Kohl Says Soviets Will Release Political Prisoners

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany said today the Soviets have agreed to release all people regarded as political prisoners within the next 10 weeks.

Kohl made the statement at a news conference at which he reviewed the results of 10 hours of talks he held this week with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other top Soviet officials.

During his discussions, Kohl said, "the Soviets confirmed that they would release before the end of the year all people who could be considered political prisoners."

When asked how many people that could involve, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany replied, "We are not in a position to give final figures."

Many Western governments have given lists to the Soviets of people they regard as jailed or held in psychiatric institutions for their political or religious beliefs.

When asked if the pledge had come from Gorbachev himself, Kohl said only it was made "during the talks." His remarks in German were translated into English by the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Last year, Soviet authorities released at least 300 prisoners who were being held on charges such as anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda or slandering the Soviet state. Most Estonian and Lithuanian nationalists who were being imprisoned for their views have been released this year.

The ruling Communist Party and government are reviewing the Soviet penal code, and the United States has repeatedly urged that the Soviets abolish those laws most often used to hold political dissenters.

Amnesty International, the London-based human rights group, said last month the number of people imprisoned in Soviet labor camps, psychiatric hospitals or exiled for their political beliefs numbered about 200, compared to 10,000 a few years ago.

Soviet officials contend that all but a few people classified in the West as political prisoners have been released since a review of such cases began in February 1987.

They also say the law under which they were charged, forbidding dissemination of anti-Soviet propaganda or agitation, is being softened in the revision of the Soviet criminal code.

Segregated Voting Expected To Erode Botha's Power Base

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police and soldiers conducted body searches on black voters outside Cape Town as South Africans of all races voted today in segregated municipal elections.

President P.W. Botha's ruling party was expected to lose ground to extreme right-wing opponents in white cities, and a light turnout was reported in black townships where anti-apartheid activists urged a vote boycott in defiance of the government's state of emergency regulations.

State Radio South Africa reported 1,946 candidates for the 7,229 town council seats were elected unopposed. It noted fewer than half the 1,839 black township council seats were being contested, with no candidates for 138 seats.

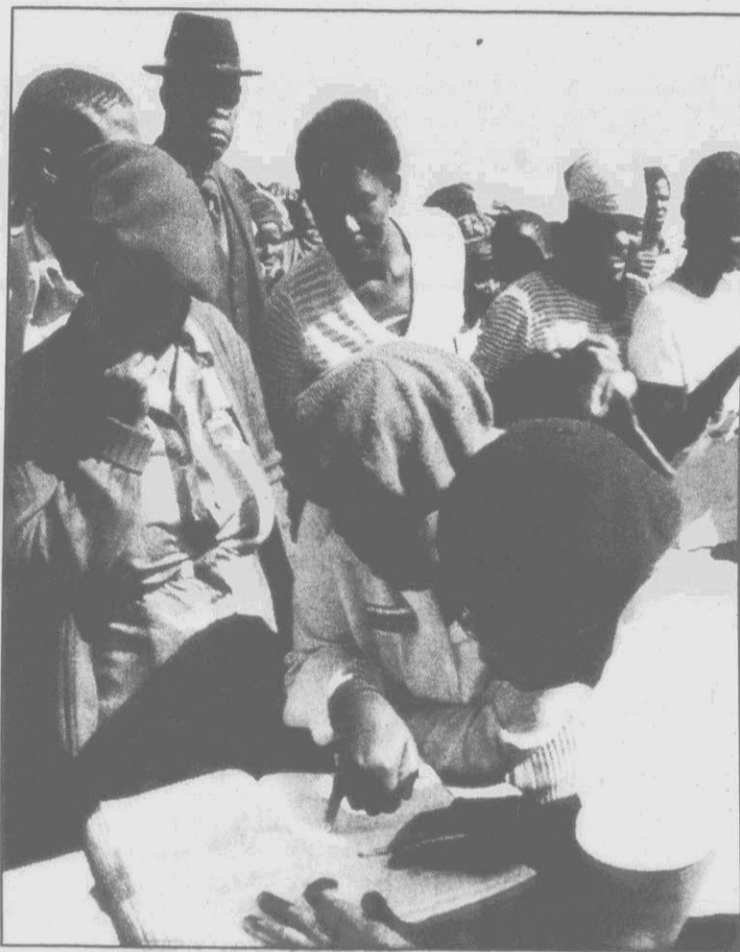

Black, white, Asian and mixed-race voters cast ballots today, marking the first time all four major race groups in South Africa voted on the same day.

Anti-apartheid activists such as Archbishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, called for a national day of protest today. Such calls usually include a general strike.

But most black townships appeared normal except for heightened police patrols and the presence of armed security forces around polling booths and transportation facilities.

Police said gasoline bombs were thrown during the night at the homes of three candidates in Soweto, the country's largest black township, outside Johannesburg. Also, a limpet mine exploded in a beer hall in Soweto, but there were no injuries.

Two black candidates had been killed during the campaign, one Monday night outside Port Elizabeth, the other in August in Soweto.

Bush Lead Rises In National Polls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Two national polls have found George Bush consolidating his lead in the presidential race, with fewer voters saying they may change their minds — although many remain dissatisfied with their choices.

Bush held double-digit leads in the CBS News-New York Times and Gallup polls released Tuesday, further evidence of a surge for the Republican nominee since his debate with Democrat Michael Dukakis on Oct. 13.

Bush led Dukakis by 13 points among probable voters in the CBS-Times poll, 54-41 percent, and by 50-40 among registered voters in Gallup's poll. He led by 14 points among Gallup respondents judged likely to vote.

Bush had led by a consistent but narrow margin — four to seven points in most polls — since late August. But the numbers started to move in his favor last week, and the new results continued that trend.

In one key finding, the CBS-Times poll found clear success in Bush's attacks on Dukakis on crime. Sixty-two percent said Bush was tough enough in dealing with crime and criminals; just 37 percent said the same of Dukakis.

In another, 25 percent said the political commercials they had seen helped them decide whom to support, and more than half of that group went for Bush. Still, 62 percent said commercials had not helped them decide.

The polls found dissatisfaction with both nominees. In the CBS-Times poll, 64 percent wished they had other choices than Bush and Dukakis. And just 42 percent of Gallup's respondents had a strong preference, compared with about 60 percent at this stage in the 1984 election.

DPI Holds Firm On Testing Date

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Sixth- and eighth-graders in the state are scheduled to take a writing test Tuesday, the day after Halloween, and while a local parent feels the date should be changed for better scores, the state Department of Public Instruction has said the date will stay the same.

Rod Whitley, the Pitt County schools' coordinator for testing, said school system testing coordinators noticed how close the test was scheduled to Halloween.

"We had contacted the state department and told them of a potential we had seen and they had already noted this potential," he said.

In a letter to testing coordinators, Dr. William J. Brown Jr., assistant state superintendent for research and testing, said he was attempting to get the date changed. Whitley said.

But in reviewing the test date Brown found several conflicts, such as scheduled field trips or teacher workdays in some school systems, that would make it difficult to

Waste Disposal Costs Rising

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The average cost of solid waste management in North Carolina will jump to $20 or $30 a ton within the next three to five years, a state solid waste official said Tuesday.

Terry Dover, eastern field supervisor of solid waste operations for the N.C. Department of Human Resources, said it now costs an average of $6 to $12 a ton to dispose of solid waste, but new state anti-pollution regulations will force governments to consider more expensive alternatives. Some places in the Northeastern United States are paying prices like $115 a ton.

"Here in North Carolina, we have made a determination that in the future, if you go out and site a new sanitary landfill, you will have to take into consideration liners and leachate collection systems," Dover said.

New Hanover County is so far the only community in North Carolina that has had to go that far. It now costs $23 a ton to dump trash at the county's lined landfill or the garbage-burning steam plant.

Dover was one of five speakers at a conference in Greenville on the future of landfills, sponsored by the Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce.

Counties with a small tax base might have a difficult time paying for high-technology trash disposal without some help, Dover said. He wasn't telling local officials and landfill operators attending anything they didn't already know.

"We know we can't afford an incinerator ourselves, and other counties can't, either," said Pender County Commissioner Neil Woodcock, who added that he advocates a regional approach to trash disposal. John Everhart, town administrator of Fairmont, said he is serving on a task force for Robeson County looking at solid waste disposal possibilities. He said he likes the idea of joint action with nearby counties. He said he is also interested in finding ways to recycle such items as used tires, thereby saving landfill costs and providing needed jobs in his area.

Dover said he is optimistic that a $10 million landfill loan fund will be created by the General Assembly in its 1989 session. The measure was introduced in the 1988 short session but did not get to the floor.

Dr. Kathryn D. Wagner, a policy analyst in the Office of Technology Assessment of the U.S. Congress, reported on her recently completed national landfill study. She said hundreds of cities and counties have established programs of recycling. Some involve source separation where citizens separate some components of solid waste in their homes.

Dinosaurs Go To School In Pitt

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Students in six Pitt County schools are learning about "Those Magical Dinosaurs" in a presentation on the prehistoric beasts.

Mark Daniel of Winston-Salem is sharing the information uncovered about dinosaurs with students at Third Street, Wintergreen, Eastern, Elmhurst, South Greenville and W.H. Robinson schools this week.

In the 45-minute program the children participate in magic tricks adapted to a dinosaur theme. The dinosaurs change color, run about and frolic, with the help of Daniel. A baby stegosaurus puppet and a gigantic dinosaur egg are highlights of the show.

Students at Third Street School expanded the theme of dinosaurs into their studies Tuesday as part of the presentation, Principal Carolyn Ferebee said.

"There needs to be a time throughout the year when we can focus on science," she said. "We integrate reading, science and math with one theme, like dinosaurs, and integrate learning around it."

The library at Third Street was transformed into a "dinosaurium," where students participated in several dinosaur activities such as puzzles, matching and storytelling. Dinosaur murals were made in art classes, and "dinosaur rock" was featured in the music classes. A dinosaur cookie was baked by the cafeteria staff for each student.

Students were exposed to charts, books, a Design-A-Saurus computer program, small models and filmstrips of dinosaurs. In addition, dinosaurs were made using clay, and students wrote stories about dinosaurs using the computer program Kid Writer.

Daniel's presentations at the six schools are the result of a cooperative effort of volunteer coordinators from the schools, said Ann Maxwell, a coordinator and a parent at Third Street.

Carr Is Sentenced

A Greenville man has been sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $200,000 after pleading guilty to two counts of cocaine trafficking.

Superior Court Judge James C. Davis of Concord sentenced Clarence Earl Carr, 62, of Building 3296 Plantation Apartments No. 207, in Pitt Superior Court on Monday. Charged with five drug violations, Carr pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine and transporting cocaine. Both charges involved more than 28 grams of cocaine but less than 200 grams and are trafficking offenses.

Narcotics investigators with the Greenville Police Department arrested Carr March 31, according to court files, after a confidential informant tipped them that Carr would be traveling to New York City to purchase a large amount of cocaine and crack.

In an application for a search warrant dated March 30, Officer A.P. White said investigators observed Carr drive to Rocky Mount the day before and board a train headed for New York City. On March 30, investigators observed Carr return to Rocky Mount and drive back to Greenville.

In the arrest, officers seized six ounces of cocaine and crack, $3,333 and various drug paraphernalia.

Legislative Hopefuls Voice Views

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Eight candidates for seats in the 6th and 9th House and Senate districts voiced their views to a gathering of about 45 people at a League of Women Voters candidate forum Tuesday night.

Ninth House District hopefuls led off the forum, then responded to questions from the audience.

Incumbent Democrat Walter Jones Jr., who has served six years in the House, outlined several bills he had sponsored in the General Assembly — including a measure designed to help eliminate the spiraling costs of election campaigns and a bill making it a crime to coerce state employees into supporting a candidate.

Jones said the most important aspect about his service as a legislator is "the opportunity to help people."

Jones also said that people convicted of crimes — particularly drug-related offenses — "should spend every day in jail that the judge gives them."

Democrat Ed Warren, with eight years experience in the General Assembly, said, "I take pride in working with the delegation we have here in Pitt County" for legislation that will benefit the local area.

Warren is co-chairman of the education committee, which he said oversees the spending of "65 percent of the state budget" on programs for the public schools, the community colleges and the state's 16-campus University of North Carolina system.

Warren suggested that public schools should "concentrate more on basic fundamentals" in the first three grades in an effort to reduce the high dropout rate. "Eighty percent of the prisoners" in the state, Warren said, are school dropouts.

Republican hopeful Marshal Helms, who is seeking one of the two 9th House District seats, suggested that the "major problem" facing the state and the nation is communism. "We must survive by free enterprise ... which means a minimum of federal or state regulations," he said.

"The thing about the present delegation" representing the county in the General Assembly, Helms said, "is that they are Democrats. 'I see them as liberals. I see them standing for regulation of private affairs,' both business and social.

Joe Sturz, the second Republican in the 9th House contest, said he entered the race because of concern that "Greenville and Pitt County did not have a two party system" and he is "working to remedy that situation.

"It's important to send Republican legislators to Raleigh," Sturz suggested, "to help turn this state around. Radical elements have gained more and more control of the Democratic Party."

Sturz also voiced support for prayer in the schools.

Sixth House District incumbent Gene Rogers, a Democrat, suggesting that, "It's important that voters get out to the polls on election day," said, "I believe in trying to inform the public of the issues in the campaign."

Seeking a second term in the General Assembly, Rogers was superintendent of schools in Martin County for 20 years before his retirement three years ago.

A "strong advocate of early childhood education," Rogers said, "My opinion is that we do not concentrate on basic courses. Greater concentration ought to occur."

Rogers' Republican opposition, Raymond Earl Freeman, did not participate in the forum.

Incumbent Democrat R.L. "Bob" Martin, running unopposed in the 6th Senate District race, stressed the need for improved highways and more economic development in the east.

Candidates in the 9th Senate District race — incumbent Democrat Tom Taft and Republican hopeful Bill Dansey — continued on a course charted over the past several weeks of the campaign. Taft cited his support for East Carolina University and other education programs — such as the state's basic education program — and Dansey charged that funding for ECU and other programs for eastern North Carolina have been short-changed by the Democrat-controlled General Assembly.

Dansey, just as he had at a news conference earlier Tuesday and at one last week, said ECU has ranked "last in appropriations" among the 15 UNC system university campuses "in the last 10 to 15 years.

"East Carolina hasn't gotten its fair share," in spite of what Taft says, Dansey said.

Dansey also questioned whether the state would provide full funding for a proposed regional center in Greenville, and charged that "25 of ... 40 bills" sponsored by Taft in the General Assembly were "pork barrel bills - what they call special legislation."

Taft, seeking a third term in the Senate, said voters should consider such things as "general legislative service, leadership in specific areas, local appropriations and potential for future leadership" before voting for a candidate.

He cited his record of support for higher education, more pay for teachers and support for human services, as well as his position as vice chairman of the agriculture committee and support for ECU's budget needs.

Taft said the pork barrel bills he sponsored represented "honorable legislation," which provided state money for such things as area fire and rescue services, human services and the arts. "They have brought your tax dollars back to Pitt County and eastern North Carolina," he said.

The league has scheduled a forum for Pitt County commissioner candidates for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Willis Building, intersection of First and Reade Streets.

How to measure
If installing inside window frame, measure width and length.
If installing outside window frame, add desired overlap, such as molding width, to inside width. If there is no molding, recommended overlap is 1/4" per side. For example, if you are installing inside a window frame that measures 23 1/2" wide and 56 1/2" long, select the package marked 23" to 23 7/8" wide x 64" long. Blind lengths can be shortened at home.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Demagoging

Campaign Shows Bush's Vacuum

George Bush is demagoging for the presidency of the United States because he does not have a clear agenda for that office.

The rhetoric about the pledge of allegiance and about being tough on crime and drugs is no agenda. It's merely an ill-disguised blanket of protection for his lack of substance. His attacks on Michael Dukakis' so-called liberalism are hollow. They are based on scare tactics, not Dukakis' record.

For example, as governor of Massachusetts, Dukakis' record is one of a moderate who supports balanced budgets and integrity in government — not massive social spending. Yes, Dukakis is an advocate of the poor and the homeless, as a presidential candidate should be. Yes, he is supportive of civil rights and first amendment rights as defined by this nation's highest, most learned and distinguished court — as any visionary should be. And yes, Dukakis desires world peace, as any leader should.

But he is no flaming liberal, as Bush's attacks suppose.

Bush has wrapped himself in the American flag to hide his lack of direction. But his effort has failed. In attempting to paint Michael Dukakis soft on crime, Bush has painted himself into a corner — an empty corner.

And nothing shows it better than the brouhaha over furloughed rapist-killer Willie Horton. The commercials the Bush campaign devised connecting Horton and Dukakis neither show Dukakis is a liberal nor prove he's soft on crime. What the commercials do illustrate is Bush's vacuum.

In addition, Bush has erroneously challenged Dukakis' patriotism — again, belying his own void of ideas. Dukakis' political history exemplifies the exact type of adherence to the American ideals Bush claims Dukakis lacks. The Democrat first rose to power through intense grassroots effort — door-to-door campaigning that drew intense support from the people. He was elected to his first office by this people power.

When he ran for governor of Massachusetts, he espoused reform, honesty and integrity in a state ridden with cronyism and corruption — and won on these very American principles. So when Bush jabs at Dukakis' patriotism, that is not only an attack without substantiation, it is not only a cheap shot, it is a shot that shows a blank Bush.

Bush has an immense amount of political experience, but he has never set an agenda. That lack is evident in his 1988 campaign, through his vacuous attacks on Michael Dukakis. Bush is demagoging for the White House, and he's distorting the meaning and significance of American values with his emotionalism.

Better Route

A Safer Bridge To Cross

Most bridges are crossed with little thought from the motorists' as to how they got there.

Bridges must be safe, however, and eventually they have to be replaced.

One bridge on the city road system has now been replaced and one of the city's thoroughfares, which will see a rapidly increasing vehicular load, is being reopened for traffic.

The Greene Mill Run bridge on Hooker Road was reconstructed at a cost of $193,000. Eighty percent of this cost was paid through a federal program with the remaining 20 percent coming from city funds.

The road, which connects Dickinson Avenue to Greenville Boulevard, has been closed and traffic has been detoured since July 15. But the bridge was completed, workers installed guard rails and the bridge was inspected by the city engineering department. The route was reopened to traffic on Monday.

It is estimated that Hooker Road will carry about 5,000 vehicles per day. That traffic load will increase as residential construction continues along the road and business expansion takes place near Hooker Road's intersection with Greenville Boulevard. Certainly the two-lane road will have to be expanded and city officials say the bridge is constructed to handle eventual widening.

