Vietnamese Jetliner Crashes, Killing 75 People

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Vietnamese jetliner trying to land during a heavy storm crashed and exploded in a rice field near Bangkok's airport today, killing 75 people and seriously injuring six, officials said.

The Soviet-made Tu-134 jet with 81 people aboard blew up after hitting the field about four miles short of Don Muang International Airport, said an air force spokesman, Sommot Sundaravej.

The plane crashed three minutes before it was scheduled to land, he said. India's ambassador to Vietnam, Arun Patwardhan, 48, was killed along with his wife and son. Eight other Indians also died.

A second secretary of the Japanese Embassy in Hanoi, Kiyokata Ida, was also believed dead, said the Japanese Embassy in Bangkok. The other Japanese passengers believed killed were two staffers of the Tokyo headquarters of Mitsubishi Corp., Japan's largest trading firm.

Diplomats said two Frenchmen, two Swedes, one Briton and two Finns also died.

Air Vietnam Flight 831, which left Vietnam's capital of Hanoi at 10 a.m. (11 p.m. EDT), is frequently taken by foreign diplomats and relief workers.

The U.S. Embassy in Bangkok said no Americans were aboard the plane.

"I heard an explosion louder than lightning," said Orn Chuayklint, a villager who witnessed the crash from his wooden house nearby. "It fell into the paddy field and a ball of fire rolled for a kilometer (half mile)."

Sommat said the dead included both Vietnamese and citizens of other countries, but he did not have details.

There was no word on what caused the crash. Both the cockpit and flight recorders were retrieved in excellent condition, said Maj. Gen. Sopol Savigamin, the regional police commander leading the rescue effort.

The cockpit recorder contains the conversation between the crew and control tower and the other recorder contains flight data.

The pilot lost contact with the Bangkok control tower at 11:26 a.m., and the plane soon disappeared from radar screens, said Group Capt. Charoon Peetong, director general of the Airports Authority of Thailand.

The plane crashed 11 minutes later.

Pitt Board May Limit Inmates In County Jail

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County commissioners told court officials this morning they are considering a resolution asking that Sheriff Ralph Tyson — in order to conform with state regulations — turn prisoners away from the county jail so no more than 83 inmates will be housed in the facility at any time.

The board met with Resident Superior Court Judge David E. Reid, Chief District Court Judge Burt Aycock, District Attorney Tom Haigwood and Trial Court Administrator Bill Nichols to ask their help in relieving the overcrowding.

The jail, designed to house 83 prisoners, was opened in the mid-1960s. And the board, concerned with jail overcrowding over the past few years, is planning for the construction of a new jail.

Tyson told the board earlier this week that, "We still have overcrowding in our jail. We're averaging 25 over capacity every day."

In considering the adoption of the resolution, County Manager Kramer Jackson told the judges and other officials today, "Our purpose is not to violate the law. The (state) statute says the sheriff has the authority to do this when the jail is full.

"If there is any way possible," Charles Gaskins, chairman of the board, asked, "don't put them in the jail."

"We all know Pitt County is growing rapidly" and that the jail is "not adequate to accommodate the population," Reid said.

The Superior Court judge then suggested that "a plan might be implemented to identify non-violent criminals" and house them in a temporary detention facility that could be used until a new jail is built.

But Reid emphasized, "When you have people dangerous to themselves or others, you just can't turn them out."

Reid also suggested that magistrates could be encouraged to allow "pretrial release" for as many people as possible, rather than to require secured bonds for persons charged with crimes.

The officials told commissioners that the Greenville Police Department accounts for 75 to 80 percent of the prisoners in jail and that about 40 percent of the jail population at any given time might be classified as non-violent.

Haigwood, the district attorney, told commissioners that the criminal case load in 1983 totaled about 17,000 cases, while this year, the case load is "almost 34,000" cases.

And, Haigwood suggested, "The general feeling of the population and as district attorney is that not enough folks are going to jail. I feel not enough people are going to jail and those that do are not going long enough."

"We need to be looking for some place to put them and keep them there," Haigwood said. "I urge you to find something immediately."

Commissioner Kenneth Dews said, "It's a very explosive situation. We have to have some kind of relief." Tom Johnson, another member of the board, said, "My position (is) we have to spend the money for temporary facilities. I don't see any way around that."

Commissioners have scheduled a meeting for 9 a.m. Monday at which the jail situation and other matters will be discussed.

City Council Votes To Annex Colonial Park Neighborhood

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council voted 5-1 Thursday night in favor of the involuntary annexation of the Colonial Mobile Home Park neighborhood.

By the same vote, the council approved an amendment to the City Budget earmarking $178,268 in first-year city expenditures to provide municipal services to the annexed property.

The area, which will become part of the city Oct. 31, consists of approximately 218 acres located north of Greenfield Terrace Subdivision, west of N.C. 11 and U.S. 13 and south of Wellcome Middle School.

Within the area are 274 mobile homes in Colonial Mobile Home Park; 26 duplexes in Colonial Village; two family-care homes; a private livestock yard; Greenfield Terrace Park, and a section of the right-of-way of N.C. 11 and U.S. 13. Included are 313 dwelling units with a total population of 1,017 at a density of 4.66 persons per acre.

The annexation of the predominantly black area will allow the city to annex new developments with a projected majority white population into a voting district where 60 percent minority representation is legally mandated by the U.S. Justice Department.

While anticipated city expenditures to extend municipal services to the annexed area in fiscal year 1988-89 are $178,268, anticipated city revenues generated from the area during the same period are $141,568.

"The city will take a loss for two years and then the revenues will outpace the expenditures during the third year," said City Manager Greg Knowles of the first-year difference of $36,700 between city revenues and expenditures.

Manning Enters Plea In White's Murder

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Grimesland man who has agreed to testify for the state in prosecution over the murder of Bobby Charles White pleaded guilty Thursday in Pitt Superior Court to second-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder and aiding and abetting the solicitation of murder.

Prosecutors said James Earl Manning, 24, of Route 2, Box 174, Grimesland, pleaded guilty to the charges as part of a plea arrangement for his testimony against White's wife, Sandra Faye Haddock White, 45, Route 2, Grimesland, and James Alton Mobley, 22, of Lot 18, Country Estates, Greenville.

Mrs. White and Mobley are both charged with first-degree murder in the March 19 stabbing death of White.

Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood said Manning told investigators that he and Mrs. White met with Mobley early this year to arrange

Court Says Whittingtons Harassed

Mom-Daughter Get Jail Weekends

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Two Greenville women have been ordered to spend the next 15 weekends in jail for violating probation orders that barred them from making any contact with Larry or Jim Whittington, top members of the Fountain of Life Ministries.

At a hearing in Greenville on Thursday, District Court Judge J. Randall Hunter of New Bern invoked a 30-day jail sentence against Julie Clayton, 26, and her mother, Mazie Clayton. Hunter originally found the Claytons guilty of trespassing in October of 1987. He gave each woman a 30-day suspended sentence and ordered them not to make any contact with the Whittingtons.

But Larry Whittington filed a complaint this past summer, claiming the women drove past the office about 25 times on the afternoon of June 25, shouting obscenities, making obscene gestures, holding up signs and blowing the car horn.

The women denied the charges, and Julie Clayton's attorney, Public Defender Mark Ward, and her mother's attorney, Willis Talton, both argued to Hunter Thursday that it was impossible to determine beyond a reasonable doubt which side was telling the truth.

Ward said the conflict was clouded because both the Whittingtons and Claytons had antagonized each other and "it may have bordered on a feud at times."

But Hunter said he did not believe the women's testimony.

"This is a case I'll remember long after I leave the bench," Hunter, who is returning to private practice in December, said before announcing his verdict.

"I found out (at the last trial in October) that the Claytons were not credible witnesses.

"I am further convinced today that they are not credible witnesses, and I do not believe their testimony," he said.

Though the nature of the Whittingtons' ministry invites some public attention, Hunter said, the Claytons had gone past acceptable limits.

The Claytons said they would not appeal the decision, but they asked to

Dottie Martin Promotes Need For More Literate Tar Heels

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Leaders of Pitt County came together Thursday night to hear North Carolina's first lady, Dottie Martin, talk about the need for a more literate North Carolina citizenry and to examine what can be done to assist the functionally illiterate of Pitt County.

During a Literacy Awareness Night gathering sponsored by The Daily Reflector, Mrs. Martin began her talk touting the economic upsurge that North Carolina has experienced in recent years and its present 2.9 percent jobless rate, the lowest on record. She said, however, that 40 percent of the potential workers in North Carolina can expect to gain and maintain only entry-level jobs because these people cannot read and write well enough to advance.

Mrs. Martin said it is believed that about a million adults in this state cannot read nor write well enough to advance in their jobs, help their children with school work, enjoy a newspaper, nor read road signs and package labels. She said the building of a quality work force is dependent on these people's gaining reading and writing skills.

It is encouraging, she said, that people at the grassroots level are volunteering to teach their fellow citizens to read. She said her husband, Gov. Jim Martin, has called for a state-level office to facilitate adult literacy programs, but that so far, it has not been funded by the General Assembly.

D. Jordan Whichard III, general manager of The Daily Reflector, welcomed those present and read a regrets letter from Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush, which expressed her support of the literacy cause in Pitt County and throughout the nation. He talked about The Daily Reflector's support of the work of Literacy Volunteers of America, Pitt County, since its inception. And he expressed delight with a new Reflector Sunday column titled "Yes!" designed for use in basic reading instruction. Whichard said the column is produced by the Reflector's Newspapers in the Schools staffers, Diane Williams and Gigi Walter.

Mrs. Martin was introduced by East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin, who expressed the support of ECU for the literacy cause in Pitt County and throughout the state and nation.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

DO THE TWO-STEP & SMILE!

Have you ever gone to the grocery store, filled your cart, and arrived at the check-out lane only to realize you didn't bring any money with you? Remember the bottleneck it created while you reloaded the groceries into the cart as you promised the cashier you would run home and be right back to pay?

You can avoid that kind of wasted time and frustration when buying your next home by doing the "two-step." Follow these two simple steps to owning a home next time you buy: 1) ask your real estate agent to have you "pre-qualified" by a mortgage lender, and 2) have the enjoyable time of your life looking for just the right home (without the unspoken worries about being approved for the mortgage).

To be "pre-qualified" for a mortgage loan, you provide the lender of your choice with accurate, specific information about your employment, your earnings, and previous credit history. This information is used by the loan officer to calculate the maximum mortgage for which you qualify. The mortgage amount is subject, of course, to verification of the information you supplied to the lender, all of which is done upon making formal application for your mortgage.

The positive, upbeat benefit to following this two-step method is the second step - looking for a home. Once you know how much home you can afford, finding that next home will be fun and worry-free!

Please give me a call to help in the purchase of your next home. I guarantee confidential, professional service.

ECU Telescopes Will Be Trained On Mars

ECU News Bureau
The planet Mars, closer to Earth than it has been in 17 years, will be the focus of attention on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the Goose Creek State Park near Washington, N.C.

Telescopes from East Carolina University, including a giant 14-inch diameter mirror scope, will be erected at the park for public viewing of the "red planet." Astronomers from ECU will also be available to answer questions about Mars, Saturn and other celestial objects that can be seen by the naked eye or through binoculars and telescopes.

"Mars is a spectacular sight during next couple of weeks," said Dr. James Gaiser, an ECU physicist. Gaiser said the planet, a bright orange dot in the eastern sky, is bigger and brighter than it has been since 1971.

Every 17 years the planet moves within its closest range of Earth which is about 36 million miles. The planet will come closest to Earth on Sept. 22, but seeing it is better now because the moon doesn't come up until late in the evening.

Mars can be seen in the eastern sky beginning around 9 p.m.

Gaiser said that Saturn is an interesting sight too. He said the rings of Saturn are tilted toward the Earth at an angle that only occurs every 26 years. The rings of Saturn can only be seen through a telescope.

The program is sponsored by the ECU Department of Physics. Gaiser, Dr. Reul Mehta of the department of physics and Thom Kemp of Greenville will be at the park to help point out the planets and other sky objects.

In case of rain or cloudy skies, the program will be held on Sunday at the same time.

Goose Creek State Park is located east of Washington. Take U.S. 264 toward Bath and turn right about four miles past Beaufort County Community College.

Telescopes will be set up in the parking lot across from the Park Ranger's station. Visitors to the park are also encouraged to bring binoculars.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS ASKED

The Eastern Correction Center at Maury has asked Hotline to appeal for donations of musical instruments and sound equipment components for inmates who would like to form a music-making group.

Some items have been collected, but more are needed, Joan Boudreaux, a Greenville resident who teaches at the center, says. Among the items needed are drumsticks, a small keyboard, a tenor saxophone, a baritone saxophone, a microphone, cords for electric guitars and bass and tenor amplifiers. Anyone who would like to inquire about needs or donate may call Mrs. Boudreaux, 756-2678. Items also may be taken to the main prison gate and left with the guard there.

Teacher Of Year Cites Role Reversal

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The National Teacher of the Year told an audience at East Carolina University Thursday that the "Golden Rule of teaching is to treat students the way you'd want to be treated if the roles were reversed."

"Teach students the way you would want to be taught if the roles were reversed," Terry Weeks said.

Weeks spoke to an audience in the Nursing School auditorium that spilled out into the halls during the program "A Salute to Excellence in Teaching," given in his honor.

The program was sponsored by The Middle School Leadership Academy of the ECU School of Education and The Council of Chief State School Officers of Washington, D.C.

Students surveyed in elementary school were asked what they liked most about their favorite teacher, Weeks said. The three top responses were: "She was nice; she helped me, she was concerned about me."

"These students don't seem to be asking more than their fair share," he said. "Treating people the way you want to be treated makes a big difference."

Also, teachers should broaden their methods of teaching to reach the diverse student population, Weeks said. "Students are different and as teachers we need to be conscious of and interested in that difference."

"Every morning, I put myself in that seat mentally" and consider whether the students would prefer to see a frown or a smile and consider how they will receive the lesson prepared.

Weeks told his audience that students have changed quite a bit from the 1950s.

In 1955, 60 percent of the students came from two-parent families where the father went out to work and usually the mother worked at home, he said. By 1980, 11 percent of the students were in two-parent families, and in 1985, only 7 percent.

Thirty percent of today's school population are at-risk students — students who do not have role models at home, who may live with abusive or alcoholic parents or who face other similar problems at home, Weeks said. By the year 2000, at-risk students will be in the majority.

And, whereas the discipline problems used to be chewing gum, proper dress and skipping class, they're now assaults, drug and alcohol use, carrying weapons, theft, vandalism and — skipping class.

"We find them hard to reach and difficult to teach, but we're the most significant adult in the lives of some of these children," he said.

Weeks challenged his audience to rediscover or to discover the "heart and soul of teaching."

"It's not the test scores that will determine the worth of the students but it's the kind of person they'll become," he said.

Weeks is a seventh grade teacher at Central Middle School in Murfreesboro, Tenn. He credits his decision to teach to his teachers at the small kindergarten through 12 school he attended.

North Carolina's Teacher of the Year, Merv Sessoms, also spoke during the program Thursday. "We have so much to be excited about in North Carolina," he said, reflecting on the state's educational attributes such as the N.C. Center for the Advancement of Teaching, the N.C. Public School Forum, the Basic Education Plan, and other educational reforms such as the Career Development and Lead Teacher concepts. Sessoms teaches in Haywood County.

Pursuant to Order of the State Board of Elections dated August 26, 1988, there will be a new Second Democratic Primary for District A County Commissioner conducted within said District in the County of Pitt, North Carolina, on October 11, 1988, for the purpose of nomination of County Commissioner for District A, which is a combination of Districts 1 and 2.

Only DEMOCRATIC VOTERS RESIDING IN CONSOLIDATED DISTRICT A WILL BE ELIGIBLE TO VOTE IN THE SAID NEW SECOND DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY FOR NOMINATION OF DISTRICT A COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

Said new Second Democratic Primary will be conducted on October 11, 1988, and the voting places in District A will be open between the hours of 6:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. The precinct voting places within District A are as follows:

- BELVOIR
- BETHEL
- CAROLINA
- GREENVILLE NO. 1
- GREENVILLE NO. 3
- GREENVILLE NO. 4
- GREENVILLE NO. 5
- GREENVILLE NO. 6
- GREENVILLE NO. 7
- GREENVILLE NO. 8

The registration deadline for said new election will be September 12, 1988. Qualified Democratic voters within District A who have registered on or before September 12, 1988 shall be entitled to vote in the new election.

Voters who register after the registration books close for said new election will not be eligible to vote on October 11, 1988, but will be eligible to vote in the November election, and thereafter. Registration is continuous.

Absentee ballots for said new Second Democratic Primary for District A County Commissioner in Pitt County will be available as soon as practicable.

Voters should check registration cards to determine the County Commissioner District in which they reside. Questions concerning registration and district assignment should be directed immediately to the Elections Office located at 201 East Second Street, Greenville, N.C. The telephone number is 830-4121. This will avoid inconvenience and delay on election day for voters and poll workers.

Voter registration books will be open to public inspection by any registered voter of Pitt County between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday at the elections office, 201 East Second Street, Greenville, N.C., and such shall be Challenge Days.

The Registrars, Judges and other Election Officials appointed by the Pitt County Board of Elections will serve as Election Officials for said new Second Democratic Primary for Pitt County Commissioner District A in the (10) voting places in District A set out above.

This the 31st day of August, 1988.

Nursing Program Needs Healing

When a nursing program isn't healthy, how can it train others to heal illness?

And East Carolina University's nursing program is sick. Nearly half of its 1988 graduates can't pass the state nursing exam — a basic certification test required to enter the field. Sixty-one percent of ECU's nursing graduates who took the test in July failed it. That's the worst record of any University of North Carolina system college and totally unacceptable from a department that is the backbone of the School of Allied Health.

Add to that dismal knowledge the fact ECU's passing rate plummeted from 92 percent in 1986 to 75 percent in 1987, and you have a prescription for trouble. An unsatisfactory trend toward substandard performance on an important test means changes in nursing preparation are necessary.

The statistics place ECU in an uncomfortable spotlight it must diligently work to slip away from. The school faces a two-headed monster. First, it must improve performance on the test immediately.

The latest dismal scores place the nursing school in a bind. To not jeopardize its accreditation, a school must post a 60 percent passing score. ECU just squeaked by. But a school must also maintain a 70 percent passing rate over a three-year period to avoid a review from the N.C. Board of Nursing. With a 75 and a 61 to contend with, ECU must pull its passing rate up to at least 74 in 1989 to stay out of hot water.

Second, it must accurately pinpoint the sources of weakness and implement a long-term approach to eradicate them. If instruction is off-target, redirect it. If the curriculum isn't responsive, overhaul it. If students are below average, raise standards. If the parameters of the test aren't being taught, teach them. Provide study time for the test. After all, it's a state certification exam. The questions relate directly to proper nursing procedures.

The real shame of the abysmal passing rate is the fact duly-trained nurses — 30 of them in 1988 — won't be available on the job market. At a time where nurses are critically short and badly needed by hospitals, doctors and institutions, ECU is turning out ringers. That wastes time, money and important human resources.

The scores are clearly intolerable for a nursing program which, in the past, has claimed a distinguished reputation and built its future on excellence. Current woes are an embarrassment to students, graduates and to the university. They cast doubt on the program's ability to train quality nurses.

And, since nursing is the foundation for ECU's entire allied health school, problems in that program could mean troubles all down the line. That implication is a predicament the university cannot afford.

ECU must find the trouble and take swift and proper action. The nursing program must heal itself.

A Questionable Future For Loan Proposal

'That might mean a repayment burden so great that too many students — especially those who expected to earn high salaries — would refuse to participate.'

WASHINGTON — Democratic presidential candidate Michael S. Dukakis' proposal to provide federally guaranteed loans to college students and require them to repay a percentage of their earnings for their entire working lives would work like Social Security in reverse: Instead of paying now for future benefits, Americans could benefit first and pay later.

"Education pays a lifetime of dividends, so it's not unreasonable to ask people to repay those benefits over their working lifetime," said Robert Reischauer, an economist at the Brookings Institution who proposed a similar college financing scheme last year. "Comparing the Dukakis proposal to the system we have now, it does help make college more affordable."

But education experts say ideas like the Dukakis plan have foundered in the past because of problems that Dukakis' campaign has not fully answered.

The program, as Dukakis seeks to design it, must pay for itself. But that might mean a repayment burden so great that too many students — especially those who expected to earn high salaries — would refuse to participate.

"Nobody else has yet figured out how to make these programs (self-supporting)," said Pat Smith, the education financing specialist at the American Council of Education, an umbrella organization for 1,500 colleges and universities. "If they can figure it out, I'm all for it. But at this point, I am very skeptical."

Officials at Dukakis campaign headquarters in Boston acknowledged Thursday they have not worked out many of the details of the plan, called STARS (Student Tuition and Repayment System). They also said that because of the lifetime repayment expense, few students would be in a position to rely heavily on the new financing scheme as a substitute for current loan programs.

"The concept will work, but it is going to take a lot of bright people sitting in a room together to flesh out the program," said Gene Sperling, one of the key Dukakis campaign experts who prepared the plan. "We see this as a complement to current programs, not a replacement. It will assure students who want to go to college that there is an education financing plan of last resort."

Reagan administration officials were quick to criticize the Dukakis proposal.

"Under the Dukakis plan, you can't retire your debt until you retire," said Bruce Carns, a deputy undersecretary of education. "And it is fatally flawed because it depends on the willingness of those who earn more to not only pay off their own loans but those of other people as well. That's why you won't get enough people of the right type to participate."

