'Tin Goose' Still Gives Chills And Thrills

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Being flown in a 60-year-old "Tin Goose" over the beautiful Pamlico River and its nearby wetlands and looking down on the streets, stores and homes of Washington was, for me, a magnificent experience.

It was thrilling to watch the patterns created by river currents and harvesters in corn and soybean fields, to look down on tiny cypress islands, and to observe the sparkle of water among swampland trees.

My vantage point was a low- and slow-flying aircraft that seemed sturdy and steady and proved able to land on a dime.

The man at the controls had quickly convinced me that he was as dependable as the craft that has seen service since 1928. Al Chaney told me he's been flying planes since 1947 when he was 14 years old. I could see how immaculate he keeps the aircraft that is said to be the world's oldest flying all-metal airplane. And I believe him when he says he conducts a mechanical inspection of the plane daily and has an FAA-approved mechanic inspect it every 100 hours of flying.

And while I admired the beauty of Beaufort County from above, I marveled that I was sitting in the cockpit — yes, I got to ride in the co-pilot's seat — that was once occupied by Charles A. Lindbergh. The man who made the first trans-Atlantic flight was the first pilot of this 1928 Ford-Tri-Motor, now the only one of its kind still flying in the world.

The propeller draft blew my hair sideways and I was occasionally wrote one-word messages to the pilot because it was too noisy to converse any other way. What exhilaration! What fun!

As is his habit, Chaney flew into Warren Field at Washington Tuesday unannounced. He presented himself and the world's oldest passenger airplane to airport owner-manager Phyllis Gallup and told her that, with her approval, he'd offer rides for the public on the "Tin Goose" Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

An Ohio farmer who abandoned his grain fields for the skies three years ago, he's now visited his hometown of Hebron only two weeks since his barnstorming days began. Chaney plans to take his beloved Tin Goose to each of the 48 continental United States within the next several years and have as many people as possible ride with him. He charges $20 per adult and $10 per child for a blue plush-covered seat — each of the 14 seats is a window seat — and $30 for a co-pilot's chair.

Bush Has Edge In Final Debate

GOP Says Battle Nearly Over

By Terence Hunt
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis plunged into the closing days of the presidential race battling for votes in California after a high-stakes debate that failed to change the chemistry of a campaign that's been going Bush's way.

Indeed, the debate appeared to have helped Bush. An instant ABC News poll called the vice president the winner, by 49 to 33 percent and a Los Angeles Times poll gave him the margin, 47 to 26, with the rest unsure. An Associated Press panel of debate judges also rated Bush the winner, reversing the judgment from the first debate Sept. 25 when Dukakis was perceived the victor.

"I'm happy with the way it came out," a grinning Bush said Thursday night en route to a post-debate rally. Democrats were guarded in their assessments and acknowledged that Dukakis did not land a knockout blow.

However, Dukakis claimed victory and said the race was "very, very close and it's going to get even closer after tonight." Dukakis had gone into the debate on the UCLA campus hoping to shorten Bush's lead in the polls, while the vice president was looking to move further ahead.

Once and for all, Bush declared there would not be a third debate, saying, "People have had it up to here with debates."

Dukakis told a post-debate rally, "I think we ought to have that third debate, don't you? We've gotten the Republicans out from behind the flag factory and the balloons and discussing the issues. That's why debates are so important."

Today, Bush supporters were all but declaring the battle won. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said on NBC's "Today" program, "If I were working for Michael Dukakis I'd be sending out resumes this morning."

Not yet, the Democrats were saying. One Dukakis adviser, Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said on "CBS This Morning" that Bush had given undecided voters no new reason to move in his direction, and "I think you're going to see a lot of the undecided people starting to move toward Michael Dukakis. This race is far from over."

With only 25 days before the election, Bush and Dukakis turned to the battle in California, where the na-

Leaf Officials Face Inspection Charges

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville warehouseman and a Robersonville tobacco buying supervisor have been named in a 56-count criminal information filed with the U.S. District Court in Raleigh this week charging they improperly used tobacco inspection certificates.

Kieran Shanahan, assistant U.S. attorney for the Eastern District, said the case against Robert A. Halstead, 62, of Route 2, Ayden, and James A. Johnson, 50, of Route 2, Robersonville, resulted from a Department of Agriculture criminal investigation conducted in the fall of 1987.

Halstead is a tobacco producer and part owner of the Gold Leaf Warehouse in Greenville, while Johnson is a supervisor of tobacco buyers for the Jas. I. Miller Tobacco Co. in Wilson, Shanahan said.

According to the criminal information, Halstead sold Johnson 11,634 pounds of flue-cured tobacco at the Gold Leaf tobacco warehouse between Sept. 15, 1986, and Sept. 18, 1986. Johnson, who was representing the Jas. I. Miller Tobacco Co. in the transactions, purchased the tobacco directly from Halstead and not during a scheduled auction sale.

The criminal information charges that Halstead falsely prepared 55 tobacco inspection certificates in order to give the appearance that the tobacco purchased by Johnson was graded by an authorized USDA tobacco grader and was sold during an auction sale.

Johnson has been charged with conspiring with and assisting Halstead to falsely prepare the inspection certificates.

Tobacco inspection certificates, under the tobacco price support system, are completed and initialed by authorized USDA tobacco graders.

The criminal information also contains charges against the Jas. I. Miller Tobacco Co. and the Gold Leaf warehouse partnership for their alleged roles in causing tobacco inspection certificates to be falsely prepared.

If convicted Halstead and Johnson could receive a maximum penalty of up to 56 years in jail and/or $7 million in fines, while each tobacco company faces criminal fines of up to $6.87 million.

The defendants have been summoned to make an initial appearance in the case before U.S. Magistrate A.B. Denson in Raleigh on Oct. 24.

Mexican Lawyer Holds U.S. Consul, Secretary Hostage

VERACRUZ, Mexico (AP) — A lawyer who was holding a U.S. consul and his secretary hostage at gunpoint surrendered today after a 14-hour siege apparently caused by a dispute over a family inheritance, officials said.

The gunman seized U.S. Consul Edwin Culp and his secretary about 12:45 p.m. Thursday at their office in downtown Veracruz. U.S. Embassy and Mexican officials said.

The gunman, who had demanded that some of his relatives be arrested, "agreed to talk about his problems with Mexican government officials," said U.S. embassy spokesman Bob Hugins.

Culp and his secretary, Teresa Jesus Horts, were freed unharmed at about 3:05 a.m. (5:05 a.m. EDT), Hugins said.

Officials identified the gunman as Francisco Delfin Perez, a lawyer from Corroloba, near Veracruz. He was arrested and being taken to a detention center in the state capital of Japapa, where he faced kidnapping charges, a police spokesman said.

Alfredo Algarin Vega, assistant secretary of the Veracruz state Interior Ministry, said the gunman had demanded that his two brothers, a sister-in-law and a notary be jailed for allegedly trying to cheat his mother out of a $347,000 inheritance from her late husband.

It was unknown why the gunman what connection if any the U.S. Consulate office had with the inheritance dispute.

Culp, 46, and Delfin Perez, who is about 48, were apparently acquainted, Algarin said, but he did not know any specifics except that the relationship was "cordial."

Authorities negotiated with the gunman throughout the night while about 50 police surrounded the downtown office building where the consulate office is located.

"Our contact was able to convince him to leave," said Algarin.

Culp and Horts were taken to a hotel to be debriefed by U.S. Embassy officials, said embassy spokesman Bob Hugins said. He said the gunman left two pistols behind in the consulate after surrendering.

While Culp is not a foreign service officer, he is accredited to the Mexican government and has diplomatic status, Hugins said. He has operated the consulate in Veracruz, a port city about 140 miles east of Mexico City on the Gulf of Mexico, for at least six years.

Leaf Mart To Close

The Greenville tobacco market will end its 99th year at the close of sales on Oct. 25, Kenneth Allen, sales supervisor of the market, said today.

Allen said the date for the closing sale was set at a meeting this morning.

The supervisor said that so far this year the Greenville market has sold 37.46 million pounds of tobacco for an average price of $162 per hundred pounds.

Allen said 4 million more pounds of tobacco have already been sold in Greenville this year over 1987 and he said he expects another 2 million pounds of leaf will be sold before the season ends.

Sales on the Greenville market last year averaged $159.56 per hundred pounds.

Glen Prater votes for a presidential candidate during mock elections at Pactolus School.

Pactolus Pupils Go To The Polls ... For Bush

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

George Bush will be the next president of the United States if a vote by 130 fourth- and fifth-grade students at Pactolus Elementary School is any indication, but his victory would be by a slim margin.

The students conducted their own election of the candidates Thursday where Bush, the Republican candidate, beat his Democratic opponent, Michael Dukakis, 68 to 62.

However, fifth-graders favored Dukakis over Bush for the presidency 32 to 23, while fourth-graders gave a 15-vote margin to Bush, 45 to 30, said Debra Kornegay, media center specialist.

The fifth-grade tallies will be compiled with other fifth-grade votes nationwide in a poll conducted by Lakewood Elementary School in Lakewood, N.Y.

The poll questionnaire was sent to three schools in each state — the state capital and two randomly selected cities in each state and territory of the United States.

A copy of the results of the poll will be forwarded to the winner.

The Lakewood polls, conducted in 1972, 1976, 1980 and 1984, were very close to the national results.

According to a letter sent to Pactolus by Lakewood teachers, "The results were forwarded to President Nixon and President Carter. The results of the 1980 poll were personally presented to President Reagan in Cleveland, Ohio. The 1984 results were presented to Vice President Bush in Horseheads, N.Y. Our poll in 1984 was about the only one that predicted President Reagan would win by a landslide."

Several of the polls were also used by radio and television stations around the nation as an indicator of possible outcomes of the elections.

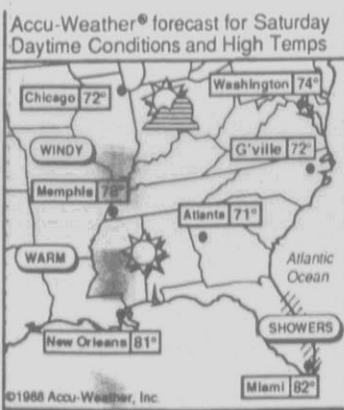

Before the students cast their votes, they participated in several activities to acquaint them with the candidates, Edith Barnhill, a fifth-grade teacher, said.

"We discussed the platforms of each candidate, looked for magazines and write-ups about them and listened to the debates," she said. The students also wrote about the election process and voting.

Students cast their votes on a computer in the media center as part of Computers in Learning Month. The election program tabulated the votes by sex and grade level.

Taft Issues Plan For Waste Problems

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

North Carolina must develop a comprehensive solid waste management program, including recycling, Sen. Tom Taft said at a Thursday afternoon news conference where he released a position statement on solid and hazardous waste issues.

Taft, a Democrat, is seeking reelection to the 9th Senatorial District seat.

The meeting was held at the Pitt County recycling and solid waste container site on the County Home Road near Bells Fork. Taft said, "to focus attention" on solid and hazardous waste issues.

"The issues of solid waste and hazardous waste are growing so important in North Carolina that the failure of serious, comprehensive and meaningful attention by the Legislature could result in the loss of the economic momentum and the quality of life now enjoyed across the state," Taft said.

The state "must develop a comprehensive solid waste management program that attacks on multiple fronts. This includes prevention and reduction of solid waste, recycling and reuse, treatment, recovery, incineration and disposal in landfills," Taft said.

"Voluntary efforts to establish programs in all likelihood will be adequate and mandatory state recycling laws hopefully will not be necessary at least in the near future. Eighteen counties now have voluntary recycling programs like the one we see here in Pitt County today.

"Hazardous waste and toxic substances also pose serious technical and health dangers to the people of North Carolina," Taft said. "We are generating 500 pounds of hazardous waste per person ... each year.

"North Carolina must aggressively ensure that our existing legal and regulatory framework is vigorously enforced.

"I am proud," Taft said, "to have chaired the study commission on leaking underground storage tanks ... and to have been involved in legislation that was adopted ... dealing with leaking underground gas storage tanks.

Taft also expressed pride "to have been the principal sponsor in the Senate of legislation that resulted in North Carolina passing one of the most comprehensive abandoned or hazardous waste dump bills in the country.

"This legislation," according to Taft, "gives the authority and direction for the state to log, identify and prioritize every abandoned hazardous waste site ... and creates the framework for liability cleanup and classification to protect our ground water.

Taft, in his position paper, suggests, among other things, that:

— A comprehensive education program should be undertaken to answer questions, identify environmental problems, review economic support incentives and foster the establishment of new markets for recycled goods.

— Incentives must be developed to bring industry to the state to use recycled goods — Tax incentives should be given to manufacturers who reduce potential waste materials and packaging.

— Certain types of non-organic, non-degradable packaging be banned.

— A permanent revolving loan fund be created to help local governments willing to reduce dependence on traditional land filling.

Washington, N.C., as seen from the window of the 'Tin Goose.'

The Daily Reflector/Carol Tyer

Pilot Makes Unscheduled Visits

So far, he's covered 22 states. He arrived in Washington from Suffolk, Va., and he'll be on to Charleston, S.C. next week. While he flies from place to place, a friend drives to meet him in a pickup truck pulling a travel trailer that's been home for the two of them for the past three years.

The "Tin Goose" has a 7-cylinder 760-cubic-inch 235-horsepower engine and seats 14. This plane, Chaney said, ushered in the age of commercial aviation. Chaney credits Henry Ford, better known for bringing the automobile to the masses, with also opening up commercial transportation by aircraft.

"More than anyone else, Ford transformed American civil aviation from small fly-by-night operations to the giant airline industry of today," he said. "Most major United States airlines began with Ford Trimotors and in these planes the first transcontinental air service was inaugurated. At one time, 198 of these planes existed. Today there are eight."

But what about this red-white-and-blue beauty? It was owned from 1928 to 1929 by Robertson Aircraft Corp. of Missouri, the employer of Lindbergh. This company later financed Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" flight to Paris. From 1939 to 1985, the plane was owned by Island Airlines of Port Clinton, Ohio, and was used as a "school bus and lifeline" for persons living on islands in Lake Erie, Chaney said.

It was during that time that Chaney kept farming and flying other planes and frequently reminding the owners that if they ever wanted to sell, he wanted to buy. When he finally was able to purchase the historic plane in 1985, he said, it was only because he had good credit and a gambling banker.

Now he makes hefty monthly payments on the plane and pays expensive insurance premiums to Lloyd's of London. But money is not the issue, he said. He considers himself a fortunate man to be doing what he's always wanted to do. He's always dreamed of using the Tin Goose to providing people with history lessons even as many of them experience their first airplane ride.

He says he can't decide which he likes better — seeing the glow on the face of a child during his first plane ride or providing an adult who previously was afraid to fly a reassuring experience.

"It happens right often," he said, "that mom and dad come out and one of them gets up the nerve to fly for the first time. He or she finds out it's not as scary as they had imagined, and says, 'Now we can fly out to visit our son in California,' or 'Now we take that trip to Hawaii we've always talked about.' That's when I know for sure that what I'm doing is worth it."

All the eight other Tin Gooses in existence are now "in mothballs," he said — one in the Smithsonian Institution, one in the Ford Museum in Dearborn, Mich., the rest on display in various parts of the country. His is the only one still flying.

Sometimes years from now, he will park his, he said, probably in Florida. He has thoughts of opening a small air transportation museum and incorporating into the memorabilia some of the newspaper clippings and film footage that have been generated along the way.

In the meantime, he and the Tin Goose keep on flying. A few weeks ago, when he was in New England, he had Steve McAuliff, widower of Challenger astronaut Christa McAuliff, as his "co-pilot." This weekend, he'll share the skies with eastern North Carolinians.

Man Sought

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Law enforcement officers searched Thursday for a man who led them on a high-speed chase through parts of four counties early today before exchanging gunfire with them and then disappearing into Johnston County.

Donald Wayne Driver Sr. of Raleigh is believed to have been wounded in the shooting, said Bailey Police Chief Mike Coley. Coley said Bailey police have charged Driver with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, careless and reckless driving, and hit and run.

Coley said the warrant was issued based on the Highway Patrol's identification of Driver as the owner of the vehicle being chased.

City Council Plans November Vote On Erecting Road Signs

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council is to decide next month whether to allow the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority to erect signs along a new stretch of U.S. 264 to direct motorists to area hotels.

Al Nichols, executive director of the authority, said Thursday night at the group's monthly meeting that he has received support for the sign plan from state Department of Transportation officials and an official in the city's development office.

The authority would like to erect the signs on property off state-owned right of way, Nichols said, and because of the county's new billboard ordinance, the plan must have the backing of the City Council. The board is scheduled to address the issue next month, he said.

The authority took up the issue of informational signs more than five months ago after hotel owners expressed concern that motorists were not able to find lodging facilities because road signs for the new U.S. 264 bypass direct travelers by Pitt County Memorial Hospital instead of to Greenville Boulevard, where several hotels are located.

The authority has been trying to find a way to erect signs in compliance with Pitt County's billboard ordinance that bans virtually all signage along the new highway.

Nichols recently contacted G.R. Shirley Jr., division engineer in Greenville for DOT, and asked if the authority could erect informational signs along 264 on state-owned right of way. Nichols said Shirley supported the idea of informational signs and offered the state's help, but said they could not be located on state-owned land because it would set an unwanted precedent.

"Mr. Shirley also offered the support of the State Department of Transportation in this undertaking by working with us in contacting property owners and in designing and constructing the signs," Nichols said in an Oct. 5 letter written to Bobby Roberson, director of the city's development department.

In the letter, Nichols said he had discussed the sign plan with Jack Simoneau, a development staff member, and suggested the signs be located off the state-owned right of way.

"Mr. Simoneau studied the proposal and determined that, in his opinion, the signs as proposed could be permitted," Nichols said in the letter. "(According to a city ordinance,) these signs could be permitted as informational and traffic directional signs with the authorization of the City Council."

Nichols said that Shirley recommended that the first sign be located between Moye Boulevard and Memorial Drive. Nichols said Thursday the proposed location of the sign would be near or on the property of ABC Moving and Storage Co. The sign would instruct motorists to use the right lane to reach lodging facilities.

The authority has not yet contacted owners of ABC Moving and Storage, he said.

Under Nichols' proposal, the second sign would be located on Holiday Inn property before 264 intersects with Memorial Drive. It would instruct motorists to use the right lane for lodging, food and gas and the left lane for food and gas.

"Basically, what it would do is tell people: 'you don't go left for hotels; you go right for hotels,'" Nichols said Thursday.

There has been concern at previous authority meetings that signs located off the state's right of way would be too far away from the highway for motorists to read easily.

The state's right of way along 264 varies. At ABC Moving and Storage, Shirley said, the right of way varies from 18 feet to 30 feet away from the face of the curb. A fence around the business runs along the right of way line, he said.

Near the Holiday Inn, Shirley said the state's right of way is about 8 to 10 feet from the face of the curb, and is also marked by a fence. Under Nichols' plan, the informational signs must be located behind the state-owned land.

The signs would not display logos, and each hotel would be responsible for erecting signs in Greenville that direct motorists to the specific location, Nichols said. At previous meetings, the authority has informally agreed that area hotels should share the cost of the informational signs and the authority should not fund the project.

The authority, Nichols said, should move forward and do as much work as possible on the project while awaiting approval. "Once we get the OK, we can proceed as quickly as possible."

Roberson and Simoneau are out of town until next week and could not be reached for comment.

