Baker Resigning As ECU Football Coach He'll Finish Out His Contract

By Woody Peele
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Art Baker, head football coach at East Carolina University for the past four years, announced his resignation at his weekly press conference today.

Baker's resignation will take effect at the end of the current season, which has two games left to play.

Athletic Director Dave Hart said that a search for a new coach would begin immediately and that he hoped to have a new coach named before Christmas.

"My contract ends in January of 1989 and in my conversations (with administrators), I have received no assurances that my contract will be renewed," Baker said. "Therefore (Athletic Director Dave Hart and I) have mutually agreed the time has come to clear the air. With this in mind, I am resigning as head coach today to be effective at the conclusion of my contract. My coaching duties will end with the last snap of the Cincinnati game."

Hart said that Baker will take over duties in a new post at East Carolina, that of director of personal development. The new project is designed to see to it that ECU student-athletes not only graduate, but enter the world as well-rounded people.

"Art has proven a fine ambassador for our athletic program and university," Hart said. "He has assisted our efforts to project a positive image as the university's most visible department."

"I applaud what Art has done to enhance our total program."

Baker said there were three reasons for his resignation: so that his assistants will have the time and opportunity to pursue other employment; to lift the cloud of rumors that have followed the program most of the season, and to allow ECU the chance to begin its search for a new coach.

"Football is a great profession to me and there may be somebody out there who may think I can do a job for them," Baker said. He indicated that his decision to take charge of the new program is not totally final, should other opportunities arise. "I'm excited about it because I like to work with young people, but that's not to say that something else might not come up."

Baker choked up once during his presentation, when he thanked his wife, Edie, and his family, his staff and players, and the fans of the football program.

"I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to all of them," he said.

Baker, whose Pirates have a 1-8 record this year, is 10-32 in his four years with the Pirates. He did not have a winning season with the Pirates. His best season was last year when East Carolina went 5-6, losing a chance for a winning season in the final game of the year.

Baker came to East Carolina after serving one year on the Florida State coaching staff, where he had been assistant head coach under Bobby Bowden. Bowden had hired Baker away from ECU, where he was associate head coach under Ed Emory during the only winning season the Pirates have enjoyed in the last nine years. The 1983 team went 8-3, losing only to Florida, Florida State and Miami, all ranked teams, in close games. The Pirates dropped what would have been the winning score in the Miami game and the Hurricanes went on to win the national title that year.

Prior to joining Emory's staff, Baker served for five years as the head coach at The Citadel in Charleston, S.C. There, he posted a 30-24-1 record with three winning seasons. Before that, he served as the head coach at Furman for five years, where he was 27-24-4 with two winning seasons and one break-even year. Baker was selected as co-coach of the year in the Southern Conference in his first season at Furman in 1973.

Baker's overall record is now 67-80-5.

A 1953 graduate of Presbyterian College, Baker began his coaching career in the high school ranks in South Carolina. In 10 years of play, he posted a 62-37-8 record.

In 1965, Baker went to Clemson as an assistant coach, moving on to Texas Tech in 1970. He remained there until taking the head coaching position at Furman.

When Baker took over from Emory prior to the 1985 season, he promised to bring a class program to East Carolina, but found victories against one of the nation's toughest schedules hard to come by. In each of his first two years, the Pirates went 2-9 before rising to 5-6 last season.

This year, the final year of his

Arab Firebomb Kills Poles Closing Lenin Shipyard

JERICHO, Occupied West Bank — Israeli leaders today vowed to avenge the deaths of a Jewish woman and her three sons in the firebombing of a bus. The army said the Palestinian attackers were in custody, and there were reports two had confessed.

The attack in this West Bank town came 35 hours before Israel's parliamentary elections. It could drive undecided voters to the Likud bloc of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who has advocated a hard line in dealing with violence.

In newspaper interviews published today, Shamir and his rival, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, promised revenge for Sunday's attack.

Industry Minister Ariel Sharon, at an election rally in southern Israel, accused Israeli liberals of creating an atmosphere for such attacks, by saying: "All talk of withdrawal or pullbacks brings more and more firebomb attacks," newspapers reported.

Shamir was quoted as telling the Hadashot daily: "This despicable act in Jericho deserves an appropriate response that will prove to the murderers they will be punished to the full extent of the law."

Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron told Israel radio that soldiers apprehended the assailants. "They will be punished severely," Shomron said, without saying how many had been arrested.

The radio listed the number of Arab suspects as seven, said they were detained while playing cards, and that two admitted to the attack.

A total of 305 Palestinians and 10 Israelis have been killed in the uprising, which began Dec. 8.

WARSAW, Poland — The Lenin Shipyard, a hotbed of labor activism where strikes eight years ago gave rise to the Solidarity trade union movement, will be closed Dec. 1 because it is losing money, the government said today.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, an electrician at the shipyard, said workers were ready to take over the business and run it profitably. The shipyard was closed today because of a holiday and is to reopen Wednesday.

Walesa called the decision a "personal provocation of Prime Minister Rakowski against the birthplace of Solidarity."

The Gdansk shipyard is the first big industrial enterprise to be singled out for closure by the government of Prime Minister Mieczyslaw F.

Rakowski, who has promised to act aggressively in restructuring Polish industry.

Rakowski was a firm supporter of the Dec. 13, 1981, martial law crackdown that crushed Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's first free trade union. He was named prime minister Sept. 27 to replace Zbigniew Messner, who was criticized as ineffectual in reforming Poland's inefficient and debt-ridden economy.

The government's move comes as it bickers with Solidarity over proposed talks on social and economic reforms, including legalization of Solidarity.

After Walesa persuaded workers in August to end a wave of nationwide strikes, authorities said they would sit down with the opposition to discuss grievances. But officials ob-

Hostage Says U.S. Impeding His Release

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem kidnappers today released a videotape of American journalist Terry Anderson, who read a message accusing the U.S. government of preventing his release.

Copies of the tape were delivered to two Western news agencies in Beirut four days after Anderson, 41, spent a fourth birthday in captivity. They were accompanied by a statement in Arabic from Islamic Jihad, which holds Anderson.

Anderson began his message, which lasted two minutes and 35 seconds, by identifying himself and saying the date was Oct. 30.

"Once again I have been given the chance to speak to my government, my family and my people," said the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

"I love you, I miss you very much. I know of your continued strong efforts for me," he told friends and family.

"I have been very close to being released several times over the past three years, but each time it seems that the U.S. government uses its influence to stop any agreement and I don't understand this.

"I am not asking (President) Reagan to deal with terrorists, although Mr. (George) Bush did so in the Iran-Contra affair and TWA hijacking," he did not elaborate.

Bush, the Republican candidate for president, has not previously been named as a negotiator in the 1985 jet hijacking, in which Shiite Moslems demanding freedom for Shiite prisoners held 39 Americans for 17 days. Israel released 766 prisoners.

The vice president has said he was not a key player in the sale of arms to Iran and was unaware of details and planning of it. The deal became known as the Iran-Contra affair when it was revealed that money for the arms was funneled to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Experts Say '88 Was 'Good' For Tobacco

By Dennis Patterson
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The quality of this year's tobacco was better, prices were higher and only a small percentage went under loan, and those — combined with tobacco reforms — make the short-term future for the crop look good, experts said.

"My assessment, if you look at the tobacco situation over next five years, is very positive," said Mitch Smith of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service. "At least for the immediate future, most people seem very optimistic."

But Smith said he was cautious about what the long term holds for North Carolina's top commodity.

"Tobacco has always been controversial," Smith said. "And we already recognize that we are essentially producing for the export market. There are a lot of factors that could affect that."

Nonetheless, the 1988 crop will be remembered because it was good tobacco that brought good prices, agriculture experts said.

"I think we did come up with one of the vintage crops of tobacco across the state as a whole," Carlton Blalock of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina said in a recent interview. "The Eastern Belt, in particular, had a good crop, as did the Old Belt, except for some late crops that got hit by frost. Overall, though, this is one of the better crops we have grown in this state in many years."

The quality of the crop, Blalock said, was reflected in the prices, which were generally higher than 1987, and in the small amount of leaf taken under the government support program.

"In my opinion, it's been a successful season when you look at the amount of tobacco moving into the channels of trade," said Reggie Lester of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee. "Very little of the crop has gone into the flue-cured cooperative — less than 2 percent for the year across all the belts. That means 98 percent of the crop moved into the channels of trade."

With a quota increase this year, growers are selling "7, 8, maybe 9 percent more than they did last year," Blalock said.

The tobacco sales, combined with record-high soybean prices caused by drought in the Midwest should mean a profitable year for growers, he said.

"It will be one of the better years for our farmers in a long time," he said. "And that means a better year for a lot of other businesses. Farming has a big economic impact in this state."

Motorist Identified

Joe Calder, director of public safety at East Carolina University today identified the "passing motorist" who alerted residents of a fire in their Cotanche Street apartment house early Saturday morning. ECU Officers Joe Pollock and Barnes Watson roused the occupants, Calder said.

A story about the fire at 810 Cotanche St. was published in Sunday's edition of The Daily Reflector. Greenville Fire-Rescue Department Battalion Chief Tony Smart was quoted as saying, "A passing motorist saw the fire, stopped ... and started knocking on doors to alert the occupants."

Smart, who said the motorist "didn't stay at the scene after the residents were moving," said "we would have had a lot of deaths if the person had not come along and opened things up."

Calder said this morning that Pollock and Watson began knocking on doors and were later assisted by Greenville policeman J.A. Felton.

Thefts Reported

Investigators said seven thefts, including a 1980 model car, two video-cassette recorders and two bicycles, were reported Sunday to Greenville police.

Officer M.J. Nobles said the car, a Chevrolet Citation, was taken from 300 N. Oak St. in an incident reported at 1:08 p.m., and a video-cassette recorder was taken from 2105 E. Fourth St. in a break-in reported at 9:44 a.m., while Officer R.L. Smith said a video-cassette recorder and compact-disk player were taken from 709T Johnston St. in a break-in reported at 1:26 a.m. A license plate — "I LUV GOLD" — was taken from a car parked at 203 N. Elm St. in an incident reported at 5:53 p.m.

Officer T.A. Lee said a purse containing $40 was taken from a car parked at the intersection of 10th and Lawrence streets in an incident reported at 9:13 a.m., while Officer K.L. Jones said two bicycles were taken from 1904A E. Fourth St. in incidents reported at 12:39 p.m.

Meeting Date Changed

The Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority will meet Nov. 15 at 7 p.m. in the Pitt County Office Building instead of Nov. 10.

Winners Announced

John N. Hall was overall winner in the Greenville Utilities' "Energy Awareness Month" poster contest. He was also named first-place winner in the fifth and sixth grade category.

His entry, a design of a United States flag in the shape of the continental U.S., featured the words "Energy Makes America Work," which was the theme of National Energy Awareness Month.

Sue Bizzaro of Greenville Utilities said the community will soon be able to see the winning design displayed on a public service billboard.

The contest was open to all children in kindergarten through the sixth grade. Winners received prizes and ribbons; each participant received a certificate.

Beth Howell finished second in the fifth and sixth grade category; Colleen Tozer placed third. In the third and fourth grade category, Jessica Biel finished first, Christopher Brock second, and Shawn Skinner third. Aimee Rigsby won first place in the kindergarten through second grade category. Aaron Simon finished second, and Jessica Campbell was third.

VA Van To Visit

Tear Gas Released

Greenville police said several people, including civilians, military and police personnel, were affected when a tear gas canister was detonated in the downtown area early Sunday morning.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said an East Carolina university student, Cameron Case Maxwell, 20, of Kinston, was arrested on a charge of malicious injury by an explosive device in connection with the 1:18 a.m. incident.

Lt. C.B. Landreth said several hundred people along Cotanche Street, between the Fifth and Fourth Street intersections, were affected when the gas canister was detonated. Several people were treated at the scene by Greenville Fire-Rescue Department personnel, he said.

Landreth said Maxwell was chased and apprehended by civilian and military Air Force and Marine Corps police.

City Gets $891,052 In Powell Bill Funds

Greenville has received $891,052 from the N.C. Department of Transportation for 1988-89 State Street Aid Allocations (Powell Bill funds), said City Finance Director Bernita Demery.

This year's amount was up $45,877 from last year, Ms. Demery said. She said the increase could be attributed to the additional streets taken in during annexations.

Powell Bill allocations are used to pay for maintenance and improvement projects on streets which are inside municipalities and not a part of the state's highway system.

"Approximately 45 percent of those funds received by the city will be spent this fiscal year on street repairs and cleaning," Ms. Demery said.

She said the rest will be used for projects including the payment of street-improvement bonds, the Hooker Road Bridge, traffic signal installations, gas and oil for city vehicles and street resurfacing.

Greenville's allocation was part of more than $66.7 million which was sent this year to 473 municipalities throughout the state.

Other Pitt County municipalities receiving State Street Aid Allocations were Ayden with $117,419; Farmville, $110,472; Winterville, $57,933; Bethel, $47,061; Grimesland, $11,941; Fountain, $11,685; Simpson, $9,730; and Falkland, $2,337.

Powell Bill allocations come from funds derived by one 1.75 cents of the state's 15 and 95 100 cents per gallon gas tax and are distributed under a formula determined by the General Assembly.

Seventy-five percent of the funds are allocated on the basis of population, while the number of non-state system street miles in each town or city is used to calculate the remaining 25 percent.

This year's allocations statewide are $2.9 million more than the $63.8 million allocated last year.

Charlotte received the largest amount in the state with $8.1 million. Other cities receiving major Powell Bill allocations were Greensboro, $2.9 million; Raleigh, $2.8 million; Winston-Salem, $2.4 million; Durham, $1.7 million; Asheville, $1.3 million; Fayetteville, $1.1 million; and High Point, $1.1 million.

Ancient Celts Had Roots Of Halloween

By George A. Threewitts
ECU NEWS BUREAU

Want to glimpse the future? Oct. 31 may be the best day for such visions if you accept the beliefs of the ancient Celtic people who lived in Britain, Wales, Ireland and Scotland hundreds of years ago, says an East Carolina University professor.

It was the Celts, you see, who brought us the old and honored tradition of Halloween. But the Celts didn't call it Halloween. To them it was Samhain. It was a time to celebrate the ending of the harvest season and the beginning of a new year.

The Celts believed it was also a time when spirit ancestors could return to the physical world to "to see how things are going," says Dr. Charles W. Sullivan, an ECU English professor who specializes in folklore and the myths of the Celts.

"There was a little bit of a break between the old year and when the new year would begin," Sullivan says. "They believed that the boundaries between our world and the other world broke down and the spirits of their ancestors could come into their houses. To make sure the spirits felt at home the people left food out for them so they wouldn't play tricks and raise any kind of a ruckus," Sullivan said.

It was a time, too, when the spirits might provide the living with visions of things to come. Young women would sit on the church steps in hopes of seeing visions of the men they would marry. By going to a graveyard one might see the faces of those who might be next to die.

There were also big celebrations with food and drink, games and costumes. Children roamed the streets, just as they do today, asking for treats and promising mischief if none were given.

There were huge bonfires which Sullivan said may be derived from the words "bone fires." He said the older celebration, if traced back far enough, probably involved sacrifices. It was considered a way of making amends and restoring balance.

One tradition that has become a part of Halloween began with the carving of turnips and other vegetables to make lanterns, some with faces. "Jack of the lantern" was an early folklore character, an unfortunate soul who lost his head and periodically returns to look for it. Sullivan said the Halloween celebration adopted this folklore character. The carving of the jack o' lantern from a pumpkin is an American tradition.

While these early celebrations were pagan in belief they had nothing to do with the so-called "Witches' Sabbath" or "the devil's holiday." These are names that arose after Christianity moved into western Europe around 800 A.D.

"When the Christians came up in to Western Europe they tried to take over the festivals they found there. Rather than try to stamp out a popular festival it was much easier to convert it," Sullivan says.

The church accepted the tradition of Samhain festival but reorganized it so it would tie in with "All Saints Day" on Nov. 1, to recognize the saints, and "All Souls Day" on Nov. 2, to honor the rest of those who had departed life on Earth. They also changed the name for the festival on Oct. 31 to "All Hallows (All Holy) Eve."

Sullivan said the church made a similar concession with the celebration of Christmas. Before moving in to northern and western Europe the Christian Church celebrated the birthday of Christ in January but then combined their Christ Day celebration with an ancient solstice festival being observed on Dec. 25.

Unlike Christmas, which was quickly absorbed by the culture, the tradition for All Saints Day and All Souls Day are almost forgotten. But the "Hallows Eve" or Halloween festival continues with many of the same traditions and practices that were observed in the early Celtic festival, always on Oct. 31.

The devil was not a part of the original Halloween nor were witches a part of the Celtic tradition either, according to Sullivan. In fact the name "witches" was given by the church to women who served as healers in rural societies. Sullivan said the priests may have believed that these women, somehow, detracted from the power of the church and its teachings.

He said that in all of his research on Celtic folklore and mythology he has seen no "evil" in the original Halloween traditions.

"I think one of the nice things in recent years is that people have become more aware of the deep background of Halloween and the fact that it has come down to us from an old, Celtic, pre-Christian celebration," he said.

But while many of the old traditions continue today there are some exceptions. "Halloween is now a day for businesses that sell candy and costumes, a day for children to have some fun, and a day for Linus to look, once again, for the Great Pumpkin," he said.

Sears Will Sell Tallest Building

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Sears, Roebuck and Co. today announced plans to sell Sears Tower, its corporate headquarters and the world's tallest building, as part of an effort to streamline the company.

Sears' restructuring plan also will include a stock buyback, "intense cost-cutting" programs and the sale of its commercial real estate subsidiary, the nation's largest retailer said.

