Shuttle Crew Gets Word: 'No Constraints'

By HOWARD BENEDICT AP Aerospace Writer CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Anticipation and tension rose today as final preparations accelerated for launching Discovery and five astronauts into orbit at 9:59 a.m. EDT Thursday on the first U.S. manned flight since the Challenger tragedy.

ing forward to a good countdown and a safe launch. "The weather looks fine for in the morning so we're feeling very confident," said Robert Crippen, the veteran astronaut who has one-man authority to approve or veto the long-awaited launch effort.

being prepared for a future shuttle flight, should have no impact on the Discovery mission. The Discovery countdown was in a scheduled day-long hold, a process that gave NASA time for troubleshooting.

could not withstand another accident like Challenger. Discovery's crew — Frederick H. Hauck, Richard O. Covey, George D. Nelson, John M. Lounge and David C. Hilmers — planned a leisurely day today, receiving briefings on launch preparations and visiting with their wives at crew quarters seven miles from the launch pad, 39B.

tiny cut found on one of its O-ring seals does not exist on a twin rocket whose launch is Discovery's main item of business. The cut apparently was inflicted during installation and does not represent a design or manufacturing defect, the sources said.

flight is set for 9:59 a.m., with a 2½-hour window that allows for weather or technical delays. NASA officials said they'd done everything possible to make the mission safe.

Mission Schedule

Thursday, Sept. 29 to Monday, Oct. 3

Day 1 Launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla. Thursday morning. Six hours into flight, astronauts will deploy a Tracking and Data Relay Satellite (TDRS) which will be used for future shuttle/ground communications. Day 2 Eleven science and technology experiments. Day 3 Continue experiments; try on space suits. Day 4 News conference with Earth, pre-landing checks. Day 5 Landing at Edwards AFB, Ca. Monday morning.

Crew Has New Breed Of Lifesavers

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The bulky orange pressure suits are far less comfortable than the coveralls shuttle crews once wore — and they take forever to put on. But they could be lifesavers for Discovery's astronauts. The 75-pound suits, never before worn into space, are to be worn only during takeoff and landing and come packed with parachutes, lifeboats and radios.

at NASA's Johnson Space Center. It's so uncomfortable, in fact, that NASA has cut the "launch window" — the span in which liftoff could occur — from three to 2½ hours to reduce the time the five crew members must spend on their backs inside the orbiter while dressed in the garments. The astronauts also will have to wake up about 30 minutes earlier than previously on launch day because it takes extra time to put the suits on.

The Rogers Commission, which investigated the 1986 Challenger explosion, urged the space agency to return to some type of escape system. NASA, after considering several possibilities, picked the escape hatch and pole. The most likely use for the escape system would be if the main engines failed during launch and prevented the shuttle from reaching orbit.

County Launches Land Use Study

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer The Pitt County Planning Board has officially launched the preparation of a long-range comprehensive land use plan for unincorporated areas of the county. Jeff Ulma, the county's planning director, said the plan is intended to be a policy document which will outline, in both map and text form, goals, objectives, policies and strategies for handling expected growth and development to the year 2008.

The first step in the year-long process was the recent appointment by the planning board of a five-member

The indictments allege more than 354 drug violations, with about 245 of the charges concerning possessing, selling and delivering heroin. There are also nearly 100 charges of cocaine violations.

'Adventures In Health' Center Opens Friday

By CHERIE EVANS Reflector Staff Writer An effort to promote better health habits in Pitt County and the surrounding area will begin with children as the Adventures in Health Center opens in Greenville Friday. Located at River Park North, the center is an effort to improve public health in the area, Kathy Brown, the center's director, said.

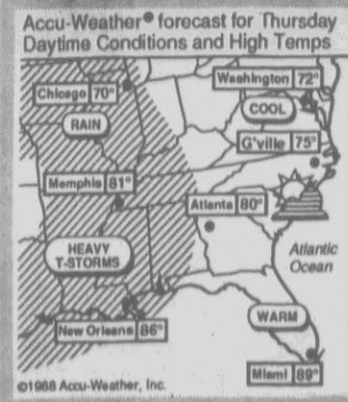

because they would be easier to influence with positive health messages. The health exhibits featured in the center are "hands-on, interactive kinds of exhibits," Ms. Brown said. "It's going to be fun so that kids will learn and remember." The exhibits are "based on what we believe is being used in the schools right now in the curriculum," Jerry Everhart, chairman of the exhibits, said.

Pitt Women In Profile

Few would argue that women have a tremendous impact on life in Pitt County. Whether production workers or professors, they make contributions to homes, business, industry and education in huge numbers. Statistics show their numbers are growing. Eight years ago, women accounted for more than half of the residents of the county, and marketing projections through 1988 show they make up a huge segment of the workforce. The 1980 census showed that about 60 percent of the women in Pitt County are on the job each day — and about one-third of them have children younger than 17.

women in 1988 have been addressed in stories on day care, flex and part-time work, minorities and time management. Profiles of Pitt County women, from a shift-working mother to a successful politician, reveal their secrets for facing questions raised by their presence on the job. Practical tips on safety, health and fitness, and rounding out a singles lifestyle are also included, as are an update on test-tube pregnancies and a look at chronic fatigue syndrome. There's also a group of stories mapping out the route to financial success. The road begins with a how-to story on setting up a budget and continues with a conversation with one of the county's female investment analysts. Just for good measure, the tabloid includes a look at the "Rich and Famous Stock Club," a group of women who're playing the market together. But these stories are only the beginning. Women can take an even closer look at themselves during two upcoming events, the "Women's Expo" on Saturday and "Women in '88," a weeklong series of programs. Schedules for both are included in Thursday's publication. We invite you to take a look.

The grant is distributed to the city through the N.C. Housing Finance Agency from funds provided through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Kroger Will Stay

Marilyn Smith, manager of Kroger Sav-On on Greenville Boulevard, says a restructuring plan announced by the parent company this week "will not affect us at all." Everything at the Greenville store, which opened in 1977, will remain the same, she said.

The Kroger Co. said Monday it would sell stores and food processing plants and reduce its work force as part of a restructuring aimed at defeating two takeover bids.

Included in the sale of some of its assets — to block a $4.6 billion bid by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. and a $4.32 billion offer from Dart Group Corp. — will be 13 stores in the Charlotte area, one in Gastonia, one in Salisbury and six in South Carolina, all in the Charleston area.

Kroger also has stores in Cary, Durham, Chapel Hill, Fayetteville, Southern Pines and Wilmington that won't be affected by the restructuring. And the move will not affect the opening of two new stores in Raleigh — one set to open in December, the second in February.

Members of the state's Advisory Budget Commission will make a brief stop in Greenville Tuesday as part of a tour of state facilities in the east.

Dick Edwards, executive assistant to Chancellor Richard Eakin, said the ABC tour group is scheduled to arrive at East Carolina University about 12:50 p.m. for a stop at Joyner Library, then drive by Rose High School on Elm Street before having lunch at the chancellor's residence on East Fifth Street.

Advisory Budget Commission members and staff will leave Greenville about 2:15 p.m. for Morehead City, where they will visit the state port, the marine fisheries division, the Maritime Museum in Beaufort, Fort Macon State Park at Atlantic Beach, the aquarium at Pine Knoll Shores and the regional beach access area at Emerald Isle Thursday night and Friday.

A visit to the state port and the New Hanover prison unit at Wilmington, and stops at Dobbs School and Caswell Center in Kinston, are included on the ABC tour's schedule Thursday morning.

Advisory Budget Commission members normally visit state facilities every two years — before the budget is developed for presentation to the General Assembly — "to see what is going on ... to see what is needed and why they need it," state budget office spokesman Janie Powell said this morning.

ECU Playhouse To Feature Five On-Stage Productions

The department of theater arts at East Carolina University will present five productions in McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina campus during its 1988-89 Playhouse season.

Edgar R. Loessin, chairman of the department, has announced that the season will include a family musical, three American plays and an evening of dance.

"The season will open Oct. 5 with "Carnival," winner of the New York Critics' Circle Award for Best Musical. Additional performances will be on Oct. 6, 7, 8 and 10.

"The staging of "A Moon For the Misbegotten," the season's second offering, will be performed on Nov. 18, 19, 21 and 22, in celebration of the 100th birthday of American playwright Eugene O'Neill.

It was the last completed play by the only playwright to have won four Pulitzer Prizes and is an interlude of bittersweet charm, sentiment and quiet torment.

"The Boys in the Band" will be at McGinnis Feb. 8-11, 1989. Mart Crowley's play has been described as sad and honest; a play about mixed-up human beings who just happen to be homosexuals. The play is set at a birthday party in a Greenwich Village apartment.

"Appearing fourth in the season is the "East Carolina Dance Theater" on March 15, 16, 17 and 18. This evening of dance has become an annual event. A varied program of modern, ballet and jazz is performed by students in the dance program at ECU, with choreography by the ECU dance faculty. Performances are generally sold out several days before the event.

"The final production of the season is John Pielmeir's "Agnes of God," on April 14, 15, 17 and 18. The show focuses on a nun charged with murdering her newborn infant, a court-appointed psychiatrist probing the young nun's sanity, and a mother superior who believes that Agnes is an innocent saint who experienced a virgin birth.

All performances will begin at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theater in the Messick Theater Arts Center.

Season tickets for all five productions are $25 and will be available through Oct. 10. A season ticket is for one reserved seat ticket for each performance. Single tickets may be purchased for each show one week prior to each opening — at $10 for the musical "Carnival" and at $5 for other productions. Group rates are available for parties of ten or more at $20 for season tickets; $8 for "Carnival" and $4 for all other productions.

Tickets may be charged on VISA or Mastercard by telephoning the box office, 757-6390; by mail order to:

General Manager, Department of Theater Arts, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27858-4353, or in person at the McGinnis Theater box office on Mondays through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. with extended hours until 8:30 p.m. on performance days.

ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina University Alumni Association has named its 1988 recipients of Outstanding Alumni Awards to be presented Oct. 8 in conjunction with the university's homecoming activities.

Receiving the awards will be William Scott Sawyer of Morehead City, Robert Allen Ward of Burlington and Henry Gaston Williamson Jr. of Wilson. The honorees were selected by the alumni association's directors based on nominations by alumni, faculty and staff.

The recipients will be recognized at the chancellor's annual awards luncheon in Minges Coliseum and during halftime of the Homecoming football game against West Virginia University.

Sawyer, a 1984 graduate, majored in political science and minored in psychology. Now 32, Sawyer is occupied by a number of interests, primarily the writing of his autobiography. He has assembled a collection of rare books and has taken correspondence courses toward a law degree through LaSalle University in California. Sawyer also designed and blueprinted his parents' home to eliminate physical barriers recognized only by the wheelchair-bound.

Ward is executive vice president of finance and administration of Unifi Inc., a texturizer of synthetic yarns with processing facilities in North Carolina and Ireland. Ward received a bachelor of science in business administration in 1962. As an undergraduate he was treasurer of the Student Government Association, a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity and treasurer of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Williamson is president of BB&T Financial Corp. He completed his bachelor's and master's degrees in business at ECU in 1969 and 1972, after which he went to work with BB&T's management development program. During his student years, Williamson was inducted into Beta Gamma Sigma and Omicron Delta Epsilon national honor societies.

High Hopes

Future Of Space Program At Stake

After a frustrating layoff of 32 months the United States stands ready to launch another space shuttle. The craft Discovery will carry with it into space both the unseen dreams of a nation and the very tangible political reality of space exploration.

There have been no launches carrying a human crew since the Challenger exploded resulting in the death of the crew. Thursday's launch, if not delayed, will mark the re-entry of the United States into the world of space travel. If it goes well, the launch will be the reaffirmation of the nation's space program. But failure could spell the end of the shuttle.

Anticipating the event prompts both excitement and apprehension. There are very few Americans who have not seen film clips of the Challenger explosion and carry with them the disbelief and sadness of that tragedy. A nation shocked and discouraged at death and failure now waits to watch its dream rekindled by another try. But it is difficult not to worry that the shuttle Discovery will repeat the performance of its ill-fated predecessor Challenger. A lot of Americans will catch their breath while the shuttle makes its ascent tomorrow.

But the upcoming launch undoubtedly has spread enthusiasm throughout the entire space industry since other projects were delayed pending resumption of the flights. It especially gives hope to the shuttle ground crew, whose activities have been shut down by the project's failure.

In the Titusville area thousands of visitors and locals will wear green "go" ribbons to show their support for the space launches.

The launch date won't be a national holiday, but Americans can be certain there will be a feeling of pride that, at last, an organized space program will resume. It is important for a world leader to seek new frontiers, and space is one of those frontiers.

The benefits of space travel and perhaps colonization are not readily apparent at present. But they are there. Future generations will reap great rewards from space. Virtually all of what is out there is unknown, but mankind has endless terra incognita to explore. The United States must maintain its role as a pioneer in space. The shuttle launch is the rebirth of that quest.

Just 20 More Years For The Gold

BOSTON — "Good morning. For those of you just joining us, I'm Bryant Gumbel. Today we have a really unusual Olympic event to share with you. It is called Rousing, or Getting to Work in the Morning.

In just a minute we'll see the American finalist. But first let's talk to Wendy Wakeupcall who will be reporting on this. Wendy, tell us about this remarkable performance sport.

Wendy: Well, Bryant as you know, Americans always do well in this event. This year we have a real potential winner.

Bryant: I understand she has been training for 25 years.

Wendy: That's right Bryant. She is in her mid-40s and except for a six-week maternity leave, a few vacations, and two or three weeks of back spasm, she has been Getting to Work in the Morning every single weekday.

'Today we have a really unusual Olympic event to share with you. It is called Rousing, or Getting to Work in the Morning. In just a minute we'll see the American finalist.'

Bryant: That's incredible. She's quite a competitor. Let's hope she can keep it up under Olympic pressure.

Wendy: Hold on Bryant, this event is about to begin. There's the radio alarm. I think it's playing Mozart. And there she goes! She's executing a perfect half turn over onto her side. Feet flat on the floor, knees nicely bent, back straight. And she's up! So far this is a great performance!

Bryant: I'm sure she's relieved just to get through the opening. Getting up is a compulsory for the GTW, isn't it Wendy?

Wendy: Yes indeed, Bryant. It carries a 2.2 degree of difficulty. But this morning it has a 3.5 because she stayed up late watching obscure sports on television. Look at that! She is walking directly to the bathroom. Beautiful! Listen to the crowd. This is an event that everyone can relate to.

Bryant: It's fantastic. While she's brushing her teeth, Wendy, let's hear more about this fine athlete.

Wendy: Well, Bryant, the American makes the GTW look easy. But in fact, this woman is suffering from a frozen shoulder. Watch for some delays while getting dressed, especially doing zippers. She also grinds her own coffee beans, which may mean a slowdown at breakfast.

Bryant: Okay Wendy, we'll be returning to you in just a few minutes. (Half-hour commercial break) And now back to Wendy. Tell us what's been going on.

Wendy: It's been unbelievably exciting. She completed her compulsory back exercises in ten minutes with 15 perfect pelvic tilts and 20 sit-ups. But she lost some time because she had to go down two flights of stairs to the washing machine to find her sweater. Now she's into a fairly difficult part of her routine, a half hour of aerobic walking.

Bryant: Is that compulsory?

Wendy: Actually, it's an option. Until two years ago she used up this time getting her daughter off to school. That's one of the things that's so fascinating about the GTW. There's still room for individuality. Oh wait a minute Bryant, this is getting tense. She's finished her walk a few minutes behind. She's going to have to make this up by cutting a few seconds off the shower. (Half hour break for commercials)

Bryant: How is it going now Wendy?

Wendy: I can't remember a better performance in the GTW event. This woman is so creative. She finished breakfast standing up. There goes the coffee cup into the sink. Remember, Bryant, that caffeine is the one drug allowed in this event. But she still has THE major challenge ahead of her.

Bryant: That's driving isn't it Wendy? I understand she's had some troubles there.

Wendy: Yes indeed. Just this month she banged her head getting into the car. In a local competition in 1982, she had an accident. And in the qualifying runs earlier this year, she was almost sidetracked by some of the worst road conditions in the history of the event. So let's hope for the best.

Bryant: And there she goes.

Wendy: Everything looks smooth. We're now 15 minutes into the commute. She is maneuvering through the city, around trucks and bicyclists. It's 25 minutes and she's pulling into the parking lot. This is so exciting! There she goes. She's got her pocketbook, she's got her magnetic key! SHE IS IN THE BUILDING AT 8:59 a.m.! Bryant, this crowd is going crazy! I think she's become a role model for all Americans!

Bryant: That's just unbelievable! The American has matched her own personal best! We have a great shot from our desk-cam at the woman and her coach. Look at her! She is just thrilled!

Wendy: Bryant, I've got her coach, the man she calls The Boss right here. Tell me, does this mean she'll get the gold?

The Boss: Absolutely, Wendy. Just 20 more years.

Wendy: Twenty more years for the gold medal?

Everybody Knows A Billy Carter

Everybody who lives in the South knows a Billy Carter. He operated a service station in Plains, Ga., was liked by most of his neighbors and friendly to strangers if they happened through town.

As with most such country store operators, Billy Carter would have lived out his life and never been known much beyond the rural neighborhood, except for one implausible event. His brother, Jimmy, became president of the United States.

Actually Billy and other members of the Carter family began to know limited fame even before Jimmy made it to the White House. Jimmy, the achiever in the family, had been successful in a number of areas and was governor of Georgia.

Anyway, presidential parents, brothers, sisters and sometimes cousins are sought out for their views on life once their relative is settled in the White House. Billy was no exception to that renown.

Reporters came to little Plains to see what Billy was thinking following Jimmy's inauguration as president. Billy had plenty of opinions of the good ol' boy variety and, while some pictured him as a country boy, he wasn't dumb. He had, after all, helped build the family multi-million dollar peanut industry.

Nevertheless he caused problems with some intemperate remarks, watched his namesake brew, "Billy" beer, flop, really got into trouble over his relationship with Libya and eventually had to pay a steep debt to the Internal Revenue Service.

This seemingly stereotypical southern male that many branded a redneck died Sunday of pancreatic cancer and was buried Monday in a ceremony attended by 500.

In the end, in his fight with cancer, Billy Carter stood as tall as he ever had. His brother was out of the White House after one term and the reporters no longer came. It was a valiant fight, but a losing one in the end. Billy Carter made the front pages one more time in his death. This time the nation remembered him for himself — one who was wiser than he sometimes appeared and a fighter who would do credit to any presidential family.

Labels Bespeak An Empty Mind

forbidden to to: hit low and hope no one notices.

But if the early polls are any indication, the American people did notice and, by a margin of 45 to 36 in an ABC survey, raised Dukakis' hand. The Duke was at ease. In fact, at times he seemed a bit smug and his smile, especially in profile, seemed a sneering gloat. He called the Vice President of the United States "George" and "Bush." He was dismissive of Bush's attempt at eloquence — "Being haunted, a thousand points of light. I don't know what that means" — and showed a certain contempt for his opponent: "But George, that's no answer."

If, as someone once said, an infinite number of monkeys and an infinite number of typewriters could produce "Hamlet," then surely one of those monkeys could master a presidential debate. Given the preparations, the rehearsals, the freeze-dried one-liners concocted for television sound bites, almost anyone with the capacity to memorize his Social Security number could put in a credible performance. Bush as much as conceded that when, in advance of getting off a quip, he said he was about to get off a quip: "Is this the time to unleash our one-liners?"

But a debate can tell you something, and this one told you what you already knew. Dukakis was organized, logical — coldly competent. Bush was rambling and occasionally tongue-tied. He was at his best when defending or asserting the successes of the Reagan administration. Where he was worst was when he had to explain his own ideology. It was then that he hit low.

The politician who has nothing to say attempts to label. That was the Bush tactic. Repeatedly, he tried to paint Dukakis as a raging liberal when, as anyone can see, Dukakis is not a raging anything. He attempted to characterize him as an elitist — an updating of the loathsome 1950s attack on "eggheads." That was the intent of the Boston crack — a low blow gone awry. Doubtless, Bush meant to say "Cambridge," the home of Harvard and not of the police department that recently endorsed him. He put his tongue on the wrong side of the Charles River.

Every so often in politics, the chickens come home to roost. Bush has run a campaign of ducking the issues (and the press) and of trying to label Dukakis as a loony of the left. That's what the Pledge of Allegiance issue is all about. That's what the ACLU issue is all about. His choice of a campaign style left him ill-prepared for a debate. Instead of defining what he finds loathsome about the ACLU, he did approximately what he has done all along — hurl the initials as if by themselves they said everything. He rattled off some of the organization's aims, but he was too quick about it and unconvincing to boot. If God is in the details, Bush is an atheist.

Why? The answer here is no different than it has been all along: Bush is an ideological vacuum, a moderate Republican outfitted in conservative clothing. Take abortion. Bush says he has changed his mind on the issue — a convert to Reaganism. But the position he has arrived at suggests a conflicted man. If, as he says, abortion is murder, then it is also murder for the exceptions he would permit — pregnancies resulting from rape or incest, for instance. The President would permit no exceptions. In swallowing Reagan's ideology, Bush has been left intellectually constipated.

Dukakis, too, has his inconsistencies. As Bush pointed out, he once called the Star Wars program a "fraud and a fantasy" and now supports continuing research. But the Massachusetts governor is more at home with himself than Bush is. All along, the Vice President has had difficulty defining himself, which is why he tries so hard to define his opponent. In the ring, a low blow can cost a round. In political debates, it's no different. George Bush lost this one.

Debate Clarified Voters' Choices For November

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.— The first debate of the 1988 presidential campaign did what debates are supposed to do. It did not decide the election, but it sharply clarified the choice the voters have to make.

For a candidate who started the campaign by saying that "the issue is competence, not ideology," Michael Dukakis sounded like a man with a clear set of views and values — an ideology, if you will — in his debate with George Bush here Sunday night. No one listening could have doubted that the governor of Massachusetts' basic instincts and thinking reflect the liberal political culture in which he was raised.

That was the good news the Bush camp was celebrating in its post-debate analyses. The bad news was that Dukakis also looked personally composed and governmentally competent throughout the 90-minute confrontation on the Wake Forest campus — and therefore came across as someone who might lead the nation in the hard times many see ahead.

If Bush succeeded in sticking the liberal label on his opponent, Dukakis went a long way toward rescuing his record as an innovative and engaged government executive.

Favored with a series of questions on problems not even the most ardent Reaganite would claim have been solved in the last eight years — homelessness, drug abuse, lack of access to health insurance, for example — Dukakis sounded like a man who had thought about — and acted on — these concerns. For those families (and there are millions of them) who worry about medical bills, Dukakis' achievement of an employer-financed state program to guarantee health insurance to all workers and their kin must have sounded much more tangible than Bush's unexplained and improvised suggestion that poor people be allowed to "buy into Medicaid."

A Lesson Overlearned

In late September 1938 Europe was teetering on the brink of war. Armies were mobilized and poised to strike. Adolf Hitler had issued an ultimatum threatening war against Czechoslovakia. The British prime minister, Neville Chamberlain, made three unprecedented flights to Germany.

At the eleventh-hour an invitation came from Hitler, with the connivance of Italy's Benito Mussolini, for the French, British, Italian and German heads of government to meet in Munich in one last effort to solve the Sudetenland crisis. In Hitler's language of the time, he could no longer tolerate the racial abuse of the Sudeten Germans by the Czech government.

Hitler's ultimatum expired at 2 p.m. Sept. 29. Chamberlain and French Premier Edouard Daladier, Mussolini and Hitler met that day and averted the seemingly unavoidable war. According to the Munich agreement, Czechoslovakia, the absentee victim, was to give up the Sudetenland. Hitler would not make additional territorial demands and disavowed, in the negotiations, any further interest in the Czechs.

Six months later his troops marched into Prague. Months later, Hitler made similar accusations against Poland, similar threats. He invaded Poland on Sept. 1, 1939. This time he miscalculated: The Allies went to war.

Like Chamberlain's ever-present umbrella, the Munich Conference became a symbol of appeasement.

subject surrender to an adversary, the sell-out of a trusted ally, a lack of toughness and hard-headed realism. Appeasement became a dirty word in diplomatic relations.

It was raining heavily when President Eisenhower returned from the Geneva summit in 1955. His advisers cautioned him against being photographed with an umbrella, lest it remind viewers of Chamberlain's futile trips to appease the Nazi dictator. In resisting the North Korean invasion, President Truman had repeatedly invoked the painful warning against appeasement.

Perhaps no one was more influenced by the lesson of Munich than President Reagan. The memory of appeasement appears to have haunted him into areas not linked to foreign policy. As governor of California, he was quoted as saying that he preferred a bloodbath to appeasing rioting students.

With the public having overlearned the lessons of Munich, every statesman had to protect himself from the charge of giving away too much, of being soft on adversaries, notably communism, after 1945. Memories of Munich were entrenched sufficiently that every concession, however indicated, had to be dressed up as a partial victory.

Soviet attitudes and policies also were explained with reference to Munich. Moscow had not been consulted; an Eastern nation, Czechoslovakia, had been sacrificed to fascism; the East was expendable. The Western nations had appeased Hitler in the hope he would turn his expansionist designs eastward toward the Soviet Union. But the Soviets forgot their own treacherous non-aggression pact with Hitler: their sacrifice of Poland so that Hitler would have a free hand in the West.

Munich served the Soviets as an available hook on which to hang anti-Western policies. On the other hand, the memory of Munich caused Western distrust of any conciliatory movement that had its origin in the East. Gen. Douglas MacArthur repeatedly accused the Pentagon and Gen. Omar Bradley of appeasement for refusing authorization to bomb Manchuria. During the Nixon years, detente was often tagged with the appeasement stigma.

