Space Travelers Slow Their Pace

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts, achieving their crucial task of satellite delivery "with considerable precision," settled into a workmanlike routine today, performing scientific experiments and taking time out for sightseeing and Mozart.

"The launch and us getting back to space is something that really means a lot to me," said Richard Truly, the NASA shuttle director who supervised the post-Challenger recovery. "And looking at today's front pages, I think it means a lot to the country."

"There'll never be another countdown that meant so much," he said in an ABC interview.

With the triumph of Thursday's launch behind them, the Discovery crew began its workday 184 miles above the Central Atlantic, just after 5:30 a.m. EDT.

Mission Control supplied a morning wake-up that began with a loud and bracing, "G-o-o-d Morning, Discovery!" Robin Williams, who perfected his deejay routine in the movie, "Good Morning Vietnam," prepared the tape for a Houston radio station.

The crew learned immediately that the NASA satellite they released Thursday evening had arrived overnight at its work station high above Earth.

Air Force satellite controllers in Sunnyvale, Calif., messaged the Discovery crew that "the final velocity shortfall is an amazing zero-point-one feet per second," which Mission Control called a feat "of some considerable precision." It means the satellite was sent into precisely the right orbit.

Today's relatively quiet schedule contrasts with the tense drama of fire and thunder as Discovery rocketed into orbit Thursday and revived an American space program that had been devastated 32 months earlier by the explosion of Challenger and the death of its seven crew members.

"We sure appreciate your all getting us up in orbit the way we should be," Discovery's commander, Frederick H. Hauck, told Mission Control soon after he and his four crew members achieved orbit 184 miles above Earth.

Today's flight plan was deliberately conservative to enable the crew to carefully check the scores of system modifications made in the spacecraft since the Challenger explosion. "We're not breaking any new ground," pilot Richard Covey said before the launch.

Little more than six hours into the mission, crewmen John M. Lounge and David C. Hilmers, operating from a panel inside the cabin, released a $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite. The craft was sprung from a tilt-table that raised out of the cargo bay and it glided effortlessly into an orbit all its own.

An hour later, after Hauck and Covey maneuvered Discovery to a safe distance, a timing device ignited a rocket attached to the giant satellite and propelled it toward a stationary 22,300-mile-high orbit. A rocket motor that fired early today placed it in a circular orbit.

There, it will serve as a space switchboard for relaying communications between ground stations, future shuttle flights and up to 25 other orbiting satellites. Secure channels on board will enable the Defense Department to keep in touch with intelligence-gathering spacecraft.

BACK TO SPACE — Discovery lifts off pad 39B at the Kennedy Space Center on Thursday as the United States successfully re-enters the space exploration program. NASA officials say the flight so far has been an unqualified success. (AP Laserphoto)

Gromyko Leaves Politburo

MOSCOW (AP) — President Andrei A. Gromyko retired from the ruling Politburo today in a major power shift on the first day of a hastily called meeting of the policy-making Central Committee.

Gromyko's retirement from the Politburo will likely set the stage for his removal from the presidency, which could clear the way for Mikhail S. Gorbachev to seek election to a new, more powerful presidency.

The move was followed by a series of personnel changes that mark the largest shake-up in the ruling circle since Gorbachev became party leader in 1985.

The Central Committee appeared to demote Kremlin No. 2 leader Yegor K. Ligachev, who was assigned responsibility for agricultural policy in a reorganized committee apparatus.

Ligachev had been responsible for party ideology and had been seen as a principal conservative rival to Gorbachev.

The changes were announced at the meeting, which was arranged on short notice and required several top officials, including Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, to cut short foreign visits and rush home.

Anatoly F. Dobrynin, the longtime ambassador to Washington, was sent into retirement from his post as Communist Party foreign affairs secretary.

KGB chief Viktor M. Chebrikov was named a secretary of the Central Committee to go along with his Politburo status, and three new alternate members of the Politburo were named, said Vadim A. Medvedev, a committee spokesman.

Mikhail S. Solomentsev, 75, also was retired from his positions as a full member of the Politburo and head of the Party Control Commission, Medvedev said.

Gromyko and Solomentsev were holdovers from previous leaderships that have been criticized under Gorbachev's policy of "glasnost," or openness.

Medvedev himself was elevated to full Politburo status, he said.

Interior Minister Alexander V. Vlasov, the nation's top policeman, was made an alternate member of the Politburo, as were Alexandra Biryukova, the highest-ranking woman in the Soviet hierarchy, and Anatoly Lukyanov, general department chief.

The two alternate Politburo members who lost their posts were Vladimir I. Dolgikh and Pyotr N. Demichev. Dolgikh was responsible for the heavy industry sector of the economy, and Demichev had served as Soviet vice president.

There was initial confusion over Gromyko's status. Gorbachev in his speech to the session said Gromyko had requested he be allowed to retire on pension, indicating he would step down from the Politburo and the presidency.

But it appeared that Gromyko could only ask the party Central Committee to relieve him of his Politburo job. The question of whether he will remain as head of state could be only taken up by the parliament, which meets Saturday.

Gromyko, 79, was named president in July 1985 after serving a succession of Soviet leaders as foreign minister for nearly 30 years. He was replaced as foreign minister by Eduard V. Shevardnadze.

Tass said earlier that the Central Committee meeting would consider "proposals on reorganization of the party apparatus in the light of the decisions of the 19th Communist Party conference."

At that congress in June, the Soviet leader outlined a series of political reforms. His blueprint calls for the creation of a full-time, standing legislature and a more powerful presidency, a post Gorbachev himself could assume.

Following the Central Committee meeting, which was likely to last for only one day, an equally unusual gathering of the 1,500-member Supreme Soviet.

The Supreme Soviet likely was called to approve decisions made by the Central Committee.

Meetings of the party's policy-making Central Committee and the 1,500-member Supreme Soviet, the nation's legislature, are rarely called on such little notice. The move indicated urgent or unexpected business has come up.

The Supreme Soviet usually convenes twice a year after meetings of the Central Committee.

Court Dismisses Appeal By North

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court today dismissed an attempt by Oliver L. North and two other Iran-Contra defendants to scuttle charges they illegally diverted Iranian arms-sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here rejected as premature the appeal of U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell's refusal to dismiss charges against North, a former White House aide; ex-national security adviser John Poindexter, and arms dealer Albert Hakim.

The appeals court said it does not have the jurisdiction, until the three defendants are tried, to consider claims that the congressional testimony they gave under limited immunity from prosecution had been illegally used against them.

Such claims could be raised if the three defendants are convicted and file appeals, the court said.

The court also dismissed a petition by the defendants, who were joined by the American Civil Liberties Union, asking that Gesell be ordered to dismiss the charges or hold additional pre-trial hearings on the immunity issue.

North, Poindexter and Hakim had contended that the pervasive publicity that resulted from their congressional testimony inevitably "tainted" the grand jury that indicted them in March.

The three, who were compelled to testify before the House and Senate Iran-Contra committees under so-called "use immunity," argued that, given the widespread publicity, their testimony was inevitably used against them in violation of their constitutional rights against self-incrimination.

Under the law, the immunized testimony of a witness granted "use immunity" cannot be used against him as evidence.

The three defendants asked the appeals court to order Gesell to dismiss the indictment or to hold pre-trial hearings to more fully explore whether grand jurors or witnesses before the secret panel had been exposed to "tainted" evidence.

Gesell refused to dismiss the indictment and held only preliminary hearings on the issue of grand jury taint, saying the matter could be taken up at post-trial hearings.

The appeals court, in an unsigned opinion, said it could not rule on the issues until after any convictions are appealed.

Gesell has ordered separate trials for North, Poindexter and Hakim. A fourth defendant in the case, arms dealer Richard V. Secord, testified on Capitol Hill without immunity from prosecution and therefore was not part of the legal challenge. Secord will also be tried separately.

Pilots Face Indictments

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Twenty-seven pilots who allegedly lied about drug or alcohol-related convictions to get their licenses have been indicted for making false statements to the Federal Aviation Administration, officials said today.

The 27 could face five years in prison and up to $250,000 each in fines.

Ben Lorigo of the Department of Transportation inspector general's office in Washington said the crackdown came after painstaking computer checks of 711,000 pilots around the country.

He said investigations were in progress elsewhere around the country and more indictments were expected.

Among those indicted are 12 current or former commercial pilots, including one for Delta Air Lines; two student pilots; 10 private pilots; and three others, Lorigo said.

Budget Panel Checks Library

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the state's Advisory Budget Commission paid a brief visit to East Carolina University's Joyner Library and drove by the Rose High School property on Elm Street Thursday as part of a tour of state facilities in the east.

The ABC road trip occurs every two years, before the budget is developed for presentation to the General Assembly, "to see what is needed and why they need it," according to a state budget office spokesman.

At Joyner Library, JoAnn Bell, director of the school's health sciences library and acting director of the Joyner facility, told the ABC delegation that ECU's request for a $24.4 million library addition and renovation is sorely needed.

The present building, Mrs. Bell said, was designed to house 500,000 volumes. In order to handle the 835,000 volumes in the present collection, seating for people using the library has been reduced, she said. And the university adds between 20,000 and 25,000 titles to its library collection each year.

With only 800 seats, according to Mrs. Bell, the library has "only 35 percent of the seats we should have for a university this size," and ranks 15th out of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system in seating.

According to Mrs. Bell, the requested addition would allow space for an additional 1.3 million to 1.4 million volumes.

And, she said, the proposed work would provide 800 additional seats for library users. "Obviously we need every one of them," she said.

"I do ask you for your support." The drive-by of Rose High School was to let the ABC members see property the university would like to add to its campus.

The Pitt County Board of Education has given the university a letter of intent to sell the 25-acre high school site, which is valued at about $3.5 million. Assuming the General Assembly provides the money, ECU could acquire the property by June 30, 1991.

Car Theft Reported

Greenville police said three thefts, including a car and $300 worth of shoes, were reported to the department Thursday.

Officer C.M. Credle said the shoes were taken from the Rack Room at the Buyers Market, West End Circle, in an incident reported at 11:24 a.m., while Officer R.C. Stroud said a license plate was taken from a vehicle parked at 1507 E. Wright Road in an incident reported at 1:16 p.m.

According to Officer M.T. Scheid, a 1982 model car was taken from a parking lot at Wendy's restaurant on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 6:54 p.m.

Theft Arrests

Greenville police said two people were arrested on theft charges by investigators Thursday.

Detective G.W. Williams said Patricia Holloway Spady, 27, of Ayden was arrested on an embezzlement charge in connection with an incident at Carawan Oil Co. on Dickinson Avenue reported at 9:29 a.m.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said Alvin Henry Marshburn, 24, of 115 Martha Lane was taken into custody on larceny charges about 2:10 p.m. in connection with the theft of video tapes and personal hygiene items from Garner Wholesale on Memorial Drive reported to the department Wednesday.

Lupus Awareness

Systemic lupus erythematosus affects about nine times as many women as men, particularly women in their child-bearing years, reports the Arthritis Foundation, North Carolina chapter, which is focusing attention on the rheumatic condition during October, designated as Lupus Awareness Month.

Lupus, an inflammatory disease of the body's connective tissue, can affect the skin, joints and internal organs. Researchers believe women have the disease more than men because of a combination of genetic, hormonal and other factors.

Many women with lupus experience a flareup after delivery of a baby. About one-third miscarry or give premature birth, but those who carry their babies to term usually have healthy babies, according to the foundation.

For information call the toll-free Arthritis Answerline, 1-800-422-1492.

Graduation Held

The 87th graduation of the Pre-Release and Aftercare Program of the Division of Adult Parole Services was held recently at St. James United Methodist Church, where the ladies of the church sponsored the luncheon.

Guest speaker Stephen Vaughn, diaconal minister of education and music at the church, encouraged the 13 graduates to be positive and have faith in a being stronger and higher than themselves, said Melvin McLawhorn, training coordinator.

Those interested in volunteering time or sponsoring a graduation may call McLawhorn or Elbert Buck, center director, at 756-8400 or visit them at 108 Dexter St.

Charges Dropped Against Player

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Assault charges against an East Carolina University football player were dismissed Thursday after the player's ex-girlfriend refused to testify against him in Pitt County District Court.

Charlie Lee Tyson, 20, of Miami was accused of hitting Brenda Lee Sutton, 20, in the face with his fist in a Sept. 18 incident.

Miss Sutton, an ECU student who lives in Greene Residence Hall, drew out a warrant for Tyson's arrest, but she refused to testify against him when she took the stand Thursday.

Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Warren twice asked Miss Sutton to describe the alleged assault, and twice Miss Tyson refused.

Identifying herself as Tyson's ex-girlfriend, she said she did not wish to testify because Tyson had "suffered enough" and agreed to pay her expenses. She also said Tyson had agreed to undergo alcohol counseling.

Ms. Warren asked Judge J. Randal Hunter of New Bern to compel Miss Sutton to testify, but Hunter denied her request and dismissed the case. Hunter said Miss Sutton's decision not to testify after swearing out the warrant was "frivolous and malicious," and he ordered her to pay court costs.

Tyson's attorney, Reginald Scott of Greenville, refused to comment on Miss Sutton's statement concerning Tyson's agreement to seek alcohol treatment. "There is no basis for that statement, anyway," he said.

In a telephone interview today, Scott said he has no knowledge of any alcohol problem Tyson might have, and Miss Sutton's comments were a surprise to him.

In a written statement Miss Sutton made to prosecutors Thursday morning, she said she and Tyson "had a heated argument" in her dorm room the night of Sept. 18. She said she kicked Tyson in the back as he was walking down a staircase to leave the dorm, then he followed her back to her room.

"I asked Charlie Tyson to leave my room three times. He refused and struck me," she wrote. "We continued to swing at each other for about two minutes and then Charlie Tyson left my room," according to the statement. Two of her friends witnessed the incident, she said.

A sophomore slotback on the ECU football team, Tyson was suspended from the squad indefinitely last week by head coach Art Baker, pending the outcome of the court action. He was reinstated to the team Thursday afternoon.

"He was dressed out in practice yesterday and will be on the roster this week," said Charles Bloom, ECU sports information director. University officials said they wanted more information about Tyson's alcohol counseling before commenting on the matter.

Brody Scholars

Five students in the first-year class at the East Carolina University School of Medicine have been granted annual scholarships and fellowships awarded through the Brody Scholars Program.

Established five years ago by the Brody family of Kinston and Greenville, the program annually provides academic awards for students demonstrating exemplary academic performance and leadership skills.

The program's largest stipend, a $7,500-per-year-scholarship, is awarded to the student chosen as the Brody Scholar. The scholarship recipient is selected based on high academic performance, demonstrated leadership potential, and personal interview evaluations.

Charles David Finley of Charlotte has been named this year's Brody Scholar. An honors graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, he is the son of Robert and Jane Finley, 1601 E. Crest Drive, Charlotte.

Four fellowships, each carrying a $2,000 annual award over the next four years, are also presented to students with exemplary academic records.

The class of 1992 Brody Fellows are Michael Louis Cannon of Grifton, Kimberly Anne Mangum of Roxboro, Laura Harris Peebles of Goldsboro and Thomas Joseph Ellis of Wilson.

Youssef Trial Postponed

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

An attorney for a D.H. Conley student charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon and injuring personal property says he plans to file cross warrants against the prosecuting witnesses in the case.

Greenville attorney Milton C. Williamson, counsel for Ehyin Mohamad Youssef, 16, of 2106 S. Charles St., asked District Court Judge J. Randal Hunter of New Bern on Thursday to continue the Youssef case to allow time to file the warrants.

Reginald Suggs of 105 Taylors Turn in Farmville and Samuel Saunders of 102 Allen St. in Farmville filed a complaint against Youssef in connection with a Sept. 10 incident that occurred near the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenville Boulevard. The two claim Youssef attempted to run over them with a vehicle.

Youssef is also accused of causing more than $200 in damage to Saunder's vehicle and a vehicle owned by Chevalier Jefferson of 211 Cameron St. in Farmville.

Williamston did not specify what counter-charges he plans to file, but Hunter granted the request to continue. Youssef's trial is scheduled for Oct. 27 in District Court.

In connection with a separate incident, Youssef is also scheduled to appear in Pitt Superior Court Oct. 25 on charges of possessing a weapon of mass destruction — which is a felony — and possessing a weapon on school grounds.

Youssef is accused of possessing a loaded sawed-off shotgun on the Rose High campus on Aug. 2, the last day of a countywide session of summer school. Attorney Carlos "Buddy" Murray, with the Pitt County Public Defender's Office, represents Youssef in the weapons case.

Youssef was released after the weapons charge on a $500 secured bond, and he was freed after the Sept. 10 incident into the custody of his great uncle, Alonzo L. Mills of 2106 S. Charles St., on a $400 unsecured bond.

Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Warren asked Hunter to revoke or increase Youssef's most recent bond, but Hunter declined, saying Youssef has not violated any law since the bond was set.

Hunter did impose conditions on Youssef's release: he is not to possess any weapon; he is not to contact any of the prosecuting witnesses and he is not to assault or threaten to assault anyone.

Each of the four most recent charges carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison, a fine, or both. Possessing a weapon of mass destruction is punishable by up to five years in prison, a fine, or both; possessing a weapon on school grounds is punishable by up to six months in jail, a fine, or both.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Snarls Ahead

Signals Needed, But Heed Warning

New traffic control signals are now being installed on U.S. 264 at the emergency road, Allen Road and Stantonsburg Road.

All who have ever waited through rush hour at those intersections can do nothing but applaud the projects. Allen Road is carrying an increasingly heavy load of traffic which makes its way from the southern portion of Greenville to the new U.S. 264 route.

Combine that with the heavy traffic at the 264 intersection and there are frequently long waits and considerable peril in attempting to enter the four lane highway. The emergency road entrance to the hospital complex also is a difficult traffic point. The intersection with the old Stantonsburg road handles considerable traffic and is also the starting point for the freeway portion of the highway.

There can be no quarrel with the need for the traffic control lights to provide access and reduce the need for accidents.

The steadily growing number of traffic lights, however, should again emphasize two things. One is the need for careful planning of such thoroughfares and the second is the need to eliminate grade crossings on the freeway section of U.S. 264 to the west.

Greenville Boulevard and Memorial Drive have seen many traffic lights put in place to handle the heavy traffic loads. Now the same thing is happening on U.S. 264 in the hospital area. Increasing attention is being paid to planning for that entire area now. If there had been more careful control of access in the past there would be fewer traffic lights now.

While that can't be undone, it tells us that planners should control the points where traffic will enter future thoroughfares in the area. It also tells us we should protect the freeway concept of U.S. 264 west by building the interchanges which were planned for it.

We have but to look at larger cities of North Carolina to see the traffic nightmare that could be ahead for Pitt County. We can avoid some of this by careful planning now.

On The Line

Toll-Free Service An Advantage

Grifton, while largely a Pitt County community, has long had difficulty identifying with its county seat because of its location on the south Pitt-Lenoir County line.

Some of Grifton, in fact, is in Lenoir County. The Pitt residents of Grifton however, must pay their taxes in Pitt and thus have a stake in Pitt County Memorial Hospital, as well as other government services which county tax dollars provide in Greenville. Many residents are also drawn to Greenville for economic reasons — jobs and shopping.

As county wide toll free phone service has spread, Grifton was still left out. A vote on toll free service to Greenville passed in Grifton but failed in Greenville.

Fortunately a plan was developed by Carolina Telephone. Grifton phone customers, under a new extended Area Service plan, can phone toll free to Ayden and Ayden customers can call toll free to Grifton. But Grifton customers may also call toll free to Greenville, even though Greenville customers will be unable to call Grifton without paying toll charges.

The arrangement will mean an additional monthly charge for Grifton and Ayden customers but none for Greenville customers. For Grifton phone customers the arrangement should be well worth the cost. They can call 41,367 additional numbers in the Ayden and Greenville exchanges toll free.

Not only can they reach friends in the county without paying for the calls, they can phone their physicians and other professional services toll free. Grifton customers will also receive Ayden and Greenville listings in their phone directories.

Gradually Pitt County municipalities are becoming a community, rather than individual islands. This is occurring because of the growth which is spreading throughout the county. Grifton is now more a part of this community because its phones can reach Ayden and Greenville numbers without a toll charge. It is an arrangement to be applauded.

Metaphors Of Social Healing

If you don't relish the notion of reexamining cherished social beliefs or running the risk of thinking, you're likely to find Charles Murray's new book either a threat or a bore.

But if you find yourself advocating the enactment of rules from which you routinely exempt yourself (the 55 mph speed limit, for instance); if you find yourself thinking of "the poor" in ways that you would never think of yourself if you were poor; if, now and then, you like to step back from your liberal or conservative mindset to entertain an open-ended "Why?" I can virtually guarantee that you will be intrigued, delighted and maybe even educated by "In Pursuit: Of Happiness and Good Government" (Simon and Schuster).

Unlike Murray's earlier bombshell, "Losing Ground," "Pursuit" does not advocate specific social policy, or debate the statistics that suggest how well a particular policy has worked. Its central question is: What constitutes success in social policy?

On one level, of course, the answer is obvious. If your policy is to enlist the government in the eradication of poverty, you measure success by the degree to which poverty is abated. If your policy is to curtail drug abuse, you look at what happens to drug abuse trends as a result of the policy.

But Murray's question goes deeper than that: "What's the point (for example) of food stamps? What are they for? Suppose that we passed out food stamps so freely that no young man ever had to worry about whether a child that he caused to be conceived would be fed. Would that really be a better world for children to be born into?"

"Or let us take food stamps writ large: Suppose that we made all material goods so freely available that parents could not ever again take satisfaction from the accomplishment of feeding, sheltering, and clothing their children. Would that be a better world in which to be a parent?"

"The immediate 'point' of food stamps is simple — trying to help people have enough food to eat. But food stamps serve (and perhaps impede) other ends as well.

"What's the point? Ultimately, happiness is the point." That long quote scarcely hints at the intellectual content of the book. I cannot summarize it in any attractive way — a frustration slightly relieved by the fact that Murray can't either.

It is tough to summarize his "mind experiments," or the new insights they lead to. In one of his mind games, he asks you to imagine that you somehow know that your own child will be orphaned tomorrow and that your choice is to place him with (1) a dirt-poor but hard-working family that will see to his education and instruct him in integrity and responsibility or (2) with a family that is indifferent to his education, who think that integrity and responsibility (when they think of them at all) are meaningless words, but who will always have plenty of food and good clothes and amenities, provided by others.