"We are acutely aware of investors' desires for improved returns and enhanced share value," Edward Brennan, chairman and chief executive officer, said in a statement. "And over the past year, we have thoroughly evaluated all strategic and financial alternatives available to the company."

"These alternatives have been reviewed not only with regard to shorter-term valuation objectives, but also giving consideration to the longer-term needs of our customers and $526,000 employees, the financial strength of our company and fulfillment of Sears' long-term strategic potential," Brennan said.

The Sears Tower, which rises 110 stories — 1,450 feet — from the grid of the downtown Loop business district, was built in 1974.

The statement did not indicate how much Sears hoped to get for the landmark building.

Brennan said it would continue to serve as corporate headquarters for the company, although the 8,000-employee Sears Merchandise Group would be moved to smaller, less costly facilities over the next several years.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Changes

Legislators Have Proven Leadership

Pitt County's state legislators have a record of effective leadership, and voters should send the incumbents back to Raleigh based on proven performance.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, has served four years in the N.C. Senate with a strong record of support for education, environment and agriculture. He deserves the votes of constituents in the 9th Senate District. Taft voted for the state's Basic Education program and for the 1987 School Facilities Act, which will net Pitt County $40 million. In addition, he was instrumental in securing $2.3 million in 1987 to link East Carolina University to the N.C. Microelectronics Center — a hookup that will help ECU further its research status.

Taft's environmental record is strong. He is vice chair of the Senate Environment Committee and in 1987 sponsored legislation to clean up abandoned hazardous waste dumps and protect ground-water supplies. He also led the fight for $70,000 to continue research on the red sore fish disease in the Pamlico River.

In addition, Taft took an immediate and unwavering stand against siting a hazardous/low level nuclear waste dump in Edgecombe County adjacent to the Pitt County line. His involvement helped defeat the proposal.

Taft chairs the State Personnel Committee and in 1987 successfully sponsored a bill reforming North Carolina's worker compensation laws. Before this legislation, the state was ranked as one of the two poorest in the nation for caring for its employees.

The senator is a Greenville attorney and has earned a reputation from his fellow lawmakers for doing his homework. In this campaign, he has been forced to answer charges of conflict of interest between his personal and public activities. Taft has done so effectively but should strive to avoid any appearance of impropriety in the future.

Voters should also return Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. to their seats in the 9th House District, and Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt and Rep. Eugene Rogers to their positions in the 6th Senate District and 6th House District, respectively.

Warren, a Democrat with eight years experience in the N.C. House, is Pitt's senior lawmaker and holds significant leadership positions because of this tenure, especially in the area of education. He chairs the Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education, which oversees the spending of 65 percent of the state budget on programs for schools and colleges. Warren was instrumental in securing planning money for East Carolina University's proposed regional activity center. He successfully sponsored a bill in 1988 that separates the state superintendent of public instruction and the state controller's office, an administrative conflict which thwarted smooth education progress.

The incumbent is also vice chair of the Appropriations Expansion Budget and Election Laws committees and sits on the Agriculture, Higher Education and Public Utilities committees.

Jones, in his six years in the N.C. House, has pioneered ethics-related legislation in the General Assembly. He successfully sponsored a bill in 1988 to limit campaign spending in North Carolina, a sound measure that addresses the escalating cost of running for office in the state. Jones also authored a bill making it a crime to coerce state employees into supporting political candidates and legislation requiring Political Action Committees to label themselves accurately, not euphemistically.

Jones' proposals have gained broad bi-partisan support in the General Assembly. They draw clear legal lines and set resolute standards for propriety.

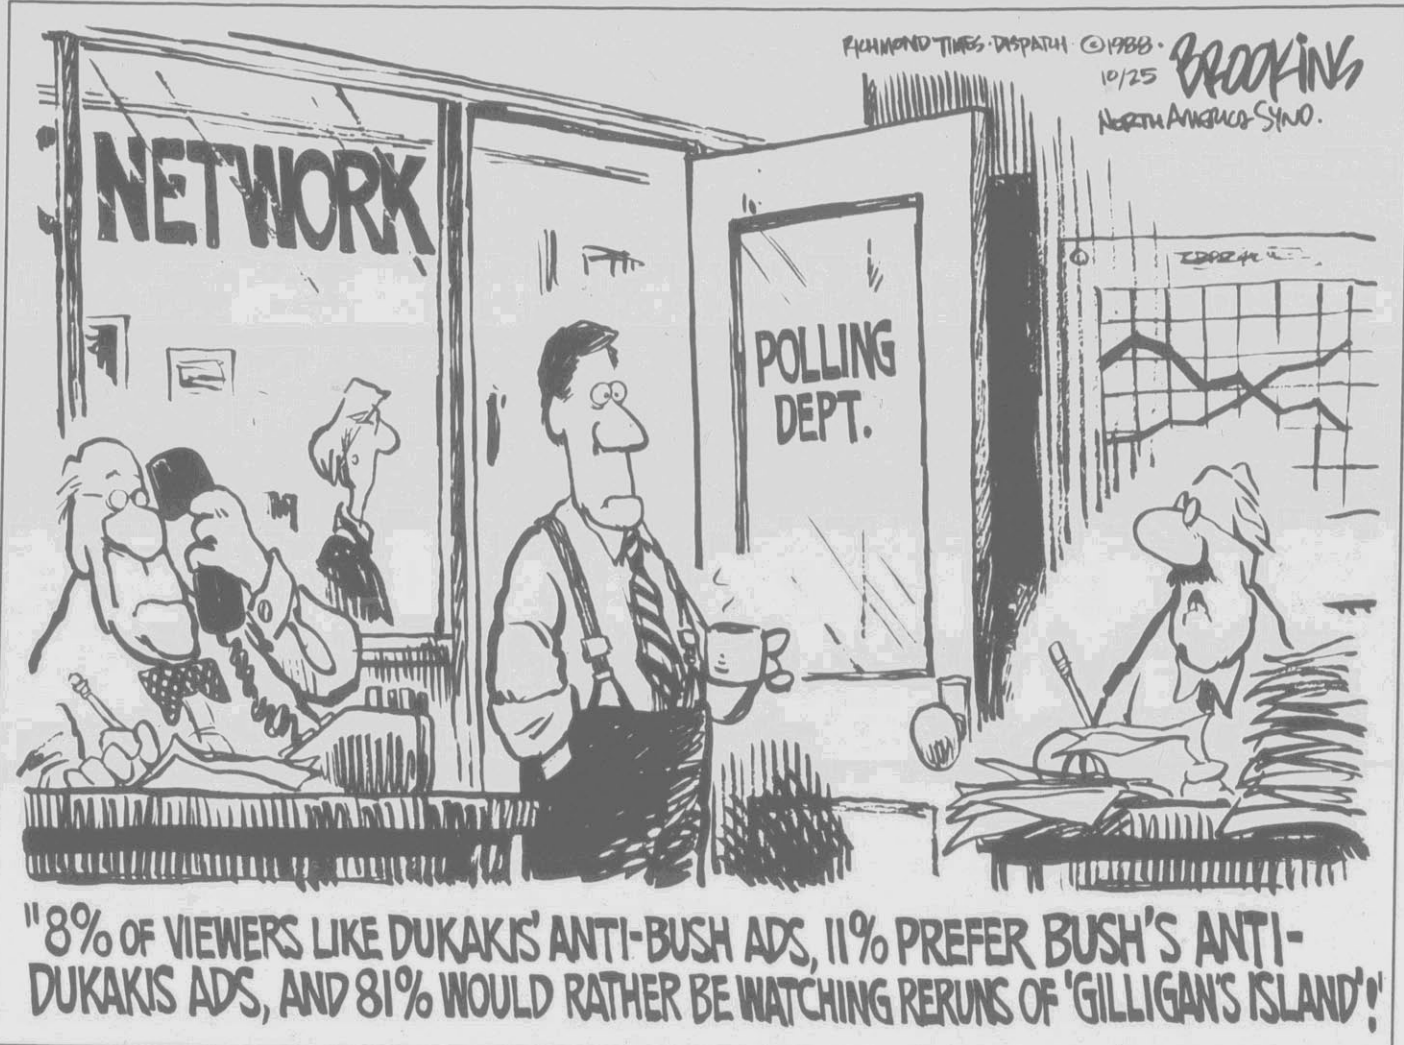

Jones is known by his fellow lawmakers as a quiet, firm worker whose popularity extends part lines. He chairs the Committee on Commissions and Schools for the Blind and Deaf and is vice chair of the Human Resources and Children and Youth committees. He is a member of the Education, Finance, Governmental Ethics and Economic Growth committees.

Sen. Martin, unopposed, should receive a vote of confidence from his 6th Senate District based on his record. Rep. Rogers also deserves the support of his constituents in the 6th House District.

These incumbents have provided responsive leadership for the county during their tenures. The teamwork that has developed between these lawmakers is essential in keeping Pitt's interests visible in state government. The voters should return them to office Nov. 8 with confidence.

Bush May Be Coatless

George Will

BERLIN, N.J. — Members of Local 1360, United Food and Commercial Workers, have tucked, with feeling, into lunch and now are ready to hear the candidates. He, coatless, as candidates often are to show solidarity with the sons and daughters of toil, tells them, in the fractured syntax of a campaign's final phase, "You are the people about which this country functions." They agree.

What freshman Sen. Frank Lautenberg lacks in fluency he makes up for with something far more formidable: luck. Last spring, Republicans were licking their chops, regarding him as the most vulnerable of the 15 Democratic senators seeking re-election. Then his opponent took the field.

At first glance Pete Dawkins, 50 — football hero, Rhodes scholar, retired general, Wall Streeter — seemed perfect. But campaigns involve many glances and soon Dawkins seemed, in Lautenberg's derisive phrase, sent from central casting: an exercise in make-believe. Dawkins quickly diminished his greatest asset, and in the process magnified Lautenberg's asset.

Lautenberg's asset is his utter identification with New Jersey. He is a self-made millionaire, son of immigrant parents who had to scrimp to buy him a bus ticket to the shore in the summer. Dawkins' asset was his glittering resume. Inexplicably, he gilded the lilly, making the resume an object of ridicule.

Dawkins' advisers may be blameable for a mailing that said he served two tours in Vietnam and was wounded. (He served one, and was not wounded.) But he said, inaccucurately, that he had been a "combat commander." He called himself "one of the formative people" in transforming investment banking. He said he knew of no one as important as he in "one of the definitive reformulations of the industry." That assessment of his brief stint in investment banking was called "laughable" by the man who hired him.

Dawkins did not move to New Jersey until last year. It may not be demonstrable that he shopped around for a state (Michigan, New York) to run in, but his late arrival left him vulnerable to Lautenberg's taunt that he is treating New Jersey as "a political pit stop."

Because Dawkins lived in Manhattan while working on Wall Street, Lautenberg wonders if Dawkins has heard of the Lincoln and Holland tunnels and the George Washington Bridge. When Dawkins said he stayed in the city so his daughter could attend her Manhattan school, Lautenberg called this an aspersion on New Jersey schools.

New Jersey's senior senator, Bill Bradley, is 19 years younger than the junior senator, and is intergalactically famous. Meanwhile, Lautenberg, 64, has elevated provincialism to a principle. His campaign is a reprise of his 1982 "New Jersey First" campaign, which taps the prickly chauvinism of a state weary of being considered just a jumble of toxic waste dumps and bedrooms for New York and Philadelphia.

It was more Lautenberg luck that this put-upon feeling was inflamed last summer when New Jersey beaches were closed because of needs to surf on the Bush wave. (The Dukakis campaign has disintegrated here and Bush is up 20 points.)

But New Jersey voters are accomplished ticket-splitters. On Nov. 8 they will vote for a Republican President for the sixth straight time. But they have not elected a Republican senator for 16 years. In 1984, while Reagan was winning New Jersey by more than 670,000

'On election night, New Jersey's Senate race may reveal the length of Bush's coattails. But he may be coatless ...'

gunk floating ashore. Some of it came compliments of New York, which dumps sewage sludge 100 miles offshore.

In a year of nationwide nastiness, New Jersey's race may be the most unrelievedly negative. Lautenberg has tried to blame Dawkins for environmental damage the Army did to California while Dawkins was stationed there. Dawkins, who says he is going to "stomp" Lautenberg like "a swamp dog," has been even worse. He recently had to withdraw an especially smarmy ad that was a tissue of innuendos about Lautenberg's integrity regarding financial matters.

Dawkins' people say Lautenberg is just five points ahead; Lautenberg's people say it's up to 17. Split the difference. Lautenberg has a double-digit lead, so Dawkins votes, Bradley's winning margin topped 900,000.

Dawkins' aides hope, say and may even believe that 1988 is more like 1980 than 1984. According to this theory, Reagan's 1984 campaign was themeless and hence coattailless. But the 1980 campaign, which pulled in a Republican Senate majority, had a highly specific ideological content: tax cuts and strong defense. However, the 1984 campaign message was "more of the same," and that about exhausts Bush's 1988 message.

On election night, New Jersey's Senate race may reveal the length of Bush's coattails. But he may be coatless, as candidates often are as a sign of solidarity with the sons and daughters of toil.

A Whale Of A Question

WASHINGTON — For three dramatic weeks, the world was able to rise above its divisions of culture, competition, political ideology and even the pursuit of money and join in noble common cause.

The effort paid off. Two California gray whales have been rescued from their arctic prison and are (presumably) on their way to the open sea and freedom.

It was, as President Reagan said, "an inspiring endeavor," involving cooperation from people often at odds with one another: scientists, environmentalists, oil developers, Eskimo whale hunters, American officials, Soviet sailors. And while hundreds of workers participated directly in the tricky — and extremely dangerous — rescue effort, millions of us were involved vicariously, cheering them and wishing them luck.

But I confess that for the whole of the three weeks, I found myself asking a number of rude questions for which I still don't have answers.

The main question is: Why? Why is it that three trapped whales — in a far off place where local residents routinely hunt and kill whales — should evoke such universal sympathy? If they had been bullheads (or whatever species the Eskimos prefer) they would have wound up as dinner, with no tears than accompany the slaughter of innocent chickens at Frank Perdue's Eastern Shore establishment in Maryland.

The Eskimos participated in the rescue only because they don't, except in dire circumstances, eat California grays.

Is it because California grays are an endangered species? Because they were innocent victims of circumstance? Because they are huge? Because they seemed so determined to live? Because they are benign animals of above-average intelligence? Because they are fellow mammals?

Certainly it is difficult to imagine a similar effort on behalf of other animals. Dolphins or porpoises or apes or koalas, yes, but not menhaden or snail darters or timber wolves or warthogs.

Even human tragedy often fails to inspire the sort of international response evoked by the trapped whales. The recent slaughter of some 5,000 Hutu in Burundi inspired nothing like the media coverage, or the public response, sparked by three whales.

Where is the concerted outpouring on behalf of America's homeless families or AIDS victims? Where is the international ideology-be-damned response to the Southeast Asian boat people? How can a few whales inspire us to action while hungry children and members of the desperate inner-city underclass elicit only helpless shrugs?

Maybe a part of the answer is in the particularity of the whales. Millions who remain unmoved by a generalized Save the Whales campaign were genuinely concerned about these specific whales — just as millions who seem indifferent to the Children's Defense Fund's urgings on behalf of poverty-stricken and hungry children were willing to do whatever was necessary to rescue Jessica McClure from that Texas well a year ago.

Another part of it may be the clear-cut nature, no matter how difficult, of what needed to be done for the whales. Hard work and technology saved the whales; charity can save the victims of an African drought. But no similarly simple action can save Africans from the encroachment of the Sahara, or the Hutu from tribal war, or ghetto youth from drug-induced violence and despair.

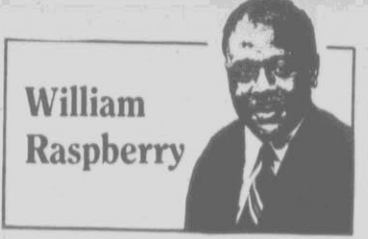

And surely part of it is just plain drama. For the Hutu thousands (and a fair number of Burundi's ruling Tutsis), the outcome is not at issue; they are dead already. But with the whales, as with little Jessica McClure, the outcome was very much in doubt. Will they last until the rescue could be consummated? Will the icebreakers arrive in time? Will the well collapse? Tune in tomorrow.

The point is not that the whale rescue effort was silly, or a waste of resources. I'm as glad as the next one that there were people willing to undertake the effort, and that it succeeded.

The point is whether there are lessons in the arctic rescue that could teach us how to generate concerted action on behalf of the other victims we know about but who seem to hover beyond the reach of our empathy.

Can we learn to respond to the nameless victims of multi-faceted problems as generously as we respond to particular victims of specific tragedies? I don't know the answer, but it's a whale of a question.

Low Voter Turnout Worries Both Parties In N.C.

John
Fletcher

RALEIGH (AP) — Concerned by perceptions of widespread apathy and disgust with the campaign's negative tone, both political parties in North Carolina are redoubling get-out-the-vote efforts.

"I believe there's going to be a significant dropoff from 1984," said Chris Scott, state AFL-CIO president. "I don't believe there's a candidate running for office in this state who's given people a positive reason to go out of their way to vote."

A variety of elected officials and political insiders said in interviews last week they expected turnout to be lower than during the last presidential election year. How much lower was an open question.

Ted Arrington, political science professor at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and chairman of the Mecklenburg County Board of Elections, said talk of a low turnout was "greatly exaggerated."

He said fewer absentee ballots had been requested than in 1984 but that a "tremendous" number of people registered to vote as the deadline approached.

