Martin Employs Pitt Rally As Forum To Attack Jordan

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

After spending most of Tuesday unveiling details of his new 70-county "Democrats for Martin" organization, Gov. Jim Martin told approximately 300 people gathered at the Moose Lodge that his administration represents the party of "better schools, better roads and better jobs."

Martin, who is seeking re-election against Democrat Lt. Gov. Robert B. Jordan III, was one of several Republicans, including Bill Dansey, Howard Moye, Judge Robert Orr and DOT official Randy Doub, speaking at the rally.

At a stop earlier in the day at the Greenville Airport, Martin announced former Mayor Les Garner would be the chairman of the Pitt County "Democrats for Martin" campaign.

Garner was also among the approximately 300 people in attendance at Tuesday's campaign rally, as Martin and the mostly Republican following partook of eastern North Carolina barbecue and Republican rhetoric.

Martin elaborated on his campaign theme of "better schools, better roads and better jobs" and gave his Democrat opponent Jordan a verbal lashing for his proposal to eliminate the N.C. Department of Commerce.

"Now talk about dumb ideas, that's one of them. It's the most effective machine for generating jobs in the country and he wants to abolish it," Martin said.

The governor also took the opportunity to tell those in attendance about his "Democrats For Martin" organization.

He described the organization as community leaders in 70 counties throughout the state working to recruit Democratic voters to support Martin's re-election campaign.

Martin said in the 1984 election, he carried 46 to 47 percent of Pitt County and he envisions the organization will enable him to have much stronger support this year.

"We've got a much stronger organization in the eastern communities and I just feel good about it," Martin said. "Not only does that seem to be the case in Pitt County but it seems to be the case in many neighboring counties as well."

Following the rally, Martin commented he was proud of the reception he received at the Moose Lodge.

"It was just a tremendous crowd, it almost filled up the place. I thought it was a great crowd and enthusiastic. The response was very good," he said.

Meanwhile, Garner said he is looking forward to the challenges ahead in this year's gubernatorial campaign.

"I'm happy to serve because I think he's a good governor and he deserves to serve another four years. I'm going to do everything I can to get him all the votes I can in Pitt County," Garner said.

Possibly Tainted Blood Released By Mistake

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

After a nationwide review of its 56 Blood Services regions, the American Red Cross today reported that blood products — including some possibly contaminated with AIDS or hepatitis B — have been dispersed by mistake.

The Tidewater region, which includes Greenville, is one of four regions where the bulk of the mistakes have occurred.

Red Cross officials said early retesting of donors has failed to turn up anyone with a positive reaction to either illness.

After a review of regional operations and procedures, the Red Cross found that 576,426 products were adequately quarantined and/or destroyed out of more than 6 million total products, while 2,420 were mistakenly released for use, according to Victor W. Schmitt, vice president of the national Blood Services.

"Most mistakes involved donations that test negative for AIDS, but for various reasons were not in compliance with Red Cross or FDA (Food and Drug Administration) directives that require such donations to be quarantined and/or destroyed," he said in a news release.

For example, if a donor who was previously found to have "false-positive" test results gives blood

Gilbert Slams Cozumel With Winds Of 175 MPH

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

MERIDA, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Gilbert slammed into the resort island of Cozumel with 175 mph winds today, and thousands of people on the nearby Yucatan Peninsula fled coastal areas for the interior.

Residents along the gulf coast of Texas, 560 miles to the north, stockpiled food and supplies and prepared to evacuate. The hurricane, one of the strongest in history, is "extremely dangerous," the U.S. National Weather Service said.

Oil companies evacuated thousands of workers from rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, according to reports from New Orleans.

The National Weather Service in Miami said the eye of the storm was near the island, 12 miles off the Yucatan coast, at 9 a.m. EDT. Gilbert was reported at latitude 20.4 north and longitude 86.6 west moving west northwest at 15 mph. Gilbert pounded the Dominican Republic, Jamaica and the low-lying Cayman Islands Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. At least 11 people were reported killed, and at least 60,000 were left homeless in Jamaica. Rescue teams worked desperately to restore utilities and communications in the shattered areas.

In a telephone call early today, receptionist Pablo Torres of the Carrillos Hotel in the Yucatan resort of Cancun said about 150 people, most of them tourists, were crowded in the lobby on sofas and chairs.

"We are full, and there is not one tourist now in the beach hotel zone," he said. "The sound of the wind outside is horrible. You couldn't leave even if you wanted to."

He said the winds felled utility poles and trees and that sheets of rain were hitting the city.

Telephone lines from Mexico City to Cozumel and Cancun later were cut. Cancun is 175 miles east of Merida.

Gilbert was expected to pass over the northern portion of Cozumel and hit the peninsula near the sparsely popu-

Bentsen To Hold Courthouse Rally

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, will make his first official campaign appearance in North Carolina with a campaign rally at the courthouse in Greenville on Friday.

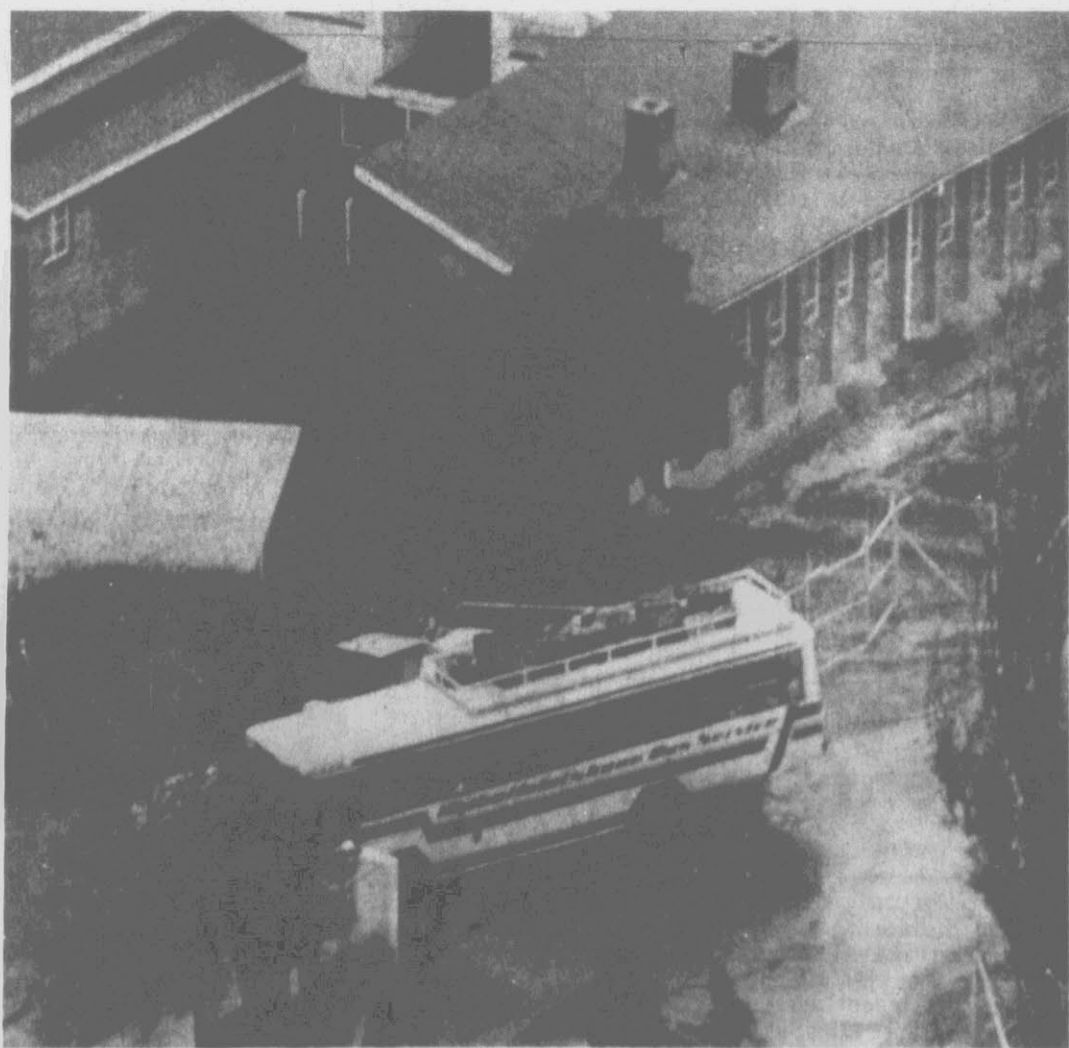

The 12:30 p.m. event, billed as an "old fashion Democratic rally" by Pitt County Democratic Chairman J.B. Spillman, will include a speech by Bentsen and a barbecue dinner.

Spillman said at a morning news conference today that Bentsen will be joined at the rally by U.S. Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordon, state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, and other state and local officials.

A Bentsen campaign worker, who said the candidate will be in Greenville about 90 minutes, said the rally will last about 45 minutes.

State Sen. Tom Taft, who also spoke at the news conference, said, "I encourage everybody in Pitt County — Democrats and Republicans — to come out to this event (and) see history in the making."

Bentsen was a U.S. Congressman from 1949 to 1954 and has served in the U.S. Senate since 1970.

HIJACKED BUS — Gunmen believed to be members of the exiled Lesotho Liberation Army seized this bus Tuesday, holding pilgrims en route to Pope John Paul's scheduled visit to Lesotho this week. Some of the hostages reportedly were freed today. (AP Laserphoto)

Rebels Seize Bus As Papal Visit Nears

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — Guerrillas held nuns, schoolgirls and other papal pilgrims on a hijacked bus in this kingdom that Pope John Paul II was scheduled to visit as part of a tour of southern Africa. A nun said some captives were released.

Official Lesotho Radio said a group of "fanatics" had taken over the bus of papal pilgrims Tuesday. Diplomats said the guerrillas were believed to be members of the dissident Lesotho Liberation Army.

Sister Therese Labrecque, a nun helping to arrange the papal visit scheduled to start today, said some of the original 60 hostages were released this morning from the bus surrounded by Lesotho security forces outside the British High Commission, or embassy, in Maseru. She said she did not know how many were freed.

The plane carrying the pope from Botswana to Lesotho, meanwhile, was diverted to South Africa because of bad weather. South African officials said the plane would land at Johannesburg to refuel, and Foreign Minister R.F. Botha would go to the airport to meet the pontiff.

South Africa had been omitted from the pope's five-nation southern Africa tour after South African bishops said it was not an appropriate time for a visit. The pope has spoken out against apartheid, the system of racial segregation in South Africa.

As an army helicopter flew overhead, about 100 armed soldiers and police set up roadblocks with armored cars and kept spectators at least four blocks from where the hijacked bus could be seen parked on the grass outside the embassy.

A spokesman for Botha said the Lesotho government had asked for security help and that "units have moved in on a standby basis."

The commission is on a hill in the center of Maseru, next to police headquarters in a district of government offices.

Witnesses said guerrillas took over the bus at Mazenod, outside Maseru. They said police surrounded the bus but later moved back and let it proceed to Maseru.

The Lesotho Liberation Army is fighting the nation's military rulers. The rebels took up arms after a coup in January 1986 deposed leftist Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan, who died of natural causes in April 1987. The guerrillas have been holed up in South Africa.

Jervis Chavase, deputy high commissioner at the British Embassy, said he learned of the hijacking when the bus drove up and stopped in front of the diplomatic compound.

"A bus is parked outside the commission and I believe the police have the situation in control," Chavase said at 1 a.m. (7 p.m. EDT Tuesday). He said the hijackers have "asked to come into the compound and we have refused to let them."

He said the bus arrived about 6 p.m. Tuesday.

A nun at the Papal Visit Office, Sister Rita Brassard, said the bus had come from the town of Quacha's Nek, a remote area in the south of this nation completely surrounded by South Africa.

She said the bus was carrying eight nuns, seven teen-age schoolgirls, six teachers and other pilgrims who had been picked up on the way to Maseru, the capital.

The bus was to have dropped the nuns at a convent outside the capital but the vehicle never arrived, she said.

Police and soldiers put up roadblocks on streets leading to the British commission.

Martin Honors Volunteers From 35 Eastern Counties

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"You show us the ways people come together in North Carolina to make our communities places that are indeed community," Gov. Jim Martin told an assembly of volunteers gathered in Hendrix Theater at East Carolina University to receive 1988 governor's volunteer recognition awards.

"We are here today celebrating and giving thanks to all those who have helped us through extra commitment to others," the governor said Tuesday afternoon to 120 individuals and recipients representing agencies from 35 eastern North Carolina counties being honored in the ceremony.

Three individuals from Pitt County and one organization were 1988 honorees — Raymond L. Denson, Dr. Jasper L. Lewis Jr. and Jean Weaver, and the Junior ROTC group from D.H. Conley High School.

Each of the 35 counties had a selection committee whose members reviewed the achievements of volunteers in all fields of endeavor. From this large list, they named persons and/or agencies whom they felt had been exceptionally helpful through volunteer efforts during the past year.

From neighboring counties, those honored were: Greene County — Annie Ruth Jones, Audrey Jones, Julia Ormond and Ruth Paige, and Martin County — Barbara James, Caroline Stalls, William James Wallace, and the Williamston Rotary Club.

Martin told the audience that the forthcoming Sept. 19 issue of Business Week had "named North Carolina as the best state in the U.S. for the location of businesses. Being cited as the best can be attributed to many factors, not the least of which is the reputation the state enjoys as one where caring people such as you help each other, help your communities."

"And we are proud, too, of our reputation for support to the arts. In fact, we are known as the state of the arts," Martin said.

"What you volunteers have achieved makes North Carolina the state of the hearts, loving, caring, giving hearts. You as volunteers being awarded today are but a small representation of many who give of their time and talents to making our state the state of North Carolina."

Garner In Group Backing Martin

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Former Greenville Mayor Les Garner appeared Tuesday with Gov. Jim Martin at a Pitt-Greenville Airport news conference to unveil the governor's statewide "Democrats for Martin" organization.

Martin and several supporters flew across the state holding five conferences in five cities in one day to unveil his 70-county "Democrats for Martin" organization. He said he believes that conservative Democrats like his record, are angry at the General Assembly and consider their party's ticket too liberal.

Martin, who is seeking re-election against Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, released lists of registered Democrats in each of the 70 counties who have agreed to assume leading roles in Martin's campaign.

Among those present at the Pitt-Greenville news conference other than Garner were Red L. Cratch of Beaufort County, Glenn Jarvis of Hyde County and Sue Adams of Wilson County. Others from the east he mentioned by name included Kerry Ippock of Craven County, B.R. Burgwyn of Northampton County, Sam Stell of Carteret County and Taylor Slade of Martin County.

Martin strategists believe at least half the votes he received in 1984, when he defeated Rufus Edmisten 54 percent to 46 percent, came from Democrats. Strong support from the majority party is a must for any successful Republican candidate in a statewide race, since the GOP is outnumbered in North Carolina 2½ to 1.

"We've made some progress in getting people to switch (to the GOP) — slow, steady progress," Martin said. "But we still need Democratic support."

He said he is confident that his Democratic support will be at least as strong as it was four years ago, when he was "Jim Who" in many parts of the state — particularly in eastern North Carolina, a Democratic Party bastion.

"We've got 70 counties organized this year, more people working as volunteers," he said. "In 1984, we only had 45 — and we won," he said.

Albert O. McCauley of Fayetteville and Joe I. Marshall of Madison, both of whom are businessmen, will be co-chairmen of the organization, Martin said. The two accompanied Martin on his tour of the state.

Martin fielded a question about publicly accepting support from a former Greenville mayor, who many believe was voted out of office largely because of what was perceived as a racist joke, by saying that he has been impressed with the way Garner, who is white, and current Greenville Mayor Ed Carter, who is black, have worked together. "They aren't having problems with each other, so why should anyone else have problems with something that's long in the past?" he said.

GUC Expands Beat-The-Peak Program

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An expansion of the Greenville Utilities Commission's load management program — which saved $195,462 in wholesale power costs during the month of August — was approved by the GUC board Tuesday night.

The expansion of the Beat-the-Peak program, which allows the GUC to control residential air conditioners and water heaters through a radio-controlled switch, will allow control of supplemental electric heat strips on heat pumps.

Since the Beat-the-Peak program began in 1977, the GUC load management program has expanded to include voltage adjustment, operation of existing standby generators and control of wells on the GUC water system.

Roger Jones, who heads the GUC Electric Department, told board members Tuesday that the $195,462 savings in power costs resulted from load management program operations on Aug. 18, between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m., the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's coincident system peak.

The savings, Jones said, included: $68,422 through voltage adjustments; $80,875 from control of air conditioners; and $7,218 through operation of generators at the GUC water plant and Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co.

Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, said an electric rate increase last month was "100 percent demand-oriented," which "further encourages" expansion of the utility's load management efforts.

Based on a pilot supplemental heat strip control program last winter involving 50 GUC customers, Green estimated the average savings per customer at $210 over the five-month period from November through March. With an estimated 10,000 of the commission's 27,000 residential customers heating with heat pumps, total savings in wholesale power costs through heat strip control could approach $210,000.

As approved Tuesday, the heat strip program will be available to the current backlog of customers now awaiting installation of Beat-the-Peak switches and new applicants. Present Beat-the-Peak customers wishing to participate in the expanded program will have to wait until next summer or fall for inclusion in the heat strip program.

As part of the project, Beat-the-Peak heat strip customers will receive a $10 per month credit for three winter months for their participation.

Present Beat-the-Peak participants now receive a $5 per month credit for water heater switches and $5 for air conditioner switches — for a maximum credit of $40 — over the period June through September.

Most heat pumps start relying on strip heat backup when outside temperatures drop below 30 degrees, Green said. The heat strips use about three times more electricity to produce one British Thermal Unit of heat than regular heat pump operations.

At the end of August there were 8,842 load management switches installed on water heaters throughout the GUC system and 9,177 switches installed on air conditioners, and a backlog of 342 applicants waiting for switches.

Since January 1985, the load management program has saved more than $5.83 million in wholesale power costs.

Republican Judge Says Race Different

Reflector Staff Writer

The last time a registered Republican was elected to a statewide judgeship was 1896.

But Judge Robert F. Orr hopes that after all the votes are tabulated, 1988 will be different than those previous 92 years.

Orr, who is a Republican, is running for a seat on the N.C. Court of Appeals. His opponent in the upcoming election is retired Superior Court Judge John Friday, a Democrat.

Orr, 41, says he faces an uphill challenge, but he believes the circumstances this year might help him in November.

"A lot of things are taking place which haven't happened in the same time before," he said in an interview Tuesday. "It's a presidential year, we have a popular Republican governor in Jim Martin heading the ticket, and a strong lieutenant governor candidate in Jim Gardner," Orr said. But, like the majority of Republicans running for office in the state this year, Orr believes for a registered Republican to win, he needs to attract a large number of registered Democrat voters.

Martin named Orr to the Court of Appeals in 1986 to serve until this fall, when a judge will be elected to serve the next four years.

"I've served on the Court of Appeals for over two years now," Orr says of his experience. "I have voted on over 600 cases and written opinions in over 200 cases and I have established a record of work on the court that I feel justifies the voters of this state, be they Democrat, Republican or independent."

A native of Hendersonville, Orr studied law at the University of

ROBERT F. ORR

North Carolina at Chapel Hill, receiving a juris doctor degree in 1975. He also served in the U.S. Army for three years from 1968-1971.

Resignation

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Iredell County's Emergency Medical Services director resigned on Tuesday in the wake of reports he supervised at a wreck where cargo was taken.

John Fleming, director since 1976, was suspended without pay on Saturday. He resigned shortly before a 9 a.m. news conference scheduled by Joel Mashburn, the Iredell County manager.

Fleming, 50, is one of 14 county rescue squad and EMS officials who responded to a Sept. 4 tractor-trailer accident on Interstate-77 that broke up a Consolidated Freightways Inc. truck and threw truck cargo across the interstate.

Lawyer Arrested

RALEIGH (AP) — An attorney for Farmworkers Legal Services, a federally funded legal advocacy program that has represented migrant workers, was arrested Tuesday on charges that he deliberately struck a Johnston County farmer with his car, authorities say.

Stop Overflow

Temporary Jail Only Solution

Pitt County has nothing less than a crisis on its hands with a jail that is spilling over with inmates.

And right now, the only viable solution is to find suitable temporary quarters for the overflow and house inmates there until a more modern jail can be built. The county should not turn inmates away and allow lawbreakers to go free.

The problem is well-documented. The jail was built to house up to 83 inmates and it is averaging 25 over capacity regularly. The facility, built in the 1960s, is pitifully inadequate to handle the needs of a growing community.

Although the county is studying plans for construction of new jail facilities in master planning for other county office space needs, new facilities are still years away.

Superior Court Judge David Reid suggested in a meeting with the commissioners that identifying non-violent criminals and housing them in a temporary facility might be a way out. However, he said, with inmates who are a danger to themselves or others "you just can't turn them out."

The notion of not jailing even non-violent proven lawbreakers is a slap in the face of a strong justice system. Incarceration is the foundation of a punishment system. It protects the public and acts as a deterrent for criminals.

Since a new facility is not in sight temporary quarters must be provided. The most dangerous criminals necessarily must be housed in high security quarters. Others will have to be placed elsewhere.

Pitt County's predicament proves neither the county nor the state can allow construction of jail facilities to lag in the future. Without facilities inappropriate decisions are forced upon a county — decisions about who will serve the time and who will not. In that kind of situation justice is thwarted.

Care Crisis

Not Enough Family Physicians

Dr. Harry L. Metcalf, president of the American Academy of Family Physicians, sees a crisis in medical education and primary health care in the United States.

Metcalf, speaking here last week, said there is a dwindling supply of persons applying to medical schools in this country and those who graduate are too concentrated in medical and surgical subspecialties.

This will create future problems. If the drop in applicants continues some schools may have to be closed to maintain the physician quality. And while there are still too few family and other primary care physicians the subspecialties are becoming overcrowded. The answer to that may be reducing the residency positions for the subspecialties.

For whatever reason it is obvious that the family physician supply is not being replenished as older physicians retire. That was the reason for the establishment of the East Carolina University School of Medicine. There are still not enough family physicians and that is particularly true in eastern North Carolina where large areas often have no doctors.

It would seem that if medical school applicants are declining, incentives could be offered to entice qualified young people into family medicine. What comes to mind is forgiveness of tuition if the new doctors practice family medicine in rural areas for a set number of years.

There must be other ways to increase the supply of family doctors. It is the challenge of the next decade for the nation's health delivery system.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Your Sunday editorial comment titled "Vigilance" may have been an accurate assessment given from the point of view of a non-participating third party. But the idea at the Pitt County Board of Elections monitoring itself isn't practical from the standpoint of those of us who worked hard to win an election only to have its results nullified by sloppy and careless administrative procedures. Federal observers during the Oct. 11 runoff would ensure some degree of added trust in the process. What harm could that do? And, besides, why should voters put their total trust in our board after all that has been revealed about its handling of the previous election?

The comments in the editorial which discount the possibility of racial bias as a factor in the electoral process are predictable and difficult to refute. Racial bias, by its very nature is extremely hard to prove, even when clearly recognized.

