Reagan Tells Tar Heels Bush Is The One To Win

By John Flesher
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — President Reagan went to bat today for George Bush, predicting he'll be "next president of the United States" because he's tough on criminals and the man who'll keep the Strategic Defense Initiative alive.

"Four more years," the crowd of 3,500 chanted as Reagan entered the Raleigh Civic Center for a speech and a private fund-raiser. The trip was one of the last visits to North Carolina that Reagan would make as president. His second term expires in January. Several hundred people were turned away from the hall because there was no room inside for them.

In a prepared speech, Reagan asserted for the first time that his administration has been "wildly successful" in keeping the space-based anti-nuclear shield on track. He said Democrat Michael Dukakis would end the program.

The president targeted North Carolina in an effort to "fire up the troops" and help GOP officials in the state fight complacency before the Nov. 8 election, said a Bush official. Today's rally was billed as an effort for Bush and Gov. Jim Martin, who's seeking re-election.

About 250 people paid $500 each to attend the fund-raiser, said Martin campaign finance director Dawn Lowder. For an additional $5,000, GOP partisans could have their picture taken with Reagan.

"I think we have a good double-digit lead in the state, but that doesn't mean anything," said Steve Schwartz, state director of Bush's campaign. "We've not strayed one iota from our original plan, which includes a massive get-out-the-vote drive."

Rain fell as Reagan was greeted at the airport by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who flew to the state on a White House advance plane, Martin and Dr. George Hitchings, one of the winners of the Nobel Prize for medicine.

In his speech Reagan said of Hitchings, "Of course you know that the Research Triangle Park is also home to one of our most distinguished Americans. Just this week he was awarded the Nobel Prize for medicine and he's with us today — Dr. George H. Hitchings."

Reagan's plane touched down at Raleigh Durham Airport at 10:11 a.m. and taxied to a stop at the 10:15 a.m. arrival time. Helms and Martin rode to the rally with the president in Reagan's limousine.

A crowd of some 3,500 people awaited the president at the civic center. Security officers said several hundred people couldn't get into the hall and left.

The theme of the rally was "Victory '88," and the wall behind the speaker's platform was decorated with a depiction of train with the names of GOP candidates on the train cars.

One banner hung in the civic center said "Mike Dukakis, you're no Ronald Reagan."

British May Cut Suspects' Rights

LONDON (AP) — Critics are denouncing the government's proposal to scrap a crime suspect's right to remain silent, a legal maneuver aimed at battling the Irish Republican Army and other Northern Irish guerrilla groups.

"The government will not defeat terrorism by taking away one of the few remaining safeguards in Northern Ireland's justice system," Sarah Spencer, general secretary of Britain's National Council for Civil Liberties.

The plan to remove the centuries-old right to silence was announced Thursday in the House of Commons by Northern Ireland Secretary Tom King, the Cabinet member responsible for the province.

The government of the Republic of Ireland said in a statement that it was worried at the implications of the move to end the right to silence for the administration of justice in Northern Ireland.

Paddy McManus, legal affairs spokesman for the IRA's legal political party Sinn Fein, said King's announcement moved Britain closer into line with South Africa and Chile, both widely condemned for human rights abuses.

The government also hinted Thursday that it may make candidates for elections in the province take an oath renouncing violence.

On Wednesday, the government imposed a ban on television and radio interviews with the IRA and 10 other militant Northern Ireland groups, including four Protestant organizations, to deny the guerrillas what it said was a propaganda platform.

The government said Thursday it plans to introduce legal changes by 1990 to impose similar restrictions on the right of suspects to remain silent in England and Wales.

Israelis Hit Back

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes and helicopters attacked guerrilla strongholds in Lebanon today in apparent retaliation for a bombing that killed seven Israeli soldiers. Fifteen people were killed in the raids, police said.

The jets scored direct hits on ammunition dumps and training bases of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, and Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, said a police spokesman in Lebanon.

On Thursday, Israel's leaders vowed to retaliate against Hezbollah, which claimed responsibility for killing the Israeli soldiers Wednesday.

The police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said 12 Israeli fighter-bombers were involved in simultaneous air strikes near Sidon, provincial capital of south Lebanon, and in the eastern town of Mashgara.

Helicopter gunships later joined the attack on Mashgara, police said.

Eight people were killed and 15 wounded in the Sidon area, and seven were killed and 15 wounded in Mashgara, the spokesman said.

He said clouds of black smoke hung over the stricken bases on the outskirts of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, and Mashgara, 15 miles to the east.

The Israeli military command said the raids occurred about 10 a.m. and were aimed at "Palestinian targets in the Sidon area and Hezbollah command posts in the villages of Mashgara and Al-Luwayzah."

Deadly Hurricane Joan Claims 26 Lives

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Hurricane Joan resumed its deadly trek toward Central America with 110 mph winds today, after heavy rains pounded Venezuela and pushed the storm's death toll to at least 26.

Costa Rica joined Nicaragua in declaring a national emergency. The storm threatens "devastation and death," said Manuel Obando, president of Costa Rica's National Emergency Committee.

The rains unleashed mudslides Wednesday and Thursday that swallowed wooden huts and left at least 11 people dead in the poorest neighborhoods of Caracas, Venezuela.

The storm killed 15 people in Colombia, injured 50, and left tens of thousands homeless when it swept the Guajira peninsula on Monday.

More than 37,000 people fled coastal areas of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, where a hurricane watch was in force. Hurricane warnings were in effect for the Colombian islands of San Andres and neighboring Albuquerque and Providencia.

"It's better to leave before we get killed," said Teresa Wilson, who toted a plastic bag stuffed with clothes and fled the Nicaraguan coastal village of Bluff with her seven children.

The Nicaraguan government appealed to the international community to be prepared to lend assistance.

At 9 a.m. EDT today, Joan's center was about 65 miles south-southeast of San Andres and about 170 miles east of Bluefields, Nicaragua, near latitude 11.6 north and longitude 81.2 west.

Airport Board OKs Design For Terminal Expansion

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority has approved a design development report on the $1.26 million terminal-expansion project tentatively set to begin in March.

At the authority's monthly meeting Thursday, architect Joel McCreary, of the LPA Group Inc., presented blueprints of the expansion, which will add more than 10,000 square feet to the airport. The total facility will be more than 14,600 square feet after the addition is completed.

The new portion of the airport is to have vaulted ceilings, slanted sky lights and a shingled roof, all designed to complement the existing building.

The addition will provide new office space for airlines, a baggage-claim area with conveyor, a new departure area and a larger concourse to accommodate visitors. The report states the project should be substantially completed approximately 300 calendar days from the time work begins.

McCreary has attended several other authority meetings, and the group had previously given informal approval to plans and drawings. Thursday, the authority formally endorsed the 15-page design development report, which McCreary said is a preliminary version of the engineering report.

The authority also gave McCreary approval to work directly with airport director Jim Turcoite for the Social Security Recipients To Receive 4 Percent Raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 38.4 million Social Security recipients will get a 4.0 percent benefit increase in January, the second highest boost in 6½ years, the government said today.

The Social Security Administration said the increase promises an extra $21 a month for the average retired worker, who now gets $516 a month from the huge pension and disability insurance program.

It said the maximum monthly benefit for a worker retiring in 1988 at age 65 will rise $61, from $838 to $899.

The exact size of the increase became official today when the Labor Department announced the change in the Consumer Price Index for September.

Since 1975, Social Security benefits have risen automatically each year with the CPI with the exception of six months in 1983 that were skipped to help bail the system out of a crisis.

The increase for 1988 was 4.2 percent, which had been the biggest advance since a 7.4 percent rise in 1982, back when higher inflation rates translated into bigger cost-of-living increases.

The change in Social Security benefits is calculated by taking increases in the CPI for urban wage earners and clerical workers for the July-September period, compared to the same period in the previous year.

More than 4 million recipients of Supplemental Security Income, a welfare program for the aged, blind or disabled, will also get a 4.0 percent increase.

For the elderly and disabled, the Social Security increase will be partially offset by an extra $7.10 a month in Medicare premiums, which will rise to $31.90 starting in January. They are deducted directly from the benefits.

The maximum federal SSI payment will rise by $14, from $354 to $368, for an individual, and by $21, from $532 to $553, for a poor couple.

Council Gives Up On Saving Patrick-Arthur House

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A change in terms of an agreement for the city to move the Patrick-Arthur House from its present site on the corner of 14th and Charles Boulevard has caused the city to reverse its plans to attempt to save the historic structure.

The revised proposal before the City Council at Thursday's monthly meeting could not generate the four required votes necessary for approval. The Council voted 3-2 in favor of terms of the new agreement, which decreased the allotted time to move the house from two weeks to one week. Council member Bill Hadden and Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn were in opposition, while Mildred Council was absent.

City Manager Greg Knowles explained at the meeting that one week was very little time to move the home considering the details which needed to be arranged with a number of entities including the moving company, the telephone company, Greenville Utilities, and the cable television company.

The council originally agreed to move the house from its current site after the corner lot on which the house sits had been rezoned for commercial use.

By terms of the original agreement, the city council agreed to pay $5,000 of the anticipated $25,000 moving costs with the developer, realtor and homeowner contributing the remaining amount. The agreement also granted the city 14 days to move the house following the closing of the sale of the property.

"We believed we had a deal negotiated that allowed us seven days notice of the sale and 14 days to actually move the house," said City Attorney Mac McCarley. "However, when the agreement was sent to the developer to be signed, he reduced the time to remove the house from 14 days down to seven."

"The city had originally requested 30 days to remove the house from the property," he added.

"Now that this agreement has failed, the fate of the house is in the hands of the Arthur family and the developer," McCarley said.

Mayor Ed Carter pointed out at Thursday's meeting that by the terms of the revised agreement, if the city had to take eight days to move the house, the other parties could legally back out of their $20,000 commitment to reimburse the city back for expenses incurred in moving the house.

"I think the council has exhausted a tremendous amount of energy trying to work out alternatives to (save the house)," Carter said. "But we're facing insurmountable risks and I'm not willing to jeopardize taxpayers' money," Carter said.

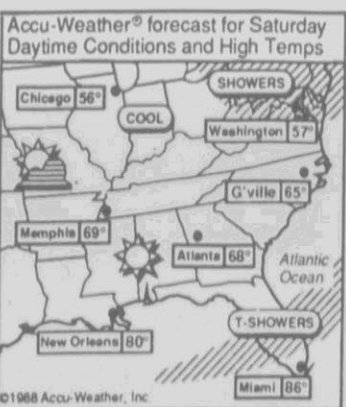

"It seems to me (the developer) isn't showing any kind of concern for the city and for the historical society and those of us who want to preserve that historic building," said council member Hadden. "If anybody is at fault here, it lay with the developer who refused to give us another week."

The Patrick-Arthur House represents one of the very last Gothic-influenced Victorian farm houses of the 19th Century in Greenville.

Carter said discussions have been held with representatives of several institutions in the community about the possibility of saving the building along with people in various historical society's trying to find options that would prevent the house's destruction.

Council Approves Several Rezoning Requests, Alters Med District Plan

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Several rezoning requests, including an amended request pertaining to property in the Medical District, were approved Thursday by the Greenville City Council at its monthly meeting at City Hall.

The council unanimously approved an amended request by J. Bryant Kittrell to rezone two tracts of land north of Stantonsburg Road, south of SR 1202, and east of Allen Road.

The first tract, .44 acres fronting Stantonsburg Road, was rezoned from MD-5 (residential) to MD-3 (office and institutional). The second tract, .44 acres behind Medical Oaks Apartments, was rezoned from MD-5 to MD-3.

Kittrell's initial request, part of which asked that 4.53 acres instead of .44 acres be switched from office and institutional to residential, was previously denied by the council as members expressed concern over further limiting the amount of office space in the Medical District.

The amended request however, did not have that effect on the total amount of MD-3 zoned land.

"When the request was first originated, there was concern over the number of acres in each one of the (zoning) categories," said Director of Development Bobby Roberson.

"The amended request by Kittrell didn't increase or decrease any of the allotted areas for the MD-3 or MD-5 zoning classifications. That's why the staff had no opposition to the revised proposal," he added.

The rezoning request by Kittrell was allowed to be heard a second time due to a technical error in the publishing of rezoning notices.

The council also approved a request by James D. Mellon Jr. to rezone 3.26 acres located at the southwest corner of SR 1725 and SR 1708 from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to O&I (office and institutional).

A request by Bill Clark Construction Company was approved that rezones a 794-square-foot tract 650 feet south of the Red Banks Road Extension, east of the Lynndale Subdivision and part of the Lynndale Townes Subdivision from R-15S (residential) to R-6 (residential) as was a request by the City of Greenville Development Department to rezone a 1.54-acre tract north of 14th Street, east of the railroad tracks and being lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, Block 42-I of the South Evans Redevelopment Project from CDF (downtown fringe commercial) and R-6 to IU (unoffensive industry).

A request by Walter L. Williams to rezone a .175-acre tract 123 feet east of Memorial Drive, west of W. Village Drive and north of South Village Drive from R-6 (residential) to CH (highway commercial) failed to receive the necessary four votes of approval required for passage. Council voted 3-2 in favor of the request.

A request by the Tucker Company to rezone 15.17 acres across from Pitt Community College from CH and O&I (office and institutional) to CS (shopping center) was withdrawn.

Second Place

The Pitt County Fair placed second in the state for incorporating the theme of the state fair, "Goodness Grows in North Carolina" in its 67th edition held Oct. 3-8.

A plaque, signed by Commissioner of Agriculture James A. Graham, recently was given to Pitt fair officials during a program at the state fair.

Wellcome PTO

Wellcome Middle School will have its first Parent Teacher Organization meeting Nov. 1 at 7:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

Several buildings were approved for historical designation.

Those buildings so designated were The Hassell-James (Owens) Building and grounds, 105 and 107 W. Third St.; The York Memorial Church and grounds, the 600 block of Albemarle Avenue; The Third Street School and grounds, 600-700 W. Third St.; The Jones-Lee House and grounds, 805 Evans St., and The E.B. Ficklen House and grounds on 508 W. Fifth St.

Development Director Roberson said the next step in the historic designation process is that staff will be presenting to the council a proposal for the formation of a Historic Properties Commission.

"That commission would be empowered to allow interested historic agencies additional time to save those designated properties which might be considered for demolition by the owner," Roberson said.

He also said a historic designation of a structure offers tax advantages to property owners.

The council also authorized the initiation of the upset bid process for Disposal Parcels D-2 and F-6 in the Southside Development Project and Parcel 42-1-8A in the South Evans Community Development Project.

Consideration of the final sale of Disposal Parcel 42-H-1A in the South Evans Community Development Project was continued until a later meeting as was consideration of a boundary agreement between the Town of Winterville, City of Greenville, Greenville Utilities Commission and Pitt County.

Other matters approved Thursday included permitting a Veteran's Memorial to be erected at the Town Commons; approving two amendments to the animal control regulations which would change the word "adequate" to the word "actual" in describing the physical control which an owner must have over a dog which is off the owner's property and that would make it unlawful to permit any dog to defecate or urinate on any lawn or property other than the owner's without the permission of the owner of that property; the rewriting of an ordinance making it unlawful for any person to leave the roadway and travel across private property to avoid an official traffic control device; an ordinance making it unlawful to possess traffic control signs; eliminating council's second monthly workshop meeting on Monday, and a bid of $64,385 for a sideloader refuse vehicle.

Consideration of an ordinance requesting the voluntary annexation of the Westpointe Subdivision, off Stantonsburg Road, and the Treybrooke Subdivision, on SR 1202, was continued until the lawsuit filed against the city by the co-owner of the Colo-

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Timing Crisis

Could Freeze Have Been Avoided?

A freeze on non-emergency county spending doesn't sound like cause for alarm but it does prompt questions about improved planning.

Heavy payments for capital improvements, coupled with tax dollars slow to trickle in, broke Pitt's piggy bank and saddled the county with cash flow difficulties for the remainder of 1988.

Although this crisis seems merely a question of timing — bills had to be met unexpectedly early while taxpayers still have until year's end to pay their tax assessments — it might have been eased by two simple adjustments.

First, the county might strengthen its cash reserves at critical financial times. At the end of the 1987-88 fiscal year, the county's cash reserves totaled just over 1 percent of the budget. Usually, the county has 20 percent of its budget in unappropriated funds. Why were the bills unanticipated and why was the reserve so low? Better tracking of expenses — even sudden ones — could improve planning for tough fiscal times.

Second, the county might adopt a discount program to encourage citizens to pay tax bills early — and consequently get tax dollars in the coffers promptly. Greenville has a discount for assessments paid in August, and the county could easily offer the same incentive.

'Although this crisis seems merely a question of timing, it might have been eased by two simple adjustments.'

That effort could work to Pitt's advantage by putting more cash in the fund at normally dry financial times.

The crunch will be eased as property taxes are paid in the next two months, but still, school capital expenditures and purchase of property must be postponed due to the squeeze. While that isn't the road to disaster, neither is it the most efficient path toward progress.

No harm will be done to the county's financial soundness by the spending freeze. It is merely an inconvenience. But it is a predicament that might be sidestepped by better planning and incentives to improve revenue collection. The county can apply accented management to avoid future problems.

Whales & Man

Rescue Shows Raised Consciousness

In wildlife violent death is a fact of life. One species feeds off another and reaching old age is rare. For the few which do live a long life the end result is still violent death because they become too slow to avoid their predators.

Given all that it is still proper to muster human sympathy for the three whales which have been trapped under the ice at Barrow, Alaska. The whales stayed in the north too long. The ice closed in and the laws of nature call for them to die, thus providing food for other sea creatures.

The one animal which can reason about the situation, however, came to the whales' rescue. Man made a supreme attempt to release them from their dilemma, first by cutting holes in the ice so the whales can breathe. Then by bringing in manmade machines to cut a path through the ice so the whales can leave and make the trek to warmer waters.

If the whales escape the world may never know whether they survived the ordeal. Whales and other sea creatures die every day from disease, attacks and old age.

One thing the humans have demonstrated by the whale rescue effort, however, is the concern mankind now has for this magnificent creature which is endangered. The whales' greatest enemy is man. The creature is too large for most other sea life to successfully attack and is at the end of the food chain in which fish feed on small sea life only to be devoured by larger fish and so forth.

Over the centuries man has reduced the whale numbers with his harpoon. He took the whales for their blubber that made food for humans and oil for their lamps. Man was dependent on the creatures for survival.

Now the harvest of whales has reached the point where the great mammals could disappear from the seas. Humans are recognizing that danger and attempting to preserve what's left.

These trapped whales could have died unnoticed — and they may yet die. Nevertheless, rescue efforts have shown man's consciousness that this species must be preserved.

Bush Spells The End Of Roe v. Wade

WASHINGTON — If George Bush is elected President, Roe v. Wade is dead.

Whether that is another reason for voting for the Republican vice president or for his Democratic rival, Michael Dukakis, depends on how you feel about legalized abortion. I wouldn't want to predict the election outcome even if abortion were the only issue in the campaign.

But it seems unavoidable that a Bush victory would mean the end of Roe. Indeed, it may be overturned no matter how the election comes out.

That, at least, is the opinion of Dennis L. Cuddy, a political analyst (and anti-abortionist) who has been following the issue.

He was making the prediction even before Justice Harry A. Blackmun, who wrote the Roe opinion, said last month that the ruling could be overturned during this term of the court.

The reason, says Cuddy, has to do with the internal contradictions of Roe, which, together with Doe v. Bolton, essentially allows abortions at any time prior to birth. The decision, as Justice Sandra Day O'Connor put it, is "clearly on a collision course with itself."

What must inevitably collide are the twin notions of viability of the fetus and the health of the mother. The mother's right to an abortion in the first trimester of her pregnancy outweighs the interest of the state in protecting the fetus, said Roe, because the fetus is not viable and the abortion-related risk to the mother is slight. The reverse is true in the final trimester, and the state may constitutionally forbid abortion. (In the middle trimester, the state may regulate, but not forbid, abortion.)

court has not yet accepted an abortion case for the current term (though it still may). If no such case is accepted fairly soon, the chances are we will be looking at a different Supreme Court. After all, Blackmun will be 80 next month, and two other justices are already in their 80s. Two or three appointments by the next President could critically change the court's makeup.

But in which direction? Dukakis, who had his best moment in the second presidential debate when he argued that the decision to abort must ultimately belong to the woman herself, would be likely to name to the court justices who share that view. In that case, it might be difficult to assemble the five justices necessary to rehear Roe.