The new bridge was constructed because the old one was in a condition which called for replacement. A vital traffic artery has been out of service since July 15. Now, however, the new bridge is in place and this route is in better condition for those who use it. For a city with rapidly-growing traffic snarls and transportation woes, that improvement is important progress.

Public Forum

To the editor:

When you have been involved in politics for a long number of years, you learn to expect the unexpected. This year for the first time some "radical" Republicans (not "regular" Republicans) have twice broken off, trashed or removed from my front lawn signs supporting Democratic candidates. I am proud to support Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen, Bob Jordan and Tony Rand, Tom Taft and all of the other Democratic nominees, because I believe strongly that these men are by far the best choice we have for our national, state and local leadership.

Has the "law and order" party failed so miserably at our national level that it has filtered down to local politics? My sign will go back up and I hope the voters around our county, state and nation will tell the Republican radicals to go back into the woodwork they came from.

Charles O'H. Horne Jr.

To the editor:

I can't help but wonder just how many people in these "United" States of America are thoroughly disgusted and disappointed by negative politics. Watch your TV — and you will see and hear the next President of the United States of America, not discussing major world problems, but discussing his opponent and criticizing his view on issues that concern every one of us as citizens.

Do you suppose other countries have chief executives that are so deep? Are we so narrow-minded and so small that this determines who we want and will vote for as a leader of our great country? If so, something is wrong — somehow, somewhere!

I am using the above as an example of all the negative and questionable things that are being heard from all sides, except from Congressman Walter B. Jones.

Check it out, and perhaps we will all think about the slogan, "Actions Speak Louder Than Words."

Fewer Hacks In Congress

WASHINGTON — The question that arises about the just-adjourned 100th Congress of the United States is how a body so widely reviled could have done all the good things it did. One should not exaggerate: It postponed the inevitable hard choices necessary to deal with the budget deficit, the runaway cost of entitlement programs and overlapping weapons systems. It put off finding answers to the Savings and Loan liquidity crisis and the financing of overdue investments in environmental cleanup and infrastructure repair, to mention just a few.

It dealt with no great crisis, it passed no single piece of legislation clearly destined for the history books. Yet in terms of productivity and accomplishment, it probably ranks among the handful of Congresses in the last four decades which clearly left an enduring mark in many fields.

Since it convened 21 months ago, Congress passed laws mandating a major redirection of U.S. trade policy and approved the creation of a free-trade zone with Canada. It rewrote the basic welfare law, approved the largest expansion of Medicare in 23 years to cover "catastrophic" illnesses, and ratified the most sweeping U.S.-Soviet arms agreement of recent decades.

Despite the conservative political climate, it strengthened two major civil-rights statutes and the federal ethics standards, expanded federal programs for the homeless, for drug addicts and AIDS victims and improved environmental programs.

This would have been a significant achievement for any Congress at any time. What is confounding is that this was done at a time when congressional standards and operations were under strong criticism on and off Capitol Hill and when the Democratic-controlled Congress confronted a Republican President who seemed to relish opportunities for showdowns.

How can a Congress whose members have virtually purchased immunity from effective re-election challenge by a campaign-finance system widely viewed as corrupt perform as responsibly as this one did? And how can a body of 535 individual, egotistical political entrepreneurs be so effective when the executive branch is led by a politically weakened, scandal-mired President whose impulses, in many instances, are opposite those of Congress?

It could hardly be the fear of defeat that motivates members of Congress to behave responsibly, when 98 percent of the House members and at least two-thirds of the senators running this year have safe seats. Nor was it the whip of a strong President which forced Congress to act.

To be sure, Reagan played a key role in several of the 100th's greatest achievements. But this was not Reagan's Congress. Democrats regained control of the Senate in 1986, despite Reagan's campaign efforts to preserve the Republican majority achieved on the coattails of his 1980 victory.

At the outset, the Democrats overrode the Reagan vetoes of the Clean Water and highway bills; then it put his administration on public trial in the Iran-contra hearings; it defied him by cutting off military aid to the contra forces in Nicaragua; and it thwarted his attempt to put Judge Robert H. Bork on the Supreme Court. It was no patsy.

But neither was it content simply to score political points off a weakened President, as a prelude to the 1988 election. Much of the credit for avoiding the temptation to be simply partisan and confrontational must go to the Democrats who ran Congress, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd and House Speaker Jim Wright. But Byrd, who is stepping down from his leadership post, and Wright, who was brand-new in his job, did not have the power (any more than Reagan did) to make the members of the 100th Congress jump through hoops. The initiative that made it so productive came from many individuals, Republicans as well as Democrats, back-benchers as well as committee chairmen.

The roster of individual contributors is too long for cataloging here. Suffice it to say that it includes many a legislator who has supped richly off the campaign largess of political-action committees (PACS), and has taken advantage of every congressional perquisite to enhance his own re-election prospects.

I think the answer has to lie within the membership. Congress has more people of ability and fewer hacks than it did in the past. The standard they set for themselves is higher than their constituents or contributors demand. They are not content just to hold power; they want to exercise it. And for that we can be grateful.

Why Mankind Wishes Whales Well

Henry Mitchell

WASHINGTON — In a nutshell, nobody gives a damn about Nancy Reagan and her borrowed dresses while everybody gives a considerable damn about the three gray whales trapped in Alaskan ice.

This speaks well for the good sense of Americans. The whales, at least, are much-loved mammals with large brains and the entire whale population of the world is endangered.

The fact that whales are "much loved" is itself a tribute to the people who have studied and talked about whales, as well as to the basic kindness and gentleness of the American people.

Some say, however, that it is a bit silly to carry on at such lengths about three icebound whales, when whales are still hunted with the blessings of Japan and Iceland for no reasonable purpose at all. Besides, it is sure to be pointed out, we humane Americans kill cats and dogs by the million and slaughter food animals in barbarous ways.

And therefore, this line of reasoning goes, it is a waste of valuable resources to start sending expensive equipment to help the three desperate whales. But I would be disappointed in us all if we read about the whales and didn't care any more than we do for Nancy Reagan's dresses or her "little rules," broken or unbroken.

As Americans we should do two things. We should make sure we do not interfere in any large or irreversible way with the cycles of life established through the eons in nature.

We should also make sure we develop our own natural compassion.

We should not let spiders be sprayed to extinction. But we may interfere to free a small bug trapped in a web. We may not allow fish to be poisoned at random through careless use of chemicals, but we may on occasion fish out a waterlogged bug from the fish pool that would otherwise be devoured.

We finally know human life is tied to the life of plants and animals. We know, better than we did, that we are part of nature, not disembodied from it and not enthroned above it. And as we value our own life, we increasingly value life in general.

Show me a guy who doesn't care about three whales trapped in ice and I'll show you a poor companion to go with through the woods or through life.

But the whales, or rather the reaction to their plight, has much to do with a deeper American feeling. We like to help underdogs, we hop to it when kids fall down wells, when planes crash in rivers, when Miss Emma's dreadful old cat is meowing like hell in the oak tree.

We may fail in consistency. We may fail in devising sound policy. We may fail our own values over the long haul.

When it's face to face, when it's forced on our attention, we will often behave well.

All things on the front page of a responsible newspaper are important. Two events or circumstances may be given equal space and equal attention. But needless to say some are more equal than others.

Echoes Of Populism Mark The End Of The Campaign

Donald Rothberg

WASHINGTON (AP) — When presidential campaigns enter their closing days, it's a good bet the candidate denouncing the negative tactics of his opponent is running behind.

The first candidate to demand the opposition stop lying about his record is probably in trouble.

The Democrat who turns to populism is trying to turn the tide.

The Republican who warns against big spending is trying to do the same.

That is the pattern of campaigns past and present. Sometimes it works.

Echoes of those closing arguments are being heard as the 1988 presidential campaign winds down.

"Full of lies and he knows it," says a new Michael Dukakis ad denouncing the negative campaign tactics of George Bush. The television spot closes with this dose of populism:

"The real question is will we have a president who fights for the privileged few, or will we have a president who fights for you."

The Dukakis commercial was not the first time a candidate who felt he was losing to Bush accused the vice president of distorting his record.

One of the more memorable moments of the campaign for the Republican presidential nomination was the night of the New Hampshire primary. Bob Dole, whose dream of winning the nomination had been shaken by Bush's New Hampshire victory, was asked if there was anything he wanted to say to the vice president.

Dole glared at the camera and snapped, "Yeah, tell him to stop lying about my record."

It was all downhill from there for the Kansan who thought he could have won in New Hampshire if the opposition hadn't portrayed him as soft on tax increases.

But the Bush attacks probably harmed Dole less in the long run than his demand that they stop. The senator's demeanor during that televised instant resurrected memories of his ill-fated run as the GOP vice presidential nominee in 1976, a race he later would admit did not serve him well.

Harry Truman wrote the book on how to upset a favored Republican opponent with a strong dose of populist rhetoric.

Analysis

"I'm going to fight hard," Truman recalled telling his running mate, Kentucky Sen. Alben Barkley. "I'm going to give them hell."

Truman set the tone at his opening rally on Labor Day. "If in this next election you get a Congress and an administration friendly to labor you have much to hope for," he told a rally made up largely of union members. "If you get a Congress and an administration unfriendly to labor you have much to fear."

Hubert H. Humphrey tried the same sort of populist appeal in the closing weeks of the 1968 presidential campaign against Richard M. Nixon. The Minnesotan succeeded in bringing many Democrats back to the fold and the election turned out much closer than anybody had predicted. But Humphrey fell 510,000 votes short of overtaking Nixon.

"He has campaigned with negativism, failing the American people by refusing to lay out for them worthwhile programs in major fields which for two months I have been discussing in frankness and detail."

That appeal sounds a little like the theme Dukakis now is sounding. But it was used by Nixon in 1960 and directed at John F. Kennedy.

State, National Races Cloud Legislative Elections

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Volatile national and statewide campaigns are making it difficult to predict which party will benefit from November coattails, but both Democrats and Republicans say they will maintain their numbers in the General Assembly.

In the final weeks before the election, Republicans were paying more attention to the race between GOP Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan than to the presidential clash between George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

"I think it's much more important how the top of the state ticket runs," said Rep. Robert Grady, R-Onslow, who has been tracking local races for the state Republican Party. "And that's where we're seeing the excitement right now."

Grady said Democrats were making a mistake in identifying with the national slate.

"If the Democrats continue their unity campaign, they're all going down," he said. "In 1984 they ran away from the national ticket and that enabled them to save a lot of seats at the local level. But this year they wrapped themselves so completely with Dukakis and with Bob Jordan that if those two go down as bad as I think, they'll take the whole party with them."

Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, said it was unclear whether either party would benefit from the bigger picture.

"I think things are so volatile right now from the national level on down that it's hard to say whether there'll be coattails and how much they are going to affect our legislative races," he said.

One thing that may have an impact is the "Republican bashing of the legislature," Eudy said.

"The legislature as an institution is not as popular as it was a year ago, but I don't know how that translates to individual races," he said.

While Democrats have emphasized unity in campaign appearances, Republicans have taken shots at the Democrat-controlled General Assembly, accusing leaders of conducting public business in secret and using "pork-barrel" money to keep lawmakers in line. Eudy admitted that if the legislature's reputation suffers, it will hurt Democrats the most.

Meanwhile, Republicans have focused on winning seats in areas that backed Martin. "We tell them they should at least send someone to Raleigh who will work for the governor instead of fighting him at every turn," Grady said.

Eudy, however, said Democrats have a good chance of picking up seats in 25 races targeted for the strength of the candidates and the partisan makeup of the district. Currently, Democrats have a 40-10 advantage in the Senate and an 84-36 margin in the House.

Both Eudy and Grady said they would be happy to see their parties hold their own in the General Assembly.

"If we maintain the numbers we've got, I'd consider it a victory," said Grady. "If we picked up any seats at all, we'd be headed toward the greatest number we've had in this century in the legislature."

"I think we'll hold our own, and if we do that, we'll win," said Eudy, noting that in every presidential election year since Watergate, Democrats have lost seats.

"When you think about it, holding 124 of 170 seats is pretty remarkable," Eudy said. "You really do have to put forth a monumental effort to maintain that kind of dominance in an increasing two-party state."

In general, the races to watch include those involving former lawmakers trying to return and those in which incumbents are not running.

Former Sen. Cecil Jenkins is challenging Cabarrus County Republican Jim Johnson in the 22nd District. Jenkins, a Concord lawyer, may face an uphill battle because he was recently charged with conspiring to commit perjury in a drunken driving case he was defending. In 1985 he was censured by the North Carolina State Bar for misusing client funds and, in another case, had to pay more than $30,000 in back taxes. Jenkins blamed the latter problems on accounting errors.

Elsewhere, increasing GOP registration in the 4th House District may help former Rep. Gerald Hurst return. Former Sen. Rachel Gray is vying for a 28th District seat that has belonged to Republicans. Former Rep. Jim Black hopes to take over a spot left by another GOP move in the 36th House District. And, in the 39th House District, former Rep. R.J. Childress is among challengers to three Republican incumbents.

Democrats have more vacancies to fill. Veteran Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, lost the primary for lieutenant governor to Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland and Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, retired. For the Republicans, Sen. Bob Somers of Rowan County won't be back, but House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane appeared to have a good chance of taking over his seat.

On the House side, most of the changes involve Republicans, although Democratic Rep. Bobby Etheridge gave up an Appropriations Committee chair to run for superintendent of public instruction.

Rep. Richard Chalk, R-Guilford, is running for the Senate, Rep. Bill Boyd, R-Randolph, lost in the GOP primary for lieutenant governor, and Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, was defeated in the primary for secretary of state. In addition, Reps. Ivan Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg, and Maggie Keese-Forrester, R-Guilford, have decided not to seek re-election. Rep. Jim Hughes, R-Avery, lost by one vote to David Flaherty in their primary.

For the Democrats, Reps. Brewster Brown of Hertford County and Foyle Hightower of Anson County were beaten in the primaries. Rep. Richard Wright of Columbus County declined to run again while Reps. Joe Raynor, D-Cumberland, and Wendell Murphy, D-Duplin, are running Senate campaigns.

There will be a few changes in the number of blacks and women in the General Assembly.

Former Rep. Frank Ballance of Warren County is unopposed for Harrington's vacant seat and will likely become the fourth black in the Senate with the expected re-elections of Sens. Ralph Hunt, Bill Martin and Jim Richardson. Ms. Cochrane's election would raise the number of women in the Senate from four to five. The only other non-incumbent woman still running is Republican Zora Reece Hays in the 28th District represented by Sens. Bob Swain and Dennis Winner.

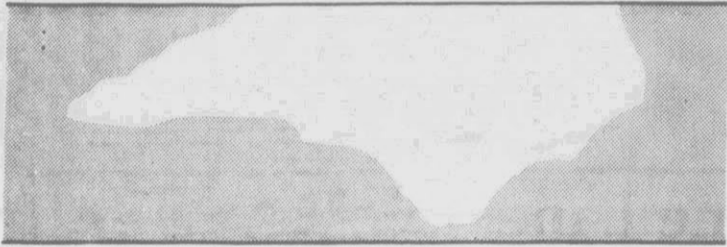

Few of the 13 blacks in the House faced opposition, and no new blacks remained in contention after the primaries. But the 100-20 ratio of men to women is likely to change, with 14 non-incumbent women still in the running.

Elaine Marshall, a Democrat, appeared likely to join Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, in representing the 19th District, once represented by Etheridge.

Two women, Democrat Maggie Jeffus and Republican Joanne Bowie, were among those vying to replace Ms. Keese-Forrester. Former Sen. Rachel Gray, a Democrat was still in the race to fill Chalk's seat in the 28th District. Democrats Wanda Edwards and Elizabeth Hargrave and Republican Julia Howard were in the 37th District election to replace Ms. Cochrane.

In the 44th District, Democrat Gloria Musard and Doris Lail of the GOP were running against four incumbents.

IN THE STATE

Parkway Deaths

MARION, N.C. (AP) — As a memorial service was held for his sister-in-law, the brother of a man charged with killing his wife and her friend by pushing them over a cliff-side called his brother "a victim during his moment of grief."

The two counts of first-degree murder against James Clifton Gibbs, 37, are "outright lies," Gerald Gibbs of Fayetteville said Tuesday.

At a memorial service at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Fayetteville, where Helen Burnette Gibbs, 30 was a ward supervisor, the Gibbses' children, parents, sisters and brother, friends and hospital staff honored her memory.

Also killed in the fall from the Chestoa View overlook along the Blue Ridge Parkway on Oct. 17 was Susan White Haire, 32, of Ladson, S.C.

James Gibbs was charged Monday in the deaths. A probable cause hearing was set for Nov. 9 in McDowell County Superior Court, and defense attorneys said they planned to bring in more than 60 witnesses.

Assistant District Attorney Mike Edwards said during a brief court appearance Tuesday that the state would seek the death penalty in the case.

Hatcher Rally

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — Eddie Hatcher, who recently was acquitted of federal weapons and hostage-taking charges, says Indians, blacks and poor whites in Robeson County should stop fighting among themselves and unite to bring change.

Some 100 people gathered at West Robeson High School gave Hatcher a standing ovation Tuesday night when he entered halfway through the program to raise money for The Robeson Defense Committee.

Water Cutbacks

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Prison officials laid down the law to 220 inmates at the Newton prison unit — no washing out socks and underwear in the sinks and no more leisurely showers.

"These six- or seven-minute showers need to be cut back to about two minutes," Boyce Lambert, superintendent of the Newton unit of the North Carolina Department of Correction said Monday. "The clothes-washing is no big deal, but we've got to cut back on the showers."

The prison unit was cited last week by the state Division of Environmental Management because the flow from its wastewater treatment plant was a little high.

The citation, called a "notice of noncompliance," carries no fine or civil penalty. To avoid a fine, state prison officials ordered the Newton unit to cut back on water use.

Truck Accident

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Beaufort County man was crushed to death by a dump truck after the driver of the truck tried to avoid a collision with a train, officials say.

Donald Russell Moore, 38, was pronounced dead at the scene Monday. He was a passenger in the truck driven by Christopher Wayne Moore, 20, also of Beaufort County.

State Highway Patrol Trooper E.L. Coleman said the dump truck was traveling east on N.C. 33 in southern Beaufort County when the accident occurred about 8:30 p.m.

Jail Hanging

BOLIVIA, N.C. (AP) — An Ash man who had been sentenced to death for one murder and was facing the same sentence for another conviction hanged himself in his Brunswick County jail cell early Tuesday morning, officials say.

Rayford Clayton Piver, 43, jammed a strip of bedsheet between the wall and upper right edge of a thin metal windowframe, tied the end of the strip around his neck and then jumped off a table that was bolted to the wall, said Sheriff John Carr Davis.

Oil Drilling Postponed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Mobil Oil Corp. will delay filing its plan for drilling off Cape Hatteras until 1989 because it needs more technical information, company officials say.