Which couple do you choose? Suppose the second family is rich (but still indifferent to education, integrity and responsibility). Which do you choose now?

Thus does he lead you into acknowledging what you have always known (though it may never have been an important part of your social-policy considerations): that once the basic material resources are assured, increases in those resources are a poor basis for measuring the success of social-welfare policy.

In similar fashion, Murray leads you to question our near-universal that we ought to provide public assistance in a way that conveys self-respect. The truth, he argues, is that it cannot be done. We can devise ways to help poor people preserve self-respect, but we cannot give them self-respect which, at a minimum, requires that a person believe that he is carrying his own weight, that he is responsible for his actions and that he is a net contributor to the world.

Perhaps the most intriguing notion in the book is that "social engineering" (whether as a pejorative or as a description of what well-meaning Americans actually attempt) is the wrong metaphor for achieving the good society.

His metaphor is of healing. Unless we are prevented by outside forces from doing so, he argues, we will almost always arrive at social-problem solutions that work.

"If policy planners are to be successful," Murray argues, "they must think in terms of solutions that permit a naturally robust organism (the human community) to return to health....The task is to figure out what is keeping us from doing what we already know how to do."

His thoughts on that are worth another column.

Rule-Breaking Debases Sport & Society

WASHINGTON — Sport is play, but play has a serious side. Competition can be elevating for participants and spectators. Thus the integrity of sport is a civic concern. And it is important to say precisely why what Ben Johnson did was wrong.

Runners at the highest levels of competition comprise a small community. They know all what is possible regarding enhancement of performance. And they know what is permissible. Johnson used steroids surreptitiously and in defiance of clear rules that are constantly reiterated. However, Johnson and many others involved in the intense pursuit of competitive edge may not really understand the reasons for the rules he broke.

Legs have 40 percent of the body's muscle mass. Steroids build muscle mass as well as hasten healing. Johnson's legs exploded him to victory by a margin of 13100ths of a second. Did steroids make the difference? Hard to say. What has to be said is why using substances constitutes cheating.

When judging a performance-enhancing technique or technology, the crucial criterion is: Does it improve performance without devaluing it. Begin by considering precisely the value drained away by cheating, then decide if use of steroids constitutes cheating.

Bartlett Giamatti, baseball's next commissioner, is the designated metaphysician of American sport. Last year, he flexed his mental muscles regarding disciplinary action against a pitcher who was caught using sandpaper to scuff balls, thereby giving pitches more pronounced movements.

But cheating derives not from excessive, impulsive zeal in the heat of competition. Rather it is a cold, covert attempt to alter conditions of competition. As Giamatti puts it, cheating has no organic origin in the act of playing and cheating devalues any contest designed to declare a winner among participants playing under identical rules and conditions. Toward cheating, the proper policy is zero tolerance.

Now, advances in training and sports medicine (medicine broadly defined, which reaches beyond prevention or treatment of injuries) make problematic the idea, central to sport, of competitors competing on an even footing. Nowadays there can be significant inequalities regarding techniques of training and nutrition.

Intensity in training should be rewarded with success in competition. But intense training should involve enhancing one's powers by methods (e.g., weight training) or materials (eat your spinach) that enhance the body's normal functioning. It is one thing to take vitamins, another thing to take a drug that facilitates abnormal growth (or makes a competitor abnormally aggressive).

An athlete steps over the line separating legitimate from illegitimate preparation for competition when he seeks advantage from radical intrusions into his body. A radical intrusion is one that does not enhance normal functioning but rather causes the body to behave abnormally. Illegitimate interventions cause an athlete to perform not unusually well — every athlete's aim — but unnaturally well.

Steroids are dangerous to the user's health. Even if an athlete is willing to run the risk, his competitors should not have to run it in order to compete. That is a sufficient reason for proscribing them. But even if steroids and other performance-enhancing drugs were risk-free, there would still be sufficient reasons for cleansing sport of them.

Drugs that make sport exotic make it less exemplary. Sport becomes less of a shared activity. It becomes less a drama of people performing well than a spectacle of bodies chemically propelled.

Athletes who seek a competitive edge through chemical advantage do not just overvalue winning; they misunderstand why winning is properly valued. It is properly valued as the reward for, and evidence of, praiseworthy attributes. They include the lonely submission to an exacting training regimen, and the mental mastery of pressure, pain and exhaustion.

In short, sport is valued not only because it builds character but because it puts on display, and crowns with glory, for the elevation of spectators as well as participants, attributes we associate with good character. Good character, not good chemistry.

A society's recreation is charged with moral significance. Sport would be debased, and with it a society that takes sport seriously, if sport did not strictly forbid things that blur the distinction between the triumph of character and the triumph of pharmacology.

Solving Pollution Problems Requires An Energy Policy

Analysis

The summer of 1988 won't be quickly forgotten. First the record-breaking levels of smog pollution, triple-digit temperatures and drought. Now comes the news that ozone and acid deposits are killing trees and stunting the growth of crops across the country. Air pollution's toll on the environment, it seems, is growing daily. Yet these issues, and proposals to deal with them, are all but absent from the presidential candidates' agenda. Moreover, the most recent congressional proposals to reduce acid rain would lock utilities into an inflexible program mandating the use of wet scrubbers and effectively precluding more cost-effective options such as increased energy efficiency and fuel substitution.

The evidence is unambiguous that air pollution is contributing to the death of forest trees and widespread losses in crop productivity in the United States. Extensive damage and mortality because of ozone have been documented among pines in California and in the eastern United States. And the case is strong that air pollution is an important contributor to the declines of other stricken tree species in the East, including the high-elevation red spruce in the Appalachian Mountains from Vermont to North Carolina, and Fraser fir in the Southeast. Commercial yellow pines in the Southeast are also failing to grow and dying more frequently.

Crop productivity is also being impaired, with ozone losses among sensitive crops ranging between 5 and 20 percent. Overall agricultural crop losses from air pollution have been estimated at up to $5 billion annually. The loss is silent and invisible to individual farmers, but these are significant amounts, especially if er-etc.) that they otherwise might have withstood. Moreover, there is the distinct possibility that the forest place, principally by using less energy. Over the next 10 to 20 years, air pollution can be controlled only by policies that emphasize both improved energy efficiency as well as more stringent pollution controls.

Annual emissions of sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides — the pollutants primarily responsible for acid rain and ozone formation — should be reduced by 10 million and 5 million tons respectively. State-by-state emission caps should be adopted, and states should be given the flexibility to use a broad range of cost-effective tools to meet their goals: energy efficiency, fuel switching, new combustion technologies, transportation and land-use planning, and so forth. Establishing absolute caps on statewide emissions would force states to consider longer-term issues related to growth, land use and local economics.

Pollution from transportation — the single largest source of several important air pollutants — can be cut significantly through a combination of stricter federal emission levels for cars, buses and trucks; strengthened inspection and maintenance procedures; and the use of cleaner fuels (such as compressed natural gas) in commercial fleets and urban buses. Programs that would cut the total number of vehicle miles traveled and improve traffic flow would help reduce transportation emissions even further. Promising measures include greater use of public transit, preferred parking for car pools, provisions for high-occupancy vehicles in the construction of new roads and dedicated lanes for high-occupancy vehicles on urban roadways.

A sensible pollution-control strategy must also recognize two other long-term energy-related problems: our increasing reliance on foreign oil and climate change. To cope with these risks, the United States must increase the efficiency of fossil-fuel use, especially in transportation, which is almost totally dependent on oil, increasingly imported. We also need to accelerate the development of nonfossil energy technologies. In practical terms, this means electric and hydrogen-powered vehicles as well as the renewable-energy technologies — solar cells, wind turbines, hydro power, solar hot-water heaters and geothermal energy. The prospects of so-called second-generation nuclear technologies — smaller, inherently safe, fuel-efficient, standardized fission reactors — offer a second, though less certain, option.

Solving our interrelated air-pollution, climate and oil-security problems involves enlightened, long-term energy planning. The basic elements of the solution are clear. What is uncertain is whether our national leadership will grasp the immediacy of the problems and the need for prompt action.

Mohamed T. El-Ashry is vice president of the World Resources Institute. James J. MacKenzie is a senior associate at the institute. Special to The Washington Post

'The basic elements of the solution are clear. What is uncertain is whether our national leadership will grasp the immediacy of the problems and the need for prompt action.'

ratic weather conditions become the norm as a result of greenhouse warming.

Acid deposition and ozone levels are high where tree and crop damages are occurring. Along the Appalachian Mountain chain the acidity of cloud moisture is 10 times greater than that at low elevations and about 100 times greater than that of unpolluted precipitation. The peak cloud acidity at several eastern mountains rivals that of lemon juice.

Pollution injures trees directly through leaf and needle damage and indirectly by leaching nutrients from the trees and soils. As the trees weaken, they succumb to such natural stress as insects, disease or climate extremes (drought, frost, damage now occurring primarily at high elevations will spread to lower sites and other tree species, just as it has throughout central Europe.

With the Clean Air Act awaiting renewal by Congress, now is the time to re-examine our basic approach to reducing air pollution. Rather than relying solely on regulations to control what leaves the tail pipe and smokestack, we need to reduce the generation of pollution in the first

Vow For Failure

South Africa's government is spending more than $2.5 million to promote the coming town council elections in black townships — a spending spree that the nation's anti-apartheid lobby has greeted with derision. Most activists have pointed out that the government's decision to spend so much to "sell" these elections was an admission that, after five years, black town councils had failed to take off. The government is now launching them anew.

The government has argued that it has a responsibility to counter propaganda against the councils. As the government promotes the elections in black newspapers and on radio and television, sentiment against the councils is rising in the townships. A candidate has been murdered; two believes that the low poll turnout in the 1983 municipal elections — 11 percent — was the result of intimidation. The government maintains that the state of emergency, which bans most anti-apartheid groups and places strict curbs on the press, has put the intimidators to flight — so now is the time to sell the concept of town councils anew.

Government officials have argued that most people in black townships welcomed the state of emergency. An increase of the vote in black areas in next month's elections would vindicate this argument and justify further crackdowns on anti-government organizations.

Botha also knows that President Reagan, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who have allied themselves with Botha by opposing sanctions, now expect Botha to show that he has the support of black South Africa. The three leaders face increasing pressures from anti-apartheid movements in their own countries to take tougher action against Botha. A strong showing by Botha forces in the municipal black elections would enable them to stem these pressures.

That is why the anti-apartheid lobby is determined to make the elections flop. The lobby knows that organizations such as the African National Congress and the Pan Africanist Congress have told overseas audiences that they, not Botha, enjoy black South Africa's support. If the elections indicated that it was Botha instead who had the support of blacks, it would be a setback for anti-apartheid organizations and their supporters.

The anti-apartheid lobby also contends that the elections cannot be free and fair as long as such groups as the United Democratic Front and the Azanian Peoples Organization are banned and most black leaders are in detention.

Voting in black townships could be a big disappointment for Botha. Blacks are not expected to vote in appreciable numbers, and Botha will run short of candidates. He had hoped to encourage many to run for the council offices. But the buildup of tension between the government and the black organizations, in addition to the risk involved in participating, has scared off new faces. Thus, many current councilors, albeit discredited and isolated by their communities, will likely be returned to power as unopposed candidates.

IN THE STATE

Cause Sought

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Officials are investigating the cause of a fire that caused about $1 million in damage to 17 classrooms and offices at Jacksonville High School.

The fire in the administration building, which officials thought had been extinguished early Thursday, reignited later. Smoke billowed from second-floor windows of the administration building until about 10:15 a.m., authorities said.

Pete Andrews, public information officer for Onslow County schools, said classes were called off for today.

Tombstone

WILMINGTON (AP) — A tombstone marking the grave of a Whiteville girl who died six weeks ago will be allowed to remain at least 30 days, giving the family and cemetery officials time to settle a dispute over whether the tombstone violates cemetery rules.

Deborah Powers, mother of Trudie Powers, and Willard Cole, president of the Whiteville Memorial Association, have agreed to the 30-day period. After it ends, Mrs. Powers said the family can either take the matter to court or remove the tombstone.

"I don't want to remove it," Mrs. Powers said Thursday. "We're going to fight it probably. I'll talk to the rest of the family and see what they say, but I believe we're going to try to keep the stone there."

The Powers family bought the tombstone, inscribed with "Our little angel," for Trudie's 12th birthday, which was Wednesday. Trudie died Aug. 18 from complications resulting from brain damage she suffered three years ago after swallowing a balloon.

Car Break-Ins

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham police detective says an investigation of a car break-in ring has solved several hundred car break-ins in Durham, Orange, Alamance and Granville counties.

Stereo equipment and radar detectors worth more than $50,000 were taken in the break-ins, said Detective B.L. Apple. Less than $10,000 worth of the property has been recovered.

Six people have been charged in connection with the thefts.

Oprah To Visit

Lawyers Challenge Judge's Trial Role

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Defense lawyers in the hostage-taking trial of two American Indians are taking offense at actions by U.S. District Judge Terrence Boyle, saying that he is taking the side of prosecutors in the case.

"My objection is to you participating as part of the prosecutorial team," defense attorney Lewis Pitts said Thursday, after Boyle interrupted a question by Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bruce.

Bruce had asked about a newspaper article that defense attorneys have wanted to use to show drug trafficking was common knowledge in the county.

"I object to your honor helping the government when he was about to make a foolish mistake that would have opened up the door on this issue," Pitts told Boyle.

"I am shocked," Pitts said after Boyle had the jury removed from the courtroom. "I wonder if you want to pull up a chair at the government's table."

Boyle warned Pitts that personal comments about the court could lead to contempt charges.

Eddie Hatcher, 31, and Timothy Jacobs, 20, are accused of holding up to 20 hostages at The Robesonian newspaper for 10 hours on Feb. 1 while demanding an investigation of drug trafficking and corruption in Robeson County.

Boyle said there will be no court session Tuesday because Bruce and the defense lawyers are scheduled to appear before the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. The appeals court will hear arguments for both sides on whether Hatcher and Jacobs should have been granted bond July 5.

A three-judge panel of the court ordered that bond be set, but the bond was revoked by the full appeals court Aug. 26, pending a full hearing.

Hatcher disappeared Aug. 31 after being told to surrender to U.S. marshals in Raleigh. He resurfaced Sept. 19, when he was arrested at Raleigh-Durham Airport. Jacobs surrendered to marshals in Asheville the same day he was notified the bond had been revoked.

Senate Panel OKs Lumbee Recognition

By The Associated Press
A Senate committee has endorsed a bill to give full federal recognition of the Lumbee Indians as a tribe, but supporters say it's highly unlikely the bill can be passed before Congress adjourns next week.

The Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs adopted the bill without debate Thursday. The legislation would amend a 1956 law that recognized the Lumbee as Indians, but not as an official tribe in the federal government's eyes.

But on Wednesday, Rep. Jamie Clarke, D-N.C., the state's only member of the House Interior Committee, which handles legislation on Indian matters, urged the panel to set aside similar legislation. The legislation is unlikely to re-emerge in the House this year.

Even if the Senate managed to pass the bill in the closing days of the congressional session, it appears unlikely that the House would concur, given Clarke's opposition.

"Unless the good Lord or the Cherokee change ... we will not see the Lumbee bill this year," Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., the bill's main sponsor, said. He represents Robeson County, where most Lumbees live.

Clarke refused Thursday to meet with Lumbee officials. And he denied again Rose's charge that he is opposing the bill because Cherokee officials threatened his re-election bid if he does not block the legislation.

Clarke said he has worked against the bill because of Cherokee opposition.

Out-Of-State Ports Developing Faster

Ports Authority Says $47 Million Needed To Compete In Southeast

WILMINGTON (AP) — The N.C. State Ports Authority needs another $46.9 million from the state to compete with other Southeastern ports, state ports officials say.

The proposal, presented in Wilmington Thursday to the state Advisory Budget Commission, asks the state to pump $32.1 million into the Wilmington port and $14.9 million into the port at Morehead City during the 1990-92 fiscal years. The money would pay for construction, renovations and new equipment.

The figures are a first peek at what the ports authority will ask for after the Legislature convenes in February. The agency's board of directors has not yet discussed or approved the proposal. Once it does, the amount sought could grow or shrink.

Nevertheless, coming two years after the Legislature gave the ports $36 million for expansion and renovation projects, the SPA's new funding proposal shows it is holding to the expectation that state government should pay for major capital projects at the two ports.

For years — while other states were pouring millions of dollars into their ports to accommodate dramatic changes in the shipping industry — North Carolina's ports authority dipped into its own pockets.

During the past decade, competing ports in Virginia, South Carolina and Georgia together received about $500 million dollars in either direct state appropriations, toll revenues or state-assisted financing. North Carolina's ports received $56.2 million during the same time.

As a result, out-of-state ports developed faster and were in better positions to respond quickly to changes in the shipping industry. And with a leg up on North Carolina, competing ports have been able to siphon off some of the state's shipping business.

The authority sought $44.5 million from the state in 1986 for expansion and renovation projects at both ports. The Legislature cut the request by $8.6 million.

SPA Executive Director Noel Painchaud said he doesn't expect the General Assembly to dole out as much as its competitors.

"These are large ports," Painchaud told the ABC. "... They have deep-bottomed pockets ... and we have to live with that."

The SPA's five-year master development plan calls for $70 million in improvements to the two ports. The Legislature funded about half of those improvements in 1986.

The ABC will add the ports proposal to others it has gathered during a three-week, statewide tour of state-owned facilities. The 15-member commission tours the state every two years to evaluate building and renovation needs and then makes funding recommendations to the governor and the Legislature.

The commission includes six state senators and five state representatives. Its chairman is state Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who is vice-chairman of the Senate appropriations and base budget committees.

Race For Governor Heating Up As Martin Warns Jordan To 'Duck'

CAMPAIGN STOP — Jim Gardner, candidate for lieutenant governor, and Mary Lou Sugg, president of the Pitt County Republican Women's Club, look over the program for the second Pitt County Republican Barbecue. Approximately 250 people attended the event Thursday at the American Legion Hall. (Reflector photograph)

Gardner Says Drugs Have Top Priority

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Republican Jim Gardner, a candidate for lieutenant governor, Thursday told a gathering of approximately 250 supporters that it's time to "take off the gloves and get very tough" with drug dealers in North Carolina.

Speaking as the featured guest at the second Pitt County Republican Barbecue, Gardner outlined various legislative proposals he would support relating to the war on drugs including:

- Eliminating all parole opportunities to anyone convicted of selling drugs in North Carolina.
- Creating a new state drug enforcement bureau featuring an "elite force" of drug enforcement agents who would be available to every community in the state.
- Establishing an automatic 28-year jail sentence for anyone convicted of selling drugs on or within 1,000 yards of any N.C. schoolyard.
- Implementation of a mandatory drug educational program in every N.C. school, both public and private, starting with students in the first grade.

Gardner also said he supports establishment of the death penalty for drug dealers linked to a drug related death.

"If (drug dealers) are going to poison the young people of this state and a death is the result of it, then they should pay for it with their life," Gardner said.

Gardner's attack on drug abuse prompted several standing ovations by those attending the session at the American Legion Hall.

Several people were overheard following Gardner's speech discussing the recent drug raid by Greenville police which netted 3,700 vials of crack, presumably aimed for distribution and consumption within the community.

Also well received by the Republican following was Gardner's vocal support of veto power for the governor, providing better pay for better teachers, and to halt unfair "pork barrel" funding practices.

Sponsored by the Pitt County Republican Women's Club, the event also included speeches by Republican candidates Howard D. Moye, Bill Dansey and Jim Rouse.

Rand And Gardner To Debate Sunday

By The Associated Press

Democrat Tony Rand and Republican Jim Gardner meet Sunday in Greensboro for a debate in the North Carolina race for lieutenant governor.

The matchup, which will be broadcast by the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television could bring some focus to the campaigns of two adversaries who have been unrestrained in their verbal assaults on one another.

In a recent exchange Rand called Gardner a liar, and Gardner has said that Rand's style of government is an autocracy in which eight Democratic legislators divvy up the state's revenues behind closed doors.

Three polls taken this month show the men to be evenly matched.

Rand, a defense lawyer and four-term senator from Cumberland County, says he hopes to draw support from his role as Senate majority leader in his first try at statewide office.

Gardner, the owner of a restaurant chain from Rocky Mount and a former congressman for the 4th District 20 years ago, is trying to become the first Republican lieutenant governor since Charles A. Reynolds of Forsyth County won the post in 1897.

The one-hour televised debate begins at 8 p.m. Sunday on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Sanford Gives Up On Wilderness Bill

By The Associated Press

Sen. Terry Sanford has given up his battle to win passage of a hard-fought wilderness bill this year, saying he ran out of time to mount a final challenge to Sen. Jesse Helms.

The bill, which would declare most of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park a wilderness area, has been the main point of contention between the two senators this year. Sanford said Thursday supporters would introduce the bill again next year.

In two showdown votes in June, Sanford and other voters were unable to muster enough votes to shut off a threatened filibuster by Helms. All Democrats who voted supported Sanford, but only a handful of Republicans joined them, leaving supporters short of the two-thirds majority needed to block a filibuster.

Sanford, a Democrat from Durham, had said he might try for one final vote this year for "cloture," a move to shut off debate.

But in an interview Thursday, Sanford said Congress hopes to adjourn next week and there's not enough time to accommodate such a vote and the delaying tactics that would accompany it.

"It would be too much of an imposition on the Senate to insist on another cloture vote," he said. "I want us to get out of here."

Asked if he had picked up enough Republican support to win a third cloture vote, Sanford said, "That's hard to say." Several GOP senators support the wilderness bill, he said, but found it difficult to resist Helms' appeal to support a fellow Republican on a matter directly affecting his home state.

Helms has said most Republicans sided with him because of their feelings about the bill, not out of party loyalty.

Most of the park, which straddles border of North Carolina and Tennessee, already is treated as wilderness. But environmentalists want Congress to make it official so that future administrations would be unable to alter the policy and allow development in the park.

The House easily approved the bill this session, but Helms fought it at every turn in the Senate.

The main disagreement between the two senators involves a proposed road into the park in Swain County. The federal government agreed to build the road in the 1940s, but abandoned it two decades later, saying the environmental and economic costs were too high.