To appease, according to the dictionary, is to pacify by satisfying demands. To bring peace in this fashion is part of almost all religious teaching and has been a factor in all diplomatic negotiations and settlements.

In Munich, the territorial concessions were made under threat of arms. The appeasers' own land was not sacrificed, but that of a third party. Finally, to have an excuse not to yield to Hitler, Chamberlain and Daladier deliberately ignored their own previous assessments of Hitler's design. Instead, they put forth an image of the German dictator that they had to repudiate in a matter of weeks.

Chamberlain and Daladier were basically men of good will who were acutely aware of the 15 million casualties a war over the Sudeten question would produce. They preferred to see the conflict as one over the Sudeten Germans who wanted to become a part of the Reich. Why not? They forgot that Hitler had rearmend, reoccupied the Rhineland and annexed Austria. They forgot that his drive to the East, and perhaps later to the West, might have to be stopped now. Churchill saw the broader picture, warning that a policy that meekly surrendered parts of Eastern Europe would soon make Germany dominant "from Hamburg to the Black Sea."

The argument is often advanced that Britain and France were unprepared for war in September 1938 and needed to gain time. Undoubtedly, that was a factor. But one year later when war came over Poland, the Western democracies were not in a better position. They had ordered a rearmament program but not funded it. Hitler had rearmend at a hectic pace and silenced his skeptical generals by pointing to his success at Munich.

Chamberlain and Daladier were men of conscience and not without courage. But they lacked the toughness required by the situation. Hitler complained after Munich that he had dealt with "non-entities."

One can't help wondering what Churchill and Charles de Gaulle, who rose to power two years later, would have done at Munich.

The policy crime of Munich was manifold: the failure to face reality, to assess correctly the nature of the adversary and his record of broken assurances; the willingness to surrender a small ally without adequate consultation and protection and thereby augment the prestige of the enemy while deceiving the public that the appeasers had achieved "peace in our time." Perhaps the worst sin was not to use the year of grace given by Munich to build up their air forces and generally raise the level of military preparedness.

Yet the lesson of Munich must not be overlearned. Making judicious concessions, especially from a position of strength, is not appeasement. Munich must remain a reminder, but it must not be overapplied. Not every diplomatic encounter can be likened to Munich: Accommodation must remain a vital and valid means of diplomacy.

Analysis

But when Dukakis talked about reviving federal housing programs which have languished in the Reagan years, Bush had an effective rejoinder. He reminded viewers that the last time the Democrats were in power, high interest rates drove would-be home-buyers to the sidelines and crippled the private housing industry.

That kind of exchange, I would guess, prompted some decent kitchen-table discussions about the relative risks and rewards of putting one of these men in the White House. The debate's most useful function may have been to clear away some of the static that has made it hard to focus on the real differences between Bush and Dukakis. Both sides have tried to narrow the debate to issues that are barely more than caricatures of the opponent's record.

Dukakis' membership in the American Civil Liberties Union and his veto of a bill requiring teachers to lead the Pledge of Allegiance do tell you something about his values and predilections. Bush's acquiescence in the Reagan decision to ship arms to Iran says something about his competence — and his judgment. But Bush was effective in saying he deserved to be judged on his whole record, and Dukakis was properly outraged at the challenge to his patriotism which has been implicit in many of the Republican attacks.

The voters who have been complaining, justifiably, that the candidates have not been giving them a clear sense of their plans and goals now have reason to think that the next stage of the campaign may be more useful to them. The great exception, of course, is the budget. These two men are apparently convinced that being realistic on that subject entails too great a political risk, so they will avoid at all costs talking about how they will pay for their programs — or the debts and deficits they inherit from their predecessors.

But the choices are becoming plainer. Dukakis would put government more directly into the center of economic and social problem-solving. He may differ from his New Deal and Great Society predecessors in seeking to lay off costs on business, rather than taxpayers, but he shares their confidence that an energetic political executive can push the bureaucracy to do useful things for people that otherwise would not get done.

Bush, on the other hand, clearly believes that the private sector, supplemented by voluntary efforts, will solve most of the problems visible in America — and avoid the crippling economic costs he, like Reagan, sees inherent in big government. Given his druthers, Bush would cut tax rates again, starting with capital gains. Given his druthers, Dukakis would launch some new government initiatives, starting with housing, health and education.

That much is clear. There are also hints of significant differences in approach to foreign policy and national security. Dukakis would eliminate some strategic weapons, including a sharp cutback in work on the Strategic Defense Initiative. Bush's only examples of redundant weapons were those already ticketed for the junkpile.

Bush is far more skeptical of the Gorbachev changes in the Soviet Union; Dukakis, far more eager to seize the opportunity the Kremlin seems to be offering.

All that is much clearer now than it was before the 90 minutes of non-Olympic, non-football coverage. Since Edwin Moses and the Washington Redskins both lost anyway, it was time well spent.

IN THE STATE

Forests

ASHEVILLE (AP) — President Reagan has signed a bill providing money for two additions to national forests in western North Carolina and for development of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in Swain County.

The $10 billion appropriations bill signed Tuesday — primarily containing money for Interior Department and U.S. Forest Service projects — authorizes spending of $3.7 million for projects in western North Carolina, including $2 million more to help the federal government acquire the disputed Panthertown Valley in Jackson County.

The bill also contains money to buy land around a set of waterfalls in McDowell County and to fund planning for a visitors center and other improvements in the park.

Rejection

WILMINGTON (AP) — A federal jury Tuesday rejected a prison inmate's claim that Sampson County sheriff's deputies beat him two years ago and violated his constitutional rights.

On Aug. 6, 1986, Luther Abel Nance was arrested in Clinton and questioned about burglary and attempted arson, according to a complaint Nance filed from Central Prison in Raleigh two years ago. Nance alleged that five officers held him and beat him when he refused to confess to the charges. He claimed that his arm and nose were broken during the interrogation when officers slammed his arm against a desk and punched him in the face.

But lawyers defending officers Timothy King, Randall Malpass, Willard G. Faircloth and Jimmy Holland argued that hospital X-rays taken after the incident showed that Nance's nose and arm had been broken prior to the scuffle. Nance argued that the beatings caused further undue injury.

Nance was convicted in Sampson County Superior Court Sept. 15, 1986, of first-degree burglary. He was sentenced to 14 years in prison, according to the Department of Correction.

Ports Revenue

GREENSBORO (AP) — The North Carolina Ports Authority, which lost more than $312,000 in July and August, approved contracts which are expected to bring $1.88 million in revenue to the ports during the next five years, officials say.

The State Ports Authority board of directors on Tuesday approved the contracts for a cement shipping facility at the Wilmington state port and a woodpulp operation at Morehead City.

Eastern Cement Corp. of West Palm Beach, Fla., will lease 2.8 acres at the Wilmington port to build and operate a $2 million shipment facility. Weyerhaeuser Co. of New Bern got approval for a six-month option on seven acres at the Morehead port for a woodchip operation. No construction is yet planned, but company officials said they may ship as much as a million tons of wood chips through the port in the next five years.

Plant Safety

RALEIGH (AP) — The Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant compiled an above average safety and operating record in its first full year of operation, officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission say.

The report, done routinely by the NRC on all nuclear power plants, evaluated the performance of the 900-megawatt Harris plant from July 1, 1987, through June 30 in 12 key areas, ranging from plant operations to fire protection to emergency preparation.

J. Nelson Grace, head of the NRC's Atlanta regional office, said the Harris plant was an "above-average performer" among the 33 reactors at 16 plants in the South, but he urged CP&L officials to continue to achieve a performance above the minimum standards set by federal regulations.

Quarantine

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — The owner of more than 70 dogs quarantined by a state inspector has voluntarily turned the dogs over to Alleghany County officials, authorities say.

Terry Groce, an investigator with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's office in Raleigh, said Tuesday that Alleghany County officials will see that the dogs are fed and taken care of.

Officials will try to find people who want to adopt the dogs, Groce said.

The dogs were quarantined last week by Al Eatmon, an inspector for the N.C. Department of Agriculture. Authorities are trying to determine whether the dogs were being sold illegally to animal research companies or pet shops, and where the animals came from.

Jurors Seated As Hostage-Taking Trial Goes On Without Kunstler

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite protests from both the defense and the prosecution that the jury-selection process was tinged by racial discrimination, a panel of nine blacks and three whites has been chosen in the hostage-taking trial of two American Indians.

Opening arguments are expected to begin today in the trial of Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, after U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle considers requests by some defense witnesses to have the subpoenas against them quashed.

Although they had said earlier that prosecutors had shown "a pattern of discrimination" in cutting four blacks and one Indian from the pool of potential jurors, defense attorneys said later Tuesday that they were pleased with the composition of the jury.

"They seem to be fair-minded people who expressed a desire to hear both sides and willingness to hear the necessity defense, which we look forward to presenting," said Lewis Pitts, one of Jacobs's attorneys.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bruce, meanwhile, accused defense attorneys of practicing discrimination by cutting 10 whites from the pool as it was narrowed to 12.

The necessity defense will be the keystone of Jacobs's defense, his attorneys say. They will argue that he and Hatcher took hostages at The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1 because their knowledge of drug dealing and public corruption put their lives in danger and they had no legal recourse.

Defense lawyers have listed dozens of Robeson County officials as potential witnesses, including District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, Coroner Chalmers Biggs, Sheriff Hubert Stone, Pembroke Mayor Milton Hunt and Pembroke town manager McDuffie Cummings.

Subpoenas issued for more than 40 of those witnesses ask them to bring their telephone records, tax returns and other documents covering the last three years.

Boyle told the jury pool members that he expected the case to last two weeks.

The jury selection ended Tuesday with Hatcher repeating that he is being tried without the attorney of his choice — New York lawyer William Kunstler — and that he is not representing himself.

During the morning session Tuesday, Hatcher and Boyle continued a verbal battle over Boyle's ruling that Hatcher must represent himself in the absence of Kunstler.

"Would anyone hold it against Mr. Hatcher that he is acting in his own right?" Boyle asked a panel of prospective jurors.

Hatcher repeated his assertion that he was not acting as his own attorney and had been denied the lawyer of his choice.

"Would any of you on the jury be affected by any outburst by Mr. Hatcher ...?" Boyle said.

At that point, Lewis Pitts, a lawyer for Jacobs, objected to Boyle's remarks. Boyle ordered him to be seated.

Prospective jurors also began to question the judge.

"Could this be construed as a mistrial later on because of this?" asked one.

"That's a matter of law and not something you have to concern yourself with," Boyle replied. "I want you to understand that no ruling that I make or comment that I should make should influence you in any way."

"Will he be able to get an attorney later?" another juror asked.

"My counsel of choice has been denied," Hatcher responded.

In the first stage of jury selection, Boyle excused two prospective jurors who said they were "unalterably in favor" of the defendants. Both of those jurors said they had some American Indian ancestry.

Boyle's decision that Hatcher must act in his own defense has drawn criticism from Kunstler, who is embroiled in a New York case.

Hatcher, 31, and Jacobs, 20, each face seven charges in connection with the siege. Each is charged with conspiracy to take hostages, hostage taking, using firearms in a crime of violence, two counts of making an illegal firearm, possessing an illegal firearm and conveying false information on explosives.

Baptists Reduce President's Power

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The general board of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention has approved an amendment that would diffuse the president's appointive powers, a move that could fend off takeover by a single faction of the convention.

"This is an effort to open up the decision-making process in our convention," The Rev. Leon Smith, president of the 1.1-million-member state convention, told board members Tuesday at Camp Caraway, a Baptist conference center near Asheboro.

"This change will prevent it (the convention) from shifting too far either way. This will help de-politicize our convention," Smith said.

The 118-member board, which takes care of business between the convention's annual sessions, overwhelmingly approved an amendment that would allow the entire board to share the appointive powers of the president. The amendment still must be approved by the convention, which meets Nov. 14-16 in Fayetteville.

In the past, the president has had sole authority to name the powerful committee on committees, which chooses the nominations committee.

Burroughs Wellcome AIDS Project Faces Test In Space

RALEIGH (AP) — As the space shuttle Discovery roars skyward Thursday, it will be launching a scientific attempt to create a better AIDS drug.

On board the shuttle will be an experiment devised by scientists at Burroughs Wellcome Co. to grow crystals of a key part of the AIDS virus.

The experiment is designed to reveal the molecular structure of reverse transcriptase, a key enzyme that enables the AIDS virus to replicate in human cells. Knowing the structure could help scientists devise a drug that stops the virus from reproducing while leaving healthy cells undamaged.

The experiment, one of several that will be aboard the shuttle, will take advantage of the weightlessness of space. Under those conditions, scientists are better able to grow crystals that conform to the true shape of the complex, three-dimensional molecules that make up the enzyme.

It could take scientists a few days to weeks once the shuttle lands before they know whether the experiment produces crystals undistorted by the pull of gravity, said Dr. David W. Barry, vice president of research at Burroughs Wellcome in Research Triangle Park.

"A good crystal can be seen by the naked eye," Barry said Tuesday at a press conference. But scientists must take a closer look to turn up any flaws or distortions that mar the crystal structure.

"It's much like grading a diamond," Barry said.

Scientists already have done earthbound experiments that grew crystals that had so many flaws they could not determine the enzyme's molecular structure. In the shuttle experiment, they will try to grow virtually flawless crystals that will allow them to define each of the atoms that make up the molecule.

Knowing the molecular structure of reverse transcriptase could enable scientists to make a drug that attacks the enzyme without harming other parts of normal body cells.

Burroughs Wellcome has developed one drug, called AZT for azidothymidine, that attacks reverse transcriptase. But AZT also causes some damage to other cell enzymes, causing toxic side effects to patients.

A drug that attacks only reverse transcriptase, and spares other cell enzymes, should be less toxic, Barry said. He estimated it could take from one year to 10 years to design such a drug based on the crystal structure.

The experiment will not pose any danger to astronauts aboard the shuttle because it involves only one small part of the AIDS virus that is not harmful.

The Burroughs Wellcome project is one of several crystal-growing experiments aboard the space shuttle. Other experiments are being conducted by the DuPont Co., Merck & Co., Schering-Plough Corp., and the Upjohn Co. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is paying for the shuttle equipment used to conduct the experiments.

Prosecutors, Sheriffs Join Dukakis Team

By The Associated Press

Most of the state's district attorneys and sheriffs will take part in a law enforcement officer's committee created by Michael Dukakis' presidential campaign to counter what they say are George Bush's false charges that Dukakis is soft on crime.

"I've talked to a lot of people last several weeks trying to straighten out the record," said Davidson County Sheriff Paul "Jaybird" McCrary, acknowledging that Bush's attacks had hurt Dukakis with some voters. "Some of the statements made by Vice President Bush are just not true."

But Republican National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf, who was in Raleigh Tuesday, persisted in attacking the Massachusetts governor's record on crime.

"He is, in fact, a liberal but he does not have the courage to stand up before the American people" and acknowledge it, Fahrenkopf said. "I think the vice president did a good job (during Sunday's debate) in laying out that division; that (Dukakis) is soft on crime, soft on defense, he has no experience in foreign policy."

Fahrenkopf also said that Bush is leading in most Southern states, but the presidential contest in North Carolina is "a horse race."

Bush has "a comfortable lead of varying numbers in almost every Southern state," he said. "The last numbers that I've seen from North Carolina indicate that it's a horse race."

He said he could not explain the disparity between North Carolina and the rest of the South, but he added that he expected Bush to carry the state.

The pro-Dukakis committee will be called the North Carolina Anti-Crime Council and will stay in existence if Dukakis is elected, holding monthly meetings to advise him on law enforcement issues, McCrary said at the Democrats' news conference.

It is modeled after a committee in Massachusetts with which Dukakis has met each month for the past five years, McCrary said. Three-fourths of North Carolina's district attorneys and 76 of the state's 81 Democratic sheriffs will participate, he said. Attorney General Lacy Thornburg is a member.

Social Service Officials Think Plan To Reform Welfare Would Help Poor

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal welfare reform bill prepared by congressional leaders this week would mean that poor North Carolinians could get better job training as they are eased off welfare rolls and into the working world, social service officials say.

"It provides some stronger work incentives and assures that people will be better off outside the (welfare) system than they will be remaining in the system," said Daniel Hudgins, director of the Durham County Department of Social Services.

"Social service agencies are going to have resources for basic job education services, and (the bill) has about five times as much money for job training as we currently have available," he said. "It also provides day care and health coverage up to a year, and those are two major barriers to people leaving public assistance."

As negotiated by leading House and Senate members from both parties, the $3.34 billion welfare reform package would emphasize job training, job education and work programs. The amount of benefits paid directly to welfare recipients would not be increased.

The bill would require that welfare-recipient parents of children over age 3 enroll in state-run job training programs, and that one person in two-parent families work at least 16 hours a week in exchange for welfare benefits.

Families making the transition from welfare to the regular work force would be given one year of Medicaid benefits and one year of day-care tuition assistance.

Hudgins and other social services leaders said they welcomed the reform bill, which has bipartisan support in both houses of Congress.

Lucy Burgess, chief of the employment programs section of the N.C. Division of Social Services, said the reform package would mean that state-run job-training programs for North Carolina's 190,623 welfare recipients would be strengthened.

She said her division now offers job-training assistance in 38 of the state's 100 counties. Except for increases in funding and improvements in job programs, she said, not much would change in the state's welfare system.

Ms. Burgess said that state officials were not sure yet what share of the federal money would go to North Carolina. But she said whatever the state's portion, the results would be uniformly good for the state's poor.

"We may be able to have an increase in staff to serve a larger number of people who are eligible and need services," she said.

The welfare bill would require in fiscal 1990 and 1991 states to enroll at least 7 percent of eligible parents in basic job training programs. That figure would rise to 20 percent by 1995.

Independent Urges Blacks To Protest

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Blacks should not vote for Michael Dukakis because they will gain power in the Democratic Party only by staying away from it in an act of protest, independent presidential candidate Lenora Fulani says.

"I envision on Nov. 9, the white millionaires who control the Democratic Party will find a dime and call Jesse Jackson and ask him what happened — that they thought they had the black vote locked up," she said. "Jesse will tell them that blacks voted for a black woman because they seduced our people but have done nothing for them."

Ms. Fulani, whose 16-week-old campaign featuring six vice presidential nominees has been added to the ballots in all 50 states, acknowledged Tuesday that many blacks may believe a vote for her is actually a vote for the Republican ticket.

"A vote for me Nov. 8 isn't a vote for George Bush," she told about 50 students and faculty at a forum at Johnson C. Smith University. "Bush knows that. That's why he isn't pushing for me to be included in the debates."

Ms. Fulani, a 35-year-old psychologist from New York City, filed a federal lawsuit after her request to take part in Sunday's presidential debate at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem was denied.

"The news media is debating who won," she said. "The point is, who cares? The choice between Bush and Dukakis is no choice at all. Blacks have suffered under Democratic and Republican administrations."

Ms. Fulani hopes to draw as many as 1 million votes, which she claims could be the difference between Dukakis winning or losing.

"As blacks we know that Republican is no good," she said.

"But the white millionaires who control the Democratic Party can't take our votes for granted."

"If we beat Dukakis, they (Democrats) will begin talking about black issues, because if they don't, we won't vote for them whether they're running for dog catcher or president of these United States," she said.

Ms. Fulani said she supported the candidacy of Jesse Jackson while she ran her own campaign. But when he was passed over as the Democratic vice presidential candidate for U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, she said, it was another example of how blacks are excluded from power in the Democratic party.

"Our difference of opinion is not new," she said in an interview after the forum. "He (Jackson) thought we should work through the Democratic Party. I thought not."

"I don't think either Dukakis or Bush are interested in blacks," she said. "When a black (Jackson) can win seven million votes in the primaries and these whiter-than-white men can get up on stage and refuse to talk about black issues, people of color should say, 'They're not interested in what I have to say.'"

During a question-and-answer session, two students asked Ms. Fulani if blacks would suffer more during the next four years if they threw their support behind her campaign and allowed George Bush to win.

"If we teach the Democrats a lesson, won't it really be hurting blacks in America?" one student asked.

Blacks must take control of their own political future, Ms. Fulani said.

"I want to win some political power," she said. "If George Bush wins, the Democrats will realize we're willing to dump them if they refuse to work with us."

Gilmore Draws Life Term

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — A Lee County jury deliberated for less than an hour Tuesday before sentencing Roy Wayne Gilmore Jr. to life imprisonment for his part in the 1986 death of his father, who died from an insulin overdose.

Gilmore, 28, who was charged along with his mother in the death of Roy Gilmore, could have received the death penalty. Eunice Edwards Gilmore will be tried later.

The jury found that prosecutors had failed to establish any aggravating factors in the murder of the elder Gilmore, who died Sept. 5, 1986. Under state law, a jury can recommend death in a murder case only when it thinks there are certain aggravating factors in the case.

Special prosecutor William P. Hart of the state Attorney General's Office had argued that the defendant deserved the death penalty because he helped his mother murder his father in hopes of inheriting property or life insurance money after his father's death.

Help Solve One Of America's Major Problems...
Illiteracy.

Yes...

You Can Make A Difference!

Can You Tell These Apart? One Out Of Every Four Adults In Pitt County Can't.

The Problem

Few Americans ever think of illiteracy as one of America's major problems, but it is. Over 27 million Americans — about one adult in five — can't read a job application, a street sign or a label. In Pitt County alone, one out of every four adults over the age of 25 has less than an eighth grade education.

A closer look at the statistics is even more startling. According to the U.S. Department of Labor:

- 15 million employed adults are illiterate.
- 50%—70% of our employed lack basic reading and writing skills and cannot retrain for new positions.
- 23 million Americans in our work force cannot do common tasks.

By 1990, it is estimated that three out of every four jobs in the U.S. will require an education beyond high school. As a result, basic education will become increasingly more important, and those who lack the ability to read, write and do common tasks in the work force will more than likely become unemployed altogether.

The Consequences

According to experts, the costs of functional illiteracy are high. Mistakes, poor quality and low productivity can be attributed to the problem.

To our state and county, this means untold dollars lost annually in unrealized business productivity and tax revenues. On the other side of the coin, the costs include increasing public funds spent on crime prevention, unemployment and social support.

To the illiterate adults themselves, however, the cost is much greater. Their lives are shadowed by shame, isolation and lost potential, because they do not possess the reading skills necessary to fulfill their own needs as family and community members, citizens, consumers and employees.

As tragic as all of this is, one fact remains which makes the problem of illiteracy even worse. Most illiterate adults are intelligent, industrious people who are suffering needlessly, because illiteracy is a problem that can be solved.

Candidates Woo Middle Class

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer
George Bush unveiled a modest savings plan aimed at assisting average Americans as the Republican nominee sought to stem criticism that his interests lie only with the rich. Democrat Michael Dukakis ridiculed the proposal for its limited financial benefits for the middle class.

The vice president, campaigning in the Midwest on Tuesday, introduced his "individual savings account" plan as an opportunity for low- and middle-income savers to put away up to $1,000 a year and defer paying taxes on the interest.

Bush said the system would help Americans be "better able to afford a home, pay for college, or start a business."

But Dukakis, calculating that the plan would provide a mere $20 a year to the taxpayer, questioned whether his GOP opponent was offering a serious solution to the economic crunch facing the middle class.

"Twenty bucks a year — that's Mr. Bush's solution for average Americans," Dukakis told an audience in the Chicago suburb of Melrose Park. "He says it will make them, and here I'm quoting, 'better able to afford a home, pay for college, start a business.' Twenty bucks a year, who's he kidding?"

Bush was planning to address some of the nation's average citizens today as he took a 150-mile bus tour of rural Illinois with stops at the Play Pin coffee shop in El Paso, a Del Monte processing plant in Mondota and a farm progress show in West Brooklyn.

Dukakis, after attending a rally in Greensburg, Pa., was traveling to New York City late this afternoon to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. The Democratic presidential nominee has come under attack for a lack of experience in foreign policy matters.

Bush's running mate, Dan Quayle, was spending his second consecutive day in Texas with campaign appearances in El Paso, Amarillo and Dallas. The Republican vice presidential nominee was expected to be the focus of Lloyd Bentsen's speech today in Independence, Mo., where the Democrat was planning to discuss qualifications for the vice presidency.

In the latest public opinion poll, 42 percent of 416 likely voters surveyed said Sunday's debate between Bush and Dukakis was a tie or didn't know who won — more than double the 20 percent who expressed one of those views after the debate.

The ABC News poll, which included voters who had not seen the debate but had heard or read about it, indicated the other post-debate polls and news media accounts reinforced perceptions that the debate was a dead heat.

The poll was conducted Monday night and had a margin of error of plus or minus six percentage points.

On Tuesday, at an appearance in Columbus, Ohio, Bush introduced his plan to allow small savers to defer paying taxes on interest income on savings of up to $1,000 a year as long as the money is kept in such accounts for five or more years.

The GOP nominee touted the plan as a way to provide additional money for home purchases and college educations, but Bush aides suggested later that the proposal was less far-reaching.

"The idea was designed to encourage people to put money into a savings account, that's all," said Craig Fuller, Bush's chief of staff. "It's an incentive. A little incentive."

The campaign said the plan, which would be available to those with adjusted gross incomes up to $50,000, would only yield about $14 a year in tax savings for the maximum depositor.

Campaigning in Illinois, Dukakis suggested that Bush's main concern is cutting the capital gains tax from its present maximum of 33 percent to 15 percent — a benefit for the nation's wealthy.

The Democratic nominee juxtaposed the capital gains rollback with Bush's savings plan.

"Today, after I pointed that out to him on Sunday night, he discovered the rest of America and he told just what his priorities are," Dukakis said. "He wants to give the wealthiest 1 percent of Americans $30,000 and the rest of us are going to get 20 bucks. That's a new definition of trickle-down."

