

Dansey Blames ECU Capital Funding Woes On Local Members Of Assembly

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Lack of leadership on the part of local members of the General Assembly has resulted in a lack of capital funding for East Carolina University Bill Dansey, the Republican candidate for the 9th Senatorial district seat said Wednesday.

Dansey, at a news conference on the ECU campus, said the university ranks last among the 15 universities in the University of North Carolina system "in the amount of facilities that have been awarded us, and that includes the med school appropriations."

The press conference was held, Dansey said, to "talk about the educational system we have here in North Carolina and specifically eastern North Carolina.

"You know, we've had a Democratic controlled legislature now for 92 years and what's happened to us ... we rank last or 49th in SAT scores, 38th in teachers salaries.

"We have a basic education plan," he said. "But you know what the basic education plan does? It does not address the issues of small schools. If you have a school under 600, the basic education plan won't help it. And where are we in eastern North Carolina? Most of our schools fall in that category."

Dansey suggested that "what we need to do with that money allocated for basic education ... we need to have a minimum starting teacher salary of $21,000. We need to knock the drop-out rate down and cut it in half ... set a goal to do that by 1992.

"Our teachers need to be able to make up to at least $48,000 and beyond, and be treated like the rest of the professionals."

But Dansey said "the thing that really bothers me is that we talk about secondary and primary education, and being a trustee here at East Carolina University, what really concerns me is when you sit and look at the capital expenditures per pupil for the past 15 years, East Carolina ranks last.

"You know, we're the third largest university in the state. We have the largest minority population in our university of any predominately white university. And yet we rank last in the amount of facilities that have been awarded us and that includes the medical school appropriations."

According to a table provided by Dansey, ECU, from 1973 through 1988, received $84.47 million for capital projects for an average of $2,252 per student. N.C. State University's per-student average for the same period was $3,803, while the average per student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was $3,107.

The three highest per student averages for capital projects were recorded by Elizabeth City State University with $13,059, the University of North Carolina at Asheville with $12,293, and Fayetteville State University at $10,491.

"You know I think what happens there again," Dansey said, "eastern North Carolina is taken for granted. We've been taken for granted for so long they say, 'Don't worry about 'em. We'll throw 'em a crumb down there and they'll be happy.'"

"Well, this time, I don't think that's going to happen," he said. "I think the people of eastern North Carolina are tired of being last in roads, tired of being last in economic development, tired of being last in university spending."

"As the next state senator, I'm going to see that our teachers are adequately paid, have smaller classroom size ... more attention is paid to the needs of the student rather than the administrative end of it."

And, Dansey said, "I think it's lack of leadership," that has resulted in the lack of capital money for ECU. "I hear all these people say what a great job we've done for you, they don't tell you what the other guy's done."

"You have to be an effective state senator to do that and I don't think we have an effective state senator," Dansey said. What I plan to do is do more lobbying and explain the situation. We need our fair share."

"East Carolina is one of the fastest growing ... the second fastest growing university in the state and we need our fair share."

It's School Spirit Day

Today was to be School Spirit Day at Bethel Elementary School as sixth through eighth grade students celebrate Pride Week this week. Wearing red and blue, students were to participate in a pep rally in the gym.

During School Lunch Week last week, Helen Thurston's third graders made Pennsylvania Dutch invitations to their parents for lunch.

Fourth graders have been preparing for the elections by practicing for the play, "Polls In The Pasture," to be presented in the auditorium Thursday at 9 a.m.

Student teachers at the school have led the children in activities such as singing and writing about imaginary trips, designing clouds with cotton balls, studying fire prevention, using the newspaper to find nouns and making book jackets to be displayed in the library during Children's Book Month.

Triad Enrichment Program fifth grade students studied fairy tales, made puppets of their favorite character and performed a play for the class. Fourth graders studied the Olympics and mapped their way to Seoul. Third graders studied elections and did various reports, posters and interviews on government. Clara Carr of the Pitt County Board of Elections visited the class.

NCAE Districts To Meet

Districts 12, 14 and 15 of the North Carolina Association of Educators have their annual meeting Friday at Rochelle Middle School in Kinston. Karen Garr, state president, will preside. Speakers include Dr. Jonathan Sher, of the Small Business and Technology Center, and Bernard Allen, NCAE legislative specialist.

Homecoming Is Friday

D.H. Conley High School celebrates 1988 Homecoming on Friday. The Conley Vikings meet the Green Central Rams at 8 p.m. The 1988 Homecoming Queens and Princesses will be selected during halftime ceremonies.

A Homecoming dance is set for the school cafeteria after the game. Alan Cook of WRQR is deejay. Tickets are available at the door.

McGruff Visits Eastern

McGruff, the crime-fighting dog, visited Eastern Elementary School Wednesday to present his program on safety. Officer James Tripp accompanied McGruff into the school's media center as he talked to the students.

'Harvest Home' Begins

The New Covenant Temple Holy Church on Water Street, Grifton is celebrating its annual "Harvest Home" with services through Sunday.

Today Elder Adolphus Holmes and members of the Burning Bush Holy Church of Vanceboro lead the 7:30 p.m. service today.

Friday, the Rev. Collins Kornegay, assisted by the Community Mission Church of Rocky Mount, lead the service at 7:30 p.m.

And on Saturday, the Rev. Adeem George and members of the Holy Ghost Drawing Center of Goldsboro will lead the 7:30 p.m. service.

Sunday's 11 a.m. service will be conducted by Pastor Allie Harris, accompanied by the church's Senior Choir. At 3 p.m. Sunday the Rev. Ethel Bryant will speak, assisted by members of the Providence Holy Church of Jacksonville.

Teachers In Spotlight

This week's Teacher Spotlight includes two teachers from Ayden Middle School, Greg Lassiter and Johnny Davis.

Davis, who teaches health and physical education, is new to the school. A graduate of Fayetteville State University, he is athletic director, head basketball coach, softball coach, assistant football coach and a mentor teacher. Davis has been named coach of the year six times and has led five teams to conference championships.

Davis and his wife, Doris, have three children.

Greg Lassiter has taught at Ayden Middle School for three years. Lassiter is the head football coach and baseball coach. He is a graduate of Rose High School and East Carolina University.

Lassiter is married to the former Monica Stockes.

Testing Reflexes

Rodney Sessoms, a medical student at East Carolina University, showed students at Third Street School how to test their reflexes Wednesday. Sessoms and other health professionals visited the students in correlation with a unit on community helpers.

Electronic Equipment Taken From City Gym

Investigators said eight thefts — including a car and a quantity of electronic equipment from the city-owned Elm Street Gym — were reported to Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer R.G. Mendenhall said a 1982 model Ford Escort, a radio, a radio-tape player, a clock, 10 to 12 keys for coin operated machines and $90 were taken from the gym in a break-in reported at 9:10 a.m., while Officer J.W. Corbett said batteries were taken from two vehicles parked at Bostic Sugg Furniture at 401 W. 10th St. in an incident reported at 9:05 a.m.

Officer C.S. Candler said a video-cassette recorder, $15 and a pillow case were taken from 111B4 Toby Circle in a break-in reported at 10:32 a.m., while Officer S.D. Hilliard said a compact disk player, an equalizer and four speakers were taken from a car parked at East Carolina Chrysler at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 12:53 p.m.

Officer W.E. Davis said a bicycle was taken from a carport at 909 Forbes St. in an incident reported at 4:18 p.m., while Officer R.C. Stroud said a gas grill was taken from an apartment at 108 Ash St. in an incident reported at 5:22 p.m.

Officer P.W. Worthington said a television and video-cassette recorder were taken from Lot 2 at 408 Contentnea St. in a break-in reported at 6:49 p.m., while Officer W.T. McCarter said a hubcap was taken from a car parked at 127 Avery St. in an incident reported at 7:36 p.m. after thieves removed a wheel from the vehicle and left in under the car.

Farm Scene

By Sam Uzzell

PITT EXTENSION AGENT

Frost has been the news item that has been on the minds of most peanut farmers these days. Dr. Al Allison, retired Extension Peanut Specialist in Virginia, wrote a few notes last October on handling peanuts when frost or freeze conditions have been experienced. Here are the guidelines listed for your information:

1. If frost is imminent and peanut vines are healthy, they're better off in the soil than harvested in a high moisture status. If kernel moisture is less than 27 percent, light frost will do little harm, except to seed germination. Seed viability will be reduced if any frost occurs on dug but uncombined peanuts. Two to three days of good drying conditions before a frost generally is sufficient to minimize damage other than seed viability.

2. If the first frost burns 1/3 to 1/2 of the plant, very little damage is done. Wait until warm weather returns. It's normal to have 2-3 light frosts and then return to a warming period.

3. If the frost burns back two-thirds of the plant, defoliation (peg deterioration) will occur in 7-10 days. If these plants are exposed to rain, peg deterioration and subsequent pod loss will be much greater and sooner.

4. If the whole plant is burned (no green showing), dig immediately, otherwise entire crop will be lost. Do not reshake unless absolutely necessary. Rain under these conditions is the most detrimental thing that can happen. Vines and pegs completely deteriorate and few if any peanuts can be salvaged.

5. If much dirt is left on the peanut vines so that reshaking is necessary in 2 or 3 above, always reshake when vines are moist. This will minimize excessive pod shedding. Reshake the amount one expects to combine in one day.

6. If you have frost damaged peanuts:

•Do not use heat for the first 24 hours unless outside temperature is under 35 degrees F. Blow only natural air through peanuts which will help to minimize damage. Apply heat gradually after this first 24-hour period. (Caution: Remember, if air temperature is down close to freezing (under 35 degrees F.) and this air is pulled through peanuts they can be frost damaged in the dryer without having even been exposed to frost in the field.)

7. Do not mix frost-exposed peanuts with others, and do not use any peanuts which have been exposed to frost for seed without first having them tested. In most cases, they make poor seed.

To get the best and latest weather advisory, you should purchase a weather band radio and tune in one of the several channels that broadcast weather advisories. Also, you may find it helpful to call the Extension Teletip number and get an advisory from them. That number is 1-800-662-7301 and you should ask for the latest weather update. It is available between 10:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Peanut Maturity

The Peanut Variety Test near Bethel revealed the following maturity levels when the hull-scape method was used Oct. 12. Four to seven plants were collected throughout each variety, selected all the pods that had a chance of maturing in 2 weeks and scraped the hull to show the color of the inner hull. The peanuts were then placed into two piles that correspond to ready and not ready to dig.

NC 9 — 55 percent ready
NC 6 — 57 percent ready
NC 7 — 50 percent ready
NC 10C — 50 percent ready
Florigiant — 40 percent ready
NC 8C — 50 percent ready

It was interesting to see that the 9's and 6's did not have many "vine" peanuts. The others did seem to have a good many more small peanuts in the very immature stages.

Also, there is a good deal of damage caused by southern corn rootworm this year. Many of the pods exhibited feeding damage. Some were damaged to the degree that the entire pod was rotted out.

Peanut Hotline

The Peanut Marketing Hotline is back in operation through Nov. 18. It is funded in part by your contribution to the North Carolina Peanut Growers Association. The number is 1-800-346-1066.

Retreat Begins Today

St. Rest Holy Church of Winterville will sponsor its fifth annual Weekend Family Retreat beginning today. At 7:30 p.m. Elaine Holloway, secretary to Greenville Mayor Ed Carter, and Wade Johnson, drug educator for the Pitt County Schools, will take part in a panel discussion on dating, alcohol abuse and AIDS.

Friday at 7:30 p.m., a marriage seminar will be given by Pastors James and Delores Corbett of the Community Christian Church in Ayden.

There will be a family cook-out Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Winterville Recreation Park, and the weekend will conclude with the regular 11 a.m. service Sunday featuring Azell Payton.

Lunch Week Celebrated

Wellcome Middle School celebrated National School Lunch Week by inviting parents and others to share lunch. This year's theme was "School Lunch, Your Harvest of Health."

The cafeteria was decorated with student art work, fresh bud vases, balloons and a basket of vegetables.

Wellcome Middle School students Tianna Reid and Jeff Davenport have been selected to participate in Duke University's Talent Identification program (TIP). Both are 7th graders in the Academically Gifted program.

To be eligible for the first phase of TIP, a student must score in the 97th percentile or above on any section of the CAT test.

Researcher Studies Disease With Grant

ECU NEWS BUREAU

An East Carolina University School of Medicine researcher studying the causes of brain cell death in people suffering Alzheimer's Disease believes the cells may die less rapidly than previously thought and are perhaps clinically treatable.

"One possibility," said Dr. Gary Peterson, "is that the brain cells which are thought to die in Alzheimer's Disease do not die immediately, but rather are sick and non-functional for some time prior to death. If this is true then it may be possible to medically treat these sick cells and to restore them to health."

Peterson, an assistant professor of anatomy and cell biology at ECU, hopes to substantiate his contentions over the next three years through a $115,000 grant awarded by the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association Inc.

The privately supported national organization, based in Chicago, provides funding for research projects attempting to determine causes, treatment, prevention and cures for Alzheimer's Disease. The disease is characterized by memory loss, declining ability to perform routine tasks such as telling time or tying shoelaces, loss of language skills, difficulty in learning, impaired judgment, disorientation and personality shifts.

Alzheimer's Disease afflicts 2.5 million older adults in the United States, mainly those age 65 and older. It is currently thought to result from the death of brain cells which are responsible for learning and memory, Peterson said.

"The preliminary results of my research suggest that the neurons may not be dead but rather shrunken and metabolically inactive, in other words, sick," he said.

Peterson supports his contentions with evidence of the existence of chemicals in the brain called neurotrophic factors, which he suggests are necessary to maintain the health and survival of neurons.

Crafts Classes Offered

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department announces a class in crafts for youth ages 7 to 10 and in needlework for ages 8-11.

The crafts class will meet each Monday from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., beginning next week, at the Jaycee Park Administrative Building. Simple projects involving different medias are planned.

Needlework meets each Wednesday from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Jaycee Park Administrative Building beginning next week. Cross stitch, needlepoint, stenciling and chicken scratch will be taught.

Six weeks of classes will be taught for a fee. For more information and to preregister call 830-4542.

Shelter Gives Hours

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter will be open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and from 9 a.m. until noon Saturdays beginning Monday.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Oct. 21

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Analyze carefully any investment that seems too good to be true; it is. Inspirations to improve health and work are fruitful.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You can use your overabundance of energy to clean house. Your budget won't allow redecorating, but a friend's gift adds grace to the home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be careful on the highway early in the morning. Luck is not with you. Those in authority are pleasantly disposed toward you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Today is not a good day to fund your hopes and dreams or lend money to co-workers. Money can come through an artistic endeavor.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Be careful of your overemotional reaction to those in charge. It will tend to spoil your fun. A profitable real estate investment presents itself.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Don't let people take advantage of your oversympathetic nature. Your keen powers of analysis help you understand your mates goals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Your friends seem quite confused about their goals in life. They learn a great deal from your advice. You can profit from a message.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Emotional rather than critical analysis of facts from others about your abilities will cause trouble with superiors today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): The morning is not a good time to travel unless you have no luggage to lose. A letter from afar brings you back to your roots.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): It would be best not to invest any money this morning. It is better to pay attention to dreams that tell you of changing investments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): When your partner evaluates the natural artistic talents you have, he or she has the chance to form another opinion about you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your tendency to overwork interferes with your normal good judgment. It is important to understand where you are going professionally.

Icebreaker Plods Toward Trapped Gray Whales

By Bruce Bartley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BARROW, Alaska — A huge icebreaking barge began its journey to rescue three trapped whales as scientists worried that plunging temperatures and polar bears would threaten the mammals they have named Bonnet, Crossbeak and Bone.

At dawn, a National Guard helicopter rigged to tow the 185-ton "hover-barge" was to resume the 230-mile trip along the desolate Arctic coast from Prudhoe Bay. It moved about five miles Wednesday through sand bars, mud and shallow water.

Eskimo whalers using chain saws in sub-zero temperatures cut holes in the thick Arctic Ocean ice to help the California gray whales breathe. The 24- to 30-foot-long mammals, whose species is endangered, became trapped in the ice two weeks ago while migrating south.

The tired whales can survive for several more weeks despite being battered and bleeding from grating against jagged ice, said John Lien, professor of animal behavior at Memorial University in Canada.

"They can bleed a barrel and still be fine," said Lien, who has helped free whales from ice for 20 years. "We're talking about a big animal here, between five to 20 tons."

The whales also may have to contend with polar bears. Reporters flying by helicopter Wednesday spotted five prowling the ice a few miles from the whales.

"There are polar bears that are certainly going to be attracted to this," said Ron Morris of the National Marine and Fisheries Service. "If they're going to take the whales, we're not going to stop them."

He said polar bears hunt at night, when biologists are usually the only people near the breathing holes, 18 miles northeast of this Eskimo village.

The whales were named by biologists so the mammals' respiration could be monitored when they surfaced. One was dubbed "Bone" because so much of its snout has been scraped away by the ice. Eskimos have given them their own names: Siku (Ice), Putu (Icehole) and Kanik (Snowflake).

A National Weather Service ice analysis showed no open water in the whales' vicinity. But a lead, or pathway, through the ice had been spotted about five miles from the whales, said Jim Brooks, acting director of the fisheries service in Alaska.

"There are open water leads throughout the Chukchi Sea and Beaufort Sea, out for a long ways. The ice is always moving. It's very dynamic," he said.

Brooks said there was no guarantee the whales could reach open water, about 200 miles southwest, even if they could get to the leads.

"But the hope is that they will be able to make it through the leads via these open leads used by bowheads and belugas in their migration. But the gray whale is not an ice-adapted animal. It just doesn't seem to be able to contend with the ice as well as other species of whale," he said.

Rescuers sought ways to coax the animals in the direction of open water if icebreaking efforts were successful, including using lights as a lure near two new breathing holes cut for them. But the mammals have shown little interest.

Greenpeace representative Cindy

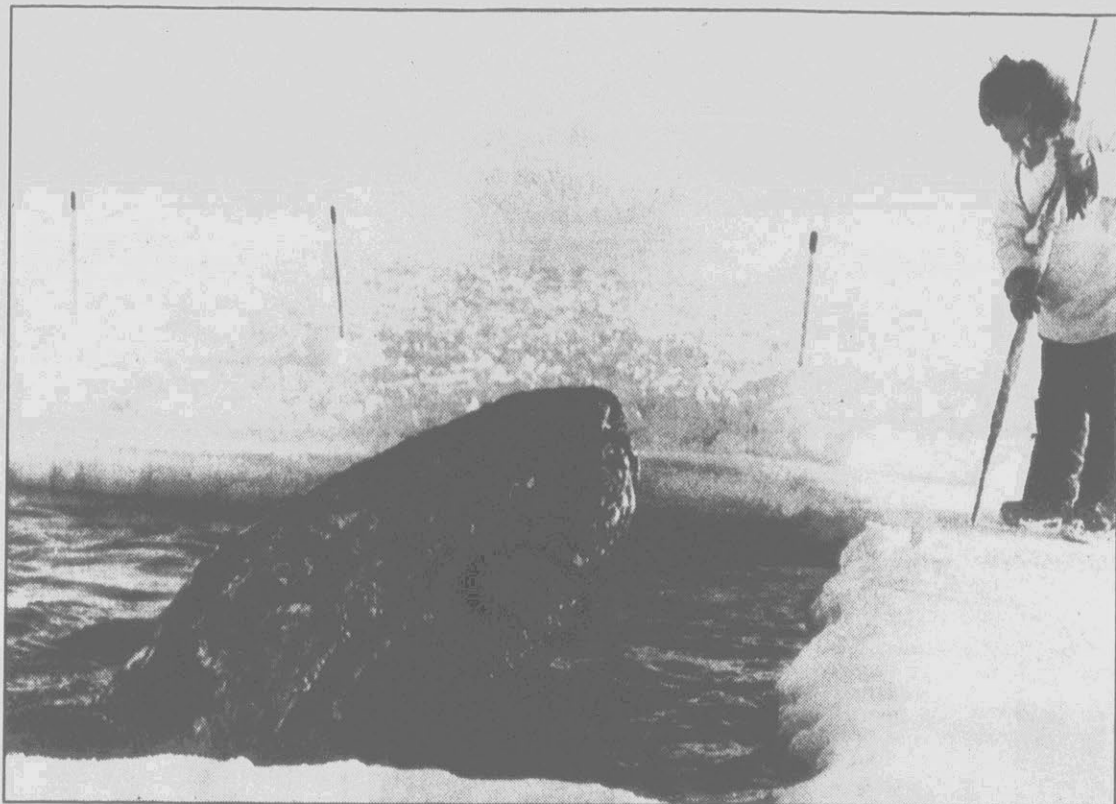

Lowry said tape recordings of the sounds of other gray whales were being shipped to Barrow to try to lure the animals to open water. If they don't respond to that, biologists said, they have tapes of killer whales that might spur the three young whales to escape.

The barge was not expected to reach Barrow at least until midday Friday, officials said.

"We're pretty optimistic," said Pete Leathard, president of Veco Inc., the oil service company that owns the propulsionless air cushion vehicle. "It looks like it will be moving a little faster now that it's cleared most of the mud and sandbars in the harbor."

Another National Guard Skycrane helicopter assigned to the towing mission may be used instead to lift a huge reinforced concrete cylinder to Barrow where it will be dropped to smash holes through the ice. The slabs are leftover supports from construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline, fitted so they can be carried by helicopters.

"That's going to Plan B," said Sheryl Deveau, a spokeswoman for the guard. "We have a 9,000- and a 14,000-pound concrete reinforced slab. ... They'll start dropping that from the Barrow end."

Government Blocks Interviews On TV, Radio With Groups

By Michael West
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — A government ban went into effect today on British television and radio interviews with the Irish Republican Army and 10 nationalist and Protestant groups involved in Northern Ireland's sectarian conflict.

News reports today indicated further restrictions are in the offing to try to curb the recent rise in guerrilla activity.

Sinn Fein, the outlawed IRA's legal political wing, compared the ban announced Wednesday by the government with Soviet bloc censorship. In addition to the IRA, the ban includes Sinn Fein and four Protestant groups.

IRA guerrillas seek to end British rule in predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland and unite it with the Roman Catholic Republic of Ireland under socialist rule. Most Protestants oppose uniting with the Republic.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd, the Cabinet member responsible for law and order and broadcasting among other matters, on Wednesday told the House of Commons:

"The government has decided that the time has now come to deny this easy platform to those who use it to propagate terrorism."

Junior Home Office minister of state Timothy Renton explained Wednesday night that "the whole aim of this (ban)... is to remove that extra weapon — the ability to go on television immediately afterwards to speak in justification of an explosion or a bomb."

Appearances by Sinn Fein president Gerry Adams and other Irish nationalist leaders on British television in recent years have enraged many viewers.

Adams is a member of the British House of Commons. But in accordance with long-standing IRA practice, he has never taken his seat since first being elected for west Belfast in 1983.

