Thousands of honey bees cloud the air as they swarm over their wrecked shipping boxes on highway near Marietta, Ga.

Rush-Hour Motorists Get Unwanted Buzz

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — A tractor-trailer carrying 200 beehives ran off a busy highway and flipped over, releasing up to 250,000 honeybees into rush-hour traffic, authorities said.

The spill snarled traffic Monday afternoon as drivers nearing the intersection of Interstates 75 and 285 northwest of Atlanta were warned in radio newscasts to roll up windows to avoid being stung.

A thick cloud of bees swarmed over the highways as they were unable to return to their demolished hives. Wooden cartons containing the hives were strewn over a 250-yard stretch near the accident on I-75.

Private beekeepers were called in to coax the bees back into what few intact hives remained.

"I was on my way home and heard this on the radio and went home to suit up," Cherokee County beekeeper Mace McGill said as bees crawled over his netted helmet.

Most of the swarm had dissipated by late Monday and there were no reports of serious sting injuries.

The driver of the truck, Luke Pugh, was listed in stable condition in a hospital for accident injuries and a passenger, Crystal Bosley, was treated and released, officials said.

"We were on the ground and we started to run and we got the bees in our hair but they didn't sting us," Ms. Bosley said.

The bees were being shipped by West Virginia-based JimCo from Dodgeville, Wis., to De Land, Fla., said JimCo dispatcher John Holbrook in De Land. He said the truck contained about 250,000 bees and 200 hives, and that JimCo trucks from Kentucky and Florida were driving to the scene Monday night to retrieve what they could.

County Freezes Non-Emergency Spending For '88

Heavy Payments Put Pitt In Cash Flow Shortage

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Commissioners voted Monday to freeze all but emergency expenditures until a cash flow crunch can be eased by the collection of 1988 property taxes between now and the end of the year.

Margaret Roberts, the county's finance officer, said heavy payments for capital improvement projects — such things as school construction, landfill equipment and installation of a water line from Ayden to an industrial site at Hanrahan — that occurred sooner than expected during the summer months, contributed heavily to the cash flow problem.

The spending freeze action came after Mrs. Roberts said the county faces "a cash flow problem over the next few weeks," and suggested that the board "curtail any expenditures, unless it is an emergency, 'till Jan. 1."

Mrs. Roberts, who reported about $3 million had been paid out over the past few months for capital projects, said she hoped that tax collections and other revenue over the next few weeks will be sufficient to solve the problem.

"This is the first time in history" that the county has had such a problem, Mrs. Roberts, who has worked in the county's finance office for 26 years, said this morning.

The cash flow problem lent support to a recommendation made by auditors who reported Monday on a review of the county's financial records for the fiscal year which ended June 30.

Tim Creech with the firm of Peat Warwick Main & Co., during a report on the audit, told commissioners Monday that one of the recommendations contained in a management letter was to increase the amount of unappropriated fund balance — or cash reserves.

According to the audit report, the county's cash reserves were just over 1 percent of the budget at the end of the 1987-1988 fiscal year, while the Local Government Commission recommends a minimum of 8 percent.

Mrs. Roberts said this morning that the county "usually has 20 percent" in unappropriated fund balance.

The auditors also suggested that the county consider establishing an internal auditor position, that additional security for the county's computer be provided, and that the number of employees in the social services department be reviewed because the department may be understaffed.

Commissioners appointed Kathy Barnhart of the Hampton Inn to fill a vacant position on the Convention and Visitors Authority and named Eugene James to represent the board as a member of the county Emergency Medical Service and Rescue Commission.

Board members delayed action on capital expenditure ordinances — one providing $578,989 for recurring school capital outlay items such as vehicles, equipment and furniture, and the other providing $900,000 for the purchase of the Boys Club property on Arlington Boulevard for the schools.

The board also renewed a one-year lease of space in the county office building on West Fifth Street to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for $68,000, up from the $43,000 a year the hospital has been paying.

Israelis Shoot U.S. Photographer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops today killed a Palestinian teen-ager and wounded two other people — a 5-year-old boy and an American journalist — during a clash with Palestinians in the occupied West Bank city of Nablus, hospital officials said.

The wounded American was identified by doctors at Nablus' Al It-tihad Hospital as Neal Cassidy, a 37-year-old free-lance photographer from Oakland, Calif. Doctors said he was hit in the right knee by a plastic bullet.

Cassidy was the first foreign journalist to be wounded in the 10-month-old Palestinian uprising in the West Bank and occupied Gaza Strip.

Hospital officials identified the dead youth as Khaled Tbaileh, 14, of Nablus. Officials at St. John Hospital said he was shot in the chest.

The death brought to 300 the number of Palestinians killed in the uprising in the territories seized by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war. Six Israelis also have died.

The 5-year-old boy wounded in Nablus was reported in critical condition with bullet wounds to the chest, stomach and left arm, Al It-tihad Hospital officials said.

The army had no immediate comment on the hospital officials' reports.

Nablus' central market area has been the site of repeated clashes between Palestinians and Israeli troops. An Arab journalist said the troops opened fire today after Palestinians threw stones.

Cassidy was on assignment in Israel for the biweekly Oakland-based newspaper Frontline, said Phyllis Bennis, a writer for the publication. He also works for Impact Visuals, a photo agency in New York, she said.

Ms. Bennis, 37, of New York City, said Cassidy was standing near the entrance to the central market "near a group of young men chanting and banging on doors." She said a group of Israeli soldiers was about 150 yards away.

Ms. Bennis said Cassidy told her: "Suddenly, without warning, the soldiers began firing."

She said she did not see the shooting.

Ms. Bennis said doctors told Cassidy that because the bullet was imbedded in soft tissue above the knee, removing it would cause more damage. "So they will clean the entrance wound and keep him on antibiotics in the hospital for three days to prevent infection," she said.

Doctors at the hospital initially said Cassidy was hit by a lead bullet.

A spokesman for the U.S. consul said, "The consulate will seek to contact Mr. Cassidy as promptly as possible. We are concerned about the safety and welfare of Americans."

The Israeli army introduced plastic bullets last August to supplement rubber bullets, tear gas and lead bullets in quelling riots. Injuries have soared, and the use of the new ammunition has drawn criticism from the U.N. Relief and Works Agency as well as the United States, Britain and Egypt.

Plastic bullets are not usually lethal if fired from a distance of more than 70 yards. The government says they were issued to give soldiers an alternative to firing lead bullets.

Ms. Bennis said she and Cassidy have been in Israel for three weeks working on a story about Palestinian life. Officials at the Government Press Office in Jerusalem said they had no record of Cassidy being accredited to work in Israel.

Women Killed In Parkway Fall

LINVILLE FALLS, N.C. (AP) — Two women fell to their deaths at a Blue Ridge Parkway overlook Monday night and the husband of one of the women was injured when he fell while trying to help them, McDowell County officials said today.

Major Don Ramsey of the sheriff's department said the two women fell from a ledge at Chestoa View about 8 p.m. Monday. One woman fell about 150 feet into a gorge and the other fell about 300 feet, Ramsey said.

The husband of one of the women fell about 250 feet and was admitted to Sloop Memorial Hospital in Crossnore with a concussion. Dr. Wayne Martin, a hospital spokesman, said Tuesday the 37-year-old man was in stable condition.

All three people were from Fayetteville, but Ramsey said their names were being withheld.

He said a passerby heard screams for help about 8 p.m. Monday and notified park rangers. One body was removed from the gorge early Tuesday, Ramsey said, but the second body was in rough terrain and had not been recovered by mid-morning.

The body that was recovered was sent to a Morganton hospital for an autopsy.

Rarely Used Charge Filed Against Local Man

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville man facing 36 drug violations has been indicted on a seldom-used drug charge that carries a possible punishment of life in prison.

A Pitt County Grand Jury returned a bill of indictment Monday against Charlie Lee Jenkins, 41, of 1802 McLellan St. charging him with maintaining "a continuing criminal enterprise" from March 9 through Sept. 26.

The indictment accuses Jenkins of being the "organizer, supervisor, and manager" of a drug operation and charges him with possessing, selling and delivering heroin to undercover State Bureau of Investigation agents on six separate occasions.

Jenkins, already charged with 36 heroin counts, was arrested along with 17 other people Sept. 23 and Sept. 24 as SBI agents completed an eight-month undercover drug operation in Greenville. In all, 30 Greenville people were indicted in the drug sweep and more than 354 drug violations were handed down.

Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood said Jenkins was indicted for a continuing criminal enterprise under a state law that is rarely used. It is the first time anyone has been indicted on the charge in Pitt County, he said.

"In reviewing the investigative reports in this recent drug campaign, it appeared that Mr. Jenkins was an appropriate target to use the special statute," he said.

"Continuing criminal enterprise is a special crime in the controlled substances act which addresses the circumstances where you have five or more people engaged together in a series of violations of the drug laws," Haigwood said. "It's designed toward the person who is the manager."

"It's aimed toward the kingpins, I guess ... or organizers of drug operations," he said. "It subjects them to a tougher possible punishment because they're the organizers and managers."

If convicted of the continuing criminal enterprise charge, Jenkins could be sentenced to up to 50 years in prison, or life, and he could be fined. He could also be forced to forfeit profits or property interests obtained through revenues from the enterprise.

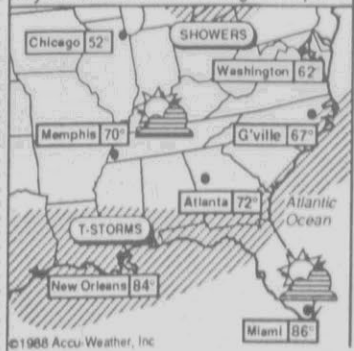

Federal prosecutors have pursued similar charges in the past, Haigwood said, but the North Carolina law has been used very few times by state prosecutors.

"You've got to be able to prove the suspect, or target, is working with five or more people in the enterprise. It takes a substantial amount of resources on behalf of the state to develop a case where you can tie in the criminal conduct of five or more people with a target," he said.

At his first appearance hearing on Sept. 26, Jenkins waived his right to a court-appointed attorney. He is being held on a $500,000 secured bond.

Job Figures Released

In September, 18,655 North Carolinians found jobs through the 78 Job Service Centers and six branch offices operated by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina (ESC).

Statewide totals show that employers listed 31,432 job openings with the agency during September; ESC staff filled 24,344 of those openings.

In Greenville, 389 individuals were placed in jobs. The greatest number of individuals was placed in Hendersonville with 665; Winston-Salem with 655; Raleigh with 609; Washington with 576; and Wilson with 522.

SNPA Elects Whichard

David J. Whichard II, president and co-publisher of The Daily Reflector, has been elected chairman of the board of trustees of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation.

Whichard's election took place Sunday at the SNPA's 85th annual convention at Boca Raton, Fla.

For the past two years, Whichard has served as vice chairman of the foundation board. As chairman he succeeds John O. Emmerich, president and publisher of the Greenwood, Miss., Commonwealth.

John C. Ginn, president and publisher of the Anderson, S.C., Independent-Mail, was elected vice chairman, while H. Doyle Harvill, vice president and executive editor of the Tampa, Fla., Tribune, was re-elected treasurer.

In September, 749 job openings were listed with the Greenville office. The greatest number of jobs listed by employers with ESC local offices was Raleigh with 1,613; Hendersonville with 1,391; Greensboro with 1,284; Winston-Salem with 1,079; and Burlington with 884.

In September of last year, 17,641 individuals found jobs through ESC offices. Statewide totals showed that employers listed 32,654 job openings with the agency during that month and ESC staff filled 23,024 of those openings.

Democrats Host Rally

The Pitt County Democratic Party is planning a rally today for Democratic nominees running in the Nov. 8 general election.

The rally, to be held from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the National Guard Armory, features Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, N.C. Sen. Tony Rand, Democratic candidates for council of state and local candidates.

At 4:30 p.m. today, the Democrats are having the grand opening of the Pitt County headquarters in Carolina East Center adjacent to Carolina East Mall.

Fraud Convictions

More than $470,000 was recovered during the third quarter of 1988 when 354 people were convicted of filing false unemployment insurance claims with the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina (ESC).

In July, 79 people were tried and convicted of unemployment insurance fraud. During August, 132 were convicted, and in September, 143.

The agency has 19 fraud investigators statewide. All benefit claims are subject to audit. Using computers, the agency scans about 200,000 claim files each quarter. Suspicious files are assigned to investigators.

Reports of abuse, including cases of unreported work and earnings, are also investigated.

Unemployment insurance fraud is a misdemeanor punishable by up to two years in prison and a fine of $1,000 for each week benefits are falsely claimed.

Any jobless worker may apply for unemployment benefits, paid from the state's unemployment insurance trust fund. Employers maintain the fund by paying taxes on their employees' wages.

Article Published

Fanette Hines Entzminger of Greenville has an article in the October issue of Science Scope, a national magazine for middle and junior high school science teachers.

A Winterville native, Mrs. Entzminger teaches chemistry and biology at Tarboro High School.

She is a graduate of East Carolina University and has begun work on her Ph.D. at North Carolina State University. Her article discusses ways to help students learn about the elements of the universe.

NAA Chapter Meets

The Phillipi Missionary Baptist Church will sponsor a mid-day prayer service Wednesday at noon at the church in Simpson for area churches, pastors and ministers.

Decisions Postponed

A decision by the Greenville City Council to allow a veterans memorial to be erected at the Town Common was postponed Monday due to the absence of three council members at the scheduled workshop session.

A vote on whether to permit the monument, along with other matters scheduled for consideration Monday, will be continued until the board's monthly meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in council chambers at City Hall.

The rescheduled items include two amendments to animal control regulations. The first would change the word "adequate" to "actual" in describing the physical control which an owner must have over a dog which is off the owner's property, while the second would add a subsection making it unlawful to permit any dog to defecate or urinate on any lawn or property other than the owner's without the permission of the owner of that property.

Also rescheduled for consideration until Thursday is the rewriting of an ordinance making it unlawful for any person to leave the roadway and travel across private property to avoid an official traffic control device.

Revival Is Under Way

Fall revival services are in progress at Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Ronald Maxwell, minister of education at Mt. Shiloh Baptist Church in Williamston, is the guest minister.

Guests tonight will be the Rev. Howard Parker and the congregation of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church. On Wednesday, the Rev. Arlee Griffin and members of Cornerstone Baptist Church will be guests, and the Rev. Randy Royal and members of the Phillipi Church will attend Thursday. On Friday members of the Mt. Shiloh Baptist Church will be guests. Services begin each evening at 7:30.

The Mt. Calvary senior choir will rehearse at 10 a.m. Saturday. A business meeting will follow.

Guilty Plea

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A former Marine staff sergeant pleaded guilty Monday to a charge of being an accessory to the 1984 death of another Cherry Point Marine.

Larry Allen Watson, 34, entered a plea in Craven County Superior Court to the reduced charge of accessory before the fact of second-degree murder. He was originally charged with first degree murder in the death of Lance Cpl. Joel Dexter Long, 23, of Newport, on Oct. 7, 1984.

Judge James R. Strickland continued sentencing for Watson, who is in state prison on an unrelated charge. According to a plea bargain, the sentence would run concurrently with jail time he is now serving.

Wagon Ho Hum

Tobacco Companies Will Label Leaf Goods Sold In California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Under pressure from a state-filed lawsuit and a crackdown by major supermarket chains, tobacco companies have agreed to place labels on products sold in the state, warning consumers of cancer dangers, the attorney general's office said.

The agreement settles a suit prompted by Proposition 65, the initiative overwhelmingly passed by California voters in November 1986 that requires businesses to provide "clear and reasonable" warnings to members of the public who are exposed to chemicals known to cause cancer or birth defects.

"The tobacco manufacturers were very eager to settle and do the right thing," Duane Peterson, a spokesman for state Attorney General John Van de Kamp, said of Monday's action.

Under the agreement, companies that manufacture cigars, pipe tobacco or chewing tobacco will begin placing warning labels on their products immediately. Under federal law, cigarette packs already have warnings on their labels.

In turn for settling the dispute, the state will waive fines of $2,500 a day it had threatened to place for every pack of cigars or other tobacco products that did not contain warnings.

The lawsuit, filed Sept. 30, prompted at least eight retailers and 25 tobacco companies to agree to the warnings.

Van de Kamp filed the suit about two months after a coalition of environmental groups said it would seek $1.3 billion in fines from stores and manufacturers for violating the Proposition 65 warning requirement.

Proposition 65 had largely been ignored, however, until 345 markets in the statewide Vons Cos. chain, the largest in California, issued a statement Oct. 4 saying it would pull all cigars and pipe and chewing tobacco products from its shelves that did not contain warnings.

Lucky Stores, with 343 markets across the state, followed by giving tobacco makers 30 days to label their products or have them removed from Lucky's stores.

Safeway Stores Inc., which operates 221 stores in California, has posted its own warning signs near cigar, pipe and chewing tobacco displays. The company also told tobacco manufacturers that it would no longer accept shipments of products without labels after Monday.

Meanwhile, Van de Kamp's office hailed Monday's settlement as the state's first victory in enforcing Proposition 65.

Wife Refuses To Testify, Goes To Jail

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A woman has been jailed for refusing to testify against her husband in a family molestation investigation a week after one of their daughters was ordered jailed for not testifying.

The 39-year-old woman was called to testify at a hearing Monday against her husband, who is accused of molesting his two eldest daughters, ages 16 and 18.

"No, I will not, your honor," she replied when asked by Gwinnett County Superior Court Judge Bryant Huff if she planned to answer his questions.

Huff told her she could not invoke marital privilege, which normally allows one spouse from testifying against the other. A 1987 amendment to the law prohibits couples from invoking the privilege when a child is the victim of a crime and a parent is accused, said prosecutor Donald Johnston.

When the judge asked the woman if she understood the consequences of not cooperating, she replied, "I understand that there is an abuse of power going on here."

Huff ordered the woman jailed on $100,000 bond.

Last week, Huff ordered the couple's 18-year-old daughter to jail for refusing to testify. She remained jailed Monday. The 16-year-old daughter has been allowed not to testify because she is emotionally unable to, authorities said.

The couple, who has two other daughters and two sons, has criticized authorities for prosecuting the case, saying officials are trying to tear their family apart. The woman said her Mormon faith, which is committed to maintaining the family unit, prevents her from testifying.

Her husband is charged with multiple counts of child molestation, aggravated child molestation and sodomy, and one count of aggravated sodomy. He is free on $25,000 bond.

Defense attorney Cal Leppold has repeatedly objected to Huff's attempts to compel testimony in the case.

Huff has been attempting to take testimony to determine if allegations made four years ago by the two daughters are admissible.