"I feel this is a good decision on Mobil's part," Gov. Jim Martin said in a prepared statement Tuesday. "This postponement enables state agencies to become better informed about the issues involved in offshore drilling."

"I was concerned that Mobil was trying to move too fast on this," Martin said. "We will continue our aggressive pursuit of information and answers to complex questions, expecting thorough, candid responses."

Mobil had first expected to file the plan by the end of September, then by the end of October.

"There is a potential that the well will actually be delayed until 1990," Bob Haines, a Mobil representative, told the Governor's Working Group on Mobil Offshore Drilling on Tuesday. "We are certainly not slacking off in our interest in drilling the well."

Mobil has said it expects to find natural gas, not oil, at the drill site 47 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras.

For Sale?

RALEIGH (AP) — Officials from an unnamed Japanese university are putting out feelers in North Carolina education circles, saying they want to find a financially strapped private college or university they can buy in the Tar Heel state.

So far, the Japanese haven't found any takers.

John Henley, president of the N.C. Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, said Tuesday that he had received two inquiries about whether any private schools in the state might be for sale.

The Japanese university officials want to "acquire majority control" of the college's board of trustees, increase the enrollment of Japanese students, and start a faculty and student exchange program, Henley said.

Those who might be interested should contact the state's Department of Commerce office in Tokyo.

Board Cites Pilots, FAA For Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A divided federal panel has ruled that pilot mistakes caused the crash of a commuter plane at Raleigh-Durham International Airport, and that inadequate oversight by both the airline and the Federal Aviation Administration contributed to the accident.

The Richmond-bound American Eagle plane crashed into a wooded bank moments after takeoff in foggy conditions Feb. 19, killing all 12 people aboard. It was the worst accident in RDU's history.

In a 3-2 ruling on the cause of the crash Tuesday, the National Transportation Safety Board said first officer Kathleen Digan banked the aircraft too sharply and at too low an altitude — about a 40-degree bank only 250 to 270 feet off the ground, nearly twice as sharply as would have been advised.

Captain Walter R. Cole Jr. "should have performed the take-off" and conducted "inadequate monitoring" of the flight, and both pilots may have been distracted by a malfunction of the plane's stall avoidance system, the board concluded.

"We're blaming the actions of the crew in not monitoring instruments that would have told them they were descending, not climbing," board chairman James Kolstad said.

The board also criticized AVAir Inc., the Raleigh airline that operated American Eagle at the time of the crash and later ceased its flight operations, for not acting on problems Ms. Digan exhibited during training and proficiency checks after AVAir hired her in May 1987.

In July 1987, Ms. Digan was recommended for firing by a check pilot, and another pilot gave her poor evaluations that September, the board said.

The FAA failed to adequately monitor the financial and operational problems of AVAir, which expanded its pilot force and flight schedule rapidly before going bankrupt on Jan. 15, just weeks before the crash, the board ruled.

"Contributing to the accident was the lack of company response to documented indications of difficulties in the first officer's piloting, and inadequate FAA surveillance of AVAir," the board said in its ruling.

Beer-Mouse Scam Brings Jail Term

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A man who claimed he found a mouse in a can of beer was sentenced to 18 months in prison and apologized after pleading guilty to product tampering and extortion.

"I want to publicly admit that I caused a mouse to be placed in a can of Coors beer and acknowledge the wrongdoing of that act," James N. Harvey, 30, said in court Tuesday.

Circuit Judge R. Hudson Olliff gave Harvey until Nov. 1 to begin serving his sentence.

Harvey claimed he discovered the mouse July 27 after taking a few drinks from a 16-ounce can of Coors.

He called the Coors' consumer hotline two days later. Coors initially offered to pay $1,500 for the mouse and the can, but he refused and later asked for $35,000.

The apology was part of a plea bargain, said Assistant State Attorney E. McRae Mathis.

"We felt in this case it was appropriate and it was necessary to ensure that the consumer confidence in a consumer product was given back to a company because that is the very thing that was taken away from a company," said Mathis.

Deputies Mistook Patrol Car For Drug Smugglers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OCOTILLO, Calif. — A U.S. Border Patrol car was mistaken for a possible drug smuggler by an Army National Guard helicopter that crashed as it swooped down for a closer look, killing all eight aboard, officials said.

The helicopter was taking part in the first mission of Operation Border Ranger, a joint anti-drug smuggling program of six Southern California sheriff's departments and the federal government along the U.S.-Mexico border, Imperial County Sheriff's Lt. Kenneth Koon said Tuesday.

The program has been suspended temporarily until the crash investigation is completed by personnel from the Army Safety Center in Fort Rucker, Ala., and the National Guard Safety Office, said National Guard Maj. Steve Mensik.

"We're not going to stop the program (because of the crash). We'll proceed as long as the law enforcement agencies want to," he said.

Monday night's fiery crash occurred when the five lawmen and three guardsmen aboard the UH-1H helicopter noticed a vehicle with its lights off parked on a remote access road off Interstate 8, about 70 miles east of San Diego.

"They were in the process of descending to get a closer look at the suspect vehicle. Apparently, at about 500 feet, they struck a power line that had been strung between two hilltops," Mensik said.

"We discovered later that it was a U.S. Border Patrol vehicle with at least one agent inside. He later offered assistance at the crash."

The Border Patrol agents knew about the program, but had no radio contact with the agents in the air, Mensik said.

Dale A. Musegades, chief patrol agent for the El Centro Border Patrol section, said it's common practice for his agents to park and dim their car lights while on patrol.

The car was parked in a canyon that separates the eastbound and westbound lanes of the freeway, about 30 miles west of El Centro, he said.

Marine Helicopters Crash, Killing Ten

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Two Marine Corps helicopters crashed in a desert gunnery range during a training exercise, and the 10 people aboard were killed, officials said today.

It was the second crash involving military helicopters this week.

The aircraft were being used in a "troop insertion exercise" with crews using night-vision goggles when the crash occurred, said Army Maj. Linda Dumoulin, a Pentagon duty officer.

Four people were on a CH-46 helicopter and six on a UH-1 copter. Both helicopters are designed to carry more troops but were not transporting full teams for the exercise, which Dumoulin said was part of a weapons-tactics instructor's course.

There were no survivors, said Marine Gunnery Sgt. Hal Wheeler, public affairs chief at the Yuma Marine Corps Air Station.

The copters went down in the remote desert site about 7:45 p.m. Tuesday about 2½ hours east of the base, Wheeler said.

Ground rescue efforts were not being attempted before dawn because the site is part of a target area and may be surrounded by unexploded ordnance, said Wheeler.

He said the precise location of the wreckage was not known.

Yuma is about 180 miles southwest of Phoenix on the Colorado River.

Icebreaker Opens Path To Whales

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ABOARD THE ADMIRAL MAKAROV — Two Soviet icebreakers flying U.S. and Russian flags worked through the night to smash through an ice ridge blocking the path to freedom for two whales trapped in ice off Alaska for nearly three weeks.

Rescuers, meanwhile, said they succeeded in moving the California gray whales around a shoal that had stymied progress for three days. As darkness fell Tuesday, the mammals were only about two miles from the water opened by the Soviet ships.

Rescuers planned to use a tractor-like device propelled by pontoon augers today to cut the relatively thin ice remaining between the whales and the icebreakers' farthest advance.

The whales were expected to be freed late today, said rescue coordinator Ron Morris of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

In another development Tuesday, the Federal Aviation Administration ordered flights around Barrow Point to stay above 2,000 feet because of crowding by small planes taking a look at the whales, The Washington Post said.

Around noon, Morris, Rear Adm. Sigmund Petersen of NOAA and

Capt. Jim McClelland of the U.S. Coast Guard flew to the icebreaker Admiral Makarov as it waited about 25 miles northeast of Barrow.

After a perfunctory briefing, the icebreaker's skipper said he was ready to begin work immediately.

The 440-foot icebreaker, an American flag flying above its frost-encrusted superstructure, quickly cruised through thin ice to the pressure ridge that is the last significant barrier to freedom. In just a few hours, the ship had battled almost three-fourths of the way through the ridge, a jumble of ice blocks as big as small houses.

Just A Jerk

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — A young man who hit a police officer was ordered jailed for a year and has to write a sentence as part of his sentence: "People do not have to put up with a jerk like me." One hundred times a day for each day behind bars.

As part of the sentence for 19-year-old Steven R. Sommer, Circuit Judge Michael Hoover stayed a 3½-year prison term and placed him on five years' probation.

"It just seemed to me at the time that if I put this kid in prison, he was going to come out one tough case," Hoover explained in an interview Tuesday.

The judge said Sommer's self-image may change if "he has to suffer the humiliation of being treated like a miscreant junior high schooler" by having to write the sentence a total of 36,500 times.

Sommer, who kicked out a squad car window and was subdued by four officers after being stopped for a traffic violation, pleaded guilty last month to a felony battery charge.

Klansmen Told To Pay $1 Million

ATLANTA (AP) — A state lawmaker vowed to seek wages, guns and even Confederate flags from 11 Klansmen to collect his share of a $1 million award to civil rights marchers pelted with rocks in nearly all-white Forsyth County.

A federal jury found the Ku Klux Klansmen and two white supremacist groups responsible for disrupting the Jan. 17, 1987, march north of Atlanta, and awarded $948,650 in damages to 49 demonstrators who filed suit.

"It is a message to the Ku Klux Klan nationwide that this can happen to you," said state Rep. J.E. "Billy" McKinney, one of the demonstrators.

McKinney said he and the other plaintiffs "are determined we will get every dime that we can get out of the Klan."

The award, the second major one involving a Klan organization in two years, includes $400,000 each from the Southern White Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and the Invisible Empire Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. David Holland, grand dragon of the Southern White Knights, was ordered to pay $50,000, the highest of the 11 defendants.

Defense attorneys were stunned by the verdict unsealed Tuesday and said they would appeal. Holland's attorney, Jeffrey Sliz, called it "grossly unreasonable."

Another defense attorney, Jane Plaginos, said the plaintiffs had no proof for any injury that would mandate such severe damages.

"They did not prove anybody was hurt, literally, or lost wages, anything. They did not prove anything," she said.

She said that within 30 days she would ask U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moye Jr. to dismiss or lower the damages.

Which of These Children Will Fall Victim to Drugs?

They're nice kids from a family like yours, but one in six will soon try cocaine, crack or pot.

Let's force the politicians in Raleigh to stop playing games with our children's future.

Bill Dansey is committed to a seven-point program to remove drugs from our streets.

- Increase the number of SBI agents fighting drugs to at least 100.
- Double the money available for undercover and sting operations by state and local agents.
- Impose mandatory life sentences for drug trafficking.
- Restore funding to build a new state crime lab.
- Abolish parole and gain-time credits for convicted drug traffickers.
- Make drug trafficking one of the aggravating factors a jury should consider in recommending the death penalty for first-degree murder.
- Pursue and prosecute habitual drug users as felons.

It's time for a change in Raleigh. The children are counting on us. Elect Bill Dansey to the North Carolina Senate.

Study Says Major Problems Worsen For Urban Kids

By Denise Cabrera
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Key problems among children in America's cities, including drug abuse, pregnancy and school dropouts, have grown worse over the past five years, according to a report released today by the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

These problems, plus inadequate health care for children in low-income families and a lack of affordable child care, worsened in 80 percent of the cities that cited them, the study said.

The report surveyed officials in 52 cities in 22 states and the District of Columbia. It was financed by the Foundation for Child Development and published by the U.S. Conference of City Human Services Officials, an affiliate of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

J. Thomas Cochran, executive director of the mayor's group and the affiliate, said the report was intended to "lead us toward critically needed investments in our children's future and, consequently, in our country's future."

The study also said poverty was a high-priority problem facing children in urban areas.

It estimated that 28.5 percent of the more than 18.5 million children living in central cities live in poverty, compared with a 20 percent poverty rate for all U.S. children.

The study found problems affecting children in the cities include:
—Insufficient day care. It said an estimated 45 percent of the need for licensed child care goes unmet.

—A 38 percent average high school dropout rate in the class of 1988 even though 60 percent of the cities reported investing public money in programs to encourage students to stay in school.

—A 14.6 percent rate of births to mostly unmarried teen-age mothers among the 500,458 births in the survey cities during 1986. The rate of births to black teens was even higher at 21.6 percent that year.

—An infant mortality rate among blacks of 18.5 per thousand in 1986, compared with a rate of 12.6 per thousand for all infants.

The report said mayors of the survey cities believe the most important policy decisions to be made by the next president for the benefit of children "would be to increase the availability of child care, provide adequate funding for family and children's programs, increase the emphasis on and funding for substance abuse prevention, and make a greater investment in education."

EAL Puts Up Funds, Recovers Airliner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — U.S. Customs released a $14 million Eastern jetliner after the airline put up a line of credit for a $896,000 fine levied after 56 pounds of cocaine was found on board.

The airline said it would appeal the fine, along with $13 million in fines for drugs discovered on other Eastern aircraft.

The L-1011 departed Miami International Airport for Los Angeles on Tuesday night, hours after the plane was released. In addition to the line of credit, Eastern agreed to increase drug security, said company spokeswoman Karen Ceremsak.

Since August, 494 pounds of cocaine has been discovered on four Eastern planes, including the craft seized Monday after a flight from Bogota, Colombia.

Agents discovered the cocaine in an orange nylon U.S. Mail bag, bearing a luggage tag. Eastern officials said Tuesday that they were not aware of any arrests related to the seizure.

"We provided information about the possible shipment of drugs and we're being punished for providing the information," said Ceremsak.

But Customs spokesman Cliff Stallings said Tuesday the airline was not involved in any of the drug investigations.

"We have no information from them at all about that seizure or any of the preceding three in the past two months," he said.

Abraham Azzam, formerly a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, now Eastern's top drug security officer, said the airline is spending $3 million on security, but drug traffickers will continue using airliners. "Certainly cocaine is going to continue to come out of Colombia," he said.

Azzam estimated the seizure of the 293-seat jet cost the airline $40,000 to $50,000 a day.

Avianca Airlines of Colombia stopped cargo flights from Bogota to Miami four months ago because of millions of dollars in fines it has been forced to pay in this country as a result of cocaine shipments.

Employment Costs Exceed Inflation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Employment costs have risen faster than inflation over the past 12 months, but largely because of soaring benefit costs primarily from higher Social Security taxes rather than wage gains, ac-ording to new government data. Wages in the 12 months ended Oct. 1 rose an average of 3.9 percent, the Labor Department said Tuesday, compared with a 4.2 percent increase in consumer prices over the same period.

But benefit costs have soared more than 6.7 percent — more than double the 3.1 percent gain during the previous 12 months, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The combined effect of the pay raises and higher benefit costs sent total employer costs up 4.7 percent in the 12 months ended Oct. 1, compared with a 3.4 percent rise in the previous 12-month period, it said.

The steep increase in benefit costs resulted primarily from a rise last January in employers' Social Security tax rate from 7.15 percent to 7.51 percent, the government said.

Pactolus Activities

In observance of Computer Learning Month, kindergarten and first grade students at Pactolus Elementary School viewed a movie and read books about robots in the media center. Each class gave a robot report, which was typed into a computer and read to the students.

Meteorologist Ben Pringle spoke to fourth graders in Jean Swanner's class last week, explaining how weather is predicted. Each student received a computerized weather map, a pencil and several brochures.

Students See Karate

Charles June of Greenville Karate Academy and his son, Andy, a third-grade student at Chicod Elementary School, demonstrated karate to kindergarten through third-grade students at the school. They also answered questions from the students; June stressed karate is for self-defense only.

June, a fourth-degree black belt, has practiced karate for 25 years, competing in national and statewide tournaments since 1968.

Andy, a brown belt, is an assistant instructor for children's classes at the academy. He competes regularly in eastern North Carolina and is a frequent winner in Kumite and Kata.

Downtown Group Objecting To Proposed Tattoo Parlor

By Greg Laudick THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A scheduled request asking the city's Board of Adjustment to allow the opening of a dermagraphic studio along East Fourth Street has drawn negative reactions from both a downtown organization and the city's development department.

At a board meeting Tuesday, members of the Downtown Greenville Association approved a resolution of opposition in regard to a request by Gary Nobles to operate a "tattoo parlor" at 106 E. Fourth St.

The request is one of the items to be considered by the Board of Adjustment at its 7 p.m. meeting Thursday in the council chambers at City Hall.

Lawrence Behr, president of the DGA board, said the majority of members feel the existence of a tattoo parlor in the downtown area is not compatible with surrounding businesses and offices.

"We didn't feel a tattoo parlor is in keeping with the present and future development plans of the downtown area," he said.

Behr indicated the group's resolution is being forwarded to members of the adjustment board.

Behr also said a letter has been sent by the DGA to a number of downtown business owners and operators urging them to attend

Thursday's meeting to voice their feelings regarding the request.

In agreement with the DGA and going on record in opposition to the request is the city's development department.

"We feel this is not an appropriate use within this specific area," said development director Bobby Roberston.

"Our department feels the appropriate use within this block should be for professional offices, city and county municipal facilities, banking, and restaurants.

"We also feel that there are not adequate rules and regulations from a health-related standpoint that address this type of use in any location," he said.

Nobles could not be reached for comment.

In other matters, the board will consider whether to grant special use permits to allow the operation of several proposed businesses at selected locations.

The board will consider granting a special use permit to Eddie Yarrell to operate a trucking company on the north side of William Tingen Road (State Road 1420) approximately 230 feet east of the intersection of William Tingen Road and SR 1441. The property is zoned RA-20 (residential/agricultural).

Pitt Internal & Renal Medicine Associates, Ltd. has requested a special use permit to operate a dialysis training center in Stanton Square Shopping Center at 2430 Stantonsburg Road. The property is zoned MD-4 (shopping center).

Autumnfield of Pitt County is seeking a special use permit to operate a rest home on the west side of Williams Road (SR 1135) approximately 368 feet south of Dickenson Avenue extension. The property is zoned R-6 (high-density residential).

The board will also consider a request by Rose-Mary Hill Glover to obtain a special use permit to operate a home occupation (beauty shop) at 2115 S. Village Drive. The property is zoned R-6 (high density residential).

The board is scheduled to consider requests by: Hostetler's Tennis Shop to obtain a variance from the Zoning Ordinance to allow the placement of a free-standing sign at 218-C Arlington Boulevard; Raymond Carney to renew a special use permit to maintain the operation of a nightclub at 1311 W. Fifth St.; Ray Oliveira to renew a special use permit to maintain the operation of a nightclub at 720 N. Greene St., and Bobby Dixon to obtain a special use permit to construct 112 multi-family dwellings under land-use intensity development standards on a 6.2-acre lot located on Shenandoah Circle between Tobacco Road and Rollingwood Cluster Homes.