But Bush, on record as a right-to-lifer and under pressure from the Republican right to show his conservative mettle, would almost certainly fill any Supreme Court vacancies with people who share his anti-abortion attitude.

I don't suggest that the presidential election should turn on the single issue of abortion rights. My own views on the subject are sufficiently ambiguous that, if that were the overriding issue, I might not vote at all.

But it does seem clear to me that if George Bush is elected, Roe v. Wade is dead.

Wading Into The Murkiest Of Waters

BOSTON — First, a stark dose of reality: Rapists don't use condoms. They don't follow the Surgeon General's guidelines for safer sex.

So today the brutality of sexual assault has a whole new dimension of anguish for the victim. Did the rapist have AIDS? Do I have it now? Did I survive the attack to die of the disease he left behind?

Questions such as these have become routine to rape-crisis counselors and victim-assistance programs. And with them have come a new series of conflicts. Can we force every rape suspect to be tested for AIDS? Must we protect the privacy of a man who may have deposited a deadly calling card?

This intensely emotional issue was placed before a Connecticut court this month. Under state law, a victim could have a suspect tested for syphilis or gonorrhea. But the Bridgeport judge ruled she wasn't entitled to have the suspect tested for AIDS. In a torturous bit of semantics, the judge declared that

Ellen Goodman

AIDS was not a venereal disease.

No other court will likely have the luxury to sidestep this matter in such a peculiar way. The legal, ethical and medical issues still lie out there, waiting to be resolved.

In our legal system, we presume that a man is innocent until proven guilty. The pressure to test rape suspects comes smack up against that presumption. There are enormous risks to civil liberties when any man accused of rape, rightly or wrongly, could be forcibly tested.

But what of men who are already convicted of rape? Should we be allowed to test them at least?

Those who say "no" do so often on technical grounds. They remind us that there is no absolute certainty in test results. There is a lag between the time of infection and the time antibodies develop. If an assailant comes up negative, he may yet harbor the virus. If he is found to carry the virus, the victim still won't know whether he transmitted it to her.

"The sad fact is, you can't know by testing the perpetrator," says Beth Weinstein of the AIDS office in the Connecticut health department. The woman still must test herself. Nevertheless Weinstein describes herself as "torn" on the question of testing rapists.

Her ambivalence is echoed by many for a simple reason: On the other side of this conflict is the victim. Even if the knowledge to be gained by testing isn't perfect, it is better than nothing and she may want it. Isn't she entitled to whatever margin of comfort or caution it would provide her and her family?

Ronald Bayer, a bioethicist at the Columbia University School of Public Health, says carefully: "In the situation of rape, if the woman believes that her sense of well-being would be enhanced by information, however ambiguous, then her claims ought to take priority over those of the rapist."

That, it seems to me, is the humane minimum.

These are the murkiest of waters. We are just now wading into them. Even victims' rights groups like the National Organization for Victim Assistance offer a two-sided argument on this issue in a newsletter with the neutral headline: "A Deadly Problem in Search of a Policy."

But there is a place to begin. Yes, a convicted rapist can be required to take an AIDS test and give the results to his victim. This is, after all, the very least he owes her.

Of Polls, Bandwagons & Underdogs

Theo Lippman Jr.

The mid-October polls are devastating for the Democrats. Only three weeks left and the Republican is way ahead.

At this point in a campaign, when the polls get this bad, they contribute to the dread Bandwagon Effect. People who hadn't made up their minds before will now "hop on the bandwagon" of the winner. The polls, Michael Dukakis said Monday, "drive the process."

Everybody knows this. But it is not true.

The opening paragraph above is not about the Wall Street Journal-NBC Poll, showing George Bush 17 percent ahead in the popular vote, or about the Washington Post-ABC Poll showing him with a 219 electoral vote lead.

It is about the Gallup Poll published 40 years ago. That poll showed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey ahead of President Harry S. Truman by 46 percent to 40 percent, with the rest undecided or in favor of other candidates. Gallup showed Dewey ahead in states with 347 electoral votes and Truman ahead in states with 130.

Perhaps anticipating the Bandwagon Effect, Gallup stopped polling nearly two weeks before Election Day. What happened? Truman beat Dewey by 4.5 percentage points and 303-189 in electoral votes.

You would have thought that would have ended the idea that polls could contribute to the Bandwagon Effect. But it didn't. Nor did it in 1968 and 1976 when candidates far behind in polls in September and October came within a hair's breadth of winning. Nobody jumped on Richard Nixon's (1968) and Jimmy Carter's (1976) bandwagons just because the polls suggested they were going to win. Voters turned to Hubert Humphrey and Gerald Ford.

Ford's case is perhaps the strongest argument against a Polls-Bandwagon Theory. Behind 18 points in the Gallup Poll as late as mid-September, he lost by 2 points.

If anything the new bad poll results ought to help Dukakis. I subscribe to the opposite of the Bandwagon Theory — the Underdog Theory. For every voter who wants to hop on the bandwagon, there are 2.1 voters who root for the underdog. (How do I know this? I don't. I made it up. But it sounds about right. There must be more Underdoggers than Bandwagoners. Presidential polls understate the losers' support more often than the winners'.)

A 19th century writer, David Barker, seems to have coined the word in a song about a dog fight:

"I know that the world, that the great big world

Will never a moment stop To see which dog may be in the fault,

But will shout for the dog on top. But for me, I shall never pause to ask

Which dog may be in the right, For my heart will beat, while it beats at all,

For the underdog in the fight." What could be more American than that? With no reference to politics, philosophy, personal characteristics of the candidates or any of that good civics stuff, when I read the latest polls, I shout with Olympia Dukakis, "Let's go, Michael!"

Election Day '88 Will Bypass The Energy Issue

Frank Zarb

In less than a month, the campaign will be over, and it appears likely Election Day will arrive with only passing references by both Republicans and Democrats to that "E" word. Energy — an abundance of which at one time contributed greatly to the nation's ability to become a worldwide economic, social and political force — today remains an open question in America's future.

Broad natural resources-environmental campaign packages — while perhaps in themselves worthy of praise — skirt the central issues. Will America have the energy it needs to ensure future economic growth? Will sources be found in time? Will they be adequate to fulfill all our needs without jeopardizing our independence, our environment, the standards of living of each and every American?

Right now, energy is simply not a priority for American voters. There is plenty of oil. Every day a dollar buys more of it, and every day we watch as the chaos at OPEC grows. It would appear that in many ways, the measures taken by the United States starting in the mid-1970s to put pressure on foreign oil producers have worked. Ironically, however, this country's success in forcing retreat by members of OPEC has opened the way for a new threat: an excuse to relax a public policy that sensibly addressed our energy future.

The consumer has lost interest in energy. And energy as a campaign issue appears to have lost its edge. This complacency on the subject has occurred even as evidence suggests that the country is on the verge of losing whatever time was bought a decade ago.

'Right now, energy is simply not a priority for American voters. There is plenty of oil. Every day a dollar buys more of it, and every day we watch as the chaos at OPEC grows.'

•Since 1983 oil consumption has risen almost 10 percent. To fulfill this demand, imports are up more than 40 percent, while domestic production is down approximately 5 percent. Among other things, this means our vulnerability to price or supply blackmail by the world's oil producers is a growing threat. •Recent findings suggest that the country's reliance on oil and coal to support a growing need for electricity production is probably doing more damage to the environment than initially believed. Carbon dioxide buildup from fossil fuels appears to be a major contributor to the so-called "greenhouse" effect.

•The search for alternative energy forms has come to a virtual standstill. While that may not mean too much for the "near term," many leading scientists believe the world has less than 50 years of oil production left. To my mind, that is near-term enough.

These and other facts suggest that America has arrived at a critical juncture in determining how we face our energy policy. Before us lie two paths. One leads to dependency on foreign sources of energy and opens our exposure to the volatility we have known too well. The other will help to ensure that this country is well prepared to maintain its political and economic integrity as well as to preserve the delicate balance of our environment. No, the threat is not an immediate one. But that is the point. America still has a choice. And I would suggest that it is a choice we should make before we again face a problem of crisis proportions, before we lose our options.

Of course, the answers to America's energy questions are not simple. They go beyond quick fixes such as stepping up the use of natural gas. Take, for example, the price of fuel. At the heart of many of the problems we face — increased consumption, lower domestic production and the redeployment of capital away from alternate forms of energy — is cheap imported oil. Sooner or later we will have to initiate measures to raise prices — remaining price controls in the energy chain will have to be lifted, a BTU tax imposed. In turn, some of the revenues from that tax will have to go to U.S. oil producers, so they can be encouraged to produce U.S. oil.

Additionally, it will be necessary to revisit the possible contribution that nuclear power can make to our national fuel mix. A number of industrial nations have made considerable progress in the development of nuclear power while we have lagged behind. I am not suggesting a headlong rush into an area the dangers of which are well documented and worth thoughtful consideration. But as we continue to face such issues as global overheating, it may be that harnessing nuclear power is one important option for avoiding an eventual "Greenhouse-Doomsday" scenario.

These are only the most obvious solutions. The issue needs further thought and attention. It needs to be brought to the forefront of this country's agenda.

To be honest, if I were in the candidates' shoes, I too would think long and hard about using the "E" word.

What needs to be said and done is historically unpopular. During the 1973-75 oil crisis, the two types of proposals that attracted the angriest mail from normally civilized, decent Americans were those that would have raised the price of gasoline and those to increase the number of U.S. nuclear power plants.

But government and the American public learned many lessons from facing that crisis, which was arguably of unparalleled proportions. Perhaps most important is that our nation's energy policy has the potential to affect the daily lives of each and every American, today and for generations to come. Let's apply the lessons of that experience. George Bush was in the federal government when we were struggling with the energy crisis during the '70s. Michael Dukakis was active in state government in Massachusetts when people were waiting on gasoline lines throughout the Northeast in 1974. Before we again face challenges of that magnitude, let's give the energy issue the respect it deserves.

Frank G. Zarb was federal energy administrator from 1974 to 1977.

Administration's Dollar Policy At Odds With Current Views

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — The way economists of both political persuasions see it, the dollar has to fall further on international currency markets before the massive U.S. trade deficit will decline.

Martin S. Feldstein, an economic adviser to George Bush, thinks the dollar should dip at least 20 percent against the Japanese yen; former Carter administration official C. Fred Bergsten favors a decline of about the same size.

Their logic is simple: A depreciating dollar lowers prices for American goods in other currencies, and thus stimulates exports. By the same token, foreign goods become more costly here and imports fall. But Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady doesn't buy the argument that the dollar should decline further — and the word has been passed by the Bush campaign that on these issues, Feldstein doesn't speak for the vice president. Brady is expected to restate the Reagan administration's satisfaction with the current level of the dollar in a report to Congress later this week.

He takes a dim view of pessimistic forecasts of future trade deficits because they do not take into account the certainty that the United States would make changes in policy to assure progress in bringing the deficit down, in consultation with the other Group of Seven industrial nations.

Administration thinking — to be reflected in the report — is that the longer-term decline of the dollar that has occurred since the major powers agreed to depress it at a meeting at New York's Plaza Hotel in 1985 will continue to be reflected in further export gains by American manufacturers, regardless of the fact that the dollar has risen 14 percent this year.

In the report, which is required by the omnibus trade bill approved last summer, Brady is also expected to suggest that critics pay too much attention to exchange rate changes, and that the trade gains seen by American manufacturers in 1988 are probably due to a whole range of factors, exchange rates among them.

In rejecting the argument for a further depreciation of the dollar, Brady seemingly turns aside the verdict of mainstream U.S. economists for an obvious political reason: In the midst of an election, Brady — as well as other politicians in the G-7 network — doesn't want to risk change. With the global economy in apparent good shape, they would rather postpone any decisions on exchange changes until next year.

The Brady report thus could foreshadow his first serious political confrontation on Capitol Hill. Congressional Democrats, echoing Bergsten's analysis, insist that without a reversal of the 1988 rise in the dollar, recent gains in export sales will prove to have been short-lived.

Bergsten said the models of the economy run at his Institute for International Economics show that "they (the administration) will never get the current account deficit below $100 billion on the basis of current policy and present exchange rates." The current account deficit, now estimated at about $129 billion for 1988 and 1989, includes the merchandise trade deficit and the balance of trade in services.

Bergsten says that three things must happen to assure a declining trade deficit: a dip in the dollar to about 100 yen and 1.25 West German marks, a serious budget-deficit reduction effort here and renewed attention to domestic economic expansion by Japan and West Germany.

Brady, who took over the Treasury post from James A. Baker III last month, was supposed to deliver the first of the two semi-annual reports required by the trade law last Saturday. Treasury officials have told congressional Democrats that the report will be delivered at the end of this week, after a review by the Federal Reserve Board.

These reports are intended to increase "accountability (of the executive branch) for the impact of economie policies and exchange rates on trade competitiveness," according to the act. The Democrats have been eager to smoke out administration policy on the dollar by persuading Brady to include in his report a forecast of future U.S. current account balances, which would also indicate the extent of the buildup of U.S. external debt.

The trade law does not require the Treasury to supply specific targets for trade or current account deficits. But in a letter to Brady on Oct. 7, Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., asked Brady to include "your view of the appropriate goal" for the U.S. current account deficit for the next 10 years.

A congressional source said that Assistant Treasury Secretary David C. Mulford was reported to have said the United States could sustain a $100 billion current account deficit indefinitely. Mulford, in an interview, flatly denied the report.

Beyond the specific issue relating to current account targets, congressional sources say there is the larger issue of accountability. Said one official: "Our hope is to get the secretary of Treasury accustomed to offer the same sort of political accountability we now get from the Federal Reserve Board chairman twice a year. We want him to come to Congress, and tell us and the public: 'This is the direction in which we should be going.'"

Proxmire's letter asked that Brady in his report deal with "the potential negative effects of the dollar's 1988 rise on our future exports," quoting a private econometric model that predicted that the strong 1988 gain in exports is coming to an end. The letter said Wharton Econometrics predicted at the end of September that the U.S. current account deficit would increase to $145 billion by 1991.

Brady already has indicated in his confirmation hearing that he believes there will be a dramatic further decline in the trade deficit next year, even if the dollar does not fall from current levels.

Not Working

Barbara Ehrenreich

"Full employment equals prosperity" is one of the most venerable equations in American political rhetoric.

Every presidential candidate this year has offered us jobs and more jobs. The Republicans boast of creating 17 million jobs in the last eight years and — until his advisers pointed out that there weren't enough Americans to fill them — George Bush was promising to bring us 30 million more. Only Michael S. Dukakis, with his zingless slogan, "good jobs at good wages," seems to have noticed that the word jobs alone no longer spells good times.

But no one is really grappling with the fundamental new reality: that if jobs are supposed to cure poverty and bring comfort to the hard-working, then, sadly, jobs no longer work.

While our political rhetoric still lingers in the 1930s or '40s, the America of the 1980s is fast becoming a low-wage economy. Conservatives have resisted this diagnosis tooth and nail, but the evidence keeps piling in. The latest news — from the Democratic staff of the Senate Budget Committee — is that one-half of the new jobs generated since 1979 paid a year-round, full-time equivalent of less than $11,611, which is just about equal to the current, officially defined poverty level for a family of four.

One result is that 9 million Americans hold jobs and yet are unable to rise above the official poverty level. These people — who are more likely to be women than men, minorities than white — can hardly be cheered by the candidates' offers of jobs and more jobs. They already have a job, thank you; what they need is money.

But if conservatives have been caught short by the new reality, so have liberals. For more than four decades now, "full employment" has been the two-word economic program of the American left. The idea wasn't just to keep everybody busy, but to get the law of supply and demand working on the side of the American worker: decrease unemployment and shrink the labor supply — and wages would have to rise. Thus full employment, in the statistical sense, would also mean employment at decent, livable wages.

But things haven't worked out that way. We're approaching full employment, or at least the lowest unemployment rates we've seen since the 1950s. But the law of supply and demand no longer seems to be in effect. Wages have gone up in a few labor-short patches of the economy, such as banks and suburban fast-food places. But the overall average wage remains stuck at a little over $9 an hour.

The reason the liberal full-employment strategy hasn't worked is that wages don't rise automatically when the labor supply shrinks. They rise when workers demand pay increases, generally through the traditional tactics of unionization and collective bargaining. But in recent years employers have fiercely resisted demands for increased wages: They've threatened to move to Mexico or Taiwan; they've hired fancy law firms to run legal circles around their employees, and in some cases, they've resorted to old-fashioned, brass-knuckles, union-busting techniques.

Barbara Ehrenreich is a fellow at the Institute for Policy Studies in Washington.

Candidates Discuss Campaigns

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Six political candidates and representatives of three others were guests of the Eastern North Carolina Chapter of the Professional Engineers of North Carolina at a "Meet the Candidates" forum at the Holiday Inn here Thursday night.

The session was designed to give professional engineers from 20 eastern counties an opportunity to meet the candidates and discuss the issues.

Leo Tew of Raleigh, the Republican candidate for commissioner of agriculture, told the 16 engineers and other guests that, "I will chart a new direction... toward using fewer toxic chemicals," in the production of crops, if elected in November.

"We need to stimulate our rural society," promote alternative cash crops and "encourage the use of North Carolina grown crops," Tew said.

Suggesting education be used to encourage farmers to grow crops without the use of chemicals, Tew said, "usually a chemical-free product will bring more on the market than chemically grown produce."

Bill Dansey, the Republican candidate for the 9th Senatorial District seat stressed environmental issues and suggested that all state agencies dealing with the environment be put under one agency to be "more efficient, more effective."

The environment, Dansey said, "is a critical thing," and he suggested that "recycling is one thing we're going to have to do," to eliminate much of the waste now being disposed of in landfills across the state.

Walter Jones Jr., a Democratic seeking his fourth term in the 9th House District seat, said he enjoys "being in a position to help people when they need help," and emphasized the need for ethics in politics.

Jones also voiced support for programs for the state's young people and senior citizens and suggested some form of health care program should be established for those who cannot afford private insurance.

Other candidates speaking at the session included Democrats: R.L. "Bob" Martin, running unopposed in his bid for a third term as senator from the 6th Senate district; Bill Barker, seeking re-election to the Senate from the Craven-Carteret-Pamlico county district; and Dan Lilley, seeking re-election from the Craven-Lenoir-Pamlico House district, who said education, transportation and health issues — "they are interwoven" — are his prime concerns.

Insurance Commissioner Jim Long, incumbent 9th District Sen. Tom Taft and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who is hoping to unseat Republican Gov. Jim Martin, were represented by others at the forum.

Steve Porter, president of the eastern area PENC chapter, presided at the meeting, while Ron Pledger, president elect of the chapter, introduced the candidates and representatives.

Club Officers Named

Greenville Middle School has announced its officers for the Junior Beta Club. They are Tracey Coker, president; Adrienne Allison, vice president; Wes Cain, secretary; Jennifer Curry, treasurer, and Lindsey Laing, roll call.

West To Give Briefing

Dr. Edwin L. West, superintendent of the Pitt County schools, will conduct a community briefing Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. at Farmville Central High School. Long-range planning will be discussed.

PTO Meets Tuesday

Greenville Middle School's first Parent Teacher Organization meeting is Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria. A short business meeting precedes open house, when parents will be able to follow their students' schedules and meet with teachers.

Students at Greenville Middle will have their portraits made Monday.

The North Carolina Writing Test will be given to sixth-grade students Nov. 1.

Zoretic Gives Talk

Dr. Philip Zoretic of the Department of Chemistry at East Carolina University will discuss his work in the area of natural products synthesis Monday during the meeting of the Eastern North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society. The 8 p.m. lecture follows a social at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7.

Reservations for the meeting at the Southern Sportsman Restaurant in Farmville can be made in the Chemistry Department by calling 757-6711.

School Joins Project

North Pitt High School has been registered as a participant in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Aerospace Education Service Project.

The project is designed to inform students and teachers of new NASA programs and will be used to enhance classroom learning. The project, delivered by satellite, includes four one-hour videoconferences. A telephone line is available to the students and teachers so they can talk directly to the program director, ask questions and participate in the conference with immediate feedback.

For more information, call Connie Bright at North Pitt, 825-8741.

Dinosaur Programs

In a cooperative effort, six schools in Pitt County will host Mark Daniel's "Those Magical Dinosaurs" program, which features magic tricks, storytelling, puppetry and factual information about dinosaurs. He will be performing at Third Street and Wintergreen Schools Tuesday at 1:15 p.m. and 9 a.m., respectively. He'll be at Eastern and Elmhurst schools Tuesday at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., respectively, and at South Greenville and W.H. Robinson schools Oct. 27 at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., respectively.

