Discovery's Changes Go Beyond Skin

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Outwardly, Discovery looks the same as it did when it last flew three years ago. Beneath the surface, however, are hundreds of design changes intended to make the space shuttle a safer vehicle.

There are so many changes that Rick Hauck, who will command Discovery on the first post-Challenger flight, says it will be like testing a new vehicle. And that, he says, adds certain risks.

"We're treating it like a test flight," Hauck said. "We'll probably see some surprises, but I don't think they'll be life-threatening surprises."

airplane back, the first thing you do is a test flight to wring out every system and find the surprises. I expect we'll see some.

Government Troops Fire On Marchers

Scores Of Burmese Demonstrators Reported Killed In Coup Protests

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Troops fired into crowds of students, Buddhist monks and other peaceful marchers today in Rangoon as thousands of Burmese protested the military coup, witnesses said. Unofficial estimates said about 150 people, including 17 soldiers, died.

On Sunday, Saw Maung abolished key government institutions, ordered striking government employees to return to work, imposed a nighttime curfew and banned public gatherings of five people or more. He said the moves were aimed at halting economic and social chaos that has forced the resignation of two Burmese leaders since July amid public demands for an end to 26 years of repressive one-party rule.

itary trucks while residents dragged some dead and wounded into their houses or placed them onto the seats of three-wheeled taxis for rides to the nearest hospitals.

Residents of buildings near the U.S. Embassy said they saw demonstrators being cut down by military fire. Others saw two monks falling to the ground after being hit by bullets around the Sule Pagoda.

A Western diplomat, contacted by telephone from Tokyo, said soldiers hidden from sight and possibly positioned on rooftops were firing at demonstrators in front of the U.S. Embassy, which may have been struck by bullets.

Although most demonstrators faced the troops without weapons, some carried swords, spears, crossbows and other primitive weapons. There were reports that they were hurling firebombs in some areas.

The Western diplomat said 1,000 demonstrators were moving peacefully around a corner near the U.S. Embassy when troops opened fire, possibly with heavy weapons and automatic rifles.

The military announced that soldiers firing on "violent and unruly mobs" in the capital and other parts of the country killed 23 people and wounded another 23. The announcement said the figures were incomplete.

However, unofficial estimates based on eyewitness accounts and interviews put the number of dead at about 150, including 17 soldiers, with an unknown number of people wounded.

Soldiers were preventing armed demonstrators from entering the capital, witnesses said.

The clashes between army troops and protesters began in and around the capital Sunday after after headline army commander Gen. Saw Maung ousted civilian President Maung Maung.

"Many students are being mowed down. Can't anything be done?" a reporter said by telephone from the scene of one confrontation before breaking down in tears.

Avril Seizes Power In Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Advocates of democratic reform expressed hope that Haiti's new military leaders would open a dialogue with the people after ousting Lt. Gen. Henry Namphy, who ran the country for more than two years.

U.S. Will Demand Extradition Of New Haitian Army Leader

Officials in Washington still were seeking information about the Haitian coup.

Ms. Stockman said there were no reports that Americans had been injured.

She said the airport in the Haitian capital was closed and a travel advisory cautioned Americans to avoid non-essential travel and advised them to contact the embassy if they must travel.

Telethon Raises $52,000

Approximately $52,000 in contributions was pledged this weekend to support the Greenville Crime Stoppers program during its annual telethon, broadcast live from the Greenville Cable TV building on Arlington Boulevard.

"Although we raised $1,000 less than last year, we still consider it a very successful telethon," said Crime Stoppers coordinator Sgt. Doug Jackson.

Jackson said over 100 people directly participated in this year's telethon, which ran from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday.

Local cable television subscribers could watch the telethon on cable channels 7 and 9. Viewers not subscribing to cable service could not receive the telecast.

A collection of 25 music videos which featured local personalities singing in synchronization with popular recordings was featured.

Those donating over $25 during the telethon were entitled to one of the 25 videos recorded for this year's telethon or one of the 38 videos prepared for last year's event.

"The most requested video this year was 'Judge Wapner's Court' performed by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department," Jackson said.

Crime Stoppers is a non-profit program which rewards anonymous sources up to $1,000 for information regarding particular criminal investigations. No tax money is used.

"The program has been very successful," Jackson said. "Since its inception on September 20, 1983, we have recovered $1.25 million worth of stolen property and narcotics, made 555 arrests and paid out 239 awards."

Chairman for this year's telethon was John Minges III.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN MUSIC?

I have recently discovered that Charlie Chaplin, as well as being a gifted comedian, was a composer of beautiful music. One of his compositions was "Theme From Limelight." If anyone has this music and would let me copy it, either from tape or sheet music, I would appreciate it. Also, if anyone knows of others of his compositions and would share information or music with me, I'd be grateful.

Sheppard Library was able to locate sheet music for "Theme from Limelight" and you found a rendition of it on a Zamfir audiotape. We appeal to our readers to contact you at 355-4768 if they know of other Charlie Chaplin music they can share with you.

day. The ceremony at the ECU School of Medicine marked the activation of the 350th MASH unit in Greenville, which will operate with a minimum strength of 239 personnel. (Reflector Photo by Shannon Wolfe)

Army Medical Unit Activated

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 350th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital (MASH) unit was activated during a ceremony Sunday at the Brody Medical Science Building, and some area residents showed up to join up.

"A lot of individuals at our Sunday activation ceremony expressed an interest in the possibility of joining the MASH unit in Greenville," said Dr. Richard Merrill of the East Carolina University School of Medicine. Merrill, the unit commander, is also a colonel in the U.S. Army Reserve.

The 350th is attached to the 120th U.S. Army Reserve Command, headquartered at Fort Jackson, S.C.

The command serves 94 units in six states, but most of the units are in the two Carolinas.

"Even before Sunday we have had a number of area people express an interest in being part of the unit, and all of these are in the pipeline, being evaluated for consideration as members," Merrill said.

Merrill explained that the 239 personnel in the 350th is the minimum number for which the unit is designed.

"We will be authorized more personnel in certain classifications such as doctors, nurses and medical technicians," he said, "so that our eventual strength may be between 300 and 400."

Merrill said six administrators will be on duty all the time, while others will return for regular training.

"We'll have one officer, four NCO's and one civilian worker," he said. "All other personnel will take part in training sessions to be conducted monthly."

"The group will be going to different places for training," he added. "We'll soon go to Camp Shelby in Mississippi for a training program."

Those attending the ceremony also got a look at MASH equipment. The 321st Medical Evacuation Hospital in Greensboro displayed components of the modular units like those to be used by the Greenville unit.

The official activation and passing of the colors ceremony for the 350th was performed by Maj. Gen. Jackson F. Flake Jr., commander of the 120th USARC, Merrill and Command Sgt. Maj. Robert P. Anderson.

Malcolm Howard, former civilian aide to the secretary of the Army for North Carolina, was guest speaker.

The Greenville unit, like other MASH units, is designed for use in war situations. The motto of the units is "Ready on Call." If called, the 350th can provide hospitalization for up to 60 patients within a combat zone.

Unit members are being trained to prepare critically injured or wounded patients for evacuation to more permanent facilities.

"The modular units are designed to be fully equipped, ready for operation," Merrill said. "They can be transported to nearly any site by air using container air transports."

Merrill, a native of Massachusetts, has been on the staff of the ECU School of Medicine since 1979. He came here from Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, Texas, when he left active duty for the Army Reserve.

Student Death

DURHAM (AP) — Authorities who were called to investigate an automobile accident Sunday found a 19-year-old North Carolina Central student who had been shot to death.

"It appears this is drug-related," said Durham Police Officer S.E. Rigsbee.

Wayne Henry Brown, a sophomore from Wilmington, Del., died about 2 a.m. from a gunshot wound to the right shoulder and abdomen. He died in the ambulance on the way to Duke Medical Center, authorities said.

Brown still was conscious when police found him about 1:30 a.m., slumped between the front seats of his car after it smashed into a front porch of a Durham house, police said.

Several people told officers they heard gunshots just before the car smashed into the house.

Twelve States Will Elect New Governors This Fall

By PETE BROWN
Associated Press Writer

A former governor, the wife of another, and sons of a former senator and a former governor are on the ballots as 12 states hold elections for their top office in November.

In three of those states — Utah, West Virginia and Indiana — Democrats are favored to retake the governor's mansion from Republicans; in a fourth — North Carolina — a Democrat is giving the GOP incumbent a hard time.

Currently, 27 Democrats and 23 Republicans serve as governors. Nine incumbents — six Republicans and three Democrats — will be on the ballot. Republican Robert Orr of Indiana is barred by law from a third term; Montana Democrat Ted Schwinden and New Hampshire Republican John Sununu are retiring.

If Massachusetts' Michael Dukakis is elected president, Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy, also a Democrat, will serve out his term, which expires in 1990. In Nevada, Lt. Gov. Bob Miller will complete the two years remaining in fellow Democrat Dick Bryan's term if Bryan is elected to the U.S. Senate.

Other states electing governors this fall are Delaware, Missouri, North Dakota, Rhode Island, Vermont and Washington.

In Missouri, Democratic state Rep. Betty Hearnes, wife of former Gov. Warren Hearnes, who served in 1965-73, lags behind Republican Gov. John Ashcroft in fund raising and in polls. Ashcroft is seeking his second term.

Democrat Thomas Judge, Montana's governor from 1972-80, is seeking a comeback against former state Sen. Stan Stephens in a race seen as a tossup.

New Hampshire's lineup was determined Tuesday when Rep. Judd Gregg, whose father, Hugh, was governor in 1953-55, ran away with a three-way GOP primary. He faces lawyer Paul McEachern, who nearly beat Sununu two years ago.

And in Indiana, Secretary of State Evan Bayh, 32-year-old son of former Sen. Birch E. Bayh, hopes to capitalize on his famous name in a race against Republican Lt. Gov. John M. Mutz.

Republican Gov. Norm Bangerter's bid for a second term is in danger in Utah, where a weak economy, a record $166 million tax increase, several bank failures and the drought have eroded his popularity.

Polls this month by the Deseret News and KSL-TV and by The Salt Lake Tribune had Democrat Ted Wilson, former mayor of Salt Lake City, ahead by 13 and 23 points respectively.

In West Virginia, Republican Gov. Arch Moore is in trouble against Democrat Gaston Caperton, a political novice who spent more than $2 million, most of it his own, to win a seven-year primary.

A poll this month by The Associated Press, Charleston Daily Mail and WSAZ-TV gave Caperton a 60-31 percent lead.

Moore, seeking an unprecedented fourth term, said the poll gave him "one heck of a heartburn," but called the results "an aberration" that would shift before the election.

West Virginia has one of the nation's highest unemployment rates and had to borrow $80 million this year to keep running.

Bayh is leading in his bid to break the GOP's 20-year grip on Indiana's governor's office. His father lost in 1980 to Dan Quayle, now the Republican vice presidential candidate.

An Indianapolis Star poll in late August gave Bayh 45 percent support and Mutz 39 percent, with 16 percent undecided.

Gov. Jim Martin and Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan are locked in a spirited race in North Carolina. An early August survey by the Greensboro News & Record found Martin with 46 percent support and Jordan 42 percent, with 12 percent undecided.

Martin stirred controversy this month with a commercial on black-oriented radio stations questioning

Jordan's commitment to the state Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

The ad, featuring a fictitious conversation in a black barbershop called Smitty's, points out that Jordan declined to serve on a Martin-appointed commission to plan observances. It does not mention that Martin opposed the 1987 vote to establish the holiday or that Jordan favored it.

Jordan called the ad "sleazy."

Vermont's first woman governor, Democrat Madeleine Kunin, is favored to win a third term against state Rep. Michael Bernhardt.

Bernhardt has sought to capitalize on opposition to Vermont's "growth bill," a measure to control development. The law brought out the independent, anti-government streak in hunters, trappers, farmers and others.

Here's a brief look at races in other states:

DELAWARE — A mid-August poll by the Wilmington News-Journal gave Republican Gov. Michael N. Castle a 56-point lead over Jacob Kreshtool, a whimsical 69-year-old lawyer and environmentalist who began the campaign with a three-week trip to Alaska.

NORTH DAKOTA — Democrat George Sinner is expected to win a second term despite depressed oil and commodity prices and his support of new taxes. His challenger, businessman Leon Mallberg, has never run for statewide office.

RHODE ISLAND — Communications executive Bruce G. Sundlum won last week's Democratic primary for the right to face Gov. Edward D. DiPrete as he did in 1986.

WASHINGTON — Democrat Booth Gardner is heavily favored for a second term. King County Prosecutor Norm Maleng, in his first try for statewide office, is expected to win the Sept. 20 GOP primary.

HOW FLUORIDE WORKS

How does fluoride work?
Fluoride actually combines with and is deposited into the surface layer of the tooth's enamel in the form of fluorapatite. The more teeth are exposed to fluoride, the more fluoride is absorbed, and the teeth become more resistant to dental decay.

Is it effective? Researchers have shown, in over thirty years of testing, the community water supplies containing 1.0 to 2.5 parts per million of the fluoride concentration, when ingested from infancy to twelve years of age, will reduce the decay susceptibility by from 50 to 60 percent!

Are there any negative effects from using fluoride? Not one claim against fluoride has ever been substantiated. It doesn't cause kidney dysfunction, cancer, heart disease, or any other health problem. Whether taken from community water supply, fluoride treatments, or toothpaste with fluoride, it is safe and effective. Call our office today for application of fluoride to help prevent decay in your child.

Note:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Essential Need

Water & Sewer Study Right Move

A study of the county's water and sewer needs, authorized by the County Commission recently, should provide information that will be invaluable in planning future utility needs.

The commissioners awarded a $15,000 contract to Rivers and Associates to study countywide water and sewer needs.

The study is expected to estimate such needs in unincorporated sections of Pitt County for the next 30 years. It is envisioned to recommend systems which will serve the rural areas. The study will require about five months to complete.

By their action the county commissioners are recognizing an essential need of Pitt County.

Water and sewer systems can serve traditional farm homes in rural areas. The most pressing problem, however, is the development of full subdivisions in rural areas. These homes often are served by existing rural water systems. Sanitary sewer service is typically provided by septic tanks. The concern is that such a concentration of septic tanks could eventually pollute the ground water.

That is the situations the study will need to address. In addition there may be a need for standardized water systems which will provide adequate water and pressure for fire fighting purposes.

Add to that the possibility of future industries locating in rural areas which might need major water supplies and the need for a full study of Pitt County's rural water and sewer needs becomes obvious.

The county commissioners have acted correctly in authorizing this study. It should provide guidance for rural water and sewer system well into the next century.

Nature's Might

Gilbert Has Few Parallels

Hurricane Gilbert, a monster storm with few parallels in the memory of most Americans living today, wreaked havoc in the Caribbean, crossed the Yucatan Peninsula and slammed into the Texas coast.

Make no mistake ... this was among the worst that Nature can throw at us. It was a killer storm, one which clearly called for evacuation of any humans in its path. As always some ignored the warnings and to their sorrow.

Eastern North Carolina has seen the fury of hurricanes which battered the coast and then moved inland to rip off rooftops, overturn barns and bring down huge trees. Few, however, have compared with the 120 mph, and more, winds and the low barometer readings of Gilbert.

Fortunately there was plenty of warning for the coastal areas of the south as Gilbert moved in. The storm had been tracked for days as it moved northward. The observers made it clear that this was a bad one. The howling winds could bring the sea crashing inland and rip down buildings along with anything else in its path. Its huge circulation areas covered the entire Gulf of Mexico.