Doctors Say C-Section Mothers Should Try A Normal Delivery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Guidelines issued today by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists say women who have had babies delivered by Caesarean section should be encouraged to have later children by normal, vaginal birth.

Dr. Mary Jo O'Sullivan, a member of an ACOG panel that developed the guidelines, said a pregnant woman who has had an earlier child by Caesarean section "should be encouraged to attempt labor in her current pregnancy" instead of routinely undergoing a second surgical delivery.

Dr. O'Sullivan said if the new guidelines are accepted by U.S. hospitals, they will go a long way toward ending the "once a C-section, always a C-section" tradition that has guided obstetric practice since 1916.

The ACOG committee found that women who have had a C-section by the low-transverse method were successful in subsequent vaginal delivery attempts in most cases.

"Up to 70 percent of these women who had their first Caesarean birth because of failure to progress in a long and difficult labor were able to deliver vaginally with their second child," Dr. O'Sullivan said.

Since 1982, the ACOG has urged physicians to encourage women to attempt vaginal deliveries even after prior C-sections. The action was taken after a number of studies indicated that mortality rates for mother and child were lower among women who attempted labor than among those who chose repeated Caesarean births.

Until recent years, it was believed that once a woman had had a C-section, all subsequent children had to be delivered the same way. The number of C-sections routinely performed in recent years, however, has declined and the new guidelines are intended to encourage this trend.

Young Must Be Educated About Sex

Dear Readers: According to the National Adolescent Student Health Survey, says USA Today, most teen-agers know how AIDS is transmitted, but they don't know how to avoid getting a sexually transmitted disease. More than 11,000 eighth-, ninth- and 10th-graders were surveyed. The facts are frightening:

- More than half do not know that taking birth control pills won't protect them from a sexually transmitted disease.

- Nearly four out of every 10 students don't know an adult they could talk to if they thought they might have a sexually transmitted disease.

- Half are either unsure or believe wrongly — that washing after sex reduces chances of AIDS infection.

About sexual behavior:

- 94 percent of girls and 76 percent of boys say it's acceptable to say no to sex.

Dear Abby

when there is one partner only!

Dear Abby: My mother is 67 years old. She is very attractive and doesn't think of herself as "old" — nor do I, or anyone else who knows her. Yet when she reads in the newspaper, "An elderly woman was killed in an auto accident. Mrs. Brown was 67 years old," she feels old.

Abby, why do the newspapers call these people "elderly"? Why not just say, "Mrs. Brown was 67 years old"? People are living much longer today, and some people in their 70s and 80s are in good health, still active and productive, and are not "old."

I hope you print this. Maybe newspaper editors and reporters will get the message and quit referring to people in their late 60s as "elderly." — Offended in Arcadia, Calif.

Dear Offended: You rattled the right cage. The newspaper person who referred to the 67-year-old woman as "elderly" must have been in his — or her — mid-20s.

Dear Abby: I recently heard that you were opposed to using live animals for medical research. Surely you know that we never would have discovered vaccines for numerous diseases had they not been tested on animals first. — Disappointed in Sacramento

Dear Disappointed: You heard wrong. I have clearly stated that I am not opposed to using live animals for medical and biomedical research if the animals are treated humanely. However, I do oppose using animals to test cosmetics and household products.

Cartoon Teaches Street Kids About AIDS

By Soll Sussman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Cartoon movies are a universal hit with youngsters, Peter Dalglish reasoned, so that should be the best way to teach street kids of the world the perils of AIDS.

The Canadian youth worker's short animated film "Survivors" is being made on a budget of $500,000 ($415,000 U.S.) by the National Film Board of Canada, whose award-winning experience with animation dates back nearly five decades.

It should be ready for distribution in 20 languages by the time more than 10,000 health workers and other experts gather in Montreal next June for the fifth international conference on AIDS, for which no cure has been found.

"We're trying to reach kids in the 30 largest cities of the developing world," Dalglish, 31, said in an interview. "It's a film for the front lines. I think we're two or three years ahead of the game."

A preliminary version of the cartoon, without music or full animation, has been tested on young audiences in the Philippines, Kenya, Sri Lanka, Brazil and New York.

"We saw very strong identification with the characters," Dalglish said. "The story tested extremely well."

Dalglish went to Africa after finishing law school and in Khartoum, Sudan, founded Street Kids International, which forms bicycle courier services to provide jobs. It now employs 20 children at any given time and is planning expansion to other cities with capital raised in Canada.

"You have to be able to provide an alternative to prostitution," Dalglish said. "Given a choice, they'll all choose riding a bicycle over sleeping with someone."

In Khartoum, he became increasingly concerned about the potential for disaster as AIDS becomes a disease concentrated among the urban poor.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is caused by a virus that damages the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to infections and cancer.

It is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products and from pregnant women to their offspring.

Canada has reported more than 2,000 AIDS cases and estimates for 1992 run up to 12,000, but the scene of "Survivors" is specifically Third World, depicting children picking pockets or turning to prostitution.

No reliable estimates are available of how prevalent AIDS has become among street children, who may number 40 million throughout the world, but Dalglish said the prevalence of other sexually transmitted diseases might make the projections pessimistic.

He said the idea of an animated film was born in Khartoum when he borrowed a projector from the U.S. Embassy to show his youngsters a Tom and Jerry cartoon, and "for the first time that anyone could remember we had the complete attention of every kid in the room."

"Survivors" is intended for showing to small groups of children aged 6 to 14 with a youth worker present to lead a discussion afterward.

"It makes it easy for kids to talk about AIDS, about health, with street workers," Dalglish said. "We could be subtle, while being reasonably explicit at the same time."

He hopes to raise funds for accompanying instruction guides and comic books.

Dalglish and the production team went to Mexico and Guatemala so the animators could get to know their audience and create an authentic atmosphere, but the setting is intentionally vague in order to broaden the film's appeal.

Even New York street kids were intrigued by it, Dalglish said, but "Survivors" is not really intended for those raised on Saturday morning cartoons.

The Canadian hopes explicit language in the film and instruction about the use of condoms will not create barriers to its distribution.

"We are recognizing the reality that exists in the street and responding to it," he said. "The kids see it as a moral film."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 14.93 to 2,158.43 in the first half hour of trading.

Losing outnumbered gainers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 366 up, 545 down and 477 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 27.29 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The government estimated this morning that the gross national product grew at a 2.2 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, in the third quarter of the year.

That fell short of most advance estimates, and marked the slowest pace since the final three months of 1986.

The dollar weakened after the report was issued and so, after a brief period of hesitation, did stock prices as well.

Losing among the blue chips included International Business Machines, down 1 1/2 at 121 1/2; General Electric, down 1/4 at 44 1/4; Eastman Kodak, down 3/8 at 48 1/4; and International Paper, down 1/2 at 47 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .84 to 158.03. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .53 at 303.85.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.02 to 2,173.36.

Declining issues slightly outpaced advancers on the NYSE, with 701 up, 727 down and 525 unchanged.

Economy Growing Modestly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy grew at a modest 2.2 percent annual rate from July through September, the weakest performance in almost two years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department blamed the weak growth rate on the impact of the summer drought, a deterioration in the country's trade performance and a drop in government purchases of defense equipment.

The changes left the gross national product, the broadest measure of the economy's health, rising at the slowest pace since a 1.4 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1986.

The GNP advance was down from increases of 3.4 percent in the first quarter and 3 percent in the second quarter of this year.

With the slower growth came an easing in inflationary pressures as a price index tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 4.4 percent from July through September, down from 5.5 percent in the second quarter.

Many economists viewed the GNP report as good news because the slowdown should reduce the need for the Federal Reserve to drive interest rates higher as a way of dampening demand in an overheated economy.

The 2.2 percent GNP growth rate was sharply lower than had been expected. Many private analysts had been looking for growth of around 3.2 percent in the third quarter, even higher than the second quarter.

The weaker-than-anticipated showing threw in doubt the ability of the economy to meet the Reagan administration's projection of 3.5 percent growth for the entire year.

Test Dates Firm

schedule the test for another day during the week.

In addition, "input from superintendents show that a wide majority prefer the current schedule," Whitley said of Brown's comments.

But, parents prefer an alternate schedule because of the Halloween activities students will participate in the day before the test.

"The children won't be able to do their best after spending the night trick-or-treating, eating candy and being all hyper," Sylvia Measamer of Greenville said. "You can't take that away from them. It's (Halloween) just once a year."

Ms. Measamer said she and other parents have been contacting state Superintendent Craig Phillips' office, state testing coordinators and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's office voicing their concerns in an attempt to get the date changed.

"If we can't get it changed, at least we'll let parents know they'll be tested right after Halloween," she said.

While teachers have been emphasizing writing skills in preparation for the test, Ms. Measamer said she and other parents don't think the students will test well the day after Halloween.

The Writing Assessment Test is given to all students in the state in grades six and eight on the same day, Whitley said. It assesses students' writing ability in description and clarification.

Each sixth-grade student takes the same test, while each eighth-grade student takes the same test. "That makes it fairly simple to do the scoring," Whitley said.

The writing test is part of the North Carolina Annual Testing Program, and scores are compared among students within the state, he said. Scores are not compared with students' writing scores that may exist in other states.

Keep Away

Dallas Mavericks forward Sam Perkins (right) picks up the loose ball as Indiana Pacers Wayman Tisdale (top) and Michael Anderson defend in the first quarter of their exhibition game in Indianapolis Tuesday. Indiana won, 118-107.

Tom Landry Says He Won't Walk Away From Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Don't expect Dallas coach Tom Landry to walk away from his rebuilding project with the Cowboys before the job's completed.

He served notice to his critics Tuesday that they aren't about to drive him away.

"I came back knowing this year was going to be a tough go," Landry said. "I could have easily stepped down a few years ago and played golf and improved my score. But I'm not going to quit until I bring the Cowboys back on top, and I think I can."

The Cowboys are off to a 2-6 start, their worst in 25 years under Landry, who has coached the team all 29 years of its existence.

Landry has one more year remaining on his contract after the 1988 season.

After Dallas' 24-23 loss to Philadelphia on Sunday, one writer branded Landry as senile and a Dallas newspaper began a telephone poll asking if it was time for Landry to retire.

"I don't read the newspapers much and I don't care how the poll comes out," Landry said. "I'm not shocked by it (the criticism) when you realize some of the outstanding people who write. It's the nature of our sport: they (the writers) don't care how long you've been there."

"I just hope that when I recover they write something good once in awhile."

Landry, asked about his morale, quipped, "I guess you oldtimers (Chuck Noll of Pittsburgh and Don Shula of Miami) have to rally together."

Landry underwent a crossfire of criticism for a third-down call late in the Eagles' game that led to quarterback Steve Pelluer grounding the ball.

Landry said he thought the ball was on the 30-yard line instead of the 23. The penalty took Dallas out of field goal range and the Eagles scored the game-winning touchdown after the punt.

As it turned out, Pelluer rolled out the wrong way on the third-and-3 play.

Landry said with his young team he knew there would be down periods this year.

"I knew a valley would be there," he said. "I just wish I could take all the responsibility for our losses. I know where we are and where we are going. Things are under control. The solution is in sight."

"I said it would be a three-year program, and it will be a three-year program."

Improper Use By Wolfpack

GREENSBORO (AP) — Two supervisors in the athletic department at North Carolina State University improperly used university equipment while making improvements to their homes, according to a report filed by state auditor Ed Renfrow.

The report found that an assistant athletic director and a maintenance supervisor used employees for different home improvement projects while the employees were being paid by the state. The assistant AD also got paid for lending friends university equipment.

Renfrow's report, which included findings by the State Bureau of Investigation, concluded an audit by the state auditor's office that began after allegations were received of impropriety within the athletic department.

The report was sent to Wake County District Attorney Colon Willoughby for review and possible action. The allegations did not include university coaches or athletes.

The Greensboro News & Record could not reach Valvano for comment Tuesday, and he was unavailable for comment this morning. The newspaper reported, however, that Valvano had already suspended Bobby Stocks, a maintenance supervisor for Carter-Finley Stadium and Reynolds Coliseum, without pay pending the state auditor's investigation.

program. We've had an unfortunate dip, but we've played exceptionally well in six of eight games. The losses have been disappointing, but we're a better team than we were last year."

Landry said the Cowboys were relegated to a spoiler role for the rest of the season.

"We want to play to win because all the teams we play will be contenders," Landry said.

Jaguars Facing Must-Win Situation Farmville Hosts Greene Central In Key Game; AG, Panthers On Road

By Tom Morris THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Farmville Central could be facing a case of all or nothing as far as its playoff hopes are concerned when the Jaguars take the field against Greene Central Friday in high school football action.

The Jaguars go into the game with a 3-2 conference mark (5-4 overall). The Rams stand at 3-5 overall and 2-3 in the conference. A win by Greene Central would significantly alter the playoff picture.

"For us, it's for second place or nothing," said Farmville coach Dixie Sauls. "If we go 4-2, we would have the second berth. If we lose we could be out."

"This is the third year in a row a playoff berth has been decided on Farmville Central-Greene Central game. We won 29-28 last year. They won the year before on a late field

Switzer's Decision Led To Aikman's Move To UCLA

Sooners Coach Decided To Stick With The Wishbone

By Herschel Nissenson THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Promises, promises. "I told him four years ago if he came with me he'd win the Heisman Trophy," Barry Switzer said.

The only thing is, Switzer coaches Oklahoma and Troy Aikman plays quarterback for UCLA. That might make him the first player — neither the NCAA nor the eminent football maven Beano Cook of ESPN could come up with anyone else — to play on national championship teams at two different schools. Remember, Aikman began the 1985 season as Oklahoma's No. 1 quarterback and UCLA is currently ranked No. 1.

Aikman also is generally conceded to be No. 1 in the Heisman sweepstakes — with Southern Cal quarterback Rodney Peete, Oklahoma State tailback Barry Sanders and Miami quarterback Steve Walsh hot on his heels — so Switzer's first promise may come true.

His other one didn't. It is impossible to accurately convey the inflection in Aikman's voice, but you could almost hear the sigh when he said, "I wanted to believe Coach Switzer so much when he said they'd throw the football. He said the wishbone was obsolete, it wouldn't work any more, they had to throw to win."

"But three days after I signed a letter of intent, I read in the paper that Coach Switzer said they were going back to the wishbone."

Aikman started the first four games of Oklahoma's national championship 1985 season, but suffered a broken leg in a 27-14 loss to Miami. He completed 27 of 47 passes, which means that Oklahoma was throwing a dozen times a game while running the wishbone. This year, the Sooners have thrown only 68 passes in seven games.

When Aikman went down, Jamelle Holieway, a little waterbug and a wishbone magician, stepped in. The rest is history.

"I wasn't happy. I didn't feel comfortable in the wishbone. I didn't like it. I felt awkward. I felt I was too big for the wishbone," the 6-foot-3½, 217-pound Aikman said.

One week into 1986 spring practice, Aikman decided he wanted out.

"The injury was responsible without a doubt," he said. "It was a frustrating time to get hurt. And Jamelle had such a great year that I realized it was going to be tough to start the following season."

This time, Switzer came through. "It came down to UCLA, Arizona State and Stanford," Switzer said. "(Stanford coach Jack) Elway never returned my call. (Arizona State coach John) Cooper knew him from when he coached at Tulsa and tried to recruit him (Aikman's family was living in Henryetta, Okla., at the time), but if you could go to UCLA, where would you go?"

"(UCLA coach Terry) Donahue didn't know anything about him. Most people don't like to take transfers, but I told Terry he'd be a first-round draft choice and he took him on my recommendation."

"I coached in the Hula Bowl and one of the quarterbacks was Jim Everett. I told everyone, 'I've got a sophomore at Oklahoma better than

AP's Forgetful Voter Gets The Message From FSU

EDITOR'S NOTE — One of the 60 voting members of The Associated Press' college football poll forgot to list Florida State on his ballot last week, setting off an outcry in the Sunshine State. After remaining anonymous for more than a week, Ronnie Christ of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot decided to confess to the oversight.

By Ronnie Christ HARRISBURG (PA.) PATRIOT

OK, all you Florida State people. I got the message.

I know how much those national football polls mean to the folks around Tallahassee. Probably a lot more than any of those presidential polls. I mean, those folks get serious about their football.

I read all about it in the personal and confidential letter Wayne Hogan, the university's sports information director, sent all 60 voting members in The Associated Press poll.

I got the message in the copy of the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel that was enclosed with the letter. "Seminole players, fans mad at poll's forgetfulness," screamed the banner headlines. The paper even printed the poll the way it should have been alongside the actual poll.

"I don't think we've been this upset since we lost to Miami 26-25 in 1987," tackle Joey Ionata said. "I guess no one gives us any respect."

Florida State made sure the voters got the message by running up the score in a 66-3 rout of poor Louisiana Tech.

"I hope the pollsters noticed," FSU safety Stan Shiver said. "We felt like we lost respect."

"We had to beat somebody like Nebraska does," cornerback Deion Sanders said. "We had to get attention."

All of this not because Florida State was kept from being No. 1, but because it slipped from No. 5 to No. 7.

All of this because Herschel Nissenson, college football editor of The AP, wouldn't reveal the name of the dastardly voter so he could be tarred and feathered.

Well, Florida State, if it makes you feel any better, I confess. I'm the voter who forgot to list the Seminoles on my ballot a week ago.

In attempting to decide where to rank Miami after its loss to Notre Dame, I left Florida State off the ballot.

I've got you covered this week, but you might not like that vote any better than you did the previous one. That 66-3 romp impressed me so much I voted Florida State No. 7, the same place I would have put the Seminoles a week ago.

It looks like some other voters weren't too impressed, either.

Florida State is sixth in this goal. It is a very spirited rivalry with the schools so closely located."

Sauls is still sorting through his roster, trying to find enough healthy players to field a team. He expects quarterback Morris Foreman, who got hurt last Friday against Ayden-Grifton, and halfback Darryl Wilkes, who wasn't able to play much in the game, to return this week.

"They are a difficult team for us to play because of their wide open style of play," Sauls said. "We've had some problems on defense. We would prefer to play a different style we hope to contain them and not give up the big play. Kris Radford is the finest passing quarterback we've played."

"Depending on the health of their backs, with Anthony Dupree and Cornelius Hill, they've got two outstanding backs. We're not sure what to expect — the split backfield or the run and shoot."

North Pitt

Panther coach Stuart Ennis is trying to keep his team in contention for one of the Eastern Plains Conference three playoff spots with two games left on the schedule.

"Right now I feel like we've got some good things going," Ennis said. "We've played some decent football the last few games, except for the letdown at Farmville. If our young men desire to go back to the playoffs then the Panthers are playoff bound. I have a lot of confidence in these guys."

"Our kids, we had a good talk the following Monday. We hashed it out and had a good practice week and the kids rose to the occasion. We're just about back healthy again."

Next up for the Panthers is Charles B. Aycock, which utilizes the old single wing offensive set, led by the running of fullback Corey Dickerson.

"The Dickerson kid is a mighty fine runner," Ennis said. "He is one of the top rushers in the conference and not only is he a good runner he is also a threat to throw the ball. We'll have to make some adjustments defensively."

Ayden-Grifton
The Chargers are 7-1 overall and 4-0 in the conference, but coach B.T. Chappell is more concerned with a letdown than anything else.

"We went back to back North Pitt, Greene Central and Farmville," he said. "Last week against Farmville we played our best game. We showed some improvement. The thing I don't want now is a letdown."

With two games left in the regular season, Chappell feels his team still has some improving to do if they want to advance in the playoffs.

"We need a win to lock it up and we need to go ahead and try and get if we can," Chappell said. "I tried to emphasize to our players at practice that as far as being a good playoff team we aren't right now. If we sit around here and get satisfied and don't concentrate on our weaknesses we won't advance very far."

"I don't really feel like we've come together as a team. That's the key in the playoffs. There are still a lot of things that have to come together."

"I hope some of the seniors take it to heart that as they get near the end of their careers that they are going to make the most of it."

Conley Spikers Fall To West Carteret

D.H. Conley's girls' volleyball team fell to fellow Coastal Conference member West Carteret, three games to one, in the quarterfinals of the state 3-A volleyball tournament Tuesday night. West won the opening game, 15-5, then took a 16-14 win in the second. Conley rallied for a 16-14 victory in the third game, but West Carteret put it away with a 15-3 win in the fourth game of the best-of-five match. "We never got on track in the first game," Coach Martha McCaskill said. "Then, in the second game, we had them 14-10 and made two unforced errors. That gave them the serve back and they scored four straight to tie it up and went on to win. We played well in the third game and capitalized on their mistakes, but they ran away with it in the fourth game." Tracy Sumrell led Conley in effective hits with 15 while Rene Tuten had 10. Conley winds up its year at 27-4 while West Carteret advances to the state semifinals.

The fourth-fifth grade team at Bethel also started its season with a win Tuesday by topping Stokes 2-0. Matt James scored both of the goals in the victory. Rogers Adds Top Lawyer To Defense Team

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Lions defensive lineman Reggie Rogers has shored up the legal team in his involuntary manslaughter case, hiring noted defense attorney Elbert Hatchett, another one of Rogers' lawyers said. Rogers' parents and fiancée met two hours Tuesday with Hatchett to discuss the Oct. 20 crash that killed three teen-agers, attorney Harold Curry said. Rogers and an 18-year-old female companion were injured in the accident. The football player suffered a fractured neck, a partially amputated thumb and other injuries in the crash in downtown Pontiac. He was expected to remain in Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital at least through this week, Curry said. Rogers was to be arraigned on involuntary manslaughter charges within 72 hours of his release from the hospital, Curry said. He wouldn't say Tuesday how his client would plead. Authorities say Rogers, 24, was drunk when he ran a red light and slammed into a car carrying Kenneth J. Willett, 19, and two of the young victim's cousins, Kelly Ess, 18, and Dale Ess, 17. Curry said Hatchett's involvement in the case will help. "I think he's the best lawyer in the universe, myself," Curry said. Hatchett also represented Detroit Lions running back Billy Sims in a lawsuit filed in 1983 by the Houston Gamblers of the now-defunct United States Football League against Sims and the Lions. A federal jury in Detroit ruled that Sims' contract with the Lions was valid and one he had signed with the Gamblers wasn't. Rogers, Detroit's No. 1 draft choice in 1987, had been sidelined with an ankle injury suffered in the Lions' 20-13 loss Oct. 2 to San Francisco.

Garner Maintains No. 1 Spot

By David Droschak THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fayetteville 71st moved up a spot to eighth, followed by Fayetteville Smith and idle Raleigh Millbrook.

Second-ranked Forest Hills and third-ranked Havelock each received one first-place vote.

Previously unbeaten Rockingham County dropped from sixth to 10th after its 20-6 loss to Eastern Guilford.

The rest of the 3-A poll included High Point Andrews, undefeated East Lincoln, East Wake, South Iredell, defending state champion Shelby and Tarboro.

Cummings Tops DR Rankings

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Burlington Cummings slipped past Havelock to take over first place in the 3-A listings in The Daily Reflector High School football rankings this week.

The other three classification leaders, Garner, Hertford County and East Montgomery held to their first place slots.

Garner, 9-0, continued as the leader among the 4-A schools with a total of 68 points in the rankings, which rate teams on the basis of their success against the strength of their schedule. Points are awarded for each victory and each time a team it has beaten wins a game.

Teams winning against stronger schedules thus will rank higher than those playing weak schedules.

Richmond County is second among the 4-As, with 65 points while Asheville's A.C. Reynolds High is third with 64. Greenville Rose ranks sixth this week.

Cummings, 8-0, eased past Havelock, last week's 3-A leader, to take over with 59 points. Havelock is second with 58 points while High Point's T.W. Andrews is third with 51.

Hertford County, 8-0, continues to lead the 2-As with 52½ points. Newton-Conover moves up from a tie for third to take over second with 47 points while Ayden-Grifton is up from a tie for fifth into third place with 45.

East Montgomery, 7-1, retains the 1-A lead this week with 39 points. Midway, tied for second last week, is tied with Bath, up from seventh, with 35 points.

NFLPA Plans Suit On Drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association is planning to file a class action suit that would challenge Commissioner Pete Rozelle's current drug testing policy, a union source said.

The NFLPA will challenge the so-called Rozelle Rule, saying it violates language in the 1982 Collective Bargaining agreement. The contract expired on Aug. 31, 1987, but is still honored because both sides could not come to terms on a new agreement. The NFLPA maintains that while the 1982 contract does not allow for random testing, the league has been conducting such tests on some players, which the union holds constitutes a violation of the agreement.

The league has said that a player is tested only when there is a cause to suspect he may be using a banned substance, and this, it said, does not violate the agreement.

USC AD Expects To Make Changes

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Interim Athletic Director King Dixon says there are "discipline" problems in the South Carolina athletic department and that he expects changes to be made following allegations by an ex-football player that he and some other players used steroids and other drugs.

"If we need to take some action, we're going to do it," said Dixon, who is the school's fourth athletic director this year. "It would appear we need to do something."

Dixon, who was named interim athletic director earlier this month, would not say whether the changes would be in the area of policy or personnel, but he acknowledged Coach Joe Morrison's performance would be evaluated at the end of the season.

Morrison, who's been at South Carolina since 1983, has a five-year contract that is automatically extended at the end of each season.

But Dixon said any changes would have to wait until after a preliminary probe is completed by the State Law Enforcement Division, SLED, the state's top law enforcement agency, is investigating allegations by ex-South Carolina player Tommy Chaikin, a native of Bethesda, Md.

In an article in Sports Illustrated, Chaikin, who played for the Gamecocks from 1983 to 1987, said he took steroids for three years, that about half the 1986 football team did likewise and that players used other drugs, such as cocaine and LSD.

"I bet as a result of this preliminary inquiry — and I bet as we continue to look into things — some action's going to need to be taken," Dixon said. "I mean if everything was peachy keen, I don't think that article in Sports Illustrated would have been written."

Dixon said he didn't want to hear fans or others telling him everything is OK and "never mind those things."

"Something's got to give," Dixon said. "I mean it when I say, I'm sick and tired of being sick and tired of situations developing at the University of South Carolina. It's a lack of values and directions and consistency and thought.... It's a breakdown in communications. It's a breakdown in emphasis."

"It's a systematic problem within our whole organization in the athletic department, I think; or I can't figure out why our image has been stained if that's not it. So, I feel a mandate to look into this thing and to turn that image around."

Dixon would not say whether he felt Morrison's job was in jeopardy, but he did say Morrison's performance — on and off the field — would be evaluated at the end of the season.

"Joe Morrison has a five-year contract. What else can I say? Those things will have to be sorted out," he said. "Yeah, he'll be scrutinized, evaluated like other head coaches here."

Dixon was also asked about the image Morrison projects, given not only his laid-back coaching style but a widely publicized extra-marital paternity suit last year.

"Joe's personal life is his personal life. His style of leadership is his style of leadership," Dixon said. "The negative publicity that comes out of those types of things bothers the hang out of me. What we are able to do with that, and how we're able to wrestle with that, we're going to have to see."

"At the end of the season, interim or permanent, I'm going to sit down with the head coach, and I will go over the results of the football season from a technical aspect, called won and loss. Did we live up to our overall goal as a football team?"

"Then I will go into the other aspects of the performance of that team, on and off the field, and try to determine ways in which we can do a better job in the future."

Dixon has been interim athletic director — the fourth man this year to occupy the head job in the athletic department — since only Oct. 3, when he was named to replace Dick Bestwick.

Bestwick resigned after only six months on the job, citing unspecified health problems. Bestwick replaced Johnny Gregory, who was acting athletic director after Bob Marcum was fired in early March when a task force criticized the school's drug-testing program.

Dixon, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the university and a former athletic star at South Carolina, said one of his first tasks as interim AD was to look into rumors he had heard concerning a multitude of problems.

The rumors included allegations of athletes using steroids, drinking too much and missing curfew. He also heard rumors of "a lack of discipline" in the athletic dormitory and cafeteria.

Dixon said he had started questioning coaches before the Sports Illustrated article broke. Dixon said he felt SLED would be interested in the "criminal allegations" of the possible use of drugs by athletes and thus suspended his own probe until SLED had completed its own investigation.

"I think we've got some problems. The understatement of the day: I think we have some problems in the athletic department in discipline," Dixon said, "or a sense of values of what we're about."

Where Are The Wolfpack?

Somebody has missed the boat.

I can't understand how N.C. State's football team was left out of the Associated Press top 20 this week after topping Clemson 10-3 last Saturday. Not only was it the third straight time the Wolfpack had beaten the Tigers, but it also raised their season record to 6-1.

Sure the argument may be that the Wolfpack hasn't faced a very tough schedule so far this year, but neither has seventh-ranked West Virginia (7-0), eighth-ranked Oklahoma (6-1) or 10th-ranked Wyoming (8-0).

One needs also to consider the fact that State's defense still remains the top in the country even after playing Clemson. The Pack is yielding just 209.3 yards per game. On the average, the Wolfpack is allowing only 85.9 yards rushing and 123.4 yards through the air. Ninth-ranked Auburn is the closest competitor, giving up 222.9 yards per outing.

State also ranks second in scoring defense giving up a measly 7.7 points.

The 6-1 start by N.C. State is the best start the team has had since the 1974 campaign when the Lou Holtz-led Wolfpack started with the same 6-1 mark on its way to a 9-2 season and a spot in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

The Pack hasn't had a better record than this year's since 1967 when they got off to an 8-0 start under coach Earle Edwards. State finished the '67 season with a 9-2 mark and a trip to the Liberty Bowl.

Pack Defense Doesn't Miss A Beat

Most people would probably think the Wolfpack defense is full of seniors. But it looks like members of the Atlantic Coast Conference will have to put up with the defense for sometime to come, as it is very youthful.

In fact, when inside linebacker Fred Stone went out against Clemson midway through the fourth quarter last Saturday, the Wolfpack played the majority of final three Clemson possessions with just three upperclassmen on the field — outside linebacker Scott Auer, defensive tackle Ray Agnew and free safety Michael Brooks.

Most of the other eight positions were filled with the likes of Mark Thomas, Jesse Campbell, Billy Ray Haynes, Lee Knight, Corey Edmund, Elijah Austin, Mike Jones, Joe Johnson and Fernandus Vinson — all freshmen or sophomores.

Changing Of The Guard In Chapel Hill

When Todd Burnett opened at quarterback for North Carolina last Saturday in its 20-17 win over Georgia Tech, it marked the first time North Carolina had started a true freshman at that position since Jonathan Hall led the Tar Heels against Clemson in 1985.

Hall sparked the Heels to a 21-20 win over the Tigers in his initial start. However, he had played the entire second half of the team's previous game against Maryland. Burnett's first start also marked his first appearance of the year, making him the first true freshman at UNC to start the first game in which he played.

Tar Heel coach Mack Brown said he hopes his decision to start Burnett last week will give his team a needed spark.

"We felt like we needed a pickup offensively," Brown said. "I think we got that. We joined Clemson as the only teams to get 300 yards of offense against Georgia Tech's defense."

Darrell Moody, the offensive coordinator for the Tar Heels, said Burnett made mistakes, but none that seemed to bother him.

"The impressive thing about Todd was he kept his poise," Moody said. "And he made some big plays for us. He had five completions on third-and-long to keep drives going."

Burnett's biggest mistake of the day was when he had a sideline pass picked off by Georgia Tech outside linebacker George Malone in the second quarter. Malone returned the ball all the way for a touchdown.

Following the interception, Burnett completed 8 of 10 passes. He was 5-5 on Carolina's two touchdown drives in the second half.

Burnett pointed to Hall as the player that helped him the most in the game Saturday.

"Jonathan was very important to me," Burnett said. "He was there every time I walked off the field. He and Deems (May) would come over to me, telling me things that were going on out there. They knew my situation. They knew how I felt. They had been there and they were a great help."

Hall, however, said all the credit should go to Burnett.

"Todd did it all by himself," Hall said. "It's lonely when you're out there for the first time. I went through it as a freshman and I know. He did a great job handling the offense against a very good defensive team."

Jett Punts For Pirate Record

East Carolina's freshman punter John Jett broke the old school record for punting average in a game Saturday against Syracuse with a 52.3 yard average. Jett's three punts against the Orangemen, in a 38-14 loss, went for 71, 44 and 36 yards.

The old Pirate record was 48.4 yards per punt set in 1975 by Tom Daub in a game against North Carolina. Jett's 71-yard punt was in the second half and most of it was in the air.

Freshman quarterback Todd Burnett will start his second game in a row against Maryland this weekend, according to North Carolina coach Mack Brown. Burnett is shown here in action from last Saturday's 20-17 Tar Heel victory over Georgia Tech.

La Russa Named AL's Top Skipper

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Tony La Russa got two of the three championships he was looking for this season. Now the Oakland Athletics' skipper has picked up a bonus title: American League Manager of the Year.

La Russa outpolled Boston manager Joe Morgan in close balloting to win the award announced Tuesday by the Baseball Writers Association of America. He received 103 points to 89 for Morgan and 37 for Sparky Anderson of the Detroit Tigers.

The 44-year-old La Russa also won the award five years ago when he led the Chicago White Sox to 99 victories and the AL West title.

"This is an award for the organization," said La Russa. "I'm pleased for myself, but what the writers are saying is that the Oakland A's did a good job."

La Russa piloted the Athletics to an Oakland-record 104 victories, the divisional crown and a four-game sweep of the Red Sox for the AL pennant. The A's lost the World Series in five games to the underdog Los Angeles Dodgers.

"If you lose the World Series, you should be very upset. I don't want my players to say 'We made it and 24 other teams were watching us on TV.' I was, until today, very upset," he said with a smile.

La Russa got 15 first-place votes, six more than Morgan, in balloting by a committee made up of two writers from each AL city. The other managers receiving first-place votes were Anderson, with three, and Milwaukee's Tom Trebelhorn, with one.

Each first-place vote was worth five points. Second-place votes were worth three points each, while a third-place vote counted as one point.

Under La Russa, the A's improved by 23 victories in 1988 and won the division by 13 games over the defending World Series champion Minnesota Twins.

Oakland finished first in the league in pitching with a 3.43 earned run average, third in defense and best in the club's 21 years in Oakland, and second in homers with 156. The A's won a franchise-record 14 straight games in April and May and set a San Francisco Bay area attendance record, drawing 2,287,335 fans to the Oakland Coliseum.

Not as flashy or colorful as other successful managers, La Russa earned a reputation for hard work, sound strategy and even-handed dealings with his players. He said he demanded two things of his players: show up on time and always play hard.

"He's probably the No. 1 manager I know in terms of baseball knowledge and strategy," A's infielder-outfielder Tony Phillips said last week.

"He shows his players he's definitely prepared, and if anyone starts to lag a bit, he gets mad," the seven-year veteran added. "He'd rather have a guy with lesser ability playing for him than a more talented player who doesn't give 100 percent."

La Russa said he was proud of his team for being relentless, avoiding a critical slump all season long until the World Series.

"If you look at '88, there's no doubt that missing out in the World Series is a negative," he said. "But if you look at '89, it's probably a positive. It'll be a great motivation for us to play our best and get back there next year."

A native of Tampa, Fla., La Russa played professionally for 16 seasons and made his big-league debut at age 18 with the Kansas City A's in 1963. He next played with Oakland from 1968-71 and finished out his career with Atlanta and the Chicago Cubs. He had a meager career batting average of .199 in 132 games over parts of six seasons as a utility infielder.

His managerial career began in 1978 when he took over the White Sox' Class AA team in Knoxville. The team went 53-25, earning La Russa a promotion to Chicago's coaching staff.

He was named manager of the White Sox' Class AAA team in Iowa in 1979 and took over the Chicago job that August at age 35. The White Sox finished fifth that year and the next, third in 1981 and 1982, and first in 1983. The White Sox were tied for first at the All-Star break in 1984 before plummeting to fifth. La Russa was fired after the team finished third in 1985 and started out 1986 with a 26-38 record.

La Russa came to the A's on July 7, 1986, managing the team to a 45-34 record that season and 81-81 in 1987. He makes $350,000 a year on a contract running through 1989.

His managerial record is 879-759 in 10 seasons, or .537, and 6-7 in the postseason. He is 230-173 with the A's in regular-season games, a .571 winning percentage that ranks him third, trailing only Dick Williams and Alvin Dark, with Oakland.

Former Bengal Clark Killed By Blood Clot

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — What began as a cramp in the left leg of Charles E. "Boobie" Clark turned out to be a blood clot that advanced into his lungs and killed the former Cincinnati Bengals running back, his wife said.

Clark was pronounced dead Tuesday at Methodist Hospital, which did not release details of the death. He was 38.

According to his wife, Elaine, a nagging leg cramp bothered Clark so much early Tuesday morning that he drove himself to the hospital around 3 a.m. and immediately underwent tests.

"I rubbed it for him and he said it was just a cramp. Boobie always had cramps in his legs," she said. "When I got to the hospital he just said, 'Hey, baby,' and that he was getting tired of the tests. It wasn't long after that he died."

Mrs. Clark said a blood clot in her husband's leg advanced into his left lung and killed her him only six hours after he reported to the hospital.

