Report Labels Growing Number Of Homeless Kids 'A Disgrace'

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A report by the National Academy of Sciences that calls the growing number of homeless children "a national disgrace" was published without its authors' strong recommendations and criticism of government failures. The report released today portrays a homeless America filled not only with alcoholics and former mental patients but with growing numbers of children and families scraping out a dismal existence in rural communities. The study, ordered by Congress and directed by the academy's Institute of Medicine estimates that on any given night families with a total of 100,000 children are homeless, while yet more children have run away or been kicked out by their parents. The 242-page report says children under 18 are the fastest growing group among the nation's homeless and says this is "nothing short of a national disgrace that must be treated with the urgency that such a situation demands." But committee members hired by the institute wanted to go much further in their criticism, panel chairman Bruce C. Vladeck, president of United Hospital Fund of New York in New York City, said in a telephone interview late Monday. The panel included 13 experts in medicine and social science.

Vladeck said the published report "doesn't adequately convey our sense of outrage and dismay at the phenomenon of homelessness." The only indication of the panel's stronger position comes in a five-line footnote which says members of the committee "unanimously wish to express their strong feeling that the recommendations are too limited in addressing the broader issues of" (See HOMELESS, A-3)

Fewer Households Now Have Families

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Families constitute a smaller part of the American population, with the percentage of U.S. households that include a family falling by one-fifth over the last 40 years. The Census Bureau reported Monday that 71.5 percent of all households are made up of families currently; in 1948 the corresponding figure was 90.3 percent. Census demographer Steve Rawlings said a variety of factors are involved in the change, including the increasing numbers of widowed elderly living alone, unmarried couples and young people postponing families to pursue education and careers. The Census Bureau reported that, overall, there were 91.1 million households in the United States as of March, of which 65.1 million were families. That's up from 89.5 million households, including 64.5 million families, a year earlier. By definition, a household is one or more persons occupying a housing unit. A family includes at least two people related through birth, adoption or marriage. The preliminary 1988 report on families and households also disclosed that: — There were 31.9 million families which had a child under age 18 living at home, compared to 33.2 million without a child. Families without children at home surpassed those with children in 1985 for the first time. — Two-parent families are declining, slipping from 40 percent of all households in 1970 to just 27 percent this year. There are slightly more married couples with one or two (See REPORT, A-3)

Mayors Seek Funds For Drug Plan

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County mayors called on the county Board of Commissioners Monday to help fund a drug prevention program aimed at public schools. Bethel Mayor Frank Hemingway asked commissioners to pay for half the cost of a training program for municipal police officers who will work in the proposed Drug Abuse Resistance Education program in the public schools. Hemingway also asked the board to pay for all materials which will go to the 2,500 fifth-and sixth-grade students who will be targeted by the DARE effort. According to Hemingway, 25,000 schools in 38 states have DARE programs. "We need the program started now" in Pitt County, the mayor said. As part of the program, the mayors "are asking" that an education officer be designated from the sheriff's department "to go into the schools" that will not be covered by municipal officers, Hemingway said. Lawmen serving as education officers would attend a two-week training program before the 17-week DARE program — one hour per week in each fifth and sixth grade — would begin, Hemingway explained. The mayor, saying it would cost "$1,400 for an officer to go to school for two weeks (including salary)," asked the board to pay half that cost, plus "underwrite the materials," which he said would cost about $5,000. Estimating that five or six municipalities would send an officer to the school, Hemingway said the cost to the county would be $4,200. "We're going to have to have your help," he said. The county board took no action on the mayors' request.

Hemingway said the DARE program is the third phase of a comprehensive drug prevention program developed by the mayors. The first phase, already in place, is "Drug Stoppers" which, in cooperation with Crimestoppers, provides a mechanism for students to provide law enforcement agencies with information about dealers, Hemingway said. Also in place is an intervention assistance program offered to families of those students found using drugs, Hemingway said. (See FUNDING, A-3)

Ailing Hirohito Requires Blood

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito, the world's longest reigning monarch, received three blood transfusions today and was in stable condition after vomiting blood, imperial officials said. The Imperial Household Agency and other officials did not confirm a Kyodo News Service report that the 87-year-old emperor appeared to be in critical condition this morning despite night-long treatment by a team of court physicians. Kyodo attributed its report to an unidentified person who attended a Cabinet meeting this morning. It said a pre-dawn transfusion had not stopped a hemorrhage in his digestive tract. The imperial agency said no such announcement had been made. But in briefings later for Japanese reporters, Iwao Miyao, vice grand steward of the imperial agency, said doctors had given Hirohito 1.6 pints of blood during the night, then 0.4 pints more during the morning and 0.4 pints again during the afternoon. An Imperial Household Agency official quoted Miyao as saying in a briefing at 9:30 p.m. "I don't think the emperor's condition is becoming worse, but rather that it is stabilizing." "The emperor is in stable condition. He has a slight fever and is receiving intravenous drip," said palace spokesman Takenari Sugawara. Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's Cabinet was expected to approve plans Thursday to place Crown Prince Akihito, 54, in charge of state matters, Defense Agency head Kichiro Tazawa told reporters. At least one morning newspaper, the English-language Japan Times, printed a single-page extra this afternoon. It bore the headline "Ailing Emperor Vomits Some Blood" and a photo of a jogger who paused to pray in front of the palace.

City Will Move Arthur House

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
Members of the Greenville City Council approved an agreement at Monday's council workshop session which will save a local historic landmark from destruction. By terms of the agreement, the council agreed to accept ownership and to physically remove the Patrick Arthur House from its current site on the corner of 14th and Charles streets. The property on which the house is located has recently been rezoned for commercial use. City Manager Greg Knowles said the city will accept ownership of the house upon the closing date of the sale of the property, which is expected to be around Oct. 3. The agreement states the city will then be responsible for removing the house from the property within two weeks of that closing date, or three weeks in case of rain. After obtaining ownership, the city will likely move the house to a commercially zoned lot and put the house up for sale. City staff members are currently looking at various city-owned lots to relocate the house. Knowles said several parties have expressed a "passing interest" in acquiring the house. The estimated cost to move the home is $25,000. Of that amount, the city has agreed to pay $5,000 while the remaining $20,000 will be paid by a combination of the owners and the developers. In other matter Monday, the council unanimously approved a plan to eliminate the city's weekly payroll system. Approximately 163 city employees currently are paid weekly while the remainder are paid once every two weeks.

Finance Director Bernita Demery estimated the city's personnel time savings and dollar savings in materials would amount to approximately $20,000 per year. She said the effective date for the implementation of the single payroll system would be Dec. 31. The council also unanimously approved the interim report from the Citizens Advisory Committee on Cable TV. The council voted in agreement with the committee report's conclu- (See CITY, A-3)

Holder Appointed

Pitt County Commissioners Monday appointed Annie Holder to fill the unexpired term of Register of Deeds Elvira Allred, who will retire Sept. 30. Mrs. Allred, who has served as register of deeds since 1962, chose not to seek re-election this year. Mrs. Holder, a longtime employee of the office, won the Democratic nomination to succeed Mrs. Allred in the spring primary.

Charges Dropped In Law Office Standoff

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer
Greenville attorney David Duffus has agreed to drop charges against a man accused of communicating threats against him in an incident last month that resulted in a one-hour standoff with police. Lee Norris Parker, 40, of 617 Hudson St. was charged with communicating threats after being arrested on Aug. 29 at the law office of Dixon, Duffus and Doub on Arlington Boulevard. But in Pitt District Court on Monday, Duffus said he agreed to drop the charges against Parker on the condition Parker continue to seek psychiatric help from the Veterans Administration.

"We agreed to do that on the basis that he would continue to seek psychiatric help for his problem," Duffus said. "Apparently this fellow has a series of criminal convictions ... he's constantly been involved in different things and gets in trouble." Duffus said Parker had apparently become very upset when an attorney at the law firm informed Parker that the firm would not take his personal injury case. When Duffus telephoned Parker to try and calm him down, Duffus said Parker made threats against him, his family and attorneys in the firm. "He was indignant that we wouldn't handle his case ... The message was: 'I'm going to kill you,'" Duffus said in a telephone interview. "He just kind of flew off the handle. It was an unjustified reaction to us turning the case down." Duffus said the agreement to drop charges includes a provision in which Parker agreed not to sue any employee of Dixon, Duffus and Doub. Duffus said Parker's attorney, Hugh Cox of Greenville, insisted on including that condition in the agreement, and the law firm is not trying to dodge a law suit. "It's not like we agreed to drop the charge so he wouldn't sue us. ... That's not the case," Duffus said. No attorneys at the firm have ever represented Parker in previous cases, Duffus said, and Parker did not have any grounds on which to sue after the firm turned down his personal injury case. After Duffus received the threatening telephone call, he said he was going to contact the Pitt Sheriff's Department, but Parker arrived almost immediately at the law office. Parker had his hand hidden in a brief case, and Duffus said some employees thought he had a gun. A secretary called the Greenville Police Department about 12:30 p.m. and initial attempts by police to contact Parker by telephone and public address system failed. A team of five officers located Parker in a front office and placed him under arrest about 1:45 p.m., police said. No weapon was found and no one was injured, Capt. R.N. Nichols said.

Preservation Group Launches Drive For Architectural Book

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A kickoff campaign to raise funds, information on final publishing plans and the first public display of the cover design for the forthcoming book, "The Architectural Heritage of Greenville, North Carolina," were all unveiled Monday by the Greenville Area Preservation Association.

Maury York, president of GAPA, said the book will be hardback, with over 250 pages and about 200 photographs of existing buildings as well as examples of Greenville architecture no longer in existence.

The group will go to the Williamsburg Pottery facility on Oct. 11, to the Natural Bridge in Virginia on Oct. 21, and to the Sudan Temple Circus in Fayetteville on Nov. 9.

To make reservations for the trips call Sarah Ashton at 752-2912.

The organization met recently for its annual birthday luncheon. Alma Lethworth and Herman Weilenmann received birthday cakes.

Sybil Huggins, area March of Dimes director, presented certificates of appreciation to 25 members.

GAPA treasurer Robin Tugwell spoke of the impact that several persons have had on fostering the project. "We are dedicating the book to the late Bob Swinson, the first president of GAPA," Tugwell said. "He was instrumental in establishing the society and in efforts to further our cause."

Among guests attending the meeting were Swinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Swinson of Mount Olive, Merv and Libby Hancock, and other members of the Swinson family. Mrs. Hancock was the widow of Bob Swinson.

Also cited for his assistance was Rufus Keel of Greenville, who has contributed a restored 1929 Nash to be sold with proceeds to go to publication costs of the book.

Jeannette Cox heads the campaign to "raise our goal of $16,500 needed to complete publication costs." She thanked Keel and two other contributors — Pitt County's legislators, who had $1,500 in state funds earmarked for the project, and Dick Fly and Grady Strickland of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph, for that company's contribution of $1,000.

State Sen. Tom Taft and Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. were among those attending the event.

"We will be knocking on the doors of individuals and businesses in Greenville," Ms. Cox said, "and hope to get some very generous responses."

Virginia Minges, manning the desk for contributors among those attending the meeting, reported that over $500 was raised during the two hour session.

Members of the publications committee, who have worked on the book and prepared information, include Michael Cotter, the book's editor, artist Elizabeth Ross and Don King, John Tilley and Roger Cameron. Stan Little of the N.C. Division of Archives and History has also given extended time and effort to the book.

"The Architectural Heritage of Greenville, North Carolina" has a tentative publication date of Dec. 1. Copies ordered prior to Dec. 1 will be priced at $24.95. After Dec. 1, the price will be $29.95.

Changes Discussed In Med District Plan

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

After discussion of a council subcommittee recommendation regarding special and permitted uses in the Medical District, members of the Greenville City Council unanimously agreed Monday to direct city staff members to prepare a proposed amendment to the Zoning Ordinance reflecting those particular recommendations.

Among the subcommittee's recommendations was the removal of the "office building, professional and business" classification as a special use in the restrictive MD-2 district and allow it as a permitted use in the MD-3, MD-4 and MD-6 districts.

The recommendation suggests the formation of a new zoning classification, "Office, specific non-medical" which will allow various professional operations to exist under a special use permit in the MD-2 district provided that a minimum of 50 percent of the gross floor area per building be occupied by uses permitted by right in the MD-2 district.

Such professional operations would include attorneys; accountants; architects; banks; security and commodity brokers; insurance agents; real estate operators, and advertising agencies.

Other recommendations of the subcommittee included:

- Delete "Restaurant, excluding drive-in;" "Unoffensive manufacturer and/or distribution of medical supplies or products;" "Motel or hotel," and "Bank, savings and loan" as special uses in the MD-2 district.

- Allow "Daycare facility" as a special use in the MD-2 and MD-3 district.

- Delete "Florist" as a permitted use in the MD-2 district.

- Delete "Durgstore, pharmacy" as a permitted use in the MD-2 district and make such a use a permitted use in the MD-3 district.

- Allow only professionally recognized medically related institutions of higher learning be located in MD-1 and MD-2 districts.

- Delete "Related health care services" in the MD-1 and MD-2 districts since it may present interpretation problems in the future.

- Allow "vocational rehabilitation centers" as permitted uses in the MD-2 district.

The subcommittee's recommendations were the result of a study of a similar set of recommendations regarding special uses in the medical district set forth by the Planning and Zoning Commission subcommittee.

Contributing as members of the council subcommittee were Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman Dr. Wallace Wooles and commission member Ric Miller. Council member Nancy Jenkins and Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn comprised the remaining members of the council subcommittee.

After Department of Development Staff prepare a Zoning Ordinance amendment reflecting the approved subcommittee recommendations, the amendment will then proceed through the process of obtaining Planning board recommendation and then proceed before the council for consideration of adoption. A public hearing will be held regarding the proposed amendments at both levels.

The study of special uses and the subsequent recommendations was prompted following the council's controversial decision March 7 to allow flower shops as permitted uses in the highly restrictive MD-2 zoning district.

The MD-2 zoning district was designated for medical-related uses, the purpose of which was to create areas where hospitals, rehabilitation centers, medical offices, and clinics could be compatibly mixed.

School Board Members 'Frustrated' By Administrators' Goal Proposals

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

While pride was the common word and theme among management plans presented to Pitt County Board of Education members by school administrators Monday night, several board members said they were frustrated.

Board members spent about four hours listening and reading through almost 40 plans presented by central office personnel and principals. Accomplished goals and objectives of 1987-88 and goals and objectives of 1988-89 were addressed.

"I sat here and was extremely frustrated through the whole process," Frank Grooms said. "The objectives and goals showed a lack of measurability."

After one presentation, Walter Morehead asked, "How can I measure success or failure. Your goals are just action steps. If I can't measure it, it's not a good goal."

Superintendent Eddie West said principals are involving staff members in planning and varying measurability measures may show a transitional stage of the new participatory management.

Board chairman George Williams noted that goals and objectives must be measurable because the state mandates measurability in new programs, while Nicholas Patrone said that the levels of goals were low. In one case, it was hoped that 15 percent of the students in the third percentile would raise their test scores by 3 percent, he said.

West said when considering a whole school with 700 students may be targeted for increased scores, "it's a major step for some schools for their demographics."

Morehead said there were some positive aspects of the presentations. "I got a chance to meet some people as they presented their styles and skills."

He said he also enjoyed plans to work on team building with parents and efforts to work with the diverse influx of families.

Heading the presentations, West introduced the theme of promoting pride in citizens and staff members in his goals and objectives. He also is seeking to improve the climate of teaching and learning with the successful passage of a bond referendum to support construction projects as the outcome expected.

Accomplishments of last year's goals included promoting understanding of minority relationships through recommendations of a minority task force; fostering communication with teachers and students through teacher and student advisory councils; identifying trends and issues having a future impact on the schools with a futures task force, and fostering board effectiveness through orientation and workshops.

A partially completed goal of adopting a plan to improve communication with businesses, industries, Pitt Community College and East Carolina University will be continued this year.

Other goals among central office personnel were to be responsive to construction needs; to provide comprehensive insurance coverage; to review and update personnel policies; to implement Spanish in kindergarten through third grade and to identify a grouping plan for grades kindergarten through eight for 1989-90; to increase cooperative minority participation and to recruit, employ and maintain an adequate pool of bus drivers; to develop a model for predicting high risk students and to increase information flow.

In addition to promoting pride in attendance areas and in individual schools, principals said they wanted to improve several areas including communication, language and reading skills which would be reflective on the California Achievement Test; to implement assertive discipline; to improve math CAT scores; to improve teaching and learning in science; to improve attendance and to improve thinking skills.

ECU-City Breakfast

Approximately 40 officials from the city and East Carolina University gathered at 7:30 a.m. today at the Willis Building in another of the "breakfast sessions" designed to enhance communication and to discuss mutual concerns between the two entities.

Officials discussed topics including the upcoming parent's day at ECU, the Mayor's Community Involvement Association and the recent traffic light signalization at 10th Street and College Hill Drive.

ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin thanked the city for sharing with the university weather forecasts obtained through Greenville Utilities and also indicated ECU officials are in the process of considering a city proposal relating to the acquisition of a parking lot at Fifth and Reade Streets.

Report Shows Family Units Declining

children, but these were more than offset by the decline in those with three or more.

— There are 21.9 million one-person households, up 20 percent from 1980. Women account for six out of every 10 people living alone.

— Unmarried couples living together totaled 2.6 million, up 63 percent from 1980. Some 31 percent of these couples have children at home.

— The median age at which women marry for the first time is 23.6 years, the same as last year and the highest on record. For men, first marriage occurs at 25.9 years, tying 1900 as the highest in this century.

The youngest median marriage ages were 22.5 for men in 1959 and 20.1 for women in 1956.

These steadily rising ages at first marriage reflect the tendency in recent years of young people to postpone marriage, the bureau reports, noting that the number has been rising steadily for both men and women.

"Some of these young and middle-aged adults have postponed their initial entry into marriage in order to further their formal education or establish themselves in a career. Others may face serious economic uncertainties or have less focused goals that conflict with making a commitment to marriage," Rawlings reported.

The average household in the United States, the report observes, has fallen to just 2.64 persons, with the typical family consisting of 3.17 persons — "these averages have never been lower."

homelessness — especially the supply of low-income housing, income maintenance, the availability of support services, and access to health care for the poor and uninsured."

Dr. Frank Press, director of the National Academy of Sciences, blocked publication of a supplemental statement signed by 10 of the panel members. He was quoted in The New York Times today as saying he did so because "the language was charged and polemical and emotional."

He said the academy has the obligation to "stick to the data and minimize the intrusion of values as much as possible."

The published report's recommendations include a list of largely non-controversial proposals covering eligibility standards, training and program expansions.

The report calls, for instance, for improved day care and Head Start programs and efforts to make homeless parents aware of the help available for their children. It recommends that food stamps be allowed to be used in restaurants so people who don't have kitchens can use them to save money.

But deleted, said Vladeck, were calls for restoring a 70 percent cut in low-income housing support since 1981, new treatment services for the mentally ill and substance abusers, and an increase in the minimum wage to make adequate housing affordable.

The study did include, however, an appendix which blamed the growing number of rural homeless on the failure of government policymakers to recognize the extent of the rural economic crisis.

Farm foreclosures, foreign competition that has wiped out low-wage rural manufacturing jobs and the downturn in energy industries have bred increased rural poverty and homelessness, says the report by consultant Larry T. Patton.

The report said there are no national studies pinning down the numbers of homeless children, but it uses the most conservative of several estimates to conclude that each night at least 100,000 children are in families that must resort to streets, organized shelters or makeshift quarters.

It cites estimates of the Alliance Housing Council, a homeless advocacy group, that there are 735,000 homeless on any given night and concludes that at least a quarter of them are members of families and 55 percent of the family members are children.

Also approved was a $6,900 contract with the East Carolina University Bureau of Business Research for an analysis and recommendations regarding the city's computer system.

A study analysis of the city's IBM System 38 Model 200 was requested by the council after several members cited concern over the lack of progress in implementing software and unexpected additional hardware costs.

ECU computer expert Michael E. McLeod told council members the analysis will include an assessment of the availability and usability of public domain software for major applications, a comparison of the costs of identified commercial software with public domain software, and the development of a four-year budget showing costs of identified software, hardware and personnel training costs.

The council also awarded a $16,000 architectural services contract to Dudley, Shoe, Ellinwood and Associates for the design of renovation and repairs to Guy Smith Stadium. The firm has agreed to produce an architectural design to make the stadium fully functional. Included in the design will be an outline of necessary actions regarding any demolition, additional plumbing and electrical improvements.

In other matters, the council approved an agreement for use with the Greenville Jaycees to allow a city-owned house at 1121 Evans St. be used for a "haunted house" fund-raising project from Sept. 19 to Nov. 18, and approved a resolution exempting Greenville Utilities from state laws regulating bidding procedures for the acquisition of natural gas.

A New Road To Recovery From Alcohol And Drugs Is Now Open On Recovery Road In Tarboro.

Announcing The Opening Of Mary Frances Center.

North Carolina's newest, and most complete, alcohol and chemical dependency treatment facility is now open at 1212 Recovery Road in Tarboro.

Mary Frances Center is designed to treat individuals as well as their families. Because the most successful recoveries require both patients and their families to begin recovery together. That is why we are the only substance abuse facility in North Carolina to offer separate facilities and programs for our patients and their loved ones.

But our new and beautiful medical complex is only part of the story. Our staff is the heart and soul of our program. These highly qualified professionals have undergone extensive training for the treatment of addictive diseases. More importantly, many are recovering alcoholics and addicts themselves and therefore, are able to share experience and insights. They can provide the medical support, love and counseling needed to help patients begin traveling on the road to recovery.

The $100 per student cost of the intervention program, Hemingway said, is paid for by donations collected by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Commissioners Monday also instructed Dr. Tim Monroe, director of the Pitt County Health Department, to talk with consultants and recommend someone to develop a medical plan for the jail.

Monroe told the board that the family medicine department of East Carolina University's Medical School may provide service at the jail "once a plan is in place." Monroe estimated that it would cost between $3,000 and $5,000 to hire a consultant to develop a jail medical plan and oversee its implementation.

Hard Road To Success For Seoul

Despite some controversy over disqualifications, the Seoul Olympics are proceeding with great success.

South Korea had prepared thoroughly to receive the world's most outstanding amateur athletes. Despite threats from within the country to disrupt the events, and concern that North Korea might, the finest facilities were prepared and security was carefully planned.

Now the Olympics are not only demonstrating the accomplishments of these great young athletes, it is also showcasing the incredible progress of South Korea in building from the devastation of the war between South and North Korea which ended in 1953.

The story has been told prior to, and during, the Olympics on television news and talk shows and in many publications. And it is a story like no other nation has to tell. South Korea was virtually destroyed by war in 1953. It only had the spirit of its people to build upon. It was different even from Japan and Germany following World War II. Those nations had known industrial might and it was a matter of rebuilding from the ashes of war.

Korea, on the other hand, had been a country occupied by the Japanese through World War II. When the country was divided, the industry was mostly in the north with the south an agrarian economy. When North Korea swept into South Korea destruction was almost complete. When the tide turned the war moved northward with still more destruction. Eventually the truce established a line generally along the 38th parallel where the war began.

South Korea had little to build on and less to build with as the uneasy truce which still exists, settled in. Nearly unnoticed in the shadow of the booming Japanese economy, South Korea built its industrial strength and its quality of life. While it lacks something in becoming an ideal democracy it must be noted it is a country of high security because a state of war still exists with its relatives to the north.

Now, within the framework of this strife-torn nation's history, the drama of international Olympic competition is unfolding for the world to see. The struggles that dominate Seoul now are athletic contests — supreme tests of skill and endurance. The combat is often one-on-one and the weapons are excellence and desire for the gold.

Except for North Korea, no one could wish South Korea anything but success in its role as host to the 1988 Summer Olympics. This is a proud nation which was prepared well to stage the Olympics. It also has much to show the world about rising from the ashes of war to become a land of economic vitality.

The Humanities: An Endangered Species

Lynne Cheney gave it the old college try last week. In her report to Congress on the state of the humanities in America, the chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities bent over backward to demonstrate that there is good news as well as bad — that countless Americans "are increasingly finding in the 'good arts' a source of enrichment for themselves and their society." Perhaps — indeed it is devoutly to be wished — this is so; but it is scarcely insignificant that the most persuasive parts of Cheney's report are those in which she accentuates the negative.

The most immediate evidence is in student enrollment. "In 1965-66," Cheney writes, "one of every six college students was majoring in the humanities. In 1985-86, the figure was one in 16; one in every four students, by contrast, was majoring in business." As she suggests, this is not entirely the colleges' fault; students arrive on campus with a disposition to major in subjects that will advance their careers, and they come from high schools in which little serious emphasis has been placed on literature, history, philosophy or languages.

But higher education does precious little to direct them to the humanities. Cheney reports that it is possible to earn a bachelor's degree without taking a single history course at 37 percent of American colleges and universities, also notes the concomitant rise of specialization, of an academic system that honors picayune research more than the "humanistic content" of literature and history. She quotes three anonymous responses to a recent questionnaire circulated among historians: "Our field has too many books that ought to have been footnotes," and "Our discipline is excessively compartmentalized and irrelevant except to our own diminishing numbers," and "The level of specialization increases, while the significance of research moves toward the vanishing point."

The effect of all this is to circle the wagons around the humanities departments and leave the rest of the world outside. Why should students want to study literature in an English department that emphasizes special-interest interpretations of fiction and poetry, rejects the very notion of reading for pleasure and enrichment, and encourages its professors and graduate students in the minute study of deconstruction, semiotics and related arcana? What has any of this to do with the old notion, now apparently discredited, of the educated man or woman? One might as well just skip English and history and head straight for the dollar sign at the business school.

However dire this may seem, it is not an exaggerated reading of the situation at too many American colleges and universities, and Cheney is correct to emphasize it as strongly as she does in her report. Because it is in college that educated Americans receive — or should receive — their most concentrated exposure to the humanities, the state of the humanities on campus is obviously central to their condition in the culture at large. Still, Cheney manages to find evidence that even when the humanities are not honored in their own house, they have found homes elsewhere; here she seems to be straining to find good news, even when her own evidence suggests there is precious little of it.

She finds hope, for example, in television, in particular in cable, in public broadcasting and in videocassettes. Certainly it is true that these alternatives to the broadcast networks have increased the possibilities for people to watch films and other programs slightly more distinguished than "Dallas" and "Wheel of Fortune," but whether those possibilities are actually being realized is another matter altogether.

On cable, only the Arts & Entertainment channel offers cultural programming on more than a local or regional basis, and that programming is spotty at best; public television is in the grasp of the ratings monster and seems to be going commercial as fast as it can; and a tour through any video store can leave no doubt that tapes of the sort Cheney finds compatible with the humanities are, to put it mildly, a minority taste.

And there's the rub: There may have been a rise in what Cheney calls "the public humanities," but its following among the general population is so small as to be minuscule. There is ample evidence that higher education is defaulting on its obligations, but far less that other institutions have moved in to assume its role in any genuinely significant way. By any reasonable standard, the humanities in America are, individually and collectively, endangered species; Cheney is to be applauded for her effort to call them to our attention, but I can find little reason to share her optimism.

'One might as well just skip English and history and head straight for the dollar sign at the business school.'

without taking any courses in English or American literature at 45 percent, without a single philosophy course at 62 percent, and without studying a foreign language at an astonishing 77 percent. This is, on the part of higher education, an unconscionable capitulation to the academic fashions of the age: the careerism that characterizes undergraduate and graduate students alike, the abandonment of the so-called core curriculum in the wake of the '60s and '70s student rebellions, and the emphasis within the arts and humanities departments on research and publication over teaching.

Cheney does not concern herself with the first two of these lamentable trends, but she gives due attention to the third. As she should, she emphasizes the obvious point that teaching is undervalued: "The kind of teaching that will bring students to a love for the humanities is difficult to evaluate. It is much easier to count publications than to credit the engagement that good teachers have with texts, much easier to judge whether a faculty member has written a sufficient number of articles than whether he or she reveals to students by example and through questioning how and why it is that learning matters to life."

More than this, Cheney is at pains to point out that the politicization of the humanities has had dire effects on both the curriculum and the ways in which it is taught; she quotes R.W.B. Lewis of Yale as lamenting the rise of "politics with the history left out and, indeed, politics with the literature left out." She

Solidarity Moves Toward Cooperation With Polish Government

WARSAW, Poland — The banned Solidarity trade union has chosen to move toward cooperation with the communist leadership of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, hoping that the momentum of Poland's latest reform process eventually will make political and trade-union pluralism inevitable despite official assertions that the union's reinstatement is impossible.

In a dramatic six-hour meeting Friday that marked a turning point in relations between government and opposition, Solidarity's leadership decided to accept Jaruzelski's plan for an ambitious "roundtable" of negotiations on future political and economic reforms even after party leaders had bluntly ruled out the restoration of free trade unions in the near future.

In doing so, the union appeared to accept the argument of Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, the leader of the government initiative, that while a "pro-reform coalition" could bring major economic and political changes to Poland, the breakdown of the process now would only perpetuate Poland's political impasse of the last seven years and invite a new national crisis.

"Everyone in the hall was acutely aware that within weeks we could have a new, huge wave of strikes and protests that would risk an economic catastrophe," said Wladyslaw Frasnyniuk, a Solidarity leader who participated in the talks.

At the same time, veteran Soliarity leader Lech Walesa and other key union strategists concluded that the process of negotiation, with the mobilization of workers and stimulation of public expectations that is likely to accompany it, may propel Jaruzelski's leadership into a situation where it can no longer refuse Solidarity.

Already, Solidarity leaders said Saturday, the union has made the remarkable gain of winning recognition as a major social force from the same communist leaders who suppressed it under martial law seven years ago and denied its existence until this month.

In a dramatic speech at Friday's meeting, Solidarity participants said, deputy Politburo member and national alliance chief Stanislaw Ciosek declared that simply staging the talks with a 10-member Solidarity delegation showed that authorities recognize the union.

"Look what is happening here, Frasnyniuk and Kiszczak are talking," Ciosek reportedly declared at one point, referring to the much-jailed chief of Solidarity's Wroclaw chapter. "Who would have imagined that would have happened two or three years ago?"

Walesa and most of the other union delegates stressed their demand that the authorities declare their willingness to consider Solidarity's reactivation before broader negotiations get under way.

"We can talk about everything" at the roundtable, "but we want to have an identity in those talks," Walesa said, according to Frasnyniuk. "We want only a declaration and truly that's not too much — it's only a matter of good will."

Ciosek and Kiszczak replied that the declaration could not be made because opposition in the lower-level party apparatus was too strong. Ciosek said "the cadres of police and the military are very afraid of the symbol that is Solidarity," according to Frasnyniuk, who read from extensive notes he took at the session. "He said this apparatus was afraid that if Solidarity would be legalized, it would be flooded with members."

The Solidarity delegates heard some direct evidence of the hard-line opposition at Friday's meeting as delegates from the official, communist-backed trade unions stood one after the other to denounce the idea of trade-union pluralism.

Remarkably, however, several members of the government group, including Jan Janowski, the delegate of the communist-allied Democratic Party, Jan Szczepanski, a prominent sociologist, and Mieczyslaw Krajewski, an official trade union lawyer, spoke in support of Solidarity.

Kiszczak, who was instrumental in the imposition of martial law to suppress Solidarity after 16 tumultuous months of legal existence in December 1981, told the union delegation that "he sees a place for Solidarity in this country, but ... his hands are tied," Frasnyniuk said. Kiszczak, he said, asked the opposition leaders "to believe that the authorities have the intention to introduce deep reforms" and that Solidarity's reactivation is "a question of time."

Solidarity generally has been skeptical of the value of those steps as well as of a "national patriotic council" that Jaruzelski has proposed as a way of institutionalizing the government-opposition dialogue. The union's view is that as long as it lacks legal recognition as an independent movement, it would be unable to participate in the proposed "reform coalition" in a meaningful way.

By agreeing to go forward with the talks, then, Solidarity is betting less on the government's planned reforms than on the guess that as a hard winter draws nearer, its bargaining power is sure to grow. "The government had to reverse itself to talk to Walesa," said Adam Michnik, a top opposition strategist.

"Then it had to reverse itself again to talk to a Solidarity delegation, because the position until yesterday was 'Walesa yes, but Solidarity no.' My expectation is that the authorities have started something they now cannot control, and in the next months we will see a final reversal of position that will bring the legality of Solidarity."

In Siberia, Gorbachev Finding Perestroika A Hard Sell

ings that the people themselves have to work harder and work smarter. "People have this kind of mood — that 'for us, nothing is changing, and the thing's not going to succeed,'" Gorbachev said in his concluding speech Friday. "Well, first of all, comrades, perestroika is a serious thing, a profound thing, touching the whole country, all spheres of our life. It's not a routine renovation, not a paint job, not a change of wallpaper....

"We can't have illusions, and I think we knew that when we started perestroika," he said. "And we understand now that the next few years will be the most complex and difficult of all."

As Gorbachev jetted around the vast Krasnoyarsk territory, larger than Alaska and Texas combined, citizens seemed already to be only too aware of the difficulties.

In one memorable exchange that seemed to sum up the enduring frustrations of the Soviet economy, a bearded, middle-aged man in Norilsk, 200 miles north of the Arctic circle, told Gorbachev that residents had to travel thousands of miles to semi-tropical Central Asia to buy warm clothes.

Others shared stories about empty food shops, polluted water, poor working conditions and a severe shortage of housing.

For cooperatives — the profit-making enterprises burgeoning under the economic reforms — there were only accusations of price-gauging. Gorbachev was forced to concede: "Five times as much as the state price is outrageous."

Repeatedly, however, he threw the responsibility for improvement back at the complainers.

"People keep coming to me and saying, 'Mikhail Sergeevich, do something,'" he said at one point. "But it's time to abandon czars and dictators."

To another group he rejected suggestions that he hunt down the enemies of reform and purge them, Stalin-style: "You can't apply the methods of 1937."

In the opinion of a number of Soviet and foreign observers, Gorbachev's tour was largely an exercise in reality therapy. "He wants people to know it's going to be a long, hard road, and he doesn't want them to look to Moscow to make everything happen," said one foreign resident.

Even as Gorbachev measured the slow progress of economic change in the hinterland, other challenges to his political skills were reappearing in the form of Armenian and Estonian nationalism.

Just as he flew to Siberia Monday after a six-week vacation, a renewed strike shut down much of Nagorno-Karabakh, the disputed mostly-Armenian territory seeking a transfer to Armenia from neighboring Azerbaijan.

A sympathy strike closed many plants in the Armenia capital of Yerevan. Having already resorted to troops, arrests and threats to stop the strike in July, the Kremlin was said to be holding quiet negotiations with the Karabakh committee, which has been directing the protest movement.

In Estonia, a massive outpouring of nationalist sentiment, so far tolerated by the new Communist Party leadership in the republic, was spilling over into the beginnings of an independence movement.

So far, few political observers in the capital believe that the combination of economic and nationality problems pose a political threat to Gorbachev's survival in office in the short run.

But in an article published last week by writer and Gorbachev adviser Fyodor Burlatsky in Literaturnaya Gazeta, some read a hint of a warning of the political perils the Soviet leader faces.

Burlatsky, a speech writer for Nikita S. Khrushchev, offered a fascinating insider's account of the ouster of Khrushchev in 1964 by a group of conservative party officials with the support of the KGB.

Khrushchev's de-Stalinization campaign and attempts at reform are now often portrayed as forerunners of Gorbachev's programs, so the analogy was not likely to be lost on Soviet readers.

timacy rarely seen with a traveling U.S. president nowadays.

The contrast with previous Soviet leaders' style was unmistakable. "When (Leonid I.) Brezhnev travelled, people stood in rows, smiled and waved 'flags,'" remarked a young teacher after watching Gorbachev's performance Monday night.

But the symbolism cut both ways. Half-way through his fourth year in office, Gorbachev was hearing not about the glorious successes of his reforms but about old, painful and sometimes worsening problems. He was replying not with promises of dramatic intervention from the capital, but with warn-

Old Ways

WASHINGTON — At a moment when Americans are pondering who might best consolidate the gains with the Soviet Union made by Ronald Reagan, it is useful to be reminded that no matter who is chosen on this side, the going is bound to be slow on the other. This is the burden of an absorbing and level-headed report on Mikhail Gorbachev and the Soviet military put out by chairman Les Aspin's House Armed Services Committee.

The report, based on the summer testimony of top intelligence officials and outside experts, underlines the painfully wide gap between Gorbachev's widely hailed "new thinking" and the military's tendency to do things the old way. For instance, defense spending so far on his watch appears to have gone up.

Of course it's early, and these things move slowly. And Soviet military officials do seem to have supported Gorbachev's economic reforms to keep their country strong and competitive in high tech. But the military perestroika, or restructuring, which these officials support in their own realm, is a very pale copy, pointing less toward Gorbachev's goals of a market economy and substantial defense savings than toward much more familiar ways.

The Gorbachev approach, after all, can only affront a traditional military establishment. His evident strategy is to make the Soviet Union more secure by political means, in the first instance by using arms-control negotiations to trim the "threat" that the United States poses to the Soviet Union. This is how he means to reduce the "great burden" of a defense sector that consumes nearly three times the share of GNP given over to defense in the United States and that takes an even larger bite in some crucial sectors.

Would we recognize real Soviet military reform if we saw it? The markers suggested in the Armed Services report make for sober reading. Progress in conventional arms control would be essential, but the West appears to be scandalously slow — far behind Moscow — in preparing for talks. Unilateral Soviet force reductions? Moscow officials are dug in deep against them.

I conclude from all of this that we have done, or started to do, some of the easier things, which is natural when you're starting, and that the next things that need to be done are harder. These include a treaty on reducing strategic arms, which the Reagan administration has been unable to complete, and an agreement on cutting conventional arms, which this administration has been unable even to start. We can't allow our general feeling of hope that the East-West ice is breaking to obscure our view of the difficult terrain that lies ahead.

Whitaker To Retire

MURFREESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Bruce E. Whitaker, president of Chowan College for the past 31 years, announced Monday that he will retire on June 30.

Whitaker, who has led the two-year, liberal arts Baptist college since 1957, made the announcement at the close of a meeting of the college's Board of Trustees.

An eight-member search committee hopes to name a successor before Whitaker steps down.

In an interview with the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star, Whitaker, 67, said he had considered retiring for "a couple of years," but decided to leave next spring because of the college's strong fiscal position.

"I'd rather go out now when things are going well," he said, "than wait until times are bad and have people say, 'The old fogey should get lost.'"

Among his chief accomplishments, Whitaker cited his ability to retain capable administrators and faculty, as well as to keep the college in the black.

ARRIVES AT JAIL — Accused hostage-taker Eddie Hatcher, left, is accompanied by a U.S. marshal to the Cumberland County jail in Fayetteville Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

Hatcher Grabbed At Airport While En Route To Hearing

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former fugitive Eddie Hatcher is back in the hands of federal authorities, but so far, they can only guess as to where the accused hostage-taker had been hiding for almost three weeks.

"Over the rainbow," Hatcher said Monday when asked of his whereabouts since his disappearance Aug. 31.

"I had a vacation. I feel real good," Hatcher said as he was taken into Cumberland County Law Enforcement Center in Fayetteville. "It's time to overthrow the government."

Hatcher, 30, accused of holding up to 20 hostages at the Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1, was arrested Monday afternoon as he and an attorney arrived on a Piedmont Airlines flight from Newark, N.J., just minutes before his scheduled arraignment on charges of holding hostages at a newspaper office.

The attorney, Ronald Kuby of New York, also declined to say where Hatcher had been.

"He's been around," Kuby said. "I imagine he's been somewhere."

U.S. Marshal Bill Berryhill said authorities did not know where Hatcher had been, but planned to interview him.

"It's rather academic at this point, but yet from an investigator's standpoint, tying up our investigation, we need to try to find out where he's been," he said.

Hatcher decided to surrender after the arraignment date was announced last week, Kuby said.

"Following the setting of the arraignment date, Mr. Hatcher informed me that he wanted to return to surrender to be present at that date, and we implemented that," he said.

Airport security officers grabbed Hatcher and frisked him in a covered passageway just outside the airplane door. A security officer guarded the door into the terminal while officers cuffed Hatcher's hands behind his back and led him to a car waiting on the tarmac.

While Hatcher was being taken into custody at the airport, his case was called in a federal courtroom in downtown Raleigh.

"We notified them this morning to watch all flights coming into Raleigh-Durham because we felt like with his arraignment today he might come in," Berryhill said. He said marshals had no tips that Hatcher would return to Raleigh Monday.

Hatcher's sister, Ginger Clark, watched through an airport window as officials led her brother out of the plane and down a stairway to the waiting car.

She sobbed, pounded on the window and waved in an attempt to get her brother's attention as reporters and photographers stood around her. Hatcher looked up and smiled at her.

Aaron Clark, who had rented a limousine to take his brother to the arraignment, grimaced when he saw his brother in custody.

"I knew it, I knew it," he said.

Hatcher, who was born John Edward Clark, adopted his grandfather's family name after the elder man died in 1985.

Kuby said he had been "physically assaulted" at the airport by a State Bureau of Investigation agent. Kuby said that the agent hit him in the chest twice while he was standing outside an office where Hatcher was being held.

"This is what's known as keeping a promise by the U.S. government," Kuby said of Hatcher's arrest. "This is dirty double dealing that I've become accustomed to throughout this whole case."

"We were told that he would be permitted to surrender, permitted to walk into court, and that he wouldn't be handcuffed," Kuby said.

A U.S. marshal drove Hatcher to the Cumberland County Jail in Fayetteville, about 60 miles south of Raleigh, arriving about 5:30 p.m.

U.S. District Judge Terrence Boyle entered plea of innocent on Hatcher's behalf, and set his trial to begin Sept. 26, the same day that Hatcher's co-defendant, Timothy Jacobs, is scheduled to stand trial.

Chapel Hill attorney Barry Nakell, who is helping to represent Hatcher, said he asked court officials to continue the case until after Oct. 10, when lead attorney William Kunstler of New York is expected to be available.

That motion was denied, but Nakell said he would continue to pursue a delay in Hatcher's trial until Kunstler was available.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bruce said Boyle had ruled Aug. 1 that Hatcher and Jacobs would begin trial no later than Sept. 26, "regardless of the availability of counsel."

Hatcher, 30, disappeared Aug. 31 after the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals revoked his bond. He was declared a fugitive after failing to surrender to U.S. marshals in Raleigh.

Grandma Leads All Scorers

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Dorothy Bellavia left high school 35 years ago, but her distance from formal education didn't seem to matter much when she sat down to take a high-school equivalency test.

"I was very surprised when the results came in," she said. "I was afraid I would not even pass."

Mrs. Bellavia, 53, a grandmother who lives in Alexander, scored the highest of the 57,000 people taking the Graduate Equivalency Diploma test in North Carolina last year.

Mrs. Bellavia scored 357 of a possible 375 points. She was the oldest person to take the test on Sept. 15, 1987.

She received a national award earlier this month from the American Council on Education for her achievement while the State Board of Community Colleges was in Asheville for a meeting.

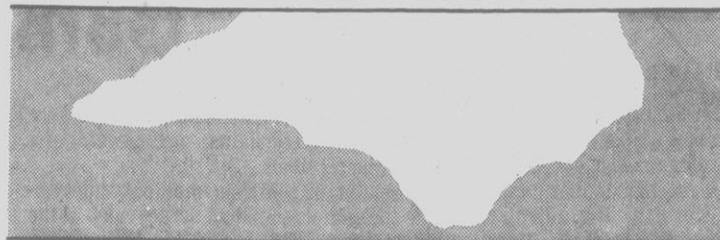

Mrs. Bellavia credited her husband, Jerome, with whom she shares an insurance business, for supporting her in taking the test.

The award hangs on a wall above Jerome Bellavia's desk along with the insurance awards he has received.

"I always wanted to go back to school and finish," said Mrs. Bellavia, a native of Niagra Falls, N.Y. "I had always loved school. It did not matter as much then not getting a degree as it does now."

"The children had always thought she had graduated," her husband said. "They were surprised when they saw the award."

The cocaine was the largest ever single seizure of the drug in western North Carolina, said Buncombe County Sheriff's Deputy Thomas James.

James retrieved the 18-by-18-inch cooler from the lake's edge Sunday after receiving a tip from an informant, he said.

Politics Is Factor In Resolving State Ports' Problems

Last Of A Three-Part Series

RALEIGH (AP) — While the Council of State and a number of state legislators probe the State Ports Authority for weak spots in the wake of a $116,000 loss last year, the call is out in some quarters to remove politics from the ports' operations.

"I would hope that as time goes on, some of the procedures we have to go through will be lifted or we'll be given more authority to act as other ports do," Noel E. Painchaud, the authority's new executive director, told the Wilmington Morning Star. "When we have a window of opportunity fly open ... red tape can cause us to lose that customer."

The red tape is a product of the SPA's hybrid structure. It is both a board-driven entity and a division of the state Department of Commerce under the direction of the commerce secretary and, in turn, the governor.

The very nature of that set-up is political.

"If we keep the ports under the auspices of the governor's office, there's no way to take the politics out of that," said state Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover. "When you set it up that way, there's going to be a minimum of positions that are filled based on the party or political patronage."

Gov. Jim Martin argued last week that the ports have been a victim of past political posturing. The Democratic administration of former Gov. Jim Hunt, he said, "would only spend what they make," he said. "If you only do things in terms of what money you can make, you can't expand the facilities at (the ports). We want to serve the manufacturers and businesses of North Carolina."

William M.A. Greene said he felt the tug of political strings during his eight years as SPA executive director under the Hunt administration.

"I was a Democratic bureaucrat because I had to keep an office in Raleigh so there wouldn't be political disharmony" between the ports of Wilmington and Morehead City, he said.

Eventually, Greene said, politics forced him out of the job. After Republican Jim Martin was elected governor in 1984, newly appointed members of the SPA board of directors asked him to retire in 1985, Greene said, because they saw him as a political appointee — a charge he denies. Rather than retire, he resigned.

Three years later, he offers a proposal for restructuring the SPA that he thinks would eliminate some of that kind of political pressure. Georgia's State Ports Authority and its relationship with state government is Greene's model.

First, Greene would cut the 11-member board of directors to seven — three appointed by the governor, two by the House of Representatives and two by the Senate. The governor now appoints seven members, including the chairman and vice chairman. The General Assembly appoints the remaining four members, and the commerce secretary serves as secretary of the board.

"I'd get the ports authority away from the secretary of anything," Greene said. "Let them operate as an independent enterprise where the director reports to the board and the board to the Council of State."

The director, who now is appointed by the commerce secretary, should be hired by the board, Greene said, and should report at least once a quarter to the Council of State, which consists of the governor, lieutenant governor and eight other top elected officials.

Board member L. Sneed High, a Fayetteville lawyer who has served under both Hunt and Martin, said giving the board the power to hire and fire the SPA's director would make the director more responsive to the board.

"I've felt that instead of having any real input into the operation, that I was just a rubber stamp," he said. "... I like to ask questions. Sometimes I don't get sharp answers."

Greene also would free the SPA from the state's purchasing regulations, a suggestion another former SPA executive director applauds. Getting even small purchases approved under the existing system can take months.

"We're supposed to operate as a business, but we have to go through the same procedures as a school system," said William Edwards, who headed the SPA for three years after Greene left. "Our engineers can go out and get bids and ... review the contracts. Who would know better than them? Someone from Raleigh who doesn't know the bow from the stern of a ship?"

Bob Mack of Cape Industries, former president of the North Carolina World Trade Association, said he would take a different tack by adding a trade position to the state cabinet.

"We just don't have one institution that provides guidance in international trade," he said. "The ports have been carrying that ball alone too long."

In hiring Painchaud, a newcomer to North Carolina who is removed from the state's political network, many believe the state already has taken a healthy step toward minimizing politics at the ports.

"We're delighted they chose Noel Painchaud instead of some political appointee," said Roy Stevens, a consultant for the Morehead City Port Committee, a group of local maritime interests. "He's been making some important contacts that will help the port."

Further changes undoubtedly will involve the Legislature, the very group that many place at the root of some of the ports' problems.

A legislative study committee, co-chaired by Hall and state Sen. Frank Block, D-New Hanover, is expected to begin meeting this month to examine the status of the ports and international trade in the state.

North Carolina is lagging behind other Southeastern states in port development because it has failed to understand the enormous natural and economic resource of its ports, Hall said. Because of that failure, legislators from eastern North Carolina spent much of the General Assembly's 1987 session trying to teach western legislators enough about the state ports to win support for the $36 million appropriation the SPA received for expansion.

Many legislators never truly understood the magnitude of the state's ports until they visited Wilmington for a weekend during last year's session of the General Assembly.

"A lot of legislators think this is just a podunk facility where you tie your boat up and fishing vessels come in," said Joe Augustine, executive vice president of the Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce.

Years of squabbling between the Wilmington and Morehead City delegations over which port received the biggest slice of the state's pie also alienated many legislators.

That squabbling was never worse than in 1979, when the SPA board decided to move Morehead City's only container crane to Wilmington because it had remained virtually idle during its two years at the Carteret County port. Morehead legislators failed to block the crane move and vowed that Gov. Hunt — who supported the change — would face hostile voters in the Morehead area when he sought re-election in 1980.

High, who served more than 10 years in the General Assembly, blames the squabbling for much of the indifference some legislators still feel toward the ports.

"When they were starting with the cranes ... there were some very powerful senators from there at the time ... and they were more concerned with battling between themselves," he said. "Most of the people felt that it was really political."

As a result, the Legislature hasn't been as willing as those in other states to pour money into the ports. But persistence by eastern legislators during the 1987 session began to turn that around.

"I don't think the state Legislature thinks the state port is a Wilmington or a New Hanover County asset," said state Rep. Harry E. Payne Jr., D-New Hanover, who has served in the General Assembly since 1981.

"There were some occasional perceptions that Wilmington and the Morehead City port were competing for the same goal because of the moving of the Morehead crane. But I think now that's just an old joke and not a political problem."

State Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, an 11-year veteran of the House, said he also has seen improvement, but he added that eastern legislators must be careful to keep the Wilmington-Morehead City rivalry from resurfacing.

Ethridge, whose district includes Morehead City, said disharmony was simmering even during the 1987 session, because most of the SPA's $44 million request was targeted for the Wilmington port.

Virginia Puts Tickets On Sale

By The Associated Press
Hundreds of North Carolinians are expected to venture northward today to buy lottery tickets on their first day of sales in Virginia, but North Carolina officials warn that Tar Heels might be taking a legal chance as well as a financial one.

In North Carolina, possessing a lottery ticket is a misdemeanor and carries a maximum $2,000 fine and six months in prison. State officials say the law will be enforced.

"Lately, we have gotten a lot of calls on the legality or illegality of playing the Virginia lottery," said North Carolina Assistant Attorney General David Hoke. "A lot are surprised to find that possession of a lottery ticket in this state is a crime."

While not encouraging lottery sales, North Carolina officials concede that buyers can avoid trouble by not bringing a lottery ticket home.

Animators Hanna-Barbera Celebrate 50th Anniversary

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A cat and a mouse first brought Bill Hanna and Joe Barbera together 50 years ago, and a whole menagerie helped them become television's foremost cartoon animators.

"We did every frame of the first 'Tom and Jerry' in 1939," said Barbera. "Then MGM decided we had exhausted all the story ideas about a cat and mouse. So for the next 20 years, all we did was turn out 'Tom and Jerry' cartoons."

The "Tom and Jerry" cartoons won seven Academy Awards, more than any other series with the same characters. Jerry's dance with Gene Kelly in "Anchors Aweigh" has become a screen classic.

"Then they folded the animation department, and Joe and I were out of work," said Hanna. "We set up our own studio at our homes and went to work. The first thing we did was 'Ruff and Reddy.'"

In the 30 years since, Hanna-Barbera has filled the television screen with such animated series as "The Flintstones," "Yogi Bear," "Huckleberry Hound and Friends," "Top Cat," "Scooby-Doo," "Johnny Quest," "The Jetsons" and "Animal Follies." Fred Flintstone's "yabba dabba doo" and Yogi's "smarter than the average bear" entered the language.

Hanna-Barbera has received eight Emmys, including the Governors Award of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences presented last month. They were awarded a "Just Say No" commendation from first lady Nancy Reagan for an ABC special last week.

Their first effort for television was shown to Harry Cohn, then the head of Columbia Pictures.

"We did a pencil test of 'Ruff and Reddy,'" said Barbera. "We photographed the pencil sketches and screened it for Cohn. He didn't know what a pencil test was. He walked out and told an assistant to get rid of us. Fortunately, the assistant ignored the order, and we did 52 shorts for a Saturday morning show."

They knew the times had changed when the budget for their first television show was $2,800. The "Tom and Jerry" cartoons had cost $50,000 each.

Neither the white-haired Hanna nor the dark-haired Barbera had set out to be cartoonists. Hanna studied engineering and journalism in his native New Mexico. He got into animation in 1931 when he needed work. Barbera, who grew up in Brooklyn, first entered banking but soon turned his doodles into magazine cartoons and then into a job as an animator.

The original name of "The Flintstones" was "The Flagstones," but the couple in the "Hi and Lois" newspaper comic strip was named Flagston.

"I think it worked out better because 'The Flintstones' is a better name," said Barbera. "When we came up with 'Yogi Bear' they tried to stop us because there was a honeybear on a box of cereal. We wouldn't have done 'Tom and Jerry' if we'd listened to people."

Their most widely accepted cartoon series has been "The Flintstones," which Hanna readily admits was a pre-historic parody of Jackie Gleason and Art Carney in "The Honeymooners," just as Yogi Bear resembled Phil Silvers as Sgt. Bilko in "You'll Never Get Rich."

"You can read a lot into it," said Hanna. "You can compare Fred and Barney Rubble with Gleason and Carney."

Barbera added: "We had a lot of pre-historic and animal gags. The show really took off when Wilma had a baby and we had a contest to name the baby. The Ideal Toy Co. called and asked what the baby was going to be. I said, 'A boy, of course. A chip off the old rock.'"

"The man from the toy company said if we'd make it a girl he'd give us a lucrative contract for dolls. We changed it to a girl on the spot. We had the contest and the baby became Pebbles."

Hanna and Barbera have selected their personal favorites and will release six 90-minute videocassettes. "Tom and Jerry" will not be on the videos because the rights are owned by Turner Broadcasting System. However, the cartoon is coming full circle. Hanna-Barbera will do a full-length motion picture cartoon of "Tom and Jerry." The script has been completed and it will go into production in a few years, after the studio completes a feature film of "The Jetsons."

"Yogi Bear" is now a daily show being syndicated to about 80 percent of the nation.

Comic Has 'Female' Mom Role

L.A. Times-Washington Post
HOLLYWOOD — Roseanne Barr will break some new TV ground this season.

"I'm, like, the first mom on TV that ever was female," said the star of ABC's new sitcom "Roseanne," in a characteristically scathing whine. "Usually on TV shows and stuff the mom's dead or the dad acts like the mom."

Big and brash, Barr is about to blow TV mom convention to kingdom come.

Though this is clearly a domestic comedy, Barr's biting, blue-collar barbs set "Roseanne" far apart from its historically cutesy counterparts.

"I mean I just really hate 'I Love Lucy,'" she said in a recent interview here. "I could never take that Lucy had to beg her husband for five lousy bucks ... and then she tries to get in on his act and he humiliates her."

But Barr does not go for the mean-spirited low blows of Fox Broadcasting's "Married ... With Children" (She turned down the co-starring role on the show for that reason and because "it's not on a real network").

"The funniest stuff is the true stuff," said the mother of three, pointing to her heretofore blue-collar life.

Of course, now that she is a success and has her own series, she has a maid taking care of all that domestic drudgery.

"Sure do. Hell, yeah," she said. But does she have any fears she might be getting too far away from herself, from the Roseanne that led to "Roseanne"?

"Well, you know, I had 36 years of it," she said. "So I think I've got enough material stored away there."

Barr, who at one time worked as a window dresser, got her comic start as a cocky cocktail waitress in Denver — serving up one-liners to her customers along with their drinks.

Three years ago, she came to Los Angeles on her way to Seattle and stopped in at The Comedy Store.

"It was this dream-come-true night," she said. She did her "basic six" — her signature routine that she describes in short form, as, "Hi. I'm a housewife, domestic goddess. Then I tell jokes about my kids, then I talk about my husband and then I get off."

A somewhat more fleshed-out version of that routine was such a hit that George Schlatter, of "Laugh-In" fame, asked her to be in his ABC special, "Funny," the same night.

By the following Friday, she was on "The Tonight Show," the Ellis Island of stardom. Roseanne Barr had arrived.

Springsteen Highlights Seven-Hour Rights Concert

BY A.J. HOSTETLER
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bruce Springsteen teamed up with other major rockers in the first U.S. concert of a worldwide tour aimed at inspiring people to join Amnesty International's fight for human rights.

"You have the opportunity to use your freedom to help free others," said Springsteen, the closing act at Monday's sold-out performance at John F. Kennedy Stadium.

More than 75,000 people attended the 7½-hour show, concert officials said. No major problems were reported.

Joining Springsteen were Sting, Peter Gabriel, Tracy Chapman, Senegalese singer Youssou N'Dour, folk singer Joan Baez and saxophonist Branford Marsalis.

It wasn't the first time rock stars banded together for a good cause at the stadium. In 1985, the arena was the site of the U.S. half of the Live Aid concert to fight hunger.

Monday's concert opened with the entire group singing the reggae anthem, "Get Up, Stand Up." Baez followed with the the spiritual, "Oh, Freedom."

The crowd listened to N'Dour's brand of African rhythms and Chapman's songs of protest and lament. But it wasn't until Sting performed more familiar songs of his own and his former band, The Police, that the crowd began to respond.

Gabriel, the driving force behind the tour, reminded the crowd about the more serious aspects of the tour. Throwing his fist into the air, he sang "Biko," in memory of Steven Biko, the black South African political activist who died while imprisoned in the apartheid state.

Springsteen, a New Jersey native, was clearly the favorite, as calls for "Bruce" drowned out the audio from an animated video illustrating the tenets of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

London-based Amnesty International, which monitors human rights abuses and political prisoners, distributed literature and asked for signatures on petitions supporting the declaration. The organization, with a worldwide membership of 750,000, won the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize.

Amnesty International Executive Director Jack Healey said the group has collected about 500,000 signatures so far, and half of those attending the Philadelphia concert signed the Amnesty petition.

"Sign it, use it, believe in it," he encouraged the crowd.

Lisa Frohne, a 28-year-old homemaker from Brewster, N.Y., said the concert had galvanized her to start writing letters for Amnesty International.

"It enlightens you to what's going on. Day-to-day life makes you forget," she said. "A concert like this brings that out. It slaps you in the face."

But Jay Schwartz, a 46-year-old sales representative from Sicklerville, N.J., was skeptical about the concert's message reaching many people.

"It's good music. Most of them are political songs, but I don't think it's registering in people's heads," he said.

Houseman Still Going

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar-winning actor John Houseman may be about to turn 86, but he says he has no intention of retiring.

"I have tapered off a little, but I wouldn't know what to do with myself if I retired," said Houseman, whose birthday is Thursday. "I still have something to offer, even though the roles these days are usually small."

"But I'm 85 years old. I am not going to be offered the role of Romeo any more, or Juliet, for that matter. Yet the limited range I do play, I play well. My range is that of an old man, but what do you expect from someone who started acting at the age of 70?"

Houseman has three movies awaiting release, a soon-to-be-published autobiography, appearances in television commercials and exposure from the syndicated TV show "Paper Chase."

Whoopi Joins 'Star Trek' Cast

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Whoopi Goldberg plans to boldly go where no comedian-actress has gone before with a new role as an "alien humanoid hostess" in the "Star Trek: The Next Generation" television series.

Miss Goldberg's character, Guinan, will be seen in occasional episodes of Paramount Television's syndicated show, which is entering its second season, according to a news release.

The "Ten-Forward" lounge where Miss Goldberg's character will preside is new to the series and will give its writers a chance to show characters relaxing.

"I've always been a Trekkie, so I thought it was time for me to boldly go where no man has gone before," said Miss Goldberg, 32, referring to the original "Star Trek" show's opening line describing the mission of the Starship Enterprise.

Goldberg has starred in several movies and won a Golden Globe and an Academy Award nomination in 1985 for her role in "The Color Purple." Her latest movie, "Clara's Heart," will be released next month.

Lawyer Hits A Stage At The End Of The Day

By JEFFREY RAYMOND
Decatur Herald & Review

ARTHUR, III. (AP) — His curly, shoulder-length hair sets him apart from most other lawyers. His understanding of torts and contracts sets him apart from most other rock 'n' rollers.

Meet Robert M. Crossman, attorney for the village of Arthur, also known as Bob Crossman, leader of his own rock 'n' roll group, the Crossman Band.

"I don't play golf. Most other lawyers play golf, so I just tell people this is how I relax," Crossman said in his law office in this quiet town of 2,100 straddling the Moultrie-Douglas county line in east-central Illinois.

There are no details in the office to indicate that Crossman, 35, differs from his fellow attorneys in the way he spends his time away from work. Even the radio is tuned to a station that offers as much talk as soft rock music.

But about a dozen times each month, he trades in his dress slacks and tie for leather pants and a black T-shirt. He forgets about real estate contracts and municipal issues and focuses on guitar riffs and song selections.

"I don't know, maybe I just enjoy being two different people," Crossman said. "I don't think it's that difficult."

In contrast to the unwholesome image rock 'n' roll holds for some people, Crossman said he demands that band members refrain from getting drunk or high on drugs.

He is a Republican and actively supporting his mother, Peggy Crossman Beetle, in her race for Douglas County circuit clerk.

Crossman has played guitar since he was a child, but he has spent most of his life pursuing his legal career.

"I always wanted to be a farmer or a lawyer, but I realized as a lawyer, you can be in air conditioning more than you can as a farmer," he said.

When Crossman was in college and took the law school admissions test, he scored a 681, which he was told at the time was the second-highest score by an Eastern Illinois University student.

He ran the sound equipment for bands while in college and, after getting a law degree, he eventually began playing for one of the bands that employed him. That led to another band and later his own band.

playing Top 40, high-energy, danceable rock.

Arthur, a town known more for its Amish community than its rock stars, tends to favor country and gospel music, so Crossman and his band range far for jobs. They have played as far north as Maroa and as far south as Vandalia and Effingham, but they're trying to break into the Champaign and Decatur clubs as well.

Crossman is able to adjust his work schedule to meet the demands of playing in the band.

"You don't have any emergency real estate work," he quipped.

But even with that leeway, the time away from home caused a strain and contributed to a separation from his wife, Nancy. The other members of the band also hold jobs that sometimes pose conflicts with performances or rehearsals.

Still, music is in Crossman's blood, and while he wants to cut down a bit on the number of the band's engagements, he shows no sign of stopping.

"When you finally get them out there dancing, that's what makes it all worthwhile," he said.

Weddings Vows Said Saturday

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of silk jacquard organza styled with a mandarin collar, bell-shaped sleeves and dropped waistline. She wore a floor-length veil and carried a bouquet of white and pink roses.

Each of the attendants wore a white cotton brocade damask tea-length gown fashioned with bell sleeves and a green sash. Each carried a bouquet of pink and white roses.

A reception was held at the Myers Park Country Club.

After a wedding trip to California and Hawaii, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride received a B.A. in journalism and advertising from the University of North Carolina. The bridegroom graduated from Virginia Episcopal Church and received a B.A. in industrial relations from UNC. He is employed by Grady-White Boats.

Readers Have Say On Tips

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for that great column on tipping. Many people don't know how much to tip a waitress and are so embarrassed, they don't tip at all. I've been a waitress for 11 years. In Ohio, waitresses are usually paid a minimum wage of $2.10 an hour. Some get even less. The government takes 8 percent right away. My paycheck nets me about $1 an hour take-home, so you can see, we don't do nearly as well as most people think we do. — JEANNIE IN OHIO

DEAR JEANNIE: Not everyone thought my column on tipping was so "great." A Spokane nurse spoke thusly:

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I'm writing to you after all these years of reading your column. But I've earned the right as a devoted reader to say, Where do you get off telling us how much to tip people for their services?

I resent that the consumer is expected to make up the difference between a living wage and the minimum wage paid by cheap employers. As for your suggestion to "do unto others," I've worked as a nurse for 30 years, and nobody has ever tipped me.

...We tip according to the quality of the service given, within the limits of what we can afford, so please don't make us out miserly with percentages! I feel better already! — RUTH B.

DEAR ABBY: People who neglect to tip are uneducated, uncivilized, socially inept, selfish and irresponsible plagues on society who should not be allowed to dine at decent restaurants.

Waitressing is one of the most thankless and stressful jobs imaginable. Servers must be alert and organized constantly as they cater to the demands of the diner. Daily they are faced with the incredible task of too much to do and not enough time to do it. No sane person would work so hard unmercilessly if it weren't for the psychological incentive of tips.

Anytime you are seated, brought your food and handed a bill, you are obligated to tip. Since the government taxes 8 percent of a server's total sales out of his or her paycheck, the server's main source of income is the tip money. After the government is finished with my paycheck, they have received more than I have; my net pay is nowhere near the minimum wage.

When you forget to tip your waitress, you are making it a little more difficult for her to support her family, put herself through college or simply to pay for the rent. Neglecting to tip a waitress is a loathsome practice the educated person finds unacceptable. Tip your server! — OREGON WAITRESS

DEAR OREGON WAITRESS: Let's allow a Pittsburgh bartender to have the last word:

DEAR ABBY: About your "tips" on tipping: How do you figure a bartender should get only 10 percent? A bartender not only must serve the drink, but concoct it. A bartender is supposed to listen to people's problems, entertain them and be aware of who's had "enough."

In between mopping up spills, cleaning ashtrays and slicing up fresh fruit, the bartender is expected to remember each customer's drink, and what garnish he or she prefers. (The gentleman likes two olives in his martini; the lady wants one onion in hers.)

I hardly think 10 percent is enough, but I'd gladly settle for that, as about half the customers "forget" to tip us.

My advice: Tip the bartender at least 10 percent for excellent service. Also, if you can't afford to tip, you really can't afford to go out, so do us both a favor and stay home. — PITT-SBURGH BARTENDER

LADIES ... WHY ARE SO MANY OF YOU DYING OF BREAST CANCER?

Mobile Mammography Unit available to area women

For Appointment Please Call Toll Free 1-800-456-9998

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of ten women in the United States will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 41,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer. Ninety percent of breast lumps are found by women themselves. Women who are diagnosed with a cancer large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. For women with tumors detected when less than one centimeter by mammography, the 5 year survival rate is almost 100% and the 20 year survival rate is 95%! A mammogram can detect a cancer this small 6 years before it can be felt.

Those guidelines have been adopted by the American Medical Association, The American College of Radiology and others. A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation and designed to find very early cancers. A female technologist who is highly trained in mammography will perform the examination. Appointments are recommended. The Unit accepts cash, check, Visa and MasterCard.

GNP Holds Strong

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, fueled by an export-driven manufacturing boom but held back by losses from the drought, expanded at a strong 3.0 percent in the April-June quarter, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, grew to a seasonally adjusted annual level of $3.99 trillion in the second quarter, a $29.1 billion increase from the January-March quarter.

It was an unexpected downward revision from a preliminary estimate a month ago of 3.3 percent growth last quarter. The economy had grown at a 3.4 percent annual rate in the first quarter.

If not for the drought, second quarter growth would have been a more robust 3.9 percent. Crop losses for the year are estimated at $13.9 billion and will be even more of a drag on the economy in the third and fourth quarters.

The government attributed the downward revision in the second quarter to slightly less growth than first thought in the two strongest sectors in the economy: export sales and investment spending by business.

Exports of goods and services expanded at a 9.1 percent annual rate, compared with the previous estimate of 11.6 percent.

Business investment spending shot up 15.0 percent, compared with last month's estimate of 16.3 percent.

Louganis Claims Gold Medal

By Christine Brennan
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

SEOUL, South Korea, Sept. 20 — In the most dramatic event of the Seoul Olympics so far, Greg Louganis won the springboard diving Tuesday despite hitting the board with his head in preliminaries Monday night. On a day the U.S. basketball team had to rally to beat Canada and a disqualified U.S. boxer's appeal was denied by his international federation, Louganis' comeback from near disaster was the talk of Seoul, and the whole world, as well. Trying to become the first man to defend Olympic championships in springboard and platform diving, Louganis hit the back of his head as he was attempting a reverse 2½ somersault on the ninth of his 11 dives in the qualifying round of the springboard competition Monday afternoon. He got out of the water without help, rubbed the top of his head and smiled, then went off to get medical attention. Judges gave him a total of 6.3 points that included two zeroes, one .5, three 1s and one 1.5, pushing him to fifth place. He came back about a half-hour later with four stitches in his head, and had his best dive of the day. When he appeared on the deck at Chamshil Indoor Pool Tuesday morning for the finals, many in the crowd stood and cheered. But Louganis' opponents, specifically China's Tan Liangde and Le Deliang, were not about to hand anyone a gold medal. The 28-year-old Californian, with his wound visible on his head, all but clinched the gold on the same dive that could have caused him serious injury Monday. This time, performing the reverse 2½ from the pike position, Louganis cleared the board easily and earned a score of 76.50. Louganis completed his performance with two of the most difficult dives, a reverse 1½ with 3½ twists, for which he earned a score of 88.11, the highest score of the competition, and a reverse 3½ from the tuck position, which carries the highest degree of difficulty, 3.5. Louganis finished with 730.80 points. The 23-year-old Tan, who has beaten Louganis twice this year and is the only man to defeat him on the springboard in international competition since 1981, totaled 704.88. Li, 21, had 665.28. In other developments, the U.S. men's basketball team survived an early scare from the Canadians but rallied for a 76-70 victory. But there was no second chance for another U.S. athlete, as boxer Anthony Hembrick's medal hopes ended when he lost an appeal submitted after he showed up late for a bout and was disqualified. The Soviet Union led the medals race with six, including two gold. The United States (two golds) and China had five medals overall; East Germany and Bulgaria each had two golds. Baker Says Pirates Can Be Better

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina football coach Art Baker says there's good news in the Pirate camp — the Bucs can play better than they did on Saturday. Not that the Pirates didn't have a good game, despite bowing to then-14th ranked South Carolina on the Gamecocks home field, 17-0. East Carolina piled up 336 yards in total offense against a defense that had allowed less than 200 in their two previous games. They held South Carolina to only 49 yards rushing. They had over half again the number of first downs and the offensive plays. The Pirates controlled the ball for nearly 15 minutes more than did the Gamecocks. Still, they did not score points, and that was, obviously, the most frustrating part of the afternoon. "We missed great opportunities," Baker said. "We played well enough to win and didn't." South Carolina led only 3-0 at the half, that on a 53-yard field goal, then added two touchdowns of Todd Ellis passes, one of 97 yards, the longest touchdown pass ever thrown against the Pirates. "I felt after the game that we had controlled the line of scrimmage, both on offense and defense. It was the best day our defense had since I've been here. "I thought (quarterback Travis) Hunter did an excellent job of calling the option or trap at the line of scrimmage," Baker continued. "South Carolina stunts a lot and has to play man-to-man and we used a lot of motion to get them out of position." It paid off as the Pirates had one of their better days on the field. Baker was also pleased that the Pirates kept their cool until the

Pagel Vindicated By 23-17 Victory

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland quarterback Mike Pagel couldn't have picked a better opponent for his first start since 1985. It wasn't that Pagel held any particular resentment toward the Indianapolis Colts, the team that gave up on him three years ago. It was much more practical than that. "They've been running the same style of defense since I was there. It's basically a very vanilla defense," Pagel said Monday night after he passed for 255 yards and two touchdowns in the Browns' 23-17 victory over the Colts. The unexpectedly smooth performance from Pagel helped ease some of the concerns about the Browns' immediate future in the absence of starting quarterback Bernie Kosar and backup Gary Danielson. Pagel, showing no jitters, completed 23 of 38 passes, including a 14-yard touchdown to Ozzie Newsome and a controversial 17-yard scoring pass to Webster Slaughter. Matt Bahr added three field goals. "I was fearful of Pagel," said Colts coach Ron Meyer. "I've seen him before and he's an extremely solid, competitive quarterback." Pagel, a former Indianapolis starter who was traded to Cleveland in 1986, was forced into action because Kosar suffered a sprained right elbow two weeks ago and Danielson broke his left ankle last week. "Mike was very calm," said offensive lineman Paul Farren. "When he came into the huddle tonight, he said, 'We're going to move the ball. We're going to move the sticks.' That rubbed off on all of us. There's no question we had to put the injuries behind us and accept it." The Browns' offensive line had easily its best performance of the season, keeping Pagel free from

U.S. Proves It Can Shoot The Trey

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The shootout in Seoul between the United States and Brazil should be a little bit more interesting now that the U.S. men's Olympic basketball team has proved it, too, can pick 'em off at long range. The Americans struggled Tuesday before beating Canada 76-70 for their second Olympic victory. They hope to look sharper Wednesday when they hook up with the same Brazilian snipers who shocked the United States at the Pan American Games in 1987. "I don't look at the game as a revenge thing. I was disappointed we lost but not embarrassed we lost," said Willie Anderson, one of three U.S. Olympic players who were members of the Pan Am team. "I don't feel we have to prove anything to anyone." But against Canada, the U.S. team had to prove it was capable of playing a half court game and shooting from the outside, something Brazil does as well as any amateur team in the world. The United States excels at the wide open full court game, as it proved when it opened the Olympics with a 44-point victory over Spain. "When they deny us inside we just try to hit the open man," Charles Smith IV of Georgetown University said. "We just try to get the ball to the open man no matter who it is." Smith was one of the open players Tuesday. Hersey Hawkins, who led the United States with 13 points, hit three 3-pointers.

A's Clinch Title

A's Wanted The AL West Title Now

By The Associated Press
Oakland had plenty of time to clinch the American League West, but the Athletics didn't want to use it. "We didn't want to wait around to clinch it, and we didn't want to let the Twins get an idea there was still a possibility of them winning it," Dave Parker said Monday night after hitting a two-run homer that led Oakland to a 5-3 victory over Minnesota, clinching the division title and eliminating the defending World Series champions. "It was just a coincidence that we were playing the Twins tonight," Parker said. "The fans tonight saw a great ballgame," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. The Twins were playing for a pennant, too, and that's a tribute to them." Dave Stewart, 19-12, gave up eight hits and all three runs in 6 1-3 innings, striking out six. He allowed two hits after the third inning. "The home run was inspiration to me," said Stewart, who is trying to win 20 games for the second straight season. "I struggled early, so it was great to see that. It was great to do it here in Oakland in front of people who appreciate where I've come from." "We never relaxed," Parker said. "But Tony La Russa won't let anyone relax."

Rick Honeycutt relieved Stewart and Dennis Eckersley finished with two perfect innings for his major-league leading 42nd save. It was Oakland's 59th save, an AL record, topping the old record set by the 1970 Twins and tied by the 1986 New York Yankees. The major-league record is 60 by Cincinnati in 1970 and 1972. Fred Toliver, 7-5, gave up eight hits and five runs in 2-2-3 innings.

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 4
Tony Fernandez hit a two-run single to cap a five-run seventh-inning rally. Boston led 3-0 on a two-run single by Todd Benzing and an RBI single by Jim Rice in the first. Then Rance Mulliniks hit a sacrifice fly, Kelly Gruber hit an RBI single and Manny Lee hit a routine grounder to Marty Barrett's left.

Brewers 5, Angels 2
Robin Yount drove in three runs as Milwaukee won for the 16th time in 21 games, moving into sole possession of second place in the AL East. Wegman, 13-11, won his third straight, giving up seven hits, striking out one and walking one in 7-2-3 innings. Paul Mirabella followed and Chuck Crim got two outs for his ninth save.

Hershiser Gets L.A. 1 Step Closer

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
Orel Hershiser isn't getting many runs to work with these days. But the way he's pitching, he doesn't need many. "Tonight, the key was to keep the ball down," the Los Angeles Dodger pitching ace said Monday night after extending his shutout string to 40 innings with a 1-0 victory over the Houston Astros. "I had a sharp breaking ball and I made no mistakes up." It was the second straight 1-0 win for Hershiser, who beat the Atlanta Braves last time out. Monday night's four-hitter gave him four straight shutouts and a shot at Don Drysdale's record shutout string of 58 2-3 innings. "Two more shutouts would be tough," Hershiser said. "I don't think it can be done. That's the record I thought couldn't be broken." The victory reduced the Dodgers' magic number for clinching the National League West to five games. Hershiser, 22-8, struck out five batters and didn't walk any as he tied Cincinnati's Danny Jackson for the National League and major league lead in victories. Frank Viola of the Minnesota Twins also has won 22 games.

Danny Jackson scattered seven hits in 7 1-3 innings to gain his 22nd victory for the Reds. Jackson, 22-7, walked three and struck out two in gaining his fourth victory in his last five decisions. Paul O'Neill drove in three runs, including two with his first homer since Aug. 11, to highlight the Reds' attack against Ed Whitson, 12-11. O'Neill also singled home a run off reliever Dave Leeper in the seventh.

Braves 4, Giants 3
Ozzie Virgil's bases-loaded bloop single in the 10th inning lifted Atlanta over San Francisco, ending the Giants' six-game winning streak. Virgil's single landed just inside the right field line, giving him the game-winning hit in the 10th inning for the second straight day. Virgil's hit gave the Braves a 6-5 victory over San Diego in 10 innings Sunday.

Pirates 5, Cardinals 4
Right fielder Tom Brunansky's first error of the season enabled Pittsburgh to score an unearned run in the ninth inning and beat St. Louis. With one out, Felix Fermin singled to right. The ball glanced off Brunansky's glove and went past him for an error, allowing Fermin to make it to third. Brunansky had fielded 261 chances this season and had been the only National League outfielder without an error.

Long To Donate Scholarship To ECU

Terry Long, former all-America football player at East Carolina, and currently a veteran offensive lineman for the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League, has announced that he will donate an annual scholarship to his alma mater.

The $4,000-plus annual scholarship will come from the sale of T.L. Sports Nuts, a Long-owned concession product that will be sold at all East Carolina athletic events.

"Terry's gift comes at such an important time for the Pirate Club and East Carolina University," Charlie Carr, assistant athletic director, said, "because of the great financial need our program has in meeting our lofty goal of $1.5 million in 1988."

Long was named to the Associated Press, Kodak, Walter Camp and the Football Writers of America first team as a senior. East Carolina went 8-3 that year and Long played in both the Blue-Gray Classic and the Hula Bowl.

"I am excited to return something to East Carolina," Long said. "ECU gave me a great start on my career, and I am impressed at the direction in which the athletic program is taking down there."

ECU athletic director Dave Hart Jr. said he hopes that Long's gift will initiate a pattern among former Pirate athletes. "Terry is the first former athlete now in professional football to become actively involved with the Pirate Club. We hope others will follow Terry's direction as an example," Hart said.

Warren Wins Football Contest

Calvin L. Warren of 1718 W. Main St., Williamston, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Warren correctly picked the winners in 27 of the 31 games listed in the contest. One game, Alabama-Texas A&M, was dropped from the contest when it was postponed until Dec. 1 because of Hurricane Gilbert.

Warren's win, however, came on the basis of his point total guess. He guessed that 77 points would be scored by both teams in any one of the contest games. The actual total was 79, scored in West Virginia's 55-24 victory over Maryland.

Second place went to Bret Ussery of 410 E. Wilson St., Farmville, who also had 27 games correct but was further off in his point total guess with 68.

Three other entrants also had 27 correct, but were further off in their point total guesses. They were: Seth Jones III, Rt. 2, Box 167-B, Farmville, with 67; Glenn H. Potter of 207 Harmony St., Greenville, with 66; and April Hendrix of 703 E. 5th St., Apt. 4, Greenville, 64.

The next contest appears in today's edition of The Daily Reflector.

Conley Teams Win Volleyball Matches

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's varsity and JV teams both picked up wins in high school volleyball action Monday.

In the varsity match, Conley won over Aurora, 15-12, 15-8 behind eight effective hits by Renee Tuten and Tracy Summrell. They were assisted by Eileen Evans and Tracy Stancill.

The Valkyries are 12-4 and travels to East Carteret today. The JV team had two matches against Belhaven and won both of them, 15-7, 15-4, and 15-7, 16-14.

Amber Madrin had consecutive points on serve. The leading hitters were Angie Jones with 11 and Jamie Hart with six.

Batse Is CAA Soccer Player Of The Week

RICHMOND — East Carolina goalie Austin Batse has been named Colonial Athletic Association player of the week, league officials announced Monday.

Batse filled in at goalkeeper for the injured Mac Kendall in the Francis Marion Tournament last weekend and recored 14 saves while allowing no goals.

The Pirates finished third in the tournament, winning their first match of the year against Frances Marion, 1-0. Batse went into the weekend's action third on the depth chart but a poor showing by backup Chris Wall, coupled with Kendall's injury, pressed Batse into action. A freshman walkon from Chapel Hill, Batse played for his high school team.

Youth Soccer Team Downs Jacksonville

The '77 Greenville Stars downed the '78 Jacksonville Cardinals, 3-0, in a North Carolina Youth Soccer Association Classic Travel League game this weekend.

The Stars took the lead after eight minutes of the first half on a penalty kick by Jonathan Clark. Two second-half goals by Aaron Simpson and Walter Putnam sealed the victory.

Greenville outshot Jacksonville 15-4 in the game to boost their record to 2-0. The Stars return to action on Sept. 24 in Raleigh where they will face the '77 Raleigh Rowdies and the '77 Chapel Hill/Durham Strikers.

Maginnes Leads ECU Golfers To 1st Place

GREENSBORO — After first round action at the Tom O'Briant Golf Tournament, East Carolina leads the field with a team score of 291 in the two-day event.

John Maginnes shot a three-under-par 67 to stake the Pirates to the lead. That score was also the low round of the day.

U.S. Criticized For Opening Antics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.S. team members say their behavior during the Olympic Games opening ceremonies wasn't Mickey Mouse, no matter what the International Olympic Committee says.

"We are not a nation of marchers and soldiers," said Wylie Farrier, manager of the U.S. boxing team from Cleveland, Ohio.

In language unusually terse for dealing with one of its member nations, the IOC said Tuesday that the prancing and posing of the U.S. team during last Saturday's opening ceremonies sullied the dignity of the event.

"The behavior of your delegation at the opening ceremony was scandalous and has given to the whole world a very bad impression of your delegation," IOC administrator Raymond Gafner said in a letter to the U.S. Olympic Committee.

U.S. Olympic officials said their athletes were in a festive mood and didn't mean to offend by waving signs that saluted NBC or said "Hi Mom. Send Won." Nevertheless, they'll be warned to watch their step at closing ceremonies next week.

Some of the athletes say they don't know what all the fuss is about.

"That's just crazy," Cindy Stinger, a team handball player from Colorado Springs, Colo., said Tuesday. "The kids were high spirited, that's all."

Gafner said he was writing for IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch and the committee's executive board. Another IOC official, information director Michele Verdier, said Mickey Mouse ears were not part of the official uniform.

"These things are contrary to the dignity of the opening ceremonies," she said. "The image you are showing is one of your country to the world."

800-Meter Freestyle Relay Up For Grabs

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Sequels are rarely better than the original. The 800-meter freestyle relay, one of the most exciting events of the 1984 Olympics, could be an exception.

With East Germany and Australia joining the United States and West Germany as medal hopefuls, the race Wednesday — Tuesday night EDT — promises to be even more spectacular than the 1984 version that saw the U.S. team edge the West Germans by four-hundredths of a second.

"The relay will be a dogfight," U.S. coach Richard Quick said. "We're all really looking forward to that race. I wouldn't be surprised if it was a four-team battle."

East Germany had the top qualifying time, followed by the Americans, West Germans and Australians.

But a prelim time for a relay can be even more misleading than an individual event because different swimmers are used in the final.

The Americans prelim team consisted of Craig Oppel, Dan Jorgensen, Matt Cetlinski and Doug Gjertsen, but Oppel and Jorgensen were replaced for the final by Matt Biondi and Troy Dalbey. Biondi and Dalbey were third and seventh in the 200-meter final.

East Germany added only Steffen Zessner, the sixth-place finisher in the 200, but their time of 7 minutes, 16.61 seconds already was formidable.

West Germany, the world record-holder, added Michael Gross and Thomas Fahrner, both 200 freestyle finalists.

Gross, who was fifth in the 200 and also lost his world record, has vowed revenge for the famous "Gross Busters" defeat in 1984 in which he swam the anchor leg.

Australia was fourth in the relay prelim, but will add Duncan Armstrong, upset winner over Biondi and Gross in world-record time in the 200.

Biondi and Gross are both in two finals Wednesday. Biondi was the No. 2 qualifier in the 100 butterfly Tuesday, and two more medals would keep him line line for seven.

"I just wanted to swim well, so I am satisfied with my time because it puts me in the finals in a good lane," Biondi said. "This was just a qualifying swim. Tomorrow is when the race starts. It should take a 52-high, 53-flat to win."

Andy Jameson of Great Britain was the top butterfly qualifier. He was timed in 53.34 and Biondi in 53.46, and Gross was fourth in 53.78.

Mark Spitz, who won seven golds in 1972, is the only swimmer to win seven medals of any kind in one Olympics. If Biondi succeeds Wednesday, he will have four events to go.

Tuesday's prelims saw East Europeans set Olympic records.

Tamas Darnyi of Hungary was clocked in 4:16.55 in the men's 400 individual medley, eclipsing the Olympic mark of 4:17.41 set by Alex Baumann of Canada in the 1984 Games.

The focus of the opening ceremonies is the athletes' parade, with the competitors marching into the main stadium behind their nation's flag. The procession usually involves lots of hand-waving but overall is rather sedate.

However, when hundreds of American athletes followed flag-bearer Evelyn Ashford into Olympic Stadium at the start of the Seoul Games, there was more than the usual kidding around.

Some athletes veaved off the track and others slowed down so much as they passed the section where family and friends were seated that the delegation behind them, from the tiny Pacific island of Vanuatu, ran into them.

It wasn't just the way they marched but what they carried that ticked off the IOC.

There were the Mickey Mouse ears. The plea for Mom to send won — Korean spending money. And worst of all, the sign that mentioned NBC, the American television network that paid more than $300 million for U.S. rights to the Games.

Although American TV is the IOC's primary revenue source and such signs aimed at attracting the TV cameras can be found at virtually every U.S. sports event, the IOC said the sign promoted the network and thus violated the ban on advertising within Olympic arenas.

"We especially noted that the placards containing advertisement for NBC was of poor taste by some of your athletes," said Gafner, who is Swiss.

Robert Helmick, USOC president and an IOC member, said he disagreed with Gafner's description of the parade.

"The behavior certainly was not scandalous," he said, adding U.S. spirits may have been stirred during a two-hour wait in a crowded holding area. "Some countries have a higher degree of strictness."

"This opening ceremony is supposed to be for the athletes and we were just having fun," said Brent Lang, a swimmer from Portland, Ore.

Most team members agreed, although a dissenting voice also was heard.

"This is not a joke," said Reddick Bowe, a super-heavyweight boxer from Brooklyn, N.Y. "They should stay in line. It's a serious parade."

Gafner said the IOC hoped that for the closing ceremonies Oct. 2 the USOC "will show that you are able to give to your athletes instructions which are followed by them."

Helmick said the USOC would comply, although the closing ceremonies are generally more casual and spontaneous than the opening.

"The point is well taken and we will instruct them about the closing ceremonies," he said.

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

After winning the spade return on the board, declarer ruffed a diamond, crossed to dummy with a high trump and ruffed the last diamond. Dummy's heart and club winners were cashed, and South then started running the spades. Since that suit broke evenly, declarer was able to discard the losing club from the table and 11 tricks were in the bag.
 At the other table, North became declarer at four hearts after a Stayman sequence. East led the king of clubs, declarer won and cashed a high heart. Now the defenders had to come to two heart tricks and a club, so the contract was just made.

Minority Students Gain On SAT

By LARRY GORDON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Scores by black and Mexican-American students on the Scholastic Aptitude Test for college entrance rose slightly again this year, continuing a decade of improvement but remaining well below the national average, the College Board announced Monday.

The average black student this year scored 737 points out of a possible 1,600; that is nine points higher than last year and 51 more than in 1978. Mexican-Americans averaged 810, up seven points from last year and 38 over the last decade.

Meanwhile, the national average for all students dropped two points this year to 904, the first dip in eight years. The College Board, which administers the tests, described the changes as insignificant, although several education officials expressed disappointment over a lack of marked improvement.

On his next to last day in office, U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett issued a statement Monday blaming schools for the falloff in national scores: "No medal for America in this news. I said in April that the absolute level at which our improvements are taking place is unacceptably low. Today it's a bit lower and still not acceptable. C'mon, team. Back into training."

Joseph Allen, director of admissions at the University of California, Santa Cruz, said he was disturbed that national averages are 50 points below those of 20 years ago. "It is certainly a sign of a failing education system," he said. However, one reason for the lower scores, he added, is that many more minority and lower-income students are taking the test these days.

Critics have long said that the SATs favor white and middle-class teenagers, and some colleges and universities rely less on the test scores when evaluating minorities compared to whites for admission.

The College Board has denied the allegations of unfairness and points to the boost in scores by minorities. "I am very pleased by the steady progress shown on the SAT in the past decade by ethnic minorities," said Donald M. Stewart, president of the College Board. But he added: "If the gap between minority and majority test scores is ever to be closed, improvements in the elementary and secondary education of minority students must be accelerated."

Stewart also stressed that 1,134,364 students took the SAT in 1988, 5 percent more than the year before and 13 percent more than in 1986. Larger numbers of test-takers usually mean lower national averages, according to the College Board. So the increase in minority scores along with the number of minority test-takers is especially noteworthy, officials said.

The test is divided into verbal and mathematical portions, with each part scored on a scale of 200 to 800. The national average verbal score fell two points this year to 428 and math remained at 476. Average verbal scores for women fell by three points to 422 while their math rose two points to 455. Men averaged 435 in verbal for the second year in a row while they dropped two points in math to 498.

Blacks, on average, earned 353 in verbal and 384 in math, up two points and seven points, respectively, from 1987. For Mexican-Americans, the averages were 382 in verbal and 428 in math, up three and four points each. Asian-Americans scored 408 in verbal and 522 in math, three points and one point higher. Whites, on the average, dropped two points in verbal, to 445, and went up one point to 490 in math this year.

Meanwhile, the 1988 results of the American College Testing Assessments were also released and mirrored the tiny overall change of its larger rival SAT. National composite scores in English, math, social studies and natural sciences was 18.8, up 0.1 over 1987, said David S. Crockett, vice president of public affairs of ACT, the Iowa City organization that administers the test.

Tar Heel SAT Scores Improve

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina students gained ground on the SAT for the fifth consecutive year, but their average score is still second to last among the states on the standardized college entrance exam.

The state's average 1988 scores climbed one point over the previous year to 401 on the verbal portion, and two points to 440 on the math portion of the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

Nationally, average SAT scores lost ground in 1988 for the first time in eight years, but minority students continued a decade-long pattern of impressive gains, the College Board reported Monday.

Scores on the verbal section of the SAT fell two points to an average 428, while the average on the math section was unchanged at 476, according to the board's annual report.

Both parts of the multiple-choice exam taken each year by 1.1 million college-bound students are scored on a scale of 200-800, with a combined 1,600 being perfect.

North Carolina scores have climbed 10 points in math and six points in the verbal portion of the multiple-choice exam over the past five years. "It is certainly positive that the trend line is stable and moving upward," said William J. Brown, assistant state superintendent for research and testing.

"It is the type of test that is very resistant to large changes being made quickly, and it is very likely that steady progress is about all we can expect," Brown said.

The state's combined score of 861 was 63 points below the national average of 904 on the exam. Only South Carolina, with a combined score of 838, scored below North Carolina.
