Emergency Measures Imposed In Montenegro

By Dusan Stojanovic
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Communist authorities today imposed "urgent measures" in the capital of the tense southern republic of Montenegro, where thousands of people demonstrated in defiance of a presidential order.

The state news agency Tanjug, carrying a statement by Montenegro's state presidency, said the "urgent measures are being applied because of a sudden deterioration of the political and security situation and the possibility that it will spread."

Today, thousands of workers and students in the republic's capital of Titograd and two other Montenegrin towns continued to stage rallies and a protest fast. Twelve people were reported arrested.

The statement carried by Tanjug said the unspecified "urgent measures ... will be of a restrictive nature, aimed only against those who are abusing the rightful demands of workers and other citizens."

The language indicated police patrols would be stepped up and firm action taken against provocative public protests. But it suggested authorities would stop short of using restrictions such as curfews, at least for the time being.

On Sunday, President Raif Dizdarevic's warned that emergency measures would be imposed if ethnic and economic unrest in Yugoslavia did not cease.

A national economic crisis, fueled by 217 percent inflation, a $21 billion dollar debt and 15 percent unemployment, has combined with tensions between Serbs and ethnic Albanians to fuel three months of protests and calls for an overhaul in the party hierarchy.

In Kosovo, one of two autonomous provinces in the southern republic of Serbia, the largest of Yugoslavia's six republics, Serbs have rallied against the ethnic Albanian Communist leaders. The mainly Christian Serb demonstrators want more control over the mainly Moslem ethnic Albanian majority in Kosovo.

The statement carried by Tanjug today specifically attacked what it branded nationalist and anti-Communist demands voiced during a Titograd rally that was broken up by club-wielding riot police early on Saturday.

This morning, in the north Montenegrin town of Niksic, several hundred high school and university students rallied in front of a government building, Tanjug said. Several thousand striking steel workers rallied at factory management offices.

The news agency said that 12 people were arrested during an over-

Students Equate High College Tuitions With Higher Quality

By Lee Mitgang
 AP EDUCATION WRITER

NEW YORK — A poll has found that the "Chivas Regal Syndrome," the belief that high tuition means superior education, is widespread among young people, but that nearly half said tuition costs block many from college.

A survey of student attitudes marking National Higher Education Week, Oct. 9-15, found that 38 percent agreed that "the higher the tuition costs of a college, the better the quality of education a student will receive."

Among pre-college-age students, the figures were higher: 53 percent of 13-15 year-olds felt that way; 41 percent of 16 and 17-year-olds surveyed agreed. But among current college students and recent graduates, 27 percent agreed.

College officials have lately dubbed that belief the "Chivas Regal Syndrome," after the premium Scotch whisky, as an explanation for why Ivy League and other expensive colleges continue to attract so many applicants. Students and parents seem ready to pay almost any price for what they believe is a quality education.

The poll was commissioned by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education and conducted Aug. 24 to Sept. 7 by the Gallup Organization. It was based on telephone interviews of persons ages 13-21 and had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 points.

Asked what they thought was the major reason more students do not go to college, 48 percent said they thought the reason was that college is too expensive and they can't afford it.

Fifty-nine percent of high school juniors and seniors polled said they or someone in their families had saved for college education. The rest said they hadn't or didn't know.

Asked what they'd do if they couldn't afford the college they wanted, 37 percent said they'd try to get loans, 32 percent would look for part-time jobs, 14 percent said they would select another college, and 2 percent said they would not attend college. The rest weren't sure.

Other findings:

— 54 percent of America's high school juniors and seniors said they expect to graduate from college; 8 percent plan to graduate from high school but go no further. The remainder said they plan to attend vocational or trade school, or to college but not long enough to graduate.

2-Year Nursing Students Graded Well, Paper Says

RALEIGH (AP) — Students at North Carolina's community colleges perform better on the national nursing exam, complete the program in half the time and pay less tuition than UNC system nursing students, a newspaper reported today.

This year 88 percent of community college graduates passed the standardized nursing exam, a requirement for certification in North Carolina. Seven of the 41 community colleges that train nurses posted a passing rate of 100 percent.

At the nine University of North Carolina campuses with nursing programs, the passing rate was 80 percent, The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

The community colleges' success, which began earlier this decade, has prompted UNC system officials to consider whether they could do more to prepare their students to pass the test, said Dr. Raymond Dawson, UNC's senior vice president for academic affairs.

"We have talked about this comparison with the community colleges, and we've said if they're able to achieve an 88 percent pass rate, we ought to achieve that or better," Dawson said.

There are basically three tickets to a job for aspiring nurses — a bachelor's degree, awarded by four-year colleges or universities; an associate degree, awarded by two-year community colleges or technical schools; or a nursing diploma, awarded by two- to three-year programs in hospitals.

Most of the state's nurses are trained in community colleges. About a third receive their training on UNC campuses, and only a handful earn their diplomas in hospital-based programs.

The typical nursing student at community colleges is older than UNC's and probably is more focused, said Sanford Shugart, vice president for programs of North Carolina's community college system.

"We're dealing with a much more mature student," he said. "They're older, they've made some career decisions, they've been out in the workplace recently, and they know what it takes to succeed. That, probably more than anything else, makes the difference. They are the kind of people who know they want to be a nurse."

Community college students also have a curriculum more tightly focused on material included in the nursing exam.

There may be other reasons for the difference in passing rates, Shugart said.

"We give great attention to the quality of instruction, and the classes tend to be small, and they are staffed with highly competent nurses who are dedicated teachers," he said.

Rioting Leaves Hundreds Dead

By Rachid Khiri
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALGIERS, Algeria — A tense calm prevailed in Algiers today after soldiers supported by army helicopters shot protesters to quell nationwide unrest prompted by high unemployment and spiraling prices.

Doctors and police said about 200 people have been killed in the riots, which began about 10 days ago and led to a military crackdown over the weekend.

The riots are the worst in this North African nation since its independence from France in 1962. Islamic fundamentalists, defying a state of emergency, called for another protest today in Algiers' eastern quarter.

President Chadli Bendjedid prepared to address the nation tonight, and observers said he would probably appeal for calm and address the economic crisis which has led to the violence.

Riots hit the western port city of Oran to Annaba in the east. Rioting also was reported in a dozen provincial centers, said Interior Minister El Hadi Khediri, appearing on state television over the weekend.

"We have tried in vain to stop the troubles," Khediri said.

In a challenge to the government, calls went out for Algerians to gather outside mosques following midday prayer today for "strictly peaceful" protest demonstrations in the eastern quarter of the capital.

A similar demonstration called for Sunday was canceled.

Most shops reopened today in downtown Algiers and traffic moved in the streets, though at a rate substantially below normal. Troops and tanks were posted at main intersections and at the harbor, where dockworkers maintained their 3-week-old strike.

Clashes between the army and rioters spread late Saturday and early Sunday in Algiers as protesters defied a 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew and a ban on demonstrations. Brief volleys of gunfire also were heard early today.

Kouba, on the southern fringes of Algiers, apparently suffered the largest number of dead and injured. Hospital sources reported more than 60 people killed when the army, according to witnesses, fired into a crowd after it repeatedly ignored calls to disperse.

Information compiled from hospital and police sources in various parts of the country indicated about 200 people killed and several hundred injured. It seemed likely the actual death toll was higher.

No official death toll has been issued.

The unrest began about 10 days ago with non-violent strikes demanding higher wages to keep up with inflation.

Algeria's annual unemployment rate is estimated at 40 percent and food prices have risen by at least 40 percent since January. But the government has vowed to stick to an austerity plan prompted in part by the falling price of oil, the nation's main export.

Bendjedid proclaimed state of emergency Thursday. On Friday, the Military Command ordered soldiers to shoot if demonstrators failed to disperse.

At Mustapha Hospital in Algiers, physicians moved patients out of the hospital to make room for the hundreds of injured demonstrators.

Dansey Says Taft Misused Influence Incumbent Denies Charges

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Bill Dansey, the Republican candidate for the 9th Senatorial District seat, today renewed charges made during the 1986 Senate campaign that incumbent Democrat Tom Taft used his political influence to have four-laned U.S. 264 run through three tracts of his property west of Greenville. Dansey also said Taft received a total of $218,050 for 10.8 acres used for the highway right-of-way.

But Taft, denying any wrongdoing, said he had been given "a clean bill of health" by Republican Highway Commissioner Randy Doub. And Taft said the "mudslinging and charges" by Dansey "are ... nothing but a grudge because I bought the most valuable tract from him in 1975."

"I'm calling on Mr. Taft to explain his involvement in the right-of-way acquisition and highway moving in order to run through several pieces of his property," Dansey said at a morning news conference.

Saying, "We need to have a state senator to use his office for the people and not use his office for profit," Dansey said "Mr. Taft met secretly with group of highway engineers...several years ago" to have the highway moved. And Dansey said Taft "has profited by tune of $218,000 in taxpayers money," from the sale of the right-of-way to the state.

"He continued to follow this process," Dansey charged. "He had the property, some of it, rezoned, which raised the property value, knowing the highway was coming through there it would bring a higher price

Fair Results Pleasing

Neither rain nor cooler temperatures kept avid fairgoers away from the 69th edition of Pitt County Fair this year, the fair manager said.

"We did exceptionally well considering the weather," according to Elvy Forrest. "You always keep your fingers crossed and never know what the situation is going to be."

Rain plagued the first two days of the fair last week, while cooler temperatures accompanied Friday and Saturday nights, he said. "It was cold out there. People came but they didn't stay too long."

Still, "we're going to do almost as well as we did last year. We were real pleased."

Forrest said he could not give an exact account of how many people attended the fair because many school children and older adults are admitted free. But his estimate was about 7,500 people.

Next year's fair tentatively has been set for the first week in October, he said.

October marks the last marketing month for the 1988 tobacco season. With an estimated 89 percent of the crop in the eastern belt having been sold, there will apparently be a substantial carryover of tobacco into next season.

Growers wishing to preserve carryover tobacco through the winter months should take special precautions to protect this tobacco from damaging factors. In providing this protection, prevention is the key. Sanitation, through the removal of old tobacco debris, is the first and most important step. This means that tobacco should not even be moved through a trashy area and that storage areas should be regularly cleaned and old debris burned.

Tobacco and storage areas should be treated with insecticides with the insecticide being applied as it is sheeted. Growers who are unlikely to branch open bundles thoroughly should note that surface treatment of bundles will not provide lasting protection.

Storing excess tobacco in curing barns is believed to be an excellent method of handling carryover.

These barns have been heat sterilized and are tighter than most pack houses. Tobacco not sheeted but left in the racks would be expected to be even safer from insect damage due to the insects being more exposed to extremes in temperatures.

Once tobacco is in storage, growers should check its status weekly especially and on warm days in the winter. Moths which are detected can be controlled by treating with an insecticide as long as the tobacco is properly covered by the spray.

Cigarette beetles can be controlled by fumigation but successful results will be hard to observe by many farmers. This method should be a last resort and really should be done by a professional. There is some evidence to suggest that using heat while the tobacco is still in the barn yields successful control. Bringing the barn heat up to 140 degrees and holding it for one or two hours should do the job. Note that this would only be permitted for racks and boxes and that sheeted tobacco would not benefit from this treatment.

More information on proper storage practices can be found by referring to the Tobacco Identification Guide and the October tobacco newsletter.