In your previous editorials, support for a new election was made clear. I would have thought that any measures intended to ensure fairness in the new election, including federal observers, would attract your support as well. From the perspective of a participant, believe me, if ever federal observers were needed to help restore faith in local balloting, now is the time.

Committee to Elect D.D. Garrett County Commissioner

To the editor:

This is not meant to take anything away from Dr. William Laupus and the great job he has done for and with the East Carolina University Med School. I just think the facts should be set straight. In last week's article, Dr. Laupus was presented as the first dean of the med school, when in fact there were two deans prior to Dr. Laupus.

Dr. Wallace R. Wooles, presently chairman of the Department of Pharmacology, was the first dean, coming to ECU in 1970. After the legislature made ECU a four-year med school, Dr. Wooles stepped down as dean and Dr. Hal Wiggers served as dean until the coming of Dr. Laupus.

All these men, and many others, shared in the building of what the ECU Medical School is today.

To the editor:

Recently I read with great interest an article in your paper concerning a former New Jersey nun who fought for equal funding of all students in the public educational system. She fought the injustices and prejudices against the poorer schools and the less gifted students for seven long years and won!

As a part of the special educational system of Pitt County schools, I think it is time that we as educators, parents and concerned citizens took a deeper look at the educational needs of the exceptional child.

The programs that have been developed for these children look great on paper. However, in actual practicality, I.E.P.'s (individualized educational plans) are tailored to fit the needs and schedules of teachers and administrators, certainly not the child. These I.E.P.'s are frequently filed away, overlooked or in some cases, blatantly disregarded for a number of reasons.

Teachers in this area are often hired, not on the basis of knowledge, degree or experience, but on the basis of availability. A figurehead in the classroom; a name on a list, a vacancy filled!

Parents, if you have an exceptional child, find out all you can about the teacher's experience and the program's success-failure rate. You owe it to your child to make sure his/her educational needs are being met.

Not Remedial, Just Plain Dumb

BOSTON — I grew up in an era when the most profound political thought was: "I Like Ike." So I never expected a presidential campaign to be like a graduate class in good government.

But after the back-to-school week of the 1988 campaign, I know how teachers feel when they get some new and simpler set of textbooks. What we are witnessing is the "dumbing down" of politics.

Forgive me if I reject the polite school jargon. This campaign isn't "special," nor is it "remedial." Even simpleminded is too kind a word. It has become just plain dumb.

Consider what we've been taught so far. That civics is solely a matter of pledging allegiance to the flag. That history is a matter of opinion: One side can blame every problem on the Seventies, the other on the Eighties. That math is something to be manipulated: You can add to the budget and subtract from the deficit.

The Bush campaign has had a heavier hand in the dumbing down process. In Bush's class you don't have to be the brightest boy to be the teacher's pet. Danny Quayle was already proof of that. But now Bush, who cannot parse a sentence, and Quayle, who speaks in Germanic word order — "it is an issue that I have not spent thus far a great deal of time on" — are trying to reduce the campaign to a patriotic pop quiz.

As for history, the Vice President misplaces more than Pearl Harbor Day. His geography class has maps that put Brookline, Mass., in the Soviet Union and that cover up Iran. His best English compositions are by speechwriter Peggy Noonan.

This man wants to be the education President?

Dukakis for his part looks shell-shocked by this streak of silliness. But he, too, has been warned against sounding professorial. Instead he has sounded elementary: leading drills in the American dream and refrains about "good jobs at good wages."

In this long-term dumbing-down process, all the pictures get bigger while the texts get smaller. The 1988 presidential campaign is a cross between a comic strip and a video. Bush goes to Disney World; Dukakis to Ellis Island. Balloons abound. The analysts grade campaigns as if they were MTV awards: One point for Concept, another for Special Effects, a third for Choreography and the ultimate for Viewer's Choice.

Is there anyone to blame for such political sliding? Surely Reagan had a role. It was more than a slip of the tongue, when he told the GOP convention that "facts are stupid things." Reagan's campaigns convinced a generation of handlers that the most successful candidate is the one who says the least of substance.

Few of us thought that elections would (or could) actually deteriorate in the post-Gipper era. But this year, it is considered brave and downright risky when a candidate "goes specific."

In one way or another, everyone has played a part in the downward spiral. The media do not go into a "feeding flurry" over economics or disarmament. We do not dog the candidates in their driveways until they sweatily explain how they would reduce the deficit. The networks, geared to the attention span of Sesame Street viewers, are easily manipulated, even as they report on their manipulation.

As for the voters, we are told that the legions of advisers do not go broke underestimating them. Negative advertising works. If voters find it hard to sort out messages, they choose an image.

My hope is that this campaign has bottomed out. Surely, if the public were to raise hands, the question we would ask is: "how." How would the next President lower the deficit, live in peace, manage families and work, secure the future? Please give us more than a "sound bite" or a hint.

I wish I had more faith that an hour-long debate, or two of them, will answer these questions, satisfy the longing for real knowledge. But candidates care less about what we learn than how we rank them.

The next set of grades will be out in November. The most important news may not be which man passed and which failed, but how many more voters, once and for all, dropped out.

A Few N.C. AIDS Facts

RALEIGH — To this point, about 600 cases of AIDS have been reported in North Carolina. A year from today, that figure will probably be twice as high, and two years from today, four times as high.

The state's population of AIDS victims is doubling about every 13 months, according to statistics released by the state Division of Health Services. By Aug. 8, 1988, the latest date on which a count was conducted, there had been 598 cases reported in North Carolina.

Dr. Ron Levine, state health director, says that the most respected forecasts of the growth in the AIDS population call for a doubling every year for at least the next three or four years. The most optimistic projections say that at some point in the early 1990s, the number of AIDS patients will begin to level off. But the leveling off will occur at a number which may be eight or 16 or 32 times as great as today's figures.

Of the 598 cases reported before Aug. 8, 325 of the patients had already died. That's 54 percent.

Levine said that the profile of the North Carolina AIDS population mirrors the national population to a great extent, with one exception. Because blacks comprise a larger percentage of North Carolina's population than of the national population, the percentage of black AIDS patients in the state is well above that of the national average.

In North Carolina, 44 percent of the reported AIDS cases have been black. Nationally, Levine said, about one-fifth have been black.

Dr. Rebecca Merriwether, Levine's assistant, said North Carolina's AIDS population is also adapting another aspect of the national AIDS population. The percentage of intravenous drug users is growing rapidly.

Six months ago, she said, only 13 percent of North Carolina's AIDS cases could be traced back to IV drug users. By August, the percentage was up to 18. This is a national trend.

Characteristics of the AIDS population in North Carolina, according to a state report given to a legislative study commission, showed that 90 percent are male and that 87 percent of the afflicted range in age from 20 to 49 years. Of the 598 cases, 14, or slightly more than two percent, were children.

The adults in the state AIDS population were overwhelmingly homosexual or bisexual — 60 percent. This percentage is dropping, however, because the number of IV drug users is growing so rapidly. Levine hopes that the growth in the number of gays contracting AIDS will level off, as it has in San Francisco.

The rest of the state's AIDS cases have been comprised of hemophiliacs, four percent, heterosexual persons having sexual contact with other high risk people, five percent, and those receiving AIDS from a transfusion, four percent. The cause of three percent of the cases could not be determined.

AZT Subsidy Only Solution

Analysis

The definition of AIDS prevention is changing. In the past it referred only to efforts to slow the spread of the human immunodeficiency virus. Now, however, it also means slowing the progression of disease in people who are already infected with the virus. Like so many other parts of the epidemic, this, too, will be expensive. As recent experience with the drug AZT has shown, government has not yet made the decision that it must play a major role in prolonging quality life for many people who are ill in their most productive years.

Treatment to prevent AIDS in those who are already infected will involve at least three types of drugs: those (like AZT) that suppress the virus, others that will boost the immune system and those that prevent infections occurring in people with a severely compromised immune system. Hundreds of millions or even billions of dollars will be spent over the next several years on research to develop all three types of medication. Once they are developed, it is likely that patients will need all three for the rest of their lives.

If current assumptions are correct that most people who are infected will eventually develop a severely depressed immune system, then society will need to provide medications eventually to a million or more Americans. This need will be particularly critical because no other life-threatening disease affects so many people in their 20s, 30s and 40s.

The example of AZT, which is the only drug approved by the Food and Drug Administration as effective in prolonging life and relieving symptoms, demonstrates government's difficulty in grappling with the cost of AIDS drugs. President Reagan signed a one-time appropriation of $30 million in 1987 to subsidize the costs of AZT for people who could not afford it. The program applies to people who make too much money to be on Medicaid or who do not have health insurance that pays for the drug. It was made clear that this was a stopgap measure that would end Sept. 30, 1988.

However, since the bill was signed, neither Congress nor the states have made provisions to continue AZT for the 5,800 people nationwide who are receiving the drugs from this program. No provision has been made for the thousands more who will need it in the next year and the year after, although AZT will continue to be available for those who are eligible for Medicaid.

Both the states and the federal government appear to be waiting for the other to provide a long-term solution. It is likely to be far too expensive for the states to do more than provide a short extension of the current program. Long-term solutions must lie with the federal government.

Although the cost of AZT has been reduced in the past year, the cost at a typical pharmacy is still about $2.30 per pill, or about $10,000 per year per person. One drug that is being used to replace half the dose of AZT turns out to be just as expensive.

Since AZT prolongs life and helps people feel better, it might be considered the equivalent of insulin for diabetics. A better analogy would be to equate AIDS drugs with dialysis machines for people with kidney failure. In the 1970s the federal government recognized that chronic hemodialysis, which cost about $25,000 per year, was too expensive for most Americans. Thus it was decided to cover dialysis costs under Medicare — even for people with health insurance that would have paid for it. A similar decision for AIDS must be made because the problem of AZT is likely to be repeated and magnified as newer and better (and possibly more expensive) drugs become available.

It is widely recognized that no cure for AIDS is likely in this century. Nor is a vaccine likely to help those who are already infected. Thus AIDS, or more probably HIV infection, will need to be seen as a chronic, expensive disease. People with health insurance and coverage for drugs will be provided for, as will those who are or who will become impoverished. However, an estimated 37 million Americans have no health insurance, and millions of others have no drug coverage to make the cost of AIDS medications affordable should they become ill.

Thus we must solve two urgent problems: continuing the AZT program for those who are already enrolled and for the additional patients who will need it. Equally important is the need for a long-term solution, which will require federal government funding. Like the epidemic, the problem will not just go away.

If government does not accept this responsibility in funding AIDS drugs, we will be left with the availability of medication to keep people feeling well enough to work; the only way in which many will be able to obtain that medication would be to stop work, go on disability and become impoverished.

Neil Schram, an internist, is a member of the Los Angeles County Medical Association AIDS Committee.

The Label-Mongering Of George Bush

Vice President George Bush's major strategy is apparent: He's running against 1972 presidential candidate George McGovern. Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, he says, is "on the very very far liberal fringe."

While Bush's furious label-mongering has certainly produced short-term gains, can this tactic work? Especially after hearing Yalie Bush attack Dukakis for Harvard liberalism, I'd have to say that this bulldog won't hunt, for several reasons:

• McGovern wasn't the radical that Republicans claimed he was. It wasn't easy selling a bomber pilot and father of five from a conservative Midwestern state as an advocate of "acid, amnesty and abortion," but Republicans in 1972 had the advantages of the Tom Eagleton vice presidential fiasco, a divided Democratic Party, post-Vietnam angst and an incumbent President. In 1988, however, Republicans not only lack any comparable fiasco and angst, they are also opposed by an Eagle Scout who never marched on the Pentagon. It won't be easy for them to radicalize someone as culturally straight as Mr. Rogers.

• Bush periodically himself is campaigning as a semi-liberal. He has campaigned as a champion of child care, the environment, education, civil rights and ethics — a "Democratic" posture that discombobulates conservative columnist Bob Novak. Indeed, Bush's $1,000 tax rebate or federal check to families for child care is positively, well, McGovernish. How long can Bush get away with running down what he's running on?

• If Dukakis is for "big government and big spending," what can you say about Reagan-Bush? A new definition of chutzpah is for Bush to attack a budget-balancer like Dukakis when federal spending as a percentage of the gross national product rose from Jimmy Carter to Reagan-Bush and when the latter accumulated more red ink in eight years than all their predecessors combined in two centuries. Nor was this the fault of a Democratic Congress, since Reagan-Bush's proposed budgets exceeded those that Congress passed.

Nor does Dukakis propose statist, expensive solutions. His constant advocacy of public-private partnerships reveals an activist who wants government to do more and be less — as in be more efficient.

Also, at the important level of imagery, how do you sell the frugal owner of a 25-year-old snow blower as the last of the big-time spenders?

• Where are the "special interests" that Bush says are holding Dukakis captive? Dukakis accepted no special-interest money from political-action committees. So the governor can persuasively argue that he captured the nomination with no strings attached. (Recall who did promise to name a Latino to the Cabinet and who has never told an audience what it didn't want to hear. Hint: Reagan's vice president.)

• Is Dukakis "unpatriotic" because he vetoed a compulsory Pledge of Allegiance measure? A nominee who served two years in Korea need not feel defensive about patriotism. Eventually, perhaps during their scheduled debates, the vice president will have to answer a question: "Would you pledge allegiance to the Constitution, which the U.S. Supreme Court says forbids government from making any American say something contrary to his religious beliefs?"

• If Dukakis is "soft on crime," why is there less of it in Massachusetts? The Republicans have been and will be running against Willie Horton, the furloughed murderer who didn't come back. But since exactly 99.6 percent did come back, and since furloughed prisoners have half the recidivist rate of others when finally released, Dukakis' furlough program clearly resulted in less crime. Indeed, crime in Massachusetts fell 13.4 percent in the last four years while the national rate has gone up.

• Is Dukakis another "gloom and doom" Democrat? Not according to one-time GOP presidential candidate Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y. After listening to Dukakis' relentless speeches about economic growth and opportunity, Kemp acknowledged that "Michael Dukakis doesn't sound at all like Jimmy Carter. He talks about an economic miracle, not economic malaise."

• Is he a "unilateral disarmament"? It's true that Dukakis believes in complying with international treaties and advocates greater collaboration with our allies. What a relief after Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's and Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams' cowboy recklessness!

Eventually it should not be difficult for Dukakis to observe that wasting money on weapons that don't work (the B-1, SDI) is itself a form of unilateral disarmament, while the weapons that he advocates (the Trident D-5 missile, the stealth bomber) strengthen America's national security.

I can understand the frustrations of a Pat Buchanan, a prominent conservative commentator and liberal-baiter, that Dukakis doesn't use, and doesn't get tainted by, "the L word." Pat and his party have worked overtime for the past eight years to create a liberal bogymen-strawman bearing no resemblance to reality, and now they're angry that the Democratic nominee won't accept their caricature.

Watching Bush is like listening to an aging soprano reach for the high notes that are no longer there. "We're going to spend all our energies trying to make Dukakis out to be another George McGovern," confided one Bush adviser in a not-for-attribution comment to Business Week. "The trouble is, he isn't."

Faithful Wait, And Wait Again, For Rapture To Come

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The prediction of the "Rapture," or prelude to the second coming of Christ, was half right and half wrong, some Pentacostalists and fundamentalists say.

While a Biblical scholar predicted that believers would not rethink their trust in the theory, the believers proved him right. They conceded that the time was wrong, but said the Rapture still would occur — and could happen at any time.

"We believe in the rapture, but the Bible says no man knoweth the day nor the hour," Bill Raby said Tuesday night while swaying to the gospel music at the Crusade on the Green in Asheville. The three-day event was not planned for the Rapture, Raby said.

More than 100 people were listening to the preaching and singing about an hour after sundown. Mention of the Rapture brought smiles, some of skepticism and some of joy.

The Rapture was predicted by Edgar Whisenant, a 56-year-old Little Rock, Ark. resident, retired NASA rocket engineer and self-taught Bible student who had said Jesus would "rapture the church" — take the faithful to heaven — by sunset Tuesday.

He changed his prediction Tuesday, setting the final hour for 9:55 a.m. CDT today. Whisenant's original predictions were made in his book "88 Reasons Why The Rapture Will Be In 1988."

About 1 million copies of the copyrighted book have been circulated throughout the nation, two-thirds sold for $2, the rest given away, said the Rev. Bob Doom, who runs a Christian bookstore in Asheville and is pastor of Grace Fellowship Baptist Church, a "Bible-believing fundamentalist church."

"Why copyright the book if you won't be here to get the royalties?" Doom asked.

Doom, who also does some publishing, said the book was printed on poor quality paper with a low-cost cover. Publishing costs must have been low — maybe a dime or 15 cents.

"Most folks who have some sort of thorough knowledge of the Scripture just sort of laughed at the thing," he said. Whisenant's premise is "interesting," he said, "but he's got a mixture of truth and error."

A Duke University theologian said even if the event doesn't happen soon, believers won't give up.

"I don't expect it to go away. Every time they predict and it doesn't come to pass... they don't get embarrassed by that. They just reload. And they say 'We miscalculated,'" said James Efirid, professor of biblical interpretation at Duke's Divinity School.

"In other words, a true believer doesn't give up just because there's been a disappointment, and these people, I fearlessly predict, will go on predicting," Efirid said.

Efirid said predictions pinpointing the time of the Rapture cause a stir every couple of years.

"They've all come to naught. Most of these predictions are based on a system of interpretation based on faulty presuppositions," Efirid said.

He said the system used by Whisenant and others dates back to 1829, when Irish minister John Nelson Darby began predicting the end of the world.

"A lot of people are turned off from Christianity and biblical study and responsible religion because of these kind of sensational predictions... It keeps people away from studying the Bible," he said.

Rapture Wait Prompts 30-Hour Standoff

GIBSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An armed Guilford County man who had barricaded himself in a house for more than 30 hours after being told that the world was coming to an end was apprehended without incident early today, officials said.

Ricky Odell Chavis, 27, was apprehended after negotiators from the State Bureau of Investigation got him to step outside the back door of the house shortly after 2 a.m. today, said Gibsonville police dispatcher Susan Garinger.

Officers from the Guilford County sheriff's department then threw concussion grenades at Chavis, stunning him, Ms. Garinger said.

"No one was hurt," said Sgt. David Powell of the Guilford County sheriff's department. "(Chavis) had fired one shot (Tuesday night), in the house, but not at our officers."

Chavis was charged with two counts of assault on a police officer with a deadly weapon and with one county of going armed to the terror of the public, Powell said.

The standoff began about 6 p.m. Monday. On Tuesday, police snipers were posted on the roof of a nearby building and behind the wall of an adjacent car wash, and surrounding businesses were evacuated. Almost every street in downtown Gibsonville was blocked, at least partially, with dozens of neighbors watching from their por-

"He was messed up real bad on religion," said Chavis' aunt, Joy Cassell, one of dozens of on lookers following the marathon standoff from a vantage point about 200 yards from Chavis' house.

Ms. Cassell said two door-to-door missionaries for the Jehovah's Witness sect apparently convinced her nephew he needed to "get right" because Tuesday would be the day that God called all the righteous to heaven and left the secular world to warring non-believers.

Edgar Whisenant, an Arkansas evangelist, predicted that the faithful would be called to heaven on Tuesday in his book, "88 Reasons Why The Rapture Will Be In 1988."

On Tuesday, he changed his prediction to 10:55 a.m. today.

The standoff began shortly after Chavis reportedly entered a food store adjacent to his home and took a 12-pack of beer without paying for it. He fired a handgun several times in the air as he exited the store.

Morris McPherson, Gibsonville's police chief, said Chavis fled to a nearby wooded area, firing more shots before making it back to his house.

When McPherson and a colleague, Elon College Police Chief Dan Ingle, tried to apprehend Chavis, he fired on them and passing motorists from the house, McPherson said.

IRS Auditor Says No Business Basis Found For PTL Spending

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — An IRS agent says he could find no documentation to prove a legitimate business purpose for a personal 300-foot water slide, two Rolls Royce automobiles and hundreds of thousands of dollars that Jim and Tammy Bakker and a key aide got through PTL accounts.

Larry Howlett, an auditor of tax-exempt organizations, was the second witness Tuesday in the trial of PTL's $52 million claim against the Bakkers and former PTL aide David Taggart. The trial began Monday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

PTL attorneys are seeking to force the Bakkers and Taggart to repay the money they say was lost through through mismanagement of funds that included cash advances on PTL credit cards and unjustified compensation and benefits.

Howlett listed among the expenditures with no legitimate business purpose a 300-foot water slide at Bakker's Lake Wylie home, which has since been sold, and $32,000 worth of luggage.

Howlett also said the IRS could find no documentation to support the business purpose of some $300,000 in cash advances made to Bakker and Taggart between 1984 and 1986.

"There was no back-up documentation for any of the cash advances, none of them," Howlett said.

"We tried to evaluate the business nature of these items, but we could not determine any business purpose," Howlett said.

Howlett also testified that records show neither Bakker nor Taggart attempted to reimburse the ministry for money taken from three executive accounts.

The PTL television ministry and Heritage USA theme park at Fort Mill filed for reorganization in bankruptcy court in June 1987, three months after Bakker left the ministry amid a sex and money scandal involving church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Earlier Tuesday, a former PTL accountant said he was frustrated that Bakker and other top ministry executives continually ignored his memos warning that the ministry financially was facing "real emergencies."

Peter Bailey, who was an accountant and financial director at PTL from June 1979 through July 1987, also testified that top executives received bonuses in anticipation of money coming into the ministry's coffers, but that there was often no money in the bank to cover those bonuses.

Radon Threat Minimal In N.C.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — About 10 percent of North Carolina homes may have excessive levels of radon, a radioactive gas that can cause cancer, state officials say.

The highest percentage occurs in the mountains, where granite that contains uranium-producing radon lies near the surface of the ground.

The state's top radiation official, Dayne Brown, said about 25 percent of the homes sampled in the mountains exceeded the federal health standard of 4 picocuries per liter. Brown said the highest reading he recalled was between 45 and 50 picocuries.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reported Monday that 29 percent of the 15 million homes surveyed last winter in seven states and on Indian land in two more states exceeded the agency's acceptable standard of 4 picocuries per liter.

But the Radiation Protection Section in the N.C. Department of Human Resources conducted a survey of 500 homes in the state last year and found the radon problem does not appear to be as severe as in other parts of the country, said Mel Fry, deputy chief of the Radiation Protection Section of the N.C. Department of Human Resources.

Brown, who is chief of the N.C. radiation protection section in Raleigh, said surveys have shown that high radon levels are associated with houses that have a basement, have baseboard heating that doesn't allow for air exchanges and are well-insulated.

He said homeowners can lower radon levels in their houses by opening windows on mild days and by sealing cracks in concrete and holes around pipes with a special caulk.

Meanwhile, officials at the EPA in Research Triangle Park said they were inundated Tuesday with telephone calls from North Carolina residents concerned about radon.

"We've been swamped. The phone has not stopped," said Deborah Janes, an EPA spokeswoman in the Research Triangle Park.

