Discovery Makes Triumphant Return

By Lee Siegel
 AP SCIENCE WRITER

The Space Journey Has Resumed

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Discovery's five astronauts streaked out of orbit to a triumphant desert landing today after a remarkably smooth post-Challenger flight that "resumed the journey" of Americans into space.

Commander Frederick H. Hauck guided the 97-ton space shuttle to a pinpoint touchdown on the centerline of a hard-packed sand runway at 9:37 a.m. PDT, ending a 1.68 million-mile voyage that lasted four days, one hour and 57 seconds.

"Roger Discovery, welcome back," Mission Control's John Creighton told the crew. "A great ending to the new beginning."

Two loud sonic booms cracked over the California desert as Discovery descended through blue skies to the cheers of more than 300,000 spectators, many of them waving American flags.

Workers wearing protective garments quickly surrounded the shuttle, checking for fuel or gas leaks and attaching a ground cooling system while the astronauts waited in the cabin.

Vice President George Bush was on hand to greet the crew when they departed the orbiter after the first U.S. manned spaceflight in 32 months.

The return ended a comeback mission that began tensely last Thursday when the $1.5 billion shuttle soared off its launchpad powered by a pair of the booster rockets that were redesigned after they were blamed for the Challenger explosion. Those new rockets, and just about everything else on this shakedown flight, performed splendidly.

An hour before touchdown, Hauck fired braking rockets 188 miles above the Indian Ocean to drop the winged spaceplane out of orbit and start it on a fiery dive through the atmosphere on a course over the Pacific, across the California coast south of Santa Barbara and into this flight test base in the Mojave Desert.

During the 2-minute, 50-second burn, Hauck reported a momentary failure of a backup cooling system that gave the crew trouble throughout the flight. He flipped a switch and immediately corrected the problem.

The spaceship was traveling more than 200 mph as it touched the ground, but slowed quickly as Hauck operated new brake and steering systems designed to improve performance so shuttles in the future can return to landing at the launch site in Florida.

In the final hours of their journey, the astronauts checked spacecraft systems, closed the 60-foot payload bay doors and struggled into the bulky orange spacesuits needed if they had to make an emergency bailout during landing.

"It's a beautiful day down there and lots of folks waiting to see you land," Mission Control informed the crew shortly before the deorbit burn.

Gorbachev Ally Named Premier

Parliament Tabs Vlasov

By Mark J. Porubcansky
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Soviet officials today capped the biggest shake-up in Mikhail S. Gorbachev's 3½ years in power by replacing Politburo member Vitaly I. Vorotnikov as premier of the Russian republic.

The Supreme Soviet of the Russian Republic, the largest of the 15 Soviet republics, elected Interior Minister Alexander V. Vlasov — an ally of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev — as the new premier. Vlasov was named a candidate member of the Politburo during a central committee meeting Friday.

The 62-year-old Vorotnikov was moved to the ceremonial job of president of Russia. Vladimir P. Orlov, the 67-year-old president of the republic, retired.

Vlasov had been named a candidate member of the Politburo during a Central Committee meeting on Friday.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said Gorbachev recommended the changes.

The latest changes come after Gorbachev led the most dramatic political changes in the Soviet leadership of his 3½ years in power.

Today's meeting of the Russian Supreme Soviet in the Grand Kremlin Palace comes two days after the national parliament elected Gorbachev the country's president to replace 79-year-old Andrei A. Gromyko.

On Friday, Gorbachev pushed a major shake-up through the Communist Party's policy-making Central Committee. He retired two full and two candidate Politburo members, promoted four other people and streamlined the Central Committee's apparatus.

Vorotnikov and Ukrainian Communist Party leader Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky are the only two members of the ruling 12-man party Politburo who were there before Gorbachev took power.

One Western diplomat in Moscow, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Vorotnikov was considered a "swing" vote on the Politburo. He generally supported Gorbachev's reforms, but was "not real outspoken, cautious, not zealous," the diplomat said.

Vlasov had worked in Gorbachev's home area of southern Russia before becoming interior minister, in charge of the police, in 1986. His replacement is to be named by national authorities.

Vorotnikov was first deputy premier of the Russian republic in 1975-1979, but lost the support of the Kremlin leadership in the last years of President Leonid I. Brezhnev and was made ambassador to Cuba. He was summoned back to Moscow after Brezhnev's death in 1982, and

U.S. Told Hostage To Be Freed

WASHINGTON — The United States has been told by another government that a hostage held by Iranian sympathizers in Lebanon will be released imminently, President Reagan's chief spokesman said today.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said U.S. government officials "received reports" this morning that a hostage would be set free, and said that the reports came from a "third-party government in the region."

Fitzwater would not identify the government involved, and refused to answer when asked if it was Syria.

At the State Department, an official who spoke on condition of anonymity said, "We have received positive signals from the region." Referring to dashed expectations in the past, he said:

"This may be the one. We are highly optimistic."

That official said the latest report came from the Islamic Jihad through the Syrian government.

He said that was the group holding four American educators and any release was likely to come from those four hostages. A total of nine Americans are held hostage in Lebanon.

Fitzwater, meanwhile, said, "We have received reports that a hostage would be released," the presidential

New Emergency 911 System Gets Off To Successful Start

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County residents who found themselves needing emergency assistance this past weekend found it easier calling for help.

As of 4 p.m. Friday, the county's new emergency 911 system was operational and System Director Nate Caddy said the first weekend was a success.

"We found the system worked extremely well," Caddy said. "We've had absolutely no problems with it."

Caddy said by calling "911", Pitt County residents can receive a quicker response to fire, police and rescue emergencies.

Located at the courthouse, the system communications center has two telecommunicators waiting to receive emergency calls at all times. Currently, eight telecommunicators rotate shifts answering the emergency phone lines.

As emergency calls come into the communications center, operators can dispatch the appropriate medical, fire or police assistance to the correct location in a faster and more efficient manner than previously possible with the seven-digit system.

Caddy said among the system's features is a "hold and trace" function allowing operators to identify the location of a call on the system's incoming lines immediately.

As a result, if a person calling reports a fire at his house, but does not have the time to report the complete address, the system can instantly identify where the call originated.

Sgt. K.E. Thompson of the Greenville police said the department received several emergency calls over the weekend which were directed from the county's 911 emergency system.

"The only problems were some non-emergency calls which were transferred to us," he said. "I'm sure that will change as the people in the

We've Got A New Look

Something's changed! Today, we come to you with a whole new look. The first thing you'll notice is that our headline type is different.

Since 1969, when we switched from hot to cold type, heads have been in a type style called "futura demi bold." Now we have two styles for heads, called "news" and "news bold." They'll be used together and independently to give more information about stories. They're also easier to read.

For your convenience, we've also moved inside information from the bottom of the front page to the top left skybox, where it sits alongside promos for key inside stories.

And we've changed our skyboxes. Gone are the colored screens over the type, which often made information contained within the boxes hard to read.

We have enlarged information headings such as In The Area, and we're presenting photographs differently for cleaner, bolder effect. Sue Hinson, designer of our new look, said she felt the changes work together to give the newspaper a distinctive, new personality.

"We believe these changes will give the newspaper a style that is solely The Daily Reflector's," Ms. Hinson said.

"Our style was not always consistent throughout the paper," she said. "We have designed the new look to give our readers a tight package that's easier to read."

We hope you'll agree.

Drug Testing

By James H. Rubin
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, beginning its new term today, announced it will expand its study of drug testing in the workplace, agreeing to decide whether a railroad may require workers to take the tests routinely.

The court began its 1988-1989 term in a whirl of activity, acting on about 1,000 cases in its first day. Before the term ends, it is expected to hand down important decisions on such other issues as civil rights, affirmative action and the death penalty.

In today's drug-testing case, the justices said they will review a ruling that barred the Consolidated Rail Corporation, or Conrail, from imposing the tests without permitting collective bargaining over the issue.

The court announced earlier this year that it would review two other drug-testing cases — one involving railway workers and the other the U.S. Customs Service.

In the earlier railway case, the justices will decide whether constitutional privacy rights of workers are violated by federal regulations requiring blood and urine tests for those involved in serious train accidents.

The Customs Services tests are conducted for those seeking drug enforcement jobs.

Today's action significantly expands the scope of the court's review by including a case in which a private company — rather than the government — is adopting mandatory drug tests.

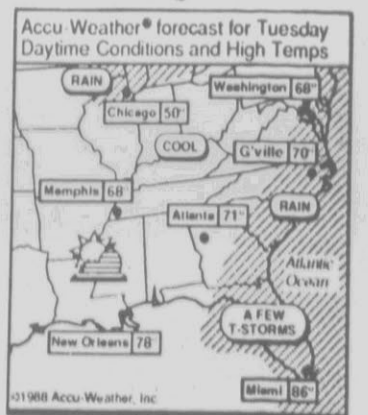

All three cases will be decided in the court's new term, which will conclude by July.

In other action today, the court:

— Agreed to decide whether displays of a Christmas nativity scene and a menorah, symbolizing the Jewish holiday of Chanukah, should be allowed at two government buildings in Pittsburgh. The justices said they will review a ruling that each display violated the

Few Unemployed

RALEIGH — The Employment Security Commission of North Carolina reports that 89 of the state's 100 counties had unemployment rate at or below five percent during August. The five percent and below figures are ones that ESC analysts regard as near full employment. Pitt County, with a labor force of 52,820, had 51,520 persons employed and 1,300 unemployed for an unemployment rate of 2.5 percent. Rates in neighboring counties were: Beaufort, 3.7; Craven, 3.0; Edgecombe, 3.7; Greene, 2.9; Lenoir, 3.6; Martin, 3.8, and Wilson 5.3. Dare and Currituck counties, with an unemployment rate of 0.9 percent and 1.2 percent, respectively, had the lowest rates, due chiefly to seasonal employment factors.

No North Carolina counties in August experienced rates of 10 percent or over.

Unemployment rates in major North Carolina major metropolitan areas were: Asheville, 2.3; Burlington, 2.7; Charlotte-Gastonia-Rock Hill N.C./S.C., 2.7; Fayetteville, 3.6; Greensboro/Winston-Salem/High Point, 2.6; Hickory, 2.5; Jacksonville 2.2; Raleigh/Durham, 2.2, and Wilmington, 3.7.

Pope graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology at age 19, and was 25 when he borrowed $75,000 to buy the 17,000-circulation weekly New York Enquirer. He made the paper a tabloid, and adopted the loud, glitzy style that has been targeted many lawsuits from celebrities. Carol Burnett sued for libel in 1981, winning $800,000. PREVENTIVE ORTHODONTICS

There are some orthodontic problems that can, and should, be diagnosed and treated early. The result can be a great savings in time, money, and discomfort. If the child develops a narrower upper arch, for instance, the palate can easily, quickly, and PAINLESSLY be separated and expanded, placing the upper teeth in proper relation to the lower. Likewise, if the permanent teeth look very crowded as they come in, take your child to visit your dentist and ask for a referral to a good orthodontist. Sometimes -- without bands or braces but with lots of orthodontic know-how, serial extraction, or the judicious removal of certain teeth at the right time -- a big orthodontic problem in the future can be prevented. It requires that the parent be alert to problems. The parent should also think of the dentist as a resource, someone to periodically check the progress of their child's dental health.

Gardner, Rand Meet In Debate

GREENSBORO (AP) — Republican Jim Gardner accused his Democratic opponent of being part of the "arrogant" leadership in the Legislature, while Tony Rand questioned Gardner's fitness for office in the only scheduled televised debate between the candidates for lieutenant governor.

Gardner said that under the leadership of Rand, who is Senate majority leader and chairman of the Senate Base Budget Committee, the state had moved backward, not forward in addressing education and road construction needs.

"I would have assumed that under this leadership he would have moved ahead in great strides for North Carolina," Gardner said. "We've had a vacuum of it in the General Assembly."

Rand later noted Gardner's business failures in the 1970s and said, "His ability to manage his affairs is somewhat suspect."

And he touted the Legislature's accomplishments in improving public education in North Carolina.

"At a time when business and government leaders across our state have been working together hand in hand to make public schools better, Mr. Gardner has been absent with no excuse," Rand said. "My opponent simply isn't qualified to lead the fight to make our public schools better."

The debate was held at the Bryan School of Business at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The UNC Center for Public Televisions broadcast the debate live, but 10 to 15 minutes were lost because of technical difficulty caused by rain. The program will be rebroadcast at 8 p.m. today.

Each candidate was allowed a one-minute opening statement. Then, each was required to answer two questions from sponsors of the event. The candidates then fielded questions from a panel of three state political reporters. Each then answered two questions prepared by his opponent. Each was allowed a two-minute closing statement.

Rand said that he would reform the budget process by involving the governor in the formation of the base and expansion budgets enacted by the Legislature each year. This way, the governor would have to take some responsibility for the final spending bill before it is passed, Rand said.

"I propose that he come to the Legislature when they complete the base budget process and that he gives his ideas and give his opinion on what the Legislature has done," Rand said. "I also propose that we do the same thing in the expansion budget so the governor can be a meaningful part of the budget process."

Gardner said he wants to remove partisanship from the Legislature.

"Everyone in the Legislature has a responsibility once the election is over to work for the best legislation for every citizen of this state," Gardner said. "What we've had is a hostile Legislature working against the governor of North Carolina on almost each and every single issue."

Gardner sought to attach himself to Gov. Jim Martin, the incumbent Republican running for re-election against Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat. Gardner invoked Martin's name during several responses to questions, touting proposals pushed by the Martin administration.

Supporters of both candidates moved quickly to declare their man the winner.

"Rand clearly had more command of the facts and the issues," said Stephanie Bass, his press spokeswoman.

Rep. Jonas Eulogized

LINCOLN, N.C. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Charlie Jonas, who was known as "Mr. Republican" during his 20 years in Congress, was remembered at his funeral as man who brought two-party politics back to North Carolina.

A service was held Saturday at the First United Methodist Church in Jonas' hometown of Lincoln, which was attended by some 250 mourners, including Gov. Jim Martin.

"The amazing thing was, he not only voted his conscience, but he was re-elected," said the Rev. Frank Cook, who conducted the service. "He was known in North Carolina as Mr. Republican, but let me remind you, it was the people of both parties who re-elected him and re-elected him."

Jonas, who died Wednesday at age 85, went to Congress in 1952 and was reelected nine times.

Jonas' father, Charles A. Jonas, was the state's first Republican elected to Congress since the turn of the century.

In 1952, Charles Raper Jonas became the second, elected and re-elected on promises of fiscal conservatism.

"I cannot believe he would have ever voted for a $100,000 study of whether housewives had rather have permanent pressed clothes, or clothes they have to wash and starch," Cook said.

Martin, Jordan Discuss Environment

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan spoke separately at a candidates' forum on environmental issues, but that appeared at all said something about the 1988 election, one lobbyist said.

Bill Holman recalled that during the 1984 campaign, the two gubernatorial candidates — Martin and Rufus Edmisten — made no such joint appearance to answer environmental questions.

"Environmental issues are more potent in this campaign than they ever have been," Holman said. "The politicians are starting to catch up with the public."

The candidates spoke Saturday at Meredith College during a candidates forum sponsored by the Conservation Council of North Carolina.

Martin said his record on environmental issues is one of substance, "not symbolism," while Jordan promised to bring a more vigorous administration and stricter enforcement of environmental laws.

"This setting gives me a chance to demonstrate that my record in my approach to environmental issues is one of substance — not symbolism — for protection of our resources," Martin said in an opening statement.

But Jordan criticized Martin's record, taking issue in particular to his appointees for jobs tied to the environment, saying Natural Resources Secretary Tommy Rhodes "has acted — far too often — as an advocate for developers and as an impediment to sound environmental management."

"A governor certainly has a right to pick the people around him," Jordan said. "But those people can tell you a lot about a governor."

Jordan repeated his criticism of Martin's decision to put former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green in charge of putting together his coastal initiative package and criticized Ronnie Watson, saying he should be removed from the Coastal Resources Commission "because he has a conflict of interest." Martin cited his administration's enforcement record on environmental issues, saying that since 1985, the administration has levied 364 civil penalties seeking $9.2 million in fines.

"That represents three times as many fines as the previous administration issued in 8 years," he said.

Jordan took a jab at Martin for opposing the ban on phosphate detergents.

"I fought against the lobbyists from industry and the lobbyists from the governor's office," Jordan said. "I got it passed into law. Jim Martin fought it."

But Martin defended his stance, saying regulations adopted at his encouragement by the state Environmental Management Commission would reduce phosphate loads in nutrient-sensitive waters by 95 percent to 97 percent. Martin said that was far more effective than banning phosphate detergents.

Jordan called for a "coastal protection policy that does not sacrifice our fragile coastal environment to runaway development."

Martin said his administration has taken steps to protect the coast with its coastal initiative, "which will promote the right kind of development along our coast and, more important, preserve the environment in areas that have not yet been developed."