"We had 10,000 the last day in Mecklenburg," Arrington said. "There's a good gubernatorial race and that's exciting some people. I expect turnout to be less than '84 but not strikingly less — maybe dip under 50 percent but not by much."

While leaders of both parties say they want every eligible North Carolinian to vote, it's generally agreed that Republicans have more to lose from low turnout.

The state GOP has been most successful in presidential election years, when its candidates have benefited from coattails of popular presidential nominees.

Also working in the Republicans' favor in these elections has been a group of voters who customarily go to the polls only in presidential years. Most people in this "swing" group are moderate-to-conservative, white Democrats who for the past 20 years have tended to vote Republican.

If enough of these "swing" voters stay home, it could spell trouble for the GOP.

State Republican Chairman Jack Hawke said last week his party was working to keep that from happening. "We're going to find 'em, vote 'em and count 'em," he said.

Last week, the GOP — with help from George Bush's and Gov. Jim Martin's organizations — was winding up its canvassing operation to identify supporters of the Republican ticket. The emphasis will shift this week to contacting those people and getting them to vote.

Telephone banks, mailings, and other methods will be employed in the effort, Hawke said.

The Democratic Party, with its superior numbers and help from groups such as the AFL-CIO and North Carolina Association of Educators, may have the edge in contacting and transporting voters to the polls.

Former Gov. Jim Hunt said last week that 700 to 1,000 phones were being manned and grassroots efforts were being aided by about 70 Dukakis field operatives. "We've never had that many people out there working for the Democratic Party in the precincts before," he said.

Hunt said many Democrats who would be inclined to support Bush don't feel strongly enough about him to vote. "You could see a real change on election day from what these polls are showing," he said.

Merle Black, political science professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said some Republican-leaning Democrats might not bother to vote if last-minute polls suggest the top races are not close. But such poll readings might also convince those who planned to vote Democrat that there's no reason to bother, he said.

"It's really hard to gauge, but I'd say we do have the potential for a significant drop in turnout," he said.

Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, says two groups of voters will be especially crucial in the turnout equation: blacks and the Religious Right. "They're a couple of wild cards," Eudy said.

Jerry Falwell and other New Right leaders registered thousands of arch-conservative voters who helped President Reagan, Sen. Jesse Helms and Martin win in 1984. Most probably support Bush but may be less enthusiastic about him than about Reagan.

Similarly, Jesse Jackson registered thousands of blacks as voters in 1984 and this year. But his failure to capture the presidential nomination and Dukakis' refusal to choose Jackson as his running mate has alienated some blacks, who might sit out the election or cast a protest vote for third-party candidate Lenora Fulani, a left-wing black professor.

'Follow The Money' In Mideast Disputes

Said
Aburish

LONDON — When analyzing Arab political disputes, a good rule of thumb is often "Follow the Money." That rule certainly holds for the recent flap between Jordan's King Hussein and Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The latest episode in the long-running Hussein-Arafat feud began last August, when the king anestimates that nearly $2 billion in Jordanian dinars may have been exchanged into dollars during the past four months. This wave of selling put pressure on the Jordanian currency, causing it to fall sharply on the unofficial exchange market in Amman.

•The PLO moved to curb its own spending in Jordan. This is potentially a sharp blow to the Jordanian economy, since PLO spending (nominally to support Palestinians in the occupied territories) is Hussein met last weekend with Arafat in the Jordanian port city of Aqaba. Though the specific results of the meeting aren't known, it's unlikely that it produced any lasting solution to the economic warfare of recent weeks — or to the underlying political tensions that produced it. Arafat, after all, isn't likely to give up his trump card, namely, his ability to influence Hussein's policies by pressuring the fragile Jordanian economy.

The feud with Arafat isn't Jordan's only economic problem. The country is suffering from a chronic trade deficit, a decline in loans and grants from the Arab gulf countries, and what Jordanian sources say is a $650 million debt owed by Iraq for Jordanian help in facilitating imports during the eight years of the Gulf war.

The dinar's decline was aggravated by the Arab rumor mill, which turned the run on the Jordanian currency into a stampede early this month. Ordinary merchants sought to protect their assets, others canceled import orders and even staunch Hussein loyalists could not withstand the financial damage and opted out of the shaky currency. Some people in Amman are now refusing to sell houses or apartments except for dollars.

Some Jordanians argue privately that this month's devaluation of the dinar may be good in the long run for the Jordanian economy, since it should, in theory, reduce demand for imports and improve the trade balance. But these arguments overlook the fact that Jordan must import virtually all of its basic necessities, making it difficult for Jordan to cut its overall bill for imports.

Jordanian sources in Amman say the first reaction of Hussein and his cabinet was to try to contain the currency problem and solve it internally. These sources say that Hussein originally balked at Prime Minister Zaid Rifai's suggestion to meet with Arafat and try to patch up the feud. Hussein initially sided instead with anti-PLO hardliners. Hussein's cabinet ministers are said to have personally contacted wealthy Jordanians and asked their support in maintaining the dinar's value.

Said Aburish is a Palestinian-born author based in London. His latest book is "Children of Bethany," the story of his family.

nounced that Jordan would no longer maintain its political or administrative role of representing Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank — and that it would no longer pay the salaries of Palestinian bureaucrats there. The king seemed to be saying: Let the PLO have the headache of taking responsibility for the residents of the territories — and let them pay the bills.

The PLO responded with an economic counterpunch, by encouraging a run on the Jordanian currency, the dinar. Jordanian sources say the financial pressure took two forms:

•Individual Palestinians living in the West Bank and in the Gulf countries who had been holding their assets in Jordan decided that — because of Hussein's break with Arafat — Amman might not be the safest place to keep their money. So they rushed to exchange dinars for dollars, and to get those dollars out of Jordan. One Palestinian banker estimated at more than $100 million a year. There are also rumors that Arab Bank, a large bank that handles some of Arafat's money and has never concealed its Palestinian roots or sympathies, may have encouraged some of its clients to convert from dinars to other currencies. This may simply have been prudent financial advice by the bank to its customers to reduce their positions in a weakening currency.

In this politicized atmosphere, Jordan experienced a full-blown currency crisis this month. The gap between the official exchange rate of .375 dinars to the dollar and the black-market rate grew so wide that the Central Bank was forced to let the official rate drop to .442. The black-market rate remains about 10 percent lower — far less than the gap of several weeks ago — and some Jordanians hope the currency crisis has now passed.

Hillsborough Awaits New Life With I-40

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — An era of uninterrupted interstate travel Asheville to Raleigh is likely to spur unprecedented growth in Hillsborough, a prospect that excites some and worry others who fear the town's character may be threatened.

A gleaming, 4.2-mile stretch of Interstate 40 opens today just west of town — seamlessly grafting onto Interstate 85. Together, the two interstates will bring more than 40,000 vehicles a day whizzing past Hillsborough, an increase of about 9,000 cars a day over what I-85 now handles alone.

The prospect of opportunity riding into this town of 3,800, the county seat of Orange County, excites town officials.

Fred Cates, who was Hillsborough mayor from 1967-81 and returned to office last year, remembers the Hillsborough of 1983, when Cone Mills, the town's largest employer, closed its plant and left 500 people jobless.

"The day I became mayor, half the buildings downtown were padlocked," Cates said. "I don't want to see that happen again. When there is no growth, there is stagnation and a town goes backward."

But others are worried. "People are really coming to Hillsborough," said Sadie Strayhorn, 79, curator of the Orange County Historical Museum. "Well, you know, we just don't like it. We who live here just love it like it was."

Strayhorn came to Hillsborough in 1935, when there were 830 residents. Since, town limits have grown little while the population has more than quadrupled.

"I used to know nearly everybody here," she told the Greensboro News & Record. "Now I don't know very many people."

Until now, Hillsborough's claim has been its rich heritage. The colonial legislature met here. A dozen historical markers line Churton Street. More than 75 buildings date to the 18th century; 13 are listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

But as the Raleigh-Durham-

Chapel Hill Triangle encroaches and travel times shrink, Hillsborough increasingly is becoming a bedroom community for the urban areas. In the past two years, prime real-estate prices have tripled.

"Interstate 40 essentially will expand the Triangle area to here," said John Watkins, division engineer for the N.C. Department of Transportation. "You may not have any IBMs around here, but you're going to have some important businesses."

Said Elton Casey, executive vice president of the Hillsborough Area Chamber of Commerce: "Hillsborough is a pretty, scenic town — the type of thing that Norman Rockwell would paint a picture of. But it's just quite obvious that Hillsborough is going to become a boom town. It's already headed that way. The word here is just, 'Go!'"

For more than 15 years, Orange County officials opposed construction of I-40, fearing its impact on the rural county's environment.

They finally dropped a lawsuit against it in 1983.

But county officials haven't given up the struggle to keep the area's rural flavor. Orange County entered a joint planning arrangement with Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

"There's a pretty strong commitment on the part of all three bodies to maintain a rural flavor," said R. Eugene Bell of the Orange County Planning Department.

The county enacted strict zoning around the triangle formed by the two interstates and N.C. 86. Only a node at the interchange of N.C. 86 and I-40 allows anything besides residential use. None of the area is slated for commercial use. Where I-40 and I-85 join, there are no ramps to get on or off the interstates, making it an unlikely area for development.

But the 1988 planning agreement will be revised in five years, and Bell said he would be surprised if officials aren't looking at commercial and industrial uses for the land by then.

Broadcasters Induct Two Into Hall

The Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM — Veteran Charlotte broadcasters Doug Mayes and Wallace Jorgenson were inducted Sunday into the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters Hall of Fame.

Also during an awards ceremony here, the NCAB gave a special distinguished service award to former Sen. Jim Broyhill, R-N.C., for his work in the area of First Amendment rights for broadcasters, and for his efforts in streamlining the license renewal process, and his work for deregulating broadcasting.

Jorgenson, president of Jefferson-Pilot Communications Co., will retire Tuesday after nearly 11 years as chief executive of the firm, whose broadcast and media services operations include WBT, WBCY and WBTV in Charlotte.

Mayes retired recently after more than 30 years in television news for WBTV and WSOC-TV in Charlotte. His broadcasting career began with a brief stint as a bass fiddler on Nashville's "Grand Ole Opry" during high school in his hometown of Westmoreland, Tenn. In 1941, he was working at a radio station in Kingsport, Tenn., reading news bulletins on the day Pearl Harbor was attacked by the Japanese.

His television career began in Charlotte in 1952 as the "Esso Reporter" and he was an anchor for WBTV for 22 years.

Book By Greensboro Reporter Says N.C. Officers Erred In Death Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — In July 1984, a wealthy matron and her daughter were shot to death at their sprawling home northeast of Louisville. In May 1985, three members of a well-to-do Winston-Salem, N.C., family were found slain.

Two sets of killings, months and miles apart, but tied together by a tale of failed marriage, an incestuous relationship and a bitter child custody battle. When authorities finally caught up with the suspects, they committed suicide in a car explosion after killing the two boys at the center of the custody dispute.

The story was apparent to investigators in retrospect; according to a new book, it could have become apparent much sooner, before the second set of killings, but for the mistakes of North Carolina authorities.

"Bitter Blood," by Greensboro (N.C.) News & Record reporter Jerry Bledsoe looks at the slayings of Delores Rodgers Lynch, 68, and her daughter, Dr. Jane Lynch, 39, of Prospect, Ky., and the aftermath.

Mrs. Lynch also had a son, Thomas J. Lynch, a dentist in Albuquerque, N.M. He had been married from 1970 to 1981 to North Carolina native Susie Newsom.

As part of his investigation into the Lynches' slayings, Dan Davidson, then an investigator for the Kentucky State Police, requested a check on Susie Lynch from the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation. The check showed that a camping trailer was jointly registered to her and a Frederick Klenner, 32.

Davidson then sought a check on Klenner and was told that he was a doctor with no criminal record.

An apparent dead end. But Klenner, who was Susie Lynch's first cousin, was not what he appeared to be. Despite a widespread belief among people in his hometown of Reidsville, N.C., that he was a physician, he had never attended medical school. At least one person knew that and had complained to authorities, who compiled a detailed file on him, according to the book.

In the file, a State Bureau of Investigation agent described Klenner as a survivalist "gun nut." According to the file, Klenner was "paranoid and spent all of his money on exotic military weapons that he carried wherever he went."

Had Davidson been given this file by North Carolina authorities, he would have focused on Klenner immediately, according to "Bitter Blood," Davidson agrees.

North Carolina SBI officials refused to talk to Bledsoe for his book, and the bureau in Raleigh recently declined to comment to The Associated Press.

After the Lynch killings, 10 months of fruitless investigation passed. Then, on May 18, 1985, Susie Lynch's parents, Robert W. Newsom Jr. and Florence Sharp Newsom, and her grandmother, Hattie C. Newsom, were shot dead.

With the second set of slayings, the family tie became clear. All five victims, apparently upset by Klenner's courtship of Susie Lynch, had planned to testify against her at a hearing that summer over the custody of her sons. Both families were wealthy, and a desire for the inheritances may have played a role as well, investigators said at the time.

But the real motive will never be known. By early June, authorities had decided to arrest Klenner on murder charges in the Newsom family slayings because he was planning to leave the state and had threatened witnesses, they said.

On June 4, they caught up with his van and began a chase. With Klenner was Susie Lynch and the two boys. As police closed in, the van exploded. Klenner and his lover were killed by the explosion; authorities discovered that the boys already had been killed — poisoned with cyanide and shot in the head.

Davidson said Klenner had to have detonated the bomb, and authorities believe Susie Lynch knew of all the slayings and died willingly as well.

After the explosion, Davidson and his investigators returned to Kentucky to finish their investigation of the Oldham County killings.

Davidson got phone records that led him to the gun store in Winston-Salem where Klenner did most of his trading. He found that Klenner had traded a rifle — the same type of weapon used to kill the Lynches — to that dealer the day after the killings. Ballistics tests linked a bullet found at the Lynch home to the gun.

Final Effort Set To Find Marine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — The family of Lance Cpl. Jason Rother, who disappeared while training in the Mojave Desert in California two months ago, has been told an expert search party will make a final attempt to find the Minnesota Marine's body next weekend.

Rother, 19, a rifleman assigned to an infantry regiment at Camp Lejeune, N.C., disappeared during a combat training exercise at the 932-square-mile base at Twentynine Palms, Calif., the largest Marine base in the world.

He had been positioned along a dirt road as a sentry, to guide vehicles in the night as they passed. He was never picked up from his post.

Rother was not reported missing until more than 40 hours after he had been stranded. The initial search lasted three days.

Dukakis Changes Course, Boasts Of Liberalism

By Donna Cassata
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michael Dukakis boasted about his liberal background and challenged rival George Bush to an election eve debate while the Republican nominee, wary of a tightening presidential race, vowed a tough fight in the waning days of the campaign.

With eight days left until Election Day, and some polls indicating a race closer than earlier surveys suggested, an enthusiastic Dukakis campaigned by train Sunday through California's Central Valley, where he added a new twist to his populist appeal.

"We need a president in the tradition, yes, the liberal tradition of Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman and John Kennedy," the Democratic nominee told voters at stops from Bakersfield to Stockton.

Questioned by reporters about his decision to embrace the "L-word," a label he has shunned for months, Dukakis said he comes from the liberal tradition of "presidents who were on the side of average Americans, presidents who helped to build middle class America."

"Harry Truman was a liberal who believed in balancing budgets and that's the tradition I come from," the Massachusetts governor said.

Dukakis also called on his GOP opponent to use the network television time they both bought on election eve for a one-on-one debate with a moderator and no reporters.

"I'm going to be a president who unites America," Dukakis said. "If he (Bush) wants to talk about that, then I'd be happy to meet him face-to-face."

The vice president, in the second presidential debate on Oct. 13, ruled out the possibility of a third confrontation between the two candidates.

Bush stumped in Philadelphia's suburbs on Sunday and briefly manned the phones at his campaign headquarters in Montgomery County.

"This is George Bush calling from the headquarters. We're trying to get the vote out. I know you probably don't believe it, but that's who it is," the GOP nominee said in one call.

Bush also delivered a pep talk to staff members at the headquarters, saying he and his wife, Barbara, plan "to keep running like we're 10 points behind. Nobody is going to out-work us."

The vice president was campaigning today in Louisville, Ky., and St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo., after taping an interview in Washington, D.C., with NBC News anchorman

Tom Brokaw.

As part of a counteroffensive, the Dukakis campaign in Missouri announced late Sunday that a free lunch with the homeless will be held across the street from St. Louis' Union Station at the same time as the Bush rally.

The lunch for clergy, veterans, the elderly and others is being sponsored by the St. Louis Clergy Coalition, Students for Dukakis and other organizations, the campaign said in a statement.

The Democratic nominee was continuing his campaign in California with stops in San Jose and the Los Angeles suburb of Norwalk. Aides to Dukakis said their internal polls showed California, and its major prize of 47 electoral votes, is up for grabs despite surveys last week showing Bush ahead by 10 points.

Dukakis' running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, was focusing today on his home state of Texas where two statewide polls released this weekend showed Bush maintaining a strong lead, ranging from 15 to 21 points.

Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle was campaigning in Michigan and Ohio.

The latest nationwide poll, a Time Magazine survey published today, found the Republican ticket leading Dukakis-Bentsen by 10 points, 50 percent to 40 percent.

The survey of 1,096 probable voters was conducted Tuesday and

Imelda Marcos Back In New York To Answer Embezzlement Charges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos has returned to the city where she once threw lavish parties, this time to answer to an indictment accusing her and her husband of embezzling $100 million from their homeland.

Mrs. Marcos and her entourage arrived Sunday by luxury jet from Hawaii, where she and ousted Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos have lived in exile since fleeing the Philippines in February 1986.