The Republic of Ireland has banned TV and radio interviews with the IRA, Sinn Fein and other groups since the mid-1970s.

Sinn Fein seeks to convince mainland Britain that British security forces in Northern Ireland cannot curb the sectarian and political violence there, and that British forces should be withdrawn.

The chairman of the British Broadcasting Corp., Marmaduke Hussey, and its director-general, Michael Checkland, said in a joint statement Wednesday night that the ban sets a damaging precedent.

Roy Hattersley, deputy leader of the socialist opposition Labor Party, said the ban was "trivial, worthless and almost certainly counterproductive."

The ban affects only British TV and radio networks. It does not affect interviews by foreign TV and radio networks broadcasting to audiences outside Britain or interviews by newspapers and other print media, either British or foreign.

The seven Irish nationalist groups covered by the ban are the Provisional and Official wings of the IRA; Sinn Fein; the Irish National Liberation Army, an outlawed splinter group from the IRA; Cumann Na Mban, the IRA's women's movement; Na Fianna Eireann, the IRA's youth section; and the Republican Socialist Group Saor Eire.

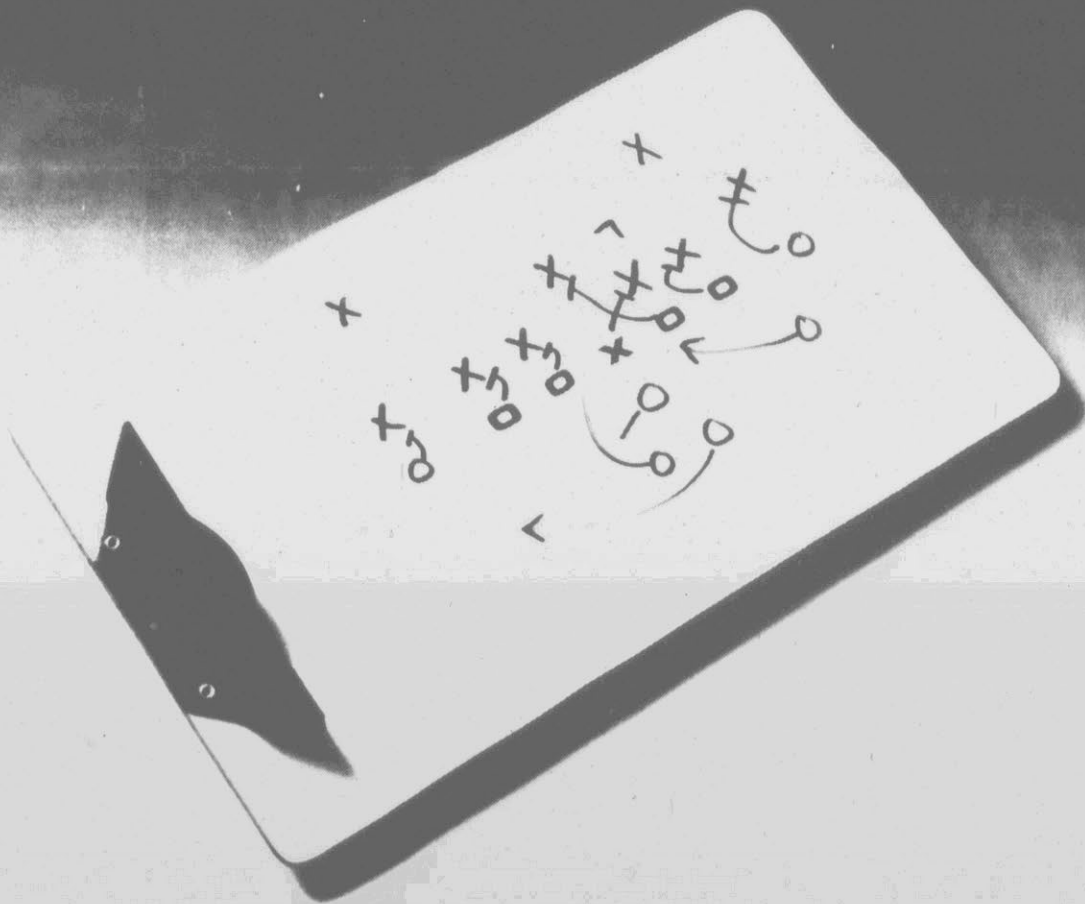

Cosmonauts Try Again

MOSCOW (AP) — Two cosmonauts left the orbiting space station Mir today to make a second attempt to repair a Dutch-made telescope, Radio Moscow reported.

Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov were using new tools and materials brought to the space station by the cargo ferry ship Progress recently, the broadcast said.

Titov and Manarov had tried unsuccessfully in a five-hour space walk June 30 to replace a detector unit on the telescope, which was mounted on an observatory attached to Mir. Components of the unit melted because of exposure to cosmic radiation, Radio Moscow said.

The Story

The Lesson's In The Ending

The story is a familiar one. The ending however, stands out.

A talented athlete nets a multi-million dollar professional sports contract. He has money, fame, a family, a bright future. But he blows all these assets with drugs and loses everything but his life. Now, rebuilding, he's learned the real meaning of success.

That's the story former N.C. State basketball standout David Thompson brought to Farmville last weekend. But the postscript is the real message.

Thompson, his career destroyed by a cocaine habit, is now off drugs and trying to remake his life. He's also using his fame and his experience to try to convince others to repel drugs. He's telling youngsters and adults alike that drug use diminishes potential and self esteem. He's telling them real success is saying no to mind-altering substances, even in the face of intense pressure.

And he's right.

Thompson's life, for his fans, has been a lesson in disappointment. Who can forget the talent and enthusiasm he demonstrated leading N.C. State to the national championships in 1974? And who can forget the silence that filled Reynolds Coliseum the night he took a terrible fall and remained motionless indefinitely. For several quiet minutes, no one knew if Thompson would get up. But he did. And his career continued into professional basketball. He was special.

And who, among those who admired his skill and intelligence on the basketball court, could forget the shock of his lackluster performance as a pro or the anger the news of his drug use prompted?

But Thompson has given fans a new reason to cheer. He is back in the spotlight with a full court press against drugs. He took another big fall but once again, stood back up.

Thompson's message is one which should be heeded by both those who watched him sparkle on the playing floor and those who didn't, but have heard his story. The moral is simple: talent and opportunity, even when abundant and vigorous, bow to poor judgment and stupidity. The net result is waste.

So the lesson in disappointment Thompson's career gave his fans translates to this message: if you do drugs, stop, and turn destruction into accomplishment. If you don't use drugs, don't start.

Shared Pride

Nobel Recognition Hits Home Here

Greenville may seem far removed from the realm of Nobel Prize winners, but it's not.

The Nobel Prize in medicine, announced Monday in Stockholm, Sweden, is a source of local pride in that George H. Hitchings and Gertrude Elion are this year's recipients.

Hitchings and Elion won the 1988 Nobel prize for their work which led to herpes treatment drugs, as well as other developments. The two are affiliated with Wellcome Research Laboratories in Research Triangle Park, N.C. Drugs which resulted from their work are manufactured at the Burroughs-Wellcome plant in Greenville.

Also sharing the award was Sir James W. Black of Great Britain for his research which led to a peptic ulcer drug.

Hitchings' and Elion's research led to drugs for treatment of leukemia, drugs for prevention of rejection in organ transplants and acyclovir, for easing attacks of genital herpes. The three recipients of the Nobel Prize in medicine will share a cash award of about $390,000 in U.S. dollars. The prize will be presented at a ceremony on Dec. 10.

The drugs that were a result of the Nobel prize winning efforts won national media attention because of the unique health problems they could help. It must never be forgotten, however, that such medical miracles don't occur overnight and go into production the next year.

They follow years, even decades, of careful experimentation in the laboratories — which is the case with recognized research of Hitchings and Elion. Now, after this intense research period, Burroughs-Wellcome is producing drugs to help alleviate human suffering. That is the end the Nobel prize seeks to acknowledge and encourage with its award for medicine.

The work and dedication which led to these medical advances has now been recognized by what many consider the highest award for medicine on the globe. That is a great source of pride for all who are connected with Burroughs-Wellcome — including this community.

A Message Rejected, Not Occluded

WASHINGTON — The Dukakis campaign's unconquerable aversion to common sense is on display in a new television commercial that exacerbates the doubts it is designed to allay. It is supposed to present the new, redesigned, cuddly, warm (or at least room-temperature) candidate. In it, the shirt-sleeved Dukakis, turning on the fountains of his vast deep, says:

"Today it seems young parents have less time and a lot more to worry about. If I were a young father today I'd want to know that my government wasn't blind to the changes in my life. I'd want my new President to be in touch with the things that are important to my family. That's not a Democratic concern, it's not a Republican concern. That's a father's concern."

That's it. All of it. Really. It must make many viewers want to scream at the screen. "Can you be more — can you be at all — specific? WHAT...DO...YOU...MEAN?"

When I saw the commercial, it came hard on the heels of a McDonald's commercial that was, compared to the Dukakis commercial, as inforabout the supposed immaturity of an electorate that could prefer conservatives to liberals.

George Will

For eight years, during which Reagan carried 93 states in 48 months, Democrats like Dukakis have been wondering: How does he do it? Why do they (the voters) do it? Surely it cannot be that they agree with him, because the truth is self-evident and we self-evidently have custody of it.

Dukakis, it is said, is not communicating well. Wrong. He communicates very well, but "well" is not a synonym for persuasively. With what he has done and said over a long public career, and what he now says and will not say, he communicates the transformation of liberalism from a doctrine of popular collective choices and common provision (Social Security, rural electrification, etc.) into something that dare not speak its name. It is the transformation of liberalism from a supportive friend into a nagging nanny.

At about the time Dukakis entered public life, liberalism was changing. It stopped seeming to be a government hand for those needing help and became the rasping voice of bossy government, dictating to people who presumably could not be trusted to know right from wrong (school busing, racial quotas, judicial fiat about abortion, capital punishment and, yes, the Pledge of Allegiance).

Many political commentators specialize in trivializing explanations of elections: Dewey lost to Truman because he would not shave his moustache; Eisenhower won because of his grin, etc. For eight years now it has been insistently said that Reagan has won because he said "There you go again" or because of his smile or because of what has been called his "Aw shucks, I stepped on my sneakers laces" charm. Democrats will begin to do better the day they decide that, in general, a particular candidate wins because people listen to what he says and prefer it to what the other candidate says.

One healthy aspect of a Dukakis defeat might be this: It might leave Democrats no place to hide, no trivializing alibis to enable them to say that the incompetent public let itself be gulled yet again. If Dukakis loses, no one, surely, will suggest blaming the outcome on Bush's charm or charisma.

After the Los Angeles debate, many commentators said: Dukakis failed to "find his voice" or to "present himself." Oh? What have people been hearing and seeing for 16 months if not the voice and persona of Dukakis? After Los Angeles, people said: Dukakis is having trouble "getting his message through." But perhaps he is losing because his message has gotten through.

By the end of this week, the media probably will be nearly unanimous in denouncing the result (there is a sublime irony here) "incompetence" of the Dukakis campaign, a campaign that began with the half-boast, half-prayer that the election would turn not on ideology but on competence. Incompetence will be blamed because the dominant culture in the media flinches from the fact that Dukakis' message has been clearly heard and as clearly rejected.

Already many Democrats who share his culture are preemptively trivializing the election result. They are blaming Dukakis' anticipated defeat on his personal attributes (his inability to smile, his lack of charm) rather than on his, which also is their, message. These Democrats are getting a running start on the road to defeat in 1992.

(c) 1988, Washington Post Writers Group

'People said: Dukakis is having trouble "getting his message through." But perhaps he is losing because his message has gotten through.'

mative as the Encyclopaedia Britannica. It told you what you would get from McDonald's: hamburgers and happiness. Does Dukakis assume that everyone knows (because he assumes that everyone thinks as he does?) what he means about the "things" the President should be "in touch with"?

Or is he reticent because he is wary lest specifics seem liberal? Perhaps the problem is a blend of both intellectual arrogance and despair

The 'R' Word Is Race

WASHINGTON — We all know the "L" word and why Michael Dukakis won't say it. But do we know the "R" word and why neither candidate will say it? The answer to the first part is "race." The answer to the second is that, for different reasons, they are both afraid.

Alexis de Tocqueville, should he peer down at the 1988 campaign, would not be surprised at some of the issues raised. More than a century ago, the French traveler in the United States wrote that race would remain an abiding American issue. The only thing that might confuse De Tocqueville is the absence of the word itself. Once he learned the code words, though, he would feel very much at home.

The first of these is "crime." Of course, whites commit crime. But the crime most white Americans fear is black crime. In that regard, George Bush has been given the gift of Willie Horton, the Massachusetts killer who was furloughed, escaped and raped a woman in Maryland. Furloughs are a routine fixture of the American penal system, but it was Dukakis' bad luck that his wayward prisoner happened to be black. Had Horton been white, it is safe to say the furlough issue would have lost some of its punch.

Next, De Tocqueville would have to learn the meaning of four letters — ACLU. To the extent that the American Civil Liberties Union is perceived to advocate something called "the rights of criminals," it, too, becomes a part of the unspoken race issue — as does the difference between the candidates about capital punishment. Worse, the ACLU in particular and liberalism in general are linked to something called "the courts." In the popular imagination, the courts use legal coercion to desegregate everything from the schools to the work place to the neighborhood. De Tocqueville would soon learn that even "neighborhood" can be another code word for race.

De Tocqueville, as sharp an observer as there ever was, would not be fooled by such terms as "Reagan Democrats." These 8.4 million voters are those who deserted the Democratic Party in 1984 to vote for Ronald Reagan. They did so for a variety of reasons. But this piece of the electorate, whether in the South or in the North, can be easily motivated by race. In such Northern cities as Philadelphia and Chicago, race is the dominant issue. It is in those cities that so-called ethnic politicians such as Frank Rizzo and Edward Vrdolyak have converted to Republicanism.

In the South, the counterpart of the ethnic vote is the so-called "Bubba vote." These are lower and lower-middle class white males for whom race is and has been an important issue. As former George Wallace voters (or the sons of them), their racial attitudes are no secret. And it is no secret why in presidential elections the South is now as solidly Republican as it once was Democratic. A reason Democrats lose the South is that a hunk of the white vote, maybe 60 percent, has fled to the GOP. And a reason for that is race.

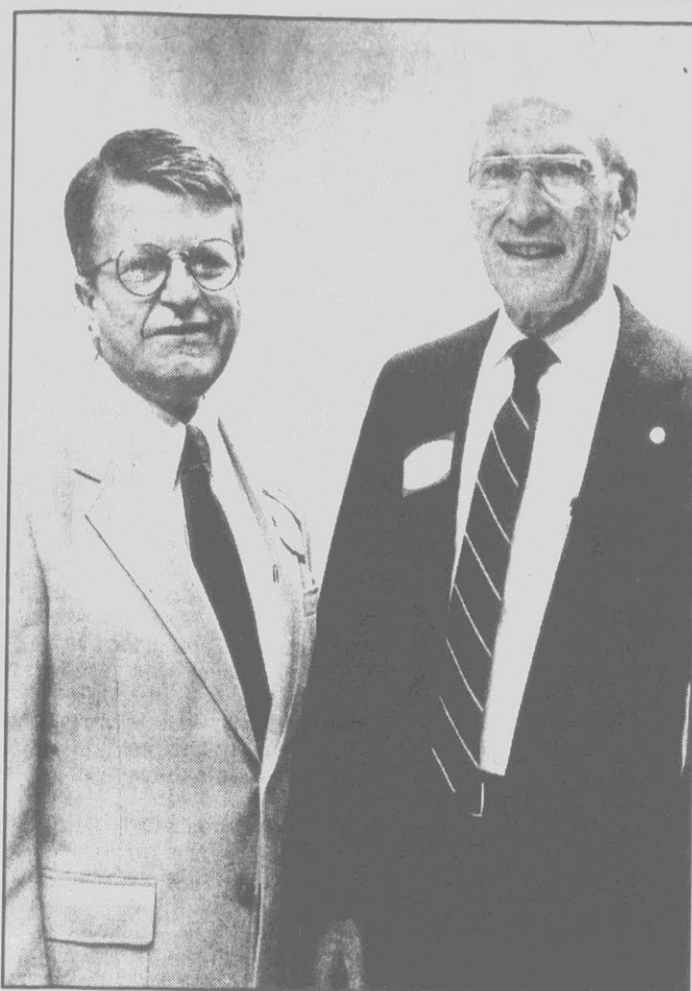

Ever since Richard Nixon, the GOP has wooed voters either afraid of or hostile to blacks — an amoral strategy wholly in keeping with the Nixonian ethic that the end justifies the means. Bush is merely reaping what's been sown. That's not racist in the Jim Crow sense of the word, but it does nothing to advance racial harmony, either. It sends a signal — one clear enough to be heard in Bubba's pickup.

We all recognize the importance of race as a political issue. Yet it hardly gets discussed. For instance, a variety of explanations are advanced for why Dukakis was riding high in the polls before the Democratic National Convention, but plummeted afterwards. We are told Bush pummeled him with the Pledge of Allegiance and other "cultural" issues. But could it be that Dukakis stumbled when he went from standing up to Jesse Jackson to embracing him? Could it be that a piece of Dukakis' popularity had to do with him being the Great White Hope of the primary season? You bet it could.

As for Dukakis, his silence on the race issue is almost as dispiriting as Bush's willingness to take advantage of it. To the degree that he can, he shies from Jackson. He calls himself a liberal, but won't define what liberalism is. The civil-rights revolution, after all, was not the work of conservatives.

Newspaper columns are exercises in miniaturization. There is much more to the Reagan or Bush vote than racism and there is more to liberalism than a concern for blacks. But one of the more depressing aspects of this campaign is the willingness of both candidates to accept the status quo on race, either to receive its bounty (Bush), or to minimize the damage (Dukakis). In November, one will win and one will lose — but neither can be proud.

State Hopes To Continue Mastery Of Tigers

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina State's mastery of Clemson for the last two years comes up for a big test this weekend when the two teams square off for first place in an Atlantic Coast Conference showdown.

Coach Dick Sheridan celebrated his first year in Raleigh by beating the Tigers 27-3. Last season, the Wolfpack raced to a 30-0 halftime lead, then held on for a 30-28 victory.

This Saturday, the conference lead is at stake with 11th-ranked Clemson's league mark of 3-0 leading N.C. State by one-half game. With three conference games remaining for his team, Sheridan doesn't consider the annual Textile Bowl game the deciding factor in who wins the league title.

"I think it's still too early to put a whole lot on it," Sheridan says. "But the later in the season you are, the more important the conference games get, if you still have a chance."

"We've worked hard to improve each individual. Offensively, we're much better, too," Sheridan said. "How much, we'll find out Saturday."

The Wolfpack defense has not allowed a touchdown in 12 quarters, going back to a last-second score by Maryland which led to the team's lone conference loss. In that span, opposing offenses have kicked three field goals, and have only seven field goals for their efforts against N.C. State, 5-1. Clemson is also 5-1.

Ford agrees that the ACC title isn't necessarily on the line at Carter-Finley Stadium.

"I would say the conference championship is a long way from being over. A lot of things can happen," Ford said.

Both teams come into the game savoring big victories. The Tigers ended Duke's unbeaten string at five with a 49-17 thrashing. N.C. State kept North Carolina winless with a 48-3 victory in Chapel Hill.

"We've made mistakes the last two years. They got ahead of us and wound up beating us," Ford said of the two losses to the Wolfpack. "Hopefully, we can change that this year."

North Carolina is host to the four out-of-state ACC teams this weekend. Virginia is at Wake Forest, Maryland is at Duke and Georgia Tech is at North Carolina.

Wake Forest has a share of third place in the league with a 2-1 record. Virginia, picked in the pre-season to finish second, is alone in sixth place with a 1-2 league mark.

The Demon Deacons, 4-2, have a major motivating factor for the weekend — no senior has ever celebrated a victory over the Cavaliers. And after a comeback victory over Maryland last weekend, Coach Bill Dooley is concerned about the end of the streak.

"We were fortunate to win that game, but you can't put yourself in that position and expect to come out ahead," Dooley said. "We've got to be sharper this coming week."

George Welsh's team has been victimized by several close finishes this season, the latest a 30-28 loss to Louisville last Saturday, which dropped the Cavaliers to 2-4.

Maryland has been in much the same position as Virginia for much of the year, which is reflected in their 3-3 mark.

"Every game that we've been in, the game's up for grabs," Terrapin Coach Joe Krivak said. "We've got to be good enough to make things happen on offense and defense to make the game swing our way."

Duke's loss at Clemson shouldn't have an impact on how Maryland approaches the game, Krivak said.

"I don't think that you let yourself dwell on what happened in one football game," he said. "You have to play the next five. They're going to be ready to play and we have to be ready to play."

In year where Duke has been establishing mileposts, the Blue Devils will be trying to set one more — their first victory over the Terrapins in 17 years.

"I don't think it's revenge. Of course, when you suffer a loss like that, the players ... have something to remember," Coach Steve Spurrier said of the loss at Clemson. "The only way to help erase the pain of that memory is to get a victory this week. I hope we can erase that memory a little bit with a victory this week."

North Carolina has plenty of memories to erase. The Tar Heels are winless in their last nine games over two seasons, have not won a conference game in their last five. Coach Mack Brown is also trying to end a home losing streak which has reached seven games.

"We've got another tremendous test for our offense. Unless we throw the ball better than we did last week, we will not be in the ball game," Brown said, noting that freshman Todd Burnett could get into the game at quarterback this weekend. "We'll have our hands full from a lot of different standpoints. We need to do something positive."

Coach Bobby Ross knows all about streaks. Until last weekend's 34-0 whipping of South Carolina, the Yellow Jackets had not beaten a Division I-A team under Ross' command, a slide of 15 games.

"I understand what they're experiencing. I would hope that things would get turned around for him," Ross said. "Certainly not this week, though."

Glasnost Bowl Proposed

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rick Ray says he's always had ideas for different types of sports and entertainment programming, and at Raycom Sports he has expanded the company and brought those ideas into reality.

Ten years ago, Raycom began its venture into syndicated sports programming with the Great Alaskan Shootout. Next year, Ray says, Raycom will present the first football game to be played in the Soviet Union, called "The Glasnost Bowl."

"In a sense, The Glasnost Bowl brings us back to those roots in packaging special events for broadcast in the United States," Ray said in a telephone interview from his Charlotte office.

The football game goes beyond the idea of presenting the American version of the sport to another European audience.

"... There are so many opportunities for international studies and exchanges to take place," Ray said. "We've talked to them about setting up scholarship exchanges."

"I think the country and the economy are moving toward globalization where everything is tied together," he said.

From the early days of the fuzzy satellite reception from Alaska, Raycom has grown into a multi-talented broadcast operation. Raycom Sports televises 400 collegiate sporting events annually, including The Kickoff Classic and The Liberty Bowl, two football conference and Atlantic Coast Conference basketball among others.