Unless Gilbert tracks eastward our area will miss any effect from this awesome storm. We should not forget, however, that Nature is sending us a message. Someday such a storm will crash into North Carolina's outer banks. Given the banks' fragile nature there can be no doubt as to what the damage will be. Try as we might man's efforts are no match for the wind and the sea. Nature, after all, has time on its side.

Slow Change In Mississippi

WASHINGTON — Mississippi is still a place where, when fire destroys a black frat house at the state university or levels an integrated church, the reasonable assumption is racially motivated arson. That much is unchanged.

But Mississippi is no longer a place where such acts can be presumed to have the tacit approval of ordinary white citizens or their leaders. That much is different.

When fire gutted the building that was to make Phi Beta Sigma the first black fraternity on the University of Mississippi's Fraternity Row, the university lost no time in finding another location, three doors down the street. Renovation costs for the new location will be paid from a fund established by the Ole Miss Interfraternity Council.

Bob Kochtitzky of Jackson is hoping for a similar response to the recent destruction of a downtown Macon residence being used by a tiny racially integrated church.

"The message we are trying to send out with this fund-raising and rebuilding effort," says Kochtitzky, coordinator of a sort of futurist think tank called Mississippi 2020, "is that what Ole Miss did is not aberrational.

Whatever the old image of Mississippi, this is who we are now."

The fire at Ole Miss has been on the network news. The Macon affair scarcely made the local papers. After all, the pastorless congregation, started three years ago by two black and two white families, has only about 21 active members.

Until last May when they acquired the building that was to become their church, they had been meeting in their private homes.

"We just felt like more needed to be done in the name of God for people in the area," Levi Hatcher, one of the founders said. "We dealt with little kids who didn't go to church and people who didn't feel welcome at most other churches. Poor people, alcoholics, everything. We're nondenominational, but our members include Baptists and Methodists and Mennonites. We've got Indians, we've got mixed couples, and that may have bothered some people. But there's nothing radical about what we are trying to do. We're just trying to be a part of the Body of Christ."

Kochtitzky got interested initially because one of the congregation's founders, Larry Miller, a vocational education teacher, is a member of Mississippi 2020, an organization working for a new vision of the state's future. "When Larry told me what happened, we just decided we needed to do something about it. These are good people, doing a number of worthwhile things, like tutoring kids who are in danger of becoming dropouts and teaching people how to budget their money and helping with voter registration. We've set our goal at $75,000, to supplement the little bit of insurance they had on the place and to help them with some of their plans."

Hatcher, a Grambling University graduate who operates three convenience stores in the area, is motivated mainly by his religious principles. "We don't have a pastor, just the elders. We are the ministry," he said. "We take turns lecturing, or maybe we'll have a visiting minister. We're just trying to help the local people who don't have anybody else to turn to."

Kochtitzky's motivation is a little broader. He wants to help spread a different idea of what Mississippi is like in the late 1980s.

"I'll never forget back in the '60s when a group of Quakers came to Mississippi to try to do some good.

About 40 black churches had been burned down, and they asked me why we weren't doing anything to help. I didn't have a good answer."

The upshot of that challenge was the creation of the Community of Concern and the rebuilding of 38 churches. "The group that came out of that, the Mississippi Religious Leadership Conference, will be deciding shortly whether to join in the Macon effort. I think they will."

Hatcher says his congregation has been cheered by the expressions of sympathy from blacks and whites in the area. "The only thing that throws us for a loop is the attitude of the city officials, who are saying they that we can't have the church in the old location. They didn't say that until after it burned, so I don't know whether it's a zoning problem or what. But I think everything will work out. We intend to obey the law, no matter what."

"Well, there's one more thing I don't understand, and that's why anybody would want to burn our church down. But I'm not going to worry about that, either. Maybe whoever did it, we'll give them a drink of water one day."

Stewardship Is What's Missing

WASHINGTON — Just when you thought it was safe to go home and hide under the bed from all the bad news about the environment, the government warns that a man's house may be a menace because of cancer-causing radon gas. No wonder the mood of the moment is ecophobia, the fear that the planet is increasingly inhospitable.

The radon warning came on a day when the St. Louis weather forecast was for "smoky sunshine," a result of windborne haze from forest fires in the far West. The fires are partly a result of the drought, which may be related to a general warming of the planet — the greenhouse effect that might result in a disastrous rise of the oceans.

If you go to the beach, while there is a beach, to brood about this, do not sit in the sun. The thinning ozone layer raises the risk of skin cancer. And do not go near the water which, even if it is free of medical waste, may have other pollutants that degrade it even more than acid rain is degrading lakes.

Any widespread anxiety should have a political echo, and ecophobia should serve the Dukakis campaign. In 1976, Pat Moynihan wrote that there are two critical choices affecting the quality of American life: "One is how much growth we want; the second is how much government we want." In the third quarter of the century, Americans had opted consistently for more government and less growth. Moynihan saw a reaction coming.

It came. It was called conservatism. Now anxiety about the environment may push the ideological pendulum in the other direction.

It may do for Michael Dukakis what his attempt to portray today's prosperity as a chimera can not do. It may make the Democrats' speciality — government activism — attractive. It gives him more than a subject; it gives him a theme — stewardship. He can ask: Has growth been purchased at too high a price? The price can be measured in accumulated public debt and the inadequate husbandry of the Earth's resources.

The public's attention on such matters is, however, hard to get — and harder still to hold — for several reasons. The intersection of science and public policy is a dark and bloody ground of contention. Today's saturation journalism pounces on environmental episodes — soil erosion today, oil spills tomorrow — and quickly wrings them dry. So there is a constant media hunger for new crises, each one less convincing than the last.

Some environmental activists have played fast and loose with facts to arouse alarm. Zero-growth was advocated in the 1970s by people who already had acquired a nice portion of prior growth. ("Let's all consume less. Someone tell those Sybarites in Bangladesh to tighten their belts.") And the resiliency of the planet has been consistently misjudged.

That said, so must this be: Most environmental difficulties derive from a virtually universal aspiration — economic dynamism. By such dynamism mankind has made more of a mark on the environment in the last 100 years than in the preceding 3,000. But the dynamism has done more to improve life for more people in the last 100 years than was done by all developments in all history prior to that.

Environmental issues are of limited political utility because they illustrate the universality of costs. George Bush says, "I am an environmentalist." That statement is as vacuous as any statement that can be constructed from four English words. Does Bush's environmentalism dictate a "let burn" policy regarding forest fires? Is he for higher fuel-efficiency standards for automobiles, standards that would mean smaller cars and higher fatality rates in highway accidents?

Dukakis is no different. He will not challenge any popular behavior, regardless of its environmental impact. Instead there will be tough talk about easy choices, such as "cracking down on polluters" — as though the environmental danger comes down to a few bad people putting things where they do not belong.

But do not despair. Draw a deep breath and consider this. In 1900, America's cities contained three million horses, the healthiest of them producing up to 25 pounds of manure a day. Manure in the streets attracted swarms of flies until, in hot weather, traffic ground it into a dust that (a memoirist wrote) "flew from the pavement as a sharp, piercing powder, to cover our clothes, ruin our furniture and blow up into our nostrils." Then came a solution — one of today's problems, the internal combustion engine.

Want a new worry? Space junk. Science magazine says there are 48,000 man-made objects one centimeter or larger orbiting Earth, with an average relative velocity of 10 kilometers a second. NASA is studying how to armor-plate space vehicles.

Man is messy, but any creature that can create space vehicles can probably cope. That is, mankind's inventiveness has been, so far, more creative than mankind's environmental impact has been damaging. So far. What is still missing is the political ingredient, a sustained summons to stewardship.

Martin Vows He'll 'Crush' Jordan At Polls

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Campaign rhetoric has begun to heat up in the gubernatorial race, with Republican Gov. Jim Martin vowing to "crush" Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan after the Democrat described

Martin's administration as unethical. Martin, speaking to the North Carolina Associated Press News Council on Sunday, did not mention Jordan's remarks the previous day. But he told reporters afterward that

Jordan's criticism "doesn't have the ring of truth."

"He does have a right to go that road if he wants to ... making claims about ethical problems," Martin said. "That offends me but I know I'm going to get even with him because on Nov. 8 he's going to be whipped."

"He'll probably say that's unethical. But that's the way I'll get even with him ... crush him on Nov. 8."

Martin likened Jordan's statements to state GOP Chairman Jack

Hawke's description of Jordan as "a wimp" during a 1987 news conference. The Republican governor said newspaper editorial writers should take Jordan to task for his attack on Martin.

"That's very unfair, it's unjustifiable, it arises out of desperation and I'm confident that the fair-minded editorialists of this state will condemn him for it," Martin told reporters.

Jordan, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, stood by his comments in a telephone interview from Raleigh.

"I think I must have touched a nerve because everything I said was true and all the incidents I referred to have been reported in the media," Jordan said.

Jordan raised the ethics issue Saturday in a hard-hitting speech to the same group of newspaper editors. He charged that Martin's administration had been riddled with nepotism, "political payoffs ... hit lists ... and blatant conflicts of interest" and had manipulated state government for political gains at taxpayer expense.

The exchange, perhaps the most bitter of the campaign, occurred against the backdrop of a new Charlotte Observer poll showing Martin leading Jordan 51 percent to 43 percent. The newspaper's previous poll in May said the race was neck-and-neck.

Jordan denied that his new offensive was inspired by the poll or a perception that he is trailing. His speech was written before he learned of the poll and was in keeping with a strategy mapped weeks ago, he said.

"Frankly, what we sense in the polls ... is that they've jumped around a lot like the national polls," Jordan said. "What we're seeing is that people have not fully made up their minds and that it's anybody's race to win."

He said he was in better shape than Martin was at the same point in 1984 or that Sen. Terry Sanford was in his 1986 campaign, when a September poll showed him trailing Republican Jim Broyhill.

Martin's spokesman, Tim Pittman, contended Saturday that the Observer poll had led Jordan to launch the ethics attack. Martin declined Sunday to speculate on Jordan's motive.

"It just amazes me that he would use that kind of allegation," Martin said. "It's name-calling ... There's no case he can make to smear me like that and it won't work."

"I expect the editorial writers of the state to rise up in righteous indignation against Bob Jordan's false and mischievous characterization of this administration as being unethical," Martin added.

Jordan would not say whether he planned to continue questioning the Martin administration's ethics. But he said it was a legitimate issue.

Open Meetings Law Finds New Impetus As Campaign Rolls

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — This political season may be a good one when it comes to shedding sunshine on the workings of government as nearly every major political candidate has come out in favor of a stronger open-meeting law.

"I think what we have to do is put teeth into an open meetings law that says any meetings in which we discuss the expenditure of state funds, with two or more legislators present, will be done in open with proper notice given," Jim Gardner, GOP nominee for lieutenant governor, said recently.

Both gubernatorial candidates — Republican Gov. Jim Martin and Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan — endorsed a tougher open-meeting law this weekend in appearances before the North Carolina Associated Press News Council. And Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, has outlined a 10-point plan for open government.

Martin on Sunday renewed his attacks on the predominantly Democratic Legislature, saying a small group of powerful bosses used secrecy as a tool to work its will.

In addition to prohibiting private legislative committee meetings, Martin said the law should be clarified to prevent officials from misusing the exceptions and excluding the public from meetings that should be open.

The new attention on the issue was welcomed by those who have lobbied for open government in the past.

Hugh Stevens, a lawyer for the N.C. Press Association, said his association is encouraged the issue has become a major theme.

"The point is that people don't have time to go and watch the legislature for themselves," Stevens said. "That's what we're there for, to try to be their eyes and ears."

"What we're trying to do is gain access to get a better understanding of how and by whom those decisions are being made. Then the public can decide whether those have been good judgments."

The open-meeting law requires governmental bodies to do business in public but allows more than a dozen exceptions, such as when personnel matters or pending litigation are being discussed. It also allows General Assembly committees and subcommittees to meet privately when members think it is necessary to "prevent personal embarrassment or when it is in the best interest of the state." But the law requires the committees and subcommittees to take final action in open session.

Some of the candidates are relative newcomers to the open-meeting bandwagon. Martin pointed out that Jordan is among them.

"I've supported that for several years," Martin said, adding, "I notice that my opponent has supported that for several hours."

Rand, meanwhile, has been a member of what some critics say is the chief impediment to public access in the General Assembly — the secretive, budget-forging super subcommittee. In 1987, when the meetings were opened, Rand refused to give reporters copies of documents that would have decimated budget deliberations he and other budget chairman were conducting in code.

Now Rand's plan calls for recognition of the Super Sub as an official legislative committee, making it subject to public meetings laws, and repeal of two exceptions to the open meetings law reserved only for the legislature.

Should results fall short of intent, Rand said he still can guarantee freer access by demanding assurances from his committee chairmen they will not hold secret meetings.

"I would be more disappointed than I can tell you if that kind of thing happened," Rand said of secret meetings. "Regardless of what you do, there just won't be any closed meetings if I'm lieutenant governor."

Gardner has also changed his tune since he advocated adding government restrictions to the First Amendment, which ensures freedom of the press.

Gardner, a Rocky Mount businessman who twice has run unsuccessfully for governor, said during his 1972 campaign that the press was "the most dangerous thing we have facing us today."

"One of the first acts I will do as governor is start drafting some legislation ... on what can be done to put some restriction on the press in North Carolina and hopefully throughout America," he said on May 30, 1972.

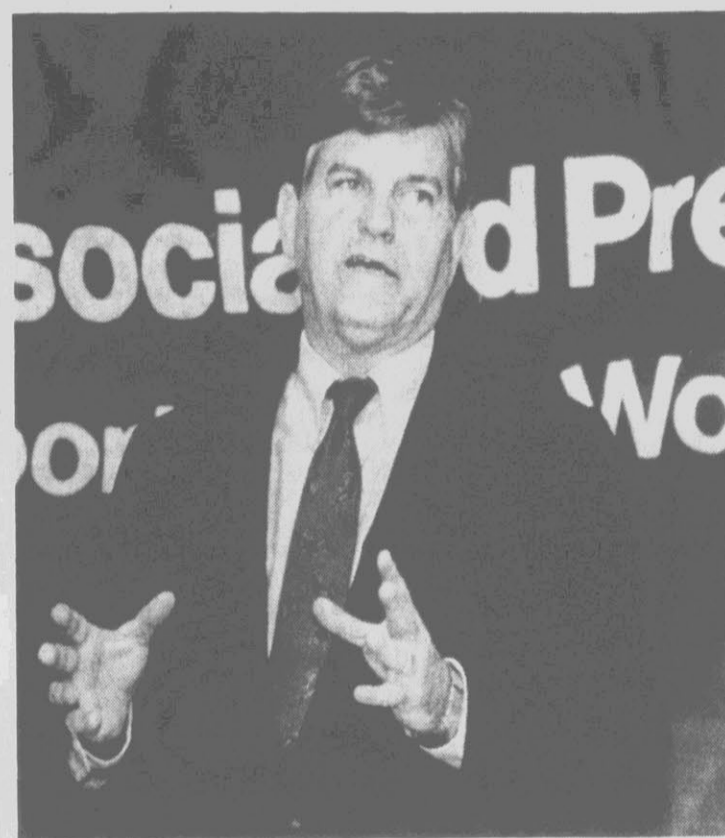

Gardner is still developing a detailed plan to acquire more public access in the legislature. But he said it would include a far-reaching measure to make a meeting of two or more legislators public.

Party caucuses, closed-door sessions in which Republicans and Democrats decide the party line on legislation, would be open as well, Gardner said.