Ms. Janes said the EPA is recommending that homeowners test their homes for radon with an inexpensive testing device. If elevated levels are found, more comprehensive followup tests that measure the average annual radon exposure should be done before expensive remedial measures are taken, she said.

The gas, which can't be seen, felt or smelled, occurs naturally by the breakdown of uranium, which is radioactive.

While the federal government determines the danger of radon gas mostly on studies of uranium miners rather than homeowners, officials are convinced that the problem is serious.

Grand Jury Studies Hatcher's Absence

By The Associated Press
A federal grand jury in Fayetteville is investigating the whereabouts of Eddie Hatcher, who failed to surrender two weeks ago after a federal appeals court repealed his bail on hostage-taking charges, officials say.

"It's my understanding that the grand jury is investigating anyone with knowledge of Mr. Hatcher and his whereabouts," said Marshal Bill Berryhill. "It's pretty much an investigative grand jury looking into Mr. Hatcher's status as a fugitive and how it came about."

Dale McKinley, a student activist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said he and three Robeson County residents were questioned Tuesday before the grand jury. McKinley, who met with Hatcher on the UNC-Chapel Hill campus before Hatcher disappeared, said he and the others did not know where Hatcher was.

"I think the whole exercise that the grand jury did today (Tuesday) was basically based on hearsay," McKinley told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "In all four of our situations, it was ridiculous to put us through what they did."

McKinley said FBI agents and federal marshals had staked out his house and had followed him in a car earlier this month.

McKinley said he had been questioned before the grand jury by Assistant U.S. Attorney John Stuart Bruce, who is prosecuting Hatcher and Jacobs. Bruce declined to discuss the grand jury proceedings.

Hatcher, 30, and Timothy Bryan Jacobs, 20, are charged with taking up to 20 hostages at The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton Feb. 1. Both men also face federal weapons charges. Jacobs surrendered Aug. 31 and is scheduled to go on trial Sept. 26.

Hatcher and Jacobs were ordered to surrender after the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., reinstated a lower court order requiring them to be held without bail until the appeals court decides whether they were detained properly in the first place. They had been jailed without bail after the hostage siege until they were released July 5.

U.S. District Judge Terrence Boyle, who is scheduled to preside at the trial, denied a motion Tuesday by Jacobs' lawyers for Jacobs' release pending trial.

Berryhill said he thought Hatcher was being "hidden away someplace."

"We continue to feel that Mr. Hatcher is being purposefully hidden until some decision is made as to when it would behoove him to reappear with appropriate fanfare," Berryhill said.

"I don't consider that he is in flight, as you would think the normal textbook fugitive is," he said. "In normal fugitive cases there are sightings. There is a constant flow of information into law enforcement from informants, from people who have had contact with him, from attempts to buy or steal transportation."

"In this day and time, it is very, very difficult for a human being to disappear off the face of the Earth without some assistance, and that is literally what Mr. Hatcher has done," Berryhill said.

Meanwhile, a 28-year-old construction worker from Robeson County said he was detained early Saturday by gun-wielding officers who mistook him for Hatcher.

Lesley Manuel Dial, 28, said he was driving his father's Cadillac with a friend at 2 a.m. when he was stopped by officers in the Prospect community.

"They said, 'All right, Eddie Hatcher, pull over. Get out of the car with your hands up. You're under arrest,'" Dial told The Fayetteville Times on Tuesday.

Wet, Calm Weather Brings Relief For Firefighters

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

Firefighters battling Western blazes got a helping hand from weather so cool and wet that a crew was pulled out of a wilderness near Yellowstone National Park for fear they'd be trapped by snow.

"Things are real calm," said park spokesman Greg Kroll. "We've had some pretty good precipitation."

Fires also burned in California, Utah, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Alaska and Washington state as the worst fire season in 30 years continued.

Calmer 5-7 mph winds, lower temperatures and higher humidity were a blessing to California's Gold Rush country, where a fire that has burned 52 square miles since Sunday has destroyed 97 homes and 60 other buildings.

The thousands of residents evacuated Sunday or Monday were allowed to return to their homes.

"As far as I know, we have allowed everyone who wants to return home to do so," state Department of Forestry spokesman Steve Iverson said Tuesday.

But some of the 8,000 residents evacuated had little or nothing to return to in the charred foothills of the Sierra Nevada northeast of Sacramento.

Preliminary damage estimates were set at about $9 million, but authorities expected the figure to climb.

Officials also prepared today to begin relieving some of the 2,800 firefighters who have battled the fire, which consumed more than 52 square miles of timber and brush or 33,500 acres since it was started Sunday.

"If it holds through the night, we'll consider releasing some people," said Iverson, the planning chief for the firefighting force.

About 30,000 firefighters were battling 32 fires in eight Western states, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. President Reagan received a briefing Tuesday from a Cabinet-level team that toured Yellowstone.

As of Tuesday, wildfires had charred 4,104,000 acres, an area larger than Connecticut, according to the Boise Interagency Fire Center, which coordinates firefighting in the West.

At Yellowstone, officials kept an eye on the weather. Rain continued falling Tuesday in parts of the oldest national park. Today's forecast held a slight chance of showers, but called for a return of summer temperatures and more wind, said Kroll.

"The fires are still a threat, we are not out of it yet," said fire information officer Sonya Capek.

Firefighters used the break to strengthen lines. Meanwhile, about 550 Marines from Camp Pendleton, Calif., the first of 1,200 sent to reinforce the 7,200 firefighters in the park, arrived in West Yellowstone, Mont.

The weather was so cool officials began distributing cold-weather gear donated by residents of Wyoming communities. Few firefighters had been prepared for the cold and wet.

In the Bridger-Teton National Forest southeast of the park, a 38,507-acre fire was declared contained and a 225,500-acre complex of fires was 85 percent contained with full containment expected by Thursday.

North of the park, a 93,000-acre fire that threatened Cooke City and Silver Gate was declared 90 percent contained with complete containment expected by Saturday.

A crew was pulled out of the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness north of the park, said fire information officer Ted Coffman.

"We were afraid if we put a crew in there we might not be able to get them out if it snowed," Coffman said.

At Glacier National Park in Montana near the Canadian border, 1,300 firefighters joined by a Canadian "hot-shot" crew had a 31,500-acre blaze 30 percent contained. The fire has destroyed 21 homes, killed one firefighter and injured six others.

"We're working maximum effort and the next couple of days are important to us," said fire information officer Ted Coffman.

Fires have blackened 939,270 acres of the 2.2 million-acre park. Blazes in national forests and parks surrounding Yellowstone in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho bring the total to 1.4 million acres.

officer Jim Payne.

Firefighters were to be joined today by 1,400 Army soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash.

Elsewhere in Montana, 1,100 firefighters attacked a 247,000-acre fire north of Helena, crews demobilized from a fire in the far northwest part of the state and rehabilitation work began near Cooke City and Silver Gate north of Yellowstone.

Controversy has surrounded the Yellowstone fires because of the Park Service policy of not fighting most naturally-caused blazes.

Reagan said Tuesday he had not been aware of the policy, but said Interior Secretary Donald Hodel told him it was being withdrawn.

Colorado Gov. Roy Romer said Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis would join him, Wyoming Gov. Mike Sullivan, Montana Gov. Ted Schwinden and Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus on Thursday to survey fire damage in Yellowstone and discuss policy.

House To Vote On Pesticide Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm lawmakers are moving to impose an eight-year deadline for the completion of safety research on hundreds of chemicals that are used to protect crops from damaging pests.

The plan, aimed at toughening federal regulation because of growing concern about potential health hazards, won House Agriculture Committee approval Tuesday on a voice vote and now heads to the House floor.

Under the legislation, the Environmental Protection Agency would have eight years to complete its safety reviews of hundreds of pesticides.

The agency, working under no deadline, has been finishing reviews of about two dozen chemicals a year since the mid-1970s when it took over the job from the Agriculture Department.

The legislation also would largely end government payments to chemical companies to buy up supplies of recalled pesticides. Such payments have totaled $20 million so far.

Group Says Teacher Supply Good

WASHINGTON (AP) — An independent education group says its survey of American schools and education officials indicates there is no shortage of qualified teachers despite frequent talk to the contrary.

"The facts are that there is no teacher shortage," C. Emily Feistritz of the National Center for Education Information said Tuesday.

She said the group's "Teacher Supply and Demand Surveys 1988" report shows that not only is the alleged teacher shortage unsubstantiated, the teaching market was glutted, with some school districts maintaining large applicant lists.

The center's surveys, conducted June 28-Aug. 28, were directed at teacher certification and education offices across the nation, 75 school districts, and more than 1,000 individuals who had been seeking teaching jobs.

The National Education Association disputed the results, with NEA spokesman Howard Carroll saying past NEA surveys indicated that vacancies reported during the summer months usually were not filled by new full-time hires in September.

"These school districts say they hired temporaries, or substitutes, reassigned teachers' aides, misassigned teachers, eliminate or reduce course offerings," he said. "We generally find that 20 percent of the schools will increase class size."

"This is merely a smokescreen to mask the hiring of temporaries and uncertified teachers," he said.

Feistritz said the state boards maintained that all their teachers were certified and noted that many had a policy of placing all new hires on a probationary or temporary status.

She acknowledged that the surveys found a shortage in bilingual and special education teachers, but ascribed the outcry over a teacher shortage partly to political considerations.

NBC Will Carry Presidential Debate Live

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC will carry the first presidential debate live, reversing an earlier decision and taking a potential $8 million loss when it interrupts its prime-time coverage of the Summer Olympics.

NBC President Robert C. Wright said Tuesday the change was made because "there is no more important news story than selecting the 40th president of the United States."

ABC and CBS have already said they would carry the Sept. 25 debate live.

NBC had said last week when the date of the first debate between Vice President George Bush and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis was announced that it would carry the debate on a tape-delayed basis rather than interrupt the Olympics.

On Tuesday, Wright issued a statement saying NBC would interrupt the Olympics for 90 minutes for the debate, then return to Seoul, bringing viewers up to date and resume live coverage of the Olympics.

Drifter Was Haunted By My Lai Massacre

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A drifter found dead 1½ weeks ago following an argument with his girlfriend over a bottle of vodka was haunted by his role in the My Lai massacre during the Vietnam War, relatives say.

"He actually was a casualty of the war," said Rebecca T'Souvas, estranged wife of Robert W. T'Souvas. "He had such problems from what was wrong in Vietnam. Nothing was ever right for him."

"He was just a weak person," she said. "I'm sure it was because of Vietnam and because of what he had to endure there. But he was a gentle man and a very good person when he was not under the influence."

Robert T'Souvas, 39, was shot to death Sept. 3 beneath the Smithfield Street Bridge in downtown Pittsburgh.

His girlfriend, Kathlynn T'Souvas, 36, who took his last name even though he never divorced Rebecca T'Souvas, has been charged with criminal homicide and is being held without bail at the Allegheny County Jail. A coroner's inquest is scheduled for Thursday.

Army Spec. 4 T'Souvas, then 19 and a high school dropout in San Jose, was a member of one of three platoons that entered the village of My Lai on March 16, 1968, where, he told an Army hearing in 1970, he saw about 30 bodies, "old men, women and children."

"On the way out, T'Souvas saw two small children lying in the road with their intestines hanging out," said his attorney, George T. Davis of Mauna Lani, Hawaii. "In an emotional reaction, he took his M-16 and killed both to put them out of their misery."

The Army charged T'Souvas with premeditated murder of two unidentified Vietnamese with a machine gun. He was one of nine enlisted men charged in the massacre, in which more than 100 civilians were killed.

After two soldiers were acquitted at courts-martial, charges against T'Souvas and the six others were dropped. All were given honorable discharges.

Army Lt. William Calley was convicted of killing at least 22 civilians at My Lai. President Richard Nixon reduced Calley's life prison sentence to 20 years. Calley served three years under house arrest at Fort Benning, Ga. He was released when his conviction was overturned by a federal district judge, and he was not returned to house arrest when an appeals court reinstated the conviction.

While awaiting trial at Fort McPherson, Ga., T'Souvas lived in an Atlanta hippie commune, where he met his wife, according to family members. Both later spent time in jail on marijuana charges before they moved to California, the relatives said.

They raised two children and T'Souvas worked in a bakery and at various jobs before their marriage broke up, Lynn T'Souvas, an aunt, said.

About four years ago, he met Kathlynn, a carnival worker. "She liked alcohol and was his drinking companion," said his father, William T'Souvas, of San Jose, Calif.

Police said the couple's trailer burned down and they left California in August 1987 for Pittsburgh, where T'Souvas hoped for a construction job.

Police said Kathlynn's diary showed they lived in the van, often parking it near Three Rivers Stadium, as they fished in the rivers, sold their blood for money and worked part-time in a food kitchen for the unemployed and the homeless.

After the van broke down this summer, they built a makeshift shelter on the banks of the Monongahela River, police said.

On Sept. 3, police said, the T'Souvases and another homeless man, David Bozic, 42, spent the day drinking, fishing and using Bozic's .22-caliber pistol to shoot rats and cans under the bridge.

While Bozic went to get food, police said the couple argued over a bottle of vodka T'Souvas held between his legs. Police said the woman took Bozic's gun and shot T'Souvas once in the head.

William T'Souvas said he last talked to his son a few days before the shooting.

"I just tried to tell him to put it together and come home," he said. "I sent him some money, but he never came."

Reagan Says Strong Economy Continuing

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP) — President Reagan, on a political trip for his vice president George Bush, declared today that the national economy is strong and "what we have seen in the last eight years is only the beginning."

"We intend to ensure this kind of economic prosperity right through the '90s and into the next century by guaranteeing the federal government can never again spend and tax the American people into another economic nightmare," Reagan said.

The president's remarks were prepared for delivery at a Republican rally at Southeast Missouri State University in this Mississippi River shipping center.

He was to speak later in the day to an expected crowd of 1,000 at a $250-a-plate GOP fund-raising dinner in St. Louis.

In his Cape Girardeau speech, Reagan said children born today "will know the brightest future the world has ever seen."

"That bright future is also yours," he told his audience. "It is your birthright as Americans, and what we have seen in the last eight years is only the beginning."

The national economy has been expanding for more than five years following the steep recession that marked Reagan's first two years in office.

"Ultimately, the choice before the American people is the choice between two visions," he said. "It is the choice between the policies of liberalism or the policies of America's political mainstream."

The president, a former Democrat, said that party's "liberal leadership ... has turned a once proud party of hope and affirmation into one dominated by strident liberalism and negativism."

"The truth is that when you take a walk down our opposition's memory lane, it starts to look like a 'Nightmare on Elm Street.' If you want to remember how things really were just a few years back, think of the year 1979," he said.

"In that one year, Iran, Nicaragua and Grenada were all lost. That was the year 1979. Don't we have the right to ask the American people: If the liberals return to power, what happens in 1989?"

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in advance of the trip that Reagan would be giving "traditional political speeches" trying to win support for the Republican ticket of Bush and Dan Quayle.

Cancer Society Names Officers

Harvey Sharp Wooten was installed as president of the Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society Tuesday night.

Other officers installed during the annual awards meeting were Dr. Albert Wiley, first vice president, John West, second vice president, Jeannette Waters, treasurer, and Ernestine Haselrig, secretary. Installing officers were Barbara and Jim Woods.

Keith Norwood, crusade chairman for the Beaufort County Unit of the ACS, was keynote speaker. He told of positives and negatives, goal setting and motivation for crusades.

Highlights of the evening were the presentation of awards. Frances Young of Bethel received the Silver Bowl Award while the Sword of Hope Award went to Betty Sue Forest. Quality of Life Awards were presented to Craig Bruno and Nancy Smith. A new award, Life Saves Award, was given to Melissa Minter.

Rose Richards, director of the Pitt County unit, presented the Volunteer of the Year Award to Ms. Wooten and Ms. Young, co-winners.

Special recognition was given to Mrs. Richards for her work with the American Cancer Society.

A reception was held honoring the outgoing and incoming officers.

Pactolus; Jenny Louy Strickland, Swift Creek; Joan Hooks, Winterville, and Jo Saunders, Greenville.

MEATS WITH FAT
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are cutting away more fat from their red meats.

In 1979, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau, the average American household cut away about 3.5 grams of fat a day. In 1985, that figure rose to 7.5 grams.

Orchids To Hubbies For Wife Support

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for Wayne Gretzky, the world's No. 1 hockey star! He left the Edmonton Oilers to join the Los Angeles Kings because his bride's movie career would be jeopardized if she left Hollywood for Canada.

Gretzky's move has special significance for me because my husband did the same thing for me 16 years ago, when I was an energetic young executive employed by a large national organization with offices in every major city in the country. I was offered a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity that would necessitate moving from Los Angeles to New York. My husband was doing well at the time with a California law firm. I didn't even have to ask him. He offered to move to New York to further my business career! The word "wimp" was not even in the language then, but he was called "weak," and a few other things that are not printable.

As it turned out, it was a great move for both of us. I'm sure this is not so unusual today, but 16 years ago, it took a real man to subordinate his career to his wife's. — MARILYN IN N.Y.C.

DEAR MARILYN: Orchids to your husband. Coincidentally, 16 years ago another young lawyer, James Schroeder, uprooted himself (from Denver) to follow his wife to Washington, D.C., when she was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives. It also turned out to be a great move for both of them. I agree, it takes a strong, unselfish man to put his wife's career ahead of his own. Lucky Patricia Schroeder!

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow (age 70) living alone in a remote part of Florida. I recently made a trip to Germany, my native country, after many years. Naturally, I visited relatives and friends. I stayed one week with a close girlhood friend — the mother of three grown children. She was very good to me and knows that she is welcome here at any time.

Well, she has written to tell me that her 25-year-old unmarried son, whom I met for just a few minutes, is coming to America to stay for several months. She informed me that she had given him my address and phone number, and I should "expect" him.

Abby, I know that he was well-raised, but I am old-fashioned and the thought of having this young man as a guest for several months is not pleasing to me.

What shall I do? — OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: I think you should write to this "close girlhood friend" and tell her quite honestly what you have told me, that you would not be comfortable having her son stay with you for several months. Offer to put him up for a week until he can make other arrangements.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a business executive, but every once in a while he will make a grammatical error, so I correct him. He blows up like you wouldn't believe and doesn't speak to me until the next day.

Should I just let it go when he makes mistakes in grammar? I only want to help him and he knows it, but he can't take any kind of criticism. Please tell me how to handle this. — MEANS WELL

DEAR MEANS WELL: I hope you do not correct him in the presence of others. If you do, he can't be blamed for reacting in a hostile manner.

When he's in a good mood, have a heart-to-heart talk with him. Tell him you love him and ask him if he wants to be corrected (privately, of course) when he makes a mistake in grammar. If he doesn't, bite your tongue and let it go.

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

State President Is Key Speaker

The Patient Circle of the International Order of the Kings Daughters and Sons held its meeting last week. Margaret Highfill, state president, was keynote speaker.

She told of the international convention which was held in Savannah, Ga. She commended the order on accomplishments in various departments. The circle continues to assist young people in the departments of student ministry and health careers.

Mrs. Highfill announced the N.C. branch convention will be held in Greenville Oct. 1.

A devotional on righteous living was presented by the Rev. Dan Earnhardt.

Kemp Baldwin and Frances Riddick were guests for the meeting. Dr. Lois Staton, local circle president, recognized Phoebe Owens, Carmen Albea and Edie Baker as new members.

The meeting hostess was Mrs. Luther Moore.

Jealousy May Be Positive, If Kept In Check

By LARRY ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Getting in touch with your feelings and thinking positively about yourself are fine, but the best way to stave off the pangs of jealousy are to just get on with your life, two psychologists say.

A positive attitude about yourself, or self-boasting, seems to be the best way to prevent the depression that could follow jealousy, but doesn't do much to much to keep away envy or jealousy itself, the researchers say.

"We like to think getting in touch with your feelings is a good thing, that exploring how you feel will make you feel better," said Peter Salovey, a Yale University assistant professor of psychology. "But we found that strategy actually made you feel worse in jealousy-producing situations."

Those who are jealous of others' success may long to curl up with a bowl of ice cream while recalling every word of praise ever uttered by family, friends and acquaintances, but that doesn't help, said Salovey, who has studied jealousy for five years with Yale professor Judith Rodin.

"Ignoring your feelings and getting on with your daily work and striving even harder ... for what you want works better," Salovey said.

A third coping strategy, selective ignoring, works in the short run by invoking the attitude, "it's not so important to me anymore," he said. "But I suppose there is a limit to how many times you can do that. Nothing is going to be important to you ... if you employ it all the time."

Salovey and Rodin asked 95 Yale undergraduates in 1986-87 to rate the frequency of jealousy-provoking situations involving school, family, friends and romance, how jealous they felt and how they coped. Their research will be published in the fall issue of the Journal of Social and Clinical Psychology.

Jealousy is the worry that something you have will be lost to someone, and envy is wanting something someone else has. "To the extent they do not run your life, they may be healthy and helpful," Salovey said.

"They are negative in what people is often a lot of anger, sadness and occasionally fear. But in the sense they can also help enrich our lives by letting us now what is important to us, that's not so negative."

Lacy Pattern Offers Sweater Or Vest

This lovely knit is ideal for welcoming fall. The softness of the fluffy acrylic yarn is enhanced by the easy leaf stitch. A versatile pattern offers directions for a vest or a sweater, with approximate finished bust measurements of 35, 40 and 45 for small, medium and large respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Lacy Impression Sweater Pattern, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-091188 with $2 and a long self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo., 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-091188 by sending check or money order for $18.95 for the sweater and $11.95 for the vest to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of violet, magenta or teal.

Dear Readers: A couple of months ago, I gave directions for making knit or crochet pincushions. Soon mail began to arrive with patterns from readers. Some were too involved to use in the column, but the following ones will, I think, appeal to many of you.

Dorothy Zahn of Brick, N.J., makes jiffy-quick knitted pincushions from the following directions. She uses Size 7 needles with worsted yarn. Four separate pieces are made, and each can be a different color. This not only adds visual appeal, but also is a great way to use up leftover yarns!

For each piece, cast on 15 stitches and work in garter stitch (knit every row.) After binding off on each piece, leave about 5 or 6 inches or yarn to use for sewing the ends together. For the first piece, with color A, knit until you have 7 ridges; knit one more row and bind off. For the second piece, with color B, knit until you have 12 ridges; knit one more row and bind off.

For the third piece, with color C, knit until you have 23 ridges; knit one more row and bind off. For the fourth piece, with color D, knit until you have 30 ridges and bind off.

Treating each piece separately, sew the cast-on and bound-off edges together forming a tube. Next, fold each piece so that the edges of each are together. When all four circles are completed, put one inside the other with the smallest on the inside and the largest on the outside, and — presto! — you have a decorative pincushion.

Mildred Irwin, from the Rocky Mountain area of Colorado, sent a crocheted pincushion that looks like an old-fashioned garden party hat worked in lavender and white.

To make one with worsted-weight yarn, start with a chain of 85 stitches. Work one row single crochet, one row double crochet and one row single crochet.

LACY CREATION

Before working the next row, mark a stitch approximately 8 inches from the end. For the brim, along this 8-inch edge, work a row of single crochet, increasing one in every other stitch. Work back across the brim edge with a row of double crochet, again increasing one in every other stitch. With a contrasting color, single crochet around all edges of strip and brim. Fasten off.

Starting at the narrow strip end, roll the strip until the two edges of the brim meet. Now you can finally see the hat take shape, complete with a crown and a brim. Thread a tapestry needle with a strand of each yarn and make a row of long stitches between the crown and the brim. Leave about 6 inches of yarn free at each end.

Pull up slightly on the ends of yarn and tie a saucy bow. Use the crown of the hat.

Yearly Plans Told At Meet

FARMVILLE — Plans for the year were outlined at the meeting of the Major Benjamin May chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution Saturday.

Mrs. Charles Carr, regent, said plans include preparation of a downtown window for Constitution Week, assisting the CAR with a yard sale and consideration of a spring bridge benefit.

Elizabeth Lang reported on Tamasee School, which is sponsored by DAR. The school dining hall was destroyed by fire and the chapter will contribute to the replacement.

Ann Holland gave the national defense report and the devotional was given by Mrs. E.P. Bass.

Engagement Announced

Bishop and Mrs. W.H. Mitchell of Winterville announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, to Ronnie Finch, son of Ruth Finch of Kenly. The wedding will take place Oct. 1.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rolled up a broad gain today, responding to better-than-expected news on international trade.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 12.27 to 2,095.31 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 7 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 774 up, 217 down and 446 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 32.10 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Commerce Department reported this morning that the nation's trade deficit shrank to $9.53 billion in July from a revised gap of $13.22 billion the month before.

The dollar rose in foreign exchange following the trade report, and interest rates fell in the credit markets.

Among actively traded blue chips, Merck rose 3/8 to 58 1/8; Exxon 1/4 to 45 1/8; Philip Morris 7/8 to 97 3/4; Coca-Cola 1/2 to 42 3/8, and General Electric 1/8 to 42 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .72 to 151.87. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.44 to 298.23.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average ended 10.67 points higher at 2,083.04.

Advancing issues narrowly outnumbered declines in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 705 issues up, 681 down and 545 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE totaled 162.49 million shares, up from 114.88 million in Monday's session.

Destroyed

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — Orange County Sheriff's deputies on Tuesday destroyed about 600 marijuana plants with an estimated street value of $800,000 which were found growing in rural Orange County.

"It was a good size plot," said Orange County Sheriff Lindy Pendergrass. The plants ranged in height from six to 18 feet.

No arrests were made and there are no suspects, Pendergrass said the investigation is continuing.

Correction

The Daily Reflector incorrectly reported Tuesday that only pollworkers are allowed to assist voters during an election.

Election rules state that any voter may request assistance from a near relative, and any blind, disabled or illiterate voter may be assisted by any person the voter chooses, other than his employer, an officer of his union, or an agent of either one.

Hall

A funeral for Mrs. Lethia Washington Hall will be conducted at 2 p.m. Friday in the chapel of Joyner's Mortuary in Farmville by Elder George Wiggins. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Park.

A former resident of Greene County, Mrs. Hall had lived in Greenville for several years. She was a member of Warren Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Surviving are two sons, James Hall of Orange, N.J., and Joe Lewis Hall of Newark, N.J.; three daughters, Willie Mae Holland of Stantonsburg, Minnie L. Carney of East Orange, N.J., and Letha C. Cobb of Newark, N.J.; three brothers, Dave Washington and John H. Washington, both of Greenville, and Leon Washington of Baltimore; a sister, Lossie J. Brimage of Farmville; 19 grandchildren, and 13 great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends in Joyner's Memorial Chapel Thursday from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. and at other times will be at the home of Joe Hall near Castoria in Greene County.

Mills

Mr. Franklin D. Mills, 55, of Route 3, Box 300, Greenville, died Tuesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

His graveside funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Mills Family Cemetery near Black Jack.

A native of the Chicod area, Mr. Mills spent most of his life in the Black Jack community and was a farmer.

Surviving are three brothers, L.C. Mills of Grimesland, Alton Lee Mills of Greenville and Truman Mills of Grimesland, and three sisters, Clara Mills Manning of Grifton, Vera Mills Smith of Kinston and Permillie Whaley of Fayetteville.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today.

Stocks

WINTERVILLE — A funeral for Mrs. Irene Windham Stocks, 76, of 116 Ange St. will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Revs. Douglas Skinner and Ed Taylor. Burial will be in Reedy Branch Baptist Church Cemetery.

Mrs. Stocks was a lifelong resident of the Winterville community. She was a member of Winterville Free Will Baptist Church.

Surviving are a son, Ben L. Stocks of Ayden; a daughter, Faye Thomas of Goldsboro; two sisters, Margaret Joyner of Farmville and Ruth Rourk of Leland; eight grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today and at other times will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben L. Stocks, 307 Country Club Drive, Ayden.

again, the Food and Drug Administration and the Red Cross require that any subsequent donations be quarantined and/or destroyed even when they test negative for AIDS or hepatitis B.

The Tidewater region was one of the regions which failed to correctly categorize subsequent donations as suitable for transfusion.

Between March 1985 and July 1988, out of a total of over 440,000 pints collected from volunteer donors in the Tidewater Region and ultimately produced into over 1 million blood components, 821 blood components were released that should not have been," regional director Dr. Andrew Heaton said. "To date, however, we've retested two-thirds of the donors in question" and none have tested positive for viral infections.

According to David Parsons, an administrator for blood services in the Tidewater Region, the first unit of blood tested had indeterminate results — neither positive nor negative, he said. "In a subsequent test, it was negative all the way through."

The problem comes with the procedure in which the blood was handled, Parsons said. The first units of blood tested were destroyed and are not part of the donor deferral register.

Even though the subsequent tests were negative, according to FDA and Red Cross procedures, the donations should have been quarantined and destroyed.

"If the person had made the second donation anywhere else, there would never be a question," he said. But since the first and subsequent donations were made within the same region, the proper samples and records should have been kept.

"It's a procedural violation," Parsons said.

The Tidewater region will establish a new compliance license office and other provisions as a means to correct its errors.

lated area of Puerto Morelos, 30 miles south of the resort area of Cancun, at about 2 p.m. EDT. Merida is 175 miles west of Cancun.

The storm was maintaining its west-northwest course and had slowed down a little from its 15 mph speed, but retained its intensity.

The entire seaside hotel zone in Cancun was evacuated to inland hotels, said Jennie Valdez, a representative of the U.S. Consul. She said Cancun had been experiencing heavy wind gusts and sporadic rain.

Ms. Valdez said she did not know how many tourists were in Cancun, but that government figures estimate between 40,000 and 65,000 a month. Cancun has a population of about 100,000 to 150,000, she said.

High winds also were reported in Valladolid, a city of 80,000 located 80 miles southwest of Cancun, said Jose Joaquin Martil, local Red Cross president.

Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga said late Tuesday that at least six people were killed, and an estimated 60,000 were left homeless in "the worst natural disaster in the modern history of Jamaica."

"Everything is a disaster," said Grace Morris of Kingston. "We have to build a complete new Jamaica."

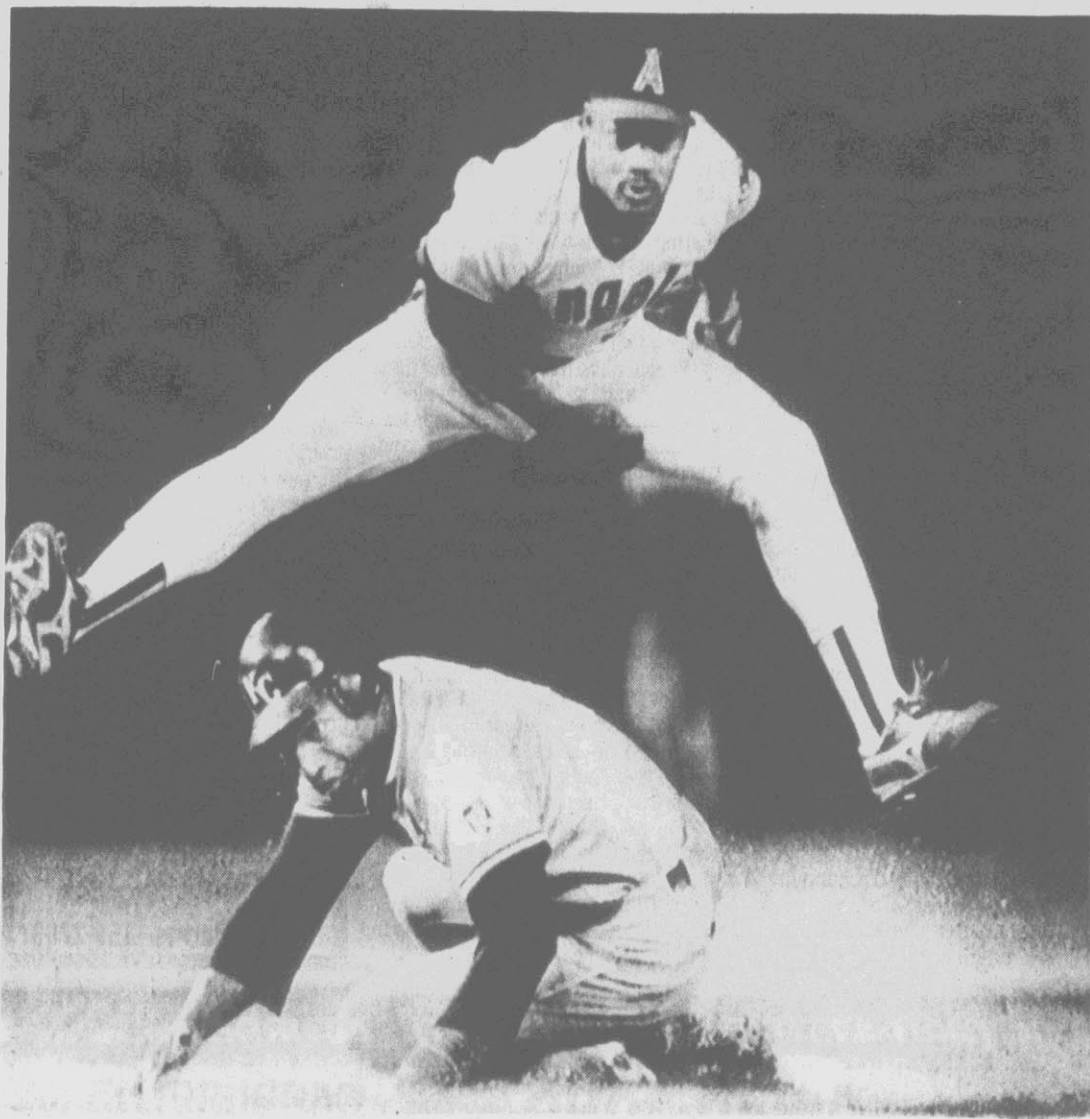

Civil defense officials in the Dominican Republic, side-swiped Sunday by the storm, reported five people were known dead.

The U.S. National Weather Service said today that "People in the warned areas should have completed all possible preparations for this extremely dangerous hurricane."

Dodgers Record 19th Shutout With 2-0 Victory Over Braves

By The Associated Press
Shutout for shutout, the Los Angeles Dodgers almost match up with the New York Mets.

While the Mets have grabbed all the attention with their 22 shutouts, the Dodgers quietly have compiled their own impressive total. They beat the Atlanta Braves 2-0 Tuesday night for shutout No. 19.

"We're not really concerned with the pennant race," Mike Scioscia said after hitting a two-run homer that proved decisive.

The victory, coupled with Houston's 5-2 loss to Cincinnati, increased the Dodgers' lead in the National League West to 6½ games over the Houston Astros.

John Tudor, Ramon Martinez and Jay Howell combined on a two-hitter for the Dodgers.

"We're just going out there every game and playing good baseball," Scioscia said. "We're confident we're going to win, but we haven't painted ourselves into a corner and put pressure on ourselves."

In other games, Pittsburgh beat New York 1-0, Montreal beat St. Louis 7-1, Chicago beat Philadelphia 9-2 and San Francisco beat San Diego 4-1.

Tudor, 9-8, held the Braves to a first-inning leadoff single by Ron Gant and a two-out single in the fourth by Andres Thomas. Both Martinez and Howell pitched two innings of hitless relief, with Howell gaining his 19th save.

Chargers Set For Another Big Test At Washington

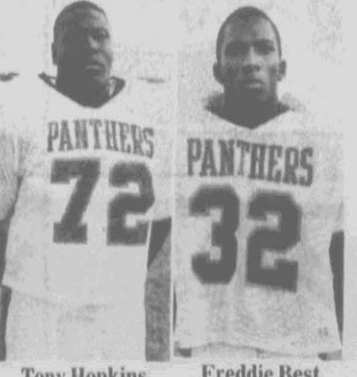

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

Ayden-Grifton's final non-conference test before jumping into the Eastern Plains race comes Friday on the road against unbeaten 3-A Washington.

The 2-A Chargers are heading into the game with a 2-1 mark and a full head of steam after shutting out 4-A Kinston Monday night on the road, 19-0.

Tony Hopkins Freddie Best

"We did a good job of executing offensively and defensively in the second half of the Kinston game," Ayden-Grifton head coach B.T. Chappell said. "We made some adjustments to our game plan at halftime and they (Kinston) made a few mistakes that helped us to take control of the game."

The win, although an impressive one for the Chargers, has not changed the way Chappell looks at Friday's matchup against the 3-0 Pam Pack.

"We know we've got our work cut out for us," Chappell said. "They've beaten Belhaven, Pamlico County and Plymouth. And last week Plymouth beat Farmville (Central)."

One of the keys to controlling the Pam Pack is stopping wide receiver Joe Randolph, according to Chappell. "In the Pamlico County game, he caught passes for about 100 yards and rushed for over 100 more," Chappell said. "He had one reverse play that went for about 75-80 yards and another that went for about 40. He's very quick and hard to handle."

Washington's 6-0, 180-pound quarterback Bryan Jones could also pose some problems for the Chargers, according to Chappell.

"He's got good size and he does a good job of getting the ball where they want it to be."

Following the battle with the Pam Pack, the Chargers will jump into the heat of the conference race against Pamlico County.

"It's (the Washington game) gonna be a tough road game," Chappell said. "But we're gonna have some tough ones once we get into the conference play also, so it'll be interesting to see how we'll do down there."

North Pitt

North Pitt head football coach Stuart Innis' answer to what his team could do to rebound from a 13-6 loss Monday at the hands of D.H. Conley was simple: "I don't know."

The Panthers next foe will be Roanoke, which is coming off a 26-6 win last Friday over Jamesville. North Pitt will carry a 1-2 record into the game, while the Redskins stand at 1-1 for the year.

"After looking at the film, they (Conley) did a real good job on our offensive line," Innis said. "They continually got people past our linemen and into our offensive backfield."

Another problem Innis sees in having to battle the Redskins Friday is they will have had a full week to get ready for the game. Roanoke's game with Jamesville wasn't rained out last Friday.

"It always makes it tough when you have to move a game to Monday and then turn around and play again on Friday," Innis said. "They (Roanoke) should be better prepared from that respect."

In Roanoke, North Pitt will find a team which is not big in size or numbers, but one that is extremely quick both offensively and defensively.

"I think we can compete with them speed-wise if we do a good job of blocking them," Innis said. "They're coming off a big win though, so we definitely have our work cut out for us."

Following their battle with Roanoke, the Panthers will have a week off before beginning play in the Eastern Plains Conference.

"I just want to come out of this game in good shape," Innis said. "Once this game is behind us, we'll have a week to heal and get ready for a tough conference race. The race in the conference will be extremely difficult so I don't think the off week could have come at any better time."

Rice's Grand Slam Lifts Boston Past Baltimore; Yankees Defeat Cleveland

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Even in a season of discontent, Jim Rice still finds moments of solace. Enough of them might make him and the Boston Red Sox very happy.

Rice, relegated to a role as part-time designated hitter, connected for his eighth career grand slam Tuesday night as the Red Sox beat Baltimore 6-4 and increased their lead in the American League East.

"I'm ready to play any day, but if I'm not in the lineup I can't do anything about it," Rice said after starting for just the fourth time in 14 games. "My attitude has been the same for 14 years. I'm not going to change."

"When I'm called upon, I want to go up there and do my job. If I'm not called upon, I don't have anything to worry about."

Rice, suspended earlier this season after a run-in with Manager Joe Morgan, is batting .270 with 12 home runs and 61 runs batted in.

The Red Sox moved 4½ games ahead of Detroit, which lost to Toronto 9-1. New York also is 4½ behind after beating Cleveland 5-4. Milwaukee stayed 5½ back by defeating Chicago 4-0.

In other AL games, Oakland held off Texas 2-1, Minnesota rallied past Seattle 2-1 and Kansas City downed California 4-3.

Rice spoiled the major league debut of Pete Harnisch, who was drafted by the Orioles in June 1987.

Harnisch struck out Rice on three pitches in the second inning, but Rice got his revenge when he came to the plate with the bases loaded in the fourth.

Rice sent a 2-2 pitch high off the light tower above the wall in left-center field for his 376th career home run.

"I watched it go the whole way," Harnisch said. "I turned around because when I give those up I don't mind watching them. If it hadn't hit halfway up the light tower, it might still be going somewhere."

Rice later singled as the Red Sox won for the seventh time in nine games.

Morgan said Rice would be in the starting lineup tonight against Baltimore. The Yankees begin a four-game series at Fenway Park on Thursday night.

"That was one of his old time shots," Morgan said. "He hit good the last time I took him out for a few days. He returned in time to blast one."

Mike Smithson, 8-5, was the winner and Lee Smith got four outs for his 25th save.

Yankees 5, Indians 4
Pinch hitter Luis Aguayo's two-run homer in the eighth inning rallied New York over host Cleveland for its fifth victory in six games.

Dave Winfield opened the eighth with a single for his third hit. One out later, Aguayo greeted Scott Bailes, 8-13, with his third home run of the season for the Yankees and second in two nights.

Neil Allen, 5-2, pitched 3 1-3 shutout innings for the victory and Dave Righetti got his 21st save in 30 opportunities.

Blue Jays 9, Tigers 1

Jesse Barfield hit a grand slam and Ernie Whitt added a two-run shot as host Toronto trounced slumping Detroit.

The Tigers, who led the division by four games on Aug. 12, have lost 18 of 22.

Dave Stieb, 13-8, allowed six hits in seven innings. Ted Power, 5-7, gave up five runs in 2 1-3 innings.

Barfield's second slam of the season and third of his career came in the seventh. It was his 17th home run this year and came against Paul Gibson.

Whitt hit his 13th homer during a four-run third.

Brewers 4, White Sox 0

Juan Nieves pitched a three-hitter and Paul Molitor and Robin Yount homered in the first inning to send Milwaukee over Chicago.

The visiting Brewers won for the 10th time in 13 games.

Nieves, 6-5, won in his first start since July 14. He struck out four and walked two in his only complete game this season.

Molitor led off the first inning with a home run for the 23rd time in his career. Two outs later, Yount hit the Brewers' first inside-the-park homer since he did it in June 1982. Ken Patterson, 0-2, was the loser.

Athletics 2, Rangers 1

Jose Canseco hit his 39th home run and Dennis Eckersley got his 40th save as host Oakland cut its magic number for winning the AL West to seven.

Canseco, leading the majors in home runs and with 115 RBI, hit a two-run shot in the sixth inning. He also stole his 37th base, moving closer to becoming the first player to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in the same year.

Twins 2, Mariners 1

Jim Dwyer singled home the tying run and Tom Herr had an RBI grounder as Minnesota rallied for two runs in the ninth inning and won at Seattle.

The Twins, shut out by five pitchers for eight innings, came back as singles by Randy Bush, Gary Gaetti and Dwyer tied it at 1-1. Herr's bases-loaded groundout scored pinch runner Al Newman.

Royals 4, Angels 3

Bret Saberhagen evened his record at 14-14 as Kansas City won at California.

Saberhagen gave up two runs on six hits in seven innings. He struck out nine, matching his season high. Steve Farr got his 19th save.

Chuck Finley, 9-14, took the loss. The Angels were mathematically eliminated in the AL West.

Jett Happy To Get In His Few Minutes On Field

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

While most football players are concerned about how many minutes they get to play, East Carolina punter John Jett is more concerned with a few precious seconds.

That's because for Jett, the short time from when the ball is snapped from center to when he kicks it away to the other team is often the difference between success and failure.

"When the ball is snapped, it has to leave your foot in two seconds," he said. "I don't notice anything. You don't have time for anything to be on your mind. I just know my job is to get the ball off."

A redshirt freshman from Reedsville, Va., Jett has stepped in to fill a void for ECU this fall. With incumbent starter Craig Losito slowed by illness in the preseason, Jett took full advantage of his opportunities to earn the number-one punting spot.

"I had a real good spring game and (this fall) I was more relaxed," he said. "I knew how the program was going. I also worked on my techniques all summer, fine tuning them."

Jett, who is presently averaging 38.2 yards a kick, is a two-and-a-half step punter who relies on self-visualization to help his kicking.

"It's more of a mental game," he said. "You have to see what you do before you do it. Dropping the ball is the main thing. As long as you see the ball drop on your foot you are okay."

Jett was a four-year varsity player in high school, playing quarterback and defensive back while also punting. He also played baseball and considered pursuing that avenue following graduation. He looked into playing for Mississippi Delta Junior College or even the Naval Academy. But in the end, he decided to come to ECU after talking with the Pirate coaches about walking on.

When he got here, Losito was back after starting the previous year, so Jett redshirted.

"It's tough," he said. "You second guess yourself a lot because you know you can't play but you have to out and try as hard as you can. You have to dig down deep and see if you really want to play college football. I love football and all sports."

But the wait ended this fall and Jett was punter when the Pirates took on Tennessee Tech in the season opener.

"Before I got out there, I had butterflies, but everybody told me that when you got out there it was just like practice," he said. "Matt McLaughlin, our snapper, calmed me down. He told me it was just like practice and he was right. You don't believe it until it happens."

In the course of a 27-16 loss to Virginia Tech last weekend, Jett encountered his first case of potential stress, college style, when McLaughlin left the game with an injury.

"We had to change long snappers during the course of the game," said coach Art Baker. "Matt hurt his elbow and Brian Walsh came in and in his first snap in a college ball game, he didn't get it all the way back."

"They had a full rush on. John got the ball off the ground and got the kick off. He averaged 39 yards a kick for us and had two inside the 15-yard line."

But Jett said the situation wasn't as tough as it was made out to be.

"Brian was in a tough spot, but I knew he could handle it," he said. "I've worked with him a lot (in practice)."

Division I college football is a long way from 1-A high school football in Virginia, but Jett said he's learned two unique things about big-time college athletics.

"It's a lot more (of a) business, but it also a lot more fun as well," he said. "I went to a small high school and we worked hard for nothing. Here you get benefits. You have more fans here. You are showing what you can do."