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he's not getting mad at Democratic challenger Bob Jordan's attacks on his ethics and competency; he's getting even.

Martin warned Jordan to "duck" Thursday, saying his campaign will begin airing a television commercial tonight that takes a humorous jab at Jordan. But he would not describe its content, other than to say it does not "respond in kind" to ads Jordan's campaign is running.

"I don't believe my words could do justice to it," Martin said. "It's just too beautiful."

Jordan's campaign fired another salvo Thursday, releasing copies of an internal administration memorandum that accused Martin consultant Jimmy Green of dragging his feet on a key assignment. Jordan has accused Martin of making a political "payoff" by hiring Green.

At a news conference, Martin repeated his contention that Jordan's nearly two-week barrage of criticism was sparked by newspaper polls showing the Republican governor widening his lead over the Democratic challenger.

"The louder he screams and wimpers and does his thing, the wider the margin is getting," Martin said. "And so my advice to him is, keep doing what you're doing."

The commercial would be Martin's first criticizing Jordan. Previous Martin ads have praised his record as governor, urging voters to "take a look around" at North Carolina's progress over the past 3½ years.

Jordan has taken mild shots at Martin in commercials since last spring, but began intensifying the assault nearly two weeks ago with public statements and ads blasting the administration's ethics, competence and record on education.

Martin said his usual policy was to ignore one or two televised attacks on him, but "with the third salvo, he'd better duck." The time has come to hit back, Martin said.

The focal point of Jordan's offensive has been Green, who was lieutenant governor from 1977-84 and tacitly supported Martin for governor in 1984 after failing to win the Democratic nomination.

Jordan contends Green does little work for his $329-per-day salary and says he and some of his "cronies" got jobs in Martin's administration in exchange for supporting him. Jordan unveiled a commercial Wednesday that describes the hirings as a million-dollar "payoff."

The memorandum Jordan's campaign obtained was written by Don Follmer, director of public affairs with the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, to NRCD Secretary Tommy Rhodes.

Dated Sept. 10, 1987, the memo says Green "hasn't gotten off the dime" in putting together a program for limited development and environmental protection along the North Carolina coast. Martin had appointed Green chairman of a task force to craft what became known as the Governor's Coastal Initiative.

"It appears that we must push on or pretty much go it alone if anything is going to get done," Follmer wrote.

Jordan spokesman Phil Wells said the memo "proves that Jimmy Green is ripping off the taxpayers."

But Martin said the memo was an effort to blame Green for NRCD's slowness in getting started on the coastal project.

"At that time I was putting a lot of pressure on the department ... to get moving," Martin said. "They had the lead responsibility. And what this particular writer does is in effect the old, standard practice known as CORE — covering one's rear end."

Follmer, who attended the news conference, told reporters after Martin was right and that he regretted writing the memo.

"It's the usual example of what I occasionally do ... let fly with the typewriter to get people's attention," Follmer said. "It was a dumb thing to do."

Overpayments

RALEIGH (AP) — Counties across the state failed to report about $1.4 million in overpayments for Aid to Families with Dependent Children that were made because of county errors last year, a state report says.

State Auditor Edward Renfrow said in the report that he has referred the matter to the State Bureau of Investigation to determine if there were criminal violations.

The review was conducted after problems were detected by the state auditor's office in the Durham County Department of Social Services. It said 67 counties did not report any county errors for the complex federal program, from June 1, 1987 to May 31, 1988. It also said that 28 counties reported no more than 10 county errors in the same period.

"We're concerned because a large amount of money is involved," said W. Ray Mozingo, audit supervisor for the state auditor's office. "The federal government will hold the state accountable for this program."

The welfare program provides aid for children with at least one parent not living in the home or disabled or unemployed. The program, which is overseen by the state and administered by the counties, paid out about $195 million to some 77,000 families last year.

Report Says Collider Would Boost State

RALEIGH (AP) — Aside from creating jobs and bolstering the tax base of state and local governments, the superconducting super collider would make its host counties "a magnet for growth and development," Gov. Jim Martin says.

"In short, it's clear that the SSC is a good investment for North Carolina," Martin said Thursday, unveiling a 70-page report by two University of North Carolina at Charlotte economists.

The $15,000 report was requested by the General Assembly, some of whose members have voiced skepticism about the wisdom of the state's pursuit of the $4.4 billion dollar science project.

North Carolina is one of seven states in the running for the SSC. U.S. Energy Secretary Jim Herrington is expected to announce a tentative decision next month.

Under North Carolina's proposal, the SSC would be located in Durham, Granville and Person counties.

The study was conducted by John Connaughton and Ronald Madsen of the Center for Business and Economic Research at UNC-C. They compile annual forecasts on the North Carolina economy for the university and First Union National Bank.

The study measured the project's impact on North Carolina between this year and 2013, the year the SSC would be decommissioned.

The SSC would consist of a circular underground tunnel 53 miles around, laboratories and other buildings for experiments into the fundamental nature of subatomic particles.

"Overall, the economic impact in North Carolina is going to be incredibly significant," Connaughton said at a news conference.

Among the study's major findings were that the SSC would:

- Increase total state employment by an average of more than 9,900 workers per year, including people who would be hired by the businesses the SSC would spawn, such as restaurants and stores.
- Boost average annual state wages and salaries by $239 million per year.
- Increase total state wages and salaries by $6.2 billion between this year and 2013.
- Generate $857 million in state and local tax revenue — roughly double the $425 million the Martin administration has proposed to spend on SSC-related projects such as road improvements.

AIDS Brothers Get $1.1 Million

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A $1.1 million award against school officials for barring three young AIDS-infected brothers from class is a lesson to educators nationwide, says the judge who approved the settlement of the civil rights suit.

"Let us hope there will not have to be too many more cases for other families and other school boards like the Ray case, which ... was a landmark case," U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich said Thursday after lawyers for both sides outlined the terms in court. She praised both sides for settling the dispute without a trial, which had been set to begin Monday in Fort Myers.

The agreement between Louise and Clifford Ray and the DeSoto County School District in Arcadia gives the couple's three sons $820 a month each for the next 10 years, for a total of nearly $100,000 each. Should one of them die before the end of the period, the others or their parents would receive the remainder of the award.

The parents, whose home was burned down by an arsonist during the uproar, each are to receive about $300 monthly for 30 years, including a 3 percent annual increase for inflation, for a total of more than $170,000 each. The parents also get an immediate $50,000 cash payment.

The settlement, to be paid by the school district's insurance company, contains $387,500 for attorney fees and $50,000 for court costs.

School officials had insisted too much was unknown about acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and they wouldn't risk exposing other children to the deadly disease by admitting the boys: Ricky, now 11, Robert, 10, and Randy, 9.

Mrs. Ray said she hopes school officials "have learned as much from this situation as we have. You shouldn't be afraid of someone who has AIDS because you can't catch it. And if you have a disease, you shouldn't have to be ashamed of it."

The brothers have hemophilia, a genetic disease that keeps blood from clotting. They probably were exposed to the AIDS virus through plasma-based medication to clot their blood.

Ricky Ray has developed AIDS-related complex, which can be a precursor to the deadly disease, and is being treated with the anti-AIDS drug AZT. His brothers have not exhibited any AIDS symptoms.

Helms Stands Alone

Welfare Reforms Sail Past Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first major welfare overhaul since the Great Depression holds out the prospect of jobs, education and self-sufficiency to poor people who otherwise could face a lifetime of dependence on government handouts.

The Family Welfare Reform Act won a ringing 96-1 endorsement Thursday from the Senate, with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the only dissenter.

The House scheduled a vote on the measure today, with certain White House approval at the end of the road.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the leader of the effort, said the bill constitutes "an entire redefinition and overhaul of what we've come to know as our welfare system," the first since it was established in 1935.

The cornerstone of the act is the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills program, a large-scale work, education and training program aimed primarily at welfare mothers. Support services such as child care would be available to program participants and those moving into low-wage jobs.

Welfare will "no longer be a permanent or extended condition," Moynihan said. Instead, he said, the new system will stress work, child support and last-resort cash supplements while encouraging the needy to get the education and training needed to avert long-term dependence.

"If it does only half of what we hope, it's an immense step forward," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore.

The five-year, $3.3 billion welfare act, modeled closely on a measure passed last June by the Senate, won nothing but praise Thursday in that chamber.

Some members of the House, which originally passed a much more lavish bill costing twice as much, were prepared to give it a pricklier reception today.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, and his allies were granted floor time in which to reiterate their objections to a work requirement and other provisions.

S.C. School Shooting

Suspect's Mother Says 'Torn Apart'

GREENWOOD, S.C. (AP) — The mother of the man accused of killing two children and wounding nine people in an elementary school shooting rampage says her heart goes out to the victims' families.

"It has just really been hard on all of us," said Shirley Bordnor, mother of 19-year-old James William Wilson. "It has just torn me apart inside. It has broken my heart inside."

She said her sympathy goes out to "all of those families" of the victims.

As a second schoolgirl died Thursday, the father of the other dead girl said he still couldn't believe this week's events.

"Anyone that would harm innocent little children, they are really deranged. I mean something is absolutely wrong," Moses Bradley said after arranging for this afternoon's funeral for his 8-year-old daughter, Shequela.

"This week has been really terrible," he said, his eyes red from tears. Tequila Thomas 8, lost her battle for life Thursday after undergoing two operations. Her funeral was set for Sunday.

Police Chief James Coursey said Wilson was charged Thursday with a second count of murder, along with nine counts of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Police say Wilson quietly entered Oakland Elementary School on Monday morning and began shooting at students and teachers in the cafeteria and in a third-grade classroom.

Wilson is undergoing psychological testing at the State Hospital in Columbia.

The Greenville News reported today that a state mental health center rejected two attempts since 1986 by Wilson's relatives to have him involuntarily committed for psychiatric care. Relatives have described him as a hyperactive recluse who has been in and out of a hospital psychiatric unit during the past eight months.

Retired Probate Judge Rosemary M. Trakas said Wilson's family filed affidavits for involuntary commitment and Wilson was evaluated by a state mental health center.

She told the newspaper that, after the evaluation, officials declined to admit Wilson into the state mental hospital system.

Dr. Joseph Bevilacqua, who directs the state mental health system, could not be reached for comment early today by The Associated Press.

Wilson told The State newspaper of Columbia that during the shooting he was thinking about crimes he had read about, and about the teasing he received while in school for being overweight and dressing strangely.

Wilson said he had stayed up all night before the shootings, reading a book about John Wayne Gacy, who is on Illinois' death row for killing 33 men and boys. He also mentioned a magazine article about Laurie Dann, the 30-year-old baby sitter who shot six children in a Chicago-area elementary school in May.

Economic Gauge Rises Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity rose a moderate 0.4 percent in August.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators may be a signal that robust growth, and the inflation that goes with it, may require another dose of higher interest rates from the Federal Reserve Board.

But analysts caution against drawing firm conclusions from a single month's figures. The index is designed to predict economic activity six to nine months in advance and economists say it takes three months of reports to establish a clear trend.

In July, today's report said, the index dropped 0.6 percent after shooting up 1.5 percent in June, the best in 18 months. The July dip had earlier been calculated at 0.8 percent and the June gain at 1.4 percent.

The August index report is another piece of evidence indicating that some analysts may have been premature in reading signs of a slowdown in August.

Five of the available nine components of the index contributed to the increase, four detracted from it.

The biggest boosts came from a drop in average weekly claims for state unemployment benefits, from 325,000 in July to 298,000 in August. A rise in orders for manufactured consumer goods, from $85.2 billion to $89.3 billion last month, also was a big plus.

Together, these two categories accounted for two-thirds of the positive activity. Also adding to the overall increase were rises in plant and equipment orders, in building permits and in the price of raw materials, which is read as a sign of strong demand.

Indicators making a negative contribution, in order of severity, were a decrease in business delivery times, read as an indication of slackening demand; a drop in the average workweek; a decline in the Standard & Poor's index of 500 stocks, and a contraction of the money supply in inflation-adjusted dollars.

The 0.4 percent overall increase left the index at 193.4 percent of its 1967 base of 100.

The August rise was a bit bigger than most analysts were expecting.

Senator Accused By Mother, Daughter Of Sexual Advances

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mother of a 26-year-old woman who accuses Sen. Brock Adams of sexual assault says Adams earlier made a pass at her, while newly released police records in the daughter's case show no medical evidence of sexual activity or drugs.

Sylvia Tupper, mother of Kari Tupper who has accused Adams, D-Wash., of drugging and then sexually assaulting her during an overnight stay in his Washington home, said Adams propositioned her in 1986, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported today.

The incident occurred during a period when she had lunch with him several times with her husband's knowledge, the newspaper quoted Mrs. Tupper as saying. Adams and Mrs. Tupper have been friends since they both were in student government at the University of Washington 40 years ago.

Kari Tupper's sister, Kathie Buckham of Seattle, said Thursday night that Tupper first told her Adams had made a sexual advance toward her after a 1985 fund-raiser.

On the night in question, March 27, 1987, Ms. Tupper said she had accepted an invitation to go to a restaurant with Adams after she plotted a strategy to tell the senator to stop propositioning her.

"I knew the dinner was going to take place ... the motives behind it," Mrs. Buckham said. "We rehearsed it, how she was going to say it."

Adams has denied he made any sexual advances toward Ms. Tupper and said she came to his house to discuss her search for a job in Washington. He contends Tupper tried to blackmail him for $400,000.

But Adams said he made a mistake by letting Tupper, a longtime family friend, spend the night at his house when his wife was out of town.

Adams issued a statement to reporters about the episode on Tuesday. He did not accept questions and has refused further comment.

Police records released Thursday in response to a Freedom of Information Act request were compiled as part of the District of Columbia police department's investigation into Kari Tupper's allegations against Adams.

They also indicate that prosecutors declined to charge Adams in part because "there were problems with the victim's credibility."

The record also shows there were apparently questions raised about "medical and physical corroboration."

The police file contains a detective's interview with Tupper and others, reports from two hospitals and a statement reflecting the decision of the U.S. attorney's office.

Much of the file is blacked out to protect the witnesses' privacy.

Tupper, a former secretary on Capitol Hill, made a complaint against Adams in July 1987, nearly four months after she claimed that Adams put a drug in her drink, took her to bed and fondled her on the night of March 27, 1987, and the next morning.

That morning Tupper went to the Arlington Hospital in suburban Virginia for tests. Those tests proved negative for sperm or an enzyme found in semen, the record shows. A urine-analysis drug-screening test found only traces of anti-inflammatory drugs.

Three days later Tupper admitted herself for an examination by doctors at George Washington University Medical Center, claiming she had been sexually assaulted. A test for semen was not performed.

Joseph DiGenova, the U.S. attorney at the time, said in an interview that the case was handled in a routine fashion by prosecutors who determined it had "absolutely no merit whatsoever — zero, zip — it was nothing."

Tupper, who is now married, has been unavailable for comment since the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported the story early in the week. But her father, Dr. James Tupper, said his family feels betrayed by Adams.

"Kari trusted and respected this man," the woman's father said on Wednesday. "She never believed he would try to hurt or take advantage of her."

Tupper claimed in her interview with Detective Patrick Shine that Adams had made sexual advances towards her nearly two years before March 27, 1987. On that night, she wanted to get together with Adams to ask him to stop "harassing me and making me feel uncomfortable at receptions," the police report said.

Adams has said Tupper wanted to talk about her employment.

Adams and Tupper were supposed to meet at a restaurant, but Adams did not show up because her office had told him she was ill that day. When Tupper called his house,

Soviets Say U.N. Peacekeepers Short Of Goals In Afghanistan

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviets charged that U.N. peacekeeping forces in Afghanistan were failing in their mission hours after the peacekeepers popped champagne corks to celebrate their Nobel Peace Prize.

Several Western leaders, including President Reagan who was himself in the running for the prize, praised the decision to award it to U.N. peacekeepers worldwide.

U.N. leaders said they, too, were delighted with the award announced Thursday, but they also pleaded for the release of a U.S. Marine kidnapped while serving with a peacekeeping group in Lebanon.

Spokesman Gennady Gerasimov of the Soviet Foreign Ministry said Thursday that U.N. peacekeeping forces in Afghanistan are "not doing their job properly." He said they should be investigated by the head of the United Nations before any future peacekeeping forces are approved. "If we do not succeed in creating an efficient control mechanism here in Afghanistan, which is kind of a testing ground, then we will have difficulties in creating this kind of mechanism in other conflicts," said Gerasimov.

Up to 500,000 people have worn the blue helmet or beret of the U.N. peacekeeping forces, and 9,991 soldiers now are in the force supported by about 2,000 civilian personnel. A total of 733 have died on missions.

The foreign ministers of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council met Wednesday at the request of Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to discuss Soviet claims that the United States and Pakistan are violating the Afghan accords signed in Geneva on April 14.

Those accords call for the Soviets to withdraw more than 100,000 troops from Afghanistan and for Afghanistan and Pakistan to respect each other's territorial integrity.

Humayun Khan, Pakistani secretary of state for foreign affairs, said Thursday in Islamabad that it was the Kabul government, not his own, that had violated the accords. He said he expected the Soviet Union to withdraw from Afghanistan as scheduled.

The Soviet Union has been bolstering a Marxist government in Afghanistan, and Pakistan and the United States have backed anti-government rebels.

Gerasimov also said that at the meeting of the Security Council foreign ministers, "We drew the attention of the ministers and of the (U.N.) Secretary-General (Perez de Cuellar) to the flagrant violations by Pakistan of the Geneva Accords and said that the consequences of these actions may be unpredictable."

In New Delhi, India on Thursday, Soviet Ambassador-at-large Nicolai Kozyrev said Pakistani violations include supplying rebels with long-range missiles for bombarding Kabul and preventing Afghan refugees from returning home.

On Tuesday, Shevardnadze said the Soviets had finished the first part of their troop withdrawal but had not yet begun the second phase. He said they would wait to see if the alleged violations were halted.

U.N. observers have confirmed that half the Soviet troops withdrew by Aug. 15, so Shevardnadze's statement meant the Red Army retreat has been halted for the last six weeks. The withdrawal began May 15 and is to be complete by Feb. 15, 1989.

Meanwhile, Thursday's Nobel decision was praised by French President Francois Mitterrand, British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe, and Reagan. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Reagan were in the running for the December 1987 agreement to eliminate an entire class of nuclear weapons.

U.N. leaders lauded their peacekeeping forces after the prize was announced Thursday, but pleaded for the release of Lt. Col. William R. Higgins.

Higgins commanded a 76-man group attached to the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon when he was abducted Feb. 17.

"For us, it is a No. 1 priority that this officer who was serving the United Nations, who was wearing the blue beret when he was kidnapped, should be released without delay," said Marrack Goulding, who leads the peacekeepers as U.N. undersecretary for political affairs.

The pro-Iranian Organization of the Oppressed on Earth claimed responsibility and said Higgins would be put on trial for spying. U.S. and U.N. sources deny Higgins was a spy.

Goulding's call for Higgins' release was the only somber note sounded by U.N. staff.

"Everybody from the 38th floor to the basement is delighted," said U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani. The secretary-general's office is on the 38th floor.

Goulding had no comment on how the $390,000 prize will be used. U.N. officials will accept the prize Dec. 10 in Oslo, Norway.

Hijacker Wanted Jetliner To Crash

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A hijacker who wanted a pilot to crash a jetliner carrying more than 100 people into a government building was wounded and captured after he shot four crew members, killing one, officials said.

Security forces shot Raimundo Conceicao on Thursday night as he walked toward a getaway plane with the pilot of the passenger jet, a Boeing 737 from Brazil's VASP airlines.

Conceicao turned and shot the pilot, wounding him in the leg, officials said, describing the 28-year-old as a "psychopath."

Conceicao was in critical condition late Thursday night, while the wounded pilot, Fernando Murillo Silva, and the flight engineer were in stable condition. A wounded steward was treated and released, officials said. Officials said Conceicao killed co-pilot, Salvador Evangelista, earlier.

The VASP airlines Boeing 737, with 98 passengers and seven crew members aboard, was on a routine flight from Porto Velho in the western Amazon jungle to Rio de Janeiro when the eight-hour ordeal began. No Americans were aboard, the Air Force Ministry said.

Twenty minutes after the jet took off from the southeastern city of Belo Horizonte, the hijacker, armed with a .38-caliber pistol, shot the steward and entered the cockpit. He shot co-pilot Evangelista, in the head and the flight engineer in the leg, said air force spokesman Col. Eden Avolinsque.

Conceicao had the plane flown to the federal capital of Brasilia, 150 miles to the southeast, but was told that for security reasons it would not be allowed to land, officials said. After nearly running out of fuel it landed in Goiania, 125 miles southwest of Brasilia and 850 miles northwest of Rio. Federal Police Chief Romeu Tuma said Conceicao told the control tower at Goiania's Santa Genoveva airport that he wanted to "slam the Boeing 737 into a ministry building in Brasilia."

Air Force Minister Octavio Moreira Lima told The Associated Press in Brasilia: "The hijacker told negotiators he wanted to settle accounts with the president over the country's economic policies. ... He is a psychopath."

Brazil's inflation is running at 25 percent monthly and unions estimate Brazilians have seen more than 40 percent of their wages eaten by cost of living increases in the last year.

Crowds of onlookers swarmed to the airport, which was closed and sealed off by hundreds of heavily-armed police and army troops dressed in combat gear.

AP

During negotiations the hijacker, demanding to fly back to Brasilia, allowed all but pilot Murillo Silva off the jet and agreed to change to a smaller Brazilian-made Bandeirantes passenger plane.

"We had orders from President (Jose) Sarney not to negotiate with the hijacker and not to refuel the plane," Brazilian Air Force spokesman Col. Eden Avolinsque said in Brasilia. "Police weren't going to budge."

According to Avolinsque, police opened fire on Conceicao as he walked to the smaller plane and the hijacker turned and shot the pilot, wounding him in the leg.

"The pilot's calm state of mind and patience in negotiating with the hijacker saved our lives," said Joao Lanza, one of the passengers, praising Murillo Silva.

VASP is a Portuguese acronym for Viacao Aerea Sao Paulo. The airline company is state-run.

W. Germany Sends Envoy To Libya

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany has appointed an ambassador to Libya for the first time since the 1986 Berlin discotheque attack that U.S. officials blamed on the radical African nation, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said today.