Defense lawyers convinced U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan that the 71-year-old Marcos was too frail to make the trip to New York City for a court appearance. His arraignment was postponed, at least until a government physician examines him.

The judge, however, ordered Mrs. Marcos to appear. She was scheduled for arraignment today on charges that the couple used the country's money to buy property including four New York buildings and artwork.

Lawyers said Mrs. Marcos, 59, will plead innocent to charges in the Oct. 21 embezzlement and racketeering indictment. The main racketeering charge carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison upon conviction.

Mrs. Marcos flew from Hawaii on Saturday, the first time she has left the state since her exile there.

On Sunday, a limousine brought her to the Waldorf Towers, one of the New York locations where she threw lavish parties as first lady. She was surrounded by reporters and photographers. Bodyguards cleared a path as she and those with her strode inside the luxury apartment-hotel without comment.

A Marcos associate in Honolulu, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Marcos hoped to shop and entertain old friends while in New York.

"Her real concern is that she also hasn't left her husband's side for three years and she's very concerned about his health," John Bartko, a Marcos attorney, said in Honolulu.

"She's going to meet her legal obligation, but I just don't see her having a gay old time in New York City."

Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Marcos visited St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Cathedral. Aides said the Waldorf bill, which reportedly will run $1,800 a night, is to be paid by friends they won't identify.

The criminal indictment is similar to a 1986 civil lawsuit filed in California by the Philippine government of Marcos' successor, Corason Aquino.

"We developed an idea, which the American courts bought, that a dictator can't fleece his country, deposit the loot in the United States and expect to get away with it," said Morton Stavis, president of the Center for Constitutional Rights, a non-profit legal group representing the Aquino government.

In response to the lawsuit, an injunction was granted March 2, 1986, that prevented the sale or transfer of Marcos' New York properties, which included four Manhattan commercial buildings and a Long Island estate, with a total value reportedly in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Mrs. Marcos arrived Sunday in a private Boeing 737 loaned by American Tobacco Co. heiress Doris Duke. The plane, outfitted to carry just 19, brought Mrs. Marcos' entourage, which included an attorney, a nurse, secretary and several friends.

The jet landed at Newark International Airport, where reporters and about 40 supporters remained behind a gate out of sight from Mrs. Marcos.

"We wanted to show Mrs. Marcos and President Marcos that there are Filipinos who still support them," said Willy Paderon. "I hope they will be vindicated of all these politically motivated charges that are coming left and right."

"They (the U.S. government) double-crossed the president. You don't do that to friends. It's going to cost the U.S."

BUYER BEWARE!

Here's the scene: A few years ago you purchased a matching set of wing-backed chairs—beautiful fabric, expensive, perfect to complete your carefully planned interior decor.

Now that inevitable time comes when soiling takes its toll, and the chairs need cleaning. Naturally, you call your friendly, professional cleaner; and after completing a few mysterious tests, he informs you that the fabric isn't colorfast, and he can't guarantee the outcome of the job.

"But," you insist, "That can't be...I purchased the best, the most expensive fabric the salesman had to offer!" True enough. So what's the scoop?..

Really, there's little excuse for dye-bleeding during cleaning with modern dye technology; however, some fabric manufacturers (not your furniture retailer) attempt to save money by using inexpensive dye systems which may bleed. Testing identifies most problem fabrics, and cleaners modify procedures to avoid them. Alas, some are "delayed bleeders" and can't be detected until too late.

Ounce of Prevention?.. So what can you do to avoid fabrics with fugitive dyes?

CareMaster

Selection is critical, so start by reading labels to determine fiber content and fabric type. Primary culprits are: Jacquard weaves with rayon or acetate yarns providing accent color patterns; nylon prints and even some cotton prints (usually darker colors); and furniture with fabric combinations of contrasting colors (dark colored piping highlighting a light fabric overall). Solid colors, Herculan fabrics, fabrics containing polyester or acrylic fiber, and cotton chinz with lightly colored patterns are usually safest.

When shopping for upholstery, I'd advise taking along a small bottle of water-based fabric spotter (ammoniated) and some white cloth. Simply select an inconspicuous area (back of the cushion near the zipper) and test by wetting your cloth with spotter and holding it in contact with the darkest color in the material for about two minutes. Most fugitive dyes will transfer by then.

The salesperson will think you're a little strange, but you could avoid an unnecessary problem in the future when cleaning is required. Who knows—you might even teach him something!

Wednesday and had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Bush's chief of staff, Craig Fuller, said the campaign thought the race would tighten in the closing days of the campaign.

"I think it's to be expected as you get to the final days of the campaign that you're going to see some tightening in this race, but that's going to cause us to work harder," Fuller said.

Buoyed by his campaign's tracking poll and some statewide surveys indicating a closer race, Dukakis claimed that the battle for the White House is far from over.

"You can sense it, you can feel it, you can taste it," he said.

Crowds chanted "Give 'em hell," and "Tell it like it is," as the Democratic nominee made his way through the California valley by Amtrak train. A cheer also went up when Dukakis proclaimed himself a liberal.

Soviets Jail Two Moscow Dissidents

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Two Moscow dissidents were jailed for their part in protests demanding freedom for hundreds of people they say are political prisoners, a dissident source said today.

Yuri Mityunov said police arrested Valeriya Novodvorskaya and Dmitri Starikov on Sunday and they were given 15-day jail sentences. Mityunov is a spokesman for the Democratic Union, a group that bills itself as an alternative to the Communist Party.

At least 50 people were arrested as hundreds of demonstrators marked an imprisoned poet's death by protests demanding the release of hundreds they say are political prisoners, Mityunov said.

About 40 people were arrested in Leningrad, 14 in Moscow, and four in Novosibirsk, Mityunov said.

A few thousand people gathered separately in Minsk, capital of the Byelorussian Republic, to commemorate the victims of Hitler and Stalin. Fourteen people were arrested there, Mityunov said.

Ms. Novodvorskaya was arrested on her way to a planned demonstration on Moscow's Pushkin Square along with several other Democratic Union leaders.

A crowd of several hundred people gathered on the square in the cold and snow Sunday evening, but no protest took place. Starikov was arrested when he raised a banner demanding freedom for political prisoners after most of the crowd left, Mityunov said.

Earlier Sunday, five members of another group were arrested on the square for their brief protest.

Mityunov said 200-300 people gathered to read poetry and hold candles along Leningrad's Nevsky Prospekt near Kazan Cathedral. At least 40 of them were arrested, he said.

A crowd of several thousand gathered near the police station where they were taken, shouting angry slogans, he said.

A Leningrad dissident source said all but 10 of those arrested were freed by Monday.

Sunday was the 16th anniversary of the death in a labor camp of Yuri Galanskov, a poet and pacifist who was an editor of the dissident journal Phoenix 66. He was sentenced to seven years in a labor camp in 1968.

Sunday's protests came just days after Soviet officials reportedly promised West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl that they would release within 10 weeks all those regarded by the West as political prisoners.

The Soviet Union says it has only a few dozen political prisoners. But many Western human rights groups and Soviet dissident organizations say several hundred people still are held in prisons, labor camps, psychiatric hospitals, or in internal exile, because of their beliefs.

Iraq-Iran Peace Talks To Open With POWs Up High On Agenda

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA — On the eve of a new round of peace talks, Iran and Iraq each released 25 prisoners of war and U.N. chief Javier Perez de Cuellar said he would promptly seek the repatriation of the thousands that remain.

The United Nations secretary general told reporters on arrival Sunday that he hoped the third round of talks that begins today would soon yield "positive results," specifically on the exchange of prisoners.

But he has said his first target as mediator to have both sides agree to the disengagement of forces that a U.N. report says have remained in "dangerous proximity" since Aug. 20, when a truce halted the 8-year-old war.

The U.N. Iran-Iraq Military Observers Group, which is monitoring the cease-fire, says in the report that in some places troops are separated by just 30 feet of no man's land.

Perez de Cuellar said he planned to discuss the prisoner-of-war issue this morning with the president of the International Committee of the Red Cross and expected to meet later today with the delegations of both sides.

A U.N. report estimates Iran and Iraq hold a combined total of up to 105,000 prisoners of war, though the Red Cross has registered just 50,182 in Iran and 19,284 in Iraq.

So far, Iran has freed 790 prisoners and Iraq 638, according to the Red Cross.

On Sunday, Iraq freed 25 disabled Iranian prisoners and they were flown to Tehran, the capital of Iran, aboard a plane chartered by the Red Cross. Iran reciprocated immediately by releasing 25 Iraqi prisoners who boarded the same plane for the return flight to Baghdad, Iraq, according to Francoise Derand, a spokeswoman at the Red Cross office in Geneva.

Iraq has agreed in principle to release all prisoners and says their freedom should not have to be worked out in the peace talks. But Iran has said the exchange must be based on the U.N. resolution under which the cease-fire took hold and on a plan drafted by Perez de Cuellar.

That plan provides for a timetable for implementing all ten points of the cease-fire resolution, ranging from the prisoner-of-war exchange to assessment of damages and an inquiry into who started the war.

Perez de Cuellar said Sunday night that he hoped the Geneva talks would be "if possible much more useful" than the previous round held in New York early this month.

Both Iran and Iraq have not budged on the principal issue stalemating the talks since they began in Geneva on Aug. 25: delineation of the border between the two nations.

Black Congregation Sees Church Fall To Arsonists Again

By Paul de la Garza
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALTON, Ill. — The Rev. Steven Jackson delivers one message to his 125-year-old black congregation: Forgive those who twice this year burned down their church.

"They might burn the church, but they ain't burnt nobody's spirit," Jackson bellowed Sunday, eliciting cries of "amen!" and "hallelujah!" from about 50 worshippers.

"Only love can conquer hate," said Jackson, pastor of the New Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church of Rock Fork, who was delivering his sermon at a different church, only a few miles from the charred remains in Godfrey.

New Bethel was burned to the ground Oct. 18 for the second time in six months. Last year, racial epithets were carved into the walls and swastikas were spray-painted on the church.

Elsewhere in southern Illinois, there have been four cross burnings since July on property owned by blacks in predominantly white neighborhoods in Belleville and Fairview Heights.

Blacks wonder if they're the targets of a well-organized campaign to stir racial violence in many of the towns in the region across the Mississippi River from St. Louis.

State, federal and local authorities are investigating all the cases, but few believe the acts of violence are being committed by one group.

"You have to realize you have isolated situations where people have personal prejudices," said FBI agent Reginald Joseph, whose agency is investigating each case for possible civil rights violations.

"I don't think any of the people involved are working in concert," Police have not ruled out racism as a factor in the church fires, but "it could be just a straight act of vandalism," said Madison County Sheriff's Lt. Dennis Fischer.

Racism also could be the issue in the cross burnings, though Joseph and others suggest the ones that followed a July 3 incident could simply be "copy cat" crimes.

"I really feel that when one happens and the press picks up on it, it gives other people an idea to do it," said Belleville Police Chief Robert Hurst.

The New Bethel church was first destroyed by fire April 16. Undaunted, the congregation voted to rebuild the frame building on the same spot in Godfrey, a town of 1,000. The church stood at the end of a gravel road in a remote, wooded area near a mostly white neighborhood.

New Bethel was set to be rededicated Nov. 6, but arsonists made certain there would be no service. Stung by the violence, the congregation nonetheless voted last week to rebuild again.

Salem Witch Trial Descendants Gather 'Persecution Lives,' They Say

By Dana Kennedy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — The 20 people executed during the infamous Salem witch trials of 1692 are mostly remembered in history lessons and tourist attractions, but some of their descendants are organizing to emphasize their humanity.

"We want to keep the memory alive," said Howard Hay of Boston, a descendant of accused witch Susanna Martin. "This type of thing keeps happening around the world. People keep getting persecuted. I don't know if we'll ever learn the lesson."

Hay is president of the recently formed Sons and Daughters of the Victims of Colonial Witch Trials, which has 45 members, all direct descendants of the trial victims.

Hay founded the group with Wayne Higley of Stoneham, a descendant of accused witch Rebecca Nurse. They are members of numerous genealogical societies and discovered their link to the witch trial victims while researching their lineage.

Using standard statistical formulas, they say there could be up to 20 million descendants of the accused witches in the United States. One of the more famous, according to Gary Boyd Roberts of the New England Genealogical Society, is Joan Kennedy, former wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, whose ancestry dates back to accused witch Mary Esty. She is not a member of the group.

The witchcraft hysteria began during the winter of 1691 when a West Indian slave, Tituba, told voodoo tales to a group of young girls and taught them palmistry and magic.

Tituba and two other women were killed as witches after a doctor examined them and pronounced them bewitched. The scare continued for about a year, resulting in the execution of 20 people and the imprisonment of 150.

The descendants' group is concentrating on the approaching 300th anniversary of the witch trials. They hope to hold an observance on Gallows Hill in Salem, where accused witches were hanged.

"Until now, there hasn't been anything to really remember them by," Hay said. "There hasn't even been so much as a plaque. We want people to know the real story. These people were human beings who were unjustly accused."

Higley said many of those first accused of witchcraft were either community outcasts or victims of neighborhood feuds.

The group said the city of Salem has been uncomfortable about remembering the accused witches except in terms of tourist promotion.

"These people had no connection with witches," Higley said. "It was a sad time in colonial history. We don't hold a grudge against Salem but we do think there should be something there to remember them (the victims)."

Higley and Hay have overseen the design of a 14-foot, seven-ton bronze statue of three of the accused witches — Sarah Cloyce, Mary Esty and Rebecca Nurse — which they would like to see stand at the Old Burying Ground in the heart of Salem.

The city has not yet approved their proposed site, not far from the grave of Magistrate John Hathorne, one of the chief hanging judges who sentenced Esty and Nurse to death.

Nurse was in her early 70s when she was accused of witchcraft and arrested. When her sisters, Cloyce and Esty, defended her, they also were arrested and sentenced to death. Though Esty and Nurse were executed, Cloyce was left to linger in prison.

Cloyce was released in 1696. Magistrates of the crown, sent to investigate the witch trials, presented her with three gold sovereigns in memory of her two sisters and herself.

Rank Loses Privilege By Smoking

Dear Abby: You are going to get clobbered for telling that military wife who wouldn't allow guests to smoke in her home: "Rank has its privileges. I'd say that the commanding officer and such luminaries as JFK and FDR (if they were still living) would be welcome to light up wherever they please."

For as long as you have been writing your column, you should be aware by now how militant non-smokers are. Some of them would kick their own mother out in 10 feet of snow if she dared to light up in their house.

I haven't bet on anything for many years, but I'd bet your mail will run heavily against you on that statement. — "Pink" Pinkerton, Pico Rivera, Calif.

Dear Pink: Give the man from Pico Rivera a cigar! I am catching it from all directions. I did not say those luminaries would presume to light up without permission; I said I thought they would be welcome to. Big mistake. I blew it! My readers told me that I was wrong, and they were right.

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: A reader asked, "Why don't people who are sick stay home, instead of going to work and giving everybody else their cold, flu, or whatever they have that seems to be going around?"

I can answer that in four words: They need the money. Many jobs don't include "sick days" — it's no work, no pay.

Many days I've dragged myself to work feeling lousy, but I can't afford the luxury of staying home.

My last job allowed six days off a year. But nobody would dare to take them because it would reflect on their job performance record. If you were out sick more than six days, you were called in and "counseled" — and when it came time to be promoted, your work record was marked "not dependable."

Now, about keeping kids home from school because of sickness: In my son's school, they actually lowered his grade by a whole letter because he was out more than eight days in one semester!

My sister is a 27-year-old widow with two children, 5 and 7. She saves her days off without pay for their illnesses. Her take-home pay is $210 a week, so two days off brings her paycheck down to $126.

Now you know why people don't stay home when they're sick. — Rhode Island Mother

Dear Mother: I do. And it's time employers showed a little more heart.

Dear Abby: Five million Americans have diabetes and don't know it! These people are at risk of serious complications if diagnosis and treatment are not sought in time. November is National

Diabetes Month, so you can help by alerting the public to the symptoms of diabetes so it can be detected early: increased thirst, urination and hunger; blurred vision, itchy skin, slowly healing wounds or extreme fatigue (especially after a meal), or a tingling sensation in toes or fingers. You are also more likely to have diabetes if you are overweight, are over 40, have given birth to a baby who weighed more than 9 pounds or have a relative with diabetes. Those at risk should be tested yearly for diabetes. — Mary Grossi, R.N., C.D.E., Long Island Chapter, American Diabetes Association

Shipyard Closing

ject to Solidarity's choice of negotiators.

The official news agency PAP said Rakowski approved the decision to close the shipyard Saturday. It referred to a speech he made Oct. 13 when he presented his government to the Parliament.

"Rakowski announced that his government will go from words and plans to firm acts which would recover the Polish economy.

"That would include liquidation of enterprises that are inefficient, unproductive and some enterprises which require subsidies from the state treasury," the agency said.

The shipyard's workers will be offered jobs at other enterprises in Gdansk province, PAP said. It said the 10,000 workers will have some 30,000 jobs to choose from.

PAP said the announcement of the closure "is not a surprise for public opinion or for the work force of the Lenin shipyard. The possibility of liquidating this shipyard has been discussed in public ... for a long time."

The shipyard, scene of strikes in May and August, has for two decades been a center of union activity but has been in decline for years.

It was scheduled to build 11 ships this year, primarily for the Soviet Union, which as an ally is afforded very favorable purchase terms. In the late 1970s, it produced a high of 27 ships a year and had more than 15,000 employees.

foreign hostage in Lebanon. There are 14 captives, including nine Americans.

Islamic Jihad, or Holy War, said in an accompanying statement that it provided the videotape "on the occasion of Terry Anderson's birthday and in response to your letters, and according to his desire to send you a recorded message."