Redshirting Is Dirty Word At Notre Dame

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

"Redshirting," like "Miami," is a dirty word at Notre Dame. The Notre Dame roster for 1988 includes only three redshirts — fifth-year seniors Flash Gordon, Wes Pritchett and Frank Stams, all linebackers.

Gordon was granted an extra year of eligibility after a series of injuries prevented him from playing in 1984. Pritchett was not in school during the spring of 1986 and needs this semester to complete his degree requirements. A nagging thigh problem limited Stams to 16 seconds of action in 1986 — ergo, an extra year. Coach Lou Holtz may not be thrilled with the Notre Dame athletic board's policy of granting a fifth year only for medical or personal reasons — many coaches automatically redshirt as many true freshmen as possible to build depth for the future — but says he agrees with it.

"Eleven times a year — 12 times, hopefully — I wish we redshirted," Holtz says. "But it doesn't blend in with Notre Dame's philosophy or with its purpose."

"We're the only school in America that doesn't redshirt, and I don't think there's any doubt that that has hurt us drastically on a Saturday afternoon."

"But I concur with Notre Dame's philosophy and belief. You have to understand why Notre Dame doesn't redshirt."

"Notre Dame says you come in here as a freshman and your schedule's set for you. You're going to take 'X' amount of hours. You have your choice what language you want to take or what science you want to take."

"At the end of your freshman year, if you're not even with your class for graduation — athletes, non-athletes — you go to summer school and you start out your sophomore year even with your class. Same thing at the end of your sophomore and junior years. So you start your senior year, you're on line for graduation."

"Now the NCAA says to be eligible you basically have to be pursuing a worthwhile degree. But you've already graduated. Do we give somebody a position in graduate school and deny a worthy candidate a position just so he can play one semester of football? Or do we start playing games and stretching out their career and change everything about Notre Dame?"

How important is redshirting? Holtz says it has "changed the game more than any other thing in the last 25 years."

Like most schools, Notre Dame is hurting depth-wise. In Saturday night's 19-17 victory over Michigan, the Irish unveiled a brand-new offensive line, three new receivers and two new kickers.

"People have five classes, and they mature and grow and develop," Holtz said. "We have four classes. You need three classes to win, and when people redshirt they have five classes to draw three."

Over the years, even the Gerry Faust years, Notre Dame generally was ranked near the top in recruiting by the so-called experts. Where have all those great players gone?

"Number one, I don't believe who had the best recruiting year in the country," Holtz says. "That goes according to who had great high school years. It's never based on who's going to get better, who's going to mature and the reasons why."

"But I do think if you will go check the recruiting list three and four years ago, you will not find Notre Dame in the top 10. And consequently, our junior-senior class from top to bottom is not real strong."

"When I first came here (1986), we were predominantly a freshman-junior-senior football team. Last year, we were predominantly a freshman-sophomore-senior football team. This year, we're predominantly a freshman-sophomore-junior football team without very many seniors on the first two teams."

But if any school in the country can survive the rigors of major-college football without redshirting, it would have to be Notre Dame. It won't be easy, though.

"We've got to," Holtz says. "We can and we will."

At Newark, Del., Dave Nelson probably has a big smile on his face. His new rule permitting the defense to score 2 points on a botched conversion try actually has decided a football game.

Nelson, former head coach and athletic director of the University of Delaware, has been secretary-editor of the NCAA Rules Committee, it seems, since Walter Camp's days, probably because he's one of the few who understands them.

John Smoltz, 2-5, gave up five hits, struck out five and walked three in 5 1-3 innings. He has lost five of his six starts since winning his major league debut on July 23.

Pirates 1, Mets 0

Bob Walk won for the first time since beating San Diego July 20 and Bobby Bonilla hit a run-scoring double, snapping the Mets' five-game winning streak. New York leads Pittsburgh by 10 games in the National League East.

Walk, 12-10, had lost six consecutive decisions. He allowed five hits, walked two and struck out two in eight innings before Jim Gott finished for his 29th save.

Dwight Gooden, 17-7, lost to Pittsburgh for the third time this season. He allowed five hits and struck out seven in seven innings.

Expos 7, Cardinals 1

Hubie Brooks hit a grand slam and drove in five runs and Pascual Perez pitched a seven-hitter.

Brooks hit his fifth career grand slam and 17th home run of the season in the fifth inning off Larry McWilliams, 5-7, giving Montreal a 6-0 lead.

Perez, 11-6, walked four and struck out one in his third complete game as he won his third consecutive decision.

McWilliams, 5-7, gave up eight hits and six runs in six innings.

Cubs 9, Phillies 2

Greg Maddux won his first game since Aug. 10 and Damon Berryhill hit his first career grand slam as

Pack Takes 9-0 Victory

WASHINGTON — Washington High School rolled up a 9-0 victory over D.H. Conley in a tennis match Tuesday.

Conley's less-experienced team won only 13 games in the singles, and never more than three in a set.

The loss was the second in as many matches for the Valkyries, who play host to East Duplin on Thursday.

Summary:

Rene Manning (W) d. Nichole Bookworth, 6-0, 6-0.

Lisa Manning (W) d. Celeste Charlton, 6-1, 6-0.

Currituck.....3

CURRITUCK — Roanoke High School spotted Currituck the first three singles matches, then came back to defeat the Lady Knights, 6-3, in a non-conference tennis match Tuesday.

After Currituck took the number one, two and three singles, Roanoke did not lose again in boosting its record to 4-1 on the season.

Roanoke plays at home to Northeastern Conference foe Williamston on Thursday.

Summary:

Jennie Chavers (C) d. Amy Stegal, 6-1, 6-4.

Beth Snowden (C) d. Dawn Briley, 6-4, 6-4.

Emily Ansell (C) d. Amy Oakley, 6-4, 6-3.

Briley-Oakley (R) d. Ansell-Davies, 8-1.

Bailey-Kristi Ayers (R) d. Beasley-Taylor, 8-1.

Chicago snapped a five-game losing streak.

Maddux, 17-7 after going 15-3 in the first half, allowed six hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked none.

Kevin Gross, 11-14, lost his sixth consecutive decision since Aug. 12, giving up four runs and six hits 3 2-3 innings.

Steve Jeltz was 0-for-2 and now has one hit in his last 52 at-bats.

Reds 5, Astros 2

Jose Rijo allowed three hits in seven innings and Dave Collins' pinch-hit single ignited a three-run seventh inning.

Cincinnati built a 2-0 lead as Eric Davis singled home a first-inning run and Jeff Reed hit a solo homer in the second off Mike Scott, 13-7, who hasn't won since Aug. 13. A throwing error by reliever Larry Andersen set up run-scoring singles in the seventh by Collins, Barry Larkin and Kal Daniels.

Rijo, 13-8, allowed just three singles in his second start since coming off the disabled list Sept. 8. John Franco got four outs for his 33rd save.

Giants 4, Padres 1

Robby Thompson and Candy Maldonado hit solo home runs and Rick Reuschel gained his 18th victory as San Francisco passed San Diego and went back into fourth place in the NL West.

Reuschel, 18-8, gave up seven hits, struck out one and walked none in seven innings. Craig Lefferts finished with one-hit relief for his eighth save.

Ed Whitson, 12-10, gave up seven hits and four runs in five innings.

Wednesday Notebook

Time To Regroup

East Carolina, coming off a tough 27-16 loss at the hands of Virginia Tech last Saturday, has a tough test awaiting Saturday as it travels to Columbia, S.C., to battle the nationally-ranked Gamecocks.

Overall, the Gamecocks hold a 5-0 advantage in the series after scoring a 34-12 victory over the Pirates last season in Columbia. South Carolina quarterback Todd Ellis set a Gamecock passing record in that contest as he hurled for 425 yards through the air.

ECU Coaches Set For Another Reunion

A pair of ECU coaches will be experiencing a Homecoming of sorts when the Pirates invade Williams-Brice Stadium Saturday. Pirate defensive coordinator Richard Bell served as head coach of the Gamecocks during the 1982 season, posting a 4-7 mark before departing to take over the defensive coordinator position at Duke. Before serving as head coach, Bell had served at the school as an assistant under former coach Jim Carlen for seven years.

ECU outside linebacker coach Clyde Christensen will be hoping for a repeat performance of what his 1979 North Carolina team accomplished in Williams-Brice. Christensen was a quarterback for the Tar Heel team that shutout the Gamecocks 28-0. The loss was one of only three by South Carolina the entire season.

Pirate Players Heading Home

Six ECU players will be heading to their home state Saturday when the Pirates take on the Gamecocks. They include junior defensive lineman Carl Carney (Columbia), senior fullback Tim James (Hartsville), sophomore offensive lineman Bill Maxwell (Ware Shoals), junior linebacker Compton McCurry (Summerville), freshman defensive lineman Mark Weatherford (Charleston) and sophomore wide receiver Al Whitting (Dalzell).

The Gamecocks list of North Carolinians on their roster totals 23.

Hunter Continues To Challenge Records

ECU junior quarterback Travis Hunter continues his assault on the Pirate all-time passing marks. Hunter currently needs only 327 yards of total offense to move into the top 10 of the ECU career total offense list. He now has 2,404 yards, while 10th-place Theodore Sutton's mark stands at 2,730.

Hunter needs only 153 yards to take over fifth place on the Pirate career passing yardage list. He now stands in the sixth spot with 1,824 yards, while former signal caller Kevin Ingram is in fifth with 1,976.

After three more pass completions, Hunter will take over the sixth position on the all-time Pirate completions list. Hunter currently stands at 131, while Leander Green completed 133 from 1976-79.

Duke Turning Heads In The ACC

After stunning Tennessee last Saturday, 31-26, Duke pushed its record to 2-0 and is sending out a warning to the rest of the Atlantic Coast Conference that it doesn't plan to be the doormat of the league this year.

One of the reasons for all of the success experienced by the Blue Devils this season has been the connection between quarterback Anthony Dilweg and wide receiver Clarkston Hines.

Saturday against Tennessee, the two teamed up for three touchdowns as Duke built up a 31-7 lead in the game.

Dilweg has thrown for over 300 yards in his last three starts, while Hines has a streak of five straight 100-yard receiving contests. In all, Hines hauled in eight passes Saturday for 145 yards, running his season total, after only a pair of games, to 16 receptions for 276 yards and four touchdowns. Dilweg, on the other hand, has completed 50 of 72 passes this season for 664 yards and five TD's.

Sports Notes

Kobe Named Master Swim Coach

East Carolina University head swimming coach Rick Kobe has been awarded the title of Master Swim Coach by the American Swimming Coaches Association. Kobe was given the award during the recent World Swim Clinic held in San Francisco.

According to the A.S.C.A., Kobe is one of the youngest coaches to ever receive the title of Master Swim Coach. Approximately 20 percent of coaches on the collegiate level hold the honor.

Kobe has been the head swimming coach at ECU since the 1982 season and has compiled a 97-46 record in dual meets. Prior to that, he served as an assistant for two years under former coach Ray Scharf.

Rose Rallies Past Northern Nash

RED OAK — Rose High School came from a 1-0 deficit to take a 4-1 soccer victory over Northern Nash Tuesday in the opening Big East Conference match for the Rampants.

Northern Nash scored at the 11 minute mark of the first half when Chris Peacock stole a pass and scored.

But Rose came back on a pair of Jason Bizzaro goals in less than two minutes, both off penalty kicks. Patrick Joyner and Michael Thompson were credited with assists on the goals.

David Leisten, who also scored twice, game Rose a 3-1 lead with a goal at 35:54, assisted by Toure Claibourne. Leisten's other goal came at 23:23 of the second half, with an assist by Joyner.

"What pleased me most about this game," said coach Charlie Harvey, "was that we came from behind to win."

He cited the defensive play of John Bolen and goalie Scott Thomas. Rose outshot Northern, 17-9, for the game.

Rose, now 2-3 overall and 1-0 in the Big East, is at home to Rocky Mount on Thursday at 4 p.m.

Sheridan Remembers Trench Battle

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State coach Dick Sheridan didn't care much for the Wolfpack's 21-3 loss to Wake Forest last year, but he really didn't like the way his team was beaten up front by the Demon Deacons.

"A year ago they just dominated us, on both sides of the football," Sheridan said at his weekly press conference on Monday. "They took the ball and stuck it right at us on offense."

"On defense, they completely stymied us. They won those key battles up front."

Sheridan hopes his team remembers last year's game as it prepares for Saturday's game with the Deacons, who are 2-0 after victories over Villanova and Illinois State. N.C. State, which was idle last Saturday, is 1-0.

"I'm anxious to see if we've improved up front on both sides of the ball," Sheridan said. "I think we're quicker. I'm anxious to see if we're stronger."

The Wolfpack will start two freshman and four sophomores on defense against a team that averaged 447 yards in its first two games.

"We are very concerned about that," Sheridan said. "I think Wake Forest offensively is ... very versatile. I think they've got a great blend of running the football at you, optioning the ball and throwing it."

Pack Takes 9-0 Victory

WASHINGTON — Washington High School rolled up a 9-0 victory over D.H. Conley in a tennis match Tuesday.

Conley's less-experienced team won only 13 games in the singles, and never more than three in a set.

The loss was the second in as many matches for the Valkyries, who play host to East Duplin on Thursday.

Summary:

Rene Manning (W) d. Nichole Blookworth, 6-0, 6-0.

Lisa Manning (W) d. Celeste Charlton, 6-1, 6-0.

Ann Archie (W) d. Brandy Scudder, 6-0, 6-0.

James Kenan.....6 Greene Central.....1

WARSAW — James Kenan High School captured a 6-1 tennis victory over Greene Central Tuesday in the opening match of the season for both teams.

Greene Central's only victory came in the number one singles where Jennifer Roberts took a 6-4, 6-1 win over Brittney Hasty.

Greene Central opens its home schedule on Thursday, hosting Rosewood.

Summary:

Jennifer Roberts (GC) d. Brittney Hasty, 6-4, 6-1.

Beth Pope (JK) d. Carmen Sugg, 6-3, 6-1.

Dawn Guy (JK) d. Megan Wyatt, 6-4, 6-2.

Roanoke.....6 Currituck.....3

CURRITUCK — Roanoke High School spotted Currituck the first three singles matches, then came back to defeat the Lady Knights, 6-3, in a non-conference tennis match Tuesday.

After Currituck took the number one, two and three singles, Roanoke did not lose again in boosting its record to 4-1 on the season.

Summary:

Jennifer Roberts (GC) d. Brittney Hasty, 6-4, 6-1.

Beth Pope (JK) d. Carmen Sugg, 6-3, 6-1.

Dawn Guy (JK) d. Megan Wyatt, 6-4, 6-2.

CL Adds Two Teams

NEW YORK (AP) — Army and Fordham will join the six-member Colonial League in 1990 when the league expands to include competition in other intercollegiate sports, league officials announced Tuesday.

The Colonial League, entering its third season of football competition, requires that its members award financial aid on a need basis and does not permit athletic scholarships except under special circumstances, said league spokesman Todd Newcomb.

The founding members of the league are Bucknell, Colgate, Davidson, Holy Cross, Lafayette and Lehigh, all NCAA Division I-AA football schools.

Newcomb said only Holy Cross is permitted to award football scholarships, but that practice will end in 1991.

Army will remain in Division I-A football and continue to play baseball in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League, Newcomb said.

Fordham will move up from Division III in football. The school will continue to award basketball scholarships for men and women until the class of 1992 enters, he said.

Roanoke plays at home to Northeastern Conference foe Williamston on Thursday.

Summary:

Jennie Chavers (C) d. Amy Stegal, 6-1, 6-4.

Beth Snowden (C) d. Dawn Briley, 6-4, 6-4.

Emily Ansell (C) d. Amy Oakley, 6-4, 6-3.

Rhonda Bailey (R) d. Meredith Davies, 6-2, 6-2.

Michelle Roberson (R) d. Jennifer Beasley, 6-1, 6-3.

Ex-Hostage Goes Into Seclusion For Reunion With Wife, Sons

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German Rudolf Cordes, home after 20 months of captivity in the hands of pro-Iranian kidnapers in Beirut, was flown to an undisclosed location to rest and enjoy a reunion with his wife and two sons.

Reporters were given no chance to talk to the 55-year-old Frankfurt businessman upon his arrival at Cologne-Bonn airport Tuesday night.

West German officials, including Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, have denied making any payments for Cordes' freedom. He was released by his pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem kidnapers late Monday night.

But the mass-circulation Bild newspaper of Hamburg said "a sum of millions is believed to have been paid to kidnapers for the release." Bild cited unidentified security sources.

The newspaper also quoted a source identified only as a "security expert" as saying that at least 40 million marks ($22.2 million) were paid for Cordes' release. Bild is known to have good sources within the government.

A high-ranking government official described Cordes' long captivity, the isolation he endured, and his constant uncertainty over his fate.

The Los Angeles Times said today Iran apparently arranged for Cordes to be transferred from captors linked to Mohammed Ali Hamadi, who is being tried in Germany for hijacking a TWA jet, to the group that freed the West German.

Iran apparently arranged the release to regain favor with West Germany, a vital trading partner and the Western nation with which it has the closest ties, the Times said, citing unidentified sources.

Cordes was abducted in West Beirut in January 1987, three days before a West German engineer, Alfred Schmidt, was kidnapped. Schmidt was freed Sept. 7, 1987. The Hamadi clan was believed to have abducted both men.

Cordes and his wife, Marlene, touched down at 10:20 p.m. aboard a twin-engine West German military jet after a five-hour flight from Syria.

The federal minister for chancellery affairs, Wolfgang Schauble, was aboard the same plane.

Schauble later told West German television that Cordes was "feeling better than he had expected."

"But naturally he's very weak. He's probably feeling better now because of the initial excitement that he will be tomorrow or the day after tomorrow," the official said.

"He's been flown to a place where he can find privacy for a time. He desperately needs quiet, to recover, to work through the experience.

"I don't know where he's going and even if I knew I wouldn't say," the official said.

Schauble said Cordes told him his kidnapers "treated him humanely, but the conditions were hard, he was always isolated and was always chained."

Hans Neusel, a state secretary in the federal Interior Ministry, told reporters at the airport Cordes said there were signs he was about to be released before it happened.

"His hopes increased when he was given new clothes three days before he was freed," said Neusel, who also was on the plane with Cordes.

Iran-Iraq Talks Shifting To N.Y.

GENEVA (AP) — Iran and Iraq agreed to recess their stalled peace talks and resume them in New York, according to a U.N. mediator, but Baghdad balked at a proposed meeting date this month.

A U.N. mediator said he hoped to come up with a meeting date today.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar proposed the temporary move to New York in the hope of unblocking the U.N.-mediated negotiations which opened in Geneva almost three weeks ago.

The agreement to pick up talks "shortly" in New York was announced Tuesday by U.N. mediator Jan Eliasson, appointed by Perez de Cuellar last week to oversee the talks in his absence.

The U.N. chief invited the foreign ministers of the two nations to meet at U.N. headquarters in New York on Sept. 22, but the Iraqi delegation announced that Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz could not be in New York before the first week of October.

The Iraqis also said they agreed to attend one meeting in New York only if, before leaving Geneva, a firm date was fixed for returning.

The Iraqis' hardline stance was spelled out in a press statement Tuesday night.

Eliasson sought to play down the problem, calling the question of dates a "technical, secondary issue." He told journalists it could be solved in a "smooth, undramatic manner" and indicated he hoped this could be done by today.

"The main thing is the acceptance (by both sides) of a meeting in New York shortly ... and of the subsequent continuation of the talks in Geneva," he said.

He told a news conference earlier that both sides "seem committed to keep the peace process going." He said they also pledged to continue to observe the cease-fire, which went into effect Aug. 20 after eight years of fighting and an estimated 1 million dead.

Military Doubling Explosives Experts To Combat Terrorism

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer
EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — The American military is almost doubling the number of its explosives specialists in response to growing international terrorism and other factors, says the head of a new Navy training school.

Explosive ordnance demolition technicians most recently have been involved in clearing and recovering mines from the Persian Gulf, said Navy Lt. Cmdr. H.F. Mixer, officer in charge of the new $18.6 million EOD school at this base in the Florida Panhandle.

The Eglin school, one of only two of its kind in the U.S. military, opened June 24 and trains Army, Air Force, Marine and some foreign military students, as well as Navy personnel.

Defense officials began planning for additional training and the new school three years ago when a survey showed an 89 percent increase in EOD technicians would be required by the four services between 1985 and 1990, Mixer said in a recent interview.

"I think you can attribute it (in part) to the growing threat of international terrorism," Mixer said.

"We are the bomb squad of the military," he said. "We are locating, identifying, evaluating, rendering safe and then removing and/or disposing of explosive ordnance of all types: domestic and foreign, surface and underwater."

The types of explosives range from improvised explosives of the "mad bomber" kind, to the most sophisticated military weapons, conventional and nuclear, he said.

"The world's weaponry is far more sophisticated than it used to be," another factor contributing to the need for more EOD technicians, Mixer said.

Changes in battlefield strategies also have caused a need for more bomb squad technicians, Mixer said, but he declined to get any more specific, saying that information was classified.

All he would say is that the military has adopted a different way of doing business, changing its view of war from the "Vietnam mentality."

Although operated by the Navy, the school was built at an Air Force installation because Eglin, the free world's largest air base at 724 square miles, had enough space to accommodate the school, existing support facilities including test ranges where explosives can be set off and temperate weather that permits year-round outdoor activities.

Another factor is that of the few bases meeting those criteria, it is the closest to the Naval Explosive Ordnance Disposal School at Indian Head, Md., the military's only other facility for bomb-squad training.