Dukakis also criticized Bush for calling the Medicare health plan "socialized medicine" during the Republican's bid for the Senate years ago, and for referring to Social Security as "basically a welfare program" in 1980.

"When it comes to Social Security and George Bush, don't read his lips, read his record," Dukakis said, turning Bush's phrase of "read my lips" in promising that he would not raise taxes.

"He was wrong then and he's wrong now," Dukakis said.

The Democratic nominee suggested that Bush would likely cut Social Security and Medicare to finance additional defense spending and to offset a cut in the capital gains tax.

In Texas, Quayle assailed Dukakis for his membership in the American Civil Liberties Union and called on the Democratic nominee to resign from the group.

"Let him renounce all their bizarre positions," Quayle told a Houston rally.

The Republican ticket has used Dukakis' membership in the organization to paint him as a liberal who is out of the mainstream of American thinking.

But for the first time Bush made a distinction about his opposition to the ACLU.

"I don't have a quarrel with their work in, you know, helping whatever position they take in terms of defending the right of an individual," Bush said, "but I just don't agree with the major positions that organization has taken."

Zaccaro Released

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Former Democratic Vice Presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro's son was freed today a month early from his term of house arrest, a sentence that created an uproar because the convicted cocaine dealer spent it in a luxury apartment.

John Zaccaro Jr. completed three months of a four-month sentence imposed for his April conviction. His term was shortened because of good behavior, authorities said.

Zaccaro and his father, John Sr., packed up a car and left the apartment at 7:30 a.m. today. Earlier, officials had said he would be free to leave after meeting with a probation officer.

Zaccaro, 24, started serving the sentence in July. Soon after, it became known he was living in a $1,500-a-month apartment in Burlington under the state's house arrest program.

The revelation prompted Gov. Madeleine Kunin to change the program so that no drug dealer could participate in it in the future.

Under house arrest, defendants pay for their own housing while living under close state supervision. Zaccaro spent less than 30 minutes in a Vermont correctional center — the time it took to process his application for house arrest, authorities said.

Rail-Side Workers Say Amtrak Needs To Control Flush

By CRISPIN Y. CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With bare-ly a flush of anger, they told tales of human waste spewing from train toilets onto railworkers and station platforms.

Some accused Amtrak, the national passenger rail line, of not trying to dispose of the problem.

"I'm the one being squirted on. He's (Amtrak official) not being squirted and he's got the attitude," George E. Jones, of Local 24 of the Brotherhood of Railway Signalmen, told a subcommittee hearing of the House Government Operations Committee on Tuesday.

Jones and A. Tom Matthews, Utah state chairman of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, showed the panel a videotape of broadcast news stories illustrating the disposal problem on the rails, the station platforms and, graphically, the lens of the camera.

The hearing resulted from complaints from railworkers and city officials whose downtown train stations have been sprayed with a mixture of human urine, feces and shredded toilet paper as the Amtrak trains pass through or stop.

Amtrak spokesman Tim Gillespie told the panel the company was in line with federal regulations because it was exempted in 1976 by Congress from an order to retrofit all passenger and freight toilets.

In addition, he cited a 1978 report by the department of Health, Education and Welfare — now the Health and Human Services Department — indicating that there "have been no identifiable disease outbreaks or illnesses which might be ... associated with railroad waste discharge."

"In the absence of a known health risk or the potential of disease, Amtrak questions the advisability of spending extremely scarce capital and operating funds to alleviate what essentially amounts to a problem of aesthetics," Gillespie said. The retrofitting would cost the company at least $34 million, he said.

"That is perhaps the most arrogant statement I have seen in a very long time," snapped Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., chairwoman of the subcommittee on government activities and transportation. "It would seem to me that Amtrak would have some kind of concern for the well-being of people who work on its tracks."

Ken Alkema, Utah's director of environmental health, told the hearing that a 1970 document from the National Communicable Disease Center indicated that "we are in essential agreement that a potential health hazard exists whenever human excreta are disposed above ground." Alkema said efforts to recruit the Food and Drug Administration for assistance failed when the FDA said it had "no enforcement authority over Amtrak." He urged Congress to enact appropriate legislation.

Jones, the railway signalman, told of a Aug. 17 incident near Helper, Utah in which a train that had stopped to transfer a sick passenger to a local ambulance illegally discharged at least four waste tanks in front of passengers, police and ambulance workers.

"You should have seen those medical people having to walk through that sewage to put the passenger in the ambulance," Jones said.

Gillespie said Amtrak had no knowledge of the discharge.

Midwest Farmers Now Face Threat Of Erosion After Record Drought

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — After watching crops shrivel in the summer and harvests shrink in the fall, farmers have another drought worry before next spring's planting: erosion.

"Each little raindrop is like a little bomb," said James Pingry, a U.S. Soil Conservation Service agronomist.

"Anywhere there's been drought the risk of erosion is greater," said Scott Argabright, an agronomist at the Soil Conservation Service's Midwest National Technological Center in Lincoln, Neb.

In Iowa, conservationists said Tuesday the record pace of corn and soybean harvests by farmers trying to prevent further crop damage will only accelerate fall plowing and other fieldwork to prepare for next spring.

Stripping away the residue of the last crop and turning the dirt over always has the risk that wind and water erosion will carry off exposed topsoil.

"But this year's drought left the soil drier than usual. That means if the land is plowed it will be especially vulnerable to wind erosion," Jim Ayeen, state resource conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said in an advisory urging farmers not to plow this fall.

"There's a definite correlation between plowing or tilling in the fall and moisture loss," said James Gulliford, director of the Iowa Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Division. "The best way to conserve that moisture is not to till."

In addition to unusually dry conditions, drought damage to crops reduced the residue in the soil after the harvest, cutting the natural protection available to soil left unplowed, Argabright said.

Dry soil also is vulnerable to greater than usual water erosion. Raindrops break bare soil into tiny particles and water carries the particles away, Pingry said.

Fall field work is often prompted by a belief that some soil types can be better prepared for the spring by removing crop residue and turning the soil over, a practice Gulliford said he does not believe is supported by research.

Other farmers use as much time as available before bad weather sets in to prepare fields out of fears that a wet spring will delay planting preparations.

"We don't feel there's proven economic evidence that fall plowing pays off," Gulliford said.

While Iowa farmland was saturated with moisture when last spring's planting season began, a report Monday said only 2 percent of the subsoil and 46 percent of the topsoil had adequate moisture. A year ago, 81 percent of the subsoil and 90 percent of the topsoil had adequate moisture and an additional 10 percent of the subsoil and 8 percent of the topsoil had surplus moisture.

In Minnesota, the year's heaviest weekly rain fell last week and was quickly soaked into the ground. Unlike downpours in normal times, there was very little standing water in fields.

In North Dakota, topsoil moisture is only 17 percent adequate and subsoil moisture is just 2 percent adequate. In Missouri, topsoil is 60 percent short of moisture.

Ill-Fated Plane Had Icy Wings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ill-fated Continental Flight 1713 waited so long before takeoff at Denver airport after a de-icing that its wings accumulated enough new ice to hinder the jet's ability to fly, federal investigators say.

The findings of the National Transportation Safety Board, released Tuesday, said the McDonnell Douglas DC-9 had been so thoroughly de-iced that some of the de-icing fluid seeped into the cabin.

But because of poor visibility and, in part, confused radio communications, the jetliner had to wait 27 minutes in a steady snowfall before taking off for Boise, Idaho.

It was airborne only a few seconds before crashing onto the runway, killing 28 of the 82 people aboard.

The NTSB report also said Lee Bruecher, the 26-year-old copilot who was at the controls during takeoff, rotated the plane off the runway too sharply, causing its nose to veer up at a high angle and adding to its problems staying aloft.

Among the dead were Bruecher and Capt. Frank Zvonek, 46, who had failed to order the jet back to the de-icing pad contrary to airline operating procedures, the safety board said in its final report on the Nov. 15, 1987 accident.

The board's findings were challenged by Continental Airlines, which said the investigation had not shown specifically that ice had accumulated on the wings of Flight 1713.

The nearly yearlong investigation focused on the failure to de-ice the aircraft a second time and on the experience and training of Bruecher and Zvonek.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I come from a very large family — lots of aunts, uncles and cousins. We get together quite often because we all live within a few hours of each other.

Last May, we had a big family wedding, and that's when my first cousin and I realized that we were very much in love with each other. When we were growing up, we had a crush on each other, but we never expected it to lead to marriage. I think we were both fighting it because first cousins weren't supposed to get married.

Well, at this family wedding we had to face our true feelings. Abby, we have so much in common, and we cannot deny that there is a very strong physical attraction between us. We have not gone all the way, but we are getting very close to it. (I am 24, and she is 21.)

If we should decide to marry, can we get married in Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, South Dakota, Illinois or Wisconsin? If not, in which nearby state? — KISSING COUSINS IN MINNESOTA

DEAR COUSINS: First-cousin marriages are prohibited by law in the states you mentioned. The closest state that permits it is Colorado.

There is a valid reason for prohibiting first-cousin marriages. If you should decide to marry and want children, I would recommend genetic counseling. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I read that you are an animal rights activist, and as such, you are opposed to using live animals for testing in laboratories. Abby, please be reasonable. You make no sense at all, woman!

Where would medical science be if live animals were not used? Please rethink your stance. I love animals too, but not so much that I would oppose animal testing that could benefit humanity. — FOR HUMAN RIGHTS IN BALTIMORE

DEAR FOR: You read incorrectly. I am opposed to the use of live animals for testing household products and cosmetics. I am not opposed to using live animals for medical and biomedical purposes when there is no alternative method of testing.

I am aware that much progress has resulted from animal experiments, but if there is no alternative to using live animals, we should treat those animals humanely to prevent needless suffering.

DEAR ABBY: You suggested that people send for little signs that say "Thank You for Not Smoking" if they don't want guests to smoke in their homes. Why don't you tell them to warn guests in advance, so smokers can decline invitations to homes where they are not free to smoke?

You certainly are down on smokers, Abby. I'll bet you would turn down a doomed man's request for one last puff on the grounds that it would be bad for his health. — NORWALK SMOKER

DEAR SMOKER: You are mistaken. I was once put to that test when someone I loved very much begged me to get him a cigarette while he was in a hospital, dying of cancer. I went out into the hall, bummed a cigarette from a stranger, and granted the dear man his wish. Why not? The harm had already been done.

California Woman Works For Wolves

By LISA WOLFSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Her friends call her "the wolf woman." She's an animal rights activist with a taste for adventure and a yen to be a centerfold.

Deborah Warrick, who now publishes her own magazine devoted to her favorite canines, cringes every time she hears nursery rhymes like "The Three Little Pigs," "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Peter and the Wolf."

Such tales, she says, wrongly portray wolves as ravenous beasts that prey on little children, as in a passage from the famous Grimm Brothers fairy tale:

"When she got to the wood, she met a wolf; but Red Riding Hood did not know what a wicked animal he was..."

"The wolf thought: 'This tender little creature will be a plump morsel.'"

"Kids are raised fearing wolves and they grow up not caring if they are killed," says Ms. Warrick, who owns three wolves and this year began publishing a magazine called "Wolves and Related Canids."

Not all popular wolf stories put the animal in a bad light, Ms. Warrick says, citing the Disney films "Never Cry Wolf" and "The Adventures of Natty Gann."

But the animals have traditionally had a bad reputation. They were virtually wiped out in the early part of this century in the United States and only now are being reintroduced into the wild.

However, Ms. Warrick describes them as basically timid, opportunistic animals that go for the easiest kill.

"I'd be more afraid of a pit bull or a German shepherd," she says.

Ms. Warrick, 33, became interested in wild animals at an early age.

"I've always been into exotics," she says. "My parents always encouraged that sort of thing and we had pet rattlesnakes and raccoons — even an 8-foot python."

She is no stranger to adventure. Besides nursing exotic reptiles and other wildlife back to health, she started an advertising agency, was an investment counselor, performed in professional roller-skating shows and was a sky diver until a near-fatal accident.

She also was chosen recently as one of 100 contestants in Playboy magazine's 35th anniversary Playmate search.

Ms. Warrick hopes to win the $35,000 in prize money, which she says will go toward her efforts in behalf of wolves.

Seven years ago, Ms. Warrick, who lives in the San Fernando Valley and now sells 3-D computer graphic systems to the aerospace industry, was given her first wolf cub.

"That's when I realized just how intelligent they are," she says, noting that a wolf's brain is 30 percent larger than that of a similar-sized dog.

She got around a California law that prohibits people from keeping purebred wolves as pets by registering them as dogs. But wolves, she says, are not for everyone.

In fact, Ms. Warrick uses the magazine to discourage people from attempting to raise wolves at home. Too often, they get into the wrong hands and either end up put to sleep or in a wolf sanctuary.

"They don't make good pets. They are a pack animal and will not become your house pet," she says. "If they accept you, you become a part of their pack and must abide by pack rules."

Ms. Warrick's three Alaskan tundra wolves, Awesome, Nova and Tundra, are kept in Northern California and Colorado because her Woodland Hills home has too little space for them.

The wolves must be kept outdoors. In the wild, they dig dens, clearing away twigs, rocks and other obstacles to protect their cubs.

"In a house, they'll automatically think it's their den and they'll pull up the carpeting and drapes to make it safe," Ms. Warrick says. "You can't yell at them or strike them because you'll lose your bond. A dog comes back for more, but a wolf won't."

The magazine, which averages 65 pages, is published every other month from Ms. Warrick's home. It evolved from hundreds of documents sent to her from wolf biologists in such places as Minnesota and Canada. A frequent contributor, David Mech, is spending the summer on Canada's Ellesmere Island studying arctic wolves.

"It became such a waste to Xerox it all for the wolf owners I know, that I decided to start the magazine," she says. Breeders and dog food manufacturers advertise, and so far she has broken even by doing the editing, typesetting, layout and some writing herself.

"Wolves and Related Canids" has 500 subscribers and continues to grow. Ms. Warrick estimates there are at least 500 wolf or hybrid wolf-dog owners in California alone.

Articles on reintroducing wolves into the United States, veterinary advice, features on wolf owners and lesser-known canids make up the bulk of the magazine. Each issue also contains a complete listing of wolf and wildlife organizations.

From 1901 to 1930, the wolf population in the United States was virtually wiped out. Ranchers called it predator control because wolves were attacking their livestock.

But Warrick says hunters and trappers competed with the wolves for other predators, virtually eliminating the wolf's basic food source.

"Wolves only kill diseased or weak animals," she says. "They're too cowardly and not strong enough to kill the strong and virile. It's a major misconception."

For wolf cubs to be raised in captivity, they must be placed with owners before they are 10 days old.

Ms. Warrick, who briefly studied veterinary medicine at the University of California-Davis and took an animal keeper course at the Los Angeles Zoo, bottle-fed her charges goat's milk every three hours when they were infants. They now eat about five pounds of raw meat daily.

"They are so loving," she says. "When I go into their pen, I'm overcome with licks and jumps. They knock me down and walk all over me."

Eyelet Pattern Is Festive

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

With the holidays drawing near, many readers have asked for an elegant, festive sweater to knit. One of my all-time favorites is this beautifully designed, classic V-neck fashioned with an interesting combination of yarns.

The eyelet pattern bands are worked with a luxury yarn that has sheen and texture. A cotton-acrylic blend yarn with an "eyelet" fringe is used for the remainder of the sweater, worked in easy stockinette stitch. Deeply cut sleeves and a soft neckline give a sophisticated look to this perfect holiday design.

Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 38, 40 and 42 inches respectively. The stitch gauge is five stitches per inch.

To obtain directions for making the Holiday Elegance sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-092588 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo., 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-092588 by sending a check or money order for $34.95 for all sizes to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and cotton-acrylic yarn in your choice of white or French blue.

The body of the Holiday Elegance sweater is worked with the basic stockinette stitch: You just knit one row and purl the next. A 14-row pattern stitch is worked on the sleeves and neckband to create an interesting contrast. Surprisingly easy to do, these decorative bands are simply rows of eyelet in a wide band of garter stitch (knit every row).

The eyelet stitch used in Holiday Elegance is an easy stitch to do. It could be used in a variety of places — baby afghans, sweaters, etc. To work a swatch, cast on 20 stitches. Knit 5 rows. This will form the garter stitch band. Purl the entire 6th row.

The next row is an eyelet row. Knit the first stitch. Then knit two stitches together. To knit two stitches together, simply put the right-hand needle into the second stitch on the left needle and up into the first stitch. Then knit the two stitches together.

Next, you need to yarn over. Just take the yarn from the back, between the 2 needles to the front and around the right needle. This is the part that will create the hole of the eyelet row.

Continue to knit two together and yarn over across the row, ending with one knit stitch. Purl the next row. The next row is another eyelet row. Begin by knitting two together and then a yarnover. Repeat this across, ending with K2. Purl the next row. Then work five more rows of garter stitch and bind off.

So many readers write in with problems concerning the size of a sweater. Either the sweater is too big or too little. What a disappointment after the hours you've devoted to the project.

If you'll just take a little time at the beginning of a project, you can eliminate this frustration. Many patterns suggest, "To save time, take time to check gauge." This is so true. The time it takes to be sure of the fit will save hours of work on a sweater later.

First, look at the gauge given in the pattern. Let's assume the gauge is five stitches to the inch. You need to determine how many stitches are needed for a four-inch swatch. Since five stitches times four inches equals 20, cast on 20 stitches.

Now, work until the swatch measures four inches long. Measure the width of the swatch. It should be four inches wide. If it is narrower than four inches, you will need a larger needle. If it is wider than four inches, try a smaller needle.

Some patterns will also give a row gauge. This refers to how many rows you knit for each inch. Count your rows and divide by four inches to determine your row gauge. If your stitch is correct, you should not adjust the row gauge. The stitch gauge is the most important factor in determining the correct fit of a sweater.

Family Continues Tradition

Continuing a tradition begun in 1927, the Moore family of Pitt County (descendants of Churchill and Alyce Gardner Moore) recently gathered at the Timothy Christian Church in Gardnersville for a family reunion.

The reunion was at the home of Iredell Moore, the site of "Moore Hall," which was burned in 1865 by Yankee soldiers.

Paul S. Moore was elected president; Olda W. Moore, vice president; Churchill G. Moore, treasurer, and Thomas Moore, secretary.

According to Peggy B. James of Bethel, a member of the Moore family, the annual reunion is steeped in tradition. The first full reunion was held July 9, 1927, at the home of Israel and Susan Ann Lancaster Moore.

"Some of the happiest childhood memories of the Moore clan were to visit with cousins each year, and listen to their parents, uncles and aunts talk about the good old days and how things were when they were growing up," Ms. James said.

"One of the favorite stories was hearing about when great-grandmother Alyce Gardner Moore rode around the community in her buggy, collecting commitments of lumber, labor and money to build Timothy Church," she said.

Ms. James said a Moore family genealogy book was printed in 1963.

She said the family recently traced its roots back to England, where family members visited their ancestral homelands in June, 1987. This year, Tom Moore of Blacksburg, Va., showed a video tape of that 15 day trip, which included a visit to Loesely Park and the Parish Church of St. Nicholas in Guilford, England, where many More family members were buried.

In addition to Tom Moore, president of this year's reunion, other 1988 reunion officers included Corbett Moore Batchelor of Scotland Neck, vice president; Evelyn Moore Stalnaker of Newport News, Va., secretary, and Ms. James, treasurer.

THE BEST WEAPON AGAINST BREAST CANCER IS EARLY DETECTION.

Besides BSE (breast self-exam) and periodic breast exams by your doctor, your American Cancer Society recommends a MAMMOGRAM—a low-dose X ray that helps "see" breast cancer before there's a lump, when survival rates are near 100 percent.

If you are 35 to 39: have a mammogram which can be used later for comparison.

40 to 49: have a mammogram every 1 to 2 years as your doctor directs.

50 or over: have a mammogram every year.

Plan

comprehensive plan subcommittee to work with the staff to develop and present the plan. And the subcommittee, composed of John McConney, Archie Rogers, Jeffrey Mathis, Hal Manning and chairman Ed Hemmingway, has already held its first meeting to organize and review background materials.

The material reviewed include a month-by-month work program and schedule of tasks; a draft "background report" which presents an inventory of topics such as population trends, the economy, environmental factors, existing land use and community service facilities, and some preliminary land use issues which have been identified.

Preparation of the plan, Ulma said, will follow a seven-phase process which includes citizen participation at three major points during the planning effort. "We have scheduled formal public input for early December, following completion of the background report, to allow for community identification of important planning issues which need to be addressed in the plan," Ulma said. The second major opportunity for public input will come "during the early spring to allow comment on the draft plan."

Ulma said "the final opportunity for public participation will be during hearings to be held by the Planning board and Board of County Commissioners prior to official adoption next summer."

But Ulma said that "informal participation by interested individuals, organizations and government agencies will be encouraged by the comprehensive plan subcommittee."

"The subcommittee anticipates scheduling two regular meetings per month to accomplish this major project," Ulma said. "These meetings will be open to the public and interested persons are invited to attend and observe the subcommittee's progress."

Indictments Returned

(Continued from A-1) a third person has been sealed for other reasons on which Haigwood said he could not comment.

Eighteen people were arrested last weekend and orders for arrest are to be drawn for the remaining 12 people not yet in custody, according to an SBI agent.

"We're still looking," agent Malcolm McLeod said. He said there are seven "substantial dealers" among those indicted, and the rest are primarily street dealers.

Two SBI undercover agents conducted the drug buys during the investigation, he said, spending about $19,000 on heroin and cocaine-based crack. The Greenville Police Department also spent about $6,000 on the undercover drug buys, he said.

Only one man, Elijah Clay, 38, of 104-E Lakeview Terrace is charged with trafficking in heroin. At least 4 grams of heroin must be involved before trafficking charges — which carry stiffer sentences than simple possession or sale — can be levied, authorities said. Clay, facing more than eight counts of heroin trafficking, is being held on $300,000 bond. McLeod said the agents could not go into Greenville and buy large quantities of drugs from various dealers because dealers would realize they were undercover agents. Dealers keep track of who is making large purchases, and the smaller buys attract less attention, he said.

There are also no cocaine trafficking charges in the indictments, and McLeod said nearly all of the buys involved crack, a potent rock-form of cocaine sold in vials. At least 28 grams of cocaine must be involved to reach the trafficking level, and crack is sold in much smaller amounts, he said.

Though trafficking charges are not involved, many of those arrested are facing multiple drug violations.

The grand jury returned 12 bills of indictment against Charlie Lee Jenkins, 41, of 1802 McLellan St. He faces 36 counts of possessing, selling and delivering heroin and conspiring to do the same. Jenkins is in custody on a $500,000 bond.

Nine bills were returned against Laura Ruth Vines Daniels, 38, of 512 Davis St. She is charged with 27 drug violations involving heroin and cocaine and is being held on $700,000 bond.

DeLoach Ends Lewis' Dream

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Carl Lewis' dream of a repeat four gold-medal performance at the Olympic Games once again has died, but this time it fell victim to the younger, fresher legs of a friend, not a rival.

Joe DeLoach, Lewis' teammate and training partner, caught the sprint superstar in the final 10 meters Wednesday to win the 200-meter final in 19.75 seconds, tying Lewis' American record.

"This is the ultimate," DeLoach said. "To me it really, really means a lot, but I hate to be the one to come between Carl's dream."

Another Lewis, 19-year-old UCLA sophomore Steve Lewis, led the first U.S. sweep of the 400 meters in two decades as the Americans ran their gold medal total in track and field to eight, most of any country.

Lewis, no relation to Carl, finished ahead of world record-holder Butch Reynolds and Danny Everett.

Some familiar names also lived up to Olympian expectations.

World record-holder Sergey Bubka of the Soviet Union won the pole vault at 19-feet, 4¼-inches — his nation's first-ever gold medal in the event — then took a long look at the bar at 20¼ before deciding not to give it a try.

And Florence Griffith Joyner broke her own American 200-meter record in the preliminaries.

Carl Lewis' chance for four golds seemed to have ended Saturday, when he was beaten in the 100 meters by his Canadian foe, Ben Johnson.

But it was resurrected when

Johnson was stripped of the gold and his 9.79-second world record Tuesday because he tested positive for anabolic steroids.

One day later, Lewis' roller-coaster Olympics took a down turn again, with the 21-year-old DeLoach beating him for the second straight time, although Lewis' time of 19.79 was his best in two years. Robson de Silva of Brazil won the bronze at 20.04.

DeLoach's time is tied for the second-fastest of all time and is just .03 behind the world record held by Pietro Mennea of Italy.

Carl Lewis, 27, and DeLoach hugged each other after they crossed the finish line, then Lewis took an American flag from the crowd and handed it to DeLoach for the victory celebration.

"I think I ran very well. I ran through the turn very well and Joe stayed right with me," Lewis said.

Soviets Roll To Easy Win Over Poor Shooting USA

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A Soviet player scored against the United States as the final buzzer sounded.

Sixteen years ago it meant the first loss in U.S. men's Olympic basketball history, a one-point decision so messy the Americans refused to accept the silver medal that went with it.

On Wednesday it just padded the margin as the Soviets beat the United States, 82-76, knocking the Americans out of the gold medal game and leaving them playing only for bronze.

"I don't know what the reason is," said Coach John Thompson when asked the most familiar of questions after a loss — the second U.S. loss in 87 Olympic games, the second straight loss to the Soviets.

U.S.A. had not met U.S.S.R. in the Olympics since 1972, but there was to be no vengeance for the misery of Munich.

"They played their best game of the Olympics, we played our worst," said forward J.R. Reid.

The best Soviet players, Arvydas Sabonis and Rimas Kourtnaitis, dominated and frustrated the highly-touted American pressure defense, never losing their poise or their command of the game.

America's college player of the year and No. 1 NBA draft choice came up with zero points and foul trouble.

"I don't know what to say," said Danny Manning.