Who's There?

In Pitt, It's Often United Way

A phone rings. A man is disturbed by unpaid bills and his wife's sickness; he is down and wants to talk. Someone is there.

A mother and her two children are the victims of an abusive husband. The woman files charges. But their belongings are left behind at the house they fled and they are scared to go back and get them. Where will they stay? Where will the three be safe? Someone is there.

A teenager, pregnant, wants to raise her child but knows she can not attend school, work and care for a child at the same time. She worries she does not know how to be a parent. Someone is there.

And in hundreds of situations in Pitt County where help is needed, someone is there because of United Way.

That organization helps fund agencies such as REAL Crisis Intervention Center, where volunteers provide counseling and referral for problems via a 24-hour telephone service, walk-in discussion and off-site crisis teams. United Way contributes to the Pitt County Family Violence Center, an organization that assists domestic violence victims and families through counseling, temporary shelter and support groups. It also provides money for Project PARENTING, an intervention program for teenage mothers that allows them to continue their education and teaches parenting skills.

But these three agencies are only examples of the broad spectrum of human service needs addressed by United Way in this community. The list is long. From senior citizens to the sick to the homeless to recovering alcoholics to those who can't read, United Way is there. From the American Red Cross to the Children's Home Society to the Girl Scouts to The Salvation Army, United Way helps.

Right now, though, Pitt County United Way is asking for the community's help. Its 1988 fundraising campaign is under way and its $1,104,071 goal is ambitious. That goal represents real needs — needs that go beyond the scope of taxpaid services, yet represent deep shortfalls in human services.

Meeting these needs means improved quality of life for the community. It means easing the plight of those struck by misfortune. It means helping in a tough time. It also means working to better the human condition in this little corner of the world.

A contribution to United Way is a way to be involved. It is a way to make sure, in the face of suffering, someone is there.

And if you help the organization meet its goal by giving, you can be there.

Export Of N.C. Leaf Significant

It is clear that foreign buyers of American tobacco are going to be highly important to the industry in the years ahead.

It is thus pleasing to tobacco growers and processors that Taiwan plans to continue purchasing North Carolina tobacco this year.

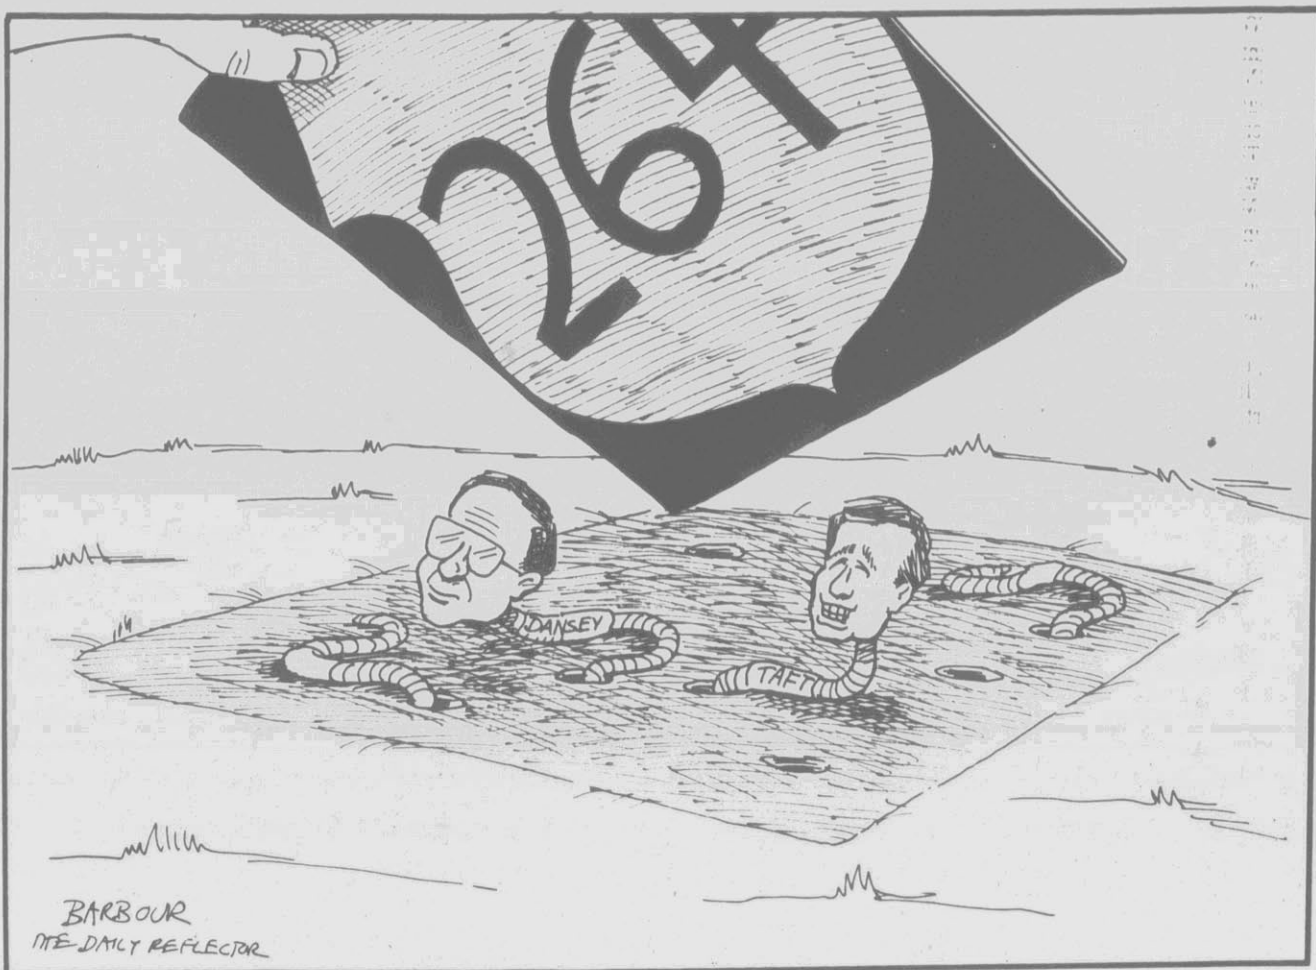

A Taiwanese delegation was here this week for a tour of the A.C. Monk & Co. Inc. plant in Farmville and to sign contracts for the leaf purchase. Taiwan has launched its 1988 Buy American Promotion Mission to provide for the importation of more United States goods.

Fortunately tobacco is a product that Taiwan can use and an official said the delegation was searching for good quality and good price. Those two conditions have been met, he said. The group saw the type of tobacco that will be shipped to Taiwan.

Taiwan is a market which must be aggressively sold as a source for North Carolina grown tobacco. So will other nations which can absorb some of the production. World markets have always been important to North Carolina growers and leaf processors. Now they are more important than ever. In the face of public policy threats to tobacco consumption of tobacco, and increasing organized opposition to tobacco products, foreign markets could make a difference.

The state has long been known for producing a superior tobacco product. While other growing areas of the world can produce tobacco at less cost, our reputation is for quality in tobacco and processing. That is a reputation we must maintain if we want to expand our overseas markets. Desirable leaf will draw buyers and that creates competition which in turn means more profit for the tobacco grower.

The announced Taiwan purchase of $63 million in tobacco this year is no small thing. It is important to our tobacco economy.

Bush Dominates, Dukakis Misses

LOS ANGELES — Two-thirds of the way through Thursday night's final presidential debate, George Bush said he was "pretty confident tonight" but "not that confident" that he wanted to meet a panelist's request for three prospective Supreme Court appointees.

If Ann Compton of ABC News had asked again a half-hour later, she might have gotten the names.

The front-running Republican presidential nominee topped his performance in the first debate and saw his rival, Democratic nominee Michael S. Dukakis, miss one opportunity after another to turn the course of the debate — and, more important, his flagging campaign.

If the outcome was less one-sided than Wednesday night's 6-0 Dodgers' blowout of the Mets, it was clearly not the big win that Dukakis had hoped for to galvanize backers around the country who have been battered by a wave of discouraging polls.

Susan Estrich, Dukakis' campaign manager, conceded as much when she said after the debate, "We do not expect to see a change (in the poll numbers) overnight, but we do expect to close the gap in the next three weeks."

Robert Teeter, Bush's pollster and political adviser, was far less guarded, calling the vice president "a clear winner" and saying he achieved his objective of "highlighting the differences" with Dukakis on taxes, national defense and social issues.

The tip-off that this was not to be the night Dukakis supporters had hoped for came with the first question, a deliberately shocking query from Cable News Network's Bernard Shaw, asking Dukakis if he would favor an irrevocable death penalty if someone were arrested for raping and killing his wife, Kitty.

The governor's face was as impassive as if he had been asked the time. "No," he said, evenhandedly, as if it were the most routine matter in the world, he would stick to his principles. And then without a word or sign acknowledging that he could empathize with those who have been the victims of violent crime, he went back into a description of his program to reduce drugs and crime in Massachusetts.

Even if Bush had not underlined the point by dealing with the emotional side of the question, Dukakis' omission was apparent. Before the debate, an old Dukakis rival, Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., had said that "if he (Dukakis) can add a little human touch to his obvious competence, it would help."

Try as he might Thursday night, Dukakis did not seem to be able to perform that task convincingly.

In the last two months, Bush has done something extraordinary. Poll after poll shows that with an aggressive campaign, he has raised public disapproval of Dukakis to the point that it now exceeds the approval scores, while at the same time he has dramatically reduced his own negatives.

Thursday night, Bush furthered that process. Not once, not twice, but three times, Bush listened to a question about personal values, a question with emotional content, watched Dukakis miff it, and then hit it out of the park.

When Newsweek's Margaret Garrard Warner asked him directly about the verdict on the first debate, which she said Dukakis won intellectually but Bush captured on "likability," and inquired whether he thought voters might require a degree of empathy with their president, the Massachusetts governor could hardly conceal his impatience.

He began his answer by going back to a previous question and told Bush "you're dead wrong, George" about his position on Social Security. When he returned to Warner's question, he said, "I hope I'm a reasonably likable guy, but I'm also a serious guy. This is a serious office. ... After another lecture on taxes and the budget, Dukakis added that if he becomes president, "I will do the job with as much good humor as possible."

Bush, once again, underlined the obvious. "It's not whether people like you but whether they share the bright dreams ... and understand the heartbeat of the country," he said.

The third time came when Compton asked who are the heroes of contemporary American life. Dukakis, going first, talked for two minutes. His list started with "members of Congress and some of my fellow governors," politicians who do not rank high on the public's hit parade. Then he went to classroom teachers, members of the clergy, drug counselors, people in law enforcement. At the end of the recitation, he had named exactly one individual, Dr. Jonas E. Salk, developer of the polio vaccine.

When Bush had a chance to comment, he dropped five names into a one-minute response, starting with a noted Hispanic teacher here in Los Angeles and ending with President Reagan.

Answers like that made the debate close to a total mismatch in terms of the human dimension. As for the political points, Bush at least held his own — and may have gained the decision as well.

Dukakis' strategists had hoped to see him accomplish.

Dukakis insinuated — over Bush's vehement denials — that his rival would tamper with Social Security benefits, a fear that Democrats have found moves many elderly voters to the polls.

By repeating the phrase, "I don't know which George Bush I'm debating," he suggested accurately that the positions the vice president has taken in the current campaign on education and the environment are sharply at odds with the record of the Reagan administration in which he served.

He underlined, quite effectively, the difference the election will make in Supreme Court appointments, especially on such sensitive social issues as abortion, where the two men sharply disagree. And he was able to make a statement on the need to let individual women decide whether or not to have an abortion, which could appeal to many female voters.

He drove home the conclusion that he will give higher priority to domestic needs than to some weapons systems, another position that polls suggest commands majority support.

And he managed repeatedly to remind viewers that in the first big decision of their respective campaigns, the choice of a running mate, he chose the widely admired Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas while Bush chose Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, whose reputation has suffered by comparison.

If the outcome was less one-sided than Wednesday night's 6-0 Dodgers' blowout of the Mets, it was clearly not the big win that Dukakis had hoped for to galvanize backers ...

But those were about the only pluses in the evening for Dukakis. His defense against the charges that Bush has used to derail the Democratic campaign were muted at best, and in some instances, he offered no defense at all.

Before the debate, Dukakis' colleague, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, had said, the nominee "has to aggressively counterpunch, heavy and hard, assert a vision of America that allows people to see things will be better if he wins and worse if Bush wins ... and allow people to make a connection to him by showing his passion and humor."

In the debate's aftermath, Democrats were wondering whether Dukakis had accomplished any of those three — let alone hit the triple target.

A Question Of Motherhood Or Livelihood

BOSTON — And now we return once more, dear readers, to the Perils of Pauline and Parental Leave.

When we first met Pauline, you may recall, she had just given birth. Pauline was losing sleep not only due to her newborn child but also to her newborn anxiety. She was afraid of losing her job.

The opening chapter ended with Pauline, stretch marks and all, hanging over the cliff. Above her, was an employer, twirling a moustache, demanding that she choose: Your Motherhood or Your Livelihood.

Pauline's plight did not go unnoticed. After many years, people set out to rescue her. They proposed a Family and Medical Leave bill that would, in its compromise form, require employers of more than 50 people to offer at least ten weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave when workers have newborn, newly adopted or sick children.

This wasn't a great deliverance. Pauline's country is the only industrial nation, aside from South Africa, with no family leave policy. Even the arch-economic rival, Japan, gives 12 weeks of leave with 60 percent pay to its female workers.

Ellen Goodman

Moreover, the bill was less than eleven states and many large American companies already offer. But at least it promised a floor, or a ladder, under Pauline's dangling toes.

Pauline's melodrama ran in almost every newspaper and congressional hearing room. Sometimes she appeared as a couple with a sick child. Sometimes as a couple with an adopted child. Sometimes as a single mother. Indeed, as we remember from the chapter on Pauline and the Pollsters, an astounding 79 percent of the population supported family medical leave.

Meanwhile, the villain of this piece, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, was working mightily to tie the bill down to the track. The business lobby uttered dire predictions about the economic effects of family leave. The very same predictions they offered when confronted with child labor laws, occupational safety laws and pregnancy discrimination laws.

Unlike this lobby, Pauline's family, alas, did not have a PAC. She couldn't threaten politicians with withholding campaign contributions.

What she did have was a political constituency. During 1988 every candidate talked about the American family. It was widely believed that the bare minimum any politician could do and still have credibility with American families was to vote for this modest parental leave. "Thank God, where ever she is, for elections," said Pauline's pal, Judy Lichtman of the Women's Legal Defense Fund.

But this is melodrama after all. Briefly, in the waning days of the 100th Congress, parental leave was packaged with the child care bill and a child pornography bill. With these two companions, and with the pressure of a political campaign, it looked like the perils might be over.

Then Pauline was done in. At the final moment, there weren't enough senators willing to close off argument and bring the bill up for a vote. Goodbye, parental leave. Back to cliff-hanging.

What is the future for Pauline's family? Ronald Reagan, George Bush and Dan Quayle are all against family medical leave. A handful of Senate votes could have turned this around. American families got nothing out of this Congress and if they didn't get it in an election year, when can they? If they can't get a bill that won't cost the government a nickel, what can they get?

Politicians know that voters care about medical leave and child care. But even in the year of the family, many assume they don't care enough to make it a number-one issue at the ballot box. Until now, they have been right.

Those of us who have watched this melodrama unfold with all its frustrating twists and turns know that if anything is going to change for families, working parents will have to become lobbyists and choose legislators who give their interests priority.

It would be swell to end this melodrama before Pauline becomes a grandmother.

Dukakis Needed A Home Run ... But Only Hit A Single

Robert Shogan

WASHINGTON — Near the end of Thursday night's final presidential debate, Vice President George Bush said flatly that he would not take part in another such encounter and contended: "The American people are up to here with debates."

Democrat Michael S. Dukakis, who earlier in the campaign had demanded as many debates as possible, did not argue the point. His lack of response may reflect a tacit acceptance of one salient conclusion that emerged from the encounter in Los Angeles: If Michael Dukakis is going to overtake George Bush in this campaign, he will have to find some other way to do it besides debating him.

As the underdog, Dukakis needed to soundly whip Bush in this encounter in Los Angeles, most analysts felt. Instead, he appeared at times to be having trouble just keeping pace with him.

"He needed to hit a home run, and all he hit was a single," said Austin Ranney, chairman of the political science department at the University of California, Berkeley, and a longtime Democratic loyalist. Ranney thought Dukakis did better than Bush — "more knowledgeable and crisper," he said — though not better enough to turn the tide of a campaign that is running against him.

Others were harsher in their judgment of the Massachusetts governor.

"A very weak debate for Dukakis," said University of Texas debate specialist Kathleen Jamieson, who like most other analysts thought Dukakis had outpointed the vice president in their first debate last month in Winston Salem, N.C.

But Thursday night, Jamieson said "Bush was very high on specificity," particularly in the earlier part of the debate. "Bush dominated the agenda for most of the evening," she said.

Not until his closing statement did Dukakis get around to mentioning what has been the main thrust of his candidacy: the economic squeeze facing the middle class and his ability to alleviate it.

A Democratic pollster who asked not to be named said resignedly afterward: "He didn't get his message across. He just got too bogged down in details."

This campaign operative added that Bush "sort of unraveled" as the evening wore on. Indeed, the vice president's answers, which had been relatively cogent and tightly drawn, became somewhat disjointed.

Responding to a question about nuclear energy, he said in part: "And therefore I've made some proposals to strengthen the domestic oil industry by more incentives going in to look for and find and produce oil, make some incentives in terms of secondary and tertiary production. But we're going to have to use more gas, more coal and more safe nuclear power for our energy base."

But with a month-long lead in the national polls and an even bigger advantage in the electoral college, Bush could afford some uneven moments. Dukakis, as the underdog, had to be in top form nearly all the time.

If he was not, it may have been because the strategy devised by his advisers asked too much of him.

Unlike front-runner Bush, whose managers figured he only had to avoid making a serious mistake, Dukakis entered the encounter with a double-barreled mission: To force Bush into making an error and at more relaxed and less didactic than in the first presidential debate last month. And when Newsweek reporter Margaret Warner told him, "You won the first debate on intellect and yet you lost it on heart," he responded good-naturedly enough.

"I think I'm a reasonably likable guy," he said. "But I'm also a serious guy. I think the presidency of the United States is a very serious

Meanwhile, as the evening wore on, Dukakis' early enthusiasm for being likable appeared to wear thin. He had jostled with Bush for an hour without seriously wounding him. And he had been pressed hard by the questions, including one bluntly accusing him of misstating his vote at a National Governors' Association meeting on freezing Social Security cost-of-living increases and of "demagoguing" the issue.

So by the time he had heard Bush reject the idea of a third debate, Dukakis had passed up what Ranney thought was a fine opportunity to bid for yet another confrontation with Bush and another chance to reverse the tide of the election.

Instead he settled for a shot at a favorite target — Bush's running mate, Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle.

Reminding everyone that Quayle had not fared so well in last week's vice presidential debate against Dukakis' running mate, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Dukakis said: "Well, I can understand, after the vice presidential debate, why Mr. Bush would want no more debates." The comment drew a mixture of cheers and boos.

At a rally of supporters afterward, Dukakis cried: "I think we ought to have that third debate, don't you? We started to get our opponent out from behind the flag factories and the balloons, and people had a chance to see where we stand on the basic and fundamental challenges that face this country. That's why debates are so important. That's why we ought to have a third debate."