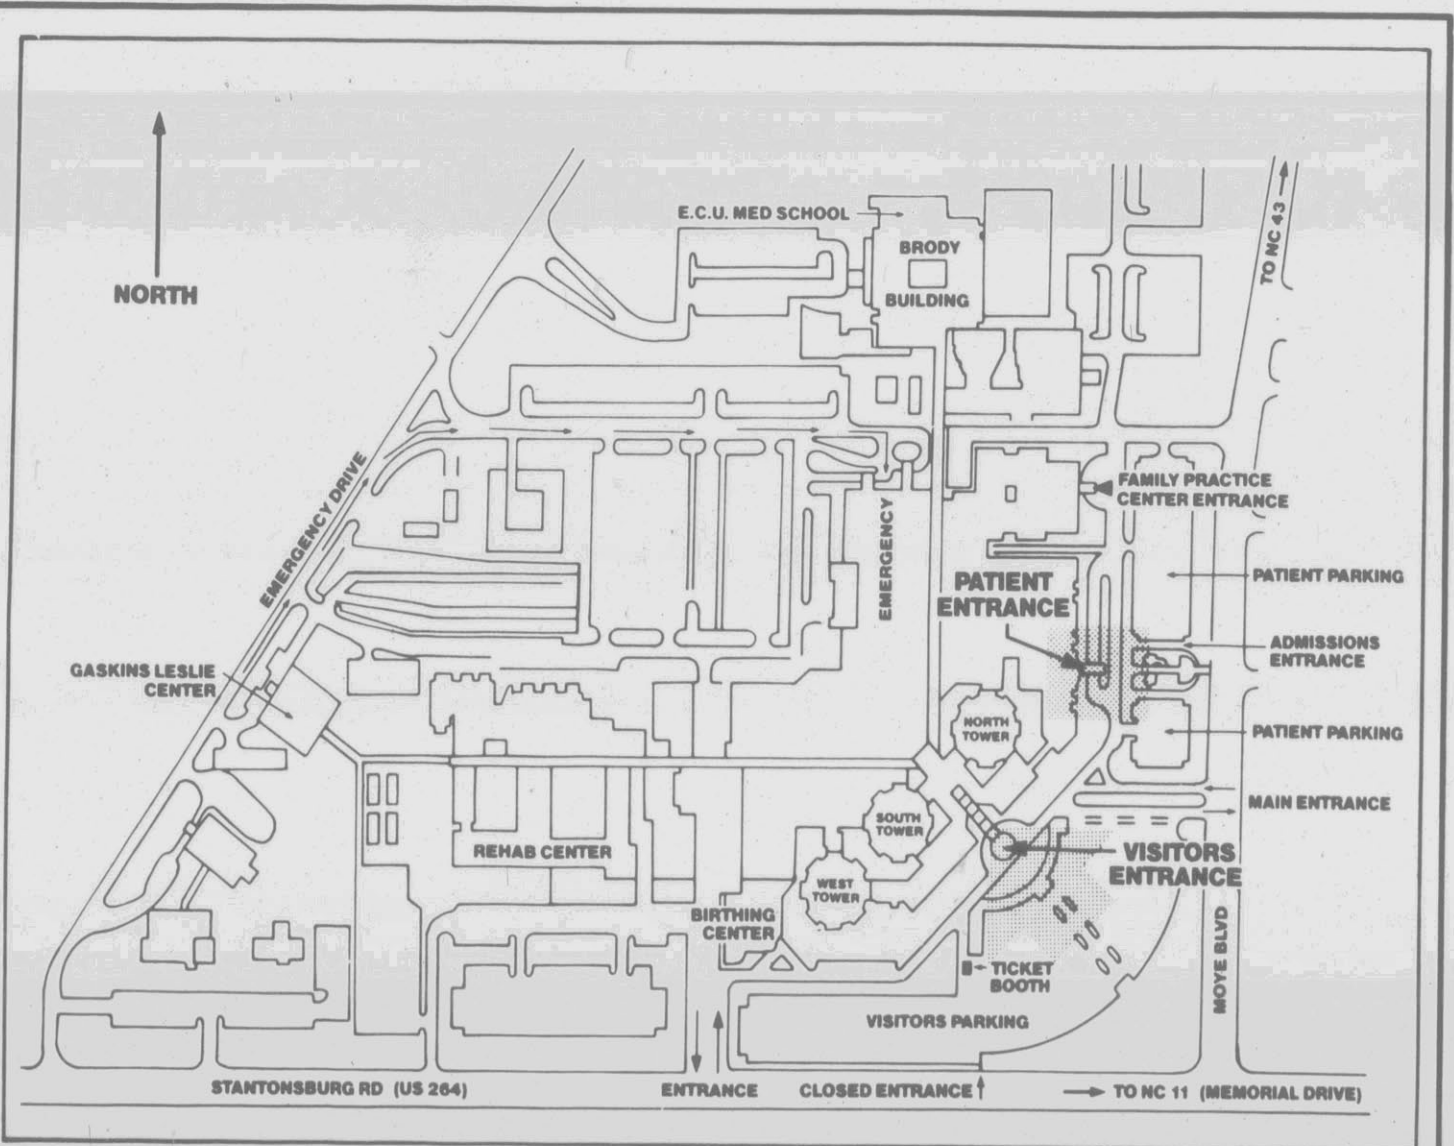

The Eglin facility, although the larger of the two, has been designated as a detachment of the Indian Head school.

The new school has a staff of 23 officers and 160 enlisted personnel, also drawn from all four services. An average of 45 officers and 280 enlisted people are in training at any one time with approximately 20 percent women. About 1,200 students are expected to graduate each year. The Navy accounts for 30 to 40 percent of the students.

Mixer said the common training for all branches, relatively rare in the U.S. military, pays off when EOD technicians from different services work together in the field.

"Regardless of the service, you know that he knows what you know," Mixer said.

We've Opened New Doors for Healthcare in Eastern North Carolina

September 15, 1988 marks the opening of a new admission entrance to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. All inpatients and outpatients will use the new entrance, and will have easy access to the facility with ample parking adjacent to the building. Visitors will continue to use the existing main entrance.

The new admissions area is located more conveniently to the areas where many patients receive diagnostic tests during the admitting procedures. Also included in the expansion is a new Laboratory Medicine Department and a new Medical Records Department.

The emergency entrance to Pitt County Memorial Hospital will remain in its previous location on Emergency Drive off of Stantonburg Road. Emergency patients, obstetrical patients and patients with appointments at the Magnetic Resonance Imaging Center will continue to use the emergency entrance.

This project is a part of the multi-phase development at Pitt County Memorial Hospital which represents the mission of the hospital as an academic medical teaching center.

Key West Business Mogul Just Learns From His Mistakes

By CATHERINE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Ed Swift acknowledges $1.8 million worth of failures.

Photographs of his money-losing business ventures and their dollar losses fill a bulletin board in his company's employee training room just a few steps off Key West's restored Duval Street.

"Unfortunately, I've got a few more to add," concedes Swift, 41. "Each of these I cried about."

But there's a lesson to learn from the $125,000 loss on the floating restaurant that caused seasickness, the $103,000 loss on the Florida City welcome center that was planned 10 years too soon, the failed car and boat rental businesses.

"Everyone has the right to fail," the bulletin board slogan says. "No one has the right not to try."

Swift has been trying since he inherited his father's Key West photo shop in his late teens when both parents died within two years. In addition to his failures, he has a string of successes to his credit.

With two partners, Swift and their Old Town Key West Development Ltd. restored 26 deteriorating storefronts and houses and founded Old Town Trolley and Conch Tour Train Inc. of Key West.

As president of Key West Hand Print Fabrics, he reopened a fabric printing factory. His help rehabilitating the 54-year-old Key West Aquarium produced a home for indigenous marine life that now draws 175,000 visitors a year.

Old Town Trolley, a narrated sightseeing tour service aboard classic-styled trolley buses, also runs in Washington, D.C., and Boston and will begin running soon in Miami, San Diego and Cambridge, Mass.

The company also will be operating information services at Boston's Quincy Market and Washington's Union Station.

Swift companies will employ close to 400 by the end of the year.

"The thing that really amazes me is I never had any aspiration of doing any of this," Swift says, resplendent in a cotton Hawaiian shirt with yellow bananas and green leaves on a sky-blue background, one of the fabric shop's new products.

His rise to prominence in this tourist mecca began in the early 1970s when Key West was in one of its perennial slumps. The Navy had come and gone, just like sponge harvesting, the hemp factory and cigar industry.

"I don't know if you can fully appreciate how depressing this street really was," Swift said of Duval Street, now lined with upscale boutiques, trendy restaurants, restored lodges and open-air bars.

The Strand Theater had been running "Deep Throat" for nine straight years and "For Rent" signs abounded.

Swift and barber Gerald "Moe" Mosher, who came to Key West with the Navy in 1951, called a meeting on a downtown cleanup, but hardly anybody showed up.

"We used to discuss Duval Street in the barber shop, and we finally decided everything was moving to the shopping centers," Mosher recalled.

With 90 percent of the storefronts empty in the early 1970s, owners were anxious to unload them.

Swift, Mosher and Wharton economics major Christopher Belland, who moved south from Miami, invested in their first storefront, gutted it themselves and tried to bring back the historic conch style evident in other Key West buildings.

In a 1950s building with a concrete facade, the partners embellished the front to add some island charm. Other buildings had to be moved. Some even lost their front walls. In their place came bay windows, fresh paint and period signs.

But with no bank financing for such an untested venture, the partners were on their financial knees.

"We were 180 days behind in our payments. You talk about broke," sighed Swift, who went on to serve a four-year term on the Monroe County Commission. "We went to give one building back, but the woman said, 'Don't you dare.'"

The restoration idea caught on, and the southernmost city in the continental United States now boasts a 100-block historic district.

The storefronts bought for $50,000 in the days of decline now sell for $300,000, $350,000 and up.

"When the Navy pulled out, the plan for Key West tourism had been on the back burner since the aquarium was built in 1936," said Swift, sipping diet cola and munching unbuttered popcorn before lunch in his office. "We've rebuilt our whole economy around tourism since '73-'74."

Sensing the turnaround, Swift and partners tried a sightseeing trolley in 1979 but failed. British Leyland double-decker buses were on their last legs, and no replacement parts were obtainable.

But three years later, Belland saw a trolley he liked at a Rose Bowl parade. The partners are now ready to start building their own, in Key West of course, with their own designs.

EDGECOMBE QUILTS — Beatrice Jordan of Edgecombe County shows off one of her quilts at her home. This quilt, along with 17 other domestic-type quilts made in Edgecombe County, will go on view Sunday at the Blount-

Bridgers House, 130 Bridgers St. in Tarboro. A reception to honor the quiltmakers, free and open to the public, will be held from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Edgecombe Women Exhibit Quilts

TARBORO — Quilting is a folk-art that has a large and devoted following across the United States, an art born of necessity that often reaches spectacular heights.

In an effort to shed more light on this domestic art on a local level, the Edgecombe County Cultural Arts Council with the Tarboro Ebonette Club, in cooperation with the Folklife Section of the North Carolina Arts Council, is presenting an exhibit of 18 quilts made by residents of Edgecombe County.

The show of quilts will be held at the Hobson Pitman Memorial Gallery of the Blount-Bridgers House, 130 Bridgers St., Tarboro, to be on view through Oct. 23.

A reception honoring the quilters will be held from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday at the gallery. Gallery hours for viewing the exhibition are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, and from 2 to 4 p.m. on Sundays. Admission is free.

The exhibit compares certain features of these quilts — most of them made by black Edgecombe County women born in the early part of the 20th century — to authentic African textiles.

The exhibit was curated by Mary Ann McDonald and intern Jillian Friedman of the N.C. Folklife Section, with the assistance of members of Tarboro's Ebonette Club. Ebonette Club members made inquiries throughout the county, locating residents who were known for their skills as quilters.

The quilters were visited in their homes, interviewed on tape, photographed with their quilts, and their permission secured to borrow certain quilts. Members of the Ebonette Club selected the quilts being shown.

County quilting residents who have loaned quilts for the show are Henrietta McNeil, Bettie Cofield, Josephine Randolph, Rosaie Dozier, Blanche Vines Shaw, Mabel Dancy, Hattie Ransome, Beatrice Jordan, Geneva Knight and Maggie Peele.

Also included in this exhibit will be authentic Kente cloth weavings from the collection of Matye Reed, recently retired from the African Heritage Center at North Carolina A&T University, Greensboro.

These enormous brilliantly colored weavings were designed to be worn by tribal kings. Made of raw silk and dating from the first half of the 10th century, they display many of the elements of contrasting color, bold vertical stripes and prominent borders that appear in the quilts made by the Edgecombe County residents of African descent.

For more information about the exhibit and the Blount-Bridgers House, call 823-4159.

Diver Earns Living With Golf Balls

By SHERRI BERRY
The Beaufort Gazette
BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — A golfer without a ball retriever is Bob Glenn's best friend, and winter and alligators are his worst enemies. Glenn is the owner of Hazard Divers in Charleston and earns a living diving in ponds for golf balls.

"Snakes, alligators and winters are the cons of my job," Glenn said,

"and I wouldn't rank them in that order. Winters bother me more than snakes and alligators."

In the quest for misdirected golf balls, Glenn has been battling cold water and reptiles full time for four years.

The 30-year-old Charleston resident began diving of and on for balls eight years ago after a friend suggested it as a way to make extra money. Upon realizing he could make a living doing it full time, he made golf ball diving his occupation. There are about four other golf ball divers in the state, according to Glenn. "There are guys in the business in Florida and Myrtle Beach who make up to $200,000 a year," Glenn said. But shaking his head and grinning, quickly added that he doesn't make that kind of money.

Throughout the summer, Glenn, said he works five to six days — about 40 to 75 hours — a week. He works no more than 30 to 35 hours a week during the winter.

Glenn contracts to dive at three courses in the Beaufort area and at about 70 throughout the state, traveling 500 to 1,000 miles a week.

Writer Takes His 'History Of White People' To Films

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Martin Mull is delighted. He has found a parking place right in front of the Beverly Hills restaurant. But, of course — his car is white.

Blond-haired, blue-eyed Mull has become a white person by profession since 1985, due to the success of an innocuous notion he and fellow white writer Allen Rucker had one day — "The History of White People in America."

"Based on my experiences in Ohio and his in Oklahoma, we figured we had the Grain Belt pretty well in hand," Mull said over lunch, a salad with a lot of white stuff in it.

"We started describing what makes a person white by our standards. And in this case, the standards were liberal enough they could include black people; there are certain Caucasians who do not qualify, as well."

A friend at a movie studio told the two they should send the idea to the cable television people, Mull recalled. "We said send what? We don't have anything other than the title. He said, that doesn't matter."

Mull and Rucker produced a two-part Cinemax special, "Martin Mull Presents the History of White People in America," instructing viewers on the identification of the white person: habitat, the Midwest; its clothing, polyester; its food, tuna noodle casseroles and Cheezits. We were informed the specials were sponsored by the Institute for White Studies in Zanesville, Ohio, and funded through a grant from Tastee-Freeze.

The specials were among the most successful Cinemax had aired, and they spawned two best-selling books. In 1986, Mull and Rucker followed up with a four-part series on white religion, crime, stress and politics.

The series has since been packaged for home video.

Mull, the on-camera host of the series, took viewers right into the lair of the white people, Hawkins Falls, Ohio, and introduced them to quintessential white couple Hal and Joyce (Fred Willard and Mary Kay Place) and their offspring, Debbie and Tommy, students at Dinah Shore High School.

Now Cinemax presents White People: The Movie. "Martin Mull in Portrait of a White Marriage" premiered on the cable channel last week and is being played Thursday and on Sept. 17, 20, 23 and 28. The two-hour movie takes characters from the instructional series and sets them up for a psycho-cultural crisis — even as the day of the Hawkins Falls Founder's Day parade approaches.

"White People" was often viciously satirical. In "White Marriage," Mull and Rucker have softened up. The laughs are more mainstream, and the movie is a virtual homage to old-fashioned values in the face of Hollywood starshine.

For his part, Mull is now proud father of a 3-year-old daughter. His wife, Wendy, a composer, wrote the score for "White Marriage" and has a bit part — as an ex-con trying to start a diaper service.

In the movie, Mull plays the slick host of "Ask Martin," a "Donahue"-like talk show. When he can't fill a studio in Pittsburgh, he goes to Hawkins Falls in a pathetic effort to keep the show afloat, intending to lure starstruck housewives into a gymnasium to talk about such subjects as "women who have lost parts of their bodies through household accidents."

He enlists Joyce as his unpaid assistant and falls in love with her. It seems the big Hollywood star actually longs for the comforts of a Midwestern home. Meanwhile, Hal becomes jealous and embarks on an affair with the minister's wife (Julie Payne).

Michael McKean plays the minister, Harry Shearer, who directed the movie, plays Mull's producer. Robin Williams makes a cameo appearance as Bill Loman, a salesman who is rooming at the same motel as Mull.

Since completing the movie, Mull has moved on from "White People" to black comedy. He's written a feature film, scheduled to go before the cameras this fall, about two homeless men in New York, Eddie Wood and Mr. Nickles, called "Wood n' Nickles."

A new movie for Cinemax, "Change of Heart," will mark his directing debut. "I think the word 'terror' is overused, but apt," he said. "Change of Heart" is a "somber comedy," Mull said, about a heart transplant that raises the philosophical questions implied by the figurative meanings of the word "heart."

Eastwood Gift

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Clint Eastwood made their day at Wesleyan University when he agreed to donate films and documents relating to his career to the Clint Eastwood Cinema Collection.

Aykroyd Will Return Elwood Blues

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dan Aykroyd is bringing back Elwood Blues, for only the second time since the death of John Belushi, who played the other Blues Brother.

Elwood Blues will perform as the Elwood Blues Review, with veteran bluesmen Sam Moore and Booker T. Jones during NBC's "Coca-Cola presents: Live, The Hard Rock," to be broadcast Tuesday to raise money for the homeless.

"It will just be a sample of what the Elwood Blues Review could give the world if we could get some bookings," said Aykroyd, who with Belushi created Jake and Elwood Blues on "NBC's Saturday Night Live."

Since Belushi's death, Aykroyd has performed as Elwood only at the Atlantic Records anniversary concert earlier this year.

Tuesday night's show also features musicians Paul Simon and John Cougar-Mellencamp, comedians John Candy and Jon Lovitz and "Saturday Night" alumni Laraine Newman and producer Lorne Michaels.

"It's great that we have the old team back together again," Aykroyd said.

"It's the best!" Newman said. "It feels comfortable. It feels nice."

Maria Says Life 'Boringly Normal'

NEW YORK (AP) — Maria Shriver, a member of the Kennedy family, a television anchorwoman and the wife of a movie star, says her life is "boringly normal."

Ms. Shriver insists in an interview with McCall's magazine that her goals are pretty much the same as everybody else's: a satisfying career, a happy home life, "some inner peace."

"I just want to survive and hang in there and do good work," said Ms.

Shriver, a niece of President John F. Kennedy and the daughter of Eunice Kennedy and Sargent Shriver. Ms. Shriver works for NBC News in New York and shares a home with actor Arnold Schwarzenegger in Los Angeles.

In her current job, she said, she's "the happiest I've ever been" professionally. Her low point was when CBS canceled its "Morning News," which she co-anchored.

Loni Happy To Let Burt Rule

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Loni Anderson says letting her husband, Burt Reynolds, control their marriage is fine with her.

"I don't want to be No. 1 in this marriage," she said in an interview in the October issue of McCall's magazine.

"For most of my career I was a driven woman, then three years ago my mother died of cancer at a comparatively young age and I sat down to do some serious thinking," she said.

"Did I want to end up an old lady living alone and surrounded by statues, scrapbooks and memories? Or is it more important to have some fine man with whom to share a life, as Mother did? I opted for the latter."

Anderson, who recently finished two television movies, said she and Reynolds plan to raise their recently adopted son in Jupiter, Fla., where Reynolds runs a dinner theater.

"I'll get as many parts as I can that can be filmed in Florida, maybe even another sitcom, but Burt's work comes first," Anderson said.

Smugglers' Contraband May Include 'More Than Drugs'

By LARRY LOPEZ
Associated Press Writer
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Cocaine and marijuana are still the major targets, but spiders and snakes are showing up in some contraband searches.

So are iguanas, desert tortoises and just about anything else that creeps or crawls, officials say. Federal and state officials who patrol Arizona's borders don't keep tabs on their living hauls the way they keep a count of kilos and bales they seize, but consider the numbers in two recent cases:

— On July 28, 1987, the U.S. Border Patrol seized 3,000 iguanas and several hundred tarantulas that were being smuggled into the United States through Nogales, Mexico.

— On March 23, the U.S. Customs Service confiscated 1,600 tarantulas and 500 iguanas from a pickup truck as it tried to cross the border.

"We're not seeing a vast amount cross the border," says Tom McDermott, agent in charge for the customs office in Tucson. "It's just in the course of our normal customs-type of exams."

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Reese Bostwick, who is prosecuting Jorge Manuel Martinez-Quintero in the March 23 incident, says there is "a real market" out there for almost anything that is rare, even when it would make most people's flesh crawl.

Bostwick, who handled wildlife cases for the Pima County attorney's office before switching to the federal prosecutor's office, recalls trailer home bedrooms where walls were lined with reptile cases and closets held "canvas bags full of poisonous snakes."

"To me, it's not normal to sleep in your bedroom with all kinds of reptiles," he said.

"There's big bucks involved," Bostwick added, saying tarantulas go for $1.25 each while Gila monsters can sell for $50 to $75 apiece and the endangered twin-spotted rattlesnake fetches $100 to $150.

Although traffic in endangered or protected species such as 18 types of iguanas is a special focus of such agencies as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, even a common species can draw the attention of customs agents.

That's because federal smuggling laws require importers to declare their goods and pay tax, whether or not the goods are legal.

"Anytime you conceal something and bring it across the border and don't declare it, you are violating a general smuggling statute," McDermott says. That's true even when the item is duty-free, he added, citing laws on declaring currency and jewels.

Smuggling of endangered species and their pelts was a bigger concern in the 1970s, but drugs provide a bigger margin of profit and "it's going to take you just as much room to smuggle in a tarantula" as a more-profitable amount of cocaine, he adds.

Over the years, customs agents "run across every type of commodity conceivable," from pre-Columbian artifacts to bull semen, McDermott says. Still, officers tend to "jump back a few feet" when they open a box that looks as though it could contain drugs but find a boa constrictor, says Assistant Chief Ron Moser of the U.S. Border Patrol's Tucson sector.

Hunting a protected species not only devastates the population but often also ruins the only habitat in which the species can live, Bostwick said.

And while the squeamish may think of a world with fewer spiders and snakes as a better place to live, other animals have provided useful medicines as scientists learned more about them, Bostwick added.

"What if they find out venom from the two-spotted rattler is the only known cure for AIDS?" he said.

Diver

"I get a lot of strange looks when people find out what I do," he said. "And I'd just as soon keep it that way."

Glenn explained that he'd prefer not to have any added competition.

Usually Glenn can be found with a tank on his back and mask over his face entering a water hole, but if the water is shallow enough, Glenn goes in with only his wetsuit, scanning the bottom with his hands and feet.

In raking through the mud and weeds, Glenn often grabs onto objects that are not round, solid and covered with indentations.

"But after you do it long enough, you learn what they are," he said. Glenn was bitten by a non-poisonous snake after he surprised it by grabbing its tail. Snakes can pose problems, but catfish cause the most discomfort, he said.

"During cold weather catfish burrow in the mud. They won't move so you end up reaching in the mud and getting stuck fingers by their sharp spines. It's terrible in the fall and winter."

On occasion, Glenn hooks a snapping turtle — a 35-pounder was his biggest catch.

"I took him out of the pond and put him in a place where he couldn't get back in."

Glenn considers alligators just another hazard.

"I went into a pond one time that had four large gators in it," he said. "I came up and saw they were following me around."

"I went back under and began thinking about it. I got heartburn and decided they could have the hole. It wasn't that great anyway."

As long as the alligator is above water and can be seen, Glenn said he will dive. But once the gator goes under, Glenn comes out.

"Once I was working near the edge with a lot of weeds, and I accidentally grabbed one," he said. "That scared him, and he came after me. That was the end of that day. As a matter of fact, I didn't work for the next two days."

Glenn finds up to 20,000 balls a day, diving as frequently as every two weeks on some courses. On others he may find as few as 2,000 to 4,000 "which is not real great," he said.