The celebrating Soviets will play Yugoslavia for the gold medal on Friday. The United States will play Australia for the bronze on Thursday night (7:30 a.m. Thursday EDT).

"You feel extremely disappointed because you came here to win the gold medal," Thompson said. "At the same token, they have played extremely well and extremely hard together."

The Soviets built a 47-37 halftime lead into a 14-point advantage just 1:47 into the second half on a driving layup by Kourtnaitis, who led the Soviets with 28 points, four of them three-pointers.

The U.S. team then went on a 13-1 run to pull within two. The Soviets countered with five straight points but Charles Smith IV answered with a 3-pointer. A drive by Alexander Volkov gave the Soviets a six-point lead.

USA Wins Olympic Baseball Title, 5-3

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Jim Abbott was crushed.

His face was mashed into the dirt and his legs and arms were pinned by a mound of humanity.

"It was the greatest feeling in the world," Abbott said.

When he got the final out of the United States' 5-3 victory over Japan in Wednesday's Olympic gold medal game, the entire U.S. squad rushed gleefully to the mound.

Abbott, who got a complete-game victory, wound up at the bottom of the pile.

"I'm sore all over," he said, grinning ear to ear. "But it was worth it. I'd do it 1,000 times over ... I loved it."

Abbott, who was born without a right hand and hopes to become the first one-handed pitcher in the major leagues since the 1880s, struck out four, walked three and allowed seven hits.

It was the final time for baseball as an Olympic demonstration sport;

America's Pastime becomes a fully recognized Olympic event at the Barcelona Games in 1992.

"I'm proud to be a part of all this," said Tino Martinez, who homered twice and drove in four of the Americans' runs.

"There are not many people who have an Olympic gold medal, including the 1984 American team."

The year Japan beat a star-studded U.S. squad — including current major leaguers Mark McGwire, Will Clark and Cory Snyder — 6-3 to win the gold medal at the Los Angeles Olympics. The 1988 American team, essentially a collection of college all-stars, took a victory lap around the outfield at Chamshil Stadium, waving the American flag, after the United States won its first global title of any kind since the 1974 World Championships.

Martinez hit a two-run homer as the United States took a 3-1 edge in the fourth inning, then singled in a run in the fourth.

Suspended Players Are Now Returning

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawrence Taylor and Bruce Smith are back. How soon can they help their teams?

The All-Pro defensive players were among the five suspended players reinstated Tuesday by the NFL after 30-day suspensions for failing drug tests during the preseason. Taylor, Smith, San Francisco receiver John Taylor and two Cincinnati Bengals — linebacker Emanuel King and cornerback Daryl Smith — are eligible to play this weekend.

The respective teams can ask the league for a one-game roster exemption for the reinstated players. The players will "continue to receive appropriate counseling and treatment, and reinstatement is on the condition of their totally refraining from further violations of the NFL substance abuse policy," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said.

The Giants, whose usually overpowering defense ranks near the bottom of the league, are 2-2 and have struggled without Taylor. The Bills have won all four games without Smith and their defense has been sturdy.

"To whom much is given, much is expected," Giants defensive end Leonard Marshall said of Taylor. "So you know I just hope the guy can come back and stay healthy and help the team."

Taylor made headlines during his suspension because he was treated as an outpatient and was regularly seen on the golf course. Several medical experts said they would have preferred he be treated on an in-patient basis, as Smith was.

The Giants have said Taylor, who admitted he had a cocaine problem in 1985, won't be reactivated unless the team is convinced he has his off-field troubles under control. But the Giants also have injuries at linebacker and are playing their top competition in the NFC East, the Redskins, this Sunday at Washington.

"I don't really know," Coach Bill Parcells said of the club's defensive woes. "I think it is a combination of things. Certainly we miss that player. I don't know if he was here whether things would be tremendously better."

The Bills couldn't have done any better without Smith, who was second in sacks in the AFC with 12 last year. They've allowed just 58 points, third best in the league, and 14 of those points came after last week's victory over Pittsburgh was clinched.

Bills Coach Marv Levy met with Smith last weekend after his release from Buffalo's Brydley Hospital, where he was undergoing treatment for psychological addiction to one of the illegal drugs on the NFL's list of forbidden substances. The two psychologically addictive illegal substances on the list are marijuana and cocaine.

Chargers, Panthers Set To Battle

and Friday night Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt renew what is fast becoming one of the top annual high school football rivalries in the area.

It wasn't too long ago that both teams were mired in the bottom of the Eastern Plains Conference. Back in 1985, North Pitt went 0-10. The following year, Ayden-Grifton won but one game.

But for the last two years, the two teams have tied for the EPC regular season title. The two teams also advanced to the Eastern 2-A semi-finals last November with Ayden-Grifton taking a 14-6 win to advance to the Eastern Finals where they fell to eventual state champion Whiteville, 28-0.

- Significance: For the last two years, this game has had a long way toward deciding the conference race, as the two teams tied for the title in both 1986 and 1987. The rivalry intensifies each year and this year should be no exception. The Chargers are ranked seventh in the state, but are banged up on both sides of the ball. North Pitt has had two weeks to prepare for this game and that could be a big boost to the Panthers.

Johnson's Alibis Are Disproved By IOC

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Top Canadian sports officials said Wednesday the medical evidence against disgraced world-record sprinter Ben Johnson precludes any alibis of trickery or sabotage, and reports surfaced that it was the sprinter's personal physician who gave him anabolic steroids. The physician, George M. "Jamie" Astaphan, a member of Johnson's Olympic entourage and the man the runner sought out on a mysterious trip to the island nation of St. Kitt's in May, denied administering any banned substances to Johnson.

Meanwhile, an Olympic medical officer said that within an hour after the runner's world record in the 100-meter dash last Saturday, Johnson acknowledged that he had taken three different medications before the race — including an injection.

Dr. Lee In-joon was the doping control coordinator who stood guard over Johnson immediately after the race and stayed with him for about 1½ hours until the heavily-muscled sprinter could produce a urine sample. In interviews with New York

Newsday and then The Associated Press, the doctor said that he and Johnson talked during the waiting period for at least 30 minutes, and Johnson seemed unusually subdued for someone who had just won a gold medal in the startling time of 9.79 seconds.

Lee said Johnson did not specify the medications he had taken. His sample, as discovered 36 hours later in laboratory analysis, contained the anabolic steroid stanozolol, and Johnson was stripped of his medal and banned from international competition for two years.

"He never told me he had taken any anabolic steroids," said Lee. But Lee said he had "a hunch," both from Johnson's statements and his demeanor, that he would flunk the drug test. "You get a feeling when you've seen athletes," he said. "Some have no idea of what's going on in doping control, and some are very defensive. I would say Mr. Johnson was more defensive." Though Johnson and his agents claimed that he must have fallen victim to a saboteur or mistaken testing procedures, Canadian officials expressed embarrassment Wednesday that they even relayed that story to Olympic authorities.

"There has been an unfortunate confusion around this issue," conceded Lyle Makosky, the top sports official of the Canadian government. "The tampering option is no defense. "Sadly, it kind of reduced the credibility of the Canadian presentation that it was even raised," he added.

When confronted with the evidence against him, Johnson and his personal managers claimed that someone must have spiked a bottle of sarsaparilla carried to the stadium by the runner. The said Johnson had found a smelly, sticky substance at the bottom of the bottle, subsequently washed out by his doctor — Astaphan.

But Makosky said the evidence proved that Johnson had taken steroids on several occasions, and that the chemical had been metabolized — broken down by natural bodily processes. Whether or not there was anything illegal in the water bottle, it would not have been metabolized by the time the urine sample was taken, he said.

"If someone gives you a drink, you can't metabolize it in two or three hours," Makosky said. "It might show up in your urine, but not in a metabolized form."

Moreover, he said, "This particular result, which is technically and scientifically solid, shows extended or repeated use over time."

USA Winning In Track

"He stayed relaxed all the way through and that was the difference.

"I saw him all the way. He ran a phenomenal race in a phenomenal time through it all. You can't take it away from him."

Lewis, who won the long jump gold medal Monday, insisted he wasn't disappointed that he had failed to duplicate his four victories of 1984.

"My objective was to have the best track meet I've ever had and I have," he said. "I have two golds and one silver and I feel very good."

Tom Tellez, who coaches both Lewis and DeLoach, said DeLoach "ran exactly the race he was supposed to run."

However, he said, "I still think Carl is faster."

Why did he finish second? "Fatigue," Tellez said. "He's got to be tired."

DeLoach said training with Lewis has made him the runner he is today.

"Carl is an amazing athlete. In my opinion, he is by far the best runner in history," DeLoach said. "He's a really confident person and training with him, some of those characteristics just have to rub off on you."

Steve Lewis won the 400 in 43.87 seconds, while Reynolds was a close second at 43.93, the third- and fourth-fastest times in history. Lewis' time was one-hundredth of a second off Lee Evans' 20-year-old Olympic record.

Lewis dedicated his race to John Smith, the UCLA sprint coach who 16 years ago was the favorite in the 400 meters in Munich but failed to win a medal because of an injury.

Smith said he was crying after his young pupil's triumph.

"It was a moment when tears came out because I was holding in all that tension from '72," Smith said, "and I always felt that was my gold."

"I'm one proud papa," he said. Lewis, who suffered from shin splints earlier this season, said he proved experience isn't always necessary to triumph in Olympic competition.

"Coming into the Olympics I was the underdog and people doubted me," he said. "They said experience was the key to running fast. They put limits on age. In this thing, there's no limits on running."

Reynolds said the U.S. sweep eased some of the disappointment of his second-place finish.

"I started lifting my head up when I heard the national anthem," he said.

Everett, Lewis' teammate at UCLA, was elated with the American sweep, and especially with his younger schoolmate's victory.

rallied to win the final two games 16-14 and 15-5.

The top servers for the Lady Rampants were Kelly Seamster with 15 and Jennifer Vore with 12. The top spikers were Scharles Cox with 15 and Seamster with 12. The Lady Rampants improved to 4-5 in the Big East Conference. Their match will be Tuesday against Hunt at home.

Soviets Win

Layups by Bimbo Coles and Willie Anderson brought the United States to 59-57 with 10:15 left.

The United States seemed poised to strike, but the Soviets went on a 6-0 run and that was it. Except for two three-point margins in the final 1:30, the United States would never really seem to be within striking range.

"They stayed poised and showed how long they had been together," U.S. forward Dan Majerle said. "That's what you do when you are a veteran club. You do what you have to do, fight back and fight off rallies."

That the Soviets were a veteran ballclub and the United States a team assembled over the past four months was a point Thompson had made time and again leading to the Olympics.

"I don't think we got a good start in the first half and we were playing catchup after that," Thompson said. "Against a team as mature as they are they're not as likely to panic as other teams. In order to catch up, you've got to try to apply pressure and try to rattle and a mature team is not going to rattle as quickly."

Pressure defense had been the trademark of the U.S. team through its first six games, but it didn't bother the Soviets as they passed the ball upcourt and avoided the dribbling that caused problems for other teams.

The Soviets gave the United States some major problems — stellar outside shooting and an inside presence with the 7-foot-2 Sabonis.

"We knew they were good shooters but they never had to take difficult shots," Reid said.

Sabonis, the first-round draft of the Portland Trail Blazers two years ago who had missed 18 months of competition with an Achilles tendon injury, finished with 13 points and 13 rebounds.

He was also a key to avoiding the pressure defense as he repeatedly came back to help the guards pass the ball upcourt.

"Sabonis played well in rebounding and defense," Soviet guard Sharunas Marchulionis said. "He must play good."

He did.

"He has a presence on the court," Thompson said. "A lot of his presence on the court creates a problem in terms of pressure defense. If you get the ball in his hands he creates problems."

"I've seen him play before," said U.S. center David Robinson. "He's a good player. They weren't hiding anything from us."

Robinson, at least, had his best game of the Olympics — a team-high 19 points and nine rebounds.

Manning went scoreless and was limited to 17 minutes because of foul trouble.

"I had a chance to do some things but things just weren't falling together," he said. "I did get those two fouls but once I got back on the court, offensively, I took shots I usually hit. They just weren't falling."

But America's team was.

Spartans Tiring Of The Old Explanation

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — It's a short sentence, but it's definitely not sweet, and Michigan State football coach George Perles has used it three times already this season.

"They beat us fair and square, no excuses," he said of the Spartans' latest loss, a 30-7 decision last Saturday against Florida State.

The defeat in Tallahassee dropped Michigan State — ranked 15th in the preseason — to 0-3. But Perles says that doesn't matter because the Spartans haven't played a Big Ten Conference game.

"It's a new season. It doesn't matter if you're 0-3 or 3-0. It just doesn't matter. Now we start our Big Ten season," he said.

Michigan State was 1-2 at the same time last year, but went undefeated in league play to win the Big Ten title. The Spartans finished 9-2-1 after a victory over USC in the Rose Bowl.

The Spartans open conference play at home against the 2-2 Iowa Hawkeyes, who've also been struggling.

Perles said the Spartans' practice agenda this week is simple.

"Any time you have a loss, you've got to go back to the fundamentals and make sure that you don't try to fool people and go on to other areas. You want to make sure you correct the mistakes you have made and the way we correct that is practice," he said.

Perles said the Michigan State passing and punting games are due for special attention.

The Spartans have seen a pair of Josh Butland punts blocked in as many games, with Notre Dame and Florida State then going in for easy scores.

"We have to do a lot better job on our special teams. We have to be able to have good punt protection and good punt coverage and good kickoff coverage," he said.

The Michigan State passing attack has been painfully weak. Quarterback Bobby McAllister completed only one of seven passes against the Seminoles and was intercepted twice. Florida State safety LeRoy Butler returned one 26 yards for a touchdown.

Backup quarterback Dan Enos relieved McAllister and didn't complete either of his two pass attempts, but Perles said he suffered a mild concussion early on from a hard hit.

"Bobby McAllister is our starting quarterback. It isn't a compliment to a player to pull him out and put him on the bench, but he handled it well," Perles said.

"As far as not hitting your receivers, it's an off-day," he said.

"It's like a baseball player, a pitcher, not hitting the plate. When you're off, you're off. When you have people that are putting pressure on you and you're not sitting in there, then it's a problem.

"You can miss primary receivers.

secondary receivers, when you're off. He understands that, we understand that, but it's something he can do and something we've got to do. I think we're doing it and trying to accomplish it with our best gun at it."

I feel like if we do a good job on their linebackers we can move the ball."

As the teams have become more successful, the rivalry has increased, but Chappell hopes his players concentrate more on the game-plan than any other external factors.

"In what happened last year (a 16-14 loss during the regular season), I hope our players have learned a lesson that we just have to go out there and play football this week," he said.

"We were too emotionally keyed up (last)."

Innis, though, feels the rivalry can be an equalizer for both teams.

"I don't know that there is bad blood between Ayden-Grifton players and our players. I think both teams have mutual respect, but the rivalry will come into effect during the course of the ball game. The rivalry will keep the football game close."

situation," he said.

"We're playing a large number of young players and some times we have to learn the tough way."

But Sauls said he could not put all the blame on injuries for his team's loss to South Lenoir and that an improved performance against C.B. Aycock is a must.

"Defensively, we didn't play as well as we'd like," he said. "They threw the ball 30 times and we had no interceptions and no quarterback sacks."

"Their (C.B. Aycock's) single wing is a well conceived offense and they are moving the ball on everybody. We've had defensive problems, so we'll have to play well. Our lack of quickness is a problem."

Farmville Central

In a season already beset by injuries, Farmville coach Dixon Sauls hopes to just have enough healthy players to field a team.

"We're just not sure who we're going to have week to week, especially in the special teams and the regular lineups," Sauls said.

Last week, the Jaguars dropped a 15-12 decision to South Lenoir to fall to 2-3 on the year. Next up is a home match against the Falcons of Charles B. Aycock.

"We played well enough to win the ball game. We had a chance to put them away and they changed the momentum. The way we lost may be the most important psychological aspect — playing reasonably well and having the opportunity to put them away and not being able to do. Our confidence level will be tested. We did establish a running game but once again our turnovers (six) and penalties (95) did us in."

But injuries have hampered the Jaguars to a great extent.

Farmville had no JV game last week and had to bring as many as seven players up from the JV squad. Sauls said he had no idea what his personnel situation would be this week. He is hoping to have tailback Mack Davis and guard-linebacker Scott Gardner back, but they are still questionable. Quarterback Morris Foreman and tailback Darryl Wilkes both returned to the lineup last week against South Lenoir but both are not fully healthy.

Schiraldi Plays The Road Well

By The Associated Press
Calvin Schiraldi knows the difference between Wrigley Field and Olympic Stadium.

"The wind doesn't blow out here like it does at Wrigley Field," he said. "You can afford to give up those 400-foot fly balls, and I gave up some tonight."

Schiraldi scattered eight hits over 8 1-3 innings to end a five-game losing streak and Mark Grace drove in two runs Tuesday night as the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos 5-3.

Schiraldi, 9-13, struck out four and walked two before Rich Gossage finished for his 13th save, allowing a run-scoring groundout to Tim Wallach.

"I struggled in the sixth, seventh and eighth," Schiraldi said. "I sweat a lot and it gets pretty chilly here with the air conditioning, and my arm stiffened up."

Chicago had five hits in the four-run first. Mitch Webster singled, stole second and Grace singled him in. Andre Dawson tripled and scored on Rafael Palmeiro's squeeze bunt. Vance Law followed with an RBI double. Grace added an RBI double in the second.

"It's a lot easier to pitch with a five-run lead," Schiraldi said.

In other games, Pittsburgh beat St. Louis 3-2, Philadelphia beat New York 5-4, Houston beat Atlanta 3-2 in 10 innings, San Diego beat Los Angeles 8-4 and San Francisco beat Cincinnati 6-3.

Brian Holman, 3-8, gave up nine hits and all five runs in five innings, losing for the fifth time in seven decisions.

Just 6,131 attended the game, the smallest crowd in Olympic Stadium this season.

Montreal scored in the second on Nelson Santovenia's RBI triple. Dave Martinez hit a run-scoring single in the fifth.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 2
Bobby Bonilla hit a two-run single and Andy Van Slyke threw out the tying run at home plate with two outs in the ninth inning as Pittsburgh clinched second place in the National League East.

Pittsburgh, 84-72, had not finished as high as second since 1983.

With Jose Oquendo on third and one out in the ninth, Luis Alicea flied out to center and Van Slyke threw out Oquendo at the plate.

John Smiley, 13-10, gave up seven hits in seven innings. Jim Gott pitched the ninth for his 34th save. Ken Hill, 0-1, gave up five hits over five innings in his second major-league appearance and first start.

Phillies 5, Mets 4
Tommy Barrett hit a run-scoring single off Roger McDowell, 5-5, to snap a ninth-inning tie. With one out, Chris James singled and took second on Greg Gross' groundout before Barrett pinch hit for Steve Jeltz.

Steve Bedrosian, 6-6, got the final out in the top of the ninth after relieving Don Carman, who gave up seven hits in 8 2-3 innings.

Alex Trevino hit a run-scoring single in the 10th inning, sending Atlanta to its seventh consecutive loss. Rafael Ramirez singled off Joe Boever, 0-1, Kevin Bass sacrificed and Trevino singled to left.

Danny Darwin, 8-13, pitched 1 2-3 innings of hitless relief.

Padres 8, Dodgers 4
Eric Show, 16-11, pitched a six-hitter for his career-high 16th victory, striking out a season-high nine in his 13th complete game, the most for a Padres pitcher since Randy Jones had 25 in 1976.

Tim Leary, 17-10, gave up eight hits and seven runs in 3 2-3 innings.

Giants 6, Reds 3
Jose Uribe had three hits and drove in two runs as San Francisco snapped Cincinnati's eight-game winning streak.

Don Robinson, 9-5, scattered eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. Craig Lefferts finished with three-hit relief for his career-high 11th save. Jack Armstrong, 4-7, gave up seven hits and five runs in 4 1-3 innings.

Red Sox Fall To Blue Jays Again

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer
Boston's got it wrapped up, right? They can't miss, right? Well ...

While Milwaukee and New York were winning, the Red Sox continued to stumble against Toronto and kept the race alive in the American League East.

The Red Sox still lead Detroit, New York and Milwaukee by 3 1/2 games with five left to play, but after being pounded by the Blue Jays a second straight night, they can't be blamed for feeling a little antsy.

"We gotta go out there tomorrow and show a little character," Boston reliever Bob Stanley said. "We have to show we can come back after getting beat up two games in a row. Tomorrow's a big game for us."

Ernie Whitt drove in six runs with two homers and a single in Toronto's 15-9 victory Tuesday night. Whitt, who spent six years in the Boston farm system, couldn't help enjoying his role in slowing the Red Sox' title drive.

"We're out of the race, but we're still trying to finish as high as we can. And it's nice to play spoiler."

Elsewhere, it was New York 5, Baltimore 1; Cleveland 4, Detroit 0; Minnesota 5, Oakland 0; Chicago 3, Texas 2; Seattle 10, Kansas City 3, and Milwaukee 6, California 5.

The Blue Jays, 10-2 against Boston this season, know first-hand the experience of nightmare becoming reality. They dropped their last seven games in 1987 and lost the division on the final day of the season.

So Whitt had some sound advice for the Red Sox.

"It's in their hands," he said. "They have to go out and win it."

Toronto chased starter Mike Smithson in the second inning and has outscored the Red Sox 26-10 in the last two games.

"It's not like we're 3 1/2 games out with four to play," Smithson said. "We're still in first place."

But these are the Boston Red Sox, still seeking their first World Series championship in 70 years, still reeling from their improbable collapse in 1986 against the New York Mets.

"There's no panic yet," Stanley said. "We're still in the driver's seat, and we're pretty good drivers."

Yankees 5, Orioles 1
New York got two homers from Don Mattingly and seven strong innings from Ron Guidry to pull into a tie for second place in the AL East.

Mattingly connected in the first and third innings and Guidry improved to 2-3 with his longest outing of the year. The Yankees have six games remaining.

New York jumped on Baltimore's Curt Schilling, 0-2, for two quick runs in the top of the first when Rickey Henderson opened with a single and Mattingly homered.

Indians 4, Tigers 0
Tom Candiotti won his sixth straight decision, a career high, and pitched his first shutout of the season as Cleveland prevented Detroit from gaining ground on the Red Sox.

Candiotti, 13-8, allowed four hits, struck out four and walked two for his 11th complete game of the year. The Tigers only had one baserunner reach second.

Frank Tanana, 14-11, allowed nine hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Reggie Williams and Carmen Castillo homered for Cleveland in the bottom of the eighth.

Brewers 6, Angels 5
Don August also won his sixth straight decision and Milwaukee held off a ninth-inning California rally to keep its faint title hopes alive.

August, 13-6, allowed seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. He led 6-0 after five innings but was chased in the seventh after giving up an RBI double to Devon White.

Chuck Crim replaced August and gave up a three-run homer to Johnny Ray, who had four hits and four RBI. It was Ray's sixth homer. Chris Bosio, the fourth Milwaukee pitcher, allowed Ray's RBI single in the ninth but earned his fifth save.

The Angels have lost eight straight.
Twins 5, Athletics 0
Allan Anderson pitched his first major league shutout and Minnesota set an American League record for attendance in a single season.

With a crowd of 48,300, the Twins pushed their attendance to 2,820,049. California had the old record with 2,807,360 in 1982. The Twins already have enough advance tickets sold for their five remaining games to go over the three-million mark.

Anderson, 16-9, allowed three hits, struck out one and walked two in winning for the 10th time in his last 12 decisions. The left-hander lowered his earned run average to 2.45, second only to Milwaukee's Teddy Higuera at 2.41.

Bob Welch, 16-9, gave up seven hits and five walks in 3 2-3 innings.

White Sox 3, Rangers 2
Shawn Hillegas and Tom McCarthy combined on a two-hitter and Mike Diaz homered on a 3-0 pitch in the ninth to lead Chicago.

Diaz's homer, his third, came off Texas starter Paul Kilgus, 11-15, who lost his fourth straight decision. Diaz, who entered the game batting .194, also had two singles.

Hillegas worked six innings, allowing just Steve Buechele's third-inning triple and rookie Kevin Reimer's homer in the top of the fourth. Hillegas walked four and struck out six.

McCarthy, 2-0, set down the last nine batters in order, striking out two.

Mariners 10, Royals 3
Darnell Coles went 4-for-4 with three RBI and three runs scored, and Alvin Davis also drove in three runs as Seattle beat Kansas City.

Steve Balboni and Edgar Martinez added two RBI apiece in support of rookie Erik Hanson, 2-2, who gave up six hits in six innings. Mike Jackson worked three innings and earned his fourth save.

Tom Gordon, also a rookie, lasted just 4 1-3 innings and dropped to 0-2. The Mariners took a 4-2 lead with four runs in the top of the third.

Top Prep Teams Maintain Spots

RALEIGH (AP) — Garner, Burlington Cummings, Wallace-Rose Hill and Murphy all retained their No. 1 rankings in the fourth week of The Associated Press high school football poll in North Carolina.

The 4-A rankings remained virtually unchanged Tuesday, with the exception of West Mecklenburg, 4-0, entering the poll at No. 10.

Garner, the top-ranked team the first four weeks of the poll and the defending 4-A champs, received 12 of a possible 15 first-place votes from a statewide panel of prep sportswriters for 147 points. The Trojans are 5-0 and hold the state's longest winning streak at 20.

Second-ranked Richmond County received two second-place votes, while third-ranked Greensboro Page grabbed the remaining top vote.

The rest of the 4-A poll included Fayetteville Smith, Greenville Rose, Kannapolis Brown, Asheville Reynolds, McDowell County and Gastonia Ashbrook.

All 10 teams in the 4-A rankings are undefeated.