"We are sending an ambassador to Libya next month," the spokesman told The Associated Press.

The spokesman, who requested anonymity, said the last West German ambassador left Tripoli at the end of his three-year tour in May 1986 and was not replaced due to the controversy over the La Belle disco bombing.

The April 5, 1986, bomb attack on the popular West Berlin night spot killed two U.S. military personnel and a Turkish woman and injured about 230 other people.

Citing what it said was proof of Libyan involvement in the La Belle attack, the United States bombed the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi 10 days later in retaliation.

However, since then, West Berlin authorities have said they have no concrete indications that Libya was in fact involved. Some West Berlin officials have said they suspect instead that Syria may have been behind the La Belle attack.

Today, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said Juergen Hellner, a former ambassador to Syria who speaks fluent Arabic, would be the next ambassador to Libya. He said there was "no connection" between the so far inconclusive Berlin probe and the decision to name a new ambassador.

"We simply decided that we would have a better diplomatic presence by being represented by an ambassador," the spokesman said.

Libya is West Germany's No. 2 oil supplier, behind Britain.

West Germany will rejoin West European nations such as Spain, France, Denmark, Greece and Italy that have ambassadors to Libya. Italy is Libya's largest trading partner.

Aquino Gives Up On Election Delay

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today gave up efforts to delay village elections after failing to convince the Senate a postponement was needed to forestall violence by communist rebels.

Also today, unidentified gunmen killed a city council member in an early morning attack in suburban Quezon City. Reports said several gunmen fired on Tomas Castro, 28, near his home and fled in a commandeered private Jeep.

Mrs. Aquino summoned leaders of the Senate and House of Representatives to a two-hour meeting today to discuss postponing the elections from Nov. 14 until next May.

Afterward, House Speaker Ramon Mitra said there was no indication the Senate would agree to Mrs. Aquino's request, which requires congressional approval.

The lower house had endorsed the delay.

Later, presidential Executive Secretary Catalino Macaraig said the administration had given up trying to change the senators' minds.

"We are not pushing for the postponement any more," he said. "We are waiting for the Congress' decision. Whatever Congress will come out with, we will follow. Right now, we are working on the assumption that the elections will be pushed through" in November.

Last week, Mrs. Aquino requested the delay, claiming Communist rebels would attempt to disrupt the election. Filipinos will choose leaders of the more than 40,000 villages and municipal districts.

She cited military reports that the rebel New People's Army "influences" about 7,800 such areas nationwide.

U.S. Denies Report Of Secret Talks Over Hostages' Release

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli newspaper reported today that eight Americans and one Briton held hostage in Lebanon will be freed in October as a result of secret talks between the United States and Iran.

In exchange for the release, Washington will provide economic aid, gradually release billions of dollars in Iranian funds frozen in U.S. banks and resume diplomatic relations with Tehran, the English-language weekly The Nation said in a report from Geneva.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley denied the report. "There have been no such meetings. The story is not true. It is all false," she said.

The Nation said in its unattributed report that the secret negotiations between Tehran and Washington began in Geneva on Monday. The newspaper began publishing four weeks ago so it was difficult to judge the report's credibility.

The Iranian delegation told U.S. representatives that the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems holding the hostages in Lebanon demanded $3 million in ransom and immunity from prosecution, The Nation said. The captors appear to have dropped their demand for the release of 17 pro-Iranian terrorists held in Kuwait, the newspaper said.

The American delegates responded that they were not in a position to pay ransom, the report said.

Under an agreement worked out in Geneva, five American hostages will be released around Oct. 7, and the second group of three Americans and an Englishman is to be freed a week later, the report said.

Nine Americans are held hostage in Lebanon. The Iranians told the American delegates they did not know the whereabouts of one of the hostages — U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, The Nation said. Higgins, 41, was a U.N. peacekeeper kidnapped Feb. 17.

The Iranians said they knew only that Higgins was spirited aboard a fishing boat off Tyre and carried to a larger vessel waiting at sea, the newspaper said.

The British hostage is thought to be Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared in Lebanon last year, The Nation said.

In all, 17 foreign hostages are believed held in Lebanon. Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, is the longest held hostage. Anderson, an American, was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Pope Urges End To Bias, Denies Women Priesthood

By MARY BETH SHERIDAN
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today issued a major document on women that condemns discrimination, reaffirms a ban on female priests and says women's personalities are formed essentially by maternal characteristics.

The 120-page document touches only briefly on the institutional role of women in the Roman Catholic Church — a controversial issue in Western countries, particularly the United States.

But it will likely have a significant effect, since it provides the theoretical framework for decisions on women during the rest of John Paul's papacy.

"Mulieris Dignitatem," Latin for "On the Dignity of Women," is in the form of an apostolic letter, meaning that it is intended as church teaching but is not considered infallible.

In the introduction, the pope said he is responding to a call by a bishops' synod last year for further theological and anthropological study of what it means to be a man or woman.

"It is only by beginning from these bases ... that one is able to speak of their (women's) active presence in the Church and in society," he wrote.

John Paul concluded that the sexes are equal but fundamentally different, and that women are distinguished by such "feminine" characteristics as sensitivity to other people. He says women particularly fulfill their vocation through motherhood — either actual child-rearing or "spiritual motherhood," in which some women, such as nuns, remain celibate and devote themselves to other people.

Vatican officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the pope regarded the document as a "very personal" statement and apparently did not consult outside experts on it.

It came as the Vatican is facing increasing pressure from women for a greater role in the church. The women's issue dominated the 1987 synod and has arisen recently with the ordination of a woman bishop in the Episcopal Church in the United States, a move the Vatican has described as a roadblock to Christian unity.

In the document, the pope emphasizes repeatedly that men and women are equal and sexual discrimination is a sin.

"The revealed truth concerning the creation of the human being as male and female constitutes the principal argument against all the objectively injurious and unjust situations which contain and express the inheritance of the sin which all human beings bear within themselves," he wrote.

But he said that women's struggle for equality "must not under any condition lead to the 'masculinization' of women."

John Paul said women are more sensitive than men and receive a special moral and spiritual strength from the "awareness" that God has entrusted to them.

However, he said the very difference between femininity and masculinity means women should not be priests. Christ, he says, only chose men to be his Apostles and to consecrate the Eucharist — the ceremony that celebrates Christ's sacrifice of his life for the church.

THE WEALTH OF THE LAND!

OIL WAS SO IMPORTANT A PRODUCT OF THE LAND IN BIBLE TIMES THAT IT WAS THOUGHT OF AS PURE WEALTH ALONG WITH SILVER AND GOLD! MANY RICH MERCHANTS ASSESSED THEIR WEALTH BY HOW MANY POTS OF GOLDEN OIL THEY HAD ON HAND TO SELL IN THE MARKET PLACES! OIL WAS USED FOR LIGHTING UP ROOMS IN THE NIGHT (EX. 27:20). IT WAS USED FOR FOOD (1 KINGS 17:12), MIXED WITH MEAL AND MADE INTO CAKES AND BREAD - IN FACT, CAKES OF FINE FLOUR WITH OIL POURED OVER THEM WERE USED AS MEAT OFFERINGS IN THE HOLY TEMPLE (LEV. 2:1,4-7). OIL WAS USED IN MEDICINE FOR HEALING WOUNDS (MARK 6:13) AND FOR ANOINTING THE BODY AFTER A BATH, AND FOR RENDERING THE HAIR SMOOTH (PS. 23:5). IT WAS USED FOR ANOINTING KINGS AND WAS CALLED HOLY BECAUSE IT WAS USED IN BEHALF OF GOD (PS. 89:20). A HOLY OIL OF COMPOSITE AND VERY EXPENSIVE CHARACTER WAS USED FOR THE ANOINTING OF HIGH PRIESTS. NO WONDER EVERYONE WHO HAD A HOUSE WITH A LITTLE LAND ALSO PLANTED AN OLIVE TREE OR TWO FOR THE OIL THAT IT WOULD BRING!

Experts Say

All Household Violence Is Harmful

By MARY JO KOCHAKIAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

The chances are very good indeed that you have a violent home, or are close to someone who does.

It can be estimated with certainty that at least half the homes in America are violent, according to researcher Richard J. Gelles. "We can say that easily because half of all households (in the country) have children under 18, and pretty much every parent hits their kids."

Gelles, co-author with Murray A. Straus of "Intimate Violence" (Simon and Schuster, $19.95), says that "violence is inappropriate, no matter what it is." If a household has infrequent episodes of grabbing, shoving or spanking — even once a year — that still is a violent home, Gelles says.

And just as the public often considers violent acts such as spanking or shoving effective and acceptable means of resolving conflict, so too is there a fundamental misunderstanding of the causes of violence, according to Gelles, who is dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and professor of anthropology and sociology at the University of Rhode Island. (Straus is professor of sociology and director of the Family Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire.)

It isn't drug or alcohol abuse that leads to violence. Abusers aren't, for the most part, mentally ill. Abuse is found in families at all socioeconomic levels.

People hit family members "because they can," the authors say. Abusers face few costs. While being violent in public has definite, negative consequences, there are few in domestic cases. In the rare instances that family members are arrested, the criminal justice system encourages keeping family members together.

And abusers are rewarded by their behavior, the authors write. Their violence will stop a wife or child from acting in the way that irritates them; they are able to work off anger, gain a sense of control and enhance their self-esteem.

So, the authors say, both public policy and individuals' strategies have to be directed at making it "so people can't" use violence in family situations.

"The general perception is that there has to be an injury for it to be considered abuse," Gelles says, and he and Straus have been criticized for overestimating abuse. But tabulating only cases involving injury doesn't make sense, Gelles says.

"If you set out to stab your husband or wife, chances are pretty low that you're going to succeed," Gelles says. But to exclude the attempt as an incident of violence "doesn't make any sense to me," he says.

An additional issue is emotional abuse, which Gelles and Straus characterize as "the most hidden, most insidious, least researched and perhaps in the long run most damaging form of intimate victimization." A precise definition is difficult, but possible forms include scolding, ignoring, harping and criticizing, they write.

The striking characteristic of women abused by their husbands "is that they tend to be debilitated by it," Gelles says. They usually look 10 to 20 years older than they are, he says. They become "brainwashed into believing they deserve it."

The striking characteristic of abused children is their behavior, he says; "they have no attention span, or they are totally within themselves, which is less common." More often, abused children "look for someplace to put their anger" — on a family member, pet, a teacher or another authority figure. "The more severe the force, the greater the damage" to the child, Gelles notes.

There must be a fundamental rethinking of violence, the authors argue. The most important step in preventing violence in the home "is cancellation of the hitting license in families," they write.

And, they say, "We must develop programs and policies that support families and reduce internal and external stresses and inequalities."

To that end, they favor programs that would prevent poverty, unemployment and unwanted pregnancies, and they say strict gun control also is needed. They encourage women to work because research indicates that paid employment enhances mental health and is related to more equality and less violence in the home.

"Intimate Violence," with its extensive reporting of research, is a reasoned, comprehensive and somewhat academic look at the problem. But Gelles has some very down-to-earth advice for the victims of domestic abuse.

It is up to an individual "to take a strong stance," Gelles says. A woman who is abused by her husband must present him with "a cost that is believable and affects" him. "And for God's sake, don't hit him." When there is an attack, "call the police, make sure they arrest him. ... If he wants to come back, make it only under very specific conditions.

"If you can't work it out, get out. You only go one time around, and your one time shouldn't be spent being a punching bag for this guy."

For all parents, he has this advice: "Don't hit your kids. When you start, you don't know where it's going to go."

Wear Special Glasses To Protect Eyesight

By SUE MILLER
L.A. Times-Washington Post

ARLINGTON, Va. — Americans must begin wearing special sunglasses that absorb ultraviolet radiation to preserve their sight, two eye researchers say.

"And, if the children rebel, make them wear brimmed hats," Dr. John S. Werner, a University of Colorado neuroscientist said Sunday at a symposium here on "The Aging Eye."

Dr. Paul Sternberg, an Emory University ophthalmologist, told a science writers' seminar on Vision and Eye Research that the sunglasses and vitamin supplements may prevent and retard age-related macular degeneration.

AMD, which affects 21 million Americans, is responsible for the loss of fine vision needed to drive a car and read.

In his laboratory, Sternberg said, he has shown that chemical damage in retinal cells can be prevented by glutathione, a protein that protects the retina from oxidants that can cause cell injury or death, and Vitamin E.

At the first sign of retinal damage in his patients, Sternberg said, he tells them to start eating green, leafy vegetables that contain glutathione.

"People are spending more time outdoors and living longer," Werner said. "If they don't do something about protective eyewear now, it will be too late when they are 70 or more."

"It's perhaps unfortunate that the retina, unlike the skin, does not sunburn to remind us when danger is occurring," he said.

Werner said that pressure must be put on the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for better labeling of protective eyewear so that consumers can make informed decisions on their purchases. The sunglasses should be 90 percent to 100 percent UVR-absorbent, he said.

He also told the seminar, sponsored by the New York-based Research to Prevent Blindness, that only 80 percent of the lenses now being implanted in cataract patients are manufactured with ultraviolet radiation-absorbing compounds.

"Since there are approximately 500,000 cataract surgeries each year in the United States, UVR exposure with non-UV-absorbing (protective eyewear) may contribute to a significant health hazard," Werner said.

His research showed that UVR accelerates aging of eye receptors, he said. Cumulative exposure to UVR is also known to accelerate aging of the lens and formation of cataracts.

In a study of eight patients, Werner found that five years of chronic exposure to UVR produced an average loss of vision that was equivalent to about 30 years of normal aging.

"We feel that sunglasses may be very helpful in preventing the damaging part of the light to get to the eyes," Sternberg said.

Sunglasses are also needed that will block out light, he said, adding that a small amount of blue light will damage the retina more than red, green or yellow wavelengths.

"The whole concept of blocking ambient blue light is relatively new," Sternberg said.

Wrong Home Is As Bad As No Home

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who has three children. The youngest is a 3-year-old. Their dog had to be put away due to cancer, so my friend went to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Oakland (Calif.) to get a puppy to adopt.

A volunteer took a 7-week-old puppy out of its cage for my friend to play with, and it was love at first sight! She filled out a long form, then came the oral interview. At the end of the interview, she was told she couldn't have the puppy because it was their policy not to place a dog under 6 months old in a home where

Engagement Announced

CISSIE PITTS — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buford Pitts of Elizabethtown, Ky., who announce her engagement to Greg Stancill, son of Norman Stancill of Winterville and Hilda Phillips of Grifton. The wedding will take place Oct. 22.

Dear Abby

there is a 3-year-old child! Have you ever heard of anything so ridiculous? With the thousands of animals tossed out of cars, neglected and killed because nobody wants them, wouldn't you think the SPCA would be delighted to give a puppy to anyone who was willing to take it?

How dare they judge the suitability of a family based on the age of one of its members! I wonder how many excellent homes have been denied a pet because of this stupid policy.

I would like your thoughts on this, Abby. — BURNED BETTY IN EL SOBRANTE

DEAR BURNED: I called the Oakland SPCA and spoke with the director, Gary Templin, a kind and gentle man. He said, "Yes, that is our policy. Let me explain: Most 3-year-olds regard a small puppy as a 'toy' — they pick it up by its tail, pull its ears and handle it as though it were a stuffed animal. Children that age are not necessarily 'mean'; they simply don't know any better. A 6-month-old puppy can usually fend for itself and poses few problems with a 3-year-old. "But there's another issue," Templin said. "Because these dogs are unwanted to begin with, the SPCA makes every effort to place them in homes where they will not be a problem, because if a dog is returned to us as a 'problem dog,' we cannot place it in another home — we have to kill it."

So, Burned Betty, I hope you now understand why your friend wasn't given that 7-week-old puppy.

The policy makes sense to me, and I enthusiastically applaud Oakland's SPCA for carefully inquiring about the home environment before sending a pet to live there — instead of giving an animal to anyone who walks in and asks for one.

DEAR ABBY: I was shocked at your response to "Divorced Dad," who asked into which restroom he should take his 2-year-old daughter when they were in a public place and she had to use the bathroom. You recommended taking the child to the men's room because if women were using the ladies' room, they would be "outraged" to see a man walk in — even to tend to the needs of his small daughter.

Abby, please never say it's OK for a little girl to go into a men's room — even with her daddy! — SHOCKED IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR SHOCKED: Little boys are taken into ladies' rooms by their mothers, so why shouldn't little girls be taken into men's rooms by their fathers? (Better a small girl in a men's room than a grown man in a ladies' room.)

And by the way, my answer prompted an unsolicited "bravo" from David L. Levy, Esq., the president of The National Council for Children's Rights.

DEAR ABBY: Re the military wife who didn't want guests to smoke in her home: Would she send her husband, commanding officer in the backyard to smoke? Or, if they were living, what about JFK, FDR or Winston Churchill — all smokers? — DOROTHY IN FORT LAUDERDALE

DEAR DOROTHY: Rank has its privileges. I say that the commanding officer, and such luminaries as JFK, FDR and Churchill, would be welcome to light up wherever they please.

Chevy Chase Father Again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chevy Chase and his wife, Jayni, became parents of a daughter for the third time, a spokeswoman said.

A 7-pound, 8-ounce girl was born to the couple Thursday at an undisclosed hospital here, with Chase assisting in his wife's natural childbirth, said Pat Kingsley, a spokeswoman for the comedian. The girl was named Emily.

Chase, 45, and his wife met in 1981 during filming of "Under the Rainbow," where she was a production assistant. They were married in 1982 and have two other daughters, Cydney, 5, and Caley, 3.

Chase, who rose to fame on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," recently completed filming "Fletch II."

Circle To Make State Pledge

The Benevolent Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons will pledge $175 for state scholarships and other projects at the N.C. Branch Convention. The convention will be held in Greenville Saturday.

Nancy NaHouse will present three life memberships to local members at the convention. Annie Turner, Beverly Bartik and Lucy Hanaford served as members of the selection committee.

Jean Weaver, outgoing president, said the convention will be held at Red Oak Christian Church. Activities will include a breakfast, morning session, luncheon and afternoon session.

Dot Harrigan installed new officers including Mrs. NaHouse, president; Ms. Turner, vice president; Betty Tate, treasurer, and Adelaide Shirley, secretary.

In June, $200 was sent to St. Luke's King's Daughters Home in Raleigh in honor of Josephine Rawl's birthday. The gift was given by circle members.

Guests for the meeting were: Mrs. Harrigan, Kathy Rawl and Frances Strawn. New members recognized were Mary Calder, Brenda Strawn and Mrs. Strawn.

A report on the Creative Living Center was given by Mrs. Tate. The circle's next project will be a yard sale scheduled for Nov. 5 at the home of Stella Baker.

The Oct. 26 meeting will be held at the home of Annie Turner.

Toughness Can Surface In 'Grandmother' Mayor

By CATHERINE DRESSLER
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sophie Masloff, Pittsburgh's first female mayor, describes herself as an "old Jewish grandmother" and is known to push her homemade chicken soup and cookies on visitors to her house.

Despite Pittsburgh's hardball ethnic politics, she refuses to be one of the boys.

"The average ethnic man doesn't believe that women have anything on the ball," says Mrs. Masloff, 70, a Democratic loyalist for 50 years and a councilwoman for 12. "Now they're all watching me. They're watching this old Jewish grandmother and everything I do. I'm going to be suspect."

As president of the City Council, next in line to succeed the mayor, she was sworn in May 6, hours after Richard S. Caliguiri, one of the city's most popular mayors, died of a rare disease at the age of 56.

She promptly announced she would report to the mayor's office by 8 a.m. every day, except Tuesdays, when "I get my hair done."

She wasn't kidding. For 20 years, the same hairdresser has styled Mrs. Masloff's hair every Tuesday at 6:30 a.m. at a downtown department store.

One of her first acts as mayor was to demand that several neighborhoods be spruced up, saying the housewife in her saw the need for spring cleaning.

"My friends all say, 'That's enough of this old Jewish grandmother bit.' But it's a fact," she says. "I am a grandmother and I am a housewife, too. I can't say I'm a 35-year-old hot-shot. This is what I am and I just feel that I should acknowledge it right at the start."

She also acknowledges holding some old-world superstitions.

Last January, for example, with city hall abuzz about Caliguiri's ill-health and the forthcoming council president selection, Mrs. Masloff said that amid the political intrigue she was concerned about "Kay nan horre," or "the evil eye" as loosely translated from Yiddish.

"I fear for a black cat and I don't walk under a ladder," she says. "The old folks believed in the evil eye, and while I don't altogether believe it, I don't altogether not believe it."

Mrs. Masloff said some aides feel she would command more respect if more people would just call her mayor.

"I'm Sophie to everybody," she says. "Nobody says 'mayor' and nobody says 'Mrs.'"

Government by Jewish grandmother may be an asset, says Michael Webber, Duquesne University professor of urban history and a specialist on Pittsburgh politics.

"She's projecting this image that she has of this sort of kindly old lady, but I think that underneath there is a kind of toughness that occasionally surfaces," he says.

But Councilwoman Michelle Madoff, one of Mrs. Masloff's most vocal critics and a political opponent, says the mayor's image hurts women and the city.

On a recent talk show, Mrs. Masloff said that if she ever met British industrialist Brian Beazer, who was launching a hostile bid for Pittsburgh-based Koppers Co., she would "scratch his eyes out."

"What does it do for the image of women when she says, 'I'm going to scratch his eyes out?'" Mrs. Madoff asks. "She went on and ranted and raved. She set the women's movement back 50 years."

Mrs. Masloff later said she was joking when she made the remark, but Mrs. Madoff says the incident was just one of many gaffes made by the mayor.

The mayor chose the theme "Sophie's Choice" for an anti-litter campaign, saying the slogan was just a catch phrase when critics familiar with the novel and the movie of the same name said the theme was in poor taste. The book told the story of a Polish woman forced by Nazis to choose which of her two children would be killed.

Mrs. Masloff says bringing cable television to the city was her greatest achievement as a councilwoman. Mrs. Madoff says the mayor accomplished little else and rose through the ranks mostly because she followed party dictates without question.

The mayor's supporters say Mrs. Masloff's loyalty to her constituents is her strength.

"She goes out of her way to help a lot of people," says Rita Wilson Kane, Allegheny County's Register of Wills. "No matter what anyone calls about in her office, she works on every little thing that people ask her to do."