Cox Elects Officers

The A.G. Cox Middle School Student Council has elected its new officers. They are Catherine Minshew, president; Ashley Smith, vice president; Tracie Davis, secretary and Jill Garris, treasurer.

Two representatives from each homeroom form the 48-member council, which will make donations to the Winterville Rescue Squad, collect food for the needy and provide gifts for the Winterville area rest-home residents as projects for the first semester. The activities will be funded by a schoolwide "Fun Day" Oct. 28.

Student Is Second Chair

Amy Hardison, a freshman at Ayden-Grifton High School, has earned second chair playing flute and piccolo with the Eastern Youth Orchestra. Orchestra auditions were conducted at East Carolina University in September.

Miss Hardison will practice and perform with the orchestra through the 1988-89 season in addition to playing with the Ayden-Grifton Marching Band.

Fornes Named Scholar

Jason Fornes of D.H. Conley has been accepted as a Congressional Scholar in the National Young Leaders Conference being held in Washington, D.C., from Nov. 8-13. The council allows a select group of high school students to meet leaders in the executive, legislative and judicial branches of federal government and to develop a greater understanding of the American Constitutional process.

Churches Collect For UNICEF

A change is being made this year for the annual collection of funds in Greenville for the United Nations Children's Emergency Fund.

Instead of children going from door to door soliciting, as has been the custom, contributions will be received in community churches.

About 20 churches associated with Church Women United are participating in collecting funds Sunday.

Church members and others may make contributions to Memorial Baptist Church, 1510 Greenville Blvd., SE, on Monday from 10 a.m. until noon. Dot Paschal is chairperson of the drive and will accept individual and church contributions.

UNICEF is responsible for a large number of international programs which help needy children with programs providing nourishing food, improving health conditions, helping with education and other areas.

Citizens Tell Governor's Board More Data Needed On Wastes

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The public needs to be better informed about what hazardous and low-level radioactive wastes are and how these and other solid wastes can most safely and economically be disposed of, citizen presenters said at a meeting Thursday of the Governor's Waste Management Board held in Greenville.

Several members of the board also stressed the need for people to understand the nature of various waste products and how productions can be reduced.

Susan Perry of Eastern Carolina Legal Services, a public non-profit agency serving Nash, Edgecombe, Wilson, Wayne, Lenoir and Greene counties, said she sees greater citizen participation as a necessity in the process of finding a hazardous waste disposal site. She said one of her major concerns is that sites not be located near homes and workplaces of socio-economically disadvantaged people. She said she believes state enforcement of waste disposal needs to be stronger.

Ms. Perry proposed that the waste management board offer a workshop to help the media better understand the issue.

Randy Davis, director of the Historical Preservation Fund of Edgecombe County, said he believes the state should use its best experts to determine "the best site" for a hazardous waste disposal facility and "then work their way down to a suitable one."

He said he did not believe the decision should be analytical only. The public should have input, he said, but the starting point should be "the best site."

Phil Dixon, chairman of a recently formed Regional Waste Management Task Force for six eastern counties, said the need for the task force was recognized after the discussion of placing a waste disposal facility in Edgecombe. That situation, he said, pointed out the interrelatedness of adjacent counties in relation to waste disposal.

The task force, he said, was formed with the help of the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute and will soon be adding a fourth member from each of its component counties. The counties involved are Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe, Nash, Wilson and Halifax.

Two heads of subcommittees of the regional task force spoke. Mack Simpson, chairman of a quality of life subcommittee, said his sub-

ECU Participates In National Teleconference For Bentsen

By Clay Deanhardt
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Democratic vice presidential nominee Sen. Lloyd Bentsen continued his attacks on George Bush and Dan Quayle in a national college teleconference shown Thursday at East Carolina University.

ECU was one of 21 universities nationwide to take part in the teleconference, which was broadcast live to 12 states from Corpus Christi University in Corpus Christi, Texas. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was the only other school in the state to have access to the event.

Responding to questions from a studio audience and from students at several of the participating universities, Bentsen tried to dismiss what he called the distortions of the Bush campaign on Michael Dukakis's record.

"I'm going to answer these negative ads as soon as they've been made," Bentsen said.

He said a recent Bush ad portraying Dukakis as weak on defense is "an outrageous misrepresentation," noting that he and the governor of Massachusetts both support anti-tank weapons, modernization of conventional arms and further production of several nuclear defense systems.

Bentsen also took aim at Bush's charge that Dukakis wants to take guns away from the public.

"I wouldn't be on the ticket with a fella that was going to take my shotgun away from me," Bentsen said, drawing laughs from a partisan crowd of supporters in Corpus Christi. He added that Dukakis supports finding a way to keep handguns from convicted criminals and the insane.

Despite recent polls that show the Bush/Quayle ticket leading the race with less than three weeks left, Bentsen said he and Dukakis could still win. He recalled predictions of Harry Truman's loss and the committee has met only once so far, concerning itself with defining quality of life during that meeting.

Page Ayers said he heads a committee seeking to assemble all the latest technological information on waste disposal and rewrite it in words the layman can understand, then make this available to the public. He said he believes his committee will have something to present to the public by February.

Mary Alsentzer, president of the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County, offered the League's support in getting out information to the public about waste disposal issues.

Board members and staffers told of their efforts to get the word out to the public through appearances at various public meetings not only about disposal, but about pollution prevention.

Chicago Tribune headline prematurely declaring Thomas Dewey the winner.

ECU's Bill Carroll, president of the ECU/College Democrats, gave Bentsen an opportunity to talk about the economy when he asked what the Democratic ticket offered to graduating college students that the Republican ticket did not.

Bentsen said the most important thing Dukakis could do would be to stabilize the economy. He said the government should be more involved in promoting research and technological development to create new markets for American goods.

Discussing the advances made by Japanese and European businesses, Bentsen said often these businesses formed a government-aided consortium to develop new products and new markets. Bentsen said the U.S. needed to plant some seed money into new product research by both private and public interests.

"Do we think any one of our companies can take on that consortium by themselves?" he asked.

Bentsen also repeated a recurring campaign theme of opening foreign countries to trade for American businesses. He said the first step in getting the budget deficit under control is bringing down rapidly increasing trade deficits.

At home, Dukakis would work to solve the homeless problem employing many of the methods he used in Massachusetts, Bentsen said. Those methods included renovating unused federal buildings and making low-cost housing more available, he said.

Tying economy and defense issues together, Bentsen said the U.S. spends 6.5 percent of its gross domestic production in defense, including American defenses of foreign nations. In contrast, he said, Japan is spending only 1 percent of its GDP to defend its country.

"They ought to be picking up the tab," he said, since they are the second largest economic power in the world.

Bentsen said it made no sense to have to borrow money from foreign investors by selling American securities to finance the defense of those countries.

Bentsen's remarks, frequently interrupted by applause from his studio audience, met with a smattering of applause in Greenville, where fewer than 30 students attended the teleconference. Carroll blamed the small crowd on the students' recent return from fall break, saying organizers had little time for publicity.

State Sen. Harold Hardison of Lenoir County opened the local presentation telling the crowd not to be misled by campaign rhetoric.

"You busy yourself to find out what the true facts really are," he said. "Don't be misled by a lot of this frivolity that's going on with the campaign. Look at the people. Look at the issues."

Also speaking during the teleconference were Jesse Jackson and Sen. Albert Gore, former candidates for the Democratic nomination now campaigning for the Dukakis ticket.

Both called for strong Democratic support for the ticket, with Jackson saying it was time for the "analysts to become activists" and get the vote out. The two were coordinating the teleconference at Memphis State University in Gore's home state of Tennessee.

Analysts Say RJR Nabisco Officials Eye Takeover

By John A. Bolt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The surprise announcement that a group of RJR Nabisco Inc. executives are pondering taking the company private in a record $17 billion leveraged buyout probably is an effort to protect the company from outside suitors, according to industry analysts.

Meanwhile the company, which makes such products as Winston and Camel cigarettes, Oreo cookies and Ritz crackers, said its earnings climbed 10.9 percent in the third quarter as it sold $4.16 billion worth of tobacco and food products.

The announcement Wednesday that a group led by President F. Ross Johnson is mulling a $75-per-share offer for the food and tobacco giant sent the stock price up by 38.3 percent — from $55.87 1/2 to $77.25 — and analysts said it will go higher.

Neal Kaplan, an analyst with Interstate-Johnson Lane in Charlotte, N.C., called the proposal "a pre-emptive strike" to ward off other takeovers.

The food industry has been awash with takeover bids of late. On Monday, Philip Morris Cos. Inc. offered to buy processed foods manufacturer Kraft Inc. for $11 billion and Tuesday, Pillsbury Co. rejected a $5.23 billion bid from the British firm Grand Metropolitan PLC.

Kaplan said RJR Nabisco "may be recognizing that others may be looking at them." At the same time, he said, RJR sees Philip Morris paying "20-odd times earnings for Kraft and says we can spend all our money and buy ourselves which we know is good."

He said the proposal is a continuation of RJR's strategy of buying back its own stock, which has reduced outstanding shares from 247 million at the end of 1987 to about 225 million on July 31.

While some analysts suggested a buyout would have to reach at least $85 a share to be successful, Kaplan said a $75-per-share "looks like a darn good number."

At that level, he said, the company could pay off the new debt through revenues, a strategy that would be more difficult at a higher price.

In a leveraged buyout, the buyer borrows the money to buy the company, then pays off the debt either through company revenue or selling off parts of the operation.

"Valuing Nabisco, as a food company and discounting the tobacco operation, I arrive at a value somewhere between $85 and $90" a share, said Pavlos Alexandrakis, an analyst with Argus Research Corp. in New York.

"I'm telling our clients to hold on to the stocks. I think something else is going to happen," he said.

Lawrence Adelman, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said the deal was an indication of how undervalued RJR Nabisco's stock was, having been driven lower by worries over recent tobacco liability lawsuits.

But Adelman said investors currently are paying more attention to companies' ability to generate cash rather than provide earnings, and that makes companies with undervalued stocks especially attractive.

He said RJR Nabisco's stock should trade at between $90 and $100 a share, and said Johnson "is trying to steal the company" at $75 a share.

Thursday's announcement moved Standard & Poor's

Corp., the credit rating service, to place RJR Nabisco on its "creditwatch" list because "such a deal would severely weaken the firm's balance sheet."

The announcement said Johnson and Edward A. Horrigan Jr., chief executive of the company's tobacco business, had notified the firm they "intend to seek to develop, with a financial partner, a proposal to acquire RJR Nabisco in a leveraged buyout merger transaction."

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. said it was advising the management group and would provide equity and financing for the deal.

On the other side, a committee of outside directors, headed by Chairman Charles E. Hugel, has been established to review the offer "as well as any other acquisition interest that may be presented." The committee has retained investment bankers Dillon Read & Co. Inc. and Lazard Freres & Co. Inc. to advise it.

If the deal were completed, it would be the biggest leveraged buyout of an American corporation by far, surpassing the $6.1 billion buyout of Beatrice Cos. by an investment group led by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. in 1986.

It also would surpass the biggest corporate acquisition, the $13.4 billion purchase of Gulf Corp. by Chevron Corp. in 1984.

In the quarter ended Sept. 30, RJR Nabisco said it earned $355 million, or $1.55 per share, on sales of $4.16 billion, compared to $320 million, or $1.24 per share, on sales of $3.84 billion in the same quarter last year.

Income from tobacco operations was $497 million in the quarter on sales of $1.78 billion, while food income accounted for $276 million on $2.38 billion in sales.

For the first nine months of the year, the company said it earned $982 million, or $4.14 a share, up 17 percent from $839 million, or $3.24 a share, in the same period a year earlier. Sales for the first three quarters rose to $12.2 billion from $11.3 billion.

RJR Nabisco was formed when the tobacco company R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. bought Nabisco Brands Inc., the food and consumer products giant, for $4.9 billion in 1985.

Johnson came to the conglomerate from Nabisco and last year shifted the company's headquarters from Winston-Salem, N.C., to Atlanta in a move seen as an attempt to distance the company from its tobacco beginnings.

The company's products are some of the best-known in the country, and also include Salem cigarettes, Lorna Doone and Mallomar cookies, Chuckles and Junior Mints candy, Del Monte vegetables and Milk-Bone dog biscuits.

It is currently test-marketing a smokeless cigarette, Premier.

In 1987, RJR Nabisco had profits of $1.18 billion on sales of $15.77 billion. That level of sales would make RJR Nabisco the third largest privately held company in the country according to Forbes magazine, behind Cargill, a commodity trading company, and Safeway Stores Inc., the grocery chain.

Earlier this year, the company announced a reorganization of its food business, separating its biscuit and grocery foods divisions into two free-standing operating companies. RJR Nabisco said the move would make it more responsive to changes in the marketplace.

In the past few years, the company has sold off divisions, including Kentucky Fried Chicken, that did not fit with its long-range plans.

Sign Fees

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Weaver's ordinance requiring homeowners to pay a fee to display political signs in their yards may be unconstitutional, law professors say.

Having residents buy a $10 permit may violate the right to freedom of speech, constitutional law instructors at Duke University and UNC-Chapel Hill said Thursday.

"You cannot sell the First Amendment," said Daniel Pollitt, a constitutional law professor at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Morgan says he did not release a list of the home addresses of SBI agents used to promote a fund-raiser for Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

Releasing the addresses is both a violation of SBI policy and the state's personnel law.

A former assistant director at the SBI, Troy K. Green, said he obtained the home addresses of agents and cadets at the N.C. Justice Academy to solicit campaign contributions for Thornburg. Green said Morgan's secretary gave him the list in July of this year after he talked with Morgan about the plan.

Fall Colors

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Lodging is in short supply around Asheville this weekend, with virtually every hotel-motel room in the area claimed by tourists in town for the exploding fall foliage.

With colors reaching their peak in many areas, only about 20 of the 4,500 hotel-motel rooms in Buncombe County were still available Thursday, said Don Tomlinson of the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce.

Tourists who can't find a room in Asheville may have to go elsewhere because there are apparently no plans to open overnight emergency shelters, according to Jerry VeHaun, Buncombe County's coordinator of Emergency Management.

Furniture Mart

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Consumers are still buying furniture, but they are buying less of it than they did in the boom years of the mid-1980s, analysts said as the fall market of the International Home Furnishings Center opened.

The more than 40,000 buyers and company representatives jamming the showrooms and streets of High Point this year seem to be interested in the status quo when it comes to furniture design. But some are saying a certain stodginess has set into the market this year.

RJR Tobacco Workers Skeptical

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Many workers in the tobacco division at RJR Nabisco were shocked by and skeptical of an announcement that top managers want to buy out the company, but Gov. Jim Martin says he expects the change to be positive.

"Mr. Horrigan has advised me that their intention is to strengthen the position of their worldwide tobacco business in Winston-Salem," Martin said, referring to Edward Horrigan, one of the top officials of RJR Nabisco who announced Thursday that they were considering making a $17 billion buyout offer for the company.

"Mr. Horrigan further assured me that the construction of the Nabisco cookie plant at Garner will continue as planned. Mr. Horrigan expressed confidence in the future of tobacco worldwide and in the future of RJR in North Carolina," Martin said in a statement issued from Charleston, S.C., where he was attending a meeting.

Company employees were notified of the plans at 1 p.m. Thursday, said RJR Nabisco spokeswoman Betsy Anness.

"I'd hate to see it happen," said Carol Jessup, who has been with the company for 15 years. "Most of the time when these things happen, it turns out for the worse."

Reynolds Tobacco employs more than 14,000 people in its Winston-Salem cigarette operations. Many of those employees still have vivid memories of the company's controversial move of its headquarters to Atlanta.

"I don't know what to think," said Jim Coleman, who has worked in the data processing department of the tobacco division for 10 years. "It concerns me."

"I think it's awful," said Delores Romesburg, whose husband has been with the company for 16 years.

"I still don't know if he's heard about it yet."

The news of the buyout offer spread quickly in the streets of downtown Winston-Salem.

Diane Blakey, who works in the trading department at First Wachovia Bank, wondered aloud how the two executives were able to piece together a $17 billion offer.

"Where are they going to get all of that money?" she said. "They must have Donald Trump behind this."

Her companion, Opal Henigan, who also works at First Wachovia, said he felt the employees had a right to be concerned about their future.

Video Points Out Choices Available To Schools Based On Funding Plans

DURHAM (AP) — Students at Northern High School in Durham County can enroll in art, drama, dance and music, take advanced courses in English and math, and visit a library with 26,000 books.

But students at Northampton High School West are offered no drama, dance or music, no advanced courses, and have a library with only 2,000 books — half the minimum set by the state. The only reason they have an art class is because Judith Shepherd offered to teach it during her planning period.

These are some of the discrepancies caused by funding inequities between the two high schools, as portrayed in a video produced by the Atlantic Center for Research in Education.

"I want to go into architecture," a female student from Northampton High West says in the video. "But really I am afraid if I go to college, I've got a feeling I'm not going to do very well."

The video, called "No Other Choice," was produced by the non-profit state research group to illustrate the inequities between schools in affluent and poor counties across the state. It was shown at Durham City Hall Thursday afternoon.

Northampton High West serves 500 students in rural Northampton County, where 60 percent of the children live in poverty. The 2,000-student Northern High School is in an affluent area of Durham. The state gives both schools the same amount of money for each pupil, but there are sharp differences in the amount of local money the two schools receive.

With a $343 million tax base, Northampton is able to raise only half the money that Durham County can raise with its $7.2 billion tax base, according to the research center. That means Northampton must tax itself twice as much to raise the same amount of local money per student.

While the Basic Education Program is pumping more funds into all schools so they can add teachers and expand their course offerings, it is not narrowing the gap between rich schools and poor schools, said Page McCullough, who helped produce the video.

"The way it is going right now, these problems are not going to go away," Ms. McCullough said Thursday in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh.

The video shows that while Northern High School has its own presses to produce a student newspaper, Northampton High West has only seven textbooks for its 12 journalism students.

Both schools are crowded, but Northern has newer, better-maintained buildings and trailers. Northampton students complain of broken toilets, leaking roofs and broken heaters.

One thing the video does not show is how the discrepancy affects student achievement. One indicator, test scores on the 1988 California Achievement Test, suggest students in the poorer county do not learn as much.

Compared to a national average score of 50 on the reading, writing and math test, the average Durham County scores were 70 for third-graders, 69 for sixth-graders and 63 for eighth-graders.

By contrast, students in Northampton County scored 47 in grade three, 31 in grade six and 42 in grade eight.

Ms. McCullough said the research center hopes to show the video, which can be ordered for $25, to groups across the state.

Convictions

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh man with 33 drunken driving convictions and four more under appeal was released on bond from the Wake County Jail this week after being arrested once again for drunken driving, officials say.

Otis Donald Wadford, 52, was released Monday when he posted a $1,000 bond in Wake County District Court after his arrest that afternoon.

The arrest came while he was free on a previous bond pending his appeal of four drunken driving convictions last month.

Wake District Attorney C. Colon Willoughby Jr. said lawmakers may want to consider changes in the bond law in light of Wadford's situation. Bond can be denied to a criminal defendant only in first-degree murder cases in which the death penalty is being sought.

NAACP Challenges Licenses At 29 Stations

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The state NAACP says it may challenge the renewal of broadcast licenses for as many as 29 North Carolina radio stations for failure to hire women and minorities.

In extreme cases, the FCC could decline to renew a station's license, forcing it off the air and rendering it worthless to its owners. In a market the size of Charlotte, an FM station sells for $7 million to $10 million.

Even if a challenge fails, it can be costly for a station.

"In 1974, we challenged WBAL-TV in Baltimore," said Dennis Schatzman, executive director of the N.C.

Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "It ended up costing them $250,000 — and that was in 1974 dollars."

The potential challenges were announced Thursday by David Honig, general counsel to the Maryland Conference of the NAACP and to the National Black Media Coalition, an organization of owners of black-owned radio and TV stations.

Honig spoke on license challenges before the 45th annual convention of the N.C. Conference of the NAACP. The convention continues in Statesville today and Saturday.

The NAACP took no specific action on Honig's report.

Allen Dick, general manager and vice president of WKRR, one of the stations mentioned by the NAACP, said his station has made a specific effort to recruit women and minorities.

Of the station's 15 full-time employees, six are women, Dick said.

The station has had less success hiring blacks, Dick said.

"I have solicited and interviewed but we have no black employees,"

Dick said. "It's not from the lack of trying."