The crowd cheered. But by this time the 100 million or so viewers had turned their attention to other things, and ABC News was already broadcasting its poll showing that Bush had won the debate by about as big a margin as Bentsen beat Quayle.

(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times

'As the underdog, Dukakis needed to soundly whip Bush in this encounter in Los Angeles, most analysts felt. Instead, he appeared at times to be having trouble just keeping pace with him.'

the same time to present the human side of his own political personality.

Inevitably the two assignments conflicted, and when the evening was over it was questionable whether Dukakis had accomplished either.

"His trying to be nice seemed to cut into his competence," Jamieson said.

Actually, Dukakis did not seem to try all that hard. At first he seemed office. And I think we have to address these issues in a very serious way."

While Dukakis was responding, Bush must have thought he was living a dream world. For more than seven years as vice president, with his own personality under constant scrutiny, he had to fend off charges of wimpishness.

Now with the election less than four weeks away, partly as a result of his own surprisingly strong performance and partly as a result of Dukakis' dour and bloodless demeanor, it was his rival's psyche that had become the focus of journalistic scrutiny.

From his new position of normalcy and strength, Bush smoothly followed up on Dukakis' response to the likability question by tuning his answer to catch the theme of his campaign.

"I don't think it's a question of whether people like you or not to make you an effective leader," the vice president said. "I think it's whether you share the broad dreams of the American people. I think it's a question of values, not likability or lovability."

Did Anything Get Debated?

Thomas Rosenstiel

There was less hemming and hawing than on earlier evenings and less rhetoric on television from the campaign spin doctors.

But the the initial call by the referees — the instant analysts on network television in the moments after the second presidential debate Thursday night — declared Republican George Bush the winner for the simple reason that Democrat Michael Dukakis, the apparent underdog, needed, depending on which network one watched, "a home run," "the long ball," or to "jar something loose," and he didn't get it.

The first instant media poll, offered by ABC 30 minutes after the debate ended, agreed, showing Bush the winner 49 percent to 33 percent.

But voters interviewed on television seemed less certain. Panels of voters gathered by NBC and CBS both called the debate a draw, and they didn't seem to care particularly about what it was tactically that Dukakis might need.

"Since not much happened," said CBS' Bob Schieffer, sounding as if he had just escaped a deadly party, "and since George Bush is ahead (in the polls), I guess he'll be declared the winner."

The first media reactions, from polls, analysts and the sound bites that are replayed on television, are generally considered crucial in deciding how the public ultimately views debates. This is because more than half of all voters don't watch and many of those who do are uncertain what to think, so the media echo often makes more of an impression on voters than the debate itself.

The sense among network analysts was that this was an event so lacking in substance or drama that it immediately vanished into the sea of expectations — the perception among the journalists that the inning is late, the score lopsided, and, though 26 days remain to election day, Dukakis needed a big score.

"Somehow there had to be a long ball thrown here tonight," said ABC's Sam Donaldson, "and I don't think it was."

If that is true, the panel of media questioners may unwittingly have played into George Bush's strategy. ABC correspondent Ann Compton, one of the debate panelists, noted that the panel members had decided beforehand to not be overly confrontational in their questions so as "not to make heat."

Notable for their absence at least on network television, too, were spin doctors, those campaign operatives who offer themselves to tell reporters how to interpret what they have just seen. In both the first presidential and the vice presidential debate they were given considerable time on the the networks to offer their wares.

On Thursday night only NBC nibbled, inviting Democrat Jesse Jackson and Republican Jack Kemp, and even they seemed moderated in their tones.

Kemp echoed the network voices, calling Bush the winner. "On political points George Bush definitely won. Dukakis ... needed a home run. He didn't get it."

Jackson wouldn't even go so far as to call his man victorious, a sure sign that, in the between-the-lines where truth might lie, your side is not bullish. Said Jackson of Dukakis, "He did fine."

Correspondents on all three networks suggested that if Dukakis came away with less from the debate it may not have been his fault as much as that of his strategy — that, according to the correspondents, of wanting to appear likable.

"Dukakis wanted to 'go positive,'" said Chris Wallace of NBC. "The question I have is whether it was the right strategy."

"I didn't really divine a game plan in Michael Dukakis," said NBC's Ken Bode.

Only NBC went so far as to declare Bush a winner on his own steam. "I thought George Bush was the better performer," said John Chancellor.

Community Leaders Trading Ideas With Gainesville Officials

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

While the East Carolina University football squad is in Tallahassee, Fla., this weekend battling a team of Floridians, another group from Greenville will be in the Sunshine State with entirely different objectives.

A group of Greenville community leaders, representing a wide assortment of institutions, has traveled to Gainesville to participate in a "Sister City" visit sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Leaders in business, education and government left Greenville Wednesday on the five-day excursion designed to provide officials the opportunity to exchange ideas and to discuss common concerns and problems.

Francis Faust, executive secretary and staff manager at the chamber, said the visit will give city representatives a chance to share experiences from which both city's leaders can learn and benefit.

Ms. Faust said Gainesville was selected as an ideal city to visit because it's somewhat larger than Greenville but close enough in size to give community leaders an idea of what Greenville might be like in the near future.

"Both of these communities have medical schools affiliated with campuses and both have major medical schools nearby. In addition, both cities have been working to improve their downtown area and each have recently established a convention and tourism authority," Ms. Faust said.

Gainesville, which is centrally located in one of the country's fastest growing states, is the home of the University of Florida.

Among the events scheduled for 25-member group from Greenville are a tour of the city, a visit to the University of Florida Medical Center, the school's research park, and various social outings featuring speakers from Gainesville's business community.

Today the group will attend an economic development forum sponsored by the Gainesville Area Chamber of Commerce and a city forum, featuring a speech by the city of Gainesville's Director of Economic Development David Roque.

The Greenville group will wind up its southern excursion Saturday by taking a bus to Tallahassee to see the Pirates play against Florida State. They are expected to return to Greenville Sunday at 1:40 p.m.

Coordinator and chairman for the inter-city visit is Dick Edwards, executive assistant to the chancellor at East Carolina University.

Others participating in the visit are Ed Walker and Phil Dixon of the chamber of commerce; Mayor Edward Carter; City Manager Greg Knowles; ECU Chancellor Dr. Richard Eakin; Pitt County Memorial Hospital President Jack Richardson; John Chaffee of the Pitt County Development Commission; Jack Steelman, executive director of Evergreen, and Jerry Powell, chairman of the chamber's 2007 Committee.

IN THE STATE

Shooting

CERRO GORDO, N.C. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy was accidentally shot to death, by his 11-year-old neighbor as the youths played after school on Thursday, authorities said.

Edward Jeffery Miller, 13, the son of Cynthia Ann Miller of Cerro Gordo and Carl Sealey of Lake View, S.C., died instantly from a single gunshot wound to his chest about 3:40 p.m., said detective Sterling Cartrette of the Columbus County Sheriff's Department.

The boy was playing with Johnathan Darryl Nance, 11, at the home of his parents, Gregory and Peggy Nance, Cartrette said.

Miller was holding a BB gun while Nance held a .410-gauge shotgun, Cartrette said.

"They were just playing, pointing the guns," Cartrette said. "It just went off."

Carter To Speak

ELON COLLEGE, N.C. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter will be the keynote speaker for Elon College's Spring Academic Convocation, the college has announced.

A faculty and staff committee invited Carter to give the address at the April 25 event, said Nan Perkins, public information director.

This will be at least the second trip to the college for Carter. He visited the college during the 1976 presidential campaign, Perkins said.

Woman Killed

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A North Carolina truck driver has been charged in the death of a 71-year-old Pittsburgh woman who was struck and killed by a tractor-trailer as she crossed a busy street in the city's Southside neighborhood.

Willie James Hutchins, 25, of Kinston, N.C., was turning from East Carson Street onto a side street Wednesday when Helen Edwards was hit, police said.

"She just didn't walk out between two cars. She had crossed the middle of the street and was almost across when she was hit," said homicide Det. Robert McCabe.

Sheriff Retires

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Alamance County Sheriff John Stockard has decided to retire as of the end of the year for health reasons. Stockard is a heart patient at Duke Medical Center.

Chief Deputy Buddy Ivey has been asked to serve as acting chief until Alamance County Commissioners choose a successor. Stockard's term as sheriff runs two more years.

Stockard, a Democrat in his sixth term as sheriff, suffered a serious heart attack on June 23 in Banner Elk. He had returned to work in recent weeks, but returned to Duke last weekend and is awaiting a heart transplant.

Sentenced

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A student activist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was sentenced Wednesday to 21 days in jail for disorderly conduct stemming from a CIA protest.

Dale T. McKinley, a graduate student from Zimbabwe, is apparently one of the few UNC-CH students ever given a jail term for conduct during a protest. About 700 students were arrested during protests against racial segregation in the 1960s, but only a handful of them were sentenced to jail terms, said Daniel H. Pollitt, who has been a UNC-CH law professor for three decades.

McKinley was convicted of trespassing in August. He violated the conditions set down for him, causing the district attorney's office to bring McKinley back before a judge Wednesday.

Shed Burns

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A fire destroyed a large shed and its contents Wednesday at H&H Farms north of Dobson, causing more than 100 gallons of a highly toxic fumigant stored in barrels to be released into the air.

A spokesman for the Northern Hospital of Surry County in Mount Airy said 10 firefighters who might have been exposed to the fumigant were examined at the hospital as a precaution but that none had respiratory problems.

D. Kevin Dull, Surry County's director of emergency management, identified the chemical as chloropicrin, manufactured by Dow Chemical Co.

Chloropicrin is a liquid or gas that is used in insecticides and fungicides. It causes tears and vomiting.

Duke Grant

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University Medical Center has received a three-year, $996,375 grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to establish the Duke Geriatric Education Center.

The announcement was made by William G. Anylan, chancellor for health affairs.

School Fire

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Three boys — ages 10, 12 and 13 — have confessed to setting a fire two weeks ago that gutted 17 classrooms, did $1 million in damage and gave students at Jacksonville Senior High School a two-day holiday, Jacksonville police said.

"There will be no charges ... because of extenuating circumstances I'm not at liberty to discuss," Delma G. Collins, Jacksonville police chief of detectives, said Thursday. "The fire was intentionally set, but there was no intention to burn the school building down."

Lobbyist Expects Renewed Warfare Against Smoking In Next Congress

RALEIGH (AP) — The nationwide political war over cigarettes will probably include renewed battles over increased excise taxes, advertising bans and additional warning labels when the next Congress convenes in January, a tobacco lobbyist says.

All three issues were proposed, but failed, in various pieces of legislation this year, said C. Hoke Leggett, director of agricultural relations for The Tobacco Institute, which is the industry's lobbying arm.

"I guess I could paint a pretty bleak picture, but I'm going to try to be a little bit upbeat," Leggett told delegates of the 30th Annual Meeting of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee on Thursday.

The committee is a coalition of 43 organizations formed to collect and disseminate information on public policy issues affecting the leaf industry.

On Thursday, as part of its annual two-day meeting, delegates elected new officers, adopted a budget and discussed tobacco issues facing growers, warehousemen and manufacturers.

More than 1,000 proposals for tax increases, smoking restrictions or ad bans were considered this year by all levels of government nationwide, Leggett said. Of those, only a handful passed, most were defeated and a few are still pending.

"This is just the tip of the iceberg," Leggett said.

The only major setback the tobacco industry suffered during the latest two-year Congressional session, he said, was the law that banned smoking on domestic airline flights of two hours or less. That law took effect April 23.

But there are indications that the industry will face problems in coming months, he said.

"I'm just as sure as I am standing here, we're going to have to fight for our very lives because so-called 'sin taxes' are one of the most salable taxes to the general public," he said. In recent years, lawmakers have proposed doubling the current cigarette tax to 32 cents per pack.

This month, as Congress debated its new drug bill, some lawmakers wanted to include a 2-cent increase in cigarette tax, he said. That measure has apparently been defeated, but Congress has not yet finished debate on the bill.

Other tobacco-related proposals Leggett said he expected to see on Capitol Hill next year include:

— A new warning label on cigarette packs. Cigarette makers use five different labels, which are rotated regularly, to warn smokers that the U.S. Surgeon General has determined smoking to be a health hazard. The new label would warn that nicotine, a tobacco ingredient, can be addictive.

— A "fire-proof" cigarette. Leggett said manufacturers know they can make cigarettes more flame retardant and less of a fire hazard, but they don't know whether smokers would immediately accept such cigarettes. The changes could affect cigarette taste and how they are smoked.

— Advertising bans. Some Congressmen seek a total ban on any kind of cigarette advertising, while others favor less restrictive measures.

"Advertising will continue to haunt us," Leggett said. "It will continue to be something we've got to watch."

Ruling Leads To DWI Dismissals

GREENSBORO (AP) — Recent state Supreme Court rulings on driving-while-impaired cases have led to the dismissal this month of 20 drunken-driving cases in Guilford County and between 30 and 40 DWI cases in Davidson County.

Spot checks of other Piedmont counties — Randolph, Rockingham, Caswell, Alamance and Montgomery — show only a handful of dismissals based on the rulings. But prosecutors say that might change.

The number of dismissals is on the rise as word spreads among defense lawyers that judges are throwing out cases where the defendants have been held in jail for a sobering-up period, court officials said.

"Other attorneys are beginning to catch on to it," said Martha Nicholson, clerk of court in Davidson County. "We're seeing more motions for dismissal."

Nicholson estimated that about half of all drunken-driving cases in the county last month were dismissed because of the Supreme Court's ruling on three cases that were appealed successfully in Wake County.

The court ruled June 30 in those cases that defendants who were held by magistrates until they sobered up were being denied a chance to obtain evidence, such as an independent blood test, or finding witnesses who can testify at trial about their condition.

Defendants in two of those cases were denied release even though sober friends or relatives agreed to take responsibility for them. In another case the court ruled that a defendant should have been released to the custody of a taxi-cab driver.

State To Step Up Road Projects

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Transportation, buoyed by a loosening of federal purse strings, will spend a record $505 million on highway construction and right-of-way acquisition over the next year, officials say.

The announcement Thursday came with slightly more than three weeks remaining in a campaign in which Republican Gov. Jim Martin and his Democratic opponent, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, have competed over who has the better highway program.

"We are going to try our hand this year to put a half-billion-dollar program on the ground," said Transportation Secretary James Harrington, a Martin appointee. "If we do that pretty well, maybe the people of this state will trust us well enough to do it on a continuing basis."

Transportation officials told the state Board of Transportation's Finance and Programming Committee that the department would not have to trim the Transportation Improvement Program by about $25 million annually over most of the next few years. Such cuts had been thought necessary as a result of federal budget reductions.

The nine-year, $3.2 billion program approved by the board last year calls for $373 million annually for highway construction and right-of-way purchasing.

Russian Roulette Injures 7

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Seven people were injured, one seriously, after a shooting and wreck that followed a game of Russian roulette in a car, police said Thursday.

Elizabeth City Police Chief W.C. Owens said the driver of one car — Jesse Cartwright, 29, of Elizabeth City — was charged with assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury, following the shooting. Cartwright also was charged with driving while impaired, failure to stop for a red light and driving without a license, Owens said.

According to police investigators, Cartwright and three other men were in a car when Cartwright pointed a gun at his head and pulled the trigger. "They told us they were playing Russian roulette," Owens said. "They had two bullets in the revolver, and one of them fired and struck the other two."

Owens said Larry White of Harrington Village was struck in the right eye and John Little of Elizabeth City was hit in the right temple. A third passenger, Steve Dance of Elizabeth City, was not injured.

Investigators said the bullet apparently grazed Cartwright's skull, bounced off Little's temple and lodged in White's eye.

Twin Trailers

RALEIGH (AP) — A state Board of Transportation panel took steps Thursday to avoid public notice and hearings on applications for twin-trailer truck routes in North Carolina.

"If you start running public notices ... you're going to have a lot of comments saying, 'No, we don't want twin trailers on this road,'" said Lucy Everett, chairman of the board's Drivers and Owners Committee. "Based on the mail I've had on this subject, nobody is focused on the legalities of it."

While no formal vote was taken Thursday, most board members agreed the public would be represented because new regulations would call for comment from local law enforcement officials about proposed routes for the long rigs.

Jessica McClure plays as mother speaks to reporters

Toddler Doing Well Year After 58-Hour Ordeal In Old Well

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Surrounded by balloons, toys and stuffed animals, little Jessica McClure has recovered from her tumble into an abandoned well a year ago today, which began a 58-hour ordeal that touched millions worldwide.

"She's doing beautifully," said McClure family spokesman Pete Snelson. "She's talking up a storm. Her foot's fine and her forehead is looking great and she's an active 2 1/2-year-old."

Jessica, now 2 1/2, suffered a pressure wound to her forehead and right foot that required the amputation of her right little toe and the tip of the big toe.

"If she walked without shoes you would notice a difference in her walk, but not much," said orthopedic surgeon Charles Younger, who performed the amputations after her rescue last Oct. 16.

Jessica captured the world's attention last year when she cried for her mother and softly sang nursery rhymes while volunteers drilled through 22 feet of hard rock to rescue her from the dark, 8-inch-wide well shaft.

The deluge of letters, get-well cards, balloons and dolls has long since stopped at Midland Memorial Hospital, where Jessica spent five weeks recovering.

"Everybody adopted that child, whether they were a parent or a grandparent or someone her age," said Kimberly Modisett, director of volunteers at the hospital.

The hospital also was inundated with phone calls from people the world over with tips on how to treat the 18-month-old girl. About 50 doctors, mostly from South America, offered to send leeches, which they said would increase circulation in Jessica's endangered foot, said hospital spokeswoman Sue Ristom.

During the first three weeks, doctors feared they would have to amputate the entire foot, which was wedged next to the toddler's head during the ordeal. But after at least six operations and treatments in a pressurized oxygen tank — with no leeches — Jessica went home less than a year ago with a small scar on her forehead.

Snelson and Younger said Jessica doesn't appear to remember the ordeal, and does not suffer from nightmares, fear of the dark or other phobias.

Jessica was playing with other children in her aunt's back yard when somehow she fell down the well, whose shaft had been covered by a large rock, and became wedged 22 feet underground.

Volunteers drilled a shaft parallel to the well, their progress made agonizingly slow because the hard rock dulled even diamond-tipped drill bits. After two days of drilling, they made a horizontal shaft just under Jessica and plucked her out.

During the effort, paramedics blew warm air into the shaft to keep the girl comfortable, and a television crew lowered a microphone.

Bush Holds Edge

tion's largest prize of electoral votes — 47 — is up for grabs in a contest that's too close to call.

Bush was attending a rally in a Los Angeles suburb and delivering an environmental speech in San Diego today while Dukakis was heading for a meeting in a black church in Los Angeles and a state capitol rally in Sacramento with running mate Lloyd Bentsen.

Before a prime-time television audience of tens of millions of people, Bush and Dukakis traded blows over Social Security, abortion, the death penalty, the qualifications of their running mates and national defense.

Amid the battle over issues, there also was a contest to demonstrate personal warmth and likability.

Dukakis, who has been criticized as being too controlled and unemotional, was asked to address the question of his affability. "I think I'm a reasonably likable guy," he said. "I'm serious — though I think I'm a little more lovable these days than I used to be back in my youth when I began in the state legislature."

Bush, sparring with the panel of debate questioners, was playful at times, reacting in mock horror when asked if his running mate, Dan Quayle, were qualified to take over if Bush were assassinated.

More seriously, Bush said "I'd have confidence in him. And I made a good selection." Polls indicate that Quayle has been a drag on the Republican ticket.

There also were moments of poignancy. Both men talked of losing a child, Bush a daughter to leukemia and Dukakis a child 20 minutes after it was born.

Defending himself against charges he was running a negative campaign, Bush said, "I have defined the issues and I am not going to let Governor Dukakis go through this election without explaining some of these very liberal positions, he's the one, a liberal, traditional liberal, a progressive liberal Democrat."

Dukakis shot back: "In 1980 President Reagan called you a liberal for voting for federal gun control. ... But let's stop labeling each other and let's get to the heart of the matter which is the future of this country."

Accusing Bush of changing positions of Social Security, the environment and ethics in government, Dukakis said, "I don't know what George Bush I'm listening to."

Bush promised that he would never cut Social Security. Dukakis noted that the administration had tried to do just that, and said, "I'm sure you'll try to do it again."

Bush said that as president he would not have any conservative litmus test for Supreme Court justices. He also noted that he supported President Reagan's controversial selection of conservative Judge Robert Bork for the Supreme Court, which was rejected by the Senate.

Dukakis responded, "If the vice president of the United States thinks that Robert Bork was an outstanding appointment that is a very good reason for voting for Mike Dukakis on the 8th of November."

Challenging the administration on foreign policy, Dukakis said, "let's go to work and end this fiasco in Central America, a failed policy which has actually increased Cuban and Soviet influence."

Responding, Bush said that "the policy in Central America, regrettably, has failed because the Congress has been unwilling to support those who have been fighting for freedom."

On national defense, Dukakis said "there's no way that we can build all of the weapons the vice president says he wants to build within the defense budget." Bush criticized Dukakis for supporting a nuclear weapons freeze in the early 1980s and, in a slap at his rival's inexperience in foreign policy, said "You just don't make unilateral cuts in the naive hope that the Soviets are going to behave themselves."

Rushing to claim victory, Bush campaign chief James A. Baker III said, "I really believe the vice president cleaned his clock." He said Bush firmed up his own support and "closed the sale" with undecided voters.

Dukakis campaign manager Susan Estrich said the instant post-debate polls didn't mean much. "We didn't expect a knockout, what we expected was a strong effort. ... The governor spoke to the people about the future tonight."

Fuel Drop Offsets Food Increases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Government reports today on wholesale prices and retail sales presented a picture of moderate inflation and economic growth.

Prices at the wholesale level rose a 0.4 percent in September as the biggest gasoline price decline since January offset a sharp rise in food prices caused by the summer drought, according to the Labor Department.

Food prices rose 1.2 percent, but energy prices fell 3.3 percent because of a battle among oil-producing nations over production quotas, department analysts said.

Retail sales fell an unexpected 0.4 percent in September, the Commerce Department said. It was the second consecutive monthly drop and the first back-to-back decline since September-October 1987.

The decline in retail sales indicated consumer demand is slowing down, and that should ease inflationary pressures.

The nation's trade deficit widened in August as it did in the same month one year earlier, but this time the report did not trigger a sharp drop in the stock market like the one that preceded last year's Oct. 19 collapse.

The Commerce Department reported on Thursday a $12.2 billion merchandise trade deficit for August, up sharply from a $9.5 billion deficit in July and higher than analyst predictions of about $11.3 billion.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 7.12 points to 2,133.36. Bond prices, which fell sharply immediately after the news, finished the day only slightly lower.

The wider-than-expected August 1987 trade gap triggered a 95-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average just days before the Oct. 19 stock market collapse.

On Thursday, the dollar fell following the trade report, continuing a string of declines this week.

"The market's still not totally sure about it ... (but) the first reaction is, we've got to sell the dollar," said Rimmer de Vries, chief economist of Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

By late in the day, the dollar was down to less than 127.5 Japanese yen and 1.82 West German marks, compared to more than 129 yen and 1.83 marks on Wednesday.

Car Bomb Kills Two At Beirut Checkpoint

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded near a Syrian army checkpoint in a crowded district of Moslem west Beirut today, killing three people and wounding 33, police said.

Sgt. Mohammed Idriss, a police demolitions expert, said the green Fiat was rigged with about 110 pounds of explosives. It went off at 9 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT) during the morning rush hour in the Tarik Jedideh district.

A police spokesman said the car was parked near a gas station within 25 yards of a Syrian army checkpoint.

The spokesman, who cannot be named in line with standing regulations, said the three fatalities, burned beyond recognition, were evacuated by private cars to the nearby Makassed Hospital.

Local radio stations interrupted their programs to blare appeals from the Makassed Hospital for urgent blood donations to cope with the influx of casualties.

The spokesman said he had no information about casualties among the Syrian soldiers.

He said helmeted Syrian troops sealed off the blast site, allowing only ambulances to enter the area. They fired their AK-47 assault rifles into the air to make way for ambulances in the crowded district.

Fire engines, their sirens wailing, raced to the blast scene to extinguish about 15 blazing cars, the spokesman said.

He said the car bomb, the 15th in Lebanon this year, also damaged about five nearby buildings and shattered glass.

By police count, 112 people were killed and 224 wounded in the previous car bombings.

Americans Finding Good Life Better But Giving Less

By George W. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans generally are richer, with more money to spend on extras, but they're giving a smaller proportion of it to their churches.

That's the central finding of a broad study comparing real income gains, adjusted for inflation and taxes, with changes in church contributions over a 17-year period.

"For the first time in history," says researcher Sylvia Ronsvall, "the majority of people in the U.S. have discretionary income, beyond basic needs. However, church giving has not reflected this newly available money."

Much of it goes into the leisure industry, which soaks up 12 percent of the average American's income, with billions spent on cut flowers, pets, lawns and microwave popcorn, the report says.

It's apparently difficult to convince most church members that "meeting domestic and world needs in Jesus' name is as satisfying as taking a beloved pet to a doggie restaurant or even buying cut flowers," it says. "However, as a starting point, we ought to be able to portray increased stewardship as exciting as microwave popcorn. And grow from there."

The study by "empty tomb inc.," a non-profit research and service organization in Champaign, Ill., under a grant from the Lilly Endowment Inc., offers comparative data from 31 Protestant denominations and Roman Catholicism.

It found that Protestants in 1968 gave an average of 3.05 percent of their after-tax income to churches. That shrank to 2.79 percent by 1985.

Nevertheless, the average per capita amount given, in terms of constant 1982 dollars, was up from $247 in 1968 to $296 in 1985. Among evangelical denominations, the latest per capita was slightly more — $306.

Among Catholics, average per capita giving declined from an average $232 in 1963 to $151 in 1985 — from 3.4 percent to 1.4 percent of income.

However, disposable income increased 103 percent, or $2,511 per capita, between 1968 and 1985, the report says. Average contributions rose $49 per capita in that period, only 2 percent of the new income.

For Protestants, that meant that total contributions and per capita giving for the 31 denominations both were up. But in view of the greater income, the proportion given to churches was less.

"Although people have more money, people are not choosing to give a larger percentage of their income to the church," the report says. "In a time when leisure industries have been born and have expanded rapidly, the church has remained a no-growth entity."

Beginning with 1950, a majority of Americans have had a dramatically increasing amount of discretionary income, the report says, while advertising boosted demand for all sorts of extras.

will lead revival at the church next week. Services begin at 7:30 p.m. daily, Monday through Oct. 21.

Missionary Day Sunday

Missionary Mamie Gorham will lead a Missionary Day service at Friendship Holiness Church in Falkland at noon Sunday.

Special singing will be offered.

Workshop Set Saturday

The St. Peter Missionary Baptist Church, Route 5, Greenville, is sponsoring a workshop for church clerks, secretaries and treasurers Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Deacon W.J. Crandol of Triumph M.B. Church is the instructor.

White To Lead Service

The Rev. Charlie White of Snow Hill will lead the Pre-Harvest Day service at 3 p.m. Sunday at St. Matthews Original Free Will Baptist Church.

Broadcaster To Speak

Steve Riach, former sports director and producer with CBN, will speak at Community Christian Church at 11 a.m. Sunday. He is now president of Vision Production, which includes Christian-oriented television and video broadcasts.

Riach has covered the Super Bowl and the World Series and recently returned from covering the Olympics in Korea. He lives in Virginia Beach, Va., where he teaches young adults.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes between Sept. 30 and Oct. 7.

FOREIGN OWNERSHIP IN THE U.S. — By a vote of 250 for and 170 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 5410) requiring foreigners who buy heavily into American assets to register with the Commerce Department and make certain information available to the government.

In part, these buyers would have to identify to Commerce their officers and directors by nationality and divulge certain internal financial information.

Supporter James Florio, D-N.J., said "we want to know who owns America and that is what this legislation is all about."

Opponent Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., called the bill "an exercise in election year xenophobia" damaging to states that court foreign investment.

Members voting yes want foreign buyers of America to provide certain internal data to the U.S. government.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no were Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9; Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Stephen Neal, D-5, did not vote.

TEXTILE BILL VETO — By a vote of 272 for and 152 against, the House failed to achieve the two-thirds majority it needed to override President Reagan's veto of legislation (S2662) freezing non-rubber footwear imports at present levels and limiting textile and clothing imports to a growth rate of 1 percent annually over 1987 levels.

Override supporter James Traficant, D-Ohio, said the bill is needed because unfair competitors abroad "are laughing in our face."

Jim Slattery, D-Kan., said the bill would inflict "unnecessary increases in clothing and shoe prices" on American consumers.

Members voting yes wanted to override President Reagan's veto of the textile bill.

Voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

WELFARE REFORM — By a vote of 347 for and 53 against, the House sent to President Reagan legislation (HR1720) giving the federal-state welfare system its first major overhaul in its 53 years.

Seeking to end welfare dependency, the bill requires most recipients to enroll in state job-training and education programs as a condition of getting their welfare check. It also requires payroll withholding of absent parent's child-support obligations, and institutes "workfare" under which one parent in a welfare family must spend at least 16 hours weekly in a government or community service job.

Supporter Don Pease, D-Ohio, termed the bill "a clear signal that we expect people on welfare to move on to regular employment."

Opponent Bill Archer, R-Texas, said "the bill will approach $1 billion a year in extra spending" after five years.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

Voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Rose did not vote.

CIVIL RIGHTS IN THE HOUSE — The House voted 408 for and 12 against to give its employees the same protection against job discrimination that other workers nationwide receive under the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Some 12,000 workers on the House payroll, including personal staff and committee aides, will immediately benefit from this change (H Res 558) in House rules. The vote created an in-house procedure to resolve complaints of job discrimination based on sex, race, age, handicap, national origin, religion, color or age.

The Senate at week's end had not yet extended similar protection to its employees.

Members voting yes wanted House workers to be legally protected against discrimination by their employees.

Voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

Senate
TOBACCO AND ALCOHOL

TAXES — By a vote of 60 for and 33 against, the Senate tabled (killed) a proposal to raise alcohol and cigarette taxes to fund multibillion dollar anti-drug legislation that Congress may clear before it adjourns this month.

Deficit ceilings have left Congress far short of the revenue the drug bill will require to meet the high expectations lawmakers are raising for it in the countdown to election day.

This amendment to a tax bill (S2238) sought to raise $2 billion over two years by raising federal levies on cigarettes, wine, beer and liquor.

Sponsor Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said the drug bill "will be meaningless without funding."

Opponent Terry Sanford, D-N.C., said Congress should consider instead a slight increase in top-bracket income tax rates.

Members voting yes were opposed to the proposed "sin tax" hike.

Terry Sanford, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

TO FUND DRUG BILL — By a vote of 22 for and 72 against, the Senate rejected an attempt to fund the 1988 anti-drug bill (above) by cutting spending for Amtrak, low-income energy assistance, a controversial Pentagon coal buying program, the Legal Services Corp. and the Economic Development Administration. This occurred during debate on S 2238.

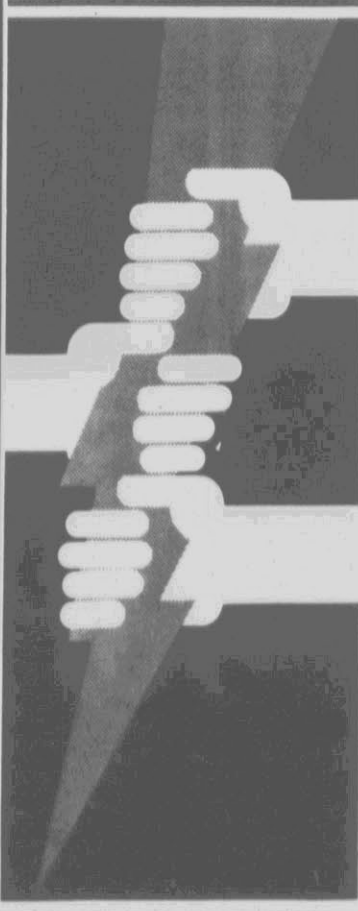

Sponsor Phil Gramm, R-Texas., said "I know the people of America will not accept the cynicism" of Congress touting a war on drugs that it refuses to fund.

Opponent Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said the Senate should repudiate Gramm's "wish list for how he would like to reconstruct the federal budget."

Senators voting yes wanted to take money from certain other programs to fund the war on drugs.

Sanford voted no. Helms voted yes.

THE POWER IS YOURS

In small towns and big cities all across America, public power systems like Greenville Utilities represent local people working together to meet local needs.

Community-owned electric utilities belong to the people they serve. That means local control and consumer protection. Because those who serve you at GUC are your friends and neighbors, they can do a better job of looking out for your interests.

Public power systems operate to provide reliable electric service at the lowest possible cost. And all the benefits of public power remain in the community it serves. All dollars not used to purchase power and operate GUC go to the City of Greenville's general fund. GUC has been able to provide over $7.5 million to the city's general fund over the past five years.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of 1 Samuel, intended to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

SAMUEL AND SAUL

SAMUEL, THE GREAT PROPHET, HAS LED ISRAEL WISELY AND WELL, NOW, IN HIS OLD AGE, THE PEOPLE BEGIN TO WORRY—WHO WILL LEAD THEM WHEN SAMUEL HAS PASSED AWAY?!

NOT EVEN SAMUEL'S TWO SONS ARE GOOD PRIESTS!

THIS IS TRUE! THEY DO EVIL IN THE SIGHT OF THE LORD!

WHAT THEN SHALL WE DO WHEN SAMUEL IS GONE—WHO SHALL LEAD US?

EVEN NOW THE PHILISTINES MOVE TO MAKE WAR UPON US, AND SAMUEL IS TOO OLD!

OTHER PEOPLE HAVE KINGS TO LEAD THEM—KINGS TO FIGHT FOR THEM!

LET US ASK SAMUEL FOR A KING—A KING TO LEAD ISRAEL IN BATTLE!

AND SO, IN HIS HOME AT RAMAH, THE PEOPLE COME TO SAMUEL TO ASK FOR A KING—TO LEAD THEM IN A MANNER IN WHICH NONE OF THE PRIESTS NOR OLD SAMUEL ARE QUALIFIED!

SAMUEL, GIVE US A KING!

LET US HAVE A KING WHO WILL BE JUDGE OVER US!

ISRAEL NEEDS A KING TO FIGHT AGAINST THOSE WHO WOULD DO US EVIL!

Next Week THE LORD REJECTED!

Special Olympics Is Now Year-Round Activity

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Special Olympics has become a year-round activity in Pitt County, with organized practice going on throughout the year and hundreds of participants and volunteers involved.

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department takes major responsibility for the program, but schools, clubs and many other people are involved.

"Once Special Olympics was thought of as a field day in the spring, a chance for special education classes and program participants to come together and vie in some field events," said Connie Sappenfield, special populations coordinator for the parks and recreation department.

"It's still that," she said. "The Spring Games will be held this year on April 14. But it's much more. Other events now include basketball, soccer, tennis, bowling, race walking, swimming and weight lifting."

Mrs. Sappenfield is the full-time recreation staff member assigned to Special Olympics. She is responsible not only for recruiting volunteers, but for scheduling event, soliciting support funds, and coaching some teams.

An Ohio native, she serves Pitt County with the experience of having worked directly with Special Olympics founder Eunice Shriver at the organization's headquarters in Washington, D.C., for many years. Her husband, George, a Special Olympics volunteer in Greenville, has also worked for the international organization.

Training is now a major component of the Special Olympics program. Volunteers — some professional coaches, many not professional but dedicated — prepare participants in all sports. A minimum of eight weeks of training is called for in each event.

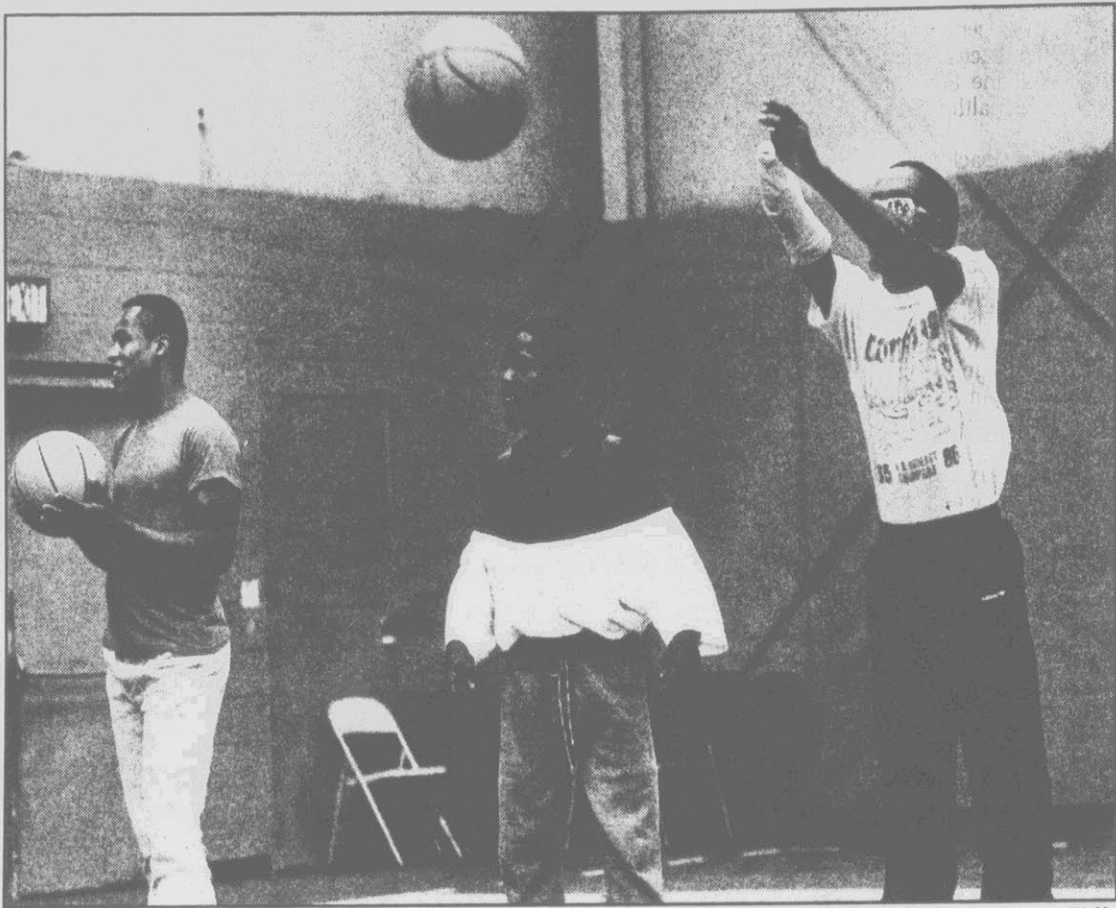

"It's now known," Mrs. Sappenfield said, "that many retarded people, like the rest of society, have great athletic ability that needs to be cultivated. Special Olympics has become a program, not just to give retarded people something fun to do, but a way to encourage and train them for development of their physical abilities." She said eight Special Olympians recently completed the Boston Marathon.

Mrs. Sappenfield is seeking to reach retarded children and adults who are not now enrolled in Special Olympics programs. She asked that anyone knowing of someone who would be a potential participant to contact her at the Greenville Recreation and Parks office, 830-4551.

Events coming up soon include a basketball skills tournament at Elm Street Gymnasium Nov. 4 and a soccer tournament at Elm Street Gymnasium Dec. 1 and Dec. 2. The state basketball tournament is set for Dec. 9-11.

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Anthony Keys, Melvin Brown and Aaron Pickett practice for basketball competition.

Boyfriend Should 'Fess Up'

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is a serious matter that we cannot discuss with anyone here. My boyfriend (I'll call him Jason) has never filed an income tax return. He's paid weekly in cash, and has never reported this to either the state or federal government. He is not rich, and did not intentionally mean to become a tax evader; he just never bothered to file. This has been going on for seven years, and although Jason would like to start filing (we're thinking about marriage), we're afraid of the consequences.

He is willing to pay what he owes in back taxes, but he is afraid of being sent to jail and/or having a criminal record. This has been on our consciences for a long time, so please hurry your advice. — IN DEEP

DEAR IN DEEP: Urge Jason to "fess up" to the IRS and PDQ! He can expect to be penalized for his failure to file, but if he comes forward voluntarily, he will be treated better than if the IRS "catches" him.

DEAR ABBY: For the first time since she was born, my 11-year-old daughter needs something from me that I can't give her. She's started to ask a lot of questions about how her body is changing, some new feelings she's experiencing, and how to get a boy she likes to notice her.

When I was her age, I had the same questions in mind, but I didn't have the nerve to ask my mother.

I'm glad my daughter feels close enough to me to ask, but I'm not comfortable enough to give her any answers. Besides, I'm not even sure I know the right answers.

I suppose I should consider myself lucky. She says some of the "older" girls are talking about birth control!

Abby, will you please steer a mother in the right direction? — TRUSTING YOU

DEAR TRUSTING: It may be too early for your daughter to ask about birth control, but it's not too early to get help from Planned Parenthood.

In more than 800 Planned Parenthood centers across the country, highly trained professionals do a lot more than just provide birth control. They have a variety of educational programs for parents and children to help them discuss sexual issues in an open, comfortable manner. They also may have educational counseling programs just for parents, and others just for teens or pre-teens.

You also may be interested to know that most Planned Parenthood clinics, in addition to providing birth control, offer medical services and testing, counseling and/or referrals for: pregnancy, infertility, sterilization for women and men, abortion, sickle cell anemia, cancer, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, hypertension, diabetes, vaginal infections, prenatal care and menopause. In other words, in many parts of the country, Planned Parenthood is a "one-stop reproductive health shop" for men and women of all ages.

A little-known fact: Planned Parenthood does exactly what its name implies. It not only helps couples prevent having babies they are not ready for, it helps couples with fertility problems, so that they can have the babies they want.

The cost? Only what you can afford to pay. Nobody is turned away because he or she is poor. Call Planned Parenthood today. It's listed in your phone book.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in which you mention "falsies" (the kind some women wear) reminded me of my dear father who had a wonderful sense of humor. His definition of "falsies": twin bluffs! — FRANK H. JANIN, ITASCA, ILL.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling included).

Outerwear Requires Special Winter Care

NEW YORK (AP) — With winter waiting in the wings, here are some practical pointers on how to care for, and shop for, outerwear.

A fur, no matter how costly, will not retain its beauty and versatility without at least a minimum of care. The American Fur Industry suggests hanging your fur on a big, wide hanger to help retain its shape. If the fur is wet, shake it out and hang it to dry away from direct heat. Never put it in a plastic bag or leave it near heat. Don't pin jewelry or flowers on your fur and never brush or comb it.

If you don't have a fur, or need an alternative, a coat or jacket of waterproof fabric is a good choice. Mighty-Mac, which has been making outerwear for more than 75 years, suggests several things to look for when shopping.

Bomber jackets are popular now, but be sure the one you buy is long enough so that it won't ride up past your waist. Two-way zippers and sturdy snaps help keep snow from penetrating. A big grip on the zipper means you can use it without removing gloves or mittens.

The insulation, whether down or synthetic, should be fashioned so that it doesn't shift. There should be big, easily-closed pockets for stowables, plus "handwarmer" pockets that are easy to slide the hands into. Wristbands should be snug and comfortable.

Training Wheels Lead To National Racing Titles

By Steve Vied
The Associated Press

OWENSBORO, Ky. — How young can one be before embarking on a motorcycle racing career? Does 10 years old sound about right? Or 5? Try 2.

That's how old Tommy Hayden was when his father, Earl, put him on a 50cc racing motorcycle equipped with training wheels.

The early start appears to have paid off for Tommy. Last year, at age 10, he won a national championship in the 80cc class for riders ages 7-11.

Tommy isn't the only successful rider in the Hayden family. Eight-year-old Jenny also won a national championship last year in Wisconsin, in the 50cc short-track class.

And 11-year-old Nicky is making his mark on the flat-track scene.

Earl Hayden is a farmer west of Owensboro, but motorcycle racing is one great love in his life. He has transferred that love to his children.

Hayden began racing on flat tracks, as opposed to motocross, when he was a senior in high school, and he did it for 20 years. He hung up his riding leathers in 1985 to devote his time to his children's budding racing careers.

"I tell them they have to set their goals high and dream about it and talk about it if they are going to realize their goals," he says. "I was a hobby when I raced, but it's not with these kids."

The children practice two hours a day, on two tracks in a field next to the family home. Tommy and Nicky each have three racing bikes. Jenny has two.

Tommy came close to being a double national champion last year, but he crashed twice in the 60cc final and had to settle for one national title.

After his first crash in the 60cc final, Tommy started at the back of the pack. But he didn't stay in the rear long. He passed 13 riders in the first turn after the restart.

"I didn't ever let off," Tommy says. "I was fixing to take the lead when the brakes went out and I crashed again."

In the male-dominated world of motorcycle racing, Jenny Hayden is an oddity.

"We said she wasn't going to race," her mother says. "But we told her she could race one time, and then it was one more time. After last year she was supposed to retire, but she came out of retirement."

The possibility of injury is something the parents think about.

"It's always in the back of our minds, but they dress good, with helmets and face shields, boots, leathers and gloves," Hayden says.

The family has been fortunate so far. The only injury has been a broken arm Tommy suffered while practicing.

"You think about it, but to me skateboards are the most dangerous thing a kid can ride," Rose says.

"And this is a family thing," she adds. "We're all together. One reason we stay involved is because we all enjoy it."

Orthopedic Surgeon Says Exercise Helps Backache

NEW YORK (AP) — Getting out of bed in the morning is an agonizing experience for many low back pain sufferers, but fitness specialists recommend a way to get them going — muscle-stretching exercises in bed.

"As long as no back spasms are present, with pain shooting down the legs, I try to get my outpatients into light exercise as soon as they can," says Dr. Vincent Moriarty, an orthopedic surgeon and clinical instructor at the State University of New York Health Sciences Center in Brooklyn.

For many, backache is most acute in the mornings when climbing out of bed. "Exercise is the only way to prevent backache and the only way to cure it," he says.

The bed-borne exercises, developed by exercise and physiology expert Frank Latella, of Port Chester, N.Y., are designed to strengthen and stretch the hamstring, buttocks and abdomen, as well as lower back muscles.

Moriarty says that a good mattress can make a difference for both sleeping and exercise. "A mattress should be firm and offer the support to keep the spine from slumping or sagging," he says.

Marion Artinger, a furniture designer and consultant to ARCO Chemical Company, says mattresses made of high density polyurethane foam (1.8 pounds or more) provide excellent deep-down support.

Both Moriarty and Latella recommend that people with back problems consult their physicians before starting the exercise program.

Latella says that "like any exercise, the workout should be preceded by a warmup."

"First rock your head gently forward and backward, then side to side on the pillow. The action stimulates movement in the cervical vertebrae (neck) and loosens the adjacent muscle systems."

This should be followed by a series of limbering maneuvers, he says, beginning with relaxed, sustained total-body stretches.

"Stretch only to the point of mild, but relaxed tension. Hold for 20 to 30 seconds," he says. "If you experience pain, you're stretching too much. If your normal breathing is inhibited, you are overdoing it as well. Easing up on the stretch should let you breathe naturally again."

The fitness expert says the following workout should take about 10 to 15 minutes. In each case, the lesser number is for beginners:

Leg hugs — Lying flat on your back, draw one leg up slightly. Place both hands behind the knee and "hug" the leg toward your chest 10 to 20 times.

Curl ups — Still flat on your back, point your toes as far as you can, then curl them. With the toes still curled, lift your leg 8 inches off the mattress and hold for 10 seconds. Repeat 10-20 times. Repeat with the other leg.

Side leg lifts — Lying on your side, lift the upper leg 8 inches and hold for 10 seconds. Repeat 10-20 times. Turn over and do the same with the other leg.

Hamstring stretch — Drop your left leg over the edge of the bed with the foot touching the floor. Meanwhile, stretch the right leg straight on the bed. Stretch your hamstrings by bending the right ankle up and straightening the knee, and slowly bending and reaching forward toward the knee for a count of 25-30. Then switch to the other leg.

Hip lifts — With both legs hanging over the edge of the bed, straighten your left leg. At the same time, raise your left hip off the mattress. Repeat 10-20 times and switch to the other leg and hip.

Bendovers — Lying back with legs apart and feet firmly on the floor, slowly bend forward from the waist, reaching as full a range of motion as possible without pain. With each exercise, your head will get closer and closer to the floor.

"Even healthy patients can benefit from this morning constitutional in bed," says Moriarty. "The exercises make you feel stronger and less stiff in the joints."

Moriarty and Latella both recommend that when sleeping, those prone to backache lie either on their sides with knees drawn up — the traditional fetal position — or on their backs with a pillow under the head and another under the knees.

For those who can sleep only on their stomachs, the surgeon advises placing a pillow under the abdomen to keep the spine straight.

L.A. Hopes To Prove It Belongs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers are hoping to use the words of an opponent to write another improbable finish. Designated hitter Don Baylor said Oakland wanted to play the New York Mets in the World Series because the Athletics wanted to beat the best team in the National League.

The Dodgers beat the Mets 6-0 in Game 7 Wednesday night for the NL pennant and will host the first game of the Series on Saturday.

"We're past the point of looking for respect," Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia said. "If you don't have respect by the time you get to the World Series, you won't get it. It doesn't matter what people say. We might not have the best team talentwise, but we had the best team."

Several Dodgers admit they may not have the best team, they just don't like hearing about it from the opposition.

The Mets rallied to win Game 1 with three runs in the ninth inning off Orel Hershiser and reliever Jay Howell.

The next day, Mets pitcher David Cone wrote a first-person article for the New York Daily News and said Hershiser was "lucky" to shut out the Mets for eight innings and Howell looked like "a high school pitcher."

The Dodgers used the article as a source of inspiration and beat Cone 6-3 in Game 2.

In Game 7, Hershiser proved luck had nothing to do with it by pitching a five-hit shutout.

The Dodgers will need that kind of pitching to shut down the powerful A's who swept Boston in the American League playoffs and won 104 games during the season.

Rookie Tim Lincecum is expected to open the 85th World Series against Oakland's Dave Stewart, 21-12 with a 3.23 earned run average.

Belcher won Games 2 and 5 in the NL playoffs and was the first rookie to win two games in the playoffs since the format was started in 1969.

He finished the regular season 12-6 and won nine of his last 11 decisions.

The Dodgers had an informal workout Thursday and Manager Tommy Lasorda discussed his pitching plans with coach Ron Perranoski.

Although it wasn't officially announced, the Dodgers are expected to start Hershiser in Game 2 against the A's Storm Davis and John Tudor in Game 3 against former Dodger Bob Welch, 17-9.

The Dodgers, Mets and A's made a three-way deal last winter and the Dodgers ended up with Howell, Jesse Orosco and shortstop Alfredo Griffin. Welch joined the A's in the deal.

"We hated to give up Bob Welch," Lasorda said. "But we needed help in the bullpen. Griffin helped solidify our defense and Orosco and Howell gave us a solid bullpen."

Hershiser, the playoff MVP, also started Games 1 and 3 and got a save in Game 4. He pitched 24 2/3 innings to set a playoff record.

Dave Stewart laughs it up during a practice Wednesday

A Close ECU-FSU Game Is But A Distant Memory

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Back in 1983, East Carolina and Florida State put on one of the most exciting football games of the season. It ended when Florida State recovered a fumble by East Carolina quarterback Kevin Ingram as the Pirates seemed headed for a go-ahead touchdown in the final minutes of the game.

Florida State escaped that game with a 47-46 victory and went on to be one of the top teams in the country that year.

East Carolina went on to lose close games to Florida and Miami, Fla., that year — the only three losses the Pirates suffered that year. Both of those were also close decisions that weren't decided until the final seconds of play. Florida, too, ended up high in the national rankings and Miami won the national championship.

For East Carolina, it was a bittersweet season. Finishing 8-3, the Pirates were ranked in the final Associated Press poll, but were overlooked by the bowls as other teams gained berths and ECU stayed at home.

Since then, the Pirates haven't had a winning season and Florida State, currently ranked fifth in the country, has the chance to insure that 1988 will be another lowing season for ECU come Saturday afternoon.

East Carolina and the Seminoles meet at 2 p.m. in Doak Campbell Stadium — and that may, oddly enough, be a plus for the Pirates. Since Bobby Bowden took over at Florida State in 1976, he's only 7-5-1 on his own home field in afternoon football games.

The series will reach its sixth game with the contest, and Florida State has won each of them — all but the 1983 meeting by lopsided scores. The Seminoles won the opening

Baylor's Remarks Stirring Things Up

By Scott Ostler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Dear Oakland:

We're sorry. We, the people of Los Angeles, would like to extend our humble apologies for sending our Dodgers into the World Series against your awesome A's.

Don Baylor, the A's team spokesman, must feel like that suave guy in the wristwatch commercial on TV. The suave guy's adoring wife gives him a watch for his birthday. Suave guy unwraps the package, turns up his nose and sniffs, "I was hoping for a Longines."

We know Baylor and his boys were hoping for the New York Mets. But the Mets decided to go on vacation early, and the Dodgers are the best we could come up with on short notice.

We went over the fine print in the baseball rules and there just aren't

ECU Set For 88-89

More Experience Back For Bucs

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A year ago, Mike Steele began his first practice as East Carolina's new basketball coach. And he greeted a group of players, who, except for two, were entering their first year of collegiate play.

The only two veterans he found were Jeff Kelly, a 5-9 junior guard, and Reed Lose, a 6-3 sophomore guard. Between them, there was little experience and only about three points a game.

The rest of the cast were newcomers, including a couple of walk-ons. One of those walk-ons, 6-3 swingman Kenny Murphy, went on to make the squad and the Colonial Athletic Association All-Rookie team.

Lady Bucs Set To Go

Looking To Erase Disappointment

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Last year at this time, East Carolina women's basketball coach Pat Pierson entered her first year with the Lady Pirates optimistic, only to see the season crumble before her.

The Lady Pirates, usually among the top teams in the Colonial Athletic Association, finished only 2-10 in the league, in sixth place, and had an 8-20 overall record.

But Pierson approaches her second year with renewed optimism and hopes for an improved record this year. "I think we can have a winning season," she said on the eve of the start of preseason practice.

Pierson and the Lady Pirates will take to the hardwood in Minges Coliseum at midnight Saturday morning, becoming one of the first teams to officially begin practice.

Pierson feels that the Lady Pirates are still in a transition time, with the first real recruits of her tenure coming in now. They will be joined by eight returning players, including one who sat out last year with an injury, 6-1 forward Sarah Gray of Washington, N.C.

The returning players include 6-2 sophomore center Sandra Grace, 5-4 junior guard Irish Hamilton, 6-2 senior center Rose Miller, 5-7 soph-

Carlester Crumpler is one of the big reasons Rose is 6-0

Crumpler Learned Key Lesson Early

Grades Come Before The Glory

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Long before Rose High's Carlester T. Crumpler learned the intricacies of playing defensive end, he had a much more important lesson instilled in him by his parents.

"Grades come first. That's something my mom always stressed," Crumpler said. "If you don't have the grades, you have to give up something."

"She said it every time I got a report card. It's something she always says and to this day she would rather me get an academic scholarship than an athletic scholarship."

And in an era when student-athletes often fall short of their academic responsibilities, Crumpler's story is a change of pace.

A two-year starter at defensive end for Rose and one of the most highly-recruited high school football players in the state, Crumpler, a 6-5, 210-pounder, was an honor roll student last year who even found time between his summer workouts to attend a math and science camp.

He also happens to be the son of Carlester Crumpler, one of the most heralded football players in East Carolina history who starred for the Pirates during the early 1970s.

Added pressure?
"I think that perhaps, and he's mentioned it himself, if he had played the same position then perhaps it would be different," his father said. "But since he plays mostly on the defensive side of the line, at least until this year, it really hasn't made much difference."

But the elder Crumpler made quite a name for himself during his playing days. He still holds the individual ECU rushing records for both a career (2,889 yards) and a season (1,309 yards). Following college, Crumpler went on to play for the National Football League's Buffalo Bills.

"The things that my dad accomplished make me want to do well also," the younger Crumpler said. "He played a position that was dominant, a glamour position."

"We were talking the other night that maybe I could make all-East or maybe all-state. I might not be an All-American, but that's all right."

Rose Gets Forfeit Win In Soccer

Rose High School's soccer team was awarded a forfeit victory over Wilson Beddingfield Thursday. Beddingfield was unable to field a team because of a lack of sufficient players and had to forfeit the game. Rose returns to action on Tuesday, hosting Kinston.

Junior High School Football Roundup

ROBERSONVILLE — Bethel-Wellcome Middle School outpointed Robersonville Junior High, 28-22, in football action Thursday. Isaac Barrett scored the first B-W touchdown on a 25-yard run while Dedrick Staton added another on an 80-yard pass from Jimmy Rouse. Jonathan Blow then scored the final two touchdowns for B-W on runs of 34 and 18 yards. He also added two two-point points after touchdown.

E.B. Aycock handed Jacksonville a 20-7 loss in a junior high football game Thursday.

Dwight Sheppard had a 45-yard and a 37-yard touchdown run while Montez Barrett had a three-yard scoring run. Mitch Jones added the two-point conversion after Barrett's run.

Aycock improves to 2-1 overall and returns to action at Wilson Fike Thursday.

Junior Varsity Football Roundup

VANCEBORO — West Craven High School's junior varsity snapped D.H. Conley's 16-game winning streak in football Thursday night, capturing a 17-14 victory.

Conley fumbled the ball three times in the game and West Craven was able to convert all three into touchdowns.

Conley's scores came on a one-yard run by Brian Smith and a two-yard run by Stuart Roach. Roach also scored the two-point conversion after Smith's score.

The loss drops Conley to 6-1 on the year, 3-1 against Coastal Conference competition.

The Baby Vikes travel to Greene Central on Thursday.

BETHEL — Lamont Forbes ran for 193 yards and three touchdowns to lead North Pitt past Farmville Central, 34-6, in a high school JV football game Thursday.

Forbes opened the scoring for the Panthers, returning a fumble 64 yards for a touchdown. Chris Sheppard ran in the two-point conversion.

In the second quarter, Chris Sawyer caught a 33-yard pass from John Cayton. The two-point conversion try failed.

Forbes scored his second touchdown shortly thereafter, going in from 43 yards away. Shon Daniels caught a pass from Cayton for the two-point conversion to make it 22-0.

In the fourth quarter, Forbes scored on a 95-yard run. The run for the conversion failed.

Farmville avoided the shutout when Zimmie Coward caught a 10-yard pass from Troy Puryear to make it 28-6. The conversion try failed.

North Pitt's final score came on a 61-yard run by Daniels, but the kick failed.

Conley Runners Defeat Hunt In Meet

WILSON — D.H. Conley's boys and girls cross country teams both came away with a victory in a meet with Wilson Hunt Thursday.

In the boys' meet, Conley defeated Hunt 24-35, led by first place finisher Adrain McLawhorn, who covered the course in 17 minutes, 21 seconds.

In the girls' meet, Conley shut out Hunt, taking a 15-48 win. Gretta Harris took first place for Conley in 20:27, and the Valkyries won the next four places to accomplish the shutout.

Other Conley finishers were: Hope Harrington (2nd, 22:05); Kimberly Colson (3rd, 22:17); Tricia Smith (4th, 22:19); Stacy Burhans (5th, 24:34); Julie Smith (6th, 26:01); Wendy Dixon (9th, 28:00); and Kim Pakowski (11th, 30:32).

Conley's boys are now 10-2, while the girls are 9-2. Conley returns to action on Monday, hosting New Bern.

Jockey Dies In Belmont Spill

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Venezia, a jockey since 1964, had talked about retiring at the end of this year.

In the fifth race on Thursday's card at Belmont Park, the 43-year-old Venezia was killed.

Venezia, the rider of more than 2,000 winners in more than 21,000 races, went down when his mount, Mr. Walter K., broke a leg. Venezia was then kicked in the face by Drums in the Night.

Robbie Davis, the rider of the other horse, was taken to a hospital for treatment of shock. Venezia's mount, a 3-year-old gelding, was humanely destroyed.

Venezia was the first jockey killed at a New York Racing Association track since March 29, 1982, when Amado Credidio died when he was thrown over the top of a horse onto the ground and into the path of several other horses in a race at Aqueduct.

Mr. Walter K. broke his right foreleg going down the backstretch of a 1 1/16-mile allowance race. Venezia attempted to pull up the gelding, then went off the horse to his left and fell cross-wise on the track, directly in the path of Drums in the Night.

"I think he was dead when the ambulance technician got to him," Dr. Leo Skolnik, the examining NYRA physician, said. "He was apparently kicked in the face. He had no pulse, no respiration and his pupils were dilated and fixed."

"I don't see how a fall to the ground could have sustained this kind of injury," Dr. Manuel Gilman, the steward for The Jockey Club, said that Mr. Walter K. "was sound, had been running all year and never had any problems with his legs, according to Dr. (Theodore) Hill," the examining NYRA veterinarian.

"The horse bobbed twice, and when his head came up, he (Venezia) bailed out the left side. The horse will be sent to Cornell University for autopsy."

The last four races of Thursday's card were canceled. Racing was to resume today.

Venezia, a native of Brooklyn and resident of Rockville Centre, N.Y., is survived by his wife, Helene, a son, Michael, and a daughter, Alison.

Venezia rode his first winner in the sixth race of his career — Julia Bellerina on March 19, 1964 — and that year he was the leading apprentice rider in the United States.

Through 1987, Venezia had ridden in 21,423 races and had ridden 2,287 winners. His mounts had earned $32,804,870.

Among his stakes victories were the Alabama on White Star Line in 1978, the Gotham on Air Forbes Won in 1982, the Jim Dandy on Father Hogan in 1976 and Music of Time in 1977, and the Sanford on Az Igazi in 1973. Venezia began working on the backstretch at Belmont Park at age 15, then became an exercise rider for trainer Eddie O'Brien.

Last Time: A's Battled A's

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In 1974, Oakland played Los Angeles in the World Series and the Athletics did most of their slugging in the clubhouse.

The A's beat the Dodgers 4-1 in the first all-California Series, the last of Oakland's three consecutive championships and the last World Series for Dodgers manager Walter Alston.

The day before the first game, pitchers Rollie Fingers and Blue Moon Odom punched each other out. Fingers need stitches and Odom ended up with a fat lip.

There were verbal wars, too.

Reggie Jackson and Vida Blue did little to conceal their contempt for team owner Charley Finley and the A's mini-dynasty was in the process of crumbling.

Alvin Dark, in his first season as manager, found peace by reading the Bible.

The World Series is exclusive property of California again this season as the Dodgers host the powerful Athletics in Game 1 on Saturday.

Catcher Steve Yeager started four of the five games for the Dodgers in 1974 and regards it a better team than this year's National League champions.

"We had Davey Lopes, Steve Garvey, Ron Cey, Jimmy Wynn and Bill Buckner," Yeager said. "That's some pretty good hitting."

Hitting, however, was not dominant in '74. The Dodgers hit .228 and the Athletics .211.

The A's used only five pitchers — Blue, Odom, Fingers, Ken Holtzman and Jim "Catfish" Hunter.

"The pitching was great in that Series and I think it will be the deciding factor this year, too," said Dodgers coach Bill Russell, who played shortstop for Los Angeles in 1974.

The A's won the first game 3-2 at Dodger Stadium and Hunter, a 25-game winner, got the last out for the save.

Don Sutton came back to beat Oakland 3-2 in the second game, striking out nine in eight innings.

"(Orel) Hershiser reminds me a lot of Sutton," Russell said. "He changes speeds and doesn't make big mistakes."

In Game 2, Joe Rudi hit a two-run single in the ninth inning and Alston brought in reliever Mike Marshall. After Gene Tenace struck out, Dark inserted pinch-runner Herb Washington, a world-class sprinter signed by Finley as a pinch-running specialist. But he never got a chance to show his speed as Marshall picked him off.

"That was our highlight of the Series," Russell said.

The Series moved back to Oakland and the Athletics won three straight behind Hunter, Holtzman and Odom.

All but Game 4, which Oakland won 5-2, were settled by 3-2 scores.

To highlight the lack of hitting in the Series, second baseman Dick Green was selected Most Valuable Player for his defense. At bat, he was 0-for-13 with one run batted in.

"There's really no rivalry between the two teams and that Series was so long ago it means nothing in relationship to this year," Russell said.

Buttons Didn't Help Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Despite all the rhetoric about peace and harmony and "just another ballgame," World War III could break out Saturday around 1:30 p.m. CDT.

Last year, the hot item on the Notre Dame campus before the Miami game was buttons reminding one and all of the 58-7 pasting the Hurricanes handed Gerry Faust in his final game as head coach in 1985. The Irish needed more than buttons. They lost 24-0.

This year's revenge weapons are shirts trumpeting the following messages: "Once and for all," "Hate Night" and "Catholics Vs. Convicts," referring to Miami's off-field problems in past years.

The Notre Dame faithful have been waiting impatiently since that infamous November day in 1985 to get Miami in the shadow of the Golden Dome — the last two games were in Miami — and the time has finally come.

Officially, it's No. 1 Miami — 4-0, defending national champions, winners of 36 consecutive regular-season games, owners of an overall 16-game winning streak and 20 straight on the road — against No. 4 Notre Dame — 5-0 for the first time since 1980.

Miami, the team of the '80s whose 56-9 record is the best in college football over the last 5 1/2 years. And Notre Dame, whose 664-202-40 mark is the best ever.

Just another game?

"I think of this game as if it were Michigan, Wisconsin or Missouri (Miami's last three victims)," cornerback Donald Ellis says. "I think a lot of people blow Notre Dame out of proportion just because it's Notre Dame, and I'm not about to do that. When you step out on that football field, it's just another football game against another football team."

"Neither one of us were really involved too much with the '85 game when all the hatred began," Miami quarterback Steve Walsh adds. "So I'm really not concerned about all the hype that their fans are putting on this game. It's just another big ballgame for us."

Well, sure, you wouldn't expect the Hurricanes to be all that excited. They've won the last four meetings with Notre Dame by a combined 133-20 score. The revenge factor is on the other side.

"It's just another game for us," Notre Dame quarterback Tony Rice says. "There's no revenge because it's a new team and a new year."

And linebacker Ned Bolcar says, "People talk about hating Miami. I think that's mostly because of the press. There's no hatred between me and Miami."

"It's not Miami's fault they beat us 56-0 (58-7) and 24-0 the last couple of years. That's their job. If people are upset at Miami, fine, but maybe they should be upset at Notre Dame."

But Bolcar also remembers the recent phone call from a friend back home in Phillipsburg, N.J., who "said he hasn't slept yet this week. A lot of people are calling. One guy I know called and was crying on the phone." And one Notre Dame student called Miami coach Jimmy Johnson before the season, saying, "I can't wait until October. I hate you now."

Johnson, for his part, has been shrugging off questions about the 1985 game. He has always denied that Miami intentionally rolled it up on Notre Dame.

"I don't want it to become more than a football game," he says of Saturday's rematch. "We've been in front of very vocal crowds before. It was a pretty vocal crowd when we were down 30-14 at Michigan last month (Miami rallied to win 31-30). I don't see the crowd being a factor other than just getting adrenalin in our veins.

"During the 1984 game in South Bend (Miami won 31-13), I felt as much electricity in the atmosphere as any game I've been around. I'm sure it will be as emotional a game as there will be all season."

"But Notre Dame is a class school. It's respected throughout the country as one of the elite, if not THE elite, not only as an athletic power, but as a great academic institution. It's a class institution with class people, and I'm sure they'll react in a class manner."

But just another game? "I think we're a little bit more emotional than usual," Walsh conceded earlier in the week. "Yes, it's practice as usual, but I think guys realize that there's a lot of hype around this ballgame and we're really excited to get the game started."

And Bolcar says there has been "an air of seriousness" to Notre Dame's practices "that might have been missing. We've gone back to the little drills we did in the spring and summer, the coaches are yelling a little more."

"We're doing pushups when they (the scout team) complete a pass. Don't be surprised if Miami catches a pass and 11 guys drop to the ground and start doing pushups."

Bucs Are Striving

The Pirates were short — freshman Stanley Love, 6-5, ended up at center, while 6-3 Gus Hill, a sophomore playing for the first time after two years sidelined with injuries, was at one forward. Murphy generally played the other spot while Kelly and Lose worked in the backcourt.

Now, a year later, Steele is set to begin his second year at the helm of the Pirate ship, and at least he doesn't have to cast about for experience and starters. All five of last year's starters return, plus a starter from the 1987 team, Blue Edwards, who sat out last year under suspension by the University.

Edwards, a 6-5 swingman, was one of the top players in the conference two years ago, and is expected to be one of the stars of the league this year.

One other veteran of last year's team, 5-6 sophomore guard Jimmy Hinton returns and is expected to vie for the starting role at point guard. In several games last year, he earned starting time.

Joining them will be one junior college transfer and five freshmen. The junior college transfer is Kevin Staples, a 6-5 forward.

The freshmen include 6-9 center Brooks Bryant, 6-1 guard Robin House (a product of Greenville Christian Academy), 6-7 forward/center Casey Mote, 6-2 guard Jeff Perlich, and 6-2 guard Jay Scherer.

Not that everything is totally rosy. There are some negatives too.

"We have a lot of new kids, but we have seven guys returning for a change," Steele said. "We need to get everyone comfortable with each other during the early weeks of practice."

"It's a positive thing for us to have these people returning this year, something we didn't have last year."

"But we still have a lot of work to do."

Last year, the Pirates put together an 8-20 record and finished 3-12 in the CAA, in eighth place. And, Steele notes, most of the preseason basketball magazines he's seen are again picking the Pirates last in the league.

"But that doesn't bother me," he said. "We know the conference better this year, whereas last year we were totally new. And we know what our players can do — so we look at the season with cautious optimism."

Last year, the rumor floated around that none of last year's starters would take the game for the opening tap-off this year — that a whole new crew would be out there. Steele says this isn't true.

"If we started now, five of the seven returning people would be on the floor. I have no idea what our newcomers can do right now. But I do know that all of them have worked hard in preseason workouts."

Having some experience, some size and some depth, not to mention three seniors, gives Steele hopes for a better year. "I don't know how many games we're going to win, but I know that we're going to be a better team. If we play hard, with enthusiasm and with intelligence, the wins will come," Steele said.

Having 14 games at home for a change is another positive for the team, the coach added.

Johnson To Get New Met Pact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Davey Johnson will apparently get another chance to manage the New York Mets to a World Series.

Johnson, whose future has been uncertain since the end of the 1987 season, will be offered a new two-year contract and is expected to accept a source close to the team told the Associated Press on Thursday.

Johnson has won 90 or more games in each of his first five seasons with New York, the only manager in the history of the National League to accomplish the feat.

Los Angeles beat the Mets 6-0 Wednesday night in Game 7 behind Orel Hershiser's five-hitter to win the National League pennant.

"I don't want to leave with this bad taste in my mouth," Johnson said.

As soon as Howard Johnson struck out to end the Mets' season, speculation started on the manager's status.

The Mets had the best record in the league (100-60) and beat the Dodgers in 10 of 11 games.

Baines Ties For Lead In Pickings

Woody Peele

Tom Baines has charged up from behind to tie Vickie Spivey for first place this week in our standings.

Baines posted the best record last week, 11-1, to draw even with Spivey with 54-16 records. I'm holding down third at 51-19, while Tom Morris and Tim Chandler are knotted for fourth at 50-20. Greg Laudick continues to hold down the last spot with a 45-25 record.

There are a few games that can shake up things this week.

My high school picks last weekend came out with only four of seven correct. That brings me to 34-17 on the season.

There are a couple of interesting games on this week's slate, and the panel will look at Farmville Central-North Pitt.

Ayden-Grifton comes off an open date to face Greene Central. The Rams were humbled by North Pitt last week. They moved the ball well, but couldn't get into the end zone. Ayden-Grifton, after the week off, still has some injury problems, but they should be enough. Ayden-Grifton is the choice here, 22-7.

West Craven visits Conley in another key Coastal Conference game. The Vikings are building some respect for themselves again this year, but they will have to keep on winning to earn a playoff spot and it will get no easier. This is their first real test in the league, and, sorry, I've got to go with the Eagles. West Craven to win, 21-14.

Finally, Rose High School goes on the road to Kinston. The Vikings haven't won and the Rampants haven't lost. Did the Rampants learn something from last week's escape at Beddingfield. One hopes so. Otherwise, it would be another long night. Nobody would like to see Rose fall more than interim Kinston coach Dave Bumgarner, who used to coach Rose.

But not this time, Rose to roll, 35-7.

In other games in the area, it will be Chocowinity over Columbia, 14-6; Jamesville over Belhaven, 8-6; Northampton East over Roanoke, 24-8; Hertford County over Williamston, 48-0; and Washington over North Lenoir, 35-7.

Farmville Central and North Pitt both need a victory to keep their playoff hopes going. The loser won't be out of it, by any means, but will be hampered. The winner will have an inside track. North Pitt was impressive last week against Greene Central, while Farmville is still trying to recover from injuries.

Our panel is going with North Pitt, but only by a 4-2 margin. My pick is North Pitt by 21-14.

East Carolina heads to Florida where it will meet the fifth-ranked Seminoles of Florida State. Bobby Bowden is only 7-5-1 in afternoon games in Doak Campbell Stadium. East Carolina has played well against two ranked teams, but still come up short.

This week — the panel goes down the line with the Seminoles. No upset here. My pick is FSU by 48-14.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over Duke; Wake Forest over Maryland; Virginia over Louisville; Penn State over Syracuse; Washington State over Arizona; South Carolina over Georgia Tech; N.C. State over North Carolina; Nebraska over Oklahoma State; Ohio State over Purdue and Miami, Fla., over Notre Dame.

Watson Has High Hopes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mike Sullivan had the lead. Corey Pavin had an ace. And Tom Watson had some high hopes.

"The last time I was seven under (par) was eight years ago, in the second round of the 1980 Southern Open," Sullivan said after scattering seven birdies and an eagle across his card in a round of 63.

Then he paused, smiled, and added:

"I went on to win that tournament," said Sullivan, who scored his lone PGA Tour victory in that event.

He chipped in twice Thursday in the seven-under-par effort that provided him with a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $600,000 Texas Open.

Pavin also had an eagle, a hole-in-one, in a 64 that left him one stroke back.

"It woke me up," Pavin said of the 172-yard 7-iron shot that ran into the cup on the second hole at the Oak Hills Country Club course, a 6,576-yard layout that yielded exceptionally low scoring in the warm sunshine and gentle breezes.

Watson, who broke a three-season non-winning string in the Nabisco Championship on this course last year, had to overcome a pair of three-putt bogeys in a four-under-par 66.

"It was a good start. I hope it continues," said Watson, who needs a high finish in this year's $2-million Nabisco event, which will be played next month at Pebble Beach, Calif.

The big-money tournament, by far the richest on the tour, takes only the top 30 money-winners from the current season.

Although the defending champion, Watson must meet the top-30 qualification and currently ranks 36th.

Pirates To Face The Seminoles

game 63-7 in 1980. The 1982 game saw FSU take 56-17 win. In 1984, the Seminoles again won, 47-17, and last year, in the only game played in ECU's Ficklen Stadium, it was 44-3.

Florida State has gained over 500 yards and 44 points in each of the games and averages 575 yards and 51.4 points, while holding ECU to an average of 282.4 yards and 18 points.

Still, Bowden appears worried as the Seminoles enter the game. "East Carolina is a better football team than Georgia Southern (which lost 28-10 after leading 10-7 in the third quarter)," Bowden said. Quarterback Chip Ferguson passed for 247 yards in the game and FSU scored 21 points in the final period to pull out the win.

"Emotion is such a key and it's hard to get that when you are heavily favored," Bowden continued. "We are familiar with what ECU can do and at this level of football, upsets happen every day. They played South Carolina a great game. They were behind 3-0 and drove to USC's goal line and fumbled on the three and that cost them the game. They are a capable team and you can be sure that this will be an important week of preparation."

Bowden is very familiar with ECU and not just from the last five meetings. After the 1983 season, Bowden hired away ECU's offensive coordinator Art Baker, who returned after the 1984 season to become head coach.

But while things have continued to be sunny for Bowden, they have been cloudy for Baker, who has yet to see a winning year with the Pirates. ECU came within one game of having a winning season last year, but came into this game with a 1-5 record — the mirror-image of FSU's 5-1 mark.

"Georgia Southern really got after them, and that's probably got Bobby good and mad," Baker said. "He'll probably try to take it out on us."

Baker said he believes FSU has the best combination of big people and skill talent. "They have not had to play well, except maybe against Michigan State, in their wins," Baker said. "They have three tailbacks anyone of whom could start for anyone in the country."

Baker was referring primarily to Sammie Smith, who's rushed for 366 yards thus far, along with back-up Dexter Carter, who has 158 yards. Both, however, have been injured and may see only limited play in the game.

"Smith is a true Heisman candidate, and (cornerback) Deion Sanders is one of the national leaders in punt returns," Baker pointed out. Sanders, with a 21.5 yard per return average, is second among Division I-A players.

Ferguson, who has hit on 64 percent of his passes, stands ninth in the country in passing efficiency. He's hit on 81 of 130 for 1,204 yards — over 200 per game.

"Bowden isn't afraid to take chances," Baker said, pointing to Bowden's call for a fake punt deep in his own territory against Clemson. The game was tied at the time and time was running out. The fake punt gained 78 yards and FSU got a field goal out of it to win the game 24-21.

East Carolina, meanwhile, has been up and down on both offense and defense and hasn't been able to get the two of them together — at least on the up-side of the scale.

After routing Division I-AA Tennessee Tech, 52-13, the Pirates fell to Virginia Tech, 27-16 — the only game Tech has won. But against South Carolina, the Pirates played well defensively, but lost 17-0, with South Carolina's final score coming only in the final seconds of the game.

Against Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana, the offense was sharp but the defense floundered. Southern Miss won, 45-42, scoring in the final stages of the game. Southwestern also won, 48-36, as again the Pirate defense crumbled in the second half.

Then, last week against West Virginia, the second nationally ranked team played by ECU, the Pirates again played well defensively, but couldn't seem to come up with the right stuff on offense, falling 30-10. ECU coaches counted seven passes that were simply dropped — which would have gained over 100 yards. Two of them were in the end zone for touchdowns. ECU also missed two field goals.

Tim James is the top runner for the Pirates with 305 yards while Reggie McKinney had 264. Charlie Libretto has hit on 39 of 77 passes for 611 yards while Travis Hunter has made good on 29 of 61 for 416.

Baker, however, said he was not sure which of the two would start at quarterback this Saturday.

The top receiver is Walter Wilson, who has 15 catches for 268 yards. Al Whiting has caught 17 for 194 yards. Following the Florida State game, the Pirates return home for their final two games in Ficklen Stadium in 1988. They host Syracuse next Saturday and Miami on Oct. 29.

UCLA, USC Putting 5-0 Records On Line In Pac-10

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While Miami and Notre Dame clear up some of the picture on the national level, the West Coast also will be the focus of some important action in college football Saturday.

Second-ranked UCLA and third-ranked Southern Cal — two unbeaten headed toward a showdown for the Pac-10 title and a Rose Bowl berth — put their 5-0 records on the line against league opponents.

The Bruins travel to Berkeley to meet California and the Trojans host No. 16 Washington in two big Pac-10 games.

Both Los Angeles schools boast 5-0 records, with Southern Cal leading in the Conference standings at 3-0 by virtue of having played one more league opponent than UCLA.

Washington, 4-1, is the third Top-20 team the Trojans will face in their first six games. They beat then-No. 3 Oklahoma 23-7 three weeks ago and No. 18 Oregon 42-14 last Saturday.

UCLA is off to its best start since 1980 and has held control of the No. 2 spot in the national rankings since it beat Nebraska 41-28 on Sept. 10.

On a national level, the weekend's biggest game will be played in South Bend, where top-ranked Miami plays No. 4 Notre Dame.

Elsewhere, it's East Carolina at No. 5 Florida; No. 10 Oklahoma State at No. 7 Nebraska; No. 8 South Carolina at Georgia Tech; Kansas State at No. 9 Oklahoma; Duke at No. 11 Clemson; New Mexico at No. 14 Wyoming; No. 15 Michigan at Iowa; No. 17 Arkansas at Texas; Minnesota at No. 18 Indiana; Kentucky at No. 19 LSU and No. 20 Florida at Vanderbilt.

UCLA, which has beaten California in 16 straight games, boasts the conference's highest-scoring team at 43 points a game, one of its best running backs, Eric Ball, and one of the nation's best quarterbacks, Troy Aikman.

Cal's record of 3-2 is the Bears' best start since 1982. But their victories have all been against so-so non-conference opponents — Pacific, Kansas and San Jose State — and they have lost both Pac-10 starts, including last week's 44-13 rout at Washington State.

Unless the Bears contain Aikman, the same thing could happen again.

"He's definitely as good as any I've seen in a long time," said Cal's defensive coordinator, Kent Baer, who compared Aikman to Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon as a college player at Brigham Young.

The matchup between Southern Cal and Washington is a crucial one, according to Trojans Coach Larry Smith.

"Its pivotal for us because we feel Washington is one of the strongest teams in the conference," Smith said Tuesday at his weekly meeting with reporters.

"It's pivotal for Washington because they already have one Pac-10 loss. I think we're going to have to play our best team game — offense, defense, kicking — of the year. We can't have a below-par performance in any one of the three categories."

Smith said he is concerned that his club might slip into the doldrums, which seems to happen to many college teams at midseason.

"You only have to look at the papers on Sunday morning or watch Saturday afternoon on television and you see more turnovers, more missed assignments, more mistakes," he said. "These players have been practicing football now for about the last 2 1/2 months and have played five games. They get physically and mentally tired."

Miami, while trailing the overall series 13-6-1, has had the best of Notre Dame recently, including a 58-7 rout in 1985. Last year, the Hurricanes won by a 24-0 score.

L.A. Apologizing It's In Series?

any loopholes. There is no "best team" clause that would allow the Dodgers to bow out and let the Mets jump in. You're stuck with the boys in blue.

I did hear a rumor that the commissioner is considering doubleheaders this Saturday and Sunday so your A's can end this fall classic and be on the first tee at the Maui CC Monday morning.

The Dodgers will appreciate a quick death, too, I'm sure. They don't want to suffer unduly.

To paraphrase Kirk Gibson, the Dodgers are dumb but they ain't stupid. They realize they're in deep doo-doo against the A's. If this were the Tour de France instead of the World Series, the Dodgers would be the ones with the training wheels.

Before a big series, players always say, "You can throw the stats out the window." Well, the Dodgers wish they could.

There isn't a .300 hitter on the ballclub, unless you count Tommy Lasorda, who should hit 300 early next banquet season. No Dodger hit 30 home runs this season. Remember 1977, when the Dodgers had four players who hit 30 home runs each? This year they had 30 players who hit four home runs each.

After they traded Pedro Guerrero away this year, the Dodgers hit .220 for the last 44 games and scored three runs or fewer in 25 of those games.

Then they got cold. They hit .200 in the series against the Mets. That's the lowest batting average for a winning team in playoff history. It's the bats, not the stats, that the Dodgers should throw out the window.

Actually the Dodgers have a couple of guys who can hit the ball over the fence like Jose Canseco, but you have to let 'em bat from second base.

What the Dodgers have is great pitching, a couple of other pretty good players, and several people who seem to be working here on some kind of federal government jobs program. You could take the bubble-gum cards of the Dodgers' entire starting lineup, minus Gibson, and not be able to trade 'em straight up for a Canseco. You couldn't trade 'em straight up for the bubble gum.

Not that the Dodgers are stiff. Back in spring training, Lasorda flat-out predicted that his team would win the pennant. Of course, Tommy made the same prediction the previous two seasons.

To their credit, the Dodgers do have a certain endearing stick-to-itiveness, and I'm not referring to Jay Howell, who is the glue that holds the bullpen together.

Howell is the only pitcher I know who was taught to throw a curve ball by Lester Hayes.

Howell will pitch if Orel Hershiser ever falters. Hershiser is scheduled to start Games 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7. Lasorda is letting him take off Game 6 so he can visit his tailor and have his right shirt sleeve lengthened eight inches.

With the exception of Hershiser, and possibly a long ball or two by gimpy Gibson, the Dodgers shouldn't be much of a challenge for your incredible A's. Look at the bright side: If baseball had a playoff format like hockey or basketball, right now the A's might be preparing to take on the Atlanta Braves.

The Dodgers can't offer your ballclub much competition, Oakland, but we citizens of Los Angeles will try to make it up to the players in other ways. Weather, for instance. If the A's were playing in New York this weekend, your hitters would have to step out of the box to knock the icicles off their mustaches.

To help you deal with the boredom of this Series, we'll have Magic Johnson and Wayne Gretzky stop by your clubhouse to sign some autographs. We'll get your players an invitation to a pool party at Hef's pad. Maybe we can get Jose and Eck a guest shot on Johnny's show.

We hate to see your team make the trip all the way down here just to play the Dodgers.

I understand the A's found an elephant that can pitch baseballs with its trunk. The elephant being the official team symbol, the A's were going to have the critter throw out the ceremonial first pitch, but the league office nixed the plan.

Forget about that first-ball business. Sign that portly pachyderm to pitch the opening game. If the A's are going to sweep the Series, at least they could leave something for the Dodgers to sweep.

The Dodgers are scrappy and they'll give it 110 percent, but shucks, they're no match for your awesome team. The Dodgers are no match for the Mets, either, and the Mets can't wait until next season to prove it again.

Dave Stewart Silences Critics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Dodger Dave Stewart was only kidding a year ago when he compared his resurgent career to that of all-time Los Angeles great Sandy Koufax.

Or was he? Stewart, Oakland's starting pitcher in Saturday night's World Series opener, heard whispers a year ago that he was a one-year wonder after going 20-13 only two seasons following his release by the Philadelphia Phillies.

The skeptics have been silenced. Stewart was 21-12 this year while pushing his strikeout total to nearly 400 in two seasons.

"Nobody has done more for his team the last two years than Dave Stewart has done for us," says A's manager Tony La Russa.

What the Dodgers did for Stewart was send him down the road to baseball oblivion five years ago. Little did they know his return to Dodger Stadium would be with a world championship on the line.

Time and success have washed away the bitterness Stewart once felt toward his original team.

"There will be some happy memories for me when I take the mound," he said.

There also will be more than the usual stomachful of butterflies and deliberate thoughts of failure.

The grim-faced Stewart gets so nervous on game days that he fasts, he says, in order to "avoid throwing up on the mound." He also uses a sort of reverse imagery to psych himself up, imagining the worst that could happen — or, in his case, remembering it.

"Most people won't admit they are afraid of failure," he said after pitching seven innings of four-hit ball in the A's 4-1 pennant-clincher over Boston last Sunday. "Not me."

"I've known failure, and I've been able to turn it into success by thinking about it."

Stewart was written off by most baseball people until his hometown team gave him another chance on May 23, 1986, at age 29. But his career to that point was hardly a decade-long washout.

The Dodgers signed Stewart in 1975 as a catcher out of St. Elizabeth's High School in Oakland. They turned the sturdy 6-foot-2, 200-pounder into a pitcher later that year because of his strong arm, and he won 58 minor-league games from 1977-80.

As a reliever in his rookie year for Los Angeles, Stewart had a 2.51 earned run average with a 4-3 record and six saves. He climaxed the promising season with two shutout appearances in the 1981 World Series against the New York Yankees.

After going 9-8 with a 3.81 ERA mostly as a starter in 1982, he was sent back to the bullpen the next year and had a 2.96 ERA with eight saves when he was dealt to the Rangers for current A's reliever Rick Honeycutt.

Stewart finished out the 1983 season 5-2 with a 2.14 ERA for Texas before his slide began.

He was 7-14 in 1984, 0-6 in 1985, and decisionless in 12 unimpressive appearances for Philadelphia in late '85 and early '86 before being released. Even the fast-fading Baltimore Orioles refused to give him a tryout.

Then Stewart signed with the A's organization for $60,000. It was an all-time bargain: He's given them 50 victories plus the playoff win in 2½ years.

When "Stew" pitches at the Oakland Coliseum, it's only seven blocks from his childhood home. But while praising the virtues of his lifelong hometown, he downplays the "local-boy-makes-good" angle of his unlikely rise to stardom.

Forget those 110 friends and family members wearing Dave Stewart T-shirts and cheering him on in his finest hour last Sunday.

"The fact I'm from Oakland is not the main thing" in the success story, he said. "What's significant is that a lot of people counted me out and I've been able to rise above it and succeed."

A new pitch didn't hurt, either. Under the tutelage of A's pitching Dave Duncan, Stewart mastered the split-fingered fastball, which he calls a forkball. Like Houston's Mike Scott, another mediocre pitcher turned great, he's used it as the cornerstone of his repertoire.

Stewart also improved his breaking pitch and used it in conjunction with a 95-mph fastball to strike out 397 batters the last two seasons.

The one-time fireballer who didn't live up to his potential has become a complete pitcher, and a student of the art.

A's Arrive
Oakland slugger Jose Canseco and his fiancée Esther Haddad deplane at Los Angeles International Airport Thursday. The A's face the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series which starts Saturday.

Oakland Fans Cheer On A's

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics got a sendoff from 500 screaming fans when they left home, but only a few hostile Dodgers fans met them in Los Angeles as they arrived to prepare for the first game of the so-called "Golden State" World Series.

Pitcher Storm Davis brought wild cheers from the crowd at Oakland Airport's main terminal on Thursday afternoon when he told them there was "only one thing left to do ... Go down and kick some butts."

The fans chanted "Beat L.A., Beat L.A." and "sweep, sweep, sweep" and urged the defeat of those "no gooders" known as the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Pitcher Dave Stewart told the crowd shortly before the 2:10 p.m. PDT departure that the "whole team thinks this is lots of fun ... and the best is yet to come."

"You've got two people on the top step, the A's and the Dodgers," he said as the crowd wildly cheered him on. "I'll let you decide who you think is going to be on top when this is all over with."

Michele Reihls and five relatives showed up for the sendoff, dressing for the occasion. Reihls, a 20-year-old Oakland resident, wore green and yellow eye shadow, yellow fingernail polish, a yellow head band, yellow and green Hawaiian wreaths and a yellow A's shirt.

"We came to wish the A's the best of luck, but I tell you, I know they're not going to need it," said Reihls, who became a fan this year after realizing that "Jose Canseco is so gorgeous."

Fannie Randle, 68, a fan of professional baseball for more than 50 years, is convinced the A's this year are as good as they ever were. The A's won the World Series three years in a row, from 1972 to 1974.

"You know, they say the A's boys are hungry for victory, 'cause the young ones are always hungry to make a name for themselves and this is a young team," said Randle, dressed from head to foot in green and yellow gear that was covered with A's paraphernalia.

"We're going to beat the Dodgers because we're ready to prove ourselves once again," she added.

Most of the crowd waited for more than an hour in the main airport terminal for the team to show up, and cheered as they lined up on a stairwell and balcony overlooking the lobby.

"Kupkake," a professional clown dressed in yellow and green whose aspiration is to become the official team mascot, expects the A's "to beat the tar out of the Dodgers."

Pierson Hoping For Improvement

omore guard Wendy Morton, 5-9 forward Chris O'Connor, 6-2 senior center Gretta Savage, and 5-8 senior guard Pam Williams.

Hamilton, O'Connor, Savage and Williams all started last year, while Miller saw extensive action.

Newcomers to the program include Kathy Addison, a 5-11 forward, Toina Coley, a 5-7 guard, Laura Crowder, a 5-5 guard, Tonya Hargrove, a 5-9 freshman, Mechele Jones, a 5-5 guard, and Mona Jackson, a 5-7 guard. Jackson, a senior, is playing college ball for the first time. For the past four years, she has been a member of the ECU softball team.

Another newcomer is transfer Kim Dupree, a 6-1 sophomore who played at Greenville Rose. She will become eligible as of Dec. 13, and is expected to contribute heavily to the team after that.

"Last year was a tremendous learning year for everyone," Pierson said. "We saw what we had in ability and our limitations, and what we needed to recruit."

While the Lady Pirates did not bring in any tall people, Pierson does feel like recruiting did improve the ECU speed and quickness. "We brought in some athletes who can play a variety of positions. I'm sure that some of our newcomers are going to have an impact. I think our competitiveness level in practice is going to be improved, as will our intensity."

Already, Pierson says she has seen an improvement. "I think Sarah Gray is going to be a big asset for us after sitting out last year. Freshman Tonya Hargrove is the strongest girl I've ever coached. She can squat 245-pounds. She's also one of the fastest on the team, and I think once she and Sarah have the time, they're going to be a force."

Another area the Pirates wanted to improve upon was their ball handling and outside shooting. Pierson believes both Jones and Crowder, who played together at Colonial Heights (Va.), will help fill the bill. "Both of them are good athletes who are familiar with and who can shoot the three-point basket. They are good three-point shooters. Coley doesn't have quite that range, but she is a good outside shooter. I look for some real competition at the one, two and three positions (the two guards and the small forward)."

With five freshmen plus Gray and Dupree, Pierson expects to spend a good deal of time with fundamentals during the early weeks. "We have a lot of teaching to do," she said. "That, and getting into the kind of condition we need to be in to play."

Savage is the leading returning scorer from last year, with a 10.7 average. She's also the top rebounder coming back with a 5.6 average.

O'Connor averaged 7.3 points a game, while Williams had a 5.6 average. No one else averaged above five points a game.

The Lady Pirates will play in two tournaments this winter, including the Appalachian State Tournament which will open the season on Nov. 25-26. ECU will face Stetson in the first round while Appalachian takes on South Carolina State.

Crumpler, Rose Enjoying Big Year

"I'll be happy as long as I have a good year."

For Crumpler, the athletic successes have run right along with the academic triumphs.

A tight end in ninth and 10th grade on two straight undefeated teams, Crumpler moved to defensive end and started when he was a junior on a Rose team that went undefeated during the regular season before falling to Jacksonville (7-6) in the playoffs.

This year, he has played both tight end and defensive end for the Rampants, who are 6-0 and ranked third in the state 4-A poll.

"His sophomore year, he wasn't sure he wanted to play," said Rose coach Chip Williams. "We brought him in here and talked to him about it. He decided to play."

"When he came out he didn't have a whole lot of upper body strength and his legs were a little like a colt's. He ended up starting most of the games."

Gradually, Crumpler began to add to his frame, working in the weight room to build his bench press up to near 300 pounds.

"Carlester just turned 17 in the early part of September," his father said. "I think most of his growth came between 10th and 11th grade. He's just a kid that is growing real fast and his ability has not caught up to growing rate."

But he had more than enough talent to make an impact for Rose in his first year on the varsity.

"The thing about Crump is his aggressiveness," Williams said. "We came into last year not knowing who our end would be. But in the Broughton game (a scrimmage) he was just hitting people and he did pretty well from there on out."

And his play as a junior attracted the notice of more than a few college coaches.

"You think of a college and he's probably gotten mail from them," Williams said.

As the attention mounted, it became almost a distraction for Crumpler, who found himself trying to play up to other's expectations.

"Last year, it didn't really affect me much," he said. "But I knew that a lot of colleges were interested in me and maybe I have to live up to what they want."

"But I found out I was trying too hard this summer. The first three weeks (of fall practice) I can't really call it torture. (But) it killed me. What I did was put it in the back of my mind and went out there and played like the coaches wanted me to. I began to do the things I was told to do instead of going out and doing something else and screwing up really bad. I was just overdoing everything."

A lot of quiet guidance from a father that has been there has been an advantage along the way.

Carlester Crumpler has made an effort to stay in the background of his son, offering advice or an opinion when it's needed while staying quiet when perhaps words were unnecessary.

"He shouldn't have the undue pressure," he said. "Carlester is not living my dream. There are certain things along the way that I would have liked to accomplish or been better at, but certainly I don't try to live that dream through him."

"Carlester will tell you I'm not up in the stands screaming. If he makes a big play, great. But for the most part I don't show any emotion. I'm strictly there as a counselor and observer."

And that kind of guidance carried over into academics.

"I didn't have somebody pushing me as much as we've had to push him," the elder Crumpler said. "But it really isn't to the point where we've had to push him educational-wise. He's one person who had a great sense of pride in that sense of the word."

"A lot of it depends on where parents put their priorities. Most of the time with minority kids, it's very difficult to get that across. It's often a sense of survival. You just do the things you enjoy the most. When it comes down to academics, it's lacking. That's a very tough situation. I've been through the whole gambit. I know what kind of roadblocks he can run up to if he doesn't (study)."

While he has attended a number of athletic camps during the past few summers trying to hone both his football and basketball skills, Crumpler also went to North Carolina Central University one vacation for a math and science camp.

Academically, Crumpler is sure of what direction he wants to go, but as far as what University that will be at is a matter to be decided after basketball season.

"Engineering is something I want to approach," Crumpler said. "I love math and science. When you see that engineering is something that utilizes both those skills then that is something I want to go into. As far as schools, I don't know."

A factor in that decision could be how the basketball season turns out. A part-time starter for the Rampants last year, Crumpler attended both the prep stars and B/C all-star camps this summer and has gotten some attention from college basketball coaches.

But which sport he chooses in college will not be made until next spring.

"It's something I don't really want to tell myself that I'm going to college and play football and not really care about basketball, or I'm going to go play basketball and not football," he said. "If I say it to myself, then I might as well give up whatever sport (now) that I'm not going to play in college."

Biographies Depict Unhappy Life For TV's Jessica Savitch

By Judie Glave
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — On screen, NBC anchorwoman Jessica Savitch was television's "Golden Girl" — authoritative, beautiful, intelligent. Off screen, the glitter quickly vanished.

Five years after her death, two biographies dig beneath the radiant image. Though Savitch's family and friends dispute their findings, both books describe a life marred by drugs, psychological problems, her husband's suicide and intense ambition.

"Her whole life was a suicide mission," says Alanna Nash, author of "Golden Girl" (E.P. Dutton, $18.95).

Gwenda Blair, author of "Almost Golden" (Simon & Schuster, $18.95), says Savitch was the wrong woman in the wrong place at the wrong time.

"Drive and ambition certainly got her to the top, but it didn't provide her with the stability needed to withstand the pressure of that place in the sun. But even more than that, the changes that were taking place in the news industry that both elevated her and punished her is worth telling."

Popular with viewers but not with most colleagues, Savitch skyrocketed to television stardom in the 1970s, first as a local anchor on Philadelphia's KYW and then as anchor of NBC's "Weekend News Digest."

By the late 1970s, the petite blonde with the uncanny knack of romancing the television camera was dubbed "NBC's Golden Girl" by Newsweek magazine.

Five years later, her star fading, she and New York Post executive Martin Fischbein drowned when her car toppled into a canal in Bucks County, Pa.

The medical examiner's report said drugs were not involved. However, both books argue that Savitch had a cocaine problem that had crippled her career.

There was evidence of instability early on. Her main ambition was to become the first female network anchor, and to do it by time she was 30.

She gave herself an edge — she shaved a year off her age. But then her dream was shattered when ABC hired Barbara Walters — at $1 million a year — to co-anchor the nightly newscast.

"Jessica's highly audible outrage lasted for a long time; then she went into a corner of the (KYW) newsroom and cried," Nash wrote.

Her tirades and tantrums were legendary within the business, according to the biographers. KYW cameras captured one particularly vivid outburst in which Savitch berated the crew during a commercial break — ranting, raving, screaming — and then coolly returned to the newscast.

KYW staffers set the videotape to music and sent it to Savitch's new network colleagues at NBC before her arrival.

As her star rose, so did her prima donna status. Besides Walters, she was the only anchor-reporter to travel with an entourage that included a driver, hairdresser, personal assistant and secretary.

Both books delve into her two marriages, a long affair with an abusive news producer, the suicide of her second husband, Dr. Donald Payne, and alleged lesbian liaisons; they differ in their approach.

Blair concentrates on the "Selling of Television News," blaming much of Savitch's rise and fall on the nature of the industry.

She broke in at a time when television news was undecided whether it was "news, journalism or entertainment," Blair said.

Savitch was often criticized as being a lightweight, a reporter who had not paid her dues. Said Blair: "At the time, she was exactly what they wanted her to be: a pretty face who brought in ratings."

Nash, on the other hand, delves into Savitch's background — her father's death of kidney disease at age 33, her chilly relationship with her mother, her crippling insecurities.

Citing several psychiatrists, including a few who treated Savitch, Nash concludes that Savitch had a "borderline" personality disorder which is characterized by psychological instability, impaired social behavior, mood swings and trouble with interpersonal relationships.

She argues that Savitch's problems can be traced to a childhood incident when she argued with her father and then ran away, hiding for hours in a field near her home. When she reappeared, her father berated her and screamed that she would never amount to anything. Soon after, he died.

Savitch always believed she was the cause of his physical deterioration, Nash said. Blair agreed: "The person whose approval she wanted the most (her father) she could never get."

Drugs, the authors said, fed all her other problems and led to the destruction of her professional life. Those tuned into NBC News Digest the night of Oct. 3, 1983, saw that destruction firsthand as the anchorwoman appeared to suffer a breakdown on camera. She was dead 20 days later.

Savitch's mother and sisters, Stephanie and Lori, did not cooperate with either author. Lori Savitch, an anchorwoman at her older sister's former station KYW in Philadelphia, has denied her sister was addicted to cocaine.

Nash's book is the more gossipy of the two, full of details about Savitch's troubled relationships with men.

Some have questioned the purpose of such an intense and personal review of Savitch's life, but both authors feel there's a lesson to be learned.

"It is a cautionary tale and a sad one," said Nash.

"I think it's about the corrupting influence of fame, about misplaced ambition. ... She was a woman who didn't know who she was. She only existed on camera."

Helen Hayes Gets Birthday Scholarship

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Helen Hayes, known as the first lady of American theater, got the gift of a drama scholarship fund in her name for her 88th birthday.

Friends of the actress, Col. Barney Oldfield and his wife, Vada, said the fund, established in his will, will give $1,000 each year to a student at the University of Nebraska. Miss Hayes' birthday was Monday.

Oldfield and Miss Hayes first worked together as judges for the Great Steamboat Races on the Mississippi River in the early 1880s.

"She is the most remarkable woman, and happens to be a great star, but she also is the kind of person who is an inspiration," said Oldfield, who graduated with his wife from the university in 1933.

CBS To Feature Kuralt Special

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — To Charles Kuralt, the charm of being on the road is that it's such a little deal.

"I just send back stories from the road about people I admire," he said. "All these years CBS has let me do what I like. I was in a little town in Illinois where everyone has his name on a coffee cup down at the drug store. When someone dies, the cup comes down."

"Can you imagine that story being on 'The CBS Evening News'?" ... Nobody makes a big deal about what I do. That's the charm of it."

Kuralt, who has been doing little stories for CBS since 1967, is in good company. Charles Dickens, Rudyard Kipling and Mark Twain all took to the road and sent back little stories.

His latest journey into prime time is the one-hour special "Back on the Road With Charles Kuralt," which CBS will telecast Friday. It takes him from Duncan City, Ga., to Moscow — the one in the Soviet Union.

With Kuralt, it's necessary to distinguish between the Soviet's Moscow and the small-town Moscows in Idaho, Kansas, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

Kuralt was in Moscow for the Summit when a burly old man bullied his way into his hotel and asked to speak to an American reporter. His name was Dr. Nikita Zakaravich Asseyev, and he had been waiting 43 years to tell his story.

"His chest was covered with war medals and he intimidated the KGB men guarding the hotel," Kuralt said. "He told me he had been in a German prisoner of war camp in World War II. The Russian prisoners were starving to death until American prisoners in another part of the camp began throwing their Red Cross food parcels over the fence."

"Dr. Asseyev had never forgotten the Americans. He had their names and he wanted to thank them for saving lives."

In the show, Kuralt talks to Asseyev and then looks up the Americans that the Russian had remembered for so many years. He found Dr. Sidney Brockman in San Diego and William Jarema, a retired New York City police officer.

Kuralt's travels began in October 1967 when he persuaded CBS News to let him take a three-month trial run. He headed first for New England, where he did a piece on the autumn leaves. That was a revolutionary idea for the network news and gave Kuralt the courage to do the hundreds of little stories that followed. His reports have won two Emmys, two George Foster Peabody Awards and a Christopher Award.

"It helps if you're fat and bald," said Kuralt. "People look at me and say if that guy can be on TV, so can I. It helps put people at ease. We don't come on like a big-time television crew. We keep it very low key. I don't even appear in many of the stories."

Kuralt's cameraman is Isadore Bleckman, his soundman is Larry Gianneschi Jr. and his co-producer is Bernard Birnbaum.

One rule that Kuralt follows is that he never "rides the tricycle."

"We were watching a reporter cover a tricycle race for a local news show," he said. "It was a good story until the end. The newsman

The Associated Press

Charles Kuralt: On The Road In Los Angeles

got on a tricycle and rode it. It ruined the whole story."

Kuralt says his trips on America's backroads have given him a different view of the country than one would get in the seats of power.

"I have a much more sanguine view than you would get from reading the newspapers," he said. "I think the country is in good shape. I think things have changed for the better since I first went on the road. I see candidates running for office as environmentalists. Twenty years ago no one would have dared to call himself an environmentalist. People are much more aware and caring."

Environmentalist. People are much more aware and caring."

Kuralt said his family grew used to his absences during his earlier years as a news correspondent in South America and Los Angeles.

"When I was a little boy my dad had a traveling job," he said. "I think that's where I got it. My mother was a school teacher and my father was a social worker. I used to go with him on his visits around North Carolina."

These days, he flies back to New York every weekend for his duties as host of CBS' "Sunday Morning."

Jane Fonda Breaks Nose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jane Fonda broke her nose in a bicycle accident, but she plans to be back on the Toronto set of the movie "Letters" by today.

Miss Fonda collided with another bicyclist Monday while pedaling down a Toronto street, smacking her head on the pavement, her spokesman said Thursday.

"She's fine. It was no big deal," publicist Steve Rivers said. Miss Fonda was treated at Toronto East General Hospital and released.

"It was her day off and she was going around a curve and she collided with another bicyclist," Rivers said.

Miss Fonda, 50, stars with Robert DeNiro in the movie, which has been filming in Toronto since Aug. 15. Shooting was suspended for several days, but Rivers said the production would resume today with Miss Fonda.

'Unsolved'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The murder of sports figure Mickey Thompson and his wife Trudy last March will be re-enacted for NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries."

The couple was shot to death at their home in Bradbury, northeast of Los Angeles. Family spokesperson Colene Thompson Campbell said an additional $5,000 has been added to the existing reward of $255,000.

The deaths are under investigation by the Los Angeles County sheriff's office.

Original 'Star Trek' Pilot Set For Syndication Special

By Steve McKerrow
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

You have to fly through a meteor shower of hype to get there, but the nucleus of the remarkable "Star Trek" universe can nonetheless be found intact in a rare viewing Thursday night of "The Cage," the original, 1965 pilot episode for television's long and prosperous voyage into humankind's future.

Never aired intact and actually turned down by NBC, "The Cage" can be seen as originally intended in a two-hour "Star Trek" special in syndication. And you do not have to be a "Trekkie," one of the series' devoted fans, to find it thoroughly fascinating.

The show includes such oddities as a smiling, fairly emotional Mr. Spock (Leonard Nimoy), the late Jeffrey Hunter and not William Shatner as the captain of the starship Enterprise, and the actress who would later play Nurse Chapel, Majel Barrett, as the ship's "No. 1," or executive officer. Further, Scotty, Bones, Uhura, Sulu and Chekov are nowhere to be seen.

But the fundamental elements of "Star Trek" are all here: a hopeful vision of the future that nonetheless portrays humans as primitive and violent, and the conviction that there are other life forms out there with their own unique strengths and weaknesses.

Creator Gene Roddenberry, Shatner, Nimoy and others of the "Star Trek" family are seen in interview clips flanking the airing of "The Cage," and actor Patrick Stewart, who portrays Capt. Piccard in the syndicated "Star Trek: The Next Generation" hosts the special.

While some of this supporting material is of interest, too much is heavily promotional for the syndicated series and next summer's promised "Star Trek V" movie. Fans may also wish for a little more exposition of the circumstances surrounding "Star Trek's" original bumpy voyage to network acceptance.

Still, the show does acknowledge that "The Cage" was rejected by NBC as being "too cerebral." Yet the rejection was not total, for NBC authorized Roddenberry, whose original conception was to produce "a Wagon Train" to the stars, to proceed with a second pilot that would have more "bare knuckles" action.

And even moderately familiar viewers will recognize that much of "The Cage" was seen during the series' first season (1966-67) as the heart of a two-part episode titled "The Menagerie." The pilot material was woven as flashbacks into a story in which Spock, now science officer to Shatner's James Tiberius Kirk, commandeers the Enterprise to take his former commander, the crippled Capt. Christopher Pike, back to a mysterious planet where the Enterprise once had a close encounter with aliens.

Yet it is obvious from seeing the whole episode that "The Cage" was a learning experience for Roddenberry and crew, used to advantage in the subsequent development of "Star Trek."

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Welcome to the 1988 annual Parade of Homes, "We're Building the Greenville Lifestyle", sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County Home Builders Association.

I am proud to extend to you and your families a cordial invitation from all of our members to visit the outstanding homes on parade.

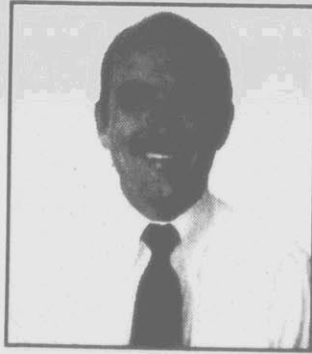

Economists have said that the best inflation hedge a family can make is buying a home, and what better investment than a new home from local craftsmen to fit your individual needs. We are fortunate to be in an economic environment that rewards sound investment in real estate. Our broad based economy predicates steady growth that offers protection of our home investment. Now is the time to consider a new home. It might very well be the best move you ever make.

I hope that you will visit all of the homes in the Parade this weekend. Our members take pride in their work and can be identified by the NAHB seal. They prescribe to the code of ethics of the National Association of Home Builders of which they are a member.

I sincerely wish you an enjoyable Parade tour.

Myles Cartrette
President
Greenville-Pitt County Home
Builders Association

1987 RE/MAX International, Inc. All Rights Reserved

SPECIAL EDITION

"REAL ESTATE MAXIMUMS"

★★ HOME DELIVERY

Good News on the Home Front..

RE/MAX Associates outsell other full-time agents

NORTH AMERICA — RE/MAX Associates are setting a new pace in home sales. Across the continent — from Hawaii to Newfoundland, Alaska to Florida — record numbers of home buyers and sellers are turning to RE/MAX for "Above the Crowd!®" service.

The result: RE/MAX Sales Associates average three times as many real estate transactions per year as other full-time agents.

That's good news for the public.

It means home sellers can depend on RE/MAX Associates to find the right buyers for their properties in a reasonable amount of time, every time.

Through aggressive advertising, personal promotion and the kind of expertise that comes only from experience, RE/MAX top producers know what it takes to bring out the "specialty of the house."

In markets as large as Chicago and as small as Bigfork, Mont., RE/MAX "for sale" signs dot the neighborhood landscape. With their familiar red-white-and-blue hot air balloon logo, RE/MAX signs leave little doubt as to which real estate organization is the people's choice.

Just as RE/MAX "for sale" signs have a way of changing to RE/MAX "sold" signs, RE/MAX is changing the way North America conducts its real estate business. The times demand RE/MAX ability, and RE/MAX delivers.

From open house to closing table, RE/MAX leads the way.

That's what "Above the Crowd!®" service is all about. And it's available only through RE/MAX.

"The RE/MAX Team"

When you get the facts...it's RE/MAX!<sup>sm</sup>

- RE/MAX Sales Associates average three times as many transactions as other full-time real estate agents.
- RE/MAX Sales Associates lead the industry in repeat customers.
- RE/MAX Sales Associates receive more referrals from satisfied clients than other agents.
- RE/MAX Sales Associates average more than seven years of real estate experience.
- Only the top 20 percent of all real estate agents are qualified to be RE/MAX Sales Associates.
- There's a RE/MAX Sales Associate near you who knows the market value of your home.

Clients benefit from RE/MAX Referral System

There's good news for RE/MAX home sellers who are moving out of town and planning to buy a new home.

Now, when clients list their property with a RE/MAX Sales Associate, they can begin the search for their new home right away, without having to commute back and forth between cities.

The RE/MAX Referral System lets RE/MAX Affiliates in one area locate and select appropriate RE/MAX Agents in other areas to take on the home-finding tasks of relocating clients.

A free service of RE/MAX International, the RE/MAX Referral System utilizes state-of-the-art technology to match each real estate client with the RE/MAX specialist most suited to his or her individual needs.

Armed with a client's specifications — price range, desired size and style of home, proximity of workplace, churches and schools — a RE/MAX Associate can put together a menu of suitable homes for the client to view upon his or her arrival in the destination city.

That's the kind of "Above the Crowd!" service that's made the RE/MAX Referral System the most effective referral program in real estate today. And that's a fact.

WHO

LIFETIME GUARANTEE ON CAR REPAIRS POSSIBLE.

Because we offer the free Lifetime Service Guarantee on car repairs, my job as service manager is a little tougher. I have to make sure car repairs are done right the first time. Because if they're not, it's our problem, not yours.

Here's how the Lifetime Service Guarantee works. If you pay for any covered repair and it has to be done again, we fix it free. That's free parts and free labor. For as long as you own your Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, Merkur or Ford light truck.

The Lifetime Service Guarantee covers thousands of parts and repairs. And it doesn't matter how old your vehicle is, how many miles are on it, or even where you bought it. Add all this up and you've got the best car repair guarantee in America.

Ask us to see a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee. Then give us a chance to turn our guarantee into a lifetime reality.

Quality Care for Quality Cars.

Why Settle for Less?

Insist on an E-300 Home!

E-300 builders voluntarily go beyond what's required. Their participation in Greenville Utilities' E-300 Program shows a commitment to lowering your heating/cooling costs.

E-300 standards ensure that the design of your home -- from the foundation up -- will reduce heating and cooling costs. An E-300 home can use up to 40% less energy than one built to code standards. On-site inspections verify that E-300 standards are being met.

If you're building or buying a new home, call GUC to make sure the home is submitted, inspected and certified through the E-300 Program.

For further information, call Greenville Utilities Energy Services, 752-7166, ext. 274.

The Pleasant Mortgage Experience.

All too often, the realization of the American dream, owning a home, becomes one of life's more frustrating experiences. And the frustration usually has something to do with the mortgage process. It's too complicated, it takes too long for a decision, no one knows what's going on, no one can give you a straight answer, and on and on.

We're Barclays American Mortgage Corporation and although we can't promise an end to all of the frustrations, we can promise the care and concern of a staff of professionals who fully realize that a mortgage is more than numbers and interest rates. It's the realization of a dream. And that dream can be a pleasant experience. That we can promise.
