Garrett Wins County Board Race

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The five-month contest between D.D. Garrett of Greenville and James H. Dupree of Bethel ended Tuesday, with Garrett grabbing more than 61 percent of the vote to become the first black ever elected to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

Garrett won the Democratic runoff Tuesday, and because there is no Republican opposition in the Nov. 8 general election, he is effectively the winner, a title he claimed months ago after apparently winning the first runoff on May 31 by two votes.

But after hearing several complaints, including evidence that ineligible voters participated in the all-Democratic runoff, the state Board of Elections ordered the county to conduct a second runoff to decide the winner. Garrett then predicted he would "beat the socks" off Dupree. On Tuesday he increased his May 31 vote total by 125 percent.

Garrett won the second runoff by an unofficial count of 2,636 to 1,667, and he cited his get-out-the-vote campaign as the spark that pushed black voters to the polls.

"We worked very hard to get these voters out to the polls," Garrett said Tuesday night in a telephone interview from his victory party, with the noise of about 100 supporters in the background.

"We did it by letters. We did it by telephones. We knocked on doors. We went into pool rooms. ... We did everything possible to get the folks out and they responded," Garrett said.

"We had more help than we could really mobilize at one time. People were standing in line outside campaign headquarters to help.

"I feel good. I feel good. Everything is going to be all right,"

Garrett said. "It goes to show if you just keep to it, victory is going to come."

The unofficial count shows the total number of voters in the election increased by more than 83 percent from the May 31 runoff, and Garrett and Dupree, who is white, both got more voters to the polls.

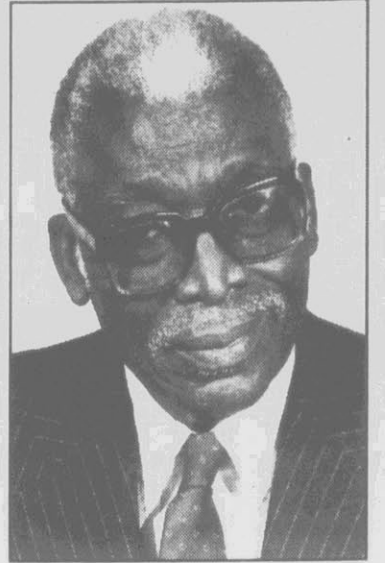

Garrett claimed the voting would continue along racial lines, and he said more blacks would go to the polls this week. On May 31, just 18 percent of the registered black Democrats in Consolidated District A voted in the election, but Tuesday nearly 40 percent of the registered blacks cast ballots.

About 42 percent of the registered white Democrats in district A voted May 31, and that number increased to more than 56 percent. Dupree's vote total jumped 42 percent from May 31.

The consolidated district is a combination of regular county commissioner Districts 1 and 2 and was created by the county commissioners to give minorities a better chance at winning office. This is the first year consolidated districts, approved by

Justice Official Observes Voting

An official from the U.S. Department of Justice was in Pitt County on Tuesday to observe how the new system for electing county commissioners operates, according to Pitt elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee.

D.D. Garrett of Greenville, who is black, had requested that the Justice Department send official observers to Pitt County to monitor the election because of the likelihood that racism would be a factor.

Mrs. Hardee said the Justice official, David Marblestone, was not an official observer and did not enter any polling sites but did tour the precincts. Marblestone worked directly with the Pitt County Commissioners to create the consolidated districts in Pitt County that were designed to give minorities a better opportunity to win office, she said.

Mrs. Hardee said Marblestone wanted to observe how successfully the plan had been implemented. He was to leave for Washington, D.C., today.

Planning Group Will Look Into Next Century

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The formation of an organization to help guide the future growth of Pitt County into the next century was announced today by group officials at the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

In addition, officials said a county-wide kickoff meeting for the group has been scheduled for Tuesday.

Called "The Year 2007 Committee," the group was formed by the chamber to help with strategic planning that assists citizens, business leaders, and government officials in meeting the demands which will place on the area into the coming new century.

At a press conference today at the Fleming House, committee chairman Jerry Powell said the county can learn from the saying, "If you fail to plan - you have planned to fail."

"Everybody has a plan of some magnitude and we want to ensure that Pitt County has an effective plan that will give people, organizations, businesses and government an eye for the future as we work together to ensure the best possible future for our area," Powell said.

"We must address the future with a problem solving plan to meet the challenges of drugs, under-employed population, education for the future, broadening of our economic base, cleaning our environment and creating and maintaining a quality of life that all people in Pitt County can enjoy and share in its livability and profitability in the future," he added.

Powell said the public is encouraged to attend a countywide meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Ramada Inn on Greenville Boulevard.

The two-hour meeting will provide an opportunity for people to discuss such items as what obstacles will hinder Pitt County from reaching its potential in the future and what good things are currently working to Pitt County's advantage.

"This is an open meeting designed to allow the average citizen to come in and say whatever is on their mind about the future of our county," Powell said.

Powell said one reason why the year 2007 was selected as the group's name was because that is the 100th anniversary of both East Carolina University and the chamber of commerce.

Acting as facilitator and program director for the committee is Linda Barnes, who is also the director of the Strategic Planning Department for Branch Banking & Trust Co.

Assisting her will be Sue Hodges, the director of ECU's Strategic Planning Department and Janice Faulkner of the Regional Development Institute of ECU.

Powell said approximately 60 volunteers will be selected from Tuesday's meeting to participate in two follow-up sessions in November.

For more information on Tuesday's meeting call 752-4101.

SREB Says South Confusing Issues With Test Scores

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern states are testing students more than ever, but the results are confusing, impossible to compare state-by-state and deceptively high when compared to national averages, a regional education agency says.

A study released Tuesday by the non-profit Southern Regional Education Board shows that 15 Southern states are using a confusing variety of tests and publicizing results in statistical jargon difficult for parents to understand, said Stephanie Korcheck, a researcher for the board.

"There doesn't seem to be any consensus about when we should test," Ms. Korcheck said in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh. "There doesn't seem to be any consensus on what types of test we should use. There is no attempt to tie all of this together into something that is meaningful for parents."

Some Southern states, such as Kentucky, give statewide standardized exams in every grade, whereas others, such as North Carolina, give these tests only in three grades. The 15 states also used different tests, and almost half have changed tests since 1983, making it impossible to do state-by-state comparisons.

The results of standardized tests are further complicated by comparisons to national averages that are updated only about every eight years. As these benchmarks get older, students' scores appear higher.

Because of this, all 15 Southern states boasted student test scores in 1987 that were at or above the national average at every grade level in every subject, according to the SREB study.

The agency is urging the 15 states it serves to review why they are testing and whether they are providing important information to teachers, students, parents and political leaders, spokesman Mark Musick said.

The board is also urging states to take part in a national testing effort planned to begin with eighth grade math in 1990. The federal National Assessment of Educational Progress will for the first time provide clear state-by-state comparisons and national benchmarks that will be updated every year, Musick said.

The North Carolina Board of Education has voted to participate, and at least 35 other states are expected to do the same.

Meanwhile, testing has spread through the South as states struggle to measure their educational progress after reform efforts over the last five years.

French journalists take notes outside Greenville tobacco warehouse

French Journalists Get Sampling Of Life On Tobacco Auction Floor

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The French accents were as thick as the tobacco aroma inside the New Greenville Warehouse Tuesday, as eight journalists from France visited Greenville on a tour designed to steer French tourists to North Carolina.

About 40 tobacco buyers and the journalists followed the auctioneer along rows of flue-cured tobacco at the 11 a.m. auction, turning an everyday event in Pitt County into a tourist stop.

"It's fascinating," said Leonor Fry of Paris, who has worked with the United States Travel and Tourist Administration for 16 years and toured much of the United States.

"It's marvelous. You go to the moon, and still we have things like this. I think it's very reassuring," she said. "Our idea is to open different states and destinations to the Europeans. You have to get by the classic places, Boston, Florida ... You can't go 10 times to the Grand Canyon."

Lots of French tourists have probably never heard of North Carolina, she said, but American Airlines now offers a non-stop daily flight from Raleigh-Durham to Paris, and this week's trip should generate lots of stories about North Carolina in French newspapers.

"The best way to start (tourism to North Carolina) is by having it written. They write about it and people read it," Ms. Fry said in very understandable English. "The names of places get familiar to people."

If every journalist on the trip writes one article about the visit, about 1.7 million French readers will have the opportunity to learn about Greenville and North Carolina, said Rebecca Moore of the state tourism office.

Isabelle Celerier of Paris, a 24-year-old writer for Le Quotidien du Medecin, a daily newspaper for people in the medical profession that has a national circulation of 68,000, said the trip could encourage her readers to visit the Tar Heel state.

"Many doctors come to the U.S., why not Carolina?" she said. The press trip is also a necessity to allow people to learn about the state, she said. "In France, it is true, you have never heard of Carolina."

Miss Celerier, who smokes American-made cigarettes, said there is no strong anti-smoking movement in France like there is in the United States.

"There is no fight between non-smokers and smokers. Not yet. It begins, I think," she said with a laugh after pausing to think of the

Labor Cost Edge Drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The labor-cost advantage that West European factory owners held over their American counterparts as recently as two years ago is shrinking, according to a government report.

A Bureau of Labor Statistics report Tuesday said labor costs measured in dollar terms were higher in eight West European countries in 1987 than in the United States.

The average hourly cost in this country was $13.44 last year. In Norway it was $17.39, in Switzerland $17.14, in West Germany $16.87, in the Netherlands $15.46, in Sweden $15.12, in Belgium $15.02, in Denmark $14.56 and in Finland $13.52.

For the first time since 1980, the West European average was higher than that of America.

correct English expression to use. Miss Celerier also said she had never heard of U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, who has pushed for strong warnings on cigarette packs and said nicotine is as addictive as cocaine. She said the cigarette packs she buys in France do not include a warning label. The brand she smokes costs about $1.50 a pack in Paris, she said, a little more than the pack costs in Pitt County. The visit went a long way to promote Tar Heel tobacco. Al Nichols, executive director of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority, handed out free packs of cigarettes and free T-shirts sporting the logo of a popular cigarette. Auctioneer Jim Hudson also gave the groups a demonstration of how tobacco sales are conducted.

EPA Offers Grant On Sewer Project

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After hearing that the Greenville Utilities Commission is in "outstanding" financial condition, members of the GUC board Tuesday night were told that the Environmental Protection Agency has offered a grant of $2.37 million for work on the Brook Valley sewer project.

The board also awarded a contract for engineering work for the removal of asbestos and demolition of the old power plant off West Third Street and was told that operation of the commission's load management program saved more than $155,000 in wholesale power costs during the month of September.

Steve Locke, an accountant with the firm of Lowrimore Warwick & Co., told board members that an audit of the utility for the fiscal year which ended June 30 resulted in "a really, truly outstanding financial statement." He said that, financially, GUC "did an outstanding job again this year."

Locke told the board, "the financial condition of the Greenville Utilities Commission continues to improve," and said GUC officials during the 1987-1988 fiscal year "did a superb job," in the area of budgeted amounts versus expenditures.

Wadie Lewis, director of water and sewer systems for the GUC, reported that state and EPA approval of the plans and specifications for the project has resulted in the grant officer, Lewis said the estimated cost of the total project, which will serve Brook Valley, Tucker Estates and other areas, has been set at $7.1 million.

Bids for the project will be accepted during the first quarter of 1989, Lewis said, and completion of the work is expected by December 1990.

The board voted to award a contract for engineering work for removal of asbestos and demolition of the old power plant to Law Engineering for $30,000. Other proposals for engineering work on the project ran as high as $106,000.

Farmville Increases Deposits On Utilities

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners Tuesday night expressed regret at making the paying of utility bills harder on their customers. At the same time, they voiced the need to reduce the town's risk in utility cost collecting.

There was an hour-long discussion of whether deadlines could be made more lenient to save people cutoff fees, but no action was taken. On the contrary, the cutoff rate was increased to $20 from $12.50 and a policy to require a deposit of an equivalent of two months of bills for customers who have two cutoffs in one year was enacted. Residential deposits were increased from $35 to $75; commercial deposits from $70 to $75.

The commissioners asked the utilities director and town administrator to look into how an equal-payment plan can be offered to customers. This would average each customer's projected yearly bill and allow him to pay the averaged amount each month. Board members pledged their continuing efforts to use load management and other means to reduce utilities costs for all electric users.

Board members enacted a resolution of respect for Charles Joyner, a former town commissioner who has died during the past month.

Approval was given for the final $4,000 payment on the Middle Swamp Well, which is reportedly producing more than 400 gallons of water per minute. The town now has the U.S. Department of Justice, have been used in Pitt County.

Garrett sometimes had harsh words for the county election board during the election, but Tuesday he said the problems with the election generated more interest among the black community, and the interest could have a long-term benefit.

"There is no doubt about it. This is going to be a turning point in the history of politics in Pitt County. (Black voters) are going to feel a sense of unity," he said. "I think this will definitely show people their vote does make a difference."

In hindsight, Garrett said the benefits of the long election are worth the inconvenience. "I'm a believer that all things work together toward good for all people who serve the Lord. I'm a believer in the scriptures.

"If we had won the first time, we wouldn't have put together this kind of unity," he said.

Garrett, who first ran for public office about 30 years ago and had never won an election until Tuesday, said he can now change his focus from campaigning to working as a commissioner.

Important issues he said he would work on include: ensuring that there is affordable housing for Pitt residents; controlling the economic growth of the county; seeing that the county has the best health care facilities available and increasing educational opportunities for Pitt residents. He said he would work for improvement, not change.

The 4,303 voters that cast ballots Tuesday is an 83.8 percent increase from the 2,304 voters on May 31, according to county election records. "The turnout was fantastic," Pitt elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee said.

Garrett scored big Tuesday in Greenville precincts No. 1 (303 votes), 3 (568 votes) and 4 (600 votes), doubling his total in those precincts from the May 31 runoff. Dupree received a total of 76 votes in those precincts Tuesday, a slight increase from May 31.

Garrett also landed more than 400 votes in Dupree's home precinct, Bethel. Dupree won the precinct with 556 votes, but Garrett's strong showing in the county offset Dupree's home support. Garrett also landed 225 votes in Belvoir, three times as many as he received there on May 31.

On Tuesday, Garrett won Greenville precincts No. 1, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 8, and he also had more transfer votes.

Dupree won in Bethel, Carolina, Belvoir and Greenville No. 7. He also had more absentee ballots cast in his favor. Dupree, contacted at his office this morning, said he had no comment on the elections.

No Magic Looking Glass Needed

A City Council bus tour through the medical district doesn't sound much like Alice's adventures in Wonderland.

But the medical district is a wonderland of sorts, and if the city's elected officials used their perspective on their Monday tour to take a peep through the looking glass into the future, they could see unlimited potential.

And surely what they glimpsed motivated them to protect the medical district — an important community asset — from inappropriate development. What they saw should have convinced them beyond doubt not to dilute the stringent medical zoning in the critical area near Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University Medical School.

If council members did indeed open their eyes and look around on that tour, what they saw was endless possibilities for community growth and regional leadership. Progress and prosperity abound. Only time and correct direction will nurture this resource.

PCMH and the ECU Medical School are expanding beyond expectations, and as these two institutions that form the heart of the medical district grow, the importance of the land surrounding them increases. As the area becomes a regional medical center, this property will be key to the center's effectiveness. That's why strict zoning around the hospital and medical school is so important.

Each new addition gobbles up property; growth requires elbow room. The City Council had to see this reality. It was in front of its eyes.

And the council couldn't help but see the importance of keeping zoning strict around the hospital and medical school. The community's elected officials must have seen, with their own eyes, the reasons to preserve that zone for medical-related land uses and keep commercial development out.

The mistakes already made are reason enough — the traffic clogging the district's thoroughfare, conflicting land uses, noise and congestion. The council couldn't help but notice these aggravations as readily as it recognized the district's potential.

The Eastern Carolina Medical Park, of which Greenville's medical district forms the heart, can play a significant role in the region. If allowed to grow in a controlled, well-planned manner, it can improve quality of life and prosper. Research on regional health crises such as infant mortality and high blood pressure can occur. Clinics could make health care more readily available. Speciality medical practices can address complex problems locally, rather than referring patients to other centers. For these things to happen takes planning and space.

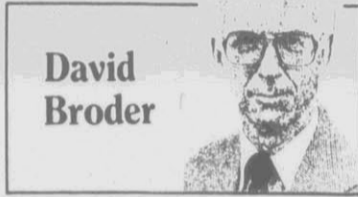

Yes, support services — clerical offices and restaurants — for these endeavors are necessary and desirable in the district. But they should be kept at a distance from its heart. That blend would provide a quality environment for a medical park.

It doesn't take a looking glass or a bus tour to see the truth. All it takes is vision.

The 'Quayle Drag' Won't Carry Dukakis

SAN JOSE — The sports-bar phenomenon is one I had read about but never experienced until the other day. In pursuit of the Redskins-Cowboys football game (which CBS inexplicably bypassed here in favor of the Rams-Falcons mismatch), I went up the road to San Francisco where an establishment called Pat O'Shea's Mad Hatter was offering the game I wanted to see.

David Broder

As millions of sports-bar fans already know, these bars are a by-product of communications satellite technology. They pull in from their "dish" a variety of games, direct them to screens in various parts of the room and invite the fans to have their food and drinks while watching the contest that appeals to them.

On this particular Sunday, the Mad Hatter's matinee tea party was offering four different pro football games plus the American League playoff game between Oakland and Boston. The menu near the entrance also promised hockey, tennis and horse racing before closing time.

Aside from the pleasure of seeing the Redskins beat the Cowboys, the Mad Hatter gave me an unexpected insight into the dynamics of this presidential campaign.

The day before the visit to Pat O'Shea's, I spent the afternoon walking a swing precinct here in San Jose — one of the major battlegrounds in the fight for the key state of California. The working families in these attractive, 25-year-old homes were a cross section of California's multiethnic, multiracial electorate.

In 1984, the precinct went 64-36 percent for Ronald Reagan. But these voters are classic ticket-splitters, who in 1986 voted 65 percent for Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, 56 percent for Democratic Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy and 53 percent for Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston. Candidates who want to carry California have to persuade the engineers, teachers, diesel mechanics, technical writers, students, clerical employees, probation officers and postal workers like those I met.

These are busy people. Most of the households have two wage-earners, and most of the wage-earners are time-pressured to balance the competing demands of family and job — especially with traffic slowing the commuting on the clogged highways that are the bane of California life.

How do people this busy get the information that helps them pick a President? This is where the sports-bar experience offers some clues.

At Pat O'Shea's, the customers don't really watch A Game. They keep an eye on all the screens in view — four or five from most tables, or from the bar — and focus on the one that's most interesting.

The sound is turned off on all the sets, lest the competitive babel drown out all conversation. So the cues are all visual. When the fans watching one set get excited, others look to see what has provoked their cheers or groans. But the key technique is to look for the replays.

The instant replay is what makes sports bars work. And it's also the key to our politics. Television sports have accustomed us — home viewers as well as sports bar patrons — to the expectation that anything important will be shown to us several times over. And voters like those I interviewed increasingly rely on the equivalent of "instant replays" for their understanding of political campaigns.

Because they are busy, they keep an eye on the candidates, rather than attempting to follow them through daily news stories in the papers or on TV. Verbal cues mean little. They discount the candidates' words as being insincere, the newscasters' and commentators' remarks as being of marginal value.

It is the power and the clarity of the political "instant replays" that shape the course of the campaign. Some come out of real-world events; some are manufactured as ads.

From interviews here, it's clear as a bell that George Bush is winning the battle of the "manufactured replays." Asked what campaign ads they can recall, the answers — even from Michael Dukakis' supporters — come from the Bush catalogue. Especially memorable have been the negative spots on crime and Boston Harbor pollution, which have been shown heavily in California, and the positive ad which shows Bush playing with his grandchildren.

Not one of the repertory of Dukakis ads appears to have made such an impression, nor did anything from his first debate with the Vice President linger in voters' minds.

What did stick was the instant replay on hundreds of news programs of the dramatic exchange between vice-presidential candidates Lloyd Bentsen and

*It is the power and the clarity of the political "instant replays" that shape the course of the campaign. Some come out of real-world events; some are manufactured as ads. Dan Quayle, the "You are no Jack Kennedy" putdown. A few disliked it; more were struck by the force of it; almost everyone commented on it.