Bakkers' Fund Raising Under Federal Scrutiny

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The most recent contributors to Jim and Tammy Bakker may be helping them set up a new television ministry, but the contributions won't be tax-deductible.

The former president of PTL is being careful to tell potential donors exactly how their pledges will be used. And federal agents are likely keeping an eye on them to see that no improprieties occur, said Hendersonville lawyer Jim Toms, one of Bakker's attorneys.

"They're looking at it critically, but are keeping an open mind,"

Toms said. "They're giving him room to see what he is really going to do."

The Bakkers tell supporters their donations will be used however the Bakkers decided the money is needed. Pledge cards in the packets spell out their intentions:

"Your gifts are used to support Jim and Tammy and all their ministry. They have the discretion to allocate your gift where needed.

"Jim and Tammy have a non-profit ministry, New Covenant Partners and Church, and are proceeding to apply for tax exemption, but your gift is not tax deductible at this time."

The focus on the latest fund-raising effort comes in the midst of a 14-month-long federal grand jury investigation into possible wrongdoing by the former PTL president and his top aides.

Bakker won't disclose how much his latest efforts have raised. But Toms said he is keeping federal authorities posted on Bakker's activities and has offered to let Internal Revenue Service agents inspect Bakker's financial records.

Charles Alexander, the Justice Department prosecutor heading the grand jury investigation, declined to say whether agents are asking about the Bakkers' latest fundraising techniques.

"I have no comment at all," Alexander said in an interview with The Charlotte Observer. "I don't even acknowledge the existence of an investigation."

Les Witmer, an IRS spokesman in Atlanta, said: "Obviously, based on previous activities, the Internal Revenue Service would be very interested in the fundraising activities of the new corporation. "As to what action we would take, I won't speculate."

The IRS in April revoked PTL's tax-exempt status on the ground that Bakker operated it mostly to make money — not to minister.

Bakker resigned as PTL president in March 1987 after admitting to a sexual encounter with former church secretary Jessica Hahn. Three months later, PTL filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws, and a bankruptcy judge has since ordered the ministry to sell its assets — the Heritage USA Christian retreat and theme park, the PTL satellite TV network and 1,700 undeveloped acres.

Bakker's bid to buy the assets fell through last month, and this week, Stephen Mernick, a Toronto businessman, won the bidding for PTL with an offer of $115 million.

Toms said contributions sent to help Bakker buy back PTL won't be used for anything else unless contributors give their permission.

"I imagine most of the people will say, 'Use it to help restore Jim Bakker to a television ministry,'" Toms said. "But still, we must ask."

The Bakkers say they haven't given up on their dream to buy back PTL, but say they are soliciting contributions for a new television ministry.

Donations also will be used to pay Bakker as pastor of the New Covenant Church.

"Clearly, he will be paid as pastor," Toms said. "and will be provided with the normal ministerial allowances — for transportation and the like."

But Toms said Bakker will not use donations to support the luxurious lifestyle he was accustomed to as president of PTL.

"He isn't going to go out and pick up sticks for people to beat him with by buying something that people will criticize him for," Toms said.

Routine Discrimination Case Finds Way To Supreme Court

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — A discrimination lawsuit going before the U.S. Supreme Court this week could threaten to reverse a decade of civil-rights gains, including protections against racial discrimination by schools and employers, civil-rights activists say.

The case involves Brenda Patterson of Winston-Salem, who was laid off by the McLean Credit Union in 1982. She filed suit in January 1984, claiming her white supervisor harassed her with excessive work and menial duties, passed her over for promotion and eliminated her position, all because she is black.

When the case made it to the Supreme Court earlier this year, five of the nine justices decided it needed a broad look.

The court will use the case to reconsider a 1976 ruling that a Reconstruction-era civil-rights law forbids private enterprises to discriminate when choosing employees or business associates. Although the "Runyon" case involved admissions to a private school, the ruling's broad language has been used to fight many other types of discrimination.

The Patterson case is seen as a barometer for the current philosophical direction of the court, now that new Justice Anthony Kennedy gives conservatives a majority.

Penda Hair, a lawyer with the NAACP, said in an interview with the Winston-Salem Journal that there are two main reasons not to overturn the earlier decision.

First, she said, the legislative history behind the law in question shows that Congress intended in 1866 to halt the rampant abuse of freed slaves.

Congress was particularly concerned about Southern blacks who were coerced into slavelike working conditions by plantation owners, she said.

The second argument, Ms. Hair said, is that "regardless of the almost ancient history at this point, the Congress in the 1970s ratified the Runyon case."

Congress enacted several major civil-rights laws that reflect the Runyon ruling, she said, and the Supreme Court should defer to this recent expression of legislative intent.

Anthony H. Atlas, an attorney for the credit union, said the Patterson case is not the epochal civil-rights battle that Ms. Patterson's attorneys make it seem.

He the Runyon decision read far too much into Section 1981. The section is concerned with discriminatory laws and public officials, not private enterprises, he said.

The section states that all people have the same right to make and enforce contracts as white American citizens, along with the rights to sue, be taxed equally and be protected equally by the laws.

IN THE STATE

Pony Roundup

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Most of the horses roaming Carrot Island will be rounded up later this month to avoid another famine like the one that killed at least 19 horses a year ago, state officials say.

A Richlands stable owner has been hired by the state to round up all but about 15 of the horses from the island across Taylor's Creek from the Beaufort waterfront, said Don Follmer, public affairs director for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Older, less healthy horses will be taken to the mainland aboard a U.S. Navy landing craft. Brown Hargett, who owns stables in Richlands, has been hired to herd and board the horses until the animals are adopted.

Too many horses on the island and a drought in the summer of 1986 depleted the island's natural food supply, experts said. By the time volunteers began bringing over hay, the animals had munched the available sea grasses down to the roots. Starvation, combined with parasites, caused the deaths of 19 horses, officials said. Another 10 horses were listed as missing and assumed dead.

Biotechnology Arrives

DURHAM (AP) — Having weathered a stock market crash, possible patent litigation and unexpected regulatory delays, the biotechnology industry is reaching a maturity that includes more commercialization, according to a new industry survey.

"Biotechnology once lived on promises," said G. Steven Burrill, the survey's developer and chairman of the National High Technology Group of Arthur Young & Company business consultants. "Today it is beginning to fulfill those promises."

Product sales are up by 25 percent over the past year, he said. More biotechnology employees work in production, marketing and sales than in research and development, and investments in manufacturing facilities are projected to increase a strong tenfold over the next five years. In addition, issues of maturing companies—such as product liability—have gained serious attention.

School Bus Vandalism

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Vandals cut the gasoline lines on 12 school buses parked at West Craven Middle School over the weekend, forcing officials to cancel classes Monday.

Gasoline leaked into sewer drains, and because Environmental Protection Agency standards prohibit washing the gasoline into the nearby Neuse River, school had to be called off during cleanup, said Craven School Superintendent Ben Quinn.

He said the tires on the 12 buses also were cut. The vandalism was discovered Monday morning when drivers arrived to pick up their buses.

Temporary Jail The Only Solution

Pitt County commissioners did the only thing they could in approving a satellite jail at the county office building on West Fifth Street as a full-time minimum security facility.

The jail will be used until other arrangements can be made. The satellite jail has 50 beds and has been used for persons serving weekend sentences. Due to overcrowding at the county jail on Washington Street, however, the county has been forced to look for alternatives. The cost of renovating the facility for full time use will be only $10,000, but operating it will require nine additional jailers costing about $200,000.

There were reservations about using the satellite for full time incarceration. Charles Gaskins, board chairman voted "no," maintaining that operation of a jail during normal office hours was inappropriate. While his point is well taken, since county employees could be vulnerable should a security breach occur, the commissioners have little choice.

The fact is that the additional jail facilities must be located somewhere since the main jail is overflowing. It should be noted, too, that offices are maintained in the court house which also has housed a jail for many decades.

Housing lawbreakers in a temporary facility is preferable to allowing early release or commuting sentences because there's nowhere to put those who have committed crimes. The commissioners contemplated the release option but correctly rejected it as unsound.

Incarceration is the foundation on which the criminal justice system rests; if lawbreakers are allowed to go free because there's no place to imprison them, the system is circumvented. Criminals are jailed because they represent a threat to society. A county cannot shirk that obligation.

As for the cost of the additional jailers, that expenditure is logical if the extra prisoners are there to be guarded. These are potentially dangerous individuals with a history of lawbreaking. Security is necessary.

There are no ideal solutions when a community waits too long to provide the facilities necessary. That has happened with the county jails. Now the county commissioners have no choice but to make do until an adequate facility can be planned and constructed.

Such a project is now in the planning stages. Thus the use of the satellite jail will not have to be permanent. Until it is a reality, however, it looks as if the county office building facilities are the sole alternative.

Prevention

Snuff Out Fire Before It Starts

This week is Fire Prevention Week. So it's just another week? Not quite.

Most people never think of fire until it strikes. A pan of cooking oil flares up on the stove. Worse, a family can wake up at night in a house filled with smoke.

Fires can damage homes, send folks out into the night and even take the lives of the unprepared.

In business and industry fire is always a threat. Fire can sweep through a large building in a short time causing huge amounts of damage and putting people out of work.

Even autos are subject to fire and more than one motorist has been forced to "bail out" when a fire erupted.

This week area fire departments are doing all they can to emphasize fire prevention. The best way to avoid the trauma of a fire is to prevent it from happening. If a small fire does develop, knowledge of how to keep it from spreading can save much damage and injury.

Finally, if a fire does get out of control knowledge of how to get out safely can be life saving.

A puppet show today instructed children in how to react to fires. In addition there will be smoke detector programs and fire demonstrations during the week and home fire drills are encouraged on Wednesday.

Finally firemen are offering the advice they have given for years about maintaining smoke detectors and using them properly.

There were 382 fires in the city during 1987. Some 120 of them were in homes. It is certain that the numbers at the end of this year will be comparable. By exercising care, inspecting our homes and businesses and conducting home fire drills we can reduce the danger of fire and minimize the damage.

Avoiding the problem of fire is largely up to the individual. Exercising care can save inconvenience, financial loss and personal suffering.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The lies of well-meaning but mediocre men tell us a lot about them. We know that because they bend the truth, they must care enough about something to risk public knowledge of their imposture, of their impotence in being able to implement the fine-sounding goals they borrow from men of honor.

But the fact that they are mediocre means that this object of their passionate caring is no more than their own hoped-for power, which is always simultaneously craved by, and denied to, the cowardly.

Now in small towns and small affairs, this deception is entertainment. Or can be, if the would-be Napoleon doesn't happen to be your gynecologist or your boss. It is entertaining, after all, to observe the well-meaning but mediocre dress up in their favorite costumes and go play soldier king in their tiny realms.

But the stakes are too high for such games at the national level where deception is no more than their own hoped-for power, which is always simultaneously craved by, and denied to, the cowardly. To the editor:

Can you imagine Grandfather Mountain from base to summit being developed? Can you imagine large homes, condominiums, hotels and blacktop covering all the beaches along the Atlantic Coast from Maine to Florida? Unless we act now, soon every coastal beach in North Carolina will be developed. North Carolina has only one uninhabited barrier reef island left — Masonboro Island near Wilmington.