He said when he advocated restricting the press 16 years ago he was reacting brashly to what he considered unfair coverage of his gubernatorial campaign by two newspapers.

"I was striking out at them for printing half-truths and mistruths," he said. "They weren't printing anything that was true."

Gardner now says the statement was a mistake. "I've also learned a long time ago, it doesn't get any good to get into an argument with a newspaper. They have the last say-so and very well should have."

14 Choir Members Hurt As Risers Fall

By The Associated Press
Fourteen people suffered injuries ranging from bruises to a fractured leg when they toppled from the top two risers of a platform holding the Calvary Church choir in Charlotte.

Shortly after 9:30 a.m. Sunday, as the 120-member choir rose to sing "Crown Him With Many Crowns," the top two rows of plywood risers arranged behind the pulpit gave way.

"It was not a sudden collapse; it was almost in slow motion that it occurred," said John Sykes, chairman of the transition committee for the non-denominational church.

The church held its service Sunday under a football field-sized tent — 315 feet long and 120 feet wide — because it is in the process of moving to a new $33 million campus. Services will be held in the new facility next Sunday, Sykes said.

More than 50 people were on the risers when they collapsed, dropping them about 5 feet to the ground, Sykes said.

Ten people were taken to Mercy Hospital South and one to Mercy Hospital. Three were taken to Presbyterian Hospital, including Arthur Kelly, a member of the Calvary choir, who was admitted to Presbyterian Hospital for observation of a head injury, said Calvary spokesman Jerry Green.

All of those taken to the Mercy hospitals had been released by Sunday afternoon, and the most serious injury appeared to be a fractured leg, Sykes said. The two other injured who were taken to Presbyterian Hospital were treated and released.

Officials said the injuries were mostly cuts, bruises and strained muscles.

Four doctors moved quickly to help the injured when the accident happened.

Dr. Ross Rhoads, pastor of the church, prayed for the injured and proceeded with his sermon.

The tent and the platform were rented from Tampa Tent Co. in Tampa, Fla., Sykes said. Company employees, who had remained in Charlotte to put up the tent and take it down, came to the scene to investigate.

"We used this same tent and the same risers last spring when we dedicated our land," he said.

Bodies Found In Convenience Store

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The bodies of two Anson County men were found in a pool of blood Sunday morning inside a convenience store east of Wadesboro, according to Anson County Sheriff Tommy Allen.

The men, identified as Richard Eugene Williams, 40 of Wadesboro, and James Allen Sheppard, 24, of Ansonville, were stabbed and cut repeatedly, Allen said. He said a motive for the slayings has not been determined.

Williams operated the store at U.S. 74 and N.C. 52, just outside the Wadesboro city limits.

Williams had been arrested Sept. 7 during a drug roundup in Union and Anson counties and charged with the sale and delivery of cocaine and other drug charges, Allen said. He said Williams had been released from jail under bond.

Allen said investigators don't know of any connection between Williams and Sheppard.

"We have nothing on Sheppard,"

Allen said. "We don't know why Sheppard was there. We don't know of any other connection."

The State Bureau of Investigation has joined the investigation, Allen said.

The bodies were found by an Anson County sheriff's deputy about 8:30 a.m., the sheriff said.

He said the deputy went to the store after Sheppard's brother called and said he hadn't seen his brother since Saturday but had seen his car parked outside the store.

Album Cover

GREENSBORO (AP) — A hit record album that honors two folk-singers has a timeworn map of the Piedmont on its cover, but the album's art directors say the map was used more for its appearance than its historical connections.

The folded map on the back cover of "Folkways: A Vision Shared" is authentic — rips, folds and all — dating to the 1930s or 1940s, said Allen Levine, vice president of creative services at Columbia Records.

On the map, Greensboro, Asheville and Sanford are partly covered by dried leaves. Mount Gilead is circled, and part of the road to Troy is traced. But Levine said the marks aren't necessarily tied to Woody Guthrie or Leadbelly, who were popular in the 1940s.

The album, No. 118 on Billboard magazine's album list a week after its release, has popular recording artists performing the songs of Guthrie and Leadbelly. Bruce Springsteen, U2, Bob Dylan, John Cougar Mellencamp and others sing on the record.

News Council

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Linda Bailey of the Salisbury Post was elected president of the North Carolina AP News Council here Sunday, succeeding Melvin Lang of The Daily Reflector in Greenville.

Larry Pope of the Asheville Citizen and Times was elected first vice president and Hal Tarleton of the Wilson Daily Times was elected second vice president.

Luann Laubscher of the Concord Tribune and Richard Whiting of the Evening Telegram of Rocky Mount were elected directors of the news council.

The news council is a group of editors whose newspapers are members of The Associated Press.

Dorm Credit

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University students who are assigned to live three to a dormitory room or off campus because of crowding will be compensated for the first time this year, the school's trustees have been told.

Students who remain in those temporary quarters through today will receive a $100 credit on their spring dormitory rent of $625 per semester, said Thomas H. Stafford Jr., NCSU's vice chancellor for student affairs. They also will be guaranteed a room on campus for the next three years.

"Putting three students in a room is not a good situation," Stafford told the trustees at their regular board meeting. "We do not like having to do it. We're working as hard as we can."

About 675 of this year's 3,400 freshmen were living in temporary quarters at the start of the year, Stafford said. The number has dropped to 350, but some students may have to remain in tripled rooms throughout this semester.

Celebration

DURHAM (AP) — The rain came down, but balloons, fanfare and spirits soared as more than 200 people celebrated the opening of Durham's new $5.3 million arts center Saturday.

"This is such a big thing," said Durham resident Barbara B. Birkhead as she stood in the foyer near banners and a polished piano. "It's all part of the diversity of this city and how this community has really thrown itself behind the arts."

A brass ensemble played "Fanfare for Durham" and hundreds of balloons poured out of the center's windows during the opening festivities, which also marked the beginning of the city's annual street fair, Centerfest.

The arts center, along with the Carolina Theater building, will be devoted to the visual and performing arts.

Center Opens

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Cumberland County was on display Saturday as the Charlie Rose Agri-Expo Center opened its doors for the first time, complete with a pledge from the guest of honor that he wouldn't let it go to his head.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., longtime member of the House Agriculture Committee and various farm subcommittees, said naming of the facility for him will make him work harder for the farmers in this region.

N.C. National Guard Battles Delays To Make Italian Training 'A Success'

By The Associated Press

The North Carolina National Guard got through everything from language barriers and equipment breakdowns to late-running trains during war exercises this month in northern Italy, but officials called the training a success.

"I think everything went beautifully," Col. Nathaniel Robb Jr. of Raleigh said in an interview from the Italian military barracks.

"If everything was perfect, we wouldn't need to practice."

The Guard earlier this month transported 1,100 soldiers and about $40 million worth of equipment to the foot of the Italian Alps.

The purpose of the three-week NATO exercise, the largest armored movement in Italy since World War II, is to simulate the response if a Warsaw Pact nation invaded Italy, military officials say.

On Sept. 6, 30 battle tanks, 81 armored personnel carriers and other vehicles and more than 100 jeeps and trucks were taken to Wilmington, where they were loaded onto a French ship to be transported to Genoa, on the coast of western Italy. The soldiers accompanied the equipment.

No sooner had the ship been loaded and navigated out of the harbor, however, when it broke down off the coast. A new ship, with a Dutch crew, was found in Bayonne, N.J., and the equipment transferred to it, officials said.

"If we have a war, we're going to have a hell of a time getting our equipment across the ocean," said Lt. Col. Gary Pendleton of Raleigh, who is commanding the Guard task force in Italy.

In Genoa, the tanks were moved by rail to an area about 50 miles east of Milan. From there, they were taken to the small village of Casarsa near the exercise area.

But the Italian civilian trains ran late, at one point delaying the exercise by nearly a full day, officials said.

Another delay arose when more than 20 tanks were driven through the small Italian village of Casarsa on a weekday morning. The passage was scheduled for 6:30 a.m. to avoid rush-hour traffic, but did not get under way until about 8:30 a.m. — smack in the middle of rush-hour, officials reported.

Once at their destination, U.S. troops were quartered in 100-year-old barracks with their Italian counterparts, with whom most could not communicate.

But officers of North Carolina's 30th Infantry Brigade said they were pleased with their troops' performance in the field.

One day this month, a small group of armored vehicles darted across a vast dried-up river bed covered with white rocks the size of baseballs, simulating the rough terrain soldiers would encounter.

"It would have been nice in Vietnam to know what a rice paddy is like," said Joe Dean, secretary of the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, who viewed the exercise last week. The N.C. National Guard is a division of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

The National Guard has taken a greater role in the U.S. military structure in recent years, receiving more sophisticated weapons and more rigorous training than before.

Military officials say some Guard units, including those from North Carolina, could be among the first deployed in the event of a war.

Because of federal budget cutbacks, the $2.1 million exercise may be the last of its size for the N.C. National Guard, said spokesman Lt. Col. Charles Heatherly. He said future exercises are likely to involve top officers only to work with the Italian military.

Two Dead In Shooting

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 42-year-old self-employed electrician and maintenance worker at Iredell Memorial Hospital shot a 26-year-old nurse and apparently turned the gun on himself Saturday, authorities say.

Officials say Johnny Allen Clarke shot Sherry Cope Bolin with a 9mm semiautomatic pistol in what is believed to be a murder-suicide.

Ms. Bolin, a registered nurse at Iredell Memorial, called the sheriff's department at 2:44 a.m. Saturday to report that someone was trying to break into her home just north of Statesville, according to police reports.

Arriving at the scene, Deputy Sheriff Scott Kilpatrick said he heard a scream and saw a woman running toward his patrol car.

The deputy then turned into a driveway and a woman covered with blood ran to the right side of his patrol car. Kilpatrick said he saw Clarke lying on the ground ahead of his patrol car.

The deputy got out of the car and tried to talk to Ms. Bolin, who was bleeding badly. Ms. Bolin did not respond.

Ms. Bolin and Clarke were friends and were dating, said sheriff's Capt. Cecil Cook.

Farmers Trying To Create Ideal Habitat To Encourage Wildlife

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — In a cooperative program run by state agencies and environmentalists, some North Carolina farmers are trying to replenish the habitats in which deer, rabbits, squirrels, quail and other creatures thrive.

For the farmers, it's an exercise in controlled chaos compared with their usual habits.

"Biologists are teaching them how to let hedges grow and how they should not mow their grasses and hay, just let it grow so that wildlife has cover and more food," said Angie Hill of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission. "They are also planting food that quail and deer and rabbit feed on."

The commission, the N.C. Wildlife Federation, the Agricultural Extension Service and the Soil Conservation Service are working with seven farms located in Hertford, Wilson, Bladen, Alamance, Anson, Watauga and McDowell counties. The farms range from 51 acres to 700 acres and officials hope to open one of them to the public this fall.

Wildlife Resources employees were asked three years ago to recommend farmers who would own land that would be suitable for demonstration farms. After the farms were chosen, experts from the four state agencies involved in the program offer their help.

On a grain farm, growers can scatter leftover corn for the animals. A Christmas tree farmer in western North Carolina can separate rows of trees with patches of food. And about every other year, farmers can burn fire lanes on their property which promote nutritious new growth.

Although he did not quote a figure,

Terry Sharpe, small game project leader for the Wildlife Commission, said the cost is not excessive.

"It doesn't cost a whole lot to leave a few weeds on a hedgerow," Sharpe said. "You won't see pictures of these farms in the farm publications because they are rough looking."

"Farmers just never had realized that they can do things to help increase the wildlife population," Ms. Hill said. "Traditionally, they mow their fields and there has never been that much of a problem because there has been good habitat."

Six People Killed In 3-Car Crash

By The Associated Press

Six people, including two elderly couples from Reidsville, were killed in a three-car crash Sunday, bringing to 14 the number of highway fatalities in North Carolina over the weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

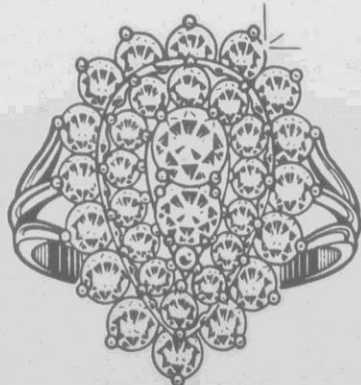

The crash began when a car heading south on U.S. 220 crossed into the northbound lane north of Star in Montgomery County around 4:45 p.m., said H.C. Crouse of the Highway Patrol. That car, driven by Freddy Wilson Lawrence of Washington, D.C., sideswiped an on-coming vehicle driven by Cheryl Overly. Her car then swerved back to the southbound lane, where it was hit broadside by a third car, Crouse said.

Mrs. Overly and her husband, Herbert Overly, both 31, of Greensboro, were killed along with all four people in the third car. They were identified as Carl Elmore Matthews, 73; his wife, Nellie Matthews, 74; Monty Brown, 76, and his wife, Lillian Brown, 74.

Lawrence, who was injured in the accident, was charged with six counts of death by vehicle, Crouse said. He said there was no evidence of alcohol or excessive speed and speculated Lawrence might have fallen asleep at the wheel.

State Officials Debating Best Ways To Operate Port System

Second Of Two-Part Series

WILMINGTON (AP) — A debate is going on at the highest levels of government about the future of the State Ports Authority, with some members of the Council of State proposing turning the ports over to private companies to operate.

In the wake of a $116,000 loss at the ports in the last fiscal year, SPA Executive Director Noel Painchaud met with the Council of State to explain the first loss in 10 years and why this year's budget calls for a profit of $1.34 million.

Whatever the reason for the loss, those in the maritime industry would like to sink the idea of "privatizing" the ports.

One of them is William M.A. Greene, former executive director of the State Ports Authority. He said a Virginia company, which he would not identify, asked him in July if he would be interested in operating the state ports in Wilmington and Morehead City as a private enterprise, under a lease with the state.

The telephone call came, Greene said, a few days after a Council of State meeting at which the question of turning the ports over to private companies was raised.

"The people who want to lease the ports figure North Carolina has no interest in them. That's what they told me," Greene told the Wilmington Morning Star. "I don't think something like that is best for the state just now."

Others said a private company wouldn't make the investments that may help the state's economy, but won't show an immediate profit. And a private port can select who it wants as customers.

"If Sea-Land (Services Inc.) owned the port, do you think they'd want to get POL (Polish Ocean Lines) to lease there?" said William Edwards, another former SPA executive director. "Public ports can be used every day. It would be hard to get that if it were privately owned."

Denis Carter, an international trade expert with the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, said the state probably wouldn't get full value if it sold the two ports and its intermodal terminals in Charlotte and Greensboro.

"It's like a road," Carter said. "The benefits are not strictly private. They are part of the infrastructure. You can't look at simply the profit and loss and say that is the value of a port."

Although most elected officials say the idea of selling the ports to a private operator is worthy of study, most also believe it would leave the door wide open for disaster.

"What happens if the private organization that's running it fled? Where are your ports then?" said state Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover. "The impact on the state's economy would be sizable."

But State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, a member of the N.C. Council of State, isn't ready to jump to such gloomy conclusions.

"Most of us in state government feel that we can be as efficient and effective as private enterprise," Boyles said. "The fact is, though, that in this instance, we have a problem on our hands."

A problem with a privately owned company is that it would face stiff competition from other state ports that have the advantage of government-subsidized cargo-handling rates. Most agree competing is tough even for the government-run SPA because North Carolina's legislature hasn't committed the money that other states have to their ports.

The N.C. General Assembly from 1963 until 1980 gave the ports $57.4 million for capital projects. Competing ports during that time spent from three to four times more, for a total of $487 million, according to the SPA's master development plan.