Martin also noted that the Fund for Renewable Energy and the Environment has ranked North Carolina No. 1 in the nation in surface water protection in 1987.

Supercollider Hearings Are Set This Week

DURHAM (AP) — Experience has shown public hearings on the superconducting super collider are more than just a chance for local residents to sound off, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Energy said.

"The real situation is that we get testimony all across the range of interests," Richard Nolan, deputy executive director of the Superconducting Super Collider Site Task Force, said Sunday. "We hear from business groups, local and regional government officials, utility companies, environmental groups. The advantage is to benefit from a diversity of input that includes interests and ideas and comments that are beyond just the local citizenry."

Nolan was a member of one of two DOE teams that will hear comments from the seven states competing for the superconducting super collider. The team arrived in North Carolina Sunday in preparation for this week's public hearings.

Public hearings will be held today and Tuesday in Butner to address the draft environmental impact statement prepared on the $4.4 billion atom smasher, but all comments will be welcome, Nolan said.

"Many of the comments that we have gotten and I suspect we will get have to do with clear expressions of support or concerns about the project," he said at a news conference. "We want to take those into account."

Nolan said 107 people have signed up to speak, forcing officials to expand the length of the hearings today and to add a second day to the previously announced schedule. Today's hearing will be from 2 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. in the Butner Sports Arena. Further comment will be heard from 9 a.m. to noon on Tuesday.

As of August, the department had received 387 letters about the collider from North Carolina. Of them, only eight favored the project, 364 were opposed, and 15 had no clear opinion.

"It doesn't concern me in the sense that I believe that is the ratio of the people who favor the project," Bill Dunn, North Carolina's project coordinator, told the Greensboro News & Record. "I wish no one was unhappy that the project would go here. But we didn't try to match numbers ... we didn't recruit people to send comments in to support the project."

Nolan said the amount of interest shown in North Carolina has been about on par with that in other states. Hearings have been held in Michigan, Tennessee, Texas and Colorado so far. The second team is currently in Arizona and both teams will converge on Illinois for the last series.

Nolan said the process is on schedule for an expected announcement of the preferred site in late November and the formal designation of a host state in January.

Comments made at the hearing will become part of the final environmental impact statement, which will specify how the 53-mile diameter project will affect such things as wetlands, farmland, water supplies and the economies of each site, Nolan said.

Officials refused to answer questions about how North Carolina compares with the other states vying for the project. Nolan downplayed the competitive aspect, saying, "The enormity of this project dictates that it cannot be viewed as a winner-take-all proposal."

Blight Aloft

Balloons Are Litter When They Land

East Carolina University didn't secure a victory on the football field Saturday, but it won big points for environmental stewardship — along with the Arthritis Foundation of North Carolina.

The two organizations showed exemplary judgment by canceling a balloon launch scheduled during the ECU-Southwest Louisiana football game.

Balloon launches, while colorful and appealing, create pollution. When the balloons land, they become litter of the most unsightly kind. They are non-biodegradable plastic, which means they remain in forests and oceans forever.

And they create health hazards for animals, especially sea creatures, who eat the balloon remains and cannot digest them. Often, these unfortunate creatures perish of starvation, a death that is neither quick nor painless.

For Greenville, which lies near the coast and its miles of marine estuaries and acres of forest, the impact of pollution originating here can large.

What is ironic is the fact that the pollution which causes this environmental damage and suffering can easily be prevented. Balloon launches attract attention. They have been used effectively by virtually every type of organization to gain public visibility, to draw crowds and to get media coverage. The groups releasing balloons mean no harm; often their purpose is betterment of the community.

But the evidence clearly shows these seemingly innocuous events degrade the environment and kill animals, and this awareness should be foremost. Any group planning a balloon launch should be challenged by the environmental responsibility shown this weekend by ECU and the Arthritis Foundation. More awareness — both about the organization or cause, and about the hazards of balloon litter — will be created if groups halt launches.

It's as simple as this: when something goes up, it comes down. And in the case of balloons, when they come down, they blight the landscape and harm wildlife. It's time communities declined throwaway thinking and follow the applaudable example set this weekend at the ECU football game. No cause merits knowingly polluting the environment.

New Asset

Science Center Opens Nature's Door

The area has a great new asset with the opening of the Science and Nature Center at River Park North. The center was dedicated in ceremonies Friday.

Construction on the facility has been under way for some time and it consists of several units which will contain areas for nature, science, environment and health programs.

Live and taxidermy exhibits of wildlife will be a part of the center's exhibits. Many of the creatures are native to this area.

The center will also be utilized by the public schools for its "Adventures in Health" program which has been developed by a private non-profit organization.

But it can be, and should be, enjoyed by the area's citizens in addition. The center is yet another regional resource offered by Pitt County. For it to serve its purpose it should be thoroughly visited. It's displays and features illustrate the area's natural heritage and offer visitors a convenient opportunity to learn more about nature. As natural resources become more pressured, that increased awareness becomes more important.

In the future, the center plans to have a planetarium which was obtained through East Carolina University. It was on loan from the U.S. Navy. Plans are under way to raise $80,000 through loans and grants to provide for the planetarium's development.

The center is a part of a 368-acre park which the city owns and operates. The park includes picnic areas and recreational areas. Its best feature, however, is the nature trails which wind through the lowlands to the Tar River's edge. The trails give hikers the opportunity to see wetlands and wildlife as they have existed for centuries in this area.

The park is extensively used and the community can expect that use to grow. With proper support, perhaps with private bequests and gifts, the exhibition center can continue to add to its collections. It could become one of the foremost nature exhibitions in the state.

Considerable work and planning have gone into the new Science and Nature Center. It is now available for the public's education and enjoyment. Certainly the facilities should be used to the fullest.

Every Crime Has A Criminal, Right?

BOSTON — Let's be fair to the guy. Poppy was right the first time.

Dig back through the week of damage control and instant policy revisions. Watch a replay of the precise moment when George Bush was asked whether a woman who had an abortion, or a doctor who performed it should go to jail.

His answer began with a flustered admission, "I haven't sorted out the penalties..." But it ended with the truth: "Of course, there's got to be some penalties to enforce the law, whatever they may be."

If the alarm buzzers went off in the

Ellen Goodman

Bush war room, it's because they know how to count. By any estimate some 15 million American women have had abortions since it's been legal. Everyone knows someone who's had one. Would they be criminals in Bush's America?

By morning, the handlers had "clarified" his position. No, no, the women wouldn't be prosecuted. They would be treated lovingly (not to mention patronizingly) as victims.

That, said the Bush people, should "close" the question. Indeed the media praised the Republicans for getting this "gaffe" out of the way and not letting it fester.

Well, not so fast. Credit is due to Poppy for being right and I intend to offer it. The man may get his syntax screwed up, but this time he got his facts right.

If, as Bush hopes, the Supreme Court should overturn Roe v. Wade, the states would have the right to ban abortion. Any law passed would come with penalties.

What would they be? In 1958, before the reform movement, 18 states had penalties for any woman who survived an illegal abortion. As late as 1972, before the Supreme Court decision, 15 states made performing abortion a crime and eleven states made the woman a criminal. In nine states, it was even illegal to aid or counsel a woman to have an abortion.

Back then, a doctor who did an abortion in Connecticut was subject to as many as five years in prison, the woman as many as two. In Idaho, they could get five years in jail, in Minnesota four years.

That was even before the anti-abortion forces had mobilized and radicalized, crying "Murder" at every political rally. Does anyone believe that the penalties would be lighter today? Would there be a murder charge? Would there not be?

Of course, we could "just" prosecute doctors and counselors. But with new technologies, illegal abortions could be performed without medical people. How safely we don't know. In 1968, 5,000 women died from illegal abortions. That would of course be one of the "penalties." But the figure seems small to the right-lifers who regard every fetus as a human being. The Republican platform this year clearly places the rights of the fetus above those of the mother.

Today, we have abortion pills as well. Just this month, France and China legalized the one called RU486. In Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, there was a report about Epostane, a similar drug for early abortions from Holland. There would unquestionably be a black market in such pills. Would we chase after these "drug-runners"?

In a patchwork of state laws, would a woman who had an abortion in a "free" state be prosecuted in a "criminal" state? What if there were a constitutional ban nationwide. Would a woman who went to Canada or Europe be extradited? Would women be watched at the borders? What of a woman who miscarried in this country? Would she have to prove it?

This is not the stuff of science fiction or political alarmists, although there is surely an un-American air to it. In Rumania today, where abortion is illegal, there are pregnancy tests given in factories and women who miscarry have some explaining to do.

Bush is a great believer in the free-market economy. He has said that if women would only deliver their babies and give them up for adoption, supply and demand would take care of the rest. Finally he was forced to think about the real consequences in real life, not in theory.

This was no blooper, no misstatement, no misunderstanding, nothing demanding "clarification" from his aides. Nor is it something we should let slide down the memory hole.

If abortion were illegal, it would be a crime. Every crime has a criminal. Even George Bush, who hadn't "sorted out" the issue, knew that right off the bat. "Of course there's got to be some penalties to enforce the law..." Of course.

A Strong Sense Of Being Conned

Haynes Johnson

"Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings ... — Book of Psalms

WASHINGTON — They were among the best and brightest of the Penn Hills Senior High School, advanced-placement students bound for college who scored highly on intelligence and preliminary scholastic aptitude tests. Of 27 members of their American history class, few had watched the Bush-Dukakis debate Sunday night, and even fewer were closely following the presidential campaign. They had shrewd, often deadly, insights though and inevitably reflected the views of their parents and the Pennsylvania community.

The most revealing moment during an hour-long, round-robin conversation in their classroom occurred when a student told her colleagues her strongest impression of this campaign.

"They act differently when the cameras are on them," she said, referring to George Bush, the Republican nominee, and Michael S. Dukakis, the Democrat. "Like they showed (GOP vice presidential nominee Dan) Quayle taking out the garbage and putting it in the garbage truck, and you know that he doesn't do that that way every day. It was just because he knew the TV cameras were there. It was all for that."

She evoked laughter, the most spontaneous of the session. How many felt the same way? They were asked. Virtually everyone raised a hand, further evidence that these children of the '80s, creatures of the television age, are coming to maturity deeply suspicious of the television pictures they see and distrusting the political message being peddled.

This suggests that politicians will have even greater difficulty persuading this group than the current crop of voters. Judging from public reaction to this campaign, that's saying a lot. These disparate public doubts and feelings of mistrust seemed to coalesce because of the debate. One result: Even those who had formed strong impressions about which candidate won later felt confused about what they had witnessed or, like the students, wondered whether they had been conned — by the candidates, the political manipulators, the media, their friends or even their emotions.

Consider the reaction of only one voter encountered by me and my colleague, David S. Broder, as we interviewed people in this blue-collar, ethnic community of suburban Pittsburgh after the debate. She was a Dukakis supporter, but her comments could have been made by a Bush supporter trying to assess the debate.

"I was outraged when they said the debate was a tie," said Phyllis Kernick, former Democratic mayor here. "I think the news media is so afraid of being called liberal and being accused of taking sides that they're afraid of coming out and calling it the way it is."

"I thought Dukakis was stronger, more forceful. He really made a great showing. He showed us that: 'I can speak. I have ideas. I'm not going to sit back and take this crap from this guy.' And he showed us that he can smile — well, a sort of forced smile anyway."

"Personally, I was appalled at Bush's lack of command of the English language, and he's a college man. His lapses, his starts and stops, his inability to complete a sentence or express an idea made me think he's not presidential material. He can't articulate clearly without hesitation."

Kernick offered another strong personal impression: that those real-life televised images can be as powerful and confounding as the candidates' manipulative commercials and staged-for-the-camera events.

"One thing Dukakis has going against him is his height," Kernick said. "I had one woman say to me today, 'You know, Napoleon was short. You can't really trust people who are short.' Can you believe that? But there are people who think that way."

'These children of the '80s, creatures of the television age, are coming to maturity deeply suspicious of the television pictures they see and distrusting the political message ... peddled.'

My subjective reaction to that event is that, despite the sterility of the format, the stagginess of the setting, the partisan importuning of an audience composed largely of rival supporters and the overprepared responses of the candidates, this was unusually revealing political theater.

If that debate truly reflected the measure of the man, Bush was well-advised about refusing to go head-to-head with his opponent. He couldn't cut it. The Bush seen last Sunday seemed hollow at the core, empty of ideas and surprisingly lacking in the kind of factual knowledge that his greater Washington experience supposedly has given him. Bush, not Dukakis, was the bumbling bureaucrat spouting jargon, and Bush was the one lacking in poise and composure.

Dukakis, far more commanding and knowledgeable, nevertheless demonstrated an inability to convey a human, personal touch, leaving those voters who believed him the winner unable to feel much emotion about it.

IN THE STATE

Decision Near

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative study commission on judicial selection that must make a report to the General Assembly next year appears to be leaning toward an appointive system or altering the existing partisan system.

James Exum, chief justice of the state Supreme Court, said he was pleased that members of the Judicial Selection Study Commission are considering an appointive system. In April, he told the panel he supports a system in which judges would be appointed by the governor and approved by the legislature.

"This is a question that affects every citizen of North Carolina," Exum said. "It's an issue that goes beyond just the judges, the legal profession and the politicians."

Any major changes in the judicial selection process would require a constitutional amendment that would have to be approved by three-fifths of the House and Senate and ratified in a statewide referendum.

Cherokees Gather

CHEROKEE (AP) — A two-day gathering of the Cherokee Nation of Oklahoma and the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians will be a bittersweet reminder of a 150-year-old tragedy, a past principal chief of the Eastern Band said.

This month marks the 150th anniversary of the government's forced march of more than 16,000 Cherokee from North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia to the Oklahoma Territory — a 1,200-mile relocation that left an estimated 4,000 Cherokee dead along what became known as the Trail of Tears.

"It's something we didn't learn about in school," Robert Youngdeer said. "But it's important for the young generation to know our history. It's a sad story, but something we should know about."

Youngdeer said the Trail of Tears and other injustices against native Americans have not been given enough attention. There has been a conscious effort to cover up a disturbing past, he said.

System Proposed

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A global system should be set up to allow developed countries to share their highway knowledge with less developed nations to prevent enormous growth in traffic deaths worldwide, a three-year international study says.

"The bottom line is that ideas have to work and cannot be too costly," said B.J. Campbell, director of the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina and a member of the study panel. "You can't suggest that developing countries build interstate highways when they clearly don't have the money to do that."

Campbell was one of three Americans in the study group, which included three Australians, a Canadian and a Briton. The group, in a book called "Reducing Traffic Injury — A Global Challenge," called for the global system. Not all improvements are expensive, he said. In China, for example, bicycles are painted black and do not have reflectors, drivers do not use their headlights continuously while driving at night and pedestrians have not been taught how to walk safely on a highway.

Tour Criticized

RALEIGH (AP) — A tour of China led by North Carolina's superintendent of public instruction that includes educators and family members probably will not provide taxpayers with any benefit for their money, House Speaker Liston Ramsey said.

"Taxpayer money ought not to be used for these overseas excursions," said Ramsey, D-Madison. "If it was going to be of some benefit, I would agree to it."

"But it is not going to be of benefit; you know it, I know it and the people of North Carolina know it — benefit to the school children, I mean," he said. "It may not be an illegal use of state funds, but in my view it is an improper use."

Some members of the group will travel at taxpayers' expense, but Craig Phillips, the school superintendent, and his wife will make the three-week trip for free because he recruited the tour group and the couple will serve as co-directors of the tour. Phillips is scheduled to leave Friday.

The trip is under the auspices of the Goodwill People to People Travel Program, which was founded to foster understanding among people of similar professions in different nations. People to People asked Phillips to make the trip, his office said.

Wrecks Kill Seven

Seven people have died on North Carolina roads this weekend, including three people killed in one wreck in Gaston County, the state Highway Patrol said today.

James Robert Adams, 85, of Belmont, died Saturday near Gastonia when the car he was driving pulled away from a stop sign and collided with another vehicle, troopers said. Also killed in the wreck was Gladys Adams Froneberger, 69, of Gastonia, a passenger in Adams' car, and Sara S. Epping, 42, of Clover, S.C., who was driving the other car.

Santana Miranda Jose Socorro, 15, of Bailey, was killed about 7:30 a.m. Sunday when the car in which he was a passenger struck an embankment off N.C. 58, nine miles northwest of Wilson.

Carlos B. Mutter Jr., 22, of Fort Bragg, died Sunday when the motorcycle he was riding struck a tree off a rural road about three miles south of Duplin.

Heidi Kuckenbecker, 22, of Concord, was killed in a 4:15 p.m. accident on Saturday. She was a passenger in a car that was traveling on N.C. 115 in Wilkes County when it ran off the road, came back on the road, spun around, went off the road on the other side and overturned, the patrol said.