Dick said as the 3-year-old station grows and expands, the opportunity for minority employment will increase.

"We'll give an interview to any one — black, white or Indian," Dick said. "If anyone is interested, send us a resume."

Customs Agents Seize Own Shipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of patches to be worn by U.S. Customs Service employees commemorating the agency's 200th anniversary were seized by the department's own inspectors as an illegal shipment.

The shipment of 5,000 patches was seized Thursday at a Peace Bridge warehouse in Buffalo, N.Y., after agents noticed that the packages violated federal regulations requiring a label specifying the country of origin, said Robert Tobias, president of the National Treasury Employees Union.

"It was then that our members, the inspectors, saw that the packages contained Customs patches made outside the U.S. being shipped from Canada," said Tobias, whose union represents some 13,000 Customs Service employees.

Commissioner William van Raab had ordered the patches earlier this year and issued directives that they be sewn on every Custom employee's uniform to commemorate the agency's 1989 bicentennial, Tobias said.

"We have buy-in-America in all our contracts and this contractor inadvertently had some of the patches made in Toronto rather than Buffalo," said George King, a union spokesman. "The inspector who found it, doing his job, just happens to be the president of the union local up there."

David Hoover, a Customs Service spokesman, said a contractor, not the agency, imported the items. He described the incident as "a funny little story."

But Tobias didn't see it that way. "This is perhaps the most unpatriotic and stupid blunder the commissioner has made in his blunder-ridden tenure as head of the agency," he said.

Food Costs Rise As Fuel Prices Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rekindling of higher food costs brought on by the drought sent retail prices up 0.3 percent last month, the Labor Department said today. Nearly balancing the steeper grocery prices was the sharpest drop in gasoline costs since February.

The overall consumer price rise was considered moderate and was down a notch from the 0.4 percent rises of July and August. The good news was that gasoline prices dropped 1.7 percent; the bad news was that food prices rose 0.8 percent.

More significant than any of those numbers for some 38.4 million Americans was the effect today's report will have on their Social Security checks beginning in January. Those checks will be up 4.0 percent — or $21 a month for the average recipient. That will be the second highest boost in the last 6 1/2 years.

Breaking down the new report, the department said two components — food and clothing — accounted for 70 percent of the September increase.

On grocery store shelves, consumers saw fruit and vegetable prices climb 4.5 percent, with most of that reflecting residual effects from the summer's drought.

Also rising were beef prices, up 1.1 percent, and poultry prices, up 1.3 percent. Poultry is now 23.7 percent more costly than at the beginning of 1988.

The overall gain in food prices was up dramatically from a 0.5 percent August advance.

Helicopter gives tow to ice-breaking barge en route to whales

Rescuers To Try Breaking Ice Cap To Release Whales

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Rescuers frustrated by a delayed icebreaking barge opted for a new plan to free three trapped whales: using a helicopter to drop a 4 1/2-ton concrete slab that could punch a trail through foot-thick ice today.

"A large, wide lead has opened four miles from the whales. That's the closest open water there's been yet," Ron Morris of the National Marine Fisheries Service said Thursday. "I just want to take advantage of the situation."

Weather forecasts indicated that favorable winds would shift over the weekend, probably shutting the pathways through the ice, Morris said. Officials said they planned to have a giant Alaska Army National Guard Skycrane helicopter lift the concrete "crusher" — left over from the construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline — at first light today. The trip was expected to take about two hours.

The Guard has not abandoned its effort to tow the 185-ton "hover-barge" 230 miles to Barrow. But the two Guard Skycranes that towed the barge Thursday have managed to move it just six miles from the dock at Prudhoe Bay in two days.

The tow was to have begun Monday, but was stymied by sub-zero temperatures, darkness, mud, fueling and too much weight. And after those problems were solved, the helicopters found the going tough in the shallow, muddy bay just outside the oil field.

By nightfall Thursday, a desolate stretch of more than 224 miles remained between the barge and the whales.

The California gray whales, whose species is endangered, were trapped during their annual migration about 100 yards off the treeless Arctic Ocean coast more than two weeks ago by the constantly shifting ice pack. They have been breathing through small air holes about 18 miles northeast of this Inupiat Eskimo village.

Volunteers have been using ice picks, chain saws and de-icers donated by a Minnesota family business to enlarge the two original holes and punch new ones in the ice.

A new breathing hole was cut Thursday and a tarp was placed over the largest of the original holes, said biologist Geoff Carroll of the North Slope Borough.

"The whales came up in a hole they've never used before. That's the first significant progress we've made in moving them, so I think we'll go full bore on it," Carroll said as he headed for another all-night vigil on the ice.

The rescuers have recordings of killer whale calls and gray whale mating calls to scare or lure the trapped whales toward the open sea.

The animals don't seem to be as lethargic as they were earlier this week, Morris said. "They look nice," he said. "I have hope that the whales will be around when we try to break through."

Even though the whales have been trapped for more than two weeks, Morris still believes they have a 50-50 chance of making it to their winter feeding grounds in the warm waters off Southern California and Mexico.

Biologists named the whales Bonnet, Crossbeak and Bone — the latter having much of its snout scraped away by the ice. Eskimos have given them their own names: Siku (Ice), Putu (Icehole) and Kanik (Snowflake).

At a news conference Thursday, North Slope Borough Acting Mayor Warren Matumeak said the borough is committed to freeing the animals, even though Barrow is a whaling village.

Gray whales are not normally harvested by the villagers, who rely instead mostly on bowhead whales.

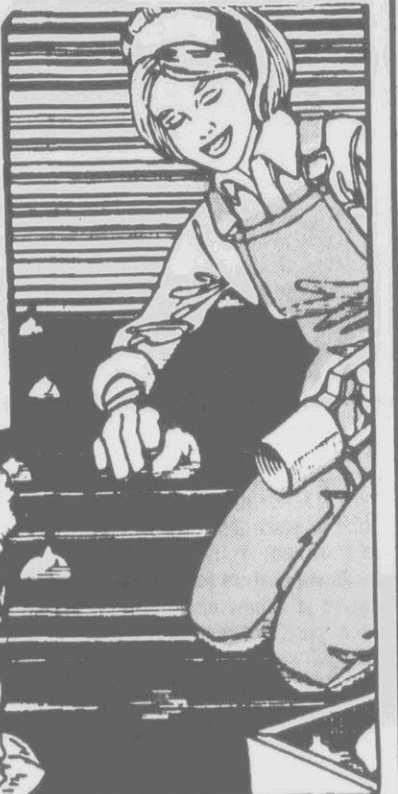

"No one has more respect for our native animals than the local hunters, and we only take what we need to put food on our tables," Matumeak said.

Fall is for planting

Why plant in Oct.-Nov.?

With cooler fall temperatures, the roots of plants grow faster than their leaves in the still-warm soil, so a GOOD ROOT SYSTEM is established for maximum spring growth and bloom.

Soviets May Allow Sakharov U.S. Visit

MOSCOW (AP) — Human rights activist Andrei D. Sakharov said today he wants to leave the Soviet Union for the first time to attend a conference in the United States and that the Kremlin may grant him permission.

Granting Sakharov, father of the Soviet dissident movement, a visa to travel abroad would be a dramatic gesture to show the liberalization of restrictions under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

In another sign of his return to good graces of Soviet officials, Sakharov has been elected one of 47 members to the Presidium, the ruling body, of the prestigious Soviet Academy of Sciences, Tass reported Thursday.

An American organizer of the U.S. conference said the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize laureate is likely to receive permission to leave under a new decree from the Soviet Council of Ministers.

Sakharov said only that "the question is now being decided. All that you have heard about this is correct." He spoke in a brief telephone interview from his central Moscow apartment.

If final approval is given, Sakharov would go to the United States next month for a meeting of the International Foundation for the Survival and Development of Humanity, said group member Edward Hodgman.

Sakharov has been invited to many countries but has never been allowed to travel to the West because Soviet officials say he had access to state secrets while working as a physicist on the Soviet hydrogen bomb.

He has spoken out repeatedly for free emigration and protested Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. For his human rights activities, he was awarded the Nobel Prize but was not allowed to leave the country to accept the award.

Sakharov, 67, was exiled to the closed city of Gorky in 1980 and released in December 1986 by Soviet authorities under Gorbachev's campaign for openness.

If he is granted permission to travel abroad, it could create problems for the Kremlin because hundreds of Soviets have been denied such permission on grounds they know state secrets.

Sakharov is a member of the board of the foundation, as are prominent Soviet scientists such as Yevgeny Velikhov and Roald Sagdeyev.

Hodgman released the text of an Oct. 5 decree by the Council of Ministers directing the Foreign Ministry to "provide members of the Board of Directors and other official representatives of the foundation and their family members multiple entrance and exit visas for terms of up to two years."

Sakharov has been invited to attend the foundation's board meeting in Washington on Nov. 15-16, as well as southern California, San Francisco, Boston, New York and possibly Chicago, Hodgman said.

Hodgman said he met Thursday with Sakharov and that the human rights activist had not yet formally applied for an exit visa, but "it's pretty clear that Sakharov should get a visa."

The Moscow-based International Foundation for the Survival and Development of Humanity is a non-profit philanthropic organization set up last year to help solve environmental, human rights, disarmament and economic development problems.

Japan Hovers On The Brink

WWII Constitution On Way Out

By William Sexton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TOKYO — When Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Allied forces imposed a Western-style constitution on Japan after World War II, many people on both sides of the Pacific predicted that Emperor Hirohito would be the last Japanese monarch.

But instead of the world's longest-surviving dynasty expiring with Hirohito, who is 87 years old and gravely ill with cancer, it is the so-called "MacArthur constitution" whose future is now in doubt. The 1946 document removed the emperor as chief of state and "forever" prohibited Japan from taking arms. Now, its supporters fear that the installation of a new emperor will inspire a push to rewrite the document.

Although most Japanese accept that the end of Hirohito's reign is drawing near, the monarchy appears to have a stronger hold on national sentiment than at any time in many years. Crown Prince Akihito, 54, has already taken over the emperor's state duties, and preparations are quietly under way for his eventual coronation following ancient religious rituals some Japanese believe violate the 1946 constitution.

Within the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, meanwhile, responsible senior politicians have begun to talk privately of framing a new constitution as soon as practical after the new reign begins.

In particular, they want to normalize the status of Japan's so-called "Self-Defense Force," which has become one of the larger military establishments in the free world, unashamedly deployed to counter nearby Soviet naval and air concentrations — and with Washington's full approval. The force is technically unconstitutional under the 1946 document.

The politicians also want to restore the emperor's status as chief of state rather than merely the national "symbol."

The extreme right, which enjoys little support, even speaks of removing the constitutional ban on nuclear weapons. One of the rightists, author Hideaki Kase, said recently that Hirohito's passing would free Japan from the shadow of defeat and open the door to a rewritten constitution.

A prominent Protestant, the Rev. Masahiro Tomura, has warned that in the excitement of a new reign, public opinion could swing against the MacArthur constitution "and two or three years may bring a wholesale revision of its principles." He termed such a development "very likely" given the Japanese media's current preoccupation with the monarchy.

Even if Akihito wanted to preserve the democratic constitution, he might not necessarily prevail, Tomura told the Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan earlier this month.

"To those who are supportive of the emperor system, the most important thing is preservation of that system," he said.

Tomura, a minister of the United Churches of Christ, Japan's largest Protestant denomination with 200,000 members, has for 20 years been a leader in the campaign to defend democratic reform against rightist revisionism.

During the five years that Yasuhiro Nakasone, the former prime minister, was in office, he spoke frequently of "settling post-war accounts," by which he meant scrapping the MacArthur constitution, but he never deemed political conditions ready.

The Associated Press

Nakasone's successor, incumbent chief executive Noboru Takeshita, has already moved to settle one account in connection with the impending imperial succession. Authoritative reports say that the Takeshita Cabinet has agreed to foot the sizable bill for the Shinto religion's ornate ceremonies installing the new emperor.

To strict constructionists, government funding of the primarily religious observances would violate the constitution's American-style separation of church and state. In the words of Article 20, "No religious organization shall receive any privileges from the state nor exercise any political authority."

Now, while the emperor lies ill, the lines between those who oppose the monarchy and those who support it are being drawn. In Okinawa, opposition members of the prefectural assembly disrupted its session after Gov. Junji Nishime referred to the illness of the "head of state." Legislators from the Japan Communist Party demanded that he retract the wording, Nishime refused.

Hirohito "may not be the head of state in the sense of title but he is certainly the equivalent as the symbol of the unity of the people of Japan," the governor said.

Serbs Demand New Provincial Leaders

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Angered by the communist leadership's refusal to overhaul the party power structure, thousands of Serbs rally in a restive province and demand the ouster of provincial leaders.

Chanting "Thieves" and "You betrayed the people," a jeering crowd of 5,000 people turned their backs Thursday on two members of the ruling national Politburo who came to the province of Kosovo to respond to Serbian grievances.

The flag-waving crowd gathered in a suburb of Kosovo's capital, Pristina, but protesters mostly ignored the remarks by Politburo members Marko Orlandic and Kacusa Jasari, who also heads Kosovo's Communist Party.

After trying to placate the crowd for an hour, the two senior party officials eventually were hustled away under police escort when some Serbs tried to rush toward them.

Later Thursday, a nearby rally of more than 20,000 Serbs demanded the ouster within five days of the entire party leadership in Kosovo, an ancient Serbian heartland bordering Albania and dominated by ethnic Albanians.

Kosovo is one of two autonomous provinces over which Serbia, the largest of six national republics, has some control. Serb nationalists are angry at what they see as a blow to their drive for increased control by Serbia over Kosovo, where Serbs claim discrimination by ethnic Albanians.

The setback came Wednesday when Dusan Krcbic, a Serbian Communist closely identified with Serbian party leader Slobodan Milosevic, failed to win a secret confidence vote at the end of a three-day session of the party's policy-making Central Committee. Krcbic has offered to resign, but Milosevic says he needs Serbian approval to do so.

State Says U.S. Will Keep Troops In Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior State Department official says the United States has no plans to withdraw troops from South Korea even though President Reagan says it might be possible to reduce the U.S. military presence there.

"We have no intention of anything of that sort," Gaston Sigur, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, told reporters Thursday after Reagan met with South Korean President Roh Tae-woo.

"We would have to have a firm belief on the part of our country and the Republic of Korea that the threat from North Korea was over," Sigur said. "That threat is not over. We have certainly no intention of changing our policy of maintaining our ground forces in South Korea."

The president, posing for pictures with Roh in the Rose Garden, was asked by a reporter if he could "envision a time in the near future when the U.S. would be reducing its military presence."

"That is a possibility, but it would not be one of us just withdrawing — it would be one of (being) no longer needed," Reagan said.

The United States has about 42,000 troops stationed in South Korea under a mutual defense pact.

Sigur said the two presidents did not discuss the subject of troop reduction. He said Reagan told Roh that the United States "fully supports" his proposals to bring about "a new atmosphere of reconciliation on the Korean peninsula."

The two presidents discussed several steps the United States is considering, Sigur said, adding that those steps would be announced "within the next few days or so."

He said these steps would not include lifting a U.S. ban on trade with North Korea, but could include "humanitarian trade ... humanitarian aspects of relationships." He declined to elaborate.

Sigur said U.S. officials "feel comfortable" with Roh's proposal for a six-power conference including the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Japan and North and South Korea.

"This is his initiative and it's his to pursue," the State Department official said. "As I say, we can see some merit in it, but we have no intention of pushing it at this time."

As the visiting presidential party entered the White House, the clashing of cymbals and beating of drums from an anti-Roh demonstration in Lafayette Park, across Pennsylvania Avenue, could be heard. The demonstrators chanted "Roh Tae-woo, Out, Out, Out. U.S. Troops, Out, Out, Out."

Soviets Name New Interior Minister

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leaders have appointed a new interior minister and named the head of an official news agency as director of the Communist Party's newly organized foreign policy department.

The television news program "Vremya" reported that the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the nation's executive body, on Thursday named Vadim V. Bakatin as interior minister, the nation's top policeman.

He succeeds Alexander V. Vlasov, who was made an alternate, or non-voting, member of the party's ruling Politburo and premier of the Russian republic in a major Kremlin shake-up Sept. 30.

Officials also announced on Thursday that the head of the government news agency Novosti, Valentin M. Falin, 62, has been elevated to a new foreign policy post in the party apparatus.

The job combines the responsibilities of two formerly separate posts held by Anatoly F. Dobrynin and Vadim A. Medvedev.

Falin will head the newly reorganized International Department of the party's policy-making Central Committee, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov told reporters at a government briefing.

Bakatin assumes control of the vast national apparatus of the uniformed police at a time when state-run media are issuing franker reports about violent crime and the Criminal Code is being redrafted.

He will also be in charge of Soviet criminal investigators and of special military units, called interior troops, charged with keeping order within the country.

Bakatin served as party first secretary in the Kemerovo region of Siberia, east of Novosibirsk. He has been a member of the party's policy-making Central Committee since March 1986.

Falin served as Soviet ambassador to West Germany in 1971-1978 and was appointed chairman of Novosti on March 10, 1986.

His departure left both official Soviet news agencies without a chief. Sergei A. Losev, director of Tass, died this month. His successor has not been named, and Gerasimov said Falin's old job was now open.

The International Department, previously headed by Dobrynin, was responsible for relations with non-ruling Communist parties and overall foreign policy. A separate Central Committee office dealt with ruling Communist parties abroad.

The two departments have been combined and the overall title is the International Department, another Foreign Ministry spokesman, Yuri A. Gremitskikh, said later in an interview.

Gerasimov said Falin will report to Alexander N. Yakovlev, a key ally of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Yakovlev was named in the Kremlin shake-up to head a new foreign affairs commission of the Central Committee.

Dobrynin, a former longtime Soviet ambassador in Washington, was retired at that time and Medvedev was elevated to the Politburo and put in charge of ideology.

U.S. Pays $28.8 Million To U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States has paid $28.8 million in back dues, but a U.N. spokesman says the American government still owes the United Nations $570 million.

The United States has withheld payments to try to force the United Nations to adopt budgetary and administrative reforms.

President Reagan announced Sept. 13 he was satisfied with progress on the reforms and approved the release of $188 million — $44 million for the last fiscal year and $144 million for the one beginning Oct. 1.

Two other payments have been made since Reagan's announcement — $15.2 million in September and $85.6 million Oct. 14.

That leaves $58.4 million still outstanding of the amount Washington has promised, and more than $500 million more in back payments, including those designated for the peacekeeping missions and specialized agencies.

The General Assembly's fiscal committee is to take up the budget issue in December. A subcommittee recommended the austerity budget, which also limits emergency spending, last month.

Fred Eckhard, the U.N. financial spokesman, has said timely payments by the United States are necessary if the organization is to pay for new peacekeeping operations in the Persian Gulf and possible missions in South-West Africa, Western Sahara and Cambodia.

School's nominee for the John Motley Morehead Award, which finances the recipient's undergraduate study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Five Students Chosen

Five students have been nominated by D.H. Conley High School for the 1988-89 John Motley Morehead Award. They are Cam Cox, Scott Claybrook, Charlene Davenport, Nicole McIntyre and Shannon O'Geary.

The award is a four-year full tuition scholarship to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The students will compete at the county level, and if successful, will advance to district competition then to the final competition in Chapel Hill.

Aycock Has Pep Rally

E.B. Aycock Junior High School sponsored an academic pep rally Thursday to honor students who have exhibited the best effort and most improved progress during the first marking period. Students participated in several games and cheers and were provided refreshments.

John Morris, a home economics teacher at Aycock, spoke to Pitt County Food Service employees Wednesday at a meeting at Greenville Middle School. He discussed the importance of good nutrition and eating well-balanced meals.

Officers Elected

Farmville Middle School has elected Student Council officers and representatives for the 1988-89 year. They are Leigh Messer, president; Angela Lewis, vice president; Suzanne Davis, secretary; Jaime Kowey, treasurer, and Misha Bullock, parliamentarian. Each homeroom also elected a representative and one alternate.

Class Makes Tours

Bell Holland's kindergarten class at Belvoir Elementary School toured a hospital, Harris' supermarket and McDonald's Tuesday. The visits were a culmination of a unit on community helpers.

She Helped World Hear The Voices At Gallaudet

By Ruthie Pipkin
GREENSBORO NEWS & RECORD

GREENSBORO — Six months after protesting deaf students prompted Greensboro's Elisabeth Ann Zinser to resign as president of their university in Washington, Ms. Zinser relishes a photo of their capitol-steps demonstrations that hangs on her living room wall.