Overall, the "Quayle drag" is palpable in this precinct. The California Bush operatives knew what they were doing when they sent word to Washington to keep Quayle out of the state for the rest of the campaign.

Quayle is keeping Dukakis in the race — for now. But the Democratic nominee has to do something in the final debate that will qualify for "instant replay" material, or the brief respite will be over and the way wide open for Bush to put this election to bed.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Your editorial, "Weak Link" of Oct. 5 causes me to question the biases you continually print in your editorial column. Your editorials seem to imply there is only one view to be expressed and that is the only view which is correct. This should come as no surprise when one considers most of the mass media has always favored the Stealth fantasies of the Democratic Party. I thought the purpose of the media was to report the facts and let the people decide for themselves.

On Oct. 5, your cartoonist depicted Senator Quayle as incompetent. For balance, why not show Dukakis sinking in the sewage-ridden Boston Harbor? You questioned "Bush's decision-making ability" and his selection of Quayle. Bush's selection of Quayle makes more sense than Dukakis packaging a liberal governor and a conservative Senator and calling it mainstream. Is this an example of Dukakis' "decision-making ability"? Your reference to Bentsen going "Quayle hunting and blow feathers off the fledgling Republican candidate" was very disrespectful. I expected the Daily Reflector to have a little more dignity.

We have reached a crucial point in history. The time has come for our nation's younger generation to have a chance at solving the many problems that confront us today. We need leaders with a vision of the future, not leaders who want to replay the failed policies of the past.

I urge the Daily Reflector and the media to present both viewpoints of an issue without the slant. Let the people make their own decisions. We are competent enough to think for ourselves when given the chance. Please — give us a chance to make up our own minds. The future of our nation depends on it.

Jerry Bailey Jr.
Route 1, Fountain

To the editor:

During the first Presidential candidate's debate, Mr. Bush insisted that he is "... for the dignity of life." Shortly before that remark, Mr. Bush was adamant about his insistence on the death penalty for drug dealers.

I don't quite understand what the man is saying. Could it be that he considers only the dignity of life of the unborn? If that is true, Lord help all the living that might have to live under his rule.

Ellis H. Marsey
Greenville

To the editor:

Speaking from a non-partisan attitude, it is imperative that an opinion be expressed with regard to vice presidential candidate's Lloyd Bentsen's remark during the debate to vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle: "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

The statement did not fit in at all with regard to Senator Quayle's remarks. It was completely out of line, uncalled for, and in bad taste.

Moreover, Senator Bentsen being an experienced Senior citizen in the sixties, I'd expect him to know and act better. Alas, to me, it is an indication of poor judgment.

Helen Trupp
Greenville

To the editor:

Clearly one of the recurring issues in every national presidential campaign on the Republicans' side is democracy and freedom. They always seem to find a way to make it a battle cry. Even now, the Reagan-Bush-Quayle team and their supporters argue for a U.S. policy which commits thousands of American lives and billions of dollars to countries like Nicaragua. What is ironic is how the very freedoms we claim to be supporting abroad are interfered with here at home.

The local level, myself and others have worked very hard to exercise our First Amendment rights to post signs in support of the Dukakis-Bentsen team, only to find them vandalized time and time again by what are obviously Bush-Quayle supporters. In many cases, some misguided individuals are entering private property under the cover of darkness to tear the signs down. What a misguided and cowardly act, indeed! Surely they will be discovered and punished to the fullest extent the law allows (as in trespassing and violation of our civil rights). This warning assumes, however, that they can and do read newspapers and can understand what the Bill of Rights and free speech mean in the first place.

Dukakis Ads Spew Contempt For Ordinary Voter

Michael Barone

WASHINGTON — There's an old saying in politics that paid media (TV and other ads) never won a presidential election. The idea is that ads are overshadowed by what voters learn through the free media of newspaper and television news. But this year I think one candidate's commercials are doing his campaign real harm. The campaign is Michael Dukakis' and the commercials are about "the packaging of George Bush," the flight of spots purporting to show Bush media advisers around a conference table, plotting how to hornswoggle the voters.

As entertainment, these spots are engaging; the actors have a nice New York charm. As political communication, I fear they're dreadful. They're hard to figure out: voters have been calling Bush headquarters telling the people there that these new ads are worse than the ones they were running before. Democrats say their people are calling in asking whose ads they are, and other viewers think they're watching some kind of weird news footage. It will take most voters several viewings before they figure out this is the Dukakis advisers' version of the Bush advisers.

If they do watch repeatedly they'll get a couple of messages that won't help Dukakis. For these ads are dripping with contempt for the ordinary Americans whose votes, one would have thought, Dukakis is seeking. The voters, the ads make clear, are gullible and easily duped. They can be manipulated because of their emotional response to a "candidate who wraps himself in the American flag": "Not that again," one of the actors says with contempt. And often they focus on issues that don't help Dukakis. "If I were a Republican leader speaking to a mixed audience," Franklin D. Roosevelt said in 1944, "the last word in the whole dictionary that I think I would use is that word 'depression.'" Why is the Dukakis campaign spending $1.5 million on a flight of ads that uses the word "furlough"?

The response to these ads from political consultants of both parties is uniformly scathing. "Bizarre," says one Republican. "Inside baseball," say several Democrats. Roger Stone denies that he made the ads and bought the time as a dirty trick. I have yet to find anyone outside Dukakis headquarters who thinks they're a good idea.

Why did the Dukakis campaign run these ads, and what do they tell us about the candidate (who signs off on every TV spot)? In the primaries, Dukakis hired a couple of different paid media makers, neither of whom seemed suitable for the general election. The decision was made to assemble a group of nonpolitical ad-makers. Pollster Tom Kiley and writer Francis O'Brien interviewed talent on Madison Avenue and came up with a team.

Several spots were produced after the Atlanta convention, wildly different in tone and content: convention and bio spots that were just fine, as well as a grating spot commercial on the deficits that was dreadful and went down after a week.

Then, after John Sasso rejoined the campaign, a new supervisor of the media effort was hired. Now Scott Miller, who has done some political ads and worked on the New Coke account, came up with the "packaging" spots, which in my view get their emotional intensity not from political issues and how they affect ordinary people but from the angst an ad man feels when forced to work for a client he doesn't believe in. It is important to the Dukakis advisers to believe that the Bush advisers don't believe in their own case. The trouble with this is that they do believe in it.

The Bush campaign, in contrast to Dukakis', has just one man, Roger Ailes, in clear charge of its paid media, and he has produced flights of spot commercials that are artfully made and speak directly to issues voters care about. In retrospect the Dukakis campaign should have hired one proven political ad-maker and told him to forget the high art stuff and go out and produce some spots like the Dukakis bio and convention spots.

In this fiasco I see two disturbing implications about Dukakis' leadership. One is an overreliance on supposed experts. Most of the people who plot strategy at Dukakis headquarters in Boston would have done better on their own than they have with Madison Avenue experts. Dukakis is in trouble politically — trouble he didn't anticipate — because he relied on expert criminologists who assured him that it was progressive to give weekend furloughs to murderers sentenced to life-without-parole and on expert legal scholars and judges who argued that he had to veto the law requiring teachers to lead students in the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

N.C. Case Serves As Test Of Laws On Racial Bias

By James H. Rubin
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — As apprehensive civil rights advocates look on, the Supreme Court is hearing arguments that will help it decide whether to overturn a key 1976 decision from a North Carolina case used to fight racial discrimination.

The justices today were scheduled to hear arguments on whether they should reverse the 12-year-old ruling that allows people to sue private citizens accused of bias. Their decision is expected in 1989.

The court sent shock waves through the civil rights community last April when it announced it would explore the issue in a case from North Carolina involving charges of on-the-job racial harassment.

While no party to the North Carolina case urged the court to reconsider the 1976 precedent, the justices by a 5-4 vote took the extraordinary step of acting on their own initiative to call for a re-examination.

The dissenters said the move threatens to undermine the faith minorities have placed in the court.

The attorneys general of nearly every state, a majority of U.S. senators, a significant minority in the House and more than 100 civil rights and public interest groups are urging the court not to tamper with the 1976 ruling.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, is not taking an official position. The Justice Department said it will sit out the controversy, declining to offer its views in a "friend-of-the-court" legal brief.

In addition to its practical effect, the case is expected to have a major psychological impact and provide a tip-off on the future direction of the court.

Liberals and conservatives alike are watching closely to see whether the addition of Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, President Reagan's most recent appointee, will solidify a conservative majority and lead to dismantling of a number of precedents established earlier by the court.

The 1976 ruling, called Runyon vs. McCrary, held that racially segregated private schools which refuse to admit blacks violate the Civil Rights Act of 1866. That law was enacted to ensure recently freed slaves all the rights of citizenship.

The 12-year-old decision allows civil rights groups to use the 1866 law as a weapon to attack private discrimination in all forms.

For example, no other federal law bars racially segregated private schools. Also, the law provides for heavy punitive damages against those found to have practiced discrimination. And the statute is a key recourse for those challenging bias in the sale of private homes.

Today's case stems from an appeal by Brenda Patterson, a black woman, who wanted to use the 1866 law to force her employer, McLean Credit Union, to pay actual and punitive damages for alleged harassment.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in 1986 upheld a ruling by a federal judge in Winston-Salem, N.C., throwing out her suit.

The appeals court said Ms. Patterson could not use the Civil War-era law to charge racial harassment. The appeals court said the law is designed only to ban racial discrimination in hiring, firing and promotion.

Ms. Patterson still could charge racial harassment under a 1964 civil rights law. But the more recent statute only grants back pay to those who win their lawsuits, not potentially heavy money damages awarded as compensation for emotional and mental suffering.

Civil rights groups said the more limited 1964 law may not be a sufficient deterrent to harassment.

Ms. Patterson, who worked as a teller and file coordinator at McLean Credit Union for 10 years until she was laid off in 1982, said her boss repeatedly harassed her because she is black.

Originally, the Supreme Court heard her appeal last February with the idea the case would be limited to the harassment issue. But the justices' announcement last April that they would consider overturning Runyon vs. McCrary gave the case vastly increased importance.

Potential Voters Add Names To Rolls

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — If you were planning to vote in next month's elections, but just hadn't gotten around to registering to vote, you're too late.

The books for next month's election were closed at midnight Monday, although people may continue registering to vote in future elections, State Elections Director Alex Brock said.

It will take until the middle of next week or later to update statewide registration totals, he said.

"They (local officials) aren't even through processing them yet," Brock said. "The registration commissioners were working until the wee hours Monday night."

Brock said he had "no earthly idea" how different the numbers will be from April 4, the last time an official tally was released.

At that time, there were 3,191,502 registered voters in the state, including 2,151,952 Democrats, 899,162 Republicans and 139,388 independents.

Election supervisors in several counties said they had been busy for several days leading up to the deadline — which they said is customary during a presidential election year.

"It was extremely heavy, more so than in 1984," said Norma Pryor, supervisor in Henderson County. She said the office had extended hours Friday and Saturday, but there were still long lines Monday.

"We did the same thing in '84, but not that many people showed up," Ms. Pryor said. "I have no idea why it's different this year because there's been seemingly less interest. It's caught us by surprise."

Eleventh-hour registration was "overpowering" in Mecklenburg County, registration director Nancy Starnes said. A total of 770 people registered in the main office Monday, while libraries were registering thousands more, she said.

Registration had begun picking up at the end of September and grew from a trickle to a flood last week, Ms. Starnes said. Local libraries registered 4,500 the entire month of September and another 3,800 the last few days of September and the first few days of October, she said.

"Once it starts appearing in the paper that you only have X number of days, we start getting busy," she said.

A "steady stream" of new voters registered in Pitt County the week prior to the deadline, supervisor Margaret Hardee said. "I don't think it compares to 1984, but we did have quite a number," she said.

The new voters will be offset somewhat by deletions resulting from deaths or people moving out of the state, Brock said.

Jordan Says Drug 'Czar' Is Needed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Calling the Martin administration's efforts to fight drugs "fragmented and uncoordinated," Democratic challenger Bob Jordan says if he's elected, he'll appoint a "czar" to cut through bureaucratic red tape.

"Our war against drugs needs more leadership from the top," Jordan, who is now lieutenant governor, said at a Raleigh news conference Tuesday.

Jordan, a Democrat, outlined an anti-drug agenda that included tougher penalties for traffickers and better education programs.

A spokesman for Gov. Jim Martin said the Republican governor proposed most of the measures over the past two years, but Jordan did not push them in the Legislature.

"He's just parroting what the governor proposed this year," Martin spokesman Tim Pittman said. "That's a copycat approach, not leadership."

As governor, Jordan said, he would establish a Governor's Office of Drug Abuse, whose director would have cabinet-level status and report directly to Jordan.

The official would develop "a coordinated battle plan" against drug use and trafficking in North Carolina, working with the numerous agencies and departments that have anti-drug programs, Jordan said.

"We need a single commander in this battle," he said. "We need a drug czar ... a headquarters that cuts across agency lines and through red tape to get action and results."

Jordan spoke against a proposal by Jim Gardner, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, to establish a state law enforcement agency to deal solely with drug trafficking. A better approach would be to coordinate existing programs, Jordan said.

Jordan also said Martin's ineffective lobbying was to blame for the Legislature's refusal to enact bills on drugs and drunken driving which the governor supported this year.

"It wasn't a matter of poor lobbying; it was a matter of the Democratic Legislature not wanting to let the governor have any success in an election year," Pittman responded.

Also Monday, Jordan told The News and Observer of Raleigh that as governor, he would try to build a political consensus for raising more money to escalate state road construction and to raise teacher salaries to the national average.

State Fair Will Begin Friday With Formal Opening Rites

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rides are being assembled and concession stands are being put into place at the state fairgrounds, as officials prepare to open the largest and best-attended event in North Carolina.

The North Carolina's State Fair will open Friday for the 121st time, and organizers say they're expecting to beat the 1987 attendance record of 705,002.

The fair, which runs through Oct. 23, will offer almost 16,000 exhibits, including the work of 100 craftspeople.

Opening ceremonies at noon Friday will feature remarks at noon by Gov. Jim Martin, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham. Secretary of State Thad Eure will be there, performing his last official fair-opening duty before he retires.

One of the most popular parts of the fair is the music.

"There's a strong demand for country music," said Barbara Williams, the fair's entertainment director.

Acts scheduled to perform this year include the Charlie Daniels Band, Ricky Van Shelton, Juice

Newton, T.G. Shepard and Loretta Lynn. All concerts begin at 7 p.m. in Dorton Arena. The doors open at 6 p.m. and admission is free on a first-come basis.

Country may dominate the lineup, but rhythm and blues fans may want to visit the fair on Saturday when the Spinners perform. During the past nine years the group has racked up 12 gold records.

Another star attraction at the fair are the racing pigs, which run daily at noon, 2 p.m., 4 p.m., 6 p.m., 8 p.m. and 9 p.m.

The tractor pulling contest is a favorite at the fair. Events will be at 1 and 7 p.m. on Sunday and Monday, Oct. 16-17, in the grandstand on the north central side of the fairgrounds, near Gate 9. There is an admission of $5.

Each day, children can meander amid Dromedary camels, zebus, llamas, Barbados sheep, Karakul lambs and baby donkeys at the petting zoo. Elephant and camel rides are also offered.

The culinary, clothing and home furnishing exhibits traditionally draw large participation and spectator turnout. Prize breads, cakes, candy, canned vegetables, canned fruit, jelly, pickles and much more will be displayed in the Education Building.

IN THE STATE

Installation

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham, calling the new president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary a "teammate," says Lewis Drummond is the right man to lead the seminary out of troubled times.

"Lewis Drummond has a spirit of reconciliation, of healing, which is very vital at this time," Graham said Tuesday as Drummond was formally installed as president.

More than 60 black-clad students and alumni prayed in protest on the chapel steps during the chapel service. They stood silently, handing yellow ribbons and brochures that explained their "inaugural presence."

Fundamentalists took control of the board of trustees last October. President Randall Lolley and five other key administrators resigned after trustees moved to hire only those professors who believe in the literal truth of the Bible.

Missing Hiker

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The search for a Wisconsin man who has been missing for 15 days in the 34,000-acre Joyce Kilmer-Slickrock Wilderness area in western North Carolina has been called off after searchers found no trace of him.

"It's eerie. He's just disappeared like he was swallowed up by the ground," said a weary searcher.

A massive search for Jim Michelic, 25, of New Berlin, Wis., involving rescue squads from throughout western North Carolina and East Tennessee, produced no new leads which prompted rescue personnel to call off the search until "something concrete comes up."

The U.S. Forest Service will continue to interview hikers and hunters going in and out of the area and post with a photo and description of Michelic will be placed at all trailheads in the area, said Ranger Steve Rickerson.

Student Killed

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A victory celebration after a soccer game turned to tragedy at Eastern Wayne High School Monday when a falling goal post struck and killed a student.

The victim was Andrew Ellis, 15, the son of Kenneth and Dixie Ellis of Goldsboro. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Wayne Memorial Hospital.

According to one of the players at the scene, a group of students were celebrating a victory in a soccer match by taking down a goal post when it fell and hit Ellis on the head.

Unemployment

RALEIGH (AP) — The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in North Carolina rose from 3.1 percent in August to 3.7 percent in September, according to figures released by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Among the 11 largest states for which data is currently available, North Carolina had the second lowest unemployment rate in September. Massachusetts had the lowest rate at 3.0 percent, and Michigan had the highest rate at 7.3 percent.

Nationally, the unemployment rate fell from 5.6 percent in August to 5.4 percent in September.

Arson Charged

DURHAM (AP) — A 17-year-old Roxboro youth has been arrested in connection with a series of fires in southern Durham County during the past 18 months.

Russell Scott Morris, who was arrested Monday, is the sixth person charged with setting the fires of building and vehicles, which detectives say caused more than $4 million damage. All the burned buildings were unoccupied and most were unfinished houses in various stages of construction.

Morris is charged with setting fire to a dump truck owned by Billings and Garrett Construction Co. on May 2, 1987. He also is charged with setting fire to an empty building during the summer of 1987.

Jacobs Says No Violence Was Planned

RALEIGH (AP) — Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs agreed before their Feb. 1 siege of a Lumberton newspaper that no one would get hurt, Jacobs says.

"We didn't want any confrontation with anybody," Jacobs testified in U.S. District Court Tuesday. "We just figured we'd get in and get out."

Jacobs said he and Hatcher decided to take over The Robesonian office because it would be a good way to draw attention to their concern about problems in Robeson County.

"We agreed that nobody would be hurt at The Robesonian," Jacobs said. "And we agreed that we would be in and out of there in two hours because we thought Governor Martin would call when Eddie wanted to talk to him."

Also Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Terrence Boyle said he had made a "written notation" during a bench conference to cite one of Jacobs' attorneys, Lewis Pitts, for contempt of court. Boyle did not disclose what prompted the contempt citation, saying he would decide punishment at the conclusion of the trial.

Pitts, asked what brought the citation, said, "I have no comment on that. I am just very troubled that the judge has ruled as irrelevant every major defense we have brought up to bring out the injustice in Robeson County."

Boyle has ruled that Hatcher and Jacobs cannot use the "necessity defense," which is an attempt to justify their actions on the premise that their lives were in danger. Based on that ruling, the judge has not allowed evidence attempting to show that drug trafficking was widespread in the county prior to the Feb. 1 takeover of the newspaper and that there was discrimination against Indians and blacks.

Jacobs testified that Hatcher told him two days before the Feb. 1 takeover that Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone wanted to kill him because of evidence he had linking law enforcement officers to drug trafficking.

"I asked him why the sheriff would want to do that," Jacobs testified. "He showed me some maps with names on them and I said 'Oh my God, with what you've got, they will kill you.'"

"There was no doubt in my mind, just from my own knowledge of drug kingpins in Robeson County, that what he had was hot," Jacobs said.

Naval Chemist Turns Sewer Gas Into Diamond Crystals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ancient alchemists, who strived to convert base metals into gold, have been outdone. A modern-day chemist is changing sewer gas into diamonds.

Dr. James E. Butler and his colleagues at the Naval Research Laboratory won't likely be going into the fancy jewelry business, he admits.

But they have found a way to produce some tiny industrial-type diamond crystals using one of the most widely available raw materials, the methane from sewer gas.

In this case, gas from Washington's Blue Plains Waste Water Treatment Plant, which is adjacent to the research laboratory.

In addition, other chemists working at the Naval Research Laboratory have grown diamond crystals using an oxygen-acetylene torch, Butler said.

