Gilbert Heads For U.S. Coast

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Thousands from southern Texas to Louisiana's bayous shuttered homes and shops, packed up livestock and fled to higher ground today as Hurricane Gilbert roared across the Gulf of Mexico toward the U.S. coast.

"This is a killer storm," said Gordon Guthrie, director of the Florida Division of Emergency Management. "I feel sorry for anybody wherever this hits."

Grocery stores ran low on bottled water, batteries, canned tuna and bread as residents laid in supplies. Homeowners covered windows and doors with plywood and shatter-proofing hurricane tape. Offshore oil workers headed inland.

Early today, Gilbert appeared headed for Texas, possibly hitting land by Friday afternoon. The National Weather Service issued a hurricane warning this morning for the southern half of the 370-mile Texas coast from Brownsville to Port O'Connor, a stretch that includes Corpus Christi. Mexico's northern coast also had a hurricane warning.

A hurricane watch remained in effect for the remainder of the Texas coast, from Port O'Connor north to Port Arthur.

"The highest probabilities that we have are in the Brownsville, Texas, area as far as the center is concerned," Robert Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said on CBS's "This Morning." "If it takes the north turn, it could actually rake a good portion of the Texas coast."

"Those major destructive winds are going to be in there fairly tight close to the center. But the impacts are going to be felt over most of the Texas area."

The giant hurricane, considered one of the strongest ever, was blamed for dozens of deaths in the Caribbean and left 500,000 Jamaicans homeless before it struck Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula on Wednesday, forcing thousands to evacuate.

It weakened somewhat as it passed over the peninsula, falling from a Category 5 — the strongest rank — to a Category 3 as top sustained winds eased to 120 mph from 175 mph. But forecasters said they expected it to go back up to a Category 4 now that it was back over the gulf, with winds of at least 130 mph.

The 1,600 students and about 200 patients at the University of Texas Medical Branch on Galveston Island were being evacuated, said spokeswoman Leann Teymour.

In Louisiana, 10,000 people had orders today to leave homes along the bayous on the state's flood-prone coastline. Grand Isle, a barrier island resort where 2,100 people live, was evacuated Wednesday, as were many of Plaquemines Parish's 15,000 residents.

"I'm scared to death," said Pam Quigley, who recalled the devastation by Hurricane Celia in 1970. "If you could have seen Corpus Christi

PCMH Patients May Have Received Tainted Blood

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

About 50 units of blood that could have been contaminated with the AIDS or hepatitis B virus were used by patients in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. But a hospital official said the risk is very small that those patients will get the viruses from the blood.

Dr. Ernest Larkin, director of the Blood Bank at PCMH, said the 50 units of blood that were released by the American Red Cross Blood Services by mistake, were among 60,000 units of blood transfused at the hospital from March 1985 to July 1988.

The 50 units were used in about 35 patients at the hospital, he said.

"Now what we'll do is contact the physicians of those patients, and we're beginning to do that as rapidly as possible," Larkin said. "Our primary concern is the safety of those patients and their families."

"As a precautionary measure, what we'll do is contact their physicians and recommend that those patients be tested," he said. "I think the risk is very small."

The American Red Cross announced Wednesday that 2,420 products nationwide and 821 products in the Tidewater Region were mistakenly released for use from 1985 to 1988.

The Tidewater Region includes 63 counties and 52 hospitals in southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina, Pitt among them.

"Most of the mistakes involved donations that test negative for AIDS, but for various reasons were not in compliance with Red Cross or FDA (Food and Drug Administration) directives that require such donations to be quarantined and/or destroyed," Victor W. Schmitt, vice president of the national Blood Services, said in a news release.

For example, if a donor who was previously found to have "false-positive" test results gives blood again, the FDA and the Red Cross required that the subsequent donations be quarantined and/or destroyed even when they test negative for AIDS or hepatitis B.

The Tidewater Region was one of the regions which didn't categorize subsequent donations as suitable for transfusion.

"Those donors in fact were retested and were all negative, and those were the units that were transfused," Larkin said. "The tests are not 100 percent. It requires some interpretation."

Official Says Need For Donors Critical

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

It's a fact. You can't catch AIDS, hepatitis B or any other virus by giving blood, but you can help save lives.

The Tidewater Region of the American Red Cross serves 63 counties and 52 hospitals in southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina — including Greenville and Pitt County.

And, 550 units of blood are needed each day to meet the transfusion needs of patients within this region, David Parsons, an administrator for the region, said. The region averages five bloodmobile operations daily.

But, the blood supply usually is short "all summer through the middle of September and then the traditionally holiday times in the winter through January," Parsons said.

"Type O almost always is in short supply," he said. "The largest, most common blood type is O, therefore the most common blood needed by the patients is O."

"To try to ensure that we are able to collect the 550 units per day, the bloodmobile calendar is set a year in advance so sponsors can reserve rooms and start making plans," Parsons said.

But, the plans do not always work

Bentsen Staff, Volunteers Prepare For Friday Visit

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Democratic Vice Presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen of Texas is scheduled to arrive at the Kinston Regional Jetport at 11:45 Friday, and to travel to Greenville, where he will appear at 12:30 p.m.

More than 50 local volunteers are working with Bentsen's national campaign staffers and Secret Service agents to make his visit to Greenville run smoothly.

"We expect it to be a festive occasion," said Kris VanGiesen, a national advance staff member who sets up campaign stops all over the country for Bentsen and his running mate, presidential candidate Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts.

VanGiesen and six other national staffers have been working in Greenville this week to prepare every detail of Bentsen's visit, including finalizing the guest list of top state Democrats, putting up signs, blocking off streets around the courthouse and making sure there is enough ice tea on hand for people to wash down the barbecue.

The event, scheduled for 12:30 outside the courthouse, will include entertainment from East Carolina University band members, barbecue sandwiches, cole slaw, ice tea and campaign comments from U.S. Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., who dropped out of the presidential race after the March 8 Super Tuesday primary involving 20 Southern states.

VanGiesen said other top state Democrats set to attend the rally include Lt. Gov. Robert Jordan, candidate for governor; state Sen. Tony Rand, candidate for lieutenant governor; Bob Etheridge, candidate for state superintendent of public instruction; state Agriculture Com-

Police Kill Three Bus Hijackers

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — South African police Wednesday attacked hijackers holding a busload of pilgrims going to see Pope John Paul II and said three hijackers and a young woman hostage were killed during the rescue.

Eleven passengers were wounded, the remainder were freed and a fourth hijacker was arrested, South African police headquarters said.

Lesotho government officials said 71 hostages were in the bus.

The military government of Lesotho, a black kingdom that lies inside South Africa's borders, requested South African help in handling the hijacking.

There was no immediate government statement on the shootout.

Police said the shootout took place when the hijackers tried to drive the bus through the closed gates of the British High Commission, or embassy, in Maseru.

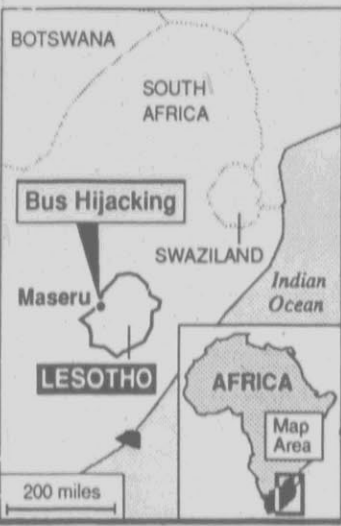

Reporters were barred from the area at the time of the shootout, but later they saw the bus, its windows shot out, lying wrecked in the high commission courtyard just inside the gate.

South African police said officers returned fire after the hijackers began shooting.

Police said the hostage casualties were "apparently caused by the wild firing of the hijackers." They said no policemen were injured.

The shooting broke out about 20 minutes after the pope arrived in Maseru, eight hours behind schedule. The hijackers earlier demanded to meet with the pope and Lesotho's king, Moshoeshoe II, a government official said.

After nightfall, gunfire and explosions were heard at the site where the bus was parked, and flares lit up the sky.

Reporters were blocked from getting close enough to the scene to see the shootout, but they saw ambulances taking casualties to a hospital.

Police ordered journalists at the scene to disperse and then chased them away with whips.

The pope arrived in this mountain kingdom after an overland journey from Johannesburg, where bad weather forced his plane to make an unscheduled landing. John Paul met Foreign Minister Pik Botha at the airport and was briefed about the hijacking before leaving for Lesotho.

State-run Lesotho Radio said there were about 70 hostages, including eight nuns, 36 children, 16 women and 10 men.

One nun is from Canada, and the rest of the hostages are from Lesotho, said Tom Thabane, secretary for Lesotho's six-man ruling military council.

One man escaped Wednesday from the bus.

Armed security forces from both Lesotho and South Africa surrounded the bus. Botha said Lesotho authorities had asked for help with security and that South African personnel were "in attendance to render advice."

Thabane said the hijackers belonged to the guerrilla Lesotho Liberation Army. He said the government "has no intention of meeting the demands of terrorists."

The state-run South African Broadcasting Corp. said a man claiming to be a spokesman for the guerrilla group telephoned its Bloemfontein, South Africa, office and denied responsibility for the hijacking.

The four hijackers posed as pilgrims when they boarded the bus Tuesday at the start of its journey from rural Lesotho, said police commissioner James Dingiswayo. They then took over the bus, announced they were from the Lesotho Liberation Army, and said anyone who resisted would be killed, he said.

Lesotho Radio said the hijackers were armed with an automatic rifle, a pistol and two grenades. The radio said the hijackers had gone to the British mission because Britain, the former colonial power in Lesotho, was training the country's army and police force. Their request to meet High Commissioner John Edwards

Rand Outlines Road Plan

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

State Sen. Tony Rand, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, campaigned in Greenville on Wednesday, outlining his plan for improving the state's highways and criticizing his opponent's stance on the issue.

Rand, 49, of Fayetteville, proposed a $1 billion Economic Development Highway Trust Fund, to be distributed by state transportation officials to areas showing the greatest need to complete roadways to generate economic growth.

He discussed his plan at a morning press conference at the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The state Department of Transportation would hold hearings across the state to allow development commissions and other groups to make a pitch for funding pet projects, such as the Northern loop scheduled to be constructed around Greenville.

"This kind of thing could be speeded up," Rand said.

Rand also said N.C. 17 is an important north-south corridor for eastern North Carolina, and the trust fund could pick up the pace of improvements.

"I think the development of 17 in eastern North Carolina is most important," he said. "It ... helps tie eastern Carolina together and makes them more readily accessible."

Less pressing projects would still be financed with transportation funds appropriated yearly by the General Assembly, Rand said. He said the state has developed a $12-million backlog of highway-construction needs.

His plan is aimed at eliminating the backlog, and he said he would recommend several ways the Highway Study Needs Commission could finance the $1 billion trust fund.

In a prepared statement, Rand said the state would need about $100-$130 million a year to repay the $1-billion bond issue which would provide the basis for the fund.

The state could also stretch the highway fund's resources by allowing local governments to purchase portions of rights-of-way needed for highways, asking local governments to help raise money to finance projects and shifting money from other state funds to help finance the trust fund.

Such transfers could come from revenue generated by the sale of motor vehicle parts and accessories, which currently totals about $70 million and goes into the state's general fund.

Rand also said every one-cent increase in the gasoline tax would generate $40 million in revenue, and the state's current fuel tax — about 15.7 cents per gallon — is two cents less than rates in Virginia and Tennessee, and about even with South Carolina's.

Rand cited several reasons why the state has not kept pace with the need for highway construction: North Carolina receives less federal funding for highways than four years ago, gas tax revenues have declined because there are more fuel-efficient vehicles on the road and the cost of building highways has doubled since 1975.

While his program is expensive, Rand said, it is more affordable and efficient than the plan offered by his opponent, Republican Jim Gardner of Rocky Mount.

"My opponent says I was irresponsible not to accept Gov. (Jim) Martin's $450-million bond proposal, and he seems to have not ideas of his own as to how to solve the problem," Rand said. "But that bond issue was a bad deal for the taxpayers."

He said Gardner's plan would ask the taxpayers to refinance an old debt the state already has, and no money would be paid on the principle of the bond until 1992.

Under Gardner's plan, Rand said, the interest on the bond would mean that taxpayers would pay $2.34 for every dollar's worth of roadway constructed.

But under his plan, Rand said, taxpayers would pay just $2.12 for every dollar's worth of roadway.

Stansell Recipient Of ECU's First Endowed Business Professorship

BY GEORGE A. THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

An expert on financial institutions and real estate has joined the East Carolina University as a recipient of the university's first endowed professorship in the School of Business.

Dr. Stanley R. Stansell, a former professor of economics and finance at the University of Mississippi, is the holder of the Robert Dillard Teer Jr. Distinguished Professorship of Business. The professorship was endowed by a gift from the Dillard Teer family of Durham and by a challenge grant program for endowed chairs set up by the N.C. General Assembly in 1985.

A native of Jacksonville, Fla., Stansell was a professor of economics and finance and the chairholder since 1982 of the Tom B. Scott Chair of Savings Institutions at University of Mississippi. He has also taught at the University of South Carolina, the University of Houston and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

School of Business dean Ernest B. Uhr described Stansell as "a senior scholarly leader" who will assist business faculty in achieving their potential.

He said the School of Business "will utilize the experience of the chairholder to inspire, instruct and assist in activities which will enrich teaching, develop research and furnish service."

Stansell holds the B.S. and M.B.A. degrees from Florida State University and the Ph.D. in Business Administration from the University of Georgia. In addition to teaching, Stansell has worked as a financial economist with the Farm Credit Administration and as a security analyst with Gulf Life Insurance Company.

At ECU, Stansell will teach courses in commercial banking and real estate and will also conduct research in the areas of financial institutions and real estate markets. He is currently involved in a study of the stock markets in the United States and India as well as a study of the credit union industry.

Related to his research, Stansell has written more than 30 articles published by leading business magazines and journals and has delivered numerous presentations to meetings and conferences.

"My wife and I are very pleased to be in Greenville and at East Carolina University," Stansell said, adding that he is looking forward to learning more about eastern North Carolina and its business interests.

The professorship held by Stansell is the first in ECU's history. It was established in 1986 in honor of Robert Teer, a 1967 graduate of ECU.

Teer is president and managing director of Teer Associates Inc., a real estate development, leasing and management firm in the Durham, Raleigh and Chapel Hill area.

The endowment to support the Teer professorship totals more than $500,000. Of this, $333,000 was a gift from the Teer family. The state's portion is $167,000.

"It is probably the most significant gift to ECU for academic purposes in recent years," said James L. Lanier, vice chancellor for Institutional Development.

"The Teer family is very respected in the business community of North Carolina and their commitment to ECU and to the School of Business adds stature to our programs," Lanier said.

Trade Bill Faces Delay

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Textile industry supporters confess they are worried over plans to send their embattled trade bill to a House-Senate conference committee just weeks before Congress adjourns.

"The quickest way would be to get it over to the president because you can get delayed in conference," Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., a leading textile industry supporter, said Wednesday. He expressed fear that "we'd get it into conference and never get a vote."

Designed to protect American manufacturers from foreign competition, the bill would freeze textile and apparel imports at 1987 levels and limit growth to 1 percent annually starting next year.

Non-rubber footwear imports would be frozen at 1987 levels with no provision for any increase in the share of the American market that foreign manufacturers already command.

Textile-state lawmakers say the bill is needed to save American jobs. Critics counter that it would raise prices, narrow consumer choices, bring retaliation against U.S. exports and cost more jobs than would be saved.

President Reagan, in an interview published in The Washington Times on Thursday, said the version of the bill passed by the Senate is "purely protectionist and must be vetoed."

The Ways and Means Committee decided on a voice vote to send the measure to a conference committee to resolve differences between the House and Senate versions, dashing hopes of textile forces that Senate changes would be quickly accepted and the bill whisked to Reagan's desk.

Other delays already have plagued the bill. The Senate passed the measure last week but has been unable to send it back to the House.

ANNOUNCING A RADICALLY DIFFERENT CD FOR CONSERVATIVE INVESTORS.

The Wachovia Convertible CD Gives You The Flexibility To Switch To A Higher Rate, Without Penalty, If Interest Rates Rise.

Until now, when you invested in a certificate of deposit you had to stay with a fixed rate for the term of the certificate or incur penalties. Now, Wachovia introduces a new and innovative CD that lets you take advantage if a better rate comes along. The Wachovia Convertible CD.

Convert Without Penalty

The term is one year. But after three months, if interest rates rise anytime during the remainder of the term, you can switch to another one-year Convertible CD at the higher rate. Or to a non-convertible CD of one year or longer. All without incurring a penalty.

... And Keep On Converting

You can continue to convert to a new one-year Convertible CD as long as interest rates rise. All we ask is that you wait at least three months between conversions.

Safe And Secure

Like other Wachovia CDs, the rate on the Convertible CD is guaranteed for the term of your certificate, unless and until you decide to switch to a higher rate. Your new rate is also guaranteed for the full term. So it can't go down if interest rates fall. And the current opening rate on the Convertible CD is 7.75%, with an annualized yield of 8.057%.* So it's a good deal right from the start.

Convert To The Convertible

If you have a CD maturing, or you're considering a new deposit investment, the Convertible CD is a smart, safe way to catch interest rates on the rise. It's available only from a Wachovia Personal Banker. Because a better way to invest has always been The Wachovia Way.

Jetties Would Harm Environment

Finally, Ronald Reagan has done the right thing. But he did it for the wrong reason.

President Reagan's rejection of a $110 million jetty-building project to keep North Carolina's Oregon Inlet open was environmentally correct. The jetties would only worsen erosion and their ugliness would detract from the aesthetic beauty of the Outer Banks.

But Reagan nixed the project for financial reasons — the Office of Management & Budget said no, so the president said no. He made the correct decision. Never mind he made it for the dollar sign and not the motive of deep-down benefit.

For watchdogs of North Carolina's coast, any victory that safeguards constantly-threatened resources is a welcome one. Building jetties to keep Oregon Inlet from filling up with sand and becoming non-navigable is folly, and the consequences of such a project would be environmentally severe.

Mother Nature opened Oregon Inlet on a whim, and she can close it with equal suddenness. The history of man's attempt to alter this course is a lesson in failure and further destruction of resources. Building jetties might — and that uncertainty should be emphasized — keep the channel of the inlet open to fishing craft, but it would surely speed erosion of the Pea island Wildlife Refuge south of the inlet.

This fact makes N.C. Gov. Jim Martin's questionable proposal to build the jetties with state money look like what it is — an attempt to regain ground lost when fellow Republican Reagan rejected Martin's plea to fund the project. The governor's plan to build scaled-down jetties that don't even touch the shore is questionable legally, environmentally foolhardy and a waste of state tax dollars.

Granted, the state has a stake in whether the inlet remains open, since it is a channel used by fishermen and boats serving the N.C. Seafood Park in Wanchese. Livelihoods depend on Oregon Inlet being navigable, and placing that park in an area at the mercy of an uncertain channel was questionable. But the past proves man's interference with natural forces are unsuccessful. Building the jetties would amount to throwing good money after bad.

Martin is clearly frustrated over his failed influence in the White House in this election year, and has offered an unsound alternative to save face. Democratic opponents should likewise seize an election-year opportunity to point out the plan's shortcomings and insist any expenditure of state funds must be proven worthwhile.

Thanks, Reagan, for making the right decision — even if it was for the wrong reason.

Pardon, Please

The performance of 1988 East Carolina University nursing graduates on the state nursing exam was incorrectly reported in an editorial in the Sept. 9 Daily Reflector. The editorial should have stated that 61 percent of the the graduates passed the test, not failed it.

Dukakis could say, in language adapted for mass audiences, that we are witnessing the rise of a rentier society. The political potential for Dukakis is in this fact: Most people are not rentiers. Or, more precisely, most people do not think of themselves as such. That qualification is necessary because anyone who is vested in a pension program is involved through it in the stock and bond markets and thus has a stake in interest and dividends.

Dukakis should stress that to pay the interest component of the 1988 budget will require a sum ($210 billion) equal to approximately half of all the personal income-tax receipts. This represents, as Sen. Pat Moynihan has said, a transfer of wealth from labor to capital unprecedented in American history.