Mrs. Madoff announced Sept. 6 that she would run for mayor. Mrs. Masloff will be mayor until Caliguiri's term expires in January 1990 and she expects to enter the race, although she has not yet made a formal announcement.

Mrs. Madoff, 60, says the similarity between their last names has benefited both at election time.

"She gets elected and I get elected on each other's votes," Mrs. Madoff says. "Every time I'm not running, people say, 'Honey, I voted for you.'"

As mayor, Mrs. Masloff has adopted Caliguiri's top priorities of cutting the city's 4 percent wage tax and advancing Pittsburgh's transformation from a steelmaking center to a corporate and service-oriented city.

She says it has been difficult to follow Caliguiri, a friend and a political mentor.

"He was such a popular mayor," she says. "People expect me to be just like him and that's almost impossible. I'm hoping that when I walk out of here I'll leave behind the same kind of city that Caliguiri left."

The mayor and her husband, Jack, have been married more than 40 years and have a daughter, Linda, who has two children.

The youngest of four children of Romanian immigrants, the former Sophie Freeman grew up in a tenement in the city's Hill District during the Depression.

When she was 16 she graduated from high school and got a job, taking free college courses at night "wherever and whenever" she could. About that time, she joined the Young Democrats, along with Mrs. Kane.

Mrs. Masloff later worked in the Allegheny County Commission of-rice, and then in the county court as a stipendiary, an investigator and an assistant chief clerk. She also served as

in 1976 in a special election and was re-elected in 1977, 1981 and 1985, leading the ballot the last two times.

History Associates To Conduct Members Drive

This year's membership campaign is being conducted by the N.C. Museum of History Associates. A luncheon and orientation session was held last week.

The session for 45 volunteers from eastern North Carolina was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Herring in Kinston.

Attending were members of the museum's Pitt County Committee including Rae Daniels, Mrs. Howard Dawkins Jr., Mrs. Sam Everdt, Mrs. Jack Edwards and Gladys Strauss.

A statewide support group for the N.C. Museum of History, the museum associates provide funds for museum exhibits, artifact purchases, and educational programs in counties throughout the state.

Campaign volunteers viewed a rare set of 12 silver forks made by Charlotte Silversmith Thomas Trotter, 1827-1865. The forks were purchased for $4,200 by the associated with membership funds. The forks are made in the fiddle style with rounded lobes and tipped handles.

Volunteers also heard about several educational resources which the associates are providing.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

EASY RIDER — Somehow riding around in a wagon is easier for 2-year-old Laquana Moon when her babysitter Tiffany Jordan motors her on. Fortunately, for Tiffany, she only takes directions if they seem safe, keeping the two-year-old from being hurt. (AP Laserphoto)

Kids Find Hiding Place In Store

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — A department store manager discovered why his burglar alarm had been ringing off and on for days when he crawled into a suspended ceiling and found three youths stowed away with food, clothing and electronic equipment.

Two of the youths, both 13, ran away from home Sept. 19 and went to the Zayre store, where they climbed into the ceiling and hid until closing hours, police officer Richard Marzilli said.

"When the store closed for the night, they started to set themselves up for a long stay," Marzilli said.

During the nine days, the boys entertained themselves and ate food from the store, police said.

On Monday, the boys persuaded an 11-year-old boy to join them after he got out of school.

Officials found a steam heater, a clock, a video cassette recorder, 21 TV sets, one camera, nine pairs of sneakers, 89 cassette tapes, 34 videotapes, 20 battery packs, a cassette player, a backpack, 17 packs of gum, five sweatshirts, nine travel bags, two sleeping bags, a reading light and cheese crackers.

Even the boys' clothing was taken from the store, authorities said.

Marzilli said he was called to the store when the manager, James Fingles, told him that the burglar alarm had been sounding during the night for more than a week.

But each time police and store personnel checked the store, they could not find any point of forced entry.

On Wednesday morning, Fingles noticed an extension cord leading to a ceiling panel. He climbed up into the suspended ceiling and followed the cord, crawling about 70 feet before coming across the youths, who were surrounded by items from the store.

Marzilli said the extension cord was plugged into a television set and a video cassette recorder "for their entertainment after store hours."

The boys have been charged with juvenile delinquency.

Card of Thanks

We would like to express our deepest gratitude to all the many people who were there for us in our time of need.

All the prayers, cards, letters, flowers, food and offers of sympathy helped a great deal through our mourning.

Also we are very grateful for the many kind gestures made during the preceding years of ill health.

Thank you all for the love and support!

Relay Team Disqualified

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The U.S. men's 400-meter relay team, in turmoil almost from the day it was formed, is out of the Olympics after its first race.

The team, considered the runaway favorite to win the gold medal in Saturday's final, was disqualified for passing the baton out of the exchange zone on the third leg of its first-round heat Friday.

After a review of a videotape of the event, the jury of appeals ruled that Calvin Smith passed the baton to anchor runner Lee McNeill outside the exchange zone.

"The baton was not exchanged before they left the zone," said Brian Poe, an assistant to Michael Gee, secretary of the jury.

The decision means Carl Lewis, who didn't run Friday but was to run the anchor in the final, won't get a chance for a third gold medal.

After the race, but before the disqualification, Smith acknowledged there had been problems on the exchange, saying: "I think the last handoff was not what we wanted it to be."

McNeill, inexperienced at running the anchor leg, said "I was so nervous, my hand was shaking so bad I gave (Smith) a shaky target." McNeill is a former member of the East Carolina University track team.

Judges on the track did not signal an infraction, but three countries — the Soviet Union, France and Nigeria — filed a protest. All three of those countries did not have teams in the U.S. heat but are allowed to protest because they are in the event.

The American team, under the direction of sprint coach Russ Rogers, had been the subject of controversy over the selection of the competitors.

Lewis and his business manager, Joe Douglas, who have had several run-ins with Rogers, had pushed for Joe DeLoach, the Olympic gold medalist at 200 meters and Lewis' training partner, to be included on the team in place of Albert Robinson.

But Robinson had no serious trouble with his exchange Friday.

DeLoach wasn't on the relay team Friday but was scheduled to replace McNeill as the anchor in Saturday's semifinals.

In a bylined column written for USA Today before the disqualification, Lewis argued against running substitutes in the preliminaries.

"I think it would benefit us to run the top team all the way through. I'm not the coach and I'm not telling the coach what to do, but if I was picking the team, I'd run Joe first, Dennis (Mitchell) second, Calvin third and me," he wrote.

Rogers said he felt that the relay team's chances were doomed from the start because of all the turmoil.

"From day to day, I couldn't tell what was going to happen," he said. "Every day it was something new, something different."

All the news wasn't bad for the Americans at Olympic Stadium Friday.

Louise Ritter, in her second Olympics, became the first U.S. woman in 32 years to win the high jump, clearing 6-foot, 8-inches, breaking the Olympic record and equalling the American record she set on July 8 in Austin, Texas.

The 30-year-old from Dallas beat the overwhelming favorite in the competition, defending world champion and world record holder Stefka Kostadinova of Bulgaria, who won (See RELAY, B-6)

Best Laid Plans Didn't Pay Off

By HAL BOCK

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — So much for saving your best for last.

Hoarding faster, more experienced runners for later races, America discovered Friday that sometimes when you do that, you don't get to the later races.

Uncle Sam's men's 400-meter relay team was eliminated in the first heat Friday for a faulty anchor handoff, an exchange between two runners who had limited experience competing together.

The question that occurs immediately is what were two runners with so little experience together doing in that circumstance?

Calvin Smith, the only holdover from the team that set the Olympic record for the event in 1984, had trouble with the handoff to Lee McNeill, who was running the last leg in place of Carl Lewis.

Where was Lewis, who anchored the '84 team and who is merely the fastest 100-meter man now competing in the world?

He was, according to Smith, resting.

Resting? These are the Olympics, the big show, with medals on the line. And in the 100-meter relay, America's best 100-meter runner was resting?

"After the 100 and 200 and the long jumps, Carl needed to rest at this time," Smith said.

And besides, this was just a heat, just a warmup for Saturday's main event, the semifinals and finals. Lewis would be rested and ready later.

The trick, however, was to get to later.

Now, with his last chance to race in the Games destroyed by the disqualification, Lewis can really rest.

Lewis' replacement Friday was McNeill, who rarely has run anchors and who finished eighth in the 100-meter race at the Olympic trials.

These are slender credentials for a crucial assignment. As he waited in the spot Lewis otherwise would have occupied, McNeill might have been, oh, a trifle nervous watching Smith charging toward him, baton extended.

"My hand was shaking so bad," he said, "I gave him a shaky target."

Smith noticed.

"I think the last handoff was not what we wanted it to be," Smith said.

He was entirely right about that.

Three countries — France, Nigeria and the USSR — noticed, too.

None were involved in the heat, but all are entered in the event and protested to the Jury of Appeals. After meeting for about an hour and reviewing video tapes that apparently were quite clear, the officials disqualified the American team.

The midemeanor involved the exchange of the baton in the passing zone.

"The baton has to be in both their hands," said Brian Poe, assistant to Michael Gee, secretary of the Jury. "They took a long time to hand it over."

Would that have happened if Smith had been handing off to Lewis, a man accustomed to running the anchor leg, a man he has worked with before?

We'll never know. What we do know, however, is the last time they made that exchange in an Olympic race, it completed a 400-meter relay

Ragin' Cajuns Visit Ficklen

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When East Carolina football coach Art Baker moved to the subject of this Saturday's football game with Southwestern Louisiana, he observed "Things don't get any better."

The Pirates, coming off a 45-42 loss to Southern Mississippi in the final seconds of play, go up against another Southern independent in the Ragin' Cajuns, who bring a 3-0 record into the game.

Southwestern has beaten Cal State Fullerton, Sam Houston State and Rice in its three games to date, scoring 98 points while allowing only 33.

In contrast, the Pirates, besides losing to Southern Miss, have bowed to Virginia Tech, 27-17, and nationally-ranked South Carolina, 17-0. The Pirates have recorded only one victory, a 52-13 romp over Division I-AA Tennessee Tech, which is still winless on the season.

If history is an indicator of the game, then the Ragin' Cajuns are certainly favored in this Saturday's 1:30 p.m. contest in Ficklen Stadium.

There are perhaps few fields on which the Cajuns perform better. In four previous attempts in Ficklen, Southern has won three times, while splitting the four games played on their own home turf in Lafayette, La., against the Pirates.

Southern maintains a four-game winning streak in the series, too.

"I've seen films of all three of their games," Baker said. "They have a very, very tough defense."

That defense has allowed only 265 yards per game in total offense, led by two all-America candidates end Chris Gannon and tackle Mark Hall.

But perhaps their most dangerous weapon is quarterback Brian Mitchell, who runs and throws equally well.

Southwestern has amassed an average of 298.7 yards a game and Mitchell can claim credit for 189.5 of those. He has rushed for 180 yards and passed for 387, hitting 28 of 56 passes without an interception. He's scored seven touchdowns rushing and passed for two more, giving him responsibility for nine.

"(Mitchell) is the best running quarterback we'll see this year," Baker said. "And he's a good passer, too."

USL runs a double wing offense, but will use the option and pass also.

"They have the ability to score a lot of points," Baker said. "If we can get cranked up and play defense on Saturday, I think it will be an exciting game. They have a lot of momentum coming in, however."

The Pirates will probably be led by quarterback Charlie Libretto, who sparked the Pirates in a come-from-behind effort that nearly pulled out the Southern Mississippi game. Coming off the bench, Libretto passed for 197 yards and three touchdowns against the Golden Eagles, driving the Pirates to two late scores that put them ahead, 42-38, with 1:38 left in the ball game.

Baker, at his weekly press conference Monday, went so far as to say that Libretto had earned the right to work with the first unit during this week's practice. But, he would not confirm that Libretto would get the starting nod over Travis Hunter, who has started in each of the games this year and all of those last season. Baker said that how the two performed in practice this week would decide the issue.

However, the issue could well be decided by the Pirate defense, which has shown that it can be very, very good, or very, very bad. Against South Carolina two weeks ago, the Pirates were almost magnificent, holding the Gamecocks to just 49 yards rushing and 235 passing.

But against Southern Mississippi,

Moore Lets Running Do Talking

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

Timmy Moore lets his running do the talking.

Moore, a senior tailback at Rose High School, is pegged heading in to every game the Rampants play as the player to stop by the opposition. He is sought after, scoffed and banged around until, after finally wearing the opponent down, he begins to stack up the yardage.

To date, Moore has gained 580 yards and scored eight touchdowns on 69 attempts as the Rampants have raced to a 4-0 start on the season.

"It (being the player to stop) doesn't bother me," Moore said. "They're (the opponents) are always gonna talk. It just makes me work harder to get my yards."

Moore in many ways resembles his idol Herschel Walker, not only because of his muscular build but also in the way he runs. He bulls through defenders and, when necessary, will leap over the pile of linemen at the line of scrimmage to gain extra yardage. During the Rampants' 42-14 win earlier this season at Fayetteville Terry Sanford, Moore took to the air at the 4-yard line and landed in the end-zone for a touchdown. Left behind were a pair of defenders who were prepared to tackle Moore at about the 2.

"I go over the top so much because I used to see Herschel do that when he was at Georgia," Moore said. "He was bad. Nobody could stop him."

Moore, unlike Walker, has had to work long hours in the weight room to build his strength. Walker has always denied ever lifting weights, especially in the off-season.

"I've got to work at it to maintain my strength," Moore said.

But Moore has done more than just maintain his strength. He has gradually increased the amount he lifts. While most people begin at an early age bench pressing around 100 pounds, Moore started with 205 pounds in the ninth grade.

By the end of his first year of lifting, Moore had eclipsed the 300-pound plateau. Currently, he lifts 405 pounds, but his goal for the end of the year is to be up to 450 pounds.

Following his performance last Friday in Rose's 52-21 win over Big East foe Northern Nash, Moore was named as the state's player-of-the-week by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. In that game, Moore's best to date this year, the tailback totaled 220 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

"It's a nice honor," Moore said, shrugging his shoulders and bearing a sly grin.

Being named as the top player in the state is a far cry from the backyard football Moore started playing when he was only seven years old. But, according to Moore, it's because of the neighborhood games with his older brothers that he's turned into such a success today.

"I started (playing football) at a young age playing with my older brothers and I was the youngest one out there all the time," Moore said. "All the others were about 14 or 15 so I got banged around right much."

"But by the time I was about 10, they couldn't catch me," Moore said with a laugh.

Moore first began playing organized football in the eighth grade at E.B. Aycock High School. During both his eighth and ninth-grade years Moore played as a defensive back and saw a little action at the tailback position.

"I really wanted to play tailback," Moore said. "But if defensive end was the only place I could play I just did it. I really just wanted to play."

After leaving Aycock, Moore came to Rose where he played mainly as a defensive end during his sophomore season, while last year he saw split time with at tailback with Axel Smith.

"I usually came in on third

Workshop For Special Olympics Basketball

Team basketball will be introduced this year into the Greenville/Pitt County Special Olympics program, and an advanced level workshop will be held Saturday in connection with it.

The workshop, for those interested in becoming certified coaches in the program, will be conducted by East Carolina University basketball coach Mike Steele, who also serves as the volunteer head coach for North Carolina Special Olympics basketball. Pirate assistant coaches will also participate in the workshop, which will run from 8:30 a.m. until 12:15 p.m. Advanced level skills in offense and defense will be covered.

The workshop will be held in Minges Coliseum on the basketball court. For more information on this or other Special Olympic programs, contact 830-4551.

Rose Kickers Down Hunt, 4-0

WILSON — David Leisten scored twice to lead Rose High School's soccer team to a 4-0 victory over Wilson Hunt Thursday in Big East Conference action.

Patrick Joyner scored the first goal in the opening period off a corner kick by John Bolen.

In the second half, Marty Measamer scored at the 59:02 mark, assisted by Bolen and Michael Thompson. Leisten scored the first of his two goals at 66:18, assisted by Measamer, then added his second shortly thereafter.

Goalie Scott Thomas recorded the shutout for the Rampants.

"Everyone got fired up about things that didn't have anything to do with the game," Rose coach Charlie Harvey said in reference to a large number of cautions handed out by the officials to both teams. "This was a big win for us, though, a real team effort. We stuck together and played well as a group."

Rose is now 6-4 overall and 5-1 in the Big East. The Rampants host undefeated Northeastern on Tuesday.

Cox, Farmville, Aycock Take Wins

CHICOD — Chris Smith's 55-yard touchdown run highlighted A.G. Cox' 44-0 romp over Chicod in a junior high football game Thursday.

Chicod falls to 0-3 and returns to action Thursday at Farmville.

BETHEL — Farmville Middle School handed Bethel-Wellcome Middle School a 22-18 defeat in junior high football action Thursday.

Brandon Terrell scored on a 23-yard run for Farmville with just over two minutes remaining to provide the winning points for the Jaguars. It was one of three touchdowns for Terrell on the night.

Farmville moves to 2-0 on the year and returns to action Thursday at home against Chicod.

ROCKY MOUNT — E.B. Aycock's ninth grade football team captured a 28-0 victory over Edwards Junior High School of Rocky Mount Thursday.

Aaron McKinney carried the opening kickoff back 80 yards and Mitch Jones added the two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead. Andre Williams then took an 80-yard pass from Jones into the end zone in the first period for a 14-0 lead that stood the rest of the half.

Dwight Sheppard scored on a 25-yard run in the third period and Melvin McLawhorn went 30 yards in the final period. McKinney added the PAT after the final score.

The game was the opener for the 9th grade team, which is at home against Bertie on Thursday.

Conley Tops Cross Country Meet

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's cross country teams took a pair of meets from Wilson Hunt Thursday.

Conley's boys won their meet, 18-44, while the girls shut out Hunt, 15-50. Adrain McLawhorn won the boys' event in 18:50, while Jason Wing finished second in 18:54. Conley's next runner was Louie Holland, who took fourth in 19:42.

Other Conley runners included Mark Mallison, fifth in 19:45; Chris Weathington, sixth in 20:36; Rodrick Walton, seventh in 20:52; Jason Osborne, eighth in 20:55; Nathan Wright, 10th in 21:13; Scott Hudson, 12th in 21:22; John Dunn, 13th in 21:27; Kareem Daniels, 14th in 21:41; Doug Hill, 18th in 23:44; Eddie Bonner, 19th in 25:59; and Norman Pierce, 20th in 28:32.

Gretha Harris led Conley's girls in 21:59, as they took the first five places. Others in the top five were Kim Colson, second in 23:59; Hope Harrington, third in 24:15; Tricia Smith, fourth in 25:05; and Amy Allen, fifth in 26:23.

Other Conley runners included Stacy Burhans, sixth in 28:29; Julie Smith, seventh in 30:01; Wendy Dixon, eighth in 30:03; Sharon Beacham, 10th in 31:45; and Kim Pakowski, 11th in 33:12.

Conley's boys are now 7-2, while the girls are 6-2. Conley travels to West Carteret next Thursday.

Qualifying Today At N. Wilkesboro

NORTH WILKESBORO (AP) — The pole position and Terry Labonte's track record will be at stake Friday in the first round of qualifying for Sunday's Holly Farms 400 at North Wilkesboro Speedway.

Labonte set the NASCAR Winston Cup one-lap track record of 117.322 miles per hour last April prior to his second straight victory on the five-eighths of a mile banked asphalt track.

The first 10 starting positions in the 30-car field are to be decided by Friday's opening session at 3 p.m. The remaining berth will be determined by final trials at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

The 400-lap race with awards of $353,360 and a winner's share that could top $50,000 is to get the green flag at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Bill Elliott, Rusty Wallace and Dale Earnhardt are in a close contest for the 1988 driving championship. Elliott leads Wallace by 124 points with Earnhardt next, 140 points off the pace.

The top 30 in the standings, and all of the year's 13 race winners except Bobby Allison, sidelined by an injury, will be among the 48 entries trying to qualify.

Elliott and Wallace have history working against them as opposed to Earnhardt. Neither has won the series championship, which Earnhardt won last year for the third time. They also have yet to win at North Wilkesboro, where Earnhardt has won twice.

The weekend begins with the Lowe's 150 for NASCAR's Modified Division. A 24-car field will be decided in Friday and Saturday qualifying.

NCHSAA President Dies In Goldsboro

GOLDSBORO (AP) — Patrick M. Best, president of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association board of directors and principal of Goldsboro High School, died early Thursday of an apparent heart attack. He was 54.

Best had been principal of Goldsboro High School since 1972. He had served on the board for the last five years and was in his first term as NCHSAA president after serving as vice president last year.

"We'd just spent all day with him at the regional meeting in Goldsboro," said Charlie Adams, executive director of the NCHSAA in a telephone interview. "It came as quite a shock to us."

Adams said the association and the state had lost a strong supporter of athletics.

"Pat believed very strongly that athletics did more to build character and self discipline and he felt very strongly that the opportunity should exist for every child to participate in sports," Adams said.

UCLA, USC Face League Foes

By HERSCHEL NISSESON
AP Football Writer

UCLA and Southern California, pointing toward a Nov. 19 showdown that could have national championship implications, are headed in different directions this weekend for important Pac-10 games.

Second-ranked UCLA travels to Seattle, one of the few places the Bruins haven't had much success lately, to face No. 16 Washington.

"There's no place in our conference more difficult to play than at Seattle," Coach Terry Donahue says. "You have to worry about the weather and noise from the fans."

Meanwhile, Southern Cal coach Larry Smith, who left Tucson for Los Angeles last season, returns with his third-ranked Trojans for a night game against once-beaten Arizona, which has designs of its own on the Top Twenty.

"We now go from the frying pan into the fire," Smith says in the wake of last week's impressive victory over Oklahoma. "I know they'll be really up for us, so we must play at championship level."

Besides the UCLA-Washington game, there is one other contest between members of the Associated Press Top Twenty. It takes place in Gainesville, Fla., where No. 14 LSU, smarting from last week's last-minute loss to Ohio State, meets No. 17 Florida. Neither team has lost a Southeastern Conference game.

Meanwhile, No. 1-ranked Miami entertains Missouri, No. 4 Auburn plays host to North Carolina, fifth-ranked Notre Dame is at home to Stanford under the lights, No. 6 Florida State visits Tulane for a night game, seventh-ranked West Virginia is at Virginia Tech and No. 8 South Carolina has a home game with Division I-AA Appalachian State.