Before the General Assembly's $36 million appropriation to the SPA in 1987, the ports had gone more than a decade without a substantial financial boost from the state, and port officials say that hurt.

"I don't think you can go 10 or 12 years and expect everything ... to be done out of the cash flow of the ports," said James M. Berry, chairman of the SPA board of directors. "I think you're always going to wake up at the end of a period like that and say, 'Gee, we're a little bit behind.'"

Edwards said the ports are a good 10 years behind competing states, particularly in developing container capacity, because many of the major capital projects have been paid for out of the ports' pockets. A proposed cold storage warehouse was put off several years ago because a study showed it wouldn't make a profit, he said.

"We wouldn't do things if they wouldn't make a profit," he said. Meanwhile, the port in Charleston, S.C., recently added its 11th container crane and has four more on order. As a result of the state's investment, the port has overtaken Baltimore to become the nation's second busiest, behind New York.

In Georgia, the state acts as a banker for tectports, lending the State Ports Authority money for major projects, which is paid back later with interest. The GSPA has gotten about $250 million that way since 1982, including $17 million last year for a second automobile dock in Brunswick and a new warehouse in Savannah.

"We've never gone to the state legislature for operating expenses in the past 15 years," said Jim Bisson, GSPA director of port relations. "We have to get their approval for large expenditures. And once the project is in place, we start paying it back with interest."

Yet there are those who say North Carolina's ports can survive without begging the legislature for money. Among them is Tommy Taft, who was chairman of the SPA board of directors during the eight years of former Gov. Jim Hunt's administration.

"We placed great emphasis on good business practices and ... were able to fuel tremendous growth without going to the General Assembly for more funds ... We felt like we could fund our own growth, either through bonding or through the commercial banking sector," Taft said.

The differing philosophies of Berry and Taft raise a fundamental question about the state ports: Are they expected to be money-makers? Or are they like any other government service, taking money from the taxpayers and, in return, providing them a service?

Taft believes the ports should do both. "The function of the port is to serve the public's needs for shipping," he said. "If you do it efficiently, you will make a profit ... and turn that profit back into future investment for the port."

"... Those that argue the port shouldn't make a profit are using that as an excuse for not being businesslike and efficient enough to operate the facility."

But without some help from state government, most agree, the ports never will make the kind of money they need to grow and expand — especially as long as neighboring states pour hefty subsidies into their ports and drive down their cargo rates.

Most officials said they can agree to a reasonable compromise — that the ports operate on a break-even basis and that the state pay for large capital projects. Rather than showing huge end-of-the-year profits, they said, the ports' financial health should be reflected in the pocketbooks of the state's exporters, who would benefit from lower rates.

Such a compromise, however, needs to be clearly understood among legislators in Raleigh, Boyles said.

"I think we need a firm policy and view as to the extent that we expect the taxpayers to subsidize and the extent that we expect the port to operate as a self-supporting entity," he said. "... Now, we have no defined policy. It's a kind of a hit-and-miss situation."

Candidates Tighten Schedules To Prep For Debate In N.C.

By RICHARD L. VERNACI
Associated Press Writer

Democrat Michael Dukakis heads South today, while Republican George Bush makes a day trip to Pennsylvania as the two candidates open a week of relatively light campaigning so they can get ready for their crucial first televised debate.

While Bush's only public appearance Sunday was to go to church in Washington, his surrogates were attacking Dukakis, with one, GOP Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, calling the Democratic presidential nominee "nuts."

Bush today was to meet with Philadelphia's Roman Catholic Archbishop Anthony Bevilacqua and retired Cardinal John Krol during a campaign swing through Pennsylvania that was bringing him back to Washington early in the afternoon.

Dukakis was flying to Little Rock, Ark., to deliver a speech before heading on to Houston. He planned to return to Boston on Tuesday after a stop in Bowling Green, Ky.

The Massachusetts governor spent last week outlining his views on foreign policy and defense issues, both of which are considered to be political weaknesses for him.

In a speech Sunday to the California Republican Convention, Gingrich accused Dukakis of being a "left-winger" who opposes weapons systems supported by Bush.

"It's not that Dukakis isn't a patriot. It's that Dukakis is nuts," Gingrich said. "His value system has no relation to reality."

Dukakis spokesman Mark Gearan responded by saying, "Americans are increasingly tiring of Gingrich's one-liners."

"His attempt with innuendo and lies and misrepresentation of the governor's position is typical of his nasty approach," Gearan said.

Bush and Dukakis both have lightened their calendars in preparation for their face-to-face meeting next Sunday night in Winston-Salem.

N.C. the first of two televised debates between the presidential candidates.

Both candidates commented on the weekend's military coup in Haiti, with Bush saying "It's too early to say what happened." But he added, "We want democracy for Haiti, for the whole of the Caribbean and for the whole of Central America."

Dukakis issued a statement calling for the United States to recall its ambassador from Haiti for consultations while refusing to recognize the country's military government.

"The people of Haiti have suffered far too long under successive repressive regimes," the Dukakis statement said.

The Republican vice president, speaking to reporters after attending Sunday church services, said, "I think I've done the homework" for the debate.

"It's like a ball game, getting up for it, mentally up and physically up," Bush said.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, who lost to Bush in the race for the GOP presidential nomination, said the debate next week could cause a shift in the political landscape.

"The stakes are high. This is hard ball," Dole said in an appearance in Ohio on Sunday. "I don't worry about George Bush. The big difference is he knows what he's talking about. Now, maybe Dukakis can memorize enough to get through the debate, but he'll forget it right afterwards."

Bentsen Walks Fine Line In Dual Race

DALLAS (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen waved his hand and his three-helicopter entourage climbed into the sky, black against the setting sun.

On the ground, his staff waved back and the national press corps shuffled away. For that evening, vice presidential candidate Bentsen had become Texas Sen. Bentsen campaigning for re-election.

Nearly everywhere he goes in his vice presidential campaign travels, Bentsen makes time to slip away — sometimes by helicopter or private plane — to tend to his Senate campaign.

He campaigns publicly for the vice presidency. For the Senate election, he is relying on a strong organization, millions of dollars in advertising and a reputation built over three terms.

Bentsen, asked once by reporters if his dual campaigns weren't confusing to the voters of Texas, said the answer was simple. "Vote twice for Bentsen," he said.

Vice presidential campaign manager Joseph O'Neill said this awkward system is the result of Bentsen's effort to comply fully with federal election laws which have never been tested in regard to Texas' unusual provision for dual campaigns.

"This is virgin territory," O'Neill said.

"We're working very hard to see that we follow not only the letter of the law but the spirit of the law," Bentsen said in an interview.

"I leave it up to the lawyers and accountants to be damn sure we comply," Bentsen said. "Then I don't worry about it. I go ahead and campaign."

As Michael Dukakis' running mate, Bentsen receives public funding for his vice presidential campaign. For his Senate race, the sky is the limit in fund-raising, and he's spending his millions in the state on organization and television.

One of the reasons that Bentsen is carefully dividing the two campaigns is that Bentsen's Republican Senate opponent, Rep. Beau Boulter, asked the Federal Election Commission to step in and block what he contended was an unfair advantage.

The FEC declined to act, and so did the federal courts, but the case caused Bentsen enough political grief that he bought television time in Texas to explain his reasoning to the voters.

Resigning from the Senate seat, Bentsen said, would automatically hand a six-year term to his opponent.

Bush Erasing Gender Gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent surveys showing that Vice President George Bush has erased a double-digit deficit and drawn even with Michael Dukakis among women voters also show deteriorating support for the Massachusetts Democrat among men.

The polls show that Dukakis' unfavorable ratings among men are now much larger than Bush's unfavorable ratings among women.

"If George Bush continues to run even with women, then he wins the election big and at the moment, he is doing extraordinarily well," said

Republican consultant Doug Bailey. "The gender gap right now is a much bigger problem for Dukakis than for Bush," he continued.

Bailey as recently as last July 7 said at a news conference sponsored by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs that "if he (Bush) doesn't bridge the gender gap, he will not win."

Now, that's all changed and Bush "has solved the gender gap problem, although he has not closed it completely," Bailey said.

Gender gap is the term politicians use to describe the differences between the way men and women vote. It was evident in the 1980 election, when President Reagan won far more support among male voters than among female voters, according to polls. The trend repeated itself, although to a lesser degree, in Reagan's 1984 landslide re-election.

A New York Times-CBS poll released last week showed that among men, Bush held a commanding 53 percent to 37 percent lead; while among women he held a 43-41 percent lead, which statistically is a dead heat.

Young Boys Charged In Fire Attack On N.Y. Synagogue

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of mourners surrounded the coffin containing five Torahs destroyed in a synagogue arson fire, and police have charged two youths with setting the blaze and spray-painting swastikas inside the temple.

Speakers at Sunday's funeral ceremony, which was attended by 10,000 people, compared the vandalism to Kristalnacht, the "night of the broken glass" in Nazi Germany that signaled the beginning of the Holocaust 50 years ago this November.

"How?" asked Rabbi Hillel David, whose Orthodox Congregation Rabbinical Institute Shari Torah was heavily damaged in the blaze early Saturday, the Sabbath between the holiest days on the Jewish calendar — Rosh Hashana, new year, and Yom Kippur, the day of repentance that begins at sundown Tuesday.

"How can such a thing be that the holy Torah is destroyed by fire? A fire from men, from haters of the Torah?"

"The whole life is a life of tests. But I do not know what this test is." The Torah, the scroll containing the first five books of the Old Testament, are so holy that by Jewish law they are accorded a funeral.

After the 90-minute service, the coffin was carried through the crowd to a waiting station wagon. It was buried at a Jewish cemetery in Deans, N.J.

During the funeral, Mayor Edward I. Koch was applauded when he said the youths arrested "have to be assailed and have to be punished," despite their age, 12 and 15.

The boys were charged Sunday as juveniles with arson, burglary and criminal mischief, said Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokesman.

The 12-year-old was accompanied by his mother when he surrendered late Saturday.

"She was very distraught about it so she called the police," said Detective Sgt. Willie Shaw. "That was our link to the 15-year-old."

The older boy was arrested at his home early Sunday, police said. They were released to their parents' custody pending an appearance in Family Court at an undisclosed time.

Neither of the boys, who live near the synagogue, is Jewish, said Officer Hugh Barry, another police spokesman.

The youths entered the 300-member synagogue shortly after midnight and removed the scrolls, Judaism's holiest objects, from the ark where they are kept, and rolled them across the floor before setting them afire, police said.

Each scroll could cost up to $50,000 to replace, said City Councilman Noach Dear, who is Jewish and represents the neighborhood, which is mostly Jewish, with some Hispanics and whites of Irish and Italian ancestry.

Justin Finger, associate national director of the B'nai B'rith's Anti Defamation League, called the desecration "extraordinary."

"I have never heard of any desecration in the United States in recent years where that number of Torahs was destroyed," he said.

"These barbaric atrocities are properly associated with Nazi Germany," said U.S. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, evoking a comparison that was used by virtually everyone who commented on the attack.

As the plain pine coffin was carried through the crowd, mourners reached to touch it.

"Look, look and remember," a father holding up his young son said in Yiddish.

Meat Consumption May Drop In '89

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in seven years, Americans will each consume a smaller portion of meat next year, averaging about 2 percent less than they did in 1988, according to a forecast by the Agriculture Department.

The 1989 per capita forecast of red meat and poultry consumption is 215.9 pounds, down from an estimated record of 220.1 pounds this year.

Overall, total red meat and poultry production is expected to decline about 1 percent in 1989 from this year's record level. Lower beef output and a leveling off in the pork and turkey supply will more than offset increases in broiler production.

Even so, U.S. total production of red meat and poultry is expected to be the second largest on record.

The per capita consumption estimates are all in retail weights, reflecting cuts as they are sold to consumers. The weights do not take into consideration further trimming or boning at home prior to cooking, shrinkage during cooking, or table waste.

Ron Gustafson of the department's Economic Research Service said it will be the first time since 1982 that per capita meat consumption has not matched or exceeded the previous year's average.

In 1982 he said in a telephone interview Friday, the average consumption of red meat and poultry was 201.8 pounds for each American, down from 207 pounds in 1981.

Looking at the 1989 projections, which were published in a newly released outlook report by the agency, beef consumption is expected to decline further to 66.7 pounds per capita from 71.8 pounds this year.

Pork consumption is expected to average 62.8 pounds per person next year, down slightly from 63.7 in 1988.

Including small amounts of veal, lamb and mutton, total red meat consumption in 1989 is forecast at about 132.4 pounds per person, down from 138.4 indicated for 1988. Total poultry, by comparison, is expected to increase to around 83.6 pounds in 1989 from 81.7 this year.

Although some of the decline in per capita red meat consumption can be attributed to the health concerns of some consumers, USDA officials say there are many other factors, including the economy and how much money families have to spend on food.

Export Rate Holds Despite U.S. Growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The World Bank says the United States has managed to increase its exports and ease its trade deficit without hurting the exports of other nations.

The report released Sunday said the U.S. has benefited from a "much-improved competitive position," with the value of the dollar having dropped more than 50 percent against the West German mark and the Japanese yen over the past two years.

Yet, the report said, the U.S. successes in reducing its trade deficit by increasing exports "are not being offset by decreases in exports elsewhere." Instead, exports of other nations are apparently being helped.

"Exports from the United States grew during 1987 and early 1988 at over 20 percent a year ... while current estimates show that world trade increased at about 11 percent from the first to the second half of 1987," the report said.

The bank also said that wealthy countries have enjoyed a stable year of moderate growth in output and low inflation, but the growth rate slowed in developing countries, partly because of continued problems in sub-Saharan Africa and drought in India, the bank said.

"Output growth and inflation in the seven largest industrial countries — Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, the United Kingdom, the United States — each averaged about 3 percent in 1987," the report said.

But the economies of sub-Saharan Africa and other heavily indebted countries, mainly in Latin America, on average grew more slowly than population, resulting in a decline in per-capita income for those nations, it said.

Among other highlights in the report:

—Japan is making a "major contribution" to stimulating other economies.

—Inflation still could return to the major industrial countries and should be monitored carefully.

—Third World debt increased again in 1987, but some progress has been made in finding ways to reduce the burden.

—Trade protectionism remains a cause for concern.

The Japanese contribution has been an investment boom, which began in 1986 and continued into 1988, the report said. The major beneficiaries of the increase in Japanese imports have been the newly industrialized economies of Asia, such as South Korea and Taiwan, it said.

The imports into those countries, in turn, also have been rising rapidly, it added.

The major drought in India was the primary factor behind the slowing of economic growth in South Asia to 2.7 percent in 1987 from 4.7 percent the year before, it said.

"Nevertheless, growth trends of many developing countries in East Asia, as well as in the region of Europe, the Middle East and North Africa, were relatively well sustained," the report said.

Brush Fires Hit California Area

By JENNIFER McNULTY
Associated Press Writer

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Two northern California brush fires scorched 13,000 acres, destroying 24 structures and forcing 350 people to flee, but frosty weather in Montana and Wyoming helped ease blazes there.

About 100 homes were threatened by the wind-fanned fires that began late Saturday 15 miles west of Vacaville and 20 miles east of Redding. The Vacaville fire was arson, and caused more than $7 million in damage to telecommunications equipment, officials said.

In Wyoming, a cold front Sunday brought up to 3 inches of snow to the fire-charred Yellowstone National Park.

"I would be surprised if the fires made any more major runs," said fire specialist Bruce Freet. But officials weren't ready to predict the end of the blazes that have involved about half of Yellowstone's 2.2 million acres.