"I don't think we'll be able to grow gemstone size and quality diamonds in the near future," Butler cautioned.

But the tiny diamonds made in his process — using chemical vapors to deposit crystals on a surface — could have a variety of industrial applications from abrasives to protective coatings, computer insulators and a host of other uses, he said.

What Butler and the other Navy scientists are doing is developing methods of getting carbon to form diamond crystals. Their process requires heating chemical vapors at normal air pressure or less and then getting carbon from the vapor to crystalize on a surface at temperatures of about 900 degrees Celsius (1,440 degrees Fahrenheit). Current industrial processes for making diamonds require much higher heat and pressure.

Graphite — the soft black material used in pencil leads — is the normally stable form of carbon at room temperature, Butler explained.

But by heating carbon-containing gases like sewer gas or acetylene the harder form of carbon can be made to grow on a surface. And if enough crystals form they combine into a thin diamond film, Butler added.

Why use sewer gas? "Sewer gas was just a case of having a convenient, inexpensive source of methane," Butler said. Methane, a combination of carbon and hydrogen, is a primary constituent of sewer gas. It is generally burned as waste.

Researchers in other countries have performed some similar experiments, Butler said, adding that such sources of carbon as vodka also have been used. It will be years before the diamond-making system could be developed on an industrial scale, he said, but when that happens plenty of raw material will be available.

And if burning of the waste gas is halted that also would reduce pollution and release of carbon dioxide, a product of the burning which scientists fear will add to the so-called greenhouse warming of the Earth.

AIDS Tests Show High Accuracy

BOSTON (AP) — The military says it found just one mistake in testing more than 135,000 recruits for the AIDS virus, suggesting carefully conducted tests have an error rate of only .0007 percent.

The armed forces, which routinely screen all recruits for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, had only one false positive in checking young men and women from areas where the AIDS virus is rare.

The results of the military testing program are to be published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The risk of false positive results is often cited as an argument against routinely screening people at low risk of AIDS infection, such as marriage license applicants. Some have suggested that the false positives might actually outnumber those who are truly infected with HIV, the AIDS virus.

Dr. Robert R. Redfield of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research said the military program dispels that "myth" by showing that AIDS testing can be performed quickly, cheaply and accurately. The test costs the government $3 per person, and the results are available within three days.

Military researchers said not all AIDS testing may be as accurate and efficient as theirs.

Airline Unions Plan Fight Against Sale

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines employees, who sued to block an earlier planned spinoff of the carrier's profitable Northeast shuttle, promise to fight a sale of the shuttle to developer Donald Trump.

"ALPA's position all along has been we would oppose the sale," Ron Cole, spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association local representing Eastern pilots, said Tuesday. "We will take whatever legal means is possible."

Trump has agreed to buy the shuttle for $300 million to $350 million, according to several reports. One source quoted by The New York Times said Trump planned a news conference today in New York to announce the deal.

U.S. Has 16 Major Nuclear Complexes

By Guy Darst
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. nuclear weapons are made in an industrial labyrinth spreading over 13 states and occupying 90,000 people in 16 major plants, three laboratories and a test range, spending about $7.6 billion a year.

All of the weapons are produced by a civilian agency, the Energy Department, and always have been. No administration or Congress has wanted to give the job to the military.

It wasn't until the 1950s, in fact, that the armed forces were even allowed to keep weapons on hand. If they had wanted one, they would have had to get it from the Atomic Energy Commission, one of the department's predecessors.

The DOE operations have recently been the focus of studies and news reports alleging serious breaches of safety or security at several facilities.

The most recent major study of weapons production was published in 1987 by the Natural Resources Defense Council, a group best known for its lawsuits on behalf of environmental causes.

The study estimated that the Energy Department in 1985-1990 would produce each year slightly more than 1,800 nuclear bombs, warheads, shells and other weapons in 10 different types, with 12 more designs in research and development.

Through 1986, the armed services had deployed 71 different weapons in 116 different systems. Only 29 types were still in the stockpile, and the total explosive force available had declined drastically as new weapons incorporating improved accuracy came into service.

Two laboratories design the weapons, often competing with each other, and a third designs the non-nuclear components of a bomb or warhead.

The Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico was established in the greatest secrecy by the Army's Manhattan Engineer District, the fabled Manhattan Project, in 1943 to design and build the two bombs dropped on Japan in August 1945.

The Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory at Livermore, Calif. was established in 1952 for Edward Teller, the principal backer of what was called then "the super" — the hydrogen bomb.

Los Alamos, in fact, designed the first hydrogen, or thermonuclear, weapons and after a few test failures Lawrence Livermore started putting its designs into the national stockpile in 1958.

The Sandia National Laboratory in Albuquerque, N.M., designs the fuses, security features and new delivery systems in cooperation with the armed services.

Recently the Energy Department has been making only two of the six materials that have been used over the years for nuclear and thermonuclear weapons, tritium and plutonium.

The other four — Lithium-6, uranium-235, uranium-238 and deuterium — are not in production for weapons, although some stockpiled weapons still incorporate uranium, and the uranium is recycled into new weapons.

Plutonium, made from uranium in nuclear reactors, is used for modern weapons in preference to uranium, even though it's more expensive.

Only one-third as much plutonium is needed to form the "critical mass" that sustains the nuclear reaction, according to Thomas Cochran, principal author of the Natural Resources Defense Council study. This permits a lighter, smaller bomb.

Tritium is used to boost the explosive power of nuclear weapons and in thermonuclear weapons, all of which use a nuclear device as a trigger.

At the moment, there is no production of either plutonium or tritium.

These materials recently have come from two sites, a reactor at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation near Richland, Wash., and three reactors at the Savannah River Plant near Aiken, S.C. Hanford made plutonium and Savannah River made both plutonium and tritium.

The Feed Materials Production Center near Fernald, Ohio, and the Ashtabula Plant near Ashtabula, Ohio, supply fuel assemblies to Hanford and Savannah River.

These reactors start with uranium from a variety of sources, including research reactors, spent fuel from warships recovered at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls; inventory accumulated over the years and uranium recycled along with plutonium from weapons being retired. The government hasn't bought uranium for weapons since 1971.

Tritium is produced from lithium-6 recovered from retired warheads at the Mound Plant at Miamisburg, Ohio.

Government Unable To Produce Materials For Nuclear Weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government will not be able to manufacture nuclear weapons materials for 2½ months, but it says that raises no threat to national security.

Energy Secretary John S. Herrington said at a news conference Tuesday that his department, which had planned to restart one of its three nuclear weapons reactors at the Savannah River Plant as early as November, now does not expect the first of them to reach full operation until January.

All three of the reactors, which began operation in 1954, have been closed down for maintenance and safety checks amid a wave of publicity about lax safety precautions.

The department, said Herrington, "will not operate unsafe reactors. We will meet the defense needs of this country in a safe manner and an environmentally sensitive manner."

Herrington's deputy, Joseph F. Salgado, outlined what he called a "phased restart." It will include supervision by a senior manager at Savannah River and a review of safety at various milestones during the four weeks officials say will be needed to take the first reactor to full power.

Salgado said he foresaw no shortage of tritium, one of two nuclear weapons materials produced at Savannah River. The facility, the only federal nuclear weapons plant on active status, also produces plutonium, which does not decay as quickly as tritium and is said to be in abundant supply.

"We are comfortable that Savannah River will operate at a sufficient level to meet the tritium needs of the future," Salgado said.

The news conference was called to defuse criticism of the Energy Department not only over the Savannah River plant in Aiken, S.C., but also over radioactive contamination at the Rocky Flats plant northwest of Denver, Colo., and over allegedly lax security at weapons laboratories in New Mexico and California.

In related developments Tuesday: —President Reagan voiced concern about the nuclear plant safety problem during a meeting with top Defense and Energy department officials, chief of staff Kenneth Duberstein said.

Duberstein quoted Reagan as saying the administration is "committed to making sure that all safety precautions are taken and that all rules and regulations be followed."

—The chairman of E.I. du Pont Nemours and Co., which operates Savannah River under contract for the Energy Department, reacted angrily to claims that company employees had a lax attitude toward safety. R.E. Heckert said du Pont was "caught in a political crossfire" between the Energy Department and Capitol Hill.

Tanker Plane Crashes, Kills Six Crewmen

OSCODA, Mich. (AP) — A training exercise for a fire crew at an Air Force base turned into a life-and-death struggle when a tanker plane crashed, killing all six crew members and injuring 10 passengers.

The Air Force said today it hadn't determined the cause of the crash Tuesday afternoon at Wurtsmith Air Force Base. A board of officers will be appointed to investigate the crash.

Wurtsmith, located near Lake Huron, is one of two Michigan bases in the Strategic Air Command. Nineteen B-52 bombers armed with nuclear-tipped cruise missiles and nuclear bombs are based at Wurtsmith.

The KC-135 Stratotanker, a four-engine plane used to refuel other planes, was returning to the base from a mission to K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base in Michigan's Upper Peninsula when it crashed and burned, said Staff Sgt. Donald Lawber, a spokesman at Wurtsmith in the northeastern Lower Peninsula.

The six crew members died at the scene, authorities said. Eight of the 10 injured were treated and released from the 379th Strategic Hospital at the base, Staff Sgt. Albert Fleming said. Two people admitted to the base hospital were in good condition today.

The base's firefighters had just completed a training exercise when the accident occurred, and they quickly doused the flames, said Air Force Sgt. Gene Babble.

Skid marks stretched from a point one-third of the way down the runway to the plane's final resting place in a grassy area about a quarter mile away.

Town Mourns Young Girls

PULASKI, Wis. (AP) — More than 2,000 mourners who filled a school gym to remember five young girls killed by a speeding car heard condolences from President Reagan and a tape of a victim singing "Could've Been."

Many at Tuesday night's community service at Pulaski High School hugged and sobbed as the tape recording of rock star Tiffany's song, sung by 12-year-old Nicole Watia, was played.

"The flowers you gave me are just about to die. When I think of what could have been, it makes me want to cry," sang the girl's high-pitched voice.

Nicole's version of the song was among the personal mementos the victims' families shared as this village of about 1,900 gathered for the first time since Friday night's accident that also killed Brenda Hylak, Laura Karcz, Jodi Prokop and Jessica McKeefry, all 13. Three funeral services were scheduled for today.

Police have been puzzled as to why the driver of the 1975 Cadillac, a 17-year-old high school junior, was going an estimated 70 mph down the residential street before it jumped a curb, killing the Glenbrook Elementary seventh graders in front of Jessica's house.

Investigators planned to check the vehicle for possible mechanical problems and to investigate whether the driver, a diabetic, suffered a medical problem such as a seizure, said Police Chief Reed Woodward.

No alcohol was involved, he said.

Who's The Law When Sheriff Marries Judge?

By John Platero
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOORE HAVEN, Fla. — It reads like something from the annals of the Old West.

The setting was the heart of Florida's cattle country where the sheriff was the law, except this sheriff was one of those officers who didn't pack a shooting iron.

Then Alfred E. Wells came to town — the man who would one day be known as Glade County's "hanging judge."

Any anticipated melodrama ends there.

Margaret Pressley hung up her badge soon after Wells arrived, went back to being a teacher, married Wells a few years later and became a pillar of education for this quiet country town in south central Florida.

"I enjoyed being sheriff, but not for my life's work," reflected Mrs. Well, 74. "I've loved every minute of the 30 years I taught here."

Her teaching career began here in 1936 after she graduated from Lander College in Greenwood, S.C.

In 1941, she switched from grade school to Moore Haven High School where she taught English and social studies.

Also that year, she married, C.S. Pressley, who was elected sheriff in 1948 after serving in the Armed Forces during World War II. He died of a heart attack March 2, 1956, while taking a prisoner to LaBelle.

"During those 7½ years, I was his deputy and matron of the jail here. We lived in the jail and I raised three children there," she recalled.

Five days after Pressley died, former Gov. Leroy Collins appointed her to fill out her husband's two-year term.

"I had a gun while I was sheriff, but I didn't carry it. I wasn't afraid of anything," she said.

Wells arrived April 15, 1956, to take charge of a road prison 12 miles west of here.

"It was the worst prison in the state with 60 of the toughest prisoners," he said.

As a corrections captain, he sought out local law enforcement officials.

"I found a woman sheriff who wore the badge, but no gun, and a part-time deputy. I wondered what I got myself into," he recalled with a smile.

"After serving six months as sheriff, I decided to go back to teaching," said the former Mrs. Pressley and, in 1960, she married Wells.

In 1964, after 20 years as a corrections officer, Wells ran for sheriff and won. He remained on the bench until he retired Dec. 31, 1984.

"I was not a lawyer nor a member of the Florida Bar," he said proudly. "In fact, I was a high school dropout."

When the state took over local court systems in 1973, Wells and other judges who were not attorneys were required to take a two-year course at the law school of the University of Florida in order to remain on the bench.

"Anyone who can read and understand what they read can understand the law," he observed.

During his years on the bench, Wells handled juvenile, misdemeanor, traffic and summary claims cases. He's proud of his record.

"For the 20 years I was on the bench, I was never overturned on appeal," he said.

"I was known as 'The Hanging Judge.' My fellow judges called me that."

Mrs. Wells disagrees with that nickname, but admits her husband wields authority at home.

"I guess when I put down my gun, I lost all my powers, but I reign as queen in the kitchen," she commented.

"Everybody knows she's the boss in the house," replied Wells at the courthouse where he does volunteer work.

Crochet Ornaments Add To A Winter Wonderland

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Just picture these delicate crocheted holiday ornaments adorning your tree or mantelpiece this season. You'll add a winter wonderland look with three different frosty white snowflakes, golden bells and three angels. Made from cotton crochet threads, these ever-popular decorations can be easily be stiffened if you wish.

To obtain directions for making the angels and ornaments, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-100288 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-100288 by sending a check or money order for $15.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and sufficient cotton thread to make 14 to 24 ornaments, depending on which designs you choose.

Dear Readers: It has become a tradition in the fall of each year for me to give you directions for making quick and easy little knit or crochet bells that can be used for tree ornaments, lapel pins or package decorations.

You can vary the size of the bells by using different weights of yarn and different sizes of hooks or needles. With these basic patterns, dig deep into your box of leftover yarns and your imagination go.

For the knit bells, using a lightweight yarn and size 2 or 3 needles, cast on 14 stitches. For the first row, knit the first 10 stitches and purl the last 4. Row 2, which is the right side of your work, is made by simply knitting all stitches. Repeat these 2 rows until you have 22 ridges.

Bind all stitches, leaving a 12-inch strand of yarn. Thread this yarn into a tapestry needle and sew the cast-on and bound-off edges together. There will be a little border of stockinette stitch at one end. This is the bottom of the bell. At the other end, run your threaded tapestry needle through every other stitch, drawing it tight. Fasten off and tie in a little jingle bell for a clapper if you wish.

If you prefer to crochet, try the following directions with sports-weight yarn and a size F hook. Starting about 2 inches from the end of the yarn, chain 2. Make 8 single crochets in the first stitch. Place a marker in the last stitch to denote the end of the round. The 8 stitches just made are counted as Round 1.

ORNAMENTS

Do not turn, but work in rounds throughout, moving marker up at the end of each round.

Round 2: Make 2 single crochets in each stitch. Rounds 3 through 8, make 1 single crochet in each stitch around. For Round 9, (single crochet in the first stitch, make 2 single crochets in the next stitch). Repeat the steps between parentheses over and over to the end of the round.

For the final round, (make 2 single crochets in the first stitch, then 1 single crochet in each of the next 2 stitches). Again, repeat the steps between parentheses as before to the last 2 stitches of this round. Work a slip stitch in each of these 2 stitches. To finish, work a slip stitch in the front loop of each stitch round. Fasten off and cut yarn, weaving in the loose end on the wrong side.

Draw the 2-inch end of harn left when making the first chain through to the wrong side and attach a little jingle bell to it.

He Combines Business With Interest In Art

By Donna Bryson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOPLIN, Mo. — The hundreds of mannequins in John Atteberry's warehouse-size repair shop belie an easy assumption: They don't all look alike.

At least, not to a practiced eye. Atteberry, 49, who for nearly 10 years has operated one of only a handful of large-scale mannequin repair businesses in the country, casts his practiced eye along a line of mannequins mustered like toy soldiers in the Fashion Wars.

"That one's Danish. There's an American. Look at the way that one seems to move," he says, nodding at a French mannequin in a state of suspended animation.

Then, turning his attention to a stiffly posed American: "But that one just stands there. The Italian mannequin will typically have broad shoulders, long thighs. The Danish have extremely long legs. The English mannequin has big hands, size 12 shoes and a hawkish face. French mannequins have this trim little body and a perky little face. The American mannequins are idealized."

Atteberry oversees his Jaco Mannequins from a windowless office that would be Spartan but for the impressionist posters on the walls. A guide for do-it-yourself handymen and an art-materials catalog are equally close at hand on his desk.

Atteberry says Jaco Mannequins allows him to combine a background in business with an interest in art. He talks as knowledgeably of merchandising as of the painting techniques needed to highlight a fiberglass face.

For $175, Atteberry and a dozen workers replace stolen hands, resculpt damaged faces and repaint chipped complexions of mannequins made of fiberglass or sophisticated epoxies. On average, the mannequins would cost between $800 and $1,000 to replace, Atteberry says. One "avant-garde" Swiss model with dramatically elongated limbs and a coat of metallic paint sells for $1,800, he says.

"Mannequins do sell the goods," Atteberry says. "There's nothing come along to replace them."

The key is that the mannequin not draw too much attention to itself, and instead show off the clothing, Atteberry says.

The tall English mannequins with the faces of Vogue models can carry high-fashion gowns. But an athletic American mannequin would be better suited to swimsuits, and it is easy to picture the lithe French mannequins in hip junior clothing departments.

"It comes down to the mood of the store," Atteberry says. "There's a big difference between a Bloomingdale's and a JC Penney's."

In addition to department stores, Atteberry does custom work for museums.

Atteberry is a Joplin native who moved to California for a career as a research chemist and later in construction. He came home in 1979 to look for his own business when, he says, he decided to leave the world of "high-pressure, high-rise steel."

He bought the mannequin repair shop from another Joplin native, Lloyd Powell, who had opened it after World War II. The shop is now one of the oldest of its kind, Atteberry says.

Atteberry says he repairs mannequins for stores throughout the Midwest at the rate of 30 to 40 a week. He estimates he has about 1,500 mannequins at his factory, where lifelike torsos strung on wires hang eerily from the ceilings and heads sit on shelves like so many bowling balls.

"I've got to be compatible with all of them," Atteberry says. "It's an expensive business to be in. If you're going to service customers — in our case, we service chains — you have to be able to supply the parts they lose, or people steal or get broken. So your inventories are very high."

MRS. ROACH

Wedding Vows Said

GRIFTON — Kimberly Dawn Sautler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.B. Sautler Jr. of Grifton, and Mark Anthony Roach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Roach of Route 1, Vanceboro, were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m.

The Rev. Dempsey R. Winstead conducted the double-ring ceremony in Grifton Pentecostal Holiness Church.

Marianne Roach of Route 1, Vanceboro, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Lee Roach of Winterville and Daniel Roach of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom.

Organist Judy Braxton and vocalist Mary Elizabeth Brown presented wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white taffeta gown trimmed with silk Venise lace and chantilly lace. It had a sweetheart neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves with ruffled accents. The bodice was beaded with sequins and pearls extending into the A-line skirt which was edged with chantilly lace. The back had layers of ruffles and bow accents with sequins. The V-shaped back had self-covered buttons and a chapel-length train. She wore a western-style hat with one side turned up with a satin bow. It was adorned with Venise lace, sequins and pearls with a cage blusher and two-tiered illusion veil. The bride carried a nosegay of silk white roses, miniature blue carnations and rosebuds accented with baby's breath and royal blue and white lace streamers.

The honor attendant wore a full-length dress of blue chantilly lace and carried a cascade of flowers identical to that of the honor attendant.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents and ladies of the church. Assisting were Magdalene Garris of Grifton, Mae Shirley of Ayden, Myrtle Winstead of Rocky Mount and Janet Roach.

After a wedding trip to the Outer Banks, the couple will live near Grifton.

The bride is employed by DuPont of Kinston and the bridegroom is employed by Agri-Supply. She is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and he attended D.H. Conley High School.

Booklets List Hints For Groups

NEW YORK (AP) — Two booklets full of helpful hints are available for two groups on the go — the disabled air traveler and the do-it-yourself mover.

For the wheelchair set, there is information about rights under the law and the need to plan ahead carefully for the trip. For example, when making reservations, tell the airline what kind of assistance will be needed when boarding and whether a bulkhead seat or an aisle seat with fold-up or removable arms is preferred. The booklet also lists amenities available on major U.S. and international carriers.

A four-week planner and an inventory sheet, broken down into what to pack and stow and what to hand carry, plus information on how to select the proper size boxes and truck are among things listed in the pamphlet for families planning to tackle the household moving chore from start to finish.

Reader's Suggestion For Beneficiary: Local Library

DEAR ABBY: In the past, you have often run letters from single, wealthy people who have no heirs and want to know what to do with their money when they pass away.

Well, how about giving it to the local library? Our public libraries are one of the most important, yet one of the most neglected, of all municipal facilities.

In view of the miserable state of our public educational system and the rampant illiteracy in our society, supporting the public libraries with gifts and endowments is one of the most worthwhile things anyone can do with his or her wealth. — L. DAVIS ALMAND, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR L. DAVIS ALMAND: Bravo! Thank you for a valuable suggestion. On numerous occasions I have been asked if I have any special advice for young people. My response repeated:

"If I could give young people one piece of advice, it would be, read, read, read! In reading, you will open up new worlds, real and imagined. Read for information, read for pleasure. Our libraries are filled with knowledge and joy, and it's all there — free for the taking. The person who DOES NOT read is no better off than the person who CANNOT read."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old petite blonde, and after knowing a lot of jerks who have done me wrong, I finally found a wonderful man who is kind, fun, intelligent and caring.

The problem? He insists that I have surgery to increase the size of my bust. I feel happy with myself the way I am and wish he could love me this way. He says he wouldn't spend the rest of his life looking at other women's breasts if the perfect body was at his side.

I really don't want to do this, but I don't want to lose him. And I'm a little hurt knowing he feels this way.

Should I have this surgery done to please him? Or try to find someone who will love me the way I am? — BLONDIE

DEAR BLONDIE: Your "kind, intelligent and caring" man is another jerk. If you are happy with yourself the way you are, leave yourself alone. I am not opposed to breast augmentation surgery — it has done wonders for many women — but a man who would threaten you by saying he would spend the rest of his life looking at other women if you didn't "shape up" is no prize. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: Re: Peterson vs. Peterson Vacuuming and Dusting. How can a man who has followed his wife about during her work be so unobservant? A vacuum cleaner sucks up the dust into its bag — it doesn't blow it around the house. Of course the vacuuming should be done after the dusting.

I do not think Mr. Peterson should do housework as you suggested. I suggest he take up a hobby — hiking. From Cincinnati to Rangoon would be a good start. — A.S.B., MIAMI

Deputy Injured

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake Sheriff's deputy was critically injured when he was thrown from a four-wheel-drive vehicle that his fiancée — a Fuquay-Varina police officer — was driving while the two argued, authorities said.

Deputy Jasper I. Fuquay was standing on the running board and pounding on the passenger window of a 1984 Ford Bronco driven by Judy W. Green, Fuquay-Varina police Chief Stacy Pleasant said Monday.

Ms. Green, 39, of Fuquay-Varina, apparently got into her Bronco and locked the doors after "a domestic squabble," he said. "She was backing out of a driveway, and he apparently was beating on the windows of the vehicle. She backed out and subsequently started forward," Pleasant said.

"He jumped onto the running board of the vehicle and was holding on, hollering for her to stop and continued to beat on the glass. When she hit the brakes he went forward onto the roadway," he said.

Fuquay, 38, of Raleigh, suffered severe head injuries. He was in critical condition Monday at Wake Medical Center, said Elizabeth H. McRoberts, a hospital spokesman.

Teen-Ager Held

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy was being held in the Wilkes County juvenile detention center after being charged with murder in the stabbing death of an Elkin man.

Albert Walker Jr., 42, was stabbed Saturday night and died after being driven to Wilkes General Hospital, Sheriff Fred Myers said.

Walker and the 15-year-old, who was not identified, apparently were involved in an argument at a bar in the Rock Creek community when the boy stabbed the man once in the left side of the chest, Myers said.

French

Most of the cigarettes in France are American, Miss Celerier said, and very little tobacco is grown there. What is grown, she said, is farmed in very small plots on state-owned land. It can only be grown for personal use, not for sale, she said.

The group arrived in Raleigh Monday and visited the Outer Banks Tuesday after leaving Greenville. Other stops include Pinehurst, Asheville and a flight to Nashville, Tenn., Friday for a visit to the Grand Ole Opry. The group is to board a return flight Saturday at Raleigh-Durham.

The trend in international tourism is to encourage people to visit places like North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia — places not on the traditional list of tourist stops, according to French and North Carolina officials.

Many French travelers have been to the United States several times, Ms. Fry said, and they are looking for alternatives. "This place has a lot to offer. The French fly and drive a lot, and this place is perfect for that," she said.

A tobacco auction, Ms. Fry said, may be too common to attract interest from local folks, but the trick to luring tourists is offering something they cannot see or do at home.

Frederic Wuetelet of Paris, a sales representative with American Airlines in France, said Europeans have traditionally visited Florida to play golf, and now the French are realizing North Carolina offers many golf courses. "People love to come to the states to play golf," he said.

The group is to visit the World Golf Hall of Fame in Pinehurst today, and Wuetelet said the sport would probably draw French tourists to North Carolina. Flights from Paris to Raleigh-Durham cost about $4,000 francs — about $660 — and are very affordable to the French tourists, he said.

But the tobacco auction also has appeal, he said. "I think what we see today is very interesting. I don't think we can see this in France."

Cone Hurls Mets Past L.A.

Johnson Rewrites New York Lineup For Game Six

Brian Holton scores past Mets' Gary Carter in 5th inning.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Cone rewrote his story and Davey Johnson rewrote his lineup card. As a result, the end is yet to be written to this year's National League playoffs.

Cone, who was awful in Game 2 in the wake of a controversial column under his byline in the New York Daily News, was brilliant in Game 6 Tuesday night, pitching the New York Mets to a 5-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers to deadlock the series at three games apiece.

So it's on to Game 7 tonight, with probable NL Cy Young Award winner Orel Hershiser pitching for the Dodgers against Ron Darling of the Mets. A berth in the World Series opposite Oakland goes to the winning team.

Cone, 20-3 with a 2.22 earned run average during the season, overcame a shaky start to stifle the Dodgers on five singles, two with two outs and nobody on in the ninth inning. Cone then retired pinch hitter Mike Davis on a fly to left to end the game.

The heretofore quiet Kevin McReynolds, 3-for-20 in the first five games, sparked the Mets, becoming the eighth player in the history of the league playoffs to get four hits in a game.

McReynolds, batting in front of a hot hitter, Gregg Jefferies, instead of a cold one, Howard Johnson, drove in three runs, two on a fifth-inning homer off losing pitcher Tim Leary which gave New York a 4-0 lead.

In his shortest performance of the year as a starter, Cone allowed five runs in two innings of Game 2 last Wednesday night, and the Dodgers won 6-3.

In the celebrated column which appeared earlier that day, he wrote that Hershiser was "lucky" to shut out the Mets for eight innings in the opener a night earlier and that ace Dodgers reliever Jay Howell "reminded us of a high school pitcher" because of all the curveballs he threw.

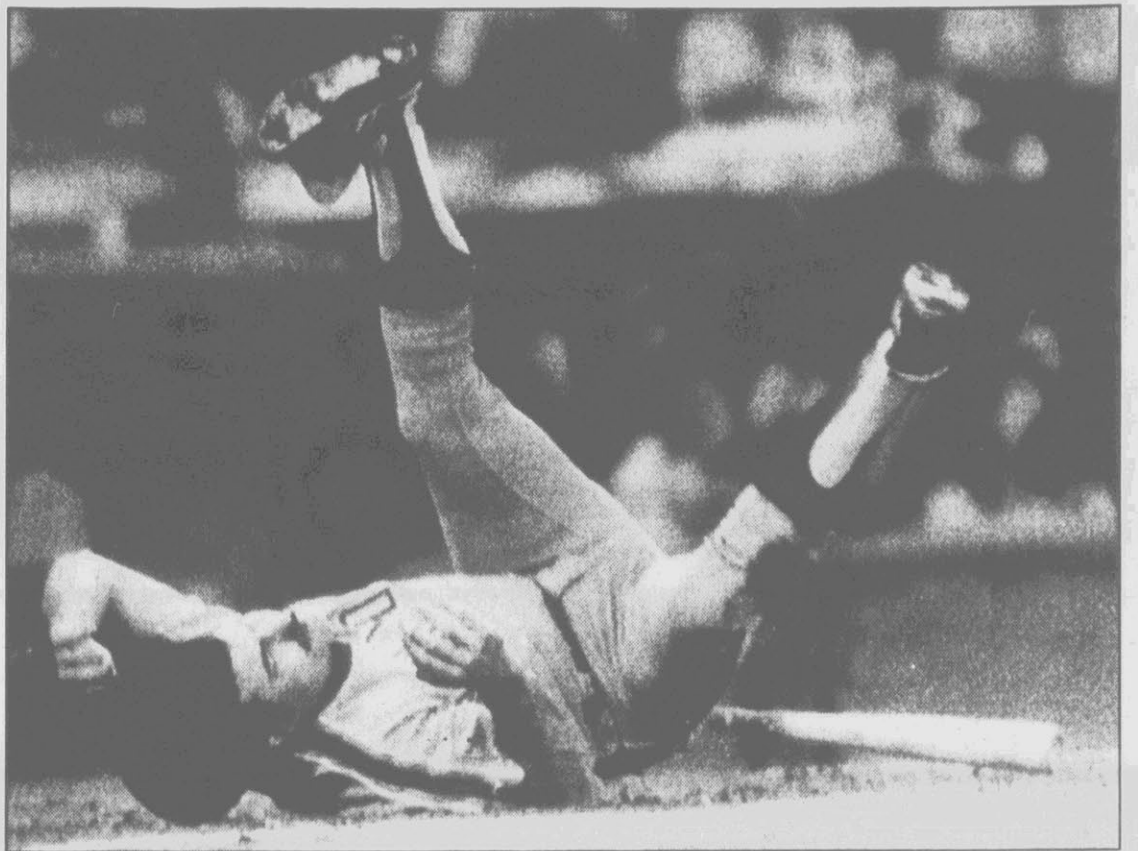

When asked how he would write Tuesday night's performance, Cone said, "I don't think I should probably answer that. I've tried to put it all behind me, but it just won't go away."

"I wanted to do so well tonight, but I was a little jittery at the start. Fortunately, I made some big pitches to get out of it and that is the way I would write it."

"Cone appeared to be a lot jittery. After the Mets scored a run in the top of the first, marking the first time they had scored first in the playoffs, Cone's first seven pitches in the bottom of the inning to Steve Sax and Mickey Hatcher were balls."

After throwing a strike to Hatcher.

L.A. Confident Hershiser Ready

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Since he didn't even warm up in Game 6, the Los Angeles Dodgers are confident Orel Hershiser won't let them down tonight.

After all, in an age when starting pitchers rarely work one out of four days, Hershiser has worked better than one out of every four innings for the Dodgers in the National League playoffs against the New York Mets.

And now they want more. Confusing? It all seems natural enough for Hershiser.

"Who else would you rather have going for you?" Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda asked rhetorically after the Mets forced a deciding seventh game with a 5-1 victory Tuesday night.

"I guess it's justice," right fielder Mike Marshall said. "Now it's all even up. It's one ballgame and we have our ace going."

Hershiser, the scholarly appearing, scholarly speaking star of the Dodgers' pitching staff, certainly has earned the right to face the Mets' Ron Darling with a World Series berth at stake.

Hershiser has started two games during the playoffs, earned a save in relief by getting the final out in Game 4 Sunday, then warmed up for another possible relief appearance in Monday's Game 5.

Of 56 innings over six playoff games, Hershiser already has logged 15 2-3. And this for a guy who usually doesn't even throw between starts every fifth day.

He was not needed in Tuesday night's 5-1 loss to the Mets, so he finally got a well-deserved break.

The 30-year-old Hershiser seemed unworried about pitching again with so little rest.

"I'll just go as hard as I can for as long as I can and turn it over to the next guy when I'm finished," he said. "It's not the kind of thing where you're going to be pacing yourself."

"You're going to use your best pitch on every delivery. I'll be exposing every pitch and every method I have of getting people out because there is nothing to look forward to or to go to.

"If I run out of methods to get people out, then I'll tell Tommy (Lasorda) I've had enough."

Hershiser, who had a 23-8 record and rewrote the major league record book this season with a string of 59 scoreless innings from Aug. 30 to Sept. 28, volunteered for relief duty in Sunday's game in New York, then again Monday.

"I come forward and volunteer to pitch relief all through the season," explained Hershiser, who was used once in relief — and logged a save — during this past regular season.

"At this point, with so much on the line, you realize you signed a player contract and you tell people when you are able to play and it's the manager's job to use you when he wants."

Hershiser's Dodger teammates, behind putting the Game 6 loss behind them, were happy he was going to be their man on the mound for Game 7.

"We've played great and the Mets have played great," second baseman Steve Sax said. "Now we have our ace going and they have a great pitcher going for them."

"I don't think anybody's got the advantage. It's a dead heat. It could go down to the last inning, the last out."

"David Cone pitched a great game for them tonight (Tuesday night)," Los Angeles first baseman Mickey Hatcher said. "They needed a great game and they got it."

"Now we need the same thing and we've got our ace on the mound. He brings a lot of fire to this ball club."

Tim Leary, the losing pitcher Tuesday night, was confident that Hershiser would do the job.

"We've got Orel going and he's been real tough, particularly the last two months."

"I know we can win with Orel out there for us."

Tyson Breaks Hand Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson has reportedly fractured his right hand, possibly putting a crimp in his scheduled title defense on Dec. 17 against Frank Bruno.

Bill Cayton, Tyson's manager, confirmed Tuesday that he had been called by promoter Don King from Cleveland with the news that may affect the champion's fight schedule.

The latest revelations were contained in a story in Wednesday's edition of the New York Daily News.

According to reports, Tyson was hitting the heavy bag in a gym on King's farm in Orwell, Ohio, when the injury occurred. His hand was then re-set in a cast by a Cleveland doctor, the News reported.

Tyson originally had been scheduled to start training Monday in Catskill, N.Y.

Cayton said he could not be positive whether the apparent hairline fracture on the third metacarpal of the right hand, which Tyson injured in a Harlem street fight with Mitch Green in August, was new or old.

That original injury forced postponement of the fight with Bruno until October. Further problems moved the fight back two more times, to December.

According to the News, Cayton said he spoke to the doctor who treated Tyson in Cleveland and was told the injury was "minor." Cayton said it is still possible for Tyson to keep his four-times postponed date with Bruno.

"There are nine weeks to the fight and a hairline fracture usually takes only three weeks to heal," Cayton said.

Cayton said Tyson was expected to arrive in New York today or tomorrow to be examined by Dr. David Chiu, who treated Tyson after the fight with Green.

"I think they want to keep him (Tyson) in Cleveland because they're afraid of papers being served on him," Cayton was quoted as saying.

Tyson reportedly has been huddling with King and other advisers in King's home concerning the divorce action his wife, Robin Givens, filed in California last Friday. It was expected that Tyson would file for divorce himself in New Jersey, where the couple had been residing, or seek an annulment of the eight-month marriage.

Givens' lawyers, already in New York, said Tuesday they will seek an out-of-court property settlement with Tyson, but also hinted there is a chance to save their rocky marriage.

Givens hired divorce lawyer Raoul Felder and his California associate Neal Raymond Hersh on Sunday, the lawyers said. She was originally represented by celebrity divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson.

Asked about a possible reconciliation, Felder said: "It's not unthinkable. If she had her druthers, she would rather be a happily married young girl."

Panthers, Jags In Key Game

By Tom Morris THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Both North Pitt football coach Stuart Ennis and Farmville Central coach Dixon Sauls know their upcoming game Friday night will have direct implications on both team's post-season plans.

"Our conference sends three teams to the playoffs and in the preseason, the three picked teams were Ayden-Grifton, Greene Central, and Farmville," Ennis said. "I think that a victory in this particular football game would really open a door for us to have a shot at one of those spots."

This game is the start of key three-game stretch for Farmville against the conference's top teams which could decide whether the Jaguars will have any post-season plans.

"North Pitt is a critical game if we have playoff aspirations," Sauls said.

Farmville stands at 4-3 overall and 2-1 in the Eastern Plains Conference, while the Panthers are 3-3 overall and 1-1.

The Jaguars are still overcoming a number of injuries to key personnel early in the season and seem to be slowly rounding in to shape.

"We've improved in some areas, particularly in our blocking," Sauls said. "We've established our running attack. (Quarterback) Morris Foreman is able to do a few more things than he could a few weeks ago."

But the Jaguars are still trying to plug holes on both sides of the line of scrimmage and have rarely fielded the same lineup two games in a row.

"I've seen a couple of films on them," Ennis said. "They look like they are getting back to being a contender like they were picked to be."

They are getting over their early season injuries.

"Farmville always gives us a whole bunch of problems," Ennis added. "They seem to give us the most trouble defensively, even though last year we were able to put together a late fourth-quarter drive to win (20-13)."

"Their scheme (a four-man front) and their aggressiveness give us problems. "I think they pose a problem for us with the option. We very well may have to throw our power game against them."

And that versatility concerns Sauls.

"Defensively, they are a very difficult team to prepare for because of their multi-faceted attack," he said. "In the past, we've had some quick athletes that have been able to make the plays."

So the Jaguars will have to make some adjustments if the Panthers do change their attack.

"They have 11 men around the football and we'll have to play with nine men on the line of scrimmage," Sauls said. "We'll have to meet force with force. Because of their versatility they are difficult to prepare for."

Ayden-Grifton

The Chargers, 5-1 overall and 2-0 in the Eastern Plains Conference, are coming off an open date last week and take on Greene Central Friday night in Snow Hill.

The Rams come in at 3-3 overall and 2-1 in the conference after a 19-0 loss to North Pitt last weekend.

"Psychologically, they should have the edge," Charger coach B.T. Chappell said. "Our guys haven't really gotten backed in the corner like Greene Central. They have all the incentive to win."

The Chargers, though, come into the game ranked sixth in the state and on a five-game winning streak. Halfback Tony Reeves, who has

Wednesday Notebook

Blount Making Steady Progress At UNC

Former Ayden-Grifton standout Eric Blount is steadily making progress this season with the North Carolina football team.

Blount, a true freshman, caught five passes for 72 yards from his split end position last Saturday in the Tar Heels' 42-24 loss at Wake Forest. For the season, Blount, who also returns kickoffs and punts, is averaging 15.1 yards on 11 catches. As a kickoff returner, Blount is averaging 24.6 yards, while he's turned in an average of 4.6 yards on punt returns.

Blount began the season as a backup wide receiver before being moved to a starting role in the second week against Oklahoma.

"Eric is getting better and better every time he plays," Tar Heel coach Mack Brown said. "He's come close a couple of times to making really big plays for us in both the kicking game and as a receiver. I'm impressed with the way he's continuing to work and improve."

Last Time In Kenan Was A Gem

North Carolina and N.C. State square off in Kenan Stadium Saturday at noon and if the game turns out to be anything like the last time the two met there, the fans will be in for a treat.

The 1986 matchup proved to be one of the wildest games in the history of the long rivalry, which UNC leads 52-19-6.

State won the game, 35-34, behind the play of quarterback Erik Kramer and wide receiver Naz Worthen. Kramer completed 17 of 27 passes in the game for 279 yards and a touchdown, while Worthen had eight catches for 160 yards and a TD.

The win by the Wolfpack wiped out a record-setting performance by Mark Maye, who was making his first start of the season.

Maye connected on 25 of 33 passes for a school-record 311 yards and three touchdowns to keep the Tar Heels close. Maye's main target in the game was Quinton Smith, who hauled in nine receptions for 126 yards.

Kramer seemingly locked the game up for State when he tossed a 37-yard scoring strike to Worthen with 1:01 left on the clock to give the Wolfpack a 35-28 lead.

But Maye rallied UNC and drove them 68 yards in only five plays, scoring with eight seconds on the clock on a 13-yard pass to Smith. The two-point attempt by the Heels failed, however, when a wide-open David Truitt tripped over a State player's leg and caught Maye's pass with his knee on the ground just short of the goal.

One of the amazing statistics from the game was that with a combined total of 60 passes between the two quarterbacks, there wasn't a single interception. For the game, State wound up with 503 yards in offense, while North Carolina finished with 490.

Many Have Advanced Past Opportunity Bowl

Each Thursday afternoon at the end of a regular practice, the N.C. State coaching staff holds a scrimmage for the players who will not be dressing out for the upcoming Saturday game. Most people think of it as a scout team scrimmage, but at State it has earned the name of the Opportunity Bowl.

The brief scrimmages give those players a chance to show their stuff in game-type situations. The results obviously are successful. Among Wolfpack players who have participated in the Opportunity Bowl over the past two years are former West Craven player Jesse Campbell, Scott Adell, Mark Thomas, Dan Hayden, Lee Knight, Joe Johnson and Rich Pokrant, all of whom are now key players for the Wolfpack.

Pack To Dine At Hollowell's Restaurant

N.C. State players have adopted a new ritual prior to each football game. It seems it all started fairly innocently when the Wolfpack's senior football players all headed over to backup quarterback Joe Hollowell's apartment for a Thursday night cookout prior to the Georgia Tech football game.

The Wolfpack won that game 14-6 and the event was repeated before the East Tennessee State contest, a game the Pack won last Saturday 49-0.

Here's money saying the crowd goes to Hollowell's again this Thursday in preparation for the North Carolina game.

Fireworks Could Mark ECU-FSU Contest

When East Carolina heads into Doak Campbell Stadium Saturday in Tallahassee to battle fifth-ranked Florida State, don't be surprised if you see some big numbers on the scoreboard.

In the previous five meetings between the two schools, all of which were won by the Seminoles, Florida State has averaged better than 50 points per game. Last year's 44-point total by the Seminoles in a 44-3 win was the lowest output by the team in the series. The most points by FSU came in the series opener in 1980 when the Pirates were routed 63-7.

In five contests, the Seminoles have amassed 257 total points for a 51.4 average. ECU has averaged 18 points in the series, thanks in part to a 46-point effort in the 1983 game which saw FSU survive in a wild 47-46 offensive shootout.

Throw together past history plus the fact that the Pirates are yielding an average of 30 points defensively per contest this year and Florida State could be looking at a record-setting day on the offensive side of the ball.

Bowden Looks For A Tough Game With ECU

After watching his team battle to a 28-10 victory over Division I-AA Georgia Southern last Saturday, FSU head coach Bobby Bowden is looking at the Pirates with a cautious eye.

The Seminoles fell behind Georgia Southern, 10-7, early in the fourth quarter before rallying to score three touchdowns.

"East Carolina's a better football team than Georgia Southern and you see how we struggled with them," Bowden said. "Emotion is such a key and it's hard to get that when you're heavily favored. We're familiar with what East Carolina can do and at this level of football, upsets happen everyday. They played South Carolina a great game. Behind 3-0 and drove to USC's goal line and fumbled on the three and that cost them the game. They're a capable team. You can be sure that this will be an important week of preparation."

Watson, Mahaffey Are Favorites In Golf Event

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The purse is down by $1.4 million, but the Texas Open this week can make a claim rarely seen on the PGA Tour — dual defending champions.

Tom Watson and John Mahaffey occupy that (or those) position(s).

Mahaffey, in 1985, was the last man to win this tournament under its current title, the Texas Open.

The last two years, the tournament, on the Oak Hills Country Club course, was host to the multi-million-dollar Nabisco Championships of Golf.

Watson won it last year, leading all the way as he broke a three-year victory drought.

Nabisco, however, now has taken its $2-million event to Pebble Beach, Calif. (to be played next month) and the San Antonio tournament reclaimed the name it first used in 1922 — the Texas Open.

While Mahaffey is the last winner of that title, Watson will be back in a role he sees as that of a defender.

"I won there. It's only right that I go back and defend there," the six-time Player of the Year and five-time British Open winner said earlier this season.

He'll face a course that has undergone some slight — and unplanned — alterations. On three holes, trees have been lost to tornadoes spawned by Hurricane Gilbert on Sept. 17.

"It doesn't change the course's playability that much," Mahaffey said. "Other than that, the course is in great shape, maybe the best I've seen it."

Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for his golf game. The former PGA champion has missed the cut in seven of his last 10 starts.

Rose Moves To 3rd In AP Poll

By David Droschak

Richmond County inched closer to defending 4-A state champion Garner, winners of 22 straight, in the latest North Carolina Associated Press high school football poll.

The Raiders, 6-0, received four first-place votes for 136 points and moved within nine points of Garner, 7-0. The top-ranked Trojans took 10 top votes for 145 points from a statewide panel of prep sportswriters.

Fayetteville Smith, losers to Fayetteville 71st last Friday, dropped from third to ninth in the poll, just ahead of 71st, making its first entry into the poll.

Greenville Rose, 6-0, jumped from fifth to third with 104 points, while fourth-ranked Greensboro Page got 99 points and one first-place vote.

McDowell County, Asheville Reynolds, Gastonia Ashbrook and West Mecklenburg rounded out the Top 10.

Meanwhile, Burlington Cummings, Hertford County and Murphy remained atop of their classifications.

Cummings, 6-0 and the top-ranked 3-A squad all season, received 13 of a possible 15 first-place votes for 148 points.

Second-ranked Forest Hills was well back with 126 points.

Third-ranked Havelock, 5-0-1, received the remaining two first-place votes and garnered 111 points.

despite losing its hold on some first-place votes. The Bulldogs received seven first-place votes for 131 points.

Chargers 4th In Reflector Prep Poll

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Hertford County has moved to the top in The Daily Reflector's High School Football Rankings among 2-A teams, and is the only newcomer to the top of one of the four classification lists.

Richmond County, however, is alone at the top of the 4-A ranks, after having been tied for first with Garner last week. Garner has slipped to second.

Havelock continues to lead the 3-A listings while East Montgomery is still atop the 1-A heap.

Rankings are based on success against the strength of schedule of a team. Points are awarded for each victory a team earns, with additional points awarded each time one of the teams it has beaten wins a game.

Teams are rewarded for playing up in classification and penalized for playing down.

Richmond County, now 6-0, has gathered 47 points thus far in the year, while Garner, 7-0, has 46. The rankings would tend to eventually go against the defending state champions, however, if both continue to win. Garner still has to observe its open date for the season while Richmond County has already had its open date.

Raleigh Millbrook, 6-1, and a loser only to Garner, is third with 44 points while Greenville Rose is fourth with 43.

Havelock, 6-0-1, remains just ahead of Burlington Cummings (6-0) with 43 and 41 points, respectively. High Point Andrews, 5-1, is third with 33 while East Lincoln, 6-0, is fourth with 31.

Hertford County, a school that will move to the 3-A ranks next year, leads the 2-A list with 34½ points. The Bears are 6-0 on the year. Thomasville, 6-1, is second with 34, followed by last week's leader, Clayton, 5-1, with 29, and tied with Newton-Conover, also 5-1.

East Montgomery, 5-1, continues to lead the 1-A ranks with 29 points. Murphy, 6-0, Swain, 6-1 and Elkin, also 6-1, are tied for second with 23 points.

Cone's Pals Helped To Settle Him Down

By Scott Ostler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — It was a portrait of a young man coming apart at the seams, leaking composure, nearing his panic threshold.

David Cone was very much alone on the Dodger Stadium pitcher's mound Tuesday night.

First inning, he walked Dodger leadoff man Steve Sax on four pitches, then threw two balls to Mickey Hatcher.

The New York Mets' star pitcher had been hounded out of Game 2 of this series after his now-infamous newspaper column. Now he was back in town, charged with the assignment of keeping the Mets alive.

During pregame introductions, Cone got the night's biggest crowd reaction, and unless his nickname is "Moose," the local fans were booing the former journalist.

Now he was in real trouble. The fans were howling. The strike zone seemed the size of a matchbook. Mel Stottlemyre, the Mets' pitching coach, popped out of the dugout and jogged quickly to the mound. Mel doesn't remember ever visiting his starting pitcher so early in a ballgame, but geez, the kid looked nervous.

Stottlemyre was joined by catcher Gary Carter, first baseman Keith Hernandez and second baseman Wally Backman.

What goes on in a meeting like this?

Stottlemyre: "He was nervous. I could see it on his face. I could see he was tense and over-keyed up. He didn't say anything. I said, 'I know you're nervous. Try to relax, step off and throw to first twice, three times if necessary, to get loose.'"

Carter: "I went out and said, 'Hey, settle down. You don't need to be as pumped up as you are. Have some fun.' I was assertive. I was on him, rather than 'OK,' because he wasn't OK."

Hernandez: "I was just trying to pump him up. He was tight, nervous. I was trying to bring out the competitor in him, I was screaming, trying to pump him up."

Backman: "I just told him to concentrate a little more, go get 'em. I was trying to build the guy up, in a calming way. I was cheering him, patting him on the back, telling him, 'That's the same team you pitched against in the regular season. Go out and do what you can do.'"

So his pals were trying to pump Cone up and calm him down, soothe him and ruffle him, pat him on the back and yell in his face and kick him in the butt, in a nice and hostile way.

It was group therapy before a mean crowd of 55,000. Nothing to worry about, kid, just relax right now, or else the whole team is dead, done for the season, and you go down as New York's No. 1 goat, and your magnificent season goes down the toilet.

Throw strikes. Have fun. Please, please don't choke.

Then they all walked off and left Cone alone.

He went into his stretch and threw over to first, stumbling and almost falling. He threw to first again.

Then he threw two balls to Hatcher, including a wild pitch.

For those who know Cone as a likable young man, an innocent and easygoing lad with wide eyes and the smallest ego on the ballclub, this was painful to watch.

"Carter and Hernandez were telling me to sit back on my back leg, stop lunging," Cone said, "but it's real hard to do when your heart is jumping, and at that point, all I wanted in the world was to throw a strike."

He threw one to Kirk Gibson. Then Gibson did what all the Mets hadn't been able to do — he calmed Cone down. Gibson bunted the ball into the air, directly to Cone.

From that point on, the nervous kid was the ice-water ace. The rest of the evening, he toyed with the Dodgers, allowing five singles and one run and pitching New York back to life.

Gibson's bunt saved Cone. "Oh, my gosh, that was a bonus for us," Carter said.

The gamble failed. A successful bunt might have undone Cone. The popup was just what he needed.

From then on, Cone handled the Dodgers as if they were high school hitters. He showed them how he won 20 games this season.

"The whole country saw the real David Cone tonight," Kevin McReynolds said. "The kid has some of the nastiest stuff I've ever seen."

Who would suspect it? Cone is 25 but looks younger, and on the mound, even when things are going good, he looks a little anxious. He is hardly an intimidating presence.

Compared with Cone, Orel Hershisser looks like Charles Bronson.

But once he gets in a groove, forget it. He works fast, sometimes taking less than five seconds between the time he gets the ball back from the catcher and the time he rocks into his windup.

Maybe that's the old newspaper man in Cone, the instinct for beating the deadline.

The Dodgers would step out of the box on him, but not often enough. He retired 10 batters in a row, then 12.

They made a big mistake, the Dodgers did. They had the kid on the ropes, they had him so rattled he didn't know which hand to put his glove on, then Gibson swung at the first pitch, then Mike Marshall swung at the first pitch.

This may have been a good time to let the young man bury himself, challenge him to put the ball over the plate.

Instead, they helped him out of the toughest jam of his life, and helped the Mets make it to Game 7.

This would have been a great game for Cone to write if he still had his newspaper column.

He could have explained how, six pitches into the game, he found it necessary to call time out and settle down his first baseman, second baseman, catcher and pitching coach.

Those guys were really keyed up, nervous as hell. Cone could tell, could see it on their faces.

He could relate, and he called the guys together out on the mound just to let them know everything was cool, Cone was in charge.

Chapman Is Inked To Four-Year Deal

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Rex Chapman, the Charlotte Hornets' top draft pick, is expected to practice with the Charlotte Hornets today, after signing a four-year contract worth more than $2 million, officials say.

Chapman's signing Tuesday culminated a marathon negotiation session which began on Monday between Hornets general manager Carl Scheer, team owner George Shinn, and Chapman's attorney David Falk.

"I'm ready to play basketball," said Chapman, who gave up two years of college eligibility at Kentucky to turn pro. "All this is behind us."

No financial details were disclosed by team officials at a hastily called news conference to announce the deal. But one source told The Charlotte Observer that the contract was for four years, and another placed Chapman's annual salary in the vicinity of $650,000 a year.

"I'm just happy to have all this behind us so I can concentrate on basketball," said Chapman, a 6-foot-4 guard.

Chapman joins the first-year expansion team just two days before it takes on the New Jersey Nets in its first pre-season game at Madison Square Garden in New York. The Hornets open the regular season Nov. 4 against Cleveland.

What's ahead for Chapman is some very quick studying on the differences between college and pro basketball. Hornets coach Dick Harter expressed concern earlier Tuesday that if Chapman missed many more practices, he might be behind for the season.

Chapman said he can return to playing shape in three days. If he can assimilate Harter's offensive and defensive plays, Chapman has a good chance for considerable playing time at the shooting guard spot this season.

1 Sad Note To Columbia's Victory
Former Defensive Coach Didn't Get To See Win

By Herschel Nissenson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Amidst all the joy and ecstasy at Columbia over the end of that 44-game losing streak, there is one sad note — Bill Narduzzi wasn't there to see it.

"He spent two years of sweat and blood, and that's the only frustrating thing about it — that he wasn't here to be part of it," Coach Larry McElreavy said. "The win is as much his ... it's his defense out there, it's his defensive philosophy."

Bill Narduzzi was a respected, veteran coach but a relatively young man when he died of Hodgkin's disease last February at the age of 51. McElreavy took a chance and made him Columbia's defensive coordinator when Narduzzi was out of football after 11 years as the head coach at Youngstown State. It paid off with a defense which McElreavy says "is starting to play with some hardness and intensity."

"I didn't name a coordinator after we lost him. I wanted to have the coaches that he taught continue to refine what he had taught them."

"One of the things that we used as a motivational tool with the kids, we said, 'Listen, we want you to play the game how he lived. He lived hard, he lived with intensity, with a great love of the game. Just play that way and everything will take care of itself. That's the best reward we can give him. That's all he ever asked of you.'

"He used to say, 'Don't hold your butt.' And the kids still use it. If somebody's goofing off or loafing, somebody'll yell out, 'Hey, don't hold your butt.'

"And that's all Bill ever really asked from them. He realized when he got here the lack of ability that we had. And his point was just go out and give us everything you've got. And that's all you can ask for."

Narduzzi coached at Pitt, Brown, Yale, Miami (Fla.) and Kentucky before going to Youngstown, where he was national Division I-AA Coach of the Year in 1979. He came from East Canton, Ohio, and he was a blue-collar coach.

"A friend of mine told me that a political thing had happened and he lost his job at Youngstown and no one would give him a shot because of the Hodgkin's disease. The thing had been in remission for five or six years, but the word was out that Narduzzi was sick and you couldn't take a chance on him.

"I gave Bill a call and brought him in and we hit it off right off. He was a little skeptical about coming here, but he said, 'I don't have a job right now so I can't be too choosy.'

"He probably could have gotten a job out there and made a lot more money outside of football, but he's probably the truest football man I've ever seen and he wanted football. And he was healthy then. The thing was in remission."

"The thing I always felt bad about was that he had this beautiful home in Youngstown. Between what I could pay him and what the house was worth in Youngstown, coming here was a travesty. He bought a home in Teaneck (N.J.) that was run down. I mean, I looked at it and I said, 'God, Bill!'

"He said, 'Coach, don't worry about it. We'll get it done.' The house he had in Youngstown, any place in north Jersey, Westchester County (N.Y.) would be half a million dollars without blinking an eye, and I think he sold it for $88,000-$89,000."

"So you can imagine what he had to buy here. I always felt bad about that. Maybe Bill did, too, but he never said a word, never complained about it. And they went to work, and three or four months later the place was phenomenal. That's Bill."

Narduzzi made it through the 1986 season and started to go downhill. McElreavy took him off the road recruiting.

"He really went downhill in late spring. I had a concern, one, for his health and, secondly, of course, in the process of trying to build a football program is that fine line between doing what's best for Bill and doing what's best for your program and your other coaches and everyone else."

"He seemed like he was coming around a little bit. I stopped over to see him in June (1987). I said, 'Bill, we better have a talk.' He thought I was going to say, 'You can't coach,' which I wasn't about to do."

"I said, 'Listen, I want you to coach.' There was a sense of relief and I tell you what, he got stronger after that. He really did. He went into the season fairly strong."

"His doctor did a great job with him. He should be a football coach because he got into Bill with the psychology of getting strong again and he kept telling Bill, 'We're beating it, we're beating it.'

"We got him him a golf cart. He didn't have the strength to stand up, but his mind was fine. So I brought Pat O'Leary up from the freshman staff and had him do the legwork on the field and Bill would be out there scooting around in the cart at practice."

"On Saturdays, because he couldn't stand up on the sidelines, we put him up in the pressbox and he'd call the defenses from up there."

This story typifies Narduzzi. In the spring of 1987, he had to go back in the hospital, which he hated with a passion. He was being fed intravenously and one day he took the whole contraption, the bag of nutrients, put it under his robe, walked out of the hospital, found a gin mill and ordered a beer. The hospital was somewhat embarrassed.

"During the season he looked like he was getting stronger," McElreavy said. "He was spending more time out of the cart. And the season ended, his face was starting to get full again and his hair was starting to brown up."

But after attending a Thanksgiving

Day high school game, Narduzzi felt a stabbing pain in his eye and went back in the hospital.

"They said it was some kind of infection," McElreavy said. "The chemo wears down your resistance to other things, and it's that fine line before the chemo beats the cancer or your immune system is so shot that you're susceptible to everything. They came that close to beating it and then this infection set in, and then it became one thing after another."

Narduzzi went home, developed a massive ulcer and almost bled to death internally one night. They took out half his stomach and sewed up the other half.

International Bank Faces Charges Tied To Money-Laundering Scheme

Drug-Related Money-Laundering

The purpose of money-laundering is to obscure the connection between a sum of money and its source. Below is an example of one of the schemes used by federal agents in a sting involving drug runners and the Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

By Pat Leisner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Federal agents gave new meaning to "hostile takeover" by smashing a $32 million global money-laundering ring that routed drug profits through a bank to Colombian cocaine cartels, authorities say.

Customs agents infiltrated Colombia money-laundering syndicates and helped smuggle profits from drug sales out of the country, federal authorities charged Tuesday in a series of indictments naming 85 defendants.

The charges resulted from a two-year investigation dubbed "Operation C Chase." The "C" stands for C-note, slang for $100 bills.

Among the defendants were BCCI Holdings, a Luxembourg-based bank holding company with branches in 72 countries, and nine bank officials.

"It is the first time an entire financial institution and its important members have been indicted," said U.S. Customs Service chief William Von Raab. "We have given new meaning to the term 'hostile takeover'."

Tuesday's announcement came two days after the arrest here of 11 people, including seven en route to a bogus bachelor party, officials said.

The "bride" and "groom" were actually undercover agents.

At least 40 people have been arrested around the world, including this country, England and Argentina, officials said.

Named along with BCCI Holdings were two subsidiaries: Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A., with operations in the United States and London, and Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Ltd., organized in the Cayman Islands and operating in France, Panama, Colombia, the Bahamas and the United States.

Authorities said the scheme operated this way: Bank officials placed drug money in certificates of deposit in branches in France, Panama, Uruguay, the Bahamas, Luxembourg and England, then created a loan at another branch and allowed the traffickers to withdraw the funds. The bank repaid the loan with funds in the CDs, officials said.

Indictments were returned in Tampa, New York, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and Houston, and warrants were issued in Miami, Los Angeles, London and Paris.

"For some international banks, their sleaze factor is higher than their interest rates. That's what we're talking about here — just pure greed," Von Raab said at a news conference.

He said the case should serve notice that the gates for smugglers are closing around the world.

In congressional hearings this year, BCCI and an assistant director of its Miami office, who was among those indicted, were identified as helping Panamanian leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega hide drug-trafficking profits. Noriega has been indicted here and in Miami on drug charges.

Von Raab refused to comment on whether Noriega was involved in the alleged laundering.

The bank said in a statement that it "is wholly unaware of any violations of law that allegedly have been committed," but was confident "the outcome will be satisfactory."

U.S. District Judge George C. Carr on Tuesday lifted a federal restraining order preventing BCCI from conducting all but routine business without clearance from U.S. marshals. Carr acted after an escrow account was established and the bank deposited $14 million, the amount the government alleged was laundered.

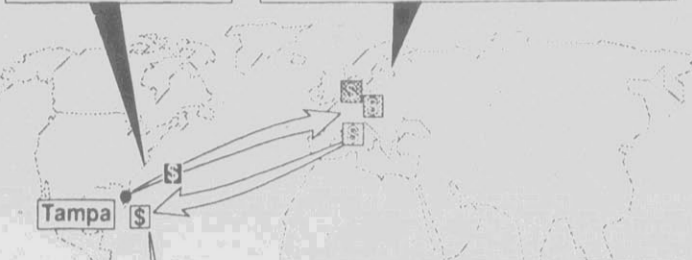

BCCI was founded in 1972 by a group of Pakistan bankers with seed capital from Bank of America and rich Middle Eastern investors. BCCI has assets of about $20 billion and reserves of $1.5 billion.

The trade journal American Banker said the privately held BCCI ranks 326th among the world's biggest banks, as measured by deposits, and 378th by assets.

The indictments alleged possession and smuggling conspiracies, as well as conspiracy to defraud the Internal Revenue Service, launder proceeds of domestic cocaine sales and engage in a continuing criminal enterprise.

GETTING THE CASH Drug dealers look for methods to legitimize their money. Federal undercover agents set up a "legitimate investment business," based in Tampa, Florida, and used it to lure drug dealers' dirty money.

WIRE TRANSFERS The agents wire transfer drug money overseas to accounts at branches of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

BURYING THE MONEY The bank puts the money through several transfers making it difficult to trace its origin. Eventually, one of the bank's branches generates a Certificate of Deposit and another branch generates a loan, which is guaranteed by the CD.

CLEAN MONEY The now "clean" loan money is transferred back to the federal undercover agents in the U.S. who route it to wherever the drug dealers specify, usually South America. If the drug traffickers have to account for the source of the money they can now say they borrowed it legitimately. The lender, meanwhile, has security (the CDs) to take in payment for the loan.

Cuba Holds Ship Carrying Racing Yacht

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban gunship seized a U.S. merchant ship with eight people and New Zealand's America's Cup race yacht aboard, saying the vessel was in its waters, a claim the captain flatly denied, the Coast Guard said.

The eight, at least seven Americans, were detained Tuesday in Punt Cayo Malo, Cuba, said Coast Guard spokesman Dan Vogeley.

The disassembled sloop New Zealand was aboard the 160-foot U.S.-registered merchant ship Tampa Sea Horse, officials said.

The 133-foot yacht was en route from Long Beach, Calif., to New York City for a tour of East Coast cities.

The Cubans seized the vessel off the southeastern tip of Cuba without firing shots or using force, saying it had violated the communist country's 12-mile territorial limit, the Coast Guard said. Capt. Jeff Jappe radioed an urgent appeal Tuesday at 3 p.m. EDT to the Coast Guard, insisting he was in international waters, but Coast Guard officers advised him to comply with the Cubans, Vogeley said.

Lowell Oswald, a spokesman for the Tampa Sea Horse's agent, Zapata Marine of New Orleans, said he didn't know why the ship was seized but also maintained it was in international waters.

"We're at as much of a loss as anyone else," Oswald said.

"Hopefully, they'll let us go ... and they'll keep going to New York," he said. "There's no way to really tell."

The merchant ship was escorted to the Cuban port for inspection, said Maggie Kerrigan, a spokeswoman at the New Zealand consulate in Los Angeles.

She said one New Zealander was aboard, but a list supplied to the Coast Guard by Zapata listed all eight on board as Americans.

Cuba detains foreign ships as often as once a month for trespassing in its waters, but the vessels and crewmen usually are quickly released, said Coast Guard Lt. Wayne Ball in Miami.

"We feel that after a brief inspection they will probably be released," said State Department press officer Ben Justesen in Washington.

Curfew Ends For Algerians

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Tanks and troops disappeared from the streets of Algiers at dawn today as the government abruptly lifted a state of emergency imposed when violent protests swept the country last week.

Armored personnel carriers and tanks rumbled away from public buildings and main intersections at 5 a.m. in this Mediterranean port city. Only the Defense Ministry and other military installations were manned by soldiers.

But more than 3,000 looters and agitators arrested in the last hours of the state of emergency still were being held in the police school at El Biar and elsewhere.

The government acknowledged that at least 180 persons were killed nationwide in the past week, but unofficial counts placed the death toll at more than 500.

More than 1,000 people were said to have been injured, mostly by machine-gun fire directed at crowds of demonstrators.

Shops were open today and government offices, public services and Algiers' vital harbor were functioning normally.

Soviets Win German Credit

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A group of West German banks next week plans to sign a $1.6 billion credit agreement for the Soviet Union, reportedly the biggest Western credit line ever to Moscow, financial sources said.

Deutsche Bank, West Germany's largest commercial bank, is heading the consortium involved in the agreement.

Soviet officials hope to use the money to improve food processing and consumer goods industries, a top priority of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, according to today's editions of The New York Times.

The Duesseldorf-based financial newspaper Handelsblatt said Monday that the agreement would be signed on Oct. 17.

When contacted by the Associated Press by telephone, Deutsche Bank spokesman Hans Detmar said: "I can confirm that the signing will take place on Monday." Detmar provided no further details.

Other banking sources, requesting anonymity, said the agreement would be signed at an undisclosed location in Frankfurt.

Deutsche Bank announced in May that it was heading a consortium of banks to extend the credit to the Soviets to boost the communist nation's consumer goods production and delivery.

Yugoslavia Faces Showdown Over Ethnic Unrest

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serbia's Communist Party chief defended the ethnic rallies that have ignited unrest nationwide and vowed he would assign blame for Yugoslavia's growing crisis during a meeting of national leaders next week.

But Serbian Party Chief Slobodan Milosevic also was criticized for failing to condemn calls for violent solutions to tensions in the Serbian province of Kosovo, where Slavic residents claim discrimination by the Albanian majority.

The Kosovo dispute dominated the meeting here Tuesday of the Central Committee of the Serbian Communist Party.

Members demanded that three Kosovo communists be ousted from the national Central Committee for failing to resolve tensions in Kosovo.

Meanwhile, members of the national Communist party Politburo went to Kosovo's capital, Pristina, late Tuesday to meet with the local party Politburo.

Both gatherings were key preludes to the crucial national Central Committee gathering on Monday as Yugoslavia goes through its most serious social unrest since World War II.

The growing friction between ethnic groups and general dissatisfaction with the nation's shattered economy has triggered widespread public protests, strikes and political maneuvering.

Milosevic, hailed by Serbs as the heir apparent to the late President Josip Broz Tito, is expected to have a major showdown with national party leaders over the Kosovo dispute and the broader protests over Yugoslavia's economy.

Milosevic strongly defended the Serbian nationalist rallies during the meeting of Serbian party leaders Tuesday, but said they should not become a regular practice.

He said Monday's session of the national Central Committee should be "a confrontation with the responsibility for the crisis."

The meeting Tuesday was broadcast on state radio and television in a break with usual practice.

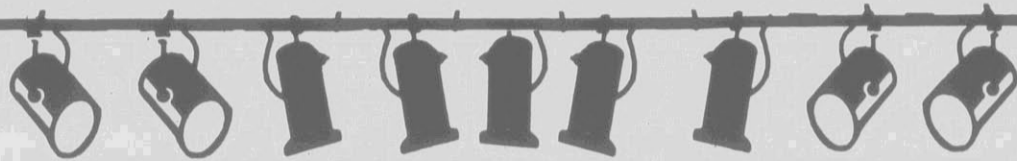

The Serbian Central Committee, which has more than 100 members, decided with only six negative votes to demand dismissals of two ethnic Albanians and one Slav from their Kosovo party posts and their expulsion from the national Central Committee.

One of the three is Azem Vlasi, an ethnic Albanian and former party chief in Kosovo, where predominantly Moslem Albanians make up 90 percent of the population. Most Slavs who live in the province — Serbs and Montenegrins — are Christian.

Yugoslavia consists of six republics and two autonomous provinces, each with its own government and party structure. The autonomous provinces, Kosovo and Vojvodina, are part of Serbia but not fully subject to its control.

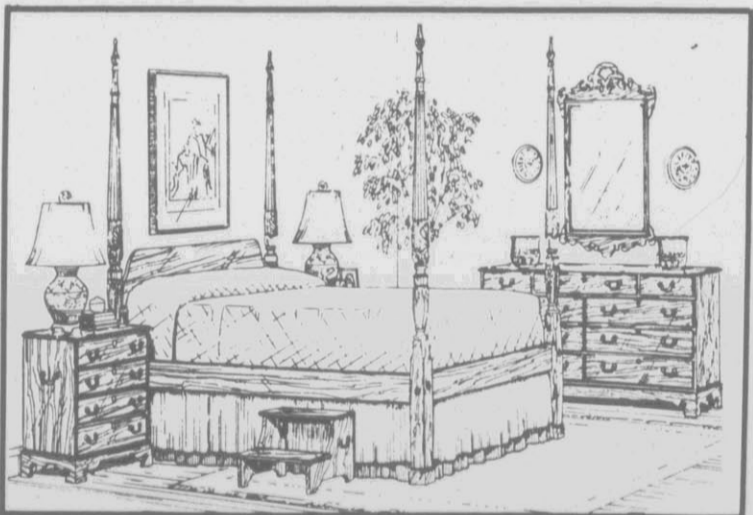

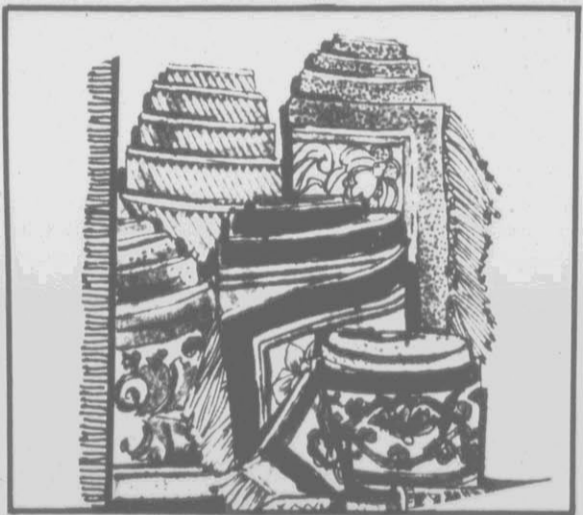

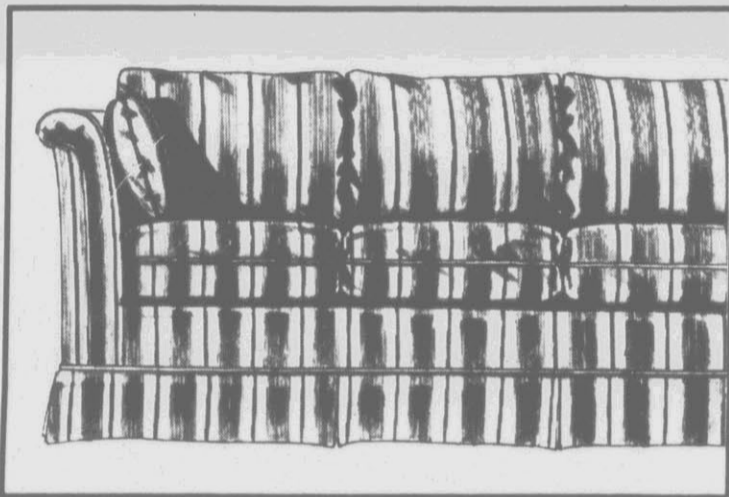

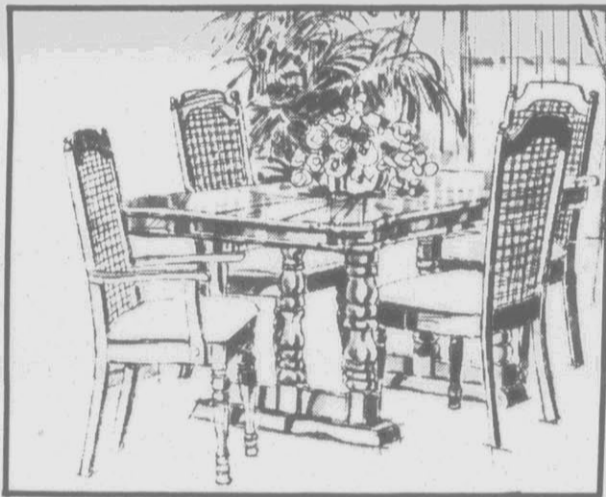

The decentralized system of government and collective federal presidency were devised in Tito's 1974 constitution to prevent one republic from gaining sway over the others, but has resulted in an ineffective government.

Forestry Service Pinpoints The Scenic Colors

RALEIGH — Forestry personnel have devised a fall leaf network that will advise travelers of scenic routes and autumn conditions.

Headquarters personnel for the U.S. Forestry Service in North Carolina and the Blue Ridge Parkway have teamed up with chambers of commerce in the North Carolina mountains to provide up-to-date conditions on fall foliage, said Karen Hughes, a spokesperson for the national forests in North Carolina.

"We have been working with the Blue Ridge Parkway office and the chambers for several years to let people know alternative routes and to provide weekly updates on leaf conditions," she said.

With an estimated 2 million people going to western North Carolina each fall to see the foliage, advance information can be helpful.

Visitors can call the Blue Ridge Parkway and National Park Service headquarters in Asheville (704-258-4200) to get weekly updates on the leaves. That information will also be available on a daily basis from the N.C. Division of Travel and Tourism (1-800-VISIT-NC or 733-4171).

"North Carolina offers so many places off the beaten path where people can go to see fall color and not be disappointed," Ms. Hughes said. Located in the Blue Ridge Parkway area, for example, are two of the state's four national forests, the Pisgah and the Nantahala.

"There is a common idea that there is only one time to see color," Ms. Hughes says. "And this leads to the bumper-to-bumper traffic on the Blue Ridge Parkway and other scenic routes, so we try to consolidate our information to assist the traveler."

Autumn provides color somewhere in the mountains every day from late September through October. And despite a dry summer, this fall's foliage should be striking, says Blue Ridge Parkway spokesman Jim Ryan.

"The combination of altitude and latitude can make a world of difference in leaf-watching," says Ryan. The parkway, a 470-mile scenic roadway, ranges in elevation from 650 to more than 6,000 feet.

Leaves color differently, depending on the species of the tree. Maples don a vibrant red, as do sumacs and sweet gums. Birches turn golden, while the elm, hickory and sycamore trees display various shades of yellow. Dogwood and black gum trees turn a deep red and orange. Color changes began in mid-September at the higher elevations. Some 200 mountains in North Carolina reach 5,000 feet or higher, so their colors are the first to show.

Color then spreads down the slopes and into the valleys until color is everywhere, including the lower elevations in October. Many of the trees hold their color until November.

To see this foliage fantasy, popular vantage points are located all along the 470-mile Blue Ridge Parkway, which begins at Cumberland Knob, winds through Boone and Asheville, and ends at the Cherokee Indian Reservation in the Great Smoky Mountains.

The Richard Balsam Overlook — the highest point on the parkway, and Waterrock Knob, which offers a four-state view — are excellent locations for leaf viewing. The Linn Cove Viaduct is the centerpiece of the parkway's new seven-mile long section near Linville and offers one of the parkway's best views.

Wiseman's View, located one mile south of the parkway at Linville Gorge, provides a spectacular panorama of Table Rock Mountain.

Other favorite mountain stops include U.S. 441 through the Great Smoky Mountains National Park; U.S. 64 through the waterfall country between Brevard and Franklin; U.S. 276 through Pisgah National Forest, N.C. 191 between Asheville and Mills Road; U.S. 25-70 north between Marshall and Hot Springs; U.S. 19-23 near Mars Hill, and U.S. 19-23 near Waynesville and Sylva.

Both the Nantahala and Pisgah national forests offer a variety of recreational opportunities from camping to hiking.

Jeff Davis Homeplace Is Shrine

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BILOXI, Miss. — They call the stately 135-year-old home on the shore of the Gulf of Mexico the Mount Vernon of the Confederate States.

It was at Beauvoir — French for beautiful view — that Jefferson Davis, the only president of the Confederacy, spent the last 12 years of his life. It was here he wrote his two volume work "The Rise and Fall of The Confederate Government."

The 87-acre estate, owned by the Sons of Confederate Veterans, Mississippi Division, is a shrine to Jefferson Davis and the Lost Cause. On the grounds in a cemetery filled with the graves of 800 Confederate veterans and their wives is the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the Confederate States of America.

Davis died at the age of 81 in 1889. In 1903 the sons of Confederate veterans purchased the property to preserve the mansion furnished as it was when Davis lived there and converted a section of the land to a home for Confederate veterans, their wives and widows.

A hospital was built for the veterans and the facility continued as a veterans home until 1956 when the need no longer existed. The hospital and home is now one of the foremost museums and libraries of the Confederacy in the nation. On exhibit in the basement of the Davis mansion is one of the largest collections of Jefferson Davis memorabilia.

Davis is revered in the South to this day, although little known to other sections of the country. His birthday, June 3, is a holiday in all of the Southern states, a day to commemorate the Confederacy and those who fought and died for it from 1861 to 1865.

Towns, counties, streets and boulevards throughout the South are

Vine-Covered Cottage

In mid-October, green is still a dominant color in Pitt County. The latter days of October and early November, however, will see the vines blanketing this farm home take on autumn colors — brilliant red for Virginia creeper and rusty gold for wild grape vines. The two cover the wood of this house alongside a dirt road between Fountain and Saratoga.

Mussels Turn Into 'Black Gold' For Marine Biologist

By Denise Hamilton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — To oil companies, the mussels that grow on the legs of offshore rigs are garbage that they scrape off and throw away.

To marine biologist Bob Meek, they are black gold that he harvests as carefully as the oil companies pump up their viscous raw material from beneath the ocean floor.

Using a hoe, a suction hose and lots of elbow grease, Meek rakes and vacuums the plentiful mollusks that cling to the long legs of oil platforms along the Southern California coast. Then he sells them to restaurants that pay top prices for them.

The oil companies get their rigs cleaned for free, saving up to $200,000 annually. They otherwise would have to pay to keep the metal platforms free of the growth that add dangerous weight and mechanical stress to the legs.

And Meek, who has a doctorate from the University of California, Santa Barbara, makes a healthy living while realizing a 15-year dream.

"What we are doing is the beginning of mariculture offshore," said Meek, whose Ecomar Marine Consulting firm in Goleta sent half a million pounds of mussels to market last year.

At least once a week, the 42-year-old Meek rises at 5 a.m. to hitch a ride on an oil supply boat to one of the platforms offshore between Santa Barbara and Long Beach. Of 22 offshore rigs, he farms 16.

On a recent overcast morning, Meek stalked the walks and gangways of Chevron's Platform Hope like an alley cat on a fence.

Then he squinted into the aqua-

BBC Series 'A Perfect Spy' Will Begin Sunday On PBS

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — At one point in "A Perfect Spy," British intelligence officer Magnus Pym is told by Axel, his symbiotic partner in East-West espionage, "You are a perfect spy. All you need is a cause. I have one."

Pym rejects Axel's attempt to recruit him ideologically. For him, the game is career enhancement — and the thrill of the scam. But Pym's search for an inner cause is a continuing theme in John Le Carre's best seller, which was also a thinly veiled account of the author's relationship with his real-life father.

The best seller is brought to the screen with perfection in the seven-part BBC series that can be seen on PBS beginning Sunday, one hour a week.

This intricate and moody piece owes its success to screenwriter Arthur Hoppercraft's adaptation of the book. The novel began with Pym's disappearance from his post in Vienna, then alternately told of his earlier life and of his British superiors' efforts to locate him.

Hoppercraft, who previously adapted Le Carre's "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy," also for the BBC, tells Pym's life in straightforward, chronological order. But instead of oversimplifying the tale, his script, combined with Peter Smith's direction, draws the viewer into the story, so prepare to be hooked.

Ray McNally is superb as Rick Pym, the con man based on Le Carre's father, Ronnie Cornwell. (Le Carre's real name is David Cornwell.) Peter Egan is the adult Magnus. Rudiger Weigang, an excellent German actor, plays Axel. Alan Howard is Jack Brotherhood, the British agent who recruits Magnus. Jane Booker plays Mary, Magnus' perfect diplomatic wife. Peggy Ashcroft is Miss Dubber, the keeper of the seaside boarding house where Pym goes to hide.

The miniseries begins with Magnus as a young boy (played by twins, Nicholas and Jonathan Hale), watching his beloved father hauled away by the police for embezzlement. His delicate mother cracks under the strain and is also taken away, to a mental institution. Magnus' father later rescues him from a stern uncle and begins his education in deception.

Benedict Taylor plays the college-age Magnus, who fumbles his father's assignment to travel to Switzerland and fleece a "baroness" who turns out to be the superior con artist. Rather than return and face his father, Magnus enrolls in a Swiss college. It is there he meets Axel, a left-wing Czech poet, and encounters Brotherhood and is recruited by British intelligence.

Eventually, Pym is drawn into an arrangement with Axel that has him bargaining with his own country's secrets. Together he and Axel conspire to get themselves posted to the Disneyland of spydom — America.

Continually surfacing is Rick Pym, the ultimate charmer, who cons his son along with the other pigeons, imbuing him with the need to always go for the one last swindle that will "see you right."

In a 1986 article in the London Sunday Times, Le Carre described the emotions that led him to write an account of his late father's life, albeit as part of a fictional spy story:

"So what broke the code for me? What enabled me to write about Ronnie at last? In part, it was the sheer effort of thinking about him for so long. Had I loved him or hated him? It no longer mattered. I had done both so amply that the distinctions had disappeared, and with them any thought of judgment."

"I had fled from his delusions only to find them reproduced all around me in the sleeping castles of secret England where I had taken refuge. I had met bigger wreckers than Ronnie, bigger hypocrites and bigger liars, dressed in the trappings of high office and still rising, with index-linked pensions and knighthoods to take them into old age. The difference was, they lied out of obedience to some ill-perceived higher cause, and did their wrecking in the name of service."

Producer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood producer Allan Carr was named producer of the 1989 Academy Awards ceremony but the longtime director of the Oscar telecast, Marty Pasetta, won't work on the show.

Pasetta, who has directed the last 16 Oscar broadcasts, didn't give any explanation Monday in announcing that he wouldn't direct next year's program. No new director has been named for the show, scheduled for March 29.

Carr, who has produced the movies "Grease II" and "Can't Stop the Music" and the Broadway show "La Cage aux folles," has worked as a talent liaison for the 1976 Oscar show and as a talent consultant for the 1977 show.

Filming Begins On 'Two Cities'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Filming has begun on a new production of Charles Dickens' classic "A Tale of Two Cities" for eventual broadcast on Mobil Masterpiece Theater.

A co-production of Britain's Granada Television and Dune of France, the miniseries will feature British actors as the English characters, French actors as the French. The $7 million four-parter began location shooting in Bordeaux, France, last month.

It stars James Wilby as Sydney Carton, Xavier Deluc as Charles Darnay, Seren Gordon as Lucie Manette, Jean-Pierre Aumont as her father.

Baseball Advice

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — "Bull Durham" star Susan Sarandon has some World Series advice for baseball fans — "Keep an eye on the Oakland A's."

How do the Athletics measure up? "They play on grass, under the sky and have terrific belt loops. Plus they've got a circus elephant on their sleeves," she said.

Writing in this week's TV Guide, Miss Sarandon, who plays a baseball groupie in the hit motion picture, urges readers to root for teams with belt loops instead of elastic waistbands and without domed stadiums or artificial turf.

The Athletics are scheduled to square off in Game 1 of the series at 8 p.m. EDT Saturday against the winner of the National League playoff between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Mets.

Davis Home Is Now A Shrine

named in Jefferson Davis' honor. There are numerous Jefferson Davis statues and monuments. A 351-foot obelisk, much like the Washington Monument, erected by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, stands at his birthplace, Fairview, Ky. He is buried in Richmond, Va., the former Confederate capital.

Monuments, memorials and Confederate cemeteries are cared for by both the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Sons of the Confederate Veterans who publicize local Confederate events and holidays. Members of both organizations must be direct or collateral descendants of Confederate soldiers, sailors or civil servants. The Sons publishes a bi-monthly magazine called the Confederate Veteran.

Jefferson Davis, son of a wealthy cotton planter, was born eight months before Abraham Lincoln and less than 100 miles from Lincoln's birthplace. He graduated from West Point in 1828, fought and was wounded in the Mexican War, was a member of the House of Representatives and U.S. Senate and Secretary of War four years under President Franklin Pierce and was widely respected by both North and South.

A states rights, he was inaugurated president of the Confederacy Feb. 18, 1862. He was captured at Irvinville, Ga., May 9, 1865 and spent two years in prison. He was indicted for treason May 10, 1866, but never brought to trial. On Dec. 15, 1868, President Andrew Johnson issued a proclamation of amnesty for all members of the Confederacy, including Davis.

Meeks

marine depths to take an informal inventory of mussel growth. The mussels grow rapidly beneath the platform, festooning its legs from sea level to 40 feet below, after which there isn't enough light for the plankton on which mussels feed. In the course of one year, more than one million mussels can accumulate on an average-sized platform.

Some marine biologists who once blasted the oil platforms as potential polluters now acknowledge their role as teeming marine-life habitats that draw plankton, then mussels, then small fish, then larger fish, and so on up the food chain.

With a crew of eight, Meek can harvest 3,500 pounds a day of bay mussels from the reefs of steel, using equipment he has assembled after years of experiment. Previously, the oil companies had relied on costly commercial divers equipped with high-pressure nozzles.

Ecomar is a family affair: Meek's wife, Jill, works in the office and drives the mussel delivery truck, while their 18-year-old son, Matt, who is off to California State University at Humboldt this fall to study aquaculture, helps out in the summer.

"You have to be real calm and mellow. Once when I was 100 feet down my air hose got cut off. But it's usually not that dangerous," the younger Meek said, adding that the crew usually works in depths of 30 feet or less.

The harvesting works this way: Two wet suit-clad divers (the temperature in the coastal waters can dip to 48 degrees) jump off the platform equipped with air hoses and mouthpieces for breathing and a hoe and a corrugated plastic tube to suck up the mussels. Usually, one man loosens the mollusks while the other vacuums.

Meek has small compressors on each rig that pump air to the divers while they work. Compressors also generate the pressure that sucks the mussels through the tubes and onto the oil platform deck, where they are disgorged into a tumbling wire mesh container that looks like an oversized raffle box.

The box turns constantly, allowing barnacles, seaweed and excess salt water to cascade through the mesh and back into the ocean, but retaining the larger mussels.

Within hours, the mussels will be steaming on the stoves of local restaurants. Ecomar delivers twice a week to 45 restaurants in Santa Barbara and Ventura counties and sells wholesale to distributors up and down the West Coast and inland as far as Chicago. They fetch $1 a pound wholesale.

"They're as good as any you can buy," said Michael Hutchings, proprietor and chef of the elegant Michael's Waterside restaurant in Montecito. He is a regular customer.

Meek spent two years as a scientist for the Smithsonian Institution before founding his marine consulting business. In 1973, an oil company hired him to study the problem of marine growth on its structures. Meek noticed how well the mussels grew, swept by currents rich in plankton and undisturbed by coastal waves. And he knew that mussels served in Santa Barbara restaurants were either imported from the East Coast or flown in from New Zealand.

So Meek decided to muscle in on the industry. After sinking $250,000 into equipment, he began pitching his idea to the oil companies.

But bureaucratic problems abounded and it wasn't until seven years later that Meek signed his first contract to scrape mussels off a Phillips Petroleum rig.

The Meeks, who still do marine consulting, say that in good years, 80 percent of their business comes from mariculture. But this has been a tough season. Last winter's storms discouraged mussels from spawning, which made for a light harvest. And storms also washed away 300,000 pounds of seafood that the Meeks had been cultivating below the platforms.

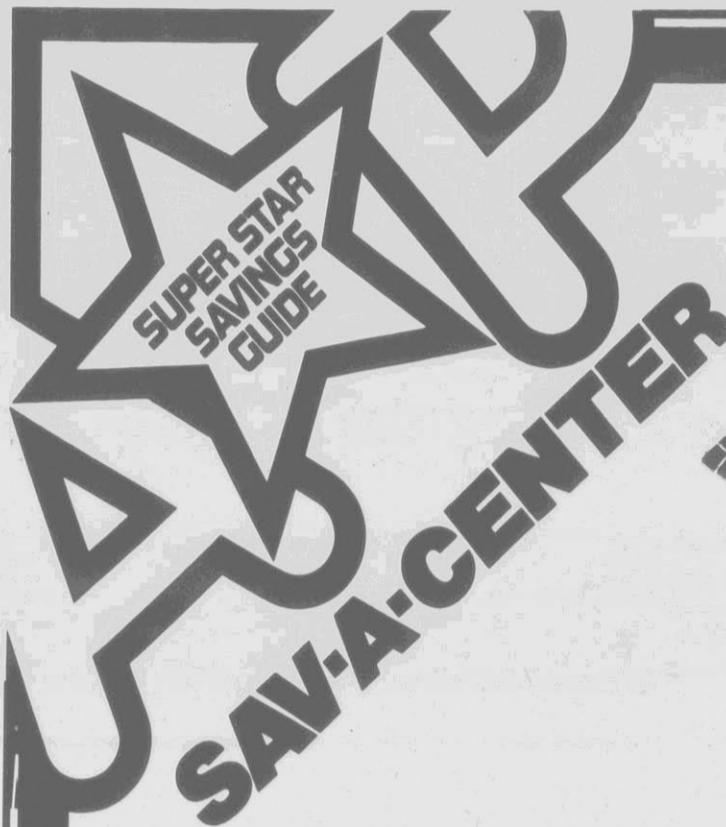

But nature's vagaries aside, the years of harvesting have only strengthened the unlikely marriage between this entrepreneurial marine biologist and the oft-maligned multinational oil companies.

Ecomar's presence "benefits both sides," said John Deutsch, Chevron's production foreman on Platform Hope. "We get our rigs cleaned and they make a profit."

Opening lead: ?
 In bridge, nothing is sacrosanct. An opening lead which would be considered insane in some circumstances could be completely safe in others. Here's a case.

North-South used a simple Stayman sequence to reach an excellent, though second-best, contract of four spades—we would prefer three no trump. Looking at his own hand, West was sure he would find little of use in his partner's hand. He was tempted to lead a heart, but he was afraid that that might cost a trick. At the same time, he wanted to retain the lead in case a heart shift was necessary.

He found a simple, yet logical solution—he led the ace of trumps! Now anyone who, as a regular diet, leads the ace from an ace-queen combination will be looked on askance by the rest of the bridge world, but think about it here.

If South has the king of spades, the lead won't cost a thing—West will still come to two spade tricks. And should the king happen to be in the North hand, declarer is unlikely to play West for the queen, so her majesty is still a heavy favorite to win a trick.

West considered shifting to a low heart at trick two, in case his partner held a doubleton queen. But he decided that it was doubtful whether South would have opened one no trump with only a jack in the major suits. His best chance, therefore, was to hope that East held a singleton heart, so he cashed the ace of hearts and continued the suit. East ruffed and exited with a diamond. Declarer won and elected to try to drop the queen of trumps—down one.

My Bus Ride

By Jennifer Lagasca

As I got on the bus the first day of school, the strangest thing happened to me. There were two unusual green creatures on the bus! I yelled so loud the bus shook. I began to tremble. These creatures had two pink antennas. I think they were friendly. I shook their hands and they greeted me. Then suddenly, they disappeared.

When I Ran Away

By Mark Ellwanger

It was the middle of July. I was finishing my last game of baseball. The score was tied. I was just about to swing the bat when suddenly I heard a loud ring. Then I felt something shaking me and saying, "Get up. Rise and shine."

I got up, rushed to eat my breakfast and ran to school. Then I noticed that it was Friday the 13th. The whole school day was bad luck. I erased so much that I made holes in my paper. When I got home, I broke my brother's best knife and cut myself at the same time. Also, I threw a ball and broke my friend's window. His mom was very angry. At dinner I spilled my milk everywhere. After I packed a week's supply of things, I went and sat on my dad's lounge chair. Then I walked out the door. I was screaming at every little thing. I was screaming at every sound. Right in the middle of a scream, I woke up. My mom was saying very nicely, "It's all right. Mom's got you."

Greenville

By Trent Jarrett Deyton

Once upon a time there was a man. This man built the city of Greenville. People built buildings and houses, lakes and roads. God sent birds and trees and fish. God sent people, too. The people liked Greenville. It had churches and schools, and people went to both. They had fun at school because they learned many things. If someone misbehaved the teacher would make them sit down. The children went out to play on the swings.

Federal Facts

Other Federal Courts

The Constitution mentions only the Supreme Court. In 1789, Congress passed the Judiciary Act which established the federal court system.

Federal courts deal with civil and criminal cases which involve the Constitution or federal laws. In addition, they handle cases when the government is one of the parties or sides of the case. The federal courts try cases dealing with people from different states. They handle cases between the U.S. and other countries and their people. Federal courts settle maritime (involving the sea) cases and they try bankruptcy cases, copyright cases and patent law cases.

Today there are about 95 federal District Courts which hear cases first. Appeals Courts number 12 and they hear appeals from the lower courts. The Appeals Courts also review decisions. It is the Supreme Court which has the final decision on all cases.

There are several special federal courts. The U.S. Claims Court handles all claims against the government. Problems with foreign duties (taxes) on imported goods are dealt with by the Court of International Trade. Citizens who have problems with taxes may appeal to the Tax Court. Military members who are accused of crimes have their cases heard before a Courts-martial. It is the Court of Military Appeals which reviews the judgments of the Courts-martial.

Each state has its own court system to deal with the problems of the people in that state. Both the federal and state courts have to follow the Constitution and the Supreme Court of the United States. The Constitution is the final law in both court systems.

Generous servings of German-Style Turkey Thighs provide a soul-satisfying meal for hearty appetites

Try Turkey Thigh Meat For Hearty, Healthy Dinners

There's something about crisp fall weather which sharpens our appetites. After a brisk autumn walk, a hot, hearty stew or a robust goulash is just the type of appealing food we hunger for.

Add some whole-grain bread, a salad, and you've got a perfect meal: delicious, substantial and yet it can be prepared ahead of time, reheated and quickly put on the table.

When turkey thigh meat is used as the basis for these dishes, your meals will be healthy ones, says the National Turkey Federation. You can reduce the amount of calories, fat and cholesterol consumed by using dark turkey meat instead of red meat in these dishes. Team up turkey thighs with colorful fall vegetables — also very good for you — and you can produce tasty, healthy and flavorful dishes just right for the season.

You'll also enjoy the versatility of turkey thigh meat. Because it has a naturally mild flavor, it blends easily with a wide variety of ingredients so you can produce many different dishes, all with distinctive flavor. In these recipes for German-Style

(See TURKEY, D-6)

Cutting Up A Turkey Leg

Cut drumstick from thigh:

1. Find the natural fat line between the drumstick and thigh, then pull skin tightly over top of leg, feeling for a small indentation to find the joint.

2. Lay thigh skin side down and, following above guides, cut through joint, bending drumstick back gently while cutting.

Boning the thigh:

The turkey thigh is easy to debone. Turkey thigh meat can be used in any recipe or preparation calling for beef chuck or round, or the boned thigh may be used to create a roulade.

1. Place the thigh skin side down. Cut down to the bone, then along the full length of the bone.

2. To free the ends, slip the knife under the bone halfway down its length.

3. Cut away from hand, freeing one end of the bone from the flesh.

4. Turn the thigh around, lift the free end of the bone with one hand, and cut the other end free.

5. Reserve the bone for stock.

Cutting up a turkey leg is not a difficult task.

Dumplings: Not Just For Chicken

Most of us think of chicken when we think of dumplings. Give them a chance, and dumplings prove to be a versatile dish in a variety of ways in different areas of the country.

Dumplings originated as a clever and delicious way to stretch a meal. Adding dumplings to whatever food was available became a popular practice. Different regions are famous for adding dumplings to food common in that region.

Apples and peaches wrapped in sweetened pastry dough make delicious dessert dumplings and are popular in the South. Caramel dumplings are made by caramelizing sugar and cooking dumplings in the hot syrup.

In certain parts of the South, corn meal dumplings are a favorite. They are cooked in meat broth, soups, "pot liquor" (the liquid leftover from cooking turnip greens) and stew. On the Carolina coast, corn meal dumplings are cooked in clam chowder and fish stews. Corn meal dumplings are made in many shapes, sizes and combinations of corn meal and flour.

Even cooks from the North have their own traditional dumpling — potato dumplings. If you like to eat, there must be a dumpling for you.

However, the all-American meal, Chicken and Dumplings, still ranks number one. No two dumplings are alike, but there are two standard variations:

- Drop Dumplings, made from slightly soft biscuit dough that is spooned into the broth and allowed to cook up light and tender.

- Rolled Dumplings, made from dough that has been rolled flat, cut into thin strips and dropped into the broth to cook.

Try both and select your favorite. Serve chicken and dumplings when you have several mouths to feed. It's an easy, economical home-cooked meal.

STEWED CHICKEN

1 stewing hen (about 4 1/2 pounds), cut up

- 1 large onion, halved
- 1 large carrot, halved
- 1 stalk celery with leaves, halved
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Salt and pepper

Place hen, onion, carrot and celery in large pan; cover with water. Simmer slowly until tender, 2 1/2 to 3 hours. Remove chicken from broth; cool. Bone chicken and cut into bite-size pieces. Strain cooled broth; bring to a boil and add chicken, butter, salt and pepper to taste. Cook dumplings in boiling broth.

ROLLED DUMPLINGS

- 2 cups self-rising flour
  - 1/3 cup shortening
  - 1/2 cup chicken broth
- Cut shortening into flour and stir in broth; blend only until moistened. Roll out dough to 1/8-inch thickness on floured board or pastry cloth. Cut into strips or small squares. Drop a few at the time into boiling broth. Reduce heat, cover and simmer about 15 minutes. Stir once or twice during cooking.

DROPPED DUMPLINGS

- 2 packages (5 1/2 ounces each) dumpling mix
  - 2/3 cup plus 2 tablespoons milk
- Combine mix and milk and blend well. Drop dough from teaspoon into boiling broth. Reduce heat, cover and simmer about 15 minutes. Stir once or twice during cooking.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. About two or three months ago, I switched to Pream because of its soy oil instead of the dreaded coconut oil. I was then pleased to see your comment on the product in your column. I now notice that my second purchase of Pream for the same store is not the same. It may contain coconut oil. A trip to that store recently revealed only the soy oil product. Since there is no date, I can't tell which is the newer product. I only conclude that the wary consumer must continue to read all labels carefully and not trust ingredients even with the same brand. I'm tempted to make a play on wary and weary. Dr. B.K., Greenville.

A. Thanks for writing. Unfortunately you experienced the problem of old stock, but still usable. When a food company makes an improvement in the product, there may be old stock in the distribution centers or grocery store storage areas that is safe and saleable. For example, in spite of the huge demand, we recently found oat bran in a small store near Raleigh that was in the old white carton. So, you do have to read the label.

Consumers in the early 1970s first worked for open dating on products so they could tell when a food was made and for how long it was good. Many food companies responded and clearly dated their foods so consumers could make wise choices. Unfortunately other companies did not. My Pream jar has a code stamped on the lid, but I don't know how to read it.

In this time of great changes in food products, you will probably have to keep reading labels. Last year there were about 7,000 new food products made in the United States. When Pream changed to soy bean, they did not change the label very much. They just put a banner on it which says "Now made with 100 percent soybean oil." Bisquick too just made the first change in their recipe in about 10 years. The new box says "No Cholesterol," made with all vegetable shortening." Oh yes, there are plenty of boxes of the old formula of Bisquick still around. Remember though that no cholesterol does not mean no fat.

Q. Why are tropical oils used in so many foods? Dr. J.B., Greenville.

A. Yes, coconut and palm oil are widely used in foods. You find it in food products where the ingredient label says, "one of the following oils is used," and then lists a variety of oils. If coconut and palm oil is there, you know that any oil would work but coconut and palm oil were used because it was the cheapest oil the marketplace that could do the job at that time.

There are times that coconut and palm oil are the best functional ingredient for a food product. That is, it may have a flavor that works better with other ingredients or it may have a more appropriate temperature smoke point which allows it to be used in processing. Or, it may be a slightly different "mouth feel" that adds a characteristic texture to a product. So, in addition to being inexpensive, it may do a special job and is more difficult to substitute.

The U.S. Soybean Association is mounting a fat-fighting campaign in an attempt to get coconut and palm oil out of foods when the only reason for use is price. The food industry interested in the healthy food market, too, is trying our substitutes for the tropical oils.

I noticed in one of my trade journals that there are several new developments in the oil business, a couple of them marketed by Bunge. There are soybean or other unsaturated oils that can be modified for the functional reasons that coconut or palm oil have been used in foods. They are slightly more expensive, but the food ingredient manufacturers are trying to convince the food processor that the consumers want less saturated fat in their food.

Microwave A Main Dish For Dinner

The dinner dilemma occurs every evening. The family cook has to be creative and devise something for dinner that's not only delicious, but won't take hours to prepare.

Put the microwave oven to work. It's cool and quick, and makes the preparation of Chili ConCornbread a breeze. Chili ConCornbread can definitely be classified as a convenient, easy main dish casserole.

Prepared from canned chili or your own homemade version, the topping for this casserole is a batter made from a cornbread mix. Cheddar cheese is added for color and flavor. It's a sure family pleaser.

CHILI CON CORNBREAD

- 2 cans (15 ounces each) chili, or 4 cups homemade chili
- 1 package (6-1/2 ounces) Mexican cornbread mix, prepared according to package directions
- 1 cup (4 ounces) Spread chili in an 8-inch square baking dish or other shallow 1-1/2 to 2-quart baking dish on inverted saucer. Microwave at high three to five minutes or until hot, stirring after half the time. Combine prepared cornbread batter and cheese; pour evenly over hot chili. Tent corners of dish with foil. Place dish on inverted saucer. Microwave at medium high five to seven minutes or until cornbread topping is even. Remove foil and microwave at high two to three minutes or until topping springs back when lightly touched. Center should be almost dry. Let dish stand directly on countertop 10 minutes for center of topping to complete cooking. Makes four to six servings.

NOTE: The triangles of aluminum foil prevent the corners from overcooking before the center gets done. It is safe for the microwave.

•Mexican cornbread mix adds a spicy flavor to this hearty casserole, but any cornbread mix may be used.

German Sweet Chocolate Cake combines the rich taste of German chocolate and coconut.

Cake Is The Perfect Topper

As the cooler temperatures accompany fall, snuggle up with a glass of warm milk and a piece of German Sweet Chocolate Cake.

Made with German chocolate and a coconut pecan icing, the dessert also is suitable to top off any family dinner or social gathering.

Try the accompanying recipe.

GERMAN SWEET CHOCOLATE CAKE

- One package (4 ounces) Baker's German Sweet Chocolate
  - 1/2 cup boiling water
  - One cup butter or margarine
  - Two cups sugar
  - Four egg yolks
  - One teaspoon vanilla
  - 2 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
  - One teaspoon baking soda
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - One cup buttermilk
  - Four egg whites, stiffly beaten
  - Coconut Pecan Icing:
  - 1 1/2 cups evaporated milk
  - 1 1/2 cups sugar
  - 5 slightly beaten egg yolks
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
  - 2/3 cup butter or margarine
- Melt chocolate in boiling water. Cool. Cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add yolks, one at a time, beating well after each. Blend in vanilla and chocolate. Sift flour with soda and salt. Add alternately with buttermilk to chocolate mixture, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in beaten egg whites. Pour into three 9-inch layer pans which are greased and floured. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Cool. Frost tops only of layers.

Preparing the icing: Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened (about 12 minutes). Add two cups grated coconut and 1 1/2 cups chopped pecans. Cool and use mixture to frost only tops of each layer.

The Classic Combo

The traditional fish fry, whether held on the church grounds, in the family backyard or at a campsite on the creek is a Southern institution. This old-time event holds an immense popularity in the modern South.

For the sake of those given the duty of preparing this feast, the menu is as predictable as that of Sunday's dinner at Grandma's. There's corn meal-coated deep-fried catfish served with fresh coleslaw and sliced garden tomatoes, white beans cooked for hours with ham hock and slices of Vidalia onions.

Add to that thick-cut French fries and crunchy hush puppies, both fried in the same pot as the fish. And don't forget the iced tea and lemon.

Next to the catfish, hush puppies are probably the best part of the meal. Crispy, crunchy and loaded with onion flavor, hush puppies are to catfish what a baked potato is to a grilled steak.

HUSH PUPPIES

- 2 cups self-rising corn meal mix
  - 3 tbsps. self-rising flour
  - 1 tbsps. finely chopped onion
  - 1 cup milk or water
  - 1 egg, beaten
- Combine corn meal, flour and

Britain's Pub Lunches: Add Ale And Enjoy

By Gilbert A. Lewthwaite
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — Pub grub, the very description is as basic as the food it describes.

For centuries before Colonel Sanders introduced the world to Kentucky Fried Chicken and before McDonald's sold its first hamburger, British landlords were serving their own traditional brand of fast food.

Millions of British workers, past and present, have regarded the lunch hour as a chance to pop into the local pub to "grab a bite" and "down a pint."

The bite they grab may be hot or cold, but it will certainly be ready, waiting and cheap.

Traditionally, landlords have offered such hot dishes as "bangers and mash" (sausages with creamed potatoes), shepherd's pie (a sloppy-joe mixture of ground meat, onions, herbs, topped with creamed potatoes browned under the grill) and steak and kidney pudding.

The cold snacks normally include a "ploughman's lunch" (a slab of English cheese with a hunk of bread, and pickled onions), a "Scotch egg" (a hard-boiled egg inside a ball of sausage meat), or salad and pie — pork, game or ham and egg.

All this is traditional English fare that can still be found in most pubs, inns and hotels. (A pub, or public house, normally offers no overnight accommodation, whereas an inn has bedrooms, and a hotel has more sophisticated amenities for an overnight stay).

Today's pub grub is likely to include more exotic ingredients. This is hardly surprising in a country that now has as almost as many Chinese take-aways and Indian curry shops as it has ye olde worlde pubs, and will be a full-fledged member of a unified European market in 1992.

The bar menu these days might also offer spring rolls, chicken curry or lasagne.

Your "ploughman's lunch" is now as likely to come with French Camembert or Dutch Gouda as with English Cheddar, Cheshire or Stilton. The bread with it will probably be baguette rather than a slice of Hovis (a traditional English brand).

You might even be offered pate instead of cheese, though whether any honest ploughman would accept it is as open a question as whether real men eat quiche.

Quiche also is now a regular feature of bar food, which, depending on the pub, can offer a truly impressive selection to choose from.

It has to be said that the English regard lunchtime as a chance to stoke up rather than to savor. You may be more impressed by the quantity rather than the quality, but almost certainly you will get value for money.

It is hard to spend more than $5 or $6 on a pub lunch and, if it is a ploughman's, it will probably cost you less than $4.

What you see is what you get. The food traditionally was laid out on the bar beside the beer pumps. These days it is more likely to be in its own glass showcase and, except in small country pubs, you normally order it separately from your drinks.

The British over the centuries have found this a convenient and economical way to fuel themselves at mid-day, and there can be few more congenial ways to pass the lunch-hour than to find a pleasant pub and join in the ritual.

In summer, many pubs — even those in towns — have gardens for a picnic-style lunch. The rarity of a sunny day in these parts, of course, makes al fresco dining all the more a treat.

In winter, most pubs have open fires and the atmosphere is cozy and friendly.

For about the price of a hamburger, fries and a Coke you can do yourself proud in a bar — and soak up some genuine English atmosphere with a glass of beer in one hand and a plate of pub grub in the other.

Pancakes Always A Big Hit

The benefits of a hearty breakfast are well-known: this is the meal that provides the energy and nutrition to get your day off to a good start. And for many people, a hearty breakfast means a steaming stack of pancakes. They provide the complex carbohydrates that are far more healthful than a high-fat bacon and eggs breakfast.

But if you usually make just regular pancakes, using refined flour or a packaged mix, and top them with butter and maple syrup, then you're missing much of the nutritional value and versatility this dish has to offer. The American Institute for Cancer Research recommends increasing fiber in your diet through the use of whole grain products, and pancakes can be a good starting place. Here are some healthful pancake ideas to try:

- For additional fiber and nutrients, substitute whole grain wheat or buckwheat for your usual flour. Or, stir in a tablespoon of toasted wheat germ into your regular batter.

- Include fruit in your pancakes for delicious flavors and added vitamins. Try blueberries, cranberries or mashed bananas.

- For a change of pace, try using fruit juice—apple, orange, pineapple or cranberry—in place of some of the milk in your recipe.

- Experiment with added vegetables—pumpkin puree and grated carrots provide lots of beta-carotene, a form of vitamin A that is believed to lower cancer risk.

- Top your pancakes with your favorite fresh fruit—cubed, mashed or sliced. Or, try lowfat yogurt or applesauce for tasty toppings that add extra flavor without the extra fat.

You don't have to limit pancakes to the breakfast table. They're great for any meal, as the following recipe shows. Whether for breakfast, lunch or supper, these pancakes are a nutritious, lowfat delight.

COUNTRY LUNCHEON PANCAKES

- 1 1/4 cup whole wheat flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 2/3 cup skim milk
- 1/3 cup lowfat yogurt
- 2/3 cup lowfat cottage cheese
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

In a large bowl, sift all the dry ingredients. Stir in any bran remaining in the sifter. Add the remaining ingredients and stir until the flour is moistened. Cook the same as for regular pancakes, using a non-stick griddle or frying pan if possible, to avoid having to use oil.

These pancakes will take a bit longer to cook than regular pancakes. Wrap the cooked pancakes in foil to keep them warm until all are cooked. Serve topped with applesauce or other fruit, jam, syrup or powdered sugar.

This recipe yields about 12 4-inch pancakes, each with 82 calories and 1 gram of fat.

To learn more about the importance of fiber to good health, get a free copy of the booklet, "Dietary Fiber To Lower Cancer Risk," by sending a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. C37, Washington, D.C. 20069.

onion. Gradually beat in milk or water and egg. Drop from a spoon into hot fat there fish was fried. Fry until golden brown; drain on absorbent paper.

Note: For additional flavor, add one more tablespoon finely chopped onion and one teaspoon onion powder. Makes about 20 hushpuppies.

To make preparing hush puppies easy, here are a few tips.

- Allow prepared batter to sit about five minutes before spooning into hot oil. This helps to assure round hushpuppies.

- For perfect frying, keep the temperature of the oil around 375 degrees fahrenheit. This makes it simple to get light hush puppies that are done on the inside before they get too brown on the outside.

- The extra chopped onion and onion powder suggested in the recipe really do add a lot of extra onion flavor.

Grandma's Pickles

Would you like to make pickles just like grandma used to make? Why not try Iced Water Pickles, suggests Dr. Carolyn Lackey, extension foods and nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University. The recipe is quick and simple. Allow the pickles to sit on the shelf for 3 to 4 weeks before tasting to allow the flavor to develop. The following recipe yields 6 quarts.

ICED WATER PICKLES

Cut 6 pounds of medium size cucumbers each into 4 to 8 pieces, according to the size of the cucumber. Soak in ice water 3 hours, then drain and pack into sterilized jars. Add 6 pickling onions, 1 piece celery and 1 teaspoon mustard seed to each jar.

In a large pan, bring 3 quarts white vinegar, 1 cup salt and 3 cups sugar to a boil. Pour solution over cucumbers to within 1/2 inch of the top of the jar. Adjust lids and process in a boiling water bath for 5 minutes.

Home Canning

If a jar of home-canned food doesn't seal properly, must the food be thrown out? If the jar is discovered immediately, the unsealed jar should be refrigerated and used as soon as possible. Or it may be repacked and processed for the full time using a new lid, say NCSU extension specialists.

Villas Says Show Respect For Salade Nicoise

By Town & Country
A HEARST MAGAZINE

The classic Provencal "salade nicoise" is an inspired dish that has fallen into disrepute because it has been used as a dumping ground for a hodgepodge of ingredients.

"It's true salade nicoise is one of the simplest, most appetizing culinary creations ever to evolve," James Villas wrote in an article in a recent issue of Town & Country, "but it's also true that unless the salad is treated with the utmost respect, it can prove to be an utter disaster."

Villas said that approaching salade nicoise with high regard for ingredients, color and design will help guarantee a spectacular dish.

Villas said he had eaten versions of salade nicoise with every green from rocket to purslane, with fresh tuna substituted for canned, blanched chick peas or fava beans for green beans, diced turnips or artichoke hearts for potatoes, and pimiento or celery knob instead of bell pepper. He gave this recipe in Town & Country for the classic salade nicoise:

CLASSIC SALADE NICOISE
1/4 cup wine vinegar
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
2 garlic cloves, finely minced
3/4 cup extra virgin French or Italian olive oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons minced fresh herbs (tarragon, parsley, basil, chervil)
4 to 6 medium new potatoes
3/4 pound young, thin green beans, trimmed

1 head Boston lettuce
Two 6 1/2-ounce cans albacore tuna in oil, drained
4 ripe tomatoes, quartered
3 hard-boiled eggs, quartered
6 to 8 scallions, rinsed and trimmed
1/2 cup small cured black olives
6 to 10 canned anchovy fillets, drained

12 fresh basil leaves
In a bowl, whisk vinegar, mustard and garlic until well blended. Add olive oil, salt and pepper to taste. Add minced herbs and whisk until dressing has emulsified.
Peel potatoes, cut into dice and boil in salted water about 5 minutes or until just tender. Drain potatoes, transfer to a bowl and toss with about 1/4 cup dressing.

Drop beans into boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain, transfer to a bowl and toss with about 2 tablespoons of dressing.
Separate, rinse and dry lettuce leaves, place in a bowl and toss lightly with 2 tablespoons of dressing.
Line the edges of a large oval platter with lettuce leaves and arrange two mounds of tuna in the center.

Arrange mounds of potatoes and beans around the tuna, then begin to arrange tomatoes, eggs, scallions and olives in an attractive, colorful pattern. Lay the anchovies over the top, sprinkle on the basil leaves and pour the remaining dressing all over the ingredients.

Serves six.

Turkey

Turkey Thighs, Hungarian Turkey Goulash and Mexican Turkey Stew, for example, you can use turkey thigh meat to create three entirely different international dishes.

And, as you can see from our drawing, it's quite easy to bone a turkey thigh. Take a few minutes to familiarize yourself with these simple techniques, and you'll be able to debone turkey thighs in matter of minutes.

An added bonus of boning the turkey thighs yourself is using the bones to produce rich turkey stock. Later, you can use the stock to create another hearty and economical, chill-chasing dish: turkey soup. Plan to make one of these international dishes soon so you can have it on hand, in your refrigerator, after you've been on a long walk and have worked up an appetite. They are also ideal make-ahead dishes for serving during busy work weeks when flavorful food, with a minimum of preparation, is the order of the day.

GERMAN-STYLE TURKEY THIGHS

1 cup white wine
1/2 cup red wine vinegar
1/2 cup onion, thinly sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 Bay leaf
1 1/2 teaspoons mixed whole pickling spice
1/2 teaspoon whole cloves
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon peppercorns
1/4 teaspoon thyme
2 pounds Turkey Thighs, skinned, meat pierced
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons raisins
1 tablespoon brown sugar
6 Gingersnaps, crushed
Water, if desired

In a large self-closing plastic bag, combine wine, vinegar, onion, garlic, bay leaf, pickling spice, cloves, ginger, peppercorns, thyme and turkey. Seal bag and refrigerate 2 to 3 days; turning bag occasionally.

Remove turkey and strain marinade to measure 3 cups.

In 5-quart saucepan over medium heat, place turkey and 1 1/2 cups of marinade. Cover and refrigerate remaining marinade. Bring mixture to a boil; reduce heat, cover and simmer 30 to 40 minutes, turn turkey and continue cooking 30 to 35 minutes or until meat thermometer inserted in thickest part of thigh registers 180-185 degrees F. Remove turkey and keep warm.

In small bowl, combine remaining 1 1/2 cups marinade with cornstarch, raisins and brown sugar. Stir mixture into simmering pan juices, increase heat to medium; cook and stir until mixture is slightly thickened. Stir in gingersnaps; cook until mixture is smooth. (Add a little water if sauce is too thick.)

Dinner

•Because microwave ovens do not brown, sprinkle a little cheese on top of batter before cooking to add a little more color.

•Canned tamales will not only add to the flavor, but will increase the number of servings. Unwrap tabales and place in bottom of two-quart dish. Spread with chili and top with cornbread batter.

•Garnish Chili Con Cornbread with avocado slices, sour cream, grated Cheddar cheese and black olive slices for a Mexican flair.

•Serve Chili Con Cornbread with a green salad for a complete meal.

GAME RULES AND ODDS

1 NO PURCHASE NECESSARY TO PARTICIPATE. Receive a free game ticket and game board on request at the checkout counter or store of 1 to 1 mini ticket per adult (18 years or older) per store visit per day. The game board received in the mail may be used to play the game.

2 TO PLAY. Open the game ticket carefully as instructed. Inside will be revealed special coupon offers or messages along with four markers. Place the markers in the appropriate spaces on the game board. For example, use the marker shows a brand of product in the $1,000 row. Insert that marker in the correct space in that row. Do not allow markers to the game board with glue or tape in a permanent manner.

3 TO WIN. Completely fill a row with the specific product markers and win $5,000, $1,000, $50, $10 or $5. There is a product marker for each space on the game board. If one of the markers is an Instant Product, if you win $5, simply present the marker to any authorized store personnel. Upon verification, you will be awarded your prize instantly. Only one prize per game board. However, there is no limit to the number of times a customer may be a prize winner during the course of this promotion.

4 TO CLAIM A PRIZE. Remove the markers in the winning row and transfer to a new game board. Customer may continue playing with the remaining board and markers. Customer must submit and sign the game board and initial the front of each marker in the winning row in the presence of authorized store personnel who will then arrange for verification. Winners of instant product/prize prizes, $5, $10, and $50 cash will be verified and paid at the store. Potential winners of $5,000, $1,000 and $100 cash games must be verified by the game sponsor. Upon verification of game materials, the customer will be awarded the prize. Winners will be notified within fourteen (14) days. The game sponsor's validation is final. All potential winners will be asked to sign a release allowing the sponsor or any of the affiliated companies to publish the name and/or picture of the winner in their advertising media without further compensation. All game materials submitted for verification become the property of the game sponsor and will not be returned. All tax liability on prizes, including the sweepstakes, is the sole responsibility of the prize winner.

5 SWEEPSTAKES. If one of the game ticket markers is imprinted with a Norwegian Cruise Line logo, use it to enter the sweepstakes. After using the front, tape one (1) marker to a 3" x 5" sheet of paper. Print your name, address, telephone number and sign your full legal signature. Enclose the entry in an envelope and mail to:

Kroger Sweepstakes

No cash substitutions will be made. Winner will receive a check for less including air fare plus $500 spending money. This is provided on an availability basis and must be completed by April 30, 1989. Odds for sweepstakes are dependent upon number of entries received. Winners names may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Kroger Sweepstakes, Box 1466, Suite 200, 1355 Ferrell Mall Road, Marietta, GA 30067. Entries not complying with published rules will be disqualified.

6 GAME MATERIALS. All materials will be rejected and judged VOID if not obtained from and verified by authorized personnel or if any part of any game piece is illegible, altered, mutilated, defaced, tampered with, forged, contains printing or other errors or is irregular in any way. Any attempt to defraud or forge game materials in any way will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. Game materials VOID where issued or prohibited by law. All judges' decisions are final.

7 COUPONS. The game tickets may contain manufacturers' cents-off coupons. A purchase will be required to redeem the coupons. IMPORTANT NOTICE: The manufacturers' coupons may be redeemed at any retail store wherever the product is available. There is no limit to the number of coupons that may be redeemed as long as the requirements as stated on the coupon, are met.

8 ENDING OF GAME. The game ends when all game tickets are distributed. All prizes must be claimed by January 11, 1989 or prizes are forfeited except sweepstakes prizes. Unclaimed prizes will not be awarded. Scheduled termination date: December 31, 1988.

9 Only game materials with Series KCC1 valid for this game.

10 Employees of participating stores, their U.S. listed dependents, the sponsor, its subsidiaries, game supplier and its advertising agency are not eligible to win any prize.