This uninhabited narrow, eight-mile-long island is used extensively as a natural laboratory by the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. It is the home for nesting, incubation, and growth of many animals and the home of many plants we associate with ocean beaches. Surely, the birds, ghost crabs, plants, etc. (including the near-extinct loggerhead turtle) have a God-given right to exist unmolested and free on one small island in our state. Plus, such a place is a haven from the stress of civilization for mankind, too.

The Society for Masonboro Island, P.O. Box 855, Wrightsville, N.C. 28460 was formed five years ago to save the island. With work from the Society's leadership, aid from state and federal monies, with numerous gifts of land and money from concerned citizens, and with support from the Wilmington Morning Star, some progress has been made. But more help is necessary to purchase the high ground, the most developable part of the island.

To help, ask your state senator and representatives to support saving the island. And, if you can, give money for purchasing the rest of the island. If each of the state's 6 million people gave $1, we would have enough to buy the island.

Sharing The Only Solution

BOSTON — If this were Gilbert and Sullivan, we could be sure of a happy ending. Two babies switched at birth would be returned to their rightful place amidst a chorus of approval before the final curtain. We would leave the theater smiling.

But this tale of two babies is so unique, so layered in complex family histories that it's hard to write a way out of its tragic outlines.

On Dec. 2, 1978, a woman named Regina Twigg gave birth to a healthy baby girl in a Florida hospital. Somehow, someone, in the first days of its life, switched that baby with another who had serious heart disease. The Twigg's loved and raised Arlena as if she were their own. Indeed she was their own by every test except the genetic one.

Only last summer, in preparation for a heart operation, did Arlena's parents learn from blood tests that she wasn't their biological child. When the girl died, the mourning family faced torturous questions about the fate of the other girl as well. Where was she? Who had her? What was her life like? These were questions made even more painful to

Ellen Goodman

Regina Twigg, who was herself adopted.

Now the Twigg's believe they have found that girl. The only other white baby born in the same hospital at the same time as Arlena lives in Florida with her father. But they want to know for sure.

So the Twigg's went to court this week to force another parent to test another nine-year-old. The petition they filed, not surprisingly, had the earmarks of a future custody suit. They claimed that the legal father "wrongfully retains custody." Moreover, they said, he has failed to provide a "an ongoing stable home environment with the presence of a mother to love and care for her."

Indeed from the details, the life of this second child whatever her genes, hasn't been easy. Her mother died when the child was 3 1/2. The father, who had been estranged, remarried soon after and then divorced the girl's stepmother. But this father also claims that the child is his. Though willing earlier to go through the testing, he now says the Twigg's have no right to intervene.

In some ways, this story is so unique as to make it a legal and journalistic freak show. But in another way, it resonates with us, because it raises a series of moral as well as legal questions about parents and children.

Do the Twigg's, however horribly wronged, have the right to pursue a child into another family's private world in search of bloodlines? What gives them that right? Their wounds? Their genes?

On the other hand, does the legal father have the right to bar the Twigg's, who have suffered so much injustice, from knowing whether this child is theirs? What gives him that right? Possession of the girl? Protection of his family?

It is morally outrageous to imagine that the Twigg's, victims of a terrible theft, could not win retribution. Surely they have rights. But just as surely there are times when you cannot right one wrong without the risk of creating others.

So there can be no truly happy ending for two families that have had such troubles. But is it too much to hope that these two families could get out of court and come to some private resolution?

If I were the father, I would agree to genetic testing if only because this daughter's name and face is unlikely to remain secret for long. Identity is not a thing to read about in the supermarket press.

Courts deal in conflicts and this one is easy to exacerbate and very hard to settle. But if these were the two children swapped at birth, then these are also parents who learned the same remarkable truth.

They learned that you don't need the same bloodlines to love a child, to make it yours. Surely people who share that understanding could learn to share a child.

Tough Talk On Crime In N.C.

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — For the most part, the race for lieutenant governor is following the same tracks as that for governor. Democrat Tony Rand and Republican Jim Gardner are no only taking the same positions as their running mates, they are trumpeting essentially the same issues. That is, they are speaking primarily about jobs, schools and good government.

But there is one issue in this race for the state's second highest office that is getting more attention than the gubernatorial level. The two candidates for lieutenant governor are speaking much more about fighting crime than are the gubernatorial candidates.

Gardner, in an interview, said, "Drugs are the biggest problem facing the American people ... and the biggest problem facing education." Rand said, in an interview, tried to deflect some of Gardner's anti-crime statements by listing a number of his crime-fighting initiatives in the legislature.

Gardner is proposing a new state agency to fight illegal drugs. "We need an agency responsible for carrying out this fight," he said. "The SBI and the Highway Patrol are undermanned, and understaffed." Gardner, therefore, proposes that a bureau of drug enforcement be created with 200 agents assigned solely to drug fighting. He envisions a cost of $20 million the first year.

Along with this agency, Gardner advocates tougher penalties for drug offenders. The state's criminal penalties were among the toughest in the nation when they were passed early in this decade, but they are weakened by generous gain time and parole time provisions, he said. He wants parole and gain time eliminated for drug offenders.

Rand counters with a record of anti-crime initiatives in the General Assembly. Rand sponsored legislation establishing investigative grand juries for drug cases, and then he successfully pushed renewal of that authority when it expired.

Rand sponsored several other anti-crime measures that did not win legislative approval. One would have eliminated all gain time and early release parole for drug offenders. Another would have raised the penalties for using a facsimile weapon in a crime. Another would have funneled more of the assets from drug seizures to police agencies.

As the president of the Senate, the lieutenant governor can play an important role in the passage of new crime-fighting legislation, a much larger role than the governor. If it is new and tougher laws which North Carolina needs, then it will be up to the next lieutenant governor, more than the next governor, to lead the legislative push.

Grounding May Have Saved Girl's Life

By Maryann Mrowca
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PULASKI, Wis. — A scolding may have saved 12-year-old Emily Litt's life because five classmates she would have been with were struck and killed by a speeding car that jumped a curb.

Emily's mother, Pixie, said her daughter was at the home of 13-year-old Jessica McKeefry when Mrs. Litt ordered her daughter home because "she called her brother something like a fathead."

The other girls were "just going outside as I was leaving," Emily said.

When she got home, her mother told her she was grounded and would have to spend the rest of Friday evening with her family. But she allowed Emily to return Jessica's bicycle, and "I got there five seconds after the car hit that tree," Emily said.

The car had already struck and killed Jessica and four other friends by the time it hit the tree and stopped.

"I feel guilty that she was not there — that I was one of the lucky parents," Mrs. Litt said Sunday. "I feel terrible for those families."

Officials mustered parents and counselors to help grieving students as they returned to Glenbrook Elementary School today for the first time since the accident that stunned this small community northwest of Green Bay.

"We will meet with all of the youngsters in small groups," Principal James Brawner said. "We will have people available (to help grieving students) ... as long as needed."

Besides the five victims, a fifth-grader from the school was a passenger in the car driven by her brother and was hospitalized with injuries.

Neighboring school districts and service centers in Green Bay offered their counseling staffs to help Pulaski, a rural community of about 1,300, deal with the tragedy. Parents volunteered their help as well.

Brawner said help would also be available for students at other schools in the district and at Pulaski High School, where the injured 17-year-old driver and three siblings of the dead pedestrians are students.

"If there's a silver lining to this, it's been very reassuring to see how the community has reached out to help everyone and the schools," said Brawner.

Witnesses told authorities the 1975 Cadillac was going about 70 mph a couple of blocks from the police station when the accident happened.

Police Chief Reed Woodward said investigators were trying to determine why the car was traveling so fast. He said they planned to begin looking today for possible mechanical problems with the auto.

Authorities also were investigating the possibility that the driver, Scott C. Karcz, had suffered a seizure before the crash.

Karcz, a diabetic, was listed in critical condition at St. Vincent Hospital in Green Bay, and his 11-year-old sister, Tina, was listed in serious condition. Woodward said a diabetic seizure had been ruled out.

In addition to Jessica, killed were Brenda Hylok, Laura Karcz and Jodi Prokop, all 13, and Nicole Watia, 12.

The girls were among the 52 students in the seventh grade at Glenbrook Elementary School.

"It's our smallest class and we just lost one-tenth of it," said Brawner, whose son, Charles, is in the class. "There (are) going to be several sad days ahead of us."

But officials said they also want to try to maintain some semblance of routine for students.

Some weekend sports events were canceled, but classes were scheduled for today and Tuesday, despite Tuesday evening's community memorial service for the five girls at the high school gymnasium.

Hit And Run Driver Had A Roof Rider

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — A man clung to the roof of a car as it traveled seven miles on a highway after striking his parked car, leading to the arrest of a hit-and-run driver, police said.

Michael Fitzgerald, 20, said he was trying to prevent the car's driver from leaving the scene of an accident.

"I bought the car two months ago, and now it's wrecked and the guy was getting away," he said.

Police said the driver, Brian Scheidter, 18, was charged with drunken driving, reckless endangerment, reckless driving, leaving the scene of an accident, hit-and-run driving and underage drinking.

Fitzgerald said the accident occurred early Sunday as he was leaving a friend's house. He told police he was walking to his car, which was parked on the street, and another car hit it just as he reached it. The driver then began to pull away, he said.

Fitzgerald said he jumped onto the roof from the rear of the car and was laying with one hand on each side of the roof as the car went down several streets onto Interstate 279, also known as the Parkway.

Police who spotted Fitzgerald on the roof stopped the car.

Bush, Dukakis Prep For Debate Polls Indicate Widening Lead For The VP

By Donna Cassata
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — George Bush and Michael Dukakis focused on strategy and studied for their second presidential debate as state polls across the nation indicated that the Republican nominee is solidifying his lead over the Democratic challenger.

The vice president spent several hours at his Washington, D.C., home Sunday morning preparing for the debate before traveling to Illinois where he marched in a Slavic parade and vowed never to forget the Soviet presence in Eastern Europe.

Dukakis was closeted for about six hours with a dozen advisers at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston where they discussed strategy for the confrontation scheduled for Thursday in Los Angeles.

The Democratic nominee was speaking at a Long Island high school today before marching with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo in the Columbus Day parade in New York City.

Bush was addressing a Knights of Columbus meeting in Trenton, N.J., where aides said he would discuss crime and the rights of victims. The GOP nominee's running mate, Dan Quayle, was campaigning in Detroit and Farmington Hills, Mich., in addition to Akron and Toledo, Ohio.

Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen was tending to Senate duties in Washington.

Statewide polls in Kansas, Ohio, New Mexico and Missouri showed Bush leading Dukakis while a survey of voters in 15 Southern and border states found the Republican nominee holding a 12-point regional advantage over his Democratic rival.

The poll of 2,102 registered voters, conducted last week by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, showed Bush leading Dukakis 49-37 percent with 12 percent of those surveyed undecided.

The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus two percentage points.

Bush led in every state, including Florida, where he held a 26-point advantage, and Texas, where despite the presence of Lone Star state Sen. Lloyd Bentsen on the Democratic ticket, the GOP nominee enjoys a 14-point lead.

Both are high-stakes Electoral College states. Florida has 21 electoral votes; Texas is the third biggest prize with 29.

The survey also included Alabama, Delaware, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Georgia, Kentucky, Arkansas and North Carolina.

With his support strong in the South, Bush turned his attention Sunday to the Midwest and the crucial state of Illinois, which has 24 electoral votes.