In Montana, the winter weather quieted the two remaining major forest fires and prompted the release of most of the firefighters and soldiers who helped battle the blazes. The firefighters on the lines focused on the 35,400-acre fire in Glacier National Park and the smoldering 247,000-acre fire in west-central Montana.

But in California, firefighters were dispatched en masse to fight the blazes near Vacaville, 55 northeast of San Francisco, and near Redding, about 250 miles northeast of the San Francisco Bay area.

Some 1,500 firefighters battled the out-of-control fires.

Nine homes and three outbuildings burned to the ground in the 8,700-acre fire near Vacaville on Sunday, while 12 buildings, including six homes, were destroyed by a 4,200-acre blaze near Redding.

Fire officials gave no estimate of damages for the structures.

Dying winds gave officials hope they could gain the upper hand in fighting the blazes this morning.

Up to 285 people from communities in eastern Shasta County were evacuated as firefighters battled the Redding blaze, which was fueled by dry timber and 45 mph gusts, said Evelyn Dollarhide, a spokeswoman with the California Department of Forestry.

The evacuees included 85 students and counselors from the Cascade School, a boarding school, said Dollarhide.

More than 800 firefighters fought the blaze, which began about midnight Saturday, officials said.

"It's really awful to walk up and see your place burn," said Andrew Scott, who spent the night with about 100 others at a Red Cross evacuation center near Redding. His home was destroyed by rapidly moving flames early Sunday.

The family also lost three dogs, a mobile home and three vehicles in the blaze.

"We got up there and we didn't have nothing," said Margie Scott, Andrew's wife, after visiting the rubble that had been their home.

Golfer Keeps Swinging

By RICH SUWANSKI
Messenger-Inquirer
OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — Dennis Walters can hit golf balls two at a time or with a raw egg sitting on top of one and not break the egg. He can hit balls blindfolded or with a paper cup covering them. But one thing remains constant. Walters always hits the ball far and straight. A pretty mean feat. Meaner still for a man who is a paraplegic and makes said shots while strapped into a swivel seat on the passenger side of a golf cart. Welcome to the Dennis Walters Golf Show. Walters' resume shows he played golf at North Texas University, finished 11th in the U.S. National Amateur Championships and played the pro mini-tour and the South African circuit. He had hopes of qualifying for the PGA Tour, but failed in his first qualifying attempt. Just before his second attempt in 1974, he was involved in a freak golf cart accident. Playing on a mountainous course in New Jersey, Walters came down a steep hill with a sharp curve. He hit the brake pedal, but the brakes failed and the cart overturned. Walters' spine was damaged, paralyzing him from the waist down. But Walters, 24 at the time, didn't know the extent of his injury for the next three or four months. "I figured I was going to get better," he said. "I didn't know what I was supposed to do," he said. "I was so confused. I was so angry, so mad. I don't think you ever get over it. I haven't. All I'm trying to do is make the best of a bad situation because I know it's not going to go away." When he started getting a little better physically, he started hitting balls out of a wheelchair into a net. "The biggest thing is that I love to play golf," he said. "I lost a lot of things, but I wasn't about to give this up. I had to figure out a way I could do it. I thought about things, and this is what I came up with." He got the idea for his seat by sitting on a barstool and swinging back and forth. The legs were cut off and attached to a cart. Then he began watching films of trick-shot artists. He started working on those, and others he invented, using clubs made of different materials and varying lengths. Walters, 38, has been doing his show for 10 years, mixing humor with his athletic skill. He is now up to about 75 shows a year. He frequently plays nine holes and, on occasion, 18. He shoots in the mid-to-high-70s for 18. "People told me it would be impossible for me to play golf (after the accident)," he said. "If anybody sees this and they think there's something they think is impossible, it shows that if they persevere, success can be achieved. When you think about it, there are very few things that are impossible."

Use Of Pet Names Irritates Woman

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 43-year-old woman who has lost count of the times I've been called "Hon" or "Honey" by waitresses, clerks, salespersons, and any number of people who have spoken to me only on the telephone.

Once I asked a young co-worker not to call me "Hon," and she was extremely offended, informing me that it was "just a habit." I told her to break it.

When a waitress comes to my table in the middle of my dinner and asks, "How ya' doin', Hon?" her tip is reduced considerably. The waitress who asks, "Is everything all right, Ma'am?" does much better.

Currently, I work in a professional office where clients, whom I call Mr., Mrs., Sir, Ma'am, or by their names, occasionally call me "Honey" — but only once. They are told, either by me or by my superior, that I will not tolerate such familiarity. They may be annoyed momentarily, but they never have to be told twice, and I usually get an apology.

Pet names belong only between the closest friends and family. Please tell all those people who claim it's "just a habit," and have themselves conned into thinking it's cute or more informal, that it is nothing of the kind. It's extremely presumptuous and offensive, and they should not be surprised when someone is annoyed by it. — NOBODY'S HONEY IN ELKHART, IND.

DEAR NOBODY'S HONEY: I believe that most people who call co-workers, and strangers, "Hon," "Honey," "Dear" or other pet names do so with nary a thought that they are being presumptuous or offensive. (They are just being "friendly.") It is your right, of course, to nip it in the bud since such familiarity irritates you. However, I'll print your letter to let my readers know that not everyone appreciates pet names.

Certified Carpet Inspector WORN OUT?...

After discussing fiber characteristics previously and discovering that nylon is generally your best option, let's consider fiber-wear factors. Originally, color, brightness and bulk attracted you to your "special" carpet. When new, the fiber's beauty was maximized by light reflected from its smooth, lustrous, colorful surface. Unfortunately, due to traffic, children, pets and maintenance procedures, fibers inevitably become soiled, and a dull appearance results. Problem is, most homeowners wait years too long before serious soil removal begins. Meanwhile, the fiber experiences not only the build-up of hardened soils but also substantial abrasion, caused by particles of soil at the fiber's base (remember, it's the dirt you don't see that does the damage). This results in permanently dulled appearance — repeat, permanent and irreversible! It's sort of like taking a clear sheet of plastic and rubbing it with sandpaper. No matter how clean you get it, it still looks dull and dingy. This condition is called "shading", and when finally cleaned, the shaded carpet never returns to the original brightness and beauty. What's the solution? Really, it's a matter of common sense. You wouldn't use dishes daily without regular washing, would you...you wouldn't wear a garment for months without periodic cleaning, would you? Similarly, your carpet can only take so much wear and tear before it must be cleaned. Logical enough? If you'll give us a call, we'll see if we can recommend someone who can help solve your soil-removal problems! No charge, of course!...

In Sweden Social Democrats Retain Control

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Social Democratic party, presiding over a booming economy, fought off a challenge from the environmentalist Greens to retain its hold on a minority government in parliamentary elections.

Nearly complete results from Sunday's balloting gave the Greens a place in the 349-member Riksdag, or parliament, for the first time with 20 seats. However, the Greens were denied the key role as a legislative power broker.

Results today from all but a few mailed ballots, invalid returns or votes for splinter parties showed the Social Democrats won 156 parliament seats, or 43.6 percent — a loss of three seats from the 1985 elections.

The Communist party won 21 seats to finish fifth with 5.9 percent of the vote, a gain of two. Although there is no formal agreement, the Communists tacitly support the Social Democrats and guarantee their ability to govern.

The conservative opposition Moderates, with 66 seats, or 17.9 percent, finished a distant second.

The Liberals came in third with 44 seats, or 12.2 percent; next came the Center Party, with 42 seats, or 11.4 percent; the Communists; and the Greens, with 5.5 percent. The Christian Democrats won no seats said. A 59-year-old woman was killed early Saturday after a tornado ripped through a bedroom in her mobile home.

"We'll take one day at a time. We'll clean up and eventually we'll get our own house put up if we get some money to buy lumber and tin," said Deborah Dickens, whose mother-in-law, Emily Dickens, was killed.

Other tornadoes in San Antonio uprooted trees, snapped power lines and tore roofs off homes, businesses and buildings at Kelly Air Force Base, causing at least $3 million damage.

Sylvia Sulsh, 54, said she was taking a shower early Saturday when a tornado struck her apartment at a San Antonio complex where at least 120 units were destroyed, 264 others damaged and 300 tenants left homeless.

"I got out of the shower and braced myself against the door and then I saw the roof fall down in the living room," Ms. Sulsh said.

Mayor Henry Cisneros said the city was lucky the death toll was low.

Crews restored power and telephone service Sunday and removed debris from streets, as those whose homes were damaged made repairs.

The storm killed at least 98 people while coursing the Caribbean, including 29 in Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula where it hit land Wednesday with winds of up to 200 mph, 26 in Jamaica, 30 in Haiti, five in the Dominican Republic and eight in Honduras.

Avril Grabs Power

20 men armed with machetes, handguns and steel pikes attacked a Roman Catholic Church during a Mass being celebrated by the Rev. Jean Bertrand Aristide, a vocal critic of the Namphy government. Thirteen people were killed and 77 wounded.

Opposition leaders blamed the government for the attack and another church burning two days later.

Heavy gunfire was heard in the capital Saturday night shortly before the coup, but Susan Clyde, spokeswoman for the U.S. Embassy here, said "it appeared to be mainly celebratory shooting in the air, nobody shooting at anyone or anything."

Frantz Lubin, Haiti's director of information, said an unspecified number of soldiers were killed.

Radio stations reported that at least six people were killed in the capital in coup-related clashes and that mobs pillaged two homes owned by Namphy and the home of Port-au-Prince Mayor Franck Romain.

Although motives for the coup were unclear, it appeared the soldiers and non-commissioned officers of the elite Presidential Guard were disenchanted with Namphy's authoritarian rule.

A Western diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Presidential Guard had given the army's High Command a list of 19 demands for forming a new government, including democratic reform and better living conditions for soldiers.

All the demands were accepted, the diplomat said, except the nomination of Col. Jean-Claude Paul as military commander-in-chief. Paul has been indicted on federal drug-trafficking charges in Florida.

Paul, commander of the dreaded 700-man Dessaline unit, had been regarded as the most powerful figure in Haiti after Namphy. It was not known if Paul played a part in the coup, but sources said he and Namphy were at odds.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said the United States still wanted Paul extradited to face the coup charges.

Initial reaction to the coup from advocates of democratic reform was positive, but cautious.

"I will support the military government if they say as soon as possible when they will call elections," said Louis Dejoie II, leader of the national Agricultural Industrial Party. "We are ready to speak with any government that respects human rights."

In his statement to the nation early Sunday, Avril said Haiti will respect all international treaties, liberties and human rights and that "dialogue will be honored for the sake of national reconciliation."

The statement was considered significant because it echoed a recent offer for dialogue from opposition leader Marc Bazin, a conservative leader of the Committee for Democratic Understanding.

Bazin and Dejoie were among four leading candidates for president in the Nov. 29 elections and boycotted the elections won by Manigat.

Dejoie said he expected the military to announce when elections would be held in the next week or so.

"They must do it or they won't have any support," Dejoie said. "The army right now has to regain its credibility. We want to give them a chance with this new change of guard."

Avril has been a key behind-the-scenes figure in a succession of governments since nationwide riots forced Duvalier to flee to France. Duvalier had been president since the 1971 death of his father, Francois Duvalier, who ruled since 1957.

though some were instituted before the accident. The program to redesign all three shuttle vehicles so far has cost about $2.4 billion, NASA says.

Since the accident, every one of the shuttle's millions of parts have been reanalyzed, reappraised, tested and retested and where necessary redesigned. Additional redundancy has been added where needed to minimize risk. A separate file is kept on the history of each part.

Following the accident, the focus was on the faulty joints in the 149-foot booster rockets. Investigators said rubbery O-rings intended to seal the joints became stiffened in the cold launch day temperatures, allowing flames to escape.

Engineers added to the joints a

Evans Wins 1st Gold For U.S.

Taste Of Victory

Australian Duncan Armstrong bites his gold medal after winning the 200-meter freestyle in Seoul Monday. His world-record breaking time was 1:47.25 while American Matt Biondi (left) won the bronze. (AP Laserphoto)

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Janet Evans is carrying the U.S. Olympic swimming team on her tiny shoulders.

Evans, all 102 pounds of her, won the first 1988 Olympic gold medal for the United States with an American record Monday, while Matt Biondi's hopes of winning seven gold medals were ended by a little-known Australian in world-record time.

Biondi settled for a bronze medal in the 200-meter freestyle and still has a chance to join Mark Spitz as the only Olympic swimmer with seven medals in one Olympics. All of Spitz's seven at Munich in 1972 were gold.

Evans had little trouble winning the women's 400 individual medley by 1.70 seconds. She still has two distance freestyle events to go, and she holds the world record in both.

She has found success in the last two years as her weight increased by 20 pounds and she grew about four inches to 5-foot-5.

"That increase in size has allowed her to improve dramatically," said her coach, Bud McAllister. "Think what would happen if Matt Biondi gained 20 pounds and four inches. But size is not that important.

"The important thing is strength to weight ratio. And she's strong for 102 pounds."

Evans' time of 4 minutes, 37.76 seconds broke her own American record of 4:38.58, but was still more than a second slower than the 1982 world record by East Germany's Petra Schneider.

"It (the time) didn't really matter," Evans said. "I was trying just for a medal and I'm really ecstatic."

Evans was clocked in 1:08, a second faster than usual, on her backstroke leg, the race's second 100 meters.

That gave her the lead for good and she cruised through her weakest leg, the breaststroke, and defeated silver medalist Noemi Lung of Romania, who was clocked in 4:39.46. Daniela Hunger of East Germany was the bronze winner in 4:39.76.

"My main goal was when they were in the breaststroke. I wanted to be even with them because I knew I could bring it home in the freestyle," Evans said. "But I was ahead, so it really wasn't that hard."

Biondi beat co-favorites Michael Gross of West Germany and Artur Wojdat of Poland, but finished third behind Duncan Armstrong of Australia and Sweden's Anders Holmertz.

Armstrong, 46th in the world this year in the pre-Olympic rankings, broke Gross' world record.

"I never said I would win seven gold medals," said Biondi, the first swimmer since Mark Spitz in 1972 to swim in that many Olympic races. "I wanted to do the best I could."

"The 200 is my worst race and I medaled. I'm real happy. The Mark Spitz days are over. You didn't see Australia and Sweden (with top swimmers) in 1972."

Biondi led for most of the 200 freestyle before Armstrong rolled to the finish in 1:47.25. That was nearly three seconds faster than he had ever swum going into the Olympics.

"I had not been swimming my best until this meet," said Armstrong, the No. 4 qualifier in the prelims. "I knew I had it in me. I know it sounds like a corny thing to say, but the Olympics mean a lot to me. I'm tickled pink that I got a world record to go with a gold medal."

Gross, the 1984 Olympic champion and winner of the event at the 1982 and 1986 world championships, held the previous world and Olympic record of 1:47.44. He was fifth Monday.

"This race was the most competitive of the Olympics," Biondi said. "Look around, the world record-holder and the fastest qualifier (Wojdat) are not here (in the interview room)."

Americans fared poorly in the first two events, with Dara Torres of Beverly Hills, Calif., finishing seventh in the 100 freestyle and Richard Schroeder of Lindsay, Calif., sixth in the 100 breaststroke.

Kristin Otto of East Germany won the women's 100 freestyle in 54.93 seconds, two-tenths of a second slower than the world mark she set at the world championships in 1986. She also was .14 off the Olympic standard set by East German Barbara Krause in 1980.

Zhuang Yong, whose best time in 1986 was 59.60, won the silver in 55.47, the first swimming medal ever for China. Catherine Plewinski of France captured the bronze in 55.49.