Government Checks GM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is investigating complaints that about 100,000 pickup trucks made by General Motors Corp. may have a tendency to go out of control because of a defective bolt that harms the vehicles' braking system.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Monday it had opened an investigation into unconfirmed reports of brake problems involving 1988 Chevrolet and GMC half-ton pickup trucks. It also undertook six other probes involving major automakers.

One person reportedly died when a GM pickup truck's rear-brake backing bolt broke off and fell into the brake assembly, the agency said.

The agency said it had received two other unconfirmed reports of the brake problem.

David Hudgens, a spokesman at GM's Detroit headquarters, said the company would cooperate fully with the investigation.

"Just because there is an inquiry doesn't mean there is a defect," he said. "That would remain to be seen."

The agency closed an engineering analysis into allegations of defective power steering in GM's 1980-1986 A-body, J-body and X-body cars, concluding that any defect posed no unreasonable risk to motorists.

Tyson, Other Sheriffs Join Jordan At Press Meeting

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Sheriffs from across North Carolina joined Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan on the steps of the Pitt County Courthouse in Greenville today as Jordan hacked away at Republican Gov. Jim Martin's record on crime.

Jordan, a Democratic gubernatorial candidate trying to unseat Martin in the Nov. 8 general election, said Martin has funneled money into political payoffs instead of fighting drugs in the state.

"Jim Martin has not given the war on drugs this kind of leadership. As usual, he has been bringing up the rear," Jordan, flanked by a U.S. flag and a state flag, said in a prepared statement at a press conference this morning.

"Yes, he made a television commercial against drugs. Yes, he had some press conferences about drugs. But we need action, not talk."

"Jim Martin chose to spend over a quarter of a million dollars in taxpayers money for a political payoff," he said. "I say we should stop wasting money on political debts and start spending it on a Governor's Office on Drug Abuse. Political payoffs and political rhetoric will not win the war against drugs."

When asked what political payoffs he was referring to, Jordan said he was speaking of the position Martin awarded to former Democratic Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green. Jordan also said Republicans who were defeated in local elections in the state were given prime jobs in the Martin administration.

About 20 sheriffs and law enforcement officers, including Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson, lined the courthouse steps behind Jordan as he made a call for stiffer drug penalties.

Possession of any amount of cocaine or crack — even one vial — should be a felony, Jordan said, and any adult offender should serve prison time for the offense.

Jordan said he supported death sentences for "drug kingpins" involved in murders, and he said he would consider extending the punishment to other drug dealers, depending on the size of their drug operation.

The state must build more prisons to reduce overcrowding, he said, and some misdemeanor offenders should be kept out of jail to alleviate the problem. More money should also be made available for local governments to increase community service programs so that some people do not go to jail.

When asked whether the state's program of good time and gain time is working properly, Jordan said he is "not the best person in the world to answer at this time."

Good time allows some convicted felons to cut one day from their sentence for every day they spend in prison without a major violation. Gain time allows prisoners to cut additional time from sentences for performing specific jobs or work release.

Jordan also said law enforcement officers need more support.

"As lieutenant governor, I have established a record of consistent support for law enforcement officers — including more training, higher pay, increased benefits and a decent retirement plan."

"I'm here today to say that, as governor, I'll continue to stand behind the men who stand behind the badge," he said.

"Drugs spread their poison throughout society. Drugs feed the problems of crime, prison overcrowding, health care costs and family violence. Drugs erode the productivity of our work force," he said.

Vance County Sheriff Tony McGee and Martin County Sheriff Wille Rogers also spoke briefly in support of Jordan. "I can't imagine any law enforcement officer not supporting Bob Jordan," Rogers said. McGee also said Jordan is the best candidate, but he declined to cite specific reasons Jordan could do a better job than Martin.

Burger King Faces Lawsuit By Blacks

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Several black Burger King franchise owners filed a $500 million class-action lawsuit Monday against the fast-food company, alleging that Burger King had tricked them into accepting inferior locations and had charged them more than twice as much as white-run franchises for facilities and equipment.

In a 55-page complaint filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, 12 black Burger King operators from around the nation said the Miami-based hamburger chain had acted "maliciously, deliberately and anti-corporately" during the past eight years and had driven many black Burger King owners out of business.

A spokesman for Burger King, which is owned by Pillsbury Corp. of Minneapolis, said company officials had not seen the suit and declined direct comment.

The lawsuit, which was brought in the owners' behalf by the Minority Business Enterprise Legal Defense and Education Fund, a Washington-based law firm, represents a stinging rebuke of a much-publicized Burger King program designed to aid minority groups.

Using an unusual hybrid of antitrust and civil rights law, the plaintiffs alleged that Burger King failed to live up to a commitment it made five years ago to increase the number of black Burger King franchisees and to ensure their success. These assurances are outlined in an agreement Burger King signed with organization PUSH, the Chicago-based organization headed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

PUSH officials said Monday that although they were unfamiliar with the details of the suit, based on the quarterly meetings they have had with Burger King during the past few years to review the company's affirmative action record, the fast-food chain had performed well.

"This is probably the best covenant we've had," said the Rev. Willie Barrows, national executive director for PUSH, of Burger King's program.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs, however, disagreed. "When Burger King entered into that covenant, they did it in bad faith," said Charles Ware, an attorney for the black franchisees said, after a news conference that was held in front of a black-owned Burger King franchise in South-east Washington. "They violated it intentionally."

Burger King officials said Monday that since signing the PUSH agreement they have increased the number of black-owned franchises from 77 of a total of 3,230 outlets to 190 of 5,055, an increase of 1.4 percentage points.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Reagan Democrats Aren't Homesick

WASHINGTON — "The trouble with the Dukakis campaign is..."

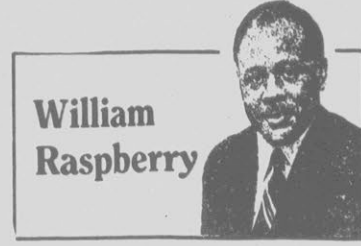

Completing that sentence — and not necessarily in 25 words or less — has become a national pastime for media watchers, political pundits, and, especially, worried supporters of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

The trouble with the Dukakis campaign is that his media managers have allowed themselves to be outlicked by the packagers of Vice President George Bush. Or, that he has failed to let the voters know him. Or, that he has mishandled Jesse Jackson. Or, that Jackson has been too slow to come aboard.

There is truth in all the entries, but two strike me as prizeworthy. One is from House Speaker Jim Wright; the other from a black worker in the Dukakis campaign.

The trouble, according to Wright, is that the voters don't know Dukakis. But instead of letting the voters get to know about him and his vision for America, he has allowed himself to be packaged and programmed by his media advisers.

Wright's advice? "Get rid of those commercials that try to hawk the candidate like toothpaste or soapflakes...and be himself, relax and say it like it is."

William Raspberry

The Texas Democrat told reporters that some years back, when he was involved in a tough congressional campaign, he bought a half-hour block of TV time, against the advice of his media experts who told him that no one would listen for that long. They did, and Wright won.

"You can't tell me that people won't listen to something serious," he said. "This (presidential campaign) is serious business. This is the future of America."

The campaign worker would agree, but she has a different idea of the campaign's basic flaw.

The trouble with the Dukakis campaign, she says, is that it is like the dog in the Aesop fable who sees his reflection in the water: so eager to grasp the bone he sees in the reflection that he's about to lose the bone he already has in his mouth.

The bone she has in mind is the black vote.

"Jesse Jackson was supposed to deliver that vote," she says, "but he was supposed to do it without alienating the so-called Reagan Democrats."

"Well, by toning down Jackson and limiting the places where he is to campaign, they are alienating the black voters."

This is not the disappointment of an erstwhile Jackson supporter. She was for Dukakis even while Jackson was in the race. But she understands something the Dukakis insiders seem to have missed:

"Jesse is symbolic to black Americans, whether they support him personally or not."

"Jesse can't just bring black voters to Dukakis. All he can do is sensitize them to Dukakis. Dukakis has to earn their support. But he can't earn them if he keeps giving the impression that he doesn't want Jesse as a full-fledged member of the team. The campaign leadership has the idea that if you show up with anybody black, other than the campaign insiders, you're caving in to Jesse. They're hung up on this image of big, black, intimidating Jesse."

The problem with the Dukakis campaign, she says, is the staff. "They're so afraid of Jackson, they won't learn from him. Dukakis was there at the Congressional Black Caucus dinner when Jesse showed him how to handle that Bush business about the Pledge of Allegiance."

"You remember what Jesse said to Bush? 'I'll pledge allegiance to the flag if you pledge homes for the homeless, child care for working mothers, equal opportunity for all Americans, good jobs at fair wages.' That's how you handle it."

She accepts Wright's notion that Dukakis needs to stop reacting to Bush and establish his own vision of America.

"One of the overriding concerns of black voters is the judicial appointments. The Supreme Court has already taken a hard turn to the right, and it could get a lot worse under Bush. I mean, how long can Marshall and Blackmun and Brennan and White stay there? But as long as the staff has Dukakis spending all his time responding to Bush, you don't get a sense of what kind of appointments he would make."

The trouble with the Dukakis campaign, she says, is that it is ignoring its most loyal constituencies — blacks and decent, sensitive and, yes, liberal whites — in an effort to get the so-called Reagan Democrats to come home.

"Well, it's clear to me, looking at the polls, that they're not homesick."

Backfired

Verdict Reflects Poor Handling

It certainly sounds like justice thwarted.

On the surface, finding two men who walked into a newspaper office with guns and held hostages not guilty of criminal intent sounds absurd. It sounds like disregard for the law that forbids such actions.

But in fact the case of Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, two Indians who took hostages at a Robeson County newspaper but were cleared of federal charges last week, is an example of poor handling by the judge that heard the case.

The facts were clear. The men did what they were charged with. But shenanigans over scheduling left one of the two sitting through the three-week trial with no defense attorney. This had to create sympathy for the pair from the jury. And the federal judge hearing the case precipitated the circumstances by ordering the trial to continue despite the lack of legal representation.

Granted, he probably thought the scheduling conflict was a ploy to delay the trial, or to gain sympathy from the jury, and he logically sought to avoid those ends. But his judgment was flawed. His decision backfired.

The state of North Carolina still has the option to try the pair and should pursue that option intelligently. For now, however, the verdict in the Hatcher-Jacobs trial sends a disturbing and message: hostage-taking is permissible if the circumstances are right.

A Mystery

Some Questions Remain Unanswered

The news that many dreaded, others welcomed, finally came in Turin, Italy last week when it was announced that scientific tests on the Shroud of Turin have shown it to be no more than 728 years old.

The shroud had long been viewed as the burial cloth of Jesus and it had an image burned into it which fitted the human conception of Christ. It was considered holy by many and even in modern times scientists could not disprove its authenticity until carbon-14 tests were conducted to accurately determine its age. Since Christ died 2,000 years ago the shroud obviously was not around at that time.

Of course there is mystery enough in the cloth to continue the belief many people have in it. The image shows a man who has been whipped and speared, with nail holes and a thorn crown. No one as yet has been able to positively say how the image was attained.

Christianity is a religion of faith. There is nothing tangible that identifies the crucifixion and resurrection which is so central to Christian belief. That is the greatest test of faith that could be demanded of true believers.

It would be a mistake to call the Shroud of Turin a fake. It is a remarkable work by someone who perhaps never represented it as anything other than what it is.

Skunks Too

LITTLE SWITZERLAND — When members of the board of the North Carolina chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union met in this mountain resort community a week ago, they sported a new political button. A caricature of Uncle Sam is holding an ACLU membership card and the button reads: "Card carrying member of the ACLU."

The ACLU is accustomed to being bashed by politicians. The organization takes controversial stands, like defending a Nazi group's right to march through a predominantly Jewish suburb. When you defend the rights of society's skunks, you're an easy target for demagogic politicians.

But despite their latest bashing at the hands of presidential candidate George Bush, North Carolina ACLU members were showing a defiant optimism at their retreat this month. The button was just one sign. Their comments in a group talk were another.

"Civil libertarians are indomitable," says Jim Shields, ACLU's state director. "They will not accept the counsel of despair. They are basically optimists who believe in people, that they can make their own decisions and that things will be all right."

While the ACLU is best known for the controversial stands it takes, the group's primary work is rather mundane. Clients are usually ordinary citizens who feel their rights have been infringed upon by the government. In an age of skepticism about big government, the amazing thing about the ACLU is that it is not a tremendously popular organization with the citizenry.

Why isn't it? At the board meeting, North Carolina ACLU members, after a lengthy discussion, appeared to blame themselves. Take, for example, Bush's attack on the ACLU and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis for opposing a law that would have required teachers to recite the pledge of allegiance every day in class. The board members said that they hadn't seen a balanced reporting of the matter in the press.

"We failed to tell the folks that this was an issue of religious freedom and of the government trying to meddle in people's religious affairs," one ACLU member said from the audience.

Still, the board members found the attention flattering. And the attack has swelled membership in the state chapter. More than 100 new members joined last week alone.

In 1788, the North Carolina state convention refused to ratify the federal Constitution until a bill of rights was added. The state, therefore, has a proud history of defending the rights of the individual. It might be well to keep that bit of defending the right of the individual. It might be well to keep that bit of our history in mind when a politician eager to win office talks so flippantly about our individual freedoms and those who seek to protect all of us from big government. And when we say all of us, that means the skunks, too.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I noticed in the editorial of Sept. 22, the editor complimented the Planning and Zoning Commission for refusing a rezoning request that would have allowed a shopping center to locate across N.C. 11 from Pitt Community College. According to the editorial, that was a conservative, progressive move. Even though shopping centers are profitable for communities and Pitt County growth would be expanded with a substantial tax base, it was logical to say no. Why? The shopping center would increase traffic, congestion and noise.

The residents of Greenfield Terrace, North River Estates and Oak Grove Estates rejected the expansion of the airport for jet service for the same reasons — noise, years of investment, danger and lower property value for residents trying to sell.

The residents of the three communities were told by Jack Duffus at the third public meeting at St. Gabriel the advantages of expanding the airport — tool in attracting industry, business people and students also use the airport, etc. He did not mention one disadvantage. He even said that he doubted that commercial jet service would be added, even though it is stated on page 53 of the land use book.

Why say no to the shopping center across from Pitt Community College which would generate more taxes, growth for Pitt County and source of employment and yes to the expansion of the airport? Is it because of who would be affected?

Do we need a large airport in the city, where it could be a hazard to the hospital and residential areas? There is an airport in Kinston, approximately 26 miles away, which is located in an area that allows for expansion.

Marjorie Ward
Greenville

To the editor:

Vice President George Bush and his campaign team seem intent on persuading the American people that Michael Dukakis is a bad candidate for the presidency. To do this Bush has resigned himself to hammering out half-truth. For instance, the Bush-Quayle people have said that Dukakis is "against guns," when in actuality Dukakis is for better control of gun sales and a tighter gun registration system. They have implied that Dukakis personally granted a furlough to dangerous criminal Willie Horton when, in fact, the decision was made by someone within the Boston prison system. They have announced that the Duke is pro-abortion, when in actuality he is in favor of allowing women to make their own choice.

This collection of oblique generalizations and misconstrued facts is just a reflection of an insecure administration that has thrived on deceit and propaganda. Bush was a major figure in the Iran-Contra Arms deal, a fact he admitted grudgingly after continual peppering by Dukakis during the first debate. He offered not the slightest apology to the American people. In fact, he said that he would take all the blame for Irangate and for dealings with Noriega if the American people would give him just half the credit for helping keep the peace over the last eight years.

What does George mean by keep the peace? How does one keep the peace when one is supplying arms to some of the most feared terrorists in the world? And what of the tightrope our nation walks every moment while we have enough nuclear warheads to blow up the world 40 times over?

Bush should have followed North and Poindexter when they were asked to leave. It is sad commentary on American politics that he is even allowed to run for president. It would be tragic to see him elected.

To the editor:

It has recently come to my attention that the Pitt County Red Cross Blood Program is approximately 400 units of blood short of its goal for the first quarter of the 1988-89 fiscal year. Last year the program was at 96 percent of goal for the first quarter. At present, we are 59 percent of goal for the same time period.

I am having a difficult time trying to figure out how this can happen.

Pitt County has consistently, through the years, supported the blood program. I believe we all know better than to think you can get AIDS by giving blood. At least I hope so. I also hope we all realize that we cannot get the blood anywhere else but from warm-blooded donors. I certainly hope that everyone is aware that if they don't give, the blood will not be there.

As of right now, no one ever has — and hopefully no one ever will have — died because there was no blood. Each person must realize this possibility exists. Now is not the time to get lax about donating blood. We cannot afford to.

I would beg of you to exercise your truly God-given right. Donate blood at the next Bloodmobile nearest you. Call the Red Cross Office today (752-4222 or 757-0270) to check the schedule. Don't let another opportunity to donate blood pass you by. Someone will be glad you did. I know I will.

Reagan Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will make a campaign trip Friday to Raleigh, N.C., and Bowling Green, Ky., the White House said Monday.

Reagan will address a "Victory '88" rally at the Raleigh Civic Center.

From Raleigh, the White House said, Reagan will travel to Bowling Green, where he will address a Bush-Quayle rally at Western Kentucky University.

Reagan will return to Washington on Friday night.

Bonney Trial

CAMDEN, N.C. (AP) — A Camden County man charged in the death of his 19-year-old daughter will be tried in neighboring Pasquotank County, after a superior court judge agreed to move the trial.

Jury selection for the trial of Thomas Lee Bonney was scheduled to begin today in Elizabeth City. On Monday, defense attorneys entered three pleas for Bonney: innocent, innocent by reason of insanity and innocent by reason of unconsciousness.

Judge Paul Wright agreed that jurors could be questioned individually about whether they were familiar with publicity on the sanity issue in the hearing.

He also agreed to rule today on whether to allow cameras and microphones in the courtroom for the trial.

The bullet-ridden body of Bonney's daughter, Kathy Carol Bonney, was found last November in Camden County. She had been shot 27 times with a .22-caliber weapon in the face, neck, chest and legs.

Warehouse Fire

DURHAM (AP) — Fire destroyed Herndon's Warehouse Surplus Sales in Durham Monday afternoon, but no injuries were reported.

The fire was discovered about 12:30 p.m. and was brought under control within 30 minutes, but firefighters had to remain at the scene for eight hours.

The warehouse's contents, which ranged from old car tires to antique furniture, were destroyed. Firefighters had no dollar estimate on the damage. The warehouse was owned by Clair M. Herndon.

Poker Murder

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Hendersonville man was shot to death, apparently in a dispute over a poker game, and an Asheville man charged in his death has surrendered to police.

Julius Greenwood, 31, was charged in connection with the death Saturday of Keith Emmanuel Collington.