Rounding out the Top Ten, ninth-ranked Nebraska entertains Nevada-Las Vegas and No. 10 Oklahoma plays host to Iowa State.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 Clemson is idle, No. 12 Alabama is at Kentucky, Tulsa at No. 13 Oklahoma State under the lights, Mississippi at No. 15 Georgia, Fullerton State at No. 18 Wyoming, No. 19 Michigan at Wisconsin and Oregon at No. 20 San Diego State at night.

UCLA is only 1-3-2 in its last six conference openers and 0-2-1 in its last three visits to Seattle.

"The true test of a football team is its ability to win on the road," Donahue says. "If you're going to win a national or conference championship, you've got to win in Seattle."

UCLA leads the nation in scoring (52 points a game) and total offense (546-yard average) and quarterback Troy Aikman is second in passing efficiency.

Washington's Cary Conklin, the only new starting quarterback in the conference, is looking forward to Aikman's visit.

"It's a great opportunity for me to show what I can do going head-to-head with a guy who is a Heisman Trophy candidate," says Conklin, who has completed 36 of 68 passes for 481 yards, four touchdowns and four interceptions (in the same number of games, Aikman is 44-of-65 for 640 yards, nine TDs and one interception).

"Obviously, Troy Aikman is a very good quarterback on a very good team. But I think we have a very good team, too, and I'm looking forward to showing people what I can do."

Southern Cal is 13-1 against Arizona but the last five meetings have been decided by seven points or less and the Trojans' only loss was in 1981 to a Smith-coached Arizona team.

"I guess I'm going to coach with more fear and motivation from the standpoint that I know that their crowd really gets up for the big games," Smith says. "It's going to be very difficult to hear, and we've really got to have poise, and I think the poise has got to start with me."

LSU blew a 33-20 lead in the final two minutes at Ohio State, losing 36-33. The Tigers face a 4-0 Florida team which hasn't yielded a point in three home games but so far has played two SEC also-rans and two Division I-AA teams.

The game will be a contrast in styles between LSU's junior quarterback Tommy Hodson and Florida's sophomore tailback Emmitt Smith.

Hodson, who already owns the LSU career record of 39 touchdowns passes, has thrown 134 straight passes without an interception dating back to last season. Smith has rushed for more than 100 yards in 12 of his 14 collegiate starts.

"They are obviously going to let Emmitt Smith win the game for them," LSU coach Mike Archer says of Florida's mode of attack. "They will throw enough so you can't put 10 men on the line. If you don't stop Emmitt Smith, they are going to beat you."

As expected, Florida coach Galen Hall says Hodson "is probably the finest quarterback in the nation. We have not faced anything on offense which is close to as capable as LSU is, and that is scary. I think they have one of the best five or six teams in college football."

In addition, LSU is 4-0-1 in its last five visits to Florida Field.

Miami and Missouri haven't met since 1950 but Miami coach Jimmy Johnson was 3-2 against the Tigers during his days at Oklahoma State.

Oklahoma was ranked No. 1 late last season when Missouri visited Norman and lost a 17-13 squeaker.

"It's great to have the opportunity to play the No. 1 team in the nation," Missouri coach Woody Widenhofer says. "I know our players are excited about it and are looking forward to the challenge."

"Miami has a great football team. They always seem to find a way to win the game, and that's what it's all about. We'll just have to go down there humble and maybe good things will happen."

Miami has won its last 35 regular-season games, the second longest streak since World War I (Oklahoma ran off 45 straight). The Hurricanes also are old hands at stopping the wishbone and Missouri runs a variation known as the flexbone.

North Carolina, 0-3, already has lost to a pair of teams currently in the Top Ten — Oklahoma and South Carolina — and Coach Mack Brown says his players are struggling.

"They feel like they're playing one of the nation's toughest schedules and they've just not been able to get on their feet," Brown says.

"Playing a team like Auburn will be both good and bad for our team. It's good in that we will have to be ready to play or face being embarrassed by one of the best teams in the country. But it's not so good because we know we could go in there and play our best game of the season and still get beat."

The Pirates gave up 592 yards in total offense, 307 rushing and 286 passing — including a 64-yard drive that won the ball game. At one point, thanks to a sack and a penalty, the Pirates had Southern facing a third down and 24 at their own 22 only to let them out of the corner.

Ironically, the Pirate defense had held Southern without a first down on the previous series to get the ball back for Libretto and the offense to take it in for the lead.

The Pirates have three offensive players pushing for milestones in the game. Reggie McKinney will, with one net yard rushing, surpass the 1,000-yard mark for his career.

Hunter, with 2,584 yards in total offense, needs just 147 yards to move into 10th place on the all-time career list. Currently sixth in passing yards with 1,951, he needs just 26 more to reach fifth place. Libretto, with 1,486 yards, is in seventh place, well behind Hunter.

Hunter, too, is fifth in pass completions with 147, needing just five to catch Kevin Ingram in fourth place. Libretto is seventh with 114 completions and needs 19 to move into sixth place.

The game is the second of three straight home contests for the Pirates. The third, on Oct. 8, finds the nationally-ranked Mountaineers of West Virginia visiting Ficklen.

Southwestern, meanwhile, visits Louisiana Tech.

Rose, Williamston Capture Victories

WILSON — Wilson Hunt handed Rose High School's girls' tennis team its first loss of the season Thursday, gaining a 5-4 win in a hard-fought match.

Three matches in the singles went to split sets in the contest. Rose, too, was without its number one singles player, Paige Powell, who was unavailable for play Thursday.

Now 8-1 overall and 7-1 in Big East play, Rose is at home to Northeastern on Tuesday.

Summary:

- Jennifer Powell (R) d. Debbie Williamson 6-2, 6-1.

PLYMOUTH — Williamston maintained its undefeated record in the Northeastern 2-A Conference with a 9-0 high school tennis victory over Plymouth Thursday.

downs or short yardage downs," Moore said. "Most of the time I averaged around nine or 10 carries a game."

That is until the playoffs came around. During post-season play last season, Moore was the primary tailback used in the Rampant offense as he averaged around 20 carries per contest.

The Rampants finished last season with an 11-1 record, including a perfect regular season mark, leaving little room for improvement this year. But Moore said he and all the Rampants still plan to better the record set by the '87 club.

"Our goal is to go all the way to the state championship without a loss," Moore said. "You just can't do any better than that."

And what's next for Moore after that? For now nobody knows, including Moore. He is currently considering attending East Carolina, North Carolina, N.C. State and South Carolina. His hopes are to play both football and baseball, another sport which Moore excels in.

"I'm gonna wait until the season is over before I decide," Moore said. "After that I'll sit down and go over the situation with my mother and see what she wants me to do and go from there."

No matter where Moore ends up, the players who try to stop him will quickly get his message, loud and clear.

The win moves the Lady Tigers to 10-2 overall and 9-0 in the conference. Williamston returns to action at Tarboro on Monday.

Summary:

Jags Drop Two; Conley Splits

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central dropped a pair of high school volleyball matches Thursday in a tri-match against North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton.

North Pitt won the opening match 15-1, 15-6.

The leading servers for Farmville Central were Darlene Vick with three, while North Pitt was led by Angie House had 13 to lead North Pitt.

In the second match, Ayden-Grifton handed Farmville a 15-3, 15-7 loss.

Diane Hudson had four service points for the Lady Jaguars while Keshia Jones had nine for the Lady Chargers.

Farmville falls to 1-5 in the conference and 1-9 overall. The Lady Jaguars return to action Tuesday along with Pamlico County for a tri-match at North Pitt.

Morris Cries Ouch After Poor Week

Woody Peele

This week, it was Tom Morris' turn to say "Ouch!" Morris was burned in last week's picks and as a result fell from a two-game lead into a three-game deficit in this week's standings.

Vickie Spivey took advantage of Morris' 3-9 record to vault past him into first place with a 37-10 record while Morris falls into a tie for second with Tom Baines. They both have 34-13 records.

Tim Chandler has moved into third place at 32-15, while I am next at 31-16. Greg Laudick continued to hold us all up with a 28-19 record.

This week, there's room for more changes, as we will see.

Turning to the high school games of this week, a review of last week's picks saw a 7-2 record, which brings me to 24-12 on the year.

There are several important games this week, led off by Rocky Mount visiting Rose.

The Rampants go into the game with a perfect 4-0 record while Rocky Mount comes in at 3-1. But when these two meet the records usually go out the window. This is the "Big One" for these two, and the winner will be in great shape for the rest of the year.

Last week, I went against Rose and was embarrassed. This week, I hope Rose doesn't embarrass me — the Rampants to win, 21-7.

Charles B. Aycock visits Farmville Central in an Eastern Plains game. The Jaguars are still reeling from injuries and trying to regain their feet. Last week, South Lenoir shocked them. This week, if there is to be a shock, it will be the Jaguars doing it. My pick is Aycock, 27-12.

Conley plays host to West Carteret in a Coastal Conference game. The Vikings were pummeled by Havelock last week and this may be the time to work out some of their frustrations. West Carteret is having little success this week and probably views the Conley game as a chance to turn things around. But Conley is still the pick, 14-6.

In other area games, I like Chocowinity over Jamesville, 13-8; Havelock over Washington, 35-21; Hertford County over Roanoke, 42-19; Plymouth over Williamston, 28-7; and Greene Central over Pamlico, 22-7.

The panel takes on the Ayden-Grifton game with North Pitt. This one will probably go a long way toward settling the Eastern Plains Conference title. North Pitt would seem to be the only team that can stand in the Chargers' way. The panel goes with Ayden-Grifton by a 6-0 margin. My pick for the score is the Chargers by 28-7.

East Carolina tries to snap back after throwing away a victory against Southern Mississippi last week against Southwestern Louisiana in Ficklen Stadium. But the Pirates have had little success against the Ragin' Cajuns, losing their last four games with USL. ECU has won only one of five games against them in Ficklen.

So, it's somewhat of a surprise that the panel is only 4-2 for Southwestern, with Greg and Tom Morris picking the Pirates. I see it as a 35-17 win for the Ragin' Cajuns.

Our other consensus picks: Duke over Vanderbilt; Syracuse over Maryland; Florida over Louisiana State; Michigan State over Iowa; Arkansas over Texas Christian; N.C. State and Georgia Tech, a toss-up; Auburn over North Carolina; California over San Jose; Notre Dame over Stanford, and Tennessee over Washington State.

Thompson Gains Therapy In The Telling Of His Story

CHARLOTTE (AP) — It was a somber and emotional moment, as the handsome athlete stood to face the crowd — an audience much smaller than many he has known, though at least as appreciative in its own quiet way.

"I'm David Thompson," the athlete said, "and this is my story."

What followed for the next 30 minutes was a powerful testimonial, gentle and matter-of-fact, delivered with composure, but also with traces of pain.

"I had the ability to be one of the greatest basketball players in the history of the game, and I blew it," he said. "It's painful looking back. ... But this is good therapy."

The therapy comes in the telling of his story — how 15 years ago this fall, he was emerging as perhaps the finest athlete North Carolina had ever known.

A Shelby native, he was the youngest of 11 children in a strict Baptist family, and he had played basketball since the age of 5.

He was recruited by colleges across the country, and he chose N.C. State, where his team went 27-0 his sophomore year, and won the national championship in 1974, when he was a junior.

Thompson moved on to stardom for the NBA's Denver Nuggets, once scoring 73 points in a game (more than any other player except for Wilt Chamberlain). That same year, 1978, he negotiated what was then the most lucrative contract in NBA history.

"Four million dollars over five years," he said Thursday. "I thought I was set for life."

But something else had happened by then.

Thompson had become a daily user of cocaine — an addiction that he broke less than eight months ago, which he admits is far too short a time to pronounce himself recovered.

He has been hired by the Charlotte Hornets, an expansion team that will soon begin play in the NBA, to help fulfill the team's public service obligation.

He is supposed to talk about the pain of a life squandered on drugs.

Thursday's speech, his third this week, was essentially a tune-up for those that lie ahead.

He addressed a nonprofit organization called the Uptown Crime Awareness and Prevention Association — businesspeople, mostly, who listened intently to his words.

Next week, he begins a series of appearances in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools, and that is where he believes he can do the most good.

"Talking to kids," he said. "I just want to tell them, it's easy to get involved with drugs. It's hard to get out."

Thompson, 34, said he traces his own drug problems to alcohol. Beer parties in his early years of college led to daily drinking — sometimes heavy — by the time he was a junior.

But lots of college kids party, and Thompson wasn't worried. He continued to drink during his first year as a pro, and then came his initial encounter with cocaine.

"The physical demands were great in the NBA," he remembered Thursday. "I played more games my rookie season than in all my years of college. I remember when we went into the playoffs, I said to another player, 'I'm mentally and physically tired.' He said to me, 'I've got just the thing.'"

Thompson said the other player poured a couple of lines of white powder.

"I tried it, and I liked it," Thompson said. "And that powder was cocaine."

By 1978, his third season in the NBA, Thompson said he had become a daily user.

By 1979, he had begun to freebase — smoking cocaine instead of sniffing it — and before long, he says, he was spending about $2,000 a week on his habit.

But there were other costs that proved to be even greater.

As Thompson tells it, his basketball abilities dropped off after 1978, and he became a kind of absentee husband and father, often spending his time in a hotel room, alone with his drugs and his deepening addiction.

He tried several times to break the habit, but didn't hit bottom until last year.

"I had an altercation with my wife," he said, swallowing hard at what is probably his most painful memory.

"I ended up spending four months in jail. That was the low point of my life — in jail for domestic violence."

He said he became determined then to make a new start, and he has.

He has no illusions about the difficulties ahead — the temptations that forever haunt the addict.

But Thursday was a morning of support and warm applause, as one after another, the people in the crowd came forward to shake his hand, to praise him for his candor.

One of those people was Carl Scheer, general manager of the Charlotte Hornets, who, 10 years ago, had managed the Denver Nuggets when Thompson was their star.

"I told him," Scheer said Thursday, "that I had been there the night when he scored 73 points, and I was awfully proud of him then. But I was never more proud than I was today."

What They Said

"I played well in this camp, better than any other guard. That's not the question. It's because I wasn't white enough to make this team. If I was a white boy, I'd still be here." — Kevin Williams, who was cut by the NBA expansion team, the Miami Heat.

Bosox Regain Confidence, Clinch Tie For East Flag

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Red Sox admit it. They felt what the rest of the American League East thought: Boston could blow it.

Not any more. The Red Sox clinched a tie for the division title Thursday night, routing the Cleveland Indians 12-0.

"We were starting to sweat a little bit," Jody Reed said. "The pressure's off us now."

The Red Sox can win their second championship in three seasons tonight with a win in Cleveland. Roger Clemens, 9-0 lifetime against the Indians, will start for Boston.

Milwaukee and New York are on the verge of elimination. Just to tie, the Brewers and Yankees need to win all their remaining games and have Boston lose its final three to the Indians. Detroit, which was idle, was chased from the race.

The Yankees kept their slim chances alive with a 5-1 victory over Baltimore.

Elsewhere, AL West champion Oakland beat Minnesota 6-2, Seattle stopped Texas 5-1 and Kansas City defeated Chicago 7-6 in 10 innings.

The Red Sox, who had lost three in a row at home to Toronto, held a pregame meeting before crushing Cleveland. The message: relax.

"We talked it up a little before the game, but maybe we felt a little anxiety," Marty Barrett said. "You may joke and laugh, but what happened against Toronto may stay in the back of your mind."

Ellis Burks erased those negative thoughts. He hit a three-run double that capped a five-run third inning and had an RBI single during a seven-run seventh.

Mike Boddicker retired the first 16 batters and coasted to a three-hitter. He is 13-15 overall, but 7-3 since Boston got him in a trade with Baltimore on July 29.

"I was just trying to keep us in the ballgame," Boddicker said. "Now we have to win tomorrow and get it over with."

The Red Sox are 8-2 against Cleveland this year.

"We came in loose and we weren't too worried at all," Boddicker said. "We knew once we got rid of Toronto, we'd be all right with the change of scenery."

Cleveland manager Doc Edwards agreed.

"I think coming on the road was the best thing that could have happened to them, get away from that pressure," he said.

Rod Nichols, 1-7, took the loss. His defense didn't help as a two-out, bases-loaded error by first baseman Terry Francona produced the game's first run in the third. Todd Benzinger followed with an RBI single and Burks hit his three-run double.

Jim Rice got his 2,400th career hit with an RBI single in the seventh. He is third on Boston's all-time hit list behind Carl Yastrzemski (3,419) and Ted Williams (2,654).

Yankees 5, Orioles 1
Don Mattingly and Ken Phelps hit home runs and New York maintained its hopes by winning in Baltimore.

Phelps hit a two-run homer, his 23rd, in the fourth inning. Mattingly hit a solo shot in the seventh, his 18th of the season and third in three days.

Richard Dotson, 12-9, allowed five hits in seven innings and Dave Righetti got his 25th save.

Mark Williamson, 5-8, was the loser. Cal Ripken hit his 23rd home run for the Orioles.

Athletics 6, Twins 2
Oakland won its club-record 102nd game as Jose Canseco drove in two runs to increase his major league RBI lead to 122.

Walt Weiss hit three singles and drove in two runs to help the Athletics win in Minnesota. Oakland need one victory in its last three games to break the record for victories by an AL West team, set by Kansas City in 1977.

Curt Young, 11-8, won for the fifth time in six decisions. Fred Toliver, 7-6, took the loss.

Royals 7, White Sox 6
Pinch-hitter Ed Hearn singled home the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning as Kansas City beat visiting Chicago.

record of 37.83 seconds in 1984 at Los Angeles.

America's patchwork quartet Friday consisted of Dennis Mitchell, Albert Robinson, Smith and McNeill and they won their heat in a much slower 38.97. You don't expect a run at the record from a heat team. But you also don't expect the kind of trouble the Americans had.

The makeup of the 400 team has been mired in controversy for some time.

Lewis, carrying the clout of his many medals, conducted a campaign for Joe DeLoach, his running partner from the University of Houston and the Santa Monica Track Club and the man who beat him here in the 200.

Sam Bell, the influential track coach from the University of Indiana, pushed for his man, Robinson. Both were included in the roster of runners as America arrived at these Games oozing sprint speed.

The rules allow two substitutions from the first heat to the finals and the plan was for six runners — Lewis and DeLoach would be the others — to compete. And when they got to the last race, Lewis would be waiting to run the last leg.

They overlooked one tiny detail, though.

You have to get to the final before you can run in it.

Dire Predictions For U.S. Proved To Be Off The Mark

SEOL, South Korea (AP) — To those who dismissed the chances of America's Olympic boxers, Coach Ken Adams offers his thanks. "Almost everybody said this team was not going to do well," said Adams. "I think that had more effect on the guys than anything else, just to prove them wrong."

With six of the 12 U.S. fighters who began the marathon tournament two weeks ago now in the finals — and two others owning bronze medals — Adams could be excused for gloating about his team's success.

A squad of boxers that many wrote off as marginally talented when it was selected in July is now in position to duplicate or better the U.S. haul of five gold medals at the 1976 Montreal Olympics, the last games where Eastern European and American boxers competed against each other.

Three U.S. boxers fight for gold medals Saturday, and three others fight in Sunday bouts.

"We showed everyone up," said Adams. "I think now all they can say are good things about these guys."

After a demoralizing 1-2 start that saw middleweight Anthony Hemrick disqualified for not showing up on time for his first fight and Kelce Banks knocked cold in the first round of his initial bout, the U.S. team rebounded to place eight fighters in medal matches.

Going into Saturday's first six gold medal finals, American fighters are 3-6, the best overall record of the competition, and have twice as many fighters in the finals as any other team.

"The press gave us no credit," said heavyweight Ray Mercer. "We knew we were capable of doing this good. We were surprised the media put us down."

American fighters have seemed to do particularly well in the third round of most fights, where they generally pick up the action and see their opponents fade.

Both the fighters and coaches credit an intensive six-week training camp regime, first at Fort Bragg, N.C., and later in the mountains around Fort Huachuca, Ariz., for getting them in top fighting shape.

"I think we've shown our conditioning is much better than anyone else's here," said Adams, who took over as head coach from Tom Coulter after being reinstated by an arbitrator a month into training camp.

Assistant Coach Hank Johnson, though, gives credit to a more intangible factor.

"The talent is there, but what we really have is cohesiveness," said Johnson. "It's hard to put in words, but it's something that really brings tears to your eyes when you think of it."

Mercer tops Saturday's six-fight card when he meets South Korean heavyweight Baik Hyun-man before an expected sellout crowd of 7,200 people at the Chamshil Student Gymnasium.

American fighters are 3-1 against Koreans and are widely booed by the largely Korean crowd no matter who they fight. Mercer further gained the crowd's displeasure last weekend when he ran threw the arena with Hembrick, waving an American flag, prior to a U.S.-Korean matchup.

"The crowd's no problem," said Mercer, a hard-hitting, 27-year-old Army sergeant who has scored three knockouts in three Olympic fights. "I don't dislike anybody. I just want to win the gold."

The Mercer-Baik fight is one of two U.S.-Korea fights for gold medals. Korea advanced three fighters to the finals, as did East Germany, while the Soviet Union, which won its first 14 fights, has only two finalists, the same number as Bulgaria and Canada.

Breaks Up Double Play

Smith's Wins Aren't Many, But He's Glad To Be 12-10

MONTREAL (AP) — His record is just 12-10 this season, but Montreal's Bryn Smith has much to be thankful for.

For one thing, he stayed healthy on a staff plagued by injuries. For another, he has usually been treated to some run support, an unusual break for Expos pitchers.

His good fortune continued night when he allowed five hits in six innings in Montreal's 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs in one of only two National League games Thursday night. In the other, Houston beat Atlanta 5-4.

"I guess I did get those breaks in terms of runs at times this year, but that's something you can't control," Smith said. "I had games like everybody else when I got nothing."

"Tonight I was lucky we got five and came back after getting down (2-0)."

Smith's winning effort concluded his best season since 1985, but his concern was not for his own numbers.

"I'm not on a salary drive, and I didn't come here to accomplish things for myself," he said in an almost angry tone. "My goal was to come here and win a division and we didn't do that."