The Dukakis college financing plan would require participants to repay their loans after joining the work force through a payroll withholding mechanism similar to Social Security. An individual's payments, based on the amount borrowed, would be assessed as a fraction of his annual earnings.

Since all students graduating in a given year would be charged the same rate, students whose college educations led to careers with above-average incomes would effectively subsidize the loans of those whose earnings were less. Much like Social Security, however, there would be a cap — as yet undetermined — on the amount of income that would be assessed for loan payments.

Campaign officials argue that Dukakis' plan is fairer than that of his Republican rival, Vice President George Bush.

Under a Bush proposal, parents could establish tax-free college savings accounts to help pay future educational costs of their children. Those with higher incomes could more easily afford to set aside money for their children's education and they also would receive a greater tax benefit from the interest earned on the savings. To partially deal with this aspect of his plan, Bush has proposed to eliminate the tax benefit for those with family incomes above $80,000.

The key advantage of Dukakis' proposal, advocates said, is that it avoids burdening individuals with crushing debt payments when they are just starting out their careers and generally have lower incomes than they will at later stages in their life.

"The existing system puts a big burden on recent graduates and perhaps encourages people to avoid occupations where they might not make as much money right away," said Reischauer.

For example, a student today who received government subsidized loans of $10,000 at 8+ interest to be repaid in 10 years would be required to start paying $122 a month shortly after graduating from college. Those who could not qualify for such loans would probably have to pay banks close to 12 percent for student loans, so their monthly payment would be $143.

Under Dukakis' proposal, by contrast, a student who earned the average income for recent college graduates — $19,750 — would pay just $21 a month, or 1.25 percent of income, if the assumptions of economists who worked on the plan proved accurate. Under what some analysts believe are more realistic projections, the initial monthly payment would be $42, or 2.5 percent of income.

While the percentage would remain the same, these payments would rise in step with the natural increase in income, so that by the time he retired the average individual who received 5 percent annual raises and was earning $137,760 would be paying between $144 a month under the optimistic scenario, to perhaps $287 a month under more pessimistic assumptions.

The average student who borrowed $10,000 under the Dukakis plan might end up paying between $31,576 and $63,152 before retiring. By comparison, for a 10-year, $10,000 loan, a student would end up paying $14,520 for the government-subsidized loan and more than $17,000 for the unsubsidized one.

To the editor:

Michael Dukakis is the most pro-abortion candidate to ever run for the Presidency. He has had a public career of advocating legal abortion on demand and tax funding of abortion.

As early as 1970, Dukakis, as a state legislator, filed a bill (H. 3756) to legalize unrestricted abortion in Massachusetts. (This was a full three years before the infamous Roe v. Wade Supreme Court abortion decision.) As governor of Massachusetts, Dukakis repeatedly vetoed measures passed by the legislature to stop tax funding of abortion. He also vigorously opposed a proposed state constitutional amendment to end abortion on demand.

Dukakis is also a supporter of homosexual rights. He supported a recent "gay rights" bill in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, even taking time out from his presidential campaign to send a personal telegram to each legislator in support of this bill.

In a recent interview, Dukakis boasted that he is "a card-carrying member of the American Civil Liberties Union." (The ACLU supports such causes as the rights of abortionists and pornographers and the legalization of homosexual marriages.) Political observers expect that if Dukakis were elected president, he would appoint liberal, activist judges to "balance" the pro-life conservative appointments made during the Reagan administration.

The upcoming presidential election is undoubtedly one of the most important in American history. For the sake of morality, decency and for the lives of countless unborn children, let's keep Dukakis out of the presidency!

Tuesday I sat for two and a half hours registering voters at the Pitt County American Red Cross Bloodmobile co-sponsored by the Pitt County Sickle Cell Association in the Greenville Moose Lodge. Several people registered to vote or made changes which had occurred since last voting, i.e. address, name, or party affiliation changes.

The League of Women Voters believes that every eligible citizens should register and exercise his/her right to vote, an action vital to the well-being of our democracy. With some pride in our Pitt County citizens, I must report that most of the donors who saw our sign "Voter Registration," smiled that knowing smile to say, "I am already registered and I intend to vote."

League does not have a position on giving blood, but as much as our democracy is dependent on the informed and active participation of its citizens, so is it dependent on the health of its citizens. Oct. 10 is the last day to register to vote on Nov. 8. There is no deadline for giving blood. I encourage you to do both and help keep our democracy healthy.

To the editor:

A recent letter stated "Reagan's defense spending has resulted in monumental deficits." Nothing could be further from the truth. Forget liberal rhetoric. Let's look at the facts.

FACT: The percentage of the GNP going toward defense spending has declined since 1960 — while welfare outlays increased from 4.8 percent to 10.8 percent of the GNP.

FACT: The President doesn't spend money. Congress does, and it's the liberal Democrat majority in Congress which is responsible for the deficit.

FACT: Since 1980, federal revenues, despite Reagan's tax cuts, have risen 77 percent, while spending has risen 79 percent. Thus, 97 percent of the current deficit is now the effect of pre-Reagan liberal Democrat spending-and-taxing spree.

FACT: During the last year of Republican control of the Senate, Congress endorsed Reagan's economic policies — policies responsible for reducing the federal deficit for 1987 by $73 billion to 1.7 percent of the GNP, the lowest proportion of GNP since 1982.

FACT: Since then, Democrats have ignored Republicans' earnest actions on deficit reduction and have ignored Reagan's budget plans. Instead, they've spent $89 billion more than Reagan request, mostly with pork barrel spending spree, and then blamed the Reagan administration for the huge deficit they created!

FACT: Michael Dukakis has ruined Massachusetts economy with his huge tax-and-spend policies. In 1986, Massachusetts had a deficit surplus of $912 million. Today, the state faces a $600 million deficit. Massachusetts has lost 90,000 industrial jobs since 1984. The 1978-1983 "Massachusetts Miracle" occurred because of Proposition 2½ (a major tax cut) and huge defense contracts, both of which Dukakis opposed.

The deficit will remain until Republicans control the Presidency and Congress.

To the editor:

Many Democrats may be overlooking Bush's real talents. He knows foreign policy. He "knew of" the Iran Contra affairs. What we don't know is how much he knew. Was it his idea to send arms to Khomeini? Was the money from these sales used to buy arms for the Contras his idea? Did the planes taking arms to Central America deduct their charges when they returned drugs on the back haul? Or is this classified information?

Was Noriega hired by the CIA under Bush? Questions could serve as illuminating answers in a campaign speech. A lot of people would like answers to those "Where was George?" questions.

His choice of Dan Quayle has been criticized. A two-year gap in Quayle's resume which inadvertently had him as chief consumer investigator. Just "nit-pickers!"

Bush could, however, promise extra responsibilities for Quayle. As VP, Quayle could head Bush's proposed Ethics in Government office. He (Bush) might put Quayle in charge of a recreated Selective Service Division. Quayle's experience on the Defense Committee would be helpful in setting up a fair Selective Service system.

My suggestion to Bush is to announce now his cabinet members appointments contemplated and others:

Ed Meese for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court
 Jerry Falwell as (newly created) Religious Freedom and Patriotism Post
 Ollie North for Secretary of Defense. He could shred the Constitution to make his work more effective. Ed Meese would lend a supporting hand here.

This is the bell ringer: Bring back "The Gipper" for Secretary of Commerce and Treasurer. He could stay in the beautiful home in Beverly Hills being furnished by high-tax-bracket (now-lowered) friends. This would be a part-time job (just like the Presidency) and a "piece of cake" for him in squaring our trade imbalance and the national debt. He deserves it.

An Ounce Of Respect For Mexico's Congress, Please

MEXICO CITY — The nomadic Somalis have 45 separate names for the camel because of the dromedary's crucial role in their lives. In contrast, Mexicans employ a plethora of terms to mock their congress' unimportance. Tunel de viento (wind tunnel), sello de goma (rubber-stamp), and titero presidencial (presidential puppet) — these are words found in the derisive legislative lexicon.

A medley of factors accounts for Congress' traditional reputation as a vapid debating society: authoritarian practices inherited both from Iberia and the country's indigenous population; the presence of the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), which has ruled in Tammany Hall style for six decades; and the primacy of the chief executive-beneficiary of both centralist impulses and the PRI's dominance.

Indeed, Mexico's chief executive has been called a "combination of pope, queen, prime minister and president."

A subservient legislature didn't matter much when Mexico, thanks to the 6 percent annual growth impelled by an import-substitute development plan, was the dazzling Cinderella of the Third World for three decades after World War II. However, the damsel turned into a tattered step-sister as the model began to fizzle amid ever sharper middle class protests 20 years ago.

Pressures mounted for broader participation in a political system that reportedly practiced democracy 364 days a year — it was absent only on Election Day.

In the 1970s, the Congress became the vehicle for channeling and propitiating demands for a political opening. As a result, the government expanded — first by 100 seats; later by 200 — the size of the Chamber of Deputies. It also encouraged registration of new parties, earmarked a fat slice of seats to the opposition and dispatched key Cabinet secretaries to deliver annual reports — in televised sessions that often became five-hour verbal donnybrooks because of mordant questions from PRI and non-PRI deputies.

The situation has changed dramatically in the 54th Congress, just sworn in after a tempestuous credentials battle. Economic stagnation combined with the transition to a liberal, export-oriented growth model, has eroded PRI's popular support among shanty dwellers, bureaucrats, blue-collar workers and articulate elements of the middle class. The upshot is that the bitterly disputed official tally gave its presidential standard-bearer, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, a bare majority (50.36 percent) in the July national elections, while the governing party captured only 260 seats in the 500-member chamber.

The regime that Salinas will inherit on Dec. 1 faces plummeting legitimacy and formidable opponents on the left (the four-party front of populist Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the alleged presidential runner-up) and the right (the pro-business National Action Party, or PAN). Thus, the 40-year-old economist is being inundated with advice on how to handle this unprecedented situation.

Grizzled labor leaders, swag-bellied party bosses, and other so-called "dinosaurs" counsel cosmetic reforms even as the PRI continues to the issue, and rejecting the expedient of repression. Even outgoing president Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado has spoken of a "greater equilibrium between the executive and legislative powers" as a consequence of the historic July vote.

Yet, the opposition disrupted de la Madrid's annual "state of the nation" address with mean-spirited jeers, catcalls, and a walkout, thus strengthening the hand of those PRI bigwigs who advocate business as usual. As attractive as the dinosaur leftist hotheads from trading ballots for bullets:

•Nurturing tolerance among PRI stalwarts, especially in the CTM labor movement, who view negotiating with "traitors" and "Judases" as the political equivalent of fingernails clawing a blackboard;

•Acquainting opposition congressmen, the vast majority of whom are green as grass, with the decorum and compromises inherent in responsible representation; and •Using genuine competition as a means to re-examine PRI's cliché-laden programs and to clean up its hack-infested, cobweb-covered structures.

Improved export earnings, major debt relief, resumed growth and job creation are crucial to spiking the "all-politicos-are-crooks" belief that prevails here.

Although not a panacea, fortifying the congress as an institution might revive the use of certain words, long dormant in the political vocabulary of Mexicans — namely, legitimidad (legitimacy), esperanza (hope), and credibilidad (credibility).

Defending An Army

JABALIYA, Occupied Gaza Strip — I recently spent 30 days on reserve duty with the Israel Defense Force here in Gaza, where the Palestinian intifadah began. I saw hundreds of my fellow soldiers "in action" — regular-army and border police and paratroopers and pot-bellied 40-year-old reservists.

And although I am among those who hope for an immediate territorial settlement with the Palestinians, I was truly shocked by what I now believe are the media's terrible distortions and attacks against an army that remains one of the most decent in the world.

No, the Israeli army has not been Nazified, as some journalists would have it. Nor is it crumbling under psychological stress, as the concerned, humanistic psychologists appear to believe. A big lie is being promulgated by people who want more than anything for Israel to withdraw immediately from the conquered territories and who don't mind being more than a bit devious in order to achieve their aims.

We were under frequent attack in Gaza, not by nine-month-old babies throwing pebbles but by men hurling Molotov cocktails, concrete blocks, bombs. The Moslem hysteria I witnessed daily was more disturbing to me than the rough treatment sometimes accorded to Palestinian assailants captured in the act. The worst beatings I saw were not by Israeli soldiers against Palestinians, but by Palestinians against their own people who "collaborated" by expressing opposition to the ongoing uprising.

I rode in the back of the small, open Jeep as Roni, the captain of our "Company A," roared down a sandy side street in pestilential Jabaliya, pursuing a mob of stone-throwers. He tore through a putrid-smelling puddle in this rat-infested refugee camp. The Jeep parted the waters of the big puddle, splashing both sides of the shantytown street and rising in a fine spray into the air, imploding back down on us. Pure liquified filth — open sewage — and we were covered in it. It seemed to be a perfect commentary. It was also the only time I had ever seen our captain, a grim young ex-paratrooper, crack a smile.

Certainly, there had not been much to laugh about since the first day Company A moved into the fortified police post (I called it "Fort Apache") in the center of this densely populated square mile (60,000 people, about six to a room). That first day, two Palestinians were killed as we were attacked by mobs whipped up by Moslem fundamentalists and PLO nationalists alike. The Palestinians test each new reserve unit on its first day, and our somewhat panicky reactions were duly noted. Stones and rocks rained down on us, and sometimes it was a truly terrifying rain.

"If you're a man come out here without your gun," yelled one Arab in fluent Hebrew. Forty percent of Gaza's men commute to work in Israel. Taunting is constant, though no reservist or regular-army soldier seems to take it personally, and words are not what bring the soldiers out. The officers respond only to the placement of burning barricades across the roads or to large groups of youths stoning Israeli vehicles.

The defiant youths encourage the chase, the cat-and-mouse game. They have laid traps all around — on one occasion, a bomb planted in waiting for the arrival of our patrol. They are adept at "magic" — ninja, a word that has entered the Hebrew language. They lay traps for the big tires of the army vehicles: nails hammered into the tarmac, with the heads cut off; nails imbedded in a discarded sandal, nails in a crushed plastic soft-drink bottle, nails along a strip of wood, nails in an orange. We had 50 flat tires every day-1,500 flat tires in our 30 days. It does tie things up, but like everything else, we got used to it — "prevailing conditions."

Our adobe-like fort — really just a small police post — was manned by four soldiers and a few policemen on the December day in 1987 when the intifadah began right here, after four local people were killed in an auto accident at the Jabaliya intersection near the entrance to the camp. The rumor swept Jabaliya that the Israelis had murdered the four and that falsehood, along with the successful attack a week earlier by a single Palestinian glider pilot on an army post in the north, is what triggered the uprising.

The dozen men in the reserve company I serve with, and the hundreds in our battalion, and the dozens of paratrooper, border police and other regular-army units who also patrol Jabaliya, are portrayed by the Israeli and world media as part of the Goliath machine versus little David with his puny stones. The restless refugees — people immersed in a nationalist war — are called protestors, and compared to the followers of Martin Luther King and Gandhi, or the peaceful Russian peasants who marched on the czar's Winter Palace. We're the Nazis, shooting out the eyes of nine-month-old babies. (Our battalion had 25 injuries, four men hospitalized, but such information is rarely mentioned in the media reports.)

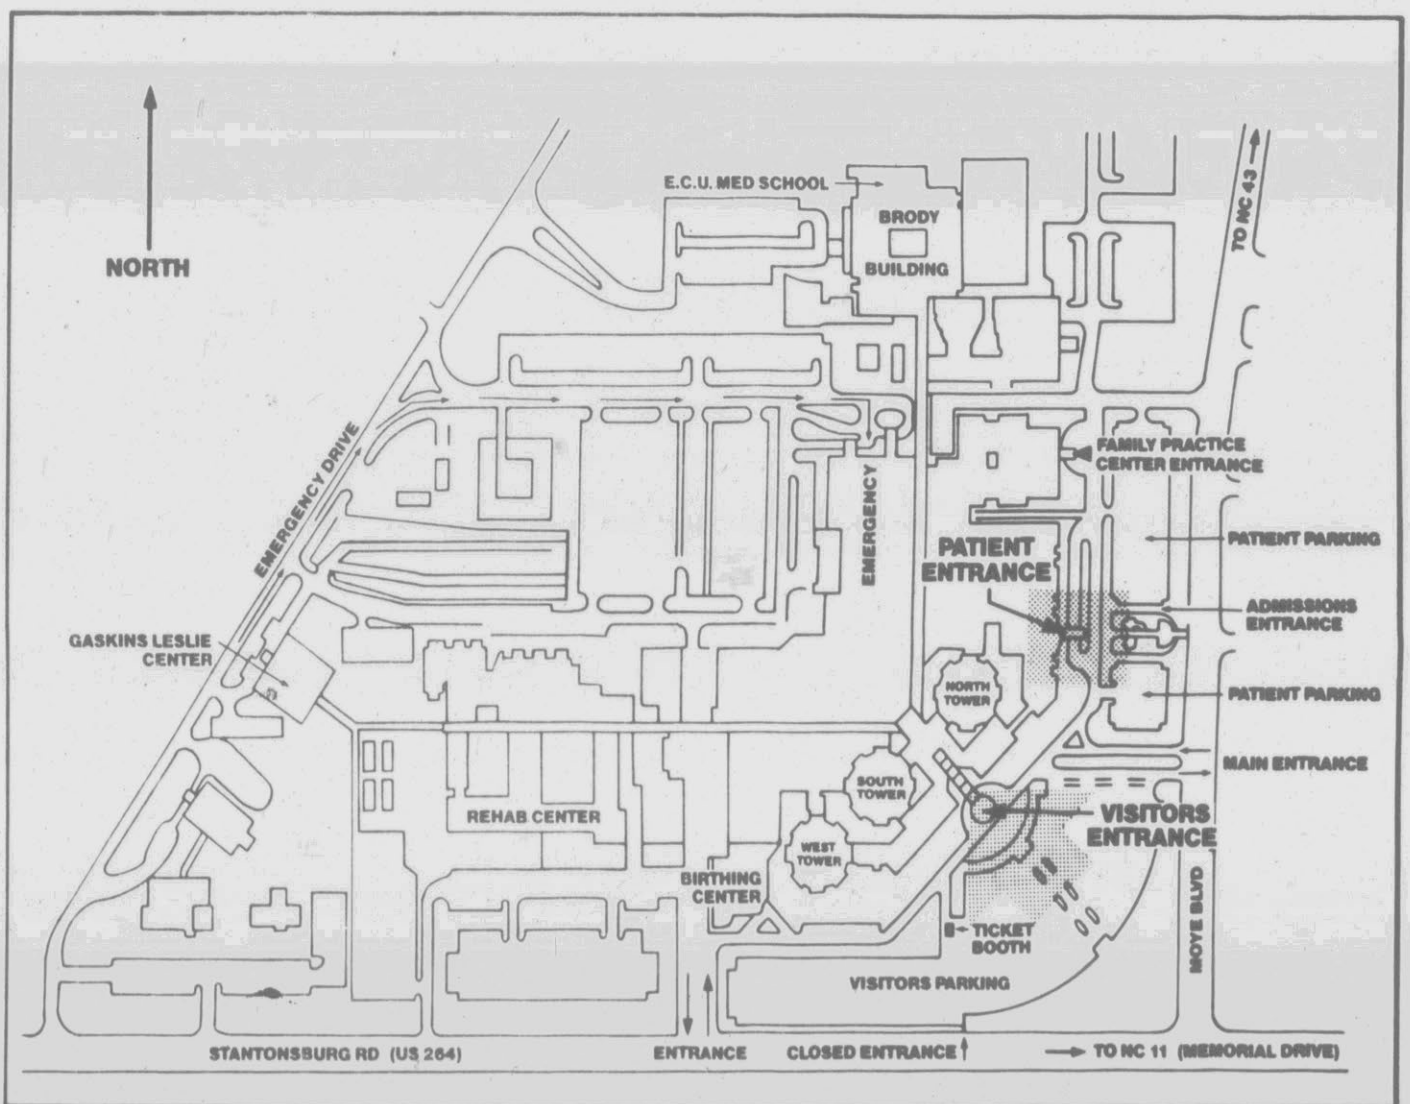

The truth is that the typical Israeli soldiers are — with a few exceptions — restrained and moral men who are under frequent attack by people who openly yell "Death to the Jews," not "We Shall Overcome," and who punctuate their chants by throwing Molotov cocktails and pipe bombs and lethal cinderblocks from the roofs.

I saw with my own eyes (through powerful binoculars) how grown men send children to the "front," pulling the strings from behind, quite willing to sacrifice others, knowing that the nine-month-old baby who loses an eye to a rubber bullet will make headlines around the world, and that no one will question the responsibility of the infant's mother, or of the Palestinians who actually invite such incidents.

These territories are the price paid by the Arabs for constant war against Israel. They can't get the land back by burning tires, or burning down forests in Israel, or becoming the darlings of the world media. Israel will not be so easily defeated.

Louis Rapoport is an Israeli writer who was born in the United States and now lives in Jerusalem. His most recent book, "Confrontations: Israeli Life in the Year of the Uprising," will be published this fall.

OPEN HOUSE SEPTEMBER 11

We've Opened New Doors for Healthcare in Eastern North Carolina

September 15, 1988 marks the opening of a new admission entrance to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. All inpatients and outpatients will use the new entrance, and will have easy access to the facility with ample parking adjacent to the building. Visitors will continue to use the existing main entrance.

The new admissions area is located more conveniently to the areas where many patients receive diagnostic tests during the admitting procedures. Also included in the expansion is a new Laboratory Medicine Department and a new Medical Records Department.

The emergency entrance to Pitt County Memorial Hospital will remain in its previous location on Emergency Drive off of Stantonsburg Road. Emergency patients, obstetrical patients and patients with appointments at the Magnetic Resonance Imaging Center will continue to use the emergency entrance.