Adrian Moorhouse of Britain, who won the 100 breaststroke at the world championships but was disqualified for an illegal turn, was the Olympic winner in 1:02.04, a mere .01 ahead of Karoly Guttler of Hungary.

Pirates Must Choose An Identity

Will the real East Carolina University football team please stand up and sign in... please!

On the past three Saturdays, East Carolina's Pirates have indeed taken on a Jekyll and Hyde look. Three weekends ago in their opener against Tennessee Tech, they had the Jekyll look — strong and confident in overcoming the Golden Eagles.

But a week ago, at Virginia Tech, they turned into Hyde, bumbling and clumsy, making mistake after mistake and it cost them a victory over a team that they had a very good prospect of beating.

This past Saturday, perhaps it can best be said that they were somewhere in between, not quite having made the transition from one to the other.

Certainly the defense played a much better game. The Pirates held South Carolina to just 49 yards rushing. Todd Ellis, a true Heisman candidate, completed 14 of 24 passes for 235 yards, but he ate up 97 of those on one play.

Overall, the defense must be praised for the job it did against the Gamecocks.

The offense, too, moved the ball well most of the time, but mistakes cost them each time they got within scoring distance. A fumble by Reggie McKinney mere feet away from the goal line cost the Pirate a chance to take the lead and it was on the next play that Ellis hit his 97-yarder that opened the lead to 10-0.

Surely, the Pirates played a much better game, outdistancing the Gamecocks in every phase of the game with the exception of the scoreboard.

Unfortunately for the Pirates, however, that is the only thing that counts. People won't ask about the stats, only about the score. It is a loss, no matter what.

True, South Carolina had to play a role in the outcome, too. The Pirates were not the toughest team on their schedule, but certainly were not in the class of this Saturday's opponent, the University of Georgia.

Of such things are upsets made.

East Carolina has come close time and time again to knocking off one of the big boys. But they haven't quite made the step over the threshold.

This Saturday, the Pirates return home to face Southern Mississippi. This is one of the games that, if the Pirates are to have a winning season, they must win. The Golden Eagles didn't make it any easier when they claimed their second win of the season Saturday night, downing Virginia Tech, 35-13.

The Pirates must play the same type game on defense and continue to move the ball on offense to have a chance. Too, they must get the ball into the end zone and more than a few times.

Hopefully, once and for all, the real Pirates will stand up this Saturday afternoon.

Campbell Makes Impact On Pack

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Jesse Campbell had to wait a year to make an impact on the North Carolina State football team, but it was just in time for the Wolfpack's game against Wake Forest Saturday night.

After being redshirted as a freshman, Campbell, a former West Craven standout, earned a starting position at strong safety for the Wolfpack this season. And Saturday night he provided a potential game-saving touchdown with an late interception in a 14-6 N.C. State victory.

"He made a great individual effort to make that play. A lot of close ballgames revolve around one play," said N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan. "You have to give Jesse credit. He made a great individual effort to come up with the ball."

With one minute remaining in the game, Campbell leaped high to pick off a Mike Elkins' pass attempt intended for Ricky Proehl in the Wolfpack end zone to kill the Deacons' final scoring drive of the night.

"I knew if I didn't intercept it, then it was going to be a touchdown and it would have been my fault," Campbell said. "I would have had to go to films on Sunday with that on my mind. I was going for the interception. I knew if I got it, it would end the game.

"I knew it was going to him all the way. When the ball was snapped, he got inside me and he wasn't supposed to do that, so I knew I was in trouble then. I was running for my life really."

"I just laid out and got it. He had over a yard on me and I had to lay out (to get to the ball). I was relieved. I knew he had beaten me."

For the game, Campbell had five solo tackles, including one for a loss. One of those was fourth-and-two stop of Deacon tailback Tony Rogers for no gain on a fourth-and-two play at the Wolfpack 27.

Campbell was a multi-sport star at West Craven, competing in football, basketball and track. But while he now spends his time on the field tackling people, in high school he gained fame running over and around would-be opponents. As a tailback, he gained 1,400 yards and scored 24 touchdowns as a senior, leading the Eagles to a 10-2 record.

But when he got to N.C. State, he was switched to defense to fill in for the graduated Chris Johnson at strong safety.

"Jesse is a freshman in eligibility and I said

Elliott Completes A Sweep Of Dover Downs Races

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Bill Elliott can be happy some things don't change quickly at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Dale Earnhardt and Rusty Wallace could hear better news. So could anybody who wins the pole, in this case Mark Martin, the 24th in a parade of Dover casualties from the top starting spot.

Elliott's 1.48-second victory Sunday over two-time defending Winston Cup champion Earnhardt in the $450,485 NASCAR Delaware 500 gave him a sweep of Dover's two races this year.

The Dawsonville, Ga., driver's sixth victory of the season was worth $56,400 and also helped pad his lead in the NASCAR standings over Earnhardt, who still is looking for his first Dover win, and Wallace, who finished third for the second straight time here.

"If I keep doing my job, then they've got to catch me,"

Elliott said. "That's all there is to it."

Six races remain on the 29-race schedule, and Elliott knows Sunday's 1-2-3 finish of the points leaders kept Earnhardt and Wallace in striking distance.

"The thing of it is, to beat Rusty and Dale (in season points), you've got to win the race," said Elliott, who has 3,548 points, 127 more than Earnhardt and 139 more than Wallace.

Davey Allison finished fourth Sunday and Geoff Bodine was fifth.

"We ran good from the time the green flag fell," said Elliott, who grabbed the lead from Martin on the first lap, beating him on the inside of the second turn. Martin crashed on lap 35, ending his bid to be the first driver to win from a Dover pole since Cale Yarborough in 1976.

Elliott ran his Ford at an average speed of 109.383 mph, leading 392 of the 500 laps.

Browns Look To Pagel

CLEVELAND (AP) — Just when he should have been reaching the peak of his career, quarterback Mike Pagel found himself wasting away at the bottom of the Cleveland Browns' depth chart. He often thought about asking to be traded.

He's glad he kept his mouth shut. Tonight, Pagel will become the Browns' third starting quarterback in three games.

"You just change gears a little bit," Pagel said as he prepared for tonight's game against the Indianapolis Colts, his first start since he was a member of the Colts in 1985. "When you're a backup, it's just mental preparation. When you start, the physical goes with the mental. During the week, you get to prepare mentally and at the same time you put it into action physically."

Coach Marty Schottenheimer gave Pagel nearly all the practice time this week, even though that would put newly signed veteran backup Don Strock and rookie Steve Slayden at a serious disadvantage if either had to enter the game. Pagel, however, hadn't practiced much all season because he was third string until Bernie Kosar and Gary Danielson got hurt.

Falcons' Miller Makes The Most Of 2nd Chance Against 49ers

By JOHN KEKIS
AP Sports Writer

Last year, Chris Miller was bewildered and befuddled. Call him confident and in control now.

Miller, the second-year quarterback of the Atlanta Falcons, was confused much of the time last season after missing training camp because of a contract dispute. His first NFL start came on the road against the 49ers late last season and he suffered four interceptions in a 35-7 defeat.

Miller returned to Candlestick Park on Sunday, and this time it was the 49ers who suffered as the Falcons exploded for 21 points in the second period and stunned the 49ers 34-17.

"There was no comparison with last year's game," said Miller, who passed for 130 yards and ran for a touchdown during the outburst. "In that game, I didn't even think about what the guys on the other side of the line were doing. That was the first week I'd practiced with our first unit. I didn't know where my protection was coming from, and I had trouble remembering our receivers routes."

The Falcons, who lost their first two games, had a 24-3 lead early in the second half. Their final point total was the highest by any team against the 49ers since 1983 in regular-season play.

"We had a lot of respect for Atlanta going into the game. We needed more," San Francisco coach Bill Walsh said.

The Falcons took the lead eight minutes into the second quarter on a 3-yard run by Gerald Riggs. James Primus scored on a 29-yard run on the Falcons' next possession, and Miller completed the outburst when he ran it in with no time remaining in the half.

Joe Montana passed for 343 yards, 225 in the second half, but was intercepted three times in his 100th career NFL start. Safety Robert Moore made the third, early in the fourth quarter, and went 47 yards for the touchdown which virtually clinched the victory.

Chiefs 20, Broncos 13

Steve DeBerg had a ball against his old teammates, throwing two touchdown passes, and the Kansas City defense intercepted two John Elway passes to hand the Broncos their second loss in three games.

DeBerg, who played for Denver until the Broncos acquired Elway five years ago, flipped a six-yard scoring pass to Carlos Carson in the second quarter and a 14-yarder to Paul Palmer in the third as the Chiefs, 1-2, seized a 17-10 lead. Nick Lowery added field goals of 50 and 29 yards.

Tony Dorsett scored on an 8-yard run late in the second quarter and Rich Karlis kicked two field goals for Denver.

Vikings 31, Bears 7

Tommy Kramer has his job back, and the Chicago Bears aren't too happy about it. Kramer, who began the season on the bench and asked to be traded after the Vikings lost to Buffalo on opening day, passed for three touchdowns.

Kramer completed 15 of 28 passes for 258 yards, hitting Anthony Carter with touchdown passes of 40 and 16 yards and Hassan Jones with a 19-yard scoring strike before departing midway through the fourth quarter.

Minnesota capitalized on five Chicago turnovers during the rainy afternoon at Soldier Field, including a fumble by Dennis McKinnon which Chris Martin re-

Calcavecchia's Dead Eye Wins It

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Mark Calcavecchia can legitimately say that he won the Bank of Boston Classic with his eyes closed. A 30-foot birdie putt on the final hole gave Calcavecchia a one-shot victory over Don Pooley, who knocked on the door with a record-tying 63 Sunday. Calcavecchia never saw the ball go in. "I flinched it right in there," the 28-year-old touring pro said after his winning round of 5 under 66. "I didn't even see it go in because I closed my eyes with six inches to go because I knew it was in." Calcavecchia capitalized on a late collapse by Fuzzy Zoeller, who double-bogeyed two holes on the final nine to finish in a group of three at 8 under par, two shots off Calcavecchia's 10-under 274 finish. The $108,000 payday for Calcavecchia moved him to sixth on the 1988 PGA Tour money list and marked his first victory this year. He has finished second by one stroke in three tournaments this season, including the Masters.

"I'm going, 'Man, what does it take to win out here?'" a relieved Calcavecchia said. He said he played much of the final round in a relaxed state of mind, thinking there was almost no chance he could catch Zoeller. "I wasn't really worried about it until I heard (a spectator) shout to me that I was tied for the lead," said Calcavecchia, who pulled even on the 16th hole, then reached the 583-yard 18th with two drivers and a sand wedge before sinking his winning putt.

Pooley, an early starter, played with a similarly easy-going attitude, figuring there was no chance to make up a seven-shot deficit. Instead, he found himself in the hunt after firing an 8-under-par 63, matching the course record at the 7,110-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club, to finish 9-under at 275. That score looked better and better as the day wore on. "I don't think there's much of a chance, but a lot of things can go wrong out there," Pooley said after his round.

Inkster's Recovery Keys Victory

KENT, Wash. (AP) — Juli Inkster caught a cold on the eve of the $225,000 Safeco Classic, and her early golf in the LPGA tournament reflected her misery. But she recovered nicely over the weekend to claim the tournament title by three strokes over South Korean Ok-Hee Ku.

Inkster opened with a 76, improved to 70 on Friday, then fired a healthy 7-under-par 65 Saturday, the lowest round of the tournament. She closed with a 67 on Sunday to win her 11th career title by a comfortable margin. She totaled 10 under par 278 for 72 holes on the 6,222-yard Meridian Valley Country Club course. Ku finished with a 69 on Sunday.

"I can't remember playing this well on a weekend, going from two over and into the tournament," said Inkster, a 28-year-old from Rancho Murieta, Calif. "It's the best I felt in a Sunday round, and the most relaxed I've played in a final round."

The victory was her third this year and second in this tournament. She won this title in 1983 on the way to tour rookie of the year honors. "I had six birdies Friday and seven Saturday, so I knew I was going to make some more," Inkster said. "I hit good iron shots when I had to, and got birdies."

She went into the final round in a second-place tie with Beth Daniel, JoAnne Carner and tour rookie Danielle Ammaccapane, all a stroke behind Jan Stephenson. Stephenson birdied the first hole Sunday but bogeyed the third, where Inkster sank a 25-foot birdie putt to gain a share of the lead. Daniel's birdie gave her the lead briefly on the fourth.

Inkster two-putted from just off the fringe of the par-5 fifth green for a birdie that gave her the lead for the first time. Daniel bogeyed the fifth. Stephenson went ahead one more time with a birdie on the seventh, then parred the remaining 12 holes. Daniel dropped out of contention with bogeys on 13, 14 and 16. Carner was out of it with bogeys on 7, 11 and 14. Ammaccapane birdied the eighth and 12th to close to within two shots of Inkster, only to fall back with bogeys on the 16th and 17th.

Inkster took over for good with a six-foot birdie putt on No. 8. She birdied the 12th with a five-footer, and the 13th with a 15-footer. Ku, just ahead of Inkster's final threesome, rolled in a 21-foot birdie putt on the 15th. Then she hit a 3-iron shot to a foot of the cup and birdie. But Inkster followed by hitting a 152-yard 6-iron shot from the rough and made her final birdie.

Ku then missed the 16th green and bogeyed.

Palmer Ends Drought With Seniors Win

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — After a three-year drought on the PGA Seniors Tour, Arnold Palmer says "it's always going through your mind, 'I haven't won for a while and why haven't I won?'" Nevertheless, after a four-shot victory Sunday in the $325,000 Crestar Classic, Palmer said, "I wasn't concerned other than the fact that I wanted to win very much."

The 59-year-old Palmer, whose last triumph was in the 1985 Senior TPC, was in cruise control for most of the day over the 6,644-yard Hermitage Country Club course as he posted a 2-under-par 70 for a 54-hole total of 203 that earned him $48,750 to push his earnings for the year to $115,366.

It was the 10th PGA Seniors Tour title for Palmer, who now has won $923,000 as a member of the over-50 set. Palmer, whose 61 victories on the regular PGA Tour included four Masters, one U.S. Open and two British Opens, pushed his all-time earnings on both tours to $2,816,000.

Despite the fact no one got closer than two shots, Palmer said he never felt he had the tournament in his grasp until "I got on the last green and knew I could five-putt and win."

The only real challenge came from defending champion Larry Mowry, who started the day six shots behind Palmer. Mowry, whose first tour victory came here last year as a rookie, was 5 under par for the day and two shots back when he pulled his second shot into the water on the par-5 15th hole and bogeyed.

Another bogey on the 17th, where he missed the green and a 12-foot par putt, ended Mowry's chances. He "misjudged the wind," hit under the bleachers but then chipped in from 70 feet for a birdie on the final hole.

The 68, fashioned with six birdies and two bogeys, earned Mowry a share of second place at 207 with Jim Ferree, who had a 69 with five birdies and two bogeys, and Lee Elder, whose 70 included five birdies and three bogeys. All three picked up $23,716.67.

Red Sox Stretch Lead With Win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Boston Red Sox took a giant step toward taking the most step the Oakland Athletics hope to take tonight.

The Red Sox, plagued by a long history of failure, took control of the American League East race Sunday with a 9-4 victory over the New York Yankees. After losing the opener of a four-game series to the Yankees Thursday, the Red Sox won the next three.

"And I guarantee we won't lose three in a row in Toronto. Why should we?" Boston manager Joe Morgan said as his team, holding a six-game lead, prepared to visit the Blue Jays tonight.

