Bush Rides Popularity Crest, Dukakis Looks For A Comeback

By Tom Raum
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — George Bush, riding the momentum of last week's debate, will focus on proven themes and big states as he tries to hold or expand his lead in the final three weeks of the presidential campaign, aides say.

BUSH

They say he will not stray far from the themes he has already honed on the campaign trail — crime, the death penalty, prison furloughs in Massachusetts, a strong military — and will break little if any new ground on issues.

Although Bush is enjoying a widening lead in public opinion polls over Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, he and his top campaign officials are insisting they will not permit themselves to become complacent.

"That's the last thing I want to have happen," Bush said at week's end as it became clear his campaign was enjoying a post-debate surge.

While maintaining a busy schedule, Bush can be expected to run a cautious, play-it-safe campaign in

Goldwater Says Get To The Issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential candidate Barry Goldwater says George Bush may have "impugned the patriotism of Michael Dukakis" in a campaign he says has been so negative that "as an American citizen, I'm damned concerned about where we're going."

He urged both Bush and Dukakis to "quit calling each other names" and concentrate on important issues, such as how they would handle the nation's huge debt and federal budget deficits.

But Goldwater also said of Bush: "I don't think I've known a man in my life who comes to the chance of being president who is better qualified."

LOS ANGELES — Time is running short for Michael Dukakis, and the Democratic presidential nominee still is searching for a message that will attract voters in his faltering battle against Republican George Bush.

DUKAKIS

With just over three weeks left until Election Day, Dukakis was trailing in the polls and Bush appeared to have gained ground in the final presidential campaign debate.

"One of the things I have to do, obviously, is give people a better sense of who Mike Dukakis is," the candidate told reporters on his campaign plane Friday.

It seemed a remarkable admission from a politician who has been campaigning for president for the past 18 months.

"I'm expecting to win," he said. "But I think it's going to be very tight and I've always felt that way."

There were large signs and small that the campaign was feverishly looking for a way to turn the tide.

Robeson Indians Cleared Of All Hostage Charges

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — In his closing argument, Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bruce urged the jury in the trial of Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs not to be fooled by the lawyer who wasn't there — civil rights attorney William Kunstler.

But the jury Friday cleared Jacobs and Hatcher of all federal charges in the armed takeover of The Robesonian newspaper Feb. 1, even though Hatcher had sat through the three-week trial with no lawyer beside him.

For the first two weeks, Hatcher's only comments were that U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle had violated his rights by starting the trial without Kunstler, his chosen trial attorney. Kunstler was involved in a New York case and could not get a release for the federal trial. Boyle ruled that Hatcher was defending himself after he refused other counsel.

"I think they're playing a little game with you," Bruce told the jury in his closing argument Thursday after Hatcher had presented a written argument from Kunstler and comments of his own that drew sobs from his supporters in the courtroom.

"Mr. Kunstler may not have been here, but if that's his statement, he certainly has kept up with the trial," Bruce said. "I suggest to you there has been an illusion of Mr. Hatcher not receiving legal advice."

Kunstler Friday praised Hatcher for doing a good job alone in court. Jacobs was represented by Lewis Pitts, Bob Warren and Alan Gregory of the Christic Institute South in Carrboro.

"They've been keeping me informed of what was happening," Kunstler said of the other lawyers. "I was getting very optimistic. And I knew that Eddie was doing a good job."

Hatcher's unusual situation drew the attention of prospective jurors even before the trial began.

"Your honor, why does he keep saying that?" one prospective juror asked on the trial's second day when Hatcher rose to say he was not representing himself and that Boyle was violating his rights by starting the trial without Kunstler.

For the first two weeks, as the prosecution presented its case, Hat-

Ex-Basketball Star Tells Of Drug Use

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — God spared David Thompson, says the former N.C. State basketball standout, so that he could relay a message to people — just say no to drugs.

Thompson, who also starred as a professional player, outlined how his addiction to cocaine — first sniffing, then free-basing — stole his career and divided his family to an audience of about 115 people in Farmville Central High School's gym Saturday.

Thompson's visit was organized by the town of Farmville to create community awareness and understanding of drug abuse problems.

Thompson said it was in his first year with the Denver Nuggets when he had grew tired and weary. "Your whole lifestyle is different," he said.

"You're not just playing for a college, you're playing for bucks."

He said he played more games in one year as a professional than the whole time he was at State.

Thompson's discussion of his late season anxieties led one of his teammates to "hand me a bottle of white powder. That powder was cocaine."

Coming from a Christian background, Thompson said he knew using drugs was wrong but he fell into the peer pressure. Players would have their own supply, and at various functions, "it was readily available."

Thompson said he never used the drug to help his performance. "I used it in the social setting, not to play. I used it after the game."

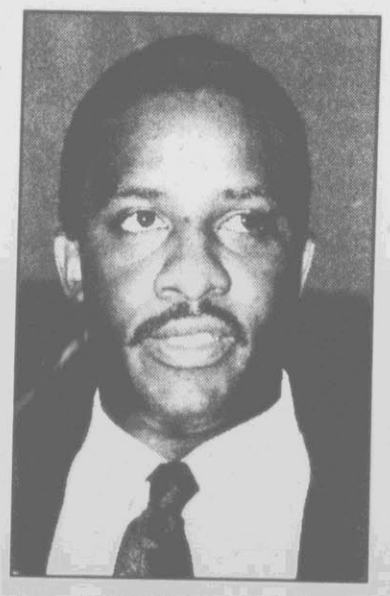

His career mounted with a five-year $4 million contract in 1978 along with the pressure and the drug usage, he said. But, soon his drug abuse would steal the show.

Missing flights, being late to practice and other related events resulted in a trade to the Seattle Superhornets, Thompson said. It was in Seattle that his wife told team officials of his problem.

"They confronted me. I denied it," he said. But, "I went into treatment to save my career and my marriage."

As a player in rehabilitation, Thompson said he was offered a quarter of his $800,000 salary, and after rehabilitation, pressures sent him back to the drugs again.

Seasaw of drug usage and rehabilitation also affected his family, Thompson said. He didn't honor

"While I was in jail, I had time to reflect on who I was and where I had come from," he said. Also, a minister took an interest in him and he accepted Jesus as his savior.

"That took all the pressure off," he said. "God spared me so that I can come out and relay my message to you people.

"You don't have to give into those pressures. You can say no."

Thompson, who is employed by the Charlotte Hornets, said he wants to work his way up in the organization and is working on a leg he hurt in a fall with hopes of playing again.

He's been talking to groups such as the one in Farmville for about eight months. "My self-image is not that good, but coming out and talking is helping me grow and feel better about myself. It's still a day by day thing, but this is real good therapy for me."

CIA Says Soviets Stepping Up Spying Despite Thaw

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has intensified its spying against the United States despite warmer superpower ties under Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the No. 2 man at the CIA said Saturday.

"Since Gorbachev's ascension to power, the hostile intelligence threat against us has grown," said Robert M. Gates, the CIA's deputy director. "The number of operations against us has certainly increased."

Gates also gave a gloomy assessment of international affairs, predicting that in the next five to 10 years some nations may suffer economic collapse because of the AIDS epidemic and that drug kingpins could be elected to govern a major country.

In a speech and question-and-answer session at a convention of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers, Gates said:

— Chemical weapons — "the poor man's atomic bomb — could be the "most immediate threat to world peace and to the security of the United States and its allies. He predicted a rapid spread of chemical weapons among developing countries, "now that the Iran-Iraq war has broken the moral barriers against their use."

— Remarks by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, that the CIA had tried to provoke Nicaragua's Sandinista regime into repressive tactics are not going to have "any effect on our relations with the oversight committees."

Speaking of Moscow, Gates said that "despite improved U.S.-Soviet

Abortion Opponents Stage Demonstrations In 2 Cities

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than 50 opponents of abortion were arrested Saturday outside a clinic in Indianapolis, while another anti-abortion demonstration in Jackson, Miss., was peaceful.

In Atlanta, meanwhile, scene of three months of anti-abortion demonstrations, of the 463 arrested outside four clinics earlier this month, only seven remained in jail over the weekend.

In Indianapolis, some 150 to 200 protesters gathered outside Affiliated Women's Services on the city's west side, said Lois Bennett, director of the clinic.

The protesters, some of them children, sat before the entrance to the clinic, locked arms and sang the spiritual "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." They refused to move when Marion County deputies asked them, and some were carried away one by one, Bennett said. Fifty-five were arrested.

The clinic was prepared for the demonstration and had about 25 escorts on hand to accompany clients, about 30 of whom were scheduled for visits Saturday morning, Bennett said. "We had a couple of cancellations and reschedules," she said.

More than 450 people were arrested in Atlanta ealier this month after the anti-abortion group calling itself Operation Rescue began picketing and blocking entrances at clinics in that city. About 1,200 demonstrators have been arrested in Atlanta since the protests began during the Democratic National Convention in July.

In Jackson, Miss., about 75 abortion protesters chanted, prayed, and

School Board Stresses Unity At Retreat

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"A unified community must begin with the board" was a consensus Pitt County Board of Education members adopted during their retreat Friday and Saturday as meeting structure, community outreach and image and board evaluation became major categories in their 1988-89 management plan.

Conducted at the Pitt County Wildlife Club near Falkland, the retreat was designed to make the individuals better board members, to promote effectiveness and cohesiveness in board performance and to strengthen board and staff team relationships. Three speakers led discussions Friday evening, and the board discussed issues of concern and developed its management plan for this year on Saturday.

Under the category of meeting structure, the board discussed being more effective in using its ad hoc committees and executive meetings. It also discussed conducting a workshop meeting prior to regular board meetings and moving regular board meetings within attendance areas throughout the county.

To help illiterate citizens get through the process of being formally heard by the board or of making a written complaint and the like, the board discussed providing a citizen advocate under the community outreach category.

It also discussed improving its image and the image of Superintendent Eddie West and the administration by conducting business as a team — accepting responsibility for the bad circumstances as well as the good.

Providing feedback and being prepared were among items discussed in the board evaluation category.

Issues board members said they were concerned with and wanted to improve during the next 12 months include evaluatating Agnes Fulilove School and its services, and focusing on at-risk students, vocational education, test scores, duplicating successful programs, recruitment, program evaluation, uninterrupted teaching time, capital outlay, attendance lines and substance abuse.

Dr. Alonzo Crim, professor of education at Atlanta State University and a former superintendent of the Atlanta city schools, headed the Friday agenda in his presentation on "Team Building from the Top."

"With over 35 years in education, I learned two things especially as it relates to leadership," he said. "You have to identify the goals and purposes of the institution ... and you have the responsibility to build the channel of communication so that all affected by those challenges and goals are eager to talk about them."

Crim said procedures have to be established especially as they relate to communication. "Nobody likes surprises. How much must the superintendent communicate with you? How much information do you want?

"The board can get any information it wants from the staff, but let the chief executive officer give orders to staff," he said.

The board also needs to be aware of how it conducts meetings, Crim said. "Your public image will invade the entire community. If there's the slightest dissension, they will pick it up."

Board meetings should be conducted with dignity and understanding, he said. In addition, there should predetermined methods for people to address the board, and follow-up reports to the board and to the community should be provided, he said.

Dr. Pamela Mayer, professor of educational administration at East Carolina University, led the board through an exercise to evaluate the importance of consensus on a board.

"A plan which is not based on consensus is not a plan, it's an argument," she said. Consensus builds the "common shared vision" of the board or those viewpoints board members share.

The board will not always be able to arrive at a consensus as differences in experience on some issues outweigh common views, Dr. Mayer said. That's when somebody wins and somebody loses as the majority on a vote rules.

But, "sometimes you can work through things by consensus, and you both win."

Board members were first instructed to rank a list of occupations according to how they think other people view them. They then were divided into groups to complete the exercise collectively.

While in the groups, board members used various strategies to produce the group ratings, Dr. Mayer said. "Clumping," or putting the occupations into categories, was one strategy while giving up a few points in the rank or "moving in a common direction" was another. Also, establishing criteria, such as education required or salary, was the strategy used by another group.

Establishing criteria "is the most effective strategy," she said. "It's setting up a framework of reference to evaluate your idea and my idea."

Dr. Mayer also led the board in an exercise that showed that the importance of an issue to a person relates to that person's self-concept. For example, religious beliefs are at the core of who a person is and would be hard to compromise, while a distaste for lima beans is at the surface of who a person is and would be easier to influence.

"Whenever we have a discussion on anything, the relation it is in our self-concept determines how convicted we are," she said.

Dr. George Redfern, the school system's consultant from Lebanon, Ohio, reviewed the pre-retreat evaluation completed by seven of the 12 board members.

Results of the small sample of completed evaluations show that board members think boardsmanship needs the most attention, while personnel management, instruction, handling complaints and teamwork were the other four needing attention.

Board members evalated themselves highest on finance and business with school plant management, public relations, decision-making and communications ranked below it.

Vatican In Red By Nearly $64 Million

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican was in the red by nearly $64 million last year, its second-largest deficit ever, according to a financial statement issued Saturday by the Holy See.

Church officials who released the document appealed to Roman Catholics to contribute more so that the Vatican could "adequately carry out its pastoral mission."

It was the ninth year in a row that the administrative center for the world's 850 million Catholics has operated at a loss.

The deficit will be covered by $50 million from "Peter's Pence," the annual offering from Catholics to the pope, and the rest by reserve funds, a news release said.

The Vatican said its 1987 deficit was 74.6 billion Italian lire, down from a record 76.6 billion a year earlier. Using the 1987 end-of-year exchange rate, the church said the 1987 figure equalled $63.8 million.

The Holy See said it expects its 1988 shortfall to be its largest ever — climbing 3 percent above the 1987 figure — even though it slapped strict controls on spending and has urged more contributions.

The news release said covering the 1988 deficit would be "precarious" because reserve funds had been used to pay 1987 expenses.

The budget statement was issued by the 12-member Council of Cardinals for the Study of the Organization and Economic Problems of the Holy See at the conclusion of three days of meetings.

Members of the Council and the Vatican spokesman were not in their offices or residences Saturday to answer telephone calls.

The budget covers expenses for the curia, or the church's central administration, Vatican radio, diplomatic missions and the Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano.

The largest 1987 expense was salaries for the Vatican's 2,325 employees and pension payments to its 880 retirees, which combined to make up 54 percent of the budget, compared to 51 percent in 1986. The financial statement said the increase was due to a reorganization of personnel and salary raises.

The budget does not include the Vatican bank or the costs of Pope John Paul II's travels, which the Vatican says are paid for by local churches.

The Vatican's biggest source of income came from investments such as bank accounts, stocks and bonds and property, which paid $38.1 million, an increase of nearly 7 percent from a year earlier, according to the statement.

While "Peter's Pence" is considered papal rather than Vatican income, the Vatican news release noted contributions to the fund for the first nine months of this year had reached $36.8 million — an increase of 2.9 percent over the same period in 1987.

relations, we have seen an increase this year of Soviet attempts to recruit U.S. sources."

The choice of Vladimir Kryuchkov as chairman of the KGB "likely will mean an intensification of Soviet intelligence efforts against the United States and it allies," he said.

Kryuchkov, believed to be a career specialist in foreign intelligence gathering, replaced Viktor Chebrikov this month as chairman of the Committee for State Security, which is known by its Russian acronym KGB. That agency conducts overseas espionage and acts as a domestic security service.

In a speech to another group on Friday, Gates said that Gorbachev's efforts to transform the Soviet economy have not succeeded so far.

"After three years of reform, restructuring and turmoil, there has been little, if any, slowing in the downward spiral of the Soviet economy," he said.

Gates said Saturday that federal agencies must develop "realistic criteria" to gauge whether political and economic change in the Soviet Union is genuinely reshaping the foundations of the system or whether the country's totalitarian structure endures.

Turning to other developments around the world, Gates told the former intelligence officers that at least 15 developing countries will be able to build ballistic missiles by the year 2000, and that 20 countries were developing chemical weapons.

The $300-billion-a-year international drug trade "will get much worse before it gets better," and no single country or group of countries can solve the problem.

In some countries, drug gangs have bribed officials and editors and courted public opinion through charity, he said.

"It may be only a matter of time before we are faced with a freely elected, legal narco-government in a major country," he said. He did not name any nations in which he thought that might happen.

Asked what the emergence of a "narco-government" would mean for U.S. foreign policy, Gates said, "I don't think anybody has thought very much about that. We are trying to bring to the attention of policy makers things that are likely to happen in five to 10 years."

AIDS, the Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome, differs from such past epidemics as the black death of the Middle Ages by striking not the old and weak but the young and active educated urban middle classes — "the very cadre that no developing country can afford to lose," he said.

"Some economies — or at least their industrial structures — may collapse, and some countries could become virtually ungovernable," he said. Again, he did not mention any countries by name, but AIDS has taken a particularly heavy toll on nations in East and Central Africa.

Only in the past year has the AIDS threat to the structure of national societies been highlighted in CIA reports, though the drug problem has been a concern somewhat longer, Gates said.

Roy McMillan, head of the Christian Action Group that sponsored the protest, told the protesters they were trying to "warn people of the evil way" of abortion

At the Mississippi Women's Medical Clinic, an unidentified female protester had a confrontation with security personnel because she trespassed while trying to stop two women from entering the clinic.

Among those still in jail in Atlanta were Richard Cowden-Guito and James McWilliams, who were arrested in a July 19 demonstration. They haven't been released because they have refused to sign their legal names on bond slips.

"My hope would be, and my intent is, to stay here the rest of my life," said Cowden-Guito, 39, of New York City, who said he is a free-lance journalist.

"I may have trespassed, but I certainly did not trespass against God's law," McWilliams said.

Council To Consider Proposed Vets Memorial On Commons

Whether to permit a veterans' memorial to be erected at the Town Commons will be one of the items adressed by the Greenville City Council at a workshop session 6 p.m. Monday in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

The monument, which would be erected by veterans' organizations at no cost to the city, would be approximately 6 feet wide and 3.5 feet high.

The request has been approved by the Parks and Recreation Commission.

The council will also consider making two amendments to animal control regulations.

The first amendment would change the word "adequate" to the word "actual" in describing the physical control which an owner must have over a dog which is off the owner's private property.

The second amendment would add a subsection making it unlawful to permit any dog to defecate or urinate on any lawn or property other than the owner's without the permission of the owner of that property.

Also to be considered is the rewriting of an ordinance making it unlawful for any person to leave the roadway and travel across private property to avoid an official traffic control device.

The council will also discuss those items scheduled to be addressed at its regular monthly action meeting 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Council Chambers of City Hall.

Those items include a request by James D. Mellon Jr. to rezone a 3.26-acre tract located at the southwest corner of SR 1725 and SR 1708 from RA-20 (residential-/agriculture) to O&I (office and institutional); a request by Walter L. Williams to rezone a .175-acre tract located 123 feet east of Memorial Drive off the northern right of way of South Village Drive from R-6 (residential) to CH (highway commercial); a request by Bill Clark Construction Company to rezone a 794-square-foot tract located 650 feet south of the Red Banks Road Extension, east of the Lynndale Subdivision and part of the Lynndale Townes Subdivision from R-15S (residential) to R-6 (residential); a request by the city's Development Department to rezone a 1.54-acre tract north of 14th Street, east of the railroad tracks and being lots 1, 2, 3 and 4, Block 42-I of the South Evans Redevelopment Project from CDF (downtown fringe commercial) and R-6 (residential) to IU (unoffensive industry), and a request by J. Bryant Kittrell to rezone two tracts located in the Medical District, north of Stantonsburg Road, south of SR 1202 and being directly east of Medical Oaks Apartments and Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

Tract 1, being 4.53 acres, is requested to be rezoned from MD-3 (office) to MD-5 (residential) and tract 2, being .44 acres, from MD-5 to MD-3.

Other items on Thursday's agenda include consideration of several buildings for historical designation.

The buildings include the Hassell-James (Owens) Building and grounds, 105 and 107 W. Third St.; the York Memorial Church and grounds, the 600 block of Albermarle Avenue; the Third Street School and grounds, 600-700 W. Third Street; the Patrick-Arthur House, on the corner of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard; the Jones-Lee House and grounds, 805 Evans St., and the E.B. Ficklen House and grounds, 508 W. Fifth St.

The council also will consider the sale of Disposal Parcels D-2 and F-6 in the Southside Development Project and Parcels 42-H-1A and 42-I-8A in the South Evans Community Development Project.

Consent agenda items to be considered Thursday include the refund of $545 and the release of $21,160 in taxes; consideration of 15 certificates of municipal ordinances from the N.C. Department of Transportation to reflect recent route changes within the city; acceptance of four streets for permanent city maintenance; an ordinance to establish six new stop signs; an ordinance to establish a 25 mph speed limit on Boxwood Lane and Woodhaven Drive; establishment of a 259 feet no parking zone on the north side of Buxton Road; an ordinance establishing a loading-unloading zone on the west side of Oak Street south of Fourth Street, and consideration of a right-of-way encroachment agreement for an irrigaton system to be placed within the right-of-ways within the Bedford Place Subdivision.

A Reflector Review

Cast Steals Show In ATW Production

The Ayden Theater Workshop's rendition of "To Kill A Mockingbird" is well worth one's time and money this weekend. It may be seen for the last time Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Ayden-Grifton High School Auditorium.

The dedication the workshop participants bring to the play is obvious. The scenery, devised by master carpenter Craig Sumerell and built by members of the group, is beautiful in its simplicity and multifunction.

And I find it amazing that each cast member seems so appropriate for his or her role, with the exception of one white man, David Webb, who plays the black minister, Rev. Sykes. This is a story largely about the damning effects of the ignorance and racial prejudice that existed in the South in 1935. So it's both regrettable that not enough black men made themselves available here in 1988 to fill all the roles and at the same time admirable that black and white members of the larger Ayden community did come together to present such a sensitive story so beautifully.

Sarah Rose makes a wonderful ramrod-straight, compelling-in-her-innocence Scout. Joel McLawhorn conveys well the integrity of the Alabama lawyer Atticus who risks his standing in the community to defend a black man accused of "taking advantage of" and beating a white woman. Myriam Harris plays the tyrannical housekeeper Calpurnia beautifully. Tracy Rattigan's a great sleazy, scared Mayella Ewell. And could anyone have played the despicable Bob Ewell better than Ed Davenport?

Many of the other cast members were equally as well chosen. Lauretta Riggs brings comic relief as Stephanie Crawford, as does Barbara Houston as Mrs. Dubose. Duffy Lincoln portrays both Nathan and Boo Radley convincingly. Quincy Gardner is believable as Tom Robinson. Jason Myers as Jem and Thomas Rose as Dill handle large youth roles well.

I have in years past both read Harper Lee's novel, "To Kill A Mockingbird," and seen the movie, so I had some frame of reference for the story's presentation. The use of a grown-up Jean-Marie as a constantly on-stage narrator moved the story along nicely. Rosalie Jacobi Hutchens seemed unselfconscious and fitting in this role.

My admiration for the local talent is equaled only by the respect I must express for the dramatist Christopher Sergel, who took such a complicated multifaceted story and turned it into a play that can be performed in two acts on one stage with no set changes other than the carrying on of a few pieces of furniture to suggest a courtroom.

Again, I say, I can only imagine the hours of work that went into the high-quality performance achieved in this play by the Ayden Theater Workshop. Only they can know the value each of them derived from doing it. But it appears there is a lack of community support for their abilities and dedication. I hope that more of the community will treat themselves to this play this afternoon and to future performances that, given they are to be offered by virtually the same people, hold promise of being of equally high quality.

Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers: Where Your Health is as Important as Your Weight Loss

Being overweight can affect your health in ways you may not consider, or even be aware of—high blood pressure and cholesterol, diabetes, clogged arteries and other circulatory problems, shortness of breath, fatigue, hernias and back problems—to name just a few of the dangers. Those extra pounds are a terrible burden for the body physically, and eventually they will take their toll. However, simply deciding to lose weight may not be the best solution to the problem. It is important to know what kind of weight you're losing as you diet—water, fat or lean body mass. If you are just losing water, your weight loss will be temporary. If you are losing lean body mass, you will be doing yourself more harm than good. That is why it is important to be selective when choosing a weight loss program. Only join a program that emphasizes good health and nutrition, one that makes sure you're losing fat by carefully monitoring your progress. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers has designed a program that takes all of these things into consideration. They've also created a Weight Maintenance Program that will ensure that you'll never have to fight these problems again. At Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, you'll find a professionally trained staff which takes your weight loss and your health as seriously as you do.

Fits All Lifestyles

The Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers Weight Loss Program is designed to adapt to any lifestyle. People who work at home or in an office, teachers, even construction workers have found this healthy, nutritious program to be safe and effective. The diet is based on real food bought from the grocery store. Clients can eat three meals a day and lose up to four pounds per week, as hundreds of thousands of successful clients can attest! Many people are amazed at the wide variety of foods available on the program—assorted fruits and vegetables, meat, fish and poultry, eggs, even cheeses! For those whose schedules make shopping difficult, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers research and development departments have created a variety of delicious, low calorie Entrees which clients have the option of using whenever it is inconvenient to cook.

Your Health Comes First

If you're overweight and are not concerned about your health, you should be. At the very least, you should put yourself in the hands of people who have experience, are trained and are concerned about you. At Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, staff members closely watch every client's physical condition as they progress through the diet. Staff Nurses and Staff Counselors repeatedly check each client's weight, blood pressure and pulse rate. At specific intervals body measurements are taken for both inch loss and fat loss. A client's progress is calculated by comparing these measurements to those previously taken. Most importantly, the staff follows strict schedules for performing EKGs and Blood Tests to ensure the client's healthy progress on the program! This careful, repeated monitoring often shows that clients' blood pressure and cholesterol adjust to healthier levels as they lose pounds and inches!

Living Longer

The days of dieting just for the sake of losing weight are over. Now people diet so that they can continue to lead healthy, active and long lives. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers is dedicated to providing the most effective, nutritious and healthy weight loss program available to those who want help. Part of honoring this commitment to excellence is having a staff of weight loss professionals that is thoroughly trained in every aspect of the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers Weight Loss Program. Last year alone, the company experts trained over 2000 staff members at a total of 87 training sessions held throughout the country!

At these training programs, Center staff members learn practical ways to help clients reach their ideal weights. Subjects such as portion control, the ability to plan nutritious meals and proper intake of fluids are all important topics which staff members must learn in order to teach clients how to achieve successful weight loss. In addition, staff members are taught to recognize and correct behavior patterns which encourage being overweight, such as having meals in front of the television and eating quickly. All this so staff can help clients in their desire to live a longer life.

"I Lost 290½ Pounds!"

"When I began the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program, I had a 71" bust, a 71" waist, 72" hips and weighed 444 pounds. It was an exciting day when it no longer took two people and two tape measures to measure me! I was thrilled to give away my size 52 clothes and 13 months later to be wearing a size 13!"

Rebecca Troxler
Burlington, NC

"I Lost 115 Pounds and 74¼ Inches in 17 Weeks!"

In high school I was a three sport letterman and I played football in college. Eleven years later I wondered where that person had gone. Suffering from high blood pressure, it was a chore to even play catch with my 7-year-old son. Thanks to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Center I have now returned to my "playing weight." I have lost 115 pounds and 74¼ inches in 17 weeks. My blood pressure has returned to normal and I am no longer taking medication for it!"

Rich Nixon
Garner, N.C.

"I Lost 47 Pounds And 54 Inches"

I was miserable with myself. I was overweight, uncomfortable and approaching the wonderful age of the big Four-O. My doctor was treating me for ulcers. I told my friend how disgusted I was and she told me about her neighbor who had lost weight at PWLC. I visited with her and a week later began the program.

I liked the idea of eating real food and making choices. I achieved my ultimate goal of 47 pounds and 54 inches in 15 short weeks. I was excited and motivating friends to join the PWLC diet. My dress size went from 18 to 10. Four weeks after I began the diet, I was off all medication. I felt great! I had always wanted to take shag dance lessons. I began my lessons in January and met a wonderful man who is not only dancing in contests with me but has danced his way into my heart.
I had tried every diet including acupuncture and hypnosis. None had worked prior to the PWLC program. The key to my success is the maintenance program. I have maintained my weight for five months and I'm loving every minute of being thin. Thank you PWLC!

Cynthia K. Jenkins

"I Lost 39 Pounds and Went to a Size 4½ Ring!"

"I lost 39 pounds in 18 weeks on the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Program and words cannot describe how happy I am. I had gotten up to 160 pounds and I said enough is enough. I had never been on a diet before, but I had been wanting to lose weight for the last 12 years. My fiancee gave me a gorgeous diamond when I finished the diet. I had to have the ring cut down to a size 4½! So if you want to lose weight, sign up with the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Center diet!"

Heidi Symrell
Cary, N.C.

"I Lost 125½ Pounds and 113¼ Inches!"

The Physicians Weight Loss program is the best thing that has ever happened to me. In just 10½ months, I went from 253½ pounds to 128 pounds and from a size 24½ to a size 7/8. I never knew what it was like to go into a store and buy clothes; I always had to go to specialty shops. Now, I can go anywhere! Thanks Physicians Weight Loss Centers for all your help and guidance!

Rose Smith and Anna Blair, nurses from the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, visited Carol Whitaker's kindergarten and first grade health class at Stokes. They discussed instruments, procedures and materials a child would experience as a patient.

Dr. T.C. Soli of Burroughs-Wellcome in Greenville discussed bacteria during a visit to Norma Gabriel's second and third grade class. Students examined plates containing bacteria they had collected for their classroom and around the school ground.

Homecoming At Rose

J.H. Rose High School will have homecoming activities Monday through Friday with the theme "Royal Rampant Rage." Activities include a homecoming assembly Thursday at 8:45 a.m. where the homecoming court will be presented and Mr. and Miss School Spirit will be awarded.

A bonfire will be held that evening at 7:30, when students will participate in competitions and games.

A pig pickin' will be held Friday from noon to 2:30 p.m. in front of the school, preceded by the homecoming parade. The football game, featuring the Rampants and Wilson Fike will begin at 8 p.m., and a dance from 10:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. will be held in th school cafeteria.

Lunch Week Celebrated

National School Lunch Week was celebrated at J.H. Rose High School with the theme "Wizard of Health." Art classes of Stephen Donald and Billy Stinson decorated the cafeteria with a huge effigy of a wizard, castles and other characters of the Wizard of Oz.

Special guests were served in Elaine Tschetter's food service classes including Greenville Mayor Ed Carter, state Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., Leroy James, Jead Darden, Greenville City Councilman Rufus Huggins and Billy Byrd.

Farm Agent Says Now Is Time To Harvest Peanuts, Potatoes

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With the recent advent of frost in Pitt County, farmers are being urged to get two local crops, peanuts and sweet potatoes, out of the ground as soon as possible.

"Farmers should by all means put emphasis on digging their peanuts at the earliest possible moment, even if that means harvesting during the weekend days," said Sam Uzzell, Pitt County agricultural extension agent.

"The recent frosts have caused many of the leaves on peanut vines to shed," Uzzell added. Many farmers bale the peanut leaves and vines to use as animal feed.

"There is no further maturing of peanuts once frost strikes, so there's no logical reason to delay digging them any longer," Uzzell explained. "Also, rain has been forecast as coming in and rain is much more serious than frost when harvesting peanuts."

For much the same reasons, Uzzell is urging farmers to get sweet potatoes out of the ground "as soon as possible. A heavy frost can damage them." Sweet potatoes, he added "are best stored after digging in some place where the humidity can be controlled at about 90 to 95 percent, with temperatures ranging from 80 to 85 degrees."

Harvest of soybeans, according to Uzzell, is altogether a different situation. "When leaves fall from soybean vines, that's a big help in having a clean harvest. And frost does not damage mature soybeans."

In recent years, a sizeable number of Pitt County farmers have turned to cultivating truck crops. "Farmers raising collards, broccoli, cabbage and other fall vegetables are doing all right so far," Uzzell said. "These crops seem to take cold weather pretty well."

Mentioning outside flowers grown by many residents, Uzzell advises "taking inside ones that are feasible to move and that suffer from frost," he said. "Flowers left outside should be well covered to protect them against the possibility of a killing frost."

The cafeteria workers were presented corsages in honor of National School Lunch Week. Seventy-one parents had lunch with their children during the week.

Fourth-grade students saw a puppet show on fire prevention. Capt. Michael Branch and other local firemen presented a program on safety procedures.

'Smart Moves'

Bob Dailey of the Pitt County schools will be among high school athletic directors in 30 counties participating in "Smart Moves," a program designed to increase seatbelt use among public school students, next week.

Martin Joins Sponsors For North Fund-Raiser

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. Jim Martin is listed one of six sponsors — some Democrats, some Republican — of a fund-raiser for Oliver North, but it was unclear Saturday whether the governor would attend the Nov. 1 event.

Meanwhile, a poll by The Charlotte Observer shows that North Carolina voters have swung toward Republican George Bush, boosting Republican chances for a Southern sweep over Democrat Michael Dukakis.

The poll, released Saturday, shows 53 percent of likely North Carolina voters favoring or leaning toward Vice President Bush and his running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana. That compares with 40 percent support for Dukakis, the governor of Massachusetts, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. Seven percent were undecided or named other choices.

North, the retired lieutenant colonel under indictment for his role in the Iran-contra affair, is scheduled to appear for two hours Nov. 1 at a Charlotte hotel, where guests can meet him over cheese, crackers, fruit and punch at the $100-a-person reception. Martin has a campaign rally scheduled that night in Wilmington.

Martin spokesmen said Saturday they did not know if the governor would attend the fund-raiser.

Robert Pittenger, the Charlotte businessman and acquaintance of North's who organized the event, said all money raised will go to the North Defense Trust, which pays North's legal and security expenses.

Pittenger said the reception wasn't meant to be political, and he made sure Democrats were included among the six sponsors that appeared atop the invitations.

Department store mogul John Belk, a Democrat and former Charlotte mayor, and Cy Bahakel, a Democrat and broadcasting executive, are listed as hosts, as are Rick Hendrick, the auto dealership owner and racing team sponsor, and A. Grant Whitney, founder of Festival in the Park.

"It's a broad group of people," said Pittenger. "It's not political. It's not intended to be partisan at all. It's intended to be representative of people who appreciate the commitment that Col. North has to freedom and to protection of our freedom and democracy here and throughout the world."

A federal grand jury investigating the Iran-contra affair has indicted North on charges including conspiring to defraud the govern ment and obstruction of Congress. The charges stem from actions that took place while North was assigned to the White House as a National Security Council staff member. The trial is expected to begin sometime after the election.

The presidential poll by The Charlotte Observer shows a major shift among state voters in the past three weeks, and reflects a pattern of regional support for Bush.

An Observer Poll last month showed voters almost evenly split, with 48 percent for Bush and 47 percent for Dukakis. That reinforced widely held views that the state could go either way.

Since then, Dukakis's support has eroded among nearly every voter group, and significantly among middle-age voters, middle- and upper-income voters, college graduates, and voters in urban counties and the Piedmont.

Dukakis has maintained support only among some traditionally Democratic voting groups: low-income voters, the elderly, and those without high school diplomas.

Bush has increased support among the young, whites and voters in western North Carolina, apparently because of voters' optimism about the national economy and their personal financial situations — and by a belief among almost half the voters that Dukakis is too liberal.

The poll suggests that while GOP attacks on Dukakis as soft on crime, weak on defense and prone to raise taxes have worked, Dukakis' efforts to tie Bush to ethical problems of the Reagan administration have not.

The poll, by the marketing research division of The Charlotte Observer, surveyed 870 registered voters Oct. 9-12. Results were weighted to reflect a "probable electorate," based on questions about each respondent's voting history and intention to vote.

The survey has an overall sampling error of plus or minus 3.3 percentage points. But among smaller groups of voters, the sampling error is larger. For example, because the poll surveyed only 545 Democrats, the sampling error in that group is plus or minus 4.2 percentage points.

The poll mirrors one a week earlier by The Atlanta Journal and Constitution.

Estuarine Project Says Research Needed

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Members of the Albemarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study said Saturday that the project needs more emphasis on research that could be translated into policy recommendations and actions.

That consensus came after two days of what spokesmen said was intensive self-analysis.

Members of a panel fielding questions at the conclusion of the study's first year-end meeting said the analysis of programs by committee members, the public and outside experts showed some of the future needs of the study.

Derb Carter, an environmental lawyer who chairs the study's Pamlico Citizens Advisory Committee, said he learned that the study was lacking in the amount of information it provided to the public.

"I think that's an area where we need some additional emphasis," he said.

Bruce Barrett, an official with the Environmental Protection Agency, said he thought the analysis revealed the study was progressing well despite the shortcomings cited.

"Yeah, we have a few warts," he said. But he said as compared with other estuarine studies, the APES program seemed to be doing a good job.

The five-year, $5 million federally funded study began in February 1987. It is designed to identify problems in the estuary, protect it from further damage and restore it where possible. The study's policy, technical and citizen's advisory committees met Friday and Saturday reviewing the work that's been done and areas that need more emphasis.

Research thus far has been concentrated on critical problems in the estuary, fisheries, water quality, human environment, information management and public information.

During Friday's meeting, participants outlined about 45 research projects included in the $5 million study.

"More vigorous efforts must be made by all participants to assure that (the study) does not become just another government study that will sit on the shelf," the position paper for the Pamlico group said.

"Everyone believes that good information is being collected, but we are concerned that it may never be used to protect our sounds."

But project supporters, including top federal and state environmental officials, said the study was taking a long time because it is a complex task that has never been done in the state.

Rhodes said it took time to establish the required policy, technical and advisory committees, and that progress was delayed by a change in executive directors. He said the study would be able to meet a schedule that calls for a management program to improve water quality within five years.

Greene Couple Use Hands To Produce A 'Different' Home

By Winkie Lee
GOLDSBORO NEWS-ARGUS

SNOW HILL, N.C. (AP) — Haywood and Dorothy Harrell have long enjoyed working with their hands. When retirement was just around the corner, they decided to buy an old, run-down house between Snow Hill and Goldsboro as a work project.

Their definition of working, however, was not rolling some paint on a wall or buying new light fixtures.

Instead, the couple, who have been retired for 11 years now, have completely rebuilt the four-room house and added three rooms. The work has been done by hand with very little assistance except for plumbing and wiring.

One one side of the den is a waterfall the couple constructed after a visit to the Methodist Center in Raleigh. Made of fiber glass and stucco cement, it features gray "rocks" adorned with animal model purchased from vacations spots the Harrells have visited.

A concealed hose attached to a small motor causes the water to cascade down the fall and then recirculate.

In front of the waterfall is a column that contains a series of shelves for the ceramic figures Mrs. Harrell enjoys creating. But the column serves more purposes than display.

"The was originally a chimney," Harrell said. "We reworked it."

Rework it they did. One side opens into an extra table leaf for when company is expected. The whole side of the chimney can be pulled down to connect with a wooden table in the adjoining kitchen area, creating a warm, homey scene. The familiar picture of a man praying over a loaf of bread hangs over an inside shelf which contains eating utensils and a small loaf of bread resembling the one in the painting.

The house was 65 years old and in very poor condition when the Harrells purchased it on Sept. 17, 1985.

It was just what the couple wanted.

"We wanted to take something and remodel it," Harrell said. "I like to take something ugly and make it pretty."

They started by working on one room and building a bathroom. That gave them somewhere to live while they worked on the rest of the house.

The house continues to amaze friends.

In the hallway is a desk, but, as is true for so many other parts of the house, it is no ordinary piece of furniture.

The Harrells made it from an 1874 church organ that no longer could be played.

The couple, who will celebrate their 49th wedding anniversary Nov. 15, have maintained an excitement about their home. As they show their creations, they occasionally comment about what renovations are ahead.

"We just can't get it all done," Harrell said with a smile.

Both he and his wife are happy about that.

Prisoners' Location Uncertain

WILMINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are no longer sure that two Americans taken prisoner in Laos are being held in Vientiane, the Laotian capital, the sister of one of the two said.

"It's not confirmed," Toni Tumlin said of the move. "That is what I'm being told."

She was told that the Laotians are not responding to queries from the American embassy and was warned that "Laos is getting worse" and the Laotians are "very paranoid," said Ms. Tumlin of Jacksonville.

Her sister, Donna Long of Jacksonville and James Copp of Hampstead, were arrested Oct. 2 after they crossed the Mekong River. They crossed from Thailand into Laos while promoting a reward for the return of any living prisoners of the Vietnam War.

Wednesday, the U.S. State Department told Ms. Tumlin that the two were reported to have been taken to Vientiane from Pakse, a provincial capital near the remote area where they were arrested.

Friday, a State Department official said that might not be true.

The reported move to Vientiane had raised hopes that American officials there would be allowed to contact the two North Carolinians.

Ms. Long and Copp had traveled by boat from a Thai fishing village, attempting to distribute packets of money marked with a message offering a $2.4 million reward to anyone who brings a living American prisoner of war out of Indochina and delivers him to a representative of the International Red Cross.

Ms. Long and Copp are members of the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans, a private group which offers the reward fund, pledged by individuals.

The head of the organization said Friday that he had heard the same news as Ms. Tumlin.

Honor Principal Says Salaries Too Low

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Overall, education is improving in North Carolina with reforms such as the Basic Education Plan, but schools are still not doing enough, says a school principal who was named National Distinguished Principal in North Carolina last year.

"If we want quality, we'll have to pay for it," said Richard Voso, principal of Brevard Elementary School. "I'm not too impressed with what (Gov. Jim) Martin and (Lt. Gov. Bob) Jordan have to say. Teachers deserve salaries of $50,000 to $60,000 to $70,000 a year if you compare them to dentists who are at the top of the pay structures in their offices."

Politicians talk about education, "but you have to value educators to have good education," Voso told teachers and administrators at a luncheon sponsored by People for the American Way. "You can't value education without paying good salaries."

Lead-teacher projects have the potential to "take us in that direction," but teachers will have to unite to improve their status and pay, he said.

Voso said public education will only get worse until bright young people choose well-paying teaching posts over industry and professional jobs.

Voso used his family as an example. His wife is a teacher and so is his daughter. A son broke the family tradition by becoming a textile company manager and won promotions and higher pay for it.

"He makes $4,000 more than his mother, who has been teaching third grade for 15 years and $9,000 more than his sister who teaches physics and biology," said Voso, a former teacher in New York City schools. "That is wrong."

Teacher pay has become an issue in the governor's campaign, with Martin and Jordan trading criticisms over who is or would be "an education governor."

Jordan, a Democrat has accused Martin, a Republican, of opposing the Teaching Fellows Program, and he says North Carolina would have fallen from 35th to 39th nationally in teacher pay if the Legislature had approved Martin's budget proposals. Martin has said he favored the teachers fellow program.

ANNOUNCING A RADICALLY DIFFERENT CD FOR CONSERVATIVE INVESTORS.

The Wachovia Convertible CD Gives You The Flexibility To Switch To A Higher Rate, Without Penalty, If Interest Rates Rise.

Until now, when you invested in a certificate of deposit you had to stay with a fixed rate for the term of the certificate or incur penalties. Now, Wachovia introduces a new and innovative CD that lets you take advantage if a better rate comes along. The Wachovia Convertible CD.

Convert Without Penalty

The term is one year. But after three months, if interest rates rise anytime during the remainder of the term, you can switch to another one-year Convertible CD at the higher rate. Or to a non-convertible CD of one year or longer. All without incurring a penalty.

. . . And Keep On Converting

You can continue to convert to a new one-year Convertible CD as long as interest rates rise. All we ask is that you wait at least three months between conversions.

Safe And Secure

Like other Wachovia CDs, the rate on the Convertible CD is guaranteed for the term of your certificate, unless and until you decide to switch to a higher rate. Your new rate is also guaranteed for the full term. So it can't go down if interest rates fall. And the current opening rate on the Convertible CD is 7.85%, with an annualized yield of 8.165%.* So it's a good deal right from the start.

Convert To The Convertible

If you have a CD maturing, or you're considering a new deposit investment, the Convertible CD is a smart, safe way to catch interest rates on the rise. It's available only from a Wachovia Personal Banker℠. Because a better way to invest has always been The Wachovia Way.

THE WACHOVIA WAY

It's more than what we do. It's how we do it.℠

Member F.D.I.C.

*Quoted rate based on deposits of $10,000 to $49,999. Other rates available for other amounts. Rate shown subject to change. $500 minimum deposit. $250,000 maximum per depositor. While there is no penalty for conversions, there is a substantial penalty for early withdrawal. Individuals only.

Judges Say Lack Of Security Leads Some To Take Weapons Into Court

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As courtroom security disintegrates in some counties, more and more judges are carrying weapons into the courtroom, under their robes, said a Wesleyan College professor who conducted a survey.

"We're in a fairly easy target position, aren't we, up there at the end of the courtroom," said James H. Pou Bailey, an emergency Superior Court judge from Raleigh, said. "And we're not dealing with the finest class of people, either. You invite very few defendants out to lunch."

Because they often hold court several counties from home, stay in hotel rooms and travel alone late at night, many judges carry guns, Bailey said.

"I have one with me at this moment," Bailey said from his home Friday. "But not for waving around, being a big macho bastard. That's for doing a job if I have to do it."

But Bailey said he knew of no judge doing so.

Carting a gun under a judge's robe constitutes the crime of carrying a concealed weapon, Bailey said. Not only is it illegal, it's impractical.

"You ever try to get one from under a robe?" he asked.

John Stevens, who presented his survey to the Southern Criminal Justice Association Friday, said litigants have used fists, chairs, even handguns on each other in the state's courts.

About a year ago in Buncombe County District Court, a bullet pierced the ceiling. Everyone — the judge, the attorneys, most of the gallery — hit the floor, expecting a firefight.

It turns out the gun fell out of the purse of a woman rummaging for something else.

"How easy it is for anybody to bring a loaded gun into the courtroom," Stevens said. "We have a serious problem, and no one is working on it."

In his survey, answered by 70 of the state's 210 regular Superior and District Court judges, two thirds said they had seen threats made in the courtroom — half against witnesses, the rest against attorneys and judges. Nearly half the judges said they had been harassed, and one of four said he needed police protection at times.

Two-thirds of the threats ended in violence, and practically all of them were in District Court, where most small offenses like simple assault are heard.

District Court in Edgecombe County is called "The Zoo," Stevens said. Like Buncombe County's, defendants and relatives constantly walk in and out. The noise is incredible, the confusion immense and the respect for the court nil.

The most dangerous cases to preside over are not the big murder trials, but those in domestic court, the judges responded. There they confront parties locked into bitter disputes over alimony and child custody. In Florida recently, a man who decided he'd "had enough" pulled out a gun and killed the judge, his ex-wife and her attorney.

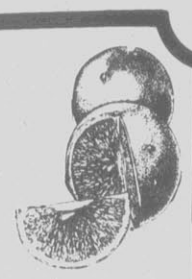

Several years ago, Superior Court Judge Everett Thompson was shot and killed through the window of his Elizabeth City living room.

About 35 years ago Judge Albert W. Cowper of Kinston was taken hostage by a man he had sentenced eight months earlier.

"He said he was going to kill us," Cowper, now retired, said. The judge talked him out of it, however, and won his release by midnight.

Legislators Want To Ban Bias Against AIDS-Infected People

RALEIGH (AP) — A committee of legislators studying AIDS voted to recommend that the General Assembly pass a sweeping law that would ban discrimination in housing, employment and insurance against people infected with the AIDS virus.

The committee also will ask the state to spend $1 person, or about $6.5 million, on education and prevention programs on acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"There was absolute unanimity on the committee," Sen. Helen Rhyne Marvin, D-Gaston, the co-chairman of the AIDS study committee, said of the anti-discrimination law after the meeting. "Yesterday and today, I don't think there was anybody that didn't think we needed it."

The committee held a public hearing Thursday at which more than 50 people — doctors, ministers and lawyers — spoke about the need for more money and protection for people with AIDS.

On Friday, the committee heard from more leaders, including Dr. Jared Schwartz, who represented the N.C. Medical Society, and Dr. M. Lynn Smiley, the vice chairman of the state's AIDS task force.

The Department of Human Resources established the AIDS task force in 1986 to study how the state should fight AIDS. The task force, composed of doctors and AIDS leaders, will make its own recommendations to the department Dec. 1.

Schwartz, a pathologist at Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte, called for a ban on discrimination to help stop the spread of AIDS. Smiley, a specialist in infectious diseases at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, told the committee that the Institute of Medicine recommends that states spend $1 a person on AIDS education and prevention.

This year, North Carolina is spending about 10 ccents a person, she said.

An anti-discrimination law was introduced to the legislature during its short session last summer as part of a public health bill.

But the Senate killed the measure when legislators questioned singling out AIDS patients for special protection that people with other communicable diseases would not receive, said Chris G. Hoke, the chief attorney for the state Division of Health Services, which oversees public health laws.

Also, he said, the anti-discrimination law would ensure that people who carry the AIDS virus but can still work do not become dependent on state welfare because no one will hire them.

The committee agreed to resubmit the bill as it was written but added insurance to its list of protections.

The bill also covers public services, accommodations and transportation.

The committee also plans to recommend that the legislature:

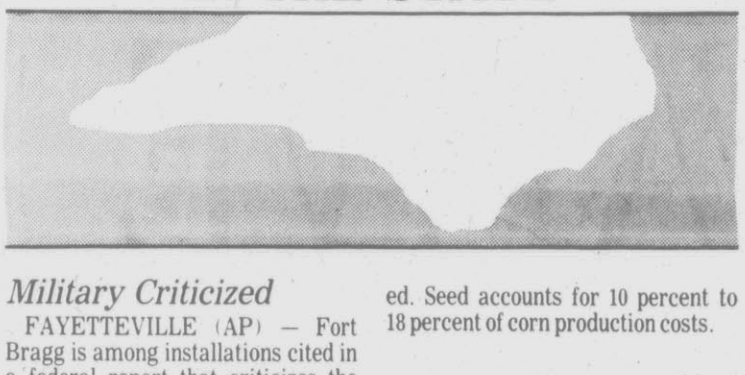

— Allocate money for foster care for children with AIDS; for patients who take an AIDS durg called azidothymidine, or AZT; and for service groups that care for patients.

— Continue the AIDS studdy committee for another year.

The committee will meet in November to approve its final report.

Military Criticized

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Fort Bragg is among installations cited in a federal report that criticizes the military for not properly following Department of Defense policies on use of military rather than commercial aircraft for travel by high-ranking officials.

But post officials say proper procedures are being followed and defend the use of 18th Airborne Corps' fixed-wing aircraft, which are at Fort Bragg's Simmons Army Air Field and available for use by the 11 general officers on post.

"Prior Defense Department and service-branch audits of Operational Support Airlift (OSA) showed weakness in management oversight and administrative controls," the General Accounting Office report says. "The audits also have identified abuses of Operational Support Airlift," which result in increased Defense Departme nt transportation cost.

Winning Seed

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Last year, experts warned farmers stricken by the 1986 drought not to plant the free "brown bag" seed passed out by the Church World Service and the United Farmers Organization.

This year, a variety of the seed from Jacques Seed Co. of Wisconsin won the Union County official variety contest with a yield of 96.33 bushels per acre — nearly 3 bushels more than the second-highest variety.

Yields ranged down to 42.35 bushels per acre, with an average of 68.07 bushels among 18 varities planted on the Don Cox farm in southeastern Union County.

Experts told farmers not to plant the gift seed because they risked losing time, labor, equipment, fertilizer and weed-killer costs if the crop failed. Seed accounts for 10 percent to 18 percent of corn production costs.