Burlington Cummings was once again the clear top choice in the 3-A ranks with 13 first-place votes.

Forest Hills, also 4-0, moved up a spot to No. 2 after third-ranked High Point Andrews lost to 4-A Greensboro Page 16-3 last week. Both squads garnered one first-place vote each.

The rest of the 3-A poll included Havelock, East Rutherford, East Lincoln, East Wake, defending state champion Shelby, West Henderson and newcomer Rockingham County.

Idle Wallace-Rose Hill, 4-0, took the top 2-A spot with 11 first-place votes and 142 points.

Hertford County was second with two first-place votes, while Thomasville, with one top vote, moved up a notch after beating previously ranked Lexington.

Clayton, 4-1, received the remaining first-place vote and was ranked ninth in its first entry in the poll.

Defending 2-A champ Whiteville, Fuquay-Varina, Newton-Conover, Ayden-Grifton, East Duplin and Monroe rounded out the rest of the top teams.

Two-time defending winner Murphy was again at the head of the 1-A rankings with 12 first-place votes and 132 points.

Swain County, with one first-place vote, moved into a tie with idle Bath for the No. 2 spot.

East Montgomery, a 12-8 winner over No. 8 North Moore, received the final first-place vote and was ranked fourth.

Hendersonville, 4-1, cracked the 1-A rankings at No. 10. Midway, Cherokee, Elkin and Beaver Creek rounded out the top 10.

NBC Using Aggressive Coverage

By Norman Chad
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

In the early 1960s, television had "The Untouchables" with Robert Stack playing Eliot Ness, who battled crime lords in Chicago with his small band of incorruptible federal agents. In the late 1980s, television has "The Seoul Searchers" with Wallace Matthews playing Wally Matthews, who battles Olympic officials in South Korea with his small band of incorruptible network cameras.

Only in this case, a lot of people watching are confusing the good guys with the bad guys.

Amidst the commercial clutter it has created at these Summer Games, NBC Sports has jolted many viewers, South Korean and American alike, with its aggressive pursuit of breaking news. NBC has let its cameras and microphones stray beyond the finish line, tracking down almost all that's not right at the Games. Executive Producer Michael Weisman's creation of "The Seoul Searchers" — print reporters knowledgeable in certain areas — has in turn created resentment among people used to kid-glove broadcast treatment of the Olympics.

At the eye of the storm has been Matthews, a reporter for New York Newsday.

When U.S. boxer Anthony Hembrick was disqualified for showing up to his bout late, Matthews sharply questioned all hands involved and later charged by officials to get to Hembrick. NBC received 85 calls complaining that Matthews' treatment of the situation was too tough.

When a brawl broke out after a South Korean boxer lost a close decision, Matthews again was there, including an interview with a South Korean security guard who insisted he did not speak good English. Park Seh Jik, president of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee, criticized

NBC's coverage, saying the network "focused too long and hard on one aspect and gave the wrong impression."

In addition, NBC has chronicled problems at the gymnastics and swimming venues (particularly with the U.S. team) and with doping. Many U.S. viewers have wondered if NBC has overlooked the good to only pursue the bad and the ugly.

"The Olympics is a time of very strong nationalism," Weisman said. "The criticism we hear is that people want to hear positive news, they don't want to hear the down stories. We are not the American team. We are clearly rooting for the American team, but we're not going to whitewash anything...."

"(Also), the Koreans obviously were very sensitive. When that brawl broke out, the (Korean Broadcasting System) pulled out to a wide shot. The KBS didn't even show it. It was good television, good drama.... We don't think we've been one-sided or heavy-handed."

Matthews, too, defends his approach. "People don't like my tone, I have to work on that," he said. "(But) the South Korean thing in particular — the criticism is unfair. They had been hired to keep order on the ring floor. They were not hired to go into the ring and beat up the ref, and that's what I said on the air.... I had been talking to the (security guard). When we put him on the air, he went into this much-more-broken-English bit."

Part of the problem for Matthews is that while newspaper reporters often are pushy and less than polite when pursuing stories, they don't have a live camera over their shoulders. Matthews does, making his let-me-just-squeeze-in-here-for-a-few-tough-questions routine seem like a media mugging.

Weisman created "The Seoul Searchers" for protection. He simply wanted to make sure NBC was covered if something significant developed.

NBC has done more than just cover itself. Monday night, typical of its Olympic effort, NBC blanketed the Ben Johnson story for nearly the first hour of its prime-time telecast. At most Olympics, ABC stuck simply to the medal count; when a story virtually demanded air time — such as the Willie Gault bobsledding controversy at the 1988 Winter Games in Calgary — ABC reacted lamely, a day late, with Lynn Swann, of all people, at the scene.

Rose Blanks Wilson Fike, 2-0

Patrick Joyner and Jason Bizzaro each scored a goal to lead Rose to a 2-0 win over Wilson Fike in a Big East high school soccer match Tuesday.

Rose outshot Fike, 28-5, for the match while Scott Thomas and Steven Higdon combined in the goal for the shutout.

Joyner scored the initial goal after 25 scoreless minutes on an unassisted shot and Rose led 1-0 at the half.

"After having lost a game like we lost to Kinston last week (2-1), this was a nice one to win," said Rose coach Charlie Harvey. "With 13 minutes left, Fike got two good shots but we stuffed them. Then we got our second goal and closed them out."

Rose moves to 5-4 overall and 4-1 in conference play and returns to action at Wilson Hunt Thursday.

Culbreth Tops Greenville Rec Team

Grey Culbreth Junior High school of Chapel Hill handed the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department junior girls' tennis team a 6-4 loss Tuesday.

Brown: Heels Facing Toughest Test

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — So far this season, the North Carolina football team has failed all three of its tests. This weekend, says coach Mack Brown, the team faces an even tougher test when it travels to play fourth-ranked Auburn.

"We'll be challenging one of the four or five best football teams in the country," Brown said. "Our players need to understand that for us to have a chance of winning, Auburn must help us. We've got to force some turnovers and play error-free football ourselves."

"They scored on three of the first five plays they ran against Kansas and were ahead 49-0 at halftime," Brown said Tuesday. "They are the type of football team which can embarrass you because they are so physical and they do so many things with their defense."

The Tar Heels opened the season with a 31-10 loss to eighth-ranked South Carolina, followed by a 28-0 setback at the hands of No. 10 Oklahoma. Last week at home, Brown said penalties, errors and a "lack of emotion" contributed to a 38-34 loss against Louisville.

Brown said he's not buying the notion that the Tigers will play an unemotional game against the Tar Heels.

"People say they'll probably be flat because they played Tennessee last weekend in an emotional ballgame and then they play LSU next weekend and you are catching them at the right time," Brown said. "I don't think there is a right time to catch them...."

"We're talking about a football team that is obsessed with winning the SEC championship as well as the national championship, and my experience against teams that have that depth and have that experience and have that obsession to win the championship play well every week. They don't go out and play flat."

North Carolina will start junior Jonathan Hall at quarterback for the second week in a row, but Brown said he still plans to play redshirt freshman Deems May if "the situation presents itself."

Torin Dorn also will be replaced at the starting tailback spot by sophomore Kennard Martin, who rushed for 160 yards on 14 carries last weekend.

Friend Says Taylor Ready To Return

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Lawrence Taylor took his treatment for substance abuse very seriously and is now ready to return to work, a former teammate says.

"This has been an extremely tough month for him," Beasley Reece, a television commentator with WVIT-TV in Hartford, Conn., said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "He's ready to go to work."

The NFL on Tuesday reinstated Taylor and four other players who had turned in positive urine tests during training camp and were suspended by Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Reece said Taylor, a Pro Bowl player in each of seven previous seasons, told him on Sunday that he expected to be reinstated this week and added that Taylor has missed competition since the suspension.

"He has to play in something where there is a definite winner and a definite loser," Reece said. "That's part of his personality. Football is the ultimate for him. There are hundreds of battles on the field and ultimately one winner and one loser, and it can't be him."

Reece said he and four other men played a lot of one-on-one basketball with Taylor this past week.

"It was one-on-one and Lawrence would play someone and then play the next, and the next and the next. If they didn't take him back this week I might be dead," Reece quipped.

Taylor was treated on an outpatient basis and Reece said the seven-time Pro Bowl linebacker has become sort of a buff on the history of drug treatment.

"He is taking this very seriously," Reece said. "He knows this is the battle of his life."

Giants general manager George Young said he would comment on Taylor's reinstatement today.

"I'm not saying anything today," he said Tuesday.

Taylor has missed four games since being suspended on Aug. 29. The Giants defense has struggled and given up an average of 387.8 yards per game and almost 25 points per game. The Giants are 2-2 and face Washington, 2-2, on Sunday.

Defensive end Leonard Marshall, who has the locker next to Taylor, smiled a little on Monday when asked if Taylor could immediately help the Giants.

"To whom much is given, much is expected," Marshall said. "So you know, I just hope the guy can come back and he can stay healthy and help the team."

How They Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Sept. 23.

House

DRUG BILL — By a vote of 375 for and 30 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR5210) giving the government several new weapons to combat the nation's drug problem. The bill ks aimed at users and dealers at home and at foreign traffickers.

Although House members want to clear the bill before the 1988 congressional elections, the Senate may not cooperate in that goal. Congress is expected to quit for the year in mid-October.

In part, the bill allows the death penalty for persons convicted of drug-related murders, denies an array of federal benefits to drug criminals, legitimizes certain drug evidence obtained without search warrants and authorizes civil fines for drug users in addition to existing criminal penalties.

Supporters termed the bill a necessarily tough approach to a worsening problem, while opponents said some of its provisions tamper constitutional freedoms.

Members voting yes favored the bill.

North Carolina representatives voting yes included Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Howard Coble, R-6; Charles Rose, D-4; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9; Cass Ballenger, R-10, and James Clarke, D-11.

DRIVER'S LICENSES — By a vote of 281 for and 119 against, the House approved the softer of two pending proposals for inducing states to revoke driver's licenses of persons convicted of drug-related criminal offenses. This occurred during debate on the omnibus drug bill (see preceding vote).

The vote established federal grants for states denying driving privileges to drug offenders. It replaced a punitive proposal denied to take a percentage of highway funds away from states failing to revoke the licenses of drug criminals.

Voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

Voting no were Coble.

AIDS TESTING — By a vote of 266 for and 137 against, the House opted for the less comprehensive of two proposals for AIDS testing of prison inmates.

This approved an amendment to test only inmates who have used drug needles or been convicted of sexual crimes. It replaces a proposal that all prisoners be tested for the AIDS virus at the beginning and end of confinement.

The vote occurred as the House neared final passage of a bill (HR5142) authorizing $400 million to help states upgrade AIDS programs.

Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., who supported less extensive prison testing, said, "We cannot let legislative hysteria dictate AIDS policy."

Edward Madigan, R-Ill., said all inmates need testing because "The percentage of prisoners practicing homosexual behavior is much greater than the general population."

Members voting yes favored less extensive AIDS testing of prisoners.

Voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

Voting no were Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

PRE-MARITAL AIDS TESTING — By a vote of 91 for and 304 against, the House rejected an amendment to the AIDS bill (above) to induce states to require AIDS testing of marriage license applicants.

Supporters called such testing necessary to slow the spread of AIDS, particularly to the new born. Oppon-nents said AIDS screening of those planning marriage would prove unfortunate when the test yields a false positive exposure.

Members voting yes wanted states to begin AIDS testing of marriage license applicants.

Voting yes were Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

Voting no were Jones, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

Senate

FREE TRADE PACT — By a vote of 83 for and 9 against, the Senate gave final congressional approval of a treaty to phase out tariffs and other trade barriers between the United States and Canada. The Canadian Parliament is still debating the pact to create essentially a North American free trade zone.

Supporter Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., called the treaty "a triumph of democratic governments, of good sense, of good economics..."

Opponent Kent Conrad, D-N.D., said "this agreement will hurt the farmers of North Dakota."

Senators voting yes endorsed the Canadian-U.S. free trade pact.

Terry Sanford and Jesse Helms voted yes.

MINIMUM WAGE DEBATE — The Senate failed to end a Republican filibuster blocking full debate on a Democratic bill (S837) raising the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 per hour over three years.

The vote of 53 for and 43 against fell short of the three-fifths majority needed to end the talkathon. While most senators voting to sustain it were opposed to the minimum wage hike as drafted by the Democrats, others were protesting the Democratic freeze on more than two dozen of President Reagan's judicial nominees.

Senators voting no wanted to block consideration of the bill raising the minimum wage.

Elections Uncertain In Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haiti's new military leaders met with three former presidential candidates and agreed to restore the constitution but balked at setting an election date, a spokesman for one candidate said.

"The government seems to desire the advancement of the democratic process," said Claude Roumain, political director for Marc Bazin, one of the former candidates.

Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, Haiti's new president, and Sgt. Joseph Heubrex met Tuesday with Bazin, Gerard Gourgue and Louis Dejoie Jr., local radio stations said. The three former presidential candidates belong to a pro-democracy group called Committee for Democratic Understanding.

They asked Avril for a return of the constitution, which was approved by referendum but later suspended by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, who was ousted as Haiti's leader in a Sept. 17 coup by lower-ranking members of the Presidential Guard.

Avril, administrative head of the army under Namphy, was named president by Heubrex and other coup leaders. Heubrex is believed to be running this impoverished Caribbean country in concert with Avril.

"The principle of a return to the suspended 1987 Constitution was admitted by the new government. Amendments will be considered only when a new duly elected legislature is in session," Roumain said.

"Our points of view differ, however, on a date for elections. The Committee and the Military Government agree, nevertheless, that the date will be set by an independent Electoral Council, and not by the de facto government," Roumain added.

Avril and Heubrex have met with other political factions but have set no timetable for bringing democratic rule to Haiti.

Haiti was ruled for nearly three decades by dictators Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier and then his son, Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier. The younger Duvalier was swept from power by a popular uprising in February 1986 and fled to France.

Four Killed In Ritual

DARWIN, Australia (AP) — A prominent aboriginal artist and his family of four have been found dead in the Outback from gunshot wounds in an apparent ritual killing that involved spears, news reports said today.

Police in the distant aboriginal reservation of Arnhem Land in the Northern Territory clamped a virtual news blackout on the killings, saying only that the bodies, found Tuesday, were being flown to Darwin for autopsies.

But Australian Associated Press said police found the family of five on a remote outstation with shotgun wounds and other injuries apparently caused by spears, a centuries-old method of settling tribal feuds.

News reports, quoting aboriginal sources, said the family, of the Namok tribe, was shot and apparently speared at their camp. Police said there was no apparent motive for the killings and that they were searching for another aboriginal painter to help their investigation.

The identity of the slain artist was not made available.

AAP said some of his works hung at the National Gallery in Canberra, the federal capital. It described the man as a tribal elder who had retained a traditional nomadic lifestyle, keeping Europeans at a distance.

New Ties?

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Britain's foreign secretary says he will meet Iran's foreign minister this week to discuss restoring diplomatic ties between the two nations after a year of chilly relations.

"Certainly we are seeking normal relations," Sir Geoffrey Howe told reporters Tuesday. "That is one of the purposes of the meeting" with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati, he said.

When asked if he might announce restoration of relations after the meeting, Howe smiled and replied: "Watch this space."

Officials at the British Foreign Office in London said the meeting would be held Friday at U.N. headquarters in New York.

In New York, U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz said Tuesday that U.S. diplomats have no plans to meet with Iranian envoys in the city for the 43rd U.N. General Assembly.

Last week, Britain's Foreign Office said other likely topics of discussion between Howe and Velayati include the fate of Britons missing in Lebanon and U.N. efforts to end the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

A Foreign Office spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Britain would maintain its policy of not negotiating for the release of hostages.

Burmese Soldiers Block Exodus From Cities

KLE DAY, Burma (AP) — Soldiers are sealing off urban areas to prevent students and Buddhist monks from fleeing to border regions to carry on the fight for democracy, arrivals at this frontier rebel camp said today.

"There are tens of thousands of students and monks who want to leave the cities but cannot," said Ko Ko, a 35-year-old teacher from Rangoon who arrived Tuesday at this camp of about 500 ethnic Karen rebel soldiers next to the Thai border.

Gen. Saw Maung, who seized power in a Sept. 18 coup, ended weeks of massive pro-democracy demonstrations last week by ordering troops to fire on protesters.

The official death toll since the coups is about 350, although Western diplomats believe more people have been killed.

On Tuesday, Burmese who fled to the rebel stronghold of Ghay Baw Bo, said they saw soldier summarily execute unarmed protesters who took to the streets to agitate for democracy.

Soe Hlaing, a 36-year-old lawyer from Pegu, said he saw nine people executed by soldiers on a bridge in the town of Tharrawdy during his flight to the Karen-controlled areas.

"Each was shot with a gun. One bullet to the heart," Soe Hlaing said.

A student from the Rangoon Institute of Technology said he witnessed the "systematic killing" of 10 persons in Mudon, south of the coastal city of Moulmein.

Many anti-government student leaders have gone underground to escape the brutal suppression, fleeing from military-controlled cities to wild, frontier areas controlled by ethnic rebels who also are fighting the central authorities.

In Kle Day, Ko Ko said "the army is blocking routes. We came here because the army is killing students."

He said troops are manning roadblocks in Mangladon district of Rangoon and Kyaito district of Pegu, about 40 miles northeast of the capital.

Students have been forced to take detours and are traveling at night to avoid the checkpoints, said Ko Ko, who has been writing underground anti-government pamphlets under a pen name since 1975.

About 270 students have straggled into Kle Day, and Ko Ko quoted them as saying they plan to take up arms to fight the clique that has repressively ruled Burma for 26 years and crippled the country's economy through isolationist economy policies.

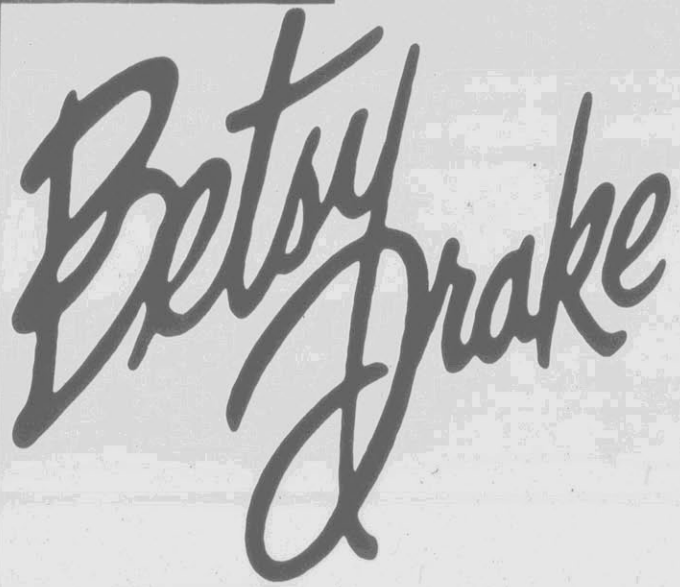

"We cannot fight with simple weapons," said Ko Ko, pointing to hand-made catapults, sharpened bicycle spokes known as "jinglees" and swords. He said students reaching the frontier who have formed an All Burma Students Democratic Front will try to get arms from other countries, he said.

Min Ko Naing, one of the top student leaders in Rangoon, left the capital the day after the coup and plans to join his compatriots at the border region, Ko Ko said.

The Karen army's vice chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Tamala Baw, said he received instructions from Karen leader Mo Bya that 200 students will leave Kle Day for Ghay Baw Bo, about 40 miles away, to receive military training with another 400 students already there.

Other students will go to bases closer to military installations in the country's interior, he said.

Tamala Baw said the Karens will ask international organizations to help feed the Burmese students escaping to the regions under rebel control.

RamesSES Exhibit To Open At Charlotte Mint Museum

CHARLOTTE — After more than 3,000 years, more than 70 priceless Egyptian artifacts from the time of Ramesses the Great will be made accessible to the public by Charlotte's Mint Museum.

The exhibition, Ramesses The Great, is to open Saturday at the Mint Museum of Art at 2730 Randolph Road in Charlotte and will be on view until Jan. 31, 1989.

This exhibition represents the greatest achievement in the exhibition program at the museum since its founding. Getting the treasured works of art, including the huge statue of Ramesses, began when Mint Museum director Milton Bloch received a call from Edwin Jones, a past president of the Mint board of trustees.

Jones had learned from Freda Nicholson, director of Charlotte's Discovery Place Science Museum, that the Ramesses exhibition might be available after its last scheduled showing in the United States, at Boston.

Bloch chased down the rumor with the late Dr. Roger Nichols, then director of the Boston Museum of Science, who gave him encouragement. With this hope offered, Bloch began writing to Egyptian officials. No responses. Then Bloch tried sending telegrams. Again nothing. Then Bloch sent catalogues, clippings and other material to persuade Egyptian officials of the quality of the museum's programs. Still no results.

Better luck came with discovering that an Egyptian woman from Cairo, visiting her brother in Charlotte, was a registered Egyptologist — number 425 to be exact.

The lady, Amani Shafie, was invited the next day to visit the museum. The very people Bloch had been trying to contact, the director general of the Cairo Museum and the president of the Egyptian Antiquities organizations, were both Ms. Shafie's mentors in Egypt.

She returned to Egypt as an advocate of having the exhibition come to Charlotte. In phone calls to Ms. Shafie, Bloch received assurances that Egyptian officials seemed receptive and impressed. Still no word, no contract.

Other contacts came into play, resulting in a veritable Chinese puzzle of paths being crossed, new leads coming into play.

Then, Bloch decided to go to Cairo to see officials. As fate had it, the contract of approval for the exhibition to be shown in Charlotte arrived at his desk immediately after his departure to Cairo from Charlotte.

The decision to go to Cairo was fruitful, as Bloch got to personally

Hallowed Tradition

Sweat Lodge Restores Pride To Indian Inmates

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

STONY MOUNTAIN, Manitoba (AP) — The Indians fast for two days before crowding into a dome-shaped lodge to chant and pray to the Great Spirit. Water is poured over 16 red hot stones in a steamy purge of body and soul.

But this sweat lodge, a hallowed tradition among natives of the North American prairies, has an unusual setting.

It's erected every month in the recreation yard of Stony Mountain federal penitentiary in western Canada, where a dozen or more Indians strip down to their bathing suits and enter the sauna-like chamber for 2½ hours of native communion.

"I've seen some awfully big, angry individuals melt after one or two sweats," said Clark Morrisette, a Cree counsellor employed at the prison.

The experimental form of rehabilitation is an attempt to break the Indian cycle of violence and alcoholism by restoring cultural pride.

The prison's Native Brotherhood Organization is permitted to hold sweat lodges, sacred circles and powwows, to smoke the peace pipe, burn sweet grass and earn special passes to attend sun dance rituals on nearby reservations.

"We're trying to get rid of the myth there's two strikes against you just because you're native. But we can't do it without some form of religious awakening," said John Stonechild, a Cree elder hired to counsel Indian inmates who form half the prison's population of 430.

"These men are in search of something, and part of that search ends when they take up their rightful heritage," said Stonechild.

For many of Canada's 465,000 Indians, joblessness on the reservation and discrimination in the cities lead to drinking and violence, and natives go to jail far more often than other Canadians.

Half the prison inmates in Manitoba and 64 percent in Saskatchewan are Indians, although they comprise less than 7 percent of the population in either prairie province.

On many reserves, bored youngsters deliberately break the law as a means of getting off the reservation, according to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Before the cultural program at Stony Mountain, seven out of 10 Indians would end up behind bars again following their release, said Curtis Fontaine, a Salteaux Indian who heads the Native Clan Organization in Winnipeg.

That rate is now down to 30 to 40 percent, and those who do return are surviving on the outside for longer periods, said Fontaine, whose agency has a contract with the government to supervise parolees and run a halfway house.

"Native people are still going through culture shock. For many, their frustration is out of control," Fontaine said. "This program shows them they do have a place in society."

Another result, according to Corrections Department official Ray Gawryluk, is fewer prison disturbances.

Inside the 20-foot-high walls of the maximum security prison, inmate Ed Sparvier, 26, said he adopted a "do unto others before they do unto you" lifestyle on the streets of Winnipeg before his conviction in 1985 for aggravated assault.

Raised on the Waywayseecappo reserve in western Manitoba, Sparvier wants to return to life on the land when he is paroled next year.

"I remember history books in school telling me I was a savage and my culture and religion were heathen," said Sparvier, who has "get high" tattooed on his arm and attends Alcoholics Anonymous meetings as well as two-hour sacred circles every Tuesday night.

"There's times in my life I've screwed up severely. A lot of distractions can pull you off the Sweet Grass Road. But there's a gap and a bridge across it, and it's got a lot to do with self-esteem," Sparvier said.

He keeps a bundle in his cell containing sweet grass, sage, cedar and a cloth depicting the medicine wheel on which the eagle symbolizes strength, the buffalo wisdom, the bear health and the mouse courage.

Brotherhood president Cecil Cooke, 28, has been in and out of prison since he was 15 for robbery and other crimes. He's now preparing a proposal for Cree and Salteaux language lessons for inmates and plans to attend college when he is paroled.

He's learned that he alone is responsible for his actions, not society or the system, he said.

"Every time I got out before I would either re-offend or be sent back for drinking. But what happens when you leave depends on how much you want to succeed. Alcohol and drugs are always available."

Prison authorities began encouraging Indian culture 15 years ago, but native religion was not formally recognized until 1985 and it's been difficult to find qualified elders willing to work inside prisons.

Other problems remain. Cooke said some unsympathetic guards have seized sage, cedar and sweet grass from cells on suspicion they were marijuana.

When an Indian made ritual cuts on his chest after learning that his family had died, guards thought he was trying to commit suicide and threw him into solitary confinement.

"To a white person, he was hurting himself. To a native, it was a ritual," said Gawryluk. Guards now attend three-day native awareness courses.