She beams about her original copy of The Washington Times cartoon showing a mob of angry students from Gallaudet University, the only liberal arts university for the deaf, preparing to burn her, their new president, in effigy at the stake.

Friends accuse her of having a perverse sense of humor. Ms. Zinser said in a recent interview at her University of North Carolina at Greensboro office, where she's been vice chancellor for academic affairs since 1983.

Ms. Zinser sees no perversion. The 48-year-old educator likes remembering that she helped the world hear Gallaudet's silent students when they captured the campus and the media's attention in March with their demands that the 124-year-old school replace Ms. Zinser with its first deaf president.

'... I became an advocate for deaf people, and I am very proud'

—Elisabeth Zinser

She resigned after four days, realizing the movement had become a symbol of oppression for deaf people across the globe.

Back at UNC-Greensboro, from which she never resigned, Ms. Zinser said she's engrossed in her continued efforts to make her school prominent in the UNC system and feels the unexpected turmoil turned out for the best.

"I'm not saying I haven't felt a natural regret in not leading that institution," Ms. Zinser said. "I honestly feel a great sense of privilege in having been able to be a key figure in a moment in history for a population of people that will never be forgotten. I became an advocate for deaf people, and I am very proud."

Her explosive entrance and graceful exit have attracted the eyes of educators. Since returning to Greensboro, Ms. Zinser has received calls from the presidents of Cornell and Stanford universities, offering help whenever she might need it. Other university officials have asked if she might be willing to change locations.

Ms. Zinser admits that she won't stay at UNC-Greensboro forever, but says she's not shopping for a presidency. Even when Gallaudet officials called, she said she pondered for two weeks before agreeing to pursue the position.

"That's the only institution that could have interested me in leaving at this time," Ms. Zinser said. She had applied at Gallaudet in 1983 before coming to UNC-Greensboro and says she wanted to help unite the deaf with the hearing world.

She hoped to prove her empathy by being the first female president to take the stringent sign proficiency test required of all faculty, which entails communicating simultaneously through mouth and hand before a panel of deaf students and teachers.

Ms. Zinser never got that chance.

But, as a novice at signing, she showed her respect to deaf members of the Gallaudet search committee by incorporating some signs with her verbal answers during interviews.

That moved former student body president Tim Rarus, who supported the call for a deaf president, to tell Ms. Zinser not to worry. She had beautiful hands and would become a good signer.

Ms. Zinser used those hands after announcing her resignation, when she signed "I love you" to students, perhaps prompting some to see her as a person rather than the president whose image they had hung and burned during emotional protests.

"They're getting curious about me now," Ms. Zinser said. She's kept herself open, but distant. She doesn't want to lessen student joy over their first deaf president, Irving King Jordan Jr. But she celebrated with them by sending this telegram:

"I wish you the best on your day in the sun. My invitation to meet with the students — now as a friend — still stands."

Earlier, students had spurned her request for a series of meetings. Now, students and alumni have sought her out in Greensboro for articles and books they're writing about the dramatic event's impact on the deaf culture.

Ms. Zinser, using an interpreter, also has addressed and fielded questions from the North Carolina Gallaudet alumni chapter. A tense moment came when they asked her — twice — if she would consider serving Gallaudet as its president in the future.

Their sentiment moved her. Their persistence rattled her. She brushed it off with a joke that she'd be retired by then.

But in the safe confines of her office, she admitted, "I no longer desire to be president there."

She says she's confident Jordan can serve Gallaudet students as role model and president. But she hasn't cut her ties.

"There is a bond between myself and that community," she said. "When people say I was in the wrong place at the wrong time, I say 'Nah. I was in the right place at the right time.' I was able in a few days to make a contribution far more deeper. That was to the understanding and appreciation of deaf culture and deaf people on the part of our society. I've already had a chance to make a difference."

Split May Boost Givens' Career

'She's Hot Now,' One Hollywood Publicist Says

By Nikki Finke
LAT/ WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Before Robin Givens married Mike Tyson, she was young, beautiful and a not-very-well-known actress hoping to parlay a sitcom role into stardom.

Now that Givens and Tyson are divorcing amid a maelstrom of media frenzy, she is young, beautiful and a figure of national notoriety. But what has that done to her career?

On Wednesday, another chapter in the Givens-Tyson soap opera played out when Givens, through her lawyer Raoul Felder, announced that she was giving up claim to Tyson's millions. Immediately, Tyson's attorney, Howard Weitzman, suggested that Givens made the decision only because she knew a trial would have been damaging to her professional future.

Have stories portraying her, variously, from a gold-digging Svengali to a victimized battered wife already scared away producers, casting directors and deal-makers? Or has Givens' new-found fame made her such a hot property that what the public thinks about her personal life does not matter?

"She's hot now and no matter what she does — as long as what she does hits the front pages — she'll always be hot," says veteran Hollywood publicist Lee Solters.

Triad Artists' agency co-founder Rick Ray doubts that negative publicity over the divorce will have a long-term effect on Givens' career, but her renouncement of Tyson's money was "a lovely gesture whose whole purpose may have been to establish firmly that she is a decent human being."

It is too early to tell whether the divorce brouhaha will affect the ratings of Givens' Wednesday night ABC sitcom "Head of the Class." Early figures suggested that this week's season debut — opposite NBC's World Series — performed a bit better than last year's average show, but an ABC spokesman insists that the matrimonial saga "hasn't affected the show in any way, shape or form."

But Michael Elias, the co-executive producer of "Head of the Class," acknowledges, "we know we have gotten a lot of publicity. I have friends who say I read about your show every day — in the sports pages. It would be naive for me to claim there's no Robin Givens factor."

Elias thinks that it is "great" that Givens has renounced Tyson's money. "I really think that will help her image."

Though Givens was booed when she was introduced at her husband's Atlantic City title fight with Michael Spinks, not everyone appears to be taking sides. Elias says that the audience at the show's taping Friday reacted to her "the same as to any other cast member. No booing. No hissing."

"Besides," Elias says, "divorce is not a crime against humanity."

Many celebrities have endured notorious episodes in their personal lives and still had successful careers. What distinguishes the rocky Givens-Tyson marriage from others is the remarkable way it has been played out in the media — from the supermarket tabloids to the network newscasts. Instead of going to a marriage counselor, the couple went to Barbara Walters, figuratively at least.

To help her image, Givens this week hired New York power publicist Howard J. Rubenstein.

But press agent Solters sees the Givens case as a "challenge" for a publicist: "Intentionally or unintentionally, I don't think this has made her look good. But right now I don't think that her career is in danger at all."

In the meantime, he says, Givens has to "bite the bullet" and hope that "talent will out."

Parents' Bed No Place For Toddler

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after Julie was born, I started taking her into my bed to breast-feed her. I had fully intended to put her back in her own crib when she was finished, but after a week or two, I found myself falling asleep with her, and when she would wake up, I would be right there. It was convenient, and I admit I enjoyed the security of having her next to me, as my husband was working the graveyard shift.

However, when my husband started working days, Julie was not used to sleeping alone, so she cried until I took her into our bed. When she was 10 months old, I weaned her to a bottle.

Abby, she's 2 1/2 years old now, and she's still sleeping with us! It is ruining our marriage, but I just don't know what to do. I can't force her to sleep in her own room because she's afraid to sleep alone. I've tried everything, I guess I'm just a marshmallow. Please help. —GINA IN LAYTON, UTAH

DEAR GINA: Place a night-light in Julie's bedroom and explain lovingly but firmly that she must sleep in her room — and not in yours. For "company," let her take her favorite cuddly doll or toy animal to cradle in her arms.

Dear Abby

You can expect her to cry and fuss at first, but don't back down. When she realizes that she may no longer sleep with you, she will accept it.

DEAR ABBY: Everyone is talking about the possibility of a serious water shortage in this country. I have a suggestion that could help.

If most people are like me, they let the water run while they brush their teeth. Today, I closed the drain to see how much water I was wasting. The sink filled twice before I finished brushing (about two gallons).

Perhaps most people would waste only one gallon per brushing. However, if 200 million people brush their teeth twice a day, wasting only one gallon of water each time, that's 400 million gallons of water going "down the drain" daily. Multiply that by 365 days a year, and we have lost 146 billion gallons yearly!

Abby, if people would shut off the water while brushing their teeth, think of all the water we could save. — J. TYREE, HUNTINGTON BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR J. TYREE: You gave us something to think about. It's said, "You never miss the water till the well runs dry." Why wait until then? Readers, it's worth a shot, right?

DEAR ABBY: I don't know whether you can use this in your column or not, but I hope you can, because it could help a lot of people who are as ignorant as we were.

I had never read the instructions that came with condoms because I figured that was my husband's department, so consequently, I was not aware that one should never use an oil-based lubricant. Well, we found out the hard way that using Vaseline, baby oil or cold cream with a condom can cause it to break!

We have been married for 12 years and this will be our third child, so it's no big deal, but please, publicize this very important information so other people will not have the kind of accident we had.

I'm signing my real name, but if you print this, sign me ... PREGNANT IN ALABAMA

DEAR PREGNANT: Thank you for wanting to warn others. Readers, for the best protection, ask your pharmacist for a lubricant containing nonoxonyl-9. This kills both sperm and the AIDS virus, according to Dr. Merv Silverman, the president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

Abby's favorite family recipes are included in her new cookbooklet! Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Holloway-Finch Pair Wed In Double-Ring Ceremony

WILSON — On Saturday at 3 p.m., Ebenezer Baptist Church was the setting for the wedding ceremony of Dinia Ann Finch and Frank Holloway.

The bride is the daughter of Sarah Finch of Wilson. The bridegroom is the son of Frankie Holloway and Robert Holloway of Alexandria, Va.

The Rev. Kenneth Braswell performed the double-ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Johnny Wooten of Greenville. Vocalists were Molly Small, Gene McBride and Faye Taylor.

The bride, escorted by her brother, wore a gown of white satin with a wedding band collar of beaded Venice lace and sequins. The drop shoulder English net Victorian yoke was trimmed with Venice lace, pearls and sequins. The princess bodice was accented with pearls and sequins. The bishop sleeves and basque waistline with a full satin skirt was highlighted with teardrop pearls, beads and sequins. The skirt back was accented with a bow, matching beads and lace scallops trimmed with pearl buttons and a cathedral train. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion attached to a scalloped cap of lace, pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade of three dozen white roses, stephanotis, orchids and greenery.

Rubin Fate of Elm, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Jeannie Fate of Suitland Me., and Judy Hin-nant of Sims, sisters of the bride, were matrons of honor. They wore tea-length dresses of aqua and sequins.

Bridesmaids included Brenda Ward of New York, Michelle Forbes of Temple Hills, Md., Iris Walter of Reston, Va., Gloria Latney of Washington, D.C., Towanda McCray of Raleigh, niece of the bride, Portia Hinnant of Sims, niece of the bride, Gina Crawford of Alexandria, Va., Marthalene Taylor of Baltimore, Md., and Cheryl Mephail of Suitland, Md. Junior bridesmaid was British Fate of Wilson, niece of the bride. They wore aqua tea-length dresses similar to the honor attendant's. Each carried bouquets of white daisies accented with lace and sequin streamers. Kandyce Hopkins of Baltimore, god-daughter of the bridal couple, was flower girl. Schuprell Hinnant of Sims, niece of the bride, was miniature bride and wore a long white lace ruffle dress with matching headpiece. She carried silk flowers identical to those of the bride.

James Holloway of Alexandria was best man for his brother. Groomsmen included Marcellus Cheeks of Temple Hills, David Fate Jr. of Wilson, nephew of the bride, Jeffrey Carroll, Jerry Ummer and Robert Moten, all of Alexandria, Keith Gillis of Oxon Hill, Md., Ronnie Jennings of Fort Washington, Md., Willie Crawford and Norbert Cheeks, both of Alexandria, and Jeffrey Dukett of Fort Washington. Witis Ashmon of Oxon Hill, Md. was junior groomsmen and miniature bridegroom was Duane Cheeks of Temple Hill. Ushers included Derrick Muldrow of Greensboro, head usher, Pete Pullen and Gary Jackson of Alexandria.

The mother of the bride wore a chiffon dusty rose dress and the mother of the bridegroom wore a long light blue dress of chiffon. Both carried orchid corsages. The grandmother of the bridegroom was given a corsage of white roses.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Dorce Watts, Judith Lewis, Gwendolyn Clayborne and Latoria Fate were hostesses. A second reception was held in the Downtown Heart of Wilson Hotel.

The wedding was directed by Edith B. Outerbridge of Falkland.

A rehearsal dinner was given by Ms. Outerbridge, god-mother of the bride. Several parties and showers were also given for the couple.

After a wedding trip to Paris the couple will live in Oxon Hill.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed by AT&T Telephone Co. in Falls Church, Va., as an area manager. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Florida and is employed by the Department of Recreation in Virginia.

Round-The Clock Culture

One of these days you're going to live in a country that is open after dark. A country where voting will not only be a privilege and a duty, but where the polls will keep convenient hours. Buses will run when you're still running. You will be able to mail a package after the sun goes down. You'll live in a nation where you can get your car washed and even have your hair cut in the evening.

Don't pin me down. I don't know when all of these things will come to pass, but it's moving in the right direction. More and more, the marketplace recognizes that we are changing from a 9-to-5 society to a round-the-clock culture. It's reflected in grocery and department stores, banks, service stations and gyms, but some services are still back in the days when cities rolled up the streets at 5.

Some government agencies, particularly, are slow to change. I heard from one guy who went to the Department of Motor Vehicles to obtain a motorcycle license and to renew his chauffeur's license. He discovered that no road tests would be conducted after 4:30 p.m. Also, the motorcycle skill test was given only on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. or at another office on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. When he asked why there was a 1 p.m. deadline, he was told, "Because it's too hot after 1 p.m."

At Wits End

I was reminded of an incident that occurred while I was vacationing on a French-controlled island in the Caribbean. I stumbled into a drugstore very seashick. Anticipating the return trip, I pointed to a package of Dramamine. I was told I had to have French currency. I went to the bank and was told it was closed until 2 p.m. I waited around for an hour and when I got the French currency, returned to the drugstore. The sign on the door said, "Closed until 4 p.m."

The entire town was on a rotation cycle. When you had the money, you had nowhere to spend it. It was the same principle as in this country when the parking meters are free -- there's nothing to park for.

It has always seemed strange to me that as a working person I can't get my car tuned after 6, but I can order from a catalog 24 hours a day.

There are evening events planned, but parking garages close first, keeping your car hostage until the next day. Day nurseries are just being structured to keep open beyond the working hours of the mother who left her child there.

When my kids were smaller, I had to take them out of school early to have their teeth cleaned. The Saturday appointments were always gone and the office closed at 4. It was a race against time to get in from the suburbs. I was asked to speak one night at a function for dentists and their wives. "How about 3 on a Tuesday?" I asked.

"You don't understand, we work all day and can't schedule anything until around 8 in the evening."

My point escaped them.

Historical Society To Restore Memorial For Warren Harding

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARION, Ohio — Forrest Dotson stood guard over the burial vault of President Warren G. Harding when the cornerstone was laid for the Harding Memorial on May 30, 1926.

Now, after watching for years as the memorial was ravaged by weather, pigeons and vandals, he hopes to be around when a facelift is completed on the burial place of the 29th president and Mrs. Harding.

"It's hard to replace something like that," said Dotson as he visited the marble monument.

The Ohio Historical Society is spending $538,000 on the restoration — the most extensive since it was completed in 1927 at a cost of $783,000.

Dotson was a member of a U.S. Army unit stationed at Fort Hayes in Columbus, which drew the assignment of guarding Harding's burial vault at the Marion cemetery.

"Sometimes Mrs. Harding would drive by very slowly," he says. "But she never got out of the car."

"We had to be real serious," says Dotson, 82. "One day a colonel in civilian clothes came by and asked one soldier, 'Is Harding really in there?' The boy said, 'No, he's out to lunch. He'll be back shortly.' They sent that boy back to camp."

Harding was elected in 1920 after his famous front-porch campaign that brought thousands of visitors to his Marion home. He died in San Francisco in 1923.

"When he died, he was described as the most popular president since Lincoln," says Robert O. Rupp, an assistant professor of history at the Ohio State University branch campus in Marion.

A private organization was established to build a memorial, and hundreds of thousands of Americans contributed money. More than 200,000 schoolchildren sent pennies.

"This is a monument that shows the popularity of Harding and the grief of the nation at his sudden death," Rupp says.

But as the memorial went up, Harding's popularity waned. Scandals involving Cabinet officers came to light. An extramarital affair was revealed, further damaging the late president's reputation.

By 1927, Harding's successors wanted to maintain their distance. The Harding Memorial was dedicated in 1931 by President Herbert Hoover.

Built of white Georgia marble, the circular monument is 80 feet in diameter and 50 feet high.

From a distance, it appears to be an exterior colonnade hiding an interior wall with more columns.

According to Harding's wishes, it is open to the sky, and plantings surround the black granite tombstones of Harding and his wife, Florence.

The marble is cracked in many places, some granite blocks have shifted. Moss is replacing mortar along the walkway. Vandals have damaged an iron gate that guards the interior and stolen the bronze rosebuds from Mrs. Harding's tomb.

While Harding's historic standing has been a matter of debate, Rupp says restoring the monument is important.

"Only a few Americans have ever been elected president," he notes, "and both the good ones and the bad say a lot about our country."

Earring Making Is Program Topic

A program on earring making was given at the meeting of Xi Gamma Xi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi last week. Carolyn Powell and Stephanie Evancho showed techniques in making watercolor paper earrings.

Earring samples were shown as well as materials which could be used.

Linda Schadler said birthday cakes had been delivered to University Nursing Home.

Plans for a bowling social at Hillcrest Lanes Nov. 4 were discussed. Members of Eta Delta chapter will be entertained at a social Nov. 8 at the home of Mrs. Powell.

Series MVP Orel Hershiser throws a pitch against Oakland

Defeat Athletics, 5-2, To Clinch Series In Five Games

By Richard Justice
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

OAKLAND, Calif. — Orel Hershiser looked up to the sky until he was bear-hugged off his feet by catcher Rick Dempsey as Tommy Lasorda and two dozen others began a hard sprint in his direction.

Their improbable season had ended, their predictable celebration had begun. They are Hatcher and Davis, Dempsey and Hamilton. They are assorted rejects and free agents, and by their own admission, a team lacking talent, if not courage.

In 1988, they were also partners in one of baseball's most dazzling crimes, and Thursday night the Los Angeles Dodgers finished stealing the 85th World Series by beating the Oakland Athletics, 5-2, before 49,317 at the Coliseum.

They did it with a streak of pitching brilliance that may never be matched. Has anyone ever been better than Hershiser, this slender, sunken-chested right-hander who missed his third straight postseason shutout, but won his second straight World Series game?

Otherwise, he was perfect, and finished by allowing two runs in 18 World Series innings, the most valuable player in a most unexpected World Series.

Hershiser pitched an eight-strikeout, four-hit masterpiece. Mickey Hatcher tagged Oakland starter Storm Davis for a two-run, first-inning homer, and that was the tail wind Hershiser needed.

He won his ninth straight decision, his second in the World Series and third in postseason play. He ended the 1988 season with a record 59 scoreless innings, and in five postseason starts, allowed five earned runs. Those are the only five runs in 101 2-3 innings — a 0.44 ERA.

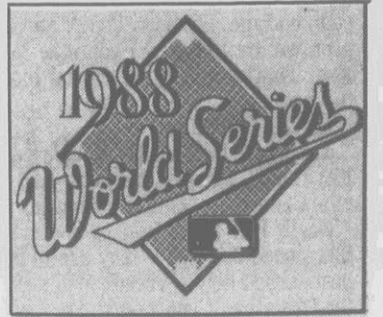

He was the point man on a pitching staff that smothered the game's best and most feared offense. After 104 regular season victories and a four-game sweep of the playoffs, the A's were held to 11 runs and two homers in five Series games.

It wasn't just that the Dodgers beat them, they beat them soundly, needing only five games to finish the biggest upset since the 1969 Amazon Mets.

The Dodgers won with what was essentially a 21-man roster. Kirk Gibson, the certain National League

Series Teams Reversed Roles

By Scott Ostler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

OAKLAND, Calif. — Exactly as predicted and advertised, one World Series team bashed the ball over the fences game after game and the other team went down meekly, its dejected fans leaving the ballpark early to beat the traffic.

The Oakland A's were beaten by the Jayvees, four games to one in the World Series shocker of at least the last two decades.

Naturally, the Los Angeles Dodgers did it unnaturally, completely outplaying the A's with a lineup only Tom Lasorda could love.

And Mickey Hatcher, the unknown soldier, supplied the inspiration Thursday night with a first-inning, two-run homer.

That's the same Mickey Hatcher who hit a first-inning, two-run homer in Game 1 of this Series.

"Luckily, they didn't check my bat," Hatcher said.

If they did, they would have found it filled with Tinkerbell's fairy dust. Or, knowing Mickey the prankster, a sign would have popped out that said "BANG!"

Or "BASH!"

Who would've thought Mickey

No Relief For Top 20-Weary ECU

Now It's 19th-Ranked Syracuse

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When the month of October opened, Saturday the 22nd loomed like an oasis in the desert for East Carolina's Pirates.

It was the only date in the month when the Pirates didn't face a nationally ranked team. Oh, to be sure the Syracuse Orangemen would be no pushover, but it did give the Pirates one chance in a month of monsters to take a slight breather from the so-called October Death March.

But no more. The oasis has dried up.

Syracuse, with a 24-10 victory over Penn State on the Nittany Lions' home field, has vaulted the Orange into the Top 20 also, gaining them the 19th ranking in the country.

Now — for East Carolina — the October Death March goes on in full swing, giving the Pirates a Top 20 team to play on each and every Saturday of the month.

The two collide — it's their first meeting ever — at 1:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium. For East Carolina, it's the next to last game of the home season. Their date with Miami next weekend will close out the month and the home slate.

Syracuse, having gained the national ranks, joins four other ECU opponents, South Carolina, West Virginia, Florida State and Miami, on the slate, giving ECU one of the toughest schedules in the country. Of their 11 opponents, seven have winning records, with a combined mark of 38-6.

Syracuse comes in with a 5-1 record, having lost only to Ohio State on the Buckeyes' home field, 26-9, in the second game of the season. They've beaten Temple, 31-21, and Virginia Tech, 35-0, both ECU opponents, along with Maryland 20-9 and Rutgers, 34-20.

East Carolina, meanwhile, tries to get back on the winning track after losing six straight games. ECU defeated Tennessee Tech in its opener, 52-13, its only win of the year. If one believes in score comparisons, ECU lost to Virginia Tech, 27-16. Temple still lies ahead for the Pirates.

Rowsum Hoping For Roster Spot

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Brian Rowsum is pleading his case for a spot on the Charlotte Hornets' roster in the way that counts: with results on the court.

In the Hornets' 126-113 victory over the New York Knicks last weekend, Rowsum grabbed seven rebounds, tying center Dave Hoppen for the team lead.

"He has this uncanny nose for the ball," Hornets Coach Dick Harter says. "You can't teach that nose, just like you can't teach his height."

"To me, it's just a question of how much he wants to make it," Harter said. "If he's dedicated, he has a very promising future here."

Not bad for a guy who was supposed to attend the Dallas Mavericks' training camp.

In late September, Rowsum was headed for the Dallas Mavericks. He expected to be here long enough for Detlef Schrempf to recover from ankle surgery. Instead, the 6-foot-10 Rowsum, a North Carolina-Wilmington graduate, is challenging veteran Earl Cureton for the backup power forward spot behind Kurt Rambis.

Harter was responsible for Rowsum landing in Charlotte. Harter was an assistant coach with the Indiana Pacers last season when Rowsum played there for four games. When Harter took the Hornets' job, he approached Rowsum's college coach, Robert McPherson, about Rowsum's availability.

SLED Official Looks Into Case

Investigating USC Steroid Reports

By Rick Scope
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina's top law enforcement agency is hoping to interview ex-University of South Carolina football player Tommy Chaikin and others to determine the accuracy of allegations by Chaikin that players abused steroids and other drugs.

"All we have is reports in the news media," State Law Enforcement Division Chief Robert Stewart said. "I have no reason to believe they're not accurate, but we have to go ask the people."

"We have to deal in facts and what people tell us, usually in sworn statements. We just can't read something in the news media and go open a full investigation."

University President James Holderman said Thursday he believes head football coach Joe Morrison and assistant coach Jim Washburn were telling the truth when they said they were unaware of the use of steroids or other drugs by team members.

Chaikin said Morrison and Washburn knew or learned he was taking steroids and either ignored the fact or took little effort to stop it.

Holderman, in response to reporters' questions after the board of trustees meeting, said he stood by Morrison.

Asked if Morrison's job as head coach was in any jeopardy, Holderman said, "I've not heard that at all, and I don't feel that way."

Holderman said the athletic department, not coaches, is responsible for ensuring the university's drug-testing program is run effectively. Holderman fired former Athletic Director Bob Marcum in March on the grounds he misrepresented the frequency of random testing and the effectiveness of the program in general.

Tony Reeves is a key reason Ayden-Grifton is 6-1 this season

Filling In Well

Reeves Comes Through For A-G

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

LITTLEFIELD — Lots of people can't handle the role of replacing a bona fide star, but Ayden-Grifton's Tony Reeves has done so with relative ease.

Reeves, a 5-11, 185-pound senior halfback for the Chargers' football team, has been called upon to replace Eric Blount in the Ayden-Grifton backfield. Blount, who led the Chargers to an 11-3 record and a berth in the state semi-finals last season, is now a starting wide receiver at the University of North Carolina.

Reeves has more than pleased the fans and coaches. He has rushed for 799 yards and 10 touchdowns on 106 carries through seven games. He is the leading rusher in the Eastern Plains Conference and tied for the lead in scoring.

Throw in the facts that Ayden-Grifton is off to a 6-1 start and that Reeves has been lead blocker for fullback Aaron Harper's 565 yards and seven TDs and it's easy to see why everyone is all smiles.

"It was hard at first," Reeves said. "Everyone was expecting me to do the same things Eric did. I thought I could do the job, it was just a matter of time. I always felt I had the ability to do it. I was just waiting for my turn."

While waiting, Reeves became an understudy of Blount's role. "I enjoyed playing with Eric," Reeves said. "I was able to learn a lot from him."

But Ayden-Grifton head coach B.T. Chappell said Reeves, in many ways, is a better athlete than Blount.

"Tony is faster and stronger than Eric," Chappell said. "I coached Tony in junior high school and jayvee football and have watched him

Spivey Back In 1st Place Of DR Panel

Woody Peele

Vickie Spivey has moved back into sole possession of first place among our "panel of experts," after an 8-4 week last time around.

It was a difficult week for our panel, most of whom recorded 6-6 records. Only Spivey and Tom Morris managed 8-4's.

Spivey is now alone in first place with a 62-20 record, while Tom Baines, with whom she was tied last week, is second at 60-22. Morris is third at 58-24, while I follow at 57-25. Tim Chandler is fifth with a 56-26 record, followed by Greg Laudick with a 51-31 mark.

This week's picks include a number of toss-up type contests, so maybe we'll see more shake-ups by next time around.

My high school predictions last week were 7-1, giving a record of 41-18 for the season. Conley still continues to confound me, although Coach Steve Craft is starting to promise me things if I continue to pick the Vikings to lose. That seems to be a good luck charm for Conley this year.

Maybe. Maybe not. Taking a look at this week's games, there are four Pitt County games, and our panel will pick the Farmville Central/Ayden-Grifton battle.

North Pitt plays host to South Lenoir and the Panthers need this one if they are to have any chance at a post-season berth. There's still a chance that all five of the Pitt schools could end up in the playoffs again, but a loss by North Pitt this week might know the Panthers out.

Shouldn't happen, however. North Pitt to win this one, 21-6.

D.H. Conley plays host to Greene Central in a non-conference game. The Rams have a top passing game to test the Vikings. The Vikings have found a good running game and a good defense. Craft wants me to pick Greene Central. But I won't. Conley to win this one, 19-13.

Rose High School plays Wilson Fike. The Golden

Demons, no matter how good or how bad their record, always play Rose tough. Two weeks ago, the Rampants found out that they had to do more than show up. With Sharieff Dew, Fike has a multi-purpose back who can run and throw — and not necessarily as a quarterback.

The Rampants still should win this one as they head toward a showdown with Northeastern — the score, 28-7.

In other area games, Chocowinity will top Creswell, 28-6; Jamesville will beat Columbia, 42-13; Edenton will beat Roanoke, 28-14; Washington will top West Craven, 21-15; and Bertie will down Williamston, 35-7.

Farmville Central goes to Ayden-Grifton looking to knock off the Chargers and have a shot at the Eastern Plains Conference championship themselves. Ayden-Grifton, ranked sixth in the state this week, has played tough since the first half of their opening game against Wallace-Rose Hill. Farmville is still overcoming injuries.

The panel picks the Chargers by a 6-0 margin. My pick is Ayden-Grifton, 22-8.

East Carolina plays host to 19th ranked Syracuse as the Pirates continue their "October Death March." The Pirates have played well against the tough opponents, so I look for them to do the same against the Orangemen.

Unfortunately, pass defense has been one of their biggest problems and Syracuse has an outstanding passer. The panel goes down the line, 6-0, with Syracuse, and my pick is the Orange by 42-17.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over N.C. State; Georgia Tech over North Carolina; Alabama over Penn State; Ohio State over Minnesota; Southern Mississippi over Southwestern Louisiana; Duke over Maryland; Wake Forest over Virginia; Michigan over Indiana; Washington over Oregon; and Arkansas and Houston, a toss-up.

Which Way Will Piniella Go?

NEW YORK (AP) — This time, Lou Piniella is causing the speculation himself.

Three weeks ago, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner left Piniella twisting in the wind for a week before firing him for the second time in 355 days.

Now, Piniella is letting the Seattle Mariners, and perhaps the Houston Astros and Chicago White Sox, wonder what he's going to do next.

Earlier this week, Piniella talked with Seattle officials about managing the Mariners next season.

Piniella said Thursday he would talk to at least one other team, but would not say which. A source said he would be interviewed by either the Astros or the White Sox.

In Seattle, Mariners officials said he was the first of several managerial candidates.

"We have held preliminary meetings with several people and we'll be holding more in the near future," Mariners general manager Woody Woodward said Thursday. "However we are not close to making a formal offer because we still have more candidates to meet with."

Piniella, fired Oct. 7 after the Yankees finished fifth in the American League East, said he did not think he would have much of a role with the Yankees if he stayed in New York.

"I've done just about everything I can with the New York Yankees organization," he said. "With all the new people coming in on the major league level, if I wanted to remain with the Yankees I would have to do it on a minor league level."

Piniella said he met earlier this week in Los Angeles with Seattle owner George Argyros, president Chuck Armstrong and Woodward, a former Yankees general manager.

State Champions
Rose High School's girls' golf team won the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's championship tournament earlier this week. It was the first time Rose had competed in the two-year old tournament. Members of the team are, left to right: Cammie Smith, Camilla Brown and Charles Cox. Brown's and Cox' scores were those which counted in the tournament.

Dodgers Win Series In Five

MVP, was limited to one at-bat because of a knee injury.

That one swing was a ninth-inning, two-run homer that won Game 1, and the Dodgers rolled from there.

Right fielder Mike Marshall missed a game with a bad back and was in obvious pain Thursday night. Catcher Mike Scioscia missed most of the last two games with a knee injury.

Hatcher, who had been ticketed for cheerleader duty, homered twice and batted .368, this after homering once in 191 regular season at-bats.

He was released by the Minnesota Twins 18 months ago. They were lots of other little pieces, and won with hit-and-run and one timely hit after another.

One of the biggest Thursday night was Mike Davis' two-run homer — he had two in the regular season.

The Dodgers finished with eight hits Thursday night, but bunched them well. Oakland starter Storm Davis lost a second straight Series start, going 4 2-3 innings and allowing four hits.

They didn't produce a lot of offense, but they were nothing if not pesky. In 45 innings, the Dodgers failed to get men on base 10 times. In 108 postseason innings, they went down in order 28 times. They ran and poked and punched and stayed out of the big inning.

It was enough for a platinum pitching staff. The A's put back-to-back hits together three of 45 innings. They had more than one hit in an inning six times.

Remember the Bash Brothers? After Jose Canseco's grand slam, he went zero for 18. Mark McGwire went one for 17. Carney Lansford went one for 18 and Walt Weiss one for 16.

If the A's were intimidated or awed by Hershiser, they didn't show it. Parker had all three of his team's hits in Game 2, and he again gave his teammates a scouting report, telling them to lay off the sinker and force Hershiser to come up in the strike zone.

"He loves to throw you the breaking ball down and in," he said. "That's his pitch. He'll spot his fastball, move his pitches up and down, and in and out."

"The main thing is to be patient enough to get him to bring the ball up. If he's on, he's tough to hit, anyway, but you can't let him keep throwing you that low breaking ball. Don't let him dictate the pace. The best advice is just not to offer unless he gets the ball up."

Parker and his teammates appeared a lot cooler than their manager, who was beginning to show his frayed edges.

That became clear after Game 4 when Tony La Russa hinted that there was some dark plot to hurt his team. He believed that someone had passed them Bob Costas' remarks about how bad the Dodgers were without Gibson and Marshall.

"I just don't believe they were in the clubhouse watching that," La Russa said.

The Dodgers said they were doing exactly that, but La Russa cornered Costas outside in a hallway Thursday afternoon, and the two went jaw-to-jaw for about five minutes.

Several of his players were considerably more gracious, saying they actually admired the way the Dodgers were going about their business.

"Even though their best players are out, I think they have their fundamentals down pat," Canseco said. "I've seen them — every time they try a hit-and-run, it happens. A ground ball is hit, the runner is running and you can't turn the double play. Then the run scores. Those are the things they are doing, and the things that are hurting us."

For the 10th time in 12 postseason games, the Dodgers scored first. Franklin Stubbs singled with one out in the first, and Hatcher launched a 1-1 fastball over the left field wall.

Is timing everything? After hitting one homer in 191 regular season at-bats, Hatcher hit two in his first 16

World Series at-bats.

That got the Dodgers a 2-0 lead. Hershiser retired the A's in order in the first and second, but in the third, Lansford and Tony Phillips led off with singles — the third time in 39 innings the A's had back-to-back hits.

Weiss bunted the runners up, and rookie Stan Javier, getting a start in left, scored Lansford with a sacrifice fly to left. That made it 2-1 and was the fourth run Hershiser had allowed since Aug. 30 (95 innings).

He walked Henderson, but with two runners on base, got Canseco on a fielder's choice grounder.

The Dodgers got the run (and one more) right back. Hatcher opened the fourth by beating out an infield single and, after Davis struck out, Marshall and Shelby, went went to 3-0 on Mike Davis.

Fred Claire and Tommy Lasorda hoist the trophy

L.A. Completes Its Dream

Hatcher would emerge as the offensive star of the World Series?

Who would've imagined any of this nonsense? The Amazin' A's, a team of already legendary power, beaten by a cartoon gang — Mickey, Bulldog, Moose, Gibby, Saxy, Tommy ...

With a lineup that looked and sounded more like a Mouseteater roll call, the Dodgers cruelly mugged the A's.

The A's were an emerging dynasty. The Dodgers were a ballclub held together with bubble gum, paper clips, pride, paranoia, pitching, pine tar and Tom Lasorda's I.Q. and B.S.

And standing alone as the symbol of the whole crazy scene was Mickey Hatcher. So amazing was his league playoff and World Series performance that there are rumors Mickey Mantle will now ask people to call him by his middle name, Charles, so as not to be thought of as The Other Mickey.

For the A's, it was a worst-case scenario, beaten by bombs off the bat of a plodding, grey-haired journeyman who hit one home run all season.

"The pitchers hit my bat and the balls went out of the park," Hatcher said.

He couldn't explain what he was thinking during his home-run sprint, or what possessed him to try a forearm bash with trainer Charlie Strasser in the dugout.

"He 'bout broke my arm," Hatcher said. "From now on I'm going to leave the bashing to (Jose) Canseco and (Mark) McGwire."

Actually Hatcher's dugout celebration Thursday was more tame than his Game 1 celebration.

"He was happier after the first one," Mike Marshall said. "With the first one, it was like he won the World Series. Maybe he knew what was coming."

Along with all his home runs, Mickey managed to hit .368 (7 for 19), and get extremely dirty.

Thursday he led off the fourth inning with a chopper to third. To avoid a possible swipe tag by first baseman McGwire, Hatcher dove ungracefully into the dirt and sort of burrowed his way to the bag. He was safe and he later scored.

"I'm known for falling down on a lot of occasions," Hatcher said.

That's the way he plays the game.

"Mickey's an excitable boy," Mike Scioscia said. "He does everything with the gusto of a 10-year-old kid on Christmas morning. That's Mickey."

By next Christmas morning, Hatcher should have his pulse rate down to a normal level.

"I haven't been sleeping since the Series started," Hatcher said. "When you win, you leave the ground, you're so excited."

Over Hatcher's head, on a clubhouse TV monitor, a replay of his homer off Storm Davis was being shown. Mickey turned his head just in time to see the ball clear the left-field wall and settle into a subdued group of fans.

"Hey, somebody told me it barely cleared," he said.

A writer remarked that the homers in Game 1 and Game 5 were hit off nearly identical pitches.

"I'm glad someone saw those pitches," Hatcher said. "I didn't. I was just swingin'."

If Hatcher seems a bit self-deprecating, it should be mentioned that he hasn't done a lot in his career that would cause him to act otherwise.

He is a career fringe-type player, known for solid hitting and hustle but otherwise unremarkable achievement.

Earlier this season he mentioned to a friend that he hoped the Dodgers would keep him around one more year, to make him eligible for a 10-year pension.

Now they're liable to erect a statue of Mickey at Dodger Stadium.

"That's (insecurity) been my whole life," Hatcher said. "I've never been in a sure situation my whole career. I just go out and try to make it hard on them (club management) to make a decision (to cut him)."

Gastineau Quits Football

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Mark Gastineau, who fought his way back with the New York Jets, is walking away from football to help actress-physician Brigitte Nielsen in her fight against cancer.

Gastineau, the defensive end whose headline-generating personality infuriated teammates and made him a media star, cited the illness of the actress as the reason he is leaving the game.

"My relationship with Brigitte Nielsen was the primary reason I returned to football this year, and for whatever success I enjoyed," Gastineau said at the Phoenix, Ariz., airport. "Her sudden illness, for which we are now seeking medical treatment, has caused me to put into perspective my career and the things that are most important to me in my life."

"I hope everyone will understand this decision and wish us well."

The New York Times, in today's editions, quoted Nielsen as saying in a telephone interview:

"I have cancer of the uterus. I'm trying to handle this in a positive way. We're going to decide how we'll deal with this."

Gastineau decided to deal with it by retiring as a player.

"For personal reasons, Mark Gastineau has decided he will not play football anymore," Jets president Steve Gutman said Thursday. "They are his reasons, and they are personal. He is no longer with the team. We will be in Miami (Sunday) without him."

"He will get paid for the games he played. We're sorry about the decision. He was a great player. He set records and set the standard for sacks. It's his decision."

Gutman said the Jets' options are to place Gastineau, 31, on the Reserved-Left-Squad list or the Reserved-Retired list. If Gastineau is placed on the latter and reconsiders, he must go through procedural waivers.

Gastineau who was leading the AFC in sacks with seven, told Jets coach Joe Walton on Tuesday that he was contemplating retirement. He attended team meetings on Wednesday, but skipped practice, claiming an illness in the family.

"He told me he was thinking about quitting and I said, 'think about it, it's a big decision,'" Walton said. "He called this morning and told me he no longer wanted to play. I informed the team on the field. I told them he didn't have his heart in it and wanted to get out."

"He played hard and he was a great player. It's a decision he's made and will have to live with. I don't know if you could call it sad, but I am disappointed."

SNOW HILL — D.H. Conley's junior varsity football team defeated Greene Central, 36-6, Thursday night.

Mike Clark scored twice for the Baby Vikings, on runs of four and nine yards. Brian Smith passed to Derrick Cox for a seven yard score and also ran in a score from 11 yards out. Stuart Roach got the other touchdown on a three yard run.

Smith passed to Glenn Whitehurst for one PAT, while Kenny Haddock and Nathan Wainright ran over two others.

Conley is now 7-1 and plays at home against Washington on Thursday.

get better and better. He worked a lot last year on the weight program and also ran track to get stronger and faster.

"It's paid off for him," Chappell added. "He's gaining a lot more yardage this year by working hard and giving that extra effort. He can run inside or outside to gain good yardage, while Eric mainly concentrated on gaining his yardage by running inside."

Reeves' blocking for Harper is just as important.