Glenn works some courses bi-weekly and others only a few times a year. It all depends on the potential of the ponds to supply him which a large find.

Glenn is either paid for the balls, or he pays for the rights to the balls. If he keeps the balls, he washes them, separates them into categories depending on their condition and sells them.

Often Glenn gets offers for balls from passing golfers. And, at times, golfers just ask Glenn to replace a ball for them because they hit one into the pond where he is diving.

About a week ago, when Glenn was diving in a pond on a Beaufort course, he stood in the water as three female golfers each hit their tee shots into the pond.

As one drove by in her cart, she yelled, "I should have just thrown you my ball."

Aside from surprised animals and balls, Glenn finds other objects such as golf shoes and clubs — from disgruntled or discouraged golfers, no doubt.

"I've got kind of a collection of them at home," he said. "About 200 to 300."

But Glenn doesn't find all of these treasures alone. He often has help.

Abbie Moore, 16, of Charleston, and Edwin Smoak, 19, of Spartanburg have worked for Glenn during the summer.

Both are paid by the ball. Glenn plans to keep diving as long as he enjoys it and stays busy.

 We have often heard bridge players say: "Those who can, play; those who can't, write!" A danger-club suit. In that event, it was quite likely that the major suits were going to split favorably.

 Declarer captured the spade in hand, cashed the ace-king of hearts and then continued with a spade. East refused to ruff the fourth spade, since he would be endplayed, but it did not help. Declarer discarded another club from hand and then threw East in with a trump. That defender's forced club return into the table's major tenace allowed South to escape with losing nary a club trick! ## Fall

By Gail Marie Goers

Fall is a beautiful time of year when leaves turn beautiful colors. It is like a rainbow. The leaves fly down and leave the trees bare. In the mountains, it is a splended sight to see. Some leaves are red;

some are yellow; some are orange; and some are brown. It is fun to sit and watch them fall to the ground. Some trees die at this time of year, but the evergreen trees keep their color. Sometimes

I like to make a pile of leaves and jump in them and be buried in them. It is fun just to sit in them. Parks are pretty this time of year and so are the ponds, because they have leaves around and on them. To me, fall is the very best time of the year and the leaves make it fun.

Gail Marie Goers, 10 a student at St. Peter's School wins this week's writing contest.

Bubbles

By Damita Kerwin

Blowing bubbles can be fun. First open the bottle. Take the seal off. Then take out the wand. Dip the wand in the liquid, and blow your bubbles. When you get through, put the bubbles up. Bubbles look different in many different ways. They can be in big shapes or little shapes. They can be different colors, too. They can be pink, purple, red, blue, and other colors. My two best colors are pink and purple. Bubbles do many things. They can float up. They can pop, too. Some bubbles fly up in the air without bursting.

Trip To Plant And See

By Rick Clay

On our trip to Plant and See, we learned that fertilizer was black, blue and white. Sometimes if you touch it, it will burn you. I liked the fern best. Ferns are very sensitive. If you touch, sometimes they will turn brown right in the spot. The fuschia plant was shipped in from

Rick Clay, 7, a student at Sadie Saulter School receives special mention.

The Storm

By Steve Brown

As the rain pours upon my house. I sit inside as quiet as a mouse.

The clapping of the thunder. The flashing of lightning.

The feeling I get is oh so frightning

As the thunder roars on, The lightning flashes until the rain is gone.

Inside my house I sit so warm, When just outside there was a storm.

Steve Brown, 16, a student at D.H. Conley High School receives special mention.

Why I Love America

By Monica Williams

I love America because I was born in America, and my family was born here. Some of our people fought the civil wars. I love it because we have freedom. Also we can make many choices. America is clean and beautiful. We have most of our needs met.

We have clothes, food, shelter, and education. We also have teachers and schools to attend. We have hospitals and doctors. Everyone helps each other. We love each other. We have freedom and worship with provided protection while we sleep. I am proud to be in America.

Why I Love America

By Jennifer Brick

I love America because each person has a vote that counts. All our officials are elected to serve people by the people's vote.

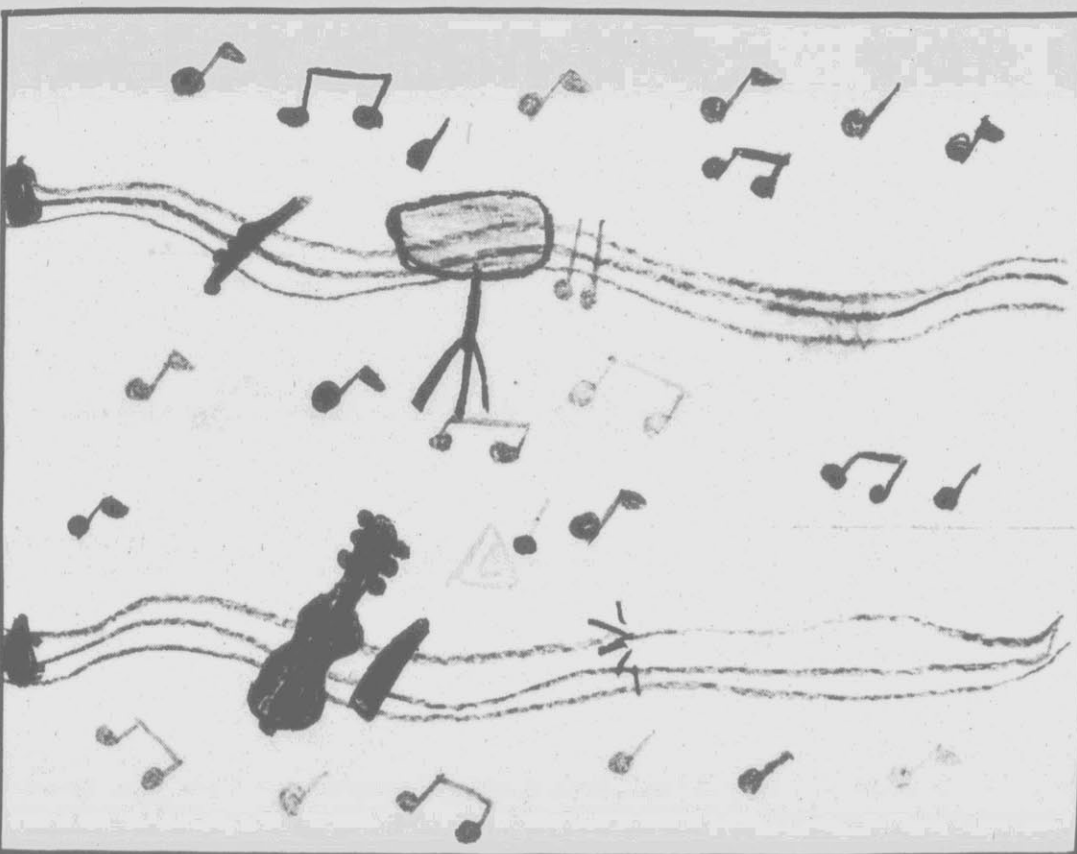

Every person has a choice where they would like to live. They can choose the city and state that they like best. I love America because there are policemen to protect you. We have firemen who risk their lives to help us in case of fire. We have doctors, hospitals and rescue squads to help us when we are sick.

We have freedom of choice to attend churches. One of our most important freedoms is to learn. Every one has the right to go to school.

When I see people of other countries on television, I realize how much we have and how fortunate I am to live in America. I see them with so little and I have so much. That's why I love America!

PUZZLE CORNER

September is National Cat Health Month. Egypians had the first tamed cats who were used to keep mice and rats out of the grain storehouses. Cats were gods to the Egyptians. Mummified cats along with mummified mice and saucers of milk were buried together in cat cemeteries.

Cats are some of the smartest animals and are friendly and independent. Sailors believe cats bring good luck to a ship. In the Middle Ages, people thought that cats spoke English and talked to witches. Many people quote common sayings about cats such as, "Don't walk across the path of a black cat" or "Curiosity killed the cat". Using the key below, decode another saying about cats.

We see a moon. It shines at night and the moon is white. I like the moon. It gives light in the night.

Bill Of Rights

When the United States Constitution was being written, many of the men working on the document desired a Bill of Rights. These were to list to the people the rights which are guaranteed to them. The United States had been ruled by a king and a Parliament which had taken away rights. Therefore some of the writers of the new U.S. Constitution wanted rights of the people to be listed as part of the new government. Other people felt this was not necessary.

The Constitution was ratified or accepted in 1788 but the Bill of Rights were not ratified until December 15, 1791. These are the first ten amendments to the Constitution. These guarantee the right of freedom of the press, right of the people to gather or assemble together peacefully and the right to bear arms or weapons. Included are the right of a speedy trial, the right of a trial by a jury and no excessive or extreme bail to be established. Included in the Bill of Rights is the statement that no one can be required to testify against him/herself in court. These are only a part of the guarantees in the first 10 amendments.

James Madison who is called "The Father of the Constitution" suggested 15 changes or amendments, but the states finally ratified or accepted 10. Ideas for these rights came from various places. Some were from the Bible and others came from laws of ancient Greece and Rome as well as the 1689 English Bill of Rights.

Answer Remains Elusive: 'Who Killed The Red Baron'

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A misty rain and low overcast allowed Capt. Manfred von Richthofen to sleep late Sunday, April 21, 1918, but when the German ace climbed into his bright red triplane to hunt for enemy aircraft along the Somme River in France, it would be his last flight.

Richthofen was shot down before noon and the question of who killed the "Red Baron" would become a timeless controversy for World War I and aviation history buffs.

Jim Butler, a veteran airman, built a duplicate of the Fokker DR-1 the German ace flew as leader of his Flying Circus Squadron and provides part of the answer.

"Richthofen was supposed to be the best. I wanted to see for myself," explained the 45-year-old Butler, owner of an aerial sign company based at North Perry Airport.

The son of a German army major, Richthofen was a cavalry officer when, at 23, a pilot friend taught him to fly. He soloed Oct. 10, 1915, but crashed making his first landing.

When he was killed 2½ years later, he had shot down 80 planes — more than any other pilot in World War I.

Butler soloed at 16 in Manchester, N.H., and moved here in 1953 when his father, an aviator, began a banner-towing service. Over the years, Butler has accumulated 17,000 hours in the air in more than 120 makes and models of small aircraft.

Like Richthofen, Butler has more interest in being in the cockpit than dealing with the mechanical side of flying.

However, Butler and aviation mechanic Ned Ames began constructing the famed triplane in 1977 from copies of plans by its Dutch designer, Anthony Fokker.

Thirteen months and almost $30,000 later, Butler flew his Fokker for the first time Aug. 28, 1978.

"The plane has no inherent stability and it is nowhere near what the Germans said it was," said Butler.

"We duplicated the weight and balance, but I wouldn't put it into a spin. If I did, I think I'd have to jump out."

With its three wings, a pilot could hold the aircraft steady, said Butler, and use it as a "platform" for two Spandau machine guns mounted in front of the open cockpit.

As Richthofen led his squadron that fateful morning, 24-year-old Capt. Roy Brown, a Toronto, Canada, native in the Royal Air Force, took off in his Sopwith fighter from an airfield in Bertangles, France, 25 miles to the west.

Brown had learned to fly in Dayton, Ohio, and suffered from stomach ulcers. Richthofen endured recurrent headaches from a head wound.

The two squadrons met and Australian ground troops watched as a "dogfight" ensued overhead between 12 German and eight British planes.

When Brown saw a bright red "tripe," as triplanes were called, chase 2nd Lt. Wilfred May, who was on his first combat sortie, he pushed his fighter into a dive and went to his friend's aid.

The three planes, lined one behind the other, dropped to below 100 feet of the ground. Richthofen fired at the fleeing Sopwith, but was distracted when Brown shot at him from behind.

Brown got closer, opened fire again, saw bullets hit the Fokker DR-1 and watched the pilot slump forward. The aircraft continued, skimming the deck for an estimated one or two miles.

On the ground, troops saw an opportunity and opened fire at the enemy aircraft.

Sgt. C.B. Popkin and gunners R.F. Weston, W.J. Evans and R. Buie watched their bullets tear into the plane. Sgt. Alfred Franklyn of an anti-aircraft battery and dozens of riflemen nearby fired their weapons.

The plane crashed, and Germany's great hero was dead. When Allied troops examined the wreckage and learned the pilot's identity, the plane was stripped for souvenirs.

There were many individual claims for shooting down the German ace, and the controversy caused political tension between Great Britain and Australia.

Brown was given credit for his 11th and last enemy plane shot down. He died of a heart attack on a Stouffville, Ont., farm March 9, 1944.

"There is no way that plane will fly one or two miles without someone fully at the controls," emphasized Butler. "It wouldn't fly that far at 20,000 feet without spiraling."

Butler is often asked the final question: Who killed the Red Baron?

Loggers Tell Of Their Life In Big Woods

By MIKE THOEL
The Register-Guard

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Screaming saws, crashing trees and roaring trucks they can handle. But that's nothing compared with what they can do with acoustic guitars and mellow voices.

For years, Craig Jenkins and Terry McKinnis of Deadwood, Ore., have been self-taught, "aw-shucks" musicians. The kind of guys who'd duck their heads, grin sheepish grins and strum another tune every time someone suggested they should do something with the original material that was flowing out of their heads and off their fingertips.

So now they've gone and done it. Cut an album that's a polished mix of deft picking, smooth singing and graceful lyrics that capture the loggers' life. And — no surprise to those who've been listening to the two guitar-playing, songwriting buddies for years — the thing is selling.

But Jenkins and McKinnis aren't certain they want the world to beat a path to their door. This furor is enough to make a man want to pick up his saw and retreat to the safety of the woods.

"We've never thought of ourselves as professional musicians," says Jenkins, 35. "We don't read music. We have to memorize everything we write. We just work on something until it sounds good. We do it for our enjoyment and for the people around us."

Their cassette-tape album, "The Snag Fallers Ball," is a mostly light-hearted collection of songs about logging in Oregon and Alaska.

Jenkins wrote nine of the 11 songs on the album and co-authored two others with Don Beck, a friend who also is a logger and musician. Jenkins and McKinnis do the singing on the album, with Jenkins' animated, Burl Ives-like voice dominant.

The two partners are assisted in the guitar work by Doug Daniels, who owns the Eugene recording studio where the album was cut.

The material on the album deals with such woods scenarios as the foibles of family-owned logging operations and the logger's propensity to quit any job that doesn't suit him.

The songs are laced with the jargon of the woods. Loggers who've heard the album give it high marks for clarity.

McKinnis, 34, met Jenkins' sister, Kim, and married her in 1977. The two men have been playing guitar together ever since.

Over the past 10 years, the two have dabbled in creating lyrics and melodies of their own. Jenkins characterizes much of that work as a diversion and describes most of the songs as pieces that were done for one-time special occasions.

"I was writing a few tunes, and we were playing at some places and packing them in," he says. "We started getting a few offers from outfits like the Roadway Inns. I figured it was time to make a decision. So I did. I went with a logging company up in Alaska."

But friends kept making it tough for them to edge away from the idea that songs about logging was intriguing. Last fall, they committed themselves to doing it.

The recording business was a strange new world for them, as foreign as a Coast Range logging operation might be for a studio musician.

After a false start or two, they found Doug Daniels Productions in Eugene, Daniels, a folk musician who established his studio a year ago, made more than one contribution to the album.

"It was like two cultures meeting when we found him," Jenkins says. "We were just a couple of loggers with some music, and we didn't know if he was going to laugh at us or what. He took us seriously."

SAVORY MEAL IN A MUFFIN — Flavorful muffins are perfect fare for breakfast or dinner. Serve them freshly baked for a light breakfast or as a perfect accompaniment for a chicken or ham dinner.

Muffins Are Good Choice For Breakfast Or Dinner

One simple recipe is the perfect answer to at least three different serving occasions.

"Savory Meal In A Muffin" makes a wonderfully light breakfast when baked fresh. Refrigerate what's left and you have a week's worth of "one minute breakfasts" for re-heating in the microwave -- perfect for working couples. This muffin is also the perfect accompaniment for a chicken or ham dinner. If you make them for dinner, you'll have them for breakfast.

The flavor of these muffins is both, "eggy" and light. The lightness comes from sour cream and self-rising flour. "Self-rising" means that the leavening and salt is already added so you save measuring and mixing steps. But the secret ingredient must be the honey mustard. This adds a sweet-savory highlight that wakes up the natural goodness of ham and cheese.

The recipe makes a dozen muffins. Serve them with juice or fresh fruit for perfectly balanced nutrition. The dairy products are a good source of vitamin D and calcium. Enriched self-rising flour provides you ample amounts of the B-vitamins, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin -- plus the minerals, iron and calcium.

SAVORY MEAL IN A MUFFIN
2 eggs
1 tablespoons sugar
1 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons margarine, melted
2 teaspoons honey mustard
1 1/4 cup enriched self-rising flour
1/2 cup chopped ham

1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
Beat eggs with sugar until fluffy. Stir in sour cream, margarine and mustard. Add remaining ingredients; stir just until moistened, do not overmix. Fill greased muffin cups 3/4 full. Bake at 400 degree F. 20 minutes.

It hardly seems fair. The most important meal of the day comes when many people are still half asleep. It's breakfast, of course, a meal that should send you and your family off in the morning with 1/4 to 1/3 of your daily nutrition requirements.

Each member of your family needs a well-balancing meal to start the day. And with the busy, erratic schedules of active families -- late nights at the office, evening basket-

Olympic Menu Planners Must Always Think Big

What does it take to satisfy the nutritional needs of the world's finest athletes competing in the Summer Olympics in Seoul, Korea, from Saturday to Oct. 2?

For starters, it takes a gigantic shopping list that includes: 272,000 pounds of meat; 600,000 pounds of vegetables; 274,000 pounds of fresh fruit; 70,000 pounds of fresh fish; 40,000 pounds of rice; and one million fresh eggs.

It also takes 900 pounds of horseradish, 4,200 pounds of ketchup and 2,400 quarts of soy sauce to add the necessary spiciness that these athletes demand.

The Herculean task of helping a consortium of Korean food service operators fill that epic shopping list while creating a nutritionally complete--and tasty--menu belongs to ARA Services, which is celebrating its 20th anniversary of managing the food service for the Olympic games.

ARA's role in Seoul involves overseeing menu planning, staffing, sanitation measures and other related aspects of serving the 17,000 athletes, coaches and support staff attending the largest Olympic event in history. ARA is also sharing its considerable expertise in terms of Olympic kitchen and dining area planning and design.

ARA's Olympic history dates back to the 1968 Summer

Olympics in Mexico City and includes the 1984 Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles, the 1987 Pan-Am Games in Indianapolis, and the 1988 Winter Olympics in Calgary, Canada.

According to John Scanlan, ARA's vice-president for the Olympic project, the solution to satisfying the divergent needs of athletes--who range in size from 90-pound gymnasts to 250-pound weight-lifters--lies in offering a menu varied enough to meet each individual's particular needs, while also factoring in ethnic, cultural and religious considerations.

Based on previous Olympic experiences, the menu was designed to provide the average athlete with about 6,000 calories per day which is more than twice the caloric consumption rate of an average adult.

A typical breakfast menu includes three juices, yogurt, four fresh fruits, five cereal (two hot), two soups, four egg entrees, five meat and fish entrees, one each from the complex carbohydrate-rich potato/rice/pasta families, eight baked goods, pancakes, french toast, cold cuts, and a 25-item salad bar.

Typical dinner entree selections will include such pro-

A Little Citrus Packs Big Punch For Lunch Boxes

Forty percent of America's almost 20 million mothers working outside the home have children under the age of 18, many of whom bag their school lunches. To avoid the "Back-to-School Brown Bag Blues," busy moms face the daily challenge of creating lunch-time meals that are fun, inexpensive and nutritious.

A kid's idea of "fun food" usually includes a candy bar, soft drink or cookies for lunch, but smart moms will pack a fun food with a lot of nutritional punch--a fresh orange. An abundant supply from California and Arizona make oranges one of the best and most nutritious bargains mothers can find in the supermarket today.

Twenty million cartons of Valencia oranges will be shipped this year from California and Arizona to domestic and overseas markets, enough to fill over 20,000 train cars with the nutritious "gold" of the citrus industry. This juicy, sweet fruit will be in excellent supply this fall at grocery produce departments. Economical prices, with fruit sizes running a bit smaller than last season, make oranges the perfect "kid-sized" snack for the lunch bag or box.

An orange has a high concentration of natural sugars, including sucrose, fructose and glucose, which provide children with a quick and safe pick-me-up on the playground, school bus, or athletic field.

"Today's bountiful supply of oranges isn't the only citrus crop in abundance this fall," says Dawn Gray, sales operation manager for Sunkist Growers. "Choice large sizes of lemons grown in California will be available in ample supply. The crop quality is rated very good this year, with the lemons especially heavy and juicy, making them favorites of lemonade fans."

Eat To Live

Our diets are killing us, according to the Surgeon General of the United States, who called for major dietary reform in a recent report.

Surgeon General Dr. C. Everett Koop said that two-thirds of Americans die of diseases linked to diet. The excess dietary fat in a typical American diet contributes to heart disease, obesity--which affects 25 percent of adults, some types of cancer and other disorders. He also cited salt for its link to high blood pressure.

Changing long-established habits is never easy. However, responding to the Surgeon General's 1964 report on smoking, millions of Americans chose to kick the habit. Health experts hope that the response to this new report on diet will be at least as strong.

Thanks to modern food technology, eating right is easier for Americans than ever before, and sacrificing favorite food flavors is a thing of the past. For example, butter and

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. Our 11-year-old daughter is now too heavy to plot on the weight charts. We've tried to help her diet without luck. Is there something we can do? Concerned Parents, Greenville.

A. Congratulations for monitoring your daughter's growth with her height and weight. If you've talked with your family doctor and he or she agrees that weight loss is appropriate, a new group program in Greenville offered by the East Carolina University Department of Pediatrics may be right for your daughter. I've asked Nancy Gray, nutritionist in that program, to tell us about it. Her description of Life Changes follows.

As a nutritionist in pediatrics, many overweight teen-agers have been referred to me. Teens need more than orders to lose weight. They need to decide they are ready to work on it. Also, teens need more than just a diet to follow. They need the support of friends and family, help with self confidence and a focal point of commitment.

So, we created the "Lifechange: Weight Control Program for Teenagers." Our program is designed for teen-agers 11 to 16 who are at least 15 pounds over their expected weight for height. First, we measure the amount of calories each needs to hold his or her weight. We figure out a good calorie goal for weight loss. We measure how much of their weight comes from fat so we can see if they lost fat or muscle. We measure blood cholesterol and triglyceride levels, blood pressure, blood sugar and a sound wave of the heart to be sure there aren't any hidden problems. Then we put the teens to work together in our nutrition and exercise classes.

The classes focus on good nutrition without excess calories, thin but healthy eating habits, exercise and activity to help with weight loss and self confidence. The teens keep track of everything they eat and make slow weekly changes to improve their eating and exercise habits. They are encouraged to eat balanced meals and to make changes only if they can continue them for the rest of their lives.