Deep-Diving Mini Sub Probes Ocean

ABOARD THE ALVIN — Three of us, crowded knee-to-knee in a 7-foot metal ball, were about to sink a mile down to the extreme pressure, cold and absolute darkness inside a volcano at the bottom of the Pacific Ocean.

"Are you OK?" asked geologist Stephen Hammond as divers clanged shut the 2-inch-thick titanium hatch overhead.

Hammond was checking for panic, like the bolt of fear he felt the first time he was sealed inside the three-passenger research submarine of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

About 300 miles off the Oregon coast, the Alvin, launched by its mother ship, the Atlantis II, was about to dive into a crater in the undersea mountain range called the Juan de Fuca Ridge to a spot on the ocean floor that has astonished and excited scientists.

For the next nine hours, we would be exploring the outer boundaries of biology and geology.

Like the expeditions of explorers in past eras to the poles or the interior of unexplored continents, every descent by the Alvin to the harsh environs of the quake-and-eruption-prone ridges on the ocean floor brings new and surprising sights.

Scientists have returned to their laboratories with more than 300 new

In Kle Day, Ko Ko said "the army is blocking routes. We came here because the army is killing students."

He said troops are manning roadblocks in Mangladon district of Rangoon and Kyaito district of Pegu, about 40 miles northeast of the capital.

Students have been forced to take detours and are traveling at night to avoid the checkpoints, said Ko Ko, who has been writing underground anti-government pamphlets under a pen name since 1975.

About 270 students have straggled into Kle Day, and Ko Ko quoted them as saying they plan to take up arms to fight the clique that has repressively ruled Burma for 26 years and crippled the country's economy through isolationist economy policies.

"We cannot fight with simple weapons," said Ko Ko, pointing to hand-made catapults, sharpened bicycle spokes known as "jinglees" and swords. He said students reaching the frontier who have formed an All Burma Students Democratic Front will try to get arms from other countries, he said.

Min Ko Naing, one of the top student leaders in Rangoon, left the capital the day after the coup and plans to join his compatriots at the border region, Ko Ko said.

The Karen army's vice chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Tamala Baw, said he received instructions from Karen leader Mo Bya that 200 students will leave Kle Day for Ghay Baw Bo, about 40 miles away, to receive military training with another 400 students already there.

Other students will go to bases closer to military installations in the country's interior, he said.

Tamala Baw said the Karens will ask international organizations to help feed the Burmese students escaping to the regions under rebel control.

Ramesses Exhibit To Open At Charlotte Mint Museum

CHARLOTTE — After more than 3,000 years, more than 70 priceless Egyptian artifacts from the time of Ramesses the Great will be made accessible to the public by Charlotte's Mint Museum.

The exhibition, Ramesses The Great, is to open Saturday at the Mint Museum of Art at 2730 Randolph Road in Charlotte and will be on view until Jan. 31, 1989.

This exhibition represents the greatest achievement in the exhibition program at the museum since its founding. Getting the treasured works of art, including the huge statue of Ramesses, began when Mint Museum director Milton Bloch received a call from Edwin Jones, a past president of the Mint board of trustees.

Jones had learned from Freda Nicholson, director of Charlotte's Discovery Place Science Museum, that the Ramesses exhibition might be available after its last scheduled showing in the United States, at Boston.

Bloch chased down the rumor with the late Dr. Roger Nichols, then director of the Boston Museum of Science, who gave him encouragement. With this hope offered, Bloch began writing to Egyptian officials. No responses. Then Bloch tried sending telegrams. Again nothing. Then Bloch sent catalogues, clippings and other material to persuade Egyptian officials of the quality of the museum's programs. Still no results.

Better luck came with discovering that an Egyptian woman from Cairo, visiting her brother in Charlotte, was a registered Egyptologist — number 425 to be exact.

The lady, Amani Shafie, was invited the next day to visit the museum. The very people Bloch had been trying to contact, the director general of the Cairo Museum and the president of the Egyptian Antiquities organizations, were both Ms. Shafie's mentors in Egypt.

She returned to Egypt as an advocate of having the exhibition come to Charlotte. In phone calls to Ms. Shafie, Bloch received assurances that Egyptian officials seemed receptive and impressed. Still no word, no contract.

Other contacts came into play, resulting in a veritable Chinese puzzle of paths being crossed, new leads coming into play.

Then, Bloch decided to go to Cairo to see officials. As fate had it, the contract of approval for the exhibition to be shown in Charlotte arrived at his desk immediately after his departure to Cairo from Charlotte.

The decision to go to Cairo was fruitful, as Bloch got to personally

Sweat Lodge Restores Pride To Indian Inmates

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

STONY MOUNTAIN, Manitoba (AP) — The Indians fast for two days before crowding into a dome-shaped lodge to chant and pray to the Great Spirit. Water is poured over 16 red hot stones in a steamy purge of body and soul.

But this sweat lodge, a hallowed tradition among natives of the North American prairies, has an unusual setting.

It's erected every month in the recreation yard of Stony Mountain federal penitentiary in western Canada, where a dozen or more Indians strip down to their bathing suits and enter the sauna-like chamber for 2½ hours of native communion.

"I've seen some awfully big, angry individuals melt after one or two sweats," said Clark Morrisette, a Cree counsellor employed at the prison.

The experimental form of rehabilitation is an attempt to break the Indian cycle of violence and alcoholism by restoring cultural pride.

The prison's Native Brotherhood Organization is permitted to hold sweat lodges, sacred circles and powwows, to smoke the peace pipe, burn sweet grass and earn special passes to attend sun dance rituals on nearby reservations.

"We're trying to get rid of the myth there's two strikes against you just because you're native. But we can't do it without some form of religious awakening," said John Stonechild, a Cree elder hired to counsel Indian inmates who form half the prison's population of 430.

"These men are in search of something, and part of that search ends when they take up their rightful heritage," said Stonechild.

For many of Canada's 465,000 Indians, joblessness on the reservation and discrimination in the cities lead to drinking and violence, and natives go to jail far more often than other Canadians.

Half the prison inmates in Manitoba and 64 percent in Saskatchewan are Indians, although they comprise less than 7 percent of the population in either prairie province.

On many reserves, bored youngsters deliberately break the law as a means of getting off the reservation, according to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Before the cultural program at Stony Mountain, seven out of 10 Indians would end up behind bars again following their release, said Curtis Fontaine, a Salteaux Indian who heads the Native Clan Organization in Winnipeg.

That rate is now down to 30 to 40 percent, and those who do return are surviving on the outside for longer periods, said Fontaine, whose agency has a contract with the government to supervise parolees and run a halfway house.

"Native people are still going through culture shock. For many, their frustration is out of control," Fontaine said. "This program shows them they do have a place in society."

Another result, according to Corrections Department official Ray Gawryluk, is fewer prison disturbances.

Inside the 20-foot-high walls of the maximum security prison, inmate Ed Sparvier, 26, said he adopted a "do unto others before they do unto you" lifestyle on the streets of Winnipeg before his conviction in 1985 for aggravated assault.

Raised on the Waywayseeccappo reserve in western Manitoba, Sparvier wants to return to life on the land when he is paroled next year.

"I remember history books in school telling me I was a savage and my culture and religion were heathen," said Sparvier, who has "get high" tattooed on his arm and attends Alcoholics Anonymous meetings as well as two-hour sacred circles every Tuesday night.

"There's times in my life I've screwed up severely. A lot of distractions can pull you off the Sweet Grass Road. But there's a gap and a bridge across it, and it's got a lot to do with self-esteem," Sparvier said.

He keeps a bundle in his cell containing sweet grass, sage, cedar and a cloth depicting the medicine wheel on which the eagle symbolizes strength, the buffalo wisdom, the bear health and the mouse courage.

Brotherhood president Cecil Cooke, 28, has been in and out of prison since he was 15 for robbery and other crimes. He's now preparing a proposal for Cree and Salteaux language lessons for inmates and plans to attend college when he is paroled.

He's learned that he alone is responsible for his actions, not society or the system, he said.

"Every time I got out before I would either re-offend or be sent back for drinking. But what happens when you leave depends on how much you want to succeed. Alcohol and drugs are always available."

Prison authorities began encouraging Indian culture 15 years ago, but native religion was not formally recognized until 1985 and it's been difficult to find qualified elders willing to work inside prisons.

Other problems remain. Cooke said some unsympathetic guards have seized sage, cedar and sweet grass from cells on suspicion they were marijuana.

When an Indian made ritual cuts on his chest after learning that his family had died, guards thought he was trying to commit suicide and threw him into solitary confinement.

"To a white person, he was hurting himself. To a native, it was a ritual," said Gawryluk. Guards now attend three-day native awareness courses.

Deep-Diving Mini Sub Probes Ocean

ABOARD THE ALVIN — Three of us, crowded knee-to-knee in a 7-foot metal ball, were about to sink a mile down to the extreme pressure, cold and absolute darkness inside a volcano at the bottom of the Pacific Ocean.

"Are you OK?" asked geologist Stephen Hammond as divers clanged shut the 2-inch-thick titanium hatch overhead.

Hammond was checking for panic, like the bolt of fear he felt the first time he was sealed inside the three-passenger research submarine of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

About 300 miles off the Oregon

coast, the Alvin, launched by its mother ship, the Atlantis II, was about to dive into a crater in the undersea mountain range called the Juan de Fuca Ridge to a spot on the ocean floor that has astonished and excited scientists.

For the next nine hours, we would be exploring the outer boundaries of biology and geology.

Like the expeditions of explorers in past eras to the poles or the interior of unexplored continents, every descent by the Alvin to the harsh environments of the quake-and-eruption-prone ridges on the ocean floor brings new and surprising sights.

Scientists have returned to their laboratories with more than 300 new

PBS Turns To U.S.-Produced Programming For New Year

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Public Broadcasting Service, a steady customer of British programming in the past, is keeping most new programming on this side of the Atlantic in 1988-89. Unfortunately, the result would seem to suggest we're not very entertaining over here.

All the new series are about Americans, Mexicans or Canadians, but none of it is going to bring floods of new viewers to public television — except perhaps for the one bald-faced attempt to lure commercial network audiences, a special on the making of NBC's hit comedy, "Family Ties."

Of the new series, the most interesting would appear to be "American Experience," a history anthology; "The Mind," a sequel to "The Brain," and "CE News Magazine," a children's news show.

The good, old standbys, "Great Performances" and "Masterpiece Theatre," are still coming up with promising if not ground-breaking fare. "Great Performances" will have more episodes of those fine "Tales From the Hollywood Hills" in November, and "Masterpiece

Jeremy Brett returns as Sherlock Holmes on the "Mystery!" series, which premieres Oct. 13 with a production of the Terrence Rattigan stage play "Cause Celebre." "Wonderworks," the anthology series aimed at adolescents but much admired by adults, begins Nov. 5 with "Necessary Parties," a story of a family breakup starring Alan Arkin and Barbara Dana. And Bill Moyers is back with more interesting interviews.

Here are the new series:

— "American Experience," premiering Oct. 4, is a history anthology featuring observations and remembrances by notable citizens and filmmakers. The first episode is producer Tom Weidinger's "The Great San Francisco Earthquake," including newly restored archival film and present-day interviews with witnesses of the disaster. The atomic bomb, Indians, presidential races and music are subjects of later episodes.

— "The Mind" is an ambitious sequel to the 1984 PBS series "The Brain." This time, the series delves into the nature of consciousness through episodes on aging, addiction, pain, depression, thinking and violence, among others. There are many fascinating case studies along the way.

— "Bill Moyers' World of Ideas" is a nightly series of interviews with an interesting array of authors, scientists and philosophers. It premiered in September and runs through Nov. 18.

— "CE News Magazine" is a children's news show, reported by kids recruited from the ranks of "Children's Express," the children's newspaper that has occasionally scooped the adult news media. The kids, minus the cynicism of their adult counterparts, will tackle such tough subjects as, in the premiere Oct. 13, the ease with which parents can put unruly children in private mental institutions. Other stories will be about homeless children, homosexual teen-agers, the toy industry and life in a welfare hotel.

— "Canada: True North," a four-part series that began Sept. 12 and ends Oct. 3, is an examination of the history of Canada, its present-day culture and its relationship with the United States. The host is Canadian-born Robert MacNeil of PBS' "The MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour."

— "Mexico," no premiere date yet, is a three-part examination of that country's modern history, beginning with the 1910 revolution and the emergence of the Partido Revolucionario Institucional, the party that ruled Mexico until the hotly disputed 1988 election that seems to have ended one-party dominance.

— "Global Rivals" is a four-part series that premiered Sept. 20 and analyzes conflicts between the Soviet Union and the United States. The host is journalist and former Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Kalb.

— "The Power of Choice" follows Michael Pritchard, youth counselor and comedian, to 22 high schools across the country as he encourages kids, through humor, to talk out their problems. The series starts Oct. 15.

— "Ramona" is a fictional series based on best-selling author Beverly Cleary's books about Ramona Quimby, who suffers from all the mortifications familiar to anyone who is growing up or remembers doing so. The series began Sept. 10.

— "Life Matters," premiering Oct. 9, is a 13-part series that presents inspiring stories of people who cope with serious disease or other medical problems, including AIDS, cancer, depression and sight loss.

ABC Movie Handles Liberace With Care

NEW YORK (AP) — Mention Liberace and many words spring to mind before "tasteful."

That, however, is exactly the word for ABC's two-hour movie biography of the flamboyant entertainer, airing Sunday.

"Liberace" is ever-so-careful with the image of the performer, who died in February 1987 of complications from AIDS. That's due no doubt to the fact that this production was sanctioned by his estate and allowed to use his fabulous home, cars, costumes and jewels in the filming.

Another Liberace movie will follow a week later on CBS.

The ABC version is insistently simplistic and adoring, even while constantly raising the question of his sexuality. Liberace always denied he was a homosexual and his spokespeople always denied he had AIDS. The movie strongly hints that he was gay and does make plain that he died of AIDS.

Andrew Robinson stars as Liberace. Rue McClanahan plays his mother. John Rubinstein plays his long-time confidante, Jamie James.

Robinson's Liberace — inexplicably a dark brunette throughout the movie even though Liberace was fair-haired — is kind, gentle and good, dedicated to his public and his beloved mother. His sexual preference is a nagging, unspoken problem.

When he announces his intention to marry a young woman he has met at church, Jamie abruptly excuses himself from the room. The woman's father calls off the wedding because of "rumors" and fears that Liberace and his daughter would never produce grandchildren. Years later, when Liberace's sister-in-law surprises him by setting him up with an adoring female fan, he rushes from the room in embarrassment.

Scott Thorson, the companion and employee who filed a palimony suit against Liberace in 1982, is portrayed (by Marius Valainis) as an opportunist who turned on Liberace after he was fired. As Liberace explains the relationship to Jamie, "It's something about strays, about being needed."

At one point, after the Thorson affair becomes public, Liberace is asked point-blank by a reporter if he is homosexual. He answers the question by saying he doesn't believe "that entertainers should publicly air their sexual or political tastes."

But he adds, "with a name like Liberace, which stands for freedom, I'm for anything with the letters L-I-B, and that includes gay lib."

If the filmmakers wanted to avoid dwelling on Liberace's love life, they could have spent more time on his music. There are several musical numbers — Mike Garson was the piano stand-in, though Robinson does a good job of faking it — but Liberace's proficiency at the piano seems to be maintained magically, since he is never shown to have any particular passion for the instrument.

Networks Take Safe Road Although Losing Audience

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In case you were crying your eyes out because the networks are losing their audience to cable and videocassettes, the new fall schedule will make you dry up real fast.

Playing it safe seems to be the name of the game for the networks in the 1988-89 television season.

NBC will win the season, its fourth in a row, with help from the Summer Olympics, followed in October by the World Series. So no wonder its schedule is filled with spinoffs, clones and ripoffs. But you can't say much more for ABC and CBS.

ABC, long ago committed to "War and Remembrance," the last of the big-time miniseries and sequel to "The Winds of War," will start doling out the 30-hour monster with an 18-hour dose in November.

"War and Remembrance" wasn't supposed to be on until February. Its early scheduling is one remnant of the four-month Writers Guild strike that will put an asterisk next to the 1988-89 television season. The traditional fall preview that normally comes in late September has been strewn from early October until late December.

Other vestiges of the strike are

NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries," a cheap "infotainment" series, and ABC's "Incredible Sunday," a reincarnation of "That's Incredible!" Both shows are considered "informational" and weren't affected by the writers strike, so they could go into production when the networks weren't sure how long the strike would last.

Also in response to the strike delay, ABC slapped together a new "Mission: Impossible" to fill in until "A Fine Romance" comes on mid-season, while a re-created "Police Story" will fill for the new "Saturday Mystery Movie," also delayed until mid-season.

Some new shows were written well before the writers strike, so they have no excuse.

Since viewers were too lazy last season to tune out the witless "A Different World" spinoff that NBC slotted right after "The Cosby Show," NBC is trying that gambit again with "Empty Nest," which takes place in the two "Golden Girls" neighborhoods: Miami and Saturday nights. "Baby Boom" is a spinoff of the movie of the same name.

NBC's only immediate winner is "Dear John," which reunites likable "Taxi" star Judd Hirsch and "Taxi" creator Ed Weinberger. NBC has given it a cushy Thursday night timeslot, moving the degenerated "Night Court" to Wednesday.

"Tattling's" is an offbeat comedy-drama about a handsome-but-tough restaurateur and his socialite ex-wife. It comes from the makers of "St. Elsewhere," and the characters are engaging, though the show needs to find its voice.

ABC seems to have the lead in development, after putting on the fine "thirtysomething" last season and adding "The Wonder Years" in the spring. The two shows won Emmys in their categories. ABC also added "China Beach," a classy drama about women in the Vietnam war.

This year, ABC starts the season with one sure winner, "Roseanne," a sitcom with something to say, from the producers of NBC's biggest hit ever, "The Cosby Show."

ABC's "Knightwatch" is murky film noir set around a Guardian Angels-type law enforcement group. ABC's "Murphy's Law" casts George Segal as a seedy insurance investigator in a plodding crime drama.

ABC is guarding its second-place finish of last season by playing it safe, bringing back Peter Falk as "Columbo" in the "Saturday Mystery Movie" mid-season. The other two movies that will rotate with "Columbo" are untested vehicles starring, respectively, Burt Reynolds and Louis Gossett Jr.

CBS, third in the Nielsens last season, seems to be trying "Murphy Brown," a sophisticated comedy starring Candice Bergen as a TV reporter who just got off the bottle, shows promise and has a decent time slot on Monday night. "Almost Grown" is an ambitious study of a baby boomer couple over three decades.

But CBS also fell into nostalgia by teaming Dick Van Dyke and Mary Tyler Moore — in separate shows on Wednesday night. Moore's show, still untitled, is underdeveloped. The producers were so unhappy with Van Dyke's pilot that it had to be redone. Critics have yet to see it.

CBS was also inspired by a popular movie and made "Dirty Dancing" into a series. Its pilot, too, is being redone and hasn't been previewed.

Interim Shows Will Fill In Until Fall Schedule Begins

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the new shows on the networks' fall schedule aren't so new, but they'll do the job until late October and November when the real fall schedule kicks in.

Because of the four-month writers strike, the networks made commitments to some series that were "strike-proof" as well as others that weren't really all that good but looked better because at least they were written.

Two ABC "place-holders" are old series being re-shot from the original scripts.

"Mission Impossible" premieres Oct. 23 and will fill in for "A Fine Romance," an ambitious international romantic comedy, filmed in Europe, that won't get on the air until January. Peter Graves returns in the role he created in the late '60s, but the rest of the cast is new. One of them is Phil Morris, son of Greg Morris, a main character on the original show. The series is being shot in Australia.

ABC is also reviving "Police Story," which will premiere Oct. 29. The original, created by Joseph Wambaugh, ran in the 1970s and was one of the best police dramas television has ever seen. An anthology series, it is filling in for "The ABC Mystery Movie," a rotating movie series that will include a rejuvenated "Colombo," starring Peter Falk, that is delayed until January.

CBS has already begun running the sitcoms "The Cavanaughs," which will be replaced when "Coming of Age" comes in Oct. 31, and "First Impressions," which was to have been a mid-season replacement, but fills in for "Raising Miranda," which premieres Nov. 5.

Some of the interim programming will never get on the air because once the strike was settled, some new shows were delayed by only a few weeks. NBC has kept an option for instance on "The Hardy Boys," but doesn't plan to do more than a movie or so instead of the series.

CBS bought but has yet to give an air date to "Jake's Journey," a funny, Monty Python-esque fantasy-comedy in which an American teen-ager takes up with an medieval knight, played by Monty Python's Graham Chapman. Also yet to get an air date from CBS is "Dolphin Bay," a family drama set around a scientist studying dolphins in Australia. Shades of "Flipper."

Some other "reality-based" fillers:

CBS has "High Risk," a magazine-type show that features reports on people with dangerous jobs or hobbies. It will be replaced Nov. 29 by "TV 101," a back-to-school drama about kids learning to make a television newscast.

Beginning Oct. 29, ABC has "Trackdown," another "America's Most Wanted"-type show. In this one, viewers watch police bring in parole violators. It fills in for the George Segal crime drama "Murphy's Law," which makes its debut Dec. 3.

CBS is offering an entertainment series, "Live! Dick Clark Presents," which has already premiered and runs until Oct. 26 when the sitcoms "The Van Dyke Show" and the as-yet untitled new Mary Tyler Moore show premiere.

Strike-proof shows that seem to have made the schedule without caveat are NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries," a weekly magazine series based on the highly successful specials of last season, and ABC's "Incredible Sunday," a rejuvenation of "That's Incredible!"

TV Plans New Wave Of Films Based On True-Life Stories

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Made-for-TV movies "based on a true story" are coming so close on the heels of the real event that maybe we'll soon just have the movie and skip the event — "World War III: Available NOW on Video!"

Liberace died only last year, but ABC and CBS are ready to air made-for-TV movies based on his life in early October.

Last October, Jessica McClure dropped down a well in Midland, Texas. Her story will be on ABC this season. Ryan White, the hemophiliac teen-ager with AIDS, is still in the news, but his ordeal with a town that shunned him will be made for TV this season. So will the story of "David," the boy whose father set him afire in a custody dispute five years ago.

The space shuttle program is still struggling to recover from the Challenger explosion, but the disaster is supposed to come to the small screen this season as a docudrama, also on ABC. By comparison, "The Final Days," an ABC dramatization of the Bob Woodward-Carl Bernstein book about the end of Richard Nixon's presidency, looks like ancient history.

CBS apparently wasn't as quick to grab up recent true stories, so it will go back as far as singer Karen Carpenter, who died from complications of anorexia, the eating disorder, for one biographical movie. Another true-life CBS movie concerns a doctor who was the first to detect AIDS in children.

CBS' "Jack the Ripper" is based on a true story that became the stuff of much fancy and legend. Another fact-based historical movie is "Day One," about the Manhattan Project and the race to build an atomic bomb.

In the area of fiction, CBS has Larry McMurtry's novel "Lonesome Dove," which will be an eight-hour miniseries, one of the longer ones these days.

This season may mark the end of the era of super-long, big-event miniseries — which actually seemed to end with "Amerika," but ABC has had a long-term commitment to Herman Wouk's "War and Remembrance," the 30-hour sequel to "The Winds of War." Eighteen hours of the miniseries will air in November.

ABC's "Roots: Kunta Kinte's Gift" reunites LeVar Burton (Kunta Kinte) and Louis Gossett Jr. (Fiddler) in a question for freedom that will air around Christmas.

NBC, which has a strong regular series lineup and no new ideas other than ripping off already successful ventures, offers, not surprisingly, little of excitement in movies and miniseries — although they do provide off-season projects for NBC series stars.

Almost Forgotten Photos Chronicle WWII Camp Life

By ELIZABETH MEHREN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — Photographer Peter Wright felt like an archeologist stumbling onto a lost temple in the jungle when he discovered a cache of pictures by Ansel Adams at the Library of Congress.

Lawyer John Armor, Wright's buddy, was equally ebullient when he saw the crates containing Adams' pictures from the World War II Japanese-American internment center at Manzanar, Calif.

The project on which Armor and Wright embarked almost immediately was published by Times Books this fall as "Manzanar," a collection of 100 of the pictures Adams took in the fall of 1943 with explanatory text written by Armor and Wright. Seeking to "match Ansel Adams' sympathetic view and brilliance," Times Books editorial director Jonathan Segal asked John Hersey, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Hiroshima," to write the introduction to "Manzanar." It is titled, "A Mistake of Terrifically Horrible Proportions."

"It is another side of the mirror" of Hiroshima, Hersey said in a short telephone conversation from his home on Martha's Vineyard. "Both the 'Hiroshima' pieces and this say as much about America as they do about the Japanese."

The bombing of Hiroshima, Hersey said, "is still something you can't be absolutely categorical about." But Manzanar, he said, "is a case in which the hysteria after Pearl Harbor caused us to lose sight of one of the fundamental positions taken by the Bill of Rights — that is, that we don't imprison citizens who've not been accused of anything."

"A grave injustice was done to people who had done no wrong," said Segal, the book's editor. "When I saw the photos, I realized that this could be a book that truly makes a difference."

Established in 1941 on a desert site north of Los Angeles formerly known as Camp Owens, Manzanar was the first of 10 "relocation camps" set up in California, Colorado, Wyoming, Arkansas, Arizona and Utah during World War II.

More than 110,000 Japanese-Americans were interned in these camps throughout the course of the war, 10,000 of them at Manzanar. A recently passed law provides for compensation and an official apology to the 55,000 to 60,000 surviving residents of the camps.

In 1943, Adams was invited to visit Manzanar and to make a photographic record of the camp by his friend, Ralph Merritt, Manzanar's second director. For Adams, renowned then as now for his work as a nature photographer, it was to be his sole venture into photo-documentary work involving human subjects.