"That's the only number that really counts."

In Smith's case, however, some of his personal numbers are telling, particularly for someone who has had a suspect arm in recent years.

He started 32 times and pitched 198 innings, a figure that surprised everyone but him.

"I felt confident in spring training I'd be a workhorse and go every fifth day barring injury," he said.

Smith gave up a pair of runs in the first, as Shawn Dunston and Mitch Webster led off the game with triples, but recovered to blank the Cubs until Jeff Parrett came on to start the seventh.

Tim Burke, the fourth Montreal pitcher, worked 1 1/3 innings to earn his 18th save.

Andres Galarraga hit a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the first and the Expos took the lead with three runs in the second against Mike Bielecki, 2-2, who lasted just two innings.

Tom Foley doubled with one out and Mike Fitzgerald followed with his fifth homer. Jeff Huson then singled, was sacrificed to second by Smith, and scored on Otis Nixon's single.

"This is his (Bielecki's) first bad start, but he really didn't have anything tonight," Cubs manager Don Zimmer said.

Galarraga beat out an infield hit with two out in the fifth, and scored on Hubie Brooks' double.

The Cubs got two runs in the eighth on Vance Law's 10th homer and Andre Dawson's RBI single.

Astros 5, Braves 4

Mike Scott won for the first time in six career decisions at Atlanta, allowing four hits in seven innings, and Kevin Bass had three RBI.

Scott, 14-8, struck out five and walked none, breaking a personal five-game losing streak. Dave Smith worked two innings to earn his 27th save.

Houston trailed 3-1 after three innings, but tied the game against John Smoltz, 2-7, in the fifth. Hatcher singled and took third on Gerald Young's single. After Young stole second, Bass hit a two-run single.

The Braves lost for the eighth time in nine games.

North Pitt, Conley Take Wins

BETHEL — John Caton scored two touchdowns in leading North Pitt to a 29-12 junior varsity football victory over Ayden-Grifton Thursday night.

Ayden-Grifton struck first, scoring in the first period. That came on a six-yard run by Antonio Moore for a 6-0 lead.

North Pitt tied it up on a Caton run of six yards in the second period and it went to halftime at 6-6.

In the third period, Ayden-Grifton resumed the lead on a two-yard run by William Hill at 12-6. But Shan Daniels scored from a yard out and then ran the two-point point after for a 14-12 lead.

North Pitt added two more touchdowns in the fourth period. Caton scored from nine yards out and Chris Sawyer ran over the PAT to make it 21-12. Mike Battle then returned an interception 45 yards for the final score, with Caton running over the PAT.

Daniels finished the game with 105 yards on 22 carries for North Pitt while Ayden-Grifton quarterback Ben Gaskins hit on five of eight passes for 114 yards.

North Pitt is now 3-1 on the year.

D.H. Conley.....32
West Carteret.....28

MOREHEAD CITY — D.H. Conley won his 15th game in a row with 32-28 win over West Carteret in high school JV football action Thursday.

Stuart Roach opened up the scoring with a 10-yard run, but the two-point conversion try failed to make it 6-0.

Roach added four more touchdowns for the Vikings, scoring on runs of two yards, 20 yards, a 88-yard kickoff return and a 12-yard run to clinch the win.

Brian Smith passed to Derrick Cox for the two-point conversion on the final score.

Conley led 18-8 at the half but early in the third quarter, West Carteret pulled within 18-14. Roach then returned the ensuing kickoff for the score.

Conley moves to 5-0 overall and returns to action at home against North Lenoir Thursday.

C.B. Aycock.....35
Farmville C.....20

PIKEVILLE — Charles B. Aycock took an early lead and held it as the Baby Falcons gained a 35-20 junior varsity football win over Farmville Central Thursday night.

Aycock scored in the first period on a four-yard run and added a two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead.

Aycock scored again in the second quarter on a 42-yard run. Farmville answered that with a one-yard run by Kelvin Willoughby and a conversion run by Bartrell Fields, trimming the lead to 14-8.

Aycock scored again in the third period on a 44-yard run, but Farmville answered with a 12-yard pass from Jerry Baker to Fields to up the score to 20-14.

Then, in the final period, Aycock scored from the four and added the conversion. Farmville again answered with an 82-yard pass from Baker to Fields, cutting the lead to 28-20. But Aycock scored with eight seconds left on a one-yard run and added a PAT kick for the final margin.

The loss dropped Farmville to 2-1 on the season.

Brown, Heels Are Facing Another Tough Contest

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — North Carolina Coach Mack Brown, his rebuilding team battered by a murderous early-season schedule, decided to phone his brother and ask him what advice he had for Saturday's game against Auburn.

"I talked to Watson on Sunday and asked him what to do," Brown said. "Watson used to coach for (Auburn Coach) Pat Dye, and he's played against Auburn. His advice to me was, 'Don't go.'"

Watson Brown coaches at Vanderbilt, which lost to Auburn 31-9 and 45-18 the last two years. Brother Mack and his team could be in for the same treatment Saturday.

Auburn, 3-0, is scoring an average of 38 points per game while allowing less than eight. On the other hand, North Carolina, 0-3, is scoring about two touchdowns a game while giving up an average of 32 points a contest.

"We know we could go in there and play our best game of the season and still get beat," said Brown, in his first season at North Carolina. "We know we're going to get beat up Saturday, but we'll have to bounce back from it and get ready to start our conference schedule the following weekend."

The Tar Heels probably can't wait to return to the more friendly confines of the Atlantic Coast Conference. They already have lost to

No. 8 South Carolina and No. 10 Oklahoma, as well as a 38-34 upset loss to Louisville last week.

Auburn had to rally last year for a 20-10 victory over the Tar Heels in Chapel Hill. Kickoff Saturday is set for 1:30 p.m. CDT at Jordan-Hare Stadium.

The Tigers' have thrived on the big play this season, especially sophomore tailback James Joseph, who missed most of 1987 with an injured knee. He has runs of 76, 60 and 37 yards, as well as an 85-yard touchdown reception which tied the longest mark in Auburn history.

"I thought we might have big-play potential, although I'm a little surprised by our long runs," Dye said. "When James Joseph came back in August, he was running faster than last year."

After finishing at the bottom of the Southeastern Conference in rushing last year, Auburn has jumped into second place this year with five players among the Top 20 individually.

The Tigers balance their running attack with a passing game that also ranks second in the SEC. Quarterback Reggie Slack is the third-rated quarterback in the country: 39 of 59 passing for 664 yards and six touchdowns.

Slack has a talented group of receivers to work with, even if Lawyer Tillman, who missed last week's 38-6 victory over Tennessee because of a pulled hamstring, can't play.

Defensively, Auburn dominated Tennessee, holding the Volunteers to only two yards and two first downs in the second half. They also forced three turnovers which all led to Tiger touchdowns.

"Tracy Rucker (a 6-foot-3, 278-pound tackle) is truly one of the dominant players in college football," Brown said. "I haven't seen anybody move the ball against Auburn."

Jonathan Hall will start at quarterback for North Carolina, although Brown said freshman Deems May also will play.

Neither has had much success: Hall has completed just 31 percent of his passes for 196 yards and one touchdown; May is at a slightly better 42 percent but he's been intercepted twice with no touchdowns.

Senior receiver Randy Marriot, who has caught 14 passes for 206 yards and a score, while tailback Kennard Martin leads the Tar Heels in rushing with 26 carries for 187 yards and a TD.

"The key for us is to be concerned about Auburn and remember that everyone we play is looking to knock us off," said the ever-cautious Dye.

Alcott Hoping

AN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Amy Alcott says she won't have any room for mistakes if she's going to win the $300,000 LPGA San Jose Classic.

The 54-hole tournament starts today on the Almaden Golf and Country Club course.

"You don't have time in a 54-hole tournament to make a mistake and come back from it," she said. "You have to be right on from the beginning, and I know Almaden pretty well from my past years of playing here, on a course which I think suits my game extremely well."

The 32-year-old golfer from Santa Monica, has won the LPGA event twice and finished second to Jan Stephenson last year.

Alcott ranks fifth on this year's money-winning list with $288,020.

"I feel comfortable with that, and I feel comfortable about playing Almaden," she said.

The tournament has attracted 19 of the tour's top 20 money winners and 47 of the leading 50. Leader Sherri Turner, who has collected $345,609, is followed by Nancy Lopez, with $318,452; Colleen Walker, $308,082; Rosie Jones, winner of last week's Santa Barbara Open, $300,973, and Alcott.

First-place money in the San Jose tournament, the last domestic event of the year, is $45,000. The season ends with two tournaments in Japan.

Jones captured her third title of the year by taking last weekend's Santa Barbara Open. The seven-year veteran won $188,000 in her best previous season.

Drug Stigma Weighing Heavily As Two Athletes Test Positive

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — At least one and possibly two more Olympic medals dangled precariously Friday as two British athletes tested positive for drugs. One of the cases could make history, even though it involved a cold remedy available in any supermarket.

Sprinter Linford Christie, a silver medalist in the men's 100 meters, and a judo competitor were found to be using banned drugs in the two-stage doping tests, the British Olympic Association said.

In London, a television station identified the judoist as Kerrick Brown, a bronze-medal winner in the 156-pound class.

Caroline Searle, the association's spokeswoman, said Christie showed positive for an over-the-counter cold remedy, but what might have been an attempt to deal with a stuffy nose apparently had historic implications.

The International Olympic Committee said there might be a chance that Christie would be stripped of his 100-meter medal even though the only positive test came after another race — the 200 on Wednesday, where the former European champion finished fourth.

Michele Verdier, the IOC spokeswoman, said there never had been such a case but declined further comment.

Brown automatically would be stripped of his bronze, if the IOC followed its usual practice. The British association refused to confirm his identity or say what drug was involved in his case.

The latest cases brought to 10 the number of athletes caught for in drug related incidents at these Games, one short of the Olympic-record 11 positives in Los Angeles in 1984. Officials said before the Games started that they expected as many as 15 athletes to test positive.

Track has produced the biggest name among the drug cheats, with 100-meter world record-holder Ben Johnson kicked out for steroid use.

But weightlifting has produced the most, with five positives, and Olympic officials were applying pressure to that sport's leaders to crack down on drugs.

Richard Pound, an IOC vice president from Canada, was quoted as saying he would ask that weightlifting be removed from the Olympics because of "endemic" steroid use.

Pound's action sparked a counterattack by the International Weightlifting Federation, which said it has spared "no effort, work or money" to rid its sport of drugs and would take even stronger steps.

"The IWF has always been, and still is, a leading body amongst all sports in fighting drug abuse," the federation's executive board said in a statement. "Yet, despite all these efforts, we now must realize that an even more strict and comprehensive program is needed to overcome this situation."

Gottfried Schodl, the Austrian president of the weightlifting federation, said the crackdown could include lifetime bans for first-time drug users. Under current penalties, athletes in most sports must test positive for drugs on at least two occasions to face lifetime suspension.

Searle said Christie tested positive for pseudoephedrine, which she described as "a low-dose stimulant found in cold and hay fever preparations... available over the counter."

Verdier said she could not comment specifically on any doping case until it had been presented to the IOC's medical commission and executive board. In these cases, that probably would be Saturday.

But the IOC spokeswoman said a case like Christie's could be unique.

Never has the IOC had to decide what to do about medals won in a previous event when an athlete later tests positive, she said.

Verdier also said that the drug linked to Christie could have been taken between the 100 on Saturday and the 200 on Wednesday and readily shown up on the later test.

"If it was something like ephedrine, then he could have taken it between races and tested positive," she said.

Prince Alexander de Merode, chairman of the IOC's medical commission, was unavailable for comment. Telephone calls to his hotel room were unanswered and messages left there were unreturned.

Searle said the British association had submitted a "full and frank case" to the IOC and, while grateful for the cooperation of both athletes, was adamant in its anti-doping stand.

"The association reinforces its abhorrence of drug abuse," she said in a statement.

Pound told The New York Times that he would recommend dropping weightlifting from the Olympic program because of the drug scandal.

"Now may be the time to give weightlifting an Olympic holiday," Pound, one of the committee's most powerful officials, said. "There certainly seems to be a problem. Maybe we can take the sport to task, that until they clean themselves up, they can't get back in the Games. It would certainly be a lesson for other sports."

Pound was unavailable for comment. He was out of his hotel room and messages left on his telephone and through the Olympic computer-mail system were not returned.

The Times also quoted Dr. Cho Woo Shin, in charge of dope testing for weightlifting, as saying he had seen lifters taking drugs in the locker room, including one using a syringe.

Cho was unavailable for comment. Both his home and his office said he was at the weightlifting hall, but at least a dozen phone calls there were unanswered.

The weightlifting federation said the Seoul tournament had been a success despite the drug tests, but it stressed that the five dopers would face the maximum sanctions possible. Since all are believed to be first-time cases, initial suspensions could be as short as two years, although any move to impose lifetime bans for initial positive tests could be made retroactive.

It also said coaches, trainers and others involved in the doping also could be hit.

"True to our practice, the IWF will apply the strongest punishment against those five athletes who tested positive in Seoul," the federation said. "However, we not only condemn the athletes themselves but might, after a thorough examination of each case, sanction officials, coaches or even national (weightlifting) federations."

the silver medal at 6-7/4, 3/4 inches below her world mark.

"I think Kostadinova is the greatest jumper in the world, but she had to find out what it's like to walk into the Olympics," Ritter said. "I've been in the Olympics before and that made a difference."

"Today, I was the greatest jumper in the world."

On several of her jumps, including the winning one, Ritter nearly knocked off the bar.

But, after rheumatic fever as a child, surgery on her left ankle in 1977 and 1979, arthroscopic surgery on her right knee in 1979, a broken ankle in 1980 and a torn Achilles' tendon in 1982, this woman was due for some good luck.

"Normally, if I hit a bar, it goes down," Ritter said, "and today, I hit several that stayed on."

After Jackie Joyner-Kersey's victory in the long jump Thursday, the American women have won gold medals in two field events for the first time since 1932.

When she cleared the winning height, Ritter grabbed her head with both hands in disbelief, hugged Kostadinova and ran to the stands to embrace her mother.

"I knew when I took off I had cleared it," she said of her victorious effort.

Tamara Bykova of the Soviet Union won the bronze medal at 6-6 1/4.

Julius Kariuki led a 1-2 Kenya finish in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with an Olympic record 8 minutes, 5.51 seconds. Peter Koehck took the bronze at 8:06.79 and Mark Rowland

Kariuki took the lead from Koehck with 600 meters to go.

"I did not expect the finish to be so easy," Kariuki said. "I was never in trouble. If I had someone push me down the home stretch I could have broken the world record."

American record-holder Henry Marsh, with his 9-year-old son watching his father's final race of his career, finished sixth at 8:14.39.

World record-holder Jordanka Donkova of Bulgaria won the 100-meter hurdles in an Olympic record 12.38 seconds. Gloria Siebert of East Germany took the silver in 12.61 and Claudia Zackiewicz of West Germany captured the bronze in 12.75.

In the women's 10,000 meters, being run in the Olympics for the first time, Olga Bondarenko of the Soviet Union sprinted away from pace-setter Elizabeth McColgan of Britain with 200 meters remaining to win the gold medal in a relatively slow 31:05.21.

McColgan took the silver at 31:08.44 and Elena Joupieva the bronze at 31:19.82.

World record holder Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway, bothered by an injured arch on her right foot, dropped out about a quarter of the way through the race.

The gold medal in the 50-kilometer walk went to Vyacheslav Ivanenko of the Soviet Union in 3:36:29, an Olympic best. East Germans Ronald Weigel and Hartwig Gauder were second and third, respectively.

The U.S. women's 400-meter and 1,600-meter relay teams made it through the preliminaries, as did the U.S. men's 1,600-meter relay squad.

America's Mac Wilkins, trying for a third Olympic discus medal, qualified for the Saturday's finals, as did his teammate Mike Buncic and world record-holder Jurgen Schult of East Germany.

The U.S. men's 400-meter relay runners weren't the only ones to make a premature exit from the Games.

Aouita, who struggled to a bronze medal finish in the 800, pulled out of the competition because of a strained left hamstring.

Jeff Atkinson of the United States, who made the finals, said Cruz's coach, Luiz de Oliveira, told officials that Cruz "was too tired and didn't want to run."

Kipkoech Cheruiyot of Kenya was the leading qualifier at 3:38.09, while American Steve Scott was No. 2 at 3:38.20. Kenyan Peter Rono was third at 3:38.35 and Britain's Steve Cram, the silver medalist in 1984 and a longtime rival of Aouita, had the fourth-best time at 3:38.30.

Cram said he would be disappointed by Aouita's absence "only if I win, if you know what I mean."

Scott was more explicit. "It's a shame we all don't have a chance to race him," he said. "I'm at my best right now, I think the best I've ever been. I would love to have the opportunity to race him and beat him in the final."

But, like the U.S. men's 400 relay team, he won't have a chance.

Doctors Chart Medical Frontiers By 'Killing' Patients Temporarily

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — To save Ethel St. Lawrence from the aneurysm pressing on her brain, doctors "killed" her for 40 minutes. They put her in a coma, stopped her heart, chilled her by 40 degrees and drained her body of blood.

St. Lawrence was back at work 10 weeks after what she calls "a cotton-pickin' miracle," a sort of suspended animation that lets surgeons cure hard-to-reach, high-risk aneurysms that once were considered inoperable.

"It may be the surgery of the future in cases where bleeding poses the greatest risk to the operation," said Dr. Julian E. Bailes, a neurosurgeon at Allegheny General Hospital here who studied with Spetzler. "That's the biggest cause of death in surgery. If you could put someone in a state of suspended animation, you could operate in a totally bloodless field."

In a severely cold, bloodless state, the brain can be deprived of oxygen up to 55 minutes, giving surgeons time to remove the aneurysm — a bubble caused by weakness in the wall of a blood vessel — and clip arteries feeding it without the danger of massive bleeding and certain death.

Of 15 patients who have undergone the procedure at Barrow, one has died, Bailes said. Most had "excellent" results, a few reported some weakness but otherwise did well, and most remained in a coma no more than five days.

"It's getting through the surgery," said Dr. Steven Shedd, a Barrow neuroanesthesiologist who worked on St. Lawrence. "If you've tolerated the procedure and you wake up, you're going to be OK."

But the risks, including that the heart won't restart, are too great to use the procedure where normal anesthesia can adequately do the job.

"It's what Birdseye discovered. If you freeze a fresh fish it will come back and you can use it. The problem is, some people don't," said Dr. Louis Caplan of Boston's New England Medical Center and chairman of the American Heart Association's Stroke Council.

And because the patient has to be taken to the point of clinical death for the operation to succeed, doctors approach it with "a lot of respect," said Shedd. "Every time I do one of these I get very nervous."

"You're taking a patient that's alive and breathing and stopping their hearts and putting them into this state. They are nothing. There is no breathing, no heart function. The brain function is nil. We tilt the table up and drain all the blood into the pump."

"I don't want to say the word 'dead,' but the patient is definitely suspended at that point. Cellular activity is still occurring, but at a rate so low that we can't detect it. They're not doing anything. We're talking cold."

St. Lawrence, a 61-year-old

Phoenix secretary, was rushed to Barrow on June 2, suffering from a severe two-day headache and unable to open her right eye. Tests showed that a sinus aneurysm detected four years ago had grown.

Partly because of heavy doses of barbiturates given before surgery to help prevent stroke or brain damage, St. Lawrence recalls nothing about the June 6 operation. But she does recall experiencing a very strong sensation.

"I just had this immense feeling that I was being cared for. It felt like somebody was just holding me in their arms and taking care of me and that I would be OK. It was just a feeling of peace."

Four months after surgery, she needs no medication and the severe headaches are gone, though she still is unable to fully open her eye.

"It's just a cotton-pickin' miracle. It truly is. They do say God works in mysterious ways, and one of his ways of working is to have capable people who know how to do things, and in this case extremely capable surgeons."

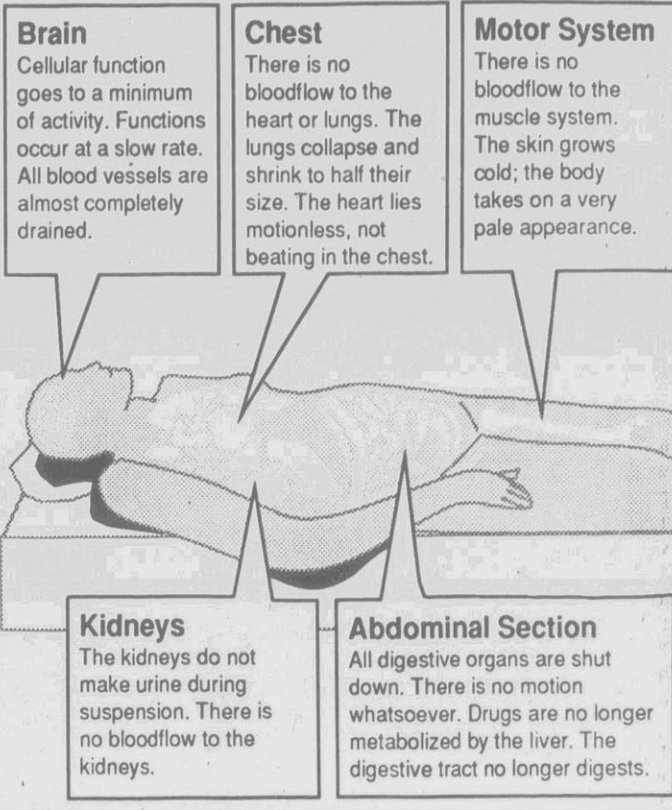

Bailes is confounded, though, by Cecilia Duffy, a 76-year-old Pittsburgh woman who spent 51 minutes in suspended animation Aug. 31 while surgeons removed an egg-sized aneurysm that had almost completely disabled her.

Duffy hasn't come out of the drug-induced coma, even though her brain activity is improving, there is no evidence of brain injury, and she moves her legs when stimulated. "Quite frankly, I'm worried about her because I would have thought she would have come out of it by now," Bailes said.

"It's hard to know why (she hasn't) because she's old and her liver isn't working that well," he said. "She's not breaking down drugs that quickly, so that's made it a little more confusing..."

"As we go longer it's more likely she will have suffered some stroke, some sort of (brain) injury."