Collington, 25, died at Pardee Hospital shortly after he was shot in the chest. Police officials think he was shot with a .32-caliber Derringer pistol.

Capt. John Nicholson of the Hendersonville Police Department said the shooting occurred after a verbal argument during a five-member poker game. Nicholson said witnesses told police that the argument started when someone accused Collington of cheating.

Collington was shot while sitting in his chair, according to officials.

Rape Charges

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Two 14-year-old boys have been charged with raping a 12-year-old girl at a Union County middle school last week.

The boys, students at Parkwood Middle School, were being held Monday in the Gaston County juvenile facility under juvenile petitions accusing them of first-degree rape and second-degree kidnapping.

The 12-year-old girl told Union County sheriff's deputies Thursday that she was grabbed about 8:15 a.m. while walking to class. She was on school property.

Shortly after the attack, the girl contacted Parkwood Middle School Principal Larry Stinson and told him what had happened.

Damage Award

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A jury has awarded $1.2 million to the widow and children of a Winston-Salem sanitation worker who died from complications during knee surgery in June 1986.

A jury in Forsyth Superior Court deliberated about 90 minutes before finding that Dr. Benzion Schkolne and his company, Forsyth Anesthesiology Associates, were negligent in the death of Abraham Royster.

J. Robert Elster, the attorney for Schkolne and Forsyth Anesthesiology, filed notice of appeal.

Royster went into Medical Park Hospital June 12, 1986, for arthroscopic surgery on his knee, according to court records. He stopped breathing during the surgery and his brain was damaged by lack of oxygen, records say. On June 20, 1986, doctors took him off artificial life support and he died.

Microelectronics Center Asks Court To Spell Out Its Rights

RALEIGH (AP) — The Microelectronics Center of North Carolina has filed suit, asking a court to spell out "its rights, status and other legal relations" between it and the state.

The center refused Monday to make public records of its use of state funds, and asked a court to rule on an opinion by state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg that the public is entitled to examine those records.

The lawsuit, filed in Durham County Superior Court, said Thornburg's Oct. 4 opinion was in "irreconcilable conflict" with an earlier opinion issued in 1982 by Thornburg's predecessor. Center officials did not indicate when the suit was filed.

"We as a board voted to seek a declaratory judgment from the court to help us interpret between two conflicting opinions ... and we will obviously be guided by the court's wisdom with regard to how we should operate in the future," said Bruce Poulton, chairman of the center's board of directors and chancellor of North Carolina State University.

The earlier opinion, issued by former state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, said the Microelectronics Center was not a public agency and therefore was not required to abide by state laws requiring competitive bidding on public building contracts.

Thornburg's opinion said the center was "so connected to public institutions, officials and functions, and so dependent upon public funding" that part of its records should be made available to anyone who wants to inspect them.

The Microelectronics Center, a private non-profit corporation, will have received about $130 million from the state by the end of the current fiscal year.

Sampley Says Laotians Trying To Link Tar Heels To Spy Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The leader of a group trying to locate American servicemen in southeast Asia says he fears that Laotians are trying to tie two North Carolina residents detained after illegally entering the country to paramilitary operations.

"There's a possibility that Laos is trying to tie Donna (Long) and Jim (Copp) into some covert operation involving some other Americans who crossed into Laos in a military manner," said Ted Sampley of Kinston. "That may be what they're trying to achieve."

But Sampley, chairman of the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans, said the American group that traveled to Thailand to publicize the $2.4 million reward had made its intentions clear as early as July.

Ms. Long, of Jacksonville, and Copp, of Hampstead, took a rented fishing boat across the Mekong River boundary between Thailand and Laos and were arrested Oct. 3 at a village in the southern province of Champasak.

They were moved last Wednesday to Vientiane.

The two were planning to pass out dollar bills and other currency offering a $2.4 million reward to anyone who frees a U.S. prisoner from communist-ruled Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam and turns him over to the International Committee of the Red Cross.

These countries deny holding any Americans from the Vietnam War, which ended in 1975.

Meanwhile Monday, a U.S. embassy official in Bangkok, Thailand, said Ms. Long and Copp do not appear to have been mistreated.

Nobel Winners' Colleagues Say Prize Will Help N.C. Scientists

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Nobel award for medicine awarded to two Research Triangle Park scientists has symbolic value for the entire Tar Heel scientific community, officials say.

"I think the fact that people in the Triangle got this is a signal to people all around that scientific work of the very highest caliber is being done in this region," said Jasper Memory, research vice president for the University of North Carolina system.

Franklin Hart, vice chancellor for research at North Carolina State University, agreed Monday, after George Hitchings and Gertrude Elion were told they had won the prize.

"We are coming of age as a research community to be reckoned with on an international basis," Hart said.

But Ms. Elion, 70, said the scientific community in the Triangle was well recognized already.

"There are a lot of distinguished scientists here," she said. "The fact that they haven't gotten the Nobel Prize doesn't make them any less distinguished."

Hitchings, 83, of Durham, and Ms. Elion, of Chapel Hill, both scientists emeritus for Burroughs Wellcome Co., "are known worldwide to everyone working in that field" of leukemia and cancer research, said Dr. Wayne Rundles, professor emeritus of hematology and oncology at Duke.

"Their contributions are unique in relating chemistry and biology to pharmacology and medicine," he said. "They have taken an area that wasn't developed and done a lot with it ..."

The two scientists, who have collaborated for 44 years, studied compounds that control the growth of cells in different areas, Rundles said.

"They have been able to go from the chemical down to the clinical use of these cells," he said.

The research has led to drugs used against leukemia, malaria, herpes virus infections, bacterial infections and the rejection of transplants.

"Their work relates to a broad spectrum of diseases," Rundles said. "There's been no malarkey about it — it's just good research."

"The only question is why they haven't been recognized before," he said.

Hitchings is an adjunct professor at Duke and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Ms. Elion is an adjunct professor at UNC-CH and a research professor at Duke.

They have been models for younger scientists, said Dr. Stuart Bondurant, dean of the UNC medical school.

"George Hitchings is a master scientist and a source of great and continuing inspiration to all of his friends and associates," Bondurant said. "His own discoveries have enhanced the lives of millions of people around the world."

"His high standards, infectious and total commitment and brilliant innovations have been models for younger colleagues," he said.

"Dr. Gertrude Elion is a brilliant scientist whose work has opened great new vistas of knowledge and opportunity to produce drugs which underlie contemporary clinical practice in many areas ...," Bondurant said.

The Nobel Prizes are awarded annually to individuals or institutions who benefit humanity in one of six fields: physics, chemistry, physiology or medicine, literature, economics and peace.

The prizes are funded by the Nobel Foundation, established in the will of Alfred B. Nobel, the Swedish-born inventor of dynamite.

The prize was approved by a majority vote of the Karolinska Institute's 50-member Nobel Assembly on the recommendations of a five-member committee. About 250 researchers usually are nominated for the prize each year.

Pro-Abortion Note Compares 'Pro-Life' To Klan

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte's Planned Parenthood organization has distributed a national Planned Parenthood memo comparing the anti-abortion Operation Rescue organization to the Ku Klux Klan.

Operation Rescue has coordinated recent anti-abortion demonstrations in Atlanta that have resulted in hundreds of arrests, and similar demonstrations are scheduled to be held in Charlotte and other cities Oct. 29.

Foreman said. "Planned Parenthood has killed millions. Which of us is more like the Ku Klux Klan?"

Karen Graham, director of the Charlotte-based Action League for Life, which will coordinate this month's protests in Charlotte, said her organization rejects violence and verbal intimidation.

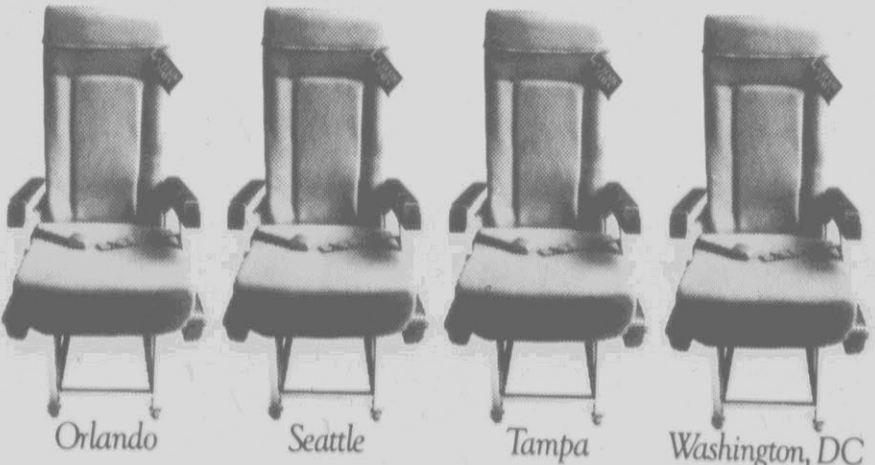

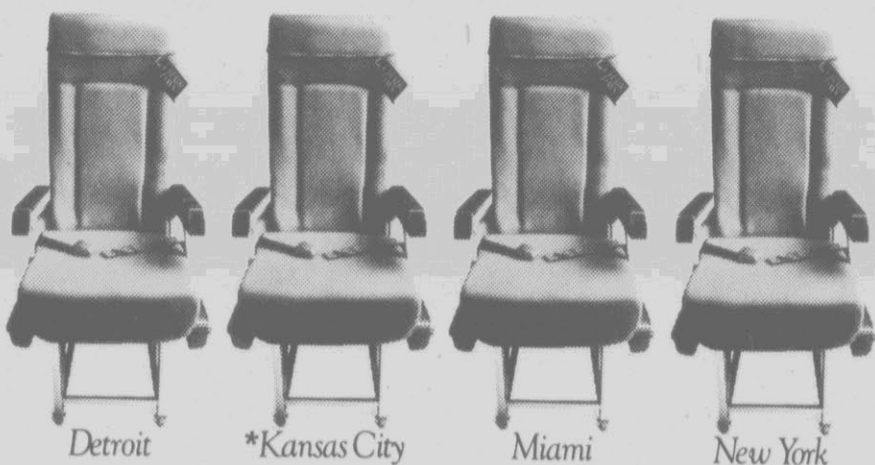

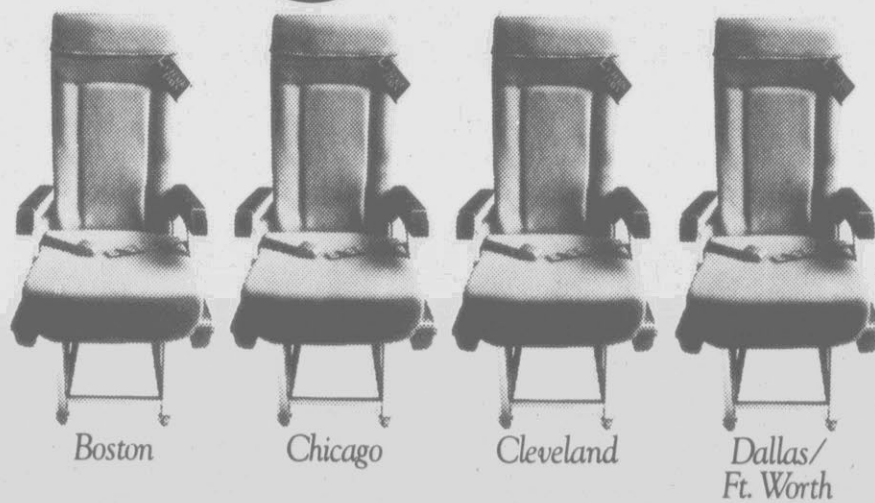

"It would be ridiculous for a pro-lifer to want to be violent," she said, "because we consider both the mother and the child to be the victim."

Ms. Graham said all participants in the Oct. 29 demonstration will have to sign the following pledge: "I will not take it upon myself to yell out to anyone, but will continue singing and praying" throughout the demonstration.

Graham said demonstrators must also pledge to avoid "any actions or words that would appear violent or hateful."

Koop Says Health Care Inadequate

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SAN FRANCISCO — Warning that health care for mothers and children in the United States is inadequate and likely to get worse, U.S. Surgeon General Dr. C. Everett Koop said Monday that in the remaining months of his term in office he will try to persuade corporations and businesses to increase health-care benefits for employees.

What corporate America "has failed to realize" is that it is in part responsible for the relatively high infant mortality rate in this country, which has put the United States behind 17 other industrialized nations in the delivery and care of newborn babies, said Koop.

Speaking to some 7,000 physicians attending the annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics here, Koop, who has been surgeon general for the past seven years, said that he firmly endorsed a recent report issued by the non-partisan National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality that called for "universal access to early maternal and pediatric care for all mothers and infants."

Because the government cannot possibly be expected to pick up the entire tab on such care, the responsibility will have to fall to private employers, which should start offering their workers far more comprehensive insurance packages than are now available, Koop said. That means not only insurance for illness and catastrophic disease but parental-leave policies for the birth of babies and the illness of children, as well as preventive care for babies — coverage that is rarely offered even under the best corporate insurance plans.

"Today, of the more than 56 million American women of child-bearing age, roughly 16 to 44, almost 28 million of them are employed full time in the American work force," he said.

"In addition," Koop said, "well over half of all mothers of small children — kids 3 years old or younger — are working full time ... On a day-to-day basis, it is now clearly the managements of business and industry who exercise the most crucial influence over the health of America's mothers and children."

Each year in the United States there are some 40,000 infant deaths that could have been prevented, in many cases if the expectant mothers had only had adequate medical care in the first months of pregnancy, Koop said.

Moreover, the cost effectiveness of preventive medicine has been demonstrated in a variety of ways, said Dr. Richard Narkewicz, president of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

For every dollar spent on immunizations, Narkewicz said, the country saves $10 in unnecessary medical expenses. Yet few insurance policies cover routine office visits for infants.

What's even more alarming, Koop said, is that the problem of inadequate maternal and child health care is likely to get worse as children stop being the dominant population group in America.

"Five years ago, for example, 28 percent of the American population were children under age 18, while only 21 percent were adults over the age of 55" said Koop, who was trained as a pediatrician as well as a surgeon.

"By the year 2010 ... 24 percent of all Americans will be under the age of 18 (and) ... 26 percent will be over the age of 55."

Right behind that demographic change will be a shift in health planning resources so that the elderly, rather than the young, will get the lion's share of the nation's health resources, Koop said.

His colleagues in the leadership of the American Academy of Pediatrics strongly endorsed many of his positions.

Report Says IRS Slack On Business

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service could collect billions of dollars more a year by using the same aggressive enforcement tactics against businesses that it uses against individual taxpayers, a congressional report says.

The report by the Government Operations subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs comes amid a presidential campaign in which Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis has made more aggressive collection of unpaid taxes a cornerstone of his economic proposals.

The subcommittee report, released Monday, says the IRS should develop a program to match "information returns" showing interest and dividend income paid to businesses with the actual tax returns filed by each company.

The report estimated that between $3.2 billion and $8 billion a year in taxes on interest and dividends earned by businesses is never collected because the income is not reported to the IRS.

The IRS for years has been using its computers to compare information returns listing interest and dividend payments to individuals with the income tax returns filed by the individuals. The program produced $2.35 billion in additional tax revenue from individuals in fiscal 1985.

Banks and corporations are not required to file such information returns, but the House report said the IRS still received 26 million such returns in 1985, showing income payments to 5 million businesses totaling $987 billion.

ANNOUNCING A RADICALLY DIFFERENT CD FOR CONSERVATIVE INVESTORS.

*The Wachovia Convertible CD Gives You
The Flexibility To Switch To A Higher Rate, Without Penalty, If Interest Rates Rise.*

Until now, when you invested in a certificate of deposit you had to stay with a fixed rate for the term of the certificate or incur penalties. Now, Wachovia introduces a new and innovative CD that lets you take advantage if a better rate comes along. The Wachovia Convertible CD.

Convert Without Penalty

The term is one year. But after three months, if interest rates rise anytime during the remainder of the term, you can switch to another one-year Convertible CD at the higher rate. Or to a non-convertible CD of one year or longer. All without incurring a penalty.

... And Keep On Converting

You can continue to convert to a new one-year Convertible CD as long as interest rates rise. All we ask is that you wait at least three months between conversions.

Safe And Secure

Like other Wachovia CDs, the rate on the Convertible CD is guaranteed for the term of your certificate, unless and until you decide to switch to a higher rate. Your new rate is also guaranteed for the full term. So it can't go down if interest rates fall. And the current opening rate on the Convertible CD is 7.85%, with an annualized yield of 8.165%.* So it's a good deal right from the start.

Convert To The Convertible

If you have a CD maturing, or you're considering a new deposit investment, the Convertible CD is a smart, safe way to catch interest rates on the rise. It's available only from a Wachovia Personal Banker. Because a better way to invest has always been The Wachovia Way.

'Other' Candidates Share Ballot With Attention-Getting Hopefuls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael Dukakis and George Bush may be the attention-getters but they certainly won't be the only presidential candidates on the ballot on Election Day.

Democrat Dukakis and Republican Bush will appear in some states with a host of lesser-knowns, each of whom wants that coveted job as leader of the free world.

From New York psychologist Lenora B. Fulani of the New Alliance party to Libertarian Ron Paul of Texas, the handful of long shot presidential hopefuls runs the spectrum of political leanings.

There are 17 other-party candidates in all, according to the Federal Election Commission.

Some are not new to the process. Former Minnesota Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, an unsuccessful candidate in 1968 for the Democratic presidential nomination who also ran in 1972 and 1976, materializes again this year on four state ballots.

The 72-year-old is cast as a Progressive in Minnesota, an independent in Michigan and a consumer candidate in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. He entered the 1988 race, he says, because "there is no real choice between Democrats and Republicans."

This time around, McCarthy proclaims, "I don't expect to lose."

Fulani, the first black female presidential candidate to win a ballot slot in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, has a more modest goal in mind — to see that Dukakis gets buried on Nov. 8.

The standard-bearer of the New Alliance party, which originally supported the candidacy of Democrat Jesse Jackson, Fulani says she hopes to draw enough votes away from Dukakis to make the Democratic Party take notice.

Asked which candidate she prefers, Fulani says, "That's like asking black people in slavery if they'd rather have a good master or a bad one. ... I don't like their parties. They're plastic people."

Another long shot presidential hopeful is Ron Paul, appearing on most ballots as a Libertarian. A former Republican congressman from Texas, he quit the GOP in 1987 saying President Reagan had presided over a government of massive budget deficits and too many bureaucrats.

Given a choice, Paul says, he would "deregulate everything and you get rid of all the bums, all the bureaucrats who are running the bureaus."

And there are lesser-known candidates as well, including Socialist Willa Kenoyer, who will appear on seven state ballots.