Islamic Jihad also holds Thomas Sutherland, 56, of Fort Collins, Colo., acting dean of agriculture at American University in Beirut. He was kidnapped June 10, 1985.

Anderson is the longest-held captivity as arms deals," Anderson said.

He urged the administration to negotiate his release and appealed to the new U.S. president to end the plight of the hostages. The Reagan administration has said it won't negotiate with terrorists. It was the third videotaped message from Anderson since his abduction in Moslem west Beirut on March 16, 1985. The other tapes were released Oct. 3, 1986, and Dec. 26, 1987.

Boddie
TARBORO — Mr. Paris Boddie Jr., 63 of Apt. 2, Hendricks Park, died Friday. A funeral will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Dickens Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Richard Joyner. Burial will be in Batts Chapel Baptist Church Cemetery.

An Edgecombe County native, he attended the county schools and was employed as a maintenance worker for the town of Tarboro.

Survivors include three sisters, Ora Lee Knight and Clara Ruth Boddie, both of Tarboro, and Laura Harris of Bethel.

The family will receive friends Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Dickens Funeral Service Inc.

Bowen
Mrs. Janice Herring Bowen, 41, of 1323 Sonata St. died Sunday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Revs. Greg Rogers and LaCount Anderson. A graveside service will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in New Hollywood Cemetery in Lumberton.

A native of Lumberton, Mrs. Bowen had been a Greenville resident since 1984 and was a teacher's assistant at Sadie Sautler School. A graduate of Roxboro High School, she had previously lived in Wilmington and Garner. She was a member of Oakmont Baptist Church, which she served as a Sunday School teacher.

Surviving are her husband, Michael C. Bowen; two daughters, Kimberly Bowen and Michele Bowen, both of the home; her father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Willie H. Herring of Lumberton; three sisters, Jimmie Ann Mitchell of Goldsboro, Diane Worrell of Wilmington and Judy Collins of Lexington, S.C.; and a grandmother, Linnie Brisson of Lumberton.

Harvell
BURLINGTON — Mrs. Annie Lee McLawhorn Harvell, 74, of 157 Tarleton Ave., died Saturday in Duke University Medical Center.

Her funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Thursday in Westview Presbyterian Church in Burlington by the Rev. Frank J. Allen Jr. Entombment will be in Alamance Memorial Gardens.

Mrs. Harvell was born in Pitt County. She was a music teacher and a member of the Westview Presbyterian Church, which she served as organist for more than 30 years.

Surviving are a daughter, Marie Waugh of Oxford; a son, Lt. Col. Andy Harvell of the U.S. Army in Tacoma, Wash.; a sister, Thelma Craft of Grifton, and four grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the Lowe Funeral Home, 2400 S. Church St., Burlington, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Hinton
TARBORO — Mr. John Luther Hinton, 50, of Apt. 21 Riverview Court, died Sunday. A funeral will be conducted Thursday at Red Hill Baptist Church by the Rev. Mose Exum. Burial will follow at Eastlawn Memorial Cemetery.

An Edgecombe County native, he attended the county schools and was employed as a mechanic at Potomac Electric Co.

Survivors include his father, Richard Hinton of Tarboro; two daughters, Cynthia Powell of Fort Seals, Okla., and Yvette Marie Brown of Oxen, Md.; one son, Greg L. Hinton of Washington, D.C. and two brothers, Richard Hinton Jr. and Willie Hinton, both of Greenville.

The family will receive visitors Wednesday from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Dickens Funeral Service, Inc.

Jones
OAK CITY — Ms. Bertha Mae Jones died Sunday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Her funeral will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m. in Sycamore Baptist Church in Hamilton by the Rev. Wiley Parker. Burial will be in Hamilton Cemetery.

Ms. Jones was a native of Martin County and spent most of her life in the Oak City community. She was a member of Sycamore Baptist Church where she served in the choir.

Surviving are a son, Howard Jones of Bethel; a sister, Augusta Bridges of Philadelphia; four brothers, Ernest Jones of Tarboro, Gordon Jones of Norfolk, Va., George Jones of Goldsboro and Walter Jones of Newark, N.J., and two grandchildren.

The family will receive friends Tuesday from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Flanagan's Funeral Chapel in Greenville and at other times will be at the home of Howard Jones, Route 1, Bethel.

Taylor
A funeral for Mr. James Taylor Jr. will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m. in Flanagan Funeral Chapel by the Rev. David Hammond. Burial will be in the Council Cemetery in Bethel.

Mr. Taylor was born in Martin County and lived most of his life in the Hassell community.

Surviving are five sisters, Blanche Simmons of Landover, Md., Elsie Council of Tarboro, Lucinda Owens of Las Vegas, Allene Taylor of New York and Marjorie Bess of Baltimore, and two brothers, Arthur Taylor of Washington, D.C., and Milton Taylor of Brooklyn, N.Y.

The family will receive friends at Jones Chapel Primitive Baptist Church from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday.

contract with East Carolina, the Pirates entered the year with high hopes, but after crushing Tennessee Tech, 51-13, in the opening game. ECU has lost eight straight games.

Virginia Tech topped ECU, 27-16, and nationally ranked South Carolina edged the Pirates, 17-0, scoring in the final 10 seconds of play.

Southern Mississippi then rallied for a 45-42 win in the final minute of play and Southwestern Louisiana took a 48-36 victory over the Pirates after trailing.

The Pirates then opened what USA Today called their October Death March against four ranked teams. ECU lost to successive Saturdays to West Virginia, 30-10, Florida State, 45-21, Syracuse, 38-14, and Miami, 31-7.

The Pirates have games remaining with Temple on Saturday and Cincinnati on Nov. 19.

Tobacco

season was "almost ideal, particularly in the east," Blalock said.

"We were fortunate to be strategically located for the rainfall," Smith said. "Rainfall is the single most important factor in any tobacco crop.

"When the market opened, everyone was talking about the adverse weather conditions in other areas," Smith said. "but our crops really did well. We got the rain when we needed it, for the most part."

Blalock said the season-ending average price could be 1 to 2 cents higher than last year, but Smith said the consensus in his area was that the price would stay at about last year's average.

Lester said changes in the tobacco program two years ago to reduce the stockpiles of leaf held by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. apparently have worked to stabilize the market.

"Considering where we were, the disastrous situation we were in, there's no question that the tobacco reform program has worked," Lester said. "The non-net cost assessment was at 25 cents a pound when the program began and this year was down to something like 1.13 cents per pound, so most farmers should be seeing an increase in their net income."

Beating Death
THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 43-year-old man was found dead in his ransacked house Saturday.

Capt. Billy Ray Nail of the Davidson County Sheriff's Department said that Travis C. Coleman may have been beaten with a small wooden bat or club found in the house.

The body will be sent to the state medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill to determine the cause of death.

Nail said there were no signs of forced entry.

Wounded

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Winston-Salem man was in serious condition Sunday after being shot three times by police officers early Saturday morning, police said.

Capt. C.H. Cunningham of the Winston-Salem police said Daryl S. Rice, 24, was injured after he first shot at the officers. Two officers returned fire and hit Rice once in the chest and once in each thigh, Cunningham said. The officers were not injured.

The shootout came more than an hour after Rice had refused to come out of a house on East 22nd Street early Saturday where police were responding to a break-in, Cunningham said.

Pair Charged

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — Two people have been charged in the shooting death last week of a former Surry County sheriff's deputy and in the wounding of his girlfriend.

Joseph Edward Lynch, 19, of Germantown and Jerry Dale Erlewine, 31, of Pilot Mountain were each charged with first-degree murder; first-degree burglary; assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury; and two counts of armed robbery, according to a news release from the Surry County Sheriff's Department.

ACC Turning To Junior College Players

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GREENSBORO — Long looked upon as just a quick fix, the recruiting of junior college players has become more widespread in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball circles.

And a number of junior college players could have a big impact on several of the ACC's schools, league coaches said at the 27th-annual Operation Basketball media day Sunday.

Clemson, Virginia, Georgia Tech and North Carolina State all dipped into the junior college ranks to and fill specific needs for the upcoming season.

"In a recruiting meeting last year, we had to make a decision about what we needed," said Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins. "We decided what we needed and what we could get could be achieved through the junior college route."

And Cremins is hoping that Maurice Brittain (6-9) and Johnny McNeil (6-8) can handle the middle and allow All-ACC Tom Hammonds to play forward. Point guard Karl Brown is the Yellow Jackets third juco signee and he is expected help make up for the loss of Craig Neal.

"It was a move we needed to make," he said. "The game plan is for them to hold the fort and hopefully we'll have a good recruiting year.

"I haven't recruited a junior college player since Yvon (Joseph who started for the Yellow Jackets in 1985). I liked what I saw and once I saw what I liked there is no turning back. But we all know it's a tough adjustment."

At Clemson, coach Cliff Ellis is hoping that junior college point guard Marion Cash can step in for the departed Grayson Marshall. Derrick Forrest and Kirkland Howling are other jucos who could play key roles for the Tigers.

"We tried to bolster our lack of outside shooting with recruiting," Ellis said. "We signed five perimeter players (three from the junior college ranks).

"We think they can help us. My concern going in is experience. The potential is there. Our ballclub will depend on how our newcomers fit in. My experience is they take a half season to get ready."

Virginia's 6-10 Brent Dabbs and 6-7 Curtis Williams were recruited out of the junior college ranks to help the Cavaliers shore up a weak inside game.

"We recruited two junior college players," Holland said. "Brand Dabbs is the most highly recruited. He can put points on the board. Curtis Williams plays much bigger than his 6-7 frame would indicate.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano once said he would never recruit another junior college player after running into problems with the last juco he signed, Kenny Drummond. Drummond spent less than one season with the Wolfpack, quitting the team midway through the year.

But that was two years ago and Valvano decided to try the juco route again, signing 6-8 David Lee and 6-5 Mickey Hinnant. The Wolfpack also signed Gary Mattison, but he never made it to campus after he failed to graduate from Chowan.

Even North Carolina coach Dean

Smith, whose last junior college recruit was Bob McAdoo back in the early 1970s, went after a junior college player (Dabbs) but lost him to Virginia.

While the downside of junior college players is they're only around for two years, but the main benefit with a junior college player is he arrives on campus with two years experience already under his belt.

"They're further ahead with their basketball than the so-called hot shot freshmen," Smith said of junior college transfers. "You should expect more from a highly-recruited

Opinion On Baker Hard To Gauge

Monday Notebook:

Unlike the political races, we didn't have any polls to determine how the fans felt about the future of the East Carolina football program under Art Baker.

But it can be safely said that there were those on both sides of the fence — those who wanted to see him replaced at the end of this season and those who felt he deserved more time to get the job done.

Both had valid arguments and to them they each seem overwhelming in their favor.

Even Baker admitted that when he came to East Carolina four years ago, he was overly optimistic in how quickly the program could be put back on solid footing. Of course, retrospect is always easy.

There were rumors this past week that Baker would be fired after the Miami game on Saturday and replaced for the final two games of the season. That, of course, was poppycock. Dave Hart, the ECU athletic director, wasn't about to that kind of move.

Baker, himself, declared Saturday in his post-game comments that he expects to be the head coach through the final snap of the Cincinnati game on Nov. 19. Then, he pointed out, it's in the hands of other people.

The announcement, as we know now, came this noontime, which caused this column to be rewritten in a hurry. I had intended to point out the pluses and minuses of the Baker era.

Since they probably played some role in Baker's final decision, we'll go along with them anyway.

The minuses are well known. Baker has not brought the Pirates back from their losing ways over the past nine years. Only once since Pat Dye departed Greenville have the Pirates turned in a winning year, 1983 under Ed Emory.

In many ways, however, Baker was put into an untenable position. Few schools in the country have faced, year in and year out, the schedule Baker was asked to play against. Loaded with heavyweights, the Pirates took their lickings, got their big pay checks and headed home. Like a prize fighter, being knocked out week after week by the champion can have its effect even when you go into the ring with less formidable opponents.

Baker has also been plagued by discipline problems among some of his players. This past winter, spring and summer especially hit the Pirates hard. Athletes, however, live in a fishbowl. Everything they do gets into the limelight. The question remains, however, how much would have been made of the same incidents had those in trouble been members of the marching band, or the physics club, and the like.

It would appear that steps have been made to correct these problems. And certainly they are not unique to East Carolina — not excusing them in the least.

One of the telling blows was the loss in three games in the early season the Pirates were expected, or at least, hoped to win — Virginia Tech, Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana. In a winning year against the schedule the Pirates had, they had to win these games along with the Tennessee Tech, Temple and Cincinnati games.

It would appear that the problem at Virginia Tech was one of motivation. The Pirates simply were not ready to play. Of course, Baker and his staff must bear the responsibility for that — regardless of whether the player listen or not.

The other two losses were largely placed at the feet of the defense, especially the Southern Mississippi game. East Carolina did field a young team on defense this year, but many people have questioned defensive coordinator Richard Bell's scheme, especially in pass defense.

Certainly, the defense has been up and down. At times, they look great — and other times, they look horrible.

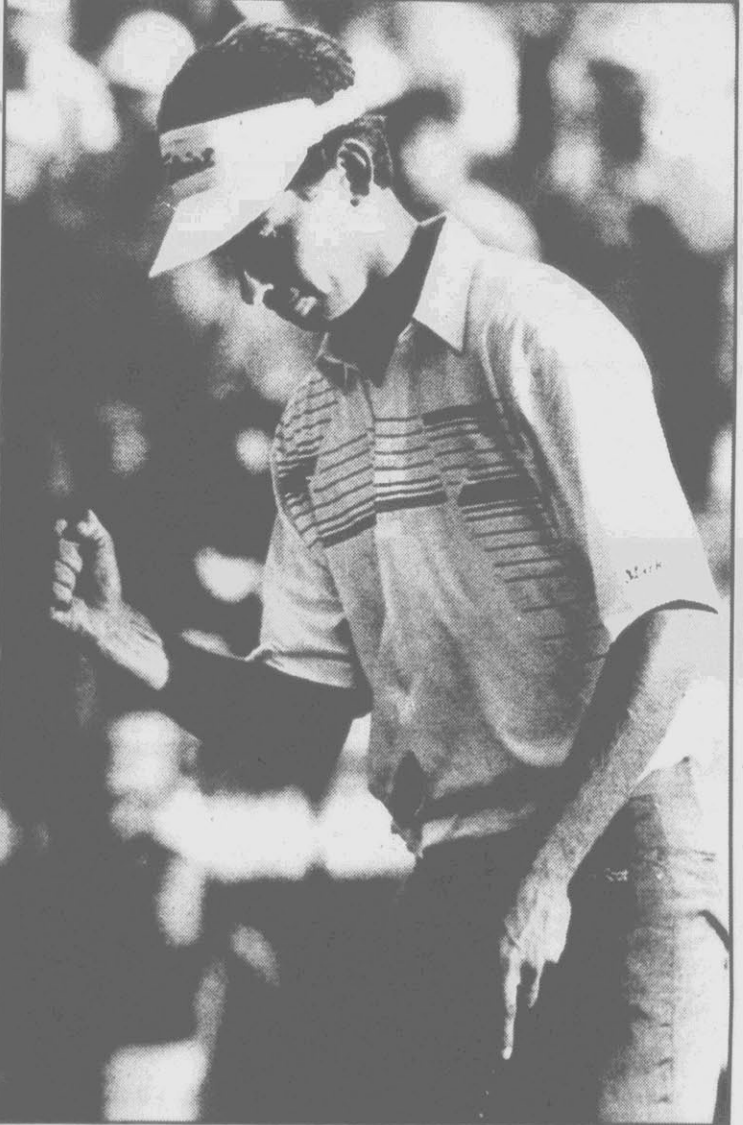

In past years, East Carolina has been able to recruit heavily from eastern North Carolina, but it would appear that the Pirates no longer can do that. The Atlantic Coast Conference teams have finally seen the wealth of talent in the area and have flooded the marketplace.

Lohr's Par Wins Disney Classic

Edges Beck On 5th Playoff Hole

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bob Lohr gestures after sinking a putt Sunday

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — The Walt Disney World Classic was dominated by birdies but won with a par after the sun had set.

Bob Lohr made a five-foot par putt on the fifth playoff hole to beat Chip Beck in the longest sudden death extension of the year. The last two holes on Saturday were played with sunlight at a minimum and pressure at a premium.

"I was able to deal with the pressure pretty well," said Lohr, a four-year tour veteran who became the 11th first-time winner on the PGA Tour this season. "It's hard even to remember all the putts I made to stay alive."

He had to remember one. Beck bogeyed the 72nd hole of the $700,000 tournament to give a Lohr chance and he took it by making a three-foot birdie putt to force the playoff.

Both golfers birdied the first and fourth playoff holes. Lohr was over the green of the par-4 17th hole and Beck was on the putting surface about 45 feet from the cup. Lohr chipped within five feet and Beck missed his first putt by about eight feet and his second by about a foot. Lohr then drilled his putt for the victory.

Lohr and Beck, who agreed to continue the playoff in the dwindling daylight, both finished regulation play at 25-under-par 263, breaking Larry Nelson's tournament record of 266 set in 1984. Lohr, who led after every round, also set scoring records for 18, 36 and 54 holes and finished with 30 birdies.

"If anybody in my position says that they're not nervous, they're lying," Lohr said. "Everybody that's ever had a chance to win a tournament gets nervous. I'm just fortunate that I was able to deal with it."

Lohr earned $126,000, nearly doubling his winnings this year to $286,536. He soared from 69th to 34th on the money list, and with a good showing this week at the Tucson Open, could qualify for the following week's $2 million Nabisco Championships of Golf. The top 30 money winners compete in the Nabisco event to be held at Pebble Beach, Calif.