Tax revenues are being collected from average Americans (the median income of a family of four is slightly under $30,000) and given to the buyers of U.S. government bonds — buyers in Beverly Hills, Lake Forest, Shaker Heights and Grosse Pointe, and Tokyo and Riyadh. If a Democrat can't make something of that, what are Democrats for?

But here Dukakis confronts the problem of being a "progressive" in an affluent middle-class country. Only a minority of Americans — a small and shrinking minority — think of themselves as "labor." And the vast majority of that minority is already for Dukakis.

Furthermore, Americans are pleased to think of themselves as living in a "classless" society. That implausible belief is actually the imperfect expression of two other ideas. One is that almost everyone is in the middle class. The other is that social mobility is such that with pluck and luck almost anyone can make it into the middle class. (The exception to this rule is the large semi-permanent underclass that seem impervious to social policy.)

But such sentimentalities aside, politics is about who gets what, especially as a result of government action. In the Reagan years, a particular social stratum has gotten a lot. The people who get income from property have benefited, especially from the huge deficits that have put in place a permanent high level of government borrowing that produces high interest rates.

For decades, "deficit spending" has been denounced by conservatives as a Democratic device for redistributing income to the undeserving poor. The Reagan deficits have, with fine impartiality, helped the rich.

Marxists, who believe that history has an inner logic, like to say "it is no accident" that whatever happens happens. In fact, the kindness of Reaganomics toward the property-owning class (according to Mishel and Simon, the value of the financial assets of more than half of all families in this classless society in 1983 was zero or negative — they had more debts than assets) has been the predictable consequence of a class-based policy. The policy is trickle-down economics.

Republicans can reasonably argue that a beneficial policy for those at the bottom of the social heap is a policy that energizes those at the top — the investing, entrepreneurial class that makes the wheels turn in a free society where government does not run a command economy. However, that is a politically awkward argument to make during a political campaign, even in a democracy as committed to capitalism as this one is. Dukakis might do well by forcing Bush to make that argument.

To the editor:

Michael Dukakis a real American? His staff has just recently decided to add American Flags to his now-stalled campaign. This from a governor who vetoed legislation allowing the Pledge of Allegiance to be said in the classroom. Dukakis claims he supported the bill, but it violated the Constitution. What an unpatriotic excuse!

Dukakis experienced? In 1978 Dukakis was voted out of office because he raised taxes after promising not to. Instead of reducing spending, Dukakis takes the traditional Democratic way out — promise the world for a vote and then raise taxes to pay for your vote!

Dukakis competent and sleaze-free? Rehiring the man who derailed Senator Biden's Presidential campaign as his own campaign co-director is not competent. Having an education advisor is prison for giving away $80 million in fake consulting contracts is not exactly sleaze-free.

Dukakis' "Boston-Austin" ticket historic? America does not need a return to the 1960's when our President had affairs on his wife. America does not need a vice president who becomes President long enough to wreck the American economy fighting a war we were not allowed to fight and win. That, my friends, is not historic.

Dukakis and a positive campaign? Dukakis says he wants to keep the campaign positive. Rehiring John Sasso is not positive. What was positive about the tasteless Ann Richards and her Democratic colleagues in Atlanta? They needed a silver foot in their mouth.

And where was George? George was there. Maybe we should ask Ted Kennedy where he was in 1968 going over the Chappaquiddick Bridge.

Maybe George Bush is not such a bad guy after all.

To the editor:

At the annual Cotton Field Day and Exhibition Sept. 7 at Johns Station near Laurinburg Governor James Martin told the crowd and statewide radio audience about the history of cotton in North Carolina from invention of the cotton gin until today.

After citing the low point in cotton production in 1979, Gov. Martin said he wanted to tell "the rest of the story." His rest of the story was to correctly credit cotton's comeback in North Carolina to elimination of the boll weevil. Gov. Martin said "our" program has been so successful that it is being copied by other states.

Gov. Martin left out part of "the rest of the story." On Sept. 21, 1982, while a member of Congress he voted against HR 7072 which contained the money for the Boll Weevil Eradication program. Fortunately for North Carolina cotton growers, the bill passed without his vote and despite opposition by the Reagan-Bush Administration. Three months after voting against boll weevil eradication, Congressman Martin voted on Dec. 14, 1982 for HJ 631 to raise his own salary 15 percent to $69,800.

"Our" boll weevil eradication in North Carolina was not administered by any agency coming under Gov. Martin, but by the N.C. Department of Agriculture under Democratic Commissioner Jim Graham.

This is the rest of "the rest of the story."

Iran: No Longer So Implacable

A cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war and recent overtures by Iran toward the West have together raised speculation about the release of nine American hostages said to have been taken by Iran-backed elements in Lebanon. The Reagan administration now needs to pursue these opportunities — not only to free the Americans but also finally to open the door toward constructive ties between the United States and Iran.

The White House should face the current realities in Iran. Despite a string of recent military and economic setbacks, Iran will remain an important geopolitical force in the Middle East for the foreseeable future.

Even after a decade of tension and bitterness between the two countries, Iran shares certain interests with the United States and is not necessarily committed to remain an implacable foe.

Clearly, there is opportunity for mending relations between the United States and Iran. The goal of improved ties should be not only freedom for nine Americans but also an end to the American hostage phenomenon altogether. However, positive change will not come about unless skillful diplomacy — unlike the clumsiness of the Iran-Contra affair — is brought to bear.

The time has come for the Reagan administration to consider restoring commercial and diplomatic ties with Iran. Moreover, it should not dismiss out of hand Iran's recent offer to help obtain release of the U.S. hostages in exchange for return of Iranian assets withheld by the U.S. government. Washington must not lose sight of the fact that these properties actually belong to the Iranians, and releasing these assets no longer involves any concessions or major policy reversals on the part of the United States, as it might have during the Iran-Iraq war.

The assets come in two forms. First, there are funds — the exact amount is in dispute, but is in the billions of dollars — awaiting settlement before a special tribunal in The Hague. They are a holdover from the Algiers accord that ended the 1979-81 hostage ordeal, and President Reagan should move swiftly to arrange for their arbitration. (Of course, various U.S. assets have been frozen by Iran, and these, too, must be part of any settlement.)

This sensitive period for U.S.-Iranian relations comes at a crucial time in the U.S. presidential campaign. Both the Republican and the Democratic candidates should resist the temptation to use inflammatory rhetoric against Iran.

David S. Dodge, the first American to be taken hostage in Lebanon by forces supported by Iran, was kidnapped in July 1982 while he was acting president of the American University of Beirut; he was released one year later. Part of his captivity was spent in Iran.

A Predictable Consequence Of A Class-Based Policy

WASHINGTON — Pelting Michael Dukakis with unsolicited advice is a low-tech but high-growth industry, so here goes. He should tell the country that the Reagan-Bush administration has miraculously made Karl Marx seem correct — this at a moment when there are no longer any believing Marxists east of the Elbe River.

If Marx had been scribbling away in the Library of Congress (our equivalent of the British Museum, where Marx scribbled), in January, 1981, as Reaganites marched into Washington, he would have said: The class struggle is about to intensify. During the Reagan Terror, labor will lose ground to capital.

Today it can be argued that compensation of labor, including wages and salaries and fringe benefits, as a share of personal income is at the lowest level of any peak year (meaning any year at a comparable stage of an economic expansion) since 1947. The difference is not huge, but there it is. And according to a study for the Economic Policy Institute, by Lawrence Mishel and Jacqueline Simon, since 1979 income from property ownership (rents, dividends, interest) has risen three times faster than income from work.

Dukakis could say, in language adapted for mass audiences, that we are witnessing the rise of a rentier society. The political potential for Dukakis is in this fact: Most people are not rentiers. Or, more precisely, most people do not think of themselves as such. That qualification is necessary because anyone who is vested in a pension program is involved through it in the stock and bond markets and thus has a stake in interest and dividends.

Pledge Of Allegiance A No-Win Issue For Dukakis

WASHINGTON — When he hears the current debate over the Pledge of Allegiance, Republican consultant David Keene says, he is reminded most of all of the Panama Canal.

In 1976, the unexpected response of voters — to charges that the United States was being forced to "give up" the canal — made it the most salient issue for Ronald Reagan, who nearly seized the Republican presidential nomination from Gerald Ford.

This year, George Bush's repeated criticism of Michael Dukakis for vetoing an obscure state bill involving the Pledge of Allegiance almost a dozen years ago has become one of the most effective issues of the Bush campaign in raising doubts about the Massachusetts governor — especially among some of the swing voters that Dukakis needs most to win.

The substance of the issue has been thoroughly lost: whether public-school teachers should face $1-a-day fines if they don't lead their classes in the Pledge of Allegiance.

The symbolism of the issue has taken over, with Bush so far having painted Dukakis into a corner. The Republican seems to be standing up for the Star-Spangled Banner and old-fashioned values, while the Democrat is siding with the Supreme Court and a bunch of lawyers, not figures who rate the same beloved status.

"It's devastating," Earl Black, a political scientist at the University of South Carolina and an expert on Southern politics, declared.

'Some Dukakis aides now argue that the attacks could be turned to create a backlash against Bush, but most independent analysts believe it is too late.'

"Dukakis has managed to put himself on the wrong side of a sacred symbol. That's the equivalent of a $20 million campaign contribution to the Republican Party."

He and other analysts said the issue probably hurts Dukakis most among the conservative whites he needs to win Texas and other southern states, most of whom already back Vice President Bush, as well as among blue-collar ethnic workers in the industrial Midwest and Northeast who so far have been drawn to Dukakis by his economic message and his immigrant roots. In a nationwide Gallup Poll released Tuesday, almost one-third (31 percent) of all registered voters surveyed said they had a less favorable opinion of Dukakis because of the way he has handled "the pledge issue." Among "swing" voters — those who said they were undecided or only loosely committed to either Bush or Dukakis — one in four (26 percent) said they had a less favorable opinion of Dukakis because of it.

And in a CBS-New York Times poll released Tuesday night, 70 percent of those surveyed said they disagreed with Dukakis on the pledge issue, saying that teachers should be required to lead classes in the Pledge of Allegiance. Half said they felt that way even if that policy was found to be unconstitutional.

The pledge is one of several issues that the Bush campaign has used to portray Dukakis as a liberal who is out of the mainstream of American thought and out of touch with American values. Bush has also said that Dukakis is a "card-carrying member of the ACLU," a soft-on-crime supporter of prison-furlough programs and gun control, and a Harvard elitist who opposes crucial weapons systems.

In "focus groups" of voters last spring, Bush's strategists found that the pledge veto and the Massachusetts furlough program were especially effective in peeling off swing voters who were viewing Dukakis favorably. Making a not-so-subtle point when he finished his speech at the Republican convention last month, Bush asked the audience to rise and join him in reciting the pledge.

Another thing that helped was Dukakis' initial response, which was to argue the constitutional underpinnings of his veto. As in the Panama Canal debate, "the other side was into legal and technical and complicated arguments ... while the average guy says, 'I don't give a damn about that' ..." Keene said. "People were sick and tired of every time they thought they could support the United States, somebody said it was all more complicated than that."

The governor and his staff clearly underestimated the issue at first. California Rep. Tony Coelho, the House majority whip, and Dukakis privately discussed the fledgling attack the day after the Democratic convention in July, when Dukakis was campaigning in Coelho's home district. "I think that Dukakis was insulted by it when he should have understood the low-level rhetoric that they were into," Coelho said Tuesday. "By the time he treated it seriously, it had already hit."

Indeed, Bush's strategists were delighted when Dukakis raised the issue himself to reporters last month, charging that Bush was "not fit to hold the office" of president if he was willing to sign an unconstitutional bill.

Finally, last Friday, Dukakis compared the Republicans who are "attacking my patriotism" to those who cheered the tactics of Sen. Joseph McCarthy in the 1950s — just the sort of emotional and outraged defense of his patriotism that political analysts said he should have been delivering from the beginning.

Some Dukakis aides now argue that the attacks could be turned to create a backlash against Bush, but most independent analysts believe it is too late. They advise Dukakis to find some other issue he can use to reassert his support of fundamental American values.

"The pledge is a total no-win situation for him and he should move on," said GOP strategist Charles Black, who last week highlighted the pledge issue in a Republican party mailing to 300,000 Democratic households in Texas. Democratic pollster Geoffrey Garin agreed.

Recreation Board Endorses Skateboard Facility Request

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission on Wednesday night approved three recommendations and proposals, approved another on a contingency basis, and turned down one proposal.

Approved recommendations go to the Greenville City Council for that body's action.

Considerable discussion of a request to allow the installation of a skateboard facility at Jaycee Park took place before commission members gave its mark of approval.

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, assured those asking questions that in the matters of city liability, cost factors to be assumed by the department and other aspects of the proposal had been thoroughly researched.

Wade Gulledge, spokesman for the Safe Wheels of Pitt-Greenville group explained that funds for building the skateboard ramps have been raised and that safety measures on the part of those to use the ramps had been emphasized, to include wearing helmets and other safety gear when skateboarding.

Lee said that Kurt Fickling, the city's insurance carrier, had extensively investigated the liability records of other cities with public skateboard facilities and concluded that the sport was as safe from a liability standpoint as average playground equipment.

The cost to the city to install the ramps at Jaycee Park, Lee said, would be about $1,500 for a fence, plus the cost of maintenance that would follow.

The recreation commission recommended a one-year trial period, issuing each participant a use card, and making the program self-supporting.

The board's motion also includes a clause giving Lee authority to close the facility if he thinks danger or mis-use exists.

Gulledge emphasized that a park skateboard facility will be safer for skateboard enthusiasts than streets and sidewalks.

In other business, Paul E. Waldrop, Jr., president of the Pitt County Veterans Council, presented a dual request for honoring Vietnam veterans in Pitt County. His asked to establish a memorial near the flag site in the Town Common and to rename the site to Veterans Memorial Park.

Commissioners unanimously agreed to permitting the Veterans Council to place a suitable memorial there, but turned down the idea of renaming the Town Common.

Waldrop said the memorial will be about six feet wide, three and one-half feet high. It will bear the emblems of the five major military services — Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard and Air Force, but would not contain the names of individual veterans.

The cost for the memorial will be underwritten by the county's various veterans organizations.

Also, Bill Brown asked the city to give permission to bring to Greenville a half-scale replica of the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C. for a one-week period, possibly in April next year. The temporary memorial would be erected on the Town Common, adjacent to the amphitheater stage.

Brown, representing the Vietnam Veterans of Pitt County, explained that all costs would be the sole responsibility of the Vietnam Veterans.

The moving (or traveling) replica, conceived by three veterans in San Diego, California, is 252 feet long. It has raised lettering containing all the names on the original wall. Additionally, while the replica is here, auxiliary services to include the directory to locate names will be available with help provided by volunteer veterans.

The veterans group will also provide portable lighting for night viewing, 24-hour guard and a daily clean-up crew.

Brown estimates that for a one-week stay, the memorial would attract 5,000-7,000 visitors.

On the issue of proposed renovations at Guy Smith Stadium, commissioners voted to approve, on a contingent basis, the renovation request. It has been scaled down from an original estimate of $20,950 to a little below $16,000.

Lee is to contact city officials to try lowering the cost estimate even more by using city staff members, particularly those in the city's engineering department.

A request from a group wishing to establish a non-profit Friends of River Park North to assist in fundraising for the park was unanimously denied.

Denial was based on the fact that the Greenville Foundation is capable of handling any donations for any type programs in the park, and that a second foundation is not needed. It was noted that means exist for any donor to indicate a specific use of funds, so that a River Park North program could be designated through the Greenville Foundation.

In executive session, commissioners directed Boyd Lee to negotiate with officials at the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center on their concerns for changing the contract relating to the Greenville Aquatic and Fitness Center facility located at the center. Commissioners will further consider the request after receiving a report from Lee.

NASA delayed announcement of a launch date for space shuttle Discovery because the hurricane could disrupt operations at the control center in Houston.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements issued an emergency proclamation allowing local authorities to suspend laws "to preserve the health, safety and welfare of the public," including such things as the direction of highways.

On the Bolivar Peninsula outside Galveston Bay, most beachgoers and about 3,000 residents left by sundown Wednesday, packing the Bolivar Ferry to Galveston all day long, said Police Chief Farris Collier of Crystal Beach.

"Some of them are being stubborn and are saying they're staying no matter what," he said. "But if it hits here, they won't be here any more."

"If I wasn't the city manager, I'd evacuate myself but I'm required to stay," Galveston's Doug Matthews said today on ABC's "Good Morning America." "We've never seen anything like this type of hurricane in the gulf... It's going to kill."

Galveston Mayor Jan Coggeshall said on CBS that her greatest fear was that people would decide to stay and wait out the storm.

Two Galveston residents were arrested for trying to sell plywood for windows and doorways at an inflated price just hours after the City Council passed an emergency ordinance designed to stem price gouging by merchants.

Hurricane frenzy also was apparent in Cameron Parish, La., a thin layer of lush marsh just above sea level that has been a frequent front door for hurricanes over the years.

The parish of 10,000 residents boasts about 5,000 head of cattle.

"We'll be working all night to get them out," Francis Bride, a Lake Charles physician, said as he helped shove the rumps of balky steers into a packed trailer.

The impact of the 450-mile-wide storm was felt even in areas not expected to be hit by Gilbert.

State emergency officials in Montgomery, Ala., began making preparations to receive thousands of people who could take refuge there from the storm.

Many grocery stores in Corpus Christi had run out of bottled water, and supplies of batteries, canned tuna and bread were running low Wednesday afternoon.

out. For example, "yesterday at ECU (East Carolina University), we were expecting 200 units, we got 75. Probably that relates to the weather. It was a gorgeous day," he said.

But, "we wound up 125 units short and we'll have to get it somewhere else."

Hospitals are distributed blood based on historic need and immediate need, Parsons said.

"There is a stock amount the hospitals get which is based on their historic stocks needs, and of course, anything over and above is based on the need at the time," he said.

Ideally, the hospitals and blood centers keep a three-day supply of blood on hand, but "that's if we have all the blood we want."

Healthy persons interested in donating blood may call their local Red Cross chapter or attend one of the local bloodmobiles.

Bloodmobiles scheduled in Pitt County through November are: Today at East Carolina University; Mendenhall Student Center, from noon to 6 p.m.; Oct. 3 at Pitt Community College from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Oct. 10 at Greenville Aquatics and Fitness Center from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.; Nov. 1 at Greenville Moose Lodge from noon to 6 p.m.; Nov. 2 at PCMH from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Nov. 16-17 at ECU, Mendenhall Student Center, from noon to 6 p.m., and Nov. 19 at the Farmville Armory from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Allocation Of Health Care Resources Focus Of Forum

BY CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The 10th annual Health Law Forum under way at the East Carolina University School of Medicine focuses on how to best allocate health care resources.

Two principals in the conference, Durham resident James E. Davis, president of the American Medical Association, and Durham resident Clark C. Havighurst, a professor of law at Duke University, differ in their views of the problem.

Havighurst said Wednesday at a news conference that the technological options available today are so numerous and so expensive that people are going to have to start making early decisions about which procedures they will pay for and then stick to their agreements.

This would be done, he said, by buying an insurance policy that would cover certain eventualities and not others. An example of a procedure that he said that is terribly expensive and often not contributory to long-term high quality of life is the liver transplant. He said one might wish to buy a less expensive policy that would not cover a liver transplant knowing that in the event of liver failure this would not be an option.

Havighurst likened the health care market today to a department store and said it's been thought in recent years that everyone should be able to shop in the penthouse luxury department all the time. Economic realities will prevail and judgment will have to be exercised by patients and doctors alike. Some people will have to use the medium-priced department, while some will be confined to the bargain basement.

Davis said he believes that doctors must be conscious of cost containment, but must put their patients' welfare first. He said this country is now spending 11 percent of its gross national product on health care and he believes that most people would be in favor of this percentage being raised, possibly as high as 15 percent, if that is what is needed to maintain or increase quality of life in this country.

Davis said a study is now being done at Harvard that will be presented to the office that sets Medicaid and Medicare rates in this country. It will take a new look at the relative values of various health care procedures and services and will be resource-based, he said.

Davis spent a few minutes during the conference explaining his proposal to the medical community that every physician tithe his time to his community. He has gone on record during his tenure as AMA president advocating that every member physician do some highly visible community service at least four hours a week that let the public know that he or she is a generous person interested not only in his or her own economic well-being, but the good of the community. He said many physicians give in non-visible ways, but he believes that visibility is important to improve the image of doctors everywhere.

Rescue Day Events Slated

WINTERVILLE — The annual Rescue Day program begins in Winterville with a pancake supper at 5 p.m. Friday. A parade and rescue competition highlights Saturday's schedule.

Winterville Rescue Squad Captain Ashley Dail said Rescue Day gives squads from the central and eastern parts of North Carolina a chance to practice skills they will use in state rescue competition Oct. 7-8 in Morehead City.

Rescue Day Chairman William Nobles said this seventh annual program has been expanded to two days to accommodate more people.

Activities begin with Friday's supper and continue with an auction at 6 p.m. and the "Little Miss Winterville" contest at 7 p.m.

Saturday's program begins at 9 a.m. with a parade featuring rescue and fire-fighting equipment, followed about 11 a.m. with the rescue-squad competition.

"The two-day event was decided on because of the number of events we are having," said Dawson Page, past chairman of Rescue Day.

This year's activities include craft displays, a talent show and other entertainment.

Friday's events are at 6th Winterville fire Department, while Saturday's are at the Winterville Recreation Park.

Rescue Day, Page said, "is our way of showing the citizens of Winterville and Pitt County how hard the volunteers of the county play as well as work."

Bakker Tells Court Salary Was Set By PTL Directors

By MARY BROOKS
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — PTL founder Jim Bakker has contradicted testimony that the board of directors never approved his salaries and says he still believes "God will restore Jim and Tammy to Heritage USA." Bakker was expected to continue testifying today in PTL's $52 million claim against him, his wife and former top aide David Taggart.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds is hearing the case in which PTL attorneys are seeking to force the Bakkers and Taggart to repay money they say was lost through mismanagement of PTL accounts and unjustified compensation and benefits.

Bakker testified Wednesday afternoon that his salary was set by the television ministry's board of directors, which also approved his raises. Earlier that day, a former board member testified that the board "never ruled on salaries."

Bakker was asked by PTL attorney Brad Leggett who decided his 1984 salary of $228,000, and an increase in salary in 1985 to $291,000.

Bakker responded that both were set "by the board of directors."

"I have been with Heritage Village Ministries for 15 years and the board began my salary then and any raises would have been voted up from that point," he said.

Bakker also said he did not know what the salaries were for Taggart, who has been described as his right-hand man, and Dortch. Leggett said minutes from a board of directors' meeting showed Bakker had been given the power to set the salary for his staff.

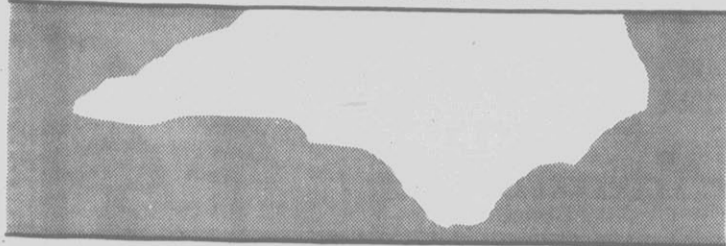

"I wasn't involved with the day-to-day financial operation," Bakker testified. But he added, "I believed the buck stopped with me."

He described his primary duty as "the spiritual oversight of the activities of the church, and to set the direction of the ministry."

Outside of the courthouse, Bakker said he did not feel the PTL suit was persecuting him.

"We still have faith in the future," said Bakker, who left the ministry in March 1987 amid a sex and money scandal. "I'm very happy today. The exciting part is that I'm finally going to be able to document what Jim and Tammy did do (at PTL)."

No Place Like Home

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Margaret Green doesn't have any running water indoors, but she says the cold water from her well suits her just fine.

"That well does my stomach good," she said. "It's never gone dry."

Mrs. Green, 77, a retired housekeeper, is widowed and has no children. But she does have friends in the Tobaccoville area of Forsyth County who look out for her.

Her log home on a gravel road has kept the outside out and the inside in for the 50 years that she has lived there, although the home gets a bit breezy at times. She doesn't know how old the house is.

She said she likes the place, even though the walls are full of holes and she has to attach wallpaper to beams and outside siding.

And she isn't worried about getting electricity through extension cords plugged into light fixtures, a roof that appears likely to cave in and a large hole underneath the floor where the soil has washed away. The corners of the house are perched on rocks.

"I don't get a bit scared of it," Mrs. Green said.

Despite its condition, the inside of the home is meticulously neat, right down to the kitchen knives that hang on the wall.

The county has won a $232,000 federal grant to renovate 23 homes in her neighborhood. But Daniel Kornelis, the county housing coordinator, said Mrs. Green's home is beyond repair, and he wants to demolish it and move her somewhere else.

Co. is exceeding two key categories of its 1988 budget by more than $70 million, intensifying the company's need to adopt cost-cutting measures, a newspaper has reported.

Duke officials last week disclosed to employees that capital spending, or money to acquire or improve buildings, machinery or other assets, will be an estimated $39 million over budget, sources who asked not to be identified told The Charlotte Observer.

In addition, expenses for power plant operations and maintenance, excluding fuel costs, are expected to run $31 million higher than expected in the company's five-year plan developed last year, the sources said in an article published Wednesday.

Officials at Duke, the nation's seventh-largest investor-owned electric utility, would not discuss the figures Tuesday. But they said the company, which had electric revenues of $3.7 billion last year, isn't in financial trouble.

'Panic Attacks'

GIBSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Guilford County man charged with assaulting a police officer after a 32-hour standoff with authorities has suffered "panic attacks" for years, his wife says.

"Rick (Odell Chavis) has been on medication for panic attacks for the past four years," said his wife, Diane Chavis, adding that his mental condition had been normal for several months.

Chavis, 27, was arrested about 2 a.m. Wednesday when negotiators lured him outside of his barricaded house in Gibsonville and then stunned him with concussion grenades.

Foreign Relations Panel Gives Helms Hard Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms had a tough day in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday.

Although he pounded the table and argued vehemently, North Carolina's Republican senator couldn't persuade the panel to delay a key vote, reject sanctions against South Africa or drop its subpoena for Oliver North's diaries.

In fact, Helms couldn't even get Sen. Terry Sanford, his Democratic colleague from North Carolina, to raise his hand.

In a spirited, two-hour meeting, Helms asked for a show of hands from committee members who had read a lengthy memo arguing against the panel's subpoena for North's notebooks. When only three hands went up, Helms argued that too few senators had read the material.

Sanford, who had been mostly quiet to that point, interrupted.

"I have," he said dryly. "but I just don't raise my hand."

The crowded meeting room burst into laughter. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported, and Helms' defeat on virtually every point seemed sealed.

For months, Helms has led the effort to protect North from having to give the Senate personal notebooks he compiled while heading the White House's efforts to arm Nicaragua rebels.

Committee Democrats say the notebooks could help their battle against international drug dealing; some Republicans say the Democrats want to embarrass Republican candidates by stirring up the Iran-contra scandal that led to criminal charges against North.

Helms, the committee's ranking Republican, tried to extend debate on the issue until a two-hour time limit would expire, precluding a vote Wednesday.

When Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., cut him off, Helms banged the table with his fist and said, "Mr. Chairman, you can't do that, not if you expect to have bipartisan cooperation."

The committee voted 11-8 to issue a new subpoena for the notebooks.

The meeting began with Helms fighting unsuccessfully to prevent the Democratic majority from altering the South Africa sanctions bill before bringing it to a vote.

Helms said the panel had agreed last week that there would be no further changes. Democrats said Helms was throwing up technical roadblocks because he opposed the sanctions.

When Pell ruled against him, Helms fumed. "Mr. Chairman," he said, "you're making a mistake. ... This is simply not fair."

The bill would impose sweeping sanctions against South Africa to protest apartheid. It goes further than those passed by Congress in 1986.

But the lack of bipartisan support makes it questionable whether the full Senate will act on the measure before Congress adjourns in a few weeks. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., a co-sponsor, said supporters did not have enough votes from Republicans to halt an expected filibuster.

The bill is similar to one passed last month by the House. It would prohibit the purchase, acquisition, ownership or holding by any U.S. individual or entity of any investment in South Africa.

The committee passed the sanctions bill 10-9, voting along party lines. Sanford, who voted with the Democratic majority in favor of the measure, said he would offer a floor amendment to delay sanctions until at least July 1, 1989.

In a statement, Sanford said efforts to pressure South Africa into dismantling its apartheid policies required "careful diplomacy and great skill." Any sanctions, he said, should involve other Western nations and await the presidential election Nov. 8.

Helms predicted the sanctions bill would die in the Senate.

"I recognize that this bill is a turkey," he told committee members. "It's a one-legged turkey. It's going to hop around, and it's going nowhere."

The day's bluntest exchange was between Helms and Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., leader of the effort to subpoena North's notebooks.

Helms challenged Democrats' contention that no senator would leak information from North's diaries if they were declared classified information. He said North had testified before the committee in a closed meeting this year, but that Kerry then told reporters that North had invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

"Now I know John Kerry," Helms said. He didn't intentionally do that."

"No, I did," Kerry said. "I intentionally put out the results of that because I told (North's lawyer) beforehand that we would do that."

Planners Iron Out Details For Presidential Debates

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Michael Dukakis' North Carolina spokeswoman says it's "all systems go" for the presidential debate in Winston-Salem between Dukakis and Republican George Bush, though Bush officials are being more cautious.

It seems that the debate — the informal one, anyway — has already begun.

"You never know what can happen, but we are well on the road to two presidential and one vice presidential debates," said David Sandor, assistant press secretary for the Bush campaign.

Bush campaign spokesman James Baker III and Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brontas wrapped up more than three weeks of negotiations over the proposed debates Wednesday.

The two candidates will stand during their two 90-minute debates, the posture preferred by Dukakis' campaign. But Dukakis will not be allowed to stand on a platform, so Bush will have a 6-inch height advantage.

It was also agreed that Bush will stand on the audience's right, Dukakis on the left. And each question will have a 2-minute answer by one candidate and a 1-minute rebuttal by the other.

"I think the American people can look forward to what promises to be a very interesting, if not issues-oriented, debate," Sandor told The Winston-Salem Journal. The reason it may not be "issues-oriented," he said, is that "Mike Dukakis is a professional debater."

From 1971 to 1973, Dukakis was the host of The Advocates, a debate-style talk show on public television in Boston.

"That's certainly a factor that we'll have to consider," Sandor said. "As long as we keep the debate to the issues ... George Bush is on the right side of the issues that people care most about," he said.

Ms. DeHart countered: "The Bush campaign is involved in their continual politicking. They didn't want to debate ... and now they're playing the whole expectations game."

Dukakis, she said, wants to talk about the issues that are going to affect real people in our country. "These issues include how people can afford to pay for college or buy a home, health care and 'a strong defense with no gold-plated defense systems,'" she said.

The debate in Winston-Salem will start at 8 p.m. Sept. 25. The other presidential debate, which will be held Oct. 13 or 14 in Los Angeles, will start at 9 or 9:30 p.m. EST.

The vice presidential candidates will debate in Omaha, Neb., Oct. 5.

The only thing remaining for the two campaigns to decide is the time of the vice presidential debate, Sandor said. The rest of the details have been left to the sponsors of the debates: the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates in Winston-Salem and Omaha, and the League of Women Voters in Los Angeles.

Robert Neuman, the director of media arrangements for the commission, said he was still waiting for the two campaigns to submit their proposals for the panelists. The commission will choose three people to ask questions and a moderator "to keep the action moving along," Neuman said.

"We're hoping that the campaigns are somewhat creative" when it comes to suggesting journalists for the panel, he said. The journalists will be allowed to ask whatever questions they wish, with no screening of topics by the candidates or the commission.

More than 1,300 reporters and support staff have asked for credentials already, including more than 100 from foreign countries, he said. By the end of the week, he said, the commission probably will have received 2,000 requests.

Service Will Mark 1963 Church Bombing In Ala.

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer
BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Blacks and whites gather tonight in the church where four black girls were killed by a Ku Klux Klansman exactly 25 years ago in memory of the victims and the civil rights struggle that changed Birmingham.

"We as a city are merely looking at ourselves, and saying that we remember," said Betty Lee, a member of a biracial group that planned the memorial service at the 16th Street Baptist Church.

Among those scheduled to speak are the Rev. John Cross, pastor of the church when the Sept. 15, 1963, bombing occurred, and Mayor Richard Arrington, a black man whose election was one result of the fight for equal rights that racked the city in the 1950s and 1960s.

The four girls were killed minutes after a Sunday school lesson on "a love that forgives," Cross said.

"That's what we really had to practice for the next several weeks and months and years — and even now."

Although some city leaders had worked for healing prior to the church bombing, it was that event, among numerous bombings and civil rights demonstrations, that spurred the city to make major changes.

The City Council now has six blacks and three whites. Chris McNair, father of one of the bomb victims, was elected to the Legislature and now sits on the Jefferson County Commission.

"I can't erase it out of my life," he said of the bombing, "but I try my best not to rely on it as a crutch."

In addition to killing 11-year-old Denise McNair, the bomb took the lives of Addie Mae Collins, Cynthia Dianne Wesley and Carole Robertson, all 14.

The girls were in a basement bathroom of the church preparing for a special youth program when the 10:22 a.m. explosion tore apart the side entrance to the building. A bomb had been placed beneath steps near the bathroom window.

Donations totaling $500,000 came from around the country. The money paid for the girls' funerals and repairs to the church, which had been used for civil rights meetings.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who had called Birmingham the nation's most segregated city, preached at the combined funeral of three of the victims.

Sarah Collins Riley, 12, was injured by the blast. In 1977 she testified at the trial of Robert Edward Chambliss, a retired automobile mechanic and Ku Klux Klansman. A jury convicted him in the death of Denise McNair, and he died in prison in 1985 after serving eight years of a life sentence.

"If the bombing was meant to stop or deter the civil rights movement, it did not," said Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, a founder of the civil rights movement in Birmingham and now a Cincinnati pastor.

"We pick up the pieces, we bury our dead... but we keep our faith and keep on moving," Shuttlesworth said. "I think these things do more solidifying and bring about more determination than if they did not happen."

The church contains a plaque and memorial nook downstairs and a memorial in the sanctuary with pictures of the four girls.

Former Mayor David Vann was a leader of a 1962 movement to change Birmingham's form of government, in which Public Safety Commissioner Eugene "Bull" Connor had ordered that dogs and fire hoses be used against demonstrators that spring.

The city in November 1962 went from a three-member commission to a nine-member council and mayor, and blacks, who now outnumber whites in the city, gradually gained control of city government.

After the church bombing, Vann said, most businesses that had signs for blacks and whites removed them.

Judge Sets Deadline On Revisions To Housing Plan

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — After returning an $819,200 contempt fine, a federal judge told Yonkers officials and other parties in the city's desegregation case to move quickly on any changes to a proposed housing plan.

U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand, who ruled in 1985 there was housing segregation in the state's fourth-largest city, said Wednesday he would allow revisions in the plan, but insisted they be finished by Sept. 30.

Sand added that he expected both sides in the desegregation lawsuit would get together and work things out because the city had learned what one councilman termed "a very expensive civics lesson."

"We must move forward with as much speed as circumstances permit," said Sand, noting that the case was 8 years old and that not a single Yonkers resident had enjoyed improved housing opportunities as a result of the lawsuit.

The new plan, designed to lessen the impact of 200 units of low-income housing by mixing some of it with middle- and upper-income units, must be approved by the Justice Department and Sand.

It must then be formally approved by the City Council before it can replace the original plan Sand imposed.

That plan was resisted by the council, prompting Sand to fine the city $1,638,300 for contempt of court before the council finally gave in early Saturday. In voting to approve incentives for Sand's plan, the council asked that the substitute plan be considered.

Sand returned a check for $819,200 on Wednesday, essentially refunding the fine incurred the day before the council meeting that ended the battle.

The refund meant that Yonkers' contempt had cost it $450,505. Although the escalating fines had totaled $819,100 before last Thursday, $368,595 of that had been designated for city schools.

Power Company President Quits

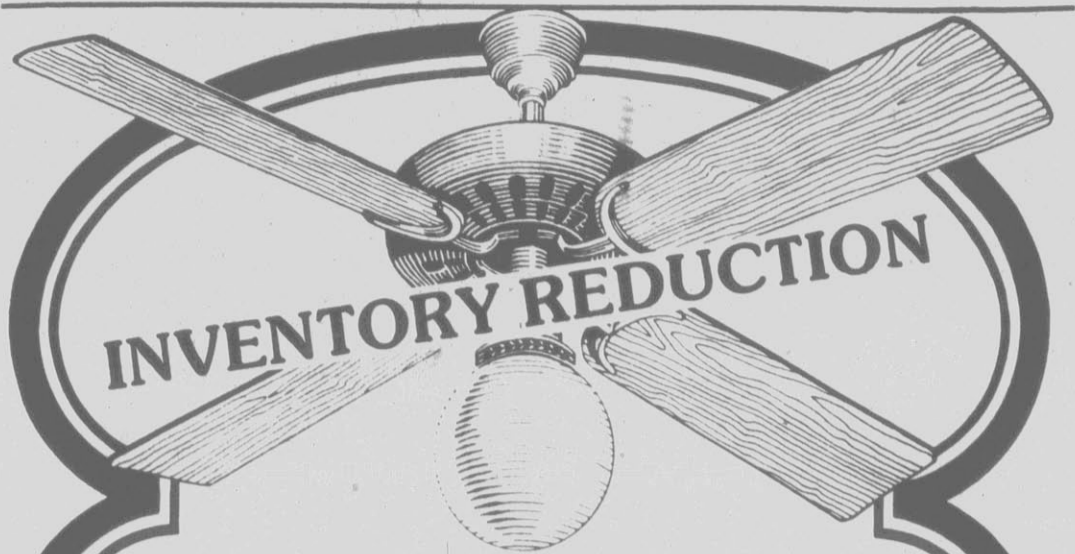

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Robert Harrison is resigning as president of Public Service Company of New Hampshire, the first major investor-owned electric company since the Depression to seek bankruptcy protection, a director of the utility said today.

Harrison, 56, guided the company as it built the $5.6 billion Seabrook nuclear plant, which was completed two years ago but remains unlicensed because of evacuation-planning obstacles. The delays forced Public Service, which owns 36 percent of the plant, to seek bankruptcy protection Jan. 28.

Harrison joined the state's largest power company 31 years ago and rose through the ranks to become president in 1973.

Dunlap said John Duffett, executive vice president and chief operations officer, will succeed Harrison.

Brady Gains Confirmation As Treasury Secretary

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicholas F. Brady is heading to his first international meeting as Treasury secretary with the overwhelming, but not unanimous, support of the Senate.

Brady, co-chairman of the Wall Street investment house Dillon Read & Co., was confirmed on a 92-2 vote Wednesday by senators anxious to give him strong support before next week's meeting of the Group of Seven, composed of finance ministers from the United States and its six leading trading partners.

"If we did not confirm Nick Brady, he would go with a little bit of a cloud over his head," said Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee.

He was joined in a plea for unanimity by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

But two Democratic senators, annoyed by a Brady comment that they say minimized the seriousness of the federal budget deficit, declined to join in the bipartisan praise and voted no.

Kent Conrad of North Dakota and Harry Reid of Nevada opposed the nomination, citing a statement by Brady in his confirmation hearing Tuesday that the federal government could grow its way out of the budget deficit.

Brady said the deficit "needs to be worked down," but struck an upbeat note by saying, "I do think we can grow our way out of this" and adding at another point, "I see no reason at this moment why taxes have to be raised."

"Mr. Brady says, 'Don't worry, we'll grow out of it.' Well the truth is different and the truth will out," Conrad said in remarks on the floor before the vote.

Reid did not speak on the nomination, but his press secretary, Mary O'Driscoll, said Reid "was angered by Brady's statement that we are going to grow out of the deficit. He thought that was irresponsible and he does not think a Treasury secretary should believe something like that."

Brady, after taking office, will be the third Treasury secretary to serve under President Reagan. Donald Regan, who later became White House chief of staff, held the Cabinet post from 1981 to 1985, turning it over to James A. Baker III, who resigned Aug. 17 to head Republican George Bush's presidential campaign.

Although Brady is expected to do little more than serve as a caretaker this year, he likely will stay at Treasury if Bush wins in November.

White House spokesman B.J. Co-per said a swearing-in ceremony for Brady had not been scheduled, but said, "it will be soon."

Brady, a wealthy man who lives on a 4,000-acre estate in New Jersey's horse country, served eight months in the Senate in 1982, appointed by the governor of New Jersey to replace Democrat Harrison A. Williams Jr., who had resigned in the Abscam scandal.

In his most recent government assignment, Brady headed a presidential task force that studied the causes of the stock market crash last October.

Not voting were Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; Dan Quayle, R-Ind.; Christopher Bond, R-Mo.; John Danforth, R-Mo.; Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska; and Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii.

Myerson Jury Selection Continues

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Potential jurors in the divorce-fixing trial of former Miss America Bess Myerson are being asked their opinions on politicians' honesty, men who leave their wives for another woman and women who get involved with married men.

U.S. District Judge John Keenan questioned jurors Wednesday with Miss Myerson, her co-defendants, their attorneys and members of a news pool present.

By the end of the day, eight of 19 prospective jurors questioned had been accepted for the pool of 55, from which the final panel of 12 jurors and six alternates will be picked.

Keenan was to resume questioning potential jurors today. Jury selection, an often tedious process, is expected to take up to two weeks.

But the fourth-floor federal courtroom in Manhattan was jammed Wednesday with reporters, sketch artists and spectators waiting to see Miss Myerson and her co-defendants, even though most of the action took place behind closed doors.

Miss Myerson, 64, a former city cultural affairs commissioner; her boyfriend, Carl "Andy" Capasso, 43, once a leading city contractor; and the judge who handled his divorce, former state Supreme Court Justice Hortense Gabel, 75, are charged with mail fraud and conspiracy for an alleged scheme to fix Capasso's divorce.

Miss Myerson is also charged with obstruction of justice.

She is accused of giving a $19,000-a-year city job to Mrs. Gabel's daughter in 1983 in return for reductions by the judge in Capasso's alimony and child support payments.

Miss Myerson, unescorted and wearing dark glasses, nearly managed to slip into the courthouse unnoticed.

Cameras are not allowed in federal courts and scores of newspaper and television photographers were camped outside.

She was halfway up the steps when she was spotted and instantly surrounded by cameras and microphones.

But the crowd parted before her as she silently entered the courthouse, maintaining the regal bearing that helped her win the 1945 Miss America title.

Court security officers, also surprised at her sudden appearance, hustled onto an elevator with Miss Myerson and two reporters.

Miss Myerson asked if there was a cafeteria in the building. Marvin Smilon, a reporter with the New York Post, replied: "There's one on the fifth floor, unfortunately it's opposite the press room."

That sparked laughter from Miss Myerson and everyone else in the elevator.

Half an hour after Miss Myerson arrived at the courtroom, Capasso, who is serving a prison sentence for an unrelated tax evasion conviction, was escorted into the room by marshals.

He bent over Miss Myerson, and the couple clasped hands and kissed each other on the cheek as 10 courtroom artists sketched the scene.

At the end of the day, photographers followed Miss Myerson into the subway, and onto a subway car before it pulled out of the station.

Hormone Role In Bulimia Eyed

BOSTON (AP) — Abnormally low amounts of a hormone that controls appetite may play a role in bulimia, the cycles of binge eating and purging suffered by some young women, a study published today concludes.

The preliminary report found that some people with the disorder make unusually small amounts of cholecystokinin, a hormone produced by the intestines that makes people feel full, or sated, after a meal.

"We conclude that patients with bulimia do not have normal satiety and have impaired secretion of cholecystokinin in response to a meal," the researchers wrote in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Between 1 percent and 4 percent of young adult American women and a much smaller number of men are believed to have the disorder. Victims tend to eat large quantities of food, then purposely purge themselves with vomiting or laxatives.

Navy Blames Jet Downing On Pilot Judgment Error

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One year after a Navy F-14 Tomcat shot down an Air Force reconnaissance jet, the Navy released an investigative report that blames the accident on a "basic error in judgment" and "an illogical act" by the young fighter pilot.

The report, recently declassified under the terms of the Freedom of Information Act, was obtained Wednesday. It tracks the findings of a previously released Air Force inquiry into the Sept. 22, 1987, loss of an RF-4C reconnaissance jet over the Mediterranean Sea.

The two Air Force crewmen managed to eject and parachute to safety, but their twin-engine jet blew up and was lost at sea. It was shot out of the sky by an F-14 assigned to the carrier Saratoga.

Like his Air Force counterpart, the Navy investigating officer — Capt. J.W. Lovell — concluded the Navy and Air Force aviators had been engaged in a routine exercise right up to the second the F-14's pilot armed and fired a live Sidewinder missile.

The pilot, Lt. j.g. Timothy W. Dorsey, was 25 at the time and a rookie fighter pilot with just 245 hours of flight time in the F-14.

Lovell found that even though Dorsey earlier that day had concluded the RF-4C was a "friendly" plane and knew he was on an exercise, he reacted to a radio command from his carrier authorizing a simulated attack by doing the real thing.

"The September 22, 1987, destruction of USAF RF-4C ... was not the result of an accident, but the consequence of a deliberate act," the investigator wrote. "His (Dorsey's) subsequent reaction (to the radio command) demonstrated an absolute disregard of the known facts and circumstances."

"He failed to utilize the decision-making process taught in replacement training and reacted in a purely mechanical manner. The performance of Lieutenant Timothy W.

Dorsey on September 22, 1987, raises substantial doubt as to his capacity for good, sound judgment."

The investigator's findings were accepted by Rear Adm. Jeremy Boorda, who ordered the inquiry.

"The investigating officer and endorsers of this investigation are faced with attempting to precisely determine the reason for what amounts to an illogical act," Boorda, who was then the commander of Cruiser-Destroyer Group Eight, said in a statement accompanying the report.

"What remains is an act by a pilot who for a moment left the exercise world he was a part of, and reacted in a rote manner to what he perceived as an order to actually destroy an aircraft that moments before he believed to be a friendly."

Vice Adm. Kendall E. Moranville, until last month the head of the U.S.

6th Fleet, agreed: "We necessarily rely on the self-discipline and judgment of pilots to prevent such incidents; we have no other choice. Nothing, in my opinion, can mitigate Lieutenant Dorsey's basic error in judgment."

Dorsey was transferred to a job ashore after the incident and disciplined with an order that will prevent him from ever flying a Navy plane again.

The investigative report and written "endorsements" up the chain of command also disclose that in the wake of the accident, the Navy ordered F-14 pilots to verbally advise their radar intercept officers whenever they have armed the plane's weapons.

The radar intercept officer flying with Dorsey didn't know the pilot had actually armed his missiles and was no longer just pretending to shoot.

The report further shows that new steps were taken in the wake of the affair to ensure that Navy fighters wouldn't be launched off carriers for war games with Air Force jets carrying live weapons.

The Navy already had a directive in place to that effect, and Moranville faulted the top officers of the Saratoga "for the failure to comply with the clear terms of the exercise operations order."

Art Student Killed During N.Y. Robbery

By VIRGINIA BYRNE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A 24-year-old Arkansas woman who came here a week ago to pursue her dream of studying fine arts was shot to death after she refused to give up her purse during a robbery.

Judith Anne Wrape of Little Rock was shot at least once in the chest as she struggled with the gunman early Wednesday near Pratt Institute, where she was enrolled as a first-year graduate student, said Deputy Inspector Charles Prestia.

A tall man in a hooded gray sweat-shirt fled on foot clutching the bag in his arms, witnesses told police. "Judith was just pursuing her dream," said her mother, Sue Wrape. "She was struggling with her dream and it looks like she was struggling with her purse. That's typical of her," the mother said through tears during a telephone interview.

The mother uses the family's traditional spelling of their last name. Ms. Wrape, a 1987 graduate of Notre Dame University, had arrived in New York City on Sept. 7 and enrolled at Pratt to pursue a master's degree in fine arts. On Monday, she was hired to work as a waitress at Manhattan's popular South Street Seaport.

"She was a clean-cut kid who seemed honest and had an outgoing personality," said Mark Shay, the restaurant manager who hired her. "She did mention to someone here that it was a culture shock moving from Arkansas to New York City."

"She said she didn't feel safe in the neighborhood she was living in," Shay added. After her first night at the restaurant, Ms. Wrape took a subway to Brooklyn and was one block from the dormitory where she lived with three roommates when she was accosted, Prestia said.

"There was some kind of a struggle between the fellow and the victim. She had shouted out, 'Leave me alone,' when he fired one shot, hit her in the chest, and escaped with the handbag," Prestia said.

During the commotion, a resident of a nearby building yelled out the window at the gunman to "leave her alone," Prestia added. "It was just shortly after that that he fired the shot."

The killer took her brown leather handbag and ran down the street, where the bag was recovered about a block from the killing.

Youngsters Go To Camp To Hone Artistic Skills

By JUSTIN BURKE
Associated Press Writer
INTERLOCHEN, Mich. (AP) — Only a few birds are chirping at 8:30 a.m. when the sounds of Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 5 fill the woods of this northern Michigan town.

The World Youth Symphony is rehearsing for an upcoming performance. The music flows with deceiving precision: One could be listening to a symphony orchestra, not a collection of high school musicians at summer camp.

But this is anything but an ordinary summer camp.

"This place is a paradox because the natural aspect is serene, but serene is hardly the word to describe the activity here. It's crazy," said Ray Wilkins, chairman of the camp's visual arts department.

The National Music Camp, the 61st edition of which ended in August, attracts 2,100 campers from third grade through high school. They come from all 50 states and 26 foreign countries to spend a summer of intensive study in music, dance, drama and the visual arts.

Many campers already are accomplished in their chosen field. They come to hone their skills at the camp, which is spread over 1,200 acres and has about 450 buildings. The camper-staff ratio is almost two to one, and private lessons are available for those who want them.

"These are bright kids, and many of them are extremely well-equipped for a career in the arts," said Tom Oosting, director of the camp's theater program.

With such a collection of talent, competition among campers can get intense.

"People come to the National Music Camp to see how they stack up," said Edward Downing, the camp's director. "A lot of big decisions can be made during the summer as young people decide on a possible career in the arts."

Perhaps the most intense competition occurs every Friday, when violinists in The World Youth Symphony challenge each other for the right to sit in the first chair. The competition is known as "Bloody Friday."

"There are people who take it too seriously, but competition has always been a part of being here," Downing said. "We like to think it's friendly competition and we try to keep it that way."

"It's an opportunity for the camper to show how he or she has progressed, not necessarily to beat the next person ahead of you."

Despite the emphasis on the arts, campers enjoy their free time like others their age. Many boys and girls like to find a secluded spot in the evening to talk quietly.

George Wolff, a high school student from Warren, Mich., said some campers like to play classical music but never would listen to it on their own. "It's kind of humorous," he said. "People will play Mozart and Beethoven, then come back to their cabin and listen to a Led Zeppelin cassette."

The camp's scenic location is a main reason youngsters get so much out of the program.

"This place is absolutely conducive to clearing your mind and focusing on your work," Oosting said. "You need blue skies and varied visual stimuli."

The camp, which was founded in 1927, also does its best to make sure the kids are kept busy. Campers in the theater department can be involved in up to three plays at one time.

However, said Oosting, the theater program can be daunting. Rehearsal time is limited because the camp's activities are structured in 50-minute periods.

"Most Gilbert and Sullivan operettas are 2½ hours long, but are rehearsed and staged here in 50-minute periods," he said. "In most cases, until the actual performance, it's probably never been run through from beginning to end."

Campers belie their youth in terms of dedication to their specialty. At night, it is not unusual to hear the sounds of a violin or horn coming from cabins, as campers practice on their own.

During the day, the youth bustle from one class to the next — walking quickly with a clear sense of purpose.

Wolff said he would like to become an opera singer, a career goal shared by few of his peers.

"When I was 14 and listening to opera, it was hard for some people to handle," he said. "But I don't limit myself to listening to just opera. I listen to all kinds of music."

The rules at the camp can be interpreted as strict. All campers are required to wear a uniform — blue corduroy pants for boys and knickers for girls and blue shirts for all. Campers from third through ninth grade are not allowed to leave the grounds during the eight-week session. High schoolers are permitted to leave only with their parents or other pre-approved adults.

"Yeah, sometimes the rules get out of hand, but it's really trivial compared with what you're learning," Wolff said.

Research Includes Tummy Tickling

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Researchers at Ohio State University are tickling the tummies of blind people in an experiment to help them see.

Research over the past five years is aimed at developing a miniature video camera system that can convert a picture into mechanical vibrations felt on the abdomen of the blind.

If they can refine the technique, the system will change a picture from the camera into electrical impulses that mechanically "draw" a picture on the abdomen, much like tracing a figure on the skin with a finger.

The tiny camera — about the size of a walnut — could be mounted on a cane or on the side of a pair of glasses, allowing a sight-impaired person to "see" what is in front of him, said the project's director, Herman Weed, a professor of electrical engineering and preventive medicine.

Other researchers have tried to transmit information to the visually handicapped through other senses, Weed said. One aid, a scanning device about the size of a pen, can be swept across a line of type.

For each different letter it sees, the device plays a distinct tone, and the user learns the tones associated with each letter, he said.

"We chose to use the skin, and chose to vibrate the skin mechanically," Weed said. That's because the brain already has spatial relationships coded within it — for example, by touching corresponding areas on the abdomen, a person would know whether an object is to the right or left of something else, he said.

People using the device still will have to decode the images transmitted onto skin, Weed said, but "we hope by going to the skin we could make the learning easier."

Because of the complexity of the research, the device still is in its early stages.

A second-generation prototype might be ready for testing in a month or two, Weed said. A commercially available version, which would have to be developed by private industry because of the cost, is several years away, he said.

The present model consists of the miniature video camera, a panel of 256 tiny mechanical vibrators that can be strapped around the abdomen, and a microprocessor that coordinates the two.

The "pictures" it produces are abstract. A Venetian blind, for example, would be felt as a series of jagged lines; displayed on a computer screen, the device's image of the Venetian blind resembles parallel rows of steps.

"We're using the equivalent of very poor film ... we've got a Coke bottle for a lens," Weed said.

More work will be required to make the device small enough to be portable and to be worn unobtrusively. Now, its electronics take up a table top.

The World Is Too Weird For Words

It's getting tougher and tougher to use exaggeration as a tool of humor. Why? For the same reason it gets tougher and tougher to wear something far out at Halloween. You can't outdistance reality anymore.

There was a time that if I suggested we left a kid in the gas station restroom on vacation and didn't miss him for two hours, the absurdity would have gotten a laugh. A news item recently reported a vacationer drove 100 miles before realizing he had left his wife behind at a gas station. As the state trooper said, "They're very nice folks and Mrs. Hart wasn't that mad."

If I even suggested I had a collection of more than 400 pairs of shoulder pads because I knew someday I'd have a use for them, readers would say, "You sound like that woman in Fort Wayne, Ind., who inspects 24,000 pounds of potato chips on an assembly line each day and has a collection of more than 200 chips that resemble, among others, Yogi Bear and Bob Hope." When Yogi Bear broke, she said, "I glued him back together, but he's not really valuable now."

Frankly, I can't begin to compete with the headlines in the daily newspaper, no matter how far I stretch my "weird factor." I open my paper and see a story about a woman who is building an 86-foot-long, 20-foot-wide, 65-foot-high boat in her backyard in New Jersey. She began the project in 1981, using lumber salvaged from demolished buildings. Her plan is to sail it home to Japan. Asked if there wasn't an easier way to get there, she replied, "I don't fly."

Just try to get more outrageous than the guy in Nevada who wired his athletic supporter to a hidden microcomputer on his calf to improve his odds of winning blackjack. Or the long-distance operator in Peking who has memorized 15,000 phone numbers and hopes to memorize 18,000 more by the end of the year.

At Wits End

A few years ago I spun an amusing little tale of my son driving for the first time on the expressway and getting picked up for driving 35 mph ... in reverse. That story doesn't hold a candle to a news story about an 80-year-old woman who hit a bicyclist but drove on because she thought a golf ball hit the car. She said when she looked in the rearview mirror and saw a man lying in the road, she thought he was working on a van. When she got home, she called the police to report the damage to her car done by the "golf ball."

Maybe art can imitate life, but it can't top it.

VICTORIA, B.C. (AP) — Founded by the Hudson's Bay Co. in 1843, Victoria became the provincial capital of British Columbia in 1868.

Ten miles north of Victoria are beautiful Butchart Gardens, occupying 25 acres in a former limestone quarry. A sunken garden, English rose garden, Italian and Japanese gardens contain more than 5,000 varieties of plants, shrubs and trees.

Runaway Slave's Self-Invited Girl Tests Hospitality Farm Remains In The Family

By REBECCA MABRY
The Champaign-Urbana News
Gazette

BROADLANDS, Ill. (AP) — Like most settlers more than 100 years ago, George W. Smith came to Champaign County with all his possessions piled in the back of a wagon.

But Smith had a different history than most of his neighbors in the early spring of 1876 — he had been a slave in Tennessee who escaped to freedom during the Civil War.

Smith was one of the first black landowners in Illinois. And he was the only black land-owning farmer in the area for many years, eventually increasing his holdings to 437 acres.

An 1887 Champaign County history called Smith "a Republican in politics, and a citizen held in high respect for his intelligence as a farmer and his worthiness as a member of the community." A 1912 newspaper report of his death referred to "the well-known colored man of Broadlands."

Today, his descendants still own the land he farmed with horses and mules, and they speak proudly of their heritage.

"We all think we have the best roots in the world," said his granddaughter, Rosetta Smith Williams of Elgin.

"My grandson even knows about the farm, and he's only 5 years old," Mrs. Williams said. "He can tell you all about my father and grandfather."

City directories show that the local black population in 1880 — which numbered about 460 — was almost entirely employed as domestic help, said Natalia Belting, an associate professor of history at the University of Illinois and an expert on local history.

But nothing was ever made of the racial difference by the Smiths or the people of Broadlands, according to longtime resident Ronald Cable.

"The racial problem had never been brought up," Cable said. "Around here, nobody paid any attention to it. They went to the same churches and the same schools that we did.

"I never ever thought anything of it. They were very, very well respected. There were considered to be A-No.1 citizens," Cable added.

George Smith was one of seven children born to slave Amy Smith in southern Tennessee in 1835. He was sold away from his family at a young age, and when he was 27, he escaped to freedom.

According to legend, Smith's father was a white slaveowner, and because of that parentage, he was allowed to live in the house with white children and to attend school, rendering him "too smart for his race" in some eyes.

When a group of men planned to lynch him for fear he would start trouble among fellow slaves, he escaped in 1862, joined the Union Army and became a guide for several generals before meeting his wife and moving to the Broadlands area.

When Smith died, his youngest son, John M. Smith, took over the farm and expanded it, while gaining a reputation at state and county fairs as a fine horseman. He held a horse show each August at his farm, an event that drew 2,000 horse lovers in 1954, when Smith donated proceeds to the Boy Scouts.

In 1959, the University of Illinois dedicated the International Horse Show to Smith and his wife.

The last farming Smith was John Smith's son, Charles. He took over the farm in 1957 at his father's retirement. John Smith died in 1968 and Charles Smith died last October.

A longtime family friend now is farming the property.

Mrs. Williams said she and her brother, the only two remaining grandchildren of the runaway slave, want the farm always to remain in family hands.

"Our family's very small," she said. "There are only four grandchildren in the family — and two great-grandchildren."

"But we intend to keep it in the family. It's a gift."

DEAR ABBY: For the last year, a young woman has been pursuing our son. Our home has always been open to our children's friends, so it was only natural for us to make "Agnes" welcome.

However, it seems that Agnes wants to see "John" every night, and since she lives some distance away, she brings a change of clothes and comes to our house straight from work. Of course, she then has dinner with us, or if we dine out, she goes with us.

I have talked to John about this, and he says he doesn't invite her. I believe this because I have heard his end of telephone conversations, and this aggressive girl will not take "no" for an answer. Agnes is neither homeless nor friendless — she just wants to get her hooks into our son.

We hate to be rude, but either she doesn't seem to realize that she is imposing or she doesn't care. Please help me. It's getting to the point where neither my husband nor I wants to face what we know will be waiting for us when we get home from work. — JOHN'S LONG-SUFFERING MOM

DEAR MOM: How old is John? If he is an adult, ask him to tell Agnes to please discontinue the practice of coming to your home directly from work. If John is not an adult, then ORDER him to tell her. And if he doesn't do it, either you must tell her politely but emphatically — or tolerate the imposition.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for five years. We are childless by choice, because we enjoy our carefree lifestyle.

My sister has four children and my brother two. I am beginning to feel more and more pressure to invite these spoiled, self-indulgent nieces and nephews to our home.

Since we live near a nice lake with swimming privileges, my sister and brother think that this would be an ideal vacation spot for their children.

Abby, I love my nieces and nephews, despite their shortcomings, but I am reluctant to invite them to sleep over. If I invite one, I will be expected to invite all the others, and then I'll be trapped forever. I really don't want the responsibility of looking after children.

I see them in their own homes occasionally, and always remember their birthdays and Christmas.

I am beginning to feel guilty each time my sister or brother brings the subject up, and I am running out of excuses. As an aunt, would it be shameful of me never to have them in my home to spend the night? What do you think? — NO CHILDREN, PLEASE

DEAR NO CHILDREN: I think you are missing an opportunity to give your nieces and nephews a chance to know and love you. You say you "love" them; why not give them a "trial" run? You can't lose more than a few days out of the year — and you may be pleasantly rewarded with some new loving relationships.

Everything you need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada), to Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Plans Made For Bentsen Visit On Friday

missioner Jim Graham, state Insurance Commissioner Jim Long and state Democratic Party Chairman Jim Van Hecke. Several local Democratic officials are also scheduled to attend.

It will also be a family affair. Bentsen's wife, B.A., is scheduled to join her husband at the rally.

"It's going to be a come-on-home, back-to-the-party type event," VanGiesen said.

Bentsen is scheduled to arrive at Kinston directly from a campaign stop in Memphis, Tenn., VanGiesen said. A public welcome is scheduled there.

The national press corps, including the three major television networks, are to arrive in Kinston on the same plane with Bentsen, VanGiesen said, but Bentsen will ride to Greenville in a private car, while the press follows in a bus.

More than five Secret Service agents in charge of security are in Greenville, VanGiesen said, mapping a route from the airport to the courthouse, trying to figure out a path with the fewest interruptions and intersections.

Bentsen is scheduled to stay in Greenville until about 2:45 p.m., when he will leave for a flight to West Palm Beach, Fla., and more campaigning.

William Nichols Jr., Pitt's trial court administrator, said the Secret Service is coordinating much of the event through his office.

Superior Court activities will be moved to the fourth floor courtroom Friday in order to free the large courtroom on the third floor, Nichols said. Bentsen is to use that room for all inside activities, including dealings with the press.

The stage for the rally will be set up on the east side of the courthouse.

facing Evans Street, which is to be closed to traffic all day between Second and Third Streets. Third Street, between Washington and Cotanche, will also be closed all day, Nichols said.

As Bentsen moves through the courthouse, Secret Service agents will also restrict the movements of others in the building. "What the Secret Service is going to do is ... secure the areas of the building where he is going to be," Nichols said.

Agents will also be posted on rooftops near the courthouse, he said, and a large number of sheriff's deputies and police officers will be stationed in the building.

VanGiesen, who worked for another presidential candidate before joining the Dukakis camp in April, said he coordinates about one campaign event a week for Bentsen or Dukakis.

The arrangements can be difficult, he said, but the local volunteers in Greenville have made his job easier.

More than 40 local folk folks turned out Tuesday with just an hour's notice for a meeting to recruit volunteers to distribute signs and leaflets and staff telephone lines set up to provide people with information, he said.

was refused.

The radio said the hijackers asked Wednesday that a Catholic priest be taken to the bus. Unofficial sources said they believed the priest would open negotiations between the hijackers and Lesotho's military rulers.

About 100 soldiers and police set up roadblocks with armored cars and kept spectators four blocks away.

Gervase Chevasse, deputy British high commissioner, said the bus pulled up outside the high commission Tuesday evening. He said the hijackers asked to enter the compound but were rebuffed.

Dapper Lewis Takes Aim At Titles

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Dapper but temperamental, a team leader living apart from the team, Carl Lewis blew into town in a white silk suit and rode off into seclusion after vowing to reclaim the title of fastest man alive.

Lewis headed the first wave of American track and field athletes to the Games as politics began to take a back seat to sports today, despite the curious absence of the Libyan team after it was prevented from leaving Tripoli.

Death threats were reported against the Japanese team and the wife of Swedish tennis player Mats Wilander if they came. Wilander pulled out several days ago, claiming a leg injury.

Lillehammer, Norway won the bidding to host the 1994 Winter Olympics Games, setting off a jubilant celebration among Norwegians and sending away disappointed delegations from Anchorage, Bulgaria and Sweden.

All four cities made hour-long presentations to the IOC's 94th Session. Lillehammer's speech was made by Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland, who called on the IOC to return to "the cradle of winter sports."

The Winter Games have been held in Scandinavia only once, in Oslo in 1952.

Anchorage brought in a State Department official from Washington to show it had President Reagan's backing. Bulgaria had its culture minister and Sweden's delegation was led by King Carl XVI Gustaf.

The man who would be king of these Games, though, is Lewis, who is seeking to match the four golds he won in 1984 in the 100, 200, 400 relay and long jump.

"The gold medal for the 100-meter race is mine," Lewis declared cockily, dismissing the thought of losing again to Canadian Ben Johnson. "I will never again lose to Johnson."

Johnson, the world record holder at 9.83 seconds, has beaten Lewis in six of their last eight races outdoors.

Lewis said he wouldn't allow further interviews before his competition and huffed he will go home if reporters bothered him. Unlike most of the other 12,000 athletes already in Seoul, Lewis has two houses he can stay in outside the Olympic Village.

Other Americans and he has demanded special parking piis de.

He is also the only athlete with his own glossy guide listing his achievements.

Other glamour athletes, though, were quite a bit more accessible.

Jackie Joyner-Kersey, a favorite in the heptathlon and women's long jump, was available for autographs and chats over breakfast at a downtown hotel.

David Berkoff, world record holder in the 100-meter backstroke, is attracting crowds because of his unusual submarine style start, which usually puts him ahead of all his madly thrashing rivals about one third the way through the race.

"I'm not the only one who does this, but I guess you could say I get the most attention for it," said Berkoff.

21, a Harvard student from Willow Grove, Pa. "Perhaps I've made people believe it works."

"There are always people who moan and groan about things and are skeptical about anything new," he said. "I think it's time swimming had something revolutionary."

The Olympics may not have Libya when the Games open on Saturday, but officials aren't sure whether the absence is due to the boycott in support of North Korea, a mixup in arrangements or some other reason.

Libya's team was told in Tripoli it cannot go to Seoul, and it never left the country, sources in Seoul said.

The team was gathered at its hotel the night before its scheduled departure on Sunday when it was informed of the decision, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of confidentiality.

Seoul Olympic officials confirmed that none of the 12-member team had checked into the Olympic Village by Thursday, four days after the squad was due to arrive.

It was not known what role Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi had in the action, or if he was even aware that the team had failed to depart, the sources said.

"They were ready, with their Olympic uniforms and at the hotel," one of the sources said.

The Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee said that although no Libyans had arrived by late in the day, it was continuing to list Libya among the record 160 nations scheduled to participate in the Games. To qualify as a participant, a country needs to enter a single representative, whether that person is an athlete or an official.

Libya wavered on accepting an invitation to the Games until May, but had been preparing a representative team for the Olympics after deciding not to join a North Korea-led boycott.

Despite deteriorating relations with the United States, Libya was among the 141 nations who entered in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles. Libya has never won an Olympic medal.

Gamecocks Have Two For Heisman

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

South Carolina's Gamecocks may be unique this year and next.

The reason? Simple, South Carolina has two offensive weapons that could become full-blown Heisman Trophy candidates.

One already is, junior quarterback Todd Ellis. The 6-3, 203-pounder out of Greensboro, N.C., is the subject of the "Todd Ellis Notebook," a weekly compilation of his accomplishments thus far during the season.

It already points out that Ellis began the 1988 season holding 22 school records and is the school's career passing and total offense leader.

East Carolina well remembers. Last year, Ellis set a new school record of 425 yards in passing. But the story doesn't end there. Also in the backfield with Ellis is another man whom some feel could also be a Heisman candidate, running back Harold Green. A 6-2, 215-pound junior, Green ran for three touchdowns against the Pirates last season as the Gamecocks took a 34-12 victory.

If there was a bright spot for the Pirates against South Carolina last year, it was the fact that East Carolina, with 300 yards in total offense became one of only five teams to gain that much yardage against South Carolina on the season.

If anything, the Gamecocks are stronger this year. They've changed their offense from the run-and-shoot to a more power oriented scheme to take advantage of the strengths of both Ellis and Green.

And so far, that's proved to be a smart move.

In the Gamecocks' two games to date, they've piled up an average of 454 yards a game while allowing only 194 per outing.

South Carolina downed North Carolina in its opening game, 31-10, and topped Western Carolina, 38-0.

Ellis has completed an outstanding 36 of 57 pass attempts for 477 yards and three touchdowns. He's yet to be intercepted on the season.

Green, who rushed 21 times for 100 yards, got all that in the opener against North Carolina. He suffered a bruised ankle bone in the game and did not play against Western Carolina this past weekend.

As a result, his back-up, Gerald Williams, is the leading rusher with 27 carries for 126 yards. Back-up fullback Mike Dingle is next with 30 carries for 106 yards.

Green is listed as a probable starter this weekend against the Pirates. Dingle also suffered a bruised lower leg against Western, but is also listed as probable for the ECU contest.

Tight end Carl Platt is the top receiver for the Gamecocks, having pulled in eight for 140 yards and two touchdowns. Dingle had six catches for 66 yards, while Green has caught five for 68 yards. A total of 13 players have receptions.

As if that weren't enough, the Gamecocks have another weapon in all-America placekicker Collin Mackie. He's the leading scorer for the Gamecocks with 15 points, booting all nine of his point after attempts and both of his field goal attempts, for 29 and 47 yards.

Not that South Carolina can't hold its own on the other side of the ball, too. The defense didn't allow Western Carolina a first down in the first half, and the Catamounts didn't cross midfield in the second half.

Defensive end David Taylor was in on 10 tackles against Western, including three for a total of 15 yards in losses. Safety Ron Rabune had eight tackles while cornerback Robert Robinson, an all-America candidate, had five.

South Carolina's opponents have converted only nine of 33 third down attempts.

Gamecock coach Joe Morrison, in his sixth year at the helm, is 4-0 against the Pirates and also is 4-0 against Art Baker, the Pirate coach, with one of those wins coming while Baker was the head coach at The Citadel.

"East Carolina has some fine athletic talent," Morrison said. "They are especially quick at the skill positions. Last season, they posed some problems for our defense and had some success moving the football."

The two teams meet Saturday in Williams-Brice Stadium at 1:30 p.m. with a near-capacity crowd of 72,000 expected to be on hand.

James Chases Winning Goal

ECU Fullback Tim James

For East Carolina's Tim James, the time to start realizing his goals is now.

The fifth-year senior fullback from Hartsville, S.C., has two goals this year which he has not seen accomplished since he has been at ECU.

The first one is beating South Carolina in front of his friends and family in the Gamecocks' Williams-Brice Stadium.

"I've been going down there for four years," said James, who lives only about an hour away from Williams-Brice. "I think it's time for us to go down there and come back as a winner."

"We figure that Virginia Tech didn't stop us (in the Pirates' 27-16 loss last week), we stopped ourselves," James said. "We were inside the 20-yard line seven times and only came away with 16 points. I think if we can get ourselves together and just worry about us and let South Carolina worry about South Carolina, it ought to be a pretty good football game."

The second goal for James is to post a winning record this season and leave the school on a winning note. He came into his final season this year at ECU with hopes of having a big year after waiting in the wings as a backup behind former Pirate tailback Anthony Simpson. And, according to him, one loss and a current 1-1 record isn't going to dampen his spirits.

"I've never played on a winning football team and it is a big goal for me to go out as a winner," James said. "It would be very hard for me to go through five years and never play on a winning team. I want to go out with my head up."

James feels that his goals are within his reach, after all he has defied the so-called experts in the past and he wants Saturday to be no different when the Pirates travel to Columbia, S.C., to face nationally-ranked South Carolina.

In 1980, James' freshman year at Hartsville High School, he seriously injured both the fourth and fifth vertebrae in his back while wrestling during a physical education class.

The injury was so serious that following a visit to James' doctor in Hartsville, he was left with the diagnosis that he would probably never play football again.

"I was wrestling with one of the seniors on the (football) team," James said. "He had my head under his arm and I went to pick him up and fell down because I lost my balance. When we fell, he landed on his back

Jags, Vikes Have Questions

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

With both teams having only four days to prepare for each other, D.H. Conley and Farmville Central head into Friday's cross-county high school football matchup with a number of question marks.

For Conley coach Steve Craft, the key matter to be decided is if his young team can come back and play on only a few days rest following a 14-6 win over North Pitt Monday night.

Farmville coach Dixon Sauls hopes to find out if his Jaguars make the adjustments necessary in the offensive line and on defense to rebound from a 20-0 loss to Plymouth Monday.

Both teams were forced to play on Monday because of rainouts last Friday.

"I think that equates the situation, but the fact that they won and we lost may give them a little advantage," said Sauls.

Craft, though, feels the Jaguars have the edge on experience.

"We're both in the same boat," Craft said. "But with a young football team and three days of preparation, I'm just hoping we can get a little more concentration in. It's just how our young kids respond. A veteran club would pick up things a little bit quicker."

Sauls said the Jaguars must become more consistent on offense and cut down on the turnovers if they hope to stay in the game.

"We need to eliminate our turnovers," Sauls said. "We had 10 turnovers the last two ball games. We (also) have to continue to improve in our blocking and our defense can not allow the other team to take the ball and control the ball for long periods of time."

Despite the defeat margin against Plymouth, Sauls said he was encouraged by a number of things.

"We actually played better in some areas," he said. "Plymouth is a good football team. We turned the ball over six times and two of them were deep in our territory which led to two scores. In some areas, we didn't play that well, but overall we showed some improvement."

While Craft was happy with his team's play against North Pitt, he felt the Vikings' inexperience still showed.

"Our youth really jumped out last night in our poor tackling," he said. "That was youth, a lot of arm tackling and a lot of putting a shoulder in people trying to knock them down."

"Offensively it showed in not maintaining our blocks and picking up stunts. That bothers me but it's understandable because we had made some offensive changes that we didn't get as many repetitions as we would have like with it."

Specifically, the Vikings have moved tailback Tyrone Turnage around in the backfield rather than just lining him up as the deep back in the I-formation for every play.

"We made a lot of offensive changes," he said. "We're not looking the same offensively as we did last week. We are going a little more overset and multiple it up a little more. We're moving our tailback around a little bit."

The Vikings pose challenges on both sides of the line of scrimmage, according to Sauls.

"Defensively, they are well coached and their quickness will give us problems," he said. "Offensively, they have changed some things. Their trapping game is their number one offensive weapon."

Conley has won the last two ball games by close margins. Craft said he expects another close game this year. Last year, the Vikings took a 14-12 win as Farmville missed a field goal in the waning seconds of the game.

"I really don't look for a high scoring ball game," he said. "Farmville doesn't do a lot of flashy things, but they are a good solid ball club. We know what they are going to do on offense. It's a matter of what team can get up for it the most and come off a Monday night ball game."

But all things aside, the rivalry between the two schools could play as big a factor as anything else.

"We just face a very difficult week emotionally and physically coming back from a road game and a loss," Sauls said. "It's a county rivalry. I expect us to be ready to play. It's good that it comes at this time. We need something to motivate us."

J.H. Rose

The Rampants, 3-0, get a week off to gear up for a key conference game with Northern Nash.

The open date comes following a 42-14 win over Fayetteville Terry Sanford Monday night and Rose coach Chip is ambivalent about the open date.

"This week is a trap because all the other teams are getting better," he said. "It's an easy week for us. We're fairly healthy. We don't need the break. (But) I think our kids know enough about winning and have been there before so that we're are going to get better."

So far this season, Rose has kept its coach pretty happy. Two of the team's three victories came against highly-regarded opponents (Terry Sanford and Jacksonville).

"Obviously, I think we have some things to work on, but I am pleased with things we've accomplished," Williams said. "I think our kicking game has improved. In the Jacksonville game, we had two blocked. In this last game, we recovered a fumble on a punt and also had a long return."

Another plus from the Terry Sanford game was the running of senior fullback Tony Williams, who had 158 yards rushing to take some of the load off tailback Timmy Moore.

"That is not going to do anything but strengthen the team," Williams said. "He's worked very hard and it is his time to perform. It adds another dimension to the team."

"That speaks highly of the program. Most of the time in football that is what you want to see happen. Pay the price until you are a senior."

Williams said he had some concerns about stopping Terry Sanford coming into the game, but they were answered very quickly by the Rose defense.

"Coach Brewington, Tom Peacock and Bob Alexander prepared the team well defensively," he said. "They (Terry Sanford) scored 17 points against a strong New Hanover team and I was worried."

Individually, Williams also praised the play of center Steve Tripp, whose blocking keyed the trap play that Williams ran so successfully, and defensive guard Shelton Northern, who had two fumble recoveries.

Quarterback Jamie Brewington had two touchdown passes in the game and Williams said he felt that part of the game was coming along.

"I think he's done a good job," the coach said. "To be truthful, coming into the year, I thought Timmy was going to be a strength and passing was going to be a strength. Going into first two quarters, we did not have much success with either. That opened up the trap play which Tony and the offensive line did a good job executing."

Rampants Hold On To Fifth Spot In Poll

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Three of the top four teams in the first Associated Press high school football poll maintained their positions this week, with Garner leading the way in the 4-A ranks.

The Trojans, unbeaten and unscored upon after three games, claimed seven of 12 first-place votes from prep sportswriters across the state. Garner earned 109 points. In 3-A, Burlington Cummings took eight of a possible 13 first-place votes and gained 124 points.

Wallace-Rose Hill became the new No. 1 team in the 2-A poll, replacing Newton-Conover. Wallace-Rose Hill got six of the 13 first-place votes and a total of 120 points.

Murphy was one ballot shy of being a unanimous pick for first place in the 1-A poll, earning 114 points.

The four teams that followed Garner in the 4-A poll got first-place consideration, much of which was earned on Monday night after rains postponed the regularly scheduled games last Friday. Fayetteville Smith moved from third to second and received 93 points, followed by Greensboro Page dropped a position to third with 84. Richmond County with 81 points and two first-place votes, and Greenville Rose at 72 points and one vote for first place, held the positions they earned a week ago.

The next five in the 4-A poll were Kannapolis Brown with 53, Asheville Reynolds moving up to seventh with 50, Raleigh Millbrook climbing a notch to eighth at 41, McDowell County moved up to ninth at 25 and Greensboro Grimsley with 10 fell three places from the first week.

High Point Andrews captured the remaining five first-place votes in the 3-A balloting, and scored 107 points for second place. Forest Hills was next at 103, with Havelock fourth at 82 and East Rutherford was fifth at 68.

Washington and three other teams moved into the top 10 for the first time. The Pam Pack, 3-0, moved in at sixth place with 45 points, followed by Tarboro, which was third last week, at 38. Central Cabarrus, Bertie and East Lincoln close out the top 10, with Central Cabarrus getting 29 points, and Bertie and East Lincoln getting 21 points apiece.

Whiteville received three first-place votes and earned 90 points. Thomasville moved out of a tie for fourth and assumed third place with 86 points. Hertford County was fourth with 75 points and two votes for first with Newton-Conover fifth with a vote for first and 59 points.

Bunker Hill was sixth for the second consecutive week with 54 points. Fuquay-Varina moved from eighth to seventh with 45 points and Clinton got the remaining first-place vote with 42 points. East Duplin climbed one spot to ninth with 40 points and Maiden dropped from a fourth-place tie into the 10th position with 19 points.

Four teams unranked in 1-A after last week moved into the top 10. Bath was the closest competitor for first place with 97 points, then Swain County was next at 67. East Montgomery was fourth, up from sixth, at 52 and Elkin stayed at fifth with 49.

North Moore is sixth at 45 points, followed by Beaver Creek at 31 points and the remaining first-place vote. St. Pauls dropped from fourth to eighth and gained 28 points. Currituck and Swansboro had 22 points apiece.

Hornets To Open NBA Play With Game In Columbia

By RICK SCOPPE
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets will perform a curtain call in Columbia next month.

Two days after officially beginning play in the NBA, the Hornets will make their debut in the Carolinas when they face the New York Knicks at the Carolina Coliseum, officials said Wednesday.

"It is indeed an honor to start our NBA life, so to speak, in Columbia," said Carl Scheer, vice president and general manager of the Hornets. "We hope that this will be more than a one-shot deal. ... We want to come back."

The Hornets will face the Knicks on Oct. 16 in a preseason contest, which will be the only game played in Columbia by the Hornets this season.

Charlotte will play its first NBA preseason game Oct. 14 against the New Jersey Nets in Madison Square Garden as part of a double-header.

The Hornets open their first season in the NBA on Nov. 4 against the Cleveland Cavaliers in Charlotte, N.C.

"We consider South Carolina our home," Scheer said at a news conference at the Carolina Coliseum. "When we market the first major league professional sports team of the Carolinas we truly mean South Carolina as well as North Carolina." The game is part of the Hornets' marketing strategy. Charlotte, a border city, is hoping to draw fans from not only North Carolina but South Carolina — where the sports scene has long been dominated by college athletics, especially Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

The ACC has sent numerous players to the NBA, including Michael Jordan of Chicago, a former North Carolina star. But Scheer said he thinks the ACC will help — not hinder — the Hornets and noted there are 5.5 million people within a 100-mile radius of Charlotte to draw fans from. Columbia is about 90 miles from Charlotte.

"We really do feel in order for us to be successful, we have to cultivate Columbia as a regular market, certainly bring people from Columbia for our games," Scheer said. "Not just to see Michael Jordan play, but all the great players that will be performing night in and night out on the floor in Charlotte."

"Unfortunately, for the first couple of years most of those players will be in visiting uniforms."

Scheer, who also has been general manager of the Denver Nuggets, said the Knicks, who made the playoffs last season, will be a tough opponent for Charlotte.

"The Knicks are an up and coming team, certainly a team that will be reckoned with," Scheer said. "They made a major trade in the off-season to acquire Charles Oakley, the leading rebounder in the NBA, to go with Patrick Ewing."

The Knicks also have last season's NBA rookie of the year, Mark Jackson.

"We've got our hands full," Scheer said. "Not only with the Knicks, but with our challenge to be a competitive basketball club in the NBA. Expansion is very difficult. We are not blessed with great talent to start with on the basis of how NBA teams stock expansion clubs."

"But we think with the strong coaching staff that we have, the selections we made, the trades that we made, that we are going to accelerate that development. How quick it'll happen, of course, remains to be seen. We don't have a timetable," Scheer said.

"My charge to our coaching staff is that I want to make sure we're better every day from the previous day. That's what we're going to tell our players, too."

Among those who may end up starting for the Hornets include former Detroit and Utah player Kelly Tripucka, former Los Angeles player Kurt Rambis and Rickey Green, who has spent most of his NBA career with Utah. Others on the roster entering preseason practice are first-round draft choice Rex Chapman of Kentucky and former former Wake Forest player Tyrone "Muggsy" Bogues.

The Hornets will also play preseason games in four North Carolina cities — Charlotte, Chapel Hill, Winston-Salem and Fayetteville. They will also play one preseason contest in Richmond, Va.

The Charlotte Hornets' preseason schedule for the 1988-89 season during their inaugural season in the NBA:

- Oct. 16 — New York at Carolina Coliseum, Columbia, S.C., 5:30 p.m.

To The Sports Editor:

I hate to say it but "here we go again" Pirate fans. After Saturday's performance we're off and running to another embarrassing season.

For too long, we've been hearing that the Pirates would "bounce" back next week. Well, next week it's South Carolina and they are going to dropkick the Pirates right back to Greenville unless Art Baker changes his game plan completely.

Let's face it, Baker's strategies have not worked and three seasons and two games later, a 10-win, 25-loss record proves it (11-24 if you include a forfeit by Temple).

I truly believe Coach Baker does not like to take any chances that are not a part of his regular game plan and a good example can be the quarterback situation in Saturday's Virginia Tech game. I cannot understand why Charlie Libretto wasn't put into the game to start the second half. He has proven that he can consistently get the ball to the end zone. He (Libretto) did it last year against Southern Miss, this year against Tennessee Tech and also against Virginia Tech.

What would Baker have to lose? Why won't he use what he has to win? Why won't he take a chance?

He came to us from the state of South Carolina and if he continues to demonstrate his unwillingness to do whatever it takes to win on Saturday against the Gamecocks, let's give him back to South Carolina for keeps!

with my head still under his arm and all that weight came down on my neck."

James, who now tips the scales at around 235 pounds, only weighed about 185 pounds at the time.

"It was a scary time for me," James said. "I was just starting to get into football and enjoy playing it and for someone to tell me that I could never play again really bothered me."

Determined to continue his high school playing career, James went in search of a second opinion. And he got one at Duke Medical Center.

"The doctors there (Duke) told me that with a little surgery and sitting out a year of football I would probably be able to play again," James said. "The doctor that was going to do the surgery seemed very confident. He said it was one (a surgery) he had done about five or six times before successfully."

After surgery and with a year off from football, James began a rehabilitation regimen strictly aimed at getting his neck back in shape.

"At my high school we had a neck machine and a double shoulder machine," James said. "And that was my practice. For an hour each afternoon I would go in and just work on those two machines."

James said the workouts were grueling on his neck at first, but he began noticing good dividends.

"My neck went from like a 15 to a 17 in that one year. That's when I first started lifting weights and taking it (getting in shape) seriously."

And by the end of his senior year, James had earned a spot as starting fullback for the South Carolina team in the annual Shrine Bowl battle with North Carolina. James tallied 1,570 yards rushing during his senior year.

And take care of the first goal on his list.

Babilonia Treated For Pill Overdose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police say Tai Babilonia told her manager she was despondent about recent performances, but family members and investigators say an overdose of pills by the former Olympic ice skater was not an attempted suicide.

Her father denied it was a suicide attempt and her publicist contradicted a police account of the incident.

Babilonia was taken to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, treated and released at 1:15 p.m. in good condition, hospital spokeswoman Paula Correia said.

"I talked to her and she seemed fine," Correia said.

The skater left the hospital with her mother, Cleo, and skating partner Randy Gardner, the spokeswoman said, declining to discuss the type of pills or other details.

The 28-year-old skating star had earlier called her manager, Nancy Rosenberg, saying she was unhappy about her recent skating performances and had taken a large number of pills, police spokesman Bill Frio said.

Her mother was notified and called paramedics, who picked the skater up at the family home on South Ridgely Drive.

"We have to take an injury report in any situation like this, but we are treating this as an accidental overdose" despite Babilonia's conversation with her manager, Frio said.

The skater's father, retired Los Angeles police Detective Constancio

Babilonia, called police to say his daughter took the pills accidentally and that it wasn't a suicide attempt, Detective Bruce Janis said.

"Tai Babilonia was taken to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center for treatment of severe stomach cramps due to a reaction to a non-prescription medication," said Michael Levine, her publicist. "I was one of two people that saw her. She looked like she had gone two rounds with Mike Tyson."

Levine denied it was a suicide attempt, and said the police report about the skater's conversation with her manager was wrong.

"Yes, her manager spoke to her this morning, but it was a very routine conversation," Levine said.

In 1979, Babilonia and Gardner were crowned world figure skating champions in Vienna, Austria, shattering the 14-year Soviet domination of pairs skating. They were the first Americans in 29 years to win the world title.

Gardner and Babilonia were favored to win a gold medal in mixed-pairs figure skating during the 1980 Winter Games in Lake Placid, N.Y. But Gardner was hampered by a leg injury and they had to drop out of the competition.

After the failed Olympic bid, the skating duo signed on with Ice Capades and performed with show until 1983, show spokesman Tom Abramson said.

Two Pitt People Into A.C. Sports Hall

WILSON — Atlantic Christian College will induct three new members into its Athletic Hall of Fame on Oct. 1, including two people with Pitt County ties. Ed Carraway of Ayden and Norma Jean Respass of Pantego will be joined by Danny E. Phillips of Riyadh, Saudi Arabia in the induction ceremonies. Carraway, who played his high school basketball at Greene Central, was named all-conference four years and all-state twice while a prep player. He was named to the Prep All-America Team and the East-West All-Star Team in 1965. At ACC, he was named the Most Valuable Player in 1966 and 1968, and was named to the all-tournament team in 1967. He graduated in 1969 and currently is a sales representative for Georgia-Pacific Corp., in Greenville. Respass, a graduate of Pantego High School, was a star on the ACC volleyball and basketball teams from 1963-67. She started every basketball game in her four years and scored more than 1,000 points. Twice co-captain, she was named to the all-East team in 1966-67 and was the WRA Woman of the Year in 1971. Following her graduation in 1971, she held coaching positions at Edenton Holmes and Pantego high schools before serving as athletic director for the Washington Recreation Department. From 1976-80, she was a member of the D.H. Conley High School coaching staff, earning coach of the year honors in volleyball in 1977-79 and in basketball those three years also. She currently is coaching basketball and softball at Behaven Wilkinson High School.

Brown Seeking Advice From Switzer

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — After Oklahoma's 28-0 victory over North Carolina last week, Tar Heel football coach Mack Brown has a few ideas about his team's problems. But he says he'll call Norman, Okla., this week for a chat with his old boss. "I'll just ask Coach Switzer to help me out a little," Brown said Tuesday. "I'll ask what he saw, where he thinks we're weak at. You know, what did he see here and there?" Winners and losers rarely converse after the fact, but these two coaches are close friends. Brown once spent a year as Switzer's offensive coordinator, the two wined and dined the night before their teams butted heads, and they spent most of the pregame warm-ups in each other's company. And Switzer already has voiced a few observations about the Heels — at the midfield handshake after the game. "Barry said, 'Your guys are better than I thought,'" Brown said. "He also said, 'I think we're real good,' meaning his team, and they certainly are. But he said we played 'em hard the whole game, and that we just have to keep getting after it." "He was real complimentary, which kind of surprised me. I thought he'd say something like, 'Mack, your guys have got a long way to go,' because we do have a ways to go. But we did compete with them. It wasn't the line-up-and-blow-away many thought it would be and something Oklahoma does a lot," Brown said.

Hornets, Chapman Said Near Agreement

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The attorney for Charlotte Hornets' first-round draft pick Rex Chapman says his client may sign a contract soon, a Charlotte newspaper says. Chapman's lawyer, David Falk, and Hornets vice president Carl Scheer are scheduled to meet in Charlotte today, and both appear ready to agree on a deal for the NBA expansion team's first collegiate draft choice, The Charlotte Observer reported. "There's no reason we shouldn't get it done quickly," said Falk, an attorney for Washington-based Pro Serve. "I don't know if we'll be done Thursday, but it should be done soon." Scheer sounded no less interested in settling things, saying Monday he's hopeful the Hornets can have a deal in principle when he leaves for the NBA meetings in West Palm Beach, Fla., this afternoon. The incentive for both sides to come to an agreement is obvious — training camp starts Oct. 4 and neither side wants Chapman to miss time learning coach Dick Harter's system. Harter said last week that Chapman would probably be the biggest focus of camp, since he has so much to learn in the transition from college to professional basketball. Regardless of whether a deal is made this week, Chapman will move to Charlotte to start working toward that goal. Falk said his client will move to Charlotte shortly and start working out with Michael Jordan. The two have become friends, Falk said, and Jordan has offered to help in the transition to pro basketball.

Bath's Evans 1-A Player Of The Week

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Shawn Marshburn of Southern Alamance was named the North Carolina High School Athletic Association-Drug Emporium 3A player of the week after leading the Patriots to a 26-7 defeat of Southern Durham. Marshburn completed 11 of 12 passes for 238 yards and two touchdowns. Other players honored were Melvin Smith of McDowell County in 4A, Alan Davis of Randleman in 2A and Jay Evans of Bath in 1A. Smith led McDowell to a 28-14 victory over Rutherfordton-Spindale by running for 232 yards and two touchdowns. Smith also punted for McDowell and averaged 35 yards per kick. Davis carried the ball 31 times for 212 yards and two touchdowns to lead Randleman to a 20-0 victory over West Davidson. Evans had only seven carries in Bath's 44-12 victory over Behaven but rushed for 122 yards, three touchdowns and a two-point conversion. He is averaging 20 points a game and 14.6 yards per carry. Each of the athlete's schools will receive $100 for their athletic fund from Drug Emporium in honor of their player's accomplishment.

Tigers Making First Bid For Title

AP Sports Writer

Third-ranked Clemson makes its first bid as a contender for the national championship this weekend when it hosts 10th-ranked Florida State at Death Valley in a game which some say has lost its lustre in the last two weeks. Because the Seminoles were whipped by Miami, Fla., on opening night, the importance of Saturday's game isn't as great, according to some. Even so, Clemson coach Danny Ford would prefer his team to think of it as just another day at Frank Howard Field. But it appears Ford is too late to keep the hype out. About 83,000 orange-clad fans are expected to attend the game, along with 83 reporters, 124 photographers and 75 personnel representing CBS Sports, which will televise the game nationally. Scouts from four bowl games also will attend.

"We've been in big ones before. This is a big one. We hope to play well," Ford said.

The Tigers are 2-0, but Ford isn't particularly happy with the second victory, a 23-3 triumph over Furman.

"We scored enough points to win, but we weren't very sharp," Ford said. "Our total concentration was not very good last week, not good enough to win this football game this week."

The Atlantic Coast Conference opens its race for the league title this weekend as well, with Wake Forest traveling to North Carolina State and Georgia Tech going to Virginia. Outside the league, Maryland goes to No. 12 West Virginia and The Citadel is at Duke. North Carolina has Saturday off.

N.C. State used all three of its quarterbacks in posting a 45-6 victory over Western Carolina two weeks ago, and it appeared Preston Poag emerged as the starter for Saturday's game.

But hamstring injuries continue to plague the Wolfpack, with wide receiver Nasrallah Worthen still nursing a pull, as well as freshman tailback Anthony Barbour, who rushed for 81 yards and scored two touchdowns in his collegiate debut.

Wolfpack Coach Dick Sheridan is looking for an improved performance from his team against the Demon Deacons. Last season, Wake Forest took a 21-3 victory.

"I'm anxious to see if we've improved up front on both sides of the ball," Sheridan says. "I think we're quicker. I'm anxious to see if we're stronger."

N.C. State will need all its defensive skills to keep Wake Forest quarterback Mike Elkins in check. Through two games, Elkins is the league's third-ranked quarterback in efficiency.

Another measure of the two teams will be how they fare against competition on their levels — neither the Wolfpack nor the Demon Deacons have played Division I-A opponents.

"We have been able to use quite a few young players in our wins over Villanova and Illinois State," Wake Forest coach Bill Dooley says. "But we know we won't have that luxury this week."

Virginia pointed to last week's game against Penn State as a possible indication of where the Cavalier football program has progressed. The 42-14 loss may have created more questions about Coach George Welsh's team.

"Our timing isn't as good as it should be," Welsh said in reference to the offense's inability to get the ball to wide receiver John Ford.

"Ford is first in the progression a lot, but sometimes he isn't open," he said.

Another issue is the defense, which had to hold off William & Mary two weeks ago, and which gave up 11 of 13 third-down conversions in the loss to the Nittany Lions.

"We're not quite making the plays," Welsh says. "We're in pretty good position and we're tackling better, but we're just not making the plays."

Georgia Tech needed big plays to get its first victory over Tennessee-hattanooga. Specifically, the Yellow Jackets scored all their points in the fourth quarter in the 24-10 victory.

Also, Ross is in search of his first ACC victory since going to Georgia Tech last year.

"It's an extremely important game for us and it would be a tremendous confidence builder for us to go up there and knock off Virginia," Ross says. "We're going up there with the intention of doing that."

Maryland has won its last four games against the Mountaineers to assume a 13-10-2 edge in the series, and got off to a good start in 1988 with a victory over Louisville two weeks ago. And, with that 27-16 victory, the Terrapins had its most productive day in 11 games.

West Virginia opened the season with a 62-14 victory over Bowling Green and downed Fullerton State 45-10 last weekend.

Hershiser Has 3rd Shutout In Row

By The Associated Press
Orel Hershiser has pitched three straight shutouts and hasn't been scored on for 31 consecutive innings, yet he's only halfway to Don Drysdale's record of 58 2-3 innings.

Hershiser doesn't think he'll reach that record.
"What Don's done is one of the most unbelievable feats in baseball history and it's one of those records that'll never be broken," Hershiser said Wednesday night after pitching a six-hitter to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 1-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves. "I don't even think about it."

Hershiser, 21-8, has thrown six consecutive complete games, giving him 13. He has six shutouts, tying teammate Tim Lincecum and Cincinnati's Danny Jackson for the league lead. He's not thinking about trying to beat out Jackson as the best pitcher in the National League.
"I have three starts to go and a playoff game to worry about," Hershiser said. "I'm not thinking about Danny Jackson and the Cy Young."

In other games, Houston beat Cincinnati 7-1, New York beat Chicago 3-1, Pittsburgh beat Montreal 4-1 in 12 innings, Philadelphia beat St. Louis 9-2 and San Francisco beat San Diego 6-5.

Hershiser, who has more shutouts than the Baltimore Orioles, the New York Yankees or the Atlanta Braves, didn't think he had his good stuff.
"Tonight's game was the worst I've pitched and the most inconsistent I've been in the last five or six games," said Hershiser, who stranded Atlanta runners in scoring position three times, including a one-out, bases-loaded jam in the seventh inning. "I made some bad pitches, and I still had some zeros. I never really had anything to work with, and I couldn't get into any pattern."

Rick Mahler, 9-15, remained winless since Aug. 5. He pitched a five-hitter, striking out three.
Astros 7, Reds 1
Nolan Ryan pitched a four-hitter, struck out a season-high 13 and stretched his streak without a walk to 20 consecutive innings.
"I threw the fastball about 75 percent of the time," Ryan said. "This is the most consistent I've been all year. I've had command of my pitches."

Ryan, 12-11, won his third straight and pitched his fourth complete game. He leads the National League with 221 strikeouts and has fanned 10 or more batters seven times this season and 181 times in his career. He has pitched consecutive complete games for the first time since 1983.

Ryan outpitched Jackson, 21-6, who gave up all seven runs in 5 1-3 innings. Rafael Ramirez drove in four runs with a double and a homer.

Despite the victory, the Astros remained 6½ games behind the Dodgers in the NL West.
Mets 3, Cubs 1
Sid Fernandez and Roger McDowell combined on a four-hitter and New York won for the sixth time in seven games, lowering its magic number to nine in the National League East.

Fernandez, 9-10, pitched seven innings before being taken out because of soreness in his left knee. He gave up three hits, struck out eight and walked three. McDowell pitched two innings for his 16th save.

Calvin Schiraldi, 8-12, lost his fourth consecutive game since beating Atlanta on Aug. 25.

New York scored in the second on Howard Johnson's RBI triple, Wally Backman's RBI double and Mookie Wilson RBI triple.

Pirates 4, Expos 1
Bobby Bonilla hit a three-run homer in the 12th inning, his first home run since Aug. 14.

Jose Lind hit a two-out double off Tim Burke, 3-4, and Andy Van Slyke was intentionally walked before Bonilla hit his 21st homer.

Phillies 9, Cardinals 2
Bob Sebra won for the first time since July 12, 1987 and Lance Parrish hit a two-run homer.

Jackie Gutierrez hit a two-run single in a four-run third inning as the Cardinals lost their third straight. St. Louis was outscored 30-5 in those three losses.

Sebra, 1-2, allowed two runs and four hits in five innings. Greg Mathews, 4-6, gave up six hits and five runs in 2-1/3 innings.

Vince Coleman stole three bases and has 75 for the season and 401 in his career, the fastest to reach the 400 mark.
Giants 6, Padres 5
Don Robinson gave up eight hits in seven innings and San Francisco tied a National League record with four sacrifice flies as the Giants completed a three-game sweep.

Robinson, 7-4, struck out one and walked none. Craig Lefferts got the final out for his ninth save. Jimmy Jones, 9-13, gave up seven hits and four runs in three innings, his shortest outing this season.

Norwegian Town Gets '94 Games

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Lillehammer, Norway, on Thursday won the right to hold the 1994 Winter Olympics, beating out bids from the East, the West and a Scandinavian neighbor. Anchorage, Alaska, was among the losers.

The announcement by International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch in the gardens at the Hotel Shilla triggered a dance for joy by members of the Norwegian delegation, one of whom waved his nation's flag.

Besides Anchorage, the losers were Sofia, Bulgaria and Ostersund, Sweden.

Lillehammer's presentation was made by Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland, who called on the IOC to return to "the cradle of winter sports."

The Winter Games have been held in Scandinavia only once, in Oslo in 1952.

When the IOC voted in 1986 to stagger the Winter and Summer Games, it put a heavy burden on any city contemplating a bid.

The schedule left just two years instead of the usual four until the Winter Olympics would be awarded, meaning a city either would have to have a bidding organization already in place or get up to speed very quickly.

That is why the choices had very familiar names. Anchorage, Sofia and Lillehammer all were losers for the '92 Winter Olympic.

Alabama, Texas A&M May Postpone Game

By The Associated Press
Officials of the University of Alabama and Texas A&M are considering postponing Saturday's football game at College Station, Texas because of uncertainty over the direction of Hurricane Gilbert.

The National Weather Service predicted that Gilbert had an 11 percent chance of hitting the coast at Galveston, Texas, about 150 miles south of A&M's stadium. Winds of 70 mph were predicted for Saturday at College Station.

"In a 70 mph wind you couldn't even set the ball down, and if you kicked it into the wind, the ball would sail back over your head," Alabama athletic director Steve Sloan said Wednesday. "Nobody would be at the game because they'd all be in shelters."

Sloan said the schools were considering postponing the game, possibly until Dec. 3, when both teams are idle.

Texas A&M associate athletic director John David Crow said a decision could come today on whether to play the game. But Aggies coach Jackie Sherrill said the decision might not come until Friday.

While Sloan discussed the possibility of postponing the game until December, Sherrill put forth another plan.

"We have a contingency plan to change it to Sunday night if the hurricane interferes," Sherrill said. "We won't know for another day or two. We could play it Sunday night or go ahead and play it Saturday or Saturday night. We really don't know."

Alabama coach Bill Curry, however, said the Tide will not play on Sunday.

"I'm not playing Sunday night," he said. "Right now, we're counting on lining up at 3:07 p.m. on Saturday and playing. Other than that, I don't know anything else unless it will go to December."

Sloan said the Tide's scheduled flight to College Station on Friday is "definitely out."

"If we go, we'll probably have to fly into Dallas or maybe somewhere even farther north and bus down to College Station."

"We may not travel to Texas A&M Saturday," Curry said Wednesday. "The storm is scheduled to get there before we do."

Crow said all system are go for Saturday.

"We should make the weather make us not play it," Crow said. "To play a game on Sunday and people got to drive home and go to work, that would be a hurdle."

ESPN spokesman Mike Soltys said the cable network hasn't made any decisions about televising the game should it be played Dec. 3. The game is scheduled to be televised by ESPN on Saturday.

Oilers Seek Higher Ground

HOUSTON (AP) — The Oilers are taking no chances on being blitzed by Hurricane Gilbert. They're scrambling all the way to Tennessee.

The approaching hurricane, which may hit the Texas coast by the weekend, is forcing the Oilers to leave town early for Sunday's game against the New York Jets.

The Oilers planned to fly to Memphis, Tenn., after today's workout in Houston and will hold drills there Friday and Saturday.

The hurricane threat also has forced Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville to suggest Oiler family members get away from the storm by going to Dallas.

"It's one of the few times we recommended someone go to Dallas," Glanville said of the home of the in-state rival Cowboys. "We just told them don't buy any hats or banners."

The Oilers played an exhibition game in Memphis last month.

Glanville said the Oilers would do whatever was best for the team to prepare for the Jets.

"Whatever we do will be the best thing that could happen," he said.

"The only thing you don't like about it is we won't have our own training room."

Hurricane Gilbert, the most powerful storm on record, was headed into the Gulf of Mexico packing winds of up to 175 mph. All of the Texas coast was put on alert as forecasters had not determined where the killer hurricane would make landfall.

Glanville said running back Mike Rozier, who missed last week's game with an ankle injury, did not work out Wednesday and possibly will miss Sunday's game.

The Oilers will take a 2-0 record into the weekend game. Houston hasn't won its first two regular-season games since 1981, when it finished 7-9.

The Oilers haven't won three in a row to start the season since their first year of existence, 1960, when they opened with a six-game winning streak.

The Jets, 1-1, won't be easy to beat, Glanville said.

"If you didn't have to play them they'd be fun to watch," Glanville said. "They play very similar to the way we play. I think we're in for the toughest football game we'll play this season."

Offensively, the Jets like to run the football, he said.

"They really want to pound at you, really hit you hard with the running game. I think they had 45 rushes against Cleveland."

"I've never seen anybody run the ball on Cleveland like that. They did a great job on manhandling people up front."

The Jets beat the Browns 23-3 last Sunday.

Clemens And Red Sox Ready For Yanks

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Bring on the Yankees! Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox are anxious to play and rest of the American League East is eager to watch.

Tonight at Fenway Park, New York and the division-leading Red Sox begin the biggest four-game series in baseball this year. Clemens will oppose Rick Rhoden in a rivalry that is hot even when the standings mean nothing.

Boston starts with a 4 1/2-game lead after both contenders won Wednesday night. Milwaukee, which won, and Detroit, which lost, are 5 1/2 games behind.

"It's been tough to keep our concentration the way everybody has been talking about the Yankees and the big series," said Mike Greenwell, who hit for the cycle as Boston beat Baltimore 4-3 and completed a three-game sweep at Fenway.

The Red Sox have won eight of 10 while New York made it six of seven with a 7-5 victory in Cleveland. Boston is 4-2 against the Yankees this season.

"We've had intensity and the guys are playing hard," New York manager Lou Piniella said. "This is going to be a fun series."

Elsewhere, Milwaukee defeated Chicago 4-2, Toronto downed Detroit 3-2, Texas trounced Oakland 9-1, Seattle stopped Minnesota 2-0 and Kansas City beat California 4-2.

Greenwell became the 17th Boston player to hit for the cycle and the first since Sept. 18, 1985. Greenwell went 4-for-4 and scored three times, including the tiebreaking run in the sixth inning on Ellis Burks' sacrifice fly.

"This is something you dream about and to do it to help a win in a pennant race is a great feeling," Greenwell said. "We had to beat the Orioles and we did. Now we've got the Yankees, so let's go beat the Yankees."

Greenwell hit his 21st homer in the second, lined a double to right and scored in the fourth, had a wind-blown triple in the sixth and singled in the eighth.

Mike Boddicker, traded by Baltimore to Boston on July 29, faced his former team for the first time and won. Boddicker, 12-15 overall but 6-3 for the Red Sox, went seven innings and allowed two earned runs on six hits.

Lee Smith, pitching for the fourth time in six days, went the ninth for his 26th save. Jose Bautista, 6-14, was the loser.

By the time the 32,745 fans — the 49th consecutive crowd of more than 30,000 at Fenway — stopped cheering, it was almost time for tonight's action.

"I think the Red Sox are in a great position," Baltimore manager Frank Robinson said. "This four-game series will tell a lot. I think Detroit is so beat up that it's between Boston and the Yankees. And if they split, the Yankees will have a difficult time."

"What gives the Yankees a chance is they've seemed to pick up some momentum and confidence. That gives them hope. They at least have hope of taking the three out of four they need to stay in it."

Detroit also needs New York to do well. But the Tigers, who have lost 19 of 23, have their own problems.

"You don't make up ground by what the other teams do," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said.

Yankees 7, Indians 5
Dave Winfield hit a three-run homer in the first inning, leading New York to victory in Cleveland. The Yankees won for the sixth time in seven games.

Rich Dotson, 10-9, ended his five-game losing streak. Dale Mohoric pitched 3 2-3 innings for his sixth save.

Winfield hit his 25th homer of the season and 203rd for the Yankees, tying him with Roger Maris for seventh place on the team's all-time list. New York went on to a 6-1 lead against Rich Yett, 8-6.

Jay Bell hit a solo home run and Mel Hall had a two-run double for the visiting Indians.

Blue Jays 3, Tigers 2
George Bell's tiebreaking single in the eighth inning helped Toronto continue Detroit's slump. The Tigers led the AL East by four games before sliding.

The score was tied at 1-1 when the host Blue Jays loaded the bases in the eighth against Walt Terrell, 7-14. Bell met Mike Henneman with a single and another run scored on a wild pitch.

Fred Lynn led off the Tigers' ninth with his 22nd home run, but Duane Ward, 9-2, finished for the victory.

Detroit played without Alan Trammell, who was hit by a pitch Tuesday night and left the game. His status is day-to-day.

Brewers 4, White Sox 2
Rob Deer and Robin Yount drove in two runs each as Milwaukee kept its hopes alive by winning in Chicago.

The Brewers have won 11 of their last 14, but have just 15 games remaining and have lost seven more than Boston.

Bill Wegman, 12-11, shut out the White Sox until Dan Pasqua and Mike Diaz hit consecutive homers in the sixth. Paul Mirabella went 3 1-3 innings for his second save.

Yount had a sacrifice fly and Deer followed with his 22nd home run for a 2-0 lead in the first inning against Bill Long, 7-11. Deer later hit a sacrifice fly and Yount had an RBI triple.

Rangers 9, Athletics 1
Texas' rookie battery of pitcher Kevin Brown and catcher Chad Kreuter was too much for Oakland.

Kreuter, in his first major league game, hit a leadoff single and three-run homer during a nine-run fifth inning.

Brown pitched a six-hitter in his first big league appearance since 1986. He lost his shutout in the ninth on Terry Steinbach's RBI single.

The visiting Rangers pounded Dave Stewart, 18-12, for all nine runs. Despite the loss, the Athletics' magic number for winning the AL West was reduced to six because Minnesota lost.

Mariners 2, Twins 0
Mark Langston pitched three-hit ball for eight innings and Steve Balboni homered as Seattle defeated visiting Minnesota.

Langston, 12-11, struck out six and won for the fourth time in five decisions. Mike Schooler pitched a hitless ninth for his 13th save.

Balboni hit his 20th home run against Fred Toliver, 7-4, who allowed only two hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Royals 4, Angels 2
Floyd Bannister checked California on three hits over seven innings and Pat Tabler drove in two runs as Kansas City won in California.

Bannister, 11-12, struck out seven and beat the Angels for the second time in eight days. Steve Farr got his 20th save.

The Lady Rams defeated the hosting Lady Hawks, two games to one, but then lost in straight games to Jones Senior.

In the opening match, North Lenoir took a 15-9 win in the first game but Greene Central came back to take 15-6, 15-12 wins in the next two to win the match.

Lashawn Dixon led Greene Central in service points in the match with 18 while Twigg led North Lenoir with nine.

Americans Get First Look At Soviet Nuclear Test

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
SEMIPALATINSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The land heaved and windows broke more than two miles away Wednesday when the Soviet Union detonated an underground nuclear bomb for the first American experts to witness a Soviet nuclear blast.

The Americans stood in a chilly wind on the barren test site at the Forward Command Post Semipalatinsk Polygon about 1,700 miles southeast of Moscow in the republic of Kazakhstan.

The wind blew the Soviet and American flags in the direction of the test range, far from the nearest settlement on the steppes of Soviet Central Asia and a four-hour bus ride from the city of Semipalatinsk.

As the shock wave rippled out, the ground shook and a low rumble began. Within moments of the 11 a.m. blast, a reddish dust cloud rolled above the spot where Soviet scientists planted a nuclear device in a shaft drilled 642 yards into hard rock.

Some observers seemed a bit queasy from their proximity to ground zero, only 2.4 miles away. Soviet observers watching a similar test on Aug. 17 in Pahute Mesa, Nev., remained about 30 miles from the blast site — too far away to feel the impact. It was the first time Soviet experts were allowed to see a U.S. nuclear test and monitor it with their own equipment.

After Wednesday's test, the Soviet scientists quickly checked their instruments and announced they had obtained the data necessary to determine the force of the blast.

The information was gathered in a few millionths of a second before the explosion destroyed the sensor cable buried a few yards from the nuclear device. The Soviets and the Americans, who monitored the blast with U.S. technology, have agreed to release the data within a month.

The blast was designed to have a force of 100 to 150 kilotons, about 10 times that of the atomic bomb the Americans dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, at the end of World War II, but less powerful than the multimegaton hydrogen bombs detonated in the atmosphere at the height of nuclear testing in the 1960s.

A kiloton is equivalent to the explosion of 1,000 tons of TNT. The Hagfors Observatory of the Swedish Defense Research Establishment said the Semipalatinsk explosion measured between 50 and 150 kilotons.

The joint experiment was the culmination of a "dream for many experts who have spent their careers watching and studying their counterparts from a distance," said C. Paul Robinson, the chief U.S. negotiator at the Geneva talks on limiting nuclear tests.

"We are extremely pleased," said Deputy U.S. Energy Secretary Joseph Salgado Solgado. "The experiment went very well for both sides."

Igor M. Palenykh, head of the Soviet observation team, said, "If the Americans had any doubt about our level of science and technology in a nuclear field, now they know."

Both sides expressed confidence the test explosion would lead to ratification of treaties limiting the size of underground nuclear blasts.

At a news conference in a trailer village that served as the command post for the test, Salgado said Wednesday's experiment and the one like it in Nevada "have demonstrated the effectiveness and non-intrusiveness of CORTEX," the U.S. technology developed to gauge the force of nuclear explosions.

The Soviets, however, remain sceptical that the U.S. on-site measuring system offers a long-term solution to the problem of verifying nuclear tests.

Lt. Gen. Arkady D. Ilyenko, chief of the Semipalatinsk test site, said it was too early to determine whether the American method was non-intrusive — meaning it does not interfere with the blast or pick up other data the country doing the testing would like to keep secret.

Ilyenko called for a continuing search for simpler, more precise measuring techniques.

Spokesmen for both sides agreed the experiments will speed negotiations in Geneva on verification protocols needed to ratify two treaties signed but not ratified in the 1970s that limit the force of underground nuclear explosions. Robinson said the U.S. side still hopes the treaties can be ratified before President Reagan's term ends Jan. 20, 1989.

The treaties limit underground nuclear test explosions to a strength of 150 kilotons.

The two superpowers say they will abide by the agreements, but the United States has said it will not ratify the documents until adequate provisions are included against cheating and monitoring techniques both sides could use to measure tests and verify compliance, according to Robinson.

The talks on nuclear testing began in July 1986 and formal negotiations started last November.

The Soviets support a complete ban on nuclear testing. Washington says the tests are necessary as long as nuclear weapons exist, but want the number of nuclear explosions reduced in tandem with arms stockpiles.

BLAST DEEMED A SUCCESS — Lt. Gen. Arkady Ilyenko, right, chief of the Soviet testing ground near Semipalatinsk, Russia, and Nick Akvelina, chief of the Nevada testing ground, shake hands Wednesday after the first Russian nuclear test explosion to be monitored by U.S. experts was conducted in the Soviet Union. Walesa, Communist Chiefs Discuss Solidarity's Future

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa faced talks with senior communist officials today after he took a tough line on legalizing Solidarity and the government cautioned against an "all or nothing" approach.

"There is no freedom without Solidarity," Walesa told reporters waiting at a church complex where he spent Wednesday night. "We will know more tomorrow."

The banned labor movement's leader traveled from his home in Gdansk to Warsaw late Wednesday for today's talks, but refused even to discuss a government report that he would be meeting with officials led by Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak.

The ruling Politburo, in a statement issued by the state-run news agency PAP Wednesday, saying, "A desire to narrow down the talks to bargaining in line with the unfortunate principle of 'everything or nothing' is a great misunderstanding."

Earlier, government spokesman Jerzy Urban said Walesa would be meeting with a group similar to the one of Aug. 31, when he gathered with Kiszczak, Alternate Politburo member Stanislaw Ciosek, and Roman Catholic Bishop Jerzy Dabrowski.

That session came during Poland's most serious strike wave since the government crushed Solidarity with a 1981 military crackdown and brought Walesa together with government officials for the first time in six years.

Four days later, after the government promised "round-table" talks at which Solidarity's reinstatement would be discussed, the last strike was called off.

Urban said today's talks would be taking place "in a conciliatory atmosphere."

"The aim is to reach agreement on convening a meeting of a broader group which could be the germ of a round table," he said.

Andrzej Stelmachowski, president of the Club of Catholic Intelligentsia, said in a telephone interview today that he could not comment on the talks. He has been acting as a go-between in setting them up.

"You must understand that the situation is very delicate now," he said. The 19-day strike wave that ended Sept. 3 idled Poland's two biggest ports and crippled production of high-grade coal for export.

Postal Workers Back

LONDON (AP) — Postal service picked up today as more workers returned to their jobs to begin sorting out the backlog of 150 million letters and parcels from a two-week dispute.

Mail boxes will remain sealed, however, until backlogs are mostly cleared, said Post Office spokeswoman Melanie Corfield.

She said 80,000 of the service's 140,000 workers were back at work today, two days after the strike was settled subject to local negotiations over details of workers' return. About 100,000 workers were involved in the stoppage called by the Union of Communication Workers.

New Biography Of Lennon 'Totally Fiction,' Says Ono

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A biography that portrays John Lennon as a drug-addled, anorexic bisexual who raged his way from Liverpool to New York City is "totally fiction," Yoko Ono said in a national radio broadcast.

"It's amazing that somebody took such a poetic license. I don't see John in there ... It's a very dramatically described something, but it's not about John," Ono said Wednesday night in her first broadcast comments on the book by Albert Goldman.

The usually reclusive Ono agreed to the interview to counter Goldman's "The Lives of John Lennon," which presents the ex-Beatle as a violent, drug-addicted drunk who wanted to dump his wife.

As for Ono, Goldman shows her as a gold-digger who snorted heroin up to the time of Lennon's death. Goldman also charges she was responsible for Paul McCartney's 1980 marijuana bust in Japan, had affairs while they were married and was just as intent on a divorce as Lennon.

Ono refuted virtually all of these charges, and countered through taped interviews with Lennon friends and employees that Goldman's book was based on unreliable sources and misquotes.

"It's totally fiction," Yoko said during the hour-long program, which opened with Lennon's song, "Gimme Some Truth," and coincided with the book's national release Wednesday.

"These people in this book are not us. It's not John and me," Ono continued. "It's unfair he's been assaulted and can't hit back ... For some reason this book is attempting to rob both John and I of the basic human dignity that we're entitled to."

The Ono interview was taped Aug. 28 at the Dakota, where the Lennons lived — and Yoko still lives with their son, Sean. Lennon was murdered by Mark David Chapman outside the Dakota on Dec. 8, 1980.

The interview was broadcast nationwide via the Westwood One Network; spokeswoman Laurie Wilde said an exact figure on how many stations picked up the broadcast was not available.

Also appearing were Sean and Lennon other son, Julian. Ono was interviewed by longtime associate Elliot Mintz, who is described in Goldman's book as a spy for Yoko — a charge Mintz denied during the show.

"It is, for one, very upsetting, but most of all it is lies, untruths ... The whole thing is just sickening," said Julian, who also refuted Goldman's tales of Lennon as a violent father.

Mintz read excerpts from the book to Yoko, who then responded to the allegations point by point. She denied that Lennon was homosexual; that he was using drugs while living at the Dakota with his son, Sean; that he had become a reclusive rock 'n' roll Howard Hughes.

She did acknowledge having a heroin problem during the late 1970s, but rejected Goldman's assertion that she had a $5,000-a-week habit.

The book has already drawn angry responses from friends of Lennon and Ono McCartney, who contradicted one anecdote involving Lennon smashing a painting in Paul's home, has urged a boycott of the book.

After Yoko's rebuttal, listeners were invited to dial 900-digit telephone numbers to vote on whether the book was an accurate portrayal of the Lennons' life. Results were not expected until later today.

Goldman, who conducted more than 1,200 interviews for his Lennon book, has written controversial biographies of comedian Lenny Bruce and Elvis Presley.

Character In 'Nightmare' Real Challenge For Actor

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The role of Freddy in "Nightmare on Elm Street" doesn't carry the prestige of "Hamlet," but Robert Englund isn't complaining.

In fact, Englund, a Shakespearean actor at the age of 21, considers Freddy one of his most challenging roles.

"Freddy's one of the first times I used a lot of that theater training because I can physicalize him so much. I can do a vocal characterization. You have to live up to the scenery around you," he said.

"There's a lot of good old-fashioned acting."

Freddy is the villain everyone loves to hate in the "Nightmare" films. In "Nightmare on Elm Street IV: The Dream Master," Freddy returns from the dead to haunt the teen-agers of Springwood, U.S.A.

The first three "Nightmare" films earned a combined $103 million at the domestic box office with Freddy unquestionably the main drawing card. He's slated to carry his Freddy portrayal to a TV series this fall called "A Nightmare on Elm Street: Freddy's Nightmares."

"There's so many things wrong today," Englund said in an interview. "Freddy becomes kind of a blanket evil. I don't think people identify with Freddy but I do think they enjoy the unapologetic evil."

Like any actor, Englund had to find the motivation to play his character. But how to relate to someone as evil as Freddy?

"I used a very concrete trick. I looked around at the incredible youth and beauty of my co-stars. They were gorgeous, young; they weren't jaded. I had my share of bitterness and bad stories."

"I was able to use my envy that they were being pampered while I was being basted like a turkey with Vasoline. I would literally use that to get angry with them and resent them. It was a nice parallel to Freddy's loathing of youth and beauty and innocence."

Englund grew up in Southern California in the 1950s and was 12 when he enrolled in a children's theater program at California State University at Northridge. In high school, he won 10 acting awards in the teen-age drama workshop and was eventually accepted at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in England.

Englund appeared in the Cleveland company production of "Godspell" in 1972. His feature film debut was "Buster and Billie," which starred Jan Michael Vincent and Pamela Sue Martin. He later appeared with Jeff Bridges and Sally Field in "Stay Hungry," and with Henry Fonda in "The Last of the Cowboys."

In 1984, after playing Willie in the popular TV miniseries, "V," Englund was looking for a change of pace.

"I had some free time and the 'Nightmare' film was one of the few projects that came through my agent that fit perfectly in there," Englund recalled. "I had never played a monster. I went in not knowing that Freddy was always in makeup. I thought that maybe he would be a before and after."

The first "Nightmare" film was shot on the stage once used for the "I Love Lucy" TV series.

"It was this wonderful ensemble thing. We shared a common sound stage with France's premier communal theater group. It was wonderful for me doing my first low-rent horror movie to see the premier ensemble company of the world sit in awe at this perfect Hollywood movie for them to witness," Englund said.

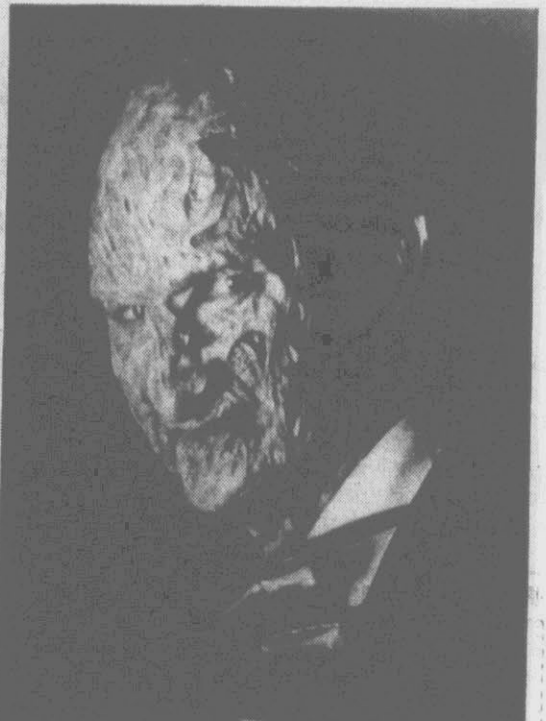

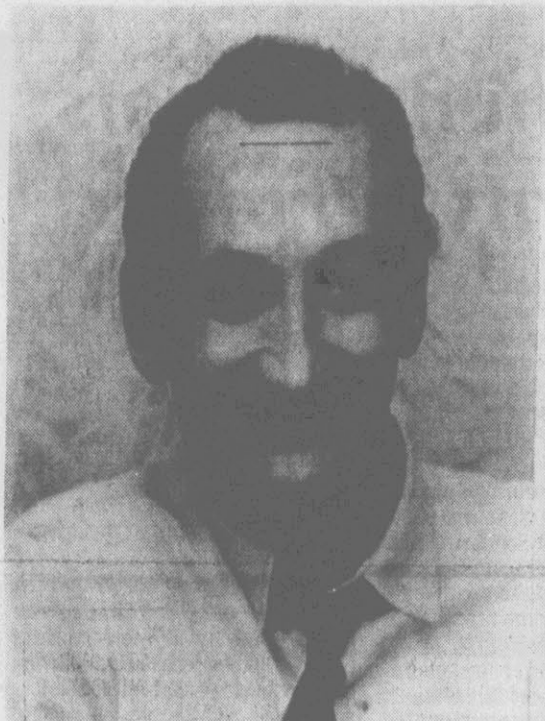

"We had gorgeous teen-age girls, fire stunts and monsters. They were doing 'Twelfth Night' in French with silk backdrops and embroidered costumes."

Surprisingly, Englund wasn't much of a fan of horror movies growing up, but he does admit to being affected by "Frankenstein."

"I remember watching the original 'Frankenstein' with my mother. It began at 11:15 at night. I was obsessed with that movie, I couldn't sleep for a week."

Freddy has probably caused a few sleepless nights as well. Not just for the audience, but for Englund, who must endure the daily routine of having the makeup applied.

"It gets harder; it doesn't get easier," he said. "When you start the movie, you haven't done makeup in a year so it's no big deal. Towards the end, I would feel my skin tingling in anticipation. It's not fun."

Stapleton: No More Edith

By Frank Rizzo
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — People don't call her Edith anymore, and that's just fine with actress Jean Stapleton.

"It's so necessary to keep putting your own identity out there," says the actress who won three Emmys playing the "dingbat" wife of Archie Bunker in the landmark '70s television series, "All in the Family."

Since the series left the air in 1980, Stapleton has shown audiences that she is more than Archie's wife.

She especially has shown her range in television movies. She played the part of the mother of a drug addict in "Angel Dusted," a woman battling for her job rights in "A Matter of Sex," a neighborhood activist in "Aunt Mary," a manipulative mother in "Grown-Ups" and Eleanor Roosevelt in "Eleanor: First Lady of the World."

She also has been hitting the road in the national touring companies of the comedy "Arsenic and Old Lace" and the Broadway musical "Drood!"

As Princess Puffer, the opium-dispensing brothel matron, the 65-year-old actress is a far cry from Edith Bunker.

And in an interview at the Shubert Performing Arts Center in New Haven last month, it was clear that Jean Stapleton is her own woman.

An elegant-looking woman, smartly dressed and stylishly coiffed,

Stapleton speaks in a refined, yet personable, manner. Addressing members of the Foundation for the Shubert, she spoke affectionately of her past roles, yet she was hardly sentimental about them. She was the professional who saw each of her roles primarily as an opportunity to work her craft.

Stapleton says the close identification of her with Edith has lessened over the years. "One of the reasons I know is when people address me by my own name," she says. "That's when I know it's getting across."

"All in the Family" was far from the first major role for the seasoned actress. On Broadway she sang scene-stealing songs in "Damn Yankees," "Bells Are Ringing" and "Funny Girl," and she performed with Zero Mostel in Eugene Ionesco's "Rhinoceros" and with Judith Anderson in "In the Summerhouse."

Over the years, Stapleton has taken on a new role, that of an activist in helping to preserve intimate-sized theaters such as the Shubert.

"I'm profoundly dedicated to the need to preserve our theaters," she says. "If we don't have theaters for our plays, where is the theater going? Developers are making theaters too big because the economy is forcing them to make it that size to make money. They are not thinking of the art side, which must be considered."

Playing "Drood!" in mammoth theaters and 10,000-seat arenas can distort the work's original intent and charm.

"That was a nightmare I wouldn't like to repeat," she says of the arena performances. "This musical, unlike a lot of the new spectacle musicals, which seem to be the only ones to be succeeding fully, is made for this size theater."

'48 Hours' Telecast Moves To Storm Site

By John Carmody
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

As lethal Hurricane Gilbert turned to the north to threaten the U.S. Gulf Coast, CBS News announced late Wednesday that tonight's "48 Hours" broadcast will be live from the target area.

The scheduled "48 Hours" telecast dealing with infertility was scrapped as CBS dispatched 14 correspondents to the Texas Gulf Coast, including population centers such as Galveston and Houston, as well as other locations on the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico where Gilbert has already struck.

Late Wednesday, it was expected that Dan Rather would anchor the program out of New York. The broadcast will stretch the original concept of "48 Hours" — massive coverage of a story over a 48-hour period right up to broadcast time — to its maximum and will be the first major effort at the News division since David Burke took over as president last summer.

CBS, like the other networks, will also increase the number of news "interruptions" during regular broadcasts as the situation requires when Gilbert approaches the mainland.

ABC's "Nightline" planned to be on the scene with Wednesday night's broadcast, while "Good Morning America" has dispatched weatherman Spencer Christian to the Gulf Coast as all three networks and CNN gear up for maximum coverage.

Just A Day's Work

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite a comedy career that includes writing the screenplay of "The Graduate" and appearing on "Saturday Night Live," Buck Henry doesn't try to analyze his creative achievements.

"I have no theories about this stuff. I just do it," said Henry, who as an actor is starring in Mariane Meyer's play "Kingfish" at the Los Angeles Theater Center through Oct. 23.

 Remember the motto of the Seabees: "The impossible we do immediately. Miracles take a bit longer." If you look at this deal from the recent Spingold Team Championship, you would think that ten tricks at hearts are beyond reach. But watch what actually happened at the table.

 South was perhaps a trifle aggressive in introducing his club suit at the three-level. As a result, the double fit propelled North-South to the heart game, a contract that would normally have caused South considerable pain.

East won the first trick with the queen of spades as declarer, Bart Bramley of Atlanta, followed low from dummy. East's diamond shift went to the queen and ace, and a low trump to the queen lost to the king. West's diamond return was ruffed, and declarer tried the ace of hearts in an attempt to drop the jack. When that hope went aglimmering, declarer ran the jack of clubs. The ten was covered by the king and taken with the ace, but revealed to declarer the bad news that the club suit was not going to run.

Undeterred, declarer crossed to the ace of spades and ruffed a diamond. A spade ruff was the entry to lead another diamond from the table. East was helpless. To ruff with his winning trump would not help, so he discarded. But now declarer was able to score his last trump en passant, and his queen of clubs was the game-going trick.

Mainly Medicines Could Aid Alzheimer's Victims

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — A memory enhancing medicine derived from a Chinese plant has been reproduced in U.S. laboratories and holds promise for the senile and victims of Alzheimer's disease, scientists say.

"This is not a cure," cautioned Alan P. Kozikowski, professor of chemistry and behavioral neuroscience at the University of Pittsburgh.

"It's one hurdle in the path to trying to find something that can be used in treating this disease and helping to alleviate some of the symptoms."

For centuries, the Chinese have brewed tea from the leaves of the plant, Huperzia serrata, and served it to the elderly to improve their memory.

In 1986, scientists at China's Shanghai Institute of Materia Medica isolated the specific compound in the plant responsible for improving memory. Since then, U.S. researchers have been trying to synthesize the compound, an alkaloid known as huperzine A.

Kozikowski said he succeeded last week.

"The synthesis is particularly important because we can attempt to improve on nature. We should be able to make something better in terms of its ability to get into the brain and work on specific enzyme systems," he said.

Zaven Khachaturian, director of the National Institute on Aging's office of Alzheimer's disease research, said Kozikowski's discovery is encouraging.

"Anything that's done on this type of identification of plant material to improve memory would make a significant contribution to Alzheimer's disease," said Khachaturian, whose agency is financing Kozikowski's research.

"The disease is such a devastating disease. If you can keep somebody out of the hospital for even six months or a year, it's a major achievement."

An estimated 2.5 million Americans suffer from Alzheimer's, and most are older than 60, according to the Alzheimer's Association. About 100,000 people die annually as a result of the disease.

"There is no known cause or cure for the progressive, degenerative illness, which attacks the brain and results in impaired memory, thinking and behavior. Researchers suspect as culprits genetic predisposition, virus or other infectious agents and environmental toxins."

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer
BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Medical researchers say transplanting tissue from freshly aborted human fetuses holds great promise for sufferers of Parkinson's and other diseases, but they admit that ethical questions must be resolved before launching widespread experiments in the new technique.

A special National Institutes of

A new experimental drug to help Alzheimer's patients, known as tetrahydroaminoacridine, or THA, is being tested at 16 U.S. research centers. Preliminary results of the drug's safety and effectiveness are expected early next year, Khachaturian said.

Kozikowski said huperzine A, like THA, blocks the enzyme responsible for breaking down a primary neurotransmitter in the brain known as acetylcholine. This neurotransmitter is deficient in Alzheimer's patients, whose brain cells gradually die.

"To enable a cell on the verge of dying to live longer or function normally, even for a brief period, that's a tremendous gain," Khachaturian said.

"You help the neurotransmitter

that's left there to work a little bit better, help alleviate symptoms," Kozikowski said. "In many cases, that's the best one can hope for."

While more potent than THA, huperzine A appears to be less toxic and remains active longer in the brain, Kozikowski said. Side effects of THA include dizziness and nausea, also present in huperzine A but in lesser amounts.

Experts Ponder Fetal Tissue Transplants

Health advisory committee was turning to those questions today in a second day of hearings expected to focus on ways to guard against commercial trafficking in fetal tissue and to discourage the prospect of people becoming pregnant with the intention of having an abortion to provide treatment for a relative.

Meanwhile, a ban against federal financing of such research is likely to remain in effect for several months at least.

The panel of outside experts, consisting of medical, legal and religious leaders, is scheduled to make recommendations Friday, which will be passed on to a standing NIH advisory committee and, ultimately, NIH Director James B. Wyngaarden.

The three-day meeting of the special advisory panel that started Wednesday was an outgrowth of a decision by the No. 2 official at the Department of Health and Human Services, Assistant Secretary for Health Robert E. Windom, to deny permission for NIH scientists to transplant fetal tissue into Parkinson's patients pending a full airing of legal and ethical questions.

The first modern Olympic games were formally opened in Athens, Greece, in 1896.

Global Survey: Much Of City Air Badly Polluted

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA (AP) — Most of the world's 1.8 billion urban dwellers breathe air of unacceptable quality, according to study released today and billed as the first-ever comprehensive global assessment of air pollution.

Prepared by the World Health Organization and the U.N. Environment Program, the study says many countries have made great progress in reducing air pollution but that the situation is still very serious, especially in Third World nations.

The 100-page survey is based on data obtained during up to 15 years of monitoring in more than 60 countries.

Dr. Michael Gwynne, head of the environment program's Global Monitoring System, said the survey represents the "most comprehensive, detailed and informative study ever carried out."

It focuses on pollution by sulfur dioxide, of which man-made emissions worldwide are estimated at up to 180 million tons per year, and suspended particulate matter, of which more than 100 million tons — chiefly dust and smoke — are assumed to be produced annually by human activities.

Continuous exposure, especially of children, to the two pollutants can result in acute or chronic respiratory problems.

Dr. Gwynne said 625 million people, mostly in developing countries, are exposed to "unacceptable levels of sulfur dioxide" and that another 550 million live in conditions just within the range of tolerable levels set by the World Health Organization.

He said the situation is worse with respect to dust and smoke, estimating that about 1.25 billion city dwellers live in "unacceptable conditions" and another 200 million live in conditions that are "only marginal."

Data from 54 cities suggest that the average annual sulfur dioxide level during the 1980-84 monitoring period was highest in Milan, Italy.

But Seoul, Rio de Janeiro and Paris were also among the cities where the average range was above WHO's guidelines. Melbourne, Australia, Tel Aviv, Israel, Toronto, Chicago and Munich were among those with the lowest averages.

A separate 33-city survey said

sulfur dioxide concentrations were declining in 21 cities, all in the industrialized West, while the upward trend was strongest in New Delhi, India.

A list of sulfur dioxide emissions in 33 countries showed a decrease in all major Western industrialized countries.

In Poland, it soared by 80 percent within a decade.

Emissions in the Soviet Union were not included in the listing but the study cited an estimate of 28 million tons in 1979.

This is well above the United States' estimated total of 23 million tons, which has since been further reduced.

Suspended particle emissions also decreased in Western countries, while going up spectacularly in Poland.

In 18 out of 41 cities, the annual suspended particle emissions average was above the WHO limit. Kuwait topped the list, which also included New Delhi, Beijing, Jakarta, Indonesia and Manila, Philippines. Chicago was the only Western city with an excessive average.

The study lists upward trends for levels of nitrogen oxides in several of the larger European cities, including London, Amsterdam and Frankfurt, West Germany. It noted that most European countries do not have the stringent standards for automobile emissions that the United States and Japan have implemented.

About 15 to 20 percent of urban residents in North America and Europe "are at increased risk to short-term high nitrogen dioxide exposure" during rush hour traffic, according to the report.

The issue of nitrogen oxides is also of concern because of their role in the formation of other oxidants, including ozone.

Third World Economic Growth Pace Said Slower

WASHINGTON (AP) — The newly industrialized economies of East Asia are enjoying a surge of exports but economic growth in the world's developing nations as a whole is slipping, the International Monetary Fund said in a new report.

The IMF, a 151-nation body based in Washington, also said in its annual report that Third World countries' failure to reduce their debt is the main cloud over the world economy.

The economic outlook in Western Europe, Asia and the United States has improved, it said, despite the continuing large U.S. trade and budget deficits.

In the developing world, especially among the newly industrialized nations of East Asia, "many countries have benefited from vigorous export growth," the report said.

"Nonetheless ... the average growth rate in the developing countries fell from 4.2 percent in 1986 to 3.4 percent in 1987," it said. This was due in part to stagnation in oil-exporting countries, where increasing oil prices were offset by higher prices for those countries' imports.

"Much of 1987 and the first part of 1988 were characterized by continued expansion in world output and trade," the report said. But, it added, "there is no room for complacency."

The IMF said that besides indebtedness primarily in Africa and Latin America, other concerns are:

—The trade deficit and foreign debt of the United States.

—The lack of economic growth in Africa.

—The return to high inflation in Latin America.

The total debt of the developing countries increased to $1.2 trillion last year from $1.1 trillion in 1986, the report said.

Governments and international organizations such as the IMF loaned about $34 billion to developing countries during the year, while commercial banks and other private lenders were "virtually drying up" as a source of needed new loans, the report said.

New private lending totaled $8 billion, far short of the $43 billion still needed by the developing countries, it said.

On the positive side, it said, "real output in the industrial countries expanded by over 3 percent in 1987, somewhat faster than in 1986."

Efforts by the United States and its allies to reduce the value of the dollar and increase other currencies like the yen and the deutsche mark have paid off in helping to reduce the U.S. trade deficit, the IMF said. And it singled out Japan for undertaking reforms to stimulate domestic demand.

The moves have increased imports in Japan and West Germany, but dampened demand for imports in the United States, it said. The dollar dropped 13 percent between February 1987 to April 1988, bringing it near its previous lows of 1978. By mid-1988, however, the dollar had stopped dropping and had begun rising, it said.

Still, the U.S. "current account" deficit, covering the broadest measure of trade including merchandise and services continued to widen last year. This was due in part to increased payments of interest and dividends on U.S. government and private debt to foreigners.