"He's very important as a blocking back," Chappell said. "They compliment each other real well. If the defense decides to key on Tony then we can burn them with Aaron and if they key on Aaron then we'll run more with Tony."

The Chargers have certainly managed to burn a few teams this season. Since an opening-game 13-8 loss to highly-touted Wallace-Rose Hill, the Chargers have reeled off six straight wins. They sit atop the Eastern Plains 2-A Conference with a 3-0 mark heading into tonight's league matchup against cross-county rival Farmville Central.

The Chargers recorded a win over 3-A Washington, 41-21, logged a 24-7 victory over 3-A D.H. Conley and blanked 4-A Kinston, 19-0.

But the victory that meant most to Reeves was the Chargers' thrashing of Washington. The Pam Pack entered the contest as the sixth-ranked team on the 3-A level.

Reeves' performance in the win over Washington was the key. He rushed for 164 yards and a pair of touchdowns to record his second-highest rushing mark for the season. He broke TD runs of 65 and 59 yards, and also caught a 9-yard touchdown pass from Charger quarterback Darryl Moye.

Reeves' best performance to date came in a 47-6 rout of Pamlico. He ran for 190 yards and scored a trio of touchdowns on just nine carries.

"Going into the Washington game, everyone was saying that they would beat us," Reeves said. "They didn't expect us to be able to score as much as we did. I think that is the game that really got us started. After we had beat them, we felt like we could compete with anybody."

Including Wallace-Rose Hill?

"Oh, definitely," Reeves said. "We feel like we could beat them now. When we lost to them it was the first game of the year and everybody was expecting a lot of us. There was a whole lot of pressure on everyone. I think it took that first game for us to come together as a team."

Reeves is hoping he'll get another chance to record a win over Wallace-Rose Hill in the playoffs en route to meeting his ultimate goal.

"I want to go all the way and win the state title," Reeves said. "I think we have an excellent chance to do that if we don't get big-headed."

And once the season is over, Reeves hopes to make a decision on where he will go to pursue football on the college level.

"N.C. State, North Carolina and East Carolina have all talked to me," Reeves said. "But I'll just wait until after the year is over before I decide anything."

"I feel like Tony can compete on the collegiate level," Chappell said. "Colleges are getting to where they aren't going with the 225-pound running backs any more. They want a back that is quick and one that can carry the ball on the option. Nowadays, a running back has to be able to run well inside as well as outside and Tony is capable of doing that."

No matter whose shoes he has to fill.

DEEP RUN — Shon Daniels and Lamont Forbes scored three touchdowns apiece to lead North Pitt to a 59-7 romp over South Lenoir in JV football action Thursday.

Daniels scored on runs of 26, three and 46 yards and totaled 106 yards rushing for the game.

Forbes returned a fumble 21 yards for one score and also had touchdown runs of 28 and 69 yards.

North Pitt returns to action at home against C.B. Aycock Thursday.

FARMVILLE — Ayden-Grifton's junior varsity football team rolled to a 34-6 victory over Farmville Central Thursday night.

Farmville's only touchdown came in the third period when Albert Baptist took a 13-yard pass from Troy Puryear.

Fike.....28

Rose.....24

WILSON — Wilson Fike High School scored three times in the first quarter and went on to take a 28-24 junior varsity football victory over Rose Thursday night.

After watching Fike take a 21-0 lead in the first quarter, Rose came back to score on a 26-yard run by Columbus Grice. Grice passed to Anthony Love for the PAT, cutting the lead to 21-8 at the half.

Fike scored again to open the second half, as Rose fumbled the opening kickoff. That tipped the lead to 28-8. Love scored on a seven yard run and then took a pass from Grant Harmon for the PAT to trim the lead to 28-16.

In the final period, Melvin Moore scored on a 15-yard run and Fike later took a safety to close out the scoring.

Rose, 4-3 overall and 3-2 in the Big East, plays Wilson Hunt next Thursday.

WILSON — Rose High School's girls' tennis team defeated Wilson Fike, 5-4, Thursday to win the Big East Conference championship.

The two teams battled through the hard-fought singles matches, each winning three. They then split the first two doubles matches to knot it at 4-4 before Tina Williams and Tricia Tripp defeated Catherine Deans and Amy Rose to clinch the match for Rose.

Paige Powell completed the regular season unbeaten for the Rampettes, 14-0.

Rose ended up 14-1 overall and 13-1 in league play. The Rampettes travel to Wilson on Wednesday and Thursday for the state 4-A regionals.

Fuquay-Varina.....9

Cher Happy With Her Younger Boyfriends

CHICAGO (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Cher says she is happy if her relationship with her 24-year-old boyfriend gives women "the courage to do the thing they might want to do."

In an interview in the December issue of Playboy magazine, Cher, who won the Best Actress Oscar this year for her role in "Moonstruck," said the last time she was involved with an older man was 15 years ago.

But the beginning of her relationship with aspiring actor Robert Camiletti, 24, two years ago provoked anxiety for the actress.

"I felt I was starting to fall into a pattern of being only with younger guys," said the 42-year-old actress and singer. "I thought that was maybe a fault or a weakness, something detrimental in my character."

Now I don't know that it's not and I don't know that I care."

Cher said she does not feel she is a pioneer for women because of her relationships with younger men, but she added:

"I'm really happy to give women the courage to do the thing they might want to do... If they need someone to go before them I'm happy to help."

"But I'm certainly not the first one who's been with younger men — Tallulah Bankhead, Sarah Bernhardt — there've been lots of women before me," she said.

Lynn Booked

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grammy Award-winning singer Lynn Anderson was booked on a misdemeanor charge of malicious mischief after a pre-dawn incident at the home of songwriter Paul Williams' brother.

Judicial Commissioner Howard Taradash released Ms. Anderson on her own recognizance after she was booked Wednesday.

The warrant was sworn out by Linda Gail Bower, who told police that Ms. Anderson vandalized her car and threatened her life after songwriter Mentor Williams refused to let the singer into his home.

Ms. Bower, who was at the house, said Ms. Anderson stole her leather jacket and threw some of her belongings into garbage pails.

Producers Keep 'Thirtysomething' True

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Ed Zwick and Marshall Herskovitz, creators and executive producers of ABC's "thirtysomething," expected their show "to last for six episodes — and then die." Test audiences complained that the pilot was confusing, the dialogue was not interesting, the characters whined and nothing ever happened.

As a result, they never had time to design a master plan for where the series was headed following its debut in September 1987. "Last year, artistically, we were living from hand to mouth — it was a miracle we got the shows finished at all," Herskovitz said.

Instead of dying quickly, however, "thirtysomething," an intimate study of the lives of a group of friends in the same age group as the producers (they are both 36), captured a respectable share of a demographically desirable audience during its first season. Most TV critics loved it — and even those who hated it devoted valuable column space to explaining their distaste in detail.

And then last Aug. 28 came an even bigger surprise: "thirtysomething" won the Emmy Award for outstanding drama series of the 1987-88 season.

Coupled with plenty of time to prepare for their Dec. 6 season debut (delayed because of the writers' strike), the producers now face a new dilemma: How does a TV show break the mold twice? Is it possible to be spontaneous on purpose? Can a series remain outside the mainstream after getting TV's Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval?

And then last Aug. 28 came an even bigger surprise: "thirtysomething" won the Emmy Award for outstanding drama series of the 1987-88 season.

Coupled with plenty of time to prepare for their Dec. 6 season debut (delayed because of the writers' strike), the producers now face a new dilemma: How does a TV show break the mold twice? Is it possible to be spontaneous on purpose? Can a series remain outside the mainstream after getting TV's Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval?

In short, will "thirtysomething" begin lusting to spell itself with a capital T?

"There are many ways in which the institutionalized success of a thing could be its artistic death knell," Zwick said, only half-jokingly, during a recent conversation at the show's headquarters here.

Even the word "thirtysomething" has been dragged into the American vernacular. Herskovitz cited a recent quote from Vice President George Bush: "There's a TV show that reminds me of what interest rates might be if the Democrats get in again — there will be inflation at a level which reminds me of a television show called 'thirtysomething.'"

"The idea that we have entered the currency of the political debate — that's pretty amusing," Herskovitz said.

Herskovitz and Zwick, who refer to the show's recently acquired "patina of acceptance" as if it were the symptom of a fatal disease, acknowledge that success could spoil "thirtysomething" — if they let it. But they remain determined to stay true to their original goal, which was not to have one.

"Last year, the best thing that happened to us was we didn't have a template," Zwick said. "That really begins to speak to the heart of the way we want to approach this year. If we feel any obligation, it is to rededicate ourselves to trying new forms rather than trying to replicate that (first season) in some way simply because we were successful."

Zwick said that the cast and crew liked to describe the set of "thirtysomething" last year as a "laboratory" — a place for works-in-progress. "For all of us, that word was really important," he said. "That word not only carries with it the possibility of failure, but the probability of occasional failure."

Added Herskovitz: "If we made one promise to audiences, it is, ironically, that one week will differ from the next. We have to allow for failure, in some sense to invite it."

Zwick and Herskovitz fervently hope that second-year audiences, now familiar with the characters, will not get caught up in tracking plot points (such as whether the unhappily married Nancy and Elliot will solve their problems), but instead will continue to appreciate the show as a character study.

"We're deeply interested in behavior but not as much in events," Zwick said. "We are more interested in what it (the show) is more deeply and profoundly about — the aspects of how people deal with each other."

The "thirtysomething" episode that was submitted for Emmy consideration, for example, dealt with the terminal illness of Michael's father (Ken Olin). The producers insisted that the network do nothing to advertise the story line before that show aired the first time.

"We had the opportunity at that time to promote it as 'the big show in which Michael's father gets cancer,'" Herskovitz said. "But we felt that that would be a mistake — because if we want each person in the audience to deeply enter Michael's feelings when he learns that his father has cancer, you can't know it before. We could have gotten a few extra ratings points out of it, but they wouldn't have experienced the show in that internal way."

TV Cartoon Ed Grimley Comes Back

By Robert Barr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Squirrely Ed Grimley, reincarnated as a Saturday morning cartoon star, has a bit of moose in him, too.

Martin Short, who played the nerdy triangle virtuoso with the erect cowlick on "SCTV" and "Saturday Night Live," says the cartoon version owes something to fond memories of Rocket J. Squirrel and his pal, Bullwinkle.

"What I loved about Rocky and Bullwinkle was just the total mentalness of it all — it took you in one direction and then another," Short said in a telephone interview from his home in Pacific Palisades, Calif.

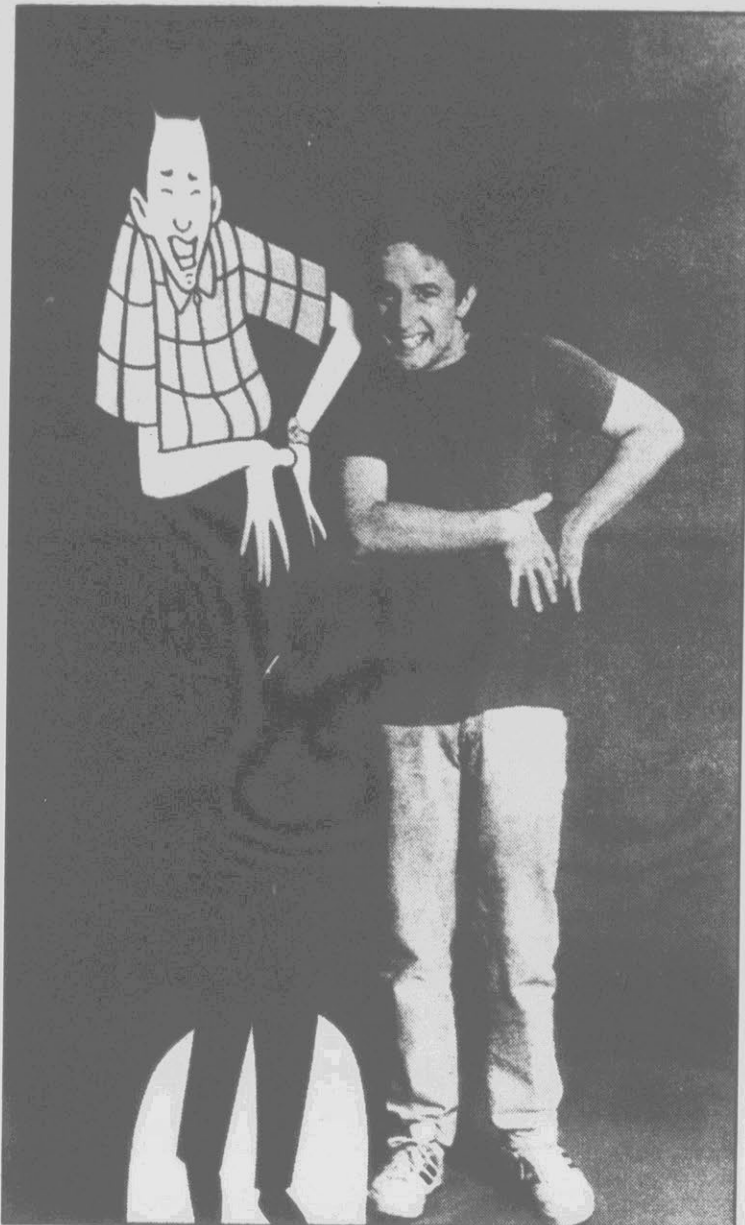

"I used to love in Rocky and Bullwinkle that there were jokes I just wasn't getting," he said. He felt the same way, he added, when he watched Jack Paar chat with Malcolm Muggeridge.

In writing his Grimley sketches, "I would always put in arbitrary 90-degree turns." For instance, Ed might babble excitedly about Uncle Balfour's Thanksgiving dinner, and then blurt, "Gee, I wonder what the neighbors are doing?"

"The Completely Mental Misadventures of Ed Grimley," a new entry in NBC's Saturday morning schedule, is really three shows.

First, there are the adventures of Ed, a "Temps 'R' Us" worker who has a pet rat named Sheldon and a goldfish named Moby. His heart throbs for Miss Malone, but he usually spends his free time with her bratty little brother, Wendell.

Once every Saturday, the Truly Remarkable Gustav Brothers (non-identical identical cartoon twins

The Associated Press

Martin Short poses with cartoon cutout of 'Ed Grimley'

Emil and Roger) break in with a science lesson.

And every week Ed tunes in to his television hero, Count Floyd — played in the flesh by SCTV's Joe Flaherty. The brats in Count Floyd's peanut gallery regard him as a contemptible fraud and ask embarrassing questions such as why a man in a vampire costume howls like a werewolf.

Ed Grimley was born in 1978 in a "Second City Stage" skit, Short said. Ed was a filling station attendant who was competing with an exceptionally qualified woman for an office job. When the boss said they were both so well qualified that he just couldn't choose, Ed suggested, "How about an arm wrestle?"

Ed then retired from public life, but Short kept working on the character to amuse his wife, Nancy. In 1982, Ed Grimley reappeared on "SCTV."

"I thought maybe it was too weird for the room, but that was the nature of the show," Short said.

Ed's endless references to "going mental" betrays his Canadian roots.

"It was a Toronto expression. It's really from being a kid, I guess. We even had a kid in our class we just called 'Ment'."

Grimley got his greatest exposure on "Saturday Night Live," where he boogied with Tina Turner and gushed over the prospect of meeting Pat Sajak. Though Short left "SNL" in 1985, Ed kept his hold on childlike imaginations.

Last Halloween, Short said, "a couple of kids came to the door as Ed Grimley. I didn't quite get it." But it encouraged him to think that Hanna-Barbera, which had approached him about a cartoon show, was on to something.

Short didn't just sell the character to Hanna-Barbera, but is very much involved. He shares writing credit with his brother Michael, the head writer, and John Ludin and John Loy.

The process, Short said, is something like this: all four get together and brainstorm a couple of shows; the other three guys do an outline, and Short rewrites it; the other three do a script, and Short rewrites that; then he spends hours on the telephone polishing the final version.

"Certainly, it's more work than I planned to do," said Short. "But it's Catch-22 — once you commit to something, how else can you do it correctly?"

One of the great things about "The Completely Mental Misadventures of Ed Grimley" is that it reunites the "SCTV" cast.

Catherine O'Hara supplies the weird accents of Miss Malone, Andrea Martin is the voice of Ed's landlady, and John Candy and Dave Thomas have signed up for guest roles. Jonathan Winters has a regular vocal part as Ed's landlord, Mr. Freebus.

Wrong Queen

GREENSBORO (AP) — Hayden Fields wasn't even queen for a day. It was more like 13 hours.

The 17-year-old senior was crowned queen at Western Guilford High School during halftime of the school's Friday night homecoming game against Rockingham County.

But about 11 a.m. Saturday, Assistant Principal Denise Smith called Ms. Fields to tell her the homecoming committee had made a mistake. They wrote down the wrong names for the queen and maid of honor.

Ms. Fields was elected maid of honor. Shelly Muscat, Ms. Fields' friend for six years, was chosen as queen.

Once-Homeless Rapper Keeps Going After Partner's Death

By Larry McShane
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City — the home of rap music and rappers Run-DMC, Kool Moe Dee and LL Cool J — is also home to more murders each year than any other place in the nation: 1,691 last year.

Lawrence Krisna Parker — aka rapper KRS-One — learned a lot about both in 1987. Parker, voice of the group Boogie Down Productions, scored a successful debut album with "Criminal Minded" just months before his music partner was gunned down by two teen-agers during a Bronx street dispute.

It was the latest twist in the strange tale of Parker's life, a life in which he's lived in city subways, city shelters and a city jail.

"Every little bit of negativity I was up against was grounds for me to stay positive," Parker said in an interview during the band's recent tour. "It kept me alive."

Parker left his home in Brooklyn at age 13; he moved into the borough's lush Prospect Park, sleeping outdoors in the summer and in the subways when the temperatures dropped.

He eventually entered the dangerous city shelter system; at one point, a drug bust landed him in the Bronx House of Detention for 60 days.

"It was like a chopped-up situation — from shelter to apartment to shelter to street," said Parker. "That whole period was from age 15 to 20."

While residing at the Franklin Avenue shelter in the South Bronx, he met counselor Scott Sterling, better known as DJ Scott LaRock.

"I was the youngest client, he was the youngest social worker," recalled Parker. "It was like we were destined to hook up."

It wasn't John Lennon meeting Paul McCartney at the Quarry School for Boys in Liverpool, but it was enough to convince both they had a future in music. They picked up several other residents from shelters, and some other friends. Boogie Down Productions was born.

When "Criminal Minded" was released last year, they scored a hit; despite very little radio support, it sold more than 300,000 copies.

LaRock and Parker were heavily into preparing the follow-up when the DJ was murdered on Aug. 26, 1987, after intervening in a dispute over a woman. In May, two Bronx teen-agers were arrested and charged in the slaying.

Although Scott's violent death cast a pall over Parker and company, the rapper says he did not consider quitting.

"Never. The thought never crossed my mind for a second," he said. "This album was already done before Scott passed away — not done on tape, done in our heads. I'm just carrying out an agreement that me and Scott made."

Included on the second LP, "By All Means Necessary," are two cuts which decry the city's problems with the drug "crack" and with crime: "Stop The Violence" and "Illegal Business." The problem, says Parker, is delivering the message without giving a lecture.

"The approach is not to sound like their mother and father — people don't want to hear that," he said. "The approach is to sound like their brother or their homeboy."

The approach is also to sound fresh, Parker added.

"Personally, I listen to the radio to know what not to sound like," he said. "I could run the list down for days of who not to sound like. You could say everybody in the music industry at this point except Gil Scott Heron."

NBC Censors Upsetting Geraldo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Geraldo Rivera says he's having a devil of a time with NBC censors over the TV personality's upcoming special on satanism.

Rivera said Thursday he is so unhappy with network censors that he may broadcast blank pictures Tuesday night rather than make more cuts in his two-hour special, "Devil Worship: Exposing Satan's Underground." "We're going to make the changes that we consider appropriate," Rivera said.

NBC spokeswoman Rosemary Keenan said talks between Rivera and network censors were continuing.

Rivera had hoped the show would include graphic descriptions of satanic murders and other rituals.

"If you sanitize it to make it more palatable to the network censors, then you do violence to the truth, in our opinion," Rivera said.

Publicist Says Robin Givens Will Survive Notoriety

By Nikki Finke
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Before Robin Givens married Mike Tyson, she was young, beautiful and a not-very-well-known actress hoping to parlay a sitcom role into stardom.