The vice president and his wife, Barbara, rode in an old-fashioned fire truck along a two-mile parade route between Cicero and Berwin, in the annual Houby Day parade, a Czechoslovakian celebration of bountiful mushroom crops.

"This is the day we celebrate family, we celebrate faith and we celebrate freedom," Bush said in brief remarks before the parade began. "And none of us will ever forget there is not freedom in Eastern Europe, and I have pledged, as president, to never forget that."

Earlier, Bush prepared for the nationally broadcast, 90-minute debate scheduled for Thursday in the Pauley Pavilion on the University of California at Los Angeles campus.

The date had depended on the length of the American League baseball playoffs, but that series ended Sunday when the Oakland A's completed a sweep of the Boston Red Sox.

If, however, rainouts extend the National League series, the debate date could change, Dukakis spokesman Mark Gearan said Sunday.

The Bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates, which assumed sponsorship of the debate after the League of Women Voters withdrew, said Friday that the confrontation would follow the format of the candidates' first meeting in which Bush and Dukakis responded to questions from a panel of four reporters.

After days of conferring with their advisers, the two candidates are expected to be ready with their rhetorical salvos — unlike the comments Bush made in a meeting last summer with an Australian official. Newsweek magazine reported

Sunday that when Prime Minister Bob Hawke voiced concern that Dukakis might pull back U.S. forces in the Pacific, the vice president sought to reassure the Australian leader.

"If Dukakis wins, you've nothing to worry about," Bush told Hawke. "He's a solid fellow. He'll do all right by you."

Teen Sex Scandal Sweeps Bay Area

By Jennifer McNulty
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former top city official's indictment for allegedly patronizing a bordello with girls as young as age 14 pulled the covers from liaisons between wealthy, powerful men and young, drug-taking runaways.

Roger Boas, a 67-year-old car dealer prominent in local politics for nearly 30 years, was one of 14 people indicted a week ago today.

He is accused of visiting the bordello during a 2½-year period that included part of his decade-long tenure as the city's chief administrative officer and his unsuccessful mayoral campaign.

The bordello, in a nondescript, two-story building in a mixed residential-commercial neighborhood, housed part of a prostitution ring that served customers in three states, and earned $20,000 a week, authorities said.

The grand jury indictment, issued after a 16-month investigation, contains 86 criminal counts against defendants including a city police officer and a locally prominent jeweler. Eight of those charged were alleged patrons of the flourishing sex-for-pay operation. The others were charged with various counts of pimping and pandering.

Authorities reportedly learned of the ring in May 1987 through an anonymous tip. When authorities failed to follow up, the tipster tried again two months later, accusing police of failing to investigate because officers were among the patrons.

Vice officers put the building under surveillance in September. Five months later, the operation was shut down.

Although up to eight officers were under investigation by the prosecutor's office, police officials have consistently denied allegations that policemen were protecting the operation.

A grand jury began hearing evidence in the case in June, including testimony from several girls who worked at the bordello, said John Carbone Jr., assistant district attorney in charge of special prosecutions.

Some defense attorneys complain their clients are being victimized by an investigation targeted to get Boas.

District Attorney Arlo Smith denied that. "I don't care who's involved," said Smith. "If we don't prosecute the case, I think it would be a scandal for the city. ... Just because you've been a prominent candidate doesn't give you immunity from your own behavior."

Boas, who has been married 30 years, has four children and won the Silver and Bronze stars in World War II, has been identified by five underage prostitutes as the regular client they knew as "George," authorities said. He faces 19 counts of unlawful sex with a minor stemming from visits between November 1985 and last May.

Boas, released on $5,000 bail last week after surrendering, said he would address the charges "in the proper manner," but added:

"For my family's sake and for the sake of the many friends I have in San Francisco I am truly saddened that someone in the criminal justice system tried to convict me in the media using leaks, rumors and innuendo — in advance of the legal process."

After the indictments came out, the San Francisco Chronicle published a lengthy profile of "Darlene," a 15-year-old former prostitute who said she earned $600 a day at the bordello. She reportedly became a key witness in the investigation.

A child victim of sexual abuse, the girl said she used to act young and innocent and would sometimes dress up as a schoolgirl to please customers, who according to authorities were from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Idaho and Washington state.

The girl said she and other young prostitutes would sit around watching soap operas between appointments, stirring cocaine into their coffee and smoking marijuana. Customers were offered a mint as they left, she said.

Smith dismissed as "absurd" speculation his office leaked information before the indictments were announced.

Patrick J. Roerts, 40, accused of owning the bordello, faces more than two dozen criminal counts, including felony charges of pimping, pandering and forcible rape of a 14-year-old. He is in custody on $500,000 bail.

Roberts recruited girls by cruising Polk Street in a white Rolls-Royce, authorities said.

Polk Street, one of the city's best-known sex-for-hire districts, is noted for the young prostitutes, many of them homeless runaways, who line its sidewalks at all hours.

FTC Questioning Doctors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The Federal Trade Commission is interviewing hundreds of Florida doctors and demanding minutes from medical societies' meetings in an investigation of emergency room boycotts last year, a newspaper reported.

"I don't see any smoking guns," said John Thrasher, general counsel for the Florida Medical Association.

"My guess is had they had something, it would have developed by now and something would have been done about it."

The FTC is questioning doctors to determine if they acted as individuals or as a group when they began refusing emergency calls in response to a 33 percent to 42 percent hike in insurance premiums, The Miami Herald reported Sunday.

Movie Controversy

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A divorced father is helping to make a movie about his seven-year custody-visitation battle over his daughters, but the girls' mother has gone to court in hopes of stopping what she sees as exploitation.

Don Chavez, president of the National Congress for Men in Washington and founder of the Albuquerque-based Dads Against Discrimination, said the movie will be about "Dad trying to regain a meaningful place in the lives of his children."

The plot has a father organizing a group of other fathers in the same situation in an attempt to change the way judges award custody and visitation rights.

"What fathers do not see coming is the reality of getting lauded from their children or emotionally amputated from their children when they get divorced from their wives, and that's what happened to me," Chavez said.

Walnut Cove Grocery Packs Up After Decades

By Ruthie Pipkins
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WALNUT COVE, N.C. — For more than five decades, you could find brooms, buttons, bananas or boots at Spencer's Grocery, the outpost that has long supplied the self-reliant farm families who planted their roots in the isolated coves and curves containing southern Stokes County.

People like sisters Martha and Lula Hill have walked the one-decades road to Spencer's nearly every day since it opened an October 54 years ago.

The Hill sisters knew, when they had trading to do — Lula's word for buying — they could find just about anything at Spencer's.

Farmers and wives came seeking only what they couldn't grow on their own: this time, kerosene, or overalls perhaps, along with news of Blaylock's dying mule or Miss Hallie Hale's awful toothache.

But no more.

After 54 years, Spencer's Grocery has closed its door.

"People were neighborly," Lola Spencer, 82, said recently, while standing in the rock and pine store her late husband, John Lee Spencer, built more than five decades, five children, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild ago.

"They knew how everybody was living. They loved to hear what had happened during the day."

That meant most nights, the local farmers would crowd onto the narrow benches that John Lee had built around the pot-bellied stove in the store near N.C. 8 and Rosebud Road.

"We'd have a good fire going," Lola recalled. "They'd fill those benches up."

Then husbands and boys would perch on empty nail kegs turned upside down like bloated stools while the wives carried children and crocheted into Lola's front parlor just 18 paces behind the store.

These were festive times, when men would toss horseshoes and horse tales between bins of cold pork-and-beans, sardines or slices from the five-pound wedge of cheese.

"They got a good little snack for 15 cents," said Lola, who kept plenty of vinegar and pepper on hand for those with a taste for spice, but drew the line at strong beverages or strong language. Instead they talked of chickens, cows, crops; stables, seed and spouses; and always, the weather.

Standing in her store now, Lola can almost hear snatches of the old conversations as the memories come rolling back.

She talks about opening the store when she was five days away from delivering her third daughter, Phyllis. She's still grateful to the six women, new neighbors, who showed up to help her make every bed in the house John Lee had built for them behind the store.

Standing on a cane now, at 82, Lola talks about the babies she rocked in the bassinets while keeping the store, the children growing up and pumping gas as customers began driving cars, the 17 years when John Lee was too sick to farm and she made their only living from the slow trickle of sales.

"I've often wondered how life would be if we had never built the store," Lola says.

Then she stares out the back-room window, past her stripped-bare shelves to a sloping lot where a trailer stands like an intruder from a modern world. Seeing it, she thinks maybe, if they'd built a bigger place, just over there, one of the boys could have gotten into the business — but it's too late.

Yet even now, the spot remains a magnet to people who park their pick-ups and peer into the emptiness of the small, stone store.

"We miss it," Martha Hill said. "We feel kind of lost that we have to go someplace else."

Lola smiles when she remembers its inauspicious beginning — an unwanted corner piece of property tossed into a deal when the Spencer's bought their 40-acre farm. But after John Lee had eyed his extra acres, he surprised his new bride by bragging. "One of these days, we're gonna have us a store."

Mother Upset By Part-Time Role

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: During the past 10 years, I have raised four children. The last two are twins. As the school year begins, I see my babies going off to school full time. What happens now?

We can't wait until our children say their first words, take their first steps, are finally out of diapers, and then — boom, they are off to kindergarten!

I actually looked forward to their being in school all day, but now that it has happened, I am lost. I don't know what to do with myself. I ask myself if I should take up a hobby or get a job. Or perhaps have another baby?

Am I crazy for feeling this way? Are there others out there who have felt this way? — BRENTWOOD, N.Y., MOM

DEAR MOM: You are not crazy, and yes, there are many moms out there who have felt this way. There's even a name for it — the "empty nest syndrome." And the cure is to fill your time with activities that will give you a feeling of accomplishment.

If you don't need to seek employment, I recommend volunteering to work with disabled children — or adults. Working with the elderly is also very rewarding. How about working for your church, your political party or one of the new groups organized to help the homeless? Take some classes, join a health club ... the list is endless.

DEAR ABBY: I do agree with "Irritated in Colorado" — but the problem actually refers to how ALL women (not just teen-agers) are addressed. To call a young woman "Honey" is tantamount to calling a young man "Sonny Boy," and I don't think you would do that.

Not too long ago, a friend and I, both in our 60s, were greeted by a clerk with, "What can I do for you GIRLS today?" This is patronizing and demeaning. In a doctor's office, I was waiting for my appointment with a man also about 60. The receptionist said to him, "You may go in now, Mr. Smith," but when my turn came, she said, "The doctor will see you now, Marilyn."

I always correct these people gently but firmly. Often they are surprised because they had not even realized that this is a subtle kind of put-down. Actually, I would like to see all forms of address more formal when people are acquainted only in a business or service situation. First names and pet names are fine for friends and family because they denote an intimacy. However, I resent it from strangers. — LYN VENABLE, WALNUT CREEK, CALIF.

DEAR MS. VENABLE: I plead "guilty." I have called someone I did not know well "Honey." But regardless of how that person perceives my motives, I assure you it is not intended as a "subtle put-down." Perhaps it is too friendly, in poor taste or presumptuous — but never any kind of a put-down or intention to demean.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: In the last presidential election, of the 116 million people who were registered to vote, 102 million people actually voted.