An important part of the program is the parent sessions. Parents are given suggestions about food preparation and buying, healthy eating and exercise habits for the family, and what to say to a teen who is trying to lose weight. We try to ease some of the stress that surrounds this touchy time. After the classes are over, the teens are seen by us on an individual basis for a year to reinforce and revitalize. Change takes time.

If your teen-ager thinks we could help him or her, please give me, Nancy Gray, a call at 551-2513 for details and changes. Adults interested in weight control classes should watch for announcements of Winding Your Weigh Down offered by the Department of Family Medicine.

Treat The Family To A Hearty Salad

When the football game is over, treat the whole family to a Marinated Beef and Walnut Salad. It's cool, refreshing and satisfying. Best of all, it's easy on the cook.

Tender, cooked beef strips, sliced strips are steeped in a mildly-sliced fresh mushrooms, and pimiento strips are steeped in a mildly-spicy marinade and heaped onto plates of crisp, shredded lettuce. A generous sprinkling of toasted, seasoned walnuts adds the final touch of superb flavor and texture.

Having a portable feast? Pack the salad greens, beef mixture and walnut topping in separate containers and place in the picnic cooler. When you arrive, simply build the salad into pocket or pita bread. Finish with your favorite dessert, and it will be an occasion to remember.

Toasted, seasoned walnuts are also delicious toppers for other salads. Try them in mixed greens, chicken or seafood for added crunch and nutrition. And, as snacks, these walnut nibbles are hard to resist.

Make an extra batch and store in an airtight container in the refrigerator. The walnuts will keep for several weeks, if you can resist temptation that long!

MARINATED BEEF AND WALNUT SALAD

1 cup large pieces walnuts
1 teaspoon salad oil
1/2 teaspoon marjoram, crumbled
1/3 cup chili sauce
1/4 cup garlic flavor red wine vinegar

1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 cup (4 oz.) thinly sliced cooked beef strips

1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons pimiento strips
1 head iceberg lettuce horseradish cream

Spread walnuts in shallow pan. Bake in 350 degrees F. oven about 10 minutes, stirring several times. Toss with oil, marjoram and seasoned salt; set aside to cool. Combine chili sauce with vinegar and mustard; mix well. Pour over beef, mushrooms and pimiento strips; refrigerate up to 2 hours.

At serving time, line individual serving plates with lettuce leaves. Shred remaining lettuce and arrange

Homemakers Can Cut Salad Dressing Calories

By Betsy Balsley
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

With all of the emphasis on the need to follow a healthful diet these days, it is not surprising that the market for low-calorie and low-fat salad dressings is alive and well. Salads have always been popular in America — the bigger and fresher, the better.

But in spite of their popularity, until about five years ago, most diners thought nothing of slathering favorite salads with a thick, creamy — and highly caloric — blue-cheese dressing.

Have things changed? Absolutely. Thin is in. And so is good nutrition. No longer do most of us, with a clear conscience, top a crisp fresh salad with 400 calories worth of salad dressing. Just walk into the nearest supermarket and survey the increasing number of reduced-calorie commercial dressings on display and you will quickly realize that it is definitely a dieter's world today. The array is mind-boggling.

There are thick dressings, thin dressings, spicy sweet-and-sour dressings, low-calorie blue-cheese dressings — all geared to add flavor to salads and other foods without adding unwanted calories and fats.

The only problem with many commercial dressings is that although they have taken out the calories, the manufacturers have, of necessity, left in stabilizers, preservatives and other additives that those watching their nutritional intake may prefer to avoid. Even good label readers often can be misled. All-encompassing terms such as "vegetable oils," for instance, can conceal the fact that the oils used may be vegetable oils high saturated fats such as coconut or palm oils.

Granted, these dressings are convenient, and many are, indeed, nutritionally worth their cost. However, the one sure way to know exactly what is in the salad dressing is to make it yourself. And that is much easier and much less time-consuming than one might think.

It all depends on the type of salad dressing you prefer.

If you like a light vinaigrette-type dressing, it is a simple matter to reduce the calorie content by replacing part of the oil with tomato pulp or some other pureed fruit or vegetable to cut the sharpness of the vinegar used.

Unflavored gelatin is another ingredient that will provide body in an oil-free dressing, while low-fat cottage cheese and buttermilk, when combined, make an acceptable substitute for sour cream in a cream-style dressing.

A somewhat more unusual choice as a stabilizer-thickener for a salad dressing is plain old rice. That's right — rice.

To create a rice-based dressing, cook a small amount of white rice in a large amount of water until the grains burst and become supersoft. This will take about 45 minutes, but once the rice is soft enough to puree, you can make a whole variety of dressings in a blender.

If you only want to make a small amount of dressing, the excess rice base will keep nicely in the refrigerator for five to seven days. If it solidifies as it chills, just throw it back into the blender or bring to room temperature and whisk vigorously to reliquefy it.

Because it is a very bland food, the cooked-rice base acts as a stabilizer and natural filler rather than as a flavoring agent. Thus it can be mixed with almost any other ingredients to create the type of dressing you want.

Although the following recipes include one for the rice base and two suggestions for how to use it, a small amount of experimentation will show how easy it is to substitute this almost flavorless base for all or most of the oil in other dressings. And there is still another plus for this oil-less base.

Rice Dressing base
4 cups water
1/2 cup rice
Bring water and rice to boil over medium heat, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat and simmer mixture 45 minutes or until rice grains split and are very soft. Remove from heat and place mixture in blender container. Makes 2 1/2 cups, about 9 calories per tablespoon.

HONEY-LIME RICE DRESSING
1 1/3 cups Rice Dressing Base
3 to 4 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1/4 teaspoon grated ginger root
2 teaspoons lime juice
1/4 teaspoon lime zest
Place rice base, honey, mustard, ginger and lime juice in blender container and blend until creamy. Stir in lime zest. Refrigerate until 1 hour before serving. Serve at room temperature. Makes 1 1/2 cups, about 17 calories per tablespoon.

HERBED TOMATO-RICE DRESSING
1/2 cup Rice Dressing Base
1/4 cup water
1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded and quartered
1 clove garlic, peeled
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons minced fresh basil or tarragon leaves
Salt
Combine rice dressing base, water, tomato, garlic, balsamic vinegar and lemon juice in blender container and blend until creamy. Stir in basil and season to taste with salt. Makes 1 1/2 cups, about 5 calories per tablespoon.

ITALIAN MUSHROOM SOUP
12 ounces fresh mushrooms
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 teaspoon minced garlic
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups half and half or light cream
1/2 cup chicken broth
3 tablespoons dry marsala
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
Chopped parsley
Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms (makes about 4 cups); set aside. In a medium saucepan melt butter. Add onion and garlic; saute until tender, about 3 minutes. Add reserved mushrooms; saute until golden, about 4 minutes. Add flour; cook and stir, until a smooth paste is formed, 1 minute. Add cream, chicken broth, marsala, salt, nutmeg and black pepper. Cook until thickened, about 5 minutes. Garnish with chopped parsley.

Note: If a thinner, less rich soup is desired, substitute an additional 1/2 cup of chicken broth for 1/2 cup of the half and half.

LOW-CALORIE LEMON FRENCH DRESSING
1/2 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
1/2 cup boiling water
1/4 cup lemon juice
Sugar substitute to equal 1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon minced onion
1/4 teaspoon curry powder
1/4 teaspoon paprika
Few strips lemon zest, optional
In jar with tight-fitting lid soften gelatin in cold water. Add boiling water. Cover and shake to dissolve gelatin. Add lemon juice, sugar substitute, onion, curry powder and paprika. Shake well.

Chill about 1 1/4 hours or until dressing begins to thicken. Shake well. Add lemon zest for garnish, if serving separately. Serve with crisp green salad. Makes 1 cup, about 5 calories per tablespoon.

LOW-CALORIE BLUE CHEESE DRESSING
1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup water
2 ounces blue cheese
White pepper
Garlic powder
Onion powder
Combine cottage cheese, lemon juice, salt and water in blender or food processor container and blend until smooth and creamy. Add blue cheese and blend until nearly smooth. Season to taste with white pepper, garlic powder and onion powder. Store covered, in refrigerator. Will keep up to 5 days.

Makes 1 1/2 cups, about 15 calories per tablespoon.
LOW-CALORIE TOMATO DRESSING
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1 (6-ounce) can tomato juice
1 clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dash pepper
Chopped green onion
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt
Blend mustard with a little tomato juice and let stand 5 minutes. Add garlic, remaining tomato juice, oil, lemon juice, pepper, 1 tablespoon chopped green onion and Worcestershire and beat well. Season to taste with salt. Store in covered jar and chill.

separately, sprinkle with additional chopped green onion before serving. Serve with greens or avocado halves. Makes 1 cup, about 26 calories per tablespoon.

CENTURY PLAZA LOW-CALORIE BUTTERMILK DRESSING
1 1/2 cups low-fat cottage cheese
3/4 cup low-fat buttermilk, about 1 cup
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon minced green onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Place cottage cheese, buttermilk, lemon juice, white pepper and salt in blender container. Blend until smooth. If too thick, add more buttermilk. Stir in green onions and parsley. Makes 2 1/3 cups, about 10 calories per tablespoon.

Olympic Menus Are Big Items

tein-rich fare as: Fillet of Beef Steak, Chicken Cacciatore, Braised Pork with Green Peppers, Salmon Steak and Broiled Beef Bul-Gal-Bi, a traditional Korean dish containing marinated beef, garlic and red pepper. Kimchi, a peppery hot mixture of pickled cabbage and other vegetables, is another popular Korean dish which also will be well represented.

In addition to directing the food service for the athletes, ARA also is providing 24-hour food service for some 1,400 NBC News and Sports employees, including technicians and on-air personalities.

Operations, which began in early August, employ mobile units to transport meals daily to crews at various events. Catering trucks, featuring ARA-designed equipment, offer continental breakfasts daily.

ARA also is working with a local Coca-Cola bottler to operate about 115 food and refreshment concession stands at 20 venues throughout Seoul and Pusan. A total of 780 ARA-trained employees will serve five million spectators such interesting and unusual fare as walnut balls, squid, and rice-wrapped in seaweed.

For those not traveling to Seoul for the games—here is a recipe for sampling Olympic-style nutrition at home. This pasta dish is from a cookbook which ARA Services' dietitians compiled using recipes from its previous Olympic experiences.

VEGETABLE LASAGNA

- 1 cup chopped onion
- 3/4 cup chopped celery
- 1/3 cup chopped green pepper
- 3 tablespoons butter or margerine
- 1 can (28 ounces) crushed tomatoes
- 1 cup water
- 1 1/2 teaspoons oregano leaves, crushed
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon Worstershire sauce
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1 1/4 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
- 9 lasagna noodles, uncooked
- 2 cups thinly sliced zucchini

In 2-quart saucepan cook onion, celery and green pepper in butter or margerine until tender. Add tomatoes, water and seasonings. Bring to boil. Reduce heat; simmer over low heat, uncovered, 30 minutes. Add 3/4 cup mozzarella cheese, stir until smooth. To assemble; preheat oven to 350 degrees F. In 12 x 8 x 2-inch baking dish, spread 1 cup sauce. Top with 3 noodles, 1 cup zucchini and 1 cup sauce. Repeat layers of noodles, zucchini, sauce, noodles and sauce. Sprinkle with remaining 1/2 cup cheese. Cover tightly with aluminum foil. Bake 45 minutes. Remove foil; cook 15 minutes longer. Remove from oven. Let stand 15 minutes before serving. Makes 8 servings.

Oranges Wake Up Lunches

"Grapefruit, a breakfast favorite on many tables, harvested primarily in Riverside and Ventura counties in southern California during the summer months, will be smaller in size than usual, with the Ruby variety displaying a nice exterior blush on the fruit, and a bright interior color," adds Gray.

To add a nutritious punch to today's lunch, here are some tips to beat "Back-to-School Brown Bag Blues":

— Give children a good variety of foods, selecting one item from each food group. Include such high protein foods as eggs, peanut butter, meat, poultry, fish and cheese; a whole grain bread of complex carbohydrate such as pasta or rice; milk or other dairy products for calcium; a raw or cooked vegetable, and a raw fruit for dessert.

— Keep the meal "eye-appealing" and "feel-appealing" with a rainbow of colors and a variety of food textures and shapes. Raw carrots and celery sticks, green peppers and red pepper strips, raw broccoli and cauliflower flowerettes are all "kid-pleasers," but make them more interesting with a cheese, yogurt, or peanut butter dip.

— Make sandwiches creative by stuffing your sandwich fillings into such white bread alternatives as whole wheat pita pockets, croissants and sourdough rolls.

— Give meals crunch and high fiber by adding chopped nuts or apples to sandwich fillings, or sliced almonds or non-buttered popcorn as a side snack.

— Keep cartons of fruit juice cold by freezing the night before, then wrapping in plastic wrap. The juice will thaw out in time for lunch and keep other items in the bag cool.

— Add nutritional citrus 'gold' to the meal with a fresh Sunkist Valencia orange, cut into "smiles" for easy eating. Just cut the orange in half crosswise; place cut-side-up. Cut three to four wedges from each half and place in a plastic bag. To pick the perfect orange in the fall, don't reject fruit that is green on the stem end. This greenish tinge is actually a natural "regreening" process that occurs during warm weather when the orange's skin reabsorbs chlorophyll from the tree. It's actually a sign that the orange is fully ripe, sweet and delicious.

Some kids find school fun, some find it's a bore and to some, it's a totally new experience. Keep the fun alive and the "bored" surprised by introducing some creative crunchy appeal to bag lunches. Here's some sandwich and snack recipes that pack a creative nutritious punch.

CHICKEN SALAD IN POCKET BREAD

- 1 can (about 5 to 6 ounces) chunk white chicken, drained
  - 1 small unpeeled red apple, cut in bite-size pieces
  - 1/4 cup chopped celery
  - 1/4 cup mayonaise or salad dressing
  - 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped walnuts
  - Grated peel of 1/2 fresh lemon
  - 1 teaspoon fresh squeezed lemon juice
  - 1/2 teaspoon prepared mustard
  - 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
  - 2 (6-inch) loaves pocket bread, cut in half
- In bowl, combine all ingredients except pocket bread. Spoon 1/4 chicken mixture into pocket of each bread half. Makes 2 sandwiches.

ORANGE GRANOLA NUT SPREAD

- 1 teaspoon fresh grated orange peel
  - 1 orange, peeled, cut in bite-size pieces
  - 1 cup granola
  - 1/2 cup chunky peanut butter
  - 2-4 tablespoons honey
- In bowl, combine all ingredients, adding enough honey for a spreadable consistency. Makes about 2 cups filling for 6 sandwiches.

ORANGE POPCORN BALLS

- 4 quarts popped popcorn
- 1 cup coarsely chopped nuts
- 2 cups sugar
- 1/2 cup fresh squeezed orange juice

- 1/2 cup half&half
- 1 tablespoon butter or margerine
- Grated peel of 1 orange

In large pan, combine popcorn and nuts; set aside. In saucepan, combine sugar, orange juice and cream; cook over low heat, stirring constantly until sugar dissolves. Cover; boil 1 minute to dissolve sugar off sides of pan. Increase heat slightly; cook to hard ball stage (260 degrees F.) on candy thermometer, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat; stir in butter and orange. Slowly pour the hot syrup over popcorn and nuts; toss until evenly coated. Shape popcorn mixture into balls with buttered hands. (Mixture is hot and sets quickly—so work fast.) Cool on waxed paper. Makes 18 to 20 small popcorn balls, 2 inches in diameter.

This recipe works best with two people—one to pour, the other to stir, and both to quickly form balls.

The '50s: When Well-Rounded Meals Were Square

By Irene Sax
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Forget chocolate truffles and Scotch salmon. When I am hungry and needy, I want my mother's icebox cake.

Of course, it was not exactly my mother's. You might say it was Nabisco's.

To make it, she bought a package of dark-chocolate wafers. She stuck them together with whipped cream, spread more cream over the top and sprinkled on a lot of chocolate-wafer crumbs. When the cake had ripened in the icebox, she cut it on the diagonal into zebra-striped slices of black biscuit and white cream. Delicious.

I am not alone in my nostalgia for the unfashionable dishes made with processed foods that were popular in the 1950s. Many of my friends admit to similar passions: if not for icebox cake, then for California dip; if not for tuna noodle casserole, then for green beans and canned onion rings baked in Campbell's cream of mushroom soup.

"People desperately want to eat something familiar," said Jane Stern, co-author with her husband Michael of "Square Meals" (Knopf). "Even though we're now grand and sophisticated, it's hard to feel cozy about Famous Young Chefs, ditsy portions and squid pasta. In an age of anxiety, the middle-class soul food we grew up with reminds us of safer times."

The style that the Sterns call "vernacular cooking" or "populist cooking" or "things made from other things" blossomed from the end of World War II until the 1960s.

A lot of '50s food was good, better than we are willing to admit in this decade of fresh goat cheese, baby vegetables and undercooked fowl (One of the hallmarks of a '50s casserole is that even though all the ingredients are precooked, it is still baked in a 350-degree oven for an hour).

As a style, populist cooking has been fiercely in and out of favor. At first, everyone loved it. Such culinary sophisticates as James Beard included brand names in cookbooks and invented new ways for food corporations to use their products. In the '50s, Beard worked for Pillsbury, Nestle and Green Giant, said his biographer Evan Jones, and was the one responsible for adding butter sauce to vegetables-in-a-pouch.

But when food fashion turned away from hamburger pies and cake-mix cakes, home cooks remained faithful. You have only to look at the hundreds of dishes made with Bisquick and Jell-O in spiral-bound charity cookbooks to see how faithful they are.

"Are people still cooking this way?" Stern asked. "You bet they are. It really tickles me that Michael and I are credited with bringing back a style, when in 99 percent of the country, it simply never went away." Now the fashionable food world is paying attention again. Fifties food is coming back, along with '50s harlequin glasses, pedal pushers, kidney-shaped coffee tables and linoleum.

The '50s were certainly a time of optimism. The war, which introduced GIs to croissants and pizza, also convinced them that there was no place like home. The women who had been filling in for them at work covered their typewriters, put down their riveting guns and went back to the kitchen. The birthrate went up. The move to the suburbs began.

Nothing, it seems, could be less like our own decade of two-career families, workaholics and restaurant mania. But that is just why the nostalgia makes sense.

A recipe does more than tell us how to cook: It also communicates a set of values. The nostalgia we feel for English-muffin pizza and Ginger-Ale salad echoes our nostalgia for what seems a simpler time: for Lucy, Ozzie and Harriet, Beaver, Dobie Gillis and The Honeymooners; for a time before technology got out of hand, when Mom was in the kitchen and all was right with the world.

Maybe we are not so different from the people of the '50s as we think. We are still in love with technology, although now our toys are microwave ovens instead of home freezers.

We still care about speed and convenience. How much difference is there between 1988's frozen dinner and 1955's canned sausage, corn, lima bean and cheese-soup casserole?

We still like portable and snack foods. Much of '50s food was designed to be eaten on a patio or while watching Milton Berle on the new television set. Thirty years later, the catchword is grazing, and we are eating while walking on the street or sitting in front of the VCR.

And if predictions are right, we are also going to be spending more time at home. Kraft Inc. does a study of consumer trends every year. What it found this year, said Velveta spokeswoman Kim Burson, is that we are not going to restaurants as much as we did. We are getting married, having babies and enjoying home-bound activities such as watching the VCR.

Breakfast

bowl, mix together milk, egg and oil. Stir into dry ingredients; mix well but do not overstir. Add carrots and raisins. Spoon batter into lightly greased muffin pans.

Bake at 400 degrees about 15 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in middle comes out clean.

This will yield 12 muffins, with about 4 grams of fat each, and about 130 calories each.

Oatmeal adds an interesting new flavor to a traditional breakfast favorite. This recipe is designed to be low in fat, so don't add extra butter or margarine at the table. Instead, top with fresh fruit, applesauce or syrup.

OATMEAL PANCAKES

1 1/2 cups quick cooking oatmeal
3/4 cup unsifted whole wheat flour
1 tbs. sugar
1 tsp. baking soda
2 tbs. oil
2 cups buttermilk (or 2 cups skim milk plus 2 tsp. lemon juice)

optional flavorings:
1 tsp. vanilla
cinnamon or nutmeg to taste
Combine oatmeal, flour, sugar, and baking soda in bowl. Add oil, milk, egg, and any optional flavorings desired. Stir vigorously until thoroughly mixed. Let batter stand at room temperature for 30 minutes.

Drop mixture from spoon onto preheated griddle or skillet. Bake until bubbles form, then turn and bake on other side. Serve and top with favorite syrup or fruit topping.

This will give you about 8 pancakes, 4 inches in diameter, of about 170 calories and 6 grams of fat each.

Diets

margarine, both high in fat and "weighing in" at 100 calories per tablespoon, are "off limits" on low-fat diets. However, now their rich flavors may still be enjoyed.

A new alternative, Molly McButter All Natural Butter Flavor Sprinkles, provide real rich butter taste with virtually no fat, no cholesterol and only four calories per half-teaspoon serving. Praised as a "better butter" by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, it may be sprinkled onto or stirred into hot, steaming foods such as vegetables, baked potatoes, fish, chicken and pasta to provide rich butter taste with virtually no fat or cholesterol and only four calories per half-teaspoon serving. In addition, it is low in sodium.

The Surgeon General's report recommended that the use of salt be limited both at the table and in food preparation. Since salt is an acquired taste, the salt habit can be kicked when salt and salt substitutes are eliminated from the diet. Unmasked by salt, natural food flavors can be surprisingly good.

Those who would like to reduce salt consumption but who yearn for flavor can turn to natural herbs and spices to enhance the taste appeal of foods. Created to add great flavor to foods without salt, all-natural Mrs. Dash is a balanced blend of 14 herbs and spices. Available in four varieties, it provides an easy way to start shaking the salt habit.

For two free brochures full of tips on how to add fabulous flavor to foods without salt and without the fat, cholesterol and calories of butter or margarine, send your name and address to: Molly McButter, Mrs. Dash; Dept. Health; 2525 Armitage Avenue; Melrose Park, IL 60160.

Italian CREMINI MUSHROOMS

That's right. Italian Cremini mushrooms are like white mushrooms but have a unique outer color—a tan if you will. That's why we're nicknamed California Browns or Golden Creams. It's just like when you get a tan—unchanged on the inside with a healthy color outside.

And healthy is a key word. Today's nutrition-conscious consumers love us. Creminis are rich in protein, vitamins and minerals (especially potassium). Also we're low in fat, calories and sodium.

And we've got class, too.

Indeed. Italian Creminis have true clout over more ordinary white mushrooms. We have more flavor and flair with a distinctive, intense taste which makes us a gourmet's choice. Creminis have a reduced water content making us great for stuffing. We shrink less during cooking so we offer the consumer more servings per pound than white mushrooms.

We stay longer in your refrigerator

Although we won't stay around long on your produce shelves, we could. Creminis have an extended shelf life of approximately ten days. Also we don't bruise easily.