James Milton Cofield, 58, of Rocky Mount, was killed at 9:35 a.m. Saturday at the intersection of two rural roads, 3.8 miles north of Rocky Mount. His car went through the intersection and collided with another car, troopers said.

The North Carolina highway fatality total for 1988 stands at 1,110, compared to 1,189 on this same date last year.

Season Closed

WILMINGTON (AP) — A decision to close Spanish mackerel season in federal waters for recreational fishermen one month early will have little effect in North Carolina, officials said.

William Hogarth, director of the state Division of Marine Fisheries, said because 80 percent of the fish are caught in state waters. Two months after the season began in April, North Carolina limited recreational fishermen to catches of 10 Spanish mackerel per person per trip in state waters.

The season came to a halt at midnight Sunday from North Carolina to Florida in federal waters, which are those 3 miles out and beyond.

Hogarth said he was told by National Marine Fisheries officials that the season will end because recreational fishermen in the South Atlantic states have caught more than twice the allowable quota.

A possible king mackerel closing in federal water would have a far larger impact on North Carolina.

National Marine Fisheries is considering ending the king mackerel season for commercial fishermen in late October or early November, said Jim Bahen, an extension agent with Sea Grant Marine Advisory Service. That would cut into the height of the season for all South Atlantic states except Florida.

Prisons Go On Trial This Week
Inmates Suing Over Noisy, Dirty Conditions

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's prison system goes on trial this week, as the state spurned the lone settlement proposal offered by attorneys for inmates involved in a class-action suit and say they are prepared to take their chances in court.

At issue is whether the conditions in some of the state's prisons are so crowded, so noisy, so dirty and so lacking in adequate ventilation and bathroom facilities that they deprive the inmates of basic human needs. A suit filed by inmates also contends that the medical treatment in the prisons is dangerously inadequate.

"We think we can win the suit," said Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson. "I think, at worst, the judge would point out some deficiencies and would give us time to correct those deficiencies. The state has demonstrated a vast amount of goodwill."

But in a blow to the state, U.S. District Judge Earl Britt ruled two weeks ago that he will not consider improvements to the system since the suit was filed in determining whether the plaintiffs' claim of constitutional violations are valid.

Improvements in the system would likely be considered only if the judge determines that the conditions in 1985 deprived inmates of their constitutional rights. Then, improvements might be considered as he determines what sort of remedial action is necessary.

The case might well settle a persistent question debated in state government: whether North Carolina will retain control over its prison system, or whether a federal court will order the state to take expensive steps to improve conditions in the prisons.

"The stakes are pretty high in this thing," said Joseph Hamilton, director of the state Division of Prisons. "This will be the first (inmate) case that we will have actually litigated, where we'll find out what the court thinks about it."

The case, the first phase of which is expected to last into December, is staggering in its breadth. More than 200 witnesses — including more than 100 inmates — may be called to testify. In addition to the lawyers working on the case, the Department of Correction has had one person working full time on the case since March, helping compile everything from population statistics to inventories of lockers and fire hoses.

Britt will decide whether the conditions in 49 medium and minimum custody prisons are so poor that a court order is needed to force changes in the system. Such an order would take at least part of the administration of the prison system out of the state's hands.

A court order could amount to just that, an order mandating changes that would allow the judge to find the state in contempt if the changes are not made. But it could also result in the appointment of a "special master" to essentially run the state's prison system, or a piece of it, for the court.

"Any time you go into court, you're taking a gamble," says Lucien "Skip" Capone, an assistant attorney general who is handling the state's case. "We think we've got our ducks in a row. We think it's a good risk at this point."

At issue in the case — known as Small vs. Martin — are the conditions in 49 of the state's minimum- and medium-custody prisons spread across the state.

Small vs. Martin, now a class-action suit, began in the summer of 1985 as a complaint filed by James Lenard Small, an inmate at the time in the medium-custody prison in Columbus County.

Small, 45, a laborer from Red Springs, is now in a Sampson County prison serving a life sentence for first-degree murder. In his suit, he echoed the complaints of many inmates: that the Columbus County prison was overcrowded, that it offered inadequate medical care for inmates, and that the prison was too hot in the summer and too cold in the winter.

Hatcher, Jacobs Seek Release

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal appeals court will consider whether two American Indians on trial on hostage-taking charges should be released on bond, while later in the week, the government will turn its case from the hostages to the negotiators.

Phil Kirk, Gov. Jim Martin's chief of staff, was waiting with other witnesses late last week at the trial of Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs. So were state Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, and the Rev. Joy Johnson of Fairmont, both of whom assisted in negotiating a settlement.

The final agreement drawn up by Kirk during the 10-hour siege at a Robeson County newspaper Feb. 1 called for a state task force to investigate the charges of local corruption. Kirk later headed that task force, which met with Hatcher and Jacobs only once. The two Indians canceled other scheduled meetings and criticized the task force for allegedly not pursuing their charges.

Hatcher, 31, and Jacobs, 20, are accused of taking up to 20 people hostage at The Robesonian in Lumberton. They were freed from jail in July after a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled they had been denied their right to a speedy bond hearing.

But the $100,000 unsecured bonds for Hatcher and Jacobs were revoked Aug. 26 by the full appeals court, which set oral arguments on the issue for Tuesday in Richmond, Va.

Jacobs surrendered to U.S. marshals Aug. 31 when he was notified of the court's decision, but Hatcher disappeared and was declared a fugitive. Hatcher was arrested when he surfaced with an attorney Sept. 19 at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle, who is presiding over the trial in federal court, said Friday he expects to continue the trial today, recess for two days to allow for the appeals court arguments, and resume the trial on Thursday.

Hatcher and Jacobs have insisted that they abided by all the restrictions of their bonds — including requirements that they stay out of Robeson County and check in daily with probation officers.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bruce, however, maintained at a July 5 bond hearing and in a later petition with the appeals court that the two Indians posed a threat to the community, had been involved in a crime of violence and should be kept in jail.

The opening days of the trial last week focused almost exclusively on the testimony of hostages and sparring by lawyers over how much questioning will be allowed on allegations of drug trafficking and corruption in Robeson County government.

Bruce has argued that Hatcher and Jacobs violated federal law by taking hostages and sawing down two shotguns to make illegal weapons.

Hatcher and Jacobs do not deny that, but argue that they were forced to take over The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton because they had evidence linking law enforcement officers to drug trafficking. That knowledge, they say, put their lives in danger and left them no choice but to take drastic action.

"We handle and conduct cases in such a way that raises these social justice issues to public awareness," said Lewis Pitts, director of the Christic Institute-South, which is defending Jacobs. "We are in this work to right these wrongs. The issues are what attract the attention."

Meanwhile, a University of North Carolina law school professor said Boyle's decision to force Hatcher to represent himself is destined to be reviewed by a federal appeals court.

Boyle, in a heated exchange last Monday, ruled that Hatcher would defend himself violations because his attorney — William Kunstler of New York — was tied up in another trial and could not be present.

"Somebody's going to have to take a look at this," said Richard Rosen, a professor who specializes in criminal defense. "A defendant has a right to represent himself if he so chooses, but this is a case where a defendant is being forced to represent himself."

"In the state courts of North Carolina, if either lawyer has an indisputable conflict they will usually postpone the trial," Rosen said. "Overall, the question is why there is such a hurry here that you couldn't let a defendant wait for his lawyer. I fail to see what the underlying necessity for forcing Mr. Hatcher to trial without his lawyer was in this case."

UNC Schools' Enrollment Up 5,000

RALEIGH (AP) — An increase of 5,000 students — most of them from the Tar Heel state — in the enrollment in the University of North Carolina system reflects UNC commitment to provide more state residents with the chance to go to college, a UNC official said.

Last year, the UNC system enrolled 131,913 students. While final figures will not be available until late October, enrollment at UNC campuses this fall is expected to surpass 137,000 — an increase of about 4 percent.

Raymond H. Dawson, UNC senior vice president for academic affairs, said enrollment growth probably can be traced to the larger class of high school students that graduated from North Carolina high schools last spring.

In 1987, the state's public schools graduated 66,045 students. While the final count won't be available from state officials for several weeks, the 1988 graduating class is expected to show an increase of more than 3,000 students.

Dawson attributed part of the university enrollment growth to the state's policy of keeping tuition as low as possible for North Carolina residents. State residents pay $504 a year in tuition to attend UNC-CH — far less than the comparable amount charged by most other states.

Dawson told The News and Observer of Raleigh that the percentage of North Carolina residents who attend colleges also had increased dramatically in the past decade.

N.C. State University enrolled 1,216 new students. With a student body of 25,537, NCSU remains the largest university in the state.

Enrollment at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the state's second largest university, is up 804 students, to 23,579.

Of the 15,691 undergraduates enrolled at UNC-CH this fall, 9,236 — or 59 percent — are female. Each year since 1975, the flagship campus has admitted more women than men, and has maintained an average female-to-male ratio in recent years of about 60-40.

The most dramatic growth in terms of percentage was at UNC-Charlotte, where enrollment increased 7.8 percent — from 12,031 to 12,970.

East Carolina University in Greenville remains the state's third largest public university, with a student body of 15,579 — a 4.7 percent increase over last year.

This fall's expected enrollment increase at UNC campuses continues a pattern of steady growth over the past decade at all levels of higher education in North Carolina.

From 1976 to 1986, enrollment in North Carolina's community colleges, public universities and private colleges increased 30 percent, from 240,936 to 312,503. According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, that places North Carolina sixth in the nation in terms of college enrollment growth.

Gary T. Barnes, UNC associate vice president for planning, said that in the past, the number of North Carolinians who have gone to college has been less than in most other states.

According to 1986 figures, 58 percent of the nation's high school graduates enrolled in some form of higher education, Dawson said. That compares to the college-going rate in North Carolina of about 51 percent, he said.

Discovery Makes Smooth Landing After Successful Space Trip

The astronauts were awakened shortly before 4 a.m. EDT with a parody of the Beach Boys' song "Fun, Fun, Fun" radioed up by Mission Control. "We'll have fun, fun, fun until we gotta put the shuttle away," a musical group chorused.

"Life's a beach," Hauck told Mission Control. "That is outstanding, outstanding. Thank you very much..."

You do good work."

Hauck and his crew were coming home from the first shuttle flight since the Challenger explosion of Jan. 28, 1986, and on Sunday they poignantly remembered the five men and two women who died in that tragedy.

In an emotional message which they took turns reading, Hauck, pilot Richard O. Covey, mission specialist George D. Nelson, John M. Lounge and David C. Hilmers eulogized their fallen comrades as "fellow so-journers" and friends and expressed "reverence for those whose sacrifice made our journey possible."

"At this moment, our place in the heavens makes us feel closer to them than ever before," Nelson said as the television screen showed the tail of Discovery silhouetted against a striking view of Earth 184 miles below.

"Lest we ever forget...that to ascend to this seeming tranquil sea will always be fraught with danger, let us remember the Challenger crew whose voyage was so tragically short," said Covey.

"Today, up here where the blue sky turns to black," said Hauck, "we can say at long last to Dick, Mike, Judy, to Ron and El, and to Christa and Greg:

"Dear friends, we have resumed the journey that we promised to continue for you. Dear friends, your loss has meant that we could confidently begin anew. Dear friends, your spirit and your dreams are still alive in our heart."

The seven who died aboard Challenger were Richard Scobee, Michael Smith, Judith Resnik, Ronald McNair, Ellison Onizuka, Gregory Jarvis and schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe.

Following the memorial, Discovery's astronauts held a 20-minute news conference from space while gathered in the middeck in front of a photograph of the Challenger crew.

"It's good to be back to where they wanted to go so badly," Lounge commented.

Thousands Cheer Shuttle Return

By Jeff Wilson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Thousands camped overnight on the Mojave Desert floor in motor homes, big rigs and tents, waiting to cheer today's return of the shuttle.

"Everyone has a flag up. It's so patriotic," said John Tibbets, 78, who led an 11-unit brigade of Airstream trailers from the San Bernardino Airstreams Club into the desert Sunday.

Air Force spokesman Lt. Col. George Neiss said that by Sunday night 10,950 vehicles, carrying an estimated 38,500 people, had arrived.

NASA and the Air Force predicted Discovery would be watched by as many as 200,000 people, including Vice President George Bush, who was to greet the astronauts as they descend from the orbiter.

All day Sunday the recreational vehicles streamed into the eastern shoreline of Rogers Dry Lake on a ribbon of heat-rippled two-lane blacktop lined by twisted Joshua trees and surrounded by rattlesnake-infested desert.

Despite some concern about the rattlesnakes, medics reported no problems.

The camp of silver Airstream cocoons, decorated with American and California flags, joined thousands of other motor homes on the 44-square-mile lake bed where the shuttle was to land.

"This is what America's all about," said Vic Failla, 61, a World War II veteran from La Verne who brought his brother, Tony, to this air base 80 miles north of Los Angeles.

License plates on the motor homes, trucks and cars represented states as far away as North Dakota and Florida.

The crowd was festive but orderly. The constant whir of portable generators droned throughout the day and night. Campers peered through binoculars and telescopes and set out jugs of tea to brew in the 102-degree heat. Teen-agers buzzed around on all-terrain vehicles.

Vendors hawked tiny flags and other souvenirs, such as Stealth bomber models and mugs. Alice Brakke, selling $2 flags, and witnessing her 18th shuttle landing, broadcast from her booth a tape of the late Kate Smith singing "God Bless America."

Other speakers broadcast news from the Houston Space Center.

"It's like a kid going to Disneyland," said Gordon Gilmore, 56, of Fort Worth, Texas. "All these flags are really something."

New Shuttle In Production

By Dennis Anderson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DOWNEY, Calif. — In a corrugated metal complex that reverberates with echoes of aerospace history, a team of 1,000 workers is building a replacement for the ill-fated space shuttle Challenger.

The new orbiter vehicle is as yet unnamed. It is a collection of titanium forgings, machined parts and electronic boxes known at this stage of production only as OV-105.

Its letter-number designator sounds more fitting for a robot in a "Star Wars" film than a spacecraft in a fleet of shuttles bestowed the stately titles of Atlantis, Discovery and Columbia.

"It's not our job to give it a name," shuttle production chief Seymour Z. Rubenstein of Rockwell International, the principal shuttle contractor, said cheerfully in a recent interview. "That's the government's job."

Actually, the replacement shuttle's name will be the brainstorm of school children who submit entries in a national competition that opens this fall.

After several elimination rounds, the administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will select a winner in May 1989, said Bill Green, a Rockwell International spokesman.

Only one thing is certain about the name.

"It definitely won't be Challenger 2, or anything like that," Green said.

While OV-105 waits for a name, about 100 subcontractors and 2,000 Rockwell shuttle program workers are giving the $1.3 billion orbiter its shape in Downey, a suburb of Los Angeles, and in Palmdale, the Mojave Desert city 50 miles north of Los Angeles where final assembly is to take place.

Already, the space vehicle's wings have sailed through the Panama Canal from Grumman Corp. on New York's Long Island on their journey to the Mojave Desert. The nozzles that guide the orbiter as it flies through space hail from McDonnell Douglas Corp. in St. Louis. Other key components are made at Rockwell facilities in Oklahoma and Ohio, and additional parts are being flown in from dozens of other locations across the United States.

When the new shuttle is finished, it will look almost exactly like the three others in the fleet.

"Essentially it will look the same," said Rubenstein, president of Rockwell's Space Transportation Systems Division.

That there are no drastic changes from previous shuttles is a point of pride for Rubenstein, one of the principal original designers of the shuttle.

"No other country could have built it," he said. "It's a well-designed product built by a tremendously dedicated work force."

Even though it looks the same as earlier orbiters, it will incorporate all the improvements found necessary by the Rogers Commission, which investigated the launch disaster that took the lives of the Challenger crew 2½ years ago.

Most notable is a crew escape system — a telescoping pole the crew could use to slide down and then parachute to the ground or into the water. Such a bailout system, a version of which was added to Discovery before its current flight, could not have saved the Challenger crew.

The new shuttle also will have upgraded electronics and an improved braking system, changes that also are being incorporated into the rest of the shuttle fleet.

Like its predecessors, OV-105 is taking shape in a complex where the Apollo capsule and Apollo-Soyuz command modules were built. Rockwell also built the X-15 rocket plane and the P-51 Mustang fighter plane.

courthouse get more experienced. These kinds of problems will iron themselves out."

Thomson said the 911 emergency service should be called only when there is an emergency in progress.

He said such emergencies might include a break-in in progress or a wreck with injured persons needing immediate medical attention.

Incidents which represent no immediate danger should be notified to the normal seven-digit telephone number to the appropriate service provider.

Those incidents might include if damaged mailboxes or slashed automobile tires.

Thompson said calling authorities through the regular seven-digit number will keep 911 lines free to handle emergencies.