This project is a part of the multi-phase development at Pitt County Memorial Hospital which represents the mission of the hospital as an academic medical teaching center.

You are invited to celebrate the opening of this new area at an Open House September 11, 1988 from 2-4 pm.

Presidential Candidates Will Hold Debate At Wake Forest

By The Associated Press

A presidential debate tentatively scheduled for Wake Forest University will focus North Carolinians' attention on the race and call attention to the differences between George Bush and Michael Dukakis, campaigners for both candidates say.

"One of my jobs is to define what Mike Dukakis is all about and what George Bush is all about, and this will help do that," said Steve Schwartz, Bush's state campaign manager.

Amy DeHart, spokeswoman for the state Dukakis campaign, said after the announcement Thursday that the choice of Wake Forest was "fantastic."

"We think having both the candidates here side by side will make North Carolina have a first-hand look at the two candidates," Ms. DeHart said.

The televised debate at Wake Forest — which probably will be the first of two debates — is tentatively scheduled for Sept. 25, a Dukakis aide said.

Sandra Connor, director of public information at Wake Forest, said the university has reactivated some preparations for the debate. The debate is to be in Wait Chapel, which seats 2,379. Admission will be by ticket.

Mrs. Connor said she expects the Presidential Commission on Debates to take at least half of the tickets to distribute to the two parties. Wake Forest students and staff will take part in a lottery for some of the remaining tickets, and some tickets are expected to be available to the general public, also to be distributed by lottery.

Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brontas and Bush campaign chairman James Baker said Thursday they have not had time yet to set the length of the debates or other significant details.

"Nothing is agreed until everything is agreed," Baker said three times.

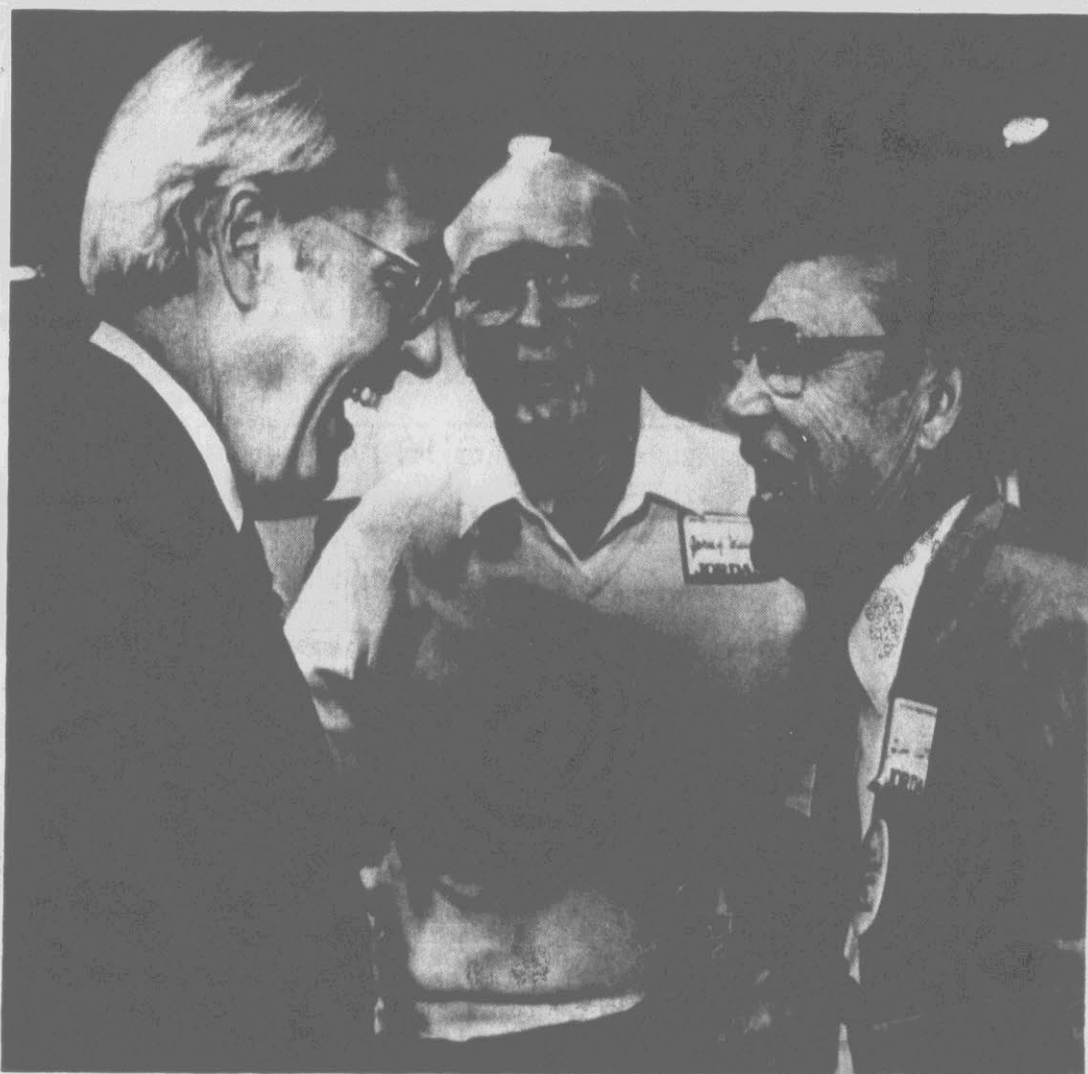

Both debates will be general in subject matter, in contrast to four years ago, when the first was on domestic policy and the second covered defense and foreign policy, said Mark Goodin, Bush's campaign spokesman.

Brontas said the second debate would be either Oct. 13 or 14, depending on the length of the American League baseball playoff series which will be televised in prime time.

The debate between vice presidential candidates Dan Quayle and Lloyd Bentsen is expected to take place during the week of Oct. 3.

The two campaigns have not reached agreement on the location for the second presidential debate and the vice presidential encounter, he said. But Goodin said the site of the second presidential debate would likely be on the West Coast.

"We are still discussing format, staging and the length of the debates and we will continue to carry on those discussions," Brontas said after meeting with Baker.

Jordan Accepts Labor Backing But Opposes Union At His Mill

By The Associated Press

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says unions have helped workers, but he wouldn't want one at his Mount Gilead lumber mill.

Jordan, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, received the endorsement of the state AFL-CIO Thursday. He later was asked if he would favor his lumber mill employees forming a union.

"No, because I think what we have in place there provides them with the kind of support, gives them the opportunity to be involved in management," he said.

"They have production bonuses, their pay is above the state's average," Jordan said. "I think that what we're doing, we can do without the need for a labor union."

Jordan said he was neither pro-union nor anti-union.

"I think they have a useful role to play in the Legislature as a lobbying group," he said.

Republican Gov. Jim Martin declined to criticize Jordan for accepting the AFL-CIO's endorsement while opposing a union in his business.

"I'd say he's being perfectly consistent," Martin said with a smile. "He wants what's best for his particular situation, I guess."

Martin said he was not upset by the AFL-CIO's endorsement of Jordan.

"They are a part of the Democratic Party machinery, which they have every right to be," he said. "They're not very strong in North Carolina and they don't have monolithic control over the membership ... I expect to do very well with the working people of this state."

Delegates to the AFL-CIO's annual convention in Raleigh endorsed all the Democrats seeking the state's top offices.

Meanwhile, Wynonia Brewington Burke, the New Alliance Party's candidate for vice president in North Carolina, urged the state Commission on Indian Affairs to take action to protect accused Indian hostage-taker Eddie Hatcher.

Hatcher, who is charged with taking up to 20 people hostage Feb. 1 at The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton, disappeared last week after his bond was revoked by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. He is still being sought by law officers.

Ms. Burke, a Coharie Indian from Sampson County now living in Tucson, Ariz., is one of six vice presidential candidates for the New Alliance Party running with presidential candidate Lenora Fulani.

The party earlier this year successfully petitioned to be placed on the North Carolina ballot.

Martin And Jordan Offer Programs To Halt Waste Dumping In Ocean

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Shippers that dump dangerous wastes in the ocean off the North Carolina coast would be fined under separate proposals by Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

Martin, a Republican, and Democrat Jordan, who are squaring off in the gubernatorial race this year, announced their plans Thursday. Both proposals would require legislative action next year.

In a related development, the Environmental Management Commission accepted Martin's request to toughen state regulations by adding medical waste and petroleum products to the list of materials that may not be dumped within three miles of the coast.

The commission also amended state regulations to ban the dumping onto waters "adjacent to waters of the state in such proximity that the materials or substances are likely to and subsequently do enter the waters of this state."

Commission members described the new wording as designed to prevent people from going just beyond North Carolina's three-mile jurisdictional limit and dumping waste that drifts ashore. Martin said he would ask President Reagan to issue an executive order expanding states' jurisdiction from three to 12 miles off their coasts.

Martin requested the stronger regulations as part of his six-point plan and also asked the state Commission for Health Services to adopt temporary rules dealing with medical wastes.

Jordan has sought to portray Martin's administration as weak on environmental protection, charging that the governor showed concern for clean water and air only as his re-election campaign approached.

"I do see some movement on the part of this administration toward getting a little more environmentally conscious," Jordan said. "He and George Bush both have been jimmycome-latelies on the environment."

"Regardless of whatever I do, my opponent is going to believe it's inadequate and will find some reason to rail out at it," Martin retorted. "There's a difference between being governor where you can actually do things and wanting to be governor where you can talk a lot about it."

At his weekly news conference, Martin distributed copies of legislation he will propose — if re-elected — to the 1989 General Assembly.

It would rewrite existing law to significantly broaden the category of refuse that cannot be dumped in North Carolina ocean waters, including medical wastes, litter, bottles, cans, paper, rubbish, garbage, debris and plastic materials.

Violators of the law would be liable for the costs of all investigations their actions prompted, along with the costs of cleaning up the spill and replenishing animal or plant life.

Martin's plan also includes:

— Directing the Division of Emergency Management and the Marine Fisheries Patrol to work with local law enforcement officers to develop a plan for detecting illegally dumped waste and removing and preserving it as evidence.

— The request to Reagan on the 12-mile jurisdiction and support of a pending congressional resolution to accomplish the same thing.

— Discussing ocean pollution and littering at the next Southern Governors' Association conference and seeking a multi-state approach.

— Increasing citizen involvement in reporting illegal dumping.

RECOVERING — The Rev. Billy Graham is wheeled out of a Rochester, N.Y., hospital Thursday for a news conference preceding the start of a crusade. The North Carolina evangelist was bitten by a poisonous brown recluse spider at his Black Mountain home last week and has been undergoing treatment in Rochester. (AP Laserphoto)

Conflict Of Interest Rules Would Create Tight School Policy

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Amid concerns from board members that the new policy might be a classic case of overkill, the state Board of Education has adopted tough conflict-of-interest guidelines for a 90-day trial period.

The new policy is aimed at ending educators' practice of accepting dinners, drinks, parties and other gifts from textbook publishers and other companies with which they do business.

Board member Ken Harris of Charlotte, a former state senator, said legislators frequently attend dinners and receptions at which they get free food and drink.

"Group meetings, to me, have no hidden agenda," Harris said. "I don't want to go and bring water and have to pay for a cocktail if I happen to get one. That offends the host. ... I could see the press waiting for me to see if I'm going to accept anything of value."

The board unanimously agreed Thursday to make the rules temporary after several members voiced concern that they were so strict, they would hamper officials' effectiveness in dealing with suppliers and with other governmental bodies.

"We're creating a different ... standard from what's traditionally followed," State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said. "We've got to be awfully careful not to make second-class citizens out of our public-school people."

The policy takes effect immediately and applies to board members, the almost 1,000 employees of the Department of Public Instruction, the state textbook and testing commissions and other committees that advise the board.

The decision to adopt the policy, but to have it expire in 90 days unless extended or revised "is a good one," board Chairman Howard Haworth said. "It does give us time to have experience" and decide whether exceptions should be made before permanent rules are made, he said.

Edward Speas, a special deputy attorney general who advises the board, described the new policy as tough and acknowledged it sometimes might be unclear whether a certain situation is covered.

Some people might violate it inadvertently as they become accustomed to it, Speas said.

"Over time, I believe that all of us will develop a good feel for how this policy applies," he said. He quoted a former Supreme Court justice's famous remark that he could not define pornography, "but I know it when I see it."

The members' greatest concern appeared to be over dinners sponsored by school boards, superintendents' associations and other groups. Under the policy, they could attend such functions, but would have to pay for their meals.

"When you do it (accept a free meal) openly and in groups, I can condone it," Boyles said. "Here is a public reception, a public dinner, everything is out there, no one is hiding. I say to you that if we overkill and over-subscribe, we're going to drive underground things that we would (formerly) observe in the open."

Haworth said the policy might need to be amended to exempt public dinners or other events, but that he still favored a strong policy.

"We ought to be very specific to begin with because there are many activities ... that are not as easily explained as being appropriate as that item (dinners) that there needs to be stronger policy about," he said.

"If we negate the whole idea of tightening up on the code issue right out of the chute ... then I guess we kind of fold the tent and walk away in toto," Haworth said.

IN THE STATE

Parolee

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A former Fort Bragg soldier who once faced a death sentence in the 1973 murders of a Cumberland County woman and her two children has been charged with selling cocaine less than a year after his parole, officials said.

Frank Pruitt II, 36, of Wadesboro was among 165 people charged after an 11-month undercover investigation of cocaine and marijuana sales in Anson and Union counties, said Sgt. Roger Laney of the Union County Sheriff's Department.

Pruitt is charged in Union County with nine felonies, including trafficking, possessing, selling and delivering cocaine, Laney said. Pruitt also is charged in Anson County with trafficking in cocaine and possessing cocaine with intent to sell and deliver it, authorities said.

He was being held Thursday in the Union County Jail on $150,000 bail, Laney told The Fayetteville Times.

Island Conflict

WILMINGTON (AP) — "No Trespassing" signs erected in the last 10 days and then destroyed are the latest indication of the war between property owners and preservationists on Masonboro Island.

The signs near a popular soundside landing site for boats forbade some of the activities that have drawn visitors to Masonboro Island for generations — the same activities that the state and preservationists want to see continue for future generations.

The state is trying to buy the eight-mile barrier island off the New Hanover County coast to preserve it in its natural, undeveloped state. But some property owners have said the state is moving too slowly and have threatened to sell their land or keep others from using it.

Abuse Studied

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Local and state agencies are conducting investigations into the way the Cleveland County Department of Social Services handled a child abuse case.

The child, 17-month-old Travis Gammons, is in critical condition with a fractured skull and second-degree burns in Charlotte Memorial Hospital, where he has been since Aug. 30.

His 21-year-old stepfather, Brian Church, is in the Cleveland County Jail charged with abusing Travis and his 3-year-old brother, Clint.

Nancy Pekarek, assistant director of the public affairs office for the state Department of Human Resources in Raleigh, said Thursday the regional office in Black Mountain has initiated an investigation into the local handling of the case. She said the investigation will determine whether proper procedures were followed by DSS when reports of abuse were made.

Neglect Charged

GREENSBORO (AP) — The state's Advisory Council on Vocational Education has accused the University of North Carolina General Administration of benign neglect toward vocational teacher education over the past decade.

The council also has criticized a UNC-supported plan to require education majors to have a second major beginning in 1990.

"The result of this action is likely to cause even greater shortages in the field of vocational education," a report by the council says.

UNC officials have termed the flap a difference of opinion on how to improve teacher training.

Day Care Grant

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A Cleveland County adult day care center plans to use a $174,000 grant to initiate a respite program using high school and college students to care for adults with Alzheimer's disease.

The Life Enrichment Center of Cleveland County also proposes to use the new grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to open a day care center that caters to Alzheimer's patients.

The program would send students into the homes of those with dementia-associated afflictions. Students would be trained to provide in-home care for patients to ease pressure on family members.

Drug Plea

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A former Chadburn bank manager pleaded guilty Thursday in Columbus County Superior Court to possessing illegal drugs and agreed to undergo a drug treatment program as part of his sentence.

Joe Glover admitted he had 100 tablets of Dilaudid, a strong morphine derivative. Glover resigned as manager of United Carolina Bank in Chadburn shortly after the State Bureau of Investigation began investigating the drug case this summer.

Possession of 100 Dilaudid tablets is a felony. Judge E. Lynn Johnson assessed Glover a $100 fine and court cost, ordered him to perform 100 hours of community service and gave him a two-year sentence suspended for five years while he is on supervised probation.

Glover also has to enter a drug rehabilitation program approved by his probation officer.

According to testimony at the trial, Glover became addicted to pain-killing drugs after needing them to recover from surgery after a car accident.

BIG POTHOLE — Erosion following a sewer project caused a street in Salisbury to cave in Thursday when motorist Michael Kendrick drove his car into what appeared to be a small pothole. When the car struck the little hole, the pavement collapsed, plunging the vehicle into the opening. (AP Laserphoto)

Former Fisheries Chief James H. Cornell Dies At 79

RALEIGH (AP) — James Harry Cornell, retired chief of the state Division of Inland Water Fisheries, has died at the age of 79.

Cornell ran the water fisheries division at the Wildlife Resources Commission for 25 years until retiring in 1974. Cornell, a native of Churchville, Pa., earned a bachelor's degree at Pennsylvania State University and a doctorate in fish biology at Virginia Polytechnical Institute in Blacksburg, Va. He joined the water fisheries division in 1949.

Cornell later ran a private fishing club on Bass Lake near his home for people who wanted to fish in a fresh water lake and were committed to helping him protect the 125-acre site from trespassers and hunters, Anand said.

In September 1984, he entrusted 125 acres of his land in Holly Springs to the N.C. Nature Conservancy to protect vegetation and wildlife including muskrats, raccoons, beavers, hawks and ducks.

Man Holds 5 People For 3 Days

HOPE MILLS, N.C. (AP) — Cumberland County sheriff's deputies stormed a mobile home in Hope Mills Thursday, arresting a Florida man who allegedly held three adults and two children at gunpoint for three days.

Deputies also discovered an estimated half-pound of cocaine valued at about $75,000 in the trunk of the man's car.

Jesse Rodriguez, 35, of Winter Park, Fla., was charged with second-degree kidnapping and felony trafficking in cocaine, according to Harold Little, sheriff's department spokesman.

Little said the incident started late Monday when Rodriguez became "emotionally disoriented" after taking cocaine in combination with medication for a back ailment.

Rodriguez and his wife Linda were staying with Wendy Hair, her two children and her friend Eiriam Medina. Little said Rodriguez threatened the others with a shotgun and pistol, allegedly holding the pistol to Medina's head several times and threatening to shoot him.

Authorities were unaware of the situation until Thursday morning, when Ms. Hair and her two children were released by Rodriguez and contacted deputies.

Undercover officers evacuated the trailer park prior to the raid Thursday morning by posing as Public Works Commission employees and telling residents there was a natural gas leak in the area. No one was hurt in the operation.

House Adds Death Penalty To Drug Proposal

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of House-passed amendments adding the death penalty and other tough measures to an anti-drug bill say the provisions turn the war on drugs into an attack on the Constitution. One Congressman said today the changes are more anti-people than anti-drug.

The amendments would deny government benefits such as housing loans and college grants to convicted users and allow the use of illegally seized evidence.

"Some of the things that sound rough and mean and anti-drug are anti-people," said Rep. Charles Rangle, D-N.Y., who offered alternatives to both the death penalty and benefits-denial provisions.

Rangle, interviewed on "CBS This Morning," said the measure, if it becomes law, could penalize innocent family members of drug-abusing veterans by kicking them out of public housing and by denying pensions to widows.

Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., appearing on the same program, defended the amendments, saying Rangle's proposals would have left no sanctions against college students. He called the veterans issue "bogus" since drug convictions could not deny them retirement, disability or health benefits.

Others joined Rangle in criticizing the amendments.

"We've assaulted a great many Bill of Rights provisions," Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., and chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on criminal justice, said following Thursday's votes. "I have yet to count how many are still standing."

Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., and conservative chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee, complained that the benefit takeaways would be so severe that convicted Medal of Honor winners could not be buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

But Rep. Dan Lungren, D-Calif., sponsor of the illegal evidence provision, responded, "I reject the notion that someone here is assaulting the Constitution. That's the argument you hear when you've lost the argument, unfortunately."

The hardliners on drug penalties overwhelmingly won amendments to allow a federal death penalty, deny government benefits to convicted drug users and dealers and admit in court evidence that was seized illegally, but in "good faith."

The House added the measures to legislation that would add some $2 billion to the $3.9 billion the government now spends to attack illegal drugs. The bill pours money into every weapon used to reduce demand, increase arrests and seizures, and rehabilitate abusers.

Debate on the comprehensive legislation is set to resume next Wednesday, with a final vote possible on Thursday. The Senate has not begun consideration on its version of the drug bill.

The House still must vote on proposals that would hold back highway money from states that refused to suspend or revoke drug abusers' drivers' licenses; and to strip from the bill a seven-day waiting period on handgun purchases. During the seven days, police would have the option of conducting a background check.

After sometimes emotional debate Thursday, the House:

—Voted 299-111 for an amendment by Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., that would allow federal judges to impose the death penalty for someone convicted of a murder during a narcotics-related felony.

—Approved 335-67 a proposal by McCollum that would deny many federal benefits to anyone convicted of two drug offenses, including possession, or for a single drug distribution offense.

Church Homecoming

Community Baptist Church of Ayden will celebrate homecoming and its 25th anniversary Sunday. A dinner in the fellowship building, followed by a special musical presentation, will be held immediately after the 11 a.m. service.

Pastor Sam Wingard will hold an evening service at 6 p.m. The church is located at 111 N.E. College St. in Ayden.