Clark, a graduate of Bethune-Cookman College, played eight years in the NFL — from 1973 through 1980 — with the Cincinnati Bengals and the Houston Oilers.

Despite being a 12th-round draft choice, he won the league's rookie award when he rushed for 988 yards and eight touchdowns in his first season, the best year of his career.

"It was a big surprise, him being a 12th-round pick and coming around the way he did," said former Bengals wide receiver Isaac Curtis, the team's first-round pick that same year. "He was a big key to our success in 1973. We really started coming into our own that year."

Clark, a 6-footer who played at anywhere from 240 to 280 pounds, began the big-fullback era at Cincinnati. He was followed at the fullback position by Pete Johnson, Larry Kinnebrew and Ickey Woods, the team's current starter.

He led the team in rushing in 1975 and '76 and remains the third-leading rusher in Bengals history, totaling 2,978 yards in six seasons. Only Pete Johnson (5,241 yards) and Essex Johnson (3,070 yards) rushed for more.

Clark's 25 rushing touchdowns also are third in club history, behind Pete Johnson's 64 and Kinnebrew's 37.

Clark never had the success in Houston that he had in Cincinnati, though, getting 22 carries his first year with the Oilers and just one in 1980.

After 1980, no team took a chance on Clark. He returned home to face, according to his wife, the toughest frustration of his life.

"I feel very strongly about this even in my grief," she said. "I'm proud of what he meant to this community, and part of the community respected him so much. But other parts didn't."

"He never could get a job, and that was hard for him," she said.

At the time of his death, Clark owned a video store in Jacksonville. Neither of his daughters lives at home. Tasha, 18, is a student at Florida A&M and Buffy, 16, attends high school in Belle Glade.

Clark is survived by his wife and two daughters. Funeral services will be held Saturday at Christ Temple Missionary Baptist Church.

Past Billiard King Lassiter Dead At 69

ELIZABETH CITY (AP) — Luther "Wimpy" Lassiter, who won international acclaim and six world billiards championships, died Tuesday. He was 69.

Lassiter, who was considered by many to be one of the greatest nine-ball players of all time, was found about 2:30 p.m. by a nephew in his weathered, brown-frame home in Elizabeth City, the town where he grew up.

Lassiter, who had been in failing health, apparently collapsed in the bathroom that morning, not far from the pool table where he still played every day, said James Todd, a family friend.

"I know he played yesterday and probably this morning," Todd said Tuesday, "because I went in and there were still seven balls and a cue ball and his cue stick on the table."

"Pool meant everything to him. He told me once that if he couldn't play pool, he didn't know what he would do."

Billiards legend Willie Mosconi, a 15-time world champion, said Lassiter "thrived on the game of pool."

"That was his life," Mosconi, 75, said Tuesday from his home in Had-don Heights, N.J. "Half the time, he didn't eat a good meal. He was a very good player — one of those quiet sort of guys hanging around pool halls."

"Man, there is no other sound in the world as nice as a ball dropping into a pocket," Lassiter once said, describing his trips as a youth to the old City Billiards pool hall in Elizabeth City. "And it seemed as though the place had a sort of smell to it that you could breathe. Like old green felt tables and brass spittoons and those dark, polished woods. Then, a bluish haze of smoke and sweet pool chalk and, strong-gest of all, a kind of manliness."

Lassiter earned the name "Wimpy" for his habit of devouring hot dogs in high school. He dropped out of school at 16 and began hustling through the smoke-filled billiard halls.

"I will play you for money, marbles or chalk," Lassiter once said.

In the 1940s and '50s, Lassiter barnstormed pool halls throughout the country. He once listed his biggest payoffs as $15,000 in a week, $11,000 in a single night.

In 1983, he won the second ESPN Legendary Pocket Billiards Stars Tournament, beating the likes of Mosconi, Minnesota Fats and Jimmy Moore. He also was elected to the Billiard Congress of America Hall of Fame.

Wyche Gets Ghosts To Aid His Bengals

By Dave Goldberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sam Wyche is bedeviled by ghosts — many of them real. In fact, it's widely conceded he kept his job as coach of the Cincinnati Bengals this season only because tight-fisted management didn't want to pay him for sitting idle during the final year of his contract.

So after the Bengals beat the Oilers 44-21 Sunday, opening up a 29-0 first-quarter lead that stood up to repeated second-half threats, Wyche couldn't help calling up one of those spirits — a game last season in which the Bengals lost 41-24 to New Orleans after leading 24-10 at halftime.

"What (Saints coach) Jim Mora told his team at halftime of that game is no longer true," Wyche said. "He said 'Keep going after the Bengals and they'll fold.' We did then, we don't now."

Indeed, "The question most asked about the Bengals, 4-11 last season, 7-1 halfway through 1988, is: 'Are they for real?'"

"The answer: Decidedly. Make that probably."

"To begin with, last year was more the fluke, not this one."

"The 4-11 record was the product of a slide that began in the second game with Wyche's bizarre decision to try to run out the clock instead of punting on fourth down from his own 27 while holding a 26-20 lead over San Francisco. The ploy failed, the Oilers got the ball with four seconds left and Joe Montana threw a 25-yard touchdown pass to Jerry Rice for a 27-26 victory."

"Then came the strike and things were never the same — that loss to New Orleans was typical."

But the 1986 Bengals went 10-6, and missed the playoffs only in a complicated tiebreaker. In fact, they might have won the AFC Central had they not inexplicably lost 34-3 at home to Cleveland the next-to-last week of the season, following that with a 52-21 win over a team that did make it, the New York Jets.

Moreover, the unquestioned offensive talent of that team has been augmented by some on defense, particularly third-year strong safety

David Fulcher and second-year cornerback Eric Thomas, who had two interceptions to set up two touchdowns against Houston Sunday.

And finally, Wyche has finally decided to let well enough alone, eschewing the gimmicks like the fourth-down play against the Oilers or reverses on first-and-goal from the 3. One of those a few years ago ended up as a 21-yard loss and cost Cincinnati another game. "Now we just play straight football," says quarterback Boomer Esiason, a former Wyche critic who now gets on famously with his leader. "Guess what? It works."

In fact, until Sunday, there had been no gimmicks at all — the closest being when James Brooks faked a reverse to Eddie Brown, then continued around right end.

But holding a 21-point lead in the third quarter, Wyche couldn't resist. He actually gambled calling a fake punt from his own 25. It worked, sort of — a wide open Ray Horton took a pass from punter David Fulcher and raced to a touchdown, but it was called back by a holding penalty.

All that and some good luck — like the injury to Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar — has given Cincinnati a two-game lead in the AFC Central. It may not last — Kosar, who sat while Mike Pagel played in the Bengals' 24-17 win at Cincinnati, will be back for next week's game with the Browns, 5-3, and the AFC preseason favorite.

But the maligned Wyche has become a master psychologist.

After his team's only loss, a 27-21 defeat in New England two weeks ago, he found a new trick to avoid what in the past has turned one loss into a three- or four-game losing streak.

"I told the players that we were starting over, that this was the first game of the season," he said after the Houston game.

Did it work? You can't argue with 44-21.

Change Of Plea

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — A Lake Toxaway man pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter Tuesday, one day after his first-degree murder trial opened in Transylvania County Superior Court.

Judge Robert Lewis sentenced Brian Keith Hughes, 28, to 14 years in prison for the July 12 shooting of his next-door neighbor, 50-year-old Donald L. Miller. Miller died two days later in Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville from complications caused by wounds in his abdomen and left thigh.

Hughes' first-degree murder trial started Monday with the selection of a jury and the prosecution opening its case. But Tuesday morning, Lewis allowed Hughes to withdraw his innocent plea and, through a plea bargain, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter.

Lewis recommended that Hughes, a carpenter, receive work release when eligible so he can pay the Miller family $6,000 for funeral and medical bills, which total about $20,000. Hughes also received credit for 105 days pre-trial confinement.

Beef Hash Recalled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Officials with Castleberry's Food Co. are recalling 2,161 cases of single-serve canned corned beef hash, saying some of the food wasn't cooked.

Dick Lamb, director of personnel at Castleberry's, said only 35 cases are believed to be involved, but the company is recalling the entire day's production of the product "to be on the safe side."

The corned beef hash was processed Sept. 21 and is packaged in 7.5-ounce cans with pull top ends. The product is sold primarily in vending machines, but some is sold through convenience and grocery stores.

Because some of the hash may have missed the cooking process, the company is recalling the product. Lamb said the company doesn't believe there is any foreign matter in the day's production.

"Some way and somehow, we feel a few cans bypassed the cooking process," Lamb said. "We are trying to determine now how that happened."

In a prepared statement, Castleberry's said its quality assurance workers have determined the non-sterile product is packed in cans under the code numbers 2J81CBV4 and 2J81CBV3.

FmHA To Dun Farmers For Late Payments

By Don Kendall
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — About 90,000 farmers who are behind in their loan repayments to the Farmers Home Administration will be getting notices shortly after the Nov. 8 election telling them to start making arrangements for settlement.

The Agriculture Department agency said Tuesday the notices will be an attempt to collect about $8.8 billion in past-due loans.

Spokesman Marlyn Aycock said rules implementing new credit legislation will take effect Nov. 14 and that "Dear Farmer Jones" notices will start going out soon thereafter to the delinquent FmHA borrowers.

Aycock said the notices will say: "This is to inform you that you're seriously behind in your loan payments and to inform you of your options. Farmers who are more than 180 days late in making payments have several options."

The notices will explain that the FmHA borrowers must notify the agency within 45 days if they intend to apply to make arrangements for settling their debts. Details regarding the options, including debt restructuring and write-offs, also will be provided.

Aycock said the timetable for sending out the notices as promptly as possible took into consideration the months of rulemaking, periods for public comment and time for training FmHA people to handle the additional job load.

Congress ordered FmHA to revise its lending practices in the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987. The agency is often called the farm lender of last resort because it makes loans only to those who cannot qualify at banks or other commercial sources.

The debt write-down, or forgiveness provision, is regarded as one of the most important parts of the 1987 law. It allows FmHA to reduce a farmer's delinquent debt to the recovery value of the collateral, which is usually land or farm equipment, depending on cash flow and other factors.

Also, as the result of lawsuits, the FmHA is under court order to redo many of its loan regulations and to hold up on foreclosures and forced liquidations until those actions are completed.

Estimates of the extent of FmHA loan delinquencies and numbers of farmers potentially threatened by foreclosure under the new rules have varied.

Last May 23, when the new regulations were proposed, FmHA losses resulting from write-offs and other settlements were estimated at about $8.7 billion and that about 118,000 borrowers were delinquent. About 64,800 of those could be pushed into liquidation or foreclosure because they couldn't qualify for help under the new law.

Another major step was an interim rule announced on Sept. 14, including procedures for making debt restructuring and write-downs. Those were to take effect on Oct. 14 on an interim basis and called for final adoption on Nov. 14 after a 60-day period for public comments.

Aycock said the current estimate of 90,000 delinquent borrowers was based on figures last fall.

He Will Paddle The Cape Fear For Africa Trip

By Clay Deanhardt
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It was 1984 when James Tisdale first saw a television commercial that caught his eye.

A Boy Scout, Tisdale was captured by the commercial's promise of adventure: scuba diving in the Bahamas, sailing around the world and exploring the dark continent.

The commercial was for Operation Raleigh, a four-year program for young adults around the world sponsored by the British government. Tisdale was too young to apply, and when the show came back on he didn't think any more about the commercial.

He filed the incident in the back of his mind.

In September, 1988, Tisdale was sitting in his dorm room at East Carolina University when he picked up a copy of his student newspaper and turned to the classified section. An ad caught his eye:

EXPEDITIONS TO AFRICA: Spring semester openings to Kenya and Cameroon. Join a team of international young people to explore tropical rain forests and discover African wildlife. Apply now!

Tisdale called a phone number the ad gave and learned how to apply for the program, which turned out to be Operation Raleigh. The program was in its final year, but Tisdale would get his chance to apply to go on the adventures that caught his eye four years earlier.

He received his application and filled it out immediately. A few days later, Tisdale found out he had qualified for the program's selection weekend at the end of September. Soon after, he received a letter telling him he had been accepted, and would soon be trekking through the rain forests of Cameroon, Africa.

Tisdale is excited about the possibilities his trip presents, and he talks about it as quickly as a North Carolina native with a slight southern drawl can. More composed than the average college freshman, Tisdale speaks confidently in a deep, booming voice. His jaw is squared and serious, but his eyes dance as he ponders what he is about to do.

Ever since Tisdale saw that first commercial, Operation Raleigh has been sending young venturers on expeditions throughout the world. Four thousand students from around the world ages 17-21, including 1,000 Americans, have participated in three-month science and service expeditions with professional explorers and scientists to all corners of the globe.

Students selected for the expedition are required to raise their own funding ($5,500) as part of their learning experience. They are also expected to work on service projects for the areas of the world they visit, and when they return home they must complete 150-300 hours of community service.

Shannon Wolfe/The Daily Reflector

Tisdale will raise money for his journey by canoeing up the Cape Fear River

This rigorous program is the brainchild of Britain's Prince Charles, and the brother of 1978-80's Operation Drake, a similar program successful on a much smaller scale. This is the final year of the program, as the sailing of a ship into the Thames river, completing a trip around the world, will signal the successful completion of Operation Raleigh.

But Tisdale is getting his chance to participate.

Leaning forward in his chair, he rests his hands on a table, telling how he received his application in the mail on Rapture day.

"I borrowed a typewriter and as we waited for the world to end

I typed my application," he says, laughing.

Just days later he received a letter telling him to report to a farm just north of Rolesville for weekend to test his mettle. Forty-eight hours of interviews and tests outdoors would determine whether he was able to take on this adventure.

"You've got about 36 people and they're all running around trying to lead each other," he says. "It got kind of ridiculous after a while."

While he is not supposed to reveal everything that happened over the weekend, Tisdale said it was an experience he will never forget.

"Grueling, strenuous, exhilarating are three words that describe it," he says.

"After that weekend if they had sent me a letter saying I hadn't been accepted, it would have been enough," he says. The tone in his voice says he means it.

But Tisdale made it. "It was an intense moment of sheer joy followed by the realization that I had five-and-a-half thousand dollars to raise," he says of getting his acceptance letter.

Tisdale must raise his tuition in sponsorships before he can go on the expedition, and he is looking for help.

He says some students in England have gone a long way to raise the necessary funds. One

Heigh Ho! Disney Has New Sound For Album

By Richard Harrington
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — On "Stay Awake," a new multi-star anthology of classic songs from Walt Disney films, Tom Waits tackles "Heigh Ho," the dwarfs' marching song from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

It's darker than any coal mine those dwarfs might be marching to, with Waits' gruff, grumbly voice slowly crawling over the lyrics. Even producer Hal Willner must have been a little concerned when tapes of the new record were played for Disney executives a few months back.

"I wasn't in the room when they heard it," says Willner in NBC's New York offices (he has been the musical director for "Saturday Night Live" since 1978).

"But it's not such an off-the-wall thing; it's just Tom Waits. It's so ... atmospheric. Maybe it's Freddy Krueger going to work with seven dwarfs who don't want to go to work. ... Taken in context, it shouldn't make (Disney) crazy. It's very cinematic. And it's just the other side of 'Baby Mine.'"

"Baby Mine," the lovely lullaby from "Dumbo," is also on "Stay Awake," performed with appropriate gentleness by Bonnie Raitt.

For his fourth conceptual project — earlier albums have paid homage to Nino Rota, Thelouious Monk and Kurt Weill — Willner gathered together a diverse and eclectic group of collaborators, ranging from established stars (James Taylor, Betty Carter, Larry Nilsson, Ringo Starr) and new artists (Los Lobos, Suzanne Vega, Sinéad O'Connor) to cutting-edge performers (Sun Ra and his Arkestra, Syd Straw, Bill Frisell and Wayne Horvitz).

The material that attracted them was drawn from Disney films going back to the late '30s — most, but not all of them, animated. They ranged from classic songs like "Someday My Prince Will Come" (from "Snow White"), "When You Wish Upon a Star" (from "Pinocchio") and "Zip-a-Dee-Dee-Dah" (from "Song of the South") to lesser-known gems like "Blue Shadows on the Trail" (from "Melody Time").

In his earlier projects, Willner focused on a single composer; with the Disney project, he was working with scores of songwriters, some well known, but most not.

"The way we looked at it, all these films were done under the supervision of Walt Disney," Willner explains. "The last film we have a song from is 'The Jungle Book,' and he was very involved in all those films. They were all made under his watchful eye, so in a way it's consistent."

Disney songs are going through something of a revival right now (see Pop Recordings), with Disney itself releasing two CD collections of the original music, and chanteuse Barbara Cook treating Disney to a retrospective album as she has done with Gershwin and Kern.

"I don't think we influenced either of them," says Willner, "and ours is a little different." Still, he had to secure the Disney organization's approval and cooperation in order to get publishing rights for the 21 songs that appear on "Stay Awake."

"I played stuff for them and they're letting the record come out," says Willner, "but besides that they had nothing to do with it. Donald Duck's not on the cover."

Willner's collection certainly lives up to its subtitle, "various interpretations." While some people may hate Waits' take on "Heigh Ho," the album is chock-full of delightful variations.

Grandmother Clown Helps Downhearted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FLORENCE, Ky. — Mary Miller is not kidding when she says you can laugh your way to feeling better.

Miller, a Florence, Ky., grandmother, is also known as Merri Belle the Clown, a character she invented to lift the spirits of people going through tough times.

"I guess I thought of the clown idea from raising and entertaining seven children," she says.

In full costume and makeup, Merri Belle is a familiar and welcome visitor at the Women's Crisis Center shelter.

"The kids need somebody to wrap them up in a blanket and rock them and make them smile," Miller says.

Merri Belle is not only funny, she's very empathetic.

"Ninety percent of volunteer work is being a good listener," she says. "When I'm at the shelter, I listen and share with the other women and talk."

After taking the Women's Crisis Center training classes and logging hundreds of volunteer hours, she is now a part-time auxiliary staff member at the center, which offers shelter for abused women and their children.

"Merri Belle is a unique volunteer," says Nancy Putthoff, director of United Way & Community Chest in northern Kentucky. "She brings a lot of laughter and joy into the lives of many children."

Being Merri Belle is just one of the ways Miller has found to ease the

The new radio production stars Jason Robards as Princeton astronomer Richard Pierson, one of a handful to survive the fictitious initial Martian attack on a New Jersey village.

Former Actor Shares His Craft

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Eben Henson has been digging into his pocket for 40 years to support the arts when others ignore them.

The former actor, turned producer, says it has cost him at least $250,000, plus endless hours of volunteer work.

"I'm a soft touch," says Henson, who almost single-handedly built the theater and drama school he runs on the outskirts of Danville.