Beck's runner-up check of $75,600 boosted him from second to first on this year's money-winning list and brought him closer to becoming the first golfer to win $1 million in one year. He has won $770,258 and will play at Tucson.

Beck certainly had a chance to win the Disney. "It's unfortunate, as well as I putted all week, that my putter let me down a few times," he said. "But I commend Bob. He's a great champion."

Joey Sindelar dropped behind Beck on the earnings list with $708,532 after finishing tied for 44th and collecting $1,896.

Beck shot a closing round of 66 to catch Lohr, who had a final-round 68.

Tripp Makes It Back

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

CHAPEL HILL — Doctors told North Carolina nose guard Dennis Tripp that he would be out six to eight weeks after suffering a knee injury Oct. 1 against Auburn.

But the former Farmville Central standout couldn't wait that long. He returned in four weeks and saw his first action Saturday in a 41-38 loss to Maryland.

The original prognosis was that he might be out for the season. But Tripp progressed quickly enough to get in some practice time last week and was pronounced ready to play by team trainers.

"I got in about two or three series," he said. "It felt pretty good. The doctor said it would be six to eight weeks. (UNC strength) Coach (Rich) Tuten pushed me and helped me get better. Coach Tuten kept me in shape."

"I had a couple of good days of practice, but it wasn't as good as when you're out there. I was happy to get in the couple of plays."

"I was a little tight, a little slow. After I got two or three plays under my belt I was all right. I still don't have the speed I had (earlier), but

Colts Need A Better D

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Monday Night Football debuts at the Hoosier Dome on Halloween night as the Indianapolis Colts' defense is haunted by past deeds.

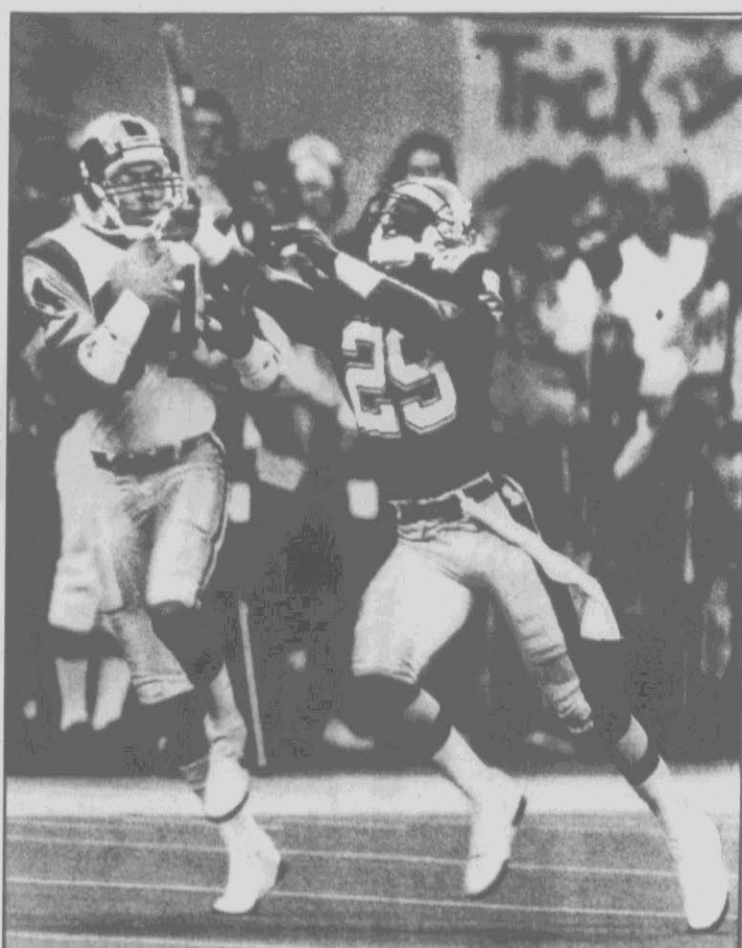

Denver and returning quarterback John Elway face a defense that was last in the NFL against the pass before its last game and is currently 25th, three from the bottom.

Being at home won't necessarily help Indianapolis as it yielded 444 yards in the air to Tampa Bay in its last home game on Oct. 16 and 315 to Buffalo the previous week.

A 16-0 victory over San Diego last week raised the Colts' record to 3-5 and has caused the defense to hope it has turned things around.

"I think we're a lot better than our figures show," Indianapolis defensive end Donnell Thompson said. "We had some changes that required adjustments and we didn't always make them."

The teams are meeting for the eighth time in the regular season. Denver holds a 6-1 advantage.

Lansford Boots Rams Into 1st

Los Angeles Edges New Orleans On Late Field Goal

By Rick Warner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kicker Mike Lansford didn't boot his chance to send the Los Angeles Rams to the top of their division.

Lansford kicked four field goals Sunday to give the Rams a 12-10 victory over New Orleans and a first-place tie with the Saints in the NFC West.

"It's been a while since I had four in a game," he said. "It usually takes me about five games to get four attempts."

The loss snapped the Saints' seven-game winning streak and left both teams with 7-2 records.

"The Rams were better physically, just overall a better football team," Saints coach Jim Mora said. "We didn't do much on offense at all, but you've got to give the Rams credit for that."

Lansford gave the Rams all their points on field goals of 37, 18, 47 and 30 yards. The Saints scored on a 5-yard touchdown pass from Bobby Hebert to Lonzell Hill and a 33-yard field goal by Morten Andersen.

"There wasn't a whole lot of scoring, just a bunch of guys on both sides fighting their butts off to win the football game," Rams coach John Robinson said. "It may not be exciting to some folks who don't understand that part of the game, but it was the kind of football I love."

Falcons 27, Eagles 24

Chris Miller threw three touchdown passes as Atlanta snapped a five-game losing streak and gave Marion Campbell a victory in his first game as head coach at Veterans Stadium since being fired by the Eagles after the 1985 season.

The winning touchdown was a 49-yard pass from Miller to Michael Haynes with 5:58 left.

Patriots 30, Bears 7

Doug Flutie threw four touchdown passes against his former teammates, halting the Bears' five-game winning streak.

The Patriots, who lost their last meeting with the Bears 46-10 in the 1986 Super Bowl, became the first team in six games to score more than nine points against Chicago. The Bears, 7-2, had allowed just 32 points during their winning streak.

Flutie, traded to New England last season, completed 6 of 18 passes for 165 yards and no interceptions. He threw an 80-yard TD pass to Irving Fryar on the first play from scrimmage, and added a pair of scoring passes to Lin Dawson and one to Stanley Morgan.

Browns 23, Bengals 16

Herman Fontenot returned a blocked punt 1 yard for a touchdown and ran back a kickoff 84 yards to set up another score for the Browns, who moved to within one game of the first-place Bengals in the AFC Central.

Cincinnati, 7-2, lost for the second time in three weeks. It was the third straight victory for the Browns, 6-3.

N.C. Wesleyan Tops East Carolina

ROCKY MOUNT — N.C. Wesleyan rolled up a 5-0 soccer victory in the final round of the N.C. Wesleyan Tournament Sunday. Wesleyan controlled the game from start to finish, taking 28 shots and holding East Carolina to only three. "What we had today was basically nine seniors playing against nine freshmen," ECU coach Bob Lust said. "We were basically outmanned." ECU goalie Mac Kendall had 12 saves in the game. Wesleyan had only two saves. The Pirates lost forward Steve McCarthy in the game. McCarthy suffered a broken leg in a player collision on the field. ECU, now 2-14-2, plays host to William & Mary on Wednesday.

Hornets Win Their Second Exhibition Game

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — With victories in two of their six preseason games, Charlotte's Tim Kempton says the expansion team has made some strides toward being respectable.

"We're progressing, and we are progressing quicker than people expected of us," Kempton said despite the team's 110-102 exhibition loss to the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"It's a great tribute to the coaching staff and how hard we work at practice," Kempton said.

Before losing their fourth game in the preseason, Charlotte made a fourth-quarter run at Cleveland that wiped out all but six points of a 20-point lead with 9:42 remaining after a Larry Nance basket.

The Hornets then put on their last surge, getting within 106-100 on a free throw with Michael Holton with 2:06 remaining. But in trying to get closer in the last two minutes, Tyrone Bogues committed a turnover. Holton missed a drive to the basket in traffic and Darnell Valentine came back with Cleveland's last two baskets to seal the victory.

The problem stemmed from a third-quarter breakdown in which the Hornets hit 33 percent of their field goal attempts, were outscored 32-20 and were outrebounded 18-5.

"Tonight, we buried ourselves again," Kempton said. "We got down in that third quarter. The good thing that came out of it, we worked hard on our pressure defense. We got out of the hole."

Both teams meet tonight in an exhibition in Fayetteville, their last preseason game before they meet again in the regular-season opener in Charlotte.

Cleveland center Brad Daugherty said Charlotte's youth would serve it well in the first season, but he said the seven players with two years' experience or less on the Cavalier roster will help them.

"We've got some good young players that are going to help us out this year," Daugherty said. "All you can ask of a young player is to come in and do a good job. He won't be able to carry a team like this, but they can make a good contribution."

Mike Sanders, Mark Price and Chris Dudley had 12 apiece for Cleveland. Daugherty had 11 and Valentine 10 for the Cavaliers.

Holton had 16 points, with center Tim Kempton scoring 14, Brian Rowsom 12 and Robert Reid 10 for the Hornets.

Greenville Soccer Team Wins Match

The '77 Greenville Stars took a 3-0 win over the '77 Burlington Blaze in a North Carolina Youth Soccer Association Travel League game in Greenville Saturday.

The Stars scored in the fourth minute of the first half on an unassisted goal by Edward Markowski. Jonathan Clark scored threeminutes later on a shot assisted by Corey Holbert. The final goal of the game came in the 18th minute of the half by Daron Cannon.

The Stars took 13 shots on goal and goalie Aaron Simpson had nine saves. Greenville is now 6-4 in the league.

Thomas Wins North-South Seniors Event

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Moot Thomas of Ocala, Fla., defeated Tom Moberg 4 and 2 Saturday to win the 37th annual North-South Senior Men's Invitational tournament at Pinehurst Country Club.

Thomas, 58, playing in his first North-South Senior, won the 16th hole to close out the match.

Other winners included Bob Harvey in the President's Flight, Andrew Toth in the Vice President's Flight, J.D. Johnson in the Governor's Flight and Joseph VanderVeen in the Secretary's Flight.

Mansdorf Turns The Tables On Gilbert

PARIS (AP) — Israel's Amos Mansdorf says he learned from a defeat to Brad Gilbert earlier in October that cost him more than $13,000.

Now, Gilbert is hoping to learn a little something from his loss to Mansdorf at the $1.1 million Paris Open that cost him more than $130,000.

Mansdorf took the world's richest indoor tennis in beating Gilbert in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 on Sunday. He pocketed $262,000, the largest winning purse on the indoor circuit.

Gilbert, from Piedmont, Calif., won $131,000 in losing his second straight Paris Open final. Last year, he lost to Tim Mayotte.

Mansdorf showed he gained some knowledge from losing to Gilbert before. Earlier in the month, Gilbert beat him in the semifinals of the Tel Aviv tournament. Gilbert went on to win the final, worth $19,000, while Mansdorf had to be content with less than $6,000.

"I did a lot of things different than I did two weeks ago," Mansdorf said. "He beat me in straight sets so there was a lot to change. Now, I beat him in straight sets. Something changed."

But Mansdorf wouldn't say exactly what he changed this time to increase his earnings by more than a quarter-million dollars.

"I can't say because I might have to play him again next week," Mansdorf said.

Gilbert said it was his turn to learn now.

"Sometimes you learn something in defeat. Maybe I was a bit overconfident," Gilbert said. "I went in thinking that if I played well I would have a good chance to win. I beat him three or four times already. I beat him two weeks ago."

But Mansdorf admitted there was a bit of luck involved in capturing his fourth Grand Prix title.

"I was taking a lot of chances on the big points, and the ball was going in," Mansdorf said.

Mansdorf had some good fortune earlier in the week when Sweden's Mats Wilander had to withdraw due to a relapse of the flu just prior to their first-round match.

"I saw the draw and thought I got unlucky to play the No. 1 player in the world in the first round in a big tournament," Mansdorf said. "But I just got lucky this time."

Ranked 33rd in the world, Mansdorf never had won more in a tournament than the $18,680 he earned last January in Auckland, New Zealand. Now, with more than $363,000 for the year, he is in the top 10 in earnings for this season.

Mowry Gets Revenge Over Being Snubbed

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Mowry was snubbed last year by the Las Vegas Classic.

Sunday, he won the $250,000 Senior PGA Tour stop in his former hometown.

Mowry was a Senior Tour rookie last year and had two victories, but wasn't allowed into this event because he didn't rank among the leaders on the PGA Tour career money list and no sponsor exemptions were available.

"I didn't think the rules, which they've broadened this year, were forgiving enough being that I was a multiple winner," said Mowry, who shot a 1-under-par 71 Sunday to beat Bob Charles and Bobby Nichols by two strokes.

Oklahoma Football Might Be Penalized

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Oklahoma athletic director Donnie Duncan says problems in the Sooner football program aren't those of a corrupt program, but the school likely will be penalized when the NCAA concludes its investigation.

"I think scholarship reduction is something we can anticipate," Duncan said Sunday. "I don't think we will come out of this without having some kind of penalty."

The NCAA Infractions Committee spent all day Sunday reviewing its case against the Oklahoma football program, sources told The Associated Press.

Oklahoma, which was on a two-year football probation from 1973-74, said last June that it was facing 16 allegations, most of them under the "extra benefits" category. The items appeared mostly minor in nature as described by the university.

Duncan told Oklahoma City television station KOCO he thought "things went well from the standpoint of a professional approach with a professional group."

"It was not necessarily the best and friendliest thing in sense of what to look forward to on a Sunday afternoon," Duncan said.

Pirates' Problems

East Carolina, without the funding of the other neighboring schools, must compete in other ways. The Pirates certainly have as good a stadium as anyone around, and they play a quality schedule — a double-edged sword if there ever were one. In some cases, facilities off the field are not as good. The Pirate weight training facility is in a former factory off campus. The dressing facilities are crowded.

But the new sports medicine and physical education building going up beside Ficklen Stadium will soon ease that problem, and make the Pirates look more attractive.

East Carolina has had to look elsewhere for talent, and most coaches believe that ECU has brought in good talent. In many cases it is still young. A look at this year's starting lineups would tend to backup that statement. Of the 22 starters listed on Saturday's press box chart, only six were seniors. Twelve were juniors, two were sophomores and two were freshmen.

That would leave few holes to fill for next fall. Baker failed this year to recruit a kicker. He and his staff went after a number of them, but each chose to go to another school. Ironically, nearly all of them have been heavy contributors to those schools this fall.

Because of this failure, the Pirate kicking game has stood out like a sore thumb. Now for a few pluses.

There can be no doubt that Art Baker has brought class to East Carolina. No one in the business throws stones at him. He is a gentleman who has the full respect of his peers.

In many ways, East Carolina's football program is no longer thought of as the country bumpkin from down east, wandering the city streets where he doesn't belong.

Sure, there have been problems. N.C. State dropped its series with the Pirates over an on-the-field "riot" last year. But that cannot be placed at the feet of Baker. It was only some fans who haven't caught up to Baker's level of class.

Academics were a shambles before Baker came to East Carolina. Few players were graduating. Most of the players recruited would not be able to qualify now under proposition 48, a NCAA bylaw that established minimum entrance requirements for incoming freshman student-athletes. Certainly, that has played a role, but Baker has gone after the better students, in order to field a team of student-athletes. Even those few who have been brought in as Prop. 48 players are now making the grade.

Next year's schedule is certainly less of a challenge. There are still some heavyweights on it — Miami, Syracuse, South Carolina and Pittsburgh. But there are six or so teams that the Pirates should be able to play with and expect the opportunity to win. Couple that with the number of players returning and the prospects are brighter next fall.

There are those who felt that Baker probably deserved at least one more year because of this. Things are better in a number of ways than they were when Art Baker first walked on this campus as head coach.

Now, however, it will be someone else who will take over and lead the way.

The best possible scenario is that a new coach will be hired between Thanksgiving and Christmas. In the meantime, expect to hear name after name go through the rumor mill.

Flutie Outplays Old Teammates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NFL's top-ranked defense.

FOXBORO, Mass. — Mike Ditka paced up and down one sideline, seething and snarling. Doug Flutie smiled on the other side of the field.

Ditka, the Chicago Bears' intense coach, had turned from one quarterback to a second and then, in desperation and anger, to a third. The first got hurt, the second and third hurt their team. There was no fourth quarterback to turn to.

That player had been traded. That player was Doug Flutie.

Three quarterbacks — Jim McMahon, Mike Tomczak and Jim Harbaugh — couldn't bring the Bears a victory on Sunday. Flutie, the quarterback for whom there was no room in Chicago, did that for New England.

He had outlasted and outplayed them all.

Flutie threw a career high four touchdown passes in the Patriots' shocking 30-7 domination of the

"I'm just thankful I'm playing in New England," said Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College. "I never talked about revenge."

Think Chicago could find room for him now?

McMahon, whose shoulder problems prompted Chicago to obtain Flutie in October 1986, said at the time that the Bears already had enough quarterbacks. He never got along with the newcomer.

Ditka, a Flutie fan, finally agreed and Flutie was traded to New England in October 1987.

But today, the last day of October 1988, McMahon has a knee injury that will sideline him at least four weeks. Tomczak and Harbaugh have their failings and Ditka's frenzy to consider.