Perry To Preach

The Rev. Andre Perry will preach at St. Peter Free Will Baptist Church in Vanceboro Saturday at 7:30 p.m. during the communion service.

The church will have quarterly meeting services Sunday. After the regular 11 a.m. service, Elder E.D. Bryant of Warren Chapel FWB Church will conduct the 3 p.m. service.

'Notch Babies'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Cass Ballenger, R-N.C., called Thursday for a vote in Congress on whether some Social Security recipients — the so-called "notch babies" — deserve an increase in their benefits.

In a speech on the House floor, Ballenger said it's time to "put up or shut up" on proposed legislation to increase benefits to people born between 1917 and 1921. Those people claim their Social Security benefits are unfairly low.

DR. BEAUFORD BRYANT

Homecoming Guest

Dr. Beauford Bryant of Elizabethton, Tenn., will be the guest speaker at homecoming services Sunday at the University Church of Christ, 100 Crestline Blvd.

Services will begin at 10 a.m., followed by a luncheon on the grounds.

Bryant has been the minister of Oak Grove Christian Church in Elizabethton, Tenn., for the past 12 years. A native of Chatham, Va., he attended Johnson Bible College, Kimberlin Heights, Tenn., and then earned graduate degrees at the College of the Bible Phillips University, Enid, Okla. He received his doctorate from the University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

Bryant has served congregations in Kansas, Oklahoma and Maryland.

Research Was Marcia Cohen's Writing Tool

By LIZA MUNDY

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Living in upstate New York in the late 1960s, Marcia Cohen missed out on the action taking place in sophisticated, tumultuous, seemingly faraway Manhattan.

The marches and meetings about this new thing called "feminism" were little more than rumors to her. She read about the women's movement in papers like The Village Voice but could never persuade any of her friends to take the train down and see for themselves what was going on.

And it would have been, well, unthinkable to leave her family and venture alone into the chaos that New York City was fast becoming.

"I was a hick," Cohen says now, with something like bemusement. "A real hick."

As such, the author of "The Sisterhood," a book about the personalities who fused to create the American women's movement, could only participate by hearsay in the watershed events taking place in the media center of the country. One wonders, then, how she managed to narrate them with such remarkable immediacy.

Manhattanized now, wearing an electric-blue suit that has gotten her through a round of interviews and television appearances, looking years younger than whatever age it is she won't confess to, Marcia Cohen says the answer is simple: six years of research.

Six years of interviewing, reading, traveling; of hauling people like Jean Faust and Betty Friedan back to the Plaza Hotel and forcing them to reenact the famous invasion of the Oak Room by members of the fledgling National Organization for Women; of locating childhood friends of the principal players who pulled the movement together (and apart); of digging up the sundry minor publications in which some of these women once laid out their polemical views. "And gradually, gradually, the pieces of the puzzle began to fit together."

Germaine Greer, one of the women featured in the book, recently lit into "The Sisterhood" in the pages of Vanity Fair, accusing Cohen of distortion, inaccuracy, idolizing Gloria Steinem and overemphasizing the schisms that eventually brought down — or diffused — the movement. Does a review like that make her second-guess her six years' labor?

"Germaine," she says wearily, with amusement and irritation, "is Germaine."

Clearly Cohen knows whereof she speaks; her research included four days at Greer's villa in Tuscany. And Cohen spent even more time with the other women whose lives and accomplishments she traces.

Steinem, Betty Friedan, Kate Millet, Florynce Kennedy, Susan Brownmiller, Ti-Grace Atkinson, Marlo Thomas, Bella Abzug, Shirley Chisholm: This is, as Greer charges and as Cohen readily admits, a book about the people behind the movement, the women who made it happen.

Greer finds this a weakness; but for Cohen, it was the only way to go. "Okay, there's another kind of book besides a human-interest story? If there is, I don't know it."

Historians, it's worth noting, have traditionally referred to this approach as the "great-man" theory of history.

Asked why she chose to focus primarily on Friedan, Steinem, Millet, and Greer — thus furthering the idea that the women's battle for equal rights was fought by a privileged few, rather than by women from all walks and conditions of life — Cohen emphasizes the importance of "voices."

"These were the voices that I heard the most," she says. "And I figured that if that's what I heard, that's what everybody heard. It's turned out to be true."

She adds, "I know there were many others who were working behind the scenes, especially here in Washington. But the movement as we heard it out in the boonies came from those voices."

As for the question of overemphasizing the splits in the movement, of dwelling too long on the cutting things women such as Friedan and Steinem said about one another, Cohen explains — with a quick aside about how she left the worst remarks out — that after all, there were splits in the movement.

"To think that this thing was a monolith, and that everybody went along lockstep, and everybody had the same ideas, that they never disagreed — I mean, that's just not human, and I think that's part of why the movement was misunderstood, because they weren't seen as human beings. Sure, they're going to have conflicts. Sure, when you get out into the power arena, there's going to be power jockeying. 'Twas ever thus!"

A former reporter and editor at the New York Daily News, Cohen can recall no particular event that made her say to herself, "Hey, somebody needs to write a book about the women's movement." She does, however, recall fighting her own battles on a personal front, without realizing what she was doing.

As an undergraduate at Radcliffe, she was informed by the dean that she was in school so that she could marry and raise "educated, cultured children."

She did marry; she did have children; but despite the dean's admonition, she also took a part-time job with her hometown newspaper in Binghamton, N.Y., coming in when she could and covering whatever stories they assigned to her.

Plagued by guilt, she would sneak her work in and make sure to be home to put dinner on the table. And when she got her first byline in the paper, she was accosted on the street by an acquaintance who asked, "Why did you do this, Marcia — don't you like your family?"

Then the women's movement came along, bringing with it an "incredible relief. It made everything I thought and felt okay."

Years later, when the radical had become the mainstream, Cohen came to see it as a story that no one else seemed to be writing, a story that had been acted out by a group of very special women who were still alive. It seemed to her more significant than the story of man's first landing on the moon.

In the fragmented, tumbling speech that she duplicates in her book, she explains this last idea: "These are, to me, our real heroines. I think this is the most exciting ... I think this story's just as exciting as the astronauts, as 'The Right Stuff.' I think it did more, in a way. So much more was accomplished, so much more happened. If you look around, there are more changes made by women than by the astronauts. They really — it amazes me when people say they don't know who these people are."

Here Cohen is alluding to the oft-made charge that feminism is dead; or at the very least, that young women today consider the marching, meeting, chanting and bra-discarding of the last generation to be not only undignified, but unnecessary. In fact these are two conflicting charges, and Cohen agrees with the latter while taking issue with the first.

Yes, she concedes, young women are "very busy these days," they don't necessarily have the time or inclination to read "The Feminine Mystique" or "The Female Eunuch."

Yet this in itself is evidence that the women's movement has been a success. It has simply diffused, "sifted into our minds." It has become, in a word, institutionalized.

Cohen says she was not hoping to provoke a feminist revival with her book; women today, she points out, are not "going to suddenly get back and start doing everything Gloria Steinem did. They're in another place now. Women are empowered."

Rather, she believes that her book will help today's younger women find out how they got where they are today.

"I think most young people, most young women haven't any idea how they got where they are — they think they just got there. They think — well, they've passed the test, and that's why they're a doctor. But if it hadn't been for Gloria Steinem, they would not have gone for that test."

For the past six years Cohen has been clipping "women firsts" from the newspapers — first woman rabbi, first woman on the Supreme Court, first woman dean at the Columbia School of Journalism.

By now, friends and readers send her clips as well, and she concedes that the sheer quantity of them can make a person take the women's movement for granted.

"They start to end up on the back pages — 'Oh, here's another woman,'" she says. "But what we need done is simply to remind people, just to remind people. Somehow, people should realize — how incredible this change is."

Beginning Day, Tailgate Socials Held By Chapter

Beginning Day activities and social for Xi Gamma Xi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi were held at the home of Carolyn Powell. The program theme was "Wish Upon a Star."

Tana Hill received the costume award and game winners were Mrs. Hill, Georgia Potter and Barbara Turcotte.

For the seated dinner, tables were covered with white cloths and centered with miniature castles covered in pink and silver glitter.

A special guest was Evelyn Darden.

New yearbooks were distributed by Linda Schadler, who also led a discussion on various ways and means projects for the year.

Fairy godmother wand favors were given to each member.

The chapter's second social was a "starry night" tailgate party held Saturday afternoon prior to the East Carolina University and Tennessee Tech University football game.

Tables were covered with purple and gold cloths and centered with centerpieces featuring footballs and purple and gold stars.

Jim Joyce was recognized for his guess of the game score.

Head Ringing Is Bothersome

Dear Abby

man said he nearly went crazy because he heard bees buzzing continually in one ear — night and day. Another said he heard constant crackling sounds, like bacon frying. A woman heard "chirping" of crickets. Still another said it sounded like a freight train was roaring through her head. All thought they were going mad.

The constant sounds are due to a condition called "tinnitus," but the musical hallucinations are yet another matter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: It was interesting seeing all the letters sent to you by people with musical hallucinations.

The two cases I describe in my book, "The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat," were rather rare and special examples of musical epilepsy associated with damage to the brain. But musical hallucinations are relatively common, especially in older people, and though they should be checked out, nearly always turn out to be benign — a nuisance, but not necessarily a sign of neurological disease.

Readers could be assured about this. You sincerely ... OLIVER SACKS, M.D., PROFESSOR OF NEUROLOGY, ALBERT EINSTEIN COLLEGE OF MEDICINE, BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my late 60s and profoundly deaf, but that is not my worst problem. I have a severe case of tinnitus, which is a chronic ringing sensation in my ears. My case is unbelievable. The sounds might be compared to a bad LSD trip without the psychedelic visions. They last sometimes as long as four days.

You, like most people, will probably think I'm a nut case. I hear music or singing, or both — the same continuously over and over. Would you be good enough to consult one of your authorities to verify the fact that I am not crazy? I believe that would be an otorhinolaryngologist. This small town does not have such a specialist.

Hoping you can help me ... HEARING THINGS

DEAR HEARING: Write to: The American Tinnitus Association, P.O. Box 5, Portland, Ore. 97207. It will refer you to the specialist nearest you. It will be well worth the trip. Please enclose a long, stamped (45 cents), self-addressed envelope.

Medicare Protection Bill Will Take Out The Sting

By CHANGING TIMES
Medicare will cover it. That's what Mabel Martin thought when she broke her thigh three years ago. But when the accounts were settled, the 73-year-old Florida widow was billed for $11,638 — the part Medicare didn't cover.

When Medicare started 23 years ago, nobody dreamed a broken leg could turn into a financial catastrophe. At the time, coinsurance — the part the patient paid — was a well-meaning attempt to discourage overuse of medical care. But inflation turned coinsurance into a catastrophe for some. Martin was lucky. If she had spent more than 90 days in the hospital, she would have run out of benefits and had to pick up 100 percent of the tab.

Now things have changed. The Medicare Catastrophic Protection Act, signed into law July 1, promises protection against medical bankruptcy. Had Martin broken her leg after the new law, her share of the tab probably would have been around $2,000.

If catastrophic insurance works as its proponents intend, it will stanch the avalanche of bills from acute illness, according to Changing Times magazine. Its immediate effect will be to lift the financial burden of extended hospitalization. Down the road, it will take the sting out of doctors' bills and ease the pain of paying for prescription drugs.

The not-so-good news is beneficiaries will have to pay more for it. An estimated 40 percent of enrollees will pay a stiff income-related tax, and every beneficiary will ante up heftier premiums. The well-off elderly will pay for more of their own health care and for the care of the less affluent.

The new Medicare will protect against catastrophic hospital costs, loosely defined as $2,500 or more a year out of pocket. But it won't cover nursing home costs, which averaged about $22,000 per patient per year in 1986.

If you are 65 or close to it or you assist an elderly person with financial matters, you won't feel any immediate effects until Jan. 1, when expanded hospital protection, called Part A, starts. Some other expanded benefits as well as increased contributions begin then: prescription-drug benefits phase in over three years. The highlights:

— Handling the Hospital. After Jan. 1, paying a single lump-sum deductible will entitle enrollees to a one-year stay in a hospital. If further hospitalization is required during a subsequent year, you'll have to pay another deductible but still won't be required to chip in on the bill. Current Medicare provides for 90 hospital days at a time, but patients must pay daily coinsurance for the last 30 days. Repeat hospitalization requires dipping into 60 additional "lifetime reserve" days. After they are used up, coverage ends. Unlimited stays are allowed by new Medicare.

— Dealing with the doctor. There will be a gradual change in the way you'll handle doctor bills, which represent a substantial out-of-pocket cost now. In 1990, it will work this way: Once an enrollee has spent up to a preset ceiling of $1,370 out of pocket, Medicare will pay 100 percent of reasonable charges.

The catch is that about half of all doctors do not accept Medicare's idea of reasonable. You'll have to shell out the difference between what Medicare allows and what the doctor charges. One way around that is to find doctors who accept Medicare reimbursement as payment in full.

— Filling prescriptions. In 1990, coverage will include drugs used intravenously and for organ transplants. In 1991, it will also include drugs in general, with half of the cost reimbursed after you pay a $600 deductible. In 1993, coverage for all prescription drugs rises to 80 percent, but coverage doesn't start until you pay a deductible of $652.

— At-home care. With new Medicare, you'll be eligible for 38-day increments of home health care (up from 21), with no coinsurance as long as a doctor certifies the need. Also, beginning in 1990, care can be six days a week rather than the current limit of five at a time.

A new related benefit will provide for limited reimbursement to a health-care professional who is brought in to help a family member taking care of a homebound elderly person. The provision authorizes Medicare to cover up to 80 hours a year of respite care. Coinsurance of 20 percent is paid by the beneficiary, who must need assistance with two activities of daily living.

— Nursing-home care. The largest catastrophic expense that hits older Americans is the cost of long-term nursing home care. In new Medicare, Congress added 50 days of transitional care in a skilled nursing facility, increasing the total to 150. Under expanded Medicare, beneficiaries will pay $20.50 for each of the first eight days of a stay or a maximum of $164 in 1989; Medicare will pay the rest.

In the old Medicare, people 65 or older who are eligible for Part A coverage automatically go on Medicare's hospital rolls, sharing the bills through a deductible and daily coinsurance for stays exceeding 60 days. Coverage of doctors' bills is an option purchased with a separate premium deducted from Social Security checks.

Enter the hospital after Jan. 1, 1989, for a day, a week or a year and pay a deductible (estimated to be $564) and Medicare will pick up all approved charges — and remove the dread of running out of benefits. As with current Medicare, you won't get such frills as private rooms and private-duty nursing.

Couple Marries In Afternoon Ceremony

AYDEN — Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding of Rosalyn Rena Woods of Greensboro and Joseph Barnhill of Greenville Sunday at 3 p.m.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by Tyrone Turnage. Organist Roger Ingram and vocalists Janet Burney, Pamela Woods and Gary Phillips presented wedding music.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James C. Woods Sr. of Ayden and Mr. and Mrs. Boston Vines of Greenville.

Pamela Woods of Greensboro was honor attendant for her sister. Bridesmaids were Robin and Sharon Barnhill of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom, Sheridean Roundtree, aunt of the bride, Jessalyn Woods and Denise Allen, both of Ayden, cousins of the bride, Joan Graves of Greensboro and Regina Weston of Engelhard.

Flower girls were Roshanda Boyd, Crystal Bryant and Wanda Hooks of Ayden, nieces of the bride. Ricky D. Hooks of Ayden was ring bearer.

Johnnie Ray Barnhill of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Calvin Vines, Randy Vines, Jerome Vines and Steward Vines of Greenville, all brothers of the bridegroom, Travis Woods, uncle of the bride, and James C. Woods Jr., brother of the bride, both of Ayden, Gary Roundtree, cousin of the bride, and Keco Vines, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a white satin gown fashioned with a bodice covered with seed pearls. The train was accented with lace. She wore a matching lace hat with a veil attached and carried a cascade of rose and white carnations tied with rose and white ribbon.

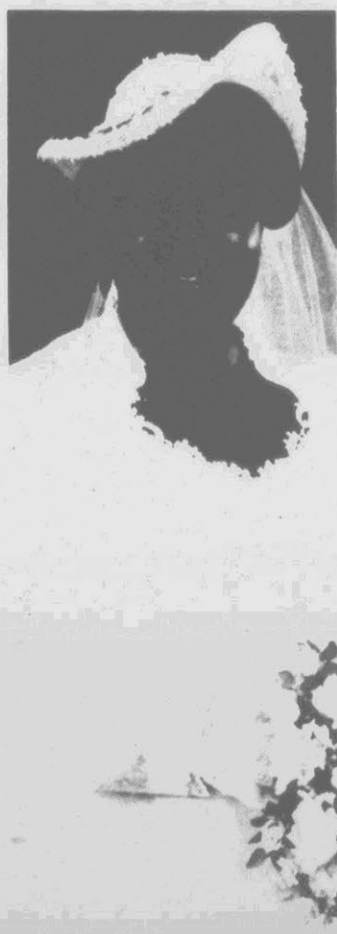

The honor attendant wore a white tea-length satin dress with lace and pearl bodice. She carried a bouquet of rose carnations tied with white ribbon. Bridesmaids were dressed like the honor attendant in rose-colored dresses and carried bouquets of white carnations tied with rose ribbon. The flower girls wore white lace dresses and carried white wicker baskets tied with rose ribbons.

A buffet dinner was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Frances Ball, aunt of the bride, served cake and punch was poured by Veronica Holmes, cousin of the bride.

Naomi Roundtree, aunt of the bride, directed the wedding. An after-rehearsal dinner was given by aunts of the bride.

After a wedding trip to South Carolina, the couple will live in Greensboro.

The bride is a graduate of A&T State University and is employed at Rugby's Private School in Greensboro. The bridegroom is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Scleroderma Is Skin Disorder

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER
Drug treatment for specific symptoms may improve the outlook for some people with the uncommon disorder called scleroderma, according to a specialist at New York University Medical Center.

"It is an extremely variable disease," said Dr. Sara B. Kramer, clinical instructor of medicine. "It's hallmark is thickening, fibrosis of the skin. Scleroderma literally means 'hard skin.' It appears to be a disease of the smaller blood vessels. It may affect the lungs and kidneys, in which case it is referred to as progressive systemic sclerosis."

An article in an upcoming issue of the center's health letter states that like rheumatoid arthritis and systemic lupus erythematosus, scleroderma — which is much less common — affects more women than men. The estimated ratio is two or three to one.

"It frequently starts with a condition called Raynaud's phenomenon, in which there are episodic attacks of cold fingers due to spasms of the arteries," Kramer said.

Making a diagnosis of scleroderma is difficult, the physician observed, because its symptoms may overlap those of other disorders: "While Raynaud's phenomenon is a typical first symptom, scleroderma occasionally starts with gastrointestinal problems or other manifestations."

There is no proven treatment to halt or reverse the disease. In some cases, penicillamine is helpful in slowing its progression and preventing lung and kidney disease. Kramer said a number of drugs have proven helpful in relieving specific aspects of the disease. "In particular, a new class of anti-high-blood pressure drugs called angiotensin converting enzyme inhibitors have led to a markedly improved outlook for people whose kidneys are threatened."

Also in use are a number of drugs developed for use in heart and circulatory disease, especially nifedipine and prazosin, which have proven effective in treating Raynaud's; corticosteroids, which may be useful in dealing with some associated symptoms; and histamine blockers, used to treat ulcers, to relieve gastrointestinal symptoms.

Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 32.00; Wallace 32.00; Spivey's Corner 32.00; Rowland 32.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 61.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 71 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 59.77 cents. The market is lower and the live supply is adequate to fully adequate for a mostly light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,247,000, compared to 2,219,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market lower. Supply fully adequate for a moderate demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 17 cents at farm with buyer loading.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices moved lower in early trading on Wall Street today as investors shied away from taking major positions before the weekend.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks edged down 4.09 points to 2,059.03 as of 10 a.m. EDT.

Declining issues held a 4-to-3 lead over advancers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 16.42 million shares after the first half-hour of trading.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department announced that inflation at the wholesale level rose 0.6 percent in August. Discounting the volatile food and energy categories, wholesale prices rose a moderate 0.3 percent in August, half the increase of July.

Larry Wachtel, a market analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said the inflation figures had little effect on trading today, as Wall Street had expected a 0.5 percent overall increase in wholesale prices.

"What you see here is pre-weekend malaise," he said.

Court Sends Women To Jail On Weekends

 serve the time on weekends, so Hunter ordered them to be held in the Pitt County jail for 15 weekends, starting today at 5 p.m.

Larry Whittington, vice president of the Fountain of Life Ministries, said he did not want anyone to go to jail, but Chief Assistant District Attorney Nancy Aycock asked Hunter to impose the 30-day sentence because, she said, there is no other way to prevent the women from bothering the Whittingtons.

In a telephone interview earlier this week, Larry Whittington said the Claytons have stopped at nothing in bothering him and his brother, broadcast evangelist Jim Whittington.

Larry Whittington said the women have nailed signs to trees in Jim Whittington's yard, blown car horns outside the Whittingtons' business and homes, harassed the Whittingtons' children and taped signs to both men's cars — at work and at home.

"That is the kind of mess we have to put up with with those people ... It has been constant harassment for two years," Larry Whittington said. "It doesn't matter what time you leave (work), they'll follow you home blowing the horns."

"They're weird people. All I'm trying to do is get them to leave us alone. I think that they're really in love with maybe both of us, Jim and me both," he said. "They're just possessed by this thing."

In a recent interview at their trailer on Port Terminal Road, the Claytons admitted that they have left love letters, flowers and signs for the Whittingtons in the past.