If you are not registered, please register. If you are registered, exercise your right to vote.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Wedding Performed Saturday

OXFORD — The wedding ceremony of Mary Scott Edmundson and George Robert Wooten III took place Saturday at 8 p.m. in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Harrison T. Simons conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Organist Henry Ross and vocalists Jenny Tarry and Mary Lee Rule presented wedding music.

The bride is the daughter of R. Gene Edmundson and Mary Ruth Edmundson of Oxford. The bridegroom is the son of George R. Wooten Jr. of Raleigh and Harvey Sharp Wooten of Greenville.

Ginny E. Hicks of Oxford was honor attendant for her sister. Bridesmaids were Beth Holland of Greenville, Lynn Hastings, Jeanne Coleman, Stephanie Gay and Stacy Evans, all of Raleigh, and Cheryl Whitt and Anna Hancock, both of Oxford.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Bryan Harvey Wooten, brother of the bridegroom, and Mark Holland, both of Greenville, Bernard D. Edwards of Charlotte, G. Gordon Bailey of Raleigh, Todd Perry of Lexington, Ky., Mark Hicks of Oxford and John Horn of Newport News, Va. The ring bearer was Brent Hicks of Oxford, nephew of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory satin and beaded re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a basque waistline and puffed sleeves worn off-shoulder. Lace bows accented the sleeves and keyhole back. The full circular skirt was trimmed with beaded re-embroidered alencon lace motifs and back panels of cut-out lace and cameos on the extended cathedral train. Her cathedral veil of silk illusion was attached to a Juliet cap of beaded alencon lace. Matching lace framed the veil.

Each of the attendants was dressed in an evening-length ivory taffeta gown styled with a flared skirt, close fitting shaped-front bodice with a bias drape. Each carried a bouquet of pink roses.

After a wedding trip to Aruba, the couple will live in Yorktown, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Meredith College in Raleigh and is employed by Flight International as an employee relations assistant. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is area computer manager with Ferguson Enterprises.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner in Oxford at the Thorndale Country Club. A rehearsal dance was given by family and friends of the couple.

O-Rings Not Damaged

(Continued from A-1) fuel rockets burned out as planned after two minutes and parachuted into the Atlantic Ocean, where they were recovered and brought to a hangar here for inspection.

Ed Medal, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said the left booster's three segments were taken apart Sunday and the right rocket was being taken apart today.

"There is no evidence of any gas pressure on any of the O-rings, including the new 'capture feature' O-ring," Medal said. "They really hold."

There are three joints in each of the 149-foot-tall rockets. Each joint has three rubbery O-rings.

On the Challenger, the joints each had two O-rings. In redesigning the rocket, engineers at the Marshall center and at Morton Thiokol, the manufacturer, added a third O-ring as part of a metal lip, called a capture feature, intended to prevent joint movement under pressure of ignition.

An initial inspection after recovery ships retrieved the rockets indicated they were in excellent condition, officials reported earlier.

Meanwhile, Discovery, back at its home base after its four-day mission, was being inspected in a processing facility at the Kennedy Space Center. It was ferried here Saturday, bolted to the top of a modified Boeing 747 jetliner from Edwards Air Force Base in California.

The Discovery and its five-man crew landed at Edwards last Monday after a flight during which the astronauts deployed a communications satellite, conducted experiments and tested new orbiter systems.

NASA officials reported that the spacecraft returned to Earth in good shape and would require little refurbishment. Once a few protective thermal tiles have been replaced, workers will begin preparing Discovery for its next flight, scheduled for Feb. 18, with another communications satellite as the cargo.

Meanwhile, Atlantis is being readied in an adjoining processing bay for the next shuttle flight, a classified Defense Department mission set for launch in late November.

A payload for a future shuttle mission also arrived here Saturday by truck from a Martin Marietta plant near Denver, Colo. It is the unmanned Magellan spacecraft scheduled to be released from Atlantis' cargo bay in April for a trip to explore the planet Venus.

night rally in Nisic and face charges for disturbing the peace.

The continuing protests defied a warning made by Dizdarevic in a hastily scheduled speech on national television Sunday night.

Dizdarevic, who heads the nine-member collective state presidency which acts as supreme commander of the armed forces, appealed Sunday for calm, promised changes in the communist leadership, and urged the government to undertake effective economic measures.

In his speech, Dizdarevic said recent Serbian nationalist rallies and worker protests "are seriously jeopardizing public order."

"There is a real danger that the actions which are imperiling constitutional order could continue and spread," he said. Dizdarevic promised unspecified measures to combat Yugoslavia's economic problems.

He also said the policy-making Central Committee, which is scheduled to meet Oct. 17, will make changes in the country's leadership. But he did not say who might be replaced.

In troubled Kosovo province on Sunday, 20,000 people rallied to press Serbian claims of harassment by the ethnic Albanian majority. No violence was reported at the rally in Titovo Mitrovica, 145 miles south of Belgrade.

Albanian Haki Trnavci told the crowd that Serbs and Albanians should protect links forged through the centuries.

Serbs have been pushing for greater control over Kosovo and Vojvodina provinces and have embraced the drive of Serbian leader, Slobodan Milosevic, who wants to increase his republic's power there.

Rather than settle with the state over the price for the right-of-way, as "90 to 95 percent" of the people do, Dansey said, Taft "took it into litigation ... so it would drive the price up and cost the taxpayers more money."

"I believe it's a question of ethics," Dansey said.

Dansey also renewed his challenge to Taft for a debate before the election, saying a local area television station has agreed to make time available if Taft agrees.

Asked about the renewed charges this morning, Taft said, "I'm proud of my leadership roll 10 to 12 years ago in seeing that the Hunt administration

A's Clinch Series; L.A. Tops Mets

Oakland Completes Sweep Of Red Sox

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Unsung heroes had played strong supporting roles, but Oakland's season-long stars dominated a familiar script the day the Athletics won their first American League pennant since 1974.

The A's success story was painfully familiar Sunday to the Boston Red Sox. The 4-1 victory was Oakland's fourth straight in the best-of-seven AL playoffs and the 10th home win in a row over Boston for the team oddsmakers snubbed at the start of the series.

Home-run leader Jose Canseco put the A's ahead with a homer, 21-game winner Dave Stewart allowed four hits in seven innings and major-league save leader Dennis Eckersley blanked Boston for the fourth game in a row.

Canseco offered an inside tip for prognosticators outside the A's champagne-drenched clubhouse.

"We'll be the team to beat (in the World Series) — the team with the better record, the team with the better balance," he said.

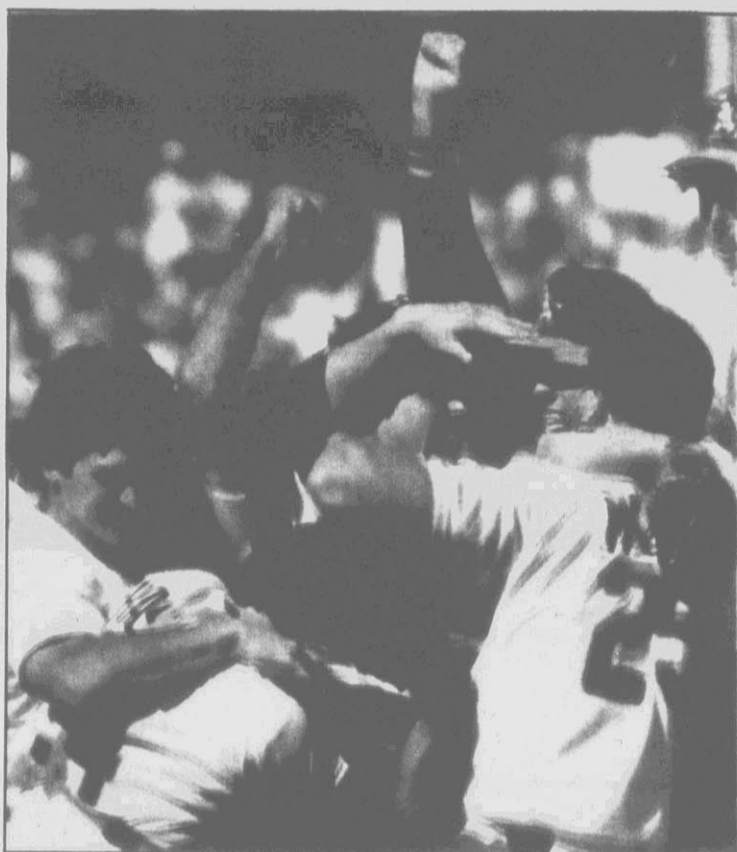

The A's slugger, who hit .313 for the series with three home runs, four runs batted in and one stolen base, has a good record on predictions in 1988. Last April, he correctly anticipated that he would be the first player in history to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases.

His line shot into the right-field bleachers in the first inning was his fifth homer in just 26 at-bats against Boston starter Bruce Hurst, a two-time loser in the playoffs. His homer also tied the AL playoffs record set by Kansas City's George Brett in 1985.

Stewart got into his usual early jam. But just as he had in Game 1, he escaped, fanning Dwight Evans with the bases loaded to end the first and retiring 11 consecutive batters.

To Stewart's mind, the series

Oakland Athletic Players Mob Dennis Eckersley After Win

Gibson's Heroics Key Dodgers' Win

NEW YORK (AP) — The bizarre is merely ordinary in the National League playoffs.

Picture this: — Orel Hershiser, the last available Dodgers pitcher, coming out of the bullpen to get a save, a day after throwing 110 pitches — his second relief appearance this year.

— Tim Lincecum coming in to start the 12th inning, his second relief appearance of the season, too.

— Dwight Gooden giving up a two-run, game-tying homer in the ninth inning to Mike Scioscia, who hit three homers all year and was 7-for-37 lifetime against Gooden in the regular season.

— Kirk Gibson homering off Roger McDowell to win the game in the 12th, Gibson's first homer since Sept. 11, his second hit in 17 at-bats and the first home run off McDowell since April 29.

And after 4 hours, 29 minutes of baseball on the edge of the absurd, the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the

New York Mets 5-4 to tie the NL playoffs at two games apiece.

"We used every guy we had. (Hershiser) came out of the bullpen and that was crazy," Gibson said. "We were on the edge of extinction. Being down three games to one against the Mets is a horrible place to be in. They say there's Mets magic. What about LA magic?"

The day began more like "LA Law." Jay Howell, Saturday's villain-martyr, was suspended for three days by NL President A. Bartlett Giamatti for using pine tar on his glove. Howell discussed his situation with union attorneys and decided not to decide until today whether to appeal.

In his memory-honor, Los Angeles starter John Tudor inked the initials "JH" on his uniform sleeve, as did other Dodgers. Tudor's marker had more stuff than his arm, however. He was pounded for four

It Was The Game That Wouldn't End

By Scott Ostler
LAT/WP News Service

NEW YORK — It crawled up out of the primordial ooze of Flushing Bay about sunset Sunday and crept into Shea Stadium.

It held thousands of innocent fans hostage. Millions even, counting the TV audience.

It Was The Game That Wouldn't Die.

It was New York Mets vs. Los Angeles Dodgers vs. Logic and Reason.

Kirk Gibson finally put the beast out of its misery early Monday morning. Gibson, a desperate man, beat the game to death with his bat.

He parked a Roger McDowell fastball over the right-field fence with two outs in the 12th inning, his first hit of the evening and morning, and the Dodgers delayed the Mets' miracle with a 5-4 victory.

The game reared its ugly head one last time in the bottom of the 12th, as the Mets loaded the bases against a Dodger pitching staff stretched as thin as angel-hair pasta.

But thanks to Orel Hershiser coming out of the pen to get the final out, Gibson, the Dodgers' angel of the morning, was not denied his hero's role.

When you think about it, who else but Gibson could have saved the Dodgers from the brink of extermination in the most dramatic moment of the season?

Gibson is the closest thing the Dodgers have ever had to a Shakespearean character. From the time he stormed off the field in spring training in a rage over a prank, Gibson has dominated the stage.

Alternately haggard and heroic, Gibson has turned up the Dodger burner about two notches, just beyond simmer.

How much of this is pure theater and how much is actual direct contribution to the resurgence of the Dodgers is a subject for debate.

Mike Scioscia shocked and amazed the Shea Stadium fans — and let's face it, even his teammates — with a ninth-inning two-run homer that tied the game at 4-4.

That, of course, set the stage for Gibson, whose frustration by now had reached such levels that every time he struck out he was being followed by ABC cameras and men with white coats and nets, waiting for his Vesuvius temper to blow.

But after striking out twice and grounding out thrice, weakly, and probably beginning to wonder if his 8 percent is better than another guy's 100 percent, Gibson turned the series around.

The blow came in the nick of time. The crowd for Monday afternoon's game was beginning to arrive at Shea, and because none of the Sunday game crowd was budging, an ugly New York style confrontation seemed inevitable.

As it was, Gibson ended the game in time for the Dodgers to shower and change shirts and take pregame batting practice.

"Dodger magic happened," Gib-

Monday Notebook

Saturday afternoon, East Carolina's Pirates put forth a strong effort against West Virginia, but it wasn't enough to get them into the winner's circle against the seventh ranked team in the country.

In contrast, the effort put forth in three earlier efforts against lesser ranked teams was quite less. Had East Carolina played as it did against South Carolina and West Virginia on defense and as it has the last few weeks on offense, the Pirates could easily have been 4-2 at this point of the season.

But it does no good for the Pirates to get "up" to play a nationally ranked team and fall short, then go through the ordinary efforts against teams like Virginia Tech, Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana and fall short.

The Pirates, certainly, were the equal of all three of those teams and could have come away from those games with victories.

I don't pretend to know what the problem is. It could be in the motivation provided by the coaching staff, or it could be that the Pirates themselves simply can't get mentally ready to play those team against which they have a legitimate chance to win.

That's the whole story of the season — or what the story could have been. Certainly, the three games against the above-mentioned teams were games which the Pirates could have won. But the entire effort wasn't there.

Wallace Perseveres For Victory

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Rusty Wallace was missing. Yet, somehow, he wound up on top.

Wallace drove the race of his life Sunday, making up two lost laps, overcoming a mysterious mechanical malady in the engine of his Pontiac and holding off a determined bid by three-time Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip to win the Oakwood Homes 500.

The difficult victory kept alive his hopes of chasing down Winston Cup points leader Bill Elliott over the last four races.

Wallace, who came into the race trailing Elliott by 124 points, cut the margin to 109, with Elliott finishing a solid fourth.

"In the type of situation we were in, you just have to keep driving as hard as you can," the red-haired driver from St. Louis said. "You can't afford to give anything away."

Early in the 334-lap event on Charlotte Motor Speedway's 1.5-mile oval, Wallace began to lose ground and appeared on his way to a possible death blow in the points chase.

"We developed a miss early in the race and my guys just couldn't pin it down," Wallace said. "They worked on the ignition system, changed the coil, did some fuel work, and the last thing we did was change the carburetor."

"I knew that could take more than a lap to do, but I told the guys, 'Do what you have to do, get it right and I'll get it back.' But I didn't know if I really could."

The series of pit stops cost him two laps before the midpoint of the race, but still the engine was missing.

"It missed all day, but not bad enough to slow us down too much," he said. "The place where you make up time at Charlotte is in the corners, and that's where it didn't miss."

Wallace, who earned his third victory of the season and seventh of his career, used a series of caution periods to regain his lost laps on his 243rd trip around the banked oval.

He then set sail after the leaders, moving up to sixth by lap 293, third by 298 and trailing only Brett Bodine on lap 299.

Eagles Want To End Skid

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mention New York Giants tight end Mark Bavaro to Philadelphia coach Buddy Ryan and the Eagles' boss gets angry.

The Giants, 3-2, who meet the Eagles, 2-3, in Monday night's nationally televised NFL game, have beaten Philadelphia six straight times, and Bavaro has been a factor in the last four triumphs over Ryan. Despite the fact that the Bavaro is an All-Pro and Pro Bowl performer, Ryan takes delight in running down the Giants' receiver.

Last year, in 20-17 and 23-20 New York victories over the Eagles, Bavaro caught 13 passes for 235 yards and one touchdown.

Ryan sneered about Bavaro after each game, implying he only played well against the Eagles.

Last week, Ryan was asked what he would do defensively against Bavaro.

"You mean the best tight end playing against Philadelphia?" Ryan replied.

Denver Overcomes Elements

Karlis' OT Field Goals Sinks San Francisco, 16-13

By Bob Greene
The Associated Press

It was the elements — "the referees, Mother Nature and the wind," according to San Francisco tailback Roger Craig — that gave the Denver Broncos their overtime victory over the 49ers.

"It was as bad as I've ever seen it. It definitely altered our play-calling," 49ers quarterback Joe Montana said of the brisk, swirling winds.

"I thought it was a hurricane," Denver coach Dan Reeves said. "The wind was a tremendous factor."

For Broncos kicker Rich Karlis, the wind fooled him once before he figured it out.

Kalis missed a 34-yard field goal attempt with two seconds remaining in regulation, forcing the Broncos, 3-3, into overtime for the second time in three weeks.

"I should have aimed more for the left post. I aimed for the middle, and that was my mistake," Karlis said. "I thought I hit it good, but it took off (right). This wasn't a day to hit a golf ball or kick a football, either."

But with 8:11 elapsed in the overtime, Karlis split the uprights with a 22-yarder to give Denver a 16-13 victory Sunday over San Francisco, 4-2.

The winning kick was set up by an interception by cornerback Steve Wilson deep in San Francisco territory.

Rams 33, Falcons 0
Jim Everett passed for three touchdowns and Greg Bell ran for 155 yards and scored once for Los Angeles, 5-1.

Seahawks 16, Browns 10

Redskins 35, Cowboys 17

Neil Lomax threw for 291 yards and three touchdowns as Phoenix, 4-2, defeated Pittsburgh for the first time in 19 years.

Saints 23, Chargers 17
Bobby Hebert threw for two touchdowns and Morten Andersen kicked three field goals to give New Orleans, 5-1, its victory over San Diego, 2-4. The Saints haven't lost since dropping the season-opener against San Francisco.

Dolphins 24, Raiders 14
Liffort Hobley's 19-yard return with a fumble for Miami's second score in an 11-second span of the second quarter helped the Dolphins, 3-3, defeat the error-prone Raiders, 2-4.

Vikings 14, Buccaneers 13
Anthony Carter scored one touchdown and set up another as Minnesota, 4-2, rallied to edge underdog Tampa Bay, 2-4.

Final-Round 64 Gives Putter The Win

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — The Gatlin Brothers Southwest Golf Classic died with a bang, not a whimper. Make that a big bang. A $400,000 bang.

Tom Purtzer won the finale Sunday, but it took an 8-under-par 64, an eagle at the 72nd hole and a sudden death playoff to do it.

Purtzer, a 36-year-old player from LaQuinta, Calif., washed away a mounting backlog of self doubts with a par on the first playoff hole that shot down Texan Mark Brooks and secured his third PGA victory in 13 years on the tour.

Blue Collar Winner At Seniors

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — He's a working-class stiff who made it big in the elite world of big-time professional golf.

"Yeah, I'm from the working class," said Walt Zembriski, a tough little man who spent 11 years as a steelworker before finding prosperity among golf's senior citizens.

He's now the winner of the most lucrative event on the Seniors PGA Tour, taking the first prize of $135,000 from the total purse of $1 million in the Vantage Championship.

Pirates' Motivation?

It could be blamed on the defensive inexperience or the lack of senior leadership. But the Pirates have, at times, shown themselves to be a good defensive team, then turn right around on the next series and look more like a sieve. Take a case in point. Against Southern Mississippi, the Pirates faced a dwindling clock. They had just scored to pull within striking distance of the Golden Eagles, and had kicked off. ECU had to have the ball back and the defense arose to the occasion, shutting down Southern and taking the ball from them.

ECU took it and rammed in into the end zone to take the lead.

But on the following series, the Pirates folded like a paper tiger and allowed Southern to march the length of the field in just over a minute to win the ball game.

The prevent defense only prevented the Pirates from winning.

Defense, of course, is not the whole problem. East Carolina's offense, just as it did Saturday, knocked at the door time after time and failed to connect. Sometimes, concentration just doesn't seem to be there.

The Pirates also seem to have gotten back into their alternating quarterback situation that they were in two years ago when both Charlie Libretto and Travis Hunter were freshmen. Now juniors, both are playing well much of the time, but do have their lapses. Two weeks ago, it was Libretto who had the better game, as he did last week. This past Saturday, it was Hunter who was the better of the two — at least in getting the Pirates into the end zone.

ECU is, it would seem, fortunate to have two young men with their talents. The biggest problem would seem to be which plays when.

The Pirates are now in what "USA Today," called an October Death March. After West Virginia, the Pirates face Florida State, Syracuse and Miami of Florida. All but Syracuse are ranked and all four of them went to bowl games a year ago. All four could end up there again.

At season's start, the Pirate goal was a winning season. It had to beat the teams on its schedule that it had a chance to beat — Tennessee Tech, Virginia Tech, Southern Mississippi, Southwestern Louisiana, Cincinnati and Temple. That alone would have given them the winning year.

Then, they wanted to pull off at least one upset between South Carolina, West Virginia, Florida State, Syracuse and Miami. That was a possibility, if the rest had gone down in order.

But now, hopes for a winning season are over. The Pirates are 1-5 and would have to win each and every one of their remaining games. Sure, it's a possibility, but I don't know of anyone who would bet a dime on it with sincere hopes of winning that bet.

It could have been but somewhere along the way, it slipped through the Pirates' fingers.

runs and eight hits in five innings and left trailing 4-2.

But then the Dodgers pitched a tribute to Howell. The Mets got two hits and no runs in seven innings off Brian Holton, Ricky Horton, Alejandro Pena, Leary, Jesse Orosco and Hershiser — in short, every Dodgers pitcher except Tim Belcher, the starter for Game 5 today. He was back at the hotel.

"I would have gone long enough for Belcher to get a cab back here," said Hershiser, who watched the 11th in the clubhouse. "I knew (Tim) Leary was coming in and he was the last right-hander we had. I got my spikes on and got ready to go."

Leary, Orosco and Hershiser combined to pitch one wild 12th inning.

Mackey Sasser and Lee Mazzilli singled off Leary. Gregg Jefferies, who popped out attempting to bunt with a runner on first and none out in the ninth, flied to left and Orosco came in to face two lefties.

Keith Hernandez walked on a 3-2 pitch to load the bases. Darryl Strawberry popped out to second. In came Hershiser, who got Kevin McReynolds on a fly to short center that John Shelby caught after a long run.

"I got the outfield together during McReynolds' at-bat and said we should play one step in each," Gibson said. "We had been burned on (Gary) Carter's hit in Game One."

This time, the Mets were burned, primarily by their own failings. They stranded 10 runners, including three on third and four on second. But neither team will have time to dwell. The fifth game was scheduled for 12:08 Eastern time today, with Belcher pitching against Sid Fernandez. There's not much left of the Los Angeles relief staff.

"It's obviously depleted but it was depleted before the start of the game," Scioscia said. "I'm sure this drains us a little but the adrenalin will get us through tough times."

Sunday's game began like the rest of the series — with the Dodgers taking the lead. The Dodgers scored a run in the first inning of Game 1, led 5-0 after two innings of Game 2 and 3-0 in the third inning of Game 3.

Gooden gave up a leadoff single to Steve Sax, walked Mickey Hatcher and allowed a two-run single to Shelby.

The Mets got one hit in the first three innings and then New York's version of the Twin Towers went: Boom! Boom!

Keith Hernandez singled to open the fourth and Strawberry homered to right to tie the score 2-2. Two pitches later, McReynolds homered to left, the eighth time the two homered in the same game this year.

Gooden took a three-hitter into the ninth. He walked Shelby to start the inning — Gooden's third leadoff walk — and Scioscia hit the first pitch over the fence right, the Dodgers' first homer in 47 innings and the ninth homer off Gooden in 263 2-3 innings this year.

A's Top Bosox To Win Series

sweep brought sweet vindication for both the pitcher who was considered washed up two years ago and a team only recently accorded much respect.

"People can see we honestly deserved to win 104 games," said Stewart, already tabbed by Manager Tony La Russa to start Saturday night's World Series opener in New York or Los Angeles.

Manager Joe Morgan of the Red Sox agreed.

"We lost to the best team in this league," said Morgan, whose team roared back from fourth place at the All-Star break to win by a game over Detroit. "There's no doubt about it."

Unlike the first three games, when Oakland won two in the late innings and a third after trailing 5-0, the A's hung onto a lead all the way.

Walt Weiss, a hitting hero with Ron Hassey in Game 3, scored what proved to be the winning run in the third when he singled and came in on Dave Henderson's double down the left-field line.

Boston scratched out a run in the sixth on a walk to Marty Barrett. Wade Boggs' fifth hit of the series and a pair of ground-ball outs, with Jim Rice getting the RBI.

Mark McGwire, one of five A's with five or more hits in the series, drove in Canseco with an eighth-inning single as the A's added two insurance runs. Don Baylor, playing for a third straight different team AL pennant winner, followed with a sacrifice fly and a weary Eckersley replaced Rick Honeycutt in the ninth to get his record-setting fourth series save.

"I haven't pitched this much all year," said Eckersley, who notched a club-record 45 saves in the regular season. "I'm just glad we had a three-run lead — and that we're not playing tomorrow."

"It's been a dream season," he said. "I hope it keeps going."

Eckersley beat out Canseco to win the series Most Valuable Player award. He pitched six shutout innings, giving up only one hit.

second-half touchdowns and Green Bay intercepted five passes as the Packers won their first game of the season. Green Bay, 1-5, scored two touchdowns in the final five minutes of the second quarter for a 17-3 halftime lead and Fullwood finished with a career-high 118 yards on 14 carries.

Bears 24, Lions 7
Jim McMahon completed eight of 11 passes for 78 yards, including an 11-yard touchdown to Dennis McKinnon, before leaving the game with a slight concussion as Chicago defeated Detroit.

The Bears, 5-1, remained in first place in the NFC Central Division, while the Lions, 1-5, lost quarterback Chuck Long with a sprained knee.

Bills 34, Colts 23
Jim Kelly's three touchdown passes, including two to Andre Reed, helped the Bills, 5-1, rebound from a 17-point deficit to down Indianapolis, 1-5.

Oilers 7, Chiefs 6
Despite throwing three interceptions, backup quarterback Brent Pease ran four yards for a touchdown and Toni Zendejas kicked the extra point in the third quarter to lead Houston, 4-2, over Kansas City, 1-4-1.

Player Of The Week

Picking the player of the week for this week wasn't an easy task. There were several performances worthy of recognition. However, after some deliberation, Farmville Central's Darryl Wilkes was chosen.

Wilkes, a junior tailback, rushed for 122 yards and three touchdowns on 18 carries to lead the Jaguars to a 26-12 victory over Pamlico County Saturday night in an Eastern Plains 2-A Conference battle.

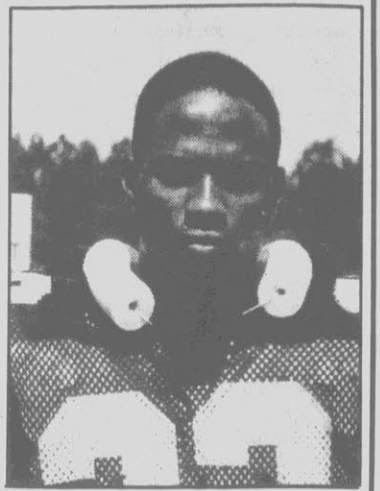

With Farmville ahead 14-12 heading into the second half, Wilkes took the game into his hands scoring on runs of 27 yards and 12 yards to break open the contest. Wilkes also scored in the first quarter on a 8-yard run.

The victory by the Jaguars improved their season record to 4-3 overall and to 2-1 in the EPC.

Prep Honor Roll

•D.H. Conley's freshman tailback Anthony Barrett rushed for 162 yards and a pair of touchdowns on 25 carries in the Vikings' come-from-behind 24-14 win over North Lenoir Friday night. Barrett scored on runs of 21 yards and 27 yards.

•D.H. Conley's Junior Farrow totaled 122 yards in offense in only two plays Friday in the Vikings' 24-14 win over North Lenoir. Farrow was on the receiving end of a 64-yard touchdown pass from Scott Seymour and the sophomore also broke a reverse play for 58 yards.

•Rose High School's Timmy Moore rushed for 144 yards on 24 carries and scored the winning touchdown in overtime Friday to lead the unbeaten Rampants to a narrow 12-6 win over Wilson Beddingfield.

•North Pitt's Michael Daniels rushed for 150 yards and three touchdowns on 25 carries Friday to lead the Panthers to a 19-0 blanking of Greene Central.

•Jamesville's Keith Basnight scored three touchdowns in the Bullets 30-18 win over Matamuskeet Friday. For the night, Basnight gained 74 yards on 15 carries.

The city of Oakland, long troubled by a high crime rate and an unsavoury image, has already launched a public relations campaign in conjunction with the A's success to show America it's thriving and chipping away at its problems.

"I know that from living here and working in the community that Oakland has had a bad reputation for all different things," said Stewart, an Oakland native who still lives in adjacent Emeryville. "Oakland's a good city."

Boston center helder Ellis Burks suggested that the A's may have been "a little hungrier than us."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ107532 ♥7 ♦85 ♣K63
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
 A.—Since you have every reason to expect to take six tricks with spades as trumps, this is the time to preempt. Jump to three spades to tell partner you have a reasonable seven-card spade suit and not much in the way of defense.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠J9532 ♥83 ♦Q7 ♣10653
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
 A.—At no trump, your hand will produce few, if any, tricks for partner. At spades, however, you are bound to single in at least a couple of tricks with your long trumps. The hand will certainly play better at the suit contract, so bid two spades.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥AJ92 ♦QJ63 ♣K85
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Dbl ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—There is a standard way to show a good hand after partner's opening bid has been doubled by your right-hand opponent. Redouble. That neither confirms nor denies support for partner's suit—the subsequent auction will clarify your intentions.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK7652 ♥7 ♦A83 ♣Q102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Dbl Rdbl 2 ♥ ?

What action do you take?
 A.—Partner's redouble asks you to allow him to make the next call—he might want to double for penalties. You disregard that in only two cases: 1) Where you have a weak, distributional hand unsuitable for defending an opposing contract; or 2) where you have a powerful hand and you fear that a low-level penalty double won't compensate for a missed game or, possibly, slam. Neither condition applies here. Pass.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠J542 ♥Q63 ♦982 ♣542
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ Dbl Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You can't pass for penalties, and neither your hand nor your stopper in spades is good enough for you to bid one no trump—that would show some 7-9 points. Partner has asked you to bid your longest suit, so with three three-card suits make the cheapest bid available—two clubs.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q83 ♥Q6 ♦KQ62 ♣AQ92
 Partner opens the bidding with three spades. What action do you take?
 A.—At this vulnerability, partner's preempt promises six tricks. While your hand might produce four tricks if things go well, it might not even yield three if the cards lie badly. Pass.

Nitro Residents May Face Future Evacuations

EPA Destroys Rusting Tank Of Cyanide

By Kelly P. Kissel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NITRO, W.Va. — A rusting cylinder of poison has been destroyed, and the 3,500 residents who were cleared out are home. But officials say more evacuations can be expected if new hazards are found at an abandoned chemical plant.

Residents within 1,000 yards of the plant were told to leave their homes Sunday while the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency blew up a tank of what it thought was hydrogen cyanide.

As little as 50 milligrams of the chemical, or less than one-sixth the weight of the average aspirin tablet, can kill.

The evacuations took two hours, 2½ hours less than expected. "There is a possibility, almost a certainty, that there will be future evacuations here," said EPA spokesman Harold Yates.

More than 3,400 drums and barrels — most unidentified, rusting or both — were left behind in this Kanawha River town of 9,000 when Artel Chemical Co. couldn't pay its workers and a federal judge ordered the site closed in June.

With the hydrogen cyanide cylinder blown up, the most pressing problems now are a 9,000-gallon tank of methyl mercaptan, which is toxic and highly flammable, and a bunker full of sodium, which reacts violently upon contact with water.

There could be surprises, too, as the cleanup continues at the Superfund site, Yates said.

"We have found a number of incompatible materials stored in close proximity," Yates said. "It's a threat to public health."

Sunday's explosion occurred at 1:55 p.m., and a fire was started to burn off the tank's contents. None of the gas was detected downwind, but a cyanide monitor held directly over the burning cylinder read 1 part per million, said Jerry Heston, the EPA's on-site coordinator.

"There was no reason to think it was anything other than hydrogen cyanide," Heston said, but added that more tests will be done to find out.

The EPA took over the plant and closed it after the federal government declared it a threat to public health. Yates said the cleanup could take years, and Mayor Don Karnes said future cooperation could be limited.

"I'll tell people they should leave if they (the EPA) tell me to, but I'm not sure they're going to go," Karnes said. "They made all this fuss about this and then it turned out to be almost nothing."

Elmer Fike, who for 33 years operated Fike Chemical Co. — now Artel Chemical Co. — said venting the poison to the atmosphere over a 24- to 36-hour period would have eliminated the need to disrupt so many people.

"I've told them other ways to taking care of this," Fike said before the explosion. "They're blowing this way out of proportion."

But Heston said the EPA believed a controlled explosion of the tank and its contents was the best solution.

"I'm not going to open the valve and see what it is," he said.

The evacuation was scheduled to last from 12:20 p.m. to 5 p.m. but the detonation went so smoothly that the all clear signal was given 2½ hours early. Nearly everyone who was asked to leave did, heading to nearby shopping malls or to relatives' homes rather than the official evacuation center, where only 26 people went.