There are no treats for that quarterback trio on this Halloween. Flutie, the ghost from the past, saw to that.

junior college player than a highly-recruited freshman."

In N.C. State's case, the early departure of center Charles Shackelford to the National Basketball Association prompted the signing of Lee. But Valvano had already locked up Hinnant and Mattison prior to Shackelford's hardship announcement.

Lee is expected to be part of a three-man rotation at center with Brian D'Amico and Avie Lester as N.C. State tries to replace Shackelford.

Notes

As expected Duke was picked to finish first by the assembled media, followed by North Carolina, Georgia Tech, N.C. State, Clemson, Wake Forest, Virginia and Maryland.

"I think we're going to have a good basketball team," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We'll be good right away, but it could develop into an outstanding team."

All-ACC forward Danny Ferry returns for the Blue Devils, along with front line starters John Smith and Robert Brickey as well as point guard Quinn Snyder.

North Carolina must overcome an injury to J.R. Reid, who has a stress fracture and will be out for 8-10 weeks.

Coach Dean Smith said the Tar Heels will feature an up-tempo style this year that will have more shooting and less passing in an effort to cut down on turnovers.

"Offensively, we're going to turn it up a notch," he said. "We generally lead the ACC in shooting percentage. This year we will not."

Wake Forest coach Bob Staak said he feels for the first time since he arrived in Winston Salem three years ago that the Demon Deacons are an ACC-caliber team.

"I really consider this the first year of our program," he said. "I'm optimistic. I'm looking forward to this year more than any other year."

Wake returns leading scorer Sam Ivy and also has a number of freshman, led by Chris King, who could make an impact.

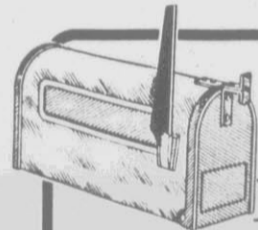

Incoming freshman Phil Medlin, a former D.H. Conley player, has bulked up over the summer, going from 6-8, 190 to 6-9 230 and Staak is hoping to get some production out of him.

"Phil Medlin is another freshman who will make an impact earlier than we thought," Staak said. "With his added strength and bulk he is going to be a factor. Luckily, we won't have to throw him to the wolves (early)."

Player Of The Week

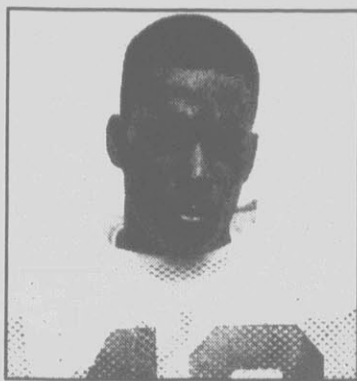

The player of the week honor will be shared this week by J.H. Rose High School's Maurice Hines and Billy Carr.

The backup tandem came in during the first half of the Rams' 30-14 win over Wilson Hunt Friday to replace injured starters Tim Moore and Tony Williams. The duo helped bring the Rams back from a deficit in the fourth quarter to remain unbeaten at 9-0 and tied for the Big East Conference lead.

Hines, in filling in for Moore rushed 14 times for 80 yards, including touchdown runs of 1 and 40 yards. Carr chipped in 59 yards on seven carries as the backup fullback. Carr helped set up Hines' 1-yard score with a 31-yard run to the Hunt 1-yard line.

Prep Honor Roll

- Rose High quarterback Jamie Brewington completed 6-17 passes for 117 yards in Friday's 31-7 win over Wilson Hunt, including a 37-yard completion to Eric Morris on the winning drive.
- Ayden-Gritton tailback Tony Reeves rushed for 176 yards and one touchdown on 12 carries Friday to lead the Chargers to a 48-0 blanking of South Lenoir. Reeves now has 1,093 yards for the Chargers, who clinched first place in the Eastern Plains Conference with the win.
- North Pitt quarterback Billy Hardison rushed for 117 yards and a pair of touchdowns in the Panthers 41-8 win over C.B.

Billy Carr

Aycock Friday night.

- D.H. Conley quarterback Scott Seymour completed 16-33 passes for 180 yards and had two interceptions Friday in the Vikings 14-6 loss to Washington. Seymour connected with Junior Farrow from 42 yards out for Conley's only touchdown of the game.
- Conley receiver Junior Farrow hauled in eight receptions for 95 yards including a 42-yard touchdown pass in the Vikings' 14-6 loss to Washington Friday before leaving the game in the fourth quarter with a shoulder injury.
- Williamston's Guy Spruill rushed for 144 yards and a touchdown on 10 carries in the Tigers' 7-0 win over Roanoke Rapids Friday. Spruill's TD came on a 84-yard run.
- Tyrone Bland picked up 107 yards on 16 carries for Williamston in their 7-0 win Friday over Roanoke Rapids.

Passing Rams Win Again Sunday

By Dave Goldberg
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was fitting that on a day Eric Dickerson chose to attack the Los Angeles Rams for trading him that his former team demonstrated why they're better off without him.

Who had ever heard of the Dickerson-era Rams PASSING the ball to run out the clock, as they did Sunday in their 12-10 victory over New Orleans?

That's exactly what they did, throwing on five of the first seven plays after the Saints had cut the lead to two points with 4:01 left and never allowing New Orleans to get the ball back. The key plays were a 19-yard pass from Jim Everett to Robert Delpino from their own 12 and a 27-yarder from Everett to Aaron Cox on a third-and-7 from their own 34.

In fact, the Rams celebrated the anniversary of the trade that sent Dickerson off to Irsayland for Greg Bell and a passel of draft choices by rushing for just 93 yards while throwing for 236 and still winning.

Dickerson, meanwhile, was celebrating his own way, calling Bell "a dwarf," saying Everett was never really a friend, and claiming the Rams traded him as punishment after a contract dispute.

"I think they wanted to try and teach me a lesson, send me to a place I would not like and would probably struggle the rest of my career, which I think backfired in their face," he said in a television interview.

Backfired? Hardly.

While the Colts are struggling with a 3-5 record going tonight's game with Denver and suffering from the internal squabbles that have beset them constantly during Robert Irsay's tenure as owner, the Rams are 7-2 following Sunday's victory and are tied with the Saints for first in the NFC West.

And they're playing in a way that each week relies more on Everett and a diversified offense rather than the Dickerson-based ground game that could usually take them to the playoffs but rarely further. That's what happened when he was traded to the Colts last year — they won the AFC East at 9-6-1 but lost their first post-season game in Cleveland.

On Sunday, for example, Everett threw for 123 yards in the first quarter alone, although the Rams got only six points out of it — two field goals made, another blocked.

Then, as Rams coach John Robinson put it — "it was two teams playing their butts off." Two more field goals for Los Angeles, a touchdown and a field goal for New Orleans.

In fact, Robinson, whose team has been playing games with scores like 45-34, seemed almost relieved afterward that his team had won a low-scoring close game, the kind that would have fit better on a muddy, torn-up field than indoors on the SuperDome rug. A lot, Robinson noted, like Chicago's 10-9 win over San Francisco Monday night.

"We've been playing wide-open offense, which probably sounds pretty stupid coming from me," he said. "This one was good old-fashioned in-the-trenches football, a hell of a football game, the kind that are great games, like the Bears and 49ers."

Still, when it came down to the final four minutes, and the Rams needed to move from their own 12 to avoid letting the game rest on the foot of New Orleans' Morten Andersen, the NFL's best kicker, they went to Everett, who went to Delpino and Cox to put things away. There was even a certain irony in that.

Cox, whose first reception — a 42-yarder — set up Mike Lansford's first field goal, was chosen on the first round of this year's draft with one of the picks obtained for Dickerson. The Rams will get also get two more first-rounders out of the deal next year, players who will be maturing just as Dickerson is about to retire.

Moreover, the rest of the Rams seem to benefit.

"It's fun," says wide receiver Henry Ellard, often reduced to a spectator in the Dickerson days. "Now you know you're part of the offense."

"We're not a passing team," Everett said. "We're just more balanced now."

"Eric? I don't know why he said what he said. I have nothing against him. I consider him a friend and I was looking forward to playing with him. I just feel sorry for a man who's so unhappy."

Bruins Lose 21-Point Lead And Position Atop The Poll

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A No. 1 team is supposed to hold on to a 21-point lead in the second half against an opponent on a two-game losing streak. UCLA couldn't and the Bruins will no longer be No. 1.

Upstart Washington State, which brought a two-game losing streak into Saturday's game at the Rose Bowl, overcame a 27-6 third-quarter deficit and put up a goal-line stand in the final minute to stun UCLA 34-30.

"We have to go on from here," said UCLA tight end Charles Arbuckle, whose 33-yard reception gave the Bruins the ball at the Washington State 6-yard line with 35 seconds remaining. "Win the rest and we go to the Rose Bowl."

"We can just worry about one game at a time now. It's upsetting that we lost, but we can't linger on the national championship. We had the opportunity and didn't execute when we needed to."

After Daryl Henley's 31-yard punt return and Troy Aikman's pass to Arbuckle put the Bruins deep in Washington State territory, it looked good for UCLA. But Aikman threw four incompletions and that was it.

"We're the number one team in the country and on track to the Rose Bowl and a national championship and we lost," Aikman said. "Words don't describe how I feel."

The new poll was to be released today and it was expected UCLA would fall from the top spot. With Aikman leading the way on Saturday, the Bruins scored on five straight possessions to take their 21-point lead after 2:25 of the third quarter. But the Cougars got three touchdowns before the period ended to tie.

Alfredo Velasco's third field goal of the game, a 30-yarder with 11:39 remaining, gave the Bruins a 30-27 lead, but the Cougars then moved 80 yards on 13 running plays and two personal fouls against UCLA to score the game's final points.

"Fouls like that violate the spirit of team defense," UCLA coach Terry Donahue said of the penalties on the game-winning drive. "They're hard to tolerate and accept. They were obviously costly."

Rich Swinton, who gained 117 yards on 27 carries, scored the winning touchdown, his second of the game, on a one-yard plunge with 6:21 left.

Skins Fall To Houston

yards for a touchdown and defensive end Leon Seals recovered a fumble for another score as Buffalo improved its AFC East-leading record to 8-1.

The Bills sacked Green Bay quarterback Don Majkowski six times and forced the Packers, 2-7, into four turnovers. Majkowski completed only 11 of 29 attempts for 54 yards.

Dolphins 17, Bucs 14

Dan Marino threw two touchdown passes to Mark Clayton in the third quarter and the Dolphins took advantage of Tampa Bay turnovers to win for the fourth time in their last five games.

Marino, coming off a 521-yard performance in a losing effort against the New York Jets, completed 27 of 46 passes for 267 yards.

Cardinals 16, Cowboys 10

A 42-yard pass from Neil Lomax to Ernie Jones set up the winning score, a 1-yard plunge by Earl Ferrell with 50 seconds left in the game.

Ferrell also caught a 14-yard touchdown pass from Lomax and ran 47 yards to set up a field goal for the Cardinals, 5-4. Dallas, off to its worst start in a quarter-century, fell to 2-7.

Jets 24, Steelers 20

Freeman McNeil's 5-yard touchdown run following a blocked punt helped the Jets beat the Steelers for the first time ever.

New York, 5-3-1, had lost nine straight games to Pittsburgh. But the Jets rallied from a 10-0 deficit to hand the Steelers their seventh loss in nine games this season.

Giants 13, Lions 10, OT

Detroit's Garry James fumbled a handoff on the first play of overtime, setting up the winning 33-yard field goal by Paul McFadden.

Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor recovered at the Lions 22-yard line. Two plays later, McFadden kicked the winning field goal on third down.

Seahawks 17, Chargers 14

Rookie Kelly Stouffer threw a 6-yard scoring pass to fullback John L. Williams with 3:43 left as Seattle moved into first place in the AFC West.

Stouffer, starting in place of injured regular Dave Krieg, also tossed a 23-yard touchdown pass to rookie Brian Blades with 52 seconds left in the first half to give Seattle a 10-0 lead.

49ers 21, Vikings 21

Steve Young scrambled 49 yards for a touchdown with 1:58 remaining to give San Francisco the victory.

Young, playing quarterback in place of ailing Joe Montana, dropped back to pass and then raced through the middle of the line, eluding several tacklers in the secondary before stumbling into the end zone.

Raiders 17, Chiefs 10

Steve Beuerlein returned as the Raiders' starting quarterback and passed for 248 yards to help Los Angeles beat Kansas City for the second time in three weeks.

Beuerlein, who started the first three games this season before being replaced by Jay Schroeder, completed 18 of 29 passes and was intercepted once.

Bo Jackson and Marcus Allen each scored touchdowns for the Raiders, who improved to 4-5. Kansas City's 1-7-1 record is the worst in the NFL.

Oilers 41, Redskins 17

Houston's Drew Hill caught three touchdown passes from Warren Moon as the Oilers downed the Redskins in the Astrodome.

Hill finished with nine catches for 148 yards, moving him into third place on the Oilers' all-time receiving list with 214 receptions.

The Oilers' defense recovered five fumbles and had one interception. Defensive end Ray Childress recovered three of the fumbles.

Tripp Returns To Lineup

that will come. Hopefully by next Saturday it will be right."

Tripp's return was a welcome sight to the Tar Heel coaches. He was one of the few experienced players on a defense that has had its problems for the 1-7 Tar Heels.

After suffering the injury against Auburn, Tripp missed games against Wake Forest, North Carolina State and Georgia Tech.

But while Tripp overcame his problem, the Tar Heel defense continues to give up points at a record pace. Despite the problems, Tripp said he felt the defense was better than it was a month ago.

"Everybody is starting to feel comfortable," he said. "I think the whole defense has really matured and gotten better. We're actually starting to play with confidence."

"Even when you're not winning, you can see the confidence building. This is a rebuilding year. We're getting ready for next season right now. Hopefully we can continue to improve. Everyday we're learning something. You say, 'why did I make that stupid mistake.' Then you try not to make it again. Sometimes it's trial and error."

Consistency is a trait the Tar Heels seem to be lacking, according to Tripp. They forced Maryland to punt only three times Saturday and twice held 10-point leads in the second half only to fall in the end.

"We have to come out and play hard every series," he said. "Some series we'll stop them in three plays and come out. The next we'll kind of let down and say they can't move the ball on us."

"Maryland had a good offensive line. They came out and ran on us. As a defense, we have to be mature enough to say we are going to come out and play hard every series. We didn't take the ball away. Little things did us in."

As it was in every game UNC has played this season, the opposition was able to move the ball at will both in the air and on the ground. It is a problem that has been well chronicled.

"You try not to pay attention to it. But at the same time you are thinking to yourself, I'm here to play defense and we're not stopping them," Tripp said. "You put a lot of pressure on yourself. That's where most of the pressure comes from. We don't care what people say about us. We just work in practice to try and correct what we do wrong."

Nimoy Glad To Be Acting

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Nimoy, who went from playing Mr. Spock on "Star Trek" to directing hit movies, says it's good to be just an actor again — and Mr. Spock at that.

"I was fantasizing about this when I was making 'The Good Mother,'" Nimoy told The New York Times during filming of "Star Trek V." "The actor comes to work and says, 'Where's the coffee? What time is lunch? Why are you keeping me waiting?'"

Co-star William Shatner, Nimoy's "Star Trek" shipmate as Captain Kirk, is the director of "Star Trek V."

Nimoy directed "Star Trek III" and the popular "Star Trek IV" before returning to Earth to make the hit "Three Men and a Cradle." His latest film, "The Good Mother" starring Diane Keaton and Jason Robards, opens this week.

"I feel like I've been struck by lightning," Nimoy said in the interview published Sunday. "But I feel like I've been standing out in a rainstorm for quite a while and I finally got hit."

Jet, right, carrying Sally Field rests against another jet after aborted takeoff in Colorado

Sally Field, Family Escape Injury As Two Jets Collide

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASPEN, Colo. — Academy award-winning actress Sally Field and her family were soaked with jet fuel but escaped unhurt when their private plane aborted takeoff and smashed into two parked airplanes.

"It's absolutely a miracle" no one was seriously injured in Saturday's crash, said Pitkin County Airport operations manager Bill Frome. "We're very, very fortunate that it's our slow period."

Field, 42, was en route to Burbank, Calif., when the Challenger CL60 crashed. Also on board were her film producer husband, Alan Greisman, 41, her 11-month-old son, Sam, and mother, Margaret O'Mahoney, said Pitkin County sheriff's spokesman Steve Crockett.

The pilot and co-pilot were treated for cuts and bruises, Crockett said. A flight attendant on the jet was unhurt.

"I led them from the crash to the terminal building, and I think she (Field) was in a state of semi-shock," said Frome. "She didn't know what had happened."

"The gas was just spurting out of the gas tanks," said Miss Field's publicist, Pat Kingsley. "They were covered with gas. They had to get out of the plane and they got out on the wing and had to jump about six feet to the ground."

Jeff Lumsden of the Pitkin County Sheriff's Office said the plane lost power as it attempted takeoff, causing it to veer to the right.

The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the crash.

The private jet had been loaned to Miss Field, who owns a home overlooking Aspen, by producer and former talk-show host Merv Griffin, the owner, according to Griffin's Los Angeles publicist, Warren Cowan.

The jet had flown into Aspen after taking Griffin and actress Ava Gabor to Griffin's Monterey, Calif., ranch earlier Saturday, Cowan said.

The jets hit by Griffin's jet belong to entertainment personality Burt Sugarman and Marty Raynes, the son-in-law of oilman Marvin Davis, Cowan said.

After the crash, Field and her family continued their journey via a commercial flight out of Denver, Crockett said.

Field won Oscars for her performances in the films "Norma Rae" and "Places in the Heart."