But the women said they did not violate their probation on June 25.

Julie Clayton said she began writing to Jim Whittington in 1983 when she lived in MacComb, Ill. She said she moved to Greenville in 1986 thinking he was going to hire her to do Christian artwork for his ministry.

Mazie Clayton said her daughter had been writing love letters to Jim Whittington for three years and told him she was borrowing money to move to Greenville to work for him.

At the very least, Mazie Clayton said, Jim Whittington should have written her daughter and told her he did not feel affection for her.

During the interview, Julie Clayton also said Larry Whittington has asked her to marry him and Jim Whittington has proposed to her mother.

In his closing argument Thursday, Tilton said that the Claytons received letters from the Whittingtons that "hinted at romantic ideas," but he did not say which brother allegedly wrote the letters.

During the interview, Julie Clayton produced a scrapbook of letters she said Whittington wrote to her. All were on Fountain of Life letterhead and all discussed religious matters only; the women say they have never contributed money to the ministry.

Larry Whittington said Fountain of Life Ministries never offered Julie Clayton a job or encouraged her to come to North Carolina. "No, sir. That was all on her own ... nothing to do with the Fountain of Life. She has never worked here."

"They moved down here on their own. We had nothing to do with that," Whittington said.

Mazie Clayton said on the witness stand Thursday that Larry Whittington has visited their trailer on Port Terminal Road more than once in the last year and she said he has chased the women in their cars. She also said children of one of the Whittingtons have thrown rocks at their trailer.

Larry Whittington said neither he nor his brother have ever corresponded personally with the Claytons, and he does not even know where the women live.

But he said he had followed them a few times "to let them know how it feels."

Manning Pleads Guilty In Death

range the murder of White. Haigwood did not reveal the date of the meeting.

Mobley agreed at that time to carry out the murder, according to Haigwood's account of Manning's statement.

On the evening of the murder, Manning drove Mobley to a place near the White residence on N.C. 33 and dropped him off, Haigwood said.

Mrs. White left the house at about 7 p.m. to establish an alibi, Haigwood said, and Manning was also to leave the area and establish an alibi for himself.

According to Haigwood, Manning told investigators that, after he and Mobley were arrested, Mobley revealed that he had carried out the murder as planned.

White, 47, was stabbed more than 30 times in the neck, chest and back. Investigators have seized a hunting knife from Mobley's mother's home, but there has been no information released that would indicate the knife was used in the crime.

Court records show Sheriff's Detective Ivan Harris said Mobley told him that Mrs. White offered him $35,000 to kill her husband, and he agreed to the plan.

Relatives of White — including his mother, Mertie Dudley of Greenville, who wiped tears from her eyes during the plea — sat side-by-side behind Haigwood as he announced the agreement Thursday and read the facts of the case.

Lawyers for Manning, Robin Fornes of Greenville and Robert Hulbert of Greene County, did not dispute the facts Haigwood presented.

Fornes declined to comment on any sentence concession his client might receive.

Manning, who is being held at an undisclosed location without bond, had previously been charged with conspiring from January of 1988 until March 19 to commit the murder.

With his plea to three charges, Manning could be sentenced to life plus 20 years in prison, but he is not scheduled to be sentenced until sometime after he testifies at the trial of Mrs. White and Mobley.

Haigwood said no date has been set for the trial.

Mrs. White, who is being held in the Pitt County Jail without bond, has been indicted on charges of first-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder and solicitation to commit murder.

Mobley, who was returned to the Pitt jail Tuesday after nearly two months in the custody of the state Department of Corrections, has been indicted on charges of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder. He is also being held without bond.

Haigwood said at a motions hearing Tuesday that he would ask the jury to consider the death penalty for Mrs. White and Mobley, if the two were convicted of first-degree murder.

After Public Defender Robert L. Shoffner, counsel for Mrs. White, objected to her being tried on all three charges at one time, Haigwood agreed earlier in the week not to try her on the solicitation charge at this time.

The solicitation charge stems from an incident from December of 1987 in which Mrs. White allegedly offered to pay Michael Ray Rogers to kill her husband, but Rogers refused.

Pirates Get Sterner Test In Their 1st Road Trip At Virginia Tech On Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Pirates will learn a little more about themselves Saturday afternoon when they travel to Virginia Tech for their second game of the year.

Coach Art Baker admitted that last week's 52-13 victory over Division I-AA Tennessee Tech was not really a test for the Pirates.

But this week's game against Tech, despite the Hokies' 40-7 loss to nationally ranked Clemson, will go a lot further about telling Baker and his staff what they have accomplished.

"There are questions that we have to ask as we go into our second week," Baker said. "Are we that good, or was Tennessee Tech that bad. I think we'll get some answers this week."

Baker warned that Tech's loss to Clemson might not be as fatal as it seemed. "A lot of teams go into Death Valley and come back with less than their skins," he said.

"Virginia Tech has a new quarterback who got his baptism against a very tough defense."

The Tech quarterback, red-shirt freshman Will Furrer, took his licks and kept coming back for more against the Tigers, completing 17 of 36 pass attempts for 116 yards. Two of those passes were intercepted. He was also thrown for losses of 47 yards in sacks.

"(Tech's offense) impressed us at times because they moved the ball well against a tough defense," Baker said.

Baker said he was also impressed with Tech's defense. Despite giving up 40 points, the Hokies held the Tigers on several scoring threats and rover back Jock Jones blocked a Clemson punt.

"(Tech coach Frank) Beamer was my defensive coordinator at The Citadel one year, so I'm familiar with what he can do," Baker said. "He had a lot of distractions last year with things that happened before he got there, but he's done a good job of keeping his players' minds on the game."

Baker expects a tough game. "I think it will become a good rivalry; it seems headed that way," he said.

The Pirate coach said that the VPI defense is virtually identical to that of the East Carolina. "This will be the first time that our offense has seen different people run the same scheme."

But on offense, the Pirates will face a different look as Tech comes out in the power-I, led by tailback Jon Jeffries. Jeffries was held to only 27 yards by Clemson, while fullback Rich Fox led the way with 43 yards.

Beamer, in examining his team's performance against Clemson, was encouraged. "We went in with an inexperienced team and controlled the football for more time than Clemson," he said. "We just didn't get the ball in the end zone when we had opportunities and that was the big difference."

"We had breakdowns on defense and Clemson was good enough to take advantage of them. But we made some big plays defensively and showed we have the potential to do a good job. We blocked one punt and partially blocked another and that's a very good sign."

Beamer also praised the play of Furrer against the Tigers. "He showed poise and he moved the foot-

Most Prop 48 Players Are Black

NEW YORK (AP) — Football players disqualified by Proposition 48 should become eligible for spring practice if their grades improve, Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer says.

A survey by The Associated Press showed the overall number of academically ineligible players stabilized this year. It also showed the overwhelming majority of players sidelined by the rule are black.

Switzer, the coach of the perennially powerful Sooners, says by missing the grade, the players don't miss just one season.

"It's a two-year penalty," Switzer said. "Because they don't practice their first year, they normally don't play the second year. They learn the plays, learn the system and wind up redshirting the second year."

Oklahoma has three starters this season who were affected by Prop 48 in 1986, the first year of the rule.

"There should be a reward system," Switzer said. "Everybody believes in that. And I think if a kid makes it through and is going to graduate, we should give him back that fourth year of eligibility."

The AP was able to identify the race of 213 of the 274 football players disqualified this year by Proposition 48, or 77.7 percent. A total of 185 of those are black, 86.8 percent.

Critics feel these numbers show that standardized tests such as those used under Prop 48 are culturally biased.

"We know that standardized test scores are correlated with socioeconomic status," said Ursula Walsh, director for research for the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Walsh said blacks accounted for 81 percent of football ineligible in 1986 and 90 percent in 1987, according to an NCAA survey.

Those who put together the tests disagree that the exams are culturally biased.

"It's being very simplistic to blame the difference in scores on the test and not look for the reasons behind it," said Frank Moreno, associate director of public affairs for the College Board, which sponsors the SAT. "It's not so much cultural difference as much as educational backgrounds of blacks, their having appreciably less academic courses in high school."

Proposition 48 requires players to achieve a minimum score of 700 out of 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 out of 36 on the American College Test and have at least a 2.0 high school grade-point average in 11 mandatory courses.

In 1987, the average SAT score nationally for all students was 906. The average score for blacks was 728.

The 274 football players who failed to meet the NCAA's academic requirements this year was a slight improvement over the 278 last year.

There were 401 ineligible players for the 1986 season, the first year the academic requirements went into effect, according to the AP survey.

Of 1987's ineligibles, 201 returned to their schools and are eligible this year, or 72.3 percent. Of 1986's ineligibles, 69.3 percent returned last year.

Overall, 9.2 percent of college

Giamatti To Succeed Ueberroth

MONTREAL (AP) — Angelo Bartlett Giamatti is lukewarm on expansion, big on ballpark atmosphere. He's for more fairness and a lot less cheating.

What Giamatti, elected Thursday to succeed Peter Ueberroth as baseball's commissioner, really wants to do is stop the trouble that threatens to interrupt the 1990 season.

"My first priority as commissioner-elect will be finding the best possible resolution to baseball's labor relations problem," said Giamatti, currently the National League president.

The Basic Agreement between owners and players expires Dec. 31, 1989. There has already been talk of a strike or lockout before the 1990 season begins. A new billion-dollar television contract also must be worked out.

Giamatti, the NL president for two years, was unanimously elected to a five-year term by the 26 owners at their quarterly meeting. He will become the game's seventh commissioner when he officially takes over next April.

Ueberroth, who previously said he would be only a one-term commissioner, will leave office nine months ahead of schedule. He said that will help ensure an orderly transition.

"I don't think I'm leaving early. To me, I'm leaving right," said Ueberroth, who often complained his transition period after Bowie Kuhn went poorly.

Ueberroth said he does not have any immediate plans, although there is speculation he will return to the private sector as a top executive. Giamatti and NL owners met briefly Thursday to talk about choosing a new league president, but no names were mentioned. New York Mets general manager Frank Cashen has been rumored as a candidate.

Ueberroth led the support for Giamatti and did not want the selection process to drag out. He made a recommendation at a morning meeting that owners dispense with the formalities, and they then voted for Giamatti "without a lot of discussion," Ueberroth said.

"We're two different individuals with two different styles," said Ueberroth, regarded as more dominating than Giamatti. "But we have the same interests."

"My priorities are not too different than Peter Ueberroth's," Giamatti said.

Giamatti, approached in 1983 during a 2½-year search to replace Kuhn, had been long thought of as Ueberroth's likely successor.

"It's obviously no surprise. While investigating the role, the action today became very obvious," Ueberroth said. "He's the right man for the job."

Giamatti, president of Yale University for eight years, earned a reputation as "the dean of discipline" in two years as NL president. He suspended Pete Rose for 30 days this season after the Cincinnati manager bumped umpire Dave Pallone. He refused to bend to criticism and pressure to lighten the sentence.

Last year, Giamatti suspended Kevin Gross for scuffing baseballs and Billy Hatcher for corking a bat, insisting that order was necessary and cheating was intolerable. Giamatti was also said to be the driving force behind this season's enforcement of balk rules, although he denies being the main proponent.

He is committed to "social justice" in the areas of affirmative action and equal opportunity. He regards himself as "tepid" on expansion — whereas Ueberroth wanted it soon — and does not agree with two decisions by arbitrators that owners colluded to restrict the free-agent market.

Giamatti, 50, was elected as NL president in June 1986 and took office six months later.

Owners Bud Selig of Milwaukee and Fred Wilpon of the Mets, appointed by owners to examine the selection process, said they discussed many people in and out of baseball as commissioner candidates. But none, including Giamatti, was interviewed.

"The more we talked, we truly believed he was best," Wilpon said.

There were reports some American League owners did not want Giamatti, but Selig termed that opposition "from the Lamont Cranston mold."

"It was shadowy at best," Selig said. He jokingly said his only reservation was that Giamatti had been a longtime Boston Red Sox fan.

Some owners wondered whether Giamatti had a strong enough business background, perhaps Ueberroth's major asset, but those concerns apparently were answered.

"We really wanted to affect an orderly change," Selig said. "It has never worked before in baseball." Ueberroth was elected on March 3, 1984, assumed the position on Oct. 1 and was to stay through Dec. 31, 1989. Though Giamatti will now take office on April 1, it was agreed Ueberroth will work for six months with the new commissioner.

Giamatti does not plan any major personnel changes as commissioner. He does want to hire "a person of size and substance" to assist him in dealing with baseball's complicated issues.

Giamatti was involved in several strikes as Yale's president. Most notable was a 10-week strike in 1984 involving clerical workers in which Giamatti refused to give in to their demands.

Donald Fehr, head of the Major League Baseball Players Association, said he hoped Giamatti has changed since then.

BYU Stuns Longhorns, 47-6

Hard Hit

Brigham Young's Matt Bellini takes a hard hit for a loss from the University of Texas' Britt Hager during first quarter action in Provo, Utah, Thursday night. (AP Laserphoto)

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The Texas Longhorns aren't looking for excuses. They just want to regroup and salvage their season after being handed their worst defeat in 32 years.

"Somehow, we're going to have to use this experience and try to help it make us a better team," said Texas quarterback Shannon Kelley after BYU thumped the No. 19 Longhorns 47-6.

It was Texas' worst defeat since Texas Christian defeated the Longhorns 46-0 in 1956.

The game Thursday night opened a weekend of action which sees second-ranked Nebraska play at fifth-ranked UCLA; and No. 9 Michigan travel to No. 13 Notre Dame.

"We have no excuses," Kelley said. "We played poorly. I don't know how much it was Brigham Young playing well and how much it was us not playing well."

The Cougars, who suffered a 24-14 Western Athletic Conference defeat at Wyoming one week ago, set the tone for the game on their first play from scrimmage.

Junior Sean Covey, taking the snap at his own 20-yard line, found freshman receiver Bryce Doman at mid-field. Doman was all alone and he scampered untouched into the end zone.

"I went post and gave my guy a little outside move and he fell down," Doman said. "I knew I couldn't drop it."

The Cougars, held to just 168 yards passing and 213 yards total offense against Wyoming, could do little wrong against Texas.

Covey passed for 323 yards and the Cougars passed for 402 yards, breaking a 1967 record for most yards passing against the Longhorns of 378 set by Southern Methodist.

He threw a 52-yard TD pass to Chuck Cutler, who also caught a 20-yard scoring pass from Ty Detmer late in the game.

BYU also got scores on runs of 20 and 17 yards from Fred Whittingham and Eric Mortensen, a 70-yard interception return from Rodney Rice and field goals of 51 and 31 yards from Earl Kauffman.

"What a difference a week makes," said BYU Coach LaVell Edwards. "It's amazing what execution does for play calling. Catching a few passes makes all the difference in the world."

Covey was 14 of 38 with one interception and he was sacked only twice, compared to the eight times Wyoming sacked BYU's quarterbacks one week earlier.

He helped his offensive linemen by throwing at times out of the shotgun, a decision he made this week to help him see the field better.

On defense, BYU baffled the Longhorns, sacking Kelley twice and intercepting two of his passes. In all, the Longhorns committed five turnovers, including one lost fumble and two interceptions from freshman backup quarterback Mark Murdock.

Spivey Is First Week Poll Leader

Woody Peele

Vickie Spivey made an early appearance in the sports department Tuesday morning after the Labor Day holiday. She had a big grin on her face and although Tom, Tim and I did our best to ignore her, we finally had to give in and give her her due.

Vickie recorded a perfect 12-0 mark with her first week's picks in our weekly panel, giving her the lead. Tom Morris says it's only temporary, and, since he's the defending champion, maybe he's right.

Morris finished the week just one game back with an 11-1 mark. I was another game back, having gone 10-2, along with Tom Baines. Tim Chandler was in fifth place with a 9-3 mark.

Greg Laudick, who has replaced Joe Jenkins this year, came in with a Jenkins-like 8-4 record to fall into the basement his first time out.

Whether Spivey can hold onto first will be seen. Turning to the high school picks, a couple of upsets cost me last week as I posted a 5-3 record. That brings us to 10-5 on the young season.

There are nine area games this week, and a couple of them should be fine games. The panel will look at North Pitt and Conley a little further down.

Farmville Central, which pulled out a close one last week over Roanoke, travels to Plymouth tonight. The Jaguars are 2-0 while Plymouth is 1-1 after a one-point loss to Washington. In this one, the Jag luck runs out. Plymouth will take out some frustrations and come away with a 27-7 victory.

Rose travels to Terry Sanford. The Rampants, ranked fifth in the state, probably don't remember their last regular season visit to Fayetteville. They were ranked that week and unbeaten going up against Reid Ross and came home soundly beaten. Hopefully, for the Ram-pants, history will not repeat itself. I look for Rose to squeeze past the Bulldogs, 14-13.

Ayden-Grifton travels to 4-A Kinston. A victory by Ayden-Grifton would certainly turn heads, beating a 4-A squad. The Chargers would probably jump back into the Top 10 with such a win. But the numbers are too strong against them, and Kinston will take the win, 24-14.

In the other area games, it will be Washington over Pamlico, 45-8; Roanoke over Jamesville, 21-6; Chocowinity over Mattamuskeet, 14-7; Bertie over Williamston, 42-7; and North Lenoir over Greene Central, 14-13.

North Pitt comes into its game with Conley with a 1-1 record, having lost in overtime to North Edgecombe after rushing for over 300 yards. Conley will be looking for its first win after a poor showing against Ayden-Grifton.

The panel is going with North Pitt, 5-1, and our pick is the Panthers by 20-8.

East Carolina travels to Virginia Tech, where the Pirates will be looking to win their second straight of the year. Tech comes into the game after a 40-7 loss to nationally ranked Clemson and should be better than last year's team, despite a red-shirt freshman quarterback.

Our panel is sticking with the Pirates in this one, but only on a 5-1 ballot. My choice is the Pirates, 24-18.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over Furman; Georgia Tech over Tennessee-Chattanooga; Penn State over Virginia; Michigan over Notre Dame; Southern California at Stanford; Tennessee over Duke; Oklahoma over North Carolina; Wake Forest over Illinois State; Nebraska over UCLA; and Vanderbilt over Mississippi State.

Rose, Conley In Wins

GOLDSBORO — Rose High School's girls took a victory in their first official cross country meet of the year Thursday while the Rampant boys finished second in a three-way meet at Eastern Wayne.

In the boys' meet, Eastern edged past Rose to win the meet, 31-38. Wilson Hunt finished third in the event with 59 points. Eastern's Tyrone Brewington won the meet in 18:25.

Rose finishers included David Jolly, second in 18:38; Mike Jolly, fifth in 19:46; Whit Thomas, eighth in 20:58; Brian Poust, 10th in 21:08; Jeff Jones, 13th in 21:38; Craig Kirkland, 14th in 21:45, and David Thomas, 18th in 24:10.

Rose's girls finished the meet with 23 points while Eastern Wayne had 34. Hunt also had runners in the meet, but not enough to qualify for a team score.

Euba Wilkerson of Eastern Wayne took first place in 22:59.

Rose finishers included Susan Hu, second in 23:33; Jennifer Ramsdell, third in 24:14; Alicia Pascaio, fifth in 26:07; Tristan Jones, sixth in 26:09; Karen Williamson, seventh in 26:12; Lee Nesbit, 10th in 29:17; Erin Becker, 13th in 33:45, and Bonnie Rogerson, 14th in 33:47.

Rose's boys are now 1-2 while the girls are 1-0. Rose travels to New Bern next Thursday.

Conley, E., W. Carteret

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's boys and girls came away with first place victories in a pair of three-way cross country meets Thursday.

Conley's boys put together the low score of 21 points while East Carteret was second with 40 and West Carteret had 78. In the girls' meet, Conley finished with 17 while West Carteret was second with 52 and East Carteret had 75.

In the boys' meet, Conley's Adrain McLawhorn took first place in a time of 17:40.

Other Conley runners included Jason Wing, second in 19:08; Mark Mallison, fifth in 20:07; Chris Weathering, sixth in 21:01; Jason Osborne, seventh in 21:05; Louie Holland, eighth in 21:16; Scott Hudson, ninth in 21:16; Nathan Wright, 13th in 22:11; Doug Hill, 15th in 22:34; John Dunn, 16th in 22:40; Norman Pierce, 23rd in 24:52; Eddie Bonner, 24th in 25:12; and Anthony Dixon, 26th in 27:01.

Conley's Gretta Harris took the girls meet in 22:23. Other Valkyrie runners included Kim Colson, second in 24:44; Hope Harrington, third in 25:02; Tricia Smith, fourth in 26:24; Stacey Burhans, seventh in 28:58; Sharon Beacham, eighth in 29:22; Julie Smith, ninth in 29:39; Wendy Dixon, 12th in 31:19; and Kim Pakowski, 17th in 32:55.

Conley's boys are now 3-2 while the girls are 4-1. Conley returns to action on Sept. 17 at the Seahawk Invitational at UNC-Wilmington.

Most Prop 48's Black...

students are black, according to a survey taken in 1986 by the U.S. Department of Education. The only data on minority football players is a survey taken by the College Football Association last year that showed 41 percent of the players at its schools were minorities. The CFA is comprised of 66 Division I-A teams.

All 192 colleges and universities playing Division I-A and I-AA football responded to the AP survey, conducted from Aug. 26 to Sept. 2. Alcorn State and Bethune-Cookman, two predominantly black colleges, had the most ineligible players, 12 each. Alabama State and Grambling, also predominantly black, tied for third with eight each.

Of the Division I-A schools, Mississippi, Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana tied for the most with seven each. Clemson and Oklahoma had five each, the most among schools in the AP Top Twenty.