Pakistan President Tours Death Scene

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HYDERABAD, Pakistan — Army patrols in machine-gun mounted jeeps and armored-personnel carriers patrolled this city and Karachi today after ethnic violence left more than 215 people dead in southern Pakistan.

Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan arrived here today to tour the scene of last Friday's bloody shooting spree in Hyderabad where more than 150 people died, according to the national news agency, APP.

More than 50 people died in Karachi, Pakistan's biggest city, a day later in retaliatory rioting.

The trouble is between Mohajirs, immigrants from India, and Sindhi separatists who want Sind province to be independent of Pakistan.

Most of the dead in Hyderabad on Friday were Mohajirs. Members of the immigrant community rioted in Karachi, 100 miles to the southwest, on Saturday, killing most Sindhis.

Violence continued Sunday when at least 17 people were killed.

Two people were killed in Hyderabad in a shooting spree when police briefly lifted a curfew.

The two-hour break in the curfew was intended to give residents an opportunity to buy food. Police quickly resumed the curfew after the shootings.

In Karachi, a group of people clashed with police Sunday and set about a dozen vehicles ablaze. Eight people died before police restored order, government authorities said.

Police reported that seven people were killed in ethnic-related gunbattles in the neighboring cities of Tando Adam and Mirpur Khas, about 150 miles north of Hyderabad.

Sind province officials met Ishaq Khan at the airport and briefed him on the massacre. The president flew in from a brief visit to Karachi.

No new deaths were reported today.

Ishaq Khan has called an emergency meeting of the provincial Sind caretaker cabinet to get to the root of the violent ethnic clashes which crept further into the interior.

Pakistan's army chief of staff, Gen. Mirza Aslam Beg, said the weekend carnage was part of a coordinated conspiracy to destabilize Pakistan as it prepares for national elections set for Nov. 16.

The militant Sindhis are members of the Jeay Sindhi Movement, who are seeking an independent homeland.

The Mohajirs, who dominate the province's cities, have formed the Mohajir Quami Movement to press for official recognition as a fifth nationality in addition to the Sindhis, Punjabis, Baluchis and Pathans.

Campaign Ends With Skirmishes

Chileans Vote Wednesday On Presidential Term

By Kevin Noblet
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTIAGO, Chile — After a flurry of rallies, arrests and speeches in the streets, campaigning was put on hold today while Chileans prepared for a vote on extending right-wing Gen. Augusto Pinochet's presidency to 1997.

Police and some army troops were out in force. By law political campaigning ended on midnight Sunday, after a massive pro-Pinochet caravan of cars, trucks and buses jammed the capital's main boulevards and groups of opposition sympathizers skirmished with riot police.

Dozens were arrested in the skirmishes, according to preliminary police reports. Helmeted riot officers used tear gas, water cannons and nightsticks to disperse groups of Pinochet opponents on the downtown streets.

At least ten people were hurt, two seriously, in isolated incidents throughout the day, including brawls between government supporters and opponents.

Hundreds of policemen patrolled the streets and were joined Sunday by small army units, most of them manning machine guns mounted on pickup trucks and other vehicles.

The government has insisted that it will keep strict order before and during Wednesday's referendum, in which the government is asking Chileans to ratify a proposal by Pinochet and other military commanders that he remain in power until 1997. The armed forces has traditionally been charged with guarding elections in Chile, where the last presidential ballot was in 1970.

If a majority of the 7.4 million registered voters cast "yes" ballots, Pinochet will begin a new eight-year term in March. If most vote "no," an open presidential election will be held in December 1989 and Pinochet will hand power over to the winner in March 1990.

In either case, elections for a congress are planned in a year. The legislature was disbanded when Pinochet, commander of the powerful army, seized power in a bloody 1973 coup that toppled the 3-year-old elected government of President Salvador Allende, a Marxist.

However, the legislature will be virtually powerless to amend a 1980 constitution, crafted by Pinochet's administration, that gives the military autonomy and a strong supervisory role in national affairs.

In Sunday's pro-government demonstration, tens of thousands of horn-honking, flag-festooned cars, trucks and buses filled the city's main boulevard and several other major thoroughfares.

Lines of vehicles stretched for miles from the city's center, especially on major roads to the affluent eastern suburbs. Huge traffic jams were spawned as they attempted to converge shortly after noon on the government palace in downtown Santiago, the capital city that is home to more than 4 million of the country's 12 million people.

"Viva Pinochet," shouted participants, many of them young people. They filled private cars, flatbed trucks and buses decorated with red, white and blue national flags and posters showing a smiling Pinochet in civilian dress.

Loudspeakers atop many of the vehicles urged people to vote "yes" in the referendum, while drivers leaned constantly on their horns.

It was by far the biggest demonstration of voter support for Pinochet, 72, who lags behind the opposition in most opinion polls. A 16-party opposition coalition staged its final campaign event on Saturday, drawing a crowd of hundreds of thousands of middle- and working-class Chileans to an open-air rally.

It was difficult to estimate attendance at Sunday's demonstration, as participants in the caravan snaked through the streets. Government-owned Radio Nacional de Santiago said 30,000 vehicles took part. A pro-government campaign spokesman claimed that 700,000 people participated, but the figure appeared to be an exaggeration.

As the caravan broke up, groups of government opponents entered the downtown on foot and in cars, chanting "He's going to fall." Police sent them fleeing with tear gas and water cannons, but they regrouped again and again, whistling in derision at the passing cars of Pinochet backers.

Pinochet recently has been easing political restrictions and cultivating a conciliatory image that contrasts with his harshly authoritarian reputation. He decreed an end to states of emergency in effect since he took power and lifted a ban on the return of all leftists in exile. Many of them were expelled or fled during a wave of fierce repression that followed the coup.

Hezbollah Leader: Intelligence Bickering Hurt Hostage Efforts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Rivalries between intelligence agencies have sabotaged efforts to help free foreign hostages, the spiritual leader of an umbrella group believed to be holding the hostages said in an interview published today.

Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, spiritual guide of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, also said the issue of the hostages had become political rather than humanitarian.

Hezbollah is believed to be an umbrella group for underground Shiite extremist factions holding most of the 17 foreigners missing after being kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1985.

Fadlallah told the English-language Monday Morning magazine that "the struggle of intelligence services and of states is such as to set at naught our best efforts" on behalf of the hostages.

"The issue was until recently a humanitarian one with political dimensions," Fadlallah was quoted as saying, "Now it has become wholly political, so a discussion of it necessarily implies a discussion of relations between the states involved and the kidnapers." He did not elaborate.

Fadlallah was responding to a question about reports that American hostages will be released soon and that the kidnapers of Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite were awaiting specific responses from the British government.

The Christian-controlled local news agency al-Markazia on Sunday issued advance excerpts of the Fadlallah interview with Monday Morning. The broadcast quoted Fadlallah as saying that the hostage ordeal was nearing its end.

"When the hostage question shifts to high-level talks between big powers, and they start speaking of deadlines, that means the question is nearing its end," Fadlallah was quoted as saying.

That quote did not appear in the interview published by the magazine and there was no explanation for the discrepancy.

In Jerusalem, the editor of an Israeli newspaper said Sunday that negotiators for the United States and Iran were holding talks near Geneva on the release of eight American hostages and one British hostage.

Hesh Kestin, managing editor of the Nation newspaper, said the talks included delegations representing Iran and the United States and "a mixed group" of intermediaries. He did not elaborate.

The Nation, an English-language weekly that began publication a month ago, reported Friday that the United States has struck a secret deal with Iran, promising economic aid and arms sales in exchange for the release of eight of the nine American hostages in Lebanon.

It said the deal would include the release of frozen Iranian assets in U.S. banks and the resumption of diplomatic relations.

President Reagan, White House officials and the State Department all denied the report.

According to the Nation, which quoted unidentified sources in Geneva, Iran would secure the release of five American hostages on or around Oct. 7. A second group of hostages, including three Americans and a Briton — possibly Waite — would be released a week later, the report said.

All are believed held by Shiite Moslem groups loyal to Iran.

The newspaper report said the U.S. put aside its demand that Tehran release Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins, one of the nine Americans, because officials were convinced Iran does not control the kidnapers holding him.

Seventeen foreign hostages are held in Lebanon. The hostage held longest is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Waite disappeared in Beirut on Jan. 20, 1987, while trying to negotiate the release of hostages.

In Beirut on Saturday, kidnapers holding three American educators and an Indian professor said they would release one hostage as a good-will gesture.

The group, the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, did not say in its statement which of the hostages it would free, or when.

Haitian Soldiers Face Arraignment

By Mitchell Landsberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The fate of three Haitian soldiers who forced their way onto a New York-bound jet in Haiti will depend largely on whether they were victims or victimizers in their Caribbean country, a human rights official says.

"The question is: Are they worthy of refugee protection? ... Are they merely fugitives from justice or are they refugees from persecution?" said Arthur Helton, director of the Political Asylum Committee of the Lawyers for Human Rights.

The three soldiers were arrested Saturday when American Airlines Flight 658 arrived at Kennedy Airport.

They boarded the plane in the Haitian capital of Port-au-Prince, armed with rifles and seeking political asylum. But the pilot persuaded them to surrender their weapons 15 minutes into the flight and none of the 233 people on board was hurt.

The soldiers were to be arraigned today in U.S. District Court on charges of air piracy. The trio — identified by Port Authority of New York and New Jersey police as Edouine Noel, 24; Nicolas Normil, 23; and Jean Charleston Bienaime, 23 — could face deportation or long U.S. prison terms, authorities said Sunday.

No information has been made public that would answer Helton's questions. The FBI, the U.S. Customs and the U.S. Attorney's office were unable to provide any details Sunday about the men's motives or background.

As one of the soldiers was being led away in handcuffs at the airport Saturday night, he called out to reporters that he fled Haiti because of "division a l'armee" — French for strife in the army. He and his two comrades were still dressed in their olive-green military uniforms and black boots as authorities took them away.

A Port Authority detective said Saturday night that the men expressed concern about a "communist takeover" of Haiti, though none of the turmoil in Haiti in recent weeks has been generally attributed to communists.

Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril was installed as president Sept. 17 following a

Attack Foiled

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Police thwarted a planned guerrilla attack on the U.S. Embassy, arresting two armed men while the others fled, according to a newspaper report.

Two guerrillas armed with guns and explosives were detained outside the heavily guarded downtown embassy at about noon Saturday, Deputy Interior Minister Agustin Mantilla said. He was quoted Sunday in the daily El Comercio, Peru's leading newspaper.

There were no reported injuries during the arrests.

coup by lower-ranking soldiers that led to the ouster of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy. The coup triggered a military uprising that led to the ouster of military commanders loyal to Namphy and the Duvalier family dictatorship that preceded him. Assistant U.S. Attorney Johnny Frank said the three soldiers could face maximum sentences of 20 years to life in prison if they are tried and convicted of air piracy.

The men can expect to be tried before their application for political asylum is considered, Helton said. He said the request for asylum could be granted even if the men are convicted, assuming they can prove that they acted out of desperation.

But if the men are shown to have been perpetrators of violence in Haiti, they could be deported following their conviction, Helton said.

Carroll and Betty Gray were keynote speakers during the N. C. Branch of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons state meeting in Greenville Saturday.

Carroll Gray told about the international activities of the Chautauqua organization he heads, its ministries, program and plans for the future. He told of the five international departments including study ministry, health careers, around the world, Indian and Chautauqua.

"The Chautauqua Institution emphasizes four areas — religion, philosophy, arts and recreation," said Gray.

A native of Maryland, Gray is president of the Maryland Branch. He has been international director of Chautauqua for the past four years.

Mrs. Gray told of qualities of Chautauqua students. She gave special recognition to Brenda Strawn and Stephanie Creech, the last North Carolina Chautauqua scholarship winners.

"Students must have goals and a strong religious background. They should demonstrate leadership abilities and are expected to attend lectures and participate in activities," she said.

Thirteen N.C. life memberships were awarded. Nancy Nahouse, representing the Benevolent Circle, recognized Betty Tate, Jeanne Rabey and Mary Effie Swindell.

In-laws Should Be Supportive

DEAR ABBY: We are heartbroken. Our beautiful, 24-year-old, college-educated daughter is engaged to marry a man who is old enough to be her grandfather. (He just turned 65!)

This will be "Mary's" first marriage, and "John" is twice divorced with grown children. Mary says they will probably have no children because John already has his family. She says she doesn't care. She "loves" him. Mary is our only child, so our dream of having grandchildren will never be realized.

John is a very nice man, and we have nothing against him. He is good to our daughter and will be a good provider, but, Abby, when Mary is 40 years old, he will be 81 — if he lives that long. They may have a few good years together, but in the end she will end up being a nurse to an old man.

What can her father and I say or do to prevent our daughter from making this terrible mistake? — HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Mary is an adult and has the right to make her own decisions. Who can say what is best for another? Your daughter must do what she thinks is right for herself. If, as you say, she is making a "terrible mistake" — then it is she who will pay the price.

Even though you aren't enthusiastic about your daughter's choice, please try to be more supportive, and don't put a damper on what should be the happiest day of a young woman's life. It's not the number of years we have, but the quality of those years. Who knows how many years any of us has?

DEAR ABBY: You frequently advise readers to seek "professional help" when they are confronted with a difficult problem in their lives. On one occasion, I was able to turn my life completely around with some helpful guidance that helped me work my way through a devastating situation. Therefore, I wonder how you feel about the public outcry that automatically condemns any public figure who has sought such help?

Dear Abby

Do you consider them wise for having sought professional insight into their problems, or do you think that those of us who have recognized this need in ourselves must forever bear the brand of being "emotionally unstable," and likely to break down under stress?

It seems to me that this is a vital concern for our time, not only when it comes to our choice of leaders, but in our personal lives as well.

Must the people who follow your advice to seek counseling make up their minds to accept a loss of self-esteem along with the help they receive? If that is so, it is going to deter many people from following your advice to seek counseling. — CLEVELAND READER

DEAR READER: Those who have had "professional help" should suffer no loss of self-esteem. On the contrary, they should feel better about themselves after having learned how to handle their doubts, fears, guilt and other human emotions that are common in all of us. The person who has had counseling is usually far better equipped to handle life's problems than one who hasn't.

DEAR ABBY: I hope this gets to you in time to tell that couple who want to name their son "Junior" to please reconsider. If the "senior" and "junior" are living in the same house, there will be constant confusion — especially after Junior's voice changes and someone calls on the phone wanting to speak to Bill.

"Big Bill" or "Little Bill" is the next question. Or worse yet, "Young Bill" or "Old Bill."

In some homes, there will be Bob and Bobby, George and Georgie,

Tom and Tommy. Those names stick, and can't you just see a 45-year-old "Dickie" running for county clerk? — BEEN THERE

Pakistan President Tours Death Scene

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HYDERABAD, Pakistan — Army patrols in machine-gun mounted jeeps and armored personnel carriers patrolled this city and Karachi today after ethnic violence left more than 215 people dead in southern Pakistan.

Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan arrived here today to tour the scene of last Friday's bloody shooting spree in Hyderabad where more than 150 people died, according to the national news agency, APP.

More than 50 people died in Karachi, Pakistan's biggest city, a day later in retaliatory rioting.

The trouble is between Mohajirs, immigrants from India, and Sindhi separatists who want Sind province to be independent of Pakistan.

Most of the dead in Hyderabad on Friday were Mohajirs. Members of the immigrant community rioted in Karachi, 100 miles to the southwest, on Saturday, killing most Sindhis.

Violence continued Sunday when at least 17 people were killed.

Two people were killed in Hyderabad in a shooting spree when police briefly lifted a curfew.

The two-hour break in the curfew was intended to give residents an opportunity to buy food. Police quickly resumed the curfew after the shootings.

In Karachi, a group of people clashed with police Sunday and set about a dozen vehicles ablaze. Eight people died before police restored order, government authorities said.

Police reported that seven people were killed in ethnic-related gunbattles in the neighboring cities of Tando Adam and Mirpur Khas, about 150 miles north of Hyderabad.

Sind province officials met Ishaq Khan at the airport and briefed him on the massacre. The president flew in from a brief visit to Karachi.

No new deaths were reported today.

Ishaq Khan has called an emergency meeting of the provincial Sind caretaker cabinet to get to the root of the violent ethnic clashes which crept further into the interior.

Pakistan's army chief of staff, Gen. Mirza Aslam Beg, said the weekend carnage was part of a coordinated conspiracy to destabilize Pakistan as it prepares for national elections set for Nov. 16.

The militant Sindhis are members of the Jeay Sindhi Movement, who are seeking an independent homeland.

The Mohajirs, who dominate the province's cities, have formed the Mohajir Qumi Movement to press for official recognition as a fifth nationality in addition to the Sindhis, Punjabis, Baluchis and Pathans.