More than 3,000 youngsters have gone through his Pioneer Playhouse program, including John Travolta, Lee Majors and Jim Varney, star of the "Hey Vern" commercials.

"My school fills a gap that exists in most colleges," Henson says. "Only a few teach acting the way it should be taught. They do well with technical things, like lighting and scenery."

Henson's troupe presents five plays each summer. Admission is $8.50 and $14.95. "The higher price is for patrons who want dinner," he says.

After serving in the Navy during World War II, Henson settled in New York and studied at Piscator's Dramatic Workshop. "Among my classmates were Tony Curtis, Bea Arthur and Harry Belafonte."

Henson appeared in three Broadway shows. Then because of his father's illness, he returned home to tend the family business.

The idea for the playhouse grew out of a request in 1948 from the superintendent of a Kentucky mental institution.

"He asked me to put on small productions so patients might have

Candidates Work For Free TV 'Silly Things' Get Network News Air Time

By Robert Barr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Bush and Michael Dukakis have resorted to what the Republican calls "silly things," from exchanging stares with the Three Little Pigs to riding an M-1 tank, to get the ultimate in exposure — a free minute on the network news.

The job of making that picture and sound bite irresistible to TV producers falls to image-makers for the two presidential candidates.

These image-makers exert control over what gets seen on television by confining reporters and camera-sound crews to a twilight zone close enough for cameras but too far away for microphones to pick up any unscripted speech.

The result often enough: pictures of flag-draped campaign rallies with the candidates offering snappy one-liners but no clear discussion of the issues.

"That's life," says Richard Salant, former president of CBS News. "Almost everything except natural disasters are done to a greater or lesser extent to draw the attention of the media."

The influence of television in the political arena goes by the numbers:

—At this time of year, the three network newscasts reach more than 25 million American homes every night.

—Deduct station breaks and commercials, and the three network newscasts have about 22 minutes to cover the world.

—One minute during one network news show costs a commercial sponsor $90,000. Making that one-minute splash on all three news shows — the campaigns call it "free media" — is a windfall worth more than a quarter of a million dollars.

To get their share of that limited time, campaigns must "outguess the producer in terms of what's going to be important," says Robert J. Murphy, ABC's vice president for television news coverage.

"What's new is the next logical step from the point of view of the campaign manager — once you get your view in, how do you keep everything else out of it," he said. "That's what the Reagan administration has done, very effectively, and that's now what campaign managers are being judged on."

The managers, especially the Bush managers, are being judged in some quarters as entirely too effective.

"More than ever before, the whole campaign is in the control of image-makers," says Salant.

Bush, who has many of the same advisers who worked with Reagan, has used his status as a sitting vice president to produce some striking images in the campaign. He was shown witnessing the destruction of the first U.S. missiles under the treaty with the Soviet Union and greeting the Discovery astronauts after the space shuttle landed in California.

Dukakis sought to turn that around, unleashing a series of television commercials on "The Packaging of George Bush."

The Democratic presidential candidate also has tried to use "free media" to his own advantage.

'The Van Dyke Show' Is Slapped Together Replacement For Do-It-Yourself Comedy

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — After canning the original pilot for "The Van Dyke Show," premiering on CBS tonight, the producers seem to have slapped together a replacement from one of those kits at the sitcom store.

This is like do-it-yourself comedy. The actors ought to have blank dialogue balloons over their heads. The audience could do just as well filling in the predictable lines as the writers.

Meanwhile, the producers of Mary Tyler Moore's new series, "Annie McGuire," which premieres tonight after "Van Dyke," also had to reshoot their pilot. The new version wasn't available for review — usually a dead giveaway a show has serious troubles, especially since the network willingly showed critics "The Van Dyke Show." Granted, this is the network that canceled "Frank's Place"; perhaps they're in no position to judge.

Van Dyke and Moore were co-stars in the 1960s hit "The Dick Van Dyke Show." Moore had her own hugely successful "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" a decade later.

CBS hopes these comedy veterans can help shore up lagging ratings and ease a dearth of half-hour comedies. But CBS apparently took no hint from "Life With Lucy." It's painful, not reassuring, to see beloved stars come back in bad shows.

The original pilot for "Annie McGuire," then known only as "The Untitled Mary Tyler Moore Project," was shown to critics last summer but was re-cast, apparently because the husband, played by Edward J. Moore (no relation), was so darned dull. He is now played by Denis Arndt.

Moore plays a sophisticated

Manhattanite who works for City Hall and has recently married Nick, a blue-collar Jersey guy. The original pilot followed their courtship. In the new version, they have been married for a few weeks. Her mom is a liberal. His is a conservative. Tonight's plot centers more on Annie's job in which she meets a disabled Vietnam veteran. Does it sound like someone's throwing in the kitchen sink here, or what?

We have seen Van Dyke's show. He plays Dick Burgess, a big-name song-and-dance man who moves to the small Pennsylvania town where his son, Matt, played by Van Dyke's real-life son, Barry, runs a local theater. Barry Van Dyke is a talented and likeable guy, but he doesn't look very comfortable here. But then, who would?

Matt has a typical sitcom wife, Chris (Kari Lizer), and a typical sitcom son, Noah (Billy O'Sullivan). At home, the elder Van Dyke engages in the slapstick that was his trademark on the old "Dick Van Dyke Show," only this time, instead of falling over an ottoman, he tries to climb into his grandson's bunkbed — for a long, long time.

Down at Matt's theater, there are typical sitcom extras: smart-aleck office assistant Jillian (Maura Tierney), aspiring actor-cleaning boy Erick (Paul Scherrer), and a wise old stage manager, Doc, played by Whitman Mayo, who played

Grady on "Sanford and Son."

The show was directed by talented veteran Jay Sandrich ("The Cosby Show"), and the studio is run by Grant Tinker, formerly known as Mr. Quality. But the writing is weak, credited to executive producers Sam Bobrick and Ron Clark. Go out and hire someone, guys.

Here's one of the funnier lines: When Van Dyke the elder comes down for breakfast, he notes he not only has destroyed the child's bunkbed, but also the rug — by spilling an aquarium onto it. "Is my fish OK?" queries Noah. "He's fine," says Dick. "Er, just don't flush."

The producers may be saying the same thing to CBS in a few weeks.

Elsewhere in television: "DUET" PLUS TWO (YEARS) — Fox's comedy "Duet" starts its new season Oct. 30 by jumping ahead two years in the lives of its Yuppie couples. Laura and Ben (Mary Page Keller and Matthew Laurance) have gotten married. Richard and Linda (Chris Lemmon and Allison LaPlaca) are now parents of a 4-year-old, played by new cast member Ginger Orsi, who apparently has a double life as a Rhodes scholar. Quoth the toddler, according to a Fox press release, "I have no aspirations to become the new Shirley Temple, but I do feel that 'Duet' provides a more stimulating environment in which to expand my creative range than any of my previous endeavors." Hey, we know "Itsy Bitsy Spider." ...

PLEASE, BILL, JUST ONE MORE, PRETTY PLEASE — NBC is holding discussions with Bill Cosby about continuing the network's Thursday comedy linchpin and No. 1 show, "The Cosby Show," for a sixth season, says NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff. Cosby has said from the beginning he would do the show for five years, in which case this would be its last season. "I think the fact that we're talking is a good sign," says Tartikoff.

Linebacker Plies Skills In England

OWENSBORO, Ky. — Have skills, will travel. Such was former Kentucky Wesleyan College linebacker David Cunningham's approach to continuing his football career. Cunningham contacted an agent and paid him a fee last February. Two months later, Cunningham was a Heathrow Jet in England's American Football League. "I got a phone call the same day as the NFL draft," Cunningham says. It cost Cunningham $25 for the agent and $250 for job placement. Cunningham was happy with the arrangement.

"I wanted to play anywhere," Cunningham says. He got one offer. "My contract was for $500 a month, free room and board, a round-trip ticket to London and insurance," he says. "With that, all you need is spending money." Only five Americans are permitted on each European team, and many simply use personnel at nearby U.S. Army bases. The season runs from May to July. The Heathrow Jets were 9-1 in the regular season but lost to the London Capitols 54-34 in the second round of playoffs. Cunningham, Wesleyan's second-leading tackler last year, led the Jets in tackles with 107 and had four interceptions.

"They want me to come back next year, and they may go up to $800 a month," says Cunningham, 23. "It's fun, but there's not a lot of future in it. I want to keep playing, but I'll wait and see." American Football (just plain football is soccer in Britain) draws about 500 fans per game. However, with the growing violence at soccer games, American Football is considered a game where families can go and feel safe. Cunningham says the European pro teams are about equal to good Division III college teams in the United States. The terminology has taken some getting used to. "Knackered means getting tired," he says. "Scattered or bashed means getting hit and knocked down. The uniform is a kit, and cleats are boots."

pain of sadness. After her two sons, aged 19 and 20, died only two months apart Miller was hospitalized for depression.

Eight years ago, she and the Rev. Mike Milliken, pastor at Grace Episcopal Church in Florence, started Compassionate Family, a support group for those who have suffered the deaths of loved ones. So far, the organization has helped more than 500 people through the grieving process.

"Lots of people return around the holidays," says Miller. "We get lots of referrals from psychiatrists, clergy and hospital personnel."

Her own experience with death and grieving made her more aware of mental health issues, Miller says. She has been a board member for the Mental Health Association at both local and state levels and has conducted training classes for mental health volunteers.

Merri Belle also is a frequent visitor of patients at Booth Memorial Hospital, where Miller once directed activities in the psychiatric unit.

"Once I walked into the hospital dressed as Merri Belle and this 4-year-old girl jumped into my arms and said, 'I'm not as afraid as I was since you're here, Merri Belle.'" man, he says, sat in a tub of cold spaghetti for a week, another took up pole sitting.

"I get lots of love back from those kids. It's a feeling money can't buy."

In the states, where the program is not as well known, students often hold bike-a-thons to raise their sponsorships. Tisdale has come up with a new idea.

Call it a canoe-a-thon. From Oct. 28 to 30, Tisdale and several other students involved with Operation Raleigh from other southern states will get sponsors to pay them for canoeing 47 miles along the Cape Fear River.

Upstream. "Why upstream? 'Because it's harder,'" he says.

Using some of the skills he learned on the way to earning his Eagle Scout award, Tisdale will lead an expedition along the river from Pope Park in Fayetteville to U.S. 1, porting only to avoid the worst rapids which would be impossible to conquer paddling upstream.

"I like going the hard way of doing things and I like the river," he says. "But if I thought about any longer I probably wouldn't have done it."

Now he's committed, though, and he's looking for sponsors.

"Basically this is one of the big learning experiences of Operation Raleigh," he says. "You start thinking very differently about things and what money can do."

Tisdale has received a foreign studies scholarship through ECU to pay for part of his tuition.

A possible biology major, he is going to use his interests in biology to participate in a botanical, zoological and geological study of rain forests in Africa.

"It takes about a month over jungles to get where I'm going," he says. "It's a once in a lifetime thing."

Those interested in sponsoring Tisdale's expedition can contact him at 752-9182 or make tax deductible contributions to Operation Raleigh, 109 East Jones St., Raleigh, N.C., 27611. Enclose a note with the check directing the money to a scholarship for James Tisdale. Operation Raleigh also accepts general contributions for its scholarship fund and other operating expenses.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Oct. 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You feel that more heads are better than one, but stay out of a political situation at work. Let the agitators act alone. Your career gets moving.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Lavish yourself, but not when you are down in the dumps. Finances will have to stay on course for a while. Use your best judgment.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You have intriguing information as a result of some intuitive detective work. Do some soul searching before acting on this.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Be cautious when talking about secrets and confidential material to the wrong folks. They may seem okay, but make sure.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Your self-confident attitude can bring you into a leadership role. Shrug off those who hang on to ride your coattails. Use your energy.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Currently at work you may be plodding along unspectacularly, but there is a light at the end of the tunnel. Share your feelings with family.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Energetically pursue pleasure in high spirits. Your Libra sunshine could provoke a romantic situation that has been growing.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Focus on your own needs and wants to give you new strength. Business potentials brighten. Income control lessens the pressures at home.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Weigh a proposal's effect on your current objectives. Your tendency is to get overinvolved. Appraise and balance the situation.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Being one jump ahead, you wonder how an investment will culminate. Arrange for several baskets in which to put your eggs.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You will enjoy your own company today. Relaxation free of outside interference refreshes you. Tend to personal considerations.

 It might have looked as if declarer was engaged in an act of charity. In truth, he was simply making sure all his cards worked for him.

play was designed to cater for just that. He was safe on any 3-2 break.

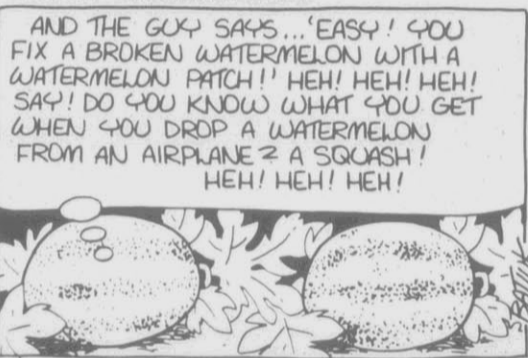

To appreciate his carefulness, look what would have happened had declarer put up a club honor on the first lead of the suit. When East refuses to win the trick, the club suit is shut out completely. As the cards lie, declarer would lack the necessary dummy entries to set up and run the clubs, because only the ace of diamonds would fill that need. If declarer needed five tricks from clubs, his only chance was to lead twice toward dummy and hope that West held the ace, guarded no more than twice. Since he required fewer, he could afford the luxury of countering an enemy hold-up play by preserving his club honors and so forcing them to win.

It Must Be Halloween

By Lisa Crosby

One spooky night there was a goblin looking in my window! When I moved close to the window, the goblin disappeared! Rain was beating against my window and made me think of a skeleton's bones clanking together! When I turned around, there was a huge black cat hissing at me! Just as I was about to pet the cat, it changed into an enormous black bat! I ran downstairs to find my parents but all I saw was an ugly old witch and a vampire! Quickly I ran upstairs to check on my little brother. In his bed was a werewolf! Why are all of these strange things happening tonight? I looked out of my window again and saw a full moon and pumpkin flying around. It must be Halloween!

My Favorite Season

By Molly Gaskins

My favorite season is fall. The three reasons I like fall are the weather, Halloween and the falling of leaves.

I like fall because of the weather. In the fall the weather is comfortable. It is not too hot or cold. It's just right. Also there is almost always a slight breeze. Most of the time it is dry.

I also like fall because of Halloween. I like going trick or treating and walking around with my friends. I also like dressing up in costumes like witches, ghosts, cats and jack-o-lanterns. I like all the treats we get, for example: candy, popcorn, peanuts, and cookies.

I like the fall season because of the falling of leaves. I like to watch the leaves fall to the ground. I also like raking the leaves into many piles. Then most of all, I like jumping into the piles I made. In the paper above, I told you why I like fall. I like the weather, Halloween and the falling of leaves.

Molly Gaskins, 11, a student at Greenville Middle School receives special mention.

a fat mouse. Black cats, black bats and witches' black hats Are scary and frightful but also delightful.

Federal Facts The Republican Party

Many influences have caused the changes. After the Civil War, the Radical Republicans led reconstruction in the South. The harsh treatment turned many Southerners against the party. In 1912, the Republican Party split into two factions or groups. One part was led by Teddy Roosevelt and he called his group the Bull Moose Party. In 1916, the Republican Party was again united.

A Republican, Herbert Hoover was president when The Great Depression began. The party was blamed for the problems of the nation. From the year 1933 until 1953 Democrats controlled the Congress and the presidency. Since 1953, Republicans have been in the White House for 23 years.

In a magazine cartoon in Harper's Weekly in 1874 the Republican elephant was first published. The political cartoonist Thomas Nast used the elephant over and over in his drawings. It became associated as the symbol of the party. (note: Thomas Nast also drew Santa Claus as we see him today).

The first president of the U.S., George Washington, warned the nation against political parties. He was afraid that they would divide the nation. However, two major political groups, the Republicans and the Democrats, have grown and continued to work apart and together for the good of the country.

It's often called The Grand Old Party and it is represented in pictures and cartoons by the elephant. The Republican Party is one of the two largest political groups in the U.S. Its history begins in Ripon, Wisconsin on July 6, 1854 when 53 men led by Alvan E. Bovay met and called their group the Republican Party. Their main purpose was the opposition of slavery.

In 1856, the new Republican Party was defeated in the presidential election. Thus, the party decided it needed to become more than an anti-slavery party. It became in favor of construction of a railroad across the U.S., it favored opening the west for settlement, and it now favored allowing slavery where it already existed. In the 1860 election, Republican Abraham Lincoln was chosen president.

Over the years, the Republican Party has changed its focus. In its beginning it favored no slavery, then it became the party of the farmer and more recently has been the party of big business. The Republicans today are the more conservative political group. That means it favors fewer changes or is the more moderate group.

Halloween Make It A Real Treat

Eating Spot Keys On Variety

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"Primitive eating in a civilized location" is how Issami Hamze characterizes his restaurant in downtown Greenville. Noura's Kitchen, located on Evans Street Mall, has no particular ethnic character, the Lebanon-born owner said. "People think it's Lebanese food because I'm Lebanese."

But, excluding a Lebanese touch here and there, "we just offer a small variety of things that mainly appeal to the sensible eater," Hamze said.

"Most of our cooking comes from the open flame — charbroiled," he said. Nothing is fried but some dishes are sauteed.

"I limit myself to using strictly white meats. I use no red meat," Hamze said.

"I do use a lot of garlic," he said. Also, saffron is used in the rice and in some marinated chicken and fish dishes. Cardemum, "a very aromatic kind of spice," is used in the spiced tea, while the iced tea is brewed with mint.

"We do make our own desserts — cake and bakalawa," which is made with dough stuffed with walnuts and sweet spices, he said. "I do my own baking of breads and sandwich breads."

Shish Tawook and an appetizing dip, Hommos, are popular dishes among customers at Noura's who are mostly workers in surrounding offices and are college and hospital employees, Hamze said.

To make the Shish Tawook, boned and skinned chunks of chicken are marinated in a sauce of lemon juice, garlic, olive oil, saffron, paprika and white pepper for at least five hours, and it is refrigerated. Then it is Halloween candy and other treats does not have to lead to tooth decay.

Dr. Cayle reports that the good news can be found in the studies of the National Institute of Dental Research which shows that one out of every two school children in the United States have no tooth decay.

"In fact," Dr. Cayle says, "American children have 36 percent fewer cavities today than they did at the beginning of the 1980's. The dramatic drop in tooth decay has occurred even though sweetener consumption has remained about the same over the past decades." This improved state of dental health is attributed to oral hygiene, dental technology and the widespread use of fluoride in toothpastes and water supplies.