"They are absolutely so clear, there seems to be nothing between your eye and the objects in the picture," Hersey said. "It's not an album of horrors the way the pictures of the German concentration camps were."

Adams, too, wrote that he was "moved by the human story unfolding in the encirclement of the desert and mountains" at Manzanar. In 1944, he published a book, "Born Free and Equal," containing his own commentary and some of his pictures.

But anti-Asian sentiments ran high in this country during World War II. The book had a very limited print run, and met with such intense public resistance that copies of "Born Free and Equal" were burned in protest. Adams chose not to renew the copyright and the book fell into obscurity.

Wright, "like all serious photographers" a devotee of Adams' work, took to haunting the photo archives of the Library of Congress when he moved to Washington to become news photo editor of the Associated Press five years ago. While combing the library's negative collection, he came across a reference to the Manzanar pictures.

Expecting to see "a couple of weird prints," he called up the collection, "and up popped sixteen 16-by-20 boxes. I opened them up and I was just amazed."

Adams, who died four years ago at age 82, had donated the 160 pictures to the library in three batches between 1963 and 1968. Along with the photographs and negatives, Wright and Armor found "a fat file of correspondence" from Adams about the Manzanar series.

"He was quite sympathetic to the Japanese," Armor said. "Sympathetic at a time when it was not fashionable to be so."

In his correspondence, Wright added, Adams talked about "how he hoped that someday, something would be done" with the Manzanar pictures. Adams tried, apparently, to put together a show of the series at the Museum of Modern Art here, "but as far as I can tell the show never did take place," Wright said. "There was a public outcry, and the whole thing was canned."

In researching the text for their book, Armor and Wright plodded through more than 10,000 pages of congressional testimony, as well as military records from the period. They read the personal correspondence of Harold L. Ickes, President Roosevelt's labor secretary, and one of the few in official Washington to oppose the decision to intern Japanese-Americans. They obtained one document that still has not been declassified, a letter from Col. Karl Bendetsen "saying he didn't feel it was appropriate that the American public know that plans were already in place to intern the Japanese-Americans" before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

They learned also that "before Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt asked for a list of all the Japanese-Americans living in the United States, and within two weeks it was on his desk." Combined with other evidence, Armor said, "it sure as hell from a straight research standpoint looks like plans were in place" before Pearl Harbor.

PERSONAL DETAILS — Photographer Ansel Adams focused on telling details of the personal items of a Japanese family interned at Manzanar, Calif., during World War II. Many of the internees had sons serving in the U.S. Armed Forces. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photos)

Many contracts fail because declarer does not draw trumps quickly enough. Far more do not succeed because declarer fails to realize that he needs his trumps for some other purpose. Consider this hand.

In North-South's methods, North's bid of three diamonds over his partner's reverse was game-forcing. Had he wanted to sign off, he would have had to bid two no trump. South's actions strongly indicated a club void, so North tried to slow down the auction. However, South was quite prepared to try for slam since he could reasonably expect partner to hold the ace of diamonds and queen of spades.

Declarer won the opening trump lead in hand, and it was obvious that his only problem was two potential heart losers. The only place to park one of them was on the fourth spade. For that to succeed, declarer would either need to find an even diamond split or else the defender with the long trumps to also hold at least four spades.

To prepare for both contingencies, at trick two declarer made the farsighted play of leading a low heart from hand. East won and returned a trump, and although West showed out on this trick, declarer was in command. Instead of drawing the last trumps he started running spades, and breathed a sigh of relief when West showed out on the third round. On declarer's last spade one of dummy's hearts was pitched. Ace of hearts and a heart ruff with the trump ace took care of the remaining loser in that suit. Declarer returned to hand with a club ruff to draw the last trump and claim the rest of the tricks.

The Hunter And The Fox

By Kevin Day

Once upon a time there lived a hunter named Amos. He was trying to catch a fox. Meanwhile the fox was in the forest. Amos was in the forest, too. The fox was getting away. Amos ran after the fox. He caught the fox in a net. The next thing, the fox got away again. Amos never caught the fox. The fox lived happily ever after.

The Sad Clown

By Adam Carlson

Once upon a time there was a clown named Sammy. He was very sad because no one liked his tricks. He went to the spotlight and started the tricks. People threw snowballs at him. Then he went home and practiced his juggling. He went back to the spotlight and juggled for the crowd. They threw flowers and medals at him. He smiled and thanked the people.

Bubbles

By Susan Thorne

It is fun to blow bubbles. You get to go outside and blow them. Sometimes you blow them and they don't come all the way out. They pop in your face when you blow them. You have fun talking to your friends. They laugh at you when you blow bubbles.

It is easy to describe how bubbles look. They have many colors. The bubbles have red, orange, yellow, green, blue, and purple colors. They have many shapes and sizes. They come in small, medium and large circles.

Bubbles do many things. Sometimes they link together. They may pop in your face or on your nose. They float away. They burst on the ground. You can pop them with your hands and feet, too.

Susan Thorne, 10, a student at Belvoir Elementary School receives special mention.

The Clock Couldn't Tell Time

By Brian Walker

Once upon a time there was a grandfather clock whose name was Ryan. He was very sad because his mom died. Suddenly, it began to rain.

Lightning struck against the sky. Thunder was noisy. His hand fell off. Lightning had struck the numbers. His friend John saw his hand on the ground. He picked him up and took him to his shop. He went to Kmart and bought a new hand and new numbers. When he went back to the shop he fixed the clock.

Brian Walker, 7, a student at South Greenville School receives special mention.

My Stolen Snack

By Bradley Denton

One day I was at school. I was in my classroom sitting at my desk. I had just come from lunch and bought a snack. I secretly put the chocolate chips in my desk. I heard something in my desk so I looked in. I saw nothing. I started doing my work. Then,

I heard it again. I looked in and this time my snack was gone. I looked everywhere for my chocolate chip cookies. They were no where to be found. All of a sudden, I heard noises. Crunch, crunch, crunch! The noises got louder. Smack, smack, smack. I decided to get brave. I pulled my books out of my desk and saw a chubby, fat, white mouse. He was wearing polka dotted red shorts and a t-shirt that said "Chubby Cheeks". First, he stared at me for a couple of minutes. Then, he jumped off my books and ran away. The only proof I had of the chubby mouse was the crumbs left on my book.

Bradley Denton, 9, a student at H.B. Sugg School receives special mention.

Federal Facts

vice president

The vice-president of the United States is a member of the Executive Branch of government. Article II or part two of the Constitution establishes the requirements for office and some of the duties of the VP.

The requirements for office are the same as those for president—natural born citizen, 35 years old, and for 14 years lived in the U.S. The VP serves as president of the Senate but can vote only if there is a tie. In case the president dies, resigns, is impeached and found guilty or becomes unfit to complete his/her term in office, the vice-president takes charge as president.

The VP has very little actual power in government unless the president sees fit to assign or ask the vice-president to carry out certain work. The VP does attend meetings of the National Security Council and is on the Board of the Smithsonian Institution and serves as a ceremonial assistant to the president.

The salary of the VP is almost $100,000 a year plus an expense allowance. No limit is set on the number of terms a VP may serve and like the president he/she may be impeached and tried for misconduct.

In 1974 a home for the VP and family was purchased at the Naval Observatory. It is a 33 room house and is now the official residence of our nation's vice-president.

Alvin

and strange species of sea animals. They have unearthed geological formations and processes that researchers have never seen on land.

Diving in the Alvin in 1977 near the Galapagos Islands, scientists first discovered the hot water vents that serve as a cooling system for the earth's molten center, creating "chimneys" a dozen feet high from the minerals they disgorge and nourishing animals that exist in violation of the biological maxim that life requires light. In each series of dives since then, new life and geology have been found.

In dives at Juan de Fuca this summer, the Alvin's crew sighted several new species of animals as well as a massive fissure, perhaps as long as 20,000 feet and pouring out a huge plume of mineral-loaded water warmed to 150-degree Fahrenheit temperatures, earning the name "megaplume."

If such large heaters exist on undersea ridges around the world, scientists will have to rewrite all the calculations of temperature and chemical mix in the oceans. A substantial amount of carbon dioxide is being vented from these sites, important to those trying to gauge the "greenhouse effect" and global warming it might produce.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has mounted several missions to explore the geology, chemistry and biology of these fields. Hammonds heads one such NOAA team that is exploring the hot water vents in the ocean's floor. Also, a new scientific consortium has been formed, called RIDGE for Ridge Interdisciplinary Global Experiments, to coordinate teams from around the country to explore the new phenomena.

Since July, NOAA has sent the Alvin into the undersea volcano called Axial to find and sample the life, rocks and the hot "smokers" there.

The dive on this day in August would bring back samples of water from the hot vents, photographs of the vent field and samples of recently discovered creatures such as giant tube worms and smaller worms called "Alvinella," named for the sub that helped to discover them.

The geological formations on the ocean floor would be as strange and as new as those of the moon; the creatures as odd as any that might be brought back from Mars — without mouths, anuses or internal organs and, in the dark, cold regions of the deep, relying on the scalding mineral soup shot up through the ocean floor.

In its 2,000 dives, the Alvin can count an impressive list of accomplishments, including the discovery and exploration of the Titanic in the North Atlantic and the recovery of a hydrogen bomb lost by the U.S. Air Force in the Mediterranean Sea near Spain.

Exhibit

meet officials — and he obtained another copy of the signed contract at the Cairo Museum.

So, after a long effort and determination, approval was given for the Mint to receive the exhibition on its closure in Boston.

After showing in Charlotte, the Egyptian treasures will be returned to Cairo.

Rameses II, pharaoh of Egypt during the 13th century, B.C., ruled Egypt for more than 66 years and was famed both as warrior and builder.

The highlight of the ancient treasures in the exhibition is a 25-foot high, 45-ton statue of Rameses, a work of art in stone. Installation at the Mint required extensive preparatory work within the museum's structure.

At the age of 10, Rameses II was named the title "Commander in Chief of the Army." It was a purely symbolic title, and the young prince followed his father, Sety I, on the rounds of battle.

At that time, a number of dramatic setbacks for the vast Egyptian kingdom over a long period of time had taken place. Egyptian territories in Syria, the Mitanni and Ugarit states had been conquered by Hittites while the Egyptian military stood by helpless without orders to defend or retaliate.

Rameses II's father was the ruler who restored grandeur to Egypt, a process carried to even greater heights by Rameses II.

At the age of 22 Rameses headed a chariot division that routed a Nubian revolt, and that same year devised a trap for pirates from the Aegean and Mediterranean Seas who were raiding Egyptian delta towns. His trap worked, and he snared and enslaved the pirates as soldiers for Egypt. In the following years, Rameses II rebuilt the army, smashing revolts in Canaan and East Palestine. For these military successes, he began to be known as Rameses the Great.

An admission is charged for this exhibition — $7.50 for adults and $5.50 for children ages 4-12. The museum will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. For ticket reservations and more details, call 1-800-233-4050.

Professor Researches Mississippi Delta Blues

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Russell Linnemann's license plate, sporting the letters BLUESDR, attests to his avocation — an expertise in the history of Mississippi Delta blues.

And because of his enthusiasm for one of the country's only indigenous music forms, he's spent most of the past several summers in Mississippi, interviewing the musicians who are masters of the form and learning about the social and cultural environment that gave birth to the blues.

When he was 10, he and his family moved to Florida. That was 35 years ago, just before the evolution of rock 'n' roll.

"I was just captivated by the beauty of the music; there's something about it that touches me," said Linnemann, professor of history at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga. "I've been listening to it for the last 35 years, and I've never found anything that, to me, is as beautiful, as touching, as moving and colorful as the blues."

The gray-bearded professor has been able to develop his fascination with the music into an area of academic research.

Two years ago, Linnemann received a study award from the National Endowment for the Humanities. He spent the summer of 1987 at the University of Mississippi in a seminar led by Bill Ferris, director of the Center for Southern Culture there.

"That was where the project really got started," he said. "I realized that there was no primary source material on many of the early Delta blues players. So every Friday when I got out of class, I'd take off and try to find some of the players, talk to them about their music and the times they've lived through."

"There really are not many of them left," Linnemann continues. "One of the things that gives me a sense of urgency is that if this isn't done with some speed, there will be a tremendous slice of social history that's lost forever."

He sees the blues as an important reflection of the southern culture where it evolved during the 1930s.

"Many of the stories musicians have told me reflect a pattern of incredible racial violence and brutality, along with an absolutely grinding sense of economic exploitation," he said.

"A number of the blues songs that emerged are a direct reaction to those kinds of social and political issues. But blues come in all shapes and forms, and in fact one of my favorite bluesmen — Brownie McGhee — does a song called 'Blues of Happiness.'"

"There are songs like '61 Highway Blues,' 'Highway 49 Blues,' which are about the roads blacks took as they drove, walked, fled to the North," Linnemann said.

"There's a classic story of a bluesman walking along Highway 61 and he came across a snake. He picks up a stick to kill it, and the snake throws up both hands and says 'No! No! Don't kill me! I'm trying to get out of Mississippi too!'"

Urban migration brought with it a change in the music's style as well as a broader audience. Muddy Waters, recognized as one of the creators of the sound, was responsible for literally electrifying the blues.

Salt-Free Bread: A Smart Move For Menu Planners

The East Carolina University Family Practice Center has had a large number of requests for salt-free bread recipes, according to Dr. Kathy Kolasa, head of Nutrition Education and Services and columnist of The Daily Reflector.

She has provided two recipes, submitted by a Greenville resident, to try. "I've double-checked, and they work well and are pretty fool proof, which is unusual for a salt-free bread recipe," she said.

Try the accompanying recipes.

WHITE BREAD

7 3/4 to 8 3/4 cups unsifted flour
3 tablespoons sugar
3 packages active dry yeast
1/3 cup softened unsalted butter or margarine
2 2/3 cups very warm water
Peanut oil

In a large bowl, thoroughly mix 3 cups flour, sugar and undissolved yeast. Add butter. Gradually add warm water to dry ingredients and beat with an electric mixer 2 minutes at medium speed, scraping the bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto a lightly floured breadboard; knead until smooth and elastic (about 10 to 12 minutes). Cover with plastic wrap, then a towel. Let rest 20 minutes. Divide dough in half. Roll each half into a 9x14-inch rectangle. Shape into loaves by rolling the upper short side towards you. Seal with thumbs. Seal ends; fold sealed ends under. Be careful not to tear the dough.

Grease two 9x5x3-inch loaf pans with unsalted butter or margarine. Place the loaves in the pans seam down. Brush with peanut oil. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Refrigerate 2 to 24 hours. When ready to bake, remove from refrigerator and uncover dough carefully. Let stand at room temperature 10 minutes. Puncture any gas bubbles which may have formed with a greased toothpick and metal skewer. Bake in a 400 degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until done. Remove from baking pans and cool on wire racks. Loaves may be frozen for future use.

Makes 2 loaves

POPPYSEED ROLLS

1 1/2 cups warm water
1 package active dry yeast
2 tablespoons sugar
6 tablespoons softened unsalted butter or margarine plus 1 tablespoon melted unsalted butter or margarine

4 cups unsifted flour
2 teaspoons poppyseeds

Pour warm water into a large bowl. Sprinkle yeast over water and stir until dissolved. Add sugar, 6 tablespoons softened butter and 2 cups flour. Beat until butter is blended in. Stir in remaining 2 cups flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on a lightly floured breadboard; knead until smooth and elastic (about 10 minutes). Grease a bowl with unsalted butter or margarine. Place the dough in the bowl, turning to grease on all sides. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from drafts, until

Throw A Festive October Party With Seafood, Pasta And Pizza

By CAROL DEEGAN

Associated Press Food Editor
October is National Seafood Month, and seafood lovers across the United States will have plenty to celebrate.

According to the National Fisheries Institute in Washington, D.C., many popular seafood items are in excellent supply and offer consumers good buys.

Cod, halibut and Alaska pollock have come down in price, the Institute says, and farm-raised products such as trout and catfish are in consistent supply. Scallops are at reasonable prices, and shrimp are coming in from all over the world.

Lee Weddig, executive vice president of the National Fisheries Institute, says per capita consumption of seafood has shown a 25 percent increase since 1982 — up to 15.4 pounds per person (edible weight) in 1987.

"The increase in consumption is a reflection of the consumer demand for taste, variety and nutrition, and the fact that consumers are making changes in their diets to avoid chronic diseases and maintain good health throughout life," he says.

Good reasons to eat seafood, according to the Institute:

— Seafood can be prepared in a variety of ways including Cajun, Chinese, Italian, Southwestern, Caribbean and Mexican.

— You can make a complete gourmet seafood meal in the microwave in less than 30 minutes.

— You can eat seafood and stay on a diet. A 4-ounce portion of fish contains about 100 calories.

The National Fisheries Institute says research indicates that the Omega-3 fatty acids (beneficial polyunsaturated fatty acids) found in seafood may actually lower the level of triglycerides in the blood. And, the Institute says, eating more seafood in place of traditional high fat foods can help lower the risk of cardiovascular disease primarily by reducing the intake of total fat and saturated fat.

October is also National Pasta and National Pizza Month. The following are some recipes to enjoy a combination of seafood and pasta, seafood and pizza, or seafood, all by itself:

SHRIMP MARINARA WITH PASTA

1/4 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon cooking oil
One 8-ounce can tomato sauce
1/2 can (3 ounces) tomato paste
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon basil
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon pepper

8 ounces cleaned medium shrimp, peeled and deveined, thawed

Cooked pasta for two

Cook onion, green pepper and garlic in hot oil until tender in 1 quart skillet or soup pot. Add tomato sauce, tomato paste, water, sugar and seasonings. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add shrimp. Cover and simmer for approximately 3 minutes longer or until shrimp are tender. Serve over cooked pasta. Makes 2 servings.

OYSTERS LINGUINE

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon margarine
2 green onions, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
1/2 cup water chestnuts, sliced thin
Pinch white pepper
Pinch crushed red pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup white wine
1/2 tablespoon flour
1/2 cup oyster liquor
1 pint shucked standard oysters, drained
4 cups cooked linguine noodles
Heat oil and margarine in a large skillet on medium-low setting. Add onions, garlic, parsley and saute until slightly soft. Add water chestnuts, spices and wine and cook for 3-4 minutes. Blend in flour and oyster liquor and mix well. Add oysters and allow to simmer for 5 minutes, stirring twice. (More red pepper may be added for extra seasoning.) Serve over linguine. Makes 4 servings.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: I'm off on a little vacation and asked Jo Bartlett to answer the following question on sodium for us.

Q. I have high blood pressure and have been advised to decrease my salt intake. Is it really helpful and what can I use instead? A.B., Greenville.

A. Salt (which is 40 percent sodium) is an essential mineral in our body. We need about 1/2 gram a day to maintain our bodies' water balance. The food we eat easily supplies us with this naturally. When we restrict salt in our diets, we are actually restricting the sodium.

Most of the studies I have seen do recommend a decreased salt intake for people with hypertension or high blood pressure. Many people are "salt-sensitive," and if you are, it is very wise to take in less sodium. You will reduce swelling and allow your medications to work more effectively.

The average Southern diet has more than enough salt in it. I studied the salt content of local diets and found that lunch alone might have 1,500 to 3,500 milligrams of sodium without salt added at the table. Since the recommended safe level of sodium intake daily is 3,300 milligrams for adults, 1,800 to 2,700 milligrams for teen-agers and 1,350 milligrams or less for children 6 or less, you can see that we are all getting more than enough salt to meet our needs.

Fear not! You can teach your taste buds to like food with less salt. There are many salt substitutes and the marketplace. Adolph and Morton both have a salt substitute and a seasoned salt-free version; Morton's has a Lite salt, which is 1/2 salt; Lawry's seasoning is now salt-free, and No-Salt and Nu-Salt are also salt-free substitutes. These are all available locally and are fairly inexpensive to purchase.

All of these products replace sodium with potassium. When you use a salt substitute, check with your physician to be sure that the potassium is acceptable as a substitute. The substitutes do have a different taste. Try several until you find one that tastes OK to you. The seasoned salt-free substitutes may be your choice. They have added a pinch of sugar and a wide variety of spices to perk up your taste buds.

If you have a total salt-free diet, you can try herbs and spices as a salt substitute. "Mrs. Dash" has four to five different spice combinations that are very tasty and all salt-free. There are new saltless seasonings made from herbs at all of the local supermarkets. Each of them are labeled a little differently. We have tried several of these generic herb combinations and have been very pleased with the flavors. All of these products are found in the spice section of the store. Each salt substitute should list the amount of sodium (if any) and potassium that you get per teaspoon. If they do not, buy the ones that do. Then you can keep up with your daily intake.

High blood pressure is not the only condition in which you may need to restrict your sodium intake. People with renal disease, diabetes and/or heart disease also need to decrease sodium levels in their diet. Reading labels is essential if you have one of these conditions. Sodium (or salt) is often one of the first ingredients you will see listed on a processed food. It is used as a preservative and a flavor enhancer in most convenience foods so read carefully! Buying whole, fresh foods can help alleviate this problem. Most food do contain natural salts, but usually not in harmful doses.

The Healthy Benefits Of Food

We all have grown up on tales of food lore that bring together food and theories on their healing and medicinal benefits.

For a common cold we are told to eat chicken soup, feed a cold and starve a fever, and that an apple a day keeps the doctor away.

As it may be enjoyable to revel in these amusing anecdotes, it is important to know what are the scientifically proven benefits of the food we eat.

When we think about yogurt we may recall stories of Bulgarians eating this tasty milk product and living well into their senior years. While the correlation between longevity and yogurt is still under investigation, medical research has found that there are a number of substantial health benefits to eating yogurt with live active cultures.

Yogurt is milk fermented with the live active cultures Lactobacillus Bulgaricus and Streptococcus thermophilus. It offers the nutritional values of milk plus extra protein derived from the addition of nonfat milk solids.

The interaction of yogurt's live cultures brings a bounty of health benefits. It has been found that yogurt with its live strains is more digestible than milk for people with lactose intolerance.

The live active cultures produce lactase that aids the body in the digestion of lactose. Research also indicates that the active bacteria in yogurt can aid in digestion, stimulate the body's immune system and combat diarrhea.

As there is a direct correlation between yogurt's live active cultures and good health, it is important to note that heat-treated products do not offer such health benefits.

Like yogurt, other food to contribute more than witty cliches for the offering. Though the aroma of over-cooked brussels sprouts has been known to evacuate a kitchen or two, a mother's persistence in bribing children to eat brussels sprouts does have merit.

According to the American Cancer Society, a diet containing cruciferous vegetables rich in vitamins A and C, like brussels sprouts, may help lower the risk of cancers of the gastrointestinal and respiratory tracts.

For those on the cocktail circuit, those precious little fish eggs called caviar offer more than a taste of the good life.

Caviar contains Omega-3 fish oils, and research at Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland found that a diet high in fish oils appears to lower the amount of triglycerides in the blood. A high level of triglycerides, like cholesterol, can increase the risk of heart attacks.

Cranberries were at one time called bounceberries because of their ability to spring up unbruised after being dropped. Aside from their rebounding abilities, cranberries are often used as a urinary antiseptic.

In 1985, researchers at Youngstown State University in Ohio found a special factor in cranberries that appeared to interfere with the ability of pathogenic bacteria to cling to the surface of cells in the bladder and urinary tract.

Their skins may be great for polishing shoes, but the bananas we and King Kong know and love are also a wonderful source of potassium. Bananas are often recommended for people taking diuretics to replace lost potassium.

When the weather is "chili today, hot tamali," we know that a change in temperature often means the common cold may be approaching. Help is on the way.

Chili peppers have been found to be a resource to help relieve the congestion of a cold. Hot peppers irritate the mucous membrane lining the nose and throat and the bronchi in the lungs, to make the tissues "weep."

The watery secretions may make it easier for one to cough up mucus or blow his nose, and ultimately help to ease congestion for the short term. Alas, we are what we eat.

October A Good Time For A Seafood, Pasta And Pizza Party

Note: You can substitute bay or sea scallops or two cans of canned clams. If preparing scallops, use 1/2 cup chicken broth for oyster liquor. If preparing clams, use clam juice for oyster juice.

SEAFOOD PIZZA SUPREME
8 ounces peeled small shrimp, crabmeat or crab-flavored surimi seafood product
2 1/2 tablespoons olive oil
3/4 teaspoon dried oregano
1 cup each thinly sliced zucchini and mushrooms (or 2 cups of either)
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 loaf (1 pound) frozen bread dough, thawed overnight in the refrigerator and warmed at room temperature for 1 hour

Cornmeal
Dash crushed, dried chili peppers (optional)
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Combine seafood with 1 tablespoon olive oil and 1/4 teaspoon oregano; reserve. Combine zucchini, mushrooms, black pepper, remaining oil and oregano; reserve.

Knead dough lightly to remove air bubbles. Roll out to a 15-inch circle. Fit onto a cornmeal-sprinkled pizza pan or baking sheet. Form edge of dough into rim. Sprinkle with chili peppers and 1/2 cup of the mozzarella; top with vegetable mixture. Sprinkle with remaining mozzarella. Bake at 425 degrees F for 10 minutes or until crust is lightly browned. Arrange seafood on pizza. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake 3 to 5 minutes longer or until seafood is thoroughly heated. Yield: 1 large 15-inch pizza.

Fresh scallop or shrimp variation: Substitute 8 ounces of scallops or shelled raw medium shrimp. Cut large scallops in quarters; cut shrimp in half lengthwise. Marinate as directed. While pizza is baking, heat skillet and saute seafood mixture 1 or 2 minutes or just until opaque throughout; reserve. Drain and arrange on partially cooked pizza. (National Fisheries Institute)

A well-seasoned wok or iron skillet is critical for this dish. The salmon will stick to a poorly-seasoned pan.