Hezbollah Leader: Intelligence Bickering Hurt Hostage Efforts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Rivalries between intelligence agencies have sabotaged efforts to help free foreign hostages, the spiritual leader of an umbrella group believed to be holding the hostages said in an interview published today.

Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, spiritual guide of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, also said the issue of the hostages had become political rather than humanitarian.

Hezbollah is believed to be an umbrella group for underground Shiite extremist factions holding most of the 17 foreigners missing after being kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1985.

Fadlallah told the English-language Monday Morning magazine that "the struggle of intelligence services and of states is such as to set at nought our best efforts" on behalf of the hostages.

"The issue was until recently a humanitarian one with political dimensions," Fadlallah was quoted as saying. "Now it has become wholly political, so a discussion of it necessarily implies a discussion of relations between the states involved and the kidnappers." He did not elaborate.

Fadlallah was responding to a question about reports that American hostages will be released soon and that the kidnappers of Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite were awaiting specific responses from the British government.

The Christian-controlled local news agency al-Markazia on Sunday issued advance excerpts of the Fadlallah interview with Monday Morning. The broadcast quoted Fadlallah as saying that the hostage ordeal was nearing its end.

"When the hostage question shifts to high-level talks between big powers, and they start speaking of deadlines, that means the question is nearing its end," Fadlallah was quoted as saying.

That quote did not appear in the interview published by the magazine and there was no explanation for the discrepancy.

In Jerusalem, the editor of an Israeli newspaper said Sunday that negotiators for the United States and Iran were holding talks near Geneva on the release of eight American hostages and one British hostage.

Hesh Kestin, managing editor of the Nation newspaper, said the talks included delegations representing Iran and the United States and "a mixed group" of intermediaries. He did not elaborate.

The Nation, an English-language weekly that began publication a month ago, reported Friday that the United States has struck a secret deal with Iran, promising economic aid and arms sales in exchange for the release of eight of the nine American hostages in Lebanon.

It said the deal would include the release of frozen Iranian assets in U.S. banks and the resumption of diplomatic relations.

President Reagan, White House officials and the State Department all denied the report.

According to the Nation, which quoted unidentified sources in Geneva, Iran would secure the release of five American hostages on or around Oct. 7. A second group of hostages, including three Americans and a Briton — possibly Waite — would be released a week later, the report said.

All are believed held by Shiite Moslem groups loyal to Iran.

The newspaper report said the U.S. put aside its demand that Tehran release Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins, one of the nine Americans, because officials were convinced Iran does not control the kidnappers holding him.

Seventeen foreign hostages are held in Lebanon. The hostage held longest is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Waite disappeared in Beirut on Jan. 20, 1987, while trying to negotiate the release of hostages.

In Beirut on Saturday, kidnappers holding three American educators and an Indian professor said they would release one hostage as a good-will gesture.

The group, the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, did not say in its statement which of the hostages it would free, or when.

Haitian Soldiers Face Arraignment

By Mitchell Landsberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The fate of three Haitian soldiers who forced their way onto a New York-bound jet in Haiti will depend largely on whether they were victims or victimizers in their Caribbean country, a human rights official says.

"The question is: Are they worthy of refugee protection? ... Are they merely fugitives from justice or are they refugees from persecution?" said Arthur Helton, director of the Political Asylum Committee of the Lawyers for Human Rights.

The three soldiers were arrested Saturday when American Airlines Flight 658 arrived at Kennedy Airport.

They boarded the plane in the Haitian capital of Port-au-Prince, armed with rifles and seeking political asylum. But the pilot persuaded them to surrender their weapons 15 minutes into the flight and none of the 233 people on board was hurt.

The soldiers were to be arraigned today in U.S. District Court on charges of air piracy. The trio — identified by Port Authority of New York and New Jersey police as Edouine Noel, 24; Nicolas Normil, 23; and Jean Charleston Bienaime, 23 — could face deportation or long U.S. prison terms, authorities said Sunday.

No information has been made public that would answer Helton's questions. The FBI, the U.S. Customs Service and the U.S. Attorney's office were unable to provide any details Sunday about the men's motives or background.

As one of the soldiers was being led away in handcuffs at the airport Saturday night, he called out to reporters that he fled Haiti because of "division a l'armee" — French for strife in the army. He and his two comrades were still dressed in their olive-green military uniforms and black boots as authorities took them away.

A Port Authority detective said Saturday night that the men expressed concern about a "communist takeover" of Haiti, though none of the turmoil in Haiti in recent weeks has been generally attributed to communists.

Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril was installed as president Sept. 17 following a

Attack Foiled

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Police thwarted a planned guerrilla attack on the U.S. Embassy, arresting two armed men while the others fled, according to a newspaper report.

Two guerrillas armed with guns and explosives were detained outside the heavily guarded downtown embassy at about noon Saturday, Deputy Interior Minister Agustin Mantilla said. He was quoted Sunday in the daily El Comercio, Peru's leading newspaper.

There were no reported injuries during the arrests.

couple by lower-ranking soldiers that led to the ouster of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy. The coup triggered a military uprising that led to the ouster of military commanders loyal to Namphy and the Duvalier family dictatorship that preceded him. Assistant U.S. Attorney Johnny Frank said the three soldiers could face maximum sentences of 20 years to life in prison if they are tried and convicted of air piracy.

The men can expect to be tried before their application for political asylum is considered, Helton said. He said the request for asylum could be granted even if the men are convicted, assuming they can prove that they acted out of desperation.

But if the men are shown to have been perpetrators of violence in Haiti, they could be deported following their conviction, Helton said.

Campaign Ends With Skirmishes

Chileans Vote Wednesday On Presidential Term

By Kevin Noblet
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTIAGO, Chile — After a flurry of rallies, arrests and speeches in the streets, campaigning was put on hold today while Chileans prepared for a vote on extending right-wing Gen. Augusto Pinochet's presidency to 1997.

Police and some army troops were out in force.

By law political campaigning ended on midnight Sunday, after a massive pro-Pinochet caravan of cars, trucks and buses jammed the capital's main boulevards and groups of opposition sympathizers skirmished with riot police.

Dozens were arrested in the skirmishes, according to preliminary police reports. Helmeted riot officers used tear gas, water cannons and nightsticks to disperse groups of Pinochet opponents on the downtown streets.

At least ten people were hurt, two seriously, in isolated incidents throughout the day, including brawls between government supporters and opponents.

Hundreds of policemen patrolled the streets and were joined Sunday by small army units, most of them manning machine guns mounted on pickup trucks and other vehicles.

The government has insisted that it will keep strict order before and during Wednesday's referendum, in which the government is asking Chileans to ratify a proposal by Pinochet and other military commanders that he remain in power until 1997. The armed forces has traditionally been charged with guarding elections in Chile, where the last presidential ballot was in 1970.

If a majority of the 7.4 million registered voters cast "yes" ballots, Pinochet will begin a new eight-year term in March. If most vote "no," an open presidential election will be held in December 1989 and Pinochet will hand power over to the winner in March 1990.

In either case, elections for a congress are planned in a year. The legislature was disbanded when Pinochet, commander of the powerful army, seized power in a bloody 1973 coup that toppled the 3-year-old elected government of President Salvador Allende, a Marxist.

However, the legislature will be virtually powerless to amend a 1980 constitution, crafted by Pinochet's administration, that gives the military autonomy and a strong supervisory role in national affairs.

In Sunday's pro-government demonstration, tens of thousands of horn-blowing, flag-festooned cars, trucks and buses filled the city's main boulevard and several other major thoroughfares.

Lines of vehicles stretched for miles from the city's center, especially on major roads to the affluent eastern suburbs. Huge traffic jams were spawned as they attempted to converge shortly after noon on the government palace in downtown Santiago, the capital city that is home to more than 4 million of the country's 12 million people.

"Viva Pinochet," shouted participants, many of them young people. They filled private cars, flatbed trucks and buses decorated with red, white and blue national flags and posters showing a smiling Pinochet in civilian dress.

Loudspeakers atop many of the vehicles urged people to vote "yes" in the referendum, while drivers leaned constantly on their horns.

It was by far the biggest demonstration of voter support for Pinochet, 72, who lags behind the opposition in most opinion polls. A 16-party opposition coalition staged its final campaign event on Saturday, drawing a crowd of hundreds of thousands of middle- and working-class Chileans to an open-air rally.

It was difficult to estimate attendance at Sunday's demonstration, as participants in the caravan snaked through the streets. Government-owned Radio Nacional de Santiago said 30,000 vehicles took part. A pro-government campaign spokesman claimed that 700,000 people participated, but the figure appeared to be an exaggeration.

As the caravan broke up, groups of government opponents entered the downtown on foot and in cars, chanting "He's going to fall." Police sent them fleeing with tear gas and water cannons, but they regrouped again and again, whistling in derision at the passing cars of Pinochet backers.

Pinochet recently has been easing political restrictions and cultivating a conciliatory image that contrasts with his harshly authoritarian reputation.

He decreed an end to states of emergency in effect since he took power and lifted a ban on the return of all leftists in exile. Many of them were expelled or fled during a wave of fierce repression that followed the coup.

Chautauqua Directors Are Branch Speakers

The Daily Reflector

At state meeting are Jean Weaver, Margaret Highfill, Annie Turner, Betty Gray and Carroll Gray.

Carroll and Betty Gray were keynote speakers during the N. C. Branch of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons state meeting in Greenville Saturday.

Carroll Gray told about the international activities of the Chautauqua organization he heads, its ministries, program and plans for the future. He told of the five international departments including study ministry, health careers, around the world, Indian and Chautauqua.

"Chautauqua is six weeks of common experience for college students. The most important thing for the students — students are the program," he said.

"The Chautauqua Institution emphasizes four areas — religion, philosophy, arts and recreation," said Gray.

A native of Maryland, Gray is president of the Maryland Branch. He has been international director of Chautauqua for the past four years.

Mrs. Gray told of qualities of Chautauqua students. She gave special recognition to Brenda Strawn and Stephanie Creech, the last North Carolina Chautauqua scholarship winners.

"Students must have goals and a strong religious background. They should demonstrate leadership abilities and are expected to attend lectures and participate in activities," she said.

Thirteen N.C. life memberships were awarded. Nancy Nahouse, representing the Benevolent Circle, recognized Betty Tate, Jeanne Rabey and Mary Effie Swindell.

Reports were given by state officers including Margaret Highfill, president, Joan Lunsford, vice president, Dr. Mary Lois Staton, historian, and Lillian Brame, treasurer.

Mrs. Tate gave the registration report. Others reporting were Margaret Preddy, Annie Turner, Edith Harton, Polly Dail, Jean Weaver and Sue Matherly.

Minnie Scott of Durham, immediate past state president, installed new state officers including Dr. Staton as historian and Miss Turner as chairman of the Indian department. Both are from Greenville.

State circles include Benevolent, meeting hostesses, Endeavor, Guilford, Patient, Sara Barker, Sheltering Home and St. Luke.

The Sara Barker Circle in Durham issued an invitation for the convention in 1989.

constitutionally required separation of church and state.

— Agreed to decide whether states may be sued in federal court by parents seeking to enforce a law aimed at assuring adequate education for handicapped children.

The justices said they will hear an appeal by Pennsylvania officials ordered to pay a year's private school tuition for a student with a learning disability.

— Rejected the appeal of a Pennsylvania couple criminally convicted in their young son's death for trying to heal him through prayer rather than seeking medical care.

The court, without comment, let stand William and Linda Barnhart's convictions for manslaughter and endangering the welfare of a child stemming from the 1981 death of their 2-year-old son, Justin.

— Left intact a $48.3 million judgment awarded Trans World Airlines against a company founded by the late billionaire Howard Hughes.

The court, without comment, rejected arguments by Summa Corp. and William R. Lunnis, administrator of the Hughes estate, that the award should be thrown out.

— Agreed to decide whether the federal government may continue to use newspapers for carrying advertisements for privately run lotteries and other games of chance.

The justices said they will study a Minnesota Newspaper Association challenge to a postal law effectively prohibiting such advertising.

— Agreed to decide whether communities may seek to protect young teen-agers by barring anyone over 18 from dance halls or other establishments catering to minors.

The court said it will consider reinstating a Dallas ordinance that licensed certain dance halls on the condition only teens 14 to 18 and their parents or guardians be admitted as patrons.

— Refused to force an insurance company to help pay for cleaning up dioxin, a highly toxic chemical, disposed of in various Missouri locations in the early 1970s.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling that an insurance policy held by the chemical firm responsible for the pollution did not make the insurance company liable for clean-up costs.

— Agreed to consider the authority of states to deny unemployment benefits to people who refuse to work on their Sabbath.

The court said it will decide whether Illinois officials lawfully refused to pay benefits to a man whose refusal to work was not based on the doctrine of any established religious body.

In the Conrail case, the railroad announced in February 1987 that it unilaterally would check for drugs as part of a urinalysis administered periodically to workers and also when they returned to work after an absence.

The railway said the need for the tests were manifested by an accident at Chase, Md., on Jan. 4, 1987, in which an Amtrak passenger train collided with Conrail locomotives, killing 16 and injuring 174. The Conrail engineer and brakeman subsequently were found to have been using marijuana.

Conrail had been conducting urine tests since 1976 as part of periodic physical examinations administered to workers at intervals varying between one and three years depending on the employee's age and job classification. But those tests were aimed at discovering whether a worker, for example, had diabetes and not whether the employee was using drugs.

Railway labor unions said adding the drug screening component to the urinalysis violated the federal Railway Labor Act.

The unions said the expanded tests were a major change in working conditions and must be submitted to collective bargaining.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia agreed with the unions.

U.S. Told Of Imminent Hostage Release

spokesman said. "But we have not received a name, and I cannot comment any further." He said he did not know if the hostage purportedly to be released is an American.

During his daily White House news briefing, Fitzwater said the tip off to a hostage release was relayed to U.S. officials in Washington by an American embassy overseas.

But he persistently refused to speculate on what circumstances might be behind a hostage release, although Fitzwater said repeatedly that the United States was making no deals with Iran, either directly or indirectly.

Last Friday, Reagan, while on a campaign trip to Chicago, denied that the administration was steeped in negotiations with Iranian officials in Geneva aimed at securing the release of at least five American hostages by Oct. 7, as a report published in Israel held.

Earlier in the week, however, the president, during a meeting in New York with representatives of Persian Gulf states, told reporters he was optimistic about the hostage situation.

He also said, however, that he didn't want to talk about it.

"We've been advised that it (a release) is expected to happen," Fitzwater said today.

"We don't know that it is going to happen," he added. "I hasten to point out that we have almost no details. So I prefer to wait and see."

In Beirut on Saturday, kidnappers holding three American educators and an Indian professor said they would release one hostage as a goodwill gesture.

The group, the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, did not say in its statement which of the hostages it would free, or when.

Fitzwater said, "Our situation is the same. Our policy is the same. No deals. No quid pro quos."

"First of all, we need to wait and see that it does happen," he said, noting that "we have had some similar kinds of reports in the past... that fell through... There is a concern, in the sense that we don't know what their motives are in any of these actions."

In an interview published today, the spiritual leader of an umbrella group for kidnappers holding foreign hostages said he thought the problem was nearing an end.

"When the hostage question shifts to high-level talks between big powers, and they start speaking of deadlines, that means the question is nearing its end," Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, spiritual head of Hezbollah, was quoted as saying in the weekly Monday Morning magazine.

The Christian al-Markazia news agency carried advance excerpts of the interview on Sunday.

Hezbollah, or Party of God, is believed to be the umbrella group for kidnappers holding most of the 17 foreign hostages in Lebanon.

Napoleon Bonaparte abdicated as emperor of France in 1814 and was banished to the island of Elba.

Tainted Olympics Close

Memories Of Top Performances Overshadowed

By Steve Wilstein
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A Korean boxer who knew he didn't deserve his gold raised the hand of an American who felt cheated, and with that noble gesture of sportsmanship ended an Olympics that will be remembered, sadly, for its scandals. So many athletes came and did so well — the Soviet gymnastic whizzes and men's basketball team, East German swimming star Kristin Otto, Americans Greg Louganis, Janet Evans, Jim Abbott, Carl Lewis, Florence Griffith Joyner and Jackie Joyner-Kersey.

These Games overcame the fear of terrorism and civil unrest and brought together nearly 10,000 athletes from 160 countries in stadiums, arenas and pools as fine as ever seen.

The Soviets reigned again with 55 golds, followed by East Germany's 37 and the United States' 36. Host South Korea rose to No. 1 in Asia, and fourth in the world with 12 golds.

As always, though, the medals meant much less than the memories the athletes and fans took away with them.

There were glorious moments, from an opening ceremony with exotic dancers and parachutists to a closing with hugs and tears, fireworks and dances, and the mascots of Seoul and Barcelona, the site of the 1992 Games, floating together into the starry night.