"It's not so much what children eat, but how long the foods remain on the teeth," Cayle says. "When starches and sweets are eaten as part of a meal, there is little problem because they are washed away by liquids in the meal, and neutralized by naturally occurring saliva. Treats that stick to the teeth — even such "healthy" foods as raisins — are far more likely to cause cavities than a candy bar that quickly leaves the mouth."

But that's not all. Another holiday treat, chewing gum, has been given a clean bill of dental health. Dr.

Q. Over the holidays, I find myself eating too much and can't seem to control myself. Have you suggestions? Lots of local folks.

A. It may seem early, but the holidays are once again upon us. You are not alone with your problem. Over the holiday season, many people overindulge with food and drink. Everyone seems to entertain and show their good will through food, treats and goodies. It can be very difficult to maintain your self-control and your weight. It may seem strange, but another problem commonly seen during this happy season is depression. Many without friends and family find emotional burdens are even more traumatic during this period.

At the Family Practice Center, we are offering our annual Family Living Seminar discussing with the audience these two common holiday problems. On the evening of Nov. 15, Mary Louis and Linda Walker will present a program on "Mood and Food During the Holiday Season." Ms. Louis, a medical social worker, can offer suggestions on coping with your emotions and problems. Ms. Walker, a registered dietitian, will offer suggestions on managing your calorie intake. This is a free class, but we have limited space. If you would like further information, call Mary Merner at 551-5459.

Another holiday program is being offered by the local chapter of the American Diabetes Association Nov. 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the Gaskins-Leslie Building. Sue Daughtry of the Department of Medicine and Karen Warren of Pitt Internal and Renal Medical Associates will present a program on holiday eating. These registered dietitians will focus on holiday eating for diabetics. They will show how to choose lower calorie and heart-smart options. As we have written before, though, the diet for a diabetic is a healthy diet for all. This program will cover behavior modification techniques for controlled eating as well as tips on alcohol choices and food preparation. The program is free and open to the public, with door prizes. I highly recommend both of these programs for you.

There are many cookbooks now that offer lower calorie versions of your traditional holiday favorites and tips on how to entertain. Here are a few basic hints.

Use fresh fruits and vegetables with low-calorie dip as appetizers instead of chips or candies. If you serve high calorie and fat foods like fondants, cakes and pastries, limit the quantities available to munch on. Cut cake into smaller pieces and provide your guests alternatives. At home, be careful about leaving goodies out all the time. It's easy to unconsciously snack and eat too many calories when food is out. Modify some of your favorite recipes. Most of the old favorites have a high fat to sugar ratio and can be modified without affecting the product. For example, if the recipe calls for a cup of sugar or fat, reduce it to 3/4 cup. If it calls for 1/2 cup, reduce to 1/3 cup. What you do is use the next lower measure on the measuring cup for fat and sugar. Try using lower calorie, lower fat substitutions for ingredients in your old favorites. Reduce the amount of oil, butter or margarine or use a substitute of lower fat content. Every little bit helps. Use diet sodas as mixes and skim milk for eggnogs. And, of course, you can always increase your exercise! Try burning up a few of those excess calories you may consume. Exercise not only gets you away from the food but helps burn up calories.

And, if you see me at a party, you'll catch me at the treat table admiring the delicacies; I'll sample them and savor small amounts. Then, I'll move far away not to be tempted to unconsciously pop more into my mouth.

Q. November is diabetes month. The local American Diabetes chapter has many activities planned. Can you write about diet and diabetes? S.E. & D.W., Greenville.

'Devilish Chicken' Great Way To Spice Up Halloween Dinner

Looking for something special to prepare for your Halloween dinner? Use a little microwave wizardry and "zap up" a steaming cauldron of "Turkey Ghoulish" for a tasty one-pot meal that is ready to serve in 30 minutes or less. Another good main-dish idea for Halloween is this "Devilish Hot Pepper Chicken" recipe. It takes just a bit more time to prepare, but it's spicy and delicious and just right for the occasion. Add a fruit salad, or a salad of tossed greens, and finish off the meal with a slice of this great "Pumpkin Pie." The recipe makes two pies. Why not "treat" a special neighbor to the extra one?

Both of these recipes are basically one-pot meals. So, before you can say "hocus pocus," you'll have a delicious meal on the table. With the extra easy lean-up, you can be out of the kitchen before the first trick-or-treaters come to call.

- Boneless turkey roast)
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 can (10 3/4 oz.) condensed beef Broth
- 1/2 teaspoon minced garlic
- 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
- 2 Tbsp. paprika
- 1 tsp. caraway seeds
- 2 cups uncooked medium noodles
- 1 cup plain yogurt or sour cream

Remove skin and bone from turkey; discard. Cut meat into 3/4-inch cubes. Put onion into a 3-quart round casserole. Cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave on HIGH 2 to 3 minutes. Add meat, broth and garlic to onion; re-cover. Microwave on HIGH 5 minutes. Stir and re-cover. Microwave on

Fall Means Apple-Picking Time

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — It's that time of the year for harvesting apples. Children love to go apple-picking, and there's nothing like a tasty apple pie, hot from the oven.

Apples are grown in every continental U.S. state. They are commercially grown in 35 states. The top seven apple-producing states are Washington, New York, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Virginia, California and North Carolina.

Apple season begins in July and August, with early varieties such as the Gravenstein and Early Cortland, and continues through November with the harvesting of such late varieties as the Golden Delicious and the Granny Smith.

Controlled-storage apples are available year-round.

About 20 apples are commercially important in the United States. But chances are, when you go to your local store to buy apples, you will find Red Delicious, Golden Delicious, McIntosh or Granny Smith. These varieties are resistant to disease and insects, store well and don't bruise easily when shipped.

There are more than 15,000 commercial apple growers in the United States.

The 1987 harvest produced over 250 million bushels of apples. (It is estimated that one bushel contains 74 to 250 apples.) The 1988 harvest is expected to produce over 190 million bushels, which is close to the past five-year average.

Raw apples are eaten out of hand or in fruit salads. Apples may be stewed and pureed for applesauce, baked whole, or used as an ingredient in baked desserts. Apples may also be pressed for juice which, in turn, may be fermented into cider or distilled into brandy.

About 45 percent of the country's apple crop is processed into applesauce, juice, slices for pies, apple butter, dried apples, baby food, jam and jellies — even apple candy and chips.

- Among apple's good points:
 - There are only 81 calories per medium-sized apple.
 - Apples contain no cholesterol.
 - An apple's mild fibrous texture acts as nature's toothbrush.

When you bring apples home from the store, they can go into the fruit bowl on the kitchen table. However, chill them as soon as possible, if you don't plan to eat the apples right away. The longer apples sit at room temperature, the shorter their storage life. Cold temperatures slow down the ripening of apples.

The International Apple Institute identifies the following as today's 14 most popular apple varieties:

Cortland: This aromatic apple is a cross between a McIntosh and a Ben Davis. It was introduced at the turn of the century at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y. The Cortland's white flesh makes it great for salads and fruit cups, and it's good for cooking, too.

Crispin-Mutsu: Called Crispin or Mutsu, depending on which region of America you buy it in, this variety is a cross between a Golden Delicious and a Japanese variety, Indo. This apple was first introduced in Kuroishi, Aomori Prefecture, Japan, in 1930. It has coarser flesh than the

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

This bar cookie recipe wins on two counts. It's one of the easiest cookies to make I've ever found — there's almost no measuring — and the combination of chocolate, caramel and nuts tastes super.

CARAMEL RIBBON BARS

- One 2-layer-size package yellow cake mix
 - 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
 - One 5-ounce can evaporated milk (2/3 cup)
 - 1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
 - 1/2 cup semisweet chocolate pieces (optional)
 - 1/2 cup caramel topping
- In a mixing bowl combine dry cake mix and walnuts. Stir in evaporated milk and melted margarine. Spread about half of the cake

Golden Delicious but has a stronger tree, larger fruit and better keeping ability (not shriveling in storage). Fried Crispin apples are a sweet, crisp addition to a down-home Southern breakfast.

Empire: Offspring of the Red Delicious and McIntosh, the Empire enjoyed its debut in Geneva, N.Y., in 1966. It boasts a sweet-tart taste, a wonderful, crisp texture, and excellent keeping qualities. Serve Empire apple slices with cheese slices.

Golden Delicious: Born and bred in Clay County, W.Va., in 1890, the Golden Delicious is believed to be a chance seedling cross between a Golden Reinette (English) and a Grimes Golden (also West Virginian). A good choice for applesauce.

Granny Smith: Granny Smiths were originally found on Marie Ann "Granny" Smith's farm in Sydney, Australia. These apples, which take 190 days to mature, keep up to seven months in common refrigeration. Granny Smiths are popular for snacks and salads, or they can be used for baking whole, in pies and for freezing.

Idared: Child of the Jonathan and Wagener, this firm, very red variety was discovered in Moscow, Idaho, around 1935. The Idared has excellent keeping abilities. Its fresh tart flavor mellows in storage and takes on an almost winelike taste. This apple can be used for apple pies.

Jonathan: Fragrant and flavorful, this variety comes from Philip Rick's farm in Woodstock, N.Y., circa 1800. First known as the Rick apple, after its discoverer, it was later renamed Jonathan after Jonathan Hasbrouk, who brought the variety into the horticultural limelight in 1826. The Jonathan is great for fresh eating and is also a good cooker.

McIntosh: Discovered by John McIntosh, a farmer of Scottish descent in Dundas County, Ontario, in the early 1800s, it is thought to be a chance seedling of a Fameuse ("snow" apple). Parent of the Cortland, Empire and a bushel of other varieties, the McIntosh has been described as the "perfect snacking apple." It is also good in salads.

Newtown Pippin: The Newtown Pippin dates back to the 1750s to an estate in Newtown, Long Island. History books claim both Thomas Jefferson and George Washington planted this variety. You can bake the Newtown Pippin whole or in a pie. However, some say it has a flavor similar to a pineapple and is worthwhile eating raw.

Red Delicious: Hails from a tree growing in Peru, Iowa, in 1870. It was first named "Hawkeye." In 1895, the Stark Brothers of Missouri bought the propagation rights and named the apple "delicious" due to its distinct flavor. The Red Delicious can be used in fruits cups and salads, or eating out of hand.

Rome: Born in Rome Township, Ohio, in 1816, the Rome is recommended for baked apples and apple pies.

Stayman: The Stayman is a Winesap crossed with an unknown parent. It dates back to Leavenworth, Kan., in 1866. The Stayman is a good, all-purpose apple that is popular for snacks.

Winesap: New Jersey can claim the first cultivation of the Winesap just before 1800. Considered an all-purpose apple, the Winesap is aptly named for its winelike aroma and aftertaste.

York: Lopsided but beloved for its firm flesh that holds its own in cooking, the York was first discovered near York, Pa., in the early 1800s. The York can be used for cooking or eating.

Autumn is the perfect time to try some new apple recipes:

RED CABBAGE WITH APPLES

Apples and cabbage are a traditional pairing of flavors, sparked by a sweet-and-sour mixture of cider vinegar and brown sugar. Serve this dish with bratwurst or with any pork or beef dish.

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 onion, coarsely chopped
- 1/4 cup cider vinegar

2 tablespoons brown sugar or honey

Salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste

1 green apple, cored and thinly sliced

1 small red cabbage, coarsely shredded

Heat oil in a large frying pan. Add onion and saute until softened (5 minutes). Add vinegar, sugar, salt and pepper to taste. Stir to mix.

Add apple and cabbage. Bring liquid to a boil, reduce heat to medium, cover and cook until cabbage wilts (about 10 minutes). Stir occasionally to coat cabbage with vinegar-sugar mixture.

DEVILISH HOT PEPPER CHICKEN

| 8 broiler-fryer chicken thighs, skinned | 1/4 cup bottled hot pepper sauce |
| 1/8 tsp. cayenne pepper | 1 cup canned chicken broth |
| 1/2 cup olive oil | 1 cup white wine |
| 1 cup chopped onion | 3 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce |
| 1/2 cup chopped green pepper | 2 cups fresh tomatoes, peeled and chopped |
| 2 cloves garlic, minced | 2 cups uncooked long grain white rice |

Sprinkle cayenne pepper on chicken. In large frypan, place olive oil and heat to medium temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, about 10 minutes or until brown on all sides. Remove from pan and set aside. To frypan, add onion, green pepper and garlic; saute about 5 minutes or until onion is transparent. Return chicken to frypan. Pour hot pepper sauce evenly over chicken to coat. Add chicken broth, wine and Worcestershire sauce; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 35 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Add tomatoes and cook an additional 10 minutes. Remove chicken to serving dish and keep warm. Add rice to frypan; simmer, uncovered, about 20 minutes, or until all liquid is absorbed. Place rice around chicken. Makes 4 servings.

Combine all ingredients and blend well. Pour into uncooked pie shells. Bake in 425 degree F. oven for 15 minutes, reduce heat to 350 degrees F. and bake an additional 45 minutes. The Only Thing Truly Jumbo About Shrimp Is The Price

By Patrick Ercolano
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

As a restaurant critic, I am often asked why shrimp cocktail is so expensive. Ah yes, those old Shrimp Cocktail Blues. I have wailed them myself from time to time. You know how the song goes. You pop open the menu and peruse the appetizer section. Then you go bug-eyed and moan over the price, between $6 and $10, for what you are sure will be four, maybe five shrimp in a glass dish with red cocktail sauce and a pitiful little piece of romaine lettuce on the side. It is to weep, shrimp lovers. Heaven knows there are plenty of you out there, weeping. The National Marine Fisheries Service of the U.S. Department of Commerce says that the consumption of seafood and shellfish, including shrimp, is up about 20 percent since 1982. Americans annually eat a total of some 500 million pounds of shrimp (about two pounds per person). Shrimp dishes reportedly are listed on half of the restaurant menus in the United States.

So, we love to eat shrimp cocktails, even more than we love to complain about the price of shrimp cocktails. But how, we wonder, can a measly handful of shrimp cost so much? How, we whine, can restaurants get away with this seaway robbery? People in the restaurant business answer — hang on to your lobster bibs — that they are not overpricing their shrimp cocktails at all. They say that they are sacrificing their usual per-dish profit by keeping the price of the cocktails as low as they are. You read right: as low as they are. "Restaurants offer shrimp cocktails because they know the customers love them, but I don't think restaurants make a lot of money on the product," says Billy Martin, the president of Martin Seafood Company, a Maryland seafood wholesaler. Patrick Dobbs, the sous chef at the Rudy's 2900 restaurant in Finksburg, Md., says, "We don't even sell a shrimp cocktail here because of the cost of the shrimp to us. We wouldn't make enough of a profit on it if we sold it at a price that the customer would accept. We're in the business of making money, after all, and we've decided that selling shrimp cocktails is not the best way for us to make money." Now before all you shrimp freaks start printing up picket signs, let the restaurant people state their case. "Let's suppose you're a restaurant owner," Martin says. "You buy a pound of the larger shrimp, the kind used in shrimp cocktails, at today's wholesale price: $11.25 per pound. That includes 11 shrimp, so the cost is about $1.20 per shrimp. Now you put five of those shrimp in the cocktail. You've already paid out $6." Nancy Longo, an instructor at Baltimore's Culinary Arts Institute and the author of a seafood cookbook, picks up the argument. "There's also the cost of the romaine lettuce and the cocktail sauce," she says. "Then you put in the cost of overhead. There's the kitchen staff that de-veins the shrimp, steams it, peels it, ices it and puts it in the refrigerator. There are waiters. See, it all adds up. "And what about the cost of cleaning the dish that the shrimp came in? You have to pay for soap and dishwashers and...." And so on. But now here is the kicker. In setting the price of a dish for the customer, most restaurants charge about three times the cost to themselves. As Dobbs would say, this is known as being "in the business of making money." Therefore, if the shrimp cocktail in the above scenario costs at least $6 to prepare, the menu price ordinarily would be at least $18. It probably would be more because of the additional overhead costs. Why, then, do the restaurant people keep the price much lower than that? Why do they charge a price that will bring them only a small profit? Because they're so altruistic? Not likely. Fact is, shrimp cocktail is extremely popular. Few restaurants, then, dare not offer it. But no customer, despite his shrimp passion, is going to pay $20 for a cocktail, so it is sold at a relatively meager mark-up.

cooked over a flame and is served with saffron rice or as a sandwich in pita bread.

Hommos is made by soaking garbanzo beans for about eight hours in water, then the beans are boiled until tender. After they're strained, the beans are pureed into a creamy sauce made of tahini, lemon juice, salt and fresh garlic. They're served with pita bread and a little olive oil, if desired.

Hamze has been in the United States about 27 years, receiving his citizenship in 1972. "I came to work as a mining engineer with Texasgulf about two and a half years ago, but they were laying off" at that time.

Hamze, who's 52, said his age and his training were not in high demand with other companies, so "I created my own employment."

"I like Greenville because it's in North Carolina and the size is just ideal for a little family. The university is here, it's close to a big town and the warm climate."

Hamze and his wife, Ann of Indiana, have two girls and a boy. The oldest daughter attends the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics, while Noura, for whom the restaurant is named, attends Third Street School. His son is a student at Greenville Middle School where Ann also is a teacher.

Halloween

Cayle points out that "contrary to longstanding beliefs that sugar-sweetened chewing gum damages the teeth, a new study at the University of Iowa College of Dentistry concludes that sugared gum, if chewed long enough (about 20 minutes), has the same effect as sugarless gum in neutralizing the bacteria-created acids that cause tooth decay."

When it comes to dental health, prevention is the name of the game, on Halloween and all through the year. Dr. Cayle suggests the following steps to keep the cavity monster away:

- Regular visits to the dentist, beginning when the first tooth appears. Your child's dentist will be able to discuss fluoride and sealant application needs, provide professional cleaning, and teach your child proper brushing and flossing techniques in later years.

- Brush and floss twice daily and rinse the mouth with water after meals or snacks when away from home.

- Eat well-balanced meals including plenty of calcium-containing foods and lots of fruits and vegetables. Desserts and snacks are fine in moderation.

- And, on Halloween night, the best advice for ghosts and goblins is to enjoy the candy then brush and floss well. During the week following Halloween, rather than allowing the children to nibble constantly at the remaining goodies, parents can set a specific time for eating Halloween leftovers, such as after dinner, followed, of course, by a workout with the trusty toothbrush.

mixture in a greased 13- by 9- by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 10 minutes. Remove from oven. If desired, sprinkle chocolate pieces over hot crust. Drizzle with caramel topping. Drop remaining cake mixture by teaspoons over all. Bake 20 to 25 minutes more. Cool on wire rack. While still warm, loosen sides and cut into bars. Makes 36 bars.