"I think we set out with a plan to begin with of where we wanted to go. Each year, we revised it," Ray said.

"Our long range goal has been to be a regionally based national network."

"Right now, in college basketball, we'll reach 70 percent of the United States," Ray said. "We'll have a higher number of people watching our games than any of the networks will. We've reached the first real plateau."

Raycom International, the newborn of the operation, was itself the birthplace for The Glasnost Bowl. It was formed to package new sporting events and marketing opportunities throughout the world, and in 1989 is scheduled to televise an international cross country skiing festival, the Moscow Marathon as well as the football game from the Soviet Union.

"I think as we have grown, we felt like there are a number of areas where we had good program ideas for television. We said if we had the idea for the event, we said why not do them from the beginning," Ray said. "As long as you're buying rights from other people, it's a lot harder than if you own the event."

Heels Must Play Better Defense

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — The Tar Heels will have to play better defensively and handle the ball well on offense in order to have a successful season, North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith says.

"We've got to play better team defense," Smith said. "On offense, we don't have a good ballhandling team, so we'll try to mask that weakness and shoot it before we throw it away."

Smith said Wednesday his major concern going into his 27th season at North Carolina is injuries to key players.

"We're going to carry 13 or 14 players," Smith said. "We'll have to be concerned with an injury to the big men — Pete Chilcutt, J.R. Reid and Scott Williams — and to guards Jeff Lebo and King Rice."

The Tar Heels' schedule includes a possible match with Arizona, which defeated North Carolina in last year's NCAA Western Regional final, and Temple, which handily defeated the Tar Heels in Chapel Hill last season.

Yet it's the Atlantic Coast Conference schedule that most concerns Smith.

"I think the entire league has improved from last season," he said. "Every team has improved, with the exception of maybe Maryland, and they've got some good recruits and some good talent. There won't be any easy games in the conference."

Smith said he was pleased with his team's work in the offseason and was especially happy with his star player, junior forward J.R. Reid.

"What I have noticed is J.R. is a more physically mature player. He seems to handle the double-team better," Smith said. "He's also going hard to the offensive boards."

When told that Reid and several of the other Tar Heels were talking about making it past the final eight, where North Carolina's past two seasons have ended, Smith was surprised.

"I'm worried about just getting into the NCAA tournament. They're talking about getting past the final eight," he said. "That's good, positive thinking."

That positive thinking seems to be an outgrowth of the Tar Heels' experience. North Carolina returns three seniors and six juniors. Smith said the experience factor will play a large role in determining the Tar Heels' success.

"The experience factor is so much better than last year. It's a pleasant change but I'm worried about our depth," he said. "If we get injuries to Rice, Lebo or the big guys, it could be a problem. But other than that, we'll do alright."

Scioscia...

homer to give the Dodgers a 5-4 victory, said Wednesday night he still couldn't run because of his injured legs.

Scioscia twisted his right knee sliding into second base on an attempted steal and was replaced by Rick Dempsey, the only other catcher on the Dodgers' roster. The club is flying in minor leaguer Gilberto Reyes, hoping he can be added to the roster.

"You better believe it," Scioscia said when asked whether he'd play tonight if it was at all possible. "Right now, I really don't know either way. We'll see how it feels."

Scioscia will be re-examined today by Dr. Frank Jobe, the team physician who's been a busy, busy man these days.

Jobe said before Wednesday's game that left-hander John Tudor, who started for the Dodgers on Tuesday night but pitched to only four batters before being relieved, would be sidelined for the rest of the Series because of a sprained medial collateral ligament in his pitching elbow.

Scioscia, who's even slow for a catcher, suffered his injury in the top of the fourth inning with the Dodgers leading 3-1.

"I really didn't feel anything on the slide," He said. "When I popped up, my knee went out."

When asked why he took off on the pitch, Scioscia said, "I was running 3-and-1 and Danny (Heep) took a borderline pitch he thought was a ball. We had a lot of big guns out of the lineup. We had to scratch out runs. You saw how we stole some runs today."

So did the Athletics, who'd better not let the Dodgers steal many tonight, or it's wait 'til next year for baseball's winningest team.

McPherson...

Several other Orangemen also are in the national stats this week. Safety Markus Paul is 18th in interceptions with 0.5 per game, wide receiver Rob Moore is 24th in receptions with 5.2 per game, kicker Kevin J. Green is 27th in field goals with 1.33 per game, and Cooper Gardiner is 30th in punting with a 40.9 average.

As a team, Syracuse is 15th in scoring defense, allowing 14.3 points a game, 24th in pass defense, giving up 158.8, and 24th in total defense, giving up 298.0 per game. The team is 20th in net punting at 37.8 and 26th in kickoff returns with 21.2 yards a try.

And Philcox seems to be just hitting his stride. The 6-4, 209-pound senior has connected on 38 of 59 attempts the last two weeks, for 554 yards, six touchdowns and only one interception.

For the year, Philcox has hit 88 of 146 for 1,261 yards, nine touchdowns and four interceptions. The 1,261 yards is already the seventh best single season total for Syracuse — and he has five games left to play.

Speaking of records, Paul, a two-time Jim Thorpe Award nominee is tied with Tommy Myers for the Syracuse school mark of 18. He is within striking distance of becoming only the 21st player in NCAA history to reach 20 interceptions in a career.

Green, the Syracuse kicker, is 16 for 16 this year, running Syracuse's NCAA record to 239 consecutive PATs by kick, a streak that extends back to Nov. 18, 1978.

Halfback Robert Drummond is the top rusher for Syracuse with 385 yards on 68 carries. Daryl Johnston, the fullback, has 262 yards on 66 carries while Michael Owens, Drummond's backup, has 222 yards on 54 carries.

Top receivers are Moore, with 31 catches for 508 yards and seven touchdowns, tight end Pat Davis with 17 for 238, wide receiver Deval Glover with 17 for 212 yards and Johnston with 12 for 149.

Defensively, David Bavaro, an inside linebacker, is the leading tackler for the Orange with 65. He leads a unit that has allowed just two touchdowns in the last 18 quarters. The secondary, led by Paul, has not allowed a passing touchdown since the second quarter of the Ohio State game and only two all year.

Tackle Robert Burnett leads the rush on the quarterbacks with 5½ sacks. Linebacker Terry Wooden has five and linebacker Keith Friberg has 4½. Overall, Syracuse has 20 sacks.

The game is only the third road game of the year for Syracuse while it is ECU's fifth and next-to-last home game.

BROILERS: The North Carolina for dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Two percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average. The market is steady to weak and the live supply is mostly adequate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable to heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,108,000, compared to 2,062,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 cent lower at mostly 2.91-3.11 in East and mostly 3.11-3.16 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 1 cent higher at mostly 7.81-8.01 1/2 in East, with too few to report in the Piedmont; wheat 3.76-3.87; new crop soybeans 7.47-7.97. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 98 to 100 3/4 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, rebounding from Wednesday's drop.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 8.53 to 2,145.80 in the first half hour of trading. Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 5599 up, 327 down and 511 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 19.09 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The market was unsettled Wednesday by rising interest rates and a rumor that the Washington Post was about to publish a story potentially hurting the presidential campaign of Vice President Bush. The rumor was quickly denied, however.

Bill On Children's TV Gains Senate Approval

First Amendment" because it injects the government into programming and advertising decisions of TV stations. The Justice Department recommended a veto on constitutional grounds following House passage, 328-78, in June.

The legislation would break from the course of the Reagan administration's efforts to deregulate the broadcast industry. The FCC lifted its children's TV commercial limits four years ago.

FCC Chairman Dennis Patrick said the legislation was "both unnecessary and ill-advised," particularly because the FCC has been considering taking action related to the commercialization of children's television.

The FCC abandoned its advertising limits on the theory that commercial content during children's shows would be best regulated by the open marketplace.

But children's TV advocates said the FCC's philosophy of deregulation was harming children. They said that since the limits were dropped in 1984, stations have increased advertising during children's shows and the quality of children's programming has deteriorated as toy manufacturers have become heavily involved in developing shows based on their products.

Markey said reimposing advertising limits "will help stem the creeping commercialism presently plaguing children's television."

Stations would be allowed no more than 10 1/2 minutes per hour of advertising in kids' shows on weekends and 12 minutes per hour on weekdays. Stations would have until Jan. 1, 1990, to comply with the advertising limits. The FCC would be authorized to modify the time standards after Jan. 1, 1993.

George Schweitzer, CBS communications vice president, said the network now has 9.5 minutes of commercials per hour in its weekend children's shows, with an additional minute of time sold by the affiliate stations.

Critics of TV commercials say some shows have up to 16.5 minutes of commercials in an hour.

The measure also would require stations to "serve the educational and informational needs of children" in overall programming and would require the FCC to evaluate those efforts every five years when a station applies for renewal of its license.

The National Association of Broadcasters did not oppose the bill "because we share the interests of Congress in assuring the provision of programs that serve the needs of the child audience," according to spokeswoman Susan Kraus.

Judge Is Killed

Moments later, the judge apparently triggered an alarm in her chambers, and a police dispatcher called there on an intercom, said police Lt. Vic Gillis. "The dispatcher... asked if anything was wrong," Gillis said. "She said something to the effect that she was not OK, that her ex-husband was in there and holding a gun on her."

Officers responded quickly because the police department is next to the Hall of Justice. Within seconds, Ratliff began firing, authorities said. Hegarty said it was unknown if Ratliff used his service revolver.

The courthouse has no metal detector, but Hegarty said he doubted such security would have prevented the shooting.

The couple were in divorce proceedings; it was the second marriage for both. The pair had no children together, although Ratliff has children from a previous marriage.

"When she told me she was filing for divorce, she mentioned she thought the worst of it was over and thought it would be much easier from then on," said Chief District Judge Donald Johnston, who spoke with Irons minutes before she was killed.

"But there were no indications that there was any violence in their marriage or that she was fearful of him," said Johnston, who married the couple.

Irons, a former assistant Kent County prosecutor, was elected in 1982 as the first female judge in the county. The Wayne State University graduate was running unopposed for re-election this fall.

The Kent County Hall of Justice, which houses the district and circuit courts as well as the police department for Michigan's second-largest city, closed for the day after the shooting.

Psychologists were being called in for court employees shaken by the shooting.

Bomb Kills Seven

The body of the assassin was not found and his vehicle was unrecognizable.

Israel television quoted army experts as saying the truck contained up to 330 pounds of explosives. Bombs were heard four miles away and broke windows in this small border town.

Wounded soldiers were taken to Israeli hospitals and the army said one was in critical condition.

The army command identified five of the dead as Capt. Ron Verner, 22; Sgt. Shalom Ben-Ami, 23; Sgt. Moris Dahan, 31; Cpl. Saguy Blau, 19, and Pvt. Yakov Ben-Shaanan, 44.

The Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army, a predominantly Christian militia, interrogated hundreds of Shiite Moslems in southern Lebanon Wednesday, Israel radio said.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said the incident nevertheless proved the value of Israel's self-declared security zone, a buffer six to 10 miles deep in south Lebanon.

The last major car bomb attack occurred near the border crossing on March 10, 1985, shortly before most Israeli troops were withdrawn after three years of occupation. The attack, claimed by the pro-Syrian Lebanese Syrian Socialist Nationalist Party, killed 12 Israeli soldiers and wounded 14.

Israel created the "Good Fence" in 1976 to provide medical and other aid to refugees from Lebanon's civil war. It is used today mostly by Lebanese workers who travel to Israel daily.

School Celebrates Week

Chicod Elementary School students celebrated National School Lunch Week in several ways.

More than 100 parents joined their students for lunch Oct. 12 and Pitt County commissioner Charles McLawhorn ate lunch with third and fourth grade students.

The students also participated in making fruit and vegetable center pieces, drawing pictures of healthy snacks and writing essays about good nutrition.

Students Nominated

Seven students have been nominated to represent Rose High School in competition for the John Motley Morehead Scholarship at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. They are: Peter Herndon, Tom Irons, Greg Jones, Anji Kataria, Jonathon Li, Jeff Likosar and Rolf Sundwall.

Mock interviews were held at the school and by Pitt County Schools officials to help the students prepare for the first interview with the Pitt and Beaufort Counties committee.

damages." Agriculture Minister Jaime Wheelock told The Associated Press.

"Our priority is to save lives," he said. "We're prepared for war, but not against hurricanes."

Civil Defense officials in Nicaragua said that they had enough emergency supplies only for "immediate needs." They said the 7-year war with the U.S.-backed rebels known as Contras has drained their reserves.

State-run Voice of Nicaragua radio set up a new channel for news on the hurricane so it could broadcast Wednesday night's World Series game between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Oakland Athletics.

"If the hurricane stays over water, it is possible its full force will hit Bluefields Thursday morning or Friday morning. It could be a disaster because most of the buildings there are of wood," said Alejo Moreno, head of the Nicaraguan weather service.

Bluefields is on a remote stretch of the Miskito Coast about 180 miles east of Managua, the capital.

Israel Vows To Retaliate After Bomb Attack

By Eileen Alt Powell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

METULLA, Israel — Israeli leaders vowed today to punish the Iranian-backed Hezbollah for a suicide car bomb that blew up at a border crossing in Lebanon, killing seven Israeli soldiers and wounding 10 others.

The attack on the army convoy Wednesday afternoon was the worst against an Israeli target in Lebanon since Israel withdrew most of its occupation troops from the country three years ago.

"I am sure that the state of Israel and its army will not remain still until we reach the source of the evil, the source of the attack," Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told Israel radio. "What must be clear to Hezbollah is that it will receive its just punishment."

"Israel's just and secure hand will reach the killers, each and every one of them," Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said.

Israel's inner cabinet, the country's top decision-making body, met today to discuss the attack, which occurred Wednesday when a suicide assassin drove a bomb-laden truck between two Israeli convoys.

In Beirut, the military wing of Hezbollah, or The Party of God, claimed responsibility for the attack and said it had mobilized its forces for an Israeli reprisal.

Hezbollah has been demanding action to force Israel to withdraw its troops from south Lebanon.

But Islamic Resistance, a loose coalition of pro-Iranian Lebanese groups, also claimed responsibility for the attack.

Israeli radio stations reported Shiite Moslems in south Lebanon fleeing to the north in fear of an Israeli attack. The reports did not elaborate.

Despite the tensions, the "Good Fence," crossing point at Metullah was re-opened this morning and Lebanese workers were permitted to head to jobs in northern Israel's Galilee.

However, soldiers refused to let reporters through the gate to Lebanon to examine the site of Wednesday's blast.

The army said the bomb exploded 300 yards north of the "Good Fence" border crossing at 1:25 p.m. as two groups of Israeli military vehicles passed each other, one headed home and the other into Lebanon.

"It was a very powerful charge," said Maj. Gen. Yossi Peled, head of Israel's northern command.

"There was something large, black, and black smoke came out, and many things flew in the air. Our van was burning, about to explode," an unidentified injured soldier said on army radio.

An Israeli officer said a white Toyota truck, driven by an Arab exploded between the two convoys.

"The commanders got out to talk. The Toyota came in between the two groups of vehicles and exploded," the officer said on condition of anonymity.

Seven soldiers died and eight soldiers and two Lebanese women were wounded, the army said.

The blast left a 15-foot-wide crater. Witnesses said they saw pools of blood. Trees were scorched.

Hurricane Joan Picks Up Steam

Central America In Path

By Juan Maltes
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Thousands fled the Caribbean coast as Hurricane Joan closed in on Central America today with heavy rains and 115 mph winds, threatening to unleash a torrent of flash floods and mudslides.

The storm was moving west after leaving 35 people dead or missing in Colombia and thousands homeless.

Gilbert Clark, meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla., said the damage could be severe in the mountainous regions of Central America.

"Unfortunately, they are getting a lot of rain ahead of this storm, which is going to affect the area and cause a lot of mud slides and flash flood in the mountains," he said. "The biggest threat to life will be from flash floods and mud slides."

Max Mayfield, another forecaster at the hurricane center, said the portion of the Caribbean where the hurricane is bound has never experienced a storm of such magnitude.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Joan's center was located near latitude 11.2 north, longitude 79.7 west, or about 265 miles southeast of Bluefields, Nicaragua. The hurricane was almost stationary this morning but was expected to resume a slow westward motion later today.

Maximum sustained winds hit 115 mph.

The Colombian islands of San Andres, Albuquerque and Providencia were under a hurricane warning, and a watch was posted for the Caribbean coasts of Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

At least 12,000 people fled Puerto Limon, Costa Rica's main Caribbean port, and other northeast coastal towns, said Johnny Alfaro, national emergency committee director in Puerto Limon.

"We're sure of one thing: Hurricane Joan will provoke many floods along the Atlantic coast and to a lesser degree on the Pacific coast," Alfaro said.

Hundreds of people lined up for buses to flee the town of 10,000 located 100 miles southeast of San Jose, the capital. Some said they were afraid there wouldn't be enough transportation for everyone.

"We could die," said Alfaro Valverde, 58, as he waited in line.

Public Security Minister Hernan Garron said 1,000 police were sent to Puerto Limon to prevent looting.

In Nicaragua, President Daniel Ortega declared a state of alert Wednesday night. Red Cross officials said they were only waiting for orders to begin evacuating coastal residents.

"If the hurricane fully strikes national territory it could cause severe

Pitt Native Dies In School Bus Accident

FLORENCE, S.C. — A Pitt County, N.C. native, Brenda Jean Mills Avery, died Wednesday morning when the school bus she was driving ran into a roadside ditch in rural Florence County, near Effingham.

Investigators said Mrs. Avery swirled to miss a dog in the road and lost control of the bus, which ran into a road-side ditch.

Three of Mrs. Avery's four children were passengers on the bus at the time of the wreck and two of them received minor injuries.

Officials said Mrs. Avery was just starting her route to pick up children attending the New Prospect Free Will Baptist Church School in Hannah, when the accident occurred about 7 a.m.

Mrs. Avery was the daughter of Burl Mills Sr. of Black Jack, southeast of Greenville, and lived with her husband, the Rev. James Thomas Avery, in Effingham.

Nabisco Ponders Buyout Offer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — RJR Nabisco Inc. announced today that top managers are considering offering to buy the consumer products giant for almost $17 billion, a deal that would be the largest corporate acquisition ever.

The company said President F. Ross Johnson and Edward A. Horrigan Jr., chief executive of the company's tobacco business, had notified Nabisco that they "intend to seek to develop, with a financial partner, a proposal to acquire RJR Nabisco in a leveraged buyout merger transaction."

The group said they estimated they would offer $75 in cash for each of the company's approximately 225 million common shares outstanding.

In a leveraged buyout, the buyer borrows the money to buy the company, then pay off the debt either through company revenues or selling off parts of the operation.

If such a deal was completed it would be the biggest leveraged buyout of an American corporation by far. The biggest LBO was the $6.1 billion buyout of Beatrice Cos. by an investment group led by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. in 1986.

It also would surpass the biggest corporate acquisition, which was the $13.4 billion purchase of Gulf Corp. by Chevron Corp. in 1984.

Trading on Nabisco stock was delayed this morning. The stock closed Wednesday at $55.87, a share.

RJR Nabisco was formed when R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. bought Nabisco Brands Inc. for $4.9 billion in 1985.

When the company decided to move its headquarters from Winston-Salem, N.C., to Atlanta last year, Horrigan, then vice chairman of RJR Nabisco, assumed the additional title of chairman and chief executive officer of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Inc., which oversees operations of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International Inc.

Children's TV Bill Passes, But Reagan Veto Expected

By Deborah Mesce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Some television stations would have to reduce advertising and refocus their children's programming efforts under a bill approved by Congress and hailed as "a victory for America's children." The measure won final passage on a voice vote in the Senate on Wednesday, but the Reagan administration opposes it and the Justice Department recommends that he veto it on constitutional grounds.

The measure would limit advertising time during children's shows and require TV stations to provide informative programming for children as a condition of license renewal.

Supporters say the legislation is the most important statement by Congress on children's television in a generation.

"This legislation will challenge broadcasters to educate children creatively rather than to exploit children commercially," said Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., a co-author of the measure.

Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, called passage of the bill "a landmark victory for parents and children."

"What this bill does is create a new climate in broadcasting and signals a sea change in the way broadcasters and the FCC (Federal Communications Commission) will view children's programming," said Charren, whose Cambridge, Mass.-based group has lobbied for 20 years to set into law advertising limits for children's shows.

But the administration opposes the bill as "inimical to the spirit of the

Judge Slain By Her Police Officer Mate

By Lisa Perlman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — — A judge begged for help over a courthouse intercom moments before her estranged husband, an off-duty police officer, fatally shot her in her chambers, authorities said.

District Judge Carol S. Irons, 40, was shot in the throat at least once Wednesday and stumbled into a hallway, where her husband, Clarence Rathliff, 53, followed her and fired at least two more shots, police said. She was pronounced dead in a jury room minutes later.

"Judge Irons came out of her chambers bent over with her hands reaching for her throat, asking ... 'Please, help me!'" Police Chief William Hegarty said at a news conference.

Rathliff, a 21-year police department veteran, briefly exchanged gunfire in a corridor with officers who answered Irons' pleas, and then barricaded himself in her chambers.

He surrendered within minutes and was arrested at the courthouse, the site of the couple's marriage four years ago. Rathliff was held in the city jail today pending the filing of formal charges.

The police chief said Rathliff had no history of mental problems and there was no reason to believe Irons feared him. Rathliff, who was on night patrol duty, was in civilian clothes when he entered the chambers at midday.

Nicholas Katzenbach

A year ago, on "Black Monday," the Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 508 points, 22.6 percent — the biggest one-day decline in the history of the market. In four trading days — the 13th through the 19th — the fall totaled 769 points, a $1-trillion plunge in stock value. The Great Crash of October, 1929, was not even in the same ballpark.

Looking back a year later on that chilling event, it seems almost a miracle that the stock markets continue to operate today much as they did before. In contrast to 1929, the general public seems to have largely forgotten the event or adjusted to it, and the Reagan administration — perhaps wisely — never did take it very seriously.

Should we forget it? Was it a freak event that will not recur? Do we understand what happened, why it happened, and have the steps been taken to assure that it will not happen again?

Maybe yes. Maybe no. The exchanges have taken measures that should cushion such dramatic declines in the future. The federal government has, essentially, done nothing — which is less than it should have done but considerably better than it might have done. That it did not overreact in the face of such dramatic events is to its credit.

Generally, most agree with the report of the presidential task force — the Brady Commission — that, like every decline, this one was triggered by specific news events. The modest initial decline, said the commission, "ignited mechanical, price insensitive selling by a number of institutions ... and a small number of mutual fund groups." As the volume of selling by these institutional investors inundated buyers, prices fell rapidly, triggering further reactive selling that drove prices down still more.

The market, of course, had risen very rapidly prior to Oct. 14. Much of this buying had been by large institutions — some of which were now selling and causing the decline.