Yet, the highest moment of the Games — Ben Johnson rocketing to victory over Lewis in a 100-meter dash world record — led to the deepest pain when the Canadian was caught cheating with muscle-building anabolic steroids.

Twenty years from now, when most of the records set in Seoul are broken, the impact of Johnson's disgrace will still be felt if athletes and trainers heed the events here and end doping.

"There have been high points and some low points, and the most important low point was Ben Johnson," Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Monday. "That was indeed a blow."

Catching Johnson, however, and expelling him along with nine other athletes with positive drug tests was an indication, Samaranch said, that "we have won the battle against doping."

Lessons for the future also could be learned from the strange and appalling things that went on at the boxing ring, from an American fighter missing his bus and his bout, to Korean coaches pummeling a referee, and judges losing sight of honesty.

Three golds, three silvers and two bronzes were quite a haul for the U.S. boxers, but they weren't enough to wipe out the bitterness of a decision Sunday against 19-year-old Roy Jones in the 156-pound final against Korea's Park Si-hun.

Jones peppered Park's face with rights and left hooks for three rounds, forced him to one standing 8-count and could have gotten three others that would have ended the fight in the ring. Instead, the decision went to the judges and the result was astonishing — to the fighters, the coaches and even to many Koreans.

The Soviet and Hungarian judges scored it 60-56, a huge spread, in favor of Jones. The judges from Uruguay and Morocco scored it 59-58 for Park, and the judge from Uganda had it 59-59, with a plus mark for the Korean that gave him the gold.

On the victory platform, the gold around Park's neck and the silver on Jones', the Korean raised the American's hand for the crowd. Here, the gesture said, is the real winner.

"I thought I lost the fight," Park said. "I might have won the gold medal thanks to the advantage of a home ring."

Glancing Back Upon Olympic Happenings

By Scott Ostler
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

SEOUL, South Korea — Looking back on the Olympic Games, these were a few of my favorite things...

Favorite group portrait: The heavyweight boxing also-rans on the medal-presentation platform.

Ray Mercer won the gold and he looked fine. The silver medalist Korean was missing a front tooth. The co-bronze medalist, a Polish fighter, wore dark glasses to hide an eye cut that had been opened up like a can of tomato sauce. The other bronze medalist, from Holland, had his left arm in a cast and sling.

Is this a great sport or what?
Favorite sportsman: The Canadian yachtsman who was sailing along in second place until he turned around to pick up a competitor who had fallen out of his boat in heavy seas.

You like to think that this is what the Olympic Games are all about.

This is not what the Olympic Games are all about, but you like to think it is anyway.

Favorite fashion trend: The hoods worn by some American runners.

Really, really chic. But where were the snorkels and flippers?

It was an especially inspired idea for the U.S. men to wear the hoods in the 400-meter relay, an event where it is essential to hear well and to swivel one's head quickly.

How did the USA do in that event, anyway?

Favorite gender: How 'bout them women?

For personality, poetry and performance, for simply lighting up the Games, I'll take FloJo, Jackie and Janet and give you any other three athletes in Seoul.

Despite what the final medal count says, it seems to me that in the big events, the American women had a sensational Games.

Favorite cabbie: Mr. Kim, a peppy little gentleman who was doing his darndest to master English.

He hummed the Star Spangled Banner, then spoke glowingly of the U.S. warships cruising off the Korean coast, providing Olympic security.

"Meedway. Neemitz. Sank you, USA, sank you."

Then we talked politics. He held up his right thumb and said "Boosh?" He held up his left thumb and said "Doo-cocky?"

He pointed at himself and said, "Me. Boosh, number one."

It was refreshing to meet someone with whom I could hold my own in a political debate.

Favorite trend: The phasing out of amateurism in the Olympics, the dying of an elitist, hypocritical and unworkable concept.

By '92, all sports will be open. I like Hulk Hogan's chances to kick some butt and bring home the wrestling gold in Barcelona, Spain.

Favorite mystery: The Mystery of the Yellow, Gooney Substance.

Charlie Libretto came to East Carolina and made a big splash immediately. As a true freshman, he earned a starting position at quarterback and had people talking after guiding the Pirates to a victory over N.C. State in his first collegiate game.

But as the season went along, things got rougher and red-shirt freshman Travis Hunter began to step to the fore, taking Libretto's starting job away from him. Libretto continued to play from time-to-time and on some of those occasions, he performed well, even earning his starting job back.

But when the two began their sophomore-years, Hunter had moved ahead. Last year, he started in every game and Libretto saw only limited action until the final game of the season against Southern Mississippi, when he almost pulled the game out for the Pirates.

After that, however, Libretto, disillusioned with the way the ECU program was going, decided to call it quits, and announced he would transfer away from the school.

Fortunately, he thought better. He appealed to Coach Art Baker and his former teammates for another chance. He was given it and worked his way back up from the bottom.

A week ago, he came on the field against Southern Mississippi with the Pirates trailing and guided the Bucs on two touchdown drives to put them into the lead with time running short.

The defense, however, crumbled before the Golden Eagles in the final minute and a half, and Southern pulled out the victory.

Still, Libretto's performance earned him a chance to start for the first time in two years against Southwestern Louisiana.

LT Makes Most Of Return To NFL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants returned from a four-game suspension for drug use Sunday, but his return was nearly overshadowed by a player who returned from the same penalty a month ago — Washington's Dexter Manley.

Taylor, a linebacker at North Carolina, had a sack on the third play of the game, forcing a fumble by Washington quarterback Mark Rypien that set up a 32-yard field goal by Paul McFadden, giving the Giants an early 3-0 lead in a game they ended up winning 24-23.

He added a sack late in the half, finishing with two sacks for a total of 20 yards lost.

Taylor's performance, however, was almost lost in the sack act pulled off by Manley, who had four in an eight-minute span late in the third quarter and early in the fourth to help Washington rally from a 24-9 deficit.

Nonetheless, Taylor, a seven-time All-Pro and the NFL's Most Valuable Player in 1986, did his job.

"He makes the other team so aware of him that he allows us to do other things," said Harry Carson, the Giants' captain, who recovered the fumble on Taylor's sack of Rypien.

"He wasn't as good as he can be but it was good to have him back."

Coach Bill Parcells was noncommittal about Taylor's performance, but Rypien wasn't.

"He's just a great football player," Rypien said. "For the most part, we did a good job on him. There were a few times he got to me but that's to be expected."

Police Examining Tyson Disturbance

BERNARDSVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Local police were investigating reports of disturbances in the Bernardsville mansion of heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

Authorities said they would have a statement today regarding reports that Tyson flew into a rage at his wife, Robin Givens, and mother-in-law, Ruth Roper, and hurled furniture through the windows of the mansion.

Dispatchers from both the Bernardsville Police Department and the Somerset County sheriff's office confirmed that police had responded to an incident at the house Sunday morning.

According to the New York Daily News, Bernardsville police said they were under orders from Chief Thomas Sciarretta not to say anything about the incident.

Both the News and New York Post reported the disturbance in today's editions.

Reportedly, the argument Sunday morning stemmed in part from a television interview that Tyson's wife and mother-in-law had with Barbara Walters, which aired last Friday on ABC's "20-20."

During the interview, Givens and Roper portrayed Tyson as a "scary" and "frightening" person to live with.

The Post said an outraged Tyson hurled a sugar bowl, a fireplace and iron and chairs through the windows of his home. The News said Tyson brandished "an instrument" from the fireplace and ran through the home smashing windows.

Givens and Roper, apparently unharmed, reportedly fled the house and drove several miles to a nearby gas station, where they first phoned Shelly Finkel, a close friend, and then phoned police.

According to The Post, Tyson stayed in the house for several minutes, then hopped into one of his cars and drove to New York City. Hours later, The Post said, Tyson phoned for a limousine to pick him up after he missed meeting a friend.

Saints-Cowboys Ready To Go

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The last time this city was exposed to the "flex" defense, the alignment got a disproportionate share of the blame for a 1-15 finish by the New Orleans Saints.

That was in 1980. A year later, it was revealed that cocaine was more to blame than the defensive scheme. But Dick Nolan had already been fired as head coach by the Saints and hired as an assistant by the Cowboys, where he re-joined Tom Landry, who perfected the flex and still uses it.

"We're playing it probably half the time. We're much more multiple than we used to be," Landry said.

The Cowboys, 2-2, meet the Saints, 3-1, tonight at the Superdome.

The flex is a four-man front with one or more of the defensive linemen playing off the line of scrimmage, "flexed," reading the flow and reacting in a carefully choreographed pattern to mesh with the rest of the defense. It's designed to stop the run and force the opponent to pass.

Bengals Move Mark To 5-0

Wyche Comes Through For Cincinnati

By Hank Lowenkron

Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche understood the ultimatum he received from the team's owners before starting the 1988 NFL campaign.

Wyche is in the fifth-and-last year of his contract and the Bengals haven't made the playoffs since he arrived in 1984. The message was either show improvement in 1988 or start packing.

Owners Paul and Mike Brown never told Wyche how much improvement the team needed to show. But, the team is doing its share to keep Wyche around.

The Bengals, who finished 4-11 last year, are 5-0 and the only NFL's only undefeated team after overpowering the Los Angeles Raiders 45-21 Sunday. Cincinnati holds a two-game advantage over defending AFC Central champion Cleveland and Houston.

The Buffalo Bills and Los Angeles Rams, who also went into Sunday's action undefeated, were losers. The Chicago Bears beat Buffalo 24-3, while the Phoenix Cardinals defeated the Rams 41-27.

Boomer Esiason picked apart the Raiders' secondary for 332 yards and three touchdowns.

"Our defense played beautifully, our offense came up one yard short of 500 yards," said Wyche, who isn't overplaying the importance of the club's best start since it opened 6-0 in 1975 en route to an 11-3 record.

"Being the only undefeated team means about three days of bragging. It doesn't mean a thing," said Wyche, who evened his NFL coaching mark at 34-34 with Sunday's victory.

In other games Sunday, it was Cleveland 23, Pittsburgh 9; Tampa Bay 27, Green Bay 24; Philadelphia 32, Houston 23; New England 21, Indianapolis 17; the New York Giants 24, Washington 23; Seattle 31, Atlanta 20; Denver 12, San Diego 0; San Francisco 20, Detroit 13, and Miami 24, Minnesota 7. Kansas City and the New York Jets played a 17-17 tie.

Dallas is at New Orleans tonight.

"They didn't do anything fancy but they sure play real hard," Raiders quarterback Jay Schroeder said of the Bengals.

Esiason completed 10 straight passes at one stage, finishing with 21 completions in 28 attempts without being intercepted or sacked.

"Week in and week out, it's a different phase of the team that wins games for us," said Esiason, who has 81 completions in 136 attempts for 1,372 yards and 12

Sports Notes

UNC-Wilmington Blanks Pirates, 5-0

UNC-Wilmington became the seventh opponent to shutout East Carolina as the Seahawks handed the Pirates a 5-0 loss Sunday in Colonial Athletic Association soccer action.

UNC-W outshot ECU, 15-2, in the first half but only led 1-0. ECU goalies Mac Kendall had seven saves while Lee Benswager had four. UNC's Buck Rowlee had to only make one save for the game.

ECU falls to 1-8 overall, 0-6 in the CAA, and returns to action against William and Mary Sunday at home.

UNCW moves to 5-4 overall and 5-2 in the CAA.

Hornets-Chapman Still Talking

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte Hornets vice president Carl Scheer and an attorney for first-round draft choice Rex Chapman talked for 90 minutes Saturday, but did not reach an agreement.

Chapman's attorney, David Falk, has invited Scheer to come to Washington Tuesday in hopes of reaching an agreement and signing Chapman, a shooting guard who left Kentucky with two seasons of eligibility remaining, was chosen eighth overall in June's draft.

"I don't know that we made any progress at all," said Scheer. "In that hour-and-a-half, there were perhaps three minutes when I felt we were moving ahead."

Meanwhile, Scheer said he thinks the Hornets have at least temporarily lost their third-round selection. The agent for third pick Jeff Moore of Auburn claims he can't find his client, though Scheer said he believes Moore is playing in Europe.

Moore, who entered this summer's rookie camp badly overweight, signed a non-guaranteed contract with the Hornets. Scheer says if Moore doesn't report to the team's first training camp Tuesday, the Hornets will suspend him and retain his NBA rights.

"In fact, we'd prefer he'd go to Europe," said Scheer. "Anywhere that he can play, and we can still retain his rights, is good for us."

Scheer also said four players will join former Duke center Martin Nessley as free agents trying to make the team. Michael Gibson of South Carolina-Spartanburg, Kenny Fields of UCLA, former Los Angeles Laker Larry Spriggs and Jerome Henderson, a veteran of the Continental Basketball Association, are expected to report to camp Tuesday. Former North Carolina-Wilmington player Brian Rowsom also is on the Hornets training camp roster.

Frost Happy He Decided To Play

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — David Frost wasn't going to come to the Southern Open golf tournament — had a change of heart — and wound up winning his first PGA event.

Frost, a 29-year-old South African who makes his home in Dallas, captured the first prize of $72,000 Sunday by knocking in a 5-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole to edge Bob Tway.

"I wasn't going to come last year and decided to come at the last minute," said Frost, who finished second a year ago, one of nine runner-up finishes during his four years on the tour.

"And I wasn't going to come this year, but finally decided to come," said Frost, who despite never winning before Sunday has earned more than $1 million on the tour the last two years.

He said his reasons for contemplating not returning here, included the field, which only had three of the top 20 money-winners, and "the money is so small. I have a great tournament and I get only $72,000 and win a golf tournament."

"I've had bigger paychecks (without winning) than this before," he said, later apologizing by saying, "I don't mean it the way it sounds."

But, he did admit, winning was special.

Gymnastics Club Places In Meet

RALEIGH — The Greenville Gymnastics Club had several girls to place in a Class III qualifying sectional held at Gym Carolina in Raleigh over the weekend.

Competition was held both in Class III compulsory and Class III optional categories.

Farrah white was fifth in the floor exercises with a 7.05; Elizabeth Christopher was sixth in floor exercises with a 6.95; and Stacy Bornstein was sixth in the vault with a 7.3.

In the optionals, ages 9-11, Ragan Tayloe was third on the uneven bars with a 7.6, fifth in the vault with a 7.35, fifth in the floor exercises with a 7.5 and fourth in the all-around with a 28.85. Jessica Sloan was sixth in the vault with a 7.3 and sixth on the balance beam with a 6.85.

In the 12-14 age group, Amy Rose was first in the vault with an 8.10 while Susu Hunnicutt was third in floor exercises with an 8.05 and fourth in the vault with a 7.55.

ECU Women Capture Tourney Title

RALEIGH — East Carolina's Lady Pirate tennis team captured the Meredith College Invitational Tournament this weekend, topping the other seven teams in the field.

ECU sent five of its six singles members into the finals, where three captured wins, Wendy Simpson, Malyanee Morgan and Kathi Messer. Jill Hobson and Simpson combined to win one of the doubles matches, while Morgan and Ellen Harrell won another.

Other teams in the tournament included Atlantic Christian, Meredith, Mt. Olive, Pfeiffer, Queens, Salem and Wingate.

ECU returns to action Tuesday, hosting UNC-Wilmington.

Guadagnino Finishes On An Upswing

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Kathy Baker Guadagnino was on an upswing, and Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez was on a downer at the end of the $300,000 Konicia San Jose Classic.

Guadagnino, 27, the 1985 U.S. Open champion, became a tour winner for just the second time Sunday by firing a 5-under-par 67 to win by a single stroke over Cathy Marino. Guadagnino had a 54-hole score of 9-under-par 207.

"Some people were thinking that maybe my U.S. Open win was fluke," Guadagnino said. "I try not to get offended by what people say, but it did hurt. That's why this win is just a little nicer."

Marino, who was in a nine-way tie for fourth place that included Guadagnino when the round began, had four birdies and no bogeys for a 68 and a total of 208.

Lady Pirate Spikers Bow In Tourney

ROCK HILL, S.C. — East Tennessee State defeated East Carolina's Lady Pirate volleyball team, three games to one, in the Winthrop Invitational Tournament Saturday.

East Tennessee won the first game, 15-8 and followed that with a 15-6 victory. East Carolina came back to take a 15-7 win in the third contest, but ETSU wrapped it up with a 15-9 win.

"It was a good tournament for us," Coach Judy Kirkpatrick said. "The level of play was equal to our level. We had excellent play from Debbie Tate and Michelle MacIntosh this weekend."

ECU is now 6-7 and travels to UNC-Wilmington on Saturday, where it will face American and George Washington.

Regular Season Closes Out

Mets Close With Boom; L.A. Bows

Bumblng Bosox Glad It's Over

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Mets tuned up and the Los Angeles Dodgers tuned down. The rest of the National League tuned out.

On the final day of the season, Darryl Strawberry and Mets ended the schedule the way they started it — with a boom and a bang.