The Athletics, meanwhile, can clinch the AL West this evening at home by defeating Minnesota. Oakland's magic number is two and can be cut to zero with a victory over the World Series champions.

"We just didn't get the job done. In this game, you have to learn to accept the good and the bad," Yankees manager Lou Piniella said.

Ellis Burks hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Marty Barrett's two-run double chased Guidry in the second. Dwight Evans met reliever Neil Allen with a two-run homer that made it 7-1.

Mike Smithson, 9-5, got the victory. He got relief help in the seventh from Bob Stanley before Lee Smith recorded the final four outs for his 28th save.

Athletics 3, Royals 2

Jose Canseco hit his 40th home run and Dave Henderson walked with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 11th inning to force home the winning run.

Canseco leads the majors in homers and is tops with 117 RBI.

matching his career high.

Orioles 2, Tigers 0

Bob Milacki, making his major league debut, held Detroit to one hit for eight innings as visiting Baltimore ended a five-game losing streak.

The Tigers lost for the 20th time in 26 games. Detroit led the division by four games on Aug. 21.

Brewers 10, Mariners 2

Jeffrey Leonard's fourth career grand slam led Milwaukee over host Seattle and kept the Brewers' hopes alive in the AL East.

Leonard hit his eighth home run in the third inning against Mike Campbell, 6-10. Leonard came to bat with the bases loaded in the fourth but struck out.

White Sox 8, Twins 5

Dan Pasqua hit two homers, went 4-for-4 and drove in four runs as Chicago won at the Metrodome.

Pasqua's three-run homer highlighted a five-run rally in the seventh inning. Pasqua, batting .107 since Aug. 17, led off the ninth with his 19th home run this season, all against right-handed pitchers.

Angels 6, Rangers 5

Wally Joyner blooped a two-run single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning that rallied California over Texas.

The Rangers had taken the lead in the top of the ninth on a grand slam by pinch hitter Pete O'Brien.

Blue Jays 4, Indians 0

Dave Stieb pitched a four-hitter and Toronto beat visiting Cleveland and remained on the fringe of the AL East chase.

Stieb, 14-8, struck out four and walked two in his second shutout of the season. He escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the fourth as the Blue Jays remained 8½ games behind Boston.

Giants' 10-3 Win Angers Astros

By The Associated Press

After throwing batting practice to the San Francisco Giants, the Houston Astros stayed late and threw batting practice to themselves.

Following a 10-3 loss to the Giants on Sunday, Houston manager Hal Lanier was so angry he ordered his team back on the field for a 1½-hour workout. He was angry after Houston lost its fourth consecutive game and dropped into a second-place tie with San Francisco, nine games behind the division-leading Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Astros, one-half game out on Aug. 9, have lost 21 of 37 since.

"You have to have pride. If you can't finish first you certainly want to be second," Lanier said. "We've worked too hard to let the whole season go down the drain the last three days. We're going to have to have the intensity to win every ballgame. I want to stress this to every ballplayer."

Don Robinson, 8-4, won for the fourth time in five decisions and hit a two-run homer. He allowed four hits and one run in seven innings.

Will Clark hit a two-run homer, scored three runs and walked four times. He is 22-for-62 against Houston this season with six home runs and 19 RBI.

Mets 5, Expos 3

Dwight Gooden won his 18th game and Darryl Strawberry hit his league-leading 34th home run as New York lowered its magic number to three and increased its lead to 12 games over Pittsburgh.

Hembrick's Hopes For Gold Lost In Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Anthony Hembrick's hopes for Olympic glory disappeared on a rainy South Korean morning that saw the U.S. boxing team in disarray.

Coaches who couldn't figure out a bout schedule and a bus crowded with athletes trying to escape the Monday morning rain combined to knock Hembrick out of the Olympics before he ever had a chance to step into the ring.

South Korean Ha Jong-Ho's hand was just being raised in victory as Hembrick arrived at the Chamshil Student Gymnasium in a jogging suit. He could only watch in quiet despair, fighting back tears, as his Olympics ended before they began.

Somehow, for reasons even they couldn't fully explain, team officials brought Hembrick, the 165-pound team captain, in 10 minutes too late to fight. Under International Boxing Federation rules, a fighter must be ready to fight three minutes after the bout is announced, giving the South Korean the win on a walkover.

"I'll take the blame," said U.S. Coach Ken Adams. "I feel bad for Hembrick. I wish there was something I could do."

U.S. boxing officials did try to do something, appealing to a grievance committee to reschedule the fight.

The committee deadlocked 2-2 on the appeal and its chairman, Taieb Houchi of Tunisia, said he would cast the tiebreaking vote Monday night after conferring with Anwar Chowdhry of Pakistan, the president of AIBA.

But a high-ranking AIBA executive said he doubted the appeal would succeed. "It's very rare that this kind of decision could be overturned," said Jerry Shears, an Australian member of AIBA's executive board.

The disqualification was especially jarring to the U.S. team, coming only hours after another American fighter, 125-pound Kelcie Banks, was knocked cold in the first round of his opening match and eliminated from the Olympics.

Banks, a former world champion and a gold medalist in the 1987 Pan Am Games, was released from a Seoul hospital Monday after spending the night as a precautionary measure following his knockout loss to Regilio Tuor of Holland. Medical officials said a CAT scan of Banks' brain showed no permanent damage.

"These things happen in boxing," said Adams. "I thought he was doing an outstanding job but he just got caught."

The Hembrick disqualification was a scene reminiscent of the 1972 Olympics, when two U.S. sprinters were eliminated when they arrived late for their heats after misreading their schedules.

This time, Hembrick, Adams and assistant coach Hank Johnson not only thought the fight was scheduled for a later time, but also left at 10:30 a.m. from the Olympic Village, a half-hour later than they planned because the 10 a.m. bus was full.

Campbell A Key

before the season he had that position nailed down very clearly," Sheridan said. "We knew that losing a player like Chris Johnson was going to be hard to replace. I think Jesse has shown us in this ballgame that he is not playing like a freshman."

But sitting on the sidelines last year wasn't the easiest thing to do for Campbell.

"Last year, I couldn't stand being redshirted. (We) scrimaged on Thursday on the scout team and that's all we got to do. You are a part of the team, helping them prepare, but it's not the same.

"(Now) it feels real good. It used to bother me when the team was leaving for away games or I had to sit up in the stands and watch them play. It feels good to (finally) be out there."

But Campbell's emergence has been a big boost to the Wolfpack defense, according to secondary coach Buddy Green.

"Our strong safety in what we do is a key position," he said. "The quick progress of Jesse has been a big key to our success. For a redshirt freshman, he's playing more and more like a seasoned veteran."

"That's a tough adjustment. He played linebacker in high school and had never played in the secondary. Our strong safety has a lot of responsibility as far as adjustments. He's handled it all real well."

Following an 8-4 season in 1986 that culminated in a trip to the Peach Bowl, the Wolfpack slumped to 4-7 last year and the defense got a lot of the blame. Campbell was ready to lend a hand this year.

"The defense is going real well," he said. "I remember I read in a magazine last year that the defense was consistent, consistently bad and we're trying to prove that wrong."

Alabama's Curry Criticized

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Homer Smith helped him make it. Sherrill, himself a former Alabama star, raised the stakes by bringing the late "Bear" Bryant into the discussion.

"Coach Bryant would have been here," he said.

Curry brushed off Sherrill's criticism.

"I'm sure it was a simple decision for Jackie Sherrill, who suddenly became an expert on hurricanes. But he wasn't in my shoes. I was. And I made the decision not to go because, to tell you the truth, it wasn't a difficult decision to make."

"Their quarterback was hurt and that's why they didn't want to play this game," Sherrill said.

Alabama quarterback David Smith injured his knee Tuesday, leaving understudy Jeff Dunn less than a week to learn offensive coordinator Homer Smith's complicated system.

"Bill's not being totally honest about this thing," Sherrill said. "He didn't make this decision by himself."

Curry's Friday morning decision was based on fears that deadly Hurricane Gilbert might disrupt the Tide's travel plans for Saturday's game.

Curry brushed off Sherrill's criticism.

covered in the end zone early in the third quarter to give the Vikings a 24-7 lead.

Bears quarterback Jim McMahon passed for one touchdown — an 11-yard strike to Ron Morris in the opening period — but fumbled once and was intercepted once before leaving the game in the closing seconds of the first half with a bruised left knee. He did not return.

"They took it to us," Bears coach Mike Ditka said, "and they stuck our noses in it. But we'll fight back."

Bengals 17, Steelers 12

Boomer Esiason hit Eddie Brown with a 65-yard fourth-quarter scoring pass to rally the unbeaten Bengals over error-prone Pittsburgh. The Bengals are 3-0 for the first time since 1975, when they finished 11-3.

James Brooks rushed for 88 yards as the Bengals took over the AFC Central Division lead with the help of six Pittsburgh turnovers.

Bubby Brister completed 15 of 30 passes for 235 yards for Pittsburgh, including a nine-yard TD pass to Louis Lipps.

Jets 15, Oilers 3

Wesley Walker caught three touchdown passes to lead the Jets to their largest margin of victory ever in a game marred by 190 yards in penalties, including nine personal fouls.

"I was thinking, 'You aren't going to come in here and push us around,'" said Jets rookie cornerback James Hasty, who was involved in some early pushing and shoving. "The situation was, 'You're in our stadium and you're not going to set the tempo.'"

Tony Zendejas kicked a 30-yard field goal to give the Oilers a 3-0 lead after a Walker fumble, but Ken O'Brien gave the Jets the lead for good with an eight-yard touchdown pass to Kurt Sohn and Freeman McNeil scored on an eight-yard run for a 14-3 lead.

Walker then caught scoring passes of 50 and four yards on the Jets' next two possessions and added a 23-yarder from Pat Ryan late in the game.

Redskins 17, Eagles 10

The Redskins spent much of the afternoon chasing Randall Cunningham, and for once they had some success, sacking him six times as Washington remained tied with the Giants for the lead in the NFC East.

The Redskins scored touchdowns on each of their first two possessions. Timmy Smith scored on a 19-yard run and rookie Jamie Morris added a 27-yard TD run.

Cunningham hit Mike Quick with a 55-yard scoring pass with 14:08 left, giving Cunningham at least one touchdown pass in 15 straight games.

Saints 22, Lions 11

Bobby Hebert completed 23 of 32 passes for 282 yards, including a 29-yard scoring toss to Lonzell Hill to lead the Saints.

But Detroit misfired on a fake punt to set up the go-ahead touchdown. On a fourth-and-18 situation at the Detroit 12, Lions punter Jim Arnold appeared to have Carl Painter open for a pass, but Painter didn't turn around in time and the throw was incomplete.

Two plays later, Dalton Hilliard scored on a four-yard run to put the Saints ahead 19-14 with 50 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

The Lions, 1-2, had taken a 14-7 halftime lead on a pair of touchdown passes from Chuck Long to Carl Brand.

Morten Andersen kicked field goals of 37 and 29 yards for the Saints, 2-1

Bills 16, Patriots 14

The Bills remained undefeated and atop the AFC East with another solid defensive performance and strong kicking from Scott Norwood, who converted a 41-yard field goal with 11 seconds left to give them their first victory over New England in 12 games.

Norwood's third field goal of the game came after Jim Kelly threw his first touchdown pass of the season, a three-yarder to Robb Riddick with 9:15 left that pulled the Bills within 14-13.

Steve Grogan threw a 41-yard touchdown pass to Cedric Jones and a 19-yarder to Stanley Morgan in the first half as New England, 1-2, took a 14-3 halftime lead.

Cardinals 30, Bucs 24

Cliff Stoudt relieved injured Neil Lomax and hit Jay Novacek with a 42-yard touchdown pass with 3:14 to play to give the Cardinals their first victory of the season.

Tampa Bay's Lars Tate scored on a 47-yard run and Donald Igwebuike's extra point, which bounced off the left upright before going through, had given the Bucs a 24-23 lead.

Stump Mitchell scored on a six-yard run. Al Del Greco hit two field goals, and Earl Ferrell added a one-yard scoring run as Phoenix built a 20-3 halftime lead behind Lomax, who threw for 148 yards. But an arthritic hip flared up and kept the veteran quarterback sidelined throughout the second half.

Dolphins 24, Packers 17

The Dolphins started fast, then held on for their first win of the season.

Lorenzo Hampton scored on a two-yard run after William Judson blocked a Packer punt, and Dan Marino hit Mark Clayton with a 25-yard scoring pass as Miami ran up a 17-0 first-quarter lead.

Marino threw for two touchdowns and went past the 20,000-yard mark in career passing.

Randy Wright got Green Bay on the scoreboard with a one-yard run to open the second period, but Marino replied with a four-yard touchdown pass to Ferrell Edmunds for a 24-7 lead.

Chargers 17, Seahawks 6

Linebacker Keith Browner intercepted two passes, including one he returned 55 yards for the first touchdown of his five-year career, as San Diego ended an eight-game losing streak.

Gary Anderson scored on a 25-yard run with 4:05 remaining in the game for some insurance. Seattle nearly scored with 1:09 left, but Gil Byrd got his second interception of the game to end the threat.

Seattle quarterback Dave Krieg left the game in the fourth period with a separated shoulder and is expected to miss six weeks.

Steve Largent had a better day — he caught four passes for 71 yards to move past Charlie Joiner and become the all-time receiving yardage leader with 12,167.

Giants 12, Cowboys 10

A "phantom" safety and Harry Carson's goal-line interception in the fourth quarter gave the Giants only their third victory at Texas Stadium since 1974.

Darryl Clack muffed the opening kickoff at his 1-yard line and was tackled in the end zone by Mark Collins for the safety, which shook the Cowboys up as they argued in vain, even though they were right.

Lionel Manuel caught a nine-yard scoring pass from Phil Simms in the third period for the winning points. The Cowboys scrapped back on a 27-yard scoring pass from Steve Pelluer to Herschel Walker.

Rams 22, Raiders 17

The Rams defense registered nine sacks and Jim Everett threw a 54-yard touchdown pass to Aaron Cox with 2:13 left in the game to clinch the victory.

It was the Rams' first victory over the Raiders since the Raiders, 1-2, moved to Los Angeles in 1982.

Double Olympic gold medalist Greg Louganis struck the springboard with the back of his head on his ninth dive in 3-meter preliminary competition, receiving two scores of zero, one 0.5, three 1.0's and one 1.5. He appeared uninjured, and returned a half-hour later to make his best dive of the day.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"One of the most disheartening things is when an athlete is not able to be at his event, who's ever at fault. It is a terrible thing, it is a tragic thing to have at the Olympics." — U.S. Olympic Committee President Robert Helmick, reacting to the elimination of U.S. boxer Anthony Hembrick, who blamed transportation and scheduling problems on missing a first-round bout.

Valerie Harper Wins Suit Over Firing From TV Show

L.A. Times-Washington Post
HOLLYWOOD — Twenty-four hours after her court victory, actress Valerie Harper sat beaming in the living room of her Beverly Hills home.
 The doorbell rang; in came a pastel flower arrangement, congratulating her on winning her bitter lawsuit against Lorimar Television. She put it across from another congratulatory bouquet. The sun streamed in. Calls of congratulations punctuated the morning.
 "I don't know what today would be like had I lost the case," Ms. Harper said.
 Clearly, Valerie Harper and her husband, Tony Cacciotti, could sit back, relax and savor the moment for the first time in more than a year — for the first time since her legal battle had begun with Lorimar Television over her role in the NBC television series "Valerie."
 On Friday, a Los Angeles County Superior Court jury ended their 12-month legal dispute and three-week court battle with the unanimous decision that Ms. Harper was wrongfully fired from her role as homemaker Valerie Hogan on Lorimar's "Valerie" series last fall. The jury awarded Ms. Harper $1.4 million compensation for lost wages, as well as $220,000 to Cacciotti, formerly an executive producer on the show, and profit participation that could total $15 million.
 "My major plan, desire, wish was that the truth of the situation be exposed and be exposed broadly," she said happily. "There were so many half-truths, and out-and-out untruths about me, my performing, about my stability as a person, my psychological state. It's so nice to see 'wrongfully fired' after all I've seen is 'fired,' 'fired,' 'fired.'"
 The money, she said, was not as gratifying as the chance to clear her name.

Ms. Harper hopes that her victory will lay to rest what she calls Lorimar's "twisted and exaggerated" portrait of her as "a hellish demon" who sought to "submarine the show."
 "I have a sense that winning the case has been an extraordinary panacea in the eyes of the public, in the eyes of the media and in the eyes of the industry," she said. "The things about my being disruptive and difficult and all of those things — I've worked with too many people for that to hold any water. Nobody has ever said that I was troubled or had a drug problem or an alcohol problem or anything like that."
 The case came to a head in the summer of 1987 when Ms. Harper and Cacciotti moved out of their offices on the Lorimar lot after a contract dispute in which she sought more money. Ms. Harper did not show up to shoot the first "Valerie" episode of the season because of the dispute. After what appeared to be a resolution of differences between her and Lorimar, Ms. Harper returned to the set to tape the next episode.

 After that episode, Lorimar dismissed Ms. Harper and announced that the first episode of the season would explain that Valerie Hogan died in an accident. Sandy Duncan, as Valerie's sister-in-law, Sandy Hogan, replaced Ms. Harper as caretaker of the three Hogan boys, including teen idol Jason Bateman. The show was retitled "Valerie's Family." (This season it is being retitled again — to "The Hogan Family.")

Michael Jackson Overtakes Cosby As Highest Paid Star

NEW YORK (AP) — He's bad, and he makes a lot of money at it: Michael Jackson is the world's highest-paid entertainer with total projected earnings of $97 million for 1987 and 1988, Forbes magazine says.
 Jackson, who ranked ninth on last year's Forbes list of the 40 best-paid celebrities, moonwalked his way past Bill Cosby to No. 1 by raking in an estimated $60 million this year, the magazine said in its Oct. 3 edition.
 The 30-year-old entertainer made approximately $40 million from his recent worldwide tour, with the rest from sales of his album "Bad," his autobiography, "Moonwalk," Pepsi endorsements and other music publishing, the magazine said.
 Cosby, who had a 1986-87 income of $84 million, was No. 2 on the current list with $92 million in earnings for 1987 and 1988, Forbes says.
 The youngest entertainer on the list was 22-year-old heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson, whose earnings skyrocketed from $10 million in 1987 to approximately $45 million this year, the highest 1988 income behind Jackson's, the magazine estimates.
 Two other boxers, Sugar Ray Leonard and Michael Spinks, made the list, with $27 million and $17 million, respectively, in earnings for the two-year period.
 In contrast, the income of America's top-grossing executive, Charles Lazarus of Toys 'R' Us Inc., averaged $31.5 million a year for 1986 and 1987, the most recent two-year period for which executive pay records are available. Lazarus made $60 million, including about $56 million in one-time stock gains, in 1987.
 After Jackson and Cosby, the rest of Forbes' top 10 are: filmmaker average. Chrysler Corp.'s Lee Iacocca came close with an average annual income for 1986 and 1987 of $19 million.

 Thirty other entertainers were included on the list, with Frank Sinatra pulling in the rear with $16 million, the minimum two-year income needed to qualify for this year's list.
 In addition to Madonna, the list contains four other women: Oprah Winfrey, $37 million; Whitney Houston, $30 million; Tina Turner, $25 million, and Jane Fonda, $23 million.
 The magazine also noted that 25 percent of those on the list are black.
 Forbes says the list knows no international borders and shows an evolving culture, with 17 of the top 40 in the music business.
 "No longer are steel mills or auto factories or oil wells the principal sources of great wealth," it says. "In the post-industrial society, the once despised entertainment industry has usurped that role."
 Forbes also notes that in death, perhaps more so than in life, entertainers continue to fill pocketbooks as well as hearts.
 Elvis Presley's estate, for example, will earn approximately $15 million this year, including $11 million from Graceland Mansion, the home Presley purchased in 1957 for $100,000 that now is a museum honoring the entertainer.
 Other dead entertainers whose estates are making in excess of $1 million annually are James Bond writer Ian Fleming, $7.5 million; ex-Beatle John Lennon, $5 million; guitarist Jimi Hendrix, $4 million; poet T.S. Eliot, $2.5 million, and actor James Dean, $1.2 million.

Williams Doesn't Miss Early Years

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Hank Williams Jr. says he doesn't miss the early years of his career when his fans saw him as a rebel.
 "And I don't miss the fact that I wasn't the happiest person in the world back then," said Williams, the Country Music Association's reigning Entertainer of the Year.
 "You know, I did some pretty wild things. To myself, to houses and cars. No, I don't miss that part of me at all," he said in Sunday's edition of The Tennessean of Nashville.
 Williams, 34-year-old son of the legendary singer Hank Williams and whose hits include "Family Tradition" and "All My Rowdy Friends are Coming Over Tonight," made 35 albums between ages 14 and 26.
 It wasn't until he was in his 30s that awards began pouring in.

Rally Held For Rights

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Peace activists, celebrities and former "prisoners of conscience" told a crowd of 200 people in front of the Liberty Bell they need to fight for human rights.
 Actress Margot Kidder was among those at Sunday's rally to sign a petition in support of the United Nation's Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The rally was in conjunction with tonight's Amnesty International concert.
 "We give concerts, we speak out, and we never, never remain silent," Miss Kidder said.

'USA Today' TV Show Is 'Nuzak'

By ROBERT BARR
 Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — "USA Today: The Television Show," TV's bright new "infotainment" package, neither informs nor entertains and blows past at the speed of a video game.
 It's "nuzak" — something that looks like news at a distance but will drive you crazy if you try to pay attention.
 At the end of the ride the viewer might only remember a bromide such as "baseball is baseball, even in Russia," or feel a gnawing need to know more about the "sound-emitting chair that provides the equivalent of eight hours sleep in just 20 minutes."
 Factsoids are dispensed in the "snapshots" which precede the commercials: 6,500 limousines were sold in the USA in 1985; it costs 49 cents to mail a letter in Italy, 25 cents in the USA.
 "USA Today: The Television Show" is the first informational series from Grant Tinker, whose GTG Entertainment production studio is a joint venture with Gannett, the publisher of USA Today, the newspaper. The syndicated, nightly half-hour news show premiered last Monday on about 160 stations. In most markets, it airs in the early evening.
 Jay Leno has joked that USA Today is the newspaper for those whose attention span is too short for television.

A Review
 "USA Today" on television is no marathon for the mind, but it demands intense attention in short bursts. For instance, viewers have about five seconds to decode an elaborate weather map. RAIN, the map said Tuesday. Where?
 OK, if you care about the weather you can watch the local news, but then what's the point of flashing the map on "USA Today"? Is this the art appreciation segment?

But why watch? It takes less concentration to watch "Nova" or a Bill Moyers special on PBS.
 If you miss the intro to a segment, forget it. Poor sound quality in some of the interviews doesn't help either. In a segment Wednesday on the National Geographic, voices were repeatedly smothered by annoying music.
 Before "USA Today" hit the air, it suffered a certain amount of sniping from critics because of its commitment to an upbeat "journalism of hope" which accentuated the positive and eliminated the negative.
 What's been accentuated is pace; coherence and content have been eliminated. You have to give up something to jam 18 topics into the 22 minutes left after commercials.

 But it's not as though "USA Today" tracked mud through the temple of television. CBS' "48 Hours" and "West 57th" have blazed a trail for lightweight journalism, ABC's "20/20" is infatuated with celebrities and Fox's "A Current Affair" and "The Reporters" plumb the lower depths of taste. "USA Today" looks less like an innovator than a cross between Trivial Pursuit and "Entertainment Tonight."

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Sept. 20

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Continue to stand back and get a really clear viewpoint as new conditions unfold and dictate new directions and associations. Avoid quarrels.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Ordinarily helpful Virgos or Capricorns may prove hostile if you attempt to get involved in their personal problems or private matters.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Do not introduce new sentiments and promises today. Ensuing stress could surface suddenly, harming your nervous system.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Emotions are still a matter for care today, so proceed cautiously unless you are willing to risk an unpleasant interaction.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Use today for yourself. Find some better ways of attracting advancement and positive growth. Personal aims and goals should be reevaluated.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Keep your distance from those who would like to involve you in an unpopular cause from which you can receive no benefit.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You may find yourself in the limelight today. This will help you launch a new course of action which will provide you with greater income later.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Follow up on that skillful presentation you observed by getting in contact with the originator or a member of the staff.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Seal your lips and keep characteristically polite today even though you will have many opportunities to express yourself angrily.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Only because you continue to attach so much importance to past events do they have such a strong effect on your well being.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): This is still not the time to try to do anything to change conditions at work. Sidestep someone who wants to waste your time and energy.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Finalize events decisively, and let others in on your new game plan so that you can avoid plunging once more into long-term negotiations.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K8 ♥AQJ53 ♦Q103 ♣KJ4
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?
 A.—There's an old saying that covers this situation: "When the opponents bid your best suit, pass!" Although you probably have the best hand at the table, there's nothing you can do. Don't bid one no trump—you have no source of tricks!
 Q. 2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠QJ54 ♥A107 ♦Q986 ♣104
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you respond?
 A.—There is a school that believes that, in response to partner's minor-suit opening bid, you should automatically respond in a four-card major, if you have one. Include us out! We show our four-card suits up-the-line, so our choice would be one diamond.
 Q. 3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ76 ♥Q85 ♦A104 ♣Q98
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Whether or not you play four-card majors has no bearing on this problem—on this auction your partner almost surely has five hearts. Since you don't want to play game in no trump with only a single stopper in the unbid suit, four hearts is an obvious choice.
 Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AKJ ♥AKJ76 ♦83 ♣732
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Pass, and hope you make your contract. Partner's bid is preemptive. He rates to have a singleton and five trumps, and if he does not toss an ace into the bargain, your contract is going to be "iffy."
 Q. 5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AKJ ♥AKJ76 ♦83 ♣732
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have a pretty good hand, but it does contain seven losers. For his forcing jump raise, you can expect partner to cover four or five of them, which still leaves you with at least two losers. Don't jeopardize your vulnerable game—bid four hearts.
 Q. 6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q98742 ♥Void ♦Q865 ♣J102
 Your partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
 A.—You have a hand devoid of any trace of defensive values, but potentially strong on offense. From your point of view, the opponents might have a slam. Don't give them the chance to get together. Jump to four spades.

Isce is nual Satellite To Spy n Arab Nations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel today successfully launched test satellite Horizon-1 over the Mediterranean Sea. It reportedly carried surveillance equipment to monitor Israel's Arab enemies.

The silver craft was set aloft south of Tel Aviv, where witnesses saw it arch and watched as booster rockets disengaged and fell to the sea. The launching made Israel the eighth country known to possess a rocket powerful enough to put a satellite into space.

A spokesman for Jane's Defense Weekly, the London-based defense magazine, said the Israeli satellite was believed to be "carrying a 3-kilogram (1.2-pound) payload for surveillance purposes," apparently for monitoring activity in Arab countries.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres discounted fears that the launching would spur an arms race with its Arab enemies.

"It's not an arms race," Peres said on Israel radio. "The Arabs bought missiles and produce missiles and will do anything they can anyway."

Tony Banks, a reporter for Jane's who is known to have close ties to Israeli military sources, said Israel was not thought to have the capability to install its own sophisticated surveillance equipment in a satellite.

"U.S. optical equipment is assumed to have been used in the payload," Banks told The Associated Press in London.

Foreign reports said earlier that the satellite was a test craft that would precede the launching of a spy satellite.

Yuval Neeman, head of Israel's space agency, described the launching as "all in all, very clean work."

He called the craft a "technological satellite" but acknowledged: "There's military potential in all this activity."

Meir Amit, former head of Israel's Mossad secret service and current chief of Israel's General Satellite Corp., said the launching could give Israel independent access to satellite pictures currently provided by the U.S. government.

"If you... are fed from the crumbs of others according to their moods, this is very inconvenient and very difficult," Amit said on Israel radio. "If you have your own, independent capability, you climb one level higher."

Neeman said the satellite, launched shortly before noon, "rose to a height of about 250 kilometers (155 miles). That will be its closest point to Earth. It will reach a distance of about 1,000 kilometers (620 miles)."

"It will revolve around the Earth in about an hour and a half," Neeman said on Israel radio. "The satellite will fly for about a month. Afterward, it will burn up."

The other countries known to possess the technology to launch a satellite are the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Japan, France, Britain and India.

The launching came a day after Israel's 10-member inner Cabinet approved the mission, according to Israeli media reports.

Plans to launch an experimental satellite surfaced Sunday in the Israeli media, which quoted reports in the British weekly Flight International and Time magazine as saying the test craft would precede putting a spy satellite in orbit.

Israeli leaders refused to comment on those reports.

The Israeli daily Haaretz quoted experts as saying the odds were high that something would go wrong during Israel's first attempt to launch a satellite.

Unidentified defense experts told the Hadashot daily Sunday that a spy satellite would provide faster and more accurate information about enemy military movements on the ground and save money by reducing the number of reconnaissance flights.

But Gerald Steinberg, a former U.S. space expert now living in Israel, told the Jerusalem Post a single spy satellite would be "almost meaningless" in helping to defend Israel.

An entire system of satellites costing about $10 billion would be needed to make a serious contribution, the Post quoted Steinberg as saying.

Until now, Israel has relied on reconnaissance aircraft and pilotless drones for intelligence-gathering.

Work on the Israeli satellite started in 1983, when Israel's space agency was created. The carrier rocket was built jointly by the Rafael weapons development authority and space aircraft industries.

Hirohito Feverish

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito was running a fever today for a second straight day and Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita canceled a scheduled meeting with the 87-year-old monarch, officials said.

Hirohito had a fever of about 100.4 degrees during a checkup this morning, but "he is feeling well and his appetite is normal," said an Imperial Household Agency official.

Hirohito, the world's longest reigning monarch, will stay in bed "all day," the official added, speaking on condition of anonymity.

On Sunday morning, Hirohito had a fever of 100.4 degrees that forced him to cancel a planned visit to watch a wrestling meet. His temperature later dropped to normal and he watched the matches on television, the official said.

Doctors said today that the fever might have been caused by a slight inflammation of the biliary tract, according to the official. On Sept. 22, 1987, Hirohito underwent an intestinal bypass operation.

He had previously fallen sick on Aug. 29 and Sept. 3 when he was resting at an Imperial villa in Nasu, northeastern Japan.

Meanwhile, Takeshita canceled a meeting with the emperor during which he was supposed to brief Hirohito on his recent trip to South Korea, a top government spokesman said.

The prime minister customarily reports to the emperor on major diplomatic and domestic events.

Keizo Obuchi, chief Cabinet secretary, said the government has yet to decide whether to cancel future meetings between high-ranking government officials and the emperor.

Obuchi said he has not heard of any immediate hospitalization plans for the emperor. "The Imperial Household Agency and court doctors are giving the appropriate treatment" to the emperor, he said.