It is this growth of institutional investors, principally pension funds and mutual funds, that has changed the nature of stock markets in the past 20 years. Virtually everything that happened on Black Monday happened because of professional fund managers, who invest billions of dollars and do more than three-quarters of the daily trading.

Markets and investment houses, of course, have adjusted to this change. Huge volumes of transactions have led to the elimination of fixed commissions, which is right enough in terms of competitive principles but advantageous to volume buyers and sellers, rarely to individuals. The New York Stock Exchange has facilitated trading with computerized access and the commodities exchanges have created exotic instruments such as stock index futures, vehicles for professional traders to "hedge" or to speculate. Investment bankers have prospered enormously as trading and deals have grown apace, creating opportunities for arbitrage and the arrangement of huge block trades off the floor.

These developments have profoundly affected the nature and function of stock markets. In contrast to their traditional role of facilitating investment in new industrial or technological developments, markets have become increasingly the temporary depositories of investment funds managed by professionals primarily interested in the short-term "performance of the market" — that is, its daily or hourly responses to news about national economies. The more traditional investment philosophy — looking for the underpriced stock and evaluating the potential of various companies over the long haul — now plays second fiddle to the day-to-day performance of the 100, 500, 2,000 or 5,000 stocks that are tracked as an "index" and that, on average, will react to the immediate economic news of the economy as a whole.

Trading that tries to beat an index has been greatly facilitated by the creation of stock index futures, which permit an investor to purchase or sell what amounts to a promise to deliver the cash difference in the value of an index today as against its value at a future date.

The existence of these index future contracts has inextricably linked the commodities markets with the stock markets. To the extent the "basket" of stocks which compose the index gets out of line with the value of the index contracts themselves, arbitrageurs take advantage of small differences to lock in small but certain profits.

The combination of computers, index futures and institutional investors has led to automatic buy and sell programs, calculated to take advantage of small market shifts. Today such programs as "tactical asset allocation" perform similar functions by shifting investment dollars among stocks, bonds and cash, following computer models of market movements. The important point is that all such programs focus on short-term market movements, not longer-term investment opportunities.

The crash of last October came because a few large, professional fund managers, trying to beat an average, all headed for the exit at the same time. The assumption behind these programs is that there are always willing buyers waiting in the wings. But where buyers and sellers are to a considerable degree the same people with the same objectives, that kind of liquidity may not exist.

The remarkable thing was that, by and large, the exchanges were able to stay open, the crash was not worse and the government did not panic.

Some reforms have been made. The New York Stock Exchange has instituted measures to improve technological response, increase margins and therefore decrease speculative potentials, and to put a collar on program trading when the market falls more than 50 points. Absent a real crisis, these steps may well prove adequate. Perhaps more important is the fact that institutional investors themselves have become more cautious in their investment policies.

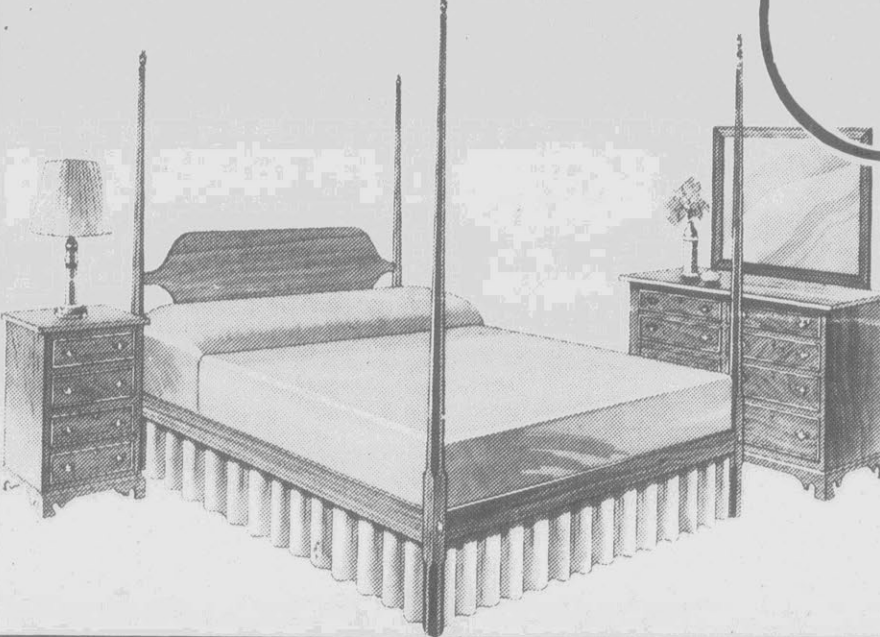

Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, who served as U.S. attorney general in 1965-66, wrote a report on the Oct. 19, 1987, crash for the New York Stock Exchange.

Official's Son Arrested

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Sherman Patrick Hairston, 27, of Winston-Salem has been arrested on a charge of selling crack to an undercover police officer.

Hairston is the son of Winston-Salem Alderman Patrick T. Hairston.

Hairston was ordered held on $10,000 bond on the cocaine charge and $20,000 bond on a charge of failing to appear in court on an earlier charge of breaking and entering.

Illinois Man Arrested

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — An Illinois man has been arrested on charges of dousing his ex-wife with a flammable liquid and trying to set her on fire, authorities said Tuesday.

Oscar Darnell Taylor, 32, of Waukeg, Ill., was arrested Monday afternoon. Agent Jeffery S. Wallace of the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division said Tayloris charged with attempted murder.

Wallace said Doris Ann Taylor was assaulted shortly before 8 a.m. Monday at the Civilian Personnel building at Fort Bragg.

Taylor was ordered held in Cumberland County Jail without bond, pending a detention hearing in U.S. District Court, officials said.

Officers File Suit

GREENSBORO (AP)— More than 80 officers from the Greensboro Police Department filed suit against the city Tuesday, alleging they have not received payment for overtime work.

Their lawsuit accuses the city of violating the 1986 Fair Labor Standards Act by paying compensatory time, not cash, for overtime without first clearing the practice with employees.

The lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court by members of the local Police Officers Association requests unspecified back pay. Lawyers said the exact amount can't be determined until personnel records for the 89 officers are examined.

The amount is probably less than $300,000, said Michael Leibig, a Washington labor lawyer hired by the association.

Dedication Is Saturday

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A monument commemorating members of the 43rd North Carolina Regiment who fought in the Battle of Gettysburg will be dedicated by the North Carolina Society Saturday in Gettysburg, Pa.

William C. Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina system, will preside during the 2 p.m. ceremony at Gettysburg National Military Park.

In July 1863, members of the 43rd North Carolina Regiment suffered heavy losses during the first two days of the Battle of Gettysburg, but still participated in an assault on Culp's Hill the third day. The regiment was exposed to the severe fire of canister, shrapnel and shell at short range.

Eno Founder Honored

DURHAM (AP) — Margaret Nygard of Durham, one of the founders of the Eno River Association, has been named the first recipient of a new national award for environmental protection.

Mrs. Nygard was chosen to receive this year's Alexander Calder Conservation Award, presented by the Conservation Fund, based in Arlington, Va.

The award carries an unrestricted grant of $5,000.

The award "honors individuals who have achieved significant results in protecting terrestrial or wetlands habitat in the United States through cooperative efforts between the conservation and business communities," according to a press release announcing her award.

Mrs. Nygard, 63, She helped start the Association for the Preservation of the Eno River Valley — as the group is officially titled — in 1965. Supporters of the group feared that a proposed reservoir might flood the valley, with its historic and archaeologically significant sites.

UNC Is Broadcast Site

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has been chosen as the setting for a live broadcast of ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" that will focus on education as an issue in the presidential race.

The show will air Nov. 3 at 7 a.m.

Chapel Hill will be the fourth stop as part of a series on "Good Morning America" programs highlighting issues in the campaigns of George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

Court Orders New Trial

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Court of Appeals has ordered a new trial for Darryl Eugene Hunt on a charge of second-degree murder in the 1983 beating and robbery of a Winston-Salem man.

In a unanimous decision, a panel of three Appeals Court judges ruled Tuesday that Judge William H. Helms made a mistake when explaining the law to jurors during Hunt's trial in Forsyth Superior Court in October 1987.

The Appeals Court said that the improper jury instructions, rather than the evidence presented, may have led the jury to convict Hunt of second-degree murder in the killing of 57-year-old Arthur Lee Wilson.

Hunt remains in the Caswell County Prison unit on a life sentence that he received in June 1985 after he was convicted of murder in the death of Deborah B. Sykes, a Winston-Salem newspaper editor.

Morgan May Have Broken Law

State Officials Question Obtaining Campaign List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Robert Morgan, the director of the State Bureau of Investigation, may have broken state law to advance the re-election campaign of Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, a deputy attorney general says.

A former assistant director at the SBI said Wednesday he obtained a list of home addresses of agents and cadets at the N.C. Justice Academy to solicit campaign contributions for Thornburg. Troy K. Green, who retired Dec. 31, 1987, said Morgan's secretary gave him the list in July of this year after he talked with Morgan about the plan.

"He said that as long as there was no pressure in the letter, that he thought it was a good idea," Green said.

James Coman, the senior deputy attorney general in charge of the N.C. Department of Justice's Criminal Division, said state law does not allow the home addresses of any state employee to be released.

"The statute seems not to provide for exceptions," he told The Winston-Salem Journal. "If somebody came forward with a complaint, this would certainly put the agency in a posture that the matter ought to be looked into."

Peggy Oliver, the director of administrative services for the N.C. Personnel Office, said home addresses are confidential.

"We take that to mean that the information is not public," Miss Oliver said. "That's the interpretation that we've always used. It is a misdemeanor to give out that information."

A misdemeanor is punishable by six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The letter, dated Aug. 4, asks agents to either contribute or participate in a $50-a-ticket fund-raiser conducted Aug. 11.

"In as much as I am retired from the SBI, I feel free to solicit your support," Green wrote. "I think Judge Thornburg tries so hard to avoid any appearance of conflict that maybe some have been unsure as to whether or not they should or could contribute to his campaign. I know that his campaign needs our financial support."

So far the letter has prompted no formal complaints.

Morgan, a former Democratic U.S. senator and state attorney general, was appointed director of the SBI after Thornburg took office in 1985.

Morgan could not be reached for comment.

Darrell Carneal, an assistant SBI director and close adviser to Morgan, said he was aware of the plan in advance although he did not know the letters would be sent to agents' homes.

He didn't learn that the letters were sent to the agents, he said, until he received the letter at home.

In an interview with the Winston-Salem newspaper, Green first said that he obtained the addresses from an inner-office directory he obtained before leaving the bureau, but he later acknowledged that he picked up the list in July at SBI headquarters.

Section 01 of the SBI policy manual prohibits the use of SBI "funds, service, supplies, vehicles or other property" for political purposes. The manual prohibits agents from engaging in political activity while at work or during office hours.

The manual also says that "violation of the prohibitions ... shall be cause for appropriate disciplinary action, including discharge from employment."

One longtime agent in a supervisory position said he was approached by several less experienced agents worried about how to respond.

"They got it and were scared to death," the agent said. "They were afraid they could be blackballed if they didn't contribute. I've never seen anything like it in all my years."

I told them that I threw the letter in the trash."

The agent, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said that releasing the addresses is a violation of SBI policy.

While Green said Thornburg told him the letter would be permissible, Thornburg said Wednesday night that Green never mentioned using the agents addresses.

"The long and short of it was that this was a retired employee who wanted to do something to help," Thornburg said. "I don't know where the addresses came from. It would not be with my approval that a law be broken."

Green said the letter was not intended to pressure agents into contributing.

"This letter was to let them know they could contribute if they wanted to," he said. "But there was no obligation. There was no pressure."

Oakland Bows, 4-3, In Series Game 4

Dodgers Go For Championship Tonight

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers may be outnumbered, but the Oakland Athletics are almost out of the World Series.

The A's had their ace, Dave Stewart, pitching to get even Wednesday night.

But it was Jay Howell, the maligned man of postseason, who got even, and the Dodgers took a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Series with a 4-3 victory over the A's.

"With all our injuries, we're going into tomorrow's game with Orel Hersher and a chance to win it all," said Dodgers rookie Tim Lincecum, who got the victory with 2

1-3 innings of relief help from Howell.

Missing both Kirk Gibson and Mike Marshall, the Dodgers' No. 3 and 4 hitters, Manager Tom Lasorda told his players they'd have to manufacture runs. They did, and the A's helped with two errors and a passed ball that added up to two unearned runs against Stewart.

While the A's were dropping balls, the Dodgers were dropping like flies.

Already without Gibson, the Dodgers also had to start Game 4 without Marshall, who aggravated a chronic back problem the night before.

Lasorda also learned that he would be without left-handed pitcher John Tudor for the rest of the Series. Tudor strained a ligament in his elbow Tuesday night and might need surgery.

And then, in the fourth inning, catcher Mike Scioscia twisted his knee sliding into second base. He had to leave, leaving the Dodgers with just one catcher, Rick Dempsey.

Both Marshall and Scioscia could be ready tonight, when the Dodgers send Hersher to the mound in Game 5 against the A's Storm Davis in a rematch of Game 2 — a three-hit shutout by Hersher.

Marshall came off the bench to play defense in the ninth inning Wednesday night, indicating he could be ready. Scioscia said his knee had bothered him for two or three weeks, and the Dodgers made plans to appeal for another catcher on the roster.

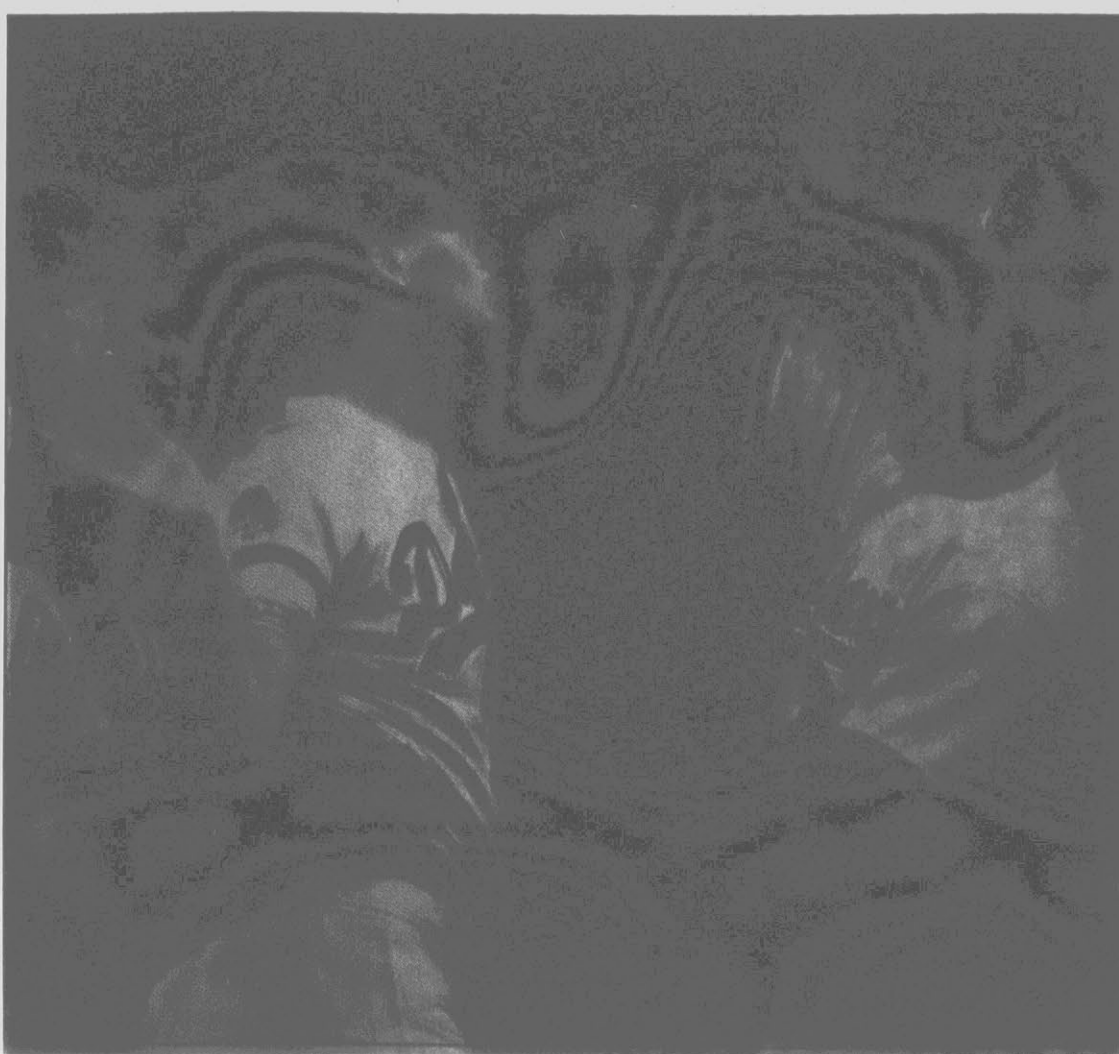

"When you have Gibson and Marshall out, it takes away a major part of our offense," Lasorda said. "And when Scioscia was hurt, that left me with only one other catcher. I had to bring Dempsey in, and I thank God he wasn't injured."

Rocked in Game 3 for Mark McGwire's game-winning homer in the ninth inning, Howell came back the next night to retire McGwire and end a two-on, none-out threat in the seventh inning.

With a runner on base and one out in the ninth, Howell struck out Jose Canseco and got Dave Parker to foul out for the save.

"When something like that happens to a guy like Jay Howell, you just have to get him right back in there as soon as you can," Lasorda said. "He gave up a home run to a

Even Without Scioscia, Dodgers Pull Game Out

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Every twist and turn in the World Series has been matched by one in a ligament of a Los Angeles Dodger.

On Wednesday night, they were without Kirk Gibson and Mike Marshall, who normally bat third and fourth.

During the game, they lost Mike Scioscia, who usually bats sixth.

It didn't matter. Even though it was a lineup which hit a total of only 36 home runs during the season, the Dodgers beat Oakland 4-3 to take a 3-1 lead in the World Series.

"I think it was a great lineup," insisted Marshall, who went to right field for defensive purposes in the ninth inning and said he expects to play tonight. "We had a good mix of right-handers and left-handers. We had guys in there who can play."

Not according to Bob Costas, who infuriated the Dodgers with his remarks on NBC-TV.

"Right before the game in the clubhouse, the pre-game show came on and Bob Costas said that this was the worst hitting team in the history of the World Series," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "They (the Dodger players) went nuts."

"They're yelling 'We'll show 'em' and 'Kill Costas.' I was just trying to calm them down."

The Dodgers did "show 'em," getting two runs in the top of the first inning to go ahead for good.

"We keep trickin' 'em, you know what I'm saying?" said Mike Davis, who batted fourth despite his .196 average and two home runs during the season.

"I knew we were going to win tonight," said Marshall, who had to leave Tuesday night's game in the fourth inning because his back stiffened up. "I've seen these guys (the Dodger reserves) do the job all year. Our pitching staff has been the real reason we've been able to win. I just hope we can win one more."

"It's something I can't explain.

These guys are falling like flies," said Hatcher, the No. 3 hitter despite one home run during the season.

"We're not afraid of losing. We've got guys who can come out and do the job," he said. "Our guys aren't scared of going out there. They've got nothing to lose."

The Athletics do — everything if they're beaten tonight.

"We're right where we want to be, but in essence, we haven't done a thing yet," said second baseman

Steve Sax, one of the few Dodgers who hasn't had to leave the lineup. "We need one more win and then we celebrate."

While Marshall will probably be able to play tonight, it seems less likely that Gibson or Scioscia will be in the lineup.

Gibson, whose only at-bat in the Series was in Game 1 when he hit his dramatic two-out, ninth-inning

Costas' Comments Spark Dodger Win

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Some negative comments by NBC sportscaster Bob Costas proved positive for the Los Angeles Dodgers in their 4-3 victory over the Oakland Athletics in Game 4 of the World Series.

"Right before the game began, in the clubhouse, the guys heard them say during the pregame show that this may be the worst team ever put on the field to play in the fall classic," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said Wednesday night. "Then they started screaming 'We'll show them. We'll show them,' and a few of them started saying 'Kill Costas' or something like that."

Instead, the Dodgers took out their anger on the Athletics, prompting Oakland manager Tony La Russa to question whether more than the Dodgers were working against his American League champions.

"I'm a little aggravated right now because I heard this comment that one of the broadcasters said on the air that the Dodgers were the worst hitting club in the majors and that they used that in their meeting," La Russa said. "It's no big deal, but I'd like to know how they knew about that and how they used it in the meeting."

"I know they were out there working, not watching TV."

Nemesis Fike Next For Rose; Vikes Host Rams

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Rose High School faces an old nemesis Friday in Wilson Fike for its annual Homecoming game.

It is a matchup head coach Chip Williams looks to as being a very key game for his 7-0 Rampants.

Although Rose is 4-0 in the Big East Conference, first place is still up for grabs as Northeastern High School also sports an unbeaten league mark of 4-0 and a overall record of 6-1.

Fike enters Friday's game sporting only a 3-4 overall mark and a 1-3 record in the conference. However, Rampant fans may remember the fact that the Golden Demons spoiled Homecoming festivities two years ago with a 27-14 victory over Rose.

Last season the Rampants pulled out a 14-7 victory in the game, but the win wasn't secured until late in the contest when Rose punted a razzle-dazzle pitch pass for a touchdown in the waning seconds.

"Wilson Fike always has played Greenville Rose some very tough ball games," Williams said. "And Friday shouldn't be any different. I look for it to be a hard-fought tough football game."

"Their record is a little deceiving," Williams said. "They lost to Northeastern (32-0) and have lost in tough games to (Wilson) Hunt (14-7) and (Wilson) Beddingfield (14-13). I've been told that they played better than Beddingfield in that game, but they had some trouble with their kicking game that cost them."

The Rampants squeaked by Beddingfield 12-6 in overtime two weeks ago.

Rose comes into the matchup Friday on the heels of an impressive 41-0 victory over winless Kinston last Friday, a game where Williams said he saw lots of improvement.

"The defense continues to get better week to week; they controlled the tempo of the game," Williams said. "And I was very pleased with the offense and the execution of the passing game. It's coming along now. I was worried about it after the Beddingfield game, but I think the team responded to that game in a positive manner. We also scored on our first series, which I always think is a positive factor."

Fike also has an impressive defense, according to Williams.

"I'd say that the better aspects of their team is their defense."

Williams said. "And with a tough defense, that always makes for a good football game."

D.H. Conley

D.H. Conley heads into its Homecoming matchup against Greene Central riding a three-game winning streak and hoping to continue building momentum.

The Vikings breezed to a 40-13 victory over West Craven last Friday to move to 5-2 overall and to 3-1 in the Coastal 3-A Conference. The Rams, on the other hand, come into the game with a 3-4 record following a 36-14 loss to Ayden-Grifton in a Eastern Plains 2-A Conference matchup.