"I learned my socialism on my daddy's knee back in the mid-1930s," said Kenoyer, a freelance writer from Shelby, Mich.

While she says her party is more interested in spreading its ideas than trying to put a socialist in the White House, she still has plans should she happen to make it that far.

The first hour, Kenoyer says, would be spent dismantling the CIA. "The second hour, the FBI goes."

Political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, under indictment for fraud and conspiracy, is also listed in several states, often under the banner of National Economic Recovery Party or Democrats for Economic Recovery Party.

Historically, third-party candidates have a difficult time. In 1968, then-segregationist George Wallace of Alabama mounted the biggest vote-getting campaign for a third-party candidate in the nation's history — and he attracted just 10 million votes.

In 1984, Libertarian David Bergland finished in third place behind Reagan and Walter F. Mondale, drawing only 227,204 votes.

Nobel Goes To French Economist

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A French professor whose visit to the United States during the Depression sparked his interest in economics today won the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said Maurice Allais, 77, won the award "for his pioneering contributions to the theory of markets and efficient utilization of resources."

He was the first French economist to win the award since it was created in 1968. Americans have dominated the prize, taking 15 of the 25 awards since it was created by the Bank of Sweden. Five winners were British.

Allais did his economic research at the Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Mines de Paris, the academy said.

Though his work is little known outside France, Allais "is the most prominent figure in modern economic research in France as regards basic theory and applications to public-sector planning," said the 300-member academy in a statement.

Jacques Levy, director of the Ecole Nationale des Mines, one of France's most prestigious institutions of higher education, said Allais had a decisive influence on all French economists of the post-war period.

He worked on "a system of definition of prices which would permit the economy to function at its best," Levy said.

His theories are based on a free-market economy.

Allais' training was as an engineer. But in the 1930s, he visited the United States during the depression, seeing factories idled and people unemployed.

"It was this that set him off to consecrate his life to economics," Levy said.

The academy said Allais' greatest contributions came in the 1940s with his work on market equilibrium and efficiency.

He published long works in 1943 and 1952 detailing his theories. This work "has had a far-reaching indirect impact through younger French economists," said the statement.

The son of a shopkeeper, Allais was born in 1911 in Paris. He is a professor of the Center for Economic Analysis at the Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Mines.

His works include: Frequency, Probability and Chance; The General Theory of Surplus; and Third World at the Crossroads.

Allais, who has served in French governments in several positions and was named an officer of the Legion of Honor in 1977, also wrote studies on history and physics.

He graduated at the top of his class from Ecole Polytechnique in 1933 and then attended the Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Mines until 1936.

Allais joins three drug researchers from the United States and Britain who became 1988 Nobel laureates on Monday for discoveries leading to medications for heart disease, AIDS and other deadly illnesses.

Robert M. Solow, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, won the economics prize last year for creating a model showing how technology and other factors influence economic growth.

The economics prize is a late addition to the five awards established in the 1896 will of Alfred Nobel, who bequeathed his fortune from the invention of dynamite to reward scientific breakthroughs, activities for peace, and literature "of an idealistic tendency."

Pentagon Protesters Arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police arrested 214 of about 1,000 demonstrators who tried unsuccessfully to blockade the Pentagon during a protest of U.S. policy on El Salvador.

Authorities said most of the arrests Monday were on charges of obstructing passage.

There were scattered episodes of fisticuffs between police and demonstrators, and three people were charged with assault, but the protesters failed to achieve their goal of stopping Pentagon workers from entering the building.

The demonstration was sponsored by a coalition of a half-dozen peace groups.

The protesters succeeded in forcing Defense Department workers to abandon the huge parking lot south of the Pentagon — which normally accommodates 3,700 cars — and to run a human gauntlet through selected entrances to get to their offices.

"But they didn't shut down the building; they just created a lot of inconvenience and long walks," said Glenn Flood, a Pentagon spokesman.

Police, including one officer who was attacked by protesters, arrested several people when they sat in a road to block a military bus from entering the parking lot.

One demonstrator sprayed red paint across the front of a bus. Protesters then pushed one Defense Protective Service officer to the ground when he tried to arrest the demonstrator and beat the officer before other officers rescued him.

The demonstrators oppose U.S. aid to the Salvadoran government, which has been engaged in a war against leftist guerrillas since 1980. An estimated 60,000 people have died in that conflict, which has produced continuing allegations of "death squad" killings by policemen and soldiers.

The United States considers El Salvador one of its closest allies in Central America.

The protesters maintain the leftist guerrillas are willing to negotiate an end to the fighting but that the Salvadoran government — backed by the United States — refuses to compromise in any way.

On Monday, they offered loud chants of opposition to U.S. policies, yelling: "No violence, no war, U.S. out of El Salvador," and "Hey hey, ho ho, the Pentagon has got to go."

Ethics Office Will Review Rules On Nancy's Loaners

By Merrill Hartson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A federal ethics office will review its 1982 finding that Nancy Reagan need not disclose borrowing expensive gowns and jewels, following reports that she has worn more than $1 million worth of such items since then.

"We will look at it again to see if we made the right decision," ethics office spokesman Donald Campbell said Monday.

Elaine Crispin, the first lady's press secretary, denied that Mrs. Reagan has kept any of the expensive items she obtained from designers and jewelers. She said in a statement late Monday that "Mrs. Reagan regrets that she failed to heed" the advice of White House counsel in 1982 to report such transactions, but that this was not technically required under the Ethics in Government Act.

Mrs. Crispin noted that the Office of Government Ethics had ruled in 1982 that "loans of apparel to Mrs. Reagan need not be reported on the president's financial disclosure forms. No paid-for apparel need be reported on any forms," the spokeswoman's statement said.

Campbell, a spokesman for the Office of Government Ethics, said the issue was first raised in 1982, when then-White House counsel Fred Fielding sent a letter to the ethics office detailing the situation at the time.

Campbell said Fielding concluded that this "was not something that needed to be reported" on Reagan's financial disclosure form. The forms are required under the Ethics in Government Act of 1978.

J. Jackson Walters, then-director of the ethics office, agreed with Fielding's conclusion at the time, Campbell said, adding that Mrs. Reagan has been operating under that guidance since then.

Mrs. Crispin said Mrs. Reagan did report such transactions anyway on her husband's form in 1982, about six months after the question arose.

She said the first lady decided at the time "to err on the side" of compliance but acknowledged that Mrs. Reagan stopped reporting the loans thereafter.

Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman said the first lady has not kept any of the numerous dresses and outfits loaned to her by designers.

"To a typical woman, there are some gowns that are so spectacular that you would only wear it once," she said.

"The apparel Mrs. Reagan received was either paid for, given to her personally as gifts by old friends, and not subject to reporting, or loaned to her and returned," she said.

Campbell said, however, that any time a question is raised about a decision by the ethics office, a review process is triggered, and that such a reassessment will take place in this instance.

The matter of Mrs. Reagan's use of expensive, borrowed clothes was raised in the current edition of Time magazine. It said she continued to accept and wear expensive evening gowns and other outfits furnished by leading couturiers such as James Galanos and David Hayes after saying she would discontinue the practice.

Chris Blazakis, a former business associate of Galanos, said he has identified more than 300 photographs of Mrs. Reagan since 1982 in which she is wearing outfits worth more than $1 million total.

Los Angeles designer Hayes told Time that Mrs. Reagan has kept some of the 60 to 80 made-to-order outfits she borrowed during the past eight years.

"We think of it as loans. It's wonderful," Hayes said. "She has been a sensation for my business."

The Time article included pictures of Mrs. Reagan wearing expensive gowns while posing with, among others, French President Francois Mitterrand and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. The article said she borrowed gowns ranging in value to as high as $22,000 for one such outfit.

Mrs. Crispin said that "for any first lady, there have been mounds of things that you have to go to, and you have to borrow, and it's not illegal."

Trapped Whale Has Pneumonia But May Survive Rescue Try

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — One of three gray whales trapped nearly two weeks by Arctic Sea ice has pneumonia, but biologists say the bleeding and battered behemoths should survive at least until a risky attempt at freeing them. An Alaska Army National Guard Skycrane helicopter was to lift off today from Prudhoe Bay to tow a 185-ton Hovercraft-type ice-breaking barge 200 miles northwest to the whales.

The trip, expected to take from 25 to 40 hours, was delayed Monday while the company that owns the barge made final checks for repairs, said Mike Haller, a National Guard spokesman.

The endangered California gray whales became trapped while migrating south to warmer waters. The 24-30-foot-long mammals were bleeding and battered from continually bashing into the jagged ice and were exhausted from swimming against the ocean current to remain in place.

The whales were trapped 18 miles northeast of this Inupiat Eskimo village. They were only a few hundred feet offshore in 45 feet of water, with their largest ice hole about 10-by-20 feet.

Villagers and biologists used ice picks Monday to keep the breathing holes open in the 6-inch thick ice, but sub-zero temperatures threatened to seal them. Ron Morris, with the National Marine Fisheries Service, said he and several veterinarians went onto the ice Monday to study the whales, and noticed that one had symptoms of pneumonia.

"Their condition has worsened since they were first spotted," Morris said. "One has a little pneumonia but the others are all right. We're being cautiously optimistic."

"We've got only one way to go, and that's up. But there's no question in my mind that they'll be here when the vehicle arrives." The whales ordinarily can stay underwater nearly four minutes without air, said Geoff Carroll, a North Slope Borough biologist. Carroll said they have been surfacing about every two minutes, indicating they were becoming tired and under stress.

Rescuers raced against onshore winds that threatened to close breaks in the ice that would serve as an escape route if the ice-breaking barge is able to free them.

"It was 17 below last night," Carroll said. "The thickness of the ice is increasing rapidly. It's growing a matter of inches every day."

Environmentalists, federal authorities and the oil industry have joined in the unusual alliance to rush the icebreaking barge to the whales so it can crush a narrow path to open water a half-dozen miles away.

Crews labored around the clock during the weekend and into the Arctic darkness Monday to get the barge and the Skycrane ready.

"We're not going to move that thing until we can make sure we'll have a clean run to Barrow," said Pete Leathard, a spokesman for Veco Inc., an oil field servicing company that owns the barge. "The Arctic is not a good place to break down in winter."

Plans called for the helicopter to pull the 85-by-60-foot barge with an 800-foot cable, Haller said.

"The plan has great potential for danger because of the altitude of the helicopter in the towing position. The nose is down," he said. "The danger is that if a line snaps and comes back up and gets in the rotors, we've got real trouble."

The helicopter, which costs $1,500 to $3,000 an hour to operate, will trade off with a second Skycrane, which has been flown to Prudhoe Bay. The barge is to carry 20,000 gallons of fuel for the helicopters and the barge, Haller said. The fuel was provided by Arco Alaska Inc.

Oil company officials have estimated that that portion of the rescue effort could cost as much as $500,000.

Greenpeace representative Cindy Lowry arrived here Sunday with recordings of migrating whales that she wants to play along the ice floe to lure the whales to safety.

California grays number about 20,000 and have been growing an average 2.5 percent a year for the past decade.

The whales spend their winters in the warm waters off Mexico and Southern California.

Congressman Faces Perjury Charges

ATLANTA (AP) — U.S. Rep. Pat Swindall, likely heading to trial next week on federal perjury charges, said he will resign from office if he is convicted but expressed confidence he would be exonerated.

A federal grand jury on Monday indicted the two-term Republican on 10 counts of perjury, saying he lied during a money laundering investigation. He pleaded innocent and was freed on his recognizance.

Swindall, who will represent himself, moved quickly to schedule his trial next week so the case could be resolved before the Nov. 8 election.

U.S. District Judge Robert L. Vining said he would reschedule another trial to hear the Swindall case Monday if the congressman filed the appropriate motion.

Swindall is seeking his third term representing a suburban Atlanta district, and he vowed to clear himself before the election.

But he said he would resign if convicted "because under the circumstances, I don't think it would be fair to the voters of the 4th District" to remain in office.

His Democratic opponent, former "Dukes of Hazzard" television actor Ben Jones, said, "I feel concern for the congressman and for his family at this point. ... It is a matter for the courts to decide."

The indictment accused Swindall of lying to the grand jury Feb. 2 during its investigation of a proposed $850,000 home mortgage loan the congressman had discussed with businessman Charles LeChasney and an undercover agent posing as a financier.

LeChasney and four others have been charged with money laundering.

The indictment charged that Swindall lied when he told the panel he did not go to authorities to report the loan negotiations because, "I never satisfied myself of anything with respect to criminality."

It also said he lied when he said there had never been discussions about trying to conceal the trail of the money.

Philippine Newspapers Say Government Sold Out

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Newspapers today accused the government of selling out by signing an agreement to extend the use of U.S. military bases.

Critics warned the pact will strengthen calls for closing the installations in 1991.

There was no reaction today from President Corason Aquino to the agreement, signed Monday in Washington by Secretary of State George Shultz and Philippine Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus.

Mrs. Aquino's spokesman, Teodoro Benigno, said the president could not comment because she had not seen a signed copy of the agreement and did not "have a full grasp of what transpired" in Washington.

Reporters asked Benigno whether Mrs. Aquino was fully aware of all the details of the agreement when she authorized Manglapus to sign it.

"All the details, I don't think so," Benigno replied.

The agreement allows the United States to use Clark Air Base, Subic Bay Naval Base and four smaller garrisons through 1991 in return for $962 million in American aid. The Philippines initially demanded $1.2 billion a year for the final two years of the bases agreement, an increase of $258 million.

The pact allows the United States to maintain its policy of neither confirming nor denying the presence of nuclear weapons and did not address Filipino demands for criminal jurisdiction and prior notification of military operations.

"He has sold out his country and grossly deceived his people," the national newspaper Malaya said of Manglapus. "For these treasonous acts, he ought never to show his face again in Manila."

In its afternoon edition today, People's Journal Tonight bannered:

"Bases Deal Disappointing." Cartoons in other dailies pictured Manglapus dancing with Shultz and a Filipino negotiator standing next to a figure of Uncle Sam wearing a sack over his head.

The Philippine Daily Globe predicted a wave of public outrage over the agreement which "bodes ill" for efforts to negotiate an extension of the lease on the bases after they expire in 1991.

Teodoro Locsin, publisher of the Daily Globe and Mrs. Aquino's speechwriter, said the final agreement underscored the lack of preparation within the Philippine government.

How to Cope with Medicine Side Effects

The list of side effects that can result from the use of prescription and nonprescription medicines is extensive. Some of the more commonly reported side effects that are not life-threatening include blurred vision, dizziness, dry mouth, fluid retention, headache, itching, breathing difficulties, and gastrointestinal problems such as diarrhea, nausea, and vomiting.

If a medicine is necessary for your health problem, you can often learn to cope with potential side effects. For example, if the medicine causes fluid retention, consider a low-salt diet -- avoid adding salt to prepared foods. If the medicine causes mild palpitations in the chest, avoid excessive stress, caffeinated beverages, cigarettes and alcohol. Minimize dry mouth or dry throat side effects by chewing gum or sucking ice chips. If you experience an upset stomach after taking certain medicines, check to see if the medicine can be taken with food or milk with no loss of effectiveness.

It is sometimes possible to minimize or avoid side effects by switching to other medicines or by using a nondrug approach to health problems. Check with us if you have questions about potential side effects of any of the medicines you are taking.

Couple Marries In Las Vegas Church

LAS VEGAS — Patricia Ann Meehan and Jay Walter Bretnall, both of Greenville, N.C., were married in the Little Church of the West Monday at 10:30 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan R. Colbert of Sun City, Ariz., and Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Bretnall of Raleigh, N.C., are parents of the couple.

The bride was given in marriage by Bryan Colbert. Lori Bretnall of Cary, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Walter Bretnall served his son as best man. Ushers were Greg Clifton and Lane Hoice, both of Greenville.

The bride wore a chapel-length gown of ivory taffeta styled with a Victorian neckline and fitted bodice accented with alencon lace and pearls. The long tapered lace sleeves, collar and train were accented with alencon lace motifs and pearls. Her illusion veil was trimmed in alencon lace and extended from a headpiece of lace and pearls.

The honor attendant wore a daphne rose satin tea-length gown with an elongated bodice, puffed sleeves and sweetheart neckline.

A reception was held at the Hacienda Hotel in Las Vegas.

After a wedding trip to San Francisco, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Pitt Community College and is a registered nurse with Quadrangle Medical Specialists. The bridegroom is employed by East Carolina Distributing and attended East Carolina University.

'Old-Fashioned' Mothers Ignored

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

She's a dinosaur roaming the cities and suburbs where watching "The Brady Bunch" and burping Tupperware once flourished. Her official name now is "old-fashioned mother," a term used to describe a married woman with children and no paid employment.

At one time she was a force fighting to make her presence known. No one really knew what she did all day or what she was thinking. No one appreciated her isolation, her loneliness, her worth or her lack of self-esteem.

Now, with only 9 million of her species left whose lives revolve around families and homes, her voice is rarely heard. Here and there support groups for full-time mothers are sprouting up. One mother confided, "I used to look down the streets on garbage day trying to find empty diaper boxes just so I could find out where other children live. We really have to search them out."

They are aware they have a function. Most of them are listed on every "In Case of Emergency" card in the schools. They watch "working mothers" dump off their children in front of THEIR homes when there's an "emergency." But the respect for their career choice is not there.

There are a few rumblings of change, but nothing that registers on the seismograph. A few new mothers who have been in the marketplace are opting to stay at home and raise their children or cut back their working hours. One mother was quoted as saying, "I couldn't stand knowing that someone else was going to have more input with my daughter than I was." But they're swimming against the tide.

Jib Fowles, a professor of human sciences at the University of Houston-Clear Lake, is promoting his theory that women are going to obtain greater security from being homemakers than being in the workplace. He says by the year 2000, American family life will return to the '60s, and 44 percent of families will go back to a mother in the home.

That really isn't the issue. The issue was raised recently at an exchange I attended in Moscow between Soviet and American women. Tucked in among the 35 or 40 "professionals" were two housewives. I asked the Soviet housewife how she was perceived by the women around the table. "I do not have the value placed on my work that they do," she said. "I chose to stay home and raise my son. For this I get less money from the state and less respect." Her American counterpart agreed.

All of the "professionals" around the table were part of the problem. We, who had also scrubbed toilets and brought fevers down. We, who should have known better.

If we have no respect for these women who made a choice to remain at home — then everything we did had no meaning whatsoever.

Demonstrations Are Announced

Demonstrations on using sheet fabric in home decorating will be held Wednesday at 10 a.m. and 12:15 p.m. at the Agricultural Extension Service.

Linda Boyette, Bertie County home economics extension agent, will give the programs. She will illustrate making bed covers and accessories, pillows, lampshades, tablecovers, napkins and window treatments. She will also discuss yardage conversion from various size linens.

Pre-register by calling the Agriculture Extension Office at 830-6370.

Social Security Future Could Be Annuity Angst

By Changing Times
THE KIPLINGER MAGAZINE

To senior citizens it's synonymous with a dignified retirement. But to many young workers these days Social Security provokes a severe case of what might be called annuity angst — the suspicion that after years of paying in, Social Security might not be there when they retire. The program probably will still exist, but the benefits probably won't be as good a deal for future retirees as they have been for their parents and grandparents.

For now, Social Security seems flush with cash, thanks to a 1983 rescue package that trimmed benefits slightly, provided for their partial taxation and sharply accelerated increases in the payroll tax. The changes anticipate the enormous strain on the system that will occur when the 80 million baby-boomers born between 1946 and 1964 begin retiring in the next century.

The cornerstone of the program is the accumulation of a huge current surplus from which the boomers will eventually draw.

Under the most likely actuarial assumptions, revenues will continue to exceed outgo until about 2018. But the funds will grow for another dozen or so years after that because of interest earned on the money already in the trust funds. Around the year 2030 the old-age and survivors insurance and disability insurance (OASDI) funds are expected to peak at about $12 trillion (not adjusted for inflation), then start to decline rapidly until the money is exhausted in 2048.

However, Social Security has at least four major hazards to navigate before its long-term health can be assured, says Changing Times magazine:

— The economic and demographic assumptions on which Social Security's long-term health is based may be too optimistic. For example, A. Haeworth Robertson, a former chief actuary at the Social Security Administration (SSA) and now president of the Retirement Policy Institute, fears SSA's current estimate of the long-term fertility rate after 2012 is inconsistent with the long-term downward trend. The fewer births, the fewer workers there will be to pay taxes.

— Soaring health care costs will force Medicare into the red within the next 12 years or so. Although Medicare is technically separate from the old-age pension program, the fortunes of the two are inextricably linked. The 7.51 percent payroll tax on wages, levied on both employers and employees, is allocated between OASDI and the hospital insurance (HI) segment of Medicare. When the pension trust fund faced a shortfall in 1983, it was permitted to borrow from the HI fund. This episode suggests that lawmakers might in turn tap OASDI to shore up Medicare, thus jeopardizing the surplus.

— As current surpluses mount, Congress might be tempted to enhance benefits for current retirees. Pressure is especially strong on politicians to find some way to finance long-term nursing home care. Robert Myers, executive director of the commission that produced the 1983 reforms, worries about such pressures: "These surpluses are bad for the system because today's beneficiaries will say, 'Surely we can increase benefits and there will be a lot left over.'" — The surpluses aren't really being saved. This is perhaps the most serious charge against the future viability of the program and the most difficult one to refute. Despite government terminology, there are no separate trust funds into which the surpluses are being deposited. Social Security payroll levies flow into the Treasury along with other taxes.

Benefits are disbursed from the Treasury. When payroll taxes exceed pension benefits, the trust funds are credited with "buying" nonmarketable Treasury bonds with the surplus. Such bonds are used to finance government debt, so in effect the government is borrowing from itself. Meanwhile, the surplus shows up as income that offsets expenditures in other parts of the federal budget, thus reducing the deficit that gets reported to the voters.

Still, the claims are on the books and eventually the Treasury will have to pay them off — probably starting in about 2019, the first year that OASDI benefits are scheduled to exceed payroll-tax revenues. To pay the claims, Social Security trustees will start cashing in all those IOUs created by the current surpluses. But because no money will have been set aside to pay the IOUs, the revenue will have to come from somewhere else.

What can you do to ensure your financial security in retirement no matter what happens to Social Security? Changing Times suggests you:

— Save. If you can afford to sock money into a Keogh plan or an IRA, even if a contribution to the latter is not deductible, do it. Also consider investing in a deferred annuity, which allows earnings to grow untaxed.

— Participate in savings or retirement plans offered by your employer. If your employer offers a 401(k) plan, contribute as much as possible. Your employer's plan will control how much you can contribute, perhaps as much as 25 percent of your pay, up to this year's legal maximum of $7,313.

— Get a handle on your retirement income. The Social Security Administration will estimate the amount of your government pension check when you retire no matter what your current age. The figures are presented in today's dollars, so the size of your check actually may be much greater because of inflation.

A form for requesting the information can be obtained by calling 800-937-2000. Or call or visit your local SSA office. In addition, ask the employee-benefits department at your place of work to estimate the amount of benefits you can expect from company-sponsored pension programs.

— Buy a home. This forces you to save. You can parlay equity into increasingly valuable properties until retirement, then move into a smaller dwelling, sell the house and live off the income from the proceeds. Or you could seek a reverse-annuity mortgage, which would allow you to convert your equity into a stream of fixed monthly payments.

Above all, advises Social Security Commissioner Dorcas Hardy, abandon the notion that Social Security is the cornerstone of your retirement income. Better to think of it as one of three sources, the other two being company pensions and your own savings and investments.

Old Relationships Are Comfortable

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a widower whose wife had several sisters. They constantly call him on the phone, ask him to do favors, invite him places, etc. He feels obligated to accept their invitations. I don't see why he feels obligated to attend functions, do favors and be available at their whim, but he does. This one sister had her eye on him herself, and sends him "favorite brother-in-law" cards that could be taken the wrong way. Abby, his wife is dead.

I know this is a dumb question, but is he still related to these people? It seems to me that the relationship ended when his wife died. Personally, I am getting tired of going places because he gets a call from one of them. We recently had a picnic and invited our friends. Of course, my friends did not know these people, whom he felt obligated to invite, so I said, "Oh, that's his first wife's family." Meanwhile, I kept asking myself, "Why are they here?"

Am I being picky? Shouldn't these old relationships be put aside? He now has new relationships to build on. — NEW WIFE

DEAR NEW WIFE: "Old relationships" cannot be put aside like a pair of worn-out shoes — nor should they be. Although he is no longer legally related to these people, he is comfortable with them after many years and feels that they are "family." Do not demand that he drop them to be replaced instantly by your friends. Go slowly, if you want a happy, lasting marriage with this man.

DEAR ABBY: When I travel by plane during the daytime, I like to look out and see the clouds, mountains, farmlands and little towns below. So, what am I supposed to do when the flight attendant says, "Please close your window shades; we need to have it dark for the movie?"

Well, I don't care for movies in flight — I prefer to keep my window shade up so I can enjoy the scenery.

I paid as much for my ticket as the next person, and I think I'm entitled to enjoy the flight too. So what's the solution? — NO MOVIES, THANKS

DEAR NO MOVIES: Since you are in the minority and the light is distracting, be a good sport and pull your shade down. A movie usually lasts no more than 90 minutes, and there is still time to enjoy the scenery.

DEAR ABBY: I recently graduated from an Ivy League college and was inducted into the honor society of Phi Beta Kappa.

My grandparents bought me a gold Phi Beta Kappa key as a gift. I am very proud of my academic achievements, but I am wondering if it's considered tacky to wear a Phi Beta Kappa key. It's a beautiful key, and I am honored to be a member, but I don't want people to think I'm snooty or terribly elitist. Can you offer a suggestion? — E.S.M.

DEAR E.S.M.: You've earned the right to wear the coveted key, and what's more, your proud grandparents bought one for you, so I advise you not to worry what others may think — wear it.

People are eating them up! To order your copy of Abby's favorite recipes, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

NAEHE Annual Meeting Held

The National Association of Extension Home Economists annual meeting was held last week in Pittsburgh, Pa. Addie R. Gore and Evelyn L. Spangler of Pitt County attended.

The conference included over 60 workshops centered around the theme, "Visions of Opportunity."

Wedding Vows Said In Noon Ceremony

WILMINGTON, Del. — Christ Church Christian Hundred was the scene of the Oct. 8 wedding of Karen Campbell Harris and James Robert Klingler. The Rev. William B. Lane conducted the noon double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Raymond Nemtuda of Wilmington and the late Kenneth Gillespie Harris Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Klinger of St. Louis are parents of the bridegroom.

Wanda Harris Spong of Alexandria, Va., and Margaret Harris Dickson of Charlotte, N.C., were honor attendants for their sister. Bridesmaids were Anne Duvoisin Halliburton of Durham, N.C., Wendy Roberts Bulgarelli of Lewisburg, Pa., and Amy Ruark of Wilmington.

The best man was Donald W. Klinger of St. Louis, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Kenneth Gillespie Harris of Wilmington, twin brother of the bride, William Repasky of Louisville, Ky., Matt Haney of South Bend, Ind., Scott Greenspon of New York and John Thomas of Charlotte.

The reader was Joseph Kershaw Spong, brother-in-law of the bride. Organist William A. Owen III and vocalist Emily Jo Guthrie of Washington, D.C., cousin of the bride, presented wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her paternal grandfather, Kenneth Gillespie Harris Sr. of Greenville, N.C. She wore her mother's wedding gown. It was fashioned with a candlelight satin skirt and candlelight alencon lace bodice trimmed with sequins and pearls and had a chapel-length train. She wore a matching alencon lace headpiece and veil. She carried a bouquet of ivory and pink roses.

A reception was held in the Gold Ballroom of the Hotel Dupont. Music for dancing was provided by Tradewinds.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will live in Brentwood, Miss.

The bride is a nurse at Children's Hospital in St. Louis. She attended Brandywine High School and Vanderbilt University School of Nursing. The bridegroom is an attorney with Coburn, Craft and Putzell in St. Louis. He attended Parkway Central High School and Vanderbilt University School of Law in Nashville.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Dupont Country Club.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 54.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. The final weighted average is 50.17 cents. The market tone for next week's trading is generally steady and the live supply is mostly moderate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 2,119,000, compared to 2,037,000 last Tuesday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply barely adequate for a good demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 22 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 to 2 cents higher at mostly 2.95-3.16 in East and mostly 3.15-3.20 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 6 to 7 cents higher at mostly 7.76-8.06 in East and mostly 7.68-7.81 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.85-3.95; new crop soybeans 7.51-8.01. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 98 to 100 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted in early trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 7.29 at 2,133.18 after half an hour of trading.

Advancing stocks were slightly ahead of declining ones, with 435 issues higher, 433 lower and 5095 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 23,160,000 shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Kraft stock shot up 27 1/2 a share to 37 3/8 in heavy trading, just below the $90 a share offered late Monday by Philip Morris in an $11 billion takeover offer. Philip Morris stock fell 1/2 to 95, apparently because investors felt the acquisition would dilute the earnings of the cigarette and food giant.

In another development in the food industry, Pillsbury was up 1/4 at 58 7/8. Pillsbury said its directors unanimously rejected Grand Metropolitan's $60-a-share tender offer.

Among other blue-chip stocks, IBM was up 3/4 at 121 1/2, General Electric was up 1/4 at 44, General Motors was up 3/8 at 75 3/8 and AT&T was unchanged at 26 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up 0.08 at 155.95. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 0.27 at 303.00.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 7.29 to 2,140.47.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE, with 737 up, 666 down and 544 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 119.29 million shares, against 160.24 million in the previous session.

Nuns Keep Up Protest

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A priest who tried to negotiate an end to the two-week standoff between five conservative nuns and their reform-minded diocese has returned home with his mission unfulfilled.

One of the nuns, Sister John of the Cross, who has acted as a spokeswoman for the group, said the nuns would not budge from their Roman Catholic monastery, where they have locked themselves in the infirmary, until they hear directly from the Vatican.

"We are all united here. There's no division among the five," she said in a telephone interview Monday from the Monastery of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel, located about 30 miles west of New York City.

The Rev. Kevin Culligan, dispatched by the Vatican to try to persuade the nuns and the Diocese of Paterson to resolve their differences, returned home to Wisconsin on Monday night.

The Carmelite friar said he will submit a report to Cardinal Jerome Hamer, an official of the Congregation for Religious and Secular Institutes, an arm of the Vatican.

Detainees May Leave U.S. Office

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three escaped detainees camped in the U.S. Consulate for more than a month plan to leave their sanctuary Wednesday, an anti-apartheid labor federation said today.

The three prominent activists, who escaped detention Sept. 13, have been living in the consulate on the 11th floor of a downtown Johannesburg office building.

The South African government has said the trio is free to leave and it will not detain or restrict the men in any way.

The decision for the men to leave "is a major test of the government's undertaking and will once again bring the spotlight on the detention and persecution of anti-apartheid activists," the Congress of South African Trade Unions said in a statement.

The congress is the country's largest black labor organization and is a militant opponent of apartheid.

The anti-apartheid leaders are Murphy Morobe and Mohammed Valli Moosa, leaders of the banned United Democratic Front coalition, and Vusi Khanyile, chairman of the banned National Education Crisis Committee.

U.S. officials have said they would not force the three to leave despite a worldwide U.S. policy of not allowing diplomatic offices to be used by those seeking asylum.

U.S. officials have maintained a low profile during the episode and U.S. Embassy spokesman William Zavis said he had no immediate comment on the matter.

Earlier the activists had said they do not trust the government and repeated their call for the release of other political detainees.

An estimated 30,000 people have been detained without trial for varying lengths of time under the 28-month-old state of emergency. About 1,000 people currently are believed to be in detention. Most are being held for political activism.

An activist who escaped Sept. 21 to the U.S. Consulate, Clifford Ngcobo, left the refuge earlier to obtain medical treatment, his law firm said.

By law and custom, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 26 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

the struggle against the Nazi dictatorship," Honecker said, according to ADN.

"In East Germany today, all Jewish citizens have found their true home," Honecker added.

ADN quoted Bronfman as telling Honecker that "I believe that today we have built a bridge."

ADN said Bronfman thanked Honecker for recent government efforts on the part of Jews, including funding for the reconstruction of a synagogue in East Berlin.

Bronfman has said that an admission of shared responsibility for the Holocaust was as important as financial contributions to victims.

After Bronfman's arrival Sunday, Bronfman told The Associated Press he believed the East German leadership was sincere in offering some reparations.

Such an agreement would mark a major change in the communist nation's previous policies.

Bronfman said the money was a "token thing."

"What is at stake here is moral culpability," he said.

More than 6 million Jews were killed during Adolf Hitler's Third Reich, a fact that East Germany does not dispute.

But, since its founding in 1949, East Germany has argued that it bears no responsibility for Nazi atrocities because the nation was born after World War II ended.

East Germany has traditionally portrayed both communists and Jews as victims of the Nazis. Official communiques regularly refer to efforts by German communists who fought against persecution of the Jews.

However, in recent months East German media have reported on government efforts to improve relations with the East Berlin Jewish community.

In June, East Germany said it was willing to provide "humanitarian aid" to Jewish survivors of the Holocaust, but negotiations have continued on the reparations themselves.

West Berlin Jewish leaders have said that East Germany has been considering paying up to $100 million.

In 1952, West Germany signed an agreement with the World Jewish Congress to compensate Holocaust victims and families. Since then, West Germany has paid more than $48 billion to Holocaust survivors all over the world.

Rate Hearing

RALEIGH (AP) — An attorney for the North Carolina Rate Bureau testified Monday that a proposed 6.4 percent increase in automobile insurance rates was "actuarially sound, fully justified and proper."

H. Charles Young Jr. spoke in favor of the increase for the bureau, which handles rate matters for the state's automobile insurance companies.

But on the opening day of hearings on the rate increase, E. Daniels Nelson, an attorney for the Insurance Department said that Insurance Commissioner Jim Long should not only deny the request, but cut insurance rates by as much as 3.8 percent.

At stake for North Carolina drivers is about $73 million in additional premiums if insurance companies win the full increase. If approved, the rates are scheduled to become effective Jan. 1.

Indictment

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Randolph county man faces murder charges along with his sister and brother-in-law in connection with the 1986 strangulation death of a Greensboro woman, who apparently was going to testify against him in a drug trial.

Hoyle Eugene Wray, 34, of Trinity was arrested Monday by Guilford County sheriff's deputies after he was indicted by a grand jury on a charge of first-degree murder.

Wray, manager of Archdale Food in High Point, is charged with the death of 23-year-old Brenda Cecil Stout. His sister and brother-in-law, Donna Wray Tucker and Kenneth Tucker, both from the Thomasville area, were arrested in April on the same charge.

A's Try To Get Back In The Series

The Associated Press

Los Angeles' Kirk Gibson watches the flight of the ball

World Series Moves To Oakland For Game Three

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics have geography and maybe a little psychology on their side as they renew their World Series battle against the Los Angeles Dodgers tonight.

The A's, trailing 2-0 in the best-of-seven Series, take on Dodgers left-hander John Tudor, who has pitched just once in the past 27 days and admits to being somewhat demoralized by the long layoff.

"It is a little disheartening having to go out and throw on 15 days' rest and then nine days and have myself and everyone else expecting me to do the job," Tudor said. "I'm not in any kind of rhythm now. I hope I get in one real quick."

At the same time, Dodgers slugger Kirk Gibson, unable to start either of the first two games because of leg injuries, was getting worse instead of better.

"I'm sorer today than I was yesterday — much sorer," Gibson said at Monday's workout.

With Bob Welch, a former Dodger, going for the A's, Game 3 features a matchup of two pitchers who have struggled in postseason games.

Tudor, 10-8 during the season, was traded from St. Louis to Los Angeles last Aug. 17 for Pedro Guerrero. He was 4-3 with the Dodgers but did not start in the regular season after Sept. 18. He didn't pitch again until Oct. 9, when he gave up four runs on eight hits in five innings against New York in the playoffs.

That gave Tudor a career playoff ERA of 3.00. His World Series ERA is 4.03.

The Dodgers said Tudor was rested at the end of the regular season because of a hip injury. Tudor said it wasn't so.

"I'm not hurt. I haven't been hurt," Tudor said. "That played no part in it."

Lasorda said he understood Tudor's consternation, but he said he had a choice to make.

"When I was putting together the pitching assignments, I felt it would be easier for Tudor to pitch on too much rest than (rookie) Tim Belcher," Lasorda said. "I felt with Tudor's experience in big games, he would be better able to handle it than Belcher."

Welch, meanwhile, has a lifetime playoff ERA of 4.50, and his World Series history has slid precipitously since his spotlight strikeout of Reggie Jackson in 1978. He made only one start in the 1981 World Series against New York and gave up two runs on three hits and walk, leaving without getting a single batter out.

Welch's career ERA in the World Series is 10.39.

"In 1981, it was just one of those days when he didn't have his good

Gibson Expects Spot Duty Only

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Don't look for Kirk Gibson to do anything more than pinch hit the rest of the World Series.

After taking about six minutes of batting practice Monday, the hero of Game 1 of the Series says he doesn't expect to be in the Los Angeles Dodgers' starting lineup at all.