Tobacco Policy

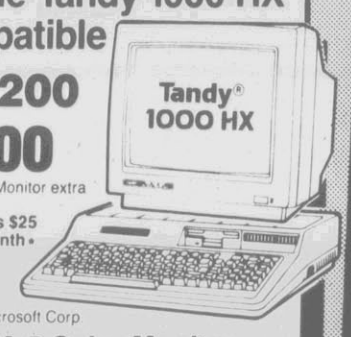

WASHINGTON (AP) — A letter being circulated by U.S. Rep. Larry Hopkins asks that the Department of Agriculture return to its policy of requiring tobacco shipments to be 100 percent domestic-grown to win federal export aid.

A Hopkins aide said 27 House members, including Agricuture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, have signed the letter to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng. The aide said additional signatures will be sought before it is sent, probably early next week.

Texas Town Erects Plaque Honoring '87 Rescue Effort

By Wendy E. Lane
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIDLAND, Texas — With a little help from her mother, 2½-year-old Jessica McClure unveiled a bronze plaque Saturday commemorating her rescue one year ago after 58 hours trapped in an abandoned well.

Jessica squealed with delight and squirmed in her mother's arms while about 150 people crowded in to see the plaque, which shows the smiling, dusty faces of rescue workers when they pulled the bandaged child up a rescue shaft.

"Chip and I are still thanking the Lord for getting us our beautiful baby back," Cissy McClure said at the ceremony. "This rescue meant a lot to us."

Mayor Carroll Thomas praised the spirit of the volunteer rescuers, many of whom came from cities outside Midland to help.

"Those people responded marvelously, on the spur of the moment, and they came as fast as they could," Thomas said.

The plaque, designed by Midland artist Mary Griffith, reads: "Nothing the heart gives away is gone. It is kept in the hearts of others."

Thomas announced the creation of an annual award to be given by Midland to another U.S. city which shows community spirit akin to that displayed in Midland during Jessica's ordeal. The first such award will be given next year on the second anniversary of Jessica's rescue.

Jessica fell into the 8-inch-wide abandoned water well in her aunt's back yard on Oct. 14, 1987, and captured the world's attention when she cried for her mother and softly sang nursery rhymes until her rescue in front of live television cameras.

Volunteers drilled a shaft parallel to the well, their progress made agonizingly slow because the hard rock dulled even diamond-tipped drill bits. After two days of drilling, they made a horizontal shaft just under Jessica and plucked her out Oct. 16.

Midland firefighters and paramedics had joined with oil drilling engineers and roughnecks for the painstaking effort.

The plaque is intended to thank them and the oilfield service companies that provided equipment used by the volunteers. Jim and Joy Cook of Corpus Christi provided funds for the 4-by-6-foot bas relief on the side of a community center in downtown Midland.

During her ordeal, Jessica was wedged in the shaft in such a position that blood flow to her right foot was impaired and she lost a small patch of skin from her forehead.

Jessica lost her right little toe and part of her big toe and skin had to be stretched over the forehead wound, but after spending more than a month in the hospital her doctors say she apparently hasn't suffered any other adverse physical or psychological effects.

In an interview published in Sunday's editions of the Odessa American, Jessica's 19-year-old parents said their daughter is normal with no memory of the tumble that made world headlines.

"I don't think she realizes she's any different," Mrs. McClure said. "She knows she's Jessica and she's the little girl that fell in the well, but that doesn't mean anything to her."

After a squabble over rights to the story between two factions of people who were involved in the rescue, a Los Angeles production company is drafting a script for a television movie about Jessica's saga.

The toddler has a trust fund at a local bank that will be used for future medical bills and will be turned over to her when she becomes 26.

In December 1987, the Midland City Council passed an ordinance requiring that abandoned wells be covered.

Land Path Has Storm In Check

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Joan swirled westward in the Caribbean on Saturday, close enough to the northern tip of South America to keep its 50 mph winds from strengthening, forecasters said.

At 3 p.m. EDT, Joan was centered near latitude 12.0 north, longitude 65.0 west, or about 215 miles east of Bonaire in the Netherlands West Antilles. It was moving west at 10 mph and was expected to stay on that track through Sunday afternoon.

"If it stays on its current path, it's not likely to strengthen," said Max Mayfield, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables. "As it moves closer to South America, the large circulation of the storm will be broken up by the dry land mass and it should weaken a good bit."

Storm warnings were posted for the islands off the north coast of Venezuela, including La Blanquilla, Orchila and Los Roques and remained in effect for Grenada and its dependencies. A tropical storm watch was in effect for the islands of Margarita, La Tortuga and Islas de Aves.

Rainfall amounts of 5 to 10 inches were a possibility for the string of islands in the path of the storm, forecasters said.

Meanwhile, storm warnings were discontinued for Grenada, which Joan crossed late Friday, and a tropical storm watch was discontinued for the island of Los Testigos.

Joan would have to take a dramatic turn out of the open water to strengthen again — a scenario that is not likely to happen, Mayfield said.

"It would be a rare case — but I never say never," he said.

Joan became the 10th named system of the 1988 Atlantic hurricane season Tuesday when its top winds passed the minimum 39 mph mark to qualify for classification as a tropical storm.

There have been four hurricanes so far this season, including Hurricane Gilbert, which left more than 300 people dead and caused billions of dollars damage as it tore through Jamaica, the Cayman Islands and Mexico's Yucatan peninsula.

The hurricane season extends from June 1 to Nov. 30.

Lack Of Child Care Costs Business, Coalition Says

BOSTON (AP) — The lack of child care in businesses costs the economy about $3 billion a year, jeopardizing economic growth as more women are needed to enter the workforce, the head of a national child care coalition said Saturday.

Declining birth and labor force growth rates mean that two-thirds of new jobs will have to be filled by women between now and 1995, said Barbara Reisman, executive director of the Child Care Action Committee in Washington, D.C.

"It's fairly clear that the lack of child care is an impediment to entering the workforce," said Reisman, in Boston for a conference of the Massachusetts Association of Day Care Agencies.

Reisman's organization late last month issued a report calling on the federal and state governments to play a greater role in working with businesses to increase child care efforts such as capital grants to employers for child care programs and parental leaves.

"Only 7 percent of American households now fit the Beaver Cleaver family's mold of breadwinning father and at-home mother," the report said.

Scholars Challenge Origin Of Lord's Prayer

ATLANTA (AP) — Jesus probably didn't write or use the Lord's Prayer and may have uttered only a few of the phrases it contains, a group of biblical and linguistic scholars has concluded at a conference.

They acknowledge the prospect of a fundamentalist uproar but say that doesn't bother them.

The prayer shows up in the Gospels of Luke and Matthew, which say Jesus taught it to his disciples.

The 25 participants of the Jesus Seminar, meeting in Atlanta over the weekend, agreed with a Pennsylvania minister who researched the issue that Jesus probably didn't ask God to "deliver us from evil," and almost certainly never said "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done."

A paper presented Friday by the Rev. Hal Taussig of St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia concludes that study of the Gospels and early Christian writings show the prayer is not in the words of Jesus.

The participants voted to agree with Taussig that Jesus probably never said the prayer as a prayer and probably never taught it as one.

They concluded that parts of the prayer may have been said by Jesus and that other parts represented his ideas.

Taussig said he expects the conclusions to be accepted by biblical scholars but that it might be harder to convince most churches.

The Jesus Seminar is a 3-year-old forum designed to raise public interest in efforts to separate what Jesus actually said from words that may have been put in his mouth by early Christians.

The participants, from colleges and universities around the country, generally characterize themselves as biblical scholars rather than theologians.

The seminar, which convened here Friday, has drawn fire from "the Bible-thumpers on the right," said Dr. Robert W. Funk, a former theology professor at Emory University and founder of the Jesus Seminar.

He said a main goal of the seminar is to allow qualified biblical scholars to relate their work to issues of public interest "and to get it away from the frauds, the TV evangelists who are mostly quacks."

The scholars have spent years studying the earliest available versions of the Gospels in Greek and Coptic. Some know Aramaic, which scholars say Jesus probably spoke.

By superimposing early language patterns on what is known of how people lived at the time of Jesus and later during the early Christian era, the scholars believe they can make fairly sound decisions on what was said and what was attributed by others.

Funk said the earliest fragment of the Gospels dates from about 125 A.D. and that there are frequent changes in subsequent versions, since each was hand copied.

Versions began to stabilize by around 400 A.D., he said. "There were no big surprises after that."

Funk said the earliest Greek and Coptic versions of the Gospels of Matthew, Mark and Luke are inconsistent with modern versions and the life and customs as they were known to be at the time of Jesus.

"For example, the early Christian church borrowed heavily from Jewish practices and customs and attributed some of those to Jesus," Funk said.

"Of course, we haven't drawn anything like 'The Last Temptation of Christ,'" he said, referring to the controversial movie. But he said he expected an angry reaction from segments of the fundamentalist community that believe in a literal interpretation of the New Testament.

If they don't react to it, he said, the study may not get much attention.

The seminar also concluded that Jesus created the tale of the Good Samaritan but decided that the parable of the fisherman who sorts good fish from bad was created later by someone else.

Nuns' Lock-In Sets Off Church Dispute

By Todd Richissin
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Five nuns locked in a spiritual battle over the intrusion of the modern world into their cloistered lives approached the end of their second week barricaded in their monastery's infirmary.

Their diocesan leader, Bishop Frank Rodimer, is calling the increasingly tense standoff within the Roman Catholic Church a scandal and says it stems mainly from personaly differences. The dispute has even involved the Vatican, 1979 Nobel Prize winner Mother Teresa of Calcutta and, indirectly, Walt Disney and Julie Andrews.

The Carmelite nuns at the Monastery of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel are cloistered, ordinarily having no contact with the outside world.

But the five rebels have a spokeswoman, 28-year-old Sister John of the Cross, who has handled the media with a touch of savvy while explaining that the five are fighting the introduction of modern conveniences into the monastery.

Four of the nuns locked themselves in the infirmary Oct. 4 because they feared they would be thrown out of the monastery. A fifth joined them shortly afterward. They say they are trying to remain in the monastery despite a notice of dismissal they received in June from their relatively new prioress, Mother Teresa Hewitt.

Rodimer said the case stems from a personality conflict between the nuns, ranging in age from 28 to 71, and their new prioress, who replaced a woman the five became emotionally attached to.

"I believe the bishop is simply clouding the issue when he brings up personality conflicts," Sister John told The Associated Press in an interview last week. "He's trying to make it something it is not."

Sister John says the dismissal notice was issued after she and the other four protesters objected to the liberalization of the monastery with the introduction of newspapers, sweets and television, along with videotapes of the "The Sound of Music," the 1960s hit musical in which Andrews played a woman who left a convent, and the Disney classic "Babes In Toyland."

An appeal of the pending dismissal has been filed with the Vatican and the nuns intend to stay in the infirmary until they hear from Rome, Sister John said.

The protesting nuns met Saturday with the Rev. Kevin Culligan of Milwaukee, who was sent by the Vatican to help resolve the dispute. Sister John declined to discuss the visit. She said more details would be available Sunday and she did not think the nuns would leave their refuge over the weekend.

Telephones at the diocese's offices went unanswered Saturday and neither Culligan nor diocesan officials could be reached for comment.

Sister John argues that their struggle has been misunderstood by the media, which she says have simplified the conflict down to five nuns who don't want television and sweets in their monastery vs. a bishop, prioress and eight other nuns who do.

"The candy and television in themselves are not the issue," Sister John says. "We are to live a life of penance, of austerity. We are not to be distracted by anything. The candy represents a lack of mortification."

Rodimer disagrees, saying the five are rebelling against the new prioress. In a news conference Wednesday, Rodimer referred with a touch of sarcasm to the television and sweets as "very profound issues."

No comment from the prioress was available Saturday; the telephone at the monastery was busy. But Mother Hewitt told The Star-Ledger of Newark earlier that the schism was between nuns who were loyal to the former prioress and those who accept the new authority, not between conservative and liberal sisters.

Nevada Playing For High Stakes By Drawing Off Water Reservoirs

By Tom Gardner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Water experts in this gambling state have staked their savings on what is at best an even-odds bet for a wet winter, draining most of western Nevada's drought-depleted reservoirs to keep faucets flowing this fall.

"We'll get through this year. But we're going to go into next year with basically everything empty," said Bob Firth, water resources manager for Westpac Utilities.

Its boat docks were on dry land early this summer, and Thursday its feeble flow to Reno went dry altogether when its level dropped below the spillways for the first time in 11 years.

Anticipating the loss of Tahoe's overflow, Westpac Utilities has been tapping Donner Lake, just across the state line in California, and is pumping as much groundwater as the state will allow to supply its 50,900 customers around Reno.

The Reno area is in a stage-three drought alert, but more strict limits are possible if the winter proves to be dry once again. Already, lawn watering is limited to one day a week, hosing off sidewalks, patios and driveways is prohibited and construction companies can't use water from hydrants for dust control. Restaurant patrons have to ask for a glass of water.

The winter snowpack in the Sierra Nevada range, which provides the summertime water for western Nevada through runoff into the Truckee and Carson rivers, has been about half of normal the past two years.

Firth and other members of Gov. Richard Bryan's 8-month-old drought committee agree that above-average snowfall in the Sierra Nevada is needed to relieve the drought and begin refilling the reservoirs.

There's scientific evidence, Firth says, that the last drought lasting as much as three consecutive years in western Nevada was around 1590.

Along with precipitation of just 3.95 inches since Oct. 1, 1987, compared with the normal 7.5 inches, the past summer was the warmest in the 118 years that records have been kept in Reno, according to John James, state climatologist.

"We got clobbered three ways," he said. "A lack of water, high temperatures and the highest evaporation rates we've seen. That just wiped us out."

Drought committee members agree it would take winter storms around 150 percent of average to restore the diminished reservoirs.

But even with a stormy winter, "We're going to have a lot of holes to fill," Firth said.

A snowfall that's just 90 percent of normal would allow Westpac Utilities to meet the Reno area's annual 21-billion-gallon thirst with some conservation, Firth said.

But Federal Watermaster Garry Stone said nearly three times that amount would be needed to meet the water needs of both the homes, hotel-casinos and businesses around Reno and the irrigation demands of golf courses and farmers and ranchers.

Bridge Day Lets Jumpers Show Off

FAYETTEVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Lukas Knutsson climbed the railing Saturday morning of the tallest bridge in the eastern United States as thousands of people gathered around. A few seconds later he jumped.

Knutsson, from Cambridge, England, was one of the more than 300 parachutists from around the world who leaped from the New River Gorge Bridge during the ninth annual Bridge Day.

"This is a totally unique sport," Knutsson said shortly after his first jump from the 876-foot bridge. "It's the closest a man can get to flying.

"The second I was off, it was beautiful. The more I jump, the more I can appreciate it. I'm going to jump as many times as I can."

State police reroute the two northbound lanes of U.S. 19 one day each year and let pedestrians crowd onto the highway to watch as brave souls leap and rappel from North America's second-highest bridge, about 40 miles southeast of Charleston.

The National Park Service said 150,000 showed up to watch Saturday's show, which was marred last year by a the death of a jumper.

Steven Gyrsting, 25, of Paoli, Pa., died after an eight-second free fall into rocks alongside the New River Gorge National River.

Few were deterred Saturday and police reported no serious injuries. About 600 jumps were made, with most jumpers using bigger pilot chutes. The parachutists aim for a small beach, but some end up landing in the water.

Gerard Tobin of Baltimore, Md., was forced to wait for his jump on the bridge's rail while a train passed below. After his jump he said the five-minute wait added to his nervousness.

Historian Sets Off Rumble: Was Peary First At North Pole?

By Randolph E. Schmid
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversy over who was first to reach the North Pole erupted even before Adm. Robert E. Peary returned from his famous 1909 trek. And the only person who really knows the answer has been dead for nearly 70 years.

But that hasn't discouraged periodic waves of speculation, the most recent touched off last week by Baltimore historian and astronomer Dennis Rawlins.

"He was the finest of the U.S. polar explorers, and he'll also have the credit of the most successful scientific hoax of this century. I think that's terrific for one man to pull off," Rawlins said of Peary's expedition.

According to Rawlins, notes kept by Peary show the explorer claimed to be the first person to reach the North Pole even though he knew he hadn't come closer than 121 miles.

"My reaction is primarily one of deja vu. This has been going on now since 1909, and his observations at the pole have been studied and restudied and analyzed and reanalyzed over and over," responded Edward Peary Stafford, grandson of the explorer.

"What is implied here is that a man who was an officer in the armed services of the United States, a commander in the Navy, of unwavering integrity, suddenly at age 53 changed his spots and became a crook," said Stafford.

"I don't think you'll ever convince anybody in the Peary family that that man was not where he said he was when he said he was there, and that that point was not the north pole of the Earth," he concluded.

"My estimate is that we will never know conclusively" whether Peary actually stood at the pole or not, said Philip Lundeberg, curator emeritus at the Smithsonian Institution's Museum of American History.

"In terms of the history of exploration, these were major feats of exploration at the time, and they were accepted at the time. ... My opinion is that these are culturally with us as achievements of exploration. We can't disprove them in terms of artifacts," Lundeberg said.

Peary wasn't even back from the trip when the first dispute erupted. Explorer Frederick Cook had reported reaching the pole ahead of Peary.

"I would say there had been considerable doubt raised all the way back to the original Cook controversy. Various societies, the National Geographic Society and so forth, bought the Peary report," said Lundeberg.

Cook's claims were eventually rejected, being termed "a type of circumstantial fiction" by the late arctic explorer Vilhjalmur Stefansson, but they forced Peary into a battle to defend his own effort.

And the resulting confusion found its way to the halls of Congress and produced lingering doubts that refuse to be put to rest.

Even the staid National Geographic Society, an early and fervent supporter of Peary, published an extensive study in September that perpetuates the questions.

"Whether he actually got to the pole or not, I don't think should detract from his bravery and spirit and his desire to make a lasting contribution to the people of this earth," said William R. Anderson, who commanded the Nautilus, the first submarine to sail beneath the ice at the pole in 1958.

"Having dealt with the ice pack to a certain extent ... he had a very tough undertaking. If he didn't get to the pole it wouldn't surprise me an awful lot, it really is a tough thing to do with what he had to do it with," said Anderson.

Ralph Plaisted's 1968 snowmobile trip to the pole would make him the first person to reach the spot overland if Peary failed to get there.

And Plaisted, of Wyoming, Minn., said he has suspected Peary's claims for years.

"You've got to picture this man ... he's got frozen feet, a few of his toes are missing, and he's 54 years old. The man got up there, and he knew it was his last trip, and he probably thought, 'Why not?'" Plaisted said.

"I don't blame Peary, I blame people like the National Geographic and The New York Times, who were supposed to investigate this," Plaisted added.

Will Steger, who reached the North Pole two years ago, is skeptical, however, of the evidence being used to discredit Peary.

Steger said he is suspicious of the new reports, but added: "It's his last crack at the pole, everything's on the line. He's freezing in an igloo, doesn't have any toes, he's totally exhausted. Did he really think he was there, or did he make it up? That, we'll never know."

Key to the lingering debate is the fact that Peary's arrival at the pole — or his northernmost point if it wasn't the pole — was witnessed by four Eskimos and his aide, Matthew Henson, but no one trained to independently calculate the exact location.

"In the cross-examination he was subjected to later, Peary was criticized for having no man with him who could vouch for his solar observations confirming the latitude. Peary's answer was that he wasn't about to share the glory with someone who had not earned the right to be there as he had — and there was no one, in his view," wrote Barry Lopez in his book "Arctic Dreams."

The notes taken by Peary himself to support his location can be interpreted in more than one way by professional astronomers and navigators. Peary, the only person who could fully explain the notes he kept, died in 1920.

"As to whether or not Peary reached the North Pole, the answer, by nature of the subjective elements within it, can never be anything more than probability," concluded Wally Herbert, an arctic explorer asked by the National Geographic Society to study Peary's notes.

The admiral's diary lacks essential data that a modern researcher could use to determine the exact location, Hebert reported, and any one of several possible errors could have led the explorer in the wrong direction. Indeed, a 10 minute error in his watch — which he was unaware of at the time — might have placed him 18 miles away from the pole, Herbert concluded.

Herbert concluded that although Peary crisscrossed the area to make sure he passed over the pole, he could well have missed the spot by 30 to 60 miles.

Rawlins, on the other hand, says his studies of Peary's notes kept at the National Archives and Johns Hopkins University convince him that the admiral knew exactly how far away he was and turned back when supplies ran low and warming weather threatened to make the floating ice too dangerous.

Rawlins concluded that Peary was as much as 121 miles away from the pole when he turned back.

Rawlins' evidence comes from interpretation of Peary's long-suppressed notes which Rawlins recently uncovered at the archives, where Peary's papers were kept under seal for about 50 years.

The Associated Press

Dennis Rawlins holds copy of notes that he says indicate Peary didn't reach North Pole

Rawlins was first made aware of the mysterious document — a series of astronomical observations — when he learned that Isaiah Bowman's file of his dealings with Peary also had been unsealed after half a century.

Bowman, a former president of Johns Hopkins, was a defender of Peary, and had come into possession of a copy of Peary's secret document in 1935. Peary's daughter, Marie, had sent to Bowman a copy of the mysterious paper, which was kept in her mother's safe deposit box in Portland, Maine.

According to Bowman, Peary had instructed his wife, Jo, to treasure the piece of paper "as her most precious possession and never let it out of her hands" unless it was to silence critics. Peary died in 1920.

Peary's grandson, Stafford, disputes Rawlins calculations.

"I have a study done by two mathematicians of the Coast and Geodetic Survey in 1911. They took the observations he made at pole, and came up with the conclusion he was within 1.6 miles," said Stafford.

And, he added, "a gentleman named Heber Curtis, in the 1939 edition of Naval Institute Proceedings, analyzed the admiral's observations at the pole ... and found it made within 100 feet."

"All I can say is ... all his observations have been studied to death. The Naval Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives studied it in minute detail and both the minority and majority decision said yes, he had been there," Stafford said.

"There are various ways of calculation that have been made that have cast doubt on his effort. ... But their validity is conjectural," said the Smithsonian's Lundeberg. "When we are trying to establish the arrival of an explorer at an ice floe, at a geographic location, there's nothing that can be left there permanently, as a record."

Capt. Robert Bartlett was the last man to turn back before the final rush to the pole, Stafford said, but before leaving he checked his location and calculated that he was 133 miles from the pole. After that Peary went on for five more days, Stafford said. Could he still have been 121 miles away from his goal? Stafford asked.

That was a time when explorers depended on the sun and stars for navigation and on their wits and guts for survival, he said. If you got into a problem, you didn't pick up a mike and call Houston for help.

'Green Berets' Composer Recovers From Gunshot

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Friends of retired Army Sgt. Barry Sadler, who wrote and sang "The Ballad of the Green Berets," say the ex-soldier is showing signs of recovering from a gunshot wound to the head.

Sadler is still comatose and seriously ill at the Veterans Administration hospital here, a hospital spokesman says, but friends say the Vietnam veteran and reputed Contra trainer appears to be improving.

"He is doing much better," said Sadler's literary agent, Bob Robison. "He moves sometimes and he opens his eyes some, but we can't make a real prognosis until he comes out of the coma."

Sadler was shot in the forehead Sept. 7 near his home in Guatemala City, Guatemala, in an apparent robbery attempt.

The former soldier lived in Nashville after the recording "Green Berets" became a hit in 1968, but left the country after serving 30 days of a four- to five-year sentence for a 1978 voluntary manslaughter conviction.

Robison said Sadler's latest book, a follow-up to "Razor," a book about mercenaries, already had been sent to him when Sadler was shot.

Sadler has written almost 30 books, including those in the "Casca" series, about a Roman soldier doomed to roam through time after stabbing Christ on the cross.

Two More Charged In Death

SANDY, Ore. (AP) — Two more staff members were charged with murder Saturday in the beating death of the 8-year-old daughter of the leader of a Los Angeles group said to be training children for Olympic-style competition.

Fifty-three other children, possibly victims of abuse, were put in state custody after the death Friday of Dayna Lorea Broussard.

The girl's father, Eldridge Broussard Jr., is the spiritual leader of the Watts Christian Center and founder of the Ecclesia Athletic Association, intended to train and discipline inner-city youngsters.

The dead child was beaten on her head, chest and extremities and died of "multiple blunt-force injuries," said state Medical Examiner Larry V. Lewman.

The three charged with murder were connected to Broussard's group, Clackamas County sheriff's spokeswoman Judy Gage said Saturday.

Willie K. Chambers, 35, of San Diego, was charged Friday and held without bail in the county jail. Charged Saturday were Constance Zipporah Jackson, 37, and Frederick Paul Doolittle, 28, both of Los Angeles. They were jailed pending arraignment Monday. Chambers is the father of a student at the center.

The 53 children, aged 3 months to 16 years and all reportedly from Los Angeles, were taken by state authorities from a farm house eight miles east of Sandy and placed in juvenile shelters and foster homes.

Capt. Pat Detloff of the sheriff's department said several of the children had old scars that indicated they may have been physically abused.

"All the children were given a preliminary medical assessment," Bart Wilson, branch manager for the state Childrens Services Division, said Saturday. "All I know is that nobody has any serious injuries or anything, but that's a pretty speculative statement."

He said the children would be examined and interviewed over the weekend.

Gage said Jackson and Doolittle were with the children in the sparsely furnished house at the time authorities arrived. Investigators said the children were sleeping on pillows on the floor.

Officials said Chambers and three other adults brought the dead child to a fire station in a rural area 25 miles east of Portland early Friday.

That means sticking to his basic campaign stump speech, speaking mostly before friendly audiences, having few news conferences and seldom departing from a well-rehearsed script.

Bush himself told reporters, "I don't feel any pressure to put out a lot of new programs" at this stage in the campaign. "We've got a lot of programs out there."

He conceded that "you'll see a lot of similarity" in his campaign speeches in the next three weeks with the tried-and-tested themes he's been hammering on since the Republican convention last August.

Asked by reporters how he assessed the debate, he said at one point, "Read my smile."

But he also said, "You're talking to a guy who, when the polls were going the other way, said 'it isn't over.' And it wasn't. So why should I now suddenly have the luxury of changing my position?"

"Watch how hard we work," Bush said, echoing the sentiment of his campaign chairman, James A. Baker III, who cautioned senior aides on Friday to — above all else — avoid becoming cocky or viewing a Bush election as inevitable.

"There's a 100 percent chance of getting into trouble if you get smug and overconfident," added campaign manager Lee Atwater. "We don't intend to do that."

Bush in the coming days will travel mostly to large states where polls show the election remains close.

After leaving California, where he has been since last Tuesday and where the stakes may be the highest in the country, Bush plans campaign visits in pivotal Midwestern states.

Aides also said Bush plans to keep returning to New Jersey and will even spend some time campaigning in New York — where recent polls suggest the state's 36 electoral votes may be within striking distance, despite a wide early lead by Dukakis.

"We're going to concentrate on the Electoral College — California, New York, Ohio, Illinois, New Jersey," Atwater said. "The vice president's base is secure in the South and the West."

Bill Lacy, Bush's California coordinator, said the vice president's performance in last Thursday's debate, which generally got high marks from Americans responding to a variety of surveys, will help in California.

Still, the state, with its rich bounty of 47 electoral votes, is still up for grabs, Lacy said in an interview.

He noted that Bush at one point last summer had been as much as 18 points behind in California. But he said, "Polls in the last few weeks have shown it to be a very close race so we're going to keep pressing and keep pushing as hard as we can."

Bush will also be courting the "Reagan Democrats," traditionally Democratic voters — many of them blue-collar workers — who bolted in 1980 and 1984 to vote for President Reagan.

Early polls showed many of these Democrats were not ready to give the same support to Bush but more recent surveys suggest some are moving in that direction.

Bush will spend most of this week in the Midwest.

California School Board Rejects 'Dumbing Down' Texts For Pupils

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — In a blow against dull and contrived reading material, California's Board of Education has moved to reverse the "dumbing down" of student textbooks and recapture the magic of reading.

The 11-member board on Friday approved a list of 25 children's books educators said will replace stultifying, formula-dictated texts with literature and classics of richness and diversity.

At the same time, board member Armen Sarafian, responding to criticism about lobbying by textbook publishers, demanded an investigation by the state attorney general's office into the book selection process.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig had said he thought some board members had become "too cozy" with the publishers, accepting free rides and other things of value.

California, with 11 percent of the nation's annual $1.5 billion textbook expenditure, has great clout with the publishers.

Honig and the board agreed, however, that the new books will go a long way toward reviving the magic of reading for youngsters, and exposing them to good writing.

The exercises in the books stress comprehension rather than single-word fill-in-the-blank answers that do little to help kids understand what they have read, Honig said. Textbooks determine an estimated 90 percent of what teachers teach, state education officials say.

Current prescribed texts meet a so-called "readability formula" based on rote, repetition, numbers of syllables in a word and the word-count in paragraphs — a dust-dry formula critics say robs children of the very elements that might motivate them to read.

As an example, critics pointed to the "dumbing down" of "Little Red Riding Hood" by one textbook version apparently still in use. The passage cited has Little Red repeating to exhaustion the fact that she's got a bunch of apples. Says Red:

"I can put red apples in my basket ...

"I can put red apples into my basket for Grandma ...

"I have red apples ...

"I have big red apples ...

"I put the apples into my basket."

The public school officials were told there has been more concern with controlling vocabulary than telling the story, with individual words repeated "even when they are inappropriate to the story line."

"Kids have told me that stories about Dick and Jane or Buffy and Mack are boring," said Lisa Izutsu, a third-grade teacher at Hamlin Street School in Canoga Park. "Those stories don't spark their imagination or their creativity. But (children's literature) really gets them motivated and interested in reading."

The official revolt against stupidity in education included board rejection of all spelling books that had been submitted for consideration.

The board declared that spelling should be taught along with reading and writing, not as an isolated, unconnected exercise.

Members also decided to require future textbooks to come with a "consumer warning label" listing included literary works that had been abridged, adapted or excerpted. It was the third such decision in as many years aimed at nudging publishers to provide more thought-provoking fare for school children.

In earlier action, the board rejected science texts lacking detailed explanations of evolution, and math books that neglected the basics of problem-solving in favor of rote skills.

Soviet Students

OXFORD, England (AP) — Nine students from the Soviet Union arrived at Oxford University this week, the first Soviets to attend the ancient center of learning, the university announced.

New York millionaire George Soros and Britain's Foreign and Commonwealth Office will pay the $7,000 tuition and living costs of each of the seven men and two women, school officials said.

The Soviets will study here as part of a program to improve East-West understanding. They will learn graduate topics from theoretical physics to English literature.

Dukakis Searching

One bit of advice came right after the Thursday debate, an encounter that was clearly a disappointment to the Democratic campaign.

Dukakis' vice presidential running mate Lloyd Bentsen called and gave him a pep talk.

The Texas senator advised the presidential nominee that it was time to get out and campaign "flat out" until Election Day.

Bentsen has emerged as the Dukakis campaign's greatest asset with a large majority of voters saying they prefer him to GOP vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle.

Jibes at Quayle remain standard parts of Dukakis and Bentsen campaign speeches.

The value Dukakis places on Bentsen was seen by the fact that right after the debate, the Texas senator flew to California for a joint appearance with the Massachusetts governor.

The first signs of change in campaign approach were a new pair of commercials that were very different stylistically from the often sharp-edged ads he had run before.

Aides also said every opportunity would be used to get the candidate before large television audiences. He is ready and eager, for example, to appear on such programs as ABC's "Nightline."

"Our best messenger is our candidate," said deputy campaign chairman John Sasso.

Aides also predicted a far more intense campaign schedule and on Friday, the day after the debate, Dukakis was on the road from eight in the morning to well past midnight.

Aides still maintained they had a clear view of the path to victory on Nov. 8.

They talked of the strong grassroots organization built up over months and contended the debate had exposed "several new areas of vulnerability and weakness" in Bush.

And they could point to the crowd of nearly 10,000 that waited in the rain in Seattle to hear Dukakis on Friday.

"We are poised for a strong last three weeks," Sasso told a post-debate briefing.

Advisers admitted that Bush commercials attacking Dukakis for his state's program granting prison furloughs and for the pollution in Boston Harbor had put the Democratic nominee on the defensive.

"The furlough thing has really hurt," said Steve Engelberg, a political adviser traveling with Dukakis. "To win we have to get rid of it and rid of it fast."

Dukakis tried to do just that by pointing out that his father had once been beaten and robbed and that his brother had been killed by a hit-and-run driver.

"I don't need George Bush to tell me about crime," he told audiences.

The Massachusetts governor also cited the federal furlough program and specifically the case of a furloughed drug dealer who raped and murdered a pregnant woman in Arizona.

Equally damaging was the Boston Harbor commercial run by Bush. It showed scenes of sludge and dead fish and said Dukakis had failed to act promptly to clean up the harbor.

Campaign aides conceded that commercial put Dukakis on the defensive on the environment, particularly in California, where the environment was regarded as Dukakis' strongest issue.

Prime Minister Shamir Makes Campaign Stop In Tel Aviv

Young Israeli Politicians Stress Yuppie-Style Approach To Life

New Leaders More Pragmatic About Palestinians

By Allyn Fisher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEL AVIV, Israel — With their striped shirts and academic degrees, Israel's new "yuppie" politicians have traded the rough-and-tumble Moshe Dayan style for a more image-conscious approach.

The new generation running in the Nov. 1 elections range in background from sons of leaders to lawyers to Sephardi immigrants from poor backgrounds in North Africa.

Among the candidates are men with well-known names like Benjamin Begin, son of former Prime Minister Menachem Begin, and lesser-known figures like Yossi Beilin, who gained experience as an aide to Labor Party leader and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

The leaders next in line for both parties are more pragmatic than their ideology-bound predecessors about Israel's biggest problem, the Palestinians.

They also have parted with the old world manners and casual, open-shirt dress of first-generation Israeli politicians such as David Ben-Gurion, soldier and politician Dayan, or Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

"We don't kiss a lady's hand like our mentors did," said Roni Milo, 39, a rising star with the rightist Likud bloc, who who was referring to the sometimes courtly behavior of Polish-born Menachem Begin, founder of the Likud.

"We're more direct, sabra style, and more pragmatic. We young people are more capable of growing accustomed to new conditions," Milo added, flashing a boyish smile.

Milo's background is typical of many politicians his age of European descent. He is a sabra, a native-born Israeli, and a lawyer who did party work in student government at Tel Aviv University. He inherited hawkish political beliefs from parents who fought the British in Begin's Irgun underground.

His career flourished after he won a seat in Parliament in 1977 with a Likud victory in national elections.

A second Likud deputy with leadership potential is Ehud Olmert, 42, also a lawyer who, despite his hard line on the Arab-Israeli conflict, has maintained quiet contacts with Palestinians from the occupied territories.

"We have a more pragmatic approach," Olmert said of himself and his generation in Likud. "Yes, we're against the PLO but we know we have to strike an agreement with the Palestinians."

Unlike Likud's younger politicians, most of the new faces who are certain to win election from the rival Labor Party will be taking their first Parliament seats after next month's vote.

Although they lack legislative experience, some newcomers already have considerable influence.

Beilin, 40, is a former Cabinet secretary with a doctorate in political science who became an adviser to Peres a decade ago. He also is more moderate than Peres toward the Palestinians. "I am willing to speak to the PLO provided that it meets conditions" of recognizing Israel and formally declaring a ban on terrorism.

Israel's government objects to any dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization, claiming it is a terrorist organization.

Another fresh face in Labor, Avraham Burg, 33, is the son of Yosef Burg, who until he retired last year was religious affairs minister and the longest-serving member of Israel's Knesset, or parliament.

The younger Burg, also a former adviser to Peres, insists his father had nothing to do with his decision to enter politics. Instead, it was opposition to Israel's three-year war in Lebanon that got him interested.

Burg was injured in parachute training in 1979, but he fought as a volunteer with his unit in Lebanon in 1982, then became a leading opponent of Israel's Lebanon war.

"I never thought before of being a politician," he said. "But then I thought, we are a society undergoing many processes, some of them difficult, incorrect, fatal. Either you bury your head deep in the sand or you try to do something."

Burg, the spokesman for Labor's campaign, says resolving the Palestinian uprising in the disputed West Bank and Gaza Strip is one of Israel's main necessities.

"The occupation corrupts us. This is a tough process the Israeli population is going through. The main moral issue is ending the occupation and finding a solution."

55 Die As Overloaded Ferry Sinks

CEBU CITY, Philippines (AP) — An overloaded ferry boat sank in heavy seas in the central Philippines, and at least 55 people drowned, the Coast Guard reported Saturday. It said 77 people were rescued.

The Coast Guard said the 35-ton Balangiga was sailing from the Samar island port of Giporlos to Tacloban on Leyte island when it sank early Friday after being buffeted by high winds and rough seas.

Lt. Cesar Cahijas, Coast Guard commander in Tacloban, said four vessels were dispatched to the area for search and rescue operations.

Coast Guard officials said the vessel was authorized to carry 92 passengers and crew. They did not say whether all those aboard the ship had been accounted for.

In Manila, Coast Guard officials said they were still awaiting a complete report from Tacloban.

Overloading is common on inter-island ferries in the Philippines. Last December, more than 3,000 people died when the passenger ship Dona Paz, which was sailing from Tacloban to Manila, collided with an oil tanker off Mindoro island in the world's worst peacetime shipping disaster.

A congressional report cited widespread safety problems in Philippine commercial shipping, including faulty communications and lax rescue procedures.

The Coast Guard, which is responsible for commercial shipping within this archepeligo country of 7,100 islands, conducted its own investigation but has not released the findings.

Last May, at least 53 people died when a motor launch sank in the same area as Friday's mishap.

Armed Student

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) — A high school student apparently despondent over being rejected by a girl waved a loaded shotgun at a teacher and four other students and threatened to kill himself, then gave up the weapon to the teacher.

No one was hurt in the incident at Independence High School, which lasted only about five minutes, said police spokesman Marshall Downen.

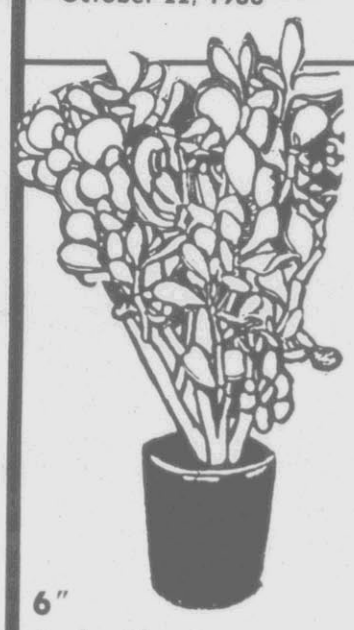

"The band teacher actually talked him into giving up the gun. The student unloaded the weapon and handed the empty gun to the teacher," Downen said.

The student, identified as Roy H. Rosenboom, 16, was taken to West Valley Camelback Hospital for evaluation. Downen said he would be referred to Maricopa County juvenile authorities for investigation of five counts of endangerment.

Hirohito's Vital Signs Stabilizing

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito's vital signs stabilized Saturday, but doctors were concerned about his worsening anemia and jaundice, palace officials said.

The 87-year-old emperor's temperature, which went above 100.4 degrees on Friday, declined to 99.1 degrees Saturday night. His normal temperature is about 95.9 degrees.

Physicians gave the emperor another 0.84 pints of blood to help counteract his anemia and internal bleeding, palace officials said.

"His condition as a whole is leveling off," said Kenji Maeda, Imperial Household Agency spokesman. "But the blood transfusion was given to improve his condition, particularly his anemia."

The world's longest-reigning living monarch has been bedridden since Sept. 19, when he vomited a large amount of blood because of an intestinal hemorrhage. He has received a total of 16.6 pints of blood since then.

Maeda said Hirohito discharged a small amount of blood from his bowels Saturday afternoon, an indication of continued intestinal bleeding.

News reports have quoted palace officials as saying the level of bile in the emperor's blood, an indication of jaundice, could be 30 times the normal level. A palace source declined to confirm the reports but said the jaundice was causing concern for doctors.

The emperor has no political power but serves as a symbol of the unity of Japan.

Use Of Royal Photo Brings Investigation

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard appointed the head of its serious crimes branch Saturday to investigate a tabloid's publication of a private royal family photograph.

But a Conservative Party lawmaker criticized the appointment of such a high officer, saying it is like sending in commandos to nab a parking offender.

Commander Roy Penrose, 46, former head of the drug squad, will lead an inquiry to discover how The Sun, a 4.15-million-circulation newspaper, obtained the snapshot of the queen, her mother Elizabeth, and the Duchess of York cradling her infant daughter Princess Beatrice.

The Conservative lawmaker, Geoffrey Dickens, protested the "Gilbert and Sullivan" situation in which Scotland Yard assigned Penrose to deal with "this piddling affair."

"We must presume that the Lord High Executioner is waiting in the wings to do his stuff when the hapless culprit is found. It is like sending in the SAS (commandos) to deal with a parking offender," he said.

After the picture appeared on the front page of Thursday's Sun, the queen told her lawyers to consider action against the paper.

Buckingham Palace said it was taken by an unidentified friend of the royal family and "was published without the permission of the queen or any member of the royal family or the person who took the photograph."

The Sun defied the queen by again publishing the photo in its first edition on Friday but withdrew it from later editions and offered to return it "when it is established who is the owner." The paper promised not to publish it again or reproduce it elsewhere.

In an editorial Saturday, The Sun said its "crime" was to publish "a delightful picture" that readers loved and that the queen should have been proud to share with her subjects.

The paper said it was "hurt" by the palace's reaction but apologized: "Sorry, Ma'am. No offense meant." The Sun gave no explanation of how the picture was obtained.

The appointment of Commander Penrose was announced in a one-sentence Scotland Yard statement.

Buckingham Palace refused to comment, saying only that it was advised that Scotland Yard was investigating the matter.

Dickens said he planned to ask Home Secretary Douglas Hurd, who is in charge of the police, to issue guidelines on the "sensible use of police resources."

Buckingham Palace has released only a few official photos of Princess Beatrice, the queen's fifth grandchild, who was born on Aug. 8. They were taken by the baby's father, Prince Andrew, the queen's second son.

Yugoslavia's Leadership May Face Shakeup During Communist Meeting

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — More than 200,000 Serbs rallied Saturday in four towns to push demands for Serbian control over two neighboring autonomous provinces.

The Communist Party leader of the northern republic of Slovenia said meanwhile that the country is "on the threshold of imposing emergency measures" after violent demonstrations.

"We have to sober up and stop this insanity," said leader Milan Kucan.

His speech at an official rally in Slovenia came during intense politicking before a meeting of the national Communist Party's Central Committee. The meeting, starting Monday, is expected to shake up Yugoslavia's leadership during its worst crisis since World War II.

Hundreds of thousands of Serbs demonstrated in Sombor in autonomous Vojvodina province near the Hungarian border; and in Leskovac, 90 miles south of Belgrade in the republic of Serbia. Two smaller demonstrations occurred in Indija in Serbia and in Stara Pazova in Vojvodina.

No violence was reported, but all of the protesters pledged allegiance to Slobodan Milosevic, the Serbian party chief, in what has now become a daily phenomenon.

Milosevic wants Serbia, one of Yugoslavia's six republics, to be given more control over Vojvodina and another autonomous province, Kosovo. Kosovo, which was once inhabited mostly by Serbs, is now predominantly ethnic Albanian. Serbs accuse Kosovo's leadership of discriminating against Kosovo's Serbian residents.

Milosevic's push has alarmed non-Serb leaders and has prompted outcries that his policies may tear Yugoslavia apart.

In addition, students and workers have used the ethnic rallies to push for economic and political changes, prompting Communist authorities in the southern republic of Montenegro last weekend to use force to disperse demonstrators.

This month, a crowd of 30,000 in the disputed province of Vojvodina laid siege to Communist Party headquarters, forcing the resignation of the province's entire leadership — an unprecedented step in Communist Yugoslavia.

Kucan, the Slovene leader, criticized the demonstrations and indirectly accused the leadership of Serbia of conducting policies that jeopardize the stability of the country.

He said a continuation of the unrest could lead to the introduction of emergency measures nationwide, the state news agency Tanjug reported.

Last week, authorities in Montenegro banned street rallies there after pro-Serbian demonstrations escalated into anti-government protests.

"We were on the threshold of emergency measures after the recent events in Novi Sad and Titograd," Kucan said, referring to the Vojvodina and Montenegro capitals where the disturbances took place.

"It is no problem to get people on to the streets, fire up their passions, but one should think of the consequences, which are hard to forget," he said.

He called for more democratic changes and freedoms as a solution to Yugoslavia's political crisis and economic woes.

Inflation reached 217 percent in September, and the foreign debt stands at $21 billion. Austerity measures imposed last May to ensure new loans have slashed wages while allowing prices to rise.

On Friday, the government announced plans to ease the unpopular austerity program, newspapers reported.

Changes in the program include wage increases for workers in profitable companies and more funding for hard-pressed social services, such as health and education. The changes were announced Thursday by the federal government, Belgrade's state-run dailies said.

But all seemed subject to approval by the International Monetary Fund whose delegation has announced a visit to Yugoslavia next week.

Kucan said it was understandable that Yugoslavs were unhappy.

"With a drastic increase of prices, and a drop in the purchasing power, it is not hard to bring so many unhappy people on to the streets," Kucan said.

Monday's meeting is supposed to approve sweeping personnel changes and unite the bickering Communist Party leadership on policies to overcome the social and economic crisis.

Haitians Backing Activist

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — About 7,000 people marched Saturday through the streets of Port-au-Prince in a third day of protests against a Roman Catholic church directive that ordered an activist priest to leave Haiti.

Sympathizers on balconies sprinkled the sweating marchers with water as they passed through downtown streets chanting slogans demanding the Rev. Jean Bertrand Aristide be allowed to remain in Haiti.

The three-hour demonstration, like those on Thursday and Friday, began in front of the charred ruins of Aristide's St. Jean Bosco church in a downtown slum district.

On Sept. 11, thugs with firearms and machetes entered the church, killed 12 parishioners, wounded 70 and set the building ablaze.

The massacre provoked a revolt within the armed forces that ousted Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy on Sept. 17 and replaced him with Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril. Coup leaders said they wanted to end state-sponsored violence and to return Haiti to democratic rule.

Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier was elected president in 1957 in what was considered Haiti's last fair election, and made himself president-for-life in 1964. Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier assumed the presidency upon his father's death in 1971, and remained in power until he fled to France in 1986 during anti-government uprisings.

Namphy headed a provisional government immediately after Duvalier went into exile, but domestic unrest and violence has prevailed since then.

On Friday, the Rev. Guire Poulard, bishop of the southern town of Jacmel, said on the church's Radio Soleil that a solution to the issue of Aristide's transfer could be found.

"A discussion can be held to see how we might envisage the problem," he said.

Aristide, a Haitian, was an outspoken critic of Namphy's military regime. He is an advocate of liberation theology, which demands social justice for the poor, and has been cricitized by some Catholic leaders as promoting violence and class struggle.

Aristide announced Monday on Radio Soleil that he had received a message from the Vatican ordering him to leave Haiti by Oct. 17.

He did not specify who issued the order, but Stephane Francisque, a close friend, told The Associated Press the priest's Salesian Order had told him to report to the Sainte Claire parish in Montreal.

The demonstrations Thursday and Friday attracted about 6,000 supporters.

Friday's demonstration was winding down when a rumor spread that Aristide was being flown out of the country. Protesters then barricaded the road leading to the Port-au-Prince airport and police fired warning shots to disperse the crowd. One man was hit in the foot by a bullet.

In a statement read over Radio Soleil on Friday, 48 parish priests from Port-au-Prince said Aristide "is preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the social doctrine of the Church. In the present context Haiti needs Rev. Aristide."

Bomb Blast

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who was allegedly trying to plant a bomb in a woman's car because he was angry over her rejection of a marriage proposal suffered a severe arm injury when the device exploded, authorities said.

The man, identified as Roger Rush, 33, was booked into a hospital jail ward and held for investigation of exploding a bomb and causing injury, police Officer Bill Frio said.

"It was a case of unrequited love," said Lt. Fred Nixon, a police spokesman. "He had proposed marriage several times, but she told him to go away."

Gasoline Theft

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A man accused of driving away from a convenience store without paying for his gasoline was locked inside the store when he returned three days later and was recognized by an employee, police said.

Assistant manager Mitzie McClain said she walked into her store Friday and saw the man she had seen on Tuesday. She then locked the door and told clerk Roberta King to call police.

Winnie Mandela Says Speculation Over Husband's Release 'Rumors'

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Winnie Mandela visited her husband, black nationalist Nelson Mandela, at his guarded hospital room Saturday and said he was angered by President P.W. Botha's claim that he is cooperating with the government.

She also said speculation about his imminent release were "sheer rumors."

Botha suggested last week that the jailed African National Congress leader could be freed soon if he "continues cooperating with the authorities, as he is doing at present." Botha did not elaborate.

"About the so-called cooperation with the government, Mandela says he will answer to that himself," Mrs. Mandela told reporters. "As he said that, he looked very angry."

Mandela, 70, is recuperating from tuberculosis at the Constantiaberg Clinic, a modern private hospital in Cape Town. He became ill in August, and doctors expect him to make a complete recovery in about three months.

Mrs. Mandela said she and her husband did not discuss the latest wave of speculation that he may soon be freed after 26 years in prison.

"All the rumors about his release are sheer rumors," she said.

In addition to his wife, Mandela was visited for more than an hour by his daughter, Zindzi, and her two children, and by his sister, Leaby Pilso. It was the Mandelas' first reunion since August.

Mrs. Mandela said her husband "looks very well, much better than when I last saw him."

Botha, although refusing to be specific, has said in recent weeks that he hopes Mandela will not have to return to Pollsmoor Prison from the hospital. Government officials have indicated Mandela might be freed without having to comply with Botha's longstanding demand that he renounce violence.

Mandela has been jailed since 1962. He received a life sentence in 1964 for plotting an ANC sabotage campaign aimed at toppling the white-minority government.

President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire said after meeting with Botha on Oct. 1 that the South African president had promised to release Mandela unconditionally.

Botha refused to confirm this, but a pro-government newspaper, The Citizen, later quoted officials as saying Mandela could be released at any time starting in mid-November.

Mandela is the most popular leader among South Africa's disentranchised black majority. Government officials worry that his release could provoke a new outbreak of black militancy and unrest, but they also perceive that freeing Mandela could ease international pressure on South Africa.

Under apartheid, South Africa's 26 million blacks have no vote in national affairs.

Amnesty Concerts Promoting Human Rights End

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The Amnesty International human rights concert tour, which began six weeks ago in London, concluded Saturday in this capital before 70,000 fans.

Rock stars Bruce Springsteen, Sting, Tracy Chapman, Youssou N'Dour and Peter Gabriel joined Argentine singers Charly Garcia and Leon Gieco in the concert at River Plate soccer stadium with "Get Up, Stand Up," the reggae song by the late Jamaican singer Bob Marley.

In all, more than 1 million people turned out in 19 cities on five continents to hear the performers explain the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, endorse Amnesty International and, of course, sing.

"We look forward to reaching billions of people" with the Dec. 10 worldwide telecast of Saturday's concert, said John Healey, executive director of Amnesty International USA.

"I'm here for both the music and the message," said Vanesa Gonzalez, 18, of Buenos Aires.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Votes, Not Polls, Determine Leaders

Forget the conventional wisdom of the soothsayers. Neither George Bush nor Michael Dukakis won Thurday's presidential debate.

The pollsters won it, and the spin doctors won it, along with all those who have already preordained and announced the outcome of the election. Sadly, the candidates finished second and the American public finished last.