"We hit on all eight cylinders Friday," Craft said. "I wish we could put our fingers on it. It was our best all-around performance. The defense, offense, special teams, the whole 10 yards. We started coming together and playing like a team. We showed signs that we could be a good team, but there is still room for improvement."

Even though Friday's game is not a conference game, Conley head coach Steve Craft still feels it is an important one for his team.

"I'm worried about a letdown, but we can't afford to have one," Craft said. "We're starting to build momentum and we need to continue building momentum. Our number one goal has got to be to continue winning. This is a very big game for us. Not only is it Homecoming, but it's also the last home game for our seniors."

"We're hitting the big push now," Craft said. "The Greene Central game will set the tone for our last two games. Their passing game is a lot like Washington's and their running game is like East Carteret's. I'm glad that we're playing them when we are. It gives us a chance to get an idea of what we'll see the last two weeks of the season."

Craft, however, hopes the Rams' quarterback Kris Radford doesn't post quite the numbers he did last week against Ayden-Grifton. In that loss, Radford threw for 331 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

"It was a tremendous individual performance," Craft said.

The Rams also sport some other offensive weapons in running back Cornelius Hill and receivers Wes Suggs and Ken Jones.

"They'll play you as tough as anybody," Craft said. "They've had some early-season injuries that have hurt them, but those people are starting to get back into the lineup now."

McPherson Learned His Lesson In Freeze Option

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Syracuse football coach Dick McPherson hopes to show East Carolina coach Art Baker that he's a good student of the game come Saturday afternoon.

McPherson will bring his Orangemen into Ficklen Stadium for a 1:30 p.m. contest against the Pirates and will put to use some lessons learned a few years ago.

Syracuse runs the freeze option offense, and the Orangemen learned it from the Pirates. "Coach McPherson sent his offensive staff up here about three or four years ago and they spent a week with us. The only thing about it is they run it better than we have the last couple of years," Baker said this week.

With All-America quarterback Don McPherson leading the Orange, Syracuse went undefeated during the regular season. Only a 16-16 tie with Auburn in the Sugar Bowl kept Syracuse from having a shot at the national championship in the final polls.

As it was it was the best Syracuse record since the 1959 team that won the national championship behind the running of the late Ernie Davis.

This year, however, with Don McPherson gone, along with a number of other key players, the Orangemen were picked in few preseason honors lists. And their start seemed to make those predictions accurate. They struggled against Temple before winning 31-21, then lost to Ohio State, 26-9, snapping a 14-game unbeaten string.

But following that, the Orange suddenly came to life. They punted Virginia Tech, 35-0, beat Maryland, 20-9, and sailed past Rutgers, 34-20.

And this past Saturday, on the Nittany Lions' home field, Syracuse bested Penn State, 24-10, in what Baker called a real physical beating.

As a result, Syracuse is back in the top 20, ranking 19th this week. They are the fifth team on the ECU schedule this year to appear on the top 20, joining South Carolina, West Virginia, Florida State and Miami, Fla.

Saturday, they'll be the third straight ranked team the Pirates meet in a month of ranked team meetings.

It's the first meeting ever of the two. A return visit is set for the Carrier Dome in Syracuse next fall.

Todd Philcox, who took McPherson's job as signal caller, was named the ECAC's player of the week for his job against Penn State, hitting 19 of 32 passes for 286 yards and two touchdowns. It was the second straight week he gained the honor, although he shared it with Undra Johnson the previous week. Ironically, Johnson gained the honor for his play against East Carolina.

Philcox ranks seventh in the country in pass efficiency and 30th in total offense, averaging 207.2 yards a game.

Leonard, Dundee Part Company

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard has split with his longtime trainer Angelo Dundee in a bitter dispute that has apparently ended a nearly-12-year relationship between them.

Leonard's lawyer, Mike Trainer, said Wednesday that Dundee will not work Leonard's Nov. 7 fight against Donny Lalonde, the first time Leonard won't have Dundee in his corner in a 35-fight professional career.

The split came after Dundee, unhappy with his payment for working Leonard's last fight against Marvelous Marvin Hagler, demanded that his own lawyer negotiate payment for working the Lalonde bout. Trainer and Leonard refused.

"It has nothing to do with money, it has nothing to do with boxing," Trainer said. "It has everything to do with friendship."

Dundee acknowledged he was out of the fight, but blamed Trainer for the breakup.

"I resented the little amount I was paid for the Hagler fight and I told them so," the veteran trainer said. "Evidently, I had the audacity to let them know it."

Leonard said late Wednesday that he was "very disappointed" Dundee wouldn't be in his corner, and said he was personally hurt by Dundee's demand for negotiations.

"I felt I had a relationship with someone that went beyond business, that went beyond boxing," Leonard said. "I'm shocked Dundee has said things to reporters that he wouldn't say to me."

Trainer said Leonard "reached out" to Dundee on several occasions to discuss the bout, but that Dundee responded by having his lawyer call Trainer's office.

Dundee, however, said he hasn't heard from Leonard since they taped some radio shows in August, when he said Leonard told him he'd call in a couple of weeks.

"I guess I'm not going to be there," Dundee said in a phone conversation from Miami. "I haven't heard from Ray at all."

Leonard has been training in the Poconos for several weeks for his latest comeback, a scheduled 12-round fight at Caesars Palace against Lalonde for Lalonde's World Boxing Council light heavyweight title and the newly created WBC 168-pound crown.

Dundee said the dispute stems from the payment he received for working Leonard's corner in Leonard's April 1987 upset of Hagler, the middleweight champion.

Dundee won wide praise, particularly from Leonard, for masterminding a strategy that helped Leonard win a 12-round split decision.

"They paid me off in the fabulous sum of one percent of Ray's purse plus something else," Dundee said.

This time around, Dundee said, he was determined to let his lawyer handle negotiations for payment in a bout that could earn Leonard up to $15 million.

Dundee said Trainer called his lawyer in August and asked that Dundee be at an Aug. 16 press conference in New York City announcing the bout.

"My lawyer said under no circumstances would I go unless I knew what my remuneration would be for the fight," he said.

But Trainer said Dundee never said he was unhappy over his payment for the Leonard-Hagler fight, a fight that earned Leonard some $12 million.

"Ray has seen Angie several times since then and Angie never expressed any displeasure," Trainer said. "He smiled and hugged him every time he saw him."

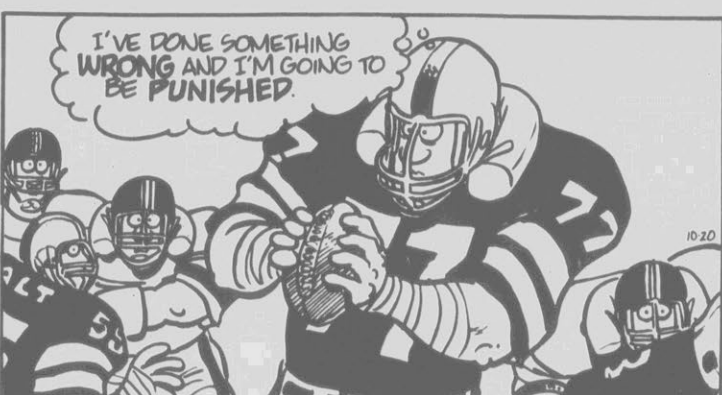

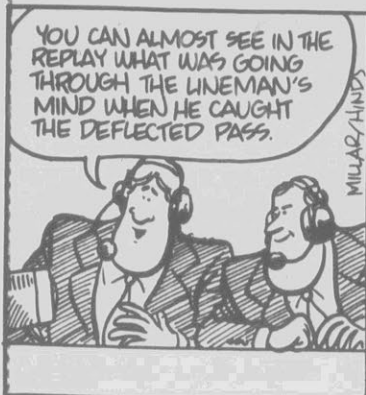

Trainer also disputed Dundee's recollection of how much he was paid for the Hagler fight. "What Angie told you he got paid from Ray is absolutely false," Trainer said. "He made more for the last fight than for any other fight up to that time. I resent what he's trying to say."

Trainer said longtime Leonard associates Dave Jacobs and Janks Morton would work Leonard's corner for the Lalonde fight, and a cut man would be hired to fill out the team.

Dundee has worked Leonard's corner in every fight since he turned pro Feb. 5, 1977 with a six-round victory over Luis Vegas in Baltimore.

Previously, Dundee was more known for training Muhammad Ali throughout his career.

Military Is State's Third Top Industry

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Military services pump $4.2 billion a year into North Carolina, ranking behind only tobacco and tourism in economic clout, but the impact of the contribution is often hidden, a new study says.

"... It's good for us to tug at the sleeves of civilians and say we are contributing — not just tanks and bullets. We are in your community," said Lt. Col. David Kiernan, an Army Spokesman at Fort Bragg.

The money comes in large chunks and small — from the $2,400 annual rent for a part-time recruiting office in Lincolnton to $14.5 million for the Air National Guard in Charlotte.

The two-year study was done by retired Army Col. Carlyle Woelfer for the Governor's Advisory Commission on Military Affairs.

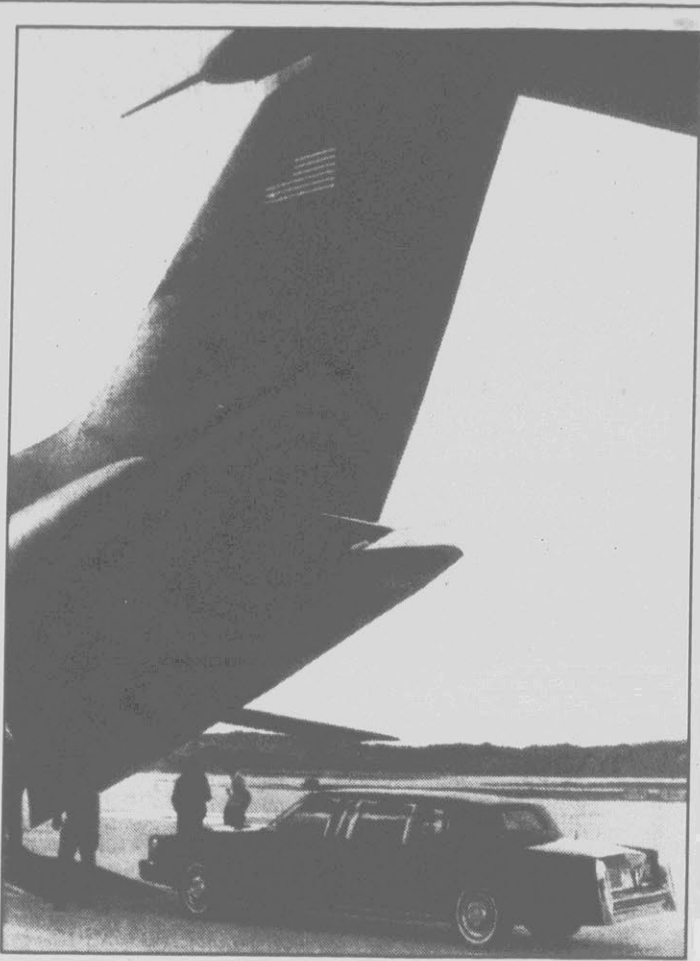

The study also reflects trends, such as the nation's growing reliance on reserve forces, which disperse military spending into small towns and communities.

In Charlotte, for example, 1,591 Marine reservists and 19 active-duty Marines are paid $2.5 million a year, the study says. More than 1,200 Army Reserve and National Guard members and support personnel earn about $6 million.

But the military spending is also significant in small communities. Lincolnton's 100 Army National Guard members are paid $300,000 a year.

Woelfer's study defines the economic impact broadly, calculating such factors as payrolls for active and retired personnel, payments to veterans' widows, salaries for ROTC instructors in high schools and military contracts with North Carolina industries.

Gordon Corcoran, a North Carolina Commerce Department defense industry specialist, said the $4.2 billion figure "tracks closely with what we've been able to come

Jordan Charges Martin Making Race An Issue

By JOHN FLESHER
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democratic challenger Bob Jordan says Gov. Jim Martin is "trying to inject race into the campaign" in some of his radio and television commercials, but Martin says the ads are factual and that his campaign is no more racist than Jordan's.

Jordan said Wednesday that Martin's campaign was rebroadcasting radio commercials that were run last month on black-oriented stations. He charged that a Martin television ad showing footage of a meeting Jordan had with black newspaper editors last March also appeared to have racial overtones.

"That's my perception, and others feel that that's what is happening," Jordan said.

Martin said he did not know the radio spots had been resurrected, but after consulting with his campaign, he said two of three commercials broadcast last month were being used again. He said a commercial that questions Jordan's respect for slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was not being aired again. That commercial drew sharp criticism from Jordan and some black leaders.

Martin said one of the commercials now being broadcast touts his administration's record in giving state jobs and contracts to minorities and their businesses.

"That's a good message and if I don't get it out, nobody will do it for me," Martin said.

He said he exceeded his goal of awarding four percent of state business to companies owned by minorities, women and handicapped people — a record, he said, that was better than that of former Gov. Jim Hunt.

"I've done more for minorities with less political obligations to them than Hunt did, although he had tremendous political obligations to them," Martin said.

Jordan visited a Guilford Mills textile plant in Greensboro, shaking hands with employees and watching the spinning and dyeing operations. Afterward, he told reporters that a bill he helped push through the legislature in 1987 that blocked a hostile takeover of Burlington Industries also protects other textile companies such as Guilford Mills.

Meanwhile, former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox called on North Carolina Democratic leaders Wednesday to abandon presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, saying he has nothing to offer the party's conservatives.

"A lot of Democratic leaders are refusing to go out and campaign for Dukakis because they know what the people feel," Maddox said in a news conference at the state Capitol. "The people are frightened about Dukakis and they're disappointed in their Democratic leaders."

In other action, the Sierra Club and the Clean Water Fund of North Carolina jointly released a report Wednesday detailing the lack of federal support for cleaning up polluted waters under the Reagan administration. The report also details efforts by the Task Force on Regulatory Relief, chaired by Vice President George Bush, to cut off funding under the Clean Water Act for secondary and advanced sewage treatment improvements.

"The lack of adequate federal funding for sewage treatment is also putting North Carolina's waters in jeopardy," said Joe Hughes Jr., a spokesman for the Clean Water Fund.

Jordan and both candidates for lieutenant governor were planning to start new television ads today.

Republican Jim Gardner's new ad in the lieutenant governor's race attacks partisan Democratic politics in the General Assembly and promises to support Martin's policies.

One Jordan ad replays a constant criticism of the governor, that he has been absent at important times.

"When Taiwanese investors came to talk business, where was Jim Martin?" an announcer asks with a picture of the Capitol on the screen.

"Playing golf," the announcer answers, as a shot of Martin hitting a tee shot flashes on the screen.

"When the '87 legislature was debating the $10 billion budget, where was Jim Martin?"

Seafood Park Considered For Gas Exploration Base

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Mobil Oil Corp. is considering the state's seafood park in Dare County as a staging area for the gas exploration it has proposed off the North Carolina coast, officials say.

If Mobil goes ahead with the drilling, a company official said Wednesday, it probably would locate the staging area either at the state port in Morehead City or at the Wanchese Seafood Industrial Park on Roanoke Island.

"We had a group of our operations people visit the Morehead City facility as well as the one in Wanchese during the first week of October," said Michael J. Kimmitt, spokesman for Mobil's exploration branch in Dallas.

"This group basically is looking for a site that would accommodate a marine and helicopter operation to supply the drilling rigs," Kimmitt told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

The staging area could be an economic boon — particularly to the seafood park, which has lost money since it opened in the mid-1970s. But the park is hampered by its unreliable access to the Atlantic Ocean, which is reached through the shifting channels of Oregon Inlet.

"The Wanchese park has the available room," said Donna Moffitt of the state Office of Marine Affairs in Raleigh. "The disadvantage is you've got to go through Oregon Inlet to get to it."

Last month, Mobil announced plans to search for gas in the Atlantic Ocean about 50 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras.

The staging area probably would include office space, storage facilities and three ships for supplying drilling rigs with equipment, food and emergency supplies, Kimmitt said.

The decision on where to establish the staging area, he said, would hinge on the proximity to the drilling area as well as accessibility of the port facilities.

"Obviously, Morehead City has more developed facilities than there are in Wanchese," Kimmitt said. "But Wanchese has certain advantages, one of them being that it is so much closer to the proposed drill site.

"You're talking about a five- to seven-hour trip to the drill site from there, vs. about a 15-hour trip from Morehead City. So it has that obvious attraction right off the bat."

The key question about the Wanchese seafood park, he said, is the reliability of access through Oregon Inlet.

'Red Sorghum' — Epic Tale In Intimate Detail

By Sheila Benson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — "Red Sorghum" is a movie lover's thrill. You can sense that it is going to be from its first seconds, as a beautiful and extremely reluctant young country girl is prepared for her arranged wedding.

The director, Zhang Yimou, is a visual sensualist, isolating details for us that might have come straight from the bride-to-be's memory: the sprays of silver flowers tucked into her thick braid, the shocking scarlet silk of her padded wedding jacket, the pair of heart-shaped wire scissors she hides inside her bodice. Her father is marrying her off to a rich leper — the scissors are her own idea.

"Red Sorghum" is an epic story, funny, bawdy, beautiful and dreadful all at once, set in the 1920s and early 1930s in a wind-swept northern province of China. It is a legend now, a story that may be meant to parallel China's own, but Zhang treats it like intimate family history: How my grandmother met and did not marry my grandfather, the saga of two nut-hard, unquenchable peasants, told by their grandson — unseen.

Everything seems to work on this young director's sensibilities, a wind that blows the canelike sorghum, a pile of vivid silk quilts — the only bit of color to soften a rude country bedroom, or the glance between a young man and woman that ignites the story.

Zhang is going for a panorama here, movie making on the scale of Kurosawa's "Dersu Uzala," but he is careful to root it in commonplace details of nature and human nature that speak to everyone.

Like "Yellow Earth," "Red Sorghum" opens with the sedan-chair journey of an apprehensive bride veiled in red silk, across dusty hills to her wedding. It is a trip you would not want to make, the sweating, laughing young sedan-chair carriers jolt the chair unmercifully, chanting songs about her husband-to-be's "squashed nose and piggy, piggy eyes," trying to make her cry. It is like a violent shivaree, one day early.

And it is what brings the two principals together. Close to their destination, the procession is terrorized by a bandit, supposedly the dreaded Sanpao, who threatens to make off with the young woman. The carriers, led by the engagingly jagged Jiang Wen, kill him, but in the fracas, there is that glance.

She does marry the leprosy winery owner (also unseen), but two days later, on a dutiful visit to her parents, she is abducted in the 6-foot-tall sorghum fields.

It is the film's most extraordinary sequence. We, and she, know instantly that it is Jiang, who carries her into the middle of the sorghum forest, then tramples it around and around until it is a carpeted, fenced private world. And as he moves toward her, all around them the sorghum blows, in crisscrossing currents. Not even Rhett Butler had such forces of movie making behind him.

By the time she returns to the winery, her husband has been mysteriously dispatched. The winery is in decline, its workers about to scatter, but they look on the young widow as their mistress, and she manages to respond (Actress Gong Li, just 22, seems to grow in maturity and command before our eyes). She is a fierce heroine. When her lover Jiang swaggers back to her, boasting drunkenly in front of her men that she can't resist him, she locks him out in fury. Love among the sorghum is no excuse for boorishness.

So we move into this saga of banditry, braggadocio, kidnapping, passionate reconciliation and the pair's struggle to build a winery and a family. To be sure, the winery grows out of the shared efforts of all concerned, and one of the film's indelible figures is its foreman Luohan (Teng Ru-Jun), who will turn out to be a peasant-organizer.

None of that is surprising. However, converting anybody seems the last thing on director Zhang's agenda; he is too busy with the forward sweep of his narrative and with strong, clear characterizations.

In the 1930s, when the couple's son is 9, the Japanese invade this part of the countryside. Intent on building roads, the Japanese deal with any hint of opposition with grotesque brutality (Be prepared for this scene, one of the most horrifying I can recall — the hatred that comes with the memory of that period dies very hard, apparently). Zhang balances the aftertaste of this horror with a climax of cinematic fireworks: full-scale warfare of the Chinese against their invaders and an eclipse of the sun that almost but not quite eclipses the violence that preceded it.

If artists can be said to be born to their field, this 37-year-old was cinema-doomed from the cradle. Whether Zhang is something of an exception, a cinema prodigy, is hard to know. What seems impossible is that "Red Sorghum," the Grand Prize winner at the Berlin Festival this year, is his first film as a director.

Before this, Zhang was the virtuosic cinematographer on Chen Kaige's arrestingly beautiful "Yellow Earth" and "The Big Parade," and on Wu Tianming's "The Old Well," very different styles of camerawork. And, presumably to ward off boredom, he was also "The Old Well's" principal actor, a performance for which he won the Tokyo Festival's best actor award.

What do they teach at the Beijing academy, anyway? And what does the Xi'an Film Studio nurture? Amazing.

MacLaine Makes 'Leap Of Faith' Grande Dame Part A Dramatic Departure

By Charles Champlin
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — The trick, always harder for actresses than actors, is to sustain a career everywhere along the bumpy road of chronology from pert newcomer to senior character.

The child stars do not always survive a change of voice; the sexy ingenues do not survive to do marital comedies in the suburbs; the romantic leading ladies do not necessarily transit successfully into character parts. Playing another actress' mother for the first time, for example, is a career statement not made without a slight shiver and intimations of mortality.

Shirley MacLaine, 54, figures that she is about 10 years ahead of schedule. Bored with all the scripts sent her in the five years since her Oscar-winning performance in "Terms of Endearment," she made what she calls a leap of faith to play a grande dame part that for the moment left the sexy and romantic MacLaine an almost indecipherable memory.

To become Irina Sousatzka, a Russian-American piano teacher living in a neurotic clutter in London, MacLaine ate herself 25 pounds heavier ("I had to feel those extra folds of flesh beneath the wardrobe"). Her hair was frizzed into a kind of orange Brillo; her makeup, theatrical and unbecoming in equal measure, was of chalk-white powder interrupted by a thin, hard gash of lipstick and two welts of rouge that suggest tribal markings.

Many critics have cheered the emergence of MacLaine as a grande dame character actress who almost gleefully effaces her previous image as a romantic heroine. A few critics have been less charitable about the performance, seen as a self-conscious star turn.

But "Madame Sousatzka," made as an ensemble labor of love for about $5 million, can hardly fail. ("I stayed with a friend to save money, and I only had a car until 6. The one luxury was the food, which was wonderful," MacLaine said at a recent interview here.)

"I can now draw on the meatiest roles I can find. I can go in both directions and not just play leading ladies. It's happening 10 years ahead of when it should happen, but I wanted it to happen."