Strawberry homered twice and reached the 100 RBI mark and the Mets beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-5, finishing the year at 100-61.

Strawberry had hit one of the Mets' record six homers on opening day. But now that doesn't count. All that matters is Game 1 against the Dodgers on Tuesday and Orel Hershiser, who hasn't lost since the Mets beat him Aug. 24.

"The first game is very important," Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez said. "If we can't beat them and Hershiser it will have to make them think. But if they win it would help their confidence against us."

In the meantime, the Mets used Sunday for some records.

Ron Darling, 17-9, won his fifth consecutive decision since Aug. 21. He also went 3-for-3 and drove in two runs, doubling his season total. Randy Myers finished with an inning of one-hit relief for his 26th save.

The Mets set a team record with their 56th victory at home, including the last 11 in a row for another club mark. The crowd of 42,099 brought the season attendance to 3,047,724, a team record.

Larry McWilliams, 6-9, gave up seven hits and five runs in four innings.

In other games, San Francisco beat Los Angeles 1-0, San Diego beat Houston 5-1, Chicago beat Pittsburgh 8-4, Cincinnati beat Atlanta 1-0 and Montreal beat Philadelphia 3-1.

Darling will pitch against Tim Leary on Friday in Game 3. David Cone will pitch against John Tudor in Game 2 — if Tudor is not sidelined by a hip injury.

"They have an outstanding team and are strong in every area," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "But we have outstanding pitching, too."

Giants 1, Dodgers 0

Don Robinson pitched a three-hitter and Matt Williams had three hits and singled in a run.

Robinson, 10-5, and retired the last 17 batters and beat Los Angeles for the first time since September 1982.

Leary, 17-11, gave up three hits and three walks in five innings.

Padres 5, Astros 1

Astros manager Hal Lanier and three of his coaches were fired as San Diego won for the ninth time in 10 games, finishing third in the NL West.

Dennis Rasmussen, 16-10, scattered nine hits, winning for the ninth time in 12 decisions.

San Diego was 83-78, the fourth-winning season in the Padres' 20-year history, following a 16-30 start under Larry Bowa, who was fired and replaced by Jack McKeon.

Houston, 78-67 on Sept. 14, lost 13 of its final 17 games, including the last five. Jim Deshaies, 11-14, gave up four hits and two runs in five innings, striking out six.

Cubs 8, Pirates 4

Andre Dawson hit his 298th career homer and Ryne Sandberg also homered in a three-run fifth inning.

Pittsburgh finished 85-75, the Pirates' best record since 1979, when they won the pennant. Chicago finished fourth at 77-85, one game ahead of St. Louis.

Andy Van Slyke hit a sacrifice fly and Bobby Bonilla hit a run-scoring single in the seventh, giving them 100 RBI each.

Jamie Moyer, 9-15, allowed nine hits and four runs in 6 1-3 innings. John Smiley, 13-11, gave up 10 hits in four innings.

Reds 1, Braves 0

Keith Brown, 2-1, scattered five hits over seven innings for his second major-league victory and the Braves were shut out for a league-leading 17th time.

Atlanta finished 54-106, the most losses in the National League since Montreal went 55-107 in 1976 and the most losses for the Braves since 1935, when they were 38-115.

Cincinnati finished second in the NL West for the fourth consecutive season, going 87-74.

John Franco pitched a hitless ninth for his National League-leading 39th save in 42 chances. Jim Acker, 0-4, allowed six hits over five innings in first start since Oct. 3, 1986.

Expos 3, Phillies 1

Brian Holman won for the first time in four starts since Sept. 4 and Andres Galarraga hit his 29th home run.

Philadelphia finished last for the first time since 1973 and the Phillies' 65-96 record was their poorest since 1972, when they were 59-97.

Montreal completed the season 81-81 after being 63-52 on Aug. 13.

Holman, 4-8, gave up seven hits in 7 1-3 innings before Joe Hesketh finished with hitless relief for his ninth save. Don Carman, 10-14, gave up seven hits and struck out five in seven innings.

The Oakland Athletics can't wait for the American League playoffs to begin. The Boston Red Sox are just glad the regular season is over.

The A's, AL West champions, completed their best season since 1931 with a 4-0 victory Sunday over the Milwaukee Brewers. The Red Sox, who finished first in the East despite dropping six of their last seven games, were beaten 6-5 by the Cleveland Indians.

Oakland's 104-58 record was the best in baseball and with the playoffs set to begin Wednesday at Boston's Fenway Park, the A's are determined to prove their season was no fluke.

"We feel we have the most powerful team in baseball," designated hitter Dave Parker said. "We have more speed. It's more of a case of them matching up with us."

Luis Polonia also likes his team's chances.

"We had a good last week and they didn't. I guess we're more prepared than them."

The Red Sox are understandably more cautious. Their late-season slump left them with a record of 89-73, the first time an AL East champion won fewer than 90 games, excluding strike seasons.

"Well, we got the troops in there," reasoned Manager Joe Morgan, who replaced the fired John McNamara and immediately returned the team around, winning his first 12 games and 19 out of 20.

Boston's second baseman Marty Barrett also was unconcerned about the team's shaky finish.

"In 1986, we did the same type of thing against the Yankees," Barrett said. "We got everybody into the games and we lost four games, but everybody was sharp going into the playoffs."

Both teams failed to achieve milestones for their ace relievers, but for different reasons. Oakland's Dennis Eckersley finished with 45 saves, one behind Dave Righetti's major-league record, because he entered Sunday's game with a four-run lead, one too many to qualify.

Boston's Lee Smith could only wish he had that problem. The right-hander came up one short of having 30 saves for his fifth straight season because the Red Sox kept losing.

"We played a week and didn't get the lead one time for Smith in all those games," Morgan said. "When you boil it down, we won the one game we had to win."

Tigers 4, Yankees 3

Detroit, which led the AL East by two games on Aug. 31, got an RBI single from Darrell Evans in the bottom of the 11th and ended up in sole possession of second place.

Blue Jays 9, Orioles 3

George Bell hit a two-run homer and Toronto handed Baltimore its 61st road loss of the season, an American League record.

The last-place Orioles, who began the season with 21 consecutive losses, finished at 54-107, the worst record in the major leagues. Toronto finished at 87-75. Its 45-29 record after the All-Star break was the best in the AL East.

Twins 3, Angels 2

Greg Gagne hit a two-run homer and Minnesota became the first American League team ever to go over the three million mark in attendance.

The Twins, who won eight of their last 12 games, finished at 91-71. Minnesota was 85-77 last season when it won the World Series. The Angels ended up 75-87 and lost their last 12, a club record.

White Sox 5, Royals 1

Dan Pasqua hit his 20th home run and Shawn Hillegas allowed five hits in six innings as Chicago beat Kansas City.

Hillegas, 3-2, walked three and struck out five. Tom McCarthy allowed two hits in three innings to earn his first major-league save. The White Sox finished with a 71-90 record. The Royals were 84-77.

Rangers 7, Mariners 2

Texas got a two-run homer from Ruben Sierra and three hits each from Pete O'Brien and Curtis Wilkerson to finish two games ahead of last-place Seattle in AL West.

Pitching Dominant During 1988 Season

If 1987 was the year for batters to swing, 1988 was their year to sing.

All across baseball, hitters complained that the pitching was just too good.

"There are so many dominant pitchers this year," said Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres, who won his second straight batting title, this time with a .313 average, the lowest for a champion in National League history.

"There is a whole list of pitchers who have dominated," Gwynn said. "Last year they said pitching was down, but it's not this year."

Gwynn's average was 57 points less than his league-leading batting average last year. Larry Doyle of the New York Giants had the previous lowest average for an NL champion, batting .320 in 1915.

A year after offense reached record levels, pitching dominated. There were 3,180 home runs, a 28.7 percent decrease from last year's record of 4,458. Five players hit 30 or more homers this year; a record 28 did last year.

There were just five .300 hitters in the NL, the fewest since 1968, and the NL average fell from .261 to .248. The AL average dropped from .265 to .259.

While batters struggled, pitchers flourished. There were six 20-game winners, up from two last year. The AL earned-run average dropped from 4.46 to 3.96, the NL from 4.08 to 3.45.

Wade Boggs, however, defied the trend. He batted .366 and became the first AL player to win four consecutive batting titles since Rod Carew of Minnesota from 1972 through 1975. The only AL player with more consecutive titles was Ty Cobb, who won nine straight from 1907 through 1915.

"It's my fourth in a row. You want to be the best and that's the way to measure it, so it's very gratifying," Boggs said.

Boggs had 214 hits, becoming the first player this century to get 200 hits in six consecutive seasons.

Kirby Puckett of the Twins finished second to Boggs with a .356 average, the highest by a right-handed batter in the AL since Joe DiMaggio hit .357 in 1941 for the New York Yankees. Puckett's 234 hits were the most by a right-handed hitter in the AL since Al Simmons of the Philadelphia Athletics has 253 in 1925 and the most for a right-hander in either league since Ducky Medwick of the Cardinals had 237 in 1937.

Records Fell During Olympic Track Action

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — From the shimmering speed of Florence Griffith Joyner to the disgraced disgrace of Ben Johnson. From the finger-pointing fiasco of the U.S. men's 400-meter relay team to the multi-talented magnificence of Jackie Joyner-Kersey. The Olympic track and field competition ranged from glorious to, as Carl Lewis said, "bizarre."

"There were a lot of ups and a lot of downs and a lot of in betweens," he said. Throughout, there were incredible performances. Two world records fell and another was tied. Thirty Olympic records were broken in the 42 events.

Capping it all on a muggy Sunday afternoon was a 29-year-old Italian surveyor's courageous come-from-behind triumph in the men's marathon to win the last gold medal of the Seoul Games.

Some of the biggest names were some of the Games' most conspicuous also-rans, including Edwin Moses, Said Aouita, Daley Thompson, Steve Cram, Ingrid Kristiansen and Mary Decker Slaney.

Lewis won two golds and a silver, but one of his golds came when Johnson was stripped of his medal because anabolic steroids were detected in his body after his 100-meter victory.

Lewis was beaten decisively in the 200 meters by his friend and training partner, Joe DeLoach, and didn't get to run in the 400-meter relay because the U.S. team was disqualified in its first heat.

"Nothing was well-defined from the beginning," Lewis said. "I think (Rogers) made a bad decision."

There were no such problems on the U.S. men's 1,600-meter relay team of Danny Everett, Steve Lewis, Kevin Robinzine and Butch Reynolds, which, even though it ran literally by itself far ahead of the competition, tied the 20-year-old world record of 2:56.16.

The 19-year-old Lewis, a sophomore at UCLA, led a U.S. sweep of the 400 meters, beating Reynolds, the world record holder.

Moses, trying to become the first person to win three Olympic golds in a running event, could do no better than third behind gold medalist Andre Phillips of the United States and Amadou Dia Ba of Senegal.

Thompson, seeking an unprecedented third Olympic gold in the decathlon, finished fourth, largely because of a persistent groin injury compounded by arm and leg injuries suffered when his pole snapped in half during the pole vault.

Slaney, seeking her first Olympic medal and trying to avenge her disastrous performance in the 1984 Games, when she collided with Zola Budd in the 3,000 and fell to the infield in tears, wound up 10th in the 3,000 and eighth in the 1,500.

"Thanks in part to the surprisingly strong showing of the U.S. women, the Americans won the close medal battle with the Soviet Union and East Germany.

The United States 28 medals overall, one more than the Soviets and two more than the East Germans.

U.S. women won six golds, their most ever except for 1984, when the Eastern bloc nations boycotted the Los Angeles Games. The U.S. men won seven golds, only two less than they won four years ago.

The performance was a remarkable turnaround from last year's World Track and Field Championships, when the United States won just 19 medals overall and only nine golds.

Leading the American resurgence was Griffith Joyner, with her dazzling smile, long red-white-and-blue fingernails and incredible speed. She won three golds and a silver.

She smashed the women's world record in the 200 meters twice on the same day, running 21.56 seconds in the semifinals and 21.34 in the finals. She also won the 100-meter gold, laughing through the final 50 meters, after setting an Olympic record of 10.62 seconds in the semifinals.

She was part of the gold-medal winning 400-meter team and ran the anchor on the 1,600-meter relay team that finished second to the Soviet Union in a record-shattering final. Both the Soviet time of 3:15.18 and the U.S. clocking of 3:15.51 broke East Germany's two-year-old world mark.

"I was looking forward to meeting invading Korean boxing officials, Ben Johnson's flunkout and U.S. boxing Coach Ken Adams and his bizarre hinting at bribery.

I'm sure everyone involved will eventually get fair hearings, but I miss the old days, when the Olympic trials were held before the Olympics?

Favorite faces: A thousand-way tie for first.

Florence Griffith Joyner, smiling her way to the tape in the 100. ... Ben Johnson's memorable, menacing scowl. ... Oscar Schmidt, the Brazilian hoopster, happy and gracious in defeat. ... Roy Jones, the American boxer cheated out of a gold medal, unable to hold back the tears but facing the press with a poise and dignity far beyond his 19 years. ...

A seemingly stoic East German boxer, so overjoyed at winning a decision that he burst into tears.

Player Of The Week

Picking this week's player of the week was simple. Jamesville's junior tailback Keith Basnight won hands down.

Basnight led the Bullets to a 20-0 win over Chocowinity Friday piling up 240 yards on only 15 carries. Basnight also scored a pair of touchdowns and added a 2-point conversion as Jamesville improved to 2-3 for the season.

Prep Honor Roll

Favorite Things Of Summer Olympics

What was in the bottom of that bottle that Ben Johnson drank from just before running the 100 meters and then testing positive for steroids? What was that stuff? Who gave it to Ben? And how credible is a conspiracy theory that involves some stranger walking up to Ben Johnson just before the Olympic final and saying, "Here, Ben, have a drink from my water bottle. Never mind that yellow, gooey stuff in the bottom of the bottle. It's not steroids or anything."

Favorite non-athlete adult in the Games, be it doctor, coach, judge or official: None.

Favorite play on the word "Seoul": None.

Favorite stereotype-buster: Anthony Nesty, the black swimmer from Suriname who beat Matt Biondi to win a gold medal in the 100 butterfly.

"Either Nesty has proven Al Campanis wrong," said one observer, "or he won by sprinting along the bottom of the pool."

Favorite comeback kid: Kadima Tshibabalaba, a heavyweight boxer from Zaire.

He lost a decision early in the boxing tournament and wept unconsoled for several hours, until some Korean friends convinced him he still had a chance to win a medal.

With the coaching of his pals, Kadima memorized a Korean folk song phonetically and took a bronze medal in a singing contest.

Oops, I just gave away the ending of "Rocky XXVI."

Favorite small talk: Two portly American reporters visited a Seoul university campus to check out the student riots.

The Americans were confronted by an armed soldier who demanded to see their press passes. Satisfied that they were properly credentialed, the soldier thought it only proper to break the ice with a little polite chit-chat.

"So," he said, "you are two well-fed gentlemen."

Favorite scandals: Tie among the mask-stealing Americans, the ring-invading Korean boxing officials, Ben Johnson's flunkout and U.S. boxing Coach Ken Adams and his bizarre hinting at bribery.

I'm sure everyone involved will eventually get fair hearings, but I miss the old days, when the Olympic trials were held before the Olympics?

Libretto Shines

In Saturday's game, he played every offensive down but two. Those two came on an abbreviated series when Hunter came on the field — to a chorus of boos — to lead the Pirates to a quick touchdown.

Even Libretto thought that the Pirate fans reacted unfairly in that situation. "If you are going to be a Pirate fan, you have to be for the team," Libretto said.

Libretto finished the game with good statistics. He connected on 11 of 20 passes for 163 yards and one touchdown, although he had two picked off. He ran for 59 yards, the second highest total on the team, despite being sacked three times.

And despite the fact that he played little last year, Libretto is moving up on the ladder of ECU passing. He currently is seventh in both career completions with 125 and yardage with 1,649. In completions, he trails number six Leander Green by only eight. Hunter is next ahead of him in yardage with 1,951, and both are chasing number five Kevin Ingram, who had 1,976.

Walter Wilson has also slipped into the top 10 in pass receiving yardage. Wilson's 47 yards brought him to 721, tying him for 10th place with Vic Wilfore. Next ahead of him is Jimmy Adkins, who had 825. With 40 career catches, Wilson is seven behind Jimmy Adkins and Stefan Adams, who each had 47 to place 10th.

If Libretto's offense continues to shine as it has the last two games, he — and his receivers — could easily begin moving further up as the season goes along.

A little more on the subject of high school football games starting at 7:30 p.m. instead of 8 p.m.

Last week, I had the opportunity to talk with several athletic directors from the Northeastern Conference, which changed their starting time to 7:30 p.m. this year.

Both Nolan Respass of Roanoke and Harold Robinson of Williamston said they had generally opposed the switch in starting time, citing loss of gate.