"I think it's pretty obvious what my role is going to be, if any," Gibson said after taking about 45 swings. "I can't run."

What Gibson meant was he expects to be limited to pinch-hitting duties throughout the rest of the Series.

Gibson, whose two-out, two-run homer on a 3-2 pitch off Oakland relief ace Dennis Eckersley in the bottom of the ninth inning of Game 1 gave the Dodgers a 5-4 victory over the Athletics last Saturday night, has a sprained medial collateral ligament in his right knee.

It's an injury which would sideline Gibson for up to two weeks in normal circumstances, said Dr. Frank Jobe, the Dodgers' team physician.

In addition, Gibson also has injuries to his left knee and hamstring.

When asked if he might be able to serve as the Dodgers' designated hitter, Gibson replied, "How can I designate hit if I can't run?"

The injury to Gibson's right knee occurred in Game 7 of the National League playoffs last Wednesday night. He hurt himself sliding into second base.

Gibson wasn't needed Sunday night during the Dodgers' 6-0 win, giving them a 2-0 lead in the Series, which continues tonight at the Oakland Coliseum.

UCLA Is Number 1 In Latest AP Top 20

By Herschel Nissenon

"It's not time for Christmas yet, but if we win the rest of our games, we'll win the national championship, and that's a nice feeling."

That was UCLA coach Terry Donahue's reaction Monday when he learned that the Bruins were ranked No. 1 in this week's Associated Press college poll for the first time in 21 years.

Not so fast, Terry. True, UCLA plays third-ranked Southern California on Nov. 19, but so does second-ranked Notre Dame on Nov. 26, and the Irish have been known to do some near-impossible things in past polls.

Three USC Players Involved In Fracas

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Three University of South Carolina football players were arrested for disorderly conduct — a few hours after two of the players had taken part in the team's 34-0 loss to Georgia Tech.

Linebacker Shannon Jones, 19, who has been ineligible to play this year, surrendered to police about 4 p.m. Monday after learning he was charged in warrants with simple assault and disorderly conduct.

Defensive end Michael Douglas Tolbert, 18, and center Curtis Ruffin High, 21, were arrested about 2:30 a.m. Sunday in the Food Lion parking lot in the Five Points area. They were charged with disorderly conduct and public drunkenness.

Tolbert and High were freed on $235 bonds. Jones was released on a $218 bond.

A 22-year-old university student who swore out the warrant against the 235-pound Jones said she and a friend were walking to a car in the parking lot.

"We were just walking through the parking lot, and these guys in a truck yelled out obscenities," she said. "All we wanted to do was go home."

She said they continued to their car, but the three men followed them, yelling obscenities, spitting and threatening to rape her.

Jamie Mueller tries to leap a Buffalo Bill defender

Bills Rip The Jets Make Most Of TV Appearance

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Prime time was the right time for the Buffalo Bills.

The Bills had one terrific time Monday night, routing the New York Jets 37-14 before a national television audience. It was the first appearance in the NFL's spotlight game in four years for Buffalo, which leads the AFC East by two games with a 6-1 record.

"This quiets a lot of people down, the people who were wondering about the Buffalo Bills," said Jim Kelly, who threw for 302 yards and three touchdowns. "The whole nation knows what we can do."

What the Bills did was jump to a 17-0 lead through 15 minutes and 31-7 at halftime. Kelly hit Andre Reed, the AFC's leading receiver, for 65 and 16-yard touchdowns and Flip Johnson made his first NFL reception a 66-yard score off a deflected ball.

"It was the hottest half I've had, by far," said Kelly, who also threw for more than 300 yards and three TDs last week. "What a time to do it!"

The Bills did it all over the field. When they weren't marching through the Jets' sieve-like defense, the Bills were pressuring Ken O'Brien. They sacked O'Brien five times and allowed the Jets just 14 yards total offense in the first quarter.

"It would be an understatement to say we were pumped up," said Bruce Smith, the All-Pro defensive end who had 2½ sacks. It was his best effort since returning earlier this month from a 30-day substance abuse suspension.

"We had guys ready and dressed at seven o'clock," Smith said. "This was a chance to show what the Buffalo Bills can do and we did."

The Jets showed nothing. They were missing three starters — tight end Mickey Shuler, offensive tackle Dave Cadigan and linebacker Alex Gordon. They lost another, guard Ted Banker, with a foot injury, and reserve running back Nuu Faaola was carried off the field on a stretcher in the fourth period when injured on a kickoff. He was to spend the night in a hospital for observation of a bruised neck.

"The team is kind of in a daze right now," safety Erik McMillan said. The rookie was one of the few bright spots for New York, picking off a Kelly pass and running it from 40 yards for his first NFL touchdown. "When the team comes back to practice, we have to do some more soul searching and find out who really wants to play the game."

Kelly and Reed seemed to be playing their own game of catch in the first half. Reed, who tops the conference with 42 receptions, had all seven of his catches for 132 yards in the first half.

ECU Set To Face Syracuse

Baker Sees Improvement Despite Recent Loss

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Pirates played one of their better games of the season Saturday afternoon, East Carolina football coach Art Baker said, but it wasn't enough.

Baker, speaking at his weekly press conference Monday, said that Florida State had more talent than any team the Pirates have seen thus far this season. The Seminoles, playing on their home field, took a 45-21 victory over East Carolina but scored their final touchdown with only three seconds remaining in the game.

"It was a very physical game. I didn't really realize how physical until I watched the film," Baker said.

As a result, a number of Pirate players suffered slight injuries, but Baker said only one, Stephen Braddy, a linebacker's was serious enough for him to miss the next game. Brady, who suffered a knee injury, will be in a cast for three weeks, and is doubtful for the rest of the season.

"Florida State has done a great job of recruiting talent," Baker said. "That was evident in that their third or fourth string tailback had such a great game." Chris Parker, filling in

Pirates Say They Still Have Plenty To Play For

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Saturday's loss to Florida State guaranteed East Carolina its fifth-straight losing season, but despite a 1-6 record, players and coaches say there is still plenty left to play for.

Coming off a 5-6 mark last year that was the team's best since 1983, optimism was high when the team opened practice in August. But a 1-4 mark in September sent the Pirates reeling.

"I've been here five years and last year I thought our seniors did a good job, as well as the whole team, turning the corner," said senior defensive tackle Shannon Boling.

"Now we're 1-6 and the (hope for) a winning season is over with. We can't get that and we realize that. What we can do right now is earn some respect."

The Pirates are coming off a 45-21 loss to Florida State and return to action Saturday at home against a 5-1 Syracuse team.

"The thing that impresses me about our players is even though we've played West Virginia and Florida State the last two weeks, I'm continually amazed at the way they come back in with their heads up," said ECU coach Art Baker. "They are a resilient group. Sooner or later it is going to turn around. We just

Bird Signs 2-Year Contract Extension

BOSTON (AP) — The rumblings began in last season's playoffs when Larry Bird noted that lesser players were making more money than him. They continued in this season's training camp when he expressed impatience with the pace of negotiations toward a contract extension. They ended Monday when he and the Boston Celtics announced an agreement on a two-year extension running through the 1991-1992 NBA season that will pay the perennial All-Star a reported $4.2 million a year.

"I'm real happy with everything," said Bird, who treated several Celtics' rookies to dinner Monday night. "The Celtics were very fair with me and now I'm going to work hard to help bring another championship to Boston."

He has four years left to do that — the two remaining on a five-year deal and the two added Monday. Bob Wolf, his attorney, said Bird, now 31, will retire after that.

"Salaries have escalated so much, and the only way I was going to get more money was to give them more years," Bird said.

"After David Robinson got his, and Michael (Jordan) got his and they redid Magic (Johnson), I wondered if anyone would ever say anything to me. It made me think, 'What's my place in all this?' When the Celtics said in the paper last spring they were willing to sit down and talk to me, I said 'Great.'"

Bird's immediate concerns are a trip to Spain for two exhibition games and the last two years on his original contract, which pays him $1.8 million per year.

Wolf said the 6-foot-9 forward, an All-Star in each of his nine NBA seasons, will honor those terms.

The Celtics were scheduled to leave today for Madrid, where they will play against European squads in the McDonald's Open that starts Friday.

"I believed what I said all along," said teammate Dennis Johnson. "I thought they were going to do something for Larry sooner or later. Larry is the one who is probably most relieved."

The $1.8 million Bird will receive in each of the next two seasons is less than what less accomplished players receive, a point he raised publicly during the playoffs. Wolf said the new deal would make Bird one of the five highest paid players in the league.

According to reliable estimates, Bird will receive $8.4 million for the 1990 and 1991 seasons. Wolf said the extension is "well in excess of $4 million (per year) for the final two years of his contract."

There were indications that the full four-year package is worth more than $12 million.

Chicago Bulls Michael Jordan recently signed an eight-year contract that would pay him $2.7 million in each of the first four years and $3.25 million in each of the last four years. Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers and Isiah Thomas of Detroit have deals worth a reported $2 million per year.

"There's only one Larry Bird," Wolf said. "There's never been another Larry Bird and there never will be another Larry Bird. Therefore, he is getting a contract he deserves."

Bird had set a deadline of Nov. 4, when the Celtics open their regular season against New York, for conclusion of negotiations. He indicated that if they weren't completed by then, he would finish the two years on his contract and then retire or become a free agent.

"Larry would never play for anybody but the Celtics," Wolf said Monday. "We're thrilled he's going to play a couple of extra years. He's my next-door neighbor and I want him there as long as I can keep him."

Bird missed the Oct. 7 opening of the Celtics' training camp, but Wolf's office attributed that to problems with airplane reservations. Boston General Manager Jan Volk said he was surprised by Bird's absence. Bird showed up the next day.

On Oct. 10, he criticized Volk and the pace of negotiations. He later softened his stand.

Volk said Monday that in negotiations, "There's always a possibility that you might not be able to come to common ground, that you might not be able to reach agreement."

"Fortunately, we did ... I understand Larry Bird's concerns and frustrations. It was a very important thing to him and it's very important to us," Volk said.

Bird, who originally signed a six-year contract with Boston as a first-round draft choice out of Indiana State, is entering his 10th year with the Celtics.

Bird was the NBA's rookie of the year in 1980 and is the first Celtic to score 2,000 points or more in three consecutive seasons.

Bird played in 76 games last season and was third in the NBA in scoring, averaging 29.9 points per game. He was second in free throw percentage, with .916 average, and third in 3-point shot accuracy, averaging .414.

information on him and an anti-drug message on the back.

Featured on the cards are football players Jarrod Moody, Shannon Boling, Billy Michel and Reggie McKinney, along with basketball coach Mike Steele and players Guy Hill, Kenny Murphy, Jeff Kelly, Reed Lose and Theodore "Blue" Edwards.

"We're truly excited about our drug and alcohol awareness campaign because it enables us to involve our community and school systems in a collective effort to combat drugs and alcohol abuse," Dave Hart Jr., ECU athletic director said. "These problems are not problems of the athlete, but of society as a whole."

"It's hard for student-athletes to realize how much a role model they are to the youth of our community," Hart added. "Having our student-athletes serve as such positive role models certainly enhances the image our program would like to project."

The trading cards will be available beginning Oct. 23 at Pizza Huts in eastern North Carolina, one each week. They are available without purchase.

"(We) are pleased to be able to join the East Carolina University Athletic Department with the fight against drugs," said Theron Riley of Pizza Hut. "Drugs and alcohol abuse hurts our families as much as it does those of athletes."

In addition, at the Oct. 29 football game against Miami, Fla., 20,000 Moody and Edwards cards will be given out at the gate.

Individuals showing a full set of football cards at the Nov. 28 basketball game against UNC-Greensboro, and those showing a full set of basketball cards at the Feb. 20 basketball game against Navy, may purchase tickets for those games at half-price.

In addition, showing the football set at the restaurant between Nov. 20-26, or the basketball set between Feb. 19-25, will receive a free mug.

The restaurant will also present a full scholarship to the Pirate Club in the name of the most valuable ECU player in the Feb. 25 game against UNC-Wilmington.

Johnson Took Advantage Of Chance

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Had Chris Burkett not injured a knee, Flip Johnson would still be one of those NFL footnotes — a perennial redshirt who spent his rookie season on Buffalo's injured reserve list with a "knee injury" and much of this season on the two-man inactive list.

Now, he'll be remembered as the guy who caught a bizarre 66-yard touchdown pass in the national glare

Monday Night Football history, a pass deflected to him at a 90-degree angle. It was his first NFL reception and his first NFL score as the Bills beat the New York Jets 37-14 Monday night.

"You don't score many touchdowns, so you savor it when you get it," he said in what stands as the understatement of the evening.

The play came with 3:05 left in the first quarter and the Bills holding a 10-0 lead. Given the way Buffalo dominated, it might have meant nothing more than a 30-14 final instead of 37-14, though Bills Coach Marv Levy cited it as an example of how things went Buffalo's way.

So did Carl Howard, the Jet who tipped the ball to Johnson.

"That play symbolized the entire game," he said.

Because Burkett, one of the starters, was out, Johnson was in the game as one of three wide receivers in a third-and-10 situation. All three — he, Andre Reed and Trumaine Johnson — along with running back Robb Riddick were to go straight down the field and turn around 15-yards deep on hook patterns.

Quarterback Jim Kelly aimed for Riddick and threw directly at Howard, New York's nickel back, who was standing directly in his path just over midfield. Howard tried to grab the ball and it deflected toward the sideline, where Johnson stood with cornerback John Booty of the Jets.

"I saw it floating toward me and I thought 'oh man, grab it,'" said the 5-foot-10, 185-pound Johnson, signed as free agent rookie last year after catching 63 passes in his final year at Appalachian State.

"I knew their guy was going for it, too, so I just grabbed for it and took off."

minutes left to play. Before that Duke dumped Virginia 38-34.

"I think we're playing reasonably well," Welsh said. "I don't think it's a question of confidence. I don't think it's a question of not wanting to win or X's and O's. We're just not doing what we have to do to win."

Now the Cavaliers face Wake Forest, 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Virginia Squandering Wins This Year

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — The final 19 minutes of the Virginia-Louisville football game last weekend seemed to typify the Cavaliers season.

In those 19 minutes, Virginia, 2-4, squandered a 28-14 lead on a blocked punt, a snap that sailed over the holder's head on a short field goal, and a 42-yard, no time-out drive by the Cardinals for a field goal with 10 seconds remaining, for the 30-28 loss.

What went wrong?

"If I try to answer all those questions, I'd go crazy," coach George Welsh said at his Monday news conference.

The Cavaliers third straight loss focused the players' attention on the future.

"From now on it's do-or-die," said sophomore cornerback Jason Wallace. "I'd say we probably have to win the rest of our games if we want to salvage what we had."

The Cavaliers started the season coming off an 7-4 record for 1987 and a 22-16 over Brigham Young in the

All American Bowl. At the season's start Welsh said the football program was "in the best shape... during my six years at Virginia."

After beating Division I-AA William & Mary, the Cavaliers had high hopes against Penn State. The Nittany Lions trounced Virginia 42-14.

Two weeks ago, Clemson defeated Virginia 10-7 with a touchdown pass to a wide open receiver with two minutes left to play. Before that Duke dumped Virginia 38-34.

"I think we're playing reasonably well," Welsh said. "I don't think it's a question of confidence. I don't think it's a question of not wanting to win or X's and O's. We're just not doing what we have to do to win."

Now the Cavaliers face Wake Forest, 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Allen, Worthen Are Top Offensive Players

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Clemson tailback Terry Allen and North Carolina State flanker Nasrallah Worthen have been picked as the Atlantic Coast Conference offensive players of the week.

Allen, a 5-foot-11, 195-pound sophomore from Commerce, Ga., ran for a game-high 134 yards on 17 carries and scored one touchdown as the Tigers defeated previously unbeaten Duke 49-17. Allen, the conference's leading rusher with 568 yards and four touchdowns, ran for 79 yards in the first half as Clemson built a 28-14 halftime lead.

Worthen, a 5-9, 165-pound senior from Jacksonville, Fla., caught a season-high nine passes for 114 yards, including a 12-yard touchdown catch in the third quarter, as the Wolfpack beat North Carolina 48-3.

Gamecock Players Arrested

The men got out of the truck, but when a police officer who had watched the incident drove up, all but Jones got back inside, she said.

The woman said Jones struck her, knocking her to the ground, and ran, and that the officer, C.E. Stokes, and her friend chased him on foot.

The two caught up with Jones in the lot, and a fight erupted, she said.

"It was just a little fight there for a minute," she said.

According to police reports, Tolbert and High were in the parking lot and appeared intoxicated, smelled of alcohol and used profane language. After being jailed for disorderly conduct and public drunkenness, the men allegedly disrupted jail business and were charged with disorderly conduct in jail.

Police said Jones of Richmond, Va., was not arrested at the scene because he was allowed to seek medical attention for a nose injury sustained in the fight.

The woman said Monday she did not know the men were South Carolina football players.

Jones, a transfer from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, has been honored as scout team defensive player of the week but has been ineligible to play because of the transfer. He did not travel with the team to Atlanta Saturday for the match against the Georgia Tech.

High of Raleigh, N.C., and Tolbert of Valdosta, Ga., played in the game. South Carolina had been ranked No. 8 before the game, and was a 15-point favorite to win. It was the Gamecocks' first loss of the season.

Series To Oakland

stuff," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said, at the same time dismissing notions that Welch is too hyper to pitch well in big games.

"That's just not true," Lasorda said.

Welch went to the A's along with Matt Young for Alfredo Griffin and Jay Howell last Dec. 11 in a three-way deal that also sent Jesse Orosco to the Dodgers from the New York Mets in return for minor leaguers from both clubs.

He made one start in the playoffs against Boston, giving up five runs on six hits in 12-3 innings.

"I have a great deal of confidence in Bob Welch," A's Manager Tony La Russa said. "He's been in similar situations when we're coming off a loss and there's been a lot of pressure on him to win a big game. He can handle it."

"Against Boston, they got a couple of breaking balls they could handle, they got ahead quick and they got something going."

The A's lost the first two games of the Series at Los Angeles 5-4 on a ninth-inning pinch homer by Gibson and 6-0 on a three-hit shutout by Orel Hershiser.

In the past 33 years, 16 teams have won the first two games of the Series and only seven have gone on to win it. One team has won the first two games in each of the last three Series. Minnesota went ahead of St. Louis 2-0 in 1987 and won in seven games. Boston took a 2-0 lead over New York in 1986 and lost in seven. And St. Louis led Kansas City 2-0 in 1985 before losing in seven.

In Oakland, the Dodgers will gain a DH, but they're not sure yet who it will be. And it doesn't look like it'll be Gibson.

"I think it's pretty obvious what my role is going to be," Gibson said. "I can't run. How can I DH if I can't run?"

Lasorda said he would leave a final decision on Gibson's availability up to Gibson.

"We'll let him do whatever he feels he can do. If he thinks he can play left field, that's the way we'll go. If he can DH, that's what we'll do," Lasorda said. "He's working awful hard to get ready, but at this point, I just can't say he will be."

If Gibson can't DH, Lasorda said he would use Mike Davis. Mickey Hatcher would stay in left field, while Franklin Stubbs plays first.

The Dodgers held a light workout Monday, while the A's held an optional practice with just eight players.

"I had a decision to make, and I decided it was best to take a day off and start at them fresh on Tuesday," La Russa said.

The A's got all four of their runs in Game 1 on Jose Canseco's second-inning grand slam. Since that homer, Oakland has gone 16 innings without scoring. La Russa said two things have hurt the A's run production: swinging for the fences, and Hershiser.

"It sometimes happens to us — sometimes when somebody juices the ball early, and the rest of the guys see the ball carrying well," La Russa said. "I have a strong preference for putting hits together and making runs. I don't like to wait, wait, wait for a home run. But I think we were looking to hit the bomb and got off our stroke."

"Then, in the second game, Hershiser did a great job."

La Russa said he had two areas in which he must make lineup decisions.

Without the DH in Los Angeles, La Russa used Dave Parker in left field against right-handed pitchers. Parker had the only three hits off Hershiser Sunday, and La Russa said he might like to keep Parker in left field while letting Don Baylor DH.

"Parker's been an inspired player, and I'd like to keep him playing," La Russa said. "And I don't think John Tudor is necessarily the kind of left-hander that forces you to sit down your left-handed hitters."

The other question area is at catcher. Ron Hassey normally catches for Welch, but he is a left-handed hitter, too. The other A's catcher is a right-handed hitter, Terry Steinbach.

"And Terry's been one of our best hitters against left-handed pitchers," La Russa said.

Gibson Still Ailing

The Series format calls for designated hitters to be used in games at the American League park, meaning there will be designated hitters in the third, fourth and fifth games.

"If Gibson's not the DH, Mike Davis is," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said.

That appears likely.

"I'm sorer today than I was yesterday, much sorer," said Gibson, who took about five minutes of batting practice some 3½ hours before Sunday's game and decided he wasn't fit to play. "If the situation arises, I'll prepare myself, put that (his injuries) behind me, do the best I can."

Gibson hit several balls hard Monday, seven of them into the Oakland Coliseum seats, but clearly had trouble handling outside pitches.

"I feel like I'm standing there with no leg at all," he said. "I have to use my arms."

"I tried to do a little jogging out there (before he hit). It was a joke. I just can't do anything. It hurts when I swing."

At one point during the batting practice, Gibson hit three consecutive balls into the seats off coach Mark Cresse. Gibson then hit a popup and blew up, complaining about his swing.

Gibson, who hit 290 with 25 homers and 76 runs batted in this season, hit a solo homer in the top of the 12th inning to give the Dodgers a 5-4 victory over the New York Mets in Game 4 of the NL playoffs.

The next day, he hit a three-run homer to help Los Angeles win 7-4.

Gibson expressed frustration concerning the amount of attention he is receiving from the media.

"I like to be left alone," he said. "The most frustrating thing about this whole situation is you people (reporters)."

"The team can go on without me, so why not focus on them? I don't think it's fair to my teammates. If we win, we win together. If we lose, we'll lose together."

Jobe said Gibson wouldn't risk further injury by playing.

"It's whether or not the pain is too much," Jobe said.

Gibson was given an injection of cortisone and xylocaine Saturday afternoon, about five hours before his dramatic homer off Eckersley.

"The injection was given as a specific medical treatment for his knee, but was not given in order to take away the pain so he could play," Jobe said. "It was treatment for the inflammation."

Before he took the field Monday, Gibson spent time in the trainer's room. He was given electric stimulation as well as ice and heat, Jobe said.

Myers Allowed To Compete At Furman

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Although suspended from international and national competition by the U.S. Swimming board of review, Angel Myers will be able to compete for Furman University this season.

Myers, 21, was dropped from the U.S. Olympic swim team after tests revealed use of the steroid nandrolone. She claimed unsuccessfully throughout the appeal process that her use of a birth-control pill had triggered a false reading.

On Monday, she was ordered suspended from international and national competition through 1989 by the U.S. Swimming board of review.

The three-member board, meeting to decide a penalty against the swimmer following her failure to have the test findings overturned in appeal, also invalidated Myers' records and recalled the medals she won during the U.S. Long Course National Championships, the meet used to select the Olympic team.

"Angel is innocent," her father and coach, Kirt Myers, said. "She has never taken anabolic steroids. The test that was conducted under medically controlled conditions on the specimen which Angel gave on Sept. 6, when she was not on the active birth control pill, confirms her innocence."

The board also ordered Myers to undergo "not less than three" random drug tests a year through 1992.

She also will face steroid testing at Furman.

"Our policy says that when an athlete tests positive for a drug, he or she is immediately expelled from the team and has to test negative to be accepted back on the team," said George Bennett, athletic director at Greenville, S.C., school.

"I've already told her that she has to be tested when she comes back," Bennett said. He also said Myers, a senior, would not be tested until close to the start of the swim season, in late November or early December.

"She'll be tested like anyone else. She won't know when it's coming," he said.

"We find it regrettable that sanctions against Ms. Myers are necessary to enforce rules designed for fairness to all United States Swimming athletes," the board said in a statement. "Harsher penalties were considered. However we felt that positive contributions to United States Swimming by Ms. Myers and her family, and the fact that this was a first-time infraction, required the recommendation of leniency on the part of the National Board of Review."

The sample on which the tests were conducted was obtained during the long-course nationals in August when Myers set American records in the 50- and 100-meter freestyle and also won the 100-meter butterfly. Results of the tests were revealed Aug. 14.

Myers was subsequently dropped from the Olympic team and an arbitration panel later upheld the suspension.

Mike Fennessy, a lawyer from Myers' hometown of Americus, Ga., helped present the swimmer's appeal. He also denounced the Olympic drug testing system as flawed.

"The entire process violated due process rights," he said. "She was never offered her due notice of the results."

"They are the future seniors. We can establish something right now for next year instead of just waiting for the season to end. Not saying that we are looking to next season, but we can finish this season out strong and have a good feeling going into next year."

For Boling, what it comes down to now is a matter of pride.

"If we can win these next four games we can give these younger guys something to look forward to, give these guys some pride," Boling said. "That's what we're looking for now, some respect and pride. I believe if East Carolina plays up to its potential, I don't see us having any trouble with that because we've got a good team."

factor was a young defense that during a two week stretch gave up 93 points and over 1,100 yards in consecutive losses to Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana.

After finishing up September with a 1-4 mark, ECU found itself facing a four-week October stretch against nationally-ranked West Virginia, Florida State, Syracuse and Miami.

"Some people have called it 'murderer's row,'" Boling said. "With West Virginia (last week), and we just got through playing Florida State and now we have Syracuse and Miami. It's a challenge because all these teams are in the top 20."

"A lot of people think we're shying away because of the rankings. But that's not the case. We played well against West Virginia but we didn't win and exactly the same in the second half against Florida State."

"It's disappointing to play good at times and still lose. You can't afford to make mistakes like we're making

"It's something you need," McKinney said. "It developed over the four years I've been here. I try to keep myself up that way. We have a young team and we're trying to get them in so they know the situation that is going on."

UCLA Tops The Poll

State. West Virginia remained sixth with 974 points after an open date and Florida State slipped from fifth to seventh with 872 points despite a 45-21 victory over East Carolina.

Oklahoma's 70-24 rout of Kansas State pushed the Sooners from ninth to eighth with 777 points while South Carolina fell from eighth to 18th by losing to Georgia Tech 34-0.

Clemson, No. 11 a week ago, moved up to ninth with 700 points by defeating previously unbeaten Duke 49-17. Auburn rounded out the Top Ten, climbing from 12th to 10th with 656 points after a 42-0 trouncing of Akron.

The Second Ten consists of Georgia, Wyoming, Arkansas, Indiana, Oklahoma State, LSU, Washington, South Carolina, Syracuse and Michigan.

Last week, it was Clemson, Auburn, Georgia, Wyoming, Michigan, Washington, Arkansas, Indiana, LSU and Florida.

Florida dropped out by losing its second straight game, 24-9 to Vanderbilt. Syracuse, which finished No. 4 last year, moved into the rankings for the first time this season. The Orangemen are 5-1 after defeating Penn State 24-10.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION: The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50/0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40/0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Tudor, Welch Set For Game 3

Pirate Pro-Am Set For Nov. 7

Golf professionals J.C. Snead, Mike Hulbert and Bobby Watkins will be among the special guests for the Second annual Pirate Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

East Carolina University will host the event at Brook Valley Country Club on Nov. 7. The tournament is a fund-raiser for the ECU golf program.

"The inaugural pro-am was highly successful due to the participants involved and we hope that this event will grow in numbers and exposure as the years go by," Dave Hart Jr., ECU athletic director, said. "It's always nice for hackers to rub elbows with professionals. It creates a fun-fill atmosphere."

At least one more professional is expected to be added to the field. The format will be a best-ball with tee-off set for noon.

A fee of $500 is charged for participation in the tournament, with a social following play for participants and invited guests.

The rain date will be Nov. 8, also at Brook Valley.

Williamson Captures Football Contest

Mike Williamson of 202 S. Elm St., Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Williamson correctly picked the winners in 24 of the 32 games listed in last week's contest edition. His victory, however, came on the basis of his point total guess. Williamson had a guess of 93 as the most points to be scored in any one contest game. The actual total was 105 in Nebraska's 63-42 victory over Oklahoma State.

Second place went to Craig Eick of 105 Melissa Dr., Farmville, who also had 24 correct picks. Eick's guess was further off, as he picked 87 points to be scored.

Six other entrants also had 24 games correct, but were further off in their point total guess. They included: Joel Walker of Rt. 3, Box 154 A4, Greenville (84); Joey Proctor, Rt. 1, Box 218A, Fountain (83); Frances Daughtry, 2007 Elizabeth St., Tarboro (81); Joe Long, P.O. Box 1193, Greenville (80); Margie M. Johnson, 225 Allendale Dr., Greenville (80); and Frank W. Saunders, 1713 Morningside Place, Greenville (77).

The tie game between Michigan and Iowa was counted as incorrect since rules allow a tie to be picked.

The next contest appears in today's edition of The Daily Reflector.

Everette Leads Shooting Competitors

Neil Everette of Greenville took first place in both the piston iron sites and the rifle novice categories at a shootout sponsored by the Sam Branch Hunting Club Sunday.

Monte Jennings placed first in the shotgun competition. Jason Hardee, a 13-year old, placed third in the adult shotgun competition.

Other awards were given to Gene Reel (black powder) of Greenville, Mike Brown (pistol with scope), Wayne Evans (rifle open) and Billy Hardison of Farmville (rifle beginners under 17).

Conley Girls Take 1st In X-Country

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's girls totaled 17 points to top New Bern in a non-conference high school cross country meet Monday.

Gretta Harris finished first for the Valkyries with a time of 21:12.

Other Conley finishers were Hope Harrington (2, 23:28); Kim Colson (3, 24:39); Tricia Smith (4, 26:13); Amy Allen (7, 28:22); Stacey Burhans (8, 28:23); Julie Smith (9, 28:23); Wendy Dixon (13, 30:33); Kim Pakowski (16, 33:44).

The boys finished with 19 points to fall to the New Bern boys' squad by a count of 44-19. Jason Wing finished second in the meet to lead the way for the Vikings, now 10-3 for the season, finishing in second place with a time of 18:24. Following Wing for the Vikings were Jason Osborne (10, 19:55); Roderick Walton (11, 19:59); Mark Malison (12, 20:36); Adrian McLawhorn (13, 20:36); Chris Weathington (14, 20:41); Nathan Wright (15, 20:49); Scott Hudson (17, 21:03); John Dunn (19, 21:26); Doug Hill (22, 22:54); Eddie Bonner (25, 25:04); Anthony Dixon (28, 28:12).

The boys and girls team will return to action Thursday in the Coastal 3-A Conference championship Thursday at Washington.

Greenville Rec Team Takes Victory

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department junior girls tennis team defeated Greenfield School of Wilson, 5-4, Monday.

The win moved the team to 5-5. They return to action Wednesday at Ridgecroft.

ECU Set For Old-Timer's Baseball Game

East Carolina's first annual Pirate Old Timer's Baseball Classic is set for 10 a.m. Saturday at Harrington Field.

More than 45 former ECU baseball players and coaches have committed to play in the game, which will precede the ECU-Syracuse football game.

Pitcher Bob Patterson, who pitches in the Pittsburgh Pirates organization, will attend but will not play due to an arm injury.

Other ex-ECU stars slated to play are Winfred Johnson, Butch Davis and Billy Best.

State Facing The Underdog Role

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State is considered an eight-point underdog against Clemson Saturday, and Wolfpack coach Dick Sheridan says his team is being asked to prove itself again.

The proof, he said, may be difficult to produce.

"On film, you can see that Clemson is capable of turning up their level of play by notches," Sheridan said at his Monday news conference.

"I think Duke and Florida State were two times when Clemson went to that top notch. They dominated both games physically, even though they lost the one game to Florida State."

Comparing the Tigers' playing level to a three-gear machine, Sheridan said N.C. State had not seen anything above second gear in the 1986 and 1987 games.

"We'll see that third notch Saturday," Sheridan said. "Our job is to match it — if we can."

A year ago at Clemson, Sheridan's Wolfpack, an 18-point underdog, led 30-0 at halftime and escaped with a 30-28 win.

Wallace Cutting Into Elliott's Points Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rusty Wallace picked up his second straight victory and cut deeper into Bill Elliott's NASCAR Winston Cup points lead with his victory in Sunday's Holly Farms 400 stock car race at North Wilkesboro Speedway in North Carolina.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — John Tudor isn't sure how long he will pitch in Game 3 of the World Series after nearly three weeks of inactivity.

Bob Welch would just like to make it past the third inning. In four previous postseason starts, he has averaged 1 1/3 innings.

Tudor pitches for Los Angeles tonight as the Dodgers go for a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven series against Oakland. No team has ever rallied to win from a 3-0 deficit.

The Dodgers and A's traveled north after Sunday's game and worked out briefly at the Oakland Coliseum on Monday.

Since Sept. 30, Tudor's work has been brief, too.

In his last start of the season, the 34-year-old left-hander had spasms in his right hip in the second inning and was scratched from his scheduled start in Game 2 of the playoffs against New York. He pitched Game 4 and allowed eight hits and four runs in five innings.

"I'm working on nine days rest and it presents some problems," Tudor said. "I'm not hurt right now and that played no role in their decision (to start him in Game 3 instead of earlier)."

Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said when making the pitching plans for the Series, he decided to pitch Tudor in a game that figured to have more pressure.

"I made the decision that it would be easier for a veteran like John to have so much time between starts," Lasorda said. "I thought he could adjust to it better than (Tim) Lincecum. Johns has been in the Series before and we felt it would be easy for him to pitch in the opponent's park."

Tudor came to the Dodgers on Aug. 16 from St. Louis for slugger Pedro Guerrero and was 4-3 with two no decisions and a 2.41 ERA in nine starts with Los Angeles.

The Dodgers made the trade after it became apparent left-hander Fernando Valenzuela would not make it back from a shoulder injury.

"The only experienced starter we had was Orel Hershiser and I told (general manager) Fred Claire we needed an experienced pitcher," Lasorda said.

Tudor is making his sixth World Series start with a 3-2 record and a 4.03 ERA. He made three starts in the 1985 Series against Kansas City and two more last year against Minnesota.

He won Games 1 and 4 against the Royals but was blown out in Game 7, allowing three hits and five runs in 2 1/3 innings as Kansas City won 11-0 behind Bret Saberhagen's five-hitter.

Last season, Tudor beat the Twins in Game 3 but lost Game 6 in the Metrodome, 11-5, and missed another chance to win a Series clincher.

"The big game expression is a media word," Tudor said. "It's an important game, but no bigger than opening days or some games in the middle of the season."

Tudor likes to paint the corners and can be sneaky fast. He must have pinpoint control because he's not fast enough to make a mistake around the plate against the A's power-packed lineup.

Tudor, who pitched in the American League for three seasons, likes to pitch at the Coliseum because of vast amount of foul territory.

"It's a dream to pitch here," Tudor said. "The only problem with the dream is the nightmare on their bench."

Tudor, who is 105-68 lifetime, was 10-8 this year with a 2.32 ERA. He is the only active National League pitcher to win 10 games or more each of the last seven years.

Oakland manager Tony La Russa said the A's have had mixed results against pitchers with Tudor's style. "When we have been a little power conscious, we've had trouble," La Russa said. "When we're good professional hitters we stay on the ball, hit it hard and to the middle of the field, then we have been successful."

"We've got to be patient against Tudor and not try to hit for distance against a guy that goes for location."

Welch, who pitched for the Dodgers for 10 years, pitched Game 3 of the playoffs against Boston and was chased after 1 2/3 innings, allowing five runs and six hits.

"I have lots of friends on the Dodgers and I was rooting for them to win the playoffs against the Mets," Welch said. "I know them and they know me so I don't think there's any advantage there."

The right-hander came to Oakland in a three-way deal last winter that also involved the New York Mets. The Dodgers ended up with relievers Jay Howell and Jesse Orsco and shortstop Alfredo Griffin.

"One of the things you want to do when you trade is make a deal that helps both clubs," Lasorda said. "We were last in hitting last season, last in fielding and we needed to help our bullpen."

"We hated to trade Bobby Welch. I love the guy. But we helped our bullpen and Alfredo Griffin helped Steve Sax at second. He really solidified our infield defense."

Welch was 17-9 for the A's with a 3.64 earned-run average and struck out 158 in 244 2/3 innings. The 17 victories represented a career high.

"I told the A's when we traded them Welch that we had just traded them the AL West title," Lasorda said.

In Game 2 of the 1978 Series against the New York Yankees, the Dodgers had a 4-3 lead in the top of the ninth when reliever Terry Forster put runners on first and second. Lasorda brought in Welch, a 21-year-old rookie, and he got Thurman Munson on a soft liner to second and struck out Reggie Jackson swinging on a 3-2 fastball.

"That all seems so long ago and it happened so fast I hardly remember what I really felt," Welch said.

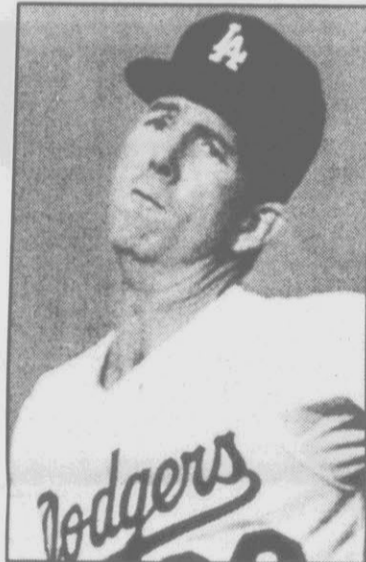

Jackson got his revenge in Game 6 when he hit a long homer to left field off Welch and the Yankees won 7-2 to take the World Series.

Welch has lost a little off his fastball but still throws hard and has improved his curve and control.

"Bob Welch pitched in a lot of pressure situations for us and did very well," La Russa said. "He was one of the reasons we won the pennant."

Amateur Sports Leader Krumm Dead At Age 82

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Philip O. Krumm was "completely devoted and dedicated to the Olympic movement and amateur sports in the United States" until the final hours before his death, a colleague says.

Krumm, a former president of the United States Olympic Committee and a leader in amateur sports, suffered a heart attack at his home in Divide Sunday. He was 82.

"Even in the 11th hour, he was preparing budgets and proposals to enhance his sport of speed skating," Don Miller, president of the U.S. Olympic Foundation, said Monday.

Bob Paul, a long-time USOC employee, said Krumm was "perhaps the most farsighted and internationally respected official the USOC has ever had. There were few like him."

"Phil was particularly instrumental in the move to Colorado Springs," Bill Tutt, USOC vice president, said, adding that Krumm was "an inspiration to all who knew him. We owe him an enormous debt. He was a good man."

A native of Wisconsin, Krumm was born Oct. 9, 1906. He began his lengthy career in amateur sports in speedskating as a competitor, later becoming an official and executive.

Southern Cal Takes Top Spot In DR Poll

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Southern California has jumped to the top of The Daily Reflector's computer rankings after the seventh week of the 1988 collegiate football season.

The Trojans, following their 28-27 victory over Washington, vaulted from third place to first in the standings. Washington had been ranked 15th last week.

The computer ranks teams on the basis of their success against the strength of their schedule, dipping three tiers into the schedules. Points are awarded for each victory a team gains, but additional points are also awarded when a team it has beaten wins a game, down to the third level of competition.

Southern California is currently 6-0 on the year and has accumulated 960 points.

Close on the heels of the Trojans are their cross-town rivals, UCLA, also 6-0 on the season. The Bruins have amassed 816 points and also move up two spots from fourth to second.

Florida State, second a week ago, drops to third. The Seminoles, who beat East Carolina last Saturday, 45-21, are 6-1 on the year and have 804 points. Wyoming, 7-0, which was the leader last week, falls to fourth with 796 points.

Notre Dame, which knocked off unbeaten Miami, Fla., the wire service poll leader, 31-30, moves from 11th to fifth this week on the computer rankings with a 6-0 record and 748 points.

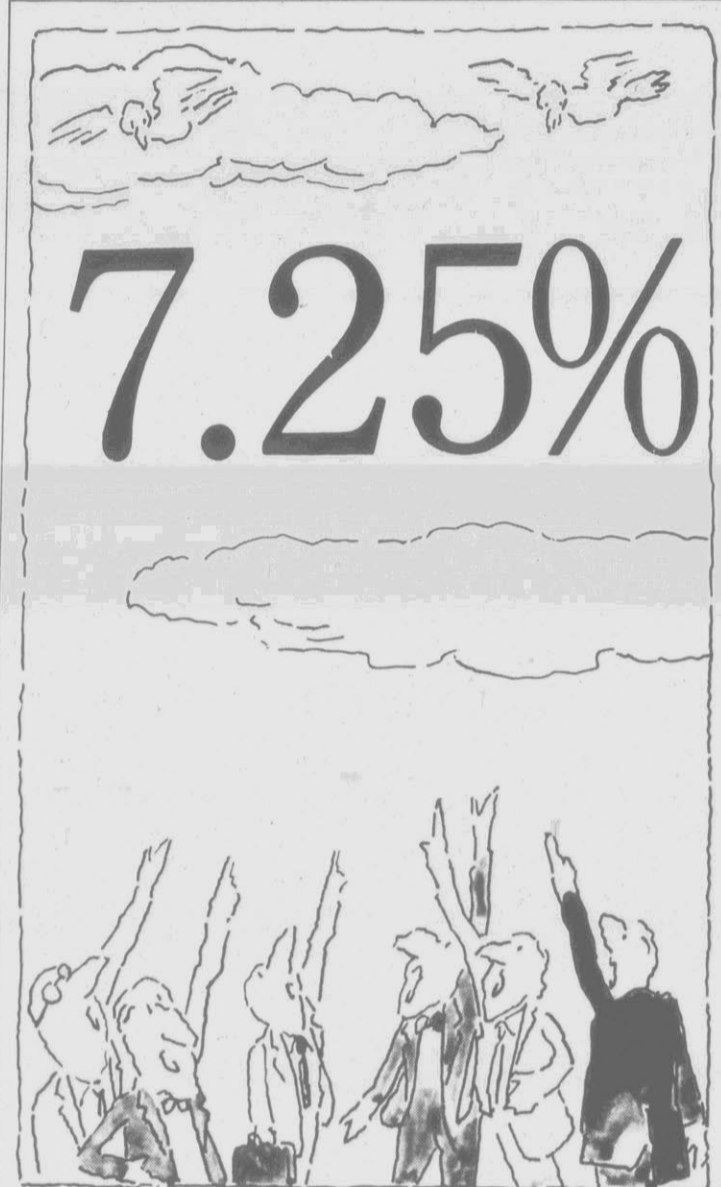

The second five consists of Nebraska, next week's ECU opponent Syracuse, Clemson, Florida and Arizona.

The Tigers made the biggest move among the top 20 teams, leaping up from a tie for 32nd to eighth place.

This week's top 20 teams, plus the Atlantic Coast Conference, East Carolina and the ECU opponents.

 Have you watched in wonder as a bridge expert seemingly plucks tricks out of the fresh air, picking off singleton kings as if he were playing with glass cards? There's nothing miraculous about it. There's almost always a simple explanation for what he did.

 The auction was routine. North's jump to four spades was not pre-emptive, but showed a very strong hand. With only one ace and no king or queen, even the six-card spade suit couldn't tempt South to bid on.
 West led the queen of diamonds, and the play was over in two shakes of a puppy's tail. Declarer won the ace in hand, led the jack of spades and, when West played low, rose with dummy's ace. When that fetched the king, declarer drew the remaining trump, discarded two diamonds on clubs when the jack in that suit dropped, and conceded only one heart trick.
 Now South was a good enough player to know that the percentage play holding ten cards in a suit, missing the king, is to take the finesse. Why, then, did he rise with the ace?

 The answer is simple enough—had the spade finesse lost, declarer would have gone down. He would have had to surrender a spade trick, two diamonds and the ace of hearts.
 Declarer was not really trying to drop the king of trumps—that was an added bonus. He was simply trying to extract two of the defenders' trumps before tackling clubs. As long as trumps were 2-1, the contract would then have been guaranteed as long as the club break was no worse than 5-2. Declarer would always be able to get rid of at least one diamond loser on a high club.

Philip Morris Makes $11 Billion Takeover Bid For Kraft Empire

Merger Would Be Largest Outside Oil Interests

By Peter Coy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Philip Morris Cos. Inc.'s $11 billion bid for Kraft Inc. would make it the world's largest maker of consumer goods while decreasing its heavy dependence on profitable but stagnating cigarette sales.

Philip Morris, the 12th biggest industrial company in the Fortune 500, launched a surprise tender offer late Monday that would pay $90 a share to shareholders of 31st-ranked Kraft.

If successful, the deal would be the largest non-oil takeover ever, trailing only Standard Oil Co.'s $13.4 billion purchase of Gulf Corp. in 1984. That company later changed its name to Chevron.

Glenview, Ill.-based Kraft indicated it might fight the takeover, even though the offer was about 50 percent above its closing stock price on Monday. Although New York-based Philip Morris is best known for Marlboro, Virginia Slims, Benson & Hedges and Merit cigarettes, it took over General Foods Corp., the maker of Jell-O, Maxwell House, Kool-Aid, Shake 'N Bake and Oscar Meyer, in 1985 for $5.7 billion.

The addition of Kraft would bring such names as Velveeta, Thousand Island dressings, Cheez Whiz, Breyer's, Light 'n' Lively, Sealtest and Frusen Gladje.

"Philip Morris is aiming for pre-eminence among consumer goods marketers, and this will take them there," said analyst John C. Bierbuse of A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis.

With Kraft, it would displace Unilever, the British-Dutch company, as the world's largest maker of consumer goods.

Philip Morris revenues for the year that ended June 30 were $29 billion, and when added to Kraft's $10.5 billion for the period, the revenues would far outstrip Unilever's $30 billion, according to Jay H. Freedman, an analyst who follows consumer producers for Kidder, Peabody & Co.

In an interview late Monday, Hamish Maxwell, Philip Morris's chairman and chief executive, said, "Being in the food business, we feel that we understand it."

The cigarette business generates enormous amounts of cash for Philip Morris, but its growth is slowing even though the company has been successful in increasing sales abroad, particularly in developing countries.

Tobacco will account for about 78 percent of its earnings this year, compared with 16 percent for General Foods and smaller amounts for Miller Brewing Co. and other units, said Bierbuse.

The dependence on cigarettes has frightened some investors from the stock, analysts said.

Maxwell said the cigarette business continues to grow in profit, revenue, physical volume and market share and has Philip Morris's strong support. But, he conceded, "I don't think most people would pick it as a big growth industry for the future...."

"We're trying to build our business, and we're also trying to position it for the future and not just for the present or the past."

Despite the $11 billion price, the cigarette and food giant "can well afford it," said Emanuel Goldman, an analyst with PaineWebber Inc. in San Francisco. "Their cash flow is $1.3 billion (a year). That's $150,000 an hour, 24 hours a day, 366 days a year."

John M. Richman, Kraft chairman and chief executive, said his board

AT&T Plans Cut In LD Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. wants to cut its basic interstate long-distance rates by an average of 3.8 percent and its business service prices by up to 6.2 percent to reflect savings in local network costs.

The cuts, totaling $697 million annually, would take effect Dec. 1, the day that residential and small business customers begin paying an additional 60 cents per month to pay the costs of maintaining the local phone network.

As subscribers pay more of the costs to maintain the local network, long-distance companies pay less. The Federal Communications Commission requires AT&T, the nation's largest long-distance company, to send these savings back to consumers by lowering rates.

AT&T's competitors are not required to return these savings to customers, but the companies have tended to lower their rates in response to AT&T price cuts.

The two largest competitors, MCI Communications Corp. and US Sprint Communications Co., said Monday they would review AT&T's plans.

Liz Taylor Enters Hospital For X-Rays

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor has re-entered St. John's Hospital for X-rays to determine the progress of therapy on her back, her spokeswoman said.

"The X-rays are to see what improvement there has been with her physical therapy," spokeswoman Chen Sam said by telephone Monday from New York.

In July, Miss Taylor, 56, was admitted to St. John's for a compression fracture of the first lumbar vertebra that produced lower back muscle spasms. She hurt herself in June when she fell on the set of the film "Young Toscanini" in Rome, said Ms. Sam.

During that stay, she underwent physical therapy and had X-rays taken. She went back to the hospital in late September for more X-rays, she said.

Miss Taylor has suffered back problems since she fell of a horse and fractured her spine 30 years ago, Ms. Sam said.

Jerry Lewis Will Have 'Wiseguy' Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis plans to play a haberdasher caught in a crime scandal in CBS-TV's "Wiseguy" this season, an executive producer said.

Producer Stephen J. Cannell also said Monday that the first villain of the season, a charismatic leader of a white supremacist sect, will be played by Tennessee attorney Fred Dalton Thompson, best known for his 1970s television appearances as real-life minority counsel on the Watergate Committee.

Thompson made his film debut in the 1985 movie "Marie," starring Sissy Spacek. He played himself, the attorney for Marie Raghianti, the parole board chairwoman who blew the whistle on a pardons-for-money scheme. Dalton was later cast as the head of the CIA in the movie "No Way Out."

Cannell said he decided to offer Lewis the guest shot after he saw "The King of Comedy" again recently. In that film, Lewis had a rare dramatic role as a famous talk-show host held hostage by an aspiring comedian played by Robert De Niro.

Paul Winchell Gives Voice To Cartoons

Ventriloquist Gives Voices To Animated Film Roles

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Ventriloquist Paul Winchell asks, "How do you spell Tigger?" and slips into a voice fitting for a cartoon tiger: "T-I-double grrrr-E-R."

Winchell, during an interview, frequently demonstrates the range of cartoon voices he does for Disney and Hanna-Barbera.

But there are faint echoes across the executive dining room atop the animation building at the Disney Studios. You hear a "Quack, Quack!" here and a "Quack, Quack!" there. Other people at other tables are also doing cartoon voices.

For a moment you feel you've wandered into the Ink and Paint Club in "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?"

For the last 20 years, Winchell has been the voice of Tigger, the zany tiger in the animated versions of A.A. Milne's beloved "Winnie the Pooh." The first effort, "Winnie the Pooh and the Blustery Day," won an Academy Award as best animated movie short in 1968. It has now become a Saturday morning series on ABC as "The New Adventures of Winnie the Pooh."

Winchell, in fact, does voices for two other Saturday morning shows: Disney's "Gummi Bears" and Hanna-Barbera's "The Smurfs." He's also done voices for such movies as Disney's "Aristocats" and "The Fox and the Hound."

Until he began working on cartoons, Winchell was better known as a ventriloquist and the man behind dummies Jerry Mahoney and Knucklehead Smith. His dummies are now at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

At the age of 13 he was a winner on radio's "Amateur Hour" for doing his imitation of Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. Ventriloquist Bergen was his childhood hero, and Winchell said one of the greatest thrills of his life was a joint appearance with Bergen on the game show "Masquerade Party."

"We appeared as Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," he said. "After we unmasked, we picked up each other's dummies. I did Charlie McCarthy, and he did Jerry Mahoney. It was a magic moment."

Winchell made his television debut in 1947 and within a year was host of "The Bigelow Show." He was also host of a number of children's shows, including "The Paul Winchell-Jerry Mahoney Show" and "Circus Time."

"I first met Walt Disney 25 or 30 years ago," he recalled. "He said, 'We're both in the same business. I use cartoons and you use dummies and we both entertain children.' That was long before I started working here. Walt gave me a VIP tour of the studio. I remember people doing voices. I said, 'Gee, that must be fun.' And here I am."

"Ventriloquism today is in a slump. Children today haven't been exposed to it. Edgar Bergen was an enormous hit in radio. But I think television defeats ventriloquism. Children are so used to seeing puppets that when they see a real ventriloquist they don't understand it. On television, everyone talks and they don't care about the mechanics."

Winchell, white-haired at 66, suffered a heart attack two years ago. "My cardiologist said I could still do voices," he said, "but to avoid working with the rest of the cast to avoid the stress. The studio's been very nice to me. I can come in, do my voices alone. I was able to do some of them in a recording studio in Miami when I was visiting there."

He said when he does a voice he likes to create an entire character. "Many people do different voices, but the basic rhythm is always the same," he said. "I try to do more than just using a falsetto or pitching my voice. I always look for little distinctions in each voice. Little characteristics or idiosyncrasies."

"Tigger, for instance, has a little lisp and a little laugh. My wife is British and has a lot of sayings that I throw in. She'll say, 'TTFN. Ta-ta for now.' So Tigger will say that and laugh. It gives a character more dimension."

Winchell is writing an autobiographical novel, which he jokingly calls "Dummy Dearest." It's actually called "The Strange Saga of Jimmy Flood" and will closely parallel his own career and life.

Elsewhere in television: GOMER SAYS HEY — Ken Beck and Jim Clark, authors of "The Andy Griffith Show Book," have a 1989 calendar coming out which commemorates highlights of the old comedy series. June 14, for instance, was the day Opie handcuffed Ralph Baker to a flag pole. The calendar from Rutledge Hill Press of Nashville, Tenn., sells for $7.95.

Award-Winning Author John Ball Dies; Wrote 'In Heat Of The Night'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Ball, who won the coveted Edgar Award for mystery writers for "In The Heat Of The Night," a groundbreaking novel about a black detective, has died. He was 77.

The Los Angeles resident whose approximately 30 books have been translated into 17 languages, died Saturday after a two-year battle with cancer, said his wife, Patricia.

A new murder mystery, titled "The Van," will be published this spring, she said Monday.

Ball worked as a music critic for the Brooklyn Eagle, music columnist for the New York World Telegram and assistant curator for the Hayden Planetarium in New York.

Most of his books were mysteries, but he also wrote in the juvenile, aviation and military fields.

It was as a mystery writer in California, following in the steps of Raymond Chandler and Dashiell Hammett, that Ball gained renown.

Instead of hard-boiled world weary gumshoes like Sam Spade and Philip Marlowe, Ball created a soft-spoken policeman, who happened to be black.

It was a bold move that anticipated principal roles for black characters in popular fiction and film.

"They told him 'No, don't make him black. Why not make him Chinese or something,'" said his wife. "But John insisted. Virgil Tibbs must be black."

Thus was born the character played by Sidney Poitier in the movie "In The Heat Of The Night," which won four Oscars in 1967 for picture, actor (Rod Steiger), director (Norman Jewison) and screenplay (Stirling Silliphant).

"Believe it or not, it took a long time to get it published," Mrs. Ball said. "He was going to let it go for almost nothing."

The book was in the hands of a small publisher that went out of business, so it was picked up by another publisher, his wife said.

For his own part, Ball received the Edgar Award conferred by the Mystery Writers of America and the Golden Dagger by the British Crime Writers, his wife said.

The Tibbs character usually faced prejudice in addition to problems of detection, but maintained his cool and went on to crack the case in Mississippi while on a visit, using his intellect and forensic expertise.

Another Ball book, "The First Team" about a war with the Soviet Union was published in 1971, more than a decade ahead of such currently popular works as "The Hunt for Red October" by Tom Clancy and "Team Yankee" by Harold Coyle.

"The First Team" sold to a movie studio, but got shelved in the early days of détente with the Soviet Union in the 1970s.

"It was long before 'Red Dawn,'" she said of the recent movie about a Soviet invasion of the United States.

Services were set for Wednesday at Hollywood Hills Forest Lawn. In addition to his wife, he was survived by his son, John David Ball, and his granddaughter, Nicole.