'Necessary Parties' Tells Story Of Kids' Feelings Over Divorce

By Kathryn Baker

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Chris Mills reacts the way many 14-year-olds would upon being told that his parents are getting a divorce — he is angry.

But Chris doesn't just get mad. He gets a lawyer.

"Necessary Parties," a witty and intelligent treatment of children's feelings about divorce, stars Alan Arkin as the boy's eccentric attorney. It was co-written for the screen by Arkin and his wife, Barbara Dana, based on her book of the same name.

The two-hour, two-part comedy-drama, premiering Nov. 5 and concluding Nov. 12, is the season opener for PBS' critically acclaimed anthology series for young people, "Wonderworks."

The film announces its sensitivity and humor right away. In the opening scene, Chris (Mark Paul Gosselaar) and his 6-year-old sister, Jenny (Taylor Fry), are putting in the kitchen, trying to ignore the screaming and slamming by their quarreling parents (Julie Hagerty and Geoffrey Pierson). "So many doors," sighs little Jenny.

Later, Chris watches his parents squabble during a tennis doubles match. The car pulls away, the parents still arguing. "I (heart) Tennis," says the bumper sticker.

Chris refuses to accept his parents' decision to split, convinced they are going through some kind of a phase. He's also worried about the effect of the split on Jenny, who retreats into a co-identity with her stuffed rabbit, Bunny. The child is almost too darling, but her dialogue is really good. "They made up their minds to a stupid way, and who will take care of Bunny?" she wonders.

Meanwhile, Chris' friends from broken homes advise him to accept the split. "You can get more attention and presents than you ever had," counsels Haverman (Judd Trichter). "It's called guilt."

Undeterred, Chris enlists Archie Corelli, an idealist who quit the law for the more equitable profession of auto mechanic, to press his case in court. Archie tries to argue Chris out of a hopeless question, but eventually he agrees to represent him.

Meanwhile, Chris' mother struggles to cope, and his father comes by to talk to Chris about why the family must break up. "I'm lost," he says.

"I'm 41 and I don't know who I am."

At the end of Part 1, Chris and Archie are bounding up the steps of the courthouse to try to get Chris admitted as a party to the divorce proceedings.

In Part 2, Archie searches for a legal ground for Chris' intervention in the case. Desperate, he sits and watches "People's Court" for ideas. Jenny takes to wearing earmuffs to keep out talk of divorce, although offers of ice cream come through loud and clear.

Film Ratings Still Controversial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — The film ratings system, which at its inception gave a G to "Dracula Has Risen From the Grave," turns 20 years old Tuesday to mixed reviews from Hollywood insiders and outsiders.

To groups denouncing what they see as a penchant by the film industry for sex, violence and drugs, the Motion Picture Association of America's ratings system is inadequate.

To many filmmakers, an X rating, or even a family-oriented G, means box-office poison, and obtaining a PG-13 or an R has become imperative, the equivalent of a mass-marketing seal of approval.

To Gene Siskel, film critic for the Chicago Tribune, "The R-rated category is now so widespread, and covers so many emotions and physical acts that I don't know how valuable it is to parents."

But to Jack Valenti, who has overseen the rating system for two decades as the association's president and chief executive officer, the film code has achieved at least one feat.

"I think just the act of surviving is itself a minor triumph," Valenti said in a recent interview.

The ratings, however, have gotten less than rave reviews from Thomas E. Radecki, chairman of the National Coalition on Television Violence.

"It's a system designed to placate the public," Radecki said, "and to prevent a public rating system from coming into existence."

Radecki conceded that the code is better than none, but argued the ratings are "why we have so much more violent and sexually degrading films than we did when the rating system was started."

Radecki would prefer a ratings system with specific guidelines, something like the 1934 code that prohibited "passion that stimulates the baser emotions" and "lustful kissing."

He contends that rating guidelines should forbid the use of alcohol or drugs in PG-rated movies.

But Valenti, who dismisses Radecki's group as "right-wing zealots," said he's rejected pleas to designate a variety of things depicted in films as taboo, including sex, violence, drug use, smoking and even animal cruelty.

"Pretty soon we would put such baggage on this rating system it would collapse," Valenti said.

The principal guideline given board members, Valenti said, is: "If you had to meet with the parents of Wichita Falls, Texas, tomorrow, do you believe they would find what you want to rate this picture to be fair and reasonable?"

Valenti also disputed arguments the ratings have somehow encouraged Hollywood sex and violence. He said the ratings are a mirror of society's values and that the association surveys moviegoers' attitudes toward the code each year to measure its success.

"Over the last decade, 65 percent to 73 (percent) of all parents with children under 13 say it's 'very useful to fairly useful' in helping them" determine which movies their children see, Valenti said, "and 20 to 23 percent find it not useful at all."

"Now by political standards that's a landslide," he added.

The board's nine members "are neither gods nor fools," Valenti said. "They're just people who like movies, and they're parents and they're intelligent."

Valenti hires the board's chairman, and together they select the eight other members.

The board's costs are underwritten by a fee each filmmaker must pay in submitting the movie to be rated. Appeals are possible only to a 22-member board comprising theater owners, independent producers and distributors and major producers and distributors.

Philip Morris Takeover Of Kraft Makes It Largest Consumer Products Company

By Bill Menezes
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The unprecedented, mid-October frenzy of buyout bids has spawned its biggest deal yet, a $13.1 billion megabuyout of Kraft by Philip Morris that would create the world's biggest consumer products company.

The proposed merger announced Sunday would be the biggest ever between two non-oil U.S. companies and, if successful, would end a short but sharp takeover battle between the two giant food and consumer goods companies.

It also would create a $40 billion-a-year company armed with some of America's best-known consumer products, including Philip Morris Inc.'s Miller beer, Marlboro cigarettes, Jell-O and Maxwell House coffee, and Kraft Inc.'s Velveeta, Parkay margarine, Philadelphia cream cheese, Miracle Whip salad dressing and Sealtest ice cream.

That would fulfill Philip Morris' goal of reducing its dependence on revenue from its slowing cigarette business, while making it a tougher worldwide competitor against other giant multinationals.

"As we have stated from the outset, we believe the combination of Philip Morris and Kraft will create a U.S.-based food company that will compete more effectively in world food markets," said Hamish Maxwell, Philip Morris's chairman and chief executive.

In a joint announcement, the companies said they had a definitive agreement for New York-based Philip Morris to boost its outstanding tender offer for all of Kraft's outstanding stock to $106 a share from $90.

Kraft shares closed Friday at $96.50, up $2 a share on the New York Stock Exchange. Philip Morris closed down 25 cents at $94.75 a share.

Glenview, Ill.-based Kraft had rejected as inadequate the $90-a-share offer made Oct. 17, and unveiled a defensive restructuring it said would pay its stockholders $110 a share in cash and securities.

The restructuring, thought by many analysts to be mainly a bargaining ploy, would have boosted Kraft's debt by about $12.4 billion, likely forcing it to sell some of its businesses to raise cash for debt payments.

Kraft said Tuesday it would negotiate only if Philip Morris sweetened its offer to at least $110 a share, and insisted it would not be pressured into a buyout.

A preliminary agreement was reached after negotiations Friday in Chicago. The Kraft board of directors approved it Sunday in New York, Maxwell said in a telephone interview.

"Our shareholders are receiving full value, and this merger is the best possible outcome for our employees, customers and the communities in which we operate," said John M. Richman, chairman and chief executive of Kraft, which has 47,000 employees.

If completed, the merger would rank behind only the $13.4 billion acquisition of Gulf Oil Corp. by what is now Chevron Corp. in 1984.

With combined revenue of about $39.5 billion in the year ended June 30, the company would be the world's biggest consumer products maker, outpacing the $30 billion-a-year British-Dutch company Unilever NV, according to industry estimates.

Gang Violence Kills One, Hurts 11

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Gang-related violence killed a 17-year-old youth and wounded at least 11, including a toddler who was shot in the head after 200 police officers conducted an anti-gang sweep of the area.

Police said 15-month-old Dalafayette Polk was wounded Sunday night during a drive-by shooting in the Watts section of Los Angeles. The boy was in critical condition today at Martin Luther King Jr.-Drew Medical Center, said nursing supervisor Sarah Patterson.

The boy's mother, Sheila Williams, was in good condition with a gunshot wound to the foot, said Patterson. Six others were wounded in the attack.

The motive for the attack was unknown and there were no arrests. "We were across the street at a birthday party and heard shots and smelled burned rubber," said neighbor Shyolanda Montana, 12. "Everybody was just starting to leave when they got shot."

The shooting occurred 16 hours after 200 police officers ended a two-night, anti-gang sweep, arresting 365 people, including 193 reputed gang members, said Officer Richard Dugerman. The offenses included driving under the influence, curfew violations and outstanding felony and misdemeanor warrants.

In nearby Long Beach, 17-year-old Danny Romero was gunned down Sunday night after neighbors had repeatedly called police to report gang trouble brewing.

Neighbors said gang problems have grown worse in the neighborhood in the past months because of a turf war. Resident Barney Hellman said Sunday night's trouble began when 15 youngsters began throwing bottles at cars.

Long Beach police Sgt. Robert Hohl confirmed that police received several calls about the disturbance, but added that reports of bottles being thrown would not be considered a high priority for police.

Also Sunday, 17-year-old Louis Orellana was shot by rival gang members as he was walking with friends in Hollywood, said Detective Andy Monsue. Orellana was listed in critical condition at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, Monsue said. No arrests were made.

On Saturday, three officers answering a report of a shooting outside a party attended by gang members came upon a man allegedly firing at a teen-ager, said Detective Sid Nuckles. The gunman ignored orders to stop shooting and drop his weapon, and the three officers fired 28 shots, striking him four times, said Nuckles.

The gunman was in serious condition at Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center and the teen-ager was treated for a minor gunshot wound.

In another shooting, two men shouting gang slogans from a car fired at least six times with a pistol and a shotgun at a reputed gang member and a woman in the city's southside early Sunday, police said.

"Couldn't we use REAL makeup like fake blood and lumpy skin and...?"

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Nov. 1

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Keep a damper on your emotions. This not the time to crack down on family indulgences. Stay cool until you have a workable plan.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Someone at work is watching. There are good things in store if you play your cards right. Remain patient; success is on the way.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A business venture which seems stalemated needs more time to mature in your favor. Your financial situation continues to fluctuate.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Beat the blues. Turn to companions for conversation which will brighten your day. Quell household grievances by adding excitement.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Your parents occupy your thoughts. Good communications with your immediate family will ease any worry. Look at the bright side.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): If you are feeling in an emotional rut, turn to loved ones for answers. They are interested in your wellbeing. Your finances improve.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You are in a good mood, but others around you may not share such spirited feelings. Stay on an even keel, and it will influence others.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You mistrust the future of your environment. Use mature judgment regarding a change of residence. Temper your outlook to fit reality.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You are disturbed by some of the aggressive attitudes at work. Relations are tricky now, but the atmosphere will change soon.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Juggling funds is a poor game plan. Use your practical nature to improve finances. Plans will materialize when balance is restored.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Life in the fast lane is slowing you down. Projects are scattered. Bring lifestyle and plans back in focus. Spend time on practical matters.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Great news catches you by surprise and comes at an opportune time. Insight pays off. Trusting fate will bring warm, lasting relationships.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J10762 ♥K83 ♦A3 ♣762
 Your partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—Whether or not you play four-card majors has no bearing on this problem. You are good enough for only one bid, so choose the one most likely to land you in the right contract. Don't muddy the waters by responding one spade—a raise to two hearts is correct.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠J98 ♥10873 ♦Q654 ♣A9
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass 1♥ 1♣ 1NT
 What action do you take?
 A.—The modern tendency is to treat partner's overall, especially vulnerable, as if it were an opening bid. Had partner opened the bidding with one spade, you would have raised to two spades, so make the same bid now.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ1072 ♥Void ♦A7 ♣KJ10984
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♦ 1♥ ?
 What do you bid?
 A.—You probably have a game or slam somewhere, but don't start with a cue-bid of two hearts—that's stealing your own bidding space! Simply bid your longest suit, two clubs. That's forcing. At your next turn, introduce your spades. That way, you can be sure to find a fit, if one exists, without escalating the auction to a phenomenal level.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AKJ1084 ♥K ♦A1092 ♣K5
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
 A.—For a jump shift, you need either a self-sustaining suit or a good fit for partner. This hand virtually qualifies on both counts. Jump to two spades.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AKJ10987 ♥K9 ♦6 ♣Q92
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 Pass Pass Pass ?
 What is your opening bid?
 A.—The fact that no one opened the bidding seems to suggest that the points are pretty evenly distributed around the table. Partner is unlikely to have enough for you to make slam, and with your lack of defense outside spades, it's possible the opponents have a big fit of their own in a side suit. Make it difficult for them to enter the auction by opening four spades. You're much to strong for three spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQ1093 ♥Q107642 ♦Void ♣A7
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
 A.—The normal procedure is to bid your longer suit first, and there's no reason to depart from standard practice on this hand. Despite the difference in quality between the suits, your correct response is one heart. You are strong enough distributionally to reverse into spades next.

Bidders For RJR Nabisco Seek Product Rights

By Thomas Easton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — For RJR Nabisco Inc., a company that essentially went up for auction recently when senior managers proposed a leveraged buyout, its products form a multibillion dollar foundation for a deal of unprecedented size — one that will engender unprecedented scrutiny.

Management's proposal placed a $17 billion price tag on the company. A competing offer from Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. raised the stakes to $20 billion. And further escalation is possible.

What the competing bidders want to buy are the rights to a number of products, including Oreos, Winston, Salem, Camels, Ritz Crackers, Baby Ruths that are typically purchased by consumers for several dollars apiece but that are, on aggregate, close to invaluable.

One institutional investor estimates that Winston and Salem, the second and third most-popular cigarette brands in the country, are each worth well above $1 billion, and Camel almost $1 billion.

The detailed information is not available to determine the worth of Oreos or Ritz crackers, but the company's cookies and cracker division as a whole is estimated to be worth about $6 billion by some investors.

The list of RJR's other franchise brands is too long to list — Chips Ahoy!, Cameo Creme Sandwich, Mystic Mint, Nilla Wafers and Social Tea Biscuits are just some of the cookies; Triscuits, Wheat Thins and Royal Lunch some of the crackers.

It puts A-1 Sauce, Del Monte canned vegetables and Fleischmann's margarine on the dinner table, while throwing the dog a Milk Bone.

Through its tropical fruit division, it is the nation's largest seller of pineapples, and its Planters peanuts and LifeSavers are among America's favorite snacks.

While many of these products do not assist in the sale of others, several provide critical access to supermarkets, cookies, crackers and other perishables, for instance, often provide a manufacturer with supermarket stocking privileges. That can prove a key asset when a company wants to introduce a new product.

Consumer products companies have long been infatuated with major brands. Traditionally, once a product becomes entrenched, the seller is freed from competing solely on price, a strategy that produces low margins and critical vulnerability to pricing impulses of competitors.

When the products are small and necessary, there are additional benefits. Come a recession, even a depression, many Wall Street analysts think that the small-ticket RJR products would continue to attract buyers long after the last vacation, car or new home becomes a distant memory.

The stability of those products, and the expectation that they could hold their value even if transferred piece by piece to separate manufacturers, make RJR a remarkable laboratory for finance of the most precarious kind.

It allows the purchaser of RJR to use unprecedented amounts of debt and expect to meet future obligations through a continuation of existing sales. It is widely expected that any proposal from either RJR's management or KKR would be financed at least 90 percent by borrowing.

Adding all that credit provides the buyer with a significant fringe benefit — the U.S. tax code provides hundreds of millions, if not billions, of dollars to companies that can afford to exchange equity for debt. That is because interest, the cost to a company of using debt, is tax deductible; dividends, the cost of using equity, is not.

For a company that consistently pays out more than 40 percent of its earnings in taxes — RJR paid $735 million last year alone — the savings to owners are substantial. "The reality," said Harvey J. Goldschmid, a professor of securities law at Columbia University, "is that many leveraged buyouts are financed in a meaningful part by federal tax policy."

RJR's use of debt is merely the latest and largest example of a trend that has been gathering momentum for several years. Companies have been steadily buying back stock and adding debt, leveraging their financial structure to capture benefits even as they increase risk. Now, it may have gone too far.

In a move of major significance, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan asked the Senate last week to reconsider the tax code's preference for debt and cautioned banks on extending loans for heavily leveraged buyouts.

U.S. Joins Copyright Convention

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The United States is entering into a worldwide treaty providing reciprocal copyright protection for American artists and writers and those of 76 other countries.

In a ceremony in a hotel meeting room today, President Reagan was signing legislation bringing American copyright law into compliance with the 102-year-old Bern Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works.

The Senate ratified the treaty on Oct. 20, but legislation making changes in American copyright laws was also needed before the United States could become a full-fledged member of the convention.

Differences between American and other nations' copyright laws stalled ratification for decades, but many of the obstacles were removed when Congress enacted a sweeping overhaul of U.S. copyright law in 1976.

Participation in the convention will enable the United States to have copyright relations with 24 countries with which it now has none, officials said.

The convention was signed in Bern on Sept. 9, 1886. It spells out minimum copyright standards, detailing what is protected and how long the copyright lasts. It also bars member nations from discriminating against protected works from other member states.

The signing ceremony was the only public event on the president's schedule today.

On Sunday, Reagan and his wife, Nancy, traveled from their ranch north of Santa Barbara to receive awards from the Simon Wiesenthal Center, an organization dedicated to the study of the Holocaust.

In a speech accepting the center's 1988 humanitarian award, the president said his administration has made U.S. ties with Israel "warmer than they have ever been" and added:
