New Team Of Experts Get Control Of Launch

By HOWARD BENEDICT

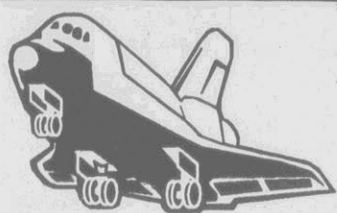

AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's commander and pilot made jet training flights today and kept an eye on the weather as a new team of engineers, born of the Challenger disaster, took over key decisions leading to Thursday's launch.

The leader of the 21-member team, veteran astronaut Robert Crippen, has sole authority to approve or stop a launch effort.

As the experts met for the first time, the countdown proceeded smoothly toward the first shuttle launch in 32 months, despite lightning in the area that delayed some work.

Astronaut Frederick H. Hauck, who commands Discovery's five-man crew, and pilot Richard O. Covey were airborne after breakfast today in a jet aircraft equipped to handle like the shuttle. They practiced landings on the shuttle landing strip near the launch pad.

Later in the day all five crew members were scheduled for pre-flight physical examinations and countdown progress briefings.

Rain was falling and there were thunderstorms in the area as Hauck and Covey took off, but Air Force weather officials said bad weather associated with a weather system over northern Florida would be gone by launch day.

A warning of lightning within five miles of the launch pad delayed the loading of fuel into Discovery's power-producing fuel cells this morning, but test director Chuck Henschel said it would not affect the launch countdown.

"As far as we're concerned," Henschel told a news conference, "we've got a good chance at a launch on Thursday."

The forecast called for widely scattered showers 50 miles offshore, a wind of 10-15 knots (about 11 to 17 mph) from the southeast and a temperature of 85 degrees for the launch time of 9:59 a.m. Thursday.

NASA's rules, tightened since Challenger, forbid launching when there is lightning or rain within 10 miles of the pad. Winds of more than 17 knots (about 20 mph) from the south or 24 knots (28 mph) from any direction would automatically scrub the liftoff.

NEW TRAFFIC LIGHTS — Dwayne Johnson, a technician for an independent contractor, makes some wiring changes on one of the traffic signals to be placed at the hospital emergency entrance on the new U.S. 264. State officials say the lights will be operational by mid-October. Lights also will be installed at Allen Road and the intersection of U.S. 264 and secondary roads 1290-1294. The three-signal project will cost about $82,000. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Gunman Opens Fire In School

GREENWOOD, S.C. (AP) — Greenwood Police Chief James Coursey says he is still trying to determine why a local man went on a fatal shooting spree in an elementary school, killing one person and injuring 10 others in what one official called "a tragic and senseless event."

Coursey said James William Wilson, 19, of Greenwood has been arrested and charged with murder in the Monday incident. Wilson was being held in the Greenwood Law Enforcement Center.

Coursey said Wilson, with no apparent motive, entered Oakdale Elementary School shortly after 11 a.m. Monday and opened fire on students and teachers in a classroom and the school cafeteria.

School District 50 Superintendent Robert S. Watson said officials will take a hard look at how the shooting could have occurred as they try to help students and teachers recover from the grade-school nightmare.

"We're certainly going to be more alert," Watson said at a news conference Monday afternoon.

Greenwood County Coroner Odell Duvall said Shequila Tawonn Bradley died from a gunshot wound to the neck in the school's first aid room in the school principal's office.

crime figures that "was at great risk to his personal safety."

Williams' attorneys have said he would go to his farm in Leeton, in west-central Missouri, after his release.

"This release is contingent upon his continued cooperation with law enforcement authorities," parole commission chairman Benjamin Baer said in a statement Friday. Baer added that Williams could be returned to prison if he did not cooperate.

School Board's 'Why' To Low Scores Is Going Unanswered

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Why? Why did students in the Pitt County schools, in many cases, score below the regional, state and national medians on the California Achievement Test in the spring when Pitt County has so much to offer in resources and opportunities?

Why, when expectations are set high for all students, did students of parents with little education, students at a lower socio-economic level and black students continue to score lower on the tests?

And, why did administrators and principals set minimum goals for students to achieve in testing?

Those were among the questions the Pitt County Board of Education asked school administrators, principals and teachers about recent test scores during a workshop session Monday evening. And, while school personnel offered many hypotheses to the problems, there were no clear answers.

Dr. Charles Ross, associate superintendent of instruction, and Rod Whitley, the testing coordinator for the school system, presented the board a review of the testing program and identified variables affecting test results such as socio-economic level, ethnic origins and exceptionalities. They also reviewed the test data and discussed plans designed to improve test scores.

After the presentation, the board held a discussion with school personnel in attendance at the meeting.

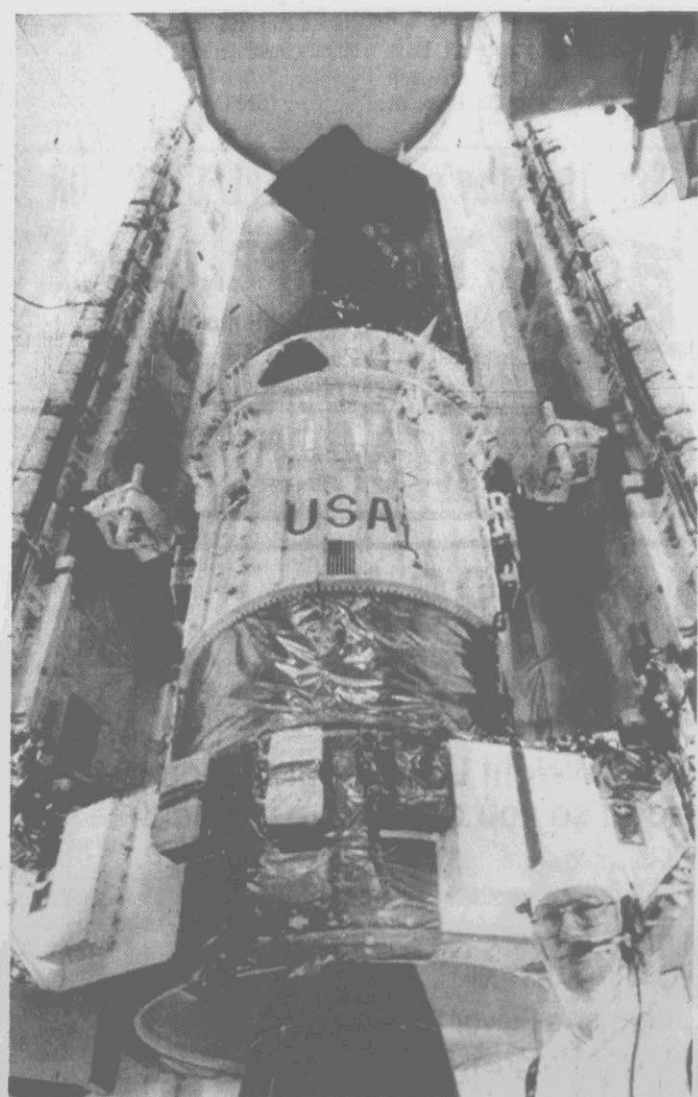

Board member Nicholas Patrone asked why the county did such a "bad job" on the test when compared to the region. In the third, sixth and eighth grades, county students ranked from seventh to 13th on reading, language and mathematics in the 16-county region.

The third, sixth and eighth grade scores are part of the state annual testing program, and they provide a baseline for evaluating progress in the North Carolina Basic Education Plan. They are compared with regional, state and national norm scores. Grades four, five and seven are part of the Pitt County testing program and may be compared with scores of previous years and the national norm averages.

Nell Congleton, principal of Ayden Elementary School, said teachers and administrators are not always knowledgeable of what's available in the county as the area continues to grow and expand at a rapid pace, while Janie Manning, principal of

Former Teamsters Boss Freed

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Former Teamsters President Roy Williams was released from prison early today after serving less than 34 months of a 10-year sentence given him for conspiring to bribe a U.S. senator.

Government officials said they would expect Williams to continue his involvement with the government's war on organized crime as a condition of his release.

Officials at the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners said Williams, 73, was released early this morning. Medical center spokesman Keith Hayes said Williams left the facility accompanied by an attorney and a member of his family. Williams' attorneys were not immediately available for comment.

The U.S. Parole Commission announced Friday that Williams, who has been treated for emphysema and an enlarged heart while serving his term at the Springfield medical center, would be paroled in recognition of testimony against organized

Legislators Will Study Custody Laws

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Local legislators told the Pitt County Board of Social Services Monday they are willing to help provide a "middle ground" through legislation for courts making custody decisions for children in juvenile cases, but it's going to take some work.

State Sens. Tom Taft and Bob Martin and state Reps. Walter B. Jones Jr. and Ed Warren met with the Social Services board Monday to discuss requiring parents who abuse and neglect their children to participate in treatment as a condition of having custody of their children.

According to the board's attorney, Ed Harper, District Court judges in juvenile cases have no legal middle ground, such as conditioning placement upon the parents' participation in treatment, when deciding on whether to place a child back into the home.

Director Ed Garrison told the legislators "it's not a simple matter" as revised legislation to include the condition would impact many professions. Also, "there is a cost factor attached to it," as the indigent population would need help paying for treatment, he said.

"We consider it a very weighty problem."

Warren said success would depend a lot on the support of other agencies involved such as the court system. "If you don't have the support of those agencies you're still going to have a problem."

Jones added that "one of the most important things is to get the different Social Services departments throughout North Carolina in the effort." Also, "there are legal questions to consider, and these legal questions must be answered."

In a letter to Warren, Jennie Dorsett, a staff attorney with the N.C. General Assembly, responded to his request on information regarding child and neglect cases in the juvenile courts.

She said the due process of the parent would be a Constitutional question that would have to be addressed in presenting this new legislation, but "these issues are not insurmountable; it would be necessary to provide adequate notice and opportunity for the parent to contest the treatment."

Jones said he will present the idea to the Governor's Advocacy Council

Cadets Overcome

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A comatose cadet, who was overcome with 15 others by strenuous police training, underwent a liver transplant today while officials prepared to release the findings of an investigation at the police academy.

Timothy Shepard, 25, of Pittsfield, who has been in a weeklong coma, entered surgery Monday night for a liver transplant at Pittsburgh's Presbyterian Hospital.

Rose Eberts, hospital nursing administrator, would say only that Shepard's condition was critical this morning.

Pittsfield Mayor Anne Everest Wojtkowski, who is acting as a spokeswoman for the Shepard family, said the surgery was completed at 5:30 a.m. today and the family was told that Shepard came through the operation "very well."

Several former cadets have suffered similar fatigue-related medical problems at the academy over the past four years, according to former cadets and an Amherst physician.

JOHN F. WARD

Police Ask Public Help To Find Man

Greenville police this morning asked for help in locating John Fitzgerald Ward, 24, of the Winterville area, who has been charged with the murder of Wilbur Lee Stocks, 72, of Route 1, Winterville.

Stocks' body was found at Keel's Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue about 8 a.m. on Aug. 28. Police said Stocks, a nightwatchman at the warehouse, had multiple head injuries from being beaten and shot in the head. The gunshot wound resulted in his death, investigators said.

A warrant charging Ward with Stocks' murder was issued about two weeks ago, but police have been unable to locate Ward.

Chief Jerry Tesmond said this morning that, "I consider Mr. Ward armed and dangerous. I would hope citizens would reach out and help us. This individual needs to be in custody."

Tesmond, who said Ward is "believed to still be in the area," said "a substantial reward is being offered for the location and arrest of this subject."

The chief said anyone with information about Ward should call Crime Stoppers at 758-7777 or contact the Greenville Police Department directly by calling 830-4300.

Ward, police said, is a black male 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighing 140 pounds. Employed at Keel's Warehouse at the time of the murder, Ward is known by the nickname "Fish."

Historical Society Marks Milestone In County Survey

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members and friends of the Pitt County Historical Society celebrated the completion Monday night of Phase 1 of an ongoing survey of architecturally historic buildings in Pitt County.

Phase 1 covers rural Pitt County and the communities of Falkland, Grimesland and Simpson.

The second phase of the survey, set to begin soon, will cover six municipalities in the county, not including Greenville, which has recently been surveyed through a city project.

The third and final phase will be the publication of a comprehensive volume to be lavishly illustrated, with a text setting forth the history of each structure surveyed.

At a special meeting Monday night, reports were presented and a representative slide show of structures surveyed during Phase 1 was shown.

Scott Power, historical survey specialist who carried out the survey, was unable due to illness to present the show. Dru York, director of the Eastern Office of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History in Greenville, showed about 200 color slides from among thousands taken by Power for the project.

Frank Van Leeuwen, current president of the society, and LaRue Evans, past president and director of the architectural survey, gave brief reports on the history and current status of the survey.

The major portion of the $50,000 needed for the overall survey — $25,000 each for the just completed Phase 1 of the project and for the upcoming Phase 2 has been provided by appropriations from the North Carolina General Assembly — a total of $19,200 to date. State Sen. Tom Taft represented the county's legislators at the meeting.

The North Carolina Division of Archives and History also has contributed $7,750 to the project. Other contributions have included initial grants from Falkland, Grimesland and Simpson, membership fees and a fund-raising yard sale.

Mrs. Evans paid tribute to member Dr. Marshall Helms. "He really inspired our membership drive in that, for the first year of the survey, he matched dollar for dollar all memberships during that time."

The slide show covered a large number of categories of structures. "Scott emphasized that these slides he chose to show are not necessarily the most impressive of each type of structure, but are slides chosen to give you an idea of the diversity of structures of architectural value throughout the county," Ms. York said.

Color slides of surveyed buildings consisted of both external and internal views, including a number of close-up photographic details. They ranged from the earliest known extant building from the early 1700s through architecturally important structures as recent as the early 1940s.

Within the diversity of buildings are unusual ones such as a brandy distilling and storage barn, a slave house, a cotton gin, simple early cottage type houses, large Victorian homes, small rural churches, early school buildings, and fraternal buildings.

Dansey Calls For Diversion Of Funds To Combat Drugs

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Bill Dansey, Republican candidate for the 9th District state House seat now held by Tom Taft, said today that money legislators spend for local pet projects should be used to fight drugs.

At a morning press conference at the corner of Bancroft and Fleming streets — near the spot of a drug-related murder earlier this year — Dansey said the General Assembly has not done an adequate job of providing drug agents with the resources needed to combat drugs.

"It's time for the General Assembly to stop paying lip service to our efforts to stop drug trafficking," he said.

Dansey said State Bureau of Investigation agents should receive pay increases, the number of state drug agents should be increased from 25 to 100, the amount of drug money available for undercover agents to purchase drugs should be upped to $2 million and local law enforcement agencies should also receive some money for undercover drug buys.

With money the General Assembly has allotted to "pork barrel" items in the past, Dansey said his programs could be funded. He strongly criticized Taft and other Democratic legislators for financing the pet projects in election years "to buy voters."

Dansey did not provide a specific dollar figure for the cost of his projects, but he said at least $7 million would be available if pork barrel projects were eliminated.

He also called for stronger penalties for drug users and traffickers. Convicted drug kingpins should have to serve their entire prison sentence, he said, with no parole or time earned for good behavior.

The death penalty should be imposed against any drug dealer directly or indirectly responsible for murder, and drug dealers convicted of selling to teen-agers should be sentenced to life in prison, he said. Making the use of all drugs other than marijuana a felony would also deter users and cut demand for the drugs, he said.

The neighborhood in which Dansey held the press conference is nearly all black, and he said Taft has won elections in the past with the support of the black community. Dansey said he had strong support in the black community, which is unusual for a Republican, and the black voters will be a key in the Nov. 8 general elections.

"If you can take the black votes away from (Taft), he loses," Dansey said. "If you split it, he loses."

An East Carolina University trustee, Dansey also criticized Taft for failing to provide adequate funding for ECU projects. Needs at ECU, such as a regional activities center and a new library, have been neglected by the current law makers, he said.

The General Assembly has approved $500,000 for land acquisition for the center, but Dansey said a committee formed to develop plans has not yet looked at possible sites. Taft has said that primary funding for the center should come next year, but Dansey said he felt the center would cost about $24 million, and he does not think the General Assembly will appropriate that much money.

on Youth and Children for its support, while Garrison said he will present it to the N.C. Association of Social Services directors. Meanwhile, Harper is to make a first draft of the proposed legislation.

The legislators agreed to meet with the board again to discuss progress of building support for the issue before the General Assembly meets again in January.

In other matters, Garrison reported a $466 net error in the department's $31 million budget for the 1987-88 fiscal year as determined by an audit conducted for all county offices by the firm Marwick, Main and Mitchell.

Garrison said part of the error stems from conflicting policy manuals of the state Department of Human Resources, and he expects the state to take blame for it as it has done in the previous year.

"We've had an extremely good year," Garrison said of the audit, crediting his staff.

The board approved a request to go before County Commissioners for three additional income maintenance II positions and one additional clerk-typist position to handle the load that will be created by the federally mandated Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act to take effect in January. Total costs for the new positions would be $44,071. Fifty percent of that or $22,035 will be paid by the county, while the federal government pays the other half.

Garrison said it has been projected by the firm Carter Goble Associates of Columbia, S.C., which is assessing space needs for county offices, that the Department of Social Services will need a staff of 133 in 1989. Currently, the staff totals 129.

Also, about 25,500 square feet will be needed in the department for it to effectively provide its services. Currently, the department works in about 21,300 square feet of space.

A traffic study of the telephone system at the county offices is being conducted with recommendations expected to county commissioners in late October, Garrison said.

Garrison reported the department is looking for three social worker III employees and one eligibility specialist II.

Becky Starkey, a social worker II, provided to the board information on the licensing process for foster homes for children.

Convert Without Penalty

The term is one year. But after three months, if interest rates rise anytime during the remainder of the term, you can switch to another one-year Convertible CD at the higher rate. Or to a non-convertible CD of one year or longer. All without incurring a penalty.

... And Keep On Converting

You can continue to convert to a new one-year Convertible CD as long as interest rates rise. All we ask is that you wait at least three months between conversions.

Fast Food Talk

The '88 Campaign Drive-Through

Once candidates get away with the fast food approach to political debate, it's hard to break the habit. The first first presidential debate of 1988 proves that.

Instead of a nutritious helping of stimulating argument, viewers of the debate got a little pre-prepared rhetoric sandwiched in between some thin-sliced substance. The impact of the 30-second sound bite just won't go away.

The nation deserves presidential candidates who will aggressively and publicly debate the issues that threaten to overwhelm the United States and render it impotent. Neither Republican George Bush nor Democrat Michael Dukakis satisfactorily did that in Sunday's presidential debate. Instead, they turned the hour-and-a-half opportunity for threshing ideas into a 90-minute lesson in circumvention. The temptation is there just to send them back and order two more, please, with mustard, catsup and onions.

While such cynicism may be warranted, it is not becoming. It does nothing to ease the burden of a public faced with reading between plasticized political lines to choose a leader.

Like it or not, Bush and Dukakis are it. Not many bones got thrown in the first debate, but there were a few to pick. There may have been no clear winner, but both sides scored some points. And Dukakis, by effectively questioning Bush's judgment in selecting a running mate, came as close to an upset as either man.

First, Bush scored on specifics, although that victory should be underscored with "compared to what?" His eight years as second-in-command may have given him an edge on inside knowledge and his ties to a popular president may have made him less reticent on specifics.

Bush also scored well on defense issues. Although confusing the names of two weapons, he made it clear what items he feels are important to America's military — practically all those currently utilized.

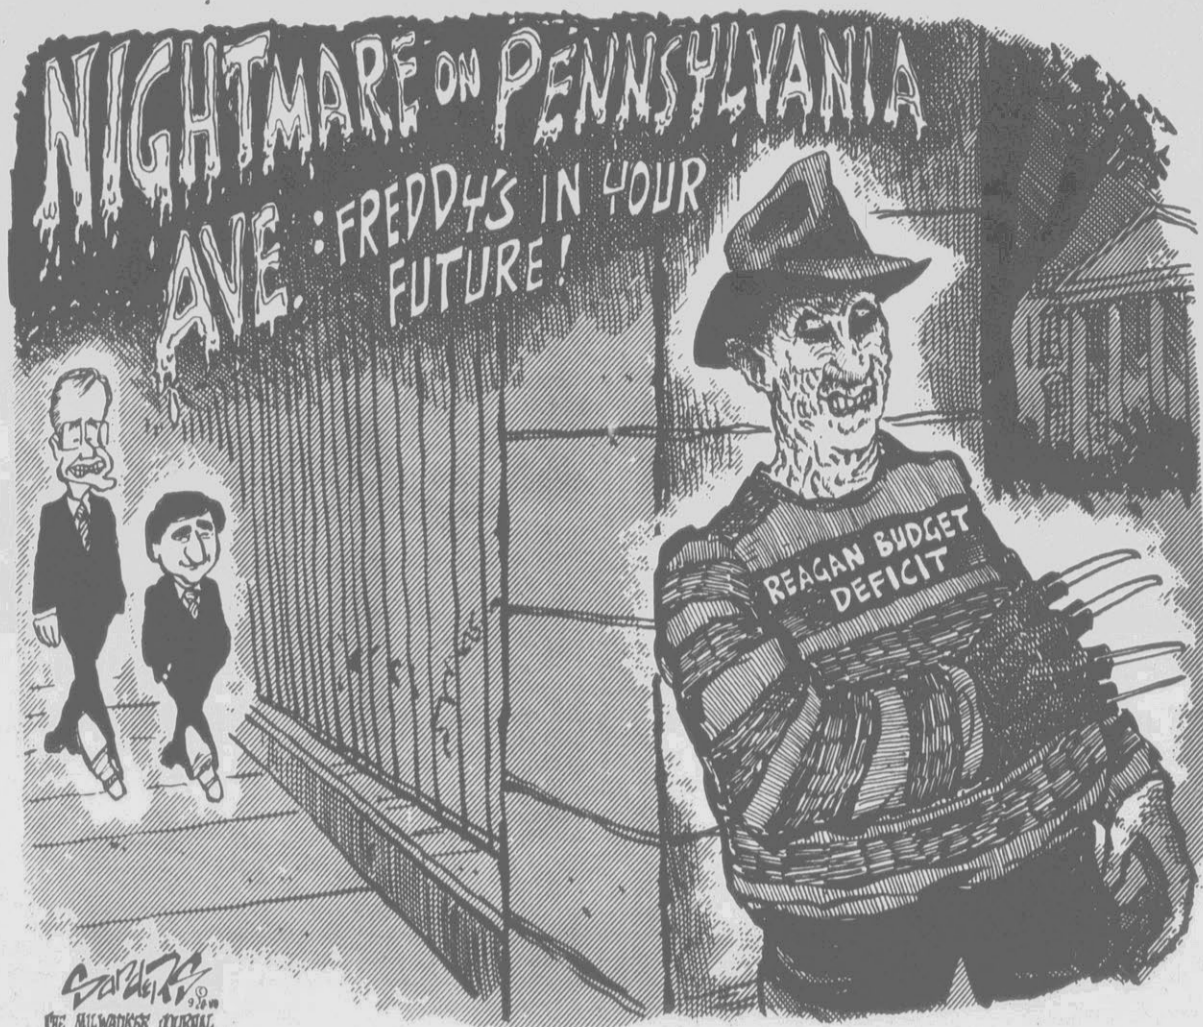

And had pleasantries been the criteria for winning, Bush could easily be declared the victor. The public got a glimpse of a smiling, genial man who laughed amiably at his own mistakes. Quite a departure from the snarling, defensive fellow who slugs it out with television anchormen. Nice guys sometimes get elected president, but it's not enough.

Dukakis, despite his vague position statements and his nebulous lectures on leadership, scored overwhelming hits in two critical areas.

First, his precision. He made no miscues. His words, although nonspecific, were deliberate and well-chosen. In its first look at Michael Dukakis in presidential surroundings, the American public saw a quiet, competent man. Next to Bush's occasionally rambling, often emotional replies, Dukakis' calm scored well.

Second, the Democrat effectively questioned his opponents' choice of a running mate, and he did it for the right reasons. Rather than delivering a personal attack on Dan Quayle, Dukakis laid down a foundation of apprehension about Quayle's qualifications based on his record and his statements. By pointing out Quayle's weaknesses, the Democrat raised doubts about Bush's decision-making that the vice president could not satisfy. Had anyone scored a technical knockout, it would have come here. Mark the card for Dukakis.

But both men fell pitifully short of providing the American public with informative political debate. Instead, they answered questions as safely as possible, speaking in generalities and adhering to the pre-packaged approach to arguing issues. The American public must feel like it's visited the campaign drive-through.

A Four-Corner Stall To Kill Time

WASHINGTON — The winner? Are you kidding? Do we give a trophy for being a millimeter less tiresome than the other guy?

It was a national embarrassment. Michael Dukakis was marginally less embarrassing than George Bush was, if only because his canned thoughts were laded out in understandable syntax. However, the smallmindedness and tactical over-tuning were so oppressive on both sides that Bush may benefit. Boredom and disgust may drive down voter turnout so much that Bush (Republicans are more reliable voters) may benefit from the ennui.

Dukakis wanted to look less than he usually does like an alderman unveiling a bust of himself. He did that, if just barely, by smiling — at least, that probably was a smile — and by a closing statement (faint praise here) that made more sense than Bush's.

Bush wanted to prove that he could perform well, or at least passably, when not scripted, as he was in his convention acceptance speech, by a gifted writer like Peggy Noonan. Bush's Sunday-evening performance raised this thought: Why not elect Noonan and cut out the middleman?

Bush is not famous for his concision, but oh, my. Here he is on housing (we join him in full flight): "And how does that grab you for increasing housing? Housing is up. We are serving a million more families now. But we're not going to do it in that old Democratic liberal way of trying to build more bricks and mortars (sic). Go out and take a look at St. Louis at some of that effort. It is wrong." He was referring to a St. Louis public-housing project so bad it was dynamited. You probably understood that if you also understood his references to the McKinney bill.

'So Bush left North Carolina in a position to do what the North Carolina Tar Heels basketball team sometimes does when it has a lead. It goes into a four-corner stall to kill the clock.'

Bush and Dukakis witticisms are recognizable by the complete absence of one attribute of true wit: spontaneity. Their attempts at humanizing humor were heavy enough to be weighed on truck scales and obviously had been tamped into each candidate by handlers. Why should the humor be different than the serious stuff?

Tracing a Bush thought back from its manifestation in speech to its origin in his thinking is like seeking the source of the Blue Nile. The problem with Bush sentences that reel drunkenly around a topic is not just aesthetic. Neither is the problem only — only! — that syntactic chaos is a sign of a chaotic mind. The basic and alarming problem is that Bush's chaotic mind seems to be a consequence of a lack of public purpose.

Sure, he has a purpose: He wants to be President. But he seems to want that only because it is the next rung up, and climbing the ladder of public life is his life. This is an old axiom: Some people seek office to be something; others seek office to do something. Bush is one of the former. In this, the contrast with Ronald Reagan is complete.

Dukakis has public purposes. Although Bush called Dukakis an "ice man," Bush was more correct when contradicting himself, saying that Dukakis has passions, but the wrong ones. Indeed the most disagreeable aspect of this campaign is Dukakis' disingenuousness, his disguising of his leftward inclination. Again, the contrast with Reagan is instructive: Reagan hardly hid — if anything, he exaggerated — his rightward leaning.

In politics, one does what one is and becomes what one does. Bush skitters like a waterbug on the surface of things, strewing fragments of thoughts, moving fast lest he linger so long that he is expected to show mastery of, or even real interest in, anything. It is well to dwell on him because he is ahead, the clock is running and every indecisive day, like Sunday, serves him.

It is said that about one-third of the supporters of both candidates are so lightly attached to their candidates that they could be detached. It is unlikely that either candidate's support was substantially solidified Sunday night. So Bush left North Carolina in a position to do what the North Carolina Tar Heels basketball team sometimes does when it has a lead. It goes into a four-corner stall to kill the clock.

Dukakis, by speaking about medical care and other traditional Democratic issues, is going to find out if there is a Democratic majority out there. And he also has this hope: In the days before the debate, the campaign's dynamics began to change. The change was driven in part by journalists' impatience with Bush's "flag factory" path to the presidency. Thoughtful television journalists are debating whether they have a duty to put on the air whatever spectacle a candidate decides to make the centerpiece of his campaign day.

But back on the trail, Bush is back on a script. In each of the final 40 days he needs 15 seconds of telegraphic thoughtfulness. That totals 10 minutes of mind until the final buzzer. He might just make it.

Right Arms For The Flag

I recently visited an arms factory where George Bush was expected later in the day.

"Does this plant make firearms?" I asked Baskerville, one of Bush's advance men.

"No," he said. "It produces arms that you can place across your chest when you're reciting the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag. It's the largest right-arm factory in the world, and business is booming since the candidate made the flag the main issue of his campaign."

"Are they meant for people who don't have right arms?" I asked.

"No, these are for citizens who have their own arms. The manufactured arm makes it possible to recite the Pledge and applaud Bush at the same time."

"It's a miracle," I exclaimed.

"Before Reagan, Americans didn't care if they had an arm to pledge with or not. But the Republicans changed all that, and the demand for a right arm to put over your heart has swept the nation. They're not very expensive. They sell for $9.95 each."

"Does Bush own any of these?"

"Of course. If you say the Pledge of Allegiance as often as he does, you have to keep a trunkload for emergencies. They're going to give him a Teflon-coated one at today's ceremonies. It's supposed to be very special because not only can you place it across your chest to salute the flag, but it can also be held up in a V for Victory sign when you're taking a bow."

"What does George do with his real right arm?"

"During his speech he uses it to point out Dukakis' mistakes and to question the governor's patriotism. Any time you see Bush sticking his finger into the air, you can assume that the rest of the arm belongs to him."

"And when he has his arm across his chest?"

"Almost certainly it's a plastic one made in this factory."

"How did you discover such an operation?"

"The owner called us. He sent a sample to the Vice President as soon as he heard that George had a bad case of tennis elbow caused by placing his hand on his heart while reciting the Pledge. The VP was really impressed and told me to check it out. What made it exciting to us was that Michael Dukakis had never been here. It seemed the perfect spot for a follow-up to George's visit to the flag factory in New Jersey."

"That was good thinking," I told him, "you'll probably be on all three networks tonight."

"We hope so, but that isn't why George is coming over."

"Why is he coming?"

"It's his way of showing that he cares about this country, and that he admires any company that makes it easier for Americans to recite the Pledge."

"What time does today's ceremony begin?"

"Any minute now. We can start as soon as they've measured the VP for a flag to wrap himself in when he leads us all in reciting the oath."

To the editor:

Your Sept. 16 editorial on our county commissioners' reluctance to "centralize" all of our county offices "into a well-designed centrally located facility" near the courthouse is not bursting with wisdom, despite your admirable enthusiasm. First, there is no compelling reason to corral the administrative offices of the school system next to or near the courthouse.

Second, health and human services operations such as public health, mental health and social services do need to be near one another and, ideally, near the medical community.

Finally, here's a news flash! Despite the myth which you promote in your editorial, those services of Public Health, Mental Health and Social Service are valuable enough to justify their being on land that would be nice and convenient for the further expansion of the Medical School.

You refer to the taxpayers' convenience. A beautiful towering and pride-producing complex near the courthouse has some potential problems: money, traffic congestion and need for one incredible parking lot or parking building. Why abandon the presently accessible and expansive property, the old hospital and adjacent land, for another tax burden?

Admitted, the county agencies mentioned may not be as glamorous, as likely to fatten the pockets of the upper crust nor to create new jobs as the hospital or medical school. However, if we're going to engage in rhetoric about serving the citizens of Pitt County (all of us), let's face facts. Many of our agencies are already ideally located. We could better spend extra dollars on upgrading present quarters and adding professional personnel to bring these agencies up to state standards or better.

Believe me, most taxpayers feel no great need for a "landmark — a highly visible architecturally attractive structure that marks Greenville as Pitt county's seat..." Let us not hasten into building a monument to our ignorance.

To the editor:

Exactly 35 years ago, 17 American boys, civilians in the National Guard called on active duty, were flying over the Pacific. Two Russian MIG's appeared, stalked, circled, and fired their guns. Wounding the plane the first time, they came in a second time and finished it off.

These men parachuted out, falling into the water near some Russian ships: James Woods, Charles Russell Jr., Earl Radlein, Roland Goulet, Donald Hill, Donald Gabree, Warren Sanderson, Frank Beyer, Lloyd Wiggins, Edmund Czyz, John Ward, Robert Stalneck, Francis Tejada. They have never been seen again.

James Keith and Francis Brown were killed outright. Pilot Stanley O'Kelley was last to jump, following co-pilot John Roche into the water. Night fell quickly. The next morning an Australian ship, alerted by the plane's distress call, picked up Roche. Stanley O'Kelley was dead.

The Russians to this day deny all knowledge of the event. The boys they captured are either dead or still in a Russian prison.

Let us at least give a moment of prayer for those boys. They wanted to live as much as we do. Our government never grieved over their deaths nor the death of Congressman McDonald, killed the same way.

We are now going through Glasnost No. 5, the fifth time Russia has needed money, pled peace for a year or two. This one is as meaningless as the others.

The civil servants in the State Department identify more with the civil servants in the Russian State Department than they do with us ordinary American citizens. Ambassador George Kennon's biography 20 years ago spoke of the continued "bugging" of our embassy. It is still bugged, and the State Department blames it on two 20-year-old Marines.

If Russia wants to disarm, all they have to do is disarm.

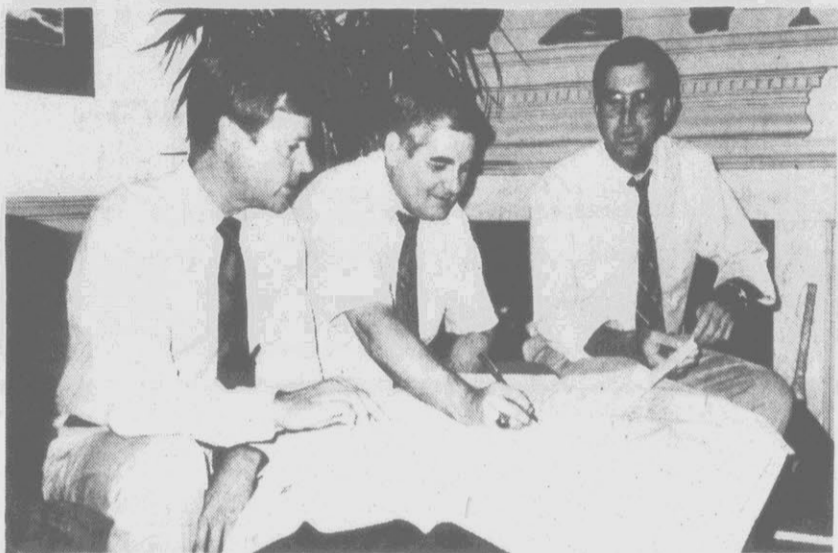

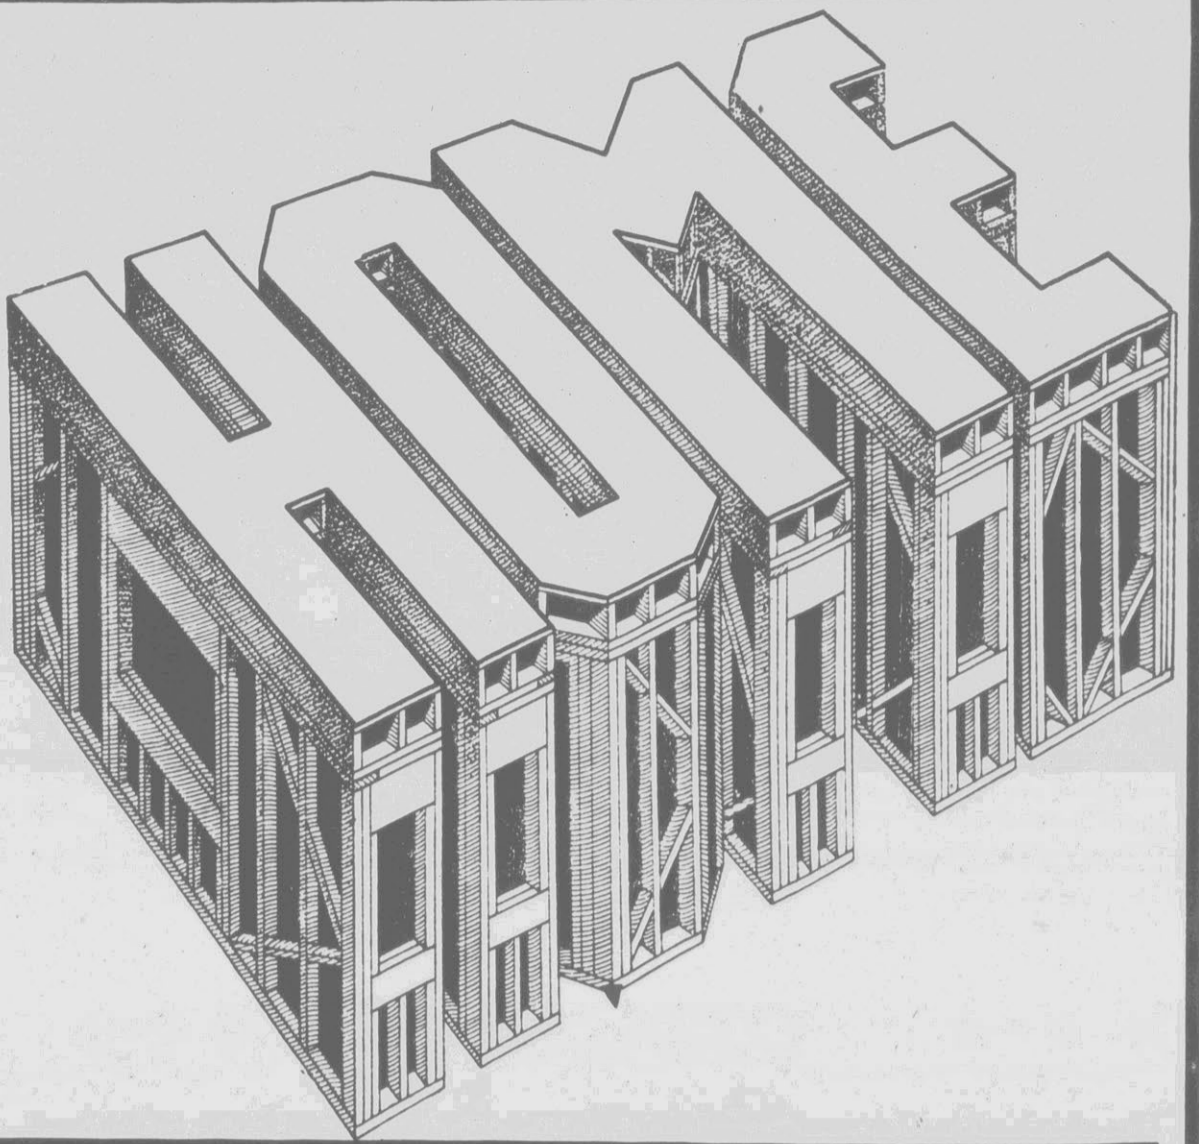

Garbage-Chef is selling the same old garbage.

Hatcher Goes To Trail Without His Lawyer

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that accused hostage-taker Eddie Hatcher is acting as his own attorney, a decision that Hatcher's lawyer, who is embroiled in another case, called a "wicked and misleading charade."

"The court is ready to proceed and will proceed with this trial," U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle said Monday after Hatcher declined the legal representation of two attorneys, saying that William Kunstler was his attorney. Kunstler is involved in a New York trial, which isn't expected to end until next month.

"Mr. Hatcher has chosen to defend himself," Boyle said.

"No, your honor, I have had that decision forced on me against my constitutional rights," Hatcher said.

Hatcher had asked to retain attorney Barry Nakell as counsel, but not as his attorney. Boyle wouldn't allow that.

In a telephone interview from the Wake County Jail Monday night, Hatcher said he had been victimized.

"I'm saddened by Judge Boyle's force and intimidation whereby I had to release Professor Barry Nakell as a counsel," Hatcher said.

In a statement released from his New York office Monday, Kunstler said, "In a country which consistently insists that criminal defendants are entitled to counsel of their choice, it is a disgrace for a federal judge, sworn to uphold the Constitution to deny this right to anyone and particularly, a native American who faces a potential punishment of life in prison."

Hatcher, 31, and Timothy Jacobs, 20, are charged with taking hostages and possessing illegal firearms. They have never denied that they walked into The Robesonian newspaper office Feb. 1 in Lumberton, chained the door shut and held up to 20 people for 10 hours.

The trial opened Monday with a confusing courtroom scene — Jacobs sat with his three lawyers and their two staff members while Hatcher sat alone at another defense table, rocking quietly in his chair.

Boyle excused a total of 10 potential jurors from 35 he questioned Tuesday afternoon. Those excused included one for a business emergency, eight because they held strong opinions of the case, and Weldon Denny, a Deputy Commissioner of Agriculture for the state who had worked for the federal government for 30 years.

Of the eight potential jurors who said they had strong opinions about the case, only one said he thought Hatcher and Jacobs were justified in their actions and strongly favored acquittal.

But before jury selection could start, Hatcher argued that the trial should be delayed until Kunstler could be in the Raleigh courtroom.

Boyle denied Hatcher's request for a delay. Then Boyle ruled that Stephanie Moore, an associate of Kunstler, would be Hatcher's trial attorney, despite Ms. Moore's argument that she was representing Hatcher only before the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Ms. Moore refused to participate in the trial and walked out of the courtroom just before the lunch recess. After the break, Boyle asked Hatcher if he would accept either Ms. Moore or local attorney Barry Nakell as his trial attorney.

"Mr. Hatcher, do you want to fire Mr. Nakell or keep him," Boyle asked. "If you want him to stay and try this case, I'll force him to stay."

Hatcher replied, "Bill Kunstler is my attorney, and I feel like I'm being forced to make this decision, and my constitutional rights are being violated."

Nakell, a law professor from Chapel Hill, said he would be willing to advise Hatcher, but not be his trial attorney. Boyle wouldn't allow that and Nakell withdrew as Hatcher's attorney.

Boyle then called Ms. Moore to the front of the courtroom and asked Hatcher if he would accept her as his trial attorney.

Hatcher continued to repeat that Kunstler was his attorney.

"Well, he's not here," Boyle said. "Will you take Ms. Moore?"

"Bill Kunstler is my attorney," said Hatcher, who was wearing a red embroidered shirt, an Indian apron, moccasins and blue jeans.

"His answer, for the record, is no," Boyle said.

Hatcher and Jacobs have said they stormed the newspaper office to draw attention to allegations of drug trafficking and corruption in Robeson County. The 10-hour siege at the newspaper ended after Gov. Jim Martin agreed to form a state task force to investigate their corruption charges.

But Hatcher and Jacobs met only once with the task force, which issued a preliminary report saying it had found little evidence to back up their charges. Hatcher, Jacobs and their supporters said the task force did not do a thorough investigation, and said that potential witnesses would not testify without federal and state immunity.

Hatcher and Jacobs say they are Tuscarora Indians, a faction affiliated with the Lumbee tribe in southeastern North Carolina.

Nakell denied that delays sought since the arrests were a tactic being used by Kunstler to draw sympathy for his clients.

Boyle, in granting a third delay in the case Aug. 1, warned Hatcher that he did not intend to continue the case again. He said another lawyer should be prepared to begin the trial if Kunstler were not present.

Hatcher, who announced in July he was running a write-in campaign for governor, was arrested on a fugitive warrant at Raleigh-Durham Airport last Monday when he stepped off a plane with Kunstler associate Ron Kuby.

Hatcher disappeared Aug. 31 after a federal appeals court reversed the action of a three-judge panel and revoked his bond. Jacobs surrendered to marshals in Asheville the same day.

Food Stamps

HIGH POINT (AP) — A contract for food-stamp distribution in Guilford County went to the highest bidder, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture has asked county commissioners why.

Officials at the state Department of Human Resources have said the county's contract with American Federal Savings & Loan Association of Greensboro is thought to be the most expensive per issue in the state. It costs $2.97 for every client served a month.

B.J. Battle, American Federal president, attributed complaints to the newness of the program.

Traffic

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's urban centers should not repeat the error of developing light-rail systems, which have not solved traffic problems and are under-used and expensive, U.S. Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley says.

"They cost an enormous amount of money to operate," Burnley said Monday after a speech in Raleigh.

Rapidly growing metropolitan areas should rely on technology to improve traffic flow on major thoroughfares Burnley said.

"Technology that meters traffic and controls how many cars get on the ramp to get on a beltway or interstate in a major metropolitan area" offers the best hope for unclogging city roads, he said. "That's not pie-in-the-sky stuff."

Campus Illness

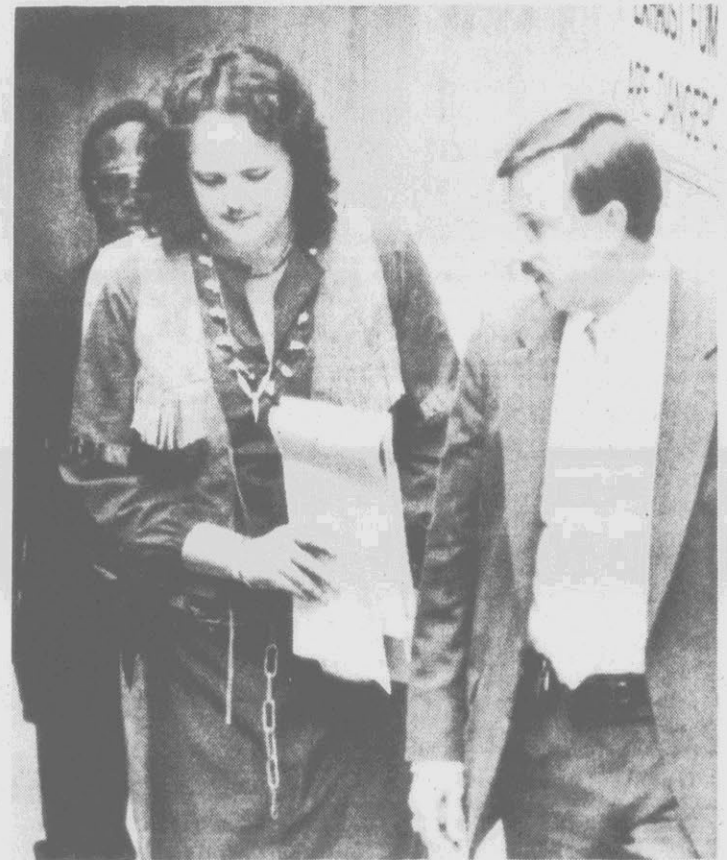

RALEIGH (AP) — An ailment that sent 55 North Carolina State University students to the infirmary during the past five days is disappearing as quickly as it appeared, officials say.

Students started arriving at the infirmary Thursday morning, complaining of severe diarrhea, vomiting, cramps and high fevers, said Dr. Gay G. Strickland, assistant medical director for N.C. State University Student Health Services.

More students sought help later in the day and again on Friday. But by Sunday, only a trickle of people were coming into the infirmary. The illness lasts between three and five days.

Doctors and nurses treated the students' symptoms and let the illness run its course. Only one student was sent to the hospital, while the others were given fluids and antibiotics.

Pledges Charged

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A fraternity pledge at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill says pledges take items with the intent of returning them "all the time," but four students have been charged with possession of stolen property.

"Whether it's a pledge activity or not, it's still against the law," said Chapel Hill Police Chief Arnold Gold. "It's still a crime even if there is intent to return it. They can explain it to the court."

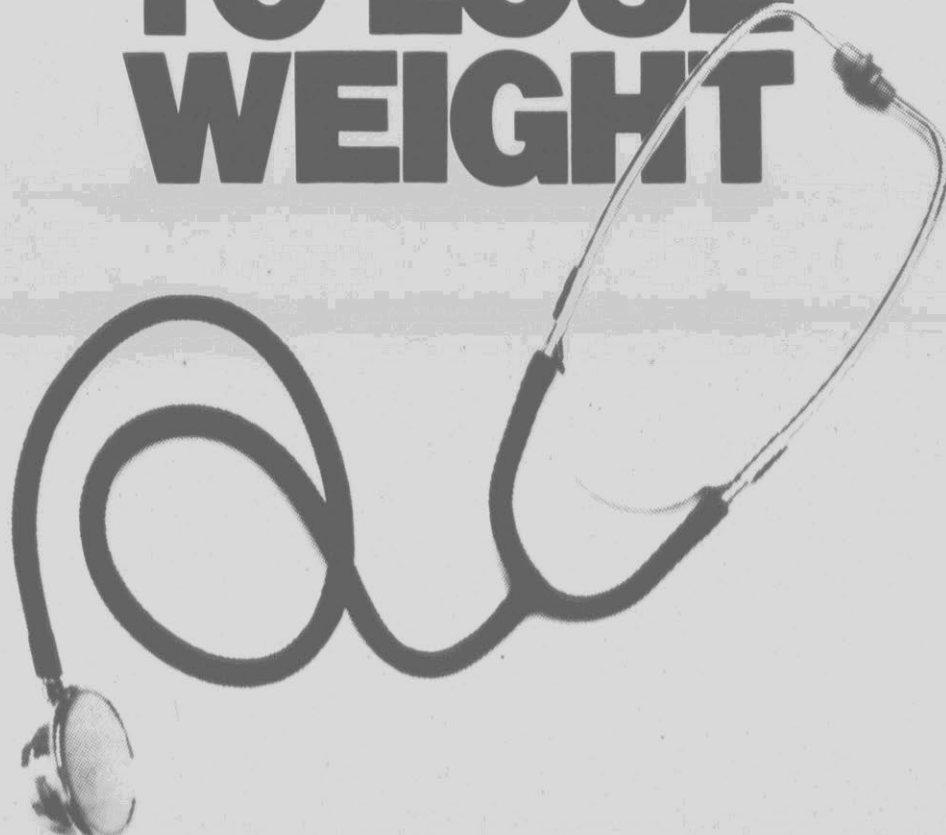

The four students, who were identified as pledges of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, were charged by either UNC police or Chapel Hill police after they were found to be in possession of license plates, lawn furniture and other property.

"It happens all the time. It's no big deal," said Frank Harris Lewis, 18. UNC police said Lewis was in possession of a stolen license plate, which he said was going to be returned.

Stephen Chase Hemphill, 18, who police said was in possession of a lawn table, said all fraternity pledge classes do similar things. "All the pledge classes of all the fraternities do something wild, and we just got caught doing a minor activity," he said.

Also charged were Brian David Moore, 18, and Mark Phillip Garside, 19.

YOUNG SCIENTIST — Ray Bateman Jr., a 14-year-old computer whiz, displays some of the publicity he's received. The Huntington Harbor, Calif., youngster will present a paper on colon cancer at a scientific meeting next month. (AP Laserphoto)

Whiz Kid Will Present Paper On Colon Cancer

By ARNOLD STAPLETON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ray Bateman Jr. fixed the family vacuum cleaner when he was 3.

Now, at 14, he's investigating ways to fight cancer. A number of scientific authorities believe he is on the right track.

Bateman, braces and all, might raise some eyebrows when he presents his paper on colon cancer at a clinical research conference next month.

But his co-researcher and next-door neighbor, cancer specialist Dr. Glenn Tisman, said that even if the adolescent's voice cracks a little, few will doubt his competence by the end of his presentation.

"Working with him was like working with a (post-doctoral) fellow," Tisman said. "His abilities are remarkable and he was full of knowledge about chemistry even though he hasn't ever taken a chemistry course in school."

Bateman, a high school freshman and computer whiz, spent more than 1,300 hours researching the project, Tisman said.

"But he's still a kid, basically," Tisman added. "My lab technician used to complain that Ray would leave his candy wrappers laying around."

And like a kid, Bateman is concerned about having to miss two days of school. "But my teachers believe this is a legitimate reason to be gone," he said. "And besides, this should help me get into college."

Bateman will travel with Tisman to New York to present their research Oct. 7 at an American Federation of Clinical Research conference. Rules dictate that if two authors submit a paper and one of them is older than 41, the younger author is the presenter. Tisman is 46.

"His being so young will surprise some people," Tisman said. "But I have confidence in him."

Bateman's father said his son's accomplishments don't surprise him.

"When Ray Jr. was 3 years old, the vacuum cleaner broke, and by God, he fixed it," said the retired civil engineer.

The method Tisman and Bateman developed will need further testing, but Tisman said it has been effective at his private clinic in Whittier.

The new therapy is a twist on existing treatment of colon cancer, Tisman said. It combines two drugs, 5-Fluorodeoxyuridine, or 5-FUdR, and Leucovorin, which kill cancer cells by inhibiting replication of DNA, an essential element in all living matter, Tisman said.

A similar drug, 5-Fluorouracil, or 5-FU, has been used with Leucovorin to treat certain types of cancer since researchers discovered a few years ago that Leucovorin increased 5-FU's effectiveness.

But Tisman and Bateman said their research suggests 5-FUdR may be more effective than 5-FU when used with Leucovorin.

Dr. Youcef Rustum, a noted cancer researcher and deputy director of the Grace Cancer Drug Center at Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, called the research an "important concept in cancer chemotherapy."

Bateman, an only child, said most of his free time is spent with his computer. When he was 11, he attended a computer camp at Stanford University aimed at high school seniors. He has $23,000 worth of computer gear, centering on a Macintosh II, the fifth computer his father has bought him since he was 9.

"He just keeps outgrowing them, I guess," his father said.

'Super Tuesday' Fell Short

SEA ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — Southern governors were told Monday that the "Super Tuesday" primary system many of them supported did not work very well, and heard predictions it will be changed substantially for 1992.

That appraisal came from two political science professors — brothers Merle and Earl Black — and from GOP Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf.

Tennessee's Democratic governor, Ned McWherter, disagreed, arguing the South got what it was seeking — more interest in presidential politics on the part of the region's voters.

Earl Black, professor of political science at the University of South Carolina, said the regional primary was created specifically by Southern Democratic leaders in an effort to select a candidate acceptable to the South.

The machinery was in place, he said, but the candidate some viewed as having the best chance in the region — Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn — decided against entering the race.

Merle Black, associate professor of political science at the University of North Carolina, said that instead of giving one candidate a clear edge, as Democratic leaders had hoped, Super Tuesday left three candidates in striking position while solidifying Republicans behind Vice President George Bush.

"I don't think you're going to see another Super Tuesday like that. It didn't meet the expectations of its originators," he said.

McWherter, an architect of the regional primary, challenged Merle Black, asking, "What harm did it cause?"

Black replied, "Did you get the candidate you wanted?"

McWherter was active in Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr.'s campaign.

McWherter got in the last word in the exchange, saying, "We got more voters out. I think that's what we wanted."

The topic was raised again later in the session when Oklahoma Gov. Henry Bellmon, a Republican, asked Fahrenkopf his thoughts on Super Tuesday.

"I loved it," said the Republican National Committee chairman. "I don't think we're ever going to see it again that way."

Negotiators OK Welfare Overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's welfare system is headed for a major overhaul with the conclusion of complex negotiations on a five-year plan aimed at moving welfare recipients into jobs and helping them collect more child support.

The initiative agreed on Monday by Senate, House and White House negotiators had been close to death all summer as negotiators sought a balance between conservatives favoring mandatory work and liberals concerned about increasing benefits to the needy and motivating people to enter the mainstream workplace.

The $3.34 billion welfare plan comes in above the Senate's own $2.8 billion measure but would cost less than half of the initial $7.1 billion plan passed by the House.

The cornerstone of the compromise is a Job Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) program offering welfare parents — including those with preschool children — services such as job search help, education and job training. Child care and transportation aid would be available to participants.

States would have to be serving 7 percent of eligible welfare recipients by 1990 and 20 percent by 1995. States would be given $600 million for the JOBS program in 1989, rising to $1.3 billion in 1995. People moving into jobs would qualify for a year of transitional child care and Medicaid benefits.

Twenty-seven states now provide welfare benefits to households with two unemployed parents. The welfare bill would require those states to continue and, effective in 1991, would require others to provide at least six months of benefits a year to such families.

Starting in 1994, one adult in each two-parent welfare family would have to perform 16 hours a week of community work, on-the-job training or other specified work activities. People under 25 without high school diplomas would be able to substitute participation in an education program leading to a diploma or its equivalent.

The bill also makes new demands on states to step up child support collections from non-custodial parents, including tougher paternity determination requirements and mandatory wage withholding upon the court award of support payments.

FABRICATED STORY? — The New York Times reported today that grand jurors have concluded Tawana Brawley, shown here in Atlanta last summer, fabricated a story in which she claimed she was gang raped by white men. (AP Laserphoto)

Pay Hike Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 4.7 million Americans will have to wait at least another year for the first raise in the $3.35-an-hour minimum wage since 1981 as Senate Democrats concede a major election-year legislative defeat to a Republican filibuster.

Refusing to bow to GOP demands for a broad-based subminimum floor under the 50-year-old minimum wage, Democratic leaders on Monday gave up all hope of raising the pay base by 40 cents to $3.75 an hour in January.

"There is no point in our continuing to pound on their door," Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said on the Senate floor. "I'm now conceding that the Republican fil-buster was successful." The Senate had been stymied for more than a week by parliamentary maneuvering on both sides as the two presidential candidates, Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis, watched from the sidelines.

Lacking the 51 votes to effectively couple an increase with their desire for a 90-day, 80 percent subminimum for newly hired workers, Republicans refused to allow any votes on the bill itself or amendments.

Democrats, meanwhile, lacked the 60 votes necessary to limit the debate and shut off the filibuster despite the defection of eight GOP senators to their cause last Friday.

Newspaper Says Jurors Think Black Woman Fabricated Rape By Whites

NEW YORK (AP) — A grand jury has decided that Tawana Brawley, whose case brought allegations of a racist coverup, fabricated her story that she was gang raped by white men, The New York Times reported today.

The special state grand jury found overwhelming evidence that the black, 16-year-old Wappinger Falls girl lied and helped create the condition in which she was found, the newspaper said.

The evidence was assembled over seven months by a grand jury that was unable to obtain testimony from Miss Brawley, who was found Nov. 28 smeared with feces, dazed, and with racial slurs written on her body.

Her story attracted national attention. Prominent people who spoke sympathetically of her plight included heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson and actor Bill Cosby, who put up a $25,000 reward.

Civil rights organizations cited the case as an example of racism and unfairness in the criminal justice system, while Miss Brawley refused to cooperate with investigators and the grand jury.

More than 100 witnesses and exhibits, including confidential medical and police reports and secretly taped telephone conversations, were considered by the grand jury, which was empaneled in Poughkeepsie on Feb. 29, the Times said.

The newspaper said the grand jury was expected within weeks to issue a final report saying it has found no evidence of any abduction, racial or sexual attack or any other crime against Miss Brawley.

Miss Brawley has moved with her family to Virginia Beach, Va., where she is attending high school. Their telephone number is unpublished, and neither the Times nor The Associated Press could reach the family for comment.

Miss Brawley's mother, Glenda, defied a subpoena in June and was sentenced to 30 days in jail, but avoided the sentence by taking refuge in churches and finally leaving the state.

The grand jury also subpoenaed Miss Brawley but has abandoned hope of ever hearing her story firsthand and rescinded its vote to subpoena her, the Poughkeepsie Journal reported today.

Miss Brawley's advisers, the Rev. Al Sharpton and lawyers C. Vernon Mason and Alton Maddox, could not be reached for comment. Sharpton's and Mason's phones went unanswered in three attempts to reach them. A message left at Maddox' residence was not immediately returned.

The advisers have alleged a coverup by white officials who refuse to prosecute whites for raping a young black.

The Times said the grand jury specifically will clear Steven A. Pagonis, a Dutchess County assistant prosecutor, as well as other law enforcement officials whom Brawley advisers have accused of participating in the alleged attack.

The grand jury concluded that contrary to the teen-ager's claim that she was abducted Nov. 24, she had chosen not to return home and hid for the next four days in a nearby apartment from which her family had recently been evicted, the Times said.

It said she, possibly with the help of an accomplice, smeared herself with dog feces, wrote racial slurs on her body, tore and scorched her clothes and crawled into a garbage bag and pretended to be in a traumatized daze, the newspaper said.

Helene Is Expected To Die Over Water

MIAMI (AP) — Helene's days as a hurricane were numbered as it continued to push north into colder mid-Atlantic waters that have already reduced the storm's once-mighty winds to a minimal 80 mph, forecasters say.

"It's just barely a hurricane right now," Jim Gross, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center, said today. "Our estimate is that it could hang on as a hurricane for the next 36 to 48 hours."

At 6 a.m. EDT today, the storm's center was near latitude 29.3 north and longitude 52.3 west, or about 1,350 miles west-southwest of the westernmost Azores and more than 1,500 miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Helene's 80 mph winds posed a threat only to ships as the swirling storm mass moved north at 15 to 20 mph, according to a center advisory.

U.S. Drops Escorts

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Reagan is telling leaders of Persian Gulf states that the U.S. decision to stop escorting individual ships represents "just a slight difference" in the Navy's waterway policing operation.

Posing for pictures with Sheikh Jaber Al-Almed Al-Sabah, the amir of Kuwait, Reagan said, "We're not lessening our protection there at all."

On a busy day in which the president made his swan-song visit to the United Nations, Reagan also heard an upbeat assessment of Middle East peace prospects and voiced new hope that American hostages in Lebanon might be set free.

But Monday's meetings were dominated by talk of the administration's decision to abandon the policy of escorting U.S.-flagged ships traveling the dangerous Persian Gulf oil shipping lanes.

"We didn't stop. This is just a slight difference," Reagan said. "It was a Navy decision made because of a change in the situation in the Middle East."

U.S. officials said the threat to commercial shipping in the area has waned since Aug. 20, when Iran and Iraq began observing a U.N. ceasefire resolution.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy acknowledged during a news briefing that the Kuwaiti leader had told Reagan he was concerned that the United States "keep open international shipping channels."

Murphy said the move from individual ship escorts to a more general U.S. military surveillance and protection operation represents "no significant reduction in our force levels and no reduction in our commitment to help defend the freedom of navigation."

"There has been no overnight decision to drastically reduce the forces within a set time frame," Murphy said. "The position remains, the forces will go down as the threat goes down."

Reagan had meetings scheduled with leaders of America's North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies and the governments of India and Pakistan today before returning to Washington.

Handicapped Students Reinforce Mike Aria Family Urged To Complain

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

DAVENPORT, Fla. (AP) — Deep in thought, the dying man gazes across the green fields behind his trailer house. The only sounds are those of summer birds and several puppies yapping in a nearby pen, ignoring their pair of black bears pacing in their steel enclosure.

Immobile in his wheelchair, Mike Aria takes a deep breath, causing the weakened muscles of his neck to bulge slightly. It takes all his strength just to talk, so he chooses his words carefully.

Aria, a 38-year-old former animal trainer, is dying of ALS — amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, commonly called Lou Gehrig's Disease. "Even if I feel completely down in the morning, when I see the kids I'm animated. A load has been lifted off me," he says in strained, slurred speech, a smile covering his face.

The children Aria speaks of are 300 handicapped students at Roosevelt Vocational School in Lake Wales, 16 miles south of this rural community in central Florida.

The 7th- through 12th-graders, explained Principal Harold Maready, have learning disabilities, emotional problems, hearing impairment or are mentally handicapped.

What began as a student Christmas project in 1985 to help the needy, Maready says, became a bond between these afflicted children and Mike Aria.

When they learned that Aria was paralyzed from the neck down and dying and that he and his wife, Janice, and their 8-year-old daughter, Amber, existed on $575 a month Social Security benefits, they made a decision.

"After that Christmas, it was the kids' decision to keep it going," Maready recalls. "They turned it into an adoption."

Through cake and candy sales, car washes, auctions and fund-raising, the handicapped children have provided Aria with a motorized wheelchair and an electric pager-turner to help him read.

When they learned of Aria's love for nature, they laid pebble trails for his wheelchair through his family's 10 acres of greenery. Then they bought lumber and built a ramp so he could manipulate his wheelchair in and out of his trailer house. Last year they built an outside bathroom and shower, making it easier for his wife to help Aria bathe.

"He's one of my friends," said one of the providers, Donna Ellzey, 18, a senior from Bartow who visited Aria on vacation. "I feel I've done something real good for somebody when I help him."

Another way she helps is by writing a newsletter to keep Roosevelt students informed of Aria's activities.

"He gives us so much in return by letting these kids be part of his life," Maready says. "Mike teaches the kids that they have something to give the world."

Mike and Janice, both from New Jersey, were high school sweethearts.

In her senior year at New York University, Janice took an independent study course at Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey's Circus's clown school in Venice, Fla. Though joining the circus was never an original goal, she soon became a featured performer.

After college, Mike, an athletic 210-pounder, joined her and took up training wild animals — bears, elephants, leopards, lions. They were married in 1974.

In 1978, Mrs. Aria's brother, Gil Gillespie, left his job as a school teacher and the three of them formed their own act, using North American black bears, and went on tour.

In 1983, Aria began to experience an occasional slurring of speech. Then, the strength in his hands deteriorated.

"That December, they told us Mike had a motor neuron disease causing the muscles to atrophy," his wife says. "There's no known cause or cure."

The following year paralysis consumed Aria's body and their circus careers came to an end. With two favorite bears and a number of dogs from their act, they moved here.

Gillespie lives in a small trailer in back, works in the area as a stage artist and helps support the Aria family.

Mrs. Aria provides constant care. To visitors, they appear as young lovers.

"We were so right to run away and join the circus," she reflects. "It was a romantic kind of thing to do."

Amber, their daughter, studied art and sculpture in college and a couple of years ago persuaded her father to take up painting. She had seen him use a pencil held in his mouth to change television stations. "If you can do that, why not try painting?" she asked.

So far, he has illustrated two calendars, which provide a little extra income.

Aria is well aware that ALS is usually terminal after five years.

"Right now, I'm living on borrowed time," he said with equanimity, "but I have my wife, daughter, brother-in-law — and the kids."

"Those children reinforce me. They give me more things to be thankful for."

Aria pauses to find new energy for a personal observation.

"Life threw me a curve ball. I think I ought to stand in the batter's box and try to hit it."

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

because he's "family."

Our problem is how to get Cousin Dearest to move back home or to get a place of his own without causing hard feelings. Any suggestions? — HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Your parents agreed to let Cousin Dearest stay with you until he "got on his feet." Now, it appears that he has gotten on your nerves before getting on his feet. (He is no longer a houseguest — he's a permanent house-pest!)

It's unfair of your parents to allow this inconsiderate relative to inconvenience the entire household, but all you can do is complain loudly and consistently to your parents. And I suggest that you do so.

DEAR ABBY: What can we, as parents, do to get our 39-year-old daughter to repay the money we loaned her?

We loaned her money to make a down payment on a car. We loaned her money so she could go to beauty school. We loaned her money to pay her rent and security and electric company deposit — and instead, she used the money to give her step-daughter a birthday party.

She promised to pay for the collect phone calls she made to us, but she hasn't. The list goes on and on.

Her father called and asked her to please send us a little something. All we get are promises. She manages an office and makes good money. Her husband also has a job that pays well.

Abby, we are trying to get along on our Social Security and need the money. — NEDDY PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Unless you have an IOU or promissory note signed by your daughter, complete with the terms of repayment, your chances for collecting are slim. Sometimes threatening to sue will motivate a deadbeat.

I wish you luck. Meanwhile, this should be a lesson for others: Don't lend anybody (relatives included) money without a signed IOU or promissory note.

Mourners Eulogize Billy Carter As Man Of Wit Who Helped Others

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter, known to many as the folksy brother of the nation's 39th president, was eulogized as a man of courage who was prepared to devote his life helping others overcome alcoholism.

"There was only one Billy Carter who on the strength of his wit and charm made his name a household word around the world," country singer Tom T. Hall said in the eulogy during a graveside ceremony Monday.

About 500 mourners showed up at the Lebanon Cemetery to pay their last respects to Carter, who was thrust into the national spotlight after his older brother, Jimmy, became president in 1977.

The younger Carter became well known for his down-home witticisms and his beer-drinking at a service station he once owned in Plains.

Carter, 51, died Sunday of pancreatic cancer, the disease that killed his father and an older sister. Carter was buried a short distance from the graves of his mother "Miss Lillian" Carter, and his father, James Earl Carter.

Billy Carter's widow, Sybil, and the couple's six children were escorted to the gravesite by friends and seated in front of Carter's cherry casket, which was covered by a blanket of exotic flowers and surrounded by dozens of wreaths.

Also among the large crowd were former President Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, who lived next door to Billy Carter. The former president said their relationship, strained during his years in the White House, improved in later years.

"We worked together for many years, side by side. While I was president, we went in opposite directions, but in the last year, we've just been friends," Carter said.

"My mother said, 'Never underestimate him,'" the former president said. "He was the most intelligent one in the family." In rising to deliver the eulogy, Hall noted that Carter had overcome many of his own personal problems and had been planning to devote his life to helping others deal with alcoholism.

"Billy Carter was struck down in the prime of his life. He was just beginning a new chapter. He was planning his travels to help others take charge of their lives," Hall said.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Dan Ariail, pastor of the Maranatha Baptist Church, where Jimmy Carter teaches Sunday school.

Some of Plains' most famous businesses were closed and flags flew at half-staff Monday. Billy's former service station and cousin Hugh Carter's antique store both closed for the day, and the Golden Peanut Co., a major local business, shut down during the funeral.

Anne Mae Bearden, a worker at the Plains Visitors Center east of town, said she had been getting numerous calls from Billy Carter admirers.

"Billy loved other people," she said. "He was never the bad guy the media made him out to be."

In the year since his pancreatic cancer was diagnosed, Carter had tried a variety of experimental treatments. He had lived longer than his doctors expected him to.

One of Carter's last major public appearances came in July, as he attended the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta. He had appeared frail, but in good spirits.

Carter, who once defined himself as a beer-drinking good ol' boy, was forced into the spotlight when his brother Jimmy rocketed from their tiny hometown into the White House.

He went from operator of the family peanut business to brother of the president, ever courted by those seeking to get closer to power.

Reporters eagerly wrote down every word as Carter, profanitylaced observations flowing as freely as the beer, held court in his little gas station.

Within the space of a few years, he put his name on a brand of beer that flopped, got in hot water with remarks denounced as racist or anti-Semitic, accepted money from Libya and was forced to sell some properties to pay a debt to the Internal Revenue Service.

He was born William Alton Carter III, on March 29, 1937, the youngest of four children.

He grew up in Archery, a child with a stutter and a poor student. Billy was 13 when the family moved the three miles to Plains, and 16 when his father died.

He ran the family peanut business until Jimmy, a Navy officer 13 years his senior, moved back home to take over. When he was old enough Billy married his high school sweetheart, Sybil, and joined the Marines.

He later took over the peanut business as his brother became enmeshed in politics, guiding it into a $5 million operation. Billy also made a stab at politics, running unsuccessfully for mayor of Plains in 1976.

"Billy Carter was struck down in the prime of his life," said Hall. "He was just beginning a new chapter. He died with courage, not to say he went gently into that dark night."

Schools Ask 'Why?'

Bethel Elementary School, said "this came as a surprise to all of us. I would have to go to those counties and ask what they've been doing. I don't think that it's we've not been working hard. We could probably work smarter in some areas."

Carolyn Ferebee, principal of Third Street School, said "there's a difference between teaching and testing. We've done an excellent job of teaching," but the terminology and methodology presented in the tests may not be ones used to teach the students, and consequently students are confused on the tests.

Helen Johnson, assistant principal of Bethel Elementary School, said, "we are encouraged to test all of our children," including most of the exceptional children, while some other counties do not test many of their children.

Board member Walter Morehead noted that third grade students whose parents had an eighth grade education or less scored above the region on the CAT test along with students whose parents had a high school education plus additional education. Those third grade students whose parents had an eighth grade education, but not a high school degree, and those third grade students whose parents finished high school, both fell below the region median.

But, in the sixth and eighth grades, only those students whose parents have a high school education plus additional education scored above the regional median.

"There's one thing that concerns me," Morehead said. "Those students went exactly where you expected them. You didn't expect that child to score high."

For students whose parents have little education, students in the lower socio-economic bracket and black students, "it's not expected for those students to achieve. The students are being taught where you're expecting them. To me, that's one of the things you prove over and over again."

School personnel noted that those conclusions were made from different groups of children and it would be better to track the same group to see if that were true. Also, the educational level of the children is guessed by teachers and principals, so there is room for error.

Board member Jack Collins said, "I don't see it as black and white. I see it as a motivational problem as an expectation problem. We've got to expect for them to perform. We should be so far above the norm it's pathetic."

Board member Mary Williams said she wanted to "pull out (test scores of) the black population at every school and compare what's happening at each school. You may find some trends."

Ross and Whitley said that could be done.

Board member Frank Grooms said minimum goals have been set and achievement of students indicate that. For example, if the goal is set to gain one or two percentile points, and students gain nine percentile points, the goal is too low, he said.

Ross said the Office of Civil Rights considers the gain to two percentile points as educational achievement.

The recent results of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), given to senior high school students, showed that Pitt County students gained four points overall this year, but dropped by four points in the verbal area.

Ross said "each school has developed a plan of action for improving test scores." He and Whitley have scheduled meetings with the staff and teachers in 22 of the 31 schools to provide workshops on testing, and a testing manual, listing the various tests students take and their purposes, has been provided for all schools.

Other initiatives to specifically help at-risk students include expanding the After School Tutorial Program in the housing projects; conducting a school-based development program for high risk students; developing a link between the schools, the Department of Social Services and the Health Department to identify families with young children so they can be targeted for recruitment into parenting programs and educational services, and hiring a coordinator to focus on at-risk services, Ross said.

Johnson's Suspension Is A Black Eye For Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Seoul Olympics, the ones that would end 20 years marked by political protests, terrorism and boycotts, now have their own black spot: a fool's gold of a medal lost by Ben Johnson, the world's fastest human.

The Canadian sprinter, tested positive for using steroids, lost his 100-meter Olympic medal to American Carl Lewis, his traditional foe, on Tuesday and was thrown out of the Games, with a two-year ban on track races.

His fabulous world record of 9.79 seconds was wiped from the books and the event which had been the biggest attraction in Seoul became a black spot on these Games.

Johnson's entourage said the result of the drug testing was a grave shock for the sprinter.

"The only thing we can say at this stage is that it is a tragedy, a mistake or a sabotage," said Johnson's manager, Larry Heidebrecht. "Up to five days before the race, Ben was in perfect condition. Something has happened in those days."

"We do not know what happened and how it happened, but apparently somebody has sabotaged Ben and we will find out who it was and how it was done."

The manager said Johnson was given a bottle of a soft drink by someone, perhaps an official or a volunteer, before the semifinals or the final of the 100, and the sprinter drank it.

He stressed his doctor saw the "yellow goopy substance" in the bottle, which smelled odd, and washed it.

But Verdier responded: "The steroid profile is not consistent with this claim."

The drug involved is used by athletes to build up their muscle bulk. But it is considered by doctors to be one of the most dangerous anabolic steroids, which can cause liver disturbances, including cancer. It was once thought to be undetectable, but modern and sophisticated test laboratories have been identifying it over the past few years.

Johnson was under shock and virtually incapable of understanding what was happening to him, when he returned his gold medal to IOC vice president Richard Pound, also a Canadian, officials said. He then flew off to New York with his mother, his sister and his coach.

Carol Anne Lethern, head of the Canadian delegation, had what she termed the "unfortunate task" of informing Johnson of the IOC decision to strip him of his medal.

"My reading of Ben's reaction is that, No. 1, he was completely in a state of shock," she said. "At that point in time, he still did not comprehend the situation."

"He wasn't even able to speak. It was a very difficult moment for all of us."

The chairman of the IOC medical commission called the case "extremely grave."

"This shows our intent to clean the sport of this kind of cancer," said Alexander de Merode.

Washburn Is Suspended

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Hawks center-forward Chris Washburn has been suspended from the National Basketball Association and returned to the NBA's rehabilitation center in Van Nuys, Calif., after suffering a relapse with substance abuse.

Hawks general manager Stan Kasten Monday confirmed that Washburn is suspended without pay until doctors clear the former North Carolina State player to return to basketball.

Gary Bettman, the NBA counsel, said Washburn had received a "second strike" under the league's substance abuse program, but he would not reveal what Washburn had done.

"You can receive a strike for a number of reasons," Bettman said. "You can admit to a problem. You can flunk a test. You can not comply with the after-care program."

Ted Hodge, Washburn's uncle, said his nephew had been tested for drugs three times a week and had been running and working out.

Drugs Are The Rule Rather Than Exception

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — They come to the Olympics to run faster, jump higher, lift more than anyone before. And in recent years, more and more, they've had a little help from a "friend" — pills, injections or other drug forms.

Drug scandals first knocked Olympic athletes off their victory pedestals at the 1972 Summer Games in Munich. Today, one Olympic official estimates that 6 percent of the world's top athletes use banned drugs to improve their performance.

The Olympians themselves consider that conservative.

"Everybody uses drugs," says sprinter Horace Dove-Edwin of Sierra Leone. Says American hurdler Edwin Moses, "Drug use is worse than it should be."

The Olympic movement was shaken Tuesday when the International Olympic Committee stripped Canadian Ben Johnson of the gold medal he was awarded last Saturday after his world record-breaking 100-meter dash. A test for anabolic steroids in his system turned up positive.

Such substances can increase the muscle mass in athletes as they train.

It was the first time a medal-winning sprinter had been disqualified from an Olympics for drug use. But it was not the first drug disqualification at these 1988 Games.

Four weightlifters, including two gold-winning Bulgarians, and two competitors in the modern pentathlon, one Spaniard and one Australian, have been thrown out of the Seoul Games for the use of various banned substances.

Drug scandal had tainted these Games even before they began.

American swimming star Angel Myers, a medal hopeful in five events, was dropped from the American team when a urinalysis detected signs of steroid use.

Weightlifters, in particular, find the muscle-building steroids invaluable in the pursuit of a place in the record books. But competitors in distance running, cycling, wrestling, even ice hockey have been bounced from Olympic Games for using steroids or one of the other 3,700 substances proscribed by the IOC.

Throughout history, athletes have used stimulants or pain killers to enhance their abilities.

Inca runners in pre-Columbian Peru chewed coca leaf. In the 19th century, runners, cyclists and others often took laudanum or strychnine. The Europeans began testing cyclists for amphetamines and other substances in the 1950s, and the IOC instituted its large-scale screening at the 1968 Winter Games.

L.A.'s Thoughts Geared On Mets

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Mixed in with a celebration of the Dodgers' division-clinching victory were sober thoughts of their playoff opponent, the New York Mets, who mugged the boys from Los Angeles throughout the season.

"The Mets have been beating up on us all year," said Dodgers utilityman Mickey Hatcher, whose eighth-inning RBI single produced the decisive run in Monday night's 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres that clinched the National West title.

"But we believe our team is close to them (the Mets)," Hatcher said. "It's going to be a pitching duel out there. It's just a matter of us getting our offense rolling."

The Mets, who travel to Los Angeles to open the NL playoff series on Oct. 4, won 10 of their 11 regular-season games against Los Angeles and were 6-0 at Dodger Stadium.

"They beat us during the season, but that makes no difference going into the playoffs. It's a new season," said the Dodgers' Mike Devereaux.

Outfielder Kirk Gibson, who brought a tenacious style of play to Los Angeles and emerged as the club's inspirational leader after signing as a free agent during the off-season, said the team collectively had to put aside any thoughts of defeatism.

"We're going to have to think positive and we're going to have to play good ball against them (the Mets)," Gibson said. "They're not the type of team that you can give a lot of runs away to."

"We've got a long way to go. We had to get it (the clinching) over with. It's over with now and we've got a week to get ready for the playoffs."

The Dodgers clinched their fourth NL West title in eight years after reliever Jay Howell got Marvell Wynne on a pop out to second to end the game. Wynne made the final out agonizing for Howell, who threw 10 pitches to the pinch-hitter before coaxing the shallow fly that was caught by Steve Sax.

"I think that was the toughest out this year," said Howell, who was mobbed by his teammates after picking up his 21st save. "With (second-place) Cincinnati playing so well, we knew we had to do it ourselves."

Libretto Might Get 1st Start

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Charlie Libretto has earned the right to be the number one quarterback, East Carolina football coach Art Baker said at his weekly press conference Monday.

But that doesn't mean that he will be the starting quarterback come Saturday when the Pirates host Southwestern Louisiana in Ficklen Stadium, Baker added.

"I'm always reluctant to change quarterbacks," Baker said. "But Charlie was impressive Saturday and he's earned the right to work with the first unit in practice this week."

How well Libretto does in practice will determine whether he will get the nod on Saturday, according to Baker.

Libretto, who came off the bench Saturday to lead East Carolina back to within a whisker of victory, completed eight of 15 passes for 197 yards and ran for an additional 40. Three of his passes went for touchdowns as he rallied the Pirates from a 38-27 deficit to a 43-38 lead.

However, the defense fell apart in the final 1:38 allowing Southern Mississippi to come back and pull out a 45-43 victory.

Baker said that while he was impressed with Libretto's performance, there were also things in Travis

Southall Is Enduring The Pain

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

For East Carolina guard Stewart Southall, pain is just one of the unpleasant things in football that must be dealt with, much like tough defeats such as the Pirates' 45-42 loss to Southern Mississippi last Saturday.

Southall, a 6-1, 263-pound junior from Milledgeville, Ga., plays each week with a variety of hurts, including a degenerative knee condition, but he feels that's just part of the game.

"It's just something you have to block out," he said. "Pain is going to be there. In the fourth quarter Saturday, me and Billy (Michel) and Wade (Perry) had to switch off. My knees were giving out and Billy (also) has a bad knee."

"I was, (healthy) knock on wood, in high school and come here and if you look at my medical records I should be in a wheel chair."

Besides his knee problems, Southall also had to overcome a broken fibula and dislocated ankle last spring just to get ready to play.

"I wish I could order new parts," Southall said. "Each time I see my

Routing The Russkies Just Not The Same

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Time was when routing the Russkies provided the measure of U.S. athletic success on the basketball court.

But now that the U.S. women are regularly rolling over the Soviets in international competition, the meeting between East and West is hardly the big deal it once was.

"The rivalry's kind of left," said Teresa Edwards, a member of the 1984 Olympic team and the U.S. teams that defeated the Soviets twice in 1986. "We've beaten them three times now."

The latest meeting between the squads wasn't even in the Olympic finals. The United States ran away from the Soviets 102-88 in Tuesday's semi-final game.

"It makes a big statement about what the United States has been able to accomplish in the last few years in women's basketball," said U.S. coach Kay Yow.

Assured of at least a silver medal, the U.S. team, which won the gold in L.A., now advances to Thursday's final against Yugoslavia.

After the buzzer sounded, the players huddled at center court, reminding each other, "Four down, one to go and it's our gold."

With the semi-final win, the American team is a big step closer to its "Sole goal, Seoul gold," as T-shirts sported by the women proclaim.

And it's shown that the Soviets, Olympic gold medalists in 1976 and 1980, aren't the team to beat anymore.

"We're the team to be beat," said Edwards, "and everybody's going to be shooting at us."

This team, which in the evenings gathers to play cards and the new game Pictionary, is built around a nucleus that has played together for more than two years on the international level.

"That's definitely helped us grow together and jell," said center Anne Donovan, who as a member of the 1980 and 1984 U.S. Olympic teams is the grande dame of women's basketball.

ECU Quarterback Club Set To Meet

The East Carolina Quarterback Club will hold its weekly meeting tonight at the Pirate Club at 5:30 p.m.
Game films will be shown at 5:30 and dinner will be served at 6:30. The week's top individual player performances will be awarded following dinner and Pirate coach Art Baker and one of his assistants will speak at 7 p.m.

Coburn Captures Football Contest

Suzy Coburn of P.O. Box 550, Grifton, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.
Coburn correctly picked the winners in 28 of the 32 games listed on last week's contest pages.
Second place went to Bill Browning of Rt. 8, Box 271, Greenville. He picked the winners in 27 of the 32 games. His victory, however, comes on the basis of his point total guess. His guess of 84 was closest to the actual total of 93 scored in Wyoming's 48-45 win over Air Force.

Raiders Top Broncos In Overtime

DENVER (AP) — Leave it to Al Davis to paraphrase himself and the "just win, baby," philosophy that has been the trademark of the Oakland and Los Angeles Raiders for 25 years.
In fact, after quarterback Jay Schroeder, making his first start for the Raiders led them back Monday night from a 24-point halftime deficit to send the game into overtime tied at 27-27. Davis scowled when he was congratulated on the comeback.
"The idea," he snarled, "is to win."
Win the Raiders did — tying the game with four seconds left on Matt Bahr's 44-yard field goal, then winning 30-27 on Bahr's 35-yarder with 3:26 left in overtime.
In an unlikely game, the winning kick was set up by the unlikely of players — Zeph Lee, a running back with the strike replacement Broncos last year who was converted to safety with the Raiders and entered the game at that position for the first time a play earlier when Stacey

Toran was injured.
Lee picked off the fourth interception thrown by John Elway, who just heaved the ball downfield after being chased back 26 yards from the line of scrimmage at the 46.
"I'm sure that last pass that John threw is one that he'd like to have back," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said in one of the game's many understatements.
Lee returned the ball 20 yards to the Denver 31 and five running plays later, with the ball at the 17, Bahr kicked the winner, leaving the Raiders tied at 2-2 in the AFC West with San Diego and Seattle and leaving the defending AFC champion Broncos at 1-3.
It was a classic Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde game — the Broncos owned the first half, the Raiders the second.
"I wish I could have given some Knute Rockne speech," said Raiders Coach Mike Shanahan, whose team trailed 24-0 at halftime in his return to Denver, where had been the offensive coordinator.

"I just said I was embarrassed and that there was a lot of pride at stake. We just had to play our game."
"I was in shock at halftime," said Schroeder, playing his first game for the Raiders since being traded from Washington on Sept. 6.
"But I figured, 'what did we have to lose?' We just went out for the second half not wanting to look bad."
They certainly looked that way in the first half.
Schroeder's first pass as a Raider was picked off at the Denver 13 by Simon Fletcher and he was just two for eight in the first half for 26 yards — he had 216 yards in the second half and overtime and finished 13 of 35 for 242 yards.
Meanwhile, Elway, who had 155 of his 220 yards in the first half, set up one touchdown with an 86-yard pass to Vance Johnson and threw a seven-yard TD pass to Steve Sewell.
Tony Dorsett, who finished with 119 yards in 32 carries to move past Jim Brown into second place on the all-time rushing list with 12,335 yards, scored twice on one-yard runs and Rich Karlis kicked a 39-yard field goal.

In fact, a field goal Karlis didn't kick — the Broncos inexplicably let the clock run out at the Raiders' 17-yard line just before the half — may have been the biggest play of the game.
Schroeder made it necessary for Reeves to take the blame.
He threw for nearly identical touchdowns of 40 and 42 yards on swing passes to fullback Steve Smith in the third quarter and also threw a 48-yarder to Mervyn Fernandez that got the Raiders out of a deep hole at their own one. That eventually led to a 28-yard Bahr field goal that made it 24-17 early in the fourth quarter.
Denver's Ken Bell fumbled the ensuing kickoff and it was recovered at the 17 by Steve Strachan, his former college teammate at Boston College, setting up the tying score, on Marcus Allen's four-yard run.

Tim Chandler

No one on East Carolina's football team could have felt more snakebitten by Southern Mississippi's come-from-behind 45-42 victory over the Pirates Saturday than backup quarterback Charlie Libretto.
Saturday's loss marked the third consecutive year the Golden Eagles had wiped out an impressive showing by Libretto.
Libretto came off the bench Saturday to pass for 197 yards and three touchdowns, completing eight of 15 passes. One of the touchdown passes, an 84-yarder to wingback Reggie McKinney, broke the school record for the longest passing touchdown. Yet, the Pirates came out on the short end of the score, again.

"It (the loss) really hurt," Libretto said following the game. "We had a great team effort offensively, but came up short. The play Reggie made was just a great individual effort. The (offensive) line gave me time to look and once he caught it the rest was just his excellent athletic ability."
Libretto was sent into the game by the Pirate coaches for good with 5:50 remaining on the scoreboard clock Saturday. Southern Miss had just increased its lead to 38-27 and the Pirates' hopes of winning were beginning to look dim.

Charlie Libretto

Libretto, however, raised the hopes back up on the Pirate sideline quickly as he led the Pirates 79 yards in nine plays for a touchdown. After Willie Lewis ran in the two-point conversion, the Pirates trailed only 38-35 with 4:22 to play.
Once the defense stymied the Golden Eagles following the ensuing kickoff, Libretto led the offense back onto the field with 2:57 remaining in the game. This time, the 6-1, 200-pound junior from Middleburg, Fla., guided the Pirates 68 yards in six plays to the endzone. Following the PAT, the Pirates led 42-38 with 1:38 to play and Libretto seemed sure to be the hero of the game.

Unfortunately for both Libretto and the Pirates, the Golden Eagles drove down the field and with 12 seconds showing on the clock, scored on a 5-yard pass to win the game 45-42.
Libretto's performance Saturday didn't go unnoticed by the Pirate coaches. At his weekly press conference Monday, ECU head coach Art Baker said Libretto would be the starting quarterback in Saturday's game against Southwestern Louisiana if he continues to work well in practice this week.

"Probably he will (start), but we always base our starting teams on practice," Baker said. "I think Charlie Libretto has earned the right to work with our number one offensive team this week. We had been aware for a few weeks that Charlie came back in great shape (this fall) and certainly has been playing his best football and showed us that Saturday, leading us to two touchdowns in the last five minutes for what we thought was good enough to win."

"You could not ignore that Charlie Libretto had a great day Saturday and deserves an opportunity to be looked at. It will not be that big a thing because we will continue to use both quarterbacks. It will depend on what happens in practice."

But a possible starting position Saturday against the Ragin' Cajuns is little consolation for Libretto following the loss to Southern Mississippi.

It makes it bad enough to lose a game in the manner the Pirates did Saturday — but for the same team to snatch a win from you three years in a row is a little too much to take.

If you recall, the Golden Eagles dashed the Pirates hopes for a winning season last year, taking a 38-34 victory in the Pirates' season finale.
Libretto was the hero in that game for the Pirates also.

With the Pirates trailing 38-21 with just under seven minutes to play, he came off the bench, completing seven of 12 passes for 131 yards and a touchdown, and directed the Pirates on two scoring drives to close to within 38-34.

Perhaps the loss that hurt the most to Libretto came during the 1986 campaign. Libretto, then a true freshman, drove the Pirates 80 yards in just 1:40 for a 21-20 lead with just eight seconds left on the Ficklen Stadium scoreboard.

However, as Pirate fans were chalking up the win, Southern Miss quarterback Andrew Anderson hit Lyneal Alston with a 73-yard pass completion, but as time ran out the ball was whistled dead at the ECU 20 when Alston made an illegal forward lateral, which led to a touchdown.

The Pirates were left with the decision to accept the penalty and give the Golden Eagles a chance at a field goal or decline the penalty and let the touchdown stand. Naturally, they took the penalty.

But with no time showing on the clock, Rex Banks split the uprights with a 31-yard field goal giving Southern Miss a 23-21 victory.

Blue Jays Continue Mastery Over Boston

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Boston Red Sox' magic number is still three because the Toronto Blue Jays still have their number.

"There isn't much to say," Red Sox manager Joe Morgan said after another loss to the Blue Jays, an 11-1 decision at Fenway Park on Monday night. "We didn't hit, we didn't field, we didn't pitch all that well. It's a good game to get out of the way in a hurry."

That marked Boston's ninth loss in 11 games to Toronto this season. The Red Sox have yet to beat the Blue Jays at home in five games.

Jeff Musselman led the Toronto victory by pitching seven-hit ball over seven innings.

Tigers 6, Indians 3
Darrell Evans hit a three-run homer, his fifth in his last eight games, and Fred Lynn added a solo shot as Detroit beat Cleveland.

Yankees 5, Orioles 4
Rafael Santana drove in two runs with an eighth-inning single to lead New York over Baltimore.

Rangers 5, White Sox 3
Steve Buechele and Jerry Browne hit consecutive RBI doubles in a three-run ninth inning to pace Texas over Chicago.

Royals 5, Mariners 0
Mark Gubicza shut out Seattle on three hits, notching his first 20-victory season.

Gubicza, 13-18 last year, struck out 10 — including five in a row at one point — and did not walk a batter in raising his mark to 20-7.

National League

Cincinnati 3, San Francisco 2
The Cincinnati Reds were eliminated from the NL West as the Los Angeles Dodgers clinched the title with a 3-2 win over the San Diego Padres, but Tom Browning allowed just one hit before faltering in the ninth as the Reds beat San Francisco, 5-2, Monday night.

Browning, 18-5, gave up a single in the ninth to leadoff batter Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell followed with his 19th homer. After Candy Maldonado singled, John Franco relieved and set a club record by earning his 38th save in 40 opportunities.

Cardinals 7, Pirates 1
Jose DeLeon pitched a three-hitter to win for the seventh time in his last seven decisions and Willie McGee had four hits and two RBI to lead St. Louis.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

Rookie Randy Johnson won his third straight start since being called up from the minors Sept. 16 as Montreal beat Chicago.

Johnson struck out four and walked three. He has allowed just five earned runs in 20 innings. Tim Burke, the third Montreal pitcher, worked 1 1/3 innings to earn his 17th save.

Mets 10, Phillies 4

New York won for the 16th time in 18 games by taking advantage of 10 walks, three errors, two wild pitches and a hit batsman.

Southall, Bucs, Set For USL

parents, I say order me some new parts."

Aches and pains, though, are usually lessened by wins and conversely increased following a defeat. And after the loss to the Golden Eagles, Southall was in pain.

"It's real hard to deal with," Southall said. "You go out there and you lay it on the line and you hope your teammates will lay it on the line and you come up short and especially against Southern Mississippi it's three years in a row. I couldn't really accept it in the locker room. I finally just calmed down and finally accepted it. You have to deal with it in your own way."

"(Offensive line) coach (Steve) Shankweiler came up to us in the locker room and we were crying and he was crying and one thing that really was a strong point was he said not to give up. He said it was going to come."

The game marked a strong performance by Southall and his offensive teammates, who rallied from a 38-27 deficit to actually forge out a 42-38 lead, led by two touchdown passes by backup quarterback Charlie Libretto, in the final minute only to fall short in the end.

Travis Hunter has been the starting quarterback for the first four games of the season, but Libretto's performance could vault him into the starting lineup for Saturday's game against Southwest Louisiana.

And that's quite a chain of events for the Pirates' offense. Libretto quit the team twice last season but returned after being contacted by ECU coaches in the offseason. It was a situation where there could have been some hard feelings.

"I try not to get caught up in those things," Southall said. "Some guys didn't want Charlie coming back. After we got back in the preseason, I was like let the boy alone, let him do his job because he can help us. He made a mistake in quitting twice, but Charlie is back and I believe in Charlie. He can help us just like he did Saturday even though we fell short."

As far as Southall is concerned, the Pirates can operate successfully with both quarterbacks. "We did it Saturday," he said.

With a 1-3 record thus far, Saturday's game against Southwest Louisiana could be termed a crucial game for the Pirates, who follow that contest with matchups against nationally-ranked West Virginia and Florida State.

"This is one we need to win big time," Southall said. "This summer the whole offensive line stayed here and Coach Shankweiler always was telling us that the two hardest games (in September) were going to South Carolina and Southwest Louisiana."

"They are just as good or better than Southern Mississippi. It's a must-win game for us. We need to come out with a big win. Every week is important (though) because going into October we have three ranked teams. Momentum is important. We haven't built a lot of it up yet. If we win this week it is going to give us some."

But Southall represents one constant for ECU coach Art Baker.

"Stewart plays each week with some sort of injury and is a great example to the rest of our players," he said. "He always manages to play, knock on wood, no matter what his injuries are. He's just a veteran who knows how to play with pain and what to do in the ballgames."

DUNKEL INDEX

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY Sept. 28

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Take delays in stride. Try not to use emotions to get your own way. Everything turns to your favor when you use self-control.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Use gentle persuasion to get what you want. Don't miss an opportunity to make a lucky move. You will benefit from good living habits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you feel pulled in more than one direction, take time out to handle personal affairs. Don't hold on to things you know don't work well.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A distant contact can prove important. Keep your emotions under wraps, and share them only with someone close to you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Don't let success go to your head. You have the power to direct your affairs if you take a "look and see" attitude. Ask more questions.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Try to unwind from the day's pressures. Exercise and relax by working in your home environment. Stay with what is familiar to you today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Your capacity to bring out the best in others is a useful tool. Romance is at its high point. Use the weekend for a change of pace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Stick to your game plan. It's mind over matter, and you have control. Spend time with people who are feeling low and need a boost.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Affairs at home will keep you busier than usual. Avoid giving nasty responses as a result of outside pressure. Be understanding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): A romantic interest appears in spite of your better judgment. Don't let social affairs interfere. Use your talents to move ahead at work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Mingle with those who are upbeat and on the same wavelength. Someone is in the picture who could help with your career.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your energy and enthusiasm are high. Try not to take matters too seriously and spoil all the fun. Details can be worked out later.

 Unquestionably, the most successful bridge teacher in the U.S. is Bill Root, who divides his time between New York and Boca Raton. His annual Royal Viking Line bridge cruise attracts more than 150 players eager to learn from the master. While Root's talents as a teacher are legend, many tend to overlook that he is also one of this country's great players. He was declared on this hand from the recent Spingold team event at the Summer North American Championships, held in Salt Lake City.

Systemically, North's jump to four clubs showed a balanced hand with the equivalent of an opening bid and at least four-card heart support. With a dead minimum opening bid, Root had no ambitions beyond game.

West led a spade, won in hand. On the surface it might seem that declarer's only losers were two trumps and a club, but the danger of a spade ruff was imminent. Declarer made the technically correct of play of a low trump. West alertly took his king and returned another spade, and a careless declarer would win in dummy and lead a second trump. That would spell defeat. West would win and get to East with the ace of clubs, and the spade return would permit West to ruff for the setting trick.

There was an elegant counter. Instead of leading a second trump, Root cashed three rounds of diamonds, discarding a club from his hand. When East sluffed on the fourth diamond, declarer discarded his remaining club. West won a diamond trick he did not expect, but he now had no way to get to his partner's hand for the ruff. Root was able to draw trumps at his leisure and claim his contract.

Olivia Gets Party On 40th Birthday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Grammy Award-winning singer Olivia Newton-John turned 40 at a surprise party planned by husband Matt Lattanzi.

Family and friends attended the gathering Monday for Miss Newton-John, who just returned from a trip to England to promote her new album,

"The Rumour," publicist Beebe Kline said.

One of the first Australian stars in the United States, Miss Newton-John has recorded 16 albums, had five No. 1 singles and starred in three films, including "Grease" with John Travolta.

Miss Newton-John has won five

Grammy Awards and sold more than 100 million records in the last 17 years.

The singer also is opening boutiques called Koala Blue. One already has opened on New York's Long Island and she will be traveling to San Jose next month to open another, Ms. Kline said.

'Munsters' Revival Planned As Syndicated Series On TV

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's not the long, tedious makeup session for "The Munsters Today" that gets to actor John Schuck. It's the boots.

The boots are the final part of the transformation into Herman Munster, a comic version of Frankenstein's monster in this revival of the 1960s sitcom.

"It takes an hour and a half to put on the makeup," said Schuck, "and the same amount of time to take it off. The hard part for me are the boots."

The boots weigh 5 pounds apiece and turn the 6-foot-1 Schuck into a towering giant.

"With the boots, I'm 6-foot-6," said Schuck. "I'm not as tall as Fred Gwynne, who was Herman in the original series. But they are very helpful in terms of movement. They add a mechanical awkwardness. I wear them only when I have to, and when I do I sit down as much as possible."

The new syndicated comedy series also stars Lee Meriwether as Lily, Herman's wife (played by Yvonne DeCarlo in the original), Howard Morton as Grandpa (Al Lewis), Jason Marsden as Eddie Munster (Butch Patrick) and Hilary Van Dyke as Marilyn (Beverly Owen and Pat Priest).

In the 1960s "The Munsters" was a campy show that had creatures from the horror classics living in suburbia like a twisted sendup of "Father Knows Best." They lived at 1313 Mockingbird Lane. Herman was a takeoff on the Frankenstein monster. Lily looked like a vampire. Grandpa was Count Dracula. Eddie was the Beaver as Stephen King might have conceived him.

"Everybody I've talked to about the show has been fascinated by the idea," said Schuck. "They didn't say, 'What are you doing that for?' People think it's great. If it's true there are only three or four good ideas in the world, this is one of them. It's a funny show."

"It also affirms some areas, like the importance of the family. Although these are very bizarre people, they're very real for a TV family. I'd say they're as real as Alan Thicke's (on ABC's 'Growing Pains'). And when you're this bizarre, you can make statements about society that give children a very positive reinforcement. The last reason is that it's something familiar. People will be comfortable with this family. I think the fact that it's been done before is a help, not a hindrance."

Schuck, who was interviewed in his dressing room, said the show has been brought up to date so the Munsters now face an even more complicated world.

"They think they're normal and everybody else is weird," he said. "And after doing 18 shows, I think they're right."

Schuck spent 10 years on the stage before his first film, "M-A-S-H."

"I was in a play with Michael Learned at the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco when director Robert Altman came up to see her," he said. "He was thinking of casting her as Lt. Dish. Instead, he cast me as Painless Paul the dentist and she went on to become the mother on 'The Waltons.'"

After that he did three more pictures with Altman, "Brewster McCLOUD," "McCabe and Mrs. Miller" and "Thieves Like Us." He would have been in "Nashville," too, but was busy at the time in the TV series "McMillan and Wife."

"McMillan and Wife," which starred Rock Hudson and Susan Saint James, began as a 1971 TV movie called "Once Upon a Dead Man." It was the first series for Schuck, who played Hudson's befuddled assistant, Sgt. Enright. It became a part of NBC's rotating Mystery Movie with "Columbo," "McCloud," and "Hec Ramsey."

Schuck starred in three other comedy series: "Holmes and Yoyo," with Richard B. Shull in 1976, "Turnabout," with Sharon Gless in 1979 and "The New Odd Couple" in 1982-83.

He got a preview of his monster makeup when he played a Klingon in the movie "Star Trek IV." "I had to get up at 3 in the morning and was in makeup for five hours," he said. "Thank goodness the role only lasted two days."

Schuck will also be seen in two upcoming movies, "Second Sight" with Bronson Pinchot and John Larroquette and "My Mom's a Werewolf" with Susan Blakely and John Saxon.

BALTIMORE — Edward Asner is up on a soapbox again: "If good people are willing to lie down and let the fixers run over them, they will run over them. ... We sign away our birthright when we don't try to make a difference; we surrender our birthright by not doing so and by not encouraging other people to do so."

In the past decade, the 58-year-old actor has stumped for so many causes, it is amazing he has had time to act. Besides serving two controversial terms as president of the Screen Actors Guild, Asner has raised money to send medical supplies to the El Salvadoran rebels, appeared at benefits for striking air traffic controllers and meatpackers, handed out groceries to unemployed steelworkers — the list goes on and on.

But this time the indifference and corruption he is railing against are themes in a play — a revival of Garson Kanin's 1946 comedy, "Born Yesterday," in which Asner portrays Harry Brock, a millionaire junk dealer who comes to Washington to peddle influence. The production, co-starring Madeline Kahn as Brock's ex-chorus girl mistress, is opening in Baltimore as part of a pre-Broadway tour that continues on to Washington, Denver, Pittsburgh and Boston before arriving in New York in January.

For an activist like Asner, this play is particularly appealing "because it talks about blowing the whistle," he said in recent a phone interview from the Cleveland Play House, where the production originated. "Since the crooks are always working so much harder than the non-crooks, we always have to be calling attention to them, even in the best of times."

Of course, in "Born Yesterday" Asner portrays one of the crooks. It is hardly the first time he has played a character whose views are antithetical to his own. In 1977, he won an Emmy for his portrayal of the slave-ship captain in "Roots." The same year he played former Louisiana governor Huey Long in a TV movie of the week. And in his long-running role as beloved city editor

Lou Grant, he once crossed a picket line.

This is not the first time Asner has played Harry Brock. In 1973, he appeared in a summer stock production in Ohio and Michigan; his co-star was Karen Valentine. That production was his last experience in live theater. "It's been a long 15 years," he said. "I sure as hell don't pop around the stage the way I used to."

That is not the only difference, though. This time around, he is "a tougher Harry Brock. I was fresh on hiatus from 'Mary Tyler Moore' then, and I guess in a way I wanted to make sure he wasn't too throat-cutting." In the interim, he continued, "I've matured. I realize the needs of the play."

Asner has undergone some significant personal changes in the intervening 15 years, as well, particularly in the area of political activism. There was a time, he said, when he would see an actor taking a political stand and think, "They probably ought to run a caption under him saying, 'Remember, folks, this is just an actor,' and then I appended that saying: When a politician was up there they ought to run a caption under him saying, 'Remember, folks, this is just a politician.'"

For years, Asner kept his political views to himself; throughout the period of Hollywood blacklisting, throughout the Vietnam War. "I was taking care of No. 1, just like a yuppie, not wanting to get myself into trouble," he said. "Finally the time came when, since I had waited to become a name and I had become a name, I had to either speak or get off the pot."
