-about photographer in Vietnam. It ends with an ironic backfire to Thompson's quest for the Pulitzer Prize.

Kennerly was co-writer and co-executive producer with Stephen Kline. Gary Nelson directed the two-hour movie on location in Thailand. Kennerly had earlier written a book, also called "Shooter," about Vietnam that was heavily illustrated with his pictures.

The movie stars Jeffrey Nordling as Matt Thompson, Alan Ruck as a fellow shooter, Noble Willingham as the bureau chief, plus Jeffrey Allan Chandler, Helen Hunt, Rosalind Chao, Steven Ford and Nick Cassavetes.

"The movie is autobiographical to a degree," Kennerly admitted. "Let's say the photographer was based a bit on me. But this isn't my story in Vietnam. Every character was pulled from people I knew. Some of me's in the other photographers, too."

Kennerly worked for United Press International in Vietnam and was 25 when he won a Pulitzer in 1972. He joined Life only six weeks before the publication folded. He then switched to Time and is still associated with the magazine.

He got into motion pictures when he enrolled in a two-year course in directing at the American Film Institute.

INXS won best video, best group video, best editing in a video and best breakthrough video for technical innovation. It also won a viewer's choice award, voted on by MTV audience during the week by calling a special telephone number.

Wednesday night's show with Arsenio Hall as host was broadcast live on MTV from the Universal Amphitheater and has been sold in syndication for rebroadcast on non-cable channels.

INXS, whose "Need You Tonight" video includes a rich overlay of images of the band performing, had the most nominations, eight, followed by five for former Beatle George Harrison, who was blanked.

Backstage, INXS lead singer Michael Hutchence said the group, which formed in Sydney in 1977, does not consider videos first when writing music.

"Videos have nothing to do with music, really," said Hutchence. "You sit around (saying) 'This is my music.' You have a good time, you make records, and comes the day you start thinking about what it will look like on film."

Prince's clip of a concert performance of "U Got The Look" won best male video and best concert video. The purple master from Minnesota was in England and did not pick up his trophies.

Squeeze's "Hourglass" video won technical awards for best art direction and best special effects.

Early Winners

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A difficult and sultry opera aria by Miss Oklahoma and Miss Louisiana's "super" swimsuit helped win them first honors in preliminary competition at the Miss America Pageant.

Lori Lee Kelley, a music student at Oklahoma City University, sang what she called a "very tough" aria Wednesday to win the talent competition among her group of 17 first-round contestants.

She won with her rendition of "Una Voce Poco Fa" from "The Barber of Seville," which the 23-year-old soprano said she's practiced for three years.

Miss Louisiana Valerie Brossett, a 5-foot-8, 115-pound brunette from West Monroe, took the first round swimsuit competition in her group.

Swimsuit winners often go on to win the Miss America title, despite continuing criticism of that part of the pageant.

Suzanne Vega's "Luka," a song about child abuse, won best female video.

"I have known some abused children, and there is a boy named Luka in my apartment, who is not an abused child, and I used his name," Ms. Vega said of the song.

Los Lobos' "La Bamba," from the movie of that name about the short life of 1950s rock star Ritchie Valens, won best video from a movie.

"It wasn't our career, it was someone else's career," group member Conrad Lozano said backstage, referring to Valens. But Lozano said the group was proud to do the song.

Rock veterans Pink Floyd's "Learning to Fly" won best concept video. George Michael's "Father Figure" won best direction, while Sting's "We'll Be Together" won best cinematography.

Pop superstar Michael Jackson, whose "Thriller" and "Beat It" helped MTV take off when it started in 1983, was given a Video Vanguard award for career achievement.

He appeared via satellite from London. Later in the show, sister Janet's choreography nomination for "The Pleasure Principle" beat Michael's nominations for "Bad" and "The Way You Make Me Feel" in the category.

Guns 'n' Roses, a Los Angeles heavy metal band, won best new artist in a video for its raucous "Welcome To The Jungle."

The award was accepted by group member Slash, accompanied by former teen porn star Traci Lords.