But after five weeks of play, both say they are sold on the time. "You get home earlier, and it hasn't shown that it's affected the gate," they said.

A couple of other officials from the conference agreed with them. It is very unlikely that the conference will return to an 8 p.m. start in the future.

Charles Adams, the executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, said that a number of conferences in the western part of the state had switched to the 7:30 time and he had heard no complaints from anyone. He said that everyone seemed to like that time.

Hopefully, eastern coaches and athletic directors will take heed.

 Saturday's Cryptoquip: AT POULTRY FARMERS' FAMOUS PARTY THEY ONLY DANCED CHICK-TO-CHICK.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Oct. 4

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19): This is a perfect opportunity to settle some troubling business matters. Be sure you do your share of any cooperative activities.
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Make sure you keep a promise you've made to your mate, or risk a possible misunderstanding and argument by renegeing.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Some unfinished work at home can be finished quickly and easily if you use some enthusiasm. Don't invite any argumentative guests in.
- MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Today is ideal for running errands, paying bills and visiting friends. Handle some neglected correspondence tonight.
- LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Review and revise your accounts this morning. Check your possessions for possible needed repairs. If you find any, make them immediately.
- VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): A friend could make a critical remark which bothers you today, but don't lose your temper: it was constructive and will help you later.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Stop living in a dream world and turn your ideas into reality. Do something thoughtful for your mate just for the heck of it.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): If you lack a sense of direction, confer with some successful acquaintances and get their advice. This will be a happy evening.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Know what is expected of you from your superiors; they may be scrutinizing your performance today. Be conscientious.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You can have great success in gathering needed information, so find it and use it. A newcomers attitude may disturb you.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Your mate may have some doubts about your activities this morning, but will be supportive later. Use great care while driving today.
- PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A partner may act strangely this morning, but once your point is understood, he will be very helpful. Dress nicely for a social function.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K8743 ♥985 ♦J3 ♣K104
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner's reverse bid is, in the modern style, forcing to at least three of his original suit. If you want to show a minimum, you do so by bidding two no trump. However, rebidding a five-card major suit takes preference. Bid two spades.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AQ5 ♥7 ♦AJ4 ♣AK9843
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—An awkward hand. Three clubs overstresses the club suit and could result in your losing a spade game or slam, but you are a spade short for a jump to three spades. The solution lies in a temporizing reverse bid of two diamonds. Now you see why it is important to rebid two spades on the first problem.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AKQ1076 ♥AK5 ♦AQ ♣83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—We won't fault you if you elected to bid four spades (three spades would qualify you for our Chicken-of-the-Year award). However, we prefer three no trump. We can construct a lot of hands that offer little play for four spades but where nine tricks at no trump roll in.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K873 ♥QJ8 ♦962 ♣QJ7

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
 A.—That depends on your range. If you play 15-17 point no trumps, our choice would be to pass—with your flat hand and soft values, the odds are against game even if partner is maximum. But if you play 16-18 no trumps, invite game with two no trump.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q92 ♥KQJ109 ♦A762 ♣6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have an excellent heart suit headed by 100 honors, but forget about it! It would be a crime to suppress such good four-card support for partner's suit, even though it is a minor. Raise to three diamonds.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠107 ♥KJ4 ♦AK9642 ♣Q6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 What do you bid now?

Farmers Start Lining Up For Drought Help

$3.9 Billion Has Been Authorized

By Don Kendall
AP FARM WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers can start lining up today at Agriculture Department offices to apply for federal drought aid under a $3.9 billion disaster program passed by Congress two months ago.

The measure, signed by President Reagan on Aug. 11, authorizes assistance for livestock, grain and other agricultural producers. It is administered by the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, or ASCS, which has county offices nationwide.

Drought and hot weather devastated this year's grain crops in much of the country, reducing total grain output by an estimated 31 percent from 1987 harvests, according to USDA estimates.

eligible costs of reseeded non-annual forage crops on established pastures destroyed by the drought.

CROP AID
Disaster payments will be available to producers with gross annual revenues less than $2 million on crops for losses greater than 35 percent of normal production. Commercially grown crops are eligible.

Payments are calculated by determining the amount of loss below 65 percent of normal production and then multiplying that by the applicable payment level.

There are two payment levels, 90 percent of the payment rate for losses in excess of 75 percent of normal production, and 65 percent of the payment rate for losses between 35 percent and 75 percent of normal production.

Payment rates vary among "program" and "non-program" crops, a distinction between those covered by federal price support benefits and those that are not. Another distinction is whether a farmer is enrolled in a specific crop program, in which case it is called a "participating program crop." If the farmer is not in the program, it is a "non-participating program crop."

On that basis, some of the payment rates will involve:
—For participating program crops, led by wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice, the payment rate will be the target price. That is the price level or goal used to compute regular payments to producers; these "deficiency" payments typically relate to the difference between the target and an average market price, or loan rate, whichever is higher.
—For non-participating program crops, the payment rate will be the county loan rate.

Excess Medicare Billings Targeted

By Jerry Estill
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 31 million Medicare beneficiaries paid $2.7 billion in doctor bills over and above the charges the government considered reasonable last year, a citizens advocacy group said today.

That breaks down to an average of $38.11 for each of the 70.3 million doctor bills processed by the federal program that included what is known in Medicare jargon as "excess billing."

Those 70.3 million claims were 23 percent of the total doctor bills submitted to Medicare in fiscal 1987, the last year for which records are complete.

The excess billing claims came from the 63 percent of the nation's doctors who have not agreed to abide by fee schedules set by Medicare.

Broken down by state, the percentage of claims with excess charges ranged from 3 percent in Massachusetts to 51 percent in Wyoming.

Although federal health officials and Congress have instituted a series of programs designed to encourage doctors to follow the Medicare scale, there is no national rule requiring them to do so.

The percentage of physicians who voluntarily follow the Medicare fee schedule ranges from 73.5 percent in Alabama to 14.9 percent in Idaho.

Doctors in Massachusetts are barred by state law from billing their patients more than the Medicare scale, and only 45.9 percent of them have agreed voluntarily to join Medicare's roster of "participating physicians" who "accept assignment."

Medicare beneficiaries are required to pay 20 percent of the amount charged even by those doctors who "accept assignment" — that is submit bills that adhere to the Medicare fee standard.

Those required co-payments amounted to $25.99 for each of the 70.3 million claims that also contained excess billing. When the average Medicare co-payment is added to the average excess charge, the average out-of-pocket expense for each of the 1987 claims was $64.11.

"With physician net income 10 times that of the elderly, it's not too much to ask that all doctors accept the rates Medicare sets for reimbursement as full payment from all Medicare patients," said Robert M. Brandon, vice president of Citizen Action.

Bluebirds always have a home in Bickleton, Wash., where birdhouses outnumber homes.

In Bickleton, Bluebirds Always Rule The Roost

By Nicholas K. Geranios
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BICKLETON, Wash. — Birdhouses outnumber homes in this tiny community, which bills itself the bluebird capital of the world and goes out of its way to make sure the shy birds keep coming back.

This town of 150 in the windswept Horse Heaven Hills first gave bluebirds an incentive to stay more than two decades ago, and they have returned again and again to raise their young and provide a little extra income for a depressed economy.

"It's a real community pride," said Lynn Mains, co-owner of a restaurant and one of many who help maintain the birdhouses.

The Bickleton bluebirds are now gathering in flocks for their mid-October migration to Mexico or southern California. The males begin returning in February, often to the same house, and are followed by the females.

Although the altitude and climate of this wheat country are ideal for bluebirds, their population was declining two decades ago, Ms. Mains said. The birds are cavity dwellers, and there were not enough dead trees or rotted fence posts for them to build nests in.

Jess Brinkerhoff of nearby Richland realized the problem while camping in the area with his wife, Elva, in 1965. They nailed up a rusty one-gallon can, and that became the first of about 1,500 birdhouses that fill the town and dot the surrounding countryside.

At first, the Brinkerhoffs were the lone caretakers for the birds, building, cleaning and maintaining the houses. "My wife passed away four years ago, and then the people of Bickleton took over," said Brinkerhoff, 78.

Because arthritis and advancing age have slowed Brinkerhoff down, the chief birdhouse maker now is Bill Shotwell, who's built about 400.

"I usually saw out the pieces for 100 birdhouses and drill the holes, and I'm supposed to be retired," Shotwell said.

Unlike the many swallows that swarm to San Juan Capistrano in southern California on the same day every year, just a few thousand bluebirds trickle into Bickleton.

But that was enough to lead the North American Bluebird Society to proclaim Bickleton the bluebird capital of the world in 1983. The Brinkerhoffs also were recognized.

It's not easy to keep bluebirds in the neighborhood. Old nests must be completely cleaned out each winter, and the houses need periodic maintenance.

The houses are white and the roofs blue, approximating the color of the male bird's plumage. "The females are attracted to it," Ms. Mains explained.

The little town hasn't profited much from its bluebirds, mostly because it is so far off the beaten path. Bickleton is 50 miles south of Yakima, on a narrow, winding two-lane road that climbs steeply up to the town.

But a few hundred visitors are drawn each year by celebrations such as the annual Bluebird Run and the Bluebird country Christmas.

Merchants sell glass bluebirds, T-shirts and caps, as well as the plywood houses made by Shotwell, with profits going toward the building of more houses.

In addition, "each year we have a contest to see who can spot the first one," Ms. Mains said. "You win a good pat on the back and a cup of coffee."

Stand Defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Du Pont Co., facing criticism for its operation of nuclear weapons reactors at the Savannah River Plant, insists its commitment to safety at the South Carolina facility is "unyielding."

"We were appalled and dismayed to read news accounts which assert that we have in any way posed a nuclear safety threat to our employees or the public," the company said in a statement on Sunday.

"Our record of performance in radiation control and nuclear safety clearly indicates the opposite," it said. "In fact, we have never had an employee experience a single day of lost work from any nuclear incident."

Phoenix Clan Can Identify With Film's Pope Family

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The unique nature of the Phoenix family was recently related by young actor River Phoenix.

"I was born in Oregon, my sister, Rain, was born in Texas, my brother, Joaquin Rafael, alias Leaf, was born in Puerto Rico, my other sister, Liberty, is a native of Venezuela, my other sister, Summer, was born in Florida, my mother in the Bronx, N.Y., my father in Fontana, Calif," he said.

River, who just turned 18, added: "Since I was 10, we have been based in Los Angeles. We moved frequently from home to home in Los Angeles, never owned a house. Sometimes we moved because our financial condition was weakening and we needed a more affordable place. Sometimes we moved because we recently got a part which allowed us to get above the unpleasant conditions we were in."

Arlynn and John Phoenix worked odd jobs and lived the free-spirited lifestyle of the 1960s. They were non-conformists and loved nature. Today, they write and lecture on environmentalism and work as farmers in Florida.

Besides River, Leaf, 13, is an actor. The other children also have done a little acting.

The Phoenix family offers an uncanny parallel to the Pope family in the current Warner Bros. release, "Running on Empty," which stars Christine Lahti, Judd Hirsch and River. Both families are environmental activists and nontraditionalists.

But there is an important difference: the Popes, husband, wife and two sons, are on the lam. During the turbulent 1960s, the parents bombed a napalm laboratory, inadvertently blinding a janitor. The Popes have been on the FBI's most-wanted list ever since.

"We were a little different from the motives behind the Pope family and why they moved," Phoenix said. "Obviously, they were moving because they had to for survival."

According to family legend, River began his performing career at the age of five on the streets of Caracas, singing with his sister, Rainbow, then three. When the family made the move to Los Angeles, he began getting television work, making his film debut in the 1985 "Explorers." His naturalness and dramatic intensity impressed critics and young fans alike in "Stand by Me," "The Mosquito Coast," "A Night in the Life of Jimmy Reardon" and "Little Nikita."

How does he see his future in films — or does he just take one year at a time?

"Even one year at a time is too long a time span for me to foresee. I'm very happy with what I'm doing, very aware and open to changes, will accept them gladly when they come," he said. "By all means I am not tied down, nor do I feel the need, nor is my security or my ego riding on this career."

Hollywood Drivers Take Strike Option

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 2,000 Hollywood drivers went on strike today after a weekend of negotiations with producers failed to avert the entertainment industry's second walkout this year, an official said.

"We're going to be out a while, I'm sure of that," Earl Bush, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 399, said after talks broke off at 1:40 a.m. "They want us to strike, they want us to break the union as far as I'm concerned."

He said the union made several concessions, but they were all rejected by the producers.

Federally mediated talks began Friday morning following Thursday's announcement that the union had voted 1,441-196 to reject what the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers said was their last contract offer.

Both sides remained at the bargaining table for a series of talks during the weekend at the alliance's headquarters in suburban Sherman Oaks. Sunday's session, which began at 5 p.m., lasted more than eight hours, Bush said.

Bush has called the producers' offer "the worst contract offer ever made to a union."

Producers spokesman Herb Steinberg said previously the strike by the 2,200-member union would not cripple the film and television industry, which is just beginning to return to full speed following the 22-week strike by the Writers Guild of America that ended in August.

'American Experience' Will Tell Human Side Of History

By Kathryn Baker
AP TELEVISION WRITER

NEW YORK — Host David McCullough promises there will be no quiz after the new American history series, "American Experience."

"There are no lessons. It's never pedantic. It's never preachy. No dates to memorize. None of the sort of horror sense that many people have about history," he said.

"It's my experience that if you simply tell what happened, it is so fascinating, it is so human, that you don't have to sugarcoat the pill, you don't have to devise means to bring people into the subject. They'll come in, because there's nothing more interesting than what happened to people, and that's all history is."

The first installment in the anthology series, premiering on the Public Broadcasting Service on Tuesday, is "The Great San Francisco Earthquake." A fascinating film produced by Tom Weidinger and narrated by F. Murray Abraham, it incorporates rare footage taken just after the 1906 disaster as well as present-day interviews with people who were there and compelling still photographs.

The film captures the vastness of the biggest natural disaster to ever befall a North American city, but also the essence of good ol' American pluck.

In one of the stills, a chalked message is scrawled on a lone standing wall amid the rubble: "Bill McClure will find family at West Berkeley." Another hastily constructed sign in front of a toppled building says, "A little disfigured but still in the ring. MEN WANTED."

"These films, which is why I'm so excited about the series, these films are often extremely moving," said McCullough. "You can look up any past event in the encyclopedia or the almanac or a history textbook, but there's no feeling. These films have feeling, and you vicariously become part of the experience."

The series, underwritten by Aetna, has been funded for two years, though the producers are hoping it will catch on and last a long time, as soon as viewers realize it's a hodgepodge of tales about individual events and people, not chapters from a textbook.

"We want to say certain things to the viewer very much the first year," said executive producer Judy Crichton. "We want to say, we are eclectic, we are going to tell you stories about the past, like Geronimo, and we're going to tell you stories about the near present. We're going to tell you stories that resonate in terms of contemporary life, and we're going to do it in a number of different forms."

The second film, on Oct. 11, is "Radio Bikini," an Academy Award-nominated documentary about the atom bomb tests on Bikini Atoll in the South Pacific.

The story of Angie Debo, a historian who revealed injustices against Oklahoma Indians, will be told in the Oct. 18 installment, "Indians, Outlaws and Angie Debo."

On Oct. 25 there's a nice essay by CBS commentator Eric Sevareid, who describes his physical and intellectual journey from the isolated heartland of America to involvement in a war against fascism in Europe, an individual metamorphosis that also mirrored a societal change of heart.

McCullough, author of such best-selling and award-winning histories as "The Path Between the Seas," about the Panama Canal, and "Mornings on Horseback," a biography of young Theodore Roosevelt, finds the link between film and history a natural one.

"I got involved in writing history because of photography," he said. "Because of visual images. I saw some photographs one time which got me interested in the subject, which led to my writing a book on the subject. So I know when these imaginative and talented people start nosing around in archives of old films and old still photography, they're going to tell us things, reveal aspects of our nature as a people that we haven't even thought about before."

No Distinction

MOSCOW (AP) — Actress Carol Burnett says a telephone hotline session here has taught her that alcoholism makes no distinction between people of the United States and the Soviet Union.

"The problems are the same. The feelings are the same. The love is the same," Miss Burnett told reporters Sunday during an informal meeting sponsored by the Soviet-U.S. Joint Conference on Alcoholism and Drug Addiction.

"The only difference is the language," she said.

Miss Burnett and her daughter, Carrie Hamilton, took phone calls from Soviet citizens for three hours Saturday. The day marked the seventh anniversary of Miss Hamilton's decision to stop taking drugs.

"Many people believed it was impossible to achieve sobriety," Miss Hamilton said of the callers. "I'm here as proof they're wrong."

Soviet officials said that while Miss Burnett, the daughter of two alcoholics, is not well known in their country, they value her knowledge and experience in struggling against alcoholism.