Study Says Sleep Loss Isn't Harmful

By DON DUNCAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Lack of sleep is epidemic among on-call medical residents but doesn't impair their mental or physical coordination or hamper their ability to take care of patients, a Wisconsin study suggests.

The "common assumption" that sleep deprivation among doctors-in-training is harmful to patient care is "not fully supported by objective data," the researchers said. Nor does the evidence to date support "arbitrary recommendations to limit working hours of residents," they concluded.

The new findings are not likely to end a longstanding and increasingly vehement debate over whether medical residencies — the hospitals' version of "boot camp" for young doctors — are good or bad for medicine. New York recently became the first state to limit residents' work hours, and several other states are considering such restrictions.

Under the New York rules, which take effect in July, residents cannot be asked to work more than 80 hours a week or more than 24 consecutive hours per shift. They must have at least eight free hours between shifts and one full day off a week. Emergency-room doctors will be restricted to 12 hours at a stretch.

In the latest study, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, researchers from the Medical College of Wisconsin studied 26 medical residents who were on call every other night. Each kept a sleep diary and took a series of tests every morning for 18 or 19 days, designed to measure such things as reasoning ability, visual and hearing attention and eye-hand coordination.

Sleep deprivation was defined as less than four hours of uninterrupted sleep in the preceding 24 hours. By that definition, 89 percent of the residents studied were sleep-deprived during on-call nights.

Newly Isolated Substance Linked To Blood Pressure

By JENNIFER McNULTY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Researchers have isolated a substance that may be linked to high blood pressure, a finding that could have major implications for treating the condition that afflicts 60 million Americans.

High blood pressure, or hypertension, places the body at dramatically higher risk of stroke and heart disease. Sufferers' blood is believed to have increased levels of the substance, which researchers have yet to identify.

Isolation of the compound, which appears only in incredibly minute amounts, should speed identification and manufacture of a synthetic version to be used in future studies, said John Hamlyn, an assistant professor of physiology at the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

"What we think is that having more of it in the circulation may be effectively raising blood pressure," Hamlyn said Thursday at a national conference on high blood pressure research. He has been working to isolate and purify the substance from blood plasma for six years.

Once the substance is identified, synthesized and available for wide study, Hamlyn predicted it would be eight to 10 more years before new relief for sufferers of high blood pressure is available.

Hamlyn presented his findings at a conference of the American Heart Association's Council on High Blood Pressure Research. The study was conducted with scientists from the Upjohn Co., which funded the research.

Harvey Gonick, an adjunct professor of medicine at the University of California, Los Angeles who is working in the same field, called Hamlyn's development a "major move in the right direction."

Identification and synthesis of the substance will have extraordinary implications for treating the ailment, he said.

"There's been a worldwide race ... toward trying to isolate, identify and purify this hormone, and that race is yet to be won," said Gonick. "But he's made a step in the right direction."

The unnamed substance appears to increase the amount of sodium and calcium in cells, Hamlyn said. Sodium and calcium work together to regulate the contraction of muscle cells in blood vessels. When cells are unable to pump out enough sodium, calcium levels go up and tension in the artery wall increases, causing blood pressure to rise.

But the association between the substance and blood pressure levels has been difficult to investigate because the material appears in trace amounts, said Hamlyn. One ton of blood plasma typically yields an amount barely visible in the bottom of a test tube, he said.

"No one has been able to measure it very well," said Hamlyn, who hopes researchers will be able to identify the material within a year. "Everything depends on finding out what the substance is."

Possible strategies for counteracting the substance once it is identified include inhibiting its production, designing a compound to block its effect or accelerating its breakdown in the body, said Hamlyn.

Analysis Could Help Genetic Studies

NEW YORK (AP) — Using a technique to make millions of copies of a tiny bit of genetic material, scientists have performed genetic analysis on individual sperm and single body cells, says a report published today.

Sperm analysis should help the search for disease-causing genes, while single-cell studies might allow diagnosis of genetic diseases in an embryo soon after test-tube fertilization, researchers said.

The early diagnosis would allow a decision on whether to implant the embryo in the mother, researcher Norman Arnheim of the University of Southern California in Los Angeles said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

Sperm analysis should also help police implicate or exclude rape suspects, he said.

Arnheim and graduate student Honghua Li report the work with other scientists at the university and Cetus Corp. in Emeryville, Calif., in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

They used a technique called polymerase chain reaction that creates millions of copies of a minute amount of genetic material, accumulating enough for genetic analysis.

In one series of experiments, they were able to detect which of two variants of a gene was present in 43 of 80 sperm analyzed. In another series, they were able to identify variants in two genes simultaneously in 70 of 114 sperm analyzed.

Such analysis should help scientists find disease-causing genes, Arnheim said.

Genes lie along string-like structures called chromosomes. To find particular genes, scientists use markers, which are bits of genetic material at known locations along the same chromosome as the gene they are seeking. They close in on the gene by discovering closer and closer markers.

When scientists have to determine the order in which markers lie along a chromosome, they must study chromosomes from many members of a family. But sperm from an individual can provide a far larger number of appropriate chromosomes for analysis, letting scientists find the order of very closely spaced markers, Arnheim said.

CASH BACK

How Did Over 200 of Your Friends and Neighbors Receive Cash for Saying "Good-bye" to High Heating and Cooling Bills?

They did it by replacing that old inefficient heating/cooling equipment with high-efficient equipment that qualified for Greenville Utilities CASH BACK rebates.

Whether you are remodeling or building a new home, you can get a CASH BACK Rebate ranging from $75.00 to $400.00 per piece of equipment. The amount depends on the type and efficiency of the equipment you select.

All GUC residential customers are eligible to apply. Stop by our booth at the Fall Home Show, Carolina East Mall, Thursday, Sept. 29, 7-9 p.m., Friday, Sept. 30, 7-9 p.m., and Saturday, Oct. 1, 2-9 p.m. for rebate details.

If you'd like a free information packet on a CASH BACK Rebate, call Greenville Utilities Energy Services Office at 752-7166.

This program is funded by the North Carolina Department of Commerce, Energy Division, from money made available through Exxon oil overcharges.

Stars Find Stand-Up Comedy Tough In Tune Up For Movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar-winning actress Sally Field and "Punchline" co-star Tom Hanks took the stage at comedy nightclubs to prep for their movie roles, but they agreed it really didn't work out.

"The first few times I was terrible," said Hanks. "I thought I would have four or five minutes of material and I didn't. I had about a minute. The rest was all stammering."

Miss Field turned to comedian-friend Lily Tomlin for advice and was told to get up on stage. At a club in Manhattan Beach, her recent 45-minute routine turned into a question-and-answer session.

In "Punchline," the actress plays New Jersey housewife Lilah Krytsick, who pursues a dream of being a comic and draws laughs by recounting her shock at the modern ways of love.

"No matter how you poke, punch or prod, it's boring," Miss Field said of Lilah's appearance and lifestyle.

"But I had a feeling her comedy was sexually oriented."

Hanks, riding on the success of his box-office hit "Big," said preparing to play the manic Steven Gold gave him an appreciation for the comic's life. After coal miners and police officers, comedians have the toughest job, he said.

"You have to travel across the country, doing two or three acts a night, talking to a room full of drunk strangers," he said.

Cartoonist Addams Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Cartoonist Charles Addams, whose macabre characters and morbid humor haunted the pages of The New Yorker magazine for half a century and spawned "The Addams Family" TV show of the 1960s, has died. He was 76.

Addams died Thursday in the emergency room at St. Clare's Hospital and Health Center, said Mary Alice Gregg, a hospital administrator.

He suffered a heart attack in his car in front of his Manhattan apartment building, said his wife, Marilyn.

Addams, born in Westfield, N.J., doodled skulls and bones for his high school newspaper before studying further at Colgate University, the University of Pennsylvania and the Grand Central School of Art in New York.

His ghoulish characters, whose rundown Victorian mansion was crowded with infernal devices and lurking creatures, was the inspiration for "The Addams Family" television show of the 1960s.

The Addamses, from Morticia the black-gowned matriarch, to Lurch the giant butler and Thing, a hand that popped out of a box, were directly inspired by Addams cartoons.

Addams has produced 10 cartoon collections that have together sold more than 460,000 copies.

The New York Times art critic John Russell called Addams "an American landmark, one of the few by which one and all have learned to steer."

But Russell said: "Ghouls and ghosts are not the whole of Addams. The jokes are so good that we do not notice the sturdiness of the line, the rock-solid composition, the eye for scale and placement, the calculated ordinariness that lures us into the trap."

'Last Emperor' Team Works On Film

BEIJING (AP) — The Italian film company that produced the Oscar-winning movie "The Last Emperor" is at work on a new film portraying a detective drama about China's 7th century master sleuth, Judge Di.

Italian producer Franco Giovala of RVC Productions, who also made the "Marco Polo" television series, signed a contract in Aug. 1987 with the China Film Coproduction Corp., said Ann Roddy, a production assistant for the project, in a recent interview.

Lee Remick Has Role As Nurse In CBS Tuesday Movie, 'Jesse'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Remick has made a career of avoiding type-casting.

She was an alcoholic in "The Days of Wine and Roses," a tough piano coach in "The Competition," a suicidal actress in the TV movie "Haywire" and Winston Churchill's mother in the seven-part television series "Jennie."

Two seasons ago, she was nominated for an Emmy for her role as a woman who persuaded her son to kill her father in the fact-based, major NBC miniseries "Nutmacker: Money, Murder and Madness."

Her newest project is another about-face, the CBS movie "Jesse" this Tuesday. It's a small film with a simple story. Ms. Remick plays a dedicated nurse in a doctorless small town who is arrested for practicing medicine without a license.

Ms. Remick, who had flown to New York from her home in Cape Cod to help publicize the movie, said she has spent recent years doing mostly television, because that's where the diverse roles are.

"I just look for the stuff that interests me. And I don't like to repeat," she said. "That's the nature of the biz. Once you've done something well, they think, 'Ah, that's what she does,' and they keep sending you the same script over and over again."

"I haven't been offered anything in a feature in a few years that has come close to giving me that kind of fertile ground to play with," she said, "and that's why I try to find different stuff, each one. Say, 'Nutmacker' a couple of years ago to this, which is just as polarized as they can possibly be."

"Jesse," filmed in Arizona, is based on a true story. In the 1960s, a woman was arrested for practicing medicine without a medical license, even though the nearest doctor was more than 100 miles away. When she insists on having a jury trial rather than just paying a fine, she has to cross two mountain ranges to reach the courthouse. To her surprise and joy, the entire town packs up and goes with her.

The movie was directed by Glenn Jordan, who directed Ms. Remick in the television movies "The Women's Room" and "Toughlove." His "Promise," starring James Garner and James Woods, won an Emmy two years ago.

"I just think he's wonderful," Ms. Remick said. "It was he who brought the piece to me. It appealed to us both, I think, for the same reasons — because of the basic core of what it's about, the sort of Frank Capra-esque quality of it, of the little guy taking on the big government machine and winning. I don't want to ennoble it too much, but it's about the strength of humanity of this woman as opposed to the cold, inhumane aspect of the law that said she shouldn't help anybody, under those circumstances."

"To the letter of the law, she was breaking it, no question, absolutely no question. But it's the law that was wrong in this case. I'm certainly not an advocate of people going around breaking the law, saying I know better, but in this case, she was way ahead of them."

Ms. Remick's next project, another CBS movie slated to air next year, is "A Bridge to Silence," co-starring Marlee Matlin, who won an Academy Award for her role in "Children of a Lesser God." For Ms. Matlin, who is deaf, the TV movie will be her first speaking role. She and Ms. Remick play a daughter and mother.

"She's remarkable. She's a wonderful actress," Ms. Remick said. "She's so open and kind of instinctive and free. ... Curious. Interesting experience, which I had some concern about. When I started I thought, you know, what's it going to be like for the two of us to communicate? I do not have sign language at my beck and call. ... But we did. It was terrific."

The movie, filmed in Canada and directed by Karen Arthur, was something of a first for Ms. Remick, too, since she had never worked with a female director before.

"Interesting working with a woman," she said. "Not that it's different in terms of her work, she's doing the same thing as men do, but I've just never been in that position. Directors have always been kind of father figures. It's interesting. It's wonderful. She's terrific."

"Money," according to American poet and essayist Ralph Waldo Emerson, "often costs too much."

Actor Richard Dreyfuss Finds His Film Career Reaching Peak Level

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Dreyfuss has this fantasy about his opening remarks at the press conference to announce his candidacy for U.S. senator from California: "I want to tell you right off that: 1. I am a Jew; 2. I am a recovering alcoholic; 3. I was arrested on narcotic charges; 4. I have been in therapy. Now gimme a break!"
No, Dreyfuss is not prepared to declare his candidacy yet — maybe in the next century.
"By that time I'll be 53 years old, and I'll probably be giving up acting," he said. "I've always had two major interests in my life outside of acting. One is politics, the other is teaching. So if I don't go into politics, I'll probably become a teacher."

There's little chance of a change of profession right away. Not with his film career once again at a peak after near-extinction. The Dreyfuss story is one of the most remarkable comebacks in recent times.
His lowest point was the day after he was arrested. "I told my wife, 'Well, it's over. I guess I'll have to find something else to do,'" he said.
It happened in October 1982. Driving down Benedict Canyon, he lost control of his Mercedes-Benz and crashed into a palm tree, flipping the car over. Police found two vials of cocaine and 31 tablets of the narcotic Percodan in the car. As with most first-time offenders, he entered a drug rehabilitation program to avoid prosecution.

The drug bust almost sank a career that had already been floundering. "I had nothing but flops for four years," he admitted. "It's pretty hard to rise above something like that."
His mishaps included "The Big Fix," "The Competition," "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" and "The Buddy System." On the last film, his behavior seemed erratic, and word circulated that Richard Dreyfuss was a bad risk.

"That might have been the end, except that Paul Mazursky happened to see me in a play in New York, 'Total Abandon,'" said Dreyfuss. "He insisted on casting me in 'Down and Out in Beverly Hills.'"
The comedy proved a hit for Disney's Touchstone Pictures, and Dreyfuss appeared in two more successes for the company, "The Tin Men" and "Stakeout." His new film is "Moon Over Parador," reuniting with Paul Mazursky.
In the Universal Pictures movie, Dreyfuss plays a hustling New York actor forced to impersonate a recently deceased Latin American dictator. It is a tour de force for him, made under rugged conditions in the historic Brazilian cities of Ouro Preto and Salvador de Bahia.

Huxtables Essentially Same As 'Cosby Show' Returns

By MICHAEL E. HILL
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service
Some things will be different this TV season, and some will be the same.
The schedule will be different. The spring-and-summer writers' strike, coupled with the late-Summer Olympic Games, will make for irregular premieres of both new and returning shows. Several series premiere this week. Some won't debut until Thanksgiving, some by Christmas. Would you believe New Year's?

Some things will be the same. TV once again will look to other hits from other media for ideas. In some cases they will simply adopt the hits, period. Does "Baby Boom" sound familiar? How about "Dirty Dancing"?
There will be a few new trends — two with the name Murphy in the title, for example. And a number of men, in one fashion or another, will be left by their women — "Dear John," "Raising Miranda," "Empty Nest" — while others will find themselves raising children alone — "Paradise," "Miranda."

Markus said there is no deliberate effort being made to shake up the Huxtables. But if there's a rebel in the house, it's Denise. "She always causes a lot of commotion in the family when she's there," said Markus.
"She definitely tests her parents more than the other kids. She's a good kid who's looking for herself. And no one gets to Cliff (series star Bill Cosby) like Denise."
Married daughter Sondra, played by Sabrina Le Beauf, returns home too, bearing the news that she's pregnant.
Markus promised a number of other surprises, but no deep disruptions of the Huxtable household. The show's principal characters have rarely, if ever, been touched by the kinds of tragic problems that make newspaper headlines.
"Not all families are fraught with these problems," said Markus. "We go with the problems that are more universal and tend to happen more often."

Bill Cosby has said that five seasons would be his limit for the show, but Markus said shows are not being written as if this year would be the series' last.
Warren Littlefield, executive vice president, prime-time programs,

NBC entertainment, said it is not a given that this will be "Cosby's" last season. "We're talking to him," said Littlefield. "And there's more development under way with that (production) group. There's more than 'A Different World' to come out of that group."
By some yardsticks, "Cosby" ranks as the most successful situation-comedy ever. The show has been No. 1 in the Nielsen ratings for three seasons and has more viewers each week than any other sit-com has ever had. In the '70s "All in the Family" finished first five straight seasons.
The show has made Thursday night NBC Night in Televisionland and has led the way to the top of the network ratings for NBC.
NBC will be No. 1 again this season in all probability. It will have aired the Olympics and the World Series before the other networks can get much of their fresh programming on the air.

ABC will air its "War and Remembrance" maxi-series in November and will offer a number of eye-catching new series to go with the Emmy-honored "Wonder Years" and "thirtysomething." If current schedules hold, CBS will be in gear with its new series before the end of the month.

John Markus, the show's sole surviving writer from its first season, co-executive producer and head of a staff of a half-dozen writers, offered a few clues — teases, really — as to what to expect this season.
Lisa Bonet, whose character, Denise, has been away at school in the spinoff, "A Different World," returns to the Huxtable household. Rumor has it she's dropped out of school, but Markus was reluctant to confirm or deny. But she will be home while Bonet endures a real-life pregnancy.
Denise's return should give the show a boost and possibly reinforce ratings that have shown some ero-son. Markus said there is no deliberate effort being made to shake up the Huxtables. But if there's a rebel in the house, it's Denise. "She always causes a lot of commotion in the family when she's there," said Markus.

"She definitely tests her parents more than the other kids. She's a good kid who's looking for herself. And no one gets to Cliff (series star Bill Cosby) like Denise."
Married daughter Sondra, played by Sabrina Le Beauf, returns home too, bearing the news that she's pregnant.

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Oct. 1

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Accept things as they are for now, and sink into practical career study. Enjoy the little things in life today. Spend some time alone.
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Changes at home are working out to your advantage. There is good news that will perk you up. Stability with spending pays off.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Work on problems at home with your mate and children. Simplify solutions with clarity, understanding and balanced judgment.
- MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Things are not up to snuff because of jealousy and worry over petty issues. After you come out of your shell, things will turn around.
- LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Someone is asking for more than you want to give. Let go of the problem. Past efforts will pay off with good news with money in the picture.
- VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Tune into nature. Nurture living things that you feel responsible for. Discard things of no immediate value, and avoid more clutter.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Take a financial survey to balance your spending. Money is important right now in order to reach goals. Take time to service mechanical devices.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): The wise old owl is sitting on your shoulder, and you understand that cooperation at work will produce rewards for you in the future.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Routine, boring situations change. News from a faraway place brightens up the evening. Focus your attention on your family.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Patience is necessary to solve a nagging problem at work. Put your concerns aside for the day, and turn your attention to loved ones.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Acceptance of a social invitation could mean a financial gain. Get your chores done early so you have time for relaxation later.
- PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A friend is like contact paper today, sticking to you in the strangest way. Start out fresh with this person. Don't fight the situation.

 Opening lead: Eight of ♠
 If you blindly follow rubrics, you would have no trouble with this hand. Even if the hearts break evenly, you will need three diamond tricks for your grand slam. On the principle of "Eight ever, nine never," you would play for the drop. But we prefer firmer evidence for our choice of lines when we are playing for all the tricks.

North-South were using a forcing club system, so the opening bid guaranteed 17 points or more. After South's value bid of six no trump, North gave full weight to his 19 points and six-card suit, and raised one for the road.

West dutifully led a spade. Declarer won and led the jack of diamonds to the king in the hope that the queen would appear. We know some players who would come back to hand and take the diamond finesse because of the fact that East had announced considerable length in spades, but not this declarer.

He cashed the king-queen of clubs and then came to hand with a heart to the queen. East's spade discard was revealing. Next, declarer cashed his ace-jack of clubs, and East followed all the way.

When all followed to declarer's remaining spade winner, the count of East's hand was now almost complete. He could have no more than seven spades, and he had shown up with no hearts and four clubs. Therefore, he had to have at least two diamonds, and it had to be specifically two if declarer was going to make his slam. So declarer led a diamond to the king, dropped the queen and had more than enough tricks.

There must be something to this "nine never" business after all.

US Soybean Output - Bright-Boosted Farm Prices Leveling Off

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices of farm commodities edged higher in September, but a new report by the Agriculture Department shows the drought-boosted rise of earlier months has slowed significantly.

According to USDA's preliminary report for September, prices farmers got for raw products rose an average of 0.7 percent from August, including the highest wheat prices in almost seven years.

But department records showed that was the smallest monthly increase since drought began cutting 1988 harvest prospects and triggered rising prices last spring.

After holding steady during most of the winter, the USDA index rose 3.1 percent from April to May, followed by June, 2.2 percent; July 2.9 percent; and August 2.1 percent.

Mostly as a result of the drought and searing heat during the spring and summer, U.S. grain production is expected to be down 31 percent from last year's harvest.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said Thursday in its preliminary report that higher prices for grapefruit, milk and wheat contributed most to the September increase. Lower prices for hogs, oranges and broiler chickens partly offset the rise in other commodities.

Compared with a year earlier, the September prices averaged 12 percent higher. Prices of some major commodities are based on mid-month averages and then are revised the following month when additional information is available.

"The mid-September prices for corn, soybeans and wheat were higher than the respective averages for the month of August," the report said. "The all-wheat price was at the highest level since November of 1981."

But the report added that "hog prices dropped off sharply" from August and continued well below the high prices sustained during the last half of 1986 and in most of 1987.

Prices of meat animals as a group dropped 1.8 percent from August and averaged 3.5 percent below the level of September 1987.

Dairy products climbed 3.3 percent from the August price average, overall, but still lagged a year earlier by 3.8 percent, the report said. Milk prices paid to farmers were up 40 cents per 100 pounds from August but were 50 cents below the year-ago level.

The department's all-crops price index for September was up 3 percent from August and averaged 32 percent more than a year ago. Soybeans, at $8.42 per bushel, were up 9 cents from August, and wheat averaged $3.82 per bushel, up 21 cents.

Prices of fruit, as an overall average, were up 3.9 percent from August and 2.2 percent from a year ago, the report said.

Consumer food prices are expected to rise 3 percent to 5 percent this year, compared with a 4.2 percent average increase in 1987.