The nominees for this year were selected from 644 videos broadcast on MTV from May 2, 1987, to April 1, 1988. The finalists were narrowed down by votes from music business professionals, journalists, agents and artists. A smaller voting body of 1,800 music professionals, technicians and video creators selected the winners.

Tour Canceled

NEW YORK (AP) — On her doctor's orders, Elizabeth Taylor is canceling an international tour promoting a new line of bath products, a spokesman said.

A publicist for Miss Taylor on Wednesday quoted Dr. William Skinner as saying the actress needs six to eight more weeks of therapy to recuperate from a fractured vertebra in her lower back. Miss Taylor was hospitalized for treatment of the fracture from July 25 to Aug. 17.

Miss Taylor had been scheduled to appear at stores in California, New Jersey, North Carolina, Louisiana and Missouri to promote her line of bath products, "Elizabeth Taylor's Passion Body Riches."

She also was to have gone to stores in Germany, England, France and Italy.

NBC Keeps Top Rating

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC made it 11 in a row in the weekly A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings, but as summer reruns dragged into September, not that many people were watching.

Reruns of ABC's "Full House" and CBS' "Designing Women" turned up in the top 10, but they were behind five NBC comedies.

"Full House" is being broadcast two nights a week. A Tuesday episode came in sixth, but the episode on Friday, the regular time period, was 40th.

The top 10 shows last week were: NBC's "A Different World," "Cheers," "The Cosby Show," "Night Court" and "Golden Girls," ABC's "Full House," NBC's "L.A. Law," and "Amen"; and a tie between CBS' "Blood and Orchids, Part Two" and "Designing Women" and ABC's "Who's the Boss?"

NBC finished the week with an average, prime-time rating of 11.6; CBS 10.8; and ABC 9.3. The network averages for the season that began 50 weeks ago are: NBC 14.5, CBS 12.3 and ABC 12.1. The three-network share of the total viewing audience was 60, up somewhat from the previous week's 56. The all-time low, set this summer, was 47.

The rating is a percentage of the nation's 88.6 million homes with televisions. The share is a percentage of sets in use.

The "CBS Evening News" regained the lead in the news race with an average rating of 9.8 and a 21 share. "ABC World News Tonight" had a 9.4 and 20; "NBC Nightly News" an 8.8 and 19.

The bidding:
 North East South West
 Pass Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♥
 It is the care paid to little things that sets apart the expert from the average player. This hand from a team-of-four event highlights what we mean.

Whether or not North should open the bidding is debatable. Regardless, the final contract would have been the same, and is unassailable. Note that North's jump to four spades as a passed hand is not preemptive, but shows a good hand.

At both tables West led the jack of hearts. One declarer won in dummy and led a trump. When East discarded a heart, declarer realized that he had two trump losers, so he had to hold his minor-suit losses to one trick. Since East rated to have length in the minors, declarer won the ace of spades, crossed to the ace of diamonds and tried the finesse. Unlucky.

He won the heart return, crossed to the ace of clubs and finessed the jack. More tough luck. Since he still had to give up two trump tricks, he went down one trick.

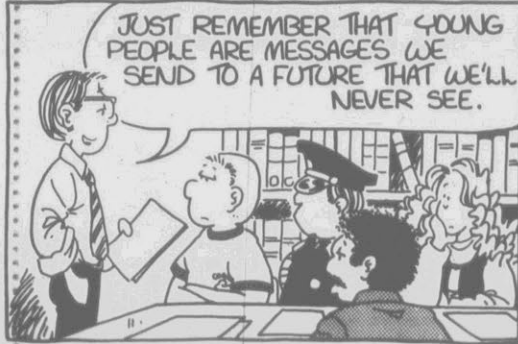

Sitting South at the other table was a very good player. He won the first heart trick in hand, crossed to the king of hearts and led a trump. When East failed to follow, declarer inserted the ten. West scored his jack, but found that he was end-played in three suits. He chose to exit with a diamond. (No other return would have been better.) Declarer's ten won, and the king and ace were cashed. Ace of spades and another forced West back on lead, and he was again endplayed. A club would relieve declarer of a guess in that suit, and a red-suit return would allow declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a club from the other. Making four spades with an overtrick!