MacLaine's metaphysical writings and the ancillary events like the television miniseries have been so successful that she says that she has no need to act at all any more. Her newest book, "Going Within," is finished and has already been announced for spring publication. She can pick parts as she will, which is, she says, "when I read a script and my scalp tingles. Then I know it's good."

There is a link between "Sousatzka" and the theme of the new book. "Metaphysical investigations," MacLaine says, "aren't ends in themselves but means to ends. I had to get through the feeling that spiritual technology was everything in itself to realizing that it was a tool for everyday living. It could apply to whatever I do — dance, write, act, or just get through a Hollywood meeting."

"In a way, it's remarkably like acting. When you commit to a character, you're making a leap of faith, believing she's real. You have to learn how to commit to leaps of faith in other things." Picking "Sousatzka" was a leap of faith.

She had not worked at her craft for more than four years, MacLaine said. "With another craft, you'd be rusty, but acting is so esoteric, so ephemeral; it has more to do with human observation. You can do it for the rest of your life."

The question, she says she has come to realize, is what kind of roles she will do. "I want to step aside from the usual concerns: Will I be loved by the audience; will the picture do business; what kind of salary can I get? It's more nourishing to the craft to commit to each of the characters, let them be themselves. You put your own ego frustrations aside. You don't act just to pay bills; I don't have to. You don't do parts for survival; you think from the point of view of the craft and your talent."

The script by Ruth Prawer Jhabvala and director John Schlesinger made her scalp tingle. MacLaine had known several teachers like Sousatzka. One taught sixth grade; the others gave ballet instead of piano, but the dictatorial principles were the same.

"I remember being thrown across a ballet class by my ear because I wasn't getting something right. I had a teacher who was very like Sousatzka. She was 4-foot-4 and drank beer and carried a stick and yelled constantly."

Ballet Company On Tour

PARIS (AP) — Jack Nicholson, director Roman Polanski and Rudolf Nureyev were in the first-night audience for Mikhail Baryshnikov's American Ballet Theater and the European premiere of "Gaiete Parisienne."

Mayor Jacques Chirac praised the New York ballet company, which is on its first European tour in more than a decade, at a party Wednesday at City Hall.

The troupe romped through its opening night Tuesday, wowing the high-society audience with an effervescent can-can and costumes by Christian Lacroix, the toast of French fashion design.

As long-legged girls in polka dot tights and ruffles kicked high to the Jacques Offenbach's familiar can-can melody, the audience broke into spontaneous applause.

Averett Tops East Carolina In Soccer

DANVILLE, Va. — Averett College defeated East Carolina, 2-1, in a soccer match Wednesday.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 1-12 on the year, while Averett improves to 4-9.

The Pirates return to action on Saturday and Sunday, participating in the Winthrop College Tournament in Rock Hill, S.C.

Cox, Wellcome Take Volleyball Wins

WINTERVILLE — A.G. Cox Middle School defeated Bethel in a junior high school volleyball match Wednesday.

Cox won the opening game, 15-3, and recorded another 15-3 win in the second.

Becky Wilder led service for Cox, which ends the season with a 7-0 record and wins the league championship. Bethel winds up its year at 4-3.

CHICOD — Wellcome Middle School closed out the volleyball season with a win over Chicod Middle School Wednesday afternoon.

Chicod broke out to the early lead in the best-of-three match by taking a 15-5 victory in the first game. Wellcome, however, rallied to win the second game 15-7 and the third 15-9 to secure the win.

The loss closed out Chicod's season with a 3-3 record.

Wallace Looks To Gain On Elliott

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — By trimming 30 points from Bill Elliott's Winston Cup points lead, Rusty Wallace has turned the final three races of the 1988 season into a fender-to-fender finish.

Time trials start today for the AC-Delco 500 NASCAR race at North Carolina Motor Speedway, and Wallace will be trying to lay the groundwork to inch even closer to Elliott's points total.

Wallace had his back to the wall following the Sept. 11 race at Richmond, having retired from the race after a wreck with Geoff Bodine. At that point, Wallace trailed Elliott by 119 points. Now, he is only 89 points behind Elliott, who has never won a season points race.

"We're going to press him at Rockingham — and again at Phoenix and again at Atlanta," Wallace said in an interview after last weekend's victory at the Holly Farms 400 at North Wilkesboro.

"That's all we can do. Slap the press on him and hope he fumbles. If he doesn't, he wins the Winston Cup and I'll be among the first to congratulate him," Wallace said. "But if he does (fumble), our press is going to keep coming at him, hoping he'll commit a turnover that could bring us our first title."

In the midst of his mixed metaphors, Wallace compared his chasing Elliott to a basketball tournament.

"It's really like a single elimination tournament right now," he said. "You make a mistake, you're gone. We've got three races left and all we can try to do is win every one."

Dale Earnhardt is third in the points chase, 188 points behind Elliott. Qualifying for the AC-Delco 500, as well as the AC-Delco 200, begins at 2:30 p.m. today. The fastest 20 cars in each division will earn starting spots, with qualifying continuing on Friday for the remaining spots — 20 for the AC-Delco 500 and 16 for the 200 on Saturday.

Elliott is defending champion in the AC-Delco 500.

Swain QB Paces Players Of Week

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Sophomore Heath Shuler of Swain County fired a school record five touchdown passes last Friday, enabling him to be named 1-A Drug Emporium high school football player of the week.

Shuler accounted for 272 yards through the air and TD passes of 64, 36, 38, 28 and 37 yards as the Maroon Devils rolled past Andrews 62-26. Shuler accomplished all his statistics in the first half.

Roxboro Person quarterback Jed Galloway was named 4-A player of the week. Galloway threw two touchdown passes and had two interceptions in his team's victory over Hillsborough Orange.

Mark Sailors of Sun Valley accounted by 324 yards of total offense and four touchdowns against Northwest Cabarrus to be named 3-A player of the week.

Thomasville sophomore running back Rashean Feaster gained 198 yards and scored three times against West Davidson to pick up 2-A honors.

Piniella Reportedly Offered Mariners' Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Piniella has been offered the manager's job of the Seattle Mariners, according to published reports.

Piniella said he has been offered a three-year contract and will decide by the end of this week whether to accept, according to reports in Thursday's editions of the New York Times and the New York Daily News. He met Monday and Tuesday in Newport Beach Calif., with Seattle owner George Argyros, president Chuck Armstrong and general manager Woody Woodward.

"I was impressed," Piniella said. "They're dedicated to winning in Seattle and they're willing to spend some money to put the best product on the field."

Piniella, fired by the Yankees on Oct. 7, has a three-year, $1.2-million personal services contract with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner. The contract has an escape clause, but Piniella said he would need Steinbrenner's permission to leave the Yankees.

His salary in New York is nearly double the $225,000 a year Dick Williams received as the best-paid manager in Mariners history. He was fired June 6 and replaced Jimmy Snyder, formerly Seattle's first base coach. Snyder was fired after the season.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported today that the meeting in southern California followed a telephone conversation between Piniella and Woodward last week.

Woodward refused to confirm that the meeting had occurred, and Argyros refused to comment.

The Seattle report said the meeting occurred at Los Angeles International Airport, rather than the suburb to the south where Argyros has his office.

Grass Drills Follow Auburn Penalties

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn players are not letting any grass grow under their feet — or their stomachs as they rack up penalty yardage that cost them one game and could affect their chances to repeat as Southeastern conference champion.

Auburn coach Pat Dye does not let penalties go without punishment. The players refer to it as "grass drills."

That involves running in place and hitting the grass stomach-first for 2½ minutes for every five yards penalized. Illegal procedure gets a five-yard penalty and 2½ minutes of grass drills. Holding gets 10 yards and five minutes. Clipping gets 15 yards and 7½ minutes.

One penalty Saturday in Auburn's homecoming football game with Mississippi State will put the Tigers over the 500 yards they piled up in penalties during the entire 1987 season.

Oakland Bumbling Away Chances

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — First, the Athletics stopped hitting the ball. Now, they can't catch it.

Oakland infielders misplayed three balls in the twilight Wednesday night, bumbling away an opportunity to tie the World Series.

Instead, the A's came away trailing the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 in games and shaking their heads about an uncharacteristic defensive failure.

With a suddenly punchless offense now hitting .186 for the Series, two errors and a passed ball that cost two runs in a 4-3 loss couldn't have come at a worse time.

"I think we're thinking too much about what is going on right now," said Luis Polonia, a .289 hitter over two seasons who is batting .111 against the Dodgers.

"We just have to relax a little bit because we're playing too tight," he said. "We have to forget the things around us and just start playing the game the way we did all year."

The A's, greatly improved up the middle with the addition of Walt Weiss at shortstop and Glenn Hubbard at second base, were third in the American League this season with just 105 errors. They dazzled in the field against Boston en route to a four-game AL playoff sweep, and played errorless ball in the first three games of the Series.

It unraveled for three innings in Game 4, and that was all the Dodgers needed.

"It was just one of those games where we made some mistakes pitching, and defensive-wise," said Dave Stewart, who gave up four runs, two earned, in 6 1-3 innings. "We made some mistakes and they capitalized on them."

Two of the A's miscues came in the first inning when Los Angeles scored two runs on one hit.

With Steve Sax on third after a leadoff walk and Mickey Hatcher on first with a hit-and-run single, catcher Terry Steinbach let Stewart's pitch to Mike Davis get by him, scoring Sax.

"It's tough out there in twilight games when the sun is shining off the backdrop in centerfield and the batter's box is in the shadows," Steinbach said. "But I should have had it."

Then Hubbard muffed Davis' routine grounder. John Shelby drove in Hatcher with a groundout for a two-run lead the Dodgers never lost.

Hubbard, who committed just six errors in 463 chances during the regular season, didn't want to discuss his misplay.

Los Angeles got a second unearned run in the third when Franklin Stubbs doubled and Davis hit a slicing liner that skipped off the top of Weiss' glove and into left field.

"It was a misjudgment on my part," said the rookie, who made just one of his 15 errors after July 8. "He hit it harder than I thought. I hate making errors worse than anything in the game."

Manager Tony La Russa didn't feel the A's gave the game away because they weren't mental errors. "Physical errors are part of the game," La Russa said. "Just like Stew trying not to walk the leadoff hitter and both of them scoring."

What's more aggravating to the A's is a sustained hitting slump that has seen them score just nine runs on 24 hits in the four games.

The Series batting numbers tell the story: Jose Canseco 1 for 15, Carney Lansford 1 for 14, Walt Weiss 1 for 14, Mark McGwire 1 for 13, including a popout to first with the bases loaded in the seventh.

Oakland's troubles were symbolized by Canseco's at-bat with the tying run on in the ninth. Jay Howell hung a curveball on 0-and-1 and he fouled it back. Then on 3-and-2, Canseco fanned on a "nasty" breaking pitch.

"I couldn't believe it," Canseco said of his strikeout. "I'm just not hitting the ball hard and I don't know why."

Steinbach, who's 4-for-11 and trails only Henderson (4 hits for an overall 6-for-18) among A's hitters, said what his teammates wouldn't.

"We're chasing a lot of high pitches, we're popping the ball up, we're hitting it on the ground when we shouldn't be," he said. "We're not swinging at balls the way we should."

Oakland may only have one more chance to get it right.

Orel To Pitch, Hit Tonight

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — It's a good thing Orel Hershiser is pitching tonight because that means he can hit, too — if he's needed.

Hershiser did it all in Game 2 of the World Series and now, the Los Angeles Dodgers will look for him to win it all.

The Dodgers lead Oakland three games to one thanks to their unlikely 4-3 victory over the Athletics on Wednesday night.

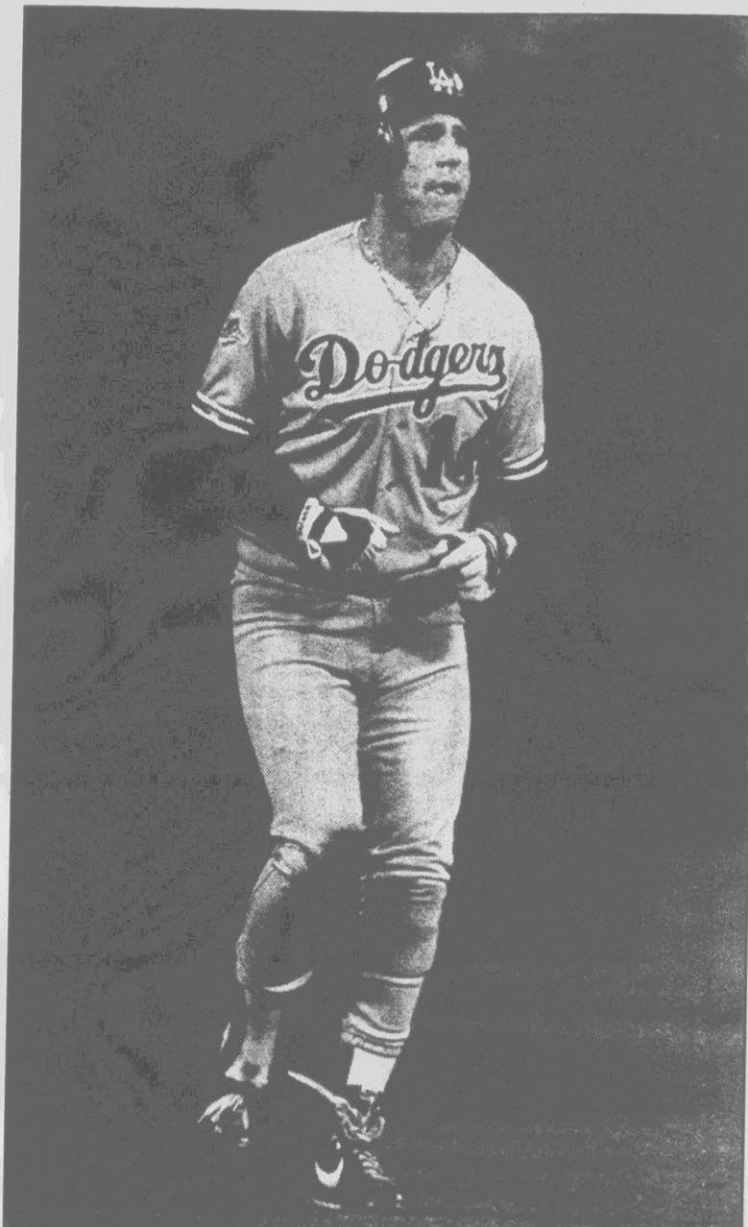

"We got our big boy on the mound, that's a big boost for us," first baseman Mickey Hatcher said.

Hershiser wouldn't speak to reporters after Wednesday night's game, saying only, "Nothing tonight, guys."

Hershiser got as many hits — three — as he allowed in the Dodgers' 6-0 victory over the Athletics on Sunday night.

If Hershiser doesn't win tonight, the way things are going, the Dodgers might run out of players before they are able to put away the Athletics.

But Hershiser has been unbelievable since late August. He finished the season with an all-time record 59 consecutive scoreless innings. And he was the most valuable player in the National League playoffs after shutting out the New York Mets 6-0 in Game 7.

great hitter like McGwire. He faced him again, and he got him out."

Howell was caught with pine tar on his glove and suspended for two games during the playoffs against the New York Mets. Mets pitcher David Cone likened him to a high school pitcher, and the A's Don Baylor later said Oakland traded Howell away because he couldn't get anybody out.

"I try to have good work habits and not carry around a lot of negative pressure," Howell said. "It's dead wood, and I don't care to do that ... When I hear stuff like that, I can tell you that just because something is said about me that's nasty, it doesn't mean I have to come back and say something."

Howell has not been the only Dodger taking heat. In fact, the whole team has been the butt of a lot of jokes lately, and it got them a little steamed up for Wednesday night's game.

Without Gibson and Marshall, Lasorda started nine players who had a total of 36 homers during the season — six fewer than Canseco alone. Two of the Dodgers — Marshall's replacement Mike Davis and shortstop Alfredo Griffin — hit less than 200.

"Before the game begins, we're in the clubhouse, and NBC's pregame show comes on," Lasorda said. "And Bob Costas says this is the worst team ever put on the field for the fall classic. My players begin to scream, 'Kill Costas,' or something like that. I tried to calm them down."

While the Dodgers are getting the razz, it's the healthy A's who continue to struggle offensively. In the four games, they have scored just eight runs on 24 hits.

"I'm depressed because we're not doing what we are capable of doing as a ballclub," Canseco said. "Even though their best players are out, I think they have their fundamentals down pat. I've seen them basically every time they try a hit-and-run, it happens. A ground ball is hit, the runner is running, and you can't turn a double play. Then the run scores."

"Those are the things they are doing ... and the things that are hurting us. That's what has been beating us."

And the A's can't afford any more mistakes.

"The Oakland A's came here to win this thing, and we've put ourselves in a deep hole," Manager Tony La Russa said. "That's not the way we planned to play it."

The Dodgers got two of their runs in the first inning with the help of a walk, an error and a passed ball.

Steve Sax led off with a walk, and one out later he went to third on a hit-and-run single by Mickey Hatcher. A passed ball by A's catcher Terry Steinbach allowed Sax to score while Hatcher went to second.

Hatcher went to third when A's second baseman Glenn Hubbard booted Davis' grounder for an error, and he scored on John Shelby's grounder.

"We went out there tonight with the idea of playing 'little' baseball," Hatcher said. "We didn't expect to beat them with home runs."

The A's came back with one in the first off Belcher. Luis Polonia led off with a single, went to second on a passed ball by Scioscia, took third on a grounder to the right side by Dave Henderson, and scored on Canseco's groundout.

The Dodgers made it 3-1 in the third. Franklin Stubbs doubled with one out. With two away, Davis hit a soft liner that hit off the side of the glove of A's shortstop Walt Weiss, and Stubbs scored from second when the ball dribbled into left field.

"Physical errors are part of the game," La Russa said. "It's just like Stewart wasn't trying to walk the leadoff hitter."

The A's made it 3-2 in the sixth on Carney Lansford's RBI single, breaking an 0-for-12 string, and the Dodgers chased Stewart as they scored their fourth run in the seventh.

With one out, Griffin walked, and he went to third on a bouncing single to center by Sax. That brought on Greg Cadaret, who gave up an RBI grounder to pinch-hitter Tracy Woodson on a hit-and-run that kept the Dodgers out of a double play.

The A's chased Belcher in the seventh. With one out, Weiss singled and went to second on a hit-and-run groundout. Henderson, who had four hits, doubled, scoring Weiss and bringing on Howell. Howell walked Canseco, and when Parker reached on an error by Griffin at shortstop to load the bases, McGwire came up.

"It wasn't the position I wanted to be in, of course, but I thought I made a good pitch," Howell said. "It was a fastball away and it had something on it. Fortunately, he popped up."

Scioscia said he wouldn't know until today whether he could play, and he won't play "unless I'm 80 or 90 percent."

Dodgers vice president Fred Claire said Scioscia would be re-examined today and, if he can't play for the rest of the Series, the Dodgers would appeal for another catcher to be added to the roster.

Furniture Market Opens Today In High Point

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH POINT — About 600 families in the High Point area have abandoned their homes for the next nine days.

Some will sleep in campers. Others will move in with friends or relatives. They'll brave heavy traffic, and they probably won't eat out.

Doesn't sound like a great way to spend the rest of October, but these people do it by choice.

They stand to earn up to $1,200 for renting their homes to people at tending the fall Southern Furniture Market, which begins today in High Point.

The fall market may inconvenience some High Point residents, but the payoff is big.

The 50,000 people who attend the fall Southern Furniture Market will spend more than $50 million on food, lodging, entertainment, transportation and other purchases, according to the Furniture Factories Marketing Association of the South.

The furniture industry provides jobs for 28,700 people in the seven-county Metropolitan Statistical Area around Greensboro, according to Employment Security Commission preliminary figures for September, and 91,700 people throughout the state.

In High Point, the self-proclaimed furniture capital of the world, furniture is historically the backbone of the economy.

About 1,600 manufacturers will fill six million square-feet of showroom space at the market this year.

More than 32,000 buyers have requested passes to the market so far, said Bill DiPaolo, vice president of the International Home Furnishings Center.

"We've never had so many requests," DiPaolo said. "We're very pleased, and our exhibitors are very optimistic about a good market."

Rose Ridge, director of the High Point Chamber of Commerce Housing Bureau, said the bureau has received about 2,000 reservations for homes, apartments and rooms, up almost 500 from last October.

Most people stay in homes in High Point, but she places a few in Greensboro and Winston-Salem.

In the weeks before the market, Ms. Ridge and three other workers answer several hundred calls a day from people hoping to find a place to stay or someone to stay in their house.

But out-of-towners also use the bureau as a general reference.

"They ask what the weather is like, what kind of clothes to bring, when the leaves change, if there's day care, if there are kennels," Ridge said.

Dick and Barbara Becker moved Wednesday into a camper parked on a friend's lawn. It's the second time they've rented out their home since their marriage a year ago.

— buyers from Virginia — they did in the spring.

"It's not like really roughing it," said Dick Becker, who works in Jamestown. "It's a chance to make a decent amount of money in 10 days."

It certainly can be a decent amount.

Ridge arranges homes at $300 per bed for the duration of the market. A home sleeping four earns $1200. Single rooms go for $30 a night, and doubles for $45.

Prisons Exceed Population Cap

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's prison population has exceeded its legislatively-mandated cap for the fourth time this year, officials say.

"We have more cap days around here than the Durham Bulls," Correction Department spokesman David Guth said.

The emergency was triggered Wednesday when the population of the state's 87 prisons exceeded the state-mandated ceiling of 17,460 inmates for the 15th straight day.

The last emergency ended less than a month ago.

"Since we've been over the cap for 15 days, it only took us two weeks from the 17,280 prisoners to more than 17,460," Guth said. "The periods between cap emergencies seem to be shrinking."

The state Parole Commission now has 60 days to reduce the prison population to 17,280 inmates. The commission can consider for parole any felons within nine months of their release date and all misdemeanor inmates, except those serving sentences for assault and related crimes.

"Every time we dip into this pool of inmates, the pool becomes tougher and tougher to fill," Guth said.

"The good news is that although the rate of admissions are up, they're not as high as they were this summer," Guth said. "We were up 13 percent this summer over the last year, but were up only 7 percent in September."

"Also, we really had a tough time last time (the emergency that ended in September) because we had gotten up near 18,000 prisoners," he said. "We're not near as high this time."

"But the bad news is that this is the time of year when we have the highest rate of admissions," he said. "And if it goes the full two months, it could come down to gubernatorial Christmas commutations (to get under the cap)."

To help relieve the crowding, the prison system will stop accepting short-term misdemeanor inmates from county jails.

The emergency legislation was triggered March 3, June 23 and Aug. 10 this year. In 1987, the emergency conditions were triggered only once.

Name Change Is Facing State's Yam Commission

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON — The North Carolina Yam Commission is considering changing its name after learning the state produces no yams.

North Carolina is the nation's top producer of sweet potatoes, but the yam is grown only in tropical climates, primarily in Africa, said Billy Yeargin, executive director of the commission.

"That bothers us a great deal," said Yeargin, who is worried about consumer confusion.

Sweet potatoes are smaller than yams, which grow up to 100 pounds. When cooked, the texture and taste of sweet potatoes and yams are similar but yams are off-white while sweet potatoes are orange.

Yeargin predicted a growing demand for sweet potatoes as consumers become more health-conscious and turn to more nutritious foods. "I think the sweet potato has a good future," he said.

Magazine Says Myrtle Beach Base Will Close

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — U.S. Rep. Robin Tallon says it's logical that the Myrtle Beach Air Force Base would be on a list of military bases that may be closed for financial reasons and thinks local leaders need to be prepared for the possibility.

According to the Oct. 24 edition of U.S. News and World Report, the Myrtle Beach Air Force Base, Horry County's largest employer, is among several military bases likely to be closed within a six-year period beginning in 1990.

A federal commission is now studying which bases across the nation should be closed for financial reasons, but defense officials denied Wednesday that a list of targeted bases exists.

U.S. Rep. Robin Tallon, D-S.C., said he has heard the speculation about closing the tactical air base in south Myrtle Beach.

"I certainly want to see Myrtle Beach Air Force Base remain there as a viable Air Force base, but I think a responsibility I have is to look at the alternative in the event it were to be closed," Tallon said Wednesday.

The Myrtle Beach Air Force Base employs 3,500 military workers and 650 civilians.

The base brings in about $100 million to the Grand Strand each year, said Ashby Ward, Executive Vice President of the Myrtle Beach Area Chamber of Commerce.

In Washington, spokesmen for the Department of Defense and for the Commission on Base Realignment and Closure both said there is no such list and would not say if the Myrtle Beach base is being considered by the commission to be closed.

"We have a blank piece of paper in front of us now," Commission spokesman Jim Abbee said. "There is no list."

Glenn Flood, spokesman for the Department of Defense, agreed. "There is no official list ... There are 871 major bases in the United States. They'll look at all those bases."

U.S. News and World Report Associate Editor Bob Kaylor, who wrote the article, said Wednesday he talked to several high-ranking military and political sources to compile the list.

Officials at the Myrtle Beach Air Force Base refused to comment on the issue.

The Myrtle Beach Air Force Base fits into several of the nine categories for closing bases Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci has recommended the defense commission consider, including the part the base plays in the nation's defense.

The A-10 jet, a single-seat aircraft especially designed for close air support missions and the primary aircraft at the Myrtle Beach base, are being phased out. All A-10s are supposed to be out of service by the early 1990s.

"When you've got an aircraft being phased out and you don't meet a lot of other criteria too, it would seem logical to me" for the Myrtle Beach base to be targeted for closing, Tallon said.

The first closings are set to begin by Jan. 1, 1990. Twenty to 30 bases will be phased out over a six-year period.

If the Myrtle Beach base is closed, the property could be used to expand a commercial airport serving the Grand Strand, local leaders said.

Sen. J.M. "Bud" Long, D-Horry, said he would hate to see the base close. But if it does, he said, it could mean that the jetport could expand onto the 3,700-acre property instead of moving to another part of the county. Long and other officials have said such a move would be necessary to expand the jetport for a rapidly growing population.

Report Claims It's Too Easy To Get A Security Clearance

By Jim Drinkard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Obtaining a government security clearance is almost as easy as getting a credit card, a critical report on federal efforts to curb spying suggests.

The report by the House Intelligence Committee concludes that officials don't do enough to scrutinize employees before they are granted bottom-level security clearances and don't keep a close enough eye on those who are privy to the nation's most sensitive secrets.

While some progress in protecting against spying has been made since a harsher report was issued two years ago, bureaucratic foot-dragging has kept counterintelligence gains below what they should be, the panel said Wednesday.

Evidence of the lack of progress is the continuing discovery of new spy cases in which disgruntled employees or former government officials have eluded detection for months or years, according to the report.

One example of the shortcomings is that many security clearances continue to be granted without checking applicants' financial or employment backgrounds, despite repeated past recommendations that those criteria be included. "The committee finds this failure to act inexcusable," the report said.

Asked whether that meant getting a security clearance is easier than opening a charge account, oversight subcommittee chairman Anthony Beilenson, D-Calif., said, "That's probably true."

The government's basic security review, known as the National Agency Check, involves reviewing FBI fingerprint files and dossiers at other federal agencies. It does not include credit and employment checks, and costs just $10 to complete.

"We ... spend thousands for physical security measures in some programs (to protect) secret material, but for the people part of it, we are only willing to spend $10," Thomas J. O'Brien, then-director of the Defense Investigative Service, said in testimony before the panel last spring. "All of our losses have come from people."

The panel's report found a pattern of bureaucratic sluggishness throughout the intelligence community in addressing security problems and it criticized a preoccupation with hardware and gadgetry that ignores fundamental personnel problems.

It also found that little has been done to control the proliferation of classified information and concluded that top CIA personnel were the sources of many revelations in Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward's book "Veil" about covert operations by the CIA.

The Intelligence panel voted unanimously to release the report, overriding objections from the Central Intelligence Agency. The CIA had no comment on the document.

The Pentagon came in for particular criticism in the committee's review, which noted that at least 54 Defense Department personnel have been identified and punished over the past five years for espionage or security breaches. Despite the problems, the department does not appear to be looking vigorously for new solutions, the report said.

While the Pentagon claims to have reduced its security-cleared personnel from 4.2 million to 2.8 million over the past three years, the figures cannot be verified, the panel said.

And with that many cleared personnel in addition to 1.1 million clearances for defense contractors, the secretary of defense has only six professional staff members overseeing department security programs. "This is a penny-wise and pound-foolish approach, considering these personnel have access to the nation's most sensitive data," the report found.

As an example of failures in security screening of personnel, the report cites the case of Glen Michael Souther, a former Navy intelligence specialist.

While in the Navy years ago in Norfolk, Va., Souther's wife voiced suspicions to a Naval officer that her husband might be involved in espionage. He left the Navy, went to Old Dominion University for Russian studies, then rejoined the Navy as a reservist and was granted a top security clearance.

A background investigation did not catch the warning signs, and Souther defected this year to the Soviet Union, taking with him classified technical data on weapons systems.

The panel also sought answers from the CIA about the sources of disclosures in Woodward's book, published last year. The book contains numerous references to intelligence details that were not widely known, and one agency official testified: "I don't think there is a question. ... I think it came from within the agency."

Group Rates Cedar Rapids Best Place To Live; Gary Last On List

By Randolph E. Schmid
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The latest entry in the popular game of rating places concludes that Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is the nation's best spot to live. Gary, Ind., the report says, finished last.

Zero Population Growth, a Washington interest group, issued its ratings of about 190 cities on Wednesday, comparing them according to a variety of population and environmental factors in what it called an "urban stress test."

Just a week earlier an unrelated study, also seeking to rate urban stress, was published by Psychology Today magazine. Done by Robert Levine of California State University in Fresno, that report pronounced Reno, Nev., the most stressful spot in the nation and said State College, Pa., has the least stress.

Other recent rankings have included:

—Money magazine, which said Danbury, Conn., was best and placed Atlantic City, N.J., last.

—Etiquette expert Marjabelle Young Stewart, who said Charleston, S.C., is the best mannered community. She did not name a most boorish spot.

—Several books and almanacs rating cities, colleges and retirement communities, among other things.

The newly issued ratings took a year to compile, according to Zero Population Growth, which looked at population and environmental factors, in contrast to Levine, who studied the human response to stress.

Cedar Rapids got a stress rating of 1.6 from ZPG, edging out Madison, Wis., which had a 1.7 rating, and Ann Arbor, Mich., and Lincoln, Neb., which each rated 1.8.

Not surprisingly, Todd Bergen of the Cedar Rapids Chamber of Commerce agreed that his city is "a great place to live."

"Things move here at a perfect pace, life isn't too fast, it isn't too slow. We enjoy what we do and we enjoy living here," said Bergen in a telephone interview.

Gary, on the other hand, was rated 4.2. Not much better, with ratings of 4.1, were Baltimore, Chicago, Houston, Jersey City and Pomona, Calif.

Maxine Young, executive director of the Gary chamber of commerce, disputed that conclusion, contending that many outsiders have heard myths about her city.

"We're an industrial town, a hard working town. ... We're not offering sunshine and blue skies; we're offering a good solid community in which to live, work and play," she said, stressing the city's school system and parks.

Gary has suffered economically in recent years, she said, "but we are making a comeback."

The Zero Population Growth study ranks communities according to population change and density, support for education, crime rates, economics, air quality, hazardous wastes, water and sewage. It gives from 1 to 5 points — fewer is better — and then averages them for the overall score.

Levine's report used four factors — rates of alcoholism, crime, suicide and divorce.

His top spot, State College, Pa., wasn't included in the ZPG study, which concentrated on cities of 100,000 people or more — or the largest city in states with no city that large. State College had 34,330 in 1986, the latest Census Bureau estimate. Reno, last in Levine's list, managed a relatively good 2.8 rating from ZPG.

His report ranked Cedar Rapids 55th out of 286 and placed the region including Gary, Hammond and East Chicago in 118th place.

Zero Population Growth said the best large city — that is, with a half-million people or more — was Columbus, Ohio, with a 2.6 rating.

And it gave Virginia Beach, Va., a 2.4 to make it best among the cities of 250,000 to 500,000 residents.

Madison topped the 150,000 to 250,000 category and Cedar Rapids was best small city on the list.

Zero Population Growth is a non-profit membership group which describes itself as working to achieve a sustainable balance of population, environment and resources. It places considerable emphasis on slowing population growth and, in its rankings, the larger the community was, the poorer its rankings tended to be.

Overpopulation is not just a Third World problem, said Susan Weber, executive director of the group. "It affects typical American communities ... accelerating crime rates, diminishing air and water quality, shrinking open space," she commented.

While the ZPG study didn't provide rankings for all of the cities it rated, here are their 10 best and worst:

The top 10 plus ties: Cedar Rapids, 1.6; Madison, Wis., 1.7; Ann Arbor, Mich., 1.8; Lincoln, Neb., 1.8; Fargo, N.D., 1.9; Livonia, Mich., 1.9; Concord, Calif., 2.0; Alexandria, Va., 2.1; Eugene, Ore., 2.1; Roanoke, Va., 2.1; Worcester, Mass., 2.1.

The bottom 10 plus ties: Gary, 4.2; Baltimore, 4.1; Chicago, 4.1; Houston, 4.1; Jersey City, 4.1; Pomona, Calif., 4.1; El Paso, Texas, 4.0; Cleveland, 3.9; Fort Worth, Texas, 3.9; Inglewood, Calif., 3.9; Los Angeles, 3.9; St. Louis, 3.9.

Settlement In Ford Trust Squabble Said Approved

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — More than a year after auto tycoon Henry Ford II's death, his family apparently has settled its squabble over the $350 million trust he left behind.

Following weeks of discussion among more than a dozen lawyers, the Ford family hopes to move quickly from the public eye, said Ford's son, Edsel Ford II.

"My father was a very personal man, as is the Ford family, and my father would have found these proceedings very unpleasant," he said.

"I'm just happy it's over."

The pact gives Ford's widow and third wife, Kathleen DuRoss Ford, at least $10 million this year and a minimum of $1.5 million in subsequent years. She also receives the couple's homes in Palm Beach, Grosse Pointe, Mich., and London, and rights to purchase three other Ford residences.

The two-page accord approved Wednesday by Palm Beach Circuit Judge Vaughn Rudnick appeared satisfactory to Mrs. Ford's foes in the dispute, her stepson Edsel and her late husband's financial adviser, William H. Donaldson.

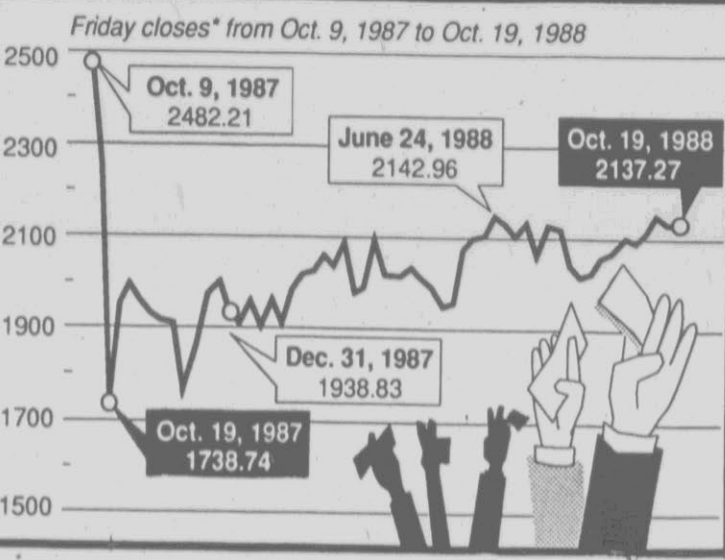

Donaldson, a New York investment banker, will receive $1 million for his first year of service and $550,000 for the next two years. He will resign after three years, according to the settlement.

As the dispute was settled, Mrs. Ford was in England and Edsel Ford was in Detroit.

"This means it's all put to bed," said Robert Montgomery, Mrs. Ford's attorney. "I think all parties are satisfied."

Markie Post Sheds Image For Shady Lady TV Roles

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Markie Post is temporarily abandoning her white bread, vanilla pudding image from NBC's "Night Court" to play shady ladies in two television movies.

She's a casino singer in "Glitz," an NBC movie based on Elmore Leonard's detective thriller that will be broadcast Friday, and a hooker in the CBS comedy "Tricks of the Trade."

"They're shady ladies," said Post, who plays defense attorney Christine Sullivan on "Night Court." "You can only get shadier with Christine. There's nowhere else to go, she's so pure."

In "Glitz," Jimmy Smits of "L.A. Law" stars as Vincent Mora, a Miami detective who tracks the killer of a call girl through the gambling casinos of Atlantic City and Puerto Rico. Post is the murdered woman's former roommate and becomes romantically involved with the detective.

"I read the book when it came out and knew I wanted to play the role of Linda Moon," said Post. "It's like a 1980s Raymond Chandler gumshoe story. Well, it's Elmore Leonard. Linda is independent. I call her a broad."

"She knows the ways of the casinos. She's got a lot of heart and guts. I first described her as definitely not a California girl. She doesn't drink Perrier, eat sushi or jog. She falls in love with Jimmy Smits, who's recovering from a bullet wound in Puerto Rico. He's not sure he wants to go back. He's wasting away in Margaritaville."

Linda takes a singing job in a casino in Atlantic City, where Mora follows in his search for the killer. "I like to think of it as bringing Jimmy back to life," Post said. "He's not looking for love. I don't want to get involved, but I spill my guts to him and fall in love. Then he falls in love."

Post said she was pleased she was offered the role without having to read for it. "They did want to see some film," she said, "so I sent them something from 'Night Court' and 'The Gangster Chronicles.' I was a prostitute in that. I played Lucky Luciano's old girlfriend."

"I was also offered 'Tricks of the Trade.' I'm a hooker and Cindy Williams is a Brentwood housewife. We get together to solve a crime. John Ritter's also in it. It's an out-and-out comedy. What's different from 'Night Court,' though, is that I'm not the straight man. I'd one of the people Dan Fielding (the lecherous prosecutor of "Night Court," played by John Larroquette) would go for."

"Her name's Marla Waleski and she wears a leather bustier, leopard-spotted Spandex pants and red boots. It was really neat to work with another woman. We could talk girl talk between takes."

Post also is back at work on

"Night Court," which has been moved to Wednesday. Harry Anderson also stars as Judge Harry Stone.

"Christine's in love with Harry, but they can never get together," she said. "Whenever he gets another girlfriend I'm always personally jealous. I say let me be a spoilsport. Or let us both get knocked on the head and get together for at least one episode."

"I don't think Christine's changed. I'm more inclined to slap her these days. She's so positive. She hasn't changed, but the public's seen more sides of her. Last year, Harry saw a little scar over my eye. I'd never noticed it before. I spent the whole show holding a hand over my eye. She's so vain."

She admits that the show's writers are shaping Christine close to her own personality. "I do love Prince Charles and Lady Diana," she said. "They've picked up on that. Christine had a party celebrating their wedding anniversary."

Before "Night Court" she starred in "The Fall Guy" as the person who gave Lee Majors his jobs. She compares the role to the tape recorder on "Mission: Impossible."

She grew up in Palo Alto, where her father was a nuclear physicist and her mother a poet. She's married to actor Michael Ross and they have a 16-month-old daughter, Kate.

'Meet The Raisins'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Those raisins dancing to "I Heard It On the Grapevine" in award-winning animated commercials now have their own program.

CBS will broadcast "Meet the Raisins: The story of the California Raisins" on Nov. 4. Network publicists describe it as the story of three raisins from the time "they were tender young grapes performing near their Modesto, Calif., vines, through musical eras and onto the road to stardom with the help of their manager, Rudy Bagaman, a rutabaga."

Falcon Crest Captures Big Egyptian Following

By Dalia Balich
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAIRO, Egypt — Life comes to a near standstill Monday nights as millions of Egyptians sit riveted before their television sets to watch Angela Channing's melodramatic malevolence on "Falcon Crest."

However, Jane Wyman's character and the others in the series have few counterparts in Egyptian society. Even the setting, a winery in a Napa Valley-like area of California, might have alienated many Egyptian Moslems taught by Islam's holy book, the Koran, to abstain from alcohol.

Yet the show is a fabulous hit.

Egypt has nothing similar to the Nielson ratings to gauge exactly how popular it is, but Sohair el-Etriby, head of Egyptian Television's second channel, which airs the series, has no doubts.

"Egyptians have become addicted to 'Falcon Crest,'" she said. "They've become very attached to it."

Whether rich and educated or poor peasants reading Arabic subtitles on the screen, "Falcon Crest" fanatics consider the characters a part of their extended families. Their fortunes and disasters are eagerly followed and discussed everywhere.

The American series also has proved lucrative for state-owned Egyptian Television. Channel Two buys an episode for around $1,000, and on a recent Monday sales of commercials brought in almost 20 times that.

Angela Channing, the scheming matriarch of the Falcon Crest brood; ruthless but charming Richard Channing; and dedicated and romantic, if somewhat naive, Maggie are among the main characters in the colorful series that depicts love, hate and events both foul and fair.

Early episodes of "Falcon Crest" began appearing on Egyptian screens several years ago. Because of finances, Egyptian Television bought only a few 26-episode seasons at a time, showing them daily and then stopping for months until money was found for succeeding episodes.

Despite the gaps in transmission, "Falcon Crest" fans remained true, and for two consecutive months last summer, the fifth and sixth seasons were aired every night from 9:15 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The show was so popular that all over Cairo appointments were made before or after "Falcon Crest." TV parties with friends were common, and Cairo's congested streets emptied as each episode was shown.

At the end of August, el-Etriby changed the schedule, showing two episodes every Monday night. She said her office immediately was swamped with hundreds of calls and letters demanding that the series be shown daily again.

"I had only a few episodes from the seventh part, and the eighth is now running in the United States," she said in an interview. "Either I could have stopped it for several months and then shown the seventh part in its entirety, or I could have shown it once a week like television in America and Europe do all the time."

"Falcon Crest" isn't the first American TV series to make a big splash with Egyptian viewers. In the 1960s and '70s, "Peyton Place" and

"Rich Man, Poor Man" were favorites.

In 1982, Egyptian Television began showing "Dallas," which quickly became almost as popular as "Falcon Crest" would become later. "Dallas" was stopped, however, after a member of parliament complained that it was corrupting the morals of Egyptian youth.

The morality of "Falcon Crest" would not seem to be much different, with Angela's scheming against her own son, and the characters' frequent exchanges of bed partners.

But the serial has escaped unscathed so far, except for Egyptian Television's routine censorship which unskillfully scissors about five minutes of what the censors consider passionate lovemaking from each 50-minute episode.

So "Falcon Crest," giving Egyptians a glimpse of a completely different and glittering world, easily captures its audience.

Viewers have different reasons for appreciating the series.

"I like watching it because the men and women are so beautiful, wearing lovely clothes and living in beautiful houses," said Fawziya Ahmed, a peasant from a small village north of Cairo in the Nile Delta.

Christiane Latif, who helps run a family-owned marble factory, said: "The characters are interesting and become like your family, and the plot makes you want to know what will happen next. I try not to miss any of the shows."

Such sentiments aren't universal, however.

One government official, who declined to be identified, said he finds nothing special about Falcon Crest.

Authorities Suspicious In Probing India Crashes

By Jagdish Rattanani
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AHMADABAD, India — Investigators have not ruled out sabotage in the crash of two domestic airliners that claimed the lives of 165 people, a government official said today.

"Two crashes on the same day in two hours is too much of a coincidence," said the official, who is closely associated with the investigation into Wednesday's disasters.

Meanwhile, an Indian Airlines Airbus carrying 209 people made an emergency landing shortly after takeoff today from the southern city of Madras, airline officials in New Delhi said. The plane, bound for Singapore, apparently developed technical problems, they said, but did not elaborate.

On Wednesday, a Boeing 737 operated by Indian Airlines crashed while trying to land in heavy fog at Ahmadabad airport in central India. The plane clipped a tree, struck a power line and exploded on its final approach.

All but five of the 135 people on board died.

Less than two hours after the disaster, a 30-year-old Fokker Friendship propeller plane leased by Indian Airlines to another domestic carrier, Vayudoot, slammed into a hill in eastern India during a severe rainstorm.

J.C. Barua, a senior official of Vayudoot in Guwahati, confirmed today that all 31 passengers and four crew members died. All were Indians.

The United News of India news agency quoted one villager as saying the plane caught fire and exploded before crashing.

The causes of the crashes were not immediately known. Both planes lost radio contact shortly before crashing, and airline officials said they suspected technical malfunctions.

The government owns Indian Airlines, Vayudoot and Air-India, which operates only on international routes.

Federal Aviation Minister Shiv Raj Patial has ordered investigations into the crashes.

"These two things have happened on the same day. There, I am keeping my fingers crossed whether it is a mere coincidence or some design," he was quoted as saying in the The Hindustan Times.

Indian Airlines Flight 131 was flying from Bombay to Ahmadabad with 129 passengers and six crew members when it went down.

Indian Airlines has come under fire for allegedly failing to maintain safety procedures and to adequately supervise its pilots. Wednesday's crash was the carrier's 16th major accident in its 26-year history.

One airline official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the pilot may have confused floodlights at a construction site for the runway.

A recording between the pilot and the Ahmadabad control tower gave no indication of trouble, authorities said.

Survivor Paag Vasavda, 28, said the pilot told passengers he was having trouble landing in the fog. Vasavda said he heard two explosions.