WOK-CHARRED SALMON
One 1-pound piece fresh salmon fillet, no more than 1-inch at the thickest point, skin removed on both sides

2 tablespoons sweet butter, melted
Marinade: 2 teaspoons minced garlic; 2 tablespoons minced fresh coriander, stems and leaves; 2 teaspoons minced ginger; 1/2 teaspoon salt; freshly ground black pepper (30 turns of the mill); 1 teaspoon lemon zest, minced

Garnish: Lemon twists
Rinse and then dry the salmon fillet on paper towels. Place it on a plate.
In a small saucepan, melt the butter over low heat. Allow it to cool.
Make the marinade by mixing together the garlic, coriander, ginger, salt, pepper and lemon zest. Stir until well combined.

Pour equal amounts of the melted butter over each side of the salmon fillet. Rub equal amounts of the marinade on each side. Allow to marinate at room temperature for 30 minutes.
Place a wok or iron skillet over high heat for 5 minutes. Open all the windows, as this dish will create a lot of smoke. Place the salmon in the center of the pan and cook over high heat for 3 minutes. After about 30 seconds, loosen the salmon with a spatula, then shake the pan so the salmon does not stick. Shake it again after about another minute. If any of the marinade has stuck to the pan, smooth it over the salmon. Using a spatula, turn the salmon over and cook an additional 3 minutes, shaking the pan occasionally. Turn off the heat. Remove the salmon to a serving dish. Garnish with lemon twists and serve immediately.

Serves 2.

A Place For Pork In Low-Fat Diets

The flavors of fall-apples, cinnamon, sweet potatoes—seem to cry out for a delicious pork entree to complete the menu. Happily, with careful selection and sensible portions, there is a place for pork in your lowfat diet to reduce cancer risk.

Because the American Institute for Cancer Research's "Dietary Guidelines to Lower Cancer Risk" call for reducing fat in the diet, people often assume that including pork in menu planning is impossible. But today's lean pork is a different product than the high-fat variety most of us grew up with. America's pork producers have developed new feeding techniques and leaner breeds to produce pork that is 10 percent leaner than it was a generation ago. And meat packers and retailers are also heeding the trend by giving many pork cuts a close 1/8-inch trim.

Leaner pork is not an excuse to go "hog wild," however. The recommended 3 ounce portion of cooked lean pork still provides 9 to 13 grams of fat per serving. Here's how to get the least fat and most flavor:
•Select lean pork cuts—tenderloin, leg (fresh ham) or loin chops are leanest.
•Trim outside fat from meats before cooking and trim any separate fat before eating.
•Overcooking lean pork can make it dry; lower temperatures and shorter cooking times are often recommended for lean meats.

If you're looking for an elegant dish that's easy enough to use for "every day," this is it! The apples and cider sauced that accompany the pork in this dish add wonderful flavor.

BRAISED PORK WITH CREAMY CIDER SAUCE
4 pork loin chops (cut 1 inch thick)
1 cup apple cider (or apple juice)
1/2 teaspoon sage
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2 large tart apples (such as Granny Smith or Jonathan)

3/4 cup evaporated skim milk
Trim off all fat surrounding the pork chops. Heat a large skillet, add the pork and cook over medium heat for 3 to 5 minutes on each side. Add the cider and seasonings, and allow to barely simmer for 7 minutes. Meanwhile, peel and core the apples and cut into 1/2 inch slices. Add these to the pan and cook for 3 to 4 minutes more.

Remove the pork chops and place them on a baking sheet, and arrange overlapping apple slices on top. (Lay any extra apple slices on the baking sheet.) Preheat the broiler. Boil the mixture remaining in the pan until it is reduced to a syrup, 2 to 3 minutes. Spoon some of the syrup over the apple slices. Place the pork chops and apple slices in the broiler, about 6 inches from the heat, and broil for 2 to 3 minutes.

Meanwhile, stir the evaporated milk into the syrup remaining in the skillet, and simmer gently until it reaches a sauce consistency, about 3 to 4 minutes. Remove the pork and apples from the broiler, transfer to a serving plate, and pour the sauce over the pork and apples to serve.

This recipe yields 4 servings, with 362 calories and 13 grams of fat each.

Elegant Salad

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor
Two bottled dressings plus the marinade from artichoke hearts make the quick dressing for this elegant salad.

ARTICHOKE-ORANGE SALAD
6 cups torn greens
One 6- or 6 1/2-ounce jar marinated artichoke hearts
One 11-ounce can mandarin orange sections, drained and chilled
1 small avocado, halved, seeded, peeled and chopped
1 stalk celery, sliced
2 green onions, sliced
1/3 cup Italian salad dressing
2 tablespoons blue cheese salad dressing

Place greens in a large salad bowl. Drain artichoke hearts, reserving marinade; halve artichoke hearts. Arrange artichoke hearts, orange sections, avocado, celery and green onions on top of greens. In a screw-top jar combine reserved marinade and salad dressings. Cover and shake well. Pour over salad. Toss before serving. Makes 8 servings.

doubled in size (about 30 minutes). Punch down and turn out on a lightly floured breadboard. Divide dough in half. Form each half into a long roll and cut each roll into 12 equal pieces. Form each piece of dough into a smooth ball.

Grease two 9-inch round cake pans with unsalted butter or margarine. Place 12 such rolls in each pan. Cover. Let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in size again (about 45 minutes). Lightly brush rolls with melted butter. Sprinkle with poppyseeds. Bake in a 375 degrees in oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until lightly browned. Excess rolls may be frozen for future use.
Makes 2 dozen rolls.

Special Occasions Call For Fuss-Free Menus

When there's something to celebrate, a special dinner is always in order. And every home cook knows that a fuss-free, fast-to-fix meal is the best choice to mark an occasion and bring on the fun.

Planning and preparing a special menu can be as easy as pairing quick-cooking seafood with noteworthy accompaniment. For an easy, yet extra-special dinner, surprise seafood fans with Shrimp and Scallops with Bacon Wild Rice. To prepare, the shellfish is quickly cooked in bacon drippings with a sprinkling of spicy-hot pepper flakes. Fast cooking long grain and wild rice, accented with crisp bacon and a garnish of avocado, adds pleasing flavor and texture contrast.

Turn an ordinary meal into a party by serving Salmon Steaks with Mustard Lime Butter and Wild Rice. Deceptively easy to prepare, the fish is spread with a simple mixture of dijon-style mustard, fresh lime juice and butter. As the salmon steaks grill or broil, the delicately seasoned fast cooking long grain and wild rice simmers with leeks and lime zest.

SHRIMP AND SCALLOPS WITH BACON WILD RICE

Stay With Light Meat On Bluefish

By Bill Burton
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

With chicken it's taster's choice. Light meat or dark?

Not so with bluefish. Stay with the white flesh; get rid of the dark. That's what chef Karen Wood did the other evening, and the results were glistening white pan fried bluefish fillets. Who said blues are too oily to be fried? Those fillets were among the tastiest bluefish I ever tried — and the preparation among the most simple.

The dish was a fresh as its ingredients. No dried herbs or frozen fish, but bluefish just caught in the Chesapeake Bay, and chopped fresh dill, chives and parsley.

The blues she used when she introduced the dish at Yesteryears Restaurant in Easton, Md., had been caught earlier in the day.

Surprisingly, the fish weren't the tender one- or two-pounders preferred for eating, but not for catching. Yesteryears proprietor Bob Higgins said the filets came from six to eight pounders.

The secret, then, is in cutting out the fatty, dark red flesh strips after filleting. It takes a sharp knife to trim away these segments, which can be blamed for both strong and oily flavor. The sharp knife allows the fillet to be cut neatly. A dull blade creates a ragged edge. Those who prefer a robust, fishy flavor don't bother remove it.

Some cooks prefer to steam or bake bluefish fillets briefly to make cutting away the red flesh easier, but I think that detracts from the final dish.

Incidentally, if bluefish is to be frozen, remove the strips. They do not freeze well.

Now for the cooking of Wood's dish. Mix equal portions of fresh chopped parsley, chives and dill in a shallow bowl. Into another bowl, pour melted butter.

Dredge fillets of from one-half to three-quarters inch in thickness through the butter, then both sides of them through the herb mix. Pop them into a hot skillet and fry for about one minute on each side. Do not overcook; they should be moist, not dry.

Many warm days and hungry bluefish still remain in late summer and autumn. A potato salad would be just the thing to accompany pan fried blues. Again, the recipe is simple.

Iowa became the first state to impose a cigarette tax, doing so in 1921.

Make Your Own Relish

Magazine Food Editor

Whether you roast hot dogs on sticks over an open campfire or on a backyard barbecue grill, they'll taste super with this onion relish. It's good with brats and burgers, too.

ZIPPY ONION RELISH

- 3 large onions, finely chopped (3 cups)
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/2 cup tomato sauce
- 3 tablespoons ketchup
- 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1/4 teaspoon crushed dried red pepper

In a 2-quart saucepan combine onions and water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Add tomato sauce, ketchup, sugar, oregano, garlic salt, and red pepper. Simmer, covered, about 20 minutes or until onions are just tender. Serve hot or chilled with meats. Store remaining sauce in refrigerator for up to 2 weeks. Makes 40 one tablespoon servings.

Turkey A Tasty Option In Lowering Dietary Fat

By Toni Tipton
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

More than half the women surveyed in California made dietary changes to improve their health last year, according to a series of recent studies that have been made. This included looking for resources to educate themselves about nutrition, incorporating a four food group system into menu planning and becoming involved in an exercise program.

But some of these women still missed the mark when reaching for the goal of optimum health. Time restrictions and a general belief that they are already "doing a pretty good job" are seen as the obstacles, according to MSI International, the Los Angeles-based research firm that conducted the study.

Fifteen years ago, said Terry Davis, vice president of MSI, women were very concerned about nutrition, but their knowledge was limited to the notion that "anything that was nutritional was going to taste bad," or "it was going to be health food. That has changed."

A little of the concern about nutritious foods still lingers, but now women relate to nutrition as healthful foods and eating better, not health foods, Davis said. But there's still a ways to go.

Of 350 women surveyed throughout California, 67 percent said someone in their household was involved in an exercise program and 75 percent had someone in a weight program. In many cases, it was the woman surveyed.

But as many as 85 percent of these women have continued to use vitamin supplements as "insurance" even though they say they believe "they should get the nutrition they need from food rather than supplements." A number of those queried said they eliminate foods such as red meat, fats and sweets (and in some cases cooking oil) from their diets to help them control their weight and general health.

Women like these who totally eliminate food groups and make unwise substitutions in the diet are causing great concern to professionals studying risk for disease. Research data has already confirmed those who are topping salads with high-fat ingredients and dressings might have been better off with a hamburger plate. And fried poultry or fish are not acceptable protein alternatives to a broiled 3-ounce portion of lean red meat, which has the added benefit of providing iron.

Instead, to meet a 30 percent dietary fat recommendation, the health conscious should opt for sensible substitutions for high-fat ingredients, use less of these items overall and employ fat-reducing cooking methods.

When trading poultry for red meat in recipes, for example, always select the light or breast meat, which is leaner and contains less cholesterol than the dark, then remove and discard the skin after cooking. This will cut calories in half. Broiling, grilling, baking and roasting are the preferred cooking methods.

When making poultry salads, opt for reduced-calorie dressings and avoid high-fat ingredients such as avocado and cheese. Baking tortillas for Mexican-style salads instead of frying is another calorie-sparing technique.

'Cake Lady's Cake

By Leslie Williams
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MOUNT WASHINGTON, Md. — Everyone asks Barbara Sandler why she does not start her own business. Her desserts, with their creative, intricate designs, pure ingredients and rich taste would be a sure hit, she is told. Some have even said that her desserts taste better than those that caterers bake. So, what is the delay? "I would love to (start my own business)," says Sandler, 37. "I have always wanted to, but I'm an old-fashioned mom. My kids are still young and I cook and bake and take care of my husband as well. I'm not ready yet."

So for now, the "Cake Lady" to those familiar with her hobby, is content baking her delicious creations in the small kitchen of her Mount Washington, Md., home and giving them away to family and friends.

To test everything she bakes, Sandler turns a dessert upside down, cuts out a small cork-screw hole and samples it. If it is not up to par, she does not hesitate to toss it out and start over.

Like many accomplished chefs, Sandler is somewhat protective of her recipes, but shares one for her own Italian pound cake, "Cassata al Cioccolato," below. It took her a few months to perfect this recipe to her liking.

ITALIAN POUND CAKE

- 1/2 pound butter
- 1 2/3 cups sugar
- 5 eggs
- 2 cups cake flour

- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Butter and lightly flour 9- by 5-inch loaf pan. Cream butter, slowly add sugar, beating until light. Add eggs one at a time, beating each in well. Stir in flour, salt and vanilla and combine well. Spoon batter in pan and bake for 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 hours or until toothpick comes out clean. Cool in pan for 5 minutes before turning out rack. Slice horizontally into three even sections. These will be the layers.

Filling
2/3 pound ricotta cheese
8 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons almond liqueur or 2 teaspoons almond extract
4 teaspoons whipping cream.
As much grated semi-sweet chocolate or as many sliced strawberries as desired

Combine first four ingredients in processor or blender until smooth. Transfer to bowl. Fold in grated chocolate or sliced strawberries. Spread the filling evenly between layers of cake. Press gently on layers so they adhere and do not slide.

Frosting
8 ounces semi-sweet chocolate bits
1/2 cup strong coffee (brewed)
10 tablespoons unsalted butter, chilled
Melt chocolate with coffee over very low heat and beat in butter a small amount at a time. Continue beating until it thickens and is of spreading consistency. Frost cake with chocolate and garnish with more strawberries.

Bread Pudding — Not Just For The Upper Crust

By Rose Dosti

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Dear SOS: I would love to have the recipe for the bread pudding served at the Grill restaurant in Beverly Hills. It's just about the best ever.

Answer: Any one who loves moist bread pudding will adore this version with whiskey sauce.

GRILL BREAD PUDDING

5 eggs
2 cups evaporated milk
1 cup regular milk
1 cup brown sugar, packed
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup butter, melted
1 tablespoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
6 cups diced bread
1/4 cup raisins
1 1/2 cups diced apples
Whiskey Sauce
Combine eggs, milks, sugars, butter, vanilla, cinnamon and nutmeg. Blend well.

Arrange bread evenly in 15- by 9-inch glass baking dish and pour egg mixture over. Mix in apples and raisins and let stand 15 minutes.

Push bread down so most is covered by mixture. Cover pan with foil. Place in larger pan in oven and fill bottom pan with water.

Bake at 350 degrees 1 hour, removing foil for first 30 minutes of baking. Custard should be firm when done. Let cool. Serve with Whiskey Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Whiskey Sauce

1 cup sugar
2 cups water
1 teaspoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons cornstarch
4 tablespoons evaporated milk
2 tablespoons whiskey
Place sugar in 2-quart saucepan and brown over medium heat to make caramel. Add water and lemon juice to browned sugar and bring to boil.

In separate bowl, mix cornstarch and milk and add to boiling mixture in pan. Bring to low boil over medium heat and cook 2 minutes. Add whiskey. Serve warm.

Dear SOS: What have you on Chicken Fried Steak?

Answer: Quite a bit, depending on what you want. The recipe? I was interested in learning that in some parts of the Midwest and Texas, Chicken Fried Steak is an institution, filled with lore and mystique, just like chili. You just don't tell a die-hard chicken fried steak lover how to cook his chicken fried steak any more than you tell a "chili head" how to cook chili.

Chicken Fried Steak is not chicken at all, but a thin, less tender cut of beef steak that you make as tender as chicken breast by pounding it to a pulp. Then you dip it in egg, dredge it with seasoned flour or bread crumbs, quickly cook it in beef fat and serve it with thick meat gravy to go with the biscuits you need to sop up the juices.

Some cooks insist on putting cube steak (also known as breakfast steak, round steak, or minute steak) through the tenderizing machine twice, first in one direction, then in another, to thoroughly break down the tough fibers. Otherwise you buy any extra-thin (anywhere from 1/4- to 1/2-inch thick) steak that has been or can be pounded with a metal mallet or even a less effective saucer.

Correctly tenderized, according to one Ft. Worth cook, Chicken Fried Steak can be cut with a fork. Some Midwest and Texas cooks use egg and bread crumbs to coat the beef. Others cringe at the thought. Some restaurant cooks add water to the cooked meat to produce the gravy, while others wouldn't dream of adding water.

Not that Chicken Fried Steak is confined only to the regional Midwest. I've had Chicken Fried Steak as far east as New York City, where it was served with mashed potatoes, and as far West as Los Angeles and at a truck stop near Barstow, where it was served with gravy so thick you could plant petunias in it.

That may not be an Iowan's idea of good Chicken Fried Steak gravy, but it's certainly not my idea of bad Chicken Fried Steak gravy, especially when the biscuits are the size of tennis balls. Whatever your preference, here is a recipe that is fairly standard, depending on where you're standing.

CHICKEN FRIED STEAK

4 (3- to 6-ounce) 1/2-inch thick round steaks
1 cup seasoned flour
1 egg, optional
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs, optional

Shortening, lard or oil
1 1/2 cups milk, about
Salt, pepper
Pound steaks, using metal steak mallet, to 1/4-inch thickness. Dredge well with seasoned flour. Or, beat egg with enough water to make wash. Dip steaks into egg wash to coat and then into bread crumbs to coat well.

Heat 1-3 cup shortening to about 375 degrees. Add steaks and pan-fry about 5 minutes, turning once. Remove steaks and keep warm.

Add 2 tablespoons shortening to pan and heat until melted. Add 2 tablespoons flour, using up any remaining seasoned flour from dredging. Stir and cook until smooth.

Add 1 1/2 cups milk and salt and pepper to taste. Bring to simmer, reduce heat and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened, adding more milk if necessary to make gravy of desired consistency. Makes 4 servings.

Dear SOS: My husband's doctor suggested that he eat some form of oats at least once a day to help lower his high cholesterol level. None of my cookbooks have a recipe for oatmeal muffins. Could you help me and many others who are sick of rolled oats for breakfast every morning.

Answer: Oat bran is the cereal touted as having especially good cholesterol-lowering properties, so why don't we give a recipe using oat bran, which can be found at any health food store?

OAT BRAN MUFFINS

2 1/4 cups oat bran
1/4 cup brown sugar, packed
1/4 cup chopped walnuts
1/4 cup raisins
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup nonfat milk
2 eggs, beaten

1/4 cup honey
2 tablespoons oil
Combine oat bran, brown sugar, nuts, raisins, baking powder and salt in large bowl. Add milk, eggs, honey and oil and mix just until dry ingredients are moistened.
Fill paper-lined muffin cups almost full. Bake at 425 degrees 15 to 17 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 12 muffins.

She's Making A Living Selling Key Lime Pies

By Nina Killham

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Put-putting dangerously close to churning car wheels and looming fenders is Mary Philbin on a blue Honda scooter with a white-topped cooler strapped to the back.

Perched on the seat, darting in and around traffic in Alexandria, Va., she distributes one of the more unusual delivery items this year: key lime pies.

Frothy, creamy and white, these tart little creations take you back to when Florida key limes were abundant, and a pie could take all your worries away.

Her two-person company, The Loon Factory Inc. (it began as The Minnesota Loon Factory because she is from Minnesota, but she chopped off Minnesota, thinking it was cruel to be so enigmatic to her customers) sells key lime pies, key lime tarts, even key lime cakes — a cross between a yellow cake and a pound cake drowned in hot lime juice.

"Some people can't believe I'm making a living selling key lime pies," she says. "They are the people who've had bad experiences with so-called key lime pies: the kind that are really green gelatin, so thick and gummy you can stand a fork in it."

A real key lime pie is, above all, not green. Traditionally, on the Florida Keys it was served yellow to imitate the yellow fruit and skin of a key lime. Unlike Tahitian limes, which are sold fully grown, but still green, key limes are sold when they are ripe.

Full of seeds, the fruit remains small and very acidic. Not great for gin and tonics, but perfect when combined with the sweetness of condensed milk and the mellowing of eggs.

As her pie is not baked, but a cold-filling pie, Philbin uses pasteurized eggs for safety, and low-calorie whipped topping instead of whipped cream, because, she says, heavy cream tends to mask the tartness of the lime.

She uses no food coloring or gelatin. "And I don't use pre-fab crusts. Others might use graham-cracker mill (powder), and it tastes like saw dust. We hand-make our own graham-cracker crusts with crumbs."

But, as Philbin will be quick to tell you, she does use real key-lime juice. As there are no longer enough key-lime trees in the United States, she buys from an importer who sells a combination of Caribbean, South American and even Thai key-lime juice. "I wasn't going to put out a pie until I could find a juice that was as close to the Florida key lime juice as I could get," Philbin says.

Even the recipe is an original Florida-keys recipe. In 1951 her grandfather left Minneapolis to run the Ocean Reef Resort that he and his sons built in Key Largo. Philbin would spend 10 childhood years there, running over the coral rocks, eyeing crocodiles and eating lots of the luscious key-lime pie served in

Stacks Of Chili

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

I'm always on the lookout for tasty off-the-shelf recipes — the kind that go together quickly from ingredients I can keep on hand. This is one of the best I've found because it's easy to assemble, the layered wedges look inviting, and the flavor is spicy hot.

STACKS OF CHILI

One 24-ounce can chili with beans
One 16-ounce can hominy, drained
2 to 3 tablespoons jalapeno pepper relish or canned chopped jalapeno peppers

Six 7-inch flour tortillas
1/2 of 4-ounce package shredded cheddar cheese
One 2 1/4-ounce can sliced pitted ripe olives, drained

1 large tomato, cut into thin wedges
Dairy sour cream or salsa (optional)
Sliced green onion

In a 2-quart saucepan stir together chili, hominy and pepper relish; cook and stir until heated through. Meanwhile, on a lightly greased large baking sheet place 2 of the tortillas side by side. Spoon 2/3 cup of the chili mixture onto each tortilla. Sprinkle each tortilla with about 1 tablespoon cheese and a few olives. Repeat layers twice.

Cover baking sheet loosely with foil. Bake in a 375-degree oven about 25 minutes or until hot. Cut into wedges; top with tomato, sour cream or salsa, and onion. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving:
443 cal., 20 g pro., 51 g carb., 18 g fat, 34 mg chol., 1,207 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 14 percent vit. A, 14 percent riboflavin, 17 percent niacin, 26 percent calcium, 29 percent iron, 37 percent phosphorus.

Pasta salads may sound like an excellent food for exercisers, but be careful. A recent survey by the Center for Science in the Public Interest found that many packaged and deli pasta salads are full of fat. In many cases, fat accounted for 40 to 60 percent of the dishes' calories.

She remembers the groves that produced commercial key limes (the only key-lime trees now hide out in peoples' back yards) whose distinctive limes created a dessert sensation. (A bill was introduced in the state legislature to name key-lime pie the official state pie. It was passed in the house but died in committee on the senate side.)

"Key-lime trees were indigenous to just the Keys — their distinctive taste in part comes growing where there's lots of coral rock," says Philbin.

Seymour Goldweber, a retired agricultural-extension agent in Miami, argues that their distinctive taste is genetically programmed, and they will taste the same wherever they are grown.

When her grandfather sold the resort in 1969, Philbin and her mother returned to Minneapolis, taking their recipe with them. Through the years they made improvements, but it wasn't until she moved with her husband, Toby Philbin, to Virginia eight years ago that the idea of selling the pies occurred to her. "My friends would say to me, 'You really ought to sell yours.'"

A semi-retired physician's assistant in neurosurgery (she still does consulting for chronic-pain patients), she liked the idea, because she saw it as something she could do with her 5-year-old daughter, Joan, in tow.

Now Philbin's goal is to be successful like Rachel's Brownies or Mrs. Field's Cookies, envisioning perhaps people standing in line for her key-lime pies as they do for chocolate-chip cookies.

And already, in addition to wheeling her pies about Alexandria and selling at a farmer's market there, she caters her pies for dinner parties. She also sells cookies in such flavors as oatmeal, ginger, sugar and coconut macaroon.

Some people, she says, just order the pie filling, which they then serve as a mousse. (If a caller says "American Cancer Society," she will donate $1 to the society for every pie ordered. Her interest is personal: her mother died of lung cancer.)

The key to her success, Philbin says, is her commercial kitchen, which she opened on April Fools Day 1987. She is also in the business of renting out space to various entrepreneurs, among them Lee Street Heat, which makes salsa; The Muffin Man; Much More Caterers; and Shayna's Brownies, Blondies and Candides.

"I couldn't find a kitchen for my kind of operation," Philbin says. "They were too expensive. After a lot of research, I decided to open my own kitchen. It's so hard for new entrepreneurs. They might have a good product, but you have to have money for equipment."

With her assistant, Annie Driver, Philbin can make 100 pies and 200 tarts a day. With the help of a Moine batch-filling machine, she can fill up to 60 pies-in-a-cup in about 5 minutes.

Her business is growing quickly. The pies are already available at some restaurants in Alexandria. Besides talking with the in-flight service divisions of airlines and the cafeteria services for federal buildings, she says, she's wrapping up a contract from Safeway.

Now what she'd really like to develop, she says, is a whole fleet of scooters to deliver her desserts. "Who knows? Maybe I'll be the Domino Pizza of key-lime pies."

VOLUME 5 • YOUNG AMERICA: After the turmoil of the nation's birth came a time of building—roads and canals, railroads and homesteads, mills and cities. New inventions like the cotton gin and the reaper began to forge a new economy. And the fearless, hard-bitten Andrew Jackson came into the Presidency, and with him brought a new kind of democracy, raw and vigorous.

Nature makes the produce. WINN-DIXIE makes the difference.