The federal government built the town of Nitro in World War I to manufacture explosives and munitions. There are now more than two dozen chemical plants in a 12-mile stretch along the river that's known as "Chemical Valley."

U.S. Crime Rate Up

By Pete Yost
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — People living in the West were the most likely to have been crime victims last year while residents of the Northeast were the least likely to have been victimized, the government says.

Nationally, crime levels in the United States rose 1.8 percent in 1987, ending a five-year decline, the Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Sunday.

The number of criminal victimizations rose some 613,000 in 1987 to more than 34.7 million, with increases compared to 1986 in the amount of both personal and household crime.

Even with the increase over 1986, there were 16 percent fewer crimes last year than in 1981, the peak year for crime with 41.5 million criminal victimizations, said Joseph Bessette, the bureau's acting director.

In 1986, the number of crimes hit the lowest level in the 15-year history of the government's national crime survey, 34.1 million.

Last year, the number of personal crimes rose nearly 250,000 or 1.4 percent from 1986 to just over 19 million, with increases in all four categories of rape, robbery, assault and theft.

The amount of household crime rose by nearly 360,000, or 2.3 percent to 15.7 million, with increases in burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft.

Volunteers Compile Beach Waste Data

By John Donnelly
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — It was not a day for the beach, but Luz Maldonado didn't mind. Her head bowed, she walked slowly on Coney Island Beach, picking up bottles, straws and plastic rings that once held together six-packs.

Maldonado said she had long wanted to help clean the shoreline, so Saturday's Beach Cleanup Day was her chance.

Thousands of people hit the beach in New York, New Jersey and Oregon on Saturday. The states are among 24 participating in a two-month project to assess the extent of beach pollution.

"I have three kids and they all use the beach," Maldonado said, shivering in the wind, rain and 45-degree temperature. After syringes and AIDS-tainted blood in vials washed up on East Coast shores this summer — New York alone has collected 4,000 needles and syringes — she tried unsuccessfully to keep her children out of the water.

"My kids are very daring," the 39-year-old Brooklyn resident said. "I couldn't stop them. ... It's not safe here, and I've wanted to do something about it for a long time."

Twenty-three coastal states and Pennsylvania, where volunteers have combed beaches on Lake Erie, are participating in the cleanup, which was sponsored by the Center for Environmental Education in Washington, D.C.

Maldonado and 15 other conservationists at the Brooklyn beach filled their first plastic garbage bags in 10 minutes, but organizers said the main purpose wasn't to make beaches trash free.

Kathy O'Hara, a marine biologist with the Center for Environmental Education, said her organization is compiling a data base of how much and what kinds of wastes wash ashore. The project is in its third year, but 1988 is the first time all coastal states are participating.

"We can pick up the trash, but it will be there tomorrow unless we can determine what is and where it's coming from," O'Hara said.

Next year, an international treaty that bans dumping plastics in oceans takes effect. U.S. violators face up to a $25,000 fine. She said the 1989 nationwide cleanup, when compared to this year's data, will help document whether the treaty is working.

Plastics, which represent the majority of beach debris, present the biggest problems in ocean dumping because some types don't disintegrate for up to 400 years. Also, plastics can kill marine life when ingested or when fish and mammals become entangled in it. Sea turtles have been found strangled by plastic six-pack rings.

On Saturday, thousands of volunteers picked up debris along New York, New Jersey and Oregon. In a sweep of 250 yards of beach in Sandy Hook, N.J., 45 volunteers collected 620 plastic bottles, 285 foam cups, 710 plastic utensils, 88 plastic milk jugs, 246 aluminum cans, 43 glass bottles, seven syringes, and 10 medical bottles.

In Oregon, 2,200 volunteers picked up 16 tons of trash.

So far, waste has been picked up and documented in 22 states, Puerto Rico and Costa Rica. Hawaii and New Hampshire will participate later this month.

With information from 16 states and Puerto Rico, more than 31,400 volunteers have cleaned 1,880 miles of beachfront, collecting 1,477,000 pounds of garbage, O'Hara said. The types of garbage are broken down in categories.

Medical waste accounts for a minuscule percentage, but is found in nearly every state, she said. Last year, for instance, Texas volunteers reported finding 930 syringes on beaches, O'Hara said.

The Coney Island crew Saturday found four syringes and three vials of blood. The blood will be tested to see if it is AIDS-tainted.

PBS Series, 'The Mind,' Goes Inside The Brain

By Jean-Claude Bouis
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — "The Mind," an ambitious and emotionally charged PBS series starting Wednesday, is in many ways the ultimate "behind-the-scenes" television program.

Aided by computers and X-ray scanners, the nine-part series goes inside the brain to see the formation of thoughts and feelings that surge behind human acts, whether mundane or deeply disturbing.

The shows popularize theories that have emerged in the brain and mind sciences in two decades when the cost of direct treatment of severe mental illness is estimated to have reached $25 billion a year.

The most eloquent moments come in vivid interviews with people who try to explain, sometimes in tears, anger, or bewilderment, what was happening in their mind when mental disease devastated their lives and families.

These case studies go a long way toward helping the series achieve one of its goals: To erase the stigma of mental illness.

Lurking in the back of "The Mind" are controversial questions which the series implies but does not answer: Should brain and mind be probed chemically or by computer to find out how people will act? When and how much should chemicals, cells or genes in humans be altered to change the functions of the mind? And who should make those decisions?

But the shows, six years in the making at the cost of $8 million, do not shirk controversy.

"The series starts with a controversial statement: The mind is what the brain does. A lot of people don't necessarily think that. Even today there are still dualists who think that the mind and the brain may be separate," said Richard Hutton, who created the series and is executive editor.

"In our 'aging' show, I'm very optimistic about the newest work that indicates that aging is less of a deterioration than was thought. I think there is controversy also in our 'addiction' show which really debunks the notion 'Just say no,' and in our 'pain and healing' show which I think is a responsible report on where we stand in looking at how the mind heals the body," Hutton said in an interview.

Other one-hour segments examine consciousness, development, depression, language, and thought; 90 minutes is devoted to the violent mind. Each has interviews with about a dozen specialists mostly from medical schools in the United States and abroad. The program follows the 1984 series "The Brain" and has an advisory board of 10 experts.

One of the more dramatic "behind-the-scenes" techniques displays how groups of brain cells are activated while a volunteer with a mild radioactive injection is strapped in a scanner and speaks or reads. Such experiments help researchers understand language development and offer hope for the treatment of complex mental diseases.

The shows use computer-generated visual effects to detail mechanisms behind the spark of an idea or the shift of a mood. PacMan-like graphics which trace chemical paths that transmit pain or pleasure also illustrate theories on how the mind can be derailed by drugs, chemicals in the workplace, stress or illness.

The series also asks why one person becomes a genius musician, another a psychopathic murderer. Are states of mind influenced more by environment, biochemicals or genes? Is the brain "hard-wired" to sway moods or patterns of thought?

Narrator George Page, exuding rational optimism, points to some answers that hint at possible profound changes in the treatment of mental disease and the handling of criminals. Some changes, he cautions, may be decades away.

While "The Mind" is encyclopedic, it has shortcomings. Chief among these is its avoidance of some darker implications of research: mind control, brainwashing or mass media manipulation. And although one show has an interview with a survivor of a Soviet prison camp, the series does not examine abuses of psychiatric treatment on political dissidents.

"We didn't go into brainwashing. It's something I'm kind of interested in, and it didn't happen," Hutton said. "We thought about it a lot. We decided for a lot of reasons not to do it, but we certainly considered that notion."

The TV version also suffers from some historical absent-mindedness.

Randy Travis Big Favorite To Grab Top CMA Honors

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Singer Randy Travis is expected to win at least two big honors at tonight's Country Music Association awards, but the group Alabama, which has dominated such presentations this decade, is up in only one category.

Travis, a former short-order cook and dishwasher, is given a strong chance to win entertainer of the year and to repeat as No. 1 male vocalist at tonight's nationally televised presentations.

He is also among five finalists for single of the year and song of the year, both for his self-penned "I Told You So." The single of the year is awarded to the singer and song of the year goes to the writer.

Reba McEntire, who has been voted female vocalist of the year for an unprecedented four straight years, has strong competition this year in a category rated a tossup. The other finalists are Rosanne Cash, Kathy Mattea, K.T. Oslin and Tanya Tucker.

The awards show, with Dolly Parton as host, will be broadcast live by CBS, 9-11 p.m. EDT, from the Grand Ole Opry House. The Mutual Broadcasting System will carry a stereo radio simulcast. CTV will carry the show live in Canada.

The band Alabama is a finalist in only one category — vocal group of the year.

Joining Travis as finalists for entertainer of the year, the top award, are the Judds, McEntire, George Strait and 1987 winner Hank Williams Jr.

Vern Gosd, Ricky Van Shelton, Strait and Williams are competing with Travis for top male vocalist.

Travis, 29, has sold 3 million copies of his album "Always and Forever." Earlier this year, he won a Grammy Award for the single "Always and Forever" and three awards from the Academy of Country Music.

In addition to being named top male vocalist last year, the CMA honored him with album of the year and single of the year for "Always and Forever."

All five finalists for female vocalist of the year have a legitimate claim for the award.

Cash, daughter of country star Johnny Cash, has a string of No. 1 records. Mattea had one of the top hits of the year, "Eighteen Wheels and a Dozen Roses." Oslin has already won a Grammy Award for her "80's Ladies." Tucker, who will celebrate her 30th birthday Monday, is a 17-year veteran who has never won a CMA award.

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo, won three straight CMA awards as vocal group of the year until a rule change moved them into the vocal duo category this year.

Winners and finalists are picked by the approximately 7,000 singers, songwriters, musicians, disc jockeys and others in country music.

The show, which normally commands strong television ratings, has been lengthened by 30 minutes this year.

Problem Fillings

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Singer Lola Falana says the fillings in her teeth may be to blame for her problems with multiple sclerosis. Now, she says she's going to "run my mouth" about the possible link.

"Maybe there is no such thing as multiple sclerosis. Maybe it's mercury poisoning," she said Saturday during a national environmental conference.

The cause of multiple sclerosis, a degenerative disease of the nervous system, is unknown. Its symptoms include disturbances in vision, speech, balance and coordination, as well as numbness and tremors.

No scientific studies have been conducted to back up the link, and the Journal of the American Dental Association says the material in dental fillings is safe.

But the 46-year-old entertainer says she's certain mercury poisoning led to her problems. She says she has booked an appointment at her dentist to have the 10 or more fillings removed.

Old Feature Film Found

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — One of the world's earliest feature films, a French production that was thought lost forever, has turned up intact in New Zealand, a news report said today.

New Zealand Press Association said an 1896 production by French film maker Georges Melies, rescued and restored by the New Zealand film archive, has been identified as the earliest of almost 100 missing Melies films.

Jonathan Dennis, director of the film archive, said the discovery of "Le Manoir Du Diable" was a major event in world film archaeology.

He said the archive's search for rare New Zealand films constantly turned up prints of foreign films that in many cases were the only surviving copies of these films.

Welcome Home

ANOKA, Minn. (AP) — Half the town came out to greet Miss America Gretchen Carlson on her first return home since winning the crown, and she didn't let them down.

"People always say, 'What's so great about Minnesota? It's an icebox.' The people are not the same anywhere else," Miss Carlson, 22, said Saturday. "The people here are genuine."