The two predominantly black conferences, the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference and the Southwestern Athletic Conference, accounted for 28.5 percent of the ineligible players, although they are 7.8 percent of Division I.

"I'm sick of Prop 48. It just makes me want to throw up," said Theophilus Danzy, athletic director at Alcorn State. "The test is about what have you read. Just as sure as I'm born to die, I think there's a definite correlation between socioeconomic background and ACT scores."

Danzy was not just expressing the opinion of a school hurt by Prop 48.

"Right from the beginning, the fear in Prop 48 was that the SAT and the ACT were culturally biased," said Richard Lapchick, Center for the Study of Sport in Society University at Northeastern University, which has done similar studies. "I don't think there are many educators in the country who would deny this."

"This is further evidence that the SAT must be comprehensively overhauled because of its biases or completely eliminated," said Bob Schaeffer, public education director of the National Center for Fair & Open Testing, an anti-SAT group.

Switzer agrees that the tests are unfair.

"I think that they all feel it gives them a stigma attached to it," he said. "What's the difference between making a 14 and a 15? Academically, is there a difference between a 14 and a 15?"

In many ways, a player disqualified by Proposition 48 has a better chance for eventual college success than the average student, according to Switzer.

"We are giving them more than the other student has," Switzer said. "The daily checks, study hall, compulsory studying, checks that they are in class. When you add all this, it gives the kids the chance to make it through."

Gerry Faust, the coach at Akron, agrees with Switzer on spring practice. There were 16 Prop 48s at Akron last year, the most in the nation. This year Akron has five.

"I think the rule is encouraging kids to study more," Faust said. "If in high school they didn't have a coach, parents or school system that watched over them, it isn't going to happen, passing the standards. They didn't have all the advantages most of us had. And it's a shame because they're the product of their environments."

"The ones really being affected are the kids themselves. This is the first time I've ever worked with a lot of inner-city kids and I love them. At Moeller (High School in Ohio), we were middle class, affluent. At Notre Dame, most of the young men we got were from good school environments. This is the first time I've had the opportunity to work with kids who come from the inner city, from tough situations."

Tyson Terms 'Suicide' Attempt As 'Ridiculous'

NEW YORK (AP) — In his first interview since his weekend auto accident, heavyweight champion Mike Tyson said reports that he tried to commit suicide, underwent mental treatment or beat his wife were "funny" and "ridiculous."

"They're trying to make a freak show out of my life, to say I would try to kill myself. Nobody has more, better reasons to live than I do," Tyson said during an audio interview Thursday with New York television station WNYW. "I have way too much butt to kick in the ring to try to kill myself out of the ring."

"It's funny. God, from a little mistake — I can't believe someone would consider me trying to kill myself. No one loves living more than I do. I got in the car. I always skip off crazy, take off crazy, drive kind of fast. I had just took off. I know something happened but I wasn't sure... I can't help if I got into a car accident. These things happen to people. People get into car accidents."

The New York Daily News reported Wednesday that the accident was a suicide attempt. Tyson, who said his chest was aching after the accident, denied that and other reports that he was drinking before the accident, had undergone mental treatment and had hit his wife, actress Robin Givens.

According to several reports, they left Thursday for a trip to the Soviet Union, where Givens was expected to do some filming. The newspaper reported in today's late editions that Tyson and Givens were seen walking hand-in-hand Thursday evening at John F. Kennedy International Airport.

This morning, a spokesman at the airport in Stockholm, Sweden, said the champion arrived on a Scandinavian Airlines Systems flight, refused to meet with the press and was ushered straight to a VIP room to await a connecting flight to Moscow.

"Why does it have to be my wife?" Tyson said during the television interview in New York. "Look at hundreds and millions of people that have wives. Why aren't their wives a negative force? I just let it drip off."

"Why can't I be successful, have money, have a wife and be happy?" he asked rhetorically. "Why does it always have to be something? Why does my wife have to be a bad person? We're both basically good people. We're highstrung, but we're basically good people."

"I love my wife. I don't beat on my wife. I'm never going to leave my wife. My wife's never going to leave me. So whatever somebody's trying to do, it's never going to work. It's just a waste of time. I don't talk out because when you talk out you just draw it out even more. So it's better to just let it go by."

Tyson said he was going to take some time off and predicted he could fight again in two months. Bill Cayton, his manager, said the same thing Thursday as he announced that the postponed fight with Frank Bruno could take place in November or December.

Cayton said Tyson will be examined again in the next week by Dr. Carolyn Britton, associate professor of neurology at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, and that if Britton gives the go-ahead, Tyson could begin training for his fifth defense of the undisputed heavyweight title.

"If he checks out absolutely perfectly in a couple of three weeks he can begin training," said Cayton, who Wednesday dismissed the suicide reports as "despicable lies."

"Sometime late in the year, possibly November or December, the fight against Bruno can take place..." Cayton said.

Tyson originally was scheduled to fight Bruno on Oct. 8. The fight was postponed to Oct. 22 after Tyson fractured his hand during a street fight with boxer Mitch Green on a Harlem sidewalk.

Cayton said he was angry with reports that he was pressuring Tyson to fight too often.

"Mike has probably been the most protected fighter in boxing history," Cayton said. "I'm trying to have him examined by one or two other leading neurologists. Not that I'm dubious of Dr. Britton. I just want to make sure."

Cayton said he thinks Tyson should fight about four times each year.

Meanwhile, boxing types reacted to the recent turmoil in the champion's life. Sugar Ray Leonard, in an interview on CBS This Morning, said he was troubled.

"My personal observation is that there is something bothering Mike," Leonard said. "Probably something that stems back to when he was a kid. And they say that fame and fortune has affected him. I don't think that's particularly true. I think, if anything, it probably has festered up those demons, if you will, because there's something upstairs that's really bothering Mike. I think the people around him need to pay more attention to Mike Tyson, the person, the human being, as opposed to the money."

Muhammad Ali, the former heavyweight champion, said Tyson was different from most people because of the notoriety that comes with the title.

"People do things worse than Tyson every day, but they never make the press," Ali said. "If he wasn't famous and he wasn't where he was, he wouldn't make the news. But he's popular."

Despite this, Leonard said the incidents must stop.

"As good as Mike Tyson is and as great as he can be and will be, people will not remember him if this continues," Leonard said. "They won't remember him for his greatness. They'll remember these incidents, here."

Conley, Greene, N. Pitt All Bow

PINETOPS — D.H. Conley's volleyball team came in on the short end of two matches yesterday at SouthWest Edgecombe. Conley fell both to the host team and to Durham Jordan.

In the opening match, Jordan won handily over the Valkyries, taking the match in two games, 15-5 and 15-1.

Against SouthWest, Conley did better, winning the first match 15-9, but then losing the second 15-13 after holding a 13-10 lead. That took the wind out of the Conley sails and the Valkyries dropped the final match 15-8.

"We're a young team and real inconsistent," Conley coach Martha McCaskill said.

Now 7-4, Conley returns to action on Tuesday, hosting Ayden-Grifton.

Southern Nash.....2
Greene Central.....0

SNOW HILL — Southern Nash swept a pair of volleyball matches from Greene Central Thursday as the Lady Rams opened their 1988 season.

Southern won the opening match, 15-13, 15-6, then came back to take a 15-11, 15-7 win in the second match.

Tomeka Blackmon led Greene Central in service points in the first match with seven while Gilda Seaton paced the Lady Firebirds with 11. In the second match, Blackmon and Sonica Speight each had four for Greene Central, while Seaton was again high for Southern with seven.

Now 0-2, Greene Central travels to North Lenoir on Tuesday for a tri-match which also includes Jones Senior.

N. Pitt-SW Onslow-W. Craven

VANCEBORO — North Pitt dropped a pair of volleyball matches Thursday at West Craven. The Pant-Hers fell to Southwest Onslow and the host team.

In the opening match, Southwest took a 15-6, 15-4 win. Donna Leggett led North Pitt in hits with eight while Tasha Council led in assists with five.

In the second match, West Craven took a three-game win. The Lady Eagles won the first game, 15-4 but North Pitt came back with a 15-3 victory in the second game, only to fall in the final game, 15-10.

Angie House led North Pitt in service with 12 points while Lori Howard and Angie House added five and four, respectively. Leggett was again the leading hitter with 15 while Tracy Nichols led in assists with 16.

North Pitt, now 0-5, plays host to D.H. Conley on Thursday.

Three Greenville Boats Among Leaders

ATLANTIC BEACH — Three Greenville boats are among the top 20 following the first day of the Hardee's-Atlantic Beach King Mackerel Tournament, which got underway Thursday. It will continue through Saturday.

The top fish of the day was a 56.7 king caught off the "Miss Micheala," captained by Steve Robinson of Newport. The king is the largest of its kind caught in North Carolina waters in a tournament.

In eighth place is a 29.35 fish caught off the "Gulfstream," captained by Frank Longino of Greenville. In 12th place is a 28.3 pound fish caught off the "Sea Van," captained by Van Gurkins of Greenville, while in 13th place is a 27.85 pound fish caught off the "Vengeance," captained by Clayton R. Kirby of Greenville.

Approximately 50 of the over 700 boats entered in the tournament are Greenville-registered.

MLBPA Seeks 'New Look' Free Agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Lincecum, Lance Parrish and other players who were free agents between the 1986 and 1987 seasons may be free agents again. The Major League Baseball Players Association on Thursday decided it wants several free agents affected by the second collusion case to be granted "new-look" free agency.

Arbitrator George Nicolau ruled last week that the teams conspired against free agents. In the first collusion case, arbitrator Thomas Roberts allowed seven players to become free agents again, and Kirk Gibson left the Detroit Tigers to sign a $4.5-million, three-year contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"We have suggested a solution to the clubs. They will respond to it, and if we can't work it out the arbitrator will have to decide," Lauren Rich, a lawyer for the players' association, said.

The union was expected to ask for the "new look," under which players would be given several weeks to leave their teams or remain under their current contracts.

Other players who could become free agents again are second baseman Willie Randolph and pitcher Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees, catcher Rich Gedman of the Boston Red Sox and catcher Bob Boone of the California Angels.

Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs waived his right at the so-called "new-look" free agency when he agreed to a two-year contract last spring for a guaranteed $4.15 million.

Jack Morris, the Detroit Tigers' pitcher, would not be eligible if Nicolau adopts the same procedure used by Roberts.

Roberts did not grant the new look to players who became free agents again after the next season. Morris was a free agent last winter and returned to Detroit under a $3.977-million, two-year contract through the 1989 season.

Raines, who signed a three-year $5-million contract with Montreal in May 1987, is close to signing a new contract with the Expos, according to his agent, Tom Reich. Montreal executives said last week that the deal was 98-percent complete.

Nicolau has three scheduled hearing dates next week for the Collusion III grievance, covering last winter's free agents. Reich said that if the owners do not agree to the union's proposed solution, Nicolau could settle the matter then, since the parties are scheduled to meet anyway.

In the past, however, both sides have taken longer than estimated on each segment of the collusion cases.

New Speedway Construction Draws Crowds

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Paul Sawyer wasn't prepared for the reaction to his building of a new speedway.

"I knew there was going to be some interest, but not to the extent that it reached," Sawyer said. "It just boggled my mind."

The construction of the new Richmond International Raceway became a popular midday attraction on weekdays this summer, with 100 or more people often bringing their lunches to the track, sitting in the stands and watching the workers go about their business. The crowds of onlookers grew larger on weekends.

"This was day after day after day," said Sawyer, the speedway's president. Except for some cosmetic improvements around the facility, the construction is finished, and the speedway will hold its first NASCAR Winston Cup race with Sunday's running of the Miller 400.

Positions 1-20 were to be filled in qualifying runs this afternoon, with the remainder of the 38-car starting grid to be set in time trials Saturday.

The building of the new track began in earnest late in the afternoon of Feb. 21, minutes after Neil Bonnett won the last race at the Richmond Fairgrounds Raceway.

As Bonnett was celebrating his victory, the aging half-mile oval was being torn up by bulldozers, one of them manned by Richard Petty, the all-time leader in victories at the layout, which was widely regarded as the most antiquated on the circuit.

In the coming months, a new racing surface was laid, the old steel guardrails gave way to a concrete retaining wall that encircles the new track, and the main grandstand and VIP boxes atop it were replaced with enlarged versions.

What exists now is a track whose shape and length make Richmond unique on the Winston Cup trail.

The new surface is the only three-quarter mile track on the circuit. Its rounded-off "D" configuration is similar but not identical to those at Daytona and Talladega, where the turns are banked substantially higher than Richmond's 14 degrees.

RIR is 60 feet wide with a 10-foot apron, which speedway officials hope will promote three-and-four-abreast racing.

Sawyer, who has been involved with stock car racing for 35 years, said he tried to avoid mistakes that were made in the construction of other tracks in recent decades.

"I think I've built a better mousetrap," he said. "I think we were fortunate to be in the era that we were in. With this track here, we think we're well set into the 21st century."

Sawyer originally had planned to have about 38,000 seats in place for the Miller 400, up from the 29,000 at the Fairgrounds track. But as fan interest grew throughout the summer, Sawyer kept adding more seats to keep pace with ticket demand, and the track now has a seating capacity of 53,103, making it the largest sports facility in Virginia.

Sunday's race is a sellout, but Sawyer plans to sell several thousand general admission and infield tickets on Sunday morning.

The track's unique qualities mean the drivers all will be starting from scratch in terms of experience this week. The few exceptions are a handful of drivers who made limited test runs last month after the paving was finished.

Agassi Defeats Connors

NEW YORK (AP) — Andre Agassi snatched America's tennis torch from Jimmy Connors. He might have burned himself in doing so.

The setting was more electric than the tennis Thursday night as the 18-year-old Agassi became the youngest men's semifinalist in U.S. Open history with a 6-2, 7-6 (8-6), 6-1 manhandling of Connors. The sellout crowd was ready to rock, but Agassi rolled over Connors instead.

The fourth seed has won 23 straight matches and his last three tournaments, giving him six titles this year.

With the victory over Connors, he has earned the title of the best player in the United States.

"I think I cleared doubts in people's minds about whether I belong here," Agassi said. "If I didn't beat him, even though I'm ranked higher, I would not be considered the top American."

Then Agassi, who faces No. 1 Ivan Lendl in the semifinals, mentioned he predicted a 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 victory to a friend.

"He made a big mistake," Connors said when told of that remark. "Not just with me but with a lot of people."

"I'll play him again. There's always a next time. That's the beauty of the game. I will follow players to the end of the earth to play them, but I don't think I will follow him."

At 36, Connors has seen rising American stars before. Some, like John McEnroe, have staying power. Others fade.

"He's riding a crest," Connors said. "He's come onto the scene in a hurry and it will be interesting to see where he goes, how long he'll be around."

He'll be around the Open until at least Saturday, against Lendl, who is seeking an unprecedented fourth consecutive U.S. crown.

The other men's semifinal pits No. 2 Mats Wilander of Sweden against Darren Cahill of Australia. While Wilander seeks his third Grand Slam crown this year and seventh overall, Cahill is the lowest-ranked man to get this far in the Open since computer rankings began in 1973.

Today's women's semifinals had No. 1 Steffi Graf, going for the first Grand Slam sweep in 18 years, against No. 3 Chris Evert, and No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini playing No. 11 Zina Garrison.

In the men's doubles final, it was Rick Leach and Jim Pugh, seeded fifth, against No. 3 Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez of Spain.

Agassi overpowered Connors in the first and third set and outgunned him in a tense second set. With the crowd clearly against him — it will certainly be on his side against Lendl — Agassi stayed calm.

"I expected more from Jimmy with the crowd, I thought he'd try to beat me mentally," Agassi said. "His will to fight is so intense you can feel it out there. He is one of the best players ever."

"Since I turned pro, I wanted to play Jimmy before he retired. It definitely was fun."

Connors also said he had fun. In the sixth game of the final set, on the edge of defeat, one spectator shouted to Connors. "He's a punk, you're a legend."

The crowd roared and Connors, grinning widely, playfully hit a ball into the crowd toward the fan.

Connors was just as playful at a news conference, even bringing the fan along to meet with the press.

Asked how he felt about being dubbed a legend, he laughed and said, "I play the game. I enjoy playing the game and whatever people think and feel is OK."

"I'm still out there enjoying tennis. My time isn't finished yet."

Lendl was glad to have a relative breather, beating American Derrick Rostagno 6-2, 6-2, 6-0.

"If you keep playing five-set matches, you are going to come into the final and be tired or not be as fresh as you would like to be," Lendl said. "I personally prefer easier matches."

"I think that, since the first set against (Amos) Mansdorf in the first round, this was the best that I have played. If that is the indication for the next couple of days, then the timing was good."

Rostagno, 22, made his farthest advance in a Grand Slam event. But he didn't have the game to compete with the top seed.

"I was a little slow on my volleys and his passing shots," said Rostagno, who had never played or even hit with Lendl. "It's always good to practice with people who are better than the one you're going to play." Rostagno said. "But where will you find somebody better than Lendl to practice with?"

"I'm glad I did well in the United States, in the biggest tournament of the year as far as I'm concerned. I did play some great tennis, though maybe not today."

"If I had won, I wouldn't have been able to look forward to something new next year."

Barr, Pavin Tie For Golfing Lead

FRANKLIN, Wis. (AP) — The last time Dave Barr and Corey Pavin were tied at the end of a round of the Greater Milwaukee Open it meant sudden death.

Pavin beat Barr on the fourth playoff hole in 1986 to capture the title in the $700,000 tournament and they co-lead it on Thursday after opening-round 66s. "That's water under the bridge," Barr said after he and Pavin battled high winds and fast greens for a one-stroke lead over Jim Gallagher and Ed Fiori at six under par over the 7,030-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

Pavin won the 1986 tournament with a birdie on the fourth extra hole. "He won it; I didn't lose it," Barr said. "You don't feel bad when you get beat by a birdie."

Besides, he said, there's little room for hard feelings on the PGA Tour.

"I don't think there's any animosity if you lose," he said. "You could lose a playoff and the next night you could be out having dinner with the guy."

But Barr and Pavin said their experience on the Tuckaway course helped them cope with Thursday's conditions as winds gusted to 20 mph.

Pavin said he was surprised to see such low scores, considering how windy it was and how quick the greens were.

"The greens are as fast as I've ever seen them here," he said.

Pavin recovered after bogeying two of his first three holes to finish the front nine at 1-under 35. He birdied five holes on the back nine, including four consecutive birdies starting at the 13th hole.

During the string of birdies, Pavin used a 3-wood rather than his driver on the 405-yard, downwind No. 15, explaining, "That's how windy it was."

Farmville, Conley Win Jayvee Games

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's junior varsity football team romped to a 30-14 victory over Plymouth behind fine defensive play Thursday night.

Plymouth scored first, taking a 6-0 lead on a two-yard run in the opening period.

In the second quarter, however, Farmville scored three times to take an 18-6 halftime lead. Jerry Baker hit on a 10-yard pass to Zimmie Coward for the tying score. Michael Foreman then got the defense into the act, returning a fumble 30 yards for the go-ahead score. With 41 seconds left in the period, Baker scored on a one-yard run set up by Bartrell Fields' 61 yard interception return.

Fields returned another interception 65 yards for a third period touchdown and Albert Baptist returned a fumble 10 yards for the final Jaguar score in the fourth quarter.

Plymouth closed out the scoring with a 33-yard pass and a two-point conversion.

Fields had 178 yards in all-purpose running.

Now 1-1, Farmville plays Conley next Thursday.

Conley ..... 28
North Pitt ..... 12

BETHEL — D.H. Conley rolled up a 28-12 junior varsity football victory over hosting North Pitt Thursday night.

Wayne McCullough put Conley on the scoreboard first with a 16-yard pass from Bryn Smith in the opening period. Smith then passed to Glenn Whiteford for the PAT and an 8-0 lead.

North Pitt came back before the period ended to score on a nine-yard pass from John Caton to Lamont Forbes but the conversion failed and Conley held an 8-6 lead.

The Baby Vikings scored twice in the second quarter on runs by Anthony Barrett. He went in from the eight and later from the six to boost the Conley lead to 20-6.

Kenneth Haddock got Conley's final touchdown in the third quarter on a 19-yard run and Barrett added the PAT to make it 28-6. North Pitt came back in the final period on a one-yard run by Forbes to close out the scoring.

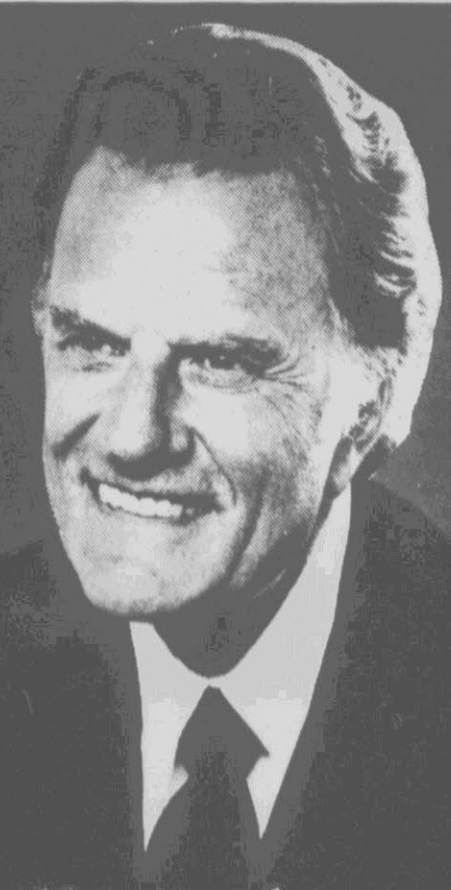

Barrett finished the game with 175 yards rushing for Conley.