That debate was no debate. It was a media event, and it played into the hands of those who would have the leadership of this nation decided by a poll of 600, not the votes of millions.

The event went as predicted; the results were precisely as predicted. Dukakis needed a knockout, he didn't get it, so Bush won not only the debate, but also the election, correct? Right now, 24 days away from the presidential election, the winner is already declared.

Wait a minute. The manipulation suggested here is a tad more ominous than the proverbial tail wagging the dog. This sounds like mind control, and the American public shouldn't buy it.

Granted, there wasn't the hoped-for heap of substance in the debate. But there were plenty of salient points made, most of which didn't fit into capsule form for quick ingestion.

Consider, for example, the discourse on the budget deficit. Complex factors figure into that issue, many of them clearly understood only by economists. But the average taxpayer has to know that if he charged on his credit cards more than he could ever hope to pay, he'd sacrifice his freedom. He'd simply be controlled by his creditors, since he'd owe them every cent he made for the rest of his life.

Dukakis told the public Thursday night the United State's deficit spending will create that kind of precarious predicament for the nation and his point was well-taken. If the nation doesn't reduce its debt, some day foreign creditors will come calling. From then on, America is their show.

Here is the key issue in the 1988 campaign, and the American public shouldn't miss it because voters are listening to the results of some poll instead. Fiscal responsibility is not just a catch-phrase. It's the direction the nation must take and the heart of what is to be decided by the 1988 election.

Voters, take the next 24 days to decide which candidate is best. But don't take the wisdom of a poll as the gospel. If American is to remain strong its citizens will have to reason for themselves rather than follow the percentage points of perceived public opinion.

A poll is deceiving. Its margin of error may be greater than plus or minus five percentage points — its margin of error may be the downfall of a nation.

Focal Point

No Shortage Of Ideas For Future

Pitt County obviously has an exciting future.

With East Carolina University and Pitt Community College and a secondary school system which we expect to steadily improve in quality our county is an educational leader.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the ECU School of Medicine assure our place as a leader in medical care delivery, medical education and research.

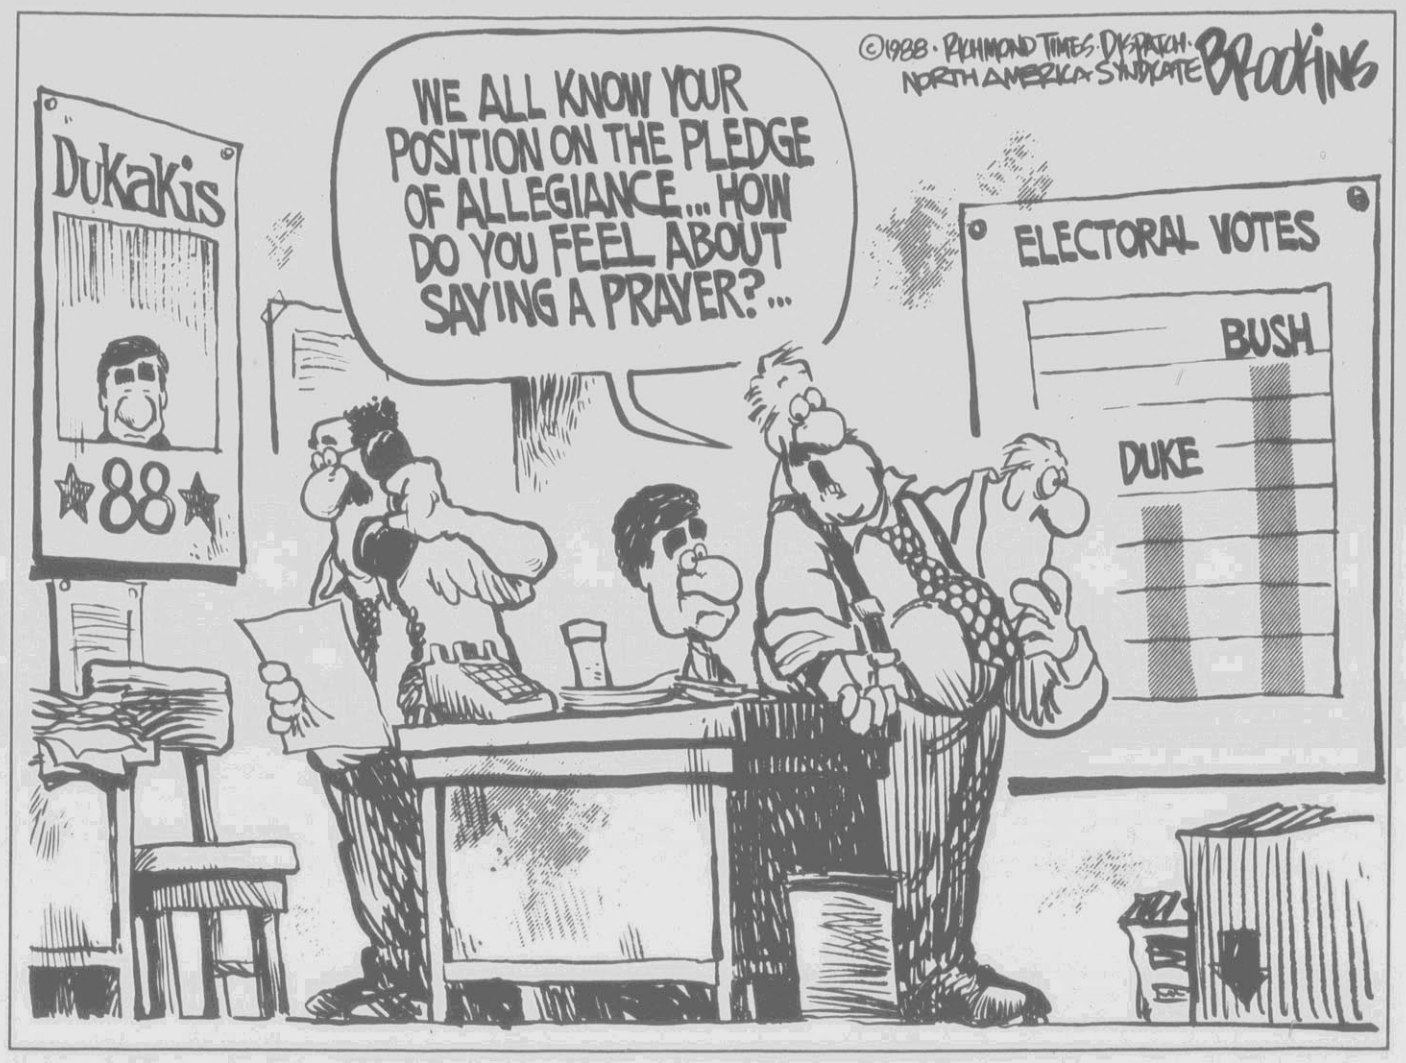

Some of the nation's great corporations have manufacturing facilities located here. And, as historically it has, farming is still, and will always be, a backbone of our economy.

All that offers an economic base to build upon. Growth is virtually certain, but what we must do is direct and control our growth so that it offers the top economic advantages to all our citizens.

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is involving itself in this process in launching "The Year 2007 Committee." A county-wide kickoff meeting has been planned for Tuesday at the Ramada Inn at 7 p.m. and Pitt citizens have been encouraged to offer input as to what directions the county's growth should take leading into the next century. The year 2007 was chosen as a focal point because that will be the 100th anniversary of East Carolina University's founding.

The county is already involved in seeking high quality industry which will mesh with the kind of development which is under way now. It is known we will face new problems such as solid waste disposal, water and sewer service for unincorporated areas and other services which in the past have been provided only in municipalities.

The Year 2007 Committee is there to receive new ideas on how the county can develop, provide its residents a better way of life and maintain the values we now have. There should be no shortage of ideas and the committee will welcome them.

Traffic Lights & Fast Food In Profusion

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Traffic control lights are the bane of those who have to stop for them on busy thoroughfares and a godsend for those who want to enter those thoroughfares from side roads.

Three more have gone up along Stantonsburg Road in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital area. One is at the entrance to the Emergency Road at the hospital. Another is at Allen Road and the third as at the old Stantonsburg Road intersection which is the beginning of the U.S. 264 freeway.

With the existing one at Moye Boulevard, the hospital entrance, the drive to the freeway now includes four traffic lights after leaving Memorial Drive. This means new frustrations for motorists who have been accustomed to zipping along that stretch of road on the way in or out of town.

Yet each of the traffic light locations is a difficult traffic situation. The emergency entrance sometimes involves life-or-death situations. Allen Road is the route from the old 264 to the new. It will become even more heavily used once the Farmville bypass is open. And, of course, there is heavy traffic at the old Stantonsburg Road intersection because of the residential areas it serves.

So it all means more stops for traffic on the new Stantonsburg Road ... but vehicles entering from those protected intersections won't have to perform death defying maneuvers to enter the stream of traffic.

A community's growth can be measured by the number of franchised fast food operations it supports, perhaps just as well as any other way.

Once there was only a Hardee's here in the fast food line. It prospered and eventually went on to become one of the major chains. Now there are five Hardee's in Pitt County.

Other giants of the fast food industry now have multiple units here and some of the chains continue to expand.

Obviously some large appetites are required to keep the fast foods operations going along with all the other conventional restaurants around town.

Fast food is definitely a way of life in Pitt County.

Greenville will soon become one of the few cities in the state with two Belks. Belks is located at Carolina East Mall. Steel is now rising at The Plaza for a second Belks. While it will have less square footage than the Carolina East Belks the steel skeleton at The Plaza is impressive indeed.

Get Off The Flag, George

Richard Cohen

LOS ANGELES — Several years ago, I hung an American flag from my porch. I went to the store, bought the flag and on the Fourth of July — with proper ceremony (the humming of a bugle call I remembered from the Army) and appreciation of the moment — I hoisted my flag. It was a momentous day: The Vietnam era was finally over.

During the Vietnam War, the American flag had somehow been taken from me — and many others. Old Glory became the banner of war hawks, of political rallies posing as patriotic ones, of the mindless and dishonest chauvinism of Richard Nixon. My flag — the one I carried with such pride in elementary school — no longer was an emblem of unification, but of partisan division.

Now George Bush's campaign is threatening to once again take the flag from millions of Americans who differ with him politically. Flags surround him on the stump like flowers at a Mafia funeral. By way of gilding this particular lilly, he even visited a place where flags are made — acting as if it were a pilgrimage to a religious shrine. The effort reeks of phoniness,a kind of patriotic pornography--all titillation and no content.

Americans have a boundless capacity to trivialize almost anything: Give us a holiday, either religious or patriotic, and we will celebrate it at the shopping mall. The serious economic and structural problems facing the nation are reduced to a question of values. Crime, a national disgrace, gets addressed by bromides such as "getting tough" and for drugs we have sacked our warehouse of cliches.

But the flag, and the pledge to it, should be off limits to the trivia merchants — and that includes Mike Dukakis' use of the flag as well.

Old Glory is a symbol of national unity, not of what divides us. It stands for what we have in common. It does not — it should not — represent a certain position on crime, an objection to furlough programs, a determination not to raise taxes or an insistence that abortion be banned.

It is the same with the Pledge of Allegiance. It, too, should be something that unifies us. But in the hands of the Bush campaign it no longer does. At least for the duration, it has become an arrow in the Vice President's campaign quiver. Now, I see the pledge as something it should not be: a pledge not to the flag or to my country but to the mindless notion that a teacher or a student must be compelled to recite it. It stands now not for patriotism, but for chauvinism--an uncritical lock-step love of country in which some things both flag and country represent are rejected. Minority rights happen to be one of them.

The Bush campaign, if not Bush himself, says it has fastened on both flag and the pledge because they symbolize Michael Dukakis' values. We are to believe the Massachusetts governor is contemptuously out of step with those values, an elitist from alien Cambridge, home to Harvard which, if stripped of its ivy, would immediately be revealed as the Kremlin West. The Bush campaign suggests that it represents true Americanism; the people and the Bush campaign are one.

But the cynical manipulation of patriotic symbols shows true contempt for the people. The pledge and the flag are little hammer taps directed just below the knee of the electorate: They are designed to elicit a reflexive reaction, to obscure rather than explain, to camouflage a lust for office with a drop cloth made of red, white and blue.

How do we love our country? You cannot count the ways. The glory, the virtue and the sheer wonder of America is that anyone can behold the flag and see in it what they want. It represents no religion, no political party, no class. It is an all-embracing symbol of our country and should not be a political prop for a campaign rally. No one should think that by reciting the pledge or flying the flag they are making a political statement. Yet it's hard now to recite the pledge without thinking you're swearing fealty to the Bush campaign.

During the Vietnam War, some of us were silent when Old Glory became the emblem of the hawks. But the day I raised the flag on my porch I resolved that I, for one, would not be silent again. For the flag Bush thinks is his, there is an earlier one by which to get it back. It says, "Don't Tread On Me." Get off the flag, George.

Dukakis' Latent Liberalism Is His Glass Chin

George Will

WASHINGTON — Through much of the last century it was considered unseemly for candidates, particularly presidential candidates, to campaign. They were supposed to respond, almost reluctantly, to a call to public service. Through much of this year Americans must have envied Americans who lived in the 19th century.

Furthermore, through much of this year the managers of both candidates must have felt as a supporter of the Whig nominee, William Henry Harrison, felt in 1836: "(Let him) say not one single word about his principles or his creed, let him say nothing — promise nothing. Let no committee, no convention, no town meeting ever extract from him a single word about what he thinks now and will do hereafter. Let use of pen and ink be wholly forbidden as if he were a mad poet in Bedlam."

But in Los Angeles, at last, we saw why the long campaign is not too long. Practice may not make perfect, but it does make for adequacy. Both candidates came on stage better prepared to talk, clearly and concisely, which means better suited for governance.

Politics is mostly talk and this is especially so in the presidency, the power of which is the power to persuade. Both Bush and Dukakis are more plausible Presidents today than they were four months ago.

But they did not do equally well in the debate. Bush won.

Dukakis is losing in popular vote projections and by a landslide in extrapolations of the electoral-vote outcome. So he needed some gambit that would make the debate a galvanizing event, one that would energize his core supporters and cause undecided voters to break disproportionately in his direction. His dilemma was that any such gambit might be viewed as evidence of desperation. And the lack of one would be viewed as misguided complacency.

Dukakis showed a decided lack of force when he did not maul Bush for his refusal to have more debates. But by then Dukakis had demonstrated that he is going to continue relying on the political oxymoron that got him this far — managerial populism.

The night he accepted the nomination he said something that indicated — or, advertised — his insoluble problem and fatal weakness. In his acceptance speech he said, as if saying so would make it so, that this election would be about competence, not ideology. By saying that, he as much as pointed to his glass chin and said "hit me here." He has been belted around the ring ever since.

In Los Angeles he was simply pathetic in his weak attempt to wriggle off the hook he has impaled himself on by his lifetime in the liberal politics of Massachusetts. "Labels don't mean a thing," he said, plaintively — as though it is impossible to characterize accurately a long career with traditional political categories — such as "liberal" and "conservative." ("Meaningless" is what he called labels in Atlanta in August. That notifed the Bush campaign to get out its labeling machine.) "Let's stop labeling one another," he pleaded in Los Angeles. Here is the story of politics in the late '80s: Bush covets the label "conservative." Dukakis is losing because he is liberal and the country isn't.

Tempted by the Lorelei of liberal righteousness, Dukakis twice made an issue of Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork. The second time he did something sleazy. He dragged Bork — against whose integrity no one has ever said a believable syllable of criticism — into his answer to a question on "sleaze." This smear did not please a single voter Dukakis did not already have and it reminded some tepid Bush supporters of why they are on Bush's side.

They need constant reminding because, regarding what should be his strong suit — national security — Bush is hardly as strong as horseradish. In Los Angeles, with an almost lovely disregard of logic, he cited Gorbachev's displeasure about the grain embargo as a reason for condemning (these are Bush's words — really) "that liberal Democrat grain embargo." In his remarks on Nicaragua, he blamed Congress for killing Reagan's policy but did not even try to revive it.

As has been the case throughout this campaign, Bush's reticence regarding support for the contras signals his tepidness toward the Reagan Doctrine, the policy of supporting resistance groups within the Soviet empire.

Dukakis issued yet another of his toothless "challenges" to Gorbachev to be a good fellow, but Bush seems sure that Gorbachev is such a fellow. So let's get back to what Bush calls their "fundamental differences," which concern...agricultural subsidies. Or perhaps clean air? Or....

What To Do?

William Raspberry

ST. PAUL — "Minnesota Nice," they call it: the near knee-jerk tendency to eschew conflict in favor of compromise, the belief that virtually any problem can be resolved if people will only work together and respect one another.

That we-can-work-it-out mentality is one of the charms of the Twin Cities. But there are stirrings of pessimism in this civic paradise.

At issue is whether the public schools can accommodate what is euphemistically called "ethnic diversity" without losing their white students and white support.

Minneapolis and St. Paul had, until quite recently, both been fairly homogeneous. There were few Asians or Hispanics in the population mix, not enough American Indians to make much of a problem, and the blacks were mostly skilled and educated people who had come to the area to take advantage of white-collar opportunity.

The fact that Minnesotans had managed fairly successfully to deal with this diversity (though they had spent 14 years, until 1985, under a court desegregation order) led them to believe that civic goodwill was enough.

But in recent years, things have changed. For the first time, whites are on the way to becoming a minority in the Twin Cities public schools. The new immigrants include Filipinos, Vietnamese, Hmongs from Laos, and an influx of blacks quite different from the upwardly mobile managers, technicians and educators the area is used to dealing with.

"The slice of the population we're getting now may be those who are least able to adapt," says Curt Johnson, executive director of the influential Citizens League. "In the case of blacks, many of the newcomers are families looking for some way out of pretty terrible circumstances. This is where the new growth in the school population is coming from.

"Add to that the beginnings of gang violence from groups associated with the inner cities of Chicago and Los Angeles, the fact that it is possible to see crack being sold on the streets on any given day, and you have incredible pressure on the schools.

"There is a dramatic increase, especially in the inner-city schools, in the proportion of kids who have some kind of trouble: unstable homes, individual adjustment problems and so on. There are record numbers of expulsions of students for bringing weapons to school. There are enough troubled kids in every class to create dissatisfaction and cause some parents to either make a real-estate decision or go to private schools."

The Twin Cities have been struggling for some way to handle the change while keeping within their racial guidelines, which generally require that no school be less than 15 percent or more than 50 percent minority. Minneapolis and St. Paul have each adopted some version of open enrollment that comes close to a voucher system, though no one here will call it that.

The problem, though, is that members of the fast-growing "underclass" are least likely to take advantage of the transfer option. And if blacks don't transfer out of the inner-city schools, then whites can't either, because it would upset the blackwhite ratio. The result is white flight followed by the flight of middle-class blacks.

Interestingly enough, minority parents seem less concerned than the legally bound school boards about maintaining racial balance. A number of Indian leaders have asked for separate schools in which they can educate their children in their ethnic culture.

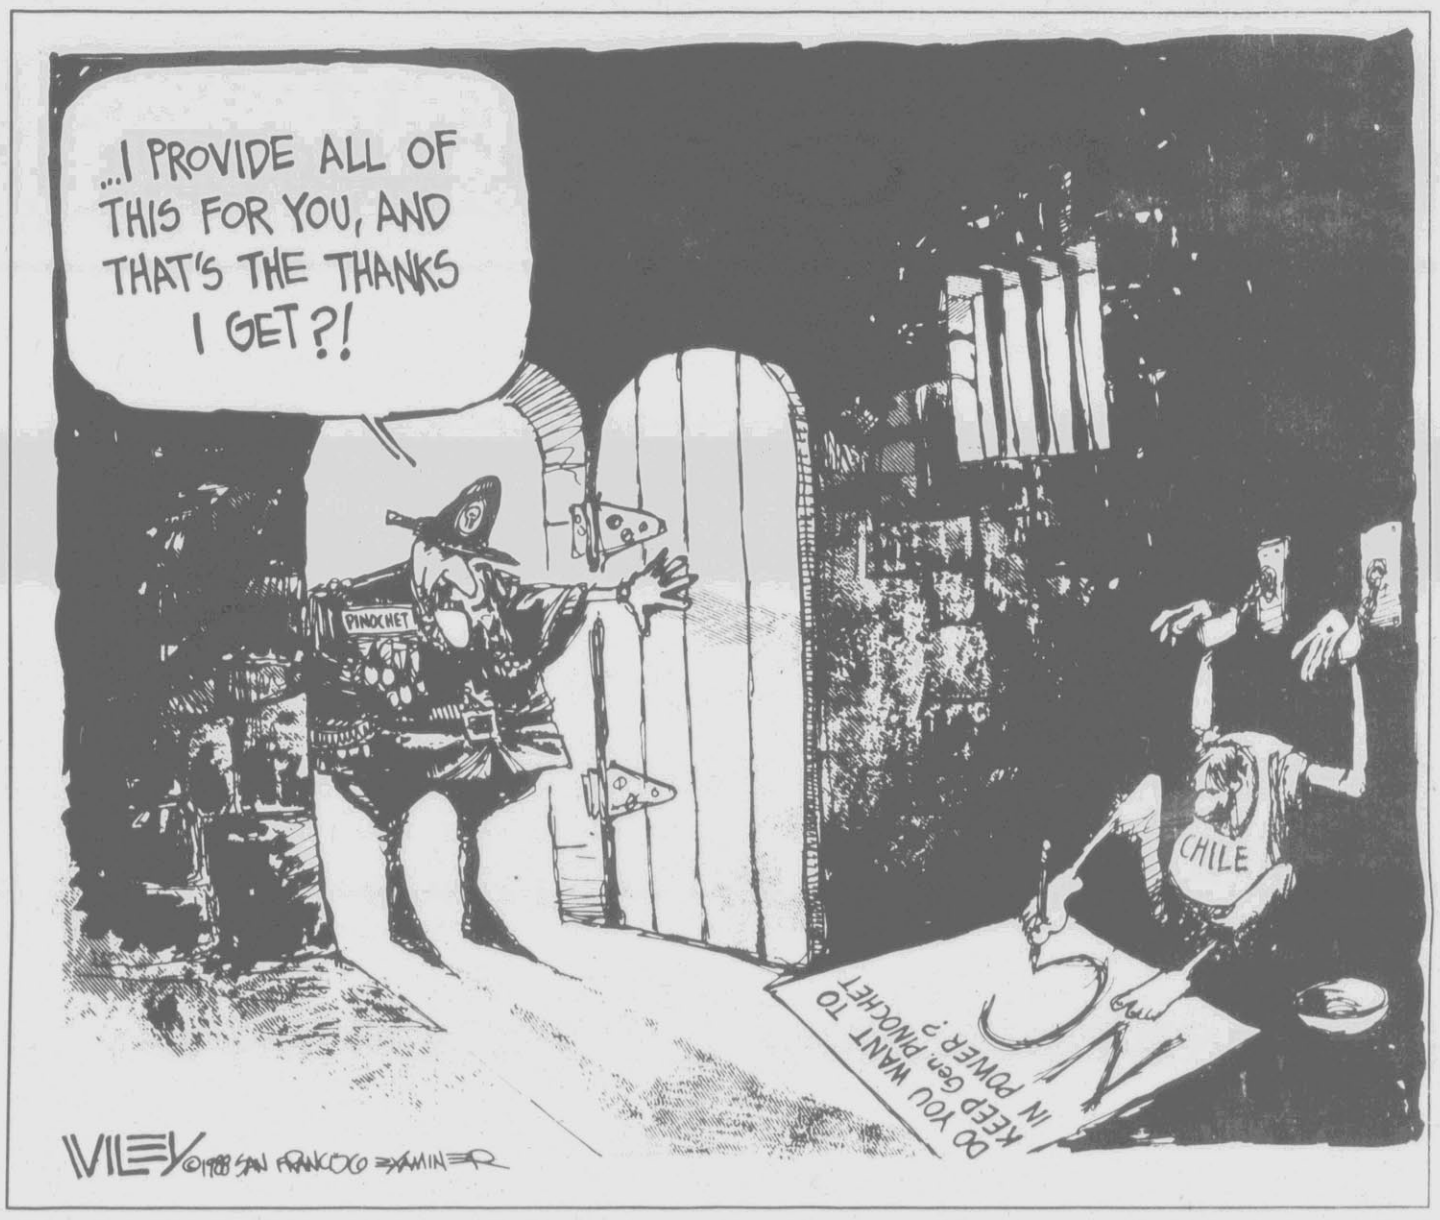

Harry Davis, a member of the St. Paul school board for the past 21 years and one of only two black incumbents, doesn't think much of that idea. "I understand what they are feeling, but the fact is their children will have to compete in the broader world," he said. "On top of that, our school system has had a tremendous problem trying to find qualified Indian teachers as it is. Separate Indian schools would constitute a real drain."

By national urban standards, the Twin Cities schools don't have much of a problem. But the civic leadership here understands that it could get worse in a hurry, and that failure to solve it would have implications far beyond the schools.

As T. Williams, a well-respected black member of the University of Minnesota faculty sees it, the current situation gives the area's leadership "an opportunity to do something extremely positive."

No doubt. The question is: What?

Public Forum

To the editor:

Bush-Quayle campaign ads attempt to depict Governor Dukakis as soft on crime. They focus on Massachusetts' prisoner furlough program and the case of a furloughed black inmate who went on a violent rampage in Maryland. For the bigots among us, they include a photograph of the inmate's face so that voters will have no doubt about his race.

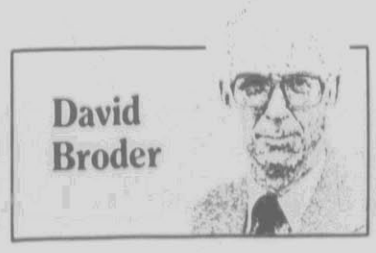

Such tactics are tantamount to the Bob Jordan campaign attempting to blame Jim Martin for every crime a paroled North Carolina inmate commits. Like many other Bush-Quayle charges, they also seriously distort the facts. First the Massachusetts furlough program is hardly unusual. Forty-five states, including Bush's "home" state of Texas (and California during and since Ronald Reagan's tenure as governor there), have such programs. Second, a Republican governor signed Massachusetts' program into law in 1972; in fact, the Dukakis administration has imposed restrictions on its availability to inmates. Third, while nationally the average time served by murderers before parole is 7½ years, first-degree murderers in Massachusetts must serve a minimum of 12½ years before they become eligible for furlough. Fourth, the recidivism or repeat offense rate for inmates who participate in the furlough program is significantly lower than that for other prisoners. Fifth, only a small percentage of lifers are approved for furlough, and lifers housed in maximum or medium security facilities are ineligible for unescorted furloughs. Finally, well over 99 percent of those inmates given a furlough have been returned to prison without incident.

Now that "General" Quayle's qualifications for the nation's second highest office have been fully exposed, we can expect an increase in Bush campaign smear tactics. The voters shouldn't be fooled by them.

Why The Democrats Are Having An Unhappy Autumn

David Broder

LOS ANGELES — Two years ago this month, John Sasso, the able political handler of Michael S. Dukakis, was sitting at lunch in Boston's venerable Locke Ober restaurant, running down the pluses and minuses of a possible presidential candidacy by the governor of Massachusetts.

Sasso talked about Dukakis' growing national reputation as an innovative state executive who was dealing with the challenges of a changing economy and finding "consensus" solutions to such nagging problems as job retraining and welfare reform.

Such an approach, he said, could translate to the national level. But there were real questions, he conceded, whether Dukakis could compete effectively against other Democratic contenders while holding down his job as governor. And no one could judge in advance, he said, how voters across the country would react to the name "Dukakis" or the notion of having a second-generation Greek immigrant's son with a Jewish wife as the President and First Lady.

This reporter suggested there might be another problem, bigger than any of those. With so much of the Democratic Party leadership saying it needed to look southward and a bit rightward to regain the support of lost Reagan Democrats, the largest barrier might be the label "Massachusetts liberal Democrat." Sasso demurred. Ideology was not a big problem, he said, and Dukakis was very much in the mold of the Democrats who were running state governments all across the land, including the Deep South and Mountain states where recent Democratic presidential candidates had been routed.

That has proved to be true in one sense— and fatally wrong in another. Dukakis is mainstream in his program proposals. Those he has put forward on college loans, housing and health care are likely to be passed by a Democratic Congress in the next four years. Most would be signed by George Bush if he becomes President, with the same enthusiasm President Reagan showed last week in signing a welfare reform bill which also bore the imprint of Dukakis' thinking. They are creative solutions to real problems.

But at the level of symbols and values, Bush has effectively made the case that Dukakis is outside the mainstream. And that, as much as the winning personality the Vice President displayed in the final debate here last night, is why he stands on the verge of victory in the 1988 presidential race.

By this year, Sasso knew that the Republicans would attempt to paint Dukakis in alien colors on the emotional issues of God, flag and country. After Dukakis had cinched the Democratic nomination, but before the Democratic convention, at a time when smugness pervaded the Dukakis headquarters in Boston, Sasso told me he was afraid "there are hard times coming." He was right, but he was in exile at the time for his mistake of judgment on the "Biden tapes" incident.

By the time Sasso was recalled to duty, the Bush campaign had done a number on Dukakis, using symbolic issues such as his veto of a Pledge of Allegiance bill, prison furlough program and membership in the American Civil Liberties Union to drive a wedge between him and most voters.

Why was Dukakis so vulnerable to such an attack? There are at least three reasons. First, he is genuinely uncomfortable showing private emotions on the public stage. A man who shows not the flicker of shock or anger at a truly brutal question about the hypothetical rape and murder of his wife is not a man who can convey the feelings he undoubtedly has about flag, country or Creator.

Second, on some values questions Dukakis is in fact outside the mainstream. The political culture of Massachusetts is as far left of center as the political culture of Reagan's circle of wealthy Californians is to the right. The difference is that Reagan always has known he had to defend his world view, while Dukakis seemed sublimely confident people would just accept his as correct. That has come across to people as arrogant — and they may not be wrong.

Finally, the Democratic Party nominating process encourages the tendencies of candidates such as Dukakis to give full vent to their liberal impulses and values, while understating or concealing the conservative instincts they may possess, as Dukakis clearly does.

Today, there are few Democratic politicians who would deny that their ticket would be stronger if Lloyd Bentsen of Texas were on top and Dukakis were his running mate. But the Bentsens of the Democratic Party cannot compete effectively in the current nominating system, as the senator discovered when he tried in 1976.

Except for Jimmy Carter, the Democrats have a history of nominating liberal candidates who come from liberal states, where the Republican opposition is weak. The Hubert Humphreys, Walter Mondales and Michael Dukakises are skilled in playing to the liberal constituencies inside their own party. But they are vulnerable to value-based attacks from conservative Republicans.

That is why the Democrats have so many unhappy autumn days while other Americans are enjoying the World Series.

Verdict's Effect Mixed In Robeson

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Some Robeson County residents rejoiced when Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs were found innocent of all charges against them, but others said the men's actions, coupled with the verdict, will cause more racial tension in the county.

"From the Indian point of view, it's going to be 'we won' and from the white point of view it's going to be 'we're mad'" said Denise Busse, a white Lumberton resident who works at The Robesonian, but was not in the office Feb. 1, when Hatcher and Jacobs took over the newspaper office.

"What's to stop somebody from doing it again?" Ms. Busse asked. "When people have got something to say, they're just going to come down here and do it. Why not? It's legal."

Others said the men accomplished their goal of bringing attention to alleged corruption in the county.

"I guess that's one for Robeson County," said Rosa Gay, a black Lumberton resident. "The reason why they were holding the hostages is because they wanted to be heard and nobody would listen and that's terrible. That goes on a lot around Robeson County — right here in Lumberton."

"I think it was right," said Charles Christian, a black resident of Fairmont. "There's a lot of injustice in Robeson County that goes unnoticed and unseen. They were just trying to bring it out in the open. Now maybe people will notice."

George Brown, who owns a craft shop down the street from the Robesonian, said he didn't "see how they could possibly have been found not guilty."

"... They took hostages in front of witnesses, police. I can just not imagine holding people at gunpoint and being found not guilty," he said.

Laura Oxendine, who identified herself as a Lumbee Indian, said she lived in Lumberton for five years before moving away about a year ago. Four months ago she moved back, she said, and she has been keeping up with the Hatcher-Jacobs trial.

"They weren't trying to hurt nobody. They were just trying to prove a point, and sometimes you've got to do drastic things to get your point across. All they're trying to do is help their own race," she said.

Emotions at The Robesonian newspaper Friday afternoon ranged from shock and disbelief to anger as staff members held hostage in February learned of the U.S. District Court jury's decision.

"I'm mad about it," said Mary Ann Mayers. "I don't see how our justice system can turn those boys loose on all (charges) ... how it could find them not guilty on all accounts."

Ms. Mayers said she found it especially hard to understand how the jury acquitted the two on the federal firearms violations. The charges of hostage taking against Jacobs were dropped by the judge, and Hatcher was acquitted of the charges by the jury.

"How could you set aside those illegal weapons they had? How do you just wipe that off?" she asked. "You cannot erase the weapons. They were there ... they we re held up at us ... they had the ammunition stacked up on my desk. They had 'em and they meant to use them."

Robesonian reporter Mike Mangiameli, who was a hostage, said, "The battle is won, but the war's not over, and you can quote me on that. If Eddie Hatcher wants to overthrow the government, that road goes directly through me."

Indians Cleared

cher's only comments were to protest his lack of an attorney.

But on the final week, as lawyers for Jacobs began presenting their witnesses, Hatcher started acting like an attorney. He questioned some witnesses, including Jacobs, and called a handful of witnesses on his own.

Then came his turn at closing arguments Thursday when he stood before the jury wearing a breechcloth, dark pants, buckskin vest and a feather in his long hair, as he had throughout the trial.

Kunstler, in a written summary Hatcher read to the jury, said since he could not be present, he would have to "reach you through the voice of my friend and client, Eddie Hatcher."

The statement said that Hatcher had acquired information linking law enforcement officers to drug trafficking, information which Hatcher and Jacobs said during the trial had put their lives in danger and gave them no choice but to take over the newspaper to draw attention to their plight.

"He could have ignored it and gone about his business ...," Kunstler wrote. "That is what most people would have done. But Mr. Hatcher was concerned about his community, his county, his people, the effect that drugs have on children, and on parents." Hatcher told the jury the takeover was "compassionate," in that the hostages were told they would not be hurt, and were not injured during the siege.

And he argued that taking the hostages was the only alternative since he believed peaceful means and the criminal justice system were ineffective.

Hatcher said Bruce had talked about the Constitution "and how it allows peaceful protest. When those sworn to uphold the Constitution won't, what do you do?"

"Can you imagine 60,000 frightened, abandoned people crying out?" he asked the jury. "From 150 miles away, they're crying out. Some are faint, they're tired, they're wore out. Please don't abandon me and Timmy."

The argument brought audible sobs from Hatcher's supporters in the courtroom and tears to the eyes of Jacobs, his attorneys and at least one juror.

"I think through his words, he showed the jury what the conditions were in Robeson County," Pitts said after the verdict. "I definitely think that closing argument had an effect."

Bruce said if he were trying the case again, he would probably address some of the allegations about corruption and law enforcement involvement in drug trafficking raised by the defense.

"One thing I might do differently is get into a little more about their claims," he said Friday, "specifically some of the demonstrably wrong things in the claims by Eddie Hatcher, the exaggerations that were made."

He said opposing a defendant who does not have a lawyer with him is always difficult.

"I think it's an historic problem with any prosecutor facing a defendant who is ... defending himself," Bruce said. "It was obvious he (Hatcher) was getting plenty of legal advice. Obviously, from the outcome, he got a complete defense and a very good one."

Jurors say they found two Tuscarora Indians innocent of all charges in an armed takeover of a newspaper office because they did not think Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs had acted as criminals.

One juror, Patience Brannock, hugged Hatcher in the hallway after the trial ended Friday, saying "God bless you ... You're a good boy."

Seminoles Roll Past ECU

Pirates Lose Sixth Straight Game To FSU, 45-21

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — It came down to a question of depth and fifth-ranked Florida State came up with the answers Saturday in a 45-21 win over East Carolina.

The win lifted FSU to 6-1 for the season and marked its sixth straight win since falling 31-0 to Miami in the season-opener. The Pirates, on the other hand, are heading in the opposite direction with a 1-6 record.

The Seminoles had the luxury of using a fourth-string tailback who wound up being the star on offense, while the Pirates were having trouble putting starters on the field defensively that could stop Florida State.

"East Carolina is the kind of school that has a depth problem against teams like us," Florida State head coach Bobby Bowden said. "Every four years or so they'll get a senior-oriented team. They don't have that, but they have a senior offense with great experience. We felt East Carolina had one of the best offenses that we'll play against and I think we did well against it."

Early on it was the Seminoles' offense that looked the best as they almost put the Pirates away from the opening gun.

Dexter Carter returned the opening kickoff 38 yards to the FSU 48 to set up the game's first score.

With fourth-string tailback Chris Parker doing most of the work, the Seminoles moved in for a touchdown eight plays later. Parker put the lid on the drive with a 7-yard run with 10:53 left in the first quarter.

On the drive, Parker carried the ball six times. For the game, Parker picked up 158 yards on 25 carries.

"We were depending on Chris Parker," Bowden said. "He had to come through and he did. Our offensive front did a lot to help him. But we've never doubted his ability. He just lacks experience and confidence."

After Florida State stymied the Pirates' first drive of the game, Deion Sanders set FSU up with good field position again when he returned John Jett's punt 20 yards to the Seminole 48-yard line.

"The special teams really made a difference out there today," ECU head coach Art Baker said. "It was something that we knew before the game, but we weren't able to keep the ball from Sanders. It seemed like Florida State always started in good field position."

The Pirates made a crucial mistake when the Seminoles had a fourth and 4 at the Pirates' 32. FSU kicker Richie Andrews missed on a 48-yard field goal attempt, but a 5 yard penalty against the Pirates for unsportsmanlike conduct kept the drive alive with a first down at the ECU 26.

ECU's Glen Willis was flagged on the play for supposedly making noises that sounded like a snag signal.

"I didn't like the call," Baker said. "It's something you rarely see called and he was five yards off the line of scrimmage."

Six plays later, Marion Butts bulled over from 2 yards out. Andrews' PAT put the Seminoles up 14-0 with 1:01 left in the opening period.

ECU managed to get into the game on its next drive as it went 77 yards in seven plays, fueled by a 40-yard pass from Travis Hunter to Denell Harper to close to within 14-7.

Fullback Tim James recorded the score on a 1-yard run with 12:50 left in the first half.

On the Seminoles next possession, quarterback Chip Ferguson had his pass picked off by ECU's Bryan Haywood, who returned it 3 yards to the Pirate 48-yard line.

James carried two times for a first down at the FSU 23-yard line. On the next play, James burst through the middle for a touchdown.

Following Robb Imperato's PAT, the Pirates were tied with the Seminoles, 14-14, with 8:42 left in the second quarter.

The tie didn't last long, however, as Carter quickly got the Seminoles back in scoring position with a 43-yard kickoff return to the FSU 46-yard line.

Florida State then moved 54 yards in only five plays aided by a pair of Pirate penalties to move ahead for good in the game.

On a third and 15 play from the ECU 17-yard line Ferguson connected with Ronald Lewis for the score. Andrews' PAT gave Florida State a 21-14 lead with 6:42 left on the first half clock.

The Pirates were penalized for 15 yards for a personal foul and half the distance to the goal line (12 yards) on the FSU scoring drive.

After stopping ECU on its next drive, Sanders set the Seminoles up for another scoring chance when he returned a 36-yard punt by Jett 13 yards to the Pirate 34.

The drive was capped off once again by the Seminoles with a key third down play. Facing a third and 7 at the ECU 23-yard line, Ferguson hit Terry Anthony with a touchdown pass with 3:06 left in the second quarter.

Andrews then added the PAT to round out the scoring for the half and give FSU a 28-14 lead.

The Seminoles stretched their lead to 31-14 late in the third quarter when Andrews split the uprights with a 20-yard field goal with 2:07 showing on the clock.

Andrews' kick capped off a 15 play 74-yard drive that came on the heels of a thrwarted Pirate scoring opportunity.

Pack 'Hurries' Past Heels

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

CHAPEL HILL — Against a North Carolina defense that has had its problems, N.C. State quarterback Shane Montgomery and his Wolfpack teammates came up with a perfect strategy.

The Wolfpack utilized a hurry-up offense and a defense that that gave them the ball in good field position all day long. The result was a 48-3 Wolfpack football victory that was the widest margin of victory in the 78-year rivalry.

"Carolina has a young defensive team, especially in the skill positions at linebacker and in the secondary," Montgomery said. "We had a great game plan. I'm glad we went with the two-minute offense."

The new offensive wrinkle made a star out of Montgomery in his first start of the season. He threw for 261 yards with three touchdowns and one interception. He guided a Wolfpack offense that helped produce a 27-3 halftime lead.

"We started Shane because of our hurry-up offense," said N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan. "We opened up with the hurry-up offense because we thought we could limit what they do on defense."

It was a strategy that worked almost flawlessly.

"They spread us out," said UNC coach Mack Brown, who saw his team fall to 0-6 overall and 0-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"It's very obvious to all of us that we have a long way to go. We have to do everything right to win a football game."

UNC totaled only 178 yards in offense. State, meanwhile, rolled right through the Tar Heels for a total of 443 yards.

"They had so many receivers out there, they just had to pick one," said UNC safety Dan Vooletich. "Montgomery did a nice job. He hit the open receivers. They did a nice job with their offensive game plan."

By the half, Montgomery had more yards passing (215) than UNC had in total offense (128).

On the other side, UNC quarterback Jonathan Hall, who had little time to throw, passed for only 47 yards, completing five of 19 attempts with one interception.

The Wolfpack drove right down the field on its initial possession of the afternoon, moving 72 yards in 13 plays with the score coming on a two-yard pass from Montgomery to Todd Varn.

UNC went nowhere on its initial possession.

But the second possession in many ways set the tone, as UNC came away empty on its longest drive of the day.

The Tar Heels moved all the way down to the Wolfpack one, but Hall was dropped for a nine-yard loss on third and goal by Fernandus Vinson to kill the drive.

"That series was a key. They are on the one and we came in with a sack by Snake (Vinson)," said Wolfpack linebacker Fred Stone.

"I'm sure it was tough for them to get all the way down there and come up short."

You don't have to tell that to Brown. "That missed field goal took so much out of us."

N.C. State, meanwhile, had little trouble moving the ball into the end zone.

On its next possession, State drove 53 yards to set up a 34-yard field goal by Damon Hartman with 55 seconds left in the first quarter.

The Tar Heels' only score of the game came on a 33-yard field goal by Clint Gwaltney with 7:22 remaining in the second quarter.

But State quickly negated that as Montgomery guided the Wolfpack back into the end zone as he hit Chris Corders with a 19-yard pass. Corders came back out of the end zone to catch the pass, leaving Vooletich flatfooted as he then stepped into the end zone for the score. Hartman's kick made it 17-3.

Things went from bad to worse from there for the Tar Heels. On their next possession, Hall was picked off by Fred Stone at the UNC 44.

Eight plays later, N.C. State was back in the end zone as Mal Crite bulled over from the one with 3:27 to go in the half. Hartman added the PAT to make it 24-3.

Stone gave the ball back to the Wolfpack shortly thereafter, this time intercepting Deems May at the UNC 35 with 12 seconds to go in the half.

Gibson's Homer Rallies Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kirk Gibson limped off the bench and rescued Los Angeles with a pinch-hit, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning off Dennis Eckersley, giving the Dodgers a stunning 5-4 victory over the Oakland Athletics in Game 1 of the World Series Saturday night.

Gibson, the symbol of Dodger determination all season, came through with the biggest hit of his career when Los Angeles need him most. Unable to start because of ligament damage in his left knee, he fouled off four pitches before homering far over the right-field fence on a 3-2 pitch.

Eckersley, who led the majors with 45 saves during the season, had saved all four Oakland victories in the American League playoffs. He relieved Dave Stewart to start the ninth, retired Mike Scioscia on a popup and struck out Jeff Hamilton before walking pinch-hitter Mike Davis.

Jose Canseco's grand slam shook the flagpole and the Dodgers in the second inning. But the can-do Dodgers, who beat the New York Mets in the playoffs after a tying, two-run, ninth-inning homer by Scioscia, hung tough and came back and now have ace Orel Herhiser going in Game 2 Sunday night against Storm Davis.

Stewart and loser Tim Belcher engaged in an early beanball battle that prompted umpire Doug Harvey to warn both teams. Belcher hit Canseco with a pitch in the first inning and Stewart hit Steve Sax to open the bottom of the first.

Canseco, who led the majors with 42 home runSduring the regular season and hit three more in a four-game sweep of the American League playoffs, homered against Belcher, a former minor league teammate.

Belcher hit Canseco with a pitch in the first inning and Oakland went on to load the bases before Terry Steinbach flied out to end the threat. Belcher, a rookie who beat the New York Mets twice in the National League playoffs, wasn't so lucky in the second.

Glenn Hubbard led off with a single and Stewart, batting for the first time since 1983, drew a one-out walk on a full-count pitch. Carney Lansford's walk loaded the bases and Belcher then struck out Henderson.

Canseco had hit several tremendous blasts during batting practice, drawing cheers from the normally laid-back Los Angeles fans, and this time he hit the ball even harder.

Stewart overcame a two-run homer by Mickey Hatcher in the first inning and worked around Mike Scioscia's RBI single in the sixth.

Stewart and Belcher each were familiar with the other team. Stewart pitched for the Dodgers in the 1981 World Series and Belcher was sent by the Oakland organization to Los Angeles in August 1987.

Stewart fasts on days of games because he gets nervous, and he got off to a shaky start. After hitting Sax in the back to open the first, Stewart balked with one out; he led the ma-

Clemson Bursts Duke's Balloon

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Fullback Tracy Johnson scored twice and quarterback Rodney Williams ran for one touchdown and passed for another as No. 11 Clemson whipped Duke 49-17 in Atlantic Coast Conference action Saturday.

The second largest crowd in the history of Death Valley saw the Tigers, the two-time defending ACC champs, hand Duke its first loss after five straight victories. The Blue Devils, who haven't opened the year with six victories in a row since 1952, is 1-1 in the ACC.

Quarterback Anthony Dilweg, who has been the key to Duke's surprising start, was held to less than 300 yards passing for the first time this year. Dilweg completed 18 of 41 passes for 209 yards. Dilweg, who has now thrown for 2,203 yards, had two passes intercepted and threw for one touchdown.

Clemson, 5-1 overall and 3-0 in the ACC, raced to a 28-14 halftime lead before a homecoming audience of 83,500, which was just shy of the school record of 84,576 set against Florida State on Sept. 17.

The Tigers raced to a 21-0 lead in the initial 15:36, using two ground-oriented drives and an uncharacteristic bit of razzle-dazzle for the third TD.

Clemson grabbed a 7-0 advantage on its second possession on Johnson's 1-yard run with 4:16 remaining. The 9-play drive was set up by Donnell Woolford's 20-yard punt return to the Duke 48-yard line.

The Tigers then used a halfback pass to go up 14-0. Reserve freshman quarterback DeChane Cameron, lined up at tailback, took a pitch and found Gary Cooper wide open behind the secondary for a 79-yard TD pass with 1:57 left.

Cooper also had a hand in the Tigers' next score, hauling in an 11-yard pass from Williams 36 seconds into the second period.

Irish Turn Back Miami By 31-30

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Fourth-ranked Notre Dame got its long-awaited revenge Saturday, defeating No. 1 Miami 31-30 as free safety Pat Terrell, who returned an interception 60 yards for a second-period touchdown, broke up a two-point conversion pass with 45 seconds left.

The game is destined to go down as a college classic and another chapter in Notre Dame's storied football history.

The Irish broke a 21-21 tie when wingback Pat Eilers ran two yards for a tie-breaking third-quarter touchdown, the first of his career, two plays after the Irish turned back a fake punt.

Reggie Ho's 27-yard field goal late in the third period made it 31-21 and Notre Dame survived three Miami scoring threats in the final 7:04. The Irish also overcame a record 424-yard, four-touchdown passing show by Steve Walsh, but negated that by intercepting him three times.

Notre Dame took advantage of seven Miami turnovers, including two in the waning minutes. The final two, plus the unsuccessful two-point pass, finally signaled an end to the defending national champion Hurricanes' 16-game winning streak and 36-game regular-season skein, the fifth-longest in major-college football history. Miami also had won 20 consecutive road games.

With 3:52 left to play, fullback Cleveland Gary caught a 10-yard pass from Walsh but fumbled at the Notre Dame 1 as he strugled to squirm into the end zone and linebacker Michael Stonebreaker recovered for the Irish.

And with 3:37 remaining, defensive end Frank Stams stripped the ball from Walsh as he cocked his arm to pass and nose guard Chris Zorich recovered at the 28.

Walsh completed 32 of 50 passes, including touchdowns of eight and 11 yards to wideout Andre Brown, 23 to tailback Leonard Conley and 11 to Gary. The completions and yardage were the most ever against Notre Dame and the four touchdown passes tied another record.

Walsh's pass to Conley at 12:44 of the second period and the one to Gary came in the final 2:16 of the

Deacs Rally, Top Terps By 27-24

The Demon Deacons overcame a 24-12 deficit by scoring two touchdowns, including Tony Rogers' 1-yard score with 1:22 remaining, and a two-point conversion in the fourth quarter to defeat Maryland 27-24 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

"You can't say enough about this football team, coming back like they did," Dooley said. "It was a real display of courage. ... In the second half, our football team came out and showed a lot of determination. Even with the interception, they kept their poise and hung in there. It was a win to be proud of."

Trailing 24-19, Wake Forest marched 60 yards in 11 plays and scored the deciding touchdown when a diving Rogers was ruled to have broken the plane of the end zone before he fumbled the football.

The Demon Deacons added a two-point conversion on a pass from Mike Elkins to Mark Young for the final margin.

Elkins completed 31 of 43 passes for 345 yards for Wake Forest, which improved its ACC record to 2-1, 4-2 overall.

"Mike did a good job of getting rid of the ball when he saw the blitz coming," Dooley said. "... Our defense came through when they had to and did what they had to do to win. That's the mark of a good football team."

Maryland's last-ditch drive moved the football to the Wake Forest 7 before time ran out on the Terps.

"We didn't pull the Houdini act today," Maryland Coach Joe Krivak said. "We had some opportunities, but we mishandled some plays and didn't get it done."

The loss dropped the Terrapins to 2-1 in conference, 3-3 overall.

"This one hurt, there are no two ways about it," Krivak said. "... We can't keep pulling the rabbit out of the hat. Today, the magician wasn't there and the rabbit stayed in the hat."

The Demon Deacons had to overcome an 86-yard interception return by Maryland's Irvin Smith that gave the Terrapins a 24-12 lead with 10 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

After fumbling on its next possession, Wake Forest drove 76 yards in 12 plays and scored on a 2-yard run by Mark Young with 7:18 remaining to pull within 24-19.

The Demon Deacons then held Maryland to three plays and a punt before putting together the deciding scoring drive.

Wake Forest trailed 17-6 at halftime but pulled within 17-12 when Tony Rogers scored on a 1-yard run with 4:36 left in the third quarter. A two-point conversion run failed.

On Wake Forest's next possession, the Deacons moved the football to the Maryland 26 on a 53-yard pass from Elkins to Ricky Poehl. Two plays later, Elkins tried to get a right sideline pass to Steve Brown, but Smith stepped in front of the intended receiver, intercepted the ball and raced untouched into the end zone for a touchdown.

The Terrapins scored 17 straight points in the first half to take a 17-3 lead late in the second quarter.

Mike Beasley, on his first carry of the game, ran 37 yards for a touchdown, Dan Plocki hit on a 34-yard field goal, and Neil O'Donnell put Maryland ahead 17-3 by turning a broken play into a touchdown from the Wake Forest 7.

Wake Forest then marched 67 yards on 10 plays and pulled within 17-6 on Jeff Miller's second field goal, a 30-yarder on the final play of the half.

Miller also hit on a 33-yard field goal attempt 6:24 into the game, putting the Demon Deacons ahead 3-0.

CHAPEL HILL — Coming into the football game against North Carolina, N.C. State quarterback Shane Montgomery wasn't sure how much he would utilize the Wolfpack's hurry-up offense.

But some early success made it the staple of the playbook in a 48-3 romp over the Tar Heels in Kenan Stadium Saturday.

"We worked on it Wednesday and Thursday," Montgomery said. "It didn't work as well Wednesday, but it started to come together on Thursday. I thought we'd start with it and see how it goes."

As it turned out, it went well.

The Wolfpack scored on five of its six possessions of the first half to take a 27-3 halftime lead.

The win by the Wolfpack was the largest margin of victory in the 78-year old series. It was the first time since 1983 that the margin of victory was more than a touchdown.

Former West Craven standout Jesse Campbell said the Wolfpack turned the game around when it stopped UNC on its first two possessions, including a goal-line stand after UNC drove to the N.C. State one-yard line.

"That was a real big key," he said. "It let us know we could stop them. They went three and out on their first drive. Then we stopped them on the one. That broke their back. That was the turning point of the game.

"Only one team (Maryland) out of six games has been able to score a touchdown on us. When we get down on the goal line, that's when we really get after it."

The Wolfpack came into the game third in the country in total defense, giving up 217 yards per game. UNC did little to change that, mustering only 178 yards in total offense.

Wolfpack fullback Mal Crite said the offense took a cue from the defense.

"Our defense has played great all year," he said. "We kind of wore them down with our offense and we jumped on them early with those 27 points. Then we came out and didn't let up in the third quarter."

While UNC coach Mack Brown said the Tar Heels had the worst offensive performance he has seen as a head coach, he also felt the Wolfpack came up with probably their best performance this year.

"The thing that you folks should be talking about tomorrow is not how poorly we played, but brag on North Carolina State," he said.

"In the three years Dick Sheridan's been there, he's done an outstanding job. It seems like we get everybody's best performance. Probably some of that is because of us, but a lot of that is because of them."

Part of that is inexperience, as two first-year players, Doxie Jordan and Terrance Fedd, start in the secondary. Also the loss of nose guard Dennis Tripp, former Farmville Central star, and linebacker Mitch Wike to injuries has also been a big liability.

Wolfpack Wins...

Hartman came through with a 54-yard field goal as time expired to make it 27-3.

As bad as things were for the Tar Heels in the first half, N.C. State made it even worse in the third quarter.

Terrance Fedd gave UNC its best field position of the year when he intercepted a Montgomery pass at the Wolfpack 40.

But four plays netted no gain and the ball went back over to the Wolfpack on downs.

Montgomery played only two series in the second half, but he closed out his day with a 12-yard scoring pass to Naz Worthen with 10:04 left in the quarter. Hartman's kick made it 34-0.

In perhaps the only failure of the day for N.C. State, Hartman missed a 45-yard field goal with 5:25 to go in the third period.

In the third quarter alone, N.C. State outgained UNC 138 yards to 12. At one point, the Tar Heels had 11 straight incompletions.

N.C. State safety Jesse Campbell, a former West Craven star, said the play of the Wolfpack defense in the third quarter was a big key because they didn't let up.

"Carolina is a second-half team," Campbell said. "They've scored most of their points in the second half. We were expecting them to pass. We were just up for them."

Midway through the third quarter, Sheridan began to substitute freely on offense.

Early in the fourth quarter, Jackson made it 41-3 when he scored on a six-yard run with 14:31 left in the game. Hartman added the point after.

The Wolfpack scored again after Dexter Royal intercepted a May pass. This time, third-team quarterback Charles Davenport had the honors, scoring from three yards out on a keeper with 6:21 to go. Hartman's PAT brought the margin to 48-3.

The win moved the Wolfpack to 5-1 overall and 3-1 in the ACC heading into a home game against Clemson Saturday.

The Heels play host to Georgia Tech next week.

Irish Win...

first half and quickly erased a 21-7 deficit.

Notre Dame had been waiting for three years to make up for an embarrassing 58-7 loss to Miami in Gerry Faust's final game as head coach. The Irish first sought revenge last year but lost again 24-0.

They were not to be denied this time as quarterback Tony Rice ran seven yards for the game's first touchdown in the opening period and threw a nine-yard pass to fullback Braxston Banks to snap a 7-7 tie in the second quarter.

Carlos Huerta kicked a 23-yard field goal early in the final period and Notre Dame almost gave the game away when Miami defensive end Greg Mark sacked Rice, shook the ball loose and recovered at the Irish 14 with 2:10 to play.

Four plays later, Walsh lobbed his final scoring pass to Brown but that was as close as the Hurricanes could get.

The victory gave Notre Dame a 6-0 record. Miami is 4-1 after suffering its first regular-season setback since a 35-23 loss to Florida on Sept. 7, 1985.

The momentum seemed to be swinging Miami's way early in the third quarter. First, free safety Bubba McDowell intercepted a pass by Rice at the Hurricanes' 42. Conley fumbled right back on the next play but Miami's Derrick Golden blocked a 43-yard field goal attempt by Billy Hackett.

The game swung back Notre Dame's way when Miami went once too often to a fake kick, one of its most successful plays in the past.

On fourth-and-3 from the Miami 47, Mike Pigza snapped to ball to up-back Matt Britton, but Notre Dame's Steve Belles read the play perfectly and stopped Britton for a 1-yard loss.

Rice, who passed for a career-high 195 yards, promptly flung a 44-yard pass to wingback Ricky Watters at the Miami 2. The Irish then lined up in a wishbone and Eilers took a pitchout around right end for the go-ahead touchdown, only the fifth carry of his career.

An interception by defensive tackle Jeff Alm at the Notre Dame 24 halted another Miami drive and, 10 plays later, Ho kicked the field goal for what proved to be the decisive points.

ECU Defeat Follows Pattern

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Saturday's 45-21 loss by East Carolina to fifth-ranked Florida State fit the bill of nearly all of their losses this season.

Simply put, the Pirates didn't come up with the key play at the right time in dropping their sixth consecutive game and falling to 1-6 for the season.

Trailing only 7-0, and still very much alive, the Pirates were flagged 5 yards for unsportsmanlike conduct on a field goal attempt by the Seminoles.

The thing that made the penalty so crucial was it gave the Seminoles new life with a first down at the Pirate 26-yard line. To make matters worse, the kick by Richie Andrews had landed shy of the goal posts.

"One of our linebackers (Glen Willis) was yelling and the official interpreted it as making a sound like a snap count," Baker said. "I don't think that was his intention, but anyway it's a call I haven't seen made in a long time until today.

"It's a common practice when the other team is fixing to kick a field goal, you see everybody kind of jumping up and yelling to try and distract the kicker," Baker said. "And the rule is that you can't yell things that might simulate a snap count. He was 5 yards off the ball, so I was disappointed in the call."

The Seminoles went on to score following the penalty and though the Pirates managed to tie the game later in the first half, 14 points is just too much for any team to allow Florida State to get ahead by.

Another crucial play of the first half came just after the Pirates had gotten even in the game at 14-14.

The Seminoles were at the Pirate 17 facing a third and 15 situation when quarterback Chip Ferguson completed a touchdown pass to Ronald Lewis.

Ferguson moved Florida State on top 28-14 later in the half in nearly the same situation. On third and 7 at the Pirates' 23-yard line, Ferguson lofted a scoring pass to Terry Anthony.

"From that standpoint (FSU scoring on third down plays) we stopped ourselves," Baker said. "We were hurt by penalties and missed assignments."

The defensive unit wasn't the only thing that went sour for the Pirates though, the offense also had its bad moments.

Trailing 28-14 at the outset of the second half, ECU had moved from its own 20 down to the Florida State 17 where they were about to attempt a field goal to close the margin.

A bad snap sent the Pirates away empty though and the Seminoles cashed the error in by scoring following the miscue.

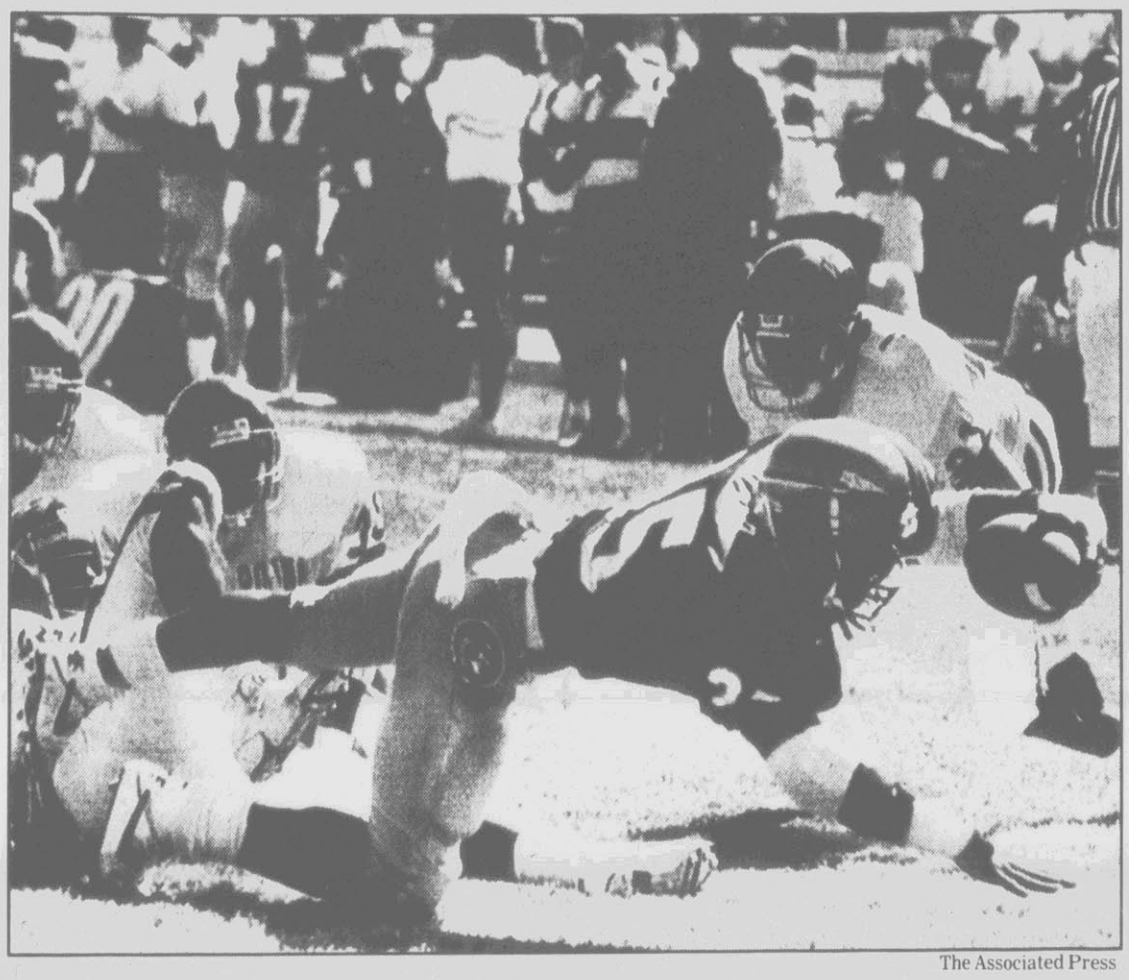

"The snap on the missed field goal was high, but it should've been handled," Baker said. "They had a similar snap and they got it down with no trouble."

It was no picnic for the the Pirates' special teams either. Time after time the Seminoles had excellent starting position on a drive because of the play of the special teams.

Dexter Carter returned the opening kickoff 38 yards to the FSU 48-yard line to key the Seminoles first score, while Deion Sanders set up the second score with a 20-yard punt return to the FSU 48.

After ECU tied the game at 14-14, Carter returned the ensuing kickoff 43 yards to start a scoring drive at the Seminole 46-yard line. The next Florida State touchdown was set up when Sanders returned a John Jett punt to the Pirate 34.

By that time it was 28-14 and the game was well on its way to being decided, with the same script for the sixth straight week.

The Associated Press

Florida State's Chris Parker stretches for a touchdown against East Carolina Saturday.

Pirates Fall To FSU...

Three plays later, Parker scampered in around the right side for a touchdown. Andrews' point after lifted FSU to a 38-14 lead with 10:18 to play in the game.

The Pirates took the ensuing kickoff and moved from their 30-yard line to the Florida State 2 before being pushed back to the 7. ECU then missed out on a chance to score when Hunter's pass for Reggie McKinney fell incomplete in the end zone.

FSU's Paul Moore gave the Pirates another crack at the end zone when he fumbled on the next play. Ed Brogdon covered the loose ball for the Pirates at the FSU 7.

Hunter finally pushed it over with a 2-yard run with 2:07 showing on the clock. Imperato's kick was good, trimming the Seminole lead to 38-21.

"It (FSU scoring late in the game) doesn't really bother me," Baker said. "He (Bowden) said at the beginning of the year that his team is going to score whenever it gets the chance to."

Bell's Boot Lifts Louisville Over Cavs By 30-28 Score

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Placekicker Ron Bell, who had been benched after missing two field goals and an extra-point attempt a week earlier, hit a 39-yard field goal with 10 seconds left as Louisville overcame a 14-point deficit to beat Virginia 30-28 Saturday.

Louisville, 4-3, started the winning drive on its 36-yard line with 1:10 remaining after Virginia botched a 32-yard field goal attempt when the snap sailed over the holder's head.

Jay Gruden then completed four of six passes, the last an 11-yarder to tight end Chad Fortune that put the ball on the Virginia 22 and set up Bell's game-winning kick.

Down 28-14 late in the third quarter, Louisville turned the game around by blocking a Virginia punt and recovering the ball at the Cavalier 17. Six plays later, Gruden tossed a 2-yard TD pass to Fortune on fourth down with 35 seconds left in the period.

Virginia, 2-4, failed to move the ball on its next series, punted, and Louisville took over on its 24. Reserve fullback Latrell Ware then capped the 76-yard drive with a 6-yard scoring run with 9:44 left in the game. But Klaus Wilmsmeyer, who had started the game in Bell's place, was wide right on the extra-point attempt, making it 28-27.

Gruden finished the game with 26 completions in 45 attempts for 268 yards and three touchdowns.

Virginia appeared to have the game in hand after scoring 21 unanswered points midway through the contest behind quarterback Shawn Moore, who threw for two touchdowns and ran for another, erasing a 14-7 Louisville lead.

Moore hit Bruce McGonnigal with an 11-yard TD pass with 6:45 left in the half to tie the game at 14, and then capped a 27-yard drive following a Louisville fumble with a 2-yard TD run to make it 21-14 at halftime.

Moore capped the outburst in the third quarter with a 4-yard scoring pass to McGonnigal at the 12:06 mark before Louisville began its comeback.

Georgia Tech Stuns Gamecocks

And, the Yellow Jackets did it.

"We knew we had to get in Todd Ellis' face," outside linebacker Willis Crockett said Saturday after Tech's defense pressured Ellis into five turnovers as the Jackets crushed eighth-ranked South Carolina 34-0.

Andre Thomas returned one interception 51 yards for a touchdown and set up another with a 10-yard return as Tech snapped a 15-game losing streak against Division 1-A oppositon.

"We took it as a challenge this week," Thomas said of the battle with Ellis, one of the nation's top passers.

Tech entered the game ranked No. 1 nationally in pass defense (95.8 per game) and held the Gamecocks to 151 yards in the air.

"There's not a whole lot you can say about this one," South Carolina Coach Joe Morrison said after his team was knocked from the unbeaten ranks.

"Georgia Tech took us to the woodshed today," he said. "They just outplayed us. I don't think we took them lightly."

The Yellow Jackets, bolting to a 31-0 halftime lead with a near flawless performance, hadn't whipped a major opponent since downing Duke 34-6 late in the 1986 campaign.

"It was one of those days when everything went our way," Tech Coach Bobby Ross said.

"We played almost a perfect football game," he said. "Our game plan on offense, defense and the special teams were perfect. We just executed."

It was the first time the Gamecocks had been blanked in 71 games, since dropping a 24-0 decision to Georgia in 1981.

South Carolina, a 15-point favorite, fell to 6-1 and Tech lifted its mark to 2-4, winning for the first time since a season-opening victory over 1-AA Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Todd Rampley engineered touchdown drives of 79 and 88 yards on Tech's first two possessions, firing up a defense that shut down Carolina's high-powered attack.

The Jackets picked off four passes by Ellis, who was intercepted five times last week in a narrow victory over Virginia Tech.

Ellis also lost a fumble on a sack by Sean Smith that set up a 29-yard field by Thomas Palmer in the second quarter. Palmer added a 35-yard field goal with 58 seconds left following an interception.

Rampley hit Steve Davenport with a 12-yard touchdown pass on Tech's first possession and then connected with Greg Lester for 48 yards to the Gamecock 30 to set up the first of two 1-yard scoring plunges by Stefen Scotton.

Scotton's second touchdown came in the second quarter on his third carry after Thomas returned an Ellis interception 10 yards to the South Carolina 4.

UCLA, Southern Cal Post Victories

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Troy Aikman threw two touchdown passes and ran for a third score Saturday as second-ranked UCLA made a bid for the top spot with a 38-21 victory over California.

The Bruins, 6-0 overall and 3-0 in the Pacific-10, hd a chance to move into the No. 1 spot next week following top-ranked Miami's 31-30 loss to No. 4 Notre Dame.

The Bruins' 6-0 start is the best since the 1980 team also started 6-0.

California, which lost to UCLA for the 17th straight time, is 3-3 overall and 0-3 in the Pac-10.

Aikman, who has 16 touchdown passes this season, threw for scores of 52 yards to Paul Richardson in the first quarter and 40 yards to Reggie Moore in the second quarter. His 1-yard sneak just before halftime gave the Bruins a 24-10 lead.

Aikman completed 21 of 32 passes for 322 yards. Cal's Troy Taylor completed 21 of 31 for 248 yards and a touchdown but was intercepted once and sacked seven times.

Taylor's 3-yard toss to Darryl Ingram, who made a diving catch in the end zone midway in the second quarter, gave the Cal junior 15 straight games in which he has thrown at least one touchdown pass.

The Bears put on a fourth-quarter flurry, scoring once and penetrating the UCLA 10 three other times. But Cal twice lost the ball on downs and had a pass intercepted.

Aikman was the difference, as Cal's defense held the heavily favored Bruins in check on the ground most of the game. California was helpless, however, against the pass.

With ample time to throw, Aikman hit a wide-open Richardson for his first touchdown late in the first quarter and found Moore behind the Bears secondary early in the second period.

Southern Cal.....28
Washington.....27

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rodney Peete ran for one touchdown and threw for another and Scott Lockwood rushed for 133 yards Saturday and third-ranked Southern Cal held off a late rally in beating 16th-ranked Washington 28-27.

The Pacific-10 Conference victory gave the Trojans a 6-0 overall record and a 4-0 conference mark. Washington dropped to 4-2 and 1-2.

Cary Conklin's third touchdown pass to Brian Slater pulled the Huskies to within 28-27 with 1:39 left in the game. But Conklin, who had completed 13 of his last 14 passes, underthrew Vince Weathersby on a two-point conversion attempt to end the Huskies' hopes.

The Trojans led all the way after going up 7-0 on Leroy Holt's 1-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

But Conklin ran for a touchdown and connected with Slater three times for scores as the Huskies refused to fade.

Peete, who completed 16 of 22 for 186 yards and was not intercepted, scored on an 8-yard scramble that put Southern Cal ahead 14-0 in the second period.

The senior quarterback then threw a 41-yard touchdown pass to Scott Galbraith in the third quarter as the Trojans moved ahead 21-7.

After the Huskies pulled to within 21-14 on a 54-yard touchdown pass from Conklin to Slater five minutes into the third quarter, Lockwood gave the Trojans some breathing room with an 8-yard touchdown run.

But the Huskies came right back, with Conklin capping a 76-yard drive on an 8-yard touchdown pass to Slater two minutes into the final quarter.

Conklin, who completed 19 of 30 for 280 yards, scored on a 1-yard run in the second quarter as the Huskies trimmed the Trojans' lead to 14-7.

Slater had five receptions for 117 yards in the loss.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Tailback Ricky Bradley ran for three touchdowns and James Henry added a 72-yard punt return for a score Saturday as surging Southern Mississippi dumped Mississippi State 38-21.

Winning for a fifth straight time, Southern advanced to 6-1. It was the Golden Eagles' 10th victory in the last 12 games in the intrastate series. State lost for the fifth straight time and fell to 1-5.

Southern, an independent off to its best start since 1981, had to survive a three-touchdown passing performance by State's Tony Shell, who threw for 312 yards.

Bradley, subbing for injured Shelton Gandy, ran for TDs of 2, 1 and 52 yards and carved out 167 yards rushing in 29 carries.

Duke crept closer on its next possession, driving 66 yards on seven plays when Dilweg hit Clarkston Hines with a 7-yard TD. Dilweg also hooked up with Hines for the two-point conversion that cut the lrad to 21-14 with 11:00 left.

But that was as close as the Blue Devils got. The Tigers responded with an 11-play, 73-yard drive that ended with Williams scoring on a 5-yard run that gave Clemson a 14-point lead at intermission.

Duke, which was averaging 493.6 yards and 31.6 points a game, was held to 305 yards total offense — all but 54 coming through the air.

Hines had eight catches for 80 yards for Duke, which last beat Clemson in 1980.

Joe Henderson scored on a 5-yard run 35 seconds into the final period to give the Tigers a 42-17 lead.

Scouts from seven bowls — including the Sugar, Gator and Citrus — were on hand for the game, which was televised by ESPN.

Drivers Set For Holly Farms Run

NORTH WILKESBORO (AP) — Five drivers ran 113 mph in practice Saturday and crews made final tune-ups for the Holly Farms 400.

Geoff Bodine ran a lap of 113.866 mph on the five-eighths of a mile banked asphalt track Saturday. Rusty Wallace, Terry Labonte, Sterling Marlin and Brett Bodine also ran 113 mph. Bill Elliott, who won the pole for Sunday's race, turned a lap of 112 mph.

"I don't really put a lot of stock in today's practice speeds," said Elliott, who leads the Winston Cup point standings by 109 points over Wallace. "It's no secret that we don't tip our hand on everything we can do, and neither does anybody else. We'll find out who's the fastest when the race starts."

Elliott, who qualified for the race at a speed of 116.901, is joined on the front row by Alan Kulwicki, who had a practice lap of 112.839 miles per hour. Ken Schrader and Ricky Rudd will start on the second row.

Elliott has six victories in the 1988 season, twice the number of Wallace and Dale Earnhardt, who is in third place in the point standings. The points race tightened after Wallace edged Darrell Waltrip for victory at the Oakwood Homes 500 at the Charlotte Motor Speedway last weekend.

The race had been scheduled for Oct. 2, but was delayed two weeks by rain. Sunny skies and temperatures in the 70s are expected for the 400-lap race.

Cornhuskers Outpoint Cowboys

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Steve Taylor ran for three touchdowns and passed for two more, and tailback Ken Clark ran for 256 yards and three scores as seventh-ranked Nebraska outscored No. 10 Oklahoma State 63-42 in the Big Eight on Saturday.

The Cowboys, 4-1, entered the game as the nation's top scoring team with a 50.3-point average, and Nebraska, 6-1, was second at 45.3. The big-play offenses lived up to their statistics.

Nebraska, scoring 28 points in its first 12 plays, got touchdowns as Clark ran 73 yards, Charles Fryar returned an interception 86 yards, Clark ran nine yards, and Taylor went 60 yards and 43 yards, all in the first quarter.

Clark added his third touchdown early in the second quarter on a 2-yard run before Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders, the nation's rushing, scoring and all-purpose yardage leader, scored on runs of nine and one yards. His second touchdown followed an interception return to the Nebraska 1-yard line by Rod Smith.

Taylor hit tight end Todd Millikan on a 32-yard pass and Oklahoma State's Mike Gundy responded with a 12-yard scoring toss to Hart Lee Dykes less than two minutes later for a 49-21 halftime spread.

With a 13-yard scoring pass to Millikan in the third quarter, Taylor became the most productive quarterback in Nebraska history with his 54th touchdown running or passing.

Sanders, who rushed for 189 yards on 34 carries, scored his third touchdown on a 1-yard run near the end of the third period to go with a 4-yard scoring run with 5:46 to play.

Taylor ran nine yards just over five minutes into the final quarter for his third score. He finished with 140 yards on 11 rushes and completed six of 11 passes for 92 yards.

Oklahoma.....70
Kansas State.....24

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Ninth-ranked Oklahoma ran for an NCAA-record 768 yards, including 123 and three touchdowns by Charles Thompson, in beating Kansas State 70-24 in Big Eight football on Saturday.

The 768 yards eclipsed Oklahoma's NCAA record of 758 set against Colorado in 1980. The Sooners finished with 829 total yards.

Reserve halfback Eric Mitchel added 161 yards and two touchdowns on just six carries. He scored on an 85-yard run in the third quarter and on a 47-yarder in the fourth quarter.

Thompson, starting in place of injured Jamelle Holieway, scored on runs of 11, 5 and 77 yards and threw a touchdown pass — all in the first quarter — as Oklahoma improved to 5-1 overall and 2-0 in the conference.

Kansas State, 0-6 and 0-2, have lost 18 in a row to Oklahoma, by an average margin of 34 points.

Thompson's 11-yard touchdown run capped a nine-play, 80-yard drive that used up less than three minutes of the first quarter. His 5-yarder less than two minutes later came four plays after the Sooners had intercepted a Carl Straw pass and returned it to the 25.

With 7:56 remaining in the quarter, Thompson made it 21-0 when he hit tight end Adrian Cooper on a 3-yard scoring pass. That drive also took only four plays and started after a Wildcat fumble.

Thompson's 77-yard run, the longest of his career, ended a 35-point first quarter. He didn't play in the second half.

Kansas State, the Big Eight's top passing team with an average of 243 yards per game, had 347 yards through the air Saturday and 419 overall.

Auburn.....42
Akron.....0

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Stacy Danley rushed for two touchdowns and James Joseph added a 73-yard scoring run as No. 12 Auburn overpowered Akron 42-0 Saturday.

Danley, scoring on runs of 12 and 22 yards, finished with 74 yards. Joseph led the Tigers with 92.

Auburn, coming off a 7-6 Southeastern Conference loss to Louisiana State, improved to 5-1. The Zips, in only their second year of NCAA Division I-A play, dropped to 2-5.

Reggie Slack kept Auburn's opening drive alive with a 35-yard, third-down pass to Freddy Weygand. Vincent Harris capped it with a 6-yard scoring run off right tackle.

Auburn followed that with touchdowns on its next two drives to make it 21-0. Akron, which trailed 28-0 at the half, moved the ball well at the beginning of the third quarter, but quarterback Mike Johnson fumbled the snap at the Auburn 20 and Smoey Hodge recovered for Auburn.

In the fourth quarter, backup Matt Voglar completed a 54-yard pass to Weygand, setting up his 5-yard throw to Weygand. Alex Strong added a late touchdown run for Auburn.

Wyoming.....55
New Mexico.....7

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Dabby Dawson gained 179 yards Saturday and defensive end Dave Edeen returned an interception 78 yards for a score as No. 14 Wyoming crushed Western Athletic Conference foe New Mexico 55-7.

Wyoming improved to 7-0 on the year and 4-0 in the WAC with its 16th straight regular-season victory.

New Mexico, 1-6 overall and 0-3 in the conference, had its only flash of brilliance on its second series when backup quarterback Ed Larson duped Wyoming's defense with a screen to Tony Jones, who raced 79 yards for a touchdown less than three minutes into the game.

The 7-0 lead was short-lived, though, as Wyoming responded with a 70-yard drive capped by Peter Gunn's 2-yard dash into the end zone.

Through the rest of the first half, Wyoming scored almost at will, reaching the end zone on drives of 49, 42, 92 and 64 yards.

Ahead 35-7 at the half, Wyoming continued the onslaught early in the third quarter as Pat Rabold tipped one of Larson's passes to Edeen, who lumbered 78 yards into the end zone to put the Cowboys up 42-7.

Dawson recorded his only score late in the third quarter on a 13-yard run in which he started left, cut across the grain and went untouched into the end zone.

Michigan.....17
Iowa.....17

Michigan appeared to be driving for the go-ahead touchdown in the battle of conference title contenders when Mott, a 6-foot-4, 240-pound senior, made his big play.

Iowa drove to near midfield, but Chuck Hartlieb's desperation pass to Marv Cook on the final play was broken up by David Key and Vida Murray at the Michigan 3.

The tie knocked Michigan, 2-0-1 in the Big Ten and 3-2-1 overall, out of a tie with Indiana and Illinois for the Big Ten lead. Iowa, which tied Michigan State 10-10 two weeks ago, is 1-0-2 and 3-2-2.

Hartlieb, who completed 26 of 33 passes for 263 yards, directed Iowa to a 17-3 lead midway through the first half, but Michigan rallied to tie the score on Taylor's 5-yard touchdown run late in the half and his 24-yard touchdown pass to John Kolesar with 12 seconds left in the third quarter.

The latter score capped a 99-yard, 13-play drive that began after Iowa's Tony Stewart lost the ball trying to dive into the Michigan end zone from the 1-yard line. Tripp Welbourne recovered for the Wolverines.

Iowa took its early lead on Hartlieb's 5-yard touchdown pass to Cook in the first quarter. Jeff Skillett's 32-yard field goal and David Hudson's 5-yard touchdown run, which came three plays after Iowa's Dave Haight recovered a Taylor fumble at the Michigan 8.

Mike Gillette kicked a 43-yard field late in the first quarter for Michigan, which had minus yardage on three of its first four possessions.

Arkansas.....27
Texas.....24

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Quinn Grovey ran 21 yards for a touchdown and set up two other scores to carry the 17th-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks to a 27-24 Southwest Conference victory over Texas on Saturday.

The unbeaten Razorbacks improved their season record to 6-0 and remained atop the SWC with a 3-0 mark.

The Longhorns dropped to 3-3 for the season and 1-1 in SWC play.

Grovey, who was twice knocked out of the game with injuries, gave Arkansas a 24-3 lead with his third-period touchdown before the Longhorns mounted a rally behind backup quarterback Mark Murdock, a freshman.

Murdock flipped a 13-yard touchdown pass to Keith Cash and completed two long passes prior to Eric Metcalf's 1-yard scoring plunge in the third period.

Murdock also threw a 37-yard scoring pass to Tony Jones with 4:30 to play.

Michigan State Gets 1st Victory

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Andre Rison caught two touchdown passes from Bobby McAllister and broke Kirk Gibson's school reception yardage record as Michigan State beat Northwestern 36-3 for its first football victory of the season Saturday.

Gibson, who on Saturday led the Los Angeles Dodgers into the World Series against the Oakland Athletics, had 2,347 receiving yards before graduating after the 1978 season. Rison, a senior, caught four passes for 99 yards Saturday and now has 2,395 yards on 123 catches in four years.

The victory left the defending Big Ten and Rose Bowl champions 1-4-1 for the season and 1-1-1 in conference play. Winless Northwestern dropped to 0-5-1 and 0-2-1.

The Spartans, who had scored a combined 36 points in their first five games, broke the game open with 17 points in the third quarter.

Rison caught a 16-yard touchdown pass that put Michigan State ahead for good at 10-3 in the second quarter and hooked up with McAllister for a 57-yard touchdown pass play in the third quarter.

McAllister ran two yards for a touchdown in the third quarter, Rob Roy ran one yard for a fourth-quarter touchdown and John Langeloh kicked field goals of 19, 39 and 23 yards for Michigan State.

Northwestern's Craig Forman kicked a 31-yard field goal that tied the game 3-3 midway in the second quarter.

Pittsburgh.....42
Temple.....7

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Darnell Dickerson completed 15 of 21 passes for 287 yards and a touchdown and ran for another score as Pittsburgh gained a school-record 615 yards in beating Temple 42-7 on Saturday to end a three-game losing streak.

Pitt broke the record of 610 yards set in a 52-20 victory over Army in 1975.

Vernon Kirk, a tight end lined up as a blocking back, scored two of Pitt's first three touchdowns on his only two carries, and freshman Curvin Richards ran for 123 yards and a touchdown on 24 carries as Pitt avenged upset losses to Temple the last two seasons.

Pitt is 3-3, Temple 1-4.

Alabama.....28
Tennessee.....20

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alabama broke open a close game with two fourth-quarter touchdowns, including a 55-yard run by Murry Hill, and defeated Tennessee 28-20 in the Southeastern Conference on Saturday.

Alabama improved to 4-1, 3-1 in the SEC. Tennessee fell to 0-6 and 0-4, the worst start in Volunteer history.

Alabama took a 21-12 lead with 7:30 to play when David Casteal scored from seven yards out on a fake reverse.

Alabama forged a 14-0 lead in the first quarter on an 8-yard run by Wayne Shaw and a 60-yard pass interception return by John Mangum, one of his two interceptions in the game.

Shaw's run capped a 97-yard, six-play drive, the big play being a 61-yard pass from David Smith to Todd Richardson to the Tennessee 15.

Tennessee made it 14-7 on an 11-yard pass from Francis to Thomas Woods early in the second quarter, then added a safety when Preston Warren blocked a punt out of the Alabama end zone to cut it to 14-9.

Tennessee linebacker Keith DeLong, who had 19 tackles, intercepted a Smith pass and returned it to the Alabama 13 early in the third quarter. That set up a 23-yard field goal by Chip McCallum, cutting Alabama's lead to 14-12.

Smith completed 10 of 18 passes for 169 yards. Francis was 18 of 37 for 222 yards and two touchdowns, but was intercepted three times.

Purdue.....31
Ohio State.....26

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback Brian Fox threw for two touchdowns and ran for another in the second half as Purdue defeated Ohio State 31-26 Saturday in a Big Ten Conference game.

The victory improved Purdue to 3-3 overall and 2-1 in the Big Ten, while Ohio State, a two-touchdown favorite, dropped to 2-4 and 0-3.

Ohio State is off to its worst start since the 1966 team went 2-4. The Buckeyes had not lost three straight Big Ten games to open the season since 1943.

Fox, a 17-year-old freshman, threw incompletions on his first three passes, then completed 18 of his next 21 as Purdue overcame a 20-7 Ohio State lead. Fox completed 19 of 27 passes for 223 yards and three touchdowns without an interception.

Ernie Schramayr, a former third-team fullback who had moved up because of injuries, caught 13 passes for 105 yards, including touchdown receptions of seven and five yards in the second half.

Ohio State had built a 17-7 lead at the half on a 58-yard run by Carlos Snow, a 1-yard run by quarterback Greg Frey and a 35-yard field goal by Pat O'Morrow. The Buckeyes made it 20-7 on their first possession of the second half on O'Morrow's 24-yard field goal.

But then the Boilermakers came right back on a 67-yard drive, ending in Fox's 5-yard scoring throw to Schramayr.

Snow fumbled on the ensuing kickoff return and the ball was recovered at the Ohio State 16 by Steve Jackson.

Four plays later, Fox scored on a 3-yard option keeper to make it 21-20.

Purdue built the lead to 28-20 on its next possession, going 63 yards to score on Fox's 7-yard pass to Schramayr.

Stanford.....24
Arizona State.....3

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A tough Stanford defense picked off five Daniel Ford passes to take a 24-3 victory over Arizona State Saturday and post the Cardinal's first Pac-10 Conference victory of the season.

Stanford, 1-2 in Pac-10 and 3-3 overall, had to come from behind after the Sun Devils, still winless in conference play, drew first blood with a 49-yard field goal by Alan Zendejas that capped an ASU drive that consumed 61 yards on 10 plays in the first quarter.

Arizona State fell to 0-2 in conference and 3-3 overall.

Stanford quarterback Jason Palumbis, a freshman redshirt making his second start, then engineered an 80-yard drive that ended when fullback Jon Volpe squeezed over from the one-yard line. The 12 plays that led to the score included five completions by Palumbis.

SW Louisiana.....45
Northern Illionis.....0

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Brian Mitchell rushed for 116 yards and passed for 142 yards and scored twice, to lead Southwestern Louisiana to a 45-0 victory over Northern Illinois Saturday.

Southwestern scored on its first three possessions of the game.

The Cajuns capped a 98-yard touchdown drive when P.D. Broussard leaped over the goal line to put Southwestern ahead 7-0.

Mike Lemoine gave Southwestern a 10-0 advantage at the end of the first period with a 25-yard field goal.

Mitchell scored his first touchdown from seven yards. The drive was kept alive when Mitchell connected with Willie Culpepper on a third and thirteen at the Northern Illinois 43.

Culpepper caught seven passes for 154 yards.

The Cajuns had three touchdowns in the third quarter to go ahead 38-0.

On Southwestern's first play of the half, Mitchell scrambled right for a 33-yard scoring run. The touchdown was set up when Robert Johnson recovered an Adam Dach fumble.

Scoring runs by Steve McKinney and Joe Redding gave the Cajuns the final margin. McKinney scored from six yards. Redding from 11.

Mississippi.....25
Arkansas State 22

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Mark Young completed five straight passes, hitting Pat Coleman with a 34-yard touchdown pass to cap a 66-yard drive, as Mississippi came from behind for a 25-22 victory over Arkansas State in college football action Saturday.

Coleman crossed over the middle, pulled down the ball at about the 20-yard line and outraced several Arkansas State defenders to the end zone for the winning score.

Young had to overcome injury and adversity to lead the Rebels to the victory, which evened their record at 3-3. Arkansas State fell to 2-5.

After recovering an Arkansas State fumble on their own 14-yard line, Ole Miss tailback Jim Earl Thomas fumbled giving Arkansas State the ball back on the Ole Miss 16. That set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Easley which put Arkansas State up 22-17 after a two-point conversion attempt failed.

Texas Tech.....38
Rice.....36

HOUSTON (AP) — Senior wingback Tyrone Thurman caught two touchdown passes and scored a third time on a 75-yard punt return Saturday as Texas Tech beat Rice 38-36 in a wild Southwest Conference game.

The loss extended Rice's losing streak to 12 games — the longest in the nation among major colleges.

Both teams combined for 1,109 yards, including a school record 642 for Rice.

The road victory was the first for second-year Texas Tech Coach Spike Dykes after seven losses and a tie.

Thurman, at 5-foot-3 and 135 pounds the smallest player in major college football, caught scoring passes of 5 and 34 yards from Billy Joe Tolliver, then raced 75 yards with a punt for a conference-record fourth career TD punt return.

Air Force.....56
Utah.....49

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah quarterback Scott Mitchell passed for a Western Athletic Conference-record 620 yards and five touchdowns, but Air Force offset that with 640 rushing yards and outscored the Utes 56-49 on Saturday.

Quarterback Dee Dowis directed the running game for Air Force, 5-2 overall and 3-2 in the WAC. Utah slipped to 1-2 in the WAC and 2-4 overall.

Mitchell surpassed the previous WAC record of 585 by Brigham Young's Robbie Bosco in 1985 and fell one yard short of the NCAA record set in 1980 by Dave Wilson of Illinois.

The Air Force wishbone attack featured three players with over 100 rushing yards. Fullback Andy Smith picked up 213 yards and scored three touchdowns, Anthony Roberson rushed for 186 yards and Albert Booker finished with 109 yards.

The Falcons broke open a close game with three touchdowns in the third period and Utah had to play catch-up the rest of the way. The Utes scored their final touchdown on the last play of the game, a 16-yard pass from Mitchell to Curt Jones.

Air Force's other scores came on a 16-yard run by Booker, a 13-yard run by Roberson, a pair of runs by Dowis and a 43-yard pass from Dowis to Roberson.

Houston.....82
Tulsa.....28

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Cougars scored three times in the first five minutes Saturday behind the passing of David Dacus and went on destroy the Tulsa Golden Hurricane, 82-28.

It was the most points a Southwest Conference team had scored since 1940, when Texas beat Colorado 94-7. Houston beat Tulsa 100-6 in 1968, before it joined the SWC.

Houston improved to 4-1 with the win. Tulsa fell to 1-5.

Dacus threw for four touchdowns. Jason Phillips, the nation's leading receiver, caught TD passes of 20 and 39 yards. Dacus also threw scoring passes of 39 yards to James Dixon and of 47 yards to Brian Williams.

He was one of three Cougars receivers who finished the game with more than 100 yards.

Phillips had 152 yards in 11 catches and two touchdowns, followed by Kimble Anders' 100 yards and two touchdowns and Dixon 124 yards and one scoring catch.

Thompson Leads Indiana To Win; Florida Upset

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Anthony Thompson rushed for 139 yards and three touchdowns Saturday and became Indiana's career scoring leader as the 18th-ranked Hoosiers beat Minnesota 33-13 in the Big Ten Conference.

Thompson, a junior with 204 points, supplanted teammate Pete Stoyanovich, whose three extra-point kicks on Saturday gave him 199 points for his career.

The Hoosiers, 3-0 in the Big Ten and 5-0-1 overall, built a 19-7 halftime lead, then added touchdown runs by Thompson in each of the final two quarters.

Thompson, who came into the game as the nation's No. 2 rusher at 165 yards a game, also caught four passes for 39 yards.

Indiana quarterback Dave Schnell, who completed 15 of 21 passes for 247 yards, also ran six and four yards for touchdowns in the second period. Tony Buford caught six Schnell passes for 152 yards, including a 57-yarder that set up Schnell's second touchdown run in the closing seconds of the first half.

The first touchdown, for Minnesota, 2-3-1 and 0-2-1, came on a second-quarter run of one yard by Darrell Thompson, who became the Gophers' career rushing leader. Thompson, limited to 44 yards on 15 carries, has 3,096 in his career, nine more than Marion Barber's record set in 1980.

The third touchdown by Anthony Thompson, a 10-yard run about four minutes into the final quarter, put the Hoosiers ahead 33-7. The Gophers' final touchdown came on a 22-yard run by Fred Foggie with about five minutes remaining.

Vanderbilt.....24
Florida.....9

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Eric Jones turned a fourth-down gamble into a 1-yard touchdown pass to Steve Kosanovich early in the fourth quarter Saturday to spur the Commodores to a 24-9 Southeastern Conference victory over No. 20 Florida.

Jones found Kosanovich in a corner of the end zone to complete an 80-yard march that put Vandy in control 17-9 with 9:42 left in the game.

The victory allowed Vanderbilt to level its overall record at 3-3 and move to 2-2 in the SEC. Florida, 5-2 after dropping its second game in a row, is 3-1 in the SEC.

The Commodores' lead was cut to 10-9 on a 40-yard field goal by Florida's John Francis with 13:57 left in the game before mounting the pivotal march. Jones kept the 13-play drive alive early with a 20-yard completion to Tony Pearcey at the Florida 41.

Jones' scoring pass came after he had missed Rodney Barrett in the end zone on third down.

The Commodores added an 11-yard run by Mark Johnson with a minute remaining after Florida turned the ball over on downs. Gators quarterback Herbert Perry was sacked by linebacker Billy Cunningham.

Perry, thrust into the starting job when Kyle Morris was injured in last week's loss to Memphis State, completed 21 of his 37 passes for 181 yards, but was sacked three times by the Vanderbilt defense.

Jones passed for 171 yards, completing 16 of 30 passes.

The Gators also played without tailback Emmitt Smith, who had averaged 125.2 yards a game. He was also injured against Memphis State.

Tyson Says Wife 'Evil,' After Bucks

CHICAGO (AP) — World heavyweight champion Mike Tyson says his estranged wife Robin Givens was "evil" and played "a sting game" to trick him into marrying her so she could get his multimillion-dollar fortune.

Tyson also contended in an interview with the Chicago Sun-Times that Givens and her mother, Ruth Roper, "don't like black people," even though both are black, as is the world heavyweight boxing champion.

"They use them, but they don't like or respect black people. They want to be white so bad. The way they talk about black people, you'd think you were living with the Ku Klux Klan.

"I'm serious," Tyson told the newspaper in an hour-long interview at fight promoter Don King's 32-room mansion in Windsor, Ohio. "They thought they were royalty. She and her mother want so much to be white, it's a shame. And they were trying to take me away from the people I grew up with and throw me into their kind of high-class world."

In a story in early Sunday editions, the Sun-Times reported that Tyson's comments were made Friday in his first extensive interview since Givens publicly castigated him Sept. 30 on ABC's "20-20" show.

Givens described her marriage to Tyson as "pure hell" and accused him of assaulting her. She filed for divorce Oct. 7.

Givens told "20-20" in a second interview broadcast Friday that she still loves the champ. Tyson filed Friday for divorce and annulment of their marraige, charging that Givens deceived him into marrying her by claiming that she was pregnant by him "when she wasn't."

"The issue really is not money," Tyson said. "I don't blame anybody for trying to get money. It's just the idea that they (Givens and her mother) played the scheme on me. It was like a sting game. They drew me in. They worked on my emotions because I was in love.

"They tried to separate me from my friends and turn me against everything I believed in. The manipulating part of it was just overwhelming and it really ticked me off. She just tried to ruin me and destroy me.

"Not only did she want to take my money, but she wanted to ruin me, embarrass me, take away my manhood and humiliate me on television so that no woman would ever want me again. And that was evil," Tyson said.

Tyson also said he has no intention of trying to patch up his eight-month marriage to Givens, a television actress.

"She had her chance and she blew it," Tyson said. "She blew the opportunity of a lifetime. Nobody is going to ever want her. She just missed out on the train."

Rose Drills Kinston, 41-0

Viking Mistakes Help Rampants Roll To 7th Straight

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

KINSTON — Rose High School took advantage of Kinston mistakes and rolled to a 41-0 victory in their Big East Conference football meeting Friday night.

The win was the fourth in a row for the Rampants in the conference and their seventh overall as they remained unbeaten.

Kinston, its own worst enemy in the game, suffered six turnovers and Rose capitalized on those, turning two of them into touchdowns while another kept Kinston from getting on the scoreboard on its best opportunity of the night.

"Greenville has a good football team," Kinston's interim coach Dave Bumgarner, a former Rampant coach, said. "They execute extremely well. But that happens when you have good people.

"We gave them the ball too many times in good field position. They never had to move from their own territory," Bumgarner said. "But that's been the story on this ball club."

Rose's coach Chip Williams said he was quite pleased with the way the Rampants responded after dodging a bullet against Wilson Beddingfield a week ago. Rose got new life when Beddingfield missed a late field goal and went on to win 12-6 in overtime.

"After last week, I was happy with the week of practice we've had. You could tell on the bus coming back from last week that the attitude had changed. You would have thought that we lost. I think we learned a lesson from that game."

Rose came out very aggressive, especially on defense. The Rampants held Kinston to only 54 yards on the ground and to only 74 in total offense. Kinston actually had minus 15 yards in offense in the second half.

The Rampants took the ball in on their opening possession. They got it back after a short punt right at midfield. Timmy Moore — who finished with only 80 yards rushing for the night — ripped off 20 on the first Rose play. Rose continued to grind it out, reaching the nine where a half-the-distance penalty placed it inside the five. Moore went over left tackle for those final four yards for the first Rose score with 5:10 left.

Two plays after the kickoff, Kinston fumbled and John Williams recovered for Rose on the Kinston 16.

After a pass fell incomplete, Tony Williams ripped off 10 for a first down at the six. From there, Moore went over the middle for the score with 2:45 to go, and Robinson made it 14-0.

Rose got it back again on a turnover as Moore blindsided Kinston quarterback Demetrius Moore and Carlester Crumpler recovered the fumble that resulted.

Taking over at the 18, Rose was helped along by a personal foul that moved the ball to the 10. Williams scored two plays later from the two with 11:30 left in the half, upping the score to 21-0.

Kinston managed to move the ball its next two possessions and nearly pulled out a score. From their own 27, the Vikings moved to the Rose 27 before again losing the ball on a fumble.

Then, after getting it back at their own 40 after a punt, the Vikings marched again. They drove to the four and got a first down at the two when Rose was called for pass interference in the end zone.

But on the next play, Moore's pass was batted at the line of scrimmage and Crumpler plucked the ball out of the air as time ran out in the half.

"We moved the ball pretty well in the second quarter," Bumgarner said. "But then we get down there and blow it. That's very discouraging to our kids. Our quarterback just doesn't know yet when to eat the ball."

After forcing a punt from deep in Kinston territory, Rose took over at the Kinston on its second possession of the second half.

Jamie Brewington, who had not hit a pass in the first half, then connected with John Ebron for 15 yards, and went to Crumpler for 13 more to the one. Brewington then plunged over from there to up the lead to 28-0 with four minutes left in the period.

A 10-yard punt return by Eric Morris gave Rose the ball its own 49 on the first play of the final quarter. Brewington then hit Morris for a 30-yard game and Williams went to his bench. Rose ground out the final 21 yards with Don Thompson going in from the two with 6:40 left, upping the lead to 35-0.

Kinston was forced to punt from its own 15 on the next series, and Terry Miles broke through to block the kick, then fall on the ball in the end zone for the final touchdown of the night with four minutes to go.

A bad snap canceled the chance for the final PAT kick.

Kinston switched to the wishbone offense after its first series, but Williams said it didn't hurt Rose that much. "I won't say that we let down (on Kinston's two drives); they just played well during them," Williams said.

"I was very pleased with our defense throughout the game, especially since we started a sophomore at end in this game for the first time (Andre Perkins). We have to develop some depth in order to have more success this year — and next."

Kinston falls to 0-4 in the conference and 0-7 overall.

Recruiting Notes

Recruiting Notebook

As Rose rolls along through the Big East Conference schedule, college recruiters are keeping a close eye on many of the team's seniors.

End Carlester Crumpler (6-5, 210) has attracted interest from schools all across the country, but he has not indicated where he might sign. His decision likely will come after he completes the basketball season.

Tailback Tim Moore (5-9, 215) has received the most interest from South Carolina and East Carolina, as both schools seem to be willing to allow him to play baseball also.

East Carolina has also expressed interest in quarterback Jamie Brewington (6-1, 170).

Defensive lineman Raleigh Fuller (6-3, 230) is considering South Carolina, while Clemson has been in contact with end-linebacker Malcolm Wilson (5-11, 180).

Rampant coach Chip Williams also felt linebackers Shelton Northern (5-11, 223) and Billy Carr (6-1, 188) would draw some notice from Division I-AA schools.

At North Pitt, defensive tackle Tony Hopkins (6-0, 260) and quarterback Billy Hardison (5-8, 165) are both attracting interest from North Carolina Central, while junior linebacker-end Reggie Daniels (6-3, 195) has received notice from Clemson. Tackle Mark Hines has also received some interest from some CIAA schools.

In the pre-season, Wake Forest showed some interest in Hardison and he is expected to make a recruiting trip to the school.

At Ayden-Grifton, tight end Ronnell Peterson (6-1, 195) has continued to receive interest from some Division I schools, mostly in the Atlantic Coast Conference area, but he is presently recovering from arthroscopic knee surgery. Peterson, though, is likely to wait until after basketball season before deciding which way he will go.

Charger coach B.T. Chappell said he thought halfback Tony Reeves (5-11, 185), the leading rusher in the Eastern Plains Conference with 691 yards, would probably get some interest from some smaller Division I schools after the season ends.

Chappell also expected to hear from some smaller schools, possibly some NAIA colleges, about offensive linemen George Fuller (6-3, 240), James Collins (5-11, 200) and end Kelvin Ellison (5-11, 180).

Farmville Central tackle Kevin Wade (6-7, 310) is only a junior, but his size has attracted the notice of some ACC schools. — Tom Morris

Midnight Madness, Lefty Strike At James Madison

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — "Midnight Madness" was new to James Madison. It wasn't to the school's new basketball coach.

The scoreboard at center court ticked off the last 10 seconds and the crowd of about 1,000 counted down.

When the buzzer sounded, Lefty Driesell strode onto the court a standing ovation already under way. The crowd chanted "Lefty, Lefty." Five fans ripped off their shirts and each had a letter of the coach's nickname on his chest.

It was the first time James Madison ever started basketball practice in the middle of the night, one minute after the NCAA's allowed start.

"I think we may have been first, you know when Tom McMillen was a freshman," Driesell said in referring to his most recent coaching address, Maryland.

His teams there were successful for 17 years, earning 14 postseason berths and producing 25 players drafted by the NBA, seven in the first round.

His tenure there ended in the summer of 1986 when he was forced to resign following the cocaine-induced death of All-American Len Bias.

"It's a lot different. When I was announcing games I didn't care who won," he said after his first practice with the Dukes. "It was like going to clinics. I had to study both teams. It was more fun. This is the fun part of coaching, working with the guys, putting in offenses and defenses."

The sparse crowd in the 7,600-seat Convocation Center was lively but small.

The decision to have the midnight practice wasn't made until the middle of the week and students were away from the campus on the last three-day weekend until Thanksgiving.

Driesell was glad for the early start.

The crowd was dressed in gobs of purple and gold, the school's colors. Most wore hats emblazoned with "JMU and Lefty Too!"

Driesell isn't worried about living up to his name.

"When I went to Maryland I was a name coach. I had four, five teams ranked in the Top Ten at Davidson," Driesell, 57, said.

The prospect of a ranked team soon at James Madison is unlikely. One starter returns and 11 of the players on the roster are sophomores or freshmen.

Driesell's two best players can't play because they are transfers — Fess Irvin from Louisiana State and Steve Hood of Maryland. He doesn't have last year's leading scorer and rebounder — Kennard Winchester — who Driesell kicked off the team in June for a non-basketball offense.

"I didn't come here to lose," Driesell said. "I don't think anyone here expects us to come here and lose."

"I thought I was at a hockey game." — Mario Lemieux, who threw out the first ball at a game between the Pirates and the Expos, which erupted into a brawl.

Local Man Wins Three in a Row

They have won some races in past years, but this year has been the most successful.

Michael is employed as a mechanic for a local dealership. His dad, who is the chief wrench man, is employed as a mechanic for the NC Highway Patrol Garage.

Their car is a 1968 Dodge Charger that was built from the ground up for racing. The engine is a 440 cubic inch, highly modified Chrysler engine. The fuel is blue alcohol.

Pitt Motor Parts, as a sponsor, and many friends have made the racing operation very successful.

Vikes, Chargers In League Wins

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley took advantage of seven West Craven turnovers Friday night and romped to a 40-13 victory in Coastal Conference football action.

Viking safety Paul Merritt intercepted three pass interceptions and caused a fumble as he led the Conley defense in the game. Overall, Conley had five interceptions and two fumble recoveries.

It didn't start out that way, however. On the first play from scrimmage in the game, West Craven's Lee Becton broke loose and raced all the way to the Conley 18 before being pulled down, a 45-yard gain. The next play lost a yard, but on the next, quarterback Kevin Holzworth connected with Thomas McGee for the score from the 19. Jay Gaskins kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

After Conley failed to move the ball, West took over again and Merritt started the turnover parade, intercepting Holzworth on the Conley 33. The Vikes drove 67 yards for the score with quarterback Scott Seymour going in from the one. Andy Fassett kicked the PAT and the quarter ended in a 7-7 tie.

Remarto Roberts then recovered an Eagle fumble at the Conley 25. Anthony Stevenson climaxed the following drive with an eight-yard run and Fassett's kick made it 14-7.

On the opening possession of the second half, Martin Patrick intercepted another Holzworth pass and returned it to the West Craven three. Stevenson scored on the next play, but Fassett's kick was off target, leaving it at 20-7.

West Craven fumbled again at its own 18 and Seymour went to Patrick for the final 13 yards. A two-point try failed, leaving Conley with a 26-7 lead.

The Vikes upped it to 33-7 when Seymour hit Junior Farrow on a 48-yard pass and Fassett was true.

Tyrone Turnage then completed the Conley scoring on a two-yard run, with Fassett again kicking the PAT.

Freshman Anthony Barrett carried the ball 16 times for Conley for 94 yards — his first sub-100 yard game with the Vikings. "He was playing on a sour ankle he injured in practice on Tuesday," Coach Steve Craft said. "We didn't know until game time whether he'd be able to play. It did slow him down.

"But everything seemed to come together for us tonight. We hit on all eight cylinders — everyone played well. It was time and it couldn't have come at a better time."

Conley, now 5-2 overall and 3-1 in the Coastal, goes outside the league on Friday, hosting Greene Central in its final home game of the year.

Greene Central.....14

SNOW HILL — Aaron Harper scored three touchdowns and rushed for 144 yards to lead Ayden-Grifton to a 36-14 victory over Greene Central Friday night in an Eastern Plains Conference football game.

The win kept Ayden-Grifton unbeaten in EPC play at 3-0. The Chargers are 6-1 with only a 13-8 loss to fellow eastern power Wallace-Rose Hill in the opening game of the year marring the record.

Both teams scored once in the first quarter of the game. Harper came through with the first score, picking off a Kris Radford pass and returning it 38 yards for the Charger score. Tony Reeves ran over the PAT to give the Chargers an 8-0 lead.

Greene Central came right back on its next possession to score. "We called the same play that Harper had intercepted us on," Greene Central coach Spence Grantham said. "The first time, however, Kris had thrown to the wrong man."

This time, however, the Ram quarterback was on target, hitting Ken Jones, who went 67 yards with the ball for the touchdown. A two-point conversion try failed, however, leaving Ayden-Grifton in an 8-6 lead.

The Chargers stretched their lead to 14-6 in the second quarter. Harper again did the honors, scoring this time on a 30-yard run. The conversion try failed, giving Ayden-Grifton an eight-point spread at the half.

Both teams again scored single touchdowns in the third period. Daryl Moye got Ayden-Grifton's on a two-yard run on the opening series of the half.

Greene Central came back with another Radford to Jones pass for its score, a 13-yard strike. Both teams were successful on two-point tries, leaving it at 22-14 going into the final period.

In that, however, the Chargers put the game away, scoring twice. Harper took it over from the 16 and Reeves added an 18-yard scoring run. Moye ran over the PAT after the first score.

Greene Central appeared to score on a Radford to Donald Speight pass on the final play of the game, but the officials ruled him down at the one-inch line.

Reeves added 114 yards on 15 carries for the Chargers, who rolled up 303 yards rushing.

Radford paced the Ram attack, hitting 16 of 30 passes for 331 yards. He suffered three interceptions. Jones caught five passes for 127 yards while Speight had three for 96.

Greene Central falls to 3-4 overall and to 2-2 in the conference. The Rams go outside the conference on Friday, traveling to D.H. Conley, while Ayden-Grifton is at home to Farmville Central in another league game.

Charlotte Loses First

NEW YORK (AP) — It was only an exhibition game. Luckily.

Tim McCormick scored 17 points and Kevin Williams and Walter Berry scored 14 each Friday night, leading the New Jersey Nets past Charlotte, 118-97, in the first exhibition game ever for the Hornets.

New Jersey, 1-1, led for all but 29 seconds and by no fewer than 12 points in the fourth quarter.

"I think we demonstrated we need to work on a lot of things this week," Hornets coach Dick Harter said.

Harter said Rambis's absence may have illustrated how crucial he is to the Hornets' defense.

"I hope it had a big effect — about 30 points worth," Harter said. "What we lacked was defending in the lane. He's our best at that and maybe our best rebounder."

"It happened in a pileup," Rambis said of the injury. "I sure hope I can play."

Charlotte pulled to 64-60 at 2:44 of the third quarter, but the Nets rebounded to lead 89-77 at the end of the period.

New Jersey led 62-54 at the half after gaining a 32-22 lead in the first quarter.

Hornets forward Kelly Tripucka scored a game-high 23 points, and was 9 of 18 from the field, and Robert Reid scored 16. Rex Chapman, Charlotte's first-round draft pick, did not play. He has participated in two practices since signing this week.

But without Rambis, Hornets Tripucka and center Dave Hoppen were abused inside. At 6-foot-6, Tripucka wasn't big enough to defend against the Nets' small forwards.

"They're all tougher now — real tough to defend," said Tripucka, a seven-year veteran. "They're like a different breed now. When I came into this league every small forward was 6-6 or 6-7. Now they're all 6-10.

New Hunt Hours

As Duck Hunting Season Opens

Hunters Reminded of New Shooting Hours

Going duck hunting? The first portion of the North Carolina duck season ran Thursday through Saturday, and later seasons run from Nov. 24-26 and Dec. 15 through Jan. 7. If you plan on hunting, be sure you know when the sun rises.

Legal shooting hours for waterfowl hunting now run from sunrise through sunset. In the past, legal shooting hours ran from one-half hour before sunrise through sunset.

"The official times for sunrises and sunsets are found in most newspapers, or in the Almanac section of the annual North Carolina Wildlife Calendar," said Major C.J. Smith of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission's Division of Enforcement.

Smith also reminded waterfowl hunters that they must have "a valid North Carolina Migratory Waterfowl Hunting License in addition to a federal duck stamp. Persons with a lifetimes sportsman's combination license do not need to purchase the state waterfowl license because waterfowl hunting is included in the lifetime sportsman's license."

However, neither the annual sportsman's license nor any of the comprehensive hunting licenses include waterfowl hunting. Also, shotguns used for waterfowl hunting must be plugged so that they are not capable of holding more than three shells in the magazine and chamber.

Smith added that anyone with questions about shooting hours or waterfowl regulations should contact their local wildlife enforcement officer or call 1-800-662-7137.

Feds Close King Mackerel Season

Gov. James G. Martin has advised the National Marine Fisheries Services that North Carolina will contest the NMFS's finding that the king mackerel quota for recreational fishing in the south Atlantic has been met.

The NMFS had earlier notified Gov. Martin of its decision to close the recreational fishing season at 12:01 a.m. Monday. The closing would affect all recreational fishing for king mackerel in the Federal Zone, the area from three to 200 miles offshore. This is the area where 80 percent of king mackerel are caught.

Gov. Martin said the closing was based on "incredibly unreliable data" and that "closing the king mackerel season at a time when the stocks are in an excellent condition is unsupportable."

Flounder Size Limit to Stand

North Carolina's 13-inch flounder regulation "is workable, reasonable and necessary, and will be enforced in the clear interest of both fishermen and the general public," said Dr. William T. Hogarth, director of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries.

Hogarth's statement came in response to "both limited complaint and indications of support" after DMF recently increased the flounder length requirement from 11 to 13 inches.

Some fishermen had requested that the strengthened regulation be revised or rescinded. "In addition," Hogarth commented, "it appears that a few fishermen may have decided to work against this regulation rather than working with us to improve the fishery and ensure its future."

According to DMF data, flounder catches declined from 18 million pounds to 7 million pounds in less than 10 years.

"We know that flounder don't spawn when they are much less than 13 inches in size," he said. "Accordingly, in the interest of preserving our flounder fishery, we became convinced that steps had to be taken to permit young flounder to spawn at least once before they are caught."

Hogarth acknowledged that fishermen will experience some problems with the new length requirement. "Net fishermen will have to cull their catch, and should do so as promptly as possible to save the undersized fish.

"Our fishermen are very enterprising, too. They can and will develop ways, with our help, to minimize undersized catch. This represents some extra work and expense, but the economic impact is nothing compared to that of constantly decreasing catches."

He added that "North Carolina's fishermen could become an endangered or decreasing species along with flounder, striped bass and mackerel if reasonable steps aren't taken to preserve the industry and the fishery. A few years from now, or sooner, when we make this regulation work and see its result, everyone will be glad we did it before we lost the fishery."

Red Drum Tournament Scheduled

The fifth annual World Championship Red Drum Tournament will be held Oct. 27-30 in Avon, where more than $7,500 in cash and prizes will be awarded for the largest drum (overall and daily) and second largest drum.

Anglers, who must pay an entry fee of $25 per day, may compete as individuals or as teams in bluefish prize categories. Tournament fishing will begin at 12:01 a.m. Friday and end at 4 p.m. Sunday, followed by a fish fry.

The tournament is an annual fund raiser for the North Carolina Coastal Federation, a non-profit organization that educates citizens about coastal resources.

For more information, contact Donna Agnew, NCCF, 1832 J. Bell Lane (Ocean), Newport, N.C. 28670, or call 393-8185.

Stream Watch Conference to be Held

A conference for Stream Watchers and others interested in North Carolina's waters will be held Oct. 21-23 at N.C. State University's Hill Forest located north of Durham.

A series of hands-on workshops will be offered on water quality monitoring, environmental permits, Stream Watch group activities and recreational river corridors.

Stream Watch is a partnership between the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development and citizen volunteers across the state who "adopt" a water body in their community for its protection and improvement.

Stream Watch groups undertake stream clean-ups, water quality monitoring, trail construction and youth education. Since its inception in 1983, the program has grown to include over 100 groups. Streams, lakes, rivers and estuaries are all eligible for adoption.

The conference is for anyone interested in learning more about the state's water resources and how to become involved in their protection. For more information, call the Stream Watch Coordinator, Division of Water Resources, NRCD: 733-4064.

Final Day For King Fishing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Recreational king mackerel fishermen have until midnight Sunday to get their fill this year after the National Marine Fisheries Service announced Wednesday it would close the season early.

The season will end in federal waters from North Carolina to Florida. Federal waters are from three to 200 miles offshore, where most king mackerel is caught.

Based on data compiled through the summer, National Marine Fisheries projected recreational fishermen would catch 4.8 million pounds of king by the end of October if the season remained open, said Dennis Spitsbergen, vice-chairman of the South Atlantic Fishery Management Council. The quota set this year was 4.4 million pounds.

As recreational fishermen were taking their last casts for king mackerel, activity in spots and bluefish started picking up along the North Carolina coastline last week.

Hatteras

At the Pelican's Roost, Dave Hissey reported good catches of bluefish and trout.

"In the surf we've had real good catches of blues, speckled and grey trout and flounder and pupppy drum," he said. "Out in the sound, we're having some real good catches of speckled trout and flounder also.

"Offshore when they can get out, they've had real good catches of wahoos, yellowfin and some white marlin and a few sailfish," Hissey said.

Topsail Island

"We had the record come in here (Tuesday)," Crouch said. "We had a big whale come swimming in right at the end of the pier. He was about 40 feet long."

No one was able to land the whale, but the Spanish mackerel were in abundance.

"We had a good many Spanish this week," Crouch said. "We had a few spots. There were some nice catches of whiting made last night and a good many flounders.

"A few blues have been showing and the puppy drum are showing up along with an occasional speckled trout or two."

Crouch said the spots had tapered off, but he expected them to pick back up soon.

"The spots have slowed down some, but they'll be spots here," he said. "It's not over with, by no means."

Wrightsville Beach

At the Crystal Pier, George Fokakis reported good catches of king and Spanish mackerel, but said the spots were not doing as well.

Fokakis also reported catches of amberjack, Virginia mullet and a fairly good run of blues.

Nags Head

At the Nags Head Fishing Pier, Bill Inge said the fishing was excellent.

"We've caught a lot of trout, sea mullet and bluefish," he said. "We had some spots; we had goot run of spots last week."

Inge reported a good run of king mackerel Tuesday and said he expected the blues to be coming in fairly soon.

Carolina Beach

Rating A Rack Against Others

By Bill Schulz
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA (AP) — If you've ever bagged a buck with eight or more points, a wide spread and heavy antlers, you've probably wondered how it stacks up against record book racks.

It's hard to tell unless you can hang two heads side-by-side or understand Boone and Crockett Club scoring. The Boone and Crockett Club is the country's unofficial keeper of big game records.

Animals such as deer or sheep are scored by size of antlers. Bears are scored by the size of the skull.

The keys to scoring an antlered animal, such as a deer, are size, mass and symmetry.

Here is how to score a typical whitetail deer. It takes 160 points to make the three-year awards program and 170 to make the Bible of hunting records, "Records of North American Big Game."

If you have a deer that scores close to 160 points, call your game and fish division to find an official scorer, who can tell you if you have a trophy eligible for the record book.

The score is the total of a series of measurements in inches. It goes by eights of an inch. A scorable point must be an inch long and longer than it is wide at the base.

The number of points doesn't count in the scoring, but the total length of all points does.

A typical rack is a pair of main beams with two points jutting forward just above the base, "brow tines," and other points protruding out from the main beams. Antler points sticking out from other places on the rack are considered abnormal points.

Column 1 will be "spread credit." No. 2 will be "right antler." No. 3 is "left antler" and No. 4 will be "differences."

Measure the greatest distance between the two antlers and enter it in column No. 1. That will be the only entry in column 1. It can be no longer than the longer antler. If it is longer, put the difference in column 4.

Measure each abnormal point. To measure a point, take a tape measure, lay it along the top of the main beam and draw a light line, in pencil, across the base of the point. Measure from the line to the tip of the point.

Measure each abnormal point and put the total of all points in column 4.

Now measure the right antler.

The best trick is to run a wire along the outside curve of the antler, then measure the wire. Put that at the top of column 2.

Then measure each normal point, including brow tines, and enter those measurements in column 2. Remember, measurements are in inches and eighths.

Then measure the circumference of the main beam at the smallest point between the burr and the first point.

Next, measure the circumference at the smallest point between the first and second point; then the second and third point; and finally the third and fourth point. Put all four circumference measurements in column 2.

Repeat the antler measurements for the left antler, placing each measurement in column 3, next to the same measurement in column 2. If you have more or fewer points on the left antler than on the right, enter zeroes for the missing points.

Now comes the higher math.

The final number is your Boone and Crockett score. If it's around 160 or more, call an expert. You've got a real trophy.

Successful Hunt

Scott Hardee of Calico bagged this eight-point deer Monday as deer season season opened in the area. The rack measured 14 by 14 inches. Hardee shot the buck with a musket rifle at 80 yards.

Foreman Keys Jags To 12-0 Win

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — In a close game, Farmville Central allowed the first few plays of each half to set the tone and key a 12-0 high school football shutout win over North Pitt Friday.

And the man in the middle of both key sequences was Jaguar sophomore quarterback Morris Foreman, who provided both of his team's touchdowns. He scored on offense on the Jaguars' initial drive in the opening quarter and then returned a fumble 40 yards for another score in the third quarter.

"It set the tone. Both in the opening half and in the second half things went our way," said Farmville coach Dixon Sauls.

The game, which was the last of a three-game stretch for the Panthers against the top contenders in the Eastern Plains Conference, left North Pitt coach Stuart Ennis disappointed in his team's play on the line of scrimmage.

"No doubt about it," he said. "We didn't control the line of scrimmage. That was the big problem. Farmville wanted it a little more than we did. It disappointed me. I thought we had a little more character.

"It's tough to move or throw the ball when you have confusion in your line. And it always seems to be that when we have confusion, our backs don't run hard."

While Foreman was responsible for both Jaguar scores, Sauls felt his defense, led by linebacker Scott Gardner, was responsible for the win.

"Our defense played exceptional," he said. "We played a nine-man front in the second half and we executed."

The Jaguars held North Pitt to only two first downs in the second half, came up with two fumble recoveries and intercepted two passes.

Foreman, making only his fourth start due to an early-season injury, drove the Jaguars in for a score on their first possession, using both the pass and the run.

He hooked up with Darryl Wilkes on a 31-yard pass play on the second play of the game that gave the Jaguars a first and 10 at the North Pitt 43. Two plays later he found Reggie Barrett for 16 yards.

Then, on a first and goal at the 21, he rolled left, saw an opening and raced across the field and went into the end zone untouched with 9:09 remaining in the first period. He tried to pass for the two-point conversion but was intercepted by Billy Hardison.

"Morris Foreman made some great plays, (including) his early touchdown run," Sauls said. With his running and throwing, he made some big plays early. We came out early, got a couple of passes. In a big ball game like this it helps to get going early."

North Pitt put together two potential scoring drives in the first half, but stalled both times well into Farmville territory. On both occasions, Dave Sawyer missed a field goal. The first one was from 25 yards away and the second was 40 yards.

And so the score remained 6-0 the rest of the half.

North Pitt then compounded its problems by suffering miscues on its first three possessions of the second half.

On its first possession, Michael Daniels fumbled the ball away at his own 43. After getting the ball back soon thereafter, the Panthers went nowhere. Then on its third possession, Daniels lost the handle on a pitch and was hit by Farmville's Bernard Newsome going for the ball, which ended up in Foreman's hands at the 40. He took it in from there with 4:50 remaining.

Farmville went for two on the conversion but the run failed, leaving it 12-0.

And from there on out, the Panthers seemed to be unable to sustain a drive long enough to get into scoring position.

The fourth quarter was spent with both teams exchanging the ball regularly on punts.

For the game, Foreman had 63 yards rushing along with another 47 yards passing to lead the Jaguar offense.

North Pitt, meanwhile, got only 30 yards net rushing out of Daniels, who had 150 in a 19-0 win over Greene Central last Friday.

The Panthers drop to 3-4 overall, 1-2 in the EPC, but Ennis said the season is far from over.

"Farmville still has to play Ayden-Grifton and Greene Central," he said. "It's a loss, but it's not the end of the world. I still feel like we can get the second playoff spot if we win the rest of our ball games."

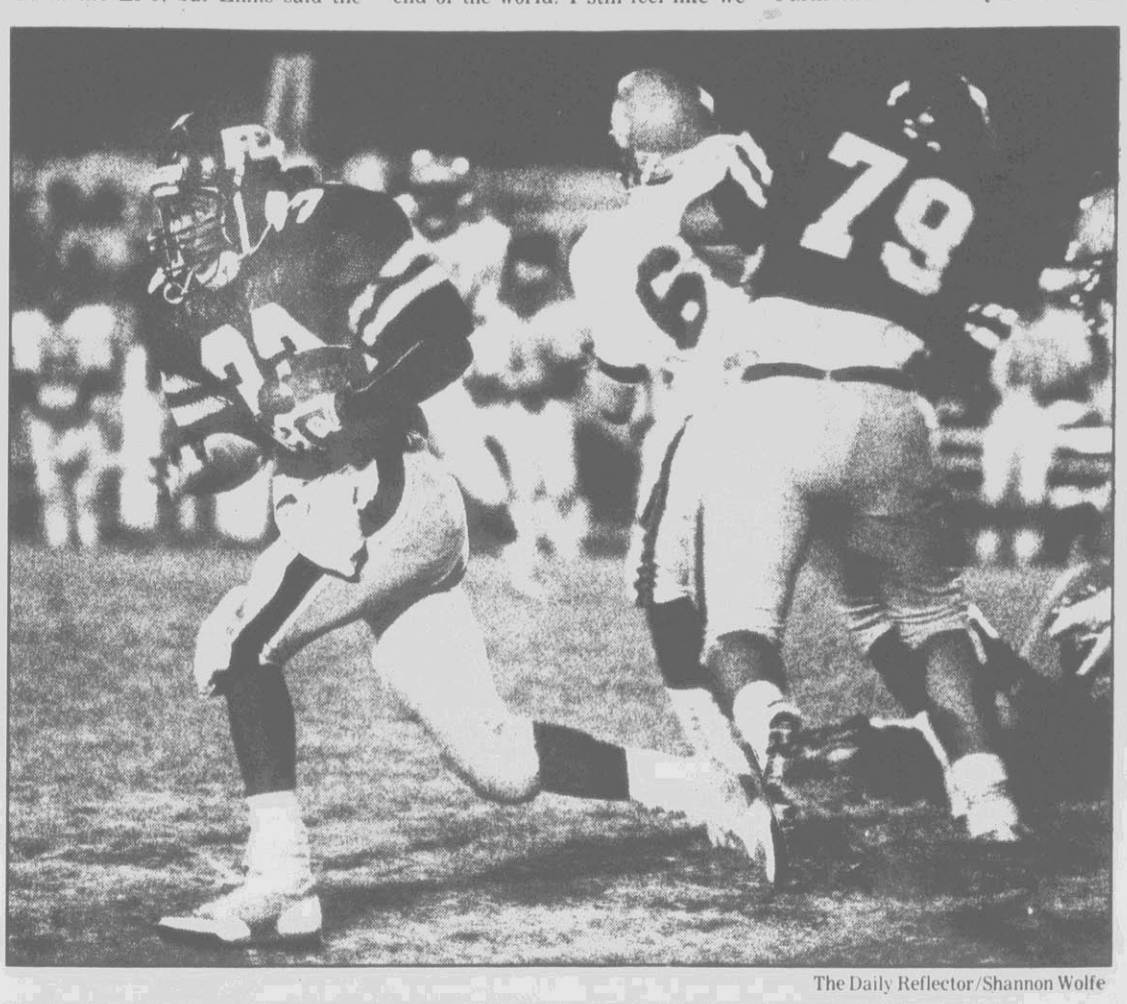

Next up for North Pitt is Homecoming against South Lenoir. Farmville travels to Ayden-Grifton.

Seven Unbeatens Among The 4-A's

By David Droschak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Defending state champion and top-ranked Garner, which has won 23 straight games, continues to head a group of seven undefeated 4-A high school football teams in North Carolina.

The Trojans, 8-0, got 161 yards rushing from tailback John Leach and 125 more from Marvin Hodge in their 48-0 victory Friday night over Raleigh Sanderson. Leach scored three touchdowns on runs of six and 76 yards and a kickoff return of 87 yards.

"Only time will tell how Garner compares to last year," Sanderson coach Chuck Lehning said. "But they are playing on a tremendous high right now, and that defense is outstanding. We couldn't do anything on either side of the ball."

Nine 4-A teams went into Friday night's action without a flaw, but Durham Hillside and seventh-ranked Gastonia Ashbrook fell from the unbeaten ranks. Hillside lost to rival Durham Jordan 28-21, while Charlotte Independence took care of Ashbrook 36-2.

In addition to Garner's lopsided victory, No. 2 Richmond County, No. 3 Greenville Rose and No. 8 West Mecklenburg all rolled to shutouts.

West Mecklenburg may have been the most impressive, scoring on its first nine possessions in a 58-0 victory over East Gaston. Roosevelt Brooks led the offensive assault with 183 yards rushing on 11 carries and two long scoring runs.

Perennial power and fourth-ranked Greensboro Page, 7-0, held off Greensboro Smith 20-7. The Pirates have now won 49 consecutive regular-season games and have scored in their last 118. Smith's star sophomore running back Curtis Johnson was forced to miss the game with a rib injury.

In the 3-A ranks, all-state quarterback Chuckie Burnette passed for 266 yards and one touchdown as top-ranked Burlington Cummings rolled past Graham 47-8. Antoine Lee did the damage on the ground, getting 165 yards. The Cavaliers, 7-0, also picked off four Graham passes.

Second-ranked Forest Hills, fifth-ranked East Lincoln and sixth-ranked Rockingham County also remained undefeated. Havelock, the third-ranked 3-A team at 6-0-1, was idle.

East Lincoln used its two quarterback rotation system to near perfection again Friday night in its 43-12 victory over West Caldwell. Jay Barkley and Marcus Stewart combined for 206 yards passing on nine of 11. Barkley also rushed for 100 yards.

A close game for nearly one half turned into a rout as Rockingham County scored 35 unanswered points in less than 20 minutes to defeat Western Guilford 44-15. Sandy Russell, the fullback in the Cougars' wishbone alignment, finished with 172 yards and three touchdowns.

Defending state champion and 10th-ranked Shelby edged No. 9 East Rutherford 13-12.

Senior fullback Keith Roberson scored three touchdowns and kicked six extra points as undefeated Hertford County downed Williamston 42-13 to keep atop the 2-A rankings. Williamston was held to one yard rushing in the first half.

Tenth-ranked Maiden got another big performance from Robbie Holloway. The senior rushed for 297 yards on 31 carries and scored three times as the Blue Devils defeated Bessemer City 30-13.

Unranked West Montgomery, 7-0, continued to impress. The Warriors, who have outscored their opponents 218-16, edged Jordan-Matthews 12-9.

In 1-A, two-time defending state champion Murphy ran its winning streak to 12 games with its 16-13 victory over Riverside Military of Georgia.

Several other ranked 1-A teams rolled up some impressive numbers.

Second-ranked Midway crushed Union 55-17, while No. 4 Swain County trounced Andrews 62-26, St. Pauls whitewashed Lumberton Magnolia 54-0 and Elkin destroyed Northwest Ashe 70-0.

Third-ranked Bath, averaging 52 points a game going into Friday night's contest, fell behind early but rallied for a 28-12 victory over No. 6 North Edgecombe. The Pirates, 7-0, got 140 yards from Jay Evans in the second half to pull out the victory.

Pam Pack, Bullets, Tribe Post Wins Friday Night

WASHINGTON — Joe Randolph scored twice as Washington High School ripped North Lenoir 39-8 in a Coastal Conference football game Friday night.

Randolph, a split end, scored one on an end-around and the other on a pass reception as the Pam Pack ran its Coastal record to 3-1.

Brian Jones, who connected on four of five passes for 126 yards, got the scoring going with a 21-yard aerial to Ray Pippen for a 6-0 lead in the opening period.

Adam Williams then hauled in a 40-yard pass from Jones to open the gap to 14-0 after Pippen took a pass from Jones for the conversion.

In the second quarter, Randolph raced 84 yards on the end-around and Derrick Curtis added the PAT kick to up the lead to 21-0. Washington then added two more scores before the quarter ended. David Williams scored on a 12-yard run and Randolph pulled in a 57-yard pass from Jones, running the lead to 33-0.

Washington wound up its scoring in the third period on a two-yard run by Darrell Dixon.

North Lenoir's only score came in the final quarter on a 51-yard run by Ken Smith.

The Pam Pack is now 6-2 and travels to West Craven on Friday.

Jamesville.....66
Belhaven.....26

JAMESVILLE — Michael Duggins scored three touchdowns and Keith Basnight ran for 194 yards as Jamesville crushed Belhaven, 66-26, in a Tobacco Belt Conference football game Friday night.

Basnight, who scored one touchdown, carried 23 times for his yardage. He also added four two-point conversions in the game. Duggins added 105 yards on 12 carries.

Kelby Moore put the Bullets on the scoreboard in the first quarter, scoring from a yard out. Belhaven came back to score before the quarter ended, tying it at 6-6. The Bulldogs scored on a one-yard run by Horace Griffin.

Jamesville then scored three times in the second period to put the game away. Duggins scored the first of his three on a 27-yard run and Basnight ran over the PAT. Belhaven wasn't through yet, however, matching that with a 37-yard pass from Ken Davis to Lamont Green. Griffin added the PAT to make it 14-14.

But the Bullets added 14 unanswered points the rest of the half to take a 28-14 halftime lead.

Duggins scored on a 30-yard run and Ernie Gardner caught a 10-yard touchdown pass from Moore. Basnight ran over the PAT after the first of the two.

Belhaven got back on the board with the opening kickoff of the second half as Maurice Green returned the kick 80 yards for a touchdown, trimming the lead to 28-20.

But Jamesville scored five straight touchdowns after that to turn it into a romp. Two of the scores came in the third period. Tony Cooper recovered a Belhaven fumble in the end zone for the first and Basnight ran 13 yards for the other. Basnight and Duggins added the conversions.

In the final quarter, the Bullets scored three more. Duggins scored from the four and Alexander Moore returned a fumble 15 yards. Moore added another score on a 24-yard run.

Griffin then closed out the scoring for the Bulldogs, on a four-yard run.

Jamesville boosted its record in the TBC to 4-1, 4-3 overall. The Bullets travel to Columbia on Friday.

Additional Allegations Are Tagged On Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky basketball program has been slapped with 17 additional allegations of wrongdoing by the NCAA, it was announced at a news conference Saturday.

The charges range from improper inducements to recruits to academic fraud as well as questions of ethical conduct by the basketball staff during the inquiry.

The NCAA also indicated that two more allegations could result from the investigation of the program.

The university was notified of one allegation on July 22 — that assistant coach Dwane Casey sent $1,000 to the father of recruit Chris Mills. Casey has denied sending money and the Millses have denied receiving any.

"It's been more than two months since the single allegation," UK president David Roselle said at the 40-minute news conference. "I was saddened by the first allegation. I'm even more saddened by the additional allegations."

The NCAA probe began last April after the Los Angeles Daily News reported that a package allegedly sent by Casey to Claud Mills via Emery Air Freight Corp. popped open in transit, revealing $1,000 in cash.

The university has until Dec. 12 to reply to the 18 allegations, according to a letter sent to Roselle by S. David Berst, who heads the NCAA's investigative arm.

"The current situation has not changed our position in the least," Roselle said of the findings. "It is the same as when the matter first began. Our resolve to thoroughly investigate all the allegations is firm."

Berst said a hearing before the NCAA Committee on Infractions would be scheduled after the university submitted its response to the charges.

Among the allegations against the program include:

— A recruit was promised a monthly allowance of $300 from the time he signed a letter of intent until leaving the school, an automobile at the time of signing and opportunity for different automobile when he leaves, and financial support for his mother.

The NCAA added that "a named representative of the university's athletics interests confirmed these offers ..."

— An athlete gave false and misleading information to university and NCAA enforcment staff and "the university violated NCAA rules by certifying the student-athlete's eligibility for competition."

— A high school coach of a prospective athlete was given excess compensation for work at a basketball camp in 1987.

— The university allowed three prospective athletes and one athlete to stay in Wildcat Lodge, the dormitory for UK basketball players, in summer 1987 without paying the bill until October 1987, "contrary to policies applicable to other students." The NCAA also noted that the three prospective athletes were not enrolled in classes at the university.

— The basketball staff "acted contrary to NCAA principles of ethical conduct by demonstrating a knowing and willful failure to comply with NCAA regulations and by providing false and misleading information to NCAA investigators."

The NCAA said the allegations "demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring" of the basketball program.

Four Brook Valley Women Are Winners

WILSON — Four women from Brook Valley Country Club were among winners in the Eastern League competition held Thursday at Wilson.

Ridgecroft Tops GCA Kickers

AHOSKIE — Ridgecroft Academy rolled up a 6-0 soccer victory over Greenville Christian Friday afternoon.

Dane Evans led the way with a hat trick afternoon. He scored two of his goals in the opening half and the other in the final period.

After Evans had scored the first two goals, Billy Mizelle and Kirk Lane added goals for the 4-0 intermission lead. Gray Minton scored the first goal of the second half and Evans closed out the scoring.

GCA took 11 shots on goal and Ridgecroft goalie Charlton Godwin recorded nine saves. Ridgecroft had 20 shots on goal and GCA's Chris Langley had 12 saves.

The loss evened the Knights' record at 6-6. Greenville travels to Falls Road Academy of Rocky Mount on Friday to participate in the Eastern Carolina Christian Conference tournament.

Roanoke College Tops ECU Kickers

SALEM, Va. — Roanoke College defeated East Carolina 2-1 in a soccer match in the Roanoke College Tournament Saturday.

The Pirates, who trailed 2-0 at the half, got their only goal in the second period. Andy Britton's penalty kick was deflected by the Roanoke goalie, but Britton scored on the follow-up.

The loss drops ECU to 1-10. The Pirates were scheduled to face Virginia Military Institute on Sunday.

Slaney, Scott Wins Mercedes Mile

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Decker Slaney and Steve Scott, who both ran disappointingly at the Olympics, redeemed themselves Saturday by winning the women's and men's divisions of the Mercedes Mile on Fifth Ave.

Slaney, the American record-holder at all distances between 800 meters and 10,000 meters but a 10th-place finisher at Seoul in the 3,000 and eighth in the 1,500, made a rare comeback in winning the race down one of the nation's most famous streets.

Slaney, who likes to take the lead and avoid traffic during her races, did so again Saturday. But then she was passed by Christina Boxer Cahill of Britain before rallying in the closing stages.

Slaney was timed in 4 minutes, 20.03 seconds, just missing the course record of 4:19:48 set by 1986 winner Maricica Puica of Romania. Puica did not compete Saturday.

Cahill finished second in 4:20.77, and Elly van Hulst of the Netherlands was third in 4:22.09.

Scott, the American record-holder in the mile but fifth in the Olympic 1,500, was at the front throughout in winning the men's race in 3:53.43.

Jeff Atkinson, who beat Scott in the U.S. Olympic trials, finished second this time in 3:53.77, with Marcus O'Sullivan of Ireland third in 3:54.24.

"I wanted to come here and win," Slaney said. "It was a positive way to end the season. I needed to know I could run at the end of the race."

One of the few times that Slaney has come from behind to win was in the 1983 World Championships at Helsinki, Finland, where she won the 1,500 and 3,000.

In the Olympics, Slaney went out quickly in both the 1,500 and 3,000, but because of a summer-long virus and a calf injury incurred during the heats of the 3,000, she faded badly and finished far back.

"The race begins halfway through," Slaney said, "but it is difficult to win when you feel out of it at that point. Today, I had something to come back with, which I haven't been able to do.

"The Olympics were basically what I was pointing to all season and they were so disappointing. I needed something positive to finish the season, and this was it.

"It would have been easy not to come here, but I thought I would come and try to do well."

Scott said he ran an evenly paced race.

Pavin's 66 Gives Him 5-Shot Lead

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Corey Pavin's front-running 66 gave him control of the tournament going into Sunday's final round of the $600,000 Texas Open.

He knew it.

And he didn't mind talking about it.

"It's my tournament to win now," Pavin said Saturday after completing three trips over the Oak Hills Country Club course in 193.

That's a distant 17-under-par and matches the low 54-hole total on the PGA Tour this year.

"A five-shot lead, seven over the next guy, it's a good position to be in," Pavin said.

"If I go out and play good tomorrow, I win," he said.

Tom Pernice, who hasn't finished higher than fifth in three years of Tour activity, birdied two of the three holes for a 67 and held second at 198, 12-under-par and five behind.

Kite had to come back from a double bogey to compile a 69 that left him in third place at 200, seven big shots back with 18 holes to go in the chase for a $108,000 first prize.

"Seven is a lot," he said. "I've won from seven back before. It is not beyond the realm of possibility.

"But for anybody but Corey to win, I think it's obvious they're going to have to have help."

Payne Stewart, with a 68 was at 202 and was the only other player in the field within 10 shots of the leader.

Tom Watson, a winner on this course last year and needing a high finish to qualify for the rich Nabisco tournament, could do no better than a 72 and completed three rounds at 208, 15 strokes back.

Pavin, three in front when the day's play started, quickly exerted his authority.

He birdied the first hole from 12 feet, then hit short irons inside of eight feet on the fourth and fifth and birdied them both.

"It was the start I was looking for," Pavin said. "I wanted to establish that I wasn't going to go backward."

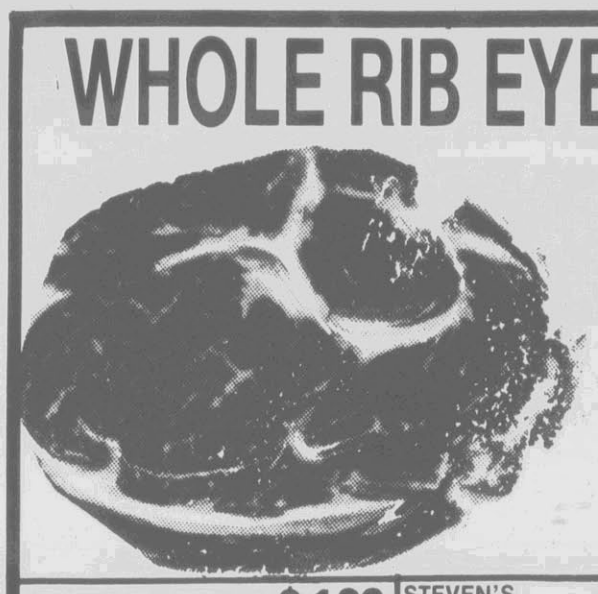

Pavin, winner of two titles in each of the last two seasons, also birdied the ninth from five feet and made the turn in 31.

"But I couldn't get much in the hole after that," he said.

"It was almost a relief," Pavin said after he missed the green and failed to get up and down on the 13th.

Fair Oyster Harvest Seen

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — State fisheries officials expect a fair oyster harvest this season, but shellfishermen aren't so sure.

Reports of oyster kills in Onslow and Carteret counties have some oystermen nervous.

"As far as anybody looking for a big swinging oyster season, I don't think there is going to be one," said Dolphus Thompson, 30, of Sneads Ferry.

Thompson, his two brothers and father work on the New River in Onslow County. "A lot of people are in for a fooling," he said.

The season for harvesting oysters by hand began Saturday along the coast from Manteo to the South Carolina line. Dredging season begins Nov. 15. Both seasons end March 15.

Shellfishermen looked for a good harvest last year. But two weeks after the opening, a rare outbreak of toxic marine algae, known as the red tide, forced the closing of the season.

Fentress Munden of Morehead City, deputy director of operations for the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries, said 1986-87 was the best oyster season since the 1950s.

Fear And Caution Rule Year After Wall Street's Big Crash

Buyers Finding More Losses Than Gains

By Stan Hinden
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Wall Street is a very different place one year after the stock market's historic collapse on Black Monday, Oct. 19. Greed has taken a holiday, and fear is in charge.

Stocks continue to be shunned by traumatized investors who flee to the safety of bonds and money-market funds. Boom times in the securities industry have ended, and industry profits have plunged. Trading volume on the exchanges has shrunk dramatically, and brokers' commissions have dried up.

Gone from Wall Street is the euphoria of the bull market, the giddiness that came from watching the Dow Jones industrial average climb another 100 points every few weeks. Gone, too, are most of the paper gains that millions of Americans were counting as theirs.

The heady sense of making money each day has been replaced by the dreary realization that there are more losses than gains to be found in a market that moves sideways month after month.

Since the crash, resourceful brokerage firms have worked feverishly to develop income-oriented products for investors who fear stocks. In recent days, major brokerage houses, including Merrill Lynch, have tried to stir investors to action with full-page ads declaring that "the time to buy is now."

Merrill Lynch recommends "selected bonds and interest-rate-sensitive stocks," based on its expectations that interest rates will head lower in the next 15 months.

The fallout of the crash brought hard times to the securities industry. Profits eroded quickly and 17,200 people have been laid off. More pink slips are yet to come. Scores of brokerage firms have been driven out of business or forced to merge.

Mutual funds, especially those that invest in stocks, have seen the equivalent of a "buyer's strike." While most investors have kept their money in the funds, relatively few are putting any new cash in. Those investors who felt compelled to switch moved their money to fixed-income or money market funds — now at near-record levels.

The 30 blue chip stocks in the closely-watched Dow Jones industrial average have regained 411.51 points of the 508 points they lost on Oct. 19, but it has been a struggle heavily dependent on takeover plays. The climate has prompted institutional and individual investors alike to keep large chunks of their assets in cash or cash-like investments.

Down in the trenches, brokers battling to keep commissions coming in have found their clients to be deeply fearful of the market's volatility and the control exercised by institutional investors. But from the pinnacles of the investment world, the view among some investment managers can be very different.

On a recent visit to Washington, John Templeton, '75, one of the world's more prominent investors, said he believed the bear market is in its late stages and suggested that investors start buying "carefully selected stocks at bargain prices" in preparation for the next bull market.

"The passage of a year's time is likely to relieve a lot of the fear in the hearts of investors," Templeton said. "If a whole year goes by in which you don't reach a new low, it's hard to call it a bear market."

Templeton suggested that a new bull market could begin within a year, a run that would take the Dow to 5100 — three times its low point on Oct. 19.

The Templeton funds manage $13 billion for 600,000 investors.

For the moment, however, brokers say their clients are wary of stocks, sitting on their wallets and displaying little interest in any investment that smacks of risk. Bonds, fixed-income investments and income real-estate partnerships are newly popular and widely preferred.

"The public wants income, because the public is frightened. They don't believe in the stock market," said broker Reina M. DuVal of Thomson, McKinnon Securities in Washington. Broker Michael S. Roberts of Prudential-Bache Securities in Bethesda, Md., endorsed the findings of fear among investors.

"Investor attitudes toward stocks don't have a lot to do with whether stocks appear to be good values," he said. "There is a psychological barrier. The number of people who say stocks are a crapshoot is considerably higher than ever before."

Broker David G. Speck of Johnston, Lemon & Co. in Alexandria, Va., said he had seen a major change in the attitudes of his investors. "A year ago, they were excited about making money. Now they're afaid of losing money." He added, "They're suspicious about whether it's a fair market, whether they are being manipulated by forces they don't understand."

Financial planner Alexandra Armstrong of Washington has seen a major change in the attitude of clients. "Last year, clients were pushing us to be more aggressive. We had a hard time telling them not to be." Now, she said, "We're having to push them more."

Armstrong noted that the market has rewarded investors in small growth companies. But she said, "Not many people were willing to do it."

Many a broker has spent the past year trying to adjust to life on a downward spiral. "A year ago, you could make a sale on your first phone call," said a Washington broker who asked not to be identified. "Now you have to make an appointment and be prepared to spend time meeting with the client."

For a few weeks after the crash it was different, recalled James J. Pasztor Jr., vice president of Voss & Co. in Springfield, Va. "We had two buy tickets for every sell ticket," he said.

But the fire-sale mood didn't last long, and now "people are more cautious. When the market goes sideways, things slow down. A lot of people are waiting."

The wait may be a long one.

At the American Stock Exchange in New York, for example, Chairman Arthur Levitt and President Kenneth R. Leibler have watched with concern as trading volume has dropped 30 percent from a year ago. Worse yet for the exchange, Amex trading in options on stocks-widely used by individual investors-has fallen 35 percent.

"This hurts," said Leibler. "The small investor's trading is a very critical lubricant to the market." Small orders, he explained, help traders balance the big orders they handle for institutional investors. "Their absence makes it much harder to make liquid markets."

The slowdown in business will chop Amex profits in half this year, Leibler said. A $20 million pretax profit in 1987 will fall to an $8 million to $10 million profit this year.

Chairman Levitt was not sanguine about the return of the individual investor.

"We have to restore their trust in the system and a feeling that they can make money in the market. They don't believe either," Levitt said.

In his talks with investors, Levitt said, he has found that "there is just a general public feeling that the market is too volatile, too institutional to be a place they want to risk their money."

A key reason for the public's lack of confidence in the market is the failure to deal with the causes of last October's crash, he said. Those causes are still not understood, he believes, and Levitt favors a special government study of the markets.

If the market crash frightened American investors out of their stocks, it did not mean that they took their money and hid it under the mattress.

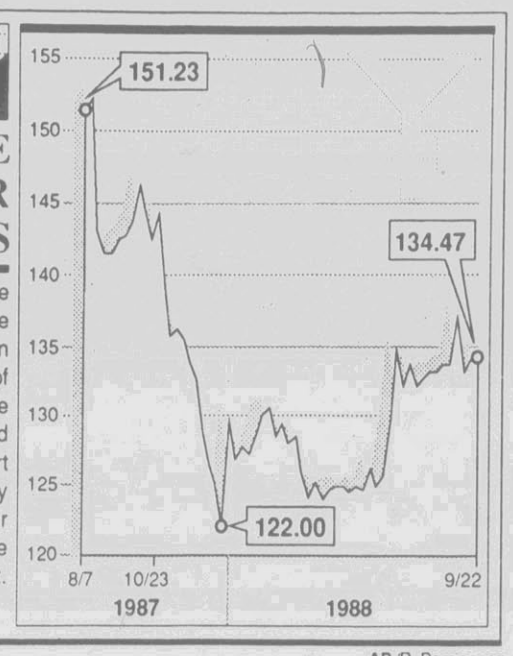

They just put it in safer places — most notably money market funds, bond funds and other types of income-oriented investments.

In the days and weeks immediately after the crash, the U.S. securities industry saw an instant need for investments that filled two essential demands-income and safety for nervous investors and steady commissions for brokers whose stock-trading business had been shattered.

Between January and August, the securities industry was able to generate and sell $14.3 billion in 36 closed-end bond and income funds — funds whose shares trade on exchanges like stocks. Four of the funds went over the $1 billion mark, with the largest being MFS Intermediate Income Trust, which raised $1.854 billion in March.

THE DOLLAR RECOVERS

The dollar's value against the Japanese yen sank sharply in the final months of 1987, but the slide has been stemmed this year. The chart shows weekly closings of the dollar against the yen in the Tokyo market.

POST-CRASH DEALMAKING

Fewer firms are raising money in the stock market these days, but the pace of mergers and acquisitions hasn't slowed much after the stock market crash.

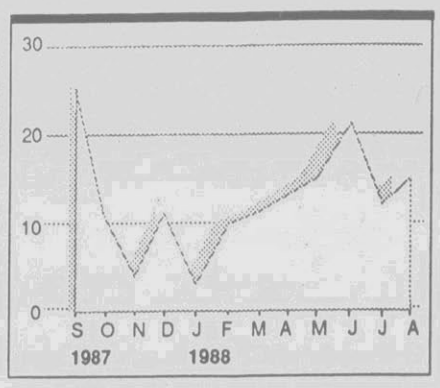

NEW STOCK ISSUES

The number of new stock issues fell after the crash and leveled off in 1988. The dollar value of the offerings has compensated somewhat. Then for example, the 57 offerings in Sept. 1987 were worth $2.4 billion, while the 21 issues in March were worth $3.9 billion.

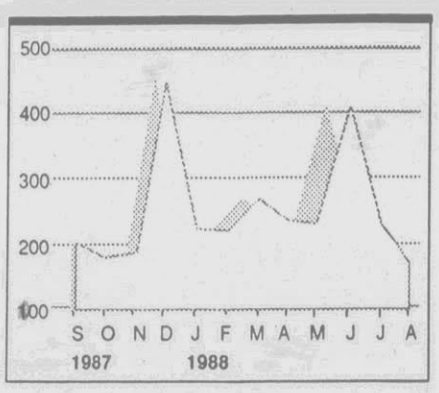

JUNK BONDS

The number of new junk bond issues has declined, but the market remains active. The 25 issues in Sept. 1987 were worth $4.1 billion, while the 21 deals in June 1988 also raised $4.1 billion.

MERGER MANIA

The pace of mergers recovered quickly after the crash. The figures represent deals in which a controlling interest in a corporation was purchased. The 201 deals in Sept. 1987 were worth $3.8 billion. The 443 deals in Dec. totaled $15.6 billion.

Japanese Market 'Sleepy, Tiresome'

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TOKYO — The Tokyo Stock Exchange didn't fall as steeply as Wall Street one year ago, it recovered much more quickly, and in April it surpassed its precrash high — the first major stock exchange to do so.

Since then, though, the market here has run out of steam, maintaining its level but showing little energy or confidence. "Sleepy and tiresome," as George Nimmo of SBCI Securities put it in an interview last week.

In recognition of the softness of the market, the Japanese government has decided to cut back on the number of Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corp. (NTT) shares it will sell to the public when a third offering is made Oct. 19.

Japanese analysts for the most part remain sanguine about the market's future. Japan's economic fundamentals remain solid, they point out, with 4.5 percent growth likely this year and inflation and unemployment still low.

In addition, they say, although foreigners bailed out in large numbers a year ago, Japanese investors never lost confidence in the stock market. Japanese analysts and stock buyers always have had more faith in their market than have foreigners, who were predicting long before the New York crash that Tokyo's bubble would be the first to burst and who continue to issue such warnings today.

Still, Japanese analysts find a few clouds in the generally bright sky, worries that have contributed to the Nikkei average staying within a narrow trading band between about 27,000 and 28,000 yen for the last six months.

The lingering illness of Emperor Hirohito is unlikely to affect the market in the long run, but has already caused some confusion in the short term. Japan hasn't experienced a passing of the crown since Hirohito took over in 1926, so no one is sure what to expect.

When the 87-year-old emperor became critically ill Sept. 19, the market fell for two days and then righted itself. Expectations of Hirohito's death, on the other hand, pushed up the price of some paper manufacturers; since the official Japanese calendar is dated according to the reign of an emperor, millions of documents will have to be reprinted.

Rules Will Aid Borrowers With Adjustable Loans

By David W. Myers
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Borrowers who are considering an adjustable-rate mortgage can look forward to getting a little more information before they agree to the loan, thanks to some new federal regulations.

Some consumer groups, however, say that the new requirements still do not give borrowers enough information to get the best ARM at the best interest rate and terms.

New rules that took effect Oct. 1 require nearly all ARM lenders to give potential borrowers a plainly worded booklet that explains how adjustable loans work and details the risks of having a mortgage that has no set interest rate.

In addition, borrowers must also be given a "historical example" of how payments on a $10,000 loan made under the same terms would have varied over the past several years, so they'll have a better idea of how their own loan may perform in the long run.

Borrowers must also be told how their interest rate and payments would be calculated and what kind of "caps" would be used to limit future increases. They'll get what some lenders call a "worst-case work sheet" — a statement disclosing exactly how high their payment would go if interest rates soared through the roof.

All this information must be provided before the consumer pays any non-refundable fees. In the past, borrowers who backed out of a deal after finding out exactly what the loan entailed were sometimes stuck paying hundreds of dollars for an appraisal, credit report and other items.

Consumer groups that have been pressing for greater disclosure say that the new regulations will be particularly useful because they'll help take some of the mystery out of adjustable-rate mortages.

But some of the groups also say that the requirements fall short of giving borrowers all the information they need to shop for the best mortgage deal.

"This is definitely a step in the right direction, but there's still room for improvement," said Michelle Meier of Consumers Union, the watchdog group that publishes Consumer Reports magazine.

In particular, Meier said, the new regulations do not require lenders to disclose the actual "margin" they will slap on the loan's index rate in order to make a profit. If the index rate is 9 percent and the margin is 2.5 points, the rate a borrower pays will be 11.5 percent.

Although the new requirements say that the lender must disclose a margin, it can be any figure that the lender has used in the past six months, Meier said. "If the lender was using a 3-point margin five months ago and now it's using a 4-point margin, its disclosure can still cite the 3-point margin even though you'll be paying more."

A borrower could determine what size margin the lender would charge by asking the loan officer, Meier said. "But what the loan officer tells you won't be binding unless you have it in writing. Even then, it won't do you any good if the lender decides to raise its margin tomorrow."

To protect themselves, Meier said, ARM borrowers should ask for a written disclosure of the actual margin that will be charged and then ask for a firm, written commitment that the figure won't be changed.

Meier sees another shortcoming of the new regulations: They still allow lenders to change the terms of a loan between the time the borrower gets the disclosure statement and the time the money is actually advanced.

Although a reputable lender would not purposely lure a borrower with promises of good terms and then raise the rate before the loan was funded, there is always a chance that interest rates may suddenly surge while the loan is being processed.

When that happens, a borrower usually has just two alternatives: Either accept the higher rate or other unfavorable terms, or cancel the deal and lose hundreds of dollars in fees.

"To protect yourself, ask the lender to give you a written commitment that 'locks in' all the terms of the loan when you start all the paper work," said Meier.

Labor-Backed Study Says Trade Deficit Cost U.S. 5.1 Million Jobs

By Martin Crutsinger
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $170.3 billion trade deficit the United States suffered last year cost the country 5.1 million jobs in manufacturing and associated services, according to a study released Saturday by a labor-backed research institute.

The Economic Policy Institute sought to determine how many jobs would have been created if the record trade deficit had been completely eliminated and imports and exports had been in balance.

The report concluded that 5.1 million jobs had been lost because trade was not in balance, with 3.1 million of those jobs in manufacturing and the other 2 million in related industries, such as business services.

The study said the job losses had been spread evenly around the country with 1.43 million in the West, 1.38 million in the Midwest; 1.29 million in the Northeast and 1.04 million in the South.

"These calculations make it clear that jobs in every region of America are being destroyed and potential jobs not being created because of our failure to close the trade deficit," said Jeff Faux, president of the institute.

But Robert Ortner, Commerce undersecretary for economic affairs, said the study failed to take into account the fact that many workers who have lost jobs to foreign competition have found work elsewhere.

He said the most recent montly employment report showed there are only 6.6 million people currently listed as unemployed. Thus, if the trade deficit was totally eliminated, it would wipe out virtually all joblessness in the United States, Ortner said.

"Saying that 5.1 million people have lost jobs because of the trade deficit is a mindless arithmetic calculation that doesn't have economic content," he said. "Obviously, many of these people have gone back to work."

But Lawrence Mishel, research director for the institute, defended the assumptions used in the study, which was prepared for the institute by New York University's Institute for Economic Analysis.

He said the results were consistent with other views of the impact of the trade deficit, which were done for the U.S. International Trade Commission and the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

He said the Labor Department's unemployment statistics understate the jobless figures because they do not adequately track the number of people who have given up looking for work or who are working at part-time jobs but would rather have full time employment.

Mishel said the institute's study used an input-output model to analyze the trade data. For example, for each bushel of grain exported, the model computes not only the requirements for farm equipment, but also the amount of steel absorbed by the agricultural equipment manufacturers as well as more indirect requirements such as the iron ore and electrical power necessary to produce the steel.

The U.S. trade deficit is expected to decline this year by almost $40 billion. For the first eight months of the year, the trade deficit has been runing at an annual rate of $138 billion.

While the institute did not attempt to calculate had many jobs had been gained so far this year with the trade deficit declining, the Labor Department has reported that manufacturing employment has increased by 303,000 jobs since the beginning of the year.

The institute's study examined the different regions of the country to determine what jobs could be gained if the 1987 trade deficit was totally elimianted with half of the deficit reduction coming from a rise in exports and half of the gain coming from a decline in imports.

This was the regional breakdown the study gave for the benefits from eliminating the trade deficit:

MIDWEST: The region would gain 735,800 jobs from greater exports and 647,300 jobs from lower imports. The biggest gains would come in machinery and electronic products.

NORTHEAST: The region would gain 686,600 jobs from higher exports and 601,600 jobs from lower imports. The biggest gains would come in machinery and electronics.

SOUTH: The region would gain 536,100 export-related jobs and 510,200 jobs from reducing imports. The largest concentration of jobs lost to imports was in light manufacturing, primarily textile and apparel jobs.

WEST: The region would gain 779,500 export-related jobs and 647,300 jobs from lower imports. Most of the jobs lost to import compeititon were in machinery, electronics and business services.

RTP Center May Close

DURHAM (AP) — A decline in usage has caused officials of the Triangle Universities Computation Center, which is owned by three colleges, to discuss disbanding the 23-year-old consortium.

"There is discussion along that line," said Edward E. Walker, the center's director. "We expect that about Nov. 10, we may have some final plans to talk about."

The center's board of directors agreed earlier this week to reassess its computer services to member institutions, Walker said. Should those services no longer be justified, the center could close as early as July 1990.

The board is expected to meet Nov. 9 to consider options that include closing, cutting some operations or continuing with a full array of services.

The computation center, located in Research Triangle Park, is owned by Duke University, North Carolina State University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. It was created in 1965, when the three schools realized they could get more computing power for their money if they pooled their resources.

Walker said use of the center had stagnated in recent years as computer prices declined and clients bought their own. By contrast, usage increased by 30 percent to 35 percent a year during the late 1960s.

Caregivers Get Advice In Good Nutrition

By Rosalie Trotman
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Making children's mealtime away from home a nutritious one is a responsibility that most child caregivers take very seriously, Patsy West says.

Ms. West is child care food program consultant for the state Department of Public Instruction's Division of Child Nutrition, which operates the Child Food Program.

The Child Care Food Program was established by Congress in 1968 to provide financial assistance to licensed day care centers and day care homes for serving nutritious meals to enrolled children. The program is available to public and private, non-profit organizations providing licensed day care services and private for-profit centers that serve needy children.

Ms. West monitors participant organizations' adherence to program guidelines in 15 northeastern North Carolina counties. She also provides technical assistance to centers and day care homes on the nutritional needs and eating behaviors of young children.

She may offer menu suggestions that are nutritious and acceptable to young children. "I also rely on the expertise of financial consultants, registered dietitians and other specialists within the division for advice on technical matters to meet the needs of program participants," said Ms. West.

"One question parents and caregivers often ask is, 'How can I get Johnny to eat what is good for him?' There is no magic formula, but there are some guidelines," said Ms. West. "Children like foods that are familiar to them. In introducing new foods, serve a very small amount and don't require that the child eat it.

"Children enjoy foods in much the same manner that Goldilocks did," she said. "Children generally like foods separated rather than mixed together. Young ones also feel comfortable with small portions of food with the idea that they can have more if they want it. Children also enjoy foods that are easy to pick up and easy to chew. Like adults, children enjoy foods that are familiar to them."

One approach to mealtime for children supported by Ms. West is family-style eating. "This method affords opportunities for positive learning experiences and allows the mealtime to become less 'institutionalized.' Among the learning experiences are developing good manners and socialization skills and building self-esteem," she said. "By allowing children to make choices about amounts of food to be eaten, we help them begin to assume responsibility regarding their bodies' needs."

Ms. West said. "Eating time for children, as much as possible, should be a pleasant time. If efforts are taken by parents or caregivers to make eating an uncomplicated but pleasurable experience, then usually children will associate nutritious food with good feelings."

"Perhaps the greatest influence for young children in regard to eating food that is good for them is the modeling done by the people important in their lives. This is very important for parents and caregivers. Expect children to want to eat what they see the significant people in their lives enjoy eating," she said.

Day care can no longer just be called just day care, she said. Terms such as night care, shift care or weekend care can be used to describe the care provided children as some child care centers try to accommodate the needs of parents who work weekends, shifts and nights. "Although it is too early to know the effects of this kind of care on young children, it is an area of interest for those who are concerned about the quality of life for young children," said Ms. West.

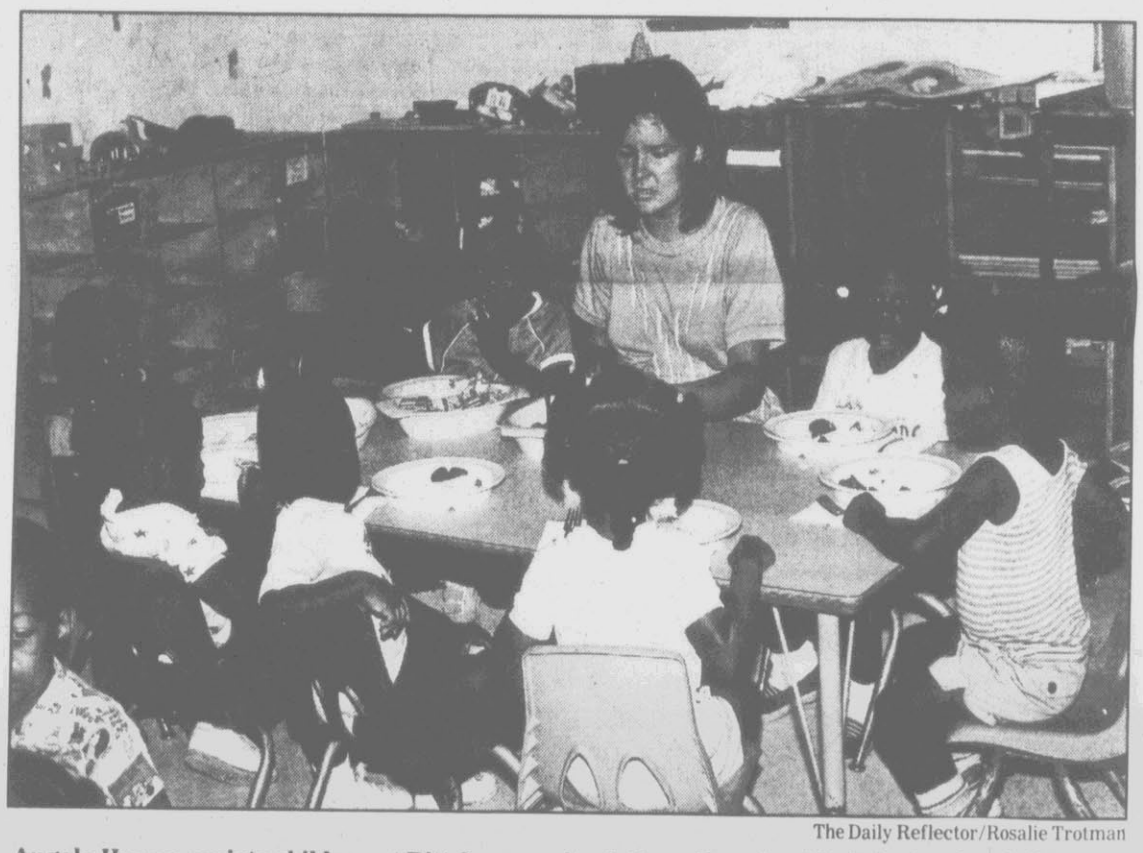

Ms. West encourages parents to observe mealtime along with other activities before selecting a day care center. "All licensed day care centers post menus for parents to see and parents should take the time to review them. They can be used a a point of discussion with children about their day," she said.

Ms. West often participates in workshops for child caregivers. She coordinated a "Striving for Excellence" seminar in Williamston recently. Providing assistance to Child Care Food Program participants besides Mrs. West, were Linda N. Bowen, regional coordinator, and Fred E. Brink, management analyst.

Elvira's Fame Grew Fast

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Who's Elvira? She's Mae West, Morticia Addams and Cassandra Peterson caught up in a Cuisinart.

Who's Cassandra Peterson? She's Elvira.

"Elvira was always Elvira, I was always Cassandra. Now the line is kind of blurring. Sometimes I don't know who I am," says Peterson, the host of a horror movie series who's just made her first movie, "Elvira: Mistress of the Dark."

"Elvira becomes like my real self, which I try to do. Sometimes I become like Elvira. I throw Elvira-isms into what I do and say, depending on my mood."

Most of those Elvira-isms are unprintable — they go far beyond "Beulah, peel me a grape."

"People say I have a lot in common with Mae West," Peterson said. "I was a never a big fan of hers but I can certainly now see the common thread. We're both kind of the bad gal with a heart of gold character. Lots of double entendres."

They also share a similar anatomy: Peterson is well endowed.

For the uninitiated, Elvira is the host of "Movie Macabre," broadcast locally in Los Angeles. Her fame quickly grew, moving beyond talk show appearances and commercials into a fan club and marketing windfall, with Elvira records, greeting cards, T-shirts, comic books and key chains. Peterson developed her alter ego seven years ago.

"I thought the movie would be a great idea for this character," Peterson said. "The film companies didn't think I had enough nationwide appeal but then I got spots on Johnny Carson and Bob Hope.

"Once I became national, NBC saw the potential and signed me up."

As for Peterson, she is quite unlike her alter ego. She has long red hair and dressed very simply in jeans and a leotard shirt for a recent interview. She is married to Mark Pierson, her manager.

Elvira was born Cassandra Peterson in Colorado Springs, Colo., and had the good fortune to have a mother who owned a costume shop.

"I dressed up all the time. I would dress like Miss Kitty from 'Gunsmoke.' My aunt sent me this funny picture of me as a witch when I was 5 years old. I've got on a black wig and a witch dress. I look like a 5-year-old Elvira," she said.

Her love for switching costumes and identities did not equip her for the stage. In fact, she flunked her high school drama class.

"I was playing in 'Our Town.' I kept telling jokes, making funny faces. I got kicked out of the part. I was the class clown. I was making a farce of it," she said.

"Our Town" was never for Peterson; "Viva Las Vagas" is more her style. In fact, in the 1960s when she was 17, she worked as a Las Vegas showgirl.

"I try to keep it really campy," she said. "The film company thinks it a men's cult. It's straight camp. It's a very self-depreciating character. It's all a kind of setup. Some people don't get it and some do.

Her costume and alter ego allow her a certain amount of privacy, she says.

"That is one of the great things. I'm the world's luckiest celebrity. If I want to put on no makeup and put on curlers and go walking down Hollywood Boulevard, nobody will know it's me," Peterson said.

However, fame caught up to her last month when Maila "Vampire" Nurmi, a former horror hostess, filed a $10 million suit in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, claiming she had developed the Elvira character in the 1950s before Peterson.

"Horror hostesses are all wearing just about the same outfit," Peterson said. "You've got pretty slim parameters. Mine were that I had to be in black and had to have black hair and look sexy. Any similarity is purely coincidental. If someone told you to look like Dracula, what would you wear?"

But Elvira isn't just a black dress and wig, it's a whole other person.

"I always compare it to someone at a costume party. If you're in a total disguise, you kind of go wild. Nobody knows who you are. You might do things you otherwise wouldn't do. They suddenly become these wild animals. When I put on this costume and wig, I become this wild underside of my character."

Shower Cards Offered Free

And early detection increases the chance that cancer can be cured. If a tumor is found before it reaches the lymph nodes, there is less than a 20 percent chance that it will recur within five years.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina is offering free of charge a plastic instructional card on the self-exam procedure that can be hung in the shower. To order single copies of the card, contact Public Relations, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, P.O. Box 2291, Durham, N.C. 27702, or call 490-4100.

THE BEST WEAPON AGAINST BREAST CANCER IS EARLY DETECTION.

Besides BSE (breast self-exam) and periodic breast exams by your doctor, your American Cancer Society recommends a MAMMOGRAM—a low-dose X ray that helps "see" breast cancer before there's a lump, when survival rates are near 100 percent.

If you are 35 to 39: have a mammogram which can be used later for comparison.

40 to 49: have a mammogram every 1 to 2 years as your doctor directs.

50 or over: have a mammogram every year.

Dessert Message Is Gain, Then Pain

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

You're in a fancy restaurant and the waiter has just taken your order for coffee. Then you hear it.

It's a faint squeak at first, not unlike the sound of a dirge in the distance accompanying a body to its final resting place. It moves slowly and inches in and around the room until it comes to a halt by your table. You don't want to look, but your eyes are magnetically drawn to it. Breathing becomes labored as you inhale the aroma of the dreaded DESSERT CART!

The intonation of fresh raspberries, tortes, shaved chocolate, flans and cremes is begun by the waiter. You look around feverishly for a way to escape, but you cannot move. Finally, you throw yourself on the bananas flambe like a human sacrifice.

Admit it, how many times this week have you done that?

Despite the fact not a day goes by that we don't hear the evils of all that sugar and fat, the food industry continues to send out two conflicting messages. One, "Stop doing that!" Two, "A little sinning never hurt anyone."

There isn't a woman's magazine being published that does not hawk the two universal staples on its cover: the new, revolutionary diet-of-the-month, and a recipe for the Yummiest Ever Chocolate Cake! It's no wonder that less than 5 percent of the population who are 20 pounds or more overweight are able to lose the weight and keep it off for a year.

For every diet book promising you longer life if you eat sensibly, there are three cookbooks with enough sugar-laden desserts to put you in a coma until you are 97.

I read an article the other day that said, "The more you diet, the more you invite wrinkles." Tell me about it. If I had any more wrinkles, I'd have to have a label on my neck giving instructions for pressing.

This "double-edged sword" theory has produced a strange animal in this country: the diet pig. A diet pig orders coconut cream pie and digs a small saccharin tablet out of the lining of her purse for her black coffee. She drags celery through a 3,000-calorie dip. She orders a sundae but discreetly puts the cherry aside in a saucer to save on calories. She puts gravy over low-sodium bread and melted butter over the Weight Watchers fish entree.

I have a friend whose idea of dieting is to eat a candy bar and let the dog lick her fingers.

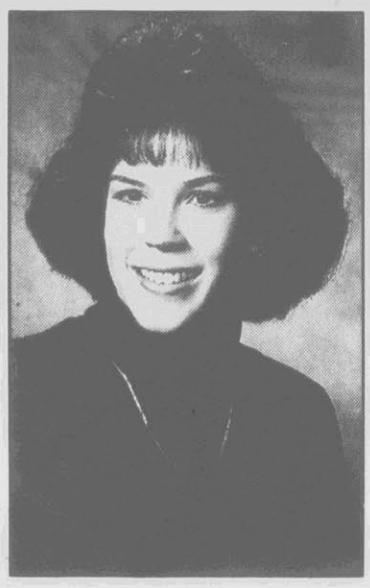

I don't blame the dieters. They're trying. But there are too many evil factions at work out there. Another friend of mine purchased a pair of queen-size pantyhose recently. Inside, there was a 25-cent coupon for a cheesecake.

They aren't even subtle anymore!

Woman's Musical Teeth Were Puzzling

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I love music — songs float around in my head, day in and day out, and it doesn't bother me. Once it was different though. I simply could not turn it off!

After my dentist filled two teeth next to each other, I started hearing tunes I was not familiar with. I thought perhaps I had heard them in my sleep. Upon retiring, I heard "Singing in the Rain" from beginning to end — the MOVIE, that is! Singing, dialogue, the works. I awakened my husband and asked if he could hear anything. He said, "No."

He came to the conclusion that those two new fillings in my teeth acted as a "receiver." We checked the TV Guide, and sure enough, "Singing in the Rain" was the late movie! I didn't need to turn on the TV, as I was hearing the whole thing.

After the movie, I heard two policemen speaking to each other on their CBs. I looked out of my window and saw two patrol cars parked outside — one in front of the other. I heard every word they were saying to each other. It was a sleepless night!

I got an emergency appointment with my dentist the next morning, and I told him my story. He laughed, and insisted that this was not possible. However, after filing between those two newly filled teeth, the weird noises, music and voices stopped.

Smart husband — dumb dentist, huh? — GERI McBETH, DENVER

DEAR GERI: I believe you. Years ago, a schoolmate sat in study hall and said he was "listening" to the World Series — but didn't know how it was getting through to him. The teacher thought the boy was either lying or hallucinating, and told his parents their son needed to see a psychiatrist. As it turned out, he was receiving the ball game through the fillings in his teeth.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people get so upset when a bride (or anyone else) wants to exchange a gift? Wouldn't they rather a person be happy with a gift than to have it sit around the house unused?

My sister-in-law sent us cheese every year for Christmas that none of us liked; however, we said nothing and used it when company came over. One year, she asked us if we liked it, and I told her the truth. From then on, she sent us a gift subscription to Reader's Digest, which the whole family enjoyed year-round. — DONNA FROM ARIZONA

DEAR DONNA: I have nothing against cheese ... but Reader's Digest is far more digestible.

DEAR ABBY: My spouse and I have been friendly with another married couple for nearly 30 years. They are now getting divorced.

One of them came to us and put us on the spot. We were told: "You will have to make a choice. If you intend to remain friendly with my 'ex,' you cannot be a friend of mine."

Abby, we would like to remain friendly with both of them, but we were given an ultimatum.

How would you handle this? — BETWIXT AND BETWEEN

DEAR BETWIXT: I'd choose the other one.

Mules Making A Comeback For Recreation, Show Purposes

By Frank Isley
BURLINGTON TIMES-NEWS

GRAHAM, N.C. — Mules, almost put out to pasture with the advent of tractors, are stubbornly fighting to retain their place in the barn.

Once bred solely to pull farm machinery and perform other heavy chores, mules seemed for a time to be an obsolete spectacle in the modern world.

But the long-eared beasts of burden have started making a comeback as animals for recreation and show.

"Years ago when they were simply used for draft purposes, people wouldn't think of breeding a good horse to get a mule," said Jim Henderson, one of the new breed of mule owners. "Now, however, they are bred from good horses and good donkeys and are more refined, like riding horses."

Mule shows feature events similar to horse shows, with competition in trail events, western pleasure, coon jumping — where the mule makes a standing jump over a fence — and at halter, where the mule is judged on looks.

Henderson's 9-year-old son Justin, who has been riding since he was 3, is already winning competitive events. His mule, Bass Mountain Darlin', was named Grand Champion Miniature Mule at the Benson Mule Days in September.

Mules are divided into three classes — miniature, big saddle and draft (for pulling) — to compete in the events.

Henderson said people are surprised when they learn that mules, long regarded as a stupid curiosity, are intelligent and can be attractive when bred from the right horses and donkeys.

A mule is the offspring of a jack, or male donkey, and a mare horse, with its size depending on the size of its parents. A jenny, or female donkey, bred with a stud horse produces a hinny, which looks like a mule.

Mules are generally sterile and cannot reproduce, although they have been successfully bred with horses or donkeys in rare instances, Henderson said.

"Mules are smarter than horses because they won't overeat and they won't overheat or overwork themselves," Henderson said.

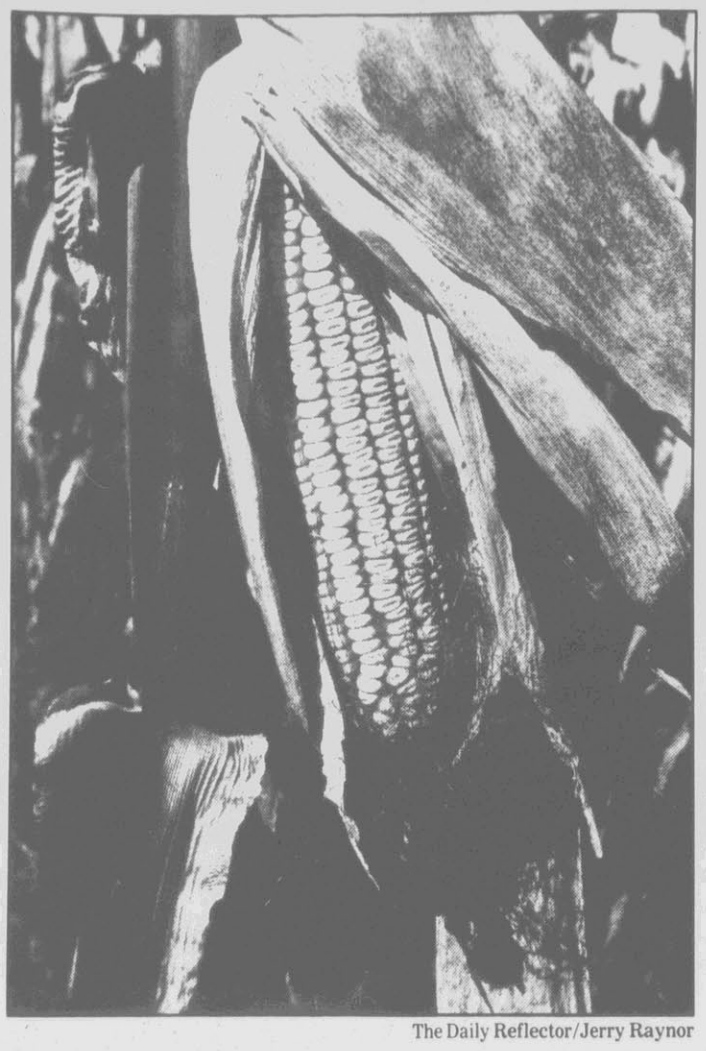

Mules are legendary for their stubborn streak, but Henderson said the animals were simply smart enough to know to stop working when they had done as much as they could.

Training a mule involves gaining the animal's confidence, not beating him, Henderson said.

"Once he finds out you're not going to put him in a position where he is going to get hurt, he is willing to do anything you ask him to," Henderson said. "It all comes from kindness and loving. If you beat on him, he's just going to resist."

Mules have a tendency to take up with one person or other animals because they like to be around other living things, Henderson said.

"No matter how old a mule gets, if he sees a horse he thinks it's mama and he wants to get close to it," Henderson said.

Many nations have issued stamps honoring the Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, including a unique set released by Grenada that features Disney cartoon characters participating in the famed Games.

— 1-cent: Daisy Duck helping Goofy light the Olympic torch.

— 2-cent: Daisy and Donald Duck proudly holding aloft the Olympic torch as they run around the track of the stadium on opening day.

— 3-cent: Donald Duck, Goofy and Mickey Mouse parading with the national flags of the United States, the Republic of Korea and Spain.

— 4-cent: Donald Duck releasing the doves that symbolize the spirit of peace and harmony of the countries and their athletes.

— 5-cent: Mickey Mouse flying into the air over the Olympic stadium on opening day.

— 10-cent: Mordie and Ferdie Mouse, Mickey's nephews, carrying the banner that bears the motto of the Olympic athletes.

Two $5 souvenir sheets depicting various Disney characters also were issued to complete the Grenada Olympic set. The stamps should be available at your dealer shortly.

The U.S. Postal Service has prepared a new topical mint set collection booklet, "Folk Arts & Crafts: An American Collection." The booklet is a tribute to the American innovation and ingenuity of our handmade arts and crafts as seen on U.S. stamps. For the first time, these native art forms are brought together in a collection of commemoratives.

The colorful, 44-page booklet has a lively text, beautiful illustrations and eight blocks of four stamps. The 32 stamps feature crafts such as Navaho blankets, country quilts and duck decoys.

Especially featured in this topical mint set is the block of four Carousel Animals, which was previously described in this column. The animals are the deer, long-horned goat, king horse and bejeweled camel.

The additional seven blocks in the collection were issued at prior times in the Folk Art series. Included are: Quilts (1978), Pennsylvania Toleware (1979), Pacific Northwest Indian Masks (1980), Duck Decoys (1985), Navaho Blankets (1986), Wood Carved Figurines (1986) and Lacemaking (1987).

The Folk Art booklet will be available at most post offices where philatelic products are sold, at the 421 philatelic centers around the nation, and by mail from the Philatelic Sales Division in Washington, D.C.

The collection comes in a soft-cover edition for $9.95 and in a deluxe hard-bound version for $16.50. The stamps have a face value of $6.24. Protective mounts are included, and there is space in the booklet for future issues related to folk art.

To order the topical mint set by mail, send a personal check or money order, made payable to the U.S. Postal Service, in the amount of $9.95 for each soft-cover or $16.50 for each hard-bound edition, plus 50 cents for postage and handling per order. Send to: Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, DC 20265-9997.

Lesotho, the small, rugged mountain kingdom in southern Africa, has issued a special commemorative set of four stamps and one $5 souvenir sheet featuring Pope John Paul II in various poses.

Refuge House Recalls An Early Maritime Era

By John Platero
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

HUTCHINSON ISLAND, Fla. — During an Atlantic storm April 19, 1886, a 371-ton brigantine, J.H. Lane, with eight crewmen and a cargo of molasses, went aground on a reef 5½ miles south-southeast of this elongated island.

By morning, the twin-masted sailing ship had broken apart, scattering debris for miles along the coast. Seven of the crew survived because of Gilbert's Bar House of Refuge, built here 10 years earlier, and its keeper, Samuel F. Bunker.

Despite a raging sea, Bunker tied a line to himself with one end held by two assistants on shore and waded into the surf to pull some of the exhausted men to safety. A drink of brandy, hot food, dry clothing and beds awaited the survivors at the house.

"This is the only house of refuge remaining of six that were built," said Janet Hutchinson, director of the Historical Society of Martin County. "It was declared a historical site in 1974 and was completely restored."

The two-story wooden structures, explained Mrs. Hutchinson, were part of a federal plan to aid sailors shipwrecked along Florida's coast, still a wilderness area a century ago.

In that era, ships running between the United States and Caribbean countries hugged the Florida coast for protection from sudden storms and because there were few navigational aids, Hutchinson added.

Southbound sailing ships did the same to escape the northern flow of the Gulf Stream. Offshore Florida, however, is lined with sand bars and reefs — one of the most treacherous lying less than one mile from the beach here.

Houses of refuge were planned for strategic points between St. Augustine and Biscayne Bay, a stretch of coastline where seamen stood little chance of survival even if they made it to shore.

Equipped with cots, food and clothing, they were staffed by live-in keepers.

Identical, the original cost of the houses was $2,900 each and were under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Life Saving Service, forerunner of the U.S. Coast Guard.

Keepers earned $400 a year and lived in four rooms on the ground floor. A dormitory, capable of accommodating 18 cots, was upstairs.

Log books show this house of refuge participated in more than 34 rescues.

"Houses of refuge passed with the age of sailing," said Hutchinson.

Named after Don Pedro Gilbert, an early 19th Century pirate historians say knew these waters well, this house was used as shore patrol stations by the U.S. Navy in World War I and the Coast Guard during World War II.

A 40-foot wooden tower was erected in the 1940s to watch for enemy submarines. A small boat house and private quarters for the Coastguardsman in charge were other additions.

Deactivated in 1945, the property was abandoned to vandals and the elements.

In 1955, the Soroptimist Club of Stuart organized the historical society to preserve the house of refuge.

With matching federal funds, it was restored at a cost of over $100,000 and was opened to the public in 1975. The boathouse now serves as a museum and office through which 45,000 visitors pass each year.

The lower floor of the house of refuge remains furnished as it was a century ago and, Dave Delk, the current keeper, lives in the commodore's quarters.

"This would be a lot better job then than now," smiled Delk, who spent 14 years in the Coast Guard. "Less people then," he explained.

Miniature Houses For Children

By John Ronner
THE ANNISTON STAR

HEFLIN, Ala. (AP) — If kids controlled the purse strings, Norman Thompson's product might have a runaway market.

The 74-year-old Thompson builds miniature houses for children to play in, complete with tiled roofs, windows, thick interior panelling and front porches.

"You can't get the kids out once they get inside," Thompson says of the houses, 10 feet long and 10 feet wide, counting the overhanging roof. "They don't want to leave at all."

Thompson does a meticulous job of old-time construction and carpentry, which means a heavy investment in time and materials. When that investment is reflected in a price, around $500 per unit, parents may balk, even though, Thompson said, that kind of tab allows only a slim margin on a job involving 75 man-hours and expensive materials.

Thompson's love affair with these little houses, whose ceiling clearance is 5 feet, 3 inches, began in the 1950s. Thompson, driving a sawmill truck, noticed a miniature house sitting in an acquaintance's yard and bought it for $25 for his soon-to-be-delighted daughter Edith.

Luring Fishing Worms To The Earth's Surface, A Special Art

By Peter Luke
THE ANNISTON STAR

ATTALLA, Ala. — Good vibrations can mean good money for James Bowlen and Roger Barksdale, who can be found hunting by 7 a.m. most days and whose catch may number in the thousands. But you won't find either with a hunting rifle. They stalk their prey with a sharp saw and a short stump.

For their living, Bowlen and Barksdale fiddle earthworms.

"I can come up here and make twenty to thirty dollars in a couple of hours," said Barksdale, dropping a handful of the wrigglers into his pail.

"I'll bet there are thousands in there. Just feel that bucket."

The two rolled up in an old Buick to demonstrate their trade one recent day. They had partied late on the previous day's worm-fiddling proceeds, and they immediately christened the new day's hunt with a beer before striding into the worming wood near Attalla.

To fiddle a worm means to coax, or blast, the critter into an early meeting with a catfish by using deep-rooted vibrations. That is where the saw, the stump and the fiddling come in.

First, a sapling was cut through about a foot from the ground. Half a dozen downward strokes with the saw through this stump produced a sonic boom effect underground, and worms began to slither from their holes.

With a few more strokes, worms up to 20 inches long wriggled across the fallen leaves within a 30 foot radius of the stump.

Between them, Bowlen and Barksdale might fiddle a dozen stumps in one morning, before delivering their catch to an Ohatchee wholesaler.

From there the worms are boxed, then sold to fishermen, who value the worm's tough body, which enables it to stay on the hook.

Worm-fiddling will make no one rich, but the two say it meets basic needs — like cigarettes, gasoline, beer and food. They can make about $35 for a pail of big worms, but up to $65 for the smaller ones.

That is because the worms are packaged 14 to a box regardless of size, and the worm-fiddlers get 55 cents a box from the retailer. A full pail of small worms can yield up to 100 boxes.

Bowlen is the senior wormer of the pair, having been in the trade for 15 years, and in the woods for longer as a logger. A tree accident convinced him that there might be more profit under the ground than above it.

He explained that there's more to fiddling worms than just drawing on a saw.

"The stump's got to be a hardwood, like dogwood or hickory, to get deep vibrations."

Fiddled correctly and kept in old sawdust, the worms can survive for days, added Bowlen.

"But saw too high and it will kill them. There's too much vibration," he said, pointing to a four-foot stump.

"Stop, stand still. There's a rattlesnake around," he commanded at one point. Asked how he knew, Bowlen replied he could smell a rattler, "and they smell like goat." And who would try to find a snake to disprove it?

Then there's the weather. Rain is good news, but dry weather forces the worms further below the surface, according to Barksdale, a former truck driver who sports an eagle tattoo on one bicep, but "mom and dad" on the other.

"When it rains it's like maggots coming out of the ground," he said.

This also explains why serious worm-fiddlers work early morning, before the sun has driven the worms into their basements. But why do vibrations draw so many to the surface? Barksdale has a theory.

"They are like humans. They come up out of the hole to go to the bathroom in the morning. The fiddling just hurries them up," he claimed.

And how does prancing around the wood to pick up worms square with the image of two men who talk tough about bars and guns and who say they like to party hard?

"I can make a living for only a few hours work," replied Barksdale.

And Bowlen had a similar view. "A fellow can live off the earth, without having to have a job."

Giant Komodo Dragons Seldom Feast On Humans

By Mercer Cross
THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

WASHINGTON — Komodo dragons have quite a reputation to live up to: ferocious carnivores, fiercest lizards known, man-eaters.

This is unjust. Komodos are indeed the world's largest lizards, sometimes 10 feet long and weighing more than 200 pounds. They have scaly hides, sharp claws, and long, forked, yellow tongues that dart from cavernous mouths filled with ripsaw teeth.

And carnivores they are, feeding not only on carrion but on living goats, deer and wild pigs on their native Lesser Sunda Islands in Indonesia.

In one, a dragon smelled the food of picnicking Indonesian villagers, charged them and bit a child on the leg. The child bled to death.

A second fatality occurred when an island resident cornered a Komodo that turned on him and bit him. The man died of an infection a few days later. The dragons' mouths are aflow with virulent bacteria.

Only in the third case is there suspicion that a dragon ate its victim. As two young tourists wandered into the brush, a Komodo reportedly leaped out of hiding, grabbed one and disemboweled him.

But people shouldn't feel threatened by Komodos, Marcellini says, because they are among the calmest of lizards and even share some traits with family dogs.

"They basically leave you alone," he told National Geographic. "Even on the island, they act like you're not part of their normal diet." Humans are usually so noisy and obvious they have little to fear from Komodos which are "sit-and-wait predators," he adds.

"But I suppose if you were going down a trail and one of them mistook you for a small pig or something, it might unwittingly leap out and grab you."

Since May, the National Zoo has been the home of the only two Komodo dragons in North America. The young pair, a 6 12-foot male, Friendty, and a 4 12-foot female, Sabat, are gifts from the Indonesian president. Their menu: dead rats and chicks.

"They may act sort of dog-like in terms of hanging around you and wondering whether you're going to feed them or not," Marcellini says. They are becoming tame in captivity, he says, adding, "I believe you could whistle and teach them to come."

Before the Komodos arrived, Marcellini checked out the lizards' habitat on the inaccessible, waterless and inhospitable island of Komodo, one of only four islands on which the endangered creatures live. He estimates their total number at about 5,000.

Maritime Collectors Meeting Scheduled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Collectors of marine artifacts will meet here at a daylong colloquium Nov. 19, sponsored by the Sea Heritage Foundation, a non-profit society for the preservation of traditional sea lore.

The seminars and symposiums will cover numerous aspects of the marine collecting field, according to Bernie Klay, publisher of Sea Heritage News and a sea chantey expert who will coordinate the programs.

Keynote speaker will be John Sands, a director of collections at the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

A curator for 14 years at the Mariners' Museum in Newport News, Va., he will talk about prints and paintings, and discuss what makes a quality maritime image.

Barbara Johnson, whose collection of whaling artifacts was recently sold by Sothebys, will talk on whaling prints and scrimshaw. Charles McDonald, editor of the Nautical Research Journal and a bibliophile, will talk about his antiquarian book collection.

(Information about the colloquium, to be held in Manhattan's Days Inn, can be obtained by calling 1-800 247-3262.)

Collector Seeks Items Others Consider To Be Of Little Value

By Barbara Mayer
AP NEWSFEATURES

Nowadays you hear that everything worth collecting is already owned by somebody else. Or, that things have become too scarce and too expensive. Not true, according to collector Dorothy Globus and interior designer Alice Silverman.

"One of my criteria is to collect the things that no one else deems worthy of collecting," Globus, curator of exhibitions at the Cooper-Hewitt Museum in New York, said.

Though she has some large items, such as a 6-foot tall Empire State Building built of wooden Lincoln Logs, the child's building toy, she has a penchant for the little things in life. These include a group of miniature buildings arranged in a display that reproduces the skyline of Manhattan. There are also desk accessories — rubber stamps, desk bells and staplers — novelty salt-and-pepper sets, buttons and paper ephemera such as labels, cigar bands, postcards and matchbooks.

Sometimes — as in her collection of old doorstops and Fiestaware dishes — many follow her lead and price the things out of her range. "We used to balk at paying $35 for a doorstop. They now routinely sell for $100 and up. I haven't bought one in ages," she said.

If you are going to accumulate small oddments, furniture in which to display and store them is a must.

That's why her three dental cabinets, 48-drawer printer's typecase and multi-drawered, turn-of-the-century Wootton desk are essential.

She says the secret to enjoying small collections is to keep them well organized. Not everything is on view. But even those kept in drawers and cabinets are arranged and accessible. "When visitors come for the first time, I just show them the highlights. I watch carefully to see if their eyes glaze over," she explained.

Though decorating is not uppermost in her mind, the collections are an interior decorating plus in her home — a New York City loft she shares with her husband and two school-age children.

Besides the buildings on display, she creates changing exhibitions in her home just as she does at work at the Cooper-Hewitt, the Smithsonian Institution's design museum. Normally, for example, the picture postcards are kept in drawers, but she has arranged seasonal displays in postcard racks.

Those seeking something to collect that is more traditional, yet inexpensive and highly decorative, might take the advice of Alice Silverman, an interior designer from Carmel, N.Y.

Her suggestions: tapestry fragments, old (but not valuable antique) baskets, pictorial ceramic tiles, perfume bottles and unmatched pieces of china — specialize in one form such as dinner plates or cups and saucers.

Silverman says you can make throw pillows of bits of tapestry by backing with brocade or velvet. If the fragments are large enough you can hang them on the wall or at the windows.

She sometimes nails baskets to the wall facing out or else groups them on a shelf. Plates lend distinction to an empty wall. Use plate hangers to mount and hang. She adds lustre to a painting sometimes by surrounding it with blue-and-white-transfer pattern plates. The same ploy would work well with a family of ceramic tiles with something in common such as size, color or motif.

With more unusual items, such as those Globus collects, one might wonder how on earth to find them. The museum curator says, however, that finding examples of society's flotsam and jetsam that are worth saving is not difficult.

Invariably when she sees one item she likes, others turn up. For example, she bought an antique stapler "because I had never seen a stapler like that. Then I found others." A dealer showed her the first folding hanger she bought. "I thought it would be quite rare but he kept finding more and calling me."

Furthermore, once you gain a reputation for liking odd things, people come to you with them. An article about her matchbook collection resulted in an offer of 300 more from a reader.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A convenient application system for waterproofing concrete, brick and masonry.

Manufacturer's claim — That the applicator kit comes with a bottle of concentrate and a sprayer nozzle ... that the operator attaches the bottle of concentrate and the sprayer nozzle to a garden hose, turns on the water and sprays a light, even coating on the surface ... that an on-off switch offers maximum application control ... that one bottle of concentrate makes 3½ gallons of the product, which covers up to 700 square feet, the size of the average driveway ... that this takes only 10 minutes ... that the sprayer bottle provides the proper dilution rate ... that only a single coat is required .... and that the material is a protection against cracking, splitting, spalling and general deterioration caused by melting salts.

THE PRODUCT — A new all-purpose glue for homeowners.

Manufacturer's claim — That this glue can be used for arts and crafts projects to fixing furniture to replacing ceramic tiles in the bathroom ... that it is applied in a one-step process that requires no mixing .... that it dries faster than white glues, is easier to apply than epoxy glues and won't bond skin like many superglues ... that it is safe to use around children and pets, being non-toxic, non-irritating and non-flammable ... that it will bond paper, cardboard, wood, ceramics, fiberglass and most metals and plastics ... and that it is strong enough to fix a broken rocking chair, yet gentle enough for gluing hearts on a homemade birthday card.

Manufacturer's claim — That the portable jigsaw has a quick-charge battery pack ... that it accepts universal ¼-inch shaft metal or wood-cutting jigsaw blades ... that it has a reversible plate for splinter-free cutting ... that its slimline design makes it possible to cut up to 1½ inches away from a wall ... that it has a textured, easy-grip handle for one-hand operation in tight spots ... that is has two special storage compartments ... that one of those compartments can hold as many a five extra saw blades and that the other holds the standard allen wrench to adjust the base plate ... and that a roller guide prevents blade breakage.

Manufacturer's claim — That a swivel-mount bracket can be used with any fixture that has a 1½-inch riser, such as tier lights, mushroom lights and satellite lights ... that a surface bracket is for use on deck surfaces, steps and railings ... that it eliminates the hassle of having to cut the ground stake and drill holes in the mounting bracket before installing the fixture to a flat surface ... and that the third bracket is for installation where floodlights are used, allowing fixtures to be installed virtually anywhere—under overhanging eaves, on decks, near walk, stairs, wall and even in the most confined area.

(The waterproofing application system is manufactured by Thompson & Formby Inc., 825 Crossover Lane, Suite 240, Memphis, Tenn., 38117; the glue by Darworth Co., Avon, Conn., 06001; the cordless jigsaw by RYOBI America Corp. 1433 Hamilton Parkway, Itasca, Ill., 60143; and the mounts for low voltage outdoor lights by Intermatic, Inc., Intermatic Plaza, Spring Grove, Ill., 60081.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

Here's The Answer

AP NEWSFEATURES

Q. — I plan to remove the finish from four wooden kitchen chairs. I already have selected a varnish remover, the type that does not need to be neutralized with water. I chose that kind because a friend said it will not raise the grain of the wood. Is he right? Also, is there any special way to handle the legs of the chair?

A. — Your friend is correct. As for the chair legs, just before you apply the remover, place each leg on an aluminum pie pan or even a tin can. The remover that runs down the leg can be collected and used again.

Q. — I am going to put up a chain-link fence around my property. My wife isn't too keen about it, because she thinks the fence makes it look like commercial property, but I disagree and she now has decided to go along with it. Is it something I can handle myself? I am reasonably handy.

A. — Your wife has a point, but chain-link fencing has been put up around thousands of residential properties. No way to answer your question, since "reasonably handy" can mean different things to different persons. Installing a chain-link fence is more difficult than erecting a wooden fence. get some bids on having it done professionally and then make up your mind what to do. If you decide to do it yourself, better get some advice from somebody who has done it and see what intructional literature you can get on the subject. In fact, it wouldn't be a bad idea of get the instructional data ahead of time. That will give you some idea of the problems you are likely to encounter and enable you to make up your mind.

Q. — I applied an oil-based stain to my dining room floor. Now I would like to put on a finish coat of lacquer. I read somewhere that lacquer should not be used over paint, since it tends to act as a remover. Will the same thing happen with lacquer over an oil stain?

A. — Probably. The lacquer thinner in lacquer acts as a remover for many finishes. Incidentally, when lacquer is applied to floors, there must be plenty of ventilation. It is both toxic and flammable. Even professionals must exercise extra care in using it. So, even if there were no possibility of the stain being affected by the lacquer, it would have to be considered carefully. Should you still want to try it, ask your paint dealer to tell you about some products that have a lacquer base and are very popular.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, remover, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-how, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q.- I found six saddleback caterpillars munching on my rudbeckias. What do saddleback caterpillars become--butterflies or moths? Almost everyone I know is familiar with the caterpillar, but no one knows what it becomes. What else will saddlebacks eat?

A.- When the saddleback caterpillar emerges from its cocoon, it is a small moth with dark, reddish brown wings. The saddleback caterpillar, with its "saddle" (a brown oval in the middle of its green back) and stinging spines, it is definitely more memorable than the moth it becomes. The caterpillars feed on many plants, including corn, rose, cherry, apple and pawpaw.

Q.- Does a heavy crop of acorns mean there will be a hard or long winter?

A.- A heavy crop of acorns may tell something about the health of the oak tree or something about the weather of the past summer or spring, but there is nothing to indicate that a heavy crop of acorns foretells what the winter will be like.

Q.- How much sun will Florida leucothoe tolerate?

A.- Although Florida leucothoe (Leucothoe populifolia) normally grows in shady areas in nature, cultivated plants do quite well in full sun if moisture is available. The leaves have not scourched here in Raleigh even at below-zero degrees F. and in full sun.

All A Matter Of Scale

By Barbara Mayer
AP NEWSFEATURES

The difference between a room that looks right and one that looks all wrong may be a matter of scale.

When Marilyn Glass, decorating editor of Ladies Home Journal, surveyed eight common decorating mistakes, she found seven involved errors of scale, mainly combining furnishings in mismatched sizes.

Scale, according to Glass, refers to the size of objects and their relationship to each other and the space around them.

A room works better, she says, if the objects are on the same general level. For examples of good scale, check out model rooms in stores and in decorating magazines and books, noting the relative sizes of major pieces of furniture and accessories.

Some typical errors of judgment include selecting armchairs that are too shallow and too high-backed for the sofa in the room; choosing end tables that are too narrow and too high for the seating; placing a coffee table that is too small in front of a sofa; using lamps that tower over the furniture and accessories.

By keeping a set of general decorating guidelines on hand when you go shopping, you may be able to eliminate all or most of these errors.

A sofa should measure a little less than half the length of the wall it is placed against. (If the room is large enough, try placing a love seat on one side of the sofa and an upholstered chair on the other.)

For toss cushions to go with the upholstery, choose a 20- or 24-inch square for a standard-depth upholstered piece.

Tables next to the sofa should be about a quarter to one-third the length of the sofa and their height no more than 4 inches taller than the top of the arms of the sofa.

Instead of choosing two matched end tables, select different styles; for example, an antique chest or a skirted table for one and a standard rectangular table for the other.

A coffee table should be about half the length of the sofa and at a comfortable height in relation to the sofa seat. An alternative to the single large coffee table is two matching smaller ones with a little space between them.

A painting above the sofa should be about the size of the coffee table top.

To camouflage empty corners in a room, use an interesting panelled folding screen, one or more large plants or a large piece of furniture

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♣

If you can see that the enemy won't permit you to adopt your preferred line, don't stubbornly persist with it. Search for a reasonable alternative.

Three no trump by South would have been an ironclad contract as the cards lie. Played by North, however, the defenders would have been able to collect five tricks with the lead of the jack of hearts. It was probably just as well, therefore, that South corrected to four spades, then displayed the necessary skill to bring the contract home. Note South's delicate game try of three hearts, the suit where he needed help.

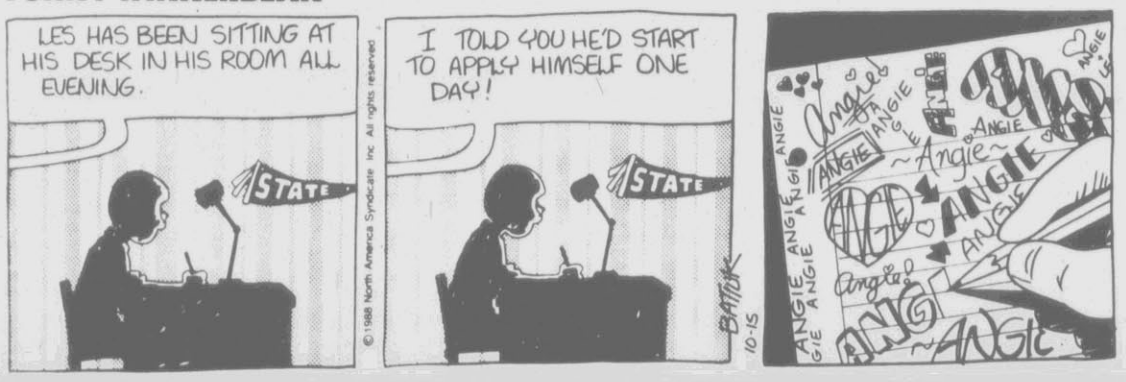

West led the king of clubs, and declarer realized that only his third heart was going to prove a problem—since West almost surely held the ace of hearts, declarer was resigned to two losers in the suit. His original idea was to ruff the third heart in dummy, but West scotched that plan by shifting to a trump. Now there was probably no way the defenders could be prevented from taking out all the table's trumps before declarer could score his ruff.

There was an elegant counter, and declarer found it. He drew all the outstanding trumps, then cashed the ace-queen of diamonds. Next, he overtook the jack of diamonds with the king and led the nine of clubs. When East could not, or did not, cover, declarer refrained from ruffing. Instead, he discarded a low heart, and West was trapped in an endplay. If he cashed the ace of hearts, he would set up declarer's king. If he led a low club, dummy's queen would win. So West tried the ace of clubs. Declarer ruffed, crossed to the table with the ten of diamonds and discarded a heart on the queen of clubs. He lost only one heart trick and two clubs.

The Daily Reflector/Jerry Raynor

Throughout eastern North Carolina, nature has devised a magnificant display of wild flowers to contrast with the last stages of forest green before the coming of autumn leaf colors. In October, wild flowers on roadsides, in meadows and ditches present a canvas mostly of golds and purples, interspersed with whites, blues and pinks. Goldenrods, of which one of five species is shown above, are the most prevalent of golds that include sunflowers, bur marigold and sneezeweed. Purples are represented in morning glories, shown at right, along with asters, joe-pye weed, mistflowers, gerardia and trilisa. Blue is found in day flowers and morning glories, with several species of pink or white flowers.

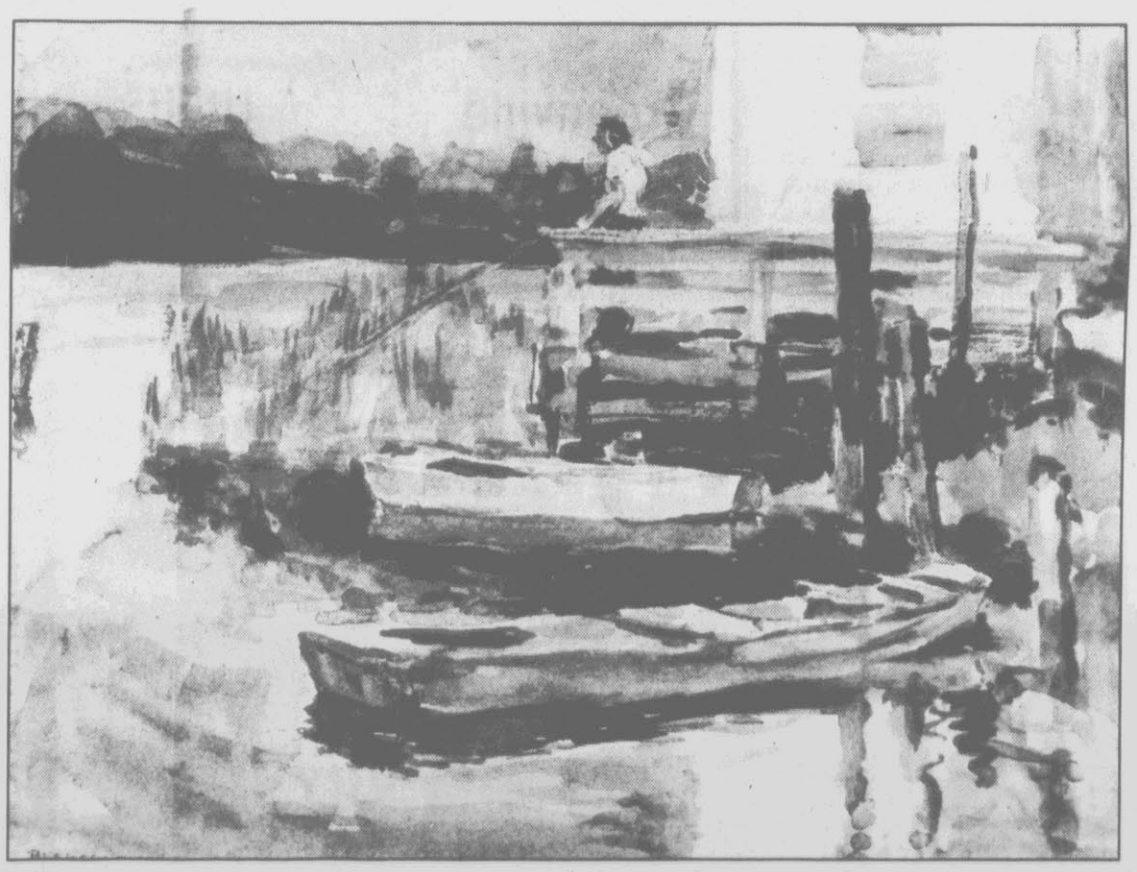

A Splendor Of October's Gold and Purple Wildflowers In Eastern North Carolina

The Richness Of Area Art Manifest In Gray Gallery Show

A Reflector Review

North Carolina is known as the Vacation Variety State, and now, with the exhibition of art currently on view in Gray Art Gallery on the East Carolina University campus, the gallery has earned the right to the title "The Center for Variety In Art in Eastern North Carolina."

Gallery director Perry Nesbitt has made a splendid choice in showcasing the work of a quartet of top area talent — painters Sarah Blakeslee and Fausto Cardelli, woodcarver Frank Diener, and sculptor of electronics Allan Erdmann. (Also on view is ceramic sculpture, carved tools and banners by New York artist Peter Gourfain. Details on his show will be given at a later date).

"Gill Splitter" is one of Fausto Cardelli's bright, powerful works

The works in this fine show are wonderfully varied. Each artist is represented by a sufficient number of pieces to afford a revealing insight into their achievements.

Ms. Blakeslee (the wife of artist Francis Speight) shows 15 paintings, all watercolors except for two still lifes, one oil and one pastel.

Rightly regarded as the doyenne of portrait painters in the eastern half of North Carolina, Ms. Blakeslee is equally talented in painting landscapes.

Her paintings depict a world of gentle pastoral scenes. The slant, the varied intensity of light in subtle seasonal shifts, is an integral part of her paintings. She captures too the ambiences of color changes in spring, summer, autumn and winter

Her subjects cover a range of scenes in Pennsylvania and North Carolina, both the Piedmont and the Coastal Plain. A couple of the paintings are views of Bertie County's San Souci Ferry, a subject beloved and often painted by her husband.

There's a Greenville cityscape, farm lands both in the gray soil of flat areas and the red-brown soils of hills, tobacco barns, a vibrant Pitt County sunset, a backyard garden. In all these works, Ms. Blakeslee technique borders on impressionism.

These are lovely paintings, one that reflect a world of rural beauty. Though somewhat idealized, they are nonetheless characterized by the reality of nature this admirable woman sees in the world about her.

Painter-Fausto Cardelli views the world in terms of terrors and tribulations faced by man — not outright violence, but fear, confusion implicit and implied. In six large paintings and four small works on paper, Cardelli explores the strange world of the human mind.

Despite the somberness of his visions, he is unexpectedly unorthodox in his use of a super range of brilliant colors to depict the forces of mystery that haunts his imaginative art.

These are paintings that disturb, that remind us of the dark world of unreality we all sometimes face in our dreams — and at times, in real life

The viewer is called on to consider the compelling appeal Cardelli has created in these powerful paintings — an insistance that what may not easily be grasped is still a viable segment of art.

In direct contrast to the dark visions of Cardelli and the shimmering beauty of Blakeslee is the real world fantasy of a circus world shown by woodcarver Frank Diener.

Even those who have known that Greenville baker Diener has for many years followed an avocation of carving circus people, animals and stage settings expressing his love of the circus, will be pleasantly surprised by the extent of his gorgeous world of miniatures.

Within five Plexiglass cases and lined up on low display walls, Diener's carvings form a theatrical technicolor treat for children and adults alike. Eight gray elephants are shown in performance; a number of gilt-embossed wagons pulled by teams of horses are all meticulously fashioned.

A marching band is clothed in scarlet, and performers are garbed in costumes as bright as the rainbow. The stripes of tigers and zebras, the spotted patterns of giraffes, and the arrogant stances of roustabouts are all part of the fairy tale world that Diener has created.

Numerous individual clowns are part of the scene, and many of these have been autographed by the clowns on whom the carvings are based.

This is a rare (perhaps a once-in-a-lifetime) opportunity for viewers to see "Diener's Circus" assembled at one place — an opportunity not to be passed up.

The diversity of eastern North Carolina talent in art is further manifest in the electronic sculpture by Allan Erdmann.

Primarily configured of rectangular boxes of clear Plexiglass that houses mechanical devices of batteries, small wires and lights, much of the beauty of these sculptures come from their mathematical precision.

*Erdmann uses color sparingly — in one piece small cut-out figures in dull gold and apricot; in another in*stance the color of batteries, and in still another an oblong of bright green styrofoam material. The most detailed sculpture is "Pandora's Box," flanked by black and white checkerboard, furnished with internal elements that include scales, dice, a crystal prism and a plain glass of water.

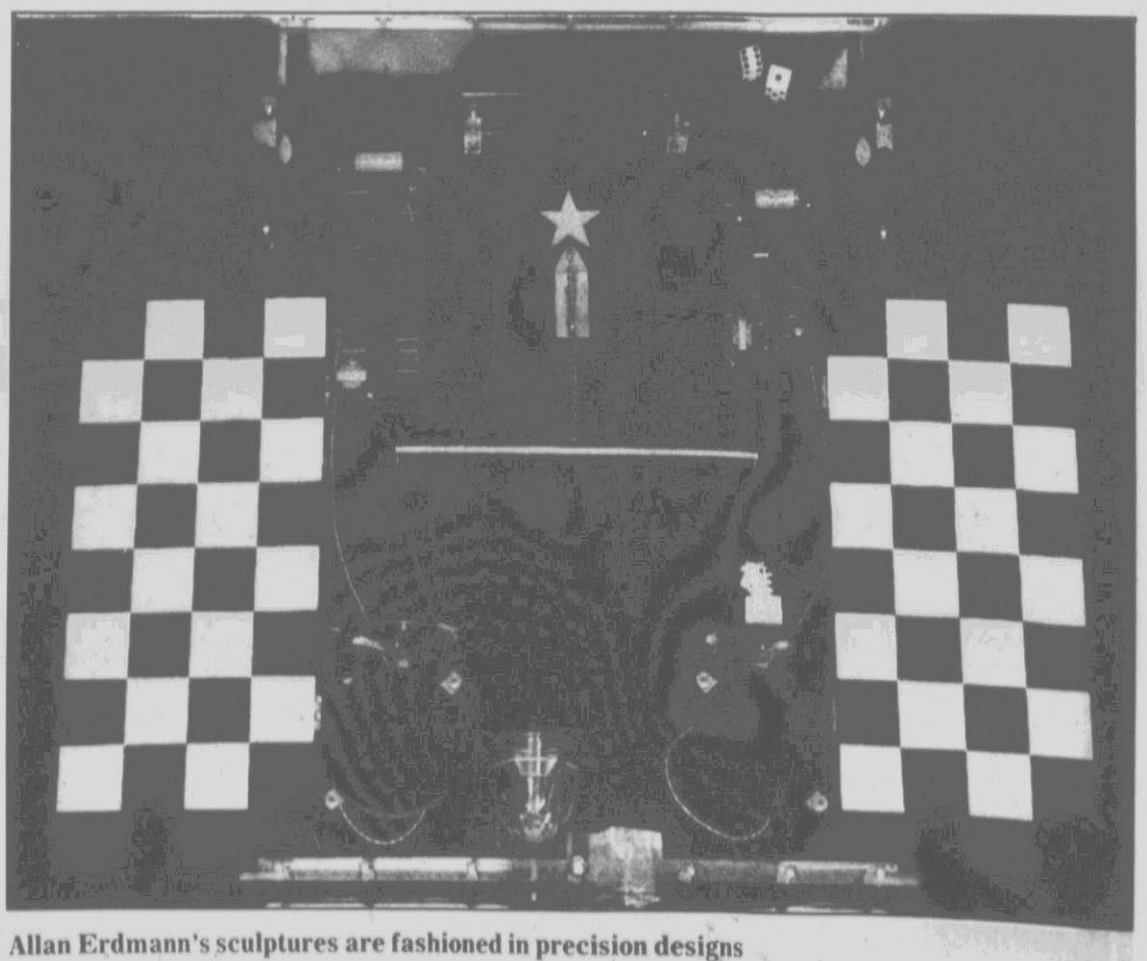

Two revolving windmill arms are studded with tiny red and green lights. One auxiliary piece depends on lights playing against a large potted plant which throws pastel shadows against a wall.

The idea arises that what Erdmann has achieved is what Da Vinci would have done had he lived in a time of Plexiglass, batteries, lights and accompanying sounds.

Three Shows On View At The Greenville Museum Of Art

A Reflector Review

Three shows are currently on view at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street.

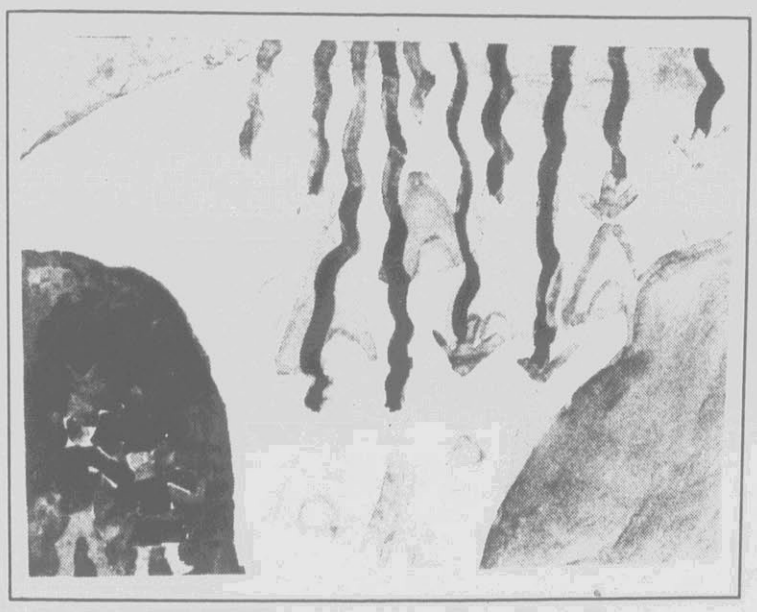

In the North Gallery, supplemented by three works in the main entry hallway are 18 paintings by children from around the world, ages three to 15. This spirited small collection, while admittedly select examples of children's art, still conveys the sense of inventive abandon universal in the art work of children.

Chosen and circulated by The University Museums from the museum's Collection of Children's Art at Illinois State University, Normal, Ill., these paintings differ (and gain in effectiveness) from the usual display of children's paintings in that they are professionally framed and presented.

In addition to work by school children from the United States, including one by an American Indian, the paintings shown at GMA are by children in Mexico, New Zealand, Japan, Korea, South Africa, Ireland, India and Finland. Thus, viewers can get a clear idea of the subject matter that children from countries worldwide choose for their art.

Subject diversity is clearly obvious. What is also evident is the universality of the spirit, the love of art that underlies these efforts, no matter what a child's nationality.

The children's art show ends Oct. 25.

Ulysses in a wall ceramic by Betty McKee Hydeman

Black and white photographs by Greenville's Dewane Frutiger are displayed on the museum's second-story in the Upstairs Gallery, the Rachel Maxwell Moore Gallery and the upstairs hallway.

This show of Frutiger's work, to the best of my knowledge, constitutes the largest exhibition of his photographs in Greenville to date. Altogether, there are more than two dozen photographs in varying sizes.

He combines the selective eye of an artist and the expertise of a knowledgable photographer to give us a new vision of the everyday. Nudes are detailed in horizontal shadows. Photographic close-ups of an abandoned old Chevy is beauty exemplified in the simplest form. One large photo of a section of the side of a barn is handsome, as is the somber darks of a study of rocks.

Frutiger's photography fulfills both a canon of beauty inherent in ordinary subjects and the art of direct visual storytelling.

His show will be on view through Oct. 30.

Betty McKee Hydeman has on view in the South Galleries downstairs (through Dec. 3) an exhibition of small terra cottas, mostly mythological.

These two dozen plus ceramics are inspired by classical figures from art in ages past — details of an idealized world of human beauty in a manner long favored in Greece, Rome, and later in European art.

There are studies of hands, facial masks, of busts and full figures — standing, reclining — all frozen in a stylized gesture of time and place.

Some are wall mounted, others displayed on stands. Ms. Hydeman has depicted several familiar figures from ancient mythology — Bacchus, Ulysses, Hector, the Three Graces, and plump cherubs.

This exhibition is a careful, though somewhat monotonous (in color) recreation of classic art that has been staple favorites for centuries.

ECU Opera Auditions

All interested singers are invited to audition for the East Carolina University Opera Theatre production scheduled for Feb. 9-12.

Auditions will be held Oct. 24 and 25 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 119 on the first floor of the A.J. Fletcher Music Center on the ECU campus.

Singers should be prepared to perform something of their own choosing. An accompanist will be provided. Solo and chorus parts both will be filled from the auditions.

The ECU Opera Theatre, since its founding in 1966, has performed such operas as "The Magic Flute," "Falstaff," "Die Fledermaus," "La Cenerentola," "The Marriage of Figaro," and "Cosi fan Tutte."

First performances in North Carolina by the ECU Opera Theatre have included such works as Francis Poulenc's "Les Mamellas de Tireisias," and Jacques Ibert's "Angelique." They presented the world premiere of Gregory Kosteck's "Maurya" and the Southeastern premiere of Phillip Hagmann's "The Music Cure."

For more information about the auditions, contact Dr. Clyde Hiss at 757-6851.

New Exhibits At East Gallery

An exhibition of glass by Ed Brown and watercolors by Judy Glover will open at East Gallery, 646 Arlington Blvd., on Monday. The exhibit will be on view through Nov. 15.

Judith Glover is an eastern North Carolina watercolorist. A graduate of East Carolina University, she has exhibited in galleries throughout the eastern portion of the state, and has participated in national shows sponsored by the American Watercolor Society, the Southern Watercolor Society, and the New Orleans Art Association.

Her work has won many awards and has been exhibited in numerous corporate collections. She has had work commissioned for organizations such as High Point Bank and Trust, Geneva Corporation, and Wachovia Bank and Trust.

Her painting, "Sailboat II," was used as the cover of the 1987 edition of the "Guide to Lower Cower Cape Fear Leisure."

Edward Brown, professor of art of Atlantic Christian College, is a sculptor with degrees from the University of Texas and Columbia University.

He has been honored in art exhibitions throughout the southeast as well as in exhibits in Kansas, New York and Texas.

Works by Brown are represented in permanent collections throughout the southeast and in museums and corporate collections in North Carolina and New York.

Edenton Tea Party On Saturday

EDENTON — The first instance of political activity by women in the American colonies will be remembered at the old Chowan County Courthouse in Edenton on Saturday.

Penelope Barker, according to tradition, presided over the Edenton Tea Party — the earliest known instance of political activity on the part of women in the American colonies.

Admission is free and the public is invited.

NCMA Lecture Series Slated

RALEIGH — Staff members of the North Carolina Museum of Art will present a series of four lectures examining major periods in art history at the Performing Arts Center in Southern Pines this winter.

Sponsored by the Museum and the Weymouth Women's Committee, the lectures will be held at 10:30 a.m. on the following Mondays: Nov. 7, Nov. 14, Jan. 30 and Feb. 6.

Tickets for this winter arts series are $20 or $15 for members of the Weymouth Women's Committee or the museum. Ticket reservations are required by Oct. 31. Seating is limited to 300; if seating is available, tickets for individual lectures may be purchased at the door for $6. For ticket information, call Vicky Johnson, Friends of Weymouth executive secretary, at 692-6261.

Lecturers will explore the sources of creative ideas and motivations for artists during four periods of western art. Each speaker will illustrate the morning's discussion with slides of works in the collection of the North Carolina Museum of Art and in other collections. A question-and-answer session will follow each lecture.

Dr. Rebecca Martin, senior program coordinator and a specialist in Western medieval art, will discuss medieval art on Nov. 7 after a series introduction by Dr. Richard Schneiderman, museum director.

Other lectures in the series area: Nov. 14, "Baroque Art" by Dr. Susan Barnes, chief curator; Jan. 30, "Nineteenth Century French Art" by Joseph Covington, director of education; and Feb. 6, "Modern Art" by John Coffey, curator of American and contemporary art.

The lecture series is part of the outreach program of the North Carolina Museum of Art, made possible by funding from the North Carolina General Assembly. The museum and the Weymouth Women's Committee sponsored a autumn lecture series in 1987 in Southern Pines.

For more information about the museum's outreach activities, contact Nancy Brantley at 833-1935.

Nature's Fury Show

CHARLOTTE — Discovery Place currently shakes, rattles and rolls with Nature's Fury, an earth-shattering exhibit now showing through Nov. 27.

The exhibit allows visitors to experience nature by touching tornados, riding earthquakes and climbing volcanos.

Hands-on exhibits explain the scientific principles behind events like volcano eruptions, earthquakes, mountain formations and shifting continents.

For starters, visitors will experience some of the earth's most momentous disasters. A major earthquake which measures 5.5 on the Richter scale will jolt visitors after an alarmingly real earthquake warning signal is sounded.

Adventurers can visit a 17-foot tall walk-through volcano which will feature smoke and lava blown out of the top. Falling rocks and rumbling inside the crater will also greet the volcano explorer.

Nature's Fury was developed by the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland. It is intended to help visitors see for themselves how nature's forces continue to reshape the earth.

Discovery Place, a science and technology museum, is located at 301 North Tyson Street in uptown Charlotte. For more information on exhibits, workshops and programs call 704-372-6261.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Diane Taylor
SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

There are numerous books published every year which entice people to start their own businesses. These books promise financial rewards and the satisfaction of being your own boss. A new book added to the Sheppard Library collection, however, takes a different look at self-employment.

"Avoiding the Pitfalls of Starting Your Own Business," by Jeffrey P. Davidson, reveals the harsh realities of owning your own business today. Instead of showing people how to start and operate their own business, Davidson's book lets people know in no uncertain terms what problems they will encounter if they do decide to venture out on their own. Readers are warned that nine out of ten new businesses fail and that business failures also bring about broken marriages and personal financial loss. Most businesses that fail today have an average liability of $600,000.

The author lists the factors that contribute to business failures and also lists the qualities a good manager will need in order to be a successful entrepreneur. He offers an example of a business plan that all prospective entrepreneurs should complete months before starting a business venture as well as a table of what forms to keep and for how long. The author reiterates that when applying for a business loan, a person uses his personal assets as collateral. Being your own boss means working seven days a week, 14 hours a day.

The author devotes a chapter to personnel problems, including who to hire, absenteeism and employee theft. Other areas covered include: cost control, the importance of the right location, how to deal with creditors, hiring a lawyer and an accountant, and marketing.

Davidson's purpose in writing this book was not to scare people, but instead to help them make a sound decision. After all, for every Ted Turner and Donald Trump, there are thousands who have lost everything.

Diaries Of Two Israeli Soldiers Differ On The Occupation

By Mary Sedor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — The diaries of two Israeli soldiers offer sharply conflicting accounts of how the Israeli army deals with the nine-month-old Palestinian uprising on the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

But at the same time, the diaries published in the Jerusalem Post mirror the broad differences in Israeli society itself on how to quell the rebellion.

One soldier, a reservist, wrote that troops were taught to beat Arabs with "dry blows" that cause pain but draw no blood.

The other said his reserve duty in the Gaza Strip's Jabaliya refugee camp convinced him that despite occasional abberations, soldiers were "restrained and noble men."

"The Israeli army remains one of the most decent in the world," the second soldier, American-born freelance writer Louis Rapoport, wrote of his 30 days of duty in the crowded camp of 70,000 refugees in June.

But the other, British-born educator Jonathan Kestenbaum, described a "tremendous callousness" among many of the soldiers he served with in the West Bank village of Qabatiyeh in August.

"Among the soldiers, there is a depressing routine of almost wild abandon. Everybody here makes up their own rules," Kestenbaum wrote in his diary. Kestenbaum, 29, described an encounter with an Israeli guard at a detention center in Jenin, north of Jerusalem.

"How many dogs have you brought?" Kestenbaum quoted the guard as asking him when he arrived with a group of teen-age Palestinian detainees.

Rapoport conceded troops were sometimes responsible for "accidents or misjudgments," including a case where an Israeli soldier made a firebomb and intended to hurl it at Arab demonstrators. His officers confiscated it.

But, he wrote, many soldiers were frustrated because they felt the Palestinians had a propaganda edge by sending boys as young as 9 years old to the front lines of stone-throwing riots to take on armed troops.

Addressing the same issue, Kestenbaum wrote of a 15-year-old Palestinian killed by a member of his unit: "Why are we using live bullets on teen-agers throwing stones?"

Kestenbaum told of chasing a 9-year-old boy who broke a 30-day curfew to try to retrieve bread from a gutter and of rounding up a group of elderly Palestinians who slipped into a field at night to pick a bucket of tomatoes rotting in the fields.

"Our jeep springs into action, chasing this family as if the very future of our country depended on it. We corner them," Kestenbaum wrote. "At which point the old woman, 90 years old, falls to her knees, kisses my hand and begs me not to (detain) her: 'We really needed tomatoes,' she says."

Both Kestenbaum and Rapoport described the shooting deaths of Palestinians during their tours but had markedly different reactions to the killings. Since the uprising began, 266 Palestinians and six Israelis have died.

"I doubt whether any other army in the world ... would act with more restraint," Rapoport said, adding that he considered the Arab fatalities in the uprising to be "remarkably low given the scale of the revolt."

Kestenbaum offered this observation about a soldier in his unit who killed a Palestinian teen-ager: "The guy who fired the shots was the same guy who spent three days at our training base talking of beating up Arabs. (The death) didn't really affect him one way or the other."

Tin Sheets Made Into Windmills

By Sallie Bright
THE ADVOCATE-MESSENGER

HUSTONVILLE, Ky. — Layton Grover grew up on a farm where cream was separated from milk using a hand-cranked machine.

The cups that caught the cream later caught Grover's eye, and he used them to make unusual windmills like the one in his back yard.

He remembers cranking a cream separator when he was a child.

"You had to turn them at a certain speed," he recalled. "It had a big bowl and two spouts. Skim milk came out one side, and cream came out the other. You sold the cream and gave the skim milk to the hogs."

Grover started making his colorful windmills after cream separators had nearly gone the way of the dinosaurs. People who had the machines tucked away in basements or garages offered the innards to Grover.

"My friends gave me all the separator cups I needed," he said. When those ran out, he started making replicas of the cups from tin.

Grover has long since left the farm. He's quit making the windmills, too. His handiwork lives on, though, in the yards of a neighbor down the street in Hustonville, a friend in Moreland, and acquaintances in Florida, Montana and Tennessee.

"I've made 40 or 50, I don't know how many," he said, sitting on the stool in his workshop. "What I've learned about it, I've learnt myself."

Hikers Lost On Mount Washington

A surprise snowstorm in New Hampshire brought strong winds, large snowdrifts and very cold temperatures Sunday, October 9. Three lost hikers spent about 25 hours on Mount Washington. To keep their fire going, the hikers burned dollar bills.

Has American Gospel Music Popularity Passed Its Peak?

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Pitt County gospel singer Randy Lee Warren

By D.A. Elliott
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Gospel music, which burst from church choirs during the Carter years, now is tugged between secular and traditional influences, according to a professor who has written a biography of award-winning singer Sandi Patti.

The 32-year-old Anderson, Ind., native has been voted top female singer for seven consecutive years by the Gospel Music Association and has won four Grammy Awards, including two last year.

But in his book, "Sandi Patti: The Voice of Gospel Music," Don Cusic says the art form is past its peak.

"I think the 10 years from 1976 to 1986 was the heyday. That is when Jimmy Carter was elected as the first born-again president and through the Jim and Tammy (Bakker) period," said Cusic.

"The social influence was strong, the political influence wasn't as strong. It's not as cool to be Christian now, it's not as fashionable. Now, they're doing aerobics."

Cusic, a professor at Middle Tennessee State University who wrote the book without the singer's cooperation, compares Miss Patti with Amy Grant, another gospel artist with four Grammies to her credit.

Miss Patti, who has said that her ministry is directed to Christians, sings traditional gospel songs, while Miss Grant, who is known as a gospel-pop artist, has said she tries to reach out spiritually to young rock fans.

Miss Grant sang a No. 1 pop duet, "Next Time I Fall" in 1986 with Peter Cetera, former lead singer for the group Chicago.

"Gospel music (is), in many ways, a two-headed creature, one head belonging to Sandi Patti and other to Amy Grant," Cusic wrote.

The professor said he believes the music form will remain popular despite its relative decline, appealing to a limited audience that was around long before its peak in the late 70s and early 80s.

Cusic has written for publications such as Billboard and Contemporary Christian Music magazine, and spent eleven months writing the biography, released by Doubleday in March.

Miss Patti asked him not to write the book.

"She said it wasn't time," Cusic said. "I thought they would change their minds along the way. I also figured that once they saw I was serious about it, they would change their minds."

Cusic, who teaches recording industry management at the school in Murfreesboro 40 miles south of Nashville, said he tried to explain the singer's life in a historical, political and social context.

"But critics have said the Sandi Patti fans just want Sandi Patti," he said.

John Helvering, the singer's manager and husband, said recently he had noted many errors in the work, though none came to mind immediately.

Cusic admits to several inaccuracies including a reference to a college degree earned by Miss Patti's mother, Carolyn, who never completed the program.

Randy Lee Warren Wins Gospel Award

By Laurie Beasley
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Randy Lee Warren certainly has something to sing about lately — his winning song. Warren's song placed first among over 300 entries in the Southern Gospel Songwriters' Competition held recently in Nashville, Tenn., during the National Quartet Convention.

Gospel songwriters, amateurs as well as professionals,. from across the nation compete for prizes and a recording contract in this annual event. Warren's winning song, entitled "If You're a Child of God, Call Home," will soon be recorded by a popular gospel group. The Dixie Melody Boys have already recorded one of Warren's songs, "He Is Worthy," and will record three others next month.

Warren credits much of his success to his family and to God. "I give God credit for my writing, I couldn't do it without his inspiration," Warren says. "I wanted to win the competition for my family. My wife is one hundred percent behind me and I really wanted to bring this victory home to Greenville."

In addition to the recording contract, Warren also won a five-day trip to the Bahamas during the 16th annual "Singing At the Sea" cruise.

Warren, who has been a songwriter for eleven years, plays keyboards for "The Laymen," a gospel singing group based in Windsor.

It carries a top prize award worth more than $75,000, which includes a cash award of $10,000, career promotion funds totaling $20,000, a Carnegie Hall recital engagement, and a limited recording contract with New World Records.

The competition is open to violinists of all ages and nationalities.

Applications are available by writing to Kristin Kuhr, Director, Carnegie Hall International American Music Competition, 881 Seventh Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q. Is it true, really true, that Priscilla Presley and Lisa Marie Presley, the daughter she had by Elvis, both shared the same lover—an ex-Marine by the name of Michael Edwards?—G.H., Venice, Calif.

A. Michael Edwards, a big-time model and a sometime bit-part actor, was involved—so he says—in a torrid seven-year romance with Priscilla Presley. During that time, he found himself attracted to 13-year-old Lisa. Edwards was never Lisa's lover, however, in the physical way he was her mother's. He tells all about it in a confessional and comic style in his autobiography, "Priscilla, Elvis and Me: In the Shadow of the King." Wherever he is, Elvis must be rolling over in fury.

A. Gov. Michael Dukakis, Democratic candidate for President of the U.S., was ranked No. 71 among the 468 students in Harvard Law School's Class of 1960.

A. James Garfield, Harry Truman and Gerald Ford.

Redgrave and wife in The Captive Heart: Was Noël nearby?

Q. Rachel Kempson, who was married to the acclaimed British actor Sir Michael Redgrave, has told of her late husband's long-standing affair with Sir Noël Coward. It appears that Coward—the multitalented playwright, composer, director and actor—must have had affairs with all of the gay men in the British theater, if not the British empire. I am exaggerating, of course. But when Noël Coward passed on to green pastures, did he die of AIDS? That is a most serious question.—S.T., McLean, Va.

A. Sir Noël Coward died of a heart attack on the island of Jamaica on March 26, 1973, at age 74. At that time, the Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome had not yet been discovered and diagnosed, although the disease may well have been in existence.

Q. Why is it that actress Bea Arthur, on TV's "The Golden Girls," wears clothes that never expose her arms or her legs?—A.H.M., Daytona Beach, Fla.

A. Bea Arthur, 62, rarely dresses in form-revealing clothes, but it is not true that she "wears clothes that never expose her arms or her legs."

Q. How many United States Presidents failed in their bids for re-election, and can you identify them, please?—Tom McNally, St. Paul, Minn.

A. Seven: John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Martin Van Buren, Grover Cleveland (who lost to Benjamin Harrison in 1888), Harrison (who lost to Cleveland in 1892), Herbert Hoover and Jimmy Carter. In addition, ex-Presidents Millard Fillmore and Theodore Roosevelt lost elections, but not as incumbents; and incumbent Gerald Ford failed in 1976, but he hadn't been elected to the Presidency.

More than 25,000 Americans have been living a century or longer. What can they teach us?

To Cherish Life

Don Doris

IVA WOOD BLAKE, 100, REMEMBERS the summer day in 1895 when the great anti-drink crusader Carry Nation came to the dusty little panhandle town of Canadian, Tex. "She was a big, stout, sturdy woman, with a severe face the local WCTU [Woman's Christian Temperance Union] members thought saintly. Clutching a mean-looking hatchet, she marched to the principal saloon in town, threw open the doors and started swinging away, while the women all cheered and the men all groaned. Within minutes, the bar was a pile of rubble."

Maude Pratt Managhan, 100, of Hot Springs, Mont., recalls how her energetic parents, Mary and John William Pratt, followed the American dream over half a continent, seeking better land and greater opportunity in areas newly opened to settlers. From Wisconsin they moved to Kansas—from Kansas to Nebraska—from Nebraska to South Dakota.

Maude remembers the last leg of their odyssey, which occurred in 1895, when she was 8 years old, and took the Pratts and their four small daughters from the South Dakota prairie to the mountains, deep lakes and fertile lands of western Montana. "We traveled in Conestoga wagons, just us and one other family," she relates. "Our journey was marked by both beauty and danger. I remember exquisite wildflowers and herds of graceful antelope. From time to time, my dad would shoot one and barter the excess meat for milk for us kids. But there also were coyotes howling in the night, an occasional grizzly bear and the ever-present threat of desperadoes. My parents kept their fingers on the trigger."

For most of us, stories like these are the stuff of history books. But centenarians—those aged 100 or over—actually lived through events we can only dream about.

The fastest-growing age group. There are an estimated 25,000 centenarians in the United States, and their numbers are rapidly increasing. "This is the fastest-growing age group in the U.S. population," explains Dr. Arnold Goldstein, demographic statistician for the U.S. Census Bureau, in Suitland, Md. The Census Bureau, which generally has been conservative in its estimates of the aged population thus far, now predicts that there will be an astonishing one million American centenarians by the year 2050 and close to 2 million of them by 2080.

This prediction, which Goldstein calls "fairly reliable," is based partly on larger age groups becoming able to reach 100. The first of the immense "Baby Boom" generation, for instance, will be eligible to achieve their 100th birthdays by 2046. In addition, further advances in health care and in the treatment of killer diseases may mean that the average percentage of centenarians within each generation—currently about one percent—could increase to 2 percent or more in future years.

It's hard to say what such potentially vast numbers of the extreme aged might mean for America. Some futurists worry about strains on the nation's health-care system and about legions of 105-year-olds living in poverty.

Looking at today's centenarians, however, there are several encouraging signs. For example, about half of them live in "group settings," a term which includes senior-citizen apartments and group homes, as well as conventional nursing homes. But the other half live either on their own or with a close relative or companion, most often a daughter or son.

Moreover, since centenarians probably represent the most resilient genetic strain within each generation, they actually tend to be healthier, both mentally and physically, than many people decades younger. They stay active and maintain an optimistic outlook and a love of life.

Take Ella Galbraith Miller, for instance. This diminutive black woman, the Tennessee-born daughter of freed slaves, will be 108 in December, but she's continually on the go. "She's a true phenomenon and constant inspiration," maintains Connie Jones, 39, the wife of Miller's minister at the Mount Zion Baptist Church in Woodlawn, Ohio. "A few weeks ago, my 13-year-old daughter Julie and one of her friends went over to visit after school. When Mrs. Miller asked if they'd like some ice cream, the girls said they would, expecting her to get some from the freezer." Instead, the peppy centenarian proceeded to lead the way to an ice cream parlor more than 2 miles away. "Mama," Julie later complained. "Mrs. Miller may walk with a cane, but she's a real speed-demon. We couldn't keep up with her."

Centenarians actually lived through events that most of us can only dream about—like crossing the prairie in a Conestoga wagon

The most-exciting century. Centenarians are of interest both to medical researchers, who think of them as pioneers on the frontier of aging, and to historians, who rely on their recollections of social trends and specific events. "It's virtually impossible to achieve your 100th birthday without having made a mark on history," asserts John Kirk, who has interviewed more than 200 Idaho centenarians as head of the Century Citizens Project, a program connected with the current Idaho centennial celebration. "Whether their primary field of action was local, statewide or national—these people have influenced America's destiny."

Most centenarians are glad to have lived through the century they did. "I can't think of a more interesting, action-packed or thrilling 100 years," avers Jay Hoover, 100, of Parma, Idaho. With his second wife, Lila Andrews Wilson Hoover, 101, they comprise one of the very few centenarian couples in the country.

"We've moved from the covered wagon to the lunar landing module, from a time of isolated communities to one of instant global communications," Jay Hoover says. The difficulties such isolation imposed played a part in Hoover's own birth. His family lived in the Piney Lakes country south of Burns, Ore., sparsely populated even today. Jay came into the world during a severe winter freeze, and the only way to fetch a midwife was by using ice skates. "My father skated all the way to the midwife's ranch," Hoover says. "Then the two of them skated back to deliver me."

Among social movements during the past century, centenarians cite the civil rights movement as especially important. Lila Hoover believes ordinary people became sensitive to racial injustice during the Depression and World War II, "when people of all races suffered together." Lila herself was so appalled by the internment of Americans of Japanese descent during the war that she traveled to a large internment camp in Rupert, Idaho, lived among the Japanese families for 10 days and wrote a scathing report for the YWCA, of which she was a national board member.

Those who reach 100 —no doubt the most resilient of their generation—tend to be healthier than many who are decades younger

Bob Brown

Iva Blake, 100, gardens from a wheelchair. "She could plant toothpicks, and they'd grow," says her daughter. Below: Jones Morgan of Richmond, Va.: Born in South Carolina, the son of freed slaves, at 106 he's still a regular churchgoer and a keen observer of current events.

After the war, groups like the "Y" became involved in the struggle for black advancement. Lila cites one instance: "In 1948, we held a Western regional convention of YWCA officers in Pocatello, Idaho. The chapter from Denver had several black officers, and the convention hotel refused to let them sign in. That was just too much for the rest of us, so we all handed in our room keys and marched out en masse—150 middle-aged ladies in conservative dress. It might not have been the march on Washington, but it was a start."

Traits centenarians share. While centenarians interest historians for the light they shed on the past, physicians and psychologists believe this group is equally important to our future. By examining the physical, mental and emotional traits those over 100 share, researchers hope to discover some of the secrets of successful aging.

Already, research has shaken up some long-held assumptions about the extreme aged. "Centenarians are a pretty diverse group " explains Dr. John Thompson, a physician and researcher at the Sanders-Brown Research Center on Aging at the University of Kentucky in Lexington. "They don't exhibit as uniform a physical or emotional profile as some investigators had expected."

For example, it was once believed that those who achieved the age of 100 would tend to be calm, serene "Type B" personalities who had led relatively stress-free lives. Some centenarians do fit this profile. Julius Adler, 101, of Philadelphia—a prominent civil engineer who didn't retire until his 90s—says, "I've never been a 'make waves' kind of person. I've always tried to stay calm and circumspect." Probably the oldest living graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Adler appears every bit the thoughtful, distinguished gentleman.

Other centenarians, however, are fiery "Type A" personalities who seem to thrive on tension. Iva Wood Blake, 100, who now lives in Albuquerque, remains the epitome of a salty, feisty Texas native. She peppers her conversation with risqué jokes, which made this writer—60 years her junior—blush.

There's variety in centenarians' health habits as well, although there are some constants. "Very few have been grossly obese," says Dr. Thompson. Many are social drinkers, and a number of those who have reached 100 are fond of coffee. Their nutritional habits range all over the board. A few are vegetarians, but most eat meat too. Julius Adler reports that he eats "absolutely everything," adding, "I still have a hearty appetite."

What, then, are the characteristics most centenarians share? The No. 1 trait seems to be one over which we have no control: a genetic propensity toward long life inherited from their forebears. Studies show that the overwhelming majority of centenarians had at least one close relative who made it into the 90s or above. For example, Maude Managhan's father lived to 93, Julius Adler's mother to her early 90s. Lila Hoover boasts a father and a grandfather before him who both survived to age 97.

(If you've had no long-lived relatives, though, take heart. Ella Miller's parents both died before they were 40, and none of her four siblings survived past 75.)

Besides a genetic propensity toward long life, centenarians tend to share these character traits:

• Activity. Even if blessed with serene personalities, these are active—generally physically active—people. A ranch wife with seven children, Maude Managhan didn't have much respite from chores. "But whenever I did, I would jump on a horse," she remarks. "I could ride for hours and hours." More recently, Maude traveled in her daughter-in-law's motor home to Oregon and back.

• Discipline. They are rarely soft or slack. Centenarians set standards for themselves and follow them rigorously. Julius Adler is appalled by slovenly behavior or appearance. Every day, he dresses immaculately in shirt, pants and tie and—when company is coming—a suit jacket. "He would never be caught in shorts or a bathrobe," says his daughter-in-law, Ethel Olsho.

• Altruism. They are not self-centered. Those over 100 tend to have led people-oriented lives, often helping those less fortunate than themselves. Until she moved from Cincinnati to Virginia last summer, Ella Miller worked one day a week at a volunteer food and clothing bank for the poor at a local church. She also was president of a women's philanthropic club and frequently visited less-robust elderly people in nursing homes. "God intended us to reach out to others," she proclaims.

• Optimism. They continue to make plans and to look forward to the future. Dr. David Wekstein, a physiologist and associate director of the Sanders-Brown Center on Aging, tells of one man who hoped to treat himself to an Alaskan cruise for his 100th birthday: "Not realizing how popular these cruises were, he waited until May to make his reservation and found all the cabins were taken. 'All right,' he said. 'Then book me for next year.' "

• Spiritual faith. While they're not necessarily avid churchgoers, most centenarians say they enjoy active spiritual lives. Lila Hoover is convinced she once had an "out-of-body" experience. "It was during the great influenza epidemic of 1918," she reports. "I was burning up with fever and couldn't move or speak. Suddenly, I felt an extraordinary surge of energy, heard exquisitely beautiful music and felt my spirit begin to part from my body. I had never felt so blissfully free. But the thought of my husband and small son held me back. I believe I made the conscious choice to return to the world and continue my work. Since that day, I've had the feeling that nothing can really harm me and have lived completely without fear."

• Love of life. Above all, centenarians take an active interest in the world around them. These are people who cherish life and enjoy its simple pleasures with unashamed enthusiasm.

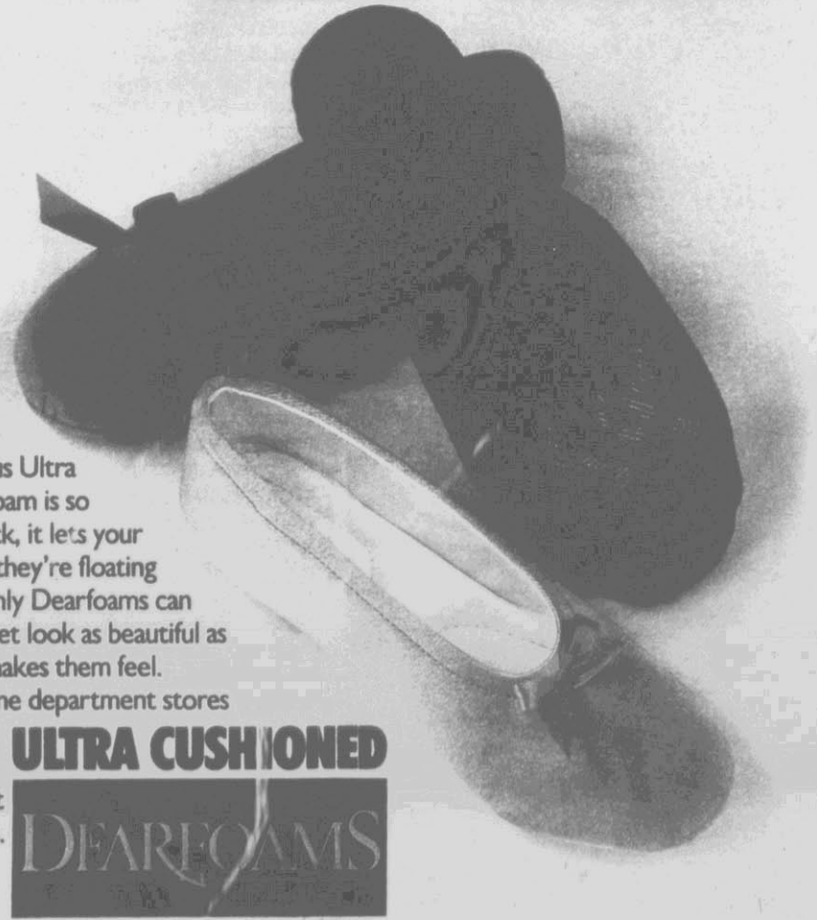

Iva Blake uses a wheelchair now, but that doesn't stop her from cultivating one of the best backyard gardens in Albuquerque. A possessor of the proverbial green thumb, "she could plant toothpicks, and they'd grow," says her daughter, Hazel Gloss. From early spring through late autumn, Iva dons an old-fashioned Texas sunbonnet, maneuvers her wheelchair into her garden and rakes, hoes, weeds and waters with specially designed cut-off garden tools.

Ella Miller, who was a noted party-giver in her younger days—say, when she was 95—still enjoys playing hostess. At least once a year, she has staged an open-house tea party for "all my close friends." Last time, 150 people showed up.

Lila and Jay Hoover have always been intellectuals, and their appetite for learning hasn't diminished past the century mark. The couple still faithfully subscribe to magazines such as Smithsonian, National Geographic and The Atlantic Monthly and regularly watch their favorite television shows, PBS's Nature and Washington Week in Review. They also have a steady stream of visitors, "because we enjoy the conversation," Lila says.

"When you reach age 100, each day is a day to treasure," remarks Jay Hoover. "I have very few regrets about my life. And I wouldn't change places with anyone."

HEROES & HEROINES

What public figures of the past century do today's centenarians most admire? Here are a few opinions:

LILA HOOVER: "Through my work with the national YWCA, I was asked to serve on a government commission in the 1930s and became acquainted with Eleanor Roosevelt. What a marvelous woman! She had the rare facility of giving her full, undivided attention to the person she was with and making everyone feel they were valuable and important."

IVA BLAKE: "I respect Billy Graham as a true man of God. No hint of scandal has ever touched him. Among the Presidents, I guess I like Eisenhower best. He was born in Texas, you know."

MAUDE MANAGHAN: "I was a great admirer of Jeanette Rankin [the first female member of Congress]. Not only did she stand for women's rights, she was also a staunch advocate of world peace. I thought she was a woman of unwavering integrity and superb intellect."

JAY HOOVER: "When I was a teenager, all we fellows wanted to be like Teddy Roosevelt. He was such a masculine, colorful character. I cast my first Presidential vote for his Bull Moose Party in 1912."

WHAT THEY LIKE AND DISLIKE ABOUT AMERICA TODAY

"I'm saddened by the stories of teen suicides and young people simply giving up on life. I wish everyone would realize it's never too late to turn your life around."

—Lila Hoover, 101

—Iva Blake, 100

"I can't get used to couples living together without the benefit of marriage. And there's too much emphasis on sex in movies, television and books. Sex is certainly important, but it's only one part of life."

—Jay Hoover, 100

"Educational opportunities have increased to the point where anyone can get as much education as he or she wants. I think that's fabulous."

—Maude Managhan, 100

Maude Managhan has led an active outdoor life as the wife of a rancher, mother of seven.

Others are freezing, yet curious as to why she's so warm!

COLD, ME? NEVER!

Some people love the cold and wind. Not us! We tried everything to stay warm—heavy coats, bulky sweaters, clunky thermal underwear, the works. We waddled around like penguins but we were still cold—or worse, sweating one minute and freezing the next.

Then a friend told us about Damart®Thermolactyl® and we haven't been cold since. Whether we're indoors or outside, this soft, lightweight underwear is a real miracle for us. We can now dress comfortably and be warm as toast!

Damart's secret is Thermolactyl, a knit that "climatizes" your body to stay cozy and comfortable. Thermolactyl retains and reflects natural body heat. It also wicks perspiration away. Thermolactyl keeps you warm and dry. (Tests at London's world-renowned Shirley Institute for textiles prove that Thermolactyl provides superior warmth retention.)

Now we're saving big money on heating bills too. Thanks to Damart we keep the thermostat way down without sacrificing comfort.

Damart is the best cold-weather wear there is! Whether it's for Mt. Everest climbing expeditions, the cold car or the chilly home, Damart Thermolactyl gives perfect warmth. Active outdoor people like gardeners, fishermen, golfers and those who work outside every day depend upon Damart underwear to enjoy comfortably dry warmth. The popular U.S. National Luge team chooses Damart as a key part of their official uniform. So do hundreds of professional athletes. You can bet these people demand appropriate warmth—and comfort!

Pep Talks Help Patients

Surgeon's cheery words can help heal too

Patients under anesthesia who are reassured in the operating room that their surgeries are progressing nicely are likely to experience faster and better recoveries than those who are not. Even though such patients are unconscious and have no post-surgical recollection of having heard the encouraging pep talks by their physicians or nurses or on recorded tapes, their recuperation goes well. Doctors theorize that the subliminal message of optimism somehow gets through and is reactivated during the recovery time.

In a recent issue of The Lancet, the British medical weekly, doctors at St. Thomas' Hospital in London report that women recovering from hysterectomies suffered relatively less pain, discomfort and nausea because of the cheery message played to them while under anesthesia.

Interesting Fact

Of some 1650 daily papers in the U.S., only seven are major metropolitan tabloids: New York's Daily News, Newsday and the Post; Chicago's Sun-Times; Denver's Rocky Mountain News; the Philadelphia Daily News and Boston Herald. Going tabloid usually cuts production costs, particularly of paper and ink.

The 10 Richest Women In the World

Who are the world's wealthiest women? Have you ever pondered that question? Many people have, which is why magazine editors, to satisfy the curiosity of their readers, periodically compile lists ranking the richest of the rich. They identify and enumerate the richest industrialists, the richest entertainers, the richest monarchs, the richest heirs, the richest of every nationality and occupation.

From the Sept. 12 issue of Fortune magazine, which has devoted many of its pages to the billionaires in this world, we've culled the tables for the world's 10 wealthiest females, many of whom inherited their affluence from their fathers or husbands or families. Herewith the top 10:

From the Reagan Joke File

"You know, I'm reminded of an old story... It's about those two fellows that were out hiking in the woods and suddenly looked up and saw a grizzly bear coming over the hill toward them. One of them immediately reached into his pack, pulled out a pair of sneakers, started removing his boots and putting on the sneakers. And the other one, standing there, said, 'You don't think you can outrun that grizzly, do you?' And the first one said, 'I don't have to. I just have to be able to outrun you.'"

THE GIBSON GIRL

BRIDE DOLL

♦

The most cherished dolls in all the world are bride dolls. For their romance, extraordinary richness and detail...and especially their beauty.

She is loveliness personified. In every way the ideal American beauty—the woman every girl wanted to be. Sculptured in fine bisque porcelain, her face is hand-painted...with romantic green eyes and a hint of a bride's blush in her cheeks.

"Breathtaking" is the only word for her wedding gown. Creamy satin and point d'esprit lace, accented with miniature roses and tiny faux pearls. Her veil of fine tulle cascades gracefully to the floor. And beneath her gown, a monogrammed slip—in the fashion of society brides of the day.

To showcase your imported Gibson Girl Bride, a display stand is included. And a Certificate of Authenticity. The price is $195. To receive your doll in time for Christmas, please order by November 15th.

PARADE SALUTES

The Police Officer Of The Year

BY PAM PROCTOR

A REAL-LIFE WESTERN drama—pitting a California police officer against a fierce gunman who was jamming a rifle against the head of a 17-year-old hostage—ended swiftly when a single round from the officer's .45 automatic felled the suspect and saved the youth.

For his action, Sgt. Richard Beckman, 41, of the Cloverdale Police Department, will be honored on Tuesday as the Police Officer of the Year by the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) and PARADE magazine. The award, which recognizes the exploits of the country's 475,000 police officers, will be presented during the IACP's annual convention in Portland, Ore.

It was Friday the 13th last May when Sergeant Beckman pulled into the Chevron station in Cloverdale to back up another officer, Ken Robinson. A state police bulletin had reported that a suspect, later identified as an ex-convict named Ernest J. Hansen Jr., had aimed a rifle at a motorist on Highway 101, about 90 miles north of San Francisco.

Beckman pulled into the station behind Robinson, whose squad car was blocking the gunman's vehicle. Robinson went to the passenger side and told the suspect to turn off the ignition.

As Robinson opened the door to reach for the keys, Hansen gunned the vehicle in reverse and crashed into a pickup truck—taking the officer, who was partly inside the car, with him. Then Hansen shifted, hit the gas again and lurched forward.

With Robinson hanging half in and half out, Hansen tried to maneuver around the squad cars but could not break free. Then he reached under his seat, pulled out a rifle and began shooting. Beckman returned the fire. Hansen was hit, but he continued to fire at the officers.

"I knew I was hitting him," recalled Beckman. "I just wanted to make this guy quit."

Then Hansen, wounded and bleeding, rolled out of his smashed-up, bullet-riddled car and ran to the rear of the service station, where David Emmel, the 17-year-old attendant, had holed up.

Hansen put his rifle barrel against the young man's head, and the two moved down an alleyway. Emmel said later that when he felt the rifle barrel, he thought, "I'm going to die, and that's it."

Beckman knew that the lot behind the station was enclosed by a 10-foot fence topped with barbed wire. The only way out was the alleyway, where he waited. Shortly, the officer saw Hansen and his hostage approaching.

Beckman waited at the edge of the building with his gun aimed.

Hansen kept coming, shoving his teenage hostage along. Beckman sensed that if he didn't act, Emmel might be killed and the bystanders who had gathered at the service station would be endangered.

Beckman—who has taught firearm skills to police officers for 15 years—waited until Hansen swung around in front of a red pickup parked in the alleyway. Beckman saw "about four or five inches of daylight" between the two, he said later. He fired and shot Hansen dead.

The hostage incident, from beginning to end, had taken just 30 seconds.

Tests later showed that Hansen was drunk. He had recently been paroled after serving more than two years in prison for stabbing a man to death.

"I don't believe it's heroic to take a life, but there wasn't any question what had to be done."

Commenting on the shooting, Cloverdale's acting police chief, Robert P. Dailey, declared, "It's something you don't want to do. I've been in this business almost 20 years and hope I never have to. But in a circumstance like this, when it comes down to an innocent life, the officer didn't make that decision. The suspect made that decision."

And Beckman himself said, "I'm glad David is alive, and I'm glad Ken Robinson is alive. I don't believe it's heroic to take a human life, but there wasn't any question what had to be done. I was relieved when the situation was over, and I felt that I'd done my job."

Like it or not, he said, "That's the business we're in. The public put that trust in us back before the Constitution was written. They wanted police, they wanted militia, to keep the peace. So they entrusted me, as a policeman, with that ultimate decision."

Mary Immel, the hostage's mother, had no doubt in her mind that Sergeant Beckman acted correctly.

"We are thankful for his skills," she said. "I understand that very few officers would have taken the shot that he took. The fact is, the right person is dead, and David's alive, and I'm grateful."

HONORABLE MENTION

Police Officer Norma Jean Amaral, Seekonk, Mass., P.D. Bystanders had backed away from the cab of a burning pickup truck, but Amaral smashed the windshield with her foot and a fire extinguisher and pulled the trapped driver to safety.

Officer Wayne Barton, Boca Raton, Fla., P.D. Barton drastically reduced drug sales, then initiated a neighborhood clean-up campaign and started summer and after-school programs for youths. It's no wonder that Barton is called the "Pied Piper of Boca Raton."

Trooper Robert A. Cieplensky, New Jersey State Police. Cieplensky intercepted a driver traveling on a stolen passport and transporting three large bombs. The man has been identified as a member of a terrorist group, the Japanese Red Army. Cieplensky, who grew suspicious of the man at a turnpike rest stop, pulled the suspect's car over and found the bombs. The man was indicted for transporting and receiving explosives with intent to kill individuals and destroy property.

Officer Donald D. Heitland, Minneapolis P.D. Last year, Officer Heitland saved a "jumper" by grabbing and holding him, dangling off a bridge over the Mississippi River, until help arrived. Two months later, Heitland shot and killed an armed suspect in a gun battle.

Detective Richard E. Kaufman, Nassau County, N.Y., P.D. Kaufman pulled an unconscious passenger through the rear window of a flaming car and was inside, trying to free the driver, when firemen arrived. Both victims are recovering. Kaufman asked that his photo not be used.

Officer Susan A. LaGray, Charlotte, N.C., P.D. Awakened by screams, LaGray saw a man stabbing a woman. The man escaped by car, but not before LaGray called in his license number and radioed for help for the victim. The suspect was arrested, and the victim is alive today.

Deputy Sheriff Alfred MacKrille, San Diego County Sheriff's Department. MacKrille faced machine-gun fire as he pursued a suspect in a wild California highway car chase. Eventually cornered in a parking lot, the man fled into a store, where he later surrendered.

Detective Frank A. Perez, Dallas P.D. Working undercover, Perez helped bring in 186 suspects on major drug charges. He is responsible for the seizure of more than $3 million in drugs. He asked that his photo not be used.

Assistant Chief Kenneth W. Swindle, Tuscaloosa, Ala., P.D. As two gunmen held 109 students and teachers hostage at a grade school, Swindle negotiated for hours in the rain until they gave up. Charges were dropped against one gunman, who was found to have been coerced.

Resident Agent in Charge Larry K. Thomason, U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Thomason saved the life of a fellow agent in a Tucson alley by shooting to death a fugitive who was holding a gun to the agent's head.

A MEMORIAL FOR THOSE WHO DIE ON DUTY

GROUND IS TO BE BROKEN next spring for the National Law Enforcement Officers' Memorial in Washington, D.C., a few blocks from the Capitol.

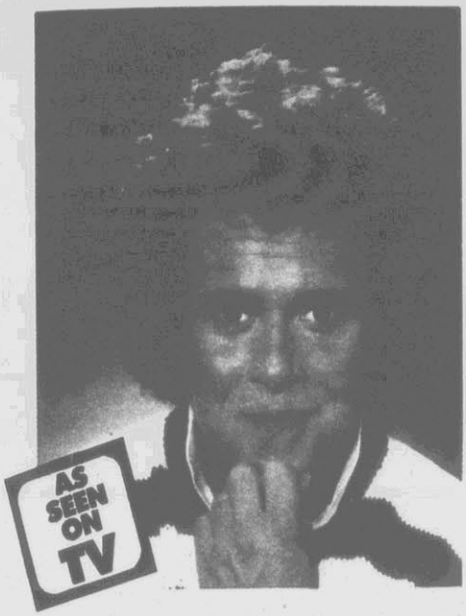

The memorial will honor law officers who have died in the line of duty and will recognize those now serving. It will include a circular "pathway of names," enclosed by a ring of flowering trees. The federal government has donated a 4.5-acre site.

"One police officer dies every 57 hours," said Craig Floyd, executive director of the Memorial Fund. "Our police men and women have been risking their lives for more than 200 years. We think they need our support."

Gayle Beckman, wife of PARADE's Police Officer of the Year, speaks of the memorial in more personal terms: "You know your husband is a police officer. You know that things are going to happen. But when danger comes close, it makes you aware that each time he walks out that door, it could be the last."

The $5 million cost of the memorial is being raised entirely from private sources. So far, $1.5 million has been contributed.

Tax-deductible donations can be sent to the National Law Enforcement Officers' Memorial Fund, Dept. P, 1360 Beverly Road, McLean, Va. 22101.

Lost 44 lbs.

Lost 165 lbs.

Lost 110 lbs.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS

1. Food Groups are divided into 6 colors of cards:

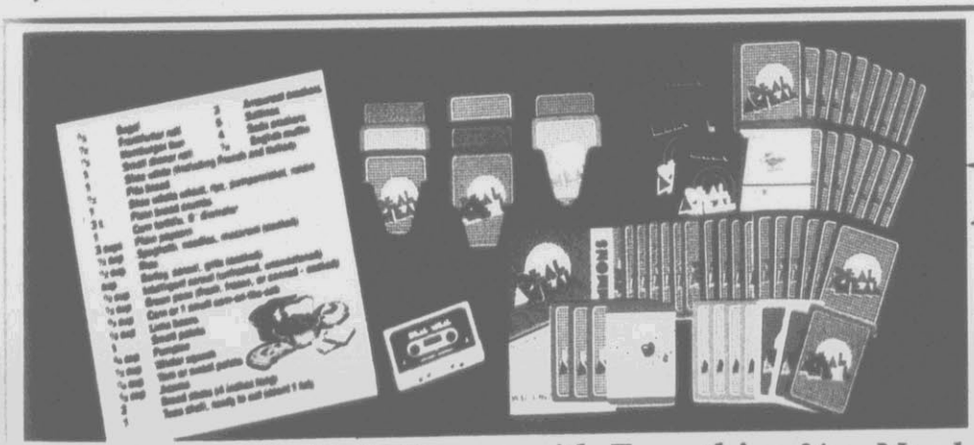

Meats are Red, Breads-Brown, Vegetables-Green, Fats-Yellow, Dairy-White, Fruits-Pink. The back of each card lists the food equivalents that card is worth. For example, one bread (brown) card is worth a slice of bread, a dinner roll, half a bagel, half a bun, a half cup of pasta, a tortilla, etc.

2. You start each day with a set number of cards of each color.

For example, if you want to lose 40 pounds or more, you start off each day with 6 Red cards, 6 Brown, 2 White, 4 Green, 4 Pink, 5 Yellow.

3. Whenever you eat a meal or a snack, you "play" the appropriate cards.

Anytime you eat, whether a snack, or a complete meal, you simply take the appropriate cards out of the left side of your "Deal-A-Meal Wallet," and place them into a "meal" pocket on the right side of the wallet. When you run out of cards, you're done eating for the day. You've eaten the appropriate number of calories in a nutritionally balanced combination.

ANTI-WRINKLE STRATEGY

HOW MANY STEPS DOES IT TAKE TO STOP NEEDLESS AGING?

The evidence is overwhelming that even minimal sunlight ages your skin faster than birthdays. And it's no secret that daily moisture loss makes every little line more visible.

That's why skin specialists say: "Use a good moisturizer and an SPF 15 sunblock every day of the year." But... two layers? Won't they irritate? Clog your pores? And if you do wear a total sunblock all year round, won't you end up pale as a ghost?

You'll be happy to know that a leading skin care company asked the same questions, and developed one product with all the right answers: Neutrogena Moisture* SPF 15 Formula with a sheer tint.

First it's an effective daily moisturizer, guarding your skin against moisture loss and helping to "plump up" dry lines. But it's also a PABA-free SPF 15 sunblock.* So it stops needless aging without irritating even sensitive skin. Then to chase away the pales, it's tinted with a sheer, sheer hint of healthy color. Very subtle, perfectly natural alone or under makeup.

More good news: Neutrogena Moisture SPF 15 Formula is hypo-allergenic and non-comedogenic, so it won't clog your pores. And it feels as fresh and light as moisture itself.

Thank you for reading our advertisement.

Now you can fight wrinkles in one safe step. Without PABA. Without irritation. And without looking "sunblock pale," even when you're not wearing a bit of makeup.

Pizza Romance

Remember these names: Julia Roberts, Annabeth Gish and Lili Taylor. All three are super-talented young actresses who star in Mystic Pizza, a film about working-class women shortly after their high school graduation who work at the local pizza parlor and, of course, fall in love. The movie—warmhearted and full of spirit, like its heroines—is especially delightful because it defies traditional expectations about how they would respond to romance and life. Goldwyn.

Executive producer Lee Mendelson says they've tried so hard to be accurate, they "even made sure there were actually one or two dogs and a couple of birds on the Mayflower in 1620 before letting Woodstock and Snoopy on board." GUIDE TO

Better Fitness

BY MICHAEL O'SHEA, PH.D.

Q Is it good to exercise with a cold? I have been told that you can beat a cold with a good, hard workout. Is this true?

A A cold affects the body in a number of ways that can interfere with your normal exercise routine. When you have a cold, your respiratory system is often irritated—breathing becomes more difficult and less air is taken in with each breath. During vigorous exercise, getting enough air requires increased effort, which can quickly cause fatigue and discomfort.

A fever may also accompany a cold. When you have a fever, your internal heating/cooling system—which regulates body temperature—may be impaired, and the sweating mechanism that normally cools the body may malfunction, increasing the risk of heat exhaustion.

When you have a cold, it's best to rest and drink plenty of fluids. The exercise time you lose can quickly be recovered once the cold is gone.

Q I've heard that cellulite is a different type of fat that needs special treatment—such as massage, diet and specific exercises—to lose. True?

A Although many people maintain that cellulite is a special type of fat, they are wrong. Cellulite is fat—nothing more. The dimpling, or "cottage cheese" look, is caused by fat deposits pushing up between the tiny ligaments that run from the skin's surface, through the fat layer, to the muscles underneath. The common sites for these fat deposits are the hips, triceps (back of the arms), buttocks and thigh areas. Cellulite is more prevalent in women. Eliminating it requires exercise and proper dieting—not a special regimen. It is not possible to massage or exercise a specific area in order to "move," "break-up" or "burn" that fatty area. Unfortunately, to some extent, cellulite is hereditary and may be difficult to lose.

Over 40 & Getting Younger

After the baby comes a time to tend again to your own well-being

BY ELIZABETH GAYNOR

No woman with a family needs to be told that a first child will alter her life. In my case, our much-wanted first baby, Sam, arrived a year ago. My husband and I are in our 40s. For most, the 40s are typically a time for voicing midlife questions. For us, this crisis has been postponed for the moment by necessity, and it is a time largely devoted to listening to Sam voicing his needs.

But this isn't all about the baby. It's also about me. That's the whole point. Whether you are a new mother, an experienced parent or any woman versed in more than a few years of keeping home, marriage and career intact—or any combination thereof—there comes a time to turn attention back to your own well-being. And how you look really influences how you feel.

I'm in the position to write my own prescription for a postpartum/midlife beauty pep-up. As a PARADE editor, I've overseen lots of beauty how-tos. But now, how to make it work for me? Here's what happened and what I learned.

PROBLEMS

- Face: After months of multiple night feedings and learning many new skills, my weariness began to show in my eyes and skin.
- Hair: I hadn't objected to the graying of my hair the last few years because of the way it grew around a natural wave near my part. But having the baby left me with much less volume—limp tresses where I used to have curl. My hair needed new life, a cut to get it to spring back again. And while I was at it, I decided to go for some color and camouflage the gray.

SOLUTIONS

• Face: I was treated to a complete makeup job—not the kind I'll put on every day, but a look to aim toward when I have the time. First, dabs of concealer were patted on the creases that run on the diagonal down from the inner corners of the eyes—not around underneath, which would just highlight the puffy under-eye area. Foundation was chosen in a shade close to skin color.

The eyes were played up to enhance their almond shape (I'd always thought they were too small, too narrow). Shadows were used to bring out their green color, not to match them. Ginger-brown lids deepened to plum (complementary to green irises) at the eyes' outer corners.

A pink/rose blush was brushed on lightly along the arcs of the cheeks. Hot-pink lipstick brightened the mouth in tones that tied in with the dress I was wearing.

• Hair: A vegetable-color bath in tones of woodsy red and gold was applied, more vibrant in front to transform what had been gray into highlights. I voted for non-permanent color, which will fade with shampoos, rather than have a growth line that needs touching-up.

A razor cut left some length in my hair but buoyed up the ends into fuller layers, took the bulk from the wrong places and released the curl pattern. Tapering gave the ends width.

EYES: Enhanced by shadow—pink under brow, at inner corner; plum at outer edge. HAIR: Made shapely by razor cut.

WHAT I LEARNED (AND YOU CAN USE TOO)

• Cut hair more often after pregnancy to restore fullness. Sacrifice length to bring out new growth.

• Expert color treatment can be kind to hair, give a healthy glow. Consult with a professional about first-time hair coloring. There's skill in choosing—as well as applying—a shade to complement your eyes, skin and base hair color.

• Covering gray hair is not the same for everyone. Some hair is more porous and absorbs color easily; some is slippery, and color slides off.

• Mix concealer colors to get a good skin match. The wrong shade and/or covering too much under-eye area will give you "raccoon" eyes.

• Use an eye pencil with a near-match shadow over; this softens the liner and keeps the shadow from flaking close to the lashes.

• Blush should be dusted on no farther across than the edge of the iris or lower than the nose—or it will pull the face down, fight with eye makeup.

• A good blush to suit most complexions is a pink-peach tone.

• Pat on face powder before using powdered blush, to keep the blush from streaking.

• Lip pencil to match lipstick or in a neutral tone gives a good guideline, keeps lips from bleeding.

Health precautions are adding up to more time, work and expense for dentists–and maybe for you

YOUR NEXT TRIP TO THE DENTIST COULD SURPRISE YOU

Thomas Wolf

Dr. Judith Penski, a dentist in Washington, D.C., wears surgical gloves and a face mask while treating patients. Dentists around the country are using new equipment and sterilization procedures to protect patients—and themselves—from hepatitis B and AIDS. The cost of these changes, say some, will be passed on to the patient.

IF YOU HAVEN'T HAD A CHECKUP for a while, you may not be sure you're in the right place next time you visit the dentist. The friendly people who've been filling your cavities and cleaning your teeth for years may look as though they're in a hospital operating room.

Consider this scenario: Before you even sit down, the chair, instrument tray, sink and all work surfaces in the office have been scrubbed with strong disinfectant. You may hardly recognize your dentist and nurse, since both are wearing face masks, rubber gloves and plastic eye shields. The handles of the light that is aimed at your mouth and the head of the X-ray machine are covered with aluminum foil or plastic wrap. During treatment, all the drills, picks, scrapers and other instruments used on your teeth are taken from sealed plastic bags, in which they were sterilized. As you leave, you notice that everything the dentist or nurse used or wore while treating you is either thrown into a special puncture-proof container or a bag for sterilization.

All these changes are gradually being adopted by dentists around the country, adding up to a lot of extra time, work and expense. Though the risk of catching anything serious in a dentist's chair is low, Uncle Sam is putting pressure on dentists to take expensive precautions against the spread of hepatitis B and AIDS.

"It now takes seven or eight minutes to change patients," says Dr. Francis Cincotta, a Manhattan dentist. "It used to be a minute or two, but now we're completely washing down each chair, the lights, countertops and tray."

The precautions were ordered by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) last fall, in cooperation with the U.S. Public Health Service, after prodding by health-care worker unions. In addition to its own standards, OSHA is recommending the guidelines of the Centers for Disease Control.

Any dentist not taking these precautions is subject to penalties. Besides its own inspectors, OSHA acts on tips from whistleblowers—nurses, receptionists and even patients—who think a dentist isn't following the rules. The most recent survey shows that about 80 percent of the nation's dentists are now wearing rubber gloves, compared with only 15 percent two years ago.

The danger of catching a disease at the dentist's office was discovered in 1974, when it turned out that a healthy-looking 46-year-old Pennsylvania dentist specializing in extractions had infected 55 patients with hepatitis B over a three-year period. Eight other local outbreaks of hepatitis B have been traced to dentists since then. Only one dentist has contracted AIDS, but that caused a number of foot-dragging dentists to take OSHA's regulations seriously.

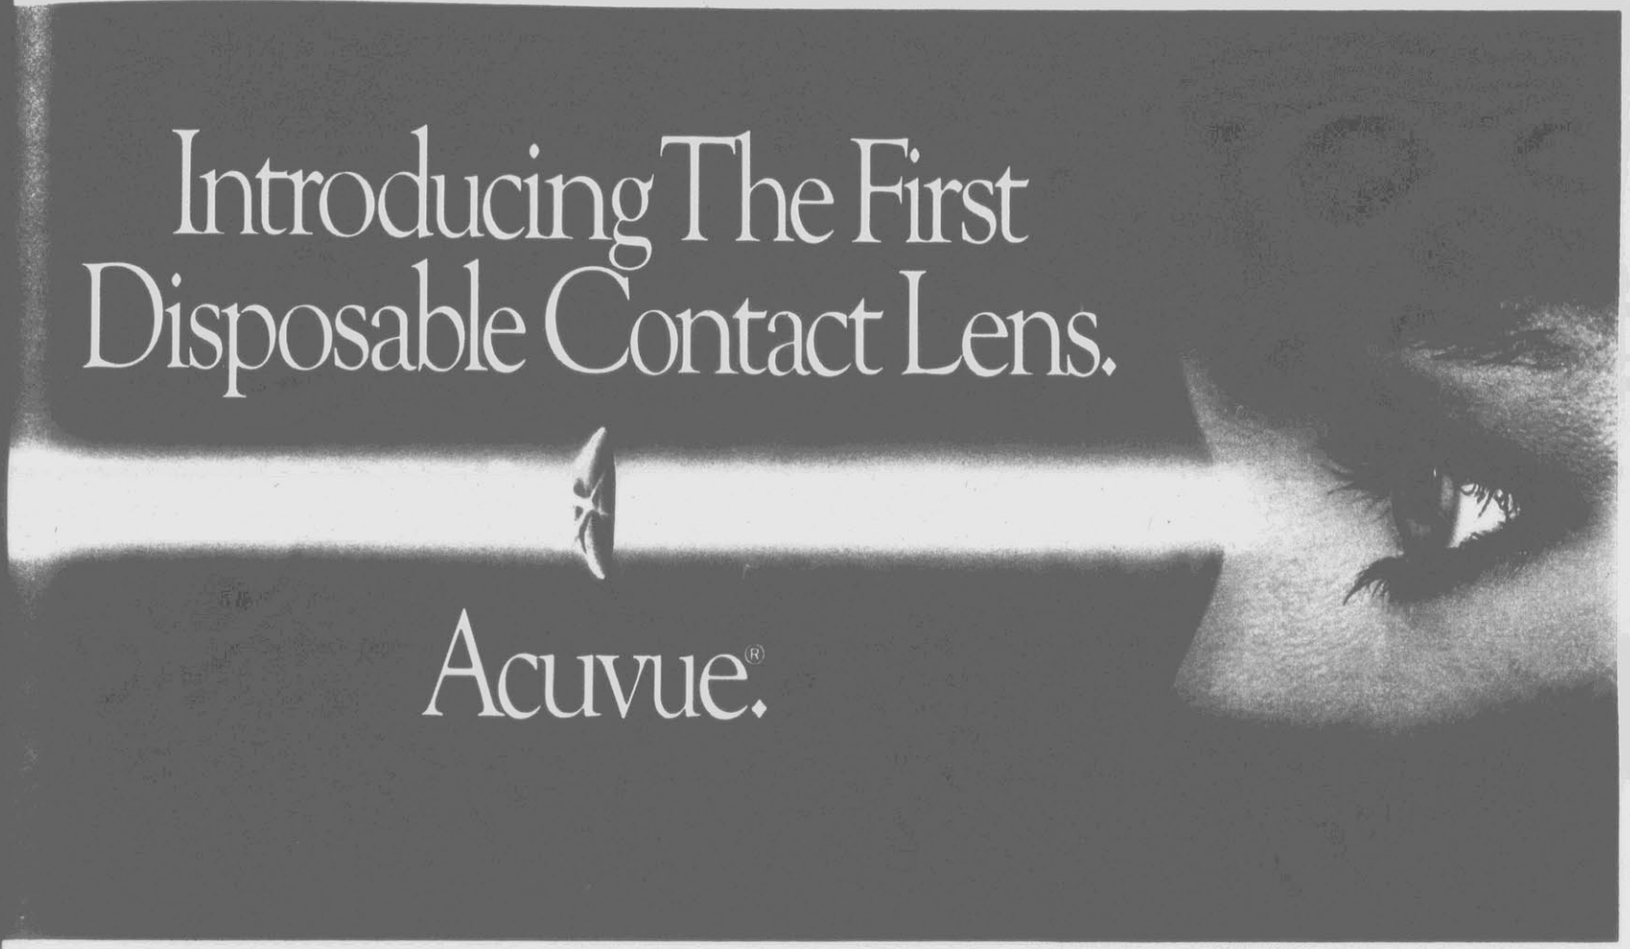

There's no question, however, that the procedures are costly. For example, to cover the time it takes to sterilize instruments, several sets are needed. One Oregon orthodontist says he spent $10,000 last year just on new pliers. Most drills will not stand up under constant sterilization, so they must be replaced with new ones at $600 to $900 apiece. Some dentists are hiring special nurses just to do the cleaning and sterilization. And because of the short supply, glove prices have doubled in some areas.

It makes sense that dentists eventually will pass these costs on to their patients. But right now not all dentists have adopted the OSHA recommendations to the same extent, and insurance companies will not pay bills that exceed the average charged patients in the same geographical area—what the companies call "reasonable and customary" bills. It's going to take some time before many dentists tack the added costs onto their bills. And when they do, according to the Health Insurance Association of America, there will be a time lag between the fatter bills and the hikes in insurance coverage. Here are some things you can do in the meantime to keep dental costs down:

- Look into a prepaid dental plan. For a yearly charge—often less than $200 per family—these plans offer free or low-priced cleanings and checkups and 25 percent to 50 percent discounts on all other work done by dentists who are members of the plan.
- If you belong to a Health Maintenance Organization, consider paying an added premium for dental care if it's available. HMOs cover medical costs of members for a fixed annual fee paid in advance.
- If there's a college nearby with a school of dentistry, you should be able to get good work done by students at half the normal fee. Caution: Student dentists are very careful but tend to work slowly.
- Comparison shop. Dentistry is very price-competitive, and you probably can find a dentist who charges less than your own. Also check out the many forms of group dentistry: While you probably can't choose which dentist you'll get, a dental clinic is likely to be as safe as a private dentist and most certainly less expensive.

They call themselves "Dineh"—the people. They thrived in an arid Southwestern land, tending their flocks, farming, and hunting in the Arizona sunshine. And for more than 500 years, the Navajo Indians have looked to their youth for a bright future.

And now America's celebrated painter of Southwestern Indian tribes, Ray Swanson, presents his first-ever collector plate, "Navajo Little One." As a lasting tribute to the future of this proud nation, Swanson portrays the poise and grace of a Navajo child standing against a backdrop of blue sky and brown earth mounds.

This deeply moving portrait premieres a collection of eight porcelain plates, each capturing the pride and spirit of a Navajo child. Limited to a total of 14 firing days, each plate will be hand-numbered and accompanied by a same-numbered Certificate of Authenticity.

Valerie Bertinelli

I GUESS WE REMEMBER HER AS THE cute kid in One Day at a Time. But Valerie Bertinelli has grown up. When I talked with her recently, she was in Irving, Tex., with her husband, rock musician Eddie Van Halen, making a TV movie and talking about heat and horses and stunt-flying.

"It's hot, it's sooo hot," she said. "I've never been exposed to heat like this. And in the movie I'm wearing woolen jodhpurs and leather flying jackets and leather helmets. I've been doing a lot of flying, in an old plane, doing loops and stalls and everything." To be sure, there's a seasoned pilot at the controls. But she does do her own riding. "I hadn't ridden for years," she told me, "but now I go riding every weekend. Now I'm out for speed. The other day, I got the horse up to 25 to 30 miles an hour. They were timing me from the pickup truck."

Valerie's movie is for CBS, a three-hour affair to be aired Oct. 25. It's all about a fascinating young woman called Pancho Barnes, a 1930s-era debutante who defied her family to become a stunt pilot and later trained young American flyers prepping for World War II. It's a true story, featuring such historical figures as Howard Hughes, Chuck Yeager and Gen. George Patton. "Pancho Barnes is the best thing I've ever done," says Valerie. "And I know that, years from now, I'll still feel that way."

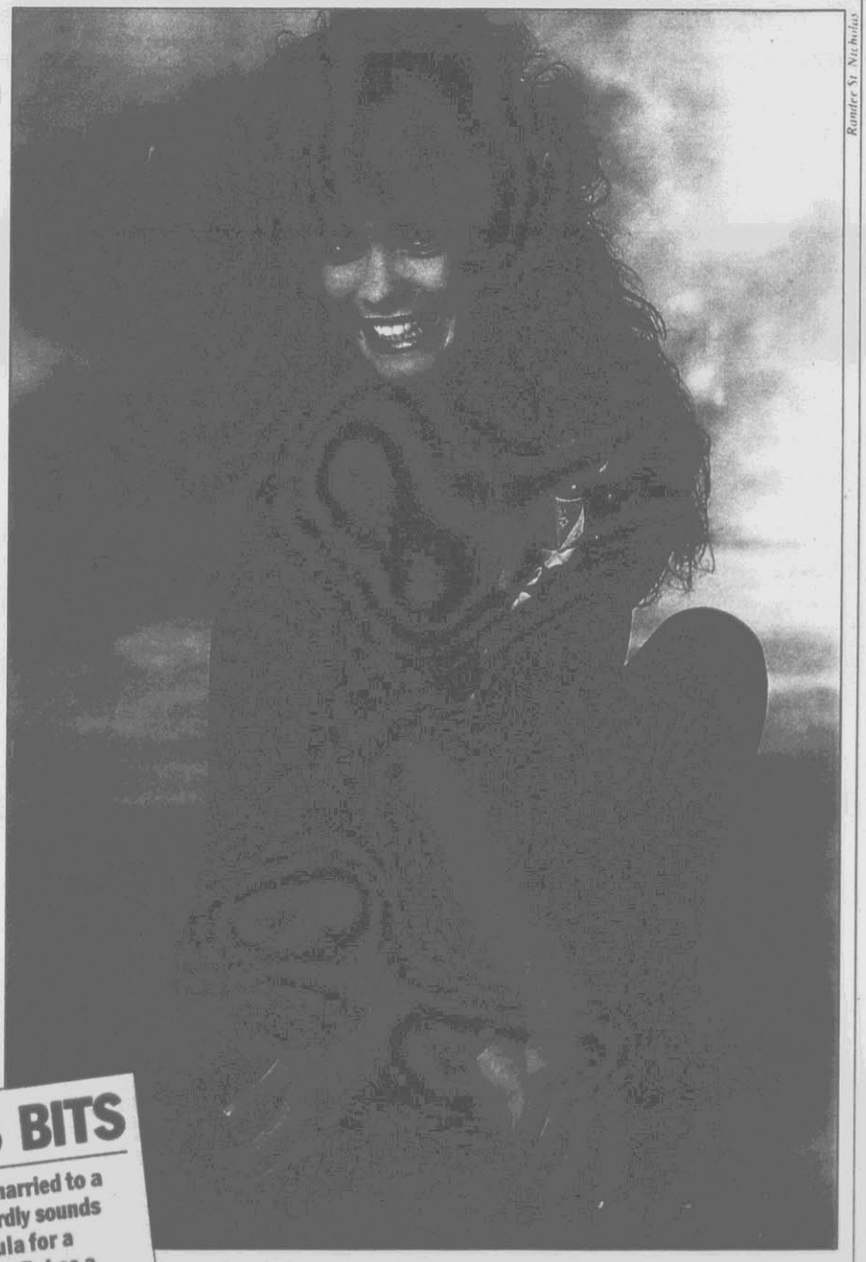

She and Eddie live in the Los Angeles area (they were wed in 1981). She goes along on many of his concert tours, and he flies in on weekends to be with her on location. "He isn't here Monday to Thursday," she said, "because it's not a hell of a lot of fun just sitting around. But he comes in Friday and watches me work, and then we have the weekend." The filming is being done out in the boondocks—"jigger country," as Valerie calls it. "I spray myself every morning [with an insect repellant]," she said. "Right now, that's my perfume."

The last time I'd seen Valerie was when she was making the miniseries I'll Take Manhattan in New York. "Two years later, I'm not all that crazy about it," she said. "I was in a different state of mind, and I was a lot heavier. I don't tend to be enthusiastic about things I've done in the past. Pancho is going to be different."

Valerie's big breakthrough came when she was 15, on One Day at a Time, and it was on that show that she grew up. Six years later, in 1981, she formed her own production company, and Valerie has never stopped working. She's not in frequent contact with the old cast of One Day, but she said she'd heard from Mackenzie Phillips when Phillips had her baby. Valerie's next project, a new TV series, will be on CBS. That is, if she likes the script.

"What's it about?" I asked. "I dunno," said Valerie. "The writers' strike held it up, so I won't know till I see it."

All grown up now, Valerie Bertinelli returns to TV on Oct. 25 as the stunt pilot Pancho Barnes. She says it's the role of her career.

BRADY'S BITS

Being a TV actress married to a famous rock star hardly sounds like the ideal formula for a successful marriage. But as a friend said, "Listen, give her the credit. She's an old-fashioned girl who knows how to keep a home, and apparently it really works between them." Where did she meet Van Halen? Where do you think? Backstage, at one of his concerts. Sometimes it pays to be a groupie.

Cover Story....

'This Is America, Charlie Brown!'

By Robert DiMatteo

Cartoons, crime and baseball — how's that for an all-American line-up? This week, viewers can expect a quartet of diverse offerings: "This Is America, Charlie Brown!" the first animated miniseries; "Glitz," a TV movie starring Jimmy Smits, based on an Elmore Leonard novel; and the World Series.

* "This Is America, Charlie Brown!" attempts to turn history into fanciful family entertainment. The ambitious project by "Peanuts" creator Charles M. Schulz, executive producer Lee Mendelson and producer Bill Melendez will air in eight half-hour segments, the first four of which can be seen Fridays, beginning Oct. 21. Taking key moments in the American past — "The Voyage of the Mayflower," "The Birth of the Constitution" and "The Wright Brothers' Flight" — Schulz, Mendelson and Melendez have devised a story line that drops Charlie Brown, Lucy and the other beloved Schulz characters into the middle of historical events. The time-jumping scheme includes a trip to the future, too, in an episode where Linus dreams that his friends have been chosen for the crew of the first manned space station in the 1990s.

The concept of this miniseries is appealing. With its possibilities for varied period settings, it's also visually ripe for animation. Take the first episode about that arduous, heroic Mayflower voyage where we get to see Lucy in Puritan garb, bossy as ever. High above in the crow's nest perch Snoopy and Woodstock. This is fun. But hold on. The early settler days were fraught with danger, hardship and death, so the "Peanuts" whimsy has to be squared with woeful reality. Schulz's gift for combining both culminates in a touching, imagined version of the first Thanksgiving celebration in the New Land.

* "Glitz" (NBC, Oct. 21) is a moderately entertaining thriller. Jimmy Smits, an Emmy nominee for "L.A. Law," brings his bedroom eyes and smoldering manner to the role of Vincent Mora, a Miami-based cop who falls for a call girl while recuperating from a gunshot wound in Puerto Rico. Quickly, the shady young lady turns up dead in Atlantic City, and Mora heads to the tawdry resort town to sniff out the mystery. Once there, he realizes that he is the target of a murderous ex-con (John Diehl of "Miami Vice"). Meanwhile, he's having breakfast in bed with Linda Moon, a local singer and the dead prostitute's ex-roommate, played by "Night Court" 's Markie Post. With its Puerto Rico-Miami-Atlantic City axis, "Glitz" is filled with shootouts in the sun and it plays like an extended episode of "Miami Vice."

* A limited-run fall TV production chock full of breath-taking camera work, drama, suspense, and yes, even occasional humor, airs this week. It's baseball's World Series (NBC, Oct. 16, 18, 19; 20 and 22, if necessary), the culmination of a hard-fought six-month season. And even people who don't know a knuckleball from a slider still want to tune in to the games. Once again, NBC's veteran broadcast team of Vin Scully and Joe Garagiola will be in the broadcast booth. After delighting in the incisive analysis of ABC's Tim McCarver during the recent League Championship Series, one may find it difficult listening to the affable, but predictable Garagiola. Thankfully, a solution is available: all you have to do is turn down the sound and let the action speak for itself.

Home Fires Burning

"Home Fires Burning," a "Hallmark Hall of Fame" presentation starring Barnard Hughes and Sada Thompson, will air on CBS. Set in a small southern town during World War II, Hughes portrays theeditor of the local paper, and Thompson plays his wife. The TV movie explores the changes wrought by the war.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: Although I thought Stephen Collins was good in the series "Tales of the Gold Monkey," I have never seen him in any other series. What can you tell me about him? — MARY BAILEY, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

Credit actress Blythe Danner, and some well-placed nepotism for bringing Stephen Collins back to series television. Danner's husband Bruce Paltrow is the co-creator and co-executive producer of the new NBC series, "Tattinger's," which stars Collins and Danner. Danner, who has appeared with Collins in the miniseries "Inside the Third Reich," and the theater production of "The NewYork Idea," insisted he would be perfect for the role of restaurateur Nick Tattinger. Paltrow was initially hesistant, thinking Collins might not have the right qualities, but he changed his mind.

Since the cancellation of his 1982-83 series "Tales of the Gold Monkey," Collins has been keeping busy. He has appeared in the miniseries "The Two Mrs. Grenvilles" (which earned him an Emmy nomination), "Inside the Third Reich," "Chiefs" and "Hold the Dream." Movie buffs may remember him from his roles in "Jumpin' Jack Flash" (1986) and "Choke Canyon" (1986). His career credits also include Broadway, off-Broadway and various other theater productions. This past summer, he made his first stab as a playwright when his "Super Sunday" was produced and performed at the Williamstown (Mass.) Theater Festival. Collins is married to actress Faye Grant ("V"), and they reside in Manhattan.

Dear Michele: What is the origin of the surname, and what, if any, is the relationship between Olivia D'Abo ("Conan the Destroyer") and Maryam d'Abo ("The Living Daylights")? — DAVID MARTIN, THREE OAKS, MICH.

Bond's recent femme fatale Maryam d'Abo and Olivia D'Abo, who's now seen on ABC's "The Wonder Years," are cousins. Maryam is the daughter of a Dutch-English father, which accounts for the surname. Her mother is a Georgian Russian. Maryam appeared in the NBC miniseries "Something Is Out There" and will co-star in the series version, which debuts next month.

Dear Michele: Please tell me who played the mother on "Make Room for Daddy" with Danny Thomas. — LORRAINE MORANO, NEW BRITAIN, PENN.

"Make Room for Daddy" premiered on Sept. 29, 1953, with Danny Thomas starring as Danny Williams, and Jean Hagen playing his wife, Margaret. Hagen stayed with the series for three seasonsbefore she quit. Thomas opted not to replace Hagen, and had her written out as having died. That same year, the series changed its name to "The Danny Thomas Show." In 1957, Marjorie Lord becamea regular cast member as Thomas' new wife, Kathy "Clancey" Williams.

Following her exit from the series, Hagen appeared sporadically in TV dramas. In the '60s, illness confined her to a nursing home where she spent her remaining years. She died on August 29, 1977, at the age of 54. As for Marjorie Lord, she is now better known as the mother of "Fatal Attraction" star Anne Archer.

Dear Michele: After viewing a rerun of the miniseries "Dress Gray," I wondered where the scenes of the military academy were shot. — JEAN POLHLOPEK, FARLINGTON, KANS.

Due to the volatile subject matter of this 1986 NBC miniseries, the United States Military Academy would not give the producers permission for on-location filming. The miniseries was shot at the New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell, N.M.

Dear Michele: We recently saw "The Manchurian Candidate," and were impressed with James Gregory's performance as Sen. John Iselin. Is this the same actor who played Barney's rather strange superior on"Barney Miller"? — CAROLYN MAIZE, ADAMSTOWN, MD.

Yes, it is the same actor! A native New Yorker, Gregory gave up a lucrative career on Wall Street to become an actor. He made his film debut in "The Naked City" (1948), and his other movie credits include "PT 109" (1963), "Murderer's Row" (1966) and "The Main Event" (1979). In addition to his role as Inspector Luger (1975-82) on "Barney Miller," Gregory has had series starring roles in "The Lawless Years" (1959-61), "The Paul Lynde Show" (1972-73) and "Detective School" (1979).

DICKIE ROOK
Before You Tie One On...

A tie is an essential accessory to a man's wardrobe. And with quality ties costing $25.00 and more, getting a long life from your tie is very important. Most ties are cut on the bias of the fabric, or against the grain. This makes them susceptible to distortion from pulling and stretching. To prevent distortion, knot the tie gently and always remove the knot when you take off the tie. Store your ties hanging straight.
If you spill something on a tie, blot it gently. Never rub a stain as this may cause chafing of the fibers especially in silk ties. Bring your tie to us, your IFI member professional drycleaner as soon as your tie is soiled. This can help the tie last longer and look better. Don't allow your tie to become heavily soiled before cleaning.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

If you thought Susan Lucci's Erica Kane on "All My Children" was a tough lady, tune in Oct. 16 to "Lady Mobster," in which Lucci claws her way to the top of organized crime! In the ABC movie, however, Lucci doesn't wield a machine gun or order cement shoes for her foes. She plays a mob lawyer who uses her legal skills to help her adoptive father, a Mafia don, get out of the business. "Just reading the script I found myself rooting for her," says Lucci. "It's not an easy story of black and white, and I think that's good. As a little girl she witnessed the murder of her parents, and now she wants to help the man who adopted her go straight."

When Lucci first stepped out of "All My Children," she was careful to play good women to avoid typecasting. But now after more positive roles ("Anastasia," "Mafia Princess"), she feels she's developed enough range to play bad girls whenever she wants to. "I look for range within each part and within my career," she says. "I'm not trying to make big differentiations between Erica and other characters."

Scott Valentine may play Brooklyn-accented, leather-jacketed Nick Moore on "Family Ties," but off-screen the actor says he's just a sensitive guy. "Everybody has this tough shell, but underneath everybody wants to love, to be held and hugged," he says. "I'm very much that way." This season, Valentine says he would like to show Nick's softer side. "It's a stretch to play Nick. People think I'm him, but I'm not," says the actor, who studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Too many producers and casting directors also think Valentine is Nick. During the summer, while Valentine planned his post-"Family Ties" career, he was inundated with TV and film scripts to play Nick clones. "I turned down three of them. One was an irresponsible artist, very Nick-ish. Another was a Brooklyn fellow who was white-collar, but he still had a Brooklyn accent. And this thirdguy was punked-out in leather. As much as I like the macho stuff, I still like to show my sensitive side, too."

One person who will definitely be watching the miniseries "Jack the Ripper" (CBS, Oct. 21, 23) is Jane Seymour. It's not just because she plays the girlfriend of a Scotland Yard inspector (Michael Caine). It's because the miniseries' producers have concocted a Geraldo Rivera-like scheme to keep viewers riveted. In the final moments of the production, the true identity of the London serial-murderer will finally be revealed. "It's supposedly the true story of what happened," says Seymour. "They have recently discovered documentation that none of us has seen. They believe they know the identity of the Ripper, but none of us know it." The producers filmed four different endings to keep cast and crew in the dark, and the correct ending will be added just before airtime.

Soap Scoop

By Connie Passalacqua

Doing good works may be as long gone as the '60s to most '80s people, but eternally energetic Ilene Kristen (who plays Delia Ryan on "Ryan's Hope") is still very much the social activist. Kristen has spent the bulk of her off-time during the past year working with the children of one of New York City's most notorious welfare hotels, the Prince George. She has set up singing, acting and dance classes there, hoping to show the kids that there are ways out of the endless cycle of poverty and hopelessness.

Kristen's main protege has been a 12-year-old named Antoine Robinson, who turned out to be so talented that she helped him secure a scholarship to the Lee Strasberg Institute. Now, Robinson will be coming onto "Ryan's Hope" in a recurring role as Antoine, a homeless boy who is befriended by Frank Ryan (played by John Sanderford) after Frank presents Antoine and his homeless friends with an award for chasing away drug dealers.

Kristen's charity work may surprise some people, since the frenetic actress has been portrayed as ditsy in the soap press. But her intense dedication is most serious – and sincere.

• This fall, three familiar daytime faces are being added to nighttime soaps. Kristian Alfonso, who played Hope Williams Brady on "Days of Our Lives," is joining "Falcon Crest" as Pilar Ortega, a bank executive. Do we smell yet another new romance for tempestuous Lance Cumson (played by Lorenzo Lamas)?

David Beecroft, who used to play Trent Chapin on "One Life to Live," joins "Falcon Crest" as Nick Agretti, an intellectual relative of Melissa (played by Ana Alicia, formerly of "Ryan's Hope"). Beecroft is the boyfriend of Robin Strasser, who used to play Dorian Lord on "OLTL." He met her when they both were on that soap.

Robert Desiderio, who played Steve Piermont on "OLTL," is joining "Knots Landing" as man orchestrating the return to public life of sleazy, Greg Sumner (played by William Devane). Desiderio, a fine actor who was overlooked two seasons ago when his ABC series "Heart of the City" flopped, is married to Judith Light ("Who's the Boss?"), who once played Karen Wolek on "OLTL."

Sports Roundup

SUNDAY, OCT. 16

NFL Football (CBS, NBC)

Week 7, and CBS has the doubleheader. The trend to more defense seems to be continuing in the NFL. We tracked the league's games two seasons ago and noted a downward slippage in average points per game of some three or four seasons' duration. Last year's scab games skewed these statistics somewhat, but this year the trend continued through the first three weeks of the season with an average of 18 points per game. It's been tough on guys who like to bet the over.

Baseball (NBC)

World Series, Game 2, from the National League city. Six-time World Series participant Pete Rose agrees with those who say that the playoffs have taken the edge off the Series. "I think it has," he says. "I always thought, and still do, the only pressure in baseball is in the playoffs. Especially when the playoffs were five games. Because you're playing in front of people you've played in front of all year, against guys you've played against all year.

"If you're gonna get to a World Series, the ultimate thing is to win it," he continues. "But you don't have the same mental ferocity in the World Series that you do in the playoffs. You're not as uptight. You always have fun at the World Series, unless you're just humiliated by losing four in a row. The World Series is for the press and national TV. The playoffs, man, it's two teams in the same league battling trying to win that thing. The playoffs are rough."

MONDAY, OCT. 17

NFL Football (ABC)

Buffalo Bills at New York Jets. Even before his Browns were demolished by the Jets in Week 2, Marty Schottenheimer spoke highly of them: "Each of their offensive weapons is a big-time game-breaker," he says. "Al Toon is one of the two or three best receivers in the league. (Freeman) McNeil and (Mickey) Shuler are Pro Bowl players and so is Ken O'Brien. Add a wideout like Wesley Walker and a young, talented back like Roger Vick and you see that we'll be challenged." They were more than challenged — they were stomped. But the Bills are tougher on defense than the Browns.

TUESDAY, OCT. 18

Baseball (NBC)

World Series Game 3, from the American League city.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 19

Baseball (NBC)

World Series Game 4, from the American League city.

THURSDAY, OCT. 20

Baseball (NBC)

World Series Game 5, if necessary, from the American League city.

SATURDAY, OCT. 22

College Football (ABC, CBS, ESPN)

Teams were unavailable at press time, but the best matchups of the weekend include: Air Force at Notre Dame, Penn State at Alabama, Oklahoma at Colorado and Boston College at West Virginia. Who has the best record among major college programs in the 1980s? We would have been inclined to guess either Miami or Oklahoma. We would have been wrong. Nebraska is 82-16 in the 1980s for an .837 percentage. In fact, the Cornhuskers are the only Division I-A program to have an 80 percent success rate in both the 1970s and the '80s. Much of that success can be credited to Tom Osborne, who has coached the 'Huskers since 1973.

Baseball (NBC)

Gladiator School

Robert Conrad, Benjamin Bratt, Ed O'Neill and Anthony M. LaPaglia will star in "Gladiator School," one of a series of two-hour "Police Story" TV movies inspired by Joseph Waumbaugh's Emmy Award-winning anthology. Conrad plays a cop framed for murder and imprisoned at San Quentin. LaPaglia and O'Neill play the cops who investigate him, and Bratt plays his loyal former partner who fights to find the truth.

SATURDAY
IMPRESSIONS

On CBS's "First Impressions," Frank (Brad Garrett) agrees to hold a fundraiser to help out a friend of one of his employees. He discovers, however, that she's not what she appears. It airs Saturday, Oct. 22.

• TWO SQUARE! Hand someone four playing cards. Ask the person to use the four cards to form two squares. When and if your friend gives up, simply arrange the four cards as shown (loosely) at right. You will have formed one outer square and a small blank square will be present at the center.

CODE WORD ADDITION

Assign the numerical sequence 0-9 from left to right to letters of the keyword phrase — INSPECT XYZ — at top. Now, substitute numbers for letters in the problem.