Now that Ms. Givens and Tyson are divorcing amid a maelstrom of media frenzy, she is young, beautiful and a figure of national notoriety. But what has that done to her career?

On Wednesday, another chapter in the Givens-Tyson soap opera played out when Ms. Givens, through her lawyer Raoul Felder, announced that she was giving up claim to Tyson's millions. Immediately, Tyson's attorney, Howard Weitzman, suggested that Ms. Givens made the decision only because she knew a trial would have been damaging to her professional future.

Have stories portraying her, variously, from a gold-digging Svengali to a victimized battered wife already scared away producers, casting directors and deal-makers? Or has Givens' new-found fame made her such a hot property that what the public thinks about her personal life does not matter?

"She's hot now and no matter what she does — as long as what she does hits the front pages — she'll always be hot," says veteran Hollywood publicist Lee Solters.

Triad Artists' agency co-founder Rick Ray doubts that negative publicity over the divorce will have a long-term effect on Ms. Givens' career, but her renouncement of Tyson's money was "a lovely gesture whose whole purpose may have been to establish firmly that she is a decent human being."

It is too early to tell whether the divorce brouhaha will affect the ratings of Ms. Givens' Wednesday night ABC sitcom "Head of the Class." Early figures suggested that this week's season debut — opposite NBC's World Series — performed a bit better than last year's average show, but an ABC spokesman insists that the matrimonial saga "hasn't affected the show in any way, shape or form."

But Michael Elias, the co-executive producer of "Head of the Class," acknowledges, "we know we have gotten a lot of publicity. I have friends who say I read about your show every day — in the sports pages. It would be naive for me to claim there's no Robin Givens factor."

Elias thinks that it is "great" that Ms. Givens has renounced Tyson's money. "I really think that will help her image."

Though Ms. Givens was booed when she was introduced at her husband's Atlantic City title fight with Michael Spinks, not everyone appears to be taking sides. Elias says that the audience at the show's taping Friday reacted to her "the same as to any other cast member. No booing. No hissing."

"Besides," Elias says, "divorce is not a crime against humanity."

Many celebrities have endured notorious episodes in their personal lives and still had successful careers. What distinguishes the rocky Givens-Tyson marriage from others is the remarkable way it has been played out in the media — from the supermarket tabloids to the network newscasts. Instead of going to a marriage counselor, the couple went to Barbara Walters, figuratively at least.

To help her image, Ms. Givens this week hired New York power publicist Howard J. Rubenstein.

But press agent Solters sees the Givens case as a "challenge" for a publicist: "Intentionally or unintentionally, I don't think this has made her look good. But right now I don't think that her career is in danger at all."

In the meantime, he says, Ms. Givens has to "bite the bullet" and hope that "talent will out."

Solters explains: "If you eliminate everything that happened, Robin Givens before Mike Tyson was a beautiful, attractive tremendous presence with obvious talent. That's the strongest offense and defense a person can have."

To another veteran Hollywood P.R. man, Joe Sutton, Ms. Givens' career "will now sink or swim on talent — because people now will look at everything she's doing, and especially her work, with a microscope."

One beneficiary of the Givens-Tyson sparring could be "The Women of Brewster Place," an ABC made-for-TV movie starring Oprah Winfrey and, now, Ms. Givens.

Actress Jodie Foster, in scene from 'The Accused'

Jodie Foster Makes Impressive Comeback

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If a four-year interlude at college hampered Jodie Foster's film career, it isn't noticeable. She has already made three impressive screen appearances this year and has another movie on the way.

The movies are "Five Corners," in which she plays a young New Yorker preyed upon by a demented ex-convict; "Stealing Home," with Ms. Foster as a free spirit who ends her life in suicide; and "The Accused," which casts her as a swinging waitress who becomes the victim of a gang rape in the game room of a bar.

Next year will bring another strong drama, "Back Track," directed by and starring Dennis Hopper.

All this activity has come since her 1985 graduation from Yale University, where she received a bachelor's degree in literature. Obviously, she has no regrets about taking four years off for higher education.

"I loved every minute of it — I can't imagine where I'd be without it," she commented. "I can't imagine what I'd be doing. I know I'd have a different personality, for a lot of reasons."

"I grew up on the West Coast. I'd never spent any time on the East Coast, except for working. That was different. And the kinds of people there were very different."

"Did I learn anything? Yeah, I did. The same books are everywhere; you just need to go to a library to find them. I can't remember anything I learned in English classes, but I do feel strengthened," she said. "I feel there is an intellectual strength that I didn't have before. Maybe it's just a confidence, or the ability to say that my perspective on this or that is not enough; you have to go deeper."

"I think it's helped in my work. Maybe it's hindered my work. Whatever it is, it has influenced my work."

Cynics might say that she wasted four years that could have been devoted to building a career and fortune. She disagrees.

"It's my life," Ms. Foster said. "Any decisions made from the heart are generally right for you. I don't think I would be a very happy person if I hadn't gone to college. In a lot of ways, I never thought that I would be an actor for the rest of my life. In other ways, I thought that if I was going to be an actor, chances are that if I did it with integrity, I'd be around a long time."

Critics have more or less predicted just that. While some have had reservations about the three 1988 Foster releases, her performances have elicited raves. Her beleaguered Sarah Tobias in "The Accused" seems certain to attract Academy attention.

The character is not far removed from the role that catapulted Jodie Foster to fame at 14, as the girl prostitute in "Taxi Driver." Sarah Tobias is no hooker, but she is a foul-mouthed, hard-living urban survivor whose only friend appears to be Kelly McGillis, a city prosecutor.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Oct. 22

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Eat a balanced diet today because demanding work is of prime importance and should be done using the utmost skill and precision.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You want to go out and play. Stick to what you know and have mastered. This is not a good time to learn a new skill.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You would be wise to do everything possible to get your household affairs in order. Make sure everything is in good operating condition.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Stay alert and calm today as you go about your errands. Be careful of argumentative clerks, policemen and other people's pets.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Carefully go over your financial balance sheet and reconcile all bank statements. You may find yourself overextended. Delay investments.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You feel like it is time to go out and socialize with friends you have neglected. Duties at home make you decide on priorities.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Don't let yesterday's extravagant mood make you promise more than you can deliver. Friends will remember your promises and expect delivery.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Examine your friends carefully because their foreign ideas may not go along with your own philosophy of life. Communicate with them.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): A strong inclination to get involved professionally with business people can only work if you are prepared to do what you promise.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You want to go away and learn new things, but responsibilities to someone older who is confined bring you down to a more practical level.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Now is the time to handle debts you incurred with your friends. Take care of them promptly, and you won't have to worry about them.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): It doesn't seem like a good day to lecture peers. They don't want to listen, and if you can't practice what you preach, you'll be shunned.

 From reading our columns, you might come to think that an expert declarer knows where every card is and never has to rely on guesswork. Not so. Every once in a while a hand comes along where, no matter what your level of skill, you are completely at sea. For instance, consider this hand from a team match.

Both Souths arrived at a contract of four hearts after similar auctions. North discounted his queen of diamonds when he decided to bid only two hearts at his first turn, but he made up for that when his partner made a game try. At both tables West took the first two tricks with high diamonds while East echoed to show an even number of cards in the suit by first playing the seven. West continued with the jack of diamonds.

At one table, declarer decided that, for his vulnerable overall, West was more likely to hold the queen of hearts, so he chose to ruff with the eight in dummy. East over-ruffed and cashed the ace of spades for the setting trick.

At the other table, declarer reasoned that, since West held six diamonds, he was likely to be short in hearts. As that might have persuaded him to finesse East for her majesty anyway, declarer opted to ruff with the king of trumps and then run the ten. When that won, the next round of trumps enabled declarer to pick up the queen and claim his contract.

Who was right? There's little to choose. However, we are a trifle more impressed by the latter argument. Could it be because it proved to be right?

U.S. Seeks Marcos Fraud Indictment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government planned to seek the indictment today of former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos on charges of diverting enormous sums of stolen money to his own use after fleeing to the United States in 1986, federal sources say.

The Justice Department decided to move against Marcos after his lawyers, involved in plea bargaining negotiations with federal prosecutors, missed a 5 p.m. EDT deadline Thursday to respond to a demand that he plead guilty to a racketeering charge, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani plans to seek charges of racketeering and fraud against Marcos, said the sources. Prosecutors also have investigated activities of Marcos' wife, Imelda, Saudi Arabian financier Adnan Khashoggi and a number of associates.

Earlier in the day, President Reagan indicated he would step aside and not intervene to stop a Marcos indictment, saying that in order to bring the matter to him, "I would think that it would have to be a matter of foreign policy."

Reagan said, "It may not come to my desk at all."

Engaging in plea bargaining discussions prior to indictment was a concession by the Justice Department to the State Department, which had urged such a course in an attempt to avoid indicting the former head of state. Justice Department officials had wanted an indictment to precede any plea bargaining negotiations.

In June 1986, four months after

Marcos fled to the United States, Giuliani, the U.S. attorney in Manhattan, began investigating Marcos in connection with allegations that Marcos diverted enormous sums of government money to secret bank accounts.

The government believes that Marcos and his wife fraudulently diverted the money from the Philippine and U.S. governments, according to an opinion Wednesday by a three-judge panel in a matter relating to the Marcos probe.

Marcos and his wife, according to the court opinion, allegedly embezzled the money to buy real estate in New York and other personal property.

Some money, according to the court, allegedly was transferred to secret Swiss bank accounts held by the Marcoses.

Also under investigation in the probe has been Khashoggi, who posed as the owner of valuable paintings and New York property secretly held by the Marcoses, according to court documents.

Pinochet Cabinet Quits In Mass To Clear Way For New Policies

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The political opposition, pressing for policy changes that will lead to democratic reforms, is hoping that President Augusto Pinochet's new Cabinet will have more power than his previous one.

All 16 members of Pinochet's Cabinet resigned on Thursday and the 72-year-old general was expected to pick a new group of ministers today.

The sudden shakeup in Pinochet's authoritarian government came the same day a magazine reported that Pinochet's aides tried to delay news that Chilean voters had overwhelmingly rejected him in the Oct. 5 referendum on his rule.

The reports said the purported plot to delay the vote returns — and then give Pinochet new emergency powers — were rebuffed by members of Pinochet's military junta.

Government secretary-general Orlando Poblete, a Cabinet member, said Pinochet's Cabinet resigned Thursday to allow the president "to select his people and take the steps he considers proper" following his defeat.

"We have put our posts at his (Pinochet's) disposition," Poblete told reporters.

Recent events "make it necessary that he (Pinochet) adjust some portfolios ... so that his team is in accord with the new stage the country is in," Poblete said.

Traditionally, the right-wing army commander has given little authority to Cabinet members. But opposition leaders said they hoped for a new interior minister with powers to negotiate.

"The key is who the new interior minister will be, and the level of autonomy he will be given," Socialist leader Ricardo Lagos said. "We know of some people who were offered the job, and who asked for a minimal autonomy and were rejected because of that."

"We don't want what happened in 1983," he added. That year, faced with civil unrest and economic crisis, Pinochet named a new interior minister to negotiate with the opposition. The talks quickly failed, and later were interpreted as a stalling tactic by Pinochet, who then declared a state of siege to crack down on dissidents.

Pinochet lost by 800,000 votes in the referendum.

Triad Health Care Center Of Greenville

We know the kind of special people it takes to work in a Long Term Care/Geriatric Setting. Long Term Care Nurses give of themselves to the patients and work hard. They deal with aging and confused patients, elderly people who are frustrated at being unable to care for themselves and patients who are so ill they are unaware of the care they need. The special people that work in this environment are rewarded in a much grander way than the competitive wages & benefits we offer. If you are that special person (RN, LPN, NA) that can give of yourself, then you are the person we are looking for to compliment our staff.

Give us a call at 758-7100 or send resume to DNS-Triad Health Care Center of Greenville, Rt. 1, Box 21, Greenville, N.C.

SUPERINTENDANT OF BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

Established Rocky Mount Organization needs a mature and highly motivated individual to act as Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds. Person must have a minimum of five years experience and a proven background in building maintenance and housekeeping. Duties will include supervision of housekeeping staff, managing maintenance budget, managing preventive maintenance program for building and equipment, arranging and overseeing maintenance contracts and other assigned duties.

Excellent salary and benefits package for the right candidate includes: Full Retirement program, Employees Health Insurance, Life Insurance program, two weeks paid vacation, etc. This position is part of Staff Management Team. Send resume of qualifications and salary history to DR7 1186, c/o The Daily Reflector, PO Box 1967, Greenville NC 27835 before November 1, 1988 to be considered for this excellent opportunity.

Man Held In Threat On Bush

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — A 21-year-old man being held on charges he threatened Vice President George Bush's life has bought at least six guns and read books by mass murderer Charles Manson, Secret Service agents testified.

U.S. Magistrate Stewart Elliott ruled Thursday that David Allen Russell was a threat to himself and others and should not be allowed to go free on bond.

Russell waived his right to a preliminary hearing, and was returned to the Daviess County Detention Center in this northwest Kentucky city.

Secret Service Agent Don Bell testified that Russell had confessed to mailing two letters to President Reagan threatening the Republican presidential nominee's life.

"If he wins, he will be executed and his blood will be on your hands," said Bell, reading from the second letter.

The agent said the second letter reached the White House on Oct. 14, about a 1 1/2 weeks after the first one.

Russell was arrested Tuesday at the home he shares with his mother, Beatrice.

He is charged with threatening to take the life of or to inflict bodily harm upon the vice president, and sending a threatening letter through the mail.

No charges have been filed in connection with the second letter. U.S. Attorney Joseph M. Whittle said a federal grand jury meeting in Louisville on Nov. 7 will determine whether additional charges should be filed.

Bell and Secret Service Agent Michael Richardson described Russell as a man who had never been employed and who had for the past 10 years been interested in assassination accounts.

Bell said Russell told him he had read books by Manson, and that the young man has bought at least six guns, most of them in the past year.

The agents said they believed Russell would flee if freed on bond.

The first letter was mailed to Reagan on Sept. 29, two days after Bush addressed thousands at a rally in Owensboro's English Park.

"I hope Bush feels his life is more important than the presidency (sic)," the letter said. "I didn't use my pistol this time. I will next time."

Russell said he had carried a concealed .45-caliber semi-automatic pistol loaded with six rounds to the rally, Bell said.

Defense attorney Richard Flaherty argued that his client has no past criminal record and was no threat to society.

He described Russell as a young man who never learned to drive and who lived at home, taking care of his mother, who is dying of cancer and has a heart condition.

Dukakis Aide Quits After Raising Bush Rumor

BOSTON (AP) — An aide to Michael Dukakis resigned from his staff after the Democratic presidential campaign disavowed her comment that Republican George Bush should "fess up" about a rumor that circulated Wednesday on Wall Street.

Dukakis apologized for the remarks Thursday by Donna Brazile, who issued a statement announcing her resignation from her post as deputy national field director.

"Today I made certain comments which I deeply regret," Brazile said in the statement, released by Dukakis campaign headquarters in Boston. "I believe too strongly in the importance of electing Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen to allow myself to become an issue in the campaign. Because the time is short, and the issues are so important, I have decided to leave the campaign." Earlier, she had told reporters traveling with Dukakis that "the American people have every right to know" if rumors involving Bush's personal life are true.

Dukakis campaign spokesman Dayton Duncan said Brazile "was not speaking on behalf of the campaign in any way whatsoever."

Bush's spokeswoman, Sheila Tate, said, "The Bush campaign has no comment, no reaction."

Brazile's initial remarks were made to a small group of reporters after Dukakis appearances in New Haven, Conn., and she elaborated during a bus trip to New York City. She raised the subject of the Bush rumors in the midst of a conversation regarding the gender gap and the problems of working families.

"I wasn't on the stock market yesterday," Brazile said. "But I understood they got a little concerned that George was going to the White House with somebody other than Barbara."

"I think George Bush owes it to the American people to fess up. The American people have every right to know if Barbara Bush will share that bed with him in the White House."

The LA Weekly, in its Oct. 14 edition, quoted unidentified sources as saying Bush had had an affair with a member of his staff and also that he had an affair during the mid-1970s with another woman. The rumor first cropped up in 1987, prompting this denial from George Bush Jr.: "The answer to the big A question is N.O." The LA Weekly account was denied this week by Tate, who described the report as "warmed-over garbage."

Wall Street analysts attributed an abrupt market decline Wednesday to a rumor that The Washington Post planned to publish a damaging story about Bush. The Post did not publish such a story.

Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brontas said Bush and Dukakis met Thursday at the Waldorf Astoria, where both were appearing at a dinner, and Dukakis extended his regrets for Brazile's remarks.

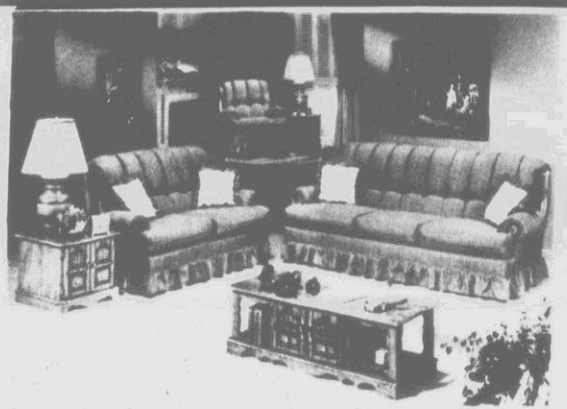

"He saw the vice president tonight a little earlier and he did apologize to the vice president," Brontas said. "He expressed his regret."

Brazile "voluntarily resigned" and regrets her remarks, Brontas said.

Brazile said she spoke only for herself and added, "I'm not pushing this on behalf of the campaign."

Quakes Hit Two Areas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two mild earthquakes hit northern California while a moderately strong tremor a continent away jarred parts of Maine and New Hampshire, but authorities in both regions reported no injuries or damage.

The Weston Observatory in Weston, Mass., said the New England quake measured 4.0 on the Richter scale, enough to cause moderate damage, and the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., said the tremor measured 3.9 on the Richter scale. Walter Anderson, director of the Maine Geological Survey, said the difference in the two readings could be regarded as insignificant.

"It shook the whole house. Pictures on the wall, everything in it went flopping back and forth," said 78-year-old Leo Perron, a resident of Berlin, N.H., near the quake's epicenter.

"I thought it was a load of lumber falling," said Sandy Endicott, a secretary at P.H. Chadbourne & Co. lumber yard in Bethel, Maine.

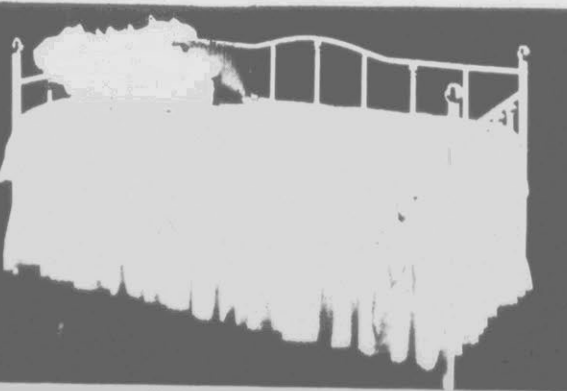

Thursday's quake struck at 9:09 a.m. and was centered five miles northeast of Berlin, the Weston Observatory said.

Authorities said rumblings and booms were reported all the way from central New Hampshire to Yarmouth on the Maine coast, to Augusta in the south-central part of Maine.

Police in Berlin received more than 100 telephone calls Thursday morning after the quake, but no reports of damage.

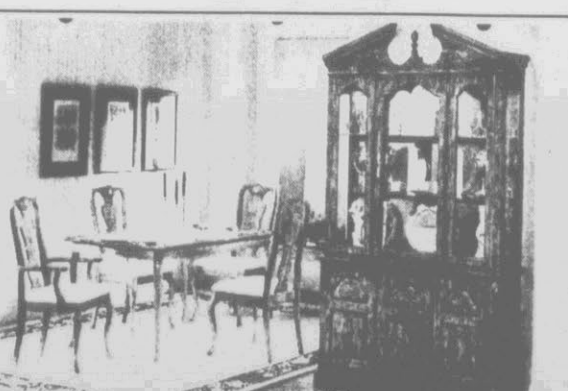

In California, one quake, measuring 3.9 on the Richter scale, occurred near the Geysers area about 50 miles north of San Francisco about 10:30 a.m. Thursday, the University of California Seismographic Station at Berkeley reported.

The other, with a 3.3 magnitude, occurred near Garberville, about 180 miles north of San Francisco, about 4:20 p.m., according to the seismographic station.