New York Hands Detroit Its 14th Loss In Last 17 Games

NEW YORK (AP) — For managers Sparky Anderson and Lou Piniella, it's now a matter of time and place.

New York sent Detroit to its 14th loss in 17 games as pinch-hitter Gary Ward hit a three-run homer with two outs in the 10th inning to beat the Tigers 7-4 Thursday night.

The defeat dropped second-place Detroit 1 1/2 games behind Boston in the American League East. The Yankees slipped into third place by a percentage point over Milwaukee, 4 1/2 games behind the Red Sox.

The Tigers, who entered the four-game set with the Yankees having lost five straight series, have gone from 73-50 to 76-64.

"No time now," Anderson said in a quiet Tigers clubhouse. "In April, May and June there's time to solve problems. It's too late now."

For the Yankees and Tigers, the problem this time was relief pitching.

The Yankees, who led 4-1 in the eighth, have lost seven games this year one out away from victory and their opponents have won 18 times in the final at-bat.

Trailing 4-1 in the eighth, the Tigers rallied for three runs with two outs off beleaguered reliever Dave Righetti, who has blown nine save opportunities this season.

"It was a big win," Piniella said. "Blowing leads in the late innings has haunted us all year."

With two outs in the 10th, Don Mattingly doubled to right off reliever Mike Henneman, 8-5. Guillermo Hernandez relieved and intentionally walked Dave Winfield. Ward, batting for designated hitter Ken Phelps, spoiled Anderson's strategy by hitting his third home run of the season on a 2-0 pitch.

"I think I've been so bad, it's time to be good," said Ward, hitting .207 with 19 RBI in 208 at-bats.

"I knew it was going to come down to Ward and we told Hernandez to get ready," Anderson said.

"It's been a long time, a long holiday," Anderson continued. "You don't cry. I've been in this game too long to be a cry baby."

Hipolito Pena, 1-1, got the victory by getting the last out in the top of the 10th, when the Tigers had runners on first and third.

"Pena did his job and that was important," Piniella said.

Elsewhere in a light AL schedule, Oakland beat Kansas City 5-1 and California edged Texas 4-3.

After striking out the first two Tigers in the eighth, Righetti walked Luis Salazar and then yielded consecutive singles to Alan Trammell and Chet Lemon, who reached after a weak throw by shortstop Rafael Santana on a grounder into the hole. Ray Knight followed with a double up the left-centerfield alley to clear the bases.

"I knew it was going to come down to who got the big hit," Knight said. "We didn't."

Righetti, booed when he left the mound after the top of the eighth, was trying to preserve a victory for Ron Guidry, who allowed one run and three hits in 6 1/3 innings.

"Ronnie pitched very well," Piniella said. "His last two outings have been encouraging."

Guidry, who has spent most of the season recovering from off-season shoulder surgery, made his longest stint in nine games. His longest previous outing was 5 2/3 innings on July 28 in a loss to Milwaukee.

"I was throwing well," Guidry said. "I had a lot of good sliders but there were a few fastballs."

Guidry and Ted Power battled to a 1-1 tie through five innings until the Yankees scored three runs in the sixth on Dave Winfield's RBI single and a two-run single by Mike Pagliarulo. Power, who entered the game with an 0-2 record against New York this season while pitching for Kansas City, allowed only one hit in the first five innings.

Power was making his first start for the Tigers since being acquired from the Royals for two minor leaguers Aug. 31.

"Power threw the ball real good," Anderson said. "He has a good arm."

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the first without a hit. Rickey Henderson led off with a walk and moved to second on a wild pitch. Power's attempted pickoff went into center field allowing Henderson to move to third and, one out later, Mattingly's grounder to second gave the Yankees the lead.

Henderson has reached base safely in the first inning 16 times this season, scoring 39 runs.

After Guidry retired the first nine batters, the Tigers tied the score in the fourth when the inning was prolonged because of a balk.

Gary Pettis led off with a walk and moved to second on a groundout. One out later, Guidry appeared to have fanned Lemon on a 3-2 pitch but first base umpire Drew Coble called a balk allowing Pettis to take third. Chet Lemon, given a new life, then walked.

Knight followed with a single to right to score Pettis. When Guidry got Larry Herndon to officially end the inning on a popup, Piniella engaged in a heated argument with Coble for several minutes over the balk call and was ejected.

"Gator (Guidry) told me he stopped," Piniella said. "I think I was gone before I came out of the dug-out."

Athletics 5, Royals 1

Curt Young pitched four-hit ball for eight innings and Oakland beat Kansas City for the first time in seven games this season.

hitting streak to 11 games and giving him 11 hits in 16 at-bats.

Young, 9-8, lost his shutout in the eighth when Danny Tartabull hit his 21st homer. Young struck out seven and walked none before Greg Caderet relieved. Caderet allowed two hits and Dennis Eckersley got the final out for his major-league leading 39th save.

Bret Saberhagen, 13-14, gave up all five runs and nine hits in six innings.

Angels 4, Rangers 3

Wally Joyner hit a run-scoring single and Brian Downing followed with an RBI double as California rallied for two runs in the eighth inning.

Mike Witt, 13-12, won his fourth straight game and his fifth in six decisions. He allowed six hits, walked two and struck out none in eight-plus innings. Bryan Harvey got three outs for his 16th save.

Devon White singled to start the eighth off starter Jeff Russell and stole second. Mitch Williams, 2-6, relieved and allowed Joyner's RBI single. Downing then doubled to left-center, scoring Joyner from first.

Ryan Weaves 5-Hitter As Astros Gain

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Nolan Ryan had the Los Angeles Dodgers right where he wanted them — not to mention his pitches.

Ryan pitched a five-hitter and didn't walk a batter for the first time this year as he led the second-place Houston Astros to a 2-1 decision over the National League West-leading Los Angeles Dodgers on Thursday night.

"I felt good, and if I feel that I can still be effective late in the game, I want the complete game," said the 41-year-old right-hander, who helped the Astros move within five games of the Dodgers with his third complete game of the year.

"My fastball was good early, and it got better toward the end of the game. The key tonight was that I got ahead of the hitters and had command of my pitches. It was a must-win game for us. That's the difference between two games in the race."

It was the first time in 31 starts this season that Ryan, the major league's all-time leader in walks with 2,441, had gone an entire game without walking a batter. Ryan, who beat the Dodgers for the first time in his last five attempts, has allowed only eight walks in his last six starts — a span covering 42 innings.

In other NL action, it was San Francisco 3, Atlanta 2; Cincinnati 2, San Diego 1; New York 13, Chicago 6; Montreal 5, Pittsburgh 4, and St. Louis 1, Philadelphia 0.

Ryan, 11-11, snapped a personal four-game losing streak against Los Angeles. He struck out seven to raise his NL-leading strikeout total to 211.

After yielding a game-tying home run to Kirk Gibson in the fourth inning, Ryan retired 17 of the last 19 batters.

Left-hander John Tudor, 8-8, suffered his third defeat in five outings with the Dodgers. The Astros broke through for their winning run in the eighth on an RBI single by Buddy Bell.

Giants 3, Braves 2

Bob Brenly's bunt on a suicide squeeze play brought Donell Nixon home in the seventh inning as San Francisco ended a six-game losing streak.

Don Robinson, 6-4, pitched his second complete game of the season for the Giants, allowing eight hits. The loss went to Braves reliever Charlie Puleo, 3-4.

Ernest Riles got a triple, his third hit of the game, off Puleo with one out in the seventh and Nixon came in as a pinch runner. Brenly's bunt was fielded by the pitcher, who had no play at the plate and threw out Brenly at first.

Will Clark hit the Giants' first home run in 13 games, ending a power drought which lasted 119 innings, in the fifth inning to tie the score 2-2.

"When Clark homered, no one was thinking about how long we'd gone without one, only that it tied the score," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "How long had it been, 46 games?"

Reds 2, Padres 1

Jose Rijo, making his first start since Aug. 14, combined with two relievers on a four-hitter as Cincinnati ended a six-game San Diego winning streak.

Rijo, 12-8, who had been on the disabled list since Aug. 18 with tendinitis in his right elbow, allowed only two hits in six innings. He struck out six and retired 15 consecutive batters in one stretch.

John Franco, who has allowed only one earned run in the past 35 2/3 innings, pitched the final 1 2/3 innings for his career-tying 32nd save, tops in the NL.

The Reds scored their runs off Ed Whitson, 12-9, on an RBI single by Ron Oester in the second and an RBI double by Eric Davis in the sixth. The Padres scored their only run in the eighth on a run-scoring grounder by Randy Ready.

"I felt really good," said Rijo, who snapped a personal four-game losing streak dating back to July 19. "I was very excited with the way I pitched. My control was there, and I didn't feel any pain at all."

Mets 13, Cubs 6

Howard Johnson had five of New York's season-high 20 hits, including a three-run homer in a five-run seventh, to lead the Mets.

Darryl Strawberry hit his league-leading 33rd homer and a pair of singles to drive in three runs and Dwight Gooden, 17-6, won his fourth consecutive decision. Gooden, who allowed 10 hits in seven innings, is 15-3 lifetime against Chicago.

Greg Jeffries hit a two-run homer, his fourth since being brought up from the minors Aug. 28. He has three three-hit games and nine extra-base hits and seven RBI.

Scott Sanderson, 1-2, relieved to start the seventh with a 6-5 lead and did not get an out, giving up three hits and three runs.

Expos 5, Pirates 4

Tim Wallach drove in three runs with three hits, including the go-ahead run on an eighth-inning double, as Montreal beat Pittsburgh.

With the score tied 4-4 in the eighth, Andres Galarraga singled with one out off reliever Jeff Robinson, 9-4, and stole second. Wallach followed with a drive over center fielder Andy Van Slyke's head.

Wallach also had RBI singles in the first and third innings off Bob Walk, who failed for the ninth straight start to post his career-high 12th victory.

Pascual Perez, 10-6, survived a three-run first to earn the victory. Joe Hesketh worked the final two innings for his eighth save as the Expos moved within 2 1/2 games of the second-place Pirates in the NL East.

Pittsburgh slipped nine games behind the division-leading Mets.

Cardinals 1, Phillies 0

Ozzie Smith walked with the bases full and two out in the fifth inning, leading St. Louis over Philadelphia behind a combined five-hitter by Larry McWilliams and two relievers.

It marked the first time since 1973 that the Cardinals had recorded three straight shutouts. They earlier defeated Montreal 1-0 and Philadelphia 5-0.

Longhorns...

said he thought about having kicker Wayne Clements try a field goal when the Longhorns had the ball on fourth down inside the 2-yard line, but he needed a touchdown.

"I took a chance because I thought we needed more than a field goal to get going," McWilliams said. "When we didn't get it, that really pumped them up. It was a bad gamble."

The Longhorns played without star tailback Eric Metcalf, forced by the NCAA to take a one-game suspension.

Saturday's Nebraska-UCLA matchup features two of the nations premier quarterbacks — Steve Taylor of the Cornhuskers and Troy Aikman of the Bruins.

Aikman's classic dropback style contrast's Taylors scrambling.

That's a particular concern for UCLA Coach Terry Donahue, whose team has surrendered 42 points to Nebraska the last three times they've met. Last year, it was 42-33.

"In the 13 years I've been a head coach, there were only about four games where we were not competitive physically," Donahue says.

"Two of those games were against Nebraska in 1983 and 1984. They were an atypical college football team."

In other games Saturday involving Top Twenty teams, Furman is at No. 3 Clemson; No. 4 Oklahoma at North Carolina; No. 6 Southern California at Stanford; Kentucky at No. 7 Auburn; Texas Christian at No. 8 Georgia; No. 9 Michigan at No. 13 Notre Dame; Southern Mississippi at

No. 10 Florida State; Fullerton State at No. 12 West Virginia; No. 14 Alabama at Temple; Rutgers at No. 15 Michigan State; Western Carolina at No. 16 South Carolina; No. 17 Iowa at Kansas State; No. 18 Penn State at Virginia and No. 20 Washington at Purdue.

It's the second tough game of three for the Cornhuskers, who opened with a 24-13 win over Texas A&M in the Kickoff Classic. Last week they routed Utah State 63-13 in a game that gave Nebraska defensive coordinator Charlie McBride a chance to practice his nickel and dime defenses — five and six defensive backs — against Brent Snyder, who hit 21 of 39 passes for 187 yards and two touchdowns.

Bill Moyers Starts New PBS Interview Series On Monday

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Yes, after a while it does get to be tedious, praising all these Bill Moyers programs on PBS, informing the deprived TV populace that they are missing some of the best stuff on television by not switching that selector away from NBC or Fox or HBO.

Moyers' Constitution series was fascinating. The Joseph Campbell interviews were inspired. Couldn't Moyers, just once, produce some kind of lame drivel that could be lambasted for a change?

Apparently not, at least for now. Moyers embarks Monday on a new series of interviews, "Bill Moyers' World of Ideas," with an eclectic group of guests, though judging from the first few shows, they seem to have a common theme about ethics and societal responsibilities.

The series of nightly, half-hour interviews continues for 10 weeks. If that seems like a lot, figure it's worth it to check in once in a while when you're likely to drop in on a conversation with anybody from sportswriter Robert Angell to Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright August Wilson. Most of the interview subjects are authors, some scientists and others philosophers.

In the first week, Moyers talks to British film producer David Puttnam, environmental scientist Jessica Tuchman Mathews, ethicist Michael Josephson and historian Henry Steele Commager. Part 2 of the Puttnam interview rounds out the week.

In Monday's premiere, Puttnam, producer of "Chariots of Fire," "The Killing Fields" and "The Mission," discusses what he sees as the moral decay of the movie industry, a degeneration of message to money. Puttnam knows whereof he speaks since he won an Oscar and later became head of Columbia Pictures, only to be bounced out for going against the system.

Puttnam grew up in England, Moyers in Texas. Both recall images from the silver screen that strongly affected their sense of the world. It is this often profound effect on the formation of ideals, Puttnam argues, for which the filmmaker must take responsibility. Instead, he argues, many moviemakers sneer at audiences while picking their pockets.

"We've all got to look past this thing and say, well, where are we going to be in the year 2000?" he says. "Are we literally going to live in tiny enclaves with individual armed guards, pouring rubbish over the fence in the form of television material, films or even journalism at an undereducated and increasingly irresponsible society on the outside?"

"But I go to the movies to be entertained," Moyers counters, "not to be lectured. Do I really want David Puttnam sitting there saying, 'What kind of moral instruction can I give Bill Moyers when pays me seven dollars?'"

"No, you don't," says Puttnam. "You have every right not to want that, but, again, I think there's an underlying poverty of ambition, if you like. I've never accepted that there's any dichotomy at all between entertaining you, Bill Moyers, and also dealing in an issue, addressing you with an issue. I don't think there's any dichotomy at all, and I think it's the job of the responsible filmmaker — or of the good filmmaker, forget 'responsible' — to deal in both."

Puttnam admits he tripped in the moral mine field when he made "Midnight Express" to prove he wasn't just a maker of "art" films, and could produce a commercial hit. The movie was about a young American, Billy Hays, imprisoned in a hellish Turkish jail for drug smuggling. In the climactic scene, Hays bites off the tongue of one of his tormentors.

Puttnam meant the scene as a horrific portrayal of how demented Hays had become in the brutal prison world. But Puttnam was appalled when he sat in a movie house and heard the audience cheer the scene.

"That's when I said to myself, 'Never again. I don't ever want to sit and look at a film that I've had any responsibility at all for and be stunned and shattered by the reaction it's getting from the audience,'" he said.

In the second half of the interview, Puttnam expresses regret for turning down "Moonstruck" when he was at Columbia, though he says the script he saw wasn't as good as the movie turned out to be. He also says he didn't think "Chariots of Fire" deserved the Oscar as Best Picture when it won in 1981. Between it and the later runner-up in that category, "The Killing Fields," Puttnam says, they did add up to one Academy Award.

Moyers' other guests in the next few weeks will include, among many others, American authors Tom Wolfe and E.L. Doctorow, Nigerian novelist Chinua Achebe, author and scientist Isaac Asimov, author and historian Barbara Tuchman, Mexican author Carlos Fuentes, British historian Paul Johnson and philosopher John Searle.

Capital Assignment Helps TV Reporters

By John Carmody
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — This is where you want to be and it helps a whole extra lot when you're a male, if you want to make it in bigtime TV journalism.

The latest "network correspondent visibility study," just released by Joe S. Foote of Southern Illinois University-Carbondale, shows that all of the top 10 major network correspondents who led the list in total appearances on the nightly news in 1987 worked here.

And CBS' Rita Braver, who tied for 11th, was the most visible woman last year. In fact, of the top 50 network correspondents over the past five years, only three were women — Braver, Lesley Stahl and Susan Spencer — and they all work for CBS in Washington.

Foote is chairperson of the radio-television department at SIU-Carbondale and has been conducting his annual survey for since 1983.

The importance of a Washington assignment is also reflected in the fact that nine of the top 10 over the past five years and 14 of the top 20 last year worked out of network bureaus here.

In 1987, the three most visible all were chief correspondents at the White House, led by CBS' Bill Plante (with 155 appearances on nightly newscasts), and followed by ABC's Sam Donaldson (147) and NBC's Chris Wallace (120).

Wallace had led the list in 1986 with 122 appearances, and in fact, over the five years, Wallace had showed up 633 times, followed by Donaldson (619) and Plante (513).

Ranked next in the 1987 Top 10 after the White House gang were correspondents John McWethy, covering national security for ABC (107), followed, in order, by CBS' Phil Jones, Congress (101); CBS' David Martin, Pentagon (95); NBC's John Dancy, Pentagon (94); ABC's Bob Zelnick, Pentagon (84); ABC's Brit Hume, Congress (79); and NBC's Bob Hager, federal agencies and designated hitter (76).

The next 10, in order, were CBS' Braver, law, and ABC's John Martin, Pentagon, who tied with 73 appearances; CBS' Ray Brady, business (70); CBS' Bruce Morton, politics (69); ABC's Walter Rodgers, Moscow bureau chief (68); CBS' Peter Van Zant, Atlanta bureau (66); ABC's Sheila Kast, White House, and NBC's Carl Stern, legal, both 64; NBC's Mike Jensen, business (61); and CBS' Susan Spencer, medical correspondent (60).

Foote noted in his most recent study that "for a woman to head the correspondent list she would have to be a chief White House correspondent for one of the networks" and listed Braver, Kast, Spencer and NBC's Andrea Mitchell, who ranked 32d in total appearances last year as No. 2 at the White House for NBC (with 50 sightings) as the "ladies-in-waiting" for the top job.

In his five-year survey of the 401 correspondents who have appeared on the list at one time or another, 85 percent of the top 255 (those who appeared at least 25 times over the five years and five or more times each year) were men — and that 94 percent of those with 200 or more appearances were men.

"Most of the women who showed up on the list were bunched near the bottom," Foote said. Nearly half of the women correspondents (46 percent) turned up in the lower one-third of the list, while only 28 percent of the men were in the lower third.

Elton John Auction Hits $7.6 Million

LONDON (AP) — The sale of rock star Elton John's varied collection of stage clothes, art, furniture and mementos at Sotheby's has hit $7.6 million and it isn't over yet, the auction house says.

John's art collection sold for $1.3 million Thursday and his stuffed toys, fantasy objects and designer clothes went for $144,000. Sotheby's said.

More of the musician's furniture, sculpture, ceramics and miscellaneous items, including walking sticks and amusement machines, were to be auctioned today, the last day of the four-day sale.

Prices for about 300 lots of art, from Rembrandt etchings to art nouveau posters and fashion designs, mostly went well above the presale estimates, Sotheby's said.

The top price was $119,000 for a painting of a fish wearing a rope of pearls by the Belgian surrealist Rene Magritte. It was bought by an anonymous customer from Brussels.

John, 41, has said he wants to make room in his mansion near Windsor, west of London, to start new collections.

Studio Says Valerie Quit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An attorney for Lorimar Telepictures told a Superior Court jury that actress Valerie Harper quit her TV series because she couldn't win more money and total control of the "Valerie" show.

Donald Engel, summing up the production company's case Thursday in a breach-of-contract lawsuit against the star, disputed Ms. Harper's contention that she was wrongfully fired from the series.

"I think she quit," said Engel. "She wanted to leave. She just didn't like the deal that was made."

He stressed that Ms. Harper had received $1.5 million for the show's first two seasons and was due to receive $65,000 per episode for continued work under a revised contract.

Ms. Harper, who countersued, has said she brought the concept for the series to NBC and expected to help shape episodes. She claims the writers and producers made changes minimizing her role and focusing on the teen-age boys in the series.

Ms. Harper left "Valerie" last summer and was replaced by actress Sandy Duncan. The show's name was changed to "Valerie's Family" and later to "The Hogan Family."

Like Dad, Like Son

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The date of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, once proclaimed a day that "will live in infamy," apparently hasn't stuck in the memories of George Bush and his eldest son.

George Bush Jr. confused the date Thursday during an interview on the Michael Jackson syndicated radio talk show. His father, the Republican presidential candidate, got the date mixed up Wednesday.

During a discussion about the campaign with host Jackson, the candidate's oldest son lamented that "the problem is that so much of what we see in presidential politics is the 15-second sound bite on TV."

"Last night for example, the 15-second sound bite on my dad on the national networks was the fact that he slipped for 45 seconds on whether Pearl Harbor was on September 9th or December 9th.

"And they made a big deal of that on TV. I didn't quite get the point, because he, you know, corrected himself."

Jackson did not note that the younger Bush had misquoted his father who had said during a speech Wednesday, Sept. 7, to the American Legion in Louisville, Ky: "I wonder how many Americans remember. Today is Pearl Harbor Day. Forty-seven years ago to this very day we were hit, and hit hard at Pearl Harbor. We were not ready..."