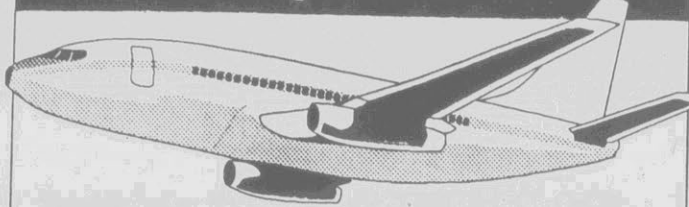

"Afterward, the plane broke apart," he said.

The passenger manifest said victims included two Japanese, three Germans and an industrialist from Bahrain.

The Fokker Friendship crashed into a 1,400-foot hill near Guwahati airport, about 960 miles east of New Delhi. It was nearing the end of a flight from Silchar.

The plane reported zero visibility, then lost contact with the Guwahati control tower two minutes before the crash, said C. Das, civil administrator for Guwahati district.

Problem-Plagued 737

The Boeing 737 has been a success as the world's most popular commercial aircraft, but has had its share of tragedy since its introduction in 1968.

Oct. 19, 1988: An Indian Airlines 737 crashed on final approach to Ahmadabad Airport about 300 miles southwest of New Delhi, India, killing 130 of 135 people aboard.

Oct. 5, 1988: A foot-long crack was discovered on a Continental Airlines 737 as it was stripped for repainting.

Sept. 16, 1988: A 737 crashed and burst into flames after running into a flock of birds in northwest Ethiopia, killing 31 people.

June 19, 1988: An Indian Airlines 737 carrying 123 passengers crash-landed on its belly after its landing gear failed. An engine caught fire as it slid along the runway, but no one was injured.

April 28, 1988: Part of the fuselage of an Aloha Airlines 737 peeled off at 24,000 feet over Hawaii. A flight attendant was swept to her death and 61 passengers were hurt.

Aug. 31, 1987: A Thai Airways 737 fell into the sea off the southern island of Phuket, killing all 83 people aboard.

Jan. 13, 1982: An Air Florida 737 crashed into a bridge after taking off from National Airport in Washington, D.C., killing 78 people.

Aug. 21, 1981: A Far Eastern Air Transport 737 exploded at 22,000 feet over Taiwan, killing all 110 people aboard.

Colo. Copter Crash Kills 2 News Team Members

LOUVIERS, Colo. (AP) — Two members of a television news team returning from the site of a fatal plane crash were killed when their helicopter clipped a power line in a remote hilly area near here and slammed to the ground.

Leo Galanis, a reporter-pilot for KUSA-TV in Denver, and Brian Hostetler, a photographer, died in the accident in west-central Colorado on Wednesday, said Bob Sullivan, the station's assistant news director.

The crash was the sixth serious accident and the second with fatalities since the city's television stations began using the aircraft 10 years ago.

The bodies were not retrieved Wednesday because "it's just too rugged" to move through the terrain in darkness, said Douglas County Sheriff Steve Zotos. Federal investigators were to join the sheriff's deputies today at the scene near here, about 25 miles southwest of metropolitan Denver, Zotos said.

Galanis, 43, and Hostetler, 28, had been filming at the site where a Piper Cherokee 140 crashed Tuesday, killing three children and critically burning their parents.

Sullivan said the two had talked to station personnel several times by telephone before they started back to Denver.

"I believe Leo said there were some high winds, but he didn't seem to be real concerned about it," Sullivan said.

Their helicopter apparently hit a power line, crashed to the ground and shattered, officials said.

Patrick Parkhill, a helicopter pilot for Public Service Co. of Colorado who had been sent to the area to determine the cause of a power outage, discovered the crash.

"You couldn't really tell (it was a helicopter)," Parkhill said. "It was torn up pretty bad."

Parkhill said it was raining in the area before he discovered the wreckage.

In December 1982, pilot Karen Key and aviation mechanic Larry Zane were killed when the helicopter she was flying for what is now KCNC-TV, Denver's Channel 4, crashed south of Denver. They were en route to a southern Colorado plane crash when the copter went down in a snowstorm.

He Adds To Career

Meditation Is Daily Practice

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Umesh Gulati has taught business courses at East Carolina University for the past 21 years. This fall, he's added a new facet to his career — he's begun teaching courses in meditation for the public.

Through the University Continuing Education Department, he has already completed teaching courses at Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point, and Monday he will begin a four-part, one-hour-an-evening, non-credit course at ECU.

As a Hindu reared in India, Gulati was encouraged to meditate by his parents from childhood. But he said that, like most of us, he often digressed from what his parents and his religious faith encouraged. For many years, meditation was not a major part of his every day.

Today it is. He arises each morning, bathes, put on a particular pair of jeans and a shirt that he uses for meditation only. Then, for at least 20 minutes, he sits quietly in a designated seat in his house and seeks to concentrate only on his measured breathing and the end of his nose. He breathes in to the count of four, out to the count of eight, then holds for eight counts — over and over. He takes into the meditation some universal truth or profound statement that he wants to instill into his consciousness. An example, he said, would be "The Father and I are one."

Even after much practice, he said, his mind still wanders at times. When he realizes it, he brings it back, resumes his disciplined breathing and continues for the allotted time. Only after this time of quiet concentration has been completed does he have breakfast and go to his office at the university.

In the evening before dinner, he dons the same jeans and shirt and spends 20 minutes meditating once again. This is his daily practice.

He and his wife Usha each meditate alone twice a day and at times, they meditate together. He advocates couples sharing time for meditation, which is why the fee schedule for his course is planned to give couples a discount.

He and Mrs. Gulati also gets together at times with other followers of the Hindu Faith for meditation. He says this practice, whether alone or with others, has enhanced his relationship with God, with himself and with other people.

He emphasized that his course at the university will not be religiously oriented. People of any religious faith and people of no religious persuasion can participate and benefit, he says. Neither his faith nor any other will be promoted.

Once he conceived the idea for the course last spring, he spent much of his summer researching all the current literature on meditation. He became familiar with Harvard University professor Dr. Herbert Benson's "The Relaxation Response" which documents the physiological and psychological benefits of meditation.

Gulati is a professor of managerial economics and international business. He says he has become impressed with the literature on how effective meditation is in the workplace.

He is convinced that business and industry would do well to incorporate a time for meditation into their employees' work days or at least to offer courses for employees on the practice and benefits of meditation. He said it has been observed over and over that people who meditate recognize their oneness with other people and are less prone to steal from the boss with time or material wasted, are sick less, are less prone to stay out of work unnecessarily, are more cooperative with fellow employees, and more interested in achieving excellence in their work.

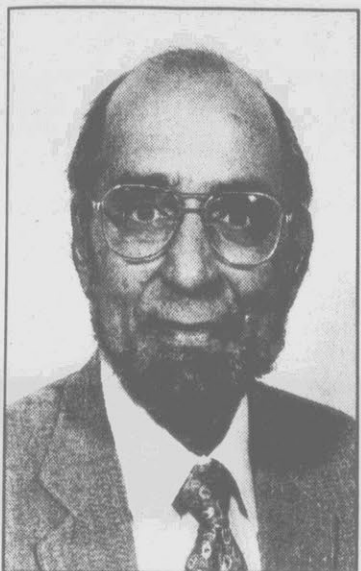

In April of next year, he is scheduled to present a paper before the International Academy of Management and Marketing in Pittsburgh. His topic will be meditation and its benefits in the workplace.

He believes that everyone can achieve greater levels of concentration at all times of the day if they meditate twice daily. He, therefore, thinks meditation is especially beneficial to students, increasing their organizational skills, and improving their study habits and their ability to retain information.

He declares he feels more energetic and more focused now that he's meditating twice daily and that he believes that meditation can be employed to help people acquire and maintain healthful habits like eating less and higher quality food, quitting smoking, drinking and using other drugs.

He is convinced that everyone can meditate and everyone can benefit from meditating and thereby share his or her benefits with the people with whom he or she comes in con-

Candlelight Vows Said

Sylvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding of Tammy Terelle Edwards and Norman Ray Pugh. R.T. McCarter performed the candlelight, double-ring ceremony.

Sharon Hardy, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Tonia Edwards, Tina Edwards and Tonette Edwards were maids of honor for their sister. Bridesmaids were Patricia Vail, Gwendolyn Maye, Phyllis Jones, Ann Pugh, Jenecia Edwards and Angela Gray. Tanya Arrington and Tykesha Barfield were flower girls.

George Pugh Sr., James Barrett and Dean Pugh were best men. Groomsmen included James Sutton, David Coley, Ben Pitt, Timothy Barrett, Joe Cox and Keith Phillips. Ushers were James Teel, Alfonza Teel, Dwain Williams and Tim Cherry. Travian Edwards, son of the bride, was ring bearer.

The MacDonald Sisters of Fayetteville, Kerry Smith of Chesapeake, Va., and Darnell Barrett presented music.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Earl Edwards and the bridegroom is the son of Lebertha Pugh, all of Greenville. The bride is granddaughter of Marie Hardy and Bertha Edwards.

The wedding was directed by Lucy C. Teel. Gina Pugh and Tracey Phillips registered guests. A reception followed the ceremony. Mary Jones and Shirley Barrett were hostesses.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will live in Greenville.

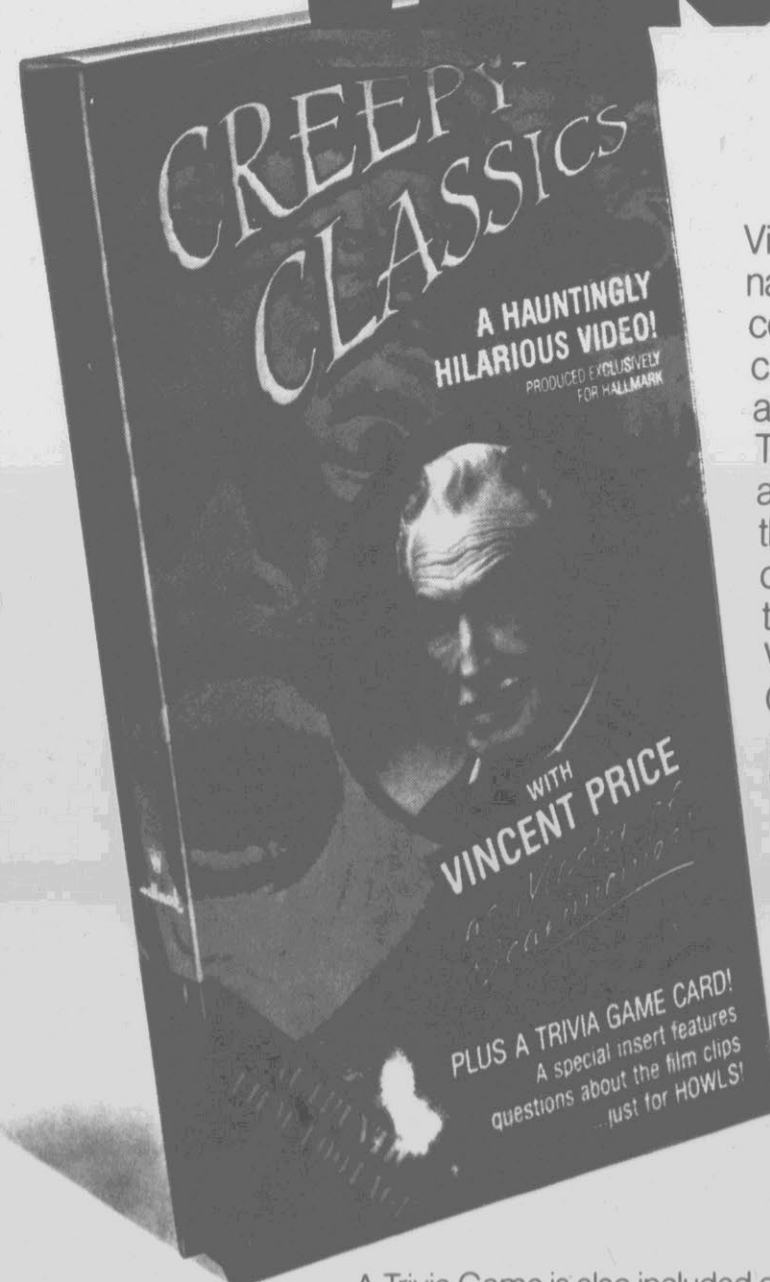

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the bride's parents at the church.

Givens Says She Won't Take Dime

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Robin Givens, accused by estranged husband Mike Tyson of being a gold-digger, says she won't take a dime from him in their celebrity divorce.

Givens, in statement read by her lawyer, announced Wednesday that she was "unequivocally and irrevocably" relinquishing her claim to money from her 22-year-old multimillionaire husband, the heavyweight boxing champion.

"I never wanted anything but what was best for Michael, to protect Michael and preserve my marriage," said the two-page statement from the 23-year-old television actress. "I never wanted anything for myself."

The development was the latest turn in tortuous public destruction of the eight-month-old Givens-Tyson marriage. Her lawyer, Raoul Felder, stressed repeatedly to skeptical reporters that Givens sought no settlement.

"It's set. Final. Yesterday's news. She's taking nothing," Felder said. At another point, he said: "Read my lips: She doesn't want anything."

Givens was in Los Angeles filming segments in her television series, ABC's "Head of the Class." Tyson was traveling home from Venezuela. His manager, Bill Cayton, had no comment, a secretary said.

The couple have dominated tabloid headlines since Sept. 30, when, amid reports of discord, they appeared on ABC's "20-20" show. There, Givens said Tyson was a manic-depressive and had an "extremely volatile temper."

A week later — after a reported Tyson tantrum in which she called police to their New Jersey mansion — she filed for divorce in Los Angeles, calling her marriage "a continuous horror story" in which Tyson hit her, threw things at her and threatened to kill her.

Tyson responded with his own divorce suit Oct. 14 in Trenton, N.J., claiming his wife had married him for money and fame, then abandoned him. He charged that she induced him to marry her by pretending to be pregnant.

In a newspaper interview last week, Tyson said his wife was "evil" and had played "a sting game" to get at his fortune, estimated at $40 million.

On Tyson's published comments, Givens said in her statement: "I don't believe this is Michael talking." In any case, she said, "I want there to be dignity in our lives." She made two pledges:

"1. Michael can have his divorce.
"2. I will not seek nor accept any money for myself."

"I never married Michael for money. Therefore this represents no loss for me other than the loss of losing my husband."

For her part, Givens said, "I have never said one bad word about Michael or done anything to hurt him personally." Still, "The stories became more and more outrageous, untrue, scurrilous and defamatory," she said. "We were not permitted the dignity of dealing with our private problems."

Felder, in response to questions, said Givens would not claim any property, as well as any money, for anyone else, as well as for herself. He noted that she could have received millions of dollars in a settlement from Tyson if she had wanted it.

In his years as a divorce lawyer, "I've never seen a woman give up money," Felder said. "Particularly this kind of money."

Felder said the divorce itself remained to be finalized. He said he believed it best could be handled as a "no-fault" divorce under California law, but that he had not yet spoken with Tyson's lawyers.

Former Gamecock Player Relates Horror Drug Tale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former University of South Carolina football player Tommy Chaikin first started writing in his personal journal about how steroids pushed him to the brink of suicide "as a catharsis."

Later, he decided to publicly share his chilling experiences to help other young athletes avoid the same experience.

"I don't want the public to look at me as a martyr," Chaikin, 24, said at a news conference Wednesday dealing with questions about a Sports Illustrated story detailing the saga of his two-year struggle with the effects of the muscle-building drugs.

"I'm just a normal human being ... who just got caught up with it and became obsessed with winning."

Chaikin refused to detail his experiences with drugs, uneasily telling reporters, "It's in the article."

Instead, he focused on his motivation for going public, stressing his desire to help other athletes and denying he wanted to damage the Gamecock football program.

"The point of the article is not to do that at all," Chaikin insisted. "The tone of the story should show people that's not my point."

Chaikin said an excessive focus on winning at the expense of athletes is a problem in college athletics nationwide, not just at South Carolina.

The SI article, written by Rick Telander, told a tortured tale of intense competition, physical side effects, mood changes and anxiety attacks that escalated until the drugs drove him to the brink of suicide.

Chaikin's father stopped him as he was preparing to pull the trigger of a .357 Magnum pressed under his chin because the drug-induced personality changes and mood swings had become "so intense that I couldn't stand them anymore. I'd lost control of everything."

"I was in bad shape, very bad shape," Chaikin told SI. "From the steroids. It had all come down from the steroids, the crap I'd taken to get big and strong and aggressive so I could play this game that I love."

The near-suicide landed Chaikin in the hospital for a while and spurred him to stop using steroids. Gradually, he returned to school, building up to a full course load while struggling with his psychological and emotional struggle and lingering physical side effects.

"After I got out of the hospital, I went back to school," he said. "I decided to write a manuscript — a catharsis — and a lot of stuff just poured out." Seeing people he knew still caught up in the same cycle of pressure to win and steroids made his decision to go public with his story. He refused to reveal how much SI paid for his story.

Chaikin says he still feels residual effects from his use of steroids and other drugs. "I get sick more quickly. I can't exercise nearly as much. I have a problem with my ears because of it, although I don't know why," he said. "He said vision problems he had for a time have since dissipated."

Still lingering, however, are mood swings and the vivid recollection of the mental torture.

"You always hear these horror stories. You think it won't happen to you," he said. "And the next thing you know, you're on your back."

Chaikin's representative, lawyer Ron Goldfarb, said the athlete preferred to focus on finding a positive side of his devastating experience.

"He intends to speak at high schools and colleges and to anyone who'll listen," said Goldfarb.

Chaikin, who graduated in May with an English degree, is currently living in a Washington, D.C. suburb and working in sales in his father's building renovation business.

"We're trying to help him get a contract to write a book about his experiences," Goldfarb said, adding that a possible movie deal was also in the works.

Meanwhile, in South Carolina, a Richland County grand jury will look into a Chaikin's allegations, Solicitor James Anders said.

Irritated Dukakis Lashes Out At GOP Campaign

By Donald M. Rothberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Michael Dukakis, chafing under the steady pounding of Republican attacks on his state's prison furlough program, is counterattacking by denouncing the opposition material as "garbage" and "a pack of lies."

The Democratic presidential candidate struck back Wednesday during a rural bus tour through Southern Illinois and Missouri.

Dukakis was flying east today for campaign appearances in Connecticut and then an appearance at the annual Alfred E. Smith Dinner in New York City where he would share the spotlight with Republican rival George Bush. The candidates were supposed to confine their remarks to humor rather than politics.

Dukakis campaign officials, trying to counter the damage done by Bush crime ads, were considering airing their own commercial.

With Dukakis admittedly trailing Bush in these closing weeks of the campaign, his strategists also were looking for ways to get his message out to voters and close the gap.

"We're playing with different ways to more dramatically communicate with people," said Dukakis adviser Leslie Dach.

Among those under consideration were buying five minutes on the major television networks for a

Dukakis speech, and the purchase of larger blocks of time — as long as 30 minutes — for either a town meeting style program or a national call-in show.

"All sorts of different options are being weighed," said press secretary Dayton Duncan.

In the effort to widen his audience, Dukakis also was appearing on the ABC show "Good Morning America" on Friday and probably would be on the ABC program "Nightline" next week.

Dukakis and Bush were invited to separate interviews on "Nightline," but the vice president declined.

The Democratic nominee got mixed news on the polling front.

A new ABC News-Washington Post poll released Wednesday said Bush was leading Dukakis by seven points, a margin cheered by the Democratic candidate's aides who were looking for any sign that a recent NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll that had the margin at 17 points was incorrect.

A Lou Harris poll said the Bush lead was nine points. A week earlier, the same survey said Bush was leading by two points.

Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brontas said the candidate decided to respond forcefully to the Republican attacks after he was shown material mailed to voters by the Illinois Republican Party.

"All The Murderers, and Rapists, and Drug Pushers and Child Molesters in Massachusetts Vote for Mike Dukakis," a brochure was headlined in bold type.

It cited the governor's opposition to the death penalty and his support for the state's controversial prison furlough program.

In Quincy, Ill., Dukakis held up the GOP campaign material and told an outdoor rally, "This is garbage, this is political garbage."

"This isn't worthy of a presidential campaign."

Bush Targets N.Y.

By Rita Beamish
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican George Bush is focusing on New York in hopes of throwing opponent Michael Dukakis' struggling campaign off balance, a top aide said as the two presidential candidates headed today to the Empire State.

Bush today was holding a rally in New Jersey, one of five states that campaign manager Lee Atwater cited as pivotal in the home stretch of the campaign, then was going on to the New York City borough of Queens for a law enforcement endorsement.

The GOP presidential nominee was sharing the spotlight in New York tonight with Dukakis at the Alfred E. Smith dinner sponsored by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York. The dinner, named in memory of New York's former governor, donates proceeds to charity.

"We think if we can win New York, we totally destroy his ability to win the election," campaign manager Lee Atwater told reporters on the campaign trail Wednesday in Michigan.

Atwater, in line with the campaign's efforts to downplay Bush's lead in the polls, said he does not expect the GOP nominee to maintain the 17-point lead shown in the NBC News-Wall Street Journal survey released this week.

Coincidentally, news polls released Wednesday showed Bush leading Dukakis by a single-digit margin. An ABC News-Washington Post survey showed Bush up by seven points while an Harris poll found the vice president leading by nine points.

"We're just not going to win by 17 points," Atwater said. "It isn't going to happen."

Bush and his aides continued to insist there is to be no shifting of gears or lessening of campaign efforts because of his strength in opinion polls. Atwater said Bush would spend 80 percent of his time in Dukakis' "must win" states, but he declined to name them, other than New York.

However, the campaign aide said the key states of the rest of the campaign, in addition to Michigan and New Jersey, are Illinois, Ohio and California.

Internal campaign polling shows Bush one or two points behind Dukakis in New York, a state Democrats usually count on for its rich prize of 36 electoral votes, Atwater said.

Bush told reporters he was encouraged by a new Field poll showing a 49 percent to 40 percent lead over Dukakis in California.

Take this test to see how your child is doing at school.

Put off homework, or dawdle with it? ☐ YES ☐ NO

Resist reading aloud, or talking about school? ☐ YES ☐ NO

Withdraw, or show off to extremes? ☐ YES ☐ NO

Complain that school is harder now, or come home with poorer grades? ☐ YES ☐ NO

If yes in any case, call Sylvan Learning Center. Most of our students increase their basic reading or math skills by a full grade level* after just 18 weeks (two hours a week) of instruction.

Sylvan programs available for Reading

• Math • Study Skills • Algebra

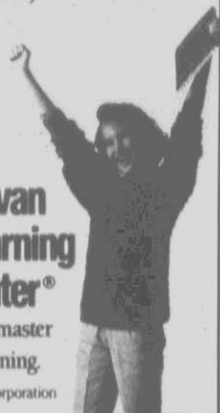

*One grade equivalent score, as measured by a nationally normed standardized achievement test.