Within a minute or so, Bush corrected himself.

Both Bushes misstated the date of the attack, Dec. 7, 1941, which marked America's entry into World War II and was proclaimed "a date which will live in infamy" by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

College Funding

ASHEVILLE (AP) — State Community Colleges President Bob Scott proposed a $78 million 1989-91 budget Thursday to the state's Advisory Budget Commission, saying most of the money would raise salaries and add instructors.

"We want to prepare for the next century and see where the cracks in the varnish may be coming," Scott said.

The operating expansion budget would total $45 million for 1989-90 and $43 million for 1990-91, for an overall increase of 20 percent in instruction funds, said Tom King, financial officer for the state system.

The additions would bring annual state support for the system to nearly $370 million by 1991. State appropriations account for 76 percent of the system's budget.

Forfeitures

GREENSBORO (AP) — State and local law enforcement agencies in central North Carolina became about $196,000 richer Thursday when federal agencies distributed money and property seized during recent drug investigations.

Federal law allows the government to seize property purchased from drug proceeds, exchanged for drugs, or used to facilitate a drug transaction, such as a house where drugs are sold.

Coastal Protection

RALEIGH (AP) — Nine coastal areas in North Carolina should be studied to determine whether they deserve special protection against development, the state Environmental Management Commission decided Thursday.

The commission voted 13-0 to study the areas for possible designation as "outstanding resource waters," a move that places stricter development guidelines on the areas until a final decision is made. Public hearings are required.

The areas to be studied are the Alligator River National Wildlife refuge in Tyrrell County; Swan Quarter and the Juniper Bay area and the Swan Quarter National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County; southeastern Pamlico Sound in Carteret and Hyde counties; Core Sound in Carteret County; western Bogue Sound and the Bear Island Area in Carteret County; Stump Sound, Permuda and Ashe islands in Onslow County; Topsail Island and Middle Sound in Pender and New Hanover counties; Masonboro Sound in New Hanover County, and Lower Lockwoods Folly River in Brunswick County.

FOUNDATION GIFT — Valerie Perez, human relations manager at TRW Inc. in Greenville, center, presents a check Thursday to James S. Ficklen Jr. and Patsy S. Duke, directors of the Pitt County Educational Foundation. The $1,000 check is the first of three installments on a $3,000 gift to the foundation. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Shultz Accuses Iraq Of Staging Gas Attacks on Kurd Civilians

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is accusing Iraq of staging "horrifying" poison gas attacks on Kurdish civilians, and Congress is being asked to cut off all U.S. aid and military sales to the Middle Eastern country.

Despite Iraqi denials, Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Thursday threatened to reverse the recent improvement in U.S. relations with Iraq. On Capitol Hill, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee moved for a broad range of sanctions against Iraq, including a cutoff of U.S. aid, military support and oil purchases.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., introduced a resolution calling for the sanctions and accusing Iraq of "an act of genocide, a crime abhorred by civilized people everywhere and banned under international law."

Until Thursday, the State Department had said it could find no evidence to substantiate reports that the Iraqis had used poison gas against the Kurds, a non-Arab minority group inside Iraq.

But at the daily press briefing, spokesman Charles E. Redman declared in a tough statement that the allegations were true and called the Iraqi campaign "abhorrent."

Shultz then held a 50-minute session with Sadoon Hamadi, the Iraqi minister of state for foreign affairs who called to provide an account of sputtering negotiations to end the Persian Gulf war with Iran.

Redman issued a statement afterward saying Shultz had accused Iraq of an "unjustified and abhorrent" military campaign against Iraqi Kurds. A U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said Shultz also accused Iraq of "horrifying" behavior.

Pell's resolution would ban all U.S. aid to Iraq, sales of U.S. military equipment and provision of credit or credit guarantees. It would prohibit the transfer of sensitive technology to Iraq and bar the import of Iraqi petroleum products into the United States.

It also would instruct the U.S. representative to the United Nations to vote against all loans to Iraq.

Redman declined to say whether the State Department was prepared to take action against Iraq in the commercial field.

Swimsuit Winner

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The latest winner of the Miss America swimsuit competition won't say if she's had cosmetic surgery, but believes anything goes for women who want to make their bodies look better.

Miss Mississippi Carla Haag won the swimsuit event Thursday in the second evening of preliminary Miss America Pageant competition.

Miss Minnesota Gretchen Carlson took talent honors with a spirited classical violin performance.

They join the preliminary winners picked Wednesday, Miss Louisiana Valerie Brosset in swimsuit and Miss Oklahoma Lori Lee Kelley in talent. A final preliminary round is scheduled today, with selection of a new Miss America on Saturday.

Miss Haag declined to tell reporters if she'd had surgery to enhance her 5-foot-6, 105-pound figure.

The question came after pageant director Leonard Horn earlier in the day criticized surgery or other unnatural preparations for the pageant.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Sept. 10

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Your basic leadership qualities will likely get put to the test today, especially if you are going to be spending time with family members.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): That outside project could pull sharply into focus as this busy day unwinds. Don't allow your time to get away from you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): That financial mire you thought you had escaped from is back in the picture again. More negotiations are required to be rid of it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Your competitive spirit may be aroused by a colleague today. It will stand you in good stead if you remain focused on your goal.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): To gain the positive goals you have set for yourself, be sure to keep to proven methods today. Avoid "shortcuts"; they could take longer.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Try to allow some of the little details to take care of themselves today. Spend your time better by sticking to developing the big picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Your critical powers are at their finest now, but don't let them get directed towards the wrong individual. This person could be your ally.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Your obligations may require a more efficient way of handling matters today if you expect to maintain the status quo.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Don't get rid of anything that is valuable today, as it is more than likely that you will be in need of it in the very near future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Put the new strategy or proposition you have recently been considering to the test today. After all, what do you have to lose?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): "New age" individuals figure heavily into today's equation. Be forceful, well informed, and look at the broadest scope.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You could place a lot of trouble in motion today if you don't hold back on some of the comments you are pondering. Think before you speak.

 One of the first rubrics we learned was: "Eight ever, nine never!"— finesse with eight cards missing the queen, play for the drop with nine. That stood us in good stead over the years, and we might still have been following that advice slavishly had it not been for this hand.

The auction was simple enough. Certainly no one could quibble about the final contract of four spades. West led the king of clubs, and the first-round holdup was automatic. The club continuation was won by us and the ace and king of trumps were cashed. When West showed out on the second round, we started to run the hearts.

Unfortunately, East ruffed the third heart and shifted to the queen of diamonds. With the ace offside, we lost two diamond tricks in addition to one club and the trump—down one.

In the post-mortem we discovered the error of our ways. East was the danger hand, and he had to be kept off lead. We could have accomplished that by forgetting what we had learned at our mother's knee.

After winning the second club, we should have cashed the ace of spades and then finessed the jack. As the cards lie, that would have held the trick. We could then have drawn the last trump and cashed out the heart suit for an overtrick.

What if the spade finesse lost? The contract was still safe. With the king of diamonds protected from attack, we would have been guaranteed four trump tricks, five hearts and the ace of clubs.

Rainstorm Floods Central Florida, Leaves 6 Dead

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A storm that triggered floods across central Florida, causing at least six deaths and the evacuation of 1,000 people, threatened homes and lives as it headed north today, officials said.

"Tampa should be breaking out of the rain ... but north of Tampa they could still get some pretty substantial rain," National Weather Service meteorologist Randy Lascody said in Miami.

The storm has swamped the Gulf Coast with up to 15 inches of rain since Sunday, causing more than $1 million in damage in hard-hit Manatee County, where a state of emergency was in effect.

The weather service issued a flash-flood watch for Gulf and Franklin counties in the Florida Panhandle.

A wave of showers moving north from the Gulf of Mexico was expected to settle over northern Florida and southern Georgia by tonight, Lascody said, adding that "the real heavy stuff" should be heading up the southern Atlantic Coast.

Gov. Bob Martinez was to tour the stricken Bradenton area of Manatee County by Florida Air National Guard helicopter today to decide whether the area should be declared eligible for state disaster relief money.

The rising waters left two dead on the west coast. A 44-year-old Tampa man was presumed drowned after his car plunged into a ditch and he was sucked into a pipe near downtown Tampa. In New Port Richey, a 2-year-old boy drowned in a rain-swollen canal.

The storm also contributed to a small plane crash Wednesday that killed all four aboard near Williston about 110 miles north of Tampa, National Transportation Safety Board investigator Ron Bird said Thursday.

The rainfall far surpassed the 5 inches dumped by Hurricane Elena on Labor Day 1985, when wind and high tides did $9 million damage and sent 13,000 people to shelters.

In St. Petersburg, hundreds of mostly elderly residents mistakenly thought the latest flooding was a hurricane.

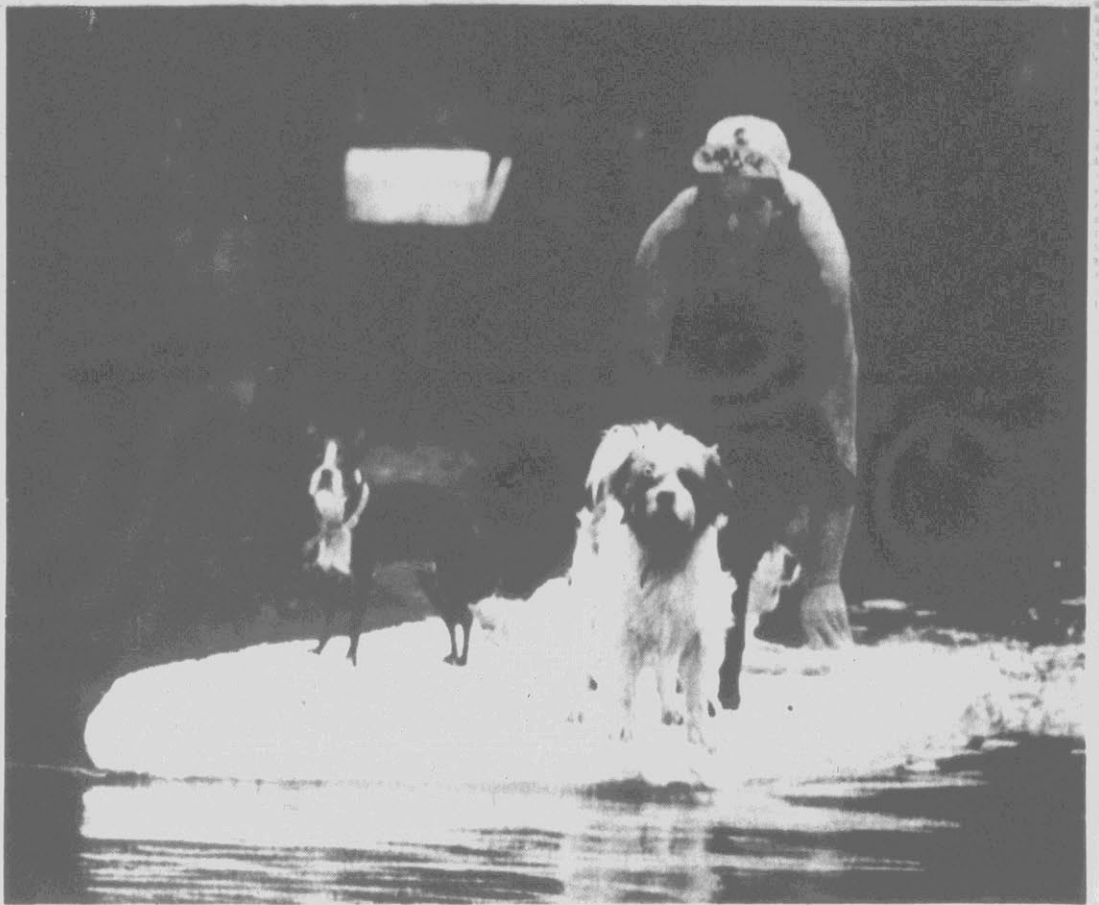

"This is insane," Pinellas County Emergency Management director David Bilodeau said. "There's just been gross panic for no reason at all."

A tornado struck St. Petersburg Thursday night, causing more than $20,000 damage to six houses but no injuries, fire officials said.

Manatee County commissioners allowed half of the 1,000 evacuees to return home Thursday as floodwaters began to recede.

Residents returning home were urged by county public health officers to disinfect sinks and showers, pitch out any food touched by flood waters and check wells for broken pipes or flooding.

Authorities warned about 300 people staying in shelters Thursday to wait one more day while emergency officials tried to resolve problems with raw sewage, water 5 feet deep in homes along the Manatee River and power failures in homes with standing water.

INVITATION FOR BIDS
 The Housing Authority of the City of Greenville, North Carolina will receive bids for the furnishing of all labor, materials, equipment and services required for construction of Project NC 19-P022-009, which consists of five (5) buildings containing thirty-two units and a general maintenance building. The work is to include certain utilities, site improvement work, and landscape work as specified in the technical portion of the specifications. See plan for site locations. Bids will be received until October 11, 1988 at 3:00 PM in the Council Chambers, third floor of the Municipal Building, Greenville, NC. (Note: Time of Day shall be as determined by the Executive Director of the Housing Authority.)
 Proposed forms of Contract Documents, including plans and specifications, are on file at the office of the Housing Authority, 103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina, and at the office of Dudley, Shoe, Ellinwood and Associates, 200 East First Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834.
 Bid Proposals will be received under one proposal from the General Contractor. General Contractor's proposal shall include all construction, including the electrical, plumbing, heating and ventilation, site work and landscaping.
 Copies of the documents may be obtained by depositing $100.00 with the Housing Authority of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, for each set of documents to be received. Such deposits shall be refunded to each person who returns the plans, specifications, and other documents within ten (10) days after bid opening. A certified check drawn on a bank or trust company insured by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC and FDIC) payable to the Authority, or satisfactory Bond executed by an acceptable surety on the Bid Bond form contained in the specifications and in accordance with the Instructions to Bidders set forth herein, in an amount equal to five (5) percent of the Bid shall be submitted with each bid.
 The successful Bidder will be required to furnish and pay for satisfactory Performance and Payment Bond or Bonds.
 Attention is called to the provisions for Equal Employment Opportunity and payment of not less than the minimum salaries and wages set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project. Affirmative action plans are required of successful bidder.

001 Public Notices
 The Housing Authority of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to waive any informalities in the bidding. No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of thirty (30) days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Housing Authority of the City of Greenville, North Carolina. # Ex-Burmese Leader Calls For General Elections, Sets Up His Own Rival Regime

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Burma's former leader said today he has formed a rival government to take power from the forces that ousted him 26 years ago and imposed single-party rule.

Former Prime Minister U Nu, in a letter distributed to diplomatic missions, also announced general elections Oct. 9.

About 200 uniformed air force men fled their base and took refuge in dormitories at Rangoon University in the first major military defection.

The U.S. Embassy began evacuating dependents of diplomats. Forty-five of the 90 dependents flew to Bangkok. Diplomats said Japanese, South Korean and Thai nationals were aboard the same flight.

"We side with democracy and not with fascists!" and "Our military training is not to shoot people!" the soldiers shouted inside the university, the headquarters for student revolt. Students guarded them.

The unarmed men, mostly sergeants and privates, sneaked out of Base 502 — the country's largest — in the capital's Mingladon area. They said the main gates were locked to prevent soldiers from leaving.

There was no immediate reaction from President Maung Maung's government or the powerful military on U Nu's move or the defections.

The letter, signed by the 82-year-old U Nu, unveiled a 25-member government with himself as prime minister, former President Mahn Win Maung as president and retired Gen. Tin Oo as defense minister.

It did not include two prominent opposition figures, one of whom called the move "preposterous."

"I have exercised my (constitutional) right at 9 a.m. I have taken back the power which General Ne Win has robbed from me," U Nu wrote. "From this hour, sovereign power no longer rests with General Ne Win. It has come back into my hands, and I announce this fact with joy."

U Nu was toppled in a coup led by Gen. Ne Win, who held power for the next 26 years. Although Ne Win officially retired as head of the ruling Burma Socialist Program Party in July, many analysts believe he still exercises decisive control.

Hard-line leader Sein Lwin replaced Ne Win but resigned after 17 days and massive street protests that resulted in at least 112 deaths. Maung Maung replaced Sein Lwin, becoming Burma's first civilian leader in 26 years, but protests have continued as opponents try to bring about a multiparty system.

The absence from U Nu's government of opposition leaders Aung Gyi and Aung San Suu Kyi indicated internal splits among government opponents.

"I am glad my name is not there. It is simply preposterous," Aung Gyi told reporters when asked about U Nu's action. Aung Gyi is the nation's most outspoken critic of the government. He was arrested in July and spent a month in prison after writing a series of letters critical of the government.

Aung San Suu Kyi is the daughter of Burmese independence leader Aung San. U Nu's letter said he would run for election but would immediately turn over power to anyone who obtained a majority of votes. Since his government could not provide ballots and other equipment, elections would be held at mass town meetings and would not "under existing conditions" be conducted in rural areas, the letter said.

"At this point it is not certain how significant the declaration of the government and the call for election is," said a Japanese official in Rangoon.

A Western analyst in Bangkok said that despite the great show of anti-government force, Burma's leaders appeared to be "going ahead with their own timetable" of holding a special congress Monday to pave the way for a referendum on one-party rule. He said the powerful military also appeared to be basically intact despite defections and "wavering."

The diplomat cited reliable reports that in Rangoon and elsewhere, the army has been trying to seize all food, fuel, and other essential items to dig in for the long-term "and let the people starve."

Ross Petzing, the U.S. Embassy spokesman in Bangkok, described the evacuations as a "precautionary measure." The Soviet Union and China evacuated dependents earlier in the week.

The revolt and declaration of a rival government came one day after about 1 million people surged through the city in the largest anti-government protest since Aug. 21.

Also Thursday, residents said more than 700,000 protesters marched in the central city of Mandalay, 350 miles north of Rangoon, and in Monywa, an important trading town 60 miles northwest of Mandalay. More than 100,000 marched in Moulmein, the Mon State capital 50 miles southeast of Rangoon.

State radio said security forces fired on a crowd of 500 looters in the suburbs of Rangoon, wounding 17.

Maung Maung took power Aug. 19. On Aug. 24, he announced a planned congress of the ruling Burma Socialist Program Party on Monday to consider a popular referendum on one-party rule. But protesters have rejected his call and demanded immediate formation of an interim government.

Duarte Visits War Area

CHALATENANGO, El Salvador (AP) — An ailing President Jose Napoleon Duarte inaugurated a rural development project in this northern rebel stronghold in his first public ceremony in more than three months.

Duarte, 62, is suffering from terminal cancer. He has lost 35 pounds and most of his hair because of chemotherapy treatment.

But his voice and step were firm Thursday as he opened the $5 million project in the provincial capital 45 miles north of San Salvador. Chalatenango is a stronghold of leftist guerrillas who have waged a nearly 9-year-old war against the U.S.-backed government.

After the ceremony Duarte, who wore a blue cap from Notre Dame, his alma mater, was asked by The Associated Press how he felt.

"Good," he said. "I am getting stronger every day." But a measure to declare Duarte incapable of carrying out his duties due to incurable liver cancer was referred to committee in the legislature Thursday.

Ramon Rosales, leader of the tiny conservative party MERECECEN, presented the proposal. His party has no legislators, but private citizens may speak in Congress and present proposals if backed by a legislator. Rosales' motion was supported by a member of the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance.

The measure is not considered likely to succeed. Under the constitution, further action requires the unanimous opinion of five physicians designated by Congress and the approval of 40 of the legislature's 60 members.

Duarte said after the ceremony in Chalatenango that his next treatment, set for late this month, should not weaken him as much as the previous one.

When cancer was diagnosed in early June, doctors said Duarte had six to 18 months to live. The chemotherapy that ended in early August was complicated by diabetes. Duarte was bedridden and very weak for 10 days in mid-August.

Trotsky Recognized

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda today acknowledged for the first time in decades that Leon Trotsky played a key role in the Russian Revolution and defense of the young Soviet state, but it said Vladimir Lenin considered him a "Judas."

For decades, Trotsky's name has been virtually banned from the Soviet state-run press and his role in creation of the world's first socialist state virtually wiped from the historical record.

The article in the government daily was an excerpt from a biography of Josef Stalin being written by Col. Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov. The biography described Trotsky in language that, during Stalin's rule, might well have cost its author his life.

"Being quite a gifted publicist, speaker and organizer, Trotsky played a well-known role in the October armed uprising and eventually in the Civil War years when he was chairman of the Revolutionary Council," the article said.

The words used to describe Trotsky would have been unimaginable in the pages of the Communist Party daily as little as a year ago. Their publication in Pravda indicated high-level party support for a reexamination of Trotsky.

Although recognizing Trotsky's abilities and his deeds on behalf of the revolution, the article pointedly noted that Lenin, leader of the Bolsheviks, had called Trotsky a "Judas" in 1911, a reference to the disciple who betrayed Jesus.

The headline of the full-page Pravda article called Trotsky "the demon of the revolution," indicating that a full-blown return to official favor is unlikely.

By the time he was murdered in exile in Mexico City in 1940, Trotsky's image had been cut or airbrushed from archive photographs of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, and he was solely portrayed in official histories as a revolutionary turncoat who opposed both Lenin and Stalin.

As part of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's drive for "glasnost," or increased openness, Soviet historians have been more frankly assessing their country's past, including the role of Stalin foes like Nikolai Bukharin, Lev Kamenev and Trotsky.

In a major Kremlin speech last November, Gorbachev credited Stalin with preventing a take-over of the Communist Party by Trotsky and his supporters in the late 1920s.
